Co. v Dawson*, 111 Tex 247, 232 SW 279, 15 ALR 1367. For the purposes of reorganization under provisions of the Bankruptcy Act:- -any common carrier by railroad engaged in the transportation of persons or property in interstate commerce, except a street, a suburban, or interurban electric railway which is not operated as a part of a general railroad system or which does not derive more than 50 percentum of its operating revenues from the transportation of freight in standard railroad freight equipment. Bankruptcy Act § 77(m); 11 USC § 205(m).

railroad corporation. Ordinarily, a public service corporation. A corporation organized for and engaged in the operation of a railroad.

See railroad company.

railroad crossing. In the most common usage, the crossing of a highway or street over, under, or above a railroad. In one sense, the intersection of one railroad by another.

See farm crossing; grade crossing; intersection; overhead crossing.

railroad engine. See locomotive.

railroad equipment. Necessary adjuncts such as cars, locomotives, and other movable property, but not everything necessary to the operation of the railroad, not machine shops, roundhouses, etc. 44 Am J1st RR § 272.

railroad fences. Fences which statutes almost universally require railroads to construct and maintain on either side of their tracks for the purpose of preventing injuries to horses, cattle, and other livestock. 44 Am J1st RR §§ 151 et seq.

See cattle guard.

railroad fire. A fire caused by operation of a railroad or originating on railroad premises. 35 Am J2d Fires §§ 10, 21, railroad grant. A grant of public lands to a railroad for right of way or by way of aid in railroad construction, the purpose being to encourage settlement on public lands through providing railroad facilities for settlers. 42 Am J1st R R § 46.

railroad hazard. Broadly, any danger in connection with the operation of a railroad. A term of art for the hazard in the employment of railroading by reason of which workers in such employment are exempted from the application of the fellow servant rule by statute. 35 Am J1st M & S § 392.

railroad hospital. A hospital maintained by a railroad company wherein injured or sick employees may receive care. 26 Am J1st Hospit § 15.

railroad line. See railroad route.

railroad property. Property essential to the operation of a railroad.

The term includes the road-bed, right of way, tracks, bridges, stations, rolling-stock, and such like property; but it does not include land owned by the railroad and held for sale by it, for profit, in no way connected with the use and operation of the railroad. Northern Pacific Railroad Co. v Walker, (CC ND) 47 F 681, 685.

As to what is railroad property for the purpose of taxation, see Anno: 80 ALR 252.

See railroad equipment.

railroad receiver. A receiver appointed by the court under its equitable powers or as authorized by statute, to take possession of the lines and property of a railroad and operate them.

railroad relief fund. See relief association; relief fund.

railroad reorganization. A readjustment of existing interests in equity, particularly in a federal court, necessitated by a failing financial condition of the corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1517. A reorganization of a railroad company under provisions of the Bankruptcy Act. 9 Am J2d Bankr §§ 1442-1492.

railroad right of way. The strip of land upon which a railroad line is maintained and operated. 44 Am J1st RR § 74. A right of crossing another's land. Anno: 132 ALR 183; 44 Am J1st RR § 74. The substantial, corporeal land upon which a railroad is built, with the rights incident to its enjoyment, rather than an easement of way or right to cross the land. 51 Am J1st Tax § 891.

The words "right of way" used in a statute making a railroad liable for fires communicated from its right of way have no reference to the title of the railroad company to the land, but simply designate the locality where the fire must originate to make the company liable. 35 Am J2d Fires § 8.

railroad rolling stock. See rolling stock.

railroad route. The course of a railroad line between its terminals. 44 Am J1st RR § 202.

railroad shop. The place or structure where locomotives and other railroad rolling stock of a railroad are repaired and serviced.

railroad signals. Signals given in the operation of railroad trains by way of bell, whistle, lights, etc., especially at railroad crossings. 44 Am J1st RR § 385. Hand or light signals given by trainmen and switchmen to one another for the purpose of directing the moving of train or cars.

railroad station. A place maintained by a railroad company as a stopping place for trains and for the accommodation of passengers, shippers, and persons receiving freight, including not only the building, but also passageways, walkways, and platforms prepared for passengers in boarding and leaving trains and for the accommodation of persons having business at the station. 44 Am J1st RR § 254.

The word is used synonymously with the term passenger depot," meaning the place, the grounds and the buildings prepared for and used by the traveling public at such point in waiting for, taking, and leaving the trains, and by the company in operating the road at that point. As to just what constitutes a passenger depot or station at a particular place is a question of fact. State v Indiana & Illinois Southern R. Co., 133 Ind 69, 32 NE 817.

See depot; union station.

railroad stock. Outstanding stock issued by a railroad corporation.

railroad system. Broadly, the aggregation or network of railroads of the United States physically connected for the interchange of business. Texas & Pacific R. Co. v Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 270 US 266, 70 L Ed 578, 46 S Ct 263. In another sense, an operating relationship and unity of railroad routes, lines, branches, and trackage involving common control, common management, something more than mere physical connections and through-traffic arrangements. 44 Am J1st RR § 203.

railroad ticket. See ticket.

railroad tie. See tie.

railroad time. An old term, now in disuse, for standard time. 52 Am J1st RR § 3.

railroad track. The rails, ties, and ballast upon which the trains run. 44 Am J1st RR § 227. A way for the transportation of freight or passengers. A track used or intended for the purpose of transporting or moving produce, freight, or passengers in connection with the business of the owner or operator. 35 Am J1st M & S § 428. For tax purposes, railroad right of way in use as such. 51 Am J1st Tax § 889.

The meaning of the word "track" as applied to a railroad, depends on circumstances and context, but the word as ordinarily understood is not synonymous with railroad, the latter word having a more extended significance. However, the word track as sometimes used, is synonymous with and means roadway or right of way. In any case, a railroad track is inseparable from the right of way and is an incident to it; the right of way is the principal thing although it is of no practical use without a superstructure and rails, since the track is necessary to the use and enjoyment of the right of way. 44 Am J1st RR § 227.

railroad unemployment insurance account. An account to be maintained by the Secretary of the Treasury in the unemployment trust fund established by the Social Security Act. 45 USC § 360.

rate for freight. See freight rate.

rate making. The process of determining a rate to be charged, particularly a rate subject to government control, as where it is for service by a public utility. A function which is purely legislative in its character, whether it is exercised directly by the legislature itself or by some subordinate or administrative body, to whom the power of fixing rates in detail has been delegated. Prentis v Southern R. Co. 211 US 210, 53 L Ed 150, 29 S Ct 67.

rate of assessment. The amount of a special assessment per stated amount of valuation.

See assessments of mutual benefit society; tax rate.

rate of duty. A tariff rate; a rate on a particular item of property being imported from a foreign country, even a free rate, as enacted by Congress or proclaimed by the President. 19 USC § 1202, Headnote 9(d).

rate of exchange. The rate according to which the money of one country is exchanged for the money of another, for example, the number of American dollars to be received for an English pound.

rate of fare. See fare.

rate of interest. A certain percent of the principal sum charged by way of interest per year. 30 Am J Rev ed Int § 26.
See legal interest.

rate of premium. See premium rate.

rate of tax. See tax rate.

rate of wages. The wage scale as fixed by contract or collective bargaining.
See prevailing rate of wages.

rate tithes. Tithes which were charged ratably on the property within the parish.

rate war. A sudden and violent fluctuation in rates charged by competing railroads for the transportation of freight or passengers. United States v Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. (CA8 Kan) 58 F 58.

rate zone. See zone.

rat hole. A boring for oil made by a drill or small bore. Honolulu Oil Corp. v Halliburton, 306 US 550, 83 L Ed 980, 59 S Ct 662.

ratification. Giving effect by approval. Treating as good or authorized an act which otherwise might be disavowed or even treated as a tort. 18 Am J2d Conv § 73. A confirmation of an act already performed, not an authorization of an act to be performed. Barker v Chesterfield, 102 Mass 127, 128. An express promise or a promise implied from conduct by which a party to a contract otherwise voidable accepts it and undertakes to be bound by it. Crawford v Gordon, 88 Wash 553, 153 P 363. Accepting the benefits of a transaction with knowledge of fraud inducing the same by the other party. 37 Am J2d Fraud §§ 332 et seq. The affirmance by a person, upon reaching his majority, of a contract made by him during his infancy. 27 Am J1st Inf §§ 11 et seq. In the law of agency:--the adoption or affirmance by a person of a prior act which did not bind him, but which was done or professed to be done on his account, thus giving effect to the act, as to some or all persons, as if originally authorized. Rogers v Beiderwell, 175 Kan 223, 262 P2d 814, 45 ALR2d 578; Gulf Refining Co. v Travis, 201 Miss 294, 30 So 2d 398.

The essence of ratification is approval. Jordan v Beaumont (Tex Civ App) 337 SW2d 115, error ref n r e. To ratify the act of an agent means to approve and sanction, and presupposes knowledge or at least some alerting circumstantial information of the unauthorized act. MacLeod v Ajax Distributing Co. 22 NJ Super 121, 91 A2d 635, 34 ALR2d 504.

To ratify is to give validity to the act of another, and implies that the person or body ratifying has at the time power to do the act ratified. A county board could not ratify a subscription without a vote of the county because they could not make a subscription in the first instance without such an authorization. Norton v Shelby County, 118 US 425, 452, 30 L Ed 178, 189, 6 S Ct 1121.

Ratification of an unauthorized act is equivalent to an original grant of authority. Rogers v Beiderwell, 175 Kan 223, 262 P2d 814, 45 ALR2d 578.

ratification of forgery. The ratification of an unauthorized or forged signature, giving effect to the instrument to which it is appended. Wilson v Hayes, 40 Minn 531, 42 NW 467.

ratification of marriage. A method of validating a voidable marriage. An affirmance of a voidable marriage by living together as husband and wife with full knowledge of facts constituting an impediment to the marriage. 4 Am J2d Annul § 45.

ratification of treaty. A ratification by the United States Senate of a treaty negotiated by the President, such requiring a vote of two thirds of the Senators present concurring with the treaty. 52 Am J1st Treat § 11.

ratified. See ratification.

Some confusion has arisen as to the use of the word "ratified," and as to whether ratification is a fact or a conclusion of law arising from the facts. As the term is applied to principal and agent it is a fact and not a legal conclusion, but when it is used in a sense akin to estoppel, it is a conclusion of law. Minnich v Darling, 8 Ind App 539, 544, 36 NE 173.

ratify. To give approval. To confirm. To make a ratification.

See ratification.

ratihabitio. Same as ratification.

Ratihabitio mandato aequiparatur. A ratification is equivalent to a command. Dempsey v Chambers, 154 Mass 330, 28 NE 279.

Ratihabitio mandato comparatur. Ratification is to be compared with a command.

This maxim of the Roman law has been changed to "Ratihabitio mandato aequiparatur" (Ratification is equivalent to a command), ever since the days of Lord Coke. It has never been doubted that a man's subsequent agreement to a trespass done in his name and for his benefit amounts to a command so far as to make him answerable. Dempsey v Chambers, 154 Mass 330, 28 NE 279.

ratihabition. Same as ratification.

Ratihabitio priori mandato aequiparatur. A ratification is equivalent to a previous command. "A maxim borrowed from the Roman law, and now an element in the jurisprudence of every civilized nation." Palmer v Yates, 5 NY Super Ct (3 Sandf) 137, 151.

rating. An evaluation of something, such as the credit of a man or a television program, usually made on a purported scientific basis. The grading of candidates for civil service positions by written examinations. 15 Am J2d Civ S § 11.

The determination of the relative state or condition of a vessel in reference to its insurable quality. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 504. Rank in the military.

See Hooper rating; horsepower ratings; rate making.

rating bureau. An organization of insurance companies or insurance agents for the purpose of promoting the business, welfare, and convenience of the parties thereto and to secure uniformity in the business, particularly in reference to premium rates. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 109. An organization engaged in examining particular premises for the purpose of determining the premium rate to be applied in insuring the property.

ratio decidendi. The reason for deciding; the reasoning or principle, or ground upon which a case is decided.

Ratio est formalis causa consuetudinis. Reason is the molding cause of custom or usage.

Ratio est legis anima; mutata legis ratione mutatur et lex. Reason is the spirit or soul of the law; by a change in the reason of the law, the law is also changed.

Ratio est radius divini luminis. Reason is a ray of divine light.

Ratio et auctoritas duo clarissima mundi lumina. Reason and authority are the two most shining lights in the world.

ratio impertinens. An impertinent reason, an argument not pertaining to the question. Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Co. v Board of Railroad Comrs. (CC NC) 90 F 33, 34.

Ratio in jure aequitas integra. Reason in law is impartial equity.

ratio law. A statute providing that the number of liquor licenses to be granted in a particular area shall not exceed a specified ratio to the number of inhabitants. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 137.

ratio legis. The reason of the law; the reason underlying the law; the reason for the existence of the law.

The reason of the law is the spirit or soul of the law.

ration. Noun: A term familiar in the armed service, being food for one man for one day. Verb: To distribute or divide food on a calculated basis in time of scarcity.

rationabili parte. See de rationabili parte.

rationabili parte bonorum. See de rationabili parte bonorum.

rationabilis. Reasonable: rational.

rational basis. A reasonable basis in the law; the criterion in the review of an administrative order by the court. The application of the law in a just and reasoned manner. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 619.

rational doubt. Same as reasonable doubt.

rationale. Rational basis; the reasoning in support of a proposition.

rational intent. An intent founded on reason, as a faculty of the mind, and opposed to an irrational purpose. Supreme Lodge v Gelbke, 198 Ill 365, 370, 64 NE 1058.

rational interpretation. A term which has been applied to a doctrine sometimes followed in the interpretation of written instruments, whereby language held to be lacking is supplied by the court, and language held to be superfluous is disregarded, in an effort to give effect to the intention of the maker of the instrument.

The same doctrine has been employed in the construction of statutes. The doctrine is a dangerous one because of its tendency toward judicial legislation. Shellenberger v Ransom, 41 Neb 631, 59 NW 935.

rational volition. Volition, attended by the powers of reason, to consider and judge the act done in all its relations-moral as well as physical. Daniels v New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. 183 Mass 393, 67 NE 424.

ratione contractus. By reason of the contract.

ratione impotentiae. By reason of impotence.

ratione loci. By reason of the place or locality.

ratione materiae. By reason of the matter in hand.

ratione personae. By reason of the person concerned, ratione prescriptionis. By reason of a prescriptive right or duty.

ratione privilegii. By reason of privilege.

rationes. The pleadings in an action.

ratione soli. On account of the soil; by reason of one's ownership of the soil.

See property ratione soli.

ratione tenurae. By reason of one's tenure.

ratione tenurae or prescriptionis. By reason of its right or duty of tenure or prescription. State ex rel. Roundtree v Board of Comrs. 80 Ind 478.

ratione tenurae suae. By reason of his own tenure.

rationing. Placing a limitation upon the amount of certain necessities of life which can be purchased, as in time of war, when such commodities are in short supply. 56 Am J1st War §§ 46 et seq.

See ration.

Ratio non clauditur loco. Reason is not confined to place or locality.

ratio of safety. A margin, to be observed by a trustee in investing trust funds, between the value of the security and the amount of the trust investment. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 426.

ratio pertinens. A pertinent reason, a reason pertaining to the question. Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Co. v Board of Railroad Comrs. (CC NC) 90 F 33, 34.

Ratio potest allegari deficiente lege, sed vera et legalis et non apparens. Where the law is deficient, the reason can be alleged, but it must be true and lawful and not merely apparently so.

rat proofing. Constructing a building in such manner and of such materials that rats cannot gain entrance. 13 Am J2d Bldgs § 29.

rattening. The practice of concealing the tools of a workingman for the purpose of compelling him to join a labor union, a statutory offense in some jurisdictions.

ratum. Rated as valid; deemed or recognized as valid.

raansom. Same as ransom.

ravine. A deep gully or gorge; a natural drainway for surface water. Anno: 81 ALR 271; 56 Am J1st Wat § 76.

As used in an indictment for rape, the word has been held to imply a want of consent and that by reason of employing the word "ravish," the indictment need not aver specifically that the rape was committed against the woman's will. There is also authority to the contrary. See 44 Am J1st Rape § 57.

ravish. To rape. To seize and carry away with force. To enrapture.

ravishment. Being ravished. Ravishing.

See ravish.

ravishment de gard. The abduction of a ward.

razor. An instrument with a sharp cutting edge for shaving a man's face.

It is an article of common domestic use, and while no one could be held guilty of the offense of carrying a dangerous and deadly weapon concealed about his person, simply because he so carried a razor, yet, if surrounding circumstances would tend to show that he carried it as a weapon of offense, he might become liable to the charge, because a razor, when thus used, is notoriously a weapon dangerous to life. See Brown v State, 105 Miss 367, 62 So 353.

re. In the case of; in the matter of; in regard to.

See in re.

R. E. A. Abbreviation of Rural Electrification Administration.

recknowledgment. An acknowledgment of an instrument intended to correct a prior acknowledgment of the same instrument. Bernhardt v Brown, 122 NC 587, 29 SE 884.

reaction time. The time required for response to a stimulus, especially in an emergency. 8 Am J2d Auto § 893.

reactor. See nuclear reactor.

read. To ascertain the contents of a writing, a document, or printed matter from the words and signs thereof. New Orleans v Brooks, Connor & Norton, 36 La Ann 641, 642.

readily accessible. Available for immediate use in an emergency.

Life preservers placed in the bunk of each member of the crew of a fishing trawler are "readily accessible," within the meaning of a statute which requires life preservers to be so placed as to be readily accessible. Noble v Moore- McCormack Lines, Inc. (DC Mass) 96 F Supp 369.

readily realizable market value. A value existing where property is readily to be converted into cash or its equivalent in such manner as to realize the fair value of the property. Clark v Welch (DC Cal) 46 F2d 563.

reading ability. See literacy.

reading bill. A requirement of the constitution in the legislative consideration of a bill that before final passage, the bill shall be read at length, section by section, a certain number of times, in each house. 50 Am J1st Stat § 79.

reading indictment or information. A step in the arraignment of one accused of crime. People v Goldenson, 76 Cal 328, 19 P 161; Rule 10, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

reading ordinance. A step in the enactment of a municipal ordinance, the requirement being for the reading of the ordinance one or more times, as the statute may provide, before the council. 37 Am J1st Mun Corp § 144.

readings. Lectures on ancient English statutes. Coke on Littleton 280.

readjustment of debts. Various forms of relief under the Bankruptcy Act. Compromise settlements.

read law. See to read law.

readmission. Authorizing a foreign corporation to do business in the state after a withdrawal of the corporation from the state. 36 Am J2d For Corp § 315.

ready. Prepared at the moment. Tobias v Lissberger, 105 NY 404, 12 NE 13. Able and willing to proceed, as with performance of a contract. Smith v Keeler, 51 Ill App 267.

ready, willing, and able customer. A customer, found by a broker for his client, who is ready and willing to contract and able to complete the contract.

ready, able, and willing buyer. A buyer who desires to make the purchase and has at hand the money to meet the cash payment required, without resort to or dependence upon third persons for funds, and without raising the money upon property. Anno: 1 ALR 528.

reaffiliation. A renewal of membership after a lapse, suspension, or expulsion. See 36 Am J2d Frat 0 §§ 74 et seq.

reagent. A chemical term for a substance which by reason of its capacity to cause reaction is used to detect, measure, or convert other substances, Martin v Minerals Separation North American Corp. (DC Md) 29 F Supp 146.

real. Regal; royal; pertaining to the crown; pertaining to realty. Not fictitious or a product of the imagination.

real actions. Those actions which are brought for the specific recovery of lands, tenements or hereditaments, some being founded on the seizure or possession, and some on the property or right. 1 Am J2d Actions § 38.

real advancement. An advancement made by a conveyance of real property. Williams v Stonestreet, 24 Va (3 Rand) 559, 561.

See advancements.

real assets. Real estate left by a decedent which is subject to payment of his debts. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 196. Broadly, real property.

real claim. A claim which is good under the law or asserted in good faith as good under the law, rather than one concocted of fraud or overly-vivid imagination. Rue v Meirs, 43 NJ Eq 377, 380, 12 A 369.

real composition. A composition of tithes, an agreement whereby the landowner discharged his land for liability for tithes.

real contract. A contract concerning real property; in the civil law, a Contract which had some specific thing for its subject matter.

real controversy. An actual, as distinguished from a simulated controversy, moot case, hypothetical case, or abstract question. 20 Am J2d Cts §§ 80, 81; 27 Am J2d Equity § 14.

real covenant. A covenant having for its object something annexed to, inherent in, or connected with, land or real property ---one which relates to, touches, or concerns the land granted or demised and the occupation or enjoyment thereof. 20 Am J2d Cov § 29. A covenant which runs with the land, binding not only the heirs and personal representatives of the covenantor, but his grantees as well. Hawkins v Wbayne, 198 Okla 400, 179 P2d 138.

real estate. Land or real property. Land and the grass or other crop growing thereon. Croasdale v Butell, 177 Kan 487,280 P2d 593, 49ALR2d 1112.

As defined for purposes of taxation, see Anno: 57 ALR 869.

See estate for years; life estate; real property.

real estate and rental guide. A publication largely taken up with transactions concerning real property and constituting an advertising medium for real estate owners and realtors. 39 Am J1st Newsp § 8.

real-estate broker. An agent who, for a commission or brokerage fee, bargains or carries on negotiations in behalf of his principal as an intermediary between the latter and a third person in transacting business relative to the sale or purchase of real estate. 12 Am J2d Brok § 1. One whose business is to procure the purchase or sale of lands, acting as middleman or negotiator between potential vendors and purchasers to bring them together and arrange the terms. Quinn v Phipps, 93 Fla 805, 113 So 419, 54 ALR 4 173.

real estate broker's lien. A lien in support of the broker's right to compensation by way of sharing in the purchase money. 12 Am J2d Brok §§ 242, 243.

real estate corporation. A corporation authorized to buy and sell real estate in the normal and regular course of its business. Eisen v Post, 3 NY2d 518, 169 NYS2d 15, 146 NE2d 779; Tuttle v Junior Bldg. Corp. 227 NC 146, 41 SE2d 365.

real estate investment trust. A trust formed by a group of people pooling their capital for the purpose of investing in real estate.

real-estate partnership. A partnership formed for the purpose of buying and selling land generally or for speculation on a single venture, or for the purchase, sale, improvement, and leasing of real property for profit. 40 Am J1st Partn § 13.

real estate syndicate. An organization having the purpose of pooling the funds of members to invest in real estate or to deal in it as a commodity of traffic. Kilbourn v Thompson, 103 US 168, 195, 26 L Ed 377, 388.

real-estate tax. The most common form of direct property tax, being a tax levied upon real estate, without reference directly to the use made of the property but according to an assessed valuation. 51 Am J1st Tax § 31.

real evidence. Evidence addressed directly to senses of the court or jury without interposing the testimony of witnesses other than as required in laying the basis for such evidence, 29 Am J2d Ev § 769, involving the production or exhibition in court of something directly connected with the incident out of which the cause of action arose, such as the injured parts of the body in an action to recover for a personal injury. Smith v Ohio Oil Co. 10 Ill App 2d 67, 134 NE2d 526, 58 ALR2d 680.

real fixture. A fixture which becomes a part of the land at annexation to the freehold because of the intent with which it is affixed. Capen v Peckham, 35 Conn 94.

real injury. An injury resulting from or caused by an act, as distinguished from an injury caused by words.

realize. To understand. To bring to fruition. To obtain the advantage or benefit of a thing, as taking a profit on an investment.

To realize means to bring into actual possession. It is ordinarily used in contrast to hope, or anticipation. A man may hope to sell his property for a certain sum, but until he actually sells it and receives the money, or its equivalent, he cannot be said to have "realized" either his hopes or his profits. Lorillard v Silver, 36 NY 578, 579.

Under section 22 of the Revenue Act of 1934, realization of income is the taxable event, rather than the right to receive it, and realization is not deemed to occur until the income is paid. But the decisions and regulations have consistently recognized that receipt in cash or property is not the only characteristic of realization of income to a taxpayer on the cash receipts basis. Where the taxpayer does not receive payment in money or property, realization may occur when the last step is taken by which he obtains the fruition of the economic gain which has already accrued to him. Helvering v Horst, 311 US 112, 85 L Ed 75, 61 S Ct 144.

realm. A region. A state; a sovereignty. Carr v Lewis Coal Co. 96 Mo 149, 8 SW 907.

real party in interest. The person to be benefited by, or entitled to receive the benefits of, the suit. More precisely, that person who can discharge the claim upon which suit is brought and control the action brought to enforce it, Usually but not necessarily the person beneficially interested in the cause of action. 39 Am J1st Parties § 17.

For the purpose of res judicata the courts will look beyond the nominal party whose name appears formally upon the record and will treat as the real party him whose interests are involved in the litigation. Gibson v Solomon, 136 Ohio St 101, 16 Ohio Ops 36, 23 NE2d 996, 125 ALR 903.

real property. Land. Such things as are permanent, fixed, and immovable; lands, tenements, and hereditaments of all kinds, which are not annexed to the person or cannot be moved from the place in which they subsist. 42 Am J1st Prop § 13. In a strictly technical sense, such an interest as one has in land; a right, interest, or ownership, existing in the soil, and consisting of an estate in fee or for life. Callihan v Martin, 3 Cal 2d 110, 43 P2d 788, 101 ALR 871.

The term has been frequently defined by statute to be coextensive with lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and covers all that goes to make up the earth in its natural condition, including petroleum as found in its natural state, unnamed coal, sand or gravel in its original bed, subterranean water not flowing in a definite course, but percolating through the earth, a room in a house, a toll bridge over a navigable river, and the tolls authorized by law, and mining claims. 42 Am J1st Prop § 13.

real property arrangement. A matter of relief provided by Chapter X11 of the Bankruptcy Act so that a debtor can pay his creditors over a period of time while retaining his real property. Re Dick (CA7 Wis) 296 F2d 912. A proceeding in the bankruptcy court to obtain a modification or alteration of the indebtedness of an individual which is secured by a lien or liens on real property. 9 Am J2d Bankr §1350.

real release. A release wherein the creditor declares that he considers the debt as acquitted.

It is equivalent to a payment, and renders the thing no longer due. Booth v Kinsey, 49 Va (8 Gratt) 560, 568.

real security. Security in property rather than in the undertaking of a surety or guarantor. Merrill v National Bank of Jacksonville, 173 US 131, 158, 43 L Ed 640, 650, 19 S Ct 360.

real servitude. See service real.

real statute. A statute which regulates property within the state where it is in force, as distinguished from a personal statute which follows and governs the party subject to it wherever he goes. Saul v His Creditors (La) 5 Mart NS 569.

real value. The market value under fair competition, and under normal market conditions. International Harvester Co. v Kentucky, 234 US 216, 221, 58 L Ed 1284, 1287, 34 S Ct 853.

real wrong. An injury to real property.

reaming. Enlarging the bore. An operation in the care and maintenance of an oil well. Anno: 55 ALR 1564.

As used by oil-well drillers the word means the enlargement of a smaller hole to its bottom. The reaming ceases when the bottom of the small hole is reached, although the larger hole may be continued below that point. Clarke v Blue Licks Springs Co. 184 Ky 827, 213 SW 222, 4 ALR 234, 239.

Ream linguam non facit nisi mens rea. The tongue is not guilty unless the mind is guilty.

reapportionment. A change in legislative or congressional districts, sometimes periodically, for the purpose of providing equality of representation, particularly after a population change. 25 Am J2d Elect § 15.

reappointment. The reinstatement of a civil service employee. 15 Am J2d Civ S § 42. The appointment to public office of a person presently serving in the same office.

reappraisalment. A computation of customs duties following a protest. 21 Am J2d Cust D § 94.

rear admiral. A commissioned officer of the Navy, of a rank comparable to major general of the Army.

rear-end collision. A common form of traffic accident, one vehicle striking another in the rear, as when the vehicle in the lead stops suddenly. 8 Am J2d Auto § 770.

reargument. A rehearing of a motion. 37 Am J1st Motions § 18. A rehearing in an appellate court. 5 Am J2d A & E §§ 978 et seq.

rear-line restriction. A restriction established by covenant against the erection of building nearer than a specified distance to the rear line of the lot. 20 Am J2d Cov § 240.

rearraignment. An arraignment of the accused after amendment of the accusatory pleading or the substitution of an indictment or information for one which has been lost. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 455.

rearrest. The retaking of a prisoner following his escape from custody. 5 Am J2d Arr § 78.

reason. The ability to think and draw conclusions. Cause; justification. Good sense; good judgment.

Lawyers are copious in their encomiums on the reason of the common law. They tell us that the common law is the perfection of reason; that it always intends to conform thereto, and that what is not reason is not law. But every particular reason of every rule in the law cannot at this distance of time be precisely accounted for, and it is sufficient that there be nothing flatly contradictory to reason, and then the law will presume it to be well founded. See 1 Bl Comm 70.

reasonable. Not extreme. Not arbitrary, capricious, or confiscatory. Public Service Com, v Haverneyer, 296 US 506, 80 L Ed 357, 56 S Ct 360.

"What is reasonable depends upon a variety of considerations and circumstances. It is an elastic term which is of uncertain value in a definition." Sussex Land & Live Stock Co. v Midwest Refining Co. (CA8 Wyo) 294 F 597, 34 ALR 249, 257.

reasonable basis in law. See rational basis.

reasonable belief. A belief begotten by attendant circumstances fairly creating it, and honestly entertained. Howard v State, 110 Ala 92, 20 So 365.

reasonable care. A relative term; care required by the circumstances of the case. Due care under the circumstances. 38 Am J1st Negl § 29.

reasonable cause. For prosecution:- -the existence of a reasonable ground of presumption that the charge is or may be well founded. Wood v United States (US) 16 Pet 342, 366, 10 L Ed 987, 996. A reasonable amount of suspicion, supported by circumstances sufficiently strong to warrant a cautious man in believing that the accused is guilty. Tucker v Cannon, 32 Neb 444, 446. For failure to file tax return on time-inability to file on time notwithstanding the exercise of ordinary business prudence; such cause as reliance on Treasury publication; sometimes oversight of one's attorney or accountant. Estate of Fisk v Commissioner (CA6) 203 F2d 358.

A taxpayer's failure to file an income tax return is due to reasonable cause within a statutory exemption from penalty where failure is due to reasonable cause, where the taxpayer has acted with ordinary business care and prudence in the matter. Orient Invest. & Finance Co. v Commissioner, 83 App DC 74, 166 F2d 601, 3 ALR2d 612.

See probable cause; reasonable excuse.

reasonable charge. See reasonable rate.

reasonable compensation. Just compensation. Sweet v Rechel, 159 US 380, 404, 40 L Ed 188, 198, 16 S Ct 43.

See reasonable rate.

reasonable diligence. A relative term. Diligence as required by the circumstances of the case. 38 Am J1st Negl § 29.

In any business involving the personal safety and lives of others, reasonable diligence is nothing less than the most watchful care and the most active diligence; anything short of this is negligence and carelessness. Stanley v Steele, 77 Conn 688, 60 A 640.

See reasonable time.

reasonable doubt. As militating against the sufficiency of the evidence:-an actual and substantial doubt of the defendant's guilt arising from the evidence, or from a want of evidence, as distinguished from a vague apprehension. A fair doubt based upon reason and common sense and growing out of the testimony in the case. A doubt arising from a candid and impartial investigation of all the evidence, being such as, in an ordinary transaction of life, would cause a reasonable and prudent man to hesitate and pause. That state of mind which, after a fair comparison and consideration of all the evidence in the case, both for the state and for the defense, leaves the minds of the jury in such a condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge. Saunders v State, 4 Okla Crim 264, 111 P 965.

As a reason for a decision in favor of the constitutionality of a statute or municipal ordinance:- -want of certainty that the statute or ordinance is so plainly and culpably violative as to offend the constitution. Ours Properties, Inc. v Ley, 198 Va 848, 96 SE2d 754.

reasonable excuse. A relative term; an excuse which is reasonable under the circumstances of the particular case. Anno; 31 ALR 632.

See reasonable cause.

reasonable facilities. A relative term: facilities required of a carrier which are reasonable in relation to all the surrounding circumstances and in the light of conditions existing at the time. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v State, 71 Okla 167, 176 P 393, 11 ALR 992. Station facilities:- such facilities as may fairly be demanded by patrons and prospective patrons, regard being had, among other things, to the size of the place, the extent of the demand for transportation, the cost of furnishing the additional accommodations asked for, and all other facts which would have a bearing upon the questions of convenience and use. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v Wharton, 207 US 328, 52 L Ed 230, 28 S Ct 121.

reasonable hour. See reasonable time.

reasonable man rule. The rule that in review of an administrative determination, the court will not substitute its judgment or discretion for that of the agency, but will deem the evidence in support of the order sufficient where it is such that a reasonable man considering it would make the same determination. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 686.

reasonable means of conveyance. Any means of conveyance which can be employed upon a public highway with reasonable regard for the safety and convenience of the public, and without inflicting upon the owner of the fee an injury differing in kind from that imposed by use and improvement for ordinary public travel. 25 Am J1st High § 165.

The public is not confined to the use of vehicles in common use at the time when the highway or street was established, but may use such other reasonable means or conveyance as may be discovered in the future, provided they do not exclude the proper use of the highway by other kinds of vehicles, or tend to destroy it as a means of passage and travel common to all. McClintock v Richlands Brick Corp. 152 Va 1, 145 SE 425, 61 ALR 1033.

reasonable use of highway. Use of the highway in such a manner as not unnecessarily or unreasonably to impede the exercise of the same right by others. 25 Am J1st High § 164.

See reasonable means of conveyance.

reasonable parts. Those parts of a decedent's personal estate to which his widow and lineal descendants were entitled at common law, notwithstanding the dispositions made by him in his will. See 2 Bl Comm 491.

reasonable probability. The degree of proof required in civil cases to support a conclusion of fact; not proof beyond a reasonable doubt or proof to a moral certainty, only evidence which tends with reason to prove the essential facts in a case, either directly, indirectly, or by permissible inferences. 30 Am J2d Ev § 1163.

reasonable provocation. Anything the natural tendency of which is to produce passion in ordinary men, and which the jury are satisfied did produce it in the case before them. 26 Am J1st Homi § 25.

reasonable prudence. Same as ordinary care.

reasonable rate. A rate charged by a carrier in such amount as to provide a reasonable compensation for its services and no more. 13 Am J2d Car § 106. A rate charged by a public service company which is not oppressive to those served or confiscatory from the standpoint of the company; a rate which provides the company a fair return on its investment and no more. Brymer v Butler Water Co. 179 Pa 231, 36 A 249.

reasonable regulation. A regulation which is a proper exercise of the legislative power in protecting the public and providing safeguards for its interest, considering the nature of the condition sought to be remedied, the purpose of the regulation, the means of regulation adopted, and the relation between the purpose and the means. 16 Am J2d Const L §§ 278 et seq.

reasonable restraint rule. The rule that in granting or devising a vested estate, a restraint upon alienation may be imposed for a reasonable period of time, but not beyond the life of the grantee or devisee. Cities Service Oil Co. v Taylor, 242 Ky 157, 45 SW2d 1039, 79 ALR 1374.

reasonable return. See fair return.

reasonable skill. Such skill as is ordinarily possessed and exercised by persons of common capacity, engaged in the same business or employment. Mechanics Bank v Merchants Bank, 47 Mass (6 Met) 13, 26.

reasonable time. A period consistent with reasonable dispatch and without unreasonable delay. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 417. A time that is reasonable considering the nature, purpose, and circumstances of the relevant act. UCC § 1-204(2). A time for presentment or a check for payment that is reasonable from the standpoint of the nature of the instrument, the usage of the trade or business, and the facts of the particular case. 11I Am J2d B & N § 764. For performance of contract in absence of condition as to time, a time which is reasonable from the standpoint of the subject matter of the contract, the situation of the parties, their intention, what they contemplated at the time the contract was made, and the circumstances attending performance. 17 Am J2d Contr § 330.

reasonable time for delivery. A delivery by a seller of goods during usual business hours where the purchaser is a merchant; a delivery at any hour of the day designated for delivery, provided there is still sufficient light, time, and opportunity for the purchaser properly to inspect and care for the goods. 46 Am J1st Sales § 167. A delivery by a carrier within business hours and under such circumstances that the consignee may receive and put away his goods in a manner consistent with their safety. 13 Am J2d Car § 410.

See reasonable time for transportation.

reasonable time for transportation. Of passenger transportation in time according with published time table or schedule as due care in accord with the circumstances of the case permits. 14 Am J2d Car § 881. Of freight-transportation in such time as the mode of conveyance, the distance, the nature of the goods, the season of the year, the character of the weather, and the ordinary means for transportation under the control of the carrier. 13 Am J2d Car § 365.

The meaning of the term as contemplated by a provision of a bill of lading that claims for loss, in case of failure to deliver, must be made within a specified time after the lapse of a "reasonable time for delivery," depends upon the circumstances of the particular case and means such time as is necessary conveniently to transport and make delivery of the shipment in the ordinary course of business, in the light of the circumstances and conditions surrounding the transactions. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v Martin, 283 US 209, 75 1, Ed 983, 51 S Ct 453.

reasonable use doctrine. The maxim of the common law that the use of one's own property must be such as not unreasonably to injure others in depriving them of the lawful use and enjoyment of their properties. 38 Am J1st Negl § 15; 39 Am J1st Nuis § 16. A rule in respect of the use of percolating water by a landowner, restricting each landowner to a reasonable exercise of his own rights and a reasonable use of his own property in view of the similar rights of others. 56 Am J1st Wat § 114. The rule that a riparian proprietor may use or detain the water of the stream for purposes necessary for the use and enjoyment of his abutting property, qualified only by the correlative rights of other riparian owners, certain rights of the public, and the condition that the use be had in such manner as not to injure others in the enjoyment of their rights. 56 Am J1st Wat §§ 18, 274.

reasonable user. The use of property by a co-owner which is not capricious, irresponsible, or malicious, but in one of the ordinary methods of reaping profits from property of like character and in like circumstances. 20 Am J2d Coten § 37.

Where two persons own a motor vehicle as tenants in common, the limitation of the right of each is that he is bound so to exercise his rights in the property as not to interfere with the rights of his cotenant. State ex rel. Fold v Karel, 131 Fla 305, 180 So 3.

See reasonable use doctrine.

reasonably cautious. See reasonable care.

reasonably prudent person. See prudent; the ordinary prudent man.

reasonably safe. Safe according to the usages, habits, and ordinary risks of the business.

A master performs his duty when he furnishes those appliances of ordinary character and reasonable safety, and the former is the test of the latter; for, in regard to the style of implement or nature of the mode of performance of any work, "reasonably safe" is to be tested by the foregoing definition. Chrismer v Bell Tel. Co. 194 Mo 189, 92 SW 378.

reasonably satisfy the jury. Convince the jury as reasonable men that it is worthy of belief. Anno: 147 ALR 383.

reassignment. An assignment made by an assignee. An assignment made by the assignee of an insurance policy. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 687. An assignment by an assignee back to the assignor. A new calendar of cases necessitated by exigencies such as unexpected settlements, continuances, voluntary dismissals, or unexpected prolongation of certain trials.

reassignment of homestead. The practice under the statutes of many of the states of the Union fixing a maximum for the value of real property which shall be exempt from levy and sale under execution, of causing the homestead to be selected or assigned again, that is, reassigned, where the homestead originally assigned has so increased in value as to exceed in value the limit fixed by the statute. 26 Am J1st Home § 44.

See reinsurance.

reattachment. An attachment of a defendant's person subsequently to his release from a previous attachment in the same action.

reattestation. An attestation of a previously attested instrument, following an alteration thereof. 4 Am J2d Alt Inst § 24. The attestation of a will upon re-execution or republication of the instrument. 57 Am J1st Wills § 625.

rebate. A giving back. A deduction. A discount for prompt payment. State v Schwarzchild, 83 Me 261, 265, 22 A 164. A distribution made by a corporation to stockholders in proportion to the amount of business done with the corporation. Uniform Printing & Supply Co. v Commissioner (CA7 Ill) 88 F2d 75, 109 ALR 966. The act of an insurance company in charging an insured less than the prevailing rate; a matter of discrimination. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 506. A deduction made by a common carrier from the rate or charge specified in the tariff schedule. A refunding or repayment by a common carrier of any portion of the rate, fare, or charge made to it in accord with the tariff schedule for the services of the carrier in transporting freight or passengers. 13 Am J2d Car § 114. An allowance made to the purchaser of a municipal bond for the purpose of overcoming the effect of a minimum price fixed by statute. 43 Am J1st Pub Sec § 145.

rebellion. An insurrection against lawful authority which is void of all appearance of justice. 30 Am J Rev ed Insurr § 2. The open and active opposition of a number of citizens or subjects of a country or state to its government. 56 Am J1st War § 2. A term incorrectly applied to the war between the states, otherwise known as the Civil War. 30 Am J Rev ed Insurr § 2.

Rebellion does not constitute a war in a legal sense prior to the recognition of the participants as belligerents by the existing domestic government or by foreign nations. 30 Am J Rev ed Insurr § 2.

rebels. Persons who resist authority. Persons in rebellion against the government. A term loosely but incorrectly applied to the personnel of the Confederate Forces engaged in the Civil War. 30 Am J Rev ed Insurr § 2.

rebouter. To rebut; to repel; to bar.

rebroadcast. An exact reproduction of a radio program. Lobe v Turner (Tex Civ App) 257 SW2d 800.

rebuild. To build up again; to build or construct after having been demolished.

The term is not in meaning restricted to the erection of a new structure on the site of the old one. Hence, if a building is blown down by a storm, it is possible to rebuild it on a new site. Board of Education v Townsend, 63 Ohio St 514, 59 NE 223.

rebuilding covenant. See covenant to rebuild.

rebus. See de rebus; in rebus.

rebus sic stantibus. While things thus stand.

rebut. To deny; to contradict; to avoid.

rebuttable. Capable of being rebutted.

rebuttable presumption. A presumption which is not conclusive but may be overcome by opposing evidence. 30 Am J2d Ev § 1165. A provisional procedural assumption of a fact which is prescribed by a rule of a substantive law. Simpson v Simpson, 162 Va 621, 175 SE 320, 94 ALR 909. An assumption of facts made because common experience has established that they ordinarily exist where the basic facts from which the assumption arises have been established, but which may, in truth and fact, not exist at all. Wyatt v Baughman, 121 Utah 98, 239 P2d 193.

rebuttal. Contradiction or refutation. The speech of a debater in refutation of the statements made by his opponent.
rebuttal evidence. Evidence answering or disputing that given by the opposite party. 53 Am J1st Trial § 120. That evidence which is offered and introduced to explain, repel, counteract, or disprove testimony or facts introduced by or on behalf of the adverse party, including not only evidence which contradicts the witnesses on the opposite side but also evidence in denial of any affirmative fact which the adverse party has endeavored in any manner to prove. 29 Am J2d Ev § 250.

rebuttal of presumption. The adducing of evidence which meets a presumption and dispels it. 29 Am J2d Ev § 165.

See rebuttable presumption.

rebutter. A pleading by the defendant in response to plaintiff's surrejoinder. 41 Am J1st PI § 181.

rebutting evidence. See rebuttal evidence.

recall. To call back. To remember. To set aside; to vacate; to remove from office.

recalling witness. The act of a party, with the permission of the court, in calling a witness for further examination or cross-examination after a previous calling and examination or cross-examination of the witness in the same case. 58 Am J1st Witn § 561. Having a witness return to repeat his testimony in order to settle a dispute raised between jurors in their deliberations. 53 Am J1st Trial § 936.

recall of judicial decision. The reversal or annulment of a judicial decision by a vote of the electors in a proceeding instituted for such purpose. People v Western Union Tel. Co. 70 Colo 90, 198 P 146, 15 ALR 326; 28 Am J Rev ed Init & R § 52.

recall of mandate, writ, or order. The quashing or setting aside by an appellate court of a remittitur, mandate, or other writ or order issued by it. 5 Am J2d A & E § 1008.

recall of public officer. The removal of a public officer by direct action of electors, that is by the vote of bona fide electors. 28 Am J Rev ed Init & R § 53. The removal of an elective municipal officer by vote of the people at an election called for the purpose by a specified number of citizens. 37 Am J1st Mun Corp § 247.

recall of pardon. The revocation or cancellation of a pardon before its delivery and acceptance, by the officer or body which granted it. 39 Am J1st Pard § 47.

recant. To change one's testimony as given at a former trial because it is untruthful. State v D'Onofrio, 221 Md 20.

recantation. The admission by a witness that his testimony as given at a prior trial was mistaken or false. 39 Am J1st New Tr § 169.

recanvass. A review by a canvassing board or other election officers of the returns of the election made by them. 26 Am J2d Elect § 303.

recapitalization. A change in the capitalization of a corporation, especially upon reorganization, by increase or decrease in number of shares of stock or of a particular issue of stock, sometimes providing for preferred stock, at other times, eliminating preferred in favor of common, or by other method of altering the capital structure. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 1590; 18 Am J2d Corp §§ 211 et seq., 1518. For income tax purposes, see Bazley v Commissioner, 331 US 737, 91 L Ed 1782, 67 S Ct 1489, 173 ALR 905.

Refunding Of municipal bonds is not a "recapitalization" within Federal income tax law provision that no taxable gain shall be recognized on exchange of securities incident to a corporate "recapitalization." Emery v Commissioner (CA2) 166 F2d 27, 1 ALR2d 409.

recaption. See recapture; reprisal.

recapture. The retaking and returning to custody of an escaped prisoner. 27 Am J2d Escape § 26. The retaking of property taken as prize of war. 56 Am J1st War § 180. The taking of a vessel from pirates or an enemy who has taken it without right. 47 Am J1st Salv § 10. The retaking of waters which have escaped from artificial confinement, before they have reached a stream. 56 Am J1st Wat § 176.

Receditur a placitis juris potius quam injuriae et delicta maneant impunita. Settled law will be departed from rather than that wrongs and crimes shall remain unpunished.

receipt. The acceptance of property upon a delivery thereof. The acceptance of money offered by way of payment or gift. An acknowledgment in writing of the receipt of money. Glickman v Weston, 140 Or 117, 11 P2d 281, 12 P2d 1005. Written evidence of the discharge of an obligation.

No receipt can have the effect of destroying per se any subsisting right; it is only evidence of a fact. It is not a release. A receipt "in full," however, given knowingly and without fraud, has been accorded the conclusive effect of a formal release, but such cases are usually those of compromise of disputed claims or receipts for unliquidated damages. Ryan v Ward, 48 NY 204.

A mere receipt for money does not import a promise, obligation, or liability and hence is not within the statute of limitations governing contracts, but if it recites that the money received is to be applied to the account of the person from whom it was received, it partakes of both a receipt and a contract and becomes subject to the statute of limitations applicable to contracts. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 85.

See interim receipt; trust receipt; warehouse receipt.

receipt for transportation. In effect, a bill of lading. Empire Transp. Co. v Wallace, 68 Pa 302.

If the payment was not by way of compromise or settlement of a disputed claim, such a receipt is no bar to a recovery of any balance actually due the creditor. Ryan v Ward, 48 NY 204.

receipt in full. A receipt acknowledging payment in full. A release for some purposes. Dreyfus v Roberts, 75 Ark 354, 87 SW 641.

receipting for property. A recognized practice wherein the lien of an attachment or execution is continued in force without the necessity or continued physical custody of the property by the officer who served the writ, such being accomplished by delivering the property to a third person who gives his receipt to the officer and becomes responsible for the safekeeping of the property during the pendency of the action. 6 Am J2d Attach § 550.

receipt of the exchequer. That division of the exchequer which managed the royal revenues, and the other, which was the court or judicial part of it. See 3 Bl Comm 44.

receiptor. A person who receipts for property delivered into his custody by a sheriff who has seized the property in making a levy under a writ of attachment or execution.

See receipting for property.

receivable accounts. See accounts receivable.

receive. To take into one's possession, e.g., a letter, a gift, one's salary, or earnings. Hallenbeck v Getz, 63 Conn 385, 388; Commissioner v Williston, 315 Mass 638, 54 NE2d 43, 151 ALR 1395.

As the words "receive" and "accept" are used in the statute of frauds, the authorities generally agree that they do not mean the same thing, although they are ordinarily synonymous. To "receive" seems to imply taking into possession by the buyer, while "accept" means an assumption of ownership on the part of the buyer, treating the goods as his own. Mack Co. v Bear River Milling Co. 63 Utah 565, 227 P 1033, 36 ALR 643, 646.

In computing income taxes, although there is authority to the contrary, the general view is that where a dividend is declared in one year, but not paid or payable to the stockholder until a subsequent year, it is "received" and taxable in the latter rather than the earlier year. But actual receipt is not necessary, and a dividend may be in which it was constructively received by being made unqualifiedly subject to his demand. Anno: 120 ALR 1282.

receiver. A person appointed to take custody of property in a receivership. A person appointed by the court to receive and preserve the property of fund in litigation, and receive its rents, issues, and profits, and apply or dispose of them at the direction of the court, sometimes having the additional duty of operating a business in order to maintain it as a going concern. 45 Am J1st Rec § 3. Any receiver or an estate in bankruptcy. Bankruptcy Act § 1(31); 11 USC § 1(31). An instrumentality for intercepting and disseminating radio communications by sound or signal. An instrumentality for receiving telephonic communications.

See bank receiver; equity receiver; pendente lite receivership; temporary receiver.

receiver general of the public revenue. A county tax collector in England.

receiver in bankruptcy. See receiver.

receiver of stolen property. A person who receives into his possession or under his control with felonious intent any stolen goods or chattels with knowledge that they have been stolen. Watts v People, 204 Ill 233, 240, 68 NE 563.

See receiving stolen property.

receiver pendente lite. See pendente lite receivership.

receiver's certificate. A certificate or evidence of indebtedness, issued under order of the court by a receiver in possession of property in payment for goods or services purchased or engaged by the receiver payable out of a particular fund in the receivership, and usually constituting a first lien on the property in the receivership. 45 Am J1st Rec § 366.

receivership. The means of reaching a legitimate end through the exercise of the equitable power of the court or under statutory authorization by appointing one known as a receiver with property to seize and take custody of property. An ancillary remedy, sometimes in the nature of a provisional remedy, whereby the preservation of property in litigation is accomplished by placing it in the possession of a receiver appointed by the court. Pereira v Wulf, 83 Mont 343, 272 P 532. All equitable remedy for the dissolution or reorganization of a corporation in financial distress.

receivership in aid of execution. A receivership in proceedings supplemental to execution in a case where the right to such remedy is appropriate under circumstances such as the refusal of the judgment debtor to apply his property to the judgment debt, the necessity of collecting future earnings of the judgment debtor, etc. 30 Am J2d Exec § 852.

receivership in foreclosure. A receivership in all action for the foreclosure of a mortgage or lien. 45 Am J1st Rec § 3. A proceeding in aid of an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage on real estate, wherein a receiver is appointed to take possession of the mortgaged property, collect the rents and profits, pay the expenses of the receivership, insurance, and taxes, account for the surplus proceeds, and turn them over to the court for application on the mortgage debt or, if not required for satisfac-

receiving deposits while insolvent. The wrong, usually constituting a criminal offense, of a director or officer of a bank in permitting deposits to be made, knowing that the bank is insolvent. 10 Am J2d Banks §§ 198, 242 et seq.

receiving stolen goods. Same as receiving stolen property.

receiving stolen property. A criminal offense in receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been stolen in some jurisdictions a substantive crime, indictable and punishable as an offense separate and distinct from the larceny itself. In other jurisdictions an accessory offense, the receiver being subject to indictment and punishment as an accessory to the theft or larceny. 45 Am J1st Rec St 11 § 2.

receiving teller. See teller.

recens insecutio. Same as recens secta.

receiving value therefor. Receiving payment or reward, in some manner, for the particular and specific act of signing an instrument for the payment of money. Gaspard v Lachney (La App) 92 So2d 277.

recens secta. Fresh suit; fresh pursuit.

"And if the party robbed do his diligence immediately to follow and apprehend the thief (which is called making fresh suit), or do convict him afterwards, or procure evidence to convict him, he shall have his goods again." See 1 Bl Comm 297.

recent. New or fairly new. Characterizing the period of time immediately preceding the present moment.

In the law of larceny, under the rule that the possession of stolen property must be recent after the theft in order to afford a just basis for an inference of guilt on the part of the possessor, the word "recent" in this connection is incapable of exact definition. Except perhaps in extreme cases, no definite time can be fixed as to when, as a matter of law, possession is or is not recent. What is recent possession varies, within a limited range, with the conditions and surrounding circumstances of each case, and is, within such range, to be determined by the jury upon the facts of the particular case. The particular period of time involved is an important element to be considered, but it is not the only one. The circumstances and character of the goods, their salability, and whether they are cumbersome or easily portable, are also among the factors to be considered, 32 Am J1st Larc § 142.

"We think that 'recent transactions' to which this Court has declared a tax law may be retroactively applied, Cooper v United States, 280 US 409, 411, 74 L Ed 516, 50 Sup Ct Rep 164, must be taken to include the receipt of income during the year of the legislative session preceding that of its enactment." Welch v Henry, 305 US 134, 83 L Ed 87, 59 S Ct 121.

As the word is used in connection with the probative value of evidence that stolen goods were recently in the possession of the defendant, it refers to the defendant's possession soon after the theft and not to possession immediately before prosecution. See State N Wiley, 53 Mont 84, 164 P 84.

Possession of the fruits of crime recently after its commission justifies the inference that the possession is guilty possession, and though only prima facie evidence of guilt, may be of controlling weight unless explained by the circumstances or accounted for in some way consistent with innocence. Wilson v United States, 162 US 613, 619, 40 L Ed 1090, 1095, 16 S Ct 895.

recent transaction. See recent.

reception of verdict. The declaration of the verdict by the foreman of the jury in open court, all other members of the panel being present for questioning in reference to their adherence to the verdict thus declared. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1020.

receptus. (Civil law.) An arbitrator.

recess. A short break in the course of a morning or afternoon session of court. A time when court is not in session due to an adjournment of the session. 20 Am J2d Cis §§ 47-50. A break in the session of a legislative body; a temporary suspension or interruption of a session or meeting rather than an adjournment sine die. Anno: 28 ALR 1157. An interval of time between sessions of a religious body. Ellis v State, 10 Ala App 252, 65 So 412.

recession. A granting back of property by the grantee to his grantor. A diminution in business activity.

recessus. An exit; a going out; an egress.

reciprocal wills. Wills in which the testators name each other as beneficiaries under similar testamentary plans. Anno: 169 ALR 13.

Wills may be strictly reciprocal, each testator leaving his or her entire estate to the survivor, and they may depart from strict reciprocity by including bequest to third persons, without losing their character as "reciprocal" wills. 57 Am J1st Wills § 681.

reciprocity. Interchange of privileges and advantages.

See terms and expressions beginning reciprocal or reciprocity; also see mutuality.

reciprocity between states or nations. An arrangement between states which permits an attorney at law moving from one state to another to be admitted to practice in the latter state without examination. Anno: 51 ALR2d 1198. A matter of relationship between states or nations whereby the recognition in one state or nation of a right under the laws of another state or nation is to be considered in determining whether the latter shall recognize a similar right arising under the laws of the former. Hart v Oliver Farm Equipment Sales Co. 37 NM 267, 21 P2d 96, 87 ALR 962.

No doctrine of comity, in the sense of reciprocity, governs absolutely the action of a court with regard to the enforcement of a foreign right; no foreign right should be refused enforcement merely because it arose in a state, the courts of which do not enforce similar rights created abroad. Restatement, Conflict of Laws § 6, Comment a.

The "reciprocity" rule, whereby a judgment of a foreign country will be given such effect in an American court as the courts of that country would accord to an American judgment, may not be invoked where plaintiffs are not citizens of the United

See reciprocal tariff, commerce, or navigation.

[1067]

When applied to negligence, the word has no legal significance which imports other than simple negligence or a want of due care. But in the use of the word in connection with averments of facts to which it refers and explains, it may imply more than mere heedlessness or negligence. Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co. v Anchors, 114 Ala 492, 22 So 279.

reckless driving. A criminal offense; a basis of liability for injury to the person or property of another. Driving under circumstances showing a reckless disregard of the consequences; driving carelessly and heedlessly in wilful or wanton disregard of the rights or safety of others, or without due caution and circumspection and at a speed or in a manner endangering person or property. 7 Am J2d Auto § 263; 26 Am J1st Homi § 215.

recklessness. Indifference to consequences; indifference to the safety and rights of others. Wantonness; more than ordinary negligence. Harrington v Los Angeles Railway Co. 140 Cal 514, 74 P 15; Kansas Pacific Railway Co. v Whipple, 39 Kan 531, 542.

See reckless; reckless driving.

The reconsideration by a body of the legislature of a bill which it has passed, the right to which, in the absence of a special rule to the contrary, continues so long as the bill remains in the custody or under the control of the body proposing reconsideration. 50 Am J1st Slat § 89.

reconstruction. The process by which the seceding southern states were reorganized after the War between the States, otherwise known as the Civil War. A rebuilding. A complete rebuilding. The act of constructing again. Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v Jackson (CA I Mass) 112 F 146. Work done upon a structure which has been demolished in whole or in part. Vincent v Frelich, 50 La Ann 378, 23 So 373.

Under statutes authorizing special assessments for the "reconstruction" of street improvements, the word presupposes the nonexistence of the thing to be reconstructed, as an entity; that the thing before existing, has lost its entity. The fact that some of the material or parts which entered into the composition of the original entity are used does not negative the character of an operation as a reconstruction. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 604.

In patent law, the reconstruction of a machine is the rebuilding of it, as distinguished from its repair or replacement. Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v Jackson (CAI Mass) 112 F 146.

Reconstruction Acts. Two acts of Congress passed shortly after the Civil War, in 1867, providing a plan for the re-organization of the state governments of those states of the Union which had seceded from it. Texas v White (US) 7 Wall 700, 19 L Ed 227.

Recorda sunt vestigia vetustatis et veritatis. Records are the marks of antiquity and truth.

recordation of verdict. The formal reception of a verdict by the clerk of the court and his entry of the same upon the records of the court with the assent, express or implied, of the jury, thus ending the trial. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1027.

recordatur. Let it be entered of record.

record court. See court of record.

record date. The date specified in the declaration of a dividend on corporate stock as of which one must be a stockholder of record in order to be entitled to the dividend, the specification of date being for the purpose of determining the right to the dividend as between successive owners of stock. 19 Am J2d Corp § 892.

recorder. A public officer in charge of the public records of instruments and instruments filed for record, having the duty of making a public record, or of filing as a public record, instruments presented to him for record. An elective county officer in some jurisdictions. In other jurisdictions, a subordinate officer in the office of county clerk or clerk of court.

recorder's court. An inferior court of limited jurisdiction established under legislative authority in a city or town with a jurisdiction which is usually similar to that of justices' courts in civil matters and to that of police courts in criminal cases, Colton v Superior Court, 84 Cal App 303, 257 P 909.

recording acts. See recording laws.

recording laws. Statutes which provide for the recording of instruments, particularly instruments affecting title to real estate, and prescribe the manner in which the record is to be made. 45 Am J1st Recds § 65.

recording machine. A machine for recording the words of a person on a wax plate, a steel tape, or wire for later reproduction in sound. 23 Am J2d Dep § 59.

recording officer. See recorder.

recording patent. The recording of a patent in the Patent Office, together with the specifications, by way of giving constructive notice to all the world of their existence. Sontag Chain Stores Co. v National Nut Co. 3 10 US 281, 84 L Ed 1204, 60 S Ct 961, reh den 311 US 724, 85 L Ed 471, 61 S Ct 53.

recording tax. A tax imposed upon the recording of a mortgage, contract, or other instrument relating to real property. 51 Am J1st Tax § 1257.

recoup). Same as recoupe. recoupe. To plead a recoupment.

recoupment. Literally, a cutting back. Davenport v Hubbard, 46 Vt 200. A deduction from a money claim whereby cross demands arising out of the same transaction are allowed to compensate one another, the balance only to be recovered. National Cash Registet Co. v Joseph, 299 NY 200, 86 NE2d 561, 12 ALR2d 812. The right of a defendant, in the same action, to cut down the plaintiff's demand either because the plaintiff has not complied with some cross obligation of the contract on which he sues or because he has violated some duty which the law imposes on him in the making or performance of that contract. 20 Am J2d Countel § 1.

Recoupment, as distinguished from the offsetting of one transaction against another, means a deduction from a money claim whereby cross demands arising out of the same transaction are allowed to compensate one another and the balance only to be recovered. National Cash Register Co. v Joseph, 299 NY 200, 86 NE2d 561, 12 ALR2d 812.

recoupment theory. A theory sometimes applied in determining the amount of property subject to condemnation under the power of eminent domain, the theory being that if the public body is permitted to take somewhat more than that which is barely necessary for the improvement, it will be able to dispose of parts not needed at favorable prices, thereby recouping much of the cost of the improvement. Cincinnati v Vester (CA6 Ohio) 33 F2d 242, 68 ALR 831, affd 281 US 439 74 L Ed 950 50 S Ct 360.

recourse. A seeking of aid or assistance. Resort to a person for satisfaction of a demand. In ordinary legal and commercial usage, resort by creditor or obligee to a surety, guarantor, or indorser for payment, after the default of the principal debtor or person under primary liability. Industrial Bank & Trust Co. v Hesselberg (Mo) 195 SW2d 470.

recourse to law. Invoking the jurisdiction of a court by commencing an action or proceeding.

recousse. Same as recaption.

recover. To become well after suffering sickness or disability. To acquire by means of litigation; to acquire as the result of a formal judgment or decree of a court. To receive; to come into possession of. Standidge v Chicago Railways Co. 254 111524, 533, 98 NE 963, 966.

To recover, in law, is to recover anything, or the value thereof, by judgment; as if a man sue for any land, or other thing, movable or immovable, and have it verdict or judgment for him. See Norton v Winter, 1 Or 47.

recoverable. Susceptible of being recovered or regained.

The bankruptcy law provides alternately for the regaining of preferential payments by the trustee, first by visiting the creditor with the danger of a penalty-the disallowance of any portion of his claim; and secondly, in case of the knowing creditor, the right on the part of the trustee to bring suit. In either case the payments are gotten back,-there is a recovery, and in both-whether under stress of the penalty or by virtue of a suit-it is the law that makes them recoverable. Peterson v Nash Brothers (CA8 Minn) 112 F 311.

recoveree. A person who suffered a common recovery.

recoverer. A demandant who recovered a judgment in a proceeding by common recovery.

recovery. The amount which a claimant ultimately receives under or in consequence of a judgment. United States v Konstovich (CA4 Va) 17 F2d 84. In the usual sense, the amount of damages awarded. In a broader sense, the effect of any judgment rendered in favor of one asserting it cause of action. Receiving or coming into possession of something.

In its general use, the word signifies a recovery had by process and course of law; though in it special case it may mean collected or obtained without suit. It has its ordinary and popular meaning of payment compelled by action in the revenue laws of the state. People v Reis. 76 Cal 269, 279, 18 P 309.

See common recovery; prior adjudication.

recovery back. The recovery of a payment made to a person from the person himself. 11 Am J2d B & N §§ 991 et seq.

Reddendo singula singulis. Separate things or matters to be assigned or rendered to separate things or matters. A maxim of construction, meaning that where the sense requires it, and furtherance of the legislative intention, words or clauses in a statute are to be taken distributively. 50 Am J1st Stat § 267.

reddendum. A clause in a deed used to effect a reservation of an estate in the land granted, for example, the reservation of a life estate. Freudenberger Oil Co. v Simmons, 75 W Va 337, 83 SE 995.

reddere. To return; to render; to come in as revenue or rent.

reddidit se. He has surrendered himself, -a form of indorsement on a bail piece when the proper officer has certified that the defendant is in custody.

reditus. A return; a return or compensation for the possession of land; rent.

Under the feudal system, this render, reditus, return or rent, consists in chivalry principally of military services; in villeinage, of the most slavish services; and in socage, it usually consists of money, though it may consist of services still, or of any other certain profit. See 2 Bl Comm 299.

reditus albi. Same as white rents.

reditus assisus. A fixed rent.

reditus capitales. Chief rents, rents which were paid by a freeholder in full discharge of all service.

reditus nigri. Same as black rents.

reditus quieti. Same as quit rents.

reditus siccus. A dry rent; a rent seek. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1040.

See rent seek.

redelivery. A second delivery of a deed which was invalid on the first delivery, after the cause of invalidity has been removed. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 87. The return of a property seized in replevin to the defendant upon his giving a redelivery bond. 46 Am J1st Replev § 85. A delivery back or restoration of the possession of property which has been delivered up or taken out of a person's possession.

See covenant to redeliver; reissuance; renegotiation.

redelivery bond. Same as delivery bond.

redemise. See demise and redemise.

redemption. A recovery back of property by payment of money or performance or other condition. A regaining of property taken from one, as under a mortgage, by paying what is due. Miller v Rafterman, 47 Ohio St 141, 156, 24 NE 496. The obtaining of pledged property by the pledgor from the pledgee upon payment, or tender of payment, of the debt secured by the pledge. 41 Am J1st Pldg & Col § 103. A right granted by statute to the owner, junior lienor, or other person interested in property sold at judicial sale of regaining the property from the purchaser by payment or performance of other conditions prescribed by the statute. 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S §§ 232 et seq. The obtaining by the debtor in execution, lienor, or other person interested of property sold under the writ upon compliance with the conditions prescribed by statute, especially the payment of the amount paid by the purchaser with interest thereon. 30 Am J2d Exec § 522. redmans. Same as redmen.

redmen. Tenants who rendered customary feudal services of riding with or for the lord of the manor.

redobatores. Thieves who dyed cloth a different color for the purpose of concealing their thefts.

redocketing. Bringing on an indictment, once held in abeyance, for trial. 27 Am J1st Indict § 23. Restoring to calendar or trial docket a case once dropped from calendar or docket.

redraft. The drawing of a new bill of exchange on the drawer or indorser of a bill which has been protested, by the holder of the original bill. The making of a second draft in the preparation of a will or other instrument.

See redraft.

redress. Remedy. Compensation; reparation.

redress of grievances. A matter of constitutional right of assembly and petition. The demand, made by people in assembly, of the legislative body to obtain a change in the laws, the enactment of new laws, or for anything else connected with the powers or duties of the government. 16 Am J2d Const L §§ 353 et seq.

redtape. Forms and routines followed in official business. The panoply of bureaucracy.

"Redtape is order carried to fastidious excess--system run out into trivial extremes; but while no department of practical life should be subject to that infliction, there is scarcely anything in which a due degree of order can be neglected without grave dangers." Webster v Thompson, 55 Ga 432, 434.

redubbers. Same as redobatores.

reduce. To lessen. To break a thing down into its various elements. To analyze a problem so that it can be solved. To impoverish. To bring to want. Anno: 2 ALR 1265.

reduce a decree. In Scotland, the recall of a decree.

The difference between reponing a decree and having it reduced, appears to be, that on reponing, the pursuer in the original process, must show that the decree was well founded; but when it is not reponed, the defender must show that the decree was ill founded. In both instances, the proceeding to effect the object is the same, by a libel or claim founded upon the original suit and seeking to invalidate its effect. See Monroe v Douglas (NY) 4 Sand Ch 126, 201.

reduced fare. A fare charged a passenger by a carrier at less than the rate fixed by the tariff schedule. A legal fare but less than the regular fare, as one upon an excursion or family ticket.

reduced rate. A charge made by a carrier of freight which is less than that fixed by the tariff schedule.

See reduced fare.

reductio ad absurdum. A leading back to an absurdity; an absurd conclusion.

reduction of capitalization. A reduction in the nominal capitalization of a corporation by retiring a portion of the authorized shares, reducing the nominal or par value of the outstanding shares, or the surrender of shares by the stockholders. 18 Am J2d Corp §§ 233 et seq.

reduction of par value. See reduction of capitalization. reduction of sentence. The correction of an excessive sentence. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 536. Amending a sentence to reduce the punishment, even to the extent of placing the defendant on probation. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 571.

reduction of stock. See reduction of capitalization. reduction plant. A place where the bodies of dead animals are taken for the purpose of saving whatever is in them of value, such as hide, tallow, etc.

reduction to possession. The act of taking possession. The act of a husband in reference to his wife's property; some act on the part of the husband evidencing intent to acquire the property to the exclusion of the wife, to divest the right of the wife, and to make the property his own absolutely. 26 Am J1st H & W § 61. Changing an intangible into a tangible, as by collecting a debt.

reduction to practice. The completion of a discovery by putting the product thereof, an invention, to use or practice. 40 Am J1st Pat § 27.

In patent interference proceedings, the law pertaining to a successful reduction to practice is not satisfied by demonstrations which indicate that if subjected to a practical test a device might work, but rather requires the submission of evidence establishing that the device was subjected to a practical test and that it did, in fact work. Jacke v Long, 27 Cust & Pat App 1147, 111 F2d 184.

It is academic that the question of what constitutes reduction to practice in the sense of the patent laws may depend in a large part on the inherent nature of the article under scrutiny, together with the consideration of the use for which it is designed. As, where tests of a metal fishing rod conducted in casting tournaments, were held to establish a reduction to practice though no fish was ever caught with a rod embodying the invention. Heddon v Cowdery, 26 Cast & Pat App 743, 100 F2d 426.

reduction to present worth. See present worth.

redundancy. Excess, particularly in words. Matter in a pleading not essential to the statement of cause of action or defense. 41 Am J1st Pl § 350. Needless repetition of averments. Including details of evidence by which facts are established. Carpenter v Reynolds, 58 Wis 666, 671, 17 NW 300.

redundant matter. See redundancy; surplusage.

re-energizing. Turning electric current into wires not then energized or following an interruption of service. 26 Am J2d Electr § 111.

re-enter. To make or effect a re-entry.

re-entry. The return of one previously in the country as a resident alien after a period of voluntary absence from the country, however brief. Bonetti v Rogers, 356 US 691, 2 L Ed 2d 1087, 78 S Ct 976 (32 Tulane L Rev 778). A formal entry upon the leased premises by the lessor upon a declaration by him of a forfeiture of the lease. 32 Am J1st L & T § 870. The resumption of possession pursuant to a right reserved when the former possession was parted with. A remedy given by the feudal law for non-payment of rent, but so ancient that its origin has never been traced.

"If," runs the old law, "a man makes a feoffment, gift, or lease reserving rent, with a condition that if the rent be behind, it shall be lawful for the feoffor and his heirs to re-enter, if the rent be behind, the feoffor or lessor may enter into the lands and hold them in his former estate." Michaels v Fishel, 169 NY 381, 388, 62 NE 425.

See re-entry for condition broken.

re-entry for condition broken. The interest which remains in the grantor or his successors, or the successors of a testator, where an estate on condition subsequent has been created. 28 Am J2d Est §§ 188 et seq. Actually, a power of termination rather than a substantial estate. 28 Am J2d Est § 189.

re-establishment of highway. The establishment of a highway previously abandoned or vacated, entailing the same acts and proceedings necessary to create a highway in the first instance. 25 Am J1st High § 127.

re-exchange. A matter of indemnity to the holder of a bill for the loss he sustains by the failure of the drawee to pay the amount at the time and place, and in the money, called for in the bill. Furness, W. & Co. v Rothe (CA4 Va) 286 F 870, 27 ALR 1185. The amount which the holder of a dishonored bill of exchange would have to pay, in the currency of the country where the original bill was drawn, for a good bill payable where the original bill was payable and for the same amount of money plus the expense of protest. Pavenstedt v New York Life Ins. Co. 203 NY 91, 96 NE 104.

re-execution of lost instrument. See restoration of lost instrument.

retain. Same as re. fa. lo.

refection. Refreshment. Food. A light meal. (Civil law.) Restoration; restitution; redress.

refer. To make a reference. To submit a case to a referee for his decision or report.

To refer a matter imports a reference in the common form; that is, to empower referees to decide, in case of necessity, by a majority, and to proceed upon hearing one party, if the other, being duly notified, shall fail to be present. Billington v Sprague, 22 Me 34, 45.

refer by rule of court. To order a reference.

"An authority to prosecute or defend a suit implies a power to refer it by rule of court, that being a legal mode of prosecuting or defending." See Buckland v Conway, 16 Mass 396.

referee. A person appointed by a court to perform certain offices in the progress of a case pending in the court of his appointment, sometimes trying the issues or part of the issues and reporting findings of fact, at other times trying the case and rendering a decision therein. 45 Am J1st Ref § 3. An officer of the court, sometimes a general officer, at other times a special officer appointed for a particular case. 20 Am J2d Cis § 4. An officer conducting preliminary or original hearings upon claims for workmen's compensation. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 454. A term sometimes loosely applied to an auditor appointed to examine accounts or to a person appointed to make a partition or conduct a sale in a partition action.

See report of referee.

referee in bankruptcy. A judicial officer invested by the Bankruptcy Act, subject always to review by the judge, with most extensive jurisdiction in bankruptcy matters, judicial as well as administrative duties being delegated to him for the purpose of conserving the time of the judge for other work of the court. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 91. Acting, in his capacity as a referee, as the court, not as a special master, except in respect of a limited number or matters in which determination is restricted to the judge of the court. The court for most purposes in bankruptcy. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 92.

referee in case of need. A person whose name is inserted in a bill of exchange by the drawer or any indorser, as a person to whom the holder may resort in case of need, that is to say, in case the bill is dishonored by nonacceptance or nonpayment.

It is in the option of the holder to resort to the referee in case of need or not, as he may see fit. Uniform Negotiable Instruments L § 131, referee's report. See report of referee.

Sometimes a trial and determination for report of findings to the court, at other times a trial and determination with a decision by the referee. 45 Am J1st Ref § 3.

reference. A trial and determination of issues or questions arising in civil cases by some person appointed for that purpose by the court in which the cause is pending. The act of the court in submitting the issues in a case to the referee.

reference on consent. The practice of referring by consent of the parties under a rule of the court an action pending therein to a referee appointed by the court to hear and determine the issues in the action and report his decision or findings to the Court. Shain v Peterson, 99 Cal 486, 33 P 1085.

reference statute. A statute which refers, to an older statute, purporting to make it a part of the new legislation. 50 Am J1st Star § 36. A statute which declares that a certain designated statute of the United States, such as the Volstead Act, or of another state, shall be the law of the state. Ex parte Burke, 190 Cal 326, 212 P 193; State v Armstrong, 31 NM 220, 243 P 333.

reference to arbitration. See submission to arbitration.

referendarius. A Roman officer who laid the causes of petitioners before the emperor.

Referendo singula singullis. The words or expressions should be construed distributively, as distinguished from a collective construction.

referendum. The power reserved to the people at their own option to approve or reject at the polls an act of the legislature. 28 Am J Rev ed Init & R § 2. The Power of the residents of a municipality to approve or reject at the polls any act of the municipal legislative body. 37 Am J1st Mun Corp § 204. The determination of questions as to certain existing or proposed legislation by reference to a vote of the people, employed in determining questions covering wide ranges, among the more general of which are the adoption of municipal charters, the location of county seats and the incurring of municipal indebtedness. State ex rel. Birchmore v State Canvassers, 78 SC 461, 59 SE 145. The submission of an act of the legislature to the people for approval or rejection in an election. The submission of a foreign ambassador to his government of a proposition in reference to which he requires further authority from his government in order to act in the particular matter.

Provision made by a state legislature for a convention to pass upon a proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution is not a legislative act, and is therefore not within the provisions of the state Constitution for a referendum of any act of the legislature. State ex rel. Tate v Sevier, 333 Mo 662, 62 SW2d 895, 87 ALR 1315.

referendum measure. A measure which has been enacted in due form by the state legislature and thereafter referred to and adopted by the people in whole or in part at an election held for that purpose. Tesoriere v Second Judicial Dist. 50 Nev 302, 258 P 291.

referendum petition. A petition by a specified number of electors requesting that proposed or enacted legislation, as the case may be, be submitted to the people for their approval or rejection.

refiling. The filing of a pleading previously withdrawn. 41 Am J1st PI § 318. A requirement in reference to a chattel mortgage, under statute, after a certain period of time, if the mortgage is to be maintained as effective against third persons. 15 Am J2d Chat Mtg § 109.

refinement. Elaboration of statement. Verbiage, frequently found in indictments, in setting forth what is not essential to the constitution of the offense, and therefore not required to be proved on the trial. State v Gallimore, 24 NC (2 Ired L) 372, 377.

refinery. A plant where raw material is prepared for use, sometimes by separation of elements, at other times by removing impurities and changing the form of the product.

See oil refinery.

refining distilled spirits. The removal, chemical change, or modification of objectionable soluble matter in distilled spirits to alter, in some degree at least, the character or quality of the entire volume of the spirits. Mayes v Paul Jones & Co. (CA6 Ky) 270 F 121.

refining oil. The operation whereby crude oil is split up into a number of commercial products by a process of fractional distillation. 24 Am J1st Gas & 0 § 123.

reform. To make better by change and correction. To make improvements in the law by legislative acts. To eliminate vice. To become a better person. To proceed for and with the reformation of an instrument. Sullivan v Haskin, 70 Vt 487, 490, 41 A 437.

Reformation. The revolution which took place in the sixteenth century against certain doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic church, starting out as an attempt to reform the church, but ending with the establishment of Protestant churches. The revolutionary religious movement in the reign of Henry the Eighth in which the Protestants separated themselves from the Roman church.

The Reformation "opens an entirely new scene in ecclesiastical matters; the usurped power of the pope being now forever routed and destroyed, all his connections with the island cut off, the crown restored to its supremacy over men and spiritual causes, and the patronage of bishoprics being once more indisputably vested in the king." See 4 Bl Comm 430.

reformation of instrument. A remedy of an equitable nature afforded to the parties and the privies of parties to written instruments which import a legal obligation, to reform or rectify such instruments whenever they fail, through accident, mistake, or fraud, or a combination of fraud and mistake, to express the real agreement or intention of the parties. 45 Am J1st Reform Inst § 2.

reformation of policy. The action of the court in changing the terms of an insurance contract or policy to make it express the real agreement or intention of the parties. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 338.

reformatory. A penal institution, sometimes a state institution, intended as a place of imprisonment or confinement of persons convicted of crimes of a less serious nature who appear to be of a type subject to reformation by a proper course of treatment, education, and discipline during confinement. A penal institution adapted to the reformation of young persons who have committed small offenses or are likely to become outcasts in society. See McAndrews v Hamilton County, 105 Tenn 399, 403, 58 SW 483.

See house of correction; reform school.

reform school. An institution, commonly known in modern times as an industrial school, for the reception and care of wayward, incorrigible, or vicious youths, male or female, and to a certain extent, in some jurisdictions, of youths whose parents are incapable or unworthy, in surroundings where they may be taught to be moral and industrious and where they may be freed from the corrupting influence of bad associates. 26 Am J1st House of C § 2.

refresh. To revive; to stimulate.

refresher. One of a series of fees paid to an English barrister at intervals during the progress of a litigation. A course of instruction in a subject previously studied, as often had in preparing for bar examinations.

refreshing memory. Directing the attention of a witness to some particular circumstance, conversation, or declaration that may cause him to recall and relate facts temporarily confused or forgotten. The act of a witness giving testimony in referring to writings or memoranda as an aid to his memory. 29 Am J2d Ev § 876; 58 Am J1st Witn § 579.

Refreshing of memory by writings or memoranda may be classified into two groups: (1) where the use of the memoranda revives the present recollection of the witness and he testifies therefrom; and (2) where past recollection is recorded in the memoranda but the witness has no independent recollection of the facts and circumstances and is unable, after reference to the memoranda, to recall any distinct recollection thereof, but is able to testify that he once knew the facts and correctly applied them. Anno: 125 ALR 22

refreshment stand. A place selling soft drinks, cigars, cigarettes, ice cream, sandwiches, etc., but not meals as such.

refunding bonds. The replacement of one obligation with another, including the selling of new securities for the purpose of redeeming those outstanding. 43 Am J1st Pub See § 156. Bonds issued in replacement of outstanding bonds, constituting obligations in themselves for what they purport to be on their face and under the statutes pursuant to which they are issued, being organized extensions and continuations of the obligations replaced. Folks v Marion County, 121 Fla 17, 163 So 298, 102 ALR 659. A form of bond given to obtain the release of attached property from the custody of the officer who served the writ but not from the lien of the attachment. 6 Am J2d Attach § 523. Bonds sometimes required of and given by the legatees and distributees of a decedent's estate in order to protect an executor or administrator from loss arising out of a subsequently occurring deficiency of assets. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 556.

refusal. The denial of a request or demand. The rejection of an offer or of property sought to be delivered. The rejection of an offer of possession.

Although, in its ordinary usage, the word usually imports that a demand has been made upon a person and that in some manner he has signified that he declines to comply with that demand, it is frequently used in the law as signifying a simple failure or neglect to perform a legal duty, and in such case, a failure or neglect to act is held to be a "refusal" to act. Sherman v Credit Finance Corp. 78 Colo 330, 241 P 722.

A tortious refusal to return a check, on the part of the drawee, to the holder or collecting bank, is not necessary to render the drawee liable thereon under the provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Law that where the drawee refuses to return the bill within twenty-four hours, he will be deemed to have accepted it; but mere passive neglect to return is sufficient. See Wisner v First Nat. Bank, 220 Pa 21, 68 A 955.

See qualified refusal; vexatious refusal.

refusal of performance. The refusal of the obligee under a contract to accept obligor's performance as constituting compliance with the contract.

Whether or not the owner as party to a building and construction contract is entitled to refuse to accept the performance made by the contractor is to be determined according to objective criteria or, at least, the claim of dissatisfaction must be made in good faith. 13 Am J2d Bldg Contr § 30.

regular rate. For the purposes of the provision of the Fair Labor Standards Act relating to overtime compensation, the hourly rate actually paid for the normal non-overtime work week. Walling v Helmerich & Payne, 323 US 37, 89 L Ed 29, 65 S Ct 11.

regulars. Soldiers in the Regular Army. (Ecclesiastical.) Persons who were attached to, and followed, the rites of some religious order.

regular session. A session of a legislative or other body required by law to be held, or an adjournment thereof. Waterville v County Comrs. 59 Me 80, 88.

regular term. A term of court begun at the time appointed by law, and continued, at the discretion of the court, to such time as it may appoint, consistent with law. Wightman v Karsner, 20 Ala 446, 452.

regular use of automobile. The use of an automobile which is not casual or incidental, but consistent. Allowing for variation in time, place, and purpose on the particular occasions upon which the car was driven. Pacific Auto. Ins. Co. v Lewis, 56 Cal App 2d 597, 132 P2d 846.

As to "regular use" within the meaning of a clause of an automobile insurance policy excluding from coverage under a drive-other-cars clause all automobile owned or hired by, or furnished to, the named insured for regular use, see 7 Am 12d Auto Ins § 106.

regulate. To replace confusion with order. To control or direct, To place and enforce limitations and restrictions upon conduct. Nichols v Yandra, 151 Fla 87, 9 So 2d 157, 144 ALR 1351; Thielen v Kostecky, 69 ND 410, 287 NW 513, 124 ALR 820. To foster, protect, control and restrain. 15 Am J2d Com § 64 (regulation of commerce.)

The power to regulate does not include the power to prohibit. "To regulate" is not synonymous with "to prohibit." People v Gadway, 61 Mich 285, 28 NW 101.

regulation. Control or direction by restriction or rule of something permitted or suffered to exist. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 22. Any rule for the ordering of affairs, public or private, whether by statute, ordinance, or resolution. Kepner v Commonwealth, 40 Pa St 124, 129. The control by authority of a public service corporation in reference to service, charges, and other matters in its operations involving public interest. Boston & M. R. Co. v Hooker, 233 US 97, 58 L Ed 868, 34 S Ct 526. Madison v Southern Wisconsin R. Co. 156 Wis 352, 146 NW 492, 10 ALR 910. A qualification, restriction, or limitation modifying or destroying the original act with which it is connected, or defeating, terminating, or enlarging all estate granted. See Re Russell, 163 Cal 668, 126 P 875.

regulation of commerce. Regulation of interstate and foreign commerce by Congress under Article 1, section 8, clause 3 of the United States Constitution by way of protection, control, and restraint, with appropriate regard for the welfare of those who are immediately concerned and of the public at large. Second Employers' Liability Cases, 223 US 1, 56 L Ed 327, 32 S Ct 169.

It is sometimes difficult to define the distinction between that which affects or influences and that which regulates commerce. Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Co. v Husen, 95 US 465, 470, 24 L Ed 527, 530. A plenary power of Congress, complete in itself, as broad as the economic needs of the nation, and subject to no limitations except the prohibitions and limitations of the United States Constitution and the amendments thereto. 15 Am J2d Com § 8.

regulations of the Navy. Rules governing the officers and men of the United States navy, established by the secretary of the navy with the approval of the president, under authority of the Congress. Ex parte Reed, 100 US 13, 22, 25 L Ed 538, 539.

regulatory license. A license required as a matter of promoting public health, safety, or welfare, rather than as a revenue measure.

rehabere facias scisinam. You cause him to have back his seisin, - a writ which lay to compel a sheriff to repossess a plaintiff after the sheriff had seised the defendant of more land than he should under a habere facias seisinam.

rehabilitation. The restoration of a sick or disabled person to health and good physical condition. The restoration of a drug addict to abstinence and useful life. 25 Am J2d Drugs § 74. The restoration of one convicted of a crime to a respected and useful position in society, often by putting him on probation. Logan v People, 138 Colo 304, 332 P2d 897; State v Summers, 60 Wash 2d 702, 375 P2d 143. The restoration of a failing business to a sound financial position, as by composition, arrangement, reorganization or readjustment of indebtedness. 9 Am J2d Bankr §§ 1279 et seq.

rehearing. A new hearing and a new consideration of the case by the court in which the suit was originally heard, and upon the pleadings and depositions already in the case. Read v Patterson, 44 NJ Eq 211, 10 A 385. A hearing granted by all appellate court wherein there may be presented errors of law or fact, or both, asserted to have been committed by it, to the end that it may revise its own action erroneously or mistakenly taken and modify or set aside its own judgment. 5 Am J2d A & E § 978. A second consideration of a motion by the court. 37 Am J1st Motions § 18. A reconsideration by an administrative agency of a determination previously made by it. 2 Am J2d Admin L §§ 520 et seq.

rei. Plural of reus.

See forum rei.

rei adjudicatae. See exceptio rei adjudicatae.

Rei depositae proprietas apud deponentem manet, sed et possessio. The property and also the possession in a thing deposited remain in the depositor.

rei gestae. See forum rei gestae.

reimburse. To place in a treasury, as all equivalent for what has been taken, lost, or expended; to refund; to pay back; to restore; as to reimburse the expenses of a war. State ex rel. Sayre v Moore, 40 Neb 854, 59 NW 755. To replenish the funds of a person after payments made by him. To make good losses suffered.

See contribution; indemnify; restitution.

reindictment. An indictment on a charge covered by prior indictment which has been quashed or set aside by the court or after the granting of a new trial. 27 Am J1st Indict §§ 18, 19.

re-inscription. The recording of a mortgage within a certain number of years, as provided by statute, from the date of its original inscription or recording, or from the date of the maturity of the obligation secured. 45 Am J1st Reeds § 50.

reinstatement. Restoration of a person or a thing from a position from which he or it has been removed. South v Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, 86 Ky 186, 190, 5 SW 567. The act of an employer in taking back an employee previously discharged. Restoration of a civil service employee to his former position following his removal, suspension, or transfer to another position. 15 Am J2d Civ S § 42. Restoration to membership in a body, such as a labor union. 31 Am J1st Lab §§ 67, 68. The restoration of membership in a mutual benefit society following a lapse, suspension, or expulsion. 36 Am J2d Frat ) § 74. An order for the continuation of an action following a dismissal or nonsuit, 24 Am J2d Dism § 79, leaving the case in the position in which it stood prior to the dismissal or nonsuit.

To reinstate a case means simply to place again in the position enjoyed prior to dismissal. An order of court granting a motion to reinstate the case does not say that the plaintiff shall be permitted to file a new complaint, or that he shall be entitled to a new trial. United States v Green (CA9 Mont) 107 F2d 19.

reinstatement of appeal. The restoration of a case to the appellate court calendar following a dismissal of the appeal. 5 Am J2d A & E § 928.

reinstatement of bankruptcy proceeding. A remedy of a creditor not given notice of an application for the dismissal of an involuntary proceeding for adjudication, upon which application a dismissal was ordered. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 266. The restoration of an ordinary bankruptcy proceeding upon the failure of a reorganization or arrangement proceeding obtained in the original bankruptcy proceeding.

reinstatement of employee. See reinstatement.

reinstatement of indictment. Proceeding under an indictment following a dismissal of the prosecution, such being allowed under special circumstances, as where the order of dismissal remains within the control of the court. 27 Am J1st Indict § 22. Bringing on for trial an indictment previously passed to the files. 27 Am J1st Indict § 23.

reinstatement of policy. The revival of a policy of insurance after it has lapsed or become forfeited, especially a forfeiture for the nonpayment of premiums, pursuant to a provision for revival contained in the policy and the performance of such conditions as are imposed by such provision, or pursuant to the agreement of the parties. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 368.

There is a difference of opinion whether the reinstatement of an insurance policy constitutes a new contract. 29 Am J Rev ed his § 369.

reinsurance. A contract whereby one party, the reinsurer, agrees to indemnify another, the reinsured, either in whole or in part, against loss or liability which the latter may sustain or incur under a separate and original contract of insurance with a third party, the original insured. A term inclusive, in its broad sense of a contract between two insurer-, by which one assumes the risk of the other and becomes substituted to its contract, so that on the assent of the original policy holder the liability of the first insurer ceases and that of the second is substituted. A contract by which an insurance company, in consideration of the transfer of the policies or assets of a company which is insolvent or wishes to retire from business, assumes all or certain liabilities of the latter company, or a contract by which, as the result of the consolidation or merger of two or more companies, the surviving company assumes the risk of its predecessors. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1747.

reinsurance reserve. A fund required by statute of an insurance company for the protection of its policyholders, such to be applied in the event of the insolvency or dissolution of the company to the reinsurance of outstanding risks carried by the company. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 56.

rei interventus. An intervening circumstance; a circumstance creating an estoppel against one of the parties.

Reipublicae interest voluntates defunctorum effectum sortiri. It is of interest to the state that the wishes of those who are dead should receive their effect.

rei sitae. See forum rei sitae.

reissuable notes. Bank notes capable of reissue for circulation as money after they had once been paid.

reissuance of instrument. The issuance of a bill or note by the maker or acceptor who has acquired the instrument by its renegotiation back to him. 11 Am J2d B & N § 527.

reissuance of patent. The issuance of new letters patent upon surrender of the old. 40 Am J1st Pat § 108.

A patent is granted to secure certain rights to inventors for a limited time. A reissued patent is one which merely secures those rights more definitely in some particular wherein the original patent was defective. A reissued patent has the same standing in law as an original patent. See Ingersoll v Holt (CC Cal) 104 F 682, 683.

reissued abstract. An abstract of title prepared for one person but issued and delivered to another person. Phoenix Title & Trust Co. v Continental Oil Property, 43 Ariz 219, 29 P2d 1065.

reissued patent. See reissuance of patent.

Rei turpis nullum mandatum est. (Civil law.) The mandate of an immoral thing is a nullity.

rei venditae et traditae. See exceptio rei venditae et traditae.

reject. To throw away; to discard; to refuse to receive; to refuse to grant, as to reject a prayer or request. Preston v Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Co. 94 Ky 295, 302, 22 SW 318.

A claim of a creditor is said to have been rejected when, after having been presented in due form to the proper officer for allowance or approval as a valid claim, it has been disallowed by that officer in the manner provided by law. Such rejection is often made a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action to establish the claim. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v State Bank of Portland, 117 Or 1, 242 P 823.

rejection of call. The rejection by the court of a call of a boundary where there is another call with which it can not be reconciled. 12 Am J2d Bound § 66.

rejection of claim. The disallowance of a claim.

rejection of offer. Any act or word of the offeree indicating that he declines the offer or justifying the offeror in inferring that the offeree intends not to accept the offer or give it further consideration. 17 Am J2d Contr § 39.

rejoinder. A pleading by the defendant in response to the plaintiff's replication or reply. 41 Am J1st P1 § 181.

rejoining allegation. The pleading in an ecclesiastical testamentary cause corresponding to the common-law replication.

rejoining gratis. The pleading of a rejoinder without notice or demand from the plaintiff.

rel. Abbreviation of relatione.

See ex rel.

related. Having a relationship, whether by blood or consanguinity, or in a business or professional capacity.

As employed in a provision permitting persons "related to" a member of a benefit society to be named as beneficiaries in a benefit certificate of the society, the words were held to include relatives by affinity as well as by blood. Bennett v Van Riper, 47 NJ Eq 563, 22 A 1055.

related claims. Claims resting upon facts substantially identical. Landstorm v Thorp, 189 172d 46, 26 ALR2d 1170.

related taxpayers. Taxpayers so related by blood, business, corporate, trust, or fiduciary connections, as such are prescribed specifically by statute, that one of them, as an accrual basis taxpayer, is not entitled to take a deduction from earnings for items of expense due the other as a cash basis taxpayer. Internal Revenue Code § 267 (a) (2).

Relatio est fictio juris et intenta ad unum. Relation is a fiction of the law and is intended for one purpose.

relation back. The principle by which an act done at one time is considered by a fiction of the law to have been done on a preceding date. Operative effect of a deed as of a date prior to execution and delivery of the instrument. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 286. The doctrine that the final delivery of an instrument in escrow relates back to and takes effect at the time of the original deposit in escrow. 28 Am J2d Escr § 29. The principle that where a person takes by execution of a power of appointment, he takes, under the authority of the power, as if the power and the instrument executing the power had been incorporated in one instrument, the title resting on the act creating the power and taking effect as of the date of the instrument which conferred the power. 41 Am J1st Pow § 70. The principle that the recording of an instrument is deemed in law to have been done on the day the instrument was filed for record in the recorder's office, although he did not actually copy the instrument upon the record until several days later. Gibson v Chouteau (US) 13 Wall 92, 20 L Ed 534. A principle unsuccessfully asserted as the basis of guilt of burglary where the entry, as by an employee servant, or lodger, was lawful but an intent to steal was formed in the mind of such a person after gaining entrance. 13 Am J2d Burgl § 9.

relation of debtor and creditor. See debtor and creditor relation.

relations. Family connections. Business, professional, or social connections.

When used in wills, the word is ordinarily construed as including relatives by consanguinity, and excluding relatives by affinity, unless a contrary intention is manifested. The term "relations" or "blood relations" in wills generally means such persons as take under the statute regarding the distribution of estates of intestates, but it may include those who actually are related by blood although they could not inherit from him because of the disqualification of illegitimacy. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1391.

As to who are "relations" with the meaning of an anti-lapse statute, see Anne: 19 ALR 2d 1159; 57 Am J1st Wills § 1442.

See degrees of kinship; industrial relations; relatives.

relations by affinity. See affinity.

relations by blood. Persons related by having the blood of a common ancestor. Anno: 10 ALR 864.

See collateral kinsmen; consanguinity; kin; nearest bloodkin; nearest blood relatives.

relationship. See affinity; blood; cognates; cognation; consanguinity; relation; relations.

relations of the half blood. See half blood.

Relatio semper flat ut valeat dispositio. Reference should always be so made that a testamentary disposition may be effective.

relative. Adjective: Dependent upon or to be considered with reference to something else. Relevant; pertinent. Noun: A relation by blood or affinity.

relative confession. A confession where the accused confesseth and appealeth others thereof, thereby to become an approver.

If on this appeal the approver is successful, he receives pardon; if he is not successful he is convicted upon his confession, that is, upon his testimony against himself. State v Willis, 71 Conn 293, 309, 41 A 820.

relative convenience doctrine. The principle that upon an application for injunction, the court shall consider and weigh the relative convenience and inconvenience and the comparative injuries to the parties and to the public which would result from the granting or refusal of the injunction sought, the essential concept being that the court is not bound to make a decree which will do more mischief and wreak greater injury than the wrong which it is asked to redress. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 52.

relative fact. A circumstance; a fact which relates to another fact.

relative impediment. A bar to the marriage of certain related persons to each other, because of their relationship, relative powers. Powers which relate to land.

relative rights. The right of one person considered in reference to the right of another, most vividly illustrated in reference to the use of the highway by particular persons or by particular vehicles. 25 Am J1st High §§ 218 et seq.

relatives. Relations either by blood or affinity. As persons excluded from voting in a creditors' meeting for the election of a trustee in bankruptcy:-persons related to the bankrupt by affinity or consanguinity within the third degree, as determined by the common law, and the spouse of the bankrupt. Bankruptcy Act § 1(27); 11 USC § 1(27).

The word "relatives" when used in a contract has no such fixed and definite meaning as will thwart the express intention of a party thereto. Bennett v Van Riper, 47 NJ Eq 563, 22 A 1055.

The rule is quite universal in the state jurisdictions that the word embraces the persons who would take under a statute of distribution and descent in case of intestacy. Thus, by virtue of the right to take under the statute of distribution and descent in New York, an illegitimate child and its mother are not only relatives, but are parent and child within the meaning of the statute. See Middleton v Luckenbach S.S. Co. (CA2 NY) 70 F2d 326.

See degrees of kinship; relations; relations by blood.

relatives by affinity. See affinity.

relatives by blood. See relations by blood.

relatives of the half blood. See half blood.

Relativorum cognito uno, cognoscitur et alterum. When one of two related things is known, the other is also known.

relator. A person beneficially interested on whose behalf an action is maintained by the state or sovereign power, the action being, as it is said, an ex rel action, brought on the relation of a person having a beneficial interest. 35 Am J1st Mand § 319; 44 Am J1st Quo W § 73. The informer in a qui tam action. 36 Am J2d Forf & P § 79.

relaxare. To release; to free; to discharge.

relaxatio. A release.

relaxavi. I have released.

relay station. An intermediary in broadcasting. 47 USC § 153.

release. The giving up or abandoning of the claim or right to the person against whom the claim exists or the right is to be enforced or exercised. The discharge of a debt by the act of a party in distinction from an extinguishment which is a discharge by operation of law. 45 Am J1st Rel § 2. Of interest of witness:-anything that divests the witness of all interest in the event of the suit. Anno: 28 ALR 15, 16. A discharge from duty or from confinement as a prisoner.

When the word "released" is stamped or written across the face of a bill of lading, it signifies that the carrier is exempt from his common-law liability as an insurer. Morganton Mfg. Co. v Ohio River & Charleston Ry. Co. 121 NC 514, 28 SE 474.

See discharge; lease and release.

release bond. A bond given to obtain the release of property held by an officer under levy of a writ of attachment or execution. 6 Am J2d Attach § 523; 30 Am J2d Exec § 277. A bond given to obtain the release of property under levy by releasing it, not merely from the custody of the officer who made the levy, but from the lien of the levy. 6 Am J2d Attach § 523, 30 Am J2d Exec §§ 277, 280.

release by estoppel. A release executed by a party under such circumstances that he is precluded by his own negligence from asserting that it is not legal and binding upon him; as where a person who signed a release could read it and did not although he had full opportunity to do so before signing it. Wallace v Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway Co. 67 Iowa 547, 549.

release by way of enlarging an estate. See release deed.

release by way of passing an estate. See release deed.

release deed. A deed of quitclaim. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 16.

Formerly, the term seems to have been applied only to deeds conveying all the right, title and interest of the grantor to a grantee who already had some estate in possession in the land released, but in modern usage it is not one of the essentials of a release deed that the grantee shall already have some right, title or interest in the property released. The term is therefore now synonymous with the term quitclaim deed. Anno: 44 ALR 1269.

Blackstone calls such a conveyance a "release" and says that releases may inure either by way of enlarging an estate; as where a life tenant receives a release of all his right from a remainderman, thus giving the life tenant an estate in fee; or releases may be by way of passing an estate; as where one of two coparceners releases all her right to the other, thus passing a fee simple of the whole. See 2 Bl Comm 324.

releasee. A person who is released; a person to whom a release is executed.

release of claim. See release.

release of curtesy. A release of a husband's right of curtesy by due execution of a formal release as a part of the spouse's deed of conveyance or encumbrance, or through a joint conveyance by husband and wife, duly executed and acknowledged. 25 Am J2d Dow § 115.

release of debt. See release.

release of dower. The extinguishment of a wife's inchoate right of dower by due execution of a formal release as part of the spouse's deed of conveyance or encumbrance, or through a joint conveyance by husband and wife, duly executed and acknowledged. 25 Am J2d Dow § 115.

release of expectancy. The assignment of the expectancy of an heir apparent, either to his ancestor or to another potential heir or distributee. 23 Am J2d Desc & D § 165.

release rate. A rate charged by a carrier which is less than the regular rate but operating to release or reduce the liability of the carrier for loss of or damage to the goods in transit.

Neither the marking of a bill of lading, "released," nor the making of a "release rate" will have the legal effect of releasing or reducing the liability of the carrier for loss of or damage to the goods, where no effort was made to place or fix a valuation of the goods when shipped, although the shipper understood that the "release rate" was lower when the bill of lading was marked "released." See Central of Georgia Railroad Co. v Hall, 124 Ga 322, 52 SE 679.

release to uses. A conveyance to one for the use of another, effected by deed of lease and release.

See lease and release.

release under seal. See technical release.

releasor. A person who releases: a person who executes a release.

relegatio. (Civil law.) A kind of exile in which the person exiled retained his civil rights.

relegation. A temporary banishment.

reletting. A definite letting of the same premises by the lessor under a prior lease upon the forfeiture of such lease or the failure of the lessee to take possession.

The term was held not to apply to a holding over by the tenant even if such subsequent occupation amounted to a tenancy at will. Moseley v Allen, 138 Mass 81, 83.

relevancy. The logical relation between evidence offered and a fact to be established. State v Knox, 236 Iowa 499, 18 NW2d 716, 29 Am J2d Ev § 252.

relevant evidence. Any matter of fact the effect, tendency, or design of which, when presented to the mind, is to produce a persuasion concerning the existence of some other matter of fact—a persuasion either affirmative or disaffirmative of its existence. Edmonds v State, 163 Neb 323, 79 NW2d 453. Concisely, evidence of one fact rendering the existence of the fact in issue probable or improbable, according to the common course of events. People v Nitzberg, 287 NY 183, 754, 38 NE2d 490, 40 NE2d 40, 138 ALR 1253; Barnett v State, 104 Ohio St 298, 135 NE 647, 27 ALR 351; Masterson v Harris County Houston Ship Dist. (Tex) 15 SW2d 1011.

Whatever testimony is offered which will assist in knowing which party speaks the truth of the issue, is relevant, and when to admit it does not override other formal rules of evidence, it ought to be received. Moran v Abbey, 58 Cal 163, 168.

reliance. Dependence. Trust or confidence, particularly in promises and representations. As an element of actionable fraud or deceit: --an inducement to action or injurious change of position on the part of the plaintiff. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 223.

reliance interest. A term of art in the law of damages for breach of contract. Expenditures made, or property transferred or consumed, by the party not in default in reliance on the contract. Anno: 17 ALR2d 1300.

relict. A widow or widower. Spitler v Heeter, 42 Ohio St 100.

relicta. An abandonment by the defendant of his plea or defense to an action.

relicta verificatione. See confession relicta verificatione.

reliction. The withdrawal of waters, exposing as land that which was previously under water. The recession of waters from an existing bed. Anno: 54 ALR2d 645. An addition to land caused by the permanent withdrawal of the water by which it was previously covered. 56 Am J1st Wat § 476.

relief. The objective of an action, proceeding, or motion; an award of damages or a judgment, decree, or order requiring an adversary to perform as directed or to refrain from specified conduct. As defined in the Federal Administrative Procedure Act: the whole or part of any agency (1) grant of money, assistance, license, authority, exemption, exception, privilege or remedy; (2) recognition of any claim, right, immunity, privilege, exemption, or exception; or (3) taking any other action upon the application or petition of, and beneficial to, any person. 5 USC § 1001(f). Public aid to persons who are destitute and unable to support and maintain themselves. 41 Am J1st Poor L §§ 13 et seq.

Anciently called "relevium," --an incident to every feudal tenure, by way of fine or composition with the lord for taking up the estate, which was lapsed or fallen in by the death of the last tenant. Although reliefs originated while feuds were only life estates, they continued after feuds became hereditary, and hence were justly regarded as one of the heaviest grievances of tenure; especially when they were, as at first, merely arbitrary and at the will of the lord; so that if he demanded an exorbitant relief, the heir was disinherited. See 2 Bl Comm 65.

"The relation of the heriot to the relief has been one of the chief battle-fields on which the fight of different theories of the early law has been waged. The date of the origin of the heriot has been material only as bearing upon this; and most of those who have studied the subject do not doubt their identity, or at least that it was upon the plan of the heriots that the Norman Conqueror fashioned his plan of relief, as Blackstone says." (Cf. 2 Bl Comm 423.) See Hammond's Blackstone.

See poor person; welfare.

relief acts. See farm relief; Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Acts; welfare.

relief association. An association of the employees of a large corporate employer, particularly a railroad company, organized and acting for the purpose of making provision for employees or their representatives in the event of illness, injury, or death. 35 Am J1st M & S § 116.

relief benefits. Fringe benefits provided by a corporation for sick or injured employees. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1055.

See relief fund.

relief fund. A fund administered by the officers of a relief association with the aid of the employer, contributed to usually by employer and employees, and used to pay benefits to employees or their representatives in the event of illness, injury, or death. 35 Am J1st M & S § 116.

relief worker. See work relief.

religion. A belief had or sought by man to explain the meaning of his existence. A person's understanding of his relation to the Creator and of the obligations of reverence and obedience imposed by such relation. Reynolds v United States, 98 US 145,

[1086]

162, 25 L Ed 244, 249; Davis v Beason, 133 US 333, 33 L Ed 637, 10 S Ct 299; Nicholls v Lynn, 297 Mass 65, 7 NE2d 577, 110 ALR 377. Some system of faith and practice, resting on the idea of the existence of one God, the Creator and Ruler, to whom his creatures owe obedience and love. Knight's Estate, 159 Pa 500, 502, 28 A 303. An individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being, involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, and not including essentially political, sociological, or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code. 8 USC § 1448(a) (relative to release of alien from obligation of military service). The belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation. (Selective Service Act of 1948 § 60.) Belief in the existence of superior beings exercising power over human beings by volition, and imposing rules of conduct, with future rewards and punishments. McMasters v State, 21 Okla Crim 318, 207 P 566, 29 ALR 292. All the different systems of faith and worship to be found in the world. Simpson v Welcome, 72 Me 496.

Religio sequitur patrem. The religion follows the father; that is, the child is deemed to adopt the religion of his father.

religious assembly. An assembly of religious persons, whether engaged in religious worship or not. State v Fisher, 25 NC (3 Ired L) 111, 114.

religious books. Books such as teach or inculcate religion. Simpson v Welcome, 72 Me 496.

religious corporation. A membership corporation, organized for the purpose of maintaining religious worship and spreading the faith. 45 Am J1st Reli Soc §§ 5 et seq. In older times, a bishop, dean, parson, or vicar having title to religious property. 18 Am J2d Corp § 7.

In England ecclesiastical or religious corporations were those in which the members composing it were altogether spiritual persons, such as bishops, parsons, deans and chapters, and were erected for the furtherance of religion and perpetuating the rites of the church, but in this country church corporations are generally classed as religious corporations even though the trustees or other persons who represent the corporation are wholly composed of laymen. Mackenzie v Trustees of Presbytery, 67 NJ Eq 652, 61 A 1027.

religious delusion. An idea concerning the application of religious belief to life's affairs so misconceived as to be incredible to a sane person. Insanity constituting a defense in a criminal case, provided it arises from mental disease rather than mere religious belief. State v Di Paolo, 34 NJ 279, 168 A2d 401, cert den 368 US 880, 7 L Ed 2d 80, 82 S Ct 130.

A delusion that the act charged as a crime was one commanded by God has been held a defense on the ground that, under such circumstances, the defendant could not have known that the act was wrong, although he may have known that it was illegal. There is some authority, however, that knowledge that the act was in violation of law is a sufficient predicate for responsibility and therefore for denying the defense. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 41.

religious meeting. An assemblage for religious worship irrespective of the particular nature and form of worship. A meeting for the promotion of religious worship or the propagation of the faith. An assemblage of people met for the purpose of performing acts of adoration to the Supreme Being, or to perform religious services in recognition of God as an object of worship, love, and obedience, without reference to the faith with respect to the Deity entertained by the persons so assembled. Cline v State, 9 Okla Crim 40, 130 P 510.

An assembly, if lawful and decent, which meets for public divine service comes within the purview of a statute prohibiting the disturbance of any assemblage met for religious worship. 24 Am J2d Disturb M § 2.

religious men. Men who lived in monasteries; monks.

religious principles. Those sentiments, concerning the relations between God and man, which may influence human conduct.

Of these, perhaps the most influential hitherto has been the view entertained as to the probability that God would punish vice. A person's sentiments on that subject, whether of belief, disbelief, or doubt, must be deemed part of his religious principles. Percey v Powers, 51 NJL 432, 17 A 969.

religious purpose. The advancement of religion. The propagation of the faith. Maintaining religious worship.

An association formed for the purpose of exercising some ecclesiastical control over its members, or prescribing some form of worship for them, or subjecting those of its members who fail to conform to its rules to ecclesiastical discipline, is formed for a "religious purpose." But a Young Men's Christian Association formed to promote growth in grace and Christian fellowship among its members, and aggressive Christian work, especially by and for young men, and to seek out and aid the worthy poor, is not formed for a "religious purpose." Hamsher v Hamsher, 132 Ill 273, 23 NE 1123.

religious sect. A body or number of persons, united in tenets, but constituting a distinct organization or party holding sentiments or doctrines different from those of other bodies. 45 Am J1st Reli Soc § 2. A body of persons distinguished by peculiarities of faith and practice from other bodies adhering to the same general system. Evans v Selma Union High School Dist. 193 Cal 54, 222 P 801, 31 ALR 1121. A religious denomination; the aggregate of those persons who adhere to, profess, or entertain the same religious creed, persuasion, or opinions. Hale v Everett, 53 NH 9. People believing in the same religious doctrines, who are more or less closely associated or organized to advance such doctrines and increase the number of believers therein. State ex rel. Weiss v District Board of School Dist. 76 Wis 177, 44 NW 967. A denomination of religious persons having a common system of faith, either written or traditional. See State v Trustees, 7 Ohio St 58, 64.

religious society. A body of persons organized for the purpose of maintaining religious worship, usually meeting in some stated place for the worship of God and for religious instruction. Anno: 17 ALR 1063, s. 28 ALR 864, 81 ALR 1184. More elaborately, a voluntary organization whose members are associated together not only for religious exercises, also for the purposes of maintaining and supporting its ministry, providing the conveniences of a church home, and promoting the growth and efficiency of the work of the main church body of which it forms a coordinate part. First Presbyterian Church v Dennis, 178 Iowa 1352, 161 NW 183.

This term as it is used in the contemplation of a constitutional provision providing for exemption from taxation is to be taken in its ordinary acceptance as meaning an association or body of communicants or a church usually meeting in some stated place for worship or for instruction, or organized for the accomplishment of religious purposes, such as instruction or dissemination of some tenet or particular faith or otherwise furthering its teaching. Mordecai F. Ham Evangelistic Asso. v Matthews, 300 Ky 402, 189 SW2d 524, 168 ALR 1216, 1221.

religious teacher. A minister of the gospel. Pfeiffer v Board of Education, 118 Mich 560, 77 NW 250. Broadly, any person engaged in a sincere attempt to teach the principles of any religious sect or faith, whether or not ordained as a minister.

religious test. An appraisal of a person according to the religion in which he believes. "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States." US Const, Art VI, cl 3.

religious training. Training in the principles of religion and religious belief.

See religion; religious belief.

religious uses. See charitable uses.

religious worship. See worship.

relinquishment. An abandonment; a yielding up of all claim to a thing.
See release; renunciation.

reliqua. A balance of account.

reliquidation. The recalculation and reassessment of a customs duty following a protest. 21 Am J2d Cost D § 94.

relocatio. (Civil law.) The renewal of a lease without making any change in its terms.

relocation. The selection of a new location, as for an office or place of business. A change in location, as of a railroad station. 44 Am J1st RR § 261.

relocation center. A place for the detention during time of war of citizens or subjects of hostile nations or of citizens of the United States of hostile origin or association. 56 Am J1st War § 28.

relocation of route. A change in the location or intended location of a railroad. 44 Am J1st RR § 208.

relocation of way. A change in the location or route of a highway, to be accomplished only by competent authority and in the manner prescribed by law. 25 Am J1st High § 106.

remain. To stay in a place. To be left after others or other things have departed or been taken away.

remainder. An estate, whether in real or personal property, limited to take effect in possession immediately after the expiration of a prior estate known as the particular estate, created at the same time and by the same instrument. 28 Am J2d Est § 195.

The word is relative and implies a prior disposition of some part of the estate, but the particular estate and the remainder constitute one whole, are carved out of the same inheritance, and may both vest at the same time and subsist together. Moore v McKinley, 246 Iowa 734, 69 NW2d 73.

The essence of a remainder is that it is to arise immediately on the determination of the particular estate by lapse of time or other determinate event, and not in abridgement of it. 28 Am J2d Est § 196.

Though, strictly speaking, a remainder is not the same as reversion, the term "remainder," as used in a particular statute, such as the income tax law, may be construed to include what, in a strict common-law sense, is a "reversion." Commissioner of Corp. & Taxation v Bullard, 313 Mass 72, 46 NE2d 557, 146 ALR 772.

See alternative remainders; contingent remainder.

remainder after remainder. A permissible limitation where the remainders are in the alternative so that one takes effect if the other does not. 28 Am J2d Est § 216.

remainder limited by way of use. A use which was so qualified that it was given effect as a remainder. 28 Am J2d Est § 337.

remainderman. One entitled to an estate in remainder.

Under a statute providing that as respects the passing and limitation over of real or personal property dependent, under the terms of any instrument, on the foster parent dying without heirs, the minor adopted child is not deemed the child of the foster parent so as to defeat the rights of remaindermen, the term "remaindermen" was held to include all those persons who might ultimately be entitled to take the estate, whether they were technically remaindermen under the definition of the common law or otherwise. Re Leask, 197 NY 193, 90 NE 652.

remainders on a contingency with a double aspect. Alternative remainders so limited that the second takes effect in lieu of the first, and only in case the first never takes effect at all. 28 Am J2d Est § 216.

As an illustration, a limitation to A for life, and after A's death, if he have children, to them in fee simple, and if he have no children, then to B in fee simple. In such case, in one alternative the remainder in favor of the children vests, and in the other alternative the remainder in favor of B vests. First Nat. Bank v Pointer, 174 Tenn 472, 126 SW2d 335.

remainder on a double contingency. See remainders on a contingency with a double aspect.

remand. The return of a case by an appellate court to the trial court for entry of a proper judgment, further proceedings, or for a new trial. 5 Am J2d A & E §§ 962 et seq. The return of a cause, by the reviewing court on certiorari, to the tribunal to which the writ was directed. 14 Am J2d Certiorari § 74. The return of a case to an administrative agency after a review by the court of a determination or decision of such agency. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 764. The disposition made of a petitioner denied relief in a habeas corpus proceeding, he being sent to the custody or restraint from which he was taken under the writ. 25 Am J1st Hab C § 154. The sending back to the state court by the federal court of a cause previously removed from the state court to the federal court. 28 USC § 1447(c).

See mandate; procedendo; reversed and remanded.

remand for further proceedings. See remand.

remanentia. Same as remainder.

remanentiam. See adremanentiam.

Remanent pro defectu emptorum. They remain for want of purchasers; that is, goods offered for sale by a sheriff.

remanere. To remain; to continue; to demur.

remanet. A cause which is ready for trial, but which must await the next term of court.

Rem domino vel non domino vendente duobus in jure est potior venditione prior. One, whether owner or not, having sold a thing to two persons, he to whom it was first sold is the stronger in right.

remarriage. The marriage of a surviving spouse or of a divorced spouse. The marriage of a divorced spouse to husband or wife under the marriage dissolved by the divorce.

remarriage table. A table of chances of remarriage of a surviving spouse, taking into account such a known factor as age, usable particularly in calculating the value of a life estate terminable upon remarriage. Re Keenan's Estate, 302 NY 417, 99 NE2d 219, 25 ALR2d 1459.

remediable. Capable of being remedied or redressed.

remediable right. A right enforceable by resort to law and the invoking of an appropriate remedy. Ebner v Haverty Furniture Co. 138 SC 74, 78, 136 SE 19.

remedial. Providing a remedy or means of redress; pertaining to remedy or redress.

remedial action. A civil action for recovery of damages for the benefit of the injured party as compensation, the purpose being to indemnify the plaintiff rather than punish the defendant. 1 Am J2d Actions § 42.

An action is remedial where it is brought by the party injured, but it is penal when it is brought by a common informer. O'Keefe v Weber, 14 Or 55, 12 P 74.

remedial cases. Those cases wherein the remedy is afforded through certain extraordinary writs, such as prohibition, mandamus, certiorari and quo warranto. State v St. Paul & Sioux City Railroad Co. 35 Minn 222, 223, 28 NW 245.

remedial law. The law of practice. The law which provides a remedy for the enforcement of rights and the redress of grievances and sets forth the rules whereby the remedy is applied.

remedial statute. A statute to be construed liberally as one intended to reform or extend existing rights or to correct defects and eliminate mischief in a pre-existing statute. 50 Am J1st Stat §§ 14, 15. A statute pertaining to matters of practice and procedure rather than matters of substantive law. 50 Am J1st Stat § 15.

remedy. The means employed to enforce a right or redress an injury. Paulsen v Remecke, 181 La 917, 160 So 629, 97 ALR 1184. The means or method whereby a cause of action or corresponding obligation is effectuated and by which a wrong is redressed and relief obtained. Jewett v City Transfer & Storage Co. 129 Cal App 556, 18 P2d 351. The appropriate legal form of relief by which a remediable right may be enforced. Ebner v Haverty Furniture Co. 138 SC 74, 78, 136 SE 19. Any remedial right to which an aggrieved party is entitled with or without resort to a tribunal. UCC § 1-201(34).

remedy by due course of law. Reparation for injury ordered by a tribunal having jurisdiction, in due course of procedure, after a fair hearing. Hanson v Kreheiel, 68 Kan 670, 75 P 1041.

See due course of law; due process of law.

remedy over. Recourse against a third person to recover a sum which one has been compelled to pay to another.

See third party action.

Rem in bonis nostris habere intelligimur, quotiens ad recuperandum eam actionem habeamus. We are supposed to have a property in our goods whenever we have an action to recover them. See 2 Bl Comm 397.

remise. A surrender; a release; a reconveyance.

remise, release and quitclaim. Operative words of a quitclaim deed. 23 Am J1st Deeds § 16.

remission. A release; a pardon; an exoneration. A remitting. The forgiving of a pecuniary penalty or forfeiture. 23 Am J1st Forf & P §§ 24, 53. An act of the chief executive of a state in forgiving a fine under his power to pardon. 39 Am J1st Pard § 26.

remission for jurisdiction. See remittitur for jurisdiction.

remission of assets. The transfer of assets of a decedent's estate by an ancillary representative to the representative at the domicile of the decedent. remission of damages.

See remittitur.

remission of fine, forfeiture, or penalty. See remission.

remission of punishment. See commutation of sentence; pardon; remission.

Remissius imperanti melius paretur. He who commands the more gently is the better obeyed.

Remissum magis specie, quam vi; quia, cum venditor pendere juberetur, in partem pretii emptoribus ac- crecebat. Remitted rather in appearance than in fact; because when the vendor was ordered to pay he increased the price to the buyers in proportion. See 1 Bl Comm 317.

remit. To effect a remission as by a pardon or forgiveness of a forfeiture. To transmit or forward money, especially by way of payment of a debt. Nicoletti v Bank of Los Banos, 190 Cal 637, 214 P 51, 27 ALR 1479, 1483; Colvin v United States Mut. Acci. Asso. (NY) 66 Hun 543, 545, 21 NYS 734; 40 Am J1st Paym § 36.

remittance. The transmitting of money. Money transmitted. A payment sent by mail or other means of transmission.

remittance man. A stipendiary. In popular usage, a dissolute member of the family sent afar to live on a remittance without further blemishing the family name.

See stipendiary.

remittee. A person to whom a remittance is sent or made.

A person who remits. There is a practice of procuring a check to be drawn by a third party to be used in paying a debt due from the person procuring the check to the person to whom the debtor has had the check made payable. This practice is recognized in the case of foreign bills of exchange, and the person procuring the bill is known technically as the "remitter" of it. And in such case the payee of the bill, who takes it from the remitter for value, is held to be a bona fide purchaser for value. Boston Steel & Iron Co. v Steller, 183 Mass 140, 66 NE 646.

The doctrine that where a mail has a right to lands, but is out of possession, afterward has a freehold cast upon him by some subsequent defective title, and enters by virtue of that title, in such case he is remitted, or sent back, by operation of law, to his ancient and more certain title.

The right of entry, which he gained by a bad title, is ipso facto annexed to his own inherent good title; and his defeasible estate is utterly defeated and annulled, by the instantaneous act of the law, without his participation or consent. See 3 Bl Comm 19.

remittere. To release; to relinquish.

remittit damna. He remits damages; --a plaintiff's record entry of a remission or waiver of a part of the damages awarded by the verdict of the jury in his favor. Van Alen v Rogers, 1 Johns Cas 281.

remittitur. A reducing of a verdict because of the excessiveness of the award, often required of a plaintiff as a condition of affirmance of the judgment entered upon the verdict. 22 Am J2d Damg § 366. The remanding of a case by an appellate court to the trial court from which the appeal taken.

See mandate; remand.

remittitur for jurisdiction. The reduction by the plaintiff of his claim by a voluntary credit in order to bring the claim within the jurisdictional maximum limit of the court. 20 Am J2d Cts § 165.

remittitur of record. See remand.

remittor. Same as remitter.

remnant rule. The rule that whenever in subdividing a line or space, the surveyor declares the dimensions he has given to each subdivision except the last and there leaves an irregular space without designating its dimensions, he is presumed to have thrown all the remainder, much or little into such irregular and unmeasured portion. Pereles v Gross, 126 Wis 122, 105 NW 217; Anno: 97 ALR 1232.

remnants and surpluses. A technical expression used in the registry of the admiralty and applied to the residue which remains after the satisfaction of claims for seamen's wages, for bottomry bonds, for salvage services, and for supplies of materialmen, where a ship has been sold to satisfy such claims. China Mut. Ins. Co. v Force, 142 NY 90; 36 NE 874.

remnant theory. A theory sometimes applied in determining the amount of property subject to condemnation under the power of eminent domain, the theory being that if only such property as is barely necessary for the improvement is taken, there will be left fragments of property of such size and shape as to be separately valueless, the result being that the public body condemning will be required to pay for the whole, notwithstanding it only took a part. Cincinnati v Vester (CA6 Okla) 33 F2d 242, 68 ALR 831, affd 281 US 439, 74 L Ed 950, 50 S CI 360.

remonstrance. A protest. An objection. An objection, for example, to the establishment of a highway. 25 Am J1st High § 25.

The distinction between a remonstrance and all appeal is clear. A remonstrance is interposed in opposition to the act or proceeding and is made before action is taken, while an appeal is made after the act or proceeding, usually upon the ground that the law has not been adhered to. Girvin v Simon, 127 Cal 489, 494, 59 P 945.

remote. Distant in relationship, as a remote cause. A matter of time between two events, such as the occurrence of all accident and the date of the trial of the action arising out of the accident. Anno: 85 ALR2d 516.

remote cause. A speculative rather than a direct cause of injury, consequently no basis for the recovery of damages. 22 Am J2d Damg § 21. A cause which is not sufficiently proximate as to constitute the foundation of all action for negligence. 38 Am J1st Negl § 53. A cause so remote in efficiency in reference to injury or cause of loss as to be dismissed from consideration by the court. Mahoney v Beatman, 110 Conn 184, 147 A 762, 66 ALR 1121.

If two distinct causes are successive and unrelated in their operation, they cannot be concurrent. One of them must be the proximate and the other the remote cause, and the law will regard the proximate as the efficient and responsible cause, disregarding the remote cause. 38 Am J1st Negl § 67.

remote damages. Damages from an injury not occurring directly from and as a natural result of the wrong complained of; damages of an unusual and speculative nature. Braun v Craven, 175 Ill 401, 51 NE 657.

As a legal ground for the exclusion of damage in a tort action, "remoteness" means, not severance in point of time, but the absence of defect and natural causal sequence-- the inability to trace in regard to the damage the propter hoc in a necessary or natural descent from the wrongful act. See Dulieu v White & Sons, 2 K. B. (Eng.) 669, 17 Times L. R. 555.

remote indorsee. The status of an indorsee holding a bill or note in reference to an indorser under an indorsement made prior to the one under which he received the instrument. 11 Am J2d B & N § 639.

remote materialman. A materialman furnishing materials for construction work whose only relationship to the principal contractor is that he has furnished materials to a subcontractor. 17 Am J2d Cont Bond § 91.

Remoto impedimento emergit actio. The impediment or bar being removed, the action emerges or comes to life.

removable cloud on title. A cloud on the title to property which, although apparently valid, is in fact invalid. 44 Am J1st Quiet T § 11.

removal. A moving of something. A change of residence. A change of domicil. Barstow v Stone, 10 Colo App 296, 52 P 48. A person's departure to and settlement in a foreign country. Jones v McMasters (US) 20 How 8, 22, 15 L Ed 805, 810.

removal for cause. The removal of a public officer from office for reasons which the law and sound public policy recognize as sufficient warrant for removal, that is, legal cause, not merely cause which the appointing power in the exercise of discretion may deem sufficient. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 205, removal from office. Divesting an incumbent of the powers and emoluments of office. An incident of the sovereign power which creates an office, the title to office being held subject to the conditions imposed by the sovereign power in constitution or statute. 43 Am J1st Pub Of §§ 181, 182. The divesting of the power, authority, and position of a person as an executor or administrator of a decedent's estate. 31 Am J Ex & Ad § 109.

As used in a constitutional provision providing that an officer unless "removed" holds office until his successor qualifies, the word refers to ouster from office under the statute authorizing removals for misconduct, and does not refer to ouster by quo warranto proceedings, which are invoked only where a person is usurping an office to which he has no legal title. See Haymaker v State ex rel. McCain, 22 NM 400, 163 P 248.

Removal from office also applies to corporate officers, removal being accomplished as provided for and regulated by statute or provision of the charter of the corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1105.

See removal for cause.

removal of body from grave. A disinterment sometimes compelled, sometimes voluntary for purpose of changing place of interment. 22 Am J2d Dead B §§ 22 et seq.

removal of building. See moving building.

removal of cause. In the usual sense of the term, the transfer of a case from a state to a federal court, made on the petition of a defendant or defendants. Shamrock Oil & Gas Corp. v Sheets, 313 US 100, 85 L Ed 1214, 61 S Ct 868. In the broad sense of the term, any transfer of a case from one court to another.

See change of venue.

removal of cloud on title. See cloud on title; quieting title.

removal of officer. See removal from office.

removal of property from jurisdiction. A ground of attachment, whether an actual physical removal or a constructive removal by assignment or transfer of the property to a nonresident, with intent to hinder or delay creditors or, under some statutes, irrespective of intent. 6 Am J2d Attach §§ 243, 244.

removal rider. A permit issued by an insurance company to an insured, authorizing him to remove his insured goods to a new location. Anno: 38 ALR 1520.

removal tax. A tax levied upon the removal from one country to another of property acquired by succession or testamentary disposition. Re Peterson, 168 Iowa 511, 151 NW 66, affd Duns v Brown, 245 US 176, 62 L Ed 228, 38 S Ct 111.

See move; removal.

remover. The transfer of a cause to another court from the one wherein it is pending, by writ of error, certiorari, review, etc.

rem proceeding. See in rem action.

remuneration. Compensation. Salary; wages. Russell v Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. 332 Mo 645, 60 SW2d 44, 87 ALR 953.

renal colic. A serious illness arising from malfunction of the kidneys or urinary system. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 745.

renant. Denying.

rencounter. A sudden fight, without deliberation.

render. To give; to furnish; to present; to deliver.

Mailing a statement which is to be rendered by a certain date is not a rendering of it unless it is received by that date. Peabody v Satterlee, 166 NY 174, 59 NE 818.

rendered account. Same as account rendered.

rendered and satisfied. See judgment rendered and satisfied.

rendering decision. Decision-making, consisting in both fact finding and application of the law, although where a case is tried by a court with a jury, the fact finding is generally the exclusive province of the jury. Fasplund v Hannett, 31 NM 641, 249 P 1074, 58 ALR 573.

renders. See services.

rendition of judgment. The act of the court in orally pronouncing a judgment in apt language which finally determines the rights of the parties to the action, and leaves nothing more to be done except the ministerial act of the clerk in entering the judgment. American Surety Co. v Mosher, 48 Ariz 552, 64 P2d 1025; Seisser v Oregon S. L R. Co. 33 Idaho 291, 193 P 731.

See date of rendition of judgment.

rendition warrant. A warrant of extradition. 31 Am J2d Extrad § 61.

See extradition warrant.

renegade. A deserter from a cause, faith, or political party.

renegotiation. The negotiation of a negotiable instrument by a prior party to whom the instrument has been negotiated back. 11 Am J2d B & N § 527.

[1091]

Renegotiation Act. A federal statute providing for the renegotiation of war contracts and the recapture of excessive profits realized under contracts for the supply of war materiel. 50 USC Appx §§ 1191 et seq.

renegotiation of war contract. The modification of a contract for military needs made in time of national emergency and war, after the termination of hostilities, for the purpose of preventing an excessive buildup of military stores and materiel and protecting the government against excessive profits disrupting national economy. 56 Am J1st War § 49.

renew. To make over; to rebuild; to re-establish. Quinn v Valiquette, 80 Vt 434, 68 A 515. To refresh, revive, or rehabilitate an expiring or declining subject. Bright v Dayton (CA5 Ga) 107 F2d 153. To confirm a contract made under the disability of infancy of mental incompetency. Minnich v Darling, 8 Ind App 539, 544, 36 NE 173.

renewable insurance. Insurance which can be extended in duration by a mere notice from the insured, without the making of a new contract. Continental Casualty Co. v Trenner (DC Pa) 35 F Supp 643.

renewable term insurance. Term insurance with a provision for renewal without an additional medical examination.

renewal. Renewing; being renewed.

See renew; successive renewals.

renewal commission. A commission, calculated on a renewal premium, to which an insurance agent is entitled by virtue of having obtained the application for the policy by solicitation of the insured.

renewal note. A new promissory note given by way of renewing the obligation under a prior note.

As applied to promissory notes, in commercial and legal parlance, the word "renewal" or "renewed" means more than the substitution of another obligation for the old one. It means to reestablish a particular contract for another period of time. It means to restore to its former conditions an obligation on which the time of payment has been extended. Kedey v Petty, 153 Ind 179, 54 NE 798, 800.

renewal of contract. The extension or continuation of a contract for an additional term following the expiration of the contract according to its terms. 17 Am J2d Contr § 464.

renewal of copyright. An extension under the Copyright Law of the period of a copyright as provided by the statute. Miller Music Corp. v Charles N. Daniels, Inc. 362 US 373, 4 L Ed 2d 804, 80 S Ct 792.

renewal of indebtedness. The substitution of a new obligation for a pre-existing indebtedness. An extension of time of payment. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 368. Neither borrowing of money nor effecting a loan. State v Love, 170 Miss 666, 150 So 196, 90 ALR 506.

renewal of insurance. See renewal of policy.

renewal of lease. A creation of a new lease rather than an extension of an old lease. 32 Am J1st L & T § 956.

See extension of lease.

renewal of motion. A motion submitted following the denial of a similar motion. 37 Am J1st Motions § 19.

renewal of patent. An extension of the life of a patent pursuant to statute under a right which is as much an incident of the invention as the right to obtain a patent. 40 Am J1st Pat § 103.

renewal of policy. The continuance of insurance in force by the payment of a new premium, sometimes under a provision for renewal contained in the contract of insurance.

A renewal of insurance by the payment of a new premium and the issuance of a receipt therefor, where there is no provision in the policy for its renewal, is a new contract on the same terms as the old, but where the renewal is in pursuance of a provision to that effect, it is not a new contract but an extension of the old. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 357.

See renewable insurance.

renewal until paid. A provision for the renewal of a note contained in the instrument.

The courts appear to be in complete agreement that a "renewal until paid" or similar provision in a note authorizes, not an indefinite number of renewals thereof, but one renewal. Riepl v Sardino, 262 Wis 670, 56 NW2d 493, 35 ALR2d 1087.

reniant. Same as renant.

renounce. To waive or relinquish; as, to renounce a right.

The term as used in the Uniform Limited Partnership Act providing that a person erroneously believing himself to be a limited partner is not liable as a general partner "provided that on ascertaining the mistake he promptly renounces his interest in the profits of the business," means the giving up of a right or claim; the object of the provision is to put creditors in the position they would have occupied if there had been no limited partner at the time their debts were contracted. Gilman Paint & Varnish Co. v Legum, 197 Md 665, 80 A2d 906, 29 ALR2d 286.

renounce probate. To decline to act as executor.

See retractation.

renovare. To renew.

rent. Verb: To obtain possession of premises under a lease. To let premises. Noun: Compensation in money, provisions, chattels, of services, paid or given in exchange for the use and occupation of real estate. 32 Am J1st L & T § 428. A sum stipulated to be paid for the use and enjoyment of land, liability for which becomes absolute when it accrues upon the occupation of the premises for which it is to be paid. Ambrozich v Eveleth, 200 Minn 473, 274 NW 635, 112 A LR 269. The return to the lessor under a mining lease. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 48. The return to the lessor under a gas or oil lease. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 65. The return to a bailor under a bailment for hire. 8 Am J2d Bailm § 225.

The word is derived from the Latin word "redditus." De Haven v Sherman, 131 Ill 115, 22 NE 711.

The term as used in a statute giving a landlord a lien for unpaid rent, may not be so construed as to include taxes which the tenant has covenanted to pay, in the absence of a clear intention of the parties to that effect expressed in the lease. Lamoine Mott Estate v Neiman, 77 F2d 744, 99 ALR 1097.

The term within the meaning of price control regulations includes any commission paid by a tenant for obtaining a lease. Anno: 156 ALR 1463.

rental. A charge made by way of rent. A sum total of rents accruing from particular premises for a year or other definite period of time. Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley Railroad Co. v Bates, 40 Neb 381, 393. Another term for rent roll.

rental agent. An agent who simply lets premises and collects rents thereon. St. Paul v Clark, 84 Minn 138, 140, 86 NW 893.

rental value. The amount for which premises will let; not a conjectural, but a fair, value to be ascertained by evidence of what the premises will rent for in the open market or evidence of other facts from which the fair value may be determined. Brewington v Loughran, 183 NC 558, 112 SE 257, 28 ALR 1543. The measure of recovery for a wrongful withholding of plaintiff from possession of real property. 22 Am J2d Damg § 132.

The term as applied to lands covered with a growing crop, means, not what the lands may be rented for in the vicinity for ordinary purposes, but the value of the use for the purpose of maturing and harvesting the crop; of necessity, the value of the crop in the condition at which it exists at the time of the injury is the prime factor in the ascertainment of the value of the use. Anno: 19 ALR 495.

rent charge. A charge upon land, created by deed or will, for the payment of sum due periodically, collectible by distraint, constituting a hereditament which will pass to the heirs and devisees of him in whose favor it was created, unless disposed of by him during his lifetime. 32 Am J1st L & T §§ 1039, 1040.

rent days. Days commonly fixed for the payment of rents, determined in ancient times according to ecclesiastical festivals or holidays.

renting automobiles. A business, of great proportions in modern times, for the furnishing of automobiles to customers at airports, railroad stations, bus stations, hotels, etc. under leases providing for the payment of a fixed rental, the automobile to be driven by the lessee.

A business consisting mainly in furnishing automobiles from a central garage on orders generally by telephone is not an agency for public use or a public utility. Terminal Taxicab Co. v District of Columbia, 241 US 252, 60 L Ed 984, 36 S Ct 583.

See hired automobile clause.

rent in kind. Crop rent. 32 Am J1st L & T § 61.

rent insurance. A contract of insurance indemnifying the insured owner or lessor of premises against loss of rent under certain specified conditions, such as the premises becoming untenable because of fire or other casualty. Anno: 17 ALR2d 1228. A species of guaranty insurance; a contract whereunder the insured landlord is guaranteed a specified fixed revenue from his lands. Anno: 17 ALR2d 1230. A contract of insurance indemnifying a tenant for any loss which accrues to him by reason of having to pay rent for a period during which the rented premises are untenable from fire or other cause specified in the contract. Anno: 17 ALR2d 1231.

rent laws. Statutes protecting tenants against exorbitant rents and from dispossession so long as they pay the agreed rent or a reasonable rent, enacted during a housing shortage, especially one resulting from war conditions. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1036.

rent, mortgage, and repair. As a phrase in a delegation of powers, referring to real estate rather than personalty. Caracci v Lillard, 7 111 2d 382, 130 NE2d 514, 53 ALR2d 1053.

rent roll. A list of a person's tenants and the rents due under their leases.

rents and profits. See rents, issues, and profits.

rent seck. A ground rent, reserved by the grantor upon an alienation of the fee, but without a right of distraint for collection. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1040.

rent service. A ground rent, a rent charge, payable in corporeal service and some pecuniary medium, arising upon an alienation of the fee with a reservation of rent and the right to distrain for nonpayment, constituting an estate remaining in the grantor and passing upon his death the same as the land would have passed in the absence of an alienation. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1040.

Rent service arising upon conveyances in fee simple seems to have been abolished by the Statute of Quia Emptores (1290) prohibiting subinfeudations. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1040.

rents, issues, and profits. The income or net income from land or an estate therein. People v Savings Union, 72 Cal 199, 203, 13 P 498. A kind of estate growing out of the land for life, or years, producing an annual or other rent. Bruce v Thompson, 26 Vt 741, 746.

rents of assize. Immutable fixed rents of freeholders and copyholders of ancient manors.

renunciation. A definite giving up or casting off of something. A legal act by which a person abandons a right acquired, but without transferring it to another. Johnston's Estate, 186 Wis 599, 203 SW 376. A disclaimer of interest by succession made after the ancestor's death, which, if effective, relates back to the time of death and avoids the succession. Bostian v Milens, 239 Mo App 555, 193 SW2d 797, 170 ALR 424. Refusal to accept a gift. Gottstein v Hedges, 210 Iowa 272, 228 NW 93, 67 ALR 1218. A method of discharging a negotiable instrument consisting of the holder's express disclaimer of rights in the instrument. 11 Am J2d B & N § 948. The refusal by a person designated trustee to act as such. 15 Am J2d Char § 40. The refusal of one entitled to appointment as an executor or administrator to accept the appointment. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 77. An agent's termination of the agency relationship. 3 Am J2d Agency § 40.

renunciation by surviving spouse. A refusal of dower or statutory share of a surviving spouse in the estate of a decedent in order to take under his or her will; a rejection of provisions of a will in order to take dower or the statutory share of a surviving spouse. 25 Am J2d Dow § 162.

renunciation of citizenship. See expatriation; oath of allegiance.

renunciation of legacy or devise. A declination of a legacy or devise by positive act or statement of the beneficiary. 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 1566, 1571.

renunciation of property. A dereliction. An abandonment of property.

Renunciation of dereliction of property requires both the intention to abandon and external action. This is true of property at sea as well as on land. Even the title of the owner to property lying at the bottom of the sea is not necessarily divested. Murphy v Dunham (DC Mich) 38 F 503. There must be a voluntary intention to abandon, or evidence from which such intention may be presumed. Belcher Oil Co. v Griffin (CA5 Fla) 97 F2d 425.

renunciation of will. See renunciation by surviving spouse; renunciation of legacy or devise.

renvoi. (French.) A dismissal; a sending back, particularly of a diplomatic officer. The doctrine in the field of conflict of laws that in determining the question before it, the court of the forum must take into account the whole law of the other jurisdiction, including not only the local law of such other jurisdiction, but also its rules as to conflict of laws, and then apply the law as to the actual question which the rules of the other jurisdiction prescribe, which law may be the law of the forum. 16 Am J2d Confl L § 2. Rejected as putting the court on the course of a never-ending circle. Haumschild v Continental Casualty Co. 7 Wis 2d 130, 95 NW2d 814.

The doctrine of renvoi has generally been repudiated by the American authorities. 16 Am J2d Confl L § 2.

reo absente. The defendant being absent; in the absence of the defendant.

reopening account. A review or reconsideration of an account, such as a guardian's account, had after a purported final settlement. 25 Am J1st G & W § 172. The reconsideration of a trustee's account after settlement thereof by decree or order of court. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 511.

reopening case. Permitting either party to present further evidence after the parties have rested. 53 Am J1st Trial § 123. Action on the part of a police department in resuming investigation upon the disclosure of an item of new evidence in a case previously closed for want of evidence of guilt.

reopening estate. A matter with which bankruptcy courts are expressly invested with jurisdiction, such courts being empowered to reopen closed estates for cause shown, Bankruptcy Act § 2(a) (8); 11 USC § 11(a) (8), as for the administration of assets of substantial value which the bankrupt did not schedule. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 1273. The resumption of administration of a decedent's estate, after an order discharging the executor or administrator and the approval of his final account of distribution, because of the existence of newly discovered assets. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 124.

An administration should be reopened to permit prosecution of an action, not barred by limitations, against the estate. Re Miles' Estate, 262 NC 647, 138 SE2d 487.

reorganization of bank. See bank reorganization.

repair. Verb: To restore to a sound condition that which is decayed, dilapidated, injured, or partially destroyed. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 47. To restore by renewal or replacement of subsidiary parts of a whole. Hammond v El Dorado Springs, 362 Mo 530, 242 SW2d 479, 31 ALR2d 1367. Noun: The act of restoration to a sound, good, or complete state after decay, injury, dilapidation or partial destruction. Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v Jackson (CA1 Mass) 112 F 146.

It would be in violation of a proper construction of the term "repair" to hold that it included an original improvement, or work of a different character from that previously done. Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v Broderick, 113 Cal 628, 633, 45 P 863.

In a contract of sale a covenant to repair, and to replace defective parts of the article contemplates a restoration to the original condition, but does not contemplate the employment of experts to experiment with the article and redesign and reconstruct it. Allegheny County v Maryland Casualty Co. (DC Pa) 42 F Supp 672.

Work which may be considered "repairs" within the meaning of a provision of an instrument which creates a trust and charges the cost of making repairs on the trust property to the income therefrom includes expenditures for modernizing buildings by putting in new fronts, reconstructing a barn, digging a well, the repairing or replacing of roofing and plumbing, cleaning flues, repairing old or installing new heating equipment, painting and papering rooms, and whatever else is reasonably necessary to keep up a house. Anno: 128 ALR 255 et seq.

See covenant to repair; good condition and repair; good repair; habitable repair; necessary repairs.

repair and replace. See repair.

reparable injury. An injury the damage from which is merely in the nature of pecuniary loss, and can be exactly and fully repaired by compensation in money. Puckette v Hicks, 39 La Ann 901, 2 So 801.

reparanda. See domo reparanda.

reparation. The making good of a wrong or injury caused another. Amends or compensation for an injury; redress. The return of an unlawful exaction, especially a wrongful and unlawful charge made by a common carrier. Payments made by a country defeated in a war under obligation imposed by the treaty of peace.

reparatione. See de reparatione. reparatione hacienda. See de reparatione hacienda.

reparationem et sustentationem. See ad reparationem, etc.

reparatio pontium. The repair of bridges.

repartimento. A term encountered in Spanish-American grants signifying a partition of common property among the several owners.

All the lands in the kingdom of Spain were divided into "territoria." The "territorium" was divided into "proprios," "solares," "ejidos," "pastos," "dehesas," and "monte." The "proprios" belonged to the town as its proper severalty. The "solares" belonged to their respective owners in severalty. The residue of the "territorium"- "ejidos," "pastos," and "dehesas"-was the community property of the members of the community. When the necessity ceased, the system was changed and about the time of the discovery of America (1492). It was determined to reduce these community lands to private ownership. This was done through various officers and commissioners of the government. The act was never called or characterized as a grant or a concession, but as a partition among the owners of common property, giving to each his share in severalty. This act was called "repartimento." Steinbach v Moore, 30 Cal 498, 501.

repatriation. The restoration of a person to citizenship previously lost by expatriation. A return to the country of one's birth and citizenship of origin. To replace an existing pavement on a street or highway with a new pavement. Ten Eyck v Albany, 65 Hun 194, 198, 20 NYS 157.

repave. To reconstruct the paving of a street or highway. Anno: 41 ALR2d 614.

repay. To compensate for something received. To make return in money or of goods in kind. Grant v Dabney, 19 Kan 388.

repeal of constitution. An express, implied, or constructive repeal of a provision of a constitution by the adoption of an amendment to the constitution. 16 Am J2d Const L § 27.

repeal of franchise. The termination of a franchise by the exercise of a reserved power of revocation or repeal. 23 Am J1st Franch § 26.

repeal of statute. The termination of the effect of a statute as existing law by a later statute or constitutional provision. 50 Am J1st Stat §§ 516et seq. The annulment of a statute, whereby it ceases to have any existence, accomplished directly or expressly through a later statute or constitutional provision, or indirectly or impliedly by the enactment of a statute or the adoption of a constitutional provision which is repugnant to or inconsistent with the statute. Oakland Paving Co. v Hilton, 69 Cal 479, 485, 11 P 3.

repeated. Reiterated. Told as heard, as where a slanderous statement is told to a third person by the person to whom it was first communicated. Performed again. Occurring again.

