§ 283. Furnishing Indemnity for Expenses.—There may be circumstances in which it will be incumbent upon the creditors to advance the money required for the expense of legal proceedings, if they desire such proceedings to be instituted with the idea that they may result in benefit to themselves. Thus, generally, where creditors of an estate desire the trustee to bring suit to set aside alleged preferences or fraudulent conveyances, or otherwise to recover property alleged to belong to the bankrupt, they may be required to guaranty to the trustee all the probable costs and expenses likely to be incurred in the prosecution of such suit, if there are no funds of the estate to pay such expenses, or if the money in hand is not more than enough for the creditors having priority, or if the wish of those creditors is opposed by the trustee himself or by a considerable body of other creditors.[64] But though a trustee in bankruptcy is not required to litigate every question called to his notice by creditors, however frivolous or apparently lacking in support, yet he cannot, by requiring indemnity in every instance against costs and expenses, cast the risk of a controversy respecting alleged preferences, etc., on the particular creditor requesting him to undertake it.[65]

[61] In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526. And see In re Meadows, Williams & Co., 181 Fed. 911, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100.

[62] See In re Baber, 119 Fed. 520, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406; In re Kearney, 184 Fed. 190, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757; In re Harper, 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918.

[63] In re Arnett, 112 Fed. 770, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522.

§ 284. Right to Information as to Estate.—The bankruptcy act clearly recognizes and fully provides for the right of creditors to require all legitimate information in regard to the estate in which they are interested and its administration by the trustee, and to inspect records, accounts, and papers relating to it, to the end that they may be fully advised as to all matters affecting their interests and competent to "take such steps as may be pertinent and necessary for the best interests of the estate." Thus, it is made the duty of the trustee to "furnish such information concerning the estate and its administration as may be requested by parties in interest." (Section 47, clause 5.) The accounts and papers of trustees "shall be open to the inspection of officers and parties in interest." (Section 49.) Referees, also, must "furnish such information concerning the estates in process of administration before them as may be requested by the parties in interest." (Section 39, clause 3.) And if any person, while acting as referee or trustee, shall "refuse to permit a reasonable opportunity for the inspection of the accounts relating to the affairs of, and the papers and records of, estates in their charge, by parties in interest, when directed by the court so to do," he is liable to punishment by fine and the forfeiture of his office. (Section 29, c. 3.) But it has been held that the refusal by the referee of permission to take a copy of the inventory, which is at all times accessible to the creditor, is not prejudicial to the latter, and is no ground for opposition to the recording of a resolution of composition.[66]

[64] In re Barrett, 132 Fed. 362, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Barnes, 18 Fed. 158; In re Griffith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 546; In re Hughes, 2 Ben. 85, 1 N. B. R. 226, Fed. Cas. No. 6,841; In re Sawyer, 2 Low. 551, 16 N. B. R. 460, Fed. Cas. No. 12,396; In re McNamara, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 341.

[65] In re Baird, 112 Fed. 960, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448.

[66] In re Tifft, 18 N. B. R. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 14,033.

CHAPTER XVII

APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE OF TRUSTEES

§ 285. Qualifications of Trustees.—The forty-fifth section of the bankruptcy act provides that trustees in bankruptcy may be individuals who are competent to perform the duties of the office and who reside, or have an office, in the judicial district within which they are appointed, or corporations authorized by their charters or by law to act in such a capacity and having an office in the judicial district within which they are appointed. Nothing appearing to the contrary in the statute, it would seem that a woman might be elected or appointed trustee, if otherwise qualified and competent. And it has been held that a person is not disqualified from acting in this capacity because he is an alien.[1] Under the second clause of the statute, a trust company or other suitable corporation may act as a trustee in bankruptcy, and the selection or appointment of such companies has not been uncommon.[2]

The requirement that the trustee must be "competent" to perform the duties of his office probably has reference to business competence and skill. But it must be noted that this is a question for the creditors to determine in the first instance. It is for their own sake that a competent trustee must be chosen, and while their choice is subject to the approval or disapproval of the court, it is not believed that any court of bankruptcy would set aside an election of trustee on the ground that the appointee was not competent, unless at the instance of a respectable minority and upon very strong representations of his unfitness.[3] In the cases where it becomes necessary for the court to name the trustee,

[1] In re Coe, 154 Fed. 162, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[2] See, for instance, In re Howe Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 524, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477, where it appears from the report that the trustee in bankruptcy was a trust company, though the case itself is not concerned with this question.

[3] In re Clairmont, 1 Low. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,781.

regard must be had to the business experience and skill of the person to be appointed, very much as in the case of the appointment of a receiver. The court should here take into account the nature of the bankrupt's property and business, and select for its administration a person whose experience in that business or with property of that nature will enable him to dispose of it to the best advantage.[4]

A trustee in bankruptcy does not act in the interest of the bankrupt, but, as a rule, adversely to him. For this reason he must not be under the influence or control of the bankrupt, and it is said that a near relative of the bankrupt is not eligible as trustee of his estate, or at least, while such relationship may not be an absolute disqualification, it is a circumstance which should have great weight in determining the question of his confirmation.[5] But there is nothing to prevent the creditors from electing one of their own number, or the court from appointing one of them, to be trustee. The fact of his interest in the estate does not disqualify him. There is no requirement that the trustee should be a disinterested third party, and as a matter of fact, it will frequently be highly expedient to choose one of the heavier creditors.[6] And since his successful administration of the estate, in view of the extraordinary powers and remedies with which he is vested, does not depend on the good will of the bankrupt, it is no objection to his approval by the court that he has incurred the violent hostility of the [4] In the analogous case of the appointment of a receiver, it has been said that it is not proper to appoint a person as receiver over a kind of property (such as a mill) the management of which he does not understand, with an undertaking that he will act under the direction of a person who does understand it. The receiver should be a person competent to manage the particular property and to act on his own responsibility. Lupton v. Stephenson, 11 Ir. Eq. 484.

[5] In re Powell, 2 N. B. R. 45, Fed. Cas. No. 11,354; In re Zinn, 40 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 461, 4 N. B. R. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 18,216; In re Bogert, 3 N. B. R. 651, Fed. Cas. No. 1,600; In re Zinn, 4 Ben. 500, 4 N. B. R. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 18,215. See, as to the analogous case of receivers, Wetter v. Schlieper, 7 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 92; Williamson v. Wilson, 1 Bland. Ch. (Md.) 418, 427.

[6] In re Lazoris, 120 Fed. 716, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; In re Lewisohn, 98 Fed. 576, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Clairmont, 1 Low. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,781. The act of 1867 provided that "no person who has received any preference contrary to the provisions of this act shall be eligible as assignee." Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5035. As to this prohibition, see In re Powell, 2 N. B. R. 45, Fed. Cas. No. 11,354; In re Stuyvesant Bank, 5 Ben. 566, 6 N. B. R. 272, Fed. Cas. No. 13,581. In the case of a trustee in bankruptcy, as in the case of a receiver in equity, it is not invariably necessary, or even proper, that he should be an entirely disinterested person. There may be circumstances in which one of the creditors would be an eminently suitable person for the office. When the work to be done is the unearthing of concealed preferences, meeting and baffling fraudulent designs in relation to the secreting or transfer of property, exposing fraudulent conspiracies, and the like, it is probable that the interests of all concerned will be best served by the active labor of one who has a direct and personal interest in realizing the greatest possible amount of assets. In an analolatter.[7] Neither is there anything in the act to prevent the attorney for the creditors, or for one or some of them, from being chosen as trustee, and if he is duly elected by the creditors, and is not otherwise objectionable, he will be confirmed.[8] But on the other hand, no trustee will be approved or confirmed by the court who has plainly been elected under the influence or control of the bankrupt or in his interest.[9] Thus, the bankrupt's own attorney is not eligible. And even one who has no apparent connection with the bankrupt's attorneys, other than having an office in the same building with them, may be set aside as unsuitable for the office of trustee when objected to by the minority creditors and when the votes which elected him were cast under powers of attorney held by the bankrupt's attorneys.[10] One who has acted as attorney for the bankrupt, in matters not connected with the bankruptcy, may be eligible as trustee, but a person who has a direct interest adverse to that of the creditors generally, or who is the attorney of such person, is disqualified.[11] No debtor of the bankrupt should be appointed trustee, and hence the court will disapprove the selection of the bankrupt's common-law assignee, the assignment being the act of bankruptcy relied on, and the assignee having an unsettled account and a claim for his services.[12] But the mere fact that one who is chosen gous case, on a motion to appoint a receiver, a federal court has said: "He is not, and ought not to be, indifferent between the parties. His duty requires him to be the active adversary of this fraudulent debtor and his accomplices. In the selection of a person to discharge these duties, the respondent [corresponding to the bankrupt] in the position he now occupies, should have no voice, any more than the criminal should have in the choice of a detective to ferret out and recover the fruits of his crime. A person, therefore, who, by relationship or other connection, may be supposed to feel in some degree the desire felt by the complainant to collect the sum decreed to be due, would seem, if otherwise unobjectionable, to be eminently fit to be appointed a receiver in a case like the present." Shainwald v. Lewis, 8 Fed. 878. And see further, Cookes v. Cookes, 2 De G., J. & S. 526; Taylor v. Life Association of America, 3 Fed. 465; Matter of Knickerbocker Bank, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 602; Chamberlain v. Greenleaf, 4 Abb. New Cas. (N. Y.) 92.

[7] In re Mangan, 133 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303.

[8] W. A. Liller Bldg. Co. v. Reynolds, 247 Fed. 90, 159 C. C. A. 308, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Margolies, 191 Fed. 369, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; In re Lawson, 2 N. B. R. 112, Fed. Cas. No. 8,150; In re Barrett, 2 Hughes, 444, 2 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 1,043; In re Clairmont, 1 Low. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,781; Redick v. Woolworth, 17 Neb. 260, 22 N. W. 693, 52 Am. Rep. 410. When an attorney accepts the office of trustee, he surrenders for the time his standing in the court of bankruptcy as an attorney for creditors. In re Evans, 116 Fed. 909, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

[9] In re Van De Mark, 175 Fed. 287, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

[10] In re Sitting, 182 Fed. 917, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; In re Rekersdres, 108 Fed. 206, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811; compare In re Fisher, 193 Fed. 104, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793.

[11] In re Clairmont, 1 Low. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,781. See In re Dayville Woolen Co., 114 Fed. 674, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; In re Wink, 206 Fed. 348, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298.

[12] In re Kellar (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 830. As a trustee in bankruptcy may be called by the creditors as the trustee advised the voluntary assignment under the state law which constituted the act of bankruptcy does not render him incompetent.[13]

The reason for the requirement that the trustee must be a resident of the judicial district in which he is appointed, or at least have an office therein, is obvious. And this requirement is imperative. A person who does not reside within the district is absolutely disqualified from being trustee, unless he has a fixed place of daily business within the district.[14] But mere remoteness of the trustee's residence from the place where the trust property is to be administered (as, for instance, where he lives in another county) is no ground for disapproving the election if he satisfies the requirements of the statute and is the free choice of the creditors.[15]

There is a rule in relation to the selection of a person to be receiver of a corporation which might very well be applied, and probably would be applied, in parallel cases under the bankruptcy law. It is that, when the condition of an insolvent corporation shows fraud, recklessness, or gross negligence in the conduct of its affairs the court, in selecting a receiver, will not appoint any of the officers or directors who have taken an active part in its former management.[16] But aside from questions of this kind, where three trustees are elected for a bankrupt corporation, it is no ground of objection that one of them is a director of the corporation, and in case it becomes the duty of the trustees to bring an action against the directors, it may be done by the other two, making upon to sue to set aside transfers, to compel persons to account for property belonging to the bankrupt estate, etc., a trust company, which was trustee of mortgages belonging to the bankrupt, and which was intimately associated with the bankrupt's business should not be appointed trustee, since it might be compelled to assume inconsistent positions. Wilson v. Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 824, 147 C. C. A. 18, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[13] In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[14] In re Havens, 1 N. B. R. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 6,231; In re Clairmont, 1 Low. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,781; In re Loder, 2 N. B. R. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 8,459. In one case, where the trustee elected did not reside in the same city with the bankrupt, and certain creditors objected to him on this ground, the court suggested that the parties should agree on some suitable person, living in that city, to be associated with the chosen trustee as co-trustee. In re Jacoby, Fed. Cas. No. 7,166.

[15] In re Kreuger, 196 Fed. 705, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440; In re Jacobs & Roth, 154 Fed. 988, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

[16] Buck v. Piedmont & A. L. Ins. Co., 4 Fed. 849; Atkins v. Wabash, St. L. & P. Ry. Co., 29 Fed. 161; Attorney General v. Bank of Columbia, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 511. See In re Stuyvesant Bank, 5 Ben. 566, 6 N. B. R. 272, Fed. Cas. No. 13,581. And see In re Gordon Supply & Mfg. Co., 129 Fed. 622, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94. A stockholder and officer of a bankrupt corporation is not, for that reason alone, incompetent to act as its trustee in bankruptcy. In re Merritt Const. Co., 219 Fed. 555, 133 C. C. A. 323, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

their cotrustee a defendant as director.[17] It is also held that a man who is himself a bankrupt and undischarged is not a proper person to be appointed trustee of the estate of another bankrupt, and the referee should not receive votes cast for such a person.[18]

§ 286. Election of Trustee.—"The creditors of a bankrupt estate shall, at their first meeting after the adjudication or after a vacancy has occurred in the office of trustee, or after an estate has been reopened, or after a composition has been set aside or a discharge revoked, or if there is a vacancy in the office of trustee, appoint one trustee or three trustees of such estate."[19] As to the time of making the appointment, there can be no trust estate for administration, and consequently no authority to choose a trustee, until after an adjudication has been made.[20] As to the number of trustees, they must be either one or three. If the creditors elect two trustees, there is a vacancy in the office of third trustee, which the creditors should fill at a subsequent meeting to be called by the referee, but if they fail to do so, the referee himself may fill it.[21] In case of the bankruptcy of a partnership and also the individual partners, it is thought to be the intention of the statute that the same person (or the same three persons) should be appointed trustee for both the firm and the separate estates.[22] But it is held that the court has discretionary power to appoint separate trustees for the estate of the firm and that of an individual partner or partners, but it is not customary, is seldom necessary, and is likely to lead to greater expense and to undesirable complications. Hence this power should be exercised only in cases of special and peculiar necessity, and for the protection of rights which cannot be adequately secured by the action of a common trustee or by the creditors directly.[23]

[17] In re Syracuse Paper & Pulp Co., 164 Fed. 275, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

[18] In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 136.

[19] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 44. The forty-fifth word in this section—the word "or" occurring after the word "revoked"—is superfluous and the sentence should be read as if it were omitted. The meaning is that if there is a vacancy in the office of trustee at the time when the creditors hold their next meeting after the reopening of an estate, or the setting aside of a composition, or the revocation of a discharge (that is, if the court, at the time of confirming the composition or granting the discharge, also discharged the trustee), then a new trustee must be appointed. Compare the language of section 50, c, where the same phrases are repeated but with the omission of this word.

[20] In re Back Bay Automobile Co., 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[21] In re William F. Fisher & Co., 135 Fed. 223, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366.

[22] In re Coe, 154 Fed. 162, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[23] In re Currie, 197 Fed. 1012, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834.

The statute does not prescribe any particular manner of conducting the election of a trustee in bankruptcy. It is not necessary that the creditors should first take an informal vote and then follow it by a formal ballot, in fact, there is no such thing known in the law as an informal vote. Any manner of expressing their choice of a trustee, provided it is free from doubt and ambiguity, will be a sufficient vote.[24] The election may be by ballot, viva voce, or by calling the name of each creditor or by calling upon the persons representing them to name their choice.[25] But while the manner of proceeding is left very much to the determination of the creditors themselves it should conform to the general practice of meetings; and Form No. 22, prescribed by the general orders, "seems to contemplate that each creditor shall vote, and that his name, residence, and amount of debt shall be recorded. If on the first vote no choice is made, by reason of a greater part in number and value failing to concur, a second, third, or any number of ballots may be had, until the required concurrence is obtained."[26] If no choice of a trustee is made at the first session of the creditors, the meeting may be adjourned to another day, and the trustee then chosen; it continues to be the "first meeting" notwithstanding such adjournment.[27] So also, if objections are raised to proxies offering to vote, and the referee decides that they are disqualified, he may adjourn the meeting, in order to enable the creditors affected to appear in person or by valid proxies, but he is not bound to do so, and if he directs the creditors present to proceed forthwith to an election, the result will not be set aside for that reason unless it is shown that he abused his discretion.[28] It is also sufficient cause for adjourning the meeting that the person chosen as trustee declines to act (although creditors should try to avoid this emergency by first obtaining the consent of the trus-

[24] In re Pearson, 2 N. B. R. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 10,878.

[25] In re Lake Superior Ship Canal Co., 7 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 7,997.

[26] In re Phelps, 1 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,071.

[27] In re Phelps, 1 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,071; In re Nice & Schreiber, 123 Fed. 987, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639. Where objections are filed to certain claims, and no person receives the votes of an undisputed majority in number and amount for trustee, the referee is authorized to postpone the election, and on his doing so, the election should be treated as tentative. In re Knox, 221 Fed. 36, 136 C. C. A. 562, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461. So also, it is in the discretion of the referee to adjourn the first meeting of creditors from time to time, in order that disputed claims may be investigated before the voting for trustee is completed. In re Show (D. C.) 248 Fed. 295, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481. Or he may adjourn the meeting to permit claimants to amend their statements of claim. In re Eisenberg (D. C.) 251 Fed. 427, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

[28] In re McGill, 106 Fed. 57, 45 C. C. A. 218, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

tee whom they expect to elect), or that objections are presented against the person elected and are taken under advisement by the referee.[29]

The meeting should be organized at the hour designated in the official notice, and should be kept open for a proper length of time, to enable all the creditors who desire to participate to come in and cast their votes. The law does not prescribe the length of time for which the meeting must be kept open, but under any ordinary circumstances an hour is not too long. It was the general practice under the act of 1867, as also under the English bankruptcy law and the insolvency laws of some of the states, to accord that much time to parties interested to appear.[30] Where, at the first meeting, the bankrupt proposes to offer terms of composition to his creditors, the referee, in a proper case, should postpone the choice of a trustee, to give opportunity for the filing of the proposed composition, and if it is filed, he should further postpone the selection of a trustee until the entry of an order refusing to confirm such agreement.[31] It will be noticed that the statute provides (Section 56) that "creditors shall pass upon matters submitted to them at their meetings by a majority vote in number and amount of claims of all creditors whose claims have been allowed and are present." In the absence of any more specific direction, this provision must be understood as applicable to the choice of a trustee, and a majority of those creditors who are present at the meeting, and have had their claims allowed, must concur in his selection, as well as a majority in value of the claims of such creditors.[32]

§ 287. Same; Cases Where no Trustee Appointed.—The general orders in bankruptcy provide that "if the schedule of a voluntary bankrupt discloses no assets, and if no creditor appears at the first meeting, the court may, by order setting out the facts, direct that no trustee be appointed; but at any time thereafter a trustee may be appointed, if the court shall deem it desirable."[33] This order is within the power granted by the act to the Supreme Court to prescribe necessary rules for carrying the statute into effect.[34] And a case for its application arises where the schedule of a voluntary bankrupt shows no other assets than

[29] In re Lewensohn, 98 Fed. 576, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

[30] In re Gilley, 2 Low. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 5,438; In re Phelps, 1 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,071.

[31] In re Rung, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 406.

[32] In re Henschel, 109 Fed. 861, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

[33] General Order No. 15. Under the act of 1867, it was held that, even though no creditors proved their debts and no assets were shown, still an assignee should be appointed, because creditors might appear and assets might be found. Anonymous, 1 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 457.

[34] Smalley v. Laugenour, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786.

such as are exempt by law.[35] Even though some available assets may be disclosed, but no substantial amount, the appointment of a trustee is not indispensable, and no person elected to that office can be compelled to serve without compensation, so that, if creditors insist upon the appointment of a trustee, they must advance the statutory fees or otherwise arrange for his remuneration.[36] But if assets afterwards come to light, a trustee must be appointed. This step is essential to divest the bankrupt of title to his property, and so make it available for administration in bankruptcy.[37] Hence if the referee, after ordering that no trustee should be appointed, for the causes set forth in the general order, shall learn that property of the bankrupt has been found which creditors can claim as assets of the estate, he should then take measures for the appointment of a trustee.[38]

§ 288. Same; Rights of Creditors as Voters.—Generally speaking, and for most purposes, the right of a creditor to participate in the bankruptcy proceedings against his debtor does not depend upon his being named as a creditor in the bankrupt's list or schedule,[39] but upon the proof and allowance of his claim. It is by this step that the status of the creditor is asserted and recognized. This is necessary to entitle him to vote as a creditor in the election of a trustee, to challenge the right of any other voter, or to take any other part in the proceedings.[40] And since the right to elect a trustee belongs to the proving creditors, the vote will not be postponed to allow other creditors to prove their claims, unless by consent of those who have already proved.[41] If objection is [35] Smalley v. Laugenour, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786. Probably also, a case arises in which no trustee need be appointed where there are valid mortgage or other liens which will absorb all of the bankrupt's available property; but even in this case the petitioning creditors are entitled to an adjudication of bankruptcy if they have made out their case, and the question of appointing a trustee cannot be taken up until after an adjudication has been made. Vulcan Sheet Metal Co. v. North Platte Valley Irr. Co., 220 Fed. 106, 136 C. C. A. 198, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 686.

[36] In re Levy, 101 Fed. 247.

[37] Miller v. Barto, 247 Ill. 104, 93 N. E. 140. But in the absence of proof to the contrary, it will be presumed that, after the institution of a bankruptcy proceeding, a trustee was appointed, thus divesting the bankrupt's title to real estate. Stern v. Bradner Smith & Co., 225 Ill. 430, 80 N. E. 307, 116 Am. St. Rep. 151.

[38] In re Smith, 93 Fed. 791, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

[39] In re Evening Standard Pub. Co., 164 Fed. 517, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156.

[40] See In re Jones, 2 N. B. R. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 7,447; In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, 1 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481; In re Brisco, 2 N. B. R. 226, Fed. Cas. No. 1,886. To entitle a creditor to vote at the election of a trustee, his statement of claim should show the date of the indebtedness, so as to exclude the possibility of the defense of limitation. In re Eisenberg (D. C.) 251 Fed. 427, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

[41] In re Lake Superior Canal Co., 7 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 7,997. But compare In re Rosenfeld-Goldman Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 921, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

made to the reception of the vote of any creditor, the question will be decided by the referee and certified to the judge for review, if desired. It is the duty of the referee at least to hear the objections sufficiently to determine whether they are made in good faith, and if so, and if they appear to be well founded, the claim should not be allowed for voting purposes.[42] If the claim has not yet been proved or allowed, the referee may, on a good case against it being made, postpone the question of allowance until after the vote for trustee.[43] And creditors whose proofs of claims have been thus postponed may have the proceedings certified to the court, and if the postponement is held to have been erroneous, the election may be set aside and a new vote taken, provided it appears that the result would be changed by allowing votes to be cast on such claims.[44] But mere oral unverified objections to claims of creditors, not supported by any proof offered or produced, are not sufficient to require the referee to adjourn the meeting until such objections can be tried before proceeding with the election.[45] If some of the creditors object to the votes offered to be cast by other creditors, on the ground that they were procured by the influence of the bankrupt and in collusion with him, or that they are controlled by him and meant to be cast in his interest, the referee has power to hear and decide the question thus raised, and to exclude such votes from the election if he finds the facts to be as stated.[46] But it is no reason for excluding a claim, unquestionably valid, from the right to vote, that it is due to the bankrupt's attorney or his clerk, and therefore may be voted in his interest.[47] And so where, by want of proper advice, creditors have named as their agent and attorney a person who has acted for the bankrupt, and whom mere judicial policy discourages from acting for them, they should not for that reason be denied a voice in the selection of the trustee.[48]

[42] In re Malino, 118 Fed. 368, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; In re Kelly Dry Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. As to allowing a creditor to vote upon so much of his claim as is undisputed, see In re Wenatchee-Stratford Orchard Co., 205 Fed. 964, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540.

[43] In re Noble, 3 Ben. 332, 3 N. B. R. 96, Fed. Cas. No. 10,282; In re Northern Iron Co., 14 N. B. R. 356, Fed. Cas. No. 10,332.

[44] In re Eagles, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; In re Lake Superior Ship Canal Co., 7 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 7,997.

[45] In re Syracuse Paper & Pulp Co., 164 Fed. 275, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

[46] In re McGill, 106 Fed. 57, 45 C. C. A. 218, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155; In re Van De Mark, 175 Fed. 287, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760. See In re Noble, 3 Ben. 332, 3 N. B. R. 96, Fed. Cas. No. 10,282.

[47] In re Floyd, 183 Fed. 791, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194.

[48] In re Kaufman, 179 Fed. 552, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117. Where majority creditors of a bankrupt were represented by attorneys, who had previously represented the bankrupt, and who had solicited the claims, and for this reason were not allowed to vote in the election of a trus-

There is no reason in law or in morals why a relative of the bankrupt, provided he is a legitimate creditor, should not have the same right to vote for a trustee as any other creditor.[49] But the purity and freedom of the election being the main consideration, the referee is not without a certain measure of discretion in this matter. Thus, where there was a struggle over the election of a trustee, and the wife of the bankrupt presented a claim and asserted herself to be a creditor, and the contest was so close that her vote, if allowed, would determine the choice of the trustee, it was held that it was not improper for the referee to disallow it, basing his objection on the insufficiency of the statement of claim to show that it was not barred by limitations, although the claim (which was not finally disallowed) might have been amended so as to make it good on its face.[50] An analogous question is as to the right of stockholders to vote for trustee in the bankruptcy of their corporation. It appears that where the corporation is in voluntary bankruptcy, any of the stockholders who have legitimate and provable claims against it may take part in the selection of the trustee, or at least, that where the claims of stockholders constitute so large a part of the corporation's indebtedness that it would be entirely solvent if they were disregarded, then other creditors have no title to complain because the votes of the stockholders were allowed.[51] A shareholder in a building and loan association who is entitled at any time to withdraw and to demand the book value of his stock is a creditor of the association in its bankruptcy and entitled to vote for trustee.[52]

The act provides (section 56) that "creditors holding claims which are secured or have priority shall not, in respect to such claims, be entitled to vote at creditors' meetings, nor shall such claims be counted in computing either the number of creditors or the amount of their claims, unless the amounts of such claims exceed the values of such securities or priorities, and then only for such excess." [53] One who holds a note made by the bankrupt and indorsed by a third person, which is secured by collateral belonging to the indorser, is not a secured creditor within tee, the referee should have granted a continuance, in order that they might secure other proper representation and participate and proceed to the election of a trustee by the majority, and it was error for him to refuse. In re E. A. Walker & Co., 204 Fed. 132, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

[49] In re Rothleder (D. C.) 232 Fed. 398, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116.

[50] In re Ballantine (D. C.) 232 Fed. 271, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[51] In re Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n (D. C.) 232 Fed. 413, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412, affirmed, Wilson v. Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 824, 147 C. C. A. 18, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[52] Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 828, 147 C. C. A. 22, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[53] See In re Eagles (D. C.) 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

the definition of the statute, and is therefore entitled to vote for trustee.[54] But one who has furnished material to a bankrupt building contractor, and who has served an attested account on the owner of a building under construction, which, under the laws of the state, effects an attachment on any money then or subsequently due the contractor, is a secured creditor, and is not entitled to vote unless it is shown that no money was due or became due to which his lien could attach.[55]

Where a secured creditor makes a purely formal proof of claim and does not allege any insufficiency in the security or take any steps to have his security valued, he is not entitled to have the claim allowed in any amount, so as to enable him to participate in the creditors' meetings.[56] And a creditor holding a mortgage as security, who, in the proof of his debt, states upon information and belief, that the mortgage is worth less than the amount of the debt, is not entitled to vote on the difference between its value as stated by him and the amount of his debt.[57] But where the referee in bankruptcy ascertained that the security held by a creditor would be insufficient to satisfy his claim, and no exception was taken to the method of liquidation, which was not favorable to the creditor, it was held that the referee did not err in permitting him to vote in the selection of a trustee, for the amount of the deficit, without surrendering the collateral.[58] Where the security held by the creditor covers the entire debt, though it may be insufficient in amount, he cannot vote at a creditors' meeting unless his security has been valued in the manner prescribed by the act and the excess thus ascertained. But where a specific portion or amount of the debt is secured, so that the debt secured can be separated from the entire debt, at once and with certainty, the creditor may vote and act, as to the residue, as a general creditor.[59] As to preferred creditors, it should be noted that their claims cannot be "allowed" until they have surrendered their preferences (Section 57g), and that the voters at these meetings are defined as "creditors whose claims have been allowed and are present" (Section 56). Consequently a preferred creditor cannot participate in the choice of a trustee unless he has surrendered his preference. This he may do, however, at the first meeting, and then vote for the trustee, when the preference is of such a nature as to be effectually destroyed by such

[54] In re Pan-American Match Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 995, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805.

[55] In re Ferrand (D. C.) 263 Fed. 908, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[56] In re North Star Ice & Coal Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 301, 42 Bankr. Rep. 76

[57] In re Hanna, 5 Ben. 5, 7 N. B. R. 502, Fed. Cas. No. 6,027.

[58] In re Milne, Turnbull & Co. (D. C.) 159 Fed. 280, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248.

[59] In re Parkes, 10 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754.

surrender.[60] For somewhat similar reasons, a creditor of a bankrupt who is also a debtor to the bankrupt's estate is not entitled to vote in the election of a trustee where he has not made his indebtedness good.[61]

If only a single creditor appears at the first meeting and proves his debt, he is entitled to name the trustee.[62] Where the creditor is a firm, either of the partners may vote the full amount of the claim; but if the debt is owned by joint creditors who are not partners, or by joint trustees, neither can vote or act without the authority or consent of the other.[63] A corporation may vote by its proper officers or by any person specially authorized.[64] Claims which have been proved and then sold and assigned, before the election of a trustee, must be voted upon in such election by the actual owner at the time and not by the original creditor.[65] A creditor may change his vote as often as he sees fit until he has signed the certificate of choice of trustee, but not after that has been done and the meeting has adjourned, at least where such a change would cause a failure to elect, but if a mistake has been made, he may present his objection to the judge.[66]

The majority required to elect a trustee is thus defined by the statute: "A majority vote in number and amount of claims of all creditors whose claims have been allowed and are present." This requires, therefore, a majority not merely of the votes cast but of all the creditors who are present and have had their claims allowed.[67] And creditors are not to be counted as present merely because their claims have been allowed, but they must attend in person or by duly authorized agent or attorney,

[60] In re Saunders, 2 Low. 444, 13 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 12,371.

[61] In re Duryea Power Co., 159 Fed. 783, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219. But an unliquidated claim for damages which the bankrupt proposes to set off against the claim of a creditor must be wholly disregarded in the proceedings for the choice of a trustee. That is, the creditor is entitled to vote, and for the full amount of his claim, as it is not competent at this stage of the proceedings to consider the question of set-off. In re Orne, 1 Ben. 361, 1 N. B. R. 57, Fed. Cas. No. 10,581.

[62] Anonymous, 1 N. B. R. 216, Fed. Cas. No. 458; In re Haynes, 2 N. B. R. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 6,269. And where, in the course of the proceedings, one creditor has become the sole creditor, he may apply for the appointment of a new trustee in place of the one acting, and such person will be appointed as he and the bankrupt may agree upon, or, if they do not agree, the matter may be referred to the referee. In re Sacchi, 10 Blatchf. 29, 6 N. B. R. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 12,200.

[63] In re Purvis, 1 N. B. R. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 11,476.

[64] Ex parte Bank of England, 1 Swanst. 10. The managing officers of a bankrupt corporation, when bona fide creditors of the company, have the same right to vote for the trustee as any other claimant. In re Northern Iron Co., 14 N. B. R. 356, Fed. Cas. No. 10,322.

[65] In re Frank, 5 Ben. 164, 5 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 5,050.

[66] In re Pfromm, 8 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 11,061; In re Scheiffer, 2 N. B. R. 591, Fed. Cas. No. 12,445.

[67] In re Purvis, 1 N. B. R. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 11,476; In re Scheiffer, 2 N. B. R. 591, Fed. Cas. No. 12,445. See In re Portsmouth Savings Fund Soc., 2 Hughes, 238, Fed. Cas. No. 11,297.

and those creditors who do so attend constitute the meeting.[68] And even though the creditor may be present by a proxy, still if the latter's power of attorney is invalid because given under the influence or control of the bankrupt for the purpose of being voted for a trustee of his choice, the creditor will not be counted as present and necessary for a choice.[69] Where a firm is the creditor, and the vote of the firm for the trustee is cast by one member thereof, in computing the number of votes such vote can be counted only as one; it would be incorrect to count each member of the creditor firm as a separate creditor who has voted.[70] And so where creditors, before the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, assigned their claims to a committee in trust for the purpose of purchasing the bankrupt's assets from the trustee and selling them for the benefit of such assignors as distinguished from the bankrupt's general creditors, the committee is entitled to only a single vote in the selection of a trustee, and not to a vote for each of the claims so assigned.[71]

In case of the bankruptcy of a partnership, the right to appoint the trustee is in "the creditors of the partnership," that is, as distinguished from the creditors of the individual partners. (Section 5b.) But where a separate adjudication is made against a bankrupt who is or has been a member of a firm, both the separate creditors and the firm creditors have a right to vote for the trustee.[72] In case of the bankruptcy of a corporation, where a creditor has a bona fide claim against it, and there is no evidence of collusion or improper influence, the fact that the creditor is also a stockholder and director of the bankrupt corporation will not disqualify him from voting for a trustee.[73]

§ 289. Same; Representation by Agent or Attorney.—In the election of a trustee, as in all other proceedings in bankruptcy, the statute permits a creditor to act by his "duly authorized agent, attorney, or proxy." (Section 1, clause 9.) The vote of a creditor may therefore be cast by an attorney in fact, on producing a written authority from the creditor for that purpose, which authority will be filed by the referee

[68] In re Kaufman, 179 Fed. 552, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Mackellar 116 Fed. 547, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; In re Henschel, 113 Fed. 443, 51 C. C. A. 277, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

[69] In re McGill, 106 Fed. 57, 45 C. C. A. 218, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

[70] In re Purvis, 1 N. B. R. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 11,476.

[71] In re E. T. Kenney Co., 136 Fed. 451, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611.

[72] In re Beck, 110 Fed. 140, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554; In re Falkner, 16 N. B. R. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 4,624; Wilkins v. Davis, 2 Low. 511, Fed. Cas. No. 17,664; In re Webb, 4 Sawy. 326, Fed. Cas. No. 17,317. A court of bankruptcy has discretionary power to appoint separate trustees for the estates of a bankrupt partnership and of an individual partner, but such power should be exercised only in cases of special and peculiar necessity. In re Currie, 197 Fed. 1012, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834.

[73] In re Stradley & Co., 187 Fed. 285, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 149; In re Syracuse Paper & Pulp Co., 164 Fed. 275, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174. Compare In re L. W.

as a part of his record in the case.[74] But the power of attorney must be actually produced and exhibited. One claiming that such a paper was executed to him, but that it has been lost or mislaid, is properly excluded from participating in the election.[75] And one in this situation, or whose proxy has been ruled invalid, has no interest or standing which gives him a right to object to the action of the referee on behalf of his alleged principal.[76] The letter of attorney must be acknowledged before a competent officer, and it has been held that an acknowledgment before a foreign consul may be sufficient.[77]

In regard to the authority of an attorney at law, it is generally agreed that an attorney in good standing need not produce a written authority from his client when he desires to appear in a bankruptcy proceeding for such ordinary purposes as filing a petition, making a request of the court, interposing an objection to some proceeding, or making a motion, but his authority will be presumed until successfully challenged by some party in interest.[78] But these are matters pertaining to the employment of the attorney in his professional capacity. In regard to the special matter of voting for a trustee, where the attorney does not act as the legal adviser of the creditor, but merely as his substitute, the decisions are to the effect that he must be duly constituted his attorney in fact.[79] If a power of attorney is given to a firm, and not to either member of it, one alone is not authorized to vote upon it in the election of a trustee.[80] But one member of a partnership, on behalf of the firm, may execute a power of attorney to a third person, authorizing him to cast the vote of the firm in such election.[81] In this special case, the rule requires the letter of attorney to show that the person executing it is a member of the firm. But if a statement to that effect

Day & Co., 174 Fed. 164, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

[74] In re Eagles, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

[75] In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[76] Falter v. Reinhard, 104 Fed. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782.

[77] In re Sugenheimer, 91 Fed. 744, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[78] In re Scott, 15 N. B. R. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 12,519; In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, 1 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481; In re Pauly, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 405.

[79] In re Lazoris, 120 Fed. 716, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; In re Scully, 108 Fed. 372, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716; In re Blankfein, 97 Fed. 191, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Purvis, 1 N. B. R. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 11,476; In re Christley, 6 Biss. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 2,702; In re Capitol Trading Co. (D. C.) 229 Fed. 806, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339. Where a trustee in bankruptcy was removed, and a meeting of creditors held for the election of a new trustee, it was held that an attorney who represented conflicting interests as between the trustee and an assignee for creditors should not be permitted to represent any creditor in the election. In re Forestier (D. C.) 222 Fed. 537, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[80] In re Frank, 5 Ben. 164, 5 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 5,050.

[81] In re Barrett, 2 Hughes, 444, 2 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 1,043; Ex parte Mitchell, 14 Vesey, 497.

is contained in the proof of debt accompanying the letter, though absent from the letter itself, it is sufficient to entitle the attorney to represent the creditor.[82]

§ 290. Same; Corrupt Practices and Improper Influences in Election.—It is important that the action of creditors, in their choice of a trustee, should be free and unbiased. Any secret and corrupt influences brought to bear upon them, any tampering with the freedom of their choice, even, in some cases, mere solicitation of their votes, will be sufficient to warrant the court in refusing to confirm the trustee chosen, or even in annulling the election. The referee, for instance, should not attempt to influence creditors in their choice of a trustee, or in any manner interfere with their free action in that matter. If he endeavors to secure the election of a particular person by soliciting and urging the creditors to vote for him, it is an improper and unwarrantable interference on his part, and if creditors complain to the court of such conduct on the part of the referee, the judge will be justified in taking the case out of his hands and sending it to another referee.[83] More especially where it appears that the choice of the trustee has been influenced by the bankrupt himself, by bribery, soliciting votes, electioneering, packing the meeting with his own friends, or any other form of active interference with the free choice of the creditors, the court will not hesitate to disapprove or vacate the election.[84] Yet this rule, founded though it is on good sense and good policy, should not be pushed to an absurd extreme. Where the trustee chosen is a perfectly competent and trustworthy person, and is elected by a large majority of creditors apparently exercising their independent judgment in his selection, and it does not appear that his administration would be in any way detrimental to the estate, it is no sufficient reason for setting him aside that the bankrupt urged his creditors to vote for him, giving reasons for his belief that he would be the best person to have charge of the estate.[85] Generally, however, what is said above of the

[82] In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[83] In re Smith, 2 Ben. 113, 1 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 12,971.

[84] In re Ployd, 183 Fed. 791, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; In re L. W. Day & Co., 178 Fed. 545, 101 C. C. A. 461, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; Falter v. Reinhard, 104 Fed. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782; In re Lloyd, 148 Fed. 92, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96; In re Hanson, 156 Fed. 717, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235; In re Houghton, 2 Low. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 6,729; In re Bliss, 1 Ben. 407, 1 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,543; In re Wetmore, 16 N. B. R. 514, Fed. Cas. No. 17,466; In re Pfromm, 8 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 11,061; In re Stowe (D. C.) 235 Fed. 463, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76. In one case the court refused to confirm the election of a trustee who was the bankrupt's bookkeeper, when it appeared that a large number of the creditors could not be present at the meeting, though the election was almost unanimous. In re Wetmore, 16 N. B. R. 514, Fed. Cas. No. 17,466.

[85] In re Eastlack, 145 Fed. 68, 16 Am.

bankrupt applies equally to his attorney. The latter should not attempt to control or influence the election in the interest of his client, and if he does so, it will be ground for refusing to confirm the trustee chosen.[86] But where an attorney's retainer for a bankrupt was limited to the filing of the bankrupt's petition, for which he received no fee, he is not disqualified to accept claims from creditors sent to him thereafter without his solicitation or the procurement of the bankrupt, and to vote such claims in the election of a trustee.[87]

Again, it is not in accordance with good policy or the spirit of the law that an election of this kind should be determined by the desire of a particular person to be chosen as the trustee, and even if no corrupt practices are charged, nor any secret or improper influences brought to bear on the creditors, the mere fact that the trustee secured his election by the solicitation of votes will be sufficient reason why the judge should refuse to confirm it,[88] more especially where the same person appears as trustee in numerous bankruptcies, and makes it his business to seek out creditors and secure their votes, though he does not wield any sinister influence and seeks only the legitimate profits of the office.[89] But facts such as these must be shown, not merely conjectured. It is not proper to disapprove an election made by the creditors on a mere suspicion that the appointment of the trustee was procured by improper considerations, based on the frequency with which the same person has been selected as trustee in bankruptcy under the influence of the same attorneys who have procured his appointment in the present case.[90]

The case is somewhat different where one or more of the creditors, not acting under the influence of the bankrupt nor in any kind of collusion with him, put up a candidate for the office of trustee and en-

Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Ketterer Mfg. Co., 155 Fed. 987, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225. And see In re Morton, 118 Fed. 908, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[86] In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re Lamont, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 291; In re Wink, 206 Fed. 348, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298. But a mere suggestion by the bankrupt's attorney to creditors, that the receiver in the case should be chosen trustee, does not show any abuse of discretion by the referee in appointing the receiver as trustee. In re Rothleder (D. C.) 232 Fed. 398, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116.

[87] In re Cooper (D. C.) 135 Fed. 196, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320. But where the bankrupt's former attorney, with the bankrupt's assistance, had been active in obtaining powers of attorney to be used in the election of a trustee, it was held that the referee properly determined that he was disqualified to vote such powers himself. In re Wink (D. C.) 206 Fed. 348, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298.

[88] In re Fisher, 193 Fed. 104, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793; In re Mallory, 4 N. B. R. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 8,990; In re Doe, 3 Ben. 66, 2 N. B. R. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 3,957; In re Haas, 8 N. B. R. 189, Fed. Cas. No. 5,884. See In re Brown, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 590.

[89] In re Doe, 2 N. B. R. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 3,957; In re Mallory, 4 N. B. R. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 8,990.

[90] In re Kreuger, 196 Fed. 705, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

deavor by legitimate means to persuade other creditors to vote for him. There seems to be no solid legal objection to this course, and it must frequently happen that the best way to secure the effective administration of an estate in bankruptcy is for one or more of the larger creditors to select a well-equipped person for the trustee, induce him to serve, and persuade the other creditors to vote for him. And the courts have sometimes sanctioned this sort of legitimate canvassing, especially where resorted to for the purpose of defeating another candidate already in the field and justly suspected of being a tool of the bankrupt or unduly inclined to his interest.[91] But where both parties or factions in the contest over the choice of a trustee went beyond what was proper in soliciting claims to vote in the election, it is not proper action on the part of the referee to disfranchise the claims of one side and allow those of the other party to be voted.[92]

§ 291. Confirmation or Disapproval by the Court.—General Order No. 13 provides that "the appointment of a trustee by the creditors shall be subject to be approved or disapproved by the referee or by the judge." And one elected to be a trustee in bankruptcy does not become a trustee in fact, or have any power to act as such, until his selection is so approved.[93] And the decision of the referee approving the choice of the creditors in the election of a trustee is subject to review by the judge.[94] On the other hand, if the referee is satisfied that any reason exists why a trustee selected by the creditors should not be approved by the court, it is his duty to state such reasons fully in submitting to the judge the question of approval.[95] The proper method of reviewing the proceedings in the election of a trustee is by a petition for review of the order of the referee approving or disapproving the selection made by the creditors.[96] On such a review, in the absence of the evidence on which the referee acted in making his decisions as to the claims to be voted, his findings of fact as to all claims must be confirmed.[97] While it is undoubted that the referee has a considerable discretion in the matter of approving or disapproving the selection of [91] In re Callahan, 242 Fed. 479, 155 C. C. A. 255, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; Bollman v. Tobin, 239 Fed. 469, 152 C. C. A. 347, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504. See In re Duryea Power Co., 159 Fed. 783, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219. Compare In re Anson Mercantile Co., 185 Fed. 993, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429.

[92] In re Parsons Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 126, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275, 858.

[93] In re Kellar, 192 Fed. 830, 113 C. C. A. 154; In re Scheiffer, 2 N. B. R. 591, Fed. Cas. No. 12,445.

[94] In re Hanson, 156 Fed. 717, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235.

[95] In re Bliss, 1 Ben. 407, 1 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,543.

[96] In re Arti-Stain Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 942.

[97] In re Snow (D. C.) 248 Fed. 295, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481.

a trustee, his discretion cannot be exercised arbitrarily.[98] He must exercise care to protect the interests of all the creditors.[99] His decision will not be set aside except for an unjust and injurious abuse of discretion or a clear mistake of law.[100] But where error of a fundamental character appears, such as to affect the rights of a substantial body of the creditors, the referee's decision cannot be upheld.[101] On the other hand, where the referee and the district judge concur in disapproving the election of a trustee effected by the creditors, their action will be sustained by the reviewing court, unless an abuse of discretion is shown.[102]

The general order vests in the court a discretion to confirm the creditors' choice of a trustee or to set it aside. But the power to annul an election is not to be exercised arbitrarily nor merely because the reviewing authority would have chosen a different person. The selection of a trustee is the peculiar right and privilege of the creditors. The court cannot undo their action save in the exercise of a sound legal discretion, based upon good and sufficient reasons. The person who is chosen by the requisite majority of creditors is entitled to be confirmed in the office of trustee, unless it is satisfactorily shown that he is disqualified under the statute, or is an incompetent person, or that the election was determined by improper or corrupt influences.[103] Objections to the confirma-

[98] Wilson v. Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 824, 147 C. C. A. 18, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[99] In re Ballantine (D. C.) 232 Fed. 271.

[100] In re Grat (D. C.) 228 Fed. 925, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524. On purely administrative matters, such as the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, the judgment of the referee is entitled to great weight, and it is not to be assumed that he disregarded the votes of the creditors without strong reason for so doing. Hence, his refusal to appoint as trustee the person first elected by the creditors, because that person did not reside at the place of the bankrupt's business, will be confirmed where the evidence was not reported, and the referee's report did not show whether the duties of the trustee would be such as to require some one who would be in daily contact with the business. In re Jaffee (D. C.) 272 Fed. 899, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714.

[101] In re Parsons Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 126, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275, 858.

[102] M. C. Kiser Co. v. Georgia Cotton Oil Co., 208 Fed. 548, 125 C. C. A. 550, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376.

[103] In re Margolies, 191 Fed. 369, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; In re Eastlack, 145 Fed. 68, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re Funkenstein, Fed. Cas. No. 5,157; In re Clairmout, 1 Low, 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,781; In re Grant, 2 N. B. R. 106, Fed. Cas. No. 5,692; In re Merritt Const. Co., 219 Fed. 555, 135 C. C. A. 323, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616. "While the choice of an assignee is vested by law in a majority in number and amount of the creditors, it is subject, nevertheless, to the approval of the district judge—a provision which implies a discretionary power to disapprove the choice so made. While the judge ought not arbitrarily, capriciously, or from dislike or partiality, to overrule the decision of the creditors, he is bound to see that the rights of the minority are properly protected, and to refuse confirmation where he has good reason to suspect that the assignee has been chosen in the interest of the bankrupt. I think he is not bound to find as a fact that the assignee is incomtion of a person chosen trustee are usually presented by a dissenting minority of the creditors, and indeed it is hardly too much to say that this is one of the numerous devices of the law to protect and save the rights of the minority. Thus, for example, on the representations of such a minority, the court will refuse to approve the election of a trustee who was elected by the influence of the bankrupt or in his interest.[104] But any person in interest may present objections to the approval of the trustee. The bankrupt himself has a standing in court to object to the confirmation of the person selected by the creditors.[105] But the court will not take the step of disapproving the choice of the creditors, when the objections presented for its consideration would not have affected the result if recognized at the time.[106] When the judge refuses to approve the appointment of the trustee selected by the creditors, he may order a new election to be held.[107]

§ 292. Appointment of Trustee by Court.—If the creditors, by inaction or by disagreement, fail to exercise their right to select the trustee in bankruptcy, it will devolve upon the court to appoint a trustee.[108] In the early days of the law's administration, there was serious question whether the word "court" in this connection included the referee, or whether the appointment vested in the judge only. But these doubts were removed upon the promulgation of the official forms in bankruptcy, No. 23 being a form of appointment of the trustee by the referee in petent, corrupt, or unfit, but may decline to approve if the circumstances are such as to indicate that the election was not a fair one, or that the assignee will not truly represent the body of the creditors." In re Wetmore, 16 N. B. R. 514; Fed. Cas. No. 17,466, per Brown, J., afterwards Mr. Justice Brown.

[104] In re Bliss, 1 Ben. 407, 1 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,543; In re Wetmore, 16 N. B. R. 514, Fed. Cas. No. 17,466; In re Houghton, 2 Low. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 6,729; In re Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n (D. C.) 232 Fed. 413, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Rothleder (D. C.) 232 Fed. 398, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116; supra, § 290.

[105] In re McGlynn, 2 Low. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 8,804. The bankrupt may move to set aside the election of a trustee on the ground that the persons whose votes elected him were not creditors of the bankrupt. In re Stokes, 1 N. B. R. 489, Fed. Cas. No. 13,475.

[106] In re Jackson, 7 Biss. 280, 14 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 7,123; In re Pfromm, 8 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 11,061.

[107] In re Scheiffer, 2 N. B. R. 591, Fed. Cas. No. 12,445.

[108] Section 44 of the bankruptcy act provides that the creditors shall "appoint one trustee or three trustees of such estate. If the creditors do not appoint a trustee or trustees as herein provided, the court shall do so." If this were all, the law would be perfectly intelligible and consistent, and its effect would be to give to creditors the unrestricted right to choose and appoint the trustee, without any question of the approval of the court, and to give to the court, not a right of approval, but a right of appointment in the case where the creditors do not act. But the second section of the act also provides that the courts of bankruptcy shall be invested with jurisdiction to "appoint trustees pursuant to the recommendation of creditors, or when they neglect to recommend the appointment of trustees." Now it is a well-known rule consequence of the failure of creditors to elect.[109] The forty-fourth section of the statute gives to creditors the right to appoint "one trustee or three trustees" of the estate, and provides that "if the creditors do not appoint a trustee or trustees as herein provided, the court shall do so." Hence it appears that, when the appointment devolves upon the court, three trustees may be named if any sufficient reason appears for appointing more than one.[110] And upon a petition to a court of bankruptcy showing good grounds therefor an additional trustee may be appointed to act in conjunction with the one previously appointed.[111] But care has been taken to provide that each trustee in bankruptcy appointed by the court shall be selected in, and with reference to, the particular estate in liquidation. General Order No. 14 provides that "no official trustee shall be appointed by the court, nor any general trustee to act in classes of cases." This order would probably not prevent the same person from being appointed and acting as trustee in two or more bankruptcies at the same time, if he is chosen by the creditors (or appointed by the court) in each case as a separate and distinct matter, and not appointed generally to act as trustee in all cases, or all cases of a given class, which may be instituted in that court.

of statutory construction that a law must be so interpreted, if possible, as to prevent conflicts between its different provisions, to give force and effect to every clause and word of it, and to make it consistent with itself throughout its whole extent. In obedience to this rule, the courts would have been compelled to put one of two constructions upon these clauses of the bankruptcy act. First, they might have held that two courses were open to creditors when called upon to choose a trustee, viz., that they might either "appoint" a trustee absolutely or "recommend" an individual to the court for appointment as trustee. But if creditors had the power to appoint, there is no conceivable reason why they should rest satisfied with recommending an appointment. Secondly, the courts might have held that the action of the creditors in choosing a trustee, though final as to them, and an "appointment" so far as they were concerned, was no more than a "recommendation" as to the court, so that the court, if not satisfied with the recommendation, could refuse to approve the choice made by the creditors. This last is the interpretation put upon the act by General Order No. 13, for, in declaring that the "appointment" of a trustee by the creditors shall be "subject to be approved or disapproved by the referee or by the judge," it in effect makes such appointment equivalent merely to a "recommendation" and thereby harmonizs the two sections of the law.

[109] And see In re Knox, 221 Fed. 36, 136 C. C. A. 562, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; In re Rosenfeld-Goldman Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 921, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; Crocker v. United States, 48 Ct. Cl. 383.

[110] In a case where a corporation holding property and carrying on business in three different states was adjudged bankrupt and assignees were appointed who were respectively citizens of two of the states in which the proceedings in bankruptcy were pending, but none was appointed in the third state, it was considered that it ought to have been so arranged that each of the districts could have an assignee within it a resident thereof. In re Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 5 N. B. R. 233, Fed. Cas. No. 1,680.

[111] In re Overton, 5 N. B. R. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 10,625. The court has discretion to appoint different trustees for the bankrupt estates of a partnership and of its members, which is properly exercised where a partner's individual debts exceed his individual estate and the pro-

We have said that the creditors may lose their right to name the trustee by inaction or by disagreement.[112] And these are the two cases in which, ordinarily, the court will be called upon to make the appointment. If no creditors appear and prove their claims at the time and place appointed for the first meeting, then a trustee must usually be appointed by the court.[113] And the same result follows if the creditors fail to agree upon a trustee, no person receiving the majority required by the statute. When this happens at the first meeting of the creditors, it is usual and proper to ask for an adjournment of the meeting, or for the calling of a second meeting at a future day, for the purpose of taking another ballot, and the referee should grant the request. But if no such motion is made, or if a second election still results in a deadlock, and it appears impossible for the requisite majority to agree, while there is evidently need of an immediate selection of a trustee, the referee will take the matter into his own hands and appoint a trustee of his own selection, not being confined to the candidates already voted for, but being properly influenced by the wishes of any considerable body of the creditors.[114]

But if the requisite majority of creditors concur in the election of a trustee, the referee has no authority to disregard their action and select a trustee and appoint him, merely because he disapproves of the choice made by the creditors. He may, in the exercise of a sound discretion and for cause, refuse to confirm their choice. But when this action is taken, it creates a vacancy in the office of trustee, and it is the right of the creditors to fill it, wherefore it becomes the duty of the ref-ceeding against the partnership has arrived at the stage of declaring a dividend when the proceeding against the partner is instituted. In re Wood, 248 Fed. 246, 160 C. C. A. 324, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810.

[112] Where a majority in amount of the creditor's claims were disputed, causing considerable delay, but there was need of the immediate appointment of a trustee, it was held that the referee was empowered to appoint one. In re Knox, 221 Fed. 36, 136 C. C. A. 562, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

[113] In re Cogswell, 1 Ben. 388, 1 N. B. R. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 2,959.

[114] In re Goldstein, 199 Fed. 665, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 301; In re Cohen, 131 Fed. 391, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439; In re Machin, 128 Fed. 315, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re Brooke, 100 Fed. 432, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Kuffler, 97 Fed. 187, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162; In re Richards, 103 Fed. 849, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631; In re Jackson, 7 Biss. 280, 14 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 7,123; In re Portsmouth Savings Fund Soc., 2 Hughes, 238, Fed. Cas. No. 11,297. The appellate court will not set aside the appointment of a trustee by the district judge where the only error claimed is in holding that no election had been made by the creditors, there being no allegation against the fitness of the person appointed. Woods v. Buckewell, 2 Dill. 38, 7 N. B. R. 405, Fed. Cas. No. 17,991. Where the referee is called upon to appoint a trustee because of the failure of the creditors to elect one, a suitable person is not ineligible for appointment merely because he was one of the unsuccessful candidates voted for by the creditors. In re F. & D. Co., 242 Fed. 69, 155 C. C. A. 13, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378.

eree to call a new election and give the creditors the opportunity of uniting upon a different candidate.[115] But if the creditors, at the second election, fail or refuse to make a second choice, then it is proper for the referee to appoint a trustee.[116] But in any case the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy by a court having jurisdiction, though it may be erroneous, is not void, and therefore cannot be assailed collaterally.[117]

§ 293. Acceptance and Resignation of Trustee.—The bankruptcy act itself does not require any written or otherwise formal acceptance of the office of trustee by one elected or appointed thereto. And at common law, his acceptance might be constructive and based on his dealing with the property of the estate.[118] But General Order No. 16 provides that "it shall be the duty of the referee, immediately upon the appointment and approval of the trustee, to notify him in person or by mail of his appointment; and the notice shall require the trustee forthwith to notify the referee of his acceptance or rejection of the trust." Furthermore, the act requires the trustee to qualify within ten days (unless the time is extended by the court), by executing the required bond, and if he fails to do so, "he shall be deemed to have declined his appointment." [119]

It is a rule applicable to trustees generally (and it seems to be applicable in the case of trustees in bankruptcy) that, when the trustee has once accepted the appointment and assumed the duties of the office, he has no absolute right to resign and withdraw from the trust, or to relieve himself from its duties and responsibilities by renunciation. He may do this by obtaining the consent of all parties interested (provided they are all sui juris) or the court, by its order, may accept his resignation, even against the wishes of some of those interested, if the trustee shows to the court good and sufficient cause why he should be relieved from the duties of the trust. But it does not rest in his own simple choice.[120] However, in a case where a trustee in bankruptcy abscond-

[115] In re Margolies, 191 Fed. 369, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; In re Van De Mark, 175 Fed. 287, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Kaufman, 179 Fed. 552, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Morris, 154 Fed. 211, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828; In re Mangan, 133 Fed. 1000, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303; In re Mackellar, 116 Fed. 547, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; In re Hare, 119 Fed. 246, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; In re Lewensohn, 98 Fed. 576, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Forestier (D. C.) 222 Fed. 537, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[116] In re Kellar (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 830.

[117] Raymond v. Morrison, 59 Iowa, 371, 13 N. W. 332.

[118] See Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157.

[119] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 50b, 50k. See Ex parte Bryan, 2 Hughes, 273, 14 N. B. R. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 2,061.

[120] As to the case of trustees generally, see Crüger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314. Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, an assignee might, "with the consent of the judge, resign his trust and be discharged therefrom." Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5038. But we find no such provision in the present statute. As to the power to ed, after embezzling the funds of the estate, it was held that such conduct amounted to an abandonment of his office, so that it thereby became vacant, and a new trustee might be appointed without formal steps for the removal of the former one, and without the necessity of notifying him.[121]

§ 294. Bonds of Trustees.—The principal provisions of the statute relating to the bonds of trustees in bankruptcy are found in the fiftieth section. It is a general rule, applicable to receivers and to all classes of trustees, that when such a person is required by law to give a "bond," this means an obligation under seal; nothing else will answer the description. The execution and filing of an instrument in the form of a bond, but not sealed, will not authorize the trustee to act.[122] Further, a trustee in bankruptcy must give a separate and distinct bond in each case in which he may be appointed trustee; a general bond, conditioned for the due performance of his duties in all cases in which he may be appointed, is not sufficient.[123] As to the sureties upon the bond, it is said that the clause of the act requiring two sureties upon the bond of a trustee is not applicable to a bond with a corporate surety given under Section 50g. The act of Congress of August 13, 1894, authorizing the approval of a corporation (which has complied with its provisions) as a sole surety, is in pari materia with this clause of the bankruptcy act.[124] The mere fact that the sureties are not residents of the district is not a sufficient reason for rejecting a bond which is in all other respects unobjectionable.[125] And where the principal becomes liable for the full amount, and the bond is executed by several sureties, who become liable in smaller sums aggregating the whole amount of the bond, this is a good and sufficient bond.[126] But the wife of the trustee should not be accepted as a surety on his bond, if the law of the particular state is such that a married woman cannot bind herself or her separate property as a surety on a bond.[127]

The condition of a trustee's bond is that he "shall obey such orders as said court may make in relation to said trust, and shall faithfully and truly account for all the moneys, assets, and effects of the estate of fill a vacancy in the office of trustee created by the resignation of the incumbent, see Hull v. Burr, 64 Fla. 83, 59 South. 787.

[121] Scofield v. United States, 174 Fed. 1, 98 C. C. A. 39, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[122] Johnson v. Martin, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 504.

[123] In re McFaden, 3 N. B. R. 104, Fed. Cas. No. 8,785.

[124] In re Kalter, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 384.

[125] Ex parte Milwaukee R. Co., 5 Wall. 188, 18 L. Ed. 676.

[126] Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Pace, 80 Fed. 862, 26 C. C. A. 198.

[127] In re McFaden, 3 N. B. R. 104, Fed. Cas. No. 8,785.

the said bankrupt which shall come into his hands and possession, and shall in all respects faithfully perform all his official duties as said trustee." The bond must be approved by an order in writing, which may be made by the referee.[128] The condition of such an obligation is construed with some strictness, and it is held that if a trustee in bankruptcy makes payments of money in his hands without an order of the court, and in violation of the rules, a liability on his bond will accrue, notwithstanding the fact that the payments were such as the court might have authorized if it had been applied to.[129] Generally speaking, an accounting by the trustee, under an order in that behalf is a necessary prerequisite to an action on his bond, as fixing the measure of his responsibility.[130] But this does not apply where the trustee has absconded and cannot be located or where he is a fugitive from justice,[131] in which case he is not even a necessary party to the action on the bond.[132] As provided in the statute, the bond may be sued on in the name of the United States for the use of any person injured by the breach of its condition, and it is not necessary for the party so injured to obtain leave of court to sue.[133] Where a trustee in bankruptcy has been removed from his office for mismanagement and default, and a new trustee appointed, the latter may be considered as a "person injured" by the breach of condition of the bond of the former trustee and may sue thereon, and a district court of the United States has jurisdiction of the action.[134] But a state court of general original jurisdiction will also have jurisdiction of an action on the bond of a trustee in bankruptcy.[135]

In regard to the provisions of the act that "trustees shall not be liable, personally or on their bonds, to the United States, for any penalties or forfeitures incurred by the bankrupts under this act," some further remark seems necessary. There is nothing to which this provision can apply except (1) a fine imposed on the bankrupt by the court of bankruptcy, as a punishment for a contempt of the court or before a referee, or for disobedience to its lawful orders; (2) a breach of the condition of a bail bond or a forthcoming bond given by the [128] Official Forms Nos. 25 and 26.

[129] In re Hoyt & Mitchell, 127 Fed. 968, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784.

[130] United States v. Sindheim, 188 Fed. 378.

[131] Scofield v. United States, 174 Fed. 1, 98 C. C. A. 39, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[132] Alexander v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. Supp. 282.

[133] Alexander v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. Supp. 282.

[134] United States v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 118 Fed. 482, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114. But see contra, Alexander v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. Supp. 282.

[135] Alexander v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. Supp. 282.

bankrupt to release his person or property from arrest. In the latter case, the loss would fall upon the bondsmen or sureties in the bail bond or other bond, as the case might be; but neither the trustee nor his sureties, nor the estate in his hands, would be liable. It should be noted that criminal offenses by bankrupts are not punishable by penalty or fine, but by imprisonment only.

§ 295. Death of Trustee.—When a person elected trustee in bankruptcy dies without having qualified, there is a vacancy in the office of trustee which must be filled by the creditors by a new election, and when this is done at a continuation or adjournment of the first meeting, it is not necessary to send out new notices to the creditors.[136] If the trustee dies after having entered upon the discharge of his duties, it is provided by the statute (Section 46) that his decease shall not abate any suit or proceeding which he is prosecuting or defending at the time, but the same may be proceeded with or defended by his joint trustee or his successor. At common law, upon the death of a trustee in bankruptcy, it seems that the right of action for a debt due to the bankrupt would vest in the trustee's executor.[137] But the present statute expressly declares that the title to the assets and estate of the bankrupt shall be vested by operation of law in the trustee "and his successor or successors if he shall have one or more." Consequently the estate remaining undisposed of passes to the successor of the trustee and not to his personal representatives,[138] and a state court has no authority to appoint a new trustee or to direct the execution of the trust under its statutory equitable powers.[139] The court of bankruptcy, however, has authority to appoint a new trustee where evidence of the existence of unadministered assets is produced after the death of the original trustee, even though his right to recover such assets may be doubtful, depending upon disputed questions of law and fact.[140] A cause of action against a trustee in bankruptcy, for wrongfully paying the assets in his hands to other creditors than the plaintiff, in disregard of the latter's right of priority, does not abate by the death of the trustee.[141]

136 In re Wright, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 405.

137 Richards v. Maryland Ins. Co., 8 Cranch, 84, 3 L. Ed. 496.

138 Howes v. Carlisle, 52 S. W. 936, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 613.

139 Lloyd v. Davis, 123 Cal. 348, 55 Pac. 1003.

140 In re Mahoney, 5 Fed. 518. The settlement of an estate in bankruptcy by the trustee does not divest the jurisdiction of the federal district court which made the adjudication in bankruptcy, and where the trustee dies, that court has power to take such steps as the circumstances may require, so that a mistake as to the proper step to be taken does not warrant a collateral attack on its judgment. Lloyd v. Davis, 123 Cal. 348, 55 Pac. 1003.

141 United States v. Dewey, 39 Fed. 251.

§ 296. Removal of Trustee.—The second section of the act, regulating the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy, provides that they may remove trustees for cause, but only after notice to the trustee proposed to be removed and upon a hearing, and only in case complaint is made in that behalf by the creditors.[142] This power of removal can be exercised by the judge only; it is not given to the referee.[143] And although the facts disclosed in a proceeding relative to the settlement of the bankrupt's estate may be such as would justify the removal of the trustee, this step cannot be taken except in pursuance of an application made in accordance with the forms prescribed.[144] The act provides that a trustee may be removed "upon complaints of creditors." This must be construed to mean any creditor of the particular estate, for the form of petition for the removal of a trustee set forth by the Supreme Court recites that it is presented by "one of the creditors of said bankrupt." The trustee is to have a "hearing," which means a full and fair opportunity to disprove the allegations against him. But the proceeding is summary, and the power of the court is similar to that exercised by courts of equity in the removal of receivers or trustees under a will.[145] The act provides for notice only to the trustee. Complaining creditors are of course before the court. But it seems that notice should be given to the other creditors, for many of them—even a majority—might desire the continuance of the trustee in office, as against one or a few complaining. The court would probably have a discretion to order notice to be given. An order of the district court removing a trustee does not present such a case or question as can be reviewed by the appellate court, as it rests wholly in the discretion of the court of bankruptcy.[146]

A trustee in bankruptcy may be removed from his office for fraud or criminal conduct in respect to the estate committed to his trust, for mismanagement resulting in loss to the beneficiaries, for careless-

142 The corresponding clause of the act of 1867 provided that the creditors might, with the consent of the court, remove any assignee by such a vote as was provided for the choice of an assignee. Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5039. See In re Dewey, 1 Low. 493, 4 N. B. R. 412, Fed. Cas. No. 3,849; In re New York Mail S. S. Co., 2 N. B. R. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 10,209.

143 General Order No. 13; In re Holden (D. C.) 258 Fed. 720. In re Berree & Wolf, 185 Fed. 224. But it seems that a referee may have a rule issued on a trustee to show cause why he should not be removed. In re Price, 4 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 11,409; In re Stokes, 1 N. B. R. 489, Fed. Cas. No. 13,475.

144 See In re Schapter, 9 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 12,438. The forms relating to a proceeding for the removal of a trustee are Nos. 52, 53, and 54.

145 See Bruns v. Stewart Mfg. Co., 31 Hun (N. Y.) 195. The referee may be directed to employ counsel to represent the estate of the bankrupt at the hearing of the order to show cause why the trustee should not be removed. In re Price, 4 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 11,409.

146 In re Adler, 2 Woods, 571, Fed. Cas. No. 82.

ness, incompetence, and, generally, for neglect or breach of his duty.[147] But he will not be removed for every mistake or neglect of his duty, especially where the consequences complained of were brought about by misunderstanding on his part, without wrongful or reckless intention, or by his following bad professional advice. Mistakes or negligence sufficient to justify his removal must be such as show a want of honesty or capacity to perform the duties of his office, or a lack of reasonable fidelity to the trust, and really endanger the trust property.[148] Thus, involving the estate in unnecessary litigation, if caused by erroneous legal advice, is no ground for removing the trustee.[149] Nor will he be removed for unsuccessfully attacking mortgages given by the bankrupt, when it appears that such action was justifiable.[150] But a trustee who has embezzled the funds of the estate and absconded must be removed,[151] and also one who is a fugitive from justice,[152] or who has mismanaged the estate and wholly failed to account.[153] So a trustee may be removed, and at his own cost, for neglecting to take proper measures to secure the bankrupt's property and for allowing it to be sold for taxes.[154] Ground for the removal of a trustee is also found in his dilatoriness in letting slip an opportunity to dispose of assets of the estate at great advantage, which resulted in protracted litigation and substantial injury to the interests of creditors.[155] So where the trustee has failed in properly informing creditors in regard to their rights and the value of the assets, and the information has been suppressed in the interest of one class of creditors, it is the duty of the court to remove him.[156] But where it appears that the trustee, though he ought to be removed, because of his mismanagement of the estate, has acted in entire good faith throughout, he should not be charged [147] A trustee in bankruptcy who fails, without reason, to carry out the wishes of the creditors by whom he was chosen, thus preventing their necessary co-operation, should be removed. Bollman v. Tobin, 239 Fed. 469, 152 C. C. A. 347, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504. It is also cause for removing a trustee that he employs as his attorney one who is also the legal representative of interests which may be antagonistic to the estate. In re Forestier (D. C.) 222 Fed. 537, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51. But compare In re Archbold & Hamilton (D. C.) 237 Fed. 408, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256. See, generally, In re Sweetser (D. C.) 240 Fed. 167; In re Holden (D. C.) 258 Fed. 720.

[148] Williams v. Nichol, 47 Ark. 254, 1 S. W. 243; Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. 760; Putnam v. Timothy Dry Goods Co., 79 Fed. 454.

[149] In re Blodget, 5 N. B. R. 472, Fed. Cas. No. 1,552.

[150] In re Sacchi, 43 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 250, 6 N. B. R. 398, Fed. Cas. No. 12,201.

[151] Scofield v. United States, 174 Fed. 1, 98 C. C. A. 39, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[152] Alexander v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 89 App. Div. 3, 85 N. Y. Supp. 282.

[153] United States v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 118 Fed. 482, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114.

[154] In re Morse, 7 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 9,852.

[155] In re Prouty, 24 Fed. 554.

[156] Ex parte Perkins, 5 Biss. 254, Fed. Cas. No. 10,982.

with the costs of the proceeding for his removal.[157] Deterioration of his personal character or capacity may also be ground for his removal. Thus a trustee who, from long-continued intemperance, has become unfit to have charge of the trust property may be removed.[158] And if the trustee becomes insolvent, or himself applies for the benefit of the bankruptcy act, this will be good cause for removing him from office.[159] But one who, at the time of his appointment, resided in the district and who still maintains an office therein, should not be removed merely because he has changed his legal residence to another district, unless it is shown that the change interferes with the performance of his duties or renders it difficult for interested parties to communicate with him or serve notices on him.[160] As the trustee holds a fiduciary relation to the creditors, he should not be interested in any scheme of composition. And his joining with the bankrupt to effect a composition, to the detriment of the creditors, by means of false representations as to the assets, is ground, not only for setting aside the composition, but also for removing the trustee from his office.[161]

[157] In re Mallory, 4 N. B. R. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 8,990.

[158] Bayles v. Staats, 5 N. J. Eq. 513.

[159] Harris v. Harris, 29 Beav. 107.

[160] In re Seider, 163 Fed. 138, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708.

[161] In re Allen B. Wrisley Co., 133 Fed. 388, 66 C. C. A. 450, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 193.

CHAPTER XVIII

POWERS AND DUTIES OF TRUSTEE

§ 297. Effect of Appointment and Qualification of Trustee.—An adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee operate to divest the bankrupt of all title to his property and of the right to possess and dispose of it.[1] Thereafter all the property which was in the bankrupt's possession or control is regarded as in the custody of the law and in the actual or constructive possession of the court of bankruptcy.[2] It becomes the duty of the bankrupt to surrender to his trustee all the property in his possession and also such property of his as he can reclaim from the hands of third persons holding it as his agents or bailees, and the duty of the trustee to claim and secure the possession of it.[3] Further, not only the right of possession, but the title to the bankrupt's property is vested by operation of law in the trustee upon his appointment, but as of the date of the adjudication,[4] and in this respect the trustee differs from a receiver appointed by a court of equity, the latter being a mere temporary custodian of the property, and not regarded as having any legal title to it.[5] As the title

[1] Kempner v. Bauer, 53 Misc. Rep. 109, 104 N. Y. Supp. 76.

[2] Crosby v. Spear, 98 Me. 542, 57 Atl. 881, 99 Am. St. Rep. 424; Devendorf v. Dickinson, 21 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 275; Rogers v. Voss, 1 Wils. (Ind.) 376.

[3] Supra, § 227.

[4] In re Youngstrom, 153 Fed. 98, 82 C. C. A. 232, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572; In re Walsh Bros., 159 Fed. 560, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Rosenberg, 3 Ben. 366, 3 N. B. R. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 12,055.

[5] Yeager v. Wallace, 44 Pa. St. 294.

descends upon the trustee "by operation of law," no other act is necessary to vest it than the adjudication and the qualification of a duly elected or appointed trustee,[6] no assignment, deed, or transfer from the bankrupt being requisite, except as to property in foreign countries (which of course is beyond the territorial operation of the bankruptcy law) and as to some peculiar forms of property (such as licenses or franchises) which require the indorsement of the bankrupt for their transfer.[7] If the trustee needs formal evidence of his official capacity and rights, in dealing with third persons or state courts, the law provides that "a certified copy of the order approving the bond of a trustee shall constitute conclusive evidence of the vesting in him of the title to the property of the bankrupt, and if recorded shall impart the same notice that a deed from the bankrupt to the trustee if recorded would have imparted had not bankruptcy proceedings intervened." [8] The trustee, however, acts under the direction or at least the control of the court of bankruptcy, and must obey its orders even though the particular subject-matter is in litigation in a state court.[9] And further, to give him fuller authority and an even stronger title than the bankrupt had, an amendment to the statute adopted in 1910 provides that "trustees, as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon, and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied." [10] This statute, though not retroactive, applied to all future cases, and is held to be consistent with the other provisions of the act and to be valid.[11]

§ 298. Trustee as Representative of Creditors.—Although a trustee in bankruptcy succeeds to the title of the bankrupt, he does not for that reason act as the agent or representative of the bankrupt in the subsequent proceedings, except only in the matter of setting apart to

For this reason a receiver (unlike a trustee in bankruptcy) cannot maintain trover for the property included in his charge, without leave of the court, except after it has actually passed into his possession. Singerly v. Fox, 75 Pa. St. 112; Boyle v. Townes, 9 Leigh (Va.) 158.

[6] Hough v. City of North Adams, 193 Mass. 290, 82 N. E. 46.

[7] Supra, § 220.

[8] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21e.

[9] Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 550, 76 N. E. 258.

[10] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, c. 412, § 8, 36 Stat. 840, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a. See Bean v. Parker, 89 Vt. 532, 96 Atl. 17.

[11] In re Calhoun Supply Co., 189 Fed. 537, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Gartman, 186 Fed. 349.

him the exemptions allowed by law.[12] For all other purposes and in all other matters the trustee is the representative of the creditors, and of them only, and not in any sense of the bankrupt.[13] And by analogy, where the bankrupt is a corporation, the trustee represents its creditors only, and not its stockholders.[14] This distinction is important, because it follows from it that the trustee is free to assert or contest claims and rights to property, maintain or defend proceedings, collect assets, and avoid preferences, in circumstances where the bankrupt himself would not be at liberty to act, either on the ground of estoppel or of public policy.[15] But when it is said that the trustee represents the creditors, it is meant that he represents only those who were creditors at the time of the filing of the petition, because they alone become parties to the proceeding.[16] But as to those creditors, the trustee represents them all equally and alike. He must not advocate the cause of one against another, or give to any creditor an advantage which the law does not give, nor allow himself to be controlled in his administration of the trust by any creditor or group or class of creditors. As he owes a like duty to all, he must hold himself indifferent, and give to all like opportunities and absolutely impartial treatment.[17]

[12] Aiken v. Edrington, 15 N. B. R. 271, Fed. Cas. No. 111; American Woolen Co. of New York v. Samuelsohn, 226 N. Y. 61, 123 N. E. 154. But se In re Lenters (D. C.) 225 Fed. 878, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3, in which it is said that a trustee in bankruptcy occupies a fiduciary capacity and is to some extent a stakeholder, having duties to the bankrupt as well as to the creditors.

[13] In re Kessler, 186 Fed. 127, 108 C. C. A. 239; In re Kreuger, 196 Fed. 705, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440; In re Doran, 148 Fed. 327, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799; Aiken v. Edrington, 15 N. B. R. 271, Fed. Cas. No. 111; Cartwright v. West, 173 Ala. 198, 55 South. 917. See Edwards v. Schillinger, 245 Ill. 231, 91 N. E. 1048, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 895, 137 Am. St. Rep. 308. And see Jones v. Dugan, 124 Md. 346, 92 Atl. 775, where it is said that the trustee in bankruptcy for some purposes stands in the position of the creditors and for others in the position of the bankrupt himself, and this rule is not affected by the 1910 amendment to the Bankruptcy Act, giving him the status of a lien creditor. Compare also Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420, holding that while the trustee, suing to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, may be said to be the alter ego of the creditors, in that his action is for their benefit, still he is, in law and fact, but an arm of the court, and acts, not for creditors individually or collectively, but for the estate.

[14] In re V. & M. Lumber Co. (D. C.) 182 Fed. 231.

[15] In re Kessler, 186 Fed. 127, 108 C. C. A. 239; In re Gurney, 7 Biss. 414, 15 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 5,873; In re St. Helen Mill Co., 3 Sawy. 88, 10 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 12,222.

[16] Batchelder & Lincoln Co. v. Whitmore, 122 Fed. 355, 58 C. C. A. 517, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641.

[17] West v. Bank of Lahoma, 16 Okl. 508, 86 Pac. 59; People v. Security Life Ins. Co., 79 N. Y. 267; In re Sully, 142 Fed. 895, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304. It is also to be noted that in general the trustee represents the general creditors of the estate, as against secured creditors or those claiming liens or special interests. In re Imperial Textile Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 775, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534. But there may be circumstances under which it would be right and his duty to enforce equitable rights in favor of certain creditors only. In re Desnoyers Shoe Co. (D.

§ 299. Instructions of Court or Referee.—The trustee, as an officer of the court, is subject to its orders and directions at all times from his appointment to his discharge, and may be controlled in his administration of the property by orders made in summary proceedings;[18] and will be treated as in contempt if he acts in contravention of the rulings and orders of the court.[19] He may submit for the sanction or approval of the court arrangements or agreements made with adverse claimants of property or other third persons.[20] And where he applies for the directions of the court, and a reference is ordered to ascertain the necessary facts, but the trustee fails to attend the hearing and acts independently, he will be held to the strictest accountability.[21]

Undoubtedly the trustee may, in any proper emergency, apply to the court of bankruptcy for directions as to the course to be pursued. But neither the judge nor the referee is the general adviser of the trustee in his dealings with the property of the estate.[22] And where the trustee's duty is plain, or where the question is simply one of expediency or of probable advantage or disadvantage to the estate, or where the proposed act is entirely within his own discretion and power, he cannot as a matter of right obtain the instructions of the court, but should act on his own responsibility, or, if he prefers to take no risk, he should submit the matter to the creditors and be governed by their vote.[23] Such, for example, is the question whether it is necessary or desirable for him to retain an attorney,[24] or whether he should file a petition to have the claim of a creditor expunged for fraud.[25] On this

C.) 210 Fed. 533, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; Sanborn-Cutting Co. v. Paine, 244 Fed. 672, 157 C. C. A. 120, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525.

[18] In re Cadenas & Coe (D. C.) 178 Fed. 158, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; In re Howard (D. C.) 130 Fed. 1004, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

[19] In re Smith, 2 Hughes, 284, Fed. Cas. No. 12,978.

[20] Mulford v. Fourth Street Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 897, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742.

[21] In re Schapter, 9 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 12,438.

[22] In re Sturgeon, 1 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 13,564.

[23] In re Franklin Sav. Fund Soc., 10 Phila. (Pa.) 276, Fed. Cas. No. 5,058. As to the authority and duty of the court to disapprove an improvident bargain proposed to be made by the trustee, and officially to inform creditors of the jeopardy in which their interests are thereby placed, though not applied to for instructions, but only to grant a petition for the carrying out of the bargain, see Henry v. Harris, 191 Fed. 868. See In re Cutler & John (D. C.) 228 Fed. 771, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420, holding that when the trustee finds that the bankrupt owns property which is subject to liens, he should petition the court (referee) for instructions as to the course which he should pursue, and the referee, if he deems it advisable, may call a meeting of the creditors to consider what is best to be done.

[24] In re Abram, 103 Fed. 272, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575; In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[25] In re Baber, 119 Fed. 520, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

subject it has been said: "Undoubtedly, by the very terms of the bankruptcy statute, the trustee acts at all times technically under the direction of the court, and no doubt he has, on proper occasions and under proper circumstances, the right to apply to the court for its instructions in the premises. But this does not mean that he can shovel the administration of his trusteeship into the court, unload his responsibility upon the referee or the judge of the court, and evade or shirk his plain duties by asking the advice and directions of the court. Properly, he should be a man of affairs, ready to act upon his own responsibility and intelligence, as business men do in their affairs, if necessary resort to the advice of counsel, and still more, if the further necessity exist, resort to the tribunal of the body of the creditors assembled in general or special meeting called for the purpose under the presidency of the referee or judge, as provided in the scheme of the act. It is for such purposes that meetings of creditors are provided for, and, until resort has been had to these appliances to guide his judgment, and complications of a serious nature have arisen, it is disserviceable that a trustee should be applying to the court for its instructions and advice." [26]

§ 300. Inventory and Appraisal of Property.—The seventeenth general order in bankruptcy makes it the duty of the trustee, "immediately upon entering upon his duties," to "prepare a complete inventory of all the property of the bankrupt that comes into his possession." In addition to this, the statute explicitly requires that all the property, whether real or personal, shall be appraised by three disinterested appraisers, who shall be appointed by, and report to, the court.[27] The object of the appraisement is to secure for the benefit and protection of all parties concerned a designation and estimate of the property which passes into the hands of the trustee, and for which in the first instance he is to be accountable.[28] And since it is the policy of the law that all steps in the administration of the estate should be taken by persons who are disinterested and will act for all the creditors, rather than for the benefit of any faction or clique, the referee should make the appointment of the appraisers in the exercise of his independent judgment, and their selection should not be submitted to a vote of the creditors, especially where there is a sharp conflict of views and interests between the creditors.[29]

[26] In re Baber, 119 Fed. 520, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

[27] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70b.

[28] In re Gordon Supply & Mfg. Co., 133 Fed. 798, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352.

[29] In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526. A person is not disqualified for appointment as appraiser of a bankrupt's property merely because some of the officers

The particularity with which the appraisement is to be made is not specified in the statute, and it must depend somewhat on circumstances. But usually it should be general and not special, and should not go into the detail practised by a merchant in taking an account of stock, only such particularity being indulged in as is sufficient for a reasonable identification of the property in character and quantity and to give a fair idea of its value.[30] The compensation of the appraisers is not fixed by the law, and rests in the discretion of the court. But in at least one district the rule has been established that, in any ordinary case, no more than $5 a day for three days' work will be allowed to each appraiser, the trustee being required to justify any greater allowance, and the court declares that "it must be an extraordinary case where over two or three days are necessary."[31]

§ 301. Custody and Care of Property.—While the property of the estate remains in the hands of the trustee, that is to say, until it is finally disposed of by sale or otherwise, it is his duty to exercise such care in the custody and preservation of it, and in saving it from loss or deterioration, as would be exacted of a receiver, guardian, or other fiduciary. He has an insurable interest in the property, and if he considers it a necessary precaution, he may effect an insurance on it to its full value. Even if he omits to obtain the previous authorization of the court, or the consent of the creditors, before taking this step, the premiums paid for a reasonable amount of insurance will be allowed in his accounts, as a part of the necessary expense of preserving the estate.[32] If the trustee finds some of the property to be in bad physical condition, the circumstances may be such as to justify him in spending part of the cash in hand for the purpose of such repairs as will make the property salable. Ordinarily the property will remain in his custody only for a very short time, as the predominant purpose of the bankrupt-and directors of a corporation creditor are also officers and directors of another corporation of which such appraiser is president. Idem. A lessee of a bankrupt mining company is not disqualified, merely by reason of his lease, to serve as an appraiser of the bankrupt's property. Clark Hardware Co. v. Sauve, 220 Fed. 102, 136 C. C. A. 194, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674.

[30] In re Gordon Supply & Mfg. Co., 133 Fed. 798, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352. But see In re Mills Tea & Butter Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 812, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154, holding that the inventory must be careful, accurate, and complete.

[31] In re E. I. Fidler & Son, 172 Fed. 632, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 16. In a case where the bankrupt was the owner of 30 stores scattered through four different states, it was held that an award of $250 to each of the three appraisers was not clearly excessive. In re Mills Tea & Butter Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 812, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

[32] In re Hamilton, 102 Fed. 683, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543; Thompson v. Phenix Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 293, 10 Sup. Ct. 1019, 34 L. Ed. 408; Insurance Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. 509, 18 L. Ed. 524; In re Carow, 4 N. B. R. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 2,426; In re Fortune, 1 Low. 306, 2 N. B. R. 662, Fed. Cas. No. 4,955. See Dortch v. Dortch, 71 N. C. 224.

cy act is to settle estates as quickly as possible. Yet, in exceptional cases, the same rule might be applied to a trustee in bankruptcy which governs the case of receivers, viz., that they will be allowed for money spent in reasonable and necessary repairs, even without previous authority granted.[33] There is this difference, however, that a trustee in bankruptcy always has it in his power to consult the body of creditors and to cast upon them the responsibility of deciding upon the propriety or necessity of such action, and this he should not fail to do when the object of the proposed expenditure is not so much to save the property from actual destruction as to enhance its value and make it more attractive to possible purchasers.

As to the management of the cash in hand, it is the duty of the trustee to place it in one of the designated depositories, and withdraw it only in the manner specified in the act and the rules, as will appear in a later section. Occasionally, however, the question may arise whether it is not the duty of the trustee to invest the funds, where it appears that the final settlement of the estate will be long delayed, so that the money may earn some interest in the meantime. There is no provision of the statute covering this point, unless it be found in the clause which directs trustees to "account for and pay over to the estates under their control all interest received by them upon property of such estates." [34] But probably this is only intended to prevent trustees from making their possession and control of the money a source of profit to themselves. Previous bankruptcy laws made provision for the temporary investment of the funds of estates under the sanction of the court,[35] and it has been intimated that, under the present statute, in cases where an estate is involved in protracted litigation or there are other circumstances to postpone its settlement, it might be proper to invest the funds, at least to the extent of placing them in some bank paying interest on deposits and taking a time certificate of deposit for them, but that this could be done only with the consent of all the creditors.[36]

[33] Attorney General v. Vigor, 11 Ves. 563; Hooper v. Winston, 24 Ill. 353; Hynes v. McDermott, 3 N. Y. St. Repr. 582.

[34] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a. cl. 1.

[35] The act of 1867 provided that "when it appears that the distribution of the estate may be delayed by litigation or other cause, the court may direct the temporary investment of the money belonging to such estate in securities to be approved by the judge or register, or may authorize it to be deposited in any convenient bank, upon such interest, not exceeding the legal rate, as the bank may contract with the assignee to pay thereon." Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5060. And the Torrey bankruptcy bill, which was so long and seriously considered by Congress, provided that "whenever an estate is involved in litigation which is likely to be prolonged, the judge may order the investment of the cash, if any, at interest upon approved security, pending such litigation."

[36] Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160

§ 302. Carrying on Bankrupt's Business.—The statute provides that the courts of bankruptcy may "authorize the business of bankrupts to be conducted for limited periods by receivers, the marshals, or trustees, if necessary in the best interests of the estates." [37] Practically it often happens that the creditors take this matter into their own hands and vote to direct the trustee to continue the business, sometimes specifically limiting the amount to be expended for this purpose, the time it is to continue, or the branch of the business to be conducted, and occasionally exercising a close supervision over the trustee by giving him detailed instructions for the running of the business.[38] But such a course is not proper. Authority for this purpose is explicitly confided to the court of bankruptcy, and that court should invariably pass upon such a question. While undoubtedly the judge would be influenced by the expressed wish of a large proportion of the creditors, still he is bound to exercise his own judgment and discretion. And it has even been said that, if the transaction proposed is one of any magnitude, or involves the raising of money by means of trustees' certificates, the referee should not undertake to exercise the authority granted to the "court," but refer the matter to the judge.[39]

Permission to carry on the business of the bankrupt should rarely be granted. The object of a proceeding in bankruptcy is not to save a failing or unprofitable concern and nurse it into productiveness, or to convert a financial wreck into a paying investment, but to secure all the available assets of the debtor, convert them into cash, and divide them among the creditors as quickly as possible. The trustee may find it necessary to ask for leave to carry on the business for a short time, in order that the fruits of valuable contracts may become available as assets, or that grants may be earned or franchises preserved. Yet it is expressly made his duty to "close up the estate as expeditiously as is compatible with the best interests of the parties in interest." And aside from this specific injunction, the purpose and policy of the act should be considered as putting a limitation upon the discretion of the trustee

Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349. As to the investment of funds by receivers and guardians (whose position is analogous to that of a trustee in bankruptcy), see Attorney General v. North American Life Ins. Co., 89 N. Y. 94; Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194, 97 Am. Dec. 449.

[37] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 5. As to authorizing a receiver in bankruptcy to carry on the business, see supra, § 212.

[38] See, for example, United States v. Union Surety & Guaranty Co., 118 Fed. 482, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; In re Plummer, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 292.

[39] Bray v. Johnson, 166 Fed. 57, 91 C. C. A. 643, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383. If a trustee in bankruptcy continues the bankrupt's business without being thereto authorized by the court of bankruptcy, he will be personally liable. McAuley v. Jackson, 165 App. Div. 846, 151 N. Y. Supp. 120.

in these particulars and upon the authority of the court in granting him permission. Hence authority to continue the business of the bankrupt should not be granted unless the gain to the estate from such a course is very clear and very certain. Such cases do sometimes occur. Thus, where the assets of the bankrupt coming into the hands of the trustee include commodities in process of construction or preparation, such as unfinished machinery in the bankrupt's work-shops, not so far completed as to be salable, but it is shown that they could be finished and made ready for the market in a short time, and at a comparatively small cost, and would then command such a price as would result in substantial benefit to the estate, the court may authorize the trustee to finish such goods for sale and to defray the necessary cost thereof out of the funds of the estate.[40] Such a course is also proper where the business must be continued in operation because it can only be sold to good advantage as a going concern, as, for instance, in the case of a hotel.[41]

The trustee should be required to pay all bills properly and legitimately contracted by him in the conduct of the bankrupt's business,[42] including the wages of skilled employés whom it is necessary to retain as being the only persons acquainted with the business.[43] But it seems that he is not liable to an action for damages for the negligence of an employé resulting in injury to a stranger, where it is not shown that he held himself out as conducting the business in any other capacity than as an officer of the court, and where no personal negligence is imputable to him.[44]

§ 303. Collection of Assets.—It is made the duty of trustees in bankruptcy to "collect and reduce to money the property of the estates for which they are trustees."[45] And first it is incumbent on the trustee

[40] Foster v. Ames, 1 Low. 313, 2 N. B. R. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 4,965. Where a bankrupt orchard company, having contracted to plant, cultivate, and irrigate orchards pending payment of the price, had assigned all but one of such contracts before adjudication, the trustee was held not entitled to continue cultivation against the objection of a creditor. In re Wenatchee Heights Orchard Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 787, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[41] In re Bayley, 177 Fed. 522, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249. The receivers in bankruptcy of the famous New York restaurant "Delmonico's", after operating the business for three months at a substantial and increasing profit, were granted leave to continue the same until it could be sold or until a trustee was appointed. In re Delmonico's (D. C.) 256 Fed. 414, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[42] In re Pattee, 143 Fed. 994, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450.

[43] J. I. Case Plow Works v. Edwards, 176 Ill. 34, 51 N. E. 618.

[44] Cardot v. Barney, 63 N. Y. 281, 20 Am. Rep. 533.

[45] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a. See Barrett v. Kaigler, 200 Ala. 404, 76 South. 320. The mere designation of a person as "special master" in the order of appointment in bankruptcy proceedings does not deprive him of the express authority conferred by such order to sue for and collect the assets of the estate. Royal Ins. Co. v. Miller, 199 U. S. 353, 26 Sup. Ct. 46, 50 L. Ed. 226. In to exercise diligence in discovering the available assets of the bankrupt. Ordinarily he will rely in the first instance on the bankrupt's schedule of property and on information given to him by the creditors. And probably he is not required to make a search for possible interests of the bankrupt in property which the latter either does not know of or does not mention and which is not suspected by any creditor.[46] But on the other hand, a trustee would certainly not be justified in relying on the schedule alone. He must act upon any information, hint, or suggestion coming to him from a reliable source. And he can generally obtain the information necessary to follow up any such clue, by asking for an order to have any designated person appear and submit to examination.[47] If, in fact, he could learn of the existence of available assets by proper inquiry, and fails to do so, he is chargeable with negligence,[48] and he may be charged in his account with the value of assets which never came into his possession if he failed in his duty to recover them.[49]

When informed of the existence and whereabouts of assets, the trustee is armed with ample remedies to secure them. In the first place, if he can do so without a breach of the peace, he may take physical possession of any property of the bankrupt, wherever it may be found, and if money has been converted into goods, they may be taken in the same manner, provided they can be certainly identified.[50] He may also maintain replevin for goods of the bankrupt to which he is entitled as trustee,[51] or ejectment for the recovery of real property.[52] And when fortified by an order or decree of the court for the delivery of possession, he may have the help of a writ of attachment, or of sequestration, or of assistance, according as one or the other may be the the bankruptcy of a corporation, amounts remaining due and unpaid on subscriptions to its stock are "assets" of its estate in bankruptcy, and if it is necessary to realize on them, in order to raise sufficent money to pay the debts of the estate, the court of bankruptcy has power and jurisdiction, on a proper application by the trustee, to levy an assessment on the delinquent subscribers, and to enforce its payment. Enright v. Heckscher, 240 Fed. 863, 153 C. C. A. 540; In re M. Stipp Const. Co., 221 Fed. 372, 137 C. C. A. 180, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333; In re Louis J. Bergdoll Motor Co. (D. C.) 260 Fed. 234, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593; In re Canister Co., 252 Fed. 70, 164 C. C. A. 182, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; Johnson v. Canfield-Swigart Co., 211 Ill. App. 423. And see supra, § 148.

[46] See In re Mott, Fed. Cas. No. 9,878a.

[47] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21a.

[48] Avery v. Cleary, 132 U. S. 604, 10 Sup. Ct. 220, 33 L. Ed. 469; Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; In re Kuhn Bros., 234 Fed. 277, 148 C. C. A. 179.

[49] In re Reinboth, 157 Fed. 672, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15.

[50] Brush v. Blanchard, 19 Ill. 31.

[51] Gordon v. Farrington, 46 Mich. 420, 9 N. W. 456; Coats v. Farrington, 46 Mich. 422, 9 N. W. 456.

[52] Kirkpatrick v. Clark, 132 Ill. 342, 24 N. E. 71, 8 L. R. A. 511, 22 Am. St. Rep. 531.

appropriate remedy.[53] If part of the assets of the bankrupt consists of a provable claim against the estate of another bankrupt, it is the duty of the trustee to prove the claim in such other bankruptcy and secure its allowance and collect the dividends which may be payable on it.[54] It may even be the duty of the trustee to institute proceedings in bankruptcy against his bankrupt's insolvent debtor, as the only available means of collecting any portion of the debt. He could not be allowed to secure a preference for the estate which he is administering, and his only available remedy may be the filing of a petition in bankruptcy.[55] Without resorting to legal proceedings, he may, in proper cases, advance the interests of the estate by a bargain or compromise with an adverse claimant or other party,[56] provided that it is not contrary to law or to morality or public policy.[57] The power of the court of bankruptcy is also behind the trustee, and he may summarily apply for an order requiring the bankrupt to surrender to him any property which the latter has in his possession or under his control,[58] or even property in the hands of third persons which is claimed by him as assets of the estate.[59] But if he is satisfied that property which comes into his hands did not belong to the bankrupt, he should at once return it to the true owner.[60] In suitable cases, also, the possessor of property which belongs to the estate in bankruptcy may be enjoined from disposing of it or transferring it,[61] or ordered to withdraw an unlawful claim to it.[62] But if it is in the hands of a receiver appointed by a state court, his proper course is to apply to the court which appointed the receiver for an order for its surrender.[63] He may also sue to set aside fraudulent conveyances or transfers and recover the property affected,[64]

[53] Equity Rules Nos. 7 and 9.

[54] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57m.

[55] In re Jones, 7 N. B. R. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 7,450.

[56] In re E. M. Newton & Co., 153 Fed. 841, 83 C. C. A. 23, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567.

[57] In re Rosenblatt, 153 Fed. 335, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663.

[58] In re Wright, 177 Fed. 578, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re E. I. Fidler & Son, 163 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101. And see supra, § 227.

[59] Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; In re Gill (C. C. A.) 190 Fed. 726, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 885; In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; In re Holbrook Shoe & Leather Co., 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511; In re Davis, 119 Fed. 950, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; In re Mills, 179 Fed. 409, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; In re Famous Clothing Co., 179 Fed. 1015, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; In re Meier, 182 Fed. 799, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Friedman, 161 Fed. 260, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37; Floyd v. Layton, 172 N. C. 64, 89 S. E. 998; Bynum v. Scott (D. C.) 217 Fed. 122, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436. And see supra, § 67.

[60] In re Noakes, 1 N. B. R. 592, Fed. Cas. No. 10,281.

[61] In re Jackson, 94 Fed. 797, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501. And see supra, § 205.

[62] In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

[63] Seligman v. Ferst, 57 Ga. 561. And see supra, § 27.

[64] Falls City Tinware Co.'s Trustee v. Levine, 104 S. W. 716, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 1103. And see infra, ch. 23.

and may proceed against a creditor to recover money received by him from the bankrupt after the institution of the proceedings.[65]

§ 304. Arbitration and Compromise.—A trustee is authorized, "pursuant to the direction of the court, to submit to arbitration any controversy arising in the settlement of the estate." [66] And he may also, "with the approval of the court, compromise any controversy arising in the administration of the estate upon such terms as he may deem for the best interests of the estate." [67] But when a trustee applies for authority either to arbitrate or to compromise a controversy, "the application shall clearly and distinctly set forth the subject-matter of the controversy and the reasons why the trustee thinks it proper and most for the interest of the estate that the controversy should be settled by arbitration or otherwise." [68] Generally speaking, no such action should be taken by the trustee without first obtaining leave of the court. But if the circumstances are such that the sanction of the court would have been given if applied for, the compromise may be sustained if afterwards questioned.[69] It is also provided that creditors shall have notice of "the proposed compromise of any controversy." [70] But the initiative in this matter is given only to the trustee, who acts as the representative of the creditors. If a compromise is offered, he may indeed submit it to the judgment of the creditors assembled in a meeting, but their vote in favor of accepting it is neither a sufficient warrant to the trustee nor conclusive on the court. It may still be disapproved by the judge or

[65] Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160 Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

[66] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 26. Under the act of 1867, a disputed claim might be submitted to the decision of the register by stipulation, but his judgment was not final, but was subject to review by the court. In re Ford, 18 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 4,932.

[67] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 27.

[68] General Order No. 33. See In re Hoole, 3 Fed. 496. An order of the bankruptcy court made upon the ex parte application of the trustee, approving the terms of an agreement of compromise, and authorizing the trustee to consummate the same, has no binding effect upon the other party to the proposed compromise. Duff v. Hopkins, 33 Fed. 599. But compare Lake v. Dredge (Iowa) 138 N. W. 869.

[69] Bacot v. Heyward, 5 S. C. 441. And see Simmons v. Richards, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 112, 66 S. W. 687. A trustee in bankruptcy has no power to give his consent to a decree of a state court, in a suit to which he is made defendant, brought for the purpose of determining the right and title to property scheduled by the bankrupt as part of his assets. In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482.

[70] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a. When the court has been misled into making an order authorizing the compromise of a controversy by misrepresentations as to the true state of the facts in question, an application to have such order vacated may be made by any creditor of the estate. In re Hoole, 3 Fed. 496. Where a creditor had actual notice of a proposed compromise, which was fair and made in good faith, he cannot attack it five years later for the want of a formal notice. Petition of Baxter (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 344, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453.

referee.[71] And no binding bargain can be made by the creditors or part of them directly with the bankrupt. He no longer has control of his property or debts, and any such agreement must have the concurrence of the trustee and the approval of the court.[72]

Leave to compromise a controversy is not granted as of course. It will be refused where the claim of the trustee can apparently be collected in full if proper measures are taken, or where it is secured.[73] And the expense and delay of a litigation will not justify a compromise in a case where public interests and the due administration of the bankruptcy law require the settlement of the questions of law involved by the judgment of the court,[74] nor where the proposed settlement would result in creating an illegal preference, contrary to the spirit and purpose of the statute.[75] Nor can the provision of the law relating to compromises be stretched so as to include a scheme for the reorganization of a bankrupt corporation, under which dissenting creditors would be compelled to accept stock in a new corporation in exchange for their claims and submit to the creation of a prior mortgage lien to provide a working capital.[76] And it should be remarked that, although the law does not require the consent of the creditors to a proposed compromise, or any proportion of them, yet the court will carefully consider the rights and interests of any who may dissent. Thus, stockholders of a bankrupt corporation, at whose instance a suit has been brought by the trustee against officers and directors to recover damages for the alleged wrecking of the corporation, are entitled to have an offer of compromise rejected by the bankruptcy court, on giving security to protect the estate against any loss consequent upon the failure to realize the amount offered.[77] Undoubtedly, however, there are cases where the interests of all concerned will be promoted by a judicious settlement out of court, as where a claim against a third person for money and property alleged to belong to the bankrupt is contested, and the evidence is [71] In re Heyman, 108 Fed. 207, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808. The trustee's authority to compromise a controversy is not limited to cases in which all the creditors of the bankrupt have the same interest. Petition of Stuart (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 938.

[72] In re Ford, 18 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 4,932; In re Anderson, 2 Hughes, 378, 9 N. B. R. 360, Fed. Cas. No. 351.

[73] In re Furbish, 2 Hask. 120, Fed. Cas. No. 5,159. In re Stier-March Contracting Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 223, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

[74] In re Rowe, 18 N. B. R. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 12,092.

[75] In re Geiselhart, 181 Fed. 622, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

[76] In re Northampton Portland Cement Co., 185 Fed. 542, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565. And see In re Woodend, 133 Fed. 593, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 768. In re Prudential Outfitting Co. (D. C.) 250 Fed. 504, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621.