The word is to be distinguished from "continued." A "repeated" violation of a statute may be one which has ceased for a substantial period of time prior to the institution of a proceeding to enjoin it, whereas a "continued" violation would charge violation up to the time of filing suit. Re Mauch Chunk Brewing Co. (DC NH) 43 F Supp 205.

repeated transactions. Transactions undertaken and performed one after another. Anno: 87 ALR 97.

repeated trespasses. A succession of wrongs of the same kind, each sufficient in itself to constitute a tort.

See continuing trespass.

repeater. See recidivist.

Repellitur a sacramento infamis. He who is infamous is denied the right to be sworn or to make oath.

Repellitur exceptione cedendarum actionum. He is defeated in his plea that the actions were assigned.

repentance. Sorrow for one's own wrongdoing.

See locus penitentiae.

repetition. (Civil law.) A claim and demand to recover back a payment made under a mistake on a condition which had not been performed.

See repeated.

repetito namio. A second or reciprocal distress, in lieu of a first one which was eloiigned.

Hence, it is a command to the sheriff to take other goods of the distrainor, in lieu of the distress formerly taken, and eloiigned, or withheld from the owner. It is one distress taken to answer another, by way of reprisal. See 3 Bl Comm 148.

repetundarum crimen. (Roman law.) Bribery; the crime of bribery or extortion committed by a public officer.

replace. To restore to a former position. To substitute. To provide an equivalent, as in building a house to take the place of one destroyed by fire.

See repair; reproduction.

replacement cost. See reproduction cost.

replead. To serve or file a new pleading.

See pleading over.

repleader. An order or judgment awarded by the court after verdict requiring the parties to replead from that stage of the pleadings where there appears to have been the first error in the pleadings.

Such an order is usually made where by misconduct or inadvertence the issue has been joined on an immaterial fact or where a finding on the issue made would be inconclusive. See 3 Bl Comm 395.

replegiare. To receive back by way of pledge; to replevin.

See de replegiare.

replegiare de averiis. A writ which lay to replevin cattle which had been taken by distress.

Replegiare est, rem apud alium detentam cautione legitima interposita, redimere. To replevin is to redeem with lawful security, a thing detained by another. See 3 Bl Comm 146.

replegiari facias. That you cause to be replevied; -a writ which issued out of chancery, commanding the sheriff to deliver distrained goods to their owner. See 3 Bl Comm 146.

repleviable. Subject to an action of replevin; capable of being replevined.

replevin. An action in which the owner or one who has a general or special property in a thing taker or detained by another seeks to recover possession in specie, and sometimes the recovery of damages as an incident of the cause. 46 Am J1st Replev § 2. The writ authorizing the seizure of the property by the officer to whom it is directed. In some jurisdictions a written requisition subscribed by the plaintiff's attorney directing the sheriff to seize certain described property. 46AmJ1st Replev § 79.

replevin bond. The bond required of the plaintiff in an action in replevin in obtaining a writ or requisition for the seizure of the property by an officer during the course of the proceeding and before judgment in the action, conditioned for the prosecution of the action, for the return of the property if return thereof is adjudged, and for, the payment or such sum as may for any cause be recovered in the action against the plaintiff, the bond being primarily for the protection of the defendant in the event the plaintiff does not prevail. 46 Am J1st Replev § 75.

replevin in the cepit. An action of replevin for goods which have been wrongfully taken, as distinguished from replevin to recover goods which have been wrongfully withheld.

replevisable. Capable of being recovered by an action of replevin.

replevish. To replevin.

replevisor. The plaintiff in an action of replevin.

replevy. To secure the possession of personal property by means of an action of replevin.

replevy bond. A form of bond given upon obtaining the release of attached property from the custody of the officer who made the levy. 6 Am J2d Attach § 523.

See delivery bond; replevin bond.

repliant. A plaintiff who pleads a replication in answer to a defendant's plea.

replicatio. A Roman law pleading corresponding to the replication of the common law and being the actor's reply to the defendant's exceptio. See 3 Bl Comm 310.

replication. Same as reply.

reply. An additional pleading by the plaintiff as such may be required or permitted to meet or avoid matters in the answer. 41 Am J1st Pl § 174. Plaintiff's answer to a setoff or counterclaim. 20 Am J2d Countcl § 148. In equity, a pleading by the plaintiff addressed to the allegations of fact in the defendant's plea. 27 Am J2d Eq § 208. The argument of the plaintiff following, and by way of answer to the argument of the defendant in the trial of an action.

reply brief. A brief filed by the appellant in response to the points made by the respondent, it being improper to raise new points or assignments in such a brief. 5 Am J2d A & E § 689.

repone. See reduce.

report. Verb: To give information, as where an officer reports the result of an investigation to his superior. Noun: Repute. A presentation of facts, sometimes in formal detail, as in the case of the statement of an executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, or receiver, accompanying his account, and setting forth the circumstances of his administration of the estate. The statement of the financial condition of a corporation and the amount of business transacted for the period, furnished to stockholders and public officers having supervision over corporate affairs at regular periods or sometimes at irregular periods, as in the case of special reports.

A citation requiring a guardian to make a report of his administration is construed as equivalent to a direction to him to render an account. See Heisen v Smith, 138 Cal 216, 71 P 180.

See referee's report; rumor.

reportare. To report.

report by grand jury. A report made by a grand jury respecting the character of conduct of public officers or citizens, without including an indictment or presentment against such officers or persons. 24 Am J1st Grand J § 36.

reported cases. See court reports.

reporter. One who gathers information and writes reports of events of interest for publication in a newspaper.
See court reporter. reporter's transcript. See transcript.

reporting policy. See monthly reporting policy.

report of accident. See accident report.

report of decision. See court reports; report of referee.

report of market. See market quotations.

report of referee. The report of a referee to whom a case has been referred, made and returned to the court which ordered the reference, showing the proceedings had before him, his findings of fact and conclusions of law, and in some jurisdictions in certain cases, the decision of the referee upon the whole case. 45 Am J1st Ref §§ 29 et seq.

reports of cases. See court reports.

repose statute. A statute of limitation. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 10.

reposition of the forest. The reinclusion of a purlieu; that is, the reincorporation of land in a forest which was near the forest and which had formerly been a part of it.

repossession. A taking of possession after a relinquishment of possession. A remedy of the vendor upon default by the buyer under a conditional sale contract. 47 Am J1st Sales § 951. The remedy of the holder of a trust receipt in retaking possession of the subject matter of the receipt upon default of the debtor. 53 Am J1st Tr Rec § 10.

See re-entry.

reprendre. (French.) To take back; the source of the English word "reprieve."

represent. To state as a fact. To act for. To stand in the place of.

The proceeds of an insurance policy stand to the owner in the place of the property lost; it is the value of the house paid by the insurance company, not because it acquires the property, but because it agreed to pay so much for the house if destroyed by fire. Hence, if the house was exempt from execution, so also is the insurance. Chase v Swayne, 88 Tex 218, 30 SW 1049.

representation. A statement of a fact, truthful or untruthful. Within the meaning of the law of fraud: --anything short of a warranty, proceeding from the words, act, or conduct of the party charged, which is sufficient to create upon the mind a distinct impression of fact conducive to action. Pocatello Secur. Trust Co. v Henry, 35 Idaho 321, 206 P 175, 27 ALR 337. In the law of insurance:-an oral or written statement by the insured or his authorized agent to the insurer or its authorized agent, made prior to the completion of the contract, giving information as to some fact or state of facts with respect to the subject of the insurance, which is intended or necessary for the purpose of enabling the insurer to determine whether it will accept the risk, and at what premium. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 698.

The principle of descent to the eldest son of an eldest son in prejudice of proximity of blood. 23 Am J2d Desc & D § 6. The doctrine under which a court of equity with jurisdiction to sell property may, in a proper case, alienate the contingent title or interest of unborn remaindermen, or even the contingent title of interested persons in esse whose names and addresses are unknown, provided all the parties are before the court who can be brought before it, and the rights of the nonexistent or as yet unascertained parties will be represented and sufficiently defended by those who are made parties and who have motives of self-interest and affection to make such defense. 31 Am J Rev ed Jud S § 13.

representation by counsel. Having legal counsel, especially in an action, proceeding, or criminal prosecution. The constitutional right of a person accused of crime to be assisted by counsel in his defense. 21 Am J2d Crim L §§ 309 et seq.

representation work. (Mining law.) The annual labor or "assessment work," as it is often called, required by statute providing that on each mining claim, until a patent is issued for it, there shall be annually expended in labor or improvements a specified sum of money, and that upon failure to do so the claim shall be open to relocation in the same manner as if no location was ever made. De Noon v Morrison, 83 Cal 163, 23 P 374.

representative. An agent, an officer of a corporation or association, a trustee, executor, or administrator of an estate, or any other person empowered to act for another. UCC § 1-201(35). A member of the House of Representatives in Congress or a state legislature. A person who stands in the place of another, as heir, or in the right of succeeding to an estate of inheritance; one who takes by representation; a person who occupies another person's place and succeeds to his rights and liabilities. Lee v Dill (NY) 39 Barb 516, 520. A person who sues or defends in the interest of the estate of a decedent as his personal representative, heir, devisee, legatee, or distributee. 29 Am J2d Ev § 679.

See labor representative; legal representative; personal representative; real representative.

representative action. Same as class action.

representative capacity. The capacity in which one acts on behalf of some person or estate, not for himself personally.

When a party sues or is sued in such capacity, it is necessary that the capacity in which he sues or is sued should appear in the title, to show the relation between the party and the estate represented, and that he is in court, not for himself but for the estate he represents. Van Brunt & Davis Co. v Harrigan, 8 SD 96, 98, 76 NW 984.

representative democracy. A government by representatives elected by the people. A representative form of government.

See pure democracy.

representative form of government. A government conducted and constituted by the agency of representatives, delegates, or deputies chosen by the people in regularly recurring elections.

The definition is held to express fairly the modern American idea of such a government. "A fraternal benefit association must have a representative form of government. This requires that the directors or other officers who have general charge and control of the property and business of the society and the management of its affairs shall be chosen by the membership thereof." Lange v Royal Highlanders, 75 Neb 188, 106 NW 224, 110 NW 1100.

representative in interest. See representative.

representative of a deceased person. The executor or administrator of a deceased person, or a person or party who has succeeded to the right of the deceased, whether by purchase, descent, or operation of law. 58 Am J1st Witn § 237. A person appointed, not by a testator in his will, but by the law, to represent an ancestor, and upon whom the law casts the inheritance. Bowen v Hackney, 136 NC 187, 48 SE 633.

See personal representative.

representative of nonresident motorist. A designated state official for the purpose of service of process. 8 Am J2d Auto § 849.

representative or article of value. An unusual and rather inept expression.

As used in a statute prohibiting any slot machine or mechanical device, as the result of the operation of which any merchandise or money is won or lost, this phrase refers to a material or tangible thing of value and does not include free games automatically won on a pinball machine so as to render such a machine subject to seizure and destruction as a gambling device. Gayer v Whelan, 59 Cal App 2d 255, 138 P2d 763.

representative peers. Those members of the house of lords of the English parliament who are elected to represent Scotland and North Ireland.

representative suit. Same as class suit.

repressive license. A license required as a condition of doing business, the fee for which is so high as to be prohibitive. 52 Am J1st Trad St § 14.

reprieve. A word derived from the French, "reprendre," to take back. The postponement of the execution of a sentence for a definite time, or to a day certain, not defeating the ultimate execution, merely delaying it temporarily. 39 Am J1st Pard § 7.

reprieve ex arbitrio judicis. A reprieve the power to grant which belongs of common right to every tribunal which is invested with authority to award execution. 39 Am J1st Pard § 7.

reprieve ex mandato regis. A reprieve from the mere pleasure of the Crown. 39 Am J1st Pard § 7.

reprieve ex necessitate legis. A reprieve required by law to be granted under certain circumstances, as when a woman convicted of a capital offense alleges pregnancy of a quick child in delay of execution, or when a prisoner has become insane between the time of sentence and the time fixed for execution. 39 Am J1st Pardon § 7.

reprimand. A severe and solemn reproach or censure for disobedience or wrongdoing: as the reprimand of an attorney by the court for unprofessional conduct.

reprisal. A form of retorsion, being the act of a sovereign state, taken short of war, in retaliation against another nation for what it deems to be a wrong committed against it by the other nation, as where a nation seizes property of another nation which has refused to pay a debt to it, to repair an injury, or give adequate satisfaction for it, such property to be finally confiscated for want of satisfaction of the debt or the giving of compensation for the injury. 30 Am J Rev ed Internat L § 53. A remedy, also known as "recaption," by the mere act of the party injured, where another person has wrongfully deprived him of his goods or chattels, or wrongfully detains his wife, child, or servant.

In such case, the owner of the goods, or the husband, parent, or master may lawfully claim and retake them wherever he happens to find them, provided he does so in a manner not riotous, and without a breach of the peace. Prigg v Pennsylvania (US) 16 Pet 539, 613, 10 L Ed 1060, 1088.

See letters of marque and reprisal.

reprises. Such deductions as are required to be made from gross income in order to ascertain the clear or net Profit of land.

The term does not include deductions for bad management, or personal shortcomings of the holder of the land, or from fire or flood or similar casualty, but deductions for burdens incident to the land as such, taxes, charges and impositions of all kinds which attach to the land itself, are included in the meaning of the term. Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. v Von Storch, 196 Pa 102, 105, 46 A 375.

reproach. Shame; disgrace. Obloquy. Bettner v Holt, 70 Cal 270, 11 P 713.

Reprobata pecunia liberat solventem. Money refused releases the person who pays; that is, who tenders.

reprobatur. A Scotch action the purpose of which was to convict a witness of perjury.

reproduction. A repetition of production. The act of reproducing an article in violation of a patent right. Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v Jackson (CA1 Mass) 112 F 146.

reproduction cost. A relevant factor in determining the present value of a public utility plant for rate making purposes. According to one view, the cost of construction of a plant identical with the plant appraised; according to another view, the cost of construction of a plant of equal efficiency, capacity, and durability.

According to still another view, neither the cost of reproducing the existing plant or system nor the cost replacing an existing system or plant by an equivalent one is final as determining the new or present value of a public service property, but both may be of evidential effect in determining the actual fair value thereof. 43 Am J1st Pub Util § 113.

republican form of government. A government constructed on the principle that the supreme power resides in the body of the people. See Chisholm v Georgia (US) 2 Dall 419, 457, 1 L Ed 440, 456. A government which derives all its powers directly or indirectly from the people and which is administered by persons holding their offices for a limited period or during good behavior. 16 Am J2d Const L § 390. Not to be confused with the Republican Party.

Within the meaning of the provision of section 4 of article 4 of the United States Constitution that "the United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government," the term signifies a government of a state of the Union which has been recognized by Congress as being a government republican in form. Pacific States Tel. Co. v Oregon, 223 US 118, 56 L Ed 377, 32 S Ct 224.

republication. The repetition of a slanderous statement by the person to whom it was originally communicated. 33 Am J1st L & S § 95. A publication of a will previously altered or revoked. 57 Am J1st Wills § 625.

Ordinarily, when a codicil is said to "republish" a will, it is meant that a will, then valid, is republished as of the date of the codicil. Anno: 33 ALR2d 929.

Prior to the statute of frauds, a will devising real property could be republished by parol in the same manner as a will bequeathing personalty, but since the enactment of the statute of frauds and the statute of wills a revoked will cannot be revived by an oral declaration of the testator, or otherwise than by a re-execution or republication or by a codicil. Where a statute makes no provision for a republication, but simply requires that in the original execution and publication of the will certain solemnities must be observed relative to the signing of the will by the testator and by subscribing witnesses, the weight of authority and the better rule is that the republication must be made with like solemnity as the execution of the original will and an oral republication is insufficient; nor can the republication be shown by mere parol evidence. 57 Am J1st Wills § 625.

republication of will. See republication.

repudiation. A denial of validity or of authority. Refusal to recognize an obligation asserted as binding one. A denial of responsibility or obligation. State Sav. Bank v Black, 91 Iowa 490, 59 NW 282. A certain, definite, unequivocal, and timely denial by one person of the authority of another who has purported to act for him as his agent in incurring a liability. Sullivan v Bennett, 261 Mich 232, 246 NW 90, 87 ALR 791.

See anticipatory repudiation; renunciation.

repudiation of contract. Refusal to recognize the existence of a contract or the doing of something inconsistent with its existence; renunciation of liability under a contract. 17 Am J1st Contr § 443. A refusal or declination to perform in accordance with the contract. Lane v Chantilly Corp. 251 NY 435, 167 NE 578, 68 ALR 653.

repudiation of gift. The avoidance of a gift made by an infant donor, after becoming of age. 24 Am J1st Gifts § 17.

repudium. (Roman law.) The breach of a contract to marry.

repugnancy. Inconsistency. Swan v United States, 3 Wyo 151, 9 P 931. Inconsistency or contradiction in allegations of material facts. 27 Am J1st Indict § 110; 41 Am J1st PI § 47.

In pleading, the common-law doctrine of repugnancy relates to inconsistent matters of substance which are alleged in the same count or plea. Counts and pleas, however, which are merely inconsistent with one another are not for that reason repugnant in a legal sense. 41 Am J1st PI § 48.

repugnancy doctrine. A doctrine stated in reference to the construction of repugnant provisions in a will that the law favors the first taker; that the first taker in a will is presumed to be the favorite of the testator; that an absolute gift in a will cannot be cut down by subsequent inconsistent language of doubtful or ambiguous significance, it being necessary before such a result will be permitted that the language indicating an intention to cut down the gift be as clear, plain, and unequivocal as that used in the gift itself; that the presumption is that the first taker receives a fee in spite of subsequent words casting doubt on such result; that in case of doubt as to the quantity of an estate devised, the general rule is that an absolute rather than a qualified estate was intended; and that where a devise of an absolute interest is made, subsequent limitations attempting to deprive the estate of any of the incidents appertaining to it are repugnant and void. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1320.

repugnant provisions. Inconsistent provisions, as in a deed or will. 23 Am J2d Deeds §§ 237-239, 250, 267.

See repugnancy doctrine.

repugnant remedies. See inconsistent remedies. reputable. In good repute. Worthy of repute.

The term as used in a statute authorizing the registration of any person who was a reputable resident physician of good moral character, who on the first day of July 1897 was engaged in the actual practice of medicine within the state, was construed as referring to any person who is regarded as honorable and praiseworthy as a member of the medical profession, of whatever school, or whether classed with any particular school, by any reason of the character of his work and his conduct professionally and not limited to physicians and surgeons who are graduates from some reputable medical school, or belonged to some incorporated medical society. Anno: 4 ALR2d 685.

reputable dog. A dog with no record of doing mischief or of viciousness. Williams v Moray, 74 Ind 25; Blair v Forehand, 100 Mass 136.

reputable physician. See reputable.

Reputatio est vulgaris opinio ubi non est veritas. Reputation is common opinion where there is no actual fact.

reputation. Repute. People v Beleastro, 356 Ill 144, 190 NE 301, 92 ALR 1223. The repute in which a man is held by his neighbors. Anno: 10 ALR 9.

See character; crime of reputation; general reputation; repute.

repute. The esteem or opinion held by the public, the community, or neighborhood in respect of a person or a thing. People v Belcastro, 356 Ill 144, 190 NE 301, 92 ALR 1223.

reputed owner. A person who by supposition or opinion derived from outward appearances, appears to be the owner of the property in question. Santa Cruz Rock Paving Co. v Lyons, 5 Cal Unrep 260, 266, 43 P 599.

request. To ask or express a wish for something. Philomath College v Wyatt, 27 Or 390, 31 P 206, 216. Sometimes to direct or command, although in a delicate manner. In other words, a precatory word, subject to construction in a proper case as a mandatory term. Coulson v Alpaugh, 163 111298, 45 NE 216; Shaver v Weddington, 247 Ky 248, 56 SW2d 980.

Under some circumstances, a request is the same as a command and has the same meaning. A request from a person in authority is understood to be a mere euphemism. It is in fact a command in an inoffensive form. See State ex rel. Freeman v Scheve, 65 Neb 853, 91 NW 846.

The words "request," "hope," "not doubting," that the executor will conduct in a specified manner, when they come from a testator who has power to command, are to be construed as commands in his will, clothed merely in the language of civility, and they impose on the executor a duty which courts have in repeated instances enforced. Pembroke Academy v Epsom School Dist. 75 NIT 408, 75 A 100.

The word may be employed in a will as an entreaty, depending upon the context in which the word is inserted and the circumstances attendant upon its use. Marx v Rice, 1 NJ 574, 65 A2d 48, 9 ALR2d 584.

request for instruction. A request directed to the court by a party for an instruction to the jury, upon the general issues or upon particular phases of the case, in order that the points of law and the case may be fully presented to the jury by the instructions. 53 Am J1st Tr § 512.

request note. A notice to a person having dutiable goods in his possession, requiring him to secure a permit for their removal.

require. To need-, to call for: to make necessary; to demand. 17 Am J2d Contr § 281; 46 Am J1st Sales § 135.

The word is derived from the Latin "require," compounded of "re" and "quiro"-to seek for, or to seek to get back. Although it may undoubtedly be used in the sense of the word "need," that is neither its primary nor its usual signification. Ac-ording to all the lexicographers, and in common parlance, it means to command; to ask by right and by authority. Duhamel v Port Angeles Stone Co. 59 Wash 171, 176, 109 P 597.

When used in a statute the word "required" may be equivalent to the word "commanded;" as where commissioners were by statute not only authorized, but "required" to levy a yearly tax. Taylor v Commissioners of Newberne, 55 NC (2 Jones Eq) 141.

required. See require.

required medical treatment. Necessary medical treatment. Scott v State, 90 Tex Crim 100, 233 SW 1097, 16 ALR 1420.

requirement contract. A contract which calls for the one party to furnish all of the supply of a certain material required for the operation of the business of the other party for a prescribed time, and for the latter to purchase all of such required supply from the former. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 121.

The essence of a requirements contract is that the amount of the commodity needed by the purchaser cannot be exactly defined at the beginning of the year and it is for this reason that a contract of this type which deals for future needs is entered into. William C. Atwater Co. v Terminal Coal Corporation (DC Mass) 32 F Supp 178.

requirements of the business. As a designation of quantity of goods purchased:-the quantity which is actually needed in the buyer's business as distinguished from the quantity ordered or desired by the buyer, provided there is good faith and no fraud. 46 Am J 1st Sales § 158.

Under an agreement to fill the buyer's requirements, the obligations of the parties are governed by the needs of the business even though those needs increase or decrease because of varying conditions to which the business is ordinarily subject, for such conditions may be said to be within the contemplation of the parties. Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v Tennessee Phosphate Co. (CA6 Tenn) 121 F 298.

requisition. An authoritative demand, for example, the demand of the government for military supplies. The taking of private property for use by the government in the waging of a war. International Paper Co. v United States, 282 US 399, 75 L Ed 410, 51 S Ct 176. A substitute for a writ of replevin in some jurisdictions, accomplishing the same purpose, although subscribed and issued by plaintiff's attorney. 46 Am J I st Replev § 79.

A request issued by the President of the United States as the chief executive of the Federal Government, requiring a quota or detachment of militia to be furnished or held in readiness for the service of the United States. A requisition, which is a mere courteous request, is to be distinguished from an "order" made by the President as commander-in-chief of the militia, which is a mandatory act. Mills v Martin (NY) 19 Johns 7, 26.

requisitions on title. Objections indicated by the solicitor of the vendee to apparent flaws in the title of the vendor.

requisitory letter. Same as letter rogatory. re-recording. See re-inscription.

reregistration. A periodic registration, required in some states, following an original registration for voting in the same district. 25 Am J2d Elect § 107.

See re-inscription.

rerum natura. See in rerum natura.

Rerum ordo confunditur, si unicuique jurisdictio non servetur. The order of things is confused if everyone does not give heed to his own jurisdiction.

Rerum progressu ostendunt multa, quae in initio praecaveri seu praevideri non possunt. In the progress of things many matters appear which could not be prevented or provided for in the beginning.

Rerum suarum quilibet est moderator et arbiter. Everyone is the manager and master of his own affairs or his own property.

res. Abbreviation of resolution, also of reserve.

res. (Latin.) The thing. The real thing. A transaction. An affair. The subject matter of a trust in a sense of the property held under trust. The subject matter of an action in the sense of the property or status involved.

See in rem.

res accendent lumina rebus. Things shed their light upon things. One thing illuminates or clarifies another. Keisselbrack v Livingston Ch (NY) 4 Johns 144, 149.

res accessoria. An accessory thing.

Res accessoria non ducit, sed sequitur suum principale. The accessory thing does not lead, but it follows its principal thing. See Broom's Legal Maxims 493.

Res accessoria sequitur rem principalem. The accessory thing follows the principal thing. See Broom's Legal Maxims 491.

Res accrescit domino. The thing goes to increase the principal thing. That is, anything annexed or added to a principal thing becomes a part of it. See argument of counsel in Banks v Ogden (US) 2 Wall 57, 17 L Ed 818.

res adjudicata. Same as res judicata.

resale. A sale at retail following a purchase at wholesale. A second sale by of the same goods or property by a seller. Banks v Pann, 82 Cal App 20, 254 P 937. A remedy of the seller under an executory contract of sale where the buyer refuses to receive or take the goods, or repudiates the contract. 46 Am J1st Sales § 566. A remedy of the seller of goods under an executed contract of sale where title has passed to the buyer but the seller has retained his lien by the retention of possession or by the exercise of the right of stoppage in transitu. 46 Am J1st Sales § 568. A remedy of the vendor under a conditional sales contract upon retaking the property for the default of the vendee. 47 Am J1st Sales § 966. A judicial sale, following a prior sale of such nature, where the purchaser fails to comply with his bid or where the sale is vacated. 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S §§ 270 et seq.

resale at purchaser's risk. One of the modes of proceeding in a court of equity when a purchaser at a judicial sale, after confirmation, fails or refuses to complete his purchase.

Under this mode of procedure, the court may order a resale of the property, holding the purchaser responsible for any deficiency. Hammond v Cailleaud, 111 Cal 206, 215, 43 P 607.

resale price. See price control.

res aliena. The property of another.

res caduca. (Civil law.) A fallen thing; escheated property.

resceit. The ancient English practice of permitting a person who was not a party to the action to come into it and plead a right of his own.

resceu. Same as rescue.

rescind. To effect a rescission.

See rescission.

rescissio. (Civil law,) A rescission; a repeal; an abrogation.

rescission. The termination of a contract through its abrogation or annulment by word or act of the parties or by a judgment or decree of the court. The termination of a contract by mutual consent of the parties or pursuant to a condition contained in the contract, or for fraud, failure of consideration, or a material breach or default. Maytag Co. v Alward, 253 Iowa 455, 112 NW2d 654, 96 ALR2d 162. The termination of the contract, and restoration of the contracting parties substantially to their status quo. Anno: 94 ALR 1240.

Treating a contract as broken and desisting from further performance, where the other party to the contract has been guilty of a breach of it, is an abandonment of the contract, but it is not a "rescission" technically speaking. It is merely the acceptance of the situation which the wrongdoing of the other party has brought about. Anvil Mining Co v Humble, 153 US 540, 552, 39 L Ed 814, 818, 14 S Ct 876.

As the word is applied to contracts, to "rescind" in some cases means to terminate the contract as to future transactions, while in others it means to annul the contract from the beginning. Hurst v Trow Printing & Bookbinding Co. 2 Misc 361, 366, 22 NYS 371.

See cancellation.

rescission in pais. The setting aside of an instrument outside of court by the act of a party as distinguished from a rescission in equity McCall v Superior Court of Imperial County, 1 Cal 2d 527, 36 P2d 642, 95 ALR 1019.

rescissory action. An action to rescind a contract or other written instrument.

res communes. (Roman law,) Things which are common property.

The human race having multiplied, men partitioned among themselves the earth and the greater part of those things which were on its surface. That which fell to each one among them commenced to belong to him in private ownership, and this process is the origin of the right of property. Some things, however, did not enter into this division, and remain therefore to this day in the condition of the ancient and negative community. These are the things which the juriconsults called "res communes." Among them are the air, the water which runs in the rivers and the sea. Wild animals, ferae naturae, have also remained in the ancient state of negative community. Geer v Connecticut, 161 US 519, 525, 40 L Ed 793, 795, 16 S Ct 600.

res controversa. (Civil law.) The matter in controversy; the thing in dispute.

res coronae. The property of the crown.

res corporales. (Civil law.) Corporeal property; tangible property.

rescous. Same as rescue.

rescript. A statement in writing delivered by a court announcing its decision or conclusions of law the decision of a Roman emperor on a doubtful point which was submitted to him for his determination.

rescue. Saving a person exposed to peril. The crime committed where a person, other than the official custodian, either directly or indirectly, unlawfully aids another person to escape from proper custody. 27 Am J2d Escape § 3. Unlawfully taking away and setting at liberty a distrained animal, whether by force, by threat, or in a peaceful manner. Hamlin v Mack, 33 Mich 103, 105. At common law rescue and pound breach were both actionable and indictable wrongs. "The writ of rescous lieth where a man doth distraint for rent or service, or for damage feasant, and would impeach or impound the cattle, and the other party doth rescue them or take them from him, he shall have the writ of rescous." See Newell v Clark, 46 NJL 363, 376.

rescue clause. A clause, sometimes called a "sue and labor" clause, in a marine insurance policy, enabling the insured to take every measure necessary for the preservation and recovery of the property, without losing his right to abandon, and making it his duty to take such action. 29A Am J Rev ed his § 1568. A clause in a marine insurance policy which authorizes the insured to sue, labor, and travel for the safety of the subject-matter of the insurance, or any part thereof, without prejudice to the insurance. St. Paul Fire & Marine his. Co. v Pacific Cold Storage Co. (CA9 Wash) 157 F 625.

rescue doctrine. The doctrine that where one person is exposed to peril of life or limb by the negligence of another, the latter will be liable in damages for injuries received by a third person in a reasonable effort to rescue the person so imperiled. Marshall v Nugent (CA1 NH) 222 F2d 604, 58 ALR2d 251; 38 Am J1st Negl § 80. The same principle applied to injuries received in saving property exposed to peril by negligence. 38 Am J1st Negl § 81. The principle that one is justified in exposing himself to risks in the protection of human life which otherwise he could not assume without charging himself with contributory negligence. Hammonds v Haven, (Mo) 280 SW2d 914, 53 ALR2d 992.

See saving property doctrine.

rescussit. He rescued.

rescussor. A person who committed a rescue, a rescuer.

rescussu. See de rescussu.

rescussus. A rescue.

rescutere. To rescue.

rescyt. The receiving or harboring of a person who had committed a felony and had been convicted thereof.

Res denominator a principaliori parte. A thing receives its name from its principal part.

res derelicta. Abandoned property; property from which the mind has withdrawn affection, and which has thus fallen back into the natural state of res nullius, the property of no one, and is again susceptible of becoming the property of the occupant. Rhodes v Whitehead, 27 Tex 304.

resealing. Correcting or giving renewed effect to a writ.

research organization. See heir hunter.

resentence. Pronouncing sentence for a criminal offense after revision, modification, or vacation of judgment, during the term at which the judgment was entered. 21 Am J2d Crim L §§ 569 et seq. Pronouncing sentence after a reversal on appeal because of error of the trial court in imposing sentence, whether by the appellate court or the trial court upon remand of the case. 5 Am J12d A & E § 976.

reservation. The engaging of a room at a hotel or a table in a restaurant in advance of the service to be rendered or the accommodation to be had. Often used as a term interchangeable with "exception." Stephan v Kentucky Valley Distilling Co. 275 Ky 705, 122 SW2d 493. In one sense a grant by a grantee back to the grantor. Precisely, the creation in behalf of the grantor of a new right issuing out of the thing granted. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 262.

A reservation is to be distinguished from an "exception," which is of a part of the thing granted and of something in esse at the time. Winston v Johnson, 42 Mich 398, 401, 54 NW 958.

See condition; exception; Indian reservation; military reservation.

reservation Indians. Indians living on Indian reservations.

While they are so living, the jurisdiction of the Federal Government over their tribes, and over the members of such tribes, is exclusive, and they cannot be controlled or governed by the laws of the state within which the reservations are located, except as such laws are specifically authorized by Congress or clearly do not interfere with federal policies concerning Indian reservations. Warren Trading Post v Arizona State Tax Con. 380 US 685, 14 L Ed 2d 165, 85 S Ct 1242.

See Indian reservation. reservation of easement. The creation in behalf of the grantor of a new right, issuing out of the same grant, of an easement appurtenant to the grantor's remaining land. 25 Am J2d Ease § 21.

Reservatio non debet esse de proficuis ipsis, quia ea conceduntur, sed de redditu novo extra proficua. A reservation ought not to be of the profits themselves, because they are granted, but it should be of a new rent aside from the profits.

reserve. Verb: To appropriate to a particular purpose. To exclude. To set aside. To set apart from that which has been granted. To make a reservation. Meigs v M'Clung's Lessee (US) 9 Cranch 11, 17, 3 L Ed 639, 641. Noun: An organization of the Armed Forces, holding men for training without serious disruption of their civilian activities, but subject to call of active service. A fund or sum of money retained for a special purpose. A fund of a bank, known as a legal reserve, being required by law in an amount proportioned to the deposits by way of assurance to depositors of opportunity to withdraw cash as they need or desire it. State v Brewer, 202 NC 187, 162 SE 363, 81 ALR 1424. In insurance, a sum of money variously computed or estimated, which, with accretions from interest, is set aside, as a fund with which to mature or liquidate, either by payment or reinsurance with other companies, future unaccrued and contingent claims, and claims accrued but contingent and indefinite as to amount or time of payment. Maryland Casualty Co. v United States, 251 US 342, 64 L Ed 297, 40 S Ct 155. In the distinctive meaning in respect of life insurance maintained on the level premium basis:-the accumulated saving upon a policy which results from the fact that the amount of the premium is greater than the mortality cost during the early years of the insurance and less than the mortality cost in later years, such amount constituting the source of the non-forfeiture value of the policy upon lapse. Williams v Union Central Life Ins. Co. 291 US 170, 78 L Ed 711, 54 S Ct 348, 92 ALR 693. The amount of money or assets necessary for a life insurance company to have at any given time to enable it, with interest gained and premiums paid as they shall mature, to meet all claims on the insurance policies then in force as they shall become due according to the particular mortality table accepted; to be reckoned as a liability, and calculated on net premiums; theoretically, the difference between the present value of the total insurance and the present value of the future premiums on the insurance. Anno: 13 ALR 187.

reserve an objection. To reserve, with the permission of the court, the right to make an objection at a later time in the trial.

reserve banks. Banks, incorporated under the act of Congress known as the Federal Reserve Act of 1913 and statutes amendatory thereof, and which are members of the Federal reserve system. American Bank & Trust Co. v Federal Reserve Bank, 256 US 350, 65 L Ed 983, 41 S Ct 499, 25 ALR 971, 975, 976. Banks operating under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board to act as government depositories and fiscal agents of the government; to receive and maintain the legal reserves of banks in the federal reserve system; to discount notes, drafts, and bills of exchange arising in actual commercial transactions; to make short term advances to member banks upon their promissory notes, and, subject to rules and regulations prescribed by the Federal Reserve Board, to engage in open market operations. 10 Am J2d Banks § 272.

Reserve Board. The agency of the United States which acts with primary authority in supervising banks in the Federal Reserve System. 10 Am J2d Banks § 272, A board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, composed of seven members appointed by the President with the consent of the President, empowered to exercise general supervision over federal reserve banks, and granted specific authority in reference to the rediscount of commercial paper and the rates of discount. 10 Am J2d Banks § 5.

reserve clause. A term, in popular use in reference to the contracts of professional athletes, especially baseball players, whereunder the services of the athlete are reserved for the club, although not engaged for more than one year at a time.

See reserved option.

reserved. Set apart for a purpose or for a person, as a part of a subdivision set apart for a community theater or a suite of rooms held for a person.

This word in a plat may operate, in the light of the circumstances under which it is used, to show its dedicatory intention. 23 Am J2d Ded § 27.

See case reserved; crown cases reserved; reservation.

reserved lands. Lands in the public domain withdrawn from sale, entry, settlement, or other manner of acquisition by the public. 42 Am J1st Pub L § 12. Tracts of public land lawfully appropriated by the government to any purposes and thereby severed from the mass of public lands, so that no subsequent law or proclamation will be construed to embrace them or operate upon them, although no exception be made of them.

they may be restored to the public domain, as, for example, where a military post is abandoned by the government. 42 Am J1st Pub L § 19.

reserved option. Broadly, any option provided a party under the terms of a contract. In common usage, an option contained in the terms of a contract permitting a party to rescind or cancel. 17 Am J2d Contr §§ 495-498.

reserved point. A point not decided by the appellate court in the disposition of a case, being expressly reserved from decision. Re Monaghan's Estate, 70 Ariz 349, 220 P2d 726, affd 71 Ariz 334, 227 P2d 227. A point of law which is decided by the court in the course of a trial, but conditionally only, and subject to reargument.

See reserving question in lower court.

reserved powers of the state. Powers which are not delegated to the Federal Government or prohibited to the states by the United States Constitution. United States v Darby, 312 US 100, 85 L Ed 609, 61 S Ct 451, 132 ALR 1430. Powers which proceed, not from the people of America, but from the people of the several states, remaining the same after, as before the acceptance of the United States Constitution, except as they may be abridged by that instrument. United States v Appalachian Electric Power Co. 311 US 377, 85 L Ed 243, 61 S Ct 291, reh den 312 US 712, 85 L Ed 1143, 61 S Ct 548.

reserved question. See certification of question; reserved point.

reserved way. A way newly created by a grantor by means of a reservation. Winston v Johnson, 42 Minn 398, 401, 54 NW 958. Sometimes an implied way as a way of necessity in reference to land retained by the grantor.

See way of necessity.

reserve for loss claims. See loss and loss expense reserve; reserve.

reserve fund. See reserve.

reserve method. A method of bookkeeping elected by a taxpayer under the federal income tax law, whereby he sets up a reserve for bad debts, with or without the maintenance of a reserve fund, adding such additions to the reserve as will make the balance large enough to absorb expected bad debts. Internal Revenue Code § 166(c)(d).

Reserve System. A system of banks, operating under supervision of advisory and regulatory agencies, provided by Act of Congress in 1913 for the purposes of promoting sound banking practices and facilitating a flow of credit and money essential to the economic growth of the country. 10 Am J2d Banks § 5.

res fungibles. (Civil law.) Fungible property, --property which was consumable by use and returnable in kind, such as wine.

res furtivae. Things which had been stolen.

Res generalem habet significationem, quia tam corporea, quam incorporea, cujuscunque sunt generis naturae sive speciei, comprehendit. "Thing" has a general meaning, because it includes the corporeal as well as the incorporeal, of whatever kind, nature or species the things may be.

res gestae. A matter incidental to the main or principal fact, and explanatory thereof; acts or words through which a main event speaks. Cummings v Illinois Cent. R. Co. 364 Mo 868, 269 SW2d 111, 47 ALR2d 513. Acts and words which are spontaneous and so related to the transaction or Occurrence in question as reasonably to appear to be evoked and prompted by it. 29 Am J2d Ev § 708.

resiance. Same as residence.

reside. To dwell in a place. To be a resident. Kelsey v Green, 69 Conn 291, 37 A 679.

residence. A term of dual meaning, sometimes meaning a temporary, permanent, or transient character of abode; at other times meaning one's fixed abode or domicil. 25 Am J2d Dom § 4. Sometimes a mere physical presence in a place; at other times an abiding in a place with intent to make it one's home. Manufacturers' Mut. Ins. Co. v Friedman, 213 Ark 9, 209 SW2d 102, 1 ALR2d 557; People ex rel. Heydenreich v Lyons, 374 111557, 30 NE2d 46, 132 ALR 511; Dixie Fire Ins. Co. v McAdams (Tex Civ App) 235 SW2d 207, 41 ALR2d 714. Sometimes a temporary, at other times an actual or permanent, abiding place. 2 Am J2d Adopt § 52. A word having a variety of meanings dependent upon the context in which it is employed as well as the subject matter involved, Hughes v Illinois Public Aid Co. 2 Ill 2d 374, 118 NE2d 14, 43 ALR2d 1421, sometimes meaning domicil, at other times not. State v Garford Trucking, 4 NJ 346, 72 A2d 851, 16 ALR2d 1407. A dwelling house.

Under the provision of the Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act for sending notice of dishonor of a bill or note to the residence of an indorser, the term "residence" is not used in a strict sense as necessarily implying a permanent, exclusive, or actual abode in the place, but it may be satisfied by a temporary, partial, or even constructive residence. 11 Am J2d B & N § 856.

As to requisite residence for purposes of old age assistance, Anno: 43 ALR2d 1427. As to relationship between "residence" and "domicil" under venue statutes, see Anno: 12 ALR2d 757.

See domicil; inhabitancy; legal residence; one residence; one residence only.

residence of bankrupt. The domicil of the bankrupt. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 40.

residence of corporation. Residence only as declared by law in the state of incorporation. 18 Am J2d Corp § 159.

For purposes of venue, a corporation is a "resident" of the county designated in its articles of association, its certificate of registered agent, and its annual reports regularly filed, and its place of doing business and its offices; and an action against the corporation transitory in its nature may properly be brought in that county even though the corporation's principal and only office is in fact located over the county line in an adjoining county. Higgins v Hampshire Products, 319 Mich 674, 30 NW2d 390, 175 ALR 1083.

Within the meaning of a state statute making the county in which the defendant resides a proper county for the trial of the action, the county in which lies the place designated by a foreign corporation as its principal office and place of business within the state in the papers filed by it with the secretary of state and the county clerk as a condition precedent to its doing business in the state, is its residence. Anno: 129 ALR 1289.

residence of debtor. Sometimes, but not always, the equivalent of domicil. 31 Am J2d Exempt § 17.

See domicil; residence of bankrupt.

residence of decedent. The domicil of the decedent. Re Glassford's Estate, 114 Cal App 2d 181, 249 P2d 248, 34 ALR2d 1259 (purposes of ancillary administration of decedent's estate); 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 32; 57 Am J1st Wills § 766 (purposes of jurisdiction for probate of will).

residence of foreign corporation. See residence of corporation.

residence of infant. See domicil by operation of law.

residence of voter. The domicil of the voter; his home; his place of permanent abode. The place where he is habitually present, and to which, when he departs, he intends to return. The home to which, whenever absent, he intends to return. 25 Am J2d Elect § 66.

residence of ward. The domicil of the ward. 25 Am J1st G & W § 25.

residence of wife. See domicil by operation of law.

resident. One who resides in a place. One having either legal residence or domicil. Stadtmuller v Miller (CA2 NY) 11 F2d 732, 45 ALR 895, 897. A physician, usually a younger man, employed for the practice of his profession in a hospital, acquiring proficiency in a speciality or gaining experience for later general practice.

See domicil; residence.

resident agent. An agent of a foreign corporation in residence either permanently or temporarily for the purpose of the agency, the term being exclusive of a mere transient. Anno: 113 ALR 84.

resident alien. An alien having the status of a resident and accordingly in a separate classification. 3 Am J2d Aliens § 2. An alien who has come into the United States from a foreign country with the purpose of abandoning his residence abroad and of making his home here. People ex. rel. Dobson v McClay, 2 Neb 7, 9.

resident freeholder. A resident of the place who is the owner of a freehold interest in lands situated therein. See Damp v Dane, 29 Wis 419, 427.

residential district. A district characterized by a predominance of structures used as dwelling places or residences. 58 Am J1st Zon § 36.

residential district ordinance. A zoning ordinance dealing with isolated blocks or districts, not enacted for the purpose of adopting a comprehensive plan for the municipality. 58 Am J1st Zon § 34.

residential restriction. A covenant limiting the erection or use of buildings on premises to residences or residential purposes, or limiting the type of dwellings or residences which can be erected on the premises. 20 Am J2d Cov §§ 189 et seq. A zoning ordinance which limits the construction of building in a stated district to residences or residential purposes. 58 Am J1st Zon §§ 36 et seq.

resident sales agent. A local agent of a foreign corporation. 36 Am J2d For Corp § 563.

residuary. The residuary estate of a testate decedent. A legatee or devisee under a legacy or devise of the residuary estate or a part thereof. Estate of Vanuxem, 212 Pa 315, 61 A 876, 878.

See residuary estate.

residuary bequest. Same as residuary gift.

residuary clause. A clause in a will which purports to dispose of that part of the estate which is left after other legacies and devises have been paid and all legal claims against the estate discharged. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1415.

The term seems to contemplate the former provisions in the will to carry into effect the wishes of the testator as to the disposition of his estate, and is used to cover all that remains after such former dispositions of property have been carried out. Morgan v Huggins (CC Ga) 48 F 3, 5.

The phrase "rest, residue, and remainder" is frequently used in wills to devise and bequeath all of the property of the testator which he has not by his will specifically devised or bequeathed. " 'All the rest, residue, and remainder of my property, both real and personal,' expresses no intent to limit or exclude from the residuum anything personal or real, anything whatever which for any reason might prove to be ineffectually disposed of. It expresses a clear intent on the part of the testator to make a full and complete disposition of his property." Wilson v Sanger, 57 App Div 320, 322, 68 NYS 30.

As a rule, an enumeration of specific articles in a residuary clause will not make the bequest specific as to such articles unless they are designated in such a way as to differentiate them from the residue. A bequest of all a man's personal property is a residuary and not a specific legacy, since its import is the same as is expressed by the words, "rest and residue." But a devise of "all the residue of the testator's real estate and personal property not hereinbefore enumerated, as hereinafter described," is a specific bequest of the subsequently enumerated property, and does not entitle the beneficiary to take as a residuary legatee the lapsed legacies and property not enumerated in the bequest to him. 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 1415 et seq.

residuary devisee. One favored by a residuary devise.

residuary estate. That part of an estate of a testate decedent which remains after discharging all legal and testamentary claims of the estate or, in other words, that which is left after the payment of charges, debts, and particular legacies and devises.

57 Am J1st Wills § 1415. The final residuum which remains of the estate of a testator after the payment of all his bequests and devises. Wetmore v St. Luke's Hospital (NY) 56 Hun 313, 320, 9 NYS 753.

residuary gift. A legacy or devise bequeathed by the residuary clause of a will. A legacy or devise of the residuary estate or of a part of the residuary estate. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1415.

See residuary clause; residuary estate.

residuary legacy. See residuary clause; residuary gift.

residuary legatee. One favored by a residuary legacy.

residue of estate. Same as residuary estate.

residuum of the residuum. That which remains of a testator's estate after the payment of a specifically devised portion of the residuary estate.

"While strictly speaking, the phrase may imply a contradiction, it expresses what was intended by" all the rest and residue of my said residuary estate not herein otherwise disposed of." United States Trust Co. v Black, 9 Misc 653, 655, 30 NYS 453.

resign. See resignation.

Resignatio est juris proprii spontanea refutatio. A resignation is a spontaneous giving up of one's own right.

resignation. A voluntary withdrawal of an officer of the Armed Forces from the service. 36 Am J1st Mil § 60. The voluntary relinquishment of his position by a civil service employee. 15 Am J2d Civ S § 34. The relinquishment of the office of executor or administrator under conditions prescribed by statute. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 119.

resignation of public office. A well recognized right. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 166. A relinquishment of a part of the term of a public office with intent accompanied by an act of relinquishment. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 165. To give up, to give back the office with intent to relinquish it.

A prospective resignation may, in point of law, amount but to a notice of intention to resign, since it is not accompanied by a giving up of the office; possession is still retained and may not necessarily be surrendered till the expiration of the legal term of the office, because the officer may recall his resignation, -may withdraw his proposition to resign. State ex rel. Ryan v Murphy, 30 Nev 409, 97 P 39 1, 720.

resignee. A person in whose favor another person tenders his resignation.

resilire. To refuse to enter into a contract.

res immobiles. (Civil law.) Immovable corporeal things, consisting of land and that which is connected therewith either by nature or art, such as trees and buildings. See Mackeldey's Roman Law § 160.

res in re. The entering of the male organ in that of the female. Mere penetration. 44 Am J1st Rape § 3.

res integra. An untouched matter; a point without a precedent; a case of novel impression.

res inter alios. Matters between others; the acts of strangers or third parties.

res inter alios acta. The acts and declarations either of strangers, or of one of the parties to the action in his dealings with strangers. Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Co. v Schmitz, 211 Ill 446, 456, 71 NE 1050.

The recitals of an instrument are not ordinarily admissible against third persons as proof of the facts recited, being as to them res inter alios acta. 29 Am J2d Ev § 841.

Res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet. Transactions between certain parties ought not to prejudice third parties.

"The general rule is that a person's books of account cannot be used as evidence upon issues between third persons, that entries in such books as to such third persons are res inter alios acta, and cannot be used against persons not parties to them." State ex rel. Pabst Brewing Co. v Carpenter, 129 Wis 180, 108 NW 641.

Res inter alios judicatae nullum aliis praejudicium faciunt. (Civil law.) Matters which are adjudged as between certain persons effect no prejudice as to others; matters determined in a case do not prejudice those not parties thereto.

res ipsa loquitur. The thing speaks for itself. The rule that proof that the thing which caused the injury to the plaintiff was under the control and management of the defendant, and that the occurrence was such as in the ordinary course of things would not have happened if those who had its control or management had used proper care, affords sufficient evidence, or, as sometimes stated by the courts, reasonable evidence, in the absence of explanation by the defendant, that the injury arose from, or was caused by, the defendant's want of care. 38 Am J1st Negl § 295.

The three essential elements of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur are: (1) the instrumentality must be under the control or management of the defendant; (2) the circumstances, according to common knowledge and experience, must create a clear inference that the accident would not have happened if the defendant had not been negligent; and (3) the plaintiff's injury must have resulted from the accident. Lewis v Wolk, 312 Ky 536, 228 SW2d 432, 16 ALR2d 974.

The term means "the thing speaks for itself," and that means the thing or instrumentality involved speaks for itself. It clearly does not mean the accident speaks for itself. It means that when the initial fact, namely what thing or instrumentality caused the accident has been shown then, and not before, an inference arises that the injury or damage occurred by reason of the negligence of the party who had it under his exclusive control. The inference of negligence arising from the initially established fact compels the defendant, in order to relieve himself of liability, to move forward with his proof to rebut the inference of negligence. Travelers Ins. Co. v Hulme, 168 Kan 483, 213 P2d 645, 16 ALR2d 793.

resist. To make resistance.

resistance. Opposition by direct, active, forcible, or quasi-forcible means. State v Welch, 37 Wis 196, 201. The criminal offense in resisting orders issued by lawful authority. 39 Am J1st Obst J § 5.

resisting officer. A criminal offense at common law and also by force of statute in resisting a public officer in the performance of his duties or opposing him by interposing obstacles or impediments to hinder, impede, or prevent him from performing his duties. 39 Am J1st Obst J §§ 8 et seq.

Under a statute penalizing under the single term "resist," it is not enough that the performance of a duty is opposed, obstructed, interrupted, hindered, or prevented; the officer must be resisted, and the resistance must be active and direct toward him. 39 Am J1st Obst J § 8.

res judicata. Literally, the thing has been decided, been adjudicated. State v Wear, 145 Mo 162, 192, 46 SW 1099. The principle that an existing final judgment rendered upon the merits, without fraud or collusion, by a court of competent jurisdiction, is conclusive of rights, questions, and facts in issue, as to the parties and their privies, in all other actions in the same or any other judicial tribunal of concurrent jurisdiction. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 324.

The effect of a judgment as res judicata appears in at least three aspects, viz. merger of cause of action, bar, and estoppel. Anno: 49 ALR2d 1038.

A difference exists between the effect of a judgment as a bar to a second action between the same parties upon the same claim or demand and its effect in another action upon a different cause of action; in the former case, the judgment on the merits constitutes an absolute bar to the second action, being a finality, not only as to every matter which was offered and received to sustain or defeat the claim or demand, but also as to any other admissible matter which might have been offered for that purpose; in the latter case, the judgment is a bar only as to the matters actually litigated and determined in the former action, and not as to what might have been litigated and determined therein. Smith v Smith, 235 Minn 412, 51 NW2d 276, 32 ALR2d 1135.

Res judicata tacit ex albo nigrum, ex nigro album, ex curvo rectum, ex recto curvum. When anything has been adjudicated, it makes white black, black white, curved straight and straight curved.

Res judicata pro veritate accipitur. (Civil law.) A matter which has been adjudicated is accepted or received as true.

Res judicata pro veritate habetur. An adjudicated matter shall be deemed correct. O'Donnell v Glenn, 9 Mont 452, 23 F 1018.

res mancipi. (Roman law.) Things that were the subject of mancipium; things capable of being sold by the mancipium.

res mobiles. (Civil law.) Corporeal movable things, whether they were self-moving or not. See Mackeldey's Roman Law § 160.

res nova. A new matter; a case, point, or matter without a precedent; a point of law which has not been decided.

res nullius. The property of no one.

See res derelicta.

Res nullius naturaliter fit primi occupantis. The property of no one naturally becomes that of the first occupant.

resolution. An expression of the opinion or mind of a municipal council concerning some matter of administration and providing for the disposition thereof, being less formal than an ordinance and requiring no set form of words. Sawyer v Lorenzen, 149 Iowa 87, 127 NW 1091. An expression of any legislative department of government other than by statute.

A proposition of law declared in a case, e.g. the first resolution in Wild's Case.

See joint resolution.

resolutive. Same as resolutory.

Resoluto jure concedentis, resolvitur jus concessum. By the extinction of the right of the grantor, the right granted is extinguished. See Broom's Legal Maxims 467.

resolutory condition. A condition in a contract which permits the obligation to take effect immediately but subject to being nullified or defeated upon the happening of a certain event. New Orleans v Texas & Pacific R. Co. 171 US 312, 43 L Ed 178, 18 S Ct 875 (quoting from the Louisiana Civil Code which is said to be similar to the Code Napoleon in such respect).

resort. Verb: To have recourse. To turn to one for aid or assistance. To use, as to resort to arms. To go to a place, even to go once. State v Ah Sam, 15 Nev 27. A place of frequent assembly. Re Sic, 73 Cal 142, 152, 14 P 405 (place for smoking opium).

Noun: A place operated for the health or pleasure of its patrons, not for the entertainment of transients. 29 Am J Rev ed Innk § 10.

See retaliatory statute.

retallia. Retail; dividing a commodity into parts.

retare. To charge a person with the commission of a crime; to accuse; to suspect.

retaxation of costs. A correction of an erroneous taxation of costs. 20 Am J2d Costs § 93.

A retaxation of costs either affirms, modifies or corrects the taxation had. A new taxation necessarily implies that the former taxation is vacated or annulled. Baker v Codding, 3 Misc 512, 513, 23 NYS 5.

retention of title as security. The right of the vendor under an executory contract for the sale of land, holding the legal title in trust for the purchaser, subject to the payment of the purchase money in accordance with the terms of the contract. 55 Am J2d V & P § 355.

retire. To terminate employment and acquire a status of retirement, receiving retirement benefits. To sever relations with a business and acquire a status of retirement. To withdraw negotiable paper from circulation. To take up or pay an obligation voluntarily.

"A man as sanguine as Micawber might describe his bankruptcy as a retirement of his obligations, but a merchant seeking credit who spoke in such euphemisms might find himself in trouble later. Where creditors receive a petty dividend on the collapse of their debtor, their claims may be extinguished but are hardly retired." Thomson v Commissioner (CA2 NY) 108 F2d 642.

See retirement.

retirement. Voluntarily taking up and paying an obligation. The status of one who has ceased to work or engage in business. A termination of employment under conditions entitling one to retirement benefits. The antithesis of a discharge or forced resignation. Brown v Little Brown & Co. 209 Mass 102, 66 ALR 1284, 168 NE 521. The severance of a member of the armed forces from the service under conditions entitling him to pension or retirement benefits. 36 Am J1st Mil § 36.

retirement benefit. Broadly, any benefit received upon retiring from employment, under a formal or informal benefit plan. A benefit payable to a designated beneficiary upon the death of one retired under a retirement plan calling for the payment of amounts periodically by way of pension or retirement money. Re Simpson's Estate, 43 Cal 2d 594, 275 P2d 467, 47 ALR2d 991.

See pension; Social Security.

retirement from the Armed Forces. Separation from service in the Armed Forces for physical disability or because of length of service. 10 USC §§ 1201 et seq.

retirement fund. See pension fund; teachers' retirement funds.

retirement of bond. See retirement of securities.

retirement of jury. The jury proceeding to the jury room for their deliberation following the reception of evidence, argument of counsel, and instructions by the court.

retirement of partner. The withdrawal of a partner from the firm, resulting in a dissolution of the partnership. 40 Am J1st Paint § 242.

retirement of securities. The calling and redemption of a bond by payment. The voluntary payment of a bond. A repurchase of its own stock by a corporation and the cancellation of the repurchased shares, destroying all rights adhering to them. 18 Am J2d Corp § 282. The elimination of shares of stock in a building and loan association by paying off the shareholder. 13 Am J2d B & L Assoc § 27.

Under section 117(f) of the Revenue Act of 1934 dealing with the retirement of securities, the word is not used in an artificial sense. In common understanding and according to the dictionaries, the word "retirement" is broader in scope than the word "redemption." McClain v Commissioner, 311 US 527, 85 L Ed 319, 61 S Ct 373.

See redeemable bond.

retirement of stock. See retirement of securities.

retirement pay. See pension; retirement benefit.

retonsor. A shaver or clipper of coins.

retorna brevium. The returns of writs; the term day for the return of a writ. See 3 Bl Comm 278.

retorno habendo. A writ in aid of it successful defendant in an action of replevin, whereby the goods taken from him under the writ of replevin are returned to him. See 3 Bl Comm 149.

retorsion. The adoption of forcible measures by a sovereign state, which deems that it has been wronged by another nation, in order to compensate it for past injury or to restrain further wrongful acts.

Among the different measures which are included in the meaning of the term are reprisals, blockade, interdiction of commercial intercourse, the detention of vessels, and embargo. 30 Am J Rev ed Internat 1, § 53.

retour sans frais. To return without charges, an instruction given by the drawer of a bill of exchange in the event of the dishonor of the bill by the drawee.

retour sans protest. To return without protest, an instruction given by the drawer of it bill of exchange in the event of the dishonor of the bill by the drawee.

retractation. The withdrawal of a renunciation of the office by the person named as executor in a will.

retraction. A statement of such a nature and published in such a manner as to manifest an honest intention to repair the harm done to the injured reputation by a defamatory statement. 33 Am J1st L & S § 123. Withdrawal of bid by a bidder at an auction sale. 7 Am J2d Auct § 30; 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S § 96.

retractus aquae. The ebbing of the tide.

retrahere. To draw back; to withdraw.

retraxit. An open and voluntary renunciation of his suit made by plaintiff in open court, being the act of the plaintiff, performable by counsel only under special authority. 24 Am J2d Dism § 3. A voluntary renunciation by the plaintiff in open court of his suit and the cause thereof, through which he forever loses his action. Virginia Concrete Co v Board of Supervisors, 197 Va 921, 91 SE2d 415 56 ALR2d 1283.

See judgment of retraxit.

retreat. A place for contemplation, especially for the religious. Withdrawal from an encounter. The rule that a person when attacked by another, except in his own house, shall seek to withdraw from the encounter by giving ground, before taking the life of his assailant. 26 Am J1st Homi § 150.

retreat to the ditch. A principle similar to retreat to the wall. 26 Am J1st Homi § 151.

retreat to the wall. The principle that a person who is assailed elsewhere than in his own dwelling is not justified in taking the life of his assailant so long as there is a safe avenue of escape from the attack. 26 Am J1st Homi § 150.

retroactive. Acting on things that are past. Simpson v City Savings Bank, 56 NH 466.

See relation back; retrospective operation.

retroactive decision. A court decision which makes and applies a new rule of law, and attaches another and unforeseen liability to a contract after its execution. Clancy v Barker (CA8 Neb) 131 F 161.

retroactive legislation. See retrospective legislation.

retroactive operation. See relation back; retrospective operation.

retrocession. A term of the civil law, meaning the restitution of all ancient title to a true owner.

Such an act confers no new title, it merely recognizes and confirms a previously existing title in another. Amet v Boyer, 43 La Ann 562, 578, 9 So 622.

retrospective. Looking backward or upon things that are past. Simpson v City Savings Bank, 56 NH 466.

retrospective effect. See relation back; retrospective operation.

retrospective legislation. Laws which take away or impair vested rights acquired under existing laws, or create a new obligation, impose a new duty, or attach a new disability in respect of transactions or considerations already passed. 16 Am J2d Const L § 413. A statute which changes or impairs a present right by going behind it to give to anterior circumstances an efficacy which they did not have when the right accrued, or which relates back to and gives to a previous transaction a legal effect different from that which it had under the law when it was completed. International Mortgage Trust Co. v Henry, 139 Kan 154, 30 P2d 311; Clark Implement Co. v Wadden, 34 SD 550, 149 NW 424.

A statute is not rendered retroactive merely because the facts or requisites upon which its subsequent action depends, or some of them, are drawn from a time antecedent to the enactment. See Reynolds v United States, 292 US 443, 78 L Ed 1353, 54 S Ct 801.

A statute which does not change the legal effect of prior facts or transactions is not unconstitutionally retrospective merely because it relates thereto, or because it relies thereon to aid in fixing the present status of a person, or because some requisites for its action are drawn from a time antecedent to its passage. State ex rel. Sweezer v Green, 300 Mo 1249, 232 SW2d 897, 24 ALR2d 340.

retrospective operation. The operation of a statute as of a time prior to enactment or effective date. 16 Am J2d Const L § 413. The effect sometimes given a predated contract. 17 Am J2d Contr § 69.

See retroactive decision; retrospective legislation.

retrospective statute. See retrospective legislation.

rettare. Same as retare.

rette. Same as rettum.

rettum. A charge or accusation of the commission of a criminal offense.

return. Verb: To come back to a place. To yield a profit. To make statement of one's activities, as where an officer returns process directed to him for service. Noun: A coming back. Profit or earnings. A statement in writing of what one has done in the performance of a duty or duties. An account, particularly for tax purposes.

See tax return.

returnable. (1) Capable of being returned; (2) (law) legally required to be returned. Daniels v Lewis, 7 Colo 430, 4 P 57.

returnable process. Process upon which the officer who is to execute it is required to certify his doings under the process. Utica City Batik v Buell (NY) 9 Abb Pr 385, 391.

returnable writ. Same as returnable process.

return day. The time specified in a writ or process for the defendant to appear and defend. 42Am J1st Proc § 14. The day fixed by law for a defendant to appear and answer following the service of process upon him. Carlson v Burt, 111 Cal 129, 43 P 583. The last day for the return of a writ of execution. 21 Am J Exec §§ 471 et seq.

return day of an election. The day following an election upon which the board or other body legally authorized to canvass the returns of an election, is required by law to commence the canvass of the returns. Carlson v Burt, 111 Cal 129, 43 P 583.

return flow. Water, drawn from a stream and impounded or used in irrigation, which subsequently arrives again at the stream from which it was initially abstracted. United States v Warm Springs Irrigation Dist. (DC Or) 38 F Supp 239.

return in certiorari. See return to writ.

return in mandamus. See return to writ.

return not found. See not found.

return nulla bona. The return of an execution which states a search by the execution officer for property whereof to make a levy and the absence of any such property. 30 Am J2d Exec § 562.

return of attachment. The act of the sheriff or other officer to whom a writ of attachment is directed. The indorsement on the writ of what the officer has done thereunder, and the filing of the writ as indorsed with the clerk of the court out of which the writ issued. 6 Am J2d Attach § 316. A statement on the back of a writ of attachment noting the levy thereof upon real estate, describing the property, and noting the date and time of day of the levy. 6 Am J2d Attach § 312.

return of execution. A showing by the execution officer of the things done by him under the writ of execution. The sheriff's indorsement upon a writ of execution of the levy made by him under the writ, the disposition of the property seized under the levy, and the disposition of the proceeds of the sale, if any, made by him under the writ. 30 Am 32d Exec §§ 551 et seq.

return of indictment. A bringing of all indictment into open court --that is, while the judge is presiding. 27 Am J1st Indict § 31.

return of inquisition. A finding whether the individual subject of the inquisition is or is not mentally incompetent. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins Per § 22.

return of premium. Any payment by an insurer to insured made on the basis of a premium paid by the insured bill unearned. 29 Am 3 Rev ed Ins § 593.

Return of process. A short account in writing made by an officer in respect to the manner in which he has executed a writ or process; his official statement of the acts done by him under the writ in obedience to its direction and in conformity with the requirements of law. 42 Am J1st Proc § 117.

See tarde; undue return.

return of warrant. A return of a warrant for the arrest of a person, by the officer to whom it was given for service, showing substantially all that the officer did within the scope of proper execution. Gibson v Holmes, 79 Vt 110, 62 A 11.

return of writ. See return of attachment; return of execution; return of process; return to writ.

returns of election. See election returns.

return ticket. See round-trip ticket.

return to state. A coming back to the state after an absence therefrom. For the purposes of starting the running of a statute of limitations, a return by one in a manner so public, open, and notorious that his creditor may find him and serve him with process by the exercise of reasonable diligence. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 226.

return to writ. A response to a writ or process, as where a sheriff or other officer having the custody of a prisoner responds to it writ of habeas corpus by stating in form prescribed by statute the material facts respecting the detention of the prisoner. 25 Am J1st Hab C §§ 137 et seq. The response of the court or officer to whom a writ of certiorari is directed: a certification of the record of the proceedings sought to be reviewed. 14 Am J2d Certiorari § 47. The response or answer by the officer to whom a petition or writ of mandamus is directed, answering the allegations of fact in the petition or writ. 35 Am J2d Mand § 354.

See return of process.

reus. A defendant; a person who is guilty of a criminal offense; a party to a contract; a party to an action.

Reus excipiendo fit actor. The defendant by his plea may make himself a plaintiff.

Reus laesae majestatis punitur, of pereat onus ne pereant omnes. A defendant guilty of treason is punished, so that one may die lest all may perish.

reus promittendi. (Civil law) A party to a contract who makes it promise therein; a promisor.

reus stipulandi. (Civil law.) A party to a contract to whom a promise is made ; a promisee.

revealed law. See divine law.

reve mote. A court which was presided over by a shire-reeve or sheriff.

revendication. The right which an unpaid vendor had, under the civil law, upon the insolvency of the vendee, to reclaim, in specie such part of the goods as remained in the hands of the vendee entire, and without having changed their quality. See Benedict v Schaettle, 12 Ohio St 515, 520.

revenge. Verb: To take vengeance, to retaliate. Noun: Retaliation; vengeance. A malicious injury inflicted in return for an injury. People v Pierson, 2 Idaho 76, 3 P 689.

revenue. Return from property. Bates v Porter, 74 Cal 224, 239, 15 P 732. Income produced without impairment of capital. Re Ratcliffe, 139 La 996, 72 So 713. The income of the government, state or national, arising from taxation, duties, fees, and the like. 42 Am J1st Pub F § 2. Precisely, the total income of the government, state or national, derived from all sources, subject to be applied to public purposes. Fergus v Brady, 277 Ill 272, 115 NE 393.

revenue bill. A bill introduced in Congress for the raising of revenue for the support of the government and the payment of the expenses incurred in governmental activities. A bill for levying taxes in the strict sense of the term, its distinguished from a bill for a purpose which incidentally may include the raising of revenue. Annotation: 4 ALR2d 976, 980 et seq; a bill which must originate in the House of Representatives. US Const Art I § 7, cl 1.

"Mr. Justice Story (I Story, Const § 880) has well said that the practical construction of the Constitution and the history of the constitutional provision in question (article 1, section 7) Proves that revenue bills are those that levy taxes in the strict sense of the word, and are not bills for other purposes which may incidentally create revenue." Twin City Nat. Bank v Nebeker, 167 US 196, 202, 42 L Ed 134, 136, 17 S Ct 766.

revenue bond. A bond issued by a public body payable solely from a special fund arising from the revenues accruing from operation of an enterprise or project for the construction, operation, and maintenance of which the bond was issued. 43 Am J1st Pub See § 8.

revenue law. A tax statute. A law passed under the power granted to Congress by § 8 of Article I of the United States Constitution "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises." California ex rel. McColgan v Bruce (CA9 Nev) 129 F2d 421, 147 ALR 782.

As the term is used in connection with the jurisdiction of the United States Courts, it means a law imposing duties on imports or tonnage, or a law providing in terms for revenue; that is, a law which is directly traceable to the power granted to Congress by section 8 of article I of the Federal Constitution, "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises." United States v Hill, 123 US 681, 31 L Ed 275, 8 S Ct 308.

A law passed for the purpose of authorizing the levy and collection of taxes in some form. The term does not include laws which are passed for other purposes although they may incidentally create revenue. The National Prohibition Act, passed for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment, is not a revenue law. United States v McConnell (DC Pal 10 F2d 973).

See Internal Revenue Code.

revenue officers. Officers of the United States for the administration and enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code.

See Internal Revenue Service.

revenue stamps. The means of collecting many of the taxes imposed by the federal government, the requirement of the law being that a stamp be attached to an article subject to tax and canceled, or posted and displayed as prescribed by statute, such stamps being available for purchase from the government. The evidence of payment of a tax. United States v

Re, verbis, scripto, consensu, traditione, junctura vestes sumere pacta solent. Compacts are accustomed to take their clothing from the subject matter, the words, the writing, the delivery and the consent or joining together.

reversal. An overthrowing; a setting aside. An annulling; an avoiding. Cowdery v London, 139 Cal 298, 303, 73 P 196; Laithe v McDonald, 7 Kan 255, 268. The act of an appellate court in setting aside, annulling, or vacating the judgment or order, entered by the court below. 5 Am J2d A & E § 948.

As the word is used in connection with judgments, its usual meaning contemplates only a reversal by an appellate court; that is, by any court authorized to set aside the judgment. See Manfull v Graham, 55 Neb 645, 649.

reverse bars. Angle irons curved in the reverse arc to the frames of a steel or iron ship and fastened with one flat side against one side of the projecting flange of the frames, strengthening the hull of the vessel and constituting a part of it. The President Roosevelt (CA2 NY) 116 F2d 420.

reversed and remanded. A familiar expression meaning that the appellate court has set aside the judgment rendered in the trial court and that the case goes back to the trial court for a new trial. Myers v McDonald, 68 Cal 162, 8 P 809.

reverse direction rule. The well-settled principle that if a difficulty arises in running the line of a survey of lands in one direction, and all the known calls are met by running them in the reverse direction, the latter is a proper procedure. 12 Am J2d Bound § 60.

reverser. Same as reversioner.

reversible error. Prejudicial error. Error in the court below which has injuriously affected the appellant or by which he has suffered a miscarriage of justice. 5 Am J2d A & E § 783.

reversion. A future estate in either real or personal property arising by operation of law to take effect in possession in favor of a grantor, lessor, or transferor, or his heirs, distributees, devisees, or legatees, after the termination of a prior particular estate granted, demised, or devised. 28 Am 32d Est § 171. An estate arising from the failure to dispose of an ultimate interest, or from the failure of an attempted but invalid disposition of an ultimate interest. 28 Am J2d Est § 173. The returning of property to the grantor or his heirs or devisees upon the exhaustion or running out of the grant, in other words, the returning of the property after the grant is over. Norman v Horton, 344 Mo 290, 126 SW2d 187, 125 ALR 531. The estate of a landlord during the existence of the outstanding leasehold estate. 32 Am J1st L & T § 76. An estate in praesenti, vested in the sense of a present fixed right of enjoyment in futuro. Norman v Horton, 344 Mo 290, 126 SW2d 187, 125 ALR 531; an estate dependent in respect of possession on the determination of the particular estate granted or devised. Metcalfe v Miller, 96 Mich 459, 56 NW 16.

A reversion may exist, under the view taken in some jurisdictions, as a repository for the "fee" or "inheritance" to be taken under ultimate contingent interests during the pendency of present interests. For instance, a reversion is sometimes stated to exist where an ultimate remainder in fee is contingent. Until it vests, there is a reversion in the grantor or deviser and his heirs. 28 Am J2d Est § 173.

The words "revert" and "reversion" are sometimes loosely used to describe an interest different from a reversion in the true sense of the term. A reversion does not become a remainder or a remainder a reversion because it is so called in the instrument creating it. The words should be construed in the light of the intent of the testator or grantor. Brown v Guthery, 190 NC 822, 130 SE 836.

See possibility of reverter; reverter.

reversionary. In or by way of reversion; relating or pertaining to a reversion.

reversionary interest. A reversion.

reversionary lease. A lease the term of which is to begin at a future time.

reversioner. A person entitled to an estate in reversion.

See reversion.

reversor. A reversioner; in Scotch law, a debtor who made a wadset or mortgage.

revert. To turn backward. To come back to a former owner. Pearce v Lott, 101 Ga 395, 399, 29 SE 276. To operate by way of a reversion; to come back to a grantor or lessor, Sometimes loosely used as the equivalent of "go to." Mastellar v Atkinson, 94 Kan 279, 14 P 367.

See reversion.

Revertendi animus videtur desinere habere tunc, cum revertendi consuetudinem deseruerint. They are then considered as having ceased to have the intention of returning, when they have abandoned the habit of returning. A maxim of the civil law. See 2 Bl Comm 392.

reverter. The restoration of the use of property to a donor in dedication upon the termination of the use for which dedicated. 14 Am J2d Cem § 24.

See formedon in the reverter; possibility of reverter; reversion; revert.

reverter doctrine. The rule that one returning to his domicile of origin from his domicile of choice may reacquire the domicile of origin while on the return trip. 25 Am J2d Dom § 36.

revest. To vest again in the same person. To return to a grantor after the termination of a particular estate granted by him. McPheeters v Wright, 124 Ind 560, 24 NE 734.

review. A consideration by an appellate court of the decision of an inferior court, contemplating the affirmance, reversal, or modification of such decision in accordance with the law. 4 Am J2d A & E § 1. A proceeding expressly authorized by statute in some state, distinct from review on appeal or in error proceeding. 46 Am J1st Rev § 2. A proceeding in the nature of a new trial of the issues tried before, except as leave be granted to amend the pleadings. 46 Am J1st Rev § 3. A review by a court of the decision or determination made by an administrative agency. 2 Am J2d Admin L §§ 553 et seq.

See bill of review; certiorari; judicial review; scope of review.

reviewability. The question whether an issue in its nature is one proper for consideration by an appellate court. 4 Am J2d A & E § 17.

See appealability.

review on appeal. See review; scope of review.

revise. To make a revision.

See revision.

revised statutes. A familiar term in many jurisdictions, denoting a code based upon a prior code with alterations and additions necessary to bring the code up to date.

revision. Looking over a thing, such as an article or a schedule of public utility rates, and reviewing it carefully for the purpose of making changes, additions, and corrections, if such be deemed advisable. Goodwin v Prime, 92 Me 355, 363, 42 A 785.

In local assessment proceedings, the words "revision" and "correction" refer to the fact that the board may be called upon to review that which has been done, and to make the proceedings conform to the law. Hutcheson v Storrie, 92 Tex 685, 51 SW 848.

To revise is to review or re-examine for correction, and when applied to a statute, the word contemplates the re-examination of the same subject matter contained in the prior statute, and the substitution of a new, and what is believed to be, a still more perfect rule. Casey v Harried, 5 Iowa 1.

revival. Restoration of strength. Restoration to a condition of activity.

revival of action. The procedure by which a proper party, personal representative, heir, distributee, legatee, or devisee, is substituted for a deceased party and the action continued in name of the substituted party. Grant v McAuliffe, 41 Cal 2d 859, 264 P2d 944, 42 ALR2d 1162. A procedure at common law and under some statutes by writ of scire facias but more commonly under modern statutes, by motion. 1 Am J2d Abat & R § 117.

The revival is not a new suit; it is still the same suit, in which both parties are entitled to the benefit of all former proceedings. Havens v Seashore Land Co. 57 NJ Eq 142, 149, 41 A 755.

revival of cause. The revival of a cause of action barred by the statute of limitations. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac §§ 289-336.

According to the weight of authority in this country, the term "revived cause of action" has two distinct meanings. One refers to a cause of action barred by the statute of limitations, and brought to life again in the manner provided by statute, as by a new promise in writing signed by the debtor. The other meaning refers to a cause of action the statutory life of which has been revived or restored in the same manner, but before the cause of action has become barred by the statute. Bullard v Lopez, 7 NM 561, 37 P 1103.

revival of corporation. The revival of corporate existence after expiration of the corporate charter, such being permissible only as authorized by statute. 18 Am J2d Corp § 69. The revival of a dissolved corporation, as permitted by statute. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1651.

revival of easement. The revival, upon rebuilding, of an easement once extinguished by the destruction of the servient structure. 25 Am J2d Ease § 114.

revival of judgment. Giving new life to a dormant judgment, whether by a writ or without a writ, as the statute permits. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm §§ 571 et seq.

revival of offense. Subsequent conduct of the offender which permits the assertion of an offense previously condoned as a ground of divorce. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 221.

revival of policy. The reinstatement of a policy of insurance after it has lapsed or become forfeited, especially where forfeited for the nonpayment of premiums, pursuant to a provision for reinstatement contained in the policy and the performance of such conditions as are imposed by such provision, or pursuant to the special agreement of the parties. 29 Am J Rev ed In., § 368.

There is a difference of opinion whether the reinstatement of an insurance policy constitutes a new contract. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 369.

revival of will. The act of a testator in giving testamentary effect to a will previously revoked by a new testamentary act in re-executing or publishing the will. 57 Am J1st Wills § 615. Giving renewed effect to an earlier will previously revoked by a later will by a still later will revoking the intermediate will. 57 Am J1st Wills § 619.

It is held in many cases that a revoked will or codicil can be revived by subsequent codicil. Anno: 33 ALR2d 925.

revive. To come back to the vigor of life. To bring back to the vigor of life. To effect a revival.

The primary meaning of the word is "to give life to again." If it is a creative act to give life to dead matter once, it is no less a creative act to give life again to the same matter when it becomes dead.

The syllable "re" in the word indicates the use of old matter, and the syllable "vive" means "to give life to," which is one of the primary meanings of the word "create." The quality of the act inheres in the giving of life, not in the material that is to be vivified. Nor is the quality of the act changed by repetition. See Re Bank of Commerce v Wiltsie, 153 Ind 460, 53 NE 950.

See revival.

revived cause. See revival of cause.

revivor. A proceeding for the revival of an action abated by the death of a party. 1 Am J2d Abate etc § 117.

See bill of revivor; revival of action.

revivor and supplement. See bill of revivor and supplement.

revocable license. See simple license.

revocability. The quality or condition of being subject to revocation. The distinctive characteristic of a will; absent in a deed. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 6.

See revocation.

revocation. A nullification ; a cancellation: a puffing to naught. A withdrawal; a recall. The nullification of an offer by the offeror before acceptance of the offer. 17 Am J2d Cont § 35. A spouse exercising his or her right to disregard a condonation of an offense by the other spouse, because of subsequent conduct of the offender, thereby asserting the once condoned offense as a ground of divorce. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 221.

revocation clause. A clause contained in a will, purporting to revoke an earlier will or wills. 57 Am J1st Wills § 466.

revocation of agency. The termination of the relationship of principal and agent by the principal or by the agent. 3 Am J2d Agency §§ 37 et seq.

revocation of franchise. The termination of a franchise by exercise of a reserved power of termination. 36 Am J2d Franch § 50.

revocation of gift. The avoidance of a gift by the donor because of incompleteness of the transaction, a condition in the transaction, or other peculiar circumstance. 24 Am J1st Gifts §§ 53 et seq.

revocation of guaranty. The termination by the guarantor of a continuing guaranty or of his offer to guarantee an obligation to be incurred at a future time. 24 Am J1st Guar § 64.

revocation of letters. The nullification of the letters of an executor or administrator for invalidity of the appointment or upon the removal of an executor or administrator by the court. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad §§ 102, 109.

revocation of license. The termination of a license in real property, provided the right to revoke exists. 25 Am J2d Ease § 128. The termination of the privilege bestowed upon the licensee by a license granted by a public body for the conducting of a particular business or the following of a certain occupation. 33 Am J1st Lic § 65. The termination of a liquor license upon a ground provided by statute. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 174.

revocation of probate. The rendition by a probate court of a decree vacating and annulling a prior decree admitting a will to probate. 57 Am J1st Wills 967.

The revocation of a will consists of two things, -the intention of the testator, and some outward actor symbol of destruction. A defacement, obliteration, or destruction, without the animo revocandi, is not sufficient. Neither is the intention -the animo revocandi -sufficient without some act of obliteration or destruction. Cutler v Cutler, 130 NC 1, 40 SE 689.

The difference between a revocation and an alteration of a will is that if what is done simply takes away what was given before, or a part of what was given before, then it is a revocation; but if it gives something in addition, or gives something else, then it is more than revocation, and cannot be done by mere obliteration. When by obliteration of certain words a different meaning is imparted, there is not a mere revocation. There is something more than the destruction of that which has been antecedently done. There is a transmutation by which anew clause is created. See Miles' Appeal, 68 Conn 237, 36 A 39.

See dependent relative revocation; implied revocation.

revocatur. It is recalled or set aside.

revoke. To withdraw, cancel, or annul. To set at nought. To effect a revocation.

See revocation.

revolt. An insurrection. A rising against authority. The act of a seaman in unlawfully and forcefully, or by fraud or intimidation, usurping command of the vessel or depriving the master or other officer in command of his command, or resisting or preventing him from exercising his command, or transferring such authority to another not lawfully entitled thereto. 18 USC § 481. The endeavor of the crew of a vessel, or any one or more of them, to overthrow the legitimate authority of her commander, with intent to remove him from his command, or against his will to take possession of the vessel by assuming the government and navigation of her, or by transferring their obedience from the lawful commander to some other person. The United States v Tappan (US) 11 Wheat 417, 6 L Ed 508.

revolution. A sudden, radical, and fundamental change in the government or political system, usually effected with violence or at least some acts of violence, sometimes after prolonged struggle between armed forces, and prompted ordinarily by internal conditions oppressive to the people. The overthrow of an established government, generally accompanied by far-reaching social changes. State v Diamond, 27 NM 477, 202 P 988, 20 ALR 1527, 1532.

revolver. A firearm with short barrel, to be held in firing with one hand; a deadly weapon. 56 Am J1st Weap § 3.

revolving capital fund. A fund accumulated by a cooperative association by way of capital by the retention of all or a portion of the operating profit of the association, each member being credited with his proportionate part on the books and usually issued a certificate showing such credit. 18 Am J2d Coop Asso § 15.

revolving door. A door, consisting of four parts or vanes hung on an axle, which swings in a complete circle, thereby permitting entrance or exit by one who walks into the space between two vanes and on through a half circle of the revolution. Anno: 20 ALR2d 34.

reward. A sum of money or other recompense offered by the government, a natural person, an association, or a corporation to the members of the public generally, or to persons of a particular class, for the performance of a particular service, such as the finding of a lost article of property, locating a missing person or a lost child, or the giving of information leading to the arrest of a person for a crime recently committed, and paid to a person for the performance of such service in accord with the offer and the conditions imposed in the offer. Zwolane v Becker Mfg. Co. 150 Wis 517, 137 NW 769.

The words "reward," and "bounty" are nearly allied in meaning. Reward is said to be the appropriate term to apply the case of a single service, which can be only once performed, and, therefore, will be earned only by the person or co-operating persons who succeed while others fail, while the term bounty applies where the services or action of many persons are desired and each who acts upon the offer may entitle himself to the promised gratuity without prejudice from or to the claims of others. Ingrain v Colgan, 106 Cal 113, 39 P 437.

rewriting contract. A derogatory term for a judicial decision which adds or subtracts terms from a contract in construction. 17 Am J2d Contr § 242.

rex. A king.

Rex debet esse sub lege, quia lex tacit regem. The king ought to be under the law because the law makes the king. See 1 Bl Comm 239.

Rex est caput et salus reipublicae, et a capite bona valetudo transit in omnes. The king is the head and safety of the state, and from a worthy head prosperity comes to all.

Rex est legalis et politicos. The king is both a legal and a political person.

Rex est lex vivens. The king is the living law.

Rex est major singulis; minor universis. The king is greater than any individual person, but less than all of them together.

Rex est vicarius et minister Dei in terra: omnia quidem sub eo est, et ipse sub nullo, nisi tantum sub Deo. The king is the vice-gerent and minister of God on earth: everything is under him and he is under no one except God alone. See 1 Bl Comm 241.

Rex hoc solum non potest facere quod non potest injuste agere. This thing alone the king cannot do; that is, he is unable to do an injustice.

Rex non debet esse sub homine, sed sub Deo et lege. The king ought not to be subordinate to man, but he should be under God and the law.

Rex non debet esse sub homine, sed sub Deo et lege, quia lex tacit regent. The king ought not to be subordinate to man, but he should be under God and the law, because the law makes the king. See Broom's Legal Maxims 47.

Rex non potest fallere nec falli. The king can neither deceive nor can he be deceived.

Rex non potest peccare. The king can do no wrong. Mills v Stewart, 75 Mont 429, 247 P 332, 47 ALR 424, 427.

Rex nunquam moritur. The king never dies.

An attribute of the king's majesty is his perpetuity. The law ascribes to him, in his political capacity, absolute immortality. Immediately upon the death of the reigning king, in his natural capacity, his kingship or imperial dignity, by act of law, without any interregnum or interval, is vested at once in his heir, who is from that moment king to all intents and purposes. See 1 Bl Comm 249.

RFC. Abbreviation of Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

RFD. An abbreviation of rural free delivery, customarily used in addressing mail to a person on a rural mail route.

r.g. An abbreviation of regulae generales.

rhinoscope. An instrument used by physicians for the exploration of the nasal cavities. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co. v Palmore, 68 Kan 545, 75 P 509.

Rhodian law. An ancient compilation of maritime law by the people of the commercially prosperous island of Rhodes, appearing about 900 B. C.

ribaldus. A vagrant; a vagabond.

ribaud. A rogue; a vagrant; a whoremonger; a person given to all manner of wickedness. Wharton's Law Dictionary.

ribbon copy. The first or original instrument typed or written where a carbon copy or copies were made by the same typing. 29 Am J2d Ev § 488.

Richard I. Richard the First, who was the king of England from September 23rd, 1189, until April 6th, 1199.

Richard II. Richard the Second, who was the king of England from June 22nd, 1377, until September 30th, 1399.

Richard III. Richard the Third, who was the king of England from June 26th, 1483, until August 22nd, 1485.

ricochet. The rebounding of a hurled object caused by striking a flat surface. The deflection of the course of a bullet upon striking a hard object.

Riddleberger Act. A Virginia statute passed in 1882, whereby it was proposed to reduce the bonded indebtedness of the state, because West Virginia had been carved out of it; and West Virginia flatly declined to assume any portion of the debt, chiefly because its people claimed that all the money had been spent in the other state.

ride. To sit on and be carried. To be carried, as in a vehicle. To be carried but at the same time to be in control, as in riding a horse or motorcycle. Silverstein v Commercial Casualty Ins Co. 237 NY 391, 143 NE 231, 35 ALR 32, 33.

rider. Literally one who rides, whether on a horse or in a vehicle. In legal usage, a sheet or sheets containing written, typewritten, or printed matter, attached to an instrument and intended to be considered a part thereof, the most frequent use thereof being in contracts of insurance. A part of the policy or contract of insurance, if incorporated, attached, or referred to in the instrument in so clear a manner as to leave no doubt of the intention of the parties in such respect. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 268. A new and unrelated enactment or provision included in a proposed legislative measure, usually intended to "ride" or slip through.

"A still more objectionable practice (than the passage of omnibus bills and logrolling) grew up, of putting what is known as a `rider' on the appropriation bills, and thus coercing the executive to approve obnoxious legislation, or bring the wheels of the government to a stop for want of funds." Commonwealth ex rel. Elkin v Barnett, 199 Pa 161, 48 A 976, 55 LRA 882.

ridgling. A horse with one testicle removed, the other one being undescended and hanging so high in the belly as not to be reached in the ordinary castration. Douglass v Moses, 89 Iowa 40.

riding. Taking a ride. A division of a county or shire in England, particularly the county of York, being a corrupt form of the word "trithing." 1 Bl Comm 116.

riding horse. A horse that is ridden rather than driven. A horse that carries a mount rather than pulls a vehicle.

A saddled and bridled horse on which the insured was riding, and from which he was thrown, receiving fatal injuries, was held not a vehicle within the meaning of an accident policy covering loss of life sustained by the wrecking or disablement of any vehicle in which the insured was riding, or by being accidentally thrown therefrom. Riser v Federal L. Ins. Co. 207 Iowa 1101, 224 NW 67, 63 ALR 292.

riding on platform. Accepting the platform for the time as the means of conveyance. Something more than being temporarily on the platform for a necessary or proper purpose. 29A Am 1 Rev ed Ins § 1257.

riding skimmington. A mock ceremony for shaming conjugal seducers, once common in parts of England.

The usual practice was to place effigies of the persons on a pole, in a cart or on a donkey and carry them through the public streets amid the jeers of the populace. See Cropp v Tilney (Eng) 3 Salkeld 225.

riding with or accompanied by a licensed driver. Accompanied by a person licensed to drive a motor vehicle, under such conditions and in such proximity that he can maintain supervision necessary for safety, and render assistance, if need be, with reasonable promptness. 7 Am J2d Auto § 105.

rien. (French.) Nothing; not.

rien culp. Not guilty.

rien culpable. See de rien culpable.

rien dit. He says nothing.

rien en arriere. Nothing in arrears.

rien luy doit. He owes him nothing.

Rien passa par le fait. Nothing passed by the deed.

riens. Same as rien.

riens en arriere. Nothing in arrears.

riens leur deust. Not their debt.

riens per descent. A plea in an action of ejectment raising the issue whether the plaintiff was seized of the land by inheritance. Wood v Jackson (NY) 8 Wend 9.

rifle range. An area equipped for training in and testing of marksmanship. A public place of amusement. 52 Am J1st Amuse § 64.

rigger. One who installs or repairs rigging.

rigging. Scaffolding and staging used in the construction of a building. Jones v Russell, 224 Ky 390, 6 SW2d 460. Equipment of a vessel, that is, ropes, cables, etc., by which the masts are supported and the sails handled. 48 Am J1st Ship § 71.

right. Adjective: Correct; fitting. In accord with law, morality, and justice. The opposite of left. Conservative. Noun: That to which a person has a just and valid claim, whether it be land, a thing, or the privilege of doing something or saying something, such as the right of free speech. Property, interest, power, prerogative, immunity, and privilege. Shaw v Proffitt, 57 Or 192, 109 P 584. In the broad sense, inclusive of remedy. UCC § 1-201(36).

"The word is one of the most deceptive of pitfalls it is so easy to slip from a qualified meaning in the premise to an unqualified one in the conclusion. Most rights are qualified. A man has at least as absolute a right to give his own money as he has to demand money from a party that has made no promise to him; yet if he gives it to induce another to steal or murder, the purpose of the act makes it a crime." American Bank & Trust Co. v Federal Reserve Bank, 256 US 350, 65 L Ed 983, 41 S Ct 499, 25 ALR 971, 977.

When we speak of a person having a right, we must necessarily refer to a civil right as distinguished from the elemental idea of rights absolute. We must have in mind a right given and protected by law, and a person's enjoyment thereof is regulated entirely by the law which creates it. If we were to consider these rights as absolute, nothing but chaos could result. See Nickell v Rosenfield, 82 Cal App 369, 255 P 760.

right and wrong test. A test, applied in determining responsibility for an act otherwise constituting criminal homicide, according to the ability or capacity of the accused to distinguish between right and wrong. 26 Am J1st Homi § 79. The test of criminal responsibility of a mentally deficient person according to whether the accused was laboring under such a defect of reason from disease of the mind as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing; or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 33. The test of criminal responsibility of an infant according to whether or not he knew that the act constituting the offense was wrongful. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 27. A matter of moral right and wrong or, according to other authorities, right or wrong within the intendment of law. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 35. A test according to whether the accused knows the difference between right and wrong, can understand his relation to others, and that which others bear to him, and has knowledge of the nature of his act so as to perceive its consequences to himself and others. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 34.

right arm of the law. A graphic expression denoting an injunction. DeWitt v Hays, 2 Cal 463, 469.

rightful subjects of legislation. Lawful, rather than proper or expedient, subjects. Territory ex rel. McMahon v O'Connor, 5 Dak 397, 41 NW 746.

right-hand lane. A traffic lane to the right, as a driver moving forward sees it, of the median line of highway or street.

right-hand side. The traffic rule of driving on the right side of the highway. 25 Am J1st High §§ 205 et seq. An illustration of a rule of the road. Reipe v Elting, 89 Iowa 82, 56 NW 285.

right heirs. Those persons on whom the law casts the real estate of a decedent or admits to participate in the distribution of his personal estate. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1371.

Before the abolition of estates tail, the term was used to distinguish the preferred heir, to whom the estate was limited, from the heirs in general, but since such abolition, the term is equivalent to "heirs." Brown v Wadsworth, 168 NY 225, 237, 61 NE 250.

right in personam. A right against the person.

right in rem. A right in a thing, whether by ownership of the whole or of an interest.

right of action. The right to bring suit in a particular case. A present right to commence and maintain an action at law to enforce the payment or collection of a debt or demand. Hibbard v Clark, 56 NH 155. A remedial right affording redress for the infringement of a legal right belonging to some definite person. Fielder v Ohio Edison Co. 158 Ohio St 375, 49 Ohio Ops 265, 109 NE2d 855, 35 ALR2d 1365. Precisely, the right of the plaintiff to sue, the essentials of which are (1) a good cause of action; (2) the performance of all conditions precedent; and (3) the existence of the right to maintain the action in the plaintiff unaffected by circumstances which will constitute in law a bar to the maintenance of the suit. 1 Am J2d Actions § 46.

right of alienation. The right to alienate or dispose of one's property in any lawful manner. The right to make any disposition of one's property not interfering with the existing rights of others, subject only to such limitations as are prescribed by law. 42 Am J1st Prop § 52.

right of appeal. The right to invoke the jurisdiction of an appellate court to obtain a review of a judgment, existing, not as an inherent or inalienable right, but as a right conferred by law under proper authority. 4 Am J2d A & E §§ 172 et seq.

right of approach. The right of a belligerent to visit a ship at sea to determine her nationality.

The right to visit and search merchant ships on the high seas, whatever be the ships, the cargoes, the destinations, is an incontestable right of the lawfully commissioned cruisers of a belligerent nation, but it should be exercised with as much regard to the safety of the vessel detained as is consistent with a thorough examination of her character and voyage. 56 Am J1st War § 152.

See access.

right of assembly. See assembly.

right of bench. The right of a particular judge to sit on an elevated seat.

right of burial. The right to the custody of the dead body of a person for the purpose of burial, such as the right of surviving spouse or child of the decedent. 22 Am J2d Dead B § 7. The privilege or license of the owner of a burial lot in a cemetery, the same to be enjoyed so long as the place continues to be used as a burial ground, subject to municipal regulation and control, and legally revocable whenever the public necessity requires. 14 Am J2d Cem § 31.

right of conscience. Liberty in religious belief and observance. State v Cummings, 36 Mo 363, 375.

right of curtesy. See curtesy.

right of discussion. See freedom of speech and of the press.

right of drainage. The jus aqueductus or easement which gives the owner of land the right to bring down water through or from the land of another, either from its source or from any other place. Nellis v Munson, 108 NY 453, 459, 15 NE 739.

The word includes a description of the perpendicular as well as the horizontal planes which bound the parcel of the house described by it, and excludes the outside of lateral walls, at least when they constitute the walls of another room, as clearly as the words "first floor" exclude the flooring of the story above it. Leominster Fuel Co. v Scanlon, 243 Mass 126, 137 NE 271, 24 ALR 1459, 1460.

rooming house. A house where bedrooms as such are furnished paying guests. Cedar Rapids Invest. Co. v Commodore Hotel Co. 205 Iowa 736, 218 NW 510, 56 ALR 1098.

See lodging house.

root. A stock of descent, -an ancestor in whom a succession of inheritance begins.

rooter. An instrumentality used to cut away and remove roots in sewers. State v Gootstein, 206 Minn 246, 288 NW 221, 125 ALR 715. A term in popular, if not the best, usage for one who supports and encourages an athletic team in its contests.

root of title. The conveyance or instrument which begins the chain of a land title.

roster. A roll or list of names. A list of names of persons in a unit of the armed forces. A word which is used instead of the word "register," and which comprehends a list of all military officers, connected with the regiment, brigade or division, and is kept as are records of orders and official communications. Matthews v Bowman, 25 Me 157, 167.

rotary drilling. Drilling a well by the rotation of a bit. A method frequently used in boring for oil. Boring is done by rotation of a bit attached to a steel pipe, which, when so used is called a "drill stem." A smaller bore, called a "rat hole," sometimes precedes, and is reamed out to obtain the full-sized hole. To aid operation, drilling fluid (mud laden water) is pumped into the upper end of the drill stem and escapes into the well at high velocity through holes in the bit. It rises through the space between the pipe and the earth walls of the well and carries to the surface cuttings made by the bit. It holds back and seals the penetrated formations. Hydrostatic pressure of the drilling fluid is very great and the fluid in a penetrated formation will not flow into the well unless it is under greater pressure. Honolulu Oil Corp. v Halliburton, 306 US 550, 83 L Ed 980, 59 S Ct 662.

rotation. The movement of the earth on its axis. Regular and recurring succession. The appropriation of water for irrigation purposes during a certain number of hours a day, a certain number of days a week, or a certain number of weeks a year, leaving the water free during the remaining time for appropriation for the use of other persons. 30 Am J Rev ed Irrig § 32.

rotation of names. A system employed in the preparation of ballots for an election in which the names of the candidates appear in a different order from district to district or precinct to precinct, even from county to county, the practice being employed to assure that no candidate has the advantage of being first on the ballot in every voting place. 26 Am J2d Elect § 207.

rotted. Spoiled and in a condition unfit for consumption. Robert L. Berger Co. v National Fire Ins. Co. 331 Ill App 102, 72 NE2d 727 (vegetables).

rotten boroughs. Small English boroughs which, notwithstanding their decline in population, returned members to parliament.

rotten clause. A clause in a marine insurance policy the usual form of which provides that if the ship is un-seaworthy on a regular survey, by reason of being rotten or unsound, the underwriters are discharged. Janney v Columbian Ins. Co. (US) 10 Wheat 411, 6 L Ed 354.

roturier. In old French law-one not noble. A free commoner; one who did not hold his land by homage and fealty, yet owed certain services.

rough minutes. Unofficial memoranda, made by the clerk of the court for his own convenience, of orders as they are announced by the court.

Such memoranda are made by the clerk for his own guidance in entering the orders of the court on the register and in the minutes of the court, and do not constitute an official record of the court, although they are sometimes useful as evidence. The book in which such memoranda are made by the clerk is often referred to as a "blotter." Brownell v Superior Court of Yolo County, 157 Cal 703, 109 P 91.

rough shadowing. A practice, sometimes resorted to by detectives, of openly and publicly following and watching a person, usually as a means most effective to prevent his going away from the place.

Such actual surveillance and pursuit may constitute an actionable wrong as suggestive of criminality, fatal to public esteem, and productive of public contempt or ridicule. Shultz v Frankfort Marine Acci & Plate Glass Ins. Co. 151 Wis 537, 139 NW 386.

roulette. A gambling game characterized by the use of a wheel for the determination of the winner.

roundhouse. A railroad shop, often having a turntable.

round trip. A trip by carrier which includes return to the point of departure.

See excursion; excursion rate.

roundup. A general gathering together of the cattle on a range which is had by the custom of cattlemen, for the purpose of branding calves and separating or "cutting out" the cattle of the several respective owners. Hebberd v Southwestern Land & Cattle Co. 55 NJ Eq 18, 27, 36 A 122.

roup. A disease of chickens. Hoarseness. An auction sale.

See articles of roup.

riot. A criminal offense consisting in the moving forward of an unlawful assembly toward the execution of its unlawful design. 46 Am J1st Riot § 7. A disorderly crowd, especially one fleeing in terror.

route. The course or location of a highway. 25 Am J1st High §§ 9 et seq. The course of a railroad line between its terminals. 44 Am J1st RR § 202. The line or course followed by a vessel proceeding from one port to another. 48 Am J1st Ship §§ 393 et seq. The course followed by a mail carrier or a route salesman. The course of a shipment of goods on the line or lines of a carrier or carriers. 13 Am J2d Car § 323.

See en route; through route.

route salesman. A salesman who follows a regular route in making sales to customers. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 103.

routing by carrier. Selection by the carrier of the route of transportation of a shipment of goods, it being obligatory upon the carrier to select the route with due regard to the rights and interests of the shipper. 13 Am J2d Car § 323.

roving commission rule. The rule that where an employee's duties require him to circulate in a general area with no fixed place or hours of employment, or to go to and from his home to various outside places of work, and his employer furnishes him with a motor vehicle to use in his work, it can be found that he continues in the service of his employer, for the purposes of the liability of his employer for an injury resulting from his negligence, until he actually reaches home. Anno: 52 ALR2d 365, § 7.

rowboat. A boat designed and constructed to be propelled by oars. Not a vessel within the meaning of a rule of navigation. Fischer v Camden etc. Ferry Co. 124 Pa 154, 16 A 634.

royal amercement. See amercement royal.

royal family. In a larger sense, all those persons who are by any possibility inheritable to the crown. In a narrower sense, only those who are within a certain degree of propinquity to the king.

After that degree is past, they fall into the rank of ordinary subjects, and are seldom considered any further, unless called to the succession upon failure of the nearer lines of consanguinity. See 1 Bl Comm 224.

royal fish. See fish royal.

royal fishery. An exclusive right of fishing in a navigable river. Arnold v Mundy, 6 NJL 1.

royal fishes. The grand fishes of the sea, such as whales and sturgeons.

These fishes belonged to the king by his royal prerogative, and no subject could take them with out the king's special grant. Arnold v Mundy, 6 NJL 1.

royal forest. A forest of the king, stocked with beasts of the chase.

royal fowls. Wild swan on the sea and arms of the sea.

royal franchise. A privilege, such as that of fishing in a navigable river, granted by the king. Arnold v Mundy, 6 NJL 1.

royal grant. A grant made by the king.

Such grants were always matters of public record and whether they were of lands, honors, liberties, franchises, or other matters, they were by charter or letters patent and usually directed or addressed by the king to all his subjects at large. See 2 Bl Comm 346.

royal mines. Gold and silver mines owned by the king at common law as within his prerogative, although on private property.

At common law, mines of gold and silver were by the prerogative of the sovereign, the property of the crown, though discovered in the land of private owners. They were termed "royal mines," and belonged to the sovereign wherever they were found. The prerogative is supposed to have originated as a necessary incident of the king's right of coinage in order to supply him with materials; metals in which there was no gold or silver, however, belonged to the proprietor of the soil. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 6.

royal prerogative. Those rights and capacities which the king enjoys alone, in contradistinction to others, and not those which he enjoys in common with any of his subjects. See 1 Bl Comm 239.

A New Jersey chancellor has defined the term as "that special pre-eminence which a sovereign has over all other persons, and out of the course of the common law, by right of regal dignity." In Great Britain the royal prerogative includes the right of sending and receiving ambassadors, of making treaties, and (theoretically) of making war and concluding peace, of summoning parliament, and of refusing assent to a bill, with many other political, judicial, ecclesiastical, etc., privileges. See Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v Bramwell (DC Or) 12 F2d 307.

royal river. Any navigable river of England so far as the tide ebbs and flows.

It is said to be a branch of the sea, so far as it flows, and the sea is under the dominion of the king. See Arnold v Mundy, 6 NJL 1.

"Lord Hale says that, as the common highways upon the land are the common land passage, so these kinds of rivers, whether fresh or salt, that bear boats or barges, are highways by water; and as the highways by land are called the 'king's highways,' so these public rivers for public passage are called 'royal streams,' not in reference to the propriety of the river, but to the public use." See New England Trout & Salmon Club v Mather, 68 Vt 338, 35 A 323.

royalty. The consideration payable by the lessee to the lessor under an oil or gas lease. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 65. The right to share in production of oil or gas. Anno: 4 ALR2d 497. Compensation for the privilege of drilling and producing gas and oil, consisting of a share of the product or of money representing such share. Alexander v King (CA10 Okla) 46 F2d 235, 74 ALR 174, cert den 283 US 845, 75 L Ed 1455, 51 S Ct 492. A fractional interest in the production of oil or gas created by the owner of the grant, either by reservation when an oil and gas lease is entered into, or by direct grant to a third person. La Laguna Ranch Co. v Dodge, 18 Cal 2d 132, 114 P2d 351, 135 ALR 546. A payment made by the lessee under a mining lease to the lessor, based on the output of the mine. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 48. A payment made for the privilege of using a patented invention. Carbice Corp. v American Patents Development Co. 283 US 27, 75 L Ed 819, 51 S Ct 334. The compensation to which an author is entitled for the use of his work under license. 18 Am J2d Copyr §§ 92 et seq. The status of a king, queen, or princess, even of one of nature's noblemen.

With respect to damages recoverable from an innocent trespasser who extracts coal or other solid mineral from the land, the terms "royalty" and "value" should not be regarded as synonymous but as alternative measures of recovery. Hughett v Caldwell County, 313 Ky 85, 230 SW2d 92. 21 ALR2d 373.

[1127]

Royalty, when used in connection with a license under a patent, means the compensation paid by the licensee to the licensor for the use of the licensor's patented invention. This is substantially Webster's definition except that the latter adds "usually at a certain rate for each article manufactured, used, sold, or the like." The word rate itself does not define or designate the "unit." There have been various units used in license contracts under patents such as "device manufactured," "period of use," or "device sold." Royalty provisions frequently provide for the payment of a fixed amount per device manufactured, sold, sold or used, or for fixed payments per unit of time. Hazeltine Corporation v Zenith Radio Corp. (CA7 111) 100 F2d 10.

royalty oil. Oil severed and set apart for the payment of the obligation to render royalty. Anno: 4 ALR2d 497.

royalty pool. An arrangement created by an agreement between landowners binding each of them to turn into a common fund or pool any oil found and produced on his land or royalties therefrom, such owners to share in certain proportions in the fund or pool thus accumulated, after payment of expenses of management. Hathaway v Porter Royalty Pool, 296 Mich 90, 295 NW 571, 138 ALR 955, and 296 Mich 733, 299 NW 451, 138 ALR 967.

royalty tax. A tax upon rents or royalties received.

Roy est l'original de tous franchises. The king is the origin of all franchises.

Roy n'est lie per ascun statute, si il vie solt expressement nosme. The king is not bound by any statute, if he be not expressly named to be so bound. See Broom's Legal Maxims 72.

r.s.v.p. Please reply; an abbreviation of the French "respondes s'il vous plait."

rubber stamp. A stamp of rubber used for affixing a signature or memorandum. A facetious term for one who does nothing of importance except at the direction of another.

rubber-stamp signature. A signature affixed to bill, note, 11 Am J2d B & N § 210, or will 57 Am J1st Wills § 248, by rubber stamp.

rubbish. Refuse. Waste materials collected by a municipality. 38 Am J1st Mun Corp § 614. Nonsense.

rubric. A chapter or section heading deriving from the Latin "ruber," meaning red, because of the early practice or custom of setting headings in red.

rudder. The instrumentality on a vessel by which the craft is steered. A comparable device on an aircraft.

rudely. In a rude manner; coarsely; uncivilly; violently. State v Lawrence, 19 Neb 307, 314.

rule. A statement of law appearing in an opinion of the court in support of the decision rendered in the case. An order of court; a specific direction or requirement of a court, made in a particular matter or proceeding, with respect to the performance of some act incidental thereto. 37 Am J1st Motions § 20. That which is prescribed or laid down as a guide to conduct; that which is settled by authority or custom; a regulation; a prescription; a minor law; a uniform course of things. South Florida Railroad Co. v Rhoads, 25 Fla 40, 5 So 633.

rule absolute. The rule or order of court granted upon a rule or order to show cause, where sufficient, cause is not shown. 37 Am J1st Motions § 38.

rule absolute for a new trial. An abbreviated form of entry of an order for a new trial.

The order of the court formerly entered would be "judgment vacated, verdict set aside and new trial granted." Fisher v Hestonville, Mantua & Fairmount Passenger Railway Co. 185 Pa 602, 605, 40 A 97.

rule against accumulations. A rule based on the English statute known as the Thelluson Act or on equivalent laws enacted in other jurisdictions rendering nugatory provisions for the accumulation of the rents and profits of property beyond a certain period provided by the statute. 41 Am J1st Perp § 44. A statutory rule against the adding of interest or income to a fund, pursuant to the provisions of a deed or will, for the purpose of preventing the expenditure thereof, beyond a limited number of years. 41 Am J1st Perp § 48.

rule against perpetuities. The rule which prohibits the creation of future interests or estates which by possibility may not become vested within a life or lives in being at the time of the testator's death or the effective date of the instrument creating the future interest, and twenty-one years thereafter, together with the period of gestation when the inclusion of the latter is necessary to cover cases of posthumous birth. 41 Am J1st Perp § 3.

rule against possibility on a possibility. The rule of the common law that in the grant or devise of property there could not be a possibility on a possibility, and which applied to prevent a limitation for the life of an unborn person with a limitation after his death to his unborn children to take as purchasers. 41 Am J1st Perp § 5.

rule against postponement of enjoyment. A rule of public policy which forbids unreasonable restrictions on the enjoyment of property.

The principle has become established that no restriction on the use and enjoyment of property will be enforced by the courts where the restriction is such that it is inconsistent with the interest or estate which has been granted or devised. 41 Am J1st Perp § 69.

rule against restraint on alienation. The principle that since one of the incidents of property is the right to convey it, the law does not permit a grantor or testator to fetter the ownership of grantee or devisee by imposing a restraint on alienation by him, thereby seeking to maintain control over alienation or use of the property. 41 Am J1st Perp § 66. A rule giving force to the principle that the conveyance of a title in fee simple carries with it as a necessary incident the right of free and unlimited alienation. 41 Am J1st Perp § 79.

rule against suspension of power of alienation. A rule under statute, distinct from the rule against perpetuities, which prohibits the imposing of conditions in rendering property inalienable beyond a period fixed by the statute. 41 Am J1st Perp § 2.

rule day. Return day. The day on which a defendant served by process is required to appear. The day on which an order or rule to show cause to made returnable.

rule in Dumpor's Case. See Dumpor's Case.

rule in Shelley's Case. In the classic statement of the rule as made in the case from which it derived its name: -when the ancestor by any gift or conveyance takes an estate of freehold, and in the same gift or conveyance an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately to his heirs in fee or in tail, the word "heirs" is one of limitation, not of purchase. 1 Coke 93b, 104b, 76 Eng Reprint 206, 234. In terms in which it is usually stated:-the principle that when a person takes an estate of freehold, legal or equitable, under a deed, will, or other writing, and in the same instrument there is a limitation by way of remainder, either with or without the interposition of another estate, of an interest of the same legal or equitable quality, to his heirs or heirs of his body, as a class of persons to take in succession from generation to generation, the limitation to the heirs entitles the ancestor to the whole estate. 28 Am J2d Est § 102. The rule that if one makes a limitation to another for life, with a remainder over mediately or immediately to his heirs, or the heirs of his body, the heirs do not take remainders at all, but the word "heirs" is regarded as defining or limiting the estate which the first taker has, and his heirs, if they take at all, take by descent, and not by purchase. Lytle v Hulén, 128 Or 483, 275 P 45, 114 ALR 587.

A grant or devise to a man "during his natural life, and then to his heirs, in a jurisdiction where the rule in Shelley's Case is in force, gives an absolute estate to the grantee or devisee, but in those jurisdictions where the rule in Shelley's Case is not in force, the grantee or devisee takes only a life estate. Doyle v Andis, 127 Iowa 36, 102 NW 177.

rulemaking. A judicial power in respect of promulgating rules regulating the practice in cases coming before the court. 20 Am J2d Cts § 82. Legislative power in fact but one of the functions exercised by an administrative agency. 1 Am J2d Admin L §§ 92 et seq.

rule nisi. A rule or order of court granted ex parte on the motion of one party, directing the other party to the action or proceeding to show cause why the rule should not be made absolute, such ex parte rule becoming absolute unless such cause is shown. 37 Am J1st Motions § 38.

rule of court. A rule governing procedure or practice promulgated by a court. 20 Am J2d Cts § 82. A term used in some jurisdictions for an order of court. 37 Am J1st Motions § 20.

rules of evidence. Principles which express the mode or manner of proving the facts and circumstances upon which a party relies to establish a fact in dispute. Kring v Missouri, 107 US 221, 27 L Ed 506, 2 S Ct 443. Rules provided by statute or by the agency itself in respect of the admissibility of evidence in a hearing before an administrative agency. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 377.

rules of navigation. The rules and regulations prescribing the manner in which vessels shall be controlled in operation generally or under particular circumstances and conditions. 48 Am J1st Ship §§ 244 et seq. Navigation rules for small watercraft. 12 Am J2d Boats § 14.

The rules which govern the steering and sailing of vessels of the United States and which are designed to indicate exactly what two vessels approaching with risk of collision shall do to avoid each other. They are based largely upon two fundamental principles, viz.: (1) Vessels meeting should generally keep to the right, other things being equal; and (2) the vessel better able to control her movements should give way to the other. The latter rule is all the more clearly applicable where the other vessel is not under control at all, or is in a crippled condition. 48 Am J1st Ship § 250.

rules of practice. In the broad sense, rules, whether of the common law, under statute, or prescribed and promulgated by the court, which govern the procedure in a case. Adjective law. rural homestead. Land constituting a homestead exempt from execution, located outside the limits of city or village. 26 Am J1st Home § 33.

rural land. Land devoted to the pursuit of agriculture, irrespective of its location with reference to a municipality.

rural way. A road or highway in a pastoral region.

rush. To move swiftly. To push or drive with speed or violence. To make a sudden assault. To assault a person by rushing at him from behind and violently pushing him forward. A dangerous and unlawful sport. Markley v Whitman, 95 Mich 236, 54 NW 763.

rust. A plant disease caused by fungi, especially destructive of wheat. A coating caused by oxidation. A reddish or brownish color.

As used in bills of lading exempting the carrier from damage to the goods by rust, the word is usually held to include rust caused by sea water, as well as rust resulting from atmospheric dampness. Broderick & Bascom Rope Co. v Luckenbach S.S. Co. 139 Wash 444, 247 P 937.

rusticos. See inter rusticos.

rusticum judicium. Same as rusticum jus.

rusticum jus. Rustic or simple justice.

"The application of an equal division of damages (in cases of marine collision) is said to be the 'rusticum jus.' That is to say, it is an application of that sense of fair dealing and of justice imbedded in our nature, the conclusions of common sense, of a mind 'abnormis sapiens' (one of nature's philosophers)." The Victory (CA4 Va) 68 F 395, 400.

rut. An elongated and comparatively narrow depression in the surface of a highway. 25 Am J1st High § 488. A fixed, although not necessarily the best, routine or course of practice. Sexual excitement of the male deer, goat, or sheep at regular periods.

rata. (Civil law.) Things which have been dug out of the soil, such as rock, coal and the like.

rye. A grain used in the making of flour and whisky. A short term for rye whisky.

Rylands v Fletcher. An English Case which has given its name to the principle that a person who, for his own purposes, brings on his land and collects and keeps there anything likely to do mischief if it escapes, must keep it on his own premises at his peril, and is prima facie liable for all the damage which is the natural consequence of its escape. (Eng) LR 3 HL 330.

S

s. An abbreviation for scilicet, although the more common abbreviation is "ss.-"

S 2. Abbreviation of south one half, used particularly in describing land according to the government survey, applying to a section or part of a section.

Sabbath. Sunday, --the one day of the week commonly set apart and observed in Christian countries as a day of public worship, relaxation, and refreshment. State v Williams, 26 NC (4 Ired L) 400, 402.

The word is not strictly synonymous with the word "Sunday;" Sabbath signifies Saturday, the seventh day of the week, the Jewish Sabbath; Sunday signifies the first day of the week, commonly called the Lord's Day. But by common usage, the terms are used indiscriminately to denote the Christian Sabbath, to wit, Sunday. See State v Drake, 64 NC 589, 591.

See Sunday law.

Sabbath breaking. Working, engaging in business, or the pursuit of other activity forbidden on the Sabbath. State v Popp, 45 Md 432, 437.

The malicious damage or injury to the property of an employer by an employee. State v Moilen, 140 Minn 112, 167 NW 345, 1 ALR 331, 332. Wilful, malicious, and intentional acts of force and violence or unlawful methods of terrorism which retard or slow up work by employees or others, or of any deliberate attempt to reduce profits of an employer as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership or control or to effect any political end. 47 Am J1st Sedit etc § 3.

sac. The jurisdiction of an ancient court-baron or manor court; the privilege of holding such a court within a manor.

sacaburth. A person who entered upon a fresh pursuit of his goods after they had been stolen.

saccabor. Same as sacaburth.

saccularii. (Roman law.) Cutpurses.

Both the Romans and the Athenians punished such offenders more severely than common thieves. By analogy it is observed that pickpockets in England were denied benefit of clergy. See 4 Bl Comm 242.

sack. A bag. Plunder. A fund in ha purposes of corruption.

"This meaning was doubtless first given to the word by vile and corrupt persons engaged in distributing and receiving such fund, and, when first used in that sense, might well have been regarded as a slang expression, of the meaning of which courts would not then have taken judicial notice, but it is now so frequently used to convey this particular meaning, that it can hardly be considered, when employed for that purpose, as simply the language of slang and understood only by the vulgar." See Edwards v San Jose Printing & Pub. Soc. 99 Cal 431, 436, 34 P 128.

sacquier. An arrameur or officer of a port who directed the proper loading and stowage of cargoes aboard ships.

sacra. The right of a Roman to participate in sacred celebrations sacramentales. Compurgators or persons who in a trial by wager of law swore to the innocence of the defendant.

sacramentum. (Roman law) An oath sacramentum decisionis. (Civil law.) The oath of decision, the voluntary and decisive oath whereby the suit could be decided, if the other party, not being able to prove his charge, offered to refer the decision to the oath of his adversary. If the latter refused, the charge was taken as confessed by him. See 3 Bl Comm 342.

sacramentum fidelitatis. The oath of fealty.

Sacramentum habet in se tres comites, veritatem, justitiam et iudicium; veritas habenda est in iurato, justitia et iudicium in iudice. An oath has within itself three concomitants, truth, justice, and judgment; truth should be observed in the person making oath and justice and judgment in the judge.

Sacramentum si fatuum fuerit, licet falsum, tamen non committit perjurium. A foolish oath, although it be false, does not convict one of perjury.

sacrifice. Giving up something for the sake of saving something else. The destruction of property to save other property from impending peril. The Roanoke (DC Wis) 46 F 297, 298.

See voluntary sacrifice.

sacrilege. The larceny of sacred things; as, from a church. Desecration. Mistreatment of things held sacred by others.

Sacrilegii instar est rescripto principis obviari. It is sacrilege to oppose the ruler's rescript. 1 Bl Comm 74.

sacrilegium. (Civil law.) Same as sacrilege.

sacrilegus. A sacrilegious person; a thief who stole sacred things.

Sacrilegus omnium praedonum cupiditatem et scelera superat. A sacrilegious person exceeds the cupidity and wickedness of all robbers.

sacristan. A sexton or caretaker of a church.

[1132]

sadism. The obtaining of satisfaction, even sexual pleasure, from hurting another. A species of insanity or mental disease in which the sexual instinct of the patient is abnormal or perverted. State v Petty, 32 Nev 384, 391, 108 P 934.

saeculare. See forum saeculare.

Saepe constitutum est, res inter alios iudicatas aliis non praejudicare. It has often been decided that things adjudged as between others (than the parties before the court) do not prejudice.

Saepenumero ubi proprietas verborum attenditur, sensus veritatis amittitur. When the propriety of the language is given attention, the true meaning is very often lost.

Saepe viatorem nova non vetus orbita fallit. The new or fresh wheel mark or road often deceives the traveler, not the old one.

saepius requisitus. Often requested or demanded.

saevitia. Cruelty constituting a cause for a decree of separation in an ecclesiastical court. Ring v Ring, 118 Ga 183, 44 SE 861.

safe. Noun: A repository for valuables, often proof against burglary as well as fire. Adjective: Not in danger; out of harm's way.
See adequately safe; reasonably safe.

safe bill. Such a bill of exchange as would be honored and paid by the drawer on using proper diligence. Warder v Whitall, 1 NJL 84.

safe-conduct. Protection against harm while traveling. Guided in safety. Taken through a locality or region with safety to the person.

See letters of safe-conduct.

safe-deposit box. A metal box, coming in various convenient sizes, with lock, usually a double lock, for the keeping of valuable papers in one's home or office or, as is often the case, in the vault of a bank or safe-deposit company.

safe-deposit business. Maintaining a fire and burglar proof vault wherein the safe-deposit boxes of customers may be deposited, subject to access at convenient times, under leases calling for the payment of rent, normally an annual rent, such business being engaged in by banks and safe-deposit companies.

safe-deposit company. Any person, bank, or corporation offering, for remuneration, to furnish on its premises, for the safekeeping of the personal property of others, safe-deposit boxes, access to contents of which involve the use of a key obtained by the individual depositor.

safeguard. A safety device, especially an appliance to minimize or obviate danger from electrical appliances and equipment. 26 Am J2d Electr § 46.

safe investment rule. A rule applied in the computation of the present worth of a decedent's expected future earnings.

Under the so-called "safe investment rule," the jury, in determining the present value of the decedent's expected future earnings, should use that rate of interest which, in the jury's considered judgment, is reasonable, just, and right under the circumstances, taking into consideration the evidence presented, the jury's knowledge of the prevailing interest rates within the limits prescribed by law in the area, and what rate of interest could fairly be expected from safe investments as made by a person of ordinary prudence, but without particular financial experience or skill. 22 Am J2d Dth § 125.

See prudent investment theory.

safekeeping. A deposit of money or other personal property whereunder a duty rests upon the person who receives the money or other property to keep it and return it intact upon demand. In effect, a special deposit. Wright v Payne, 62 Ala 340.

safe landing. The responsibility of a carrier in reference to the act of a passenger in alighting from the carrier's conveyance. Harries v Atlantic Greyhound Corp. 243 NC 346, 90 SE2d 710, 58 ALR2d 939.

safe-place statutes or ordinances. Statutes or municipal ordinances enacted to provide for the safety of buildings and premises devoted to public amusements or entertainments by imposing strict duties of maintenance and repair upon owners and proprietors. Anno: 126 ALR 1251; 4 Am J2d Amuse § 58.

safe place to work. See safe working place.

safe-pledge. A surety for a person's appearance in court.

safe port of discharge. A familiar condition in charter parties. A port which a vessel can enter safely with her cargo or at least a port having an anchorage where the vessel can lie and discharge her cargo afloat. 48 Am J1st Ship § 324.

safe return. See stipulation for safe return, safety appliance. A thing constituting a guard against danger or calculated to reduce the peril in a dangerous instrumentality. 38 Am J1st Negl § 90.

Safety Appliance Acts. Federal statutes designed to safeguard and protect railroad employees from injury or death from the hazards of their employment by requiring the railroads to equip their locomotives and cars with various safety devices, and imposing liability for death or injury predicated on failure to observe the requirements of such statute. 35 Am J1st M & S § 228. Statute regulating railroads in respect of the safety of their appliances and equipment for the protection of persons and properly transported. 44 Am J1st RR § 274.

safety device. A thing constituting a guard against danger or calculated to reduce the peril in a dangerous instrumentality. 38 Am J1st Negl § 90.

safety of way. The condition of street or highway considered in reference to use without danger to person or property from defects, obstructions, nuisances, and other sources of peril. 25 Am J1st High §§ 342 et seq.

safety statutes. Statutes intended to protect employees against death or injury in the course of employment by requiring the observance of precautions on the part of employers in reference to the condition of the working place and the instrumentalities of the work. Statutes meant to protect all types of employees, not being limited to those engaged in hazardous employment. Hillman v Northern Wasco County Peoples' Utility Dist. 213 Or 264, 323 P2d 664.

safety zone. A portion of street or highway set apart for the use of pedestrians, vehicular traffic being excluded, one of the most common of which is a zone established for pedestrians awaiting a bus or other public conveyance. 25 Am J1st High § 265. A zone for the safety and convenience of persons entering and leaving public conveyances, vehicular traffic being excluded. 7 Am J2d Auto § 197.

safe working place. The measure of the employer's duty in reference to the condition of the working place. A standard of care required of an employer in the terms of care exercised by prudent employers in similar circumstances, the degree depending upon the dangers attending the particular employment. 35 Am J1st M & S § 183.

The place in which an employee is directed to work is "safe," within the meaning of the law, when all the safeguards and precautions which ordinary experience, prudence, and foresight would suggest have been taken to prevent injury to the employee while he is himself exercising reasonable care in the service which he undertakes to perform. Peterson v Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. Co. 149 Iowa 496, 128 NW 932.

sages de la ley. Persons learned in the law.

sag hole. A depression of small area in which surface waters collect. 56 Am J1st Wat § 72.

sagging wire. A wire strung from pole to pole, particularly a wire carrying an electric current, which has dropped so far from level as to constitute a danger to pedestrians or drivers of vehicles.

sagibaro. A shrewd person; a judge.

said. Aforesaid; before mentioned; above mentioned.

sail. Verb: To put to sea. To start a voyage. To leave port with the intent to proceed on a voyage. Noun: A piece of canvas spread out from the mast of a vessel or boat to catch the wind, thereby applying the force of the wind to the moving of the craft through the water.

See under sail.

sailboat. Small watercraft propelled by the power of the wind upon a sail. Not a vessel within the meaning of a regulation governing places of anchorage. 12 Am J2d Boats § 1.

sailing instructions. Directions in writing carried by each master of a vessel sailing with others in a fleet or convoy, whereby the course, the meaning of signals, and havens in case of storm or distress, etc. are communicated to all persons in command of vessels.

sailing rules. Navigation rules for small watercraft. 12 Am J2d Boats § 14.

See rules of navigation.

sailor. A seaman. One of the crew of a vessel. An enlisted man in the Navy, an ordinary seaman in the merchant service, a commissioned officer of the Navy or a ship's officer. 57 Am J1st Wills § 662 (For the purposes of a statute relaxing the requirements of a statute in reference to the formalities of a will.)

sailor-mongers. Persons employing or operating with other lawless persons who board vessels upon entering a port, and by the help of intoxicants and the use of other means, often savoring of violence, get the crews ashore and sell them to outgoing vessels at an enormous price. United States v Sullivan (CC Or) 43 F 602, 604.

sailor's will. See seaman's will.

Saint Vitus' Dance. An affliction of the nervous system. Braun v Craven, 175 Ill 401, 51 NE 657.

sairement. An oath.

saisina. Same as seizin.

salable. See merchantable.

salable value. See market value.

Saladine tenth. See tenths.

salarium. (Civil law.) Salary; pay; wages; an allowance for provisions.

salary. Compensation for personal service. Papeay v Nolan, 157 Tenn 222, 7 SW2d 815, 60 ALR 408; compensation for services in a position or office. 35 Am J1st M & S § 63. Compensation for personal services, as distinguished from profits realized in commercial dealings, returns from capital, or returns from the labor of others. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 39. Compensation paid periodically for services. State ex ref. Murray v Riley (Sup) 45 Del 192, 70 A2d 712, 14 ALR2d 630. A fixed annual or periodical payment for services, depending upon the time, and not upon the amount, of services rendered. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 357.

In many situations, the words "wages" and "salary" are synonymous. In other instances, a distinction is recognized, "salary" connoting compensation for services more important than those for which "wages" are paid and also compensation on a basis more fixed and permanent than that of wages. 35 Am J1st M & S § 63.

salary-loan broker. One who engages in the business of making small loans on the security of wage assignments. 40 Am J1st Pawns § 9.

sale. A transfer of the property in a chattel for a consideration. Edward v Ioor, 205 Mich 617, 172 NW 620, 15 ALR 256. A transfer of personal property at a fixed money price payable in cash or in goods. Hartwig v Rushing, 93 Or 6, 182 P 177. A transfer of the title to personal property for money. 46 Am J1st Sales § 2. For tax purposes, a bona fide transfer of property for an amount of money or a money equivalent which is fixed or determinable. Gregory v Helvering, 293 US 465, 79 L Ed 596, 56 S Ct 266, 97 ALR 1355. A transfer of the general or absolute, as distinguished from a special, property in a thing, for a price in money. Union Secur. v Merchants' Trust & Sav. Co. 205 Ind 127, 185 NE 150, 95 ALR 1189. But sometimes inclusive, as in the case of a conditional "sale," of a transaction which does not effect an absolute transfer of title. Carter v Slavick Jewelry Co. (CA9 Cal) 26 F2d 571, 58 ALR 1043. A term inclusive of the sale of securities. People v Gillett, 243 Ill App 41. A term also applied very frequently to the transaction under a land contract as well as to a conveyance by deed for a consideration. Fox v Adrian Realty Co. 327 Mich 89, 41 NW2d 486, 15 ALR2d 1037.

See bulk sale; conditional sale; futures.

sale against the box. A short sale of stock by one who owns shares of the same stock.

If the stock declines, the seller can cover at a profit; if it increases in value, he can avoid loss by delivering the shares which he owns. Du Pont v Commissioner (CA3) 110 F2d 641, cert den 311 US 657, 85 L Ed 421, 61 S Ct 11.

See short sale.

sale and exchange. See power of sale and exchange.

[1134]

sale as is. A sale without express or implied warranty. 46 Am J1st Sales § 319. A sales term in the used car business. 8 Am J2d Auto § 654.

Where an article is sold "as is," the use of the expression implies that the buyer takes a chance in making the purchase. It implies that he is taking delivery of a thing in some way defective and upon the express condition that he trust to his own examination of it. In effect, the seller says "You look the article over, and, if you buy it, you do so at your risk." It imports a purchase and acceptance without guaranties. Ferguson v Koch, 204 Cal App 342, 261 P 489, 491.

sale at retail. A sale to a customer for his own use, or the use of his family, rather than for resale by him in the course of business. Anno: 139 ALR 376. A transfer of title to tangible personal property, made in the ordinary course of the transferer's business, for consumption or use by the purchaser or for any other purpose except that of resale by him in the ordinary course of business. Boyer-Cambell Co. v Fry, 271 Mich 282, 260 NW 165, 98 ALR 827.

A legislative definition of the phrase appearing in a sales tax statute will prevail over definitions which may be found in the dictionary, and render immaterial the question whether a transaction on which a tax is levied meets the technical requisites of a sale at common law or the meaning of the same phrase as used in other enactments. Anno: 139 ALR 373, 374.

sale by agent. A term of art; an actual sale made and completed on behalf of a principal; producing for the principal a purchaser able, ready, and willing to buy on the terms of the principal. Walker v Russell, 240 Mass 336, 134 NE 388.

sale by executor or administrator. A sale by a personal representative of assets of the decedent's estate. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad §§ 341 et seq.

sale by inch of candle. See sale by the candle.

sale by sample. A sale of goods under an executory contract in which the goods are unidentified other than by express or implied representation that they correspond to an exhibited sample. Anno: 12 ALR2d 528; 46 Am J1st Sales § 214.

See warranty in sale by sample.

sale by the acre. The sale of a specific area of land. 55 Am J1st V & P § 127.

A contract of sale by the acre is one wherein a specified quantity is material. Under such a contract the purchaser does not take the risk of any deficiency and the vendor does not take the risk of any excess. Anno: 153 ALR 7 et seq.

sale by the candle. Also called "sale by inch of candle," a form of auction sale consisting of offering the property for sale for such a length of time as would suffice for the burning of an inch of candle. Anderson v Wisconsin G. R. Co. 107 Minn 296, 120 NW 39.

sale by the tract. A sale of land designated as a particular tract, without particular reference to the number of acres contained therein. 55 Am J1st V & P § 127.

A sale by the tract or in gross is one wherein the boundaries are specified, but quantity is not specified, or if specified, the existence of the exact quantity specified is not material; each party takes the risk of the actual quantity varying to some extent from what he expects it to be. Newman v Kay, 57 W Va 98, 49 SE 926.

sale en masse. Sale of several things in one lot for one sum. A judicial sale of real estate where the property is sold without division and sale by parcels. 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S § 85. An execution sale of several distinct parcels of real estate, or several articles of personal property, together for a single gross sum. Anniston Pipeworks v Williams, 106 Ala 324, 18 So 111.

sale f.o.b. See free on board.

sale f.o.b. cars. See free on board cars.

sale for cash. See cash sale.

sale for debt. An execution sale. A sale by an administrator or executor to pay a debt or debts of the decedent. Bashore v Whisler (Pa) 3 Watts 490, 494.

sale for taxes. A sale of property to enforce the payment of taxes assessed thereon. 51 Am J1st Tax § 1022. A sale of a delinquent taxpayer's property after seizure in the collection of federal taxes, interest, and penalties. Internal Revenue Code §§ 6321, 6331.

sale in bulk. See bulk sale.

sale in gross. See sale by the tract; sale en masse.

sale in inverse order of alienation. The doctrine of inverse order of alienation. 35 Am J1st Marsh A § 32.

See inverse order of alienation.

sale in ordinary course of business. See in the ordinary course of business.

sale in parcels. An execution sale of personal property consisting of various articles in which each article is offered and sold separately. 30 Am J2d Exec § 343. An execution or judicial sale of real property consisting of separate tracts, or susceptible of division into separate tracts, in which the tracts are offered and sold separately. 30 Am J2d Exec § 344; 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S § 85.

sale in partition. See partition sale.

sale note. A note given by the purchaser at an auction sale to cover the price of his purchase.

See bought and sold notes.

sale of bond at par. See par.

sale of goods to arrive. See sale on arrival.

sale of intoxicant. See sale of liquor.

sale of land. An actual transfer of title to the land from grantor to grantee by an appropriate instrument of conveyance executed for a consideration in money or the equivalent of money. Keogh v Peck, 316 Ill 318, 147 NE 266, 38 ALR 1151. An effective transfer of the equitable title to real estate from vendor to vendee under a contract of sale. 55 Am J1st V & P § 356.

sale of liquor. The transfer of title to intoxicating liquor from one person to another by agreement and for a consideration, or, according to some authority a transfer by what is known as barter or exchange, even a transfer by way of a loan. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 210.

The weight of authority is that where several persons contribute to a fund and with it one of their number purchases liquor, which is divided among them in proportion to their several contributions, it is not a sale by the one to the others, but merely the division of the fruits of a joint and lawful enterprise. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 218.

sale of real estate. See sale of land.

sale of security. Any agreement whereby a person transfers, or agrees to transfer, either the ownership of or an interest in a security. A broad term, as used in Securities Acts, inclusive of an exchange of securities, a subscription for corporate stock, an extension of the maturity of investment certificates, and a contract by a corporation to dispose of shares rendered available upon an increase in the number of shares by proper action taken. 47 Am J1st Secur A § 19.

sale on approval. A sale of personal property, sometimes called a sale on trial, which is subject to a condition precedent, namely the approval of the buyer, the latter having the right to reject the property as not suitable to his needs upon timely notice given to the seller following a trial period. Smith v Clews, 114 NY 190, 21 NE 160. A bailment with an option to buy. Osborne v Francis, 38 W Va 312, 18 SE 591.

sale on arrival. A sale of goods to be shipped to the buyer from a distance which is conditional upon the arrival of the goods at the point where the buyer is to receive them.

A sale of goods "to arrive" or "on arrival," per or ex a certain ship, has been construed to be a sale subject to a double condition precedent, namely, that the ship arrives in port and that when she arrives, the goods are on board, and if either of these conditions fails, the contract becomes nugatory. 46 Am J1st Sales § 201.

sale on condition. An executory contract of sale, otherwise mutual and binding, the duty to perform which is subject to the happening of an event, upon which, if it does happen, the duty to perform becomes binding on both parties. 46 Am J1st Sales § 38.

See conditional sale; sale on arrival.

sale on contingency. Same as sale on condition.

sale on execution. See execution sale.

sale on option. See option; sale on approval.

sale on trial. See sale on approval.

sale or exchange. A transfer of property from one man to another in consideration of some price or recompense in value. 2 Bl Comm 446.

A mortgagor's conveyance of the realty to the mortgagee in consideration of a cash payment and cancellation of the mortgage and bond constitutes a sale within the terms of the mortgagor's contract with a broker giving the latter an exclusive right to sell and a right to compensation upon a "sale or exchange" of the property before a specified date. Whiteman v Fidei, 176 Pa Super 142, 106 A2d 644, 46 ALR2d 1113.

sale or exchange of capital asset. A method of realizing gain or loss for tax purposes, involving a complete, bona fide, and permanent transfer of an ownership interest, in other words, a transfer of economic reality. Gregory v Helvering, 293 US 465, 79 L Ed 596, 55 S Ct 266, 97 ALR 1355.

sale or return. A sale defeasible upon condition subsequent, title to the goods passing to the purchaser, subject to being divested out of him and revested in the seller by a return of the goods according to the terms of the contract. Anno: 52 ALR 596; 46 Am J1st Sales §480.

sale per aversionem. As defined by the Civil Code of Louisiana, -a sale of land "from one fixed boundary to another fixed boundary, when the object is designated by the adjoining tenements."

A sale by measurement is not such a sale. Minor v Daspit, 128 La 33, 38, 54 S 413. To constitute such a sale, there must be certain limits, or a distinct object described, as a field enclosed, or an island, because it is presumed that the parties have their attention fixed rather on the boundaries than the enumeration of the quantity. State v Buck, 46 La Ann 656, 670, 15 So 531.

Sales Act. A comprehensive statute covering sales of personal property. One of the Uniform Laws. 46 Am J1st Sales § 3. A uniform act specifically repealed by the Commercial Code. 15 Am J2d Com C § 6.

sales agent. A salesman. A soliciting agent of an insurance company.

salesbook. The record of sales made at an auction. 7 Am J2d Auct § 41. A day book in a retail business, kept under a system of bookkeeping employed very little in modern times.

sales contract. See contract to sell; executed contract of sale; executory contract of sale; land contract.

salesclerk. A salesman in a department store.

sales guaranteed. An expression used by merchants to mean that if the goods purchased by the buyer are not sold, or if they prove to be hard to sell, the buyer may return them to the seller and take credit for their value. Newell v Nicholson, 17 Mont 389, 43 P 180.

salesman. One engaged in making sales, usually for another but sometimes in his own business. One trained in the work or art of salesmanship and having the ability to sell. A person or company employed, appointed, or authorized by dealer to sell, offer for sale or delivery, or solicit subscriptions to or orders for, or dispose of inquiries about, or deal in any manner in, securities within the state, whether by direct act or through subagents. Commonwealth v Boyle, 108 Pa Super 598, 165 A 521. A laborer for the purposes of a statutory exemption from execution. Hamberger v Marcus, 157 Pa 133, 27 A 681.

See broker; traveling salesman.

sales manager. The head of the sales department of a business. A managing agent of a foreign corporation within the meaning of a statute concerning the service of process upon foreign corporations. 36 Am J2d For Corp § 560. A laborer for the purposes of an exemption from execution. Shriver v Carlin & F. Co. 155 Md 51, 141 A 434, 58 ALR 767.

Sales of Reversions Act. An English statute passed in 1867, providing in effect that no purchase, made bona fide and without fraud or unfair dealing, of any reversionary interest in real or personal estate, should be set aside merely on the ground of undervalue. McAdams v Bailey, 169 Ind 518, 82 NE 1057.

sales tax. A tax upon a sale or the receipts of a sale. 47 Am J1st Sales T § 1. A tax levied on, with respect to, or measured by, sales of tangible personal property. Polar Ice Cream & Creamery Co. v Andrews, 375 US 361, 11 L Ed 2d 389, 84 S Ct 378. A tax imposed on the sale of certain articles by the Internal Revenue Code. Internal Revenue Code §§ 4001, 4011, 4021, 4031, 4041. Sometimes a tax upon the sale of a luxury, such as jewelry, liquor, and so forth, while in other instances a tax upon the sale of commodities, even necessities. A tax variously construed, under the terms of the particular statute establishing it, as imposed upon the retailer, the consumer, the sale or transaction itself, or the business of selling goods. 47 Am J1st Sales T § 2. An excise rather than a property tax. 47 Am J1st Sales T § 2.

sale to arrive. Same as sale on arrival.

sale under power. A method of foreclosing a mortgage on real estate without resort to the court. 37 Am J1st Mtg § 647. A method of enforcing a chattel mortgage without the necessity of resort to judicial proceedings. 15 Am J2d Chat Mtg §§ 127 et seq. Broadly, any sale under a power of sale.

See power of sale.

sale with option. See option; sale on approval.

sale with strings. A sale with a right of repurchase or of obtaining a lease back.

Salic Law. The earliest barbarian code, in use by a Teutonic tribe in the fifth century. The law of the Franks.

saline springs. Salt springs.

Salique law. Same as Salic law.

saliva test. A test for intoxication, sometimes applied to the driver of an automobile, the purpose being to determine by chemical analysis the alcoholic content of his blood. 7 Am J2d Auto § 259.

salon. A large room for the reception of guests. In modern usage, a place for the reception of customers, especially in establishments for the sale of wearing apparel for women. A beauty parlor. A place for the exhibition and sale of works of art.

saloon. A room or place where intoxicating liquors are sold and drunk, commonly without meals. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 20.

See barroom.

saloon type body. The usual sedan or closed body of an automobile. Smith v Kliesrath, 28 Cust & Pat App 1293, 120 F2d 1015.

salting samples. The act of the vendor of mining property in mixing gold or other minerals in with samples of ore taken from the property, for exhibition to a prospective purchaser. Loaiza v Superior Court, 85 Cal 11, 24 P 707.

salt meadows. Meadows over which the ordinary tides do not flow, but which are overflowed by unusually high tides. Church v Meeker, 34 Conn 421, 423.

salt silver. An ancient tax or fee paid by tenants to the lord of the manor for the privilege of receiving salt from his larder.

salt springs. Springs of water heavy in content of salt.

See salt well.

salt well. A well characterized by the salty content of the water taken therefrom. Williamson v Jones, 43 W Va 562, 27 SE 411. A well from which salt brine is procured and used for the purpose of making salt. Clifton v Montague, 40 W Va 207, 21 SE 858.

salus. Health; safety; welfare.

Salus populi est suprema lex. The welfare of the people is the highest law.

Salus populi suprema lex est. The welfare of the people is the highest law; a maxim constituting the foundation of all civil government and an age-old ruling principle of jurisprudence. Ruona v Billings, 136 Mont 554, 323 P2d 29.

On this maxim rests the principle that one may not so use his property as unreasonably to injure others. Cook County v Chicago, 311 Ill 234, 142 NE 512, 31 ALR 442, 445.

Salus populi suprema lex esto. Let the welfare of the people be the highest law.

Salus reipublicae suprema lex. The welfare of the state is the highest law.

The idea that in effect the morality of corporations is opportunism pure and simple was anciently embodied in the maxim, and its doctrine should be very sparingly resorted to by a state which has a written constitution or by a business corporation created by a written charter. Cook v American Tubing & Webbing Co. 28 RI 41, 65 A 641.

Salus ubi multa consilia. There is safety in many counsels.

Salus ubi multa consilarii. There is safety in many counselors.

salutem. Greeting.

salute. An act of greeting. A gesture of respect.

salute to flag. See flag salute.

salvage. A reward for services successfully rendered in saving property from maritime danger by one under no obligation or duty to render the services. Three States Lumber Co. v Blanks (CA6 Tenn) 133 F 479. The compensation allowed to persons by whose voluntary assistance a ship at sea, or her cargo, or both, have been saved in whole or in part from impending sea peril, or in recovering such property from actual peril or loss, as in cases of shipwreck, derelict or recapture. 47 Am J1st Salv § 2. Property of some value obtained from the remains of properties subjected to catastrophe, such as fire or flood. Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v Hays, 57 Okla 266, 156 P 673. A comparatively small amount recovered from an investment which has gone dead. Anno: 103 ALR 1286, s. 116 ALR 1356, 1357.

salvage corps. An organization, normally maintained by private enterprise, the purpose of which is to have members in attendance at a fire for the particular purpose of saving property and preserving it from the elements until the owner or owners can assume care of it.

salvage lien. The lien of the salvors upon ship or cargo saved from a peril of the sea such securing the payment of salvage to them. 47 Am J1st Salv § 29. A maritime lien of the highest rank.

salvage loss. A marine insurance term signifying a total loss of the property insured diminished by salvage, which takes place in relation to goods when there is either an absolute or a constructive total loss of the subject insured but some remains of the property have been recovered by the insured. Devitt v Providence Washington Ins. Co. 61 App Div 390, 401, 70 NYS 654.

salvage measured by wages. A reward in nature of salvage made to members of the crew of the vessel saved. 47 Am J1st Salv § 20.

salvage services. Services entitling to salvage; useful services of any kind rendered to vessel or cargo exposed to imminent peril from dangers of the sea. 47 Am J1st Salv § 9.

salva guardia. See de salva guardia.

salvor. One who renders or performs salvage service. 47 Am J1st Salv § 2.
See cosalvor; salvage.

salvor's lien. Same as salvage lien.

salvos plegius. A safe-pledge.

same. Adjective: Alike in all respects. Identical. Pronoun: The above-mentioned; the before-mentioned.

The word does not always mean "identical," "not different," or "not other." It frequently means of the kind or, species, though not the specific thing. It is often used as a substitute for that which was used before, and is employed in the sense of a pronoun. In this sense it is very frequently used in pleadings and in legal documents. To deliver policies and receive premiums upon the same is equivalent to, to deliver policies and receive premiums upon them, or, substituting the noun for its representative pronoun, to deliver policies and receive premiums on policies. Crapo v Brown, 40 Iowa 487, 493.

same contract or transaction. For the purpose of joinder of causes of action, one transaction having a substantial unity with another or other transactions. 1 Am J2d Actions § 107. A preponderating doctrine in the law of larceny, that the larceny of articles belonging to different owners, if committed at the same time and place, constitutes but one offense; and that while the state can, if it chooses, include all these offenses in one indictment, yet if it chooses to indict the thief for stealing only one of the articles belonging to one of the owners, it cannot subsequently be allowed to indict for the larceny of any other of the articles so taken, for it was taken in the same transaction and that would be double jeopardy for the same offense. Dean v State, 9 Ga App 571, 71 SE 932. For the purposes of a counterclaim, the contract or transaction which is the foundation of plaintiff's suit. Benton County State Bank v Nichols, 153 Or 73, 54 P2d 1166.

In actions ex contractu, a counterclaim, to be one arising out of the same contract or transaction, must be a cause of action in favor of a defendant against a plaintiff which might have arisen out of the original transaction, in view of the parties, and which, at the time the contract was made, they could have intended might, in some event, give one a claim against the other for compliance or noncompliance with its provisions. Krausse v Greenfield, 61 Or 502, 123 P 392.

Such a "transaction" is not limited to the facts set forth in the complaint, but includes the entire series of acts and mutual conduct of the parties in the business or proceeding between them which formed the basis of the transaction. 20 Am J2d Countcl § 67.

same invention. The invention for which a patent will be reissued, being the identical invention covered by the original patent. 40 Am J1st Pat § 114.

An institution for the recuperation and treatment of persons suffering from physical or mental disorders. United Cerebral Palsy Asso. v Zoning Board, 382 Pa 67, 114 A2d 331, 52 ALR2d 1093.

sanctio. (Civil law.) Same as sanction.

Sanctio justa, jubens honesta et prohibens contraria. (Civil law.) A just sanction, commanding that which is honorable and forbidding the contrary.

sanction. Approval. Authority. Something giving force and authority. A coercive measure. That part of a law which signifies the evil or penalty which will be incurred by the wrongdoer for his breach of it. 50 Am J1st Stat § 151. As used in the Federal Administrative Procedure Act: -the whole or part of any agency (1) prohibition, requirement, limitation or other condition affecting the freedom of any person; (2) withholding of relief; (3) the imposition of any form of penalty or fine; (4) destruction, taking, seizure or withholding of property; (5) assessment of damages, reimbursement, restitution, compensation, cost, charges or fees; (6) the requirement, revocation, or suspension of a license; or (7)

sanction of oath. A belief that God will punish falsehood, whether in this world by remorse of conscience or other method or by a means reserved for the future state of being in the next world. 39 Am J1st Oath § 5.

sanctuary. A sacred place where in older times a person who had committed a crime was immune from arrest. A church or temple. That part of a church in which the main altar is located.

sand. A species of stone. Wright v Carrollton Gravel & Sand Co. (Ky) 242 SW2d 751, 26 ALR2d 1449. Disintegrated rock.
See gravel.

sanding. The duty of a carrier to sprinkle sand upon snowy or icy spots on steps or platforms on its premises. 14 Am J2d Car § 1054. The process of putting sand on icy or snowy street or highway. Smoothing a board by rubbing it with sandpaper. Removing old paint or varnish.

sand pit. A digging upon land where sand in salable quantities is obtainable. Williamson v Jones, 43 W Va 562, 27 SE 411.

Sandwich Islands. The name by which the islands which comprise the present state of Hawaii were formerly known.

sane. Possessed of sanity.
See sanity.

sane memory. Good memory; sound understanding.
See sound mind and memory.

sane or insane clause. A clause in a life insurance policy extending the exception of suicide to intentional self-destruction by an insane as well as by a sane person, regardless of the moral or criminal quality of the act. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1147.

sang. (French.) Blood; consanguinity.

sanguine. See demi-sanguine.

sanguinem emere. To buy one's blood—a redemption or purchase by a villein of his blood or tenure that he might become a freeman.

Sanguinis conjunctio benevolentia devincit homines et caritate. The tie of kinship overcomes men through benevolence and affection.

sanguis. Blood; blood-relationship; consanguinity.

sanipractor. One who practices a system of healing without drugs. Anno: 86 ALR 631, 632.

sanis. A form of punishment for crime which at one time prevailed among the Greeks, and which consisted in fastening the culprit to a piece of wood.

sanitarium. Same as sanatorium.

sanitary. The absence of source of infection or disease. In a state of sanitation. In the interest of sanitation. For the preservation of health by removing sources of infection and disease. Re Theresa Drainage Dist. 90 Wis 301, 305, 63 NW 288.

sanitary district. An improvement or assessment district established with reference particularly to improvements, such as sewers and sewage disposal plants, in the interest of sanitation and health. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 35. A municipal corporation organized to secure, preserve, and promote the public health. People ex rel. Longenecker v Nelson, 133 Ill 565, 579.

sanitary regulations. Building regulations imposed in the interest of health. 13 Am J2d Bldgs §§ 29, 30. Regulations intended to prevent the spread of communicable diseases. 25 Am J1st Hlth § 25.

sanitation. The practical application of science in protecting health by eliminating sources of contagion and disease-producing conditions; hygienic measures in sewage disposal and drainage projects. Oakland County Drain Comrs. v Royal Oak, 325 Mich 298, 38 NW2d 413, 11 ALR2d 1122.

sanity. Soundness of mind; mental competency.

A person is sane when he is of sound mind; when he is possessed of a mind which is not that of an imbecile and which is healthy. See Robinson v Adams, 62 Me 369.

Sanity is not an ingredient of crime. It is a condition precedent of all intelligent action, as well benevolent as nefarious. It is a quality of the actor, not an element of the act. It is a pre-existing fact which may be taken for granted as implied by law and general experience. We do not infer sanity from the criminal act as we do malice and premeditation. Sanity is a premise, not a conclusion. The sanity of a human being is an assumed fact, never depending upon evidence until it is disputed. State v Quigley, 26 RI 263, 58 A 905.

See insanity; presumption of sanity.

sapling. A tree too small to be useful for any good purpose when cut; a part of the undergrowth in a forest. 34 Am J1st Logs § 2.

sans ceo que. Without this, that.

sans impeachment de wast. Without impeachment of waste, -a clause in a deed or lease signifying that the grantee or lessee shall not be liable for waste. See 2 Bl Comm 283.

sans jour. Without day.

sans nombre. Without number.

sans recours. Without recourse.

sanus. Sane; whole; sound; in a healthful state, whether mind or body. Den v Vancleve, 5 NJL 695, 775.

sapiens. (Latin.) Wise; sensible.

Sapiens incipit a fine, et quod primum est intentione, ultimum est in executione. A wise man begins at the end, and that which is first in intention is last in execution.

Sapiens omnia agit cum consilio. A wise man does everything with deliberation.

sapientes, fideles, et animosi. Wise, faithful, and brave. See 1 Bl Comm 408.

sapientia. (Latin.) Wisdom; prudence.

Sapientia legis nummario pretio non est aestimanda. The wisdom of the law is not to be estimated or computed in money value.

Sapientis judicis est cogitare tantum sibi esse permissum, quantum commissum et creditum.

A wise judge should only permit himself to think in so far as a matter is committed and intrusted to him.

sart. Wooded land which has been converted into arable land.

sasine. Same as seizin.

satisdare. (Civil law.) To give "satisdatio."

See satisdatio.

satisdatio. (Civil law.) A security given by the defendant in an action for the payment of any judgment that may be rendered against him. See 3 Bl Comm 291.

satisfaction. The discharge of an obligation; the payment of a debt. A fulfillment of needs. A performance of the terms of an accord. Harrison v Henderson, 67 Kan 194, 72 P 875.

See accord and satisfaction; discharge; release.

satisfaction by legacy. The discharge of an inter vivos obligation by bequest made by the will of the obligor in favor of the obligee, as where a legacy satisfies a covenant contained in a marriage settlement. Anno: 26 ALR2d 15.

satisfaction contract. A contract which provides in terms that performance by the one party must be satisfactory to the other. United States Heat & Power Corp. v Lachman, 235 Mich 75, 209 NW 187.

See satisfaction with performance.

satisfaction in fact. See technical release.

satisfaction of judgment. Compliance with or fulfillment of the mandate, such ordinarily being the payment of the money due thereunder. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 990. The release of a judgment as "paid" or "satisfied."

As used in a clause of a liability insurance policy requiring action to be brought against the insurer within a certain time after the judgment against the insured has been paid and satisfied, the word "satisfied" is synonymous with the word "paid." It means satisfaction in fact, the payment of the judgment in full, and not the entry of that satisfaction upon the record. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1798.

satisfaction of mortgage. The payment of a mortgage. 36 Am J1st Mtg § 406.

satisfaction of the court. Convincing the court. Removing doubt from the mind of the court.

Where a fact is to be established to the satisfaction of the court, the words "to the satisfaction of the court" do not mean simply the sufficiency of the proof, but go to the quieting of the mind of the judge, -go to the freedom to act according to his judgment on the question, and this is particularly the case where he is to judge as to his own bias and prejudice. State v Chapman, 1 SD 414, 47 NW 411.

satisfaction of the jury. Convincing the jury; removing doubt from the minds of the jurors.

To prove a thing to the satisfaction of a jury means that the jury must be satisfied that the thing existed. To satisfy the mind, according to the common notion of mankind, is to free it from doubt, to set it at rest. This is the primary meaning of the word, according to all the lexicographers, when used in this connection. To accomplish this result -to "satisfy" a body of men of the truth of a disputed fact-requires much more than a preponderance of the evidence. Clear and convincing evidence must be adduced in its favor. Kelch v State, 55 Ohio St 146, 45 NE 6.

satisfaction with performance. A determination to be made by objective criteria; the question whether the owner, as a reasonable man, should have been satisfied with the work. Anno: 44 ALR2d 1120, § 5[b]; 13 Am J2d Bldg Contr § 30. A determination entirely subjective, the owner or contracting party entitled to performance having the right to pass on the performance and determine whether or not it is satisfactory, without the necessity of disclosing the reasons for the determination made by him, provided he acts in good faith. United States Heat & Power Corp. v Lachman, 235 Mich 75, 77, 209 NW 187.

The word "satisfactory" is employed in two different senses when applied in contracts to make or supply something to the "satisfaction" of a person, or a thing "satisfactory" to him. If the article to be made or supplied is one which involves personal taste or feeling, such as a dress or a portrait, the person to be satisfied is the sole judge, and the article must conform to his peculiar taste or feelings; but if it does not involve such taste or feelings, as a keg of nails, or a piece of machinery, the article need only be "reasonably" satisfactory. Pennington v Howland, 21 RI 65, 41 A 891.

satisfactory deal. A transaction by a broker which his principal, as a reasonable man, should accept; a transaction negotiated by a broker which his principal can not refuse so as to preclude liability to the broker for the commission to which the latter is otherwise entitled under the terms of the contract between them. Mullally v Greenwood, 127 Mo 138, 29 SW 1001.

satisfactory evidence. Same as satisfactory proof.

satisfactory goods. See satisfaction with performance.

satisfactory indorser. An indorser for accommodation who is satisfactory to the payee, subject to the qualification that the payee is not to reject capriciously. Cutter v Cutter, 48 NY Super Ct (16 Jones & S) 470, 475.

satisfactory note. A promissory note given by a person of undoubted solvency or supported by surety or indorser of undoubted solvency. 46 Am J1st Sales § 179.

satisfactory proof. Convincing evidence. Sufficient evidence. Evidence such as to satisfy an unprejudiced mind of the truth. 30 Am J2d Ev § 1080.

To be satisfied of the truth of anything implies the absence of a reasonable doubt, but it does not imply the absence of belief that there is a possibility that the thing is not true. The jury may believe there is a possibility of the defendant's innocence, and yet properly convict him; for although it may be possible he was innocent, yet they may be entirely satisfied that he was guilty. People v Phipps, 39 Cal 326, 334.

[1140]

In cases involving statutes requiring "satisfactory" proof of genuineness of handwriting offered for comparison, it has generally been held that the proof required is such as would require the court to find as a fact that the writing was genuine. Anno: 41 ALR2d 578.

See satisfaction of jury.

satisfactory proof of loss. A proof of loss made to an insurer, sufficient to make out a prima facie case and to enable the insurer to form an intelligent estimate of its rights and liabilities. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1403.

satisfactory title. A title to real estate which is satisfactory to the other party to a contract, subject only to the limitation that he must act in good faith in considering the state of the title. Anno: 47 ALR2d 457; 52 Am J1st Exch P § 23. A title to real estate which is satisfactory by objective standards, being a good or marketable title; such a title that no reasonable objection can be made thereto. Anno: 47 ALR2d 457.

satisfied. Paid. Philadelphia Pickling Co. v Maryland Casualty Co. 89 NJL 330, 98 A 433. Approving of performance, having received satisfaction.

See satisfaction; satisfactory proof.

proceedings, penalties, etc., from the annihilation which would result from unrestricted repeal. State ex rel. Crow v St. Louis, 174 Mo 125, 73 SW 623.

saving property doctrine. The proposition that a defendant who by his negligence has endangered the property of another is liable for personal injuries incurred by the owner, or person in charge of such property, in an effort to save it, if the effort is impelled by the necessity of the occasion, and is reasonably prudent under the circumstances. 38 Am J1st Negl § 81. The rule that it is not contributory negligence per se for one to expose himself to some danger in an endeavor to save his own property, the property of his employer, or the property of a third person. 38 Am J1st Negl § 230.

savings account. An account of a savings bank customer. An account between a savings bank and a depositor, which differs from an ordinary account in a commercial bank in two respects: (1) the amount on deposit bears interest, subject to conditions as to the time of deposit, and (2) the right of withdrawal may be subject to an advance notice of a prescribed number of days, weeks, or months. An account in a commercial bank under conditions respecting interest and withdrawals which distinguish it from the ordinary account in such a bank.

savings and loan association. An association chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to encourage thrift and promote the ownership of homes by accepting deposits to bear interest and making loans for home financing. 13 Am J2d B & L Assoc § 10.

See building and loan association.

Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. A corporation created by Congress to insure the accounts of all federal savings and loan associations and the accounts of building and loan, savings and loan, homestead associations, and co-operative banks organized and operating under state law or the laws of a district, territory, or possession in which they are chartered. 13 Am J2d B & L Assoc § 12.

savings bank. A term of dual meaning. A banking institution in the hands of disinterested persons, the profits of which inure wholly to the benefit of the depositors in dividends or in a reserve surplus for their greater security. A bank in which the depositor becomes a creditor of the bank for the amount of the deposit and receives such interest on the deposit as the trustees or directors of the bank may agree to pay, and in which the profits belong to the corporation and its stockholders. In a sense known throughout the country, a bank which accepts and pays interest on deposits of savings, subject to whatever conditions may be prescribed as to the time such savings remain on deposit. 10 Am J2d Banks § 4.

savings bank check. An anomaly of words, being nothing more than a slip denoting a withdrawal of funds from a savings account.

savings bond. A United States bond payable to a designated person, sometimes with an alternative payee, payable in progressively larger amounts the longer it is held.

Under the rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission, scale tolerance beyond one hundred pounds is not to be permitted. Smith v Louisville & Nashville R. Co. 202 Iowa 292, 295, 209 NW 465, 466.

scaling timber. Measuring or estimating the number of board feet of lumber a log or tree will produce. Kennedy v South Shore Lumber Co. 102 Wis 284, 288.

scalp. A short deal or transaction, that is, one which is intended to be closed out promptly with a profit. McCormick v Nichols, 19 Ill App 334. The skin on the top and back of the head.

scalper. See scalping; ticket scalping.

scalping. Removing the scalp or a part of the scalp of a person. The making of a short-term profit by an adviser in respect of investments through taking advantage of the market reaction to advice given by him. Securities & Exchange Com. v Capital Gains Research Bureau, Inc. 375 US 180, 11 L Ed 2d 237, 84 S Ct 275. Taking advantage of a customer in charging him an excessive price. Any form of business practice in seeking an unmerited profit.

See ticket scalping.

scandal. An act or condition which leads to disgrace as shocking to the community or offensive to the feelings of the public. Defamation.

See scandalous matter.

scandalous matter. Allegations in a pleading which are both impertinent and reproachful. Woods v Morrell (NY) 1 Johns Ch 103, 106. Impertinent allegations which are damaging to the reputation of the person aspersed. 27 Am J2d Equity § 187.

The rule is sometimes stated that no person is obliged to reanswer matter of "scandal" in responding to a bill of discovery, but the term "scandal" has a limited and technical meaning in this connection, referring only to scandal and infamy arising from crime. Skinner v Judson, 8 Conn 528.

scandalum magnatum. The slander of great men.

The term was used in early English law to designate words spoken in derogation of a peer, a judge, or other great officer of the realm. Such slander was considered a more heinous offense than the slander of a common person. The doctrine of scandalum magnatum, however, has long been obsolete in England, being finally abolished by statute. It is said to be unknown in the United States. 33 Am J1st L & S § 3.

scandalmonger. One who maliciously repeats and disseminates scandal. 33 Am J1st L & S § 45.

scandal sheet. A newspaper mainly devoted to the detailing of violations of moral obligations through crime, acts of lawless violence, or conduct induced by lust, especially one in which the stories and articles are illustrated, or purport to be illustrated, by pictures. 33 Am J1st Lewd etc § 12.

scan. mag. An abbreviation of scandalum magnatum.

scapegoat. One who bears the blame, sometimes taking the punishment, for another person's offense.

scarlet fever. A communicable disease, particularly of children, characterized by a rash and fever, usually accompanied by sore throat. 25 Am J1st Hlth § 25.

scattering votes. Votes cast at an election for persons whose names do not appear on the printed ballot but which have been written in by the voters. State ex rel. Ragan v Junkin, 85 Neb 1, 122 NW 473.

scavage. A toll exacted of foreign merchants by town officers for showing or exposing goods for sale in the town. See 1 Bl Comm 316.

scavenger. A person employed to remove filthy matter, particularly one who cleans out privy vaults. State ex rel. Moriarity v McMahan. 69 Minn 265, 72 NW 79.

scenario. A complete plot for a moving picture, reduced to writing, with the addition of essential details for acting the play. Anno: 23 ALR2d 275, § 7.

scene of accident. Place of accident.

scenic railway. An amusement device; a roller coaster; a miniature railway for children.

See roller coaster.

schedule. Noun: A small scroll; a writing additional or appendant; an inventory. A writing to be sworn to and filed by a bankrupt, showing the amount and kind of his property, the location thereof and its money value, in detail; a list of all his creditors, showing their residences or places of business, if known, or if unknown, that fact to be stated, the amount due to or claimed by each of them, the consideration thereof, the security held by them, if any, and what claims, if any, are contingent, unliquidated, or disputed; and a claim for such exemptions as he may be entitled to—all in triplicate, one copy for the clerk, one for the referee, and one for the trustee. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 367. A list of assets and liabilities to be filed by an insolvent in insolvency proceedings. 29 Am J Rev ed Insolv § 15. Verb: To prepare a list or inventory.

See time schedule; time table.

schedule in bankruptcy. See schedule.

schedule injuries. Injuries compensable under a workmen's compensation statute for specific sums, regardless of the fact that the workman has not been incapacitated to perform his accustomed duties and has suffered no loss of earnings or earning capacity. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 287.

schedule of exempt property. The list of property selected by a debtor as that which he claims exempt from execution. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 146. A part of the schedule to be filed by a bankrupt. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 367.

scheme. A plan or artifice; a plot. A combination of thoughts, theories, or the like, connected and adjusted by design; a systematic plan; a system. Weiss v United States (CA5 La) 120 F2d 472. An outline of an article, for example, 9 Am J2d Bankr page 1.

scheme to defraud. A plan designed or concocted for perpetrating a fraud.

As the term is used in the Federal statutes making criminal the use of the mails for the purpose of executing a scheme to defraud, if the scheme or artifice in its necessary consequence is one which is calculated to injure another, to deprive him of his property wrongfully, then it is to defraud within the meaning of the statute. See Horman v United States (CA6 Ohio) 116 F 350.

schireman. An earl.

An earl is a title of nobility so ancient that its origin cannot be clearly traced. Among the Saxons they were called ealdormen (elder men) with the same meaning as the word senior or senator among the Romans. And the Saxons called them "schiremen" because they had each of them the civil government of a several division or shire. See 1 Bl Comm 398.

schism. A division of the membership of a society respecting the conduct of the organization or the principles which it espouses. A breach of unity among people of the same religious faith. 45 Am J1st Reli Soc § 65. A separation of a religious society into parts, without change of faith or ulterior relations. McKinney v Griggs, 68 Ky (5 Bush) 401.

schizophrenia. A mental disorder, not necessarily an impairment of intelligence, characterized by hallucinations, indifference, and delusions of omnipotence and persecution. Not necessarily insanity constituting a defense in an action for divorce. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 409.

scholarship. Demonstrated ability to acquire knowledge. A gift of money or other aid, as by a grant of free tuition, to help a particular student maintain the financial burden of attending college or university, sometimes under conditions, such as services of the donee in teaching or as a laboratory assistant or participation by the donee in athletics. 15 Am J2d Colleges § 18.

scholarship record. A public record of the progress and grades of pupils in public schools. Valentine v Independent School Dist. 187 Iowa 555, 174 NW 334 6 ALR 1525. The rating of a student according to his grades or other attainments. 15 Am J2d Colleges § 27.

school. A place for systematic instruction in any branch or branches of knowledge; a place where instruction is imparted. 47 Am J1st Sch § 2. A place where instruction is imparted, irrespective of the number of persons being taught. People v Levisen, 404 Ill 574, 90 NE2d 213, 14 ALR2d 1364; Livingston v Davis, 243 Iowa 21, 50 NW2d 592, 27 ALR 2d 1237. A term sometimes limited to a public or common school. 47 Am J1st Sch § 2. In usual sense, exclusive of university, college, business college, or other institution of higher education. 47 Am J1st Sch § 2.

The word as used in a constitutional provision exempting from taxation such property as may be used for school purposes means a place where systematic instruction in useful branches is given by methods common to schools and institutions of learning, as distinguished from schools conducted for teaching, dancing, writing, deportment, and other things, which are not schools in the ordinary sense. People ex rel. McCullough v Deutsche E. L. J. Gemeinde, 249 Ill 132, 94 NE 162.

The word "school" as used in a statute requiring denial of a liquor license for a location within five hundred feet of a school is not subject to a more restricted definition than the definition of the word in building restriction cases. Boys' Club of Detroit v Pajula, 342 Mich 150, 69 SW2d 348, 49 ALR2d 1097.

See parochial school; private school; public school.

school board. An administrative body, composed of a number of directors, commissioners, or trustees, charged with the duty of administering public schools within a city, town, or district. 47 Am J1st Sch § 29. A special commission within a constitutional provision prohibiting the legislature from delegating the power to tax to any special commission. Wilson v Philadelphia School Dist. 328 Pa 225, 195 A 90, 113 ALR 1401.

school census. A census taken of pupils in the schools as of a particular date, showing ages and attainments according to grade. 14 Am J2d Census § 11.

school children. In common usage, children receiving elementary instruction in public, parochial, and private schools.

In common acceptance, the term refers to young people in attendance upon educational institutions of a subordinate character, places of primary instruction, and, ordinarily, and without something to indicate a wider meaning to be intended, it will not be taken to include pupils in attendance upon such higher institutions of learning as colleges or universities, or institutions for the teaching of trades, professions or business. State ex rel. Seattle v Seattle Electric Co. 71 Wash 213, 128 P 220.

school district. A local administrative authority with fixed territorial limits created by the legislature, and subordinate to its will, as an agent of the state for the sole purpose of administering the state's system of public education. 47 Am J1st Sch § 12. A subordinate agency, subdivision, or instrumentality of the state, performing the duties of the state in the conduct and maintenance of the public schools. State ex rel. McKittrick v Whittle, 333 Mo 705, 63 SW2d 100 88 ALR 1099. A public corporation. 18 Am J2d Corp § 8.

See centralized district; consolidation of school districts; independent school district.

school fund. A fund created for the promotion and maintenance of a common or public school system provided for by the constitution and statutes of the various states. 47 Am J1st Sch § 83.

school house. A building which houses a school. Any building which is appropriated for a use prescribed or permitted by the law to public schools. Alexander v Phillips, 31 Ariz 503, 254 P 1056, 52 ALR 244. The entire school plant, including main building, playground, gymnasium, stadium, and other structures for competitive athletic games and sports, and other buildings appropriated to uses prescribed or permitted by law to a public school. Alexander v Phillips, 31 Ariz 503, 254 P 1056, 52 ALR 244.

school lands. Lands set apart from the public domain, the proceeds from the sale of which can be used only for educational purposes. 47 Am J1st Sch §§ 62 et seq. Lands reserved for the purpose of being applied to schools in the territories of New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, Dakota, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming and in the states and territories carved out of them, by section 1946 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, providing that sections 16 and 36 in each township should be thus reserved. Pike v State Board of Land Comrs. 19 Idaho 268, 277, 113 P 447.

school nurse. A nurse employed by the school authorities for rendition of professional services in a public school. 47 Am J1st Sch § 190.

school of medicine. A medical college. A system of medical treatment, such as homeopathy or allopathy. 41 Am J1st Phys & S § 85.

school placement laws. The laws governing the assignment of students to public schools, particularly in reference to the elimination of race segregation. 15 Am J2d Civ R § 42.

school preference law. A statute authorizing boards of education to provide separate schools for white and Negro children whose parents voluntarily elect that their children shall attend a school with members of their own race. 15 Am J2d Civ R § 45.

school purpose. See educational purpose.

school taxes. Taxes imposed and levied particularly for the purposes of the establishment, construction, and maintenance of schools. 47 Am J1st Sch §§ 76 et seq.

school prayer. A prayer given in school, usually as a part of morning exercises. 47 Am J1st Sch § 210.

schoolteacher. See teacher.

schoolteacher's pension. See teacher's pension.

school township. A territorial subdivision for school purposes. A township comprising one school district, being divided into subdistricts for the administration of the several schools of the district. W. H. Dreves, Inc. v Oslo School Township, 217 Ind 388, 28 NE2d 252, 128 ALR 1405.

See centralization of schools.

school trustees. See school board.

sciagraph. Same as skiagraph.

Sciant praesentes et futuri. Know all men present and in future.

science. Knowledge derived from study, observation, and experimentation and arranged for use in system and form. Study in a branch of knowledge conducted abstractly but also with observation and experimentation.

sciendum est. It should be known.

sciens et prudens. Knowing and intending.

scienter. Knowledge, particularly knowledge which charges with guilt or liability. Knowledge of an owner of an animal concerning the viciousness of the beast. 4 Am J2d Am § 86. Knowledge on the part of a person making a representation, at the time when the representation is made, that it is false. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 197. An element of liability for interference with the performance of a contract, consisting in knowledge of the existence of the contract. 30 Am J Rev ed Interf § 42. An element of the crime of incest, consisting in knowledge that the person with whom one engages in sexual intercourse is within the prohibited degree of relationship. 27 Am J1st Incest § 7.

scienti. To him who has knowledge.

"Scienti is not equivalent to 'volenti.' It cannot be said that where a man is lawfully engaged in work, and is in danger of dismissal if he leaves his work, that he wilfully incurs any risk which he may encounter in the course of such work." Thrusell v Handyside (Eng) LR 20 QB Div 359.

Scientia scilorum est mixta ignorantia. The knowledge of superficial persons is scrambled ignorance.

Scientia utrinque par pares contrahentes facit. Knowledge on both sides makes the contracting parties equal. See Broom's Legal Maxims 772.

Scientia utriusque par pares contrahentes facit. Knowledge on both sides makes the contracting parties equal.

Scienti et volenti non fit injuria. No injury is done to a person who understands and consents.

scientific books. Publications of the writings of experts in medicine, surgery, mechanics, chemistry, nuclear science, and other fields of specialized learning.

See books of exact science.

scientific institution. An institution devoted to teaching or research in science or a particular field of science.

As to what is a scientific institution within the meaning of an exemption from property tax, see Anno: 34 ALR2d 1221.

scientific journal. A publication devoted to the special interests of some branch of science. 39 Am J1st Newsp § 9.

scientific organization. An organization exempt from federal income tax because of the scientific nature of its activities, its refraining from prohibited transactions, and also from an unreasonable accumulation of income. Internal Revenue Code § 503.

scienti non fit injuria. No injury is done to a person who has knowledge of the facts.

"In discussing the question as to whether the plaintiff assumed the risk by continuing at work (with knowledge of his danger), the judges called attention to the fact that the maxim upon which the assumption of risks was based was not Scienti non fit injuria, but Volenti non fit injuria. A majority of them therefore concluded that the mere fact that the servant remained at work after discovering the danger to which he was exposed did not authorize the court to say, as a matter of law, that he consented to assume the risk. They held that whether he did so or not was a question for the jury. The justness of his decision has been recognized by some of the American courts." Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf R Co. v Jones, 77 Ark 367, 375, 92 SW 244.

scil. An abbreviation of scilicet.

scilicet. Town; that is to say, abbreviated "ss.," "s.," or "scil." An allegation of fact in a pleading in form dispensing with proof of the precise circumstance alleged. Lindekugel v Spokane, P. & S. R. Co. 149 Or 634, 42 P2d 907, 99 ALR 721.

scintilla juris. A particle of right; a spark of interest.

scintilla of evidence. The least particle of evidence, a mere trifle of evidence. Offutt v Columbian Exposition, 175 Ill 472, 476, 51 NE 651.

scintilla rule. The rule, now very generally rejected or abandoned in most jurisdictions, that a verdict is never directed for a party if there is any evidence, slight though it may be, in favor of the other party. 53 Am J1st Trial § 356. The rule that if there is any evidence presenting a conflict, at least evidence of some substance, not mere vague, uncertain or irrelevant matter, the case must be submitted to the jury. Nugent v Nugent, 281 Ky 263, 135 SW2d 877.

Scire debes cum quo contrahis. You ought to know the person with whom you contract.

Scire et scire debere aequiparantur in jure. To know and to be bound or to be deemed to know are equivalent in the law.

scire facias. A writ of statutory origin (13 Edward I, chapter 45) used both as an original writ to obtain a judgment where none has before existed and as a writ of execution or continuation of a judgment previously entered. 47 Am J1st Sc F §§ 3, 4. A writ requiring the defendant to appear and show cause why the plaintiff should not be permitted to take some step wherein he has the advantage of a public record. 47 Am J1st Sc F § 2. A writ founded on a matter of record, such as a recognizance or judgment, on which it lies to obtain execution or for other purpose, such as to hear errors. 47 Am J1st Sc F § 2. A writ for the revival of a judgment. 47 Am J1st Sc F § 17. A proceeding for the enforcement of an execution against a garnishee, generally limited to cases where the garnishee defaults, and where there has been no specific property garnished, so that it is necessary to discover and identify the property of the defendant in the possession of the garnishee. Parker, Peeples & Knox v El Saieh, 107 Conn 545, 141 A 884, 59 ALR 1424. A remedy for the enforcement of a bail bond or recognizance on forfeiture. 8 Am J2d Bail § 145.

The term "scire facias" applies not only to a certain writ, but also to the action or proceeding instituted under the writ. 47 Am J1st Sc F § 1.

scire facias ad audiendum errores. A common-law writ available to a plaintiff in error who had assigned errors, to compel the executors or administrators of the deceased defendant in error to join in error. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. v Welter, 32 Fla 210, 215.

scire facias quare executionem non. A common-law writ available to the executors or administrators of a defendant in error, to compel the plaintiff in error, who had not assigned errors, to do so. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. v Welter, 32 Fla 210, 215.

[1145]

Scire facias quare restitutionem habere non debet. Make it known why he ought not to have restitution.-A process in the nature of an order to show cause which issued as a preliminary to the issuance of a writ of restitution where a satisfied judgment was reversed on appeal and the record failed to show the amount paid or lost by the appellant. Bank of United States v Bank of Washington (US) 6 Pet 8, 8 L Ed 299.

sciregemot. (Saxon.) A court held within a shire or county; a county court.

Scire leges non hoc est verba earum tenere, sed vim et potestatem. (Civil law.) To know the laws is not to grasp their words alone, but their force and power as well.

Scire proprie est rem ratione et per causam cognoscere. To know properly is to know the thing by reason and through the cause of it.

scite. A site; a situation; a location. (Latin.) Informed; knowing.

sclerosis. See arteriosclerosis.

scold. To rebuke or find fault with another. A person, especially a woman, who scolds.

See common scold; cuckingstool; scolding.

scolding. Mere clamor, railing, personal reproof.

Argument dignifies the orator and instructs and convinces the auditor. Scolding relieves somewhat the hysteria of the scolder, but only amuses or irritates the hearer. Argument is the professional weapon of the lawyer; scolding is that of the communis rixatrix (common scold). Rahles v J. Thompson & Sons Mfg. Co. 137 Wis 506, 118 NW 350.

scope of authority. The authority of an agent, conferred by his principal, for the performance of acts which are either proper for the accomplishment of the end or object for which the agent was appointed or are such acts as are usual in matters of the kind. First Nat. Bank v Nelson, 38 Ga 391.

As applied to the duty of a public officer, the "scope" of his duty is his design, aim, or purpose; his intention; and it is not to be confused with "scope of authority," which includes only such acts as he may perform with lawful authority. Linblom v Ramsey, 75 Ill 246, 251.

scope of employment. Line of duty; course of the service; pursuit or transaction of the employer's business; furtherance of the employer's interest. 35 Am J1st M & S § 554. Doing for the employer that which one has been directed to do by the employer. Rolfe v Hewitt, 227 NY 486, 125 NE 804, 14 ALR 125. A relative term comprehending consideration of the surrounding circumstances, including the character of the employment, the nature of the wrongful deed, and the time and place of its commission. Horton v Jones, 208 Miss 257, 44 So 2d 397, 15 ALR2d 824.

Any act which can fairly and reasonably be deemed to be an ordinary and natural incident, or a natural, direct, and logical result of the employment is within the meaning of the phrase "scope of employment." Rolfe v Hewitt, 227 NY 486, 125 NE 804, 14 ALR 125. Acts are said to be within the scope of the employee's employment when they are incidental to his regular duties as such an employee and are of some benefit to the employer and not personal to the employee. Myers v Industrial Acci. Com. 191 Cal 673, 218 P 11.

See in the course of the employment.

scope of review. The matters proper for consideration by an appellate court upon review of a lower court decision. 5 Am J2d A & E § 702. The matters proper for consideration when properly presented upon the review by the court of a determination of an administrative agency. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 610. A variable in appellate practice, ranging from a trial de novo on appeal to a determination of no more than the question whether there was substantial error producing a miscarriage of justice in the trial court, the scope of review in the particular case depending upon constitutional and statutory provisions. 5 Am J2d A & E § 702.

See trial de novo.

scot. See bi-scot; church-scot; scot and lot; soulscot.

scot and lot. A customary contribution laid upon all subjects according to their ability; duties the payment of which was a prerequisite to the right to vote. In the frame or Code for the province of Pennsylvania, compiled by William Penn, it was provided that every inhabitant of the province who paid scot and lot to the government should be deemed a freeman of the province and should be capable of electing or being elected a member of the provincial council or general assembly of the province. Frieszleben v Shallcross, 14 Del (9 Houst) 1, 19 A 576.

Scotch peers. Those members of the English house of lords who hail from Scotland.

Scott v Sanford. See Dred Scott Case.

scrapbook. A book in which pictures, clippings from newspapers, and other items of personal interest have been pasted or otherwise attached.

scrap iron. The waste from the manufacture of boilers, the erection of bridges, etc. Schlesinger v Beard, 120 US 264, 30 L Ed 656, 7 S Ct 456. Metal, otherwise known as "scrap" from worn out machines and vehicles, especially automobiles.

scrap turpentine. That part of the turpentine which, on exuding from the tree has trickled down the trunk and continues to adhere thereto. Griffith v Hulyon, 90 Fla 582, 107 So 354.

scratch sale. A term of the cotton exchange for a sale offset by a purchase at the same price on the same day. Dupont v United States, 300 US 150, 81 L Ed 570, 57 S Ct 391.

scratch sheet. A printed sheet devoted to horse racing generally or to the races to be run on the day of publication, giving the names of the horses entered, the jockeys up on each horse, facts as to the ownership, pedigree, age, and weight of the horses, the distance of the several races, the condition of the track, predictions as to the winners, and notations as to the horses once entered but "scratched," that is, withdrawn from a race, the latter presumably being the feature from which the name of the publication derives. Anno: 153 ALR 463.

screen credit. The right of an author of a play, produced as a motion picture or by television performance, to have his name appear as author upon the screen or in the televised broadcast. Anno: 23 ALR2d 311-313, § 20. The publicity given the name of the author in accord with such right. Credit given the producer, director, actors, etc. in a moving picture or televised production by listing the names on the screen.

screening. Obstructing the view. 25 Am J1st High § 67. Protecting by a screen, either literally, as by placing a screen to protect patrons in a stadium against batted balls, or figuratively, as where a public figure is protected by guards who keep crowds at a distance. Investigating persons, particularly persons seeking employment in positions of trust and responsibility. screening coal. Putting coal through a screen for the purpose of removing the extremely small pieces, dirt, and other impurities.

scribere est agere. To write is to act. That is, writing is the doing of an act.

Therefore, a bare writing with no publication of it may amount to a crime; as if the writer indicts treasonable matter. See 4 Bl Comm 80.

scrip. A document representing fractional shares in a stock dividend. An order on the state treasurer to pay the sum named whenever available funds are in the treasury. Hays v McDaniel, 130 Ark 52, 58, 196 SW 934. A credit entered in a public land office entitling the holder or his assignee to select and appropriate a certain number of acres of public land in a given locality. Wait v Commissioner of State Land-Office, 87 Mich 353, 356, 49 NW 600. A substitute for money in the form of certificates of indebtedness, employed in various parts of the country during the extremity of the Great Depression, particularly during the days of enforced closing of the banks.

scrip dividend. A dividend on corporate stock consisting of a scrip or certificate entitling stockholders who receive it to the privileges and rights specified therein, sometimes a right to distribution of accumulated earnings at a later date, at other times a right to additional stock, bonds, or other obligations of the corporation. Staats v Biograph Co. (CA2 NY) 236 F 454. A certificate issued by a corporation to its stockholder evidencing the holder's title to the same extent of interest in the property and franchise as a stock dividend, except that the corporation has the right to pay the scrip dividend out of future earnings, and except also that the scrip dividend confers no right to vote. Bailey v New York Cent. & HRR Co. (US) 22 Wall 604, 22 L Ed 840. A stock dividend, represented by a certificate or scrip, of fractional shares.

script. An original written instrument, as distinguished from a duplicate. The manuscript or typed copy of a play.

Scriptae obligationes scriptis tolluntur, et nudi consensus obligatio contrario consensu dissolvitur. Written obligations are released or discharged by writings, and an obligation of mere consent is dissolved or discharged by a consent to the contrary.

SE.4 An abbreviation of the southeast quarter of a section of land according to the government survey or of a lesser but square or rectangular portion of a section.

sea. The ocean. A salt-water arm of the ocean, even a river in which the tide ebbs and flows. Pacific Milling & Elevator Co. v Portland, 65 Or 349, 133 P 72. In the broader sense, any body of water of considerable size, whether fresh water or salt water.

See at sea; four seas; perils of the sea.

sea battery. A battery committed on the person of a seaman on the high seas.

sea brief. Same as sea letter.

sea burial. See burial at sea.

sea damaged. Damaged by exposure to a peril or perils of the sea.

A clause in a contract for the purchase of goods to be shipped by water, "sea damaged, if any, to be taken at a fair allowance," contemplates the risk of damage to the goods by perils of the sea, and does not restrict to any particular ship the subsequent transportation of the goods to their destination. Harrison v Fortlage, 161 US 57, 64, 40 L Ed 616, 619, 16 S Ct 488.

seal. A symbol of authenticity. An impression made by means of an instrument or device, such as an engraved metallic plate, on wax or wafer affixed to an instrument, or directly upon the instrument itself. A scroll or other distinguishing mark placed upon an instrument as a seal. The word "seal" placed upon an instrument. The abbreviation "L.S." placed upon an instrument as a legal seal. 47 Am J1st Seals § 4. An essential of a deed at common law and under some statutes, 23 Am J2d Deeds §§ 1, 18, but disappearing from the requirements of the law with the expansion of literacy and the corresponding ability of a grantor to affix his own signature with legibility sufficient to authenticate the instrument as one representing his own act and deed. 47 Am J1st Seals § 8.

See official seal; sealed and delivered.

sea laws. A term sometimes applied to the sailing regulations which were founded in ancient usage and sanctioned by the adjudications of admiralty and prize courts, and which until comparatively recent times furnished the principal rules of navigation. 48 Am J1st Ship § 244.

sea lawyer. A term applied facetiously to a sailor who talks volubly of the legal rights of sailors, also to a person in another walk of life but contentious in respect of legal rights.

sealed. Having a seal affixed; under seal.

See sealing ceremony.

sealed and acknowledged. The equivalent of "sealed and delivered" in a certificate of acknowledgment. 1 Am J2d Ack § 75.

sealed and delivered. A phrase in a certificate of acknowledgment reciting the execution of the instrument by the person acknowledging. 1 Am J2d Ack § 75.

The intention to seal, whether expressed or implied, does not make a seal. The recital "signed, sealed and delivered," or the words "whereunto we have affixed our seals," do not make a sealed instrument, if as a fact nothing is affixed to the signatures which the law recognizes as a seal. Empire Trust Co. v Heinze, 242 NY 475, 478, 152 NE 266.

sealed grain. Grain in a field warehouse or granary, particularly grain pledged for the payment of a government loan made in a price-support program.

See field warehousing; sealing up.

sealer. A public officer having the duty of inspecting scales or other measuring devices and placing a seal upon such as are found to be accurate. 56 Am J1st Wis & L § 21.

sea-letter. A ship's passport furnished by the customhouse, under the signature of the President of the United States and the secretary of state and usually issued only in time of war. Sleght v Rhineland (NY) 1 Johns 192, 203.

sea level. The level of the sea, midway between high and low tide; the point from which heights on land are indicated.

sealing ceremony. The form of solemnization of marriages required of its members by the Mormon Church, the same being sufficient to constitute a valid marriage between persons competent to enter into a marriage, assuming that requirements imposed by law other than the matter of ceremony are met. Hilton v Roylance, 25 Utah 129, 69 P 660.

sealing up. Affixing a seal, usually a metal seal, to the door of a building or the cover of a container in such position that the seal must be broken in order to open the door or raise the cover. An act of dominion over a safe sufficient to perfect a levy upon the contents thereof. 30 Am J2d Exec § 242.

sealing valve. A valve on a gas meter with so close a bearing as absolutely to stop the flow of gas when adequately closed. Gill v Eakin, 203 Miss 204, 33 So 2d 821.

seal of corporation. See corporate seal.

seal of court. An instrument authenticating by imprint or otherwise the process and writs issued by the court. 42 Am J1st Proc § 12. A requirement in the case of a court of record. Aikman v Edwards, 55 Kan 751, 42 P 366; Van Norman v Gordon, 172 Mass 576, 53 NE 267.

seal of the United States. The great seal of the Federal Government of which the secretary of state is the custodian.

The signature of the President is the warrant for affixing the great seal to an instrument executed by the President and is only to be affixed to an instrument which is complete. It attests by an act supposed to be of public notoriety, the verity of the presidential signature. Marbury v Madison (US) 1 Cranch 137, 158, 2 L Ed 60, 67.

seal of the United States Supreme Court. The arms of the United States on a piece of steel the size of a dollar, with the words in the margin "The Seal of the Supreme Court of the United States." Rule 1, adopted at the February term, 1790. 1 L Ed 432.

seals of private credit. Seals used by private persons or private corporations. 47 Am J1st Seals § 3.

seals of public credit. Seals kept and used by public authority. Kirksey v Dates (Ala) 7 Port 529. The Great Seal of the United States; the Great Seal of a state, the seals of courts of record, and other seals of which judicial notice is taken.

In England, such seals are those of the king and of his ancient and public courts of justice, the great seal of the United Kingdom, the great seals of England, Scotland, and Ireland and the seal of the Corporation of London. 47 Am J1st Seals § 3.

seam. The line where pieces of cloth are joined with thread. A layer of coal or other mineral underground; a fissure carrying ore or other valuable mineral. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 83.

A term often used synonymously with the word "stringer," and commonly understood by miners to be a crack or crevice filled by mineral deposit, and occurring in the country rock, and by means of which the prospector anticipates being led to an ore body or deposit of commercial value. Oftentimes, a "discovery" is made on a "seam," and if so made, the location is valid in law. McShane v Kenkle, 18 Mont 208, 44 P 979.

seaman. An enlisted man of the Navy, ranking immediately above seaman apprentice and immediately below petty officer, third class. Broadly, a person whose occupation is to assist in the management of a vessel at sea. Holt v Cummings, 102 Pa 212. A member of the crew of a ship; a mariner. Scharrenberg v Dollar S.S. Co. 245 US 122, 127, 62 L Ed 189, 193, 38 S Ct 28. A common sailor and, for some purposes, any person performing a maritime service, such as a mate, pilot, purser, steward, etc. 48 Am J1st Ship § 144. In one sense, including master, a ship's officer, ship's surgeon, as well as a member of the crew. 47 Am J1st Salv § 20 (as person entitled to salvage).

The term as used in various statutes, is a flexible term, the meaning of which depends upon the circumstances in which it is used and the purpose of a particular statute in which it occurs. Anno: 161 ALR 832.

See mariner.

seaman apprentice. An enlisted man of the Navy, ranking immediately above a seaman recruit and immediately below a seaman.

seaman at sea. For the purposes of executing a valid seaman's will, on board a vessel which has left the wharf and is being navigated for the purposes of the voyage upon which he shipped as a member of the crew, notwithstanding the vessel is still in a river, perhaps in a harbor, rather than on the open sea. 57 Am J1st Wills § 663.

seaman's lien. The lien which a seaman has on the ship for his wages, which he may enforce either in a court of admiralty or a court of common law. 48 Am J1st Ship §§ 161, 162.

seaman's will. The informal will of a seaman, whether oral or in writing, rendered valid, where the will of a person of another occupation would be invalid, under an exception from compliance with the formalities required to be observed in the execution of wills generally, recognized because of the dangers, diseases, disasters, and the possibility of sudden death constantly besetting a seaman and the inability of such a person to find the time or the means to make a deliberate and written testamentary disposition. 57 Am J1st Wills § 661.

sea mile. Same as nautical mile.

seance. A demonstration in which a medium purports to communicate with departed spirits. McMasters v State, 21 Okla Crim 318, 207 P 566, 29 ALR 292.

sea pay. Increased pay because of performance of sea duty. 36 Am J1st Mil § 71.

See sea service.

sea perils. See perils of the sea.

seaplane. An aircraft constructed and equipped for landing upon water; a vessel or marine object for some purposes, particularly the rules of navigation and the law of salvage. 8 Am J2d Avi § 20.

A seaplane is a mechanical device for aerial navigation, within the meaning of provision in accident policy exempting insurer from liability for injuries, fatal or nonfatal, sustained by insured while in or on any vehicle or mechanical device for aerial navigation, or in falling therefrom or therewith or while operating or handling any such vehicle or device. Wendorff v Missouri State Life Ins. Co. 318 Mo 363, 1 SW2d 99, 57 ALR 615.

search. A matter of invasion and quest, implying some sort of force, actual or constructive, much or little. State v Quinn, 111 SC 174, 97 SE 62, 3 ALR 1500. A quest by an officer of the law, secret, intrusive, or accompanied by force. Hale v Henkel, 201 US 43, 80, 50 L Ed 652, 668, 26 S Ct 370. An examination or inspection, by authority of law, of one's premises or person, with a view to the discovery of stolen, contraband, or illicit property, or of evidence of guilt to be used in the prosecution of a criminal action for some crime or offense with which one is charged. Newberry v Carpenter, 107 Mich 567, 65 NW 530. The right of a belligerent to search a merchant ship of a neutral nation at sea, or its papers for contraband or for enemy subjects. 56 Am J1st War § 152. Inspection of a home by a health officer. District of Columbia v Little, 85 App DC 242, 178 F2d 13, 13 ALR2d 954.

See search and seizure; title search.

search and seizure. Means for the detection and punishment of crime; the search for and taking custody of property unlawfully obtained or unlawfully held, such as stolen goods, property forfeited for violation of the law, and property the use or possession of which is prohibited by law, and the discovery and taking into legal custody of books, papers, and other things constituting or containing evidence of crime:

See search warrant; unreasonable search and seizure.

searching record. The familiar rule that a demurrer or its equivalent in a motion searches the whole record, is carried back to the first substantial defect, and that judgment is to be given against the party who committed the first fault in pleading, for him who, upon the whole record, appears entitled to judgment. 41 Am J1st Pl § 232.

search warrant. A form of criminal process which may be invoked only in furtherance of a public prosecution. An order in writing, in the name of the people, the state, or the commonwealth, according to the local practice, signed by a magistrate, and directed to a peace officer, commanding him to search for personal property and bring it before a magistrate. 47 Am J1st Search § 3. An examination or inspection, by authority of law, of one's premises or person, with a view to the discovery of stolen, contraband, or illicit property, or some evidence of guilt to be used in the prosecution of a criminal action for some crime or offense with which he is charged. 47 Am J1st Search § 4.

See blanket search warrant.

sea service. Service in the Navy performed at sea under the orders of a department, and in vessels employed by authority of law. 36 Am J1st Mil § 71.

seashore. See shore.

season. A division of the year, as spring, summer, fall, or winter, recognized because of distinctive condition of the weather, the number of hours of daylight, the growth, and maturity of plants. The business year in theatrical, recreational, or entertainment ventures and in winter and summer resorts. A period wherein the taking of particular game or fish is permitted or not permitted, depending upon whether the designation is that of an open or closed season.

See closed season; open season.

seasonable appearance. An appearance within season; that is, a defendant's appearance in an action within the time allowed by law, after the service of the summons upon him.

seasonable motion. A motion made in good time, that is, timely in reference to the situation of the adverse party, each case being controlled by the particular circumstances, if not by express statute. Layton v Lee (Del) 196 A2d 578.

seasonably. Acting at or within the time agreed, or if no time is agreed, at or within a reasonable time. UCC § 1-204(3).

seasonably turn. A term often employed in a rule of the road, meaning that the operators of vehicles proceeding in the opposite direction shall, upon meeting in the highway, turn to the right in such time that neither shall be retarded in his progress by reason of the other occupying the half of the way which the law has assigned to his use, when he may have occasion to use it in passing. Cupples Mercantile Co. v Bow, 32 Idaho 774, 189 P 48, 24 ALR 1296, ovrl'd on another point Hamilton v Carpenter, 49 Idaho 629, 200 P 724; Neal v Rendall, 98 Me 69, 56 A 209. Turn in season to prevent a collision. Bragdon v Kellogg, 118 Me 42, 105 A 433, 6 ALR 669, 671.

seasonal. Of or pertaining to the season. To be expected of the season at hand, as a seasonal sickness or seasonal weather. Lincoln Gas & Electric Co. v Watkins, 113 Neb 619, 204 NW 391.

seasonal conditions. Conditions of the weather peculiar to a particular season of the year. Layman v State Unemployment Compensation Com. 167 Or 379, 117 P2d 974, 136 ALR 1468. Any condition of temperature, health of persons or animals, or the growth of plants reasonably to be expected during a particular season of the year.

See seasonal.

seasonal flood. A flood normally to be expected to occur in a stream at certain seasons or at other regular intervals due to the usual manifestations of nature in precipitation of water at such times. 56 Am J1st Wat § 91.

seasonal industry. An industry whose activities for the most part are confined to a particular season or particular seasons of the year, for example, the packing or processing of fruits and vegetables. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 699.

seasonal service. Service by a carrier during the harvesting season when additional cars are required for the moving of crops. 13 Am J2d Car § 157.

seasonal stream. A stream which flows only during that part of the year when rains occur. 56 Am J1st Wat § 9.

seasonal use. The use of real property, not continuous but seasonal, as for crop-raising, fishing, logging, taking off ice, etc. 3 Am J2d Adv P § 57.

sea stores. The supplies of different articles provided for the subsistence and accommodation of the ship's crew and passengers. United States v Hawley & Letzerich (DC Tex) 160 F 734.

seat. To place a person in a seat, literally or figuratively, as to seat one elected or appointed to an office. In a rare sense, to settle upon land. Hawkins v Barney's Lessee (US) 5 Pet 457, 468, 8 L Ed 190, 194.

See seated land.

seat belt. A requirement in a passenger aircraft; a contrivance of heavy bands with buckles for fastening one's person to the seat or floor as a protection in case of a sudden movement in the air or an unexpected but possible occurrence fraught with peril upon takeoff or landing. The requirement of such a contrivance now made by statute in most jurisdictions in respect of automobiles, intended as a protection against injury in collisions, upsets, skids, and sudden stops.

seated land. Occupied or cultivated land; land producing a revenue. Stotzel v Jackson, 105 Pa 562, 567.

seat of county. See county seat.

seat of court. The place of holding court, usually fixed by constitution or statute. 20 Am J2d Cts § 37.

See county seat.

seat of government. The place where the primary instrumentalities of government are located, especially the legislative and executive branches. The capital city of a state. The District of Columbia. 24 Am J2dDC§1.

seat of justice. See county seat; seat of court.

seat on exchange. A term of art for membership in a stock or commodity exchange, constituting a right to do business on the exchange, subject to the rules thereof. Sometimes regarded as property, at other times as a mere personal license or privilege, but in any event a thing of value, often of great value. 50 Am J1st Stock Ex § 11.

sea watch. A ship's lookout composed of one or two men designated to perform that duty while half of the ship's crew is on duty at sea. O'Hara v Luckenbach S.S. Co. 269 US 364, 371, 70 L Ed 313, 317, 46 S Ct 157.

See watch.

seaweed. Vegetation grown in the sea but cast upon the shore by the action of the water. Carr v Carpenter, 22 RI 528, 48 A 805.

seaworthy. Able to withstand the forces of the sea. Fireman's Fund Ins Co. v Compania de Navegacion (CA5 La) 19 F2d 493. Reasonably fit, from the standpoint of a vessel, to perform the service which she has undertaken to perform. Tight, staunch, strong in the hull, well furnished and victualled, and in all respects equipped in the usual manner for the service in which she is engaged, including a crew, adequate in number and sufficient and competent for the voyage, and a master of skill, competence, sound judgment and discretion. 48 Am J1st Ship § 44. The condition of a ship staunch and sound, of sufficient materials and construction, with sufficient sails, tackle, rigging, cables, anchors, stores, and supplies, commanded by a master of competent skill and capacity, worked by a competent and sufficient crew, and generally, in every respect, fit for the voyage contemplated. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 999.

A ship which is badly stowed is unseaworthy. The Malcolm Baxter, Jr. French Overseas Corp. v French Republic (CA2 NY) 20 F2d 304.

seaworthiness. See seaworthy.

se bene gerendo. See de se bene gerendo.

sec. An abbreviation of security. Harrison v Cravens, 25 Tenn App 215, 155 SW2d 873.

The letters "sec." appearing after the name of a signer on a promissory note are to some extent indicative that the relation of principal and surety existed between such signer and the other signers. Koblegard Co. v Maxwell, 127 W Va 630, 34 SE2d 116.

secession. A withdrawal from membership in an organized group. The attempted but ineffectual withdrawal of eleven southern states from the Union established by the United States Constitution.

The attempt of a state to withdraw from the United States. The Union of states is perpetual and indissoluble, and no state has the right to secede therefrom, nor will its attempt to separate itself from the Union destroy its identity as a state, or free it from the binding force of the Federal Constitution. 49 Am J1st States § 16.

See schism.

seck. Without the right or remedy of distraining.

See rent seck.

seclusion. A withdrawal from society. A voluntary confinement. Phelps v Reinach, 38 La Ann 547, 551.

secondarily liable. See secondary liability.

second arrest. See rearrest.

secondary agreement. Same as secondary contract.

secondary boycott. A boycott applied with the purpose of bringing an alleged offender to terms by refusing to have any business relations with persons dealing with such offender, until he has yielded to the demand for terms. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 463; 36 Am J1st Monop etc § 27. A combination, not merely to refrain from dealing with a person, or to advise or by peaceable means persuade his customers to refrain, but to exercise coercive pressure upon such customers, actual or prospective, in order to cause them to withhold or withdraw patronage from him through fear of loss or damage to themselves should they deal with him. Duplex Printing Press Co. v Deering, 254 US 443, 65 L Ed 349, 41 S Ct 172, 16 ALR 196. A combination of many to injure one in his business by coercing third persons against their will to cease patronizing him by threats of similar injury. Truax v Corrigan, 257 US 312, 66 L Ed 254, 42 S Ct 124, 27 ALR 375, per opinion of Chief Justice Taft. An attempt by a labor organization or its agents to exercise coercive pressure upon an employer, not directly concerned in a labor dispute, by inducing or encouraging his employees to engage in a strike or concerted refusal to work in an effort to bring about some adverse action by such employer against an employer with which the labor organization has a labor dispute. Anno: 96 L Ed 284.

secondary contract. A contract which modifies or supersedes a prior contract known as the primary contract. 17 Am J2d Contr § 459.

See subcontract.

secondary conveyances. Same as derivative conveyances.

secondary distribution value. The value of a comparatively large block of corporate stock, calculated on the assumption that the most prudent method of disposal calls for marketing a part of the stock from time to time rather than throw the entire block on the market. Newberry v Walsh, 20 NJ 484, 120 A2d 242.

secondary easement. An easement appurtenant or incident to the principal or primary one.

Every easement includes secondary easements; that is, the right to do such things as are necessary for the full enjoyment of the easement itself. But this right is limited and must be exercised in such a reasonable manner as not injuriously to increase the burden upon the servient tenement. The burden of the dominant estate cannot be enlarged to the manifest injury of the servient estate by any alteration in the mode of enjoying the former. The owner must not trespass upon the servient tenement

secondary evidence. Evidence which is not the primary or best evidence of which the case is susceptible. Evidence admissible of necessity, although not primary evidence, because of the impossibility of producing the primary evidence, as where an instrument pertinent to a case has been lost or destroyed without fault on the part of the party who otherwise would produce it in evidence, in which case, a true copy or oral evidence of the contents is admissible. 29 Am J2d Evi §§ 448 et seq.

secondary franchise. The powers granted to a corporation by the sovereign and specified in its charter or by statute. 18 Am J2d Corp § 66. Any of those franchises of a corporation other than its right or franchise to be a corporation, which is the primary franchise. Virginia Canon Toll Road Co. v People ex rel. Vivian, 22 Colo 429, 45 P 398.

secondary liability. The liability on an instrument of any person who is not primarily liable thereon. 11 Am J2d B & N § 525. The liability of one of two tortfeasors liable to the same injured person of such nature in reference to the liability of the other tortfeasor that he is entitled to assert a liability over the other tortfeasor for indemnification as to payment required to be made by him to the injured person. The liability of an employer for injury to a third person caused by the act of the employee. Schubert v August Shubert Wagon Co. 249 NY 253, 164 NE 42, 64 ALR 293.

Primary and secondary liability, essential for a right of indemnity, are not based on a difference in degrees of negligence or on any doctrine of comparative negligence, but on a difference in the character or kind of wrongs which cause the injury, and in the nature of the legal obligation owed by each of the wrongdoers to the injured person. Builders Supply Co. v McCabe, 366 Pa 322, 77 A2d 368, 24 ALR2d 319.

secondary meaning. A meaning of a word or phrase additional to its primary meaning, for example, the meaning of the word "sheep" as a timid person. A special or trade meaning acquired by usage in connection with one's goods, services, or business. Anno: 150 ALR 1068; 23 ALR2d 260.

secondary obligation. See secondary liability.

secondary party. A party to an instrument but under a secondary liability.

A guaranty of payment endorsed on a note, while creating an absolute obligation to pay, does not make the guarantor a primary party, and since his liability is secondary, he is released by an extension of time to the maker of the note. Winkle v Scott (CA8 Mo) 99 F2d 299. secondary school. A high school. 47 Am J1st Sch § 4.

secondary service wire. A line supplying electric current to a household, place of business, or factory. Anno: 40 ALR2d 1322, § 8.

secret lien. A lien which does not appear of record or in any other manner so as to be noticed by purchasers and encumbrancers. Palmer v Howard, 72 Cal 293, 13 P 858.

secret partnership. A partnership composed of persons one or more of whom is not disclosed to the public as a member of the firm. Winship v Bank of the United States (US) 5 Pet 529, 561, 8 L Ed 216, 228.

secret process. A mechanical or industrial process of value as an improvement of product or in an increase of production per unit of time. 52 Am J1st Tradem § 138.

Such a method of manufacture or operation in the production of a commercial product as is understood to constitute a process under the patent laws; a mode of treatment of certain materials to produce a given result. It is a conception of the mind seen only by its results. Thus, where the ingredients used in the manufacture of an article were well known, but by combining them by a different method from any other in use the result is a product of a different character from that produced by the ordinary method of combining them, the method of mixing the ingredients and so treating them is a secret process. Taylor Iron & Steel Co. v Nichols, 133 Am St Rep 760.

The difference between a secret process and a patent is that the owner of a patent has a monopoly against all the world, while the owner of a secret process has no right except against those who have contracted, expressly or by implication, not to disclose the secret, or who have obtained it by unfair means. The jurisdiction of equity to protect such trade secrets is founded upon trust and confidence. The court fastens the obligation upon the conscience of the party, and enforces it against him in the same manner as it enforces against a party to whom a benefit is given, the obligation of performing a promise on the faith of which the benefit has been conferred. Whether the subject matter is patentable or not, if the designer discovers and keeps secret a process of manufacture, though he will not have an exclusive right to it as against the public, after he shall have published it, or against those who in good faith acquire knowledge of it, yet he has a property right, which a court of chancery will protect against one who in bad faith and breach of confidence undertakes to apply it to his own use. Smoley v New Jersey Zinc Co. (DC NJ) 24 F Supp 294.

secret profit. A profit or advantage obtained by a promoter, director, or officer of a corporation by reason of his official position without bringing the transaction to the attention of the stockholders. 18 Am J2d Corp §§ 111-117; 19 Am J2d Corp § 1281.

A profit is not secret or unlawful if all the parties having a direct interest know of it and assent to it, or do not repudiate it. Hays v The Georgian, 280 Mass 10, 181 NE 765, 85 ALR 1251.

secret society. A society whose meetings are for the most part closed to the public, limited strictly to members, employing signs and ritual which are secret, being protected against disclosure by an obligation under oath taken by each member.

See lodge.

secrets of state. See state secret.

secrets of trade. See trade secrets.

secret testament. Same as mystic testament.

secret trust. A term frequently applied to any express or implied arrangement or understanding between a testator and a legatee whereby the latter is to take ostensibly as an ordinary legatee under the will of the testator, but is thereafter to apply the bequest or a part of it toward some charitable purpose; the real design of the bequest being to circumvent the statute limiting charitable bequests and devises. 15 Am J2d Char § 28.

secret vote. The ordinary election by ballot as conducted in the United States. 26 Am J2d Elect § 234.

See secret ballot.

secta. Suit in court. The followers of the plaintiff in an ancient common-law action, who accompanied him to court to support the averments of his declaration. See 3 Bl Comm 295.

secta ad curiam. A writ which lay against a party who refused to perform his suit at the county court or court-baron.-Cowell.

secta ad furnum. Suit at the furnace. See secta ad molendinum. See 3 Bl Comm 235.

secta ad molendinum. A writ to compel the defendant to grind his corn at the plaintiff's mill.

The writ lay where the plaintiff enjoyed this right by custom or prescription. Likewise, a man had a writ of secta ad furnum, secta ad torrale, et ad omnia alia hujusmodi (his suit at the oven, his suit at the kiln and all others of the same kind;) for their suit or service due to his public oven, his bake house or his kiln. See 3 Bl Comm 235.

secta ad torrale. Suit at the bake house.

See secta ad molendinum.

secta curiae. A tenant's attendance at court, as an incident of certain feudal tenure.

Secta est pugna civilis, sicut actores armantur actionibus, et quasi, accinguntur gladiis, ita rei (e contra) muniuntur exceptionibus, et defenduntur, quasi, clypeis. A suit is a civil fight, and just as the plaintiffs are armed with actions and, as it were, girded with swords, so the defendants are, on the other hand, fortified with pleas and defended, as it were, with shields.

Secta quae scripto nititur a scripto variari non debet. A suit which is founded upon a writing ought not to vary from the writing.

sectarian. Pertaining to some one of the various religious sects. People ex rel. Vollmar v Stanley, 81 Colo 276, 255 P 610.

Those religious doctrines are sectarian which are the doctrines of one religious sect and are not shared in common with other religious sects. State ex rel. Weiss v District Board of School Dist. 76 Wis 177, 44 NW 967.

sectarian book. A book which shows that it teaches the peculiar dogmas of a religious sect as such.

A book is not sectarian which merely comprehends the dogmas as interpreted by a part of the adherents of a sect; nor is a book sectarian merely because it was edited or compiled by a person of a particular sect. It is not the authorship or the mechanical composition, but the contents which give the book its character. Hackett v Brooksville School Dist. 120 Ky 608, 87 SW 792.

sectarian college or university. A college or university maintained by a church or religious sect. 15 Am J2d Colleges § 31.

sectarian instruction. As prohibited in public schools by constitutional provision, an instruction in religious doctrine, particularly a doctrine believed by some religious sects and rejected by others. State ex rel. Freeman v Scheve, 65 Neb 853, 91 NW 846, 93 NW 169.

sectarianism. Teaching or publicizing religious belief in a public institution, especially a public school. 47 Am J1st Sch § 208.

sectarian purpose. A purpose in aid or furtherance of some religious sect or denomination. People ex rel. Vollmar v Stanley, 81 Colo 276, 255 P 610.

sectarian school. A school maintained by a church or religious body, usually giving sectarian instruction. A school which fosters and, in its instruction, to some extent, propagates the belief and doctrine of some particular religious sect. Hackett v Brooksville School Dist. 120 Ky 608, 87 SW 792.

To constitute a sectarian school or sectarian institution which may not lawfully be maintained at public expense, it is not necessary to show that the school is wholly devoted to religious or sectarian instruction. Knowlton v Baurhoyer, 22 Iowa 691, 166 NW 202, 5 ALR 841.

See parochial school.

sectarian teaching. See sectarian instruction.

sectator. A suitor; a tenant who owed to his lord the service of secta curiae, that is, of attendance at court.

securities exchange. A stock exchange; an exchange for transactions in securities.

Securities Exchange Act. A federal statute enacted in 1934, embodying a comprehensive plan for the regulation of securities exchanges. 15 USC §§ 78 et seq.; 50 Am J1st Stock Ex § 15.

Securities Valuation Reserve. See Mandatory Securities Valuation Reserve.

security. A stock certificate, bond, or evidence of secured indebtedness. Anno: 47 ALR2d 229. A share of stock. Anno: 52 ALR 1098 (term as used in a will). A stock, bond, or other contract wherein an investment is made for the purpose for securing income or profit. 47 Am J1st Secur A § 16. Any instrument issued or offered to the public by any company, evidencing or representing any right to participate or share in the profits or earnings or the distribution of assets of any business carried on for profit. People v McCalla, 63 Cal App 783, 220 P 436. An instrument issued in bearer or registered form of a type commonly dealt in upon securities exchanges or markets or is commonly recognized in any area in which it is issued or dealt in as a medium for investment; an instrument evidencing a share, participation, or other interest in property or in an enterprise or evidences an obligation of the issuer. UCC § 8-102(1)(a).

Protection of citizen, resident, or transient against attack directed against his person or property. Protection of the nation against attacks from abroad and subversion from within. A mortgage, lien, encumbrance, deposit, or pledge for the payment of a debt or the performance of an obligation. In the broad sense, inclusive of "surety." 50 Am J1st Suret § 3.

Security is that which makes the enforcement or promise more certain than the mere personal obligation of the debtor or promisor, whatever may be his possessions or financial standing. It may be a pledge of property, or an additional personal obligation; but it means more than the mere promise of the debtor with property liable to general execution. It is true that the greater the possessions of the promisor, the more certain the enforcement of his promise, and in a sense, the creditor is more secure; but such is not the security known and expressed in the law. First Nat. Bank v Hollingsworth, 78 Iowa 575, 43 NW 536.

See realizing on security.

security agreement. An agreement which creates or provides for a security interest. UCC § 9105(I)(h).

security deposit. See security.

security deed. A term probably confined to the state of Georgia and there meaning a deed conveying the legal title to land as security for the payment of a debt.

Upon default in payment, the holder of the debt reduces it to judgment, and the holder of the legal title to the land makes and places of record a quitclaim conveyance to the debtor, reinvesting him with the legal title. The land may then be levied upon and sold to satisfy the judgment. Scott v Paisley, 271 US 632, 633, 70 L Ed 1123, 1124, 46 S Ct 591.

See deed of trust; mortgage.

security for costs. A bond, undertaking, or deposit required of a plaintiff to secure the payment of costs in the action or the unpaid costs of a prior action. 20 Am J2d Costs §§ 37 et seq.

security for good behavior. See security to keep the peace.

security interest. An interest in personal property or fixtures which secures payment or performance of an obligation. 15 Am J2d Com C § 7. In the broad sense, an interest in security of any form.

security on appeal. See appeal bond.

security regulations. Regulations in the interest of preserving the country against subversive activities and of protecting it against attacks from abroad.

security requirements. See financial responsibility laws; security regulations.

security to keep the peace. A bond, undertaking, or deposit as security against committing a breach of the peace. 12 Am J2d Breach P §§ 41-51.

Securius expediuntur negotia commissa pluribus, et plus vident oculi quam oculus. Matters which are committed to several persons are executed more surely, because eyes see more than an eye sees.

securus. Safe; secure; sure.

secus. Otherwise; not so.

See seduction.

seduction. The act of leading astray. Being lead astray. In the ordinary legal sense, the act of a man in inducing a woman to surrender her chastity. Morehead v Commonwealth, 194 Ky 592, 240 SW 93. The act of a man in inducing a chaste woman to have unlawful sexual intercourse with him. 47 Am J1st Seduc § 2. The act of persuading or inducing a woman of previous chaste character to depart from the path of virtue by the use of any species of arts, persuasion, or wiles which are calculated to have and do have that effect, and result in her ultimately submitting her person to the sexual embraces of the person accused. 47 Am J1st Seduc § 2.

To seduce a woman is to corrupt, deceive, and draw her aside from the path of virtue which she was pursuing, by such acts and wiles as are calculated to operate upon a virtuous female. State v Eckler, 106 Mo 585, 590.

In some instances, particularly in a case where a wife sues as wronged by the defendant in an alleged seduction of plaintiff's husband, the word "seduction" has reference to the misconduct of a woman toward a man. 27 Am J1st H & W §§ 522 et seq.

sed vide. But see.

see. Noun: The dignity or the jurisdiction of a bishop. Verb: To observe with the eyes. To obtain a mental impression or understanding. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v Myrick, 91 Fla 918, 109 So 193. To perceive and obtain knowledge by the use of the eyes. Tracey v Standard Acci. Ins. Co. 119 Me 131, 109 A 490, 9 ALR 521.

The word "see" and the word "hear," when used in a negative statement, are often used to express the negation of apprehension or conscious knowledge. A person may hear or see and yet not observe that is, he may not have a conscious knowledge of the object or noise he actually sees or hears, and, ordinarily, when questioned as to the fact, he will say that he did not see or hear. See Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v Myrick, 91 Fla 918, 109 So 193, 195.

seisin. The possession of a freehold estate by the owner. 42 Am J1st Prop § 45. The possession of land coupled with the right to possess it and a freehold estate therein, practically the same thing as ownership. Holt v Ruleau, 83 Vt 151, 74 A 1005. For the purpose of dower, the force of possession under some title or the right to hold the title, either a seisin in deed or a seisin in law. 25 Am J2d Dow § 26.

A person is said to be "seised" or "seized" of personal property when he has the ownership of it his ownership of it carrying with it the right of possession. Burdett v Burdett, 26 Okla 416, 109 P 922.

See covenant of seisin; livery of seisin.

seisina facit stipitem. Seisin makes the stock.

seisin by hasp and staple. The investiture of a person of seisin by the feoffee's taking hold of the hasp of the door of the house and then bolting himself in.

seisin in deed. A seisin in fact. An actual corporeal seisin which, existing in the husband, is a subject to which common-law dower or its statutory equivalent attaches. 25 Am J2d Dow § 26.

seisin in fee. See in fee.

seisin in law. The right to immediate possession of land under a freehold title. The right to make immediate seisin, which, existing in a husband during coverture, is a subject to which common-law dower or its statutory equivalent attaches. 25 Am J2d Dow § 26.

Although the law passed an inheritance to the heir immediately on the death of his ancestor, the heir thereby acquired only a seisin in law, and this, alone, did not enable him to transmit the inheritance to his heirs. He must have obtained an actual seisin or possession or seisin in fact, which is the kind of seisin to which the maxim refers, as distinguished from seisin in law. Such was the rule at common law under the first canon of descent, generally repudiated in the United States. 23 Am J2d Desc & D § 69.

seize. To grasp; to catch. To take prisoner. To take possession, particularly of land. To make a seizure.

seizin. Same as seisin.

seizing in transitu. See stoppage in transitu. seizing of heriots. The taking by the lord of the manor of his heriots upon the death of his tenant in copyhold. See 2 Bl Comm 97.

seizure. The taking of a thing into possession, the manner of taking and whether such taking is actual or constructive depending upon the nature of the thing seized. 36 Am J2d Forf & P § 30. Arresting and taking as a prisoner.

See search and seizure.

seizure and capture. The taking of the ships, goods, and effects of the enemy upon the high seas in time of war. 56 Am J1st War § 151.

seizure and confiscation. The taking and using of the property of the enemy in time of war, wherever it may be found and without compensation. 56 Am J1st War § 72.

selecti judices. (Roman law.) Chosen judges, judges chosen by the praetor, of whom those who were to serve were appointed by lot. See 3 Bl Comm 366.

selection of appraiser. See appointment of appraiser.

selection of exempt property. The act of a debtor in choosing the property he wishes to retain, as against an execution, where he has more than the number or value of chattels allowed by law as exempt. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 146.

See designation of homestead.

selection of grand jurors. The drawing of a list of persons to serve on the grand jury, usually closely regulated by statute. 24 Am J1st Grand J § 18.

selection of guardian. A matter committed largely to the discretion of the appointing court, but subject to a right of nomination by a ward who has reached a certain age, ordinarily that of 14 years, the paramount consideration, however, being the best interests of the ward. 25 Am J1st G & W §§ 26 et seq.

selection of homestead. See designation of homestead.

selection of jurors. The preparation of a list of names of persons for jury service; the depositing of names on such list in a jury wheel or box; a drawing from the jury wheel or box of the names of persons to serve as jurors at a certain trial term of court; the drawing from the names of persons summoned as jurors for a trial term of names of persons to serve as jurors in a particular case; and finally the impaneling of a jury in a particular case after examination of the several jurors on voir dire and the exercise of challenges. 31 Am 1 Rev ed Jury § 76.

selection of remedy. See election of remedies.

selective adoption. A basic principle that only so much of the English common law should be adopted as is compatible with our views of liberty and sovereignty, or as is adaptable to the peculiar conditions and circumstances of each state or to the wants and necessity of its people, or in harmony with the genius, spirit, and objects of its institution. Fuchs v Goe, 62 Wyo 134, 163 P2d 983, 166 ALR 1329.

selective draft. The process, machinery, and agencies in selecting and inducting into military service the persons who are subject to call for such service under a compulsory service act. 36 Am J1st Mil § 24.

selective logging operation. A term of the timber trade having reference to the provision in a contract for the sale and purchase of standing timber which reserves the privilege of designating the timber to be removed by the purchaser and the order of removal. Anno: 79 ALR2d 1243.

selective sales tax. A sales tax confined to a particular commodity or a limited number of commodities, such as taxes upon sales of intoxicating liquors, cigarettes, gasoline, and other petroleum products. 47 Am J1st Sales T § 1.

selective service. A form of compulsory military service. 36 Am J1st Mil § 22.

See selective draft; Selective Service Act.

Selective Service Act. A federal statute authorizing a draft for military service, that is, imposing compulsory military service and providing the means for calling men to the service. 50 USC Appx §§ 451 et seq.

selectmen. The members of a town board, especially in the New England states. Municipal officers. 37 Am J1st Mun Corp § 224.

selectus judex. Singular of selecti judices.

self. One's own self, as where a note is made payable to "self."

self-abuse. See masturbation.

self-crimination. Same as self-incrimination.

self-defense. A right founded upon the law of nature but deemed necessary even in organized society to personal safety and security and as not incompatible with the public good. 26 Am J1st Homi § 126. The use of force by a person against another to protect himself from bodily harm or an offensive contact, which he believes will result from conduct apparently intended to cause injury or offensive contact, or which is such as to put him in apprehension thereof. 6 Am J2d Asslt & B § 158. That which the law deems justified as the defense of one's person by such force and in such manner as is reasonably necessary when put under the necessity or apparent necessity of defending oneself without any fault on one's part, in order to protect against the peril of death or serious bodily injury at the hands of another. 26 Am J1st Homi § 125.

self-degradation. Putting oneself in a degrading position. Testimony of a witness not exposing him to any criminal prosecution or rendering him liable to any penalty or forfeiture, yet having a direct tendency to degrade his reputation. 58 Am J1st Witn § 35.

self-destruction. Literally, death by one's own hand or act, whether intentional or accidental. The equivalent of suicide for the purposes of an exception in a life insurance policy. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1145.

As the terms are frequently employed in policies of life insurance, "suicide" and "self-destruction" are held to be legally synonymous, and both mean an intended voluntary taking of one's own life. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v Akens, 150 US 468, 37 L Ed 1148, 14 S Ct 155.

self-disserving evidence. Evidence which is unfavorable to the party who offers it.

self-employed. Working, but not for an employer. Conducting one's own trade or business as sole proprietor or as a partner.

self-employed retirement plan. A retirement plan of a professional man, proprietor of a business, partner, or other self-employed person whereby he sets aside a specified part of his current earnings for use as a retirement fund in the future, which plan, if qualified under the tax law, permits to a limited extent the deduction of his contributions in determining his net income for tax purposes. Internal Revenue Code § 401(c)(1).

self-employment income. Net earnings from self-employment, subject to certain specific limitations fixed by statute. Internal Revenue Code § 1402(b).

self-employment tax. A tax paid by self-employed persons to finance their coverage under the social security system.

See self-employment income.

self-executing forfeiture. The termination of a franchise by the operation of a forfeiture clause in the grant without more. 36 Am J2d Franch § 46.

self-executing provision. A provision of a constitution which is effective without legislation, no action by the legislature being required to put it in operation. 16 Am J2d Const L § 94.

A constitutional provision may be said to be self-executing when it takes immediate effect and ancillary legislation is not necessary to the enjoyment of the right given, or the enforcement of the duty imposed. In short, if a constitutional provision is complete in itself, it executes itself. Lanigan v Gallup, 17 NM 627, 131 P 627.

self-executing treaty. A treaty with a foreign nation that operates of itself without the aid of legislation. 52 Am J1st Treat § 2.

self-help. A controverted doctrine in reference to escaping from the custody of an officer which is unlawful. 27 Am J2d Escape §§ 7, 12.

See self-preservation.

self-incrimination. The giving of testimony, the furnishing of evidence, or a demonstration by act, by which a witness incriminates himself because it is such or tends to be such as will convict him of a crime. 58 Am J1st Witn §§ 57 et seq.

See privilege against self-incrimination.

self-inflicted. Upon oneself by oneself.

Under a compensation statute which excludes only those injuries which are purposely self-inflicted, it is not enough that the employee merely disregards some rule, regulation, or order of the master, since such conduct may constitute nothing more than ordinary negligence on the part of the employee, and mere negligence does not destroy the right to compensation. But an accident resulting from a disobedience of express orders may be one intentionally produced within the meaning of the statute.

self-inflicted injury. For definition particularly in reference to use of intoxicants and drugs within the meaning of disability provision of insurance policy, see Anno: 166 ALR 834.

self-insurance. An employer engaging to make compensation payments directly to the injured employee in lieu of carrying insurance, he being required, as a condition of dispensing with an insurance carrier to furnish satisfactory proof of financial ability, file a bond, or make a deposit of securities as a guaranty of compensating his injured employees. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 546.

See reciprocal insurance.

self-insurer. An employer under workmen's compensation who is permitted under the conditions respecting self-insurance, to dispense with an insurance carrier. Sheehan Co. v Shuler, 265 US 371, 373, note, 68 L Ed 1061, 1062, note, 44 S Ct 548.

See self-insurance.

self-murder. An expression equivalent to suicide. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v Groom, 86 Pa 92.

self-pollution. See masturbation.

self-preservation. The instinct of protecting one's self against danger. The desire to live; the instinct which generally prompts men to acts of care and caution when approaching or in the presence of danger. Wabash R. Co. v De Tar (CA8 Iowa) 141 F 932. The instinct from which the presumption of due care for one's own protection arises. 38 Am J1st Negl § 337.

self-proving instrument. A written instrument admissible in evidence without preliminary proof of genuineness. 29 Am J2d Ev § 853.

self-regarding. See self-disserving evidence; self-serving declaration.

self-serving declaration. A statement, made out of court, favorable to the interest of the declarant. 29 Am J2d Ev § 621.

The vital objection to the admission of this kind of evidence is its hearsay character; the phrase "self-serving" does not establish an independent ground of objection. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v Wilder, 255 NC 114, 120 SE2d 404.

sell. To make a sale.

See sale.

sell and dispose of. Depending upon the context in which it appears, a term which may mean disposal by sale only or disposal by sale, barter, or exchange. Killmer Paint & Glass Co. v Davenport-Bethell Co. 136 Okla 252, 277 P 653, 63 ALR 997.

seller. One who sells property of his own. The vendor in a land contract or the party to a contract of sale of personal property who is making a sale of his property. Inclusive in the broader sense of the term of one who makes a sale for another, such as a broker. Anno: 50 ALR2d 1228 (involving civil liability under the Securities Exchange Act).

seller's option. The option of a seller of a commodity upon an exchange to deliver the same at any time within a month. Pixley v Boynton, 79 Ill 351. The option of the vendor in a contract of sale of personalty to accept money or something else of equivalent value if offered to him. Lee Lumber Co. v Hotard, 122 La 850, 48 So 286.

See put.

seller's risk. The risk of loss of the goods pending delivery thereof or the passing of title thereto to the buyer. 46 Am J1st Sales §§ 279, 280.

seller's talk. A seller's remarks respecting the quality of the goods offered for sale. 46 Am J1st Sales § 89. Statements which, although exaggerated as to value, quality, etc., are such as to be expected of a seller under universal commercial practices and reasonably to be understood as expressing no more than the opinion of the seller. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 54; 46 Am J1st Sales § 326; 55 Am J1st V & P § 67.

selling against the box. See sale against the box.

selling short. See short sale.

selling titles. See bracery.

semaphore. A system of signaling by the use of flags. An arrangement of lights, flags, and wooden, metal, or plastic arms, supported by a standard, near a railroad track, operated for the giving of signals to trains. Wagner v Chicago & A. R. Co. 265 111 245, 106 NE 809, affd 239 US 452, 60 L Ed 379, 36 S Ct 135.

semb. An abbreviation of semble.

semble. It seems; a dictum holds.

See come semble; et semble.

semblement. Similarly.

Semel civic semper civis. Once a citizen, always a citizen.

Semel malus semper praesumitur esse malus in eodem genere. Once bad, a person is always presumed to be bad in the same way.

semestria. (Civil law.) Collected decisions of the Roman emperors.

semicolon. A punctuation mark.

The comma and the semicolon are both used for the same purpose, namely, to divide sentences and parts of sentences, the only difference being that the semicolon makes the division more pronounced than the comma; but at the last it is the sense of the words, taken together, that dictates where the punctuation marks are to be placed, and what they shall be. Holmes v Phenix Ins. Co. (CA8 Mo) 98 F 240.

semidetached houses. Houses with separate entrances and separate approaches or sidewalks but having a wall in common so as to be in violation of a covenant restricting the premises to detached dwelling houses. Liedman v Hall, 110 Misc 365, 180 NYS 514.

semi-matrimonium. (Civil law.) Half-marriage; concubinage.

seminary. An educational institution, particularly one for the education of ministers of the gospel. Church v Bullock, 104 Tex 1, 109 SW 115. A private school, especially for young women.

Seminoles. See five civilized tribes.

semiplena probatio. In translation, half-proof.

semitontine policy. An endowment policy of life insurance.

See tontine policy.

semi-trailer. A vehicle of the trailer type so used in conjunction with a motor vehicle that some part of its own weight and that of its load rests upon or is carried by another vehicle. Maryland Casualty Co. v Cross (CA5 Tex) 112 F2d 58.

semper. Always; at all times.

Semper in dubiis benigniora praeferenda sunt. (Civil law.) In doubtful cases more liberal constructions are always to be preferred.

Semper in dubiis id agendum est, ut quam tutissimo loco res sit bona fide contracta, nisi quum aperte contra leges scriptum est. (Civil law.) In doubtful matters it should always be arranged so that a bona fide contract is in the safest situation, excepting when the writing is plainly contrary to law.

Semper in obscuris quod minimum est sequimur. In obscure matters we always following the construction which is least obscure. Sturges v Crowninshield (US) 4 Wheat 122, 150, 4 L Ed 529, 537.

Semper in stipulationibus et in caeteris contractibus id sequimur quod actum est. (Civil law.) In stipulations and in other contracts, we always follow that which has been agreed upon.

Semper ita fiat relatio ut valeat dispositio. A reference should always be made so that the disposition will be valid.

semper necessitas probandi incumbit ei qui agit. The burden of proof always lies upon him who alleges.

semper paratus. Always prepared; always ready.

Semper praesumitur pro legitimatione puerorum, et filiatio non potest probari. A presumption always exists in favor of the legitimacy of children, because filiation cannot be proved.

Semper praesumitur pro matrimonio. A presumption always exists in favor of matrimony; that is, in favor of the validity of the marriage. See 35 Am J1st Mar § 303.

Semper praesumitur pro negante. A presumption always exists in favor of a person who denies; that is, a defendant.

Semper praesumitur pro sententia. A presumption always exists in favor of a sentence.

Semper, qui non prohibet pro se intervenire, mandare creditur. One who does not forbid another to act in his stead is always deemed to have authorized him to do so.

The maxim is one of equity applicable to the ratification by a principal of the unauthorized act of an agent by silence or acquiescence. See Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v Cowell, 28 Pa 329.

Semper sexus masculinus etiam foeminum continet. (Civil law.) The masculine sex of gender always includes the feminine also.

Semper specialia generalibus insunt. (Civil law.) Special expressions or provisions are always included in general ones.

Semper ubique et ab omnibus. At all times, everywhere, and by everyone.

[1160]

"Considerable latitude must be allowed for differences of view as well as for possible peculiar conditions which this court can know but imperfectly, if at all. Otherwise, a constitution, instead of embodying only relatively fundamental rules of right, as generally understood by all English-speaking communities, would become the partisan of a particular set of ethical or economical opinions, which by no means are held semper ubique et ab omnibus." Otis v Parker, 187 US 606, 47 L Ed 323, 23 S Ct 168.

Senate. One of the two bodies of the Congress of the United States, composed of two Senators from each state. United States Constitution, Article 1, § 3, Clause 1. One of the houses of a state legislature. 49 Am J1st States § 28.

senator. A member of the senate; a member of the king's council.

Senatores sunt partes corporis regis. The senators are a part of the body of the king.

senatus consulta. Acts of the Roman senate. 1 Bl Comm 86.

senatus consultum. A public act of the Roman senate. See 1 Bl Comm 86.

senatus consultum ultimae necessitatis. The act of the senate in particular emergency. See 1 Bl Comm 136.

senatus decreta. The private acts of the Roman senate. See 1 Bl Comm 86.

senescallus. Same as seneschal.

seneschal. The steward of a manor.

senile dementia. A weakened condition of the mind due to old age. 57 Am J1st Wills § 100. A form of insanity marked by weakness indicating a mental breaking down in advance of bodily decay. Hiatt v Shull, 36 W Va 563, 565, 571, 15 SE 146.

senility. Old age. The mental state or condition of a very old person. The weakness attendant upon old age, whether of mind or body. Equitable Life Assur; Soc. v Garrett, 25 Ala App 446, 148 So 338.

senior. Higher in rank; prior or superior in force or effect; longer in service; older. One of a senior class.

When the word is added to a man's name, it indicates merely that he is the father of a man of the same name; it is not a part of the legal name, but is simply descriptio personae. Ferguson v Dillon, 3 Mo 59, 60.

senior chief petty officer. A noncommissioned officer of the Navy, ranking immediately above chief petty officer and immediately below master chief petty officer.

senior class. The most advanced class in high school or undergraduate college.

seniority. The principle in labor relations that length of employment determines the order of layoffs, rehiring, and advancements. Anno: 142 ALR 1055.

senior mortgage. A mortgage, the lien of which is entitled to or priority over that of a junior mortgage or other incumbrance.

senior widow. A widow claiming dower in lands of her deceased husband who was the ancestor of a decedent whose surviving spouse is a dower claimant in respect of the same lands. 25 Am J2d Dow § 87.

sensu. See lato sensu.

sensu et re ipsa. See in sensu et re ipsa.

sensu honesto. By or according to its fair or proper sense or meaning.

Sensus verborum est anima legis. The meaning of the words is the spirit of the law.

Sensus verborum est duplex, mitis et asper, et verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiore sensu. The meaning of words is twofold, mild, and harsh, and words should always be taken in their milder sense.

Sensus verborum ex causa dicendi accipiendus est, et sermones semper accipiendi sunt secundum subjectam materiam. The meaning of words is to be taken from the occasion of their utterance, and conversation should always be understood according to their subject matter.

sentence. A judgment in a criminal case denoting the action of the court in formally declaring to the accused the legal consequences of the guilt which he has confessed or of which he has been convicted. State v Fedder, 1 Utah 2d 117, 262 P2d 753.

See punishment.

sentence of nullity. A judicial declaration of the nullity of a marriage.

sententia. (Civil law.) An opinion; a decision; a judgment; the meaning or sense of a word or sentence.

Sententia a non iudice lata nemini debet nocere. A sentence or judgment rendered by a person who is not a judge ought not to harm anyone.

Sententia contra matrimonium nunquam transit in rem judicatam. A sentence or judgment which is in contravention of marriage never becomes a thing adjudged.

Sententia facit jus, et legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet. A judgment makes law, because the interpretation of the law has the force of law.

Sententia facit jus, et res judicata pro veritate accipitur. A judgment makes law, because a thing adjudged is received as the truth.

Sententia interlocutoria revocari potest, definitiva non potest. An interlocutory judgment can be recalled or revoked, but a final one cannot.

Sententia non fertur de rebus non liquidis. A judgment is not rendered upon matters which are not clear.

sentimental value. The value of an article upon considerations other than the true value or market value. 22 Am J2d Damg §§ 136, 150.

separable. Severable; capable of being separated or divided into component parts.

separable contract. See divisible contract; severability of contract.

separable controversy. A term of significance in reference to the removal of an action or suit from state to federal court. A cause of action, included in an action or suit in which more than one cause of action is asserted, which can be disentangled and separated from the other cause or causes of action and fully adjudicated separately. Anno: 110 ALR 189; 19 ALR2d 748. Necessitating a suit capable of separation into parts, so that in one of the parts a controversy may be presenting by one party and fully decided and determined without the presence of the other parties on the same side with him before the removal of the cause. Anno: 110 ALR 189.

A separable controversy is no longer an adequate ground for removal of a case from a state to a federal court unless it also constitutes a separate and independent claim or cause of action. The concept of "separate cause of action" restricts removal more than the concept of "separable controversy." In a suit covering multiple parties or issues based on a single claim there may be only one cause of action and yet be separable controversies. American Fire & Casualty Co. v Finn, 341 US 6, 95 L Ed 702, 71 S Ct 534, 19 ALR2d 738.

separate. Verb: To divide; to disunite. To place in different places; to keep apart.

separate. Adjective: Divided; distributed. Merrill v Pepperdine, 9 Ind App 416, 36 NE 921. Disconnected; independent; not a part of something else; distinct.

See joint.

separate acknowledgment. An acknowledgment by a married woman apart from the acknowledgment by her husband. 1 Am J2d Ack § 2.

separate action. An action brought by a single plaintiff, as distinguished from an action in which two or more persons join as plaintiffs.

separate and apart. A characterization of a status in the relations between husband and wife in which there has been, not merely a discontinuance of sexual relations, but a living apart for such a period and in such a manner that the fact that they are not living together is open to observation. Anno: 51 ALR 768; 97 ALR 988; 111 ALR 871.

separate and independent cause of action. See separable controversy.

separate business of wife. A business carried on by a married woman on her sole account. 27 Am J1st H & W §§ 463 et seq.

separate but equal. A doctrine, since repudiated, which justifies the segregation of races, particularly the white and black races in the public schools, where the accommodations and facilities provided are equal in service and comfort. Anno: 38 ALR2d 1188; 94 L Ed 1135; 98 L Ed 882.

separate cause of action. See separate counts.

separate counts. Two or more charges of distinct offenses in an indictment or information, each count being in contemplation of the law a separate indictment. 27 Am J1st Indict § 129. Divisions of a complaint, petition, bill, or declaration wherein the plaintiff pleads a single cause of action in more than one count, that is, in as many ways as he sees fit, in order to meet any possible phase of the evidence; divisions of a complaint, petition, bill, or declaration wherein the plaintiff states two or more causes of action, each being separately set forth. 41 Am J1st Pl §§ 106 et seq.

Under the rule of pleading that separate counts are required for separate and distinct causes of action, separate and distinct causes of action must be such as are both separable from each other, and separable by some distinct line of demarcation. Chaft Refrigerating Machine Co. v Quinnipiac Brewing Co. 63 Conn 551, 29 A 76.

separate defense. A defense in an action against two or more persons asserted by only one of the defendants. 41 Am J1st Pl § 119.

separate domicil. The domicil of a wife apart from that of her husband, being chosen by her, under circumstances which render it appropriate, necessary, or proper for her to have a separate domicil. 25 Am J2d Dom § 53.

separate estate of wife. A property owned, held and controlled by a married woman free from the dominion or control by the husband, as provided in equity or by Married Woman's Acts. 26 Am J1st H & W §§ 34 et seq. A property placed by law in the ownership, management, and control of a married woman. Cross v Benson, 68 Kan 495, 75 P 558.

separate examination. An examination of a married woman in taking her acknowledgment of her signature, made privately and apart from her husband, with respect to whether her signature was affixed voluntarily and without fear or compulsion of her husband. 1 Am J2d Ack § 2.

separate-general verdict. A finding by the jury upon any of the issues in favor of the plaintiff or the defendant.

The meaning of the expression is that the verdict is separate as to the particular issue as distinguished from any other issue in the case, and that it is general as to the particular issue. It is only applied in cases where there is more than one issue. It is not to be confused with a special verdict, which is a finding of facts by the jury. Witty v C. O. & S. W. Railroad Co. 83 Ky 21, 29.

separate maintenance. Provision made by a husband for the support of his wife living apart from him. The condition or status of a married woman who is living apart from her husband and is being supported by him, but without being divorced from him. An action which in some jurisdictions may be maintained by a married woman who is compelled through her husband's fault to live apart from him, by which action she is allowed separate maintenance or permanent alimony without being forced to seek a divorce. 27 Am J1st H & W §§ 401 et seq.

separate offenses. Criminal offenses so distinct that the evidence necessary to establish one differs from the evidence necessary to establish the other. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 8.

separate opinion. An opinion by one of the judges or justices of a court consisting of more than one judge or justice which is not approved by a majority of the members of the court, whether it be a concurring or a dissenting opinion. 20 Am J2d Cts § 71.

separate property. An estate in a community property jurisdiction held, both in its use and in its title, for the exclusive benefit of either the husband or the wife. 15 Am J2d Community Prop § 3.

separate trials. Separate trials of issues appearing in the same action upon a severance of the issues. 53 Am J1st Trial § 53. Separate trials of joint defend ants in a criminal prosecution. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 127.

separatim. Separately; severally; distinctly.

separation. The act by which something is separated. The condition or status of being separated, particularly that of husband and wife. A cessation of cohabitation of husband and wife by mutual agreement. Anno: 111 ALR 869. As a ground for divorce:-a physical separation of husband and wife with the intent to sever the marital status, at least an intent not to resume marital relations, some times, in the terms of the statutory requirement, beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 148.

The word has been used as synonymous with the word "divorce" with both legislative and judicial sanction, and when so used is applied to both a mere divorce a mensa et thoro as well as to a divorce a vinculo matrimonii; this is, it applies to all kinds of judicial separation of man and wife. Butler v Washington, 45 La Ann 279, 814, 818, 12 So 356.

See judicial separation.

separation agreement. An agreement made between husband and wife in prospect of the breaking up of the marital union, stipulating that it shall be lawful for the parties to live separate and apart until, by mutual agreement, the separation is ended, customarily containing a provision for support of the wife and children, if there be children of the union, and sometimes a stipulation that neither party will interfere with the other, such an agreement having a proper function even though the parties do not own property of consequence. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 883.

separation from service. The release of a member of the armed forces from active service, sometimes subject to obligations to the branch of which he was a member. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 4.

separation of grades. The elimination of grade crossings by providing overhead and underground crossings.

separation of jury. The separation of one or more jurors from their fellow jurors. The dispersal of a jury, the jurors going to their several homes or about their businesses or pleasures. 53 Am J1st Trial § 861.

The term implies the failure of the officer in charge of the jury to keep them together after they have retired for deliberation. Such separation is in some states in itself ground for a new trial. In other states it is ground for a new trial unless it is affirmatively established that no prejudice resulted there from. People v Adams, 143 Cal 208, 76 P 954.

separation of powers. The separation of executive, legislative, and judicial powers, a fundamental characteristic of the United States Government and the state governments as well. 16 Am J2d Const L § 210.

See division of powers.

sequela. A suit; a process; a prosecution.

sequela curiae. Suit of court.

sequester. To seize property under a writ of sequestration. (Civil law.) To renounce or relinquish a right or claim; to disclaim.

See sequestration.

sequestrari facias. A writ of execution against a beneficed rector, whereunder the bishop was ordered to withhold the profits and income of the benefice for the plaintiff.

sequestration. An equitable writ or process and the remedy thereunder by which property is taken into the possession of the court in order to assure obedience to a decree. 47 Am J1st Seques § 2. Equitable relief in aid of a party to an action of ejectment by a seizure of the rents and profits for preservation during the pendency of the action. 25 Am J2d Eject § 78. The seizure of the husband's property as a remedy in a matrimonial action in order to prevent a delinquent husband or father from escaping his liability for alimony or support by leaving the state. Smith v Smith, 255 App Div 652, 9 NYS2d 188. A doctrine of equity which originated in the doctrine of equitable election, and under which, when the widow elects to take against the will of her husband, the general rule is that the property given to her by such instrument will be sequestered for the benefit of those whose gifts under the will are disturbed by the action of the widow in electing to take against it. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1552.

sequestration receivership. A receivership established in a sequestration proceeding against a corporation. 45 Am J1st Rec § 3.

sequestrator. A party at whose instance a sequestration proceeding is prosecuted in a court of equity.

Sequi debet potentia justitiam, non praecedere. Power ought to follow justice, not to precede it.

sequitur. See et sequitur.

serf. A person who, under the feudal system, was bound to the soil of his birth-place to perform menial service for the lord of the manor.

sergeant. A noncommissioned officer of the Army, ranking immediately above a corporal and immediately below a staff sergeant.

[1163]

sergeant-at-arms. An officer of a legislative body or society who is appointed to enforce its rules and orders of procedure and decorum for the conduct of a meeting.

sergeant first class. A noncommissioned officer of the Army, ranking immediately above staff sergeant and immediately below master sergeant.

sergeant major. A noncommissioned officer of the Army, holding the highest rank of any noncommissioned officer.

serial bonds. Bonds issued by a public body payable at different times. 43 Am J1st Pub Sec § 8. Bonds of a corporation or municipality which are issued in a series of which different parts are redeemable at different specified dates. Fales v Multnomah County, 119 Or 127, 248 P 151.

serial building and loan association. A building and loan association whose stock is divided into series, each series being issued separately. Cook v Equitable Bldg. & Loan Assn. 104 Ga 814, 821, 30 SE 911.

serial number. The number placed upon a bond in issuance of the instrument. An identifying number placed upon the vehicle by the manufacturer of an automobile. An identifying number given to a person in the armed forces.

seriatim. Successively; in succession; severally.

seriaunt. Same as serjeant.

series of notes. Several promissory notes of different dates but given in a series of transactions over a period of time between the same parties.

serious. Important; weighty; momentous and not trifling. Lawlor v People, 74 Ill 228, 231.

serious ailment. A grave, if not dangerous, affliction of the body. French v Fidelity & Casualty Co. 135 Wis 259, 115 NW 869.

serious and wilful misconduct. Deliberate misconduct, something more than mere negligence or even gross or culpable negligence. Conduct to which moral blame attaches the intentional doing of something either with the knowledge that it is likely to result in serious injury or with a wanton and reckless disregard of its probable consequences. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 200.

serious bodily harm. See serious bodily injury.

serious bodily injury. An injury which gives rise to apprehension; an injury which is attended with danger. (Webster's Dictionary.) George v State, 21 Tex App 315, 317.

The word "serious," when used to define the degree of bodily harm or injury apprehended, requires or implies as high a degree as the word "great," and the latter word means high in degree, as contradistinguished from trifling. Lawlor v People, 74 Ill 228, 231.

serious illness. A grave, important, weighty trouble. An illness attended by danger, giving rise to apprehension. Eminent Household of Columbian Woodmen v Prater, 24 Okla 214, 103 P 558. An illness which permanently or materially impairs, or is likely permanently or materially to impair, the health or constitution. Anno: 153 ALR 717; 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 745.

serious injury. See serious bodily injury.

serious misconduct. Improper conduct of a grave and serious nature. Gonier v Chase Co. 97 Conn 46, 115 A 677, 19 ALR 83, 88 (term appearing in workmen's compensation statutes).

As the term is used in workmen's compensation acts, Bevan in his work on Workmen's Compensation says, page 401: "To constitute serious misconduct, it is probable that the legislature intended to signify conduct that an average workman, in being guilty of, would either know, or ought to know, if he turned his mind to consider the matter, to be conduct likely to jeopardize his own and his fellow workmen's safety." Horst Co. v Industrial Acci. Com. 184 Cal 180, 193 P 105, 16 ALR 611, 617.

See serious and wilful misconduct.

serjeant. British for sergeant. The title of the highest rank attainable in England in the profession of the common law.

See ancient serjeant; common serjeant; King's premier serjeant; premier serjeant.

serjeant-at-law. Same as serjeant.

Serjeants' Inn. The name of one of the English inns of court of which the serjeants-at-law were members.

serjeanty. See grand serjeanty; petit sergeanty.

Sermo index animi. Discourse is the index of the mind.

Sermones semper accipiendi sunt secundum subjectam materiam, et conditionem personarum. Conversations are always to be understood according to the subject matter and the condition of the person.

serological blood test. A blood test to determine type or group, of a special value in cases of disputed paternity because, although it cannot indicate with precision that a particular person is the father of the child whose paternity is in issue, in many instances it can establish that an alleged father could not have been the sire. Anno: 46 ALR2d 1003, § 1(b).

servage. The feudal service of furnishing one or more workmen for the lord of the manor.

Servanda est consuetudo loci ubi causa agitur. The custom or usage of the place where the action is brought should be observed.

The maxim is one of the civil law. Decouche v Savetier, 3 Johnson's Ch (Md) 190.

Within the meaning of embezzlement statutes, a servant is any person who is in the employ of another and who, in the discharge of his duties, is subject to the immediate control and direction of his employer. Private house servants or domestics, day laborers engaged to carry vegetables to market for sale and bring back the proceeds, and solicitors engaged for a salary to collect debts have been held to be such servants. 26 Am J2d Embez § 25.

For meaning of the term "servant" as it appears in a designation of a beneficiary under a will, see Anno: 38 ALR 786.

servants' pay. The pay, rations, and clothing of a private soldier, or money in lieu thereof, which are allowed to an army officer for each private servant which he is authorized to keep. 36 Am J1st Mil § 79.

servato juris ordine. In keeping with the order of the court. See 4 Bl Comm 179.

serve. To make or effect a service of the process of a court; as, to serve a subpoena or a summons. To perform a duty. To be a servant.

servi. (Roman law.) Persons who were employed in husbandry and manufactures. Ex parte Meason (Pa) 5 Binney 167, 180.

service. Work performed. Employment by another. A contraction of military service. A breeding.

A person is in the "service" of another when he is so occupied that during the continuance of the relation he is bound to submit his will to the direction and control of that other in the prosecution of that occupation. Cameron v State Theatre Co. 256 Mass 466, 467, 152 NE 880, 881.

The term as used in a provision of the Social Security Act defining employment as any service performed by an employee for his employer, means, not only work actually done, but the entire employer-employee relationship for which compensation is paid to the employee by the employer. Social Secur. Board v Nierotko, 327 US 358, 90 L Ed 718, 66 S Ct 637, 162 ALR 1445.

As used in the statutes and otherwise in connection with military and naval affairs, the word is an ambiguous one which is used in many senses. When used coupled with the word "active," referring to times of war or national emergency, it has a limited and immediately understandable meaning, but it may be used in a larger and more comprehensive sense, as where a statute refers to a severance of connection with "service" of an officer connected with a particular branch or department of the naval establishment, in which case the naval service as a whole may be signified. 36 Am J1st Mil § 20.

See continuous service; military service; public service; services of wife.

service association. An association the primary purpose, or one of the primary purposes, of which is to render services of special benefit to the members, such as an automobile association, an automobile dealers' association, an apple growers' association, etc. An association for the purpose of community improvement.

servicemen. Persons in, or who have been in, the armed forces. The terminology for certain employees of a business or industry, such as those who repair machines and appliances in the possession of customers.

Servicemen's Indemnity Act. A federal statute, enacted in 1951, under which all men in the armed forces were provided protection by life insurance without payment of premiums on the part of the servicemen. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1970.

servicemen's insurance. Insurance provided by the government and issued to persons in the armed services. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1970.

service of execution. Every act and proceeding necessary to be taken by the sheriff or execution officer to make the money required for satisfaction of the judgment and execution, including a sale of the property where necessary. Fallows v Continental & C. Trust & Sav. Bank, 235 US 300, 59 L Ed 238, 35 S Ct 29.

service of notice. The communication of the contents of a notice to the person entitled to receive it or intended to receive it in such manner that, as provided by law, he is charged with having received it,

service of pleading. A common requirement under modern rules of pleading and practice, consisting in the delivery of a true copy to the adverse party or his attorney of record. 41 Am J1st Pl § 317.

service of process. The delivery or other communication of a summons, writ, or other process to the opposite party, or other person entitled to receive it, in such manner that, as provided by law, he is charged with having received it, whether by reading the paper to him, delivering a true copy to him, mailing a copy to him, leaving a copy at his place or residence, or publication. 42 Am J1st Proc § 23.

As applied to process of courts, the word ordinarily implies something in the nature of an act or proceeding adverse to the party served, or of a notice to him. United States v McMahon, 164 US 81, 87, 41 L Ed 357, 360, 17 S Ct 28.

See service by mail; service by publication; substituted service.

service of summons. See service of process.

service of the ship. Acts done by a seaman for the benefit of the ship or in the actual performance of his duty, even including some acts on shore leave. 48 Am J1st Ship § 169. Working in the course of employment as a seaman, not in the course of a private pursuit. Barlow v Pan Atlantic S.S. Corp. (CA2 NY) 101 F2d 697.

service organization. An agency for the purpose of procuring help, employment, or engagement in service for a fee, sometimes temporary or emergency employment. State ex rel. Weasmer v Manpower of Omaha, Inc. 161 Neb 387, 73 NW2d 692.

See service association.

service pipe. A pipe running from the main of a public utility, usually in the street or highway, to abutting premises, for use in supplying water or gas to the premises.

service real. A term of the civil law meaning a service servitude which one estate owes to another, or the right of doing something or having privilege in one man's estate for the advantage and convenience of the owner of another estate. Karmuller v Krotz, 18 Iowa 352, 357.

The estate unto which the service is due is called "praedium dominans," or the ruling estate; and the other estate, which suffers or yields the service, is called "praedium serviens," or an estate subject to a privilege or service. Morgan v Mason, 20 Ohio 401.

services. A term applied to those acts or "renders," as they were called, which were due to the lords from their tenants under the old system of feudal tenure. See 2 Bl Comm 60.

See service.

services and labor. As the term appears in Married Woman's Acts:-pertaining to manual efforts as distinguished from business ventures carried on by the wife in her own name. 27 Am J1st H & W § 466.

services of wife. A term of art.

In connection with the right of a husband to maintain an action for the loss of his wife's "services," the word has come down to us from times in which the action originated, and it fails to express to the common mind the exact legal idea intended by it. The word, as so used, implies whatever of comfort, aid, assistance, and society the wife would be expected to render to or bestow upon her husband, under the circumstances and in the condition in which they may be placed, whatever those may be. (Cooley on Torts.) See Womach v St. Joseph, 201 Mo 467, 100 SW 443.

See services and labor.

service wire. A line of wire supplying electric current to a household, place of business, or industry. Anno: 40 ALR2d 1322, § 8.

servidumbre. A word found in Spanish-American grants, signifying a "servitude." Mulford v Le Franc, 26 Cal 88, 106.

serviens ad legem. A sergeant-at-law. Same as serjeant.

serviens narrator. A sergeant-at-law. Same as serjeant.

setoff. A discharge or reduction of one demand by an opposite demand. Malle v Harrell, 118 Tex 149, 12 SW2d 550. A defense or an independent demand made by the defendant to counterbalance that of the plaintiff, in whole or in part. Mack v Hugger Bros. Constr. Co. 153 Tenn 260, 283 SW 448, 46 ALR 389. The right which exists between two persons, each of whom under an independent contract, express or implied, owes an ascertained amount to the other, to set off their mutual debts by way of deduction so that in an action brought for the larger debt, the residue, only after such deduction, may be recovered.

Teeters v City Nat. Bank, 214 Ind 498, 14 NE2d 1004, 118 ALR 383. A counter demand which a defendant holds against a plaintiff, arising out of a transaction extrinsic to the plaintiff's cause of action. 20 Am J2d Countcl § 2. A money demand independent of and unconnected with the plaintiff's cause of action. Pekofsky v State, 15 Misc 2d 358, 180 NYS2d 930. In the broad sense, the discharge or reduction of one demand by an opposite one, or the right one party has against another to use his claim in full or partial satisfaction of what he owes to the other. 20 Am J2d Countcl § 2. Simply a mode of defense whereby the defendant acknowledges the justice of the plaintiff's demand on the one hand, but, on the other, sets up a demand of his own to counterbalance it, either in whole or in part. Peacock Hotel v Shipman, 103 Fla 633, 138 So 44; Steck v Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. 142 NY 238, 37 NE 1. In relation to transactions in futures, the method by which a contract to purchase is set off against a contract to sell without the formality of an exchange of warehouse receipts or actual delivery of the commodity, being in legal effect a delivery. Lyons Mill Co. v Goffe & Carkener (CAI 0 Kan) 46 F2d 241, 83 ALR 501. In respect of a decedent's estate:-the right of an executor or administrator, who is himself a creditor of the estate, to retain the amount of such debt out of the funds of the estate in his hands. A term used loosely for the right of an executor or administrator to deduct indebtedness due from a distributee. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 567.

setoff of benefits. Deducting the benefit to remaining property from a public improvement in ascertaining damages for property taken in eminent domain. 27 Am J2d Em D § 357.

setoff of judgments. A right of an equitable nature, arising as an incident of the general jurisdiction of the court over its suitors, whereby the satisfaction of a judgment may be wholly or partly produced by compelling a judgment creditor to accept in payment a judgment to which he is subject. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 1011.

set on foot. To arrange; to place in order; to set forward; to put in the way of being ready. United States v Ybanez (CC Tex) 53 F 536, 538.

set out. To start on a journey. To commence work upon a project to be accomplished. To set forth. To allege verbatim; to recite the very words of a document in a pleading. First Nat. Bank of Chadron v Engelbercht, 58 Neb 639, 641, 79 NW 556.

setting aside. Vacating, annulling; making void. A remedy on attack against an indictment for insufficiency, error, defect, or irregularity. 27 Am J1st Indict §§ 137 et seq.

"When it is said that such a voluntary deed is void or set aside, these terms must be understood as meaning only that the conveyance, while good against all others, shall not operate to defeat the equity of the creditors of the grantor." Steinmeyer v Steinmeyer, 64 SC 413, 42 SE 184.

See quashing; vacation; vacation of judgment.

setting case for trial. Fixing a certain day upon or after which the case may be called for final disposition or trial. 53 Am J1st Trial § 9.

"At the time the cause is first set upon the trial calendar," has been held to be synonymous with the words, "at the time the case is set for trial." Mutual Bldg. & Loan Asso. 220 Cal 282, 30 P2d 509.

settle. To take up residence in a place. To arrange or put in order. To pay a bill or account. To adjust differences; to eliminate controversy. To make a determination. To establish title or estate in a person.

When used with relation to pending litigation, the word has not acquired such a well defined meaning as would enable courts to interpret the intent of the parties in making use of it in connection with the ending of the litigation, without the aid of extrinsic evidence. Recourse must be had to the context of the agreement of the parties, to the circumstances under which the agreement was made, including the state and the various phases of the litigation referred to, and the conferences and correspondence between the parties pending the negotiation of the agreement. Setzer v Moore, 202 Cal 333, 260 P 550.

A written agreement "to settle" is not equivalent to an agreement to pay. It is not a recognition of the debt claimed; it is an offer to adjust matters and may be rather a denial of any indebtedness. Parker v Carter, 91 Ark 162, 120 SW 836.

When applied to a liquidated demand, "to settle" means to pay it. When applied to an unliquidated demand, the word means to effect a mutual adjust ment between the parties and to agree upon the balance. State v Staub, 61 Conn 553, 568.

settled account. An account which has been paid. 1 Am J2d Acctg § 21. In loose usage, an account stated.

settled insanity. Insanity caused by abstinence from alcoholic beverages by one whose system has been broken down by long-continued or habitual drunkenness.

It is called settled insanity to distinguish it from temporary insanity or drunkenness, directly resulting from drink. Sanders v McMillian, 31 Tex Crim 318, 20 SW 744.

settlement. The ending of a controversy by agreement. The determination of an issue or of the correctness of an account. The payment of an obligation. The order made upon a trustee's account, determining the amount of the trust in the hands of the trustee and his liability therefor, decreeing distribution to the parties entitled thereto, and in the case of a continuing trust, re-awarding the body of the trust to the trustee for further administration. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 511. An administrative determination of the amount due from the United States upon a public contract. Illinois Surety Co. v United States, 240 US 214, 221, 60 L Ed 609, 614, 36 S Ct 326.

The actual occupation of lands by a pre-emptor for the purpose of obtaining title thereto from the government. 42 Am J1st Pub L § 22.

As a prerequisite to the acquisition of public lands of the United States, the term is used as comprehending acts done on the land by way of establishing or preparing to establish an actual personal residence-going thereon and, with reasonable diligence, arranging to occupy it as a home to the exclusion of one elsewhere. The law makes it plain that there must be a definite purpose in good faith to obtain a home by proceeding faithfully and honestly to comply with all the requirements. See Great Northern Railway Co. v Reed, 270 US 539, 545, 70 L Ed 721, 724, 46 S Ct 380.

A settlement on public lands of the United States with a view to pre-empt is made by a person who inhabits and improves such land and erects a dwellinghouse thereon, in good faith and with a view and intent of obtaining title to the same by complying with the provisions of the pre-emption law of the United States. See Peterson v First Division St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. 27 Minn 218, 222.

See compromise and settlement; equity for a settlement; family settlement; marriage settlement; property settlement.

settlement in pais. A settlement or adjustment of differences between the parties themselves, out of court.

settlement of a minister. A term of art, of little significance in modern times.

In colonial times in New England it was the general practice of parishes not having parsonages to grant a sum of money or other property to the minister, exclusive of his annual salary, which is emphatically called his settlement. This name was derived from the uses to which it was intended the money should be applied by him. That is, he was expected to establish a permanent home among his people and be conveniently situated to perform his duties. 45 Am J1st Reli Soc § 29.

settlement of bill of exceptions. See settlement of case.

settlement of case. A settlement of a bill of exceptions by a determination that it is correct, made by the trial judge where the parties to the appeal are unable to agree to the correctness of the bill. 4 Am J2d A & E § 444.

settlement of pauper. The place where a poor person has a legal right to support as a pauper. The residence, home, or dwelling place, rather than the domicil, of the pauper. 41 Am J1st Poor L § 23. Sometimes both residence and domicil. Re Quale, 213 Minn 421, 7 NW2d 153 (condition of right to old-age assistance).

settlement option. An option provided for the insured under a life insurance policy, respecting the method and time of payment of the proceeds of the insurance. An option provided the annuitant under an annuity contract in reference to taking a straight annuity, an annuity with refund to a designated beneficiary, or an annuity with a contingent beneficiary. A similar option under a pension or retirement plan.

settler. One who has made a settlement upon public lands. A pioneer in a new country or a region newly opened to settlement in an older country.

settlor. The creator of a trust. One who has conveyed or transferred property to another who is to hold the same as trustee for the benefit of a third person or persons. The person who furnishes the consideration for the trust, even though in form the trust is created by another person, as where a decedent by paying a quid pro quo has caused another person to make a transfer of property with enjoyment subject to change by the exercise of such power by the decedent. Lyman v Commissioner (CA2 NY) 109 F2d 99.

seven bishops. See Case of the Seven Bishops.

Seventh Amendment. An amendment to the United States Constitution, contained in the Bill of Rights, preserving the right of trial by jury in suits at common law where the value in controversy exceeds $20, and providing further that no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.

seven years' absence. Absence from which there arises a presumption of death where it has continued as an unexplained absence of a person from his home or place of residence without any intelligence from or concerning him for the period of seven years. 22 Am J2d Dth § 304.

sever. To cut in two; to divide.

See severance.

severability. The quality of being susceptible to division, leaving parts independent of each other.

severability clause. Same as saving clause.

severability of contract. The quality in a contract in contrast with entirety. The quality which renders the contract susceptible to division into sets to be performed, each set embracing a performance on the one side which is an agreed exchange for performance on the other. Restatement, Contracts § 266, Comment e. A quality which renders enforceable a valid part, it availing pro tanto, although another part may be invalid. 17 Am J2d Contr § 230. A quality which characterizes an agreement reached by the parties through negotiations wherein each item or some of the items were regarded as units, as distinguished from an agreement whereof the items were regarded from no point of view other than that in which they were regarded as a whole, as an entirety without divisibility. A quality to be determined according to the intention of the parties as determined by a fair construction of the contract itself, by the subject matter to which it has reference, or the circumstances of the particular transaction giving rise to the question. 17 Am J2d Contr § 325.

As a general rule a severable contract is one in its nature susceptible of division and apportionment. Whether a contract is entire or separable is a question very largely of intention, which intention is to be determined from the language the parties have used and the subject matter of the agreement. The divisibility of the subject matter or the consideration is not necessarily conclusive, though of aid, in arriving at the intention. Where it reasonably appears from the language of the contract or from its terms that the parties intended that a full and complete performance should be made with reference to the subject matter of the contract by one party, in consideration of the obligation of the other party, to the contract, it is said to be entire. Quarton v American Law Book Co. 143 Iowa 517, 121 NW 1009.

A contract may be severable as to some of its terms, or for certain purposes, but indivisible as to other terms or for other purposes. Simmons v California Institute of Technology, 34 Cal 2d 264, 209 P2d 581.

In construing a contract to determine whether it is entire or severable, many of the courts have regarded the singleness or apportionability of the consideration as an important test—that is, if the consideration is single, the contract is entire, but if the consideration is expressly or by necessary implication apportioned, the contract is severable. 17 Am J2d Contr § 326.

A plaintiff can sue once; he must then set up his whole cause of action. He cannot sue in successive actions for different parts of the same thing. But separate independent agreements may be included under one contract, and if they are divisible, suit upon one agreement does not preclude suit upon the other. The usual test of severability is whether the consideration is so segregated that it may be severally applied to each independent covenant in the contract. Hospelhorn v Circle City Coal Co. (CA6 Ky) 117 F2d 166.

severability of deposition. The quality of being susceptible to division, leaving parts independent of each other; a quality upon which the right to use only a part of a deposition upon a trial is based. 23 Am J2d Dep § 108.

severability of statute. A concept applicable when a part of a statute is unconstitutional, the question being whether severability permits the saving of the part not unconstitutional in itself. The quality of a statute in the respect that a part of it has meaning and can stand by itself. A matter to be determined according to the apparent intent of the legislative body which enacted the legislation. 16 Am J2d Const L § 182.

If it is impossible to tell what part of a statute is intended to be operative when some of its provisions are unconstitutional, it is wholly invalid. Woolf v Fuller, 87 NH 64, 174 A 193, 94 ALR 1067.

severable contract. See divisible contract; severability of contract.

severable deposition. See severability of deposition.

severable judgment. A judgment consisting of separate, distinct, and unrelated parts, the disposition of one of which on appeal will not affect the other, as where a judgment is on different causes of action pleaded in separate counts, or severed by the court, so that they stood independently for the purpose of an award of judgment. 4 Am J2d A & E § 254.

severable statute. See severability of statute.

several. Separate and distinct, implying diversity or division. Merrill v Pepperdine, 9 Ind App 416, 36 NE 921. Lunt v Post Printing & Publishing Co. 48 Colo 316, 110 P 203. More than two, but not a multitude. Sometimes deemed to include as many as seven. Tift v Harden, 22 Ga 623.

several actions. Actions which are separate, as distinguished from those which are joint.

several covenant. A covenant made with two or more covenantees which contains words of severalty, or whereby the covenantees take separate interests in the fruits of the covenant.

A covenant by more than one person must be regarded as several, where the interest of the covenantors is separate and performance cannot be made jointly, unless the intention of the parties appears to have been that each should be bound for the performance of the other. 20 Am J2d Cov § 10.

several defenses. Separate defenses by joint defendants. 41 Am J1st Pl § 119. Two or more defenses pleaded by one defendant. 41 Am J1st Pl §§ 161 et seq.

several fishery. An obsolete term for an exclusive fishery.

See exclusive fishery.

several inheritance. A characteristic of descent, heirs taking moieties as tenants in common. 23 Am J2d Desc & D § 50.

several liability. The individual liability of two or more persons in reference to claimant's demand. Pruyn v Black, 21 NY 300, 303.

See joint and several liability.

severally. Distinctly; separately; apart from others. State Nat. Bank v Reilly, 124 Ill 464, 471.

severally liable. See several liability.

several ownership. Ownership by a single person, as distinguished from ownership as tenant in common or joint tenant.

severalty. See estate in severalty; in severalty; tenant in severalty.

severance. The act of severing, dividing, or separating; the state of being disjoined or separated. Anno: 18 ALR 1342. The act or fact of so removing anything attached or affixed to land, or a part of the land itself, so as to change its character from being a part of the real property to personal property. Buckout v Swift, 27 Cal 433. A graphic expression for separation of the ownership of minerals from the ownership of the land. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 29. A conveyance of land with an exception or reservation of mineral rights or a conveyance of the mineral rights or of the surface alone. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 17. The termination of a joint tenancy or tenancy in common. 20 Am J2d Coten §§ 15, 31.

See harvest.

severance of action. The splitting of a cause of action by a pleader. The severance of issues for separate trials. A method of granting separate trials to separate defendants in a civil action. 53 Am J1st Trial § 55.

See severance of criminal prosecution; severance of issues; splitting cause of action.

severance of criminal prosecution. Separate trials of the defendants in a criminal case because of antagonistic defenses, admission or confession by one, etc. 53 Am J1st Trial §§ 56 et seq.

severance of issues. The separation of issues appearing in a trial for a separate trial of a particular issue or issues, especially where there are equitable issues to be tried to the court and issues at law to be tried to a jury. 53 Am J1st Trial § 53.

severance of member. The amputation or physical separation of arm, leg, hand, etc. Anno: 18 ALR 1342; 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1511.

severance of statute. The separation by judicial construction of those provisions of the statute which are constitutional from those which are unconstitutional, and striking the latter from the statute. Ballard v Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. 81 Miss 507, 34 So 533.

See severability of statute.

severance pay. A payment made by an employer to an employee upon termination of the employment, otherwise known as dismissal compensation or separation wage.

See dismissal compensation.

severance tax. A tax directed against the production, or severance from the soil, of natural resources such as timber, oil, natural gas etc. 51 Am J1st Tax § 1259. A tax on the skin of a fur-bearing animal taken within the state. 35 Am J2d Fish § 41.

severe. Serious; grave. Harsh; strict.

See intolerable severity.

severe disease. A disease causing a severe illness. Anno: 153 ALR 717. A disease which permanently or materially impairs, or is likely to impair permanently or materially, the health or constitution. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 745.

severe gale. A wind of great velocity, having the capacity of wreaking great destruction. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. v Columbia, 65 Kan 390, 69 P 338.

severe illness. An illness which permanently or materially impairs, or is likely to impair permanently or materially, the health or constitution. Anno: 153 ALR 717; 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 745.

sewage. Filth and waste matter carried away in sewers and drains. 25 Am J2d Drains § 1. Excrement, as well as waste, refuse or foul matter, carried off in sewers and drains, whether open or closed, by the water flowing therein. Durham v Eno Cotton Mills, 144 NC 705, 57 SE 465.

sewage disposal plant. See disposal plants.

sewer. An underground conduit or covered drain which carries away filth and waste matter, or, as in the case of a storm sewer, surface water and street wash. Anselmi v Rock Springs, 53 Wyo 223, 80 P2d 419, 116 ALR 1250; 25 Am J2d Drains § 1.

That which is a "drain" in rural and agricultural communities may be called a "sewer" in an urban community. 25 Am J2d Drains § 1.

sewerage. The sewer system of a municipality or other political subdivision. The removal of sewage. Sewage.

sex. Character as male or female. Comprehensive in the modern sense of the term of anything connected with the attraction of one sex for the other in a physical way and sexual intercourse.

See asexualization.

sexagenarian. A person over sixty but less than seventy years of age.

sex deviate. See homosexual; lesbian.

sextery lands. Lands which were donated to a church for the support of its sexton.

Sextus Decretalium. The sixth decretal which was added to the decretals of Gregory IX., by Boniface VIII., about 1298. See 1 Bl Comm 82.

sexual assault. The indecent conduct of a man toward a woman or child or of a man toward another man, accompanied by the threat or danger of physical suffering or injury or inducing fear, shame, humiliation, and mental anguish. 6 Am J2d Asslt & B § 24. The act of a man in taking indecent liberties with a woman, as where he indecently fondles her without her consent. Walker v State, 132 Ala 11, 31 So 557. The act of a man in placing a woman in fear of an attack by him upon her chastity. 6 Am J2d Asslt & B § 119.

See assault with intent to rape; indecent assault.

sexual commerce. Same as sexual intercourse.

sexual disease. Same as venereal disease.

sexual intercourse. The actual contact of the sexual organs of a man and a woman, and an actual penetration into the body of the latter. State v Frazier, 54 Kan 719, 725, 39 P 819.

The term does not comprehend intercourse which is partial or imperfect, as in cases where that is impossible because of malformation, sensitive repugnance, or impotence. 4 Am J2d Annul § 32.

sexual psychopath. One affected with a form of psychopathic personality which disposes him to the commission of sexual offenses. A person who, by a habitual course of misconduct in sexual matters, has evidenced an utter lack of power to control his sexual impulses, and who, as a result, is likely to attack or otherwise inflict injury, loss, pain, or other evil on the objects of his uncontrolled and uncontrollable desires. State ex rel. Pearson v Probate Court, 205 Minn 545, 287 NW 297, affd 309 US 270, 84 L Ed 744, 60 S Ct 523, 126 ALR 530. A person in whom there is combined emotional instability and impulsiveness of behavior or inability to appreciate the consequences of his acts, so that he is unable to control his sexual desires and thereby dangerous to other persons. Ditrich v Brown County, 215 Minn 234, 9 NW2d 510. A person adjudicated to be a "sexual psychopath." Anno: 24 ALR2d 373, § 9.

shackles. Iron bands fastened on the legs or arms of a prisoner and joined by a chain.

See handcuffs; manacles.

shadow. To trail a person from place to place, observing his activities and associates, usually with the intent to prevent him from becoming aware of the surveillance.

See rough shadowing.

shadow area. The part of a field of controversy which is indefinite as to the exact nature of the questions presented. An area in which questions of law and questions of fact coalesce. 5 Am J2d A & E § 829.

[1171]

shaft. A part of a mine; a vertical or slanting passage way from which lateral diggings reach the mineral. A heavy rod by which power is applied to a moving part of a machine.

See discovery shaft.

Shakers. A religious society known particularly for condemning marriage contracted with unworthy motives. Waite v Merrill, 4 Me 102.

shale. A mineral. Anno: 17 ALR 167, s. 86 ALR 990.

Rock formed by the consolidation of clay, mud, or silt, having a finely stratified or laminated structure.

It presents almost endless varieties of texture and composition, passing, on the one hand, into clays, or, where much indurated into slates and argillaceous schists; on the other into flagstones and sandstones; or again through calcareous gradations into limestone, or through ferruginous varieties into clay ironstone, and through bituminous kinds into coal. R. J. Funkhouser & Co. v Fiske & Co. (CA3 Pa) 106 F2d 679.

shall. Providing generally, but not always, a mandate, where appearing in a constitutional provision. 16 Am J2d Const L § 92. Ordinarily, a word of mandate, the equivalent of "must," where appearing in a statute. Stanfield v Willoughby (Ky) 286 SW2d 908, 53 ALR2d 925; State ex rel. McKittrick v Wymore, 343 Mo 98, 119 SW2d 941, 119 ALR 710; Saba v Homeland Ins. Co. 159 Ohio St 237, 112 NE2d 1, 44 ALR2d 841. Construed as "must" in a statute providing for increased punishment for a subsequent offender. People v Gowasky, 244 NY 451, 155 NE 737, 58 ALR 9. Sometimes meaning "may," as where used in a statute providing that when property owners petition for the improvement of a street, the municipal authorities "shall" cause the work to be done. Rockwell v Junction City, 92 Kan 513, 141 P 299.

The word "shall" may be held to be merely directory when no advantage is lost, when no right is destroyed, when no benefit is sacrificed, either to the public or to any individual, by giving it that construction. Montgomery v Henry, 144 Ala 629, 39 So 507.

shall become due and payable. Due and payable at the option of the holder of the instrument in which the clause appears. Nickell v Bradshaw, 94 Or 580, 183 P 12, 11 ALR 623.

shall go. The equivalent of "shall vest" where used in a statute of descent. Plass v Plass, 121 Cal 131, 53 P 448.

sham. Adjective: False, counterfeit, pretended, feigned, unreal. Noun: Deception; any trick or fraudulent device that disappoints; a makebelieve imposition; a humbug. Williams v Territory, 13 Ariz 27, 108 P 243.

sham answer. See sham pleading.

sham bidder. One who bids at an auction for the purpose of inflating the price for the benefit of the owner of the property or other person interested in the sale; a puffer.

See puffer.

sham conviction. A conviction in a sham or collusive proceeding under which the defendant pleads guilty to a minor offense in order to avoid an anticipated prosecution on a more serious charge based on the same facts. Anno: 75 ALR2d 691, § 4.

sham defense. See sham pleading.

sham gift. A gift in form but not in fact, there being no intent or understanding on the part of the purported donor or purported donee that the former should divest himself of control over the subject matter. Richardson v Smith (CA2 Conn) 102 F2d 697, 125 ALR 774.

sham marriage. A marriage ceremony performed in jest. A marriage entered into by one of the parties in good faith but illegal because of intentional acts or omissions on the part of the other party. Lee v State, 44 Tex Crim 354, 72 SW 1005.

sham pleading. Allegations pleaded in bad faith. A pleading which is false in fact to the knowledge of the pleader, whatever it may be in form. 41 Am J1st Pl § 50. A pleading palpably and manifestly false on its face. Commonwealth ex rel. Meredith v Murphy, 295 Ky 466, 174 SW2d 681.

See frivolous answer.

shape-up. A labor-law term for a system of hiring a crew for a particular job.

The particular needs of an employer are communicated to the union which, together with the employer, shares the responsibility for posting information at various places, and the employer then employs a hiring boss, both for the purpose of recruiting a specific crew from among those applicants who appear at a predesignated "shape-up" point, and for the purpose of acting thereafter as crew foreman until the work is completed. Anno: 38 ALR2d 414.

share. A word of different connotations. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1327. The portion of a testator's estate given to a particular beneficiary. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1327. The portion of an intestate estate to which one of two or more heirs or distributees is entitled. A share of corporate stock. The proportional equitable ownership of a shareholder in a business trust. Schumann-Heink v Folsom, 328 Ill 321, 159 NE 250, 58 ALR 485.

See distributive share; share of stock.

share and share alike. Ordinarily, but not necessarily, a phrase of severance which negatives the creation of a joint tenancy. Anno: 46 ALR2d 532, 537. Ordinarily, but not necessarily, indicative of a per capita distribution. Anno: 126 ALR 159; 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 1265, 1297.

share-a-ride arrangement. See car pool.

sharecropper. One whom a landowner engages under a sharecropping arrangement. 21 Am J2d Crops § 35.

sharecropping. An arrangement whereby a landowner hires a person to cultivate the land and raise a crop thereon and to receive for his labor a share of the crop which he works to make and harvest. 21 Am J2d Crops § 35.

shareholder. A stockholder. A participant in a business trust, occupying a relation to the trust similar to the relation of a stockholder in a corporation to the corporation. 13 Am J2d Bus Tr § 30. Broadly, one who holds or is entitled to a share in any form of enterprise or property.

As to the several classes of persons who are included in the term shareholder as it is used in the Federal statute authorizing an assessment of one hundred per cent against a shareholder of a national bank, for the benefit of creditors of the bank, see McCandless v Haskins (DC SD) 20 F2d 688.

See stockholder; treasury shares.

shareholder's derivative suit. See derivative action.

share lease. A lease providing for the payment of grain or crop rent.

See share rent; share tenant.

share lien. The lien of a building and loan association upon shares of its stock for any indebtedness of the shareholder to the association. 13 Am J2d B & L Assoc § 26.

share of stock. A unit of interest in a corporation. The property interest of a stockholder in the corporation. 18 Am J2d Corp § 209.

The tangible property of a corporation and the shares of stock therein are separate and distinct kinds of property and belong to different owners, the first being the property of the artificial person –the corporation –the latter the property of the individual owner.

A share of stock merely represents, or is a fractional part of, some other property. Millar v Mountcastle, 161 Ohio St 409, 119 NE2d 626, 49 ALR2d 381.

Shares of stock are to be distinguished from the certificates which merely represent ownership of the stock. State v Crawford, 159 Or 377, 80 P2d 873.

share rent. A rent payable in a share of the crop produced upon the demised premises. 32 Am J1st L & T § 468.

A county officer representing the executive or administrative power of the state within his county. 47 Am J1st Sher § 2. An officer for the execution of criminal and civil process.

The office of sheriff is one of the oldest known to the common law. It is inseparably associated with the county. The name itself signifies keeper of the shire or county. The office is said to have been created by Alfred when he divided England into shires, but Coke believed it to have been of Roman origin. In England the sheriff was the immediate officer of the king within the shire, the conservator of the peace within the county, keeper of the county jail and commander of the posse comitatus, and he served and enforced the processes of the state. In the United States his functions are similar and he is the chief executive officer of the state in his county. He obeys the mandate of the state not only when issued to him by the courts of his county, but he executes writs directed to him by the courts of other counties. State ex ref. Beach v Finn, 4 Mo App 347, 352.

Si in chartis membranisque tuis carmen vel historiam vel orationem Titius scripserit, hujus corporis non Titius sed tu dominus esse videris. (Civil law.) If Titius shall have written a poem, a history or a speech on your paper or parchment, not Titius, but you, are deemed to be the owner of the whole. See 2 Bl Comm 406.

si ita est. If it is true. An expression used in writs of mandamus which issued out of the English court of chancery to compel an inferior court to sign a bill of exceptions, and commanding the judge to seal it, if the fact alleged be truly stated. Ex parte Crane (US) 5 Pet 190, 193, 8 L Ed 92, 93.

Si judicas, cognosce. If you judge, first understand.

silence. Refraining from speech. The absence of speech; not a concealment or representation in itself. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 144.

Mere silence, as a general rule does not amount to an assent, but, taking it together with other circumstances, there are many cases in which silence or acquiescence will warrant a conclusive presumption that assent has been given. Myers v Cook, 87 W Va 265, 104 SE 593.

Silence operates as a waiver only when there is an obligation to speak. Dunbar v Farnum, 109 Vt 313, 196 A 237, 114 ALR 996.

See estoppel by silence.

silence of Congress. A doctrine of frequent application in determining whether a state may enact regulations in a field of legislation in the absence of any direct expression of the will of the Federal Government, the rule being that when the subjects of a power are in their nature national or admit of one uniform system or plan, exclusive regulation by Congress is presumed to be required, and the failure of Congress to exercise the power of regulation is deemed to be an expression of its will that the subject should remain free from restrictions or impositions upon it by the several states. 16 Am J2d Const L § 209.

Silent leges inter arma. The laws are silent in warfare.

"The maxim expresses a fact, and a necessary fact, rather than a sentiment or principle." See argument of counsel in Prize Cases (US) 2 Black 635, 17 L Ed 459, 465.

silent partner. Same as dormant partner.

silent partners. Persons not known to be partners and not appearing to the public as partners, but who are nevertheless partners, as by partaking of profits, to all intents and purposes or, at least, in respect of third persons. 40 Am J1st Partn § 15.

silent policeman. A mechanical device placed at an intersection of streets for controlling traffic. Aaronson v New Haven, 94 Conn 609, 110 A 872, 12 ALR 328.

silver fox. A fox noted for the value of its pelt. A fox which can be bred, raised, and pelted in captivity. Fromm Bros. v United States (DC Wis) 35 F Supp 145.

sim. Contraction of similis. Resembling; similar.

See et sim.

Si meliores sunt quos ducit amor, plures soot corrigit timor. Although love guides those who are better, fear corrects more.

similar. Having a resemblance in many respects to, nearly corresponding with, is somewhat like, or has a general likeness to, some other thing. Japan Import Co. v United States, 24 Cust & Pat App 167, 86 F2d 124; Fletcher v Interstate Chemical Co. 94 NIL 332, 110 A 709, 17 ALR 92, affd 95 NIL 543, 112 A 887, 17 ALR 92. Something less than being an exact duplicate of something else. 13 Am J2d Bldg Contr § 10. Sometimes, depending upon the context in which it appears, meaning identical or exactly alike. Anno: 17 ALR 94.

similarly. In like manner. In manner substantially the same. General Motors Corp. v Read, 294 Mich 558, 293 NW 751, 130 ALR 429.

similis. (Latin.) Resembling. Similar.
See et sim.

similiter. The like. A formal statement in writing whereby a party expresses his acceptance of an issue tendered by the pleading of his adversary.

A similiter is not in strictness a part of a pleading, but common-law practice regarded it as a vital formality. Haling v Florida Sav. Bank, 19 Fla 695, 705.

similiter dicere. To say the like; to homologate. Hecker v Brown, 104 La 524, 527, 29 So 232.

similitude provisions. Provisions in tariff schedules intended to charge articles not enumerated therein with the duty applicable to articles which they most resemble. 21 Am J2d Cust D § 51.

Similitudo legalis est casuum diversorum inter se collatorum similis ratio; quod in uno similibus valet, valebit in altero. Dissimilium dissimilis est ratio.

[1181]

Legal similarity is a similar reason of different cases compared with one another, and what prevails in one similar case prevails in another. The reason of dissimilar cases is dissimilar.

simonia. Same as simony.

simony. The crime of buying or selling ecclesiastical preferment, or the corrupt presentation of anyone to an ecclesiastical benefice for money or reward. State v Boswell, 40 Neb 158, 58 NW 728.

The word derives from Simon Magus, who was found to have purchased holy orders. It was not a common-law offense, but was wholly an ecclesiastical one. See 2 Bl Comm 278.

Si mortuo viro uxor ejus remanserit, et sine liberis fuerit, dotem suam habebit—si vero uxor cum liberis remanserit, dotem quidem habebit, dum corpus suum legitime servaverit. If upon her husband's death his wife shall survive him, and she shall be without children, she will have her dower -but if she shall survive him with children she shall have dower while she lives in propriety. See 2 Bl Comm 133.

simple. Free of complexity. Easily understood. Unmixed. Not aggravated.
See fee simple.

simple annuity. Same as straight annuity.

simple assault. An attempt to do bodily harm to a person which fails, falls short of doing the harm, touching the body or doing the battery. For instance, striking at another within striking distance, but not striking him. State v Lightsey, 43 SC 114, 115, 20 SE 975.

simple average. Same as particular average.

simple blockade. A blockade which may be established by a naval officer, acting upon his own discretion or under direction of superiors, without governmental notification.

In the case of a simple blockade, captors are bound to prove its existence at the time of the capture; while in the case of a public blockade, the claimants are held to proof of discontinuance in order to protect themselves from the penalties of attempted violation. Hunter v United States (US) 2 Wall 135, 17 L Ed 796.

simple bond. An obligation whereby the obligor binds himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators to pay a certain sum of money to a named obligee on demand or on a day certain. Burnside v Ward, 170 Mo 531, 71 SW 337.

simple confession. A plea of guilty in a criminal prosecution. State v Willis, 71 Conn 293, 309, 41 A 820.

simple contract. A parol contract; an oral contract; a written contract not under seal. Perrine v Cheeseman, 11 NJL 174. Any contract other than a specialty or a contract of record. Western Union Tel. Co. v Taylor, 84 Ga 408, 11 SE 396.

simple homage. A mere acknowledgment of tenure. See 1 Bl Comm 367.

simple interest. Interest computed on principal only. 30 Am J Rev ed Int § 2. The straight interest computed on the principal sum from the time when by the terms of the contract interest is to commence, to the time of payment or judgment. Hovey v Edmison, 3 Dak 449, 460, 22 NW 594.

simple larceny. A plain theft unaccompanied by any other atrocious circumstance. 32 Am J1st Larc § 3. The felonious taking and carrying away by man or woman of the personal goods of another, neither from the person, nor by night in the house of the owner. State v Chambers, 22 W Va 779.

simple license. The grant of authority, without reward or consideration, to do a particular act, or series of acts, on another's land, without passing any interest or estate in the soil.

Such a license is revocable at the pleasure of the licensor, but not to make the licensee responsible in trespass or otherwise for acts done on the land in pursuance of the license. Neither is it revocable where the grantee has been induced to expend his means or money towards its enjoyment, without reimbursing him for what has been thus expended. Wynn v Garland, 19 Ark 23.

simple loss payable clause. A clause in a policy of insurance on property subject to mortgage or lien, covering loss by fire, windstorm, flood, or other peril, providing for the payment of the proceeds of the insurance in the event of a loss to the named mortgagee or lienor as his interest may appear, but without conditions serving to give the mortgagee or lienor a right of recovery greater than that of the mortgagor or hence, so that a breach of a condition of the policy by the mortgagor or lienee which precludes him from recovering against the insurer likewise precludes a recovery by mortgagee or lienor. Collinsville Sav. Soc. v Boston Ins. Co. 77 Conn 676, 60 A 647.

simple negligence. Negligence which is neither gross nor wanton; the failure to use ordinary care. Differing from gross negligence in degree, but not in kind. See Semons v Towne, 285 Mass 96, 188 NE 605.

simple obligation. See simple bond; simple contract.

simple socage. Free socage; that is, land tenure by services which were certain, free, and honorable.

simple trust. A simple conveyance of property to one upon trust for another, without further specifications or directions.