[77] In re John H. Woodbury Dermatological Institute (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 819, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

conflicting, and it is apparent that if the trustee could recover at all, it would only be at the end of a long and costly suit.[78] So also, by the terms of the statute, where the trustee and a secured creditor cannot agree upon the value of the security, for the purpose of crediting such value upon the claim, they may be directed by the court either to compromise the matter or to submit it to arbitration.[79]

In case of submission of any controversy to arbitration, the statute directs that "three arbitrators shall be chosen by mutual consent, or one by the trustee, one by the other party to the controversy, and the third by the two so chosen, or if they fail to agree in five days after their appointment, the court shall appoint the third arbitrator."[80] This method of selection must be followed. It is an irregularity if one of the arbitrators is selected by the trustee, one by the other party, and the third agreed upon by the two contending parties.[81] As to the award, the direction of the statute is that "the written finding of the arbitrators, or a majority of them, as to the issues presented, may be filed in court and shall have like force and effect as the verdict of a jury."[82] But their finding, when so filed, has no greater effect, and is subject to be set aside or adjudged upon by the court in like manner as a verdict would be.[83]

§ 305. Redemption of Property.—When it is thought to be for the advantage of the estate in bankruptcy that the trustee should redeem property from a mortgage, pledge, or other lien, the course prescribed is that a petition for authority to take that step should be filed in the court of bankruptcy by either the trustee or the bankrupt or by any creditor who has proved his debt, and the court will decide the question upon a hearing, of which interested parties are to be notified and at which they shall have an opportunity to show cause against the proposed redemption.[84] Subject to these provisions a trustee in bankruptcy may redeem land from a conveyance which, though absolute in form, was intended as a mortgage and was accompanied by a parol defeasance,[85] or from a foreclosure sale under a decree rendered after the adjudication, if, by the law of the state, such a right of redemption remains in the bankrupt mortgagor.[86] And he may redeem property of

[78] In re Kranich, 174 Fed. 908, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550. See Matter of Croton Ins. Co., 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 642.

[79] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57h.

[80] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 26b.

[81] In re McLam, 97 Fed. 922, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

[82] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 26c.

[83] In re McLam, 97 Fed. 922, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

[84] General Order No. 28. See In re East Stroudsburg Supply & Const. Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 356, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[85] Foraast v. Hyman, 138 Ill. 423, 28 N. E. 800.

[86] In re Novak, 111 Fed. 161, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27. See Wittmeier v. Cran-

the bankrupt which has been sold on execution to the judgment creditor, without paying the unsatisfied balance of the judgment or taking the property subject to the lien of the judgment.[87] As to redeeming from a tax sale, the law is not clear. So far as concerns the bankruptcy law, a step so necessary for the preservation of assets which may be valuable would surely be authorized by the court, and warrant might easily be found for the necessary expenditure. But the right of a trustee in bankruptcy must depend upon the wording of the state statute, and if the right of redemption is given only to the "owner" of the property, it might be doubtful whether he would come within this description. Generally, however, the tax laws of the states are so construed as to give a right of redemption to almost any one who can show a substantial interest in the property.[88]

§ 306. Performance of Bankrupt's Contracts and Obligations.—It has been stated that a trustee in bankruptcy is bound to carry out the bankrupt's valid contracts made in good faith and not in fraud of his creditors,[89] and that the trustee is estopped by the acts of the bankrupt, and bound by his conduct and agreements to the same extent that the bankrupt would be bound before the adjudication.[90] Probably these statements are too broad, especially in view of the provision of the statute giving the trustee the rights of a lien creditor. But certainly he may, if he so elects, assume the bankrupt's contracts and fulfil them, provided that any benefit to the estate will result from his doing so. While a trustee in bankruptcy is not bound to accept property or take over contracts which are onerous and unprofitable, he is required to elect whether to assume an existing executory contract and to continue its performance and ultimately dispose of it for the benefit of the estate, or to renounce it, and leave the injured party to such legal remedies for the breach as the case affords. If he elects to assume a contract, and completes it, he is entitled to whatever the bankrupt would have received, but on the other hand he takes the contract cum onere, as the bankrupt ford, 199 Ala. 1, 73 South. 981; Brown v. Crawford (D. C.) 252 Fed. 248, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

[87] Lloyd v. Hoo Sue, 5 Sawy. 74, 17 N. B. R. 170, Fed. Cas. No. 8,432.

[88] See Black, Tax Titles (2d ed.) § 365. And see In re William F. Fisher & Co., 148 Fed. 907, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; In re Clark Realty Co., 234 Fed. 576, 148 C. C. A. 342, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129.

[89] In re Stewart (D. C.) 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. And see Mankins v. Forward Movement Syndicate, 28 Cal. App. 285, 152 Pac. 313. Compare Park, Grant & Morris v. Shannon & Mott Co., 140 Minn. 60, 167 N. W. 285. The holder of an option from the bankrupt for the purchase of land was held entitled to specific performance by the bankruptcy court, on an offer to pay sufficient to satisfy all claims against the estate and costs. Dunlop v. Baker, 239 Fed. 193, 152 C. C. A. 181, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[90] Watson v. Proximity Mfg. Co., 147 N. C. 478, 61 S. E. 273.

held it, subject to all of its provisions and conditions.[91] This course is often proper with regard to property held by the bankrupt under a contract of conditional sale, where the assets of the estate will be increased by the completion of the conditions by the trustee and the consequent vesting of full title to the article in question.[92] So where the bankrupt was a building contractor, and had an unfinished contract on hand at the time of his adjudication, the trustee may be directed by the court to complete the contract and collect the balance due under it.[93] But where the bankrupt corporation held property under a lease, which required it to erect an expensive building on the leased land, and had failed to perform the condition, and had received notice of a forfeiture of the lease for breach of such condition, all before its adjudication in bankruptcy, the court of bankruptcy, on petition of the lessor, decreed the enforcement of the forfeiture and directed the trustee to surrender possession, this being the only effective means of protecting the rights of the lessor.[94] What has been said above of the assumption of contracts by the trustee naturally does not apply to such executory contracts as relate to purely personal services or involve the element of personal trust or confidence.[95]

[91] Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 16 Sup. Ct. 637, 40 L. Ed. 791; United States Trust Co. v. Wabash Ry., 150 U. S. 289, 14 Sup. Ct. 86, 37 L. Ed. 1085; Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; American File Co. v. Garrett, 110 U. S. 288, 4 Sup. Ct. 90, 28 L. Ed. 149; In re Chambers, Calder & Co., 98 Fed. 865, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537; Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hurley, 153 Fed. 503, 82 C. C. A. 453, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396; Watson v. Merrill, 136 Fed. 359, 69 C. C. A. 185, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; In re Nicholas, 122 Fed. 299, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; Wilkins v. Tourtellott, 28 Kan. 825; First Trust & Savings Bank v. Bitter Root Valley Irr. Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 320; In re Berry (D. C.) 247 Fed. 700, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357; Barr v. Youngeville Sugar Factory, 141 La. 869, 75 South. 805, L. R. A. 1917F, 654. Whether or not a bankruptcy court will authorize its trustee to complete an unperformed contract, or will permit a surety of the bankrupt to make use of the property of the estate in so doing, is a matter within the discretion of the court, the surety not being entitled as a matter of right. In re Schilling (D. C.) 251 Fed. 966, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 705. The trustee must exercise his option to accept or reject an uncompleted contract within a reasonable time. Brown v. Rushton, 223 Mass. 80, 111 N. E. 884. But where a corporation purchased goods for future delivery, and later went into voluntary bankruptcy, the fact that the trustee waited until he could ascertain whether there was a profit in the contract before accepting it would not make his action dilatory. Planters' Oil Co. v. Gresham (Tex. Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 145.

[92] See In re Grainger, 160 Fed. 69, 87 C. C. A. 225, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; Hurley v. Allman Gas Engine & Machine Co., 144 App. Div. 300, 129 N. Y. Supp. 14; Tierney v. Butler, 144 Iowa, 553, 123 N. W. 213.

[93] Davis v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 75 App. Div. 518, 78 N. Y. Supp. 336; Ford v. State Board of Education, 166 Mich. 658, 132 N. W. 467.

[94] Lindeke v. Associates Realty Co., 146 Fed. 630, 77 C. C. A. 56, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215.

[95] In re Schiermann, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 118.

§ 307. Leased Property and Leasehold Interests of Bankrupt.—A leasehold interest in property, if salable and possessing a market value, is assets of the bankrupt's estate which passes to the trustee.[96] But the trustee is not bound to accept anything which may be more burdensome than beneficial to the estate in his charge, and therefore is not required to assume a lease made to the bankrupt unless he thinks it will be for the benefit of the creditors. He has his option either to accept it or to abandon it,[97] and he cannot be charged with the obligations of the lease without some affirmative act of acceptance on his part.[98] The trustee must be accorded a reasonable length of time after his appointment in which to decide whether he will take over the lease or not.[99] But in a case where the bankrupt's landlord repeatedly inquired of the trustee as to when he would surrender the possession, and was ready to accept a surrender, having negotiated with a new tenant, but the trustee gave him no information, but continued to occupy the premises, it was held that the trustee was liable for the rents whether or not he had any funds in his hands to reimburse himself.[100] If the trustee elects to assume the lease, he may continue to occupy the premises to the end of the stipulated term,[101] or sell the lease if he can do so to advantage. But he is of course liable for the stipulated rent,[102] including a share of the crops raised on the land if that is among the conditions of the lease.[103] But the mere fact of the bankruptcy of a lessee does not sever the relation of landlord and tenant, and the tenant's obligation to pay rent under his lease is not discharged as to the future if his trustee abandons or does not assume the lease.[104] If the rent was in arrear at the time

[96] In re Thiessen, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 628.

[97] In re Chambers, Calder & Co., 98 Fed. 865, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537; Summerville v. Kelliher, 144 Cal. 155, 77 Pac. 889; Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

[98] In re Frazin, 183 Fed. 28, 105 C. C. A. 320, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 903. While the trustee may at his election decline to continue a lease to the bankrupt for the benefit of the estate, and thus relieve himself and the estate from further liability thereon, a referee has no power to order its cancellation. In re J. Sapinsky & Sons, 206 Fed. 523, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416.

[99] In re Rubel, 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Ells, 98 Fed. 967, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564; In re Scruggs, 205 Fed. 673; Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

[100] In re Metals Extraction & Refining Co. (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 226, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

[101] In re Schwartzman, 167 Fed. 399, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 885.

[102] Matter of Otis, 101 N. Y. 580, 5 N. E. 571; Brooklyn Improvement Co. v. Lewis, 136 App. Div. 861, 122 N. Y. Supp. 111; Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

[103] Summerville v. Kelliher, 144 Cal. 155, 77 Pac. 889.

[104] In re Roth & Appel (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 667, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Scruggs, 205 Fed. 673; Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480; In re Sherwoods, 210 Fed. 754, 127 C. C. A. 304, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 940, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769.

of the bankruptcy of the tenant, but the landlord had not taken the necessary steps to regain possession, he cannot oust the trustee.[105] In such a case, however, the bankruptcy court has full jurisdiction to determine the lessor's rights and remedies; and a forfeiture of the lease for the past default in the payment of rent should not be restrained unless the lessor's just claims can be fully met and his rights protected in the administration of the estate in bankruptcy, nor unless, after satisfying such claims, something may probably be realized for the general creditors.[106]

A trustee in bankruptcy may also, if the landlord will consent, surrender a lease held by the bankrupt, and if this is done, the landlord regains possession of the premises, and all unmatured obligations between the parties depending upon the continuance of the leasehold estate are terminated. But in surrendering the lease, the trustee has no greater right than the tenant would have had if he had attempted to make the surrender before his bankruptcy. In a case in which the foregoing principles were laid down, it was further held that where the trustee had attempted to surrender the leased premises to the landlord, but the latter accepted only upon the express condition that he would care for the building and rent it if possible "for the benefit of the estate," the effect of the transaction, although the trustee thought that he had surrendered the premises and terminated the liability of the estate under the lease, was in reality a refusal to accept and administer the lease as an asset of the estate, and left the obligation of the bankrupt tenant under the lease just where it was before the attempt to surrender.[107]

It is often important for a trustee in bankruptcy to continue in the occupation of the premises leased by the bankrupt, at least for a limited time, until he shall have a reasonable opportunity to dispose of the bankrupt's stock in trade or other property in the leased premises, especially where removing the goods would injure them or involve unreasonable expense, yet without assuming the lease for the whole of the unexpired term. Where this situation arises, it is said that the court of bankruptcy has power to enjoin the landlord from interfering with the trustee's possession of the premises.[108] But of course the landlord is entitled to fair compensation for the use of the premises by the trustee, for as long a

[105] In re Adams, 134 Fed. 142, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23.

[106] In re Elk Brook Coal Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 445, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 283.

[107] Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

[108] In re Schwartzman, 167 Fed. 399, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 885; In re Crawford Plummer Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 76, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92. A trustee in bankruptcy represents other creditors as well as the landlord, and his occupancy of demised premises after the adjudication cannot be construed as adverse to the landlord for the purpose of defeat-time as the latter shall continue in the occupation of them, the amount thereof being chargeable as a part of the expense of administering the estate.[109] And if the trustee and the landlord have not made any agreement as to the amount of such compensation, the latter is entitled to recover on a quantum meruit.[110] But if the trustee occupies only a part of the premises, the rest having been sublet by the bankrupt, the landlord can demand rent only for the portion actually occupied.[111] Where the trustee, with knowledge of the expiration of the lease, holds over for several days, notwithstanding a notice to quit, he becomes a trespasser and is personally liable for the damages sustained.[112]

§ 308. Expenditures.—The statute makes provision for the allowance and payment of "the actual and necessary expenses incurred by officers in the administration of estates."[113] And the general orders provide for the allowance to trustees in bankruptcy of "expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of their duties."[114] Both the amounts and the items of such allowable expenses will naturally vary with the circumstances of each case. But it may be stated as a general rule that expenditures by a trustee, to be allowed by the court, must have been actually made, reasonably necessary, and beneficial to the estate, having regard, on the one hand, to economy in the administration of the estate, and, on the other hand, to the necessity of realizing all that is possible for the creditors.[115] And first, the trustee is allowed to incur

ing his lien for rent. Lontos v. Coppard, 246 Fed. 803, 159 C. C. A. 105, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575.

[109] Bray v. Cobb, 100 Fed. 270, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Luckenbill, 127 Fed. 984, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455; In re Jefferson, 93 Fed. 948, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re Secor, 18 Fed. 319; In re Budd, 239 Fed. 307, 152 C. C. A. 295, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643.

[110] In re Grignard Lithographic Co., 155 Fed. 699, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re Adams Cloak, Suit & Fur House, 199 Fed. 337, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923. The rent reserved in a lease to the bankrupt is, under ordinary conditions, the fair measure of what should be paid by a trustee remaining in possession. In re Crawford Plummer Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 76, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92. But neither the rent reserved in the lease nor the rent which had previously been paid by the bankrupt as a tenant at will is conclusive in determining what rental should be allowed the owners during the occupancy of their premises by a trustee in bankruptcy, although evidence of the rent which had previously been paid, either under the lease or under a verbal letting, may be of great assistance in determining what fairly and equitably ought to be allowed. Gardner v. Gleason, 259 Fed. 755, 170 C. C. A. 555, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644.

[111] In re J. Frank Stanton Co. (D. C.) 162 Fed. 169, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

[112] In re Hunter, 151 Fed. 904, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

[113] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 62.

[114] General Order No. 35, par. 3. After an offer of composition, the expenses of conducting the bankruptcy proceeding should be secured by the bankrupt, and, if necessary, paid out of the amount deposited for the purpose of the composition. In re Miller (D. C.) 243 Fed. 242, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

[115] In re Krause, 155 Fed. 702, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; In re Criblier, 184 Fed. 338, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765; Akers v. Veal, 66 Ga. 302.

all necessary expenses for the care and custody of the bankrupt's property so long as it remains in his hands.[116] Thus, where a part of the estate consists of horses, sheep, or cattle, the trustee must pay the proper charges of an agistor with whom they were pastured,[117] or of an officer who had them in his charge under a foreclosure or attachment, which was dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings.[118] Again, it is clear that the trustee is warranted in charging the estate with necessary office expenses of his administration. Thus, a reasonable allowance will be made to him for expense incurred in stationery and postage,[119] and likewise for the rent of an office and the wages of a book-keeper, in so far as these items are shown to have been necessary for the efficient administration of the trust.[120] So also, the rent of premises temporarily occupied by the trustee, under an unexpired lease to the bankrupt, for the purpose of storing the bankrupt's property or keeping it together until it can be sold, is chargeable as part of the expense of administration.[121] Again, it is the duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to pay all taxes assessed or becoming due on the property of the bankrupt while it remains in his hands for administration, and he will be allowed credit for such payments.[122] And where he finds the bankrupt to be the owner of imported merchandise, he may and should pay the customs duties on it, in order to release it from bond, and so make it available as assets.[123] The estate in bankruptcy must also bear the cost of actions or proceedings properly undertaken by the trustee for the purpose of recovering assets or contesting spurious claims, but he will not be allowed the costs of unfounded and unnecessary litigation.[124] In regard to paying out the money of the estate for any other purpose than that of administration expenses, the trustee must have the warrant or order of the court, and without it he acts at his own peril, as, for example, where

[116] Gardner v. Cook, 7 N. B. R. 346, Fed. Cas. No. 5,226.

[117] In re Mitchell, 8 N. B. R. 47, Fed. Cas. No. 9,657.

[118] Zeiber v. Hill, 1 Sawy. 268, 8 N. B. R. 239, Fed. Cas. No. 18,206; In re Davis, 155 Fed. 671, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

[119] In re Pegues, 3 N. B. R. 80, Fed. Cas. No. 10,907; In re Tulley, 3 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 14,235.

[120] In re Barnes, 18 Fed. 158.

[121] In re Hunter, 151 Fed. 904, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; Louisville Woolen Mills v. Tapp, 239 Fed. 463, 152 C. C. A. 341, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. And see supra, § 307.

[122] Swarts v. Hammer, 120 Fed. 256, 56 C. C. A. 92, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691; In re William F. Fisher & Co., 148 Fed. 907, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; Ex parte Sherwin, 16 N. B. R. 535, Fed. Cas. No. 9,658; C. B. Norton Jewelry Co. v. Hinds, 245 Fed. 341, 157 C. C. A. 533, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320.

[123] J. I. Case Plow Works v. Edwards, 176 Ill. 34, 51 N. E. 618.

[124] In re Josephson, 121 Fed. 146, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608. Under the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, it was held that an assignee in bankruptcy need not, for the protection of the estate, advance money to defend a suit. In re Sweetser (D. C.) 240 Fed. 174.

he pays to a lien creditor his distributive share of the estate without noticing an attorney's lien upon it for services in securing its allowance.[125]

To justify the trustee in paying out money of the estate for services rendered it is necessary that they should have been rendered to him in his capacity of trustee or to the estate. For instance, where a person was employed by a corporation to go to a distant state and there make an investigation of the conduct of its business and affairs in that state, and pending the conclusion of his investigation, the corporation went into bankruptcy, after which he made his report to the directors as instructed by them, it was held that his claim for payment for his services could not be allowed as a claim for services rendered in the administration of the estate in bankruptcy.[126] And it is also necessary to distinguish between expenses incurred for the benefit of the estate in general and those incurred for the benefit of particular creditors. Thus, in the bankruptcy of a stockbroker who had large amounts of stocks and other securities belonging to his various customers, supposedly in his own hands, but which in fact he had pledged without authority to another broker, it became necessary to engage an accountant to unravel the details contained in the books of the pledgee, so as to enable the various claimants to trace their securities; and it was held that the resulting expense should be apportioned among the claimants, excepting, however, those claimants who could trace their stock without the aid of the accountant.[127] In another case, the trustee in bankruptcy and his counsel, after a successful prosecution of the bankrupt and others for concealing property of the estate, made a settlement by which the defendants restored the property, and also paid a sum in cash to be used in paying the cost of the criminal case, including attorneys' fees, and also the expenses of administration of the estate, and the money was so used by the attorneys with the knowledge of the creditors. It was held that the trustee must be held to this arrangement and could not be credited in his accounts with any expenses of administration over and above the amount so paid by the defendants.[128]

§ 309. Employment and Compensation of Attorney for Trustee.— It is not by any means the first duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to employ an attorney. Where the affairs of the estate committed to his

[125] In re Rude, 101 Fed. 805, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319.

[126] In re Union Dredging Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 188, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[127] In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

[128] In re Di Cola, 217 Fed. 743, 133 C. C. A. 437, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

charge are simple, and require no more than the application of intelligence and good business judgment, he is not justified in charging the estate with fees for professional advice or assistance.[129] But on the other hand, where the situation of the estate is such that he really requires legal assistance, the trustee may employ counsel, and their fees for services properly and actually rendered to the trustee, to a reasonable amount, may be allowed as part of the cost of administering the estate.[130] This is the case, for instance, where the trustee believes that certain property belongs to the bankrupt, but cannot recover it without litigation, and needs advice as to the existence of a cause of action and the probable chances of success.[131] And an attorney's bill is evidence of his services and their payment, but must be supported by proof of the occasion, necessity, and value thereof.[132] And it is said that the trustee (at least without authority from the court) cannot retain an attorney to conduct a suit for a contingent fee.[133]

As to the choice of an attorney for the trustee, it is the policy of the bankruptcy law to leave the selection entirely to the trustee himself, subject to the authority of the court to interfere if it appears that the attorney selected is acting under improper influences or for his own advantage.[134] In some jurisdictions it has been the practice to allow the creditors, when assembled in their first meeting, to elect an attorney for the trustee.[135] But this is wrong, and referees should not allow it. The trustee should be left free to choose his own attorney and creditors have no right to dictate to him in the matter.[136] More particularly is this the case where there are disagreements between factions of creditors as to the manner of administering the estate, or matters in controversy between different classes of the creditors. Where this situation exists, the trustee will not be authorized to retain as his counsel one who also represents and continues to act for any of the creditors.[137] And the court may refuse to allow any fee to an attorney rep-

[129] In re Muldaur, 8 Ben. 65, Fed. Cas. No. 9,905; In re New York Mail S. S. Co., 2 N. B. R. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 10,210; In re Noyes, 6 N. B. R. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 10,371.

[130] In re Stotts, 93 Fed. 438, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; In re Davenport, 3 N. B. R. 77, Fed. Cas. No. 3,587; In re Comstock, 3 Sawy. 517, 13 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 3,080.

[131] In re McKenna, 137 Fed. 611, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; In re Waterloo Organ Co., 154 Fed. 657, 83 C. C. A. 481, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752.

[132] In re Staff, 5 Ben. 574, Fed. Cas. No. 13,273.

[133] In re Brinker, 19 N. B. R. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 1,882.

[134] In re Champion Wagon Co., 193 Fed. 1004, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[135] In re Little River Lumber Co., 101 Fed. 558.

[136] In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526; In re Rusch, 105 Fed. 607, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565.

[137] In re Rusch, 105 Fed. 607, 5 Am.

resenting the trustee, when he has already been allowed a fee as attorney for the petitioning creditors, which covers any services rendered to the trustee or the estate.[138] But while the fact that an attorney had acted for the bankrupt may affect the propriety of his employment as counsel for the trustee, yet it does not deprive him of the right to compensation for services actually rendered.[139] Where the trustee is himself an attorney at law, it has been said that the court may, in its discretion, allow him additional compensation for his services rendered in that capacity in the conduct of necessary litigation for the estate.[140] But the weight of authority is the other way. The trustee is not bound to place his professional knowledge and skill at the service of the estate, but if he does, he cannot have compensation therefor, as he cannot, in the character of a trustee, employ himself, in the character of a lawyer.[141]

As to the nature and occasion of the professional services for which fees may be allowed, no compensation can be claimed for services not rendered under the employment of the trustee, though they may have been beneficial to the estate,[142] nor for services rendered prior to the appointment of the trustee,[143] nor for assistance in the performance of the ordinary duties of a trustee, such as making up reports, statements, and accounts,[144] unless, perhaps, where these cover so long a period, or involve transactions of such magnitude and complexity, as to require the services of a professional adviser.[145] Neither should an attorney be allowed a fee for conducting the examination of the bankrupt or a witness, Bankr. Rep. 565; In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526. But see In re Smith (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 369, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; where it is said that the general rule that a receiver may not employ the solicitor of either party to the suit in which he is appointed is applicable to trustees in bankruptcy, but it is only when the trustee is acting adversely to one of the parties that there is any impropriety in his employing the counsel of the other; and that, in general, a trustee or receiver in bankruptcy should not employ an attorney who represents the bankrupt, or an interest in litigation having an interest adverse to that represented by the trustee, but the fact that attorneys represent creditors of the bankrupt, whose interests are not adverse to the estate generally, does not so far disqualify them to act for the trustee as to preclude an allowance for their services to the trustee out of the estate.

[138] In re Carolina Cooperage Co., 96 Fed. 950, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

[139] In re Dimm & Co., 146 Fed. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119.

[140] In re Welge, 1 Fed. 216, 1 McCrary, 46; In re Mitchell, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 264.

[141] In re McKenna, 137 Fed. 611, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; In re Muldaur, 8 Ben. 65, Fed. Cas. No. 9,905; In re Drake, 14 N. B. R. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 4,058; In re Cook, 17 Fed. 328; Matter of Bank of Niagara, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 213.

[142] In re Hamburger, 8 Ben. 189, Fed. Cas. No. 5,974.

[143] In re New York Mail S. S. Co., 2 N. B. R. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 10,210.

[144] In re Averill, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 544.

[145] Lape's Adm'r v. Jones (Ky.) 15 S. W. 658.

from which no benefit to the estate has resulted, where he virtually acted for certain creditors who were his clients.[146] Again, if it is suspected that the bankrupt is concealing property which belongs to his estate, or has fraudulently conveyed it away, or that there have been preferential payments or transfers which may be avoided, it is the duty of the trustee to make due search for such property, and to make all reasonable and necessary preliminary inquiries as regards the facts of the alleged concealment or transfer. If he employs an agent or attorney to do this portion of his work for him, it must be at his own expense. Whatever may be his right to employ legal assistance for the prosecution of proceedings in the courts, he cannot expect to have the assets of the estate applied in payment of professional services rendered merely in preliminary searches or investigations.[147] On the other hand, the trustee may retain counsel not only to prosecute actions which he brings, but also to defend suits brought against him by creditors or claimants,[148] but he cannot charge the estate with attorneys' fees incurred in an unsuccessful attempt to retain particular property as against its equitable owner.[149]

The trustee's charges for the fees of his attorney must be included in his accounts and submitted to the meeting of the creditors,[150] and allowed or disallowed by the court of bankruptcy, which has jurisdiction to determine, in a summary manner, all questions as to the propriety of making the allowance and the amount thereof.[151] And a dismissal of the proceedings, though not opposed by the creditors, will not be ordered until payment of the reasonable and proper fees of the trustee's attorney.[152] As to the amount to be allowed to the trustee's attorney, it will naturally vary with the circumstances of the particular case, the only general rule being that it must not exceed the reasonable value of his services, having regard to the nature of the work performed and also to the amount involved and the circumstances of the estate.[153]

[146] In re Rozinsky, 101 Fed. 229, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 830.

[147] In re Cook, 17 Fed. 328.

[148] Gazin v. Norton, 38 Fed. 200.

[149] Gillespie v. Piles, 178 Fed. 886, 102 C. C. A. 120, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[150] In re Hubbel, 9 N. B. R. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 6,820.

[151] In re Brinker, 19 N. B. R. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 1,882; In re Noyes, 6 N. B. R. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 10,371. An attorney for the trustee in a successful action is not entitled to retain his compensation from the amount recovered, but he must pay the entire recovery into the court of bankruptcy and submit to the court his claim for compensation. In re Stemper (D. C.) 222 Fed. 690, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806.

[152] In re Salaberry, 107 Fed. 95, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 847.

[153] In re Cook, 17 Fed. 328; In re Hoffman, 173 Fed. 234, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; In re McKenna, 137 Fed. 611, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; In re Byerly, 128 Fed. 637, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Bignall, 9 Fed. 385; In re Drake, 14 N. B. R. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 4,058. While it may be the rule in some courts of bankruptcy to allow the trustee's attorney 15 per cent. of the sum recovered in suits involving considerable but not very great sums, this does not apply where the amount of the recovery is very great,

§ 310. Deposit and Disbursement of Funds.—The statutory provision with reference to the safe-keeping of the funds of estates in bankruptcy is as follows: "Courts of bankruptcy shall designate, by order, banking institutions as depositories for the money of bankrupt estates, as convenient as may be to the residences of trustees, and shall require bonds to the United States, subject to their approval, to be given by such banking institutions, and may from time to time as occasion may require, by like order, increase the number of depositories or the amount of any bond or change such depositories." [154] It is further provided that the bonds of the designated depositories shall be filed of record in the office of the clerk of the court, and may be sued on in the name of the United States for the use of any person injured by a breach of their conditions.[155] It is further made the duty of trustees in bankruptcy to "deposit all money received by them in one of the designated depositories." [156] This duty of the trustee is absolute and imperative. His compliance with the directions of the statute cannot be waived even by the consent of all the creditors and other parties in interest.[157] And though he may himself have claims against the estate, as, for disbursements in since the work done is the real thing to be paid for, and the amount recovered is only to be considered as showing the responsibility involved and the success accomplished. In re J. M. Fiske & Co. (D. C.) 209 Fed. 982, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[154] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 61. On this provision, it may be remarked, in the first place, that although the depository is to be a "banking institution," it need not be a national bank, but may be a trust company authorized to do a banking business, or a state bank, or even a private banker. In the next place, they are to be designated by "order." But this does not mean a separate order in each case in bankruptcy, designating a depository for the funds of that particular estate. The court may, by an order made with reference to all future proceedings in bankruptcy before it, designate one or more banks within its district as the authorized depositories for the money of estates in bankruptcy. If they are found to be insufficient in number, with reference to the volume of bankruptcy business in the court or the magnitude of the estates involved, authority is given to "increase" the number. If those originally designated prove to be inconvenient or unsatisfactory for any reason, the court has power to "change such depositories." They are required to be as convenient as may be to the residences of trustees, and this requirement will probably be answered by designating one or more depositories in each city or principal town within the district. Probably the court might in each separate case, either on its own motion or on the application of the trustee for instructions, indicate which of the designated depositories is to be used by him for the deposit of funds. But if this is not done, it is the duty of the trustee to inform himself, by reference to the records of the court and the order of designation, as to the bank or banks in which it will be lawful for him to make his deposits.

[155] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 50h. See Illinois Surety Co. v. United States, 226 Fed. 665, 141 C. C. A. 421, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82.

[156] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a. Where the bonds of the authorized depositories did not extend to savings accounts on which interest was paid, it was held that the trustee could not deposit funds of a bankrupt estate as a savings account. In re Dayton Coal & Iron Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 737, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 657.

[157] In re Michel, 6 Fed. 706.

cash, he cannot simply retain the amount out of funds coming into his hands, but must first deposit such funds as required.[158] Besides exposing himself to animadversion and possible removal from office, a trustee who omits altogether to deposit the money of the estate may be charged with interest on it, at least if the proper depository would have paid interest.[159] As to the manner of making the deposit, the statute makes no explicit provision, but it was probably the intention of the legislators that the funds of each estate in bankruptcy should be separately deposited to the credit of the trustee as such, designating the estate.[160] At any rate this is much the best practice, especially as it is the means of avoiding the complications which arose under the act of 1867, where the funds of all estates in bankruptcy were deposited to the credit of the court and drawn out on the court's check, and it was held that the depository was not bound to keep a separate account for each estate, but checks might be paid out of any funds then to the credit of the court, and if the clerk of the court neglected to deposit all moneys coming into his hands, the debts and dividends of one estate might be paid out of the funds of another.[161]

Further, a trustee in bankruptcy is undoubtedly subject to the general rule applicable to all other classes of trustees, viz., that if a trustee, on receiving money of the trust estate, deposits it in a bank in his own name and to his own credit, thus mingling it with his own funds and making the bank simply his individual debtor for the amount, and the bank subsequently fails, the resulting loss will fall upon the trustee personally.[162] And this rule applies even though the bank selected by the trustee was the very one in which he was ordered or required to make the deposit, if he failed to keep the fund separate and apart from his own money.[163] And though the trust fund may not be lost or impaired by being deposited to the trustee's own credit, still he may be chargeable

158 In re Kyle, 181 Fed. 617.

159 In re Newcomb, 32 Fed. 826; In re Burt, 27 Fed. 548; In re Thorp, 2 Ware, 294, Fed. Cas. No. 14,002.

160 In re Carr, 117 Fed. 572, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520.

161 See State Nat. Bank v. Dodge, 124 U. S. 333, 8 Sup. Ct. 521, 31 L. Ed. 458; State Nat. Bank v. Reilly, 124 Ill. 464, 14 N. E. 657.

162 Salway v. Salway, 2 Russ. & M. 215; Fletcher v. Walker, 3 Madd. Ch. 73; Jenkins v. Walter, 8 Gill. & J. (Md.) 218, 29 Am. Dec. 539; Comm. v. McAlister, 28 Pa. St. 480; Naltner v. Dolan, 108 Ind. 500, 8 N. E. 289; Norris v. Hero, 22 La. Ann. 605; Mason v. Whitthorne, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 252; Robinson v. Ward, 2 Car. & P. 59; Williams v. Williams, 55 Wis. 300, 12 N. W. 465, 13 N. W. 274, 42 Am. Rep. 708; Shaw v. Bauman, 34 Ohio St. 25; Whitehead v. Whitehead, 85 Va. 870, 9 S. E. 10; Matter of Stafford, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 353; School Dist. v. First Nat. Bank, 102 Mass. 174; Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194, 97 Am. Dec. 449; Brackenridge v. Holland, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 377, 20 Am. Dec. 123. And see In re Barnett (D. C.) 214 Fed. 263, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 585.

163 Corya v. Corya, 119 Ind. 593, 22 N. E. 3.

with interest upon it if it appears that he has made any private gain from the course pursued.[164]

Concerning the disbursement of the funds of estates, the rules made by the Supreme Court provide that "no moneys deposited as required by the act shall be drawn from the depository unless by check or warrant, signed by the clerk of the court, or by a trustee, and countersigned by the judge of the court, or by a referee designated for that purpose, or by the clerk or his assistant under an order made by the judge, stating the date, the sum, and the account for which it is drawn." [165] This also is imperative, and the disbursement of money in any other manner is irregular, and may subject both the trustee and the depository to liability on their bonds as well as to attachment for contempt of court.[166] Even the court itself cannot violate this rule, and it has been held error for a court of bankruptcy to withdraw the proceeds of a sale of a bankrupt's property from the designated depository and have the money deposited in another bank, though it was done for the purpose of securing interest on the fund while it was tied up by litigation.[167] For similar reasons, no state court can require a depository to pay a judgment against a trustee in bankruptcy out of the funds deposited by him.[168] But if there is apprehension that the money may be lost through the insolvency of the depository, the court may hear the suggestions of parties in interest with reference to removing it, or may do the same ex officio and without application.[169] But where an officer of a court of bankruptcy deposits money in a designated depository, the same relation of debtor and creditor is created as in the case of an ordinary bank deposit, so that the court no longer has the same jurisdiction over the money as it has over funds in the hands of a receiver or trustee, and hence it cannot summarily order the payment of money out of the depository after the institution has passed into the hands of the superintendent of banks for liquidation.[170] In regard to the duty of the referee in coun-

[164] Hinckley v. Railroad Co., 100 U. S. 153, 25 L. Ed. 591; Livermore v. Wortman, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 341.

[165] General Order No. 29.

[166] In re Cobb, 112 Fed. 655, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202. See Louisville Woolen Mills v. Tapp, 239 Fed. 463, 152 C. C. A. 341, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. It is irregular, but perhaps permissible in some cases, for the trustee to agree with a creditor that securities held by the creditor shall be retained by him and applied as a general payment upon his claim. In re American Paper Co. (D. C.) 255 Fed. 121, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716.

[167] Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349.

[168] Havens v. National City Bank, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 131, 13 N. B. R. 95.

[169] Ex parte Shipley, 4 Md. 493.

[170] In re Bologh, 185 Fed. 825, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726. Possibly the depository may be regarded as an officer of the court, and so liable for misconduct in misappropriating the funds, as in case of contempt, but this cannot be true of each of the employés or servants of the bank. See Southern Development Co. v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co., 27 Fed. 344; In re Western Marine & Fire Ins. Co., 38 Ill. 289.

tersigning checks, it is to be observed that this is a judicial function and not a mere ministerial duty, and the referee will be justified in refusing his signature if he has cause to believe that the amount of the check is too great, or that the proposed payment is fraudulent or for an invalid claim. In such circumstances, he should withhold his signature until he has investigated the matter, and he will not be constrained by mandamus.[171]

§ 311. Responsibility for Negligence or Misconduct.—It is a criminal offense if a trustee in bankruptcy shall knowingly and fraudulently appropriate to his own use, embezzle, spend, or unlawfully transfer any property, or secrete or destroy any document, belonging to the estate in bankruptcy and coming into his charge as trustee.[172] Besides this, he is personally responsible, in an action on his bond, for property converted to his own use,[173] and possibly for the embezzlement or misappropriation of funds by his agents or employés.[174] It is the paramount duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to conserve and advance the interests of the estate, and if he fails to keep himself clear of alliances which tempt to make the estate's interest subordinate to his own, he must account, not only for losses suffered, but for gains made by him; and hence, when a trustee, through the medium of his wife as a dummy, entered into partnership with a salesman and made profits in dealing with the trust estate, he must account therefor.[175] If the trustee knowingly appropriates to the benefit of the estate property which he knows is not the property of the bankrupt, but of a third person, and mingles it or its proceeds with the proceeds of the bankrupt's property, so that they cannot be distinguished, he must pay the claimant the value of such property out of the proceeds of the estate in bankruptcy.[176] And where a trustee in bankruptcy refused to surrender property, which had been in the possession of the bankrupt, to a claimant who was its rightful owner, it was held that both the trustee and the estate were liable for such of the property as subsequently disap-

[171] In re Clark, 9 N. B. R. 67, Fed. Cas. No. 2,810; People v. Wood, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 653.

[172] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 29a.

[173] Griswold v. Watkins, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 114.

[174] See In re Union Bank, 37 N. J. Eq. 420, where it appeared that money of a trust estate was collected and misappropriated by an attorney at law who was employed by the receiver in the business of the trust, and the circumstances were such that it was proper and necessary for the receiver to act by an attorney, and the attorney employed was one in good standing at the time, and there was no evidence of any negligence on the part of the receiver. It was held that he should not be held accountable for the money so lost.

[175] In re Webster Loose Leaf Filing Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 959, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125.

[176] Bramble v. Brett, 230 Fed. 385, 144 C. C. A. 527, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

peared, whether or not this happened through any negligence of the trustee.[177]

In regard to the performance of such duties of his office as are merely ministerial in character, and do not involve the exercise of discretion, he is liable in damages to any person injured by his neglect or omission of them.[178] And as to those duties which require the exercise of judgment and prudence, it is a general rule of law that a trustee is not accountable for an honest mistake, but where his duty is so plain that no man of ordinary intelligence could mistake it, he is responsible if he has that intelligence, and cannot shield himself from responsibility by doubts which he takes no measures either to verify or to dispel.[179] It has been held as to various classes of trustees (and no doubt the rule is applicable to trustees in bankruptcy) that such a fiduciary is bound to exercise such a degree of care and diligence in the administration of his trust as would be expected from a provident owner in regard to his own affairs, and is liable for a loss occasioned by ordinary negligence, but not for acts or omissions which would not be deemed culpable in the management of his own concerns.[180] Thus, executors, guardians, and other classes of trustees are not generally held responsible for loss occasioned to the estate, provided they have exercised such a measure of care and prudence, when valuable animals die, or when property is destroyed or lost by unavoidable accident or casualty, or by theft or burglary.[181] The failure of a trustee to effect insurance on property of the estate may be negligence such as to render him liable for the loss, but the burden of proving negligence is on those who seek to charge him with it.[182] As to intangible assets, it is the duty of the trustee to use all necessary means, by action or otherwise, to realize the debts due to the estate, and if a debt is lost by his neglect of this duty, when the debtor had property sufficient to pay, he is personally responsible for the loss, although he may have acted without any improper motive.[183] The rule is the same where he al-

177 In re Reeves (D. C.) 227 Fed. 711, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 130.

178 Russell v. Phelps, 42 Mich. 377, 4 N. W. 1.

179 Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 129.

180 Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 438, 57 Am. Dec. 534; Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 2,193.

181 Stevens v. Gage, 55 N. H. 175, 20 Am. Rep. 191; State v. Meagher, 44 Mo. 356, 100 Am. Dec. 298; Seawell v. Greenway, 22 Tex. 691, 75 Am. Dec. 794; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 12 R. I. 544, 34 Am. Rep. 716; 1 Perry, Trusts, § 441; 2 Beach, Trusts, § 502. See Crosse v. Smith, 7 East, 246, 258.

182 Estate of Johnson, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 83. See Croft's Ex'rs v. Lyndsey, Freem. Ch. 1. In the latter case (decided A. D. 1676) an administrator was relieved from responsibility for the loss of property of the estate, consisting of certain houses, which were destroyed by the great fire in London. The question of his duty to insure them did not come up, the system of fire insurance not being very well established at that day.

183 Royall's Adm'r v. McKenzie, 25

lows money in which the bankrupt has an interest to be paid out and dissipated by a bank and certain joint owners without objection, when he could have prevented it.[184] At the same time it must be remembered that the trustee is not allowed willfully or recklessly to incur costs and expenses in litigation, when the exercise of ordinary prudence and foresight would have taught him that litigation was unnecessary or would fail, and if he does, he is personally chargeable with such costs, and cannot cast them upon the estate.[185] But the estate of the bankrupt is not liable to third persons injured by the torts, negligence, or misconduct of the trustee.[186]

§ 312. Joint Trustees.—It is a general rule that, "in the administration of a trust, where there is more than one trustee, all must concur, but the entire body can direct one of their number to transact business which it may be inconvenient for the others to perform, and the acts of the one thus authorized are the acts of all and binding on all. The trustee thus acting is to be considered the agent of all the trustees, and not as an individual trustee."[187] But where several trustees leave the entire performance of the trust to one co-trustee, they are all equally responsible for his performance of the duties which they have thus delegated to him.[188] And a majority of the trustees cannot, by any rule or resolution which they may adopt, exclude one of their number and so divest him of his rights as to make his subsequent act of obtaining possession of the trust property a tort.[189] Under former bankruptcy acts it was held that where two of the three trustees of a bankrupt enter into an agreement, in the absence of the third, the contract is not binding upon the absent trustee, unless he had previously given authority to make it, or unless he subsequently recognizes and acknowledges it.[190] But this rule appears to be changed by the provision of the present statute that, when three trustees have been appointed, the concurrence of at least two of them shall be necessary to the validity of their every act concerning the administration of the estate.[191]

§ 313. Accounts and Reports of Trustee.—Trustees in bankruptcy are required by law to "keep regular accounts showing all amounts Ala. 363. And see In re Kuhn Bros., 234 Fed. 277, 148 C. C. A. 179.

184 In re Kane, 161 Fed. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

185 Kingsbury v. Powers, 131 Ill. 182, 22 N. E. 479; In re Preston, 6 N. B. R. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 11,394; In re Brinkman, 6 N. B. R. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 1,883.

186 Adams v. Meyers, 1 Sawy. 306, 8 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 62; King v. Deitz, 12 Pa. St. 156.

187 Insurance Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. 509, 18 L. Ed. 524.

188 Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157.

189 Trustees of First Society v. Stewart, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 553.

190 Blight v. Ashley, Pet. C. C. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 1,541.

191 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47b.

received and from what sources, and all amounts expended and on what accounts," to "report to the courts in writing the condition of the estates and the amounts of money on hand, and such other details as may be required by the courts, within the first month after their appointment and every two months thereafter, unless otherwise ordered by the courts," to "make final reports and file final accounts with the courts fifteen days before the days fixed for the final meetings of the creditors," and to lay before such final meetings "detailed statements of the administration of the estate." [192] Creditors must also have notice of the filing of the final accounts of the trustee and the time when and the place where they will be examined and passed upon.[193] Trustees (being included in the general term "officers," as used in the act) are also required to report statistics of bankruptcy proceedings to the Attorney General within ten days after being requested to do so.[194] It is also provided that "the accounts and papers of trustees shall be open to the inspection of officers and all parties in interest," [195] and if a trustee refuses to permit a reasonable opportunity for the inspection of the accounts, papers, and records relating to the estate, when directed by the court so to do, it is a punishable offense, and he forfeits his office on conviction.[196] And generally, failure of the trustee to inform creditors of their rights and of the condition of the estate, when the suppression of facts is in the interest of one class of creditors, is good cause for the removal of the trustee.[197] Among those who are entitled to demand proper and necessary information from the trustee are the referee,[198] the bankrupt,[199] and any creditor of the bankrupt, even though the latter has not formally proved his claim,[200] or though he has instituted proceedings against the trustee for the reclamation of specific property.[201]

In case of the bankruptcy of a partnership, the trustee is required to keep separate accounts of the partnership property and of the property belonging to the individual partners.[202] But except for this, no particular form or manner of keeping the trustee's accounts is prescribed, and probably any system would be sufficient which clearly showed the receipts and disbursements and from which the condition of the estate could be easily ascertained.[203] But upon the final settlement, a clear

[192] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a.
[193] Idem, § 58a, cl. 6.
[194] Idem, § 54.
[195] Idem, § 49.
[196] Idem, § 29c, cl. 3.
[197] Ex parte Perkins, 5 Biss. 254, 8 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 10,982.
[198] In re Clark, 6 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 2,807.
[199] In re Blaisdell, 5 Ben. 420, 6 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,488.
[200] In re Samuels, 174 Fed. 911, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.
[201] In re Saur, 122 Fed. 101, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353.
[202] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5d.
[203] See Solomons v. Kursheedt, 3 Dam-balance sheet should be presented, and proper vouchers should be filed, and the balance shown by such sheet must correspond with that shown by the statement of the designated depository.[204] In the accounts of trustees generally, inaccuracies arising from inadvertence, oversight, miscalculation, or palpable mistake, may be corrected in proper cases when returned into court.[205] But "any omissions or inaccuracies in the accounts of a trustee, inimical to the interest of his cestui que trust, give rise to presumptions against him which are decisive unless overcome by collateral proofs affirmatively establishing his perfect fairness and equity in the premises." [206]

If the trustee fails to file any account or report at the time when he is required by law to do so, it is cause for his removal from office.[207] And it is always within the power of the court, on the application of a party in interest or on its own motion, to make an order requiring the trustee to file an account, report, or statement which is due from him,[208] which order may be made by the referee,[209] and to compel his obedience by commitment as for contempt.[210]

The final account of the trustee, as above stated, is to be submitted to the final meeting of the creditors, and it is usually exhibited and read to them, though they may dispense with this by vote, where the account has been on file long enough for all to inform themselves of its terms.[211] But it is the referee, and not the creditors, who must pass upon the accounts of the trustee; and it is the duty of the referee to examine and pass upon every item of the account, without regard to whether or not objections to particular items are raised by the creditors.[212] And any person who desires to object to the decision of the referee in allowing or disallowing a particular item, whether it be the trustee himself or a creditor, should promptly file exceptions to the account as passed, and bring the matter before the judge by petition for review of the referee's rulings.[213] But the exceptant must move promptly, or he will be arest (N. Y.) 307; Hutchinson's Appeal, 34 Conn. 300.

[204] In re Carr, 116 Fed. 556, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[205] Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194, 97 Am. Dec. 449.

[206] Hottel v. Mason, 16 Colo. 43, 26 Pac. 335; Landis v. Scott, 32 Pa. St. 495.

[207] General Order No. 17.

[208] Adams v. Woods, 8 Cal. 306; Mabry v. Harrison, 44 Tex. 286.

[209] In re Bellamy, 1 Ben. 390, 1 N. B. R. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 1,266.

[210] O'Conor v. Sunseri (C. C. A.) 184 Fed. 712, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[211] In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 6 Biss. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 9,442.

[212] In re Baginsky, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 360; In re Sawyer, 2 Low. 551, 16 N. B. R. 460, Fed. Cas. No. 12,396. The district judge has jurisdiction to investigate the condition of the trustee's account on petition of a creditor, to ascertain what dividends, if any, are due and payable. In re Sand, Fed. Cas. No. 12,302.

[213] In re Reliance Storage & Warehouse Co., 100 Fed. 619, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49; In re Clark, 9 N. B. R. 67, Fed. Cas. No. 2,810. See In re Byerly, 128 Fed. 637, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186.

deemed to have acquiesced.[214] The decision of the judge on such exceptions is also subject to review by the appellate court, but proceedings for its review must be taken in due season, and if not, the order of the court will become final and cannot be set aside or modified on motion.[215]

§ 314. Discharge of Trustee.—When the estate has been fully administered and is ready to be closed, and the final account of the trustee has been filed, examined, and allowed, he will thereupon be discharged by a written order, which may be made by the referee.[216] But as all orders of the referee are expressly made subject to review by the judge, the latter has power to vacate an order for the discharge of the trustee.[217] Objections to the allowance of the account and the discharge of the trustee may undoubtedly be filed by any creditor who alleges fraud or embezzlement on the part of the trustee or any such mismanagement of the estate as would render him liable to be surcharged with losses or wasting of assets.[218] The court may set aside a discharge of the trustee which has inadvertently found its way into the files of the court, and may order him to proceed.[219] But after receiving his discharge, and unless it is vacated, the trustee has no power to convey property which came into his hands as assets of the estate, and the mere fact that his conveyance recites that it is executed to correct a former deed gives it no additional effect.[220] But it seems that an order made by the referee authorizing a discharged trustee to sell subsequently acquired assets is equivalent to opening the discharge or reappointing the trustee.[221]

§ 315. Closing and Reopening Estate.—The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to "close estates, whenever it appears that they have been fully administered, by approving the final accounts and discharging the trustees, and reopen them whenever it appears they were closed before being fully administered."[222] The referee to whom the case was

The referee has no authority to surcharge the account of a trustee, unless exceptions thereto filed by parties in interest are sustained. In re Kenny (D. C.) 269 Fed. 54, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214.

214 In re Scherr, 138 Fed. 695, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794.

215 In re Hoyt & Mitchell, 127 Fed. 968, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784.

216 Official Form No. 51.

217 Brown v. Persons, 122 Fed. 212, 58 C. C. A. 658, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416.

218 In re Peabody, 16 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 10,866.

219 Maybin v. Raymond, 15 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 9,338.

220 Richards v. Northwestern Coal & Mining Co., 221 Mo. 149, 119 S. W. 953.

221 Geisreiter v. Sevier, 33 Ark. 522.

222 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 8. As to the proceedings on closing an estate, see In re De Ran, 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; In re Levy (D. C.) 261 Fed. 432, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248. The estate of a bankrupt is never technically closed, and a discharge of the trustee is of no effect, where there has been no final meeting of originally referred has jurisdiction of a petition to reopen it and may make the necessary order.[223] And where a bankrupt has concealed property which he should have surrendered, the title thereto does not revest in him upon his discharge in such sense as to deprive the court of jurisdiction upon the reopening of the estate.[224] A petition to reopen can be filed only by one who has an interest and will be benefited thereby.[225] And this does not include a creditor who had not proved his claim within the time allowed,[226] but may include the original trustee in bankruptcy,[227] and the bankrupt himself in a voluntary case.[228] As the statute provides no limitation of time within which closed estates may be reopened, the application must be made within a reasonable time, and the doctrine of laches applies if there has been unreasonable delay.[229] The granting of such an application rests very much in the discretion of the court, and its decision will not be reversed unless an abuse of discretion is shown.[230] Generally the application is made on the ground of the discovery of unadministered assets and if the sum is considerable, it will be proper to reopen the case,[231] but not if the assets in question are so inconsiderable as not to justify the trouble and expense.[232] It appears that the estate may properly be reopened on the petition of a purchaser of real estate from the trustee, where it appears that the creditors and settlement of the trustee's accounts. Levy v. Schorr (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 207, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324. As to reopening an estate, it is said that the proceedings for that purpose need not be formal, and a petition is sufficient to support an order for the reopening of the estate if it contains sufficient information to satisfy the court of the jurisdictional fact that the estate was closed before being fully administered. In re Carlucci Stone Co. (D. C.) 269 Fed. 795, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

223 Bilafsky v. Abraham, 183 Mass. 401, 67 N. E. 318.

224 Fowler v. Jenks, 90 Minn. 74, 95 N. W. 887, 96 N. W. 914.

225 In re Meyer, 181 Fed. 904, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44; In re Graff, 250 Fed. 997, 163 C. C. A. 247, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

226 In re Paine, 127 Fed. 246, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351.

227 In re Paine, 127 Fed. 246, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351.

228 In re Shaffer, 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728; In re Graff, 255 Fed. 241, 166 C. C. A. 421, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741. The court has jurisdiction to grant an application by the bankrupt to reopen the proceedings as to property not passing through the bankruptcy court, in order to remove any question as to title. In re Graff (D. C.) 242 Fed. 577, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205.

229 Traub v. Marshall Field & Co., 182 Fed. 622, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 410; In re Paine, 127 Fed. 246, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; Clark v. Pidcock, 129 Fed. 745, 64 C. C. A. 273, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309; Duncan v. Watson, 198 Ala. 180, 73 South. 448.

230 In re Paine, 127 Fed. 246, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Goldman, 129 Fed. 212, 63 C. C. A. 370, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; In re Graff, 250 Fed. 997, 163 C. C. A. 247, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

231 In re Barton's Estate, 144 Fed. 540, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Levy (D. C.) 259 Fed. 316, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590. It is proper to reopen the estate on proof that a sale of the bankrupt's assets was effected for a grossly inadequate price because of the concealment of assets and the suppression of material facts. In re Leigh (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 678, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

232 In re O'Connell, 137 Fed. 838, 70

sale was not legally perfected.[233] And it has been held that the proceeding might be reopened to allow the bankrupt to amend his schedules so as to include a debt which, through misapprehension, was listed in the name of the wrong party.[234] As the reopening of a closed bankruptcy estate is, in general, only for the purposes of distribution, it in no way affects the bankrupt and notice to him of the application is not necessary, and if a restraining order is made in connection with the order for opening the estate, the bankrupt cannot have it vacated merely because it was made without notice to him.[235]

When the case is reopened, this does not have the effect of re-instating the trustee in his office, or of revoking his discharge. On the contrary, the first step to be taken is to call a meeting of the creditors, and they are then to elect a new trustee.[236] As this is a case of "vacancy" in the office of trustee, it is not proper for the referee to make an appointment to that office until after the creditors have had an opportunity to elect and have either neglected to do so or failed to reach an agreement. But if the referee proceeds at once to appoint a trustee, the title of the latter will not be considered invalid in any collateral proceeding.[237] Since the statute expressly limits the time for proving claims to one year after the adjudication, the question has been raised whether the reopening of the estate lifts the bar of the statute or not. In one instance, where no creditors took the trouble to prove their claims because the bankrupt scheduled no assets, and he was discharged and the estate closed, but afterwards property was discovered and the estate reopened, it was held that the court might permit the filing of claims for a year from the date of the order for reopening the case, although the year after the adjudication had expired.[238] It should also be observed

C. C. A. 336, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Newton, 107 Fed. 429, 46 C. C. A. 399, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

[233] In re Minners (D. C.) 253 Fed. 300, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

[234] In re Adams (D. C.) 242 Fed. 335, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22. But see In re Sayer (D. C.) 210 Fed. 397, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90, holding that, where it does not appear that an estate in bankruptcy was not fully administered when closed, the court has no jurisdiction to open the same that the bankrupt may include certain omitted creditors in his schedules.

[235] In re Levy (D. C.) 259 Fed. 314, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276.

[236] In re Newton, 107 Fed. 429, 46 C. C. A. 399, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; In re Paine (D. C.) 127 Fed. 246, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Minners (D. C.) 253 Fed. 300, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; In re Rochester Sanitarium & Baths Co., 222 Fed. 22, 137 C. C. A. 560, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355. After the estate is closed and there is no longer a trustee, the power of the court in respect to the discharged trustee is exhausted, and an order directing the former trustee to execute an instrument validating title of the bankrupt to property alleged to be newly discovered is invalid. In re Graff, 250 Fed. 997, 163 C. C. A. 247, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

[237] Fowler v. Jenks, 90 Minn. 74, 95 N. W. 887, 96 N. W. 914.

[238] In re Pierson (D. C.) 174 Fed. 160, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58. But see contra, that the order reopening the estate does not of itself authorize the bringing of a suit to recover the assets claimed to have been newly discovered in the hands of a third person, but simply leaves the matter in the hands of the referee to cause the election of a trustee and to authorize such suit, or not, as he shall deem proper under the circumstances shown.[239]

[239] In re Meyer (D. C.) 181 Fed. 904, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44.

[239] In re Ryburn (D. C.) 145 Fed. 662, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514.

CHAPTER XIX

PROPERTY VESTING IN TRUSTEE

§ 316. Nature and Origin of Trustee's Title.—The bankruptcy act of 1867 provided for the transfer of the bankrupt's property and assets to his assignee in bankruptcy by means of an instrument in the nature of a deed or assignment, to be executed by the judge of the court, or, in some cases, by the register in bankruptcy.[1] But the present statute provides that the trustee shall be vested "by operation of law" with title to the bankrupt's property, and no assignment or conveyance to him is required, except as to property in foreign countries.[2] The result of an adjudication in bankruptcy, therefore, in divesting the title of the bankrupt and transferring it to the trustee, is not a sale,[3] although it is within the terms of a policy of insurance rendering the contract void in case of an "alienation" or "transfer" of the property covered, or a "change in the title or possession," without the consent of the insurer.[4] Hence the trustee in bankruptcy does not occupy the technical position of an innocent purchaser for value without notice.[5] On the contrary, it has always been the rule in bankruptcy, and still continues to be the rule, with an exception to be presently noted, that trustees in bankruptcy, except in the case of liens or transfers which are fraudulent or void under the statute, take only such rights and interests as the bankrupt himself had and could himself claim and assert at the time of his bankruptcy, and they take the property subject to and affected with all those claims, liens, and equities which were valid against it in the hands of the bankrupt, and which would affect and bind him if he were asserting those rights and interests.[6] Thus the law stood until 1910, when Congress added an amendment to the bankruptcy act providing that trustees in bankruptcy, "as to all property in the custody or coming into the

[1] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5044.

[2] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 7, 70. See In re F. W. Hall & Sons (D. C.) 208 Fed. 578, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434; Goldsmith v. Winner Shingle Co., 96 Wash. 516, 165 Pac. 392; Gee v. Parks (Tex. Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 767. In Hough v. City of North Adams, 196 Mass. 290, 82 N. E. 46, it was held that, upon an adjudication in bankruptcy against the owner of land, the situation as to the title to the land is the same as it would have been under a deed from the bankrupt to his trustee.

[3] In re Bozeman, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 479.

[4] Perry v. Lorillard Fire Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 214, 19 Am. Rep. 272; Adams v. Rockingham Ins. Co., 29 Me. 292; Starkweather v. Cleveland Ins. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 13,309.

[5] In re Seward Dredging Co., 242 Fed. 225, 155 C. C. A. 65, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Boise v. Talcott (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 61, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Woolridge v. Williams, 5 Alaska, 149; In re Scruggs, 205 Fed. 673, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Charles Town Light & Power Co., 199 Fed. 846, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721; In re Interstate Paving Co., 197 Fed. 371, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; First Nat. Bank v. Bacon, 113 App. Div. 612, 98 N. Y. Supp. 717; Ellison v. Ganiard, 167 Ind. 471, 79 N. E. 450; Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Schreiber, 29 Wash. 94, 69 Pac. 648; Chace v. Chapin, 130 Mass. 128; F. A. Ames Co. v. Slocomb Mercantile Co., 166 Ala. 99, 51 South. 994; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. National Storage Co., 260 Ill. 485, 103 N. E. 227; Custard v. McNary, 85 W. Va. 516, 102 S. E. 216.

[6] Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 216 U. S. 134, 30 Sup. Ct. 368, 54 L. Ed. 418, custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon, and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied." [7] This provision gives the trustee a superior position with reference to some kinds of transactions (notably conditional sales) which would have been valid as against the bankrupt himself, though voidable as to lien creditors. And so far, it must be considered as modifying the general rule above stated, and as rendering inapplicable the decisions which supported it.[8] But otherwise, the rule remains in force. Thus, the trustee cannot hold real estate against a third person who claims under an earlier and unrecorded conveyance made to him by the bankrupt.[9] And where he brings his bill to set aside a sale of the bankrupt's realty, made under a deed of trust, and for leave to redeem, he has no greater rights than the bankrupt himself would have under the circumstances, and any defense that would be available against Bank, 174 Ill. App. 339; Mankins v. Forward Movement Syndicate, 28 Cal. App. 285, 152 Pac. 313; Williams v. Noyes & Nutter Mfg. Co., 112 Me. 408, 92 Atl. 482, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1224; Brown v. Brown, 172 Ky. 754, 189 S. W. 921; Lyttle v. National Surety Co., 43 App. D. C. 136.

23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 26 Sup. Ct. 481, 50 L. Ed. 782, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Hewit v. Berlin Machine Works, 194 U. S. 296, 24 Sup. Ct. 290, 48 L. Ed. 986; Bacon v. International Bank, 131 U. S. ccxvi, 26 L. Ed. 439; Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst., 95 U. S. 764, 24 L. Ed. 589; In re Interstate Paving Co., 197 Fed. 371, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; In re E. M. Newton & Co., 153 Fed. 841, 83 C. C. A. 23, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; In re Walsh Bros., 195 Fed. 576, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; Walter A. Wood Co. v. Eubanks, 169 Fed. 929, 95 C. C. A. 273, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; In re Blake, 150 Fed. 279, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668; In re Kellogg, 118 Fed. 1017, 56 C. C. A. 383; Duplan Silk Co. v. Spencer, 115 Fed. 689, 53 C. C. A. 321, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co., 102 Fed. 755, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441; Webber v. Clark, 136 Ill. 256, 26 N. E. 360, 32 N. E. 748; Union Brewing Co. v. Interstate Bank & Trust Co., 240 Ill. 454, 88 N. E. 997; Hardy v. Weyer, 42 Ind. App. 343, 85 N. E. 731; Wick v. Hickey (Iowa) 103 N. W. 469; Exchange & Deposit Bank v. Stone, 80 Ky. 109; Linthicum v. Fenley, 74 Ky. (11 Bush) 131; Chambers v. Northern Bank of Kentucky, 5 Ky. Law Rep. 123; Clarke v. Rosenda, 5 Rob. (La.) 27; Blank v. Blank, 124 La. 832, 50 South. 745; Kenney v. Ingalls, 126 Mass. 488; Upton v. National Bank of South Reading, 120 Mass. 153; Dugan v. Nichols, 125 Mass. 43; Chace v. Chapin, 130 Mass. 128; Lockwood v. Noble, 113 Mich. 418, 71 N. W. 856; Davis v. Lumpkin, 57 Miss. 506; Abbey v. Commercial Bank of New Orleans, 34 Miss. 571, 69 Am. Dec. 401; South End Imp. Co. v. Harden (N. J. Eq.) 52 Atl. 1127; Hunt v. Osborn, 180 N. Y. 508, 72 N. E. 1143; First Nat. Bank v. Zartman, 189 N. Y. 553, 82 N. E. 1126; Van Heusen v. Van Heusen Charles Co., 74 Misc. Rep. 292, 131 N. Y. Supp. 401; Crane Co. v. Smythe, 94 App. Div. 53, 87 N. Y. Supp. 917; White v. O'Brien, 31 Misc. Rep. 770, 64 N. Y. Supp. 387; Woodin v. Frazee, 38 N. Y. Super. Ct. 190; Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 145 N. C. 320, 59 S. E. 154, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 935; Walker v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 142 S. W. 31; Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; Beall v. Walker, 26 W. Va. 741; Ferguson v. Bauernfeind, 140 Wis. 42, 121 N. W. 647; Claridge v. Evans, 137 Wis. 218, 118 N. W. 198, 803, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 144; In re Scruggs, 205 Fed. 673, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Thompson, 205 Fed. 556, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; In re Tietje (D. C.) 263 Fed. 917; In re Hawley Down-Draft Furnace Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 451, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62; Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Roseboom (D. C.) 253 Fed. 136, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re Moose River Lumber Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 409, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; In re East Stroudsburg Supply & Const. Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 356, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Lawson (D. C.) 237 Fed. 877, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Reading Hat Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 786, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 884; In re Place (D. C.) 224 Fed. 778, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; Galbraith v. First Nat. Bank, 221 Fed. 386, 137 C. C. A. 194, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; Church E. Gates & Co. v. National Fair & Exposition Ass'n, 172 App. Div. 581, 158 N. Y. Supp. 1070; Coggan v. Ward, 215 Mass. 13, 102 N. E. 336; Walkof v. Fox, 90 Misc. Rep. 338, 153 N. Y. Supp. 27; Southern Trust Co. v. Wilkins, 101 S. C. 457, 86 S. E. 26; Davis v. Billings, 254 Pa. 574, 99 Atl. 163; O'Brien v. Doolittle, 91 Conn. 354, 99 Atl. 1055; Abele v. S. A. Meagher Co., 227 Mass. 427, 116 N. E. 805; Goodwin v. Barre Sav. Bank & Trust Co., 91 Vt. 228, 100 Atl. 34; American Bottle Co. v. Finney, 203 Ala. 92, 82 South. 106; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat.

[7] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a. See In re Terrell, 246 Fed. 743, 159 C. C. A. 45, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713; Brown v. Crawford (D. C.) 252 Fed. 248, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263; In re Chotiner (D. C.) 216 Fed. 916; Furst-Kerber Cut Stone Co. v. Wells, 116 Va. 95, 81 S. E. 22. The rights given to the trustee in bankruptcy by this amendatory act, and which may, according to circumstances, be those of "a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings," or those of "a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied," are not defined by the act, as they are essentially matters of state law, and their scope and effect must therefore be determined by the law of the local jurisdiction. In re Floyd-Scott Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 987, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[8] In re Gehris-Herbine Co., 188 Fed. 502, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; In re Butterwick, 131 Fed. 371, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; Thomas v. Taggart, 209 U. S. 385, 28 Sup. Ct. 519, 52 L. Ed. 845, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710; Crawford v. Mandell, 173 Mich. 109, 138 N. W. 705. As to property in the custody of the court, the trustee is in the position of a creditor who has reduced his claim to judgment. In re Superior Drop Forge & Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 813, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455. As against the rights of a chattel mortgagee under an unfiled mortgage, the trustee in bankruptcy stands in the position of an attaching creditor. Lake View State Bank v. Jones, 242 Fed. 821, 155 C. C. A. 409, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148. The trustee's right to property in the possession of the bankrupt is superior to that of a mortgagee holding under an unrecorded mortgage which would be good as between the bankrupt and the mortgagee. In re Social Circle Cotton Mills (D. C.) 213 Fed. 994, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567. But this amendment was intended to preserve but not to enlarge the rights of creditors; and where under the state law a chattel mortgage, though unrecorded, is valid except as against subsequent creditors without notice and prior creditors who have secured liens by attachment or levy, a trustee cannot hold property as against the holder of an unrecorded mortgage for the benefit of prior simple contract creditors. In re Rutland-Perry Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 200, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383. And see Martin v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 228 Fed. 651, 143 C. C. A. 173, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25. In bankruptcy proceedings against a firm of cotton factors, the trustee represents unsecured creditors with the same effect as if they had, on the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, levied executions upon the cotton stored by the firm in a warehouse. Interstate Banking & Trust Co. v. Brown, 235 Fed. 32, 148 C. C. A. 526, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 771.

[9] Goss v. Coffin, 66 Me. 432, 22 Am. Rep. 585.

the bankrupt may be urged against the trustee.[10] So where the bankrupt had borrowed money to pay for certain real estate, and it was orally agreed that, on payment of a note given for the loan, the title should be conveyed to him, he took merely an equitable title subject to a lien in favor of the holder of the note, and his trustee in bankruptcy occupies no more advantageous position.[11] So where a purchaser of personal property under a conditional sale sold the property to the bankrupt, the latter's trustee will acquire no better title than the bankrupt had.[12] Estoppels effective against the bankrupt may also bind his trustee, as, for example, with reference to ostensible membership in a firm, when the question concerns the rights of creditors who relied thereon,[13] or with reference to the merger of a lien in the legal title to the property.[14] So, where none of the creditors of a bankrupt extended credit to him in reliance on his ownership of property which, while standing in his name, was in fact held by him in trust for others, his trustee takes no greater interest or right therein than he himself had, and if the trust was enforceable in equity against him, it is equally so against his trustee.[15] And in fact, as a court of bankruptcy is a court of equity, trustees in bankruptcy will sometimes be ordered to do full justice even in cases where the circumstances give rise to no legal right, nor even, perhaps, to a right which could be enforced in a court of equity as against an ordinary litigant.[16] To take another illustration, where the business of the bankrupt is the retailing of a patented article under a license from the patentee, which license requires him to sell only at a fixed price and gives him the privilege of returning any of the articles not sold, the trustee in bankruptcy is also bound by the terms of the license, and, as to the stock on hand when he takes possession, he must either sell the articles at the fixed price or return them.[17]

As to the nature of the trustee's title, it is entirely peculiar and anomalous. It is sometimes said to resemble that of an executor.[18] But in [10] Jenkins v. Pierce, 98 Ill. 646. Where title to land, subject only to a possible defeasance, was vested by deed in the purchaser at a tax sale, the trustee of the bankrupt owner of the property, not qualifying until the legal title was absolute in the purchaser, took no rights not possessed by the bankrupt. Beckham v. Lindsey, 22 Ga. App. 174, 95 S. E. 745.

[11] Beer v. Wisner, 74 Neb. 437, 104 N. W. 757.

[12] Crocker-Wheeler Co. v. Genesee Recreation Co., 140 App. Div. 726, 125 N. Y. Supp. 721.

[13] Kelly v. Scott, 49 N. Y. 595.

[14] In re Standard Laundry Co., 116 Fed. 476, 53 C. C. A. 644, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; Palmer v. Welch, 171 Mo. App. 580, 154 S. W. 433.

[15] In re Coffin, 152 Fed. 381, 81 C. C. A. 507, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127.

[16] In re Chase, 124 Fed. 753, 59 C. C. A. 629, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

[17] In re S. Spitzel & Co., 168 Fed. 156, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

[18] Dillard v. Collins, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 343. In another case it is said that assignees in bankruptcy do not take the whole legal title in the bankrupt's property as heirs and executors do. Nothing vests in them, even at law, but such truth it is not precisely similar to the title of an executor, an administrator, a guardian or conservator, a receiver, or an ordinary trustee. It is a title cast upon him by operation of law, at least co-extensive with the title of the bankrupt and in some respects wider or stronger, and not held for his own benefit or advantage, but in trust for those entitled to share in the distribution of the estate,[19] the only object of its creation being to enable the trustee to collect and distribute the assets among the creditors.[20] But the title of the trustee is exclusive, and he is the only person who can sue for the recovery of assets.[21] He may maintain replevin for the recovery of specific personal property, or trover for damages for its conversion.[22] But no creditor is permitted to pursue, and subject to the payment of his demands, assets of the bankrupt which existed at the time of the adjudication and so passed to the trustee, unless, indeed, the latter has distinctly abandoned them.[23] And it is also to be noticed that, since the trustee's title vests "by operation of law," he is not in the position of one holding under a power or authority from the bankrupt, which would be revocable by the latter's death. The statute itself provides that the death or insanity of the bankrupt shall not abate the proceedings,[24] and it follows also that the trustee could not be required in any circumstances to surrender the estate to an executor, administrator, committee, or guardian. Also his title is not in any way affected by the discharge of the bankrupt or by his failure to obtain a discharge.[25] But the trustee has no control over the interests of others in the property, except as expressly given by law to protect the bankrupt's interests for the benefit of the creditors.[26] estate as the bankrupt had a beneficial as well as a legal interest in. Ontario Bank v. Mumford, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 596. Proceedings in bankruptcy may be regarded as an equitable attachment, and the equitable interest vested in the trustee in bankruptcy for the benefit of all the creditors. In re Hinds, 3 N. B. R. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 6,516.

[19] Brown v. Frenken, 87 Ark. 160, 112 S. W. 207; Aiken v. Edrington, 15 N. B. R. 271, Fed. Cas. No. 111. The trustee is the agent of the court to liquidate the assets of the bankrupt, and is not the representative of the bankrupt but of the creditors, and holds the legal title to property as their representative. Barber v. Wiemer, 183 Iowa, 72, 165 N. W. 440.

[20] Bracklee Co. v. O'Connor, 67 Misc. Rep. 599, 122 N. Y. Supp. 710.

[21] Schnurman's Ex'x v. Biddle & Co., 109 Va. 702, 64 S. E. 977.

[22] Haughey v. Albin, 2 Bond, 244, 2 N. B. R. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 6,222; Foster v. Hackley, 2 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 4,971; McLeish v. Tylee, 4 Strobh. (C. C.) 287; Collier v. Hopper, 133 Ark. 599, 202 S. W. 687.

[23] Starr v. Whitcomb, 150 Mich. 491, 114 N. W. 345; Jenkins v. Pilcher, 160 Mich. 349, 125 N. W. 355, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 423. But where, before the bankruptcy proceedings, a novation has been effected, the creditor, and not the trustee, is entitled to demand and receive payment from the bankrupt's debtor. In re Haynes Son & Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 269.

[24] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 8.

[25] In re Cheney, 5 Law Rep. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 2,636.

[26] Goddard v. Weaver, 1 Woods, 257, 6 N. B. R. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 5,495.

To a certain extent an adjudication in bankruptcy is notice to all parties in interest.[27] But provision has also been made by law both for official evidence of the trustee's title and for imparting notice by record. One section of the statute declares that "a certified copy of the order approving the bond of a trustee shall constitute conclusive evidence of the vesting in him of the title to the property of the bankrupt, and, if recorded, shall impart the same notice that a deed from the bankrupt to the trustee if recorded would have imparted had not bankruptcy proceedings intervened."[28] And another section provides that "the trustee shall, within thirty days after the adjudication, file a certified copy of the decree of adjudication in the office where conveyances of real estate are recorded in every county where the bankrupt owns real estate not exempt from execution."[29] But the title of a trustee in bankruptcy to a patent is not of the kind that must be recorded; and the transfer of the patent to the trustee by the adjudication in bankruptcy, though not recorded in the patent office, will prevail over a recorded assignment of the patent from the administrator of the bankrupt made after the bankruptcy.[30] It should also be remarked that the title of the trustee cannot be divested except by the order of the court which has control of the administration of the estate, and until this has been done, all other courts must respect the trustee's title, at least until he has been discharged.[31]

§ 317. Date of Accrual of Trustee's Title.—Under the explicit provision of the statute, the title of the trustee in bankruptcy takes effect, by relation, from the date of the adjudication of bankruptcy.[32] The adjudication divests the title of the bankrupt, but there may be a considerable interval of time before the appointment and qualification of a trus-

[27] Where a trustee in bankruptcy has taken possession, the property is in the custody of the law, and cannot be removed therefrom by any private person or by any process out of any court, except one having a supervisory control or superior jurisdiction in the premises. Williams v. Noyes & Nutter Mfg. Co., 112 Me. 408, 92 Atl. 482, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1224. And see Archenhold Co. v. Schaefer (Tex. Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 139. But the rule that the filing of a petition in bankruptcy is a caveat and an attachment does not apply to those having liens on, or title to, the property of the bankrupt. Tube City Min. & Mill. Co. v. Otterson, 16 Ariz. 305, 146 Pac. 203, L. R. A. 1916E, 303.

[28] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21e.

[29] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47c, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[30] Prime v. Brandon Mfg. Co., 16 Blatchf. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 11,421.

[31] May v. New Orleans & C. R. Co., 44 La. Ann. 444, 10 South. 769.

[32] In re Butterwick, 131 Fed. 371, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; In re Fulton, 153 Fed. 664, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; Currie v. Look, 14 N. D. 482, 106 N. W. 131; Bennett v. Ætna Ins. Co., 201 Mass. 554, 88 N. E. 335, 131 Am. St. Rep. 414; Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248, 94 Pac. 252; In re Arctic Stores (D. C.) 258 Fed. 688, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543; In re P. J. Sullivan Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 139, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; Williams v. Noyes & Nutter Mfg. Co., 112 Me. 408, 92 Atl. 482, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1224; Barber v. Wiemer, 183 Iowa, 72, 165 N. W. 440.

tee. Hence, if it were not for this provision of the statute, the title would remain, during such interval, in nubibus. "The correct view of this matter is that the condition of a bankrupt's property, after the adjudication and before the appointment of a trustee, is analogous to the condition of the personal property of a decedent before the appointment of an executor or administrator. Bankruptcy, like death, divests the title of the owner. It becomes thereupon in custodia legis. Upon the appointment of a trustee, he takes title by relation back as of the date of the adjudication." [33] The provision requiring the trustee to file a certified copy of the adjudication in every county where the bankrupt holds real estate, does not affect this rule, nor is such filing necessary to complete the title of the trustee to given real estate.[34] Again, the trustee may maintain trover for property converted before his appointment, if the conversion occurred after the adjudication.[35]

But it has been made a question whether the title of the trustee does not relate back to the commencement of the proceeding, that is, the filing of the petition. Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, it was held that it does.[36] And there are numerous expressions in the cases decided under the present statute which apparently sanction the same view.[37] But it is disapproved by the Supreme Court, which has pointed out that the language of the act of 1898 is explicit and is essentially different from that [33] In re Frazin & Oppenheim, 174 Fed. 713, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289. And see In re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78. Under the act of 1867, the property of the bankrupt remained in him until an assignee had qualified and had received an assignment of the property from the judge or register. Leathem & Smith Lumber Co. v. Nalty, 109 La. 325, 33 South. 354. And see In re Banks, 207 Fed. 662, holding that, after the filing of the petition and prior to the adjudication, the bankrupt holds the title in trust for his creditors.

[34] Hull v. Burr, 61 Fla. 625, 55 South. 852.

[35] Mitchell v. McKibin, 8 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 9,666.

[36] Conner v. Long, 104 U. S. 228, 26 L. Ed. 723; Morris v. First Nat. Bank, 68 N. Y. 362; Southard v. Wilson, 29 Me. 56; Phillips v. Helmbold, 26 N. J. Eq. 202.

[37] In re Judson, 192 Fed. 834, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; Glidden v. Massachusetts Hospital Life Ins. Co., 187 Mass. 538, 73 N. E. 538; St. Louis County v. Watson, 3 Mo. App. 599; Cornelius v. Boling, 18 Okl. 469, 90 Pac. 874; Miller v. Barto, 247 Ill. 104, 93 N. E. 140; Sargeant v. Blake, 160 Fed. 57, 87 C. C. A. 213, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; Potter v. Martin, 122 Mich. 542, 81 N. W. 424; Toof v. City Nat. Bank, 206 Fed. 250, 124 C. C. A. 118; In re Continental Coal Corp. 238 Fed. 113, 151 C. C. A. 189, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; Tripplehorn v. Cambron, 250 Fed. 605, 162 C. C. A. 621, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; In re Wellmade Gas Mantle Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 502, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354. In re Federal Contracting Co., 212 Fed. 688, 129 C. C. A. 224, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; Kopplin v. Ludwig (Tex. Civ. App.) 170 S. W. 105; Petty v. Wilkins, 129 Ark. 364, 196 S. W. 453; Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Tex. Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 791; Philoon v. Babbitt, 119 Me. 172, 109 Atl. 817. A trustee in bankruptcy was held entitled to recover from the payee of the bankrupt's check the amount he had collected on it, where, although the check was given in good faith and was deposited for collection before the filing of the petition in voluntary bankruptcy, it was not paid until afterwards. In re of the earlier statute.[38] It is true, the evident intention of the statute is that all the property which the bankrupt owned at the time of the filing of the petition shall be drawn into the administration and pass to the trustee. But this intention is effected by other provisions of the act, not by that which relates to the title of the trustee. After the petition is filed, and before any adjudication has been made, the property may be taken and placed in the charge of a receiver, if there is danger of its being lost or dissipated. Again, it is said that the filing of the petition operates as notice to all the world and as a caveat, warning all persons not to interfere with the property, or an injunction having the same effect, or as an attachment sequestrating the property pending the further proceedings.[39] Moreover, an injunction may be obtained preventing the bankrupt from alienating any of his property in the interval, or forbidding third persons from removing or wasting it. But the title of the trustee takes effect only as of the date of the adjudication and embraces the estate as it then was. No difficulty need be experienced in reconciling this doctrine with the provision of the statute that the trustee shall be vested with title to property which, prior to the petition, the bankrupt could have transferred. For this refers merely to the class of property which passes to the trustee.[40] In other words, it means property which the bankrupt could have transferred if a petition in bankruptcy had not been filed against him. Hence, for example, the trustee cannot maintain trover to recover the value of mortgaged personal property of which the mortgagee had taken possession and appropriated the same to his own use before the adjudication in bankruptcy.[41] And so, where a chose in action has been assigned by a bankrupt before the adjudication, an action thereon must be brought in the name of the bankrupt, and not in that of his trustee.[42] On the other hand, this

Howe (D. C.) 235 Fed. 908, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[38] Hiscock v. Varick Bank of New York, 206 U. S. 28, 27 Sup. Ct. 681, 51 L. Ed. 945, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Rose (D. C.) 206 Fed. 991, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 791; Christopherson v. Harrington, 118 Minn. 42, 136 N. W. 289, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 276.

[39] State Bank of Chicago v. Cox, 143 Fed. 91, 74 C. C. A. 285, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32; Loeffler v. Wright, 13 Cal. App. 224, 109 Pac. 269; Wright-Dalton-Bell-Anchor Store Co. v. Sanders, 142 Mo. App. 50, 125 S. W. 517; In re Flatland (C. C. A.) 196 Fed. 310, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476. Where after the filing of the petition but before the adjudication, an attorney and the bankrupt diverted cash assets of the bankrupt, it was held that the trustee thereafter appointed might recover the money from the attorney, notwithstanding the declaration of the Bankruptcy Act that his title is of the date of adjudication. Arnold v. Horrigan, 238 Fed. 39, 151 C. C. A. 115, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

[40] Gray v. Chase, 184 Mass. 444, 68 N. E. 676. While the title of a trustee in bankruptcy is only that which exists at the date of the adjudication, of necessity such title relates back to the time of the filing of the petition. Neuberger v. Felis, 203 Ala. 142, 82 South. 172.

[41] Jones v. Miller, 17 N. B. R. 316, Fed. Cas. No. 7,482.

[42] Hynson v. Burton, 5 Ark. 492.

provision of the statute serves to define clearly the dividing line between property which is assets of the estate in bankruptcy and after-acquired property of the bankrupt, which is his own and is not drawn into the administration. The trustee takes title to such property only as belonged to the bankrupt at the date of the adjudication and which the latter owned in such sense that he could have transferred title to it if bankruptcy had not intervened. Whatever vests in the bankrupt after that date is free from the claims of the trustee and the creditors.[43] But to have this character, the property must be a new acquisition, and not merely the fruits of something previously held. Thus, rents accruing after the adjudication, on mortgaged property of the bankrupt which comes into the possession of the trustee, and before the mortgagee has taken such action as to entitle him to the possession of the property, belong to the estate.[44] So where an item of the bankrupt's assets consists in a judgment in his favor, rendered before the adjudication in bankruptcy, but which was inadvertently entered for an amount less than the verdict, and it is amended by order of the court, after the adjudication, so as to cover the full amount, the trustee in bankruptcy may claim the full amount of the judgment as finally ascertained, not merely the sum for which it was entered originally.[45] Finally, the fact that the bankrupt obtains his discharge does not bar the right of the trustee to recover property subsequently discovered.[46]

But while the foregoing states the rule as to title to the bankrupt's property vesting in the trustee, it is otherwise as to the right or status of the latter as a creditor holding a lien or an unsatisfied judgment creditor, under the amendment of 1910. This status or lien, it is now held, relates back to the commencement of the proceedings, that is, the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[47]

[43] Wilkins v. Tourtellott, 42 Kan. 176, 22 Pac. 11. And see, supra, § 236.

[44] In re Dole, 110 Fed. 926, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

[45] Zantzinger v. Ribble, 36 Md. 32, 4 N. B. R. 724.

[46] Maybin v. Raymond, 15 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 9,338. If the discharge be set aside and the bankrupt's assignment of life policies be voided, their status, as regards the trustee's interest, is of the date of adjudication, though the bankrupt has died. In re Levy (D. C.) 227 Fed. 1011, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

[47] Bailey v. Baker Ice Machine Co., 239 U. S. 268, 36 Sup. Ct. 50, 60 L. Ed. 275, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; Fairbanks Steam Shovel Co. v. Wills, 240 U. S. 642, 36 Sup. Ct. 466, 60 L. Ed. 841, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; Bunch v. Maloney, 233 Fed. 967, 147 C. C. A. 641, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; Lake View State Bank v. Jones, 242 Fed. 821, 155 C. C. A. 409, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148; In re Schilling (D. C.) 251 Fed. 966, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 705; In re Gay & Sturgis (D. C.) 251 Fed. 420, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; Big Four Implement Co. v. Wright, 207 Fed. 535, 125 C. C. A. 577, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1223, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125; Scales v. Holje, 41 Cal. App. 733, 183 Pac. 308; Kettenbach v. Walker, 32 Idaho, 544, 186 Pac. 912; First Nat. Bank of Union v. Wegener, 94 Or. 318, 181 Pac. 990, 186 Pac. 41. Compare In re Rose (D. C.) 206 Fed. 991, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 791.

§ 318. Assets in Bankruptcy in General.—By way of a general definition, it may be said that assets in bankruptcy are property of the bankrupt, or the proceeds thereof, coming into the hands of the trustee and applicable to the payment of the debts.[48] But the statute specifically describes the classes of property which shall constitute assets, as follows: (1) Documents relating to the property of the bankrupt; (2) interests in patents, patent rights, copyrights, and trade-marks; (3) powers which he might have exercised for his own benefit; (4) property transferred by him in fraud of his creditors; (5) property which, prior to the filing of the petition, he could by any means have transferred, or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him; (6) rights of action arising upon contracts or from the unlawful taking or detention of, or injury to, his property.[49] But it is said that this section of the statute is not to be construed as exclusive of other assets not therein described, so that, if there be other kinds of property owned by the bankrupt and applicable to his debts, they will also vest in the trustee.[50] Further, though the bankrupt is required to file a schedule of his property, the extent of the trustee's title does not depend upon it; that is, the latter takes title to any propery which he may discover and which properly constitutes assets of the estate, though omitted from the schedule.[51] Several of the kinds of property enumerated in the statute, as above will be separately discussed in the succeeding sections of this chapter, but some require notice in this place.

First, as to "documents relating to his property." This term is elsewhere defined in the statute as including "any book, deed, or instrument in writing."[52] Consequently, the trustee is entitled to the possession of all the bankrupt's books of account, business, papers, contracts, securities, etc., relating to his business,[53] and, in the case of the bank-

[48] In re Wilson, 2 Hughes, 228, Fed. Cas. No. 17,782. As to insurance money taking the place of the property insured, for the purpose of the bankruptcy proceedings, see Tepel v. Coleman (D. C.) 229 Fed. 300.

[49] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a. See Brown v. Crawford (D. C.) 252 Fed. 248, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

[50] In re Baudouine, 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55. The decision was as to the surplus income of a bankrupt, above the amount necessary for his support, accruing under a will by which trustees were charged to pay him a fixed share of the trust estate during his life, and which the laws of the state made liable in equity to the claims of his creditors.

[51] Chachere v. Bloch, 46 La. Ann. 1386, 16 South. 176; Hallyburton v. Slagle, 130 N. C. 482, 41 S. E. 877; Ledoux v. Samuels, 116 App. Div. 726, 102 N. Y. Supp. 43; Leist v. Dierssen, 4 Cal. App. 634, 88 Pac. 812; Jude v. Nebham (Miss.) 60 South. 45; Gray v. Gudger, 260 Fed. 931, 171 C. C. A. 573, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; Neuberger v. Felis, 203 Ala. 142, 82 South. 172; Jones v. Barnes, 107 Miss. 800, 66 South. 212. See In re Levy (D. C.) 227 Fed. 1011, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

[52] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 13.

[53] In re Hess, 134 Fed. 109, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

ruptcy of a corporation, the corporate record and stock books.[54] But if the bankrupt's books of account have been transferred by him before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, in such a way as to give the holder an apparent legal title to them, the trustee must resort to plenary proceedings for their recovery.[55]

As to property conveyed in fraud of the bankrupt's creditors this subject will be more fully discussed in a later chapter. But it may here be remarked that, if existing creditors have not sued to set aside a voluntary or fraudulent conveyance of the bankrupt's property until within four months prior to his bankruptcy, they are not entitled to the proceeds of the property, sold on vacation of the conveyance, but such proceeds belong to the trustee for distribution according to the bankruptcy act.[56]

As to property which the bankrupt could have transferred, or which could have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him, the word "transfer" is elsewhere defined in the act as including "the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security." [57] Transferability is in general the test of the title of the trustee in bankruptcy under this provision of the act.[58] And any interest of a bankrupt in property or a fund which he could by any means have transferred passes to his trustee, although it may not have been subject to seizure on execution against him.[59] On the other hand, without reference to the question of transferability, property passes to the trustee which could have been levied upon and sold under process against the bankrupt. And whether the particular property could have been levied on and sold under judicial process is to be determined according to the local law.[60] Generally, however, this clause will include all property to which the bankrupt had title as between himself and his creditors.[61] Thus, where personal property is held by a third person under a lease from the bankrupt, although the local law would not subject it to attachment or execution at the suit of the lessor's creditors, yet if it

[54] Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 30 Sup. Ct. 372, 54 L. Ed. 402, 17 Ann. Cas. 969, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[55] Rogers v. Winsor, 6 N. B. R. 246, Fed. Cas. No. 12,023.

[56] In re Martin, 193 Fed. 841, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 545. See Smith v. Retail Merchants' Fire Ins. Co., 37 S. D. 395, 158 N. W. 780.

[57] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 25.

[58] In re Packer's Estate, 246 Pa. 116, 92 Atl. 70.

[59] Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 233 Fed. 861, 147 C. C. A. 535, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[60] Rosenbluth v. De Forest & Hotchkiss Co., 85 Conn. 40, 81 Atl. 955; In re Berry (D. C.) 247 Fed. 700, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

[61] Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, 122 Fed. 593, 58 C. C. A. 261, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466; Boone v. Hall, 7 Bush (Ky.) 66, 3 Am. Rep. 288; In re Millbourne Mills Co., 162 Fed. 988, 20 Am. Bankr.

could be reached by trustee process, subject to the rights of the lessee, it is assets of the estate in bankruptcy.[62]

As to the nature of the bankrupt's title or interest, it may be said that there must be some definitely fixed or ascertainable title or estate, in which the bankrupt has a beneficial as well as a legal interest.[63] But the fact that his interest is defeasible or contingent does not necessarily prevent it from being transferable or assignable and therefore assets in bankruptcy.[64] It has even been held that the trustee will be entitled to claim money which was placed in the bankrupt's hands and was converted by him under circumstances such as to make his act larcenous.[65] But the case is different in regard to property which is held by the bankrupt under no real title, but by virtue of a conveyance which was fraudulent and void as against the grantor's creditors. It is the latter, the grantor's creditors, who will be entitled to it, and not the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantee.[66] We have also to consider the case where the bankrupt is not the sole owner of property, but jointly interested in it with others. Here the trustee will take only the bankrupt's share or interest.[67] But on the bankruptcy of a person who was in fact the sole owner of a business, though it was conducted in the name of himself and another as partners, the property and assets of the business will pass to his trustee as his individual property, without regard to any liability of the ostensible partner to the creditors.[68] Without attempting to enumerate all the various kinds of property which may be claimed by the trustee as assets, it may be observed that he will become entitled in his capacity as trustee to wages or salary or other compensation for services, earned and payable at the date of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, but not then paid, though not to the bankrupt's earnings for services after that date;[69] as also to money in bank to the credit of the bankrupt,[70] to accruing rents from his property,[71]

Rep. 718; Patterson v. Boyd (Tenn.) 150 S. W. 424; In re T. C. Burnett & Co., 201 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872.

[62] Clark v. Williams, 190 Mass. 219, 76 N. E. 723.

[63] Ontario Bank v. Mumford, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 596; In re Twaddell, 110 Fed. 145, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539. See In re Hunter Arms Co., 233 Fed. 79, 147 C. C. A. 149.

[64] In re Wright (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 544, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; In re Judson, 188 Fed. 702, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 775.

[65] Lord v. Seymour, 177 N. Y. 525, 69 N. E. 1126.

[66] Manning v. Drake, 1 Mich. 34; Gunther v. Greenfield, 8 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 191, 3 N. B. R. 730.

[67] Goddard v. Weaver, 1 Woods, 257, 6 N. B. R. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 5,495.

[68] In re Gibson, 191 Fed. 665, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

[69] In re Evans, 253 Fed. 276. See In re Gillespie (D. C.) 209 Fed. 1003.

[70] Wagner v. Citizens' Bank & Trust Co., 122 Tenn. 164, 122 S. W. 245, 135 Am. St. Rep. 869, 19 Ann. Cas. 483.

[71] Keenan v. Shannon, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 219, 9 N. B. R. 441, Fed. Cas. No. 7,640; In re Dole, 110 Fed. 926, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

removable trade fixtures,[72] shares of corporate stock standing in the name of the bankrupt,[73] and the interest of a bankrupt in a stock pool organized to advance the market in a certain stock and then sell to the public.[74] As to corporate stock, the trustee has a right to have the certificate transferred to him or to have a new one issued, if it is beyond his power to compel a transfer from the bankrupt,[75] and probably to vote the stock at stockholders' meetings, though if he allows the bankrupt to do this, the other stockholders have no right to object.[76] But while shares of corporate stock pass to the trustee, for whatever they may be currently worth, a stockholder's interest in the accumulated but undivided profits of the company is not "property," and therefore the trustee cannot recover dividends declared on the stock after the bankrupt's discharge.[77] And although the bankrupt may be employed by a given corporation, all the stock of which stands in the name of his wife, and its prosperity may be chiefly due to his efforts, it does not follow that any part of its property can be claimed as assets of his estate.[78] And it is to be noted that the individual liability of a stockholder in a corporation does not descend upon his trustee in bankruptcy, nor attach to the assets in his hands, at least where the trustee has not accepted the stock or consented to become a stockholder in the corporation.[79]

A private banker being subject to adjudication in bankruptcy, the property and assets employed in the business pass to the trustee in bankruptcy; but whether the creditors of the bankrupt in his capacity as a banker have a preference or priority over his general or personal creditors, must depend upon the laws of the particular state.[80] As to

[72] Montello Brick Co. v. Trexler (C. C. A.) 167 Fed. 482, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 896.

[73] Wilson v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co., 2 Fed. 459.

[74] In re Lathrop, Haskins & Co., 184 Fed. 534, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911.

[75] Wilson v. Atlantic & St. L. R. Co., 2 Fed. 459.

[76] State v. Ferris, 42 Conn. 560.

[77] Bryan v. Sturgis Nat. Bank, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 307, 90 S. W. 704, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18. But see In re Brantman, 244 Fed. 101, 156 C. C. A. 529. In this case it is said that ordinarily a stockholder cannot maintain an action for a dividend not declared, but that if directors of a corporation unreasonably and wrongfully refuse or neglect to declare dividends, when there are surplus profits out of which a dividend might be declared, and there is no good reason for their failure, a stockholder may, by a bill in equity, compel the declaration of a dividend. And as the trustee of a bankrupt succeeds to the bankrupt's title to corporate stock and has the bankrupt's rights and remedies as respects dividends which have been declared or which ought to have been declared, so where corporate directors, to protect a bankrupt, failed to declare dividends, the trustee may maintain a suit to compel the declaration and payment of a dividend.

[78] Campbell v. Thompson, 18 Colo. App. 93, 70 Pac. 161.

[79] American File Co. v. Garrett, 110 U. S. 288, 4 Sup. Ct. 90, 28 L. Ed. 149; Garrett v. Sayles, 1 Fed. 371.

[80] See In re Sage (D. C.) 224 Fed. 525, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Ledgerwood v.

property which has inherent value, or value in use or consumption, but which is contraband or cannot legally be sold, the case is doubtful. It was formerly thought that where the bankrupt was a licensed dealer in intoxicating liquors, his stock in trade would be assets in the hands of his trustee in bankruptcy, notwithstanding the doubt as to the legality of any sale of it by the latter.[81] But since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution it would appear that a stock of liquors in the hands of a bankrupt would not be assets of his estate, since it could neither be legally transferred by him nor levied upon and sold under judicial process.

§ 319. Situation of Property.—All property of the bankrupt situated anywhere within the United States passes to and vests in his trustee in bankruptcy, without regard to the territorial limits of the jurisdiction of the court which made the adjudication of bankruptcy. That is, it is entirely immaterial that parts of the property, whether real or personal, may be situated without the district or in another state; it all comes within the trustee's title and right of possession, and within the exclusive control of the bankruptcy court in which the proceedings are had.[82] But a decree in bankruptcy would not be sufficient in itself to invest the trustee with title to real property of the bankrupt situated in a foreign country,[83] the reason being that, as a bankruptcy law can have no exterritorial operation, it cannot affect land situated beyond the boundaries of the United States, which is governed only by the law of its situs. But this contingency has been provided for by the present statute, which enacts that it shall be the duty of the bankrupt to "execute to his trustee transfers of all his property in foreign countries." [84] While this language is broad enough to include assignments of personal property or choses in action, it is doubtful whether they would be necessary. It seems that intangible personal property of a bankrupt, such that its situs must be taken to be that of the owner's domicile, will vest in his trustee in bankruptcy, though the obligation which it secures, or the value which it represents, is performable or payable only in a foreign

Dashiell (Tex. Civ. App.) 177 S. W. 1010; In re Deutsche Bros. (D. C.) 220 Fed. 532, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 858

[81] See Strub v. Gamble, 221 Fed. 253, 137 C. C. A. 258, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

[82] In re Granite City Bank, 137 Fed. 818, 70 C. C. A. 316, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; In re Wilka, 131 Fed. 1004, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; Ward v. Hargett, 151 N. C. 365, 66 S. E. 340; Cannon v. Wellford, 22 Grat. (Va.) 195; Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. Latham & Co., 219 Fed. 721, 135 C. C. A. 419, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631; Koger v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 434.

[83] Oakey v. Bennett, 11 How. 33, 13 L. Ed. 593; Chaison v. McFaddin (Tex. Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 524; In re Delehanty's Estate, 11 Ariz. 366, 95 Pac. 109, 21 Ann. Cas. 1038.

[84] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, clause 5.

jurisdiction. In an English case we find a decision that bonds of a foreign government vest in the executor of a decedent who held such bonds at the time of his death, the same being marketable securities in England,[85] and the rule should certainly extend by analogy to trustees in bankruptcy.

§ 320. Burdensome Interests.—Though title to all the bankrupt's property descends upon his trustee, the latter is not bound to accept or to administer any portion of it or any item of assets which he may decide to be worthless, or likely to cost more than it will yield, or to be more of a burden than a benefit to the estate. In the exercise of his judgment and discretion on this point, he may reject, abandon, or refuse to take charge and possession of, any such property, and so free himself from any duty or responsibility in regard to it.[86] Thus, for instance, if he finds property of the bankrupt so heavily burdened with mortgages or other liens that he considers it impossible to realize anything out of the equity of redemption for the benefit of the general creditors, he may refuse to administer it and abandon it to the secured creditor, and it is in fact his duty to do so whenever it is certain that the general estate would derive no benefit from a sale of the property.[87] So, he is not bound to accept any property which may involve him in litigation, when the probability is that the estate would be taxed with costs and expenses in excess of any sum eventually realized.[88] While the decision of such questions is for the trustee in the first instance, and he is bound to exercise sound judgment as well as good faith, his determination is not irrevocably binding on the creditors. That is to say, if they believe his decision to reject or abandon property was unwise, and that the prop-

[85] Attorney General v. Bouwens, 4 Mees. & W. 171. See Devisme v. Martin, Wythe (Va.) 298.

[86] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; American File Co. v. Garrett, 110 U. S. 288, 4 Sup. Ct. 90, 28 L. Ed. 149; Sessions v. Romadke, 145 U. S. 29, 12 Sup. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609; In re Wisconsin Engine Co., 234 Fed. 281, 148 C. C. A. 183, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106; In re Scruggs (D. C.) 205 Fed. 673, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Berry (D. C.) 247 Fed. 700, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357; Taylor v. Irwin, 20 Fed. 615; Kimberling v. Hartly, 1 McCrary, 136, 1 Fed. 571; Amory v. Lawrence, 3 Cliff. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 336; Copeland v. Stephens, 1 Barn. & Ald. 603; Smith v. Gordon, 6 Law Rep. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 13,052; Glenn v. Howard, 65 Md. 40, 3 Atl. 895; Griswold v. Morse, 59 N. H. 211; Berry v. Gillis, 17 N. H. 9, 43 Am. Dec. 584; Briggs v. Avary, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 488, 106 S. W. 904; Fleming v. Courtenay, 98 Me. 401, 57 Atl. 592, 99 Am. St. Rep. 414; In re Zehner, 193 Fed. 787, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; McCarty v. Light, 155 App. Div. 36, 139 N. Y. Supp. 853; Dow v. Bradley, 110 Me. 249, 85 Atl. 896.

[87] In re Zehner, 193 Fed. 787, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; In re Jersey Island Packing Co., 138 Fed. 625, 71 C. C. A. 75, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 560, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; In re Stewart, 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re North Star Ice & Coal Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 301, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76.

[88] Oldmixon v. Severance, 119 App. Div. 821, 104 N. Y. Supp. 1042.

erty might be administered for the benefit of the estate, the court of bankruptcy is open to them, and they may there obtain a reversal of his decision and an order requiring him to take charge of the property and administer it.[89] But if the trustee's decision to abandon the property is acquiesced in, or not overruled, the effect is to restore to the bankrupt the title and possession of the property and the right to deal with it as his own, and the trustee cannot thereafter interfere with it or claim any proceeds arising from the sale or other disposition of the property or any advantage accruing from it.[90] Thus, in a case where the bankrupt was carrying some policies of life insurance, the trustee decided that they were not of any value to the estate, and hence did not have them appraised or make any provision for paying the premiums, but abandoned them to the bankrupt, with the approval of the court. But the beneficiaries in the policies or the bankrupt himself kept up the premiums, and the bankrupt died before the estate was closed. It was held that the trustee was not entitled to recover the proceeds of the policies from the insurance companies or from the beneficiaries.[91] So, when the trustee declines to take a debt or claim due to the bankrupt, it becomes the latter's right to sue upon it himself, and in this case it is immaterial whether or not the trustee's right to sue would be barred, as that does not affect the bankrupt.[92]

§ 321. Same; Trustee's Election to Accept or Abandon Property.—The trustee cannot be put to his election whether to accept or to reject property of the bankrupt unless he is aware of its existence and of the circumstances which should influence his decision. In other words, no one else can deal with the property without first showing that the trustee abandoned it, and in order to establish this, it must be shown that the trustee had either actual knowledge of the property in question or sufficient means of obtaining full information.[93] And if the trustee assumes control over the property with reasonable promptness, after learning of its existence, no previous inaction on his part will count for anything

[89] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; People's Nat. Bank v. Maxson, 168 Iowa, 318, 150 N. W. 601.