In such case the law regulates the trust and the cestui que trust has the right of possession and of disposing of the property, and he may call upon the trustee to execute such conveyances of the legal estate as are necessary. (Perry on Trusts.) Cone v Dunham, 59 Conn 145, 20 A 311.

simplex. (Latin.) Simple. Not complex. See feudum simplex.

Simplex commendatio non obligat. Mere commendation is not binding.

See seller's talk.

simplex dictum. A mere allegation.

Simplex et pura donatio dici poterit ubi nulla est adjecta conditio nec modus. A gift can be said to be pure and simple when no condition or modification is annexed to it.

simplex loquela. A mere allegation or matter of complaint.

simplex obligatio. A simple obligation.

See simple bond; simple contract.

simplex peregrinatio. Simple pilgrimage.

Simplicitas est legibus amica, et nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur. Simplicity is a friend to the law and too much subtlety is disapproved in the law.

simpliciter. Simply.

Simplification of Fiduciary Security Transfers. One of the uniform statutes. Am J2d Deskbook, Document 129.

simulated. Counterfeited; feigned; pretended.

If the general impression which the article makes when seen alone is such as is likely to lead the ordinary purchaser to believe it to be the original article, there is an unlawful simulation amounting to unfair competition. Chesebrough Mfg. Co. v Old Gold Chemical Co. (CA6 Tenn) 70 F2d 383.

simulatio latens. Simulated or feigned illness.

simulation. See simulated.

simul cum. Together with.

simul et simul. Together and at the same time.

simultaneous death. A death so contemporaneous with the fatal injury as to be instantaneous in the sense that the victim endured no pain and suffering. Moffett v Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. (CA4 W Va) 220 F 39. The death of two or more persons in a common disaster under circumstances such that it is impossible to determine the first to die or the last to survive. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1617. The death of ancestor and heir apparent occurring under such circumstances that there is no evidence as to which survived the other. 23 Am J2d Desc & D § 103.

Simultaneous Death Act. A uniform law which provides that where title to or the devolution of property depends upon priority of death and there is no sufficient evidence that the persons have died otherwise than simultaneously, the property of each person shall be disposed of, except as otherwise provided in the act, as if he had survived. 9C ULA 160; Anno: 20 ALR2d 236, § 1; 22 Am J2d Dth § 297.

simultaneously. Occurring together; occurring at the same time. Anno: 20 ALR2d 235.

The word does not necessarily mean at the very same instant, but may, and often does mean at substantially the same time. Cloyes v Middlebury Electric Co. 80 Vt 109, 66 A 1039.

The word as used in the Uniform Simultaneous Death Act means at the same instant rather than at substantially or approximately the same time. Anno: 20 ALR2d 237.

See sled.

slide. An amusement device, particularly for children, usually found in parks, wherein a child may slide on his backside. Chardon v Alameda Park Co. 1 Cal App 2d 18, 36 P2d 136. To coast in a sled.

slight. Inconsiderable. Unimportant. Janesville v Carpenter, 77 Wis 288, 46 NW 128.

slight care. An attempted but very difficult classification. Care exercised in a particular situation less than that called for by ordinary and common prudence. Litchfield v White, 7 NY 438. Care so slight in degree that the failure to exercise it must be deemed gross negligence. Merchant's Nat. Bank v Guilmartin, 93 Ga 503, 21 SE 55.

slight diligence. Same as slight care.

slight negligence. A classification as impracticable as any classification according to a concept of degrees of negligence. 38 Am J1st Negl § 45. An absence of that degree of care and vigilance which persons of extraordinary prudence and foresight are accustomed to use; not sufficient as the foundation of an action or as a defense in a negligence action. 38 Am J1st Negl § 45.

sling. A weapon, consisting of a piece of rope or leather for throwing a stone from a pouch at the end. The weapon used by David against Goliath.

See slingshot.

slingshot. A weapon consisting of a small stick of wood with prongs or arms to which elastic bands are attached to furnish a means of compulsion of a small stone or piece of metal with force; sometimes classed as a deadly weapon. 56 Am J1st Weap § 3. A sling such as David used against Goliath.

See sling.

slip. A landing for a ferry. A place for mooring a vessel. 48 Am J1st Ship § 263. A rider attached to a contract, particularly a contract of insurance. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 268. A memorandum constituting a contract in itself, as a binding slip. A technical term for a great quantity of dust blown out of a blast furnace.

The escape of dust from blast furnaces into the atmosphere is, and always has been, incident to their operation. It escapes at all times, but in larger quantities when what is known as a "slip" occurs. In the operation of all blast furnaces "slips" occur from time to time. These are occasioned by the caking or incrusting of the ore in the stack of the furnace, and the falling away of the ore, fuel, and limestone beneath the crust by reason of continued combustion and the liquefaction of the iron, thus forming a chamber or vacant space into which the incrustated ore drops, occasioning an explosion, the violence of which depends upon the extent of the cavity produced and the amount of gas accumulated therein. See Sullivan v Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. 208 Pa 540, 57 A 1065.

slip of the tongue. Language different from that which the person who uttered the words intended to say.

slop stand. A sink. Leonard Bros. v Zachary (Tex Civ App) 94 SW2d 509.

slough. A depression; a marsh or swamp. Anno: 40 ALR 852. Sometimes considered a natural drainway of surface water. 56 Am J1st Water § 75. In an unusual sense of the term, one of the waterways which separate islands in a river from one another or from the mainland. Dunlieth & Dubuque Bridge Co. v County of Dubuque, 55 Iowa 558, 565.

slowdown. A concerted slowing down of production on the part of employees in an industrial plant. Kennedy v Westinghouse Electric Corp. 16 NJ 280, 108 A2d 409, 47 ALR2d 1025. A direction posted on a sign or communicated by signalman or traffic officer in controlling the movement of trains on a railroad or vehicles on a highway.

slow-moving vehicle. A vehicle which is not maintaining the pace of other vehicles on the highway or in the same lane of the highway, assuming that the other vehicles are not operated in excess of the speed limit.

slow sign. A sign on the highway calling for a reduction in speed of vehicle. A sign along a railroad track calling for a reduction in speed of train.

sluiceway. Artificial watercourse, usually constructed for taking water from a natural watercourse for use in mining or industry.

A sluiceway over reclaimed flats, through which the tide ebbs and flows, is not a watercourse. Chamberlain v Hemingway, 63 Conn 1, 27 A 239.

slum. A section of a city wherein poor and underprivileged persons are housed in inferior and dilapidated dwellings, flats, apartment houses, and tenements.

[1188]

slum clearance. The improvement of housing for people of limited means by tearing down dilapidated and inferior structures and erecting new buildings, particularly apartment houses or other multiple dwellings, to be leased at moderate rentals. A public purpose. 26 Am J2d Em D § 42.

slush fund. Money collected for a corrupt use. Boehm v United States (CA8 Mo) 123 F2d 791.

slut. A slattern; a bold woman; in some connections, an unchaste woman. 33 Am J1st L & S § 39. A woman too careless and lazy to keep herself or her home in a condition of cleanliness, but not necessarily an unchaste woman. Cooper v Seaverns, 81 Kan 267, 105 P 509. A bitch; a female dog.

small brew. Near beer; a nonintoxicating malt beverage. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 11.

A term used in certain liquor statutes synonymously with "malt beverage" and "near beer" and classed with mixtures, preparations and liquids in which alcohol appears in varying proportions with other ingredients, and which may or may not contain alcohol in such proportion with the other ingredients that the stomach can bear enough of the mixture to produce intoxication. Commonwealth v Henry, 110 Va 879, 65 SE 570.

Small Business Act. A federal statute which declares and implements the policy of aiding, counseling, assisting, and protecting the interests of small business concerns in order to preserve free competitive enterprise. 15 USC § 631.

Small Business Administration. A federal agency created to carry out the policy declared by statute to aid, counsel, assist, and protect small business concerns. 15 USC § 633(a).

small business concern. A business independently owned and operated and not dominant in its field. 15 USC § 632.

small business corporation. A corporation which, although small in capitalization and the number of persons employed, may be a vital economic asset of the community.

For definition of small business corporation for tax purposes, see Internal Revenue Code § 1244(c).

Small Business Investment Act. See small business investment company.

small business investment company. An investment company licensed and operated under the Federal Small Business Investment Act of 1958, particularly for the supplying of long-term equity capital to small business concerns.

small claims court. A tribunal, sometimes existing independently, at other times constituting a separate division of a court of general jurisdiction, being provided for the general purpose of providing a summary procedure, less costly and less protracted than the ordinary procedure, for the litigation of small claims, that is, claims not exceeding a certain specified amount. Superior Wheeler Cake Corp. v Superior Court, 203 Cal 384, 264 P 488.

small damages. Damages which, although small in the amount awarded, were calculated and allowed as compensation for an actual loss.

See nominal damages. small debtors' court.

small employer. An employer of five or less workmen in the same industry or business, or in the case of an employer with different businesses, five or less workmen in one single and distinct business. Moore v Isenman, 127 Me 370, 143 A 462, 61 ALR 898.

small loan act. A statute regulating the business of those who make small loans on conditional sale contracts, chattel mortgages, pledges, or assignments of wages. A statute regulating the business of pawnbrokers. 40 Am J1st Pawnb §§ 8, 9. A uniform statute regulating the small loan business. Madison Personal Loan v Parker (CA2 NY) 124 F2d 143.

small loan company. A company making loans in comparatively small amounts, usually secured by chattel mortgage, conditional sale contract, or pledge.

smallpox. A communicable disease characterized by fever, vomiting, and eruptions which sometimes leave scars. 25 Am J1st Hlth § 25.

Small Reclamation Projects Act. A federal statute supplementing the Federal Reclamation Act. 43 USC §§ 422a-422k.

small tithes. Praedial tithes, other than great tithes, and also mixed tithes and personal tithes.

smart money. In the modern sense of the term, the same as punitive damages. 22 Am J2d Damg §§ 236 et seq.

smell. One of the senses.

"We do know that the olfactory nerves are just as efficient as the optic or auditory nerves. The difficulty lies in the fact that our conscious use of them is so less frequent. To put it another way, we may smell as we see or hear, but we do not sniff nearly as frequently as we look or listen. The problem is not one of sensitivity but rather of selectivity. Consequently, skill in the art of detection through the sense of smell comes from experience rather than aptitude." United States v Commercial Creamery Co. (DC Wash) 43 F Supp 714.

smeller. One able to test products, such as cheese and alcoholic beverages, by smelling a sample.

smelting. The process of developing metal from ore by the removal of other substances and impurities.

By its derivation, the term is synonymous with the word "melting," but in metallurgy and commercial manufacture it has come to have a more contracted meaning. In his treatise on Metallurgy, Frederick Overman says: "When metallic ores are exposed to heat, and such reagents as develop the metal, we call it smelting, in contradistinction from the mere application of heat, causing the ore to become fluid, which is called 'melting.'" Lowrey v Cowles Electric Smelting & Aluminum Co. (CC Ohio) 68 F 354, 369.

the overthrow of the government by force. 18 USC § 2385.

smog. A mixture of smoke and fog; any mixture in the air which impairs vision or is discomforting to a person in his breathing.

smoke. Noun: The visible exhalation, vapor, or substance that escapes or is expelled from a burning body-especially from burning vegetable matter, as wood, coal, peat, or the like. St. Paul v Haugbro, 93 Minn 59, 100 NW 470. Verb: To give off matter constituting vapor interspersed with small particles of carbon produced by the burning of some substance. To use tobacco by drawing the smoke therefrom into the mouth, sometimes by inhaling it into the lungs, accomplished by the employment of cigar, cigarette, or pipe.

As early as the Norman Conquest mention is made in Domesday Book of "fumage" or "fuage," vulgarly called "smoke farthings," which were a tax or duty paid by custom to the king for every chimney in the house. See 1 Bl Comm 324.

smokehouse. A place where cigars, cigarettes, and tobacco in other forms are sold. In older usage, an outbuilding used on occasion for smoking meat.

smokeless coal. A term of the coal business, not intended as a precise expression of a scientific concept.

A trade or commercial term applied to a grade of soft coal in which the volatile matter runs from sixteen to twenty-one per cent. The volatile matter in hard coal is a much smaller percentage. Ordinarily soft coal contains from thirty-two to forty per cent volatile matter and its tendency is to produce a dense smoke. State v Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. 114 Minn 122, 130 NW 545.

smuggling. The criminal offense of knowingly and wilfully, with intent to defraud the United States, clandestinely introducing into the United States any merchandise which should have been declared for customs duty. 21 Am J2d Cust D § 119.

snap judgment. A judgment by default. See Nation v Savely, 127 Okla 117, 260 P 32, 34. A conclusion reached without deliberation.

snatching. A form of larceny; robbery where accompanied by force. 46 Am J1st Rob § 21.

See body snatching.

snatching purse. A form of larceny. 32 Am J1st Larc § 44.

sneak. A person who acts in a contemptible underhand manner. A furtive fellow.

See area-sneak.

snodder. A rope attached to a fish net and used for hauling in the net. Nolan v General Seafoods Corp. (CA1 Mass) 112 F2d 515.

snowbed stream. A watercourse having its source in a snowbed in the mountains which forms regularly at a certain season of the year. 56 Am J1st Wat § 8.

snow chains. Chains fitted to the rear tires of an automobile to give traction on snow and ice and reduce the likelihood of skidding.

snow job. A slang term for activity in investigation or prosecution intended to cover and hide offenses of a much more serious nature.

snuff. A pulverized form of tobacco, the consumers of which usually sniff it through the nose although it is also plastered on the gums and thus absorbed rather than chewed. State v Olson, 26 ND 304, 144 NW 661.

so. Abbreviation of south.

s. o. Abbreviation of seller's option.

soap box derby. A well organized contest and exhibition, operated under rules established by a national organization, wherein the participants, boys of limited age, race against time in vehicles of their own design and construction which may be described as coasters on wheels. Cummings v General Motors Corp. 146 Conn 443, 151 A2d 884, 72 ALR2d 1129.

s.o.b. An abbreviation of clear and unmistakable import.

A wife's statement, to those present at the husband's place of business, that the allegations in his petition for a divorce were lies and that he was a "s-o-b" for making them, is not public defamation in itself. McKoin v McKoin, 168 La 32, 121 So 182, the court characterizing the statement as nothing more than disgusting and senseless abuse.

sober. Temperate or sparing in use of intoxicating liquor. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 774. Not under the influence of liquor or drugs. Having self-control.

A statutory requirement that a juror shall be sober refers only to the time in which the juror sits, and his qualification is not affected by his habits in regard to intoxicating liquor at other times, unless they have gone so far as to make him of unsound mind at all times. Anderson v State, 54 Ariz 387, 96 P2d 281, 126 ALR 501.

soca. An ancient Latin word meaning a plough. See 2 Bl Comm 80.

socage. Land tenure by nonmilitary service. See common socage; free socage; guardian in socage; simple socage.

socage tenure. See socage.

socagium. Socage.

Socagium est servitium socae. Socage is the service of the plough. See 2 Bl Comm 81.

socer. A father-in-law.

social club. A term of art, embracing a variety of organizations other than business, philanthropic, or educational associations. Duquesne Club v Bell (CA3 Pa) 127 F2d 363, 143 ALR 1377. As an organization exempt from federal income tax, a club not organized for profit or for the benefit of private shareholders. Internal Revenue Code § 50

As the term is used in the Federal income tax law, if any material, that is, important part of the club's activities (but not as much as a moiety thereof) are social as contradistinguished from the remaining non-social activities, it is a social club. Town Club of St. Louis v United States (CA8 Mo) 68 F2d 620.

Within the meaning of the Federal statute imposing a tax on the fees or dues of such a club, it is in general a club that has for its primary purpose the cultivation of companionable relations. However, no exact definition can be given for such a club and whether the fees or dues of a particular club or organization are subject to tax as a social club is primarily a question of fact. The issue is to be determined according to the predominant purpose of the organization, and social features which are merely incidental to the general activities of an organization will not characterize it as a social club. But if the predominant purpose of an organization is social, it is a social club, notwithstanding the fact that other activities may be important, or that the activating motive of the members in joining was to make business contacts. Anno: 80 ALR 1297, s. 143 ALR 1382; 86 L Ed 633.

See athletic club; club; country club; fraternal order or society.

social duty. See moral obligation.

social guest. See guest.

social insurance. Those forms of insurance intended primarily to enable an old or disabled person to live without resort to a public welfare agency.

socialism. A much abused term, standing at one time for an economic system calling for increased participation by the government in the affairs of the people, meaning public ownership and operation of public utilities, the absorption of industrial plants by the government, looking toward a day when private ownership of property might be eliminated, except for the most personal things; applied in more recent times as a cloak for totalitarian governments and dictatorships.

See communism.

social position. The rank of one as a member of the social order as indicated by standard of life, companions, degree of culture, regard for the amenities, and etc.

Social Security. In the broadest sense, the welfare of the people with ample means of subsistence and enjoyment of life under the protection of the Government. In the popular sense, the system which provides old-age and survivors' insurance benefits. 48 Am J1st Soc Sec § 2.

Social Security Act. A federal statute providing for the establishment of a nation-wide federal and state system of old age assistance, old age and survivors' insurance benefits, and unemployment insurance or compensation, plus some incidental benefits. 42 USC §§ 301 et seq.

Social Security Board. The federal agency which operates the social security system. 48 Am J1st Soc Sec § 9.

social standing. Same as social position.

societas. (Roman law.) A partnership. Hagget v Hurley, 91 Me 542, 40 A 561.

societe anonyme. An association the liability of the members of which is limited.

society. The community. The people of the community or considered as a whole in state or nation. The associates which one has. A voluntary association, sometimes a corporation, organized and existing for the mutual benefit of its members in patriotic, religious, charitable, or professional pursuits or for providing benefits in case of illness or disability of a member or for his widow or children in the event of his death.

See association; club; mutual benefit society; social club.

Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. An organization, recognized as charitable in purpose, which teaches kindness and consideration for dumb animals, advocates legislation penalizing cruelty to animals, and urges by appropriate acts the enforcement of such legislation. Anno: 12 ALR2d 874, § 5; 15 Am 12d Char § 88.

society of wife. A right of the husband known by the legal term "consortium."

As the word is used in connection with a husband's right to recover damages for the loss of his wife's "society," it means such capacities for usefulness, aid, and comfort as a wife, which she possessed at the time of the injury which she suffered by the act or omission of the defendant. Golden v Greene Paper Co. 44 RI 231, 116 A 579, 21 ALR 1514, 1516.

See consortium.

socii. Associates; partners; members of a partnership. Williams v Milton, 215 Mass 1, 102 NE355.

Socii mei socius meus socius non est. (Civil law.) The partner of my partner is not my partner.

sociopath. Another term for sexual psychopath.

socman. A tenant in socage.

See sokemans.

sod. Turf. A layer of the surface taken from lawn, meadow, or pasture, with the grass growing thereon as supported by the roots therein.

sodding. Covering the surface of the ground with sod brought from another place, normally for the purpose of obtaining a good grass cover quickly. Holmes v Heeter, 146 Ky 52, 142 SW 210. Creating a grass lawn by laying thereon sod cut from a grass meadow or from a plot specially adapted to the growing of grass for sod making. 36 Am J1st Mech L § 66.

sodomy. Broadly, unnatural sexual relations as between persons of the same sex, or with beasts, or between persons of different sex but in an unnatural manner. 48 Am J1st Sod § 1. Perverted sexual practice. 48 Am J1st Sod § 2. In the narrow sense, sexual connection between two human beings of the male sex. Ausman v Veal, 10 Ind 355.

A common-law crime deriving its name from the Biblical city of Sodom.

soft drink stand. A place, sometimes on the sidewalk, where soft drinks, candy, and other small items of food or confection are obtainable. Re Henery, 124 Iowa 358, 100 NW 43.

softening of the brain. A disease of the brain which gradually obliterates the memory and mental faculties. Holden v Meadows, 31 Wis 284, 296.

soil. The surface layer of earth; the layer which produces plant life and is tilled in the raising of crops.

See common in the soil.

Soil Bank Act. A federal statute designed to assist farmers in diverting a portion of their crop-land from production, thereby avoiding the accumulation of excessive agricultural commodities, and to promote soil conservation, by providing for payments to them in consideration of their putting a certain amount of their crop-land in "soil bank," that is taking it out of production, at least out of production of certain crops. United States v Maxwell (CAS Iowa) 278 F2d 206.

soil bank payment. See Soil Bank Act.

[1191]

Soit baile aux commons. Let it be delivered to the commons.

Soit droit fait al partie. Let right be done to the party.

Suit fait comme il est desire. Let it be as it is desired. 1 Bl Comm 184.

sojourne. To stay in a place for a short time.

soke. The right to hold court and do justice, with the franchise to receive certain fees or fines arising from it; jurisdiction more or less wide over certain territory, or over certain men, or the right to exercise such jurisdiction; the duty of submitting to such jurisdiction; a jurisdiction or franchise; the district over which such jurisdiction extended. (Webster's Dictionary.)

sokemanries. See sokemans.

sokemans. Socmen, tenants in socage.

Britton, because of their freedom from base services, calls them "sokemans," and their tenure "sokemanries;" which he describes to be lands and tenements which are not held by knight service, nor by grand serjeanty, nor petit, but by simple services, being lands enfranchised by the king or his predecessors from their ancient demesne. See 2 Bl Comm 100.

soken. A district held by socage tenure.

soke-reeve. A rent gatherer in a soken.

Sola, ac per se, senectus donationem, testamentum aut transaetionem non vitiat. Old age alone and of itself will not vitiate a gift, a will, or a transaction. Van Alst v Hunter (NY) 5 Johns Ch 148, 159.

solar day. From sunrise to sunset. By solar time, one rotation of the earth.

solares. A term frequently occurring in Spanish-American land grants and meaning house lots of a small size, upon which dwellings, shops, stores, and the like were to be built. Hart v Burnett, 15 Cal 530, 554.

solar month. A calendar month.

solar time. Time as measured by what appears to be the daily transit of the sun, caused by the rotation of the earth. 52 Am J1st Time § 2.

See local sun time; mean solar time; standard time; sun time or standard.

solar year. The time which elapses from the sun's appearance on one of the tropics to its return to the same; commonly 365 days, and in leap years, 366 days; unless the context or other indications show a different intent, it means a year consisting of twelve calendar months. See 52 Am J1st Time § 10.

solatium. Compensation or damages for sorrow, mental anguish, or wounded feelings. Morgan v Southern Pacific Co. 95 Cal 510, 30 P 603; Marshall v Consolidated Jack Mines Co. 119 Mo App 270, 95 SW 972.

sold. Past tense of sell. A word used by an auctioneer in accepting a bid as being the highest one made and completing the sale. 7 Am J2d Auct § 31. A slang expression for succumbing to trick, deception, or fraud.

As used in conversation, and even by law writers, the word may signify only, that a bargain or contract to sell has been made, or that there has been such a contract, and delivery of the goods, or that such a contract has been made and completed by the payment of the price. The meaning will usually be clearly ascertained by the words used in connection with it, or by the circumstances developed. An example of the first sense would be, "if goods are sold upon condition to be performed at the time of delivery, and the goods are delivered, but the conditions are not performed," and where it is said, "the vendor has a lien for the price of goods sold." An example of the second sense is where we speak of "an action for goods sold." An example of the third is where we say, "if the purchaser neglects to remove goods sold within a reasonable time, the seller may charge him with storage." Hathaway v Burr, 21 Me 567.

soldier. One of the Army as a private, noncommissioned officer, musician, technician, artificer, or other enlisted man. 36 Am J1st Mil § 5. Either an enlisted man or a commissioned officer for the purpose of making a "soldier's will." 57 Am J1st Wills § 662.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act. A federal statute providing for a stay of an action or proceeding in any court in which a person in military service is involved as a party plaintiff or defendant at any stage thereof, either on the court's own motion, or upon application by the person in military service or some person on his behalf, unless, in the opinion of the court, the ability of the plaintiff to prosecute the action or of the defendant to conduct his defense is not materially affected by reason of his military service. 50 USC appx § 521; 37 Am J1st Mtg § 907; 56 Am J1st War § 26.

soldier's bounty. See military bounty.

soldiers' homes. See veterans' homes.

soldier's will. The informal will of a soldier, whether oral or in writing, rendered valid, where the will of a person in another occupation would be invalid, under an exception from formalities required to be observed in the execution of wills generally, recognized because of the dangers, diseases, disasters, and the possibility of sudden death constantly besetting a soldier and the inability of such a person to find the time or the means to make a deliberate and written testamentary disposition. 57 Am J1st Wills § 661.

sole. As one only. Single. Not joint. Exclusive.

See feme sole.

sole actor doctrine. The principle that the knowledge of a corporate officer or agent is imputed to the corporation notwithstanding it has reference to a transaction in which the officer or agent is acting fraudulently or adversely to the corporation, where it appears that the officer or agent is the sole representative of the corporation in the transaction in question. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1267.

sole and unconditional ownership. Ownership of such dominion that no one else has any interest in the property as an owner and the quality of the estate is not limited or effected by any condition. The ownership of an estate or property without outstanding interest or condition attached which would cause the loss of the property, if it should occur, to fall upon another person. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 791.

The clause in an insurance policy requiring sole and unconditional ownership has to do, not with questions of title to be precisely determined, but with beneficial and practical ownership. Libby

Lumber Co. v Pacific States Fire Ins. Co. 79 Mont 166, 255 P 340, 60 ALR 1.

An insurance policy's condition as to "sole and unconditional ownership" refers to the real owner and is not broken by the mere fact that the record title is, for purposes of convenience, in another for a time. American Indem. Co. v Southern Missionary College, 195 Tenn 513, 260 SW2d 269, 39 ALR2d 714.

As the expression is used in fire insurance policies requiring the insured to be the sole and unconditional owner of the insured property, a purchaser in possession under a contract whereby the former owner agrees to sell and the buyer absolutely binds himself to purchase and to pay an agreed price for the property, is almost universally held to be the unconditional owner, because the loss from an injury to or destruction of the property falls upon him. Phenix Insurance Co. v Kerr (CA8 Neb) 129 F 723.

See sole ownership; unconditional ownership.

sole corporation. Same as corporation sole.

sole discretion of trustee. The broadest measure of permissible discretion, but not an unbridled or unlimited discretion, since such would negate the existence of a trust. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 36.

sole efficient cause. The proximate cause of an accident. 7 Am J2d Auto § 376.

sole judge. One coming to a conclusion or reaching an opinion uncontrolled by others. Prudential Ins. Co. v Nelson (CA6 Tenn) 101 F 2d 441.

solely. Acting alone. Standing alone. Without another.

solemnitas. Solemnity; formality.

Solemnitates juris sunt observandae. The formalities of the law should be observed.

solemnization of marriage. The performance of the formal act or ceremony by which a man and woman contract marriage and assume the status of husband and wife. 35 Am J1st Mar § 25. As a requirement of the law, any celebration or ceremony which gives utterance to and public evidence of the contract of marriage. Howard v Kelly, 111 Miss 285, 71 So 391.

solemn form. See probate in solemn form.

solemn oath. Same as corporal oath.

solemn occasion for advisory opinion. A situation where the executive or legislature is in doubt as to its power or authority or the authority of a subordinate under its direction and the elimination of such doubt is necessary to enable it to act legally and intelligently upon a pending question. Re Opinion of Justices, 269 Mass 611, 168 NE 536, 66 ALR 1477.

solemn war. A war declared in form and of the perfect kind. 56 Am J1st War §4.

See perfect war.

solemn will. A civil law term for a written will. Castro v Castro, 6 Cal 158, 160.

Solent foeminarum ductu bellare, et sexum in imperiis non discernere. They are accustomed to wage war under the leadership of women, and they make no sex distinctions in matters of government. See 1 Bl Comm 194.

sole ownership. Exclusive ownership. An ownership so complete that no other person has any interest in the property. See sole and unconditional ownership.

sole possession. Exclusive possession.

sole representative doctrine. Same as sole actor doctrine. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1267.

See sole actor doctrine.

sole tenant. A tenant whose ownership is entire; that is, neither joint nor in common.

solicit. To importune, entreat, implore, ask, attempt, or try to obtain an order. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 272. To invite a business transaction, for example, the issuing of a policy of insurance. Maryland Casualty Co. v McTyler, 150 Tenn 691, 266 SW 767, 48 ALR 1 168. To commit the offense of solicitation.

solicitation. An act of soliciting. The substantive offense of inciting or soliciting another to commit a crime. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 114. The act of a prostitute in seeking patronage on the street or in a public place, railroad station, bus terminal, etc. 42 Am J1st Prost § 1.

See indirect solicitation.

solicitation of adultery. The expression of a desire and a willingness on the part of one person to commit adultery with another and an effort to obtain that person's consent. Stale v Butler, 8 Wash 194, 35 P 1093.

solicitation of bribe. Corruptly offering to receive a bribe, or expressing a willingness to receive one; an offense at common law and under various statutes, although something less than bribery or even an attempt to receive a bribe. 12 Am J2d Brib § 11.

solicitation of business. Seeking orders for goods or services. A matter considered in determining whether a corporation is within the purview of statutes relative to foreign corporations transacting business in the state. 36 Am J2d For Corp § 246. An unethical practice by an attorney at law constituting ground for disbarment or suspension from practice, whether conducted personally or through the employment of an agent or runner. 7 Am J2d Attys § 40.

See solicit.

solicitation of order. See solicit; solicitation of business.

solicitation of proxies. The solicitation of stockholders of a corporation to obtain proxies to vote at a stockholders' meeting. 19 Am J2d Corp § 678. Any request for a proxy, whether or not accompanied by or included in a form of proxy; any request to execute, not to execute, or to revoke a proxy; or the furnishing of a form of proxy or other communication to security holders under circumstances reasonably calculated to result in the procurement, withholding, or revocation of a proxy. Anno: 12 L Ed 2d 1240, 1246.

solicitation of votes. Requesting a vote for a particular candidate or candidates of an election; a criminal offense where conducted at restricted times and places on election day. 26 Am J2d Elect § 374.

soliciting agent. An agent who solicits orders for goods or services to be furnished by his principal. Sometimes, but not invariably, regarded as a managing agent for the purpose of statutes concerning the service of process upon a foreign corporation. 36 Am J2d For Corp § 560. An agent of an insurance company empowered to solicit, receive, and report applications, but ordinarily without authority to accept an application on behalf of the company and complete the making of a contract of insurance. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 193. A special agent of an insurance company, having authority only to solicit insurance, submit applications therefor to the company, and to perform such acts as are incidental to that power. Turner v Supreme Lodge K. P. 166 Okla 286, 27 P2d 612, 93 ALR 647.

In the absence of special circumstances, including statutory or contractual provisions, an agent of the insurer who solicits or effects insurance is not the agent of the insured. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 136.

solicitor. A person who, going from person to person or from house to house, seeks orders, subscriptions, contributions, or any other kind of support, or who, without necessarily having the intention of making a direct sale, distributes literature pamphlets, hand bills, samples, and the like for the purpose of information, advertising, or for other purposes such as the furtherance of public, political, economic, religious, or social beliefs, systems, projects, or doctrines. 40 Am J1st Ped § 6. Inclusive of a soliciting agent. Not inclusive of a peddler. Anno: 9 ALR2d 737. An attorney at law acting as the head of the law department of a municipal corporation or other division of government. In England a person trained in the law who prepares briefs, drafts pleadings and legal instruments, consults with and advises clients, but is not heard in court, at least not in the superior courts.

English attorneys-at-law have been called "solicitors" since the Judicature Act of 1873 took effect. They are not members of the bar and are not heard in the superior courts; and the power of admitting them to practice, and striking them off the roll has not been given to the inns of court. Re Ricker, 66 NH 207, 29 A 559. This decision contains a most valuable account of the qualifications, functions, privileges, and duties of barristers, serjeants, solicitors and attorneys-at-law.

Solicitor General. An officer learned in the law in the Department of Justice, assisting the Attorney General in the performance of the duties of the latter, appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. 5 USC § 293. In England, a barrister of high rank next in precedence after the attorney general, with whom he is associated in the performance of his duties, and permitted to sit within the bar of the respective courts with the king's counsel. See 3 Bl Comm 28 and note.

solidos legales. Lawful shillings. See 2 Bl Comm 509.

solidum. The whole.

See in solidum.

solitary confinement. A special condition of imprisonment. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 615. A punishment for crime consisting of the complete isolation of the prisoner from all human society and his confinement in a cell where he has no direct intercourse with or sight of any human being, and no employment or instruction; it is the complete exclusion from human associations. Re Medley, 134 US 160, 33 L Ed 835, 10 S Ct 384.

The term is to be distinguished from close confinement.

solo. Performed by one. See in solo.

Solo cedit quod solo implantatur. (Civil law.) That which is planted in the soil belongs to the soil.

Solo cedit quod solo inaedificatur. (Civil law.) That which is built into the soil belongs to the soil.

solo flight. The first air flight of a student pilot without an instructor in the plane with him. De Rienzo v Morristown Aircraft Corp. 28 NJ 231, 146 A2d 127.

so long as. Technical words used to create a determinable fee. Consolidated School Dist. v Walter, 243 Minn 153, 66 NW2d 881, 53 ALR2d 218.

In most instances in which the language of disposal does not include a use of the expression "for life", or a similar one, but gives or grants the premises "for so long as" the conveyee shall occupy the same as a home, or in similar terms, the conclusion reached has been that a life estate was given. The question is affected, and may of course be controlled, by peculiarities of the particular instrument. Anno: 45 ALR2d 707.

solo proprio. See in solo proprio.

solum. Soil; ground.

solum et fundum. The bottom and the soil.

A grant solum et fundum of a river is a grant of the bottom of the river and the soil beneath. Arnold v Mundy, 6 NIL 1.

Solum rex hoc non facere potest, quod non potest injuste agere. This alone the king cannot do, he cannot act contrary to law.

Solus Deus haeredem facit. God alone makes an heir.

solutio. (Civil law.) Payment; settlement.

solutio indebiti. See indebiti solutio.

Solutio pretii emptionis loco habetur. The payment of the price is regarded as taking the place of a sale.

Title acquired by the conversion of a chattel takes effect from the time of the conversion. This rests upon the maxim, which presumes that the wrongdoer is in possession of the property and has not voluntarily parted therewith to a third party. Third National Bank v Rice (CA8 Mo) 161 F 822.

solutum. See in solutum. solutus. (Civil law.) Free; freed; released; free from debt or mortgage; unincumbered; paid.

solvency. The condition of a person having sufficient assets to meet his obligations as they mature in the ordinary course of business. Ability to pay one's debts, not a mere disposition to pay. Janes v Scott, 59 Pa 178. A word which implies as well the present ability of the debtor to pay out of his estate all his debts, as also such condition of his property as that it may be reached and subjected by process of law, without his consent, to the payment of such debts. 29 Am 1 Rev ed Insolv § 2.

Solvency is to be distinguished from the state of a person who possesses the ability to secure further credit and thus incur further indebtedness. The latter state may be one of insolvency. Baily v Hornthal, 154 NY 648 49 NE 56.

See actuarial solvency.

solvency policy. A policy of credit insurance.

See credit insurance; guaranty policy.

Solvendo esse nemo intelligitur nisi qui solidum potest solvere. (Civil law.) No one is regarded as solvent except a person who can pay in full.

solvendum in futuro. To be paid in the future. See 2 Bl Comm 513.

solvent. Adjective: In a condition of solvency. Noun: A substance which operates to dissolve another substance.

See solvency.

solvent credit. See solvent debt.

solvent debt. A debt which can promptly be enforced and realized. Ward v Pittsburgh, 321 Pa 414, 184 A 240, 105 ALR 682. An obligation which is collectible by the creditor in the ordinary course of business resort to suit or execution not being required. Stillman v Lynch, 56 Utah 540, 192 P 272, 12 ALR 552, 559.

solvent debtor. See solvency.

solvere. To pay; to release.

solvit. He paid.

Solvit ad diem. He paid at the day.

Solvitur adhuc societas etiam morte sucii. (Civil law.) A partnership is also dissolved by the death of a partner.

Solvitur eo ligamine quo ligatur. A person is released in the same manner in which he is bound. Livingston v Lynch (NY) 4 Johns Ch 573, 582.

solvit vel non. Whether he has paid or not.

Although the jury must pass upon the issue of solvit vel non, they are to be governed, as the court directs, by the law as to the presumption of payment from lapse of time. Gulick v Loder, 13 NJL 68.

Sommersett's Case. A celebrated English case decided in 1772, holding a Negro slave to be a free-man on English soil.

somnambulism. Walking in one's sleep. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 29. Characterized by one authority as a species of mental unsoundness connected with sleep which destroys moral agency during the period of its existence. Fain v Commonwealth, 78 Ky 183.

somnolentia. The lapping over of a profound sleep into the domain of apparent wakefulness.

This condition is said to produce a state of involuntary intoxication, which for the time destroys moral agency. Fain v Commonwealth, 78 Ky 183 quoting Wharton & Stille.

son. One's male child. One's male child born in wedlock. Wilkinson v Adam, I V. & B. 422, 35 Eng Reprint 163. A word which is not a technical legal term having a fixed and definite meaning, but one which is flexible and subject to construction to give effect to the intention of the maker of the instrument in which it appears. Conner v Gardner, 230 Ill 258, 82 NE 640.

sonans. See idem sonans. son assault. Same as son assault demesne.

son assault demesne. His own assault. The plea of self-defense. See 3 Bl Comm 308.

son damage. See en son damage.

son done. See de son done.

son gree. See de son gree.

sonic boom. A byproduct of the "jet age"; a mechanical phenomenon of the air consisting of pressure waves and sound waves generated by an object moving through the air at a speed equal to or exceeding that of sound. 8 Am J2d Avi§ 99. A disturbance or shock caused by a jet air plane flying at a speed in excess of the speed of sound. Anno: 74 ALR2d 755.

son of a bitch. See s. o. b.

son tort. See de son tort.

sorcery. See witchcraft.

sore feet. A slang appellation for a child born a matter of days or weeks after the marriage of his parents.

sorghum. A plant cultivated for the production of molasses, such being rendered from the sweet juice pressed out of the stalk. The molasses or syrup produced from such plant.

sortitio. A casting lots; deciding by casting lots.

sortito. An adverb meaning by lot; as jurors are chosen. See 3 Bl Comm 366.

soul-scot. A part of a man's property set apart at his death for the church for the welfare of his soul. See 2 Bl Comm 425.

sound. Adjective: Healthy; free from disease or disability. Verb: To gauge the depth of a stream or body of water by dropping a weighted line. Noun: A body of water between two larger bodies, or between an island and the mainland. 12 Am J2d Bound § 13.

Sound. In eastern states, Long Island Sound. 12 Am J2d Bound § 13.

sound amplifier. See amplifier.

sound and disposing mind and memory. A matter of the possession of sanity. Campbell v Campbell, 130 111 466, 22 NE 620.

A testator is of sound and disposing mind and memory, if, at the time of making his will, he has sufficient mental capacity to be able to understand the act he is doing, to understand and recollect the nature and situation of his property, and to remember and understand his relations to the persons who have claims upon his bounty and whose interests are affected by the provisions of the instrument. Re Smith's Estate, 200 Cal 158, 252 P 325.

See disposing mind; sound mind.

sound animal. An animal without organic defect or infirmity which renders it unfit for immediate, present, usual, and reasonable use. 46 Am J1st Sales § 396.

sound barrier. Pressure waves which build up ahead of an object moving through the air at a speed equal to or exceeding that of sound. 8 Am J2d Avi § 99.

See sonic boom.

sound health. Good health. A physical condition characterized by the absence of any grave, important, or serious disease; freedom from any ailment seriously affecting the health. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 746.

As the term is generally used in life insurance policies providing that the insured must be in "sound health" at the date of the policy, it means good health. It is not to be taken literally. It does not mean perfect health, or imply absolute freedom from bodily infirmity or tendency to disease, but means generally the absence of any vice or disease in the constitution of a serious nature, or that has a direct tendency to shorten life, as contra-distinguished from a temporary ailment or indisposition. Anno: 40 ALR 662.

sound horse. See sound animal.

sounding in damages. Capable of being accurately measured in money. For damages only, as an action sounding in damages.

sound memory. See sound and disposing mind and memory; sound mind.

sound mind. The mind of a person who is sane and mentally competent. Characterizing ability of a testator to understand in a general way the nature and extent of his property, his relation to those who naturally have a claim to benefit from the property left by him, and the practical effect of the will as executed. Re Wilmoot's Estate (Fla) 66 So 2d 465, 40 ALR2d 1399; Re Hagan, 143 Neb 459, 9 NW2d 794, 154 ALR 573.

The term is commonly synonymous with "sane" as distinguished from "insane," and is itself as plainly descriptive of its meaning as any other definition would be. People v Brisbane, 295 Ill 241, 248, 129 NE 185, 188.

sound mind and memory. See sound and disposing mind and memory.

sound physical condition. Sound health; not necessarily perfect health. Not negated by a mere temporary indisposition. French v Fidelity & Casualty Co. 135 Wis 259, 115 NW 869.

See sound health.

sound price. See warranty of soundness from sound price.

sound signals. Signals by sound prescribed by statutory and administrative rules to control the navigation of ships and small watercraft. 12 Am J2d Boats § 18; 48 Am J1st Ship § 261.

sound title. A marketable title; a title not open to a reasonable doubt. 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S § 189; 56 Am J1st V & P § 167.

sound track. A tape or other contrivance upon which speech, song, and other sounds are imprinted for reproduction synchronized with a motion picture film. Foreign & Domestic Music Corp. v Licht (CA2 NY) 196 F2d 627.

sound truck. A motor vehicle equipped with a loudspeaker, used for advertising or the making of announcements upon the streets. 25 Am J1st High § 194.

sound vessel. The condition of a vessel on its first voyage. Lynch v Postlethwaite (La) 7 Mart 69.

source material. (1) Uranium, thorium, or any other material which is determined by the Atomic Energy Commission to be source material; or (2) ores containing one or more of the foregoing materials in such concentration as the Commission may by regulation determine from time to time. 42 USC § 2014(x).

sources of the law. The origins of legal principles in the legislative and judicial processes. Reported cases, authoritative textbooks, comprehensive text treatments, such as American Jurisprudence 2d, constitutions and statutes.

south. A word indicating a point on the compass, being due south, unless qualified or controlled by other words. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 248.

southeast quarter. See fraction of section.

Southern Interstate Nuclear Compact. A compact between several southern states for the purpose of providing the instrument and framework for a cooperative effort between the states to improve the economy of the South through the proper employment of nuclear energy. 6 Am J2d Atomic E § 46.

south one-half. See fraction of section.

South Sea Bubble. A ten million pound scheme for monopolizing the trade of England with Spanish-America, which was given form in 1711 and failed in 1720.

southwest quarter. See fraction of section.

souvent. Often.

sovereign. A ruler; a king; the supreme power in a government. A gold coin of Great Britain, equivalent in value to one pound.

"To the Constitution of the United States the term sovereign is totally unknown. There is but one place where it could have been used with propriety. But, even in that place it would not, perhaps, have comported with the delicacy of those who ordained and established that Constitution. They might have announced themselves 'sovereign' people of the United States: But, serenely conscious of the fact, they avoided the ostentatious declaration." Chisholm v Georgia (US) 2 Dall 419, 454, 1 L Ed 440, 455.

sovereign immunity. The principle that the sovereign cannot be sued in its own courts or in any other court without its consent and permission; a principle which applies with full force to the several states of the Union. 49 Am J1st States § 91. The principle that the United States is immune from suit except where it consents thereto, as by a statute such as the Federal Tort Claims Act. 28 USC §§ 1491 et seq.; 20 Am J2d Cts § 152. The principle that a sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, so that the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory. 20 Am J2d Cts § 152.

sovereign nation. See sovereign state.

[1196]

sovereign people. See people of the state; people of the United States.

sovereign power. The power to make and enforce laws.

"By the sovereign power is meant the making of laws; for wherever that power resides, all others must conform to, and be directed by it, whatever appearance the outward form and administration of the government may put on. For it is at any time in the option of the legislature to alter that form and administration by a new edict or rule, and to put the execution of the laws into whatever hands it pleases; by constituting one or a few, or many executive magistrates, and all the other powers of the state must obey the legislative power in the execution of their several functions, or else the constitution is at an end." See 1 Bl Comm 49.

See inherent power.

sovereign prerogative. See royal prerogative.

sovereign right. A right which the state alone, or some of its governmental agencies, can possess. City of St. Paul v Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. 45 Minn 387, 397, 48 NW 17.

sovereign state. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory, bound together by common laws, habits, and customs into one body politic, exercising through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace, and of entering into international relations with other communities. 30 Am J Rev ed Internat L § 10.

In the United States, each state constitutes a distinct and independent sovereignty, and consequently the laws of one state do not operate of their own force in any other state. 16 Am J2d Confl L § 4.

sovereignty. The power to govern; supreme political authority. That public authority which commands in civil society, and orders and directs what each citizen is to perform to obtain the end of its institution.

space. The distance between things. Room for persons or things. The boundless expanse in all directions from the earth.

See Aeronautics and Space Act.

space of intersection. A term found in the federal statute respecting priorities as between mining claims where two or more veins intersect or cross each other. 30 USC § 41.

Some courts take the view that the phrase, "space of intersection," refers to intersection of the veins only, but others assume that it may mean intersection of the veins or of the claims themselves, depending upon the facts of the particular case. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 112.

spado. (Civil law.) A person without capacity to reproduce; an impotent person.

spadones. Plural of spado.

Spanish land grant. A grant made by the government of Spain of land formerly within its dominions but now within the territorial limits of the United States. Bryan v Kennett, 113 US 179, 28 L Ed 908, 5 S Ct 407.

span of horses. A term of horses, not merely a pair of horses. Ames v Martin, 6 Wis 361.

spare tire. An extra tire carried on a motor vehicle for possible use consequent to a puncture or other imperfection occurring in one of the tires. 24 Am J1st Garag § 26.

spark arrester. A device upon a chimney, sometimes required of the proprietor of an industrial plant in order to obviate or lessen the danger of fires ignited by sparks. Anno; 25 ALR 994.

sparring. Boxing, usually with gloves, without attempting to land a heavy blow.

See boxing match; prize fight.

sparsim. Sparsely; rarely.

spaying. The practice of removing the ovaries of a female animal, usually to prevent propagation. Sterilization of a female to prevent propagation.

speaking demurrer. A demurrer which should be overruled as setting up a ground dehors the record, or a ground which to be sustained requires reference to facts not appearing on the face of the pleading attacked. 41 Am J1st Pl § 209.

speaking order. An order of court, such as an order granting a new trial, which contains matter which is explanatory and illustrative of the direction which is given by the order. Duff v Duff, 101 Cal 1, 35 P 437.

speaking with prosecutor. Making an arrangement for leniency in sentence.

special. Belonging to a certain or specific class, kind, genus or species; peculiar; particular; opposed to general.

special acceptance. An acceptance of a bill of exchange which specifies the place of payment.

See qualified acceptance.

special account. An account opened in a bank for a special purpose as the result of a special understanding and creating the relationship of trustee or bailee of the fund deposited on the part of the bank. City Nat. Bank v Brink, 98 Ind App 275, 187 NE 689.

See special deposit.

special act. See private act; special legislation.

special action. A statutory action.

See extraordinary remedies.

special action on the case. Same as trespass on the case.

special administration. The administration of the estate of a deceased person by a special administrator.

special administrator. An administrator of a decedent's estate appointed by the probate court to take charge of the property of the estate pending a contest or other delay in the appointment of an executor or administrator, the purpose of the appointment being to prevent loss of assets occurring in the absence of an authorized agent to collect debts due the decedent and to preserve the assets of the estate pending the appointment of a regular administrator or executor and the beginning of a regular administration. State ex rel. Hamilton v Guinotte, 156 Mo 513, 57 SW 281.

See special letters of administration.

special agent. One authorized to do one or more specific acts in pursuance of particular instructions, to act in a particular transaction, or in a particular way. Southern States Fire Ins. Co. v Kronenberg, 199 Ala 164, 74 So 63.

special agreement. Same as special contract.

special appearance. An appearance for the sole purpose of objecting to the jurisdiction of the court, not operating as a submission of defendant's person to the jurisdiction of the court. Re Blalock, 233 NC 493, 64 SE2d 848, 25 ALR2d 818. An appearance testing the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant's person, including the question of sufficiency of the process or manner of service, or, in some jurisdictions, testing jurisdiction of the subject matter. 5 Am J2d Appear § 2.

The word "tax" as it is used in a statute is usually construed to have reference to taxation for general purposes, and not to local assessments. McIlroy v Ugitt, 182 Ark 1017, 33 SW2d 719, 73 ALR 1223. Local assessments do not come within the meaning of the word "tax" as used in the constitutional provision exempting lands of the state from taxation. Re Simpson, 43 Cal 2d 594, 275 P2d 467, 47 ALR2d 991.

In their ordinary sense, local assessments are not taxes, but they are taxes in the more general signification that they are a charge put upon property by authority of the lawmaking power. The general distinction is taken between taxes and local assessments that the former are forced contributions levied by the government alike upon all property, for the purpose of raising revenue for the support of the government without reference to the special benefits that will inure to the property thus taxed, while the latter are also forced contributions which are levied by the government, but upon certain particular property, with a view of raising revenue for certain designated purposes, having direct reference to the special benefits that will inure to the property thus taxed. Shreveport v Prescott, 51 La Ann 1895, 26 So 664; Altman v Kilburn, 45 NM 453, 116 P2d 812, 136 ALR 554.

special assessment bond. Same as improvement bond.

special assessment district. Same as improvement district.

special assessment lien. A statutory lien on property charged with a special or local assessment to secure the payment of the assessment. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 196.

special assumpsit. Assumpsit upon an express contract or promise. 1 Am J2d Actions § 15.

special attorney. See attorney special; special counsel; special prosecutor.

special authority. See special power.

special bailiffs. "Mean persons" employed by sheriffs to aid bailiffs of hundreds and to serve writs and executions and make arrests. See 1 Bl Comm 345.

special bailment. A bailment affecting the public interest in such a way that the law has imposed on the bailee a liability more stringent than that of an ordinary bailee. Anno: 93 ALR 834; 8 Am J2d Bailm § 6.

special bastard. A bastard who was born before the marriage of his parents who intermarry thereafter.

This was not bastardy by the ecclesiastical law, but by the common law, it is. See 3 Bl Comm 335.

special benefits. Benefits deductible in ascertaining the amount of damages to be awarded in eminent domain, as resulting from the improvement for which land is taken and peculiar to condemnee's property or interest, not being shared by all the property in the vicinity. 27 Am J2d Em D § 368.

special case. A term corresponding in English practice with "agreed case." Germano v Gresham Fire & Acci. Ins. Soc. (Australia) [ 1924] Vict LR 592. A case reserved for decision by the judges in bank or by a higher court. A proceeding unknown to the common law, arising under statute.

See extraordinary remedies.

special census. A census taken by the Bureau of the Census upon request or for a particular purpose. 14 Am J2d Census § 2.

special charter. A charter granted a corporation by special act of the legislature. 18 Am J2d Corp § 26. A charter of a municipal corporation granted by or under a statute other than one providing for the incorporation of municipal corporations generally.

special charter city. See special charter.

special commission. An administrative agency for a special purpose. Wilson v Philadelphia School Dist. 328 Pa 225, 195 A 90, 113 ALR 1401.

As the term was used in a constitutional prohibition against a legislative delegation of municipal functions to any "special commission," the object of the provision was held to be to prevent the state legislature from interfering with local governments by the appointment "of its own special commissions for the control of purely local matters." And it was held also that the aggregate body of qualified electors could not be regarded as a "special commission" within the meaning of the prohibition. Ex parte Pfahler, 150 Cal 71, 88 P 270.

special constable. A civilian sworn in to aid a constable in preserving the peace.

special contract. A contract under seal; a specialty.

The term has often been defined as being synonymous with the word specialty, meaning a contract under seal. Other authorities have treated it as a simple contract either written or parol. McManus v Cassidy, 66 Pa 260.

See specialty.

special counsel. An attorney at law employed by an attorney general of a state to assist him in the discharge of his official duties. 7 Am J2d Atty Gen § 3. An attorney at law employed by the Attorney General of the United States in connection with the functions of the Department of Justice or, where the public interest so requires, as an assistant to a United States District Attorney in a particular case. 7 Am J2d Atty Gen § 4.

See special prosecutor.

special court. A court created by legislative act. State v Allen, 117 Ohio St 470, 159 NE 591.

special court-martial. One of three kinds of court-martials, intermediate, a general court-martial and a summary court-martial, conducted before a body of at least three commissioned officers, and limited in jurisdiction generally to noncapital offenses.

[1198]

special custom. A local or particular, as distinguished from a general, custom. 21 Am J2d Cust & U § 6.

special damages. Such compensatory damages as arise from the special circumstances of the case, that is, the peculiar circumstances of the case, and may, if properly pleaded, be added to the general damages. 22 Am J2d Damg § 15. The natural, but not the necessary, result of an injury. 22 Am J2d Damg § 15. Damages for breach of contract arising naturally but not necessarily from the breach. Parker v Harris Pine Mills, 206 Or 187, 291 P2d 709, 56 ALR2d 382. Damages sustained by a plaintiff beyond the mere loss of his property. Sarkesian v Cedric Chase Photographic Laboratories, 324 Mass 620, 87 NE2d 745, 12 ALR2d 899. In the law of libel and slander, loss of a temporal or material advantage of any kind, such as loss of an emolument, a favorable marriage, a profitable employment, or even substantial hospitality. 33 Am J1st L & S § 204.

The distinction between general and special damage arising from breach of contract are not absolute, but relative; in other words, damage which is general in relation to a contract of one kind may be classified as special in relation to another. Kerr S.S. Co. v Radio Corp. of America, 245 NY 284, 157 NE 140, 55 ALR 1139, cert den 275 US 557, 72 L Ed 424, 48 S Ct 118.

special demurrer. A demurrer aimed at a particular defect in a pleading, which must be assigned as the ground of demurrer. 41 Am J1st Pl § 225. A demurrer which lies only for defects in form and adds to a general demurrer a specification of the particular ground of exception. 41 Am J1st Pl § 206. A demurrer directed to a matter of form rather than substance, being concerned with matters in abatement, ambiguity, uncertainty, and the like. 41 Am J1st Pl § 204.

special deposit. A deposit delivered into the possession of a bank to be kept separate and distinct from the general assets of the bank and to be returned or delivered intact on demand, the title to the thing deposited remaining in the depositor. 10 Am J2d Banks § 360. The placing of specific money or property in the possession of a bank under terms such that the bank is under obligation to return the identical thing deposited to the depositor, Keyes v Paducah & I. R. Co. (CA6 Ky) 61 F2d 611, 86 ALR 203, no relation of debtor and creditor between the bank and the depositor being created. Bassett v City Bank & T Co. 115 Conn 1, 160 A 60, 81 ALR 1488.

The state courts do not agree as to whether a deposit made in a bank for special purposes constitutes a trust fund in the hands of the bank, but the federal courts hold that if the deposit is made as a general deposit, the fact that it is made for the purpose of providing a credit which is to be used thereafter for a special purpose does not give it the status of a trust fund in the hands of the bank. Santee Timber Corporation v Elliott, 7 F2d 179.

See special account.

special deputy sheriff. A deputy sheriff who is an officer pro hac vice (for the particular occasion); to execute a particular writ on some certain occasion.

He acts under a specific, not a general appointment and authority. See Allen v Smith, 12 NJL 159, 163.

special election. An election arising from some exigency or special need, such as filling a vacancy in office or submitting to the electors a measure or proposition for adoption or rejection. 25 Am J2d Elect § 3.

special emergency. Something more pressing than the usual emergency, exigency, crisis, or predicament; a sudden, acute, and taut situation not foreseeable in time to deliberate and exercise judgment or discretion. People v Uncapher, 207 Misc 960, 141 NYS2d 377.

special errand rule. The rule that where an employee's duties require him to circulate in a general area with no fixed place or hours of employment, or to go to and from his home to various outside places of work, and his employer furnishes him with a motor vehicle to use in his work, it can be found that he continues in the service of his employer, for the purposes of the liability of his employer for an injury resulting from his negligence in the operation of the vehicle, until he actually reaches home. Anno: 52 ALR2d 365, § 7.

special estate tail. An estate in tail under a limitation to one and certain specified heirs of his body, as the heirs of his body begotten of a certain wife. 28 Am J2d Estates § 45.

special exception. An exception directed to a matter of form rather than substance.

See special demurrer.

special execution. An execution upon a judgment which specifies the particular property to be sold. 21 Am J2d Exec § 17.

special exemption from taxation. An exemption from taxation granted to a particular class of persons, such as veterans, old persons, or persons of limited means without earning power. Eyers Woolen Co. v Gilsum, 84 NH 1, 64 ALR 1196, 146 A 511. An exemption from taxation granted by contract. 51 Am J1st Tax § 507.

special fee conditional. A fee simple conditional limited to one and the heirs of the body by a particular spouse. Anno: 114 ALR 604; 28 Am J2d Est § 38.

special finding. An answer made by the jury to an interrogatory, being distinguished from a special verdict in the fact that it always accompanies a general verdict and further in the fact that it need not cover all the material issues. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1005. A finding of fact made by the court in a trial to the court. Not a mere report of the evidence, but a statement by the court of the ultimate facts on which the law of the case must determine the rights of the parties; a finding of the propositions of fact which the evidence establishes, and not the evidence on which those ultimate facts are supposed to rest, such finding having the same effect as the verdict of a jury. Rhodes v United States Nat. Bank (CA7 Ill) 66 F 512.

special franchise. A franchise distinct from the franchise to be a corporation or the franchise in the sense of the powers granted in the charter. 18 Am J2d Corp § 66. A right to do something in a public street or place which, except for the grant under which it is exercised, would be a trespass. People ex rel. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. v Gourley, 198 NY 486, 92 NE 398; People ex rel. Harlem River & Port Chester Railroad Co. v State Board of Tax Comrs. 215 NY 507, 109 NE 569.

The right to be a corporation is frequently called a "franchise," as it is in one sense, but not in the sense that a grant of a right to build a railroad in a public street is a franchise; and it is unfortunate that the same word is used with widely different meanings, for it leads to confusion unless qualified by an appropriate adjective, such as "general" or "special." The right to be a corporation, or the corporate right of life, is inseparable from the corporation itself. It is part of it, and cannot be sold or assigned. That franchise is general and dies with the corporation, for it cannot survive dissolution or repeal. On the other hand, grants to do something in the public streets, or special franchises, are not part of the corporation. They can be made to an individual with the same legal force or effect as to a corporation. Unless there is some legislative restriction, they can be mortgaged and sold. They are no part of corporate life if owned by a corporation, any more than they are no part of corporate life if owned by an individual. Lord v Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 194 NY 212, 87 NE 443.

special fund doctrine. The principle that a commitment of a municipal corporation is not subject to debt limit provisions where the obligation is payable out of a special fund and the municipality is not liable to pay the obligation out of its general funds in the event the special fund proves insufficient, and the transaction by which the indebtedness is incurred cannot in any event deplete the general resources of the municipality. 38 Am J1st Mun Corp § 468.

special grand jury. A grand jury summoned where there has been a failure to draw or summon a regular grand jury or where the regular grand jury has been discharged. 24 Am J1st Grand J § 17.

special guaranty. A guaranty which names certain definite persons as obligees. 24 Am J1st Guar § 15. A guaranty limited to the person to whom it is addressed, usually contemplating a trust or reposing a confidence in that person. Tidioute Sav. Bank v Libbey, 101 Wis 193, 71 NW 182.

special guardian. A guardian appointed to protect the interests of an infant or incompetent in a proceeding already instituted. A guardian ad litem is appointed for the purpose of prosecuting or defending an action; a special guardian is appointed merely to protect the interests of the ward by inquiring into the proceedings and seeing to it that the ward is not prejudiced by anything which is done in the proceedings.

special healing. A purported treatment of sickness or healing of disease by methods other than those practiced by physicians. 41 Am J1st Phys & S § 31.

special heir. See heir special.

Specialia generalibus derogant. Special words or provisions restrict or modify general ones.

"A statute which treats of persons of an inferior rank cannot by any general word be so extended as to embrace a superior; the class first mentioned is to be taken as the most comprehensive." Lewis v Fisher, 80 Md 139, 30 A 608.

speciali gratia. See ex speciali gratia.

special imparlance. An imparlance reserving exceptions and objections.

special income tax. A tax on a special type of income, particularly income previously escaping taxation. Welch v Henry, 305 US 134, 83 L Ed 87, 59 S Ct 121, 118 ALR 1142, reh den 305 US 675, 83 L Ed 437, 59 S Ct 250.

special indorsement. An indorsement of a negotiable instrument which specifies the person to whom or to whose order the instrument is to be payable. 11 Am J2d B & N § 361.

special injunction. A term of the early English practice for an injunction to prevent irreparable injury in a case where the preventive aid of the court of equity was the ultimate and only relief sought, being distinguished in this respect from the common injunction which was granted in aid of or as secondary to another equity. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 10.

special inquiry officer. An officer of the immigration service charged with duties in the determination of admission or exclusion of an alien. 8 USC § 1226(a).

special interrogatories. Interrogatories contained in or referred to in a bill in equity, constituting a definite part of such a bill according to traditional equity practice. 27 Am J2d Equity § 181. Interrogatories directed to the jury upon a request for a special verdict or special findings. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1005.

special issue. A plea denying some one material and traversable allegation in the declaration, and concluding to the contrary.

Such a plea never advances new matter, but merely denies some particular material and traversable allegation, the denial of which is, in effect, a denial of the entire right of action. Kimball v Railroad Co. 55 Vt 95, 97.

See special pleading.

specialist. A physician who confines his practice to specific diseases or disabilities. A physician who holds himself out as having special knowledge and skill in the treatment of a particular organ or disease and who is bound to bring to the discharge of his duty to patients employing him as a specialist that degree of skill and learning ordinarily possessed by physicians who devote special attention and study to such organ or disease, having regard to the present state of scientific knowledge. 41 Am J1st Phys & S § 90. In the broad sense, any person who concentrates in practice upon a division of a profession, occupation, or calling.

specialized court. See court of limited jurisdiction.

special judge. A judge selected to act in the absence, disability, or disqualification of the regular judge, or under other circumstances, as provided by constitution or statute. 30A Am Rev ed Judges § 237.

Some courts make a distinction between a judge pro tem and a special judge, saying that the former is appointed for a term of court or some part thereof, during which time he exercises all the functions of the regular judge, while a special judge is appointed to act in a particular case. 30A Am J1st Judges § 238.

special judgment. Same as judgment in rem. Smith v Colloty, 69 NJL 365, 368, 55 A 805.

special jurisdiction. See court of limited jurisdiction.

special jury. Same as struck jury.

special law. See private act; special legislation.

special legislation. A statute which does not have a uniform operation, relating to particular persons or things of a class, either particularized by the express terms of the act, or separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but for such limitations, be applicable. 50 Am J1st Stat § 7. A statute which by force of a stated or inherent limitation arbitrarily excludes some persons, places, or things upon which otherwise it would operate. Iowa Motor Vehicle Asso.

[1200]

v Board of Railroad Comrs. 207 Iowa 461, 221 NW 364, 75 ALR 1. A statute making a classification not based on any reasonable ground. Nicholls v Spokane Public School District, 195 Wash 310, 80 P2d 833. See special legislation, D, 1219.

special letter of credit. A letter of credit addressed exclusively to an individual therein named. 24 Am J1st Guar § 22.

special letters of administration. The letters granted to a special administrator.

See special administrator.

special license. A license required of certain kinds of dealers, such as peddlers and hawkers, as well as of those who deal in certain kinds of merchandise, such as retailers of intoxicating liquors or medicines. 33 Am J1st Lic § 51.

special lien. A charge upon a particular piece of property, by which it is held for the payment or discharge of a particular debt or duty. 33 Am J1st Liens § 5.

If a lien extends to everything, acquired and to be acquired, it is not special merely because it was created by a mortgage or other express contract. Green v Coast Line Railroad Co. 97 Ga 15, 24 SE 814.

special lien for services. The lien of an artisan or mechanic upon the personal property of another for services rendered upon the same.

See charging lien; mechanic's lien.

special limitation. See conditional limitation.

specially appear. See appear specially.

special master. One to whom a matter is referred by a court of bankruptcy to hear and report his findings of fact and conclusions of law. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 107.

special meeting. A meeting of the directors, or of the stockholders, of a corporation other than the annual meeting of stockholders or a regular meeting of the board of directors.

special mobile equipment. Equipment of an automobile for a special purpose, such as a rack for the display of garments by a salesman, not connected with the actual operation of the vehicle in reference to driving it upon the highway.

special motion. Any motion which must be brought on for hearing upon supporting papers. A motion which affects substantial rights and is not to be granted ex parte. 37 Am J1st Motions § 14.

special nuclear material. (1) Plutonium, uranium enriched in the isotope 233 or in the isotope 235, and any other material determined by the Atomic Energy Commission to be special nuclear material, exclusive of source material; or (2) any material artificially enriched by any of the foregoing, exclusive of source material. 42 USC § 2014(y).

special occupant. The status of an heir in possession, but under the terms of a grant, not by right of inheritance. See 2 Bl Comm 259.

special owner. Some person holding the property with the consent and as the representative of the actual owner.
The term is applied to personal property only. See Frazier v State, 18 Tex App 434, 441.

special paper. See clean paper.

special partner. A partner in a limited partnership protected against general liability for the firm debts. 40 Am J1st Partn § 511.

special partnership. Same as limited partnership.

special place. A certain bank, store, or other building within a city or town, as distinct from the city or town itself.

special plea. A plea by the accused in a criminal case other than a plea of guilty or not guilty. 21 Am J2d Crim L §§ 458 et seq.

See special pleading.

special pleading. A pleading required for presentation of special matters of defense, that is, matters going beyond a mere denial of plaintiff's allegations. 41 Am J1st Pl § 144. A pleading in excuse or justification; a pleading in confession and avoidance. Gelston v Hoyt (US) 3 Wheat 246, 327, 4 L Ed 381, 401.

Special matters of defense should be specially pleaded. 41 Am J1st Pl § 150.

special police. Extra police engaged for duty on an extraordinary occasion, such as a celebration attended by a large crowd of people, some of whom are likely to be persons over whom there should be police surveillance.

special power. The authority of an agent to do only a specific act or acts in pursuance of particular instructions, or with restrictions necessarily implied from the act to be done. 3 Am J2d Agency § 6.

See special power of appointment; special power of attorney.

special power of appointment. A power of appointment under which the donee of the power is restricted to passing on the property to certain individuals or class of individuals designated or described in the instrument which creates the power. Marx v Rice, 1 NJ 574, 65, A2d 48, 9 ALR2d 584.

Under statute a special power in trusts exists:(1) when the disposition which it authorizes is limited to be made to any particular person other than the grantee of such power; (2) when any person or class of persons, other than the grantee, is entitled to any benefit from the disposition or charge authorized by the power. Re Uihlein's Will, 264 Wis 362, 59 NW2d 641.

special power of attorney. A power couched in specific rather than general terms, as a power to sell, not any land owned by the principal, but specified land of the principal; a power to sell to a particular purchaser, not any purchaser; or a power to sell on specified terms, not on any terms. White v Breen, 106 Ala 159, 19 So 59.

special power in trust. See special power of appointment.

special privilege. A right, power, franchise, immunity, or privilege granted to or vested in a person or class of persons, to the exclusion of others and in derogation of common right. Plattsmouth v Nebraska Telephone Co. 80 Neb 460, 114 NW 588.

special proceeding. A civil remedy other than an ordinary action. Hazelton-Moffit Special School District v Ward (ND) 107 NW2d 636. Inclusive of every special statutory remedy which is not in itself an action. Sullivan v Storz, 156 Neb 177, 55 NW2d 499, 34 ALR2d 1142. A proceeding instituted for the appointment of an ancillary receiver or for the exercise of summary jurisdiction. Knauth v Latham, 242 US 426, 61 L Ed 404, 37 S Ct 139. A proceeding before an administrative agency. Ames v Department of Labor & Industry, 176 Wash 509, 30 P2d 239, 91 ALR 1392. A proceeding characterized by commencement upon petition and notice, rather than upon service of summons or other form of regular process.

Nearly thirty years prior to the adoption of the California Constitution of 1879, special cases and special proceedings had been defined by the state supreme court as something entirely different, as new cases, the creation of statute, and the special proceedings under which were unknown to the general framework or courts of law and equity, and as not including any class of cases for which courts of general jurisdiction had always supplied a remedy. See Bixler's Appeal, 59 Cal 550, 555.

special property. An interest in property other than full ownership, such as that of a bailee in possession, a lienor, a mortgagee, etc.

special prosecutor. Counsel employed to assist the prosecuting attorney in the conduct of a criminal prosecution. 42 Am J1st Pros Atty § 10.

special rate. A railroad rate granted specially for a particular shipment of goods. 13 Am J2d Car § 185.

special reason. A term of art for a circumstance calling for a variance in the application of a zoning regulation. 58 Am J1st Zon § 196.

special receiver. A receivership, as in a mortgage foreclosure, wherein the receiver takes custody only of particular property. 45 Am J1st Rec § 3.

special registration. A registration of voters required for and effective only in reference to a particular election, for example, a local option election. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 97.

special relief. Specific relief prayed for in a complaint, bill, or petition in equity. 27 Am J2d Equity § 182.

special replication. A replication or reply setting up new matter in avoidance of the defenses pleaded in the answer. 41 Am J1st Pl § 178.

special retainer. A fee paid to an attorney preliminary to a particular case or litigation.

special rule of court. An order of court adopting a rule of practice or a method of procedure in the particular cause before the court, as a departure from the usual practice or procedure.

"If under the stipulation, the judge was to abdicate for a time, and proceed, as an arbitrator, to hear and decide the facts and the law, and upon such findings was again to proceed as a court to pronounce judgment, this was an adoption of that method of trying the cause. The submission was thus made a special rule of court, and was not revocable." Hastings v Jones (CA7 Ill) 18 F2d 833.

special salvage. A reward in the nature of salvage made to members of the crew of the vessel saved. 47 Am J1st Salv § 20.

special seal. A seal adopted by a corporation different from its corporate seal, for a special occasion. 18 Am J2d Corp § 154.

special session. Any session of a legislative body which is lawfully held and which is not a regular session or a part or an adjournment of a regular session. People ex rel. Carter v Rice, 135 NY 473, 31 NE 921.

See sessions of the peace.

special statutory proceeding. See extraordinary remedies; special proceeding.

special stop. A stopping place on the line of a carrier not noted in its schedule or posted as a stop.

special statute. See private act; special legislation.

special tax. A tax levied for a particular governmental purpose. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 3. A tax levied for a special public purpose.

A special assessment for local improvement is not such a tax. Illinois Central Railroad Co. v Decatur, 126 Ill 92, 18 NE 315.

special taxing district. A district fixed by legislative determination, without reference to town, county or regular taxing district lines, as a district which is to receive a special benefit and to bear the expense of a local improvement by means of a local assessment. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 115.

special term. A term of court, contra-distinguished from a regular or adjourned term, appointed by the presiding officer or officers, held at an unusual time, for the transaction of some particular business. Wightman v Karsner, 20 Ala 446, 452. In some jurisdictions, a term for the transaction of court business other than jury trials.

special ticket. A ticket issued by a carrier good only upon certain trains and for a limited time, and to be used only in accordance with terms prescribed therein. 14 Am J2d Car §§ 813, 814.

special traverse. A form of denial at common law, the design of which is to explain or qualify the denial, commencing with the words "absque hoc" or the English equivalent "without this, that," then pursuing the material portion of the words of the allegation which it denies. 41 Am J1st Pl § 190.

special trust. An active or real, as distinguished from a dry, trust.

specialty. An instrument under seal wherein an obligation is embodied. Mutual Trust & Dep. Co. v Boone (Ky) 267 SW2d 751, 45 ALR2d 962. A contract under seal. A designation sometimes given to a bond, that is an obligation under seal, as distinguished from a promissory note or other simple contract. Commonwealth v Smith 92 Mass (10 Allen) 448. The practice of a specialist in a profession.

Certain decisions have denominated statutes as specialties which give a right to an ascertained or readily ascertainable money liability upon which an action of debt may be maintained. Williamson v Columbia Gas & Electric Corp. (DC Pa) 27 F Supp 198.

See special contract; specialist.

specialty debt. See specialty.

specialty hauler. A carrier which confines its transportation service to a special class or classes of property. Carolina Freight Carriers Corp. v United States (DC NC) 38 F Supp 549, affd 315 US 475, 86 L Ed 971, 62 S Ct 722.

special use of highway. The use of street or highway for purposes other than those of travel and transportation. 25 Am J1st High § 168.

special venire. A venire issued by the court to summon jurors after the general panel has become exhausted and additional jurors are required to complete a trial jury. Additional jurors called in case of a deficiency in or exhaustion of the regular jury panel. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 91.

special verdict. A verdict finding the facts, in response to interrogatories submitted to it, without a conclusion as to the party prevailing in the case, such being left to the determination by the court upon the application of the law to the facts as found by the jury. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1005.

special warranty. A covenant of warranty contained in a deed, which is limited or restricted to certain persons or claims. In its most usual form, a warranty only against claims held by, through, or under the grantor. Central Life Assur. Soc. v Impelmans, 13 Wash 2d 632, 126 P2d 757. An implied warranty on the sale of a chattel ordered by the purchaser for a special purpose that the chattel is fit for that purpose. 46 Am J1st Sales § 346.

special warranty deed. A deed which contains a covenant of special warranty rather than a covenant of general warranty.

See special warranty.

specie. Gold or silver coins of the coinage of the United States. Belford v Woodward, 158 Ill 122, 41 NE 1097.

species. A sort, a kind, a class subordinate to a genus, which is a class embracing many species.

The expression "an animal of the horse species" would, therefore, only include the animals known as stallions, geldings, mares, fillies and colts. Smythe v State, 17 Tex App 244, 251.

species facti. The kind or character of the act.

specific. Definite. Explicit.

specification. A statement in detail. A statement of grounds of opposition to the discharge of a bankrupt. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 718. The doctrine under which a change made by one person in the species of a substance or article belonging to another, passes title from the owner to him who wrought the change. 1 Am J2d Access § 1. The technical name of that part of the formal charge made against a defendant in court-martial proceedings which sets forth the acts or omissions of the accused relied upon as the legal constituents of the offense. 36 Am J1st Mil § 98.

specification of error. The setting forth in an assignment of error on appeal the alleged error committed by the lower court which is relied upon as a ground of reversal. 5 Am J2d A & E § 648.

specifications. A product of architectural services. A statement in detail of the manner in which a building or other improvement is to be constructed, including the materials to be used. 5 Am J2d Arch § 3; 13 Am J2d Bldg Contr § 12. A written description of an invention and the discovery thereof to be filed with an application for a patent. 40 Am J1st Pat § 85.

The purpose of the statutory requirement that an application for a patent shall contain a written description of the invention and discovery, and, in the case of a machine, the principle thereof, and shall particularly point out and distinctly claim the part, improvement, or combination which the applicant claims as his invention or discovery is not only that any person skilled in the art to which it pertains may construct and use it after the expiration of the patent, but also to inform the public during the life of the patent of the limits of the monopoly asserted, so that it may be known which features may be safely used or manufactured without a license, and which may not. 40 Am J1st Pat § 85.

specific bequest. See specific devise; specific legacy.

specific criminal intent. See specific intent.

specific denial. A denial by the defendant in his answer addressed to a specific substantive fact alleged by the plaintiff in his pleading. 41 Am J1st Pl § 150.

specific deposit. A deposit of money or other property for some specific and particular purpose; as where a note is deposited for collection, or money is deposited to pay a particular note. Officer v Officer, 120 Iowa 389, 94 NW 947.

See special deposit.

specific devise. A devise of real estate specifically described, or a portion or share thereof, or a devise of all the testator's "right, title and interest" in real estate specifically described. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1404.

specific devisee. One named in a will as the recipient of a specific devise.

specific gravity. The ratio of the weight of a substance to that of an equal volume of another substance used as a standard. Ohio Oil Co. v Conway, 281 US 146, 74 L Ed 775, 50 S Ct 310.

specific insurance. Insurance against a specific peril or in a specific amount. Anno: 13 ALR2d 725. Insurance under a policy covering particular property specifically, as contrasted with insurance under a blanket policy.

specific intent. The intent to commit the very forbidden act charged as the offense in a criminal prosecution. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 82.

Specific intent is present when from the circumstances the offender must have subjectively desired the prohibited result. State v Daniels, 236 La 998, 109 So 2d 896.

specific legacy. A bequest of a particular, individualized chattel, fund, or portion of the testator's personal estate, which is set apart from the balance of his property and which is differentiated from all other articles or funds of the same or a similar nature; a bequest which may be satisfied only by delivery of the specific object, fund, or portion designated, and not by the receipt of some equivalent in money or property. Henderson v First Nat. Bank, 189 Ga 175, 5 SE2d 636, 128 ALR 816; Gorham v Chadwick, 135 Me 479, 200 A 500, 117 ALR 805.

specific legatee. One named in a will as the beneficiary of a specific legacy.

specific lien. A special lien. 33 Am J1st Liens § 5.

specific performance. The actual accomplishment of a contract by the party bound to fulfill it. Guadalupe County Board of Education v O'Bannon, 26 NM 606, 195 P 801. The remedy by which a party to a contract is compelled to do precisely what he ought to have done without being coerced by a court. Edwards v Tobin, 132 Or 38, 284 P 562, 68 ALR 152. The equitable remedy of compelling performance of a contract as distinguished from an action for damages at law for breach through nonperformance. Acme Food Co. v Older, 64 W Va 255, 61 SE 235.

specific taxes. Taxes of a fixed amount by the head or number, or by some standard of weight or measurement and requiring no assessment other than a listing or classification of the subjects to be taxed.

Poll taxes are invariably specific taxes and excises are commonly specific, although the modern tendency is toward ad valorem taxation even in case of excises, as being more consonant with justice. See 51 Am J1st Tax § 26.

specific traverse. See special pleading; specific denial.

specified person. A term of art in the law of negotiable instruments, having reference to an existing person capable of indorsing the instrument and of being a party to a contract. Bergman v Avenue State Bank, 284 Ill App 516, 1 NE2d 432.

specify. To mention with particularity. To make a specification.

See specification; specifications.

spectacles. Eyeglasses. Sights which are impressive.

speculate. To take the risk of loss in view of possible gain. Arentsen v Moreland, 122 Wis 167, 99 NW 790. To buy or sell with the expectation of profiting by rise or fall in price; often to engage in hazardous business transactions for the chance of unusually large profits. Clucas v Bank of Montclair, 110 NJL 394, 166 A 311, 88 ALR 302.

speculative damages. Damages not proved with reasonable certainty, the trier of the fact being left to speculate as to the actual damages suffered by the plaintiff. 22 Am J2d Damg § 24.

Damages are not speculative merely because they cannot be computed with mathematical exactness, if under the evidence they are capable of reasonable approximation. Hawkinson v Johnston (CA8 Mo) 122 F2d 724.

"So long as the jury are considering the material pecuniary injury, and the physical pain, their inquiry relates to what are termed actual damages; but when authorized by a vicious intent of the wrongdoer, they turn to the realm of mental anguish, public indignity, wounded sensibility, etc., the damages may more appropriately be described as presumptive, speculative, or imaginary." Murphy v Hobbs, 7 Colo 541, 5 P 119, 123.

speculative or trading value. The value of securities based upon a possibility or probability, depending upon the future happening of certain contingencies respecting the affairs of the company issuing the securities, that they would in the future acquire a substantial cash market value. Haight v Stewart, 36 Cal App 514, 172 P 769.

speculative security. A stock, bond, or other security the value of which materially depends on proposed or promised future promotion or development. Anno: 87 ALR 81.

The term has been defined by a state blue sky law as including a stock, bond, note, contract, or other security, which shall, in subscription, issuance, sale, transfer, negotiation, or distribution, be represented to yield a profit to the purchaser or other transferee of more than eight per cent on the price at which it is offered. Superior Producing & Refining Co. v Handlan, Hearne & Co. 100 W Va 547, 548, 131 SE 857.

speed laws. Statutes and ordinances regulating the speed of vehicles upon street or highway in the interest of public safety. 7 Am J2d Auto §§ 180 et seq.

speed limit. A restriction by statute or ordinance upon the speed at which a motor vehicle may be operated upon highway or street, usually a maximum, but sometimes a minimum, limit. 7 Am J2d Auto §§ 180 et seq. A restriction imposed by statute or ordinance upon the speed at which a motorboat may be operated upon public waters. 12 Am J2d Boats § 15.

speed meter. See radar speed meter.

speedometer. An instrumentality in a motor vehicle, in view of the driver, which indicates the speed at which the vehicle is being driven.

speed trap. A watch maintained, whether in person or through an instrumentality, for the particular purpose of detecting violations of speed laws in a particular section of street or highway. 39 Am J1st Obst J § 16.

speed-watch. A means of measuring speed of a motor vehicle, consisting of two rubber hoses set across the highway at a measured distance, and so equipped and constructed that when the front wheels of a vehicle strike the first hose, a clock is set in operation, and when the wheels strike the second hose, the clock stops, so that a reading of the speed of the vehicle in miles per hour is recorded. People v Duskin, 11 Misc 2d 945, 174 NYS2d 527.

speedy trial. A right of an accused. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 241. A trial conducted according to fixed rules, regulations, and proceedings of law, free from vexatious, capricious, and oppressive delays. State v Jackson, 228 Or 371, 365 P2d 294, 89 ALR2d 1225; Gerchman v State, 206 Tenn 109, 332 SW2d 182.

The constitutional and statutory right of one accused of a criminal offense to a speedy trial is a right which is personal to the accused alone and one in which the state has no special interest, and it has been held without question that he may waive his right in that respect. Anno: 129 ALR 574.

Spencer's Case. A leading English case on the law of covenants. 5 Coke 16a, 77 Eng Reprint 72.

The first resolution in Spencer's Case, if regarded alone, implies that a covenant cannot run with the land if it relates to a thing not in esse. The second resolution, however, makes it clear that a covenant relating to a thing not in esse may run with the land if the thing to be done relates to and touches, and is not merely collateral to, the land, and if the intention of the parties that the covenant should run with the land is shown by the covenant. 20 Am J2d Cov § 30.

spendthrift. One so prodigal, profligate, or drunken, that there is need for the appointment of a guardian. 25 Am J1st G & W § 20. In common usage, a careless spender; one who does not know the value of money.

spendthrift trust. A trust created to provide a fund for the maintenance of the beneficiary which shall be secure against his improvidence or incapacity. Huestis v Manley, 110 Vt 413, 8 A2d 644. A trust which restrains either voluntary or involuntary alienation by the beneficiary of his interest in the trust, or which, in other words, bars such interest from seizure in satisfaction of his debts. Keelers' Estate, 334 Pa 225, 3 A2d 413, 121 ALR 1301.

star-chamber. See court of starchamber.

stare ad rectum. To stand trial; to abide by the judgment of the court.

stare decisis. The doctrine or principle that decisions should stand as precedents for guidance in cases arising in the future. A strong judicial policy that the determination of a point of law by a court will generally be followed by a court of the same or a lower rank in a subsequent case which presents the same legal problem, although different parties are involved in the subsequent case. 20 Am J2d Cts § 183.

The great principle, stare decisis, so fundamental in our law, and so congenial to liberty, is peculiarly important in popular governments, where the influence of passions is strong, the struggles for power are violent, the fluctuations of party are frequent, and the desire of suppressing opposition, or of gratifying revenge under the forms of law and by the agency of the courts, is constant and active. Ex parte Bollman (US) 4 Cranch 75, 89, 2 L Ed 554, 559.

An opinion rendered by a court of a foreign country, especially a British court, although having no effect by stare decisis in this country, may well be persuasive on an American court, particularly where the foreign court deals in its opinion with a question of law common to all civilized nations. 20 Am J2d Cts § 200.

The decision of a court of one state does not have effect as stare decisis in the court of another state, although it may be considered and even followed by the court of the sister state because its reasoning is persuasive. 20 Am J2d Cts § 203.

While even a single adjudication of the court, upon a question properly before it, is not to be questioned or disregarded except for the most cogent reasons, and then only in a case where it is plain that the judgment was the result of a mistaken view of the condition of the law applicable to the question, the doctrine of stare decisis is not without exceptions. It does not apply where it can be shown that the law has been misunderstood or misapplied, or where the former determination is evidently contrary to reason. Rumsey v New York & New England Railway Co. 133 NY 79, 30 NE 654.

stare decisis et non quieta movere. To stand by the decisions and not to disturb settled points.

stare in iudicio. To stand in judgment; to submit to the jurisdiction of the court.

star pages. Pages of a second or later edition of a book, particularly a law book, marked with a star at a certain line or word and indicating at such point a page number of the earlier edition, thereby correlating the pagination of the later edition with the earlier.

starr. A term which was applied by the Jews in England to all contracts, deeds, or other obligations.

state. A body politic or society of men united together for the purpose of promoting their mutual safety and advantage by their combined strength, occupying a definite territory, and politically organized under one government. McLaughlin v Poucher, 127 Conn 441, 17 A2d 767. People, territory, and government considered in combination. Texas v White (US) 7 Wall 700, 19 L Ed 227, overruled on other grounds 113 US 476, 28 L Ed 1044, 5 S Ct 588. A complete body of free persons united together for their common benefit, to enjoy peaceably what is their own, and to do justice to others. Chisholm v Georgia (US) 2 Dall 419, 1 L Ed 440.

Under the United States Constitution:-a political community of free citizens, occupying a territory of defined boundaries, and organized under a government sanctioned and limited by a written constitution, and established by the consent of the governed. Coyle v Smith, 221 US 559, 55 L Ed 853, 31 S Ct 688. Statute of Malefactors in Parcis. An English statute for the protection of game preserves against poachers.

Statute of Marlborough. The statute (1267) 52 Henry III, ch 23, confirming Magna Charta and Charta de Foresta and regulating certain tenures and matters of procedure. Sometimes called Statute of Marlbridge after the place where parliament was sitting at the time of the enactment.

Statute of Marlbridge. Same as Statute of Marlborough.

Statute of Merton. The English statute, so called, of 20 Henry III, ch 9 which is, in fact, not a statute, but a mere entry on the minutes of Parliament of a refusal by the English lords to assimilate the law of England to that of other civilized countries by affirmatively declaring that the marriage of the parents subsequent to the birth rendered the child legitimate. See 10 Am J2d Bast § 146.

statute of nonclaim. See nonclaim statute.

statute of the state. Any enactment, from whatever source originating, to which the state gives the force of law. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v Goldsboro, 232 US 548, 58 L Ed 721, 34 S Ct 364.

Statute of Uses. An English statute of 1536 (27 Henry VIII ch 10), generally recognized as a part of the common law of states of the United States, which gave a legal status to so-called "uses" theretofore recognized only in equity, providing that the legal title should follow the beneficial interest and vest in the "cestuis que use" after such quality, manner, form and condition as they had before in or to the use, confidence or trust that was in them. 28 Am J2d Est § 344. A statute, the most significant effect of which was to validate executory interests theretofore recognized only in equity. 28 Am J2d Est § 333.

Statute of Westminster. An act of the English Parliament in 1285 (13 Edw I, ch 34), providing that "if a wife willingly leave her husband and go away and continue with her advouterer" she shall be barred of dower, unless her husband later forgives her and takes her back.

Statute of Westminster I. The name given to a statute enacted in 1275 in the reign of Edward the First, providing for many reforms. See 4 Bl Comm 425.

Statute of Westminster II. Same as Statute de Donis.

Statute of Westminster III. Same as Statute Quia Emptores.

Statute of Wills. An English statute (1540; 32 Henry VIII ch 1) often said to have been the foundation of the modern English law of wills, being of most significance in its giving validity to devises of real estate not theretofore recognized at common law. 57 Am J1st Wills § 3. An English statute (34 & 35 Henry VIII ch 5; 1542, 1543) supplementing the earlier statute.

For text of the statutes, see Am J2d Desk Book, Documents 111, 112.

Statute of Winchester. Same as Statute of Hue and Cry.

Statute Quia Emptores. An act of Parliament in 1290 (18 Edw I ch 1), prohibiting sub-infeudation as by providing that upon all sales or feoffments of lands, the feoffee shall hold the same, not of the immediate feoffor, but of the chief lord of the fee, of whom such feoffor himself held it, the object of the Act being to remove feudal restraint upon the alienation of land. 28 Am J2d Est § 3. A statute which had the effect of abolishing rent service. Van Rensselaer v Hays, 19 NY 68.

For text of statute, see Am J2d Desk Book, Document 105.

Statutes at Large. See United States Statutes at Large.

statutes of laborers. English statutes concerning laborers, servants, and apprentices.

See limitation of actions.

statutes personal. Terminology of the continental or civil law.

See statutes real.

statutes real. Terminology of the continental or civil law.

The Spanish and French laws touching community property, and those of California and Texas and other states derived from them, are held to be, in the vocabulary of the civilians, statutes real and not statutes personal; that is to say, they apply to things within a country's jurisdiction rather than to persons wherever they may be or go. Commissioner v Skaggs (CA 5 Tex) 122 F2d 721.

statute staple. See estate by statute staple.

statute to prevent frauds and perjuries. See statute of frauds.

statuto. See ex statuto. statuto mercatori. See de statuto mercatori.

statutory. Created or existing under or by virtue of a statute.

statutory acre. An acre the area of which was fixed by statute as distinguished from the customary acre.

See customary acre.

statutory action. A remedy provided by statute which does not exist at common law or a remedy for the enforcement of a particular right more effective than that existing at common law. A private right of action predicated upon the violation of a statute. 1 Am J2d Actions § 73.

statutory bond. A bond required by statute. A bond which either literally or substantially meets the requirements of statute. Southern Surety Co. v. United States Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Co. (CCA) 13 F2d 833.

A distinction is made between a common-law bond and a statutory bond in that the latter is one which conforms to a statute, while the former does not, although it may have been so intended. Mt. Vernon v Brett, 193 NY 276, 86 NE 6, 10.

statutory copyright. A copyright to which an author is entitled by statute, as distinguished from the so-called "copyright at common law" or right of literary property. 18 Am J2d Copyr § 1.

statutory dedication. A dedication of land to public use made according to statute and operating by way of grant. 23 Am J2d Ded § 3.

statutory discovery. The remedy of discovery as provided by statute, the authorities being in conflict on the question whether the statutory remedy supersedes the equitable remedy of discovery. 23 Am J2d Dep § 142.

statutory emancipation. A proceeding authorized by statute in some states whereby courts are empowered to remove the disabilities of an infant on a proper application and proof of his capacity.

This is not a true emancipation, since its result is to remove the general disabilities of infancy, rather than the father's right to the child's services. 39 Am J1st P & C § 64.

statutory exposition. The inclusion in a statute of the construction made by the courts of an earlier statute on the same subject.

stay of execution. An order issued by the court, upon cause shown, against the issuance or the enforcement of an execution.
Stays of execution are of three classes: (1) those which are ordered by the court in which judgment is rendered, but not as the result of any appellate proceeding, and which proceed upon the ground that for some cause, the execution of the judgment ought to be postponed to some subsequent date, or, perhaps, ought not to take place at all; (2) those which result from statutes or rules of court granting the defendant a further time in which to satisfy the judgment upon his giving security therefor; and (3) those which are a consequence of, or attend, appellate proceedings. 30 Am J2d Exec § 692.

See supersedeas.

stay on appeal. See stay of execution; supersedeas.

stay statute. See moratorium.

steady course. The course of a vessel unchanging as to the direction in which headed and such that her future position may be calculated from present position and speed. Commonwealth v Dominion Line (CA2 NY) 20 F2d 729.

steal. Verb: To commit larceny. Daugherty v Thomas, 174 Mich 371, 140 NW 615. To take without right or leave, with intent to keep wrongfully, the goods of another. Grooms v State, 85 Fla 413, 96 So 296. Noun: A taking by larceny or theft. In the broad sense, any conversion or embezzlement. Anno: 55 ALR 836. A colloquial term for the obtaining of property for an inadequate consideration.

Having no common-law definition to restrict its meaning as an offense, the word "stealing" is commonly used to denote any dishonest transaction whereby one person obtains that which rightfully belongs to another and deprives the owner of the rights and benefits of ownership, but may or may not involve the element of stealth usually attributed to the word purloin. Crabb v Zerbst (CAS Ga) 99 F2d 562.

See intent to steal; larceny; stolen.

stealing. See steal.

stealing child. See kidnapping.

stealth. Acting in such manner as to not to disclose the act. Furtive action.

Where a person is accused of taking property from another by stealth, the word necessarily connotes lack of knowledge on the part of the victim. Spencer v United States, 73 App DC 98, 116 F2d 801.

See steal.

steamboat. Watercraft propelled by the power of steam, that is, by a steam engine. 12 Am J2d Boats § 1.

stockbroker's lien. See broker's lien.

stock car. A railroad car built to carry livestock, sometimes called, for no good reason, a palace car. In racing parlance, an automobile built for ordinary use, as distinguished from one built for racing only.

stock certificate. A written instrument signed by the proper officers of a corporation, stating or acknowledging that the person named therein is the owner of a designated number of shares of its stock. Whitehead v Gormley, 116 Okla 287, 245 P 562, 47 ALR 171; 18 Am J2d Corp § 245. Evidence of the ownership of intangible property interests in the corporation. Millar v Mountcastle, 161 Ohio St 409, 119 NE2d 626, 49 ALR2d 381. Not a mere evidence of a stock but, in effect, the stock itself, under the Uniform Stock Transfer Act and the Uniform Commercial Code. 6 Am J2d Attach § 39.

Stock certificates are frequently spoken of as securities but they are not securities in the strict legal significance of that term, since they are not evidences of indebtedness. Nelson v Owen, 113 Ala 372, 21 So 75.

stock company. A corporation. A company or association which has issued shares of stock representing ownership of proportionate interests in the enterprise. A company organized to present a repertoire of plays in one city, ordinarily in one theater.

See joint-stock company; stock insurance company.

stock control. See control of corporation.

stock corporation. The ordinary private corporation with a capital stock divided into shares. People ex rel. Winchester v Coleman, 133 NY 279, 31 NE 96.

See stock insurance company.

stock district. A district established under statute with the purpose and effect of requiring the owners of livestock within the district to keep their livestock restrained against trespassing upon the premises of other persons in order that crops may be cultivated on unfenced premises. 4 Am J2d Ani § 51.

stock dividend. A dividend paid by a corporation in stock of the corporation or in stock which the corporation holds in another corporation. Liebman v Auto. Strop Co. 241 NY 427, 150 NE 505. A corporate dividend payable in stock instead of cash, the declaration of which involves the creation and issuing of new stock to be distributed pro rata to the shareholders as evidence of the contemporaneous transfer of an equivalent amount of the surplus earnings or profits to the capital fund of the corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 812. An increase in the number of shares, the increased number representing the same property that was represented by the smaller number of shares. Booth v Gross K. & Co. 30 NM 465, 238 P 829, 41 ALR 868.

Far from being a realization of profits of the stockholder, such a dividend tends rather to postpone such realization, in that the fund represented by the new stock has been transferred from surplus to capital, and is no longer available for actual distribution. Eisner v Macomber, 252 US 189, 64 L Ed 521, 40 S Ct 189.

As to what constitutes a stock dividend under the rules governing allocation of stock dividends between income and principal in a trust estate. See Anno: 44 ALR2d 1297.

stock exchange. See exchange.

stock exchange certificate. A certificate of membership in a stock exchange. Anno: 44 ALR2d 947, § 16.

stock grazers. Persons who make use of their land in pasturing livestock. Persons who make a business of producing livestock for the market.

stock grazers' bounty. A bounty paid for the protection of interests of stock grazers; a bounty on predatory animals.

stockholder. The owner of one or more shares of stock in a corporation which has a capital stock. 18 Am J2d Corp § 460. One who appears on the books of the corporation as a holder of stock issued by the corporation. A person distinct from the corporate entity. J. F. Parkinson v Building Trades Council, 154 Cal 581, 98 P 1027.

Persons become stockholders either by original subscription, by direct purchase from the corporation, or by subsequent transfer from the original holders.

The purchase of stock of a corporation is not a loan to that corporation of the amount of such stock. None of the elements of debtor and creditor exist. Oklahoma Hotel Bldg. Co. v Houghton, 202 Okla 591, 216 P2d 288, 16 ALR2d 1307.

stockholder's derivative suit. See derivative action.

stockholder's liability. A liability for debts of the corporation, once imposed to a limited extent upon stockholders by constitutional or statutory provisions, since eliminated except for certain classes of debts, such as wages or obligations incurred before the prescribed amount of capital stock was subscribed for or paid in, and, of course, liability upon unpaid shares. 10 Am J2d Banks § 73; 19 Am J2d Corp § 775.

See superadded liability.

stockholders' meeting. A meeting of the stockholders of a corporation called for the purpose of electing directors and transacting other business requiring the action or consent of the stockholders, such as, amendment of the articles or certificate of the corporation, sale or mortgage of corporate assets, consolidation and merger, etc. 19 Am J2d Corp § 599.

stockholder's primary liability. The liability of a stockholder directly to a creditor of the corporation under former statutes, such liability attaching immediately upon the contracting of the debt by the corporation.

See stockholder's liability.

stockholder's secondary liability. The liability of a stockholder to a creditor of the corporation under former statutes, such liability arising upon the exhaustion of all remedies against the corporation for the collection of the debt, at least not before the return unsatisfied of an execution taken out upon a judgment obtained against the corporation upon the debt.

See stockholder's liability.

stockhouse. A place in a steel mill wherein one or two days' supply of ore for a furnace is kept. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v Bowers, 358 US 534, 3 L Ed 2d 490, 79 S Ct 383.

stocking. An item of knit goods. Vietor v Arthur, 104 US 498, 26 L Ed 633. Adding to a stock of merchandise or replacing articles sold from such stock.

stock insurance company. An insurance company organized and operating as a private business corporation rather than as a mutual insurance company or mutual benefit society. An incorporated insurance company in which the initial capital investment is made by subscribers to the stock, and the business is thereafter conducted by a board of directors elected by the stockholders, and, subject to state statutes, the distribution of earnings and profits as between stockholders and policy holders is determined by the board. Atlantic Life Ins. Co. v Moncure (DC Va) 35 F2d 360, affd (CA4) 44 F2d 167, cert den 283 US 823, 75 L Ed 1438, 51 S Ct 346. An insurance corporation which has a capital stock owned by its stockholders, and whose capital is the basis of its business, out of which the losses and expenses are paid, with those insuring in such company paying premiums as the basis of their contract. An insurance company wherein the stockholders contribute all the capital, stand all the losses and take all the profits. State v Willett, 171 Ind 296, 86 NE 68.

stock in trade. That form of property owned by a craftsman upon which he exercises his art, skill, or workmanship, and upon which he uses the tools of his trade or business, including raw materials and the manufactured goods themselves. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 113. A merchant's stock of goods.

See stock of merchandise.

stock of descent. An ancestor in whom a succession of inheritance begins.

stock of goods. See stock in trade; stock of merchandise.

stock of merchandise. The stock in trade of a merchant. The goods or chattels which a merchant holds for sale. Swift & Co. v Tempelos, 178 NC 276, 101 SE 8, 7 ALR 1581, 1584.

stock-option. An option for the purchase or sale of corporate stock. 18 Am J2d Corp § 299. Often having reference to an option held by an officer of or key employee of the corporation for the purchase of stock from the corporation or from some source provided by a definite plan.

See call; put.

stock-option plan. A plan for granting options to corporate officers or employees for the purchase of stock in the corporation, usually limited in respect of the number of shares and specific in reference to the price. 18 Am J2d Corp § 299.

stock rights. See rights.

stocks. A contrivance employed in former times for the discipline or punishment of a prisoner, consisting of a board through holes in which his feet and arms protruded.

stock split. An increase in the number of shares evidencing the ownership of a corporation without altering the amount of capital, surplus, or segregated earnings. 19 Am J2d Corp § 808. A mere dividing up of the outstanding shares of a corporation into a greater number of units without disturbing the stockholder's original proportional participating interest in the corporation; a matter of form not of substance. Re Hormann's Estate, 3 App Div 2d 5, 157 NYS2d 704; Re Hogan's Estate, 24 Misc 2d 449, 138 NYS2d 864.

stock subscription. See subscription to stock.

stock subscription book. See subscription book.

stock subscription note. A note covering the liability of a subscriber to corporate stock upon his subscription contract. Crofoot v Thatcher, 19 Utah 212, 57 P 171.

stock range. See range.

stock transfer. The process of transferring the ownership of a share or shares of corporate stock.

Stock Transfer Act. One of the uniform laws. A stop cock. A comprehensive statute respecting the transfer of corporate stock and the rights of transferees. 18 Am J2d Corp § 376. A uniform law specifically repealed by the UCC. 15 Am J2d Com C § 6.

stock transfer agent. See transfer agent.

stock transfer tax. An excise tax on the transfer of shares of corporate stock. A stamp tax on both the issuance and transfer of shares of corporate stock. 50 Am J1st Stk Tr Tax § 2.

stockyard. A place with facilities for the reception and care of livestock in connection with the transportation or marketing thereof. 50 Am J1st Stocky § 1. A place conducted for profit as a public market, with pens in which livestock are received and kept for sale or shipment. Stafford v Wallace, 258 US 497, 513, 66 L Ed 735, 740, 42 S Ct 397, 23 ALR 229.

stockyard corporation. A corporation engaged in maintaining and operating a stockyard as a business enterprise. 50 Am J1st Stocky § 1.

Stockyards Act. See Packers and Stockyards Act.

stolen. Obtained by larceny or theft. In a broader sense, obtained by larceny or any manner of conversion or embezzlement. Anno: 45 ALR 836.

The word "stolen", as used in the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act (18 USC § 2312), making it a criminal offense for one to transport, in interstate or foreign commerce, a motor vehicle knowing it to have been stolen, is not limited to a taking which amounts to common-law larceny, but includes an embezzlement or other felonious taking with intent to deprive the owner of the rights and benefits of ownership. United States v Turley, 352 US 407, 1 L Ed 430, 77 S Ct 397, 56 ALR2d 1300.

stolen automobile. See stolen.

stolen goods. See receiving stolen goods; stolen.

stolidity. Want of emotion or excitement. Greenfield v People, 85 NY 75.

stomach pump. A device operating by suction and used for removing the food content of the stomach for gastric analysis. 23 Am J2d Dep § 226.

stone. A rock. A mineral found in rock. Wright v Carrollton Gravel & Sand Co. (Ky) 242 SW2d 751, 26 ALR2d 1449.

stonecutter's disease. A disease of the lungs to which stonecutters are subject, the cause being the lodging of tiny particles of stone in the lungs. Sullivan's Case, 265 Mass 497, 164 NE 457, 62 ALR 1458.

stone quarry. See quarry.

stoning to death. See lapidation.

stool. A seat supported by three or four legs, having no back.
See cucking-stool.

stool pigeon. A person used as a decoy for the purpose of apprehending persons suspected of crime. One who gains the confidence of another for the purpose of spying upon him and becoming an informer against him. A despicable character.

stop. Verb: To come to an end. To halt; to cease movement. To obstruct. To prevent movement. Noun: A place for stopping, as on the line or route of a carrier.

stop box. A box enclosing the valve in a gas line by which service to a house or place of business is controlled. 26 Am J2d Electr § 217.

stop cock. A valve by which the movement of a fluid or gas is stopped or regulated. A valve by which gas service to a house, place of business, or industrial plant is turned on or turned off.

stopgap ordinance. A zoning ordinance enacted in contemplation of the later adoption of a comprehensive zoning ordinance, and intended to preserve the status quo of a particular section of the municipality pending the adoption of the permanent regulations. 58 Am J1st Zon § 137.

stop, look, and listen rule. The rule adopted in some jurisdictions, known sometimes as the Pennsylvania rule, that it is the duty of a traveler approaching a railroad crossing to stop, look both ways and listen to ascertain if a train is approaching. Dunning v Bond (CC Miss) 38 F 813. A rule sometimes imposed upon bus drivers, particularly the drivers of school buses, by bus company or school authority.

stop loss order. See stop order.

stop order. An order by a public service commission which requires a carrier to stop for passengers or freight at a certain point on route or line. A direction given by a customer to his broker to the effect that if a designated stock or commodity owned by the customer touches the price named in the order, the broker shall sell it at the best available price; sometimes known as a "stop loss order," the purpose being to provide a measure of protection of the customer against loss beyond a certain point in a fluctuating market. 12 Am J2d Brok § 129.

See stop payment order.

stopover privilege. A privilege granted under the ticket of a passenger by common carrier whereby he may stop at a point or points intervening the place of departure and the destination specified in the ticket. 13 Am J2d Car § 318.

stoppage. An obstruction or hindrance to the doing of a particular thing. The Cogne (DC Va) 20 F2d 698.

stoppage in transitu. A right which a seller of goods on credit has to recall them or retake them while they are in the possession of a carrier or other middleman who received them for delivery to the buyer, on the discovery of the insolvency of the buyer. 46 Am J1st Sales § 526.

stoppage of work. A cessation of the work and operations in a place of employment.

The phrase, as used in the amended provision of the Unemployment Compensation Act disqualifying an employee for benefits for unemployment due to a stoppage of work existing because of a labor dispute in the establishment in which he is or was last employed, refers to the work and operations of the employer's establishment and not to the work of the individual employee, and does not operate to disqualify employees who participate in a strike which does not result in the stoppage of the employers' work. Lawrence Baking Co. v Unemployment Comp. Com. 308 Mich 198, 13 NW2d 260, 154 ALR 660.

See strike.

stop payment order. An unequivocal notice from the drawer of a check to the drawee that the check is not to be paid by the bank. 10 Am J2d Banks § 641.

stopped. See stop; stopping or standing.

stopping distance. The distance within which a motor vehicle may be brought to a complete stop, such varying with the rate of speed. 8 Am J2d Auto § 987.

For charts of stopping and braking distances, see Am Jur 2d Desk Book, Documents 174-176.

stopping or standing. A vehicle motionless in street or highway, whether or not parked. Modern Indiana Transit, Inc. v Burk, 228 Ind 162, 89 NE2d 905, 17 ALR2d 572.

stopping payment. The closing of a bank upon its insolvency. The act of the drawer of a check in revoking or cancelling the check, before it has been certified, accepted, or paid by the bank upon which it is drawn, by giving an unequivocal direction or instruction to the bank that the check is not to be paid. 10 Am J2d Banks § 641.

See stop payment order.

stopping well. Same as plugging well.

stop sign. A sign upon highway or street requiring a stop by the driver of any vehicle using the street, particularly signs calling for a stop at an intersection with another street or highway. 7 Am J2d Auto § 196. A sign placed along a railroad track calling for the stopping of a train at that point.

stop signal. A signal given by the driver of a vehicle on the highway, by hand, light, or mechanical device, to warn other drivers, particularly one following immediately behind, of his intention to stop. A red traffic light. 78 Am J2d Auto § 195. A signal by a traffic officer or other person to a motorist, calling for a stop. 7 Am J2d Auto §§ 746, 747. A red light, mechanical, or hand signal given to the engineer or other employee of the railroad in charge of the movement of a train that the train is to stop.

storage. See cold storage; dead storage; live storage; warehouse.

storage battery. A battery for generating electric current, especially current for the ignition of an internal combustion engine.

storage lien. A maritime lien for the storage of watercraft. 12 Am J2d Boats §§ 30, 31. A lien for the storage of an automobile. 24 Am J1st Garag §§ 48 et seq.

See warehouseman's lien.

store. Verb: To lay away; to put in storage. Noun: A place where goods are kept on deposit, especially in large quantities—a warehouse; and also, a place where goods are kept for sale in large or small quantities. Pitts v Vicksburg, 72 Miss 181, 184. A place where goods and merchandise are kept and sold.

An establishment for the sale of merchandise is a "store" notwithstanding all sales are confined to residents of the plantation owned by the storekeeper. 33 Am J1st Lic § 47.

See department store; public store; secondhand store.

store account. A book account kept by the keeper of a store for goods sold on credit. Salomon v Pioneer Co-operative Co. 21 Fla 374.

See book account.

stored or kept. Warehoused or deposited for safekeeping. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 921 (involving condition in insurance policy that certain articles shall not be "stored or kept" upon the premises.)

See storing or keeping.

store furniture. See furniture; trade fixtures.

storehouse. A warehouse. A repository for the storage of goods. Steele v State, 80 Neb 9, 113 NW 798.

See entrepot; magazine; warehouse.

stores. The supplies of different articles provided for the subsistence and accommodation of the ship's crew and passengers. United States v Hawley & Letzerich (CC Tex) 160 F 734.

See store.

storing or keeping. Warehousing or depositing for safekeeping.

As used in the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1918, the word is defined as meaning the placing of agricultural or horticultural commodities in storage rooms or other places where the commodities are to be held prior to further preparation or shipment, or the taking care of the commodities while they are being so held. Gordon v Paducah Ice Mfg. Co. (DC Ky) 41 F Supp 980.

See stored or kept.

storm. A manifestation of the operation of natural forces in the fall of rain, hail, or snow, especially when accompanied by wind. A high wind blowing at the rate of from sixty to eighty miles an hour. The Snap (DC Va) 24 F 292.

See cyclone; tornado.

storm sewer. See sewer.

storm waters. Enemy waters,—freshet and flood waters of a river, as distinguished from its ordinary and usual flow. Herminghaus v Southern California Edison Co. 200 Cal 81, 252 P 607.

See flood waters.

story. A habitable space between two floors of a building; a set of rooms on the same floor or level. Biber v O'Brien, 138 Cal App 353, 32 P2d 425. All the rooms on one level of a building; a horizontal section of a building. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1662. A term commonly used in expressing a maximum height restriction in a covenant contained in a deed or land contract. Hobson v Cartwright, 93 Ky 368, 20 SW 281. The relating of an event or series of events, real or imaginary, in words uttered orally or written. A literary work.

As used in a lease describing the demised premises as a "story" or a "floor," such term includes the outside of the walls inclosing such story or floor as a part of the premises demised, for it is the apparent intention in such cases to separate a section of the building as a distinct tenement. The words "story" and "floor" define the lower and upper boundaries of this, but there is nothing to fix the lateral boundaries except the boundaries of the building. 32 Am J1st L & T § 166.

See rumor; upper story.

stowage. The placing of cargo on a ship.

See broken stowage.

stowaway. A person on a ship at sea without status as ship's officer, seaman, or passenger. A person who conceals himself on board a vessel about to leave port in order to obtain a free passage. United States v Sandrey (CC La) 48 F 550, 551.

straddle. Noun: A transaction whereby a person protects himself against either a rise or fall of the price of a stock or commodity by obtaining options to purchase or to sell. A combination of a "put" and a "call," in which one party is either to sell and deliver to the other the commodity or stock at a specified price or to demand it from the other at a specified price, incurring no legal liability if he does neither. Anno: 83 ALR 573. Verb: To drive over the median line of the highway. 8 Am J2d Auto § 952.

straddle year. A fiscal year adopted by a corporation for tax purposes, a part of which comes before a tax rate change and part after such change.

straight annuity. An annuity payable under a contract which provides for the termination of all payments upon the death of the annuitant. 4 Am J2d Annu § 1. An annuity under which the payments to be made by the insurance company terminate upon the death of the annuitant, without refund of any part of principal or interest to a third person. Bartle v Pennsylvania R. Co. 51 Ohio L Abs 161, 78 NE2d 410, mod on other grounds 150 Ohio St 387, 38 Ohio Ops 237, 82 NE2d 853.

straight bill of lading. A nonnegotiable bill of lading; a bill of lading in which it is stated that the goods are consigned or destined to a specified person. 13 Am J2d Car § 265.

straight life. The most common form of life insurance; ordinary life insurance. Life insurance which matures and calls for payment by the insurer only upon the death of the insured, containing no endowment or other feature calling for payment of the proceeds of the insurance prior to that time.

straight line depreciation. A deduction in calculating net income subject to tax, computed by dividing the adjusted basis of the property at the beginning of the year, less the estimated salvage value, by the number of years of estimated useful life remaining at the time. Internal Revenue Code § 167.

straight party ticket. A ballot whereon the candidates voted for are all of one party. A ballot facilitated by a provision for a party square or circle on the ballot whereby, if marked, the entire party ticket is voted without more. 26 Am J2d Elect § 260.

strait jacket. An instrument of discipline or restraint, consisting of a stout tight jacket which binds the arms firmly against the body, used in restraining violent criminals and mentally unbalanced persons.

stramineus. (Latin.) Straw.

stramonium. A narcotic poison the effects of which, taken internally, are intoxication, delirium, loss of sense, drowsiness, a sort of madness and fury; loss of memory, convulsions, spasms, paralysis of the limbs, cold sweats and excessive thirst. Pitts v State, 43 Miss 472, 485.

strand. Shore; that portion of the land lying between ordinary high and low water marks. Stillman v Burfeind, 21 App Div 13, 15, 47 NYS 280, 281.

stranded logs. Logs intended to be floated to a destination on a stream but remaining on the land after washing ashore. 34 Am J1st Logs § 76.

stranded vessel. See stranding.

stranding. A peril of the sea. Lanasa Fruit Steamship & I. Co. v Universal Ins. Co. 302 US 556, 82 L Ed 422, 58 S Ct 371. The striking of a vessel upon a rock, bank, reef, or the like. Strong v Sun Mutual Ins. Co. 31 NY 103. A ship running aground or taking ground, not in the ordinary course of navigation, but by accident, or the force of the wind or sea, and remaining stationary for some time. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1318. Being left in a helpless position; being left without funds in a strange city.

In the law of marine insurance, the term implies a stopping of a vessel's progress and a resting for a longer or a shorter period. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. v Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. (CA2 NY) 6 F2d 736, 43 ALR 215, 218.

See voluntary stranding.

stranger. One who was not a party to a transaction. One not in interest. As a depository of an escrow:—one not a party to the instrument; one so free from any personal or legal identity with the parties to the instrument as to leave him free to discharge his duty as a depository to both parties without involving a breach of duty to either. 28 Am J2d Escr § 12.

As used in a statute making absolutely void the attornment of a tenant to a "stranger," the word has been held to signify a person between whom and the landlord there is no privity, and whose title or right of possession is not derived from the landlord but is hostile to his title. See O'Donnell v McIntyre, 118 NY 156, 164, 23 NE 455.

Within the meaning of an inheritance tax statute, the term has been construed as intended to exhaust the whole category of persons who might be called to the inheritance, whether by will or ab intestato; so construed, the term applies to all who have not the status of legitimate ascendants, descendants, or collateral relations, and thus includes a widow. Baker's Succession, 129 La 74, 55 So 714.

stranger to judgment. One neither a party to the action nor in privity with a party. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 393.

stranger to the blood. One not related by blood. A relative by affinity, not by blood, such as wife, daughter-in-law, or son-in-law. Campbell v California, 200 US 87, 50 L Ed 382, 26 S Ct 182.

strangulation. Causing death by cutting off the breath, as by squeezing the throat with hands or a cord. 26 Am J1st Homi § 436.

strappado. A form of punishment or torture inflicted by raising the victim with a rope and then letting him drop with an ensuing painful jerk.

straw. The product left from a cutting of mature wheat, oats, barley, etc. after the grain has been removed therefrom by threshing.

straw bail. See straw bond.

strawberries. A vine crop. 21 Am J2d Crops § 4.

straw bond. A bail bond with sureties who are financially irresponsible. A bail bond in which the surety or sureties are fictitious persons. People v Bogart (NY) 3 Park Crim 143, 172.

straw man. A dummy. An irresponsible bondsman or surety. One made to appear as the owner of record who in fact holds title for another.

straying animal. See estray.

stream. A river, brook, or rivulet, anything in fact that is liquid and flows in a line or course. French v Carhart, 1 NY 96, 107. A steady current in a river or in the sea, especially the middle or most rapid part of a current or tide; as the gulf stream. A continued course or current.

The distinction between a stream and a pond or lake is that in one case the water has a natural motion or current, while in the other the water in its natural state is substantially at rest. The fact that there may be some current in a body of water is not alone sufficient to make it a stream, nor will the swelling out of a stream into broad water sheets make it a lake. Illinois Cent. Railroad Co. v Chicago, 173 Ill 471, 50 NE 1004.

See bed of stream; channel; thread of stream.

streamline. A shape or design calculated to decrease wind resistance, particularly in reference to aircraft, motor vehicles, railroad cars, and watercraft.

Streamline in the planning of bodies of airplanes, boats, automobiles, and railroad cars, is a design which will result in uninterrupted flow of the air or water about the body, instead of an eddying or turbulent motion. A streamlined body offers the least possible resistance to the fluid, and permits the current which it breaks simply to reunite in its wake, without the retarding or dragging eddies and turbulence created by partial vacuum in the wake of a non-streamlined body. The streamline design is typically a long ellipse, tapering to a point; it is illustrated in the cross-section of an airplane wing, and in a bird's and a fish's body. Forman v American Express Co. (DC NY) 37 F Supp 82.

street. A highway or public thoroughfare in an urban community, such as a city, town, or village. 25 Am J1st High § 7. A kind of highway, the public having the right to use it for purposes of travel. Chicago Motor Coach Co. v Chicago, 337 Ill 200, 169 NE 22, 66 ALR 834; Graff v Casper, 73 Wyo 486, 281 P2d 685, 52 ALR2d 254.

While the term does not include the mere private way, it does include all the public roads or ways within the municipality over which it has jurisdiction and as to which it owes the public the duty of exercising reasonable care to keep them and maintain them in reasonably safe condition for public use. Indian Rocks Beach South Shore, Inc. v Ewell (Fla) 59 So 2d 647, 32 ALR2d 940.

The term is not applicable to rural highways. Some authorities take the view that the term is generic, embracing all urban ways which can be, and are generally, used for ordinary purposes of travel. Others limit the application of the term to thoroughfares in the built-up portions of the urban territory. 25 Am J1st High § 7.

There are cases pro and con on the question whether a statutory regulation of "highway" traffic is applicable to traffic upon a "street." 7 Am J2d Auto § 170.

The word means more than the surface; it means the whole surface and as much of the depth as is, or can be, used, not unfairly, for the ordinary purpose of a street. It comprises a depth which authorizes the urban authority to do that which is done in every street, namely, to raise the street, and lay down sewers, and also to lay down gas and water pipes. Cornwall v Garrison, 59 Idaho 287, 81 P2d 1094.

A street may include a dock or a part of a dock; as where a private dock is built on a public street on the shore of navigable waters, the dock becomes a part of the street, and the public has a right to travel over it. Pan-Pacific Constr. Co. v Meadows, 85 Cal App 775, 260 P 355.

"Lot" and "street" are two separate and distinct terms, and have separate and distinct meanings. The term "lots" in its common and ordinary meaning, includes that portion of the platted territory measured and set apart for individual and private use and occupancy, while the term "streets" means that portion set apart and designated for the use of the public. Earl v Dutour, 181 Cal 58, 183 P 438, 6 ALR 1163, 1164.

streetcar. A large coach or car for the transportation of passengers, propelled over fixed tracks to which the wheels are adapted. Montgomery v Santa Ana Westminster R. Co. 104 Cal 186, 37 P 786. A vehicle for some purposes. Foster v Curtis, 213 Mass 79, 99 NE 961.

streetcar track. That part of the right of way or street on which the rails and ties are laid; the ties, spikes, rails, and switches. Detroit Citizens Street R. Co. v Detroit, 125 Mich 673, 85 NW 96, 86 NW 809.

street crossing. See crossing.

street fair. A fair conducted on the streets of a municipality, such usually being considered an improper use of the streets. 25 Am J1st High § 196.

street grade. See grade; grade line.

street improvement. A public improvement.

See front foot plan; fronting and abutting; special assessment.

street intersection. See intersection.

street number. The number given a street by way of designating it, such as 20th Street Parkersburg, West Virginia. 25 Am J1st High § 614. The number of a house on a particular street, constituting a part of an address. A listing of names of voters of a precinct or election district by street, address, party affiliation not appearing.

street perils. Perils peculiar to the use of a street or other public way. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 226.

street railroad. Same as street railway.

street railway. A railroad upon tracks laid on and along the streets of a municipality, primarily for the accommodation of passengers going from one point to another in such municipality or to and from the suburbs. Highland Ave. & Belt R. Co. 119 Ala 105, 24 So 114. A common carrier whether of goods or passengers. 13 Am J2d Car § 12. Operated ordinarily for the transportation of passengers only. Not a railroad in the ordinary sense. 44 Am J1st RR § 6.

Within the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act a street railway is considered a railroad. The word railroad when considered in its generic sense includes street railways; that is to say, that where there is nothing to indicate that the word is used in a restricted sense the same should be given its broad meaning. Columbia R. Gas & E. Co. v State (CA4 SC) 27 F2d 52, 59 ALR 665.

See streetcar; streetcar track.

street risks. See street perils.

streetwalker. A prostitute who solicits patronage on the streets. 42 Am J1st Prost § 2.

streetwalking. The offense committed by a prostitute in soliciting patronage on the street. The offense of a common prostitute offering herself for sale on the streets at unusual or unreasonable hours, endeavoring to induce men to follow her for the purpose of prostitution. Pinkerton v Verberg, 78 Mich 573, 44 NW 579.

strict construction. A narrow or literal construction. A narrow construction of a contract, especially a literal or technical construction of an isolated or special clause which defeats the true meaning of the contract as such is apparent from all its provisions. Sindlinger v Department of Financial Institutions, 210 Ind 83, 199 NE 715, 105 ALR 501. A narrow construction of a statute, confining its operation to matters affirmatively, definitely, irresistibly, or specifically pointed out by its terms, and to cases which fall fairly within its letter, or the clear, plain, obvious, or natural import of the language used. 50 Am J1st Stat § 388.

strict foreclosure. The foreclosure of a mortgage without a sale of the mortgaged property, being accomplished by a suit in equity and a decree rendered therein extinguishing the mortgagor's equity of redemption, such decree calling for payment of the debt secured within a reasonable period of time fixed by the court and further providing that upon failure of the defendant or defendants to make such payment within the time prescribed, all the right, title, and interest, both legal and equitable, of the defendant or defendants shall be vested absolutely and forever unconditionally in the plaintiff. 37 Am J1st Mtg § 529.

In England and in some jurisdictions in this country, the rights of the vendor of land where the contract is executory may be enforced by a decree in the nature of a strict foreclosure. Such a decree has sometimes been called a decree for cancellation of the contract; time is given and, if it expires without the money being paid, the contract is canceled by the decree or judgment of the court, and the vendor again becomes the owner of the estate. 55 Am J1st V & P § 455.

stricti juris. Of strict right; of strict law; of strictly legal interpretation without aid from principles of equity. See 2 Bl Comm 108.

strictissimi juris. Of strictest right.

strict liability. Same as absolute liability.

strictly accountable. Absolutely liable without deduction.

strictly confidential. Not to be divulged.

The generally accepted elements of a strictly confidential relationship, position or office are enumerated as secrecy, integrity, trust, confidence, skill, and competence in the performance of the duties imposed upon the appointing officer and by him delegated to the one holding such relationship. Klatt v Akers, 232 Iowa 1312, 5 NW2d 605, 146 ALR 808.

strictly construed. See strict construction.

strictly ministerial. A characterization of a duty which is specific, imperative, and ministerial, without scope for exercise of discretion. 34 Am J1st Mand § 66.

stricto jure. See in stricto jure.

strict performance. A literal performance of the stipulations of a contract. 17 Am J2d Contr § 370.

strict priority. The principle, first enunciated in equity receivership cases, carried over to railroad reorganization cases under § 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, reaffirmed and re-enunciated in corporate reorganization cases under Ch X of the Bankruptcy Act, that in order to win the approval of the court as fair and equitable, a plan of reorganization must preserve for the holders of the several interests the advantage of their respective priorities, except as otherwise provided in the Bankruptcy Act. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 1586. A rule which gives creditors secured or unsecured the right to exclude stockholders entirely from the reorganization plan when the debtor is insolvent. Helvering v Alabama Asphaltic Limestone Co. 314 US 598, 86 L Ed 504, 62 S Ct 540.

strict record. The record proper in an action, consisting of the pleadings, the process, the verdict, and the judgment.

Where a question of law is raised upon the strict record, no exception is necessary to place such question before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Montgomery v Erie Railroad Co. (CA3 NJ) 97 F2d 289.

strict settlement. The entailing of an estate.

See entail.

strife. Altercation. Conflict; a quarrel.

Strife and contention do not necessarily imply blows. They may be evidenced by passionate words, looks and gestures. State v Warner, 34 Conn 276, 279.

strike. Verb: To eliminate; to expunge. To administer a blow. To act in concert with other employees in refusing to work. Noun: A discovery of valuable ore. Coming upon oil in quantity in drilling. A simultaneous cessation or quitting of work by a body of workmen acting in combination for the purpose of coercing their employer to accede to some demand they have made upon him which he has refused. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 369. A cessation of work by employees in an effort to obtain for themselves more desirable terms of employment or a general concerted refusal by workmen to work in consequence of an alleged grievance. Anno: 11 ALR 1006, s. 35 ALR 722. A cessation of work by all or part of the employees acting in concert. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 1371 (definition found in insurance policy). A cessation of work by employees in an effort to get for themselves more desirable terms. Anno: 28 ALR2d 298 (for purposes of Unemployment Compensation Act).

See general strike; legal strike; lockout; picketing.

strike benefits. Payments by a labor union to members on strike. strike breaker.

See scab; strike breaking.

strike breaking. Overcoming a strike or the effect of a strike. Entering employment in an industrial plant wherein a strike is in progress. Taking the place of a striking employee.

strike clause. A provision frequently inserted in executory contracts for the sale of goods whereby the seller is to be excused in case his performance of the contracts is prevented by strikes. 46 Am J1st Sales § 238.

strike fund. A fund of a labor union accumulated and held for the purpose of paying members of the union on strike.

strike insurance. See labor dispute insurance.

strike misconduct. Misconduct arising out of, developed by, or closely connected with, a strike by employees in a labor dispute. NLRB v Industrial Cotton Mills (CA4) 208 F2d 87, 45 ALR2d 880.

strike off. See strike out; struck off.

strike out. To expunge, by ruling of the court from a record or pleading, immaterial, scandalous or superfluous matter. In terminology adopted from baseball, the failure to succeed in a particular endeavor.

strike suit. A derivative action instituted by a minority of stockholders for the purpose of oppressing the majority and involving the corporation itself in disaster for selfish purposes and for reasons not always revealed. 19 Am J2d Corp § 560.

striking a docket. An English expression for the entry of the petition, bond and affidavit of a petitioning creditor in an involuntary proceeding for an adjudication in bankruptcy.

striking counterclaim. The expunging of a counterclaim upon motion. 20 Am J2d Countcl § 147.

striking distance. The position of one's assailant at such point that it is lawful to use force to repel the attack, the assailant being close enough to one as to lead one to believe that physical injury will be inflicted upon him by the assailant unless the latter is subjected to force. 6 Am J2d Asslt & B § 71.

striking employee. The status of an employee participating in a strike. Tedesco v Turner & Seymour Mfg. Co. 19 Conn Supp 192, 110 A2d 650.

striking evidence. A remedy to exclude improper evidence from the consideration of the jury, as where a witness has answered a question before time to interpose an objection or after an objection has been sustained, or evidence admitted upon assurance of counsel that its relevancy will appear, where such relevancy never appears. 53 Am J1st Trial § 149. Eliminating from the record a nonresponsive or objectionable answer by a witness. 58 Am J1st Witn § 575.

striking pleading. A remedy against immaterial, irrelevant, redundant, scandalous and impertinent matter in a pleading. 41 Am J1st Pl §§ 349 et seq. A remedy against a pleading considered as a whole, as where the pleading is sham or frivolous or is clearly and irremediably defective and states no cause of action or defense. 41 Am J1st Pl §§ 346-348.

stringer. A crack or crevice appearing in rock which is filled with a mineral deposit, by means of which a prospector is led to a body of ore of commercial value. McShane v Kenkle, 18 Mont 208, 44 P 979.

strip. To remove clothing. To become nude. To take away parts from an automobile or machine for use in other vehicle or machine. To clear ground of vegetation. To farm land to exhaustion, depriving it of fertility.

strip mining. A method of mining coal by uncovering the vein instead of reaching it by shaft and laterals.

stripper. A term of show business for a girl who removes her apparel or the most of it during her routine.

stripper well. An oil well which produces less than ten barrels of crude oil per day. St. John v Brown (DC Tex) 38 F Supp 385.

stroke. A sudden onset of disease, especially apoplexy or paralysis. 1 Am J2d Act of God § 10.

See heat stroke.

strong-arm clause. The provision of the Bankruptcy Act that the trustee in bankruptcy, as to all property, whether or not coming into possession or control of the court upon which a creditor of the bankrupt could have obtained a lien by legal or equitable proceedings at the date of bankruptcy, shall be deemed vested as of such date with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor than holding a lien thereon by such proceeding, whether or not such a creditor actually exists. Bankruptcy Act § 70(c); 11 USC § 110(c); 9 Am J2d Bankr § 857.

strong arm of equity. Injunctive relief. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 3.

strong beer. Ordinary American beer, as made from malt and hops.

This term, though practically obsolete as recently as 1906, was once in familiar use as the name of beer made of malt and hops, and so called to distinguish it from "small beer," which was compounded of molasses and yeast with the addition of either ginger or spruce, and which contained a very small percentage of alcohol. Strong beer was rich in the intoxicating principle, analysis showing eight per cent alcohol. The courts had no difficulty in determining that it was an intoxicating liquor. Potts v State, 50 Tex Crim 368, 97 SW 477.

strong hand. See with strong hand.

struck down. See knocked down; struck off.

struck jury. A jury chosen from a panel drawn for a particular case, not from the regular panel, sometimes called a special jury. A jury drawn by the exercise of strikes, each party being entitled to strike a certain number of names of persons appearing as qualified jurors on a special venire drawn and summoned for the case. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 90. A jury selected by an officer authorized by law, as a jury commissioner, instead of being drawn from the wheel, as in the case of common jurors. State v Withrow, 133 Mo 500, 513.

struck off. The acceptance of a bid and the completion of a sale of an article at auction. 7 Am J2d Auct § 31.

In the language of the auction room, and in common parlance, property is said to be "struck off" or "knocked down," when the auctioneer, by the fall of his hammer, or by any other audible or visible announcement, signifies to the bidder that he is entitled to the property on paying the amount of his bid, according to the terms of the sale. Sherwood v Reade (NY) 7 Hill 431, 439.

structural alteration. Such an alteration of a building as changes the physical structure so materially as to create a different building. Kinston Cotton Mills v Liability Assur. Corp. 161 NC 562, 77 SE 682.

structural defect. A condition in the structure itself which renders it not reasonably safe for the use for which it was intended. Krooner v Waterbury, 105 Conn 476, 479, 136 A 93, 94.

structure. In the broad sense, any construction or piece of work composed of parts joined together in some definite manner; in a restricted sense, a building of any kind, particularly one of size. 20 Am J2d Cov § 194. Any form or arrangement of building or construction materials involving the necessity or precaution of providing proper support, bracing, tying, anchoring, or other protection against the pressure of the elements. St. Louis Park v Casey, 218 Minn 394, 16 NW2d 459, 155 ALR 1128 (as defined in a zoning ordinance). An edifice for any use; that which is built, as a dwelling house, church, shed, store, etc. Favro v State, 39 Tex Crim 452, 46 SW 932.

While a building is always a structure, all structures are not buildings. Katsoff v Lucertini, 141 Conn 74, 108 A2d 812.

strumpet. A prostitute; a female given to indiscriminate lewdness.

strychnine. An alkaloid. A poison. Riley v Interstate Businessmen's Acci. Asso. 184 Iowa 1124, 169 NW 448, 2 ALR 57.

stub. A part of an instrument, especially the statement of an account, torn off and retained as a memorandum.

stub line. A small branch line of railroad. Arizona Eastern Railroad Co. v State, 29 Ariz 446, 242 P 870.

[1226]

stub of check. That part of the sheet which remains in a checkbook after a check has been written and pulled from the book, such part normally being used to indicate the state of the bank account by adding deposits and subtracting the amount of the checks written. Screenland Magazine v National City Bank, 181 Misc 454, 42 NYS2d 286.

stud. A male horse, uncastrated, and kept for breeding purposes.

See studding.

stud book. A book kept by the owner of a stallion in which is entered the mares bred, with date of the service. A register of thoroughbred horses.

When a horse entered in the English Stud Book is exported, it is customary to send with it a document called an export certificate, issued by the keepers of the stud book, by means of which a foreign purchaser is enabled to register the horse in the stud book of his country. Halbronn v International Horse Agency & Exchange, High Court of Justice (Eng) [1903] 1 KB 270.

studding. A two-by-four or two-by-six piece of lumber, placed upright in a building, upon which the boards making up the sides of the building are nailed and to which the laths of the inside walls are attached.

studendum et orandum. See ad studendum et orandum.

student. A person in attendance at a college or university. One receiving instruction in a public or private school.

student driver. A person receiving instruction in the driving of an automobile, usually by letting him operate the vehicle under the direction of a person accompanying him.

student pilot. A person receiving instruction in the flying of aircraft.

students' union. An organization of the entire body of students at a college or university; a building maintained by such an organization for student activities.

stud horse. See stud.

stud poker. A variety of the game of poker, characterized by the fact that some of the cards in the hands are dealt face up.

study expense. A preliminary expense of a local improvement project, sometimes incurred without being followed by the construction of the improvement tentatively contemplated. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 53.

stuff gown. The gown worn by a barrister who has not attained the rank of queen's counsel.

stuffing ballot box. Illegal voting by inserting in the ballot box ballots marked by other than qualified and legal voters. Ex parte Siebold, 100 US 371, 25 L Ed 717, 720.

stultify. To plead one's own insanity or other want of capacity, in his own suit to set aside his own deed or other contract, or in an action against him to enforce the contract.

The ancient rule that a man shall not stultify himself is no longer law either in England or in the United States. See 2 Kent Comm 451.

stumpage. The sum by agreement to be paid an owner for trees standing (or lying) upon his land, the party purchasing being permitted to enter upon the land and to cut and remove them. The price paid for a license to cut.

Stumpage on lumber is somewhat of the nature of a percentage paid on copyright, or of a royalty for the use of a patent, or a duty paid on mineral productions. Blood v Drummond, 67 Me 476, 478.

stump measurement. The measurement of the trunk of a tree at the point where it would normally be cut for commercial purposes. Anno: 39 ALR 1316.

stuprum. The debauching or rape of a previously chaste woman.

sturgeon. See fish royal.

style of cause. The caption and heading of process and pleading.

style of firm. See firm name and style.

style of writ or process. The designation of the person or government from whom the command on the face of the writ appears to emanate; thus "The People of the State of Michigan to the Sheriff of the County of Wayne, Greeting." 42 Am J1st Proc § 9.

suability. See suable; sue.

suable. Being subject to suit, that is capable of being sued. Liable to be sued.

" 'Suable' and 'suability' are words not in common use, but they concisely, correctly convey the idea annexed to them." Chisholm v Georgia (US) 2 Dall 419, 470, 1 L Ed 440, 462.

suable cause. A cause of action; a matured cause of action.

suapte natura. In its own nature.

sua sponte. Upon his own responsibility; of his own motion.

See own motion.

sub. A prefix meaning under; subordinate to. A contraction of submarine.

subagent. A person employed by an agent to assist him in conducting the affairs of the principal. 3 Am J2d Agency § 7. The agent of an agent.

If his appointment is expressly or impliedly authorized, he becomes the agent of the principal. 3 Am J2d Agency § 149.

subagency. See subagent.

subbailment. A bailment by a bailee to a third person. A delegation by a bailee to a third person to whom he delivers the property involved in his undertaking.

Of course, the bailee cannot relieve himself of responsibility by subbailment, without the consent of or authorization, express or implied, by the original bailor. 8 Am J2d Bailm § 190.

sub bois. Underwood; underbrush.

sub colore juris. Under color of right.

sub colore officii. Under color of office.

sub conditione. On condition.

One of the three phrases by which, without more, a conditional estate may be created. It is the first one named by Littleton, and Coke says of it: "This is the most express and proper condition in deed, and therefore our author beginneth with it." Clapp v Wilder, 176 Mass 332, 57 NE 692.

subcontract. An undertaking employed chiefly in the building and construction field whereby one, who has assumed the status of a principal contractor by entering into a contract with an owner of premises or public body for the construction of a building or improvement for such owner or public body, enters into a contract with a third person, called a subcontractor, whereunder the latter undertakes to perform some part of the work which the principal contractor has agreed to perform under his contract with the owner or public body or to furnish and supply materials needed in the performance of such contract. Anno: 112 ALR 824; 36 Am J1st Mech L§50.

subcontractor. A person who takes a portion of a contract from the principal contractor. Fox v Dunning, 129 Okla 228, 255 P 582. One who agrees under contract with a principal or original contractor to construct for him some part of the structure which the principal contractor has engaged to construct under his contract with an owner of premises or public body, or to furnish and supply materials needed for the performance of such contract. Anno: 112 ALR 824. A person whose relation to the principal contractor is substantially the same as to a part of the work as the latter's relation to the owner. 36 Am J1st Mech L § 51.

It is generally held that a person performing individual labor on a structure for the contractor is not a subcontractor. But it has been held that a laborer is in a sense a subcontractor, and he may fall within the statutory definition. 36 Am J1st Mech L § 51.

sub cura mariti. Under the care of the husband.

sub curia. Under the court; under the law.

sub disjunctione. In the disjunctive.

subdivide. To divide a tract of land into lots before developing or improving the tract. Gill v Saunders, 182 Ark 453, 31 SW2d 748.

subdivision. A land development; an area divided into building lots.

See political subdivision; subdivide.

subdivision bond. A bond issued by a township, county, or other political subdivision.

subfeudation. Same as subinfeudation.

subflow. See underground stream.

subfluvial. Beneath a river or stream.

subhastian. A sale subhastio.

See subhastio.

subhastio. At the foot of the spear.

In ancient Rome, military spoils were disposed of at the foot of the spear-subhastio-by auction, or increase. Balesh v Hot Springs, 173 Ark 661, 293 SW 14.

subinfeudation. The feudal system of land tenure according to which tenants under the king, who was styled the "lord paramount," rented out portions of their lands to persons inferior to them, becoming lords with respect to these inferior persons, new feudal relations being created with each grant. De Peyster v Michael, 6 NY 467. The carving out of small estates to tenants by inferior lords, to be held of themselves.

This practice under the feudal system grew until the superior lords observed that they were losing all their feudal profit of wardship, marriage, and escheat and it was first checked by Magna Charta, and later abrogated by the Statute of Quia Emptores. See 2 Bl Comm 91.

subirrigation. Irrigation by conducting water underground in porous pipes.

subjacent support. A right of an adjoining landowner. The support of the surface by the underlying strata of the earth, or the support of the upper floors of a building by the part below.

The surface, in this connection, means not merely the geometrical superficies without a thickness, but includes all above the subjacent stratum in question and therefore includes a higher stratum as well as the actual surface of the soil, and the owner of the higher stratum is entitled to the same rights as the actual surface owner. It has been held, however, that the word "surface," when used in this connection in a deed without a qualifying phrase, signifies only the superficial part of the land, and therefore one having such grant is entitled to subjacent support of the superficial part of his land only. 1 Am J2d Adj L § 77.

subject. A citizen. An inhabitant. A person domiciled in a country and enjoying the protection afforded by it under sovereign power. The Pizarro (US) 2 Wheat 227, 245, 4 L Ed 226, 231.

See subject to.

subjecting property to debts. See execution sale; judicial sale; levy.

subjecting to debts in inverse order of alienation. See inverse order of alienation.

subjective examination. A medical examination in which the physician obtains the information necessary to form a conclusion as to the condition of the patient from the facts as related to him by the patient. Reeder v Thompson, 120 Kan 722, 245 P 127.

subjective impossibility of performance. Impossibility of performance personal to the promisor, not inhering in the nature of the act to be performed. 17 Am J2d Contr § 415.

subjective standard of satisfaction. A matter of taste, fancy, or sensibility determining satisfaction with performance of a contract. Gerish v Herold, 82 NJL 605, 83 A 892.

subjective symptoms. Those symptoms which a physician learns from the expressions of the patient. Reeder v Thompson, 120 Kan 722, 245 P 127.

subjective test. See subjective standard of satisfaction.

subject matter of act. Same as subject matter of statute.

subject matter of action. See jurisdiction of the subject matter; subject of the action.

subject matter of contract. Property or services of a wide range, the reported cases indicating that almost every conceivable form of property or services has been involved. 17 Am J2d Contr § 14.

subject matter of statute. In general, the same as subject of statute.

If there is any difference between "subject of statute" and "subject matter of statute," it is in respect to the offices which they respectively perform, the word "subject" indicating the chief thing to which the statute relates, and "matter" the things which are secondary, subordinate, or incidental. 50 Am J1st Stat § 191.

subject of act. Same as subject of statute.

subject of bankruptcy. The subject of the relations between an insolvent, nonpaying, or fraudulent debtor and his creditors, extending to his and their relief. Wright v Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. 304 US 502, 82 L Ed 1490, 58 S Ct 1025, reh den 305 US 581, 80 L Ed 411, 56 S Ct 92.

subject of statute. The matter or thing forming the groundwork of the statute, the chief thing or matter to which it relates and with which it deals. The matter to which the statute in question relates and with which it deals, as distinguished from its object which is the aim or purpose of the enactment. 50 Am J1st Stat § 191.

As the word is employed in a constitutional provision requiring the subject of a statute to be expressed in its title, the word is used in a broad and extended sense, and is the thing forming the generic head of the matter submitted. It may include numerous minor subjects relating, germane to, and having a mutual connection with, the subject proper. See Kemp v State, 35 Okla Crim 128, 248 P 1116.

It is a very indefinite expression. A phrase may state the subject in a very general or indefinite manner, or with minute particularity. It is impossible to prescribe any standard of particularity for the legislature and the matter is left to legislative discretion. State ex rel. Bragg v Rogers, 107 Ala 444, 19 So 909.

See single subject.

subject of the action. The primary right of the plaintiff and a wrong in violation of such right, whereby a remedial right arises in his favor. Studebaker Corp. v Hanson, 24 Wyo 222, 157 P 582, 160 P 336. Not something relating to the thing itself about which the controversy has arisen, but rather the origin and ground of the plaintiff's right to recover or obtain the relief asked. Collier v Ervin, 3 Mont 142. Either the property which is sought to be recovered or alleged to be injured, or a substantive right which has been violated, to enforce or maintain which the action is brought. 20 Am J2d Council § 70.

subject to. Words of qualification. Consolidated Coal Co. v Peers, 166 Ill 361, 46 NE 1105. Words of qualification of the estate granted by a deed. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 217. Words of condition; sufficient to destroy the negotiability of the instrument where serving to subject the instrument to the terms of another agreement. 11 Am J2d B & N § 143. A phrase which, appearing in a contract, usually indicates that a promise is not to be performed except upon a condition or the happening of a stated event. Jones v Palace Realty Co. 226 NC 303, 37 SE2d 906. A phrase insufficient in itself to constitute the assumption of a mortgage. Anno: 101 ALR 284; 37 Am J1st Mtg § 998.

A provision in the assignment of a lease that it is "subject to" the agreements of the lessee contained in the lease does not constitute a contract obligating the assignee unqualifiedly to perform the duties imposed upon the lessee, so as to render him liable to reimburse the lessee, on account of rents which the lessee was compelled to pay and which accrued after the assignee resigned the term, as the words "subject to" are words of qualification and not words of contract. 32 Am J1st L & T § 350.

The words "subject to the terms of said lease" do not impose contractual liability on an assignee to a lessor to carry out the covenants of the lease. Coles Trading Co. v Spiegel (CA9 Ariz) 187 F2d 984, 24 ALR2d 702.

subject to final payment. A familiar condition in the banking business.

Where checks received by a bank from a depositor are credited to his account "subject to final payment," which provision is sometimes printed in the depositors' pass books as applying to out-of-town checks, the meaning of the provision is that if such a check is not paid upon its presentation to the drawee bank, the amount of it will be charged back to the depositor's account. See Douglas v Federal Reserve Bank, 271 US 489, 493, 70 L Ed 1051, 1053, 46 S Ct 554.

subject to restriction. A clause in a deed having reference to restrictions set forth in some other deed or instrument. 20 Am J2d Cov § 169.

subject to terms of. See subject to.

subject to the jurisdiction thereof. A phrase made familiar by inclusion in the Fourteenth Amendment.