[90] Fleming v. Courtenay, 98 Me. 401, 57 Atl. 592, 99 Am. St. Rep. 414; Burton v. Perry, 146 Ill. 71, 34 N. E. 60; Amory v. Lawrence, 3 Cliff. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 336; Kimberling v. Hartley, 1 McCrary, 136, 1 Fed. 571; Smith v. Gordon, 6 Law Rep. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 13,052; Haley v. Boston Belting Co., 140 Mass. 73, 2 N. E. 785; Shaffer v. Federal Cement Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 893; Mesirov v. Inn's Speiden & Co., 88 N. J. Law, 548, 97 Atl. 160; Smith v. Wahl, 88 N. J. Law, 623, 97 Atl. 261.

[91] Meyers v. Josephson, 124 Fed. 734, 59 C. C. A. 650, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

[92] Buckingham v. Buckingham, 36 Ohio St. 68.

[93] Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 16 Sup. Ct. 637, 40 L. Ed. 791; Atwood v. Bailey, 184 Mass. 133, 68 N. E. 13; Buckingham v. Buckingham, 36 Ohio St. 68.

or prejudice his rights in any way.[94] The rule that a bankrupt can assert title to any property which the trustee declines to take "can have no application when the trustee is ignorant of the existence of the property and has had no opportunity to make an election. It cannot be that a bankrupt, by omitting to schedule and withholding from his trustee all knowledge of certain property, can, after his estate in bankruptcy has been finally closed up, immediately thereafter assert title to the property on the ground that the trustee has never taken any action in respect to it. If the claim was of value, it was something to which the creditors were entitled, and this bankrupt could not, by withholding knowledge of its existence, obtain a release from his debts and still assert title to the property." [95]

Naturally the trustee is not required to come to an instant decision on learning of the property in question. He must be accorded a reasonable length of time in which to inform himself and arrive at a conclusion.[96] But on the other hand, he must make his decision within a reasonable length of time, and cannot delay indefinitely. If he pursues a policy of mere neglect and inaction, and this continues for an unreasonable length of time, it will give rise to a presumption that he has abandoned the property, and will estop him to assert any interest in it, at least as against rights or liens subsequently acquired by third persons, such as a purchaser from the bankrupt, or a creditor who has independently taken steps to subject the property to the payment of his debt.[97] In particular, the courts will not permit the trustee to wait indefinitely in order to see whether an item of property, now apparently valueless, may eventually become sufficiently valuable to justify him in taking possession of it for the benefit of the estate.[98]

[94] Hammond v. Whittredge, 204 U. S. 538, 27 Sup. Ct. 396, 51 L. Ed. 606; In re Wiseman & Wallace, 159 Fed. 236, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

[95] First Nat. Bank v. Lasater, 196 U. S. 115, 25 Sup. Ct. 206, 49 L. Ed. 408, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

[96] Briggs v. Avary, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 488, 106 S. W. 904; Whittredge v. Sweetser, 189 Mass. 45, 75 N. E. 222.

[97] Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 Sup. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609; Taylor v. Irwin, 20 Fed. 615; Rugely v. Robinson, 19 Ala. 404; Smith v. Gordon, 6 Law Rep. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 13,052; Fleming v. Courtenay, 98 Me. 401, 57 Atl. 592, 99 Am. St. Rep. 414.

[98] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915. In this case the bankrupt was a stockbroker and owned memberships in the New York and Philadelphia stock exchanges, but at the time of his bankruptcy they were of no value as property of his estate, because he was indebted to other members of the exchanges (whose debts were preferred under the rules of the exchanges) to an amount largely in excess of the value of the seats. The trustees in bankruptcy were aware of all the facts, but they did nothing towards taking charge of the property or administering it. They "contented themselves with the hope that masterly inactivity might enable them to assert a claim if, by the efforts of the bankrupt, the load of debt which weighed down the right to the seats was lifted, and in the progress of years the value of such seats happened to increase, instead of dimin-

The trustee's election not to take the property may be manifested formally, as where he gives a written waiver of his right, title, and interest in the property, containing also permission to the bankrupt to deal with it as owner.[99] Or he may obtain an order of court directing him to pursue this course, or approving nunc pro tunc an abandonment of the property already made.[100] But this is not at all necessary, as regards third persons. For the abandonment of the property by the trustee may be conclusively presumed, not only from unreasonable delay in claiming it, as above stated, but also from any conduct on his part which is plainly inconsistent with an election to retain it or to administer it.[101]

§ 322. Property in Bankrupt's Possession.—All property of a bankrupt in his actual possession at the time of the adjudication passes into the hands of the trustee immediately upon his appointment, except only such as is exempt by law.[102] And where a deficit is shown in the assets of the bankrupt's estate, he must account for it by a satisfactory explanation or pay the amount of the deficit to the trustee.[103] And if he attempts to conceal or withhold any property which is in his possession or under his own control or the control of those who are holding it merely as his agents or bailees, he may be compelled, by order of the court of bankruptcy, to surrender it to his trustee, and punished for his failure to obey.[104] Further, "whatever money or property is in the possession of the bankrupt at the time of filing his petition, which he is actually using and holding as his own, passes to his assignee [trustee] in bankruptcy, and he cannot set up in defense to the claim of the assignee a title in a third person merely for the purpose of holding on to it himself. If third persons have the possession, this court cannot, on summary petition, order it to be delivered to the assignee. But if the bankrupt has it, it passes to the assignee, subject to the liens or rights of third persons, whatever they may be. After the assignee gets the property, any ish." The court said that "their conduct can be viewed in no other light than that of an election not to accept these rights as property of the estate." And as this conduct continued for ten years after the bankrupt's discharge, it constituted "laches and acquiescence of the most pronounced character."

[99] Briggs v. Avary, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 488, 106 S. W. 904.

[100] In re Josephson, 121 Fed. 142, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345.

[101] Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 Sup. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609; Fleming v. Courtenay, 98 Me. 401, 57 Atl. 592, 99 Am. St. Rep. 414; Laing v. Fish, 119 Ill. App. 645.

[102] In re Vogel, 7 Blatchf. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 16,982.

[103] In re Peltasohn, 4 Dill, 107, Fed. Cas. No. 10,912; In re Goodman, 196 Fed. 566, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697.

[104] Supra, §§ 227–231. And see In re Kreuger, 197 Fed. 124, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 890; In re Karp, 196 Fed. 998, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Weber Co., 200 Fed. 404, 118 C. C. A. 556, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 217; Lessaius v. Goodman, 165 Fed. 889, 91 C. C. A. 567, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; In re Jablin, 194 Fed. 228, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54.

third person may, by petition or suit, assert his rights in it." [105] In a case where an individual, who was engaged in the manufacture of piano cases, organized two corporations, transferring to one of them the business and to the other the real property, and managed the two corporations, not as separate and distinct entities, but as a part of the manufacturing business, it was held that, on the bankruptcy of the manufacturing corporation, the trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to a summary order extending the trusteeship to the assets of the other corporation.[106]

§ 323. Property in Custody of the Law.—A trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to possession of all of the bankrupt's property and to administer the same, although it may be subject to liens or in the possession of a state court in proceedings to enforce a lien.[107] If the property has been committed to the custody of a receiver appointed by a state court, it is the right and duty of the trustee to reclaim it, although, in view of the comity which subsists between the state and federal courts, he cannot do this by any hostile proceedings, but must apply to the state court for an order directing the surrender of the property by its receiver, and if this is refused, the trustee must intervene in the pending suit.[108] If the property (or the money arising from its sale) is in the hands of a sheriff, the trustee may demand and claim it, provided the lien under which the sheriff seized the property was one dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy, otherwise, it must be treated as in the custody of the court and a proper application made for its surrender.[109] If property is in the possession of an assignee for the benefit of creditors, the assignment being dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy, or being the act of bankruptcy on which the adjudication was based, such assignee cannot hold the property, but must surrender it to the trustee in bankruptcy.[110] Where land has been sold under decree of partition and the proceeds impounded in the state court, it is proper for the trustee of a bankrupt to apply to the state court for an order directing that so much of the fund as constitutes the bankrupt's distributive share should be paid over to him for distribution in the bankruptcy proceedings, and the application should be granted.[111]

[105] In re Moses, 1 Fed. 845. And see In re Havens, 8 Ben. 309, Fed. Cas. No. 6,230.

[106] In re Looschen Plano Case Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 93, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

[107] In re Kaplan, 144 Fed. 159, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[108] Supra, § 27. And see Kennedy v. American Tanning Co., 81 N. J. Eq. 109, 85 Atl. 812; A. H. Alden & Co. v. New York Commercial Co., 157 App. Div. 872, 142 N. Y. Supp. 772; Gealey v. South Side Trust Co., 249 Fed. 189, 161 C. C. A. 225, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645; In re Williams (D. C.) 240 Fed. 788; Cudahy Packing Co. v. New Jersey Dairy Products Co., 90 N. J. Eq. 541, 107 Atl. 147.

[109] Supra, § 28. And see Bristol v. Mills, 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 107; In re Farrell, 201 Fed. 338; Cooper v. Dannenberg, 18 Ga. App. 615, 89 S. E. 1089.

[110] See infra, ch. 21.

[111] Moran & Wilkinson v. Martin, 21 Ga. App. 672, 94 S. E. 905.

§ 324. Interests in Real Estate.—The title to all real estate of the bankrupt passes to and vests in his trustee,[112] and the latter may if necessary maintain ejectment for its recovery.[113] Generally speaking, also, any interest which the bankrupt may have in landed property will constitute assets of his estate, provided it is a beneficial interest and one which he might have transferred by his own deed or which might have been subjected to the claims of his creditors outside of the bankruptcy proceedings.[114] Thus, although the title to realty may be in another, yet if the bankrupt has an interest in it, that interest will be available under the administration of the trustee.[115] Or, though the bankrupt, nominally the owner, has only an undivided interest, at least that interest will be assets of his estate.[116] So, where an estate is devised unconditionally to two persons, and after the death of the testator but before the probate of the will, one of the devisees is adjudged bankrupt, the estate so devised will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[117] Again, it is not necessary that the bankrupt's title should be one in fee. A life estate vested in him at the date of the adjudication is assets and may be sold by the trustee.[118] Again, a conveyance of land on condition of the payment of an annual sum to the grantor during his life gives the grantee a title which will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[119] And although the title to property which is exempt by law does not vest in the trustee, yet he may claim land which was once occupied as a homestead but has since been voluntarily abandoned by the bankrupt.[120] So where the bankrupt was the owner in fee of a public street in a city, subject only to the public easement of passage, the right of the owner therein will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy,[121] but a mere usufruct in property, not capable [112] Pearce v. Foreman, 29 Ark. 563. For the rule as to fixtures, see In re West (D. C.) 253 Fed. 963, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338, 341; In re Dr. Riegel Sanitarium Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 319, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

[113] Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28, 39 Am. Dec. 204; Essex Co. v. Durant, 14 Gray (Mass.) 447; Talcott v. Goodwin, 3 Day (Conn.) 264.

[114] Merrill v. Hussey, 101 Me. 439, 64 Atl. 819; Wright v. Green, 239 Mo. 449, 144 S. W. 437.

[115] In re Sanderson, 149 Fed. 273, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871. The trustee is entitled to a decree adjudging a lien on the property of the bankrupt's wife to the amount of the money expended by the bankrupt in improvements on the property. McKay v. Weager, 134 N. Y. Supp. 66.

[116] In re Throckmorton, 149 Fed. 145, 79 C. C. A. 15, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856.

[117] Ex parte Fuller, 2 Story, 327, Fed. Cas. No. 5,147.

[118] Adair v. Adair's Trustee, 99 S. W. 925, 30 Ky. Law Rep. 857; City Nat. Bank v. Slocum (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 11, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47. But otherwise as to a life estate which did not vest until after the adjudication of bankruptcy. Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 118 S. W. 377.

[119] Atwood v. Kittell, 9 Ben. 473, 17 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 641.

[120] Martin v. Smith, 104 S. W. 310, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 882.

[121] Kinzie v. Winston, 56 Ill. 56.

of being transferred by sale except with the owner's permission, is not assets in bankruptcy.[122]

A trustee in bankruptcy, when there are creditors of the bankrupt who are entitled to invoke an estoppel against the owner of realty, the apparent record title of which is in the bankrupt, and on the faith of which credit had been extended to him, may maintain an action to appropriate the property to the extent of the claims of such creditors, but to no greater extent than the bankrupt's creditors might have appropriated it if bankruptcy had not intervened.[123] Where the owner of real estate died intestate, and the next of kin conveyed it to the bankrupt, who held it at the time of the bankruptcy, and no proceedings for its sale to pay the debts of the decedent had been taken up to that time, the receiver in bankruptcy is entitled to collect the rents.[124]

§ 325. Same; Equity of Redemption.—When real property of the bankrupt is incumbered by a mortgage, valid as to creditors and not voidable under the bankruptcy act, the trustee takes title to the bankrupt's equity of redemption in the premises.[125] And this applies not only to a common-law mortgage in the ordinary form, but to equitable mortgages and various other anomalous forms, such as a conveyance of land which, though absolute in form, is intended as security for a debt and is accompanied by an unrecorded agreement of defeasance,[126] an instrument in the form of a deed of trust, but meant to secure a debt,[127] a mortgage of personal property which authorizes the debtor to sell the items covered,[128] and an assignment of a judgment, absolute in form, but intended as security for the price of goods sold or to be sold to the assignor.[129] So also, where the local law allows a certain period of time for redemption from a sale of real estate under execution, this right may be exercised by the debtor's trustee in bankruptcy, provided the appointed time has not expired when he is appointed, though it will not be enlarged by the intervening bankruptcy.[130] A trustee in bankruptcy will also be entitled to collect and receive the rents of mortgaged

122 In re O'Dowd, 8 N. B. R. 451, Fed. Cas. No. 10,439.

123 Bergin v. Blackwood, 141 Minn. 325, 170 N. W. 508.

124 In re Tietje (D. C.) 253 Fed. 283, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816.

125 In re Kellogg, 113 Fed. 120, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; Bryar's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 81, 2 Atl. 344; Robinson v. Denny, 57 Ala. 492; Winslow v. Clark, 47 N. Y. 261; In re Stewart, 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

126 Moors v. Albro, 129 Mass. 9.

127 In re Jersey Island Packing Co., 138 Fed. 625, 71 C. C. A. 75, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 560, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689.

128 In re Hull, 115 Fed. 858, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

129 English v. Ross, 140 Fed. 630, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370.

130 In re Goldman, 102 Fed. 122, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100.

property of the bankrupt, at least until the mortgagee shall have taken proper steps to secure their application on his debt.[131] But if a mortgage on land of the bankrupt has actually been paid, the property will pass to the trustee in bankruptcy free from the incumbrance, although the mortgage has been assigned to a third person instead of being canceled.[132]

§ 326. Same; Leased Property.—If the bankrupt is a tenant of leased premises, his interest in the unexpired term of the lease will constitute assets of his estate in bankruptcy and pass to the trustee.[133] The latter has the privilege of declining to accept the lease and of surrendering possession if he thinks that course will be advantageous for the estate, but if he finds that the leasehold interest has a market value and can be sold, it is his duty to claim it and administer it for the benefit of the creditors.[134] But in this case the rights of the landlord must be carefully guarded. It is said to be the duty of the trustee either to fix an upset price for the sale of the leasehold sufficient to pay the lessor the entire rental for the remaining term of the lease and pay over such amount to the lessor, or else to require a bond with ample security, obliging the purchaser to conform strictly to all the terms of the lease, and if bids cannot be obtained subject to these conditions, the trustee should surrender the lease to the landlord.[135] If notice to quit has been served on the tenant before his bankruptcy, it will serve as notice to the trustee, who takes only such rights as the bankrupt had at the time of the adjudication, and a new notice is not necessary.[136] And if a suit to cancel the lease is pending, which finally results in favor of the landlord, but meanwhile the lessee's trustee in bankruptcy has remained in the use and occupation of the premises, his possession pendente lite will be that of a trespasser under a claim of [131] Alter v. Clark, 193 Fed 153; Hunter v. Hays, 7 Biss. 362, Fed. Cas. No. 6,906.

[132] McMaster v. Campbell, 41 Mich. 513, 2 N. W. 836.

[133] Crowe v. Baumann, 190 Fed. 399, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; In re Frazin & Oppenheim, 174 Fed. 713, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; Olden v. Sassman, 68 N. J. Eq. 799. 64 Atl. 1134; Wildman v. Taylor, 4 Ben. 42, Fed. Cas. No. 17,654. And see Lyon v. Moore. 259 Ill. 23, 102 N. E. 179; In re J. L. Kesner Co., 219 Fed. 512, 135 C. C. A. 262.

[134] Supra, § 307.

[135] In re Gutman, 197 Fed. 472, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643. The trustee in bankruptcy of the owner of a mining lease takes the lease subject to the same burdens as rested on the lessee, and may take it only by complying with its terms and conditions. In re Barnhardt Coal & Limestone Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 385, 44 Am Bankr. Rep. 170.

[136] Lindeke v. Associates Realty Co., 146 Fed. 630, 77 C. C. A. 56, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215. And see In re Van Da Grift Motor Car Co., 192 Fed. 1015, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

title.[137] Where a court of bankruptcy has acquired jurisdiction to determine the right of a lessor to a forfeiture under the terms of the lease, it will proceed on equitable principles, and will refuse to enforce a forfeiture if inequitable, even though as strict matter of law the lessor may be entitled to it.[138] Where a mining lease held by the bankrupt became subject to forfeiture under its terms pending the proceedings, the trustee will be permitted to avoid the forfeiture and retain the lease by paying the royalty in arrears.[139]

§ 327. Same; Remainders and Expectant Estates.—A vested estate in remainder in real property is an asset which will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy, as in the ordinary case of an estate limited to one for life, with remainder to his surviving child or children and their heirs. Here, if the life-tenant is still living and the bankrupt is his child, the latter has a vested estate which will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[140] But as to contingent remainders and expectant interests the law is not so clear. Several cases hold that a vested interest in a contingent remainder will pass to the trustee in bankruptcy,[141] particularly where the contingency relates to the event and not to the person. In this case, it is said the remainder-man possesses a right of title which may indifferently be called a vested right in or to a contingent interest or estate or a contingent right to a future interest or estate, and such a right is alienable and transmissible to heirs, and therefore will pass to the trustee in bankruptcy of the remainder-man.[142] And in another case the broad view is expressed that, while a contingent remainder is not technically an estate, but a mere possibility of an estate in the future, yet it is "property" within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, that term, as used in the statute, being of the broadest possible signification, and embracing everything that has exchangeable value, or goes to make up a man's wealth, and every interest or estate

[137] In re St. Louis & Kansas Oil & Gas Co., 168 Fed. 934, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

[138] In re Larkey (D. C.) 214 Fed. 867, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287.

[139] In re Barnhardt Coal & Limestone Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 385, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170.

[140] In re McHarry, 111 Fed. 498, 49 C. C. A. 429, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83; In re Haslett, 116 Fed. 680; In re Twaddell, 110 Fed. 145, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539; In re St. John, 105 Fed. 234, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Wood, 98 Fed. 972, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572; Loomer v. Loomer, 76 Conn. 522, 57 Atl. 167; Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248, 94 Pac. 252; Markham v. Waterman, 181 Kan. 93, 181 Pac. 621.

[141] Putnam v. Story, 132 Mass. 205; Belcher v. Burnett, 126 Mass. 230; In re Churchman, 4 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 237; Bodenhamer v. Welch, 89 N. C. 78; Clark v. Grosh, 81 Misc. Rep. 407, 142 N. Y. Supp. 966; Clowe v. Seavey, 208 N. Y. 496, 102 N. E. 521.

[142] In re Twaddell, 110 Fed. 145, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539; Clowe v. Seavey, 208 N. Y. 496, 102 N. E. 521; Clark v.

which the law regards as of sufficient value for judicial recognition.[143] But on the other hand, there are respectable authorities to the effect that an expectation of succeeding to an estate, fixed as to the person but contingent on his surviving one or more previous takers or life-tenants, is nothing more than a mere possibility, and not of such a nature that it could be reached by a creditors' bill, and therefore not vesting in the trustee in bankruptcy.[144] And so, if the expectancy of the remainder-man depends upon the omission of the life-tenant to exercise a power of appointment which he holds, it appears that there is nothing which could be made available for his creditors in bankruptcy. Thus, under a devise to the use of one for life, with power of appointment by will, and, in case of failure to exercise the power, the property to go to the surviving next of kin of the testator, one who is next of kin does not take such an interest in the estate in remainder as will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[145] On much the same principle rested the decision in a case in which it appeared that an aged woman made her will devising practically her entire estate to her son, and died three weeks later. But in the mean time, the son filed his voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Creditors sought to make the property available for their claims in the bankruptcy proceedings, on the ground that, when the petition in bankruptcy was filed, the son had a contingent interest under the will which should constitute an asset of his estate, and represented that it would be a fraud upon them to allow the bankrupt to retain the property for himself, since his petition in bankruptcy was evidently filed in the expectation of his mother's early death and in anticipation of that event. But the court held that, since the mother might at any time have changed her will, the bankrupt had no property rights under it during her life, and what he eventually received under it was not assets of his estate in bankruptcy but after-acquired property and his own.[146] Again, where the father of a bankrupt orally

Grosh, 81 Misc. Rep. 407, 142 N. Y. Supp. 966.

[143] Martin v. Maxwell, 86 S. C. 1, 67 S. E. 962, 138 Am. St. Rep. 1012.

[144] Van Heusen v. Van Heusen Charles Co., 74 Misc. Rep. 292, 131 N. Y. Supp. 401; Clarke v. Fay, 205 Mass. 228, 91 N. E. 328, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 454; Smith v. Kearney, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 533; Luttgen v. Tiffany, 37 R. I. 416, 93 Atl. 182; In re Russell (D. C.) 273 Fed. 724. Only vested interests are considered property within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. Bank of Elberton v. Swift (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 305, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75. And therefore property which the alleged bankrupt expects or hopes to acquire thereafter by will or descent is not assets of his estate. Idem.

[145] In re Wetmore, 102 Fed. 290, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335, affirmed 108 Fed. 520, 47 C. C. A. 477, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210. But see In re Dorgan's Estate (D. C.) 237 Fed. 507, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157.

[146] In re Seal (D. C.) 261 Fed. 112, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556.

agreed to give land to him at the time when the father should decide to make a decision, it was considered that the contract was wholly executory, and the land itself, title to which was still in the grantor, could not be subjected in bankruptcy by the creditors before the grantor divided it.[147]

§ 328. Same; Estates by Curtesy and Community Property.—An estate by the curtesy, consummate by the death of the wife, will pass to the trustee in bankruptcy of the husband.[148] And the same has been held in regard to an estate by the curtesy initiate by the birth of issue.[149] But this must depend upon the local law. And in some states (Massachusetts, for instance), under the statutory law, a husband's interest in the real estate of his wife, during her lifetime and after issue born, is not property which he could convey or assign, nor is it a "power" which he might exercise for his own benefit, and consequently it will not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy as assets of his estate.[150] Where an estate is devised to a man and his wife absolutely and forever as tenants by entireties, the trustee in bankruptcy of the husband is not entitled, during the life of the wife, to any part of the property, or, in case of personalty, to any part of the principal or income.[151] As to community property, it has been held that, where funds belonging to the community estate of husband and wife were used by the husband in the erection of improvements on the wife's separate real estate, and the fund remained to that extent community property, the husband's trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to recover the amount of the community funds so expended, to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the improvements.[152]

§ 329. Same; Estates of Vendor and Vendee Under Executory Contract.—Where a purchaser of lands under an uncompleted contract becomes bankrupt, whatever interest he has in the lands will pass to his trustee, who is thereafter the proper party to maintain a bill in equity for the specific performance of the contract, and, on the other hand, is the proper defendant in a suit to enforce the vendor's lien.[153]

147 White v. Graybill, 184 Iowa, 897, 169 N. W. 135.

148 Elmore v. Symonds, 183 Mass. 321, 67 N. E. 314; Conoly v. Gayle, 54 Ala. 269; Beamish v. Hoyt, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 307. But see Cox v. Wallace, 219 Fed. 126, 134 C. C. A. 562, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186.

149 In re McKenna, 9 Fed. 27.

150 Hesseltine v. Prince, 95 Fed. 802, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; Parks v. Tirrell, 3 Allen (Mass.) 15.

151 In re Meyer's Estate, 232 Pa. St. 89, 81 Atl. 145, 36 L. R. A. (N. S.) 205, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 1240.

152 Collins v. Bryan, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 88, 88 S. W. 432. See Gibbons v. Goldsmith, 222 Fed. 826, 138 C. C. A. 252, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

153 Rea v. Richards, 56 Ala. 396; Mc-

And though a parol contract for the sale of land is void under the local law, yet if the purchaser under such a contract goes into possession and improves the property with the consent of the vendor, he has an equity in the land which can be subjected to the claims of creditors in bankruptcy proceedings.[154] Conversely, whatever interest may remain in the vendor of land under an executory contract will vest in his trustee in bankruptcy, and the latter may maintain ejectment on failure of the vendee to pay the price.[155] But since the bankruptcy act does not give the trustee any greater right or estate than the bankrupt had, a purchaser under an oral contract of purchase, and who was entitled prior to the bankruptcy of the vendor to compel a conveyance by the vendor, may compel the trustee to convey.[156]

§ 330. Same; Settlers' Rights and Improvements on Public Lands. —A settler upon the public lands, under the pre-emption laws or other acts of Congress, has no title which he can sell or mortgage, or which could be levied upon and sold under executions against him, until he has fully complied with all the requirements prescribed by law as essential to his right to receive a patent.[157] Until that is done, he has only an inchoate and personal interest in the lands. But when he has performed everything that is required of him by the statutes, either in respect to residence on the land, improvements, payment of purchase money and fees, or making final proof, so that, as far as concerns him, the law has been fully satisfied and his right to a patent is complete, then he is considered as holding an equitable title to the lands, and the United States holds the legal title merely in trust for him and is under Donald v. McMahon, 66 Ala. 115; Smith v. Hornesby, 58 Ga. 529; Duffield v. Dosh, 124 Iowa, 286, 99 N. W. 1074. And see Christopherson v. Harrington, 118 Minn. 42, 136 N. W. 289, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 276. But compare In re Phœnix Planing Mill (D. C.) 250 Fed. 899, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145. And see In re Berry (D. C.) 247 Fed. 700, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357, holding that the interest of a Michigan bankrupt in land which he and his wife had contracted to purchase does not pass to the trustee, since the rights of the parties are those of tenants by the entireties.

154 Overcast v. Lawrence, 141 Ky. 25, 131 S. W. 1029.

155 Clements v. Taylor, 65 Ala. 363. And see In re Sayed, 185 Fed. 962, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

156 In re Snelling, 202 Fed. 259, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818.

157 But an entry under the desert land laws, on which final proof has not been made, is property subject to the payment of the entryman's debts, and on his bankruptcy may be subjected to the payment of such debts, whether the bankruptcy be voluntary or involuntary, for under the acts of Congress the entry may be assigned before it is perfected, and assignments may be voluntary or involuntary, while the purpose of the desert land laws is not, as in the case of homesteads, to encourage settlers to establish themselves, but requires the payment of substantial consideration. In re Evans (D. C.) 235 Fed. 956, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361.

obligation to transfer the legal title to him by the issuance of a patent. When his title is in this condition, therefore, notwithstanding the fact that the patent, the formal evidence of legal title, has not yet been issued to him, he has an estate which can be incumbered, alienated, or made liable for the payment of his debts. And consequently, if his claim to the lands has advanced this far on the way to a complete legal title, at the time he is adjudicated a bankrupt, it is such property as will pass to and vest in his trustee.[158] And generally speaking the settler's improvements on the public lands are also property available to his creditors in bankruptcy,[159] unless they have been forfeited by the cancellation of the sale to him by the general government or the state, as the case may be.[160]

§ 331. Same; Resulting Trusts.—Though the legal title to real property may stand in the name of a third person, yet if the bankrupt has an equitable interest in it by virtue of a resulting trust in his favor, that interest will vest in his trustee as assets of the estate in bankruptcy,[161] as, where the bankrupt paid the entire consideration for the property, but the deed was taken in the name of another.[162] And the trustee will take title notwithstanding a previous levy of execution on the bankrupt's equitable interest and a sale thereunder, where, by the law of the state, a resulting trust is not such property as can be sold on execution.[163] On similar principles, although the bankrupt swore on his schedules that he owned no real estate at the time of filing the petition, neither he nor his heirs will be estopped by that oath from asserting their claim to property fraudulently procured from him by his vendee, and after the death of the bankrupt, the heirs at law may file a bill to recover such property, and their recovery will inure to the trustee in bankruptcy.[164]

§ 332. Same; Powers.—The present bankruptcy statute explicitly enumerates, as among the classes or kinds of property of a bankrupt which shall vest in his trustee, "powers which he might have exercised 158 See Colorado Co. v. Commissioners, 95 U. S. 259, 24 L. Ed. 495; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. 291, 20 L. Ed. 562; Hutchings v. Low, 15 Wall. 77, 21 L. Ed. 82; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441, 11 L. Ed. 671; Webster v. Bowman, 25 Fed. 889; United States v. Freyberg, 32 Fed. 195; Boggan v. Reid, 1 Wash. 514, 20 Pac. 425.

159 French v. Carr, 7 Ill. (2 Gilman) 664.

160 Snodgrass v. Posey, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 584, 70 S. W. 984.

161 In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41. And see Cullen v. Armstrong (D. C.) 209 Fed. 704, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735.

162 Carr v. Hilton, 1 Curt. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,436; Gove v. Lawrence, 26 N. H. 484.

163 In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41.

164 Ferguson v. Dent, 24 Fed. 412.

for his own benefit, but not those which he might have exercised for some other person." [165] This particular mention was necessary to bring this kind of interest or title within the scope of the statute, since the Supreme Court had expressly held, under the act of 1867, that a power of appointment would not pass to the assignee in bankruptcy of the person in whom the power resided.[166]

§ 333. Growing Crops.—When the bankrupt is the owner of agricultural land, crops sown and growing thereon at the time of the filing of the petition will pass to the trustee along with the land and as a part of it, and the trustee may sell the crops with the land, or claim them as assets of the estate when grown and severed.[167] So where the bankrupt was tenant of a farm under a contract reserving to the landlord, as rent, one-fourth of the crops raised on the land, the bankrupt's interest in the growing crops, though they are immature and unsevered at the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy, is property which he might have transferred at that date, within the meaning of the statute, and therefore vests in his trustee as assets of the estate; and after the crops have been severed, the bankrupt must surrender them to the trustee or else account for the proceeds.[168] But crops not sown at the time of the adjudication do not become a part of the bankrupt's estate and the trustee has no interest in them.[169]

§ 334. Patents and Copyrights.—The statute provides that the trustee in bankruptcy shall be vested by operation of law with the bankrupt's title, as of the date he was adjudged a bankrupt, to "interests in patents and patent rights." This clearly includes interests then owned by the bankrupt in patents already issued and in force, whether as patentee, assignee of the patent, or holder of rights acquired under a patent to a third person, such as licenses or manufacturing rights.[170] But on the question whether it also includes the interest of the bankrupt in a patentable invention or in a pending application for a patent, the authorities are divided and irreconcilable. In one of the cases it is held that the trustee takes no title to a patent for an invention granted

[165] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a, cl. 3. See Montague v. Silsbee, 218 Mass. 107, 105 N. E. 611.

[166] Brandies v. Cochrane, 112 U. S. 344, 5 Sup. Ct. 194, 28 L. Ed. 760; Jones v. Clifton, 101 U. S. 225, 25 L. Ed. 908.

[167] Hebert v. Crawford, 228 U. S. 204, 33 Sup. Ct. 484, 57 L. Ed. 800, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24; In re T. C. Burnett & Co., 201 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Eastman, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 86; Carney v. Averill, 110 Me. 172, 85 Atl. 494.

[168] In re Barrow, 98 Fed. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

[169] Bank of Nez Perce v. Pindel (C. C. A.) 193 Fed. 917, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69.

[170] In re McDonnell, 101 Fed. 239, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

to the bankrupt after the date of the adjudication, although the application for the patent was made before the bankruptcy and was pending at the time of the adjudication.[171] In another decision, where the same rule was adhered to, it was pointed out that there can be no such thing as a "patent right" until a patent has been issued, and that the statute, in referring to the bankrupt's interests in "patent rights," must be construed as intending rights acquired under patents issued to third parties, but cannot with any propriety be made to include the incorporeal interest in an alleged invention pending an application for a patent thereon. Pressed with the argument that, if such an interest was not a "patent or patent right," at least it was "property" which the bankrupt could have transferred to another before his adjudication, especially in view of the fact that the patent laws permit an inventor to transfer his application and authorize the issue of a patent to the transferee, the court replied that Congress evidently intended to dispose of the whole subject of patents, and rights and interests therein, in the one clause of the statute in which they are specifically mentioned, and that the subsequent general clause relating to "property" of the bankrupt could not be understood as enlarging the previous specific clause, but was meant only to include other classes or kinds of property than those itemized in the preceding clauses.[172] But this precise point has been otherwise decided in a later case, where the court took a very broad view of the word "property," and held that it was intended to include everything which is the proper subject of a legal transfer, and therefore should include a pending application for a patent.[173] The same view has been expressed by one of the circuit courts of appeals, but only in the way of an obiter dictum, since the disputed item of property before the court had nothing to do with a patent, but was a license for the sale of liquor.[174]

As to copyrights, no such question has yet arisen. It might be interesting to inquire whether the bankrupt author of a literary composition, finished in manuscript form but not copyrighted, could be required to surrender it to his trustee, in order that the latter might take out copyright upon it and arrange for its publication. Probably such an unpublished work should be regarded as "property" of the bankrupt, within the broad meaning of the statute, and if so, the trustee in bank-

171 In re McDonnell, 101 Fed. 239, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

172 In re Dann, 129 Fed. 495, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27. See Ingle v. Landis Tool Co. (D. C.) 262 Fed. 150, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89.

173 In re Cantelo Mfg. Co., 185 Fed. 276, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

174 Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646.

ruptcy should have his election whether to take possession of it and attempt to convert it into money for the benefit of the creditors or to reject it as likely to be unprofitable. But the courts have not yet been confronted with this problem. It is held, however, that where an existing copyright has been assigned by the author to a third person, absolutely and unconditionally, it constitutes property of the assignee which will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[175] But a contract between an author and a publisher for the publication and sale of a work having only a limited circulation among a special class of readers, who constitute the special clientele of the publisher, which contract contemplates the taking out of copyright in the name of the publisher and the payment of a royalty to the author, is in the nature of a personal engagement. And where the contract expressly provides that it shall not be transferred without the author's consent, and that, on failure to carry out its provisions, the copyright shall revert to the author, such copyright cannot be sold by a trustee in bankruptcy as an asset of the publisher's estate, against the objection of the author, but the latter is entitled, on petition therefor, to have the copyright assigned to him by the trustee in accordance with the contract.[176]

§ 335. Trade Marks and Trade Names.—A trade mark or trade name, consisting of a man's individual name prefixed to the title of the article he manufactures, is not property which will vest in his trustee in bankruptcy,[177] because in the case of personal trade marks of this kind, the use of them by any other person than the one with whom they are connected would be a fraud upon the public. But the right to use trade marks, in connection with a manufacturing or mercantile business, which are not personal in their character, but are descriptive titles or fanciful appellations, or which merely designate the place or establishment at which the goods are made, or the process employed, will pass to and vest in an assignee in insolvency of the owner,[178] and therefore, by analogy, in a trustee in bankruptcy, especially since the statute itself speaks of trade marks as among the kinds of property so vesting.

§ 336. Franchises and Licenses.—A franchise, whether held by an individual or a corporation, may constitute property in such sense as to vest in the trustee in bankruptcy, and be salable by him for the benefit of the estate, provided it does not involve a personal trust or duty, but

[175] In re Howley-Dresser Co., 132 Fed. 1002, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94.

[176] In re D. H. McBride & Co., 132 Fed. 285, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

[177] Helmbold v. Helmbold Mfg. Co., 53 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 453; Mattingly v. Stone (Ky.) 14 S. W. 47.

[178] Warren v. Warren Thread Co., 134 Mass. 247; Bradley v. Norton, 33 Conn. 157, 87 Am. Dec. 200.

the service to be rendered in exchange for the franchise can presumably be as well performed by any purchaser of it as by the original holder.[179] The rule is substantially the same as to licenses. Thus a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors issued by the authorities of a state or municipality or by a court, and which may be transferred on written application of the holder and subject to the approval of such authorities, which approval is ordinarily granted, and which for the purpose of sale and transfer has a recognized and actual money value, conditioned upon the acceptance of the transferee by the authorities, is property of the licensee, which is available as assets of his estate in bankruptcy, and he may be required by the court of bankruptcy to sign the necessary application for a transfer or to execute whatever other instrument in the nature of a transfer may be necessary to enable his trustee to convert it into money.[180] Such is also the rule in regard to a license to occupy a particular stall in a city market. Though it may be revocable at the pleasure of the city authorities, and cannot be assigned to another person without their written permission, yet if it has an ascertainable market value as an article of sale and can be transferred without any practical difficulty, it is an asset in the hands of the holder's trustee in bankruptcy, and such holder may be required to take such steps as are necessary and usual to effect a transfer.[181]

§ 337. Membership in Stock Exchange.—It is now well settled that a membership in a stock exchange or other similar body is an asset of the member which will pass to and vest in his trustee in bankruptcy, provided that it has an actual and substantial money value for purposes of sale and can be transferred to a purchaser without practical difficulty; and this, notwithstanding the fact that the transfer of a membership may be restricted by the rules of the exchange,—as where the membership is limited and the purchaser of a seat must pass the scru-

[179] See, supra, § 147, particularly as to corporate franchises. And see People v. Duncan, 41 Cal. 507; Stewart v. Hargrove, 23 Ala. 429.

[180] Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re Wiesel, 173 Fed. 718, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; In re Brodbine, 93 Fed. 643, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Becker, 98 Fed. 407, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Fisher, 98 Fed. 89, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406. Compare E. S. Bonnie & Co. v. Perry's Trustee, 117 Ky. 459, 78 S. W. 208; In re John F. Doyle & Son, 209 Fed. 1, 126 C. C. A. 143, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571; In re Beahn (D. C.) 212 Fed. 762, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375; In re Benz, 218 Fed. 50, 134 C. C. A. 26, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363.

[181] In re Gallagher, 16 Blatchf. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 5,192; In re Emrich, 101 Fed. 231, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89. But see Day v. Luna Park Co., 174 Ill. App. 477, holding that where a contract by an amusement park company granting a license to a concessionaire to conduct a bar provides that it must not be assigned or transferred without the consent of the company, on the concessionaire becoming bankrupt, the license does not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.

tiny of a committee and be elected by ballot,—and notwithstanding the rules provide that the proceeds of a member's seat shall first be applied in liquidation of any indebtedness of his to the exchange itself or to other members of it; and if the rules or customs of the exchange require the execution of an assignment or other transfer by the bankrupt member, in order to make an effectual transfer of the seat to a purchaser from the trustee, he may be compelled by the court of bankruptcy to execute such assignment.[182] At least, such an order may be made by the court of bankruptcy at any time before the bankrupt has obtained his discharge. After that, he is no longer subject to the summary jurisdiction of the court, though perhaps the trustee could gain control of the seat, for the purpose of selling it, by means of a bill in equity.[183] But the trustee must move with reasonable promptness after acquiring knowledge of the bankrupt's membership in the exchange, and cannot indefinitely postpone action while waiting for the seat to increase in value or for the bankrupt to clear it from preferred debts. If he takes this course, it will be held an abandonment of the seat to the bankrupt or an election not to assume it and administer it.[184] It should be observed that it is perfectly competent for a stock exchange to provide by rule that, upon the insolvency of a member, the proceeds of a sale of his seat shall first be applied to his indebtedness to the exchange and then to debts due from him to fellow members, to the exclusion of outside creditors. And such a rule will be recognized as valid in the bankruptcy proceedings. So that, when the trustee in bankruptcy sells the seat, he will be entitled, as the representative of the general creditors, only to such surplus of the purchase price as may remain after satisfying the preferred debts mentioned.[185]

[182] Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, 23 Sup. Ct. 200, 47 L. Ed. 318, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277; Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 34 L. Ed. 915; Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523, 24 L. Ed. 265; O'Dell v. Boyden, 150 Fed. 731, 80 C. C. A. 397, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; Board of Trade of City of Chicago v. Weston, 243 Fed. 332, 156 C. C. A. 112, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263; In re Stringer, 253 Fed. 352, 165 C. C. A. 134, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510; In re Hurlbutt, Hatch & Co., 135 Fed. 504, 68 C. C. A. 216, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Page, 107 Fed. 89, 46 C. C. A. 160, 59 L. R. A. 94, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; In re Gaylord, 111 Fed. 717, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195; In re Page, 102 Fed. 746, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467; In re Werder, 15 Fed. 789; In re Ketchum, 1 Fed. 840; Wrede v. Clark, 132 App. Div. 293, 117 N. Y. Supp. 5; Platt v. Jones, 96 N. Y. 24; Powell v. Waldron, 89 N. Y. 328, 42 Am. Rep. 301; Ritterband v. Baggett, 4 Abb. New Cas. (N. Y.) 67; McCabe v. Emmons, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 219; Londheim v. White, 67 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 467; Grocers' Bank v. Murphy, 60 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 426; Eliot v. Merchants' Exchange, 14 Mo. App. 234; Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 351, 20 Pac. 874, 5 L. R. A. 713, 12 Am. St. Rep. 63; Clute v. Loveland, 68 Cal. 254, 9 Pac. 133. Contra, In re Sutherland, 6 Biss. 526, Fed. Cas. No. 13,637; Barclay v. Smith, 107 Ill. 349, 47 Am. Rep. 437; Weaver v. Fisher, 110 Ill. 146; Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55; Pancoast v. Gowen, 93 Pa. St. 66.

[183] In re Nichols, 1 Fed. 842; Platt v. Jones, 96 N. Y. 24; Powell v. Waldron, 89 N. Y. 328, 42 Am. Rep. 301.

[184] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 34 L. Ed. 915.

§ 338. Executory Contracts.—As a general rule, the interests and rights of the bankrupt under contracts are transferred to the trustee; and whatever these rights may be, the trustee can claim and enforce them. It is not the purpose of the bankruptcy law to interfere with or avoid contracts made by the bankrupt with other parties or prevent their execution.[186] If the trustee so elects, he can require the performance of an executory contract made with the bankrupt by another party, under which benefit will accrue to the estate in bankruptcy, or recover damages for the breach of it, and his action cannot be defeated on the theory that the adjudication in bankruptcy (even though founded on a voluntary petition) was an anticipatory breach on the part of the bankrupt; for while voluntary bankruptcy is an anticipatory breach of a contract so far as concerns the establishment of a provable claim against the bankrupt, it is not such a breach, when it concerns the trustee's right to enforce the contract.[187] But when the trustee in bankruptcy, by order of the referee or the court, elects to ratify, confirm, and adopt an executory contract of the bankrupt, he thereby assumes the liabilities of the bankrupt, and takes the contract in same plight in which the bankrupt held it.[188]

It is not, however, invariably true that the bankrupt's unfinished contracts vest as property in his trustee. For contracts which cannot be made available for the payment of the debts do not pass to the trustee,[189] nor those which would be onerous or unprofitable, or more of a burden than a benefit to the estate,[190] nor those which depend upon the future personal services of the bankrupt, where his special knowledge or skill or adaptability to the employment, or special trust and confidence reposed in him, constitute an essential part of the contract, so that it

185 Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, 23 Sup. Ct. 200, 47 L. Ed. 318, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277; Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523, 24 L. Ed. 266; In re Currie, 185 Fed. 263, 107 C. C. A. 369, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; In re Gregory, 174 Fed. 629, 98 C. C. A. 383, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; Cohen v. Budd, 52 Misc. Rep. 217, 103 N. Y. Supp. 45; Solinsky v. New York Stock Exchange (D. C.) 260 Fed. 266, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

186 Foster v. Hackley, 2 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 4,971.

187 Planters' Oil Co. v. Gresham (Tex. Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 145.

188 Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 391, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265. Concerning the ownership of property or material furnished or prepared for use in connection with the execution of a building or construction contract, the contract being interrupted before completion by the bankruptcy of the contractor, see Wilds v. Board of Education of City of New York, 227 N. Y. 211, 125 N. E. 89; In re Schilling (D. C.) 258 Fed. 489, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49.

189 Streeter v. Sumner, 31 N. H. 542.

190 Supra, § 320. And see Streeter v. Sumner, 31 N. H. 542.

could not be performed by a third person to the equal satisfaction of the employer.[191] But the fact that a contract of the latter kind is not assignable as a whole, does not necessarily prevent the assignability of rights arising out of it, as, for compensation already earned,[192] provided that compensation is apportionable, and not dependent upon the future completion of the entire contract.[193] Thus the complainant in a creditor's bill (and the same would be true of a trustee in bankruptcy) cannot reach the salary or compensation which is to become due to the defendant, as a public officer, at a future time, for the performance of services which had been partially rendered but not completed at the time of the filing of the bill, where the defendant himself would have no legal or equitable right to demand payment for the services already performed (that is, any compensation at all) in case he should thereafter neglect to complete the services which had not been rendered at the time the bill was filed.[194] But aside from such cases as these, it does not stand in the way of the trustee's recovery that the bankrupt's compensation for services rendered was to be contingent, provided the event on which it depended happens during the administration of the estate, as, for instance, where the bankrupt had rendered certain services for a third person, for which that person was to pay him a fixed sum in case he succeeded in a pending suit in chancery.[195] And where the bankrupt's interest in a contract is a right to share in the profits resulting from it, his interest will pass to and vest in his trustee in bankruptcy,[196] in so far as profits have already accrued, or the bankrupt's right to share in future profits has become fixed, at the time of the bankruptcy. But not so as to a mere expectation of future profits growing out of the bankrupt's right to a continuous performance of the contract. Thus, an interest in the business of another, which the bankrupt conducts in his own name, receiving half the profits as compensation, is not property which will pass to his trustee. "The right to his share of the net profits was not property, any more than the right of a clerk, who has a stated salary, to continue to receive such salary is property."[197]

§ 339. Good-Will of a Business.—It is well settled that the good-will of a business may have a property value and form the subject-

191 Streeter v. Sumner, 31 N. H. 542.

192 In re Wright (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 544, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; Buckingham v. Buckingham, 36 Ohio St. 68.

193 In re Jones, 4 N. B. R. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 7,448.

194 Browning v. Bettis, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 568; Grow v. His Creditors, 31 Cal. 329.

195 Burton v. Lockert, 9 Ark. 411.

196 Sherman v. International Bank, 8 Biss. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 12,765; Fraser v. Gates, 118 Ill. 99, 1 N. E. 817.

197 In re Beardsley, 1 N. B. R. 457, Fed. Cas. No. 1,184. And see Rhoades v. Blackiston, 106 Mass. 334, 8 Am. Rep. 332.

matter of a contract and sale,[198] and an administrator may be surcharged with the value of the good-will of his decedent's business, where it had a market value which he failed to realize,[199] and the good-will of a partnership business is assets of the firm, if it has any selling value, and cannot be appropriated by one partner on the dissolution of the firm, but must be sold for the benefit of the firm.[200] From these considerations we should conclude that, if the bankrupt was carrying on a business of such a nature that it might have a good-will attached to it, the trustee will be entitled to claim whatever benefit may accrue therefrom, and that it is the duty of the trustee to ascertain if the good-will has any market value, and, if so, to realize it for the benefit of the estate. It is expressly so held by the decisions rendered in England under the bankruptcy law of that country,[201] and was so ruled under the act of Congress of 1867 relating to bankruptcy.[202] Also it appears that the value of the good-will should be taken into account, as an asset of an alleged bankrupt, in determining the question of his solvency or insolvency.[203] But a good-will which rests only on the voluntary and unconstrained forbearance of those who are engaged in a particular trade, whereby they refrain from inaugurating an enterprise which would rival that already set on foot by another, though they are under no legal obligation so to refrain, is not property in any sense known to the law.[204] Hence it becomes important to inquire whether the sale of the good-will of the bankrupt's business by the trustee would in any way estop or prevent the bankrupt from subsequently re-engaging in the same business and soliciting the custom of those who had formerly been in the habit of resorting to his establishment. So far as the authorities go, they seem to answer this question in the negative. It is true that the bankrupt might bind himself by a covenant not to set up competition against the purchaser, but the court could not require him to enter into such a covenant. However, if he is guilty of fraudulent conduct in representing his new business to be a continuation of his old trade, or if he has so acted as to induce the purchaser to believe that he 198 Hathaway v. Bennett, 10 N. Y. 108, 61 Am. Dec. 739; Morse v. Hutchins, 102 Mass. 439; Fay's Adm'r v. Fay (N. J. Eq.) 6 Atl. 12; Cruess v. Fessler, 39 Cal. 336; Herfort v. Cramer, 7 Colo. 483, 4 Pac. 896; Carey v. Gunnison, 65 Iowa, 702, 17 N. W. 934.

199 Wiley's Appeal, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 244.

200 Bradbury v. Dickens, 27 Beav. 53; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 22 Beav. 84; Wallingford v. Burr, 17 Neb. 137, 22 N. W. 350; Sheppard v. Boggs, 9 Neb. 257, 2 N. W. 370.

201 Hudson v. Osborne, 39 Law Jour. Ch. (N. S.) 79; English Bankruptcy Act, 1883, § 56.

202 In re Long, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 578, Fed. Cas. No. 8,477.

203 Bell v. Ellis, 33 Cal. 620. But compare In re Glickman, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 58.

204 Sheldon v. Houghton, 5 Blatchf. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 12,748.

would not trade again, the purchaser may have a remedy, but outside of the bankruptcy proceedings.[205]

§ 340. Debts Due to Bankrupt.—Upon an adjudication in bankruptcy, all debts and claims due to the bankrupt pass to his trustee, and the latter thereafter is alone entitled to collect and receive payment of the same,[206] and payment of a debt directly to the bankrupt, made after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, though made in good faith, and even in the usual course of business, and without any other notice than such constructive notice as the filing of a bankruptcy petition is supposed to impart to all concerned, is not effectual to discharge the debt, and is no protection against a suit for its recovery subsequently brought by the trustee in bankruptcy.[207] And for stronger reasons, a payment made in bad faith, or with knowledge of the pending proceeding, and with the purpose of evading or defeating the operation of the bankruptcy act in any way, is void as against the trustee.[208] If the trustee dies or becomes bankrupt, however, the right to receive payment of outstanding debts due to the estate in his charge does not vest in his personal representatives or trustee, but passes to a new trustee to be appointed in the original bankruptcy.[209]

These general rules apply to all manner of claims and demands in favor of the bankrupt, as, for example, to money due for the price of goods manufactured and sold by the bankrupt,[210] to money borrowed from him after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication,[211] a judgment rendered in the bankrupt's favor before the adjudication,[212]

[205] Robson, Bankruptcy (6th edn.) 620, citing Walker v. Mottram, 19 Ch. Div. 355. And see James Van Dyk Co. v. F. V. Reilly Co., 73 Misc. Rep. 87, 130 N. Y. Supp. 755.

[206] Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328, 24 L. Ed. 818; Stow v. Yarwood, 20 Ill. 497; Rogers v. Union Stone Co., 134 Mass. 31; Ex parte Goodwin, 1 Atk. Ch. 100. See In re Smyth, 167 Fed. 871, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 853; First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title & Trust Co., 178 Fed. 187, 101 C. C. A. 507, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; In re Tanory (D. C.) 270 Fed. 872, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

[207] Mays v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank 64 Pa. St. 74, 4 N. B. R. 660, 3 Am. Rep. 573; Stevens v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 101 Mass. 109, 3 Am. Rep. 325; Howard v. Crompton, 14 Blatchy. 328, Fed. Cas. No. 6,758; In re Hayden, 7 N. B. R. 192, Fed. Cas. No. 6,257; Ex parte Goodwin, 1 Atk. Ch. 100. But see In re Zotti, 186 Fed. 84, 108 C. C. A. 196, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234; Galvin v. Boyd, Fed. Cas. No. 5,208; Mersfelder v. Peters Cartridge Co., 32 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 187.

[208] Babbitt v. Burgess, 2 Dill. 169, 7 N. B. R. 561, Fed. Cas. No. 693. Where a creditor, without authority, obtains possession of funds belonging to the debtor, such unauthorized possession does not, on the subsequent bankruptcy of the debtor, entitle the creditor to apply the money to the payment of his own claim to the prejudice of other creditors. Emerson v. Fisher, 246 Fed. 642, 158 C. C. A. 598, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112.

[209] In re Merrick, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 9.

[210] Sweet v. Oregon-Washington Lumber & Mfg. Co., 98 Wash. 91, 167 Pac. 82.

[211] Crompton v. Conkling, 9 Ben. 225, Fed. Cas. No. 3,407.

[212] First Nat. Bank v. Cook, 154 U. S. 628, 14 Sup. Ct. 481, 24 L. Ed. 916; Brown v. Wygant, 21 D. C. 16; Hale v.

or a claim against a sheriff for failing to make the money on an execution issued on such a judgment,[213] also to rent due and accrued for premises owned by the bankrupt,[214] and the amount due to him from another estate in bankruptcy,[215] or from the estate of a decedent in process of administration in a probate court,[216] a claim under a policy of fire insurance for the loss by fire of property of the bankrupt covered by such policy,[217] a claim against a city for damages to the bankrupt's real property occasioned by a change in the grade of a street, where the property was injured but not taken,[218] or money received by the administrator of a bankrupt who dies after the adjudication and pending the proceedings.[219] In one case, it appeared that the bankrupt was managing agent for a life insurance company, under a contract having several years to run, which entitled him to an interest in renewal premiums on policies previously written, when collected, so long as the contract was in force, but subject to the right of the company to terminate such interest if dissatisfied or if the bankrupt failed to comply with the contract. In case of his death, his widow or estate was entitled to receive such interest for five years, subject to a fee for collection. It was held that this interest was property which the bankrupt could have transferred, and which therefore vested in his trustee in bankruptcy.[220] But an agreement between a debtor and his surety that property held in trust by the surety as indemnity shall be applied to the payment of the debt, does not constitute a demand against the surety which will pass to the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor, as it is not a money demand, Christy, 24 Neb. 746, 40 N. W. 295; Simmons v. Heman, 17 Mo. App. 444; Moore v. Jones, 23 Vt. 739, Fed. Cas. No. 9,768. But see (as to effect of pending appeal and right of trustee to intervene) Althause v. Giroux Consol. Mines Co., 150 App. Div. 580, 135 N. Y. Supp. 500. Where a divorced wife is adjudged bankrupt, arrears of alimony due her at the time of the adjudication pass to her trustee, but not so as to alimony accruing after the beginning of the bankruptcy proceedings. Bolton v. Bolton, 86 N. J. Law, 69, 89 Atl. 1014.

[213] Gary v. Bates, 12 Ala. 544.

[214] Flanders v. Coleman (D. C.) 249 Fed. 757, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727. Brock v. Weiss, 44 N. J. Law, 241. So a covenant by a landlord to return the deposit made by the tenant as security to carry out the lease is collateral and personal and does not pass to the tenant's assignee as against his trustee in bankruptcy. Sanford v. Zimmern, 76 Misc. Rep. 434, 134 N. Y. Supp. 1116. And see Alvord v. Banfield, 85 Or. 49, 166 Pac. 549.

[215] In re Ellis, 5 Ben. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 4,399.

[216] Collier v. Hunter, 27 Ark. 74.

[217] Walton Land & Timber Co. v. Runyan (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 130, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248; Home Ins. Co. v. Hollis, 53 Ga. 659, 14 N. B. R. 337. In re Luber (D. C.) 261 Fed. 221, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292. But a trustee whose bankrupt had mortgaged chattels is not entitled to the proceeds of a fire policy on such chattels taken out by the mortgagee, on the theory that, the mortgage being invalid, the mortgagee had no insurable interest. In re Stucky Trucking & Rigging Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 427.

[218] In re Torchia, 185 Fed. 576, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188.

[219] In re Matschke, 193 Fed. 284, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770.

[220] In re Wright (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 544, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

but merely a right to require performance of an obligation or duty.[221] So, where the payee of a note or duebill sells it before his bankruptcy, the purchaser takes title as against the seller's trustee, though the indorsement is made after the bankruptcy.[222] In this connection it should be noted that it is not permissible for the bankrupt so to deal with any debt or claim due to him as to make it available only for his personal benefit and take it out of the reach of his creditors. Thus, if he holds a promissory note, an agreement on his part to accept payment of it in labor or care of himself or in his own support, made without any new consideration, will not be valid as against his general creditors where the contract was not fulfilled before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings.[223]

§ 341. Same; Claims Against Government.—A claim for damages against the United States government will pass to and vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the claimant,[224] even before Congress has made any provision for the payment of such claims, and even though the claim is only a right to share in the distribution of a fund received by the United States from a foreign government to be apportioned as compensation among its own injured citizens (as was the case with the Geneva award under the Alabama Claims Commission), though both the accrual of the claim and the bankruptcy of the claimant preceded the making of the treaty under which such fund eventually became available.[225] But this is not the case where the claim is not of such a nature that it would be legally enforceable against a private individual, and where its recognition and payment are wholly optional with Congress and depend rather upon the clemency or generosity of that body than upon any moral obligation.[226] And so, a mere expectation of receiving a reward from the Treasury department for furnishing information concerning smugglers, which has been applied for by the informer but not yet passed upon by the Secretary of the Treasury, whose action in the matter is discretionary, is not property of such a nature as to vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the claimant.[227] An act of Congress (Rev. Stat. § 3477, U. S. Comp.

221 White v. Crew, 16 Ga. 416.

222 Smoot v. Morehouse, 8 Ala. 370, 42 Am. Dec. 644; Hersey v. Elliot, 67 Me. 526, 24 Am. Rep. 50.

223 In re Powers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 135.

224 Erwin v. United States, 97 U. S. 392, 24 L. Ed. 1065; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 25 L. Ed. 478; Phelps v. McDonald, 2 MacArthur (D. C.) 375, 16 N. B. R. 217; Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. 193, 7 L. Ed. 108.

225 Williams v. Heard, 140 U. S. 529, 11 Sup. Ct. 885, 35 L. Ed. 550; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 25 L. Ed. 478; Erwin v. United States, 13 Ct. Cl. 49; Leonard v. Nye, 125 Mass. 455; Williamson v. Colcord, 1 Hask, 620, 13 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 17,752.

226 Dockery v. United States, 26 Ct. Cl. 148.

227 In re Ghazal, 174 Fed. 809, 98 C. C. A. 517, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; s. c., 163 Fed. 602, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807.

Stat. 1901, p. 2320) expressly forbids the assignment of a claim against the United States for money due under a contract, unless executed with the formalities therein prescribed, and unless the claim has been previously allowed and a warrant issued for its payment. And consequently an assignment of such a claim, not yet allowed, can have no force or validity as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the claimant, and he takes it as assets of the estate, free from any rights or interests on the part of the assignee.[228]

§ 342. Rights of Action.—The bankruptcy statute expressly vests in the trustee of a bankrupt "rights of action arising upon contracts or from the unlawful taking or detention of, or injury to, his property," [229] and it is probable that various choses in action, not precisely within this limited description, will pass to the trustee under the broader clause (in the same section of the act) which invests him with title to property which the bankrupt "could by any means have transferred." Thus the trustee becomes entitled to claim, and to enforce for the benefit of the estate in his charge, a promissory note of a third person belonging to the bankrupt at the time of the filing of the petition,[230] a claim of the bankrupt against a third person for goods sold to the latter, to the extent of their value, where no price was fixed at the time of the sale,[231] a claim against an insolvent estate pending in the probate court,[232] or the right to contest the account of the administrator of the bankrupt's ancestor.[233] Also the trustee takes a right of action for land in dispute

[228] National Bank of Commerce v. Downie, 218 U. S. 345, 31 Sup. Ct. 89, 54 L. Ed. 1065, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199, affirming 161 Fed. 839, 88 C. C. A. 657, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; Guarantee Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank. 185 Fed. 373, 107 C. C. A. 429, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85.

[229] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a. All rights of action arising out of contracts, belonging to the bankrupt, vest in his trustee. Tucker v. Western Union Tel. Co., 94 Misc. Rep. 364, 157 N. Y. Supp. 873. Where a buyer of goods has a claim for damages against the seller for the latter's failure to deliver, such claim passes to the buyer's trustee in bankruptcy. Tennison v. Hanson, 136 Ark. 266, 206 S. W. 438; Hibernian Banking Ass'n v. Bell & Zoller Coal Co., 181 Ill. App. 581. This is also true of a claim arising out of the embezzlement or misappropriation of the bankrupt's money. Millard v. Green, 94 Conn. 597, 110 Atl. 177, 9 A. L. R. 1610. And a claim transferred by a bankrupt as a credit on a pre-existing indebtedness, on the day on which he filed his petition in bankruptcy, may be sold by the trustee, although the transfer was only voidable and not void. Keller v. Faickney, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 483, 94 S. W. 103. See In re Thomas (D. C.) 199 Fed. 214, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945. But a wife's trustee in bankruptcy is not entitled to recover from the husband the amount expended by the wife for the support of herself and her children during the husband's abandonment of his family, when not representing creditors supplying necessities on the husband's credit. McCabe v. Guido, 116 Miss. 858, 77 South. 801.

[230] In re Duncan (D. C.) 148 Fed. 464, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 283.

[231] Leist v. Dierssen, 4 Cal. App. 634, 88 Pac. 812.

[232] Miller v. Parker, 47 Ala. 312.

[233] In re Clute, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 386.

and held in adverse possession by a third person,[234] and may maintain an action to set aside the cancellation of a real-estate mortgage which was fraudulently procured from the bankrupt.[235] He is likewise vested with the right of action on a policy of fire insurance, for the destruction of insured property of the bankrupt by fire, occurring after the adjudication but before the appointment of the trustee,[236] and with the right of action against a sheriff for failing to make the money on an execution, or for selling the property on credit and failing to collect the amount of the bid.[237] So also, the bankrupt's right to file a notice of and to enforce a mechanic's lien passes to his trustee.[238] And the trustee of a bankrupt corporation is entitled to sue for and collect unpaid subscriptions to the stock,[239] though a statutory liability imposed upon persons who organize and transact business in the name of a corporation before its minimum capital stock has been subscribed is not an asset of the corporation, and hence the right to enforce such liability does not pass to its trustee in bankruptcy.[240] A personal claim which there is no legal power to enforce, but on which an award is made by arbitrators, does not pass to a trustee in bankruptcy;[241] and a claim of a wife for alimony is not a property right, and property awarded to her as alimony after her adjudication in bankruptcy does not become a part of her estate.[242] It should also be observed that a trustee in bankruptcy succeeds to the bankrupt's title to choses in action, subject to any defense or counterclaim to which they would have been liable in the hands of the bankrupt.[243] Hence, for example, where property of the bankrupt covered by insurance has been destroyed by fire, but he has lost his right to sue on the policy by failing to render a statement forthwith, as required by the policy, his trustee in bankruptcy cannot sue on it.[244] So a trustee in bankruptcy has no greater rights on a note payable to the bankrupt, the signer of which added to his signature words indicating that he signed it as the treasurer of a corporation, than the bankrupt

234 Pope v. Davenport, 52 Tex. 206.

235 Alexander v. Berney, 28 N. J. Eq. 90.

236 Fuller v. New York Fire Ins. Co., 184 Mass. 12, 67 N. E. 879.

237 Sullivan v. Bridge, 1 Mass. 511; In re Geiser, 129 Fed. 237, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 208.

238 Held v. Burke, 83 App. Div. 509, 82 N. Y. Supp. 426.

239 Foote v Greilick, 166 Mich. 636, 132 N W. 473; Lane v. Nickerson, 99 Ill. 284, Benner v. Billings, 107 Wash. 1, 181 Pac. 19. See McKay v. Garman, 89 Wash. 23, 153 Pac. 1082. On the general subject, see, supra, § 148.

240 John V. Farwell Co. v. Jackson Stores, 137 Ga. 174, 73 S. E. 13. And see, supra, § 149. See also Breck v. Brewster, 153 App. Div. 800, 138 N. Y. Supp. 821.

241 Tallman v. Tallman, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 325.

242 In re Le Claire, 124 Fed. 654, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

243 Nebraska Moline Plow Co. v. Blackburn, 74 Neb. 246, 104 N. W. 178.

244 Bennett v. Ætna Ins. Co., 201 Mass. 554, 88 N. E. 335, 131 Am. St. Rep. 414.

himself had.[245] And the trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation stands in no better position to attack an arrangement between the corporation's selling agent and a purchaser, whereby the agent was to pay his debt to the purchaser by paying part of the purchase price, which was ratified by the corporation, than would the bankrupt company.[246] In the bankruptcy of corporations, the same rules generally prevail. Thus, the trustee in bankruptcy of a trading corporation succeeds to any right which it might have to sue the directors for loss resulting from a breach of their duty.[247]

§ 343. Same; For Personal Injuries and Other Torts.—In respect to rights of action on torts, it is necessary to distinguish carefully between those which occasion injury to the person and those which occasion injury to property. Those of the latter class vest in the trustee in bankruptcy; those of the former class do not. Thus, if the bankrupt has an unliquidated claim for damages against a common carrier or other person, for negligence or wrongful act which caused injury to his person, it does not vest in his trustee in bankruptcy and the latter has no interest in it.[248] But a similar claim for the value of property of the bankrupt, lost or damaged in consequence of the negligence or wrongful act of a carrier or other person, is an asset of his estate and passes to the trustee.[249] On the same principle, the trustee cannot lay claim to a right of action for damages growing out of an assault and battery upon the bankrupt,[250] or for slander or libel against him,[251] or for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment.[252] But if the bankrupt's claim for damages for any purely personal tort has already been reduced to judgment before his bankruptcy, it would seem clear that the judgment will vest in the trustee, for the tort is merged in the judgment, and the latter is property which the bankrupt "could have transferred," within the meaning of the statute.

245 Jump v. Sparling, 218 Mass. 324, 105 N. E. 878.

246 Grollman v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 181 Ill. App. 598.

247 McEwen v. Kelly, 140 Ga. 720, 79 S. E. 777. See Emerson v. Fisher, 246 Fed. 642, 158 C. C. A. 598, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112.

248 Sibley v. Nason, 196 Mass. 125, 81 N. E. 887, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1173, 124 Am. St. Rep. 520. 12 Ann. Cas. 938; Hanson v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 128 S. W. 1147; Rand v. Fleishman, 6 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 497; Dillard v. Collins, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 343; Stone v. Boston & M. R. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 539; Beechwood v. Joplin-Pittsburg Ry. Co. 173 Mo. App. 371, 158 S. W. 868.

249 Borden v. Bradshaw, 68 Ala. 362. The right to recover for injuries to the estate of a bankrupt, resulting from the wrongful appointment of a receiver, vests in the trustee when he is appointed. In re Veler, 249 Fed. 633, 161 C. C. A. 543, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

250 Hudson v. Plets, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 180.

251 Dillard v. Collins, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 343; Irion v. Knapp, 132 La. 60, 60 South. 719, 43 L. R. A. (N. S.) 940.

252 In re Haensell, 91 Fed. 355, 1 Am.

On the other hand, malicious attachment is an injury to property, and not to the person, and therefore the right of action will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy.[253] And so, a cause of action against an attorney at law, who had been employed to examine and pass upon the title to realty which the plaintiff intended to purchase, for certifying to him as good a title which was really defective, is nominally a cause of action for breach of contract, but in substance an action of tort; yet as the tort involved is an injury to the property of the plaintiff, rather than his person, it will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[254] So also, the modern decisions hold that a right of action for deceit, based on false and fraudulent representations, whereby the plaintiff was induced to sign a contract, enter into a partnership, buy property at an excessive price, or extend credit to a third person, to his pecuniary loss, is a "right of action arising from an injury to his property," within the meaning of the statute, and therefore passes to the trustee.[255] And for a similar reason, a right of action for damages, given by a state statute to any person injured by the operation of any "trust," (as, for instance, for a conspiracy whereby the plaintiff was driven out of business), is held to be for an injury to business, employment, or property, and therefore such as will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy.[256] So also of a right to sue for money lost in gambling, given by statute to the loser.[257] And under the statutes giving a right of action for the wrongful killing of a human being, the recovery to be for the benefit of the next of kin, it has been held that where a father is entitled to the entire amount to be recovered for the wrongful killing of his son, his right thereto constitutes an asset of his estate in bankruptcy.[258] So again, where profits of the business of a corporation are wrongfully appropriated to his own use by an officer of the company, under the guise of a salary, the trustee in bankruptcy of the corporation may recover the same.[259]

Bankr. Rep. 286; Noonan v. Orton, 34 Wis. 259, 17 Am. Rep. 441, 12 N. B. R. 405; Stanly v. Duhurst, 2 Root (Conn.) 52.

[253] Hansen Mercantile Co. v. Wyman, Partridge & Co., 105 Minn. 491, 117 N. W. 926, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 727.

[254] Knights v. Quarles, 4 Moore, 532.

[255] In re Gay, 182 Fed. 260, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; In re Harper, 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918; Hyde v. Tuffts, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 56. Earlier decisions, under the act of 1867, were to the contrary. See Tufts v. Mathews, 10 Fed. 609; In re Crockett, 2 Ben. 514, 2 N. B. R. 208. Fed. Cas. No. 3,402; Leggate v. Moulton, 115 Mass. 552.

[256] Cleland v. Anderson, 66 Neb. 252, 92 N. W. 306, 96 N. W. 212, 98 N. W. 1075, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 136; Id., 75 Neb. 273, 105 N. W. 1092, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 136. But compare Bonvillain v. American Sugar Refining Co. (D. C.) 250 Fed. 641, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[257] Brandon v. Sands, 2 Ves. Jr. 514.

[258] In re Burnstine, 131 Fed. 828, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

[259] Fillebrown v. Haywood, 190 Mass. 472, 77 N. E. 45. But salaries, not unreasonable in amount, voted and paid by the directors of a corporation, who

§ 344. Same; For Usury.—A right of action under a state statute to recover back usurious interest paid (or double the amount of it, or a penalty for exacting it, as the case may be) will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the borrower, since the injury done by the usurer is an injury to the property or estate of the borrower and not a personal tort.[260] The rule is the same under the national banking law. The right of action against a national bank, to recover twice the amount of usurious interest paid to it, under the act of Congress in that behalf (Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5198), will pass to and vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the borrower, who is the "legal representative" of the borrower, within the meaning of that statute, for although the action thereon is one to recover a penalty, yet it is distinguishable from causes of action for damages growing out of mere personal torts.[261]

§ 345. Legacies and Inheritances.—Property coming to a bankrupt as his distributive share of the estate of one dying intestate, or as a legacy or devise, will pass to and vest in his trustee in bankruptcy,[262] though it may be as yet undetermined in respect to its extent,[263] or though it may consist of an undivided interest,[264] provided only that the bankrupt's right thereto became a fixed and vested interest by the death of the decedent prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. And where the death and the filing of the petition occurred on the same day, the fractions of that day will be inquired into for the purpose of fixing the status of the property, and if the filing of the petition was the later event, the trustee in bankruptcy may claim the inheritance.[265] Where the bankrupt's interest in a legacy is contingent, and becomes vested by the happening of the event or contingency after his adjudication in bankruptcy, it will then become available as an asset of his also owned a large majority of its stock, to certain officers of the corporation for past services, without objection by any stockholder or creditor, are not recoverable by the trustee on behalf of subsequent creditors, on the bankruptcy of the corporation more than ten years later. In re Franklin Brewing Co. (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 512, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7.

[260] Reed v. American-German Nat. Bank, 155 Fed. 233, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140; Lasater v. First Nat. Bank, 96 Tex. 345, 72 S. W. 1057; Whèelock v. Lee, 15 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 24, 10 N. B. R. 363; Moore v. Jones, 23 Vt. 739, Fed. Cas. No. 9,768. Contra, Lafountain v. Burlington Sav. Bank, 56 Vt. 332.

[261] Wright v. First Nat. Bank, 8 Biss. 243, 18 N. B. R. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 18,078; Markson v. First Nat. Bank, Fed. Cas. No. 9,907; Crocker v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Dill. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 3,397; Monongahela Bank v. Overholt, 96 Pa. St. 327. Contra, Barnett v. Muncie Nat. Bank, Fed. Cas. No. 1,026; Bromley v. Smith, 2 Biss. 511, 5 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 1,922.

[262] Watkins v. Bigelow, 93 Minn. 361, 101 N. W. 497; Ex parte Newhall, 2 Story, 360, Fed. Cas. No. 10,159; Dohner v. Dohner (Pa.) 1 Am. Law J. N. S. 78.

[263] In re Mosier, 112 Fed. 138, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268.

[264] In re Kane, 161 Fed. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

[265] In re Stoner, 105 Fed. 752, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 402; In re McKenna, 137 Fed. 611, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4.

estate,[266] Where the estate devised includes both real and personal property, the administrator of the decedent will have no right or interest in the real property as against the trustee in bankruptcy, though it may be that he would be entitled to possession of the personal property pending its administration.[267] But it is said that, if there are no local creditors to be protected, the probate court will be justified in turning over to a foreign trustee in bankruptcy of the heir or next of kin the bankrupt's share in the personal estate.[268]

§ 346. Property Held in Trust for Bankrupt.—When property is held in trust for the bankrupt under a mere passive trust, with no direction as to accumulation and no discretion in the trustee to devote the fund or the income to any person other than the bankrupt, it constitutes assets of the latter's estate and may be recovered by the trustee, who need not give notice to the holder of the trust in order to complete his title.[269] And this is true not only of express trusts but of such as are implied by law from the situation and dealings of the parties. Thus, a trustee in bankruptcy may enforce a resulting trust in land in favor of the bankrupt,[270] or a trust in the avails of personal property or choses in action.[271] And of course property which is in the possession of a third person, who holds it merely as the agent or bailee of the bankrupt, must be surrendered to the trustee in bankruptcy.[272] But it is otherwise when a trust created by will or deed confers upon the trustee an authority to choose or change the beneficiary or to decide upon the extent to which he shall benefit by the trust. "No case is cited, none is known to us, which goes so far as to hold that an absolute discretion in the trustee (under a will),—a discretion which by the express language of the will he is under no obligation to exercise in favor of the bankrupt,—confers such an interest on the latter that he or his 266 Churchman's Appeal (Pa.) 12 Atl. 600.

267 In re Kane, 161 Fed. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

268 In re Delehanty's Estate, 11 Ariz. 366, 95 Pac. 109, 21 Ann. Cas. 1038.

269 Whittredge v. Sweetser, 189 Mass. 45, 75 N. E. 222, affirmed in Hammond v. Whittredge, 204 U. S. 538, 27 Sup. Ct. 396, 51 L. Ed. 606; Wallace v. Everett (Ky.) 125 S. W. 745; Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 233 Fed. 861, 147 C. C. A. 535, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

270 In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41; Currie v. Look, 14 N. D. 482, 106 N. W. 131. The trustee of a bankrupt corporation is entitled to recover real estate held in the name of a person who, with his family owned all the stock of the corporation, on the ground that it was held in trust for the company, but he is not entitled to such person's homestead or other property in which the corporation's funds were not invested. Scott v. Cline, 257 Fed. 706, 168 C. C. A. 656, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8.

271 In re Perley, Fed. Cas. No. 10,992. Compare Butler v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 14 Ala. 777. Any property in which there is a secret trust for the bankrupt's benefit, no matter how much covered up, passes to the trustee. Ury v. Van Every, 181 Cal. 604, 188 Pac. 985.

272 In re Cole, 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; Lineker v. Ayeshford, 1 Cal. 75.

assignee in bankruptcy can successfully assert it in a court of equity or any other court." [273] But the fact that a fund in which the bankrupt had an interest was held in trust during the life of another by a trustee appointed by a state court will not deprive the court of bankruptcy of jurisdiction to administer such interest.[274]

§ 347. Same; Testamentary Trusts and Annuities.—Whether or not the provisions of a will create such a trust as will prevent a fund bequeathed from passing to the trustee in bankruptcy of the beneficiary or legatee, is to be determined by the law of the particular state.[275] But it may be stated as a general rule of law that, where property is devised to trustees, with directions to pay the income therefrom into the hands of a named beneficiary during his life, the latter has no such interest or estate either in the corpus of the property or in the income as will pass to and vest in his trustee in bankruptcy, as his rights or interests are not alienable by any sale or assignment on his part.[276] This is the ordinary case of a will making provision for a son, daughter, or other relative, by securing an income for life to the beneficiary, but at the same time placing the principal beyond his control, so that he may not squander it or make debts which would absorb it. This is unquestionably within the power of a testator, and as creditors of the beneficiary cannot defeat and annul the provisions of the will by the most searching process known to equity,—a creditors' bill,—neither can they do so through the instrumentality of the court of bankruptcy. So, where the income of a trust fund is directed to be applied to the support of a designated beneficiary and his wife and children, the trustee in bankruptcy of the beneficiary cannot claim such income, and the court cannot apportion the income, as between the bankrupt himself and his family, so as to give the trustee an aliquot share.[277] It is also entirely competent for a testator to direct that the income of the trust fund shall cease to be paid to the named beneficiary if he shall become bankrupt, and that it shall in that event be paid to his wife or children or to other specified

[273] Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, 23 L. Ed. 254. And see Kip v. Bank of New York, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 63; Frazier v. Barnum, 19 N. J. Eq. 316, 97 Am. Dec. 666.

[274] Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 233 Fed. 861, 147 C. C. A. 535, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[275] In re McKay, 143 Fed. 671, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238.

[276] Eaton v. Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 240 U. S. 427, 36 Sup. Ct. 391, 60 L. Ed. 723, Ann. Cas. 1918D, 90, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; In re McKay, 143 Fed. 671, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238; Spindle v. Shreve, 9 Biss. 199, 4 Fed. 136; In re Hoadley, 101 Fed. 233, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; Degraw v. Clason, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 136; Munroe v. Dewey (Mass.) 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 840; Brown v. Lumbert, 221 Mass. 419, 108 N. E. 1079; Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Luke, 220 Mass. 484, 108 N. E. 64, L. R. A. 1917A, 988.

[277] Durant v. Hospital Life Ins. Co., 2 Low. 575, 16 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 4,188. Compare Rugely v. Robinson, 10 Ala. 702.

beneficiaries. Such a provision is not contrary either to the general policy of the law or to that of the bankruptcy act in particular, and it leaves nothing for the trustee in bankruptcy to claim for the estate.[278] And for even stronger reasons, he has no claim upon a trust fund which the trustees were at liberty to apply to the benefit of the bankrupt, or not, in their discretion.[279]

But in some states (particularly New York) the law provides that where a trust is created by which the trustee is to receive and collect the income from property and apply it to the use and benefit of a named beneficiary during his life, the latter shall not take any legal estate or interest in the property, and can only enforce the trust in equity, and cannot transfer his rights, but that, if no valid direction for accumulation is given, the surplus of such income, beyond the sum necessary for the education and support of the beneficiary, shall be liable to the claims of his creditors in the same manner as other personal property which cannot be reached by execution. Under such statutory provisions, the federal courts have held that the surplus of an income so settled may be claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy of the beneficiary as assets of his estate.[280] But the highest court of New York has ruled otherwise, holding that such surplus can be reached only in the manner pointed out in the state statute, and that, since it could neither be "transferred" by the bankrupt nor "levied upon and sold under judicial process against him" (Bankruptcy Act, § 70a), it is not within the terms or meaning of the act.[281]

A somewhat different question is presented where a testator gives property to trustees for the benefit of a designated beneficiary, but with the direction that they shall hold it and the accumulations until the beneficiary reaches a certain age, later than the ordinary age of majority. Where this is the case, and the beneficiary is adjudged bankrupt before attaining the age mentioned in the will, it is held that his trustee in

[278] Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, 23 L. Ed. 254, affirming 3 Cliff. 595, Fed. Cas. No. 10,241.

[279] Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716, 23 L. Ed. 254.

[280] In re Tiffany, 133 Fed. 799, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; In re Reynolds (D. C.) 243 Fed. 268, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141; Forbes v. Snow (Mass.) 131 N. E. 299; In re Baudouine, 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55. See the latter case on appeal, 101 Fed. 574, 41 C. C. A. 318, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651, where, however, the decision was not on the merits, but on the question whether the trustee in bankruptcy must bring a plenary suit. See, also, Graff v. Bonnett, 31 N. Y. 9, 88 Am. Dec. 236; Brown v. Barker, 68 App. Div. 592, 74 N. Y. Supp. 43.

[281] Butler v. Baudouine, 177 N. Y. 530, 69 N. E. 1121. And see McNaboe v. Marks, 51 Misc. Rep. 207, 99 N. Y. Supp. 960; Cuthbert v. Chauvet, 136 N. Y. 326, 32 N. E. 1088, 18 L. R. A. 745; Wetmore v. Wetmore, 149 N. Y. 520, 44 N. E. 169, 33 L. R. A. 708, 52 Am. St. Rep. 752; Mills v. Husson, 140 N. Y. 99, 35 N. E. 422. Compare Jenks v. Title Guarantee & Trust Co., 170 App. Div. 830, 156 N. Y. Supp. 478.

bankruptcy is entitled to claim the fund from the testamentary trustees.[282] But a trust fund which is directed to be paid over to the testator's son only when he shall become financially solvent and able to pay all his just debts and liabilities from resources other than such fund does not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy, although after his discharge in bankruptcy it was paid over to the son.[283]

As to a testamentary annuity, created by a will which directs trustees to pay a fixed annual sum to a named beneficiary during his life, it is held that the right of the beneficiary is property which he could assign and which could be followed by his creditors, and therefore will vest in his trustee in bankruptcy, to be sold by the latter for its present value,[284] although it may not pass any estate or interest in the particular lands which are expected to furnish the income out of which the annuity shall be paid.[285] It is also ruled that where property is devised in trust, the income to be paid to a named person for life, and the principal, after his death, to his executor in trust for the use of such person as he may appoint by will, and the first taker executes the power, the property appropriated is deemed in equity part of his assets and subject to the demand of his creditors, in preference to the claims of his voluntary appointees or legatees, and hence it should be available as assets of his estate in bankruptcy.[286]

§ 348. Policies of Life Insurance.—The provision of the statute on this subject is that, if the bankrupt "shall have any insurance policy which has a cash surrender value payable to himself, his estate, or personal representatives, he may, within thirty days after the cash surrender value has been ascertained and stated to the trustee by the company issuing the same, pay or secure to the trustee the sum so ascertained and stated, and continue to hold, own, and carry such policy free from the claims of the creditors participating in the distribution of his estate under the bankruptcy proceedings, otherwise the policy shall pass to the trustee as assets."[287] Aside from the question of exemption, therefore, insurance policies having a surrender or disposable value are assets passing to the bankrupt's trustee.[288] This part of the statute is now

[282] Sanford v. Lackland, 2 Dill. 6, Fed. Cas. No. 12,312. And see Loomer v. Loomer, 76 Conn. 522, 57 Atl. 167.

[283] Hull v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 245 U. S. 312, 38 Sup. Ct. 103, 62 L. Ed. 312, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[284] In re Burtis, 188 Fed. 527, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680; Degraw v. Clason, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 136; Graves v. Dolphin, 1 Simons, 66; Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429.

[285] De Haven v. Sherman, 131 Ill. 115, 22 N. E. 711, 6 L. R. A. 745.

[286] Clapp v. Ingraham, 126 Mass. 200.

[287] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a, proviso.

[288] In re Phillips & Goldman, 192 Fed. 1020; In re Churchill, 198 Fed. 711, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Whelpley, 169 Fed. 1019, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Middlekamp, 67 Colo. 162, 185 Pac. 335. As to the rule read as excluding from the estate in bankruptcy all policies except such as may have a surrender value,[289] though it was formerly held that the language above quoted was not intended to define the class of insurance policies which should pass to the trustee in bankruptcy, and limit the same to such policies as had a cash surrender value, but merely to give to the bankrupt a privilege with respect to the redemption of such policies,[290] and that therefore, though the policy in question may have no surrender value in cash, yet if it has any actual value (such as an inchoate value, or a value for the purpose of being pledged as collateral, or a paid-up insurance value), the trustee may claim it as an asset of the estate, since it is property which the bankrupt himself could have transferred and is therefore within the broader clause of the statute.[291] But a policy which has no surrender value, and no cash value to the estate, and in fact no value for any purpose except the contingency of its becoming valuable at the death of the bankrupt in case the premiums are kept paid, does not constitute an asset of the estate in bankruptcy.[292]

The surrender value of a life insurance policy is the sum which the company will pay upon the surrender of the policy and its cancellation, in Mississippi, see In re Brinson (D. C.) 262 Fed. 707, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99. As to the exemption of life insurance policies, see, supra, § 243.

[289] Burlingham v. Crouse, 228 U. S. 459, 33 Sup. Ct. 564, 57 L. Ed. 920, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6, affirming 181 Fed. 479, 104 C. C. A. 227, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; In re Josephson, 121 Fed. 142, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345, affirmed in Meyers v. Josephson, 124 Fed. 734, 59 C. C. A. 650, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; King v. Miles, 108 Miss. 732, 67 South. 182.

[290] In re Slingluff, 106 Fed. 154, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; In re Coleman, 136 Fed. 818, 69 C. C. A. 496, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

[291] Partridge v. Andrews (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 325, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re Orear, 178 Fed. 632, 102 C. C. A. 78, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; In re Coleman, 136 Fed. 818, 69 C. C. A. 496, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; In re Welling, 113 Fed. 189, 51 C. C. A. 151, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; In re Dolan, 182 Fed. 949, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Hettling, 175 Fed. 65, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; Clark v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 143 Fed. 175, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 137; Van Kirk v. Vermont Slate Co., 140 Fed. 38, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; Gould v. New York Life Ins. Co., 132 Fed. 927, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233.

[292] In re Buelow (D. C.) 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; Gould v. New York Life Ins. Co. (D. C.) 132 Fed. 927, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233; Sanders v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 95 S. C. 36, 78 S. E. 532, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 1284. Where a twenty-year endowment policy has no cash surrender value before the end of the period, the insured's trustee in bankruptcy does not take an interest therein merely because it provides certain valuable benefits to which the bankrupt will be entitled in case he survives the period. In re Churchill, 209 Fed. 766, 126 C. C. A. 490, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. An industrial policy, not payable with certainty to any beneficiary, and which it does not appear the insurer will certainly buy, has no cash surrender value and therefore does not pass to the trustee. In re Gannon, 247 Fed. 932, 160 C. C. A. 122, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518. Insurance policies on the life of the bankrupt, which have been fully paid and are yielding annual dividends, do not pass to the trustee where they have all been borrowed upon to their full loan value, and the interest on the loans exceeds the dividends. In re Williams (D. C.) 250 Fed. 288, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611.

in consideration of being relieved from carrying the risk further.[293] This surrender value is often expressly stipulated for in the policy itself, which may further contain the data, or fixed basis of calculation, on which the surrender value in any given year of the life of the policy will be computed. But in order that a policy may have a "cash surrender value," within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, it is not necessary that the policy should contain an express agreement or stipulation to that effect; it is sufficient if it possesses an actual value, either in cash or for the purchase of a paid-up policy, which would be recognized and paid by the insurer on the surrender of the policy, as a matter of settled and usual practice, or even as a concession in the particular case.[294]

An endowment policy on the life of the bankrupt, payable to him with accumulated dividends if he survives the term, or to his wife in case of his death before its maturity, if it has a cash surrender value, will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy unless redeemed by the bankrupt.[295] And even if it has no surrender value, yet if it has an actual

[293] In re Boardman, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 821; In re McKinney, 15 Fed. 535. In the case last cited, it was pointed out that the foundation of the surrender value of a policy is the excess of the fixed annual premiums in the earlier years of the policy over the annual risk during the later years of the policy. "This excess in the premium paid over the annual cost of insurance, with accumulations of interest, constitutes the surrender value. Though this excess of premiums paid is legally the sole property of the company, still, in practical effect, though not in law, it is money of the assured, deposited with the company in advance, to make up the deficiency in later premiums to cover the annual cost of insurance instead of being retained by the assured and paid by him to the company in the shape of greatly increased premiums when the risk is greatest. It is the 'net reserve' required by law to be kept by the company for the benefit of the assured and to be maintained to the credit of the policy. So long as the policy remains in force, the company has not practically any beneficial interest in it, except as its custodian, with the obligation to maintain it unimpaired and suitably invested for the benefit of the assured. This is the practical, though not the legal, relation of the company to this fund. Upon the surrender of the policy before the death of the assured, the company, to be relieved from all responsibility for the increased risk, which is represented by this accumulating reserve, could well afford to surrender a considerable part of it to the assured or his representative. A return of a part, in some form or other, is now usually made."

[294] Holden v. Stratton, 198 U. S. 214, 25 Sup. Ct. 660, 49 L. Ed. 1022, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; Hiscock v. Mertens, 205 U. S. 202, 27 Sup. Ct. 488, 51 L. Ed. 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Miller, 185 Fed. 98, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560; In re Herr, 182 Fed. 716, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142; In re Coleman, 136 Fed. 818, 69 C. C. A. 496, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; In re Boardman, 103 Fed. 783, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620. But compare Pulsifer v. Hussey, 97 Me. 434, 54 Atl. 1076. Though the insurance company does not recognize the policy as having a surrender value, yet if it has a recognized loan value, which is substantially the same, this value may be made available to the trustee in bankruptcy. Richter v. Rockhold, 253 Fed. 941, 165 C. C. A. 383, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

[295] Remley v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 108 Minn. 31, 121 N. W. 230; In re Schofield, 147 Fed. 862, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824; In re Young, 208 Fed. 373, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Simmous (D. C.) 253 Fed. 466, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209;

cash value which, by any practicable means, can be realized and made available for the payment of debts, the creditors are entitled to the benefit of it. Where the amount of such a policy is considerable, and it will mature before the estate can be closed, the trustee may, with the sanction of the court and the assent of the creditors, retain it, and pay the remaining premiums as they mature, and in case the amount is realized, the creditors will be entitled to at least the proportion equitably to the credit of the policy at the date of the adjudication, with the outlay for premiums.[296] And the same rule has been applied to the so-called "tontine" and "semi-tontine" forms of policies.[297] And a paid-up policy insuring the bankrupt's life, under an agreement to pay him an annuity for life after twenty years, which term has not expired, and to pay his widow a fixed sum on his death, vests in his trustee in bankruptcy, but only as to the bankrupt's interest in the annuity, and not as to the entire present value of the policy.[298]

The trustee can claim only such policies as are payable to the bankrupt himself or to his estate or personal representatives. A special industrial life policy, payable primarily to the executors or administrators, but with provision for payment to any person who may be equitably entitled, at the company's option, does not vest in the trustee.[299] And it was formerly held that a policy on the life of the bankrupt, but expressed to be payable to his wife, was her property and not an asset of his estate in bankruptcy,[300] and that it was immaterial that the bankrupt might have the right, with the consent of the company, to change the beneficiary, if he had not done so at the time of the bankruptcy.[301]

In re Dreuil & Co. (D. C.) 221 Fed. 796, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373.

[296] In re Slingluff, 106 Fed. 154, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 972, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[297] Hiscock v. Mertens, 205 U. S. 202, 27 Sup. Ct. 488, 51 L. Ed. 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; In re Welling, 113 Fed. 189, 51 C. C. A. 151, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 972, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[298] In re Schaefer, 189 Fed. 187, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

[299] In re Gannon (D. C.) 241 Fed. 733, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 783.

[300] In re Flanigan (D. C.) 228 Fed. 339, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807; In re Steele, 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549; In re Pfaffinger, 164 Fed. 526, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255; In re Bear, 11 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 1,178; Pace v. Pace, 19 Fla. 438; Haskell v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 181 Mass. 341, 63 N. E. 899; Pulsifer v. Hussey, 97 Me. 434, 54 Atl. 1076. But see In re White, 174 Fed. 333, 98 C. C. A. 205, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; In re Holden, 114 Fed. 650, 52 C. C. 346. Compare In re Young, 208 Fed. 373, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Loveland, 200 Fed. 136, 118 C. C. A. 310, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

[301] In re Cohen (D. C.) 230 Fed. 733, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; In re Arkin, 231 Fed. 947, 146 C. C. A. 143, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; In re Pfaffinger (D. C.) 164 Fed. 526, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255. See In re L. Hammel & Co., 221 Fed. 56, 137 C. C. A. 80, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46, holding that the bankrupt cannot be compelled to substitute himself as beneficiary in a life insurance policy payable to his wife and borrow the loan value thereof for the benefit of his creditors.

But in 1917 the Supreme Court laid down the rule that although a policy on the life of the bankrupt may be explicitly made payable to some other person, yet if the bankrupt has the absolute right to change the beneficiary at will, so that the designated person has no vested right in the policy, its cash surrender value is property which the bankrupt could have transferred prior to the bankruptcy, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, and the power to change the beneficiary is a power which he might have exercised for his own benefit, and therefore the surrender value of the policy is an asset of his estate vesting in the trustee.[302] It is important to be noticed that in some of the states a policy expressed to be payable to the wife of the insured is exempt by statute, and where this is the case, his trustee in bankruptcy takes no interest in it.[303] But otherwise, the rule must now be accepted that if the bankrupt has the right at any time and without the consent of the wife to substitute another beneficiary in her place, the policy cannot be regarded as her property, but its surrender value will pass to the husband's trustee in bankruptcy.[304] But this rule does not apply to a policy made payable to the bankrupt's wife, where its terms are such that he has no right to change the beneficiary except after the death of the wife,[305] and the trustee of a bankrupt cannot recover, after the bankrupt's death, the amount of a policy payable to his wife, with a right to change the beneficiary, which the company had paid to the wife without notice of any adverse claim thereto.[306] Nor can the trustee claim a policy which was originally payable to the personal representatives of the bankrupt, but which was assigned to his wife more than four months before the bankruptcy, where nothing appears to impugn the good faith of the transaction,[307] or where, at the time of the [302] Cohen v. Samuels, 245 U. S. 50, 38 Sup. Ct. 36, 62 L. Ed. 143, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; Cohn v. Malone, 248 U. S. 450, 39 Sup. Ct. 141, 63 L. Ed. 352, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Samuels, 254 Fed. 775, 166 C. C. A. 221, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434; In re Shoemaker (D. C.) 225 Fed. 329, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Rawls v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 253 Fed. 725, 165 C. C. A. 319, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; Malone v. Cohn, 236 Fed. 882, 150 C. C. A. 144, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87; In re Bonvillain (D. C.) 232 Fed. 370, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; In re Jamison Bros. & Co. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 92, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231; Frederick v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 255 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 503, 65 L. Ed. —, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; In re Greenberg (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 258, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400; In re Jens (D. C.) 273 Fed. 606. Compare In re Young (D. C.) 208 Fed. 373, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[303] Supra, § 243.

[304] In re Jones (D. C.) 249 Fed. 487, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299, 467.

[305] In re Majors (D. C.) 241 Fed. 538, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 642; In re Fetterman (D. C.) 243 Fed. 975, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834.

[306] Frederick v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 239 Fed. 125, 152 C. C. A. 167, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; Frederick v. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co., 255 U. S. — 41 Sup. Ct. 503, 65 L. Ed. —, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586.

[307] In re Steele (D. C.) 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549; Grems v. Traver, assignment, it had no surrender value in cash.[308] But where the policy provides that the principal sum shall be paid to the assured himself at the end of a stipulated term of years if he is then living, or to his wife if he dies before the expiration of the term, its surrender value is payable to the assured, and it becomes a part of his estate in bankruptcy.[309] But the mere expectancy of one who is named as the beneficiary in a policy of insurance on the life of another is not an asset in his estate in bankruptcy, where the policy also gives the assured the unqualified right to change the beneficiary at will, as this is not property which he could have transferred or which could have been levied on and sold.[310] But where the assured in such a case dies shortly after the adjudication in bankruptcy, leaving the bankrupt as the last designated beneficiary, the interest of the latter in the policy becomes fixed and unalterable, and passes to his trustee.[311] And so, where a wife holds a policy of insurance on the life of her husband, by the terms of which she is bound to pay the premiums and is entitled to receive the proceeds of the policy, such policy will become a part of the assets of her estate in bankruptcy, unless she secures or pays to her trustee its surrender value.[312]

The only interest which the trustee can claim is the surrender value of the policy at the time of the bankruptcy, and if that is paid or secured to him, the bankrupt remains the owner of the policy and of whatever interest or value may thereafter accrue under it.[313] Indeed the policy, so far as respects any future insurance under it, would be a burden to the estate rather than a benefit, which the trustee would not be authorized to continue.[314] But if the bankrupt does not redeem the policy, as authorized by the statute, it is for the court of bankruptcy to determine in what way the trustee shall treat the bankrupt's interest in it, whether by sale or by postponement of any action until the policy

87 Misc. Rep. 644, 148 N. Y. Supp. 200. Compare South Side Trust Co. v. Wilmarth, 199 Fed. 418, 117 C. C. A. 650, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29. The fact that the husband paid the premiums on his life insurance policy, assigned to his wife, does not affect her title to the policy as against the husband's trustee in bankruptcy. Longbottom v. Emery, 261 Pa. 163, 104 Atl. 561.

[308] Morris v. Dodd, 110 Ga. 606, 36 S. E. 83, 50 L. R. A. 33, 78 Am. St. Rep. 129.

[309] In re Steele, 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549; In re Grahs, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 164; Brigham v. Home Ins. Co., 131 Mass. 319; In re Draper (D. C.) 211 Fed. 230, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 203.

[310] In re Hogan, 194 Fed. 846, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; In re McDonnell, 101 Fed. 239, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[311] In re Hogan, 186 Fed. 537.

[312] In re Steele, 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

[313] Pulsifer v. Hussey, 97 Me. 434, 54 Atl. 1076; In re Simmons & Griffin, 255 Fed. 521, 166 C. C. A. 589, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3. If an assignment by the bankrupt and his wife of policies on his life was void, the wife may, on their return after his death, and within 30 days after the determination of their surrender value at the date of the adjudication, redeem them. In re Levy (D. C.) 227 Fed. 1011, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

[314] In re McKinney, 15 Fed. 535.

shall fall due.[315] And in any case, the trustee takes the surrender value of the policy subject to any valid existing liens upon it, as, for example, an equitable lien in favor of the bankrupt's wife for the amount of premiums which she has paid out of her own money in past years in order to keep the policy alive,[316] or the lien of one to whom the policy had previously been pledged as collateral security for a loan.[317] And if the insurance company itself has loaned the bankrupt a sum equal to the full surrender value of the policy, holding the policy as security, there is nothing for the trustee in bankruptcy to take.[318]

The death of the bankrupt will of course extinguish the surrender value of any policy, but at the same time mature the policy. And it was formerly held that, if this occurred after the filing of the petition but before the adjudication, the trustee would take the policy in its condition at the date of the adjudication as a matured contract, and if it was payable to the estate or the personal representatives of the assured, the trustee might claim the entire proceeds; whereas, if the bankrupt survived the adjudication, the trustee would take only such surrender value as the policy might have had at that date, and on the subsequent death of the bankrupt his heirs or representatives would have the right to pay to the trustee such surrender value and retain the rest of the proceeds of the policy.[319] But the Supreme Court of the United States has recently decided that the time when the petition in bankruptcy is filed (not the date of adjudication) fixes the cash surrender value of the policy, so that the death of the bankrupt between the filing of the petition and the adjudication does not make the proceeds of the policy above the cash surrender value assets in the hands of the trustee, but the right to redeem on paying the surrender value may be exercised by the bankrupt's executors.[320] Where the bankrupt's death occurs by suicide, and the policy thereupon becomes void, but the insurance company returns pre-

315 Waldron v. Becker, 33 Misc. Rep. 182, 68 N. Y. Supp. 402.

316 In re Diack, 100 Fed. 770, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; Waldron v. Becker, 33 Misc. Rep. 182, 68 N. Y. Supp. 402. And see In re Bear, 11 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 1,178; American Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Munson, 93 Wash. 78, 159 Pac. 1195.

317 In re Wolff, 165 Fed. 984, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 452; Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co. v. Swett, 222 Fed. 200, 137 C. C. A. 640, Ann. Cas. 1917B, 298; Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Allen, 235 Mass. 187, 126 N. E. 367.

318 Burlingham v. Crouse (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 479, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

319 Partridge v. Andrews (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 325, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; Van Kirk v. Vermont Slate Co., 140 Fed. 38, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; In re McKinney, 15 Fed. 535; Sanders v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 95 S. C. 36, 78 S. E. 532.

320 Everett v. Judson, 228 U. S. 474, 33 Sup. Ct. 568, 57 L. Ed. 927, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1, affirming 192 Fed. 834, 113 C. C. A. 158, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; Andrews v. Partridge, 228 U. S. 479, 33 Sup. Ct. 570, 57 L. Ed. 929, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4, reversing 191 Fed. 325, 112 C. C. A. 69, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 123, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; King v. Miles, 108 Miss. 732, 67 South. 182.

miums paid under the policy, the money belongs to the trustee, as being a refund of the bankrupt's own money.[321]

Practically the same principles apply to contracts of indemnity insurance. Thus, where an employer of labor holds a policy undertaking to indemnify him against loss sustained by accident to an employé, and pays a judgment recovered by an employé against him, and becomes bankrupt, his claim against the insurance company under the policy for reimbursement will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy as an asset of his estate.[322] The trustee in bankruptcy is also entitled, as against the bankrupt's widow, to the proceeds of a policy of insurance against permanent disability.[323]

§ 349. Wife's Personalty and Choses in Action.—Where the rule of the common law has not been changed or abrogated by statute, the personal property of the wife of a bankrupt, owned by her at the time of the marriage, and not excluded from the control of the husband by any trust, and also her choses in action reduced to his possession, are assets of his estate in bankruptcy.[324] But courts of equity have always recognized the wife's right to a settlement,—that is, to an adequate provision for her support to be made out of her own property,—and have enforced it whenever it became necessary for the husband to resort to chancery in order to reach her property or rights of action, and courts of bankruptcy will take the same course.[325] Subject to this equity, however, and wherever the common law still prevails, the husband's trustee in bankruptcy succeeds to his rights, and where the husband and wife were jointly prosecuting a suit in respect to a chose in action of the wife, and during its pendency the husband is adjudged bankrupt, his trustee should join with the wife in the further conduct of the suit, and his recovery therein will inure to the benefit of the husband's creditors.[326] But the trustee is not entitled to a chose in action of the bankrupt's wife, where there is nothing to show that the bankrupt ever asserted his marital right thereto or made any attempt to reduce it to his possession,[327] and 321 In re Judson, 188 Fed. 702, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 775, affirmed 192 Fed. 834, 113 C. C. A. 158, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

322 Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Moses, 63 N. J. Eq. 260, 49 Atl. 720, 92 Am. St. Rep. 663.

323 In re Matschke, 193 Fed. 284, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770.

324 In re Boyd, 2 Hughes, 349, 5 N. B. R. 199, Fed. Cas. No. 1,745; In re Grant, 2 Story, 312, Fed. Cas. No. 5,693; Butler v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 8 Ala. 146; Gayle v. Randall, 71 Ala. 469; Smith v. Chandler, 3 Gray (Mass.) 392; In re Hammond, 98 Fed. 845.

325 Clark v. Hezekiah, 24 Fed. 663; In re Brandt, 5 Biss. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 1,811; In re Campbell, 3 Hughes, 276, 17 N. B. R. 4, Fed. Cas. No. 2,348; Shaw v. Mitchell, 2 Ware, 220, Fed. Cas. No. 12,722; Bell v. Bell, 1 Ga. 637.

326 In re Boyd, 2 Hughes, 349, 5 N. B. R. 199, Fed. Cas. No. 1,745.

327 Wickham v. Valle, 11 N. B. R. 83, Fed. Cas. No. 17,613; In re Snow, Fed.

merely including it in his schedule of assets filed in the bankruptcy proceedings is not such a reduction to possession as to give his trustee or creditors a claim upon it.[328] Nor does the general rule apply to anything but property in which the wife has a fixed and definite interest. Thus, a legacy to the bankrupt's wife, dependent on her surviving another person, is a mere possibility and does not pass to the husband's trustee.[329]

On the other hand, where the wife's separate property is secured to her by statute, the husband's trustee in bankruptcy has no claim to any personal property or chose in action acquired and owned by her before the marriage, such, for instance, as stock in a corporation.[330] And the fact that the wife allows her husband to have and use her money in his own business indefinitely does not prevent her from reclaiming it, as against other creditors, in his subsequent bankruptcy,[331] unless the statutory law of the state expressly precludes her from asserting ownership as against creditors in general,[332] or raises a presumption that a gift of the money was intended.[333] And however this may be, the property or profits which the husband may have accumulated in business transactions, using his wife's money as capital, but adding his own skill and energy, constitute his own assets and not hers, and vest in his trustee.[334]

Either money or other property given by a man to his wife, at a time when he is solvent and entertains no fraudulent purpose, passes out of his ownership into hers, and cannot be reclaimed for the benefit of his creditors when he afterwards becomes insolvent and bankrupt.[335] And although it is a general rule that money saved by a wife out of an allowance made by her husband for the expenses of the household belongs to him and not to her, yet where the wife, during the twelve years of her marriage, managed, by doing her own work, to save from the allowance a considerable sum, which she deposited in bank in her own name, besides on different occasions expending considerable sums, which fact was probably known to her husband, the presumption is that he intended such savings as a gift to her; and where he was solvent at all times until his death, the trustee in bankruptcy of the surviving partner of a

Cas. No. 13,142; Shay v. Sessaman, 10 Pa. St. 432.

328 Poor v. Hazleton, 15 N. H. 564.

329 Krumbaar v. Burt, 2 Wash. C. C. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 7,944.

330 Bryan v. Sturgis Nat. Bank, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 307, 90 S. W. 704.

331 Van Kleeck v. Miller, 19 N. B. R. 484, Fed. Cas. No. 16,860; In re Westervelt, Fed. Cas. No. 17,445a; Shippen's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 391, 15 N. B. R. 553. But see Keating v. Keefer, 5 N. B. R. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 7,635.

332 In re Hemstreet, 139 Fed. 958, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823.

333 Teter v. Viquesney, 179 Fed. 655, 103 C. C. A. 213, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

334 Muirhead v. Aldridge, 14 N. B. R. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 9,904.

335 In re Brandt, 5 Biss. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 1,811; In re Ludlow, Fed. Cas. No. 8,599.

firm of which he had been a member, on its bankruptcy, after his death, cannot claim such money.[336]

§ 350. Acquisitions of Minor Children.—Theoretically the services and earnings of a minor belong to his father and constitute assets of the latter's estate in bankruptcy. But the law is not overzealous to strip infants of their earnings, even in favor of their parent's creditors. And it has been held that the property of minor children, accumulated by their sole exertions with their father's consent, and which he has not reduced to his own possession but which has always stood in their names, does not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[337] Moreover, where a father, although himself insolvent, has expressly emancipated his minor son, the earnings of the latter, thenceforward and during the remainder of his minority, or property purchased with the same, do not belong to the father and cannot be claimed by his creditors as assets of his estate in bankruptcy.[338]

§ 351. Dower Rights.—A woman's inchoate right of dower in the lands of her husband is not such property as will pass to and vest in her trustee in bankruptcy.[339] But when a wife's contingent interest in her husband's lands has been transformed into a vested right by the event of his death, she cannot then divest it by parol without consideration, as against her creditors, and consequently, if she has not parted with it prior to her bankruptcy, it will constitute an asset of her estate.[340]

As to the dower rights of the wife in the case of the bankruptcy of the husband, it is the rule in Pennsylvania that the land of a bankrupt can be sold free from the dower rights of his wife, such rights under the state laws being subject to the claims of creditors.[341] But in Ohio, a wife's dower interest in lands, although they are mortgaged, does not pass to the husband's trustee in bankruptcy.[342] Under the law in North Carolina, where the wife of a bankrupt has an inchoate dower right in his equitable estates, and has joined with him in mortgages under which his realty is sold subsequent to the bankruptcy, she has a dower right only in the surplus proceeds, and is not, as against the trustee, representing the unsecured creditors, entitled to the present value of one-third of the entire proceeds of the sale.[343]

336 In re Simon, 197 Fed. 102, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

337 Ex parte Tebbets, 5 Law Rep. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 13,816.

338 In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41.

339 Lucas v. Bennett, 42 Iowa, 703.

340 Watterson's Appeal, 95 Pa. 312.

341 In re Kligerman (D. C.) 253 Fed. 778, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670.

342 Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 854, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

343 In re Munford (D. C.) 255 Fed. 108, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

§ 352. Property of Third Persons in Bankrupt's Possession.—If the aggregate of property surrendered and turned over to a trustee in bankruptcy includes any article or item which does not belong to the bankrupt, but to a third person, it is not a part of the estate in bankruptcy. The trustee must take charge of it until it is reclaimed by the rightful owner, and cannot surrender it to any other person. But it is not an asset in his hands for administration in bankruptcy.[344] This is also true of personal property which is in the possession of the bankrupt under a contract of lease, although he may have an option to buy it at a stated price, which he has never exercised.[345] But to withdraw specific property from the estate to be administered, the assertion of title to it must come from the rightful owner, not from the bankrupt. Whatever is in the possession of the latter at the time of the bankruptcy must be delivered to the trustee. A third person may thereafter reclaim any property of his own. But the bankrupt cannot withhold any property actually in his possession, and set up in defense to the trustee's demand for it that the title is in a third person.[346] If, however, money has been paid to the bankrupt by mistake, and he has turned it over to the person entitled to receive it, the trustee in bankruptcy cannot maintain a suit to recover it back, as it is not a part of the bankrupt's assets.[347]

Questions often arise as to the ownership of property in the bankrupt's possession under a contract for its sale to him or a contract under which it was to become his property on the performance of certain conditions, the trustee claiming the goods as the bankrupt's and seeking to put the seller in the position of a creditor for the unpaid price, [344] In re John H. Parker Co. (D. C.) 268 Fed. 868, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 34; In re Toole (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 195, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; In re Condon, 198 Fed. 480, 117 C. C. A. 212, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851; In re Cox, 199 Fed. 952, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 456; In re Thompson, 205 Fed. 556, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64; In re Walsh Bros., 195 Fed. 576, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; Cooper v. White, 19 Ga. 554. And see In re Potee Brick Co., 179 Fed. 525 (case of fixtures); Ludvigh v. Umstadter, 148 Fed. 319, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774 (property partitioned before bankruptcy); In re Woodman, 186 Fed. 533 (money held as deposit to secure the return of cans in which the goods were shipped); In re Shelly (D. C.) 235 Fed. 311, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514; Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Elliotte, 218 Fed. 567, 134 C. C. A. 295, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375. In the bankruptcy of a corporation, where one of its officers made a prima facie showing of his individual ownership of certain certificates of deposit, as against the trustee's claim that they belonged to the bankrupt, it was held that they should not be impounded for the purpose of being made available to satisfy a judgment which might be obtained by the trustee against the officer. In re McGinley, 219 Fed. 159, 135 C. C. A. 57, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612.

[345] McEwen v. Totten, 164 Fed. 837, 90 C. C. A. 599, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336; In re Kay-Tee Film Exchange (D. C.) 193 Fed. 140.

[346] In re Moses (D. C.) 1 Fed. 845. And see supra, § 322.

[347] Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955, affirmed Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 204 U. S. 522, 27 Sup. Ct. 391, 51 L. Ed. 596, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675.

while the latter claims that title has not passed and that he is therefore entitled to a return of the goods.[348] These questions must ordinarily be determined according to the general law of sales of personal property.[349] But it may be said, in general, that while payment of the price is not always necessary to complete a sale, yet the vendor may reclaim the property when there has been no delivery of it of such a character as to pass title,[350] as, where the bankrupt, on receipt of the property, objected both to its quantity and quality and stored it separately, and refused to pay for it except at a reduced price, which had not been agreed to when bankruptcy intervened.[351] So also the seller may reclaim the goods where the contract was for an absolute sale (not conditional) and the payment of the price in cash was a condition precedent to the passing of title, and payment has not been made,[352] or where payment has been tendered in a medium which the seller refused to accept, such as an uncertified check which is afterwards dishonored.[353] Again, if property is in the bankrupt's possession which was not sold to him, but consigned to him for sale on the owner's account, it is not assets of his estate, but may be reclaimed by the true owner.[354] But the fact that a merchant ships goods to a customer, but consigned to himself, is not conclusive proof of his assertion that he reserved title in himself for the purpose of a future scrutiny of the customer's financial condition, if there are other facts tending to show an actual sale and a resort to this equivocal method for the purpose of denying a sale in case of the cus-

348 The title to building material which has passed with delivery to the purchaser is not restored to the seller by the fact that there was a representation in the contract that it would be used in a certain building, which was breached by the buyer's subsequent bankruptcy. Citizens' Coal & Supply Co. v. Custard, 244 Fed. 425, 157 C. C. A. 51, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; And see In re Shelly, 242 Fed. 251, 155 C. C. A. 91, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

349 In proceedings to reclaim property from a trustee in bankruptcy, the question whether the contract under which the bankrupt held the property was a bailment for hire, or a sale, conditional or absolute, must be determined by the law of the state in which it was made. In re Eagle Ice & Coal Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 393, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184. Where goods were sold to the bankrupt on open account, the title vested at once and the relation of debtor and creditor was created, so that on bankruptcy intervening the seller was not entitled to rescind and reclaim. In re Caldwell Machinery Co. (D. C.) 215 Fed. 428.

350 In re Kingston Realty Co. (D. C.) 157 Fed. 303, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703. See Kellogg-Mackey-Cameron Co. v. Curtice, 162 Mo. App. 124, 144 S. W. 152. A receiver in bankruptcy has the right to take property sold to the bankrupt, and shipped by carrier, from the carrier on its arrival at destination, and such taking ends the right of stoppage in transitu. In re Arctic Stores (D. C.) 258 Fed. 688, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

351 In re Planett Mfg. Co., 157 Fed. 916, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

352 Southern Pine Co. v. Savannah Trust Co., 141 Fed. 802, 73 C. C. A. 60, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618; In re Smith, 119 Fed. 1004, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Burkle, 116 Fed. 766, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

353 In re Tracy, 185 Fed. 844; In re Selman Heating & Plumbing Co., 203 Fed. 777.

354 See, infra, § 356.

tomer's bankruptcy; there must be good faith, and no sinister design, in the transaction.[355]

There are also some cases in which a third person may reclaim goods on the ground that the bankrupt was estopped to assert title in himself. And if this is true, the estoppel is equally binding on the trustee in bankruptcy, who stands in no better position than the bankrupt himself in respect to the assets, except as to fraudulent conveyances, preferences, and the like. In an interesting case under the former bankruptcy statute, it appeared that the bankrupts had agreed to build a locomotive engine for a railroad company. They notified the company that the engine was finished and dispatched, whereupon the price was paid. No such engine then existed, but two engines, either of which would answer the contract, were afterwards finished, and one of them was delivered to a third person before the bankruptcy. At the date of the bankruptcy, the other remained in the bankrupts' shop. It was held that the railroad company had a title to the engine as against the bankrupts and their trustee by estoppel.[356]

§ 353. Same; Remedies of Owner.—When property in the possession of a bankrupt, but which belongs to a stranger, passes into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy, the proper remedy of the owner, desiring to reclaim it, is to file his petition in the court of bankruptcy setting forth the facts and his claim, and the referee has authority summarily to call the parties in interest before him and to hear and determine the claim, and if it is admitted or established by proof, to make an order for the restoration of the property to the claimant.[357] This remedy is exclusive. When property has come into the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy, it is in the custody of the court of bankruptcy, [355] In re Leeds Woolen Mills, 129 Fed. 922, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; In re Levin, 127 Fed. 886, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446. See Grange Co. v. Farmers' Union & Milling Co., 3 Cal. App. 519, 86 Pac. 615.

[356] Ex parte Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co., 1 Low. 345, 3 N. B. R. 50, Fed. Cas. No. 11,978. And see In re Cantelo Mfg. Co., 185 Fed. 276, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; Lovell v. Isidore Newman & Son, 188 Fed. 534, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660.

[357] In re Kaplan & Myers, 241 Fed. 459, 154 C. C. A. 291, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; In re Midland Motor Co., 224 Fed. 368, 140 C. C. A. 54, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; In re Aronson (D. C.) 245 Fed. 207, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177; In re Liebig, 255 Fed. 458, 168 C. C. A. 534, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; In re Clayton (D. C.) 259 Fed. 911, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; Darrough v. First Nat. Bank, 56 Okl. 647, 156 Pac. 191; Mound Mines Co. v. Hawthorne, 173 Fed. 882, 97 C. C. A. 394, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; In re Squier, 165 Fed. 515, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; In re Pierce, 157 Fed. 757, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664; In re Schloerb, 97 Fed. 326, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482; In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 379, 6 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 2,802; In re Havens, 8 Ben. 309, Fed. Cas. No. 6,230.

which alone has jurisdiction over it. Hence the claimant cannot regain it by means of a writ of replevin,[358] nor by a suit in a state court against the trustee in bankruptcy to establish his title and restrain that officer from selling the property,[359] nor by an attempted exercise of the right of stoppage in transitu.[360] Neither is property so in the possession of the trustee liable to be levied on and taken in execution by a sheriff at the suit of a creditor of the person who claims title thereto as against the bankrupt.[361] Further, it behooves the claimant to act with reasonable promptness in asserting his claims. If he has notice of the proceedings in bankruptcy, but stands silently by while the trustee turns all the property in his hands into cash and pays it out in the form of a dividend to creditors, the claimant will be considered guilty of laches and cannot afterwards present his claim.[362]

§ 354. Property Held by Bankrupt as Trustee.—Property held by a bankrupt by a mere naked legal title, and purely in trust for another, is no part of his estate in bankruptcy and does not pass to his trustee,[363] unless in cases where the trust has been virtually terminated by such acts or conduct on the part of the cestui que trust as would estop him to claim any benefit from it, in which event the estoppel is equally available to the trustee in bankruptcy as it would have been to the bankrupt himself.[364] But while the rule is as above stated, still the trustee in bankruptcy will have the right to claim for the benefit of creditors

[358] In re Schloerb, 97 Fed. 326, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 379, 6 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 2,802; Erb v. Perkins, 32 Ark. 428. Compare Leighton v. Harwood, 111 Mass. 67, 15 Am. Rep. 4, 12 N. B. R. 360. And see Kennedy v. Strong, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 289; In re Wellmade Gas Mantel Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 502. 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354.

[359] Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79. See In re Litchfield, 13 Fed. 863.

[360] In re Allen, 178 Fed. 879, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574. See In re Arctic Stores (D. C.) 258 Fed. 688, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

[361] In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 379, 6 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 2,802. See Hill v. Fleming, 39 Ga. 662.

[362] Claflin Co. v. Eason, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 360; In re Ennis, 198 Fed. 381, 117 C. C. A. 257.

[363] Lowell v. International Trust Co., 158 Fed. 781, 86 C. C. A. 137, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 853; In re Coffin, 152 Fed. 381, 81 C. C. A. 507, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127; Clark v. Wilson, 53 Miss. 119, 16 N. B. R. 356; Welch v. Polley, 177 N. Y. 117, 69 N. E. 279; Butler v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 14 Ala. 777; Starr v. Keefer, 1 MacArthur (D. C.) 166; Pickerell v. Zell, 2 MacArthur (D. C.) 65; Pugh v. Holliday, 3 Ohio St. 284; Bailey v. Wood, 211 Mass. 37, 97 N. E. 902, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 950; Blin v. Pierce, 20 Vt. 25; Shryock v. Waggoner, 28 Pa. St. 430; Ludwig v. Highley, 5 Pa. St. 132. Compare Carr v. Gale, 3 Woodb. & M. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 2,435. See Hatch v. Curtin, 154 Fed. 791, 83 C. C. A. 495, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82; Clark v. Snelling, 205 Fed. 240, 123 C. C. A. 430, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Benz, 218 Fed. 50, 134 C. C. A. 26, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363; City Nat. Bank v. Slocum (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 11, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47.

[364] In re Coffin, 146 Fed. 181, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

any interest which the bankrupt himself had in the subject of the trust, whether by way of compensation for his services or as a part owner or distributee.[365] Where merchandise is by mistake delivered to a factor to whom it was not consigned, and is sold by a warehouseman and the proceeds deposited in bank to the credit of the factor, the money is held in trust for the owner and does not pass to the factor's trustee in bankruptcy.[366] So, where a husband has, by fraud or mistake, been invested with the title to land inherited by his wife, equity will treat him as trustee of the wife, and a court of bankruptcy will not subject the land to the claims of the husband's creditors.[367] So land which the bankrupt holds upon an implied trust for another is not an asset of his estate, although no declaration of trust has been made or recorded.[368] But although one who has given a bond to convey becomes in equity a trustee for the purchaser, yet if he has not received the whole of the purchase money, he is not a mere naked trustee, and his interest in the property will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy.[369]

It is a general rule that persons seeking to recover trust funds which they claim to have traced into the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy of their trustee are under the burden of proving their title, and if the evidence leaves the identification in doubt, that doubt must be resolved in favor of the trustee in bankruptcy.[370] Hence where the subject of the trust is money, the cestui que trust cannot claim reimbursement in full, but must occupy the position of a general creditor, unless he can in some way identify his fund, and he has the burden of clearly tracing his money into some specific fund or property in the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy.[371] And the older cases generally main-[365] Appling v. Bailey, 44 Ala. 333; Rankin v. Bancroft, 114 Ill. 441, 3 N. E. 97. See Clark v. Snelling, 205 Fed. 240, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50. Where an administratrix, without authority from the probate court, continued the mercantile business of the decedent, purchasing new goods and contracting new debts, all merchandise on hand acquired by her and all accounts accruing to her after her appointment are property of her estate in bankruptcy, as well as the proceeds of accounts made while the business was conducted by her receiver. In re Tietje (D. C.) 253 Fed. 283, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816. And see In re Mitchell (D. C.) 250 Fed. 1003, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[366] In re Woods & Malone, 121 Fed. 599, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

[367] In re Anderson, 2 Hughes, 378, 9 N. B. R. 360, Fed. Cas. No. 351. See Arbury v. De Niord (Sup.) 152 N. Y. Supp. 763.

[368] Low v. Welch, 139 Mass. 33, 29 N. E. 216. But compare Putnam v. Southworth, 197 Mass. 270, 83 N. E. 887.

[369] Swepson v. Rouse, 65 N. C. 34, 6 Am. Rep. 735.

[370] Schuyler v. Littlefield, 232 U. S. 707, 34 Sup. Ct. 466, 58 L. Ed. 806, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209.

[371] In re A. D. Matthews' Sons, 238 Fed. 785, 151 C. C. A. 635, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438.

tained the rule that the right to follow a trust fund ceases when the means of identification fail and that this result follows from the mere act of the bankrupt in mingling the trust funds with his own money, as where the whole is deposited to his personal credit in a bank. On this subject it was said: "Money delivered to the bankrupt in trust, if ear-marked or separately kept and retained as trust property, to be delivered or paid over in the same bills or coin in which it was received by the bankrupt, would not pass under such assignment [in bankruptcy], but would be considered as trust property; but an amount of money due from the bankrupt as trustee, and which could not be distinguished from any moneys in his possession or under his control, or which was only due from him because he had used trust funds for his own purposes, or otherwise misapplied them, could not be considered as property held by the bankrupt in trust." [372] But the rule generally applied by the later decisions is that if trust funds have been intermingled with the general funds of the trustee so as to render their identification impossible, still a court of bankruptcy will follow them and decree restitution to the cestui que trust, if the unlawful appropriation of them resulted in increasing the assets of the bankrupt as they come into his trustee's possession, as where the trust money is mingled with the bankrupt's own by being deposited in his name in bank, but the amount of the deposit at all times equals or exceeds the amount of the trust fund.[373] But if, before the date of the bankruptcy, so much of the money on deposit is withdrawn as to leave less in bank than the amount of the trust fund, the cestui que trust cannot establish a lien on the whole or any part of the balance.[374] And if the whole of the money is withdrawn from the bank, his right to claim his specific funds will not be restored by the subsequent deposit of other money obtained from other sources to the credit of the account.[375] And so where the [372] Hosmer v. Jewett, 6 Ben. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 6,713; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 21 Blatchf. 275, 15 Fed. 858; In re Vetterlein, 26 Fed. 145; In re Richard, 104 Fed. 792; In re Janeway, 4 N. B. R. 100, Fed. Cas. No. 7,208. See Hotchkiss v. National City Bank, 200 Fed. 287; In re Leigh (D. C.) 208 Fed. 486, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. Lovell (D. C.) 212 Fed. 337, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

[373] In re M. E. Dunn & Co., 193 Fed. 212, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127; In re Royea's Estate, 143 Fed. 182, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141; In re Woods & Malone, 121 Fed. 599, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615; In re A. O. Brown & Co., 189 Fed. 432; In re City Bank of Dowagiac, 186 Fed. 250, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236; Ex parte Hobbs, 2 Low. 491, 14 N. B. R. 495, Fed. Cas. No. 6,549; Wuerpel v. Commercial Germania Trust & Sav. Bank, 238 Fed. 269, 151 C. C. A. 285, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223.

[374] In re Mulligan, 116 Fed. 715, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8.

[375] In re M. E. Dunn & Co., 193 Fed. 212, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127; Schuyler v. Littlefield, 232 U. S. 707, 34 Sup. Ct.

bankrupt took the trust funds and added some of his own money and placed the sum in the hands of a broker for investment in stocks, and most of it was lost, the cestui que trust cannot claim a lien on any of the stocks remaining in the hands of the broker and recovered by the trustee in bankruptcy, unless he can prove that they were bought with his money and not with that of the bankrupt.[376]

In a case in which the bankrupt had been engaged in business as a private banker, the following principles were laid down: First, claimants who had deposited funds with him for investment in a particular manner were entitled to subject to their claims a deposit account in the name of the bankrupt, provided they could trace their funds into such deposit, as it appeared that the bankrupt had assumed a fiduciary relation to them and had not carried out his undertaking. Second, claimants who bought from the bankrupt drafts which they used to send funds abroad could not assert a claim against a deposit to the account of the bankrupt merely because the drafts were not paid, where it appeared they obtained the drafts they bargained for and no circumstances of active fraud or deception were shown. Third, where several laid claim to a fluctuating deposit to the account of the bankrupt, on the theory that their funds, which had been impressed with a trust because of his breach of fiduciary relations, were commingled therewith, the several claimants were equitably entitled to an allowable preference in the inverse order of the times of their respective payments into the funds. Fourth, where a number of claimants delivered moneys to the bankrupt for particular investment, and he failed to make the investment, thus violating the fiduciary relation, and deposited the funds to his own account, the claimants were entitled to assert the trust against the deposit only to the extent of the smallest amount such deposit contained subsequent to the commingling.[377]

Where a consolidated corporation periodically declared dividends on its preferred stock, each time depositing in bank in a special fund sufficient money to pay the dividend, such deposit became a trust fund held by it for the stockholders, which did not pass to its trustee in bankruptcy, and in which the stockholders of the consolidating corporations, who had not yet exchanged their stock for that of the new corporation, but had the right to do so, were entitled to share to the extent of their dividends on making such exchange.[378]

466, 58 L. Ed. 806, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re A. D. Matthews' Sons, 238 Fed. 785, 151 C. C. A. 635, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438.

[376] In re Mulligan, 116 Fed. 715, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8.

[377] In re A. Bolognesi & Co., 254 Fed. 770, 166 C. C. A. 216, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

Where a bank (or an individual) advances money to a merchant to enable him to buy or import a stock of goods, and the merchant executes a trust receipt, by which he agrees to hold the goods in trust for the one so advancing the funds and as the latter's property, but with liberty to sell the same in the course of trade, and binding him to pay over the proceeds of such sales as fast as received until the advances are repaid, the title to the goods, before such repayment, does not vest in the merchant in such sense that they will be assets of his estate in bankruptcy, but the cestui que trust will be entitled to reclaim the goods from the trustee in bankruptcy, or their proceeds if sold.[379] And the same rule is applied where, instead of an advance of cash, the goods are directly supplied to the merchant by a manufacture or wholesaler, under the same form of trust receipt.[380]

§ 355. Same; Deposits in Bank.—The doctrine prevails in the federal courts that the relation between a bank and a depositor is simply that of debtor and creditor, and that, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, deposits are not special but become the property of the bank, which does not occupy the position of a trustee, so that upon its bankruptcy, an ordinary depositor cannot claim to be repaid the amount of his balance but must take his place with all other creditors.[381] There may of course be a form of special deposit, contemplating the return of the identical bills or coin, made for safe-keeping only, under which the deposit would not become the property of the bank,[382] but the mere fact

[378] In re Interborough Consol. Corp. (D. C.) 267 Fed. 914, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 203.

[379] In re Cattus, 183 Fed. 733, 106 C. C. A. 171, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; Charavay & Bodvin v. York Silk Mfg. Co., 170 Fed. 819; In re E. Reboulin Fils & Co., 165 Fed. 245, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 296; In re Emerson, Marlow & Co., 199 Fed. 99, 117 C. C. A. 639, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179; In re Boessneck, 232 Fed. 596, 146 C. C. A. 554; In re Bettman-Johnson Co., 250 Fed. 657, 163 C. C. A. 3, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128.

[380] Walter A. Wood Co. v. Eubanks, 169 Fed. 929, 95 C. C. A. 273, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; Corbitt Buggy Co. v. Ricaud, 169 Fed. 935, 95 C. C. A. 279, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316; In re J. V. Lindsley & Co., 185 Fed. 684, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; Webster v. Stearns, 75 N. H. 451, 75 Atl. 983. But see Ungewitter v. Von Sachs, 4 Ben. 167, 3 N. B. R. 723, Fed. Cas. No. 14,343.

[381] In re Smith, 15 N. B. R. 459. Fed. Cas. No. 12,990; Bank of Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. 152, 19 L. Ed. 897; Claflin Co. v. Eason, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 360.

[382] See In re King, 9 N. B. R. 140. In this case, the creditor claimed to have deposited 72 twenty-dollar gold pieces, as a special deposit, with the bankrupt, who was a banker. It was alleged that this money was sewed up in a belt, with the owner's name attached, and the bankrupt was directed to keep it, deliverable only to the owner or to some person specially authorized by him to receive it. The creditor petitioned to have his debt paid in full out of the general assets. The trustee refused to that money is deposited for a specific purpose, as, to pay a mortgage note when presented, does not stamp it as a trust fund, or make the banker a fiduciary.[383] And those who deposit money in a bank after it has suspended payment and then resumed business, on the strength of an advertisement by the bank that it will keep the old and new accounts separate, are not entitled to a preference on its subsequent bankruptcy.[384] The rule is substantially the same as to collections made by a bank. A creditor of a bank which collects money for him and fails to pay it over has no priority over other creditors in the bankruptcy of the bank.[385] It may be that a check or note deposited with a bank for collection, and against which the depositor is not allowed to draw until payment, does not become the property of the bank, and may be reclaimed from its trustee in bankruptcy, and it has been so held,[386] but it is otherwise where the note or check is at once passed to the credit of the depositor's general account, especially if the account was then overdrawn.[387] On the same principle, where one bank agrees to become the agent of another, for clearing-house purposes, and in that capacity agrees to pay all the checks of the latter which come to it through the clearing-house, and in pursuance of this arrangement the latter bank sends funds to the former from time to time, which are passed to its credit but not kept separate, the relation of the two banks is simply that of debtor and creditor, and the funds cannot be considered as clothed with a trust, but will, on failure of the bank receiving them, pass to its trustee.[388]

§ 356. Property Held by Bankrupt as Agent or Bailee.—Property in the possession of a bankrupt, which he holds only as agent or bailee for another, does not pass to his trustee.[389] For instance, money received by pay, stating that no such belt was found, and that he was not able to say whether these particular gold coins were among the gold received as part of the bankrupt's assets. It was held that the creditor could only share pro rata with the other creditors and was not entitled to payment in full.

[383] In re Hosie, 7 N. B. R. 601, Fed. Cas. No. 6,711. But see In re Jarmulowsky, 258 Fed. 231, 169 C. C. A. 297, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536, holding that the trustee in bankruptcy of a private banker cannot retain money given to the bankrupt for transmittal.

[384] In re Mutual Building Fund Society & Dollar Sav. Bank, 2 Hughes, 374, 15 N. B. R. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 9,976.

[385] Bank of Commerce v. Russell, 2 Dill. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 884.

[386] In re Havens, 8 Ben. 309, Fed. Cas. No. 6,230.

[387] In re Bank of Madison, 5 Biss. 515, 9 N. B. R. 184, Fed. Cas. No. 890. See In re Jarmulowsky (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 779, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432.

[388] Phelan v. Iron Mountain Bank, 4 Dill. 88, 16 N. B. R. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 11,069.

[389] In re Hawley Down-Draft Furnace Co., 238 Fed. 122, 151 C. C. A. 198, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; In re Wright-Dana Hardware Co., 211 Fed. 908, 128 C. C. A. 286, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764; In re Devon Manor Corporation (D. C.) 257 Fed. 766, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; L. C. Smith & Bro. Typewriter Co. v. Alleman, an attorney for his client, and which he kept distinct and separate from his own funds, is no part of his estate in bankruptcy.[390] And so of bonds or certificates of stock or other securities in the hands of a broker for sale for the account of his customer, or the proceeds of such sales if capable of identification,[391] and so also of raw material or unfinished products placed in the hands of the bankrupt for manufacture or completion or for repairs,[392] and of grain stored with a warehouseman, provided it is kept separate or in such a manner as to be capable of identification or separation.[393] So again, a right of action upon a contract made by the bankrupt in his own name, but as agent for an undisclosed principal, in which the bankrupt has no beneficial interest, does not vest in his trustee.[394] But where an agent agrees to be liable to his principal for any damage by fire to the latter's property in his hands, the money due from an insurance company to the agent on account of loss under its policy, is not a trust fund for the benefit of the principal, but a debt due to the agent, which becomes a part of his general estate in bankruptcy.[395]

But the form of contract which the courts of bankruptcy are most frequently called upon to construe, in this connection, is that by which goods are consigned to a factor or agent for their sale, to be sold for the account of the consignor and to remain his property until sold, and the agent to account for the proceeds of sale. This is a perfectly valid form of contract, and it constitutes a bailment and not a conditional sale, and on the bankruptcy of the factor or agent, the principal is entitled to re-

199 Fed. 1, 117 C. C. A. 577, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699; In re Marx Tailoring Co. (D. C.) 196 Fed. 243, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147; Gallaspy v. International Harvester Co., 109 Miss. 904, 67 South. 904. As a condition to the recovery of specific property held by the bankrupt as a bailee, the bailor must pay to the trustee in bankruptcy any sum already paid by the bailee on a contemplated purchase of the property. Goldman v. Shreve (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 74, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

390 Schoolfield's Adm'r v. Rudd, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 291.

391 Hamilton v. National Loan Bank, 3 Dill. 230, 18 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 5,987; Voight v. Lewis, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 511, 14 N. B. R. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 16,989. And see, infra, § 357.

392 In re Susquehanna Roofing Co., 173 Fed. 150, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 5; Safford v. Burgess, 16 N. B. R. 402, Fed. Cas. No. 12,213; In re Oberhoffer, 9 Ben. 485, 17 N. B. R. 546, Fed. Cas. No. 10,396; Stow v. Yarwood, 20 Ill. 497. But see In re Sassman, 167 Fed. 419, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893; Chisholm v. Eagle Ore Sampling Co., 144 Fed. 670, 75 C. C. A. 472, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423. Compare In re MacDonald, 138 Fed. 463, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797. Where furniture owned by a creditor was at the time of the bankruptcy in the possession of the bankrupt for repairs, which had been partially completed, the creditor may reclaim the furniture on payment of the amount then due for work done thereon. In re Pottier & Stymus Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 955, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469.

393 Adams v. Meyers, 1 Sawy. 306, 8 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 62. In re Chalmers (D. C.) 206 Fed. 143, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521.

394 Rhoades v. Blackiston, 106 Mass. 334, 8 Am. Rep. 332.

395 David Bradley & Co. v. Brown, 78 Neb. 836, 112 N. W. 331, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 152, 126 Am. St. Rep. 647.

claim from the trustee in bankruptcy all of the goods remaining unsold and the proceeds of any sold by the trustee,[396] unless this kind of arrangement is made fraudulent and void as to creditors by some provision of the local statute,[397] or unless the arrangement is not made in good faith but with a fraudulent purpose to cheat other creditors.[398] But irregularities in conducting the business under a contract of factorage do not avoid the contract in bankruptcy so long as no creditor of the bankrupt was misled to his injury.[399] And where coal was delivered to an agent under a contract between the principal and the seller, the fact that a subsequent contract between the principal and the agent, defining the terms of the agency, contained illegal provisions for the control of the agent, does not preclude recovery by the principal of the coal and the proceeds of sale thereof from the agent's trustee in bankruptcy.[400] And although the bankrupt did not advertise himself as an agent, or in any way indicate that he was selling goods on consignment, that fact [396] Ludvigh v. American Woolen Co., 231 U. S. 522, 34 Sup. Ct. 161, 58 L. Ed. 345, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481; In re Marx Tailoring Co., 196 Fed. 243, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147; In re Smith, 192 Fed. 574, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647; In re Monongahela Distillery Co., 186 Fed. 220; In re Fabian, 151 Fed. 949, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488; In re Smith & Nixon Piano Co., 149 Fed. 111, 79 C. C. A. 53, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 636; Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., 168 Fed. 857, 94 C. C. A. 269, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Vanstory, 171 Fed. 375, 96 C. C. A. 331, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740; In re Galt, 120 Fed. 64, 56 C. C. A. 470, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575; In re Pierce, 157 Fed. 757, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664; In re Bailey, 176 Fed. 628, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 876; Price v. Ralston, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 60, 1 L. Ed. 289, 1 Am. Dec. 260; McKey v. Clark, 233 Fed. 928, 147 C. C. A. 602, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699; Healey v. Boston Batavia Rubber Co. (D. C.) 268 Fed. 75, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; In re King (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 318, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95; In re National Home & Hotel Supply Co. (D. C.) 226 Fed. 840; In re Reeves (D. C.) 227 Fed. 711, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 130; In re Bondurant Hardware Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 247, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308; In re Wright & Barron Drug Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 411, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486; General Electric Co. v. Brower, 221 Fed. 597, 137 C. C. A. 321, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 642; In re Caldwell Machinery Co. (D. C.) 215 Fed. 428; Thomas v. Field-Brundage Co., 215 Fed. 891, 132 C. C. A. 231; Gray v. A. W. Martin & Co., 18 Ga. App. 460, 89 S. E. 540.

[397] Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, 122 Fed. 593, 58 C. C. A. 261, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466. Under Code Va., 1904, § 2877, providing that all property or stock acquired or used in the business of a trader, doing business in his own name and not displaying by a sign the name of any partner or principal, shall be liable for his debts, the trustee in bankruptcy of such a trader takes title to his stock, including goods held on consignment. Virginia Book Co. v. Sites, 254 Fed. 46, 165 C. C. A. 456, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450. But under the law of Georgia, which does not require the recording of consignment contracts, the fact that a bankrupt had in his possession goods held on consignment under an unrecorded contract does not vest the trustee with their ownership. In re Thomas (D. C.) 231 Fed. 513, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600.

[398] In re Cozatsky (D. C.) 216 Fed. 920, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323.

[399] McElwain-Barton Shoe Co. v. Bassett, 231 Fed. 889, 146 C. C. A. 85, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

[400] In re H. L. Herbert & Co. (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 351, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20.

does not affect the rights of the owner who had consigned goods to him for sale.[401]

As to the proceeds of sales made before the bankruptcy, it is held that the consignor is entitled to the possession and benefit of any notes, checks, or specific uncollected debts for goods so sold,[402] and to the cash proceeds of any sale which can be traced and specifically distinguished from the general mass of the agent's property.[403] Under the older rule, however, the principal was not entitled to recover money arising from such sales if it had been inextricably mingled with the general funds of the bankrupt, bearing no ear-mark and not being capable of identification.[404] But the modern rule, applicable to all kinds of trust funds, is now applied to this case, so that, if the proceeds of such sales of the principal's goods have swelled the funds coming to the trustee in bankruptcy, and such funds have at all times equalled or exceeded the amount due to the principal, equity will follow the goods into their proceeds and decree his reimbursement.[405]

But in many cases there is strong ground for suspecting that this kind of arrangement has been resorted to for the precise purpose of protecting the seller or consignor in case of the bankruptcy of the alleged agent or factor. This will not be countenanced. And where the transaction is essentially a sale on credit, though masked as a consignment for sale, the seller will not be entitled to reclaim goods unsold or the proceeds of any sales.[406] Thus it has been said that, to make out a case of agency contract for sale, it must appear that the goods were at all times subject to the owner's control, both as to the selling price and the manner in which the goods should be sold, that there was a strict accounting between the bankrupt and the owner at the periods called for in the contract, giving the names of purchasers and all other details of sales, and, if sales were made otherwise than for cash, that the notes and accounts had either been forwarded to the owner or accounted for by the bankrupt, and held subject to the owner's orders, to be forwarded

401 Taylor v. Fram, 252 Fed. 465, 164 C. C. A. 389, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 831.

402 In re McGehee, 166 Fed. 928, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656; Hutchinson v. Reed, 1 Hoff. Ch. (N. Y.) 316; In re Taft, 133 Fed. 511, 66 C. C. A. 385, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417; International Agricultural Corp. v. Sparks (D. C.) 250 Fed. 318, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

403 In re Bank of Madison, 5 Biss. 515, 9 N. B. R. 184, Fed. Cas. No. 890; Nutter v. Wheeler, 2 Low. 346, Fed. Cas. No. 10,384.

404 Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, 16, Fed. Cas. No. 14,164; In re Coan & Ten Broeke Mfg. Co., 6 Biss. 315, 12 N. B. R. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 2,915.

405 In re Northrup, 152 Fed. 763, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335; In re Kurtz, 125 Fed. 992, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129. And see, supra, § 354.

406 In re Carpenter, 125 Fed. 831, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147; In re Rabenau, 118 Fed. 471, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re Landsberger, 177 Fed. 443, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; In re Linforth, 4 Sawy. 370, 16 N. B. R. 435, Fed. Cas. No 8,369; In re A. Gaglione & Son, 200 Fed. 81, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694.

on demand.[407] So where the consignee is at liberty to sell the goods at any price and on any terms he pleases, accounting at a fixed price to the consignor, and is to pay taxes and insurance and is responsible for the loss of the goods, and is to pay for such as remain unsold at a fixed time, he is not an agent or factor, but the contract is one of conditional sale.[408] So if the contract contains no provision for commissions on sales, nor for the return of goods under any circumstances, and they are billed as sold.[409] The determining factor is often the liability of the consignee to buy and pay for all of the goods which may remain unsold at a given time. If this liability is a part of the contract, it is held a sale.[410] But if he has the privilege of returning goods then unsold, it is a contract of factorage.[411] Finally, where a merchant is charged a fixed price for the goods sent to him, including the cases and bottles in which they are contained, but allowed a "rebate" for empty cases and bottles returned, the contract is not one of bailment as to the cases and bottles, but of sale and return, and such as remain in his hands at the time of his bankruptcy are assets of his estate.[412]

§ 357. Money or Collateral in Hands of Bankrupt as Stock-Broker. —Where a stock-broker has in his possession, at the time of his bankruptcy, certificates of stock placed in his hands by a customer but not yet sold, or stock bought for a customer but not yet delivered to him, he holds the same as an agent or bailee, and the stock may be reclaimed by the owner from his trustee in bankruptcy.[413] And if the bankrupt had a larger quantity of that particular stock on hand at the time of his failure, it will be presumed that part of it was the stock belonging to such customer.[414] If the broker had bought various lots of stock in the same corporation for various customers, but had not delivered any of it, and it is found that, at the time of his bankruptcy, he had not enough of that particular stock in his possession to cover all of his customers who were "long" of it at that time, such customers are 407 In re Agnew, 178 Fed. 478, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; Taylor v. Fram (D. C.) 243 Fed. 733, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377.

408 In re Rabenau, 118 Fed. 471, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re Wells, 140 Fed. 752, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; Miller Rubber Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Sav. Bank, 233 Fed. 488, 147 C. C. A. 374, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

409 In re Martin-Vernon Music Co., 132 Fed. 983, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276.

410 Parlett v. Blake, 188 Fed. 200, 110 C. C. A. 72, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25. See Bransford v. Regal Shoe Co., 237 Fed. 67, 150 C. C. A. 269, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450.

411 Ludvigh v. American Woolen Co., 188 Fed. 30, 110 C. C. A. 180; In re Larkin & Metcalf, 202 Fed. 572.

412 In re Allen, 183 Fed. 172, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

413 In re James Carothers & Co., 182 Fed. 501.

414 In re Graff, 117 Fed. 343, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744; Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 33 Sup. Ct. 690, 57 L. Ed. 1047, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266. And see Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 28 Sup. Ct. 512, 52 L. Ed. 835, 14 Ann. Cas. 981, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; Sexton v. Kessler & Co., 225 U. S. 90, 32 Sup. Ct. 657, 56 L. Ed. 995, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85.

entitled to have his holdings of that stock divided among them pro rata.[415] If the broker had bought stock for a customer, but instead of delivering it he converted it to his own use and sold it, still, if he has in his possession at the time of his bankruptcy an equal or greater amount of the same stock, not specifically identified as belonging to any one else, the customer may claim and receive the number of shares originally bought for him, to the exclusion of general creditors. "It is unnecessary for a customer, where shares of stock of the same kind are in the hands of a broker, being held to satisfy his claims, to be able to put his finger upon the identical certificates of stock purchased for him. It is enough that the broker has shares of the same kind which are legally subject to the demand of the customer. And in this respect the trustee in bankruptcy is in the same position as the broker."[416] The same principle applies where there are several customers claiming stock of the same kind. But if the broker had converted a part of the stock held for various customers, leaving unconverted a certain amount of similar stock, there is no presumption that he selected the stock of margin customers for conversion, leaving untouched the stock of cash customers.[417]

A deposit of securities with a broker by a customer as margin, and as security against losses in stock transactions, under an agreement which does not contemplate a sale or disposition of such securities by the broker except in the event of losses, constitutes a pledge and does not create the relation of debtor and creditor, and where the securities have not been sold by the broker to meet marginal requirements prior to his bankuptcy, they may be recovered by the pledgor from the bankrupt's trustee.[418] And the court should not require him to make good losses for which he would have been liable, if the stocks pretended to have been bought for him had really been bought and carried, as a condition to his

[415] Duel v. Hollins, 241 U. S. 523, 36 Sup. Ct. 615, 60 L. Ed. 1143, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 33 Sup. Ct. 690, 57 L. Ed. 1047, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; In re Pierson, 238 Fed. 142, 151 C. C. A. 218, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214; In re H. B. Hollins & Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 317. See In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350, holding that, though shares of certain stock held by a bankrupt broker are insufficient to satisfy long customers for whom he held such stock, a customer who can identify his stock by certificate number is entitled to reclaim that stock or its proceeds.

[416] Gorman v. Littlefield, 229 U. S. 19, 33 Sup. Ct. 690, 57 L. Ed. 1047, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266, reversing In re Brown, 184 Fed. 454, 106 C. C. A. 536. And see Duel v. Hollins, 241 U. S. 523, 36 Sup. Ct. 615, 60 L. Ed. 1143, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re B. Solomon & Co. (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 108, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

[417] In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

[418] In re Jacob Berry & Co., 149 Fed. 176, 79 C. C. A. 124, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467, affirmed, Thomas v. Taggart, 209 U. S. 385, 28 Sup. Ct. 519, 52 L. Ed. 845, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710; United Nat. Bank v. Tappan, 33 R. I. 1, 79 Atl. 946; In re T. A. McIntyre & Co. (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 955, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Adams, 224 Mass. 442, 113 N. E. 277, L. R. A. 1916F, 488.

recovery of the securities deposited as collateral.[419] But a claimant who remitted money to brokers to purchase stocks, which were bought and paid for by the brokers but afterwards converted to their own use, cannot rescind the whole transaction and recover the money so remitted, from the trustee in bankruptcy of the brokers, as a trust fund, although he may follow the proceeds of the stocks, if sold by the brokers, and if such proceeds can be traced into the hands of the trustee.[420] So likewise, where the customer does not remit to the broker the entire price of the stock to be bought for him, but a margin, and the broker buys and carries the stock, the latter holds it as a pledgee, and on his bankruptcy the customer is entitled to the stock on payment of the amount due thereon, or to the surplus realized from its sale by the trustee, to the exclusion of the general creditors.[421] Another problem arises where a broker, having in his possession stock bought for a customer and paid for, or stock placed in his hands as security for a customer's account, but without authority to use or hypothecate the same, pledges it as collateral security for his own debt to a third person. Here the pledgee probably has a lien on the stock for repayment of his advances, but if his debt is satisfied from other sources and the stock surrendered to the broker's trustee in bankruptcy, the customer may then reclaim it, or if the stock remains in the hands of the pledgee, the customer may be subrogated to the rights of the bankrupt and so recover it.[422] But in order to do this, the claimant must be able to identify the stock as his own. It is not sufficient for him merely to show that the trustee in bankruptcy has in his hands an equal or greater number of shares of the same kind of stock, recovered by him from third persons to whom they had been pledged by the bankrupt. In addition, he must be able to trace his own stock, or to show, at least with a reasonable degree of certainty, that some portion of the stock in the trustee's hands is the identical stock which belonged to him and which the bankrupt wrongfully hypothecat-

[419] In re Ennis, 187 Fed. 726, 109 C. C. A. 474.

[420] In re Brown, 175 Fed. 769, 99 C. C. A. 345, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423; In re A. O. Brown & Co., 185 Fed. 972. The trustee in bankruptcy of a broker acquires no right to money delivered to the broker to be applied on payment for stock which the broker never secured, but merely ordered from another broker and the next day sold. In re Wettengel, 238 Fed. 798, 151 C. C. A. 648, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[421] Kean v. Dickinson, 152 Fed. 1022, 82 C. C. A. 667; In re Bolling, 147 Fed. 786, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399.

[422] In re T. A. McIntyre & Co., 189 Fed. 46, 110 C. C. A. 610, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 771; In re Ennis, 187 Fed. 720, 109 C. C. A. 468; In re A. O. Brown & Co., 183 Fed. 861, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; In re Meadows, Williams & Co., 173 Fed. 694, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124; In re Amy (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 8, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15. Owners of securities in the hands of bankrupts, who were brokers, which had been wrongfully pledged as collateral for a bank loan, and were sold by the bank, were held subrogated to the bank's right of set-off with respect to a general balance to the credit of the bankrupts in their deposit account. In ed, or represents its proceeds.[423] Where a bankrupt has pledged his own securities and the securities of various of his customers, his own securities are to be applied first to the payment of the sum for which they were pledged, then those of his customers rightfully pledged, and lastly those of his customers wrongfully pledged.[424] And where a broker converts a portion of the long stock of a customer trading on margin, and the latter, with notice of the conversion, allows the broker to remain in possession of his unconverted stock, which is hypothecated and upon the broker's bankruptcy sold by the pledgee, the customer's claim, no matter how much the value of the unconverted shares exceeded his debit balance, is inferior to those of customers whose stock was hypothecated without authority and who can trace such stock or its proceeds.[425] Where stockbrokers made an unauthorized pledge of stock belonging to their customers, part of which the pledgee, upon the bankruptcy of the brokers, sold to satisfy the brokers' indebtedness, a customer whose stock was not sold by the pledgee is no better situated than customers whose stock was sold and can be successfully traced, the former being merely entitled to prorate with the latter.[426]

Where the broker has sold his customer's securities, or they have been sold by a third person to whom he pledged them, the customer may still claim full reimbursement out of the proceeds if he can trace his money into a particular fund, and this can be done—on the doctrine of the commingling of funds—if he can show that the bankrupt broker's balance in bank, or the amount due to him from the party to whom the customer's stock was sold or pledged, has been, at all times since the conversion, equal to or greater than the amount realized on the sale of the customer's securities.[427] In another case, a customer directed the broker to sell certain stock on his account, and, on being advised that the sale had been made, delivered to the broker his certificate for the stock and received in exchange a check which proved to be worthless, and the broker's bankruptcy followed. It was shown that the broker had made a sale of so many shares of the stock as directed by his customer, but re Leavitt & Grant, 215 Fed. 901, 132 C. C. A. 139, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63.

[423] In re Ennis, 187 Fed. 728, 109 C. C. A. 476; In re T. A. McIntyre & Co. (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 960, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93.

[424] In re H. B. Hollins & Co., 232 Fed. 124, 146 C. C. A. 316, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

[425] In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

[426] In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350. See In re Toole (C. C. A.) 274 Fed. 337, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

[427] In re Swift (D. C.) 108 Fed. 212; In re Graff (D. C.) 117 Fed. 343, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744; In re A. O. Brown & Co. (D. C.) 189 Fed. 432; In re Brown, 185 Fed. 766, 107 C. C. A. 656; In re James Carothers & Co. (D. C.) 182 Fed. 501; In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

had delivered stock of his own and received payment. It was held that the customer had the right to recover the proceeds of his stock from the bankrupt's trustee, if they had not been dissipated, and if they had been, to rescind the delivery and reclaim his stock.[428]

The fact that one who loaned securities to a broker who became bankrupt proved his claim for the value of such securities in the bankruptcy proceedings does not prevent him from reclaiming the actual securities themselves, provided he reserved the right to do so.[429]

§ 358. Property Held Under Contract of Conditional Sale.—Except in so far as the matter may be regulated by a local statute, the rule is that property in the possession of a bankrupt under a contract of conditional sale, the condition not having been performed (as, where he bought under a written contract stipulating that the title should remain in the vendor until the goods were fully paid for), does not vest in the trustee in bankruptcy, and he is not entitled to hold it as against the unpaid vendor.[430] If no payment has been made on the price of the property, the vendor may reclaim it. If it has been paid for in [428] In re A. O. Brown & Co. (D. C.) 189 Fed. 432.

[429] Robinson v. Roe, 233 Fed. 936, 147 C. C. A. 610, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26.

[430] Smith Wallace Shoe Co. v. Ternes, 235 Fed. 282, 148 C. C. A. 642, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845; In re K. Marks & Co., 222 Fed. 52, 137 C. C. A. 590; In re Seward Dredging Co., 242 Fed. 225, 155 C. C. A. 65, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Shook v. Levi, 240 Fed. 121, 153 C. C. A. 157, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549; In re Traunstein (D. C.) 225 Fed. 317, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482; In re American Steel Supply Syndicate (D. C.) 256 Fed. 876, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271; In re Wegman Piano Co. (D. C.) 221 Fed. 128, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490; In re Place (D. C.) 224 Fed. 778, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re I. S. Remsen Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 227 Fed. 207, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195; In re Hamil (D. C.) 236 Fed. 292, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; In re White's Express Co., 215 Fed. 894, 132 C. C. A. 234, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; In re Robinson Mach. Co. (D. C.) 268 Fed. 165, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; Davis v. Crompton, 158 Fed. 735, 85 C. C. A. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Regealed Ice Co., 191 Fed. 931; In re Gartman, 186 Fed. 349; In re Forse, 182 Fed. 212, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134; In re C. K. Hutchins Co., 179 Fed. 864, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647; In re Pittsburgh Industrial Iron Works, 179 Fed. 151, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221; In re Atlanta News Pub. Co., 160 Fed. 519, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 193; Sprague Canning Mach. Co. v. Fuller, 158 Fed. 588, 86 C. C. A. 46, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157; Dunlop v. Mercer, 156 Fed. 545, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; Rogers v. Whitehouse, 71 Me. 222; Andre v. Murray (Ind.) 101 N. E. 81; Park v. South Bend Chilled Plow Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 843; Creamery Package Mfg. Co. v. Horton, 178 App. Div. 467, 165 N. Y. Supp. 257; Toledo Computing Scale Co. v. Johnson, 194 Ill. App. 159; Jennings v. Schwartz, 86 Wash. 202, 149 Pac. 947. Modification of the terms of payment for a machine sold under a conditional sale contract, may not be a waiver of the reservation of title, so as to prevent the seller, on the buyer's bankruptcy, from enforcing the condition. Colonial Trust Co. v. Thorpe, 194 Fed. 390, 114 C. C. A. 308, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451. A seller of property to a bankrupt by a contract of conditional sale, which provided that it should be insured for his benefit, will be entitled to the proceeds of the insurance where the property was burned within four months prior to the bankruptcy, although the bankrupt insured in his own name. In re Zitron, 203 Fed. 79, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 172.

part, he has a good and valid lien upon it for the unpaid balance of the purchase money, which the trustee in bankruptcy must recognize.[431] And if it is likely to result in benefit to the estate, the trustee may pay such balance, and thereby become invested with full title to the property.[432] Or the trustee may be ordered to sell the property at public auction, and out of the proceeds pay to the vendor the balance due him on the contract.[433] If the property in question is valuable in the use (such as machinery) and was to have been paid for in monthly instalments called "rent," the vendor cannot recover such contract rentals for the time the property remained in the possession of the trustee pending the determination of his rights, but if the trustee used the property without his consent, he may recover the reasonable value of such use.[434]

The preliminary question whether the contract between the vendor and the bankrupt was one of conditional sale, absolute sale, sale and return, or lease or bailment, is a question of local law, and is to be determined in accordance with the decisions of the highest court of the state,[435] as is also the question of the validity of the contract, assuming it to be one of conditional sale.[436] And where a contract of [431] In re Bentz (D. C.) 267 Fed. 606, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164; In re New Orleans Milling Co. (D. C.) 263 Fed. 254, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364; Southern Hardware & Supply Co. v. Clark, 201 Fed. 1, 119 C. C. A. 339.

[432] In re Lyon, 7 N. B. R. 182, Fed. Cas. No. 8,644; In re Wegman Piano Co. (D. C.) 221 Fed. 128, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490. See Waterbury Trust Co. v. Weisman, 94 Conn. 210, 108 Atl. 550.

[433] In re Azule Natural Seltzer Water Co., 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 639; Allen v. Whittemore, 8 Ben. 485, 14 N. B. R. 189, Fed. Cas. No. 241.

[434] In re Daterson Pub. Co., 188 Fed. 64, 110 C. C. A. 134, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582. See Haskell v. Merrill, 179 Mass. 120, 60 N. E. 485.

[435] Mishawaka Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Westveer, 191 Fed. 465, 112 C. C. A. 109, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345, citing Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 25 Sup. Ct. 306, 49 L. Ed. 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 26 Sup. Ct. 481, 50 L. Ed. 782, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Bryant v. Swofford, 214 U. S. 279, 29 Sup. Ct. 614, 53 L. Ed. 997, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re E. M. Newton & Co., 153 Fed. 841, 83 C. C. A. 23, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; Bradley, Alderson & Co. v. McAfee, 149 Fed. 254, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495; In re Butterwick, 131 Fed. 371, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; Flanders Motor Co. v. Reed, 220 Fed. 642, 136 C. C. A. 250, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 842.

[436] First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title & Trust Co., 178 Fed. 187, 101 C. C. A. 507, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; Davis v. Crompton, 158 Fed. 735, 85 C. C. A. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Great Western Mfg. Co., 152 Fed. 123, 81 C. C. A. 341, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Lutz, 197 Fed. 492, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re Osborn, 196 Fed. 257; In re Nelson, 191 Fed. 233, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Dunn Hardware & Furniture Co., 132 Fed. 719, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147. Where a conditional sale contract provided for the delivery of goods in the Indian Territory, there being no local law therein inhibiting such contracts, the question whether the fact that they were furnished to the buyer for resale in the usual course of business invalidated the contract must be tested in bankruptcy proceedings against the buyer in accordance with the general law. In re Gray, 170 Fed. 638, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375.

conditional sale of personal property is made in one state, but provides for the delivery of the chattels in another state and their use there by the purchaser, it is to be governed, in a contest between the vendor and the trustee in bankruptcy of the vendee, by the law of the latter state, not the former.[437] Next, it is to be observed that the rights of the parties become fixed, so far as regards creditors of the vendee and his trustee in bankruptcy, at the time of the original transaction, and cannot be afterwards changed by their agreement so as to put the vendor in a more favorable position. If the contract was originally one of conditional sale, but the local law would make the reservation of title in the vendor ineffective as against creditors, it cannot be turned into a contract of bailment, or of lease, or of factorage, after the buyer has become insolvent, or especially after he has been adjudged bankrupt.[438] On the other hand, if the seller under a contract of conditional sale sues for the price, obtains judgment, and levies an execution, within four months prior to the purchaser's bankruptcy, he will be held to have waived his reserved title, and he will have no greater rights in the property than any other execution creditor.[439] It should also be observed in this connection that one claiming property which has passed into the possession of a trustee in bankruptcy, on the ground that the sale to the bankrupt was conditional, has the burden of proof.[440] If the trustee has taken possession of the property, it is in the custody of the law, and the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to determine all questions respecting title, possession, or control. The conditional vendor, in such a case, is an "adverse claimant," and is entitled to a plenary hearing in the bankruptcy court, but only the kind of plenary hearing that will end the situation.[441]

But in many states the laws now provide that a contract of conditional sale, though good between the immediate parties, shall not be valid as against creditors of the purchaser unless reduced to writing and cast in the form of a chattel mortgage, or unless filed or recorded in the proper office, so as to impart notice. Of course if the vendor fully complies with a statutory provision of this kind, it will be effective to preserve his rights as against the purchaser's trustee in bankruptcy.[442]

[437] In re Legg, 96 Fed. 326; In re Gehris-Herbine Co., 188 Fed. 502, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

[438] In re Poore, 140 Fed. 786, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407; In re Martin-Vernon Music Co., 132 Fed. 983, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276; In re Rinker, 174 Fed. 490, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62; In re Tweed, 131 Fed. 355, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

[439] In re Fitzhugh Hall Amusement Co., 230 Fed. 811, 145 C. C. A. 121, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493.

[440] In re Farmers' Dairy Ass'n (D. C.) 234 Fed. 118, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672.

[441] Story & Clark Piano Co. v. Holmes, 251 Fed. 565, 163 C. C. A. 559, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668.

[442] In re Farmers' Co-operative Co. of Barlow, N. D. (D. C.) 202 Fed. 1005,

But if not, there has been (until recently) much doubt and uncertainty as to his right to reclaim the property from the trustee in bankruptcy. In one line of cases it has been argued that such a contract, not protected by compliance with the statute, is fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the bankrupt, and therefore should be equally void as against their representative, the trustee in bankruptcy; that as it is good between the parties, the bankrupt has an interest or right under it which could have been transferred or levied on; and that it should be held within the terms of the bankruptcy act, providing that "claims which for want of record would not have been valid liens as against the claims of the creditors of the bankrupt shall not be liens against his estate." For some or all of these reasons the cases referred to held that the reservation of title in the vendor was void as against the trustee in bankruptcy, the state statute not having been complied with, and gave him no right to reclaim the property.[443] But these views have not prevailed. Other courts, following the lead of the Supreme Court of the United States, have held that if the contract was free from actual fraud and good as between the parties, it would be equally good and binding upon the purchaser's trustee in bankruptcy, although not acknowledged or recorded as required by the state law, and whatever might have been the rights of creditors outside of the bankruptcy proceedings, for the reason that a trustee in bankruptcy has no higher or stronger rights in property in the bankrupt's possession than the bankrupt himself.[444] And further, where the state

30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; Woods v. Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., 190 Fed. 935, 111 C. C. A. 569, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 172. In re Canuet Lumber Co. (D. C.) 178 Fed. 340.

[443] Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Quick, 182 Fed. 603, 105 C. C. A. 141, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394; In re Faulkner, 181 Fed. 981, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416; In re G. & K. Trunk Co., 176 Fed. 1007, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 914; In re Penny & Anderson, 176 Fed. 141, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; In re Rinker, 174 Fed. 490, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62; Chilberg v. Smith, 174 Fed. 805, 98 C. C. A. 513; McElvain v. Hardesty, 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; In re Burke, 168 Fed. 994, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; In re Fish Bros. Wagon Co. (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 553, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 149; In re Burt, 155 Fed. 267, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Perkins, 155 Fed. 237, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134; In re George O. Hassam & Son, 153 Fed. 932, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Franklin Lumber Co., 147 Fed. 852, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; In re Tice, 139 Fed. 52, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Poore, 139 Fed. 862, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174; In re Ducker, 134 Fed. 43, 67 C. C. A. 117, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Smith & Shuck, 132 Fed. 301, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103; In re Tweed, 131 Fed. 355, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Carpenter, 125 Fed. 831, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147; In re Pekin Plow Co., 112 Fed. 308, 50 C. C. A. 257, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; In re Howland. 109 Fed. 869, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495. In re Legg, 96 Fed. 326, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805; Press Post Printing Co. v. Landon Printing & Pub. Co., 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 774; Logan v. Nebraska Moline Plow Co., 3 Neb. (Unof.) 516, 92 N. W. 129; McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Wells, 99 Mo. App. 641, 74 S. W. 878.

[444] Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 214 U. S. 279, 29 Sup. Ct. 614, 53 L. Ed. 997, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111;

law provides for the filing of contracts of conditional sale, but makes an unfiled contract of that kind void only as to those creditors who have fastened upon the property by some specific lien, an adjudication in bankruptcy is not the equivalent of a judgment or attachment, so as to operate as a lien in favor of the trustee as against the conditional vendor of property sold to the bankrupt, because of failure to comply with the state law.[445] But this does not apply where actual fraud entered into the arrangement between the parties or where the transaction was merely colorable.[446]

Thus the law stood until 1910, when Congress passed an amendment to the bankruptcy act covering the case in point and probably enacted as a direct consequence of the conflicting decisions above mentioned. It provides that trustees in bankruptcy, "as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon."[447] This amendment was intended to protect the general creditors of a bankrupt against holders of unrecorded mortgages and conditional sales, and since its passage the right of the trustee in bankruptcy to hold and administer the property held by the bankrupt under an unrecorded contract of conditional sale is superior to the right of the seller.[448] But the amendment

Nauman Co. v. Bradshaw, 193 Fed. 350, 113 C. C. A. 274, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565; In re Anson Mercantile Co., 203 Fed. 871; In re Ferguson Contracting Co., 183 Fed. 880; Crucible Steel Co. of America v. Holt, 174 Fed. 127, 98 C. C. A. 101, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; York Mfg. Co. v. Brewster, 174 Fed. 566, 98 C. C. A. 348, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474; John Deere Plow Co. v. Anderson, 174 Fed. 815, 98 C. C. A. 523, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480; In re Hager, 166 Fed. 972; In re Pickens Mfg. Co., 166 Fed. 585; In re Cavagnaro, 143 Fed. 668, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Mishawaka Wooleu Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 158 Fed. 885, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Pierce, 157 Fed. 755, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662; In re Kellogg, 118 Fed. 1017, 56 C. C. A. 383; In re Hinsdale, 111 Fed. 502, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; In re Sewell, 111 Fed. 791, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133; Buckwalter Stove Co. v. Stratton, 118 App. Div. 915, 103 N. Y. Supp. 118; Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Elsey-Hemphill Carriage Co., 152 Mo. App. 401, 133 S. W. 412; John Deere Plow Co. v. Edgar Farmer Store Co. (Wis.) 143 N. W. 194. In re Superior Drop Forge & Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 813, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455; In re Terrell, 246 Fed. 743, 159 C. C. A. 45, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713; Mergenthaler Linotype Co. v. Hull, 239 Fed. 26, 152 C. C. A. 76, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187.

[445] York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 26 Sup. Ct. 481, 50 L. Ed. 782, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Hewit v. Berlin Machine Works, 194 U. S. 296, 24 Sup. Ct. 690, 48 L. Ed. 986, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709; In re Brown Wagon Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 266, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; John Deere Plow Co. v. Edgar Farmer Store Co., 154 Wis. 490, 143 N. W. 194. Compare In re Press-Post Printing Co., 134 Fed. 998, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797; Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, 122 Fed. 593, 58 C. C. A. 261, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466; In re Fraizer, 117 Fed. 746, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

[446] In re Fitzgerald, 188 Fed. 763, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104.

[447] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a, cl. 2, by adding the words quoted.

[448] In re Mina (D. C.) 270 Fed. 969, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 523; Augusta Grocery Co. v. Southern Moline Plow Co., 213 Fed. 786, 130 C. C. A. 444, 31 Am.

is not retroactive, and does not enable the trustee to invalidate a contract of conditional sale made prior to its passage and otherwise valid.[449] It is also held that the liens of execution creditors on property held by the insolvent judgment debtor under a contract of conditional sale, as they existed when the petition in bankruptcy was filed, cannot be subsequently destroyed so as to prevent the court of bankruptcy from preserving them for the benefit of the estate, by the act of the conditional vendor in retaking the property.[450]

§ 359. Property Held Under Executory and Option Contracts of Sale.—Property delivered to the bankrupt under a contract of sale with reservation of title in the vendor until payments are completed, or under a contract of lease with an option to purchase it on making certain specified payments, the title meanwhile to remain in the lessor or vendor, but which has not been paid for at the time of bankruptcy, does not vest in the trustee, but may be claimed from him by the vendor, or its Bankr. Rep. 677; Potter Mfg. Co. v. Arthur, 220 Fed. 843, 136 C. C. A. 589, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1268, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; Groner v. Babcock Printing Press Mfg. Co. (C. C A.) 267 Fed. 822, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; In re M. L. B. Sturkey Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 251, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Frankel (D. C.) 225 Fed. 129; In re Kreuger, 199 Fed. 367, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Dancy Hardware & Furniture Co., 198 Fed. 336, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Farmers' Supply Co., 196 Fed. 990, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; In re Nelson, 191 Fed. 233, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re J. S. Appel Suit & Cloak Co., 198 Fed. 322, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818; In re Hartdagen, 189 Fed. 546, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532; In re Calhoun Supply Co., 189 Fed. 537, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Gehris-Herbine Co., 188 Fed. 502, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; In re Franklin Lumber Co., 187 Fed. 281, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37; In re Williamsburg Knitting Mill, 190 Fed. 871, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178. See In re Rutland-Perry Co., 205 Fed. 200, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383. The amendatory act confers on the trustee an absolute right to attack the unrecorded lien of a conditional seller, without reference to whether the trustee represents creditors who have in fact acquired liens by legal or equitable proceedings against the bankrupt. In re Bazemore, 189 Fed. 236, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494. But property delivered to a bankrupt under an unrecorded contract of conditional sale, but retaken by the seller prior to the bankruptcy, though within four months, is not recoverable by the trustee, since it never became the bankrupt's property. Hart v. Emmerson-Brantingham Co., 203 Fed. 60, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218. A party seeking to reclaim from a trustee in bankruptcy property conditionally sold to the bankrupt has the burden of showing that there were prior creditors, as to whom the contract was not invalid, and that the claims of subsequent creditors will not exhaust the property. Potter Mfg. Co. v. Arthur, 220 Fed. 843, 136 C. C. A. 589, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 1268, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75. Where a conditional sale contract did not identify the property, and there was no identification of invoices of goods sold as the goods intended to be covered, the contract was void as against the buyer's trustee in bankruptcy exercising the rights of a lien creditor. Meier & Frank Co. v. Sabin, 214 Fed. 231, 130 C. C. A. 605, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595.

[449] Arctic Ice Mach. Co. v. Armstrong County Trust Co., 192 Fed. 114, 112 C. C. A. 458, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562; In re Schneider, 203 Fed. 589, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469.

[450] Rock Island Plow Co. v. Reardon, 222 U. S. 354, 32 Sup. Ct. 164, 56 L. Ed. 231; 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

proceeds if sold.[451] Or if some of the payments have been made, while others are in default, and the lessor has not attempted to forfeit the contract or retake the property, the trustee in bankruptcy may tender the amount remaining due under the contract and so acquire title to the property.[452] In regard to contracts of sale and return, an essential difference is to be noted between a delivery with an option to purchase and a sale with the privilege of rescinding and returning. "An option to purchase if he liked is essentially different from an option to return a purchase if he should not like. In one case, the title will not pass until the option is determined; in the other, the property passes at once, subject to the right to rescind and return."[453] Hence where goods were delivered to a bankrupt on memorandum, the understanding being that, if he signified his desire to keep them within thirty days after delivery, they should be charged to him, otherwise they should be returned, the contract was one of the first class above mentioned, and the title remained in the seller until the expiration of the buyer's option, so that, on his becoming bankrupt, the seller was entitled to a return of all such goods as had been delivered to the bankrupt within thirty days before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[454] On the other hand, where property is delivered to the bankrupt on the agreement that he is to put it into use and test and try it for a limited time, and that he shall have the privilege of returning it if it proves unsatisfactory, we have a contract of the second kind, under which the title passes to the bankrupt on delivery, though subject to be divested if he should elect to return the goods, and therefore the seller cannot reclaim the goods from the trustee but simply becomes a creditor for the price.[455] Again, where a wholesaler sends to a merchant a large assort-

[451] Hauck v. Frey (D. C.) 228 Fed. 779, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350; In re Atlantic Beach Corp. (D. C.) 244 Fed. 828, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514; Colonial Trust Co. v. Thorpe, 194 Fed. 390, 114 C. C. A. 308, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451; In re Kay-Tee Film Exchange (D. C.) 193 Fed. 140; Nylin v. American Trust & Sav. Bank., 166 Fed. 276, 92 C. C. A. 194, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; Hardcastle v. National Clothing Co., 137 Tenn. 64, 191 S. W. 524.

[452] In re Palatable Distilled Water Co., 154 Fed. 531, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 833; Breakstone v. Buffalo Foundry & Machine Co., 167 App. Div. 62, 152 N. Y. Supp. 394. Where a seller had the right to reclaim goods sold, for nonpayment of the price, at a time prior to the four months before the buyer's bankruptcy, but did not exercise it, he has no rights as against the trustee in bankruptcy. McCabe v. Northampton Trust Co., 60 Pa. Super. Ct. 18.

[453] Hunt v. Wyman, 100 Mass. 198, quoted with approbation in Sturm v. Baker, 150 U. S. 312, 14 Sup. Ct. 99, 37 L. Ed. 1093, and in Guss v. Nelson, 200 U. S. 302, 26 Sup. Ct. 260, 50 L. Ed. 489.

[454] In re Schindler, 158 Fed. 458, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800. But see In re Miller & Brown, 135 Fed. 868, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[455] In re Landis, 151 Fed. 896, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483. But compare In re Froelich Rubber Refining Co., 139 Fed. 201, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

ment of goods of a certain line, and the merchant selects those which he wishes to keep and places them in his stock, but keeps the rest separate, in their original packages, and marks them to be returned, the transaction, so far as regards the goods to be returned, is not a "sale and return," but a bailment, and those goods may be reclaimed by the seller from the merchant's trustee in bankruptcy.[456] So also the vendor is entitled to reclaim property which was to be paid for when installed, but which had not been installed nor even unpacked when bankruptcy intervened, as the title had not passed from him.[457] And again, if the bankrupt wrongfully gets possession of property, which was not to be delivered to him until paid for, and mingles it with his own goods of like kind, the seller will be entitled to recover from the trustee in bankruptcy the value of so much of his property as came into the trustee's hands.[458] But not so, where the goods are delivered to the purchaser to be sold by him in the usual course of his business, and the seller attempts to reserve title until payment with the right to take possession at any time, such a contract being fraudulent and void as against purchasers or creditors.[459] On a similar principle, the trustee acquires no title to land, the contract for which the bankrupt has forfeited before the bankruptcy, for failure of performance on his part.[460]

It should be remarked that the application to particular cases of these general rules may depend upon local statutes. For it is the state law which governs in determining the question whether the title to chattels passed to the bankrupt or remained in the seller; and where, for instance, under the state law, a seller's reservation of title was good as against the bankrupt and his creditors, it will be good against the trustee in bankruptcy.[461] But where a seller in one state delivers goods to a buyer in another state, the title thereto, as between the seller and the trustee in bankruptcy of the buyer, is governed by the laws of the state of the buyer.[462]

[456] In re Miller & Brown, 135 Fed. 871, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; In re Handy (D. C.) 218 Fed. 956, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666.

[457] Pridmore v. Puffer Mfg. Co., 163 Fed. 496, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851. Where a bankrupt, who had purchased fixtures under a retained title contract, joined to them other fixtures title to which was in him, his act in so doing having been unauthorized, the trustee in bankruptcy cannot sever the fixtures without paying to the seller, who had retained title, such sum as would actually restore his fixtures to their original condition. In re Dana Bros. (D. C.) 250 Fed. 268, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95.

[458] Erie R. Co. v. Dial, 140 Fed. 689, 72 C. C. A. 183, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

[459] In re Rasmussen's Estate, 136 Fed. 704, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462; In re Aronson (D. C.) 245 Fed. 207, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177.

[460] Norton v. Hood, 124 U. S. 20, 8 Sup. Ct. 357, 31 L. Ed. 364.

[461] In re Farmers' Dairy Ass'n (D. C.) 234 Fed. 118, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672.

[462] In re O'Callaghan (D. C.) 225 Fed. 133.

§ 360. Property Procured by Bankrupt by Fraud.—If one obtains goods from another on credit, with no intention of paying for them, or at least with no reasonable expectation of being able to pay for them, and the sale was induced by his false and fraudulent representations as to his financial condition, on which the seller relied, or would not have been made but for his fraudulent concealment of his insolvency, then the seller has the right to rescind the sale and recover his property, and this right is not lost by the bankruptcy of the purchaser. Though the latter has a title to the goods, and though this title passes to his trustee in bankruptcy, it is no more than a defeasible title, and if the goods have not lost their identity nor ceased to be distinguishable from others, the seller may follow them into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy and reclaim and recover them,[463] or their proceeds, if they have been sold by the trustee, provided the money arising from the sale of those particular goods can be distinguished from other funds in his hands.[464] And although the amendment to the bankruptcy act of 1910, which arms the trustee with the rights and powers of a lien creditor, gives him in some ways a stronger title than the bankrupt had, it does not affect this right of reclamation on the part of a defrauded vendor.[465] And although an attachment levied within four months be-

[463] Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 23 L. Ed. 993; Montgomery v. Bucyrus Machine Works, 92 U. S. 257, 23 L. Ed. 656; In re Arkin Dress Co., 253 Fed. 926, 166 C. C. A. 26; In re New York Commercial Co., 228 Fed. 120, 142 C. C. A. 526, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 779; Petition of Friedlaender, 233 Fed. 250, 147 C. C. A. 256, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7; In re Interocean Transp. Co., 234 Fed. 863, 148 C. C. A. 461, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765; Jones v. H. M. Hobbie Grocery Co., 246 Fed. 431, 158 C. C. A. 495, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 415; In re J. F. Growe Const. Co. (D. C.) 256 Fed. 907; In re Underwood & Daniel (D. C.) 215 Fed. 279; Halsey v. Diamond Distilleries Co., 191 Fed. 498, 112 C. C. A. 142, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333; Bloomingdale v. Empire Rubber Mfg. Co., 114 Fed. 1016, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; In re J. S. Patterson & Co., 125 Fed. 562, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748; In re Salmon, 145 Fed. 649, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; William Openhym & Sons v. Blake (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 536, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; Haywood Co. v. Pittsburgh Industrial Iron Works, 163 Fed. 799, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; In re McPeck, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 172; Davis v. Stewart, 8 Fed. 803; Donaldson v. Farwell, 5 Biss. 451, Fed. Cas. No. 3,983; Purviance v. Union Nat. Bank, 8 N. B. R. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 11,475; Goodyear Rubber Co. v. Schreiber, 29 Wash. 94, 69 Pac. 648; Richardson v. Vick, 125 Tenn. 532, 145 S. W. 174.

[464] In re Liebig, 255 Fed. 458, 166 C. C. A. 534, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; In re Watmough (D. C.) 210 Fed. 539, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; In re Arkin Dress Co., 253 Fed. 926, 166 C. C. A. 26, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; Gillespie v. J. C. Piles & Co., 178 Fed. 886, 102 C. C. A. 120, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; In re Weil (D. C.) 111 Fed. 897, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90. If the proceeds of the sale of the goods cannot be definitely traced into the trustee's hands, the seller must take the status of a general creditor on a quasi contractual obligation. In re Midland Motor Co., 224 Fed. 368, 140 C. C. A. 54, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

[465] In re Collins (D. C.) 242 Fed. 975, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510; In re Gold, 210 Fed. 410, 127 C. C. A. 142, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18; In re J. S. Appel Suit & Cloak Co. (D. C.) 198 Fed. 322, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818. But compare In re Whatley fore bankruptcy is avoided by the adjudication, yet if a creditor takes this method of recovering the goods from his fraudulent vendee, and pursues his process through a long and costly litigation for several years, without interference on the part of the trustee, it will be too late for the latter to have the attachment vacated.[466]

But while the general principle is well settled, as above set forth, the authorities are by no means clear as to the exact elements which must enter into the fraud in order to give the seller the right to rescind. In the first place, some of the decisions hold it necessary to show that the purchaser was insolvent at the time of the purchase,[467] while others maintain that this is not essential where specific false statements as to assets and concealment of debts are brought home to him and are shown to have induced the sale.[468] In the next place, some cases apply the strict rule that the purchaser must have had an actual intention not to pay for the goods when he acquired them,[469] while others hold that no such actual intention is necessary, if he knew at the time that he could not then pay for them and had no reasonable expectation of ever being able to do so.[470] In the next place, there is a general agreement that there must have been either false representations or a fraudulent concealment of material facts.[471] But whereas some of the decisions hold it to be a sufficient fraud if the purchaser merely conceals his insolvency or precarious financial condition, though well aware of it himself,[472] there are also rulings to the contrary.[473]

Bros. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 326, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

[466] Jacobson's Assignees v. Sims, 60 Ala. 185.

[467] In re Sol. Aarons & Co., 193 Fed. 646, 113 C. C. A. 514, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399; In re Henry Siegel Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 369, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 130.

[468] In re Bendall (D. C.) 183 Fed. 816, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

[469] In re Sol. Aarons & Co., 193 Fed. 646, 113 C. C. A. 514, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399; In re Levi & Pickard (D. C.) 148 Fed. 654, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756.

[470] In re Hamilton Furniture & Carpet Co. (D. C.) 117 Fed. 774, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65; In re Berg (D. C.) 183 Fed. 885, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170. Where the seller refused to deliver the goods unless the buyer would make a payment upon a previous indebtedness, and the buyer, to obtain the goods, gave a check without having funds in bank to meet it, and then became bankrupt, it was held that the seller was entitled to reclaim the goods, as they had remained in the original boxes unopened, and he had made an immediate demand. Mulroney Mfg. Co. v. Weeks, 185 Iowa, 714, 171 N. W. 36.

[471] Where the evidence shows that the sale of the goods was induced by the satisfactory existing business relations between the seller and buyer, and not by any false statements or concealments by the buyer, the seller cannot reclaim. In re Wilson-Nobles-Barr Co. (D. C.) 256 Fed. 966, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252. Where the bankrupt owned a business [472] In re Spann, 183 Fed. 819, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551, citing Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 23 L. Ed. 993, where however, there was both a concealment of insolvency and an intention not to pay for the goods, the latter being clearly established by the evidence.

[473] In re Davis, 112 Fed. 294, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276; Schroth v. Monarch Fence Co., 229 Fed. 549, 144 C. C. A. 9, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

But where the creditor sold goods to the bankrupt in an assumed name, extending credit to the man rather than to the name, it cannot be said that the bankrupt obtained the goods by fraud merely because he did not disclose his true name.[474] And the false representations or statements must have been made to the particular vendor, and it is not enough for him to show a general scheme to defraud creditors.[475] It is, however, agreed on all hands that the seller must have been ignorant of the buyer's insolvency, and also that the concealment or false representations induced him to make the sale on credit. He will have no right to rescind the sale and reclaim the goods if he delivered them with knowledge that the buyer was in failing circumstances,[476] or if he fairly understood the bankrupt's financial condition,[477] or admits that he might have sold the goods if the representations claimed had not been made.[478] Further, the law expects him to keep a reasonably close watch of the credit and financial standing of his customer, although his continuing to rely for a period of three months on financial statements satisfactory when made is not necessarily such negligence as to debar him from rescinding the sale.[479]

In any contest over a matter of this kind between the seller of goods and the trustee in bankruptcy of the buyer, the seller must act with reasonable promptness,[480] and he must sustain the burden of proving by clear and satisfactory evidence all the essential elements of his case, particularly the alleged false representation or concealment, its influence in inducing him to make the sale, and the buyer's knowledge of his own financial condition and the seller's ignorance of it.[481] In a which was carried on under a trade name and managed by her husband, false statements made by the husband to one from whom he bought goods, that he was the owner and was doing a big business, were held not binding on the bankrupt, and not material, and not such as to entitle the seller to reclaim. In re Bernstein (D. C.) 261 Fed. 719, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359.

[474] In re McUlta, 189 Fed. 250, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

[475] In re O'Connor, 112 Fed. 666, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 428. But see In re Johnson, 208 Fed. 164, holding that, where goods were sold to a bankrupt on credit, the seller relying entirely on a commercial rating which was based on information given by the bankrupt orally to the commercial agency's representative, which was false, the seller was entitled to reclaim the goods.

[476] In re Sweeney, 168 Fed. 612, 94 C. C. A. 90, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866.

[477] In re Hess, 138 Fed. 954, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[478] In re Davis, 112 Fed. 294, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276.

[479] In re J. S. Patterson & Co., 125 Fed. 562, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748.

[480] In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698. After the bankruptcy of the buyer who had wrongfully rejected the goods, the seller cannot reconsider his previous refusal of a rescission, and thereby revest the title in himself. Murphy v. John Hofman Co., 157 App. Div. 88, 141 N. Y. Supp. 900.

[481] In re Davis, 112 Fed. 294, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276; In re O'Connor, 112 Fed. 666, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 428; In re Stewart, 178 Fed. 463, 24 Am. Bankr.

case where the bankrupts each day overdrew their bank account, which was secured by collateral, and each night made deposits to cover, the fact that money fraudulently obtained from the complainants was from time to time included in such deposits, was held not to impress the surplus fund arising from the sale of the bank collateral after bankruptcy with a trust in favor of the complainants.[482]

Similar principles apply in the opposite case to that which we have been considering, that is, in the case where it is the seller of goods, and not the buyer, who becomes bankrupt. In one such case, the buyer placed an order for goods in reliance upon the statements of the seller as to its ability to fill the order, and gave a check on account. The seller was in fact insolvent at the time, and concealed that fact as well as the truth concerning its supply of goods on hand, and its representations of ability to fill the order were false. It was held that the buyer was entitled to reclaim so much of his money as yet remained in the possession of the seller and could be identified.[483]

The foregoing relates to sales of personal property. As to real estate, it is held that if the bankrupt has been the recipient of a conveyance made in fraud of the creditors of the grantor, although such a conveyance is voidable at the instance of those creditors, yet, as between the grantor and grantee (the bankrupt) it operates to pass title to the latter, and hence it gives him an estate which he must include in his schedule and which will vest in his trustee.[484] Exaggerated statements on behalf of the vendor as to the value of the land sold and the minerals thereon, but not intentionally false, do not defeat a claim against the purchaser's trustee in bankruptcy on the bonds given for the purchase price.[485]

§ 361. Property Sold or Pledged by Bankrupt.—Property actually sold or assigned by the bankrupt, without fraud, before the adjudication, and the title to which has passed, cannot be claimed or recovered by the trustee nor retained by him, as against the purchaser, if it comes into his possession.[486] If the transfer constituted a voidable preference, Rep. 474; In re Rose, 135 Fed. 888, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; In re American Knit Goods Mfg. Co., 155 Fed. 906, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212; In re K. Marks & Co., 218 Fed. 453, 134 C. C. A. 253, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275; Schroth v. Monarch Fence Co., 229 Fed. 549, 144 C. C. A. 9, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

[482] Knauth v. Knight, 255 Fed. 677, 167 C. C. A. 53, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743.

[483] In re Syracuse Gardens Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 284, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354.

[484] In re O'Bannon, 2 N. B. R. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 10,394; Aiken v. Edrington, 15 N. B. R. 271, Fed. Cas. No. 111.

[485] In re Georgia Steel Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 473, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426.

[486] Rode & Horn v. Phipps, 195 Fed. 414, 115 C. C. A. 316, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; Pyle v. Texas Transport &

the remedy of the trustee is by action, but meanwhile the purchaser is entitled to the possession of the property.[487] So also, an adjudication in bankruptcy operates to dissolve the lien of an execution levied within four months prior thereto, but if a sale has been held under an execution and the property delivered to the purchaser at such sale, his title is not affected by the subsequent adjudication of the debtor, and the latter's trustee cannot take the property from him.[488] And the same rule holds good in the case of a sale under a chattel mortgage.[489] But usually the question between a trustee in bankruptcy and one claiming the goods as a purchaser is whether the title had passed at the date of the bankruptcy. This depends on the intention of the parties, to be gathered from the contract, and if not expressly stated, then by inference or presumption from its terms.[490] Very often the determining element will be the fact of delivery or nondelivery.[491] In the case of land, the Terminal Co., 192 Fed. 725, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225; Lovell v. Isidore Newman & Son, 192 Fed. 753, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Scammon v. Bowers, 1 Hask. 496, Fed. Cas. No. 12,431; Green v. Holmes, 125 Mass. 46, note; Gill v. Bell's Knitting Mills, 128 App. Div. 691, 113 N. Y. Supp. 90; Carr v. Phillips, 39 Mich. 319; Hall v. Keating Implement & Machine Co., 33 Tex. Civ. App. 526, 77 S. W. 1054; Eason v. Garrison & Kelly, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800. But those acquiring rights to the bankrupt's property subsequent to the adjudication are not bona fide purchasers, at least where they had knowledge of sufficient facts to put them on inquiry. Hull v. Burr, 61 Fla. 625, 55 South. 852. Property of a partnership, contributed by its members to the capital of another partnership, of which they became members, was held to have passed to the new partnership and to be subject to its debts in bankruptcy as against the trustee of the former owner and in members, in Warner v. Grafton Woodworking Co., 210 Fed. 12, 126 C. C. A. 592.

[487] In re Blake, 171 Fed. 298, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612.

[488] In re Weitzel, 191 Fed. 463, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., 178 Fed. 136. See Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67f.

[489] Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. Ed. 816. See Benedict v. Zutes, 88 Misc. Rep. 214, 150 N. Y. Supp. 147; Simpson v. Combes, 107 Wash. 575, 182 Pac. 566.

[490] In re Clairfield Lumber Co., 194 Fed. 181; Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

[491] In re National Boat & Engine Co., 198 Fed. 407; Lovell v. H. Hentz & Co., 181 Fed. 555; Allen v. Hollander, 128 Fed. 159, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753; Weeks v. Fowler, 71 N. H. 518, 53 Atl. 543. Whether delivery of property sold by a bankrupt was sufficient to pass the title is to be determined by the law of the state. In re Waite-Robbins Motor Co., 192 Fed. 47, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541. Where a buyer of a crop of hops at a specified price per pound, to be delivered by the seller at a railroad station, inspected, weighed, and accepted a part of the crop at the seller's ranch, before the latter's bankruptcy, it was held that the title had passed as to such part of the crop, as against the seller's trustee in bankruptcy, the provision as to delivery at the railroad station being one which the buyer could waive and had waived. Williamson v. Richardson 205 Fed. 245, 123 C. C. A. 427, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. Where bankrupts had set aside cotton, and weighed, marked, and shipped it to a steamship for a purchaser's account before their bankruptcy, it was held that there was a delivery whereby it passed beyond the control of the bankrupts. Hiller v. Cornille & De Blonde, 228 Fed. 670, 143 C. C. A. 192, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377. Where purchasers of lumber accepted the same, receipted for the bill of lad-title may be considered as passing upon the delivery of a deed to the purchaser.[492] In the case of personalty, a symbolical delivery may be sufficient, as, by the delivery of the key to a room where the goods are stored,[493] or the delivery of warehouse receipts.[494] But a conveyance of real property which is intended as security only, although it is in form an absolute deed, is no more than a mortgage, and though it creates an enforceable lien, yet the property itself is assets of the mortgagor's estate in bankruptcy,[495] and even in the case of a mortgage regular in form, the mortgagee is not generally entitled to uncollected rents, but the same must go to the trustee in bankruptcy.[496]

Goods pledged by the bankrupt to secure a debt or claim, supposing that there is nothing fraudulent or preferential in the contract, are equally beyond the reach of the trustee, who can recover them and make them available as assets only on condition of redeeming from the pledge.[497] But the bailment, to have this effect, must be in all respects valid and binding under the laws of the state, and if an actual change of ing, and directed transfer of the shipment to a third party, to whom they transferred the lumber, it was held that, as title passed to the purchasers, the ultimate buyer became indebted to such purchasers and on bankruptcy the purchasers' trustee was entitled to the proceeds of the sale. Turnbull v. Potlatch Lumber Co. (Sup.) 181 N. Y. Supp. 56.

[492] Mason v. Perkins, 180 Mo. 702, 79 S. W. 683, 103 Am. St. Rep. 591; Congleton v. Schreihofer (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 144. See In re Dr. Riegel Sanitarium Co., 206 Fed. 319, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98. Where the bankrupt delivered a bond and mortgage under an agreement to pass title, creditors have no greater rights than the bankrupt, and the trustee in bankruptcy would have no better position than that of a subsequent lienor to the rights of the bank holding the bond and mortgage. In re Friedman (D. C.) 241 Fed. 603, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777.

[493] In re Cole, 171 Fed. 297, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611.

[494] Taney v. Penn Nat. Bank, 187 Fed. 689, 109 C. C. A. 437, affirming In re Miller Pure Rye Distilling Co., 176 Fed. 606, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 890. Jurisdiction in bankruptcy over property in a warehouse, the receipts for which were pledged as security for a loan, depends on whether possession thereof was with the bankrupt or with persons claiming adversely at the time the petition was filed. Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 174 Ill. App. 339, affirmed, Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. National Storage Co., 260 Ill. 485, 103 N. E. 227.

[495] In re Moore, 146 Fed. 187, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164.

[496] In re Dole, 110 Fed. 926, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; Elmore v. Symonds, 183 Mass. 321, 67 N. E. 314.

[497] Commercial Nat. Bank v. Hiller, 211 Fed. 337, 128 C. C. A. 16, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236. In re Miller Pure Rye Distilling Co., 214 Fed. 189, 130 C. C. A. 537; Roth v. Smith, 215 Fed. 82, 131 C. C. A. 390; In re Dreuil & Co., 205 Fed. 573, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; Bank of Brodhead v. Smith, 199 Fed. 703, 118 C. C. A. 141; Lovell v. Isidore Newman & Son, 192 Fed. 753, 113 C. C. A. 39, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Macauley, 158 Fed. 322, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; Van Kirk v. Vermont Slate Co., 140 Fed. 38, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; Bush v. Export Storage Co., 136 Fed. 918, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138; Lamb v. Hall, 147 Cal. 44, 81 Pac. 288; King v. Cram, 185 Mass. 103, 69 N. E. 1049. See Bank of North America v. Penn Motor Car Co., 235 Pa. St. 194, 83 Atl. 622; Martin v. Bankers' Trust Co., 18 Ariz. 55, 156 Pac. 87, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1240; Bennett v. North Philadelphia Trust Co., 66 Pa. Super. Ct. 261; Griffin v. Smith, 177 Cal. 481, 171 Pac. 92.

possession is necessary to constitute a valid pledge, the claimant must be able to show that this has taken place, or else he cannot hold the goods as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgor.[498] A contract by which a bankrupt agreed that in the event that certain goods which he had sold, and the accounts for which had been assigned to a bank, should be returned, the bankrupt would hold the goods or the proceeds in trust for the bank, and deliver the same on demand, was not, in the absence of such delivery, a valid pledge.[499] But the trustee of a bankrupt corporation, acting for the benefit of its creditors, can have an order for the cancellation of bonds of the corporation and a trust deed securing them, when they are held by one to whom they had been pledged for a debt, that debt having been paid, and the holder claiming to retain them as security for the debt of another corporation, for which they could not legally be held, although no fraud is alleged and the holder is making his claim in good faith.[500]

§ 362. Equitable Rights of Third Persons.—Aside from cases of preference and of fraudulent conveyance, a trustee in bankruptcy takes the property of the bankrupt subject not only to specific liens, but also to equities in favor of third persons, whether arising out of the act of the bankrupt or by operation of law, which are not invalid as to creditors.[501] Thus, for example, one having a claim against a fund by an 498 In re Gebbie & Co., 167 Fed. 609, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co.'s Trustee, 172 Fed. 177, 96 C. C. A. 629, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; In re A. P. Wilson & Co., 176 Fed. 652, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 907; Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 145 N. C. 320, 59 S. E. 154, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 935; French v. White, 78 Vt. 89, 62 Atl. 35, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 804, 6 Ann. Cas. 479; Goodrich v. Dore, 194 Mass. 493, 80 N. E. 480. See In re Zinner, 202 Fed. 197, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 860; In re Shulman, 206 Fed. 129, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238.

499 In re Shulman (D. C.) 206 Fed. 129, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238.

500 First Nat. Bank v. Towner, 239 Fed. 433, 152 C. C. A. 311, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

501 Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 391, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; Cohen v. Bacharach, 229 Fed. 385, 143 C. C. A. 505, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; In re Einstein (D. C.) 245 Fed. 189, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; In re Cotton (D. C.) 209 Fed. 124, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; In re Sherwoods, 210 Fed. 754, 127 C. C. A. 304, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 940, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769; Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re M. E. Dunn & Co. (D. C.) 193 Fed. 212, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127; In re McConnell (D. C.) 197 Fed. 438, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway (D. C.) 171 Fed. 940, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 803; In re Chantler Cloak & Suit Co. (D. C.) 151 Fed. 952, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; Crosby v. Ridout, 27 App. D. C. 481; Blake v. Meadows, 225 Mo. 1, 123 S. W. 868, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1; Kimball v. Baker Land & Title Co., 152 Wis. 441, 140 N. W. 47. See Hotchkiss v. National City Bank (D. C.) 200 Fed. 287. The trustee in bankruptcy of one who had contracted with the state to install certain plumbing will be postponed to the rights of a surety for the contractor, which performed the contract on the contractor's default. Derby v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 87 Or. 34, 169 Pac. 500.

equitable assignment from the bankrupt may assert it against the trustee in bankruptcy.[502] A check on a bank, where the drawer has sufficient funds to meet it, operates as an equitable assignment pro tanto of the money as between the holder of the check and the trustee in bankruptcy of the drawer,[503] unless the statute law of the particular state has established a different rule.[504] A draft does not ordinarily operate as an equitable assignment until it has been accepted, but if the drawer, having no funds to meet it at the time it is presented, afterwards makes a remittance for the specific purpose of taking up the draft, the holder has an equitable claim upon the fund thus set apart.[505] The same is true of an order given by the bankrupt on his attorney, directing the latter to pay the holder out of the proceeds of notes collected by him for the bankrupt,[506] and of an order on the bankrupt's agent to pay the holder out of rents collected by the agent for the bankrupt.[507] But a mere promise to pay out of a particular fund when received, the promisor retaining control of the fund, and no notice being given to the person who is to pay, does not create any lien or charge upon the fund or any equity in it,[508] nor does an order directing an insurance agent to pay the holder part of the proceeds of an insurance loss due to the bankrupt, where no notice is given to the insurance company and the agent has no authority from the company to comply with such an order.[509] And one who holds funds of the bankrupt in the character of a trustee or as security for his own debt, has no power to bind the trustee in bankruptcy by a promise given to a creditor to pay him out of the fund.[510] But where plaintiff, being a member of a stock exchange, is in the habit of executing orders for a brokerage firm not a member, and the firm accepts orders of customers, which it directs plaintiff to execute, such customers, though unknown to plaintiff, sustain the relation to him of debtor and creditor, and he will be required to pay them the funds he may have from their business done on the [502] In re Hanna (D. C.) 105 Fed. 587, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127; Andrews Electric, Inc. v. St. Alphonse Catholic Total Abstinence Soc., 233 Mass. 20, 123 N. E. 103. See In re Stiger (D. C.) 202 Fed. 791.

[503] First Nat. Bank v. Coates (C. C.) 8 Fed. 540, 3 McCrary, 9; Fourth Nat. Bank v. City Nat. Bank, 68 Ill. 398, 10 N. B. R. 44.

[504] In re Grive, 151 Fed. 711, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202.

[505] Dickey v. Harmon, 1 Cranch, C. C. 201, Fed. Cas. No. 3,894; Seligman v. Wells, 17 Blatchf. 410, 1 Fed. 302.

[506] In re Smith, 16 N. B. R. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 12,992.

[507] In re Oliver, 132 Fed. 588, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694.

[508] Ex parte Tremont Nail Co., 16 N. B. R. 448, Fed. Cas. No. 14,168.

[509] In re The Leader, 190 Fed. 624, 26 Bankr. Rep. 668.

[510] In re Ballantine, 186 Fed. 91, 109 C. C. A. 203, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275. See In re Kessler & Co., 165 Fed. 508, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583.

firm's orders, before he pays anything to the firm's trustee in bankruptcy.[511]

An equitable right or claim in favor of a third person may also grow out of circumstances which would raise an estoppel against the bankrupt to claim particular property as his own. Generally, such an estoppel will be equally effective against the trustee in bankruptcy.[512] And conversely, the trustee may claim an estoppel against one who fails to assert his claims at the proper season, provided that positive and clear loss has resulted.[513] But the advantage derived from a mistake made by a bankrupt when reducing to writing a contract made by him, is not an asset in the hands of his trustee, for the latter is not a bona fide purchaser for value in such sense as to bar the reformation of the contract in equity.[514] But on the other hand, circumstances under which a court of equity might permit a rescission of a contract of sale, on the ground of mistake, where the parties could be restored to their original position, may not warrant such relief after the purchaser has become bankrupt and the rights of creditors have intervened, and especially where the specific property cannot be restored.[515]

Real property of a bankrupt, which was intended to be covered by a mortgage, but which was not sufficiently described therein to give the trustee notice of the fact, passes to the trustee, especially since the amendment of 1910 to the Bankruptcy Act, which gives him the rights, remedies, and powers, of a creditor holding a lien.[516] But a receiver in bankruptcy acquires no specific lien on property of the bankrupt consisting in deposits in a bank which will prevent the bank from setting off against the deposits, after the adjudication, notes due to it which had not matured when the receiver was appointed.[517]

[511] Doucette v. Baldwin, 194 Mass. 131, 80 N. E. 444.

[512] Aldine Trust Co. v. Smith, 182 Fed. 449, 104 C. C. A. 556, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608. Where officers and stockholders of a corporation in effect ratify irregular payments by a corporate officer of his individual indebtedness with checks drawn directly upon the corporation, by remaining silent and thus preventing the creditor from proceeding against the corporate officer, the trustee in bankruptcy of the corporation cannot contend that the officer was not authorized to draw such checks. Atherton v. Beaman (D. C.) 256 Fed. 871, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631. Where two persons purchase property, each paying part of the purchase money, and title is taken in the name of one, the trustee in bankruptcy of the legal owner cannot claim a greater interest than the bankrupt actually had. Jones v. Dugan, 124 Md. 346, 92 Atl. 775.

[513] In re Loll, 162 Fed. 79, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

[514] Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 216 U. S. 134, 30 Sup. Ct. 368, 54 L. Ed. 418, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[515] In re American Knit Goods Mfg. Co., 155 Fed. 906, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212.

[516] In re Scruggs Bros. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 322, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

[517] De Long v. Mechanics & Metals Nat. Bank, 168 App. Div. 525, 153 N. Y. Supp. 1010.

CHAPTER XX

EFFECT OF BANKRUPTCY ON EXISTING LIENS

§ 363. Statutory Provisions.—The sixty-seventh section of the bankruptcy act provides, in clause "c," that "a lien created by or obtained in or pursuant to any suit or proceeding at law or in equity, including an attachment upon mesne process or a judgment by confession, which was begun against a person within four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against such person shall be dissolved by the adjudication of such person to be a bankrupt if (1) it appears that said lien was obtained and permitted while the defendant was insolvent and that its existence and enforcement will work a preference, or (2) the party or parties to be benefited thereby had reasonable cause to believe the defendant was insolvent and in contemplation of bankruptcy, or (3) that such lien was sought and permitted in fraud of the provisions of this act; or if the dissolution of such lien would militate against the best interests of the estate of such person, the same shall not be dissolved, but the trustee of the estate of such person, for the benefit of the estate, shall be subrogated to the rights of the holder of such lien and empowered to perfect and enforce the same in his name as trustee with like force and effect as such holder might have done had not bankruptcy proceedings intervened." Later in the same section it is provided (clause "f") that "all levies, judgments, attachments, or other liens, obtained through legal proceedings against a person who is insolvent, at any time within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, shall be deemed null and void in case he is adjudged a bankrupt, and the property affected by the levy, judgment, attachment, or other lien, shall be deemed wholly discharged and released from the same, and shall pass to the trustee as a part of the estate of the bankrupt, unless the court shall, on due notice, order that the right under such levy, judgment, attachment or other lien shall be preserved for the benefit of the estate; and thereupon the same shall pass to and may be preserved by the trustee for the benefit of the estate as aforesaid. And the court may order such conveyance as may be necessary to carry the purposes of this section into effect; Provided, that nothing herein contained shall have the effect to destroy or impair the title obtained by such levy, judgment, attachment, or other lien, of a bona fide purchaser for value who shall have acquired the same without notice or reasonable cause for inquiry."