As these words are used in the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, providing for the citizenship of all persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, the purpose would appear to have been to exclude by the fewest words (besides children of members of the Indian tribes, standing in a peculiar relation to the National Government, unknown to the common law), the two classes of cases, children born of alien enemies, in hostile occupation, and children of diplomatic representatives of a foreign state,-both of which, by the law of England and by our own law, from the time of the first settlement of the English colonies in America, had been recognized exceptions to the fundamental rule of citizenship by birth within the country. United States v Wong Kim Ark, 169 US 649, 682, 42 L Ed 890, 902, 18 S Ct 456.

sub judice. Before the court for its consideration and determination.

sub jugum matrimonii. Under the yoke of matrimony; the state of being married. Macfarland v Heim, 127 Mo 18.

Sublata causa tollitur effectus. By removing the cause, the effect is removed.

Sublata veneratione magistratum, respublica ruit. The state is ruined by the loss of respect for magistrates.

Sublato fundamento, cadit opus. With the removal of the foundation, the structure falls.

Sublato principali, tollitur adjunctum. By the removal of the principal thing, the adjunct is removed.

sublease. A grant by a lessee of an interest in the demised premises, or a part thereof, less than his own, a reversion remaining in him. 32 Am J1st L & T § 392.

Where the sublease is for the whole term, it is, in law, an assignment, as between the original lessor and the sublessee, but may be given effect as a contract, as between the sublessor and sublessee. Davidson v Minnesota Loan & Trust Co. 158 Minn 411, 197 NW 833, 32 ALR 1418.

See underlease.

sublessee. A tenant who holds under a lease made by a sublessor.

See sublease.

sublessor. A lessee who has made a sublease. See sublease.

subletting. Making a sublease. 32 Am J1st L & T § 393.

See sublease.

sublimation. Refining or purifying. The elimination of unwanted matter from alcoholic beverages. Commonwealth v Giltinan, 64 Pa 100, 105.

submarine. A vessel which can operate both on the sea and when submerged therein. A vessel for the purpose of admiralty jurisdiction. United States v Woodbury (CAI Mass) 175 F2d 854.

submerged fen. A swamp or marsh covered with water for the time. Webber v Pere Marquette Boom Co. 62 Mich 626, 635.

submerged lands. Lands, particularly privately owned lands, covered by waters. Lands, once lying above water, since submerged. Mulry v Norton, 100 NE 426, 3 NE 581.

See lands beneath navigable waters.

Submerged Lands Act. A federal statute dealing with rights, titles, and interests in lands beneath navigable waters within state boundaries and Outer Continental Shelf Lands. 43 USC §§ 1301 et seq.

submergence. The disappearance of land under water and the formation of a navigable body of water over it, so that the submerged land is lost to the owner, except and until it be restored to him by reliction. Mulry v Norton, 100 NY 426, 3 NE 581.

See subsidence.

submission. A surrender or yielding, as to an arrest or a command. Referring a matter to another for consideration and decision, e.g., the act of the court in instructing the jury and sending them out to return a verdict.

See final submission.

submission agreement. See agreement for submission.

submission of controversy. The equivalent in some American jurisdictions of "agreed case." New York Tel. Co. v Siegel-Cooper Co. 202 NY 502, 96 NE 109.

submission to arbitration. Resort to arbitration for the settlement of a controversy.

See agreement for submission; arbitration.

submission to nonsuit. The act of the plaintiff in taking a voluntary nonsuit. Hartquist v Tamiami Trail Tours, 139 Fla 328, 190 So 533, 79 ALR 688.

submit. To be submissive. To make a submission.

See submissive.

sub modo. Subject to a modification or qualification; after a fashion; in some manner. See 2 Bl Comm 291.

subnormal intelligence. See subnormal mentality.

subnormal mentality. Weakness of intellect; deficiency in mental function. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 28. A possible defense to a criminal charge. State v Roy, 40 NM 397, 60 P2d 646, 110 ALR 1.

subordinate body. A local lodge or benefit society which owes allegiance to a state or national organization of the lodge or society. 36 Am J2d Frat O § 35.

subordinate fact. See subsidiary fact.

suborn. To engage in subornation.

See subornation.

subornation. The crime of procuring another person to commit a crime. The procurement of the commission of an unlawful act.

subornation of perjury. The crime of procuring another to commit perjury by inciting, instigating, or persuading. 41 Am J1st Perj § 74. In a proper sense, the equivalent of perjury itself. United States v Silverman (CA3 Pa) 106 F2d 750.

suborner. One who suborns.

See subornation.

subpartnership. A so-called partnership formed between a member of a partnership and a third person for a division of the profits coming to him from the partnership enterprise, by an agreement of such a character as to disclose the essentials necessary to a partnership between the partner and the third person.

Such third person does not become a member of the first partnership nor is he liable for its debts. 40 Am J1st Partn § 14.

subpoena. The ordinary process by which the attendance of a witness in court is compelled, being issued by the clerk of court. 58 Am J1st Witn § 13. A writ or process in equity, equivalent to a summons in an action at law, through which a party is subjected to the jurisdiction of the court. Commercial Bank of Rodney v State, 12 Miss (4 Smedes & M) 439, 515.

subpoena ad testificandum. A writ to bring a witness into court to testify; a subpoena for a witness. See 3 Bl Comm 369.

subpoena duces tecum. An ancient writ, having for its object the production of evidence to be used, so far as admissible, in a trial. In the modern sense, a subpoena which, in addition to the usual clauses requiring the attendance of the witness in court to testify, contains clauses directing him to produce at the same time for use as evidence in the litigation certain described books, papers, records, and documents. 58 Am J1st Witn §§ 20 et seq. A subpoena ordering the witness to bring with him the books, documents, or other evidence described in the subpoena. Langenberg v Decker, 131 Ind 471, 31 NE 190.

subpoena ticket. A ticket issued by a prosecuting attorney under which in some jurisdictions a witness is summoned to court to give his testimony in a criminal prosecution.

sub potestate. Under the protection.

sub potestate parentis. Under the protection of a parent. See 1 Bl Comm 465.

sub potestate viri. Under the control of her husband.

Generally, at common law a woman can do no act to bind herself; she is said to be sub potestate viri, and subject to his will and control. Her acts are not voidable, but are void ab initio. Elliot v The Lessee of Peirsol (US) 1 Pet 328, 339, 7 L Ed 164, 169.

subreption. The fraudulent securing of escheated property by concealment of the truth.

subrogation. The substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim or right against a third person. The principle that when one person has been compelled to pay a debt which ought to have been paid by another, he becomes entitled to exercise all the remedies which the creditor possessed against that other person. 50 Am J1st Subro § 2. Sometimes referred to as the doctrine of substitution.

It is a device adopted or invented by equity to compel the ultimate discharge of a debt or obligation by him who in good conscience ought to pay it. It is the machinery by which the equity of one man is worked out through the legal rights of another. 50 Am J1st Subro §§ 2 et seq.

This is a substitution of another person in place of the creditor to whose rights he succeeds in relation to the debt, and gives to the substitute all the rights, priorities, remedies, liens, and securities of the person for whom he is substituted. The principle of subrogation is broad enough to cover every instance in which one person is required to pay a debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which in equity and good conscience ought to be discharged by the latter. United States Fidelity & G. Co. v Bramwell, 108 Or 261, 217 P 332, 32 ALR 829.

See conventional subrogation; legal subrogation.

subrogation by contract. See conventional subrogation.

subrogation of cotenant. The principle that a cotenant who has paid off or satisfied a debt secured by a mortgage or lien on the common property is entitled to assert the rights of the mortgagee or lienholder and to enforce the mortgage or lien as against his cotenant or cotenants to the extent that they should contribute to the satisfaction of the mortgage or lien. 20 Am J2d Coten § 67.

subrogation of insurer. The right of an insurer on payment of a loss to be subrogated pro tanto to any right of action which the insured may have had against any third person whose wrongful act or neglect caused the loss insured against by the insurer. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1719.

Subrogatum tenet locum subrogati. A subrogation takes the place of that which is subrogated.

The axiom should be understood as applicable, when the thing has been changed into something else by the owner, he having received the other thing in its place. Place v Norwich & New York Transp. Co. 118 US 468, 30 L Ed 134, 145, 6 S Ct 1150.

subrogee. A person who by subrogation acquires the rights of another person.

subrogor. One whose rights are acquired by another through subrogation.

sub rosa. Under the rose; secretly; privately; clandestinely.

sub salvo et securo conducto. Under safe and secure conduct.

subscribe. To sign. To sanction. To agree to take and pay for corporate stock on the issuance thereof or for a newspaper or magazine to be issued periodically. To agree to take and pay for, as for corporate stock on the issuance thereof or for a newspaper or magazine to be issued periodically. To lend support to a charitable, religious, educational, theatrical, musical, or recreational organization by agreeing to contribute certain amounts thereto. 50 Am J1st Subscr § 1.

subscribed. Signed. Signed at the end of the instrument. Stone v Marvel, 45 NH 481.

subscribed and sworn to before me. An expression which, followed by the date and signature of the officer administering the oath, constitutes the jurat of an affidavit. 3 Am J2d Affi § 16.

subscriber. One who has subscribed to something.

See subscription to stock.

subscribing witnesses. Attesting witnesses. 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 308 et seq.

subscription. A signature. A signature at the end of an instrument. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 24. The signing of one's name by way of giving sanction or effect to a document. 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 243, 336. An undertaking, either written or oral, to give or pay money or its equivalent, or to give property, in the furtherance and promotion of some object or undertaking, generally, an object or purpose for the promotion of which numerous persons are uniting their means and efforts. 50 Am J1st Subscr § 1. A promise in writing of a donation to a university or college. 15 Am J2d Colleges § 33. An application for a share or shares of a business trust. 13 Am J2d Bus Tr § 24.

subscription book. A record of the subscriptions made to an issue of corporate stock. 18 Am J2d Corp § 370.

subscription contract. A promise or undertaking to subscribe based upon a sufficient consideration, sometimes the promises of other subscribers. 50 Am J1st Subscr §§ 10 et seq.

See subscription to stock.

subscription to newspaper. An agreement to accept the numbers of a newspaper as they are issued and to pay therefor, either in one sum for a year or in lesser sums for periods of a year.

To become a subscriber for a newspaper includes some voluntary act on the part of the subscriber, or something which is in effect an assent by him to the use of his name as a subscriber. A person to whom a paper is sent without his knowledge or consent, either expressed or implied, is not a subscriber. Ashton v Stoy, 86 Iowa 197, 64 NW 804.

subscription to stock. An agreement to subscribe for or take stock to be issued by a corporation. 18 Am J2d Corp § 291.

The legislature may prescribe the manner and mode of creation of a subscription contract and declare what shall amount to such a contract or what shall be evidence that the party proposing to take stock has completed the contract on his part. 18 Am J2d Corp § 292.

See call.

subscribing witness. Same as attesting witness.

subsequent. Coming after, whether in time, place, or order.

subsequent condition. See condition subsequent.

subsequent creditor. One who becomes a creditor following a transaction by the debtor brought up for consideration, such as a conveyance made to defraud or delay creditors.

subsequent negligence. Negligence operating at the time an injury is sustained and as the cause thereof, as distinguished from negligence operating prior to the accident but in some degree connected therewith. Negligence which is the proximate, as distinguished from the remote, cause of an injury.

subsequent offender. See habitual criminal.

[1231]

subsequent purchaser. A purchaser under a later purchase of the same premises from the same grantor or one in the chain of record title running from such grantor.

While not including a purchaser from an apparent stranger to the title of the grantor in the unrecorded deed, the term does include not only the purchaser from the grantor himself, but every subsequent purchaser from one who appears from the records to be the owner of, or to be authorized to convey, the title and interest that the grantor had when he made a deed which has not been recorded. 45 Am J1st Recds § 149.

subsequent purchaser for value. See bona fide purchaser.

subsequent purchaser in good faith. See bona fide purchaser.

subservient possession. See permissive possession.

subsidence. The sinking of land, as where support has been removed by mining. Anno: 35 ALR 1137; 36 Am J1st Min & M § 184. A shifting, falling, slipping, seeping, or oozing of the soil from its natural position, caused by the removal of support. Levi v Schwartz, 201 Md 575, 95 A2d 322, 36 ALR2d 1241.

See submerged lands; submergence.

subsidiary. A corporation, all or the majority of the stock of which is owned by another corporation, so that the latter is in the relation to it of a parent corporation. A corporation which is controlled by another corporation by reason of the latter company's ownership of at least a majority of the shares of the capital stock. 18 Am J2d Corp § 17.

subsidiary corporation. See subsidiary.

subsidiary fact. A fact indeterminate of an issue in itself, although of some weight in the determination of the ultimate fact. Baumgartner v United States, 322 US 665, 88 L Ed 1525, 64 S Ct 1240.

subsidiary trust. A trust auxiliary to a business trust. Beilin v Krenn & Dato, 350 111 284, 183 NE 330.

subsidium. See in subsidium. sub sigillo. Under seal. State v Buchanan (Md) 5 Harr & J 317.

sub silentio. Silently.

subsistence. A means of support. Wall v Williams, 93 NC 327. An allowance to an enlisted man of the armed forces for living expenses, made under certain circumstances. 36 Am J1st Mil § 34. An allowance for a defendant wife in an action for divorce, brought against her in a state other than that of her domicil, to cover her living expenses while in the state for the purpose of defending the suit. State ex rel. Pearce v Superior Court, 34 Wash 2d 768, 209 P2d 906.

subsistence allowance. See subsistence.

subsistence loans. See production and subsistence loans.

sub spe reconciliationis. In the hope of reconciliation.

substance. Essentials. The antithesis of "form." State v Japone, 202 Iowa 450, 455, 209 NW 468, 471.

substance of indictment. The essential allegations.

When an indictment is adjudged to be insufficient in substance, it is because it lacks something essential to make a legal charge of crime. Certain portions of an indictment are formal and some substantial. The statement or body of the indictment must set forth all the ingredients of the offense, and charge the defendant directly and positively with the commission of it. This is the substance of the charge, because essential to it. State v Burgdoerfer, 107 Mo 1, 17 SW 646.

substance over form. A determination of the effect of a transaction according to the substance of the matter rather than the particular form or label adopted in designating it. Re Smiley, 35 Wash 2d 863, 216 P2d 212.

substantial adverse claim. A claim which is real and actual, as distinguished from one which is merely colorable. A claim disclosing a contested matter of right involving at least a fair doubt and reasonable room for controversy in matters of law or fact. Harrison v Chamberlin, 271 US 191, 70 L Ed 897, 46 S Ct 467 (claim sufficient to deprive court of bankruptcy of constructive possession of property).

substantial breach. Same as material breach.

substantial claim. See substantial adverse claim.

substantial compliance. See substantial performance.

substantial consummation of reorganization plan. The occurrence of each of the following events:(1) transfer, sale, or other disposition of all or substantially all of the property dealt with by the plan pursuant to the provisions of the plan; (2) assumption of operation of the business and management of all or substantially all of the property dealt with by the plan by the debtor or by the corporation used for the purpose of carrying out the plan: and (3) commencement of the distribution to creditors and stockholders, affected by the plan, of the cash and securities specified in the plan. Bankruptcy Act § 229(a); 11 USC § 629(a).

substantial destruction. As a condition relieving a tenant from liability for rent:-an effective destruction of the building so complete that the building is untenable and restoration will amount in effect to the construction of a new building. 32 Am J1st L & T § 506.

substantial error. An error which upon the trial works harm and from which a party sustains substantial injury. People v Perlman, 128 Misc 68, 71, 217 NYS 662, 665. An error of the trial court which operates in the impairment of a substantial right of the accused. 5 Am J2d A & E § 778.

substantial evidence. Evidence beyond a scintilla; evidence affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can reasonably be inferred. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 338. Such relevant evidence as a reasonable man would accept as adequate to support the conclusion sought to be drawn from it. Anno: 123 ALR 647; 83 L Ed 691. Such evidence as will convince reasonable men and on which such men may not reasonably differ as to whether it establishes a case or defense. Morton v Mooney, 97 Mont 1, 33 P2d 262.

Substantial evidence means more than a mere scintilla. It is of substantial and relevant consequence and excludes vague, uncertain, or irrelevant matter. It implies a quality of proof which induces conviction and makes an impression on reason. It means that one weighing the evidence takes into consideration the facts presented to him and all reasonable inferences, deductions and conclusions to be drawn therefrom and, considering them in their entirety and relation to each other, arrives at a fixed conviction. NLRB v Union Pacific Stages (CA9) 99 F2d 153.

substantial evidence rule. The rule that a determination of fact by an administrative body should be upheld unless arbitrary or clearly wrong; that a ruling based on findings supported by substantial evidence shall be sustained unless they rest on erroneous legal foundations. NLRB v Babcock & Wilcox Co. 351 US 105, 100 L Ed 975, 76 S Ct 679.

substantialibus. See in substantialibus.

substantial justice rule. The rule that a judgment shall not be reversed if it appears that there has been no error in reference to substantive principles, that substantial justice has been done, and that such error as occurred in the lower court was technical. West v State, 24 Ariz 237, 208 P 412.

substantially. In the main. Essentially.

substantially as set forth. Words of reference to another document. Sufficient in a claim of a patent to import into the claim the particulars of the specifications. Westinghouse v Boyden Power Brake Co. 170 US 537, 42 L Ed 1136, 18 S Ct 707.

These words in the claim of a patent, do not limit the patentee to the exact mechanism described in his specifications, or prevent recovery against infringers who have adopted mechanical equivalents for such mechanism. 40 Am J1st Pat § 93.

substantially prevailing party. The party entitled to costs on appeal where the judgment of the lower court is affirmed in part and reversed in part. 5 Am J2d A & E § 1014.

substantially reversed. A modification on appeal so inclusive of the whole judgment that there is an entire rather than a partial reversal. 5 Am J2d A & E § 1032.

substantial performance. Performance of a contract which, while not a full performance, is performance in good faith, and in compliance with the contract except perhaps for minor and relatively unimportant deviations. 17 Am J2d Contr § 378. Performance of all the essentials necessary to the full accomplishment of the purposes of the contract. 13 Am J2d Bldg Contr § 43. Performance short of full performance but sufficient to substantiate a recovery of the contract price less a deduction for want of completion of the work. 58 Am J1st W & L § 52. Such an approximation to complete performance of a building contract that the owner obtains substantially what was called for by the contract, although it may not be the same in every particular, and although there may be omissions and imperfections on account of which there should be a deduction from the contract price. Handy v Bliss, 204 Mass 513, 90 NE 864. In one sense, full performance according to the fair intent of the contract. In another sense, performance distinctly short of full performance. 46 Am J1st Sales § 213.

substantial performance doctrine. The principle that where there has been a breach of one of several promises, the question whether there has been a failure of consideration, a complete failure or a partial failure, is determined according to whether or not there has been a substantial performance of the contract. 11 Am J2d B & N § 244.

See substantial performance.

substantial possession. Actual possession in the sense of actual occupancy of the entire tract under consideration. Wheeler v Clark, 114 Tenn 117, 85 SW 258.

substantial right. An essential, as distinguished from a technical, right. Sullivan v Storz, 156 Neb 177, 55 NW2d 499, 34 ALR2d 1142. That which concerns the subject matter of the action or proceeding.

The fact that a matter is discretionary does not prevent it from being a matter affecting a substantial right. Re Engbretson, 68 SD 255, 1 NW2d 351, 142 ALR 1454.

substantive due process. Freedom from arbitrary action coupled with the equal operation of the laws. 16 Am J2d Const L § 550.

substantive law. That part of the law which creates, defines, and regulates rights, as distinguished from the part which prescribes the remedies and the procedure for the enforcement of rights. Hardie v Bryson (DC Mo) 44 F Supp 67; Mix v Board of County Comrs. 18 Idaho 695, 112 P 215.

A statute or other rule of law will be characterized as substantive or procedural according to the nature of the problem for which a characterization must be made. Grant v McAuliffe, 41 Cal 2d 859, 264 P2d 944, 42 ALR2d 1162.

substitute. One who, or that which, stands in the place of another; that which stands in lieu of something else. State v Fargo Bottling Works Co. 19 ND 396, 124 NW 387. (Civil law.) A person to whom an "institute" appointed by will is by the will directed to transfer property which is by the will devised to him.

See institute; substituted.

substitute bill of lading. A bill of lading issued in place of a bill which has been lost, stolen, or destroyed. 13 Am J2d Car § 421.

substituted. One person or one thing acting, serving, or occupying the place of another.

The word describes a replacement of one thing by another and, in most of its ordinary uses, implies the removal or elimination of the thing replaced. But this definition is not reliable when one is dealing with legal relations as when concrete objects are in mind. For example, we have the common case of a substituted trustee, in which the original trustee ceases to act and have the powers of a trustee, but he continues to be liable as a trustee for his acts while in office. Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Co. v Hale & Kilburn Corporation (DC Pa) 24 F Supp 3.

substituted administrator. See administrator de bonis non.

substituted automobile. See substituted vehicle.

substituted bequest. See substitution by will.

substituted executor. See substitutionary executor.

substituted legacy. See substitution by will.

substituted party. See substitution of parties.

substituted service. Service of process by leaving a copy of the summons or writ with a suitable person at the residence, dwelling house, or place of abode of the party to be served. 42 Am J1st Proc § 60. In some jurisdictions, the equivalent of actual or personal service. Grant v Lawrence, 37 Utah 540, 108 P 931. A term applied in some jurisdictions to service by mail or service by publication.

substituted shipment. A substitution of goods for the goods specified in a bill of lading. 13 Am J2d Car § 373.

[1233]

substituted tax return. The replacement of one income tax return by another as a matter of right of the taxpayer within the period allowed by statute for filing returns or within such extended time as the commissioner may grant under the statute. J. E. Riley Invest. Co. v Commissioner (CA9) 110 F2d 655.

substituted trustee. A trustee who, when appointed, steps into the place of the old trustee charged with the trust, and with all the powers and duties of the old trustee. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 133.

Although the original trustee ceases to act and have the powers of a trustee, he continues to be liable as a trustee for his acts while in office. Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Co. v Hale & Filburn Corp. (DC Pa) 24 F Supp 3.

substituted vehicle. A familiar term in the field of automobile insurance; a vehicle temporarily used by the insured, where the automobile described in the policy is withdrawn from use because of breakdown, repair, servicing, loss, or destruction. 7 Am J2d Auto Ins § 103.

substitute judge. A judge selected to act in the absence, disability, or disqualification of the regular judge, or under other circumstances, as provided by constitution or statute. 30A Am J Rev ed Judges § 237.

substitute juror. See alternate juror.

substitute paper. An instrument for the payment of money given by way of substitution for a lost, destroyed, or mutilated instrument, of the same tenor. 11 Am J2d B & N § 59.

See substitute bill of lading. substitution. Putting one person or one thing in the place of another. Subrogation.

As the term is used in the law of wills, to create a substitution is to bequeath property to one or more persons, to be succeeded in the enjoyment thereof by others designated by the testator. Succession of Meunier, 52 La Ann 79, 26 So 776.

See subrogation; substitution by will.

substitutional gift. See substitution by will.

substitutional remainders. See alternative remainders. 28 Am J2d Est § 216.

substitutionary bequest. See substitution by will.

substitutionary executor. A person nominated by a will to act as executor in the event of the death, inability, or refusal to act, of the person first named. Edwards' Estate (Pa) 12 Phila 85.

substitution by will. The effect of a clause in a will whereby the testator provides for the replacement of the beneficiary of a particular bequest by another person, or the replacement of a bequest to a designated beneficiary by another bequest to or in favor of the same beneficiary, under circumstances set forth in the clause. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1181. A gift over, that is, a gift to a charity to take effect in the event a designated gift does not take effect. Re Harrington's Estate, 151 Neb 81, 36 NW2d 577. A gift by later will or codicil in substitution for a gift made to the same beneficiary by the original will. Anno: 37 ALR2d 17, 48.

A testamentary gift is substitutional where the testator provides that someone shall take it in event of the death of the original beneficiary before the period of distribution. One taking by substitution can take only under the terms of the will, subject to the same conditions as are attached to the gift. Re Waring, 293 NY 186, 56 NE2d 543, 157 ALR 1101.

substitution clause in policy. A provision in an automobile liability policy whereby coverage is extended to the use of an automobile driven by the insured by way of substitution for the vehicle designated in the policy of insurance. 7 Am J2d Auto Ins § 103.

substitution clause in will. See substitution by will.

substitution doctrine. Another term for subrogation. 50 Am J1st Subro § 2.

substitution of attorney. The change made by a party in his attorney of record in a pending case, such substitution of one attorney for another being a matter of right, except where the original attorney has an interest in the subject matter of the suit, and accomplished under accepted procedure by an order of substitution obtained on motion. 7 Am J2d Attys § 148.

substitution of debtor. A novation. 39 Am J1st Nov § 13.

See imperfect delegation.

substitution of parties. A change of parties by the substitution of a new plaintiff or defendant for the original plaintiff or defendant, accomplished by an amendment of the pleading and process as permitted by an order of court, such order being granted only where a new cause of action is not introduced by the amendment. 39 Am J1st Parties § 98. The revival of an action upon the death of a party by the personal representative, heir, or devisee. 1 Am J2d Abat & R §§ 120 et seq. A novation by the substitution of a new debtor for an old one. 39 Am J1st Nov § 13.

A substitute defendant in the true sense of the term is one who takes the place of another defendant in the same suit or controversy, not one who is sued upon an entirely different cause of action. McCann v Bentley Stores Corp. (DC Mo) 34 F Supp 231.

sub suo periculo. At his own risk.

subsurface entry. An entry upon land made below the surface thereof, for example, by excavation in the course of mining. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 14.

subsurface use. The use of space below a highway by abutting owners for private purposes. 25 Am J1st High § 198.

subtenant. The lessee under a sublease. A person who rents all or a portion of leased premises from the lessee for a term less than the original one, leaving a reversionary interest in the first lessee. 32 Am J1st L & T § 392.

subterfuge. Something resorted to for concealment. Foster-Fountain Packing Co. v Haydel, 278 US 1, 73 L Ed 147, 49 S Ct 1. A plan or scheme to escape or avoid responsibility for one's acts.

subterranean stream. A definite and known channel in which subterranean waters flow. 56 Am J1st Water § 103. Underground waters flowing in a distinct, well-defined and permanent channel, as distinguished from percolating waters which spread in every direction through the earth. Tampa Waterworks Co. v Cline, 33 Fla 586, 20 So 780.

subterranean waters. Underground bodies or streams of water flowing in known and defined or ascertainable channels or courses and waters which ooze, seep, or percolate through the earth or flow in unknown or undefined channels. 56 Am J1st Water § 102.

subtraction. The process of taking one number from a larger number to find the difference. The neglect to perform a suit, duty, custom, or service which a person owes to another.

It was a wrong which had chiefly to do with those duties and services, arising out of land tenure, which a tenant owed his landlord, and included the duty or service of paying rent. See 3 Bl Comm 230.

suburb. A township, village, or other municipality adjacent to a city, having an identity because of the number of residents or the business or industrial operations therein conducted.

subversion. Subversive activities.

See subversive.

subversive. Noun: One who seeks to undermine and overthrow established authority of the government. An organization that teaches and advocates the overthrow of government by force or violence. Adler v Board of Education, 342 US 485, 96 L Ed 517, 72 S Ct 380, 27 ALR2d 472. Adjective: Undermining the foundation of government.

Mere personal abstention from violence, or even from violent language, does not secure immunity from deportation as a subversive alien, if the result of the gentlest and most guarded speech is to advocate or teach that subversion which is condemned by statute. The "philosophic" anarchist is an anarchist nevertheless. United States ex rel. Georgian v Uhl (CA2 NY) 271 F 676, cert den 256 US 701, 65 L Ed 1178, 41 S Ct 623.

See sedition; treason.

subversive alien. See subversive.

sub voce. Under the word or title.

subway. An underground way or passage. A means of public transportation below the surface of the street, particularly an underground electric railway or bus line. 25 Am J1st High § 200.

succession. Following another; succeeding to the rights of another, as where a new corporation which is a reorganization of another corporation takes the rights of the old corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1524. The passing of property in possession or enjoyment, present or future, and dispositions of property by will, deed, or laws of descent, by reason whereof any person shall become entitled in possession or expectancy to property upon the death of any other person. Wright v Blakeslee, 101 US 174, 25 L Ed 1048.

The word is one of technical meaning in the law and signifies the taking of property by inheritance or will from the estate of a decedent, or by operation of law; and it is a word which clearly excludes those who take by deed, grant, gift, or any form of purchase or contract. Quarles v Clayton, 87 Tenn 308, 10 SW 505.

See descent; hereditary succession; intestate succession; perpetual succession; universal succession.

succession ab intestato. (Civil law.) The descent or inheritance of property from one who has died without leaving a will. See 2 Bl Comm 490.

succession duty. A succession tax.

Successionis feudi talis est natura, quod ascendentes non succedunt. The nature of feudal succession is such that persons in the ascending line do not inherit. See 2 Bl Comm 211.

succession tax. An excise on the privilege of taking property by will, inheritance, or succession in any other form, upon the death of the owner. A tax upon the right to receive property from the estate of the decedent. McLaughlin v Green, 136 Conn 138, 69 A2d 289, 15 ALR2d 1210; Chase v Commissioner of Taxation, 226 Minn 521, 33 NW2d 706, 6 ALR2d 214. A tax imposed upon a legacy, devise, or distributive share of the estate of a decedent, not upon the estate. Re Rath, 10 Cal 2d 399, 75 P2d 509, 115 ALR 836; Re Daniels' Estate, 159 Ohio St 109, 50 Ohio Ops 79, 111 NE2d 252. Sometimes used loosely as inclusive of an estate tax on the theory that it is a duty or tax upon the transmission of a decedent's property, that is, his whole estate.

succession words. See words of inheritance.

successive. In succession; following in a regular sequence.

A grant of the right to "successive renewals" of a lease does not grant a right to renew indefinitely, since the word "successive" imports concatenation, and not duration. Geyer v Lietzan, 230 Ind 404, 103 NE2d 199, 31 ALR2d 601.

successive assignees. Persons who have acquired the same claim by a succession of assignments, one assignee assigning to another, the latter to still another, etc. Persons who have in succession acquired the same claim from the same assignor. 6 Am J2d Assign § 113. Two assignees for the benefit of creditors, one being appointed upon the death, disability, or removal from office of the other. 6 Am J2d Assign for Crs § 92.

successive disabilities. One personal disability succeeded by another, as where mental incompetency follows infancy. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 210. Disabilities of different persons where an estate passes by descent, devise, or purchase from one person under disability to another person under disability. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 211.

successive indictments. See reindictment.

successive renewals. See successive.

successive transactions. See repeated transactions.

successive trespasses. See repeated trespasses.

successor. One who assumes a public office upon expiration of term, retirement, resignation, or removal of a prior incumbent. One who follows another, as an heir follows the ancestor. One who follows another in interest. Inclusive of an executor. West Shore R. Co. v Wenner, 70 NJL 233, 57 A 508, reaffirmed 71 NJL 682, 60 A 1134.

A corporation may be considered the "successor" of another, although both corporations retain their corporate identity, dependent upon the facts and surrounding circumstances, and this status may exist in the absence of either an amalgamation, merger, or technical consolidation. North Texas Nat. Bank v Thompson (Tex Civ App) 23 SW2d 494.

See hereditary successor; representative.

successors. A term in a contract indicating assignability. 6 Am J2d Assign § 10.

The use of the word in an order of the National Labor Relations Board has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court, although the court has indicated that the liability of such a successor in regard to carrying out a board order is dependent more on the nature of the transaction between the parties than on the wording of the order. Regal Knitwear Co. v NLRB, 324 US 9, 89 L Ed 661, 65 S Ct 478, affg (CA2) 140 F2d 746.

See successor.

successors and assigns. Words of limitation in a deed to a corporation.

successors in interest. Successive owners.

As used in a statute affecting transfers of property with intent to defraud creditors and making such transfers void as against all creditors and their "successors in interest," the term was held to include the assignees of such creditors. Windhaus v Bootz, 3 Cal 351, 25 P 404.

successor trustee. Same as substitute trustee.

Succurritur minori; facilis est lapsus juventutis. A minor should be favored; youth errs easily.

sucesión legitima. (Spanish.) Lawful issue. Ortiz De Rodriguez v Vivoni, 201 US 371, 376, 50 L Ed 792, 794, 26 S Ct 475.

suction. A sucking force. Displacement waves sometimes caused by large and powerful vessels when they are propelled at a high rate of speed.

The liability of the vessel and her owner for damage resulting to other properly handled craft from this source, is well settled. See 48 Am J1st Ship § 280.

sudden. Hasty. Unforeseen; unexpected.

sudden anger. See sudden passion.

sudden emergency. An occurrence fraught with danger which is unexpected and occurs so abruptly as to be unnoticed before the peril is presented. Booth v Price, 183 Ark 975, 39 SW2d 717, 76 ALR 957.

sudden emergency doctrine. The principal of the law of negligence that one placed in a position of sudden emergency or peril other than by his own negligence may be held free from negligence or contributory negligence, although he would be charged with negligence if he had been given sufficient time for thought and reflection. 38 Am J1st Negl § 41.

suddenly. Happening without previous notice, or with very brief notice coming unexpectedly; rapid and unforeseen; hastily prepared, employed, made, or done; unexpected, unusual, abrupt; unlocked for. Anno: 122 ALR 840.

sudden passion. Characteristically .of sudden development.

In the definition of manslaughter as homicide committed without premeditation but under the influence of "sudden passion," the words mean any intense and vehement emotional excitement of the kind prompting to violent and aggressive action, as rage, anger, hatred, furious resentment or terror. State v Linville, 148 Kan 142, 79 P2d 869.

sudden peril. See sudden emergency.

sue. To prosecute; to make legal claim; to seek for in law.

The word appears to be properly applicable to civil actions and suits and to criminal prosecutions as well. Bacon says, "An indictment is defined as an accusation at the suit of the king." See United States v Moore (CC NH) 11 F 248, 251.

See covenant not to sue; put in suit.

sue and labor clause. Same as rescue clause.

sue out. To obtain writ, process, or order of court upon an application therefor. Anno: 27 ALR2d 267.

Process is "sued out" when it has been issued and delivered to a person qualified and authorized to serve it. Maddox v Humphries, 30 Tex 494, 497.

suertes. A term found in Spanish-American grants, meaning plots of ground within the limits of a city, pueblo, or town, for sowing grounds, of a larger size than "solares," for cultivating or planting, as gardens, vineyards, orchards, etc. Hart v Burnett, 15 Cal 530, 555.

sue upon. See sue; put in suit.

suffer. To feel or endure mental or physical pain or distress. To endure. To authorize or permit by approval or acquiescence in an act or course of conduct. New York Life Ins. Co. v Calhoun (CA8 Mo) 97 F2d 896.

To suffer implies not merely nonresistance to that which is done, but also an approval of, or at least an acquiescence in, it with an ability to prevent it. Purinton v Jamrock, 195 Mass 187, 80 NE 802.

sufferance. Endurance of pain or distress, physical or mental. Toleration; acquiescence.

See bill of sufferance; estate by sufferance; tenancy at sufferance.

suffer a nonsuit. To be subjected to a nonsuit. Having one's case taken out of court by an order of court. 24 Am J2d Dism § 72; 34 Am J1st Lim Ac § 282.

suffering. Physical pain; mental anguish.

There is no adequate definition of pain; the best that can be done is to describe a reaction to pain. This reaction is the body's awareness of unpleasant changes or activities that call attention to a particular region of the body. Pain is thus a protopathic sensation located in the nervous system. Recognition of the possible danger resulting from this sensation is "suffering," as distinguished from the initial and continuing pain. Sometimes courts refer to this type of pain and suffering as physical pain and suffering. 22 Am J2d Damg § 105.

The word "suffering" in a policy of insurance on an animal against destruction "necessary in order to immediately relieve incurable suffering" means conscious pain, so acute as to demand action without delay in order to put the animal out of its misery. Abraham v Insurance Co. of N. A. 117 Vt 75, 84 A2d 670, 29 ALR2d 783.

suffering a prisoner to escape. A criminal offense, sometimes a basis of civil liability, on the part of the custodian of a prison in voluntarily permitting a prisoner to escape. 27 Am J2d Escape § 21.

suffer to run at large. Intentionally or negligently permitting one's animals to stray from one's premises upon the premises of others or the highway. Serr v Biwabik Concrete Aggregate Co. 202 Minn 165, 278 NW 355, 117 ALR 1019.

sufficient. Adequate. So much as is needed. Equal to the purpose proposed. Pensacola & Atlantic Railroad Co. v State, 25 Fla 310, 5 So 833.

sufficient bail. See sufficient sureties.

sufficient consideration. That which is actually given, suffered, or accepted for a promise, whether slight or significant, and whether reducible or not to a pecuniary value, provided it is a present consideration or within one of the judicial or statutory exceptions to the requirement of a present consideration. 17 Am J2d Contr § 92.

sufficient deed. See good and sufficient deed.

sufficient description. That description which will enable third persons, aided by inquiries which the instrument itself indicates and directs, to identify the property. Sandwich Mfg. Co. v Robinson, 83 Iowa 567, 49 NW 1031 (requisite of description of mortgaged property in a chattel mortgage).

sufficient evidence. Abstractly, evidence of such probative value as to support the verdict of the jury or a finding of fact by the court. Practically, evidence such as will satisfy an unprejudiced mind of the truth of that which the court or jury has found to be the fact. Re Cruson, 189 Or 537, 221 P2d 892, 20 ALR2d 219.

Where a statute provides that the schedule of rates fixed by the commissioners shall be "sufficient" evidence that the rates thus fixed were just and reasonable, the word "sufficient" does not mean "conclusive." Pensacola & Atlantic Railroad Co. v State, 25 Fla 310, 5 So 833.

sufficient fence. Nothing less than a fence which meets the requirements of the law or the agreement of the parties in respect of its character. 22 Am J2d Fen § 23.

sufficient possession. As the basis of an action of forcible entry and detainer in case of dispossession:—an actual, quiet, and peaceable possession. Schwinn v Perkins, 79 NJL 515, 78 A 19. To support a claim of adverse possession:— possession, under a claim of right or title, for the whole period prescribed by the statute, which is actual, open, visible, notorious; continuous, and hostile to the true owner's title and to the world at large. 3 Am J2d Adv P § 6.

sufficient provocation. See reasonable provocation.

sufficient sureties. Sureties on a bail bond of financial ability to respond in payment of the amount of the bond and of sufficient vigilance to secure the appearance and prevent the absconding of the accused. 8 Am J2d Bail § 82.

suffix. Something added to a word to give a distinctive meaning. A word or abbreviation following a name, such as "Sr." 38 Am J1st Name § 9.

suffocation. See asphyxiation. suffragan. An assistant bishop.

suffrage. The right to vote; a political right or privilege as distinguished from a civil right, property right, or right of person. A conventional right, subject to regulation by the legislature to any extent not prohibited by the express or implied provisions of state or federal constitutions; a right which does not exist except as granted by the constitution and laws enacted pursuant thereto. 25 Am J2d Elect § 53. A privilege rather than a right, being dependent upon public policy as expressed in constitution or statute. Chamberlin v Wood, 15 SD 216, 88 NW 109.

sugar bounty. A bounty provided for in 1890 by act of Congress on the production of all kinds of sugar in the United States.

After the sugar producers, in reliance upon the act, had made extensive and costly preparations, by enlarging their plants, to profit by the bounty, Congress, believing the legislation to be unconstitutional, as it probably was, repealed it. A later act of Congress, in 1895, provided for financial relief of those who had suffered by the repeal of the act of 1890, and this later act was upheld by the Supreme Court. United States v Realty Co. 163 US 427, 41 L Ed 215, 16 S Ct 1120.

Sugar Trust. See trust.

suggest. To bring an idea to the attention of another for consideration. A word which may or may not be precatory, depending upon the context in which it appears and the circumstances under which it occurs.

Where the word is used in a will, without any qualifying or explanatory words or circumstances to affect its ordinary meaning, it has been held merely to place a matter before another for consideration, and, under ordinary circumstances, in no wise to carry with it an expression of desire, will or entreaty. When so used, it is not a precatory word and is insufficient to create a trust. Williams v Baptist Church of Baltimore, 92 Md 497, 48 A 930.

suggested price. A retail price suggested or recommended to a dealer by the producer or manufacturer. 52 Am J1st Tradem § 185.

suggestio falsi. A suggestion of that which is false or untrue; a misrepresentation. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 144.

suggestion award. An award made by a corporation or other business enterprise to an employee for a suggestion respecting possible new products, improvement of product, saving in cost of production, etc.

suggestion of death. Calling the death of a party to the attention of a court and making it a matter of record, such being a step in the revival of an action abated by the death of a party. 1 Am J2d Abat & R § 118.

suggestive matters. Matters relative to the issue, whether preceding or following the commission of a civil wrong or criminal act. 29 Am J2d Ev §§ 270 et seq.

suicide. Death by one's own hand intentionally inflicted against himself. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1145.

By statute in Missouri, "every person deliberately assisting another in the commission of self-murder shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter in the first degree." State v Webb, 216 Mo 378, 115 SW 998.

By the early common law of England, suicide was ranked as an infamous crime and was held to be a "species of felony" punishable by a forfeiture to the king of the goods and chattels of the felo de se, and an ignominious burial in the highway with a stake driven through his body. Suicide has never been classed as a crime in the United States but there are cases holding attempted suicide to be an offense, even in the absence of statute. 26 Am J1st Homi §§ 84-86.

suicide pact. A mutual agreement to commit suicide. 26 Am J1st Homi § 85.

suicide, sane or insane. See sane or insane clause.

sui generis. Of its own kind, peculiar, for example, a statutory proceeding for declaratory judgment, neither legal nor equitable. Moss v Moss, 20 Cal 2d 640, 128 P2d 526, 141 ALR 1422.

sui juris. Of full capacity. In his own right; capable of entering into a contract. See 1 Bl Comm 443.

For definition of the term as it pertains to contributory negligence of children see Anno: 107 ALR 161.

suit. An action; a legal proceeding of a civil kind. Re Oliver, 77 Ohio St 474, 83 NE 795. Any proceeding in a court of justice by which a person pursues therein that remedy which the law affords him. Upshot County v Rich, 135 US 467, 34 L Ed 196, 10 S Ct 651. A term broader than "action," since it is inclusive of all judicial proceedings whether actions or not. 1 Am J2d Actions § 4. Not inclusive of a proceeding in continuation of an original action, such as a proceeding for modification of a decree. Anno: 143 ALR 414. Not inclusive of a criminal prosecution. Anno: 40 ALR2d 1397. Inclusive of a criminal prosecution, since an indictment or information is an accusation at the "suit" of the sovereign. United States v Moore (CC NH) 11 F 248, 251.

"It must be conceded that the word, as applied to legal controversies, both by the legal profession and others, is now used and recognized as a generic term of broad significance, often understood and used, even by legislatures and courts, to designate almost any proceeding in a court, even, though rarely, being applied to a criminal prosecution in certain connections." Patterson v Standard Acci. Ins. Co. 178 Mich 288, 144 NW 491.

Historically, "action" is more properly applied to a legal remedy only, whereas "suit" is more properly applied to an equitable remedy only, but this distinction is no longer regarded as important. 1 Am J2d Actions § 4.

To do suit was a feudal service of the tenant to follow the lord in his courts in time of peace and in his armies or warlike retinue in time of warfare. See 2 Bl Comm 54.

For particular suits, see definitions commencing actio; action.

suitable monument. See monument.

suitable watch. See constant watch.

suit against the state. See action against the state.

suit at common law. See action at common law.

suitcase. A fiat traveling bag.

See baggage.

suit club. A scheme devised for the distribution of clothes by chance; a form of lottery. 34 Am J1st Lot § 13.

suit for discovery. A bill wherein the only relief sought is a discovery, no demand being made for the recovery of damages or the accomplishment of anything other than a disclosure by the defendant. 23 Am J2d Dep § 141.

suit for partition. See action in partition.

suit in condemnation. See eminent domain. suit in equity. An action in equity. A suit prosecuted and tried in accordance with the modes of procedure known to courts of equity. 27 Am J2d Equity § 177.

Under modern statutes in most jurisdictions, an action in equity is an ordinary civil action. It is still important, however to determine whether the case is one at law or in equity, since the character of the case may determine such matters as the method of review, the right to a jury trial, etc. 1 Am J2d Actions § 7.

An action involving an alleged infringement of trademark and seeking an injunction against the defendants and an accounting of their profits is in the nature of an old action in equity, and, as such, is triable before a court without a jury. Folmer Grafiex Corp. v Graphic Photo Service (DC NY) 41 F 319.

suit money. The money necessary to enable a married woman to carry on or defend a matrimonial action. Rubin v Rubin, 233 Md 118, 195 A2d 696, 99 ALR2d 256.

suit of a civil nature. Any action or suit traditionally cognizable by courts of law or equity, not involving criminal prosecution or punishment for crime. Milwaukee County v White Co. 296 US 268, 80 L Ed 220, 56 S Ct 229. A proceeding in a court of justice by which a person pursues a remedy afforded him for the redress of a private wrong, as distinguished from a criminal prosecution. Milwaukee County v M. E. White Co. 296 US 268, 80 L Ed 220, 56 S Ct 229.

suit of local nature. See action of a local nature.

suitor. A litigant; a party to an action or suit.

suitors' fund. A fund in the English chancery court made up of sums paid in as costs.

suits pro laesione fidei. Suits for breach of faith.

In the reign of Stephen, the clergy attempted to turn their ecclesiastical courts into courts of equity by entertaining such suits as for spiritual offenses against conscience, in cases of nonpayment of debt or indeed any breach of contract. But this attempt was frustrated by the Constitutions of Clarendon in 1166. See 3 Bl Comm 52.

suit to quiet title. See quieting title.

suit to remove cloud. See quieting title.

sulfur. Another spelling of sulphur.

sulphur. A chemical element. A mineral. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 5.

sum. The result of an addition of numbers. An amount or quantity of money, large or small. United States v Van Auken, 96 US. 366, 24 L Ed 852.

sum at risk. The maximum amount of insurer's liability under a policy; in the case of a valued policy, the valuation placed upon the property by the policy itself. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1586. A term used in marine insurance policies meaning the valuation placed upon the insured property by the policy itself. Standard Marine Ins. Co. v Nome Beach Lighterage & Transp. Co. (CA9 Cal) 133 F 636.

summa. See in summa.

Summa caritas est facere justitiam singulis et omni tempore quando necesse fuerit. The greatest charity is to do justice to everyone and at all times when it shall be needed.

Summa est lex quae pro religione facit. The highest law is that which makes for religion.

summa injuria. The greatest injury. See 1 Bl Comm 62.

Summam esse rationem quae pro religione facit. The highest reason is that which makes for religion. See Broom's Legal Maxims 19.

summa providentia. The greatest prudence. See 1 Bl Comm 461.

Summa ratio est quae pro religione facit. The highest reason is that which makes for religion. See Broom's Legal Maxims 19.

summarily. Expeditiously; dispensing with formalities which merely delay action.

A statute giving the orphans' court the power "summarily" to direct payment of the prorated portions of an estate tax will be construed as not dispensing with the essential elements of due process as regards notice and opportunity to be heard. Moreland's Estate, 351 Pa 623, 42 A2d 63, 1 ALR2d 972.

summary. Short, concise. Reduced into a narrow compass or into a few words. Treese v Ferguson, 120 Okla 235, 251 P 91.

summary abatement. The abatement of a nuisance without judicial proceeding, even without notice or hearing, often by a destruction of the offending thing or structure. 39 Am J1st Nuis § 183 et seq.

summary contempt proceeding. A proceeding for an adjudication of contempt for a direct contempt in the immediate presence of the court, without pleading, affidavit, or formal charges, albeit the accused may be entitled to a hearing or at least opportunity to make an explanation of his conduct under oath. 17 Am J2d Contpt §§ 86-88.

summary conviction. Convicting an accused without giving him the benefit of a trial.

See summary contempt proceeding.

summary court-martial. The lowest in the rank of courts-martial, conducted before one commissioned officer, limited in jurisdiction to offenses of a minor or petty nature of which enlisted men, not commissioned officers, stand accused.

summary dismissal. A dismissal of a civil service employee without giving him opportunity to defend himself or a hearing of any kind. Anno: 131 ALR 396.

summary forfeiture. A forfeiture to the state of property without giving the owner opportunity to be heard. Anno: 17 ALR 574.

summary judgment. A judgment in a summary proceeding, as one rendered pursuant to statute against the sureties on a bond furnished in an action. 50 Am J1st Suret § 209. A judgment in certain actions specified in the statute providing the remedy, rendered upon plaintiff's motion, usually with supporting affidavits, upon the failure of the defendant to controvert the motion by filing an affidavit of defense or his failure to file an affidavit of defense or affidavit of merits sufficient to show the existence of a genuine issue of fact. 41 Am J1st Pl § 340.

A motion for summary judgment is not a trial; on the contrary it assumes that scrutiny of the facts will disclose that the issues presented by the pleadings need not be tried because they are so patently insubstantial as not to be genuine issues at all. Consequently, as soon as it appears upon such a motion that there is really something to "try," the judge must at once deny it and let the cause take its course in the usual way. Cohen v Eleven West 42nd Street (CA2 NY) 115 F2d 531.

summary jurisdiction. A jurisdiction exercised by summary proceedings, as in a bankruptcy court. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 68.

summary possessory proceeding. A proceeding, summary in character, to which a landlord may resort for the recovery or possession of leased premises when he becomes entitled to possession. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1016.

summary proceeding. A proceeding by which a controversy is settled, case disposed of, or trial conducted in a prompt, simple manner without the aid of a jury and without observance of requirements which prevail in a plenary action in reference to commencement of action, service of papers, etc. Western & A. R. Co. v Atlanta, 113 Ga 537, 38 SE 996. A proceeding in the Bankruptcy Court upon petition and answer at a day set for hearing upon notice or order to show cause against the relief proposed. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 69. A proceeding before an administrative body, requiring notice and hearing, but not requiring a full compliance with the rules governing trials of civil actions. Emerson v Hughes, 117 Vt 270, 90 A2d 910, 34 ALR2d 539.

Summary proceedings are not conducted without proper investigation of the facts, or without notice or an opportunity to be heard by the person alleged to have committed the acts, or whose property is sought to be affected. The term summary proceedings is also applied to proceedings which are taken lawfully, but without resort to the courts, such as the physical abatement of a nuisance, or the recaption of goods. Western & Atlantic Railroad Co. v Atlanta, 113 Ga 537, 38 SE 996.

summary trial. A trial of a person on a criminal charge, without a jury. A trial in a summary proceeding.

summation. The concluding argument of counsel, made after the introduction of evidence has been completed, counsel summarizing the points in favor of his client. A term sometimes applied to the court's statement of salient points in the evidence in his charge to the jury.

summing up. See summation.

summo jure. See in summo jure.

summoneas. A summons.

summons. In ordinary usage of the term, original process upon a proper service of which an action is commenced and the defendant therein named brought within the jurisdiction of the court, although sometimes regarded as process only when issued by the clerk or other officer of the court. 42 Am J1st Proc § 2. In convening a grand jury, a venire, precept, or such process or writ as is prescribed for the purpose by statute. 24 Am J1st Grand J § 21.

summum jus. The highest right; the strictest or most rigid law.

Summum jus est summa injuria. Rigid law is the greatest injustice. Ogden v Saunders (US) 12 Wheat 213, 283, 6 L Ed 606, 630.

Summum jus summa injuria. Rigid law is the greatest injustice, or, more freely translated, "too strict an interpretation of the law is frequently productive of the greatest injustice."

The maxim has its counterpart in the maxim, "Right too rigid hardens into wrong." Caldwell v Ryan, 210 Mo 17, 43, 108 SW 533.

sum payable. The amount payable by the obligor under a bill, note, or contract.

sumptuary laws. Statutes restraining luxury and extravagant expense in dress, diet, and the like.

[1239]

The sumptuary law of 1336, still in force in the time of Blackstone, provided that no man should be served at dinner or supper with more than two courses, except upon certain important specified holy days, when he might be served with three courses. See 4 Bl Comm 170.

Sunday. The first day of the week. 50 Am J1st Sun & H § 2. A holy day set apart as the Christian Sabbath, the observance of which as a day of rest is generally provided for by statute. The seventh day of the Jewish week. 50 Am J1st Sun & H § 2.

A statutory declaration that a certain day shall be a legal holiday does not indicate an attempt to elevate its status to that of Sunday. 50 Am J1st Sun & H § 2.

The observance of Sunday as a Sabbath or day of ceremonial rest was first enjoined by the Emperor Constantine as a civil regulation in conformity with the practice of the Christian church. Hence it is a maxim of the civil law, "Diebus dominicis mercari, judicari vel jurari non debet." On the Lord's Days it is not fitting to transact business, to decide cases nor to make an oath. Richardson v Goddard (US) 23 How 28, 16 L Ed 412, 417.

When the word is used in a statute which does not in any of its provisions indicate that some other meaning is intended, Sunday is construed as meaning the entire day from midnight of Saturday until midnight of Sunday. 50 Am J1st Sun & H § 2.

Sunday edition. The edition of a daily newspaper which comes out on Sunday; not a weekly newspaper. 39 Am J1st Newsp § 4.

Sunday law. A statute or municipal ordinance, sometimes known as a "blue law," which prohibits, with some necessary exceptions, the performance of labor or the engaging in a business, occupation, sport, or amusement enterprise on Sunday or during certain hours on Sunday. Petit v Minnesota, 177 US 164, 44 L Ed 716, 20 S Ct 666.

In its enactment, the legislature has given the sanction of law to a rule of conduct, which the entire civilized world recognizes as essential to the physical and moral well-being of society. One day in seven is the rule founded in experience and sustained by science. Hennington v Georgia, 163 US 299, 41 L Ed 166, 16 S Ct 1086.

Sunday Law of Charles the Second. The statute, 29 Car. II, c. 7, sec. 1, which provided that "no person whatsoever shall do or exercise any worldly labor, business, or work of their ordinary calling, on the Lord's Day."

This is not the prohibition of all worldly business or work, but only of one's "ordinary calling" so that one having no ordinary calling cannot come under the statute. In the United States, Sunday laws generally omit this limitation. Lovejoy v Whipple, 18 Vt 379.

Sunday school. A school providing religious instruction on Sunday, usually conducted in a church. A religious meeting within the meaning of a statute denouncing the disturbance of such a meeting. 24 Am J2d Disturb M § 2.

Sunday walking. Taking a walk for exercise, or recreation, not within a Sunday law which prohibits unnecessary walking on Sunday. Sullivan v Maine Central R. Co. 82 Me 196, 19 A 169.

sun parlor. A glass-inclosed room, often a porch, exposed to the sun. 20 Am J2d Cov § 257.

sunstroke. A severe disturbance of the body, caused by excessive exposure to the sun or even to artificial heat, resulting in convulsion and coma. Anno: 117 ALR 740; 36 ALR2d 1105.

An exhaustive search of the authorities appears to make it clear that the term may be applied with propriety to a condition produced by artificial heat as well as by the heat of the sun, and that the best usage warrants it; that such condition is comprehended within the ordinary meaning of the word wherever it is used with care and precision, whether in technical scientific treatises, or in works designed for the general reader. Continental Casualty Co. v Johnson, 74 Kan 129, 85 P 545.

sun time. Same as solar time.

suo genere. See in suo genere.

suo nomine. In his own name.

suo periculo. At his own risk.

super. Prefix: Over; above; higher in rank. Noun: One having a non-speaking part in a play. Slang for superior, also for superintendent.

superadded liability. A personal liability, otherwise known as double liability, once imposed quite generally in this country by constitutional or statutory provisions upon stockholders in banks or business corporations, such being a liability of a stockholder for debts or obligations of the banking or other corporation to the extent of the par value of the stock held by him. 10 Am J2d Banks § 73; 19 Am J2d Corp § 778.

At the present time, in practically all American jurisdictions, constitutional and statutory provisions imposing such liability for the general debts incurred by corporations, including banking corporations, either have been abolished or a constitutional or statutory provision declares that stockholders shall not be individually liable as such otherwise than for the unpaid shares owned by them. 19 Am J2d Corp § 775.

super altum mare. On the high sea.

superatione pasturae. See de superatione pasturae.

supercargo. A person employed by a commercial company or merchant to take charge of a cargo exported by the company or merchant to a foreign country or countries, to sell the goods there to the best advantage, and to purchase proper commodities to relade the ship on its return voyage. 48 Am J1st Ship § 484.

superconception. Conception by a woman already pregnant; also known as "superfoetation."

superficiarius. (Latin.) A term of the civil law for tenant under a lease for ground rent.

superficies. (Civil law.) The surface; anything erected upon and attached to the soil so as to become a part of the land.
See in superficie.

Superficies solo cedit. (Civil law.) Anything built into the land goes with the land.

Superflua non nocent. Superfluous things do not harm; superfluity does not prejudice.

superfluous allegations. See surplusage.

superfoetation. Same as superconception. superhuman. Above man. Having powers beyond those of man.

[1240]

See irresistible superhuman cause.

superintend. To act as a superintendent. To exercise the power of superintendence.

superintendence. Over sight, inspection, supervision. Moffitt v Asheville, 103 NC 237, 9 SE 695. Care and oversight for the purpose of direction, and with authority to direct. The act of superintending.

"The word seems properly to imply the exercise of some authority or control over the person or thing subjected to oversight." Dantzler v De Bardeleben Coal & Iron Co. 101 Ala 309, 14 So 10.

superintendent. A corporate officer usually in charge of one of the several departments of the business. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1174. A representative of an employer, whose principal duty is that of superintendence of the workmen.

superintendent of banks. A state officer appointed and invested with power to license banks, supervise the conduct of the banking business within the jurisdiction, and liquidate failed banks. 10 Am J2d Banks § 17.

superintendent of highways. A state or municipal officer having and exercising powers and duties in reference to the establishment, construction, and maintenance of highways and streets.

superintendent of hospital. The person in charge of the operation of a hospital. 26 Am J1st Hospit § 8.

superintendent of public instruction. See state superintendent of public instruction; superintendent of schools.

superintendent of schools. An officer employed by a board of education, in charge of the work of the public schools in a city. In some jurisdictions, a county officer who maintains a general supervision over the public schools of the county.

See state superintendent of public instruction.

superintendent of streets. A municipal officer in charge of work upon the streets, whether construction or maintenance.

superintending control. Same as supervisory jurisdiction.

superior body. The body to which a local lodge or benefit society owes allegiance. 36 Am J2d Frat O § 35.

superior court. A term applied to courts of general jurisdiction generally. In some jurisdictions, the title of a court of general jurisdiction; in others, the title of an appellate court; in still others, the title of a municipal or county court.

superior force. An act of God. A fortuitous event. A force majeure. A force which man is not able to resist, in fact, a force which man can neither foresee nor prevent. Lehman, Stern & Co. v Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & S.S. Co. 115 La 1, 38 So 873 (definition in Louisiana Code of 1825).

superior lien. A prior lien. Gilman v Jones, 87 Ala 691, 5 So 785, 7 So 48.

superior servant rule. The common-law rule that an employee assumes the risk of the negligence of his superior fellow servant in directing employees, the operation of machinery, and the conduct of the work, to the same extent that he assumes the risk of the negligence of fellow laborers employed with him in the performance of the work. 35 Am J1st M & S § 364.

As promulgated by the supreme court of Ohio, the rule was that, where one servant was placed, by his master, in a position of subordination to another, and subjected to his orders and control, and such inferior servant, without fault, and while engaged in the discharge of his duties, was injured by the negligence of the superior servant, the master was liable for such injury; and this was true even though, at the time of the injury, the superior servant was performing the duties of a common workman. Moore v Dublin Cotton Mills, 127 Ga 609, 56 SE 839.

superior title. A title which will prevail in law or equity as against another asserted title, lien, or interest.

superior use. The principle under which property devoted to one public use is subject to condemnation for another of superior rank in respect of public necessity. 26 Am J2d Em D § 90.

supermarket. A business establishment, essentially of the modern age, consisting of a large, sometimes gigantic, store stocked with food of all kinds and varieties, quantities of all items of goods and merchandise found in ordinary grocery stores, some articles of hardware, even some articles of clothing, and operating under a self-help plan, the customers taking the packages and articles from the shelf or bin, and paying for them at a place near the exit known as a check-out.

supernatural. That which occurs beyond the experience, knowledge, comprehension, and understanding of man. That which occurs beyond the powers of nature as such are known to man.

superonerare. To surcharge.

See surcharge.

superoneratio. A surcharging.

See surcharge.

supersede. To remove in making way for another. To drop from use and replace.

supersedeas. A suspension of the power to issue an execution on a judgment or decree from which an appeal or proceeding in error has been taken; or, if a writ of execution has issued, a prohibition emanating from the appellate court against the execution of the writ, in other words, an auxiliary process designed to supersede the enforcement of the judgment of the court below brought up for review. 4 Am J2d A & E § 364. The effect of an appeal, writ of error, or certiorari, in suspending the enforcement of the judgment against which the appeal, writ of error, or certiorari is directed.

supersedeas bond. A bond required upon obtaining supersedeas, conditioned to protect the interest of the appellee or defendant in error. 4 Am J2d A & E § 369. A bond given by a party appealing from a judgment to stay execution thereon pending the appeal.

superseded pleading. A pleading replaced by an amended or substituted pleading. 41 Am J1st Pl § 202.

supersedendo. See de supersedendo.

supersedere. To supersede; to stay.

superseding cause. Same as intervening cause.

super se susceperunt. They supported, defended, or undertook.

superstitious uses. Uses such as those providing for masses for the welfare of the souls of the dead, which were held not to be strictly charitable uses. See 2 Bl Comm 273. See also, Harrison v Brophy, 59 Kan 1, 51 P 883.

supersurface use. The use of the space above a highway by abutting owners for private purposes. 25 Am J1st High § 198.

See airspace.

Supervacuum esset leges condere, nisi esset qui leges tueretur. It would be superfluous to make laws, unless those laws, when made, were to be enforced. Chisholm v Georgia (US) 2 Dall 419, 464, 1 L Ed 440, 460.

supervening cause. See intervening cause.

supervening negligence. See intervening cause; last clear chance.

supervise. To exercise oversight. To keep under inspection.

See superintendence.

supervising commissioner. The person before whom a deposition is taken, acting under a commission. 23 Am J2d Dep § 91.

supervising officer. The person before whom a deposition is taken, including a person acting under a commission as well as an independent public officer. 23 Am J2d Dep § 91.

Supervision of Trustees for Charitable Purposes Act. One of the uniform laws. 9 CULA Supp; 15 Am J2d Char § 114.

supervisor. In some jurisdictions, the title of a member of a county board. As defined by the Labor Management Relations Act, an individual having authority, in the interest of the employer, to hire, transfer, suspend, layoff, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward, or discipline other employees, or responsibility to direct them, or to adjust their grievances, or effectively to recommend such action if, in connection with the foregoing the exercise of such authority requires the use of independent judgment. 29 USC § 152(3)(11); 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 205.

See board of supervisors.

supervisor of highways. A state or local officer in charge of construction and maintenance of highways.

supervisory employee. A superintendent, foreman, or supervisor.

supervisory jurisdiction. A kind of original jurisdiction frequently conferred upon appellate courts, especially the highest court of the jurisdiction, in the nature of superintending control over inferior courts, exercised sometimes by making rules for inferior courts and enforcing those rules, and at other times by compelling or prohibiting action by the inferior court. 20 Am J2d Cts §§ 111 et seq. The control exercised in some jurisdictions by a court over executive or administrative officers and boards who exercise judicial functions incidentally. 1 Am J2d Admin L § 21.

supervisory writ. A writ such as certiorari, mandamus, or prohibition issued by a court having constitutional power to exercise a superintending control over inferior tribunals in order to keep such inferior tribunals within the bounds of their proper jurisdiction.

See supervisory jurisdiction.

super visum corporis. On a view of the body. 18 Am J2d Corn § 11.

super visum vulneris. Upon a view of the wound.

supper money. An allowance made an employee working overtime.

supplement. Verb: To add to a published work for the purpose of giving additional and later material. Noun: A publication, usually issued periodically, supplying additional and later material to an original publication.

supplemental. Added to supply a deficiency, or defect.

supplemental account. An account required of a guardian for the correction of errors in his prior accounting. 25 Am J1st G & W § 160.

supplemental act. Same as supplemental statute.

supplemental affidavit. An affidavit filed by the creditor in attachment in addition to the affidavit upon which the writ was issued, setting forth further facts in support of the application for the writ. 6 Am J2d Attach § 275.

supplemental answer. See supplemental pleading.

supplemental assessment. An additional special assessment for the payment of a local improvement, required because of the insufficiency of the original assessment. 48 Am J1st Spec A § 150.

supplemental bill. A pleading in equity which is supplemental or additional to, and filed in aid or support of, an original bill or complaint. Rebello v Cardoso, 81 RI 360, 103 A2d 80. A pleading in equity which has the function of supporting the cause of suit existing when the original bill was filed. Bethlehem Fabricators v H. D. Watts Co. 286 Mass 556, 190 NE 828, 93 ALR 1124.

supplemental brief. An additional brief on appeal filed by consent of court or pursuant to rules of court. 5 Am J2d A & E § 690.

supplemental deed. A deed to the purchaser at a tax sale in substitution for an original which is defective or invalid. 51 Am J1st Tax § 1087.

supplemental injunction. An injunction issued in aid of an action before the court for the purpose of protecting its jurisdiction or making its judgment effective. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 15. An injunction granted by way of aiding an action or proceeding in another court in preserving the existing status until the case has been disposed of in the other court. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 16.

supplemental levy. A levy made by the officer to whom a writ of attachment is directed, after a prior levy by him under the writ, such additional levy being necessary to satisfy the writ. 6 Am J2d Attach § 294.

supplemental petition. A petition asserting matters arising subsequent to the filing of the petition, for example, matters arising after the filing of a petition for certiorari. Lavore v Industrial Acci. Corn. 28 Cal App 2d 488, 82 P2d 738.

supplemental pleading. A pleading of new matter in support of an original complaint, bill, declaration, or petition. Jenkins v International Bank, 127 US 484, 32 L Ed 189, 8 S Ct 1186. A pleading bringing to the notice of the court matters occurring since the filing or service of the original pleading. 41 Am J1st Pl § 261.

An answer consisting merely of an addition to the original answer of the defendant, which original answer had contained all the denials necessary to put in issue the material allegations of the complaint, was a supplemental answer and not an amended one. Yeatman v Patrician, 144 Wash 241, 257 P 622.

See supplemental bill.

supplemental proceeding. See supplementary proceeding.

supplemental remedy. See extraordinary remedies; supplementary proceeding.

supplemental statute. A statute intended to improve an existing statute by adding something thereto without changing the original text. 50 Am J1st Stat §3.

supplemental surety. One who stands as surety for another who is himself only a surety. 50 Am J1st Suret § 5.

supplemental tax. An additional inheritance tax imposed by way of correcting error in the omission of property made in calculating the amount of the tax. Anno: 64 ALR 1283.

supplementary. Same as supplemental.

supplementary proceeding. A proceeding for the enforcement of a judgment where the ordinary means of enforcement by execution is unavailable or unavailing, sometimes regarded as a proceeding in the original action, at other times as a civil action or proceeding in itself, whereunder the plaintiff is enabled to examine the judgment debtor and third persons for the purpose of obtaining information concerning property owned by the debtor which may be applied in payment of the judgment. 30 Am J2d Exec §§ 774 et seq.

suppletory oath. See oath suppletory.

supplicate. To petition in an earnest and humble manner.

supplicatio. (Civil law.) Same as duplicatio.

supplicavit. He hath supplicated.

See writ of supplicavit.

supplicium. (Civil law.) The death penalty.

supplies. Available aggregate of things needed or demanded; anything yielded or afforded to meet a want. Anderson v United States Fidelity & G. Co. 44 NM 483, 104 P2d 906, 129 ALR 1084 (word appearing in performance bond).

supply. Verb: To furnish. To meet a need. Noun: A substitute serving temporarily, particularly in teaching school.

See bill of supply; supplies.

support. Verb: To carry the weight of something. To comfort and sustain. To furnish the necessities of life for maintenance in a proper manner, not merely the necessities for a bare maintenance. Anno: 13 ALR 689 (term appearing in workmen's compensation statute). To provide the means of maintenance of a person. 50 Am J1st Sup Per § 2. Noun: Articles for the sustenance of a person, as food, clothing, and other conveniences, even medicines and medical services. 50 Am J1st Sup Per § 2. Maintenance, subsistence, or income for the sustenance of one person or a family. Wall v Williams, 93 NC 327. As used in a statute exempting from execution food necessary for the "support of the debtor and his family" for a specified period:—provisions on hand sufficient to provide for the necessary use of the family for the prescribed period; usually not inclusive of such provisions as are necessary to provide for persons the debtor is under no obligation to support. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 78.

support bond. See bond for support.

supporting affidavit. An affidavit in support of a motion, for example, a motion for a continuance. 17 Am 12d Contin § 44. An affidavit in support of an application for injunction, particularly a preliminary or temporary injunction. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 264.

supporting papers. Affidavits in support of a motion. 37 Am J1st Motions § 14.

support of building. A right of an owner and a corresponding liability of an adjoining owner under grant, express or implied, or under reservation, sometimes existing as a prescriptive right, although not included in the right of lateral support and confined to the condition of things at the time of the acquisition of the right. 1 Am J2d Adj L §§ 4042.

See lateral support; subjacent support.

support of child. A moral obligation; a principle of natural law, as well as the common law, to maintain and care for one's minor child. 39 Am J1st P & C § 35.

Support of Dependents Act. One of the uniform laws. 23 Am J2d Desert § 125.

support of family. The duty of a husband, arising out of the marital relationship and imposed by law, to provide wife and family with a place of abode, the necessities and comforts of life, which are suitable when considered in reference to the particular estate, social rank, and condition of the husband and wife, and the means and earning power of the husband. 26 Am J1st H & W §§ 337, 338.

support of land. See lateral support; subjacent support.

support of person. See support.

support of wife. A duty arising out of the marital relationship and imposed by law which continues during the existence of the relationship. 26 Am J1st H & W § 338.

See support of family.

support order. An order for support of wife or child, especially an order under the Uniform Desertion and Nonsupport Act. 23 Am J2d Desert §§ 48 et seq. An allowance, in addition to alimony, granted a divorced wife, for the maintenance of children placed in her custody by the judgment or decree of divorce. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 827.

support trust. A protective trust wherein the interest of the beneficiary is protected against his grantees or assignees and against his creditors by limiting his interest to that which is necessary for his support and education. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 163.

supposition. Something regarded as true, without proof.

In the law of evidence, an inference is a deduction from the facts proved and differs widely from a "supposition," which requires no such premise for its justification. Continental Casualty Co. v Paul, 209 Ala 166, 95 So 814, 30 ALR 802, 804.

suppress. To restrain. To put down by force.

To suppress means to prevent, and does not mean to license or sanction the act to be suppressed. Schwuchow v Chicago, 68 Ill 444, 448.

See suppression.

suppressio mensis. Suppression of the menses.

suppression. The subduing of a movement by force. Restraint. Concealment. Abolition.

There is a distinction between the suppression of a fact and mere silence. Where there is an obligation to speak, a failure to speak will constitute the suppression of a fact; but, where there is no obligation to speak, silence cannot be termed suppression. Chicora Fertilizer Co. v Dunan, 91 Md 144, 46 A 347.

suppression of bids. See chilling bids; stifling bids.

suppression of competition. A form of monopolistic practice. 36 Am J1st Monop etc § 6.

suppression of deposition. A remedy obtained on motion raising an objection to the use of a deposition on the ground of defects or irregularities in the proceeding for and the taking of a deposition. 23 Am J2d Dep § 130.

suppression of evidence. Relief obtained upon motion in preventing evidence illegally secured from being introduced in a case. 29 Am J2d Ev § 425. The failure of a party to testify or to produce available witnesses, his destruction or spoliation of evidence. 29 Am J2d Ev §§ 175 et seq.

To determine whether there has been a suppression of evidence, by the state in a criminal prosecution, it is necessary to consider the facts and circumstances in each case in which the question arises. If the evidence in question has no probative value, is merely cumulative, or is equally available to the accused, there can certainly be no duty on the prosecution to disclose such evidence to the accused in order to avoid what would otherwise amount in practical effect to concealment or suppression. Re Curtis (DC Dist Col) 36 F Supp 408.

suppression of the menses. Stopping of the menses. Sometimes the exciting cause of temporary insanity. Smith v Smith, 47 Miss 211, 217.

suppression of will. The failure of a person having the will of another in his custody to produce it for probate on notice of the death of the testator. The failure of a person having the custody of a will because of the delivery of the instrument to him for custody and safekeeping, to produce the instrument for probate after the testator's death or within a certain time thereafter, provided he has notice of the death. 57 Am J1st Wills § 750.

suppressio veri. Suppression of the truth.

Suppressio veri, expressio falsi. The suppression of that which is true amounts to the expression of that which is false. Addington v Allen (NY) 11 Wend 374, 417.

Suppressio veri, suggestio falsi. The suppression of truth is the expression of falsehood. Paul v Hadley (NY) 23 Barb 521, 525.

supra. Above; above mentioned; in addition to.

See ubi supra.

supra dictus. As stated above; as before stated.

supra protest. See acceptance for honor; acceptance supra protest; payment for honor.

supremacy. See act of supremacy; supremacy clause.

supremacy clause. The provision in Article VI, Clause 2, of the United States Constitution that "this Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

suprema voluntas. The last will.

Supreme Court. In some jurisdictions the highest appellate court; in other jurisdictions a court of general jurisdiction.

Supreme Court of the United States. See United States Supreme Court.

supreme executive power. Such power as will secure an efficient execution of the laws, which is the peculiar province of the executive department, to be accomplished, however, in the manner and by the methods and within the limitations prescribed by the constitution and statutes of the state. State ex rel. Stubbs v Dawson, 86 Kan 180, 119 P 360.

supreme law of the land. See supremacy clause.

sur. On; upon.

surcharge a common. To disturb a common by putting more cattle therein than the pasture and herbage will sustain, or more than one so doing has a right to do.

The other owners are thereby injured by being deprived of their respective portions, or by contracting them into a smaller compass. See 3 Bl Comm 237.

surcharge. An additional amount added to the usual charge. An exaction.

surcharge and falsify. To disprove a stated account in respect of particular items by showing the inclusion of an item by error (surcharging) and by showing error respecting the amount of an item. (Falsifying.) Rehill v McTague, 114 Pa 82.

surcharging guardian. Holding a guardian responsible for money or property of the ward lost by reason of negligence or failure of duty, or which the guardian might have recovered and received by the exercise of reasonable diligence and ordinary prudence, also for his failure to invest funds of the ward so as to obtain income therefrom. 25 Am J1st G & W § 174.

sur disclaimer. On disclaimer. See 3 Bl Comm 233.

surety. A person who engages under a contract of suretyship to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another. 50 Am J1st Suret §§ 2, 3. For some purposes, inclusive of a guarantor. UCC § 1 -201(40).

As applied to persons, the word has an established and well-known meaning in the minds of most people, and indicates an obligation to stand for the sum absolutely, unless discharged by the supine negligence of the obligor after notice. It is in broad contrast with the word "guaranty" which imports a conditional liability, that is, liability if due steps are taken against the principal debtor. Marberger v Pott, 16 Pa 9.

See suretyship.

surety company. A corporation engaged in the business of acting as a surety or guarantor on bonds, undertakings, or contracts, for compensation known as a premium. 50 Am J1st Suret § 312.

surety company agent. The agent of a surety company, comparable in reference to the scope of his authority to the agent of an insurance company. 50 Am J1st Suret § 314.

surety company contract. A contract wherein the surety is a compensated surety, that is, a surety company. 50 Am J1st Suret § 313.

surety contract. A contract of suretyship.

See suretyship.

surety of the peace. A bond or undertaking to keep the peace.

suretyship. A contractual relation, resulting from a primary, original, absolute, and unconditional engagement, whereby one person, the surety, engages to be answerable for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, the principal. Madison County Farmers Asso. v American Employers' Ins. Co. (CA8 Ark) 209 F2d 581, 42 ALR2d 1153; Welch v Walsh, 177 Mass 555, 59 NE 440.

While the contract of a surety is, in a sense, accessory or collateral to a valid principal obligation contracted by another person, either contemporaneously or previously, his obligation to the creditor or promisee of the principal is direct, primary, and absolute. 50 Am J1st Suret § 2.

It is the essence of the contract that there be a subsisting valid obligation of a principal debt. Without a principal there can be no surety. First Nat. Bank v Boxley, 129 Okla 159, 264 P 184, 64 ALR 588.

The vital difference between the contract of a surety and that of a guarantor is that a surety is charged as an original promisor, while the engagement of the guarantor is a collateral undertaking. A surety is a party to the principal obligation, undertaking together with the principal debtor that it shall be performed, while the guarantor is not a party to the principal obligation. 24 Am J1st Guar § 11.

surface. Verb: To apply to street, highway, or driveway a top covering or layer of durable material of substantial depth or thickness. Anno: 84 ALR 1158. Noun: The superficial part of the land; the part of land capable of being used for agricultural purposes. Anno: 31 ALR 1530. Within the meaning of the right to subjacent support:-any stratum above the subjacent stratum in question, including any higher stratum as well as the actual surface of the soil. 1 Am J2d Adj L § 77. In mining law, the soil lying over the minerals. Not merely a geometrical surface, but whatever earth, soil, or land lies above and superincumbent on a mine. Clinchfield Coal Corp. v Compton, 148 Va 437, 139 SE 308, 55 ALR 1376. A somewhat elastic term, as it appears in an oil lease, the meaning of which is to be determined according to such collateral matters as the situation of the parties, the business in which they are engaged, the purposes to be accomplished, and etc. Ramage v South Penn Oil Co. 94 W Va 81, 118 SE 162, 31 ALR 1509.

surface deed. A deed designed to convey the surface of the land alone, not carrying the minerals below the surface. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 31. A matter of reservation or exception of mineral rights. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 29.

surface measurement. Following the surface of the ground in measuring land; running the chain or tape at the surface up and down hill, without stretching it from the top of one acclivity to the top of another. 12 Am J2d Bound § 58. A method to be compared with horizontal measurement.

surface of land. See surface.

surface stream. A stream which flows in a permanent, distinct, and well-defined channel from the lands of one owner to those of another. Tampa Waterworks Co. v Cline, 37 Fla 586, 20 So 780.

surface water. Water derived from falling rain or melting snow, or rising to the surface in springs, and diffused over the surface of the ground. 56 Am J1st Water § 65. Inclusive of flood water severed from the main current and spreading out over lower ground. 56 Am J1st Water § 92.

surgeon. A person who heals by means of manual operations. 41 Am J1st Phys & S § 2. A physician who specializes in surgery.

surgery. A specialized branch of the art of healing, limited to manual operations performed with instruments or appliances, by a legally qualified physician. Joyner v State, 181 Miss 245, 179 So 573, 115 ALR 954. Therapy of a distinctly operative kind. Stewart v Raab, 55 Minn 20, 56 NW 256.

See medical or surgical treatment.

surgical aid. A resident physician or interne assisting the surgeon in performing an operation. "Relief pertaining to surgery or used in surgery."

In its ordinary significance, the term is not limited to the personal service of the surgeon, but includes all the means and instrumentalities used in surgery which will help to effect a cure. Olmstead v Lamphier, 93 Conn 20, 104 A 488, 7 ALR 542, 544.

surgical nurse. See nurse.

surname. A person's last name. The family name. 38 Am J1st Name § 3. The name continued from parent to child.

Originally there were no surnames but the insufficiency of a given name to distinguish an individual led necessarily to the adoption of surnames. In the fourth year of Edward IV (1464), the first statute requiring the use of surnames came into existence. 38 Am J1st Name § 3.

surplus. That which is not needed; that which is left over. Lawrence v American Surety Co. 263 Mich 586, 249 NW 3, 88 ALR 535. A fund constituting part of the capitalization of a corporation, accumulated by profits, earnings, and other increments. A fund constituting part of the capital structure of a bank, built up by earnings. The property or fund which a corporation has in excess of its capital stock, and above all its debts and liabilities. State v Yard, 42 NJL 357, 359. The amount to be divided between the survivors under the tontine plan of insurance, comprising the funds remaining after the payment of benefits, expenses, and the intermediate apportionment of profits. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 16. As applied to a trust fund:—an amount in excess of the capital or corpus of the trust. Alvis v Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Asso. 95 Cal App 2d 118, 212 P2d 608, 36 ALR2d 1209.

surplusage. Words in an instrument which add nothing to the force and legal effect of the instrument. 11 Am J2d B & N § 198. Superfluous or unnecessary allegations or words in an indictment or information. 27 Am J1st Indict § 109. Matter included in a pleading which is not essential to the statement of a cause of action or defense. 41 Am J1st Pl § 51.

surplusage does not vitiate. A maxim. State v Richards, 32 W Va 348, 9 SE 245.

Surplusagium non nocet. Surplusage does not harm; surplusage does not prejudice.

surplus earnings. An amount owned by a corporation, over and above its capital and actual liabilities. People ex rel. Manhattan Fire Ins. CO. v Commissioners of Taxes, 76 NY 64, 74.

surplus fund. A fund remaining after the accomplishment of the purpose for which an appropriation of public funds was made. Anno: 70 ALR 431. Funds not necessary to be kept on hand in cash for immediate use or ordinary demands have been held to be surplus funds of the state. See Lawrence v American Surety Co. 263 Mich 586, 249 NW 3, 88 ALR 535.

surplus line broker. An insurance broker whose business activities embrace variable risks and kinds of insurance. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 77.

surplus money proceeding. A proceeding in a mortgage foreclosure to determine rights in the part of the proceeds of foreclosure sale not required for satisfaction of the mortgage and payment of costs. 37 Am J1st Mtg § 873.

surplus personal estate. That part of the personal property in the estate of a decedent which remains after the payment of expenses of administration and debts, including taxes, for which the decedent was liable or for which the estate is liable. Weinberg v Safe Deposit & Trust Co. 198 Md 539, 85 A2d 50, 37 ALR2d 188.

surplus proceeds. That part of the proceeds of a sale on execution not required in satisfaction of the judgment. Anno: 97 ALR 1003.

See surplus money proceeding.

surplus property. An excess of property seized under a writ of attachment or execution over the amount required to satisfy the indebtedness of the defendant. 6 Am J2d Attach § 145; 30 Am J2d Exec § 230. Goods purchased for use by the armed forces, the need for which has disappeared with the termination of hostilities and the release or discharge of military personnel.

surplus water. A supply of water in excess of that to which a canal proprietor is lawfully entitled for purposes of navigation. 13 Am J2d Can § 16. Water flowing over lands from adjoining premises upon which it had been spread for irrigation purposes. 30 Am J Rev ed brig § 26.

surprise. Astonishment by the unexpected. Aroused by the unusual. The condition in which a party to an action finds himself, contrary to his reasonable expectation, through no fault or neglect of his own, and to his probable injury. Gidionsen v Union Depot Railway Co. 129 Mo 392, 401, 31 SW 800. A ground for relief only where accompanied by fraud or circumvention. Citizens' National Bank v Branden, 19 ND 489, 126 NW 102; McDaniels v Bank of Rutland, 29 Vt 230.

surrebutter. A plaintiff's pleading in response to the defendant's rebutter. 41 Am J1st Pl § 181.

surrejoinder. A pleading by the plaintiff in response to the defendant's rejoinder. 41 Am J1st Pl § 181.

surrender. Yielding possession. A yielding up of an estate for life or years, to him who has the immediate estate in reversion or remainder, wherein the estate for life or years may drown by the mutual agreement. Schieffelin v Carpenter (NY) 15 Wend 400, 405. A giving up of something, as where a subscriber gives back to the corporation stock for which he has not paid the subscription price. Anno: 101 ALR 232. The relinquishment of one's right to an invention, thereby dedicating it to the public. 40 Am J1st Pat § 61. A condition of recovery of payment upon an instrument. 12 Am J2d B & N § 1025 (surrender of instrument.) A yielding of one's person as where an accused surrenders to an officer of the law.

surrender by bail. The turning over or delivery of a prisoner who had been released on bail to the custody of the law, by his bondsmen or sureties.

surrender by operation of law. A surrender by a tenant which results from acts which imply mutual consent independently of the expressed intention of the parties that their acts shall have that effect,

Such a surrender is by way of estoppel; and the relinquishment of possession by the tenant and the resumption of possession by the landlord operate, as a general rule, as a surrender by operation of law. 32 Am J1st L & T §905.

See surrender in law.

surrender charge. A charge imposed by a life insurance company in determining cash-surrender value, or the amount of paid-up, or extended insurance. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 626.

surrender clause. The provision in an oil or gas lease whereby the lessee is given the privilege of surrendering his rights and terminating his liability upon the giving of a stipulated notice or the payment of a designated sum of money, or, in some cases, without either of these formalities. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 78. The clause of a life insurance policy which provides certain options for the insured upon his surrender of the policy. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 619.

surrenderee. The cestui que use; that is, the person for whose use a surrender was made by a tenant to his lord. See 2 Bl Comm 366.

surrenderer. One who surrenders. A tenant who surrendered his copyhold estate to his lord.

"Till the admittance of the cestui que use, the lord taketh notice of the surrenderer as his tenant." See 2 Bl Comm 368.

surrender in deed. A surrender effected by means of a deed from the surrenderer to the surrenderee.

surrender in fact. A surrender by tenant for life or years to the remainderman or reversioner, according to the apparent intent of the parties. Schieffelin v Carpenter (NY) 15 Wend 400, 405.

The effect is to pass the estate of the tenant to the landlord, extinguishing the rent reserved. It is a contractual act which occurs only through the consent of both parties, evidenced by express agreement or an unequivocal act which implies that they have agreed to consider the surrender as being made. To show acceptance of surrender of a leasehold by implication, there must be evidence of acts so inconsistent with the terms of the lease that the relation of landlord and tenant established by reletting could not be enforced under the terms of the first lease. Ralph v Deiley, 293 Pa 90, 141 A 640, 61 ALR 763.

surrender in law. A surrender of a lease to the reversioner by accepting from the latter a new lease of the same premises or a part thereof. Schieffelin v Carpenter (NY) 15 Wend 400, 405.

See surrender by operation of law.

surrender of charter. The dissolution or termination of the existence of a corporation by a formal act on the part of the corporation in yielding its charter to the sovereignty under which the corporation was created and the acceptance of the same by the government. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1591.

surrender of franchise. The termination of a franchise by its voluntary surrender by the grantee, even a surrender presumed from circumstances indicating abandonment. 36 Am J2d Franch § 47.

See surrender of charter.

surrender of policy. The cancellation of an insurance policy completed upon delivery of the instrument by the insured to the insurer. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 400.

surrender of preference. The yielding by the creditor of a bankrupt to the trustee in bankruptcy of a conveyance, assignment, lien, transfer, or encumbrance, which is void or voidable under the Bankruptcy Act, as a condition of the allowance of the claim of such creditor. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 485.

surrender of tenancy. A yielding of a tenancy to the owner of the reversion or remainder, the effect being an extinguishment of the tenancy. 32 Am J1st L & T § 900.

surrenderor. See surrenderer.

surreptitious. Clandestine. Secret. Kept secret, especially for a fraudulent purpose.

surrogate. A deputy chancellor who presides in English ecclesiastical courts; the title of the judge who presides in a probate court in certain states of the Union.

surrogate's court. A probate court. 20 Am J2d Cts § 32.

See probate court.

surrounding circumstances. The circumstances surrounding a transaction, an act, or an accident involved in an action or proceeding.

The surrounding circumstances, which, in connection with the happening of an accident, may permit an inference of culpability on the part of defendant under the rule of res ipsa loquitur, refer, not to circumstances directly tending to show lack of care, but only to neutral matters of control and management by defendant which, when explained, may appear to be entirely consistent with due care. Plumb v Richmond Light & R. Co. 233 NY 285, 133 NE 504, 25 ALR 685.

sursisa. Same as sursise.

sursise. Negligence; default.

sursumredditio. A surrender, the yielding up of a copyhold estate by the tenant into the hands of the lord. See 2 Bl Comm 365.

surtax. An additional tax imposed on income already taxed. A tax at an increased rate on income exceeding a specified amount. Van Dyke's Appeal, 217 Wis 528, 259 NW 700, 98 ALR 1332.

surveillance. Oversight. Observation, especially of a person suspected of criminal activities.

survey. The determination of the boundary or boundaries of land. Bunger v Grimm, 142 Ga 448, 83 SE 200. The map, plat, or other memorandum of the determination of a land boundary by a surveyor. 12 Am J2d Bound § 99. An architect's examination of premises in making recommendations for construction, preliminary sketches, and layouts. 5 Am J2d Arch § 3. An examination of a vessel taken as a prize of war for the purposes of an appraisal leading to a sale before an adjudication in a court of prize. 56 Am J1st War § 181.

The word "survey" and the word "map" or "profile" are sometimes used as convertible terms, but a distinction has been made between books of surveys and maps or draughts of land. And generally, when the term "survey" is used in relation to the location of proprietary rights, it is understood to mean a description, in words and figures, of the lands located. See Atty. Gen. v Stevens (NY) 1 Saxton Ch 369.

See call; Congressional Survey; course; range.

surveyor. An officer in the customs service. 21 Am J2d Cust D §§ 64, 65. A person who engages in the occupation of measuring land surfaces, establishing land boundaries, etc. Doe v Jones, 327 Ill 387, 158 NE 703, 55 ALR 303.

surveyor of the port. See surveyor.

survival. Continuation of life.

survival acts. Statutes which provide for the survival of a cause of action notwithstanding the death of a party. 1 Am J2d Abat & R §§ 51 et seq.

survival of cause of action. A cause of action remaining effective notwithstanding death of plaintiff or defendant. 1 Am J2d Abat & R §§ 51 et seq.

survive. To outlive another person or live beyond a designated date or the happening of a designated event. 57 Am J2d Wills § 1396.

See survival of cause of action.

survive to the remaining children. Words of purchase.

The expression as used in a testamentary provision that in the event of death of any of the testator's children for whose benefit a trust is created, without issue living at the time of such child's death, the share of such child in the income and capital of the trust shall survive to the remaining children above named share and share alike, imports that the accretion upon the death of one without issue living goes to the children then living, to the exclusion of the issue of a deceased child. Marbury v Bouse, 187 Md 106, 48 A2d 582, 166 ALR 1272, 1275.

surviving. See survival; survive; survivor.

surviving children. A familiar designation of beneficiaries under will or deed of trust.

In the absence of qualifying words, the term "surviving children" in a deed of trust to provide for the grantor's surviving children means all who survive the grantor or other designated person. Frosch v Walter, 228 US 109, 57 L Ed 750, 33 S Ct 494; Nass' Estate, 320 Pa 380, 182 A 401, 114 ALR 1.

surviving wife. A widow. For definition of term as it pertains to the rights of a woman, who married an injured workman, to compensation as his "surviving wife," under workmen's compensation acts, see Anno: 98 ALR 994.

survivor. One who outlives another person or persons of a group of which he was a part, or lives beyond a designated date or the happening of a designated event. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1396.

The vested or contingent character of a remainder to survivors frequently depends upon whether the survivorship relates to the death of the testator or grantor or to some other. Obviously, if words of survivorship relate to the period of distribution, generally the death of the life tenant, the remainder is contingent, since who will survive such time in order to take the remainder is uncertain until the time of the life tenant's death or other event. Survivorship is then a condition precedent to the vesting of a gift, and a remainder subject to a condition precedent is contingent. If the words of survivorship are held to refer to the time of the grant or of the death of the testator, or, in other words, to the time when the deed or will takes effect, the remainder may be vested, either absolutely or defeasibly, or the conditions of the limitation, other than survivorship, may render the remainder contingent, even though the persons who are to take are definitely ascertained. 28 Am J2d Est § 266.

survivorship. The fact of being a survivor, of outliving another person or other persons. A right incident to an estate in joint tenancy whereunder the entire estate, upon the death of a joint tenant, remains in the survivor or survivors. 20 Am J2d Coten § 3. A right incident to an estate by the entireties, so that upon the death of one of the spouses, the whole of the estate remains in the survivor. 26 Am J1st H & W § 82.

See presumption of survivorship; survivor; wife's right of survivorship.

survivorship annuity. An annuity for joint lives of two persons and for the life of the survivor. 4 Am J2d Annui § 6.

survivorship of joint tenants. See survivorship. susceptible. Ready to be persuaded. Easily influenced.

suspect. Verb: To entertain a suspicion of guilt. To hold a faint belief. To believe something, knowing the lack of proof to sustain the belief. Noun: One under suspicion of guilt of a crime.

suspends. A word of bad portent, quite familiar during the Great Depression, meaning that a bank has failed, that an examiner or other public officer has been appointed to take it over, or that it ceases or refuses to make payments in the ordinary course of business. UCC § 4-104(1)(k).

suspence. A state of uncertainty. See en suspence.

Suspendatur per collum. Let him be hanged by the neck.

These Latin words in their abbreviated form "sus. per coil.," were written opposite the name of a convict sentenced to be hanged in the calendar or list of all the prisoners' names, with their separate judgments in the margin. See 4 Bl Comm 403.

suspended. Temporarily inactive or inoperative; held in abeyance.

Such is its meaning in the constitutional provision that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall never be suspended. See Wisener v Burrell, 28 Okla 546, 118 P 999.

suspended sentence. See suspension of sentence.

suspension. A termination of an employee's service by the employer, usually for the purpose of an investigation to determine whether or not the employee should be retained in service. A break in the relationship of employer and employee consequent upon the employee's deviation from the employer's business. 35 Am J1st M & S § 555. A temporary but forced withdrawal of a civil service employee. 15 Am J2d Civ S § 34.

suspension of action. The status of an action following the death of a party but prior to the substitution of the representative of the deceased party or other person who succeeds to his interest. 1 Am J2d Abat & R § 47.

suspension of interest. The stopping of the running of interest on an obligation by tender which is refused or by something preventing the payment of the obligation other than the fault of the debtor. 30 Am J Rev ed Int § 51.

suspension of judgment. See opening judgment; stay of execution.

suspension of liquor license. A temporary deprivation of rights or privileges under a license to sell or deal in alcoholic beverages. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L§174.

suspension of member. A temporary deprivation of the rights and privileges of membership in a society. 36 Am J2d Frat O § 62. The lifting for the time of the name of a member of a non-profit corporation from the membership list and the annulment for the time of his rights as a member. 18 Am J2d Corp § 473.

suspension of payment. Failure to pay obligations because of want of financial ability.

The expression means something more than a failure of the maker of commercial paper to seek the holder and pay him. Business men well understand its meaning; there is the idea in it of a failure to pay from an inability to do so. It has been held in effect that a suspension of payment occurs where a person indebted to others is unable to meet his engagements with and to pay his creditors in full. McCormick & Co. v Gem State Oil & Products Co. 38 Idaho 470, 222 P 286, 34 ALR 867, 871.

See moratorium; suspends.

suspension of performance. An interruption in the performance of a contract whether by agreement of the parties or caused by supervening circumstances.

suspension of policy. The ineffectiveness of a policy of insurance for a period, such as for the time during which a forfeiture, later avoided, is in existence. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 734.

suspension of power of alienation. See rule against suspension of power of alienation.

suspension of pupil. Denying a school pupil the right of attendance, not permanently but for a stated period of time. 47 Am J1st Sch § 177.

suspension of sentence. The suspension of imposition of sentence after conviction or plea of guilty for determinate and reasonable period. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 552. Postponement of the judgment of the court temporarily or indefinitely, the conviction and the disabilities arising therefrom remaining and become operative when judgment is rendered. Ex parte Bates, 20 NM 542, 151 P 698; Buchanan, 146 NY 264, 40 NE 883, 886. Staying the execution of a sentence imposed upon plea of guilty or conviction of a criminal offense. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 558.

suspension of statute of limitations. The lifting of a statute of limitations from a cause of action because of certain circumstances such as disability of the plaintiff, the absence of the defendant from the state, concealment of cause of action, etc. 34 Am J1st Lim Ac §§ 186 et seq.

suspensive condition. A term of a contract whereby the obligation is not to take effect until the happening of a certain event. New Orleans v Texas & Pacific R. Co. 171 US 312, 43 L Ed 178, 18 S Ct 875 (quoting from the Louisiana Civil Code which is said to be similar to the Code Napoleon in such respect). In effect, a condition precedent.

suspenso. See in suspenso.

sus. per coil. See suspendatur per collum.

suspicion. The imagination of the existence of something without proof, upon very slight evidence or upon no evidence at all. Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railway Co. v Shieder, 88 Tex 152, 30 SW 902.

sustain. To uphold. To provide support. To endure; to undergo.

Within the meaning of the Federal income tax statute losses are "sustained" when the events definitely occur which give rise thereto. Brooks v United States (DC Pa) 32 F Supp 158.

sustaining demurrer. Upholding a demurrer. Deciding in favor of the demurrant.

A demurrer is sustained when an order of court is made to the effect that the demurrer is sustained and the order is entered upon the docket. See Kaufman v Buckley, 285 Mass 83, 188 NE 607.

sustenance. That which supports life; food; victuals; provisions; that necessary food and drink which is sufficient to support life and maintain health. Groves v State, 116 Ga 516, 42 SE 755.

Suum cuique incommodum ferendum est, potius quam de alterius commodis detrahendum. Each one must suffer his own inconvenience rather than take away the convenience of another. See 4 Bl Comm 31.

suum cuique tribuere. Unto each shall be rendered that which is his.

suus. His own.

s. v. An abbreviation of sub voce.

SW4. An abbreviation of a kind found in descriptions of real estate according to the government survey, standing for the Southwest Quarter, whether of a section or a quarter section of land.

swale. A depression in the ground, often wet or marshy. 56 Am J1st Water § 76.

swamp. Verb: To overcome; to overwhelm. To sink because filled with water. Noun: A marsh; a tract of wet land, usually partially covered by shallow waters. An area of land which is wet or marshy because depressed so as to receive the flow of surface waters or because of underground waters coming to the surface in spring. 56 Am J1st Water § 7.

As distinguished from overflowed lands, swamp lands are lands which require drainage to dispose of needless water or moisture on or in the lands, in order to make them fit for successful and useful cultivation. State ex ref. Ellis v Gerbing, 56 Fla 603, 47 So 353.

swampland. See swamp.

swap. A trade or exchange of property. 30 Am J2d Exch P § 1.

swear. To put a person under oath, that is, to administer an oath. To take an oath, that is, to put one's self under oath. To take God's name in vain; to curse.

As the word is used in the law of perjury, to swear means to state a fact or facts under the sanctity of an oath or affirmation administered by some duly qualified officer having authority to administer the oath in the particular proceeding or investigation in which the statement of the affiant is to be made. State v Dallagiovanna, 69 Wash 84, 124 P 209.

See cursing; false swearing; oath; public swearing.

swear in. To administer an oath to a person; to administer the oath of office to a person appointed to that office. Thalheim v State, 38 Fla 169, 189, 20 So 938.

See oath of office.

swearing the peace. Making a statement under oath of facts warranting the granting by the court of a supplicavit.

See supplicavit.

swearing witness. Putting a witness under oath. 58 Am J1st Witn § 549.

sweatbox. A prolonged and unremitting questioning of an accused, especially when accompanied by deprivation of refreshment, rest, or relief, for the purpose of extorting a confession from him. 29 Am J2d Ev § 550.

sweat cloth. A facetious expression for a gaming table, especially one used for throwing dice. United States v Smith (CC Dist Col) Cranch cc 659, F Cas No 16329.

sweating. The nefarious practice of abusing prisoners or persons suspected of possessing information to force them to confess or to tell what they know.

See sweatbox; third degree.

sweepstakes. A co test, especially a horse race, or game of chance in which the winner "sweeps in" or takes all the stakes wagered.

As defined by the American racing rules, a sweepstakes or stake is a race publicly declared open to all complying with its conditions, for which the prize is the sum of the stakes which the subscribers agree to pay for each horse nominated; and, if an additional sum of money, cup, plate, or other reward is offered to the winner, the race is still a sweepstakes, whatever may be the name given to such addition. Three subscribers, unless otherwise stipulated in its conditions, make a sweepstakes, and the race is not void so long as there is a horse qualified to start. Stone v Clay (CA7 Ill) 61 F 889, 890.

sweet cider. A nonintoxicating beverage made from the juice of apples.

swein. A freeholder in one of the king's forests. See 3 Bl Comm 72.

sweinmote court. A forest court held three times in each year before the verderors of the forest as judges and with sweins or freeholders of the forest as jurors, to inquire into grievances committed by forest officers and to try presentments certified from the court of attachments. See 3 Bl Comm 72.

swell. Verb: To increase in volume or size. To cause an increase, e.g. an increase in the damages for an injury. To be filled with emotion or the sense of one's own importance. Noun: A wave, particularly a large wave.

[1249]

swimming pool. A pool, especially an artificial, pool of water for the immersion of human beings; in plain words, a place for swimming. Gopalangio v Chicago, 23 111 2d 570, 179 NE2d 663, 92 ALR2d 1276. Sometimes a public place. 4 Am J2d Amuse § 50.

swindler. One who swindles.

See swindling.

swindling. The acquisition of property or an instrument representing a valuable right by means of some device or fraudulent representation with intent to appropriate such property or instrument or to destroy or impair the right of the owner therein. 32 Am J2d False P § 2.

As the words "swindling" and "cheating" are ordinarily used, they import a fraudulent causing of pecuniary or property loss. See United States v Cohn, 270 US 339, 346, 70 L Ed 616, 619, 46 S Ct 251.

The word is of German origin and of indefinite meaning. It does not import an indictable offense and is held to mean no more than the word "cheating," which does not impute a crime. Stevenson v Hayden, 2 Mass (2 Tyng) 406, 408.

The word has no legal or technical meaning, but it commonly implies that there has been recourse to petty and mean artifices for obtaining money, which may or may not be strictly illegal. The disappointed and vexed creditor not infrequently will apply the term "swindler" to a delinquent debtor, and an absconding debtor is not infrequently spoken of as having swindled his creditors. Hence the word does not per se import a crime. Cunningham v Baker, 104 Ala 160, 171, 16 So 68.

swine. Another term for hog.

swinging claim. The act of the owner of a mining claim in appropriating ground not within the limits of his claim. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 89.

swinging door. See revolving door.

switch. Verb: To change course. To change opinion or preference. To change the position of something. To move railroad cars from one track to another or from one place in a train to another place in a train. Noun: An instrumentality for opening or closing an electric circuit. Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v Nassau Electric R. Co. (CA2 NY) 107 F 277. A switch track of a railroad. A section of railroad track which may be moved a short distance by a lever so as to permit a train or cars to move from such track to another track.

See flying switch; frog; gravity switch; kicking cars; running switch; split switch.

switch box. A receptacle for electric switches, usually placed on a wall. 43 Am J1st Pub Util § 41.

switch connections. Switches available for moving the cars of one railroad line to another railroad line.

switch engine. A locomotive used only for switching and purposes incidental to the maintenance and operation of a railroad yard.

The distinction between a road engine and a switch engine, as they are known in railroading, is this: The road engine has a pilot in front. A yard or switch engine has a footboard, both front and rear, upon which the brakemen and switchmen step and stand while switching cars. A road engine is heavier, too heavy for switching conveniently and has no footboards. Prosser v Montana Cent. R. Co. 17 Mont 372, 43 P 81.

switching operations. See switch; switching service.

switching service. Also called transfer service,—the service rendered by a railroad company in switching cars for special benefit of shipper or consignee, either preceding or following a transportation service.

The term applies only to a shipment on which legal freight charges have already been earned, or are to be earned. It is an incident to a line haul and may be rendered preceding the line haul, during a line haul, as in transferring cars to a connecting road, or after the end of the line haul. Cummings Sand & Gravel Co. v Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad Co. 182 Iowa 955, 166 NW 354.

Use of a locomotive to push cars from an industrial plant along main line tracks of another railroad company running through a city to the company's own switchyards does not constitute "switching operations," excepted from the operation of the statute requiring a lookout ahead on locomotives. Alabama G. S. R. Co. v Brookshire (CA6 Tenn) 166 F2d 278, 1 ALR2d 612.

switchman. A railroad employee who operates switches. 35 Am J1st M & S § 435.

switch stand. An upright piece of metal upon which the lever which operates a railroad switch is mounted.

switch target. A device so adjusted to a railroad switch stand that the switch cannot be opened or closed without shifting the targets, the white to a right angle position to the main track when the switch is closed, and the red to a similar position when the switch is open. Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville Railway Co. v Barker, 169 Ind 670, 83 NE 369.

switch track. A railroad track used for switching cars as incidental to a regular train haul, also made use of at times for loading, unloading, and storing cars. 44 Am J1st RR § 231.

See sidetrack.

swoon. To faint.

sword. A hand weapon having a long sharp blade. A deadly weapon. 56 Am J1st Weap § 3.

sword cane. A sword carried in a walking stick or cane; a deadly weapon. Anno: 30 ALR 816.

sworn. See duly sworn; legally sworn; mainsworn; swear. sworn copy. A copy proved by oral evidence to have been compared with the original document and to correspond exactly therewith. Verified under oath.

See certified copy.

sworn evidence. Testimony given under oath.

An affidavit stating facts of which the affiant purports to have knowledge is "sworn evidence." See Ex parte Germain, 258 Mass 289, 298. 155 NE 12, 15.

sworn to. Verified before a proper officer. Hocking Power Co. v Harrison, 20 Ohio App 135, 139, 153 NE 155, 157. Stated under oath.

syb and som. (Saxon.) Peace and security.

syllabi. Headnotes of reported cases. 20 Am J2d Cts § 77.

See headnotes.

syllabis et verbis. See in syllabis et verbis.

syllabus. Singular of syllabi.

syllabus rule. The rule that the syllabus of a decision, as printed in the cases contained in the state reports, alone constitutes the law of the case. Walsh v E. G. Shinner & Co. (CA3 Del) 20 F2d 586. Such rule is established in Ohio as a rule of court applicable to the decisions of the Supreme Court of Ohio, Baltimore & O. R. Co. v Baileeie, 112 Ohio, St 567, 148 NE 233.

syllogism. A logical reasoning, consisting of a major premise, a minor premise and a conclusion. For example: All men are human; Smith is a man. Therefore Smith is a human being.

Every action at law to redress a wrong or enforce a right, if properly instituted, is a syllogism of which the major premise is the proposition of law involved, the minor premise is the proposition of fact, and the judgment the conclusion. Lamphear v Buckingham, 33 Conn 237.

sylva. A wood.

sylva caedua. Same as silva caedua.

sylvestres. Frequenters of wooded land. See 2 Bl Comm 39.

symbol. A mark, object, or letter that stands for something, such as © standing for copyright or a ditto mark indicating a repetition. 1 Am J2d Abbr § 9; 18 Am J2d Copyr § 58.

symbolic delivery. A transaction wherein physical custody is retained by the party who in the reality of the situation should not have possession. A constructive change of possession. 15 Am J2d Chat Mtg § 137. A delivery of goods of such a nature or so situated as to make actual manual delivery impossible. 24 Am J2d Frd Conv § 43. The act of a purchaser or mortgagee of a chattel in merely touching the chattel and declaring his ownership of it. Sloan v National Surety Co. 74 App Div 417, 77 NYS 428. The delivery of the key to a warehouse containing the subject matter in question; the delivery of a bill of lading or warehouse receipt in lieu of the property itself. 41 Am J1st Pldg & Col § 14; 56 Am J1st Wareh § 39. The completion of a gift of property of such nature that an actual manual delivery is impossible, such as an unequivocal declaration of gift, accompanied by a delivery of the only means by which possession of the article can be obtained, by delivery of an instrument making an appropriation of the property to the donee, or other act indicating unmistakably an intent to transfer the property to the donee. 24 Am J1st Gifts § 27.

symbolic levy. A levy of a writ of attachment without taking actual possession of the property, as in the case of a levy upon a judgment. Edwards v Tracy, 203 Iowa 1083, 212 NW 317.

See paper levy.

symbolic possession. The constructive possession of goods which is exercised by a person who holds a warehouse receipt or other indicia of their ownership.

symmetry. Harmony as between parts of a structure. Correspondence of parts in shape and size.

symbolum animae. The symbol of the soul. See 2 Bl Comm 425.

sympathetic illness. An illness resulting from a mental or emotional disturbance caused by the observance of the suffering of another from injury or illness. 52 Am J1st Torts § 70.

sympathetic strike. A strike in support of another existing strike of other employees. Anno: 83 ALR 458; 71 L Ed 261.

A strike instigated in aid of a secondary boycott is such a strike. In essence it is a threat to inflict damage upon the immediate employer, between whom and his employees no dispute exists, in order to bring him against his will into a concerted plan to inflict damage upon another employer who is in dispute with his employees. Duplex Printing Press Co. v Deering, 254 US 443, 474, 65 L Ed 349, 360, 41 S Ct 172.

synagogue. A place used by Jews for religious worship and study. Olhack v Temple Anshe Sholom, 184 Misc 1071, 56 NYS2d 598.

synchronize. To adjust the movement of parts of a machine so that they relate properly, one to the other.

syndic. A corporate agent. A trustee appointed to represent the creditors of the estate of an insolvent person under the law of Louisiana. Bank of Tennessee v Horn (US) 17 How 157, 15 L Ed 70.

The word appears in Spanish-American grants but is not contained in the recapilacion or official compilation of the laws of the Indies. The Spanish Dictionary of the Academy, and the French authors on Jurisprudence, agree in defining it to mean the person charged with the care, defense, and advancement of the interests of a community. In France, the trustee who holds the property of a bankrupt, is styled "le syndic." See Strother v Lucas (US) 12 Pet 410, 442, note, 9 L Ed 1137, 1150, note.

syndicalism. Any doctrine or precept advocating, teaching, or aiding and abetting the commission of crime, sabotage, or unlawful acts of force and violence or unlawful methods of terrorism, as a means of accomplishing a change in industrial ownership or control, or effecting any political change. Burns v United States, 274 US 328, 71 L Ed 1077, 47 S Ct 650.

syndicate. An association of individuals formed for the purpose of conducting and carrying out some particular business transaction, ordinarily of a financial character, in which the members are mutually interested. Hathaway v Porter Royalty Pool, 296 Mich 90, 295 NW 571, 138 ALR 955, and 296 Mich 733, 299 NW 451, 138 ALR 967. Sometimes but not necessarily a partnership. 40 Am J1st Partn § 3. A system, plan or arrangement whereunder the writings of a columnist are distributed to newspapers throughout the country for publication.

syngraph. Singular of syngrapha.

syngrapha. A term of the canonists for what the lawyers called "chirographa."

See chirographa.

synod. A church board. The council of a religious society. Roshi's Appeal, 69 Pa 462 (German Reformed Church). An intermediate governing body or judicatory of a Protestant church, particularly a Presbyterian church.

There are in the Presbyterian system of ecclesiastical government, in regular succession, the presbytery over the session or local church, the synod over the presbytery, and the general assembly over all. These are called, in the language of the church organs, "judicatories," and they entertain appeals from the decisions of those below, and prescribe corrective measures in other cases. Watson v Jones (US) 13 Wall 679, 727, 20 L Ed 666, 676.

synonym. A word which expresses the same, or much the same, idea as another.

synopsis. A summary of the contents of an article.

taking effect. See take effect.

taking for public use. Entering upon private property for more than a momentary period and, under the warrant or color of legal authority, devoting it to a public use, or otherwise informally appropriating or injuriously affecting it in such a way as substantially to oust the owner and deprive him of all beneficial enjoyment thereof. 26 Am J2d Ent D § 157. Air actual interference with, or disturbance of, property rights, as distinguished from injuries and interferences which are merely consequential, incidental, trivial, insignificant. Noble State Bank v Haskell, 219 US 104, 55 L Ed 112, 31 S Ct 186; Bonnett v Vallier, 136 Wis 193, 116 NW 885.

Within the meaning of a constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, the term includes any action, the effect of which is to deprive the owner of all or most of his interest in the subject matter, such as destroying or damaging it. United States v General Motors Corp. 323 US 373, 89 L Ed 311, 65 S Ct 357, 156 ALR 390.

Diminution in value of a business made less prosperous as a result of regulation does not constitute a "taking" of property within the due process clause of the constitution. California State Auto. Asso. Inter-Insurance Bureau v Maloney, 341 US 105, 95 L Ed 788, 71 S Ct 601.

See taken for public use.

taking from the person. An element of robbery.

In robbery, taking from the person does not mean that the property must be in contact with the person, or even that it must be in his actual or immediate presence, but that it must be so in the possession or under his control that violence or putting him in fear was the means used by the robber to take it. See 46 Am J1st Rob § 7.

See larceny from the person.

Any payment exacted by the state or its municipal subdivisions as a contribution to ward the cost of maintaining governmental functions, where the special benefit derived from their performance is merged in the general benefit. State ex rel. Fargo v Wetz, 40 ND 299, 168 NW 835, 5 ALR 731. A charge upon persons or property imposed by or under authority of the legislature for public purposes. Yosemite Lumber Co. v Industrial Acci. Com. 187 Cal 774, 204 P 226, 20 ALR 994.

Taxes are the enforced proportional contribution of persons and property, levied by the authority of the state for the support of the government and for all public needs, and so long as there exist public needs just so long exists the liability of the individual to contribute thereto. The obligation of the individual to the state is continuous and proportioned to the extent of the public wants. Patton v Brady, 184 US 608, 619, 46 L Ed 713, 719, 22 S Ct 493.

A tax is not regarded as a debt in the ordinary sense of the term, for the reason that a tax does not depend upon the consent of the taxpayer, and there is no express or implied contract to pay taxes. Taxes are not contracts between party and party, either express or implied; they are the positive acts of the government, through its various agents, binding upon the inhabitants and enforceable against them without reference to their personal or individual consent to be bound. Tax Com. v National Malleable Casting Co. 1 I I Ohio St 117, 144 NE 604, 35 ALR 1448.

The word "taxes," as used in the priority provision of the Bankruptcy Act, is not to be construed in a limited sense, but as including all obligations imposed by the state or political subdivisions under their respective powers for governmental or public purposes. It includes any pecuniary burden laid upon individuals or property for the purpose of supporting the government or undertakings authorized by it, irrespective of the name given the imposition, or the method of collection. No distinction is observed between impositions under the police power and impositions under the taxing power. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 543.

The difference between a tax and a penalty is sometimes difficult to define, and yet the consequences of the distinction in the required method of their collection often are important. Where the sovereign enacting the law has power to impose both tax and penalty, the difference between revenue production and mere regulation maybe immaterial, but not so when one sovereign can impose a tax only, and the power of regulation rests in another. They do not lose their character as taxes because of the incidental motive. But there comes a time in the extension of the penalizing features of the so-called tax when it loses its character as such and becomes a mere penalty, with the characteristics of regulation and punishment. Bailey v Drexel Furniture Co. 259 US 20, 66 L Ed 817, 42 S Ct 449.

See special assessment.

taxable. Subject to a tax; liable to taxation.

taxable costs. Those costs and expenses of the party prevailing in an action or suit which may properly be included in the judgment of the court. American Nat. Bank v Cooper, 44 Idaho 288, 256 P 372.

taxable credit. Any obligation or contract which creates an enforceable indebtedness on the part of the obligor or promisor.

A contract to pay money is such an obligation, but a mere option is not, since it creates no indebtedness. Re Assessment of Shields, 134 Iowa 559, 111 NW 963.

taxable estate. The net estate of a decedent for the assessment of an estate, inheritance, or succession tax. The estate less the deductions allowed by law. 26 USC §§ 2051 et seq.; United States v Kombst, 286 US 424, 76 L Ed 1201, 52 S Ct 616; Hampton v Hampton, 188 Ky 199, 221 SW 496, 10 ALR 515.

taxatio. (Civil law.) An order made by the judge reducing the amount of damages claimed by the plaintiff in an action.

taxatio expensarum. The taxation of costs.

taxation. The assessment and collection of taxes, a power and process by which the sovereign raises revenue to defray the necessary expenses of government, apportioning the cost of government among those who in some measure are privileged to enjoy its benefits and must bear its burdens. Messer v Lang, 129 Fla 546, 176, 113 ALR 1073. An act of sovereignty to be performed, so far as it conveniently can be, with justice and equality to all. Union Pass. R. Co. v Philadelphia, 101 US 528, 25 L Ed 912. Graphically, but realistically stated, obtaining the greatest amount of feathers with the least squawking.

See tax.

taxation and representation. Concomitants under the American system of government. The rallying cry of the framers of the Federal Constitution.

The principle was that the consent of those who were expected to pay the tax was essential to its validity. Hence, the Constitution provided that representatives and direct taxes should be apportioned among the states according to numbers, Article 1, Section 2, and that all duties, imports, and excises should be uniform throughout the United States, taxation of costs. The act of entering the various costs and the amounts thereof against the party or parties against whom costs have been awarded or allowed by the court. A ministerial function to be performed in a court of record by the clerk of the court, except as the court may be called upon to determine an objection to the manner in which the function has been performed by the clerk. 20 Am J2d Costs § 89.

Article I, Section 8. Pollock v Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. 157 US 429, 158 US 601, 39 L Ed 759, 1108, 15 S Ct 673, 912.

As used in a statute exempting from execution the team of a householder used in and about his business, the word was held to include any team of animals which might or could be so used, whether the number of animals composing the team consisted of one, two, three, four, or more. See Wilcox v Hawley, 31 NY 648, 655.

teamster. One who drives a team. In a more limited sense, one who drives a team in hauling goods for others. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 22. Inclusive for some purposes of a driver of a truck.

team work. The performance of work by two or more persons with good co-ordination of their respective efforts.

As the term is used in an exemption statute exempting from execution horses used in team work, it means work done by a team as a substantial part of a man's business, as in farming, staging, express carrying, drawing of freight, peddling, the transportation of material used or dealt in as a business. Tishomingo Sav. Institution v Young, 87 Miss 473, 40 So 9.

tear. To render assunder. A colloquial expression for moving with haste. State v Helgerson, 247 Iowa 651, 75 NW2d 227, 231.

Tearing is inclusive of "cutting," for the purposes of the revocation of a will. Anno: 115 ALR 717.

tear gas. A gas which irritates the eyes, even to the extent of causing temporary blindness. Sometimes employed by police to quell a riot or subdue a person resisting arrest with force.

tear gas gun. A weapon wherein tear gas is employed as the offensive or defensive charge. Anno: 92 ALR 1098.

tearing. See tear.

tea room. A restaurant, especially one where light lunches are served.

teazer. A railroad operated at a loss. Reagan v Mercantile Trust Co. 154 US 418, 38 L Ed 1030, 14 S Ct 1062 (Texas terminology.)

technical. Pertaining, relating or belonging to some particular art or science. Pertaining to mechanical arts or applied sciences. Involved in a detail rather than a principle.

technical agreed case. The submission of facts to the court for the determination of a controversy without the institution of an action. 3 Am J2d Agr C § 2.

technical conversion. Such a conversion as takes place where one sells the personal property of another innocently, in good faith, and with no intent to ignore the rights of the owner.

The term is synonymous with "innocent conversion." Plack v Baumer (CA3 Pa) 121 F2d 676.

technical error. Immaterial error. An error committed in the course of a trial, but without prejudice to a party. 5 Am J2d A & E § 780. An error committed in the trial of a case which is purely abstract and harmless for practical purposes. Epps v State, 102 Ind 539, 556.

technical estoppel. An estoppel by record or by deed. 28 Am J2d Estop § 2.

technical malice. The intentional doing of a harmful or injurious act without justification or excuse, although without ill will or spite. 30 Am J Rev ed Interf § 45.

technical release. An instrument under seal, or some other form of satisfaction which legally imports full payment.

As a technical release was always under seal, and the consideration could not be inquired into, it was regarded as conclusive, even though given without consideration in fact. The difference between a technical release and satisfaction in fact was that in the one case the law regarded the claim as paid, and would not allow the party to deny by proof, while in the other, the claim was in fact paid. Ryan v Becker, 136 Iowa 273, 111 NW 426.

technical total loss. See constructive total loss.

technical trust. The legal relationship existing where the legal title is in one person and the equitable ownership in another, or where there are rights, titles, and interests in property distinct from the legal ownership. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 4.

teeter-totter. An amusement device for children, often found in public parks or on playgrounds, consisting of a plank mounted upon a bar for support and alternately rising and falling at each end when used in play. 39 Am J1st P & S § 41.

teinds. An ancient Scotch word for tithes.

telecast. A broadcast by television. Norman v Century Athletic Club, Inc. 193 Md 584, 69 A2d 466, 15 ALR2d 777.

See television.

Telechron. A trademark. Telechron, Inc. v Telechron Corp. (CA3 Del) 198 F2d 903.

telegram. A message or dispatch transmitted by telegraph. Western Union Tel. Co. v Hill, 163 Ala 18, 50 So 248. A message transmitted by radio, teletype, telegraph wire, cable, or any mechanical method of transmission, or the like. UCC § 1201(41).

A received telegram is a writing within the meaning of the Statute of Frauds; a writing may be made with a steel pen an inch long or with a copper wire a thousand miles long. Walton v Mandeville, 56 Iowa 588, 9 NW 894.

telegraph. Noun: An apparatus used to transmit intelligence to a distant point by means of electricity. 52 Am J1st Teleg & T § 4. Verb: To send a telegram.

"Without this section making the provisions of the chapter relating to telegraph companies expressly applicable to telephone companies, we think the term 'telegraph,' as a mode of transmitting messages or other communications, is sufficiently comprehensive to embrace the telephone." Cincinnati Inclined Plane Railway Co. v Telegraph Assn. 48 Ohio St 390, 27 NE 890.

telegraph company. A company, almost invariably a corporation, engaged in the business of sending communications by telegram and furnishing services allied to such communication business. A company exercising a quasi public employment, chartered for public purposes, clothed with the power of eminent domain, bound to serve the people impartially, carefully and in good faith and in several of the states of the Union held to be a common carrier and subject to liability as such. Strong v Western Union Tel. Co. 18 Idaho 389, 109 P 910.

telegraphing money. The transmission of money or credit to a person at a distance by an order upon a bank in the place where he is at the time, sent by telegram, directing the bank to furnish him with funds or credit in the amount stated in the order. 10 Am J2d Banks § 308.

See cable transfer of exchange.

telephone. An instrument for transmitting or receiving articulate speech electrically. Richmond v Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. 174 US 761, 43 L Ed 1162, 19 S Ct 778. An apparatus for the transmission of human speech or other sounds over distances greater than the ordinary limits of audibility. 52 Am J1st Teleg & T § 4.

telephone answering service. A service on behalf of business and professional men, especially physicians, whereby calls are answered at such times as the client is absent from his office and relayed to him at a fixed or appropriate time and place.

telephone business. The furnishing of telephone service, even by a mutual company to subscribers who pay assessments in lieu of fixed charges. Anne: 21 ALR 1167.

telephone company. A company, usually a corporation, engaged in the business of furnishing for compensation the means of communication by telephone and rendering services allied with such communication business.

The term embraces all corporations, associations, and individuals owning or operating any telephone line or exchange in the state. Anne: 21 ALR 1171.

telephone connection. A connection of telephone wires, particularly the wires of different telephone companies or telephone systems, necessary for communication other than local.

As used in a statute requiring telephone companies to supply all applicants for telephone connection, the words obviously mean that for which patrons of the telephone customarily apply. No such persons can be excluded, provided they are willing to comply with reasonable regulations, but the words do not confer any right upon one telephone company to insist upon a physical connection of its system with that of another company. Oklahoma-Arkansas Tel. Co. v Southwestern Bell Tel. Co. (CA8 Ark) 45 F2d 995; 76 ALR 944.

See telephone exchange.

telephone directory. A listing in print of all subscribers to telephone service in a particular city, village, town, metropolitan area, or other locality by names, telephone numbers, and street addresses. A facility within the meaning of a regulation that telephone subscribers shall not use any mechanical apparatus or device in connection with the facilities furnished by the company, without the consent of the company. Anno: 63 ALR2d 1098.

telephone exchange. A building or part of building equipped with instrumentalities for connecting telephone lines so that a call made on one will be transmitted over such line and a connecting line so as to reach a phone on the latter. State ex rel. Synod of Ohio v Joseph, 139 Ohio St 229, 39 NE2d 515, 138 ALR 1274.

telephone line. A wire, carried overhead on poles or underground in a conduit, over which articulate speech is transmitted and received.

A statute defines the term as including every sort of property used, operated, controlled, or owned by any telephone corporation to facilitate the business of affording telephonic communication. State ex rel. Buffum Tel. Co. v Public Service Com. 272 Mo 627, 199 SW 962.

telephone token. A small flat piece of metal placed in a slot in a public telephone to activate the instrument for use.

telephonic system. A system for the transmission of intelligence and news.

It is, perhaps, in a limited sense, and yet in a strict sense, a common carrier, and it must be equal in its dealings with all citizens in every department of business. Commercial Union Tel. Co. v New England Tel. & Tel. Co. 61 Vt 241, 17 A 1071.

telephony. The art or process of reproducing sounds at a distance, as by telephone. Dunbar v Spratt-Snyder Co. 208 Iowa 490, 226 NW 22, 63 ALR 1016.

[1261]

televise. To broadcast by television. Norman v Century Athletic Club, Inc. 193 Md 584, 69 A2d 466, 15 ALR2d 777.

television. An electronic process whereby scenes or views are transmitted by radio, wire, or cable, through the conversion of light rays into radio waves by a transmitting instrument and the reconversion of such waves by a receiving instrument into beams which produce pictures upon projection onto a screen, such operation normally being accompanied by radio communication in sound.

television station. A place equipped and manned for the transmission of scenes or views and accompanying sounds by the process known as television.

teller. A clerk in a bank who transacts business with customers by way of receiving and paying out money. 10 Am J2d Banks § 154. An election officer, engaged particularly in the counting of votes. Wheeler v Carter, 120 Mass 382, 62 NE 471. One who counts or assists in counting the votes at a corporate election.

telltale. A tale bearer. A gossip. A series of strips, usually of leather, hung above a railroad track for the purpose of warning a trainman on top of a car of a bridge or other instrumentality having a structure over the tracks so low as to strike the trainman if he remains standing on top of a car, the warning being necessary in hours of darkness and given by the harmless brushing of the strips against the face or head of the trainman. 35 Am J1st M & S § 224.

temere. Rashly; by chance; accidentally.

temperance. The quality or condition of being temperate. The movement toward the prohibition or control of the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

See temperate.

temperance union. A society organized for the purpose of teaching and promoting temperance, particularly temperance in the use of alcoholic beverages.

See Women's Christian Temperance Union.

temperate. Moderate. Self-restrained. Habitual moderation in regard to the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions. People v Dashaway Asso. 84 Cal 114, 123, 24 P 277. Restrained in the use of intoxicating liquors, although not necessarily totally abstaining. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 774.

temperate damages. Damages allowed in cases of a certain class, without proof of actual or special damage, where the wrong done must in fact have caused actual damage to the plaintiff, though, from the nature of the case, he cannot furnish independent, distinct proof thereof. 22 Am J2d Damg § 16.

tempest. A violent wind, especially one accompanied by rain; an act of God. 1 Am J2d Act of God § 5.

Templars. An order of religious knights which was organized in England in the twelfth century. A modern Masonic order, called the Knight Templars.

temporalis actio. (Civil law.) An action which had to be brought within a certain limited time, if it was brought at all.

temporalities. The revenues of a parish of the Roman Catholic Church which are derived from pew rents, Sunday and other collections, graveyard charges, school fees and donations.

The pastor of the parish as the administrator and agent of the archbishop, who is considered as the owner of the church property, is in charge of the temporalities. Barabasz v Kabat, 86 Md 23, 30, 37 A 720.

temporal lords. See lords temporal.

Tempora mutantur et leges mutantur in illis. Times change and laws change with them. State v Soward, 83 Ark 264, 103 SW 741.

temporarily. Not permanently; for a time only. Worthington v McDonald, 246 Iowa 466, 68 NW2d 89, 47 ALR2d 135.

temporary. Lasting for a short time only. United States ex rel. Lesto v Day (CA2 NY) 21 F2d 307. Lasting for a time only; existing or continuing for a limited time; not of long duration; not permanent; transitory; changing. Young v Povich, 121 Me 141, 116 A 26, 29 ALR 48.

temporary administrator. An administrator of a decedent's estate appointed for some cause, such as the pendency of a will contest, whereby regular administration is delayed, the property being exposed in the meantime to waste and loss in the absence of an authorized agent to collect the debts and preserve the assets. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 649.

temporary ailment. A disability or sickness of such short duration as not to negative the existence of sound health or sound physical condition. French v Fidelity & Casualty Co. 135 Wis 259, 115 NW 869.

temporary alimony. An allowance made by the court, otherwise known as alimony pendente lite or alimony ad interim, to be paid by the husband for the maintenance of the wife during the pendency of a matrimonial action either by or against her. Richardson v Richardson, 218 Minn 42, 15 NW2d 127, 154 ALR 526; Davis v Davis, 15 Wash 2d 297, 130 P2d 3, 55.

temporary allowance. An award by the court to be paid by the party against whom it is directed during the pendency and before final determination of the action, as in the case of an award of temporary alimony or of child support.

temporary appropriation. A temporary taking of property for a public purpose. 27 Am J2d Em D § 351.

temporary child support. An award against the husband as a party to an action for divorce, directing payment for the support of a child of the union sought to be severed by the divorce. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 836.

temporary commitment. The temporary restraint of an insane person without an adjudication of his insanity, properly to prevent either self-destruction or injury to other persons by his acts. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins Per § 39.

temporary condemnation. Same as temporary appropriation.

temporary court. A court created to exist for a specified period of time or for the duration of a certain situation, usually an emergency. 20 Am J2d Cts § 1.

temporary custody. A disposition made by the court of the custody of a child to continue pending trial of a divorce suit between the parents. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 809.

See temporary commitment.

[1262]

temporary disability. A disability of the person from which he has or will recover. A disability which is not permanent and which is to last for a limited time only, as distinguished from a disability which is perpetual or indefinite in its duration. See Lawrence v State Industrial Com. 120 Okla 197, 251 P 40. A physical disability which although it may be total for the time, is not such a disability as is reasonably probable to continue for an indefinite period of time. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1529. For the purpose of workmen's compensation, a condition that exists until the injured workman is as far restored as the permanent character of the injuries will permit. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 283.

temporary employee. See casual employee.

temporary injunction. An injunction pendente lite or provisional injunction which is to operate pending a hearing of the suit on its merits, or until the final decree of the court shall have been entered. An order issued, not in pursuance of the final determination of any controverted right, but merely to prevent a threatened wrong, or any further perpetration of injury, or the doing of any act thereafter whereby the right to a thing may be embarrassed or endangered, or whereby its value may be materially lessened or the thing itself totally lost, and by such prevention to maintain things in the condition in which they are at the time, and protect the property or rights involved from further injury until the issues and equities can be determined after a full examination and hearing. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 12.

temporary insanity. A temporary derangement of the mind which may result from any transient condition, as, for example, intoxication. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins Per § 3.

temporary insurance. Insurance according to the terms and conditions of a standard form of policy commencing upon application being made for a policy and continuing, subject to a limitation of reasonable time, until either the policy can be written or its issuance approved or disapproved by authorized representatives of the insurer, or some other temporary impediment to the complete and formal contract of insurance may be removed. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 205.

A temporary contract of life insurance is usually in writing. It may take the form of a provisional policy, a rider attached to a policy, or a binding slip or receipt. It may also be made orally by an authorized agent or officer of the insurer. Anno: 2 ALR2d 952.

temporary judge. A special or substitute judge. 30A Am J Rev ed Judges § 237.

temporary loan. A loan to a municipal corporation which is to be paid with and by the taxes of a current fiscal year. People ex rel. Peene v Carpenter, 31 App Div 603, 608, 52 NYS 781.

temporary nuisance. A nuisance resulting from a condition which is not fixed and indeterminable, lasting for a limited time only. 39 Am J1st Nuis § 131. A nuisance arising from negligence in the maintenance of a structure or the operation of a business or industry. Shelley v Ozark Pipe Line Co. 327 Mo 238, 75 ALR 1316, 37 SW2d 518.

temporary obstruction. The obstruction of a highway for a limited period of time, incidental to a lawful use of the way, or to serve some public purpose, such as the repair of the way itself or the construction of other public improvements, excavations for installation of public utility pipes and wires, etc. 25 Am J1st High § 302.

temporary order. A provisional or interim order by an administrative agency. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 466.

See restraining order; temporary injunction.

Temporary Organic Act. An Act of Congress of June 20, 1874 in reference to municipal government of the District of Columbia. 24 Am J2d D C § 3.

temporary receiver. A receiver appointed to take custody of property and hold it pending the appointment of a permanent receiver. 45 Am J1st Rec § 3.

temporary restraining order. A restraining order which in terms indicates or contemplates that a further hearing on the application is to be had before the application is finally acted on. State v Baker, 62 Neb 840, 847, 88 NW 124.

See restraining order.

temporary severance. Detaching a fixture from the real estate for a temporary purpose, not involving a change in the character of the article. 35 Am J2d Fixt § 26.

temporary statute. A statute which, by its terms, is to remain in force for a limited time only or a statute operative only during the continuance of the emergency which prompted enactment. 50 Am J1st Stat § 514.

temporary suit money. An interim or preliminary allowance of counsel fees to the wife made during the pendency of an action for divorce. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 576.

temporary support. See temporary alimony; temporary child support.

tempore. (Latin) At the right time. Seasonably.

See ex tempore.

tempore et loco. In time and place.

temporis. See exceptio temporis.

temporis exceptio. (Civil law.) A plea which set up lapse of time as a defense to the action.

temptation. Allurement or inducement.

Temptation is not always invitation. As the common law is understood by the most competent authorities, it does not excuse a trespasser because there is a temptation to commit, or hold property owners bound to contemplate the infraction of property rights because the temptation to untrained minds to infringe them might have been foreseen. Wilmot v McPadden, 79 Conn 367, 65 A 157.

tempus. Time.

tempus continuum. (Civil law.) A continuous time; a period of time which was uninterrupted by holidays, absences, or other causes. See Mackeldey's Roman Law § 195.

[1263]

Tempus enim modus tollendi obligationes et actiones, quia tempus currit contra desides et sui juris contemptores. For time is a means of dissipating actions and obligations, because time runs against the slothful and those who are careless of their own right.

tempus exceptio. Same as temporis exceptio.

tempus regis Edwardi. In the time of King Edward; that is, of Edward the Confessor who was king of the West Saxons from 1042 until 1066.

tempus utile. (Civil law.) A time of advantage, a time which only begins to run against him who is affected by it after his knowledge thereof. See Mackeldey's Roman Law § 195.

tenancy. The occupancy of a tenant. Possession under right or title.

A tenancy exists where one has let real estate to another, to hold of him as landlord. When duly created and the tenant put into possession, he is the owner of an estate for the time being, and has all the usual rights and remedies to defend his possession. But a tenancy does not necessarily imply a right to complete and exclusive possession; it may be created with implied or express permission of a right to possession on the part of the landlord, for all purposes not inconsistent with the privileges granted to the tenant. Morrill v Mackman, 24 Mich 279.

See cotenancy; entire tenancy; general tenancy; joint tenancy; privy; re-entry; tenant; use and occupation.

tenancy at sufferance. The tenancy of one who continues in possession after his right to possession has terminated, his original entry having been lawful. 32 Am J1st L & T § 75. The tenancy of a lessee holding over the term of his lease without objection on the part of the landlord. 32 Am J1st L & T § 938.

A tenancy at sufferance is of such a nature as necessarily implies an absence of any agreement between the owner and the tenant, and if express assent is given by the owner to such possession, the tenancy is thereby instantaneously converted into a tenancy at will, or from year to year, according to the circumstances. Willis v Moore, 59 Tex 628.

See estate by sufferance.

tenancy at will. A tenancy to continue for so long as continuation is in accord with the wishes and desires of both parties. An estate which confers a right to the possession of the premises demised for an indefinite period of time, its duration and ultimate termination depending upon the joint wills of the parties, either being able to effect a termination without incurring liability to the other. 32 Am J1st L & T § 66. According to some authorities, the tenancy which arises where a lessee holds over the term of his lease with the express or implied consent of the landlord. 32 Am J1st L & T § 939.

tenancy by elegit. See estate by elegit.

tenancy by entireties. See estate by entireties. tenancy by sufferance. See tenancy at sufferance.

tenancy for life. See life estate; life tenant.

tenancy for years. An interest arising from a lease, contract, or agreement for the possession of lands or tenements for a definite period of time. A tenancy under a lease whereby the landlord contracts to grant the possession and enjoyment of land, or hereditaments of a demisable nature, for a period of years certain; and in most cases the tenant agrees to render to the landlord a rent in money, or any other kind of payment, at the end of stated periods of a year or more during the term. 32 Am J1st L & T § 61.

tenancy from month to month. A tenancy where no definite time is agreed upon and the rate is fixed at so much per month. Thompson v Baxter, 107 Minn 122, 119 NW 979. A tenancy created by a holding over after the expiration of a lease for months. 32 Am J1st L & T § 941. An estate less than freehold. 28 Am J2d Est § 130.

tenancy from quarter to quarter. A tenancy under a lease which does not prescribe the duration but fixes the rental at a certain sum per quarter or three months period. 32 Am J1st L & T § 71. A tenancy created by a holding over after the expiration of a lease for one or more quarters of a year. 32 Am J1st L&T§941.

tenancy from week to week. A tenancy where no definite time is agreed upon and the rent is fixed at so much per week. 32 Am J1st L & T § 71. A tenancy created by a holding over after the expiration of a lease for weeks. 32 Am J1st L & T § 941.

tenancy from year to year. A tenancy where no definite time is agreed upon and the rent is fixed at so much per year. Thompson v Baxter, 107 Minn 122, 119 NW 797. A tenancy created by a holding over after the expiration of a term for years and the continued payment of the yearly rent reserved. 32 Am J1st L & T § 940. An estate evolving from an estate at will, being one of the estates from period to period, an estate less than a freehold. 28 Am J2d Est § 130.

tenancy in common. That tenancy whereby two or more persons are entitled to land in such manner that they have an undivided possession, but several freeholds or interest. 20 Am J2d Coten § 22. A tenancy characterized by a single essential unity that of possession, or of the right to possession, of the common property. 20 Am J2d Coten § 23.

A tenancy in common of personal property is essentially similar to such a tenancy of real property, each tenant in common owning and possessing an undivided interest in the whole property. Re Engel's Estate, 413 Pa 475, 198 A2d 505.

tenancy in fee. A tenancy under a lease for a term, renewable forever, but subject to termination for nonpayment of the rent reserved, the interest of the lessee being that of a base, qualified, or determinable fee. Smith v Improvement Dist. 108 Ark 141, 156 SW 455.

See fee simple.

tenancy in tail. See fee tail.

tenancy in tail after possibility of issue extinct. See fee tail after possibility of issue extinct.

tenant. One who occupies the premises of another in subordination to that other person's title and with his assent express or implied. 32 Am J1st L & T § 2. Broadly, any person having a tenancy.

A tenant, although having exclusive possession, charge, and control, is not an owner of the land within a statute making it unlawful for any person to hunt on the land of another without first having obtained permission of the owner. Anno: 2 ALR 799, s. 95 ALR 1099.

See sole tenant; tenancy; untenant.

tenantable premises. Premises which are habitable, fit to be lived in. 32 Am J1st L & T § 654.

For meaning of the phrase "good tenantable condition," as such appears in a covenant by a tenant to make repairs, see Anno: 45 ALR 12.

tenant at sufferance. See tenancy at sufferance.

tenant at will. See tenancy at will.

tenant by elegit. See estate by elegit.

tenant by entirety. See estate by entireties.

tenant by statute merchant. See estate by statute merchant.

tenant by statute staple. See estate by statute staple.

tenant by the curtesy. See curtesy; curtesy consummate; curtesy initiate.

tenant for life. See life tenant.

tenant for years. See tenancy for years.

tenant from month to month. See tenancy from month to month.

tenant from week to week. See tenancy from week to week.

tenant from year to year. See tenancy from year to year.

tenant in bordage. See bordage.

tenant in capite. See in capite. tenant in chivalry. See knight service.

tenant in common. One of two or more owners of property who hold under a tenancy in common. See tenancy in common.

tenant in dower. A widow who holds land by virtue of her dower.
See dower.

tenant in fee. See fee simple.

tenant in fee simple. See fee simple.

tenant in fee tail. See fee tail.

tenant in free socage. See free socage.

tenant in mortgage. The feoffee in a common-law mortgage or mortuum vadium, as it was called, which consisted of a feoffment on the condition that the feoffer might re-enter if he paid to the feoffee a certain sum of money at a certain date. 36 Am J1st Mtg § 12.

tenant in possession. A lessee in possession under the terms of the lease. In a broader sense, one who maintains possession legally by himself or through another under title, estate, or interest of any kind.

The definition of the term embraces, within the natural and usual meaning of the words, a judgment debtor as well as his lessee. The owner in fee is no less, in legal contemplation, a tenant, than the man who occupies under him, since the definition of tenant is one that holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of title, either in fee, for life, years, or at will. Whithed v St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Co. 9 ND 224, 83 NW 238.

tenant in severalty. A sole tenant; a person who holds lands or tenements in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest, during his estate therein. 2 Bl Comm 953.

tenant-like manner. Characterizing the occupation by a tenant as reasonable and proper in reference to the care and treatment of the premises. 32 Am J1st L & T § 779.

tenant paravail. The tenant of a tenant.

Under the feudal system, if the king granted a manor to A, and A granted a portion of the land to B, then B was said to hold of A, and A, of the king. In other words, B held his lands immediately of A, but mediately of the king. The king was therefore styled lord paramount; A was both tenant and lord, or was mesne lord; and B was called tenant paravail, or the lowest tenant; being he who was supposed to make avail, or profit of the land. See 2 Bl Comm 60.

tenant pur auter vie. A tenant holding for the life of another; a tenant having an estate for the life of another. See 2 Bl Comm 120, 124.

tenant right. A word of art for the lessee's right to a renewal of the tenancy.

tenant without impeachment of waste. See without impeachment of waste.

tender. Noun: The small car attached to a locomotive, wherein fuel and water are carried. 35 Am J1st M & S § 229. A boat or small vessel carrying freight, passengers, or supplies to or from a larger vessel. An unconditional offer of payment, consisting in the actual production, in current coin of the realm or other lawful money, of a sum not less than the amount due on a specific debt or obligation. 52 Am J1st Ten § 2. An offering of that which a person received under a contract made as a condition of the right to rescind. 17 Am J2d Contr § 512. Verb: To offer to pay or perform an obligation.

In a literal sense, the word is equivalent to the word "offer". 6 Eng Rul Cas 589.

See legal tender.

tender of amends. An offer to settle a claim arising out of tort or contract.

tender of issue. The concluding phrase of a plea offering to submit the controversy to the court or to the jury. For practical purposes, the raising of an issue by a pleading responsive to the pleading of the adverse party.

tender of payment. See tender.

tender of performance. An offer by the obligor to perform a contract according to its terms and conditions. An offer of performance, one of the effects of which is to place the other party unjustifiably refusing it in default, and to permit the party making the tender to exercise his remedies for breach of contract. Walker v Houstin, 215 Cal 742, 12 P2d 952, 87 ALR 937. An offer by the vendor in a contract to sell real estate to convey in full compliance with the terms of the contract. 55 Am J1st V & P § 324. A presentation of goods by the seller to the purchaser under a contract of sale in the course of a delivery or attempted delivery of the goods.

The word "tender," as used in connection with mutual and concurrent promises, does not mean the same kind of offer as when it is used in reference to the payment or offer to pay an ordinary debt due in money; it means only a readiness and willingness, accompanied with an ability on the part of one of the parties, to do the acts which the agreement requires him to perform, provided the other party will concurrently do the things which he is required by the contract to do, and a notice by the former to the latter of such readiness. Robins v Mack International Motor Truck Corp. 113 NJL 377, 174 A 551.

tender years. The years of infancy, particularly the earlier years.

tending bar. See bartender.

tenement. A house. Polson v Parsons, 23 Okla 778, 104 P 336. Real property; inclusive of any incorporeal hereditament which issues out of corporeal property or which is annexed thereto. Hertz v Abrahams, 110 Ga 707, 36 SE 409.

In its most extensive signification, the word comprehends everything which may be holden, provided it be of a permanent nature. In a more restricted sense, it is a house or building. Oskaloosa Water Co. v Board of Equalization, 84 Iowa 407, 51 NW 18.

Within the meaning of a statute authorizing proceedings to try questions concerning unlawful detention of lands or "tenements" and providing that if the same is held unlawfully, restitution shall be had, a house upon land to which its owner has no title, but in which he claims and enjoys the right of peaceable possession, which house is occupied by one leasing from such owner, is a "tenement." 32 Am J1st L & T § 1017.

tenemental lands. Lands which were distributed by the lords among their tenants.

These tenemental lands included both bookland, or charterland, and folkland. See 2 Bl Comm 90.

tenement house. A multiple dwelling, ordinarily housing people of very limited means or persons on welfare, usually several stories high, and containing many separate apartments or tenements, usually involving the use of bath and toilet facilities in common by the tenants of several tenements. Lignot v Jeakle, 72 NJ Eq 233, 65 A 221. A building, the different rooms or parts of which are let for residence purposes by the possessor to others, its distinct tenements, so that each tenant, as to the room or rooms occupied by him, would sustain to the common landlord the same relation that the tenant occupying a whole house would sustain to his landlord. See Rose v King, 49 Ohio St 213, 30 NE 267.