Although the latter of these two provisions is in terms confined to a person "against" whom a petition in bankruptcy is filed, yet in view of the provision of the first section of the statute that "a person against whom a petition has been filed shall include a person who has filed a voluntary petition," it is held that the provision as to liens applies to cases of voluntary bankruptcy as well as to involuntary cases.[1] And although it may apply to proceedings on debts contracted before the pas-

[1] In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Dobson, 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420; In re Beals, 116 Fed. 530, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; In re Vaughan, 97 Fed. 560, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; In re Rhoads, 98 Fed. 399, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380; In re McCartney, 109 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; Gabriel v. Tonner, 138 Cal. 63, 70 Pac. 1021; McKenney v. Cheney, 118 Ga. 387, 45 S. E. 433; Jones v. Stevens, 94 Me. 582, 48 Atl. 170; Stickney & Babcock Coal Co. v. Goodwin, 95 Me. 246, 49 Atl. 1039, 85 Am. St. Rep. 408; Brown v. Case, 180 Mass. 45, 61 N. E. 279; Cavanaugh v. Fenley, 94 Minn. 505, 103 N. W. 711, 110 Am. St. Rep. 382; National Bank & Loan Co. v. Spencer, 53 App. Div. 547, 65 N. Y. Supp. 1001; Ford v. Henderson, 91 Or. 701, 178 Pac. 381, 179 Pac. 558; Wallace v. Camp, 200 Pa. St. 220, 49 Atl. 942; Mencke v. Rosenberg, 202 Pa. St. 131, 51 Atl. 767, 90 Am. St. Rep. 618; Rothermel v. Moyer, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 325; Gardiner v. Ross, 19 S. Dak. 497, 104 N. W. 220; Farrell v. W. B. Lockett & Co., 115 Tenn. 494, 91 S. W. 209. Contra, In re De Lue, 91 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re O'Connor, 95 Fed. 943; In re Easley, 93 Fed. 419, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715. And see In re Kemp, 101 Fed. 689, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

sage of the law, yet it is not for that reason objectionable as impairing the obligation of contracts, since it affects only the remedy on the contract, and not the contract itself.[2] This provision is not intended solely for effect in the courts of bankruptcy, but it is equally binding upon the courts of the states,[3] and it overrides and is superior to all state laws on the same subject.[4]

No one can fail to notice that the two clauses of the act which we have quoted above, clauses "c" and "f" of the sixty-seventh section, are to a certain extent duplicates of each other, and yet sufficiently unlike to introduce the greatest confusion into the law if both are to have equal authority. This state of affairs is accounted for by the fact that the one clause was contained in the bill as originally passed by the House of Representatives, and the other in the bill as originally passed by the Senate, and both were retained by the conference committee which settled the terms of the statute in its present form, and consequently passed by both houses without adverting to the conflict between them. It has sometimes been thought that the particular or special provisions in clause "c" are to be taken as exceptions to the general provisions of clause "f." [5] But the courts are now agreed that the two clauses are absolutely repugnant and irreconcilable, and that therefore in any case of conflict between them, clause "c" must give way, and clause "f" must prevail, as being the latest expression of the legislative will.[6] Yet the two clauses must be read together, for the light they may throw on each other, in construing the act as a whole.[7]

Both of these provisions relate to liens obtained through legal proceedings. As to liens created by the act of the parties, or raised by the law without suit, the provisions are that "claims which for want of record or for other reasons would not have been valid liens as against the claims of the creditors of the bankrupt shall not be liens against his estate," and that "liens given or accepted in good faith and not in contemplation of or in fraud upon this act, and for a present consideration, which have been recorded according to law, if record thereof was necessary in order to impart notice, shall, to the extent of such present consideration only, not be affected by this act." [8]

[2] In re Rhoads, 98 Fed. 399, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380.

[3] Thompson v. Ragan, 117 Ky. 577, 78 S. W. 485.

[4] Atkinson v. Purdy, Crabbe, 551, Fed. Cas. No. 616.

[5] Ex parte Chase, 62 S. C. 353, 38 S. E. 718.

[6] Cook v. Robinson (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 785, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Rhoads, 98 Fed. 399, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380.

[7] Folger v. Putnam (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 793, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173.

[8] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67, clauses "a" and "d."

§ 364. Validity of Liens as Against Trustee.—Except as to the classes of liens expressly declared by the bankruptcy act to be dissolved by an adjudication within four months after they attached, and except also in cases of fraud or attempted preference, the rule is that proceedings in bankruptcy do not interfere with existing valid liens, but the trustee takes the property of the bankrupt subject to all such liens as would have been enforceable against it in the hands of the bankrupt himself.[9] And as the trustee does not occupy the technical position of a "purchaser for value," it is immaterial whether or not he had notice of a given lien, or rather, he is supposed to take with notice.[10] Further, as to liens which are thus protected and preserved, the bankruptcy law makes no distinction between them, as to the manner in which they originated, or whether they are enforceable at law or in equity,[11] but will preserve them all and direct their payment in their relative order of rank and priority,[12] and if the trustee in bankruptcy does not undertake the administration of the property affected, and the lien creditor does not prove his debt in the bankruptcy proceeding, the lien will survive that proceeding.[13]

But a lien claimed by a creditor must be valid under the law of the particular state,[14] and free from all fraudulent design as against other

[9] Rode & Horn v. Phipps, 195 Fed. 414, 115 C. C. A. 316, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hurley, 153 Fed. 503, 82 C. C. A. 453, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396; Tucker v. Curtin, 148 Fed. 929, 78 C. C. A. 557, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354; In re Boschelli, 183 Fed. 864, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Columbia Fireproof Door & Trim Co., 168 Fed. 159, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714; In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re Clifford, 136 Fed. 475, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; Schoenthaler v. Rosskam, 107 Ill. App. 427; Mattocks v. Baker, 2 Fed. 455; Robinson v. Tuttle, 2 Hask. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 11,968; Presbyterian Board, etc., v. Gilbee, 212 Pa. St. 310, 61 Atl. 925. The rule that the filing of a petition in bankruptcy is in effect an attachment and injunction has no application to those holding substantial claims, antedating the filing, to liens upon property of the bankrupt. In re Rathman, 183 Fed. 913, 106 C. C. A. 253, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246. Equitable liens of creditors of a decedent upon land devised by him are not lost by the passing of the legal title of the land to the trustee in bankruptcy of his devisee, for such property passes subject to all equities impressed upon it in the hands of the bankrupt. In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[10] Clason v. Morris, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 524; State v. Superior Court of King County, 63 Wash. 312, 115 Pac. 307, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1119.

[11] Reed v. Bullington, 49 Miss. 223, 11 N. B. R. 408.

[12] McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 587, Fed. Cas. No. 8,888; In re Longfellow, 2 Hask. 221, 17 N. B. R. 27, Fed. Cas. No. 8486. A court of bankruptcy will release from its administration only that property of a bankrupt in which, by reason of conceded and absorbing superior liens and privileges, the trustee has no equity. Roger v. J. B. Levert Co., 237 Fed. 737, 150 C. C. A. 491, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

[13] Clanton v. Estes, 77 Ga. 352, 1 S. E. 163.

[14] Hoyt v. Zibell, 259 Fed. 186, 170 C. C. A. 254, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; In re United States Lumber Co., 206 Fed. 236, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; In re Hersey, 171 Fed. 1004, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863; Platt v. Preston, Fed. Cas. No. 11,219. Though creditors.[15] But where the question is purely between the trustee in bankruptcy and the lien-creditor, the rights of the former are measured by those of the bankrupt. If the contract or arrangement by which the lien was created was binding on the bankrupt, it will be binding on his trustee.[16] But if it was not binding as between the immediate parties,—as, for instance, in the case of an agreement for a lien on personal property, but without change of possession,—it will not affect the property in the hands of the trustee.[17] But if the circumstances were such that the bankrupt would be estopped to take advantage of a defect or irregularity, the estoppel may also be set up against his trustee.[18] Thus, where a corporation, before becoming bankrupt, had given a mortgage on its property, but without complying with the state law requiring such a mortgage to be authorized by a vote of the stockholders in meeting, it was held that its trustee in bankruptcy could not take advantage of the defect, in view of the fact that the courts of the state had construed that provision of the statute as being for the exclusive benefit of the stockholders.[19] But the trustee is not so far in privity with the bankrupt as to be prohibited from attacking judgments against him collaterally, as, in the case of a judgment obtained on a debt not due.[20]

Further, it is necessary that the lien should be in full force and vitality at the date of the adjudication. If it has been in any way released or the rights of a trustee in bankruptcy and those of an assignee in insolvency under a state statute are defined in similar language, yet a state statute making a certain transfer void as against an assignee eo nomine does not make it void as against a trustee in bankruptcy. In re Loveland, 155 Fed. 838, 84 C. C. A. 72, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

[15] Ommen v. Talcott, 188 Fed. 401, 112 C. C. A. 239, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689. Where an assignment of accounts by the bankrupt was subject to attack as preferential and fraudulent, a defendant, who had consented to the bankrupt's use in his business of sums of money collected, was held not entitled to an equitable lien for those amounts. Chapman v. Hunt (D. C.) 248 Fed. 160, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482. Where a wife paid seven-eighths of the purchase price of land taken in the name of the husband, who bought goods, giving a note and mortgage to the seller, which borrowed money from a bank, depositing accounts and the note as collateral, and the seller was thereafter declared bankrupt, and the trustee recovered the collateral from the bank, it was held that the trustee's rights were superior to the secret equity of the wife. Gee v. Parks (Tex. Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 767.

[16] In re Greek Mfg. & Enterprising Co. (D. C.) 167 Fed. 424, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717. But see Scandinavian-American Bank v. Sabin, 227 Fed. 579, 142 C. C. A. 211, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151, holding that an agreement under which a creditor claims a lien on property, while good as between the parties, may not be good as against the trustee in bankruptcy, under the 1910 amendment to the Bankruptcy Act, giving the trustee the position of a lien creditor.

[17] In re Faulhaber Stable Co., 170 Fed. 68, 95 C. C. A. 344, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; Bank of Leavenworth v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. Ed. 190.

[18] Allen v. Whittemore, 8 Ben. 485, 14 N. B. R. 189, Fed. Cas. No. 241. See In re Jackson Light & Traction Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 223, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

[19] In re V. & M. Lumber Co., 182 Fed. 231; Stuart v. Holt, 198 Ala. 73, 73 South. 390.

[20] Partridge v. Dearborn, 2 Low. 286, 9 N. B. R. 474, Fed. Cas. No. 10,785.

relinquished before that time, it cannot be revived as against the trustee.[21] And after the adjudication it is too late to fasten any lien upon the property of the bankrupt however far the debt or claim may antedate it.[22]

Subject to these conditions, all classes of liens may follow the specific property affected into the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy, such, for instance, as the lien of a state for taxes,[23] the lien of a factor for advances to his principal and for his commissions,[24] the lien of a municipal corporation on a stock of goods belonging to one of its public officers which was purchased wholly or in part with public moneys misappropriated by him,[25] or the lien of the surety on the bond of a bankrupt contractor, against funds remaining due under the contract,[26] or the lien of a private corporation, created by its by-laws, on the stock of each stockholder to cover his indebtedness to the corporation,[27] or the lien created by the filing of a judgment creditor's bill to set aside a fraudulent conveyance and subject the property conveyed to the satisfaction of the judgment, after the service of process thereon,[28] or at any rate after the service of an injunction or the appointment of a receiver.[29] And although a mere personal claim against a bankrupt's estate does not constitute a lien,[30] yet the bankruptcy act will save and protect equitable liens as well as those given by statute or raised by the explicit agreement of the parties, and the court of bankruptcy will recognize a lien of this character wherever a court of equity would do so.[31] Such an equitable lien may arise out of the assignment, as security for a loan, of money to accrue under a con-

[21] Sage v. Wynkoop, 16 N. B. R. 363, Fed. Cas. No. 12,215, affirmed, 104 U. S. 319, 26 L. Ed. 740. But see Crane v. Penny, 2 Fed. 187, as to the right of a trustee in bankruptcy to plead that an execution was dormant at the time of the adjudication.

[22] In re York Silk Mfg. Co., 188 Fed. 735, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650; In re Badenheim, 15 N. B. R. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 716.

[23] In re Brand, 2 Hughes, 334, 3 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 1,809.

[24] Ommen v. Talcott, 188 Fed. 401, 112 C. C. A. 239, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; In re Roseberry, 8 Biss. 112, 16 N. B. R. 340, Fed. Cas. No. 12,052; Nisbet v. Sigel-Campion Live Stock Commission Co., 21 Colo. App. 494, 123 Pac. 110; Boise v. Talcott (D. C.) 212 Fed. 268, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838.

[25] Smith v. Township of Au Gres, 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

[26] Lyttle v. National Surety Co., 43 App. D. C. 136.

[27] In re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 4,156; In re Bigelow, 2 Ben. 469, 1 N. B. R. 667, Fed. Cas. No. 1,395.

[28] Bradley v. United Wireless Telegraph Co., 79 N. J. Eq. 458, 81 Atl. 1107; In re Beadle, 5 Sawy. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 1,155. Compare In re Pitts, 9 Fed. 542. And see Blick v. Nimmo, 121 Md. 139, 88 Atl. 116.

[29] In re Smith, Fed. Cas. No. 12,997; Johnson v. Rogers, 15 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 7,408; In re Pemberton (D. C.) 260 Fed. 521, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 149; Bradley v. United Wireless Telegraph Co., 83 N. J. Eq. 688, 93 Atl. 1084.

[30] Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; Hotchkiss v. National City Bank, 200 Fed. 287.

[31] In re Plantations Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 273, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; Walton Land & Timber Co. v. Runyan (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 128, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 255, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Hoffman, 199 Fed. 448, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680; Parker v. Bates, tract,[32] or out of the agreement of the bankrupt to assign specific accounts or funds as security for advances of money made to him.[33] So a purchaser of drafts drawn by the bankrupt on a London bank, which were refused payment because of the intervening bankruptcy, was held entitled to an equitable lien on securities deposited by the bankrupt in New York to protect such drafts, pursuant to an agreement with the drawee.[34] Again, a purchaser of lumber to be manufactured by the bankrupt, having made large advances thereon, was held to have an equitable lien on lumber sawed and piled in the bankrupt's yards at the time the bankruptcy occurred, and which was intended to be applied on the contract, the lien being enforceable against the bankrupt's trustee.[35] And so, as against the trustee in bankruptcy, one who had made loans to the bankrupt, secured by instruments representing the grain handled by it, which instruments, more than four months before the adjudication, were taken up and replaced by a single receipt covering grain in various elevators in several states, but which receipt did not comply with the state laws governing warehouse receipts, was held entitled to an equitable lien.[36] On the same principle, where a mortgagor, after having paid a part of the mortgage debt, borrowed further sums from the mortgagee, and indorsements were made on the mortgage note to the effect that such sums should be added to the amount previously remaining due thereon, it was held that the mortgage was a valid lien in equity for the full amount as so increased, as against the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy.[37] So, an equitable lien on personal property may be created by a verbal agreement, provided the intention is clear to charge some particu-

203 Fed. 294, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198; Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hurley, 153 Fed. 503, 82 C. C. A. 453, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396; Smith v. Township of Au Gres (C. C. A.) 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; Hanson v. W. L. Blake & Co., 155 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325; In re J. F. Grandy & Son, 146 Fed. 318, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; In re MacDougall, 175 Fed. 400, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; Loving v. Moore, 37 App. D. C. 214; Crosby v. Ridout, 27 App. D. C. 481; Kelly-Buckley Co. v. Cohen, 195 Mass. 585, 81 N. E. 297; Smith v. Godwin, 145 N. C. 242, 58 S. E. 1089; Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 572, 118 S. W. 1146; Newlin v. McAfee, 64 Ala. 357; Fletcher v. Morey, 2 Story, 555, Fed. Cas. No. 4,864; Ex parte General Assignee, 5 Law Rep. 362, Fed. Cas. No. 5,305. See also the following cases, where the circumstances were held not sufficient to create an equitable lien: Elmore v. Symonds, 183 Mass. 321, 67 N. E. 314; Ross v. Saunders, 123 Fed. 737; Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 472, 76 C. C. A. 242, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Teter, 173 Fed. 798, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223; Ernst v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 664, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

[32] Jennings v. Whitney, 224 Mass. 138, 112 N. E. 655. See Maltbie v. Olds, 88 Conn. 633, 92 Atl. 403.

[33] In re Imperial Textile Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 775, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534.

[34] In re Hollins, 215 Fed. 41, 131 C. C. A. 349, L. R. A. 1915B, 438.

[35] Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

[36] Britton v. Union Inv. Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 111, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[37] In re Loveland, 155 Fed. 838, 84 C. C. A. 72.

lar property.[38] Thus, an oral agreement by a mortgagor to insure the property for the benefit of the mortgagee, whose money was used in its purchase, will give the mortgagee an equitable lien on the proceeds of the insurance after the property has been destroyed by fire, as against the mortgagor or his trustee in bankruptcy.[39] It is also a part of this general doctrine that one whose money or property was held by the bankrupt in the capacity of a trustee, and was converted or misappropriated by the latter, the proceeds going to swell his general estate, may claim a lien on the assets of the bankrupt to the extent of his loss, provided he is able to trace his property, either in its original shape or in a substituted form, into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy.[40] But the equitable rights of claimants as creditors of another corporation, whose property the bankrupt acquired, on the theory that it was transferred subject to a trust ex maleficio, cannot be treated as a valid lien superior to the rights of general creditors of the bankrupt, until, by some legal proceeding, it has become attached to the property of the bankrupt.[41] So, a customer of bankrupt brokers, whose stocks had been loaned by them and sold by the borrowers on their insolvency, is not entitled to subrogation to a lien on the proceeds of the sale of their seat on the stock exchange.[42]

§ 365. Liens Invalid as Against Creditors.—Since a trustee in bankruptcy is the representative of the creditors, no one can successfully assert against him a lien on property of the bankrupt which, though it might have been good as against the bankrupt himself, would be invalid as against his creditors,[43] whether for failure to record the instru-

[38] Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

[39] Hanson v. W. L. Blake & Co., 155 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325; Reilley v. Buffalo German Ins. Co., 86 Misc. Rep. 69, 147 N. Y. Supp. 1086.

[40] In re Brown, 193 Fed. 24, 113 C. C. A. 348; In re A. O. Brown & Co., 193 Fed. 30, 113 C. C. A. 354; Brown Bros. Co. v. Smith Bros. Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 475, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30. And see, supra, §§ 354, 357, 362.

[41] In re American Candy Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 145, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461. But see Brown Bros. Co. v. Smith Bros. Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 475, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30, holding that the fact that the particular funds converted by a bankrupt did not reach the trustee does not defeat the lien of the owner of the funds upon the other assets of the bankrupt.

[42] In re Van Schaick & Co., 228 Fed. 465, 143 C. C. A. 47, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59.

[43] First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 26 Sup. Ct. 580, 50 L. Ed. 967, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; McHarg v. Staake, 202 U. S. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. 584, 50 L. Ed. 971, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467, 24 L. Ed. 779; Burnett v. Frederick (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 681, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; Receivers of Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Staake, 133 Fed. 720, 66 C. C. A. 550; In re Thomas, 199 Fed. 214, 232, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945; In re Cramond, 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Hanson v. W. L. Blake & Co., 155 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325; In re I. S. Vickerman & Co., 199 Fed. 589, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298; In re Booth, 98 Fed. 975; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885;

ment creating the alleged lien[44] or for any other reason,[45] provided it can be shown that general creditors were misled to their injury, or induced to give credit to the bankrupt, by reason of the concealment or other irregularity which they allege as a ground for rejecting the alleged lien.[46] But under the laws of some of the states, as interpreted by their courts, it is not open to any creditor at large to impeach an alleged lien on property of his debtor, on the ground of fraud, concealment, or other ground of invalidity, but only to a creditor who has fastened a specific lien on the particular property or who is armed with some legal process which puts him in a position to enforce his claim directly against the property. A few decisions, particularly under the former bankruptcy act, have held that a trustee in bankruptcy, for this purpose, is in the same position and has the same rights as a creditor holding an execution or attachment.[47] But the decided preponderance of authority was to the effect that the trustee in bankruptcy represents only the general creditors, and hence, if none of them is in position at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy to attack the validity of an alleged lien, in virtue of having fastened a lien on the property involved or of holding an execution or attachment or other similar process, neither can the trustee in bankruptcy attack it, notwithstanding fraud, concealment, or other cause of impeachment.[48] And if the lien was invalid as to one creditor, but valid as against others, or if only one

Moore v. Young, 4 Biss. 128, Fed. Cas. No. 9,782; In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117; Odell v. Flood, 8 Ben. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 10,428; Todd v. Townsend, Fed. Cas. No. 14,075; Johnson v. Rogers, 15 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 7,408; Edmondson v. Hyde, 2 Sawy. 205, 7 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 4,285; In re Morrill, 2 Sawy. 357, 8 N. B. R. 117, Fed. Cas. No. 9,821; In re Dunn, 2 Hughes, 169, 11 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 4,172; Benner v. Scandinavian American Bank, 73 Wash. 488, 131 Pac. 1149.

[44] But Bankruptcy Act § 67a applies only to claims which are required by the state law to be recorded. In re Lane Lumber Co., 217 Fed. 550, 133 C. C. A. 402, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491.

[45] Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 27 Sup. Ct. 720, 51 L. Ed. 1117, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291, affirming 143 Fed. 32, 74 C. C. A. 186, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49. See In re Thackara Mfg. Co., 140 Fed. 126, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258, holding the lien of an outstanding execution invalid because it had been allowed to lie dormant in the hands of the sheriff for several months. So, a creditor who sold machinery to the bankrupt with the understanding that it was to be used in a vessel being built under contract for the United States was held to have no lien upon the machinery, nor upon the contract or its proceeds, because an act of Congress makes void the assignment of any interest in government contracts. In re Waters-Colver Co., 206 Fed. 845, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763.

[46] In re MacDougall, 175 Fed. 400, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; In re Gerstman, 157 Fed. 549, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145.

[47] Niagara Falls Hydraulic Power & Mfg. Co. v. Schermerhorn, 60 Misc. Rep. 209, 111 N. Y. Supp. 576; In re Werner, 5 Dill. 119, Fed. Cas. No. 17,416; Beers v. Place, 4 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 1,233.

[48] In re New York Economical Printing Co., 110 Fed. 514, 49 C. C. A. 133, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615; In re Burnham, 140 Fed. 926, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; creditor was in position to enforce his rights against it, then it was held that the trustee could avoid it only to the extent of the claim of that creditor.[49] But in 1910, in order to obviate the difficulties of this position and strengthen the enforcement of the bankruptcy act, Congress amended the statute by adding a provision that trustees in bankruptcy, "as to all property in the custody or coming into the custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings thereon; and also, as to all property not in the custody of the bankruptcy court, shall be deemed vested with all the rights, remedies, and powers of a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied." [50] Since this amendment, therefore, the trustee is no longer in the situation of a general creditor, but occupies the more favorable position of a judgment or execution creditor, and can resist the enforcement of any lien which would be invalid as against a creditor of that class.[51]

§ 366. Mortgages of Real Property.—A mortgage of real property given by one subsequently adjudged bankrupt will be a valid and enforceable security as against his trustee in bankruptcy provided it was given and accepted in good faith, and not in contemplation of bankruptcy nor in fraud of the bankruptcy act, and for a present consideration, and if it was recorded according to law.[52] If made within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy it may be voidable as a preference, but if not, it is not invalid as a lien, unless made with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, or unless, the debtor being at the time insolvent, the conveyance would be held null and void as to creditors under the laws of the state where the property is situated.[53] When none of these invalidating elements is present, the trustee in bankruptcy takes the property charged with the mortgage, and has no greater interest or higher rights than the bankrupt himself,[54] being entitled only to the equity of redemption or the surplus proceeds of the property,[55] and being bound by the mortgagor's

In re Lausman, 183 Fed. 647, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; Skilton v. Codington, 86 App. Div. 166, 83 N. Y. Supp. 351.

[49] In re New York Economical Printing Co., 110 Fed. 514, 49 C. C. A. 133, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

[50] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, c. 412, § 8, 36 Stat. 840, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a.

[51] In re Hammond, 188 Fed. 1020, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336; Sturdivant Bank v. Schade, 195 Fed. 188, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Empress Pharmacy (D. C.) 237 Fed. 676, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145.

[52] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67d.

[53] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67e.

[54] In re Stewart, 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41.

[55] Lyall v. Miller, 6 McLean, 482, Fed.

covenant to keep the premises insured for the benefit of the mortgagee.[56] And where a bill is filed by a junior mortgagee for the foreclosure and sale of the equity of redemption, the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor has no standing to object to the order in which the priority of valid and subsisting liens on the mortgaged property is fixed by the decree of foreclosure, as he can get nothing in any event until all valid liens have been satisfied.[57]

Of course, however, the trustee also represents the general creditors, and may and should assert whatever rights they may have as against the holder of the security. Thus, for instance, a bankrupt had executed a trust deed (in the nature of a mortgage) securing certain notes which he made and signed. He delivered the notes to the payee named therein, but after recording the trust deed, he kept possession of it. He then made other notes exactly similar to those first executed, and succeeded in borrowing money from a bank upon the false representation that the second set of notes (which he put up as collateral) were the first set. It was held that the lien of the first payee on the mortgaged property was superior, and that the bank could not assert even an equitable lien on the property as against the trustee, representing the unsecured creditors of the bankrupt, especially in view of the fact that the local law made parol liens void as against creditors.[58] So, a stipulation by a mortgagor (who afterwards became bankrupt) indorsed on a bond at the time of an assignment of the bond and mortgage, as to the amount then due, which, through an error in computation, stated a larger amount than was actually due, does not increase the lien of the mortgage as against the trustee in bankruptcy and the general creditors.[59] Again, the holder of a real estate mortgage as collateral security for a bankrupt's debt is not entitled to collect the rents and profits as against the bankrupt's trustee.[60]

These rules of course do not apply if the security is fraudulent or void. But a security otherwise valid is not avoided merely because taken in the form of an absolute deed instead of a mortgage,[61] nor because it covers all of the bankrupt's property, if given to secure bona

Cas. No. 8,613; In re Erie Lumber Co., 150 Fed. 817, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689.

[56] In re Sands Ale Brewing Co., 3 Biss. 175, 6 N. B. R. 101, Fed. Cas. No. 12,307.

[57] Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734, 24 L. Ed. 136. And see In re Times Pub. Co., 183 Fed. 603.

[58] Page v. Old Dominion Trust Co., 257 Fed. 402, 168 C. C. A. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26.

[59] In re Howard (D. C.) 207 Fed. 402, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

[60] In re Sweeney, 212 Fed. 1, 128 C. C. A. 483, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

[61] Gaffney v. Signaigo, 1 Dill. 158, Fed. Cas. No. 5,169; Alter v. Clark (D. C.) 193 Fed. 153.

fide debts and liabilities,[62] nor because, being a partnership obligation, it in terms adopts a debt incurred by one of the partners in behalf of the firm and includes it in the mortgage.[63] A mortgage of a corporation's real property which has been properly recorded may create a valid lien on such property as against the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy, though it was defectively acknowledged.[64] But a mortgage executed in the name of a bankrupt corporation by its officers, without any authority or ratification by the directors, does not create a valid lien as against its unsecured creditors.[65]

As to recording, the rule appears to be well established that a mortgage which was valid when executed and entirely free from fraud is not invalidated in the bankruptcy proceedings simply because it was not placed on the record until after the debtor had become insolvent or until shortly before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, provided it is not shown that there was any fraudulent purpose in so withholding it from the record, and if the law of the state is such that recording is not necessary to its validity as between the parties.[66] Also the trustee cannot recover the value of the mortgaged property if the mortgagee took possession before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, although the mortgage was not properly recorded.[67] In the case of an indemnity mortgage given to a surety, the holder can enforce it to the extent of the indemnity contracted for, but not to any greater extent, although he may have paid debts or incurred liabilities to a larger amount. Whatever might be his equities as against the mortgagor himself in this case, he can claim no more than the face of the mortgage as against the trustee in bankruptcy.[68] If the surety in such a case has not paid the creditors to whom he became bound as surety, the mortgage may be held by the court of bankruptcy to inure to [62] Sidener v. Klier, 4 Biss. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 12,843.

[63] Wait v. Bull's Head Bank, 19 N. B. R. 500, Fed. Cas. No. 17,043.

[64] Pacific State Bank v. Coates, 205 Fed. 618, 123 C. C. A. 634, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 846, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 655.

[65] Bernard v. Lea, 210 Fed. 583, 127 C. C. A. 219, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[66] Sturdivant Bank v. Schade, 195 Fed. 188, 115 C. C. A. 140, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Doran, 154 Fed. 467, 83 C. C. A. 265, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Adams, 97 Fed. 188, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 415; In re Wright, 96 Fed. 187, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364; Stewart v. Hopkins, 30 Ohio St. 502; Clark v. Hezekiah, 24 Fed. 663; Curry v. McCauley, 20 Fed. 583; Seaver v. Spink, 8 N. B. R. 218, 65 Ill. 441; Folsom v. Clemence, 111 Mass. 273. But see Bostwick v. Foster, 14 Blatchf. 436, 18 N. B. R. 123, Fed. Cas. No. 1,682; In re Lukens, 138 Fed. 188, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683; In re Randolph, 187 Fed. 186, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[67] Miller v. Jones, 15 N. B. R. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 9,576.

[68] Courier-Journal Job Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., 101 Fed. 699, 41 C. C. A. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183. And see In re Stoddard Bros. Lumber Co., 169 Fed. 190, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

their benefit.[69] It remains to be added that, in the case of a valid mortgage, the discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy does not extinguish the mortgage debt so far as the same is necessary to uphold the mortgage.[70]

§ 367. Chattel Mortgages.—A chattel mortgage is a valid form of security and gives a lien which may be enforced as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, if free from fraud, based on an actual consideration, and recorded or filed as required by local law.[71] But it is always open to the trustee to question the validity of the mortgage,[72] or to show that its lien has been lost, as, by delay on the part of the mortgagee in taking possession after default,[73] or allowing the mortgaged goods to be inextricably commingled with other property not covered by it,[74] and if, for any reason, such a mortgage is null and void as against the other creditors of the mortgagor, it is not valid as against his trustee in bankruptcy.[75] In particular, the security must be

[69] In re Pierce, 2 Low. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 11,140.

[70] Chamberlain v. Meeder, 16 N. H. 381; Sosnowski v. Rape, 69 Ga. 548; Thaxton v. Roberts, 66 Ga. 704; Carlisle v. Wilkins, 51 Ala. 371.

[71] Title Guaranty & Surety Co. v. Witmire, 195 Fed. 41, 115 C. C. A. 43, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235; Davis v. Turner, 120 Fed. 605, 56 C. C. A. 669, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Durham, 114 Fed. 750, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; Simmons v. Greer, 174 Fed. 654, 98 C. C. A. 408, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; Long v. Gump, 144 Fed. 824, 75 C. C. A. 554, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; In re Collins, 8 Ben. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 3,004; Ex parte Ames, 1 Low. 561, 7 N. B. R. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 323; In re Gregg, 1 Hask. 173, 3 N. B. R. 529, Fed. Cas. No. 5,796; In re Mitchell Motor & Service Co. (D. C.) 274 Fed. 492, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716; In re Baar, 213 Fed. 628, 130 C. C. A. 292; Park v. South Bend Chilled Plow Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 843; Hasbrouck v. La Febre, 23 Wyo. 367, 152 Pac. 168. Machinery placed in its plant by the bankrupt corporation, under a bailment or a lease with an option to purchase, with title reserved in the bailor, will pass under a mortgage of the plant and the machinery therein, as against the trustee and the creditors, because they are not concerned with the rights of the bailor. In re Erie Lithograph Co. (D. C.) 260 Fed. 490, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 397.

[72] Carlsbad Water Co. v. New, 33 Colo. 389, 81 Pac. 34; In re Hartman, 185 Fed. 196. The trustee in bankruptcy may maintain an action to set aside a chattel mortgage, although more than four months have elapsed between the filing of the mortgage and the petition in bankruptcy. Parker v. Wagoner (Sup.) 166 N. Y. Supp. 625. But a chattel mortgage describing logs as being in the mortgagor's boom, which did not reach the boom for 12 days thereafter, will be valid as against the trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed. Otto v. England, 99 Wash. 529, 169 Pac. 964.

[73] Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., 216 U. S. 545, 30 Sup. Ct. 412, 56 L. Ed. 610; Hanson v. W. L. Blake & Co., 155 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325; In re Forbes, 5 Biss. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 4,922; Stewart v. Hoffman, 31 Mont. 184, 77 Pac. 689, 81 Pac. 3; Schaupp v. Miller, 206 Fed. 575, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699. A mortgagee who is in possession of the mortgaged property at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy against the mortgagor is entitled to retain such possession as against the trustee in bankruptcy and the general creditors. In re Howard, 207 Fed. 402; Coggan v. Ward (Mass.) 102 N. E. 336. But compare Cornelius v. Boling, 18 Okl. 469, 90 Pac. 874.

[74] In re Holmes Lumber Co., 189 Fed. 178, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119.

[75] Harvey v. Crane, 2 Biss. 496, 5 N. B. R. 218, Fed. Cas. No. 6,178; Kane v. Rice, 10 N. B. R. 469, Fed. Cas. No.

based upon a real, present, and sufficient consideration, and failing this, it creates no lien which will be preserved in the bankruptcy proceedings,[76] and if the circumstances suggest a fraudulent transaction or an attempt to give a preference, the burden may be on the mortgagee to show both his good faith in the matter and the existence of a good consideration.[77] In cases where the debt purporting to be secured by the mortgage is greater than the actual consideration passing between the parties, it may be good in bankruptcy to the extent of the real consideration, provided it was given in good faith and with no fraudulent purpose and has been recorded.[78] But if the alleged debt is purposely exaggerated for the sake of deceiving a creditor and hiding the property from execution, and the mortgagee knows the fact and records the mortgage with an affidavit that the entire amount is justly due, the whole transaction is so vitiated with fraud that the mortgage cannot be enforced in bankruptcy even to the extent of the sum really due.[79] But a renewal chattel mortgage given to a bankrupt's creditor may be good so far as the renewal debts were previously validly secured, although the renewal mortgage be otherwise invalid.[80]

In regard to the requirement that the mortgage shall be filed or recorded according to the local law, it was held under the former bankruptcy statute that the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor could not take advantage of a failure to file or record it, for it would still be good and valid as between the original parties and the trustee

7,609. Under a state statute providing that "any chattel mortgage securing notes which do not state upon their face the fact of such security shall be absolutely void," the holder of such a note and mortgage has no lien, as against the trustee in bankruptcy, even though he has taken possession. In re Birck & Co., 142 Fed. 438, 73 C. C. A. 554, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694. But where the state law provides that mortgages may be made only on certain enumerated kinds of personal property, yet provides that mortgages of other kinds of chattels shall be valid between the parties, and their heirs, legatees, personal representatives, and persons who, before parting with value, have actual notice thereof, a chattel mortgage of property other than that specified, if executed in good faith and for a good consideration, is valid against the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy and the general creditors. In re Grainger, 160 Fed. 69, 87 C. C. A. 225, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

[76] In re Builders' Lumber Co., 148 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re Levine, 196 Fed. 589, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481. See Stedman v. Bank of Monroe, 117 Fed. 237, 54 C. C. A. 269, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4.

[77] In re Sims, 19 N. B. R. 57, Fed. Cas. No. 12,889; In re Ewald v. Brainard, 135 Fed. 168, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[78] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, § 12, 36 Stat. 838, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67d. And see In re Mahland, 184 Fed. 743, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

[79] In re Hugill, 100 Fed. 616, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 686.

[80] In re Endlar, 192 Fed. 762, 113 C. C. A. 48. As to the validity of a curative chattel mortgage, given in place of one technically defective, and for that reason not recorded, see In re International Mahogany Co., 147 Fed. 147, 78 C. C. A. 58, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797.

had no better right to avoid it than the bankrupt.[81] But the present statute reverses this rule, and if the law of the state makes an unfiled chattel mortgage invalid as against the creditors of the mortgagor, it is also invalid as against his trustee.[82] Where the mortgage is recorded or filed, but not until a considerable time after its execution, or just before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, this does not necessarily invalidate it,[83] except as to creditors of the bankrupt who became such between the time of the execution and the filing of the mortgage.[84] But this supposes that the delay does not result from [81] Detroit Trust Co. v. Pontiac Sav. Bank, 237 U. S. 186, 35 Sup. Ct. 509, 59 L. Ed. 907, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 759; Platt v. Preston, 3 Fed. 394; Ex parte Dalby, 1 Low. 431, 3 N. B. R. 731, Fed. Cas. No. 3,540; Coggeshall v. Potter, Holmes, 75, 4 N. B. R. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 2,955; Field v. Baker, 12 Blatchf. 438, 11 N. B. R. 415, Fed. Cas. No. 4,762.

[82] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67a. And see Mattley v. Giesler, 187 Fed. 970, 110 C. C. A. 90, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116; In re Beckhaus, 177 Fed. 141, 100 C. C. A. 561, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380; In re Southern Textile Co., 174 Fed. 523, 98 C. C. A. 305, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 172; Simmons v. Greer, 174 Fed. 654, 98 C. C. A. 408, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; In re McDonald, 173 Fed. 99, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; In re Shiebler, 165 Fed. 363, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309; In re Burlage Bros., 169 Fed. 1006, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 410; In re Shaw, 146 Fed. 273, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 196; In re H. G. Andræ Co., 117 Fed. 561, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; In re Jones, 116 Fed. 431, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Tatem, 110 Fed. 519, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re Wright, 107 Fed. 428; In re Booth's Estate, 98 Fed. 975; In re Leigh, 96 Fed. 806; Goodrich v. Dore, 194 Mass. 493, 80 N. E. 480; Clark v. Williams, 190 Mass. 219, 76 N. E. 723. But where, as under the law in Wisconsin, the failure of a chattel mortgagee to file his mortgage or take possession of the property, without fraud or collusion, renders the mortgage voidable only as to subsequent creditors or those who acquire a lien, the taking possession by the holder of an unrecorded chattel mortgage, after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the mortgagor, validates the mortgage as against the general creditors, so that it cannot be attacked in their behalf by the trustee. In re Antigo Screen Door Co., 123 Fed. 249, 59 C. C. A. 248, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359. And see In re Chadwick, 140 Fed. 674, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. It is stated to be the settled law in Georgia (which will be recognized by the courts of bankruptcy sitting within that state) that recording is not essential to the validity of a chattel mortgage, and under this rule, a chattel mortgage given to a bank to secure a present loan, made by the bank in good faith and without knowledge of the borrower's insolvency, although unrecorded, will create a valid lien as against the trustee in bankruptcy, provided that the withholding of the mortgage from record was not for any fraudulent purpose nor pursuant to any agreement between the parties. In re Josephson, 116 Fed. 404, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423.

[83] In re Perrin, 7 N. B. R. 283, Fed. Cas. No. 10,995; In re Barman, 14 N. B. R. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 999.

[84] In re Jacobson & Perrill, 200 Fed. 812, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603; In re Harnden, 200 Fed. 175, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; Detroit Trust Co. v. Pontiac Sav. Bank, 196 Fed. 29, 115 C. C. A. 663, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 821; Post v. Berry, 175 Fed. 564, 99 C. C. A. 186, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699; In re Wade, 185 Fed. 664, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 169; Mattley v. Wolfe, 175 Fed. 619, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re J. C. H. Claussen & Co., 164 Fed. 300, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 34; In re Doran, 148 Fed. 327, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799; In re Beede, 138 Fed. 441, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; In re Adams, 97 Fed. 188, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 415; In re Kauffman, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 778. Where an unfiled chattel mortgage, void as to subsequent creditors under the state law, is set aside in bankruptcy proceedings against the mortgagor, the mortgagee will be en-any fraudulent or sinister design.[85] And where, by a secret agreement between a bankrupt and one of his creditors, who held a chattel mortgage on the bankrupt's stock, the mortgage was withheld from record in order that the bankrupt might obtain credit to which he was not entitled, it was held that the mortgage was fraudulent and void, not only as to subsequent creditors, but as to all those interested in the bankrupt's estate.[86] Further it is to be noted that, in order to avoid the lien claimed, it must be quite clear that the instrument in question is of such a nature as to come within the recording laws of the state. Thus, a lease of land containing a provision that, if it shall be terminated for any cause before a specified date, the improvements placed on the land by the lessee shall belong to the lessor, is not a chattel mortgage and therefore is enforceable against the lessee's trustee in bankruptcy though not filed for record.[87] But a bill of sale of the bankrupt's stock in trade, or a contract for the sale of merchandise, may be in substance and actual effect a chattel mortgage, and, if so, will be governed in bankruptcy by the rules applicable to such instruments.[88] A contractor's application to a surety company for a performance bond, assigning to the surety company, in the event of nonperformance, all the contractor's interest in tools, plant, materials, etc., has no greater force than a chattel mortgage, and as between the surety company and the contractor's trustee in bankruptcy, it is to be regarded as if it were on its face a chattel mortgage.[89] So, where an insolvent conveyed personal property of which he was the absolute owner to a creditor for the expressed consideration of $1, and then took back a lease of the same, also, giving a nominal consideration, with the right in the lessee to repurchase if he had paid his indebtedness to the lessor, it was held that the titled to share in the proceeds of the mortgaged property with the mortgagor's subsequent creditors. In re Huxoll, 193 Fed. 851, 113 C. C. A. 637, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579. But see In re Cannon, 121 Fed. 582, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64, holding that both the mortgagee and the antecedent creditors must be excluded from the distribution.

[85] A creditor who withheld a chattel mortgage from record until he discovered that the debtor was in failing circumstances, cannot assert an equitable lien on the property, where he acted deliberately, and where the statute requires the recording of such mortgages as a condition to their validity. National Bank of Bakersfield v. Moore, 247 Fed. 913, 160 C. C. A. 103, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409.

[88] In re Duggan, 182 Fed. 252, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 105; In re Hickerson, 162 Fed. 345, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; In re Noel, 137 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; Texas Brewing Co. v. Mallette, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 461, 67 S. W. 441; Deland v. Miller & Chaney Bank, 119 Iowa, 368, 93 N. W. 304.

[87] Niagara Falls Hydraulic Power & Mfg. Co. v. Schermerhorn, 60 Misc. Rep. 209, 111 N. Y. Supp. 576.

[88] In re Marengo County Mercantile Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 474, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46; Gill v. Ely-Norris Safe Co., 170 Mo. App. 478, 156 S. W. 811. But compare Herritt v. Clark, 247 Fed. 100, 159 C. C. A. 318, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232.

[89] In re Schilling (D. C.) 251 Fed. 966, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 705.

attempted transaction was in effect a mortgage, invalid under the law of Pennsylvania for want of delivery, and that on the bankruptcy of the debtor the property passed to his trustee.[90] So also, a mortgage which covers both real and personal property, and which is properly recorded as a real-estate mortgage, is nevertheless void as to the personalty unless it is also recorded as a chattel mortgage.[91]

Here also, as in regard to other forms of liens,[92] we encounter the question whether a chattel mortgage, void as to "creditors" of the mortgagor, may be impeached by the trustee in bankruptcy as the representative of creditors at large, or only by a creditor armed with legal process or who has fastened a lien upon the particular property. In the absence of a more specific direction in the bankruptcy act, it was held that this question must be determined in accordance with the recording law of the particular state as interpreted by its courts.[93] Thus, in New York, a chattel mortgage which is not filed as required by the statute (or where there is a failure to file a renewal statement at the end of a year) is invalid as against general creditors who became such prior to actual filing, and therefore it is also invalid as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, who may seize the property in the hands of either the mortgagor or mortgagee, or recover the proceeds of it from the latter.[94] But in some other states, such a mortgage is not impeachable by creditors at large, but only by one who has secured a lien on the property by execution or otherwise or has a judgment entitling him to a lien.[95] Some cases have held that a trustee in bankruptcy oc-

[90] In re Beihl (D. C.) 176 Fed. 583, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 905.

[91] Pacific State Bank v. Coats, 205 Fed. 618, 123 C. C. A. 634, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 846, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 655.

[92] See, supra, § 365.

[93] Holt v. Crucible Steel Co., 224 U. S. 262, 32 Sup. Ct. 414, 56 L. Ed. 756, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; In re Petersen (D. C.) 252 Fed. 849, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653; In re Oliver, 19 N. B. R. 291, Fed. Cas. No. 10,492.

[94] In re Thomas, 199 Fed. 214, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945; In re Gerstman, 157 Fed. 549, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; Skilton v. Coddington, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885; Stephens v. Perrine, 143 N. Y. 476, 39 N. E. 11; Karst v. Gane, 136 N. Y. 316, 32 N. E. 1073; Gove v. Morton Trust Co., 96 App. Div. 177, 89 N. Y. Supp. 247. And see Stich v. Pirkl, 100 Misc. Rep. 594, 166 N. Y. Supp. 440; In re Michigan Furniture Co. (D. C.) 249 Fed. 978, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784.

[95] Holt v. Crucible Steel Co., 224 U. S. 262, 32 Sup. Ct. 414, 56 L. Ed. 756, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; Rode & Horn v. Phipps (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 414, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; Title Guaranty & Surety Co. v. Witmire, 195 Fed. 41, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235; Foerstner v. Citizens' Savings & Trust Co., 186 Fed. 1, 108 C. C. A. 267, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377; E. Eppstein & Co. v. Wilson, 149 Fed. 197, 79 C. C. A. 155, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; In re Beard, 204 Fed. 129, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 301; In re Watson, 201 Fed. 962; Mattley v. Wolfe, 175 Fed. 619, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Flatland, 196 Fed. 310, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; In re Beede, 138 Fed. 441, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; In re Wright, 96 Fed. 187, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364; Simon v. Openheimer, 20 Fed. 553; Cragin v. Carmichael, 2 Dill. 519, 11 N. B. R. 511, Fed. Cas. No. 3,319; In re Collins, 12 Blatchf. 548, 12 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 3,007; Hall v. Keating Implement & Machine Co., 33 Tex. Civ. App. 526, 77

cupies this more favored position.[96] Whether this view is correct or not the question is now settled by the act of Congress of 1910 amending the bankruptcy law, which gives to the trustee the rights and remedies of a "creditor holding a lien by legal or equitable proceedings" or of "a judgment creditor holding an execution duly returned unsatisfied."[97]

In some states a chattel mortgage upon a stock of goods, which allows the mortgagor to remain in possession and sell the goods and buy others in their place, is fraudulent and void as against his creditors, at least in the absence of a provision for an accounting, and therefore may also be avoided by his trustee in bankruptcy.[98] As to mortgages covering after-acquired property, they are in some jurisdictions invalid so far as concerns such property, except as between the immediate parties, and where this is the case, such a mortgage will give the mortgagee no right to claim or hold the property against the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy.[99] But we must distinguish the case where one advances to a merchant the money with which to purchase a stock of goods and takes a chattel mortgage covering the property so to be bought, and which in fact is afterwards bought with his money. Here there is a present consideration, and an equity in favor of the lend-

S. W. 1054; Murphy v. W. T. Murphy & Co., 126 Iowa, 57, 101 N. W. 486.

[96] Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 109 App. Div. 406, 96 N. Y. Supp. 633; Miller v. Jones, 15 N. B. R. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 9,576; In re Thorp, 130 Fed. 371, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 195; In re Schmidt, 181 Fed. 73, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

[97] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a. See In re Smith, 198 Fed. 876, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527; Millikin v. Second Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 206 Fed. 14, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; In re East End Mantel & Tile Co., 202 Fed. 275, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793; In re Nuckols, 201 Fed. 437, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 867; In re Jacobson & Perrill, 200 Fed. 812, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603.

[98] In re Noethen (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 97, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234; In re Marine Construction & Dry Dock Co., 144 Fed. 649, 75 C. C. A. 451, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325; In re First Nat. Bank, 135 Fed. 62, 67 C. C. A. 536, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re Antigo Screen Door Co., 123 Fed. 249, 59 C. C. A. 248, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359; Stroud v. McDaniel, 106 Fed. 493, 45 C. C. A. 453, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695; In re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; In re Tucker, 161 Fed. 584, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 147 Fed. 280, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re Standard Telephone & Electric Co., 157 Fed. 106, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491; Marden v. Phillips, 103 Fed. 196, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Leigh, 96 Fed. 806; In re Forbes, 5 Biss. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 4,922; Smith v. Ely, 10 N. B. R. 553, Fed. Cas. No. 13,044; In re Manly, 2 Bond, 261, 3 N. B. R. 291, Fed. Cas. No. 9,031; Benner v. Scandinavian American Bank, 73 Wash. 488, 131 Pac. 1149. In an action of trover by the trustee in bankruptcy against the bankrupt's mortgagee under a mortgage providing that the mortgagor might sell and replace goods, it was held that the mortgagee had the burden of showing title to goods, if any, and that, on the facts, the inference necessarily arose that no part of the original stock was left at the time of bankruptcy. Williams v. Noyes & Nutter Mfg. Co., 112 Me. 408, 92 Atl. 482, Ann. Cas. 1916D, 1224.

[99] In re Niagara Lead & Battery Co., 202 Fed. 298, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Hurley, 185 Fed. 851, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434; In re Eldridge, 2 Biss. 362, 4 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 4,330. See In re Clough, 197 Fed. 185, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828; In re Hager, 166 Fed. 972; Mower v. McCarthy, 79 Vt. 142, 64

er as strong as a legal lien, and it will be recognized and protected in the bankruptcy proceedings.[100]

§ 368. Pledges and Assignments of Collateral.—The rights of a pledgee in respect to his lien, in cases free from fraud, are not affected by the adjudication in bankruptcy of the pledgor or the appointment of his trustee.[101] And this rule applies not only to pledges of tangible personal property, but also to assignments as collateral security of notes, accounts, or bills receivable;[102] of insurance policies;[103] of leases;[104] and of contracts, or sums of money due or to become due under contracts,[105] although it is to be remembered that, under federal laws, it is not permissible to assign or transfer any unallowed claim against the United States, so that an attempt to pledge such an account or contract is void as against the assignor's trustee in bankruptcy.[106]

But it is the rule at common law that there can be no valid pledge of personalty without a transfer of possession, actual or constructive, to the pledgee.[107] And, applying this rule to bankruptcy cases, it was held that no such change of possession as would validate a pledge of goods resulted from the pledge and delivery of so-called "warehouse receipts" acknowledging the receipt of goods on premises really occupied by the owner of the property, though nominally leased by him to a warehousing

Atl. 578, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 418, 118 Am. St. Rep. 942; Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story, 630, Fed. Cas. No. 9,673.

[100] In re Flatland, 196 Fed. 310, 116 C. C. A. 130, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; In re Chantler Cloak & Suit Co. (D. C.) 151 Fed. 952, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498.

[101] In re Peacock (C. C.) 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; In re Twining (D. C.) 185 Fed. 555, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; Woodard v. Snow, 233 Mass. 267, 124 N. E. 35, 5 A. L. R. 1381; Andrews Electric Co. v. St. Alphonse Catholic Total Abstinence Soc., 233 Mass. 20, 123 N. E. 103; First Nat. Bank v. Exchange Nat. Bank, 179 App. Div. 22, 153 N. Y. Supp. 818, 164 N. Y. Supp. 1092; Griffin v. Smith, 177 Cal. 481, 171 Pac. 92. And see Wood v. Simpson, 149 App. Div. 471, 133 N. Y. Supp. 1069.

[102] Union Trust Co. v. Bulkeley, 150 Fed. 510, 80 C. C. A. 328, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35; Young v. Upson (C. C.) 115 Fed. 192, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377; Montgomery v. City of Philadelphia (D. C.) 253 Fed. 473, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; Riverside Contracting Co. v. City of New York (Sup.) 148 N. Y. Supp. 281. See In re Cross (D. C.) 265 Fed. 769, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

[103] J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Powell, 228 Fed. 1, 142 C. C. A. 457, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790.

[104] Meador v. Everett, 3 Dill. 214, 10 N. B. R. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 9,376. See Lamb v. Hall, 147 Cal. 44, 81 Pac. 288.

[105] In re Merrill & Baker (D. C.) 162 Fed. 590, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210. But where a pledge of installment contracts, under which the pledgor continued to collect installments, was made to secure a loan, which was ultra vires, it was held that the pledgee, though entitled upon the pledgor's bankruptcy to retain the contracts until payment of the debt, was not entitled to an interest in, or a lien upon, collections in the hands of the seller's trustee. Barker Piano Co. v. Commercial Security Co., 93 Conn. 129, 105 Atl. 328.

[106] In re Hudford Co. of New York, 257 Fed. 722, 169 C. C. A. 10.

[107] Adams v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. 396, 2 Fed. 174; Spencer v. Duplan Silk Co. (C. C.) 112 Fed. 638, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563. See First Nat. Bank company, where the actual possession of the goods was exercised by and existed with the owner substantially the same after the issuance of the receipts as before, and that, where a pledge was thus invalid for want of a change of possession, the pledgee could not claim an equitable lien which would take precedence of the title of the trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgor.[108] But more recent decisions have considerably liberalized these doctrines. It is held, for instance, that an agrement to give and deliver a pledge, made in good faith and to secure a present loan or a consideration protected by the state law, is valid under the Bankruptcy Act, and that if the article or instrument to be pledged is afterwards delivered, the delivery will relate back to the date of the agreement.[109] So also, a paper assignment of a chose in action, without any other delivery than delivery of such paper, and without notice to the one in possession of what is transferred, is held to pass a good title as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgor.[110] In a recent case in the Supreme Court of the United States, it appeared that a distiller, by way of giving security for money loaned, had entered into a transaction in the nature of a pledge of a specific number of barrels of whisky stored in his own bonded distillery warehouse, without any actual change of possession, but accompanied by the issuance and transfer conformably to trade usage, of the distiller's warehouse receipts representing such whisky. There being nothing in the law of the state (Ohio) to invalidate this transaction, it was held that it constituted a good and valid pledge, as against the distiller's trustee in bankruptcy.[111] In line with these decisions, there is also a ruling that a written agreement whereby specific property or a fund is made security for a debt, will create at least an equitable lien which must be recognized in bankruptcy.[112] Again, where a corporation, borrowing money, agreed to pledge 50 carloads of lumber stored with a storage company, the agreement providing for substitution of carloads, and it appeared that a "carload" meant either the load of a particular car or lumber to the value of $200, it was held that this was valid, as against the objection of indefiniteness of designation of the property at-

v. Pennsylvania Trust Co., 124 Fed. 968, 60 C. C. A. 100, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782.

[108] Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 206 U. S. 415, 27 Sup. Ct. 720, 41 L. Ed. 1117, 11 Ann. Cas. 789, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291. And see Adams v. Merchants' Nat. Bank (C. C.) 9 Biss. 396, 2 Fed. 174; Guarantee Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 185 Fed. 373, 107 C. C. A. 429, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co.'s Trustee, 172 Fed. 177, 96 C. C. A. 629, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 552, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442.

[109] In re Harvey (D. C.) 212 Fed. 340, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

[110] In re Germantown Almegum Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 755, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

[111] Dale v. Pattison, 234 U. S. 399, 34 Sup. Ct. 785, 58 L. Ed. 1370, 52 L. R. A. (N. S.) 754.

[112] Root Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 219 Fed. 397, 135 C. C. A. 139, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

fected by the pledge, and entitled the pledgee to the equivalent of 50 carloads of lumber in the possession of the storage company, as against the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy, although a great part of the lumber had not been received by the storage company in cars, but had been shipped by water, and such part had never been appropriated from the larger mass by the storage company.[113] And so, in a case where a coal company had contracted with a railway company to supply it with coal, and was unable to go on with its deliveries for lack of funds, and the railway company advanced money for this purpose, it was held that the transaction amounted to a pledge, in favor of the railway company, of such a quantity of coal thereafter to be mined, and as fast as mined, as the moneys so advanced would pay for, and that this pledge was enforceable as a preferential claim against the assets of the bankrupt estate of the coal company in the hands of its trustees, who assumed and continued the performance of the contract.[114] This decision was rested on the strong and manifest equity in favor of the railway company, and may perhaps be considered as applying a rule analogous to the well-known rule that, in equity, an agreement to give a mortgage is equivalent to a mortgage. Also it has been held that persons paying drafts drawn for the price of goods shipped to the drawer, under an agreement that the goods should be pledged as security therefor, have a lien as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the purchaser.[115] A pledgee, who wrongfully sells the pledged property, will be estopped to claim a lien for any greater amount than he actually received, on an accounting to the trustee in bankruptcy of the pledgor for the value of the property.[116]

§ 369. Maritime Liens.—Maritime liens are among the classes of securities preserved and protected by the bankruptcy law, if valid and free from fraud and preferential features.[117] And such a lien which, by the law of the admiralty, would take precedence over charges of an earlier date, may be accorded a similar preference in a court of bankruptcy.[118] Also it has been held that a maritime lien, existing at the time when the petition in bankruptcy was filed, may be enforced by process in admiralty against the vessel after the filing of the petition, and while the trustee in [113] Atherton v. Beaman (D. C.) 256 Fed. 871, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631. Affirmed (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 878, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212.

[114] Hurley v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 213 U. S. 126, 29 Sup. Ct. 466, 53 L. Ed. 729, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17, affirming Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hurley, 153 Fed. 503, 82 C. C. A. 453, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

[115] Fletcher v. Morey, 2 Story, 555, Fed. Cas. No. 4,864. But see In re Richheimer, 221 Fed. 16, 136 C. C. A. 542.

[116] Howard v. Mechanics' Bank (D. C.) 262 Fed. 699, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112.

[117] The Home, 18 N. B. R. 557, Fed. Cas. No. 6,657; The Loulie Dole, 11 Biss. 479, 14 Fed. 862; The Ironsides, 4 Biss. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 7,069.

[118] In re Scott, 3 N. B. R. 742, Fed. Cas. No. 12,517.

bankruptcy, in such a case, has the right to appear and be heard, the court of bankruptcy will accept the determination of the admiralty court as to the validity and amount of the lien.[119] And a court of admiralty, which has obtained full jurisdiction over a vessel in a suit to enforce maritime liens thereon, before the institution of bankruptcy porceedings against the owner, is not deprived of such jurisdiction by the adjudication in bankruptcy, but will retain jurisdiction and determine all questions with respect to such liens.[120]

§ 370. Attorneys' Liens for Services.—The institution of proceedings in bankruptcy will not displace or invalidate an attorney's lien on securities belonging to the bankrupt in the possession of the attorney, or on funds collected for the bankrupt or a judgment recovered for him, or (as the law is in some states) upon his cause of action.[121] And the fact that an attorney, in drawing up the bankrupt's schedule of assets, includes certain notes or securities in his possession does not estop him from claiming a lien thereon for his professional services.[122] So when a suit in which the bankrupt is the plaintiff, and which is pending and undetermined at the time of the bankruptcy, is taken up and prosecuted by the trustee, an attorney's lien for compensation for services rendered in the suit prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy is preserved and is binding upon the trustee.[123] But attorneys for a bankrupt are not entitled to a lien for fees for services rendered to the bankrupt subsequent to the institution of the proceedings in an ancillary suit by the receiver to recover money belonging to the estate.[124]

§ 371. Vendors' Liens.—A vendor's lien on real property is not divested by the bankruptcy of the purchaser.[125] And this may also [119] In re Interocean Transp. Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 408, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; The Ironsides, 4 Biss. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 7,069. But compare In re People's Mail S. S. Co., 3 Ben. 226, 2 N. B. R. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 10,970. And see, per contra. The Casco (D. C.) 230 Fed. 929, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; In re New England Transp. Co. (D. C.) 220 Fed. 203, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323.

[120] The Philomena, 200 Fed. 859; The Bethulia, 200 Fed. 862.

[121] In re Eurich's Ft. Hamilton Brewery, 158 Fed. 644, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798; In re Baxter & Co., 154 Fed. 22, 83 C. C. A. 106, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450; Kneeland v. Pennell, 54 Misc. Rep. 43, 104 N. Y. Supp. 498; Clarke v. Clarke, 2 Hayw. & H. 114, Fed. Cas. No. 18,279; In re Luber (D. C.) 261 Fed. 221, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292; Schoenherr v. Van Meter, 215 N. Y. 548, 109 N. E. 625. The lien of attorneys on money of their client is not affected by bankruptcy proceedings against him in another jurisdiction, no steps having been taken by the trustee to reach or claim the fund. Hartman v. Swiger (D. C.) 215 Fed. 986, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[122] In re Brown, Fed. Cas. No. 1,984.

[123] In re Wilson, 12 Fed. 235.

[124] Musica v. Prentice, 211 Fed. 326, 127 C. C. A. 575, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

[125] In re Lane Lumber Co., 217 Fed. 550, 133 C. C. A. 402, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491, affirming In re Lane Lumber Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 82; Sheridan State Bank v. Rowell (D. C.) 212 Fed. 529; In re French (D. C.) 231 Fed. 255, 37 Am.

be true of personal property, where such a lien is given by statute or reserved by the valid agreement of the parties. None exists at common law after delivery of the goods. But in a case where a claimant had sold goods to the bankrupt, taking his notes as conditional payment, but retained possession of the property until after the adjudication in bankruptcy and after the notes fell due and remained unpaid, it was held that he had a lien for the unpaid portion of the price, which the trustee in bankruptcy must recognize.[126] As to the creation of such a lien by statute, it is held that a statute providing that property shall not be exempt from claims for its purchase money and for the seizure and sequestration of the property in a suit for the purchase money, does not give the seller of personalty a lien arising at the time of the sale, and such as to be protected by the bankruptcy act, but only a right to gain a lien by attachment, and a lien so acquired will be divested by the adjudication in bankruptcy of the purchaser within four months thereafter.[127] A vendor's lien may also be reserved by the contract of the parties, and will be preserved in bankruptcy on the same terms and under the same conditions as other liens.[128] But the device now usually employed is a contract of conditional sale, in which the seller attempts to reserve for himself a lien, to secure payment of the price, on so much of the property as may remain in the buyer's hands and on the proceeds of what he has sold. This is generally held invalid in bankruptcy,[129] unless the contract is filed or recorded like a chattel mortgage.[130] But failure to file or record such a contract will not defeat the lien in bankruptcy, where all the creditors of the bankrupt had actual notice of the sale and its conditions, because in that case the trustee would represent no class as to which the condition would be void, Bankr. Rep. 289; Rader v. Star Mill & Elevator Co., 258 Fed. 599, 169 C. C. A. 541, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; Farrell v. Wysong, 246 Fed. 281, 159 C. C. A. 11, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740; Ex parte Drewry, 2 Hughes, 435, Fed. Cas. No. 4,081; Whalen v. Wolford, 96 Kan. 211, 150 Pac. 608; Deaton v. Southern Irr. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 144 S. W. 294; Stewart v. Comanche Mercantile Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 147 S. W. 1166. Compare (as to the law in North Carolina) Bernard v. Lea, 210 Fed. 583, 127 C. C. A. 219, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[126] In re Manuel J. Portuondo Co. (D. C.) 135 Fed. 592, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

[127] In re Wilkes (D. C.) 112 Fed. 975, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574.

[128] In re Muncie Pulp Co., 151 Fed. 732, 81 C. C. A. 116, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; National Bank of Commerce v. Williams, 159 Fed. 615, 86 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; Cullen v. Armstrong (D. C.) 209 Fed. 704, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735.

[129] Pontiac Buggy Co. v. Skinner, 158 Fed. 858, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206. Compare American Woodworking Machinery Co. v. Norment, 157 Fed. 801, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Bell v. Shaw, 230 Fed. 976, 145 C. C. A. 170, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544; Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Lawson (D. C.) 237 Fed. 877, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Sutton (D. C.) 244 Fed. 872, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348.

[130] Pontiac Buggy Co. v. Skinner, 158 Fed. 858, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

actual notice removing the necessity of showing constructive notice.[131] But in some states, a contract of this kind is valid only from the time of its record, as against creditors even with actual notice, and where this is the law, it would of course be void as against the trustee in bankruptcy.[132]

§ 372. Statutory Liens.—It is entirely within the power of a state legislature to create classes of liens by statutory enactment, in respect to property within the state, and such liens, being otherwise valid, will be protected in the bankruptcy courts.[133] But before a creditor can claim a lien given by a state statute on property of a bankrupt, he must perfect the same as required by such statute.[134] Thus, a lien which derives its existence wholly from a state statute, and the continuance of which is by such statute made dependent upon the commencement of a suit in a state court within a prescribed time, is not preserved as a valid incumbrance on the bankrupt's estate when no suit has been instituted in the state court, and no step taken in the bankruptcy proceedings equivalent to such suit, within the time limited by the law, the mere commencement of bankruptcy proceedings not being a sufficient compliance with the statute.[135] On the other hand, if the lien springs directly from the statute, or from the acts, transactions, or relations specified in the statute as the ground of it, and not from the steps prescribed by the statute as necessary to perfect or enforce it,—such as filing or recording a claim in a state court, or beginning a suit,—then it is not a lien "obtained through legal proceedings" in such sense as to be avoided by the subsequent bankruptcy of the debtor within four months, notwithstanding that some sort of legal proceedings may be necessary to perfect or secure it.[136] Among the kinds of liens thus preserved in the bankruptcy proceedings and following the property into the hands of the trustee, may be mentioned a lien given by statute for materials and supplies furnished to carry on the business of a manufacturing corporation,[137] a lien given by statute for the protection of keep-

[131] In re Bazemore, 189 Fed. 236, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494.

[132] In re Builders' Lumber Co., 148 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.

[133] In re Burt, 12 Blatchf. 252, 13 N. B. R. 137, Fed. Cas. No. 2,209; Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 472, 76 C. C. A. 242, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; Tube City Min. & Mill Co. v. Otterson, 16 Ariz. 305, 146 Pac. 203, L. R. A. 1916E, 303.

[134] In re Franklin, 151 Fed. 642, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

[135] In re Brunquest, 7 Biss. 208, 14 N. B. R. 529, Fed. Cas. No. 2,055.

[136] Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 472, 76 C. C. A. 242, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; Norris v. Treuholm, 209 Fed. 827, 126 C. C. A. 551, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353.

[137] In re Bennett, 153 Fed. 673, 82 C. C. A. 531, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 847; In re Starks-Ullman Saddlery Co., 171 Fed. 834, 96 C. C. A. 506, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

ers of livery and boarding stables,[138] the lien of a state or municipality for taxes,[139] and a statutory lien for rent, the question whether it secures the rent which would be payable for the whole of the stipulated term, or for one year, or for a different period, being determined in accordance with the provisions of the statute under which it is claimed.[140] So, where a school board which has let a contract for the erection of a school building terminates the contract on the default of the contractor, and takes over the material remaining on hand, to use in finishing the building, it has a qualified property in, or a lien upon, such material, which is superior to the rights of the contractor's trustee in bankruptcy.[141]

§ 373. Landlord's Lien for Rent.—The common-law or statutory lien of a landlord for rent, including rent reserved under a ground-rent deed,[142] is of a nature to be preserved in bankruptcy proceedings against the tenant, and must be enforced against the goods and chattels in the trustee's hands, or their proceeds if sold, and the trustee cannot defeat the landlord's claim for the rent to become due during the remainder of the term by vacating the premises and surrendering possession.[143] But to bring about this result, there must be a valid lease in existence at the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings. Thus, where the lease had terminated, but the tenant remained in possession under a contract to purchase, and was so holding at the time of his bankruptcy, the relation of landlord and tenant no longer existed, and the landlord had no lien on the tenant's personal property for subsequently accruing

[138] In re Pratesi, 126 Fed. 588, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319; In re Mero, 128 Fed. 630, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[139] City of Waco v. Bryan, 127 Fed. 79, 62 C. C. A. 79, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481.

[140] I. Trager Co. v. Cavaroc Co., 124 La. 611, 50 South. 598; Shapiro v. Thompson, 160 Ala. 363, 49 South. 391.

[141] Wilds v. Board of Education of New York, 186 App. Div. 472, 174 N. Y. Supp. 375, affirming 103 Misc. Rep. 318, 170 N. Y. Supp. 1033.

[142] Large v. Bosler, 2 Clark (Pa.) 29.

[143] Fudickar v. Glenn, 237 Fed. 808, 151 C. C. A. 50, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; Courtney v. Fidelity Trust Co., 219 Fed. 57, 134 C. C. A. 595, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400; In re City Drug Store (D. C.) 224 Fed. 132, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335; In re J. Sapinsky & Sons (D. C.) 206 Fed. 523, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416; Mitchell Storebuilding Co. v. Carroll, 193 Fed. 616, 113 C. C. A. 484, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 894; Friedman v. Murphey (Ariz.) 124 Pac. 654; In re Meyer, 195 Fed. 653, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17; In re Mitchell, 116 Fed. 87, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; Martin v. Orgain, 174 Fed. 772, 98 C. C. A. 246, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; I. Trager Co. v. Cavaroc Co., 124 La. 611, 50 South. 598; Shapiro v. Thompson, 160 Ala. 363, 49 South. 391; McLean v. Klein, 3 Dill. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 8,884; Austin v. O'Reilly, 2 Woods, 670, 12 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 665; In re Trim, 2 Hughes, 355, 5 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 14,174; Ex parte Morrow, 1 Low. 386, 2 N. B. R. 665, Fed. Cas. No. 9,850; In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117; In re Hoagland, 18 N. B. R. 530, Fed. Cas. No. 6,545; In re Dunham, Fed. Cas. No. 4,145; In re Eckenroth, Fed. Cas. No. 4,265; Watson v. Lemar, Fed. Cas. No. 17,287; Loudon v. Blandford, 56 Ga. 150. See In re Gallacher Coal Co., 205 Fed. 183, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766.

rent on the non-performance of the contract of purchase.[144] So, where the leasehold interest of the bankrupt tenant is sold by the trustee, the landlord has no lien on the proceeds of the sale for rent overdue at the time of the bankruptcy.[145] Also, if the statute makes any other condition than the mere failure to pay rent a prerequisite to the landlord's lien, that condition must be shown to exist before the lien can be claimed in bankruptcy.[146] Thus, where the state law is such that the landlord's lien attaches to goods and chattels on the demised premises when the same are levied on under an execution, it has been held that the landlord cannot claim a lien in the bankruptcy proceedings against the tenant by reason of the levy of an execution on the goods within four months prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, as the lien of the execution would be dissolved thereby.[147] But on the other hand, it has been held that if the court of bankruptcy takes possession of the chattels which would be liable to the lien and orders them sold, its process may be regarded as an equitable execution, for the purpose of preserving the landlord's lien, such a case being clearly within the equity of the statute.[148] But where the statute gives the lien, not upon mere [144] Des Moines Nat. Bank v. Council Bluffs Sav. Bank, 150 Fed. 301, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 108. A landlord has no priority under a lease containing a covenant constituting the rent a lien or mortgage on all goods on the premises, where such lease is void as against the creditors of the tenant for not having been recorded as a chattel mortgage under the state laws. In re Dyke, 9 N. B. R. 430, Fed. Cas. No. 4,227. An agreement, nominally for the extension of a lease, may really constitute a contract for an additional separate term, to commence on the expiration of the term of the existing lease, and in this case it does not give a right to a lien for rent, where the tenant becomes bankrupt and his property is sold before the expiration of the first term. In re Southern Hardware & Supply Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 381, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92. Where a landlord, before the expiration of the lease of an earlier tenant, who was indebted for rent, demised the premises to the bankrupt under a lease providing that it should not affect the former lease, or remedies for collection of rent, and the bankrupt took over property of the first tenant in the premises, it was held that the landlord's claim for rent against the first tenant could not be asserted against the bankrupt's estate as a priority claim, there being no right to distrain. In re West (D. C.) 253 Fed. 963, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341.

[145] In re Ruppel (D. C.) 97 Fed. 778, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233.

[146] As to the effect of recording the lease or failing to record it, see In re Floyd-Scott Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 987, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Dellinger v. Waite-Thresher Co., 228 Fed. 506, 143 C. C. A. 88, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 802.

[147] In re Whealton Restaurant Co., 143 Fed. 921, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294; In re Butler, 3 Pittsb. 369, 6 N. B. R. 501, Fed. Cas. No. 2,236; Appeal of Barnes, 76 Pa. St. 50, 13 N. B. R. 543.

[148] Longstreth v. Pennock, 20 Wall. 575, 22 L. Ed. 451; In re Hoover, 113 Fed. 136, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; In re W. R. Kuhn Co., 225 Fed. 13, 140 C. C. A. 473; In re Delaney (D. C.) 251 Fed. 425, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601. But a landlord to whom rent is due for the use of the premises by the bankrupt as a store will not be required to bring an action in a state court for the establishment of his lien, as provided by the state statute, as a precedent step to the assertion of his rights against the bankrupt's property in the hands of the trustee, but he may at once prove his debt and be heard in the court of bankruptcy in support of his claim to priority. In default in the payment of rent, but upon the levy of a distress warrant, the landlord will have no lien available in the bankruptcy proceedings unless he has levied his distraint before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[149] The fact that a distraint is necessary to perfect the inchoate lien does not make it a lien "obtained through legal proceedings" in such sense as to be dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy of the tenant within four months.[150]

The amount of rent for which the landlord may claim a lien, whether for a year, in addition to that already in arrear, for a year from the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, or to the end of the term, will depend upon the law of the particular state. But it is held that a provision in a coal mine lease, giving the lessor a lien to secure all amounts that might become due under the lease, does not extend to a claim for damages caused by the bankruptcy of the lessee and the consequent abandonment of the lease.[151]

§ 374. Liens of Mechanics and Materialmen.—The liens given by statute to mechanics, sub-contractors, and materialmen are not dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy of the owner, contractor, or other person liable, but on the contrary are preserved and may be enforced against the trustee in bankruptcy.[152] And the same is true of the statutory liens existing in some states for the wages of labor.[153] Liens of these kinds are not opposed to either the terms or the policy of the bankruptcy law, since they do not in any way prefer one creditor at the expense of another, nor diminish the general assets of the debtor other-re Byrne, 97 Fed. 762, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268.

[149] In re Potee Brick Co., 179 Fed. 525; Morgan v. Campbell, 22 Wall. 381, 22 L. Ed. 796; In re Joslyn, 2 Biss. 235, 3 N. B. R. 473, Fed. Cas. No. 7,550; Southern Ry. Co. v. Wilder, 231 Fed. 933, 146 C. C. A. 129, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Grovenstein-Bishop Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 878, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114. But see In re Rose, 3 N. B. R. 265, Fed. Cas. No. 12,043.

[150] In re West Side Paper Co., 162 Fed. 110, 89 C. C. A. 110, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660 (reversing 159 Fed. 241), 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Potee Brick Co., 179 Fed. 525; Henderson v. Mayer, 225 U. S. 631, 32 Sup. Ct. 699, 56 L. Ed. 1233, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

[151] In re Gallacher Coal Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 183, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766.

[152] In re Grissler, 136 Fed. 754, 69 C. C. A. 406, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508; In re Cramond, 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Hastings v. Thompson, 47 Pa. Super. Ct. 424; National Fire Proofing Co. v. Daly, 77 N. J. Eq. 583, 78 Atl. 1135; Clifton v. Foster, 103 Mass. 233, 4 Am. Rep. 539; In re Wilkinsburg Borough School Dist., 234 Pa. St. 373, 83 Atl. 410; Felin v. Conway, 32 Pa. Super. Ct. 171; Grainger & Co. v. Riley (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 901, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; Church E. Gates & Co. v. Empire City Racing Ass'n, 225 N. Y. 142, 121 N. E. 741; George A. Lowe & Co. v. Leary, 49 Utah, 506, 164 Pac. 1052; A. B. Newbury Co. v. Tennant (N. J. Ch.) 113 Atl. 486.

[153] In re Kerby-Dennis Co., 95 Fed. 116, 36 C. C. A. 677, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 402; In re Laird, 109 Fed. 550, 48 C. C. A. 538, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Lowensohn, 100 Fed. 776, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79. In the case last cited, it appeared that a clothier gave out garments wise applicable to the payment of his general creditors.[154] And although the local law requires that a mechanic's or materialman's lien shall be perfected by the filing or recording of a claim, or even the institution of a suit, within a limited time, yet this does not make it a lien "obtained through legal proceedings," in such sense that it will be dissolved by the subsequent adjudication in bankruptcy of the debtor within four months thereafter.[155] But questions often arise as to the validity of the lien where the work has been done or the materials furnished, but the required notice or claim has not been filed or recorded, at the time the bankruptcy proceedings are begun. The rule appears to be settled as follows: If, by the local law, the lien of a mechanic or materialman arises from the doing of the work and attaches to the building from that time, upon the condition subsequent that the lien creditor shall file or record a certain notice within a given time, the lien is not affected or impaired by the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings between the doing of the work and the filing of the notice, but the notice may be filed, and the lien thereby perfected, after the adjudication in bankruptcy, provided it is done within the time prescribed by the state statute;[156] but if the statute gives the lien only from the time of filing the notice, this must be done before the institution of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and if not, the trustee in bankruptcy will in lots, to different tailors, to be made up by the piece and returned in whole or broken lots for examination, and to be paid for at stated intervals if approved, and the tailors employed other workmen in making up the goods. It was held that, as against the estate of the clothier in bankruptcy, the tailors had a lien upon all articles remaining in their hands, not only for the work done upon those articles, but also for work done upon any portions of the same specific lot which had been returned for examination and not yet paid for, and also that, where the whole of a particular lot had been returned for examination, this was not such an unqualified delivery of the goods as to deprive the workmen of their lien for labor bestowed on that lot, unless there had been such a delay in afterwards demanding payment as would amount to a waiver of the lien.

[154] In re Coulter, 2 Sawy. 42, 5 N. B. R. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 3,276.

[155] In re West Norfolk Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 759, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Kerby-Dennis Co., 95 Fed. 116, 36 C. C. A. 677, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 402; s. c., 94 Fed. 818, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218; In re Emslie, 102 Fed. 291, 42 C. C. A. 350, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Beck, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 532; Holland v. Cunliff, 96 Mo. App. 67, 69 S. W. 737; Kemp Lumber Co. v. Howard, 237 Fed. 574, 150 C. C. A. 456, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Chickasaw Hotel Co. v. C. B. Barker Const. Co., 135 Tenn. 305, 186 S. W. 115, L. R. A. 1916F, 106.

[156] Reeves v. York Engineering & Supply Co., 249 Fed. 513, 161 C. C. A. 439; Fels v. George Lueders & Co., 246 Fed. 436, 158 C. C. A. 500, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851; Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Kransz, 291 Ill. 84, 125 N. E. 730; Church E. Gates & Co. v. National Fair & Exposition Ass'n, 172 App. Div. 581, 158 N. Y. Supp. 1070; Hildreth Granite Co. v. City of Watervliet, 161 App. Div. 420, 146 N. Y. Supp. 449; Church E. Gates & Co. v. Jno. F. Stevens Const. Co., 220 N. Y. 38, 115 N. E. 22; Horton v. Queens County Machinery Corp., 101 Misc. Rep. 31, 166 N. Y. Supp. 662; take the property free from any claims of mechanics or materialmen and they cannot thereafter raise a lien by filing their notices.[157]

For obvious reasons, while the law is liberal in favor of bona fide claimants of this kind, it is applied with some strictness in regard to the requirement that they shall clearly bring themselves within the class designated by the statute.[158] Thus, where a bank advanced money to a building contractor to enable him to complete his contract, in consideration of an assignment of the amount due him from the owner, it was held that the bank could not claim a lien in the character of a laborer or a materialman.[159] And though property is charged with valid liens of this kind, it cannot be withheld from the control of the court of bankruptcy, but must be turned over to the trustee to be administered for the benefit of all concerned, due recognition being given to the liens.[160] And further the lien claimants must discontinue any proceedings they may have begun in the state courts.[161] Nor can the claimant insist upon his lien in the bankruptcy proceedings if he has previously waived it by accepting security for his debt, unless, indeed, the security proves to have been entirely void.[162] Finally, if the state law is such that the liens of mechanics relate back to the commencement of the building, there can be no priority among the mechanics in the bankruptcy proceedings, but they all stand upon the same footing and are to be paid in full or pro rata as the funds may suffice.[163]

Moreau Lumber Co. v. Johnson, 29 N. D. 113, 150 N. W. 563, L. R. A. 1915F, 1132, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 290; Harrison v. Knafle, 128 Tenn. 329, 161 S. W. 1003; In re Coulter, 2 Sawy. 42, 5 N. B. R. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 3,276; In re McAllister-Newgord Co., 193 Fed. 265, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Grissler, 136 Fed. 754, 69 C. C. A. 406, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508; In re Georgia Handle Co., 109 Fed. 632, 48 C. C. A. 571, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Lillington Lumber Co., 132 Fed. 886, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; Crane Co. v. Smythe, 94 App. Div. 53, 87 N. Y. Supp. 917; Sabin v. Connor, Fed. Cas. No. 12,197; Clifton v. Foster, 103 Mass. 233, 4 Am. Rep. 539, 3 N. B. R. 656; In re Dey, 9 Blatchf. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 3,871. But the notice or claim must be filed and it must be correct in form and substance. In re Shute (D. C.) 233 Fed. 544, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554.

157 In re Roeber, 121 Fed. 449, 57 C. C. A. 565, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303; In re Cramond, 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Lazzari v. Havens, 39 Misc. Rep. 255, 79 N. Y. Supp. 395; Garretson v. Clark (N. J. Eq.) 57 Atl. 414; In re Sabin, 12 N. B. R. 142, Fed. Cas. No. 12,194; In re Collins (D. C.) 235 Fed. 937, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

158 Selling agents for a bankrupt manufacturing company cannot claim a lien under the description of workmen or laborers. In re Crawford Wollen Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 951, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223.

159 In re Cramond, 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

160 In re Cramond, 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22. If the property is sold free of liens by the trustee in bankruptcy, those holding liens as mechanics or materialmen will have their claims transferred to the fund arising from the sale. In re Dubosky (D. C.) 253 Fed. 794.

161 In re Cook, 3 Biss. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 3,151.

162 In re Lynn Camp Coal Co., 168 Fed. 998, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60.

163 In re Hoyt, 3 Biss. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 6,805.

§ 375. Liens Acquired by Legal Proceedings Before Bankruptcy.—Under the earlier of the two clauses of the bankruptcy act contrasted in a former section,[164] a lien "created by or obtained in or pursuant to any suit or proceeding at law or in equity" will be dissolved by the adjudication of the debtor within four months thereafter, if it appears that it was "obtained and permitted" while he was insolvent and that its enforcement will work a preference, or if the party to be benefited had reasonable cause to believe that the defendant was "insolvent and in contemplation of bankruptcy," or if such lien was "sought and permitted in fraud of the provisions of this act." Here the statute is satisfied by any one of the three alternatives. For example, if the enforcement of the lien will work a preference, it is not necessary that the creditor should have known, or had reasonable cause to believe, that the debtor was insolvent, nor that the lien should have been sought and permitted in fraud of the act.[165] And under the construction given to this provision, an attaching creditor "obtains" his lien when proceedings instituted by him result in its attaching to an insolvent's estate in such manner as to effect a preference, and the debtor "permits" it when he allows a state of facts to exist rendering such lien possible, and cannot and does not in good faith resist it.[166] But under the wider provisions of clause "f" of the sixty-seventh section, all liens obtained through legal proceedings against an insolvent debtor, within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against him, are annulled by his adjudication, irrespective of the question whether the debtor suffered or permitted the lien to be obtained, and irrespective of any knowledge by the creditor of the debtor's insolvency.[167] It is strictly necessary, however, that the lien should have been created within four months before the filing of the petition and that the debtor should have been insolvent at the time it was created.[168] And if a valid lien upon particular property or a fund has been acquired more than four months

[164] Supra, § 363.

[165] In re Burrus, 97 Fed. 926, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 296.

[166] In re Arnold, 94 Fed. 1001, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re Burrus, 97 Fed. 926, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 296.

[167] In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145. But this provision of the statute does not apply to property set apart by the bankruptcy court as exempt. Burcell v. Goldstein, 23 N. D. 257, 136 N. W. 243.

[168] Gay v. Ray, 195 Mass. 8, 80 N. E. 693; W. S. Danby Millinery Co. v. Dogan, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 323, 105 S. W. 337; In re Louisell Lumber Co., 209 Fed. 784, 126 C. C. A. 508, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356. The time and manner in which a lien attaches to property through legal proceedings begun before bankruptcy depends wholly upon the law of the state in which the property is situated. In re Schow (D. C.) 213 Fed. 514. The taking possession of property of a corporation by a court through receivers in a creditors' suit constitutes a "levy" within § 67f of the Bankruptcy Act, and the jurisdiction of the court over the property before bankruptcy proceedings, its enforcement within that time is not an illegal preference under the bankruptcy act.[169]

Of the term "legal proceedings," used in this connection, it has been said that these words are not terms of art. "They have no strictly technical meaning, but are here used in a general sense. In their narrower meaning, they signify a suit or proceeding at law or in equity. But in a wider sense, they embrace every proceeding established by law for acquiring a right or enforcing a remedy. In this sense, the foreclosure of a mortgage by advertisement under the statute is as truly a legal proceeding as a foreclosure by a suit in equity; the one is a statutory remedy out of court, the other a remedy in and through the court. Both are equally legal proceedings. If there were doubt in which sense the expression 'legal proceedings' is used in Section 67f, the wider sense should be adopted, ut res magis valeat quam pereat, that the main object of the act, viz., equality among creditors, may be saved and not lost."[170] As otherwise explained, the expression relates only to those actions and proceedings taken by creditors who, having no existing lien or right of lien resting in existing contract entered into in good faith, seek to obtain a preference by being first in the race of diligence, and the statute does not apply, for example, to a lien obtained by a landlord by the levy of a distress warrant for past due rent under a lease entered into in good faith and giving him the right to resort to that remedy.[171] But the statute plainly covers a seizure of property on a writ of replevin,[172] the lien secured by the filing of a creditor's bill,[173] or a suit to reach and subject the surplus income of an estate held in trust for the debtor,[174] or a suit to vacate a chattel mortgage, as being invalid against creditors.[175] But a mortgage creditor does not lose his lien by suing for and obtaining a decree of foreclosure and an advertisement of the prop-is not affected by bankruptcy proceedings against the corporation instituted more than four months afterwards. Blair v. Brailey, 221 Fed. 1, 136 C. C. A. 524, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

169 Wood v. Kerkeslager, 225 Pa. St. 296, 74 Atl. 174.

170 In re Emslie, 98 Fed. 716, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 516.

171 In re Robinson & Smith, 154 Fed. 343, 83 C. C. A. 121, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; Schall v. Kinsella, 117 La. 687, 42 South. 221; Bird v. City of Richmond, 240 Fed. 545, 153 C. C. A. 349, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Mossler Co., 239 Fed. 262, 152 C. C. A. 250, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604. But compare In re United Motor Chicago Co., 220 Fed. 772, 136 C. C. A. 378, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694.

172 In re Hymes Buggy & Implement Co., 130 Fed. 977, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; In re Weinger, Bergman & Co., 126 Fed. 875, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; In re Haynes, 123 Fed. 1001, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

173 In re Potee Brick Co., 179 Fed. 525. Compare Blick v. Nimmo, 121 Md. 139, 88 Atl. 116.

174 In re Tiffany, 133 Fed. 799, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310.

175 Dunn Salmon Co. v. Pillmore, 55 Misc. Rep. 546, 106 N. Y. Supp. 88.

erty for sale, within four months prior to the debtor's bankruptcy, for the lien is not one created by the decree, but by the act of the parties, that is, by the mortgage itself.[178] Where property of a bankrupt, at the time of the bankruptcy, is in the lawful custody of a state court under seizure in a pending suit begun within four months, the court of bankruptcy has power to stay such suit and to direct the property to be turned over for administration in the bankruptcy proceedings.[177]

§ 376. Same; Attachment or Garnishment.—The lien acquired by an attachment of the property of an insolvent debtor is a lien "obtained through legal proceedings," both on general principles and by the explicit description of it as such in the bankruptcy law, and is dissolved by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against the debtor, if that occurs within four months after its date.[178] And much more is this true of an attachment issued after the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings.[179] But of course the statute does not apply to cases where the property seized under the attachment is exempt property of the bankrupt,[180] or where the person or corporation proceeded against in bankruptcy is not amenable to the bankruptcy law.[181] In other cases, however, the effect of the statute in dissolving attachment liens is not confined to those issuing from courts of the United States, but applies as well to the process of the state courts.[182] And the appointment by [176] In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346.

[177] Orr v. Tribble, 158 Fed. 897, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 849; Stacy v. McNicholas, 76 Or. 167, 148 Pac. 67.

[178] In re Southern Arizona Smelting Co., 231 Fed. 87, 145 C. C. A. 275, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; In re Federal Biscuit Co., 214 Fed. 221, 130 C. C. A. 635, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; Ford v. Henderson, 91 Or. 701, 178 Pac. 381, 179 Pac. 558; Bear v. Chase (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 920, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; Zeiber v. Hill, 1 Sawy. 268, 8 N. B. R. 239, Fed. Cas. No. 18,206; Lindner v. Brock, 40 Mich. 618; Howe v. Union Ins. Co., 42 Cal. 528, Fed. Cas. No. 6,776; Tootle v. Sheldon, 10 Neb. 44, 4 N. W. 358; Peck v. Jenness, 16 N. H. 516, 43 Am. Dec. 573; Ingraham v. Phillips, 1 Day (Conn.) 117; Reed v. Bullington, 49 Miss. 223, Third persons questioning the right of an attaching creditor may attack his lien on the ground of its being dissolved by bankruptcy proceedings begun against the debtor within four months. Dyke v. Farmersville Mill & Light Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 175 S. W. 478. Where the state statute gives a right to an attachment for rent due, but requires it to be followed by a determination of the rights of the parties by a proceeding in court, this is not the equivalent of a common-law distress for rent, and therefore does not give the landlord's claim a preference, but, if taken within four months of a petition in bankruptcy, is dissolved thereby. Jones v. Ford, 254 Fed. 645, 166 C. C. A. 143, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88.

[179] Phillips v. Helmbold, 26 N. J. Eq. 202.

[180] Robinson v. Wilson, 15 Kan. 595, 22 Am. Rep. 272, 14 N. B. R. 565; Burcell v. Goldstein, 23 N. D. 257, 136 N. W. 243; First International Bank v. Lee (N. D.) 141 N. W. 716.

[181] In re New Amsterdam Motor Co., 180 Fed. 943, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757.

[182] Wood v. Carr, 73 S. W. 762, 24 Ky. Law Rep. 2144; Bank of Columbia v.

the state court of a receiver of the property of the debtor, and a transfer to him of the attached property, prior to the appointment of the trustee in bankruptcy, does not so alter the rights of the parties as to entitle the attaching creditor to preference in the payment of any judgment he may obtain.[183]

The effect of the dissolution of the attachment is to release the attached property,[184] though no order of dissolution may be entered in the court where the action is pending,[185] and a purchaser of the property under the attachment has no standing to maintain a bill to clear his title or set aside conveyances,[186] and further proceedings in the suit wherein the attachment issued may be enjoined by the court of bankruptcy.[187] The attached property must be surrendered to the trustee in bankruptcy.[188] But if the property attached has already been sold, and the proceeds paid over to the attaching creditor, it is doubtful whether he can be made to refund it at the suit of the trustee.[189]

The same principles apply to the process of garnishment. The rendition of a judgment against the garnishee creates a lien on the fund or property, and even the service of the writ, before judgment, if it does not create a lien, at least raises a specific right to a lien, and in either case the right or preference secured by the creditor is "obtained through legal proceedings," in such sense as to be dissolved by the subsequent adjudication of the debtor within four months.[190] The effect is to vest

Overstreet, 10 Bush (Ky.) 148, 13 N. B. R. 157.

[183] Miller v. Bowles, 58 N. Y. 253.

[184] Bank of Garrison v. Malley, 103 Tex. 562, 131 S. W. 1064; Lehman, Stern & Co. v. E. Martin & Co., 132 La. 231, 61 South. 212. Where an attachment is sued out against a defendant within four months of his bankruptcy, and is dissolved, a garnishment in aid of such attachment falls with it. Hobson-Starnes Coal Co. v. Alabama Coal & Coke Co., 189 Ala. 481, 66 South. 622. The filing of a petition in bankruptcy by an attaching creditor and delivery of the attached goods to the receiver in bankruptcy, will discharge the attachment if it was obtained within four months, and will pass the title to the receiver. Ernest Wolff Mfg. v. Battreal Shoe Co., 192 Mo. App. 113, 180 S. W. 396.

[185] Sullivan v. Rabb, 86 Ala. 433, 5 South. 746. See King v. Will J. Block Amusement Co., 193 N. Y. 608, 86 N. E. 1126.

[186] Hatfield v. Moller, 4 Fed. 717. But see In re Alabama Coal & Coke Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 940, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

[187] In re Bellows, 3 Story, 428, Fed. Cas. No. 1,278; C. Tennant Sons & Co. v. New Jersey Oil & Meal Co., 78 Misc. Rep. 497, 139 N. Y. Supp. 1023; Pope v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 152 Wis. 611, 140 N. W. 348; In re Federal Biscuit Co., 203 Fed. 37, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393.

[188] New Orleans Acid & Fertilizer Co. v. Grissom, 79 Miss. 662, 31 South. 336. In re Gilsonite Mines Co. (D. C.) 236 Fed. 1015, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473. After the annulling of the lien of an attachment by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, the sheriff holds merely as an involuntary bailee for the benefit of the trustee in bankruptcy. Gray v. Arnot, 31 N. D. 461, 154 N. W. 268.

[189] Botts v. Hammond (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 917, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 775.

[190] In re Ransford, 194 Fed. 658, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; Longley Bros. v. McCann, 90 Ark. 252, 119 S. W. 268; Fairlamb v. Smedley Const. Co., 36 Pa. Super. Ct. 17; Hobbs v. Thompson, 160 Ala. 360, 49 South. 787, 18 Ann. Cas. 381; in and transfer to the trustee in bankruptcy the indebtedness of the garnishee to the bankrupt, and he alone has the right to claim and collect it,[191] so that no judgment can thereafter be properly rendered against the garnishee in the suit of the creditor,[192] and if nevertheless, a judgment is so rendered, it is void, and must be treated as a nullity whenever drawn in question, whether directly or collaterally,[193] and the decree of the federal court adjudicating the principal debtor a bankrupt will constitute a complete defense to any attempt to enforce a judgment rendered by the state court against the garnishee.[194] Where a state statute provides for the filing of judgments recovered against employees of the state and for the payment of such judgments by state officers out of the salary or wages due to such employees (in lieu of allowing the garnishment of such wages or salaries), a lien thus acquired on the amount due an employee of the state is rendered void by his adjudication in bankruptcy, like any other lien, but the judgment itself is not affected, so that the lien exists upon all sums falling due after the adjudication in bankruptcy.[195]

But on the other hand, a lien by attachment or garnishment secured more than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy is not dissolved by the adjudication, but remains a valid charge on the property or fund, which must be recognized and allowed in the bankruptcy proceedings.[196] But this is on the assumption that the Cavanaugh v. Fenley, 94 Minn. 505, 103 N. W. 711, 110 Am. St. Rep. 382; Wilbur v. Wilson, Fed. Cas. No. 17,637; Howe v. Union Ins. Co., 42 Cal. 528, Fed. Cas. No. 6,776; In re Peck, 9 Ben. 169, 16 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 10,886. See London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Mossness, 108 Ill. App. 440; Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. McVay, 142 Ark. 522, 219 S. W. 34.

[191] Wright-Dalton-Bell-Anchor Store Co. v. Sanders, 142 Mo. App. 50, 125 S. W. 517; Peck Lumber Co. v. Mitchell, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 262. Where a garnisher has notice of a prior lien on the money which he attempts to garnish, such lien will prevail against his rights, and also against a trustee in bankruptcy to whom the money was subsequently transferred, the latter also having notice of the prior lien. Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 572, 118 S. W. 1146.

[192] Wright-Dalton-Bell-Anchor Store Co. v. Sanders, 142 Mo. App. 50, 125 S. W. 517.

[193] In re Beals, 116 Fed. 530, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639. And see De Friece v. Bryant (D. C.) 232 Fed. 233, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

[194] Hall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 88 Neb. 20, 128 N. W. 645.

[195] Jefferson Transfer Co. v. Hull, 166 Wis. 438, 166 N. W. 1.

[196] Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall. 642, 22 L. Ed. 549; Crowe v. Reid, 57 Ala. 281; Martin v. Lile, 63 Ala. 406; Daggett v. Cook, 37 Conn. 341; Carr v. Thomas, 18 Fla. 736; Bowman v. Harding, 56 Me. 559; Currier v. King, 81 Vt. 285, 69 Atl. 873; Stickney & Babcock Coal Co. v. Goodwin, 95 Me. 246, 49 Atl. 1039, 85 Am. St. Rep. 408; Francis Batchelder & Co. v. Wedge, 80 Vt. 353, 67 Atl. 828; Bloch Bros. v. Moore (Ala.) 39 South. 1025; Allen v. Ingalls, 33 Nev. 281, 111 Pac. 34, 114 Pac. 758; In re Albrecht, 17 N. B. R. 287, Fed. Cas. No. 145; In re Maher, 169 Fed. 997, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 290; Holladay v. Hare, 69 Cal. 515, 11 Pac. 28; Ressmeyer v. Norwood, 117 Md. 320, 83 Atl. 347; In re J. L. Philips & lien is valid and complete under the law of the state. Thus, to constitute an attachment of personal property, the officer must actually take it into his custody and control, and the mere taking of a receipt for certain property, followed by a return that he had attached it more than four months before the bankruptcy proceedings, though it would estop the receiptor from denying that there was an attachment, is not enough to create a lien as against the trustee in bankruptcy.[197] Having a valid lien, accruing more than four months before the bankruptcy, the creditor will be entitled to prosecute his action to judgment, at least so far as to obtain a decree in rem against the specific property attached, and to proceed to a sale of the property thereunder.[198] If the proceeds are not sufficient to satisfy his whole claim against the debtor, he may come into the bankruptcy proceedings with a claim for the balance, after crediting the amount realized under the attachment.[199]

§ 377. Same; Judgment or Execution.—The Bankruptcy Act provides that "all levies, judgments, attachments, or other liens, obtained through legal proceedings against a person who is insolvent, at any time within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, shall be deemed null and void in case he is adjudged a bankrupt."[200] Consequently a creditor holding an unsatisfied judg-

Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 628, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 877; Coast & Lakes Contracting Corp. v. Martin, 92 Conn. 11, 101 Atl. 502; Light v. Hunt, 17 Ga. App. 491, 87 S. E. 763; Pelton v. Sheridan, 74 Or. 176, 144 Pac. 410; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Dasher, 16 Ga. App. 33, 84 S. E. 482.

[197] In re Ashley, 19 N. B. R. 237, Fed. Cas. No. 581. See Marceline State Bank v. Smith, 122 Mo. App. 61, 98 S. W. 104; In re Schow (D. C.) 213 Fed. 514.

[198] In re Snell, 125 Fed. 154, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35; May v. Courtnay, 47 Ala. 185; Hill v. Harding, 116 Ill. 92, 4 N. E. 361; Gillett v. McCarthy, 23 Kan. 668; Stoddard v. Locke, 43 Vt. 574, 5 Am. Rep. 308, 9 N. B. R. 71; Bates v. Tappan, 99 Mass. 376, 3 N. B. R. 647. See Ray v. Wight, 119 Mass. 426, 20 Am. Rep. 333, 14 N. B. R. 563.

[199] In re Knight, Yancey & Co., 190 Fed. 893, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787.

[200] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67f. Note that the judgment itself is not dissolved, annulled, rendered void, or otherwise affected by the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy against the judgment debtor; only its lien is (in some circumstances) divested. It is true the section cited speaks of "levies, judgment, attachments, or other liens obtained through legal proceedings." But it is evident from the context that it is not the judgment as an obligation or an evidence of debt that is intended, but only its lien, or only the judgment in its aspect of creating a lien. Besides, the only prescribed effect of this annulment or avoidance is that the property affected by the judgment or lien shall be released from it. Further, judgments are provable debts in bankruptcy, and this could not be if they were rendered null and void by the proceedings. Hence, as merging the original cause of action, as an obligation, as an evidence of debt, as the basis for a new suit, as evidence in the courts of another state, as subject to revival by scire facias, and in all other respects save only the question of lien, the judgment is not affected. See Pope v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 152 Wis. 611, 140 N. W. 348. A judgment against the bankrupt will be effective as an es-ment, or an execution levied on property of the debtor, can claim no preference or advantage over other creditors if the debtor is adjudged bankrupt within four months after its date. The judgment may remain as a provable debt against the bankrupt, but its lien is lost.[201] Such questions as whether a lien arises from the delivery of an execution to the sheriff before levy, or whether it covers property held under a contract of conditional sale, will be controlled by the law of the state, and the federal courts will be governed by the decisions of its highest tribunal.[202] The bankruptcy act is held applicable, in this particular, not only to judgments rendered in contested actions, but also to judgments by confession,[203] and judgments entered by consent,[204] and a judgment imposing a fine for a violation of a state law or a municipal ordinance is not excepted,[205] nor one for the purchase price of the property to which its lien attaches.[206] But the object of the statute is only to secure equality among creditors as of a certain date, that is, four months before bankruptcy. Hence it is not the judgment which it denounces, but only the lien or preference springing from it, and therefore it applies only to judgments of which a lien on property is a necessary result or concomitant. "A judgment or decree in enforcement of an otherwise valid pre-existing lien is not the judgment denounced by the statute, which is plainly confined to judgments creating liens. If this were not so, the date of the acquisition of a lien by attachment or creditor's bill would be entirely immaterial. Moreover, other provisions of the act render it unreasonable to impute the intention to annul all judgments recovered within four toppel against the trustee and the estate, although, by the loss of its lien, the judgment creditor can only claim in competition with other creditors having equal rights. In re Stringer (D. C.) 230 Fed. 177, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44; So again, where a judgment is rendered within four months before an adjudication of bankruptcy, it becomes a lien on any real estate of the bankrupt which the trustee elects not to take, although it is not effective against the trustee or persons claiming under him or against, the bankrupt personally. McCarty v. Light, 155 App. Div. 36, 139 N. Y. Supp. 853. And see People's Nat. Bank v. Maxson, 168 Iowa, 318, 150 N. W. 601.

201 In re Harrington, 200 Fed. 1010, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666; Severin v. Robinson, 27 Ind. App. 55, 60 N. E. 966; L. Mohr & Sons v. Mattox, 120 Ga. 962, 48 S. E. 410; Burgett v. Paxton, 99 Ill. 288; Ades v. Caplan, 132 Md. 66, 103 Atl. 94, L. R. A. 1918B, 276; In re Beck (D. C.) 238 Fed. 653, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797; Finney v. Knapp Co., 145 Ga. 400, 89 S. E. 413. See In re Surprenant (D. C.) 217 Fed. 470, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454. Compare Doyle v. Hall, 86 Ill. App. 163.

202 Reardon v. Rock Island Plow Co., 168 Fed. 654, 94 C. C. A. 118, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26; Pence v. Cochran, 6 Fed. 269.

203 In re Weeks, 2 Biss. 259, 4 N. B. R. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 17,350; Jordan v. Downey, 40 Md. 401, 12 N. B. R. 427; Hoover v. Greenbaum, 61 N. Y. 305.

204 In re Richard, 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

205 In re Green (D. C.) 179 Fed. 870, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

206 In re O'Brien, 215 Fed. 129, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 347.

months."[207] Thus, a decree foreclosing a mortgage, entered within four months before the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, is not a judgment creating a lien, such as to be rendered void by the adjudication, but merely a decree for the enforcement of a prior lien, which is not affected by the proceedings in bankruptcy.[208] And so, a judgment dispossessing a tenant, rendered shortly before his bankruptcy, is not one which creates a lien on his estate.[209] Moreover, the statute does not apply to a lien which has already been merged into a title by sale on judicial process. Where a judgment has been recovered, an execution issued and levied, and a sale of the property made thereunder, all within four months prior to the bankruptcy, the title of the execution purchaser is expressly saved by the statute in case he bought in good faith and for value and without notice, and as to the proceeds of the sale, they may perhaps be recovered by the trustee in bankruptcy if they yet remain in the hands of the sheriff, but not after they have been paid over to the judgment creditor, saving questions as to preference or fraud.[210]

But if a lien was gained by the recovery of a judgment, or by the levy of an execution thereunder, more than four months before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, it is not dissolved or affected by the adjudication of the debtor, but the creditor is entitled to claim and enforce the advantages of his position.[211] And it has been held that the [207] Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 174, 23 Sup. Ct. 67, 47 L. Ed. 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re Kavanaugh (D. C.) 99 Fed. 928, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832. A judgment creditor, who secured a decree setting aside as to him a conveyance by the bankrupt should not be restrained from levying execution on the property, though the decree was obtained within four months before the bankruptcy proceedings, other creditors not having participated. In re Betsekas (D. C.) 235 Fed. 1020, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184. Where a judgment obtained more than four months before the judgment debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt did not create a lien, a levy within the four months is void as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Coppard v. Gardner (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 650.

[208] In re McKane (D. C.) 152 Fed. 733; Harvard v. Davis, 145 Ga. 580, 89 S. E. 740.

[209] Plaut v. Gorham Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 174 Fed. 852, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42. See In re Chambers (D. C.) 254 Fed. 506, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[210] Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., 178 Fed. 136; In re Bailey, 144 Fed. 214, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Franks, 95 Fed. 635, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634; In re Francis-Valentine Co., 93 Fed. 953, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188; In re Kenney, 95 Fed. 427, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494; Dyson v. Harper, 54 Ga. 282; Clement v. King, 152 N. C. 456, 67 S. E. 1023. And see, supra, §§ 28, 233. Compare In re Breslauer, 121 Fed. 910, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33. See Utah Ass'n of Credit Men v. Jones, 50 Utah, 519, 164 Pac. 1029; Keystone Brewing Co. v. Schermer, 241 Pa. 361, 88 Atl. 657.

[211] Lewin v. Telluride Iron Works Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 590, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; In re Bruce, 158 Fed. 123, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Murphy, 4 Ga. App. 13, 60 S. E. 831; Tucker v. Denico, 27 R. I. 239, 61 Atl. 642; Meirkord v. Helming, 139 Iowa. 437, 116 N. W. 785; Kaminsky v. Horrigan, 2 Ga. App. 332, 58 S. E. 497; In re Fuller, 1 Sawy. 243, 4 N. B. R. 115, Fed. Cas. No. 5,148; Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Rylee, 139 statute does not affect the lien of an execution levied within the four months, but founded on a judgment recovered two years before.[212] But this is difficult to concede, in view of the fact that the statute expressly names "levies" as well as "judgments and other liens obtained through legal proceedings."[213] But the trustee in bankruptcy may attack the validity of the lien on other grounds, if any are open to him. The law recognizes as liens only those which are valid and binding under the law of the estate where the property is situated. Hence if the lien of a judgment has been lost by lapse of time, and the judgment become dormant, by the laws of the state, there is no lien which is enforceable in bankruptcy.[214] And so, where an execution has been returned "nulla bona,"[215] but not necessarily because a sale under the execution has been enjoined by strangers.[216] On the other hand, the validity of a levy which is valid under the state law, being a matter of record, is conclusive and cannot be enquired into in the bankruptcy proceedings, and if the recital of a levy is false, the officer may be held to answer for it to the proper party, but this does not entitle the trustee in bankruptcy to claim or hold the proceeds of sale.[217]

An execution levied upon property after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, while it is not rendered void by § 67f of the Bankruptcy Act, which applies only to liens acquired prior to the filing of the petition, creates no lien which will be recognized by the court of bankruptcy.[218] And a money judgment rendered in a state court pending the bankruptcy proceedings does not impose a lien on lands forming a part of the bankrupt's non-exempt property.[219]

§ 378. Dissolution of Liens by Adjudication.—All liens obtained within four months prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy, whether voluntary or by the process of a state court, and whether the proceedings in bankruptcy are begun by a voluntary or an involuntary petition, are

Ga. 669, 78 S. E. 27; In re L'Hommedieu, 146 Fed. 708, 77 C. C. A. 134, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 850; In re Zeis, 245 Fed. 737, 158 C. C. A. 139, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104; In re Pilcher & Son (D. C.) 228 Fed. 139, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; Robinson & Co. v. Cosner, 136 La. 595, 67 South. 468; Robinson v. Tischler, 69 Fla. 77, 67 South. 565; Kinney v. Avery & Co., 14 Ga. App. 180, 80 S. E. 663; In re Brinn (D. C.) 262 Fed. 527, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

[212] In re Easley, 93 Fed. 419, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[213] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67f.

[214] In re Cozart, 3 N. B. R. 508, Fed. Cas. No. 3,313; In re Zeis (D. C.) 229 Fed. 472, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581; In re Monarch Acetylene Co. (D. C.) 229 Fed. 474, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598. See In re Fraser (D. C.) 261 Fed. 558, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

[215] In re E. Matthews & Sons, 163 Fed. 127, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[216] In re Randolph, 187 Fed. 186, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[217] Armstrong v. Rickey, 2 N. B. R. 473, Fed. Cas. No. 546.

[218] In re Schow (D. C.) 213 Fed. 514.

[219] Chambers v. Kirk, 41 Okl. 696, 139 Pac. 986.

vacated by the adjudication of bankruptcy.[220] Although the filing of the petition in bankruptcy fixes the date from which the period of four months preceding is to be calculated, with reference to the dissolution of liens obtained within that period, it is not the filing of the petition which vacates the lien but the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt, and hence if an adjudication is denied and the petition dismissed, the lien remains in full force.[221] And even where the adjudication is duly made, it does not affect valid liens on such of the debtor's property as is exempt by law.[222] In other cases, however, the annulment of the lien follows automatically. That is to say, it is within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to order that the rights obtained under the levy attachment, or other lien shall be preserved for the benefit of the estate. But if no such order is made, the lien is dissolved without the necessity of any judgment to that effect on the part of the court of bankruptcy.[223] But it is entirely proper practice for the trustee in bankruptcy to apply to the state court where the proceeding is pending for an order discharging the attachment or other lien,[224] and for this purpose he need not make himself formally a party of record.[225] But laches of the trustee in failing to move for the dissolution of an attachment which is avoided by the adjudication in bankruptcy will not validate it.[226] The rights of the parties are not altered by the fact that a receiver of the debtor's estate had been appointed by the state court and the attached property turned over to him.[227] But if the property has already been sold under the process of the state court, the title of the purchaser is not impeachable in the bankruptcy proceedings, if he bought in good faith, for value, and without notice.[228]

The statute does not operate upon and dissolve liens obtained by execution, levy, attachment, or other process, as against all the world, but

[220] Archenhold v. Schaefer (Tex. Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 139; Greenberger v. Schwartz, 261 Pa. 265, 104 Atl. 573; In re Rosenthal (D. C.) 238 Fed. 597, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; In re American Candy Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 145, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

[221] Sullivan & Co. v. King, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 432, 72 S. W. 207.

[222] In re Snyder (D. C.) 216 Fed. 989, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311; Jewett Bros. v. Huffman, 14 N. D. 110, 103 N. W. 408. And see supra, § 249. Compare In re Forbes, 186 Fed. 79, 108 C. C. A. 191, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285. This rule applies also as to the bankrupt's after-acquired property. Taylor v. Buser (Sup.) 167 N. Y. Supp. 887.

[223] Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 171 Fed. 940, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 803; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11, 104 Am. St. Rep. 899; Goodnough Mercantile Co. v. Galloway, 48 Or. 239, 84 Pac. 1049; Watschke v. Thompson, 85 Minn. 105, 88 N. W. 263.

[224] Hardt v. Schuylkill Plush & Silk Co., 69 App. Div. 90, 74 N. Y. Supp. 549; Kent v. Downing, 44 Ga. 116, 10 N. B. R. 538; Louden v. King, 50 Ga. 302; King v. Loudon, 53 Ga. 64; Dickerson v. Spaulding, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 288, 15 N. B. R. 313.

[225] Louden v. King, 50 Ga. 302; King v. Loudon, 53 Ga. 64.

[226] Hardt v. Schuylkill Plush & Silk Co., 69 App. Div. 90, 74 N. Y. Supp. 549.

[227] Miller v. Bowles, 58 N. Y. 253.

[228] Zahm v. Fry, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 243, 9 N. B. R. 546, Fed. Cas. No. 18,198.

only as against the trustee in bankruptcy and those claiming under him.[229] And a court will not presume the appointment and qualification of a trustee, merely because the bankruptcy act provides for such appointment, when the question is as to the discharge of a lien alleged to be invalidated by the adjudication of the debtor.[230] In effect, this statutory dissolution of liens is for the benefit of creditors, not for the benefit of the bankrupt, and as to him all such liens remain in force notwithstanding his adjudication in bankruptcy, as, for instance with reference to his exempt property or property which the trustee disclaims or which never comes into his possession.[231] And although a sale of land on execution within four months before the defendant's adjudication in bankruptcy, may be avoided by his trustee, its nullity cannot be pleaded by a former grantee of the same property.[232] Nor does the adjudication of the principal debtor release the sureties on a replevin bond or forthcoming bond.[233]

§ 379. Insolvency of Debtor.—The bankruptcy act provides for the dissolution of liens obtained through any suit or proceeding at law or in equity begun against a person within four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against him, if it appears that he permitted the attaching of such lien while he was insolvent and that it will effect a preference. or if the person to be benefited by it "had reasonable cause to believe the defendant was insolvent and in contemplation of bankruptcy."[234] This was also the rule under the act of 1867 as interpreted by the courts.[235] It will be observed that the question as to the creditor is whether he had "reasonable cause to believe" the debtor insolvent—not what he did believe—the latter is immaterial. The creditor is not constituted the sole judge of the sufficiency of the evidence of his debtor's insolvency; that is for the court to determine, the lien being attacked.[236] Reasonable cause to believe a person to be insolvent means [229] McKenney v. Cheney, 118 Ga. 387, 45 S. E. 433; Frazee v. Nelson, 179 Mass. 456, 61 N. E. 40, 88 Am. St. Rep. 391.

[230] Schoenthaler v. Rosskam, 107 Ill. App. 427.

[231] Miller v. Barto, 247 Ill. 104, 93 N. E. 140; Rochester Lumber Co. v. Locke, 72 N. H. 22, 54 Atl. 705.

[232] Hutchins v. Cantu (Tex. Civ. App.) 66 S. W. 138.

[233] Kaminsky v. Horrigan, 2 Ga. App. 332, 58 S. E. 497; Ehrlich v. Sklamberg, 116 N. Y. Supp. 602; In re Federal Biscuit Co., 214 Fed. 221, 130 C. C. A. 635, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; Credit Ass'n of California v. Griffin, 32 Cal. App. 598, 163 Pac. 695. Compare Kaiser v. Richardson, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 301, 14 N. B. R. 391.

[234] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67c.

[235] Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Truax, 1 N. B. R. 545, Fed. Cas. No. 9,451; In re McDonough, 3 N. B. R. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 8,775; Driggs v. Moore, 1 Abb. U. S. 440, 3 N. B. R. 602, Fed. Cas. No. 4,083; In re Pierce, 2 Low. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 11,140; McCabe v. Goodwine, 65 Ind. 288. See Peckham v. Burrows, 3 Story, 544, Fed. Cas. No. 10,897.

[236] Hall v. Wager, 3 Biss. 28, 5 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 5,951.

knowledge of a state of facts which would put a prudent man upon inquiry as to the condition of the person with whom he is dealing.[237] "If it appears that the party making the conveyance was actually insolvent, and that the means of knowledge upon this subject were at hand, and that such facts and circumstances were known to the party receiving the conveyance as clearly put the assignee, transferree, or grantee of the property upon inquiry, it would seem to be just to hold that the party receiving the assignment, transfer, or conveyance, even if he omitted to make inquiries, had reasonable cause to believe that his assignor or grantor was insolvent."[238] Under these rules, reasonable cause to believe the debtor insolvent may be imputed to a creditor when he knows that the debtor cannot pay his debts in the ordinary course of his business[239] or that the debtor has been embarrassed for two years, had made small payments on overdue debts, has unavailingly applied for extensions of time, has been pressed by his creditors, and has declined to give a mortgage on the ground that it would injure his credit.[240] So the debtor's repeated failure to fulfill promises in regard to paying the claim, the creditor also having knowledge of other debts, charges him with notice of insolvency, or reasonable cause for belief,[241] and so also, where creditors have to sue for the collection of accounts long overdue, and the debtor submits to suits on claims against which he has no defense.[242] Again, where a creditor takes a check, the fact that payment of it is refused puts him upon inquiry,[243] and it is said that the existence of a financial crisis or panic constitutes of itself reasonable cause to believe persons otherwise in doubtful circumstances to be insolvent.[244] Under the definition of insolvency as accepted in the application of former bankruptcy laws (inability to meet debts as they mature in the ordinary course of trade), it was held that a creditor who has knowledge of any transactions by the debtor out of the ordinary course of trade is put upon inquiry as to his solvency,[245] and the giving of a mortgage to secure prior advances or a pre-existing debt is out of the usual course of business, and is therefore a circumstance to put the creditor upon inquiry.[246]

[237] Rison v. Knapp, 4 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 11,861; In re McDonough, 3 N. B. R. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 8,775; Webb v. Sachs, 4 Sawy. 158, 15 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 17,325.

[238] Scammon v. Cole, 3 Cliff. 472, 5 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 12,432.

[239] Wilson v. Brinkman, 2 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 17,794; In re Forsyth, 7 N. B. R. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 4,948.

[240] Hall v. Wager, 3 Biss. 28, 5 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 5,951.

[241] In re Armstrong, 9 Ben. 212, 16 N. B. R. 275, Fed. Cas. No. 539.

[242] Stranahan v. Gregory, 4 N. B. R. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 13,522; Mayer v. Hermann, 10 Blatchf. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 9,344; Dunning v. Perkins, 2 Biss. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 4,180.

[243] Warren v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 5 Ben. 395, 5 N. B. R. 479, Fed. Cas. No. 17,200.

[244] In re Clarke, 2 Hughes, 405, 10 N. B. R. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 2,843.

[245] Scammon v. Hobson, 1 Hask. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 12,434.

[246] In re Holland, 2 Hask. 90, Fed. Cas. No. 6,603; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. Ed. 504. But compare Ex

But on the other hand, the creditor is not to be charged with knowledge of his debtor's insolvency, or reasonable cause to believe in it, merely from the fact that he knows that the debtor is embarrassed in carrying on his business for want of means,[247] or that the debtor was short of funds on the particular occasion, and wished the creditor to take a note and mortgage in substitution for a check on a bank.[248] So the fact that a person doing a large business obtains renewals of his commercial paper, or under special circumstances pays a large discount, is not notice of insolvency where it appears that such commercial paper was selling at equal rates in the market.[249] And in a rural community. the mere nonpayment of a note at maturity is not sufficient evidence of insolvency to put a creditor on inquiry.[250]

As to the meaning of the phrase "contemplation of bankruptcy," some of the decisions under the former statutes applied the strict rule that this could only mean the debtor's contemplation of the commission of an act denounced by the statute as an act of bankruptcy, or his contemplation of a decree adjudicating him a bankrupt either on his own petition or in involuntary proceedings.[251] But other decisions held that the phrase means contemplation on the debtor's part of a state of insolvency such as to involve a thorough breaking up of his business, and hence something more than insolvency in the sense of mere inability to pay debts promptly and as they mature,[252] so that payments made or securities given by a party who knew himself to be insolvent, were not considered as being "in contemplation of bankruptcy" if, at the time, he fully expected to continue his business and retrieve his losses.[253]

But under the wider provision in a later clause of the same section of the statute, liens obtained through legal proceedings against an insolvent person, within four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, are to be deemed null and void in case he is adjudged a bankrupt,[254] without reference to his contemplation of bankruptcy or to the creditor's knowledge or constructive notice of his insolvency. And "insolvency" does not here mean mere inability to pay debts, but "a person parte Packard, 1 Low. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 10,650; McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 587, Fed. Cas. No. 8,888.

247 In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117.

248 Collins v. Bell, 3 N. B. R. 587, Fed. Cas. No. 3,010.

249 Golson v. Niehoff, 2 Biss. 434, 5 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 5,524.

250 Shafer v. Fritchery, 4 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 12,697.

251 Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 151, 14 L. Ed. 91; In re Craft, 6 Blatchf. 177, 2 N. B. R. 111, Fed. Cas. No. 3,317; In re Goldschmidt, 3 N. B. R. 164, 3 Ben. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 5,520.

252 Everett v. Stone, 3 Story, 446, Fed. Cas. No. 4,577; McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 587, Fed. Cas. No. 8,888; Hutchins v. Taylor, Fed. Cas. No. 6,953; In re Dibblee, 3 Ben. 283, 2 N. B. R. 617, Fed. Cas. No. 3,884; Atkinson v. Farmers' Bank, Crabbe, 529, Fed. Cas. No. 609.

253 Atkinson v. Farmers' Bank, Crabbe, 529, Fed. Cas. No. 609.

254 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67f.

shall be deemed insolvent when the aggregate of his property, exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed, or removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors, shall not, at a fair valuation, be sufficient in amount to pay his debts." [255] To satisfy the statute, it is necessary that the debtor should have been insolvent at the time the lien attached or was obtained. If he was then solvent, the lien is not dissolved by his subsequent adjudication in bankruptcy, though it be within four months.[256] And his insolvency must be alleged in any proceeding to avoid or discharge the lien, and proved by satisfactory evidence.[257] The burden is on one who claims that a lien is void under this section of the Bankruptcy Act to plead and prove the insolvency of the person against whom the lien was obtained at the time of its being obtained.[258] Thus, the burden of proof being on the trustee, the lien of a lessor, perfected by levy of a distress warrant within four months of the bankruptcy of the lessee, cannot be set aside in the absence of evidence that the lessor had cause to believe a preference was given.[259]

§ 380. Date of Attaching of Lien as Affecting Dissolution.—After the filing of a petition in bankruptcy it is too late for any creditor to gain an advantage over others by fastening any kind of a lien upon property of the debtor.[260] Moreover, certain classes of liens acquired within four months prior to the filing of the petition are expressly avoided by the statute upon the subsequent adjudication of the debtor,[261] such as the lien of an execution and levy on personal property,[262] or that of a distress

[255] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 15.

[256] Newberry Shoe Co. v. Collier, 111 Va. 288, 68 S. E. 974; Jackson v. Valley Tie & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 714, 62 S. E. 964; D. C. Wise Coal Co. v. Columbia Zinc & Lead Co., 157 Mo. App. 315, 138 S. W. 67; W. S. Danby Millinery Co. v. Dogan, 47 Tex. Civ. App. 323, 105 S. W. 337; Stone-Ordean-Wells Co. v. Mark, 227 Fed. 975, 142 C. C. A. 433, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663. But see In re Southern Arizona Smelting Co., 231 Fed. 87, 145 C. C. A. 275, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827.

[257] Simpson v. Van Etten, 108 Fed. 199, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; Hardt v. Schuylkill Plush & Silk Co., 69 App. Div. 90, 74 N. Y. Supp. 549; Kellogg-Mackay-Cameron Co. v. William Schmidt Baking Co., 101 Ill. App. 209; In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; Martin v. Oliver, 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

[258] Stone-Ordean-Wells Co. v. Mark, 227 Fed. 975, 142 C. C. A. 433, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663.

[259] In re Mossler Co., 239 Fed. 262, 152 C. C. A. 250, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[260] Cox v. State Bank, 125 Fed. 654, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Engle, 105 Fed. 893, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Morgan v. Campbell, 22 Wall. 381, 22 L. Ed. 796; Kinmouth v. Braeutigam, 63 N. J. Eq. 103, 52 Atl. 226. But see In re Wodzicki (D. C.) 238 Fed. 571, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282, holding that a judgment creditor of the bankrupt is entitled to money collected monthly from the salary of the bankrupt under execution under Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. § 1391, not only before the four-month period, but during it, where no trustee in bankruptcy has been appointed.

[261] As to the effect of liens attaching before the passage of the bankruptcy act, see In re Brown, 91 Fed. 358, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

[262] Rothermel v. Moyer, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 325.

warrant,[263] or the statutory lien acquired by the institution of proceedings against a manufacturing corporation by a laborer in its employment.[264] But generally speaking, if four months or more have intervened between the attaching of the lien and the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, the lien is not annulled, but preserved, as in the case of the lien of an attachment,[265] or that acquired by the rendition and entry of a final judgment,[266] or the docketing of a judgment in the county where the debtor's land lies.[267] So, a deed takes effect from its delivery, if there are no restrictions upon the right of the grantee to record it, and it will give a title available as against a trustee in bankruptcy if delivered more than four months before the beginning of the bankruptcy proceedings, though not recorded until later,[268] and the same rule has been applied in the case of a writ of attachment issued more than four months before the bankruptcy, but amended within that period to cure a formal defect.[269]

The rule for determining when the four-months period begins and ends is furnished by the statute itself (Section 31), which provides that "whenever time is enumerated by days in this act, or in any proceeding in bankruptcy, the number of days shall be computed by excluding the first, and including the last, unless the last fall on a Sunday or holiday, in which event the day last included shall be the next day thereafter which is not a Sunday or a legal holiday." This was also the rule under the former bankruptcy law.[270] Under this rule, an attachment or other lien acquired on February 8th (for example) will be dissolved by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy on June 8th following.[271] And the maxim that the law does not take account of fractions of a day has no application to transactions in bankruptcy, as the time thereof is made certain by record.[272]

But the doctrine of relation plays a very important part in determining this question of the dissolution of liens. Thus it is held by the great weight of authority, that a creditor who brings suit against his debtor and secures the issue and levy of an attachment, more than four

[263] In re D. H. Dougherty Co., 109 Fed. 480, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

[264] In re Monroe Lumber Co., 186 Fed. 252, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371.

[265] Hurlbutt v. Brown, 72 N. H. 235, 55 Atl. 1046; Tucker v. Denico, 26 R. I. 560, 59 Atl. 920.

[266] Hillyer v. Le Roy, 179 N. Y. 369, 72 N. E. 237, 103 Am. St. Rep. 919. See Buttz v. James, 33 N. D. 162, 156 N. W. 547; Ricks v. Smith, 20 Ga. App. 491, 93 S. E. 116.

[267] In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41.

[268] National Bank of Fredericksburg v. Conway, 1 Hughes, 37, 14 N. B. R. 513, Fed. Cas. No. 10,037.

[269] Harrington v. Fire Ass'n, Fed. Cas. No. 6,106.

[270] Richards v. Clark, 124 Mass. 491; Cooley v. Cook, 125 Mass. 406.

[271] In re Warner, 144 Fed. 987, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; Jones v. Stevens, 94 Me. 582, 48 Atl. 170.

[272] Westbrook Mfg. Co. v. Grant, 60 Me. 88, 11 Am. Rep. 181.

months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor, acquires a lien which will not be dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that the judgment in the action, which enforces the lien, was rendered within the four-months period.[273] This is partly on the ground that such judgment, so far as concerns the purposes of the lien, relates back to the service of the attachment, and partly on the theory that the "judgments" spoken of in the statute as being dissolved by the adjudication of the debtor within four months are judgments which create a lien, and not those which merely enforce an existing lien.[274] On the same principle, the equitable lien arising from a creditor's bill to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, having its date from the filing of the bill, and not from the date of the decree rendered in the suit is not avoided by the bankruptcy proceedings, where the bill is filed more than four months prior to the petition in bankruptcy, though the decree is rendered within such four months.[275] So also, the title of a receiver appointed in proceedings supplementary to execution relates back to the date of the service of the order, and will be superior to that of the trustee in bankruptcy, if the order was served more than four months before the beginning of the bankruptcy proceedings, regardless of the fact that the receiver was appointed within that period.[276] And again where the law of the state gives a lien to an award of arbitrators, it is valid against the trustee in bankruptcy if the award was made more than four months before the bankruptcy, though the judgment confirm-

[273] Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, 23 Sup. Ct. 67, 47 L. Ed. 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Yumet & Co. v. Delgado, 243 Fed. 519, 156 C. C. A. 217, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re United States Graphite Co., 161 Fed. 583, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; In re Beaver Coal Co., 113 Fed. 889, 51 C. C. A. 519, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542; In re Blair, 108 Fed. 529, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; Jackson v. Valley Tie & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 714, 62 S. E. 964; Pepperdine v. Bank of Seymour, 100 Mo. App. 387, 73 S. W. 890; Wakeman v. Throckmorton, 74 Conn. 616, 51 Atl. 554; Hurlbutt v. Brown, 72 N. H. 235, 55 Atl. 1046; Kittredge v. Warren, 14 N. H. 509; Rowe v. Page, 54 N. H. 190, 13 N. B. R. 366; Hudson v. Adams, 18 N. B. R. 102, Fed. Cas. No. 6,832. Contra, see In re Johnson, 108 Fed. 373, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Duffield v. Horton, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 140, 16 N. B. R. 59; In re Cook, 2 Story, 376, Fed. Cas. No. 3,162.

[274] Where the debtor gave a deed as security, which was dated and recorded more than four months before his bankruptcy, a judgment on the note secured by the deed is not invalidated by the adjudication in bankruptcy, though taken within the four months' period. Spradlin v. Kramer, 146 Ga. 396, 91 S. E. 409.

[275] Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, 23 Sup. Ct. 67, 47 L. Ed. 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Doyle v. Heath, 22 R. I. 213, 47 Atl. 213; Snyder v. Smith, 185 Mass. 58, 69 N. E. 1089; Schoenthaler v. Rosskam, 107 Ill. App. 427; Taylor v. Taylor, 59 N. J. Eq. 86, 45 Atl. 440; Iselin v. Goldstein, 35 Misc. Rep. 489, 71 N. Y. Supp. 1069; Ninth Nat. Bank v. Moses, 39 Misc. Rep. 664, 80 N. Y. Supp. 617; In re O'Connor, 95 Fed. 943. Compare In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815. See Jasper v. Rozinski, 228 N. Y. 349, 127 N. E. 189.

[276] Arnold v. Greene Gold-Silver Co., 68 Misc. Rep. 449, 125 N. Y. Supp. 29; Wrede v. Clark, 132 App. Div. 293, 117 N. Y. Supp. 5; Smith v. Meisenheimer, 104 Ky. 753, 47 S. W. 1087; In re West-

ing it was obtained within that time.[277] And so, the lien of a chattel mortgage depends upon the date of its execution, and not upon the subsequent act of the mortgagee in taking possession of the goods.[278] But the merely provisional or inchoate lien acquired by the service of garnishment process, which under the law of the state can be made effective only through the recovery of a judgment and a levy or demand thereunder, is not of a kind to be preserved in the bankruptcy proceedings where the judgment was given within the four months, irrespective of the time when the process was served.[279]

On the other hand, although the statute speaks of the dissolution of liens obtained through a suit or proceeding which was "begun" against a person within four months before his bankruptcy, this does not necessarily refer to the beginning of the suit or action itself, but to the beginning of that part or branch of the proceedings whose special object is to secure a lien on property.[280] And although it is competent for a state to provide by law that the lien of a judgment, in a certain class of cases, shall relate back to the institution of the suit, and the bankruptcy law will preserve such lien,[281] yet the lien obtained by the levy of an execution on property newly purchased or acquired by the debtor, within four months prior to the bankruptcy, will be dissolved by the adjudication, though the judgment was entered more than four months previously,[282] and so will the lien obtained on land in another county within the four-months period, by the transfer to that county of an older judgment.[283] So, although a judgment may have been standing for several years, yet if garnishment proceedings founded on it were begun within four months before the bankruptcy of the debtor, the lien thereby acquired will be dissolved,[284] and so of an attachment sued out within the prescribed period, no matter how long the original action may have been pending.[285] And again, where a creditor holding a note ern Sav. Bank, 110 Misc. Rep. 444, 181 N. Y. Supp. 574. But see In re O'Connor, 95 Fed. 943.

277 In re Koslowski, 153 Fed. 823, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

278 Thompson v. Fairbanks, 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11, 104 Am. St. Rep. 899. But see Bank of Leavenworth v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. Ed. 190.

279 In re Lesser, 108 Fed. 201, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326. But compare Albany & Northern Ry. Co. v. Dunlap Hardware Co., 8 Ga. App. 171, 68 S. E. 868.

280 In re Higgins, 97 Fed. 775, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364.

281 Voyles v. Parker, 9 Biss. 326, 4 Fed. 210. The revival of a judgment by amicable scire facias and confession, though within four months thereafter the debtor is adjudged bankrupt, is not in fraud of the bankruptcy law. Kemmerer v. Tool, 81 Pa. St. 467, 12 N. B. R. 334.

282 In re Darwin, 117 Fed. 407, 54 C. C. A. 581, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703; In re Spacht, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 238.

283 Mencke v. Rosenberg, 202 Pa. St. 131, 51 Atl. 767, 90 Am. St. Rep. 618; In re Jackson Light & Traction Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 223, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

284 Armour Packing Co. v. Wynn, 119 Ga. 683, 46 S. E. 865.

285 In re Higgins, 97 Fed. 775, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364, disapproving In re De Lue, 91 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

with warrant of attorney to confess judgment enters up judgment thereon and levies on the debtor's property, the latter being then insolvent, and within four months thereafter a petition in bankruptcy is filed by or against the debtor, the lien is dissolved, notwithstanding the fact that the note was given more than four months before and at a time when the debtor was solvent.[286]

It is important to be observed that the provision of the Bankruptcy Act invalidating liens which were created within four months prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy refers only to such liens as are placed on the bankrupt's property within that period, whether by process of a court or the act of the parties, and it does not affect liens which were attached to the property when it came into the bankrupt's hands.[287]

§ 381. Rights of Bona Fide Purchasers.—In prescribing the dissolution of liens obtained within four months prior to bankruptcy, the statute saves the rights of innocent third parties by providing that "nothing herein contained shall have the effect to destroy or impair the title obtained by such levy, judgment, attachment, or other lien, of a bona fide purchaser for value who shall have acquired the same without notice or reasonable cause for inquiry." [288] Though awkward and obscure on its face, this proviso is interpreted by the courts to mean that an adjudication in bankruptcy shall not affect the title acquired by a bona fide purchaser at a sale under such levy, judgment, attachment, or other lien, provided he bought without notice of the debtor's insolvency or of his intention to prefer a creditor or work a fraud upon the act, and without reasonable cause for inquiry into the circumstances in this respect.[289] But it is intended only for the benefit of third persons so purchasing, and affords no protection to the creditor in the execution or attachment,[290]

[286] In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Rhoads, 98 Fed. 399, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380; In re Engle, 105 Fed. 893, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Ferguson v. Greth, 195 Pa. St. 272, 45 Atl. 735, 78 Am. St. Rep. 812.

[287] In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[288] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67f, proviso.

[289] In re Kenney, 95 Fed. 427, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494; State Bank v. Munroe, 109 Ill. App. 34; Jones v. Springer, 15 N. Mex. 98, 103 Pac. 265; Coppard v. Gardner (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 650. Where a bank took an assignment of certain accounts receivable from the bankrupt to secure a present loan, within four months prior to his bankruptcy, in good faith and without notice or reasonable cause for inquiry, it was held entitled to the benefit of its lien as against a subsequent attachment sought to be preserved for the benefit of the estate. In re Alabama Coal & Coke Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 940, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

[290] In re Kaupisch Creamery Co. (D. C.) 107 Fed. 93, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790. Where an insolvent corporation confessed judgment in favor of a bank, which bought in its property at the execution sale, setting off the judgment against the purchase price, it was held that the bank was not a bona fide purchaser, within this provision of the Bankruptcy Act, because the lien of the judgment, destroyed by the adjudication in bankruptcy, was a preference. Grant v. National Bank of Auburn (D. C.) 232 Fed. 201, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

nor to one acting in concert or collusion with him,[291] nor to the officer making the sale or who holds the proceeds thereof.[292] Further, a person is not to be considered a bona fide purchaser who, in addition to knowledge of suspicious circumstances, is aware that he is purchasing a large and valuable amount of property at a grossly inadequate consideration.[293] And where, a few days before an execution sale, one who became the purchaser was handed a copy of the debtor's assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the debtor was present at the sale and publicly announced that he was insolvent, and the assignee exhibited the assignment and forbade the sale, the purchaser had reasonable cause to believe that the sale would not stand, and he cannot hold his purchase against the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor.[294] And the same rule has been applied against the purchaser at an execution sale who merely had heard rumors that the debtor had already been adjudged bankrupt, this being sufficient to put him upon inquiry.[295]

§ 382. Rights of Trustee as to Property Affected by Liens.—It is always open to the trustee in bankruptcy to contest the validity of liens asserted against property of the bankrupt estate, because he represents the creditors, and not the bankrupt, and, further, has the rights and status of a creditor armed with a lien.[296] Where, however, the validity of a lien (as, for example, a chattel mortgage) has been established by decree in a foreclosure suit before the bankruptcy proceedings were instituted, the trustee can have no greater rights than those of the bankrupt.[297] But where, with knowledge of the debtor's adjudication in bankruptcy and of the rights of the trustee under the Bankruptcy Act, certain creditors persisted in pressing attachment proceedings, ultimately recovering judgment, it was held that the trustee was not estopped to claim the property on the theory that he had allowed the creditors to persist.[298] And in general, where the lien of an attachment, execution, or other writ is dissolved by the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt within four months, it is the right and duty of the trustee in bankruptcy to demand and recover the property affected from the possession of the officer holding it under the writ,[299] and the

[291] In re Goldberg, 121 Fed. 578, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[292] Jones v. Stevens, 94 Me. 582, 48 Atl. 170; In re Kenney, 95 Fed. 427, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494.

[293] In re Goldberg, 121 Fed. 578, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[294] Brown v. Case, 180 Mass. 45, 61 N. E. 279. And see Dreyer v. Kicklighter (D. C.) 228 Fed. 744, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199.

[295] Wallace v. Camp, 200 Pa. 220, 49 Atl. 942.

[296] Butterfield v. Woodman, 223 Fed. 956, 139 C. C. A. 436, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510; In re Shute (D. C.) 233 Fed. 544, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554; Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. McVay, 142 Ark. 522, 219 S. W. 34.

[297] Otto v. England, 99 Wash. 529, 169 Pac. 964.

[298] In re Gilsonite Mines Co. (D. C.) 236 Fed. 1015, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473.

[299] In re Walsh Bros., 159 Fed. 560, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Francis-Valentine Co. (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 793, 2

pendency of an action of replevin in a state court against the officer by a stranger claiming ownership of the property is no justification for his refusal to surrender it,[300] and the trustee has sufficient title to maintain trover against the officer, after demand and refusal, and is not required to apply first to the court from which the process issued for an order for its delivery to him.[301] And the same course may be pursued against one who holds attached property under a receipt to the sheriff or a forthcoming bond.[302] Even if the property is in the possession of a receiver appointed by a state court, it should be surrendered to the trustee in bankruptcy, on his petition to the state court for an order to that effect.[303] It is probably unnecessary for the trustee formally to move the state court for the discharge or vacating of the judgment or other lien in question, though this is a proper practice.[304]

If the property has already been sold under the writ, the statute will not affect the title acquired by a purchaser at such sale taking without notice and in good faith.[305] But if the proceeds of the sale remain in the hands of the officer, they stand in lieu of the property sold. They do not belong to the lien creditor, but to the trustee in bankruptcy for the benefit of the general creditors. Hence the officer may be enjoined from paying over the money to the lien creditor, and he should turn it into the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy on his demand, and may be compelled to do so by order of the court of bankruptcy.[306] But if the money arising from the sale has been paid over to the lien creditor, it cannot be reclaimed from him by the trustee. For the statute does not apply to the case of a lien which has been satisfied and discharged by sale and the application of the proceeds to the

Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121; In re Richards, 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Francis-Valentine Co., 93 Fed. 953, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188; In re Benedict, 37 Misc. Rep. 230, 75 N. Y. Supp. 165; Smith v. Godwin, 145 N. C. 242, 58 S. E. 1089; Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. v. Pratt, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 443, 16 N. B. R. 170; In re P. J. Sullivan Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 139, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189.

[300] In re Francis-Valentine Co. (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 793, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522.

[301] Cooley v. Cook, 125 Mass. 406.

[302] Parks v. Sheldon, 36 Conn. 466, 4 Am. Rep. 95; Towle v. Robinson, 15 N. H. 408.

[303] In re English, 127 Fed. 940, 62 C. C. A. 572, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674; Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546; Rodgers v. Forbes, 23 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 438.

[304] Thompson v. Ragan, 117 Ky. 577, 78 S. W. 485; Gage v. Bates Machine Co., 71 N. H. 384, 52 Atl. 457. And see supra, § 378.

[305] In re Weitzel, 191 Fed. 463, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; In re Goldman, 102 Fed. 122, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; De Friece v. Bryant (D. C.) 232 Fed. 233, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275. And see, supra, § 381. Compare Gray v. Arnot, 31 N. D. 461, 154 N. W. 268.

[306] Clark v. Larremore, 188 U. S. 486, 23 Sup. Ct. 363, 47 L. Ed. 555, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; Bear v. Chase, 99 Fed. 920, 40 C. C. A. 182, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Duguid, 100 Fed. 274, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794; In re Kenney, 97 Fed. 554, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353; In re Richards, 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Franks, 95 Fed. 635, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634; Pennington v. Lowenstein, 1 N. B. R. 570, Fed. Cas. No. 10,938; In re Benedict, 37 Misc. Rep. 230, 75 N. Y. Supp. 165; Schmilovitz v.

debt before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy.[307] It has been held, however, that if a sheriff levies an execution on property of the debtor and sells it, after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy (which is said to have the effect of a caveat and an injunction to all the world), he is liable to the trustee in bankruptcy for the proceeds of the sale, though he has paid them over to the creditor before receiving any notice of the bankruptcy.[308] The rule that the trustee is entitled to the possession of property covered by a lien which is dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy is subject, however, to this limitation, that due recognition must be given to, and provision made for, other liens which are valid and unaffected by the bankruptcy and which affect the same property, for the trustee is only the representative of the general or unsecured creditors, and his right to the property is measured by the interest which they may have in it.[309] But the opinion has been advanced that if a judgment or other lien has been acquired within four months of the bankruptcy and is vacated thereby, the claim of the trustee is superior to that of any person claiming under some other and subsequent transfer or lien, even though the latter be innocent of any intent to obtain a preference, for such claimant would take subject to the lien invalidated by the adjudication in bankruptcy.[310]

§ 383. Conveyance or Surrender of Property Under Order of Court. —Where a claim to the possession of property of a bankrupt's estate, as against the trustee's right of possession, is based solely on the lien of an execution, attachment, or other writ or process, the lien of which

Bernstein, 22 R. I. 330, 47 Atl. 884; Kosches v. Libowitz (Tex. Civ. App.) 56 S. W. 613.

307 Farrell v. W. B. Lockett & Co., 115 Tenn. 494, 91 S. W. 209; Levor v. Seiter, 69 App. Div. 33, 74 N. Y. Supp. 499; Greene v. Montana Brewing Co., 28 Mont. 380, 72 Pac. 751; Davis v. Jewett Bros., 17 S. D. 410, 97 N. W. 16. Compare McCord v. McNeil, 4 Dill. 173, Fed. Cas. No. 8,714. And see Lewin v. Telluride Iron Works Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 590, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

308 Miller v. O'Brien, 9 Blatchf. 270, 9 N. B. R. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 9,586; In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830. And see Balms v. Hutton, 9 Bing. 471; Garland v. Carlisle, 10 Bing. 452.

309 See In re Torchia, 188 Fed. 207, 110 C. C. A. 248, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. Ed. 816; Houston Ice & Brewing Co. v. Fuller, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 239, 63 S. W. 1048; McElvain v. Hardesty, 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; In re Sink, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 645; In re American Candy Mfg. Co., 256 Fed. 87, 167 C. C. A. 329, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 77; W. A. Liller Building Co. v. Reynolds, 247 Fed. 90, 159 C. C. A. 308, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371. Where the trustee takes possession of mortgaged property, and, on foreclosure, the proceeds are insufficient to discharge the last mortgage, rents collected between the adjudication and the foreclosure may be required to be applied to the liquidation of such mortgage. In re Dooner v. Smith (D. C.) 243 Fed. 984, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116. Expenses of operating vessels of a bankrupt shipowner by the trustee after adjudication are not chargeable to the proceeds of the vessels as against holders of maritime liens, where there are general funds of the estate. In re New England Transp. Co. (D. C.) 220 Fed. 203, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323.

310 In re American Candy Mfg. Co.

is avoided by the adjudication in bankruptcy, the person or officer so in possession is not an adverse claimant, but holds as bailee for the trustee, and must deliver the property on a proper demand, and he may be required to do so by a summary order of the court of bankruptcy.[311] So the court may receive from one indebted to the bankrupt the amount of the debt, although it was garnished within four months before the adjudication in bankruptcy, and judgment entered therefor against such debtor in a state court, and may make such order as may be necessary to protect the garnishee.[312] Further, in order to secure full effect for the provision dissolving liens on the bankrupt's property in certain cases, and to enforce its surrender to the trustee for the benefit of the general creditors, the statute provides that "the court may order such conveyance as shall be necessary to carry the purposes of this section into effect."[313] Such a course might sometimes be necessary in the case of real property, but it is believed that this clause adds nothing to the substantive provisions of the section.

§ 384. Subrogation of Trustee to Rights of Lienholders.—The bankruptcy act makes provision for the preservation of liens, which otherwise would be dissolved by the adjudication, whenever an advantage is to be gained for the general estate by keeping them alive and subrogating the trustee to the rights of the lienholder,[314] chiefly in cases where, if this course were not pursued, the property affected would not come into the hands of the trustee at all, but would be claimed by the holder of a valid and undissolved lien, with a possible loss to the estate of its value over and above the amount of the incumbrance.[315]

(D. C.) 248 Fed. 145, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

311 Staunton v. Wooden, 179 Fed. 61, 102 C. C. A. 355, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

312 In re McCartney, 109 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; In re Beck (D. C.) 238 Fed. 653.

313 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67f. See In re V. & M. Lumber Co., 182 Fed. 231.

314 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67b, c, f. On the construction and reconciliation of these provisions, see First Nat. Bank v. Guarantee Title & Trust Co., 178 Fed. 187, 101 C. C. A. 507, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; In re Baird, 126 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

315 Thompson v. Fairbanks, 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11, 104 Am. St. Rep. 899. And see Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Sexton, 228 U. S. 634, 33 Sup. Ct. 725, 57 L. Ed. 998, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; In re Schweitzer (D. C.) 217 Fed. 495, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212. Where, shortly before the adjudication in bankruptcy, a creditor in a suit against the bankrupt attached the bankrupt's funds on deposit in a trust company, and the company thereafter by mistake paid them out on the bankrupt's check, it was held proper to order that the attachment be retained for the benefit of the estate, that the creditor assign his claim to the trustee for the benefit of the estate, and that the trustee should prosecute the suit to judgment to secure the attached funds, since the payment by mistake did not diminish the rights of the trustee as it would not have diminished those of the attaching creditor. In re Charles Wirth & Co. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 141, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145. The trustee in bankruptcy, whose bankrupts had assigned to their creditors to secure loans certain notes held by the bankrupts secured by stock in trade and accounts, is entitled to participate in the collaterals to the extent that the funds of the

Indeed, it is said that these provisions of the statute were only designed to preserve some interest acquired by virtue of the invalid or dissolvable lien which would not otherwise pass to the trustee in bankruptcy,[316] since, to construe them as referring only to liens on property which, if such liens were annulled, would vest in the trustee, would restrict their application to a contingency already provided for in the statute.[317] To illustrate, a lien acquired by an attaching creditor on real property which, but for such attachment, would have passed to a subsequent purchaser under an unrecorded deed, should be preserved by order of the court of bankruptcy for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate, although it would be liable to dissolution as having been acquired within four months before the bankruptcy.[318] So where the debtor has sold personal property, but under circumstances such as to make the sale void as against attaching creditors, and an attachment has been levied within four months before the bankruptcy, its lien will not be dissolved, but will be preserved for the benefit of the estate.[319] Again, where a chattel mortgage given by the insolvent is void as against judgment creditors because not filed as required by law, but would be valid as to general creditors and would, as to them, entitle the mortgagee to the possession of the property, judgment liens which have attached (though within four months before the bankruptcy) will be preserved by subrogating the trustee to the rights of the judgment creditors.[320] And so as to the liens of execution creditors on property held by the insolvent debtor under a contract of conditional sale.[321] And on the same principle, any advantage which a creditor may have gained by taking the proper steps to subject to his claim property apparently belonging to the bankrupt or standing in his name, but claimed by a third party, should be preserved and transferred to the trustee in bankruptcy.[322]

This authority and discretion on the part of the court of bankruptcy with reference to the preservation of liens otherwise voidable, when an advantage is thereby to be gained for the benefit of the general estate, bankrupt estate have been used to discharge a secured debt and acquire the collateral notes, including a deposit to the bankrupt's credit which the secured creditor set off against the debt. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Sexton, 228 U. S. 634, 33 Sup. Ct. 725, 57 L. Ed. 998, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278.

316 Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 171 Fed. 940, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 803.

317 First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 26 Sup. Ct. 580, 50 L. Ed. 967, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639.

318 Receivers of Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Staake, 133 Fed. 717, 66 C. C. A. 547, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 26 Sup. Ct. 580, 50 L. Ed. 967, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; In re Baird, 126 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

319 Love v. Hill, 21 Okl. 347, 96 Pac. 623.

320 In re Beede, 138 Fed. 441, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; Dunn Salmon Co. v. Pillmore, 55 Misc. Rep. 546, 106 N. Y. Supp. 88.

321 Rock Island Plow Co. v. Reardon, 222 U. S. 354, 32 Sup. Ct. 164, 56 L. Ed. 231, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

322 In re Hammond, 98 Fed. 845; Patten v. Francis D. Carley & Co., 69 App.

is not confined to liens which would be void as creating a preference,[323] but extends to all classes of liens, such as the liens of judgments,[324] or executions.[325] And the title or lien acquired by an assignee under a general assignment, valid according to the law of the state where made, if it would be to the advantage of the estate when it has subsequently passed into bankruptcy, is not necessarily destroyed by the supersession of the assignment proceeding, but, if the court of bankruptcy will so order, may be retained by the trustee for the benefit of the creditors.[326] So, the trustee has such an interest in mortgaged land of the bankrupt as will entitle him to pay the mortgage debt and have the mortgage assigned to himself, although it is not in process of foreclosure, where such a course will benefit the estate by enabling him to sell the property to better advantage.[327] But it is said that the statute does not transfer to the trustee the right of a judgment creditor to enforce an equitable lien acquired by the filing of a creditor's bill before bankruptcy proceedings were begun.[328] Nor will the preservation of the lien and the subrogation of the trustee be ordered merely to enable him to defeat another lien on the same property which is valid and which possesses at least equal claims to the consideration of a court of equity.[329] And in any event, if the substitution of the trustee is desired, proper steps must be taken to that end before the lien is discharged.[330] And where a sheriff is holding property of the bankrupt

Div. 423, 74 N. Y. Supp. 993; In re Merrow, 131 Fed. 993, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

323 In re Baird, 126 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

324 In re Beede, 138 Fed. 441, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; Wills v. E. K. Wood Lumber & Mill Co., 29 Cal. App. 97, 154 Pac. 613.

325 Reardon v. Rock Island Plow Co., 168 Fed. 654, 94 C. C. A. 118, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26.

326 In re Fish Bros. Wagon Co., 164 Fed. 553, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 149.

327 In re Bacon, 132 Fed. 157, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730. Where the legal title and the mortgagee's title thus vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, there will be no merger of the mortgage lien, if it is to the advantage of the estate to keep the lien alive to defeat a junior mortgage. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Albrecht (Tex. Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 819. But where the lien of a mortgage is not dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy, because given more than two years before, the trustee in bankruptcy, if he redeems the property from the mortgage, does so as a mere volunteer, and cannot claim any right of subrogation to the lien of the mortgage. Brown v. Crawford (D. C.) 252 Fed. 248, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

328 Taylor v. Taylor, 59 N. J. Eq. 86, 45 Atl. 440.

329 In re Sentenne & Green Co., 120 Fed. 436, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Moore, 107 Fed. 234, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 25 Sup. Ct. 306, 49 L. Ed. 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

330 In re Walsh Bros (D. C.) 195 Fed. 576, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243. The mere adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee do not automatically preserve the lien of an attachment, but there must be affirmative action of the court to that effect. In re Prentice (D. C.) 267 Fed. 1019, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38. A referee in bankruptcy has power to order an attachment lien on a bankrupt's homestead, valid under the state law, preserved for the benefit of the estate. In re Malone's Estate (D. C.) 228 Fed. 566, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364.

under a levy, voidable because made within the four months, and the trustee in bankruptcy takes possession of the property, the lien of the levy is wholly discharged, and the trustee cannot thereafter assert any rights under it as against an adverse claimant.[331]

§ 385. Rights and Remedies of Creditor on Dissolution of Lien.—If a lien obtained through legal proceedings is dissolved by the adjudication of the debtor in bankruptcy within four months thereafter, it is extinguished for any and all purposes, and cannot afterwards be made effective, even though the bankrupt fails to obtain his discharge.[332] The only remedy of the creditor in such a case is to prove his claim as a general creditor, and as such to share in the distribution of the estate,[333] applying to the court of bankruptcy for an application in his favor of the proceeds of the sale of the property by the trustee in bankruptcy if he has any superior claim on them.[334] But if he has paid off other liens or charges on the property affected by his lien, in order to preserve it, he is entitled to be repaid the amount thereof out of the general funds of the estate, though his own lien is dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings, since his discharge of liens which otherwise would have bound the property in the hands of the trustee has pro tanto increased the assets of the estate.[335] A creditor in this situation is not required to execute an assignment to the trustee of his lien, as a condition precedent to his sharing in the distribution of the estate (unless its preservation for the benefit of the estate is ordered by the court), where he has refrained from enforcing his lien in obedience to an injunction from the bankruptcy court.[336] The dissolution of a lien on particular property, as having been obtained within the four-months period, does not enlarge other liens on the same property or affect their rank and priority.[337] Thus, the dissolution of an attachment lien by proceedings in bankruptcy does not enlarge the security of a junior lien. Where an attachment upon property of the bankrupt for its full value is dissolved by the adjudication, a judgment creditor who has made a levy of execution subsequent to such attachment is not entitled to priority of payment. All the right which the judgment creditor acquired was by a levy on property already incumbered to its full value, and such a levy does not give him security.[338]

331 Davis v. Compton, 158 Fed. 735, 85 C. C. A. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53. And see Green v. Hooper, 41 Nev. 12, 167 Pac. 23.

332 St. Cyr v. Daignault, 103 Fed. 854, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

333 In re Brand, 2 Hughes, 334, 3 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 1,809; Cole v. Duncan, 58 Ill. 176.

334 D. C. Wise Coal Co. v. Columbia Zinc & Lead Co., 157 Mo. App. 315, 138 S. W. 67.

335 In re Baker, 1 Hask. 593, Fed. Cas. No. 762.

336 In re Carrier, 51 Fed. 900.

337 In re Nelson, 9 Ben. 238, 16 N. B. R. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 10,100.

338 In re Klancke, 4 Ben. 326, 4 N. B. R. 648, Fed. Cas. No. 7,864; In re Steele, 7 Biss. 504, 16 N. B. R. 105, Fed. Cas. No. 13,345.

§ 386. Costs and Fees Incurred Under Dissolved Lien.—Where a lien acquired by attachment, execution, or other process is dissolved by an adjudication in bankruptcy, the sheriff or other officer holding the property under his writ is entitled to his fees for services rendered up to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy,[339] but he has no lien on the property itself for such fees or his costs, unless such a lien is expressly given by the state statute. If it is, he must be paid his fees and expenses before being ordered to deliver up the property to the trustee in bankruptcy.[340] Otherwise he has no right to retain possession of the property as against the trustee until payment. His fees are taxable in the court from which the writ issued, and when there taxed and allowed, may be made the basis of a claim in the court of bankruptcy, but the property must be surrendered forthwith.[341] On the other hand, if he applies first to the court of bankruptcy for an allowance of his fees, and is dissatisfied with its decision, his only remedy is by appeal, and he cannot recur to the state court.[342] After the adjudication in bankruptcy the officer can make no fees or charges, except it may be for the preservation of the property as a temporary custodian. At that time he becomes a simple bailee of the property, holding the same for the use of the trustee to be subsequently appointed, and is not entitled to make additional costs in his official character.[343]

As for the creditor whose lien is dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings, his claim for costs and disbursements incurred by him and for attorneys' fees is a provable debt in bankruptcy, but is not entitled to priority of payment, and is not a lien on the property affected or on the proceeds of the trustee's sale of it,[344] unless where such a lien is expressly given by the law of the state.[345] But a more liberal rule is applied in cases where the lien is ordered to be preserved for the benefit of the estate. Here the court may direct the payment out of the general funds, not only of the sheriff's costs and the disbursements of the lien

[339] Platt v. Stewart, 11 N. B. R. 191, Fed. Cas. No. 11,221; In re Welch, 5 Ben. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 17,367.

[340] Wilkinson v. Raymond, 80 App. Div. 378, 81 N. Y. Supp. 82; In re Housberger, 2 Ben. 504, 2 N. B. R. 92, Fed. Cas. No. 6,734.

[341] In re Francis-Valentine Co., 94 Fed. 793, 36 C. C. A. 499, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; In re Stevens, 2 Biss. 373, 5 N. B. R. 298, Fed. Cas. No. 13,392.

[342] Johnson v. Woodend, 44 Misc. Rep. 524, 90 N. Y. Supp. 43.

[343] In re Preston, 6 N. B. R. 545, Fed. Cas. No. 11,394; Barker v. McLeod, 14 Nev. 148.

[344] In re Allen, 96 Fed. 512, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; In re Young, 96 Fed. 606, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Hanson v. Stephens, 116 Ga. 722, 42 S. E. 1028; In re Davis, 1 Hask. 232, Fed. Cas. No. 3,616; In re Preston, 6 N. B. R. 545, Fed. Cas. No. 11,394; In re Ward, 9 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 17,145. But if a lien creditor successfully prosecutes his claim to priority of payment, his attorney is entitled to a fee, which becomes a lien on the fund so secured for his client, and may be fixed and enforced by the court of bankruptcy. In re Rude, 101 Fed. 805, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319.

[345] Gardner v. Cook, 7 N. B. R. 346, Fed. Cas. No. 5,226.

creditor, but also a reasonable compensation to attorneys for professional services previously rendered.[346] A somewhat similar case arises where a third person, having possession of goods of the bankrupt, refuses to surrender them to the trustee on the latter's demand, on the mistaken theory that he has a lien on them for storage. Though this claim is rejected, he will be entitled to suitable compensation for the storage and care of the goods from the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy up to the time of the demand and refusal.[347]

§ 387. Proceedings to Establish or Enforce Liens.—An adjudication of bankruptcy brings the bankrupt's assets into the custody of the court of bankruptcy for administration, and a creditor of the bankrupt, having a lien on such property at that time, is not bound to follow the course of procedure prescribed by the state statute under which the lien arises, requiring certain action to be taken within a limited time for its preservation, but only to prove his claim in the character of a secured creditor as the bankruptcy law directs.[348] So, where the rules of a stock exchange give to members of the exchange a lien for debts due them from a defaulting member upon the proceeds of the sale of his seat, by proving their claims before a committee while the fund remains in their hands, but do not expressly assume to make this remedy exclusive, a court of bankruptcy, when equity requires it, may properly recognize and enforce such lien after the fund has come under its control.[349] For the purpose of asserting his lien, a secured creditor or pledgee of property is always entitled to intervene in the bankruptcy proceedings against his debtor.[350] And even where one has waived or relinquished his lien, through oversight or a mistake of fact not operating to the prejudice of any one else, he may come into the court of bankruptcy and ask to be restored to his lien, which relief will be granted if he shows himself entitled to it.[351]

The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to inquire into and determine the validity, extent, and priority of liens asserted upon any prop-

[346] Receivers of Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Staake, 133 Fed. 717, 66 C. C. A. 547, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; In re Jenks, 15 N. B. R. 301, Fed. Cas. No. 7,276; In re Ward, 9 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 17,145; Ex parte Holmes, 14 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 6,631.

[347] In re Kelly, 18 Fed. 528.

[348] In re Falls City Shirt Mfg. Co., 98 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re Rude, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 498; McFarland Carriage Co. v. Solanes, 108 Fed. 532, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221. The provision of the bankruptcy act, that valid liens shall not be affected, relates only to the obligation of the contract, and not to the remedies for its enforcement, which may be changed without impairing the contract. In re Hasie, 206 Fed. 789, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83.

[349] Hutchinson v. Otis, 115 Fed. 937, 53 C. C. A. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382, affirmed Hutchinson v. Otis, Wilcox & Co., 190 U. S. 552, 23 Sup. Ct. 778, 47 L. Ed. 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

[350] Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; Ward v. First Nat. Bank, 202 Fed. 609, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 312.

[351] Hutchinson v. Otis, 115 Fed. 937, 53 C. C. A. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382, erty of the bankrupt which has come into its actual or constructive possession, in a summary manner, or at any rate without the formalities attending a plenary suit, on the petition of the trustee desiring to contest the alleged lien or to settle any question in regard to it,[352] or on the petition of the lien claimant, without regard to the possession of the property, if the latter voluntarily comes into court asserting a lien on the property and seeking to have it established, protected, or enforced as against the trustee.[353] But if the property is in the possession of the claimant (as, for instance, a chattel mortgagee) his claims upon it cannot be determined in a summary proceeding at the instance of the trustee, unless with the consent of the lienor.[354] And where the question to be determined is a matter in controversy between third persons, the test of jurisdiction to hear and decide it is the necessity of so doing in order affirmed Hutchinson v. Otis, Wilcox & Co., 190 U. S. 552, 23 Sup. Ct. 778, 47 L. Ed. 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135. And see In re Jamison Bros. & Co., 227 Fed. 30, 142 C. C. A. 3, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 725.

[352] Ex parte Christy, 3 How. 292, 11 L. Ed. 603; In re Eppstein, 156 Fed. 42, 84 C. C. A. 208, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; In re Hobbs & Co., 145 Fed. 211, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544; In re Lemmon & Gale Co., 112 Fed. 296, 50 C. C. A. 247, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re Kellogg, 113 Fed. 120, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Ellis Bros. Printing Co., 156 Fed. 430, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; Wakeman v. Throckmorton, 74 Conn. 616, 51 Atl. 554; Jungbecker v. Huber, 101 Tex. 148, 105 S. W. 487; In re Logan, 196 Fed. 678, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543; Bear Gulch Placer Mining Co. v. Walsh, 198 Fed. 351, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; In re Hooven-Owens-Rentschler Co., 195 Fed. 424, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; Orinoco Iron Co. v. Metzel, 230 Fed. 40, 144 C. C. A. 338, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; T. E. Wells & Co. v. Sharp, 208 Fed. 393, 125 C. C. A. 609, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; Courtney v. Fidelity Trust Co., 210 Fed. 57, 134 C. C. A. 595, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400; Story & Clark Piano Co. v. Holmes, 251 Fed. 565, 163 C. C. A. 559, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668; In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; In re Wegman Piano Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 60, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210; Karasik v. People's Trust Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 939, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 830; In re Einstein (D. C.) 245 Fed. 189, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; In re Kligerman (D. C.) 219 Fed. 758, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Whiteside (D. C.) 230 Fed. 937, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 870; Brown Bros. Co. v. Smith Bros. Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 475, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; Spencer Commercial Club v. Bartmess (Ind. App.) 123 N. E. 435. The question whether or not a mortgage was a valid claim against the bankrupt estate cannot be decided in a suit by the trustee against others to set aside conveyances as preferential and as in fraud of creditors, those interested in the mortgage not being before the court. Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219.

[353] In re MacDougall, 175 Fed. 400, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Wegman Piano Co. (D. C.) 221 Fed. 128, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490; Rhinelander v. Richards, 184 App. Div. 67, 171 N. Y. Supp. 436.

[354] In re Buntrock Clothing Co., 92 Fed. 886, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re L. B. Pickens & Bro., 184 Fed. 954, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6; In re Munro, 195 Fed. 817, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; Spears v. Frenchton & B. R. Co., 213 Fed. 784, 130 C. C. A. 442, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Commercial Security Co. v. Holcombe (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 657, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481; In re Valecia Condensed Milk Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Petronio, 220 Fed. 269, 136 C. C. A. 285, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; In re Goldstein, to administer the estate of the bankrupt.[355] Further, the court of bankruptcy will not undertake to determine or adjust liens upon property of the bankrupt, unless it appears that the trustee has at least a probable interest in it for the general creditors.[356]

In any petition for the recognition and enforcement of a lien the facts should be clearly and fully set forth, and the appropriate measure of relief asked for.[357] Such petition may be opposed by the trustee in bankruptcy without formal pleadings.[358] Where the facts rest in parol, they may be established by the evidence of the parties to the transaction, if credible and uncontradicted, without further testimony.[359] If the validity of the lien is contested on the ground that the debtor was insolvent at the time it was created the burden of proving such insolvency is on the party asserting it.[360] It is also within the jurisdiction of the court, admitting the validity of a lien claimed on property of the bankrupt, to order the sale of the property and the payment of the lien creditor out of the proceeds, preserving the remainder for the general creditors.[361]

§ 388. Same; Proceedings in State Courts.—The jurisdiction of a state court over a proceeding to establish and enforce a valid lien on property is not taken away by the mere fact of the intervening bankruptcy of the debtor; but unless its hand is stayed by the order of the court of bankruptcy, or the parties have placed themselves in a position where they can no longer invoke its jurisdiction, it may proceed, without regard to the bankruptcy proceedings, to render such judgment as may be appropriate in the case,[362] and having given such judgment or decree, it may thereafter grant the necessary process (or sanction the use of its 216 Fed. 887, 133 C. C. A. 91; In re Gottlieb & Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 139, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[355] In re Hobbs & Co. (D. C.) 145 Fed. 211, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544; In re Graves (D. C.) 163 Fed. 358, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818. See In re Traunstein (D. C.) 225 Fed. 317, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482.

[356] In re Gibbs (D. C.) 109 Fed. 627, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485; In re North Star Ice & Coal Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 301, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76. But compare Chauncey v. Dyke Bros., 119 Fed. 1, 55 C. C. A. 579, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[357] Teter v. Viquesney, 179 Fed. 655, 103 C. C. A. 213, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; In re Gosch, 121 Fed. 604, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; In re George W. Shiebler & Co., 163 Fed. 545, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777.

[358] In re Mulligan, 116 Fed. 715, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8.

[359] Union Trust Co. v. Bulkeley, 150 Fed. 510, 80 C. C. A. 328, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35.

[360] Jackson v. Valley Tie & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 714, 62 S. E. 964.

[361] In re Arden, 188 Fed. 475, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684; In re Vastbinde, 132 Fed. 718, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

[362] In re Brinn (D. C.) 262 Fed. 527, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; In re Stringer (D. C.) 230 Fed. 177, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44; In re Pilcher & Son (D. C.) 228 Fed. 139, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; Hobbs v. Head & Dowst Co., 184 Fed. 409, 106 C. C. A. 519, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; Frazier v. Southern Loan & Trust Co., 99 Fed. 707, 40 C. C. A. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Maaget, 173 Fed. 232, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re Major, 2 Hughes, 215, Fed. Cas. No. 8,981; Kimberlin v. Hartly, 1 McCrary, 136, 1 Fed. 571; Thames v. Miller, 2 Woods, 564, Fed. Cas. No. 13,860; Mattocks v.

necessary and appropriate process) for carrying the judgment or decree into operation, as, for instance, by levy on and sale of the bankrupt's property under execution, the same being subject to the lien, provided, of course, that such property is not already in the custody of the court of bankruptcy, and provided that such process is not enjoined or stayed by order of the latter court.[363] It is, in fact, a general rule that where the rights of the parties, urging claims that conflict with one another on the same property or fund, would be the same whether presented in the state court or in the court of bankruptcy, the court which first acquires jurisdiction of the property or fund may retain it for the purpose of a decision.[364] And when the state court has thus rendered a judgment or decree in a proceeding to establish and enforce a valid lien, not dissolved by the bankruptcy, its decision will be conclusive and binding on the trustee in bankruptcy, if he was heard in the case or had an opportunity to intervene,[365] and it cannot be reviewed, reversed, or modified by the court of bankruptcy.[366] And this rule holds good even though the lien

Farrington, 2 Hask. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 9,293; Kritzer v. Tracy Engineering Co., 16 Cal. App. 287, 116 Pac. 700; Mass v. Kuhn, 130 App. Div. 68, 114 N. Y. Supp. 444; Murphey v. Brown, 12 Ariz. 268, 100 Pac. 801; Linthicum v. Fenley, 11 Bush (Ky.) 131; Vance v. Lane's Trustee, 82 S. W. 297, 26 Ky. Law Rep. 619; Reed v. Equitable Trust Co., 115 Ga. 780, 42 S. E. 102; Dyson v. Harper, 54 Ga. 282; South End Imp. Co. v. Harden (N. J. Eq.) 52 Atl. 1127; Douglas v. St. Louis Zinc Co., 56 Mo. 388; Davis v. Lumpkin, 57 Miss. 506; Bradley v. United Wireless Telegraph Co., 79 N. J. Eq. 458, 81 Atl. 1107; Chickasaw Hotel Co. v. C. B. Barker Const. Co., 135 Tenn. 305, 186 S. W. 115, L. R. A. 1916F, 106; Robinson v. Tischler, 69 Fla. 77, 67 South. 565; Joseph Nelson Supply Co. v. Leary, 49 Utah, 493, 164 Pac. 1047; Strong v. Butte Central & Boston Copper Corp., 54 Mont. 584, 172 Pac. 1033; Bradley v. United Wireless Telegraph Co., 83 N. J. Eq. 688, 93 Atl. 1084; Schoenherr v. Van Meter, 215 N. Y. 548, 109 N. E. 625; Bank of Mendon v. Mell, 185 Mo. App. 510, 172 S. W. 484; Cook v. Wheeler (Mo. App.) 218 S. W. 929.

[363] In re Fraser (D. C.) 261 Fed. 558, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572; In re Beck (D. C.) 238 Fed. 653; Houston v. Shear (Tex. Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 976. Contra, see George B. Matthews & Sons v. Joseph Webre Co. (D. C.) 213 Fed. 396, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; Tormey v. Miller, 31 Cal. App. 469, 160 Pac. 858. The bankruptcy of a contractor does not deprive the state court of jurisdiction to distribute funds in the owner's hands among mechanics' lien claimants and subcontractors. Gordon-Jones Const. Co. v. Welder, (Tex. Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 681. The possibility of selling land to better advantage through a receiver in bankruptcy does not require the judgment creditor to surrender the property to the receiver, thus depriving him of his right to collect his debt through the sheriff. Harvard v. Davis, 145 Ga. 580, 89 S. E. 740. And notwithstanding the bankruptcy of a mortgagor, the mortgagee is not deprived of his action against the sheriff for failing to make the money on execution. Lackenbach v. Finn, 26 Cal. App. 482, 147 Pac. 471. But in all such cases and proceedings, the state court will take care to extend proper protection to the estate of the bankrupt for the benefit of the general creditors. Lyttle v. National Surety Co., 43 App. D. C. 136.

[364] Pietri v. Wells, 137 La. 1087, 69 South. 847.

[365] In re Van Alstyne, 100 Fed. 929, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; Frazier v. Southern Loan & Trust Co., 99 Fed. 707, 40 C. C. A. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710; Jackson v. Valley Tie & Lumber Co., 108 Va. 714, 62 S. E. 964; Chickasaw Hotel Co. v. C. B. Barker Const. Co., 135 Tenn. 305, 186 S. W. 115, L. R. A. 1916F, 106; Eberle v. Drennan, 40 Okl. 59, 136 Pac. 162, 51 L. R. A. (N. S.) 68.

[366] In re Eash (D. C.) 157 Fed. 996, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; Farrell v. Wy-

in question is one which would be voidable under the bankruptcy act at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy, if he does not seek to annul it or assert any right to the property in controversy.[367] But the jurisdiction of the state court in such cases is precarious, in the sense that it may be exercised only in the absence of some order or effective objection restraining the parties from proceeding. In the first place (as will be shown in the next section) the court of bankruptcy may enjoin the lien creditor from proceeding with his action in the state court. Or it may order a stay of a pending action in the state court until the question of the bankrupt's discharge has been determined,[368] though this will not ordinarily be done where it would result in injury to other lien claimants.[369] The absence of any such stay or injunction would seem to be sufficient authorization to the plaintiff to bring or proceed with his action. But courts of bankruptcy have sometimes taken the course of granting express permission to a lien claimant to sue in a state court for the enforcement of his lien, framing the order in such a manner as to preserve and insure an equitable distribution of the assets of the bankrupt.[370] Further, the creditor may be prevented from proceeding by an injunction procured by another creditor. But a state court will not grant an injunction, at the instance of a general creditor of an insolvent debtor, to tie up the assets of the debtor, which have come into the hands of another creditor by execution on the latter's judgment, until the former creditor can institute bankruptcy proceedings against the debtor.[371] Again, if the court of bankruptcy has assumed jurisdiction of a controversy respecting an alleged lien, the state court will naturally not attempt to interfere with the full exercise of that jurisdiction,[372] and if the property in question is in the custody of the court of bankruptcy, no one can proceed in a state court for the purpose of enforcing a lien on it, unless with the permission of the bankruptcy court.[373] And again, if the lien creditor has made himself a party to the proceedings in bank-song, 246 Fed. 281, 159 C. C. A. 11, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740. But see D. C. Wise Coal Co. v. Columbia Lead & Zinc Co., 123 Mo. App. 249, 100 S. W. 680, as to a judgment enforcing a lien dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy.

[367] Rochester Lumber Co. v. Locke, 72 N. H. 22, 54 Atl. 705. And see Davis v. Planters' Trust Co., 196 Fed. 970, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495. A garnishee against whom judgment has been entered has no standing, after both the plaintiff and the defendant in the suit have been adjudicated bankrupts, to move the court to dissolve the garnishment and strike off the judgment, as only the trustee in bankruptcy of the defendant can take such action. Lamorelle v. Nass, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 190. But see Armour Packing Co. v. Wynn, 119 Ga. 683, 46 S. E. 865.

[368] See supra, §§ 185–198.

[369] In re Grissler, 136 Fed. 754, 69 C. C. A. 406, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[370] Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Olcott, 197 Fed. 730, 117 C. C. A. 124, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321.

[371] Vletor v. Lewis, 24 Misc. Rep. 515, 53 N. Y. Supp. 944.

[372] Beall v. Walker, 26 W. Va. 741.

[373] Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556, 73 N. W. 977; Cohen v. Nixon & Wright (D. C.) 236 Fed. 407, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; Reeve v. Kernan, 85 N. J. Law, ruptcy, he is subject to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy and must work out his rights in that forum alone.[374]

§ 389. Same; Restraining Proceedings in State Courts.—An adjudication of bankruptcy draws the property and assets of the bankrupt within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy for the purposes of administration and distribution, and it may defend that jurisdiction by all appropriate means.[375] Thereafter, if any creditor brings an action in a state court to establish or enforce a lien on any property of the bankrupt, at least without the permission of the bankruptcy court first obtained, it is an unwarrantable interference with its jurisdiction and control over the property, and the creditor will be enjoined from the further prosecution of his action.[376] And even though the action in the state court may have been pending at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, yet its further prosecution may be stayed or enjoined when it affects property which is in the actual custody or possession of the bankruptcy court through its trustee, receiver, or other officer,[377] or where the lien, if enforced, would constitute a preference voidable under the bankruptcy law,[378] or where it is of such a character as to be dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy, as having been acquired within four months prior thereto,[379] or even where the continuance of the action in the state court would embarrass the administration of the estate in bankruptcy.[380] And the jurisdiction of the federal court in these cases is not affected by the fact that the creditor's cause of action is such as would

641, 90 Atl. 285; Tube City Min. & Mill Co. v. Otterson, 16 Ariz. 305, 146 Pac. 203, L. R. A. 1916E, 303.

[374] Francisco v. Shelton, 85 Va. 779, 8 S. E. 789; Reed v. Bullington, 49 Miss. 223.

[375] In re Lines, 133 Fed. 803, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; In re Vastbinder, 132 Fed. 718, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

[376] In re Emslie, 102 Fed. 291, 42 C. C. A. 350, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; Beall v. Walker, 26 W. Va. 741; In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; In re Roger Brown & Co., 196 Fed. 758, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336; In re Tomlinson, 193 Fed. 101, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; In re Trayna & Cohn (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 486, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; In re Grafton Gas & Electric Light Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 668, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; In re Fraser, 261 Fed. 558, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572. A federal district court has ancillary jurisdiction of a petition by a bankrupt's trustee, appointed in another district, to restrain the prosecution of distress proceedings by a landlord against property of the bankrupt within the district. In re Printograph Sales Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 567, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[377] In re Dana, 167 Fed. 529, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683; In re Whitener, 105 Fed. 180, 44 C. C. A. 434, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198; In re Neely, 108 Fed. 31; In re Morse (D. C.) 210 Fed. 900, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207.

[378] Bear v. Chase, 99 Fed. 920, 40 C. C. A. 182, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Kimball, 97 Fed. 29, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519. Compare Heath v. Shaffer, 93 Fed. 647, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

[379] In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; In re Pruschen, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 526; In re Ransford, 194 Fed. 658, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78.

[380] In re Gutman, 114 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Munro, 195 Fed. 817, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; In re Roger Brown & Co., 196 Fed. 758, 116 C. C. A. 386, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336; Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Olcott, 197 Fed. 730, 117 C. C. A. 124, 28 Am.

not be affected by the discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy,[381] or the fact that the bankrupt may already have received his discharge,[382] or the fact that the claim of the particular creditor is not mentioned in the bankrupt's schedules, at least where he has knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings.[383] But the injunctive process of the court of bankruptcy should be confined to the parties litigating against the bankrupt in the state court. Even if the federal court has power to direct its injunction to the state court itself or the judge of that court, which is extremely doubtful, it should not be done, nor should the writ be so framed as to take the place of a writ of prohibition, unless in cases of imperative necessity.[384] Yet the state court should respect the purpose of the injunction, and refuse to sanction any further proceedings in the case by any of the parties.[385]

But on the other hand, it is a thoroughly well-established rule as between the federal and state courts, that the court which first acquires complete jurisdiction of a controversy shall be allowed to continue in the exercise of that jurisdiction to final judgment without interference by the other court. And on this principle, if a state court of competent jurisdiction has taken cognizance of an action to establish or enforce a lien on property of a debtor, and the action is pending at the time of his adjudication in bankruptcy, but the lien is not dissolved thereby, because it attached more than four months previously, the jurisdiction of the state court is not divested by the bankruptcy proceedings, and the federal court has no rightful authority to enjoin the creditor from the further prosecution of his action.[386] This rule applies with special force where the property to be affected is in the actual custody and possession of the Bankr. Rep. 321; McLoughlin v. Knop (D. C.) 214 Fed. 260, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

[381] Bear v. Chase, 99 Fed. 920, 40 C. C. A. 182, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746. See In re Van Buren, 164 Fed. 883, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 896. And for even stronger reasons, the bankruptcy court will stay further proceedings in a state court on a judgment which is provable in the bankruptcy proceedings and where the debt evidenced by it would be barred by the bankrupt's discharge. In re Cunningham (D. C.) 253 Fed. 663, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560; In re Lusch (D. C.) 251 Fed. 316, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246.

[382] Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Driggs, 171 Fed. 897, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; In re Obergfall, 239 Fed. 850, 152 C. C. A. 636, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645.

[383] In re Beerman, 112 Fed. 662, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434. See In re Bluestone Bros., 174 Fed. 53, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264.

[384] In re Dana, 167 Fed. 529, 93 C. C. A. 238, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683.

[385] Levi v. Goldberg, 76 App. Div. 210, 78 N. Y. Supp. 367.

[386] Hobbs v. Head & Dowst Co., 231 U. S. 692, 34 Sup. Ct. 253, 58 L. Ed. 440, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656; Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, 23 Sup. Ct. 67, 47 L. Ed. 122, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Pickens v. Roy, 187 U. S. 177, 23 Sup. Ct. 78, 41 L. Ed. 128, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47; Griffin v. Lenhart (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 671, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221; Broach v. Mullis (D. C.) 228 Fed. 551, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 841; In re Bach (D. C.) 212 Fed. 575; In re Wagner's Estate (D. C.) 206 Fed. 364, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396; Griffin v. Smith, 177 Cal. 481, 171 Pac. 92; Pickens v. Dent, 106 Fed. 653, 45 C. C. A. 522, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 192 Fed. 238, 27

state court,[387] or its receiver.[388] Further, and as a general rule, it is only proceedings directly against the bankrupt himself that may be thus stayed or enjoined. "The fact that a trustee in bankruptcy may be interested in the result of a litigation which is pending between third parties in a state court does not entitle him to have the proceedings in such action stayed, as between such third parties, and to have the controversy transferred for adjudication to the bankruptcy court." [389] Thus, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to enjoin the plaintiff in a suit against the bankrupt in a state court from collecting his judgment from the surety on the bankrupt's bail bond.[390] And so also, a pending suit will not ordinarily be stayed unless the trustee in bankruptcy shows that he has some interest in it as the representative of the general creditors, or that such a course may result in securing for them some surplus over the claims of the lien creditor.[391]

§ 390. Same; Foreclosure of Mortgages.—A mortgage creditor has the right to institute proceedings in the court of bankruptcy to enforce his lien and to reach other assets.[392] But proceedings of this kind are generally taken in the state courts. And it is a general rule that the jurisdiction of a state court over a pending foreclosure suit is not divested by the adjudication of the mortgagor in bankruptcy, and if the mortgage was given more than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and its validity is not assailed on any other ground under

Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Shinn, 185 Fed. 990, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 833; Ex parte Donaldson, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 443, 1 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 3,981; Clarke v. Rist, 3 McLean, 494, Fed. Cas. No. 2,861. Compare New River Coal Land Co. v. Ruffner Bros., 165 Fed. 881, 91 C. C. A. 559, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; In re Baughman, 138 Fed. 742, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23.

[387] Tennessee Producer Marble Co. v. Grant, 135 Fed. 322, 67 C. C. A. 676, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288; In re Seebold, 105 Fed. 910, 45 C. C. A. 117, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358; White v. Thompson, 119 Fed. 868, 56 C. C. A. 398, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653; In re Shoemaker, 112 Fed. 648, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Downer v. Brackett, 21 Vt. 599, Fed. Cas. No. 4,043.

[388] In re Sterlingworth Ry. Supply Co., 165 Fed. 267, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 342.

[389] In re Horton, 102 Fed. 986, 43 C. C. A. 87; Tripplehorn v. Cambron, 250 Fed. 605, 162 C. C. A. 621, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334.

[390] Jaquith v. Rowley, 188 U. S. 620, 23 Sup. Ct. 369, 47 L. Ed. 620, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525.

[391] In re Mercedes Import Co., 166 Fed. 427, 92 C. C. A. 179, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Arden, 188 Fed. 475, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684; Hardcastle v. National Clothing Co., 137 Tenn. 64, 191 S. W. 524. Where bankrupts unlawfully pledged bonds deposited with them, but in which they had no ownership, the return of the bonds to the trustee does not vest the bankrupt estate with any interest therein, and therefore a petition by the trustee for an order staying an action in a state court by the owner for their recovery will be denied. In re Amy (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 8, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15.

[392] Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556, 73 N. W. 977. A mortgagee who files his claim as a secured claim in the bankruptcy proceedings, but does not have his right to foreclose the mortgage adjudicated in the federal court, is not thereby barred or estopped from suing in the state court. Stewart-Noble Drug Co. v. Bishop-Babcock-Becker Co., 62 Colo. 197, 162 Pac. 159.

the bankruptcy law, the state court may proceed to foreclosure and sale, and the mortgagee should not be stayed by injunction from either the court of bankruptcy or the state court.[393] In such a case, the trustee in bankruptcy is a proper party to the suit in the state court, where he must appear and assert his rights, and he should apply for leave to intervene, or he may be directed by the bankruptcy court so to apply,[394] although, if he does not ask to be joined as party, it is not necessary to stay the proceedings and compel him to come in.[395] But if he does not become a party, while this will not affect the validity of a decree of foreclosure, it will leave his rights in equity unaffected by the decree,[396] unless where he has disclaimed any interest in the property.[397] Instead of a decree of foreclosure, the state court may, in proper circumstances make its order giving the trustee in bankruptcy the right to redeem, or if he has no funds in hand for that purpose, it may order a sale under the mortgage, with directions that the surplus shall be paid into court for the benefit of the trustee.[398] But no deficiency decree can be ren-

[393] Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734, 24 L. Ed. 136; Garrison v. Kurt, 249 Fed. 672, 161 C. C. A. 582, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re United States Chrysotile Asbestos Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 294, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774; Martin v. Bankers' Trust Co., 18 Ariz. 55, 156 Pac. 87, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 1240; Albert Pick & Co. v. Natalby, 211 Ill. App. 486; Abney-Barnes Co. v. Davy-Pocahontas Coal Co., 83 W. Va. 292, 98 S. E. 298; In re Rohrer, 177 Fed. 381, 100 C. C. A. 613, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; Clark v. Norwalk Steel & Iron Co., 188 Fed. 999; In re Lattimer, 174 Fed. 824, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re McKane, 158 Fed. 647, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; Wikle v. Jones, 133 Ga. 266, 65 S. E. 577; Parks v. Baldwin, 123 Ga. 869, 51 S. E. 722; Harvey v. Smith, 179 Mass. 592, 61 N. E. 217; Furth v. Stahl, 205 Pa. St. 439, 55 Atl. 29; Carter v. People's Nat. Bank, 109 Ga. 573, 35 S. E. 61; Merrill v. Jordan, 60 N. H. 425; Lenihan v. Hamann, 55 N. Y. 652; Cutter v. Dingee, 8 Ben. 469, 14 N. B. R. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 3,518; In re Irving, 8 Ben. 463, 14 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 7,073; Getz v. First Nat. Bank, Fed. Cas. No. 5,374. Compare Carpenter v. O'Connor, 16 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 526; In re Doran, 154 Fed. 467, 83 C. C. A. 265, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

[394] Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. Ed. 403; In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; Heath v. Shaffer, 93 Fed. 647, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98; In re Porter, 109 Fed. 111, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259. In such an action, the defense of usury is available to the trustee in bankruptcy. In re Kellogg, 121 Fed. 333, 57 C. C. A. 547, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7; In re Miller, 118 Fed. 360, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 274. Where a trustee in bankruptcy intervenes in a foreclosure proceeding pending in a state court, he thereby recognizes the jurisdiction of that court. O'Reilly v. Pietri, 135 La. 1, 64 South. 922.

[395] Oliver v. Cunningham (C. C.) 6 Fed. 60.

[396] In re Soltmann, 249 Fed. 455, 161 C. C. A. 413, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; Goldsmith v. Winner Shingle Co., 96 Wash. 516, 165 Pac. 392; Cobleigh v. Spitznagle, 120 Ill. App. 110; Leary v. Shaffer, 79 Ind. 567. A trustee in bankruptcy, by applying to a state court to set aside an order granting executory process for the foreclosure of a mortgage, could not impair or affect the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to enjoin the foreclosure. George B. Matthews & Sons v. Joseph Webre Co. (D. C.) 213 Fed. 396, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180.

[397] Scott v. Gordon, 109 Mo. App. 695, 83 S. W. 550.

[398] Jobbins v. Montague, 23 N. J. Eq. 182.

dered against the mortgagor, at least until the question of his discharge has been determined.[399]

But the court of bankruptcy is not without jurisdiction to stop the prosecution of a foreclosure suit, where such a course is necessary for the proper exercise of its own jurisdiction or the effective administration of the estate in bankruptcy. Such is the case where the foreclosure suit was not begun until after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings,[400] where the validity of the mortgage is denied on common-law grounds,[401] or where its lien is claimed to have been dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy following within four months after it was given,[402] or where the giving of the mortgage was the very act of bankruptcy on which the adjudication was based,[403] or where the proceedings taken by the holder of a chattel mortgage were not such as to bring the property within the jurisdiction of the state court.[404] So also, where it appears that it would be for the interest of the creditors at large to have mortgaged real estate taken by the trustee and administered with the remainder of the assets, preserving the lien of the secured creditor, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to order the trustee to take possession of the property, and to enjoin the secured creditor from selling it or otherwise interfering with it,[405] as where it appears that its value greatly exceeds the amount of the incumbrance and that the surplus is more likely to be realized by a sale made by the trustee,[406] or that the mortgagee is endeavoring to delay the sale un-

[399] Scott v. Ellery, 142 U. S. 381, 12 Sup. Ct. 233, 35 L. Ed. 1050; McKay v. Funk, 37 Iowa, 661, 13 N. B. R. 334.

[400] In re San Gabriel Sanatorium Co., 102 Fed. 310, 42 C. C. A. 369, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197. McLoughlin v. Knop (D. C.) 214 Fed. 260, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582. A summary sale of property of a bankrupt by the trustee in a deed of trust, made while the property was in the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor, and made without the consent of the court of bankruptcy, is void. In re Hasie (D. C.) 206 Fed. 789, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83.

[401] In re Duryea, 17 N. B. R. 495, Fed. Cas. No. 4,196.

[402] In re Oxley, 182 Fed. 1019, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656.

[403] In re Donnelly, 188 Fed. 1001, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304. But an adjudication that a mortgage is invalid as an illegal preference does not prevent the mortgagee from suing in a state court to foreclose the mortgage, so far as the same affects exempt property. Morris v. Covey, 104 Ark. 226, 148 S. W. 257.

[404] In re Brooks (D. C.) 91 Fed. 508, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[405] In re Booth (D. C.) 96 Fed. 943, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Zehner, 193 Fed. 787, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

[406] In re Ball (D. C.) 118 Fed. 672, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276; In re Zehner (D. C.) 193 Fed. 787, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536. Where there was a growing crop on the mortgaged real property of the bankrupt, which the trustee had been directed by the creditors to cultivate and harvest, the mortgagee should not be permitted to foreclose, though he might have any relief to which he would be entitled in equity, and, when the property was eventually sold, he would not suffer any diminution of right or be subjected to any greater expense than by a foreclosure in the state court. George B. Matthews & Sons v. Joseph Webre Co. (D. C.) 213 Fed. 396, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180. But the court of bankruptcy has no power to enjoin the sale of the bankrupt property to be made by a state officer pursuant to a decree of foreclosure by a state court, merely to permit the trustee in reasonably and to prevent the property from bringing a fair price,[407] or where a large and valuable tract of land is incumbered by numerous mortgages, the separate foreclosure of which would involve heavy expense and leave little or nothing for the general creditors, while such a result could be avoided by administering the property in the bankruptcy proceeding.[408] Another course open to the court of bankruptcy is to permit the mortgage creditor to continue his action in the state court, making the trustee a party, in order that all questions as to its validity under the state laws may be there determined, but at the same time to reserve to the trustee the right to sell the property in the bankruptcy proceedings and hold the proceeds to await the decision of the state court.[409] But where the whole property of the bankrupt, including that affected by the lien of a mortgage, has been sold in the bankruptcy proceedings, the secured creditor can enforce his lien upon the proceeds by proper application to the court of bankruptcy, and in these circumstances a foreclosure suit in a state court is unnecessary.[410]

§ 391. Same; Proceedings Out of Court.—After an adjudication of bankruptcy, all the property of the bankrupt which comes into the possession and custody of the trustee must be administered solely by him and in accordance with the directions of the bankruptcy law, and lien creditors cannot interfere with his possession and administration by availing themselves of remedies which they hold by virtue of their contracts or which are given to them by statute to be exercised out of court. Thus, as to such property, a landlord cannot enforce his claim for rent by distress, but is only entitled to proceed against the trustee in the bankruptcy court.[411] So a creditor cannot levy execution on real property on which his judgment is a lien unless permitted by the court of bankruptcy.[412] And a pre-existing tax lien cannot be converted into a full title by taking out a tax deed, without the sanction of the court.[413] The court of bankruptcy, in the exercise of its equitable powers, may protect the estate of the bankrupt in its custody from a fraudulent and excessive assessment for taxes.[414] But aside from this, and even where bankruptcy to try to secure a purchaser and to advertise the sale more extensively. In re Schmidt (D. C.) 224 Fed. 814, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[407] In re Holloway (D. C.) 93 Fed. 638, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659.

[408] In re Pittlekow (D. C.) 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472.

[409] In re Johnson, 127 Fed. 618, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544. As to the mortgagee's claim on rents and profits of the property collected by the trustee while in possession, see In re Chase, 133 Fed. 79, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294; In re Hollenfeltz, 94 Fed. 629, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

[410] Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556, 73 N. W. 977.

[411] In re Bishop, 153 Fed. 304, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635; In re Printograph Sales Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 567, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[412] In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[413] In re Eppstein, 156 Fed. 42, 84 C. C. A. 208, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89.

[414] Cross v. Georgia Iron & Coal Co., 250 Fed. 438, 162 C. C. A. 508, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385.

no fraud is alleged, the sale for taxes or for special assessments of property belonging to a bankrupt estate and in the custody of the court of bankruptcy, if made without the leave of that court, is void.[415] But purchasers at tax sales of the bankrupt's property, which are avoided at the instance of trustee, will be entitled to reimbursement for the amount paid and subsequent taxes, with interest, just as in the case of a redemption, without regard to the selling price of the property at a bankruptcy sale.[416] On the same general principle, a creditor may be restrained from proceeding to sell property under the power contained in a chattel mortgage or a deed of trust.[417] But the case is different with a pledgee holding property of the bankrupt under a valid contract of pledge to secure a genuine debt. As the property is not in the custody or possession of the court of bankruptcy, it has no jurisdiction over it further than to protect the interests of general creditors against any fraudulent or oppressive conduct on the part of the pledgee or in respect to any surplus. Hence the pledgee, acting fairly, has the right to sell the property in accordance with the terms of the contract and apply the proceeds in payment of his debt, accounting to the trustee for any surplus, and he will not be enjoined from so doing.[418] And on the same principle, where one is employed in the capacity of a factor to purchase goods for a bankrupt, and the goods so bought are not shipped and sold under the bankrupt's instructions because of his bankruptcy, the factor is entitled to sell the property for the best price obtainable and charge the bankrupt with the loss in satisfaction of his lien.[419]

[415] Dayton v. Stanard, 241 U. S. 588, 36 Sup. Ct. 695, 60 L. Ed. 1190, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[416] Stanard v. Dayton, 220 Fed. 441, 137 C. C. A. 35, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

[417] In re Hasie, 206 Fed. 789, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83; In re Nathan, 92 Fed. 590; In re Jersey Island Packing Co., 138 Fed. 625, 71 C. C. A. 75, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 560, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689.

[418] Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 27 Sup. Ct. 681, 51 L. Ed. 945, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; John Mathews, Inc. v. Knickerbocker Trust Co., 192 Fed. 557, 113 C. C. A. 29, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627; In re Ironclad Mfg. Co., 192 Fed. 318; In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; In re Mertens, 144 Fed. 818; 75 C. C. A. 548, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Mayer, 157 Fed. 836, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; In re Browne, 104 Fed. 762, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220. Compare In re Cobb, 96 Fed. 821, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129. But where bonds deposited as collateral to a corporation's note were simple promises to pay, not secured, and had never been issued by the bankrupt until delivery to secure the bankrupt's note, the creditor was held not entitled to sell the bonds to realize funds with which to pay the note, since to do so would simply increase the corporation's indebtedness, to the prejudice of other creditors. In re Matthews, 188 Fed. 445, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

[419] Couturie v. Roensch (Tex. Civ. App.) 134 S. W. 413.

CHAPTER XXI

SUITS BY AND AGAINST TRUSTEES IN BANKRUPTCY

§ 392. Trustee's Right of Action in General.—Although the bankruptcy statute does not explicitly grant to trustees in bankruptcy the authority to sue in their own names, or indeed to sue at all, yet the right of a trustee to bring and maintain whatever suit may become necessary in the process of collecting and reducing to money the assets of the estate may be derived by clear and necessary implications from various provisions of the act,[1] and in fact this right is to be regarded as a necessary incident to his office as trustee.[2] The only limitations upon this right, as stated in a decision under the former statute, are "first, that the thing sought to be recovered shall be such as, when recovered, shall be assets of the estate, and second, that the action brought shall not be an action of tort for damages such as, at common law, is strictly personal and dies with the person."[3] But aside from questions of preference or fraudulent conveyance, it is necessary that the relation of debtor and creditor should have existed between the defendant and the bankrupt, or circumstances must have existed which equity would hold equivalent to such relation.[4] Thus, the trustee cannot maintain a suit for the recovery of a statutory forfeiture not claimed by the bankrupt either before or after the beginning of the bankruptcy proceedings.[5] But since the statute vests him with title to all the bankrupt's property as of the date when he was adjudged a bankrupt, the trustee is not hampered in suing for its recovery by the previous appointment of a receiver in a creditor's bill and the transfer of the legal title to such receiver.[6] The trustee, it will be observed, may and should sue in his own name, not in the name of the bankrupt nor as use plaintiff,[7] but he may, in proper cases, intervene in suits pending by or against the bankrupt at the date of the adjudication,[8] and he may, under the direction of the court or with its approval, submit controversies to arbitration or effect their compromise,[9] and the death or removal of a trustee in bankruptcy does not abate any pending suit which he was prosecuting or defending.[10] Further, as the trustee represents all the creditors of the bankrupt, he may institute all such proceedings to avoid illegal transactions as any of the creditors might,[11] and the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy dispenses with

[1] Pease v. McQuillin, 180 Mass. 135, 61 N. E. 819; Brunnemer v. Cook & Bernheimer Co., 89 App. Div. 406, 85 N. Y. Supp. 954; Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, 8 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 7,573; Babbitt v. Burgess, 2 Dill. 169, 7 N. B. R. 561, Fed. Cas. No. 693; Barber v. Wiemer, 183 Iowa, 72, 165 N. W. 440.

[2] McLanahan v. Blackwell, 119 Ga. 64, 45 S. E. 785.

[3] Trustees of Mutual Building Fund v. Bosseiux, 4 Hughes, 387, 3 Fed. 817.

[4] Monroe v. Bushnell, 158 Mich. 115, 122 N. W. 508.

[5] Bromley v. Smith, 2 Biss. 511, 5 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 1,922.

[6] Shainwald v. Davis, 69 Fed. 687. But a trustee in bankruptcy has no right to sue on an agreement made between state receivers of the bankrupt and one of its creditors; the receivers must settle with the court which appointed them. Love v. Export Storage Co., 143 Fed. 1, 74 C. C. A. 155, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[7] Ward v. Jenkins, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 583; West v. Bank of Lahoma, 16 Okl. 508, 86 Pac. 59.

[8] See supra, § 198. But the trustee has a discretion in this matter, and may properly refuse to continue the prosecution of a suit which cannot result in benefit to the estate. In re Throckmorton, 149 Fed. 145, 79 C. C. A. 15, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856.

[9] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 26, 27. See Hiram Blow Stave Co.'s Trustee v. Paducah Cooperage Co., 158 Ky. 833, 166 S. W. 615. And see supra, § 304.

[10] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 46. And see Pace v. Ficklin's Ex'x, 76 Va. 292.

[11] Crane v. Brewer, 73 N. J. Eq. 558.

the necessity of a judgment and execution in favor of any or all of the creditors, as a preliminary, for example, to equitable proceedings to reach equitable assets of the bankrupt.[12] And rights of creditors enforceable under state statutes are enforceable by the trustee in bankruptcy, though not made available to him by the specific terms of the Bankruptcy Act.[13] So also, the trustee may pay off a creditor and be subrogated to his rights in a pending suit against a third person, if it will be for the benefit of the estate.[14] But the trustee represents the whole body of creditors, and his administration must be for their equal and common benefit. Hence he cannot ordinarily maintain an action in the name or for the benefit of a single creditor or for the advantage of less than all.[15]

As the trustee is the representative of the creditors, and not of the bankrupt, his rights of action are by no means limited to suits which the bankrupt himself might have brought or maintained. Even if the bankrupt is disqualified from suing on a particular contract, for failure to comply with some requirement of the state law, it does not follow that his trustee is similarly disqualified.[16] But besides this, the trustee may avoid numerous kinds of transactions which would have been good and valid as against the bankrupt. Thus, he may recover property in the hands of the bankrupt's assignee for the benefit of creditors;[17] he may sue to set aside fraudulent transfers of property or payments of money made by the bankrupt;[18] he may recover money paid or property trans-

68 Atl. 78. And see In re Geiver, 193 Fed. 128, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413.

[12] McKey v. Emanuel, 263 Ill. 276, 104 N. E. 1051; Sherwood v. Holbrook, 178 App. Div. 462, 165 N. Y. Supp. 514.

[13] Courtney v. Fidelity Trust Co., 219 Fed. 57, 134 C. C. A. 595, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400.

[14] In re Babcock, 3 Story, 393, Fed. Cas. No. 696.

[15] Stevenson v. Bird, 168 Ala. 422, 53 South. 93; Smith v. Lawton, 39 Ga. 29. Compare In re Bothe, 173 Fed. 597, 97 C. C. A. 547, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151. A bill on behalf of creditors by a trustee in bankruptcy to enforce a constructive trust in real estate held by the debtor's wife may be maintained though there is only one creditor entitled to the benefit of the suit. Duncan v. Lum, 201 Ala. 192, 77 South. 718.

[16] Thomas v. Birmingham Ry., Light & Power Co., 195 Fed. 340, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 152. In this case it was held that, if a contract made in a given state by a foreign corporation and to be performed there is void because of the failure of the corporation to comply with the law of the state, its trustee in bankruptcy cannot sue on the contract in a federal court. But it was intimated that if the effect of the state statute was merely to disqualify the foreign corporation from maintaining a suit, it would not follow that the trustee could not sue. A corporation's participation in the illegal issuance of its bonds, contrary to the state law, does not prevent relief to its trustee in bankruptcy suing to compel their return. In re Progressive Wall Paper Corp., 229 Fed. 489, 143 C. C. A. 557, L. R. A. 1916E, 563.

[17] See, infra, Chapter XXII.

[18] See infra, Chapter XXIII. Where a third person bought the bankrupt's entire stock of goods, within four months before the bankruptcy, and without complying with the Bulk Sales law of the state, the stock belongs to the trustee in bankruptcy as against the purchaser, and the latter is liable to the trustee in trover without a demand. Philoon v. Babbitt, 119 Me. 172, 109 Atl. 817. So, the holders of bonds of a corporation ferred by a debtor in contemplation of bankruptcy to an attorney at law, for services to be rendered in the bankruptcy proceedings, at least in so far as the same shall exceed a reasonable compensation;[19] and he may maintain suits to set aside preferences given to particular creditors or to recover their proceeds.[20] Moreover, if an execution was levied on property of one who afterwards became bankrupt, and within such a time as to be avoided by the adjudication in bankruptcy, the trustee may claim the proceeds of the sale on such execution if they remain in the hands of the sheriff or have been paid into court, or if the money has been paid over to the execution creditor, the trustee may maintain a plenary suit against him to recover the proceeds as a voidable preference.[21] So also, the trustee of a bankrupt corporation may maintain appropriate proceedings to enforce the liability of stockholders on their unpaid subscriptions for stock,[22] and he may sue for the recovery of dividends unlawfully paid out of capital,[23] or for the recovery of capital or assets wrongfully or fraudulently withdrawn by officers and stockholders, or wrongfully paid over to them within four months before the adjudication in bankruptcy.[24] Where the bankrupt was a minority stockholder in a corporation, and it is claimed that stock was fraudulently issued to other holders, the trustee may maintain a bill to have the shares returned, but he must offer to return the amount paid.[25] Moreover, the trustee of a bankrupt stockholder in a corporation succeeds to the bankrupt's title to the stock and to all of his rights and remedies in respect to dividends declared or which ought to have been declared; and so, which are adjudged to be void may be required by the court of bankruptcy, at the instance of the trustee, to surrender the bonds. In re Franklin Brewing Co. (D. C.) 254 Fed. 910, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[19] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60d.

[20] In re Walsh Bros., 163 Fed. 352, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; Rosenthal v. Bronx Nat. Bank (D. C.) 222 Fed. 83, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955. And see, generally, infra, Chapter XXIX.

[21] In re Bailey, 144 Fed. 214, 16 Am. Rep. 289; In re Knickerbocker, 121 Fed. 1004, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; In re Blair, 102 Fed. 987, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220; Horton v. Bamford, 79 N. J. Eq. 356, 81 Atl. 761; Jordan v. Downey, 40 Md. 401. The trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to sue for property sold under execution within four months before bankruptcy, or its value, without tendering back the amount paid. Dreyer v. Kicklighter (D. C.) 228 Fed. 744, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199.

[22] Kiskadden v. Steinle (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 375, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; Babbitt v. Read, 173 Fed. 712, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; Edwards v. Schillinger, 148 Ill. App. 227; Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 186, 82 N. Y. Supp. 235; Stocker v. Davidson, 74 Kan. 214, 86 Pac. 136, 118 Am. St. Rep. 315; Smoot v. Perkins (Tex. Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 988, and see, supra, §§ 148, 149. Compare Hunt v. Sharkey, 20 Cal. App. 690, 130 Pac. 21. And see, also, Rosoff v. Gilbert Transp. Co., 204 Fed. 349, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359.

[23] Cottrell v. Albany Card & Paper Mfg. Co., 142 App. Div. 148, 126 N. Y. Supp. 1070. See Sherwood v. Holbrook, 98 Misc. Rep. 668, 163 N. Y. Supp. 326.

[24] Johnson v. Canfield-Swigart Co., 292 Ill. 101, 126 N. E. 608; Arnold v. Knapp, 75 W. Va. 804, 84 S. E. 895.

[25] Abele v. S. A. Meagher Co., 227 Mass. 427, 116 N. E. 805.

where the directors of a corporation, in order to protect the bankrupt and to hold out money which ought to go to his creditors, fail to declare a dividend which they might and should declare, the trustee may maintain a suit to compel the declaration of a dividend and its payment to him.[26]

On similar principles, the trustee may sue for the recovery of usurious interest paid by the bankrupt.[27] But he cannot recover from the bankrupt's creditor securities pledged to secure the payment of a usurious loan without tendering the amount lawfully due, where that is what the law of the state requires.[28] The trustee may also sue for the bankrupt's share in a community estate,[29] and he has an absolute right to partition against the bankrupt's wife.[30] He may also sue for an interest in a remainder assigned by the bankrupt,[31] for property erroneously or improvidently surrendered to claimants by a previous receiver of the same estate in bankruptcy,[32] for the profits of a manufacturing plant leased by the bankrupt corporation,[33] and for an accounting on the part of a pledgee of property of the bankrupt, who has sold the same improvidently or contrary to the agreement of pledge.[34] Also it is within the province of a trustee in bankruptcy to maintain suits for the removal of clouds on the title of property coming into his hands as trustee.[35]

As a membership in a stock exchange, board of trade, or similar organization, held by the bankrupt, becomes assets of his estate in bankruptcy, if it has an actual market value and is salable, it passes to his trustee, and the latter may take such steps as are necessary to convert it into money, and therefore may maintain a suit against the exchange or board, or its governing authorities, to compel the issuance to him of a membership certificate, but only for the purpose of a sale.[36]

The statute also vests the trustee with title to "rights of action arising upon contracts or from the unlawful taking or detention of, or [26] In re Brantman, 244 Fed. 101, 156 C. C. A. 529, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

[27] Darby v. Boatmen's Sav. Inst., 1 Dill. 141, 4 N. B. R. 600, Fed. Cas. No. 3,571; Bromley v. Smith, 2 Biss. 511, 5 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 1,922. And see supra, § 344.

[28] Rice v. Schneck, 189 App. Div. 877, 179 N. Y. Supp. 335.

[29] Collins v. Bryan, 40 Tex. Civ. App. 88, 88 S. W. 432.

[30] Harlin v. American Trust Co., 67 Ind. App. 213, 119 N. E. 20.

[31] Clowe v. Seavey, 74 Misc. Rep. 254, 131 N. Y. Supp. 817.

[32] Whitney v. Wenman, 140 Fed. 959, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591.

[33] Gill v. Bell's Knitting Mills, 137 App. Div. 553, 121 N. Y. Supp. 692.

[34] In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159. Where defendant took charge of a corporation's business under a factor's agreement entitling him to a lien for advances on stock, accounts receivable, etc., the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy was held entitled to an accounting from defendant for merchandise sold, or its value, for accounts collected, and for loans and advances. Boise v. Talcott (D. C.) 212 Fed. 268, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838.