A building continuing three separate apartments on separate floors, each rented by the owner to a separate family, is a "tenement house" within the meaning of a statute providing that the owner of every tenement house shall provide for the lighting of all public halls at night. Gibson v Hoppman, 108 Conn 401, 143 A 635, 75 ALR 148.

tenementum. A tenement; an estate held by a tenant.

tenendum. A clause formerly appearing in deeds, setting forth the tenure of the grantee, that is, the kind of tenure on which the land was to be held. 2 Bl Comm § 408.

tenendum per servitium militare, in burgagio, in libero socagio. To hold by military service, in burgage, in free socage. See 2 Bl Comm 299.

tenens. A tenant.

tener. To hold; to keep.

tenere. To hold; to keep; to understand; to grasp.

teneri. That part of a bond in which the maker states that he is held and firmly bound, etc.

tenet. Something held or possessed. A principle, especially one pertaining to religious faith.

tenir in socage. To hold in socage.

Tennessee Valley Authority. An agency of the United States Government, employing almost 18,000 persons, established to develop the Tennessee river for the production of electric power and for other purposes connected with flood control, the improvement of navigation, chemical engineering research, aiding regional development, conservation of natural resources, and to construct other facilities for the production of electric power. United States ex ref. Tennessee Valley Authority v An Easement & Right-of-Way (DC Ky) 246 F Supp 263.

tenor. The exact words. A copy of an instrument setting forth the very words and figures. 36 Am J2d Forg § 37. The general meaning or purport.

tenore praesentium. By the tenor of these presents.

Tenor est qui legem dat feudo. It is the true intent or meaning which gives validity to the fee or grant. See 2 Bl Comm 310.

Tenor investiturae inspiciendus. The character of the investiture must be regarded. A maxim of the law of feuds resulting from the variety of the prescribed services to be rendered by the tenant.

tenor of a will. The purport, rather than the exact words, of the instrument. It is enough to prove the tenor or substance of a lost will, without proving the precise statement of the language terms used in it. Jones v Caller, 139 Ind 382, 38 NE 812.

tenor of bill of exchange. The terms of time and manner of payment of a bill of exchange. Lindley v First Nat. Bank of Waterloo, 76 Iowa 629, 41 NW 381.

ten pins. A game of skill, akin to bowling. Anno: 60 ALR 352.

tentative allowance. A provisional allowance. An allowance not to be accepted as final.

As the term is used with reference to deductions in the Federal income tax law, it means the original allowance proposed by the taxpayer in his return and accepted automatically and without investigation by the Commissioner; and after he has completed his investigation of the claimed deduction and passed upon the question of amortization, his allowance is no longer tentative but becomes final as can any allowance of a deduction. Fifth Ave. Uniform Co. v Commissioner (CA2) 70 F2d 677.

tentative finding. A finding by an administrative officer whose function is to hear and report, his recommendation not being binding upon the board or officer having the deciding authority. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 427.

tentative trust. See Totten Trust.

Tenterden's Act. See Lord Tenterden's Act.

tenths. Temporary aids issuing out of personal property, and granted by parliament to the king.

They were the actual tenth or fifteenth part of all of each subject's movable property. Tenths were first granted under Henry the Second to pay the expense of a Palestine crusade against the Saracen emperor, Saladin; whence this levy was called the Saladin tenth. See 1 Bl Comm 308.

tent show. A circus; a dramatic performance produced in a tent.

tenure. A term of extensive significance, meaning the mode by which one holds an estate in land and importing also any kind of holding, from mere possession to the owning of an estate of inheritance. 28 Am J2d Est § 3. The right of certain public officers and public employees to be retained in employment, subject only to removal for certain enumerated causes and in a prescribed manner. 47 Am J1st Sch § 127. Term of public office or public employment. People v Waite (NY) 9 Wend 58.

In its technical sense, the word means the manner whereby lands or tenements are holden, or the service that the tenant owes to his lord. In the latter case, there can be no tenure without some service, because the service makes the tenure. The word is also used as signifying the estate in the land. The most common tenure by which lands are held in the United States is "fee simple," which is an absolute tenure of land to a man and his heirs forever, without rendering service of any kind. Bard v Grundy's Devises, 2 Ky 168, 169.

See fixed tenure; tenancy.

tenure by divine service. A land tenure in which the tenants were to perform some certain expressly defined and prescribed special divine service; such as to sing so many masses, to distribute a fixed sum in alms.

After the Statute of Quia Emptores (1290) only the king could grant lands to be held by this tenure. See 2 Bl Comm 102.

tenure by free alms. Same as tenure in frankalmoign.

tenure in ancient demesne. A tenure embracing all those lands or manors, which, though subsequently granted out to private subjects, were actually in the hands of the crown in the time of Edward the Confessor, or William the Conqueror, and are recorded as so being in the Domesday Book. See 2 Bl Comm 99.

tenure in burgage. See burgage tenure.

tenure in capite. A land tenure wherein the tenant held his land directly of the crown or chief lord, with no lord intervening.

tenure in chief. Same as tenure in capite.

tenure in frankalmoign. Same as frankalmoign tenure.

tenure in gavelkind. See gavelkind.

tenure of office. The right to hold office for a prescribed term. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 149. The possession of an office. The length of time an office is held.

See tenure statutes; term of office.

tenure of schoolteacher. See tenure; tenure statutes.

tenure of trustee. The continuance of one's status as trustee until he resigns, is discharged, dies, becomes incompetent, or the trust terminates. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 127.

tenure statutes. Statutes granting to public officers or employees the right to be retained in employment indefinitely, subject only to removal for enumerated causes and in a manner prescribed by law. Statutes wherein specific tenure rights are attached to the position of teaching in the public schools, particularly the right to be retained in employment indefinitely, subject only to removal for certain enumerated causes and in a prescribed manner. 47 Am J1st Sch § 127.

terce. The widow's third; dower.

tercerone. A person of mixed blood, the issue of a white person and a mulatto. Daniel v Guy, 19 Ark 121, 131.

term. A portion of an agreement relating to a particular matter. UCC § 1-201(42). An estate for years; an estate the duration of which is limited and determined. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. v Sanderson, 109 Pa 583, 1 A 394.

termagant. A common scold. 15 Am J2d Com S § 2.

term annuity. An annuity the payments of which are terminable by the voluntary act of the annuitant. Bodine v Commissioner (CA3) 103 F2d 982.

term bailment. A bailment for a prescribed period of time. 8 Am J2d Bailm § 277.

term bill of exceptions. A bill of exceptions showing matters which occurred prior to the trial. Robinson v Field, 342 Mo 778, 117 SW2d 308.

term bonds. Bonds issued at one time and all falling due at one time. Fales v Multnomah County, 119 Or 127, 248 P 151.

term for years. See estate for years; tenancy for years.

terminable interest. For estate tax purposes, an interest which terminated on or before the death of the one whose estate is sought to be taxed. Goodman v Granger (CA3 Pa) 243 F2d 264, cert den 355 US 835, 2 L Ed 2d 47, 78 S Ct 57.

As to failure of terminable interest to qualify for marital deduction, see Internal Revenue Code § 2523, subds (b), (d).

terminal. A point on a railroad line which is either the beginning or destination of traffic. 44 Am J1st RR § 241. The station or depot of a carrier. An airport. The landing place used by a ferry.

terminal car. A railroad car kept at a particular station for use in the yards.

terminal carrier. The carrier which makes the final delivery of the goods, either delivering the goods itself to the consignee, or through another carrier acting as its agent. 14 Am J2d Car § 662.

terminal facilities. Instrumentalities at the terminal of a railroad provided to implement the handling of traffic. 44 Am J1st RR § 241. Passenger station, freight station, and other facilities rendered available by a carrier for its customers.

terminal illness. Last illness.

terminal railroad. A railroad which as an instrumentality assists railroad transportation companies in the collection, transfer, and distribution of traffic at a place which is a terminal of different railroad lines. 44 Am J1st RR § 241. A railroad rendering terminal services, switching and delivering railroad cars from one carrier to another or from the carrier to the consignee of the shipment. 13 Am J2d Car § 13.

terminal railway company. A company operating a terminal railroad. Dell R. Co. v United States (CA7 Ill) 168 F 542, cert dismd 223 US 743, 56 L Ed 638, 32 S Ct 532.

See terminal railroad.

terminal reserve. A reserve, appearing on the books of a life insurance company, maintained by it against its liability on a life insurance policy or annuity contract issued by it and outstanding.

terminal services. Services rendered by a carrier at its station or in its yards in loading and unloading freight, switching, elevator service, refrigeration etc. 13 Am J2d Car § 470.

See terminal railroad.

terminating building and loan service. A building and loan association in which all of the stock matures at the same time.

Upon such maturity, the face value of the stock is paid to the members, and the association comes to an end. Cook v Equitable Bldg. & Loan Asso. 104 Ga 814, 821.

termination. An end of something in space or time.

See cancellation.

termination in plaintiffs favor. An end to a criminal prosecution or civil proceeding in favor of he who is the plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecution, however such end is reached, provided the end is such that the prosecutor must institute proceedings anew if he desires to continue further with his purpose of prosecution. 34 Am J1st Mal Pros § 31.

As the word is used in the rule requiring a termination of the prosecution as one of the essential prerequisites of an action for malicious prosecution, a criminal prosecution is "terminated" (1) where there is a verdict of not guilty; (2) where the grand jury ignore a bill; (3) where a nolle prosequi is entered; and (4) where the accused has been discharged from bail or imprisonment. Graves v Scott, 104 Va 372, 51 SE 821.

termination of corporation. See dissolution of corporation.

termination of criminal prosecution. See termination in plaintiffs favor.

termination of employment. A termination of the relationship between employer and employee. Emerick v Connecticut General L. Ins. Co. 120 Conn 60, 179 A 335, 105 ALR 413.

termination of highway. A discontinuance or vacation of the way.

termination of lease. The efflux of the term, the happening of a condition subsequent and re-entry, by way of conditional limitation, by operation of law, as in the case of the merger of the tenancy in the reversion, or by cancellation of the lease. 32 Am J1st L & T § 824.

See expiration of term.

termination of offer. The expiration of the period of time during which the offer is to remain in effect, whether such be a definite period as fixed by the terms of the offer or by custom or usage of trade, or the reasonable period of time during which an offer remains in effect in the absence of a definite time limit; the withdrawal or revocation of the offer before it has been accepted; the death of the offeror or offeree; or the rejection of the offer by the offeree. 17 Am J2d Contr §§ 35 et seq.

termination of partnership. See dissolution of partnership.

termination of risk. A phrase familiar in the law of insurance, signifying the termination of the coverage provided by the policy by the expiration of the term for which the policy was issued, by breach of warranty or condition, or by the cancellation, rescission, or surrender of the policy to the insurer. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 317.

termination of trust. The termination of the relationship of trustee and beneficiary in accordance with the limitations or conditions of the trust, although not before the trustee has accounted to the beneficiary and the latter has received all the property and funds due him. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 70.

The expression includes not only the final transfer of a trust estate to the beneficiary, but also the resignation or discharge of the trustee named in the deed and the transfer of the trust fund by it to a new trustee. Haas v Hudson County Nat. Bank, 115 NJ Eq 311, 170 A 611, 94 ALR 1099.

termination of war. The exchange of peace treaties or the ratification of a peace treaty, or the recognition of the termination of the contest by the branches of government having the war power. 56 Am J1st War § 13.

terminer. See court of oyer and terminer; oyer and terminer.

termini. See ex vi termini; terminus.

terminis terminantibus. See in terminis terminantibus.

term insurance. Life insurance under a contract providing protection for a stated number of years, subject to the payment of premiums, sometimes renewable without an additional medical examination, sometimes convertible to other forms of life insurance written by the insurer. A policy of insurance under which the insurance contracted for covers only losses occurring before the expiration of a term stated in the policy. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v Commercial State Bank of Rantoul (DC Ill) 13 F2d 474.

terminus. A term; an estate for years; an estate the duration of which is limited and determined. Delaware L. & W. R. Co. v Sanderson, 109 Pa 583, 1 A 394. A boundary; an end; a limit.

See terminal.

Terminus ac foedum non possunt constare simul in una eademque persona. A term and the fee cannot at the same time vest in one and the same person.

terminus ad quem. The termination or end of a private right of way.

See terminus a quo.

Terminus annorum certus debet esse et determinatus. A term for years ought to be certain and determinate.

terminus a quo. The end from which, as matter of point, place, or time.

To every private right of way, there are two essential requisites, first, the "terminus a quo," or the point or place from which the grantee is to set out in order to use the way, and the "terminus ad quem," the place where the way is to end; and second, that the grantor has the right, not the mere revocable permission of setting out from the terminus a quo, and proceeding to and entering the terminus ad quem. Garrison v Rudd, 19 Ill 558, 563.

terminus juris. The time within which an appeal could be determined in the ecclesiastical courts.

termite. A wood-boring insect capable of causing much damage to wooden structures and furniture. Kirkley v Merrimack Mut. Fire Ins. Co. 232 NC 292. 59 SE2d 629.

term of court. The period of time appointed by law during which a court may, and is supposed to, perform its judicial functions. The time in which a court is open for the trial of causes or the transaction of other official business. 20 Am J2d Cts § 44. Sometimes defined as the space of time during which the court holds a session. Parrott v Wolcott, 75 Neb 530, 106 NW 607.

The expression is sometimes used in statutes as synonymous with the term "session of court," and does not necessarily refer to the beginning of the statutory term of the court. See Nation v Savely, 127 Okla 117, 260 P 32, 35.

See adjourned term; appearance term; equity term; special term; trial term; vacation.

term of lease. That period which is granted for the lessee or tenant to occupy and have possession of the premises. The duration of a lease in years, months, weeks, or days. The estate or interest which the lessee has in the premises under and by virtue of the lease. 32 Am J1st L & T §§ 6l et seq.

term of office. A fixed and definite period of time during which the incumbent of an office is to hold it. Collison v State, 39 Del 460, 2 A2d 97, 119 ALR 1422. The time during which one regularly chosen by election or appointment and inducted into office is entitled to hold the same, perform its functions and enjoy its privileges and emoluments. State v Knight, 76 Mont 71, 245 P 267.

See tenure of office.

term of patent. The duration of the patent and of the rights of the patentee thereunder. Diamond Match Co. v Adirondack Match Co. (CC Vt) 65 F 803.

term of years. A period of years. As used in a statute providing for increased punishment of any person upon a conviction after a previous conviction for an offense punishable by imprisonment for a "term of years," a minimum of two years. 25 Am J1st Habit Cr § 2.

See tenancy for years.

termor. The owner of an estate for life or for years.

term policy. See term insurance.

terms good firms. A commercial or mercantile expression.

The acceptance of an offer to purchase a commodity on the condition "terms good firms" was held to mean that the commodity was to be weighed at its destination by responsible business men, and that the seller did not bind himself to accept weights made by unreliable people. Anno: 1 ALR 1509.

terms net cash. A condition in a contract of sale requiring the purchaser to pay the price before being entitled to delivery of the goods. 46 Am J1st Sales § 202.

See net cash; net cash ten days.

Terra Walliae cum incolis suis, prius regi jure foedali subjects, jam in proprietatis dominium totaliter et cum integritate conversa est, et coronae regni Angliae tanquam pars corporis ejusdem annexe et unita. The country of Wales, with its inhabitants was formerly subject to the king under feudal law; now it is wholly converted into a principality and annexed to and united with the crown of England as a part of the same body. See 1 B1 Comm 94.

terra warrenata. Land in which there was free warren or the franchise of hunting and preserving game in a warren.

terre. Land.

terre seynte. See essoin de terre seynte.

terre-tenant. A person who is a purchaser, mediately or immediately, from a judgment debtor, while the land purchased is bound by the judgment. An owner of real property which is subject to the lien of a judgment against another person. Not a "debtor" within the meaning of a statute exempting a certain amount out of the proceeds of land. Eberhart's Appeal, 39 Pa 509.

terrible. Exciting terror. Frightful or dreadful. Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Co. v Roller (CA9 Cal) 100 F 738.

[1269]

territorial. Pertaining or belonging to a territory of the United States.

territorial court. A court in the judicial system of a territory of the United States. 49 Am J1st States §§ 107, 131.

Although the judicial system set up in a territory of the United States is part of the federal jurisdiction, the phrase "court of the United States," when used in a federal statute, is generally construed as not referring to territorial courts. International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union v Wirtz (CA9 Hawaii) 170 F2d 183, cert den 336 US 919, 93 L Ed 1082, 69 S Ct 641, reh den 336 US 971, 93 L Ed 1121, 69 S Ct 936.

territorial governor. The chief executive of a territory of the United States. New York ex rel. Kopel v Bingham, 211 US 468, 53 L Ed 286, 29 S Ct 190.

territorial judge. The judge of a court of a territory of the United States. McAllister v United States, 141 US 278, 39 L Ed 982, 15 S Ct 889.

See territorial court.

territorial jurisdiction. The limits of the geographical boundaries of a district within which a judge or other judicial officer has jurisdiction to act judicially, and outside of which his judicial acts are null and void. Phillips v Thralls, 26 Kan 780, 781. The jurisdiction of a court in reference to the area in which the process of the court is affective. Jurisdiction subject to territorial limitations.

The jurisdiction of a court cannot extend beyond the territory belonging to the sovereignty on behalf of which it functions, and its jurisdiction may be further limited territorially, by constitutional or statutory provisions, to a part only of the territory of the sovereignty to which it belongs. 20 Am J2d Cts § 153.

territorial limitation. A charter limitation in reference to the territorial scope of the operations of the corporation. 36 Am J2d For Corp § 87. A limit upon the exercise of judicial power. Lynde v Winnebago County (US) 16 Wall 6, 21 L Ed 272. Limitation of jurisdiction to territory within certain definite boundaries. 20 Am J2d Cts § 153. A limitation on the operation of a statute to territory within the boundaries of a particular district or political division or subdivision. 50 Am J1st Stat § 485.

territorial possessions. All lands acquired by the United States by treaty or purchase which have not become an integral part of the United States, in other words, territory that has not been incorporated into the United States. Rasmussen v United States, 197 US 516, 49 L Ed 862, 25 S Ct 514.

territorial waters. See three mile limit.

territorium. See extra territorium.

territory. An area, especially one of significance from a particular aspect, as in the case of a salesman's territory or of good hunting territory. A region which, although not a state, has an organized system of government. People of Porto Rico v Rosaly y Castillo, 227 US 270, 33 S Ct 352, 57 L Ed 507.

As the word is used in the phrase "the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof," it means the regional areas—of land and adjacent waters—over which the United States claims and exercises dominion and control as a sovereign power. It refers to areas or districts having fixity of location and recognized boundaries. Cunard Steamship Co. v Mellon, 262 US 100, 67 L Ed 894, 43 S Ct 504, 27 ALR 1306, 1315.

See territorial possessions; unincorporated territory; unorganized territory.

territory adjacent. See adjacent territory.

territory of the United States. See territory.

terrorem. See in terrorem.

terrorem populi. See in terrorem populi.

terroristic act. Act of vandalism or violence. Anno: 116 ALR 507.

tertia. The third part; dower. See 2 Bl Comm 129.

tesmoignance. See entesmoignance.

test. See performance test; triennial test; tuberculin test; Wasserman test; wild beast test.

testable. The state or condition of a person who is possessed of testamentary capacity.

See testamentary capacity.

Test Act. An act of parliament of 1672, directing all officers, civil and military to take oaths and make the declaration against transubstantiation in any of the king's courts at Westminster, or at the quarter sessions, within six calendar months after their admission. See 4 Bl Comm 58.

testacy. The condition of a deceased person who died leaving a valid will.

testament. Historically, a disposition of personal property effective upon the death of the testator, but in modern usage, a will disposing of either real or personal property, or both kinds of property. 57 Am J1st Wills § 2.

In common usage, the words, will, testament, and last will are synonymous. Occidental L. Ins. Co. v Powers, 192 Wash 475, 74 P2d 27, 114 ALR 531.

See adulterinum testamentum; ex testamento.

Testamenta latissimam interpretationem habere debent. Wills ought to have the broadest interpretation or construction.

testamentary. See testamentary character.

testamentary arbitrator. A person appointed by a testator in his will to interpret and settle difficulties between beneficiaries growing out of dispositions made by the will. Anno: 104 ALR 362, 363.

testamentary capacity. The capacity to accomplish the purpose of making a valid will as determined objectively from the standpoint of the purpose. The capacity of a person making a will to know the natural objects of his bounty, to comprehend the kind and character of his property, to understand the nature and effect of his act, and to make a disposition of his property according to some plan formed in his mind. Re Hagan, 143 Neb 459, 98 NW2d 794, 154 ALR 573.

A testator is of sound and disposing mind and memory, and hence, competent, if at the time of making his will, he has sufficient mental capacity to understand the nature of the act he is doing, to understand and recollect the nature and situation of his property, and to remember and understand his relations to persons who have claims upon his bounty and whose interests are affected by the provisions of the instrument. In re Smith's Estate, 200 Cal 152, 252 P 325.

Testamentary capacity includes a recollection of the persons related to him by ties of blood and affection, and of the nature of the claims of those who are excluded from participating in his estate. 57 Am J1st Wills § 51.

testamentary character. See testamentary instrument.

testamentary class. Persons included and comprehended under some general description in a will, bearing a certain relation to the testator, having a common relation to each other, sustaining the same relation to the bequest, or included together in a grouping made by the testator. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1259.

testamentary disposition. The disposition of property by deed, will, or otherwise, in such a manner that it shall not take effect unless or until the grantor dies. Chestnut Street Nat. Bank v Fidelity Ins. Trust & Safe Deposit Co. 186 Pa 333, 40 A 486.

See testamentary instrument.

testamentary expenses. Expenses of administration. Construed in some instances, although not in others, as inclusive of estate taxes or duties, as the phrase appears in a direction by the testator to the executor for the payment by the latter of "testamentary expenses." Anno: 51 ALR 466.

testamentary guardian. A guardian appointed by the deed or the last will of the parent of the ward. 25 Am J1st G & W § 12.

testamentary heir. See heir testamentary.

testamentary instrument. An instrument such that, from the language used, it is apparent that the maker intended to make a disposition of his property or some part thereof, to be effective at his death. 57 Am J1st Wills § 8. An instrument manifesting a donative intent, but neither conferring nor evidencing an intent to confer, upon the donees any property, right, or benefit during the life of the maker, having no binding effect during his life, and remaining revocable by him at his pleasure. 57 Am J1st Wills § 7.

An instrument is testamentary when it is written or made so as not to take effect until after the death of the person making it, and to be revocable and to retain the property under his control during his life, although he may have believed that it would operate as an instrument of a different character. Benson v Benson, 125 Okla 151, 256 P 912, 62 ALR 935.

testamentary power. The power to make a will existing under the law as a matter of privilege. Hamilton v Morgan, 93 Fla 311, 112 So 80.

Convicts may have the capacity and yet be denied the power to make a will. 57 Am J1st Wills § 51.

See testamentary capacity.

testamentary power of sale. A power of sale of real or personal property of a decedent conferred upon the executor of the estate of the decedent by his will. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 437.

Where a power of sale is given to an executor by virtue of his office, and not to him as an individual, the presumption is that it was given for the purpose of being executed in the interest of the estate and not for his own benefit. Sweeny v Warren, 127 NY 426, 28 NE 413.

testamentary trust. A trust created by will.

See precatory trust.

testamentary trustee. A trustee appointed by the court to execute a trust created by a will, either nominated by the will itself or not so nominated. See Re Hazard (NY) 51 Hun 201, 4 NYS 701.

testamento. A last will or testament.

testamentum. A last will or testament.

Testamentum est voluntatis nostrae justa sententia de eo, quod quis post mortem loam fieri velit. A will is the legal declaration of a man's intentions, which he wills to be performed after his death. See 2 Bl Comm 499.

testamentum inofficiosum. Same as unofficial will.

Testamentum omne morte consummatum. Every will is consummated or perfected by death.

testate. A deceased person who died leaving a will; the condition of a person who dies leaving a will.

testatio mentis. A bearing witness of the mind; a testament; a will. See 2 Bl Comm 499.

testation. Same as attestation.

testator. A deceased person who died leaving a valid will.

Testatoris ultima voluntas est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam. The last will of a testator is to be fulfilled according to his true intention.

testator's presence. See in the presence of the testator.

testatrix. Feminine of testator.

testatum. Testified.

testatum capias. A writ or process issued in a civil action for the arrest of a defendant when the return of a previously issued process showed that he could not be found within the county. See 3 Bl Comm 283.

testatum clause. Same as testimonium clause.

testatum writ. A writ of fieri facias issued from a court which renders a judgment for the purpose of subjecting property of the judgment debtor in another county to the satisfaction of the judgment. 30 Am J2d Exec § 60.

testatus. Testate; a testator.

test case. A case involving an actual controversy but brought for the purpose of determining the law upon the point presented. 1 Am J2d Actions § 56.

A "test case" is not necessarily a moot case, and where a case is one of fact or right, there is no principle of law or policy which will deprive a party of a determination, simply because his motive in the assertion of such a right is to secure such a determination. It is a matter of common practice. Indeed, most of the cases of trespass to try title are of this sort. See Adams v Union Railroad Co. 21 RI 134, 42 A 515.

teste. Verb: To bear witness. Richbourg v Rose, 53 Fla 173, 44 So 69. Noun: A formal declaration bearing witness to the official character and time of issuance of a judicial writ. 42 Am J1st Proc § 9.

teste clause. Same as testimonium clause.

tested. Witnessed; attested; executed in the presence of witnesses who certify to the fact. Given a test; subjected to a test.

Teste meipso. I, myself bear witness.

teste of a deed. See testimonium clause.

teste of writ. See teste.

Testes ponderantur, non numerantur. Witnesses are weighed, not counted.

test explosion. A nuclear explosion detonated on an experimental basis. 6 Am J2d Atomic E § 48.

Testibus deponentibus in pari numero dignioribus est credendum. Where the witnesses have testified in, equal numbers (on each side), the more worthy of them are to be believed.

testify. To give one's testimony under oath as a witness.

In an action by a seller's personal representative against the buyer upon a book account, the representative's offer in evidence of the decedent's books of account is not such a "testifying" by the representative as to constitute a waiver, within the meaning of a statute relating to testimony as to transactions with the decedent, so as to permit the surviving opponent to take the stand against him. Johnson v Hoffman, 7 NJ 123, 80 A2d 624, 26 ALR2d 1001.

testimonia. Testimony; evidence.

testimonial admission. An informal judicial admission whereby a party may bar his claim or defense by his own testimony. Rosbottom v Hensley, 61 Ill App 2d 198, 209 NE2d 655.

Testimonia ponderanda sunt, non numeranda. Testimony is to be weighed, not counted (by the number of witnesses).

testimonio. A word found in Spanish-American grants and signifying the first copy of the expediente of such a grant.

An expediente is a complete statement of every step taken in the proceedings. A grant of final title papers is attached to the testimonio and delivered to the grantee as evidence of title, and entry is made at the time in a book called the Toma de Razon, which identifies the grantee, date of the grant, and property granted. The dictionaries define tomas razon as meaning to register; to take a memorandum of; to make a record of a thing, and toma de razon, they define as meaning a memorandum book. Ainsa v United States, 161 US 208, 219, 40 L Ed 673, 677.

testimonium. See testimonium clause.

testimonium clause. The clause in a written instrument, otherwise known as a testatum clause, such as "in witness whereof," by which the act and date of execution is directed to the writing. Arrington v Arrington, 122 Ala 510, 26 So 152. An attestation clause. 13 Am J2d Bonds § 12.

In the case of a corporation grantor, the testatum clause recites that the corporation has caused its corporate seal to be affixed and its corporate name to be signed by its duly authorized officers. Kelly v Calhoun, 95 US 710, 24 L Ed 544.

See attestation clause.

testimony. The words of a witness upon the stand. 29 Am J2d Ev § 3. In loose usage, the evidence in a case. Roberts v Carlson, 142 Neb 851, 8 NW2d 175.

Testimony is one thing and evidence is another; testimony is the words heard from the witnesses in court, and evidence is what the jury considers it worth. Schultz v Bower, 57 Minn 493, 59 NW 631.

testis. A witness.

Testis de visu praeponderat aliis. An eyewitness outweighs other witnesses.

Testis nemo in sua causa esse potest. No one can be a witness in his own cause.

Testis oculatus onus plus valet quam auriti decem. One eyewitness is worth more than ten ear-witnesses.

test letter. A decoy letter, that is, an imitation of a genuine letter, usually marked and directed to a fictitious person, placed in the mails by postal inspectors or officers of the department of justice for the purpose of detecting a post-office employee who is suspected of appropriating letters or their contents; or a letter sent through the mails by such officers to a person suspected of sending prohibited matter through the mails, for purpose of detecting him in such violation of the law. Montgomery v United States, 162 US 410, 40 L Ed 1020, 16 S Ct 797; Goode v United States, 159 US 663, 40 L Ed 297, 16 S Ct 136.

Testmognes ne poent testifie le negative mes 1'affirmative. Witnesses cannot testify to a negative, but they may testify to an affirmative.

test oath. An oath required as an assurance of a person's loyalty to the nation and government. 39 Am J1st Oath § 7.

test of insanity. The principle applied in determining whether a person is afflicted with such mental infirmity as to be unable to bind himself by contract, as to render him irresponsible for acts otherwise criminal, or as to require his commitment to an institution. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins Per § 2.

See right and wrong test.

test order. A provisional or temporary order by an administrative agency. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 466.

test pilot. A pilot who flies new or repaired aircraft by way of testing the safety and control of the craft.

test run. Taking out a ship or smaller watercraft for the purpose of testing its performance. Gilreath v Silverman, 245 NC 51, 95 SE2d 107.

tetanus. An infectious disease characterized by contractions of muscles, especially the muscles of the jaw, so that the disease is often known as lockjaw. Pitman v Commercial Travelers' Eastern Acci. Asso. 284 Mass 467, 188 NE 241.

Texas fever. A contagious or infectious disease of cattle. 4 Am J2d Am § 38.

textbook. A book of instruction in a particular subject, particularly a book for use in schools, colleges, and universities. 47 Am J1st Sch § 202. A law book covering a particular subject, such as insurance, municipal corporations, admiralty, etc.

textile design. A design of a pattern of color of cloth. H. M. Kolbe v Armigus Textile Co. (CA2 NY) 315 F2d 70, 99 ALR2d 390.

text-writer. The author of a text book or treatise upon some branch of the law or scientific subject.

thaini. Freeholders.

thalweg. The deep way or most navigable channel; the middle, deepest, or most navigable channel. State of Iowa v Illinois, 147 US 1, 8, 37 L Ed 55, 57, 13 S Ct 239. The name given to the principle of the law of nations that where nations are divided by a navigable river, each should hold for commercial reasons to the center thread of the main channel or current along which vessels in the carrying trade pass, in other words to the channel of commerce, not the shallow water of the stream. 30 Am J Rev ed Internat L § 16.

Thanksgiving Day. A holiday as designated by the proclamation of the governor of a state or by the President of the United States. State v Hirsch, 125 Ind 207, 24 NE 1062.

that is to say. A phrase of art used as a videlicet.

See videlicet.

theater. A building especially adapted to dramatic, operatic or spectacular representations a playhouse. Asa G. Candler, Inc. v Georgia Theater Co. 148 Ga 188, 96 SE 226. A room, hall, or other place so arranged that a body of spectators can have an unobstructed view of the platform where dramatic or musical entertainment is presented. 4 Am J2d Amuse § 2. Literally, as derived from the Greek, a place for seeing. Asa G. Candler, Inc. v Georgia Theater Co. 148 Ga 188, 96 SE 226.

theater license. A license required by a municipal corporation of one operating a theater.

See theater ticket.

theater ticket. A ticket entitling to admission to a performance in a theater, ordinarily entitling the holder to a seat reserved for him and noted upon the ticket.

A license issued by the proprietor, pursuant to the contract, as convenient evidence of the right of the holder to admission to the theater at the date named, with the privilege specified, subject, however, to his observance of any reasonable condition appearing on the face thereof. The license, though granted for a consideration, is revocable for a violation of such condition by the holder of the ticket in the manner specified therein. The ticket is not the contract, although to some extent it is evidence thereof. The contract is implied from the circumstances, and is an agreement on the part of the proprietor, for the consideration mentioned, to admit the holder of the ticket, upon presentation thereof, to his theater at the date named, with the right to occupy the seat specified, subject, however, to his observance of any reasonable condition appearing on the face thereof. Collister v Hayman, 183 NY 250, 76 NE 20.

theater ticket speculator. See ticket speculator.

theatrical agency. An employment agency specializing in actors and entertainers of stage, screen, radio, and television. 27 Am J2d Employ Ag § 9.

theatrical exhibition. See theatrical performance.

theatrical performance. A dramatic, operatic, or spectacular representation. 4 Am J2d Amuse § 2.

theatricals. An unseemly demonstration in court, usually for the purpose of exciting the sympathy of court or jury. Tom Reed Goldmines Co. v Berd, 32 Ariz 479, 260 Y 191, 57 ALR 55.

See theatrical performance.

The Bold Buccleugh. A celebrated English admiralty case decided in 1852 by the judicial committee of the privy council, establishing the rule that the privilege or claim of a maritime lien constitutes a present right of property in the ship, a jus in re, to be afterwards enforced in admiralty by process in rem; and that from the moment when the claim or privilege attaches, it is inchoate, and when carried into effect by legal process, by a proceeding in rem, it relates back to the period when it first attached.

This claim or privilege travels with the vessel into whatsoever possession it may come, even that of a bona fide purchaser; and it is not divested by the death or insolvency of the owner. The John G. Stevens, 170 US 113, 42 L Ed 969, 18 S Ct 544.

theft. Larceny. A broader term than larceny, including other forms of wrongful deprivation of the property of another. 32 Am J1st Larc § 2.

The word is defined as a fraudulent taking of corporeal personal property belonging to another from his possession, or from the possession of some person holding the same for him, without his consent, with intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same, and to appropriate it to the use or benefit of the person taking. The taking must be wrongful, so that if the property came into the possession of the person accused of theft by lawful means, the subsequent appropriation of it is not theft, but if the taking, though originally lawful, was obtained by any false pretext, or with any intent to deprive the owner of the value thereof, and appropriate the property to the use and benefit of the person taking, and the same is so appropriated, the offense of theft is complete. Anno: 30 ALR 663.

See theft insurance.

theft bote. The common law offense of an owner in receiving the property from one who took it by theft, under an agreement not to prosecute or to prosecute but in a fainthearted manner. State v Hodge, 142 NC 665, 55 SE 626.

theft insurance. Insurance against the risk of loss by theft. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1333. A contract to indemnify against loss by thieves. Anno: 46 LRA (NS) 562; 47 LRA (NS) 296.

Where the word "theft" is used in an insurance policy, without definition, it should be interpreted as liberally as possible to protect the insured. American Ins. Co. v Burson (CA5 Fla) 213 F2d 487, 48 ALR2d 1.

The word "theft" in a policy insuring against loss by burglary, larceny, or "theft," is a broader term than "larceny," including wrongful deprivation of property by embezzlement or swindling. Fidelity & Casualty Co. v Wathen, 205 Ky 511, 266 SW 4, 41 ALR 844.

The word "theft" is ordinarily synonymous with the word larceny. But even in jurisdictions where the act of the taker constitutes statutory larceny, it is usually held that there is no "theft," as the word is used in policies of insurance against theft, unless there is an intent to deprive the owner, not temporarily but permanently, of his property. Anno: 46 ALR 536.

See automobile theft insurance.

theft loss. A deduction of loss by theft in computation of taxable income, "theft" being broadly defined in this connection to include larceny, robbery, embezzlement, even a wrongful withholding by a trustee. Internal Revenue Code § 165; Vincent v Commissioner (CA9) 219 F2d 228. A deduction in determining the taxable estate of a decedent for estate tax purposes of losses incurred by theft during the settlement of the estate. Internal Revenue Code 1954 § 2054; 26 USC § 2054.

thegn. A tenant in capite.

See tenant in capite.

Thellusson Act. An English statute by which all persons are prohibited from settling property by deed or will so that the rents and profits shall be wholly or partially accumulated for a longer term than the life of the settlor, or 21 years after his death, or during the minority of a person or persons living at the time of the death of the settlor, or during the minority or respective minorities only of a person or persons who, if of full age, would have been absolutely entitled under the settlement. Act of 39 and 40 Geo III, Ch 98; 41 Am J1st Perp § 44.

theme. The underlying thought of an article or discourse. In the law of copyright, the underlying thought presented in an original way, characterized by novelty or embellishment, so that it becomes the literary property of the author in the exclusive use of which he is entitled to protection. Roe-Lawton v Hal E. Roach Studios (DC Cal) 18 F2d 126.

then. At that time. Next in the order of events. Accordingly. As used in a will, subject to construction as an adverb of time, having its ordinary grammatical acceptation in meaning, or as a word of reasoning connecting a consequence with a premise, in other words, the equivalent of "in that event." 57 Am J1st Wills § 1332. A word sometimes postponing the ascertainment of a class until the time to which it has reference. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1283. In a limitation of a remainder, ordinarily relating to the time of enjoyment rather than the time of vesting. Anno: 103 ALR 599.

A will providing that, at the expiration of a life estate, the testator "then" gives the remainder to his children "absolutely and forever," uses the word "then" as an adverb of time to be construed as relating solely to the time of enjoyment of the estate, and not to the time of its vesting in interest. Re Kroos, 302 NY 424, 99 NE2d 222, 47 ALR2d 894.

In an indictment, where the time when an act was done is alleged as "then," and time is not an issuable fact in the case, the word "then" means any time within the period of the statute of limitations. State v Archer, 32 NM 319, 255 P 396, 399.

then and there. See did then and there.

then cash value. The amount of money the property involved would produce, if offered and sold for cash in the open market upon the relevant date. Re Woolsey, 109 Neb 138, 190 NW 215, 24 ALR 1038.

thence. From a stated place.

The phrase "thence up the river" as used in field notes describing the boundary of a survey of public land, must be read with the declaration that the survey is on the southern bank of the river, in the light of the drawing or plat representing the river as the northern boundary. Oklahoma v Texas, 268 US 252, 69 L Ed 937, 45 S Ct 497.

Insurance on a ship to a port, "thence" to another, and "thence" to a third, is the same as from the first to the last with liberty to stop at the intermediate ports. When applied to an intermediate port, the words "thence" or "from" have not the same exclusive sense as when used with regard to the commencement of a voyage. Bradley v Nashville Ins. Co. 3 La Ann 708.

then living. Characterizing survivorship referred to the termination of a life estate or other intervening estate. 28 Am J2d Est § 269. A phrase in a will operating to preclude application of rule that a class is to be determined as of the time of death of the testator. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1284.

theocracy. A government which recognizes God as its ruler.

Theodoric. See Edictum Theodorici. theological seminary. See seminary.

theolonium. Toll.

the ordinary prudent man. The standard man; the average prudent individual; the reasonable and prudent man or the careful and diligent man. An abstract man of ordinary mental and physical capacity, but an ideal man in the sense that his conduct is in every case the gauge of due care under the circumstances, notwithstanding the precautions attributed to him are not those of usage and custom. 38 Am J1st Negl § 30.

theoretical inch. A term referred to in discussions of measurement of water.

In water measurement, the theoretical inch is founded upon the theory that water spouting from the side of a flume with a certain head, say four feet, will have the same velocity as if it fell the same distance through the air, and, as this velocity is fixed and certain, the amount of water referred to in the theoretical inch is fixed and certain. But the theory is not true in actual practice. Janesville Cotton Mills v Ford, 82 Wis 416, 52 NW 764.

theory of case. The design or principle on which a party maintains his alleged cause of action or defense. A necessary statement in a bill in equity. O'Brien v People, 216 Ill 354, 75 NE 108.

The theory of the case should be presented with sufficient allegations of fact to give basis and point to the charges, but if the allegations develop too much theory, the door will be open to the criticism of stating mere conclusions of law or of being too abstract. O'Brien v People, 216 Ill 354, 75 NE 108.

As a general rule, a reviewing court considers the case only upon the theory upon which it was tried in the court below. 5 Am J2d A & E § 546.

theosophy. A philosophy, perhaps a religion, which teaches the obtaining of insight in divine principle through contemplation and revelation. Anno: 12 ALR2d 872, § 4.

the parol demur. An old common-law expression for a stay to await the expiration of time removing the disability of a party.

When the heir was sued upon a specialty obligation of the ancestor chargeable on the inheritance, if he was an infant he might pray that "the parol demur" until he should reach his majority. See 27 Am J1st Inf § 157.

the people. Citizens. Anno: 68 L Ed 266, 267.

See people of the state; people of the United States.

The power to tax is the power to destroy. A famous declaration of Chief Justice Marshall in McCulloch v State of Maryland, 4 Wheat (US) 431, 4 L Ed 579.

A striking instance of the truth of this proposition is seen in the fact that the existing tax of ten per cent, imposed by the United States on the circulation of all other banks than national banks, drove out of existence every state bank of circulation within a year or two after its passage. Loan Asso. v Topeka (US) 20 Wall 655, 22 L Ed 455.

therapy. The treatment of disease, whether by the administration of drugs or surgery. Stewart v Raab, 55 Minn 20, 21, 56 NW 256.

See drugless therapeutics; physiotherapy.

thereafter. After a certain event. In a limitation of a remainder, ordinarily relating to the time of enjoyment rather than the time of vesting. 28 Am J2d Est § 257.

thereafter clause. A term familiar to oilmen, being a clause in an oil or gas lease intended to establish rights in the lessee notwithstanding termination of the primary term of the lease, where production is maintained. Anno: 100 ALR2d 901.

thereby. Because of; by reason of. Hornbrook v Elm Grove, 40 W Va 543, 21 SE 851.

there is hereby granted. Words importing a grant in praesenti and an immediate transfer of interest. Okanogan County v Cheetham, 37 Wash 682, 80 P 262.

theretofore. Before a certain time or the time of the occurrence of a known event. Hamilton v State, 129 Fla 219, 176 So 89, 112 ALR 1013.

thereunto. An elliptical form of expression for the phrase "to do that."

Hence, an agent "thereunto authorized in writing" is an agent who must be authorized in writing "to do that;" that is, for example, to execute a written contract for his principal. Anno: 27 ALR 612.

thereupon. Without delay or lapse of time. Putnam v Langley, 133 Mass 204, 205.

thesaurus inventus. Found treasure; treasure-trove.

Thesaurus regis est vinculum pacis et bellorum nervus. The treasury of the king is the bond of peace and the sinew of war.

"These maxims, it is said, should apply to the state, and her revenues should be protected with as much solicitude as those of the British king." State v Foster, 5 Wyo 199, 38 P 926.

these presents. Formal words for "this instrument," "this very instrument."

thesmothete. A law giver.

thief. A person who has committed the crime of larceny. One guilty of theft.

thimbleric. To cheat by means of prestidigitation.

thimbles and balls. A game of chance played with thimbles and a ball, success depending on designating the thimble under which the ball has been placed. 24 Am J1st Gaming § 28.

thing. See things.

thing appendant. A thing which is affixed or belongs to some more important thing. thing in action. Same as chose in action.

thing of value. Something having a monetary value. 17 Am J2d Contr § 95.

As the term is used in the law of larceny, it includes any tangible thing which the law recognizes as being property. Columbus Railroad Co. v Woolfolk, 128 Ga 631, 58 SE 152.

The term is defined, as it pertains to the subject of gambling, as any thing affording the necessary lure to indulge the gambling instinct. Painter v State, 163 Tenn 627, 45 SW2d 46, 81 ALR 173.

things. Inanimate objects. Gayer v Whelan, 59 Cal App 255, 139 P2d 763. As the subject matter of a bequest, effects, goods, assets, or property, dependent upon the intent of the testator as such appears from the will. Arnolds Estate, 240 Pa 261, 87 A 590.

See rights of things.

things personal. Goods, money, and all other movables, which may attend the owner's person wherever he cares to go. Transcontinental Oil Co. v Emmerson, 298 Ill 394, 131 NE 645, 16 ALR 507, 512.

things real. Such things as are permanent, fixed, and immovable, which cannot be carried out of their place, as lands and tenements. Transcontinental Oil Co. v Emmerson, 298 Ill 394, 131 NE 645, 16 ALR 507, 512.

think. See I think.

Third Amendment. An amendment to the Constitution of the United States, one of the Bill of Rights, forbidding the quartering of soldiers in time of peace in any house without the consent of the owner, and in time of war except as in a manner prescribed by law.

third arbitrator. An arbitrator called in by two original arbitrators to act in conjunction with them and thus break a deadlock. He is not an umpire, because he does not act alone. 5 Am J2d Arb & A § 85.

third-class mail. Circulars and books, and other printed matter not in first or second class; merchandise; seeds, bulbs, and plants. 41 Am J1st P O § 60.

third cousin. The child of a second cousin. A relative in the sixth degree according to the civil-law method of computing degrees of kinship which prevails in most American jurisdictions. Anno: 54 ALR2d 1012, § 1(b). Sometimes known as a second cousin once removed.

third degree. The employment of coercion, mental or physical, in obtaining a confession. People v Loper, 159 Cal 6, 112 P 720.

third degree relative. Under the civil-law method of computing degrees of kinship which prevails in most American jurisdictions, an uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, and great grandparent. Anno: 55 ALR2d 645, § 1[b].

See degrees of kinship.

third house. A facetious name for that which is nothing more nor less than an organized lobby. Common Council of Detroit v Rentz, 91 Mich 78, 51 NW 787.

third parties. All persons who are not parties to the contract, agreement, or instrument of writing, by which their interest in the thing conveyed is sought to be affected. Morrison v Trudeau (La) 1 Mart NS 384, 387. Persons other than original plaintiff or defendant but brought into the action.

See bystander; third person.

third-party action. A concept and the application thereof in modern practice under statute or rule of practice whereby the defendant in an action brings into the action a third person under allegation in an appropriate pleading that the third person is liable over to the defendant in reference to the cause of action asserted by the plaintiff, so that there may be determined in the one action the issues as between the plaintiff and the defendant and the issues as between the defendant and the person thus brought into the action by him.

third-party beneficiary. The beneficiary of a contract made between two other persons. 17 Am J2d Contr § 302.

third-party beneficiary contract. A contract for the benefit of a third person. 17 Am J2d Contr § 302.

third-party claim. A claim to property held under attachment as the property of the defendant in the action, made by a person not a party to the action. 6 Am J2d Attach §§ 572 et seq.

third-party complaint. The pleading of the defendant against a third person whom he seeks to bring into the action as a party because of an alleged liability over to the defendant.

See third-party action.

third-party contract. See third-party beneficiary contract.

third-party plaintiff. The defendant in an action who assumes the status of a plaintiff in bringing a third person into the action as one liable over him.

See third-party action.

third-party practice. A principle found in modern practice statutes and rules of practice whereby a defendant is permitted to bring into the action a person or persons who are liable over to the defendant, the efficacy and justice being that the several issues between the plaintiff and the defendant and between the defendant and the third person brought into the action will be determined at one time and by the same jury or trier of the fact.

See impleader.

third-party summons. A summons or notice by which a person not originally a party to an action is summoned to answer a third-party complaint.

third-party technique. Giving propaganda actually circulated by a party in interest the appearance of being spontaneous declarations of independent groups. Eastern R. Presidents Conference v Noerr Motor Freight, Inc. 365 US 127, 5 L Ed 2d 464, 81 S Ct 523.

third person. One not involved. A bystander. As a depository of an escrow:-a stranger to the instrument, not a party to it; a person so free from personal or legal identity with the parties to the instrument as to leave him free to discharge his duty as a depository to both parties without involving a breach of duty to either. 28 Am J2d Escr § 12.

The dictation of a letter otherwise libelous by the president of a corporation to his stenographer, in the course of the business of the corporation, is not a communication to a third person. Globe Furniture Co. v Wright, 49 App DC 315, 265 F 873, 18 ALR 772.

As the expression is used in the generally recognized rule that the acts of a de facto officer are valid as to "third persons," it means those persons having business of an official character with such officer, and not third persons in the usual legal sense in which the term is used. State ex ref. Brockmeier v Ely, 16 ND 569.

See third parties.

third possessor. One who buys mortgaged property without assuming to pay the mortgage.

If one buys real estate, and does not assume the payment of the first mortgage, he is bound only as a third possessor. He must either give up the property, or pay the amount for which it was mortgaged. This is the full extent of his responsibility as a purchaser. See Thompson v Levy, 50 La Ann 751, 752, 23 So 913.

third rail. An extra rail of an electric railroad, particularly a subway or elevated railroad, through which electric current for the propulsion of the car or train is supplied. Riedel v West Jersey & S. R. Co. (CA3 Pa) 177 F 374.

thirlage. The servitude of being required to have the grain raised on the land ground at a particular mill for which a certain payment was to be made.

Thirteenth Amendment. The Amendment to the United States Constitution which abolished slavery and established universal freedom in the United States. Civil Rights Cases, 109 US 3, 27 L Ed 835, 3Sct18.

tholonium. Toll.

thorium. A radioactive element. 42 USC § 2098(a).

thorough. Complete. Painstaking.
See toll thorough.

thoroughfare. A passage through; a street or way open at both ends and free from any obstruction. Mankato v Warren, 20 Minn 144. A highway.
See main thoroughfare.

thorough repair. Sufficient repair; repair sufficient to make the premises tenantable. 32 Am J1st L & T § 789.

thousand. Ten hundred; abbreviated "M."

thousand-year lease. A lease for a term of 1,000 years, a valid lease, except as terms are restricted by statute. 32 Am J1st L & T § 64.

thread of stream. The mean center line of the main channel of a stream or river. Buttenuh v St. Louis Bridge Co. 123 Ill 535, 17 NE 439. The middle line between the shores, irrespective of the depth of the channel, taking it in the natural and ordinary stage of the water, at its medium height, neither swollen by freshet nor diminished by drought. 12 Am J2d Bound § 28. Noting, however, that according to some authority, the thread of a non-navigable river is to be ascertained from the measurement of the water at its lowest stage. Hardt v Orr, 142 Neb 460, 6 NW2d 589.

threat. Words or conduct intended to intimidate. A means of duress. Allen v Plymouth, 313 Mass 356, 47 NE2d 284; Fox v Piercey, 119 Utah 367, 227 P2d 763.

In law, a threat is a declaration of an intention or determination to injure another person by the commission of some unlawful act. An intimidation is the act of making another person timid or fearful by such a declaration. If the act intended to be done is not unlawful, then the declaration is not a threat in law, and the effect thereof is not intimidation in a legal sense. Payne v Western & Atlantic Railroad Co. 81 Tenn (13 Lea) 507.

As to the effect of a threat as a breach of the peace, see 12 Am J2d Breach P § 12.

threat by mail. The indictable offense of using the mails for the transmission of threatening matter. 41 Am J1st P O § 111.

threatened cloud. An anticipated cloud on the title to property such as equity will take cognizance of in a suit to quiet title. 44 Am J1st Quiet T § 17.

three days' grace. See days of grace.

threefold damages. See treble damages.

three-fourths clause. A provision in a policy of insurance that the insurer shall not be liable for an amount greater than a stated part or percentage, usually three-fourths, of the actual cash value of the property insured. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1547.

three-judge court. Any appellate court sitting with three justices in accordance with law. Any court having three qualified judges or justices, albeit court is actually held in one place and at one time by only one judge. In the most common sense of the term, a federal district court of three judges sitting on one case, as required in certain cases, particularly where an injunction is sought to restrain the enforcement of a statute or administrative order on the ground of unconstitutionality. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 252.

three-judge federal district court. See three-judge court.

three-mile belt. Same as three-mile limit.

three-mile limit. The territorial waters of a state on the sea coast are often so designated since they include a strip three nautical miles wide off shore. The width of the strip had its origin in the ordinary range of an ancient coast-defense cannon, estimated to be a marine league, that is, three nautical miles.

three-mile zone. Same as three-mile limit.

thresher's lien. A statutory lien for the value of services in threshing grain. 3 Am J2d Agri § 14.

threshing machine. A machine which separates grain from the straw, often called a separator. A machine, which, in its most complete form, beats the grain from the ears of cereals, separates the grain from the straw, and winnows it from the chaff. Cook v Massey, 38 Idaho 264, 220 Y 1088, 35 ALR 200, 205.

threshing outfit. A term familiar in the past but losing significance with the introduction of the combine. Engine, separator, and water wagon.

See combine.

thrift payment. A payment made to an employee pursuant to a thrift or savings plan. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 616.

thrithing. A riding.

See riding.

through. By way of. From end to end.

The word does not always mean from one end or side to the other end or side, but frequently means simply within; as I walked through the wilderness. See Provident Life & Trust Co. v Mercer County, 170 US 593, 602, 42 L Ed 1156, 1160, 18 S Ct 788.

through an agent. Acting by another. Anno: 45 ALR2d 587, § 3.

through bill of lading. A bill of lading where under a carrier agrees to transport the goods from the point of delivery by the shipper to a designated point of destination, although such transportation extends over the line of a connecting carrier. 13 Am J2d Car § 265.

through carriage. See through route.

through error. By mistake. Application of Byers, 43 Cust & Pat App (Pat) 803, 230 F2d 451, 457.

through freight. See through bill of lading; through freight contract; through train.

through freight contract. A contract between shipper and carrier for the shipment of goods from the initial point to the point of final destination, at a through rate, where such transportation extends over the line of a connecting carrier. Toledo, P. & W. R. Co. v Merriman, 52 Ill 123.

through highway or street. A public way at which vehicles approaching on intersecting highways or streets must stop before entering.

through passenger. See through ticket; through train.

through passenger train. See local through train.

through rate. The rate of a carrier for a shipment from point of receipt by the carrier to the ultimate destination, although the destination may be one which can be reached only by the employment of a connecting carrier. 13 Am J2d Car § 206. The rate from an originating point to the final destination, or to a gateway like Chicago, via a particular point.

Thus, on a shipment of grain from Enid, Oklahoma, to Chicago via Kansas City, the overhead through rate was 38.5 cents per hundred pounds. Board of Trade v United States, 314 US 534, 86 L Ed 331, 62 S Ct 366.

Through carriage implies a "through rate." This "through rate" is not necessarily a joint rate. It may be an aggregation of separate rates fixed independently by the several carriers forming the "through rate," as where the "through rate" is "the sum of the locals" on the several connecting lines, or is the sum of lower rates otherwise separately established by them for through transportation. See St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. v United States, 245 US 136, 139, note, 62 L Ed 199, 205, note, 38 S Ct 49.

through route. The route for the continuous carriage of goods from the originating point on the line of one carrier to destination on the line of another. St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. v United States, 245 US 136, 139, note, 62 L Ed 199, 205, note, 38 S Ct 49.

See through rate.

through ticket. A railroad ticket which entitles the holder, not only to passage over the line of the company issuing it, but also over other connecting lines over which it is necessary to pass in order to reach his destination. A through ticket does not require the passenger to make a continuous trip over all the lines without stopping. Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. v Klyman, 108 Tenn 304, 67 SW 472.

See coupon ticket; stopover privilege.

through train. A train, whether a freight or passenger train, which makes stops at only certain selected and definite stations. Arizona Eastern R. Co. v State, 29 Ariz 446, 242 P 870.

through transportation. Transportation undertaken by a common carrier where the destination of the shipment is one to be reached by connecting carrier, being beyond the line of the contracting carrier. 14 Am J2d Car § 689.

See through ticket.

thrown from vehicle. A method of sustaining personal injury, particularly in reference to the coverage of an accident insurance policy. A hurling of the insured from the car so that thereafter the person and the car are on independent orbits of action and momentum, and the result is that the person is no longer within the vehicle. Jones v Federal Life Ins. Co. 124 Colo 106, 234 P2d 615, 24 ALR2d 1450.

As to scope of clause of insurance policy covering injuries sustained from being "accidentally thrown from" a vehicle, see Anno: 24 ALR2d 1454.

thrown into bankruptcy. Adjudicated a bankrupt by a court of competent jurisdiction. Wilcox v Toledo & Ann Arbor Railroad Co. 45 Mich 280, 282, 7 NW 892. Adjudicated a bankrupt in an involuntary proceeding. thrown out of vehicle.

See thrown from vehicle.

thru. Same as through.

thumbing a ride. See hitchhiker.

thumbing the nose. An historic and present-day sign of contempt.

thumbprint. A mark in a signature by mark. Anno: 114 ALR 1116.

See fingerprints.

tick. A blood-sucking insect which prays on cattle and sheep, and sometimes upon man, often responsible for the communication of disease. 4 Am J2d Am § 32.

ticker. An instrumentality of a broker's officer upon which market quotations are received. 24 Am J1st Gaming § 36.

ticker tape. A tape running out of a recording device, consisting of news items, racing results, box-scores of baseball games, market quotations, local, national, and international news, etc. National Tel. News Co. v Western U. Tel. Co. (CA7 Ill) 119 F 294.

ticket. The entire list of candidates of a particular political party. 26 Am J2d Elect § 207. The means of admission to a theater or other place of amusement. 4 Am J2d Amuse § 5. A railroad ticket, amounting, according to some authority to a mere receipt or token, but, according to other authority, to a contract between the holder and the carrier. 14 Am J2d Car § 811. A maritime contract for the transportation of a person on a ship. 48 Am J1st Ship § 351. A document evidencing a transaction commonly known in the stock-brokerage business as the "loan" of shares of stock and the return by the borrower to the lender of shares of stock "borrowed." Provost v United States, 269 US 443, 449, 70 L Ed 352, 353, 46 S Ct 152.

See coupon ticket; general ticket; one-way ticket; round-trip ticket; subpoena ticket; theater ticket; through ticket.

ticket agency. A place where tickets to theaters, stadiums, and other places of amusement and recreation may be purchased. An office maintained by two or more carriers wherein tickets for transportation of passengers upon any of their lines may be purchased.

ticket agent. An employee of a common carrier, serving primarily in selling tickets to prospective passengers at a station of the carrier. An employee of a ticket agency. ticket broker.

See ticket agency; ticket scalping.

ticket office. An office maintained by a carrier wherein prospective passengers may purchase tickets. 14 Am J2d Car § 800.

See ticket agency.

ticket of leave. Probation granted to a person convicted of crime, whereby he is permitted to go at large.

ticket scalping. The practice of buying a large number of tickets to a forthcoming athletic or theatrical event, with the purpose, often accomplished, of selling them at a profit. The business of buying and selling the return ends of excursion railroad tickets and tickets which have been partially used. Ford v East Louisiana Railroad Co. 110 La 414, 34 So 585. Brokerage in railroad tickets. Hoffman v Northern Pacific Railroad Co. 45 Minn 53, 55, 47 NW 312.

Dealing in railway tickets in the manner commonly known as "ticket scalping" is not against public policy, and a ticket so sold and purchased is not thereby rendered invalid, in the absence of a statute or of a rule or regulation, of which the purchaser is chargeable with knowledge, prohibiting such transfer. Knecht v Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 18 Ohio Dec 202, 6 Ohio NP NS 13.

ticket speculator. A person who sells theater or other tickets at an advance over the price charged by the management.

Speculation of this kind frequently leads to abuse, especially when the seating capacity is filled and but few tickets are left, so that extortionate prices may be exacted. Collister v Hayman, 183 NY 250, 76 NE 20.

tickler. An appointment book. A pad for memorandums made to aid the memory. Another term for telltale.

tidal test. A common-law test of navigability, the rule being that only those waters in which the tide ebbs and flows are to be classified as navigable waters. 56 Am J1st Water § 178.

tidal waters. Waters in which the tide ebbs and flows. Chamberlain v Hemingway, 63 Conn 1, 27 A 239. Perhaps all salt waters. Water coming in from the sea because of the rising-tide. Waters which rise and fall with the tides of the sea.

It is the rise and fall of the water, and not the proportion of salt water to fresh, that determines whether a particular portion of a stream is within tide water. Atty. Gen. v Woods, 108 Mass 436, 439.

tide. The ebb and flow of the sea upon the shore due to the attraction of the moon and sun.

See flood-tide; high tide; low tide; mean high tide; mean low tide; neap tide.

tidelands. Lands at the margin of tidal waters which are alternately covered and uncovered by the rise and fall of the tide, between the lines of mean high tide and mean low tide, or, as sometimes provided by statute, extreme low tide. 56 Am J1st Water § 448.

Tidelands are not divested of their classification or character as such by the mere fact that title thereto may have passed from the sovereign to the individual. State v Van Vlack, 101 Wash 503, 172 P 563.

tide water. See tidal waters.

tideway. Land between high and low-water mark on the shore where the tide ebbs and flows. Re New York, 217 App Div 587, 591, 217 NYS 359, 363.

tie. Noun: One of the wooden timbers upon which the rails of a railroad track are laid. Something that binds. A necktie. Verb: To fasten things together, as with a string, cord, or wire. To equal another in a contest in reference to points, scores, etc. To equal another candidate in number of votes received in an election.

As applied to an appointment by election, the word signifies a state of equality between two or more competitors for the same position. A tie is that which is tied. It is a knot. Hence, the object of providing for a casting vote, in case of a tie, is to untie the knot. Wooster v Mullins, 64 Conn 340, 30 A 144.

tied-house evil. A term characterizing the control of retail liquor dealers by manufacturers, wholesalers, and importers. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 38.

tiel. Such.

tiempo inhabit. (Spanish.) A period of disability; a period of insolvency.

tiends. See annuity of tiends.

tierce. Same as terce.

tiers. Rows of seats or other objects, particularly at different heights.

See terce.

tie slash. The tops of trees the bodies of which have been used for making railroad ties. Caldwell v United States, 250 US 14, 18, 63 L Ed 816, 817, 39 S Ct 397.

tie slashing. See tie slash.

tie vote. An even vote in a legislative body. The exigency occurring when rival candidates for an elective office receive an equal number of votes. 26 Am J2d Elect § 315.

tiger. A large flesh-eating mammal of the cat family, native to Asia, tawny in general color, but having black stripes.

See blind tiger.

tigni immittendi. (Civil law.) The servitude or easement of projecting the beams of one's building into the wall of a neighbor.

ignum. (Civil law.) Building material.

Tilden Act. A New York statute passed in 1875 which authorized the bringing of actions by the state to recover unlawful gains made by the holders of state, county and city offices.

till. As a limit of time, the same as until. 52 Am J1st Time § 25.

tillage. The cultivation of land.

timber. A word of varied meanings, the meaning in a particular case to be ascertained from the entire context of the contract. 34 Am J1st Logs § 2. Standing trees. 34 Am J1st Logs § 2. Lumber, such as beams, rafters, planks, and other boards sawed from standing trees. Alcutt v Lakin, 33 NH 507. That sort of wood proper and suitable to be used for the construction of buildings, furniture, ships, etc. 34 Am J1st Logs § 2.

See log timber; saw timber.

timber culture entry. A settlement of an entryman on public lands of the United States under the provisions of an act to encourage the growth of timber on western prairies, approved March 3, 1873, and the various amendments thereto. Hartman v Warren (CA8 Minn) 76 F 157, 160.

timberland. Land covered with growing timber, especially land in the public domain. 42 Am J1st Pub L §§ 13, 14.

timber license. A license to enter upon land and to cut and remove timber. 34 Am J1st Logs §§ 43 et seq.

timber measure. A measurement of the circumference of a standing tree, the bark being included in the measurement. 34 Am J2d Logs § 23.

See board foot.

timbering mine. Placing timbers in a mine to support the roof of a tunnel or chamber.

timber suitable for turpentine purposes. Any timber, of whatever size, that is ordinarily used for the taking of turpentine, the size being determined by custom if one is shown to be applicable. Dorsey v Clements, 202 Ga 820, 44 SE2d 783, 173 ALR 509.

time. A concept related to motion, as one day for the complete rotation of the earth, a year for the complete revolution of the earth around the sun. A period of history. A period within the lifetime of a person, as a term of apprenticeship, even of imprisonment. A matter for computation according to rules of law. 52 Am J1st Time § 15.

See reasonable time.

time and one-half. Special compensation for extra work, rather than the regular rate of compensation. State ex rel. Murray v Riley, 45 Del 192, 70 A2d 712, 14 ALR2d 630.

time bargains. Gambling transactions by parties who never intend to buy or sell, but merely to speculate upon the future price of stocks or commodities by compounding for differences. 24 Am J1st Gaming §§ 66 et seq.

time bill of exchange. Same as time draft. 11 Am J2d B & N § 13.

time certificate. A memorandum evidencing wages earned.

time certificate of deposit. An instrument issued by a bank reciting that the person named therein has deposited in the bank the sum specified, payable to the order of himself on the return of the certificate properly indorsed, with interest, the sum to be left a stated period of time, usually six months or one year, and not to bear interest after the expiration of such period. 10 Am J2d Banks § 455.

time draft. An unconditional order in writing addressed by one person to another, signed by the person giving it, requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay at a fixed or determinable future time a sum certain in money to order or bearer. Uniform Negotiable Instruments Law § 126; UCC § 3-104(2)(a); 11 Am J2d B & N § 13.

time immemorial. Beyond the time of legal memory. An ancient time.

time is of the essence. The condition of performance of a contract within the time limited for performance by the terms of the contract. 17 Am J2d Contr § 332.

When it is said that time is of the essence, the proper meaning of the phrase is that performance by one party at the time specified in the contract or within the period specified in the contract is essential in order to enable him to require performance from the other party. It does not mean that delay will not give rise to a right of action against him. A breach of any promise in a contract, whether of vital importance or not will do that; nor does the phrase mean merely that time is a material matter, but that it is so material that exact compliance with the terms of the contract in this respect is essential to the right to require counter performance. Williams v Shamrock Oil & Gas Co. 128 Tex 146, 95 SW2d 1292, 107 ALR 269.

timely. Within the time required by contract or statute. Wm. B. Scaife & Sons Co. v Commissioner (CA3) 117 F2d 572.

timely amendment. An amendment of an income tax return filed by the taxpayer within the statutory period allowed for filing returns or within such extended time as the Commissioner may grant under the statute. J. E. Riley Invest. Co. v Commissioner (CA9) 110 F2d 655. An amendment of a pleading filed or served upon the adverse party within the time permitted for amendments by statute or rule of court, or, in the case of an amendment by leave of court, within the time fixed by the court. 41 Am J1st PI §§ 289, 296.

time marine policy. See time policy.

time of legal memory. Within the period of recorded history, as distinguished from a remote period the events of which are unrecorded and accordingly unknown. For some purposes, in England, the beginning of the reign of Richard the First in 1189. 21 Am J2d Cost & U § 4 (involving duration of custom.)

time of memory. Same as time of legal memory.

time of peace. The period commencing with the legal end of a war, that is, with the exchange of peace treaties or the ratification of a peace treaty. 56 Am J1st War § 13.

In the United States, following a war, the time of peace begins when the President has by his proclamation announced that hostilities are at an end, and when Congress by its legislation has recognized the same fact. McElrath v United States, 102 US 426, 26 L Ed 189.

See armistice.

time of war. See war.

time option. An option which is to continue in force for a certain specified time.

time out of mind. See time immemorial.

time paper. An instrument for the payment of money at a time fixed by the instrument.

See time draft.

time policy. A policy of marine insurance which insures no specific voyage, but covers any voyage within the prescribed time of the policy, and the loss and damage the ship may sustain by the perils insured against within the limited period. Wilkins v Tobacco Ins. Co. 30 Ohio St 317.

time schedule. See timetable.

time study. Observing the carrying on of work in an industry with the idea of perfecting plans to perform the same work in a lesser number of man hours.

timetable. A time schedule of trains or other vehicles of a carrier, showing the time of arrivals and departures of particular trains, busses, or airplanes.

time zone. A belt of the earth's surface running from pole to pole created by an artificial division for the purpose of applying the system of standard time throughout the world, each belt or zone covering one hour of time, the time registered throughout an entire zone to be the same. 52 Am J1st Time § 3.

timid. Lack of confidence in one's self. Easily put in fear.

See cautious.

Timores vani sunt aestimandi qui non cadunt constantem virum. Fears are to be regarded as groundless which do not affect a man of firmness.

tin. A metal much used as an alloy. Pots, pans, and other utensils of the kitchen.

tincture. A drug in solution, as tincture of iodine.

tip. A gratuity given for personal service, as to a porter, table waiter, steward, etc. A part of the earnings of an employee where it is within the contemplation of the parties to the employment that it shall be retained by the employee as part of his compensation. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 314. A part of gross income for tax purposes.

It would seem that a tip may range from a pure gift of benevolence or friendship, to a compensation for a service measured by its supposed value but not fixed by an agreement. Most often the term is applied to what is paid a servant in addition to the regular compensation for his service, to secure better service, or in recognition of it. Williams v Jacksonville Terminal Co. (CA5 Fla) 118 F2d 324.

tipple. Verb: To indulge in alcoholic beverages. Noun: A place where open or gondola type railroad cars may be tipped by a mechanical device so that the contents fall out, the cars being thereby emptied and unloaded. A place where cars of coal brought to the pit mouth of a mine are loaded onto railroad cars or motor trucks. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 178.

tippling house. A place where intoxicating liquor is sold in small quantities to be drunk on the premises. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 20. A barroom; a saloon; a grog-shop. Leesburg v Putnam, 103 Ga 110, 114.

tipstaff. A bailiff.

tire marks. The marks made by the tires of a vehicle as it is driven, often material evidence as to the speed or manner of operation of the vehicle. 8 Am J2d Auto § 958.

tithable. Subject to being taxed for tithes; liable for tithes; capable of yielding tithes.

tithe rent-charge. A rent-charge which was substituted by the Statutes 6 & 7, William IV, c. 71, for tithes.

tithes. Tenths; a species of incorporeal hereditaments, being the tenth part of the increase, yearly arising and renewing from the profits of lands, the stock upon lands, and the personal industry of the inhabitants, due the church for the support of the clergy. See 2 Bl Comm 24.

See commutation of tithes; composition of tithes; great tithes; infeudation of tithes; jactitation of tithes; mixed tithes; modus decimandi, et seq. ; parsonage tithes; personal tithes; praedial tithes; rate tithes; rectoral tithes; small tithes.

tithing. A tenth of a hundred. A hundred was made up of ten tithings, each of which was composed of ten families, and it constituted a governmental district. See 1 Bl Comm 115.

tithing-man. Same as tithing-reeve.

tithing-reeve. The chief or constable of a tithing.

title. The legal estate in fee, clear of all valid claims, liens, and encumbrances whatsoever, or expressed differently, the ownership of land without any rightful participation by any other person in any part of it. Porter v Noyes, 2 Me 22. The union of all the elements which constitute ownership, at common law divided into possession, right of possession and right of property, the last two now, however, being considered essentially the same. Carroll v Newark, 108 NJ 323, 158 A 485, 79 ALR 509. The foundation of ownership; the basis of a person's right or the extent of his interest. The means whereby an owner is enabled to maintain or assert his possession and enjoyment. 42 Am J1st Prop § 36. The right of an owner considered with reference either to the manner in which the property has been acquired or its capacity of being effectually transferred. 42 Am J1st Prop § 36.

Under the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, title means legal title and does not include a merely equitable or beneficial ownership or interest. Lyons v Freshman, 124 Mont 485, 226 P2d 775, 23 ALR2d 1165.

See equitable title; legal title; ownership.

title bond. A bond given to the purchaser of real property as security for the transfer to him of a good title to the property. Goodman v Moore, 22 Ark 191, 194.

title by accession. See accession.

title by adverse possession. See adverse possession.

title by alluvion. See alluvion.

title by bankruptcy. The title of the trustee in bankruptcy to assets of the estate in bankruptcy available for administration in bankruptcy and for distribution by payment of costs and expenses of the proceeding and distribution to creditors. Re Lesser (DC NY) 100 F 433, 436.

title by cession. The complete and unqualified title to all property possessed by the grantor vested in a nation under a treaty ceding territory to such nation, by which cession all real property passes to the grantee together with all buildings erected thereon by the grantor or by others with the grantor's permission-except such as belong to individuals who have acquired and preserved a right of removal. 30 Am J Rev ed Internal L § 44.

title by conquest. Title to territory acquired by one nation from another in open war. Caldwell v State (Ala) 1 Stew & P 327, 333.

title by descent. Title acquired by succession or inheritance upon the death of an owner.

See descent.

title by discovery and occupation. The title acquired by a nation when its citizens or subjects, in its name and by its authority or with its assent, take and hold actual, continuous and useful possession of territory unoccupied by any other government or its citizens. 30 Am J Rev ed Internal L § 42.

title by limitation. See adverse possession; title by prescription.

title by prescription. A title which may be acquired by use and time.

The elements of such a title are open, visible, and continuous use under a claim of right, adverse to and with the knowledge of the owner. While a title by prescription does not rest upon statutes of limitation, the courts incline to consider a prescriptive period as analogous to the time fixed by the law of the state as to limitations for commencing actions for the recovery of real property. See F. C. Ayres Mercantile Co. v Union P. R. Co.(CA8 Col o) 16 F2d 395, 399.

See adverse possession; prescription; presumed grant.

title by purchase. A title under any mode of acquiring an estate, except that of inheritance. Delaney v Salina, 34 Kan 532, 9 P 271, 276.

title by record. A title under judicial or other public record. A land title derived from the state; the title of a patentee of land or the immediate or remote vendee of a patentee. Shaw v Robinson, 111 Ky 715, 724, 64 SW 620.

Title by patent from the United States is title by record; and delivery of the instrument to the grantee is not essential to pass the title as in the conveyances by private persons. Jesse v Chapman, 68 Okla 199, 173 P 1044.

See title of record.

title covenants. Covenants ordinarily inserted in conveyances, being required by the purchaser as protection against insufficiency of title obtained by him from the vendor. 20 Am J2d Cov § 43. Covenants for title appearing in a lease.

A lessor's covenant for title must either be an express agreement or words must be used from which such an agreement can be implied; it has been held that the covenant does not arise from the mere relation of landlord and tenant. 32 Am J1st L & T § 268.

See covenant against encumbrances; covenant for further assurance; covenant of good right to convey; covenant of quiet enjoyment; covenant of seisin; covenant of warranty.

title deed. A deed constituting a part of the chain of title to real estate. 55 Am J1st V & P § 179.

title document. See document of title.

title guaranty company. A company engaged in the business of guaranteeing or insuring titles to real estate.

title in fee simple. Full and unconditional ownership.

Real property deeded to a person by warranty deed, but in fact for security only, would not be held by him by title in fee simple. First Nat. Bank v Moon, 102 Kan 334, 170 P 33.

See fee simple.

title insurance. A contract whereby the insurer for a valuable consideration agrees to indemnify the insured in a specified amount against loss through defect of title to real estate wherein the latter has an interest either as purchaser or otherwise. Fochrenbach v German-American Title & T. Co. 217 Pa 331, 66 A 561.

A policy of title insurance has been said to be a contract in the nature of a covenant against incumbrances. It differs, however, from a covenant of warranty and the rules applicable to such a warranty do not apply to the policy. Ordinarily no liability arises under such a policy except for actual loss sustained, but one already in possession claiming to be the owner when such a policy issues to him may recover thereon though he expends nothing, and hence suffers no loss in reliance on the policy, his loss occurring from a defect in the source of his title. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1372.

title note. A promissory note given by the purchaser of personal property, containing a provision whereunder title to the property is reserved to the seller until the note is paid. 11 Am J2d B & N § 202.

title of record. Title to real estate appearing from an examination of the records of title and judicial records which have reference to the property or any part thereof. Sufficient in support of a plaintiff in ejectment where consisting of a regular chain of title from the government or some grantor in possession, or of a regular chain of title back to the common source from which both plaintiff and his adversary claim. 25 Am J2d Eject § 24.

It has usually been held that where a purchaser of land contracts for good record title, he will not be required to accept a title which depends upon adverse possession not disclosed by record, even though such a title might be otherwise marketable. Anno: 46 ALR2d 570.

See title by record.

title of statute. A heading in words given a statute for the purpose of calling attention to the subject matter of the act. The first part of a statute, often expressing the name by which it is to be known or cited and usually expressing the subject or object of the statute.

Formerly, the title of a statute was of little consequence, but since the adoption of state constitutional provisions requiring the subject or object of every act to be expressed in the title, the title has become not only a necessary part of the statute, but an important one. 50 Am J1st Stat §§ 159 et seq.

title paramount. A superior title. A better title.

See eviction by title paramount.

title reservation contract. A contract of sale whereby title to the property sold is reserved by the seller as security for the payment of the purchase price or such part of the purchase price as remains unpaid.

title retaining note. Same as title retention note.

title retention note. A note given by the purchaser of property, one of the terms of which provides for the retention of title in the seller until payment of the note. 11 Am J2d B & N § 202.

title search. An abstract of title. An examination of the abstract of title to premises and of records of title and judicial records pertinent to the property made by the attorney for a purchaser prior to the closing of the deal.

title to office. The right to exercise the functions of a public office and to receive the emoluments of the office.

title to property. See title.

titulo. A word commonly found in Spanish American grants, which is a nomen generalissimum, applied as well to title papers, which convey title, in the usual acceptation of the term, as to those which confer a mere right of occupancy. De Haro v United States (US) 5 Wall 599, 18 L Ed 681, 688.

Titulus est justa cause possidendi id quod nostrum est. Title is the just cause of possessing that which is ours.

t-junction. An intersection at which one of the highways meets the other but does not cross it. Anno: 53 ALR2d 861, § 5(b).

to. Toward. Until. 52 Am J1st Time § 25. Either inclusive or exclusive of the date or event which follows it, according to the intention manifest from the entire context. Conway v Smith Mercantile Co. 6 Wyo 327, 44 P 940. In describing a boundary, usually but not necessarily exclusive of the thing, such as a stream or highway, to which it has reference. 12 Am J2d Bound §§ 26, 52.

It is generally defined to be a word of exclusion, unless by necessary implication it must be held to be used in an inclusive sense. Thus, the word to, as used in a contract stipulating that deliveries of property were to be made up to a stated date, or in an order extending time to a certain day, is a term of exclusion. 52 Am J1st Time § 25.

to advance money or materials. See advance.

to answer damages on another's behalf. To pay debts of another. Smolka v James P. Chandler & Son, 41 Del 255, 20 A2d 131, 134 ALR 629.

to arrive. A term inserted in a contract for sale of goods, effective in making the contract conditional or contingent upon arrival. 46 Am J1st Sales § 201.

to assume. See assume.

to assume and pay and save harmless. Two distinct stipulations in a conveyance of mortgaged property, one for assumption of the mortgage by the grantee and the other for the indemnification of the grantor respecting such mortgage. 37 Am J1st Mtg § 999.

tobacco. A plant, the leaves of which are used by man, ordinarily after processing, for chewing, smoking, or snuffing. Not a drug. 25 Am J2d Drugs § 1. Not a food. Gundling v Chicago, 176 Ill 340, 52 NE 44.

tobacco market. A town having one or more tobacco warehouses is known as a market. Townsend v Yeomans, 301 US 441, 81 L Ed 1210, 57 S Ct 842.

to be able. To have the means, particularly the means of making payment. Anno: 1 ALR 530.

to be performed. See performance.

to be the sole judge. See sole judge.

toboggan. A sled without runners, coasting or being towed on the boards or other material which makes its bottom. Illingworth v Madden, 135 Me 159, 192 A 273, 110 ALR 1090.

toboggan slide. A steep hill or artificially constructed slide for toboggans, being put in use only when covered with snow. Barrett v Lake Ontario Beach Improv. Co. 174 NY 310, 66 NE 968.

toft. A vacant space of ground where a house formerly stood.

toftum. Same as toft.

toga virilis. The gown of manhood of the Romans.

Before the young men acquired this robe they were not permitted to bear arms, but were regarded as part of the father's household. Having acquired the robe, they were regarded as part of the community. See 1 Bl Comm 404.

together with. And also.

The expression is commonly used in descriptions of property in a deed, and when so used it imports a close and inseparable union between the preceding description and that which follows the expression. Mitchell v D'Olier, 68 NJL 375, 53 A 467.

The use of such words in designating particular property in a residuary clause of a will, generally distinguishes the designated property from the residue so as to make the legacy or devise of such property specific. Anno: 128 ALR 840.

to have and to hold. Formal words used in the habendum clause of a deed.

As used in a will, the words were construed to manifest an intention that the legatee named receive the property bequeathed into her custody and retain the same during the period named in the bequest. Scott v Scott, 137 Iowa 239, 114 NW 881.

toilet. A water closet; a bathroom.

to indemnify and save harmless. An engagement of indemnity, also effective in some contexts as an assumption of a mortgage debt. 37 Am J1st Mtg § 999.

[1282]

token. A symbol that betokens something; that is, that carries within itself that which it signifies. Shelton v Erie Railroad Co. 73 NJL 558, 66 A 403. A symbol of value purchased for money and used in place of money in payment of bus fare, telephone call, or charge for parking a motor vehicle.

For definition of the word as it pertains to slot machines played for amusement, see Anno: 148 ALR 894.

See false token; railroad ticket.

to knowingly misrepresent. To represent that which is not true with knowledge that the representation is false and with an intent to cause another to act to his prejudice upon such misrepresentation. Hyde v United States, 119 F 610, 119 CCA 493.

tolerance. A variation from a prescribed standard permitted by law in certain instances, particularly in reference to weights and measures. 56 Am J1st Wts & M § 49. Giving respect to the views and opinions of others, not so much in accepting them as sound, as in recognition of the right of another person to have views and opinions.

to lie. The note on an execution duly issued under signature of the clerk and ready for service, but not delivered to an officer for levy. Davis v Roller, 106 Va 46, 55 SE 4.

See lie.

toll. Verb: To suspend or interrupt the running of the statute of limitations. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 158; 34 Am J1st Lim Ac §§ 186 et seq. To lead away or entice, as to toll a hog with a sack of corn. Noun: A charge, as for milling or telephone service, and particularly for the use of a turnpike, toll road, or toll bridge. 54 Am J1st Turn & T R § 10. The charge of a ferryman. 35 Am J2d Ferr § 1. A charge for services of a public utility. A charge exacted for towage. Compensation for the use of another's property and of improvements thereon. People ex rel. Curren v Schommer, 392 Ill 17, 63 NE2d 744, 167 ALR 1347.

See port toll.

tollage. Toll; the payment of toll; the exaction of toll.

toll bridge. A bridge for the use of which a toll is collected. As a private instrumentality, abridge built and maintained under public authority as a portion of the highway with which it is connected, dedicated to public use, subject only to the right of the proprietors to exact reasonable toll for such use.

Aside from the right of the company to collect tolls, a toll bridge does not differ from the ordinary highway constructed and maintained by the inhabitants of the district through which it passes. Pittsburgh & West End Passenger Railway v Point Bridge Co. 165 Pa 37, 41

tollere. (Civil law.) To raise; to lift up; to elevate; to take away; to carry away; to defeat.

Tolle voluntatem et erit omnis actus indifferens. Take away the will and every act will be indifferent.

toll gate. A gate erected upon a turnpike or toll road at which toll is collected from passing travelers; so constructed as effectively to bar passage when closed. 54 Am J1st Turn & T R § 6.

toll house. A house erected at or near a toll gate for the use and accommodation of the toll gatherer. 54 Am J1st Turn & TR § 6.

tolling. See toll.

tolling statute. The suspension or interruption of the statute of limitations by reason of circumstances such as absence of the defendant from the state, concealment to avoid the service of process, etc. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 158; 34 Am J1st Lim Ac §§ 186 et seq.

toll road. A highway for the use of which a toll is collected. 54 Am J1st Turn & T R § 2.

toll service. Telephone service in long distance communication for which a toll is charged.

toll the entry. To bar or defeat the right of entry.

toll the statute. See tolling statute.

toll thorough. A toll demandable by an express grant, by custom or prescription on a public highway, in a public port, or for the use of public property.

It is so called because the party claiming it is presumed to have had no original right to the place where he demands toll. Charles River Bridge v Warren Bridge (US) 11 Pet Baldwin's Views 152, 9 L Ed 938, 947.

toll traverse. A toll demanded for passing on or over the private property of the claimant, or using it in any other way. Charles River Bridge v Warren Bridge (US) 11 Pet Baldwin's Views 152, 9 L Ed 938, 947.

toll turn. A toll charged for bringing back unsold cattle from a market.

tolnetum. Toll.

tolt. A precept from the sheriff whereby the proceedings on a writ of right might be removed from a court-baron into the county court.

It was called a tolt because it tolled or took away and removed the cause from the court-baron. See 3 Bl Comm 34.

tolta. A wrong; an extortion.

tome de razon. See testimonio.

to make one's law. To deny under oath a criminal charge or accusation.

A litigant was anciently said to make his law when he was successful in a trial by compurgation.

tomar razon. See testimonio. tomb. A chamber or vault, formed wholly or partly in the earth or entirely above ground, for the reception of the dead. Re Byrne's Estate, 98 NH 300, 100 A2d 157, 47 ALR2d 591.

tombstone. A stone raised at a grave or in a cemetery lot as a memorial to the person or persons buried there. 14 Am J2d Cem § 33.

to mine. See mining.

to my use. A phrase employed in a restrictive endorsement. 11 Am J2d B & N § 362.

ton. A unit of avoirdupois weight commonly understood as 2000 pounds, although technically such is a so-called short ton, the long ton being 2240 pounds. 21 Am J2d Cust D § 33.

ton-mile tax. A form of tax imposed in some jurisdiction upon contract motor carriers and private motor carriers for hire.

tonnage. The capacity of a vessel in respect of the amount of cargo which it can carry. Any measure in tons.

In commercial designation, the word means the number of tons burden a ship or vessel will carry, as estimated and ascertained by the official admeasurement and computation prescribed by public authority. The term has long been an official one intended originally to express the burden that a ship would carry, in order that the various dues and customs which are levied upon shipping might be levied according to the size of the vessel, or rather in proportion to her capability of carrying burden. Hence, the term has become almost synonymous with the word "size." Mobile Trade Co. v Lott (US) 12 Wall 221, 20 L Ed 376, 377.

tonnage duty. A charge on a vessel, according to its tonnage, as an instrument of commerce, for entering or leaving a port, or navigating the public waters of the country; any tax for the bare privilege of entering a port and navigating the navigable waters of the state. 51 Am J1st Tax § 108. A tax levied upon a railroad at a specified rate per ton of all goods carried. 51 Am J1st Tax § 108. A tax or duty imposed on vessels as such, usually at a specified rate per ton of capacity or weight of registered tonnage, computed according to prescribed rules of admeasurement. 48 Am J1st Ship § 650.

tonnage tax. Same as tonnage duty.

tonsillectomy. The removal of tonsils by surgery. Carroll v Missouri Power & Light Co. 231 Mo App 265, 96 SW2d 1074.

tonsura. Tonsure.

tonsure. The shaving of the hair from the crown of a man's head.

Originally it was the law that no man should be admitted to the privilege of the clergy who had not the clerical habit and tonsure. See 4 Bl Comm 366.

tontine company. A company or association the members of which received life rents or annuities for life and the survivors prorated the share of each deceased member among them.

tontine insurance. See tontine policy.

tontine policy. Life insurance with the distinguishing characteristic of a survivorship provision, the policy being based upon an agreement whereby the survivor of a class of persons who contribute to a common fund and persist as paying members become, at the end of a specified period, entitled to divide the "surplus," the funds remaining after the payment of benefits, expenses, and the intermediate apportionment of profits. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 16.

The term is said to have come from the name of Tonti, an Italian, who originated tontine insurance in the seventeenth century.

to occupy. See occupy.

tool. A usable article employed as a means to effect a purpose in the execution of a design or the production of some result. Anno: 2 ALR 821. Confined, according to some courts, but not by others, to instruments worked by muscular power. 31 Am J2d Exemp § 51.

As to whether a motor vehicle is exempt from execution as a "tool," see Anno: 37 ALR2d 720.

tools of trade. Instruments or implements used in the trade, occupation, business, or profession of the owner. 31 Am J2d Exemp §§ 51 et seq.

As to whether a motor vehicle is exempt from execution as a "tool of a trade, calling, business, or profession," see Anno: 37 ALR2d 720.

tooth. A member of the body. High v State, 26 Tex App 545.

top. The highest part.

In mining law, the "apex" of a vein is sometimes called the "top." It is the top or terminal edge of the vein, on the surface, or the nearest point to the surface; it is the top of the vein proper, rather than of a spur or feeder, just as the highest point in the roof of a house would be taken to be the apex of the house, and not the chimney or flagstaff. Anno: 1 ALR 419.

topography. The characteristics of land in respect to surface features such as hills, streams, valleys, etc. 42 Am J1st Pub L § 59.

to procure a purchaser. See procuring cause.

to read law. To prepare for the profession.

"To read law," while not strictly a technical term to which a certain meaning must attach to the exclusion of all others, is yet an expression with a meaning known to lawyers. Among lawyers the expression means to take up the study of the law with the purpose of being admitted to the bar and practicing the profession. Its meaning is not confined to the preparatory course; but properly includes that reading of cases and textbooks of which every lawyer does more or less after his admission. Benson's Estate, 169 Pa 602, 604, 32 A 654.

to regulate. See regulate.

tornado. A violent storm distinguished by the vehemence of the wind. A windstorm featured by cyclonic or whirling winds of tumultuous force. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1329. A violent windstorm, usually accompanied by a funnel-shaped cloud; an act of God. 1 Am J2d Act of God § 5. Not to be confused with the widely extended rotary storm known as a cyclone. Queen Ins. Co. v Hudnut Co. 8 Ind App 22, 26, 35 NE 397. Not to be confused with a hurricane.

It appears that for the purposes of insurance, the terms "hurricane," "tornado," and "windstorm" are often treated as synonymous. See windstorm insurance.

tornado insurance. See windstorm insurance.

torpedo. Noun: A projectile loaded with explosive employed against ships in war. Verb: To hit a ship with a projectile loaded with explosive. To lower and detonate a cartridge of explosive in an oil well for the purpose of releasing the oil from a pocket. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 114. Slang: To prevent agreement by injecting new considerations.

See signal torpedo.

torpedo doctrine. Another expression for the doctrine of attractive nuisance. 38 Am J1st Negl § 142.

Torrens Acts. Statutes adopting the Torrens System of registration of land titles. 45 Am J1st Reg L T § 2.

Torrens System. A system for the registration of titles to land, whereby an official certificate always shows the state of the title and the person in whom it is vested, the name deriving from Sir Robert Torrens who drew the first Registration Act, such having been adopted in South Australia in 1858. 45 Am J1st Reg L T § 2.

The system spread to the other Australian states and territories, to other British possessions, and to Great Britain itself. With various modifications it has been adopted in several of the states in the United States, in several of the Canadian provinces, and in the Philippines. 45 Am J1st Reg L T § 2.

[1284]

tort. A wrong. Hayes v Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co. 125 111 626, 18 NE 322. A wrong independent of contract. International Ocean Tel. Co. v Saunders, 32 Fla 434, 14 So 148. A breach of duty which the law, as distinguished from a mere contract, has imposed. Western Union Tel. Co. v Taylor, 84 Ga 408, 11 SE 396. An injury or wrong committed, either with or without force, to the person or property of another.

Such injury may arise by the nonfeasance, by the malfeasance, or by the misfeasance of the wrongdoer. Gindele v Corrigan, 129 111 582, 22 NE 516.

In a general way, a tort is distinguished from a breach of contract in that the latter arises under an agreement of the parties, whereas the tort, ordinarily, is a violation of a duty fixed by law, independent of contract or the will of the parties, although it may sometimes have relation to obligations growing out of, or coincident with a contract, and frequently the same facts will sustain either class of action. Busch v Interborough Rapid Transit Co. 187 NY 388, 80 NE 197.

Although the same act may constitute both a crime and a tort, the crime is an offense against the public pursued by the sovereign, while the tort is a private injury which is pursued by the injured party. 52 Am J1st Torts § 2.

tortfeasor. One guilty of a tort. A person who commits a tort; a wrongdoer.

See joint tortfeasors.

tortious. Partaking of the nature of a tort; wrongful; injurious. Characterizing conduct, whether of act or omission which is of such character as to subject the actor to liability under the principles of the law of torts. Restatement, Torts, Vol 1 § 6.

See tort.

tortious conveyance. A conveyance of the whole fee and not merely the right or estate which the grantor had the right to convey. Orndoff v Turman, 29 Va (2 Leigh) 200.

torture. The infliction of severe pain as a means of persuasion. Anno: 16 ALR 372. Torment by means of the rack, or other contrivances for inflicting physical pain, employed for the purpose of extorting confessions. See 4 Bl Comm 32.

to save harmless. An expression in an engagement of indemnity. Foster v Atwater, 42 Conn 244, 252.

See to indemnify and save harmless.

to secure. See secure.

to settle. See settle.

to ship by. See ship.

tot. Noun: A word written opposite an item in an account to indicate an approval of it. Verb: To total.

tota curia. The whole court, the court with all the justices present.

total. Noun: The whole amount; the entire quantity. Adjective: Constituting the whole of a thing. Complete; absolute; utter; entire. Verb: To ascertain an amount by addition. To equal a certain amount, considered in entirety.

total and permanent disability. See permanent disability; total disability.

total breach. An entire breach, a material breach, a breach of contract which goes to the whole consideration. 17 Am J2d Contr § 446.

total contract price. The entire amount paid, or agreed to be paid, by the purchaser.

The amount of a mortgage assumed by a purchaser of realty on an instalment sale must be excluded from the basis used for determining the proportion of the gain which is taxable in a given year. Burnet v S. & L. Bldg. Corp. 288 US 406, 77 L Ed 861, 53 S Ct 428.

total dependent. A person who has no means whatever by which to support himself. Utah Fuel Co. v Industrial Com. 80 Utah 301, 15 P 2d 297, 86 ALR 858.

total destruction. See total loss.

total disability. As an occurrence insured against, such a disability as renders the insured unable to perform all the substantial and material acts necessary to the prosecution of his trade, business, or occupation in a customary and usual manner, irrespective of the fact that he is not reduced to a state of absolute helplessness. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1517. For the purpose of workmen's compensation, a disability or incapacity which completely destroys the claimant's earning power so that he is not capable of performing any remunerative employment, subject however to the rule in some jurisdictions that the fact that an injured employee may be able to perform light work, or that some usefulness remains in an injured member, does not preclude a finding of total disability. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 283.

An insurer's liability for the payment of benefits for total disability rendering insured unable to engage in any occupation or perform any work for compensation is tested by whether insured is incapacitated to earn in any occupation to which he may reasonably be fitted and whether his remaining earning capacity bears a substantial relation to his natural or previous capacity to earn. Patton v Prudential Ins. Co. 181 Tenn 138, 178 SW2d 760, 1 ALR2d 750.

As the term is used in a health policy, it does not mean absolute physical disability on the part of the insured to transact any kind of business pertaining to his occupation. It may exist although the insured is able to perform occasional acts if he is unable to do any substantial portion of the work connected with his occupation. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen v Aday, 97 Ark 425, 134 SW 928.

The term must of necessity be relative in its signification, which depends largely upon the occupation and employment in which the disabled person is engaged. A person who labors with his hands might be so disabled by a severe injury to one hand as not to be able to labor at all at his usual occupation, whereas a merchant or a professional man might by the same injury be only disabled from transacting some kinds of business pertaining to his occupation. Lobdill v Laboring Men's Mut. Aid Asso. 69 Minn 14, 71 NW 696.

total disability clause. A clause in a health or accident policy, sometimes in a life insurance policy, providing for the payment of benefits in the event of the occurrence of the total disability of the insured. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1504. A provision in a life insurance policy for waiver of premiums during the total or permanent disability of the insured. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 581.

total disability for work. Such disability as incapacitates one from performing the usual tasks of a workman in such a manner as to enable him to procure and retain employment. Anno: 67 ALR 786.

See total disability; total loss of business time.

total failure of evidence. The utter absence of all evidence. The failure to offer proof, either positive or inferential, to establish one or more of the many facts, the establishment of all of which is indispensable to the finding of the issue for the plaintiff. Cole v Hebb (Md) 7 Gill & J 20, 28.

total incapacity. See total disability.

total loss. The complete destruction of the property covered by an insurance policy. The complete destruction of a building as a building, although not necessarily the extinction of all its parts as materials or such destruction that no part is left standing. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1536. In marine insurance, a total and actual loss to the insured of the subject matter of the insurance; a destruction of the thing in specie, even though some of its component elements or parts may remain. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1570.

There can be no "total loss" so long as the remnant of the structure standing is reasonably adapted for use as a basis upon which to restore the building to the condition in which it was before the injury; and whether it is so adapted depends upon whether a reasonably prudent owner, uninsured, desiring such a structure as the injured one was before the injury, would, in proceeding to restore the building to its original condition, utilize such remnant as such basis. Royal Insurance Co. v McIntyre, 90 Tex 170, 182, 37 SW 1068.

A building is "wholly destroyed" within the meaning of a statute providing that when an insured structure shall be wholly destroyed the amount of the policy shall be conclusive of the true value of the property when insured and of the true amount of the loss, where it has lost its specific character and ceased to exist as a building, although a portion of the foundation remains which might be used in rebuilding. Grandview Inland Fruit Co. v Hartford F. Ins. Co. 189 Wash 590, 66 P2d 827, 109 ALR 1472.

As the term is used in fire insurance, it means the complete destruction of the insured property by fire, so that nothing of value remains of it, as distinguished from a partial loss, where the property is damaged, but not entirely destroyed. This does not mean that the materials of which the building was composed were all utterly destroyed or obliterated, but that the building, though some part of it may be left standing, has lost its character as a building, and, instead thereof, has become a broken mass, or so far in that condition that it cannot properly any longer be designated as a building. When that has occurred, then there is a total destruction or loss. A total loss does not mean an absolute extinction. Corbett v Spring Garden Ins. Co. 155 NY 389, 50 NE 282.

See constructive total loss.

total loss of business time. Inability to work at one's specific occupation, regardless of ability to do other work. Continental Casualty Co. v Wagner (CA8 Mo) 195 F2d 936, 31 ALR2d 1216.

See total disability for work.

total loss of eyesight. A complete loss of eyesight; a loss of eyesight to the extent that one cannot distinguish colors or objects one from another in good light, although he can distinguish between light and darkness; in some contexts, loss of eyesight which disables one from pursuing his usual and customed occupation. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1513.

totally or substantially destroyed. An effective destruction of buildings as such, not necessarily a complete annihilation. 32 Am J1st L & T § 506.

total mental disability. The state of a person whose mental faculties are entirely suspended. Anno: 24 ALR 214. More realistically, a total disability.

total permanent disability. See permanent disability; total disability.

total physical disability. The state of a person who has lost the power to move. Anno: 24 ALR 214. More realistically, a total disability.

to the account. See on account.

to the country whence they came. To the country from which aliens last entered the United States; to the country in which is located the foreign port at which aliens last embarked for the United States or for foreign territory contiguous to the United States. 8 USC § 1253(a); 3 Am J2d Aliens § 94.

to the credit of. A form of restrictive indorsement. Werner Piano Co. v Henderson, 121 Ark 165, 180 SW 495.

to the diligent belongs the reward. A maxim supplanted in bankruptcy by the principle that equality is equity. Re Wisconsin Co-operative Milk Pool (CA7 Wis) 119 F2d 999.

to the order of. Words of negotiability. 11 Am J2d B & N § 105.

totidem verbis. In so many words.

toties quoties. As often as it shall happen.

toto. The whole.

toto genere. In all of its kind.

Totten Trust. A trust created by a bank deposit made by one person of his own money in his own name as trustee for another, such being a tentative trust merely, revocable at will, until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime by some unequivocal act or declaration, such as delivery of the passbook or notice to the beneficiary. Anno: 38 ALR2d 1244 et seq.; 10 Am J2d Banks § 392; Restatement, Trusts 2d § 58.

A savings account deposit by one person of his own money in his own name as trustee for another, standing alone, is a tentative trust, revocable at will until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime. Re Rodgers' Estate, 374 Pa 246, 97 A2d 789, 38 ALR2d 1238.

totum. The whole.

Totum praefertur unicuique parti. The whole is preferred to any one part.

tow. Verb: To draw something along a course, particularly a vessel. Ryan v Hook (NY) 34 Hun 185, 191. To pull a motor vehicle along a highway or street. 8 Am J2d Auto § 839. Noun: One or more vessels being towed or drawn. 48 Am J1st Ship § 488. An automobile or two or more automobiles in tandem being drawn on the highway.

Within the meaning of a clause in an automobile liability policy exempting the insurer from liability while the vehicle is being towed, a trailer attached to a truck is being towed although the vehicles have come to a temporary stop in the course of their journey. Maryland Casualty Co. v Cross (CA5 Tex) 112 F2d 58.

towage. The supplying of power by a vessel to tow or draw another. 48 Am J1st Ship § 488. A charge exacted for towing a vessel.

towage lien. A maritime lien for services rendered in towing the vessel. 2 Am J2d Adm § 124.

towage service. The employment of one vessel to aid in the propulsion or to expedite the voyage of another, when there is no circumstance of peril, and nothing more is required than the acceleration of her progress. Stevens v The White City, 285 US 195, 76 L Ed 699, 52 S Ct 347.

toward. Facing.

The word is of very comprehensive signification, for it means in the direction of. To shoot at a person means to shoot toward him; to shoot in the general direction of the person. Both "toward" and "at" are words of somewhat indefinite meaning and their general significance is usually controlled by the context in which they are used. State use of Johnston v Cunningham, 107 Miss 140, 65 So 115.

towboat. Same as tugboat.

towed. See tow.

See trade libel.

tradesman. A man who follows a particular trade. A man engaged in business, as distinguished from a professional man.

In England, the word would seem to be principally used as expressive of a person engaged in traffic as a small shopkeeper; but in this country, it embraces a much larger class. Here it is seldom applied to persons engaged in the business of buying and selling, but is generally accepted as signifying mechanics and artisans of every kind whose livelihood depends upon the labor of their hands. Richie v McCauley, 4 Pa 471, 472.

trade slogan. A slogan employed as a trade name. Yellow Cab Co. v Sachs, 191 Cal 238, 216 P 33, 28 ALR 105. Apt words identifying a business by reference to the activities therein.

trade talk. Same as seller's talk.

trade terms. Words, phrases, and expressions having a meaning peculiar to a particular trade, for example, the term "working a street," familiar in the parlance of door-to-door salesmen. Re Curtis, 64 Conn 501, 30 A 769.

See trade-name.

trade trust. A monopoly or unlawful combination in the form of a trust for the control of prices in a particular business or trade. 36 Am J1st Monop § 19.

trade union. Broadly, a labor union, an association of workers which exists for the purpose, in whole or in part, of bargaining on behalf of workers with employers about the terms or conditions of employment. Restatement, Torts § 778. In a restricted sense, a labor union organized on a craft basis, composed of workers engaged in a common occupation, although often employed by different employers. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 13.

trade usage. A uniform course of conduct followed in a particular trade, calling, occupation or business. Any practice or method of dealing having such regularity of observance in a place, vocation, or trade as to justify an expectation that it will be observed with respect to the transaction in question. UCC § 1-205(2).

tradidi. I have leased.

trading. See trade.

trading bank. A commercial, as distinguished from, a savings bank.

trading contract. A business contract. A contract between persons engaged in business.

trading corporation. A kind of business corporation. A corporation the chief business of which is to buy and sell for profit goods and chattels.

The following have been held not to be trading corporations: a warehouse company, a company to buy and sell stocks and bonds, a fire insurance company, a building and loan association, a water company, a laundry company, a transportation company, a forwarding company, a public library, a social club, a mining company. See United States Hotel Co. v Niles (CA6 Ohio) 134 F 225.

trading firm. See trading corporation; trading partnership.

trading in dormant titles. A form of maintenance of which cognizance has been taken by statute, the first statute on the subject being that of 32 Henry VIII, chapter 9, 14 Am J2d Champ § 11.

trading partnership. A commercial partnership; a partnership organized for the purpose of trade or commerce.

If the business of a partnership, according to the usual mode of conducting imports, in its nature, the necessity of buying and selling, the firm is properly regarded as a trading or commercial partnership otherwise it is nontrading or noncommercial. 40 Am J1st Partn § 12.

trading stamp. A stamp given by way of a premium upon the purchase of merchandise, redeemable in merchandise according to a previously arranged plan. A memorandum in writing given by a merchant to a customer upon the purchase of and pay ment for goods in cash, which expresses in money value a small percentage of the price of the goods bought and paid for, and entitles the recipient, after he has accumulated a certain number of such memorandums, often known as coupons, to use them, to the extent of their designated value, in payment for any other goods of the merchant which he may afterward desire, or goods of some other person or trading company that has undertaken to redeem the coupons. 52 Am J1st Trad St § 2.

In its ultimate analysis the use of trading stamps by a merchant is simply a form of advertising, resorted to for the purpose of increasing trade; merely an instrumentality or incident of a business, not a business in itself in the commercial sense. 52 Am J1st Trad St § 3.

trading-stamp license. An exaction upon trading stamps or trading stamp schemes for the purpose of regulation, revenue, or both. 52 Am J1st Trad St § 12.

trading value. See blue book; speculative or trading value; trade-in allowance.

trading with the enemy. Commercial intercourse with a subject of a nation with whom the United States is at war, whether proximate or remote, direct and personal, as between principal and principal, or through the intervention of an agent. 56 Am J1st War § 108. Trading With the Enemy Act. A federal statute interdicting trading and commercial intercourse with enemies and allies of enemies, except with license of the President. 50 USC Appx §§ 1 et seq.; Propper v Clark, 337 US 472, 93 L Ed 1480, 69 S Ct 1338, reh den 338 US 841, 94 L Ed 514, 70 S Ct 33.

traditio brevis mantis. (Civil law.) The delivery of goods by mere consent, unaccompanied by any physical act. See Mackeldey's Roman Law § 284.

traditio clavium. (Civil law.) The delivery of the keys,-that is a symbolic delivery of a thing by a tradition of the key to its enclosure. See Mackeldey's Roman Law § 284.

Traditio loqui facit chartam... Delivery gives voice to a deed.

tradition. Knowledge, belief, or practices transmitted orally from father to son, or from ancestors to posterity.

When applied to pedigree, some authorities treat "tradition," "repute" and "reputation" as convertible terms. They mean such declarations and statements respecting the pedigree as have come down from generation to generation from deceased relatives in such away that even though it cannot be said or determined which of the deceased relatives originally made them, or was personally cognizant of the facts therein stated, yet it appears that such declarations and statements were made as family history ante litem motam, by a deceased person, connected by blood or marriage with the person whose pedigree is to be established. Re Estate of Hurlburt, 68 Vt 366, 35 A 77.

The word "tradition" as used in the civil law means "delivery." Keepers v Fidelity Co. 56 NJL 302, 28 A 585.

traditional law. The common law.

Traditionibus dominia rerum, non nudis pactis, transferuntur. The ownership of things is transferred by delivery, not by naked promises. See 2 Bl Comm 312.

traditio nihil aliud est quam rei corporalis de persona in personam, de manu in manum, translatio aut in possessionem inductio; sed res incorporates, quae sunt ipsum jus rei vel corpori inhaerens, traditionem non patiuntur. Livery is nothing but the transfer or the induction into possession of a corporeal hereditament from person to person, from hand to hand; but an incorporeal hereditament, which is the right itself to a thing or inherent in the person does not permit of livery. See 2 Bl Comm 317.

Traditio nihil amplius transferre debet vel potest ad eum qui accipit, quam est apud eum qui tradit. (Civil law.) Delivery ought to and can transfer nothing more to him who receives it than is in the possession of him who delivers.

traditio rei. The delivery of the thing.

traditor. A traitor, a person who commits treason.

Rules and regulations prescribed by law regarding the rights of vehicles and persons meeting or passing in a highway. 25 Am J1st High § 205. Regulations prescribed by law for the operation or navigation of boats. 12 Am J2d Boats §§ 14-19.

See air traffic rules; rules of the road.

traffic rules. See traffic regulations.

traffic violation. A violation of a statute or ordinance regulating the operation of motor vehicles.

See traffic infraction.

trahens. One drawing; the drawer of a bill of exchange.

trahere. To draw.

trail. Noun: A path or track. A way, road, or path suitable for the purpose of driving cattle over or along on their way to a market. United States v Andrews, 179 US 96, 99, 45 L Ed 105, 106, 21 S Ct 46. A course marked by footprints. Verb: To follow behind. To follow a person by his footprints or other sign left by him. To use blood hounds to follow the scent of one suspected of the commission of a crime, for the purpose of apprehending him. 26 Am J1st Homi § 331.

trailer. A car attached to a streetcar and operated with the latter. A vehicle used for transportation of freight on the highway, being towed by a tractor or another powered vehicle. Waddey v Maryland Casualty Co. 171 Tenn 112, 100 SW2d 984, 109 ALR 654. A vehicle having a large and commodious body, which can be towed upon the highway but is usually parked and used as living quarters; sometimes called a house trailer. A building within the meaning of a building code, where set up as a stationary home. Lower Merion Township v Gallup, 158 Pa Super 572, 46 A2d 35, app dismd 329 US 669, 91 L Ed 591, 67 S Ct 92. Not a motor vehicle within the meaning of a statute providing for constructive or substituted service upon a nonresident motorist. Anno: 48 ALR2d 1284.

A freight trailer falls into the category of trade equipment within the Michigan rule that damages for the loss of use of tools and trade equipment are recoverable in replevin, where the plaintiff's source of livelihood consisted of hiring out his trailer and tractor with himself as driver. Steel Motor Service v Zalke (CA6 Mich) 212 F2d 856, 48 ALR2d 1045.

trailer coach. A large vehicle carrying passengers but pulled by another vehicle, such as a tractor. McNown v Pacific Freight Lines, 50 Cal App 2d 221, 122 P2d 582.

trailer park. An area, usually adjacent to a highway, wherein house trailers are parked and used as living quarters, the area being equipped with electric, water, and gas lines, for the accommodation of the inhabitants of the trailers. Visser v Jordon (Fla App) 131 So 2d 754.

trailing. See trail.

train. An aggregation of cars drawn by an engine or engines. La Mere v Railway Transfer Co. 125 Minn 159, 145 NW 1068. Engine and cars assembled and coupled together for a run or trip on a railroad. United States v Erie R. Co. 237 US 402, 59 L Ed 1019, 35 S Ct 621.

A train pulled by a small engine called a "dummy," although exclusively engaged in carrying passengers, is a railroad train, within the meaning of a statute prescribing precautions to be observed by railroads. Birmingham Mineral Railroad Co. v Jacobs, 92 Ala 187, 9 So 320.

Within the air-brake provision of the Federal Safety Appliance Act, a train consists of an engine and cars which have been assembled and coupled together for a run or trip along the road. When a train is thus made up and is proceeding on its journey it is within the operation of the air-brake provision. But it is otherwise with the various movements in railroad yards whereby cars are assembled and coupled into outgoing trains, and whereby incoming trains which have completed their run are broken up. These are not train movements but are mere switching operations, and so are not within the air-brake provision. United States v Southern Pacific Co. (CA9 Cal) 100 F2d 984.

A locomotive with one or more cars attached to it, with or without passengers or freight, in motion upon a railroad from one point to another by means of power furnished by the locomotive, would undoubtedly constitute a train. Caron v Boston & Al. R. 164 Mass 523, 527, 42 NE 112.

tranquility. Serenity; a state of undisturbed emotions.

See public and domestic tranquility.

transacting business. Doing business. Engaging in business.

It has been held that entering into a contract to transact business is, in the unlimited meaning of the term, "transacting business," but that such was not the meaning of the term as contemplated in a statute requiring foreign corporations to perform certain acts as a prerequisite to transacting business within the state. Tri-state Amusement Co. v Forest Park Highlands Amusement Co. 192 Mo 404, 90 SW 1020.

See doing business; engaging in or transacting business.

transacting business within the state. See doing business in state.

transaction. A matter of dealing between parties, the word implying action, consent, knowledge, or acquiescence on the part of both of them. Blount v Blount, 158 Ala 242, 48 So 581. The carrying on or through of any matter or affair by two parties in concert the word implying mutuality. 58 Am J1st Witn § 238. The doing or performing of some business between parties, or the management of any affair, for the benefit or detriment of one or both of the parties. Re Wind, 27 Wash 2d 421, 178 P2d 731, 173 ALR 1276 (transaction with decedent). An act or agreement, or several acts or agreements having some connection with each other, in which two or more persons are concerned and by which legal relations between them are altered. 1 Am J2d Actions § 108.

As the word is employed in codes of pleading, it means something which has taken place whereby a cause of action has arisen. It must therefore consist of an act or an agreement, or several acts or agreements having some connection with each other, in which more than one person is concerned, and by which the legal relations of such persons between themselves are altered. Craft Refrigerating Machine Co. v Quinnipiac Brewing Co. 63 Conn 551, 29 A 76.

See repeated transactions.

transaction for profit. Any business activity productive of income. Re Kansas City Star Co. 346 Mo 658, 142 SW2d 1029, 130 ALR 1168.

transactions connected with same subject of action. A phrase applicable to a given state of facts wherefrom the plaintiff seeks different kinds of relief, but all of which kinds of relief spring from the same state of facts, and therefore are connected with the same subject of action. 1 Am J2d Actions § 109.

transaction with person since deceased or incompetent. A transaction between a witness and a person who has since died or become incompetent, so conducted that the latter, if living, could contradict the witness should he testify falsely. 58 Am J1st Witn § 238.

transcript. A written or typewritten copy. A typewritten transcript of the court reporter's stenographic notes taken on trial. A deposition reduced to writing. A complete record of the case filed on appeal, including all material matters. 4 Am J2d A & E § 404.

In the absence of statute or rule of court, a reporter's transcript is not, as such, part of the record, but must be made so, if it is to be available on appeal by embodying it in a bill of exception, although once it is made a part of the bill of exceptions, the trial judge may adopt it as a correct statement of the evidence given on the trial. 4 Am J2d A & E § 411.

transcripted judgment. A judgment entered in a county other than that in which rendered, so as to perfect a judgment lien upon real estate in the other county, upon the filing of a transcript of the judgment record in such county. 30A Am J Rev ed

Judgm § 124. A judgment of a justice of the peace made a judgment of a court of record by filing a transcript of the record of the judgment in the court of the justice of the peace with the clerk of the court of record.

transcription. A copy of a writing; the act of making a copy.

See transcript.

transcript of the evidence. A record of the evidence as prepared by the court reporter. Blair v Greene, 246 Ala 28, 18 So 2d 668.

Transeat in exemplum. Let it pass into an example or precedent.

transfer. Verb: To place property in the hands of another. Culbertson v Cabeen, 29 Tex 247. To pass title. New Home Bldg. Supply Co. v Nations, 259 NC 681, 131 SE2d 425. For some purposes, to transfer legal title. Lyons v Freshman, 124 Mont 485, 226 P2d 775, 23 ALR2d 1165 (under the Uniform Stock Transfer Act). Noun: A delivery of possession. A passing of title or ownership. A bill of sale; a deed. A sale. An assignment. Every means and manner by which property can pass from the ownership and possession of one person to the ownership and possession of another, either by act of the parties or by operation of law, or both. 42 Am J1st Prop § 54. Under the Bankruptcy Act, the sale and every other and different mode, direct or indirect, of disposing of or of parting with property or with an interest therein or with the possession thereof, or of fixing a lien upon property or upon an interest therein, absolutely or conditionally, voluntarily or involuntarily, by or without judicial proceedings, as a conveyance sale, assignment, payment, pledge, mortgage, lien, encumbrance, gift, security, or otherwise, including the retention of a security title to property delivered to a debtor. Transgressione multiplicata, crescat poenae inflictio. Upon the multiplication of transgression, let the infliction of punishment increase.

transgressive trust. A trust which by its terms transgresses or violates the rule against perpetuities.

Nothing is denounced as a perpetuity that does not transgress this rule, and equity follows this rule by way of analogy in dealing with executory trusts; and those trusts which transgress the rule are called transgressive trusts, being in equity the substantial equivalent of what in law are called perpetuities. Pulitzer v Livingston, 89 Me 359, 364, 36 A 635.

transhipment. Same as transshipment. transient. A person passing through a place or staying there only temporarily.

transient alien. An alien in the country temporarily or one merely passing through the country. Anno: 32 ALR 8, s. 48 ALR2d 813, 836-840, §§ 7, 17.

transient dealer. One who establishes himself in business in a locality with the intention and determination to remain there for a short period of time only, whether such period is a definite or indefinite one, such as a period of weeks or months, or until a particular stock of merchandise is disposed of, or until the local market for the commodity handled by the dealer has been exhausted, and who for such limited period engages or occupies a building or other place for the exhibition and sale of his goods or wares. 40 Am J1st Ped § 4. Sometimes called a transient merchant. Carrolton v Bazette, 159 Ill 284, 42 NE 837. Distinguished from a peddler in the respect that he has a definite place for the exhibition and sale of his goods, however temporary his stay at such place may be. Anno: 94 ALR 1083.

The term relates rather to the character of the business carried on by the merchant than to the residence of the individual merchant. Ottumwa v Zekind, 95 Iowa 622, 64 NW 646.

transient foreigner. Same as transient alien.

[1294]

Tres faciunt collegium. Three make a corporation; that is, three persons may form a corporation.

By the maxim, the Roman law required three persons to form a corporation, but after it was formed, it might continue to exist as a corporation although the members were reduced to one. See 1 Bl Comm 469.

tresor trouvé. Treasure trove.

trespass. A misfeasance, transgression, or offense which damages another's person, health, reputation, or property. Cox v Strickland, 120 Ga 104, 47 SE 912. In the widest application of the term, any transgression or offense against the laws of nature or society whether relating to person or property. Grunson v State, 89 Ind 533. The equivalent of tort or wrong. Bichenor v Hayes, 41 NJL 193. An unauthorized entry on another's property. Holler v New York, N.H. & H.R. Co. (CA2 NY) 265 F 192, 17 ALR 823, 825. A common-law form of action which lies for the recovery of damages inflicted by the direct application of force. An action which lies whenever an injury is the immediate result of the force originally applied by the defendant, and the plaintiff is injured thereby. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 2.

In its widest signification, trespass means any violation of law. In its most restricted sense, it signifies an injury intentionally inflicted by force either on the person or property of another. But still it has a signification in law much more narrow than the first, and more enlarged than the second meaning given, and embraces all cases where injury is done to the person or to property, and is the indirect result of wrongful force. Hill v Kimball, 76 Tex 210, 13 SW 59.

trespass ab initio. A trespass from the beginning. A trespass by retrospective operation, the principle being that where an entry, authority, or license is conferred by law under which conduct otherwise constituting a trespass may be justified, an abuse of such authority will destroy the privilege and render the act done in excess of authority, a trespass from the beginning, that is, from the time of the entry. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 19.

trespass de bonis. Same as trespass de bonis asportatis.

trespass de bonis asportatis. The common-law form of action for the recovery of damages resulting from the taking of chattel property from the possession of the plaintiff. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 2.

trespass de uxore abducto. An action of trespass for the abduction of the wife of the plaintiff. See 3 Bl Comm 139.

trespasser. A person who enters the premises of another without license, invitation, or other right, and intrudes for some definite purpose of his own, or at his convenience, or merely as an idler with no purpose apparent, other than, perhaps, to satisfy his curiosity. 38 Am J1st Negl § 109. A person who enters upon the land of another and who is neither suffered nor invited to enter. Anno: 36 ALR 37. In the broadest aspect of the term, one who has committed a trespass of any kind or nature.

trespass for mesne profits. A form of action supplemental to ejectment, brought against one wrongfully in possession to recover damages for the disturbance of the plaintiff's possession together with the profits which accrued during the wrongful possession. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 2.

trespass on the case. A common-law form of action, otherwise known as "case" and "action on the case," for an injury resulting from a wrongful act other than physical force, or for an injury resulting from nonfeasance or negligence, or for an injury which is consequential, as distinguished from a direct or immediate, result of the wrongful act. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 5. A remedy devised by the courts in remote times when actions were so carefully classified that a mistake in name was generally fatal to the case, its purpose being to cover new wrongs as they might occur so as to prevent a failure of justice. 1 Am J2d Actions § 22. Inclusive in the broad sense of the term of an action of assumpsit. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 6. More precisely, the remedy confined to actions for the redress of torts, the gravamen of the charge being the tort or wrong of the defendant, notwithstanding such tort or wrong may be also a breach of an express or implied contract. 1 Am J2d Actions § 22.

See vis impressa.

trespass per quod consortium amisit. An action of trespass which lay where the defendant had assaulted or ill-used the wife whereby the plaintiff husband was deprived of her society. See 2 Bl Comm 140.

trespass per quad servitium amisit. An action of trespass which lay where the defendant had assaulted or ill-used a servant of the plaintiff whereby plaintiff was deprived of his services. See 3 Bl Comm 142.

trespass quare clausum. Same as trespass quare clausum fregit.

trespass quare clausum fregit. The common-law remedy for the recovery of damages for the wrong of intruding upon the real property of another. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 2.

trespass to try title. An action to recover possession of real property and damages for any trespass committed upon such property by the defendant. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 2. An action displacing or supplementing the common-law action of ejectment in some jurisdictions. 25 Am J2d Eject § 4.

trespass vi et armis. The common-law remedy for the recovery of damages inflicted by the direct application of force. 52 Am J1st Tresp § 3.

See vis impressa.

trestle. A wooden frame used by a carpenter or woodworker in combinations of two or more to support the boards upon which he works. A support of a bridge.

tret. A deduction which is made for dust in weighing certain commodities.

triable. Capable of being tried; within the jurisdiction of the court.

trial. In common parlance, a test of one's physical or mental strength; a burden to be born; a test. In law, a judicial investigation and determination of the issues between the parties to an action. 53 Am J1st Trial § 2. An examination before a competent tribunal, according to the law of the land, of the facts or law put in issue in a cause, for the purpose of determining such issue. Finn v Spagnoli, 67 Cal 330, 332, 7 P 746. Technically, that step in an action by which issues or questions of fact are decided; often signifying a judicial examination of issues, whether of law or of fact. Columbus Packing Co. v State, 106 Ohio St 469, 140 NE 376, 37 ALR 1525. Sometimes inclusive of hearings upon motions attacking process or jurisdiction, as well as hearings upon motions attacking pleadings. 53 Am J1st Trial § 2. In its most comprehensive sense in reference to a criminal prosecution, inclusive of all the proceedings down to the acquittal or conviction of the accused. State v Hudson, 55 RI 141, 179 A 130, 100 ALR 313.

As to the stage of a trial at which the plaintiff may take a voluntary nonsuit or dismiss without prejudice, see Anno: 89 ALR 13.

The hearing of evidence after default in a divorce proceeding is not a "trial," as that term is used in statutory provisions for new trial. Hamblin v Superior Court, 195 Cal 364, 233 P 337, 43 ALR 1509.

See mistrial; public trial; summary trial.

trial anew. Same as trial de novo.

trial at nisi prius. See nisi prius.

trial by battel. Same as trial by wager of battel.

trial by certificate. A form of trial which was allowed in cases where the evidence of the person certifying was the only proper criterion of the point in dispute.

Such trials were permitted to save trouble and circuitry in cases where the evidence must have been conclusive if submitted to a jury. See 3 Bl Comm 333.

trial by court. See trial by the court.

trial by fire. An ancient form of trial in criminal cases, in which the accused was required to carry in his hand a piece of red-hot iron weighing from one to three pounds, or else to walk barefoot and blindfold over nine red-hot plough-shares, laid lengthwise at equal distances.

If he escaped unhurt, he was acquitted, but if otherwise, as was usually the case, he was adjudged guilty. See 4 Bl Comm 342.

trial by inspection. A trial by the judges, not by a jury, of some single matter which was obvious to sight. Roberts v Ogdensburgh & Lake Champlain Railroad Co. (NY) 29 Hun 154, 156.

In former times, the English courts of common law might, if they saw fit, try by inspection or examination, without a jury, the question of the infancy, or of the identity of a party; or, on an appeal of mayhem, the issue of mayhem or no mayhem; and, in an action of trespass for mayhem, or for an atrocious battery, might after a verdict for the plaintiff, and on his motion, and upon their own inspection of the wound, super visum vulneris, increase the damages at their discretion. In each of those exceptional cases, it was not thought necessary to call a jury to decide it, because the fact, from its nature, was deemed evident to the court, either from ocular demonstration or other irrefragible proof. The inspection was not had for the purpose of submitting the result to the jury; the question was thought too easy to require such submission. Union Pacific Railway Co. v Botsford, 141 US 250, 35 L Ed 734, 737, 11 S Ct 1000.

trial by jury. A trial in which the jurors are the judges of the facts and the court is the judge of the law. State ex rel. Rhodes v Saunders, 66 NH 39, 25 A 588. A matter of constitutional or statutory right to a trial by a legal, proper, fair, and impartial jury drawn from a cross section of the community. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury §§ 7 et seq.

A constitutional right to trial by jury "in all cases in which it has been heretofore used," does not extend to a suit in equity, even where, as incidental to the main relief sought, the complainant asks money damages. Jamaica Sav. Bank v M. S. Investing Co. 274 NY 215, 8 NE2d 493, 112 ALR 1485. The Seventh Amendment providing that in suits at common law where the value in controversy shall exceed $20 the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, has no application to cases where the recovery of money damages is an incident to equitable relief, even though damages might have been recovered in an action at law. NLRB v Jones & L. Steel Corp. 301 US 1, 81 L Ed 893, 57 S Ct 615, 108 ALR 1352.

See jury.

trial by ordeal. See ordeal.

trial by proviso. A proceeding whereby the defendant in an action undertakes to bring the cause to trial upon the failure of the plaintiff to do so.

trial by purgation. See corsned; purgation.

trial by record. The trial of an issue arising on the record of an action, without a jury and without taking any testimony.

trial by the country. A trial of an accused by a jury of his peers.

See jury of the country.

trial by the court. A trial held before one or more judges without a jury. Air-way Electric Appliance Corp. v Day, 266 US 42, 70, 69 L Ed 162, 169, 45 S Ct 18.

See trial by inspection.

trial by the iron. Same as trial by fire.

trial by wager of battel. A duel or combat which in ancient times was sanctioned by law as a form of trial, in which champions, in civil actions, represented the parties, under the superstition that the right would triumph.

The last trial by battel on record was in 1638. See 3 Bl Comm 337, et seq.

trial by wager of law. A species of trial anciently used in civil actions, wherein the defendant gave pledges or sureties that he would wage his law; that is, that he would appear at the time set when he would make oath as to his innocence and would produce compurgators, witnesses in his behalf, who would swear that they believed his oath. See 3 Bl Comm 341.

trial by water. A trial by water-ordeal, which was performed either by plunging the defendant's bare arm up to the elbow in boiling water, or by casting him into a pool of water.

If he escaped harm from the boiling water, or sank in the plunge, he was deemed innocent and acquitted, but if he was scalded by the hot water, or if he floated when thrown into the pool, he was adjudged guilty. See 4 Bl Comm 343.

trial counsel. A trial lawyer. A lawyer assisting the attorney of record in the trial of a case. The prosecuting counsel in a general or special court-martial.

trial de nova. A new trial; a new trial on appeal. 4 Am J2d A & E § 2. A trial on appeal from a justice of the peace to a court of general jurisdiction. 31 Am J Rev ed J P § 129. Trying anew the matter involved in an administrative determination the same as if it had not been heard before and as if no decision had been previously rendered, the hearing being upon the record made before the administrative agency and such further evidence as either party may see fit to produce. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 698.

See new trial; new trial on appeal.

trial examiner. A hearing officer of an administrative agency, comparable to an auditor or special master of a court. Annotation: 89 ALR 426, s. 171 ALR 782; 2 Am J2d Admin L § 407. An officer of the National Labor Relations Board who conducts hearings and receives evidence in proceedings under the National Labor Relations Act. 31 Am J Rev , ed Lab § 297.

[1300]

trial judge. A judge who presides at the trial of a cause.

trial jury. A jury for the trial of a case, as distinguished from a grand jury which returns an indictment. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 2.

See jury.

trial marriage. A marriage entered into under agreement that either or both parties shall have the option of annulling it. 4 Am J2d Annul § 7. A concept incidentally elucidated in "The Monastery" by Sir Walter Scott.

trial minutes. See minutes.

trial per pais. A term of ancient usage for trial by the peers of the party accused. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 7. Trial by jury.

trial per testes. A trial by witnesses testifying before the court, without a jury.

trial record. The record of the proceedings in a case in the trial court.

trial term. That part of the business of a court which is devoted to jury trials.

trial to begin anew. To begin again the examination of the matter of fact in issue in the trial. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 128.

triare. To try.

triatio. A trial.

Triatio ibi semper debet fieri, ubi juratores meliorem possunt habere notitiam. A trial ought always to be had where the jury can have the better information.

tribe. See Indian tribe.

Tribonian. A lawyer of Rome, who, with other lawyers, under the auspices of the Emperor Justinian compiled the present body of civil law, about 533 A.D. See 1 Bl Comm 81.

tribunal. A court. The seat or bench for the judge or judges of a court.

tributary. A stream which empties into or feeds another stream, as in the case of the Missouri River and the Mississippi River.

In a general sense a stream is tributary to a river when the stream empties into another river which empties into that river. Miller v Insurance Co. 12 W Va 116.

tribute. A tax which is imposed by a sovereign upon his subjects; a tax which is imposed by one nation upon another nation.

trichinosis. A disease centered in the intestine, usually resulting from the eating of pork insufficiently cooked to be purified of means of infection. Mouren v Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. 1 App Div 2d 767, 148 NYS2d 1.

trick. An artifice.

See larceny by trick.

tricycle. A small vehicle having three wheels and propelled by foot power, used as a plaything by children, preferably on the sidewalk. 7 Am J2d Auto § 4.

triennial cohabitation. See triennial test.

triennial test. The old rule of the English ecclesiastical courts known as the rule of triennial cohabitation, which required a husband and wife to live together for three years, and if at the end of that time the marriage remained unconsummated, or the wife appeared to be a virgin, impotence was presumed.

In modern times in England the rule has been held not to apply where the court is satisfied of the husband's impotence by other evidence. Anno: 28 ALR2d 514, § 6.

There is some American authority expressly rejecting, and other American authority, expressly adopting, the triennial test. Anno: 28 ALR2d 514, § 6; 24 Am J2d Div & S § 358.

triens. The third part; dower. See 2 Bl Comm 129.

trientes. Four per cent per annum.

The Romans at one time allowed centesimae, one per cent monthly, or twelve per cent per annum, to be taken as interest for common loans; but Justinian reduced this to trientes, or one third of the centesimae, that is four per cent. But he allowed a higher rate to be taken from merchants because of the greater hazard. See 2 Bl Comm 462.

triers. Persons appointed by the court to try a challenge for favor. The respective functions of court and jury. 53 Am J1st Trial § 156.

trifling. Verb: Making play of another's affections. Adjective: Trivial. Paltry. Of little value; of little moment.

Under the rule that an injunction will be denied where the injury complained of is of a trifling character which may be readily compensated by the allowance of damages, the word "trifling" means trifling per se and not trifling as compared with the injury which would result to the defendant from the granting of the injunction. Anno: 61 ALR 925.

Under the principle that an injured party is required to prevent or lessen his damages if he can do so at a reasonable cost, or as commonly stated: "He must protect himself if he can do so at trifling expense," the word "trifling" has reference to the situation of the parties. It means a sum which is trifling in comparison with the consequential damages which the plaintiff seeks to recover in the particular case. So, a property owner is not required to make expenditures, which in proportion to the injury threatened are considerable, for the purpose of protecting his property. It seems that want of sufficient funds will excuse his absence of effort to lessen damages. 22 Am J2d Damg § 32.

trigamus. A trigamist; a person who has been lawfully married to three different wives, one at a time.

trim. Verb: To put in order; to make neat. To balance a load or cargo. To decorate. To clip. To castrate. Noun: Woodwork around the windows and doors of a building. A position in which stage lights are placed for most effective and appropriate illumination.

As applied to a canal boat, "trimming" is shoveling the grain from one place to another on the boat, and this is done by longshoremen with scoops or shovels. "Trimming" a ship's cargo when loading is stowing it and securing it for the voyage. See Budd v New York, 143 US 517, 530, 36 L Ed 247, 250, 12 S Ct 468.

trimming trees. Cutting branches off trees to improve the appearance or to prevent interference with telephone or electric wires.

[1301]

trina admonitio. The third warning.

This was the final warning given to a prisoner who stood mute, before putting him on the rack to compel him to confess his crime. See 4 Bl Comm 325.

Trinity. The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit or Holy Ghost. The first Sunday following Pentecost.

The three series of annotated state reports, comprising American Decisions in one hundred volumes, covering the period from 1765 to 1869, American Reports in sixty volumes, covering the period from 1869 to 1887, and American State Reports in one hundred and forty volumes, covering the period from 1887 to 1911.

Trinity term. An English term of court beginning May 22nd and ending June 12th.

trinket. An ornament or plaything, rather than a thing of utility.

Bracelets, shirt pins, rings, and brooches,-they are clearly articles of personal decoration and adornment, and literally fall within the description of trinkets. See Ocean S.S. Co. v Way, 90 Ga 747, 17 SE 57.

trinoda necessitas. The threefold necessity. The three burdens to which all free householders, if not all freemen were subject under the ancient laws of England.

These were the duty of rendering military service against an enemy, the duty of assisting in the construction of castles or forts, and the duty of keeping bridges in repair. Butler v Perry, 240 US 328, 331, 60 L Ed 672, 674, 36 S Ct 258.

triode. A vacuum tube employed in the amplification of radio waves. Lewis v Smith (CA7 111) 228 F2d 926.

triors. Same as triers.

trip. A journey, voyage, or excursion. A stumble.

See round trip.

tripartite. In three parts; having three parties, as, a tripartite contract.

tripartite contract. A contract having parties of the first, second, and third parts.

See third-party beneficiary contract.

triple damages. See treble damages.

triple letter. A letter of three sheets. Williams v Wells, Fargo & Co. Express (CA8 Ark) 177 F 352.

triplicatio. A Roman law pleading corresponding to the common law sur-rejoinder, being the actor's reply to the defendant's duplicatio. See 3 Bl Comm 310.

triplication. An ecclesiastical law pleading corresponding to a common law rejoinder.

trip permit. A temporary license for the operation of a vehicle as a motor carrier. 7 Am J2d Auto § 90.

trithing. Old terminology for a division of a county or shire.

Where a county or shire was divided into three intermediate jurisdictions, they were called trithings and were anciently governed by a trithing-reeve. Having survived in the county of York, their name became corrupted into "ridings;" the north, the east, and the west riding. See 1 Bl Comm 116.

trithing-reeve. See trithing.

triverbial days. The twenty-eight judicial days in each year which the Roman law allowed to the praetor for deciding cases.

These days were called triverbial because upon them the praetor was permitted the use of the three words "Do dico, addico," I give judgment, I expound the law, I execute the law. See 3 Bl Comm 424, and footnote.

trivial error. Immaterial error; harmless error. 5 Am J2d A & E § 776.

trolley. A streetcar; a streetcar line. Any railway propelled by electric power and running over a route limited in length, often between a city and its suburbs or neighboring cities.

trolley pole. A pole upon which the electric wires which carry the current for propelling a streetcar or trolley are affixed and carried.

tronage. An ancient toll charged for the weighing of wool.

troops. Soldiers; officers and men in any branch of the military forces: Louisville & N. R. Co. v United States, 258 US 374, 66 L Ed 668, 42 S Ct 337.

In 1850 the word had, and it has ever since had an established meaning:-namely, "soldiers collectively,-a body of soldiers." Contemporary legislation draws a clear distinction also between "troops," that is, those having the status of soldiers, and those who once had been in, or were seeking to enter the military service. United States v Union Pacific Railroad Co. 249 US 354, 357, 63 L Ed 643, 645, 39 S Ct 294.

trophy. Something taken as a symbol of victory, for example, the football used in a football game. In an older time, the head of a defeated opponent.

tropical year. The interval between two consecutive returns of the sun to the vernal equinox.

trove. Found.

See treasure-trove.

trover. The common-law action for the recovery of damages for the conversion of personal property. 18 Am J2d Conversion § 1.

troy weight. The measure employed in weighing gold, silver, and precious jewels, characterized by grains, pennyweight, and ounces troy, twelve of such ounces making one pound troy.

truancy. The act of a child of school age in wilfully avoiding attendance at school. The act of a child in deserting his home or place of abode. 31 Am J Rev ed Juv Ct § 36. Neglect of work.

truant. Broadly, one who is in a state of truancy. A pupil absent from school without the permission of his parent. Holmes v Nester, 81 Ariz 372, 306 P2d 290, 62 ALR2d 1322.

The cases present differing views as to what constitutes a truant from school. Anno: 62 ALR2d 1328.

See truancy.

truant officer. See attendance officer.

truce. An agreement made between belligerents that they will temporarily cease hostilities.

Truce of God. An armistice proclaimed by the church in medieval times.

truck. A large vehicle used in the transportation of goods, propelled by motor. A low platform on wheels used in factories and warehouses for carrying goods, especially heavy articles. Garden produce.

See pick-up truck.

[1302]

Truck Acts. Statutes regulating the medium in which wages are payable. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 822.

As early as the fourteenth century, laws in England prohibited the payment of wages, in certain trades, in anything but lawful money of the realm; and in 1831, all of these laws were consolidated into what is known as the Truck Act, embracing nearly all classes of trades. The purpose of this legislation was the abolition of what was known in that country as the Truck System, that is to say, the payment of wages to laborers in goods or by truck. Similar legislation in the United States has been held constitutional.

trucker. One who drives a truck. A company engaged in the business of hauling goods for others. One engaged in truck farming.

truck farming. The growing of vegetables, a kind of agriculture. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 97.

truckman. See trucker.

Truck System. See Truck Acts.

true. In accord with fact, with the actual state of things. Honest; sincere. Reliable. Moulou v American Life Ins. Co. 111 US 335, 345, 28 L Ed 447, 451, 4 S Ct 466. Real, genuine, as a true plumber. Andrews v Peck, 83 Conn 666, 78 A 445.

See half truth.

true admission. A judicial admission, that is, an admission made by a party in the course of judicial proceedings. 29 Am J2d Ev § 597.

true bill. An indictment found by the concurrence of the requisite number of grand jurors, as indicated by the indorsement of the words "true bill" on the instrument. 27 Am J1st Indict § 30.

true cash value. The value which property has, as used, and by reason of its use. Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Co. v Backus, 154 US 421, 430, 38 L Ed 1031, 1037, 14 S Ct 1114.

See actual cash value.

true construction. The rule of construction in ascertaining the intent of the parties as revealed in the language of the instrument and, as necessary in a proper case, in interpreting such language in the light of the surrounding circumstances.

In construing contracts, recourse must first be had to the language of the instrument. A true construction of the words or phrases used is the touchstone of legal right. They are to be interpreted according to their strict and primary acceptance unless from the context of the instrument and the intention of the parties to be collected from it as they appear to be used in a different sense, the cardinal rule always being to give effect to the intention of the parties in the light of the surrounding circumstances. Prudential Ins. Co. v Nelson (CA6 Tenn) 101 F2d 441.

true copy. An exact copy of a written instrument.

true estate. The estate of a decedent for local probate purposes, not necessarily the estate for federal estate tax purposes. Hooker v Drayton, 69 RI 290, 33 A2d 206, 150 ALR 723.

true in every spot and place. A broad warranty of soundness, particularly in reference to a horse. Andrews v Peck, 83 Conn 666, 78 A 445.

true man doctrine. The rule that one subjected to a felonious assault which produces imminent danger to him of death or great bodily harm is not required to retreat but may stand his ground, repel force by force, and if, in the reasonable exercise of his right of self-defense, he kills his assailant, he is justified. 26 Am J1st Homi § 151.

true meridian. A great circle of the earth running through the geographical poles. A meridian according to which the boundary lines of public lands of the United States are to be run in surveying. 43 USC § 751; 12 Am J2d Bound § 10.

true party in interest. Same as real party in interest.

true value. See full and true value.

true verdict. A verdict which represents the conclusion of the jury as reached where each juror has given honest consideration to the rights of the parties litigant, or the accused, as the case may be, and has exercised his best judgment, guided by the law and the weight of the evidence introduced at the trial. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1028.

truly. In a true manner. Faithfully.

See fairly; true.

trunk line. The main line of a railroad. The main line of a public utility.

See trunk railway.

trunk line sewer. A sewer having lateral branches.

trunk railway. A commercial railway connecting towns, cities, counties, or other points within the state or in different states, which has the legal capacity, under its charter or the general law, of constructing, purchasing, -and operating branch lines or feeders connecting with its main stem or trunk, the main or trunk line bearing the same relation to its branches that the trunk of a tree bears to its branches, or the main stream of a river to its tributaries. Diebold v Kentucky Traction Co. 117 Ky 146, 77 SW 674.

trust. Noun: A fiduciary relationship; a matter of confidence. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 4. A confidential relationship involving a trustee, beneficiary, and a res consisting in property. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 4. The legal relationship between one person having an equitable ownership in property and another person owning the legal title to such property, the equitable ownership of the former entitling him to the performance of certain duties and the exercise of certain powers by the latter, which performance can be compelled in a court of equity or a court which follows equitable principles. 54 Am J1st Trust § 4. The separation of the same estate into parts, legal and equitable, the owner of either part being entitled to the aid of the court in establishing and enforcing his rights. McDonogh v Murdoch (US) 15 How 367, 14 L Ed 732. A monopoly. State ex rel. Watson v Standard Oil Co. 49 Ohio St 137, 30 NE 279. Verb: To have confidence in a person; to extend credit to a person. Putnal v Inman, 76 Fla 553, 80 So 316, 3 ALR 1580.

The word is often employed in law, as well as in popular language, in a sense which is much broader than its ordinary technical significance, as denoting or as synonymous with confidence, fiduciary relationship, etc., and it is often used in reference to the confidential aspect of any kind of a bailment or possession by one person of the property of another. In its literal significance the word "trust" implies nurturing and sheltering of a sacred confidence. In its more technical significance, the word still implies such confidence in a relationship which involves a trustee, beneficiary, and a res. 55 Am J1st Trusts § 4.

As the word is used in the law pertaining to unlawful combinations and monopolies, a "trust" in its original and typical form is a combination formed by an agreement among the stockholders in a number of competing corporations to transfer their shares to an unincorporated board of trustees, and to receive in exchange trust certificates in some agreed proportion to their stockholdings. By popular development the word has come to signify any combination, whether of producers or vendors of a commodity, for the purpose of controlling prices and suppressing competition, so that all contracts, agreements, and schemes whereby those who are competitors combine to regulate prices are called "trusts." 36 Am J1st Monop etc § 19.

[1303]

trust allotment to Indians. See restricted allotment.

trust company. A corporation, usually engaged in a general banking business, and in particular as a compensated trustee of funds or property. A bank for purposes of regulation. 10 Am J2d Banks § 11.

trust deed. See deed of trust; trust.

trust deposit. A deposit in a bank in trust for the benefit of a person other than the depositor.

trust de son tort. See trustee de son tort.

trustee. That person in a trust relationship who holds the legal title to the property subject to the trust, for the benefit of the beneficiary or cestui que trust, with certain powers and subject to certain duties imposed by the terms of the trust, principles of equity, or statutory provision. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 112. The person to whom property is conveyed by a deed of trust given by way of security. The title of some public officers, such as township trustees and members of the board of a state, county, or municipal college or university. 15 Am J2d Colleges § 11.

Every man to whom a business is entrusted by another has a trust to perform; and every man is a trustee who is to advise concerning, or to operate, the business of another. Quinn v Thippis, 93 Fla 805, 113 So 419, 54 ALR 1173.

trustee de son tort. A trustee by reason of one's own wrong. Morris v Joseph, 1 W Va 256. One charged as a constructive trustee by reason of his own wrong. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 218. In effect, a trustee ex maleficio.

trustee ex delicto. One charged as constructive trustee because of his own wrong. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 218.

See trustee de son tort; trustee ex maleficio; trustee in invitum.

trustee ex maleficio. A trustee from wrongdoing; the trustee of a trust arising by operation of law from a wrongful acquisition. A person charged as a constructive trustee because without right he has entered into possession or assumed the management of property belonging to another. Morris v Joseph, 1 W Va 256.

See constructive trust.

trustee in bankruptcy. One to whom the administration of a bankrupt estate is delegated and confided. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 621.

The Bankruptcy Act specifies either one or three trustees for a bankrupt estate, and there is nothing in the Bankruptcy Act or the General Orders which supports the appointment of two or more than three trustees for an estate. Whenever three trustees have been appointed, the concurrence of at least two of them is necessary to the validity of their acts concerning the administration of the estate. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 623.

See official trustee.

trustee of express trust. A trustee duly appointed or designated, as distinguished from a trustee de son tort or a trustee under a constructive trust.

The term includes a person with whom, or in whose name, a contract is made for the benefit of another. Muncie Natural Gas Co. v Muncie, 160 Ind 97, 66 NE 436.

trustee process. A remedy akin to garnishment, that is, a proceeding whereby property, money or credits of a debtor in possession of another, the garnishee, are applied to the payment of the debts by means of process against the debtor and garnishee. Pennsylvania Railroad Co. v Rogers, 52 W Va 450, 44 SE 300. The remedy of garnishment. 6 Am J2d Attach § 2.

trustor. The maker or creator of a trust. Sometimes applied to the person upon whom a trust is conferred. Interallied Commercial Co. v Standard Beryllium Corp. 39 Misc 2d 269, 240 NYS2d 433.

trust estate. The res of a trust. The fund or property held by the trustee for the benefit of the cestui que trust.