[35] Lance v. Tainter, 137 N. C. 249, 49 S. E. 211; Gazlay v. Williams, 147 Fed. 678, 77 C. C. A. 662, 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1199, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249.

[36] Board of Trade of City of Chicago v. Weston, 243 Fed. 332, 156 C. C. A. 112, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

injury to, his [the bankrupt's] property." [37] Consequently the trustee may sue not only on contractual rights of action vested in the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication,[38] but also on such torts as are not purely personal but involve pecuniary injury or loss or diminution of the estate in bankruptcy.[39] Creditors who obtain possession of the debtor's property without his authority or consent, and proceed to administer it, by turning it into money and paying off debts and claims, are also liable to his trustee in bankruptcy afterwards appointed, who may sue them as for a conversion, or, waiving the tort, for the value of the property.[40] But the trustee cannot maintain a suit in tort for conspiracy in assisting the bankrupt to place his property beyond the reach of creditors, against persons who are alleged to have performed their acts of conspiracy pending the bankruptcy proceedings, but before the adjudication, where it is not alleged that any of the defendants received any portion of the estate, and the only result of the conspiracy is to turn the bankrupt's property into money in his hands, for which he has failed to account to the trustee.[41] The bankrupt himself is also liable at the suit of his trustee for a tort committed on the bankrupt's property when he went into bankruptcy, and it is no defense to such an action that he has no property of his own with which to respond.[42] But it cannot be maintained that it is the duty of the trustee to bring suits for the infringement of a patent owned by the bankrupt, or that his failure to do so is negligence.[43]

Causes of action may of course also accrue to the trustee out of his dealings with other persons in his official character as trustee. For example, where a bankrupt's trustee was in possession of certain machines which had been received by the bankrupt under a contract of conditional sale, and at the direction of the seller, but through a mistake on his own part, the trustee delivered certain of them to a third person, without payment and without authority from the bankruptcy court, it was held that the trustee was entitled to recover from such person either the machines or their value.[44]

§ 393. Trustee's Right of Action Exclusive.—Upon an adjudication in bankruptcy, the bankrupt's property and rights of action vest in

[37] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a.

[38] See supra, § 342.

[39] Supra, § 343. And see Brunnemer v. Cook & Bernheimer Co., 89 App. Div. 406, 85 N. Y. Supp. 954.

[40] In re Thomas, 199 Fed. 214, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945. And see State Bank of Chicago v. Cox, 143 Fed. 91, 74 C. C. A. 285, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

[41] Friedman v. Myers, 30 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 303.

[42] Carr v. Gale, 3 Woodb. & M. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 2,435.

[43] Kittle v. Hall, 29 Fed. 508.

[44] In re Caldwell Machinery Co. (D. C.) 215 Fed. 428.

his trustee, and thereafter suits in respect to the same must be brought in the name of the trustee, not in that of the bankrupt.[45] If the bankrupt sues, it is a good plea in abatement that he has been adjudicated and a trustee appointed.[46] And conversely, it is no defense to a suit by the trustee to recover a debt due to the bankrupt that the same debt has been claimed by the bankrupt as a set-off in a pending suit.[47] The trustee's right of action is also exclusive of that of the creditors. If he refuses or neglects to bring a suit which they deem necessary or advisable, their remedy is to apply to the court of bankruptcy for an order compelling him to do so, or, in extreme cases, for his removal and the appointment of a new trustee.[48] Before the election and qualification of a trustee, it is true, any creditor of the bankrupt has the right to institute a suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or recover a preference, but when a trustee is elected pending such a suit, he is entitled to become a party plaintiff therein.[49] And after the trustee is in the exercise of his official functions it belongs to him alone to institute and maintain a suit of this character, at least to the exclusion of any creditor who has not a special lien on the property in question, and certainly to the exclusion of all simple-contract creditors.[50] And the fact that creditors of a bankrupt had acquired a lien on property fraudulently transferred more than four months before the bankruptcy, and are therefore entitled to sue to set aside the conveyance, notwithstanding the bankruptcy proceedings, does not deprive the bankrupt's trustee of the right to maintain a similar suit, especially where the creditors

[45] Dessau v. Johnson, 66 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 4; Rea v. Richards, 56 Ala. 396; First Nat. Bank v. Waite, 57 Vt. 608; Elderkin v. Elderkin, 1 Root (Conn.) 139.

[46] Cook v. Lansing, 3 McLean, 571, Fed. Cas. No. 3,162.

[47] Miller v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 9,566.

[48] In re Oakley (D. C.) 215 Fed. 265, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806; Miners' & Merchants' Bank v. Union Loan & Trust Co., 5 Alaska, 511. And, see supra, § 281. That a creditor of a bankrupt is dissatisfied with the manner in which the trustee is discharging his duties does not justify him in standing aloof from the bankruptcy proceedings and bringing an independent suit to recover his debt. De Muth v. Faw, 103 Wash. 279, 174 Pac. 18. As to the rights of creditors in respect to directing the trustee to bring suits, and the discretion of the trustee in submitting to a vote of the creditors the question whether particular action shall be taken, see supra, § 282. Compare Davis v. W. F. Vandiver & Co., 143 Ala. 202, 38 South. 850, where it is said that if creditors, acting independently, bring suits for the recovery of assets which the trustee is negligently or intentionally permitting to escape, it does not lie with the trustee to complain of their action.

[49] Frost v. Latham & Co., 181 Fed. 866, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313.

[50] Lovell v. Latham & Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 374, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191; Viquesney v. Allen, 131 Fed. 21, 65 C. C. A. 259, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 402; Moore-Schafer Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Billings, 46 Or. 401, 80 Pac. 422; New Orleans Nat. Banking Ass'n v. Le Breton, 4 Woods, 203, 14 Fed. 646. But see Googins v. Skillings, 118 Me. 299, 108 Atl. 50, holding that a creditor may proceed in the state courts to set aside a fraudulent transfer as to him, notwithstanding the debtor's bankruptcy, if the trustee takes no action or if the creditor's claim is not provable in bankruptcy.

have not yet brought their suit, and are joined as defendants in the trustee's suit.[51]

§ 394. Leave or Direction to Sue.—In respect to suits pending by or against the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication, it appears that the intervention of the trustee or his substitution as a party must have the sanction of the court of bankruptcy. For the language of the statute is that he "may, with the approval of the court, be permitted to prosecute" a suit begun by the bankrupt, or, if the pending action was against the bankrupt as defendant, that "the court may order the trustee to enter his appearance and defend."[52] Before attempting to take the place of the bankrupt in a pending suit, therefore, the trustee should obtain the consent or order of the court of bankruptcy.[53] But it is otherwise as to actions which the trustee begins on his own account after taking charge of the estate, whether the suit is to collect a debt, set aside a fraudulent transfer, or recover a preference. His right to bring such actions is clearly conferred by the statute, and his duty to do so is incident to his office and does not depend upon the orders or instructions of the court. Any such suit may be brought in a state court by the trustee on his own initiative and responsibility, without first obtaining the leave or direction of the court of bankruptcy, and the fact that he proceeds without any order from that court is no defense or valid objection.[54] It is true that the statute requires trustees to collect and liquidate the assets of the estate "under the direction of the court," but this does not require an express order or direction to institute any particular suit.[55] However, it is also true that a trustee who hesitates or refuses to bring a suit for the recovery of assets may be ordered to do so on the petition of a creditor, provided the latter will give a bond to protect the estate from liability for costs and expenses.[56]

In the particular case of a proceeding by the trustee of a bankrupt corporation to collect unpaid subscriptions to its capital stock, there must first be an order of the court of bankruptcy directing the insti-

51 Thomas v. Roddy, 122 App. Div. 851, 107 N. Y. Supp. 473.

52 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11b, c.

53 Hahlo v. Cole, 112 App. Div. 636, 98 N. Y. Supp. 1049; In re Haensell, 91 Fed. 355, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; The Alert, 199 Fed. 542.

54 Traders' Ins. Co. v. Mann, 118 Ga. 381, 45 S. E. 426; Chalman v. Dodd, 23 Ga. App. 653, 99 S. E. 150. Cartwright v. West, 155 Ala. 619, 47 South. 93; Chism v. Citizens' Bank, 77 Miss. 599, 27 South. 637; Chism v. Bank of Friars Point (Miss.) 27 South. 610; Edwards v. Schillinger, 148 Ill. App. 227; Avery v. Ryerson, 34 Mich. 362; Hallack v. Tritch, 17 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 5,956. Compare Chisolm v. Wallace, 146 Ala. 683, 40 South. 219. And see, under the act of 1867, Pollock v. Hill, 69 Ala. 515; Maybin v. Raymond, 15 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 9,338. As to necessity of previous demand or notice to defendant, see Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

55 Callahan v. Israel, 186 Mass. 383, 71 N. E. 812.

56 In re Bailey (D. C.) 151 Fed. 953, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226. And see, supra, § 282.

tution of proceedings against the delinquent stockholders and notice to them and an opportunity to be heard as to the validity of the claim.[57] But if these conditions are fulfilled, they can question the validity of the order authorizing suit only in a direct proceeding in the court of bankruptcy.[58]

§ 395. Suit by Foreign Assignee in Bankruptcy.—The American rule as to the effect of foreign bankruptcy on the property of the bankrupt, as stated by Story, is that an adjudication abroad is not regarded as vesting the assignee with title to the property of the debtor which may be without the jurisdiction of the country where the proceedings take place, or that, if it is recognized as having that effect (which is the case in some of our courts), at least it is universally held that we are not bound by comity to give effect to foreign bankruptcy laws to the extent of impairing the remedies, or lessening the securities, which our laws have provided for our own citizens.[59] But while the right of a foreign assignee in bankruptcy, as respects the assets of the bankrupt, must yield to the claims of creditors of the bankrupt seeking the aid of the domestic courts, yet such foreign assignee may, as the representative of the bankrupt, sue to collect the assets to the same extent as the bankrupt could have done had not bankruptcy intervened, though whether he may sue in his own name or must sue in the name of the bankrupt is a local question, depending upon whether or not an assignment by operation of law is sufficient to enable the assignee to sue in his own name.[60]

§ 396. Suits Against Trustee.—A trustee in bankruptcy may be sued by any one having a valid claim against him for acts done in the administration of the estate, as, for the recovery of money which has come into his hands but which does not constitute assets of the estate, properly belonging to the plaintiff, or for the conversion of goods similarly claimed by such plaintiff as his own.[61] So, a suit may be main-

[57] Chamberlain v. Piercy, 82 Wash. 157, 143 Pac. 977; Natwick v. Terwilliger, 24 Wyo. 253, 157 Pac. 696, 160 Pac. 338. And see, supra, § 148. Compare Porter v. Hughes, 198 Ala. 36, 73 South. 400.

[58] Bernard v. Carr, 167 N. C. 481, 83 S. E. 816.

[59] Story, Conflict of Laws (8th edn.) pp. 565, 575. And see supra, § 14.

[60] Hunt v. Jackson, 5 Blatchf. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 6,893; Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brock. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 1,531; Merrick's Estate, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 9; In re Merrick, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 485. Contra, Mosselman v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66; s. c., 1 Hun, 647, 4 Thomp. & C. 171, 10 N. B. R. 512.

[61] In re Snelling, 202 Fed. 258; Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 572, 118 S. W. 1146; Schall v. Kinsella, 117 La. 687, 42 South. 221; Hosmer v. Jewett, 6 Ben. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 6,713; Smith v. Gordon, 6 Law Rep. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 13,052; State v. Trustees of University, 65 N. C. 714, 5 N. B. R. 466, Fed. Cas. No. 10,318; Cogdell v. Exum, 69 N. C. 464, 12 Am. Rep. 657, 10 N. B. R. 326.

tained against the trustee to establish the validity and lien of an incumbrance on property of the bankrupt in his hands,[62] or by a chattel mortgagee to establish his claim upon the fund arising from the trustee's sale of the mortgaged goods, where a sum was ordered reserved out of the proceeds of the sale to satisfy any liens which might be established,[63] or the trustee may officially be made a defendant in a suit to foreclose a mortgage on property of the bankrupt, commenced after his appointment and qualification.[64] So also, an action lies against him for money received by him as assets of the estate and not paid over to creditors,[65] or for wrongfully paying out a fund in his hands to other creditors than the one solely entitled to it.[66] But a suit against the trustee is not a proper or permissible procedure for one who is simply a creditor of the bankrupt and seeks thereby to collect his debt. He must take the course prescribed by the statute, proving his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings and taking his dividend with the rest.[67] Nor can one sue the trustee in a state court whose claim is properly to be presented to the court of bankruptcy as a part of the legitimate expenses of administration.[68] And the bankrupt himself has no standing to sue the trustee in respect to any property vesting in the latter by virtue of the adjudication.[69]

If the trustee dies or absconds pending the suit, his co-trustee or his successor in the office of trustee may be brought in.[70] As to the defenses available to the trustee in such an action, it is said that he is limited to such defenses on behalf of creditors as they themselves would be entitled to rely upon.[71] But clearly he may plead usury, and probably it is his duty to do so,[72] or the illegality of the consideration, as where the note in suit was given in a gambling transaction.[73] As to [62] Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co., 99 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; Nauman Co. v. Bradshaw, 193 Fed. 350, 113 C. C. A. 274, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565.

[63] Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885.

[64] Landon v. Townshend, 112 N. Y. 93, 19 N. E. 424, 8 Am. St. Rep. 712.

[65] Hall v. Cushing, 8 Mass. 521. A trustee in bankruptcy, who has been charged by the bankruptcy court in a summary proceeding with the value of property which came into his possession as assets of the estate, and was improperly delivered by him to a firm in which he was a partner, may be enjoined by a state court from using the partnership assets to satisfy the judgment against himself. Hebert v. Crawford, 228 U. S. 204, 33 Sup. Ct. 484, 57 L. Ed. 800, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24.

[66] United States v. Dewey, 39 Fed. 251.

[67] Catlin v. Foster, 1 Sawy. 37, 3 N. B. R. 540, Fed. Cas. No. 2,519.

[68] In re Empire Construction & Supply Co., 157 Fed. 495, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

[69] In re Kranich, 174 Fed. 908, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

[70] Fenton v. Collerd, 8 Ben. 27, 11 N. B. R. 535, Fed. Cas. 4,731.

[71] Marine Sav. Bank v. Norton, 160 Mich. 614, 125 N. W. 754.

[72] In re Hoole, 3 Fed. 496. And see supra, § 344.

[73] In re Hill, 187 Fed. 214, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133.

the form of action, the rule is that if the trustee is alleged to have in his possession, or to have converted to the use of the estate, property which did not constitute a part of the assets in bankruptcy, he may be sued in trespass or trover for its value by the rightful owner,[74] but not in replevin, since the latter form of action would involve the physical change of possession of property which, being in the hands of the trustee as an officer, is in the custody and exclusive control of the court of bankruptcy.[75] And for similar reasons, a state court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit to enjoin the collection of assets by a trustee in bankruptcy.[76] As to the other incidents of a suit against the trustee, it may be remarked that the rule applies that one who purchases pendente lite is bound by the subsequent proceedings,[77] and that if the trustee, being made a defendant to a suit, fails to come in and assert his rights, he will be just as much barred by a default judgment or decree as any other party.[78] But when a judgment has been recovered against the trustee in his official capacity (that is, a judgment which is effective against the estate in bankruptcy rather than against the trustee personally) there should be no attempt to collect it by the ordinary process of execution.[79] The plaintiff must seek his remedy in the court of bankruptcy, which, having exclusive possession and jurisdiction to administer the estate, and having control over the trustee as its officer, can make all proper orders relating to the satisfaction and payment of the judgment.[80]

[74] In re Spitzer, 130 Fed. 879, 66 C. C. A. 35, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; In re Russell (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. 248, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; Truda v. Osgood, 71 N. H. 185, 51 Atl. 633. But compare In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

[75] Weeks v. Fowler, 71 N. H. 221, 51 Atl. 624; Crosby v. Spear, 98 Me. 542, 57 Atl. 881, 99 Am St. Rep. 424; Concord Iron & Metal Co. v. Couch, 75 N. H. 593, 73 Atl. 301; Yegen v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co., 19 N. D. 70, 121 N. W. 205. But see Ayers v. Farwell, 196 Mass. 349, 82 N. E. 35, holding that one may maintain replevin in a state court to obtain possession of the property of a bankrupt, after the adjudication in bankruptcy, but before anything else has been done to obtain possession of his property in the federal courts. And see Exler v. Wickes Bros., 263 Pa. 150, 106 Atl. 233.

[76] Southern v. Fisher, 6 S. C. 345, 16 N. B. R. 414; Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

[77] Kimberling v. Hartly, 1 McCrary, 136, 1 Fed. 571.

[78] Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., 8 Biss. 380, Fed. Cas. No. 14,259.

[79] In re Stringer (D. C.) 230 Fed. 177, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44.

[80] J. B. McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Solanas, 106 Fed. 145, 45 C. C. A. 253, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442, dissenting opinion of Shelby, J. The opinion of the majority of the court was based on the theory that the fund or property in question was not a part of the assets of the estate in bankruptcy. See Smith v. Berman, 8 Ga. App. 262, 68 S. E. 1014. But a court of bankruptcy cannot, by a summary order, require a trustee to pay a judgment for costs rendered against him in another jurisdiction, where there are no funds of the estate in his hands. In re Howard, 130 Fed. 1004, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

As to suits in which the object is to recover damages from the trustee personally, it is ruled that he is not liable to suit in a state court for any acts done in the performance of his duty under the orders of the court of bankruptcy.[81] But on the other hand he may be sued for damages for any wrongful acts which were entirely beyond his authority or duty and which resulted in injury to third persons.[82] Conversely, for such acts the estate of the bankrupt is not liable, but only the trustee individually.[83] Finally, in his administration of the property, the trustee in subject to the police regulations of the state. Thus, the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy over the estate of the bankrupt does not exclude the jurisdiction of the state courts to entertain an action for the abatement of a liquor nuisance on property of the estate, that being a matter of police regulation, which does not interfere with the proper jurisdiction of the federal court.[84]

§ 397. Same; Leave of Court.—Under the former bankruptcy law, it was held that an assignee in bankruptcy could not be sued in a state court unless upon leave first obtained from the court of bankruptcy under which he was acting.[85] And the same rule has been applied under the present statute to suits against trustees in bankruptcy, where the object of the suit is to recover or reclaim specific property claimed by the trustee to constitute part of the estate in his hands and which he has reduced to possession.[86] A suit of this character brought against him without leave may be enjoined, at his request, by the bankruptcy court,[87] or, if leave to sue was improvidently granted, it may be revoked by the court of bankruptcy on being fully advised of all the facts.[88] But if the [82] Berman v. Smith, 171 Fed. 735, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662. An action lies against a trustee in bankruptcy for willful injury to creditors of the estate, resulting from his omission or improper performance of his duties as to notifying them of meetings, or retaining sufficient funds to provide for their known but undetermined claims. Russell v. Phelps, 42 Mich. 377, 4 N. W. 1.

[81] Wood v. Cummings, 197 Mass. 80, 83 N. E. 318.

[83] Adams v. Meyers, 1 Sawy. 306, 8 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 62.

[84] Radford v. Thornell, 81 Iowa, 709, 45 N. W. 890.

[85] Price v. Price, 4 Hughes, 438, 48 Fed. 823.

[86] In re Russell, 101 Fed. 248, 41 C. C. A. 323, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; Turrentine v. Blackwood, 125 Ala. 436, 28 South. 95, 82 Am. St. Rep. 254; Carney v. Averill, 110 Me. 172, 85 Ala. 494.

[87] Lloyd v. Ball, 77 Fed. 365.

[88] In re Schermerhorn, 145 Fed. 341, 76 C. C. A. 215, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507. Where the bankruptcy court had granted leave for the institution of a foreclosure suit after the election of the trustee, so that the state court's jurisdiction over the parties had not attached before the property came into the possession of the bankruptcy court, and it appeared that there were sufficient assets to pay the mortgage debt sought to be foreclosed, as well as the two prior mortgages, but that the validity and amounts due on the three mortgages were disputed, and the same issue would be presented as to the prior mortgages as was involved in the mortgage on which foreclosure was begun, it was object of the suit is only to establish a lien or recover a money judgment, and it does not seek in any way to disturb the trustee's possession of property in his hands, or to interfere with or contravene the proceedings of the courts of bankruptcy, there is authority in support of the view that it may be maintained without leave of the bankruptcy court,[89] especially in view of the act of Congress which permits receivers appointed by the federal courts to be sued without previous leave,[90] which certainly applies to receivers in bankruptcy,[91] and may easily be extended by analogy so as to include trustees.

§ 398. Enjoining Proceedings Against Trustee.—Since the possession of property of a bankrupt by his trustee is the possession of the court of bankruptcy, and that possession cannot be lawfully disturbed or ousted by any person without the permission of the court, the court has undoubted power and jurisdiction to enjoin any proceeding intended to take specific property out of the hands of the trustee.[92] And a similar rule applies to any proceeding which would seriously interfere with the administration of the estate in bankruptcy or cause unnecessary loss to creditors, as, for example, a suit in ejectment to recover premises leased to the bankrupt and which the receiver in bankruptcy continues to occupy for the purpose of closing up the business of the bankrupt.[93] But the court will not stay suits proceeding in the state courts between different creditors of the bankrupt, when the trustee in bankruptcy already has possession of the property which is the subject-matter of such suits, and cannot be bound or in any way affected by the results of such litigation.[94] And where a suit in equity is pending in another court to establish a lien on a fund in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy, it is doubtful whether that court has jurisdiction to restrain the trustee from distributing the fund to creditors, pending the determination of the suit, probably the better rule requiring the complainant to resort to the court of bankruptcy for an order to that effect.[95] held that the further prosecution of the foreclosure proceedings should be stayed. In re Locust Building Co. (D. C.) 272 Fed. 988, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136.

[89] Gardner v. Planters' Nat. Bank of Honey Grove, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 572, 118 S. W. 1146; In re Smith (D. C.) 121 Fed. 1014, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603.

[90] Act Cong. August 13, 1888, 25 Stat. 436.

[91] In re Kanter & Cohen, 121 Fed. 984, 58 C. C. A. 260, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372.

[92] In re Schermerhorn, 145 Fed. 341, 76 C. C. A. 215, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; Lloyd v. Ball, 77 Fed. 365; In re Russell, 101 Fed. 248, 41 C. C. A. 323, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re People's Mail S. S. Co., 3 Ben. 226, 2 N. B. R. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 10,970; Hewett v. Norton, 1 Woods, 68, 13 N. B. R. 276, Fed. Cas. No. 6,441; In re Miller, 6 Biss. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 9,551; Wagner v. Mt. Carmel Iron Works (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 80, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[93] In re Chambers, 98 Fed. 865, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537.

[94] Main v. Bromley, 6 Fed. 477.

[95] Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome

§ 399. Garnishment of Trustee.—Like a receiver in equity or an assignee in insolvency, a trustee in bankruptcy cannot be required, by the process of garnishment, to account to a judgment creditor of the bankrupt with respect to money or property in his hands as such trustee, for it is in the custody of the law and under the control of the court of bankruptcy alone, and moreover the trustee does not hold as the debtor or the agent of the bankrupt, but adversely to him.[96] So also with respect to garnishment proceedings instituted by one holding a judgment or other claim against a creditor of the bankrupt estate. Neither money in the hands of the trustee which is distributable in the form of dividends, nor money payable under a composition agreement, can be reached or tied up by the process of attachment or garnishment from another court.[97] And this is true even after a dividend has been declared, the precise sum ascertained to which the particular creditor will be entitled, and the trustee ordered to pay him that sum. Still a judgment creditor of that creditor cannot obtain satisfaction of his claim by garnishment of such distributive share. For it remains within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, not only until its payment to the creditor is ordered, but until it has actually been paid to him.[98]

§ 400. Nature and Form of Remedy.—If the trustee in bankruptcy brings his action in the court of bankruptcy, it will be governed by the ordinary rules of procedure in the federal courts, such as that which preserves the distinction between legal and equitable causes of action, and if the suit is essentially one of equitable cognizance, it will be triable by the court without a jury.[99] On the other hand, if he goes into the state courts, he must bring an action recognized by the state laws as appro-

Iron Co., 99 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

[96] Colby v. Coates, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 558; Lord v. Meachem, 32 Minn. 66, 19 N. W. 346; Oliver v. Smith, 5 Mass. 183; Field v. Jones, 11 Ga. 413; Com. v. Hide & Leather Ins. Co., 119 Mass. 155. But see In re Kranich, 182 Fed. 849, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50. It appears that a judgment creditor of the bankrupt may maintain garnishment proceedings against the trustee, when the latter has collected a note after it had been set apart to the bankrupt as exempt. Barker-Bond Lumber Co. v. Whaley, 117 Va. 642, 86 S. E. 160.

[97] In re Kohlsaat, 18 N. B. R. 570, Fed. Cas. No. 7,918.

[98] In re Cunningham, 19 N. B. R. 276, Fed. Cas. No. 3,478.

[99] Dokken v. Page, 147 Fed. 438, 77 C. C. A. 674, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228. But in bankruptcy cases, as in others, the Act of March 3, 1915, 38 Stat. 956 (Comp. St. 1916, §§ 1251a–1251c), applies, which provides that, when a suit at law should have been brought in equity or a suit in equity at law, the court shall order any necessary amendment, and that any party shall have the right at any stage of the action to amend so as to obviate the objection that the suit was not brought on the right side of the court.

priate to secure the relief for which he asks,[100] and he will be bound by the rules of procedure in the state courts.[101]

When the action is to recover the value of a preferential transfer of property by the bankrupt, assumpsit is an appropriate form of action.[102] For the conditional obligation of the creditor to make restitution in case the debtor is adjudged bankrupt within four months and the trustee elects to sue, gives rise to a quasi contract sufficient to sustain this form of action. An action of tort is also suitable, and is the remedy perhaps more usually adopted, but the tort may be waived.[103] If the action concerns goods in the possession of a third person, but claimed as assets of the estate in bankruptcy, the trustee may maintain the action of replevin.[104] If the object of the suit is to recover the value of property transferred by the bankrupt in fraud of the act or for the purpose of hindering or defrauding his creditors, the proper form of action is trover.[105] But in the case of a sale of the debtor's property under attachment, if the trustee desires to pursue the attaching creditor, the officer making the sale, and the purchaser at the sale, on the ground that the attachment was dissolved by the debtor's adjudication in bankruptcy and that the defendants had notice thereof, the proper form of action is trespass, and not trover.[106] A suit by a trustee in bankruptcy against a mortgagee of [100] McCormick v. Page, 96 Ill. App. 447. And see Day v. Luna Park Co., 174 Ill. App. 477.

[101] Bacon v. George, 206 Mass. 566, 92 N. E. 721. In a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of the bankrupt, the trustee must bring his case within the rules of pleading and proof prescribed by the statutes and decisions of the state wherein the suit is brought. Coleman v. Hagey, 252 Mo. 102, 158 S. W. 829.

[102] Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Chicago, 174 Ill. App. 339, affirmed, Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. National Storage Co., 260 Ill. 485, 103 N. E. 227. See McCulloch v. Davenport Savings Bank (D. C.) 226 Fed. 309, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765. In an action to recover a preference given a creditor within four months before the adjudication of bankruptcy, where the value of the property converted is certain and known and properly alleged, the action may be considered as arising upon an implied contract, so that garnishment may issue. State v. Superior Court for King County, 105 Wash. 676, 178 Pac. 827. See Parker v. Sherman, 212 Fed. 917, 129 C. C. A. 437, holding that property transferred by a bankrupt so as to effect a preference, or its value, may be recovered by a suit in equity.

[103] Reber v. Ellis Bros., 185 Fed. 313, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; Edwards v. Schillinger Bros. Co., 153 Ill. App. 219.

[104] Gordon v. Farrington, 46 Mich. 420, 9 N. W. 456; Godwin v. Tuttle, 70 Or. 424, 141 Pac. 1120. And see, supra, § 316.

[105] Lyon v. Clark, 129 Mich. 381, 88 N. W. 1046; Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955; Chickering v. Raymond, 15 Ill. 362; Carr v. Gale, 3 Woodb. & M. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 2,435. See Shuman v. Fleckenstein, 4 Sawy. 174, 15 N. B. R. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 12,826; Brooke v. McCracken, 10 N. B. R. 461, Fed. Cas. No. 1,932; Philoon v. Babbitt, 119 Me. 172, 109 Atl. 817. And see, supra, § 316. One receiving corporate checks for an officer's individual liability, under circumstances which would put him on notice, is liable to the corporation, whether or not the rights of creditors intervene, and hence, on the bankruptcy of the corporation, its trustee may maintain an action for the conversion. Heig v. Caspary, 191 App. Div. 560, 181 N. Y. Supp. 633.

[106] Wallace v. Camp, 200 Pa. St. 220, 49 Atl. 942. See Gaytes v. American, 5

the bankrupt to recover possession of property taken by the mortgagee under an alleged invalid mortgage is an independent and plenary suit by the trustee, and the mortgagee, answering to the merits, thereby admits the trustee's capacity to sue.[107]

The trustee may also, of course, have such other remedies as are available to any ordinary litigant. Thus, if property seized by the marshal has been surrendered to a claimant on a forthcoming bond, and the title of the claimant is finally adjudged invalid, but he is then insolvent, the trustee may proceed directly on the bond.[108] He may also maintain a writ of error to reverse a judgment rendered against the bankrupt.[109] But a refund of taxes formerly paid by the bankrupt and ordered by the state legislature to be restored to him, cannot be enforced by mandamus against the state auditor.[110] And the trustee in bankruptcy of a tenant in common will not be allowed to sue in a state court for partition, when the provisions of the state laws and those of the bankruptcy act, which would be applicable to the resulting sale, are so irreconcilable that a conflict of jurisdiction would inevitably arise between the state court and the court of bankruptcy.[111]

§ 401. Suits in Equity by Trustee.—A trustee in bankruptcy is by no means limited to actions at law for such aid as he needs in collecting the assets of the estate, but may also bring a bill in equity, in the proper court, when the case is properly one of equitable cognizance.[112] Thus, the trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation seeking to recover from a stockholder because of the issuance to him of stock in exchange for property at an overvaluation, is exercising the rights of a creditor armed with process and must sue in equity.[113] So, trustees in bankruptcy may re-

Biss. 86, 14 N. B. R. 141, Fed. Cas. No. 5,286; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Chicago, 174 Ill. App. 339. Compare Withoft v. Western Meat Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 986.

[107] In re Federal Contracting Co., 212 Fed. 688, 129 C. C. A. 224, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381.

[108] Storrs v. Engel, 3 Hughes, 414, 19 N. B. R. 90, Fed. Cas. No. 13,494.

[109] Day v. Laflin, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 280. And see supra, § 193.

[110] Graham v. Norton, 15 Wall. 427, 21 L. Ed. 177.

[111] Lindsay v. Runkle, 82 Ohio St. 325, 92 N. E. 489, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 659, 137 Am. St. Rep. 781.

[112] In re Plant (D. C.) 148 Fed. 37, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272. But see In re Beihl (D. C.) 197 Fed. 870, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310. A trustee in bankruptcy may maintain a suit for the appointment of a receiver and for the marshalling of the assets of the defendant corporation, where it appears that it was a mere dummy and nothing more than an agent of the bankrupt, its assets having always been (at least equitably) the bankrupt's, and such assets being in danger of being dissipated and fraudulently made away with. Hardy v. Oregon Eilers Music House, 99 Or. 340, 195 Pac. 563. So a trustee in bankruptcy may maintain a bill to subject the bankrupt's interest in a testamentary trust estate to the payment of the bankrupt's creditors. Forbes v. Snow (Mass.) 131 N. E. 299.

[113] Courtney v. Youngs, 202 Mich. 384, 168 N. W. 441. As to suits to recover unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock of the bankrupt corporation, see Shiffer v. Akenbrook (Ind. App.) 130 N. E. 241; Kaye v. Metz (Cal.) 198 Pac. 1047.

sort to a bill in equity in the federal court to protect their right to the possession of property belonging to the bankrupt, as against one claiming a right to a portion of it and who interfered with the efforts of the trustees to obtain possession of any of it.[114] A complaint or petition by the trustee, addressed to the bankruptcy court in the exercise of its equity powers, praying an accounting for damages resulting from the appointment of a receiver, which was secured through imposition on the court, is not beyond the equitable jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[115] And if the trustee desires the reformation of a contract for a conditional sale to the bankrupt, he can only obtain this relief upon a bill regularly filed.[116]

But he must pursue appropriate remedies in all cases, and not resort to equity when he has a plain and adequate remedy at law, nor seek an injunction, receivership, or other equitable relief, where the proper course is to bring trover or replevin, or where a simple money judgment will give him all the relief to which he is entitled.[117] Where the object is to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or recover the value of property fraudulently transferred by the debtor, a bill in equity in the form of a creditor's bill may be an appropriate form of action,[118] though, as stated in the preceding section, if the trustee seeks merely to recover the value of property so transferred, trover will lie. In the case of an alleged preferential payment by the bankrupt, where no actual fraud is charged, and there is no demand for the cancellation or setting aside of any conveyance, it is thought that a bill in equity will not lie, the case being one for an action at law as for money had and received,[119] though some of the [114] Atherton v. Beaman (D. C.) 256 Fed. 871, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631.

[115] In re Veler, 249 Fed. 633, 161 C. C. A. 543, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[116] In re Bondurant Hardware Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 247, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308.

[117] In re Oregon Iron Works, 4 Sawy. 169, 17 N. B. R. 404, Fed. Cas. No. 10,562; Sessler v. Nemcof (D. C.) 183 Fed. 656, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618. Where the liability of stockholders of a bankrupt corporation on their unpaid stock subscriptions is unconditional, and an order of the bankruptcy court for payment of the subscriptiions is not a condition precedent to their liability, the trustee cannot maintain a bill in the bankruptcy court against the stockholders, on the theory of avoiding a multiplicity of suits, but the proper remedy is a separate action at law against each stockholder. Kelley v. Gill, 245 U. S. 116, 38 Sup. Ct. 38, 62 L. Ed. 185, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421. But where defendant declared a forfeiture under a contract providing for the construction of a railroad by the bankrupts, it was held that, on a suit for an accounting by the trustee of the bankrupts, in which general relief was prayed, the court had authority to grant relief on account of the forfeiture of property not included in the contract, and the trustee was not required to bring an action at law for conversion: Stennick v. Jones, 252 Fed. 345, 164 C. C. A. 269.

[118] Stotesbury v. Cadwallader, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 281, Fed. Cas. No. 13,498; Taylor v. Rasch, 5 N. B. R. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 13,801; Simpson v. Western Hardware & Metal Co. (D. C.) 227 Fed. 304, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851; McCabe v. Guido, 116 Miss. 858, 77 South. 801; Weidhorn v. Levi, 253 U. S. 268, 40 Sup. Ct. 534, 64 L. Ed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493.

[119] Simpson v. Western Hardware &

federal courts justify the maintenance of a bill in equity in this case on the ground that it is analogous to a creditor's suit to vacate a fraudulent conveyance.[120] And where the trustee in bankruptcy is proceeding against the officers and directors of a corporation to recover preferential payments and sums received by them as the result of a conspiracy, and the transactions necessitate the marshalling of assets, he may sue in equity, as the remedy at law in such a case would be inadequate.[121]

§ 402. Summary Proceedings in Court of Bankruptcy.—When the trustee seeks to recover property of the bankrupt which is in the hands of a third person, who makes no claim of title to it in his own right, he need not resort to a plenary suit, but may institute summary proceedings in the court of bankruptcy by a simple petition and order to show cause.[122] This is the case where the third person holds the property as the agent or bailee of the bankrupt, not pretending himself to be the owner,[123] or where the object of the proceeding is to reach surplus income in the hands of a testamentary trustee,[124] or where the person holding the property is a mere cover or receptacle for it, for the purpose of concealing it and placing it beyond the reach of the bankrupt's creditors,[125] providing, in the latter case, that the property can be followed

Metal Co. (D. C.) 227 Fed. 304, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851; Maxwell v. Davis Trust Co., 69 W. Va. 276, 71 S. E. 270; Reber v. Ellis Bros. (D. C.) 185 Fed. 313, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; Edwards v. Schillinger Bros., 153 Ill. App. 219; People's Bank of Mobile v. McAleer, 204 Ala. 101, 85 South. 413; Irons v. Bias, 85 W. Va. 493, 102 S. E. 126.

[120] Pond v. New York Nat. Exchange Bank (D. C.) 124 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; Parker v. Black (D. C.) 143 Fed. 560, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Parker v. Sherman, 212 Fed. 917, 129 C. C. A. 437.

[121] Johnson v. Harrison, 199 Mich. 221, 165 N. W. 773.

[122] In re Goldstein, 216 Fed. 887, 133 C. C. A. 91; Bank of Brookings v. Aurora Grain Co., 43 S. D. 591, 181 N. W. 909; In re Fogelman, 188 Fed. 755, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; In re Holland, 176 Fed. 624, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835; In re Holbrook Shoe & Leather Co., 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511; In re Wiesen Bros., 138 Fed. 164, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27; In re Breslauer, 121 Fed. 910, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33. And see supra, § 22. If no adverse claim to money or property was made at the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed, the title thereto passes to the trustee on his appointment, and the court has jurisdiction to require its surrender to him by a summary order, notwithstanding any adverse right subsequently asserted by the party in possession. In re Davis, 119 Fed. 950, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670.

[123] Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; Wayne Knitting Mills v. Nugent, 104 Fed. 530, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Shea (D. C.) 211 Fed. 365, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697. Where a corporation is in bankruptcy, an officer of the corporation who has wrongfully retained some of its property may be summarily ordered to surrender it to the trustee, and it is immaterial that he personally did not submit to the court's jurisdiction. In re Auto Safety Signal Lamp Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 299, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17.

[124] In re Baudouine (D. C.) 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

[125] In re Eilers Music House (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 915, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526; In re Looschen Piano Case Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 93, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Hopkins, 229 Fed. 378, 143 C. C. A. 498, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158; Salsburg v. Blackford, 204 Fed. 438, 122 C. C. A. 624, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; In re Friedman (D. C.) 153 Fed. 939, 18 into his hands and sufficiently identified to enable the marshal to take possession of it without mistake.[126] So, where there is a covinous contrivance between the bankrupt and others to embezzle the estate for the benefit of the bankrupt and his preferred creditors, the court may interpose by injunction.[127] Again, where the bankrupt, after the filing of the petition, sells goods in his possession to one chargeable with knowledge of the fraudulent character of the transaction, the court of bankruptcy may compel the restitution of the property or its proceeds in a summary proceeding.[128] Likewise, money paid by a bankrupt to one of his creditors, after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, thus necessarily creating a preference, is recoverable by the trustee in a summary proceeding, without the need of resorting to a plenary suit.[129] And so also of money which was deposited to release an attachment, within the four months preceding the bankruptcy, and which was paid over to the attaching creditor after the adjudication.[130] And the claim of a bank, asserting the right to set off the deposit of a bankrupt against an indebtedness to it, is not adverse in such sense as to require a plenary suit by the trustee, where the deposit was made after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[131] And so also where an insolvent debtor has made a gift of personal property to his wife, or given her a bill of sale, without any actual change of possession.[132] And attaching creditors may also be proceeded against summarily, when their levies constituted the act of bankruptcy on which the adjudication was based, or where made after the filing of the petition and with knowledge thereof.[133] And this applies also to an execution sale of the debtor's property, if held after the filing of the petition, and if the judgment creditor and the purchaser are chargeable with knowledge of the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings,[134] although if a sale on execution has been held and the proceeds

Am. Bankr. Rep. 712. But compare In re Mayer (D. C.) 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re Stevens, Fed. Cas. No. 13,390. A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction by summary order to direct the delivery of property to a trustee by a corporation which was formed by the bankrupt, with his near relatives as incorporators, to hold the property beyond the reach of his creditors. W. A. Liller Bldg. Co. v. Reynolds, 247 Fed. 90, 159 C. C. A. 308, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371.

[126] In re Jackier (D. C.) 179 Fed. 720, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790. See In re Rosenzweig (D. C.) 206 Fed. 360, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

[127] In re Connolly (D. C.) 100 Fed. 620, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 842; In re Smith, Fed. Cas. No. 12,993.

[128] In re Denson (D. C.) 195 Fed. 854, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158.

[129] In re R. & W. Skirt Co., 222 Fed. 256, 138 C. C. A. 67, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353; In re Leigh (D. C.) 208 Fed. 486, 31 Am. Bankr Rep. 379.

[130] In re O. L. Ward & Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 999, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

[131] Reed v. Barnett Nat. Bank of Jacksonville. 250 Fed. 983, 163 C. C. A. 233, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

[132] In re Pierce, 7 Biss. 426, 15 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 11,139; In re Norris, 177 Fed. 598, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[133] Bear v. Chase (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 920, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Graessler & Reichwald, 154 Fed. 478, 83 C. C. A. 304, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694.

[134] In re Breslauer, 121 Fed. 910, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33.

paid over to the judgment creditor before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, the mere fact that the judgment and sale are voidable under the bankruptcy act will not enable the trustee to recover the proceeds in a summary proceeding; his remedy is a plenary suit to recover the proceeds as a preference.[135] It is also held that a person claiming property as collateral security pledged to him by the bankrupt may be summarily ordered to surrender it, if the referee decides that the title to it is in the estate.[136] And so a proceeding to recover or reduce the amount of money paid by a bankrupt to his counsel, in contemplation of bankruptcy and for services to be rendered therein, may be summary.[137]

Further, it is very important to be noticed that, if the court of bankruptcy is in the actual possession of any given property, through its officers, such as the referee, a receiver, or a trustee in bankruptcy, it has jurisdiction to determine in a summary proceeding all claims of third persons asserting ownership of it or liens upon it, whether hostile and adverse or not.[138] If property once in the possession or custody of the trustee in bankruptcy is taken from him by an adverse claimant by force or fraud or trick, no doubt the court has power to vindicate its authority by summary orders for its restoration. But if an agent or representative of the trustee (such as a watchman placed in charge) peaceably surrenders the possession of the property without force or threats, merely yielding to the demand of the adverse claimant, it seems that the trustee has lost the possession which would entitle him to protection by summary order of the bankruptcy court.[139]

On similar principles, where a claimant of property and the receiver or trustee in bankruptcy have entered into an agreement concerning the disposition to be made of it, the court of bankruptcy may enforce compliance by either party, without any independent suit for that purpose, and by mere summary order.[140] But jurisdiction to foreclose a mortgage [135] In re Resnek, 167 Fed. 574, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740.

[136] In re Belfast Mesh Underwear Co., 185 Fed. 834. But see In re Bacon, 210 Fed. 129, 126 C. C. A. 643, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777.

[137] In re Wood, 210 U. S. 246, 28 Sup. Ct. 621, 52 L. Ed. 1046, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[138] Gray v. Gudger, 260 Fed. 931, 171 C. C. A. 573, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Joseph R. Marquette, Jr., Inc., 254 Fed. 419, 166 C. C. A. 51, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; Lawhead v. Monroe Bldg. Co., 252 Fed. 758, 164 C. C. A. 598, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; In re Dashiel, 246 Fed. 366, 158 C. C. A. 430, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re Midtown Contracting Co. (D. C.) 238 Fed. 871, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; Cohen v. Nixon & Wright (D. C.) 236 Fed. 407, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re Schmick Handle & Lumber Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 446, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494; In re Flanigan (D. C.) 228 Fed. 339, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807; In re Rathman, 183 Fed. 913, 106 C. C. A. 253, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; In re Plymouth Elevator Co. (D. C.) 191 Fed. 633. See Johnston v. Spencer, 195 Fed. 215, 115 C. C. A. 167, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; Shea v. Lewis, 206 Fed. 877, 124 C. C. A. 537.

[139] In re Mid-Valley Coal Co., 251 Fed. 815, 163 C. C. A. 649, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 301.

[140] In re Hollingsworth & Whitney on the estate of the bankrupt, at the instance of the mortgagee, is not included in the powers to be exercised summarily,[141] nor can the court thus determine the rights of a third person who is apparently a joint owner of certain property with the bankrupt, although the trustee alleges that he is only nominally connected with it and has no real financial interest in it,[142] nor is this an appropriate proceeding for the trustee of a bankrupt corporation who seeks to compel a stockholder to pay the corporate debts because of his alleged participation in a fraudulent overvaluation of the corporation's assets in payment for stock.[143]

The summary jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy may not only be invoked at the instance of the trustee, but also against him, since he is an officer of the court and always subject to its lawful orders. Thus, if the judgment of a competent court has decided that a fund in his hands does not belong to the estate in bankruptcy, but to a third person, he may be summarily ordered to pay it over.[144]

§ 403. Same; Against Adverse Claimants.—A stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings, setting up an adverse title to property which is claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy as assets of the estate, cannot be compelled to submit his claim to adjudication in a summary proceeding in the court of bankruptcy, provided his claim is made with the apparent intention of defending it in good faith and is not merely colorable, but is entitled to be heard in a plenary suit, at law or in equity as the case may require.[145] Of course, however, this is a right which the claimant may waive, and he may do so by surrendering the disputed property to the trustee for sale and presenting to the bankruptcy court his claim

Co., 242 Fed. 753, 155 C. C. A. 341, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 678.

[141] In re Casey, 10 Blatchf. 376, 8 N. B. R. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 2,495.

[142] In re Brodbine, 93 Fed. 643, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53.

[143] In re Haley, 158 Fed. 74, 85 C. C. A. 404; In re Howe Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 524, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

[144] In re Howard, 135 Fed. 721, 68 C. C. A. 359, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 296; International Agricultural Corp. v. Sparks (D. C.) 250 Fed. 318, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[145] Smith v. Mason, 14 Wall. 419, 20 L. Ed. 748; In re Midtown Contracting Co., 243 Fed. 56, 155 C. C. A. 586, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578; Eisenberg v. Weisskopf, 258 Fed. 617, 170 C. C. A. 71, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; In re Phœnix Planing Mill (D. C.) 250 Fed. 898, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 143; In re Cotton (D. C.) 209 Fed. 124, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; Charles H. Brown Paint Co. v. Rockhold (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 139, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; First Nat. Bank v. Hopkins (C. C. A.) 199 Fed. 873, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434; In re Cantelo Mfg. Co., 201 Fed. 158, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; Johnston v. Spencer, 195 Fed. 215, 115 C. C. A. 167, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; In re Denson, 195 Fed. 854, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158; In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 194 Fed. 906; In re Mimms & Parham, 193 Fed. 276, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469; In re Big Cahaba Coal Co., 190 Fed. 900, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 910; In re Jackier, 179 Fed. 720, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790; Cooney v. Collins, 176 Fed. 189, 99 C. C. A. 543, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 840; In re Hersey, 171 Fed. 998, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; In re Driggs, 171 Fed. 897, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; In re Horgan, 158 Fed. 774, 86 C. C. A. 130, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 857; In re Edwards, 156 Fed. 794, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; In re Sunseri, 156 Fed. 103, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231; In re Davis against the proceeds,[146] or by answering the trustee's petition for the surrender of the property by defending on the merits without raising any objection to the jurisdiction of the court or referee.[147] But jurisdiction is not conferred by the appearance of the adverse claimant in answer to an order to show cause, merely for the purpose of filing an answer asserting his claim and his intention to contest the application.[148]

The case of a transfer or conveyance of property by the bankrupt which the trustee claims to have been fraudulent and void as against creditors, but which the grantee claims to have been in good faith and for a consideration, falls within this rule, and the issue cannot be tried in summary proceedings,[149] nor can that which is presented when the trustee seeks to recover money or property on the ground that the transaction constituted a preference voidable under the statute, and is met with a denial apparently interposed in good faith.[150] The wife of the bankrupt may be an adverse claimant, within this rule, if the law of the state removes the common-law disabilities of married women and gives them capacity to contract as if sole,[151] and the holder of an assignment of money due to the bankrupt from a third person at the date of the bankruptcy is an adverse claimant,[152] and so is a bank in which the bankrupt has money on deposit, but which claims the right to Tailoring Co., 144 Fed. 285, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486; In re New York Car Wheel Works, 132 Fed. 203, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60; In re Green, 108 Fed. 616, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; In re Sheinhaum, 107 Fed. 247, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; In re Baudouine, 101 Fed. 574, 41 C. C. A. 318, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; In re Cohn, 98 Fed. 75, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Mitchell v. McClure, 91 Fed. 621, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Staib, 3 Fed. 209; In re Griffith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 546; In re Fowler, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 215; In re Waitzfelder, 18 N. B. R. 260, Fed. Cas. No. 17,049; In re Bonesteel, 7 Blatchf. 175, 3 N. B. R. 517, Fed. Cas. No. 1,627; Ferguson v. Peckham, 6 N. B. R. 569, Fed. Cas. No. 4,741. As to an amendment, converting a summary proceeding into a plenary suit, see In re Boston-Cerrillos Mines Corporation, 206 Fed. 794, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

[146] In re Plymouth Elevator Co., 191 Fed. 633.

[147] In re Carrier, 48 Fed. 161; In re Emrich, 101 Fed. 231, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; People v. Brennan, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 666, 12 N. B. R. 567; In re Brantman, 244 Fed. 101, 156 C. C. A. 529, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18. Where a court of bankruptcy would have jurisdiction of a plenary suit by the trustee, the fact that he proceeds by petition as for a summary order is immaterial, if the parties appear and there is a full hearing on the merits, and in such case the proceeding will be treated as a plenary suit. In re Eilers Music House (C. C. A.) 274 Fed. 330.

[148] In re Walsh Bros., 163 Fed. 352, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; Board of Education of Salt Lake City v. Leary, 236 Fed. 521, 149 C. C. A. 573, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

[149] Camp v. Zellars, 94 Fed. 799, 36 C. C. A. 501; In re Tarbox, 185 Fed. 985, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432; In re Carter, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 162.

[150] In re Scherber, 131 Fed. 121, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; In re Adams, 130 Fed. 788, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; In re Keystone Press, 203 Fed. 710, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[151] Blumberg v. Ryan, 107 Fed. 673, 46 C. C. A. 552, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20; Shea v. Lewis, 206 Fed. 877, 124 C. C. A. 537, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[152] In re Lineberry, 183 Fed. 338, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164.

set off a debt due to it from the bankrupt,[153] and so is the surety on a bail-bond of the bankrupt, with whom the latter, before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, had deposited money to indemnify him against liability,[154] and a stockholder in the bankrupt corporation against whom the trustee is proceeding to compel him to pay the balance due on his subscription for stock.[155] An adverse claim, such as to require determination in a plenary proceeding, and not by a mere summary inquiry, is also presented by one who had obtained a lien on property of the bankrupt under such circumstances that it was not dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy;[156] by an execution creditor to whom the sheriff paid over the money collected under the levy, though this was done after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy;[157] by a receiver appointed by a state court of competent jurisdiction and who has property of the bankrupt in his possession;[158] by one claiming title to and the right of possession of land which is also claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy as assets of the estate;[159] by one who had contracted with the bankrupt for the purchase of land and now demands specific performance of the contract;[160] by a city which, under the terms of a contract for the removal of refuse, on its abandonment by the contractor, took possession of his plant for the purpose of continuing the work pending a new contract.[161] Where the Post Office Department had issued a "fraud order" against the bankrupt, and, pending a hearing on it, had ordered his mail impounded by the local postmaster, it was held that the postmaster's possession of the bankrupt's mail was so far adverse to the claim of the receiver in bankruptcy that the latter's demand for it could not be disposed of on a summary motion.[162] And the summary jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy does not extend to a [153] In re Gill, 190 Fed. 726, 111 C. C. A. 454, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 883; First Nat. Bank v. Hopkins, 199 Fed. 873, 118 C. C. A. 321, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434.

[154] In re Horgan, 158 Fed. 774, 86 C. C. A. 130, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 857; Jaquith v. Rowley, 188 U. S. 620, 23 Sup. Ct. 369, 47 L. Ed. 620, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525.

[155] In re Howe Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 193 Fed. 524, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; In re La Jolla Lumber & Mill Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 1004, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; In re Manufacturers' Box & Lumber Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 957, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763.

[156] American Trust & Savings Bank v. Ruppe, 237 Fed. 581, 150 C. C. A. 463, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; In re Goldberg & Sagman (D. C.) 232 Fed. 194, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736. But see In re Hansen (D. C.) 268 Fed. 904, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

[157] Stone-Ordean-Wells Co. v. Mark, 227 Fed. 975, 142 C. C. A. 433, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663; In re Cox-Rackley Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 367, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

[158] Martin v. Oliver, 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739; In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268.

[159] Peters v. Bowers, 61 Colo. 534, 158 Pac. 1101.

[160] Dreyer v. Perkins, 217 Fed. 889, 133 C. C. A. 599, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232.

[161] In re Dailey, 255 Fed. 529, 166 C. C. A. 597, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731.

[162] In re Rice (D. C.) 256 Fed. 858, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

re-examination of the amount of a fee paid by the bankrupt to his attorney, where the contract with the attorney was not made by the debtor in contemplation of bankruptcy,[163] nor to the question whether salaries voted and paid by the bankrupt corporation to its officers were illegal, the trustee seeking their return over the objection of such officers.[164] And the court has no summary jurisdiction to determine that the property and capital stock of a second corporation was the property of the bankrupt corporation.[165] And it should be noted that the fact that the value of the property in controversy may be small, will not warrant the bankruptcy court in summarily determining the question of the right and title to it.[166]

But on the other hand, where the trustee of a corporation in bankruptcy files a petition against two of its officers in their official capacity to compel them to account for the proceeds of sales of the corporation's stock and also to pay the balance due on their own shares, and it appears that they had controlled the corporation absolutely from its inception, the other incorporators and directors being mere dummies, they cannot be regarded as adverse claimants, in determining the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[167] And so, where a receiver in bankruptcy, with the consent of the court, has vacated premises of which a third person was claiming the right of possession, and the latter has thereupon resumed the possession, a subsequently appointed trustee of the estate cannot oust the possessor and get possession of the premises by a summary proceeding.[168] But it has been held that the court of bankruptcy may summarily require a person in possession to turn over property to the trustee, although held under a claim of title, where such title depends on a question of law and not of fact.[169]

§ 404. Same; Determination of Character of Claim.—Whenever a trustee in bankruptcy lays claim to money or property which is in the possession of a third person, and petitions for an order requiring its surrender to him, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to cite such person to show cause why he should not be required to yield up the money or property to the trustee.[170] And if the respondent denies that the property in question belongs to the estate in bankruptcy and sets up

[163] Tripp v. Mitschrich, 211 Fed. 424, 128 C. C. A. 96, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

[164] In re Franklin Brewing Co. (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 512, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7.

[165] Looschen Land & Building Co. v. Milson (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 359, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30.

[166] In re McCracken (D. C.) 234 Fed. 776, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

[167] In re Kornit Mfg. Co., 192 Fed. 392, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244. But see In re Spalding Cotton Mills, 193 Fed. 554.

[168] In re Rothschild, 154 Fed. 194, 83 C. C. A. 288, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

[169] In re Michaelis & Lindeman, 196 Fed. 718.

[170] In re Waukesha Water Co., 116 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

a claim of title in himself, the court has jurisdiction to inquire and determine whether or not such claim is genuine, really adverse, and interposed in good faith. If it shall determine that such claim is merely colorable or fictitious, frivolous on its face or plainly false, or manifestly pretended and without any foundation in law, it may proceed to make the order asked by the trustee; but on the other hand, if it shall be determined that the respondent's claim to the property is genuine and interposed in good faith and with the intention of supporting it, the court cannot proceed to inquire into the merits, but must dismiss the petition and remit the trustee to his remedy by a plenary suit.[171] In other words, if the respondent's plea sets forth facts showing that his claim is adverse and in good faith, the trustee should file a pleading denying the averments relating to this point, and an issue should be framed as to whether the claim pleaded is substantial or merely colorable, and this point should be decided on investigation; it is error simply to overrule the plea and proceed to judgment.[172] If there is nothing to impeach the good faith of the claim, and it is substantiated by verified pleadings or oral testimony, the issue cannot be heard summarily.[173] In fact, it has been said that it is only in clear cases, in which the proof is decisive, that the court of bankruptcy is justified in making a peremptory order for the surrender of property.[174]

An investigation of the facts may also disclose other reasons why a summary adjudication would be inappropriate, if indeed permissible at all. Thus, where a petitioner claimed a leasehold interest in certain lands and the ownership of certain structures thereon, and an adjudi-

[171] Courtney v. Shea, 225 Fed. 358, 140 C. C. A. 382, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753; In re Franklin Brewing Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 135, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663; In re Resnek, Shapiro & Co. (D. C.) 246 Fed. 879, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816; In re Markel (D. C.) 228 Fed. 926, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; In re Luken, 216 Fed. 890, 133 C. C. A. 94; In re Radley Steel Const. Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 462; Johnston v. Spencer, 195 Fed. 215, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; In re Ironclad Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 831, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490; In re Rathman, 183 Fed. 913, 106 C. C. A. 253, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; In re Norris, 177 Fed. 598, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Hayden, 172 Fed. 623, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764; In re Ellis Bros. Printing Co., 156 Fed. 430, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Gilroy & Bloomfield, 140 Fed. 733, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627; In re Kane, 131 Fed. 386, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Teschmacher & Mrazay, 127 Fed. 728, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547; In re Breslauer, 121 Fed. 910, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33; In re Baird, 116 Fed. 765, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

[172] In re Gill, 190 Fed. 726, 111 C. C. A. 454, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 883; In re Vocke (D. C.) 242 Fed. 963, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

[173] In re Kane (D. C.) 131 Fed. 386, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444. Where claimants of assets sought to be recovered by a bankrupt's trustee objected to summary proceedings, denied that they held possession for the bankrupt, and testified to facts which, if true, showed title and possession in themselves prior to the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, the court should dismiss the proceeding. In re Goldstein, 216 Fed. 889, 133 C. C. A. 93.

[174] In re Gilroy & Bloomfield (D. C.) 140 Fed. 733, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627.

cation of his title would require other parties to be brought in, his summary petition to restrain the trustee from selling such lands as belonging to the bankrupt cannot be granted, but that question should be left for determination in a plenary action.[175] And it has been pointed out that the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction to proceed in a summary manner to vest its receiver or the trustee with possession of property depends upon facts which may be disclosed from time to time, so that, while it may have jurisdiction of a summary proceeding at its institution, it may be ousted of that jurisdiction by claims interposed by third parties.[176]

§ 405. Joinder of Causes of Action.—A trustee in bankruptcy stands in the place of the creditors of the bankrupt, and has the same rights and may pursue the same remedies in their behalf as they would have been entitled to if there had been no adjudication of bankruptcy; and in a suit against the bankrupt and his transferees, to set aside alleged fraudulent conveyances of property, the trustee has the right to include all such matters and causes of action as might have been included by the creditors in a creditors' bill against the defendants.[177] Thus, a petition by the trustee against the bankrupt and one of his creditors, to procure the setting aside of a mortgage on land, a chattel mortgage, and a lease of real and personal property, all made by the bankrupt at different times to the defendant creditor, and alleged to be fraudulent as to other creditors, and to have been given and accepted with intent to prefer the creditor receiving the same, is not demurrable for multifariousness.[178] And so, a bill is not multifarious though brought to recover from several defendants different portions of the estate of the debtor, if the alleged illegal transfers were the result of a common purpose on the part of the defendants to dismember the estate.[179]

§ 406. Jurisdiction; Statutory Provisions.—The bankruptcy act provides that "the United States circuit courts shall have jurisdiction of all controversies at law and in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy, between trustees as such and adverse claimants concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustees, in the same manner and to the same extent only as though bankruptcy proceedings had not been instituted, and such controversies had been between [175] In re Moose River Lumber Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 409, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

[176] Morgan v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 167 Wis. 48, 166 N. W. 777.

[177] Norcross v. Nathan, 99 Fed. 414, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; Spaulding v. McGovern, 10 N. B. R. 188, Fed. Cas. No. 13,217.

[178] Carter v. Hobbs, 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; Hunt v. Doyal, 128 Ga. 416, 57 S. E. 489.

[179] Van Kleeck v. Miller, 19 N. B. R. 484, Fed. Cas. No. 16,860.

the bankrupts and such adverse claimants." [180] This is to be understood, not as a grant of jurisdiction to the circuit courts (or the district courts as their successors), but as a limitation upon the jurisdiction which they might otherwise have claimed. It means that jurisdiction shall not be conferred on a federal court by the mere fact that a trustee in bankruptcy is a party to the action, so as to make the case one "arising under the laws of the United States," but that, to confer such jurisdiction, the requisite diversity of citizenship must have existed between the bankrupt and the other party to the suit.[181] The same section of the bankruptcy act then proceeds as follows: "Suits by the trustee shall only be brought or prosecuted in the courts where the bankrupt, whose estate is being administered by such trustee, might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted, unless by consent of the proposed defendant." [182] During the first few

[180] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 23a.

[181] It is the citizenship of the bankrupt and of the adverse claimant which determines the jurisdiction; the citizenship of the trustee is not material. The plain meaning of the statute seems to be that if the bankrupt and the adverse claimant could have invoked the jurisdiction of the federal court, so also may the trustee and the adverse claimant, but not otherwise. In other words, all suits which could not have been brought in the federal courts because the parties were citizens of the same state, or because the amount involved was not sufficient, are left to the same forum which would have had jurisdiction of them, and they are not to be maintained in a federal court merely because a trustee in bankruptcy is now substituted as a party instead of the bankrupt himself. The object of inserting this provision was undoubtedly this: It had been settled by the courts that any controversy involving the construction or application of the national bankruptcy law was a case "arising under the laws of the United States," and therefore one of which the federal circuit courts might take cognizance, either originally or on removal from a state court, without regard to the citizenship of the parties. See Burbank v. Bigelow, 92 U. S. 179, 23 L. Ed. 542; Lathrop v. Drake, 91 U. S. 516, 23 L. Ed. 414; Payson v. Coffin, 4 Dill. 386, Fed. Cas. No. 10,858; Noyes v. Willard, 1 Woods, 187, Fed. Cas. No. 10,374; Payson v. Dietz, 2 Dill. 504, 8 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 10,861; Olney v. Tanner, 19 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 10,506; Spaulding v. McGovern, 10 N. B. R. 188, Fed. Cas. No. 13,217; Flanders v. Abbey, 6 Biss. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 4,851; Branard v. Hartford, P. & F. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 1,003; Brown v. White, 16 Fed. 900; Hallack v. Tritch, 17 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 5,956. It would follow, therefore, that, without the restrictive provision of this clause of the act, all the litigation arising in the settlement of the estate would be thrown into the federal circuit courts (or into the district courts, since the abolition of the circuit courts), and the state courts would be deprived of the jurisdiction which they would have had over such cases if bankruptcy proceedings had not intervened. The purpose of the act, then, is to counteract this effect of the bankruptcy proceedings, and to restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts to those cases in which it would have existed before their commencement. In other words, the trustee must seek his remedy, or defend actions against him, in the same courts which would have been open to the bankrupt, whether those courts be state or national courts. And adverse claimants cannot be brought into the federal courts, nor seek those courts of their own accord, unless a sufficient ground of jurisdiction appears independently of the bankruptcy of the other party. Of course these remarks are subject to the qualification (as will appear in the text above) that, since the amendments to the bankruptcy act, state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction of suits by trustees to avoid fraudulent conveyances or recover preferences.

[182] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 23b.

years after the enactment of the statute, the inferior federal courts were disposed to find the definition of their jurisdiction in the broad provisions of the seventh clause of the second section of the statute, that the courts of bankruptcy shall have jurisdiction to "cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money, and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided," and they held that the provision above quoted from the twenty-third section of the act related only to the venue of actions,[183] or that it was a limitation upon the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States, but not upon that of the courts of bankruptcy.[184] But this theory was expressly rejected by the Supreme Court of the United States, which ruled that the twenty-third section was intended to define and limit the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy, and that that section operated as an exception to, or limitation upon, the more general expressions of the second section; so that jurisdiction of civil actions at law and plenary suits in equity, to determine title to and reduce to possession alleged assets of the bankrupt, could not be claimed under the second section if not within the terms of the twenty-third.[185] But this section has since been amended by Congress so as to give to the courts of bankruptcy and the state courts concurrent jurisdiction of suits by trustees to set aside fraudulent conveyances or to recover preferences.[186] This legislation is not unconstitutional as imposing on state courts jurisdiction over causes of action which arise solely under the constitution and laws of the United States.[187] The final clause of the twenty-third section, that "the United States circuit courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the courts of bankruptcy, within their respective territorial limits, of the offenses enumerated in this act," has no applicability to civil actions, the "offenses enumerated" meaning the crimes described elsewhere in the act.[188] Since the abolition of the circuit courts, this criminal jurisdiction is vested in the district courts, but not in their capacity as courts of bankruptcy, but in their capacity as courts having general jurisdiction for the trial of criminal offenses under the laws of the United States.

[183] In re Woodbury, 98 Fed. 833, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

[184] Louisville Trust Co. v. Marx, 98 Fed. 456, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450; Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546; In re Newberry, 97 Fed. 24, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117.

[185] Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1175, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163.

[186] Act Cong. Feb. 3, 1903, 32 Stat. 797; Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

[187] French v. R. P. Smith & Sons Co., 81 Minn. 341, 84 N. W. 44.

[188] Goodier v. Barnes, 94 Fed. 798, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

§ 407. Same; Jurisdiction of Court of Bankruptcy.—In view of the specific limitations upon the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy set forth in the preceding section, it is no longer held that the mere fact that the plaintiff in a suit is a trustee in bankruptcy is sufficient to give jurisdiction to a federal court,[189] but on the contrary, that such court has no jurisdiction of a formal action at law or a plenary suit in equity between a trustee in bankruptcy and an adverse claimant, unless the action might have been maintained in that court by the bankrupt himself, if bankruptcy proceedings had not intervened.[190] The exceptions to this rule are found in cases where the trustee's suit is to recover a preference unlawfully given or to set aside a fraudulent transfer of property. If the claim advanced in his suit is founded on either of these grounds, it is within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[191] Thus, the trustee of a bankrupt corporation may sue in the bankruptcy court to recover unearned dividends illegally paid to a stockholder,[192] but he cannot, in that forum, maintain an action against directors of the corporation on an allegation that the defendants, by false pretenses, have withdrawn and appropriated its funds.[193]

Since the statute speaks of "suits" by the trustee, we must distinguish between such proceedings as are properly called "suits" or "controversies at law or in equity" and those which are merely "proceedings in bankruptcy" or administrative measures in the process of collecting and distributing the estate. Of the latter character, and therefore maintainable in the court of bankruptcy, is a proceeding to determine the relative rights of the bankrupt and the pledgee of certain of his property;[194] a proceeding to compel the vendor of a number of lots to the bankrupt, holding a purchase-money mortgage, to fulfill his agreement to release given lots on proportional payments, the trustee desiring to exercise the right of redemption as to certain of the lots;[195] or a bill by the trustee to protect his possession of property of the bankrupt, threatened by one who claims ownership of a part of it.[196] So a contract made with a receiver in bankruptcy, by which a third person is allowed the use of machinery or equipment belonging to the bankrupt for a temporary purpose, on an agreement to return it when that pur-

189 McEldowney v. Card, 193 Fed. 475, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 937.

190 Brumby v. Jones, 141 Fed. 318, 72 C. C. A. 466, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578; Plaut v. Gorham Mfg. Co., 174 Fed. 852, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; Real Estate Trust Co. v. Thompson, 112 Fed. 945, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; In re Vadner (D. C.) 259 Fed. 614. Compare In re Hammond, 98 Fed. 845.

191 Milkman v. Arthe, 223 Fed. 507, 139 C. C. A. 55, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

192 Seegmiller v. Day, 249 Fed. 177, 161 C. C. A. 213, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317.

193 Park v. Cameron, 237 U. S. 616, 35 Sup. Ct. 719, 59 L. Ed. 1147, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 849.

194 In re Miller Pure Rye Distilling Co., 214 Fed. 189, 130 C. C. A. 537.

195 In re East Stroudsburg Supply & Construction Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 356, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

196 Atherton v. Beaman (D. C.) 256 Fed. 871, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631.

pose is accomplished and meantime to give security against loss or damage, may be enforced by appropriate proceedings in the court of bankruptcy.[197] So again, a proceeding by the trustee of a bankrupt corporation to have an assessment ordered on unpaid stock is not a "suit" within the meaning of the statute, but is an administrative proceeding within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, since it does not require notice to nor the presence of the stockholders, whose personal rights are not involved, but remain to be determined in subsequent suits to collect the assessment if made.[198] But on the other hand, where the liability of stockholders of the bankrupt corporation for the unpaid balances of their stock is unconditional, so that an assessment or order by the bankruptcy court is not a condition precedent, the trustee cannot maintain a bill against them collectively in the court of bankruptcy, but must proceed by separate suit at law against each stockholder in the court having jurisdiction in each case.[199] But the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction of a controversy between persons, each claiming the right to a conveyance of land as a purchaser from the trustee in bankruptcy, since, while the title remains in the trustee, its jurisdiction with respect to such lands is exclusive.[200] On similar principles, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction of proceedings to recover property in the possession of a receiver appointed by a state court,[201] or of an application for the rejection of a claim and, in addition thereto, to require the creditor to repay to the trustee the amount of a dividend previously paid on the claim,[202] or of a proceeding to reexamine and reduce a payment made by an intending bankrupt to an attorney for services to be rendered in the bankruptcy proceedings.[203] But it is also true that the provision of the statute which allows the court of bankruptcy to take jurisdiction of controversies with the consent of the proposed defendant relates only to plenary actions, and does not enlarge such portion of the court's jurisdiction as may be exercised summarily, even with the consent of the respondent.[204]

[197] Board of Road Com'rs of Monroe County v. Keil, 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[198] In re Newfoundland Syndicate (D. C.) 196 Fed. 443, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119; In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co. (D. C.) 96 Fed. 945, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194.

[199] Kelley v. Gill, 245 U. S. 116, 38 Sup. Ct. 38, 62 L. Ed. 185, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[200] In re Henderson, 142 Fed. 568, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760. This decision was reversed (Henrie v. Henderson, 145 Fed. 316, 76 C. C. A. 196, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617), but on the ground that the sale to one of the contending parties had been confirmed and the price paid, though no deed made, before any controversy arose.

[201] In re Hecox (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 823, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314.

[202] Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

[203] In re Wood, 210 U. S. 246, 28 Sup. Ct. 621, 52 L. Ed. 1046, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[204] In re Teschmacher & Mrazay, 127 Fed. 728, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547.

It is also to be noticed that, since this portion of the statute only speaks of suits "by" the trustee, it places no restriction upon the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy as to suits "against" the trustee or the estate; so that, when its jurisdiction is voluntarily invoked by an adverse claimant as plaintiff, it may take cognizance of the action without regard to the citizenship of the parties or the amount in controversy.[205] And the official responsibility of a trustee in bankruptcy for acts done in his character as trustee must be enforced in the court under whose jurisdiction he is proceeding.[206] But nothing in the bankruptcy act operates to abolish the distinction between legal and equitable remedies so far as regards suits or controversies arising out of, but not constituting a part of, the bankruptcy proceeding. Hence a suit in equity by a trustee is not maintainable in the district court, though otherwise within its jurisdiction, where a plain, adequate, and complete remedy might be had at law.[207]

§ 408. Same; Claims on Property in Possession of Trustee or Custody of Court.—On the general principle that possession of a res draws to the court jurisdiction to determine all conflicting claims and interests asserted against it, it is well settled that, if any particular item or parcel of property has come into the custody of the court of bankruptcy, by actual possession vesting in one of its officers, such as a trustee or receiver, and is claimed as a part of the estate in bankruptcy, that court has full jurisdiction to hear and determine all controversies involving the assertion of a title to such property, or a right or interest in it, or a lien upon it, in a summary manner if that form of proceeding is otherwise justified, or else in a plenary action where all necessary parties are duly served and brought into court.[208] Thus, property having been found in the possession of the bankrupt and having passed into the possession of his trustee, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine the claim of a third person, who sold the property to the bankrupt and as-

[205] In re McCallum, 113 Fed. 393, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596; In re Whitener, 105 Fed. 180, 44 C. C. A. 434, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198; Swann v. Sanborn, 4 Woods, 625, Fed. Cas. No. 13,675. The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, sitting as a court of equity, has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the establishment of an equitable lien against the estate of a bankrupt. Crosby v. Ridout, 27 App. D. C. 481.

[206] Carbondale School Dist. v. Hourigan, 267 Pa. 154, 110 Atl. 173.

[207] Warmath v. O'Daniel, 199 Fed. 87, 86 C. C. A. 277, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101. See Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[208] Whitney v. Wenman, 198 U. S. 539, 25 Sup. Ct. 778, 49 L. Ed. 1157, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45; Clay v. Waters, 178 Fed. 385, 101 C. C. A. 645, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; Bray v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 170 Fed. 689, 96 C. C. A. 9, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363; Thomas v. Woods, 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; Treat v. Wooden, 138 Fed. 934, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; J. B. McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Solanas, 106 Fed. 145, 45 C. C. A. 253, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; In re Kellogg, 113 Fed. 120, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Rodgers, 125 Fed. 169, 60 C. C. A. 567, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re McCallum, 113 Fed. 393, 7 Am. Bankr.

serts the right to rescind the sale for fraud.[209] And so, bailors or consignors, who permit their goods in the hands of the bankrupt to pass into the custody of the receiver or trustee, cannot occupy the position of adverse claimants in determining the jurisdiction of the court.[210] And generally, a controversy between a trustee in bankruptcy and one asserting an adverse title to property which is in the custody of the court is a "proceeding in bankruptcy" of which the court has jurisdiction, and not a "controversy at law or in equity" such as can only be tried there with the consent of the proposed defendant.[211] So also, a court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine a controversy as to the ownership of property between the trustees of two different estates, both of which are being administered by such court.[212]

The same rule applies to the assertion and denial of liens upon property in the custody of the court. This one point being established (possession of the property by an officer of the court) it has jurisdiction of a proceeding in equity to establish the lien of a mortgage or other incumbrance upon the property,[213] or to impeach the validity of an existing mortgage covering the property,[214] or to set aside the mortgage as fraudulent or preferential or as having been given within four months previous to the bankruptcy,[215] or to recover property unlawfully sold on foreclosure of a chattel mortgage after the adjudication in bankruptcy and before a trustee could be appointed,[216] though not of a suit to foreclose a mortgage,[217] and (at least before the amendments to the bankruptcy act) not of a proceeding to impeach a mortgage as fraudulent where the property affected is in the possession of the creditor, and not of the trustee.[218] Again, if there are conflicting liens or claims upon

Rep. 596; Davis v. Coe, 19 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 639; In re Sabin, 18 N. B. R. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 12,195; Dunlop v. Baker, 239 Fed. 193, 152 C. C. A. 181, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; Bennette v. Lawis (Tex. Civ. App.) 176 S. W. 660; Darrough v. First Nat. Bank, 56 Okl. 647, 156 Pac. 191.

209 In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

210 In re Leeds Woolen Mills, 129 Fed. 922, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; In re McCallum, 113 Fed. 393, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

211 In re Rochford, 124 Fed. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Leeds Woolen Mills, 129 Fed. 922, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136. See Havens & Geddes Co. v. Pierek, 120 Fed. 244, 57 C. C. A. 37, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

212 In re Rosenberg, 116 Fed. 402, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

213 Cleminshaw v. International Shirt & Collar Co., 165 Fed. 797, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; In re Goldberg & Sagman (D. C.) 232 Fed. 194, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

214 In re Kellogg, 121 Fed. 333, 57 C. C. A. 547, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7; In re Waterloo Organ Co., 118 Fed. 904, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

215 In re McMahon, 147 Fed. 684, 77 C. C. A. 668, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530; Carter v. Hobbs, 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; Galbraith v. Robson-Hilliard Grocery Co., 216 Fed. 842, 133 C. C. A. 46.

216 In re Brooks, 91 Fed. 508, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

217 In re San Gabriel Sanatorium Co. 111 Fed. 892, 50 C. C. A. 56, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

218 Bardes v. Hawarden Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1175, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163.

property which is in the lawful custody of the court of bankruptcy, it has jurisdiction to determine the same, even though the trustee has no interest in the question.[219] And the court has jurisdiction of a petition laying claim to a fund which is alleged to have come into the hands of the trustee.[220] And it has authority to determine the amount to which the wife of the bankrupt is entitled under her agreement for the release of her inchoate dower interest.[221]

In order thus to confer jurisdiction, there must be actual possession on the part of the receiver or trustee, not a mere claim to possession. But it may be constructive or symbolic. Thus, where the trustee in bankruptcy locks up the bankrupt's store and keeps the key, this brings the goods in the store into the custody and jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[222] And jurisdiction, having thus vested in virtue of possession of the res, cannot be divested or impaired by the unauthorized surrender of possession of the property by the officers of the court or by a seizure thereof by an adverse claimant.[223]

§ 409. Same; Independent Suits Against Third Persons.—A district court of the United States, in its capacity as a court of bankruptcy, has no jurisdiction of an independent suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy against a stranger (that is, one who has not been in any way made a party to the bankruptcy proceedings) to collect a debt due to the bankrupt or to recover money or property claimed as assets of his estate, unless by consent of the proposed defendant, such jurisdiction being expressly denied by the twenty-third section of the bankruptcy act.[224]

[219] Nisbet v. Federal Title & Trust Co., 229 Fed. 644, 144 C. C. A. 54, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 222.

[220] Wuerpel v. Commercial Germania Trust & Sav. Bank, 238 Fed. 269, 151 C. C. A. 285, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223; In re Einstein (D. C.) 245 Fed. 189, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507.

[221] In re Dialogue (D. C.) 241 Fed. 290, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70.

[222] Wood v. Cummings, 197 Mass. 80, 83 N. E. 318.

[223] In re Schermerhorn, 145 Fed. 341, 76 C. C. A. 215, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; Plaut v. Gorham Mfg. Co., 159 Fed. 754, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269. See, per contra, Waite v. Gottstein (D. C.) 224 Fed. 281, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353.

[224] Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1175, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Wall v. Cox, 181 U. S. 244, 21 Sup. Ct. 642, 45 L. Ed. 845, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; Jaquith v. Rowley, 188 U. S. 620, 23 Sup. Ct. 369, 47 L. Ed. 620, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; Board of Education of Salt Lake City v. Leary, 236 Fed. 521, 149 C. C. A. 573, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; Kelley v. Aarons (D. C.) 238 Fed. 996, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; De Friece v. Bryant (D. C.) 232 Fed. 233, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275; In re Flanigan (D. C.) 228 Fed. 339, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. National Storage Co., 260 Ill. 485, 103 N. E. 227; In re Yorkville Coal Co., 211 Fed. 619, 128 C. C. A. 570, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; In re Ballou (D. C.) 215 Fed. 810, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; In re Lummus (D. C.) 214 Fed. 891; In re Horgan (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 415, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; In re Bailey, 156 Fed. 691, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; Hull v. Burr, 153 Fed. 945, 83 C. C. A. 61, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; Hatch v. Curtin, 146 Fed. 200, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 629; In re Flynn & Co., 126 Fed. 422, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; In re Hartman, 121 Fed. 940, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re Rochford, 124 Fed. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388,

There are, however, four important exceptions to this rule or qualifications of it. First, as to any property which has come into the hands of the trustee, the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to determine adverse claims to it or liens asserted upon it.[225] Second, since the amendments to the bankruptcy law passed in 1903 and 1910, the court has jurisdiction if the suit is to set aside a fraudulent transfer or conveyance or to recover a preference.[226] Third, if the requisite diversity of citizenship exists, that is, if the bankrupt and the defendant in such action are citizens of different states, and the jurisdictional amount is involved, the action might have been brought in a federal circuit court, and therefore, the circuit courts having been abolished by the act of 1911 and their jurisdiction transferred to the district courts, such an action may now be brought in a district court in the circumstances supposed, though in trying such a suit it does not sit as a court of bankruptcy.[227] Fourth, if the action is one involving a federal question, or arises under the laws of the United States (other than the bankruptcy act itself), so that the bankrupt himself might have sued in a federal court regardless of the question of citizenship, so may his trustee. A suit by a trustee in bankruptcy against a national bank, to recover usurious interest received by the defendant from the bankrupt, is of this character.[228]

10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; J. B. McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Solanas, 106 Fed. 145, 45 C. C. A. 253, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; In re Tollett, 105 Fed. 425, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305; In re Silberhorn, 105 Fed. 899, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co., 99 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; Woods v. Forsyth, Fed. Cas. No. 17,992. Under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, § 23, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction of controversies with adverse claimants whose claims do not rest upon mere pretense, put forward in bad faith, whether the issue depends upon a question of law or one of fact. In re Midtown Contracting Co., 243 Fed. 56, 155 C. C. A. 586, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578.

[225] Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co., 99 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

[226] Act Cong. Feb. 3, 1903, 32 Stat. 797; Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838. Even under these amendments, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction of an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover property from a third person who sets up an adverse claim to it in his own right, where the trustee does not contend that the property was ever "transferred" to the defendant by the bankrupt, but only that the defendant holds it under a secret trust for the bankrupt. Newcomb v. Biwer, 199 Fed. 529, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15.

[227] In re MacDougall, 175 Fed. 400, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; Sims v. Union Assur. Soc., 129 Fed. 804; In re Nugent, 105 Fed. 581, 44 C. C. A. 620, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176. Diversity of citizenship between the defendant and the trustee in bankruptcy is not necessary; the test is whether the citizenship of the bankrupt and of the defendant is such that the former might have sued in a federal court if bankruptcy had not intervened. Bush v. Elliott, 202 U. S. 477, 26 Sup. Ct. 668, 50 L. Ed. 1114, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656. The District Court, in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy against nonresidents and residents, has no jurisdiction of residents merely holding claims against the bankrupt and having nothing belonging to him, where many necessary parties are nonresidents and cannot be brought in. In re Smith Const. Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 228, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 227.

[228] Reed v. American-German Nat. Bank, 155 Fed. 233, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

Subject to these exceptions, the general rule is well established. Thus, the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction of an action of replevin, brought by a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy to recover the possession of chattels alleged to belong to the bankrupt but held adversely by the defendant under a claim of title,[229] nor of a suit by the trustee of a bankrupt corporation to compel a stockholder to pay corporate debts because of his alleged participation in a fraudulent overvaluation of the corporate assets in payment for stock,[230] nor of an action to enforce a mechanic's lien existing in favor of the bankrupt, a contractor, at the date of his adjudication.[231] Again, while the trustee may petition the court to examine summarily into the reasonableness of a fee paid by a prospective bankrupt to his attorney, yet if, instead of taking this course, he files a petition to compel the attorney to account for moneys claimed to have been paid to him in contemplation of bankruptcy, the case falls within the jurisdictional clause of the statute, and cannot be maintained in the bankruptcy court except with the consent of the defendant.[232] A federal District Court has no jurisdiction to make partition of real estate between a trustee in bankruptcy and the wife of the bankrupt, and cannot authorize her to sell her interest; the most it can do is to order the sale of the bankrupt's interest.[233] Where the trustee in bankruptcy sues to recover property on two theories, one of which would entitle him to sue in the federal court, but his evidence fails to sustain that theory, the court will not retain jurisdiction to determine his right to recover under the other theory, but will require him to proceed in the proper state court.[234]

§ 410. Same; Preferences and Fraudulent Conveyances.—The Bankruptcy Act of 1898, as it stood originally, contained the following restrictive provision in section 23b: "Suits by the trustee shall only be brought or prosecuted in the courts where the bankrupt, whose estate is being administered by such trustee, might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted, unless by consent of the proposed defendant." And under this provision it was held that no jurisdiction was vested in the courts of bankruptcy to determine actions brought for the purpose of vacating fraudulent transfers or recovering preferences, unless with the consent of the [229] Mitchell v. McClure, 178 U. S. 539, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1182, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177.

[230] In re Haley, 158 Fed. 74, 85 C. C. A. 404. Nor of a bill in equity against the stockholders of a bankrupt corporation collectively, to force payment of the unpaid balances on their subscriptions for stock. Kelley v. Gill, 245 U. S. 116, 38 Sup. Ct. 38, 62 L. Ed. 185, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[231] In re Grissler, 136 Fed. 754, 69 C. C. A. 406, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[232] In re Raphael (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 874.

[233] Harlin v. American Trust Co., 67 Ind. App. 213, 119 N. E. 20.

[234] Kaigler v. Gibson (D. C.) 264 Fed. 240, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

proposed defendant, or unless such diversity of citizenship existed and such an amount was involved as to give them jurisdiction of the controversy, not, indeed, as bankruptcy courts, but as federal District Courts.[235] But much dissatisfaction and inconvenience resulted from this rule, and the twenty-third section of the statute was twice amended by Congress, first, by the Act of February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. 797), and second by the Act of June 25, 1910 (36th Stat. 838). The net result of these amendments is to except from the rule of jurisdiction originally laid down in the statute "suits for the recovery of property under section sixty, subdivision b; section sixty-seven, subdivision e; and section seventy, subdivision e." The first of these exceptions relates to the recovery of preferences given within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. The second relates to the setting aside of conveyances made to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, made within a like period. The third is the provision by which "the trustee may avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor of such bankrupt might have avoided."

It is therefore now held that the courts of bankruptcy have jurisdiction (not exclusive of the jurisdiction of the state courts, but concurrent with them) of plenary proceedings at law or in equity brought by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside unlawful preferences or fraudulent transfers of property given or made within the four months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or to avoid transfers by the bankrupt which any creditor of his might have avoided; that this jurisdiction may be exercised without the consent of the defendant; and that it does not depend upon diversity of citizenship or the amount involved.[236] It is to be noticed, however, that as to the first two exceptions—preferences and conveyances to defraud creditors—the transaction must have occurred within four months prior to the bankruptcy proceedings; as to the third—transfers which a creditor might have avoided,—the time limit does not seem to apply.[237] It should also be remarked that the trustee may sue in the bankruptcy court to recover a payment which is declared to be preferential by the law of the state, though it is not a preference under the bankruptcy act, if it comes within the definition of a fraudulent transfer.[238] But these provisions of the statute must be construed with reasonable strictness. Thus, the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction of a suit in equity by the trustee to recover land, possession of which the bankrupt had surrendered to his father within four months before the adjudication, on the theory that title had passed to the bankrupt by virtue of a parol gift from the father.[239] So, it has been held that an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover damages from defendants, upon allegations that they conspired with the bankrupt, knowing him to be insolvent, and pursuant to such conspiracy he purchased goods on credit, which he turned over to defendants for less than their value, is an action merely to recover damages for the conspiracy, and not to set aside a fraudulent transfer of property, and therefore not within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[240] The federal court cannot obtain jurisdiction by substituted service over nonresident assignees in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside as a preference an assignment of a debt owing to the bankrupt by a nonresident.[241]

[235] Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1175, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Mitchell v. McClure, 178 U. S. 539, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1182, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177.

[236] Flanders v. Coleman, 250 U. S. 223, 39 Sup. Ct. 472, 63 L. Ed. 948, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; Stellwagen v. Clum, 245 U. S. 605, 38 Sup. Ct. 215, 62 L. Ed. 507, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Collett v. Adams, 249 U. S. 545, 39 Sup. Ct. 372, 63 L. Ed. 764, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; Brent v. Simpson, 238 Fed. 285, 151 C. C. A. 301, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 813; Golden Hill Distilling Co. v. Logue, 243 Fed. 342, 156 C. C. A. 122, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731; Kaigler v. Gibson (D. C.) 264 Fed. 240, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462; Ward v. Central Trust Co. of Illinois (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 344, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323; Breit v. Moore, 220 Fed. 97, 135 C. C. A. 573, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295; Davis v. Gates (D. C.) 235 Fed. 192, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818; Hawkins v. Dannenberg Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 752, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; In re Vadner (D. C.) 259 Fed. 614; Newcomb v. Biwer (D. C.) 199 Fed. 529, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15; Parker v. Sherman (D. C.) 195 Fed. 648, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; McElvain v. Hardesty, 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Wallace v. Jefferson County Sav. Bank (C. C. A.)

§ 411. Same; Suits Which Bankrupt Could Not Have Maintained. —The twenty-third section of the bankruptcy act provides that "suits by the trustee shall only be brought or prosecuted in the courts where the bankrupt might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted, unless by consent of the proposed defendant." Before the amendments to this section, giving the district courts jurisdiction of suits to avoid preferences and fraudulent conveyances, there was much doubt as to whether it should be held applicable to this class of actions. For such suits could not be maintained by the bankrupt at all, and therefore it could not be said that there was any court "where the bankrupt might have brought or prosecuted them," with the inevitable result that the trustee could not bring or prosecute 157 Fed. 838; Off v. Hakes, 142 Fed. 364, 73 C. C. A. 464, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696; Frost v. Latham & Co., 181 Fed. 866, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; Lynch v. Bronson, 160 Fed. 139, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; Bowman v. Alpha Farms, 153 Fed. 380, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; Horskins v. Sanderson, 132 Fed. 415, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; McNulty v. Feingold, 129 Fed. 1001, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; Kraver v. Abrahams, 203 Fed. 782, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365. As to the jurisdiction of the state courts, see Craig v. Cox, (Mo.) 232 S. W. 77.

[237] Hall v. Glenn (D. C.) 247 Fed. 997, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54.

[238] Grandison v. Robertson (D. C.) 220 Fed. 985, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

[239] Flanders v. Coleman (D. C.) 249 Fed. 757, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[240] Lynch v. Bronson (D. C.) 177 Fed. 605, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

[241] Murphy v. Ford Motor Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 134, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

such actions, "unless by consent of the proposed defendant," a reductio ad absurdum. Accordingly it was held in numerous decisions that this provision of the statute applied only to suits upon causes of action originally vested in the bankrupt, and which he might have maintained if there had been no adjudication in bankruptcy, such as actions upon contracts and to collect debts, and not to suits upon causes of action created by the bankruptcy proceedings, or vesting originally in the trustee as trustee.[242] Yet this argument, plausible as it appears, did not find favor with the Supreme Court of the United States,[243] and the decision was ultimately against the right of the trustee to sue on such causes of action in the courts of bankruptcy, and this remained the rule until Congress amended the section in question (as set forth in the preceding pages) by an express grant of jurisdiction to the district courts over just such causes of action.

§ 412. Same; Consent or Waiver of Objections.—The provision of the twenty-third section of the bankruptcy act which permits the bringing of suits by a trustee in bankruptcy in courts other than those in which the bankrupt himself might have sued, "by consent of the proposed defendant," is to be regarded, not as conferring jurisdiction, but merely as giving a personal privilege to the defendant which he may waive; and his "consent" need not have been given before the suit was instituted, nor need it expressly appear of record, but it may be sufficiently shown by conduct necessarily implying such consent.[244] Thus, if an adverse claimant of property, or a creditor alleged to have received a preference or a voidable lien, voluntarily appears in the court of bankruptcy and himself invokes its jurisdiction in his own behalf, that court may proceed to determine the controversy,[245] as where such a claimant applies to the court of bankruptcy for an order or decree recognizing and establishing his claims or giving him any affirmative relief whatever,[246] or where he pleads a set-off, on which he asks judg-

[242] In re Baudouine, 101 Fed. 574, 41 C. C. A. 318, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; Skillin v. Magnus, 162 Fed. 689, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 397; Pepperdine v. Headley, 98 Fed. 863, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455; Murray v. Beal, 97 Fed. 567, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; Carter v. Hobbs, 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; In re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 481, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; Jones v. Smith, 38 Fed. 380; Main v. Glen, 7 Biss. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 8,973.

[243] Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 20 Sup. Ct. 1000, 44 L. Ed. 1182.

[244] McEldowney v. Card, 193 Fed. 475, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 937; In re Dialogue (D. C.) 241 Fed. 290, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70.

[245] In re D. H. McBride & Co., 132 Fed. 285, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Riker, 109 Fed. 63, 48 C. C. A. 220, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Philips v. Turner, 114 Fed. 726, 52 C. C. A. 358, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re Hadden Rodee Co., 135 Fed. 886, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; In re Drag (D. C.) 254 Fed. 474, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59.

[246] In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698; In re Riker, 109 Fed. 63, 48 C. C. A. 220, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep.

ment,[247] or where he shows that the money claimed to be recovered from him by the trustee is also claimed by a third party and that he occupies the position of a mere stakeholder and offers to pay the money into court.[248] Moreover, if the defendant in an action by the trustee enters a general appearance and pleads to the merits, and proceeds to a hearing before the referee or court, without raising any objection to the jurisdiction of the court, he must be taken to have "consented" that the court might try the case, and cannot object to the jurisdiction after a decision adverse to him.[249] And parties denying a bankruptcy court's jurisdiction over them and answering to the merits at the same time, are estopped from raising the jurisdictional question,[250] although an answer to the merits accompanied with a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, which motion was expressly reserved in the answer, does not give defendant's consent to the jurisdiction of the court.[251] But a mere entry of a general appearance is not a waiver of objections to the jurisdiction, when the petition of the trustee does not state a cause of action, and objection to the jurisdiction is promptly taken upon the filing of an amended petition.[252] So also, a respondent who files a paper in which he sets up that the court is without jurisdiction of the action, and who repeats and urges the same objection in a proceeding to have the judge of the court of bankruptcy review a decision of the referee adverse to him, cannot be said to have consented to the jurisdiction, although he also excepts to the petition as not stating a cause of action and further pleads a general denial.[253] A special and limited appear-720; s. c., 107 Fed. 96, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720. But see In re Keystone Press, 203 Fed. 710, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[247] McEldowney v. Card, 193 Fed. 475, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 937.

[248] In re Blake, 150 Fed. 279, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668.

[249] Fairbanks Steam Shovel Co. v. Wills, 240 U. S. 642, 36 Sup. Ct. 466, 60 L. Ed. 841, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; Seegmiller v. Day, 249 Fed. 177, 161 C. C. A. 213, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; Alco Film Corp. v. Alco Film Service of Minnesota, 234 Fed. 55, 148 C. C. A. 71, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; Jones v. Blair, 242 Fed. 783, 155 C. C. A. 371, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Berry (D. C.) 247 Fed. 700, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357; Gooch v. Stone, 257 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 581, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86; Detroit Trust Co. v. Pontiac Sav. Bank (C. C. A.) 196 Fed. 29, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 821; McEldowney v. Card, 193 Fed. 475, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 937; In re Elletson Co., 174 Fed. 859, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 147 Fed. 280, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re Blake, 150 Fed. 279, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668; Ryttenberg v. Schefer, 131 Fed. 313, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 652; In re Durham, 114 Fed. 750, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; Sinsheimer v. Simonson, 106 Fed. 870; In re Leeds Woolen Mills, 129 Fed. 922, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; In re Steuer, 104 Fed. 976, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re Emrich, 101 Fed. 231, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; In re Connolly, 100 Fed. 620, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 842; Cohen v. American Surety Co., 192 N. Y. 227, 84 N. E. 947; In re Raphael, 192 Fed. 874, 113 C. C. A. 198.

[250] In re Franklin Brewing Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 135, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663.

[251] Kaigler v. Gibson (D. C.) 264 Fed. 240, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

[252] In re Hemby-Hutchinson Pub. Co. (D. C.) 105 Fed. 909, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

[253] In re Michie (D. C.) 116 Fed. 749, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

ance, for a purpose only subsidiary to the main issue and not involving a final determination of the controversy, does not give consent to the jurisdiction.[254] And the appearance of a stockholder of a bankrupt corporation to contest a petition by the trustee asking that an assessment be made on all stock not fully paid for does not confer jurisdiction on the court of bankruptcy to adjudicate his personal liability for such an assessment.[255] Of course, the mere proof of claims against a bankrupt does not constitute a consent to the jurisdiction of the federal court in a suit subsequently brought by the trustee against the claimant.[256]

It is also to be observed that the consent of a defendant to be sued in the court of bankruptcy means consent to the tribunal in which the controversy is to be carried on, and not to the mode of procedure, which is regulated by general principles of law, unless other provision is made,[257] and if the mode of procedure adopted is unlawful, the appearance of the defendant and his contesting the proceedings will not confer jurisdiction.[258] It was also held that the consent of the defendant, provided for in this part of the bankruptcy act, governing the jurisdiction of suits by a trustee in bankruptcy, was not intended to enlarge the jurisdiction of the federal circuit courts so as to confer a jurisdiction which they would not have because of diverse citizenship of the parties or because of a federal question being involved.[259]

§ 413. Same; Federal Courts in Other Districts.—Under the bankruptcy statute as originally enacted, the district courts had no auxiliary or ancillary jurisdiction to be exercised in aid of bankruptcy proceedings in progress in another district.[260] But this defect in the law was remedied by an act of Congress, passed in 1910, which provided that courts of bankruptcy shall be authorized to "exercise ancillary jurisdiction over persons or property within their respective territorial limits in aid of a receiver or trustee appointed in any bankruptcy proceedings pending in any other court of bankruptcy."[261] It is apprehended that this properly relates only to steps or proceedings in the bankruptcy case proper, that is, the making of such orders and giving such aid to the trustee as may properly be done in a summary manner upon his peti-

[254] Board of Road Com'rs of Monroe County v. Keil, 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[255] Bergdoll v. Harrigan (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 279, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633.

[256] Tate v. Brinser (D. C.) 226 Fed. 878, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660.

[257] In re Raphael, 192 Fed. 874, 113 C. C. A. 198, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708.

[258] Sinsheimer v. Simonson, 107 Fed. 898, 47 C. C. A. 51, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537.

[259] Lovell v. Isidore Newman & Son, 227 U. S. 412, 33 Sup. Ct. 375, 57 L. Ed. 577, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482.

[260] Hull v. Burr, 153 Fed. 945, 83 C. C. A. 61, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; In re Von Hartz, 142 Fed. 726, 74 C. C. A. 58, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

[261] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

tion.[262] As to plenary actions, for the recovery of property against adverse claimants or the like, the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy is territorially restricted, and such a court cannot take jurisdiction of a trustee's suit for the recovery of property outside the boundaries of its own district, but, in order to obtain the possession of such property or its avails, the trustee must invoke the jurisdiction of the proper local court, either state or federal.[263] Since the amendments of 1903 and 1910 (giving to courts of bankruptcy jurisdiction of suits to recover preferences or to avoid fraudulent conveyances, without the consent of the defendant), a trustee in bankruptcy who desires to bring a suit of such a character, may go into the federal district court in the district where the proposed defendant resides and there prosecute his action.[264] So also, he may sue in another district to collect the assets of the estate,[265] to recover a sum of money due to the bankrupt under a written contract,[266] or to redeem mortgaged property of the bankrupt.[267] But the jurisdiction thus to be exercised by the court in another district in a plenary suit is not a jurisdiction in bankruptcy, but its ordinary jurisdiction, in law or equity as the case may be, and therefore the trustee must pursue the same remedies and is subject to the same rules as those would be whose rights he represents, that is, either the bankrupt or the creditors according to the nature of the suit.[268] Thus, the trustee cannot maintain a [262] See Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 30 Sup. Ct. 372, 54 L. Ed. 402, 17 Ann. Cas. 969, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; In re Elkus, 216 U. S. 115, 30 Sup. Ct. 377, 54 L. Ed. 407; The Alert, 199 Fed. 542; In re Lipman, 201 Fed. 169, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139; Rogers v. Chicamauga Trust Co., 253 Fed. 541, 165 C. C. A. 211. A bankruptcy court in ancillary proceedings has power to discharge a bankrupt from an arrest made prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, where he has the substantive right to relief. In re Madigan (D. C.) 254 Fed. 221, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770.

[263] In re Brittania Mining Co., 197 Fed. 459, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; Paine v. Caldwell, 1 Hask. 452, 6 N. B. R. 558, Fed. Cas. No. 10,674; In re Geller (D. C.) 216 Fed. 558.

[264] Parker v. Sherman, 195 Fed. 648, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; Teague v. Anderson Hardware Co., 161 Fed. 765, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; Lawrence v. Lowrie, 133 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297; Hills v. F. D. McKinniss Co., 188 Fed. 1012, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; Sherman v. Bingham, 3 Cliff. 552, 7 N. B. R. 490, Fed. Cas. No. 12,762. The Bankruptcy Act authorizes suits by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover preferences to be brought in the federal District Court of the district where the real or personal property is situated, although the bankruptcy proceedings were instituted, and the defendant resides, in another district in the same state. Collett v. Adams, 249 U. S. 545, 39 Sup. Ct. 372, 63 L. Ed. 764, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

[265] Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. Latham & Co., 219 Fed. 721, 135 C. C. A. 419, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631; West v. Empire Life Ins. Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 605, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; In re Sage (D. C.) 224 Fed. 525, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Hartman v. Ackoury (D. C.) 210 Fed. 188, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514; In re Farrell (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 338; In re Rathfon Bros., 200 Fed. 108, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Shainwald v. Lewis, 6 Sawy. 585, 5 Fed. 510; Goodall v. Tuttle, 3 Biss. 219, 7 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. 5,533; In re Murphy, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 393.

[266] Babbitt v. Burgess, 2 Dill. 169, 7 N. B. R. 561, Fed. Cas. No. 693.

[267] Barnard v. Hartford, P. & F. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 1,003.

[268] Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; In re plenary suit in a court of bankruptcy of another district to recover alleged excessive payments or transfers to counsel made by the bankrupt in contemplation of bankruptcy and for services to be rendered therein, when the court in which the proceeding is pending has made no order for the re-examination and reduction of such payments or transfers.[269] Where a bankrupt's estate is in course of administration in one district, a creditor may go into another district with a bill in equity seeking to impress a trust in his favor upon property of the bankrupt found there; but if the allegations of the bill are insufficient to trace his funds into any specific property, so that the suit must be regarded as an attempt to secure priority of payment out of the bankrupt's estate on account of moneys fraudulently obtained by him and put into his business, it must be dismissed.[270]

§ 414. Same; Jurisdiction of State Courts.—Under former bankruptcy statutes, many state courts held that they had no jurisdiction of actions brought by trustees in bankruptcy to recover property alleged to have been transferred by the bankrupt in violation of, or in fraud of, the provisions of the bankruptcy act, as in cases of preferences and fraudulent conveyances, but that the jurisdiction of the federal courts in such cases was exclusive.[271] The objection of these courts to entertaining suits of this character was principally founded on two considerations; first, that a court of equity should not take cognizance of a bill unless it has complete control over all the matters in controversy, either directly or by coercion of the parties, and this does not exist in the case of a trustee in bankruptcy; second, that the avoidance of a conveyance or wresting from a creditor a preference which he has obtained is in the nature of a penalty, and as this penalty is imposed by the laws of the United States, and not by the laws of the particular state, the courts of the state should not enforce it, more especially as preferential transfers are only forbidden by the bankruptcy act and are not contrary to public policy or good morals.[272] But these views have not prevailed.

Williams, 123 Fed. 321, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; Hull v. Burr, 153 Fed. 945, 83 C. C. A. 61, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541. And see United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Bray, 225 U. S. 205, 32 Sup. Ct. 620, 56 L. Ed. 1055, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207; Scott v. George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., 202 Fed. 251.

269 In re Wood, 210 U. S. 246, 28 Sup. Ct. 621, 52 L. Ed. 1046, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

270 Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne v. Latham & Co., 242 U. S. 426, 37 Sup. Ct. 139, 61 L. Ed. 404, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660; Jaffe v. Pyle, 242 Fed. 67, 155 C. C. A. 11, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219.