The expression seems to be used with some confusion in the books. Sometimes it is employed to express the estate of the trustee, and sometimes that of the cestui que trust. Cooper v Cooper, 6 NJ Ey 9, 12.

trust ex delicto. See trustee ex delicto.

trust ex maleficio. See trustee ex maleficio.

trust for value. A trust created by the trustor in return for a valuable and adequate consideration.

trust fund. A fund held in trust by a trust company or other trustee.

See following trust fund or property; special deposit.

trust fund doctrine. The principle, commonly known as the American doctrine, that the property of a corporation must be appropriated to the payment of debts before any assets are distributed among stockholders. Wood v Dummer (CC Me) 3 Mason 308, F Cas No 17944; Hospes v Northwestern Mfg. & Car Co. 48 Minn 174, 50 NW 1117. Sometimes stated broadly as meaning that the assets of a corporation constitute a trust fund for the benefit of its creditors. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1021. The equitable principle that the assets of an insolvent corporation become, from the date of its assured insolvency, a trust fund for equal distribution among its creditors, so that thereafter none of them can obtain priority by levy of or by recovering a judgment and levying an execution against the corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1579. The principle that the capital stock of a corporation, at least of an insolvent corporation, is in equity a trust fund for the payment of its creditors, regardless of whether it has been paid into the company or exists in the form of unpaid instalments upon stock subscriptions. 19 Am J2d Corp § 722. The doctrine under which subscribers to stock in a corporation are liable for a balance due on their unpaid subscriptions after the dissolution of the corporation, although the subscriptions were obtained fraudulently and although the charter of the corporation was annulled, revoked, and cancelled for fraud practiced on the state in securing the articles of incorporation. State ex rel. Havner v Associated Packing Co. 216 Iowa 1053, 90 ALR 1339, 249 NW 761.

As to whether the insolvency of the corporation precludes the rescission of a subscription contract on the ground of fraud practiced upon the subscriber, see 18 Am J2d Corp § 336.

trust fund immunity. The principle that while a charity is not immune from liability in tort or from suit where it is sought to impose a tort liability upon it, the trust property or funds by which it is supported or maintained cannot be reached by execution under a judgment obtained against it in an action to recover damages for a tort. 15 Am J2d Char § 157.

trust fund theory. See trust fund doctrine; trust fund immunity.

trust indenture. An instrument which states the terms and conditions of a trust, such as a pension trust or a trust created by way of security for a bond issue.

Trust Indenture Act. A federal statute of 1939 having a purpose comparable to that of other federal securities legislation, namely to afford the public protection in connection with securities. 15 USC §§ 77aaa etc.

trusting. In some contexts, a precatory word operating in the creation of a trust. Anno: 49 ALR 81.

trusting and believing. In some contexts, a precatory expression operating in the creation of a trust. Anno: 49 ALR 82.

trusting and confiding. In some contexts, a precatory expression operating in the creation of a trust. Anno: 49 ALR 81.

trust in invitum. A trust raised by operation of law without the consent of the trustee.

Such a trust arises where goods have been stolen or converted to the use of the taker and sold, with respect to the proceeds, whether such proceeds are in the form of money or other property purchased therewith, and equity will in such cases enforce a trust in invitum in the original taker or in his assignee with notice. Likewise, where a trustee or other fiduciary has misapplied trust funds a like trust will be raised. Lightfoot v Davis, 198 NY 261, 91 NE 582.

See trustee de son tort.

trust inter vivos. A trust which becomes effective during the life of the settlor; in other words, a living trust. 54 Am J1st Trusts § 5.

trustor. The grantor, creator, maker, or settlor of a trust. trust patent to Indians.

See restricted allotment.

trust power. A power of appointment or disposal to be exercised by the donee of the power for the benefit of one other than himself. 41 Am J1st Pow §3.

Trust powers are imperative and their performance may be compelled in equity. In every case where the trust is valid as a power, the lands to which the trust relates remain in or descend to the person otherwise entitled, subject to the execution of the trust as a power. Tilden v Green, 130 NY 29, 28 NE 880.

unaccrued royalty. An expression criticized as inept and self-contradictory.

It would seem that the expression is a contradiction in terms; and in fact the right to share in oil that may be produced accrues immediately upon delivery of the lease. Apparently what is meant by "unaccrued royalty" is a supposed interest in unpossessed oil in the ground, which is, of course, real estate. Upon principle, however, it cannot be said that one has any title to oil in the ground simply because, its beneficiary of an oil contract, he may become entitled to a share of oil reduced to possession. To say that a lessor has title to oil in the ground by reason of his royalty interest is to confound his title as landowner with his rights under the lease. Anne: 90 ALR 771.

una cum. Together with.

una cum omnibus aliis. Together with all other things.

unadjusted debt. A debt uncertain in amount, not settled or agreed upon as to amount. Richardson v Woodbury, 43 Me 206, 214.

unalienable. Same as inalienable.

unanimous. Complete in approval or concurrence.

The decision or vote of a judicial or legislative body is unanimous when it is concurred in by all the members who are present, if the members present constitute a quorum, even though one or more members are absent. Such a body, with a quorum present, proceeds ordinarily as if every member were sitting in his place, and exercises all the powers with which it is invested. Harroun v Brush Electric Light Co. 152 NY 212, 46 NE 291.

unanimous decision. A decision in which all the judges or justices hearing the case concur.

unanimous verdict. A verdict in which all the jurors concur. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 10.

una parte. See de una parte; ex una parte.

Una persona vix potest supplere vices duarum. One person can scarcely supply the places of two.

unattached. The state or condition of property upon which no attachment has been levied. Unfettered by the bonds of matrimony. Neither married nor engaged.

unattended. See attendant.

unattested instrument. An instrument which does not bear the signatures of attesting or subscribing witnesses.

unauthorized connection. A connection to the station or line of an individual subscriber to telephone service, made without the authorization of the subscriber and the telephone company.

Both the subscriber and the telephone company must consent if the connection is to be deemed anything else but unauthorized. Anno: 74 ALR2d 858.

Unauthorized Insurer's Act. One of the uniform laws. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 67.

unauthorized practice of law. Conducting the practice of law without the license required by law. 7 Am J2d Attys § 73.

una voce. With one voice; with one accord; unanimously.

unavoidable accident. An occurrence of an unusual, unexpected, or extraordinary character, usually occurring without any direct participation by man. French v Pirnie, 240 Mass 489, 134 NE 353, 20 ALR 1098. Something beyond human foresight and control. 32 Am J1st L & T § 796. Such an occurrence, as under all the circumstances, could not have been foreseen, anticipated, or avoided in the exercise of ordinary care. McBride v Woods,

124 Colo 384, 238 P2d 183, 29 ALR2d 101. An inevitable accident which could not have been foreseen and prevented by the exercise of that degree of diligence which reasonable men would exercise under like conditions, and which resulted without any fault attributable to the persons sought to be held responsible. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 823. Such an occurrence or happening as, under all attendant circumstances and conditions, could not have been foreseen or anticipated in the exercise of ordinary care. 7 Am J2d Auto § 350.

See inevitable accident.

unavoidable casualty. An occurrence of an unusual, unexpected, or extraordinary character, usually occurring without any direct participation by man. French v Pirnie, 240 Mass 489, 134 NE 353, 20 ALR 1098. Something beyond human foresight and control. 32 Am J1st L & T § 796.

See unavoidable accident.

unavoidable cause. An accidental cause, a cause which cannot be avoided by the exercise of due diligence and foresight; a cause which reasonably prudent and cautious men under like circumstances do not and would not ordinarily anticipate and whose effects under similar circumstances they do not and would not ordinarily avoid. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Co. v United States (CA2 NY) 194 F 339, 344.

unavoidable delay. A delay occurring by unavoidable cause, by unavoidable accident, or unavoidable casualty.

Unavoidable delay in the performance of a contract, to amount to an excuse by custom or usage, must be confined to delays due to causes originating after the contract has been entered into. Lima Locomotive & Machine Co. v National Steel Estings Co. (CA6 Ohio) 155 F 77.

unavoidable occurrence. An unavoidable accident or unavoidable casualty.

For definition of term as it appears in it condition of a contract of sale providing for relief from the obligation under certain circumstances, see Anno: 51 ALR 1010.

unavoidably prevented. Prevented without fault attributable to any person. Anno: 31 ALR 631.

unblocked frog. A frog in a railroad switch which has not been blocked or filled in such manner as to prevent a person's foot or shoe from being caught and wedged in the frog. Southern Pacific Co. v Seley, 152 US 145, 150, 38 L Ed 391, 393, 14 S Ct 530; Union Pacific Railway Co. v James, 163 US 485, 41 L Ed 236, 16 S Ct 1109.

unborn child. A child in the womb of the mother. A child not yet delivered from the womb. One of a generation to come.

In some jurisdictions, statutes relating to the crime of abortion or related offenses, although speaking in terms of "a woman" or "any woman", contain further language referring to such woman's "child" or "unborn child", as by providing that the criminal acts must be done with the intent to destroy an unborn child. It would appear that under enactments of this kind, proof of pregnancy is essential to a conviction. Anno: 46 ALR2d 1406.

See in being.

unbroken package. See original package.

uncertainty. Lacking in certainty.

As applied to pleadings, the word does not include "ambiguity," although the leading English dictionaries give the word "uncertain" as one of the meanings of the word ambiguous." See Kraner v Haney, 82 Cal 209, 212, 22 P 1137.

unchaste. Lacking in virtue and chastity. 35 Am J1st Mar 134.

unchaste woman. A woman who is sexually impure; a loose woman; a woman of loose character. Foster v Hanchett, 68 Vt 319.

unchastity. See unchaste; unchaste woman.

unciae. See usurae centesimae.

uncle. A brother of one's father or mother. A relative in the third degree according to the civil-law method of computing degrees of relationship which prevails in most American jurisdictions. Anno: 55 ALR2d 645, § 1[b].

As to the meaning of the term in reference to war risk life and disability insurance, see Anno: 55 ALR 584.

unclean hands doctrine. See clean hands doctrine.

uncollectible. Not to be realized for want of assets subject to execution. Not to be paid voluntarily. Not to be collectible without suit or threat of suit.

A creditor's claim is said to be uncollectible when he has failed to receive the amount due after exhausting every effort to collect it, short of sending it to an attorney for collection. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v Leshner, Whitman & Co. 126 Misc 874, 215 NYS 225, 229.

unconditional. Without conditions; without restrictions; absolute. Columbia Water Power Co. v Columbia Electric Street R. Co. 172 US 475, 491, 43 L Ed 521, 527, 19 S Ct 247.

unconditional credit. A credit, given by the drawee bank upon its books for a check forwarded to it for collection, which is not subject to revocation. First Nat. Bank v Universal C. I. T. Credit Corp. 132 Ind App 353, 170 NE2d 238.

unconditional heirs. In Louisiana, heirs who inherit property without any reservation, or without making any inventory. unconditional ownership. Title where the quality of the estate is not limited or affected by any condition. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 791.

See sole and unconditional ownership.

unconscionable. Morally reprehensible.

unconscionable advantage. See taking unconscionable advantage.

unconscionable bargain. See unconscionable agreement.

unconscionable agreement. An agreement, usually made when one of the parties was in a position of disadvantage, which is oppressive, especially one which unreasonably restricts the liberty of a party to exercise his calling or earn his living, or imposes an extortionate rate of interest. 17 Am J2d Contr § 192.

unconscious plagiarism. Using the literary work of another in one's own work without realizing that it is actually the work of another, the ideas and concepts used having been implanted in the mind by a previous and forgotten study made of the work of the other person. Anno: 23 ALR2d 341.

unconstitutional law. See unconstitutional statute.

unconstitutional statute. A self-contradictory expression, since a statute in conflict with the consti-tion is not law but is wholly void and as inoperative in legal contemplation as if it had never been passed, notwithstanding it has the form and name of law. 16 Am J2d Const L § 177.

When a statute is adjudged to be unconstitutional, it is as if it had never been. Rights cannot be built up under it. Contracts which depend upon it for their construction are void. It constitutes a protection to no one who has acted under it, and no one can be punished for having refused obedience to it before the decision was made. And what is true of an act void in toto is true also as to any part of an act which is found to be unconstitutional, and which consequently is to be regarded as having never at any time been passed and in legal effect. Re Rahrer (CC Kan) 43 F 556.

As used in the United States Code, the term "unconstitutional" has reference to the United States Constitution, not to a state constitution. Anno: 83 L Ed 1195.

uncontrollable. Out of control. Not subject to control. Irresistible.

uncontrollable event. An irresistible occurrence. An occurrence which can neither be restrained nor prevented. Lehman, Stern & Co. v Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & S.S. Co. 115 La 1, 38 So 873.

uncontrollable impulse. See irresistible impulse.

uncontrolled discretion. Discretion given a trustee which is not subject to judicial rectification.

The court should not tolerate an abuse of discretion on the part of a trustee, even though the trust instrument purports to give him uncontrolled discretion. Anno: 27 ALR2d 1337.

uncore. Again; now.

uncore prist. He is still ready.

The expression was used in the formal pleading of a tender, wherein the pleader alleged that he has always been ready (tout temps prist), and still is ready (uncore prist), to pay. See 3 Bl Comm 303.

uncuth. (Saxon.) Unknown; a stranger.

unde. Whence; from where; from what.

undefended. Without defense; no defense being interposed, as when a defendant is in default.

unde nihil habet. Whence he has nothing.

unde petit judicium. Whereof he demands judgment.

under a certain age. A status terminating when the person passes the anniversary of such age. Anno: 73 ALR2d 874, 875.

under a designated age. See under a certain age.

under and subject to the payment of. A stipulation in a conveyance of mortgaged property ineffective as air assumption of the mortgage debt.

Such a Stipulation does not with sufficient clearness import an intention by the grantor to create, and by the grantee to assume, a personal obligation to pay the mortgage debt. 37 Am J1st Mtg § 998.

underbid. To bid less than another bidder.

undercharge. A charge imposed by a carrier for the transportation of a passenger or property which is less than the rate, fare, or charge applicable to such transportation as set forth in the published tariff schedule. 13 Am J2d Car § 109.

under consideration by the grand jury. inclusive of all proceedings had in the grand jury room insofar as they include the reception of evidence and the ultimate action taken upon it. Anno: 4 ALR2d 398.

under control. See control; control of vehicle.

under conviction. Having a strong belief. Under sentence not yet executed.

While the sentence stands unexecuted, a person who has been found guilty of crime and sentenced is said to be "under conviction": he stands "under" it, it rests upon his head; but when he has suffered the penalty, he has paid the debt, the sentence has spent its force, and no longer hovers over him, See Osborne v Kanawha County Court, 68 W Va 189. 69 SE 470.

underground conduit. A tube laid below the surface of the ground in which electric, telegraph and telephone wires may be strung. 52 Am J1st Teleg & T § 50.

underground circuit. A telephone, telegraph, or electric wire strung in a conduit below the surface of the ground. 52 Am J1st Teleg & T § 50.

underground stream. A stream of water which flows in a fixed or definite channel, the existence and location of which is known or ascertainable from surface indications or other means without subsurface excavations. 56 Am J1st Water § 108.

underground water. Air underground stream, air underground pool, or water percolating below the surface.

See percolating water; subterranean waters; underground stream.

under his care. A familiar term in embezzlement statutes, of broader meaning than the term "possession."

A person may have money or property of another under his care," although it is in the actual possession of another. 26 Am J2d Embez § 15.

under his hand. Denoting a signature in one's own handwriting; not inclusive of a rubber-stamp signature. Anno: 37 ALR 87. A formal phrase indicating a signature, as by a justice of the peace upon a warrant issued by him. Salazar v Taylor, 18 Colo 538.

underlease. A lease by a lessee of a part of his unexpired term. Bedford v Terhune, 30 NY 451 A lease by a lessee of a part of the premises demised to him. 32 Am J1st L & T § 403.

underletting. See underlease.

under own power. Moving by force of a power contained therein; not in tow.

under protest. See protest.

under sail. Underway with sails set. The expression is not synonymous with the expression "carrying sail," which means simply equipped with sails. Thus, a steamer may be under way and carrying sail and yet not be under sail. Belden v Chase, 150 US 674, 695, 37 L Ed 1218, 1225, 14 S Ct 264.

under seal. With seal affixed.

See seal.

undersheriff. An officer on the staff of a sheriff; a deputy sheriff. 47 Am J1st Sher § 154. A general deputy sheriff, --a deputy sheriff who, by virtue of his appointment, has authority to execute all the ordinary duties of the office of sheriff. Allen v Smith, 12 NJL 159, 162. In old England, air officer immediately subordinate to the sheriff, or high-sheriff, as he was often called.

[1313]

The undersheriff usually performed all the duties of the office of sheriff; the personal presence of the sheriff himself was seldom necessary. Statute limited the term of the office of the undersheriff to one year. See 1 Bl Comm 345.

In some jurisdictions, a distinction is made between a deputy sheriff and an undersheriff, although both are subordinate to the sheriff.

undersigned. The person whose name is signed, or the persons whose names are signed, at the end of a document; the subscriber or subscribers. Farmers' Exchange Bank v Sollars, 353 111224, 187 NE 289, 89 ALR 398.

understand. To have full and clear knowledge of; to have full comprehension of; to comprehend. Fox v Shaeffer, 131 Conn 439, 41 A2d 46, 157 ALR 132.

understanding. The mental quality of discernment. An interpretation. Agreement.

"Understood" is synonymous with the word agreed". Phoenix Iron & Steel Co. v Wilkoff Co. (CA6 Ohio) 253 F 165, 1 ALR 1497.

"The words 'understood' and 'agreed' may be used synonymously." Mount v Montgomery County, 168 Ind 661, 80 NE 629.

While, in a sense, the word may be said to involve a conclusion, it is an ambiguous word, and is sometimes used as synonymous with the word " agreement." While a witness should not be asked what "understanding" was arrived at, if such testimony is admitted without objection, or cross-examination, it should go to the jury with a view to ascertaining what was meant by the word. Sykes v City Sav. Bank, 115 Mich 321.

understood. See understanding.

undertaker. A person engaged in the business of caring for the bodies of deceased persons and the disposition of them by burial or otherwise. 54 Am J1st Und & E § 2. One whose business it is to arrange for burying the dead and to oversee funerals. State ex rel. Kempinger v White, 177 Wis 541, 188 NW 607, 23 ALR 67, 69.

An undertaker is not necessarily an embalmer. State ex rel. Kempinger v White, 177 Wis 541, 188 NW 607, 23 ALR 67. 69.

undertaker's license. A license required of an under taker by the state under its police power. 54 Am J1st Und & E § 5.

undertaking. Broadly, that which one has agreed to do. Technically, an obligation in writing binding the signatories to pay such an amount as shall be adjudged due. General American Industries, Inc. v County Court of Clear Creek County, 136 Colo 86, 316 P2d 565.

Although the essential purpose of all undertaking is the same as that of a bond, and an undertaking with security is in common usage and in the language of the law, a bond, the dissimilarity in terms is fundamental. An undertaking has to do with amounts to be determined, whereas a bond has to do with liquidated amounts. 12 Am J2d Bonds § 1.

The distinction between a bond and all undertaking is that the principal should sign the former and that he is not required to sign the latter. Russell , Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 37 Mont 1, 94 P 48 8, 501.

undertaking for costs. See security for costs.

undertaking to keep the peace. See bond to keep the peace.

under-tenant. A tenant who holds under an underlease or sublease. Bedford v Terhune, 30 NY 453.

See underlease.

under the age limit fixed by law. A familiar term ill exclusion clauses in policies of automobile insurance, having reference to the operation of the vehicle covered by the policy in violation of statute or ordinance which prescribes a regulation in reference to the age of drivers. 7 Am J2d Auto his § 38.

under the influence of an intoxicant. Under so much influence from intoxicant as impairs the ability of the subject to care for himself. Kuroske v Aetna Life Ins. Co. 234 Wis 394, 291 NW 384, 127 ALR 1505 (clause in accident insurance policy excluding from coverage injuries sustained while under the influence of an intoxicant).

See driving while intoxicated.

under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Affected by the taking of intoxicating liquor, irrespective of a specific degree of intoxication. 7 Am 32d Auto § 257 Intoxicated. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1230. So affected by intoxicating liquor as not to have the full use of one's physical and mental powers as such are present when one is in a normal condition. Grinnell v General Acci. Co. 80 Vt 526, 68 A 655 (clause appearing in an exception in a policy of accident insurance).

See driving while intoxicated.

under the law. In conformity with law. Subject to the law.

"We are under the laws of the United States---that is, we are subject to those laws. We live under a certain jurisdiction --- that is, we are subject to it." Mills v Stoddard (US) 8 How 345, 366, 12 L Ed 1107, 1115.

under the peace. In the king's peace; under the protection of the king; within the jurisdiction and protection of the state. Commonwealth v Macloon, 101 Mass 1.

See bond to keep the peace.

under the rule. See rule.

under-tutor. (Civil law.) A person appointed by a court to act for a minor when his tutor's interests are in conflict with his own. Welch v Baxter, 45 La Ann 1062, 1064. 13 So 629.

underway. In progress. Moving.

A vessel is underway when she is not at anchor, not made fast to the shore, and not aground. A steam vessel which is being towed is underway, within the definition. The Scandinavia (DC NY) 11 F2d 542.

underwriter. One who has incurred all obligation by executing his signature to all instrument, particularly all insurance contract. One who insures another under a contract of policy of insurance. Childs ex rel. Smith v Firemen's Ins. Co. 66 Minn 393, 69 NW 141. One who has agreed to take all entire stock or bond issue or so much of a stock or bond issue as is not taken by the public. Re Hackett, Hoff & Thiermann (CA7 Wis) 70 172d 815: Rauer's Law & Collection Co. v Harrell, 32 Cal App 45, 162 P 125.

An underwriter's contract is not an agreement to lend money. See Re Hackett, Hoff & Thiermann (CA7 Wis) 70 F2d 815.

An underwriting contract is not a contract to make a loan, but is one to insure the sale of bonds. It is a contract to insure the sale of the bonds subscribed, and, in case they are not sold before the instalments fall due, then to purchase and pay for them at par. It is an underwriting and not air agreement to loan money. Stewart v Miller & Co. 161 Ga 919, 132 SE 535, 45 ALR 559, 565.

See board of fire underwriters.

underwriters' association. A voluntary association organized by insurance companies or insurance agents for the purpose of promoting the business, welfare, and convenience of the parties thereto, and to secure uniformity in the business. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 109.

underwriters' rules. Rules established by insurance companies relative to the classification of risks in reference to the type and manner of construction of buildings, electric wiring, etc. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1893.

underwriting contract. See underwriter.

underwriting ratio. See expense ratio; loss ratio.

undique. In all directions; on all sides.

undisbursed income. Income retained in the estate by executor or trustee.

Under a provision in a will that "any undisbursed income" should be paid to the residuary estate after the death of the life tenant, the words will be taken to mean any income not actually paid out to the life tenant, and will not be restricted in their meaning to include only that income accruing during the period between the death of the life tenant and the distribution to the residuary estate. Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v Otis, 77 RI 296, 75 A2d 210.

undisclosed agency. A situation where one who is in fact an agent for another deals with a third person in the character of a principal, his status as an agent being unknown to the third person. 3 Am J2d Agency § 307.

undisclosed assets. Assets of a bankrupt not disclosed by him to his trustee in bankruptcy or otherwise coming to the notice of the trustee. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 860, undisclosed principal. A principal whose identify is unknown to a third person who deals with his agent, knowing that the latter is acting for some principal. The principal in an undisclosed agency. 3 Am J2d Agency § 307.

See undisclosed agency.

undisposed of. See undisbursed income.

undisputed. Not contested.

undistributed profits. See undivided profits.

undivided interest. A fractional interest in property. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 290. An interest which has not been segregated. The nature of the title held by a tenant in common or a joint tenant.

undivided profits. Profits of a corporation which have neither been distributed as dividends nor carried to surplus account. Edwards v Douglas, 269 US 204, 70 L Ed 235, 46 S Ct 85.

Surplus and undivided profits are the property of the corporation. As their names indicate, they are not capital stock, but are something besides capital stock. First Nat. Bank v Moon, 102 Karl 334, 170 P 33.

undocumented vessel. Any vessel which is not required to have, and does not have, a valid marine document issued by the Bureau of Customs. 46 USC § 527(1).

undres. Minors; persons under age.

undressed lumber. Boards which have not been processed and fashioned for use as building materials.

undrinkable. Not potable. Not suitable for drinking. Anno: 11 ALR 1237.

undue influence. A species of fraud or constructive fraud whereby means brought to bear upon a person his free agency is destroyed and the will of another person substituted therefor. 25 Am J2d Dur §§ 35, 36. A species of constructive fraud which the court will not undertake to define particularly less the very definition itself should furnish a guide by which its consequences may be evaded. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 148. As invalidating a will, influence which substitutes the wishes of another for those of the testator; such influence as overcomes the free volition of the testator and substitutes the purposes of another. 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 350, 351.

Strictly speaking, there is a difference between fraud and undue influence as grounds of a caveat. Undue influence may, in a general way, be characterized as fraudulent; but not all fraud amounts to undue influence in the meaning of the law. To constitute undue influence within the meaning of the law, there must be mental constraint, moral coercion, the substitution of external for internal agency. Franklin v Belt, 130 Ga 37, 60 SE 146.

undue means. An inappropriate, unsuitable, and unjust means.

A statute providing for the vacation of an award of arbitrators procured by "undue means" does not apply merely because an award is made by two arbitrators after the resignation of the third and before the expiration of the three-day period claimed to be established by the arbitration agreement for appointing a successor. Amalgamated Asso. v Connecticut Co. 142 Conn 186, 112 A2d 501, 49 ALR2d 891.

undue return. An officer's false, defective or inaccurate return of a writ or process placed in his hands for execution.

To make return according to law is not only to return the precept to the authority that issued it, but to return with it a statement by the officer of his doings in executing it. That statement must contain all of his doings within the scope of proper execution; otherwise the return will be undue, and may be essentially false. Gibson v Holmes, 78 Vt 110, 62 A 11.

unearned income. Income from property of an investment, as distinguished from income received from a trade, profession, or employment. New York ex rel. Cohn v Graves, 300 US 308, 81 L Ed 666, 57 S Ct 466, 108 ALR 721.

unearned premium. An insurance premium or part of such premium to which the insurance company is not entitled because of not having carried the risk. That portion of the premium paid by a borrower to a building and loan association which is proportionate to the unexpired part of the period for which the loan was made, upon a premature severance of their relation. 13 Am J2d B& L Assoc § 121.

unearned premium reserve. A reserve required by modern statutes of insurance companies to assure the return of unearned premiums. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 56. A reserve which comes into being as the natural result of collecting premiums in advance for insurance to extend over a stated period of time in the future. The estimated aggregate amount which an insurance company would be obliged to tender to its policyholders as returned premiums for the unexpired terms, should it wish to cancel every policy in force.

The premium reserve, so-called, of a life insurance company, represents the insurer's debt at any given time on the policies it has issued and which are in force, and, hence, the corresponding fund which, in addition to general assets, it should have in reserve to meet such indebtedness. Anno: 13 ALR 187.

unemployment compensation. See unemployment insurance.

unemployment insurance. A form of social security, under state statutes complementary to the Federal Social Security Act, which provides for the payment of benefits to unemployed persons, subject to terms and conditions. 48 Am J1st Soc Sec § 10. Compulsory, state-imposed insurance, carried at the expense of employers, or employers and employees jointly, by which the financial burden of unemployment is transferred from the taxpayers generally to the industry in which unemployment exists or to industry as a whole. Insurance against loss arising from unemployment, voluntarily procured by an employee at his own expense from an insurer carrying such risks. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 17.

A subsistence allowance paid by the United States to a veteran attending school, under the provisions of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act, is within the provision of a previously enacted state statute disqualifying, for unemployment benefits, anyone receiving "unemployment allowances or compensation granted by the United States ... to ex-servicemen." Hannan v Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act, 137 Conn 240, 75 A2d 483, 21 ALR2d 1068.

Before an individual may be deemed "unemployed" for any week, within the meaning of the unemployment compensation statute, two things must exist: (1) he must perform no service during the week and (2) he must be paid no wages for the week. Ackerson v Western Union Tel. Co. 234 Minn 271, 48 NW2d 338, 25 ALR2d 1063.

See railroad unemployment insurance act.

unemployment relief arrangement. An arrangement by an association for the sale of contracts to employed persons by way of compensation for them in the event they become unemployed. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 17.

unemployment trust fund. A trust fund established by the Social Security Act into which is required to be paid all moneys received in the statutory unemployment funds of the several states. 48 Am J1st Soc Sec § 11.

unequivocal. Certain. Not doubtful. Without ambiguity. Clear, sincere; plain. Molyneux v Twin Falls Canal Co. 54 Idaho 619, 35 P2d 651, 94 ALR 1264.

unerring. Incapable of error or failure; certain; infallible. Gardner v State, 27 Wyo 316, 196 P 750, 15 ALR 1040.

unethical. Wanting in observance of ethical principles.

See ethics.

unexpected. Not expected; coming without warning; sudden. Bachus v Ronnebaurn, 98 Ind App 603, 186 NE 386.

unexpected injury. An injury to an employee not intended or expected to be the result of what he was doing on the particular occasion. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 196.

unexpended. Not spent.

The word as it is used in a will may carry with it a clear and unambiguous purpose on decedent's part to give his beneficiaries unrestricted power to spend such part of the corpus of his estate as they see fit. Anno: 114 ALR 952.

unfair comment. The antithesis of fair comment. Comment actuated by malice as inferred from false statements exceeding the limits of fair and reasonable criticism, made recklessly in disregard of the rights of one who may be injured by them. 33 Am J1st L & S § 162.

unfair competition. The unjust appropriation of, or injury to, the goodwill or business reputation of another. 52 Am J1st Tradem §§ 86, 93 et seq. Acts done or practices employed for the purpose of pirating the trade of a competitor. The simulation by one person of the name, symbols, or devices employed by a business rival, so as to induce the purchase of his goods under a false impression as to their origin or ownership and thus secure for himself benefits properly belonging to his competitor. 52 Am J1st Tradem § 86. The repetition of words of a competitor in business in such a way as to convey a misrepresentation materially injuring the person who first used them, by appropriating credit of some kind which the first user has earned. International News Service v Associated Press, 248 US 215, 63 L Ed 211, 39 S Ct 68, 2 ALR 293.

Practices opposed to good morals, because characterized by deception, bad faith, fraud, and oppression, are unfair methods of competition. Consolidated Book Publishers v Federal Trade Com. (CA7) 53 F2d 942.

Unfair competition in the use of names or marks consists in the use of a name or mark by the defendant which tends to delude the public into believing the defendant's business is in some way connected with that of the plaintiff. The test is, whether the use of the name or mark would breed confusion in the minds of the public. Martha Washington Candies Co. v Goldstein (DC Pa) 28 F Supp 861.

unfair labor practice. An act, whether by employer or employee, in violation of the regulations and prohibitions of a labor relations act. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab §§ 224 et seq.

As the word is employed by labor organizations, it has the technical and well-understood meaning, as applied to an employer, not that he has been guilty of any fraud, breach of faith, or dishonorable conduct, but that he has refused to comply with the conditions upon which union men would consent to remain in the employ or handle materials supplied by the employer. J. F. Parkinson Co. v Building Trades Council, 154 Cal 581, 98 P 1027.

unfair list. A listing of names frequently used as the means of promoting a boycott. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 480.

See boycott.

unfair products. For the purposes of a boycott, the products of an employer deemed to be unfair to union labor. Anno: 6 ALR 957, s. 116 ALR 513.

unfair to organized labor. A familiar expression in times of labor unrest, appearing on the placards or banners of pickets. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 428.

unfair trade practice. See unfair competition.

unfaithfulness. See adultery.

unfavorable signal. A traffic signal halting traffic. 8 Am J2d Auto § 743, unfit for food. Adulterated; consisting in whole or in part of filthy, decomposed, or putrid substances. Anno: 45 ALR2d 861.

unfit premises. See untenable condition.

unforeseen clause. An undiscovered cause or a cause not discovered in time to prevent injurious effects from its operation. A cause which could not have been foreseen as likely to occur. Viterbo v Friedlander, 120 US 707, 30 1, Ed 776, 7 S Ct 962.

ungeld. (Saxon.) An outlaw. unguarded shaft. An open elevator shaft.

uniform. Noun: Clothing of a prescribed color and tailoring, as worn by members of the Armed Forces, pupils in certain schools, and employees in certain trades and occupations. Adjective: Without variation. Conforming to a standard.

As the word is used in the first paragraph of section 8, article 1, of the United States Constitution, providing that all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States, this word is to be understood in what has been termed its "geographical" sense, or as meaning uniformity as to all the taxpayers similarly situated with regard to the subject matter of the tax. Nicol v Ames, 173 US 509, 521, 43 L Ed 786, 794, 19 S Ct 522. That is to say, wherever a subject is taxed anywhere, it must be taxed everywhere throughout the United States, and at the same rate. Knowlton v Moore, 178 US 41, 84, 44 L Ed 969, 987, 20 S Ct 747.

See act of uniformity.

uniform acts. See uniform statutes.

Uniform Commercial Code. See Commercial Code.

Uniform Code of Military Justice. See Code of Military Justice.

uniformity. A condition characterized by absence of variation between two or more things or activities.

See Uniform.

Uniformity of Process Act. An English statute, 2 William IV Ch 39, making original process uniform for the courts of Westminster.

uniformity of taxation. A requirement of the United States Constitution in reference to federal duties, imposts, and excises. Art I § 8 cl 1. A general principle that taxes should be levied in accord with some reasonable system of apportionment. 51 Am J1st Tax § 151.

As this clause is used in Article 1, § 8 of the Constitution, providing that all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States, it means that such taxes may only be levied with geographical uniformity. See United States v Doiemus, 249 US 86, 63 1, Ed 493, 39 S Ct 214.

The uniformity required by the provision of the United States Constitution that excises imposed by the United States must be uniform throughout the United States is not an intrinsic uniformity relating to the inherent character of the tax as respects its operations on individuals, but is merely it geographical uniformity requiring the same plan and the same method to be operative throughout the United States. Fernandez v Wiener, 326 US 140 90 L Ed 116, 66 S Ct 178, reh den 327 LIS 814, 96 1, Ed 1038, 66 S Ct 525.

uniform laws. See uniform statutes.

uniform operation of laws. An embodiment of the guaranty of equal protection of the laws. 16 Am J2d Const L §§ 488, 489.

A law which applies alike to all the subjects upon which it acts, which applies equally to all persons or things within a legitimate class to which, alone, it is addressed, complies with a constitutional provision requiring laws of a general nature to have a Uniform operation. The word uniform, in this connection, does not mean universal. The provision intends simply that the effect of general laws shall be the same to and upon all persons who stand in the same relation to the law,-that is, all the facts of whose cases are substantially the same. See Re Sohncke. 148 Cal 262, 82 P 956.

uniform state laws. See uniform statutes.

uniform statutes. Statutes drafted by a commission on Uniform Laws, or by a committee appointed by State Boards of Commissioners for promoting Uniformity of Legislation, and recommended to the legislatures of the various states for adoption, the purpose being to provide statutes on the subjects involved which, upon being adopted as recommended, will render the statutory provisions and rules uniform in terms and operation throughout the country. 50 Am J1st Stat §§ 40et seq. Published in Uniform Laws Annotated.

For particular uniform statute, see the specific subject, such as Commercial Code; Negotiable Instruments Act; Warehouse Receipts Act, etc.

uniform tax. See uniformity of taxation.

unilateral. One-sided.

unilateral contract. A contract in which there is it promise on one side only, the consideration therefor being an act or something other than another promise. 17 Am J2d Contr § 5.

The term "unilateral" has also been used to describe what is sometimes denominated a contract but which is in reality merely an offer to contract, as, for example, it promise to pay one for services if he should perform them, the latter being under no obligation to perform such services. 17 Am J2d Contr § 5.

unilateral mistake. A mistake on the part of only one of the parties to a transaction. Peterson v Paulson, 24 Wash 2d 166, 163 P2d 830. A mistake in the expression of the intention of one of the parties to a contract. 17 Am J2d Contr § 146.

A unilateral error is not, in itself, a ground of avoidance of a contract. If accompanied by other facts, however, such as hardship amounting to injustice, coupled with knowledge on the part of the one party that the other was laboring under a mistake, a unilateral mistake is ground for avoidance of a contract Anno: 59 ALR 815.

unilateral rescission. A rescission of a contract by one party for cause. 17 Am J2d Contr § 501.

unimpeachable for waste. A phrase, such as "without impeachment of waste," in an instrument which creates a tenancy, which legalizes or authorizes acts or conduct that would otherwise constitute waste on the part of the tenant. 56 Am J1st Waste § 7.

The phrase "without impeachment of waste" is, in equity, so restrained in its meaning that it will not permit the tenant for life to commit malicious waste so as to destroy the estate, and a court of equity will sometimes, when there is no remedy at law, interpose when the tenant "without impeachment of waste" does something affecting the inheritance in an unreasonable way, or seeks maliciously or unconscionably to destroy it. Derham v Hovey, 195 Mich 243, 161 NW 883, 21 ALR 999.

unimproved land. Land in relation to which nothing has been done, either on or off the land, the direct and proximate tendency of which was to enhance its value in the market. Vandall v South San Francisco Dock Co. 40 Cal 83, 90. Land without buildings or other improvements. Land in a state of nature.

uninclosed land. Land which is not fenced. Graves v Ashburn, 215 US 331, 54 L Ed 217, 30 S Ct 108.

unincorporated association. See association.

unincorporated territory. A territory, organized or unorganized, belonging to the United States but not incorporated into the United States. 49 Am J1st States § 4.

uninhabitability. See untenantable condition.

uninhabited premises. Real property not presently occupied by persons who actually live or abide thereon. Shepherd v Board of Supervisors, 137 Cal App 421, 30 112d 578.

uninsured motorist clause. A clause in an automobile insurance policy intended to protect the insured who is injured in person or in property through the fault of a motorist who is not himself insured or is a hit-and-run driver. 7 Am J2d Auto Ins § 135.

unintelligible. Incapable of being understood; not expressing any meaning.

Union. The inseparable United States of America. Coyle v Oklahoma, 221 US 559, 55 1, Ed 853, 31 S Ct 688. A one-time disputed merger of Great Britain and Ireland.

See Act of Union; Articles of Union.

union. A labor union. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 13. A trade union. Tracy v Banker, 170 Mass 266, 49 NE 308. Consolidation or merger, especially of churches. 45 Am J1st Reli Soc § 78.

union button. A button to be worn on the lapel, indicating labor-union membership. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 230.

union depot. Same as union station.

union-depot company. A company which maintains and operates a station for two or more carriers, being a corporation separate and apart from the several carriers. 44 Am J1st RR § 268.

unionizing. Organizing a union of employees of a particular shop or business; inducing the employees of it particular shop or business to join a labor union. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 54. In fine distinction, not the inducing of employees to become members of a labor union, but inducing the employer to enter into a collective labor agreement with the union. Per Opinion of Brandeis, J., dissenting in Hitchman Coal & Coke Co. v Mitchell, 245 US 229, 62 L Ed 260, 38 S Ct 65.

union label. A part of the workings of trade unions; a label which shows that the goods which bear it are made by the labor of members of the union. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 73. A quasi trademark indicating the origin of a manufactured product in union labor. Anno: 42 ALR2d 718.

union mortgage clause. A clause in a policy of insurance covering property, which, in addition to a provision for payment of the proceeds of insurance to a mortgagee as his interest may appear, contains terms for the additional protection of the mortgagee, providing that the interest of the mortgagee in the proceeds shall not be invalidated by the act or neglect of the mortgagor or owner of the insured property, or, less frequently, that no act or default of any person other than the mortgagee or those claiming under him shall affect his right to recover in case of loss. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 731.

union of students. See students' union.

union rules. The rules and regulations provided and promulgated by a labor union for the conduct of its members. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 36.

union-security contract. A collective labor agreement establishing a union shop. Pacific Fire Rating Bureau v Book Binders and Bindery Women's Union, etc. 115 Cal App 2d 111, 251 P2d 694

See agency-shop agreement.

union shop. A place of work where membership in a labor union is a condition of remaining in employment, even though not a condition precedent to employment. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 95.

union shop card. A card or placard identifying a shop or place of employment as one in which only union labor is employed. Di Leo v Daneault, 329 Mass 590 109 NE2d 824.

unitas personarum. The merger of two legal persons into one.

state or smaller taxing unit in question, assuming that such portion of the entire assessment representing the share referable to the particular taxing district in question is set aside by a proper and reasonable method of apportionment 51 Am J1st Tax § 877.

See unit valuation rule.

united in interest. See unity of ownership.

United Kingdom. Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

United Nations. A governmental agency of international status created by nations of the world to deal with questions of an international character. 30 Am J Rev ed Internat L § 9.

The overlying purpose of the United Nations is the maintenance of peaceful relations between nations by providing a forum wherein differences may be discussed and adjusted without resort to arms, although collateral thereto are activities in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters.

United Nations Charter. The Charter of the United Nations, an exercise of the treaty-making power of the United States so far as participation by the United States is concerned. Rice v Sioux City Cemetery, 349 US 70, 99 L Ed 897, 75 S Ct 614. Drawn up at the United Nations Conference on International Organizations at San Francisco, California, April 25---June 26, 1945.

United States. The Union of several states, each equal in power, dignity, and authority, brought into being by the Constitution, emanating from and adopted by the people in whom the sovereignty resides. McCulloch v Maryland (US) 4 Wheat 316, 4 L Ed 579. A body politic and corporate, capable of attaining the objects for which it was created, by the means which are necessary for their attainment. Van Brocklin v Tennessee, 117 US 151, 29 L Ed 845, 6 S Ct 670. A person for the purpose of a pretrial deposition under Federal Rule 26(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. 23 Am J2d Dep § 242. Inclusive in reference to transactions with foreign nations of all territories subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Government, wherever located. Downes v Bidwell, 182 US 244, 45 L Ed 1088, 21 S Ct 770.

A Federal government was created in 1777 by the union of thirteen colonies of Great Britain in "certain articles of confederation and perpetual union," the first one of which declared that "the stile of this confederacy shall be the United States of America." Each member of the confederacy was denominated a "state." The confederacy, owing to well-known historical reasons, having proven a failure, a new Constitution was formed in 1787, by "The people of the United States" "for the United States of America," as its preamble declares. Downes v Bidwell, 182 US 244, 249, 45 1, Ed 1088, 1092, 21 S Ct 770.

All human actions are either just or unjust as they are in conformity to or in opposition to law. Borden v State, 11 Ark 519.

unjust discrimination. See discrimination.

unjust enrichment. The circumstances which give rise to the obligation of restitution, that is, the receiving and retention of property, money, or benefits which in justice and equity belong to another. Herrmann v Gleason (CA6 Mich) 126 F2d 936; Straube v Bowling Green Gas Co. 360 Mo 132, 227 SW2d 666, 18 ALR2d 1335.

See restitution.

unkerjay. A morphine addict.

unknown contents. See contents unknown.

unknown motorist clause. A clause of an automobile insurance policy protecting the insured in reference to injury in person or in property by a hit-and-run driver, the conditions of the accident being such that it is impossible to ascertain whether or not the offending driver has insurance. 7 Am J2d Auto Ins § 135.

unknown parties. Persons within the meaning of statutes authorizing actions to be prosecuted against unknown persons.

Proceedings against unknown persons are of two classes: (1) those brought against that class of claimants to property who are known to exist, but whose names are unknown; and (2) those brought against that class of claimants whose names are not known, and who may or may not exist. 39 Am J1st Parties § 7.

unkouth. Same as uncuth.

unlade. To relieve a vessel of the burden of cargo.

In some cases the word means to transship cargo from one vessel to another. See The Cherie (CA1 Me) 13 F2d 992, 995.

unlage. (Saxon.) An unjust law.

unlaw. A property qualification which was required of witnesses.

unlawful. Contrary to law. Not allowed or permitted by law. Not in the manner required by law. State v Campbell, 217 Iowa 848, 251 NW 717, 92 ALR 1176; State v Falkner, 182 NC 793, 108 SE 756, 17 AIR 987.

See illegal; illicit; invalid; ultra vires.

unlawful ab initio. Unlawful from the beginning.

In cases of total divorce, the marriage is declared null, as having been absolutely unlawful ab initio (from the beginning); and the parties are therefore separated pro salute animarum (for the welfare of their souls). See 1 Bl Comm 440.

See trespass ab initio.

unlawful accumulation. An accumulation of an estate in violation of the rule against perpetuities or in violation of statutes comparable to the Thellusson Act of England. 41 Am J1st Perp § 44.

See Thellusson Act.

unlawful act. See unlawful.

unlawful arrest. See false arrest; false imprisonment.

unlawful assembly. A gathering of persons, usually three or more, with a common intent, formed before or at any time during the meeting, to attain a purpose, lawful or unlawful, which will interfere with the rights of others, by committing disorderly acts in such a manner as to cause sane, firm, and courageous persons in the neighborhood to apprehend a breach of the peace. Anno: 58 ALR 75 1, s. 93 ALR 737; 46 Am J1st Riot § 2.

Each charge of unlawfully assembling largely and necessarily depends upon the object and character of the meeting, and whether or not the overt acts done by the participants therein pursuant to a common understanding are of such a nature as to incite well grounded fear in persons of reasonable firmness and courage, of a riot, rout, affray, or other breach of the peace. State v Butterworth, 104 NJL 579, 142 A 57, 58 ALR 744.

See mob; riot.

unlawful belligerent. An enemy not entitled to the protection of the laws of war, because of the want of a lawful war or of the violation by it of the laws of war. 56 Am J1st War §§ 3 et seq.

unlawful cohabitation. The living together as husband and wife by a man and woman who are not married to each other. Ex parte Nielsen, 131 US 176, 33 L Ed 118, 121, 9 S Ct 672.

unlawful combination. An agreement in restraint of trade.

See monopoly; restraint of trade.

unlawful conspiracy. A criminal offense, indictable at common law where two or more persons confederate and combine together, by concerted means, to do that which is unlawful or criminal, to the injury of the public, or portions or classes of the community, or even to the rights of an individual. Beck v Railway Teamsters' Protective Union, 118 Mich 497, 77 NW 13.

See conspiracy.

unlawful contract. A contract wherein a person undertakes to do all act which the law forbids, or to omit an act which the law enjoins, and for that reason unenforceable.

It is distinguishable from a void contract which is a contract which has no legal force, and which for that reason, cannot be enforced. King v King: 63 Ohio St 363, 59 NE 111.

See illegal contract.

unlawful detainer. The unlawful withholding or detention of real property after the acquisition of a peaceable and actual, but unlawful, possession. 35 Am J2d Forc E & D § 32.

unlawful entry. A trespass. A going upon the property of another without right or authority. As an element of burglary, the intrusion of any part of the body for the purpose of committing a felony upon the premises. Anno: 23 ALR 289; 13 Am J2d Burgl § 10.

unlawful injury. An actionable wrong.

Giving to the term the broadest meaning possible under the authorities, it can include no injury that is not of such a character that it would constitute an actionable wrong, -an injury for which an action for the resultant damages could be maintained against the perpetrator; or which, if merely threatened, could be enjoined in equity if the remedy at law were deemed inadequate. People v Schmitz, 7 Cal App 330, 369, 94 P 419.

unlawful killing. See homicide; manslaughter; murder.

unlawfully. Illegally; illicitly. In a manner contrary to law. A technical word in an indictment of information. 27 Am J1st Indict § 67.

The term implies that an act is done, or not done, as the law allows or requires. State v Falknet, 182 NC 793, 108 SE 756, 17 ALR 986, 990.

See unlawful.

unlawful order. An order rendered without jurisdiction. An erroneous order.

Every erroneous order is unlawful, and for that reason may be reversed on appeal. Ex parte Cohen, 5 Cal 494.

unlawful picketing. Picketing which is not in furtherance of a legitimate interest of labor or is not carried out peacefully. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab §§ 433 et seq.

unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor. Maintaining custody or exercising the right of ownership, management, or control over intoxicating liquor when possession of such article is in violation of law. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 59.

unlawful trust. See trust.

unlearned parliament. Same as parliament of dunces.

unless lease. An oil or gas lease containing a provision that a default by the lessee in the prosecution of exploratory work shall terminate his rights unless on or before a day set there shall be paid the agreed computation for the period specified, with like payments for like successive periods. 24 Am J1st Gas & O § 60.

unliquidated claim. A claim in respect to which the exact amount which the claimant is entitled to recover has not been ascertained. Dycus v Brown, 135 Ky 140, 121 SW 1010.

unliquidated damages. Damages not stipulated by the parties or otherwise determined as to amount thereof. 22 Am J2d Damg § 212. Not an existing indebtedness within the meaning of attachment statutes. Craig v Gaddis, 171 Miss 379, 157 So 684, 95 ALR 1494.

A claim for unliquidated damages is not included within the expression "goods, effects, or credits." Wilde v Mahaney, 183 Mass 455, 67 NE 337.

unliquidated demand. See unliquidated claim; unliquidated damages.

unlisted stock. Shares of stock not listed on a stock exchange.

unlivery. Discharge of cargo from a vessel. The Two Catherines (CC RI) 2 Mason 319, F Cas No 14288.

unloading. See loading and unloading.

unloading clause. See loading and unloading clause.

unmailable. Same as nonmailable.

unmarried. Not presently under the bonds of matrimony, irrespective of prior status. Myers v Deliver & R. G. R. Co. 61 Colo 302, 157 P 196. Estate of Kaufman, 131 NY 620, 30 NE 242. In some contexts, the equivalent of never having been married. Anno: 7 ALR2d 1386.

unmeasured right of common. A commoner's right of common before it was admeasured or apportioned under a writ of admeasurement of pasture.

The uncertainty of this right caused it to be called erroneously a "common without stuff or sans nombre." See 3 Bl Comm 239 unnatural offense. Same as crime against nature.

unnatural will. A will in which the testator provide for spouse or children, the natural, objects of his bounty, or makes a provision for them which is inadequate from the standpoint of the size of tire estate and their financial circumstances. 57 Am J1st Wills §§ 149, 150.

unnecessary cruelty. Torture or abuse of an animal; the infliction of pain without need. 4 Am J2d Am § 28.

unnecessary exposure. The failure to use ordinary care for one's own safety, that is, contributory negligence. Shevlin v American Mot. Acci. Asso. 94 Wis 180, 68 NW 866.

Unnecessary exposure to danger is the equivalent of voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins §§ 1174, 1175.

See indecent exposure.

unnecessary exposure to danger. See unnecessary exposure.

unnecessary hardship. An imprecise term appearing in some zoning ordinances.

It is recognized that the term does not lend itself to precise definition automatically resolving every case. The criterion of unnecessary hardship is whether the use restriction, viewing the property in the setting of its environment, is so unreasonable as to constitute all arbitrary and capricious interference with the basic right of private property. The fact that the enforcement of zoning regulation in question would deprive the applicant of any practical economic use of his property, without any commensurate advantage to other properties in the neighborhood, was held to constitute an unnecessary hardship within the operation of the zoning ordinance. Anno: 168 ALR 26 et seq.

Un ne doit prise avantage de son tort demesne. A person ought not to take advantage of his own wrong.

Uno absurdo dato, infinita sequuntur. If one absurdity is allowed, an infinite number will follow.

uno actu. By one act.

unoccupancy. See unoccupied building.

unoccupied building. A building without animate occupants. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 907.

See vacant and unoccupied. unoccupied vehicle. A vehicle which is unattended so that there is no one to move or to see to the moving of it in case traffic conditions require removal. McLaurine v Birmingham, 247 Ala 414, 24 So 2d 755, 163 ALR 962.

unoffered lands. Those public lands of the United States which have not been offered for sale or settlement. Northern Pacific Railway Co. v De Lacey, 174 US 622, 628, 43 L Ed 1111, 1113, 19 S C, 791.

unofficial notes. Notes of the testimony of a witness taken by one other than the official reporter. 29 Am J2d Ev § 765.

unofficial opinion. An opinion of a court commissioner or referee which has not been confirmed by the court and accordingly is of no value as a precedent. Flint v Chaloupka, 72 Neb 34, 99 NW 825.

See unofficial report.

unofficial primary. A caucus called for the purpose of nominating candidates of a political party. 25 m J2d Elect § 145.

unofficial publication. A publication of laws or court reports by a private publisher.

unofficial report. A court report published by a private publisher. Ex parte Griffiths, 118 Ind 83, 20 NE 513.

uno flatu. In one breath.

"Yet it (the code) is to be considered as one homogeneous whole, established uno flatu." Central of Georgia Railway Co. v State, 104 Ga 831, 31 SE 531.

unopened way. A way used by the public which has never been officially and formally opened to public use. Klepper v Seymour House Corp. 246 NY 851, 158 NE 29, 62 ALR 955.

unorganized territory. A territory of the United States without a government in an elaborate form 49Am J1st States §4.

unperfected. See expressions beginning "imperfect."

unpermitted. See unlawful.

unpleaded. Not alleged in a pleading; not pleaded.

unprecedented. Without precedent. Unknown to history or record of past events.

unprofessional conduct. See professional misconduct.

unpossessed. Not held fit possession; unoccupied.

unqualifiedly subject to the demands of the shareholder. The actual receipt of a dividend by a shareholder or an entry of the amount of the dividend to the credit of the shareholder in his account with the corporation. Anno: 158 ALR 1432.

unques. Yet; still; always.

unques prist. Always ready.

unreasonable. Not rational or reasonable.

unreasonable rates. Rates of a public service corporation which are so low as to be noncompensatory, or those which are so much higher than simply compensatory rates that they are exorbitant. Homestead Co. v Des Moines Elec. Co. CA8 Iowa) 248 F 439, 12 ALR 390.

unreasonable restraint of trade. See restraint of trade.

unreasonable search. An examination or inspection without authority of law of one's premises or person, with a view to the discovery of stolen, contraband, or illicit property, or for some evidence of guilt, to be used in the prosecution of a criminal action. 47 Am J1st Search § 52.

unreasonable search and seizure. A seizure of property discovered on an unreasonable search. 47 Am J1st Search § 52.

A literal "search" and "seizure" is not required to constitute all unreasonable search and seizure. The surreptitious removal from his office of incriminating documents belonging to the accused by an officer making a supposedly friendly visit constitutes an unreasonable search and seizure. 47 Am J1st Search § 52.

unreasonable seizure. A seizure of one's property or effects without authority of law. 47 Am J1st Search § 52.

See unreasonable search and seizure.

unreasonable time. See reasonable time.

unrecorded. The state or condition of a document which has neither been filed for record nor placed of record on the public records.

unrelated business income. Income of a tax exempt organization from a trade or business not substantially related to the purpose of the organization which exempts it from income tax. Internal Revenue Code § 512(b)(12).

unresponsive answer. An answer by a witness which avoids or fails to meet the question or interrogatory propounded.

unrestricted. Without restrictions; without conditions; absolute. Columbia Water Power Co. v Columbia Street Railway, etc. Co. 172 US 475, 491, 43 L Ed 521, 527, 19 S Ct 247.

unrestricted district. A district established by a zoning law but not restricted thereby in reference to the use to be made of premises therein. 58 Am J1st Zon § 33.

unruly animal. An animal difficult, if not impossible, to control. 4 Am J2d Am § 49.

unsafe bank. A bank which is insolvent or approaching insolvency.

unsafe driver. An incompetent or inexperienced driver of a motor vehicle.

unsafe speed. The speed of a motor vehicle at such a rate as to render it impossible to control the course of the vehicle or to stop it in time to avoid a collision with other vehicles or objects along the way. Robinson v LeSage, 145 Me 300, 75 A2d 447.

unsatisfactory title. A title to real estate so defective as not to be a marketable title.

See marketable title.

unseated land. Land which is neither occupied nor cultivated.

Land which has not been farmed or cultivated, or which has not been cleared, or which, after having been cultivated has not been used for a long period of time. Keating v Williams (Pa) 5 Watts 382, 384.

unseaworthy. Not seaworthy.

See seaworthy.

unscheduled assets. Assets of a bankrupt not listed in the schedule of his property. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 860.

unset diamond. A diamond of a nature to be worn as a jewel which has not been mounted upon a ring or other article of jewelry. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 298.

unsettled pauper. A poor person who has not gained a residence.

See settlement of pauper.

unsolemn admissions. Admissions which have been acted upon, or have been made to influence the conduct of others, or to derive some advantage to the party, and which cannot afterwards be denied without a breach of good faith. Metcalf v Hart, 3 Wyo 513, 31 1) 407.

unsolemn war. A war in which there has been no solemn or formal declaration of war by either belligerent.

unsound animal. An animal having an organic defect or infirmity which renders it unfit for immediate, present, usual, and reasonable use. 46 Am J1st Sales § 396.

unsound memory. An imperfect memory. A memory which has failed in situations where there should have been a recollection.

"That men may and do have what is denominated unsound memories, although otherwise of sound mind, is a matter of common knowledge. It is most generally observable in persons of old age, who have lost the power to remember past events; but no one would class them as insane persons. That such a person might do an act and be perfectly conscious of it, and of its moral and legal effect, and yet forget it, is not open to dispute." State v Coyne, 214 Mo 344, 114 SW 8.

unsound mind. The mind of an insane or mentally deficient person.

As used in a statute providing for the appointment of a guardian of the property and minor children of a person of unsound mind, the term relates to the capacity of the person to transact business. The unsoundness of mind which will justify such an appointment must be more than mere debility or impairment of memory; it must be such as to deprive the person affected of ability to manage his estate. Emerick v Emerick, 83 Iowa 411, 49 NW 1017.

See sound mind.

untenant. To evict or remove a tenant from the premises of the landlord.

untenantable condition. A condition of premises rendering them unfit for the purpose for which they were leased, particularly where the lease expressly designates the use to be made of the premises. Tyson v Weil, 169 Ala 558, 53 So 912. A condition of premises rendering them unfit for occupation for any worthwhile purpose. 32 Am J1st L & T § 506.

untenanted. Not occupied by a tenant; not occupied by any person.

unthrift. A prodigal; a spendthrift.

until. To a certain date or event, either inclusive or exclusive of the date or event, according to the manifest intention revealed by the entire context. 52 Am J1st Time § 25 A technical term apt for the creation of a determinable fee. Consolidated School Dist. v Walter, 243 Minn 153, 66 NW2d 881, 53 ALR2d 218.

No general rule can be laid down to determine whether the word "until," as a limit of time, is a word of inclusion or exclusion. Anno: 16 ALR 1094; 52 Am J1st Time § 25.

The word may have an inclusive or exclusive meaning, according to the use to which it is applied, the nature of the transaction which it specifies, and the connection in which it is used; and it may be held to include the day to which it is prefixed. State ex rel. Birdgell v Jorgenson, 25 ND 539, 142 NW 450.

A contractual provision for payment of a specified rate of interest "until maturity" of the obligation is an express limitation of that interest rate to the period prior to maturity so as to render applicable after maturity a statutory provision for interest at a stipulated rate "if there is no agreement ... for a different rate." Thompson v Getz (CA] Mass) 178 F2d 325, 16 ALR2d 898.

untimely. Occurring out of time, as in the case of the death of a person who has not reached maturity.

[1324]

Not in compliance with limitation of time, as in the case of a suit commenced after the running of the period fixed by all applicable statute of limitations.

As to when an application to a lower court for a rehearing may be said to be "untimely," see Anno: 10 ALR2d 1076.

untrue. Lacking truth. Lacking fidelity.

unum austerium. A rent reserved in ancient deeds payable to the lord in goshawks.

Unumquodque dissolvi potest eodem ligamine quo ligatum est. Everything can be undone by the same means by which it was done

Unumquodque dissolvitur eodem ligamine quo ligatur. Every obligation is dissolved in the same manner in which it is made binding. See Broom's Legal Maxims 884.

Unumquodque dissolvitur eo ligamine quo ligatur. Every obligation is dissolved in the same manner in which it is made binding.

"Like other old maxims, this has received qualifications, and, indeed, was never true to the letter." Munroe v Perkins, 26 Mass (9 Pick) 298.

Unumquodque eodem modo quo colligatum est dissolvitur. Every obligation is dissolved in the same manner in which it is made binding. See Broom's Legal Maxims 891.

Unumquodque est id quod est principalius in ipso. Anything which is the principal part is the thing itself.

Unumquodque ligamen dissolvitur eodem ligamine quod ligatur. Every obligation is dissolved in the same manner in which it is made binding. Esmond v Van Benschoten (NY) 12 Barb 366, 375.

Unumquodque principiorum est sibimet ipsi fides; et perspicua vera non sunt probanda. Every principle is its own proof, and plain truths need not be proved.

unused portion. That portion of an estate not consumed by the tenant entitled to make use thereof. Hardy v Mayhew, 158 Cal 95, 110 P 113.

unusual case. A case which is noteworthy because of either fact or principle involved. A case without precedent.

As the expression is used in a workmen's compensation act requiring the insurer to pay medical bills after the first two weeks in "unusual cases," the statute has been held to refer to injuries which develop unexpected or unusual complications, requiring the services of experts or unusual treatment. Moore's Case, 255 Mass 533, 535, 152 NE 66,67.

unusual noise. See excessive or unusual noise.

unusual punishment. See cruel and unusual punishment.

unvalued policy. Same as open policy.

unwarrantable. Not warrantable; unjustifiable; indefensible.

unwarranted. Not warranted.

written constitution. A system of fundamental laws or principles for the government of a nation which is binding notwithstanding it is not incorporated in a formal writing or document.

Although a constitution may be either written or unwritten, in the United States, the word "Constitution," as applied to the organization of the federal and state governments, always implies a writing. 16 Am J2d Const L § 1.

unwritten contract. An oral contract.

A contract is unwritten if the contract itself cannot be proved wholly by writings. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v Moore (CA5 Miss) 112 F2d 959.

unwritten law. The law as established by cases rather than as enacted by a legislative body. Equity as introduced into the United States. State ex rel. Rhodes v Saunders, 66 NH 39, 25 A 588. The theory that a man should not be punished for a homicide where his victim was the seducer of his wife or daughter.

unwritten law of nations. That part of international law which does not rest upon treaties but which springs from (1) abstract reasoning, (2) custom and usage, (3) the conclusions of publicists based on ancient and admitted practice, and (4) judicial precedents. 30 Am J1st Internat L § 2.

U. P. Abbreviation of United Press. up a stream. Toward the source.

up-draft. An upward movement of air, of concern in the operation of aircraft. 8 Am J2d Avi § 96.

Descriptions running the boundary line up or upon, a river, stream, or creek have generally been construed to refer to the water in its entirety as the monument, and have been regarded as extending to embrace the land to the thread of the stream. Anno: 74 ALR 597 upkeep. The maintenance of premises or of machinery. The cost of maintenance.

uplands. Elevated lands. Lands above the flood plain of a river. Lands upon a plateau or in a mountainous region.

upon. Literally, "up and on," but, in common usage, and equivalent of "on." An apt word in limiting the time for future enjoyment of all estate. Anno: 49 ALR 193, s. 127 ALR 614.

upon a motor vehicle. Being in physical contact with the vehicle. Anno: 39 ALR2d 956. In physical contact with a motor vehicle, although not seated in the place provided for the seating of passengers. 29A Am J Rev ed his § 1241. In physical contact with the vehicle, preparing to enter the vehicle, or in close proximity thereto after alighting therefrom. 29A Am J Rev ed lus § 1241.

upon condition. See condition.

upon information and belief. Qualifying a statement as made, not as a fact, but as believed to be true from information. 5 Am J2d Arr § 14.

see allegation on information and belief.

upon personal knowledge. Upon knowledge derived from the exercise of one's own senses. Anno: 96 ALR 694.

upon sight. Same as at sight.

upon the failure of heirs. Upon all absence of heirs capable of taking by descent or devise. 27 Am J2d Esch § 11.

upon the faith of a document. In the belief held in good faith that the possessor was the true owner of the document. Warner v Martin (US) 11 How 209, 13 L Ed 667.

upper bench. See court of upper bench.

upper house. Inept terminology for the Senate of the United States Congress, the senate of a state legislature, and the House of Lords in Great Britain.

upper owner. A riparian owner whose land is upstream in reference to the land of another such owner. An owner of land front which surface water drains onto adjoining premises.

upper story. Any story of a building above the ground floor. Rose v King, 49 Ohio St 213, 30 NE 267.

upset. An overturning, but not necessarily a complete overturning: a loss of equilibrium. 7 Am J2d Auto Ins § 62.

As to whether damage to vehicle resulting front wind or other phenomenon of nature is as within coverage of automobile policy insuring against collision or upset. Anno: 14 ALR2d 807.

upset bid. A bid for property sold at judicial sale, in an amount greater than the bid of the purchaser, offered upon application to set aside the sale. 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S §§ 105-113.

upset insurance. Automobile insurance protecting the insured against damage to the vehicle caused by an upset.

upset price. See minimum price.

up to. A phrase excluding the time or place to which it pertains. 52 Am J1st Time § 25, 12 Am Bound § 52.

uranium. A radioactive element; special nuclear material. 6 Am J2d Atomic E § 8.

See fissionable uranium.

urban. Pertaining to the city, not to the country.

urban easements. The easements belonging to property abutting on streets, including the rights that one's windows should not be darkened; that the free enjoyment of pure air should not be substantially interfered with, and that the free and usual access to the premises should not be impaired. Storms v Manhattan Railway Co. 178 NY 493, 71 NE 3.

urban homestead. A homestead situated within the limits of a village or city. 26 Am J1st Home § 33.

urban redevelopment. A plan for the redevelopment, for all types of uses, of areas in a municipality suffering from blight or decay, through a program of co-operation between government and private enterprise. Anno: 44 ALR2d 1417.

See slum clearance.

urban servitude. Same as urban easement.

urban surface streetcar passenger service. The transportation of passengers over the streets in suitable cars so operated as to permit passengers to enter and leave at reasonable intervals, irrespective of the fact that a car may be engaged in interurban over a portion of its route. Milwaukee v Milwaukee Elec. R. & Light Co. 173 Wis 400, 180 NW 339, 181 NW 821, 13 ALR 801.

urban transportation. The transportation of passengers over the streets of a city or of a city and its environs in busses or street cars so operated as to permit passengers to enter and leave at reasonable intervals.

urban way. A street in a municipality.

urbs. A city; a fortified city.

urgency. A special condition calling for immediate action or relief. Anno: 111 ALR 703.

urinal. A toilet. 39 Am J1st Nuis § 83. A container for urine, of particular use in the care of a bedridden person.

urn. A receptacle for the ashes from a cremation.

U. S. Abbreviation of United States. The brand placed by the federal government upon certain kinds or chattels belonging to it, particularly horses and mules. 46 Am J1st Sales § 311.

U.S.A. Abbreviation of United States of America.

usable value. The value of the use of a chattel for a definite period of time. 22 Am J2d Damg § 153.

usage. A uniform course of conduct in some particular business or calling, even though it is that of only one person. 21 Am J2d Cost & U § 1.

Usage is habitual or customary practice. Orlich v Rubio Sav. Bank, 240 Iowa 1074, 38 NW2d 622, 10 ALR2d 340.

See custom; general usage; trade usage.

usage of trade. See trade usage.

usance. The customary time allowed for the payment of bills of exchange.

U. S. brand. The branded mark of the letters "U.S." upon government property.

U. S. Pharm. Abbreviation of United States Pharmacopoeia.

U.S.S.Ct. Abbreviation of United States Supreme Court.

use. Noun: A beneficial ownership recognized in equity. A trust. The right granted by a patent for an invention. 40 Am J1st Pat § 140. The employment or enjoyment of property. Utility; advantage. The long-continued possession and employment of a thing for the purpose for which it is adapted, as distinguished from a possession or employment that is merely temporary or occasional. Anno: 139 ALR 376, 377 (construing statute imposing tax upon sale for use). 47 Am J1st Sales T § 25. The act of employing; the act of using; applying to one's service; the state of being used, employed, applied, etc. Turner v Smith, 269 Ky 840, 108 SW2d 1019, 113 ALR 468.

A devise by the husband of all his property to his wife, to administer for her own use and the welfare of the children, creates a trust for the children, of their statutory share, and the words are mandatory, not merely directory. Re Yost (Alberta) [1927] 1 West Week 925 [1927] 2 DLR 1001.

A use is where the legal estate of lands was in a certain person, and a trust was also reposed in him that some other person, called the cestui que use, should take and enjoy the rents and profits. Before the Statute of Uses, a use was a mere confidence in a friend, that the feoffee to whom the lands were given should permit the feoffor and his heirs, and such other person as he might designate, to receive the profits of the land. The whole system of uses, however, was changed by the statute 27 Henry VIII Ch 10, known as the Statute of Uses, by which the use was transferred into possession by converting the estate or interest of the cestui que use into a legal estate, and by destroying the intermediate estate of the feoffee. The injustice and inconvenience which followed, caused the lawyers to invent and establish a system of trusts which were recognized as valid by the court of chancery. The Statute of Uses was thereby circumvented. Ware v Richardson, 3 Md 505.

In several cases involving life estate's, the word "use" (a word of partial dominion over the property) has been held not to be interpreted as granting the power of consumption to the life tenant. Anno: 108 ALR 571.

In a conveyance to it trustee "for the use and benefit" of a church, it was field that there was no implication of a condition, restriction, or negative covenant against alienation, but that the words were merely declaratory of the purposes of the grant. National Surety Co. v Jarrett, 95 W Va 420, 121 SE 291, 36 ALR 1171, 1176.

As to meaning of the term "use," it appears in omnibus clause of automobile liability policy, see Anno: 5 ALR2d 607.

See shifting use; springing use; Statute of Uses; zoning.

use. Verb: To employ. To apply to one's service. To occupy. Murphy v Traynor, 110 Colo 466, 135 P2d 230.

The words "used in manufacture," as they appear in a statute providing for local taxation of machinery, import a degree of permanence, are of broad significance, and do not lend themselves to a narrow or technical construction. Hamilton Mfg. Co. v Lowell, 274 Mass 477, 175 NE 73, 74 ALR 1213.

As to meaning of the term "used or occupied," as it appears in the provision of a lease relative to a forfeiture where the premises are used for an unlawful purpose, see Anno: 145 ALR 1063.

use and benefit. See use.

use and occupancy insurance. See business interruption insurance; rent insurance.

used or kept for one's trade or business. Kept as reasonably necessary, convenient, or suitable for one's trade or business. Julius v Druckrey, 214 Wis 643, 254 NW 358, 94 ALR 293 (phrase appearing in exemption statute).

used or occupied. See use.

used or situated on the leased premises. Property of the tenant relating to the maintenance and operation of the leased premises its a farm or which may acquire a situs or location at the leased premises by reason of, or in connection with, the use of the premises by the lessee. Dorman v Crooks State Bank, 55 SD 209, 225 NW 661 64 ALR 614. (phrase appearing in provision of farm lease giving the lessor a lien upon lessee's property).

useful. Serviceable. Beneficial.

The word "usefulness" implies capabilities for use, and appertains to the future as well as the present. Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad Co. v Dyer County, 87 Tenn 812, 11 SW 943.

An invention is useful, as the word is used in the patent laws, if it is capable of being beneficially used for the purpose for which it was designated. Or, as sometimes stated, if it will operate to perform the functions and secure the results intended, and its use is not contrary to law, moral principles, or public policy. A device which may be used for innocent amusement may possess utility. See Callison v Dean (CAIO Okla) 70 F2d 55.

useful art. See new and useful art.

usefulness. See useful.

use of automobile. See operating motor vehicle; use of highway.

use of highway. Driving a vehicle on the highway. Walking along the highway; standing still on the highway. 7 Am J2d Auto § 245.

Stalled or disabled vehicles, or vehicles stopped for repairs, are using the highway within the meaning of statutory provisions relating to lights. 7 Am J2d Auto § 155.

As used in a statute providing that the operation by a nonresident of a motor vehicle on a public highway shall be deemed equivalent to an appointment by the nonresident of the secretary of state as his attorney upon whom summons may be served, the word applies not only where the nonresident's automobile is in motion, but also where it is standing or parked at the time when an accident occurs. Hand v Frazer, 139 Misc 446, 248 NYS 557.

use of intoxicating liquor. Personal use as a beverage. An habitual or customary use, rather than an occasional or exceptional use. Anno: 26 ALR 1284 (expression appearing in application for life insurance).

Within the meaning of the liquor law, the term includes the keeping or possessing. Commonwealth v One Dodge Motor Truck, 326 Pa 120, 191 A 590, 110 ALR 919.

use of property. See use.

use of sewer. A use in fact, an actual use, as distinguished from the privilege of making use of a sewer or of having one available for use. Southern R. Co. v Richmond, 175 Va 308, 8 SE2d 271, 127 ALR 1368.

use of ticket. Obtaining the admission, transportation, etc. to which one is entitled as the holder of a ticket.

Where a passenger's ticket stipulates that it is to be "used" within a specified time, the general rule that the condition is complied with if he commences the trip within the time limited, although it time may expire before the actual completion of the trip. 14 Am J2d Car § 826.

use of the mails. The employment of the mails for the delivery of a letter, writing, paper, publication, or articles within the classification of parcels post.

The use of the mails may consist of knowingly causing to be delivered by mail a letter or writing according to the direction thereon and the fact that a clerk who actually mailed the letter was innocent is no defense for one accused of using the mails to defraud who caused the clerk to mail the letter. Creech v Hudspeth (CA10 Kati) 112 F2d 603.

use plaintiff. The owner of the beneficial interest whose benefit suit is brought by the holder of the legal title as nominal plaintiff. Edgewood Lumber Co. v Hull, 32 Ienn App 577, 223 SW2d 210, 17 ALR2d 228.

user. Use, actual possession and enjoyment. The right to use. An essential quality of the right of property, Eaton v Boston, C. & M. R. R. Co. 51 NIJ 504. Exercising the right to use property.

user de action. The institution or bringing of an action.

use restriction. See restrictive covenant.

uses. See use; Statute of Uses.

use tax. A tax levied upon the use, storage, or consumption of tangible personal property purchased outside the taxing state or taxing district, being a supplement or complement of a sales tax, imposed to prevent residents of a jurisdiction having a sales tax from making purchases outside the jurisdiction in order to avoid such tax. 47 Am J1st Sales T § 42.

The Iowa use tax statute does not impose a tax on the use in Iowa of all personal property, but only such property as was purchased for use in Iowa. Morrison- Knudsen Co. v State Tax Com. 242 Iowa 33, 44 NW2d 449, 41 ALR2d 523.

use upon use. A limitation of one beneficial interest upon another, so that only the first is executed by the Statute of Uses as to carry the legal title, the second use remaining a mere equitable interest. 28 Am J2d Est § 344.

usher. One who escorts the patrons of a theater or other place of amusement, or persons in attendance at a church, to their seats or pews.

using mails to defraud. The use of the mails in perpetrating a fraud. A crime in violation of the Federal statutes, the essence of which consists in the making of false promises which the parties never intended to perform, or false representations which they never intended to make good, by means of which they obtain money or other property. Barnard v United States (CA9 Cal) 16 F2d 451.

usual abode. See usual place of abode.

usual and ordinary flow of the stream. The waters of a river annually flowing therein before, during, and after the regularly occurring accretions in the volume thereof both from rainfall and melting snows. Herminghaus v Southern California Edison Co. 200 Cal 81, 252 P 607.

usual business hours. That period or portion of the day during which the business of the community is ordinarily transacted Derosia v Winona & St. Peter Railroad Co. 18 Minn 133.

usual course of business. Business according to the usages and customs of commercial transactions. 11 Am J2d B & N § 411.

As applied to the indorsement of commercial paper, the term may be said generally to include the concurrent indorsement and delivery for value under such circumstances that a business man of ordinary intelligence and capacity would give his money, goods, or credit for it when offered for the purpose for which this was transferred; and it would not be in due course if such a person would at once suspect the integrity of the paper itself, or the credit and standing of the party offering it. Matlock v Scheuerman, 51 Or 49, 93 P 823.

usual course of trade. The usual course of business. 11 Am J2d B & N § 411.

usual covenants. The covenant to warrant and defend, the covenant of seisin, or of good right to convey, the covenant against encumbrances, and the covenant for quiet enjoyment. 20 Am J2d Cov § 43.

The covenant for further assurance is an additional covenant. Adams v Seymour, 191 Va 372, 61 SE2d 23.

usual place of abode. The place at which a person usually lives. 25 Am J2d Dom § 8. The place where a person is usually to be found, at least during some part of the day. Berryhill v Sepp, 106 Minn 458, 119 NW 404. A person's customary or settled place of residence as distinguished from a place where he may be sojourning temporarily. Anno: 127 ALR 1272.

As to the meaning of the expression "usual place of abode," within the rule which authorizes service of summons upon an individual by leaving copies at his usual place of abode, see Anno: 46 ALR2d 1239.

usual place of business. A place actually occupied, either continually or at regular periods, by a person or his employees, in the pursuit of a business, trade, or occupation which occupies his time, attention, and labor. Stephenson v Primrose (Ala) 8 Porter 155. Inclusive in some instances of the usual place of labor or employment in the service of another. 56 Am J1st Ven § 28.

Although the phrase "usual place of business", apart from special circumstances throwing light upon its meaning, may be given a comprehensive meaning and includes the usual place of labor or employment in the service of another, a statute limiting suits to be brought in the county in which the plaintiff has his usual place of business has been held, in the light of its history, not to include the place where one pursues a trade or calling or his place of employment. Hanley v Eastern S.S. Corp 221 Mass 125 109 NE 167.

usual place of residence. One's domicil. Ruby v Pierce, 74 Neb 754, 104 NW 1142.

See, domicil.

usuarius. Same as usuary.

usuary. (Civil law.) A bailee who had the bare use of the chattel.

[1328]

usucapio. A term of the Roman law for the acquisition of title to property by continued possession. Townsend v Jemison (US) 9 How 407, 13 L Ed 194.

Usucapio constituta est ut aliquis litium finis esset. (Civil law.) Prescription was instituted in order that there might be some end to litigation. See Broom's Legal Maxims 894, footnote.

usufruct. The right to the use, enjoyment, profits, and avails of property belonging to another. Winsberg v Winsberg, 233 La 67, 96 So 2d 44.

usufructuary right. Same as usufruct.

usura. (Civil law.) Interest paid on borrowed money; usury.

usurae asses. Same as usurae centesimae.

usurae centesimae. The term of the Roman law for the highest rate of legal interest.

In calculating, the Romans divided the principal sum into one hundred parts, one of which they allowed to be taken monthly. This was the highest rate permitted and it amounted to twelve per cent a year. They called this usurae centesimae. The as, or Roman pound, was used to express any integral sum, and was divisible into twelve parts or unciae. Hence, these twelve monthly payments or unciae were held to amount to one pound a year, or as usuranus~ and so the usurae asses were synonymous with the usurae centesimae, and all lower rates of interest were designated according to their relation to this centesimal usury, or usurae asses. See 2 Bl Comm 462, footnote.

usura manifesta. (Civil law.) Unconcealed usury; open usury.

usura maritima. An agreement for the repayment of a marine loan with extraordinary interest. See 2 Bl Comm 459.

usurare. To pay interest.

usura velata. (Civil law.) Veiled or concealed usury, as by adding interest to the principal.

usu rem capere. To gain a thing by use of it, to acquire a prescriptive right to it. See 2 Bl Comm 264.

usurious. Amounting to or constituting usury.

See usury.

usurious contract. See usury.

usurious rate. See usury.

usurpation. The seizure of position or authority without right. Intruding upon and exercising the powers of a public office, having neither title nor color of title to the office. Handin v Kassafer, 15 Or 456, 15 P 778. An unlawful assumption of the use of real property which belongs to another. An absolute ouster or dispossession of a patron by a stranger who with no right to do so presented a clerk to a benefice who was thereupon admitted to the living and instituted therein. See 3 Bl Comm 242. An invasion of the kingdom by foreign enemies to give laws and usurp the government, or an internal armed force in rebellion, assuming the power of government, by making laws, and punishing for not obeying those laws: an invasion from abroad, or an internal rebellion, when armies are employed to support it; when the laws are dormant and silent, and the firing of towns is unavoidable. City Fire Ins. Co. v Corlies (NY) 21 Wend 367.

usurpation of franchise. Exercising the privileges and powers of a corporation in the name of the corporation but without power or authority to act for or represent the corporation. Grant v Elder, 64 Colo 104, 170 P 198.

usurper. See usurpation.

usury. An unlawful contract upon the loan of money, to receive the same again with exorbitant increase. Lassman v Jacobson, 125 Minn 218, 146 NW 350. The exaction, or an agreement for the exaction, of a greater sum for the loan, use, or forbearance of money, goods, or things in action than interest at the highest rate allowed by law. 55 Am J1st Usury § 2.

It is the agreement, not necessarily its performance, which renders a debt usurious, the intent actually to get excessive interest being the controlling element, considering the elements of the agreement as and when made. Seebold v Eustermarm, 216 Minn 566, 13 NW2d 739, 152 ALR 586.

Any premium, profit, bonus, or charge exacted or required by the lender in excess of money actually loaned, with interest at the legal rate, is usurious. Hall v Mortgage Secur. Corp. 119 W Va 140, 192SE 145, 111 ALR 118.

To be a usurious contract, there must be a loan or forbearance of money, or its equivalent, and an unlawful intent and understanding that the loan be paid with an exaction, for the use of the loan, of something in excess of what is permitted by law. State v Miller, 177 Kan 324, 279 P2d 223, 52 ALR2d 691.

The three essential elements of usury are (1) a loan or forbearance of money, (2) an agreement for a return of the money in all events; and (3) an agreement to pay more than the legal rate of interest for its use. Seebold v Eustermann, 216 Minn 566, 13 NW2d 739, 152 ALR 586.

The taking of exorbitant, that is, interest exceeding forty per cent, was a misdemeanor at common law in England before the enactment of prohibitory statutes; and as late as 1814, it was thought that an indictment for usury might lie at common law, but it is now generally considered that usury is not an offense unless made so by statute. 55 Am J1st Usury § 172.

See lawful interest; legal interest; legal rate of interest.

usus. Use; a use.

usus bellici. Use in warfare; warlike use.

Usus est dominium fiduciarium. A use is a fiduciary ownership.

usus fori. The practice of the court.

usus fructus. Same as usufruct.

usus loquendi. The usage of speaking; the customary language. Hurtado v California, 110 US 516, 534, 28 L Ed 232, 238, 4 S Ct I 11, 292.

ut. That; in order that; as; so as.

ut antiquum. As in ancient times.

utas. Same as octave.

[1329]

ut audivi. As I have heard.

ut credo. As I believe.

ut currere solebat. As it is accustomed to flow.

ut de feodo. As of fee.

utensils. Tools, pots, pails, or implements, especially those used in the kitchen. Anno: 2 ALR 818.

The word more especially means all implement or vessel for domestic or farming use. "Utensils" is a translation of "utensiles," used in article 2102 of the Code Napoleon. In France it has been to include a "machine à battre," or threshing machine and in French law is used as synonymous with "agricultural instruments" of all kinds. In some states of the Union mowers and combined harvesters have been held to be "farming utensils, or implements," as used in exemption statutes. Cook v Massey, 38 Idaho 264, 220 P 1088, 35 ALR 200, 205.

uterine brother. A half-brother by the mother's side. See 2 Bl Comm 232.

utero gestation. Pregnancy.

utero matris. See in utero matris.

utfangthefe. Same as outfangthef.

uti. Same as ut.

Utile non debet per inutile vitiari. That which is useful or valid ought not to be vitiated by that which is superfluous or invalid.

"Courts lean in favor of the preservation of at such valid parts of a will as can be separated from those that are invalid, without defeating the general intention of the testator." Edgerly v Barker, 66 NH 434, 31 A 900.

Utile per inutile non vitiatur. That which is useful is not vitiated by that which is superfluous. State of West Virginia v Richards, 32 W Va 348, 9 SE 245.

utilis. Useful; profitable; advantageous.

utilitarian. Looking toward or stressing the point of utility.

utility. Usefulness, especially to a number of persons. An essential of patentability; capable of beneficial use in society. 40 Am J1st Pat §§ 22-24.

utilization facility. (1) Any equipment or device, except an atomic weapon, determined by rule of the Atomic Energy Commission to be capable of making use of special nuclear material in such quantity as to be of significance to the common defense and security, or in such manner as to affect the health and safety of the public, peculiarly adapted for making use of atomic energy in such quantity as to be of significance to the common defense and security, or in such manner as to affect the health and safety of the public; or (2) any important component part especially designed for such equipment or device as determined by the Commission. USC § 2014(aa).

uti possidetis. As you possess, an expression which when used in a treaty signifies that the respective nation parties may retain the property which they have captured.

Utitur jure auctoris. He enjoys the right of his assignor.

utlagatas. An outlaw.

utlagatum. See capias utlagatum.

utlage. An outlaw.

utlagh. An outlaw.

utmost care. The highest degree of care to be exercised in a particular situation, consistent with the nature of the undertaking and the circumstances of the case. Dodge v Boston & Bangor S.S. Co. 148 Mass 207, 19 NE 373.

As applied to the care required of passenger carriers, the term implies the highest degree of practicable care and diligence consistent with the mode of transportation adopted, and with the practical prosecution of the carrier's business. 14 Am J2d Car § 916.

utmost care and skill. The highest degree of care and skill known which may be used under the same or similar circumstances. Phelan v Louisville Electrical Co. 122 Ky 476, 91 SW 703.

utmost degree of care. See utmost care.

ut poena ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat. That few may suffer, but all may dread punishment. See 4 Bl Comm 11.

utraque parte. See ex utraque parte.

ut res magis valeat quam pereat. That it may rather become operative than null.

The most common application of the maxim is in connection with the duty of courts, in passing upon the constitutionality of statutes, to uphold them whenever it can rationally be done. 16 Am J2d Const L § 175.

utrisque parentibus conjuncti. See ex utrisque parentibus conjuncti.

utroque jure. See in utroque jure.

utrum. See assize of utrum.

V

v. An abbreviation of versus and also of vide.

vacancy in office. A matter of a public office being without an incumbent who has a right to exercise its functions and take its fees or emoluments. 42 Am J1st Pub Of § 131. The condition of a public office which is unoccupied and without an incumbent who has a lawful right to continue therein until the happening of some future event. 42 Am J1st Pub Of § 131. A matter of a corporate office or directorship being without an incumbent. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1086.

The word "vacant" involves no technical or peculiar meanings; as applied to a public office it means empty, unoccupied, without an incumbent. State ex rel. McKittrick v Wilson, 350 Mo 486, 166 SW2d 499, 143 ALR 1465.

A vacancy in public office results from the death of the incumbent, or from his resignation or removal from office. It may exist where there is a newly created office, where the person elected or appointed to the office fails to qualify or dies before qualifying or before the commencement of his term. 42 Am J1st Pub Of § 135.

A provision authorizing corporate directors to fill vacancies is ordinarily held not applicable to newly created directorships. Automatic Steel Products Co. v Johnston (Sup) 31 Del Ch 469, 64 A2d 416, 6 ALR2d 170.

vacant and unoccupied building. A building in which no one is living or residing and which is empty for all practical purposes. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 907 vacant building. A building without inanimate objects. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 907.

vacantia bona. (Civil law.) Goods which no one claimed and which by the law of nature belonged to the first occupant or finder. See 1 Bl Comm 298.

vacant land. Lands of the government, national or state, which are absolutely free, unclaimed, and unoccupied, exclusive of lands belonging to the state by purchase. 42 Am J1st Pub L § 13.

vacant succession. An inheritance which no one claims and the heirs who are entitled to which are unknown.

vacare. To be empty or vacant.

vacate. To annul or set aside. To cease the occupancy of premises, leaving them empty.

To vacate, in its English form, has acquired an active sense through a long period of transition, by popular usage and in consequence of its early adoption as a technical and legal term, although it was originally used only as a passive verb. To leave empty; to cease from occupying; to annul; to make void, express the different meanings which it has acquired. Originally it meant to be empty, void or vacant; to be void of, free from, or without; to lack or want a thing. Walsh v Commonwealth, 89 Pa 419.

vacatio. (Civil law.) A freedom from something; an immunity; an exemption.

vacation. A setting aside. An annulment of a prior act or determination. A respite from work or study. A period without school.

vacation club deposit. A type of deposit in a bank or trust company, made in accordance with a plan which provides for the making of regular deposits during the year and the withdrawal of the money for use in taking a vacation. 10 Am J2d Banks § 357.

vades. (Civil law.) Pledges; sureties.

vadiare. To wage; to gage; to give security.

vadiare duellum. To wage battel; to engage in trial by combat.

vadiare legem. To wage law.
See wager of law.

vadiatio legis. Wager of law.
See wager of law.

vadio. Pledge.
See estate in pledge.

vadium. A pledge.

See estate in pledge.

[1332]

vadium mortuum. Same as mortuum vadium.

vadium ponere. To take pledges; to take bail.

vadium vivum. Same as vivum vadium.

vadlet. The eldest son of the king.

vagabond. A tramp; a wanderer. An idle person. A rascal. One using any subtle craft, means, or device to deceive or impose on another. Anno: 14 ALR 1489.

Vagabundum nuncupamus eum qui nullibi domicilium contraxit habitationis. We call him a vagabond who has nowhere acquired a domicil of residence.

vagrancy. At common law, the wandering or going about from place to place by an idle person without lawful visible means of support, subsisting on charity, and refraining from working for a living, although able to work. 55 Am J1st Vag § 1.

In most of the states, there has been a departure in some particulars, even to a considerable extent, from the common-law definition.

vagrant. One in a state of vagrancy; one guilty of vagrancy.

At common law, a vagrant was originally understood to be an idle person without visible means of support, who, though able to work for his maintenance, refused to do so. The idea connected with the word "vagrant" or "vagrancy" also had connected with it, and as a part of it, not only an idle person, but one whose business, pursuit, or occupation, or want of it, was vicious to society, and one who loitered or stayed about immoral places. The English vagrant acts, as in effect defined by old English statutes and referred to in 4 Bl Comm 169, also tended to show that this was the idea of a vagrant. Under modern legislation in many states of the Union, vagrants are defined to be and are punished for pursuing a business or occupation or profession of a vicious, illegal, or demoralizing tendency, and the idea conveyed and intended to be conveyed thereby was and is as to the status, course of conduct, business, pursuit, or occupation of such persons who are denounced as vagrants, and proven by showing many specific acts which make up their general course of conduct, status, business, pursuit, or occupation, in contradistinction to their committing a specific act. The idea further is that such persons are denominated "vagrants" because their course of conduct, status, business, pursuit, or occupation is habitual in its nature. Anne: 14 ALR 1483.

See vagrancy.

vagrant waters. Flood waters, sometimes known as enemy waters. Herminghaus v Southern California Edison Co. 200 Cal 81, 252 P 607.

vagueness. Uncertainty; indefiniteness; obscurity.

vail'q'vail'pur.' Same as Valeat quantum valere potest.

vain act. A futile act. A useless act. Cantwell v Cantwell, 237 Ind 168, 143 NE2d 275 app den 356 US 225, 2 L Ed 2d 700, reh den 356 US 954, 2 L Ed 2d 847, 78 S Ct 913. An act ineffectual in accomplishing the object in view. 34 Am J1st Mand § 37.

vain thing. See vain act.

vale. A beautiful word for a poet, meaning valley. (Spanish.) A promissory note.

Valeat quantum valere potest. Let it have effect to such extent as it can have effect.

The maxim is applicable to almost every legal transaction. In wills, the method of the courts has been not to set aside the intent because it cannot take effect so fully as the testator desired, but to let it work as far as it can. Edgerly v Barker, 66 N H 434, 31 A 900.

valentia. Value; price.

valid. Effective; operative; not void; sufficient in law.

See lawful; legality.

validating act. Same as curative act.

validation. Rendering legal that which was previously illegal. Giving legality to a bond or other security issued by a public body which otherwise will remain illegal and unenforceable. Confirmation.

validation of statute. Amending a statute which is unconstitutional by removing its objectionable provisions, or supplying provisions, to conform it to the requirements of the Constitution. 16 Am 32d Const L § 179.

validation of ticket. The confirmation of a return ticket of a passenger, made by an agent of the carrier, usually at the place constituting the outer terminus of the trip.

valid defense. A defense required as a condition of the vacation of a judgment, being a defense having such merit that the law will recognize it and give effect thereto when sufficient proof thereof is forthcoming.

It is not essential that the defense extend to the whole cause of action. State ex rel. Comrs. of Land Office v Jones, 198 Okla 187, 176 P2d 992, 174 ALR 1.

valid excuse. A good, sufficient, and satisfactory excuse. Dennis v Massachusetts Ben. Asso. 120 NY 496, 24 NE 843 (excuse for failure to pay assessment by mutual benefit association).

validity. The state of being valid and effective.

See valid.

validity of statute. The effectiveness of a statute in reference to constitutionality, the power of the Congress or a legislature to enact the statute, the manner of enactment, and the form of the statute. 50 Am J1st Stat § 47 1.

The validity of a statute is drawn in question whenever the power to enact it as it is by its terms, or as it is made to read by construction, is fairly open to denial and is denied. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v Hopkins, 130 US 210, 32 L Ed 908, 9 S Ct 503.

valid marriage. A marriage effective to create the relationship of husband and wife. Marriage which is not void.

valley. An area of lowlands or depressions of considerable size, with bottoms of gentle slope as compared to the sides; that is to say, it is the space inclosed between two ranges of mountains or hills. Whaley v Northern Pacific Railway Co. (CC Mont) 167 F 664, 669.

valor beneficiorum. The value of benefices. See 1 Bl Comm 285.

valor maritaggi. The value of the right of marriage.

[1333]

This value was the amount or sum of money which a suitable person who desired to marry an infant ward would be willing to pay to the ward's guardian for the marriage. See 2 Bl Comm 70.

valuable consideration. A consideration in money or in something having monetary value. 17 Am J2d Contr § 95. A consideration in money, money's worth, the release of a right, or the compromise of a demand. 37 Am J2d Frd Conv § 18. Something received of monetary value or bearing a value measurable in money. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 63.

Valuable consideration for a deed is not necessarily coincident with valuable consideration such as will make a promise binding. It may consist of marriage, an agreement to marry; a promise of support, antecedent services, etc. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 63.

valuable effects. Items of personal property having at least some value. 32 Am J2d False Pret § 41.

valuable for mining. A term characterizing a reservation by the United States of certain lands.

Lands are valuable for minerals when they contain minerals in such quantities as to justify expenditures in extraction and are, on the whole, more valuable for mining than for agriculture. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 12.

valuable papers. Papers considered worthy of being preserved as records of the facts purported to be stated and perpetuated therein. Brogan v Barnard, 115 Tenn 260, 90 SW 858.

valuable security. A pledge of a valuable chattel. A document, such as a stock certificate, bond, or mortgage. Checks, notes, etc., obtained from the person executing or signing the same have been held to constitute valuable security within the meaning of statutes declaring it to be a criminal offense to "obtain any valuable security" by false pretenses. Reg v Greenhalgh (Eng) 6 Cox CC 257.

valuable thing. See thing of value. valuation. A determination of the value of particular property, as for the purpose of taxation. The price set upon anything; the estimated or rated worth of anything; the estimated value or worth of a thing. See State v Central Pacific Railroad Co. 7 Nev 99, 104.

See assessment; fair valuation.

Valuation Reserve. See Mandatory Securities Valuation Reserve.

value. The worth of a thing in money, goods, or other property. The effect in exchange of the relative social desire for compared objects expressed in terms of a common denominator. International Harvester Co. v Kentucky, 234 US 216, 222, 58 L Ed 1284, 1287, 34 S Ct 853. Somewhat of a guess, a prediction, or a prophecy; an educated guess which may or may not correspond with ultimate realities. McMurtry v Commissioner (CA1) 203 F2d 659. The amount which a thing will bring in money in the market. State v Doepke, 68 Mo 208. The market value. World F. & M. Ins. Co. v Palmer (CA5 Miss) 182 F2d 707, 17 ALR2d 1217.

For rate-making purposes, value must be measured by the sound judgment and common sense of impartial tribunals. Petersburg Gas Co. v Petersburg, 132 Va 82, 110 SE 533, 20 ALR 542.

A proceeding for the appointment of a guardian of the estate of an alleged incompetent cannot strictly be said to have a "value in controversy" exceeding $20, so as to come within the protection of the Seventh Amendment of the United States Constitution as to the right of trial by jury, even though the result of the determination as to competency may affect extensive property holdings. Ward v Booth (CA9 Hawaii) 197 F2d 963, 33 ALR2d 1134.

See market value.

valued policy. A policy of insurance in which the value of the subject matter insured is fixed by agreement and stated in the policy. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1586.

If there is anything in the policy which clearly indicates an intention on the part of the insurer to value the risk and loss, in whatever words expressed, the policy is valued. American Ins. Co. v Gentile Bros. Co. (CA5 Fla) 109 F2d 732.

value in controversy. See value.

value of life insurance policy. For inheritance tax purposes, its face value, less a proper rebate for the period during which payment may be deferred. Anne: 73 ALR2d 232.

See cash surrender value.

value of the marriage. The value of the right of marriage; the sum of money which a suitable person who desires to marry an infant ward will pay her guardian in order to accomplish the marriage. See 2 Bl Comm 70.

value received. A formalized recital of consideration without elaboration. 49 Am J1st Stat of F § 373.

As the expression is used in a promissory note, it does not necessarily import a consideration in money, and a promise to pay may legally be the consideration, without any money passing. The consideration may be as varied as the transactions of men. Not only does the phrase not necessarily import a consideration of money, but it does not conclusively import a consideration of any kind; for it is competent, notwithstanding these words, to show that no consideration has been, in fact, received. Osgood v Bringolf, 32 Iowa 265, 270.

The words as used in a written instrument, other than a negotiable or sealed instrument, have generally been held to create a presumption, or make a prima facie case, of a sufficient consideration to support the instrument. Thus, the recital "value received" in an assignment of a life insurance policy, being in the nature of an admission by the assignor of the receipt of a consideration, creates a prima facie case that there was a sufficient consideration to make the assignment effective. Finegan v Prudential Ins. Co. 300 Mass 147, 14 NE2d 172, 116 ALR 535.

See for value received; valuable consideration.

value rule. A rule of damages applied in an action for breach of contract by a contractor-builder, that the owner is entitled to recover the difference in value between the building as constructed and as it should have been constructed. Shell v Schmidt, 164 Cal App 2d 350, 330 P2d 817, 76 ALR2d 792, cert den 359 US 959, 3 L Ed 2d 766, 79 S Ct 799.

valvasor. A title of dignity, next beneath peer. See 1 Bl Comm 403.

Vana est illa potentia quae nunquam venit in actum. A power or authority is a vain one which is never exercised.

vandalism. Wilful or malicious injury to, or the destruction of, property. General Acci.

[1334]

Fire & Life Assur. Corp. v Azar, 103 Ga App 215, 119 SE2d 82. Wilful, wanton, and ruthless acts intended to damage or destroy property. 7 Am J2d Auto Ins § 75. Any unusual destruction of property wrought in the doing of a wrongful act. Great American Ins. Co. v Dedmon, 260 Ala 330, 72 So 2d 421, 43 ALR2d 599 (construction of term in automobile comprehensive policy).

As to what constitutes "vandalism" within the meaning of an automobile comprehensive policy, see Anno: 43 ALR2d 604.

Vani timores sunt aestimandi, qui non cadunt in constantem virem. Those fears are to be regarded as groundless which do not affect a man of ordinary firmness.

Vani timoris justa excusatio non est. An idle fear is not a lawful excuse. Williams v Kansas City Southern Railway Co. 257 Mo 87, 165 SW 788.

vara. A land measure used in Spanish-American grants.

The true vara is slightly less than 33-1/3 inches, but by usage it is estimated at 33-1/3 inches in Texas and at 33 inches in California. United States v Perot, 98 US 428, 25 L Ed 251.

varech. (French.) Seaweed.

variable annuity. An annuity under a contract which guarantees the annuitant that upon reaching a specified age he will receive periodic payments, the amount of which is not fixed and has no assured minimum, but will vary according to the success of the investment policy of the company which issues the contract. Securities & Exchange Com. v Variable Annuity Life Ins. Co. 359 US 65, 3 L Ed 2d 640, 79 S Ct 618.

variance. An exception from the application of a zoning regulation granted by proper authority to relieve against practical difficulties and unnecessary hardship. 58 Am J1st Zon §§ 194 et seq. A disagreement or difference between two parts of the same proceeding which ought to agree especially the pleading and proof. 41 Am J1st PI § 370. A difference between a party's allegations and his proofs. A substantial departure from the issue in the evidence adduced concerning a matter which in point of law is essential to the charge or claim. 41 Am J1st PI §§ 370 et seq. A discrepancy between the allegations in the indictment or information and the proof as to some matter which is legally essential to the charge. State v Crean, 43 Mont 47, 114 P 603.

In a criminal case, a variance is an essential difference between the accusation and the proof, and the variance is not material unless it is such as might mislead the defense, or expose the defendant to the injury of being put twice in jeopardy for the same offense. Brashears v State, 38 Okla Crim 175, 259 P 665.

vary. To alter; to modify. To change to something else.

Power given to trustees to invest and reinvest the trust funds and to "vary" the securities has been held to authorize the trustees to change the investment from one form of securities to another. Merchants' Loan & Trust Co. v Northern Trust Co. 250 111 86, 95 NE 59.

vassal. A grantee of land, a tenant, a feudatory, a landholder, under the feudal system.

Originally no stigma was attached to the word but the abuses which crept into feudal tenure altered its meaning so that it came to signify a slave or bondman. See 2 Bl Comm 53.

vassalus. A vassal.

Vassalus, qui abnegavit feudum ejusve conditionem, exspoliabitur. The vassal who has denied either his fee or the terms of it shall be deprived of it. See 3 Bl Comm 234.

vastitas. An empty space; a waste.

See de vasto.

vasto. To plunder; to commit waste.

vastum. Waste. A common lying open to the cattle of all tenants of one landlord.

vauderie. Witchcraft.

vaudeville. A type of entertainment.

A term used in the theatrical trade as describing a species of entertainment composed of a number of isolated acts and attractions so put together as to form a balanced show. The acts run in sequence. The theaters where they are played are referred to as vaudeville houses. Hart v B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange (CA2 NY) 12 F2d 341, 47 ALR 775.

vaudeville house. See vaudeville.

Co.* 96 NH 64, 69 A2d 56, 12 ALR2d 591. Any carriage or contrivance used or capable of being used as a means of transportation on land. National Fire Ins. Co. v Elliott (CA8 Mo) 7 F2d 522, 42 ALR 1121, 1126. A graphic expression for a means of communication.

The word is commonly understood as something which moves or runs on the land, not something which flies in the air, although etymologically the term might be considered as broad enough to cover a conveyance propelled in the air. MeBoyle v United States, 283 US 25, 75 L Ed 816, 51 S Ct 340

As to what constitutes a "vehicle" within the meaning of insurance coverage or exception. Anno: 12 ALR2d 598.

vein. A fissure in rock filled with quartz or other substance bearing mineral. A stratum or rock in which mineral appears. 36 Am J1st Min & M § 110. A vessel which carries blood from some part of the body to the heart.

Verba generalia restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel aptitudinem personae. (Civil law.) General words should be confined to the character of the thing or the aptitude of the person Verba generalia restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel personae. General words should be confined or restricted to the character of the thing or the person. See Broom's Legal Maxims 646.

Verba illata (relata) inesse videntur. Words which are referred to are deemed to be included.

Verba in differenti materia per prius, non per posterius, intelligenda sunt. (Civil law.) Words concerning a different matter are to be understood by the matter preceding, and not by that following.

Verba intelligenda sunt in casu possibili. (Civil law.) Words are to be understood as referring to a possible case.

Verba intentioni debent inservire. Language ought to serve to express the intent.

From this maxim of the law, it follows that the construction of language must be reasonable and agreeable to common understanding. Edgerly v Barker, 66 NH 434, 31 A 900.

Verba intentioni, et non e contra, debent inservire. Words ought to serve intention, and not the contrary.

Verba ita sunt intelligenda, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Words should be so understood that the thing should have effect rather than be null.

verbal. By word of mouth, spoken; oral; parol.

See parol.

verbal abuse. Abusive language.

verbal acts. Statements which characterize or illustrate an act or transaction. People v Carlton, 57 Cal 83; Cox v State, 64 Ga 374. A statement which, because of its materiality in showing the motive, character, and object of an act, is admissible in evidence as against an objection that it is hearsay or self-serving. 29 Am J2d Ev § 710.

verbal will. Same as oral will.

Verba mere aequivoca, si per communem usum loquendi in intellectu certo sumuntur, talis intellectus praeferendus est. (Civil law.) The words being merely equivocal, if by common usage of speech they take a certain meaning, such meaning is to be preferred.

Verba nihil operari melius est quam absurde. (Civil law.) It is better that words have no effect than to have an absurd one.

Verba non tam intuenda, quam causa et natura rei, ut mens contrahentium ex eis potius quam ex verbis appareat. (Civil law.) Words are not to be regarded as much as the cause and nature of the thing, so that the intent of the contracting parties may appear from these rather than from the words.

Verba offendi possunt, imo ab eis recedere licet, ut verba ad sanum intellectum reducantur. (Civil law.) Words can be stricken out, nay rather it is proper to depart from them, so that they may be reduced to a sensible meaning.

Verba ordinationis quando verificari possunt in sua vera significatione, trahi ad extraneum intellectum non debent. (Civil law.) When the words of an ordinance can be verified in their true signification, they ought not to be twisted into a foreign meaning.

Verba posteriora propter certitudinem addita, ad priora quae certitudine indigent, sunt referenda. Subsequent words which are added for the sake of certainty ought to be referred to prior ones lacking in certainty. See Broom's Legal Maxims 586.

verba precaria. Precatory words. See precatory words.

Verba pro re et subjecta materia accipi debent. (Civil law.) Words ought to be taken favorably to the thing and the subject matter.

Verba quae aliquid operari possunt non debent esse superflua. (Civil law.) Words which can have any effect ought not to be regarded as superfluous.

Verba quantumvis generalia ad aptitudinem restringuntur, etiamsi nullam aliam paterentur restrictionem. (Civil law.) Words, however general, are confined to fitness, although they disclose no other restriction.

Verba relata hoc maxime operantur per referentiam ut in eis inesse videntur. Words incorporated by reference have as great effect through reference, as they are deemed to be included in them. See Broom's Legal Maxims 673.

Verba relata inesse videntur. Words which are incorporated by reference are deemed to be included. Commonwealth v Hart, 65 Mass (11 Cush) 130, 137.

Verba restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel personae. Words are restricted or confined according to the character of the person or the thing.

Verba secundum materiam subjectam intelligi nemo est qui nescit. There is no one who does not know that words are to be understood according to their subject matter.

Verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiori sensu. Words should always be taken in their milder sense.

Verba strictae significationis ad latam extendi possunt, si subsit ratio. (Civil law.) Words of strict significance can be extended to a broad meaning, if reason requires it.

[1338]

Verba sunt indices animi. Words are the indexes of the mind.

verbatim. In the very same words. Word for word.

verbatim transcript. A transcript of the testimony of a witness in the exact words of the witness, being neither condensed nor narrative in form. 4 Am J2d A & E §435.

verbis aut cantilenis. By words or in song.

"The publication may be verbis aut cantilenis, as when the libel is maliciously repeated or sung in the presence of others." Adams v Lawson, 58 Va (17 Graft) 250.

Verbis plane expressis omnino standum est. Words which plainly express their meaning must in all respects be sustained. The Pedro, 175 US 354, 364, 44 L Ed 195, 199, 175 S Ct 138.

Verbis standum ubi nulla ambiguitas. Where there is no ambiguity, the words are to be adhered to.

verbo in verbum. Word for word.

verbosity. The use of unnecessary words, particularly in a pleading. 27 Am J2d Equity § 187.

Verbum imperfecti temporis rem adhuc imperfectam significat. A verb in the imperfect tense signifies an uncompleted matter.

verderors of the forest. See sweinmote court.

See advisory verdict; chance verdict; compromise verdict; general verdict; privy verdict; public verdict; quotient verdict; sealed verdict; special verdict.

verdict. The final determination of the jury. Fidelity & Co. v Huse & Carleton, 272 Mass 448, 172 NE 590, 72 ALR 1143. The final decision of a jury concerning matters of fact submitted to it by the court for determination. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1005. Not an indebtedness; not personal property, within the meaning of a garnishment statute. Bassett v McCarty, 3 Wash 2d 488, 101 P2d 575.

verdict against evidence. A verdict which is contrary to the evidence, or to the weight of the evidence, or which is not sustained by sufficient evidence. 39 Am J1st New Tr § 129.

verdict against law. See verdict contrary to law.

verdict contrary to law. The verdict of a jury who in arriving at it have failed or neglected to follow the directions of the judge upon matters of law. 39 Am J1st New Tr § 126.

According to the weight of authority, even if the instructions are erroneous, they constitute the law of the case and it is the duty of the jury to follow them. 39 Am J1st New Tr § 127, verdict of guilty. A determination of the jury in a criminal case, leading to a final judgment of guilt. A proper form of verdict in a civil case where the issue is raised by a plea of not guilty. Peters v Johnson, Jackson & Co. 50 W Va 644, 41 SE 190.

verdict of non licet. A jury's verdict expressing doubt and asking further time for deliberation.

verdict of not guilty. An acquittal of the accused in a criminal case. A proper form of verdict in a civil case where the issue is raised by a plea of not guilty. Peters v Johnson, Jackson & Co. 50 W Va 644, 41SE 190.

verdicto non obstante. Notwithstanding the verdict.

See judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

Verdictum, quasi dictum veritatis; ut iudicium, quasi juris dictum. A verdict is, as it were, the expression of the truth; as a judgment is, as it were, the expression of the law.

verge. The space included within a radius of twelve miles from the residence of the king of England.

vergens ad inopiam. Verging or declining toward poverty.

verge of the court. Same as verge.

verifiable certainty. A test of judicial notice, referring to facts which can be verified to a certainty by reference to competent authoritative sources. 29 Am J2d Ev § 25.

verification. A sworn statement of the truth of the facts stated in an instrument. 3 Am J2d Affi § 20. A statement under oath by a party who pleads that his pleading is true of his own knowledge or to the best of his knowledge and belief. 41 Am J1st PI § 284. Testing the accuracy of a statement or an account.

verified account. A statement of account verified under oath as to the accuracy thereof. 1 Am J2d Acctg § 12.

verified pleading. See verification.

verify. To test the accuracy of a statement or an account. To substantiate the truth of a statement or of an account by formal oath, in other words, to make a verification. Watts v Gerking, 111 Or 641, 228 P 135, 34 ALR 1489, 1495.

See verification.

veritas. Truth; accuracy; correctness.

Veritas demonstrationis tollit errorem nominis. Correctness of description cures error of name.

Veritas habenda est in jurator; justitia et judicium in iudice. Truth should be possessed by a juror; justice and judgment by a judge.

Veritas nihil veretur nisi abscondi. Truth fears nothing except concealment.

Veritas nimium altercando amittitur. Truth is lost by too much altercation.

Veritas nominis tollit errorem demonstrationis. Correctness of name cures error in description. Joiner v Joiner, 55 NC (2 Jones Eq) 68, 72.

veritatem dicere. To speak the truth; the preliminary examination of a juryman touching his qualifications. See 3 Bl Comm 364.

Veritatem qui non libere pronunciat, proditor est veritatis. He who does not express the truth freely is a traitor to the truth.

verity of judgment. Conclusiveness of judgment.

[1339]

vermin. Rats, mice, lice, or other representatives of small animal life of destructive or filthy and troublesome tendencies. 32 Am J1st L & T § 247.

vernacular. Characterizing the language of the people as distinguished from the language of the dictionary or of literary persons. 17 Am J2d Contr § 247.

veronal. A drug; a barbiturate. Mansbacher v Prudential Ins. Co. 273 NY 140, 7 NE2d 18, 111 ALR 618, rch den 274 NY 487, 8 NE2d 616.

vers. An abbreviation of versus.

versari. (Civil law.) To be engaged, occupied or employed in; to be versed in or conversant with.

versus. Against. The meaning of "versus" and its abbreviation "vs." is well understood and it is quite as appropriate, even in a pleading, as the word "against" could be. They have, in fact, become engrafted upon the English language, at least so far as they are used in this country in legal proceedings. Smith v Butler, 25 NH 521, 523.

vert. Verdant; green; green growth; pertaining to the forest.

vertical price-fixing agreement. An agreement between the manufacturer or dealer in an article with purchasers who buy numbers of such article for resale in the course of business, having the purpose of controlling the resale or retail price. 52 Am J1st Tradem § 173.

vertical union. Same as industrial union.

vertigo. Dizziness.

verus. True; genuine.

very high degree of care. Due care in the face of imminent danger. 38 Am J1st Negl § 31.

very matrimony. A term used in the ancient canon law, signifying a valid marriage.

Under that law the contract per verba de praesenti did not require consummation in order to become "very matrimony;" but it ipso facto et Ipso jure constituted the relation of man and wife. See 17 ERC 10.

vessel. A marine structure intended for transportation of goods or passengers. 48 Am J1st Ship § 35. Anything floating in and on the water, built and used for navigation, regardless of form, rig, or motive power. Cope v Vallette Drydock Co. 119 US 625, 30 L Ed 501, 7 S Ct 336. Watercraft of every description, other than a seaplane on the water, used or capable of being used as a means of transportation on water. 46 USC § 527(2) (Federal Boating Act).

See burdened vessel; favored vessel; overtaking vessel; public vessel.

vessel belonging to or employed in the government of the United States. A vessel under the control of the United States. Ackerlind v United States, 240 US 531, 60 L Ed 783, 36 S Ct 438 (phrase appearing in tariff act). A ship registered by the United States for the foreign trade or licensed or enrolled by the United States for the coasting trade. 48 Am J1st Ship § 40.

vessel of the United States. Any vessel registered, enrolled, or licensed under the laws of the United States, whether permanently or temporarily. 46 USC § 911(2)(4) (Ship Mortgage Act).

vessels. A generic term within the meaning of tariff regulations and laws. 21 Am J2d Cust D § 49.

See vessel.

vest. To pass to a person, as where the title to property comes to the heir upon the death of the owner intestate. To descend; to take effect. D. M. Ferry & Co. v Forquer, 61 Mont 336, 202 P 193, 29 ALR 642. To give an immediate fixed right of present or future enjoyment. Stewart v Harriman, 56 NH 25.

The use of the term "vest in," in reference to surviving remaindermen, does not operate, in the absence of other controlling language, to prevent the ascertainment of surviving remaindermen at the death of the testator. Anno: 114 ALR 26.

vested. Fixed in interest. Indefeasible. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1230.

vested estate. An absolute, unconditional, and indefeasible interest. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1230. An estate which is not contingent or expectant; an estate carrying a fixed right of present or future enjoyment. 28 Am J2d Est § 6. An estate which gives a certain and fixed right of present or future enjoyment; that is, an interest clothed with a present legal and existing right of alienation. Allison v Allison, 101 Va 537, 44 SE 904.

An estate is vested in possession when there exists a right of present enjoyment, and vested in interest when there is a present right of future enjoyment. Re Kohrs, 122 Mont 145, 199 P2d 856, 5 ALR2d 1046; Carroll v Newark, 108 NJL 323, 158 A 458, 79 ALR 509.

An estate is said to be vested in interest, when there is a present fixed right in someone of future enjoyment of it; it is not vested, but is contingent, when either the person who is to enjoy it, or the event upon which the estate is to arise is uncertain. See Johnston's Estate, 185 Pa 179, 39 A 879.

vested future estate. An estate which exists when there is a person in being who would have an immediate right to the possession of the lands upon the ceasing of the intermediate or precedent estate. Palmer v Dunham, 52 Hun 468, 471, 6 NYS 46.

See vested remainder.

vested gift. A gift which vests immediately in interest, albeit the enjoyment is postponed. 24 Am J1st Gifts § 31.

vested in interest. See vested estate.

vested in possession. See vested estate.

vested interest. A fixed right to the enjoyment of property in an ascertained person which is subject to no condition other than the termination of a precedent estate. Stevens v Carroll, 64 Or 417, 129 P 1044.

An interest when vested, whether it entitles the owner to the possession now or at a future period, is fixed and present; so that the right of ownership, to the extent of the estate, may be aliened. Allison v Allison, 101 Va 537, 44 SE 904.

See vested estate; vested right.

vested legacy. A legacy provided absolutely and unconditionally, although sometimes payable at a future time. Magoffin v Patton (Pa) 4 Rawie 113, 116.

vested remainder. A remainder limited to an ascertained person or persons with no further condition imposed upon the taking effect in possession than the determination of the precedent estate. 28 Am J2d Est § 217. An estate invariably fixed, to remain to a determinate person, after the precedent estate is spent. 2 Bl Comm § 168. An estate passing absolutely by will or conveyance, where possession or enjoyment is postponed until the termination of the particular estate upon which it is limited - Re Phearman, 211 Iowa 1137, 232 NW 826, 82 ALR 674.

[1340]

A remainder is vested if, at every n its continuance, it is a present estate, however the preceding freehold estate determines. Sands v Fly, 200 Tenn 414, 292 SW2d 706, 57 ALR2d 188.

Wherever the preceding estate is limited, so as to determine on an event which certainly must happen, and the remainder is so limited to a person in esse, and ascertained, that the preceding estate may by any means determine before the expiration of the estate limited in remainder, such remainder is vested, Fearne, Contingent Remainders p 216, quoted in 28 Am J2d Est § 217.

Unless the intent of the testator is made to appear to the contrary, a devise or bequest will be construed in favor of a vested remainder instead of a contingent remainder. Re Phearman, 211 Iowa 1137, 232 NW 826, 82 ALR 674.

vested right. An immediate fixed right of present or future enjoyment; an immediate right of present enjoyment, or a present fixed right of future enjoyment. 16 Am J2d Const L § 421; 28 Am J2d Est § 6. A right in the form of a title, legal or equitable, to the present or future enjoyment of property, or to the present or future enforcement of a demand, or a legal exemption from a demand made by another. Hagerty v Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act, 137 Conn 129, 75 A2d 406, 20 ALR2d 960.

To be vested, a right must have become a title, legal or equitable, to the present or Future enjoyment of property, or to the present or future enforcement of a demand, or a legal exemption from a demand made by another. Hagerty v Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act, 137 Conn 129, 75 A2d 406, 20 AI_R2d 960.

See vested estate; vested interest.

vested subject to divesting. A phrase characterizing an estate intermediate a vested interest and a contingent interest. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1217. A remainder which will be defeated upon the occurrence of the contingency stated in the limitation. 28 Am J2d Est § 320.

vested water rights. See accrued water rights.

vestibule. An inclosed space at the end of a railroad car or streetcar through which passengers enter or leave the main part of the car. An inclosed space immediately inside the door of a public building or a building frequented by the public.

vestigial words or phrases. Words or phrases which have been permitted to remain in a statute after it has been amended, but which are rendered useless and meaningless by the amendment. Saltonstall v Birtwell, 164 US 54, 70, 41 L Ed 348, 353, 17 S Ct 19.

vestigium. A vestige; a trace; a scintilla.

vestmentum. Investiture; seisin.

vesting order. An order or decree of a court of equity transferring title to land.

vestire. To vest; to invest, as with title.

vestry. See vestrymen.

vestrymen. Church members composing the vestry or body which manages the temporal affairs of the church. 44 Am J1st Quo W § 83.

vestura terrae. The clothing of the land. Vesture.

vesture. Clothing. In more frequent use, grass, grain, or other plants which cover the earth. Simpson v Coe, 4 NH 301, 303.

veteran. One who has served as an enlisted man or a commissioned officer in any of the Armed Services. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 2.

Veterans' Acts. Statutes making special provision for the benefit or welfare of veterans of the Armed Services and their dependents, or extending to veterans privileges or preferences not accorded to other classes of citizens, particularly in reference to appointment in the public service. 15 Am J2d Civ S § 15.

Veterans' Administration. The federal agency, established in 1930, responsible for the administration of federal statutes providing direct benefits for veterans and their dependents, their duties, powers, and functions being in part those formerly vested in various hospitals, bureaus, agencies, and offices of the federal government. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 3.

veterans' benefits. Benefits provided by law for veterans of the Armed Forces. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 2.

veterans' cemetery. A national cemetery. 24 USC § 281.

veterans' homes. National homes for veterans, now under the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Administration. Also homes maintained by states for veterans. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 7.

veterans' hospital. A hospital primarily for the care of veterans of the Armed Services. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 6.

veterans' insurance. Insurance issued to persons in the Armed Forces and maintained in force by them or converted to life insurance in another form after discharge or separation from the service. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1970.

An organization of veterans of the Armed Forces, distinctive particularly in the limitation of membership to veterans with service on foreign fields.

veterans' organizations. Organizations of veterans of the Armed Services, having the primary purposes of strengthening and preserving comradeship, promoting and advancing mutual helpfulness among members, the protection of their widows and orphans, and the stimulation of patriotism. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 17.

veterans' preference. See Veterans' Acts.

veterans' settlement. A settlement on public lands under a project primarily for the benefit of veterans. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 14.

vetera statuta. Ancient statutes; a name given to those statutes which were enacted from the time of Magna Charta in 1215 through the reign of Edward the Second in 1327.

Veteres enim haeredes pro dominis appellabant. For the ancients called heirs, "owners" or "masters." Emeric v Alvarado, 64 Cal 529, 558, 2 P 419.

veterinarian. One who practices medicine or surgery in the limited field of the treatment of animals. Staples v Steed, 167 Ala 214, 52 So646.

veterinary hospital. A place for the care of sick or disabled animals. Wergin v Voss, 179 Wis 603, 192 NW 51, 26 ALR 933.

vetitio principii. A supposition of what is not granted; a begging the question. Case upon the Statute for Distribution, Wythe (Va) 302, 309.

vetitum namium. A forbidden taking-a remedy by means of a second or reciprocal distress for a wrongful distress. See 3 Bl Comm 148.

veto. A qualified right of a governor of a state to prevent an enactment of the legislature from becoming law. 49 Am J1st States § 47. The refusal of the executive to approve a bill passed by the legislative body, having the effect of nullifying such legislative action unless the bill is passed by the requisite number of votes upon reconsideration by the legislative body after such disapproval by the executive. 50 Am J1st Stat § 111.

The disapproval by the President of the United States of a bill after it has passed both houses of Congress, or by the governor of a state of the Union after the bill has passed both houses of the state legislature. The veto is essentially a legislative act. The fact that the President or the governor is limited to negation or concurrence, and cannot affirmatively initiate or amend legislation, does not take away the legislative character of his act, any more than want of power in the Senate of the United States to originate revenue bills changes its character as a co-ordinate branch of Congress. Commonwealth ex rel. Elkin v Barnett, 199 Pa 161, 48 A 976.

See pocket veto.

veto power. The power of the executive to veto a legislative act. 16 Am J2d Const L §§ 213, 214.

See veto.

vetus depositio pecuniae. The former concealment of the money.

vetustas. (Civil law.) Antiquity; time out of mind.

vexatae quaestiones. Vexatious questions; moot questions.

vexata quaestio. Singular of vexatae quaestiones.

vexatious motion. A motion presented or filed for the purpose of vexation or delay, rather than to subserve the ends of justice. 37 Am J1st Motions § 4.

vexatious proceeding. Same as vexatious suit.

vexatious refusal to pay claim. A ground for subjecting an insurance company to a penalty. A refusal to pay founded, not upon what appear to be the facts, but only upon a possibility that later investigation may develop facts justifying refusal to pay. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1697.

A refusal is held not to be vexatious if founded on what at the time appeared to be facts justifying the refusal, even though at the trial it may be shown that the true facts were exactly opposite of what they appeared to be at first. Buffalo Ins. Co. v Bommarito (CA8 Mo) 42 F2d 53, 70 ALR 1211.

vexatious suit. Litigation for the purpose of harassing, annoying, and vexing an opponent, rather than for the adjudication of rights, being invoked, not for the attainment of justice, but to further or satisfy a malicious motive. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 210.

vi. With violence; with force; forcibly; violently.

via. Preposition: By way of. Noun: A way.

Lord Coke, adopting the civil law, divided private ways into three kinds: a footway, called "iter; a footway and horseway, called "actus;" and a cartway which embraced both of the other two, called "via." To these was added a "driftway," a road over which cattle could be driven. Jones v Venable, 120 Ga 1, 47 NE 549.

via alta. A highway, viable. Capable of living, physically fit to live; of a fetus, having reached such a stage of development as to permit continued existence under normal conditions, outside of the womb. Williams v Marion Rapid Transit, 152 Ohio St 114, 87 NE2d 334, 10 ALR2d 1051.

viability. Ability to live; the capability of a newborn infant to survive.

via amabili. In a friendly way.

Via antiqua via est tuta. The old way is the safe way.

"I consider myself bound by those principles, which were known and established as law in courts of equity in England, at the time of the institution of this court." Manning v Manning (NY) 1 Johns Ch 527, 530.

viaduct. A long bridge, especially one which spans a valley or gorge. A structure carrying traffic over other lines of traffic. Re Yesler Way, 94 Wash 427, 162 P 536.

viaggio. A voyage.

viagium. A voyage.

viam. A way.

See extra viam.

via other ports. A phrase in a bill of lading relating to the route of the vessel.

These words in a recital in a bill of lading that the goods are received for transportation on a vessel bound for the port of destination "via other ports," do not have the effect of broadening a provision of the charter party giving the vessel "liberty to call at any port or ports in any order, for any purpose." Anno: 33 ALR2d 166.

via publica. A public way.

via regia. The king's highway; any public road or highway in England.

viator. A traveler; a wayfarer.

See caveat viator.

vi aut clam. By force or fraud.

vi aut metu. Same as vis aut meta.

vibration. A process of agitating or shaking. A kind of oscillation. Re Junghans, 28 Cust & Pat App (Pat) 1237, 120 F2d 638.

vibrator. An instrument used in massage. Cornbrooks v Terminal Barber Shops, 282 NY 217, 26 NE2d 25.

vicar. One of the clergy. In the Anglican and Episcopal churches, a deputy of another minister. In the Roman Catholic Church, a deputy of a bishop; the Pope himself as a representative of Christ.

vicarious. Through the agency or by means of a representative, agent or servant.

vicarious liability. A liability imposed upon one person because of the act or omission of another, such as his employee.

vicarius. (Eccles.) A vicar, an officiating minister deputed by an appropriating corporation or religious house to perform divine services in a parish of the corporation. See 1 Bl Comm 387.

See vicar.

Vicarius non habet vicarium. A vicar has no deputy. See 1 Bl Comm 390.

The maxim has been construed more freely as meaning that a person who acts in a representative capacity cannot employ a representative, on the principle that delegated authority cannot be redelegated. See Broom's Legal Maxims 840.

vice. Preposition: As a substitute for; in the place of; instead of, as a vice president, a vice consul. Noun: Evil, sinful, and immoral conduct in a collective sense, as in "vice district" or "vice conditions in a city." An imperfection in an animal.

vice admiral. A naval officer ranking immediately below admiral and immediately above rear admiral his rank being comparable to that of lieutenant general of the army. 36 Am J1st Mil § 55.

vice-admiralty courts. Inferior courts of admiralty in the American Colonies and other settlements, from which appeals lay to the courts of admiralty in England, though they could also be brought before the king in council. See 3 Bl Comm 69.

vice-comes. Same as viscount.

Vicecomes non misit breve. The sheriff has not sent the writ.

vice-commercial agent. A person substituted temporarily for a commercial agent of the consular service. United States v Eaton, 169 US 331, 42 L Ed 767, 18 S Ct 374.

vice consul. A person in the consular service, subordinate to or serving temporarily in the place of a consul. United States v Eaton, 169 US 331, 336, 42 L Ed 767, 769, 18 S Ct 374.

vice district. A district in a city, given over to licensed prostitution. A district in a city, wherein houses of prostitution abound.

vice-domini. Same as vidames.

vicem seu personam ecclesiae gerere. To represent the church. See 1 Bl Comm 384.

vice mayor. A municipal officer empowered to act as mayor during the absence of the mayor from the municipality during a disability of the mayor rendering him unfit to perform the duties of the office, or temporarily during a vacancy in the office of mayor resulting from the death of the mayor or his removal from office.

vice president. An officer next in rank below a president. Pond v National Mortg. & Debenture Co. 6 Kan App 718, 50 P 973. A corporate officer empowered to act as the chief executive of the corporation in the absence of, or during vacancy in the office of, the president, and sometimes given executive duties by the board of directors or bylaws of the corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1171.

Vice President of the United States. An office provided by the Constitution of the United States, the incumbent of which is elected with the President and serves the same term of office as the President, the salient feature of which is the succession of the incumbent to the powers and duties of the office of the President upon the removal of the latter from office or his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the duties of the office. Any employee who represents the employer in the discharge of those personal or absolute duties which every employer owes to his employees.

vice-principal. One entrusted with the conduct of an employer's business, especially in the direction or superintendence of other employees. 35 Am J1st M & S § 129.

Among those employees who have been held to be vice principals are those charged with the duty of providing machinery and appliances, the place to work, the inspection and repair of premises and appliances, the selection and retention of servants, establishment of proper rules and regulations, and the instruction of servants. Moore v Dublin Cotton Mills, 127 Ga 609, 56 SE 839.

vice versa. The other way about; under a reversed position of the parties.

vicinage. The area surrounding a particular place, especially the place where the cause of action is alleged to have arisen or where a crime is alleged to have been committed. 56 Am J1st Ven § 2. The neighborhood or vicinity. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 6. The county, district, or other subdivision of venue.

At common law, the right of trial by jury includes the right of a prisoner to have the jury obtained from the vicinage or county where the crime is supposed to have been committed. The reason for this is that the accused may have the benefit, on his trial, of his own good reputation and standing with the neighbors, if these he has preserved, and also of such knowledge as the jury may possess of the witnesses who may give evidence against him. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 5.

vicineto. Neighborhood; vicinage.

vicinetum. Neighborhood; vicinity.

vicinity. A place near to a place designated, but not adjoining or abutting on it. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 243.

The word is not an absolute but a relative one, and what is in the vicinity of a place under one set of circumstances may not be so under other circumstances. In a sparsely settled region a person residing fifteen miles from a road might be regarded as being in the vicinity of it. Sterling v Carter, 105 Kan

423, 185 P 11; Burton v Douglas, 141 Wis 110, 123 NW 631.

See immediate vicinity; vicinage.

Vicini viciniora praesumuntur scire. Neighbors are presumed to know neighborhood matters.

vicious. Partaking of vice; wicked; harmful.

vicious animal. An animal dangerous by nature. 4 Am J2d Am §§ 80 et seq. A domestic animal with a propensity for injuring persons. 4 Am J2d Am §§ 85 et seq. Any individual of a vicious species, or a vicious individual of a harmless species. Mellicker v Sedlacek, 189 Iowa 946, 179 NW 197, 11 ALR 259, 267.

vicious for false Latin. Defective because of an error in Latin in which all proceedings were formerly written.

In the earlier English cases, it was considered that any stranger, as amicus curiae, might move the court of matters apparent in the writ, and the court ex officio was bound to abate the writ, if it was vicious for false Latin or default of form. Haley v Eureka County Bank, 21 Nev 127, 26 P 64.

vicious propensity. Such a propensity as exists in an animal which might attack or injure the safety of persons without being provoked to do so. Mellicker v Sedlacek, 189 Iowa 946, 179 NW 197, 11 ALR 259, 267.

vi clam aut precario. Forcibly, secretly or by sufferance.

An easement cannot be acquired by prescription if its enjoyment is characterized by either of these attributes. Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. v McFarlan, 43 NJL 605, 622.

vicontiel. Pertaining to a sheriff.

victim. One who has suffered the commission of a crime, tort, or wrong.

Victoria. The queen of England from June 20th, 1837, until January 22nd, 1901.

victualer. One who serves food or drink for consumption on the premises. Friend v Childs Dining Hall Co. 231 Mass 65, 120 NE 407, 5 ALR 1100.

victualing house. A house where provision is made for strangers to eat; an eating house. Anno: 9 ALR 429.

victuals. Those things which are food for man in themselves or when mixed with something else. Anno: 9 ALR 429. Food ready to eat. Friend v Childs Dining Hall Co. 231 Mass 65, 120 NE 407, 5 ALR 1100, 1105.

victus. (Civil law.) The means of living or support. The vanquished; the unsuccessful party to an action.

Victus victori in expensis condemnandus est. The losing party is adjudged to pay the costs to the successful party.

See 3 Bl Comm 399.

vidame. A title of dignity, next beneath peer. See 1 Bl Comm 403.

vide. See; refer to.

videlicet. That is to say; namely. To wit. Words particularizing a general statement and explaining obscurities therein, without being repugnant to the statement. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1156. A formal statement in a pleading intended to dispense with strict proof. Lindekugel v Spokane, P. & S. R. Co. 149 Or 634, 42 P2d 907, 99 ALR 721.

When any fact alleged in a pleading is preceded by the words "to wit," or "that is to say," such fact is said to be laid under a videlicet. The object of a videlicet is to dispense with strict proof. The office of a videlicet is to note that the party does not undertake to prove the precise circumstances alleged. Lindekugel v Spokane, P. & S. R. Co. 149 Or 634, 42 P2d 907, 99 ALR 72L

The following note of the famous Sergeant Williams is appended to Dakin's Case, 2 Wms. Saund. 290, 291: "So a videlicet may sometimes restrain the generality of the former words, where they are not express and special, but stand indifferent, so as to be capable of being restrained without apparent injury to them; as if lands be granted to a man and his heirs, that is to say, the heirs of his body, it is an estate tail." See Hall v Hall, 84 Vt 259, 78 A 971.

Videtur qui surdus et mutus ne poet faire alienation. He who is deaf and dumb is deemed not to be, able to make an alienation. See Brower v Fisher (NY) 4 Johns Ch 441, 443.

vidimus. We have seen.

vidua. A widow.

vidua regis. The widow of the king; the widow of a tenant in capite.

viduitate. Widowhood.

viduity. Widowhood.

vie. (French.) Life.

See auter vie; cestui que vie; de sa vie; en vie.

vi et armis. With force and arms; that is, with actual violence. Taylor v State, 25 Tenn (6 Humph) 284, 286.

See trespass vi et armis. view. An opinion. The range of vision at a particular place. A prospect. An easement. 26 Am J2d Em D § 175. A negative easement. 25 Am J2d Ease § 8.

See easements of light, air, and view.

view and delivery. A right of common to be exercised only in the places indicated by the owner of the premises.

view by court. A view of the scene of matters involved in an action taken by the judge in a trial to the court without a jury. 53 Am J1st Trial § 1128.

See view of premises.

view by jury. An arranged visit by the jury to the scene of matters involved in the action or of premises involved in the issues of the case, made pursuant to a order of court. 53 Am J1st Trial § 441. In criminal procedure, the taking of the jury, during the trial, to see and examine the place where the crime is alleged to have been committed. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 295. A method of procedure which does not involve the judicial powers of the court at the time it is employed. Carpenter v Carpenter, 78 NH 440, 101 A 62 8.

viewer. A member of a commission locating a highway. 25 Am J1st High § 26. A member of a body appointed by the court to determine the amount of special assessments against properties benefited by the improvement. 49 Am J1st Spec A §§ 140et seq.

See fence viewer.

viewers' report. A report by viewers of their findings and determinations. 22 Am J1st Ferr § 6.

view of frank-pledge. An inspection by the sheriff of the frank-pledges in the district.

view of premises. The acts of the court in departing from the courtroom and examining premises pertinent to the issues of the case. 20 Am J2d Cts § 40. A requisite on the part of an execution officer in making a levy under the writ. 30 Am J2d Exec § 237.

See view by jury.

view of the body. An essential of an inquest conducted by coroner or medical examiner. 18 Am J2d Corn § 11.

The expression means more than looking, seeing, beholding. It means inspection; investigation; an inquiry into the cause of the death. Lancaster County v Holyoke, 37 Neb 328, 55 NW 950.

vigilant. Alert.

The vigilant are aided by equity. 27 Am J2d Equity § 130.

Vigilantibus et non dormientibus acquitas subvenient. Equity comes to the aid of the vigilant, but not to those who slumber.

Vigilantibus, et non dormientibus, jura subveniunt. The laws assist the vigilant and not those who slumber.

To one supinely inattentive to his own concerns, and improvidently and credulously confiding in the naked and interested assertions of another, the maxim emphatically applies. See Bostwick v Mutual Life Ins. Co. 116 Wis 392, 89 NW 538.

Vigilantibus, et non dormientibus servat lex. The law aids the vigilant, but not those who slumber.

The maxim does not apply where the defendant by his assurances put the plaintiff to sleep. Bostwick v Mutual Life Ins. Co. 116 Wis 392, 89 NW 538.

Vigilantibus, et non dormientibus succurunt jura. The laws assist the vigilant, and not those who slumber.

The maxim is grounded on that wise policy of the law which at every turn of life casts upon all persons the duty of exercising some care for their own protection. Bostwick v Mutual Life Ins. Co. 116 Wis 392, 89 NW 538.

Vigilantibus non dormientibus aequitas subvenit. Equity comes to the aid of the vigilant, but not to those who slumber. Doster v Manistee Nat. Bank, 67 Ark 325, 329, 55 SW 137.

Vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subveniunt. The law, and equity as well, aids the vigilant, and not those who slumber upon their rights. Jacob C. Slemmer's Appeal, 58 Pa 168.

vigilia. A vigil; a guard; a watch.

vigore cujus. By the force of which.

viis et modis. By ways and means; by substituted service.

vi laica amovenda. Removing the force of the laity. The purpose of a writ to prevent a layman from entering into a contest or strife between churchmen.

vilis. (Latin.) Cheap. Inferior.

vill. A hamlet or village.

villa. A dwelling house in the country. (Spanish.) A village.

village. A municipal corporation of limited population. A small municipality characterized by business and residential structures reasonably contiguous. State ex rel. Lorenzino v McKinley County, 20 NM 67, 145 P 1083. An assemblage of houses in an area which may be incorporated or unincorporated. 37 Am J1st Mun Corp § 5.

village proper. The actual and physical village for the purpose of taxation. Atherton v Essex Junction, 83 Vt 218, 74 A 1118.

Villana faciunt servitia, sed certa et determinata. They perform villein services, but certain and fixed. See 2 Bl Comm 99.

villanum socagium. Villein socage.

villanus. Same as villein.

ville. See bas-ville.

villein. A tenant of the lowest order in the feudal period. See 2 Bl Comm 22. Possessed by the lord of the manor, the same as one of a flock. Jackson v Phillips, 96 Mass (14 Allen) 539, 562.

villeinage. A kind of estate in land, which was superior to downright slavery, but inferior to every other condition. See 2 Bl Comm 92.

villein in gross. A villein at large; that is, a villein who was annexed to the person of the lord as a sort of body servant. He was transferable by deed from one owner to another, but had no connection with the soil. See 2 Bl Comm 93.

villeinous judgment. An ancient form of judgment in a prosecution for the crime of conspiring to indict an innocent person for a felony. See 4 Bl Comm 136.

villein regardant. A villein annexed to the manor or lands of the lord, not attached to the person of the lord. See 2 Bl Comm 93.

villein services. The services required of a villein by the lord of the manor.

villein socage. Sometimes called privileged villeinage. A kind of villeinage such as has been held of the kings of England since the Norman Conquest.

The services were villein services, but they were fixed and certain; the tenant could not alien but was compelled to surrender to the lord. See 2 Bl Comm 99.

villemous judgment. A judgment which commits the accused to prison and deprives him of certain civil rights. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 616.

Vim A repellere licet. It is lawful to repel force with force.

When an officer transcends his powers, obedience to him may become even an offense. If he is without jurisdiction, then issues the terse command of the maxim. See State v Durham, 141 NC 741, 53 SE 720.

Vim A repellere licet, modo fiat moderamine inculpatae tutelae, non ad sumendam vindictam, sed ad propulsandam injuriam.

It is lawful to repel force with force, but let it be done in the moderate manner of self-defense, not to take revenge, but to repel or ward off injury.

vinculo matrimonii. The bonds of marriage.

vinculum. A chain; a bond.

vinculum personarum ab eodem stipite descendentium. The relation of persons descended from the same stock or common ancestor; Blackstone's definition of "consanguinity." See 2 Bl Comm 202.

vindictory. The part of a statute which imposes punishment or penalty for violation. 50 Am J1st Stat § 151.

vindices injuriarum. The avengers of wrongs, -the king and his courts. See 4 Bl Comm 185.

vindictive damages. Same as exemplary damages. 22 Am J2d Damg § 236.

vine. A plant characterized by tendrils which attach to a wall, trellis, frame, or other support; a cultivated plant of such character, such as grapes. 21 Am J2d Crops § 4.

vineyard. A tract of land whereon grape vines are grown and cultivated.

vinous. Having the character of wine.

vinous liquor. Liquor made from the juice of the grape or of other fruits or berries by the process of fermentation. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 13.

Alcohol may be obtained from all vinous liquors by distillation. See Eureka Vinegar Co. v Gazette Printing Co. (CC Ark) 35 F 570, 572.

vintner. A wine seller.

violate. To break; to infringe; to disobey: as, to violate a statute. To force; to ravish. State v Montgomery, 79 Iowa 737, 739, 45 NW 292.

violation of blockade. A cause under prize law for the forfeiture of ship, and in some cases its cargo, to capture and condemnation. 56 Am J1st War § 174.

To constitute a violation of blockade, three things must be proved: first, the existence of an actual blockade; second, the knowledge of the party supposed to have offended; and third, some act of violation, either by going in or coming out with a cargo laden after the commencement of the blockade. 56 Am J1st War § 175.

violation of law. To fail to observe the law whether by act of commission or omission. State v Case, 53 Mo 246, 250.

In its ordinary sense, the expression includes the violation of a positive law, whether the law is a civil or a criminal law. See Bloom v Franklin Life Ins. Co. 97 Ind 478.

As to what constitutes a "violation of law as to age," within the meaning of the phrase as it appears in an exclusion clause of an automobile insurance policy, see Anno: 72 ALR 1079.

violation of privacy. The actionable wrong of interfering with another person's seclusion by subjecting him to unwarranted and undesired publicity.

The usual form of violation has been the publication of another's name or picture for selfish purposes or for purposes of trade. 41 Am J1st Priv §§ 20 et seq.

violation of sepulcher. A crime, as well as a civil wrong, in disturbing the repose of the dead by an unauthorized exhumation and removal of remains or the desecration of a grave by an act affecting the grave or the body therein interred. 22 Am J2d Dead B § 18.

violation of statute. See violation of law.

violence. Physical force applied so as to injure or damage. Alexander v State, 40 Tex Crim 395, 411, 49 SW 229, 50 SW 716.

The snatching or jerking the property of another from his person, where such property is so attached to his person or clothing as to afford resistance, or all antecedent or contemporaneous struggle over the taking of the property will constitute that violence essential for robbery, but a mere filching of loose property from the pocket with no more force than is necessary to lift and remove the property from the pocket is not a taking by force or violence, and is a mere larceny. See State v Parker, 262 Mo 169, 170 SW 1121.

See physical force; physical violence.

violent. Acting with physical force.

See violence.

violent death. Death caused by an external agency; not occurring in the ordinary course of nature from disease or a wasting of the body.

violent means. An act not occurring in the ordinary course of events, involving the application of force, however slight. Schonberg v New York Life Ins. Co. 235 La 461, 104 So 2d 171.

See accidental means.

violent presumption. A presumption which is very strong and forcible, although not necessarily a conclusive or irrebuttable one.

It is an inference which the law unhesitatingly requires to be drawn from given facts; it is a conclusion quite self-evident from the premises. Shealy & Finn v Edwards, 75 Ala 411, 419.

Viperina est expositio quae corrodit viscera textus. It is a snake-like explanation which gnaws away the vitals of the text.

vir. A man; a husband.

Vires acquirit eundo. It gains strength by continuing.

When a word has been stretched beyond its ordinary legal meaning, it is difficult to know where to stop. Mann v Executors of Mann (NY) 1 Johnson Ch 231, 237.

Vir et uxor consentur in lege una persona. Husband and wife are considered in law as one person.

virgata regia. The verge of the king.

See verge.

Virgin Islands of the United States. A number of islands in the chain of islands separating the Caribbean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean, east of Puerto Rico, the three largest of which are St. Thomas, St. John, and St. Croix, acquired by the United States from Denmark in 1917.

virginitate. Virginité.

viride observantia. See in viride observantia.

[1346]

virilia. The testicles.

virii magnae dignitatis. Men of high rank.

viripotens. Capable of performing the sexual act; the reverse of impotent.

virtual possession. That kind of actual possession consisting of an occupancy in fact of a part of a tract claimed in the name of the whole, where there is sufficient evidence of the bounds of the whole that is claimed as one entirety, and the circumstances are such that the law extends the possession of the part that is occupied to these bounds.

It is so called to distinguish it from the actual possession consisting in an occupancy in fact of the whole of the tract claimed, which is called "substantial possession". Wheeler v Clark, 114 Tenn 117, 85 SW 258.

virtual representation. The principle whereunder members of a class are deemed represented in a suit by one of the class named as a party specifically, although they themselves are not named. 39 Am J1st Parties § 44. A doctrine frequently applied in the case of actions by or against voluntary unincorporated associations or clubs. 6 Am J2d Asso & C § 55.

virtue. Moral excellence. Chastity. Effect. Efficacy.

virtuous. Pure; chaste; undefiled.

virtuous female. A female who has not had sexual intercourse unlawfully, out of wedlock, knowingly and voluntarily. State v Dacke, 59 Wash 238, 109 P 1050.

virtute cuius. By virtue of which.

virtute officii. Characterizing acts of an officer which are within the authority of the officer when properly performed, but which are improperly performed. Haffner v United States F. & G. Co. 35 Idaho 517, 207 P 716.

virtute officii sui. By virtue of his office.

visa. Noun: A stamp of approval, required by some countries, to be affixed to a passport by an authorized officer, usually a consular officer, of the country to be visited. A recognition of the validity of the passport and having otherwise such significance as the country which requires it may attach thereto. United States v Phelps (DC Vt) 14 F2d 679. Verb: To affix a visa to a passport.

vis armata. An armed force.

viscera. The internal organs of the body.

visceribus. The bowels and other internal organs.

viscount. A nobleman ranking next above a baron and next below a count.

The title appears to have been created by Henry the Sixth when in 1439 he made John Beaumont a peer, by the name of Viscount Beaumont. See 1 Bl Comm 398.

vis divina. Divine force, that is, an act of God; vis major.

visé. A term derived from the French for an indorsement upon a passport showing that it has been examined by an officer of the country wherein it is presented in obtaining admittance to the country.

vis et metus. Force and fear.

vis fluminis. The force of the current.

visible. Noticeable; apparent; open; conspicuous. Discoverable; in sight; obvious; manifest; clear; distinct; plain; patent; unmistakable. Perceptible by the eye, apparent or obvious. Anno: 14 ALR 1497.

visible contusion. Any injury to or morbid change in either the subcutaneous tissue or the skin, whether such results directly from external violence operating upon the exterior of the body or from internal injuries resulting from violence. 29A Am J Reved Ins §1173.

visible dirt. Mud, dust, trash, or filth which is open to view, as where it appears in milk. Anno: 122 ALR 1084.

visible easement. See open and visible easement.

visible mark or injury. A perceptible, discernible clear, distinct, and evident mark upon or injury to the body, whether manifest by its abnormal nature or upon observation or examination. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1170.

visible marks of force or violence. Marks clearly evidencing the use of force or violence employed in gaining an entrance to premises. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1336.

visible means of support. Something or someone in sight from which or from whom the obtaining of support is naturally to be presumed, as a farm upon which a person is living or a husband with whom a woman is living.

visible possession. See vis impressa. The original force employed in the commission of a tort or injury done with force.

If the proximate cause of the injury is but a continuation of the original force, or vis impressa, the effect is immediate, and the appropriate remedy is trespass vi et armis. But if the original force, or vis impressa, had ceased to act before the injury commenced, the effect is mediate, and the appropriate remedy is trespass on the case. See Ricker v Freeman, 50 NH 420.

vis inermis. An unarmed force.

vision. Eyesight. Awareness of things to come, particularly of things to be desired in the interest of mankind.

See sight.

visit and search. The right of a belligerent growing out of the greater right of capture, being the right to visit and search a neutral vessel on the high seas for goods of the enemy and contraband of war which such vessel may be carrying. 56AmJ1stWar § 152. The right of an officer of the customs to hail, stop, and board a vessel and to search it and the cargo aboard in the course of enforcing the payment of customs duties. 21 Am J2d Cost & D § 113.

visitation. A form of personal inquiry whereby an administrative agency exercises investigatory or inquisitorial powers, particularly in reference to public institutions such as state hospitals, prisons, and reformatories. 1 Am J2d Admin L § 85. The act of examining into the affairs of a corporation. 19 Am J2d Corp § 1441. The right, referred to in earlier cases, of the founder of a charity or his heirs to a judicial investigation into alleged mismanagement of the trust property. 15 Am J2d Char § 113. The exercise of control by the founder or founders of a college or university over the management of the affairs of the institution. 15 Am J2d Colleges § 10. The right of a parent to visit his child who is in the custody of the guardian, An no: 6 A LR 1150, 1151. The right of divorced parent denied the custody of a minor child to visit such child at such times and places as the court may fix in its decree. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 801. The right provided by a decree annulling a marriage and granting the custody of a child to one of the parties, whereby the other is permitted to visit such child. 4 Am J2d Annul § 103. The right of friends or relatives of an insane person to visit him in the institution in which he is confined. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins Per § 37. The privilege accorded relatives of a person confined in a penal institution of visiting him there.

visitation and search. Same as visit and search.

visitation books. Books kept by attendants upon the military court, called heralds, in which they registered "such marriages and descents as were verified to them on oath" in their regular circuits of the kingdom.

These books were competent evidence in matters of pedigree. See 3 Bl Comm 105.

visitatione Dei. Divine visitation; divine dispensation.

visitor. One who comes upon premises to see the owner or occupant, whether for social, business, or professional reasons. Narrowly defined a person who comes only for health or pleasure: and who engages in no business while visiting, and remains only for a reasonable time. Ex parte Archy, 9 Cal 147, 168. One exercising functions applicable to a right of visitation.

See business visitor; guest; visitation.

visitorial power. A power existing by virtue of a right of visitation.

See visitation.

vis laica. A lay force, a force composed of laymen.

Vis legibus est inimica. Force or violence is the enemy of law.

vis major. A higher force; an irresistible force. An event which cannot be definitely foreseen or controlled. Krause v Board of School Trustees, 162 Ind 278, 284, 70 NE 264.

The Latin expression "vis major," or "force majeure," is not exactly the equivalent of an act of God. The test of "vis major" is whether under the particular circumstances there was such an insuperable interference without the party's intervention as could not have been prevented by the exercise of prudence, diligence, and care; and, unlike an act of God, it may consist, for instance, of governmental intervention resulting from the necessities of war. 1 Am J2d Act of God § 4.

visne. Same as vicinage.

visnetum. Same as vicinage.

visoires. The equivalent of viewers.

vis proxima. Same as vis impressa. visual flight rules. Air traffic rules and regulations applicable to flights at a time when visibility is not impaired by weather conditions or other circumstances. 14 CFR §§ 60.1 et seq.

visus. A view.

visu scriptionis. The observing of the act of writing.

visus firanci plegii. View of frank-pledge.

See view of frank-pledge.

vita. Life.

See in vita.

Vita et membra sunt in potestate legis. Life and limbs are in the power of the law.

vitalized. Endowed with life.

Any human embryo which is not dead is vitalized. It is no less endowed with life before reaching the stage of development known as quickening than after. See State v Patterson, 105 Kan 9, 181 P 609.

vital statistics. Those statistics which have been compiled under public authority relative primarily to the subject of health, but commonly including therein the registrations of births, deaths, marriages, and the like. 25 Am J1st Hlth § 47.

Vital Statistics Act. One of the Uniform Laws. 30 Am J2d Ev §§ 1007, 1009.

vitamin. Air organic substance found in most foods, but in varying amounts, essential to a proper functioning of the human body. A drug where administered or used as a medicine; otherwise a food product. Anno: 98 ALR2d 1088, § 5[b].

vi termini. See ex vi termini.

vitiate. To weaken, particularly in reference to moral stamina. To invalidate.

viticulture. Cultivation of the vine, particularly the grape vine.

vitious intromission. A term of the Scottish law for meddling with the assets left by a decedent. 31 Am 12d Ex & Ad § 661.

vitium clerici. The error or mistake of a clerk; a clerical error.

Vitium clerici nocere non debet. A clerical error ought not to prejudice.

Vitium est quod fugi debet, ne, si rationem non invenias, mox legem sine ratione esse clames. It is a mistake which ought to be avoided, that if you cannot discover the reason, you presently exclaim that the law is without reason.

vitium scriptoris. The error or mistake of a copyist or scribe.

vitreous. Having the nature of or resembling glass.

viva aqua. Living water; flowing water.

viva pecunia. An ancient expression for living things, such as cattle, which are accepted as the equivalent of money.

vivarium. A place for raising wild animals under conditions fairly close to those of their natural environment.

viva voce. The living voice. Word of mouth. Characterizing the testimony of a witness given in person, rather than by deposition or transcript of testimony given in former trial.

See voting viva voce.

vivos. The living. See inter vivos. vivo vadium. Same as vivum vadium.

vivum vadium. Living pledge. An estate which arises where a person borrows a specific sum and grants property to the lender to hold until the rents and profits shall repay the sum so borrowed, whereupon the property reverts to the borrower. Spect v Spect, 88 Cal 437, 26 P 203.

vix. Scarcely; hardly; with difficulty.

Vix ulla lex fieri potest quae omnibus commoda sit, sed si majori parti prospiciat, utilis est. Scarcely any law can be made which is convenient to everyone, but if it provides for the majority, it is of advantage.

vixen. A common scold. 15 Am J2d Com S § 2.

viz. An abbreviation of videlicet, meaning namely; that is to say.

vocabula artis. Words of art; technical terms.

Vocabula artium explicanda sunt secundum definitiones prudentium. Technical terms should be explained according to the definitions of experienced persons.

vocans. A voucher; a person who vouches for someone else.

vocare. To call; to summon.

vocat. Called; summoned.

vocation. A trade, profession, occupation, or calling, whether lawful or unlawful. Anno: 43 ALR 800; 50 ALR 1176.

vocational rehabilitation. Training to restore physical ability and earning power, as well as the capacity to enjoy life, of persons who have been disabled by injury or sickness. A primary project for the benefit of disabled members and veterans of the Armed Forces. 56 Am J1st Vet & V A § 15.

vocatus. One who has been called or summoned; a person who has been vouched for; a vouchee.

vociferatio. Hue and cry.
See hue and cry.

vociferous. Clamorous; noisy; as, vociferous heralds. With great noise in calling, shouting, etc. Anderson v State (Tex Crim) 20 SW 358, 359.

vociferous demand. A demand asserted in loud and boisterous language, sometimes constituting a breach of the peace, especially where tainted by profanity. 12 Am J2d Breach P § 35.

void. Noun: An empty space. Adjective: Constituting a nullity. Binding on neither party and not subject to ratification. Anno: 31 ALR 1002. Sometimes construed as "voidable." Hall v Baylous, 109 W Va 1, 153 SE 293, 69 ALR 527.

The words "to be void and of no effect" are often used in statutes and legal documents, such as deeds, leases, bonds, mortgages and others, in the sense of voidable, merely, that is, capable of being avoided, and not as meaning that the act or transaction is absolutely a nullity as if it never had existed, incapable of giving rise to any rights or obligations under any circumstances. Thus we speak of conveyances, void as to creditors, meaning that creditors may avoid them, but not others. Leases which contain a forfeiture of the lessee's estate for non-payment of rent, or breach of other condition, declare that on the happening of the contingency the demise shall thereupon become null and void, meaning that the forfeiture may be enforced by re-entry, at the option of the lessor. A deed obtained by fraud is sometimes said to be void, meaning that the party defrauded may elect to treat it as void. Ewell v Dags, 108 US 143, 149, 27 L Ed 682, 684, 2 S Ct 408.

A statutory provision that, in the absence of compliance therewith, a sale in bulk shall be "void" as against creditors of the seller, means that the sale shall be voidable. Evans v Herbranson, 241 Iowa 268, 41 NW2d 113, 15 ALR2d 925.

voidable. Defective but capable of confirmation or ratification. 50 Am J1st Stat § 287. Obligatory as to other persons until disaffirmed by the person entitled to confirm or disaffirm. Anno: 31 ALR 1002.

voidable assignment. An assignment by a debtor which is fraudulent as to creditors hindered or delayed thereby in reference to realization upon their claims. 6 Am J2d Assign for Crs § 63.

See voidable preference.

voidable contract. A contract which, although defective so as to be avoided by one of the parties, is valid and binding until it is avoided by a disaffirmance. Williston, Contracts 3d ed § 15; Restatement, Contracts § 113; 17 Am J2d Contr § 7.

The view of some authorities that an executory contract of an infant is invalid until confirmed has been adversely criticized, and in some jurisdictions there are statutes to the effect that both executed and executory agreements of an infant are valid until disaffirmed. 27 Am J1st Inf § 12.

voidable deed. An instrument which, although defective, is operative to convey the property until set aside by the court. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 137.

voidable judgment. A judgment which is apparently valid, but in truth wanting in some material respect; in other words, a judgment which is erroneous. Southern Surety Co. v Texas Oil Clearing House (Tex Com App) 281 SW 1045, 1046. A judgment which, because of defect, is subject to being reversed, vacated, or superseded but which is binding everywhere until a successful attack has been made upon it. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 44.

voidable lien. A lien which is subject to disaffirmance by the lienee. A lien given by a bankrupt which may be avoided at the instance of his trustee in bankruptcy.

See fraudulent transfer; voidable preference.

voidable marriage. A marriage which, although prohibited by law, or subject to annulment, under the circumstances, may be made legal and binding upon both parties through subsequent ratification by the parties. 35 Am J1st Mar §§ 46, 85 et seq.

voidable preference. A preferential transfer made by an insolvent within such period of time prior to insolvency proceedings as to render the transfer voidable under insolvency laws. 29 Am J Rev ed Insolv § 82. A transfer of property by one since adjudicated a bankrupt which is subject to avoidance so as to permit the trustee in bankruptcy to recover for the estate the assets thus transferred. 9 Am J2d Bankr §§ 1056 et seq.

For statement of elements of a voidable preference under the Bankruptcy Act, see 9 Am J2d Bankr § 1057.

voidable process. Process which is defective but amendable so as to be rendered fully effective by correction of the defects therein. 42 Am J1st Proc § 20.

voidable release. A release which is binding until set aside for cause such as infancy, mental incompetency, or fraudulent representation. 45 Am J1st Rel § 17.

void agreement. See void contract.

voidance. A vacancy. Ejection from a benefice.

void as to creditors. Voidable as to creditors. 37 Am J2d Frd Conv § 106.

void contract. An absolute nullity from the contractual aspect. The equivalent of no contract at all. Williston, Contracts 3d ed § 15; 17 Am J2d Contr § 7. A contract which cannot be validated by ratification or other act or omission. 17 Am J2d Contr § 7.

void deed. A deed which is invalid in law for any purpose whatsoever. 23 Am J2d Deeds § 137.

void divorce. A divorce absolutely ineffective in severing the marital relation.

See void judgment.

void grant. A patent or other grant of public lands which is absolutely inoperative for want of title in the government or want of authority to convey. 42 Am J1st Pub L § 38.

voiding. Declaring void that which is voidable. Emptying.

void judgment. A judgment which in legal effect is no judgment; a judgment under which no rights are acquired or divested; a judgment which neither binds nor bars anyone. Stafford v Gallope, 123 NC 19, 21, 31 SE 265. A judgment which because of want of jurisdiction is entitled to no respect whatever but may be entirely disregarded or declared inoperative by any court in which effect is sought to be given to it. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 45. A judgment which is an absolute nullity, so that its invalidity may be asserted upon either direct or collateral attack by any person whose rights are affected, at any time and at any place. Southern Surety Co. v Texas Oil Clearing House (Tex Com App) 281 SW 1045, 1046.

void marriage. A marriage absolutely prohibited by law and not subject to ratification. A marriage which is expressly declared a nullity ab initio by statute. 35 Am J1st Mar § 46.

void process. Process which is defective to the extent of being a nullity and not amendable, either because in violation of statute which prohibits it or because it is not in substantial compliance with statutory requirements. 42 Am J1st Proc § 20. Such process as the court has no power to award, or has not acquired jurisdiction to issue in the particular case, or which does not in some material respect comply in form with the legal requisites of such process, or which loses its vitality in consequence of noncompliance with a condition subsequent, obedience to which is rendered essential. Fischer v Langbein, 103 NY 84, 90, 8 NE 251.

void release. A release which is forged, prohibited by express statute, contrary to public policy, or given by one without power to grant a release. 45 Am J1st Rel § 17.

void tax. A tax imposed without basis in law, as where the statute under which it is levied is unconstitutional or so indefinite, uncertain, or inconsistent as to be entirely inoperative. 51 Am J1st Tax § 303. A tax which never had any effect, which never created any lien or raised any obligation to pay.

A void tax is no tax. It is as if there never had been any attempt at assessment. The owner of property is under no duty, either at law or in equity, to pay it. There is no equitable reason for requiring the owner to pay such a tax before a cloud upon his title made by a tax sale shall be removed. Morrill v Lovett, 95 Me 165, 49 A 666.

voir dire. To speak the truth. An oath administered to one called as a witness or juror preliminary to an examination of him in reference to his qualifications or disqualifications as witness or juror. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 136.

voir dire examination. The examination of a prospective juror by a litigant, usually through the latter's counsel, for the purpose of determining whether such prospective juror is qualified to act as a juror and for the further purpose of aiding the litigant in the exercise of his peremptory challenges. 31 Am J Rev ed Jury § 136. The preliminary examination of one called as a witness to determine competency. 58 Am J1st Witn § 211.

voiture. (French.) Carriage; coach; vehicle.

voiturier. (French.) Carrier. One engaged in transportation.

volatile estates. Movables of a solid character, such as tables and other heavy furniture. See 2 Bl Comm 428.

volens. Willing, but not necessarily wishing.

It is said in the Kambour Case, 77 NH at page 47, that "volens means wishing, not willing; and it by no means follows from the fact that a person is willing to chance being injured, that he wishes, or even is willing to be injured." Whether volens means wishing rather than willing may be questioned, but if one may be willing to chance being injured, he at least is willing to be injured rather than not take the chance of it, for otherwise his action would not be taken. Smith v Twin State Gas & Electric Co. 83 NH 439, 61 ALR 1015, 144 A 57.

volenti non fit injuria. One is not legally injured if he has consented to the act complained of or was willing that it should occur. Anno: 17 ALR2d 348, § 3. The maxim upon which the principal of assumption of risk is based. 35 Am J1st M & S § 293.

The maxim is frequently applied to a plaintiff who is complaining of a nuisance to which he voluntarily exposed himself. 39 Am J1st Nuis § 196. If a vendee blindly trusts where he should not and closes his eyes where ordinary prudence requires him to see, he is willing to be deceived, and the maxim applies. 55 Am J1st V & P § 67.

volition. Choice or determination by one's own will.

See rational volition.

volitional insanity. Irresistible impulse. 26 Am J1st Homi §§ 78, 80.

volo. I will; I wish.

Volstead Act. The federal statute which established national prohibition of the liquor traffic under the Eighteenth Amendment to the [1350]

United States Constitution. 41 Stat at Large 305 Ch 83; Anno: 10 ALR 1553.

volt. The unit of force of an electric current; the force which causes a current of I ampere to flow through a conductor whose resistance is I ohm. Peoria Water Works Co. v Peoria R. Co. (CC 111) 181 F 990.

voltage. The force of electricity expressed in a given number of volts. Harrison v Kansas City Electric Light Co. 198 Mo 606, 93 SW 951.

See volt.

Voluit sed non dixit. He willed but he did not say.

volume. A book, especially one of a set of books, as Volume 14 of American Jurisprudence, 2d. Quantity in bulk or mass. Amount of space in cubic contents.

volumus. We will; we wish.

voluntarily. Freely. Of one's own accord.

When used in its ordinary sense, the word means "willingly," or "without compulsion," but it sometimes means more than this; and whenever in order to make a statute effective it is necessary to construe the word "voluntarily" as implying knowledge, it is the duty of the court to so construe it. Sweeney v Sweeney, 96 Vt 196, 118 A 882, 26 ALR 1066, 1067.

voluntarius daemon. A person who is voluntarily demented, a person who has become voluntarily intoxicated.

voluntary. Intended. Not by compulsion or by accident. Anno: 2 ALR 62.

voluntary abandonment. See voluntary separation.

voluntary admission. See voluntary statement.

voluntary affidavit. An affidavit made on an occasion where the law does not require a sworn statement. See 4 Bl Comm 137.

voluntary appearance. An appearance in an action by a defendant in person or through his attorney, the effect of which is a waiver of the service of summons or other formal notice. Harrison v Morton, 87 Md 671, 674, 40 A 897.

voluntary assignment. A transfer, without compulsion of law, by a debtor, of his property to an assignee, in trust, to apply the same, or the proceeds thereof, to the payment of his debts, and to return the surplus, if any, to the debtor. Farwell v Nilsson, 133 111 45, 49, 24 NE 74.

voluntary assignment for creditors. See voluntary assignment.

voluntary association. An unincorporated society or body of individuals, formed for social, political, moral, religious, benevolent, protective, or mutual purposes, or to promote some public, scientific or educational object, or to facilitate business, and not for purposes of trade or direct pecuniary profit. 40 Am J1st Partn § 7. An association in which one may seek, or be accepted into, membership as a matter of choice.

If membership is required by law, such as in the case of some public officers or employees, or if membership in a professional society is necessary, in a substantial sense, for the practice of one's profession, such an organization is not voluntary. 6 Am J2d Asso & C § 1.

voluntary assumption of risk. See assumption of risk.

voluntary bankruptcy. Bankruptcy instituted by an adjudication upon the petition of a debtor seeking such an adjudication. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 175.

voluntary bond. A bond executed by a public officer where no constitutional or statutory provision requires a bond of him. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 411.

voluntary cohabitation. As a defense to an action for annulment of a marriage, cohabitation with knowledge of all essential facts relied upon as the ground for annulment. Sampson v Sampson, 332 Mich 214, 50 NW2d 764.

voluntary confession. See confession.

voluntary conveyance. See voluntary deed.

voluntary deed. A deed executed and given without consideration. As to creditors, a conveyance made without any consideration or for an unsubstantial consideration. 37 Am J2d Frd Conv § 23.

A voluntary grant, within the meaning of a statute declaring that realty received by a railroad by voluntary grant shall be held and used for the purpose of such grant only, means a conveyance without valuable consideration. Brown v Weare, 348 Mo 135, 152 SW2d 649, 136 ALR 286.

voluntary deposit. (Civil law.) A deposit effected by the mere consent of the parties.

voluntary discontinuance. The dismissal of an action or the taking of a nonsuit by the plaintiff. 24 Am J2d Dism § 2.

voluntary dissolution. The dissolution of a corporation upon a vote of the stockholders, subject to statutory conditions respecting the percentage of the stock voted in favor of dissolution, or at the instance of the directors with the consent of a certain proportion of the stockholders. 19 Am J2d Corp §§ 1596 et seq.

See voluntary liquidation.

voluntary domicil. A domicil which a person acquires voluntarily, as distinguished from a domicil by operation of law, as in the case of a married woman or infant.

voluntary escape. An escape of a prisoner occurring where an officer having the prisoner lawfully in his custody voluntarily permits him to escape or go at large. 27 Am J2d Escape § 22.

voluntary expatriation. See expatriation.

voluntary exposure to danger. Intentionally doing some act which reasonable and ordinary prudence would pronounce dangerous.

The approach to an unknown and unexpected danger does not make the act a voluntary exposure thereto. The result of the act does not necessarily determine the motive which prompted the action. The act may be voluntary, yet the exposure may be involuntary. The danger being unknown, the injury is accidental. Equitable Acci. Ins. Co. v Osborn, 90 Ala 201, 9 So 869.

voluntary grant. See voluntary deed.

voluntary ignorance. The failure to make a reasonable use of a means readily available for obtaining information. 37 Am J2d Fraud § 248.

voluntary license. Same as simple license.

voluntary liquidation. The closing of a solvent bank and the liquidation of the business pursuant to the vote of the stockholders holding a certain percentage (usually 2/3) of the shares of the bank. 10 Am J2d Banks §828.

See voluntary dissolution.

[1351]

voluntary manslaughter. A homicide, in which the act of killing, although intentional, is committed under the influence of passion or in heat of blood, produced by an adequate or reasonable provocation and before a reasonable time has elapsed for the blood to cool and reason to resume its habitual control, such act not being the result of wickedness of heart, cruelty, or recklessness of disposition. 26 Am J1st Homi § 19.

voluntary nonsuit. A judgment given against the plaintiff when he fails to appear as required of him, or where he refuses or neglects to proceed to the trial of a case after it has been put in issue. 24 Am J2d Dism § 3. A nonsuit which is entered against a plaintiff when he throws up his case and consents to a judgment in favor of the defendant for costs.

The plaintiff has the right to do this at any time before the jury retires, or if there is no jury, at any time before the decision is announced. See Sandoval v Rosser, 86 Tex 682, 686, 26 SW 933.

voluntary oath. See voluntary affidavit.

voluntary overexertion. Conscious and intentional overexertion or a reckless disregard of consequences likely to ensue from great physical effort. Rustin v Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 58 Neb 792, 79 NW 712.

voluntary partition. A partition of real estate made by the owners of undivided interests by mutual consent, effected by mutual conveyances or releases to each person of the share which he is to hold, executed by the other owner or owners. 40 Am J1st Partit § 16.

voluntary payment. A payment of an illegal demand, with a full knowledge of all the facts which render the demand illegal, without an immediate and urgent necessity therefor, unless it is to release his person or property from detention or to prevent an immediate seizure of his person or property.

A payment is not to be regarded as compulsory unless made to emancipate the person or property from an actual and existing duress, imposed by the parties to whom the money is paid, and if a payment is otherwise voluntary, the fact that a person making a payment files a written protest at the time does not change its character. 40 Am J1st Paym § 159.

In determining whether a payment of taxes was voluntary or involuntary the real question is whether there was such an immediate and urgent necessity for the payment as to imply that it was made under compulsion. Without such an immediate and urgent necessity, such a payment will be deemed voluntary. United States v New York & C. Mail S. S. Co. 200 US 488, 50 L Ed 569, 26 S Ct 327.

A payment of taxes may be voluntary, although made unwillingly. Anno: 64 ALR 11, s. 84 ALR 294.

It is well established in the absence of statute that the right of a party who has paid a tax, local assessment, or license fee, to recover the same back, depends upon whether or not the payment was voluntary. If the payment was voluntary it cannot be recovered back; if it may be deemed involuntary a recovery may be had. A payment is voluntary in the sense that no action lies to recover back the amount, not only where it is made willingly and without objection, but in all cases where there is no compulsion or duress, or any necessity of making the payment as a means of saving the property from legal restraint or the grasp of legal process. Anno: 84 ALR 294.

Where a taxpayer pays taxes before their payment can be enforced by distraint or the imposition of other penalties, such premature payment has been held to be a voluntary payment and therefore not recoverable, even though the taxes were invalid. Canard S.S. Co. v Elting (CA2 NY) 97 F2d 373.

See volunteer.

voluntary payment of taxes. See voluntary payment.

voluntary peonage. An antithetical expression.

Peonage is sometimes classed as voluntary or involuntary, but this implies simply a difference in the mode of origin, none in the character of the servitude. The one exists where the debtor voluntarily contracts to enter the service of his creditor. The other is forced upon the debtor by some provision of law. But peonage, however created, is compulsory service,-involuntary servitude. The peon can release himself therefrom, it is true, by the payment of the debt, but otherwise the service is enforced. A clear distinction exists between peonage and the voluntary performance of labor or rendering of services in payment of a debt. In the latter case the debtor, though contracting to pay his indebtedness by labor or service, and subject like any other contractor to an action for damages for a breach of that contract, can elect at any time to break it, and no law or force compels performance or a continuance of the service. Ex parte Hollman, 79 SC 9, 60 SE 19.

voluntary petition. A petition in bankruptcy wherein petitioner asks that he be adjudicated a bankrupt. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 207.

voluntary reorganization. The reorganization of a corporation by the voluntary action of the stockholders and creditors, or, where statute permits, by the creditors and a prescribed percentage of the stockholders. 19 Am J2d Corp §§ 1518 et seq.

voluntary sacrifice. An element of liability to contribution in general average.

To satisfy the requirement of a voluntary sacrifice, that there may be a general average contribution toward a marine loss, it is not enough that there be a deliberate intent to do an act that may or may not lead to a loss; there must be a purpose to sacrifice the thing at all events, or at least to put it in a situation in which the danger of eventual destruction is increased. 48 Am J1st Ship § 627.

voluntary self-destruction. The taking of one's own life purposely and intentionally. Courtemanche v Independent Order of Foresters, 136 Mich 30, 98 NW 749.

voluntary separation. A common ground of divorce provided by statute, the condition being a separation that is voluntary, on the part of at least one of the parties, not forced as would be the case if the husband was inducted into the Armed Forces or confined in prison. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 151.

voluntary settlement. A dissolution and winding up of the affairs of a partnership, effected by the partners without court action.

See compromise; settlement; voluntary payment.

voluntary statement. A statement by the accused in a criminal prosecution, proceeding from the spontaneous suggestion of his own mind, free from the influence of any extraneous disturbing cause.

A reason why admissions by defendants are only admissible when voluntary is that they should be received with great caution. because they may not be true, for the mind of an accused, when oppressed by the calamity of his situation, is often influenced, by hope or fear, to make an untrue statement, when, as a matter of fact, the truth would be better. Tuttle v People, 33 Colo 243, 79 P 1035.

See confession.

voluntary stranding. The stranding of his ship by the master to save the ship and her cargo from the greater expense which her sinking then imminent would cause. Fowler v Rathbone (US) 12 Wall 102, 20 L Ed 281, 285.

voluntary transfer. See voluntary assignment; voluntary deed.

voluntary trust. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another. Bath Sav. Institution v Hathorn, 88 Me 122, 33 A 836.

voluntary validity. The effect of a tacit or implied consent of the parties to continue in force a compact which one of them has breached.

voluntary waste. Waste committed by acts of commission such as destroying, altering, or removing buildings, or cutting down trees, as distinguished from the mere failure to exercise care to preserve and protect the estate. 56 Am J1st Waste § 4.

voluntary withdrawal. A termination of employment at the instance of the employee. Quitting the service of the employer. 35 Am J1st M & S § 26.

voluntas. Will; intent; intention; a will; a testament.

Voluntas donatoris in charta doni sui manifeste expressa observetur. The will or intention of the donor which is clearly expressed in his deed of gift should be observed.

Voluntas et proposition distinguunt maleficia. The intent and the purpose distinguish offenses.

Voluntas facit quod in testamento scriptum valeat. (Civil law.) The intention is that which makes valid the writing in a will.

Voluntas in delictis non exitus spectatur. In crimes, the intent, and not the result, is regarded.

Voluntas pro facto. The will for the deed.

Voluntas pro facto reputatur. The will is regarded as the deed. Commonwealth v Barlow, 4 Mass 439.

Voluntas regis in curia, non in camera. The will of the king in court, not in his chamber.

Voluntas reputabitur pro facto. The intent is to be regarded as the act.

"In some Year Books of the fourteenth century we find our lawyers appealing to . . . a dangerous maxim." See 2 Pollocks & Maitland's History of English Law p 475, note.

Voluntas reputatur pro facto. The will is regarded as the deed. See Broom's Legal Maxims 311.

Voluntas testatoris ambulatoria est usque ad mortem. The will of the testator is changeable up to the moment of his death.

Voluntas testatoris habet interpretationem latam et benignam. The intention of the testator should have a broad and liberal interpretation.

Voluntas testatoris pro lege habetur. The will of the testator is regarded as the law. The intention of the testator is the law of the case. Panaud v Jones, 1 Cal 488, 511.

Voluntas ultima testatoris est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam. The last will of a testator should be carried out according to his true intention.

voluntate. See ex voluntate.

volunteer. One who enlists in one of the Armed Forces of his own volition, not under the compulsion of a military draft. One who works for another without engagement of services. One, who, without duty, moral or otherwise, pays the debt or discharges the obligation of another. 50 Am J1st Subro § 21. One who pays a debt, although not a party to, or interested in, the contract or transaction in which the debt arose. 40Am J1st Paym § 22.

One who pays the debt of another to protect an interest of his own is not a volunteer and is therefore entitled to subrogation. McMillan v O'Brien, 219 Cal 775, 29 P2d 183, 91 ALR 383.

See voluntary payment.

vote. Verb: To express one's choice for a candidate or for or against a proposition submitted at an election. Anno: 14 ALR 1262. The choice expressed by a voter at an election, whether in reference to candidates or a proposition submitted to the voters. The exercise of the right of suffrage. Anno: 14 ALR 1262. The entire number of votes cast at an election.

See preferential voting; proportional representation; suffrage.

vote of the people. A plurality or majority vote, as the case may be, of the qualified electors.

In statutes providing for the issuance of bonds when authorized by "a vote of the people," the words "authorized by the vote" can but mean by a majority, as there are but two answers to be made to the question submitted,-an affirmative and a negative one; and, to be authorized, the matter of the proposition must receive the greater number or majority of the votes. It could not be a plurality, as might be when there are more than two candidates for office, and the one receiving the highest number of votes is elected, but may not have received a majority of the votes. The word "people," as used here, must mean "electors" or "voters. Bryan v Stephenson, 50 Neb 620, 70 NW 252.

voter. One who expresses his choice of candidates or measures offered or proposed at an election by marking a ballot or indicating his choice by appropriate act upon a voting machine. One possessing the legal qualifications of an elector, so as to be entitled to vote. Re Denny, 150 Ind 104, 59 NE 359.

See elector.

votes cast at election. The number of voters voting. Gottstein v Lister, 88 Wash 462. 153 P 595.

In the absence of a certification of the number of electors voting, the court must presume that the highest number of votes cast for candidates for any one office represents the number of electors voting. State ex rel. Howie v Brantley, 113 Miss 786, 74 So 662.

In ascertaining whether a school bond issue has been approved by the requisite two-thirds of the qualified voters voting thereon, void ballots are not to be considered as voting thereon, even though in tabulating the result of the election the canvassing board has included them in its total of ballots cast. Anno: 4 ALR2d 612.

As to whether the majority vote required for the adoption of a proposition or measure submitted at a general election is to be determined on the basis of the entire vote cast upon such proposition or measure or the total number of votes cast at the election, see 26 Am J2d Elect § 311. voting. See vote.

voting agreement. An agreement between the stockholders of a corporation, sometimes called a pooling agreement, intended to combine votes with a view to concerted action for a common object, and which control the votes of one or more of the parties by limiting their voting rights or conferring them upon others. 19 Am J2d Corp § 680.

See voting trust.

voting booth. The place provided in an election precinct or district for holding the election. A booth which can be transported on the street as need arises for its use in a particular ward, district, or precinct. The space provided at the polls for the purpose of enabling the voter to cast his vote in secrecy.

voting by ballot. The method of implementing constitutional and statutory requirements for secrecy in voting.

In common speech, the word "ballot" is used to mean the ticket used in voting; the act of voting; the result of voting. But from earliest times "voting by ballot" has been a term used to contradistinguish open, viva voce, or public voting, and secret voting. "The material guaranty of the provision of the (state) constitution, that all elections by the people shall be by ballot, is inviolable secrecy as to the person for whom an elector shall vote." People ex rel. Detroit v Board of Inspectors of Election, 139 Mich 549, 102 NW 1029.

Voting by New Residents in Presidential Election Act. One of the uniform laws. 25 Am J2d Elect § 69.

voting contest. A contest conducted by a mercantile establishment for the purpose of increasing sales, ballots being given with purchases, the same to be used in voting for someone, usually a girl, as the most popular person. National Sales Co. v Manciet, 83 Or 34, 162 P 1055.

voting district. See election district.

voting hours. The period of time on election day during which qualified voters may vote, such being determined by statute.

voting illegally. See illegal voting.

voting machine. A machine used by voters in expressing their choice of candidates or their preference for or against propositions or measures submitted at an election, the same keeping the totals of the votes cast for the various candidates and measures, so that, at the closing of the polls, the results may be obtained by the election inspectors upon opening the machine. 26 Am J2d Elect § 232.

voting precinct. Same as election district.

Voting Rights Act. A federal statute enacted in 1965, prohibiting any state or political subdivision from imposing or applying any voting qualification or prerequisite to voting, or any standard, practice, or procedure, denying the right of any citizen of the United States to vote on account of race or color, such prohibition applying to all types of elections, federal, state, and local. 42 USC § 1973.

voting thereon. See votes cast at election.

voting trust. Simply stated, a device whereby persons owning stock with voting powers divorce the voting rights thereof from the ownership, retaining the latter to all intents and purposes and transferring the former to trustees in whom the voting rights of all depositors in the trust are pooled. Smith v Biggs Boiler Works Co. 33 Del Ch 183, 91 A2d 193, 34 ALR2d 1125.

A trust created by an agreement between a group of the stockholders of a corporation and the trustee or by a group of identical agreements between individual stockholders and a common trustee, whereby it is provided that for a term of years, or for a period contingent upon a certain event, or until the agreement is terminated, control over the stock owned by such stockholders, either for certain purposes or for all purposes, is to be lodged in the trustee, either with or without a reservation to the owners, or persons designated by them, of the power to direct how such control shall be used. Annotation: 98 ALR2d 379, § 1[d]; 19 Am J2d Corp § 685.

The term generally contemplates the transfer of corporate stock to trustees, the issuance of new stock certificates to trustees, and the issuance by them of trust certificates to the beneficial owners of the stock, with the right to vote in the trustees and the right to receive dividends in the trust certificate holders. Anno: 105 ALR 124.

voting viva voce. Voting publicly; voting without secrecy in respect of the exercise of choice. 26 Am J2d Elect § 234.

vouch. To give assurance as to the honesty and ability of another. To affirm the truth of a statement. To give one's testimony.

The word "witness" in its strict legal sense, means one that gives evidence in a cause before a court; and the phrase "vouched by witnesses," seems to import the same as "testified by witnesses" called into court, and in this sense, a note subscribed by two persons as and for witnesses, cannot be said to be vouched by two witnesses, until those persons are vouched, or called and do testify before the court respecting it. See Barker v Coit (Conn) 1 Root 224, 225.

See vouching in.

vouched by witnesses. See vouch.

vouchee. A person who is called or summoned-, a person who is called upon to defend the title to land under a warranty of title. One for whom another vouches.

voucher. A receipt or other evidence of payment. An account book in which charges and acquittances are entered. Whitwell v Willard, 42 Mass 216, 218. A cancelled check. 40 Am J1st Paym § 288. A written instrument which attests, warrants, maintains, and bears witness. State v Hickman, 8 NJL 299, 301. Most literally, one who vouches.

When used in connection with the disbursement of moneys, the word implies some written or printed instrument in the nature of a receipt, note, account, bill of particulars, or something of that character which shows on what account or by what authority a particular payment has been made, and which may be kept or filed away by the party receiving it, for his own convenience or protection, or that of the public. People v Swigert, 107 111 494, 504.

See vouch.

vouching in. The practice whereby persons liable over to a defendant are brought into the action as parties of record having opportunity to defend. 30A Am J Rev ed Judgm § 417. Requesting one bound by a covenant of warranty to defend the title.

vox Dei. The voice of God.

Vox ernissa volat; litera scripta manet. Speech flies away; written letters endure. See Broom's Legal Maxims 666.

vox et preterea nihil. Voice and nothing more; that is, nothing but wind. See Mitchell v Hazen, 4 Conn 495.

Vox populi vox Dei. The voice of the people is the voice of God.

voyage. A long journey, particularly by ship or aircraft. The sailing of a vessel from one port or place to another port or place.

The purpose for which the voyage is to be conducted, whether for trading, freighting, or fishing, is often mentioned in marine policies, but this mention or designation cannot vary or extend the voyage as described in the policy, unless some usage connected with the particular business is shown. Burgess v Equitable Marine Ins. Co. 126 Mass 70.

voyage policy. A policy of marine insurance which establishes the duration of the risk by specifying the voyage, setting out the termini or places of beginning and termination, as from one port to another. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 324.

voyeur. (French.) A pervert, the perversion being in obtaining sexual gratification in looking at an exposed body or sexual scene.

vs. An abbreviation of versus.

vulcanization. The process whereby crude rubber is converted to a form fit for use in the manufacture of tires and other products of industry, one type of such process being known to the trade as "cold vulcanization." Vultex Corp. v Heveatex Corp. (CAI Mass) 100 F2d 838.

vulgar. Unrefined. Wanting in culture. Lack of taste in language, particularly in using coarse and indecent terms.

vulgaris opinio. Common opinion or repute.

vulgaris purgatio. Common purgation, -the judicium Dei, that is, the trial by water-ordeal or fire-ordeal was often called vulgaris purgatio to distinguish it from the canonical purgation, which was by the oath of the accused. See 4 Bl Comm 342.

See judicium Dei.

vulgarity. The state of being vulgar.

See vulgar.

vulgar purgation. Same as vulgaris purgatio.

Vulgate Edition. An edition of the Year Books, otherwise known as the Folio Edition or Edition of 1679.

See Year Books.

vulgo concepi. Bastards.

vulgo quaesiti. (Latin.) A term of the civil law for offspring of promiscuous cohabitation; children who are said to be children of the people, for the reason that identification of the father or fathers is impossible.

vulva. The external female genitals. State v Wisdom, 122 Or 148, 257 P 826.

W

W. Abbreviation of west.

Wū. Abbreviation of West One-half, used frequently in describing land according to the government survey.

WAAC. Abbreviation of Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, which was replaced by the Women's Army Corps.

WAC. Abbreviation of Women's Army Corps.

wadia. Same as guadia.

WAF. Abbreviation of Women in the Air Force.

wage. Verb: To conduct or carry on. Noun: A return for services.

See wages.

Wage and Hour Law. The federal statute regulating the hours and wages of employees engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce. 29 USC §§ 201 et seq.

wage continuation plan. See sick pay.

wage-earner. Literally, one who earns wages. For the purpose of the exception from involuntary adjudication in bankruptcy, an individual who works for wages, salary, or hire at a rate of compensation not exceeding $1,500 per year. Bankruptcy Act § 1(32); 11 USC § 1(32). For the purposes of eligibility to relief under the Bankruptcy Act by a wage-earner's plan, an individual whose principal income is derived from wages, salary, or commissions, without reference to the amount. Bankruptcy Act § 606(8); 11 USC § 1006(8); 9 Am J2d Bankr § 1387.

wage-earner's plan. A proceeding provided by Chapter XIII of the Bankruptcy Act, the function of which is to assist the financial rehabilitation of a debtor who qualifies as a wage-earner, without adjudicating him a bankrupt. 9 Am J2d BanKr §§ 1382 et seq.

wage his law. See trial by wager of law.

wager. An agreement or stipulation to the effect that the parties shall gain or lose upon the happening of an uncertain event, in which event they have no interest except that arising from the possibility of such gain or loss. 24 Am J1st Gaming § 2. In common terms, a bet or gamble.

As the synonymous words "wager" and "bet" are used in criminal statutes, they do not import the kind of agreement contemplated by the law of contracts under which there must be an actual meeting of the minds of the contracting parties in order to form an agreement. So to hold would allow the defendants to escape punishment in all cases in which feigned accomplices were employed to detect them and in which there is no evidence against the defendants except the testimony of feigned accomplices. People v Ghio, 82 Cal App 28, 255 P 205.

wagering contract. An insurance policy not supported by an insurable interest on the part of the insured. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins §§ 432 et seq. An ordinary gambling contract.

See gambling contract.

wagering gain. A gain in winning a wager. Jennings v Commissioner (CA5 Tex) 110 F2d 945.

wager insurance policy. Same as wager policy.

wager of battel. See trial by wager of battel.

wager of law. See trial by wager of law.

wager of law of nonsummons. A form of a plea in a real action.

wager policy. A contract Purporting to be one of insurance but which does not qualify as such for want of a sufficient insurable interest. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 434. A gambling policy; for example, a policy of life insurance wherein the person for whose use the policy was issued has no pecuniary interest in the life of the insured. Gambis v Covenant Mut. Life Ins. Co. 50 Mo 44, 47.

Under the doctrine of wager life insurance policies, it is widely held to be against public policy to permit speculation in human life by allowing one having no insurable interest in the life of another to secure for himself as beneficiary a policy of insurance on such life. Butterworth v Mississippi Valley Trust Co. 362 Mo 133, 240 SW2d 676, 30 ALR2d 1298.

wages. Compensation for manual labor, skilled or unskilled, paid at stated times, and measured by the day, week, month, or season. Sums paid as hire or reward to domestic or menial servants, artisans, mechanics, laborers, and other employees of like class, as distinguished from the compensation of clerks, officers of corporations, and public officers. 35 Am J1st M & S § 63. Compensation paid one for personal services of some kind. 22 Am J1st Exemp § 65. Anything constituting a reward for a workman's labor, whether the pay is by the hour, the day, the week, the month, or by the job or piece. 9 Am J2d Bankr § 537. (Pertaining to priority of wage claim.) Inclusive of board, lodging, or "other facilities" customarily furnished by an employer to his employees. 29 USC § 203(m). (Definition of Fair Labor Standards Act.) All remuneration payable for personal services, including commissions, bonuses, and gratuities customarily incident to the course of employment, whether received in cash or other medium. Fuller Brush Co. v Industrial Com. 99 Utah 97, 104 P2d 201, 129 ALR 511. All remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash. Social Secur. Board v Nierotko, 327 US 358, 90 L Ed 718, 66 S Ct 637, 162 ALR 1445.

Labor is remunerated by wages and by "salaries;" wages being the remuneration of subordinates, and "salaries" of officials. Springfield Coal Mining Co. v State Industrial Com. 291 111408, 126 NE 133, 22 ALR 859, 862.

Sums set apart by an employer under a pension scheme declared to be for the purpose of giving the employees a share of the earnings of the business over and above their wages are not wages within the meaning of a statute giving a preference to wages in the distribution of assets by a receiver. Dolge v Dolge, 70 App Div 517, 75 NYS 386.

"Wages," defined in an Unemployment Compensation Act as "all remuneration for employment," do not include a pension paid by the employer to a retired employee. Kneeland v Administrator, Unemployment Compensation Act, 138 Conn 630, 88 A2d 376, 32 ALR2d 896.

As to what constitutes "wages" within pension law basing benefits thereon, see Anno: 14 ALR2d 634.

As to what constitutes wages for purpose of social security benefits and unemployment compensation, see 48 Am J1st Soc Sec § 14.

As to what constitutes "wages" within priority provision of Bankruptcy Act, see 9 Am J2d Bankr § 537.

As to "wages" within priority provision in statutes relative to distribution of the assets of an insolvent, see 29 Am J Rev ed Insolv § 49.

See prevailing rate of wages; salary.

wage-worker. One who works for wages. A wage-earner.

Wagner Act. The first National Labor Relations Act, which became law in 1935, enacted to give greater protection to the right of employees to organize and bargain collectively, and designating certain actions by employers as unfair labor practices. 31 Am J Rev ed Lab § 180.

wagon. A four-wheeled vehicle, drawn by horses or oxen, almost unknown in the age of motor vehicles, for the transportation of goods, wares, merchandise, and personal property of all descriptions, as well as of persons. Quigley v Gorham, 5 Cal 418.

wagon train. A line of vehicles moving together, common in the period of settlement of the West when travelers moving in wagons joined for protection and the comfort of companions.

waifs. Abandoned children. Homeless persons, especially persons unable to care for themselves. Goods stolen, and waived or abandoned by a thief in his flight, in fear of apprehension.

Such goods became the property of the king, by way of punishing the owner for his failure to pursue the thief and retake his goods. See 1 Bl Comm 296.

wainable. Capable of cultivation; tillable.

wainag. Carts, wagons and tools of husbandry.

wain-bote. Timber to be used for the repair of wagons and carts.

wainscoting. Panels of wood on the wall of a room, especially on the lower part of the wall.

waiting period. Same as waiting time.

waiting room. A room provided by a carrier for the comfort and convenience of prospective passengers and those who accompany them or who are waiting for them. 44 Am J1st RR § 260.

waiting time. A period of time immediately after an injury, for which, as provided by the statute, workmen's compensation is not payable. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 319. A certain period of time following the effective date of health, hospital, or medical insurance during which the coverage is not applicable or during which coverage for certain specified diseases or disabilities is not applicable.

See cooling time.

waive. Noun: An obsolete term for a woman who by her conduct has deprived herself of the protection of the law to which she would ordinarily be entitled. Verb: To throw away; to relinquish voluntarily that right which one might have enforced by choice. See Anglo-Nevada Assur, Corp. v Nadeau, 90 Cal 393, 27 13 302. To make or effect a waiver.

See waiver.

waiver. The intentional relinquishment of a known right, claim, or privilege. Phillips v Lagaly (CAIO Okla) 214 F2d 527, 50 ALR2d 626; Smith v Smith, 235 Minn 412, 51 NW2d 276, 32 ALR2d 1135. A voluntary and intentional relinquishment of a known and existing right, or such conduct as warrants an inference of the relinquishment of such right. An election to dispense with something of value or to forego some advantage which one might, at his option, have demanded. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1009. The intentional surrender of a known right or privilege, such surrender modifying other existing rights or privileges, or varying the terms of a contract. Lenoir Memorial Hospital, Inc. v Stared, 263 NC 630, 139 SE2d 901.

The term implies the intentional relinquishment of a known right after knowledge of the facts. It implies the intentional forbearance to enforce a right, and necessarily, therefore, assumes the existence of an opportunity for choice between the relinquishment and the enforcement of the right. Anno: 53 ALR 528.

Waiver presupposes a full knowledge of a right existing, and an intentional surrender of relinquishment of that right. It contemplates something done designedly or knowingly, which modifies or changes existing rights, or varies or changes the terms and provisions of a contract. It is the voluntary surrender of a right. Sovereign Camp, W.W. v Newsom, 142 Ark 132, 219 SW 759, 14 ALR 903.

To establish a waiver, there must be shown an act or omission on the part of the one charged with the waiver fairly evidencing an intention permanently to surrender the right alleged to have been waived. Dunbar v Farnum, 109 Vt 313, 196 A 237, 114 ALR 996.

A waiver as to insurance presupposes a right to declare a forfeiture and such subsequent conduct by the insurer as to justify a conclusion that the insurer did not intend to assert its rights in that respect. Seavey v Erickson, 244 Minn 232, 69 NW2d 889, 52 ALR2d 1144.

waiver by election. A defense which arises when a plaintiff who has sought two remedies which are inconsistent with each other, waives one of them by a decisive act of affirmance or disaffirmance, with knowledge of the facts. Robb v Vos, 155 US 13, 43, 39 L Ed 52, 63, 15 S Ct 4.

waiver of appeal. See waiver of right to appeal.

waiver of contract. A voluntary and intentional relinquishment or renunciation of a contract right by some positive act or omission inconsistent with the existence of such right. Long v Clark, 90 Kan 535, 135 P 673.

waiver of exemption. The voluntary relinquishment by a debtor of his right to assert the exemption of his property, or a part of his property, from the claims of creditors to which he is otherwise entitled by statute. Wyman v Gay, 90 Me 36, 38, 37 A 325.

waiver of homestead. See declaration of abandonment of homestead.

waiver of immunity. A means authorized by statute by which a witness in advance of giving testimony or producing evidence, may renounce the fundamental right and privilege guaranteed to him by the Constitution, that no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. Re Grae, 282 NY 428, 26 NE2d 963, 127 ALR 1276.

waiver of notice of dishonor. An oral or written, express or implied relinquishment by an indorser of a negotiable instrument, either before or after the time for giving notice has arrived, of his right to be notified of the dishonor of the instrument. 11 Am J2d B & N §§ 831 et seq.

[1357]

waiver of presentment. An oral or written, express or implied relinquishment by a party to a negotiable instrument of the right to have the instrument presented for payment. 11 Am J2d B & N §§ 831 et seq.

waiver of proof of loss. A voluntary relinquishment by an insurer having knowledge of all the facts of its right to a written proof of loss to which it is otherwise entitled by the contract of insurance or statute. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1424.

waiver of protest. An oral or written, express or implied relinquishment by a party to a negotiable instrument of his right to have the instrument protested upon dishonor. 11 Am J2d B & N §§ 831 et seq.

waiver of right to appeal. The relinquishment of the right to appeal from a judgment by express agreement or by the party's voluntary act or conduct. 4 Am J2d A & E § 235. Any act evidencing an intent to enjoy a benefit from, or base some interest upon, the judgment. Oatman v Hampton, 43 Idaho 675, 256 P 529.

waiver of tort. The relinquishment by a plaintiff of his right to sue in tort by electing to sue in contract in a case where the plaintiff is entitled to such an election.

wake. A gathering of persons maintaining a vigil over the remains of a departed friend or relative, sometimes having a festive nature in keeping with a custom of the land.

walk. Noun: A sidewalk. Verb: To move on one's feet from one place to another.

Walking in the open air for exercise, is held not to be within a Sunday law prohibiting unnecessary walking on that day. Sullivan v Maine Central R. Co. 82 Me 196, 19 A 169.

walker. See nightwalker; pedestrian; walk.

walking. See walk.

walkout. A concerted withdrawal by employees from the place of employment as a result of a labor dispute. See division wall; party wall.

wall. An upright structure of wood, stone, brick, or other hard and durable material, serving as the side of a building or as a partition inside a building, sometimes as a support holding land in place, sometimes as a fortification protecting against attack by a military or other hostile force.

wallia. A wall; a sea-wall.

wall in common. Same as party wall.

wampum. The bead money of the North American Indians. In common, if not approved usage, money of any kind.

Wantage. Same as ullage.

want of consideration. Absence of consideration; failure of consideration; insufficiency of consideration. See failure of consideration; sufficient consideration.

want of issue. The failure of issue; the condition or state of being childless. See definite failure of issue; indefinite failure of issue.

want of jurisdiction. The want of authority to take cognizance of and decide the case; the want of power to hear and determine a cause. 20 Am J2d Cts § 88.

want of ordinary care. The failure to exercise ordinary care. See ordinary care.

want of probable cause. The absence of probable cause. See probable cause.

want of precedent. Characterizing the novelty of an action. Rozell v Rozell, 281 NY 106, 22 NE2d 254, 123 ALR 1015.

want of prosecution. A ground of involuntary dismissal or nonsuit, consisting in the plaintiff's failure to appear and prosecute his case or his failure to prosecute his case diligently. 24 Am J2d Dism § 59.

want of repair of way. A defective condition relating to inert objects or structural imperfections; not inclusive of the negligent or unlawful use of a way by a moving object, or the negligent operation of a stationary instrumentality. 25 Am J1st High § 360.

wanton. Undisciplined. Lewd and immoral. Unchaste. In reckless indifference or disregard of the rights of others and the likelihood of injury to another. Conchin v El Paso & Southwestern Railroad Co. 13 Ariz 259, 108 P 260.

wanton act. An act performed with knowledge that injury to another is likely to result from the act and with reckless indifference to such consequence. Wunderlich v Franklin (CA5 Ala) 100 F2d 164; Southern Railway Co. v Bennefield, 172 Ala 588, 55 So 252.

wanton conduct. See wanton act; wanton omission.

wanton injury. See wanton act; wanton omission.

wantonly. Willfully, in reckless disregard of the rights of others and of the likelihood of injury to another. Commonwealth v Byard, 200 Mass 175, 86 NE 285. Heartlessly; evincing a wicked or mischievous intent. Jennings v Cooper (Mo App) 230 SW 325.

wanton misconduct. See wanton act; wanton omission.

wanton negligence. A paradoxical expression, since the term "wanton" infers premeditation, knowledge, or consciousness, while "negligence" implies inadvertence; apparently signifying an act done or omitted to be done in such reckless disregard of the security and safety of another as to imply bad faith. 3 8 Am J1st Negl § 48; 52 Am J1st Torts § 23. An act or omission in complete absence of care for the safety of others, exhibiting indifference to consequences, but not necessarily ill will. Higbee Co. v Jackson, 10 1 Ohio St 7 5, 128 NE 61, 14 ALR 13 1, 20 NCCA 144. In the criminal law, culpable negligence; negligence amounting to a disregard of consequences or indifference to the rights or safety of others. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 84.

Wanton negligence involves the creation of an unreasonable risk of bodily harm to another, together with a high degree of probability that substantial harm will result. Bryan v Southern Pacific R. Co. 79 Ariz 253, 286 P2d 761, 50 ALR2d 1.

Inherent in wanton negligence is the idea of moral fault arising from the doing or failing to do an act with consciousness that the act or omission would probably cause serious injury, and with reckless indifference to consequences. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v Louisville & N. R. Co. (CA5 Ala) 224 F2d 1, 50 ALR2d 1302.

wantonness. See wanton act; wanton omission.

[1358]

wanton omission. The omission to perform an act, with knowledge that such omission is likely to result in injury to another. 52 Am J1st Torts § 23.

wants. See needs; needs of business.

wapentakes, The hundreds in certain of the more northern counties of England. See 1 Bl Comm 115 See hundred.

war. A state of activity in which a nation prosecutes its rights or its claims by force of arms. 56 Am J1st War § 12. An armed struggle or contest by force carried on for any purpose between two or more nations or states exercising at least de facto authority over persons within a given territory and commanding an army prepared to observe the laws of war. 56 Am J1st War § 2. The exercise of force by bodies politic against each other and under the authority of their respective governments with a purpose of coercion. Carce v State, 83 Tex Crim 292, 202 SW 951. An armed conflict between sovereign powers, characterized by declared and open hostilities. West v Palmetto State Life Ins. Co. 202 SC 422, 25 SE2d 475, 145 ALR 1461. A conflict between nations, commencing with a formal declaration of war. West v Palmetto State Life Ins. Co. 202 SC 422, 25 SE2d 475, 145 ALR 1461.

Although Congress has, in certain enactments, recognized the operation of United States military forces in Korea and has appropriated funds for their support, the conflict is not a "war" in the constitutional or legal sense in the absence of a declaration of war by Congress. Beley v Pennsylvania Mut. Life Ins. Co. 373 Pa 231, 95 A2d 202, 36 ALR2d 996.

As to what constitutes a "war" within the meaning of the term as it appears in the provisions of a life or accident insurance policy, see Anne: 36 ALR2d 1037.

As to what constitutes a "war" within the meaning of the term in reference to an excuse for nonperformance of a contract, see Anno: 137 ALR 1249.

See duration of war; law of war; perfect war.

warantia. Another spelling of warrantia. warantus. Another spelling of warrantus.

war bond. A bond issued by the United States government in time of war for the purpose of obtaining funds for the conduct of the war. 43 Am J1st Pub See § 15.

ward. A subdivision of a municipal corporation. 36 Am J1st Mun Corp § 45. One under guardianship because incapable of managing his own affairs. Harrison v Harrison, 21 NM 372, 155 P 356. An infant under guardianship. One under special protection, as ward of the state or ward of the court.

warda. A ward; a guard.

ward and watch. See watch and ward.

warden. A caretaker; a keeper; a guard; a guardian; the superintendent of a prison.

See church wardens; game warden.

War Department. Formerly one of the primary departments of the Federal Government, headed by the Secretary of War.

See Defense Department.

ward heeler. A term of contempt for one who solicits votes and works for the leader of his party in a ward, particularly one whose activities are questionable from the standpoint of legality or good taste.

ward-holding. Tenure by military service.

ward-mote. A London ward court.

ward of chancery. An infant under the special protection of a court of equity. 27 Am J1st Inf § 101.

ward of court. An infant under the special protection of the court to which he is entitled. 27 Am J1st Inf §§ 101 et seq.

After submitting themselves to the jurisdiction of the court, the parents cannot by their agreement deprive it of power to control the custody and maintenance of the child. Such a child is in a very real sense the ward of the court. It has power to change the custody of the child; to enforce the parental obligation to provide maintenance, and, if necessary, to remove the child from the custody of both parents. Emrich v McNeil, 75 App DC 309, 126 F2d 841, 146 ALR 1146.

wards and liveries. See court of wards and liveries.

wardship. The right of the lord, as “guardian in chivalry,” under feudal tenure, to receive and retain, as guardian of the person and estate, the profits of the lands of an infant male heir his tenant, until the heir, if a male, was twenty-one and if a female, until she was sixteen. See 2 Bl Comm 67.

In socage tenure, the guardian was the heir's nearest relative to whom the inheritance could not descend. He was accountable for profits and ceased to be guardian when the ward was fourteen. See 2 Bl Comm 87.

In copyhold tenure, wardship was an incident of tenure, and the lord was the legal guardian of his infant tenant. See 2 Bl Comm 97.

wardship in chivalry. See wardship.

wardship in copyhold. See wardship.

wardship in socage. See wardship.

ward-wit. An exemption OF immunity from the service of watch and ward. See watch and ward.

warectare. To plow up land with the intention of allowing it to lie fallow.

warehouse. A structure, usually one of considerable size, used for the storage of goods of the owner or tenant or the goods of others. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 898.

See bonded warehouse; field warehousing. warehouseman. A person engaged in a business of storing goods for hire. UCC § 7-102(l) (h). One who receives and stores goods of others as a business. National Union Bank v Shearer, 225 Pa 470, 74 A 351. A person lawfully engaged in the business of storing goods for profit. 56 Am J1st Wareh § 2.

warehouseman's lien. The right of a warehouseman to retain possession of the goods of another, stored with him, until the satisfaction of his charge or charges for the storage, interest, and advances made by him for insurance, labor, and other expenses in reference to the stored goods. 56 Am J1st Wareh §§ 105 et seq.

warehouseman's risk. A policy of insurance covering the contents of a warehouse, sometimes limited to the interest which the warehouseman has in the stored property, at other times covering only margins uninsured by other policies on the stored prop-

warehouse purposes. Characterizing the use of premises for no use other than the storing and safeguarding of goods and effects. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 898.

warehouse receipt. In the most simple sense, an instrument importing that the goods of a named person are in the hands of a named warehouseman. Union Trust Co. v Wilson, 198 US 530, 49 L Ed 1154, 25 S Ct 766. A receipt issued by a person engaged in the business of storing goods for hire. UCC § 1-201(45). A written contract between the owner of goods and a warehouseman under which the latter agrees to store the goods and the former to pay for the storage. Sinsheimer v Whitely, 111 Cal 378, 43 P 1109. In a more formal and elaborate character, a symbolic representation of the stored property itself; a document of title to goods. Uniform Sales Act § 76; 56 Am J1st Wareh § 29.

Warehouse Receipts Act. One of the uniform laws, specifically repealed by the Commercial Code. 15 Am J2d Com C § 6.

warena. A warren.

See warren.

warentare. To warrant; to guarantee.

wares. Goods or things kept for sale in a mercantile establishment. 37 Am J2d Frd Conv § 252. Merchandise. The Conqueror, 166 US 110, 41 L Ed 937, 17 S Ct 5 10. Articles of merchandise, goods, or commodities. Ellis v Commonwealth, 186 Ky 494, 217 SW 368, 11 ALR 1030, 1031.

warlike operations. Warfare; operations in waging war. Anno: 95 L Ed 91.

war-making power. See war power.

war memorial. A structure, usually a building available for public meetings and public games or amusements, erected to the memory of deceased veterans of the armed services, a part of the structure being a chapel wherein proper respect may be paid to the departed heroes. Anno: 12 ALR2d 891, § 7.

warning. An advising of danger. Recommending caution. A notice of town meetings. 52 Am J1st Towns § 13.

A railroad crossing is, itself, a place of danger, and is an effectual warning of danger, a warning which must always be heeded. Koch v Southern California Railway Co. 148 Cal 677, 84 P 176.

war power. The power of the government of the United States to wage war to the point of success, that is the overcoming of the enemy. Hirabayashi v United States, 320 US 81, 87 L Ed 1774, 63 S Ct 1375.

The national defense is an absolute necessity of our existence. The people of the United States have prepared themselves for such a situation by confiding to Congress the power to declare war and to support and maintain armies for the national defense. This is necessarily a master power, to be exercised without the hampering interference of anyone. The call of men to the colors is within and necessarily within, the exercise of this power; To whom the call goes out, and who is to make an answering response are matters germane to, and indeed necessarily involved in, the exercise of the war-making power. Questions which necessarily arise, or may be expected to arise, must be determined in some way and by some tribunal. The warmaking power may therefore provide the required system and constitute the needed tribunals. Local Draft Board No. 1 v Connors (CA9 Mont) 124 F2d 388.

war prisoner. See prisoner of war.

warrantice. A warranty.

See absolute warrantice.

warrant. Noun: A form of process, such as a warrant for the arrest of a Person. 42 Am J1st Proc § 2. An order authorizing a payment of money by another person to a third person. An order or draft on the treasury of a public body, payable on presentation when funds are available, or at a fixed date with interest, if authorized by statute. Marshall v State, 1 88 Fla 329, 102 So 650. A notice of a town meeting. 52 Am J1st Towns § 13. Justification or sanction for some act or course of conduct. Verb: To enter into an obligation of warranty; to become a warrantor. To give authorization or sanction for some act or course of conduct.

See scrip.

warrantia. A warranty; a guaranty.

warrantia chartae. A writ for the enforcement of a warranty contained in a deed.

warrantia custodiae. An old writ under which the plaintiff contested the right of the lord of the manor to guardianship in chivalry of the lands of the heir where the land had been warranted to be free thereof.

warrantia diei. See de warrantia diei.

warrant in bankruptcy. An order issued by the court in a bankruptcy proceeding directing the marshal to take possession of the property of the bankrupt.

warrant in deed. A warrant under seal. State v Shaw, 73 Vt 149, 168, 50 A 863.

See warranty deed.

warrant in law. A rational and reasonable basis in the law. 2 Am J2d Admin L § 619. Force of law; authority of law. State v Shaw, 73 Vt 149, 168, 50 A 863.

warrantizo. A technical word used in ancient deeds, meaning "I warrant," which was employed to bind the grantor to warrant and defend the title and possession of the grantee, when deeds first came to be used for the purpose of authenticating the transfer of title to lands.

warrant of arrest. A legal process issued by competent authority, directing the arrest of a person or persons upon grounds stated therein, usually directed to a regular officer of the law, but occasionally issued to a private person named in it. 5 Am J2d Arr § 7.

warrant of attachment. Same as writ of attachment.

warrant of attorney. Same as power of attorney.

warrant of attorney to confess judgment. Same as power of attorney to confess judgment.

warrant of commitment. See commitment.

warrant of distress. See distress warrant.

warrant of extradition. See extradition warrant.

warrant officer. An officer of the armed forces whose office is held under a warrant rather than a commission. 36 Am J1st Mil § 51. Ranking above a non-commissioned officer and below a commissioned officer.

warrant of possession. A warrant evicting the defendant and placing a purchaser at execution sale in possession. Hill v Kitchens, 39 Ga App 789, 148 SE 754.

warrantor. The maker or obligor in a warranty.

warrant to sue and defend. A warrant from the English crown specially authorizing a person to appoint an attorney to sue and defend actions in his behalf.

warrantus. A warrantor.

warranty. An agreement to be responsible for all damages that arise from the falsity of a statement or assurance of a fact. Holcomb & H. Mfg. Co. v Auto Inter-Urban Co. 140 Wash 581, 250 P 34, 51 ALR 39. An express or implied statement of something undertaken as part of a contract of sale of personal property, but collateral to its object. 46 Am J1st Sales §299. A promise of indemnity against defects in an article sold. State ex rel. Duffy v Western Auto Supply Co. 134 Ohio St 163, 16 NE2d 256, 119 ALR 1236. A covenant against failure of an article for a certain specified purpose, or for a certain specific reason. Barton v Dowis, 315 Mo 226, 285 SW 988, 51 ALR 494. An absolute undertaking by a seller, in praesenti as well as in futuro, for the quality, condition, or quantity of the thing sold. 46 Am J1st Sales § 299. One of the title covenants in a deed. 20 Am J2d Cov C § 50. The obligation undertaken in contracting to defend another person in an action which may be instituted against him. Flanders v Seelye, 105 US 718, 726, 26 L Ed 1217, 1220. In the law of insurance: -a statement, description, or undertaking on the part of the insured, appearing in the policy of insurance or in another instrument properly incorporated in the policy, relating contractually to the risk insured, and which, in the absence of statute, must be literally true or fulfilled. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins §§ 708, 710.

A warranty promises indemnity against defects in an article sold, while insurance indemnities against loss or damage resulting from perils outside of and unrelated to defects in the article itself. State ex rel. Duffy v Western Auto Supply Co. 134 Ohio St 163, 16 NE2d 256, 119 ALR 1236.

The term "warranty" in an insurance contract ordinarily imports an assurance on the part of the policyholder that a certain situation exists or will continue, which diminishes the likelihood that the event insured against will occur; and hence "warranty" and "condition precedent" are often used interchangeably. Fidelity-Phenix Fire Ins. Co. v Pilot Freight Carriers, Inc. (CA4 NC) 193 F2d 812, 31 ALR2d 839.

See covenant of warranty.

warranty deed. A deed conveying land and containing the usual covenants of title. Bowen v Thrall, 28 Vt 382, 385.

See title covenants.

warranty in sale by sample. A warranty that the article delivered or the bulk of the commodity will correspond with the sample in kind and quality. 46 Am J1st Sales §§ 362, 364.

warranty of fitness. An implied warranty by the seller of a chattel sold for a particular use that the chattel is fit for such purpose, provided the buyer is relying upon the skill, judgment, or experience of the seller. 46 Am J1st Sales § 346.

warranty of soundness. A warranty by the seller of an animal, particularly a horse, that it is free of defect or infirmity rendering it unfit for convenient use. 46 Am J1st Sales § 396.

warranty of soundness from sound price. The rule of the civil law, in opposition to that of the common law, that a warranty of soundness against hidden or latent defects will be implied where a full or sound price is paid.

This warranty will include all faults known or unknown to the seller, though it is not considered as including defects patent and known to the buyer. 46 Am J1st Sales § 340.

warranty of title. An implied warranty on the part of the seller in a sale or contract to sell personal property that he has, or will have at the time when property is to pass, the right to sell the goods; that the buyer shall enjoy quiet possession as against any lawful claims existing at the time of the sale; and that the goods at the time of the sale shall be free from charge or encumbrance in favor of any third person, not declared or known to the buyer before or at the time when the contract or sale is made. 46 Am J1st Sales § 403.

For warranty of title to real estate, see covenant of warranty.

warren. A game preserve; private grounds for the keeping of game and wild fowl. See beasts of the warren; fowls of warren; free warren.

war risk insurance. Term insurance, covering death and total permanent disability, issued to servicemen of World War 1, ultimately converted by many of them to United States Government Life Insurance. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1974.

Warsaw Convention. A multilateral treaty concluded at Warsaw, Poland, in 1929, to which the United States is a party, providing for the unification of certain rules relating to international transportation by air. 8 Am J2d Avi § 16.

warship. A naval vessel, whether of the United States or a foreign country.

war veteran. See veteran.

wash. Erosion by water. A gravel deposit made by an overflowing stream. Another term for wort.

wash bank. An unstable bank of a river. Kerr v Bougber, 16 Ohio App 434.

washed land. Submerged land. 56 Am J1st War § 448.

washing rack. A rack upon which Motor vehicles are placed for cleaning with steam. 24 Am J1st Gas Sta § 23.

washout. A hole in a highway caused by the washing away by stream or surface water of a part of the embankment. 25 Am J1st High § 615. A loss of part of the embankment of a railroad by flood or surface water. A slang term for one who has failed in a particular endeavor or for an enterprise or undertaking which has ended in failure.

washout signal. A signal for a quick stop.

wash sale. A sale of securities or commodities involving no actual change in the beneficial ownership, the seller not expecting to make or the buyer to receive delivery, being a method of manipulating prices. 50 Am J1st Stock Ex § 26. A stock-exchange term for a so-called sale which is merely a bet upon the market. United States v New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange, 263 US 611, 616, 68 L Ed 475, 476, 44 S Ct 225.

Wasserman test. A test for syphilis which has been known to the medical world since about the year 1906, being a standard and well-recognized test, operating with efficiency when made by a physician familiar with its use. Peterson v Widule, 157 Wis 641, 147 NW 966.

waste. In the popular sense, the failure to conserve. Loss of assets in the estate of a decedent through mismanagement by the executor or administrator. 31 Am J2d Ex & Ad § 265. In the technical sense, the destruction, misuse, alteration, or neglect of premises by one lawfully in possession thereof, to the prejudice of the estate or interest therein of another. 56 Am J1st Waste §

2. The destruction or material alteration of any part of a tenement by a tenant for life or years, to the injury of the person entitled to the inheritance. An unlawful act or omission of duty on the part of a tenant which results in permanent injury to the inheritance. Anno: 3 ALR 674; 56 Am J1st Waste § 2. An unreasonable or improper use, abuse, mismanagement, or omission of duty touching real estate by one rightfully in possession which results in substantial injury to the freehold. Gade v National Creamery Co. 324 Mass 515, 87 NE2d 180, 10 ALR2d 1006. Refuse discarded in the process of converting raw material into a manufactured article. Patton v United States, 159 US 500, 40 L Ed 233, 16 S Ct 89.

The primary distinction between waste and trespass is that in the former case the wrong is done by one rightfully in possession. Camden Trust Co. v Handle, 132 NJ Eq 97, 26 A2d 865, 154 ALR 602.

See impeachable for waste; meliorating waste; permissive waste; unimpeachable for waste.

waste-book. A book of original entry of accounts in which all transactions are entered; a blotter.

waste gate. Same as spill.

waste land. Land unfit for cultivation. Malone v McLaurin, 40 Miss 161.

waste water. See surplus water.

wasting assets corporation. A corporation engaged in mining or cutting timber or some such business, so that dividends are in fact paid out of capital, the assets being consumed in the regular course of operations. Hayes v St. Louis Union Trust Co. 317 Mo 1028, 298 SW 91, 56 ALR 1276.

wasting his estate. Squandering one's funds or property or impairing one's own health, and ability to labor and have earnings, by drunkenness and riotous living. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 94.

wasting property. Property, such as an oil well, quarry, or mine, the substance of which is consumed in exploitation.

See wasting assets corporation.

wastors. Thieves.

watch. A timepiece carried on the person. A force of guards or watchmen on duty at one time. That part of the officers and crew of a vessel on duty at one time.

R. H. Dana, in his Dictionary of Sea Terms defines the word as "a certain portion of a ship's company, appointed to stand a given length of time. In the merchant service all hands are divided into two watches, larboard and starboard, with a mate to command each." The men are divided as equally as possible with reference to their qualities as able seamen. The customary watch is of four hours' duration, alternating between the starboard and the larboard or port watches. O'Hara v Luckenbach S.S. Co. 269 US 364, 371, 70 L Ed 313, 316, 46 S Ct 157.

See anchor watch; constant watch; lookout; sea watch.

watch and chain. A timepiece with chain attached for convenience in carrying upon the person. An article of gold and silver manufacture. 29 Am J Rev ed Innk § 91.

watch and ward. The duty of constables.

Ward, guard, or custodia, as it was variously called, was a duty performed mainly in the daytime and looked chiefly to the apprehension of rioters and highway robbers. Watch was a duty which the constables performed only at night, beginning where ward left off and ending when ward began. It was kept in every borough and town, especially in summer, to apprehend all rogues, vagabonds and nightwalkers and make them give an account of themselves. See 1 Bl Comm 356.

watcher. A person appointed by a political party to be present at the polling place on election day and observe the conduct of the election and the counting of the votes. 26 Am J2d Elect § 233. One who observes the commission of a crime. 26 Am J1st Homi § 65.

watchmaker's materials. A stock of articles required in the trade of watchmaking or watch repair. Maril v Connecticut F. Ins. Co. 95 Ga 604, 23 SE 463.

watchman. One employed to keep a lookout for fire, flood, burglars, thieves, or vandals by way of protection of person or property. As employed by a municipality, a policeman, within the meaning of the common-law rule as to power to arrest without a warrant. Porter v State, 124 Ga 297, 52 SE 283. As employed on a vessel at sea, a seaman and member of the crew. The Herdis (DC Md) 22 F2d 304, 305.

The word is in its very nature loose and indefinite in meaning, and the law cannot supply this defect by giving a definition, because it is not a technical term of the law, and because the nature of a watchman's functions vary in different places and according to the dangers to which the property is exposed, and even according to the nature and value of the property. Anno: 87 ALR 1114.

water. The liquid substance formed by the combination of hydrogen and oxygen represented by the symbol H<sub>2</sub>O. While water is to be defined as a mineral, the rules of law as to its use must logically vary from those applicable to coal, ore, and the like. It is a fluid, and mobile, "a fugitive," while coal and ores have a permanent place. The analogy to natural gas and oil is more apt. Their natural use, however, is as merchandise. Water, although in a large measure a commodity of commerce, is essential to the natural use of land for agriculture and other purposes, and to the support of human life itself. See Erickson v Crookston Waterworks Power & Light Co. 100 Minn 481, 111 NW 39 1.

See H<sub>2</sub>O.

water-bailiff. An English port officer whose duty it was to search ships.

[1362]

water boundary. A watercourse or body of water constituting a boundary of a tract of land described by reference thereto. 12 Am J2d Bound §§ 12 et seq.

See thalweg.

water carrier. A carrier operating vessels.

Water Carrier Act. A federal statute regulating water carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce. 49 USC §§ 901 et seq.

water charge. A charge, rental, or toll for water furnished by a waterworks company or a municipal water plant. Zubieta v Turner, 76 Nev 243, 351 P2d 982. A charge imposed for the use of water for irrigation. 30 Am J Rev ed Irrig §§ 54, 67.

water closet. A toilet kept sanitary by flushing it with water. Commonwealth v Roberts, 155 Mass 281, 29 NE 522, 16 LRA 400.

water company. A company which maintains and operates a waterworks. A public service corporation whose main purpose is to supply water to the inhabitants of a municipality, with the right to use the streets and highways for its mains and pipes. 56 Am J1st Watwk § 2.

watercourse. A stream of water flowing in a definite direction or course in a bed with banks. A natural channel, having a well-defined existence, with running water supplied from a definite source. Snyder v Platte Valley Pub. Power & Irrig. Dist. 144

Neb 308, 13 NW2d 160, 160 ALR 1154; Re Johnson Creek, 159 Wash 629, 294 P 566. A physical condition created by a stream having a well-defined and substantial existence. Chicago Rock Island & Pacific R. Co. v Groves, 20 Okla 101, 93 F 755. For some purposes, any well-defined channel or arroyo in which surface waters flow in times of heavy rains. Croeger v Twin Buttes R. Co. 13 Ariz 348, 114 P 553 (application of statute prohibiting obstruction of watercourses).

See artificial watercourse.

watercraft. In the broad sense, a ship or boat. Any sort of boat or vessel capable of being used as a means of transportation on water. Bartlett v Steam Dredge, 107 Mich 74. A small vessel, usually engaged in coastwise or domestic navigation. The Saxon (DC SC) 269 F 639.

water damage insurance. Insurance on property against loss or damage by rain, flood, or other accumulation of water from natural causes. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1332.

water district. A quasi corporation having and exercising certain limited powers for the carrying out of the public purpose of providing a water supply. 37 Am J1st Mun Corp § 6.

See irrigation district.

watered stock. Shares issued by a corporation without an increment of capital corresponding to the number issued. Shares of stock issued by a corporation as fully paid, but which have in fact been issued without any consideration or at a discount, as in exchange for over valued property or services. 18 Am J2d Corp § 266.

water fixtures. See plumbing.

water front. The land at the edge of a river or other body of water. The area of a city with a port, which is immediately adjacent to the harbor. Not inclusive of the harbor itself. Long Beach v Lisenby, 175 Cal 575, 166 P 333.

water-front commission. An administrative body in charge of port or harbor facilities. Application of Waterfront Com. of New York Harbor, 26 Misc 2d 767, 206 NYS2d 123, affd 13 App Div 2d 725, 217 NYS2d 487.

water gas. See wet gas.

water license. A license to use the waters of a stream, as for power. 56 Am J1st Water § 258.

See water privilege.

water-logged. Render unmanageable or sluggish because of excessive amount of water in the hold.

water lots. Land lots bounded by a river or other body of water. Land lots near enough to a river or other body of water as to have an increased value. Morris v United States, 174 US 196, 262, 43 L Ed 946, 970, 19 S Ct 649.

watermark. A mark in paper produced by pressure in the process of manufacturing, observable when held against the light. 52 Am J1st Tradem § 6.

See high-water mark; low-water mark.

water meter. See meter.

water nuisance. A wrongful interference with waters or water rights. The wrongful ponding or casting of water upon the premises of another, or an unsanitary, disagreeable, harmful, or dangerous condition caused by an accumulation of water, or by the pollution thereof. 56 Am J1st Water § 432.

water on the brain. A disease in which there is an effusion of water into, and pressing upon, the brain.

"An affliction than which no other is more eminently calculated to produce mental imbecility or incapacity for the serious and deliberate concerns of this life." Griffin v Griffin, R. M. Charlton's Rep (Ga) 217, 222.

water ordeal. See trial by water.

water-packed. Characterizing a bale of cotton sprinkled with water to such extent as to increase the weight materially. Wallace v Crosthwait, 196 Ala 356, 71 So 666.

water pollution. The infection and contamination of a public water supply by dirt, bacteria, and coli, or any other infectious and contaminating material which renders the water unfit for domestic use and unsafe and dangerous to individuals. 56 Am J1st Watwk § 75. The deterioration in the quality of water in a natural watercourse or other body of water caused by industrial operations, the production of oil or gas, mining operations, or the disposal of waste, refuse, or sewage. 56 Am J1st Water § 415. Any defilement or corruption of the water of a watercourse which prevents its use for any of its reasonable or proper purposes. 56 Am J1st Water § 405. The defilement, contamination, or corruption of the waters of a well or percolating waters. 56 Am J1st Water §§ 136, 143. The pollution of a well or water on neighboring property by the escape of gas or noxious substance from a gasworks. 26 Am J2d Electr § 265.

waterpower. The power existing in water by virtue of the fall of a stream, either in the natural state or the stream or as induced by a dam which impounds the water, applied to the use of man in turning the wheels of machines or in the generation of electricity. Rhodes v Whitehead, 27 Tex 304.

water privilege. An incorporeal hereditament of an independent nature, not constituting a servitude upon some other thing. Union Falls Power Co. v waterproof. Resistant to water under ordinary circumstances.

[1363]

Marinette County, 238 Wis 134, 298 NW 598, 134 ALR 958.

See water license; water right.

The term is a relative one, but as applied to the walls and floor of a basement, it imports that they are so constructed as to keep out moisture and dampness under such circumstances and weather conditions as may reasonably be foreseen and anticipated. Ozark Grocer Co. v Crandall, 131 Ark 481, 199 SW 551.

water rate. Same as water charge.

water rental. Same as water charge.

Characterizing a sale in large quantities to dealers rather than to consuming customers. 30 Am J Rev ed Intox L § 216. Implying the selling of goods in unbroken pieces or parcels, as by the barrel, pipe, cask, etc., or in a number of such pieces or parcels. Gorsuth v Butterfield, 2 Wis 237, 243.

wholesale dealer. Same as wholesaler.

wholesaler. A middle man; one who buys from the manufacturer and sells to the retailer.

As a rule, wholesaler dealers are those who sell only to merchants who buy to sell to the consumer, whereas retail dealers sell direct to the consumer, and not to other retail merchants. Re Metz Bros. Brewing Co. 88 Neb 164, 129 NW 443.

wholesale price. The price paid by the retailer, often known as the cost price. Sylvester v Ammons, 126 Iowa 140, 101 NW 782.

The term has a fixed, certain, and well-defined meaning in the mercantile world, and signifies the price fixed on merchandise by one who buys it in large quantities of the producer or manufacturer, and sells the same to jobbers, or to retail dealers therein. Fawkner v Smith Wall Paper Co. 88 Iowa 169, 172.

As to the use of parol evidence in explanation of the term "wholesale factory price," see Anne: 89 ALR 1248.

wholesome. Sound in body and mind. Healthful; invigorating. Improving, rather than depraving.

wholly dependent. Characterizing a person in complete dependence upon another, having no other source or means of maintenance of any consequence. Anno: 39 ALR 314.

wholly dependent on. Dependent for support and maintenance upon no one else than the person designated. London Guarantee & Acci. Co. v Industrial Com. of Colorado, 78 Colo 478, 242 P 680.

wholly destroyed. See total loss.

wholly disabled. See total disability.

wholly retired. See retired.

whom it may concern. See for whom it may concern; on account of whom it may concern.

whore. A woman who practices unlawful commerce with men, particularly one who does so for hire; a harlot; a concubine; a prostitute.

A woman may acquire the character of a whore without being generally accessible to men. She may be the mistress of one and chaste toward all others. But in common parlance a vast difference is recognized between such a person and her who yields only to the solicitations of her affianced. Such a person may not justly be called a whore. Sheehy v Cokley, 43 Iowa 183.

whorehouse. A bawdyhouse; a house of ill fame; a house kept for common prostitution. Wright v Page (NY) 36 Barb 438, 440.

See house of ill fame; house of prostitution.

whoremaster. A pimp; a procurer.

wick. A town; a village; a castle.

widen. To make wider, as in the alteration of a highway. 25 Am J1st High § 107.

widow. A woman of single status because of the death of her husband. A woman who survives the man to whom she was married at the time of his death. Meeker v Draffen, 201 NY 205, 94 NE 626. A woman whose husband has died and who has not married again. Re McArthur, 210 Cal 439, 292 P 469, 72 ALR 1318.

The word means a woman who has lost her husband by death, and has no application to a divorced woman. O'Malley v O'Malley, 46 Mont 549, 129 P 501.

There is authority which holds that the term, as used in some statutes, may be applied to a woman in respect of her deceased husband, although she has remarried since his death. Re McArthur, 210 Cal 439, 292 P 469, 72 ALR 1318.

The right of action for wrongful death given by statute for the benefit of a widow for the death of her husband is not divested by her subsequent marriage. 22 Am J2d Dth § 67.

The right of the widow of an insured to the balance due under a national service life insurance policy after the death of the named insured, under a statutory provision giving the "widow" a preference over brothers and sisters of the insured, is not barred by her remarriage. Riley v United States (CA4 W Va) 212 F2d 692. 44 ALR2d 1182.

As to meaning of term under the Federal Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, see Anne: 98 L Ed 740.

widow-bench. The share to which a widow is entitled in the estate of her deceased husband, exclusive of any jointure.

widower. A man of single status because of the death of his wife.

As it is used in the statutes of descent, the word has been held to mean one who has been reduced to single status by the ordinary and usual vicissitudes of life, and not one who, by felonious act, has himself created that condition. Perry v Strawbridge, 209 Mo 621, 108 SW 641.

widow's allowance. An allowance made the widow of a decedent, under the laws of some states, for her maintenance and support.

It is neither an interest in the estate nor something which goes to her by descent, but is a preferred claim against the estate and is a part of the expense of administration. Grover v Clover, 69 Colo 72, 169 P 578.

widow's chamber. A widow's apparel and the furniture of her bedchamber, which were given to her by the custom of London. See 4 Bl Comm 518.

widow's quarantine. See quarantine.

widow's terce. The widow's third, a widow's right of dower.

See dower.

widow's third. A widow's right of dower.

See dower.

width of highway. The extent of a highway laterally as fixed by statute, by prescription, or by the proceeding in which it, the highway, was established. 25 Am J1st High § 35.

wifa. A notice which indicates that the land upon which it is posted is in the exclusive possession of the occupant.

[1369]

wife. A married woman. The spouse of a man. A woman who has a husband living. Names v State, 20 Ind App 168, 50 NE 401. i

As the word is used in designating a beneficiary in a will, it is descriptive of the person of a particular individual, and unless there is something in the will indicating the contrary, a gift to the wife of a designated married man is a gift to the person who was his wife at the time when the will was made and not to a wife whom he has subsequently married. See 57 Am J1st Wills § 1385.

As a designation of the beneficiary of life insurance:- descriptio personae, so that the fact that one who otherwise answers the description does not, or did not at the inception of the insurance, have the legal status of wife of the insured does not prevent her from taking as beneficiary, if it is other wise clear that she is the person intended, assuming that she is eligible to designation as beneficiary and that the misdescription of her as "wife" does not amount to a breach of warranty of misrepresentation avoiding the insurance. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1660.

wife and children. Sometimes a designation of beneficiaries of a life insurance policy.

While some courts hold that a policy payable to the wife of the insured and "their children" includes children by another wife, the prevailing view is that the beneficiaries are limited to children common to both. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1658.

wife-beating. See whipping wife.

wife's equity to a settlement. See equity for a settlement.

wife's right of survivorship. The title of a surviving wife at common law, arising upon the death of her husband, to choses in action which belonged to tier at the time of the marriage or came to her during coverture, and were not reduced to possession by the husband. 26 Am J1st H & W § 59.

wife's separate equitable estate. See separate estate of wife.

wife's separate estate. See separate estate of wife.

wife's society. See society of wife.

Wigglesworth Mortality Table. A life expectancy table once recognized as standard. 29 Am J2d Ev § 895.

wild animal. An animal ferae naturae~ an animal wild by nature. 4 Am J2d Am § 2. An animal such as a deer in the forest, a quail in the air, or a fish in public waters. Fleet v Hegeman (NY) 14 Wend 42, 45.

wild beast test. The test of insanity, as a defense in a criminal case, according to whether or not the defendant was wholly deprived of understanding and memory. Anno: 44 ALR 584.

wildcat engine. A railroad locomotive running "wild"; that is, without an engineer or other attendant. Mars v Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. (Sup) 8 NYS 104, 105.

wildcat leases. Oil and gas leases secured on lands situated in undeveloped territory in the hope that oil or gas will be found there. Germer v Donaldson (CA3 Pa) 18 F2d 697.

wildcat strike. A strike of laborers not authorized by the union which represents them.

wild fowl. Birds wild by nature, especially game birds such as ducks, geese, or pheasants. 4 Am J2d Am § 2.

wild grass. A grass plant growing without cultivation, valuable in use for forage.

wild land. Land in a state of nature, never having been cultivated. Conner v Shepherd, 15 Mass 164.

Wild's Case. See first resolution in Wild's Case; second resolution in Wild's Case.

wild train. A railroad train which is run as an extra train or without any reference to the regular schedule time. Larson v St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway Co. 43 Minn 423, 424, 45 NW 722 ,

wilful. A word of several meanings, the meaning in the particular case often being influenced by the context. Spies v United States, 317 US 492, 87 L Ed 418, 63 S Ct 364. Voluntary, as distinguished from accidental. 21 Am J2d Crim L § 87. Intentional or deliberate, yet not necessarily with an evil purpose in mind. Fulton v Wilmington Star Mining Co. (CA7 111) 133 F 193; Kite v Hamblen, 192 Tenn 643, 241 SW2d 601. Stubborn, obstinate, perverse. United States v Murdock, 290 US 389, 78 1, Ed 381, 54 S Ct 223. Inflexible. Refractory. Wick v Gunn, 66 Okla 316, 169 P 1087, 4 ALR 107. Intentional and with a bad purpose. State v Clifton, 152 NC 800, 67 SE 751. Having a bad purpose, evil intent, or legal malice. Caldwell v State, 55 Tex Crim 164, 115 SW 597.

The word wilful as used in a statute which denies compensation to an employee for an injury sustained when due to a wilful failure or refusal to perform a duty required by statute imports, not only the mere exercise of the will in failing to comply with the statute, but also an intention to do an act that he knows, or ought to know, is wrongful or forbidden by law, and involves the idea of premeditation and determination to do such act. 58 Am J1st Workm Comp § 203.

It has been said that "wilfulness", as used in the Federal internal revenue statutes imposing criminal penalties, includes some element of evil motive and want of justification in view of the financial circumstances of the taxpayer, and as used in statutes imposing civil penalties it may, while often connoting a bad purpose, be used to characterize an act which is intentional, or knowing, or voluntary, as distinguished from accidental. Paddock v Siemonet, 147 Tex 571, 218 SW2d 428, 7 ALR2d 1062.

wilful act. An act done intentionally, or on purpose, and not accidentally. Leicester v Hoadley, 66 Kan 172, 71 P 318.

See wilful.

wilful and malicious injury. An injury to property inflicted intentionally and in disregard of duty. Re Dixon (DC NY) 21 172d 565. Within the meaning of the exception of certain liabilities from discharge in bankruptcy: injury to person or property inflicted intentionally and deliberately without cause or excuse and with no regard for the legal rights of the injured one. An injury inflicted by an act against good morals and wrongful in itself, committed with indifference to the safety of the injured person, and without just cause or excuse. Anno: 13 ALR2d 170; 9 Am .12d Bankr § 786.

A misappropriation of partnership funds by a former partner to his own use after dissolution of the partnership is a "wilful and malicious injury" to the property of another within the provision of the Bankruptcy Act excepting such a debt from a discharge in bankruptcy. Fooshe v Sunshine, 96 Cal App 2d 336, 215 P2d 66, 16 ALR2d 1142.

wilful and wanton act. An act premeditated or performed with knowledge that injury is likely to result therefrom. 38 Am J1st Negl § 48.

wilful and wanton misconduct. A deliberate and intentional wrong. Antonen v Swanson, 74 SD 1, 48 NW2d 161, 28 ALR2d I (phrase in statute respecting liability of motorist for injury to guest).

Under a statute which imposes liability on the driver of a car for injury to a guest-passenger only where occasioned by the driver's "wilful or wanton misconduct", such a disposition or mental state is shown by a person when, notwithstanding his conscious and timely knowledge of an approach to an unusual danger and of common probability of injury to others, he proceeds into the presence of danger with indifference to consequences and with absence of all care. Rodney v Staman, 37 1 Pa 1, 89 A2d 313, 32 ALR2d 976.

See wanton act.

wilful and wanton negligence. A paradoxical expression, since the adjectives imply premeditation or consciousness of danger to another, while negligence implied inadvertence, but described as a reckless disregard of the safety of the person or property of another by failing, after discovering the peril, to exercise ordinary care to prevent the impending injury. Hinkle v Minneapolis, A. & C. R. Co. 162 Minn 112, 202 NW 340, 41 ALR 1377.

wilful burning. An element of the offense of arson. A conscious and intentional act of setting a fire. 5 Am J2d Arson § 11.

wilful default. A conscious abstention by an obligor from doing that which reasonably and under the terms of the obligation he should have done. Anno: 75 ALR 352. An intentional, although not necessarily malicious, wanton, or evil, failure to comply with a statute which prescribes the performance of an act intended for preservation of the safety of others. 35 Am J1st M & S § 213.

wilful desertion of spouse. A desertion of one's spouse with evil intent and malice; a desertion in disregard of the duty to one's spouse. 27 Am J1st H & W § 437. As a ground for divorce:--abandonment of one's spouse with an intent to terminate the marriage relation or an intent not to return. 24 Am J2d Div & S § 98.

For definition of term as it pertains to the refusal of sexual intercourse as grounds for divorce. Anno: 175 ALR 711.

wilful disobedience. Intentional disobedience by a free agent who knows what he is doing, although not necessarily acting with malice or evil intent. May v New York Motion Picture Co. 45 Cal App 396, 187 P 785.

wilful failure. See wilful default.

wilful injury. An injury produced by an act intended to have such effect. Parker v Pennsylvania Co. 134 Ind 673, 34 NE 504. An injury inflicted designedly and intentionally. *Wunderlich v Frankl*61 (CA5 Ala) 100 F2d 164. An injury accompanied by a design, purpose and intent to do wrong and to inflict the injury, or an injury inflicted by means of an act or omission with knowledge on the part of the wrongdoer that the injury would be the natural and probable result of such act or omission. Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co. v Anchors, 114 Ala 492, 499, 22 So 279.

See wilful and malicious injury.

wilfully. With a purpose or willingness to commit an act or to omit the performance of an act, irrespective of intent to violate the law or to injure another. Howe v Martin, 23 Okla 561, 102 P 128. Deliberately and with a specific purpose. Hartzel v United States, 322 US 680, 88 L Ed 1534, 64 S Ct 1233. Knowingly, obstinately, and persistently, but not necessarily maliciously. 34 Am J1st Mal § 2. A technical word in an indictment or information. 27 Am J1st Indict § 67. Implying a certain state of mind for the performance of an act proscribed by statute. Screws v United States, 325 US 91, 89 L Ed 1495, 65 S Ct 1031, 162 ALR 1330. Intentionally, deliberately, with a bad or evil purpose, contrary to known duty. State ex rel. Fletcher v Naumann, 213 Iowa 418, 239 NW 93, 81 ALR 483.

This word when used in a criminal statute generally means an act done with a bad purpose, or without justifiable excuse, or stubbornly, obstinately, perversely, and is also employed to characterize a thing done without ground for believing it is lawful, or conduct marked by careless disregard whether or not one has the right so to act. United States v Murdock, 290 US 389, 78 L Ed 381, 54 S Ct 223.

wilfully and knowingly. A term characterizing the offense of obstruction of highway.

Some courts hold that a person may be guilty of "wilfully and knowingly" obstructing a public road where he actively participates in the doing of the act which results in the obstruction, even though he does not know that the place obstructed is legally a public road, while others take the view that one cannot be deemed guilty of "wilfully" obstructing such a road where he acts under the bona fide belief that no public road exists at the place where the obstruction is placed. 25 Am J1st High § 326.

wilfully and maliciously. A technical word in an indictment or information. 27 Am J1st Indict § 67.

See maliciously; wilfully.

wilfully and unlawfully. A technical word in an indictment or information. 27 Am J1st Indict § 67.

See unlawfully; wilfully.

wilfully false. Fraudulent. Made with actual intent to mislead. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins § 721.

See wilful misstatement.

wilfully misapply. Not the equivalent of embezzle.

As the expression is used in an embezzlement statute making it an offense wilfully to misapply funds, the words have no settled technical meaning, such as the word "embezzle" has in the statutes or the words "steal, take, and carry away" have at common law, and they do not of themselves describe any offense. Batchelor v United States, 156 US 426, 429, 39 L Ed 478, 479, 15 S Ct 446.

wilful misconduct. Deliberate disobedience of the law, inclusive of acts of omission as well as acts of commission. The intentional doing, or omitting to do something, either with the knowledge that such act or omission is likely to result in harm or with a wanton and reckless disregard of the consequences. Gulf, M. & O. R. Co. v Freund (CA8 Mo) 183 172d 1005, 21 ALR2d 729. Such conduct as manifests a disposition to perversity, and under such surrounding circumstances and existing conditions that the party doing the act or failing to act must be conscious from his knowledge of such circumstances and conditions that his conduct will in all common probability result in injury. Universal Concrete Pipe Co. v Bassett, 130 Ohio St 567, 200 NE 843, 119 ALR 646.

The expression means something different from and more than negligence, however gross. There must be actual knowledge, or that which in the law is esteemed to be the equivalent of actual knowledge, of the peril to be apprehended from the failure to act, coupled with the conscious failure to act to the end of averting injury. Helme v Great Western Milling Co. 13 Cal App 416, 185 P 510.

Wilful misconduct depends upon facts of the particular case and necessarily involves deliberate, intentional, or wanton conduct in doing or omitting to perform acts, with knowledge or appreciation of the fact on the part of the culpable person that danger is likely to result therefrom. Cowgill v Bones, 189 Or 282, 218 P2d 445, 19 ALR2d 405.

As to what constitutes wilful misconduct in reference to the application of statute respecting liability of motorist for injury to guest, see Anno: 136 ALR 1271.

See serious and wilful misconduct.

wilful misstatement. A material false statement voluntarily made, with knowledge of its falsity, although not necessarily with intent to deceive. Anno: 4 ALR 559.

See wilfully false.

wilful neglect of child. An act of omission by a parent in reference to the care and support of a child which is deliberate and intentional, not by accident or inadvertence. 39 Am J1st P & C § 107.

See neglect of child.

wilful negligence. A paradoxical expression, since "negligence" conveys the idea of inadvertence, but apparently signifying an act done or omitted in such reckless disregard of the security and safety of another as to imply bad faith. 52 Am J1st Torts § 23.

wilfulness. See wilful.

wilful refusal. A refusal that is both intentional and unreasonable. Vermilye v Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. 205 Mass 598, 91 NE 904.

A wife's continued and persistent refusal to have sexual intercourse with her husband unless he wore a contraceptive sheath does not entitle the husband to a decree of nullity on the ground of "wilful refusal to consummate the marriage," authorized by statute. Baxter v Baxter [ 19481 AC 274 [1947] 2 All Eng 886, 4 ALR2d 216.

wilful trespasser. One who trespasses with knowledge that he is a trespasser.

One who knowingly and wilfully encroaches or enters upon the land of another and takes his minerals without color or claim of right, or who dishonestly or in bad faith mines minerals of another and converts them to his own use, is a wilful trespasser; one who does so under color of right or in good faith by mistake is an innocent trespasser. Hughett v Caldwell County, 313 Ky 85, 230 SW2d 92, 21 ALR2c1 373.

wilful violation. A deliberate and purposeful failure to comply with a statute. Anno: 97 L Ed 270.

See wilful default.

wilful voting. An expression which savors of illegality.

To vote wilfully when the voter knows that he is not qualified to vote, means to vote designedly or purposely, and a person votes thus only when he has no right to vote and knows that he has no right. State v Savre, 129 Iowa 122, 105 NW 387.

will. Volition, purpose; desire. An instrument by which a person makes a disposition of his property, to take effect after his decease. Barney v Hayes, 11 Mont 571, 29 P 282. An instrument executed by a competent person, in the manner prescribed by statute, whereby he makes a disposition of his property to take effect on and after his death, such disposition remaining ambulatory and revocable during his lifetime. A legal declaration of a man's intention, which he wills to be performed after his death; the just sentence of the testator's wishes concerning what he would have done after his death. 57 Am J1st Wills § 2.

The term includes every kind of testamentary act taking effect from the mind of the testator and manifested by an instrument in writing executed and attested in conformity to the statute. In fact, in some jurisdictions, there is a recognized privilege of nuncupation under which, subject to certain conditions and restrictions, a will may be made without the execution of a written instrument by the testator. 57 Am J1st Wills § 2.

See bequest; devise; holographic will; joint will; legacy; mutual will; nuncupative will; oral will; reciprocal wills; seaman's will; soldier's will.

will and wish. A precatory term creative of a trust in a proper case. Temple v Russel, 251 Mass 231, 140 NE 679, 49 ALR 1.

will contest. See contest.

willful. Another spelling of wilful.

William I. William the First, king of England from October 14th, 1066, until September 9th, 1087.

William II. William the Second, king of England from, September 26th, 1087, until August 2nd, 1100.

without stint. Without limit or restriction on number or amount.

without the state. Indicating absence from the state or residence outside the state, dependent upon the context of the entire statute or instrument.

A debtor is not "without the state," within the meaning of a statute of limitations, where, being a citizen of, domiciled, and resident within the state, with his family, he temporarily for business purposes, goes to another state and remains there for several months at a time on different occasions. Sage v Hawley, 16 Conn 106.

without this, that. Words employed in an answer by way of a special traverse.

See absque hoc; special traverse.

without waiver or prejudice. A phrase negating admission of liability.

The expression has among both lawyers and business men a well-understood value, and imports into any writing in which it appears that the parties have agreed that, as between themselves the receipt of the money by one, and its payment by the other, shall not, because of the facts of the receipt and payment, have any legal effect upon the rights of the parties in the premises; that such rights will be as open to settlement by negotiation or legal controversy as if the money had not been turned over by the one to the other. Genet v President etc. of Delaware & Hudson Canal Co. 170 NY 278, 63 NE 350 with prejudice. The effect of a final adjudication as res judicata.

See dismissal with prejudice.

workshop of justice. The judicial system. A court.

See officina justitiae.

workshop of nations. Any project typified by international co-operation.

works of charity. Acts of a charitable nature. Bucher v Cheshire R. Co. 125 US 555, 31 L Ed 795, 8 S Ct 974. Covering everything morally fit and proper to be done on Sunday, under the particular circumstances of the case. 50 Am J1st Sun & H § 19.

works of internal improvement. Those enterprises which ordinarily might in human experience be expected to be undertaken for profit or benefit to the property interests of private promoters, as distinguished from those things which primarily and preponderantly merely facilitate the essential functions of government. State v Froehlich, 115 Wis 32, 91 NW 115.

The term, as used in a constitutional provision forbidding the state to engage in such works, is not to be construed as limited only to channels of trade and commerce, such as canals, turnpikes, railroads, and the like, although, in order to come within this provision, the improvement must be of a more or less fixed and permanent character. State ex rel. Wilkinson v Murphy, 237 Ala 332, 186 So 487, 121 ALR 283.

See internal improvement.

works of necessity. See work of necessity.

Works Progress Administration. A federal agency of the period of the Great Depression, the primary purpose of which was to give employment to needy persons upon work designated by the agency. 41 Am J1st Poor L § 33.

work stoppage. See stoppage of work.

work time. See working time.

work week. See hours of labor.

World Bank. A bank, otherwise known as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, having an official existence since Dec. 27, 1945, the primary purpose of which is to assist the economic development of member countries by facilitating investment of capital for productive purposes, and thereby promote growth of international trade and improvement of standards of living.

worldly. Concerned with the enjoyments of this present existence; secular, not religious, spiritual, or holy. Commonwealth ex rel. Woodruff v American Baseball Club, 290 Pa 136, 138 A 497, 53 ALR 1027. Of or pertaining to the world or the present state of existence; temporal; earthly. Devoted to, interested in, or connected with this present life, and its cares, advantages, or pleasures, to the exclusion of those of a future life. Anderson v Gibson, 116 Ohio St 684, 157 NE 377, 54 ALR 92, worldly goods. Goods to be enjoyed by one in his present state of existence. That property which one must leave behind when he departs this life. Subject to construction as including both real and personal property of a testator. 57 Am J1st Wills § 1343.

World Peace Foundation. An organization having the purpose of promoting and maintaining world peace. Parkhurst v Treasurer, 228 Mass 196, 117 NE 39.

World War Veteran. See veteran.

worm fence. Another term for rail fence.

worry. See mental anguish.

worrying animals. The act of a dog in chasing, running after, and barking at animals. Burin v Shaw, 3 NJ 195, 69 A2d 576, 15 ALR2d 574.

worship. Intense admiration. An expression of reverence or devotion for a deity. The act of paying honors to the Supreme Being; religious reverence and homage; adoration paid to God, or a Being viewed as God. Hamsher v Hamsher, 132 Ill 273, 23 NE 1123.

"We know of no technical definition of the word by any court. It includes prayer, praise, thanksgiving. In the ordinary church meeting the congregation is regarded as engaged in religious worship while listening to the sermon, reading the Holy Scriptures or hearing them read, or engaged in the singing. Devotional religious exercises constitute worship. Prayer is a chief part of the worship. Prayer is always worship. Reading the Bible and singing may be worship." People ex rel. Ring v Board of Education, 245 Ill 334, 92 NE 251.

See public worship; religious worship.

worsted. A specific kind of wool. Longstaple wool. Seeberger v Cahn, 137 US 95, 34 L Ed 599, 11 S Ct 28. Cloth made from long-staple wool.

wort. The mixture of malt, hops, and water from which beer is produced.

worth. Monetary value. Importance. Merit.

"Few philologists get on juries. We believe that only a philologist would appreciate the difference between the word compensation and the word price or worth as used in instructions to be considered by juries in assessing damages." Herb v Hallowell, 304 Pa 128, 154 A 582, 85 ALR 1004.

worthier title rule. The early rule of the common law that an heir may not take by devise where he may take the same title by descent, title by descent being regarded as the worthier and better title. 23 Am J2d Desc & D § 3. A rule sometimes advanced as the rationale of the common-law rule against remainders to the heirs of the grantor. 28 Am J2d Est § 175-

The inter vivos branch of the doctrine of worthier title, adopted in nearly all American jurisdictions which have had occasion to consider it, favors a reversion in the grantor rather than a remainder to his heirs. McKenna v Seattle First Nat. Bank, 35 Wash 2d 662, 214 P2d 664, 16 ALR2d 679.

worthiest of blood. The theory of the rule of primogeniture.

See primogeniture.

worthless. Deprived of worth; of no value or use. Spring City Foundry Co. v Commissioner, 292 US 182, 78 L Ed 1200, 54 S Ct 644.

worthless check. A check payment of which has been refused for want of funds on deposit to the credit of the drawer.

worthless draft. A dishonored draft.

worthless stock. Stock in a corporation, the assets of which, properly valued, are less than its liabilities. Foster v Commissioner (CA1) 112 F2d 109.

worthy. Having worth or merit. Deserving of honor or respect.

See law worthy; oathworthy.

worthy cause or institution. A cause or institution of a charitable character. Re Funk, 353 Pa 321, 45 A2d 67, 163 ALR 780.

wound. A severance or breakage of the skin. Anno: 16 ALR 958, s. 58 ALR 1320. Any abrasion, breach or rupture of the skin or mucous membrane of the body, whereby animal venom or virus, or some impute, poisonous, or irritating matter, may gain entrance to the underlying tissues and contaminate the blood. Fidelity and Casualty Co. v Thompson (CA8 Colo) 154 F 484, 487. An injury to the body of a person or animal, especially one caused by violence, by which the continuity of the covering, as skin, mucous membrane, or conjunctivea, is broken. Anno: 117 ALR 767. A lesion of the body. A hurt, loss, or injury, or any morbid change in the structure of organs or parts of the body. 29A Am J Rev ed Ins § 1173. As the term appears in an application for life insurance: -an injury to the body causing an impairment of health or strength, or rendering the person more liable to contract disease, or less able to resist its effects. Bancroft v Home Beneficial Asso. 120 NY 14, 23 NE 997.

The Supreme Court of Illinois defines the word as meaning a lesion of the body and defines lesion as a hurt, loss, or injury. Hence, that court's definition excludes the necessity of a breaking or cutting of the skin and is broad enough to include an injury to the subcutaneous tissue and to the skin, which has resulted from carbon monoxide poisoning and is revealed by scarlet blotches. Warbende v Prudential Ins. Co. (CA7 111) 97 172d 749.

Ordinarily, whether or not a particular injury constitutes a wound, within the meaning of statutes relating to wounding with intent to maim, seems to depend upon whether there is a complete severance or breakage of the skin. From an early date, the word wound in such a statute has been construed to mean that there must be a breaking of the skin. This breaking must consist in the separation of the whole skin; a separation of the cuticle or upper skin only, or the fact that one's skin is bruised where struck by a stick, is not sufficient. Similarly, a scratch does not constitute a wound within the provisions of a maiming statute. A disruption or breaking of the internal skin or membrane, however, as that within the mouth or the membrane lining the urethra, will suffice. 36 Am J1st May § 5.

[1379]

wounded feelings. Distress from insults, indignity, or humiliation. 22 Am J2d Damg § 237.

wounding. Inflicting a wound. See wound.

W.P.A. Abbreviation of Works Progress Administration.

wreck. Verb: To tear down. To drive a vehicle or handle an object in such manner as to destroy or damage it greatly. To disorganize or cause serious injury to anything. Mochel v Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 203 Iowa 623, 213 NW 259, 51 ALR 1327. Noun: A ship which, in consequence of injuries received, is rendered unnavigable, or unable to pursue her voyage, without repairs exceeding the half of her value. 48 Am J1st Ship § 647 - Such goods as after a shipwreck are cast upon land by the sea, and left there. 48 Am J1st Ship § 647. A person in very poor physical condition. A dowdy woman.

Under the Federal income tax law, allowing deduction for loss caused by shipwreck, in computing net income, the word does not mean complete loss; damage to the ship suffices. Nor need such damage be caused by storm or natural causes. A wreck through collision is within the act, whether due to the negligence of the other vessel or of employees of the wrecked ship. See Shearer v Anderson (CA2 NY) 16 F2d 995, 51 ALR 534.

For definition of term "wrecking," as it appears in a provision of an accident insurance policy relative to accidents in connection with automobiles or other motor vehicles, see Anno: 138 ALR 414.

See train wreck.

wreckage. See wreck; wreck of the sea.

wrecker. A motor vehicle employed in dragging wrecked vehicles off the highway. A work train on a railroad used primarily in clearing the track of wrecks. One engaged in the work of tearing down buildings. 27 Am J1st Ind Contr § 44.

wrecking. See wreck.

wrecking or disablement. See wreck.

wreck of the sea. Such goods as after a shipwreck are cast upon land by the sea and left there. 1 Am J2d Aband § 24; 48 Am J1st Ship § 647.

wrench. Verb: To twist with violence. Noun: A common tool used to turn nuts on bolts. A sprain caused by the twisting of a joint, such as in the ankle.

wrestling. A sport, by amateur and professional, in which two participants engage, the purpose of each being to pin the shoulders of the other to the mat on which they struggle.

wrist drop. A paralysis evidenced by inability of the subject to extend his hand directly outward from the wrist.

writ. A process. 42 Am J1st Proc § 2. A process authorizing or commanding the arrest of a person or the seizure of property, sometimes the seizure of property specifically described in the writ, at other times the seizure of any property of the defendant, not exempt from seizure, sufficient to satisfy the amount of a judgment against the defendant. Caples v State, 3 Okla Crim 72, 104 P 493.

See alias writ; prerogative writ; supervisory writ; teste.

writ ad faciendum et recipiendum. See ad faciendum et recipiendum.

writ de annua pensione. See annua pensione.

writ de excommunicato capiendo. See de excommunicato capiendo; de ex communicato recapiendo.

writ de lunatico inquirendo. See de lunatico inquirendo.

writ de ventre inspiciendo. See de ventre inspiciendo.

write-in. A name written or inserted on a ballot at a place provided on the ballot, indicating the choice of a voter for a particular office, such person's name not being on the official ballot. 26 Am J2d Elect § 268.

Under an election law providing that the voter might "Insert" the name of a person whose name did not appear on the ballot, the use of a sticker, instead of writing the name has been upheld. Fletcher v Wall, 172 Ill 426, 50 NE 230.

write-in candidate. A candidate for election whose name is not on the ballot as such is prepared for the voters but who campaigns to have people vote for him by writing or inserting his name on the ballot.

See write-in.

writer to the signet. A Scottish term for solicitor at law.

writing. An instrument. Anything which is written. Legible characters in pen or pencil. Handwriting, typewriting, or printing. 11 Am J2d B & N § 57. The expression of ideas by visible letters.

It may be on paper, wood, stone, or other material. The ten commandments were written with the finger of God on tables of stone: Exodus xxxi, 18. The general rule undoubtedly is that whenever a statute or usage requires a writing, it must be made on paper or parchment; but it is not necessary that it be in ink. It may be in pencil. Numerous authorities sustain this view, as applied to contracts and promissory notes. A prudent man will not write his will in pencil, but it is valid if he does so. Myers v Vanderbilt, 84 Pa 510.

A Missouri statute defines the term "written instrument" as including every instrument, partly printed and partly written, or wholly printed with a written signature thereto. State v Carragin, 210 Mo 351, 109 SW 553.

writing obligatory. A bond; a promise under seal.

writings of an author. The literary and scientific productions of an author. United States v Chase, 135 US 255, 258, 34 L Ed 117, 119, 10 S Ct 756. Copyrightable material. Drop Dead Co. v S. C. Johnson & Sons, Inc. (CA9 Cal) 326 F2d 87.

As used in section 8, of the first article of the Federal Constitution conferring upon Congress the power to secure to authors the exclusive right to their respective "writings," the word means the literary productions of those authors, and Congress has declared these to include all forms of writing, printing, engraving, etching, etc., by which the ideas in the mind of the author are given visible expression. 18 Am J2d Copyr § 35.

[1380]

writ of amoveas manus. See amoveas manus.

writ of annuity. A common-law process available to the grantee of a rent charge for the enforcement of his right. 4 Am J2d Annu § 2.

writ of arrest. An intermediate remedy or process to secure the presence of the party until final judgment. Matoon v Eder, 6 Cal 57, 01.

See warrant of arrest.

writ of assistance. Process, sometimes called a writ of possession, issued by a court of equity to secure the possession of land after the title or right of possession has been finally determined: 6 Am J2d Assist § 1. A process for enforcing the right of a purchaser at a judicial sale to possession. 30A Am J Rev ed Jud S § 197. A writ under which the purchaser at an execution sale may obtain possession of the property. 6 Am J2d Assist § 6, A writ issued by an American colonial court authorizing officers of the king to call for aid and to search any premises.

The writ of assistance is a summary proceeding resorted to under the rules of chancery practice to give effect to the decree, and presupposes that the rights of the parties are only such as follow upon the decree and any sale had pursuant thereto. San Jose v Fulton, 45 Cal 316, 318.

writ of assize. A remedy which the law has provided for a freehold rent, when it is unjustly taken away.

The writ also lay to try the mere possessory title to an estate. Farley v Craig, 11 NJL 262, 272.

writ of association. A writ issued under the authority of statutes of Edward I and II whereby certain persons (usually the clerk of assize and his subordinate officers) were directed to associate themselves with the justices and serjeants so that a sufficient supply of commissioners for the assizes might always be had. See 3 Bl Comm 59.

writ of attachment. A writ, otherwise known as a warrant or order of attachment, issued at or near the beginning of a suit, the object of which is to seize and hold property of the defendant subject to the claim upon which suit is brought for the ultimate purpose of satisfying the claim out of the seized property after an adjudication in the action in favor of the plaintiff upon such claim. 6 Am J2d Attach § 276.

See alias writ; pluries writs.

writ of attain. See attaint.

writ of audita querela. See audita querela.

writ of certiorari. See certiorari.

writ of conspiracy. A writ which only lay at common law where the conspiracy was to indict the plaintiff either of treason or Felony, by which his life was in danger, and he had been acquitted of the indictment by verdict.

All the other cases of conspiracy in the books were but actions on the case. Hutchins v Hutchins (NY) 7 Hill 104, 107.

writ of consultation. A writ by which a cause which had been removed from the ecclesiastical court to the king's court was sent back again to the ecclesiastical court.

writ of coram nobis. See coram nobis. writ of coram vobis. See coram vobis.

writ of covenant. A writ to recover damages for the breach of a covenant.

writ of debt. The common-law writ in an action of debt. Lacaze v State (Pa) I Addison 58, 86.

See debet et detinct.

writ of deceit. A writ which lay against a person who had acted in the name of another and had deceived and injured him.

writ of delivery. A writ to enforce the delivery of chattels under a judgment.

writ of detinue. The writ in an action of detinue.

See detinue.

writ of distress. See distress.

writ of dower. The common-law process in obtaining an assignment of dower under the judgment of the court. 25 Am J2d Dow § 180.

writ of ejectment. The writ in an action of ejectment.

writ of elegit. See elegit.

writ of entry. The common-law writ in an action which is merely possessory, serving only to regain that possession whereof the demandant or plaintiff or his ancestors have been unjustly deprived by the tenant or possessor of the freehold, or those under whom he claims. See 3 Bl Comm 180.

writ of entry ad terminum qui praeteriit. A writ of entry for the term which has passed.

A common-law writ which lay for an owner who deemed it more expedient to admit that his tenant at sufferance had gained a tortious freehold, than to oust him by actual entry, as he had a lawful right to do. See 3 Bl Comm 175.

writ of error. A commission by which the judges of one court are authorized to examine a record on which a judgment was given in another court, and to affirm or reverse that judgment according to law. Cohen v Virginia (US) 6 Wheat 264, 5 1, Ed 257. The authorization of a proceeding whereby the record of a case is transferred from one court to a higher court whose function it is to review the record for ascertainment and correction of errors at law. People v Barber, 348 111 40, 180 NE 633, 92 ALR 1131.

writ of error coram nobis. See coram nobis.

writ of error coram vobis. See coram vobis.

writ of estrepement. A writ invoking an ancient remedy for the prevention of waste. 56 Am J1st Waste § 30. A writ of ancient origin, the purpose of which was originally to prevent waste, after judgment obtained in any action real and before possession delivered.

Its scope was enlarged by the Statute of Gloucester (6 Edward 1, ch. 13) to include cases of waste pending suit and to extend the writ to cases in which no recovery of land was sought. It was not only a preventive remedy, but was remedial and corrective, because the holder of land might not only be prevented from doing waste, but if he should do any, notwithstanding the prohibition, the plaintiff might recover damages for such waste, even up to the time when possession should be delivered to him. See 56 Am J1st Waste § 30.

writ of execution. A direct command of the court to the sheriff to carry out the mandate of the writ which normally is the enforcement of a judgment. 30 Am J2d Exec § 28.

See alias writ of execution; pluries writs.

writ of exigent. See exigent.

writ of extendi facias. See extendi facias.

writ of extent. See extendi facias; extent; extent in chief.

writ of false judgment. See false judgment.

writ of formedon. See formedon. writ of garnishment. See garnishment.

writ of habeas corpus. See habeas corpus.

writ of habeas corpus cum causa. Same as ad faciendum et recipiendum.

writ of habere facias possessionem. See habere facias possessionem.

writ of injunction. The writ of process issued in a suit for an injunction pursuant to an order or decree therein for the relief demanded. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 2.

writ of inquest. See writ of inquiry.

writ of inquiry. A writ for the assessment of damages by the sheriff and a jury.

Our courts possess the same power to assess damages as a jury in England upon a writ of inquiry, issued to the sheriff for that purpose. There, in these cases, the court must issue a writ to the sheriff, commanding him by twelve men to inquire into the damages and make return to the court; which process is called a writ of inquiry. The sheriff sits as judge, and there is a regular trial by twelve jurors to assess the damages. Lennon v Rawitzer, 57 Conn 583, 584, 19 A 334.

writ of mainprise. A writ directed to the sheriff, commanding him to take sureties for a prisoner's appearance, and to set him at large. See 3 Bl Comm 128.

writ of mandamus. The process or writ which issues in a proceeding in mandamus where the plaintiff or petitioner is granted relief by way of mandamus. 35 Am J1st Mand § 380.

See alternative writ of mandamus; peremptory writ of mandamus.

writ of mandate. Same as writ of mandamus.

writ of mesne. A writ which lay for a tenant paravail against a mesne lord for permitting a distress to be levied by the lord paramount by reason of the default of the mesne lord, the damage of the plaintiff, the tenant paravail.

writ of monstraverunt. A writ which lay for a tenant who was distrained for his default in the performance of duties or the rendition of services which were not incumbent upon him.

writ of ne exeat. See ne exeat.

writ of partition. A common-law writ for the partition of land between covenants which has given way both in this country and in England to the remedy in equity or under statute. 40 Am J1st Partit §§ 58, 59.

writ of pone. A writ issued after the return of the original writ and the nonappearance of the defendant, ordering the sheriff to attach or take sureties for his appearance. See 3 Bl Comm 280.

writ of possession. A process for the enforcement of a judgment determining the title to real estate. 3 Am J2d Adv P § 9 1. The process whereby a judgment in favor of a plaintiff in ejectment or an action substituted by statute for ejectment is executed. 25 Am J2d Eject § 133. A term sometimes used for writ of assistance.

See habere facias possessionem; writ of restitution. writ of praecipe. See praecipe.

writ of prevention. A writ to prohibit the bringing of an action or suit.

writ of privilege. A writ for the release of a member of parliament who had been arrested on civil process.

writ of procedendo. See procedendo; procedendo ad iudicium; procedendo de loquela.

writ of proclamation. A writ directed to the sheriff of the county of the defendant's residence, commanding the sheriff to make three proclamations of the pendency of outlawry proceedings against the defendant. This was a statutory requirement, the purpose of which was to prevent secret outlawries. See 3 Bl Comm 283.

writ of prohibito de vasto. See prohibito de vasto, directa parti.

writ of prohibition. A writ which commands the person or tribunal to whom it is directed not to do something which, by the suggestion of the relator, the court is informed he is about to do. Better defined as a writ to prevent a tribunal possessing judicial or quasi-judicial powers from exercising jurisdiction over matters not within its cognizance, or exceeding its jurisdiction in matters of which it has cognizance. 42 Am J1st Prohib § 2.

writ of prohibition of waste. A common-law writ, which anciently lay for the owner of the inheritance against the commission of waste by a tenant in dower, or by the curtesy, or a guardian in chivalry, which issued out of chancery, was directed to the sheriff and commanded him to prevent waste from being committed, and in the execution of which the sheriff might, if necessary, call to his aid the posse comitatus.

Subsequently the scope of the writ was so enlarged as to make it available for the purpose of preventing waste by a tenant for life or for years. See 56 Am J1st Waste § 30.

writ of pro retorno habendo. A writ issued in an action of replevin upon the entry of a judgment for the defendant, commanding the return to the defendant of property taken from him under the writ of replevin.

writ of protection. A writ protecting a witness threatened with civil arrest. 5 Am J2d Arr § 100. A writ for the release of a person in the king's service who had been arrested on civil process.

writ of quare impedit. See quare impedit.

writ of quod permittat prosternere. See quod permittat prosternere.

writ of quo warranto. See quo warranto. writ of recaption. See recaption.

writ of replevin. Process issued in an action of replevin authorizing an officer to seize the property involved in the action. 46 Am J1st Replev § 79.

See replevin.

[1382]

writ of restitution. The process for the enforcement of a judgment for the plaintiff in forcible entry and detainer. 35 Am J2d Fore E & D § 53. The final process in action or proceeding by a landlord to obtain possession from the tenant. 32 Am J1st L & T § 1028. A common-law writ for the restoration to a successful appellant of the amount which he had been compelled to pay under the judgment or decree reversed, a remedy which has given way in modern practice to more summary relief. 5 Am J2d A & E § 1001.

writ of review. A writ which is substantially the common-law writ of certiorari and is denominated in the codes a "special proceeding."

The return to the writ brings up the record of the inferior court, officer, or tribunal, not for the purpose of ascertaining an issue of fact, but to determine whether or not the functions of the court, officer, or tribunal have been exercised erroneously, or that the jurisdiction employed has been exceeded. The only inquiry to be considered upon the return to the writ is a question of law, in the examination of which the parties are not entitled to a jury trial, thus taking the proceedings out of the reason usually assigned of excluding equitable jurisdiction. Hall v Dunn, 52 Or 475, 97 P 811.

writ of right. An ancient writ for the recovery of real property wrongfully withheld from the owner.

The term was also applied to that class of writs which the sovereign was bound by Magna Charta to issue, and which are distinguishable from prerogative writs.

writ of right close. A writ which lay for the king's tenants in ancient demesne, and others of a similar nature, to try the right of their lands and tenements in the court of the lord exclusively. See 3 Bl Comm 195.

writ of scire facias. See scire facias.

writ of second deliverance. See second deliverance.

writ of second surcharge. See second surcharge.

writ of sequestration. See sequestration.

writ of subpoena. See subpoena.

writ of summons. See summons.

writ of supersedeas. See supersedeas.

writ of supervisory control. See supervisory writ.

writ of supplicavit. A mandatory writ which issued out of the court of king's bench or chancery to compel a justice, in case of his refusal, to take a recognizance to keep the peace. See 4 Bl Comm 253. A writ for the enforcement of the right of consortium. 26 Am J1st H & W § 17. A process of the chancery court which protected the wife against the husband's violence, and in cases where it was found unsafe for her to abide with him, as incident to such proceedings, compelled the husband to provide maintenance for her while she was separate and apart from him, by reason of his violent conduct toward her. Edgerton v Edgerton, 12 Mont 122, 29 P 966.

writ of tolt. See tolt.

writ of venire facias. See venire facias.

writ of waste. A writ invoking an ancient remedy to recover damages for waste committed and the estate itself in the same action. 56 Am J1st Waste § 30.

written. See writing.

written constitution. The typical constitution as known in the United States. 16 Am J2d Const L § 1.

The usual form of constitution in the United States.

See constitution.

written contract. A contract in writing, as distinguished from an oral contract.

See specialty.

written evidence. See documentary evidence; X-ray photograph.

written instrument. See writing.

written law. The law which is written in statutes, ordinances, bylaws, treaties and written constitutions as distinguished from the unwritten or common law. See 1 Bl Comm 62.

written notice. See notice in writing.

written slander. A poorly conceived term for libel. 33 Am J1st L & S § 3.

wrong. The infringement of a legal right belonging to a definite specific person. Kamm v Flink, 113 NJL 582, 175 A 62, 99 ALR 1. In common usage, an act in violation of a moral principle.

The word, as the word "injury," in law imports the invasion of a legal right, and to say that a person has committed a wrong, is to say that he has subjected himself to a cause of action. See Eller v Carolina & N. W. R. Co. 140 NC 140, 52 SE 305.

Sometimes that may be right in law which is otherwise from a moral standpoint, since there is no wrong in legal contemplation as to that upon which the law's instrumentalities have set the seal of right. Laun v Kipp, 155 Wis 347, 145 NW 183, 5 ALR 655.

As the word was used by the fathers of the common law in their saying that for every "wrong" there should be a remedy, they meant a violation of the municipal law, the law of civil conduct, not a transgression of the divine law, as such, nor a breach of etiquette. Western Union Tel. Co. v Ferguson, 157 Ind 64, 60 NE 674.

Under a statutory test to the effect that a person is not excused from liability as an idiot, imbecile, lunatic, or insane person, except upon proof that at the time of committing the alleged criminal act, he was laboring under such a defect of reason as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or not to know that the act was wrong, the word "wrong" does not always and necessarily mean legal wrong, although it sometimes includes such a wrong. People v Schmidt, 216 NY 324, 110 NE 945.

wrongdoer. One who commits a wrong against another. A tortfeasor.

wrongful. Unlawful, inequitable, contrary to natural justice, or in violation of the principles of good morals. Board of Comrs. v Armstrong, 91 Ind 528, 536.

wrongful abstraction. An unauthorized and illegal taking or withholding of funds or securities from the possession and control of one's employer and the appropriation of such funds or securities to the benefit of the taker or to the benefit of another. 50 Am J1st Suret § 336.

wrongful act. Any act which in the ordinary course will infringe upon the rights of another to his damage, unless it is done in the exercise of an equal or superior right. Brennan v United Hatters of North America, 73 NJL 729, 65 A 165; Louis Kamm, Inc. v Flink, 113 NJL 582, 175 A 62, 99 ALR I.

[1383]

The words are comprehensive enough to include negligent acts, but they are intended primarily to cover cases where the act was wanton or was intentionally committed, or where one may have counseled or procured another to do it, when, in contemplation of law, the act of counseling or advising makes the wrongful act his own. See Foreman v Taylor Coal Co. 112 Ky 845, 66 SW 1044.

wrongful attachment. Wrongfully obtaining or tortiously employing an order for, or writ, of attachment, as where no ground for attachment exists, where property of the defendant not liable to attachment is seized, or where property of a third person is seized as that of the defendant. A wrong for which a remedy exists in a suit on the attachment bond, an action for malicious attachment, an action for abuse of process, or a suit for malicious prosecution. 6 Am J2d Attach § 596.

See wrongful levy.

wrongful commitment. Commitment of a person to an institution for the insane upon proceedings in contravention of the constitutional rights of the persons affected. 29 Am J Rev ed Ins Per § 38.

See false imprisonment. wrongful conduct. See wrongful act.

wrongful death. An action provided by constitution or statute to recover from one whose wrongful act, neglect or default has resulted in the death of another person. 22 Am J2d Dth § 2.

wrongful delivery. An unauthorized delivery by the depository of an escrow. 28 Am J2d Escr § 23.

wrongful distress. A distress which is unlawful and actionable, as where there was no rent in arrears, or where acts rendering the landlord a trespasser ab initio are committed in making the levy, or where a second distress is barred by a prior distress, or where the distress is excessive and a sale is made under it. See 32 Am J1st L & T § 645.

wrongful execution. An actionable wrong predicated upon irregular procedure, irregularity in the judgment upon which the writ was obtained, the doing of an act outside the authority conferred by the writ, an improper seizure of property, a wrongful sale, or the enforcement of an execution in violation of an injunction. 30 Am J2d Exec §§ 755 et seq.

See wrongful levy.

wrongful garnishment. Improperly obtaining or tortiously employing the remedy of garnishment. A wrong akin to wrongful attachment. 6 Am J2d Attach § 596.

See wrongful attachment.

wrongful injunction. An injunction sued out maliciously without just cause. 28 Am J Rev ed Inj § 334.

wrongful levy. A levy made by the sheriff or other officer upon exempt property; a levy which is excessive in reference to the amount of property seized; a levy upon the property of a person other than one named in the writ; or any levy constituting an improper and illegal exercise of authority as a cover for illegal conduct on the part of the officer. 47 Am J1st Sher § 48.

See wrongful attachment; wrongful execution.

wrongfully. Unlawfully, unjustly, or in a manner contrary to sound moral principles. Board of Comrs. v Armstrong, 91 Ind 528, 536.

wrongful removal. Exceeding jurisdiction in removing a public officer without following the method provided by statute. 43 Am J1st Pub Of § 240.

wrongful search. See unreasonable search.

wrongful search and seizure. See unreasonable search and seizure.

wrongful seizure. See unreasonable seizure.

wrong name. See misnomer.

wrongous imprisonment. The term used in the Scots law for "false imprisonment." Evans v MLoughlan (Eng) 15 ERC 173.

Wunderlich Act. A federal statute the principle effect of which is broadening of the criteria for judicial review of administrative decisions pursuant to the disputes clauses" of Government contracts so as to render administrative conclusions of law not binding on a reviewing court and an administrative finding of facts not binding on a reviewing court if fraudulent, capricious, so grossly erroneous as necessarily to imply bad faith, or not supported by substantial evidence. Anno: 10 L Ed 2d 1217.

wyte. An immunity or exemption from amercement.
See amercement.

X

X. Roman numeral ten.

x. A sign of multiplication, meaning times or by, as 3x6. A familiar legend indicating position upon a map or drawing, as: “x marks the spot where .....” The unknown quantity.

X-ray. Noun: An electromagnetic ray used in the diagnosis and treatment of certain bodily conditions of disease and injury because of its penetrating character. The instrumentality by which the electromagnetic ray is employed. Verb: To employ the electromagnetic ray in treatment or examination of the body. To take an X-ray photograph.

The rays were discovered by Roentgen and have been known and recognized by scientists, both in and out of the medical profession since 1895. Henslin v Wheaton, 91 Minn 219, 97 NW 882.

X-ray photograph. A distinctive kind of photograph or picture produced by the employment of electromagnetic rays in an instrumentality directed to the human body, constituting, under interpretation by an expert, a reliable representation of bones, foreign substances lodged in the body, or the condition of tissues of the body. 29 Am J2d Ev § 799.

X-ray photographs, properly identified, authenticated and explained in detail by doctors testifying in behalf of the respective parties, and exhibited to and examined in detail by the jury during the trial, are, irrespective of the jury's ability to understand such photographs, within the operation of a statute which permits a jury to take with it to the jury room “any written evidence.” Texas Employers' Ins. Asso. v Crow, 148 Tex 113, 221 SW2d 235, 10 ALR2d 913.

X-ray specialist. A radiologist; a doctor of medicine qualified as an expert in the employment or the X-ray and its use in the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

X-ray technician. A person trained in the use of an X-ray machine, although not as a radiologist.

Y

Y. A popular designation for the Young Men's Christian Association, also for a building wherein activities of such association are conducted.

y. Forked tracks at the end of a streetcar line upon which a streetcar is reversed for the return trip.

yacht. A watercraft of elaborate construction used for pleasure, usually powered by sails but having a motor by way of auxiliary power. 12 Am J2d Boats § 1. A vessel entitled to enrolment and license as an American vessel employed for the purpose of pleasure, not for the transportation of passengers or merchandise for pay. 48 Am J1st Ship § 51.

yacht basin. A place for the mooring of yachts and other pleasure craft.

yard. A unit of lineal measure, the equivalent of three feet. An area surrounding, or adjacent to one or more sides of, a dwelling house, for the use, comfort, and recreation of the residents.

See railroad yard; stockyard.

yard engine. Same as switch engine.

yard master. A railroad employee in charge of a railroad yard.

yardmen. Gardeners employed in the care and maintenance of lawn or garden. Employees of a railroad who work in a railroad yard.

yard restriction. A restriction in a zoning law stipulating the minimum side or rear yard area, or the percentage of the area of a building lot that may be occupied by the building. 58 Am J1st Zon § 52.

Yazoo Frauds Act. A Georgia statute enacted in 1795, and subsequently declared unconstitutional by the courts, which purported to authorize the sale to individuals of certain public lands, including lands which now comprise all of the state of Mississippi and half of the state of Alabama.

yea and nay. Yes and no.

year. A determinate period, consisting for all practical purposes of 365 days, except as 366 days appear in a leap year. 52 Am J1st Time § 10. A calendar year in the absence of qualification. Dycema v Story & C. Piano Co. 220 Mich 600, 190 NW 638, 27 ALR 660. A season, particularly a farming season in which crops are planted, cultivated, and harvested, or a season as known to proprietors of vacation resorts.

See current year; leap year; solar year; term of years; within a year.

year and a day. A limitation of time for some purposes. Lyon v Cleveland, 170 Pa 611, 33 A 143 (former limitation upon sale of land under a judgment). The familiar rule in prosecutions for homicide that if death does not ensue within a year and a day after the infliction of a wound, it will be presumed that death, when it finally does occur, proceeded from some other cause. 26 Am J1st Homi § 269.

The statute of Gloucester provided that an appeal of death must be sued out within a year and a day from the day of the victim's death, and this was said to be declaratory of the common law. The rule of a year and a day was also applied at common law to inquisitions of deodands, brought to forfeit to the king any personal chattel that was the immediate cause of a person's death. The reason for the rule was that the law does not look upon such a wound as the cause of a man's death if he lived longer than a year and a day. Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis Railroad Co. v Clarke, 152 US 230, 240, 38 L Ed 422, 424, 14 S Ct 579.

Year Books. The earliest reports of cases heard in the courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, and before the Justices Itinerant, in England, covering the period from about 1270 to 1530.

The reports for this period are presently extant in manuscripts in a more or less regular series from the 18th year of the reign of Edward I down through the 27th year of the reign of Henry VIIIth, and are attempted verbatim accounts of what was said in open court by the Justices and counsel, written in abbreviated Anglo-French, and, perhaps, the earliest of which were taken down privately by counsel and students of the law, and, it would seem, toward the end of the period by professional private scribes as a business venture. In short, they are contemporary reports of English law not only of the utmost value but the like of which is to be found in no other legal system.

The reports for individual years (consisting of the four terms of court: Hilary, Easter, Trinity, and Michaelmas) were collected and bound together and hence came to be known as the Year Books. It has been conclusively established that these reports were not made by the prothonotaries, or chief scribes of the court at the expense of the crown, as Blackstone erroneously reports, but rather that they were the result of the private enterprise of the English Bar.

The Year Books had a wide private circulation in manuscript form down to the time when printing came into common use. Except for reports from the reigns of Edward I, Edward II, and Richard II (for which there is still abundant manuscript authority extant today) reports for various individual years and groups of years, without any attention to chronological order, were printed in many editions during the 16th-century. A "Quarto" edition of previously printed reports was printed in ten volumes at the end of the 16th and the beginning of the 17th century. In 1678-1680 there was printed what is known as the "Folio" or "Vulgate" edition of the Year Books which, in addition to reprinting the hithertofore black-letter printed texts of the Year Books from the reign of Edward III down through the 27th year of the reign of Henry VIII (omitting the reports from the reign of Richard II, some of which were first printed in modern times), printed for the first time, from one manuscript, the reports of 1-19, Edward II. This "edition of 1679", as it is sometimes called, was made up of eleven volumes.

In modern times the English Records Commission has published in modern form in the Rolls Series the reports of 20-35 Edward I, and 11-20 Edward III; the Selden Society has published Year Books 1-12 Edward II and I Henry VI; the Ames Foundation of Harvard has published the Year Books 11-13 Richard II; and, Sweet & Maxwell, the Year Books 9-10 Henry V.

Note: The foregoing dissertation on the Year Books is the work of Mr. Ralph V. Rogers of the Editorial Staff of the Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company. Such contribution is acknowledged with appreciation. W.S.A.

[1386]

year, day, and waste. An ancient right of the king.

"In petit treason and felony the offender also forfeits all his chattel interests absolutely, and the profits of all estates of freehold during life, and, after his death, all his lands and tenements in fee simple (but not those in tail) to the crown, for a very short period of time; for the king shall have them for a year and a day, and may commit therein what waste he pleases; which is called the king's year, day and waste." See 4 Bl Comm 385.

year-end bonus. A bonus paid to employees near the end of the calendar year, often during the week before Christmas.

yearling. A domestic animal past one year old and in its second year.

year of mourning. The year following the death of a married man during which his widow was not permitted to remarry, for the reason, it has been said, that is if a widow remarried soon after her husband's death, the determination of the parent age of a child born to her a matter of months after her second marriage would present difficulty. See 1 Bl Comm 457.

year of our Lord. The beginning of the Christian era.

In England, in court proceedings, the date some times refers to the year of the king's reign and sometimes to the beginning of the Christian era, but since in this country our only national era, that of our independence, is not used in courts of justice, and we use but the one, the Christian era, it is not a fatal defect in either criminal or civil proceedings to omit the words "of our Lord," after the word "year." Commonwealth v Doran, 80 Mass (14 Gray) 37, 38.

year to year estate. See estate from year to year; tenancy from year to year.

year-to-year renewal. The option of the maker of a note for indefinite renewal. 11 Am J2d B & N § 306.

yellow light. A traffic signal indicating the necessity of caution.

yellow line. A barrier painted on the middle thread of paving as a control of traffic on the highway.

yeoman. A freeholder. A solid citizen. An enlisted man in the Navy engaged in office or clerical work.

Yiddish. A dialect of the German language which includes words from other languages, particularly Hebrew, spoken at one time by many Jews in Europe and elsewhere throughout the world, but of diminishing use at the present time.

yield. Noun: The amount of a crop by bushel or pound grown on a specified area of land. The return upon an investment. Verb: To produce; to earn, as a principal sum yields interest, or a farm yields a crop. To perform, as, to yield services incident to land tenure. To give way. To concede.

yield right of way. Permitting another vehicle to proceed without interference.

Y. M. C. A. Abbreviation of Young Men's Christian Association.

yoke. A measure of land, being the area of land ploughable by an ox-team in one day. A pair of oxen. A symbol of bondage, deriving from the name of the wooden frame used in harnessing a pair of oxen for work.

Yom Kippur. A sacred holiday of the Jews, otherwise known as the Day of Atonement.

York. See custom of York.

York-Antwerp rules. Rules formulated by a conference of representatives of commercial interests in the interest of uniformity in bills of lading and contracts of affreightment involved in international commerce, the principles of which appear in modern uniform laws. 13 Am J2d Car §§ 264 et seq.

you-drive-it. See drive-it-yourself system.

Young Men's Christian Association. An organization of national and international scope for the improvement and betterment of men and boys, particularly in their formative years.

Young Turks. A name applied to the members of a political party, especially members in Congress or a state legislature, who break away from control of the party by the existing leadership.

Young Women's Christian Association. An organization of national and international scope for the improvement and betterment of women and girls, particularly in their formative years.

youth. Young people considered as a class, inclusive of both male and female.

youth rally. A meeting of young people called for discussion of a particular subject of interest. A meeting of young persons constituting a church activity. 24 Am J2d Disturb M § 2.

Y. W. C. A. Abbreviation of Young Women's Christian Association.

zealot. A person who is zealous to an excessive degree, especially in the cause of a religion.

zealous witness. A witness eager to be of service to a party, usually the party who called him.

zingara. Any female in a band of gypsies.

zingaro. A gypsy.

zig zagging. A driver veering back and forth across the highway. 8 Am J2d Auto § 952.

Zollverein. A customs union of German states, existing prior to the establishment of the German Empire.

zone. A district established by a zoning law. 58 Am J1st Zon § 3. A specific area noted in the establishment of a parcel post rate. 41 Am J1st P O § 61. One of the sections of the country under a division made in the fixing of rates charged by railroads.

See time zone ; zoning.

zone of employment. See working place.

zoning. The division of a municipality into districts for the application of municipal regulations. Miller v Board of Public Works, 195 Cal 477, 234 P 3 8 1, 38 ALR 1479, error dismd 273 US 781, 71 L Ed 889, 47 S Ct 460. The creation and application of structural and use restrictions imposed upon the owners of real estate within prescribed districts or zones. 58 Am J1st Zon § 1. Literally, separating commercial or industrial districts of a city or town from the residential districts, and prohibiting the establishment of places of business or industry in any district designated as residential. State ex rel. Civello v New Orleans, 154 La 271, 97 So 440, 33 ALR 260, 268.

Zoning regulations are divided into two classes: (1). Those which regulate the height or bulk of buildings within certain designated districts-in other words, those regulations which have to do with structural and architectural designs of the buildings; and (2) those which prescribe the use to which buildings within certain designated districts may be put. Both modes of regulation have received the sanction of the Supreme Court of the United States. Miller v Board of Public Works, 195 Cal 477, 234 P 381, 38 ALR 1479, 1483.

See partial zoning; spot zoning.

zoning commission, An administrative agency of a municipality to which the administration of zoning laws and regulations is entrusted. 58 Am J1st Zon § 178.

zoning map. A map showing the districts established by a zoning law, sometimes annexed to the ordinance, made a part of it, and given a controlling effect. Anno: 159 ALR 857.

zoning regulations. See zoning.

zoo. A place provided by a municipal corporation for the housing, care, and exhibition of animals.

zoological garden. A zoo maintained in elaborate surroundings.

See zoo.

zymurgy. The branch of chemistry concerned with the process of fermentation, particularly in the making of wine or the brewing of beer. Fletcher v Paige, 124 Mont 114, 220 P2d 84, 19 ALR2d 1108.