271 Olcott v. McLean, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 277, 16 N. B. R. 79; Brigham v. Claflin, 31 Wis. 607, 11 Am. Rep. 623; Bromley v. Goodrich, 40 Wis. 131, 22 Am. Rep. 685, 15 N. B. R. 289; Gilbert v. Priest, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 444; Shaw v. Meldrum, 14 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) N. S. 165 note; Voorhies v. Frisbie, 25 Mich. 476, 12 Am. Rep. 291, 8 N. B. R. 152; Redd v. Wallace, 145 Ala. 209, 40 South. 407. Compare Otis v. Hadley, 112 Mass. 100; Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

272 Voorhies v. Frisbie, 25 Mich. 476, 12 Am. Rep. 291, 8 N. B. R. 152; Brig-

Especially in view of the provisions of the bankruptcy act, as amended, giving "concurrent jurisdiction" to the state and federal courts of actions of the kind mentioned, it is now held that any state court of competent jurisdiction may enforce actionable rights arising under the bankruptcy law.[273] Such a court, in passing upon the claims of a trustee in bankruptcy, is not proceeding under the bankruptcy law, but simply recognizes that statute as the source of the trustee's title, in the same manner as it would if he derived his title from a deed or contract.[274] Yet it should be remarked that Congress would have no authority to impose upon state courts the duty of hearing and determining controversies between trustees in bankruptcy and adverse claimants, by denying jurisdiction of such controversies to the federal courts. The jurisdiction exercised by the state courts concurrently with the federal courts, in enforcing rights and duties created by an act of Congress, is purely discretionary on their part, and may at any time be renounced or incumbered with onerous conditions.[275]

Accordingly, it is now thoroughly well settled that any state court which would have jurisdiction of the subject-matter as between citizens of the state, and which acquires jurisdiction of the persons of the litigants, has jurisdiction, concurrent with that of the courts of bankruptcy, of actions by trustees in bankruptcy to set aside alleged fraudulent transfers or conveyances of property made by the bankrupts upon whose estates they are appointed to administer,[276] though, in case the conveyance is voidable at the suit of the trustee only because it is voidable under the laws of the state, the trustee must show that he represents creditors of that class who alone would be entitled to attack it, as, for exham v. Claflin, 31 Wis. 607, 11 Am. Rep. 623. Compare Tinker v. Van Dyke, 1 Flip. 521, 14 N. B. R. 112, Fed. Cas. No. 14,058.

[273] Maxwell v. Davis Trust Co., 69 W. Va. 276, 71 S. E. 270; Nisbet v. Sigel-Campion Live Stock Commission Co., 21 Colo. App. 494, 123 Pac. 110; Robinson v. White, 97 Fed. 33; Van Zandt v. Parson, 81 Or. 453, 159 Pac. 1153; Bennette v. Lewis (Tex. Civ. App.) 176 S. W. 660. But any suit brought in a state court by a trustee in bankruptcy, except as specially authorized by the bankruptcy law, is without the jurisdiction of the court. Glover v. Love, 68 Ala. 219.

[274] Cook v. Whipple, 55 N. Y. 150, 14 Am. Rep. 202, 9 N. B. R. 155. Suits brought by a trustee in bankruptcy in a state court will be tried the same as any other actions and according to the rules of evidence prevailing in the state court. Barber v. Wiemer, 183 Iowa, 72, 165 N. W. 440. Where an action by a trustee in bankruptcy is brought in a state court, the measure of his relief in the first instance is determined there, but the state court is not concerned with the distribution of the proceeds of his recovery, as that belongs to the court of bankruptcy. Bergin v. Blackwood, 141 Minn. 325, 170 N. W. 508. The state court has jurisdiction to allow a defendant a set-off against the claim of the plaintiff suing as a trustee in bankruptcy. Gill v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank (Mo. App.) 195 S. W. 538.

[275] In re Woodbury (D. C.) 98 Fed. 833, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

[276] Frank v. Vollkommer, 205 U. S. 521, 27 Sup. Ct. 596, 51 L. Ed. 911, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806; McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 507, 9 Sup. Ct. 365, 32 L. Ed. 771; Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile ample, creditors having a lien on the particular property.[277] In the same way, the state courts have jurisdiction over an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover money or property paid or transferred by the bankrupt to a creditor by way of a voidable preference.[278] But in an action of the latter sort in a state court, it is not permissible to enter into an inquiry into the validity of all other claims against the bankrupt and into the question whether other creditors have received voidable preferences and have not been required to surrender them, since this would, in effect, transfer the administration of the bankrupt's estate from the bankruptcy court to the state court.[279] So also, the state courts have jurisdiction of actions by trustees in bankruptcy to collect the assets of the estate, realize on choses in action, enforce contracts, and recover debts due to the bankrupt,[280] and to hear and determine the rights or Co., 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; In re Steed, 107 Fed. 682, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73; Robinson v. White, 97 Fed. 33, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546; Norcross v. Nathan, 99 Fed. 414, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; Andrews v. Mather, 134 Ala. 358, 32 South. 738; Rison v. Powell, 28 Ark. 427; Hull v. Hudson, 9 Del. Ch. 205, 80 Atl. 674; Hobbs v. Frazier, 61 Fla. 611, 55 South. 848; Isett v. Stuart, 80 Ill. 404, 22 Am. Rep. 194; Lyon v. Clark, 124 Mich. 100, 82 N. W. 1058, 83 N. W. 694; Sheldon v. Parker, 66 Neb. 610, 92 N. W. 923, 95 N. W. 1015; Bindseil v. Smith, 61 N. J. Eq. 654, 47 Atl. 456; Jones v. Schermerhorn, 53 App. Div. 494, 65 N. Y. Supp. 999; Bouton v. Wheeler, 118 App. Div. 426, 104 N. Y. Supp. 33; Small v. Muller, 67 App. Div. 143, 73 N. Y. Supp. 667; Breckons v. Snyder, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575; Mueller v. Bruss, 112 Wis. 406, 88 N. W. 229; Blick v. Nimmo, 121 Md. 139, 88 Atl. 116; Googins v. Skillings, 118 Me. 299, 108 Atl. 50; Koger v. Clark (Tex. Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 434; Hull v. Forty-Second St. Storage House, 166 App. Div. 739, 152 N. Y. Supp. 303; Corey v. Blackwell Lumber Co., 24 Idaho, 642, 135 Pac. 742; Union Banking Co. v. Truscott Boat Mfg. Co., 189 Mich. 698, 155 N. W. 717; Parker v. Wagoner (Sup.) 169 N. Y. Supp. 1107; American Bottle Co. v. Finney, 203 Ala. 92, 82 South. 106.

[277] Sparks v. Weatherley, 176 Ala. 324, 58 South. 280.

[278] Claflin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, 23 L. Ed. 833; Russell v. Owen, 61 Mo. 185, 15 N. B. R. 322; Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439, 12 N. B. R. 438; Jordan v. Downey, 40 Md. 401, 12 N. B. R. 427; Boudinot v. Hamann, 117 Iowa, 22, 90 N. W. 497; Goodrich v. Wilson, 119 Mass. 429, 14 N. B. R. 555; Detroit Trust Co. v. Old Nat. Bank, 155 Mich. 61, 118 N. W. 729; Drew v. Myers, 81 Neb. 750, 116 N. W. 781, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 350; Bindseil v. Cashion, 60 N. J. Eq. 116, 45 Atl. 697; Vollkommer v. Frank, 107 App. Div. 594, 95 N. Y. Supp. 324; Stern v. Mayer, 99 App. Div. 427, 91 N. Y. Supp. 292; Silberstein v. Stahl, 32 Misc. Rep. 353, 66 N. Y. Supp. 646; Exler v. American Box Co., 226 Pa. St. 384, 75 Atl. 661, 134 Am. St. Rep. 1067; Maxwell v. Davis Trust Co., 69 W. Va. 276, 71 S. E. 270.

[279] Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 204 U. S. 522, 27 Sup. Ct. 391, 51 L. Ed. 596, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; Cartwright v. West, 185 Ala. 41, 64 South. 293.

[280] Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. Ed. 403; Burbank v. Bigelow, 92 U. S. 179, 23 L. Ed. 542; Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546; Heath v. Shaffer, 93 Fed. 647, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98; In re Gerdes, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 131; In re Murphy, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 393; Clark v. Ewing, 9 Biss. 440, 3 Fed. 83; Farnham v. Friedmeyer, 109 Ill. App. 54; McIntyre v. Malone, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 159, 91 N. W. 246; Frank v. McAdams, 32 Misc. Rep. 512, 66 N. Y. Supp. 379; Peiper v. Harmer, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 100; Tennyson v. Beggs, 176 Cal. 255, 168 Pac. 140; Gray v. Arnot, 31 N. D. 461, 154 N. W. 268; Petrie v. Buffington, 79 W. Va. 113, 90 S. E. 557; Scott v. Gillespie, 103 Kan. 745, 176 Pac. 132. In the case last cited, it was held that a state court has jurisdiction of a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to construe a will under which the bankrupt titles of third persons, not parties to the bankruptcy proceedings, claiming property adversely to the bankrupt or in hostility to the trustee.[281] And certain rights, arising under the laws of the state, may be determinable exclusively in the state courts. Thus a bank which had been appointed a depositary for bankruptcy funds became insolvent and passed into the hands of the state superintendent of banks. A trustee in bankruptcy claimed that deposits made by him in such bank in his official character were entitled to priority of payment out of its assets, in view of the act of Congress giving preference to debts due to the United States. But the state statute declares that dividends to be paid by the superintendent of banks, out of the assets of institutions in his charge, shall be paid to such persons and in such amounts as shall be directed by the local state court. On this state of facts, it was held that the question raised by the trustee in bankruptcy was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the state court, and could not be determined on a motion in the court of bankruptcy for an order requiring the superintendent of banks to pay out money so deposited.[282]

The residence of a trustee in bankruptcy, for the purpose of fixing the place of trial in the state courts, is the principal office and place of business of the bankrupt corporation, and not his personal residence, as he is the "party" prosecuting the action.[283]

In selecting the state court in which to bring his action, the trustee in bankruptcy must naturally have regard to the extent and character of its jurisdiction as defined by the laws of the state. Thus, a suit properly cognizable only in equity should not be brought in a court having no chancery jurisdiction. But an action which merely seeks a money judgment, to recover an amount alleged to have been paid out by the bankrupt to a creditor as a preference, is not a suit in equity but an action at law,[284] but on the other hand, it is not triable in a state court of inferior and limited statutory jurisdiction.[285] In one state, it was claimed to be a devisee. While a trustee in bankruptcy must resort to the courts of the state where the bankrupt corporation resides, he may therein enforce rights and avail himself of remedies which are open to him as a representative of the creditors of the bankrupt, though they would not be available to the corporation itself. Kelley v. Abbott (Cal) 196 Pac. 39.

[281] In re Russell, 101 Fed. 248, 41 C. C. A. 323, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; McLeod's Trustee v. McLeod, 89 S. W. 199; 28 Ky. Law Rep. 284; In re Kane (D. C.) 152 Fed. 587, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654. A proceeding for partition between a trustee in bankruptcy and the bankrupt's wife is a controversy arising from the settlement of the bankrupt's estate, as distinguished from a proceeding in bankruptcy proper, and hence the state courts have jurisdiction. Harlin v. American Trust Co., 67 Ind. App. 213, 119 N. E. 20.

[282] In re Bologh (D. C.) 185 Fed. 825, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726.

[283] Allen v. McCormick, 110 Misc. Rep. 254, 180 N. Y. Supp. 116.

[284] Cohen v. Small, 190 N. Y. 568, 83 N. E. 1123; Merritt v. Halliday, 107 App. Div. 596, 95 N. Y. Supp. 331.

[285] Dyer v. Kratzenstein, 103 App. Div. 404, 92 N. Y. Supp. 1012. An inferior state court, which has no equitable jurisdiction, cannot entertain an intervention is held that, in an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to vacate a deed executed by the bankrupt, a state court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, notwithstanding the fact that the property is located in another state.[286] But elsewhere it is held that a trustee in bankruptcy cannot maintain, in the district court of one county, a suit to set aside as fraudulent a sale of land made under a decree of the district court of another county, in a foreclosure suit against the bankrupt which was pending therein when the petition in bankruptcy was filed.[287] Assuming that the state court has jurisdiction of an action by the trustee, or of one in which he voluntarily appears, its judgment rendered in the case is binding and conclusive upon him and upon those whom he represents,[288] and it is thereafter too late for him to allege that the federal court alone had jurisdiction of the controversy,[289] nor will the judgment of the state court be reviewed or in any manner revised by the court of bankruptcy.[290]

Suits against a trustee in bankruptcy, as well as suits in his favor, may be maintained in the state courts. Thus, under proper conditions, an action of trover will lie in a state court to recover the value of property unlawfully taken by the trustee as a part of the bankrupt estate but really belonging to the plaintiff.[291] So also, such a court may have jurisdiction of a suit to quiet title to real estate, at the instance of a person in possession, against the bankrupt and his trustee,[292] and of a suit by the solvent partner of a solvent firm against the trustee in bankruptcy of the insolvent partner for an accounting and to gain control of the administration of the firm's assets.[293] And it is said that a suit by a state against one of its own citizens, being a trustee in bankruptcy, cannot be maintained in a federal court but only in a court of the state.[294] But claims against a bankrupt's estate are not to be settled or liquidated by suit in a state court (unless so ordered by the court of bankruptcy), since this is properly a step or proceeding in the bankruptcy case.[295] by a mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy to set aside, as preferential and fraudulent, the mortgage which is being foreclosed. Hawkins v. Dannenberg Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 752, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262.

[286] Bowler v. First Nat. Bank, 21 S. D. 449, 113 N. W. 618, 130 Am. St. Rep. 725.

[287] W. C. Belcher Land Mortg. Co. v. Bush (Tex. Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 444.

[288] Winchester v. Heiskell, 119 U. S. 450, 7 Sup. Ct. 281, 30 L. Ed. 462; Lindstroth Wagon Co. v. Ballew, 149 Fed. 960, 79 C. C. A. 470, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23.

[289] Scott v. Kelly, 22 Wall. 57, 22 L. Ed. 729.

[290] Robinson v. White, 97 Fed. 33, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88.

[291] Weeks v. Fowler, 71 N. H. 518, 53 Atl. 543. And see supra, § 396.

[292] Reinhard v. Reinhard, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 362.

[293] Williams v. Lane, 158 Cal. 39, 109 Pac. 873.

[294] State v. Trustees of University, 65 N. C. 714, 1 Hughes, 133, Fed. Cas. No. 10,318, 5 N. B. R. 466.

[295] In re Heim Milk Product Co., 183 Fed. 787, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746.

Nor will a state court take jurisdiction of any action which seeks to determine the title to, or gain the possession of, any property which has already passed into the actual custody of the court of bankruptcy,[296] and for this reason, an action of replevin will not lie in a state court against the trustee.[297] And where the state court has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of an action against a trustee in bankruptcy, the trustee cannot confer jurisdiction by answering and praying for affirmative relief.[298] Further, the judgment rendered by a state court against a trustee in bankruptcy, while it may bind him personally, is not effective against the assets of the bankrupt in his hands for administration, and hence, if such a judgment undertakes to direct the payment of a certain sum out of such assets, it is erroneous and not at all binding on the court of bankruptcy.[299] But the state courts have not always been willing to concede this last proposition. Thus, in New Jersey, it is said that where a trustee in bankruptcy voluntarily submits himself and his rights to the jurisdiction of a state court in an action to foreclose a chattel mortgage upon outstanding accounts of the bankrupt, he cannot lawfully avoid the enforcement of a decree requiring him to account for money received by him resulting from the accounts, wherever the same may have been collected.[300]

§ 415. Same; Conflicting Jurisdiction.—So much has been said in an earlier section,[301] concerning conflicts of jurisdiction between the state courts and the courts of bankruptcy, that little remains to be here added, except to reiterate the general principle that each court will respect the jurisdiction of the other lawfully acquired, and neither will attempt to disturb or interfere with the possession of property rightfully in the custody and under the control of the other.[302] Thus, for [296] In re Reynolds, 127 Fed. 760, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758; Mishawaka Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Powell, 98 Mo. App. 530, 72 S. W. 723. The fact that a trustee in bankruptcy claims to be in possession of land as an asset of the bankrupt's estate does not prevent a third person from bringing an action therefor against him in a state court. Peters v. Bowers, 61 Colo. 534, 158 Pac. 1101.

[297] Supra, § 396. But compare Cooke v. Scovel, 68 N. J. Law, 484, 53 Atl. 692. See In re International Piano Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 268 Fed. 430, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127.

[298] Goodnough Mercantile Co. v. Galloway, 48 Or. 239, 84 Pac. 1049.

[299] In re Central Bank, 8 Ben. 114, 12 N. B. R. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 2,549; Skilton v. Codington, 185 N. Y. 80, 77 N. E. 790, 113 Am. St. Rep. 885; In re Rogers & Stefani, 156 Fed. 267, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

[300] Commercial Trust Co. v. Drayton, 90 N. J. Eq. 264, 105 Atl. 241.

[301] Supra, § 26.

[302] In re Kellogg, 121 Fed. 333, 57 C. C. A. 547, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7; Bear v. Chase, 99 Fed. 920, 40 C. C. A. 182, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Daughters v. Christy, 223 Ill. 612, 79 N. E. 292; National Surety Co. v. Medlock, 2 Ga. App. 665, 58 S. E. 1131; Simmons v. Richards, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 112, 66 S. W. 687; Scott v. George's Creek Coal & Iron Co., 202 Fed. 251; Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Fleischman, 149 App. Div. 23, 133 N. Y. Supp. 512; Harlin v. American Trust Co., 67 Ind.

instance, if property which is claimed as part of the assets of an estate in bankruptcy is found to be in the possession of a receiver previously appointed by a state court, the proper course is for the trustee in bankruptcy to apply to the state court for an order directing the receiver to turn over the property to him, which order the state court may and should make; but if it refuses, the trustee should not seek coercive means to force the surrender of the property, but should intervene in the proceedings in the state court for the protection of the interests which he represents.[303] So again, neither of the courts will undertake to review, modify, or vacate a judgment lawfully rendered by the other in the due exercise of its jurisdiction.[304]

§ 416. Limitation of Actions.—The provision of the bankruptcy act of 1867 in regard to the limitation of actions was as follows: "No suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintainable in any court between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee." [305] Though there was some disposition to hold that this applied only to controversies over which a federal circuit court would have jurisdiction,[306] the more general opinion was that the statute might be pleaded effectually in any court, whether of the state or federal system,[307] especially in view of the plain policy of the bankruptcy law to effect a speedy, as well as an equal, distribution of the bankrupt's assets among his creditors.[308] The provision was held not to be a mere limitation on the remedy, but an extinction of the right, so that after two years the office of the assignee in bankruptcy expired both for the purpose of suing and of

App. 213, 119 N. E. 20; Broussard v. Le Blanc (Tex. Civ. App.) 182 S. W. 78; Meek v. Eggerman, 56 Okl. 388, 155 Pac. 522. See First Trust & Savings Bank v. Bitter Root Valley Irr. Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 733, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626.

303 Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; Mauran v. Crown Carpet Lining Co., 23 R. I. 324, 50 Atl. 331; Wilson v. Parr, 115 Ga. 629, 42 S. E. 5. See In re Sage (D. C.) 224 Fed. 525, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138. And see supra, § 27.

304 In re Reynolds, 133 Fed. 585, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245; Robinson v. White, 97 Fed. 33, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; Clendening v. Red River Valley Nat. Bank, 12 N. D. 51, 94 N. W. 901; In re Vadner (D. C.) 259 Fed. 614. But a bankruptcy court has jurisdiction of a suit to set aside a fraudulent transfer consummated by foreclosure of a mortgage in a city court of limited jurisdiction and with no affirmative equitable powers, and is not prevented by comity from taking jurisdiction. Trice v. Coolidge Banking Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 175, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843.

305 Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5057.

306 Sedgwick v. Casey, 4 Ben. 562, 4 N. B. R. 496, Fed. Cas. No. 12,610.

307 Comegys v. McCord, 11 Ala. 932; Archer v. Brown, 1 Fla. 219.

308 Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 22 L. Ed. 636.

being sued.[309] The provision of the present statute is quite different. It is as follows: "Suit shall not be brought by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed."[310] It is undoubtedly within the power of Congress, in establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy, to prescribe a uniform rule on the subject of the limitation of actions, whether by or against a trustee in bankruptcy, and the rule so established must of necessity supersede all state legislation on the subject which may conflict with it. The rule prescribed is applicable in all courts, state as well as federal, and its effect may be in some cases to prolong, and in others to shorten, the period of limitation given by the law of the state.[311] But since the title of the trustee in bankruptcy relates back to the date of the adjudication, but no further, if a particular cause of action was then barred by the state statute of limitations, the trustee cannot sue upon it.[312] But it is not necessary that a cause of action should originally accrue or arise within two years before suit is brought upon it by the trustee; he may sue at any time within two years after the closing of the estate, provided the cause of action existed at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[313] But where the action is commenced in due season, but the trustee directs the clerk of the court not to issue the summons, and it is not issued or served until more than two years after the closing of the estate, the action will be barred.[314]

§ 417. Same; What Suits and Proceedings Barred.—Generally speaking, the special statute of limitations prescribed by the bankruptcy act applies to all judicial contests between the trustee in bankruptcy and any person whose interest is adverse to his,[315] and hence to a suit to collect a debt or recover any property constituting assets of the estate,[316] an action to compel specific performance of a contract to sell and convey land to the bankrupt,[317] to set aside a deed absolute in form under which the grantee claimed adversely to the bankrupt,[318] to annul a judg-

309 McLaughlin v. Upton, 2 Wyo. 32.

310 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11d.

311 Peiper v. Harmer, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 100, 5 N. B. R. 252; Rock v. Dennett, 155 Mass. 500, 30 N. E. 171; Arnold Grocery Co. v. Shackelford (Ga.) 79 S. E. 470.

312 In re Dunavant, 96 Fed. 542, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41; Sheldon v. Parker, 66 Neb. 610, 92 N. W. 923, 95 N. W. 1015; Cohen v. George, 149 Ga. 701, 101 S. E. 803.

313 Trustees of Mutual Building Fund v. Bosseiux, 4 Hughes, 387, 3 Fed. 817.

314 Walker v. Towner, 4 Dill. 165, 16 N. B. R. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 17,089.

315 Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 22 L. Ed. 636.

316 Jenkins v. International Bank, 106 U. S. 571, 2 Sup. Ct. 1, 27 L. Ed. 304; Doty v. Johnson, 6 Fed. 481; Payson v. Coffin, 4 Dill. 386, Fed. Cas. No. 10858; Ross v. Wilcox, 134 Mass. 21; Arnold Grocery Co. v. Shackelford, 140 Ga. 585, 79 S. E. 470. But see Smith v. Crawford, 6 Ben. 497, 9 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 13,030.

317 Ruff's Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 310, 11 Atl. 553.

318 Jenkins v. Rosenberg, 105 Ill. 157.

ment confessed by the bankrupt under such circumstances as to make it a voidable preference,[319] to enforce against stockholders of the bankrupt corporation the payment of the balance due on their shares,[320] or to compel a transfer of stock on the books of the corporation,[321] as also to an action against the administrator of a deceased bankrupt to recover the proceeds of insurance policies on the bankrupt's life,[322] or to set aside a sale under foreclosure of a mortgage,[323] or a tax deed on property of the estate in bankruptcy,[324] or a suit to enjoin the trustee in bankruptcy from selling property claimed adversely by the plaintiff.[325] But it was held that the corresponding clause of the act of 1867 did not apply to a proceeding against the bankrupt himself, not cast in the form of a plenary suit, to compel him to surrender property omitted from his schedule and alleged to be fraudulently withheld from the trustee,[326] nor to a proceeding taken merely as a step in the administration of the estate and involving merely the authority of the court of bankruptcy to ascertain and settle liens claimed upon the property of the estate,[327] nor to a proceeding to review a bill in equity.[328] It was also considered that the provision of the act of 1867 should not be held to apply to actions founded upon causes arising after the estate comes to the hands of the trustee,[329] and hence not to adverse claims arising out of an equitable attachment and an assignment of the bankrupt's interest under a testamentary trust, where both attachment and assignment were subsequent to the assignment in bankruptcy.[330] And it seems that, even in cases where the trustee in bankruptcy would be barred by the statute, it will not prevent an action by his grantee.[331]

§ 418. Same; Ignorance of Cause of Action and Concealed Frauds.—The bankruptcy act of 1867 prohibited the maintenance of any action by or against the assignee when brought "more than two years after the cause of action accrued." But it was generally held that when the assignee's cause of action arose from a fraud concealed by the opposite

[319] Reber v. Gundy, 16 Fed. 801.

[320] Payson v. Coffin, 5 Dill. 473, Fed. Cas. No. 10,859.

[321] Moses v. St. Paul, 67 Ala. 168.

[322] Avery v. Cleary, 132 U. S. 604, 10 Sup. Ct. 220, 33 L. Ed. 469.

[323] Phelan v. O'Brien, 12 Fed. 428.

[324] Gage v. Du Puy, 127 Ill. 216, 19 N. E. 878.

[325] West Portland Homestead Ass'n v. Lownsdale, 17 Fed. 205, 9 Sawy. 106.

[326] Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 25 L. Ed. 473; Thomas v. Blythe, 55 Fed. 961, 5 C. C. A. 356. Compare Leech v. Dawson, 23 Fed. 654.

[327] In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482. But see In re Churchman, 5 Fed. 181; In re Krogman, 5 N. B. R. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 7,936.

[328] Wilt v. Stickney, 15 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 17,854. But see Webster v. Gaff, 6 Colo. 475.

[329] Bowen v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 153 N. Y. 476, 47 N. E. 907, 60 Am. St. Rep. 667. Compare Norton v. De La Villebeuve, 1 Woods, 163, 13 N. B. R. 304, Fed. Cas. No. 10,350; Rock v. Dennett, 155 Mass. 500, 30 N. E. 171.

[330] Hammond v. Whittredge, 204 U. S. 538, 27 Sup. Ct. 396, 51 L. Ed. 606.

[331] Burton v. Perry, 146 Ill. 71, 34 N. E. 60.

party, or which from its nature remained secret, the statute did not begin to run until the fraud was discovered,[332] at least if there was no reason to impute laches to the assignee or want of due diligence in discovering the fraud.[333] It was said: "The courts have ingrafted on this act the recognized rule as to statutes of limitation, that if the facts on which any right of action is based have been fraudulently concealed by the parties in interest, or if the fraud is of such a character as conceals itself, the statute will only commence to run from the date of the discovery of the fraud, or of such information as, if diligently followed up, would discover it." [334] But this implied exception can be supported only on the theory that a cause of action cannot properly be said to "accrue" until the plaintiff has knowledge of the circumstances on which his action may be based. The language of the present bankruptcy act is essentially different. It provides that "suit shall not be brought by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed." [335] This appears to be absolutely prohibitive, and to admit of no exception whatever. If, therefore, an estate has been closed for more than two years, and then a fraud is unearthed which resulted in withholding assets which should have been administered in the bankruptcy proceedings, it appears that the proper course for the trustee is to apply for an order reopening the estate.

§ 419. Same; Parties Affected by Statute.—On this point the provisions of the act of 1867 and those of the present statute are sufficiently similar to make the earlier decisions of the courts instructive. The clause relating to the limitation of actions in the act of 1867 referred to suits "between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest;" that in the act of 1898 relates to suits "by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate." Under the former act it was held that the limitation did not apply to an action by or against a purchaser from the assignee in bankruptcy, where the cause of action arose after the purchase,[336] although, if the statute had already begun to run against the assignee at the time of the sale, it would continue to run against

[332] Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185, 4 Sup. Ct. 382, 28 L. Ed. 395; Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 22 L. Ed. 636; Scott v. Devlin, 89 Fed. 970; Shainwald v. Davids, 69 Fed. 687; Duff v. First Nat. Bank, 13 Fed. 65; Martin v. Fullings, 3 Fed. 206; Nicholas v. Murray, 5 Sawy. 320, 18 N. B. R. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 10,223; Pritchard v. Chandler, 2 Curt. 488, Fed. Cas. No. 11,436; Forbes v. Overby, 4 Hughes, 441, Fed. Cas. No. 4,928a; Fullings v. Fullings, Fed. Cas. No. 5,151a; Toney v. Spragins, 80 Ala. 541.

[333] Pearsall v. Smith, 149 U. S. 231, 13 Sup. Ct. 833, 37 L. Ed. 713; Andrews v. Dole, 11 N. B. R. 352, Fed. Cas. No. 373.

[334] Yancy v. Cothran, 32 Fed. 687; Bailey v. Glover, 21 Wall. 342, 22 L. Ed. 636.

[335] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11a.

[336] Brewer v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., 128 La. 544, 54 South. 987; Burton v. Perry, 146 Ill. 71, 34 N. E. 60.

his vendee,[337] and of course the latter could not sue on a cause of action which was already barred before the transfer of the property to him.[338] It was also held that the limitation did not affect an action brought by the bankrupt himself respecting property rights which the assignee had abandoned or had elected not to take,[339] nor a suit by a person claiming under a conveyance made by the bankrupt before the adjudication in bankruptcy.[340] So also, where a decree was made by the court of bankruptcy establishing the priority of the lien of one certain creditor over all other creditors, it was held that a creditor who had not been made a party to the proceeding and had no notice of it was not barred by the statute from asserting his rights more than two years after the date of the decree.[341] But where a creditor brings an action to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance, not claiming any peculiar rights for himself, but simply because the assignee has refused to sue, he is as much bound by the statute as the assignee himself would be.[342]

§ 420. Same; Pleading the Statute.—The special short statute of limitations prescribed by the bankruptcy act, like any other statute of limitations, must be taken advantage of either by demurrer or answer; if not pleaded, it will be waived, since it does not take away the jurisdiction of the court in which the action may be brought, but only puts an end to the action if seasonably set up.[343] And therefore if an action begun by the bankrupt, and in which the trustee is substituted as plaintiff, is allowed to proceed to judgment without any objection being taken on the ground that the statute of limitations had run against it, the proceeds of the judgment cannot be claimed by the bankrupt, but belong to the estate in bankruptcy.[344]

§ 421. Same; Laches of Trustee or Claimants.—Even without special reference to the statute of limitations, an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to collect a debt, avoid a fraudulent conveyance, or recover a preference, may be successfully defended on the ground of his laches, if he has unreasonably and negligently refrained from asserting his claims as trustee, and rights have meanwhile accrued which are of [337] Greene v. Taylor, 132 U. S. 413, 10 Sup. Ct. 138, 33 L. Ed. 411; Rock v. Dennett, 155 Mass. 500, 30 N. E. 171.

[338] Lewis v. Prendergast, 45 Minn. 533, 48 N. W. 439.

[339] Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 12 Sup. Ct. 799, 36 L. Ed. 609. See Maybin v. Raymond, 15 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 9,338; Brewer v. Brewer, 145 La. 835, 83 South. 30.

[340] Ludeling v. Chaffe, 143 U. S. 301, 12 Sup. Ct. 439, 36 L. Ed. 313.

[341] Tennessee & C. R. Co. v. East Alabama Ry. Co., 75 Ala. 516, 51 Am. Rep. 475.

[342] Freelander v. Holloman, 9 N. B. R. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 5,081.

[343] Upton v. McLaughlin, 105 U. S. 640, 26 L. Ed. 1197; Bartles v. Gibson, 17 Fed. 293.

[344] Maybin v. Raymond, 15 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 9,338.

value and should be respected.[345] Thus, the statute requires claims against an estate in bankruptcy to be exhibited within one year after the adjudication, and also requires a creditor who has received a preference to surrender the same as a condition precedent to his right to prove his claim. But where a trustee in bankruptcy failed to take any steps towards the avoidance of an alleged preference until the year had so nearly expired that there did not remain to the preferred creditor a reasonably sufficient time in which to surrender his preference and prove his claim, it was held that the trustee's subsequent suit to avoid the preference should be dismissed on account of his laches.[346] But the trustee is not barred, on the ground of laches, from asserting rights under the liens of execution creditors upon property held by the bankrupt under a contract of conditional sale, which liens had been preserved for the benefit of the estate by order of the court of bankruptcy, simply because he first based his right to relief solely upon the ground that an unlawful preference was created through the payment of an indebtedness by the transfer of the property to the vendor by the bankrupt when insolvent.[347] And the trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation whose treasurer had used its funds without authority to purchase stocks in his own name, which he pledged with a bank as collateral for his notes, was held not barred by laches from proceeding to enforce the constructive trust affecting the stock in favor of the company, where it appeared that the last of the stock had been purchased in October, 1912, and the petition in bankruptcy was filed in May, 1915, and the stock did not come into the possession of the bank until the day of the assignment in bankruptcy.[348] So, the fact that the trustee allowed an attaching creditor to proceed to judgment in his suit against a debtor of the bankrupt, is not necessarily laches preventing him from proceeding to set aside the judgment.[349]

Laches may also be imputed to claimants against the estate in bankruptcy. Thus, where a claimant had been fraudulently induced to sell goods to the bankrupt, which were delivered December 9, 1912, and had [345] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; Kinder v. Scharff, 231 U. S. 517, 34 Sup. Ct. 164, 58 L. Ed. 343; Swartz v. Frank, 183 Mo. 438, 82 S. W. 60; Beall v. Dushne, 149 Pa. St. 439, 24 Atl. 284; Jacobson v. Sims, 60 Atl. 185.

[346] Swartz v. Frank, 183 Mo. 438, 82 S. W. 60. But a delay of four months on the part of a trustee in bankruptcy, after the filing of a claim against the estate, before he moved that it should be expunged unless a preference were first surrendered, was held not such laches as to defeat his right, where no injury resulted to the creditor. In re Star Spring Bed Co. (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 133, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650, affirming (D. C.) 257 Fed. 176, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

[347] Rock Island Plow Co. v. Reardon, 222 U. S. 354, 32 Sup. Ct. 164, 56 L. Ed. 231, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

[348] Millard v. Green, 94 Conn. 597, 110 Atl. 177, 9 A. L. R. 1610.

[349] Wilson v. Van Buren County Farmers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 184 Mich. 530, 151 N. W. 752.

knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings between the 10th and 12th of the same month, but filed no intervening petition claiming the goods or the proceeds until May 24, 1913, it was held that his right to rescind the sale was barred by laches.[350]

§ 422. Same; Effect of Reopening Estate.—The bankruptcy act of 1898 authorizes a court of bankruptcy to close the estate of a bankrupt whenever it appears that it has been fully administered, and to reopen such an estate whenever it appears that it was closed before being fully administered.[351] And when a closed estate is reopened on a petition by creditors or the former trustee, showing that certain solvent claims had not been collected, subsequent suits brought to collect such claims are not barred by the special statute of limitations, although the estate was not reopened until more than two years after the final settlement and closing of it.[352] But the opinion has been advanced that an estate cannot thus be reopened for the purpose of allowing the trustee to bring a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance by the bankrupt, on the theory that property conveyed away by a bankrupt, although for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, is not property of his estate until the sale is set aside, and therefore the existence of a cause of action in the trustee to vacate such a conveyance is insufficient to show that the estate was not fully administered when it was closed by order of the court.[353]

§ 423. Parties.—In an action by a trustee in bankruptcy, the complaint should represent him as suing in his official capacity, and not as an individual, but when this is done, the fact that his name, in the caption, is followed by the word "trustee," instead of the words "as trustee," is immaterial.[354] If the same trustee is appointed for two bankrupts individually and also for the firm of which they are the members, in the same proceeding, he holds but one office, and may sue to set aside a fraudulent conveyance made by the bankrupts jointly.[355] He generally sues in his own name as trustee in bankruptcy, but if a technical legal title to the property in suit is outstanding in the name of another, it will be necessary for the trustee (the local rules of practice so requiring) to use the name of such other as the nominal plaintiff

[350] In re Watmough (D. C.) 210 Fed. 539, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59. And see In re Jamison Bros. & Co., 227 Fed. 30, 142 C. C. A. 3, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 725.

[351] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 8.

[352] Bilafsky v. Abraham, 183 Mass. 401, 67 N. E. 318. Contra, under the act of 1867, see Geisreiter v. Sevier, 33 Ark. 522; Scott v. Little, 76 Fed. 563.

[353] Kinder v. Sharff, 129 La. 218, 55 South. 769.

[354] Newland v. Zodikow, 39 Misc. Rep. 541, 80 N. Y. Supp. 375.

[355] Wright v. Simon, 52 Misc. Rep. 360, 102 N. Y. Supp. 1108.

in the action.[356] Conversely, in any proceedings affecting property or assets of the estate, the trustee in bankruptcy must be made a party, or he will not be bound by the decree.[357] Thus, he is a necessary party to a bill to foreclose a mortgage given by the bankrupt.[358] As to the joinder of parties, bankruptcy follows the general rule of equity, that all those should be brought in who have any interests in the subject-matter of the suit or claims upon it, or whose rights may be prejudicially affected by the decree to be made in the case, in order that complete justice to all concerned may be effected at one time.[359] Thus, a trustee in bankruptcy, suing for money paid by the bankrupt to a corporation without consideration, should, as a protection in case the corporation might be or become insolvent, join as defendants all those shown by the complaint to be personally liable.[360] And all the shareholders of an insolvent corporation who received dividends paid out of capital assets, may be joined in one action instituted by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover the amount of the dividends.[361] So in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy, based upon a state statute which prohibits transfers to corporate officers and directors when the corporation's insolvency is imminent, with intent to prefer, all the various officers and directors may be made parties defendant, although they are not equally liable and though they were not all concerned in such transfer.[362] But an objection on the ground of a want of necessary parties will be available only in so far as it prevents the doing of complete justice without the presence of the omitted parties, and it will not be allowed to prevent relief which can be given as between the parties before the court, and which will not affect the rights of the omitted parties.[363] But on the [356] Bacon v. George, 206 Mass. 566, 92 N. E. 721; Traders' Ins. Co. v. Mann, 118 Ga. 381, 45 S. E. 426. After the adjudication, an action against a debtor of the bankrupt cannot be maintained in the name of the bankrupt's previous assignee for creditors, nor by the trustee suing in the name of such assignee. Gilbert v. Mechanics' & Metals' Nat. Bank, 95 Misc. Rep. 364, 160 N. Y. Supp. 710.

[357] Atkinson v. Farmers' Bank, Crabbe, 529, Fed. Cas. No. 609. See Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Floyd, 158 N. C. 455, 74 S. E. 465; Magruder v. Hattiesburg Trust & Banking Co., 108 Miss. 857, 67 South. 485.

[358] Clark v. Clark, 56 N. H. 105.

[359] United Sheet & Tin Plate Co. v. Hess, 159 Fed. 889, 87 C. C. A. 69, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; In re Kane, 161 Fed. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; In re Beede, 126 Fed. 853, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re Baudoulne, 9 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55. See In re Frey's Estate, 237 Pa. St. 269, 85 Atl. 147; West v. Empire Life Ins. Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 303, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462. And see, as to the right of intervention in suits brought by the trustee in bankruptcy, West v. Empire Life Ins. Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 605, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93.

[360] Billings v. Charles Millar & Son Co. (D. C.) 227 Fed. 185, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 846.

[361] Carlisle v. Ottley, 143 Ga. 797, 85 S. E. 1010, L. R. A. 1917C, 393, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 573. And see Sherrill v. Hutson, 187 Ala. 189, 65 South. 538.

[362] Sherwood v. Holbrook, 178 App. Div. 462, 165 N. Y. Supp. 514.

[363] Greenhall v. Carnegie Trust Co. (D. C.) 180 Fed. 812, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep.

other hand, it is not necessary to bring in parties who may have some contingent or ultimate rights in the subject of the suit, if those rights are not to be affected by the proceeding immediately before the court.[364] Thus, ordinarily, in suits to vacate fraudulent transfers and the like, judgment creditors of the bankrupt are not necessary parties.[365] So, in a suit to set aside a transfer of the bankrupt's interest in a partnership to a third person, the bankrupt's partner is not a necessary party.[366] And in an action to vacate an alleged fraudulent chattel mortgage, persons to whom the bankrupt had subsequently given other chattel mortgages on the same property are not necessary parties.[367] And a fraudulent transferee of property, who has transferred the property to another fraudulent transferee, need not be joined.[368] And in a suit by the trustee against the bankrupt's wife, to whom he had assigned policies of insurance on his life, to determine the amount of premiums paid in fraud of creditors, the insurer is not a necessary party.[369] And it is no objection to the trustee's bringing a suit to recover assets in the form of a creditors' bill, that there are also other creditors of the defendant, for in such a bill, the complainant sues as one of a class for the benefit of all members thereof who may become parties.[370] But if property of the bankrupt is subject to a valid lien, the mere taking possession of the property by the court of bankruptcy does not make the holder of the lien a party to the proceedings in bankruptcy.[371] In a suit by a trustee to establish rights in property within the district, a non-resident defendant claiming adversely may be brought in by an order and service by publication.[372]

§ 424. Same; Joinder of Bankrupt.—The bankrupt is neither a necessary nor a proper party to any action relative to the assets of his estate in the hands of his trustee; and it is not necessary to join him as a party of record in any such proceeding, whether the suit be brought by the trustee or brought against him, and whether its object is to 300; Peninsula Bank of Williamsburg v. Wolcott, 232 Fed. 68, 146 C. C. A. 260, Ann. Cas. 1918C, 477; 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327.

364 Vollkommer v. Frank, 107 App. Div. 594, 95 N. Y. Supp. 324; Bank of Waldron v. Euper, 93 Ark. 609, 125 S. W. 1022.

365 Traders' Bank v. Campbell, 14 Wall. 87, 20 L. Ed. 832; Smith v. Belden, 35 Misc. Rep. 113, 71 N. Y. Supp. 246; Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 19 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

366 Lamb v. Hall, 147 Cal. 37, 81 Pac. 286.

367 Shanks v. National Casket Co., 95 App. Div. 187, 88 N. Y. Supp. 839.

368 Skillen v. Endelman, 39 Misc. Rep. 261, 79 N. Y. Supp. 413.

369 Bailey v. Wood, 202 Mass. 562, 89 N. E. 149.

370 Stotesbury v. Cadwallader, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 281, Fed. Cas. No. 13,498. But see Biggs v. Westen, 248 Mo. 333, 154 S. W. 708.

371 In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291. But see Exler v. Wickes Bros., 263 Pa. 150, 106 Atl. 233.

372 Horskins v. Sanderson, 132 Fed.

collect a debt, recover a preference, avoid a fraudulent transfer, or establish a title to, or lien upon, property in the possession of the trustee.[373]

§ 425. Representation of Trustee by Counsel for Bankrupt.—Since the interests of the trustee in bankruptcy are usually antagonistic to those of the bankrupt, and since it is frequently the duty of the former to frustrate the latter's fraudulent attempts to conceal assets or put them beyond the reach of creditors, or to benefit one creditor at the expense of others, it is clearly contrary to the policy of the law that the same attorney should act both for the trustee and for the bankrupt. And this has been enacted into a rule of court in some of the federal districts. But it has been held that such a rule applies only to proceedings in the bankruptcy case before the bankruptcy court. that it has no application to a suit by the trustee in a state court, and that it is no defense to a suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy, in equity, to recover assets of the bankrupt alleged to be in the possession of the defendant, that the plaintiff's attorney was attorney for the bankrupt in the bankruptcy proceedings.[374]

§ 426. Injunction and Receivership.—It has already been shown that the court of bankruptcy has authority, pending adjudication upon a petition in bankruptcy or pending the appointment of a trustee, to enjoin all persons from intermeddling with the property of the bankrupt or from disposing of such property as may be in their hands, and also, if necessary for the preservation of the estate, to take possession of it through a receiver.[375] It remains to be stated that the trustee in bankruptcy, when proceeding to collect the assets, may also have the aid of these powerful remedies when necessary.[376] When he brings suit to recover an alleged preference or to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance, he may obtain an injunction restraining the defendant from disposing of the property or letting it go out of his hands pending the suit,[377] provided he shows some emergency justifying such action or 415, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; Olcott v. Maclean, 73 N. Y. 223.

[373] Wall v. Cox, 101 Fed. 403, 41 C. C. A. 408, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659; Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 156 Fed. 504, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; Buckingham v. Estes, 128 Fed. 584, 63 C. C. A. 20, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; French v. R. P. Smith & Sons Co., 81 Minn. 341, 84 N. W. 44; Edwards v. Schillinger, 148 Ill. App. 227; Frank v. Musliner, 76 App. Div. 616, 78 N. Y. Supp. 369; Fry v. Street, 37 Ark. 39. But see Kimbrough v. Alred, 202 Ala. 413, 80 South. 617.

[374] Callahan v. Israel, 186 Mass. 383, 71 N. E. 812.

[375] See supra, §§ 205, 210.

[376] A court of bankruptcy has power to enjoin the violation of a contract made with a trustee in bankruptcy. In re Consumers Albany Brewing Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 235, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

[377] In re Norris, 177 Fed. 598, 24 Am.

some imminent danger of loss which the court would be unable to redress,[378] and where his claim is to the possession of specific property, presently within the reach of the court, he may be entitled to an injunction restraining its shipment out of the district until after the termination of the suit.[379] But this remedy cannot be availed of where the defendant has rights in the property which are independent of the bankruptcy proceedings and not to be affected thereby. Thus, a trustee in bankruptcy of a husband cannot maintain a bill to restrain the husband and wife from alienating property which they hold by that peculiar tenure still surviving in some states, known as "tenancy by entireties."[380] In cases where the remedy by injunction does not appear sufficient, and particularly where it appears that the defendant in the action is not solvent, or would be financially unable to restore the value of the property in suit if he should meanwhile dispose of it, the trustee may apply for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of it, and this should be granted in a proper case.[381] This was held properly done, for instance, in a case where the property alleged to have been fraudulently transferred to the defendants was a stock of merchandise, and it appeared that it consisted of goods subject to deterioration and fluctuation in price, and that it had not been inventoried, so that its value could not be correctly estimated, and that the defendants were probably not worth much more than the amount of their debts.[382] But proof of the defendant's insolvent or at least unstable financial condition is essential to the granting of this relief,[383] and a receiver should not be appointed where there is a probability that a Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Schwartzman, 167 Fed. 399, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 885; Blake v. Nesbet, 144 Fed. 279, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269; In re Latimer, 141 Fed. 665, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Jobbins v. Montague, 23 N. J. Eq. 182; Hane v. Crown & Keystone Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 439, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; Hall v. Glenn (D. C.) 247 Fed. 997, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; In re Schilling (D. C.) 264 Fed. 357, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147.

[378] Beecher v. Bininger, 7 Blatchf. 170, Fed. Cas. No. 1,222; Rowland v. Auto Car Co., 133 Fed. 835, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799. Application by a trustee in bankruptcy for a preliminary injunction to restrain defendants from transferring property alleged to have been acquired by them through a preferential transfer should be denied, where the only allegations connecting them with the transaction or charging their intention to sell the property are made on information and belief, and there is no allegation or showing of their insolvency. Lyle v. Perry (D. C.) 250 Fed. 307, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307.

[379] Pyle v. Texas Transport & Terminal Co., 185 Fed. 309, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829.

[380] Weiss v. Beihl, 232 Pa. St. 97, 81 Atl. 148.

[381] Petrie v. Buffington, 79 W. Va. 113, 90 S. E. 557.

[382] Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546.

[383] Webb v. Manheim, 109 App. Div. 63, 95 N. Y. Supp. 1003; McKenzie v. Thomas, 118 Ga. 728, 45 S. E. 610. Where respondent corporation did an independent business and had goods honestly belonging to it and creditors to whom it was indebted, and was not insolvent, a receiver should not be appointed to assist a trustee in bankruptcy of re-valid claim of set-off existing in the defendant may wipe out the indebtedness sued for.[384] In any case, a receiver thus appointed should only be charged with the preservation of the property, and he should not be authorized to sell it,[385] unless possibly in the case of perishable property.[386] Even if a sufficient case for the appointment of a receiver is not made out, the trustee in bankruptcy, suing in equity to establish rights in property, may have a writ of sequestration to prevent the removal of the property from the district.[387] And if his attempt to realize the value of assets claimed to belong to the estate in bankruptcy, by a suit to quiet title, is met by an assertion of title on the part of the defendant and an attempt to enjoin him from proceeding with his suit, the opinion has been advanced that he may be entitled to a writ of prohibition, addressed to the state court in which the injunction is asked, forbidding it to grant the writ.[388]

§ 427. Pleading; Allegations of Trustee's Bill or Complaint.—In any bill or complaint by a trustee in bankruptcy, it is first of all necessary for him to show his official capacity and right to sue, by alleging the adjudication of bankruptcy and his own appointment as trustee.[389] But it is probably not necessary to set out in detail the various steps in the bankruptcy proceeding, but only the two essential facts of the adjudication and appointment, which may be alleged to have been by orders or decrees "duly made or given."[390] The trustee should also aver that he is the beneficial owner of the property in question, or that it belongs to the bankrupt's estate, or was held for him spondent's managing stockholder to trace property which he fraudulently concealed from his creditors by means of respondent corporation. Sprague v. L. D. Margolis Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 171.

384 Rowland v. Auto Car Co., 133 Fed. 835, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799.

385 Small v. Muller, 67 App. Div. 143, 73 N. Y. Supp. 667.

386 Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546.

387 Horskins v. Sanderson, 132 Fed. 415, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101, citing Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Sears, 20 Blatchf. 23, 9 Fed. 8; Same v. Jones, 21 Blatchf. 138, 13 Fed. 567.

388 Hudson v. Judge of Superior Court, 42 Mich. 239, 3 N. W. 850, 913.

389 Van Slyke v. Huntington (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 86, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173. But the trustee's complaint need not aver permission to bring the suit, as he derives that authority from the bankruptcy act. Harlin v. American Trust Co., 67 Ind. App. 213, 119 N. E. 20. It is probably not necessary for the trustee to allege that he has not been discharged as a trustee before the institution of the suit, but an admission to that effect may be availed of by the defendant. Bausman v. Mead, 182 Ill. App. 35.

390 In re Seger Bros. Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 459, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; Bouton v. Wheeler, 118 App. Div. 426, 104 N. Y. Supp. 33; Mears v. Shaw, 32 Mont. 575, 81 Pac. 338; Wheelock v. Lee, 15 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 24, 10 N. B. R. 363; Seaton v. Scovill, 18 Kan. 433, 21 Am. Rep. 212, note, 26 Am. Rep. 779. It has been said that, in suing for the recovery of assets, the trustee need not aver in his complaint the various steps in the bankruptcy proceeding, as they are not ultimate but probative facts; the pleading is good if he alleges ownership in himself, for under such an allegation he can prove the bankruptcy and his own or for his benefit, as the case may be,[391] and should show whether the right of action is one vesting originally in himself as trustee or one originally accruing to the bankrupt,[392] but when he sues in trover for a conversion of goods occurring either before or after the bankruptcy, he may join in the declaration a count upon the bankrupt's title and a count upon the trustee's title.[393] If the action is at law, and for the recovery of money alleged to belong to the bankrupt, a demand should be alleged and also the fact that the money has not already been paid over to the bankrupt,[394] but in equity, no allegation of a previous demand is necessary, the rule in equity being that the bringing of the suit is itself a sufficient demand.[395] But where, pending an action on an unpaid stock subscription, a trustee in bankruptcy was appointed and substituted as plaintiff, it was held that the complaint must allege notice to the stockholder and an opportunity to be heard as to the validity of claims.[396] And the opinion has been advanced that, since a trustee in bankruptcy should not delay in taking charge of the property of the estate, if his delay would work any injustice to parties interested, a bill by the trustee to gain possession of property of the bankrupt should show that there has been no unnecessary delay.[397] When the action is to recover a mere debt, or, generally, where it is a suit which the bankrupt himself might have prosecuted, it is not necessary for the trustee to allege that he has not sufficient assets in his hands to pay all the debts of the estate,[398] but otherwise where the suit is to set aside a fraudulent transfer or recover the proceeds thereof.[399] appointment. Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439. But if he undertakes to set out in detail the manner in which he claims to have become the owner of the property, by alleging the proceedings in bankruptcy, it is fatal to the declaration if he omits to allege the adjudication in bankruptcy. Wright v. Johnson, 8 Blatchf. 150, 4 N. B. R. 626, Fed. Cas. No. 18,082. But compare, as to this last point, Lakin v. First Nat. Bank, 13 Blatchf. 83, Fed. Cas. No. 7,999. Where the plaintiff's appointment as trustee in bankruptcy is denied, it must be proved, and judgment given in his favor without proof of such appointment is erroneous. Van Houten v. Oliver, 91 N. Y. Supp. 36. Further, as to showing authority of trustee to sue, see Security Trust Co. v. Glazier, 170 Mich. 26, 135 N. W. 904; Anderson v. Stayton State Bank, 82 Or. 357, 159 Pac. 1033.

ty Co., 174 Ala. 490. 57 South. 34. Where

[391] A. Dreher & Co. v. National Sure-

summary process of the bankruptcy court is invoked against a third person, alleged to be in possession of property of the bankrupt, want of title in the defendant, or that his title is merely colorable, must be alleged and proved. In re Flanigan (D. C.) 228 Fed. 339, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807.

[392] Murray v. Beal, 97 Fed. 567, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[393] Burns v. O'Gorman Co., 150 Fed. 226, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[394] Cohen v. Wagar, 87 App. Div. 255, 84 N. Y. Supp. 377.

[395] Wright v. Skinner, 136 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

[396] Chamberlain v. Piercy, 82 Wash. 157, 143 Pac. 977.

[397] Trenholm v. Miles, 106 Miss. 467, 64 South. 209.

[398] Drew v. Myers, 81 Neb. 750, 116 N. W. 781, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 350; Benner v. Billings, 107 Wash. 1, 181 Pac. 19.

[399] Seager v. Armstrong, 95 Minn. 414,

The trustee's declaration, complaint, or bill is likewise subject to the ordinary rules of pleading which require certainty and definiteness in the statement of a plaintiff's case and the inclusion of all facts necessary to make out a clear right of action. Examples of the application of these rules may be seen in the cases cited in the margin.[400] On an issue in bankruptcy as to the priority of a mortgage lien, the bill should allege the names of all the creditors of the bankrupt other than the mortgagee, the amounts of their debts, the character of the same, and when they arose or were created.[401]

§ 428. Pleading; Defenses to Trustee's Bill or Complaint.—In an action by a trustee in bankruptcy, the defendant may deny the plaintiff's official capacity or right to sue, which constitutes a plea in bar, and not in abatement,[402] or he may allege that a suit upon the same cause of action, brought by the bankrupt himself in another court, and in which the trustee should have intervened, is still pending and undetermined.[403] If the trustee's bill is to set aside a conveyance or transfer and contains allegations of fraud, there must be an answer denying the fraud, without which a general demurrer should not be allowed.[404] And generally in actions of this kind, although the answer need not set forth in detail all the circumstances of the transaction, it should be responsive to the bill and should contain specific allegations covering the ground of intended defense, as, that the defendant paid a present and adequate consideration in cash, that he purchased in good faith and without intention to delay or defraud the bankrupt's creditors, or otherwise as the case may be.[405] So, in an action to recover an alleged preference, the defend-

104 N. W. 479; Roney v. Conable, 125 Iowa, 664, 101 N. W. 505; Mayhew v. Todisman, 246 Mo. 288, 151 S. W. 436; Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712. Contra, Kraver v. Abrahams, 203 Fed. 782, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

[400] See Crowe v. Baumann, 190 Fed. 399, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; Cohen v. Wagar, 183 N. Y. 33, 75 N. E. 691; Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 186, 82 N. Y. Supp. 235; Carr v. Myers, 211 Pa. St. 349, 60 Atl. 913; Herzberg v. Riddle, 171 Ala. 368, 54 South. 635; Dickey v. Gray Lumber Co., 127 Ga. 460, 56 S. E. 481; Smith v. Auerbach, 2 Mont. 348; McKey v. Smith, 255 Ill. 465, 99 N. E. 695; Sparks v. Weatherly (Ala.) 58 South. 280; Rodolf v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Okl. 631, 121 Pac. 629, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 204; In re Berkman, 201 Fed. 180; In re Young, 206 Fed. 187, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82; Ratcliff v. Clendenin, 232 Fed. 61, 146 C. C. A. 253; Johnson v. Canfield-Swigart Co., 292 Ill. 101, 126 N. E. 608; Corey v. Blackwell Lumber Co., 24 Idaho, 642, 135 Pac. 742.

[401] Teague v. Anderson Hardware Co., 161 Fed. 765, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

[402] Peel v. Ringgold, 6 Ark. 546. As to pleading an estoppel against the trustee in bankruptcy, see Coleman v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 273 Mo. 620, 201 S. W. 544.

[403] Radford v. Folsom, 4 McCrary, 527, 14 Fed. 97.

[404] Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669.

[405] McNulty v. Wiesen, 130 Fed. 1012, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341. Or that the property in question was exempt from execution and therefore not within the statute. Meyer v. Perkins, 20 Cal. App. 661, 130 Pac. 206. Where the conveyance of a bankrupt is attacked as in fraud of creditors, the grantee may plead limita-ant should plead the essential facts of his defense, as, that the property transferred did not belong to the bankrupt, but to his wife,[406] that he had no knowledge of the insolvency of the debtor and no reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended,[407] or that the goods in question were not taken by defendant in payment of a debt, but on the rescission of a sale of them to the bankrupt, which had been induced by the latter's false and fraudulent representations,[408] or, in the case of an attaching creditor, that the debtor was not insolvent when the attachment and judgment were secured and that the judgment has been paid.[409] But in a suit by a bankrupt's trustee to set aside certain alleged preferential transfers of personal property, a cross-bill by interveners seeking to impress a trust in their favor on certain property in the hands of the trustee, is not germane to the original bill and therefore is without equity.[410] And in a suit by the trustee to set aside a conveyance made by the bankrupt within four months of the filing of the petition, the grantee cannot defend on the ground that the rents of the property, which was in the possession of a receiver, were sufficient to pay all claims filed in the bankruptcy court, where it does not appear that the grantee consented to such use of the rents, inasmuch as the rents, in the event of a decree sustaining the conveyance, would belong to him.[411]

§ 429. Pleadings in Suits Against Trustees.—A bill in equity against a trustee in bankruptcy which alleges that the complainant held a mortgage on property of the bankrupt, and was induced by the fraudulent representations of the bankrupt to release the same, and offers to restore the consideration received therefor, states a sufficient cause of action for equitable relief by the restoration of the lien.[412] But great particularity is required in the case of a petition for the restoration to the plaintiff of goods in the hands of the trustee, and which the plaintiff claims under his right to rescind the contract by which they were sold to the bankrupt, on account of its having been induced by the latter's fraud. Such a petition must not only allege all the facts necessary to entitle the petitioner to rescind, but must also set out all the circumtions as a defense to the bankrupt's liabilities existing antecedently to the conveyance. Pace's Trustee v. Pace, 162 Ky. 457, 172 S. W. 925.

406 Goode v. Elwood Lodge, 160 Ind. 251, 66 N. E. 742.

407 Gamble v. Elkin, 205 Pa. St. 226, 54 Atl. 782.

408 American Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Taylor, 137 Fed. 321, 70 C. C. A. 21, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231.

409 Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Slaton, 180 Ky. 700, 203 S. W. 565.

410 Lovell v. Latham & Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 374, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191. As to a crossbill setting off claims in favor of the defendant, see West v. Cowan, 189 Ala. 138, 66 South. 816.

411 Ward v. Central Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 344, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323.

412 Cleminshaw v. International Shirt & Collar Co., 165 Fed. 797, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

stances of the transaction and describe the goods in detail. It has been said, in fact, the petition "should contain all the allegations necessary to sustain a complaint in trover and conversion, or required by the strictest practice in an affidavit for replevin." [413] A petition to have assets, transferred by a judgment debtor to the bankrupt, applied to the payment of the judgment, must allege that an execution against the debtor was returned nulla bona.[414] The trustee in bankruptcy, though he has the rights of an attaching creditor, is not ipso facto a bona fide purchaser for value, and that he is such, unaffected by outstanding equities against the bankrupt, is an affirmative defense, which must be pleaded and proved.[415]

§ 430. Burden of Proof and Evidence in Trustee's Suit.—In an action in a state court by a trustee in bankruptcy, it is not necessary for him to establish the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy or the petition on which the bankruptcy proceedings were based, in order to sustain the action; but it is sufficient for him to show the adjudication in bankruptcy and his appointment as trustee.[416] And this may be done by introducing in evidence a certified copy of the order approving his bond, which is declared by the bankruptcy act to be "conclusive evidence of the vesting in him of the title to the property of the bankrupt." [417] The presumption is in favor of the regularity of all the proceedings leading up to the appointment of the trustee, and that, as trustee, he has complied with all the requirements of the law and is qualified to act.[418] Thus, he is not required to produce record proof of an acceptance in writing of his appointment as trustee, or that he has given notice of such appointment.[419] He is presumed to represent the creditors of the bankrupt, and the burden is on one who denies his authority to prove the contrary.[420]

[413] In re Levi & Pickard, 155 Fed. 262, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430. But compare In re Pierce (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 757, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664.

[414] In re Goldberg & Sagman (D. C.) 232 Fed. 194, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[415] Coates v. Smith, 81 Or. 556, 160 Pac. 517.

[416] Cone v. Purcell, 56 N. Y. 649; Carr v. Gale, 2 Ware, 330, Fed. Cas. No. 2,434; Burk v. Winters, 28 Ark. 6, 15 N. B. R. 140. But see Pace v. Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co., 103 Mo. App. 662, 78 S. W. 52, where it was held that, since the bankruptcy law primarily commits the making of an adjudication in bankruptcy to the judge of the court, and only in his absence authorizes the clerk to refer the case to the referee, where an action is brought by a trustee in bankruptcy, and it appears that the adjudication was made by a referee, the jurisdiction of the referee must be established by affirmative proof that the judge was absent. And see also McKey v. Smith, 255 Ill. 465, 99 N. E. 695.

[417] Bankruptcy Act 1898. § 21e. See Wilson v. Taylor, 154 N. C. 211, 70 S. E. 286; Kieffer Bros. v. Wohl, Man. Unrep. Cas. (La.) 385.

[418] Breckons v. Snyder, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575; Laubaugh v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 28 Pa. Super. Ct. 247.

[419] Rogers v. Stevenson, 16 Minn. 68 (Gil. 56); Wooldbridge v. Rickert, 33 La. Ann. 234. And see Babbitt v. Walbrun, 6 N. B. R. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 695.

[420] Oliver v. Hilgers, 88 Minn. 35, 92 N. W. 511.

Where the suit is to recover specific property or its proceeds, the trustee must assume the burden of proving that it belonged to the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication, but this need not be done by direct or positive testimony, if the circumstances of the case do not permit it, but by evidence of facts sufficiently strong to justify the jury in inferring such ownership.[421] So, if the suit is for the recovery of money or property in the hands of a third person, but alleged to belong to the bankrupt, it is essential to show the actual possession of the property by the defendant, and the trustee has the burden of establishing this fact. But since a proceeding of this kind is not criminal in its nature,—although the defendant may be punished for contempt if he fails to comply with an order of the court requiring him to surrender the property,—the trustee is only bound to establish his possession by evidence plain and convincing beyond reasonable controversy.[422] The trustee has also the burden of showing exactly what property of the bankrupt is in the defendant's possession,[423] but if he shows the fraudulent possession of property of the bankrupt by the defendant, he may recover the value of the goods, even if they cannot be precisely identified,[424] and if a fund is once traced into the hands of the defendant, the latter must assume the burden of making some reasonable explanation of its disposition, in order to avoid being required to surrender it.[425] If the action is to recover property conveyed away in fraud of creditors or by way of preference, the trustee has the burden of showing the wrongful character of the transaction, or the defendant's knowledge of its purpose, as the case may be.[426] So, the burden of proving that a sale of property of the bankrupt by one holding it in pledge, made conformably to the contract of pledge, was 421 Burleigh v. Foreman, 130 Fed. 13, 64 C. C. A. 381, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; Clay v. Waters (C. C. A.) 161 Fed. 815, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561; Waters v. Davis, 145 Fed. 912, 76 C. C. A. 444, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667; Talcott v. Goodwin, 3 Day (Conn.) 264; Makins v. Crocker. 193 Fed. 976, 113 C. C. A. 596; Union Trust & Savings Bank v. Amery, 72 Wash. 648, 131 Pac. 199; Collier v. Hopper, 133 Ark. 599, 202 S. W. 687; Ferris v. G. W. Collier Estate, 20 Ga. App. 148, 92 S. E. 758.

422 In re Alphin & Lake Cotton Co., 134 Fed. 477. 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; In re Feldser, 134 Fed. 307, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216; Mowry v. Reed, 187 Mass. 174, 72 N. E. 936; Clay v. Waters (C. C. A.) 161 Fed. 815, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561; In re Rosenzweig, 206 Fed. 360, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

423 Mattley v. Wolfe, 175 Fed. 619, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

424 In re Jackier, 179 Fed. 720, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790; Page v. Moore, 235 Pa. St. 161, 83 Atl. 580. And see Potter v. American Printing & Lithographing Co., 182 Iowa, 458, 165 N. W. 1044.

425 In re Alphin & Lake Cotton Co., 134 Fed. 477, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; Pope v. Cantwell, 206 Fed. 908; In re Silverman, 206 Fed. 960; Woodford v. Rice, 207 Fed. 473, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455.

426 Smith v. Auerbach, 2 Mont. 348; Lynam v. Belfast Nat. Bank, 98 Me. 448, 57 Atl. 799. More particularly, as to burden of proof in actions to set aside fraudulent conveyances, see infra, § 466, and as to preferences, see infra, § 614. On the general rule, see Ignatius v. Farmers' State Bank. 272 Fed. 33, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; Minott v. Johnson (Me.) 113 Atl. 464; Tobin v. Hewitt Co. (Mo. App.) 232 S. W. 257.

unfair or otherwise voidable, is on the trustee.[427] It may also be necessary for the trustee to prove the insolvency of the bankrupt at a given date.[428] But the testimony of the bankrupt at the preliminary examination before the referee, touching his assets and liabilities, is not admissible for this purpose, as the issue is not between the same parties.[429]

§ 431. Evidence in Actions Against Trustee.—One seeking to recover or reclaim property from a trustee in bankruptcy has the burden of proving that it constituted part of the bankrupt's estate when the same passed into the hands of the trustee.[430] And since, presumptively, any property in the possession of the bankrupt and passing from him to his trustee belongs to the estate, the burden is on a claimant to show his superior title or right thereto.[431] Evidence that the bankrupt did not include the property in his schedule of assets filed in the bankruptcy proceeding is indeed admissible on this issue,[432] but it ordinarily requires stronger proof, and it is said such a claim cannot be supported by the uncorroborated testimony of the claimant, where, if true, he could have produced other evidence to fortify it.[433] Likewise the burden is on the claimant to establish by evidence the particular ground on which he claims the property or fund as against the creditors represented by the trustee, as, that the sale of the property to the bankrupt was induced by false and fraudulent representations as to his financial condition,[434] that the sale was conditional and the article not accepted by the bankrupt,[435] or that the transaction was not a sale, but a mere consignment for sale, the title remaining in the claimant.[436]

§ 432. Liability of Trustee for Costs.—As to whether a trustee in bankruptcy, suing as plaintiff in a state court, should be required to furnish security for costs, the matter depends upon the local law and prac-

427 Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 27 Sup. Ct. 681, 51 L. Ed. 945, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Commercial-Germania Trust & Sav. Bank v. Conner, 114 Miss. 644, 75 South. 445.

428 See Clark v. Mulcahy, 190 Mass. 64, 76 N. E. 236; In re F. M. & S. Q. Carlile, 199 Fed. 612, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373; Ernst v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank, 200 Fed. 295. In the absence of countervailing evidence, there is a presumption that a bankrupt was insolvent at the close of the day preceding that on which an involuntary petition was filed against him, followed by an adjudication. In re Star Spring Bed Co. (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 133, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

429 Breckons v. Snyder, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575.

430 In re Marsh, 116 Fed. 396, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

431 In re Burke, 168 Fed. 994, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; In re Heckathorn, 144 Fed. 499, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467.

432 Rudy v. Katz, 66 S. W. 18, 23 Ky. Law Rep. 1697.

433 In re Mayer, 156 Fed. 432, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

434 Ellett-Kendall Shoe Co. v. Ward, 187 Fed. 982, 110 C. C. A. 320, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; In re O'Connor, 114 Fed. 777, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18; In re Berg, 183 Fed. 885, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170.

435 In re Simpson Mfg. Co., 130 Fed. 307, 64 C. C. A. 553, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212.

436 In re Leeds Woolen Mills, 129 Fed. 922, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136.

tice.[437] As to his personal liability for the costs of an unsuccessful suit, the question may be governed by the state law, as where a statute exempts "trustees of an express trust" from personal liability for costs in the absence of misconduct or bad faith, within which rule it is held that a trustee in bankruptcy is the trustee of an express trust, and the question of his liability is not affected by the fact that the fund is under the jurisdiction and control of another court.[438] But the question most frequently arises on an application to charge the costs of a suit upon the estate in bankruptcy, as a part of the trustee's legitimate expenditures. And here the rule is that the estate must bear the costs of actions or proceedings properly undertaken by the trustee for the purpose of recovering assets or contesting spurious claims, but he will not be allowed the costs of unfounded or unnecessary litigation, and more especially he is personally chargeable with costs incurred wilfully or recklessly in litigation, when the exercise of ordinary prudence and foresight would have taught him that litigation was unnecessary or would fail.[439] It will be seen that there is no undue severity in this rule, when it is remembered that the trustee, if doubtful of the probable success of a contemplated suit, may require those creditors who insist upon it to indemnify him against the costs.[440]

[437] See Forman v. Campbell, 9 Ben. 472, Fed. Cas. No. 4,939; Hall v. Waterbury, 5 Abb. New Cas. (N. Y.) 356.

[438] Reade v. Waterhouse, 52 N. Y. 587, 10 N. B. R. 277.

[439] In re Josephson, 121 Fed. 146, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Kingsbury v. Powers, 131 Ill. 182, 22 N. E. 479; In re Preston, 6 N. B. R. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 11,394; In re Brinkman, 6 N. B. R. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 1,883.

[440] See supra, § 283.

CHAPTER XXII

RIGHTS OF TRUSTEE AS AGAINST PRIOR ASSIGNEE FOR CREDITORS

§ 433. Assignment an Act of Bankruptcy.—Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, the making of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, without preferences, was not necessarily an act of bankruptcy. If the assignor had a purpose to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, or to defeat or delay the operation of the bankruptcy act, it was ground for adjudging him bankrupt. But it depended upon his intention in making the assignment, and this was a question of fact,[1] although it was sometimes held that such an assignment would be presumed to have been made with the intention of delaying the operation of the bankruptcy law, where the exercise of the powers granted by the assignment would necessarily have that effect.[2] But this has been changed by the present statute. Under its terms, and without any reference to the purpose or intent of the debtor, it is made an act of bankruptcy if a person shall have "made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors," [3] within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Hence such an assignment is ipso facto cause for an adjudication in bankruptcy, if made the basis of an application in due time by the requisite number of creditors, although made under a state insolvency law and in strict compliance with its provisions,[4] and notwithstanding that it may provide for the equal distribution of the debtor's property among all his creditors, without any preferences.[5]

[1] Langley v. Perry, 2 N. B. R. 596, Fed. Cas. No. 8,067.

[2] In re Chamberlain, 3 N. B. R. 710, Fed. Cas. No. 2,574.

[3] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a. And see supra, § 91. Assignment for benefit of creditors as an act of bankruptcy when made by a partnership, see supra, § 113. When made by a corporation, supra, § 144.

[4] In re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

[5] In re Temple, 4 Sawy. 92, 17 N. B. R. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 13,825.

§ 434. Effect of Adjudication in Bankruptcy on Previous Assignment.—A general assignment for the benefit of creditors, though an act of bankruptcy and liable to be avoided by the subsequent adjudication of the assignor as a bankrupt, is not void originally, but only voidable; it remains valid unless and until such an adjudication is made.[6] Potentially it is a fraud upon the bankruptcy law and upon the creditors, since its necessary effect (if allowed to stand) is to defeat the operation of the bankruptcy law and to deprive creditors of the benefit of all the provisions of that act which are made for their protection and meant to secure a speedy and equal distribution of the estate.[7] The assignment is therefore voidable at the instance of the creditors, provided a sufficient number of them, owning a sufficient amount of claims, will join in a petition in bankruptcy.[8] Of course they are not compelled to take this step. If they are satisfied to have the debtor's property collected and distributed by his voluntary assignee, if they do not see any advantage in bringing it into bankruptcy, or if they are simply indifferent to their rights, they may acquiesce in the assignment, present and prove their claims, and waive their right to invoke the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy. Or the same result will follow if they neglect for more than four months to file a petition in bankruptcy. The mere existence of a bankruptcy law which creditors may set in motion if they choose, does not prevent the administration of the estate by the voluntary assignee, if creditors acquiesce in it. As stated above, the assignment is not void ab initio, but only voidable. But if, on the other hand, the creditors, or a sufficient proportion of them, choose to have the assignment vacated and the estate administered in bankruptcy, then it is voidable at their option, and if they file a petition in the proper federal court, alleging the assignment as an act of bankruptcy and praying for an adjudication in bankruptcy against the debtor, they thereby take the proper and only necessary step for avoiding the assignment. And if thereupon the assignor is adjudged bankrupt, the decree of adjudication ipso facto annuls or dissolves the assignment and subjects the assigned property to the exclusive and [6] Gilbert v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank, 172 App. Div. 25, 157 N. Y. Supp. 953; Charles Roesch & Sons Co. v. Mumford, 230 Fed. 56, 144 C. C. A. 354; In re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Ostrander v. Meunch, 12 Fed. 562; Barnes v. Rettew, Fed. Cas. No. 1,019; Maltbie v. Hotchkiss, 38 Conn. 80, 9 Am. Rep. 364, 5 N. B. R. 485; Cook v. Rogers, 31 Mich. 391, 13 N. B. R. 97; Thrasher v. Bentley, 59 N. Y. 649; Bostwick v. Burnett, 7 N. Y. 317. Until an assignment for the benefit of creditors is expressly accepted, it is a mere power and therefore revocable, and the bankruptcy of the assignor operates as a revocation. Ashley v. Robinson, 29 Ala. 112, 65 Am. Dec. 387.

[7] In re Gutwillig, 92 Fed. 337, 34 C. C. A. 377, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; s. c. below, 90 Fed. 475, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78.

[8] In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117.

complete jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[9] That this consequence necessarily follows the adjudication in bankruptcy will be plainly seen from a moment's consideration of the results which would follow from an opposite construction. "It is an extraordinary proposition that the bankruptcy court can be asked to discharge a person from all his debts who has, by an assignment to a private assignee, placed all his property where it can be administered only by the tribunals of the state. A system of bankruptcy which would thus, in practice, permit a discharge of the debtor without a simultaneous administration and distribution of the property among the creditors, would be a monstrosity."[10] Nor is the situation in any way affected by the fact that proceedings have been taken in a state court to have the administration of the assigned estate take place under its supervision and control. The pendency of such proceedings, or the making of orders or decrees by the state court, will not prevent an adjudication of bankruptcy, but on the contrary, when the adjudication is made, it ousts the jurisdiction of the state court and establishes the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, which is exclusive and which relates back to the commission of the act of bankruptcy, that is, the making of the assignment.[11] And if the assignment falls to the ground in consequence of the adjudication in bankruptcy, so also do all rights and interests created by it or growing out of it. The various rights of creditors thereafter are to be determined according to the provisions of the bankruptcy law, not according to the deed of assignment nor according to the state insolvency law under which it may have been made,[12] and the money and property are to be distributed by the trustee in bankruptcy, and not by the assignee.[13] If the deed of assignment created any liens or trusts, they are annulled by the adjudication, and the property is not subject to them as it passes

[9] Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re Smith, 4 Ben. 1, 3 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 12,974; Hobson v. Markson, 1 Dill. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 6,555; Globe Ins. Co. v. Cleveland Ins. Co., 14 N. B. R. 311, Fed. Cas. No. 5,486; Waring v. Buchanan, 19 N. B. R. 502, Fed. Cas. No. 17,176; In re Croughwell, 9 Ben. 360, 17 N. B. R. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 3,440; Dolson v. Kerr, 52 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 481, 16 N. B. R. 405; Cohen v. American Surety Co., 192 N. Y. 227, 84 N. E. 947.

[10] In re Brodhead, 3 Ben. 106, 2 N. B. R. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 1,918.

[11] Stellwagen v. Clum, 245 U. S. 605, 38 Sup. Ct. 215, 62 L. Ed. 507, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Knight, 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Lengert Wagon Co., 110 Fed. 927, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; In re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440, affirmed, 94 Fed. 630, 36 C. C. A. 430, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226.

[12] In re Bousfield & Poole Mfg. Co., 17 N. B. R. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 1,704. After the adjudication in bankruptcy, an action against the debtor of the bankrupt cannot be maintained by the bankrupt's assignee for the benefit of creditors. Gilbert v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank, 95 Misc. Rep. 364, 160 N. Y. Supp. 710.

[13] Sedgwick v. Place, 3 N. B. R. 302 Fed. Cas. No. 12,623.

into the hands of the trustees in bankruptcy.[14] So also, if the assignment gives a preference to any creditor, it is avoided in bankruptcy, and the preferred creditor can claim no advantage from it.[15]

§ 435. Assignment More Than Four Months Before Bankruptcy.—In order to take advantage of a general assignment, as an act of bankruptcy, creditors must file their petition within four months. But this time does not expire until four months after the date of recording or registering the assignment, if that is required or permitted by law, or if it is not, then four months from the date when the petitioning creditors receive actual notice of the assignment, or if they have no actual notice, then four months from the date when the assignee takes notorious, exclusive, or continuous possession of the property.[16] If the limited period as thus defined is allowed to lapse without the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, then creditors must be presumed to have waived or acquiesced in the act of bankruptcy, and the assignment is not avoided or in any way affected by the bankruptcy law, but must stand or fall upon its own merits, being open to attack only in the state courts and only under the provisions of the state laws. The bankruptcy law does not attempt to supervise or inquire into proceedings under an assignment for creditors or under state insolvency laws begun more than four months before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings.[17] If the debtor is thereafter adjudged bankrupt (though it must necessarily be on other grounds than the making of the assignment), the assignment cannot be set aside at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy, and the latter will not be entitled to the possession and administration of the assigned estate as against the voluntary assignee, but he will only take such rights as the bankrupt had or could himself claim at the date of the bankruptcy.[18] At the very least it may be said that the court of bankruptcy will not undertake to review the accounts of the assignee, or to reverse or annul any act of his in collecting or paying out the estate, [14] In re Slomka, 122 Fed. 630, 58 C. C. A. 322, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[15] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[16] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3b.

[17] In re Creech Bros. Lumber Co., 240 Fed. 8, 153 C. C. A. 44, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; In re Bridge (D. C.) 230 Fed. 184, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Boner, 169 Fed. 727, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; Pelton v. Sheridan, 74 Or. 176, 144 Pac. 410.

[18] Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 23 L. Ed. 377; In re Kimball, 16 N. B. R. 188, Fed. Cas. No. 7,770; In re Arledge, 1 N. B. R. 644, Fed. Cas. No. 533; Hoague v. Cumner, 187 Mass. 296, 72 N. E. 956; Mathews v. Stewart, 44 Mich. 209, 6 N. W. 633. Where an assignment for the benefit of creditors was valid and not subject to attack because of the assignor's bankruptcy, a judgment of the state court confirming the title of the assignee and ordering a sale of the property was held not subject to attack in the federal court on the ground that it gave a preference, but the trustee in bankruptcy could assert his rights only in the state court. Stern v. Truax (D. C.) 236 Fed. 1014, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 418.

antedating the adjudication in bankruptcy, though perhaps the trustee may lay claim to any property remaining undistributed in the hands of the assignee at that date, on the theory that such assignee is the "agent" of the bankrupt and therefore amenable to the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy. This doctrine finds support in at least one of the adjudged cases.[19]

§ 436. Enjoining Action by Assignee.—When an insolvent debtor makes a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and, within four months thereafter, a petition in bankruptcy against him is filed, it is within the power and jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to make an order, pending the hearing on such petition, enjoining the assignee from disposing of or interfering with the property transferred to him under the assignment, or exercising any acts of ownership or control, and this course is particularly proper when it appears that the assignee is about to make a sale of the property or to pay out money in his hands, so that, if an adjudication in bankruptcy is ultimately made, assets of the estate might thus be withdrawn from the reach of the trustee.[20] So also, after a decree of adjudication is made, and pending the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, the court may enjoin the voluntary assignee from disposing of the property or exercising any of the powers given him by the assignment, except merely to hold possession of the property and preserve it.[21] And if the circumstances warrant such a course, the court of bankruptcy, pending a determination on the petition, may appoint a receiver (or the marshal) to take the property out of the hands of the assignee and hold it until the dismissal of the petition or the appointment of a trustee.[22] But this action can only be taken by the court of bankruptcy, and creditors must apply to that court if they desire to take precautions for the preservation of the estate. If, pending a hearing on the petition in bankruptcy, the creditors simply go into a state court and there protest against any further proceedings under the assignment, this will not have the effect of a writ of injunction from the court of bankruptcy.[23]

[19] In re Carver, 113 Fed. 138, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[20] In re Gutwillig, 92 Fed. 337, 34 C. C. A. 377, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Skoll, 16 N. B. R. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 12,926. See Ex parte Nightingale, Fed. Cas. No. 10,263, holding that a mere possibility of waste or misapplication of the bankrupt's estate by the assignee will not justify an injunction.

[21] Rumsey & Sikemier Co. v. Novelty & Machine Mfg. Co., 99 Fed. 699, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

[22] In re Etheridge Furniture Co., 92 Fed. 329, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; Sedgwick v. Place, 3 N. B. R. 139, Fed. Cas. No. 12,619.

[23] In re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782.

§ 437. Trustee's Proceedings to Avoid or Set Aside Assignment.—Under the former bankruptcy law it was held that the title to property embraced in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors did not vest in a trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed by the mere force of the adjudication and his appointment as trustee. It was voidable at his instance, but to enable him to gain possession and administration of the property it was necessary for him to bring an action against the assignee to have the assignment set aside, just as he must sue to avoid a fraudulent conveyance or recover a preference.[24] But under the present statute, the rules are essentially different. It is true that an assignment is not absolutely void, but only voidable. But it is voidable at the instance of the creditors, and they elect to avoid it, and take the necessary steps to avoid it, when they file the petition in bankruptcy. If an adjudication follows, it avoids the assignment automatically and of its own force. The trustee thereupon becomes invested with title to the property embraced in the assignment, and he does not take title as the successor of the assignee, but as the successor of the bankrupt. No suit or proceeding on his part to avoid the assignment is required, but the assignee may be summarily cited to appear in the bankruptcy proceedings and surrender the property in his hands.[25]

In effect, an assignee for the benefit of creditors, as the law now stands, is charged with knowledge that he is acting under an instrument which of itself is an act of bankruptcy, and that if the assignor, in proceedings commenced within four months after the assignment, is adjudged bankrupt, he will hold the assigned estate merely for the use of the bankrupt's creditors, to be administered in the bankruptcy court.[26] The assignee is therefore charged with notice of the subse-

[24] Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273, 9 Sup. Ct. 65, 32 L. Ed. 429; Wehl v. Wald, 18 Blatchf. 163, 3 Fed. 93; Olney v. Tanner, 21 Blatchf. 540, 18 Fed. 636; Harding v. Crosby, 17 Blatchf. 348, Fed. Cas. No. 6,050; In re Pierce, 3 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 11,141; Macdonald v. Moore, 8 Ben. 579, 15 N. B. R. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 8,763; Cragin v. Thompson, 2 Dill. 513, 12 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 3,320; Von Hein v. Elkus, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 516; Barnewall v. Jones, 14 N. B. R. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 1,027; Linder v. Lewis, 4 Fed. 318; Sparhawk v. Drexel, 12 N. B. R. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 13,204; Johnson v. Rogers, 15 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 7,408; Haas v. O'Brien, 66 N. Y. 597, 16 N. B. R. 508; Barnes v. Rettew, 8 Phila. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 1,019.

[25] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; Comingor v. Louisville Trust Co., 108 S. W. 950, 33 Ky. Law Rep. 53; In re Stokes, 103 Fed. 312; In re Thompson, 122 Fed. 174, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348; Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 45 L. Ed. 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; Whittlesey v. Philip Becker & Co., 142 App. Div. 313, 126 N. Y. Supp. 1046; Rogers v. Abbot, 206 Mass. 270, 92 N. E. 472, 138 Am. St. Rep. 394. And see cases cited, supra, § 434, and infra, §§ 438, 439.

[26] In re Bombino, 44 Utah, 141, 138 Pac. 1155.

quent filing of a petition in bankruptcy against his assignor, and if the adjudication is made, the assignee becomes a mere custodian without title.[27] In such circumstances, the court of bankruptcy obtains exclusive jurisdiction, and has power to remove the assignee, irrespective of his good faith and standing, and to appoint its own receiver.[28]

§ 438. Recovery of Assets by Trustee.—When a voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors is avoided by the subsequent adjudication of the assignor in bankruptcy, the trustee in bankruptcy becomes entitled to the possession and administration of the estate covered by the assignment and may require the assignee to account to him and to surrender the property in his hands.[29] And although the law of the state may require such assignments to be carried out under the direction or supervision of a state court, and the property assigned is in process of administration in the manner prescribed by the law; this does not make a case of concurrent jurisdiction, nor give the state court such a prior right of possession as will prevent the court of bankruptcy from assuming exclusive jurisdiction of the bankrupt's estate.[30] If the state statute does not go to the length of making such an assignee an officer of the state court, property in his hands is not in the custody of the law or the possession of the court.[31] So, if the assignee is cited to account in a state court, he may show, in bar of the proceeding, that the property has been taken from him under a decree of the court of bankruptcy and that he has accounted in the latter court.[32] Nor is the [27] In re Louis Neuburger, Inc. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 701, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248.

[28] In re D. & E. Dress Co. (D. C.) 244 Fed. 885, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360.

[29] Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Knight, 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Hobson v. Markson, 1 Dill. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 6,555; Comingor v. Louisville Trust Co., 108 S. W. 950, 33 Ky. Law Rep. 53. A petition by the trustee in bankruptcy for an order requiring the surrender of property by the assignee need not allege a previous demand. Comingor v. Louisville Trust Co., 108 S. W. 950, 33 Ky. Law Rep. 53. Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, it was held that an order or decree for the surrender of property by the assignee should not include property exempt from execution. Grow v. Ballard, 2 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 5,848. But this is probably not the case under the present statute, since it intends that the trustee shall take possession of the exempt property, as well as all other property, and provides for his setting it apart to the bankrupt.

[30] In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9. But if the assignee alleges that he is under the control and direction of the state court, there is nothing to prevent the trustee from applying to that court for an order directing the surrender of the property to him, just as he would do in the case of a receiver. See Cragin v. Thompson, 2 Dill. 513, 12 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 3,320.

[31] Jones v. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co., 82 Fed. 295, 27 C. C. A. 133; Lehman v. Rosengarten, 23 Fed. 642.

[32] Burkholder v. Stump, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 172, 4 N. B. R. 597, Fed. Cas. No. 2,165. And on the other hand, though the assignee's accounts have been approved by the state court, he may still be required to account to the court of bankruptcy, as the jurisdiction of the latter court is paramount and cannot be defeated by any proceedings in the state court. In pendency of an action of replevin against him any excuse for his failure to surrender to the trustee in bankruptcy that portion of the estate affected by the proceeding.[33] If the assignee is prosecuting an action to recover property of the assigned estate, when a trustee in bankruptcy is appointed, the latter may intervene in the action and assume control of it, and need not begin a new suit.[34] The assignee may also be required to execute any conveyance which may be necessary to show a clear title in the trustee or enable him more effectually to proceed with the collection of the assets.[35] And if the assignee neglects or refuses to account for the money and property in his hands, on being cited and ordered to do so, the trustee in bankruptcy has a right of action against the surety on the assignment bond.[36]

§ 439. Same; Summary Proceedings and Attachment for Contempt. —When a debtor who has made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors is adjudged bankrupt within four months thereafter, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction and power to make an order requiring the assignee to submit his accounts and to turn over to the trustee in bankruptcy all money and property in his hands, and this does not require a plenary suit at law or in equity, but may be done in a summary proceeding.[37] For the assignee in such a case is not an adverse claimant. He is merely the agent of the assignor for the distribution of the proceeds of the property, and, as such agent, his possession is that of his principal.[38] Or as otherwise stated, the assignee "is a mere naked bailee for the creditors, without a shred of title or lawful authority to the possession of the bankrupt's estate, and it would certainly be strange if, when the bankruptcy court finds property in the possession of such a bailee, it may not in a summary way require him to surrender possession to the court which alone has the re Louis Neuburger, Inc., 240 Fed. 947, 153 C. C. A. 633, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

[33] In re Solomon, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 460.

[34] Collateral Security Bank v. Fowler, 42 Md. 393, 12 N. B. R. 289.

[35] Burkholder v. Stump, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 172, 4 N. B. R. 597, Fed. Cas. No. 2,165.

[36] Cohen v. American Surety Co., 192 N. Y. 227, 84 N. E. 947.

[37] Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 45 L. Ed. 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re McCrum, 214 Fed. 207, 130 C. C. A. 555, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; In re Karp (D. C.) 228 Fed. 798, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Reiswig (D. C.) 253 Fed. 390, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691; In re Smith (D. C.) 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Stokes (D. C.) 106 Fed. 312, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; In re Thompson (D. C.) 122 Fed. 174, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

[38] In re McCrum, 214 Fed. 207, 130 C. C. A. 555, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; Galbraith v. Vallely (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 670, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 523; In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; In re Colwell Lead Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 922, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691.

power to administer the estate."[39] But even a summary proceeding requires notice to the party to be charged and that he shall have an opportunity to be heard. Such an order cannot be made on the ex parte application of the trustee without bringing in the assignee or affording him an opportunity to show cause against the petition. If these conditions are not fulfilled, an order for the surrender of property is without jurisdiction, and the assignee cannot be punished for failure to obey it.[40] And in any event, the process of attachment for contempt should not be used to force the restitution of money or property which it is no longer possible for the assignee to surrender. Thus, if he has already paid out a portion of the estate committed to him, in the form of counsel fees or other necessary or proper disbursements, or if he retained a portion of it as his own commission and has spent such sum and is unable to replace it, this is a good answer, so far as it goes, to a rule to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt for failure to pay over the money to the trustee in bankruptcy. For a court cannot by contempt proceedings undertake to compel the performance of something which the respondent is wholly unable to perform, even though he became so through his own fault or improvidence, where it arose through a mere misconception of his legal rights and duties.[41]

§ 440. Nature of Trustee's Title to Property Assigned.—The trustee in bankruptcy does not succeed the voluntary assignee in title or estate. His title is a wholly new one, founded alone on the provisions of the bankruptcy act, and not in any way connected with or dependent on the title vested in the assignee. And hence he does not take the estate subject to any preferences or priorities created by the deed of assignment or by the acts of the assignee.[42] But a title or lien acquired by the voluntary assignee, which would be to the advantage of the estate when it has subsequently passed into bankruptcy, is not necessarily destroyed by the supersession of the assignment proceeding, but, upon

[39] In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9.

[40] Smith v. Belford, 106 Fed. 658, 45 C. C. A. 526, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re Banzai Mfg. Co., 183 Fed. 298, 105 C. C. A. 510, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497; In re Manning, 123 Fed. 179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

[41] Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 22 Sup. Ct. 293, 46 L. Ed. 413, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Sinsheimer v. Simonson, 107 Fed. 898, 47 C. C. A. 51, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537; In re Klein, 116 Fed. 523, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348; In re Banzai Mfg. Co., 183 Fed. 298, 105 C. C. A. 510, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

[42] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Alexander v. Galt, 9 Fed. 149. Contra, under the act of 1867, see In re Beisenthal, 10 Ben. 42, 18 N. B. R. 120, Fed. Cas. No. 1,235; Johnson v. Rogers, 15 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 7,408; In re Beadle, 5 Sawy. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 1,155; Reeser v. Johnson, 76 Pa. St. 313.

the order of the court of bankruptcy, it may be retained by the trustee for the benefit of the creditors.[43]

§ 441. Estate Partly Settled by Assignee.—Where an assignee, appointed in insolvency proceedings under a state law, or by a general deed of assignment, has taken charge of the debtor's property, sold it, and distributed the proceeds to creditors, acting in all respects in entire good faith and in conformity to the state law and the orders of the state court, and afterwards proceedings in bankruptcy against the assignor are had and a trustee appointed, the assignee is not to be held personally liable to the trustee in bankruptcy for the value of the property or its proceeds. In such a case the trustee "must seek his remedy against those who have received payments from the defendant in contravention of the bankruptcy act."[44] This rule holds good even if the assignee has paid out the money of the estate to creditors preferred by the deed of assignment. Their preferences may be unlawful under the bankruptcy law and voidable by the trustee, but the amount cannot be recovered from the assignee personally.[45] But the assignee must stop all administration of the estate immediately upon the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, or at least as soon as he receives notice. Thereafter the title is vested in the trustee, and the assignee holds the property remaining in his hands merely as an agent or bailee, and has no further duty with reference to it except as to mere safe keeping. At least it may be said that, after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, a common-law assignee acts at his peril in carrying on the bankrupt's business, in selling it out or winding it up, or in doing anything beyond what is necessary to preserve such property as was in his hands when the petition was filed. Common-law assignments, it is true, are not outlawed by the Bankruptcy Act, and where the creditors allow the assignee to continue in possession and operate the business, he is not necessarily to be charged with a resulting loss, whether occurring before or after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. But the burden is upon him to satisfy the bankruptcy court that in carrying on the business after the institution of bankruptcy proceedings he acted in good faith and with sound business judgment; and he may be held liable for a loss incurred by him in carrying on the business, where there is no finding that it was good judgment on his part to continue the business, and where he does not show what part of the loss was incurred before and what part after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[46] If, after [43] In re Fish Bros. Wagon Co. (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 553, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 149.

[44] Cragin v. Thompson, 2 Dill. 513, 12 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 3,320; In re Walker, 18 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 17,063.

[45] Jones v. Kinney, 5 Ben. 259, 4 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,473.

[46] In re Karp (D. C.) 228 Fed. 798, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

the trustee has demanded the surrender of the property, the assignee pays it out in the form of dividends to creditors, he is personally liable to replace it, and it is immaterial that the trustee did not sue out an injunction to restrain him from disposing of the estate, a mere demand for it being enough.[47]

§ 442. Rights of Purchasers from Assignee and Paid Creditors.—A sale of property by an assignee for the benefit of creditors to a purchaser in good faith for a valuable consideration conveys a title which will prevail against the claims of a trustee in bankruptcy of the assignor subsequently appointed, and the latter cannot recover the property from the purchaser.[48] But if there is no more than an uncompleted agreement for a sale, the purchaser not having made any payment on the property, it is avoided by the adjudication in bankruptcy and the trustee may claim the property.[49] So also, one who buys property from the assignee after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy and with knowledge thereof, cannot be called a purchaser in good faith, and he acquires no title superior to that of the trustee; but his equities in respect to the property or the money which he has paid for it may depend on many circumstances, and can be settled in the court of bankruptcy, which may, if necessary, bring in the assignee.[50] With regard to creditors who have received payment from the assignee, it may be remarked that if they were granted a preference by the terms of the assignment, and knew or had reasonable cause to believe, when receiving the money from the assignee, that it was in pursuance of the debtor's intention to prefer them, it is a clear case of a voidable preference under the bankruptcy law, and the trustee may force the restitution of the money so paid.[51] So also he may recover money disbursed in satisfaction of a lien of such a character as to be dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy.[52]

§ 443. Appointment of Assignee as Trustee.—Where one who has made an assignment for the benefit of creditors is afterwards adjudged bankrupt, it may be the wish of the creditors that the assignee should be appointed and serve as trustee in bankruptcy. There is no absolute rule of law to prevent this, and the assignee may be eminently well

[47] Ostrander v. Meunch, 2 McCrary, 267, 12 Fed. 562.

[48] Goldsmith v. Hapgood, Holmes, 454, Fed. Cas. No. 5,522.

[49] In re Knight, 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. Mistake of a common-law assignee in selling personal property to which his assignor had no title does not impose any lien or trust in favor of the purchaser upon the proceeds in the hands of a subsequent trustee in bankruptcy. In re Goyette & Levigne (D. C.) 244 Fed. 638, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109.

[50] Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 45 L. Ed. 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[51] In re Meyer, 2 N. B. R. 422, Fed. Cas. No. 9,515.

[52] Linder v. Lewis, 4 Fed. 318.

qualified to act as trustee in virtue of his special knowledge of the business or affairs of the bankrupt, or for other personal reasons. The court may therefore approve the election of the assignee as trustee by the creditors, under special circumstances, but will not ordinarily do so where he is accountable to the estate for money or property in his hands and also has a claim against it for compensation for his services as assignee or for disbursements made. "There is both a practical and a legal presumption against the propriety of such an appointment, for the reason that as assignee he is an accounting party to the estate, and as trustee will have to investigate his own account." [53] Such a person, however, may be appointed temporary receiver of the estate in bankruptcy. And if he turns over to himself, as such receiver, the funds in his hands as assignee, without retaining any sum therefrom as compensation for his past services, he submits both the fund and himself to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy with respect to his right to an allowance for such services.[54]

§ 444. Credits and Allowances to Assignee.—When an assignee for the benefit of creditors is required to surrender the estate committed to him by the assignment, at the instance of a trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed, and in order that the property may be administered in bankruptcy, he is entitled to an allowance for the actual and necessary expenses incurred by him in collecting, caring for, and preserving the property from the time he took charge of it as assignee up to the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy.[55] Thus, where the assignee, during the time the property remained in his care, and before the adjudication in bankruptcy, collected bills due to the bankrupt, continued insurance on the property, arranged for guarding the same, collected outstanding goods, conducted correspondence, made an inventory, and incurred a liability for rent, it was held that he had a lien on the assets for these necessary disbursements.[56] So he should be reimbursed for money paid for rent of the premises and for wages paid to clerks, workmen, and servants,[57] and for taxes paid on the property, the same being a valid lien which the trustee would have had to discharge if the assignee had not done so,[58] and he may be allowed the costs and expenses of a sale of the property or a portion of it, if it

[53] In re Kellar (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 830.

[54] In re Klein, 116 Fed. 523, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

[55] In re Mays, 114 Fed. 600, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764; In re Tatum, 112 Fed. 50, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; Burkholder v. Stump, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 172, 4 N. B. R. 597, Fed. Cas. No. 2,165; Wehl v. Wald, 18 Blatchf. 495, 6 Fed. 163; In re Pauly, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 405. Compare In re Stubbs, 4 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 13,557.

[56] In re Chase, 124 Fed. 753, 59 C. C. A. 629, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

[57] Eichholz v. Polack, 140 App. Div. 551, 125 N. Y. Supp. 1108.

[58] In re Cohn, 6 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966.

appears that the sale was an advantageous one and beneficial to the estate.[59] The assignee may even be allowed reimbursement for expenses incurred by him after the adjudication in bankruptcy, provided they were incurred, and reasonably necessary, in the care and preservation of the property, though such expenditures will be strictly scrutinized. Thus, in the bankruptcy of a mercantile firm, which had previously made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, where there was an interval of some time between the adjudication and the appointment of a receiver by the court of bankruptcy, and meanwhile the assignee carried on the business, it was considered that he should be reimbursed for money paid to employees and for rent of the business premises paid during that period.[60]

But so far as regards the assignee's claim for compensation for his own personal services in connection with the assigned estate, there has been great difference of opinion. Some of the decisions, both under the present bankruptcy act and earlier acts, have maintained the theory that an assignment for creditors is at least constructively a fraud upon the bankruptcy law and that the assignee must be regarded as a participant in the fraud and therefore precluded from benefiting by it, so that the allowance to be made to him must be restricted to money out of pocket and cannot include any commissions or other remuneration for his own services.[61] But an equally respectable body of authorities repudiated this view, and held the assignee entitled to reasonable compensation for his time, care, and labor expended for the benefit of the assigned estate.[62] And the Supreme Court of the United States has finally declared that, if there was nothing inherently fraudulent or illegal in the assignment and the assignee was not a party to any actual fraud, he should not be deprived of compensation for his services rendered under the assignment, in so far as the same were beneficial to the estate, merely because of the fact that the assignment was an act of [59] In re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782; In re Cohn, 6 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966; Clark v. Marx, 6 Ben. 275, Fed. Cas. No. 2,830; Jackson v. McCulloch, 1 Woods, 433, 13 N. B. R. 283, Fed. Cas. No. 7,140.

[60] In re Morris & Rice (D. C.) 258 Fed. 712, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 146.

[61] In re Congdon, 129 Fed. 478, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; In re Mays, 114 Fed. 600, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764; In re Tatum, 112 Fed. 50, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; Wilbur v. Watson, 111 Fed. 493, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; In re Peter Paul Book Co., 104 Fed. 786, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 105; Stearns v. Flick, 103 Fed. 919, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; Hunker v. Bing, 9 Fed. 277; In re Cohn, 6 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966; In re Stubbs, 4 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 13,557; In re Pauly, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 405.

[62] In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348; In re Chase, 124 Fed. 753, 59 C. C. A. 629, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677; Summers v. Abbott, 122 Fed. 36, 58 C. C. A. 352, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; In re Klein, 116 Fed. 523, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782; Wald v. Wehl, 18 Blatchf. 495, 6 Fed. 163; Jackson v. McCulloch, 1 Woods, 433, 13 N. B. R. 283, Fed. Cas. No. 7,140; Catlin v. Foster, 1 Sawy. 37, 3 N. B. R. 540, Fed Cas. No. 2,519.

bankruptcy on which creditors could, if they chose, institute proceedings. The court pointed out that an assignment is not void from its inception, but only voidable in case proceedings in bankruptcy follow within four months; that the assignee acts lawfully in what he does before proceedings in bankruptcy are begun, and that, although the avoidance of the assignment by the adjudication in bankruptcy may relate back to the making of the assignment, still this mere fiction of relation is not enough to forbid an allowance to the assignee for beneficial services rendered before the adjudication; and added: "We are not prepared to go further than to allow compensation for services which were beneficial to the estate, beyond that point we must throw the risk of his conduct on the assignee, as he was chargeable with knowledge of what might happen." [63]

The question of allowing compensation to attorneys for legal services rendered to the assignee stands upon the same basis. The claim of an attorney for fees for such services must be worked out through the assignee, and cannot be put higher than the assignee's claim for allowances. But in so far as professional services were beneficial to the estate, they are a proper subject for allowance. If the assignee has paid the attorney's fees, he may claim reimbursement; if not, the attorney may stand in his place and claim a lien on the assets for the reasonable value of his services.[64] But an attorney's charge for preparing the deed of assignment is not entitled to preference, though it may be proved as an unsecured claim against the bankrupt's estate.[65]

But neither the assignee nor his attorney will be entitled to claim any compensation for services or expenses rendered or incurred in unsuccessfully attempting to resist the adjudication in bankruptcy or in the endeavor to maintain his own title and possession.[66] Nor can [63] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. And see Macdonald v. Moore, 15 N. B. R. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 8,763; White v. Hill, 148 Mass. 396, 19 N. E. 407; Clark v. Sawyer, 151 Mass. 64, 23 N. E. 726; Perry-Mason Shoe Co. v. Sykes, 72 Miss. 390, 17 South. 171, 28 L. R. A. 277. The state court may make allowances for compensation for services rendered under an assignment for the benefit of creditors, before the bankruptcy proceedings against the assignor were instituted, if the claim therefor is presented before the adjudication in bankruptcy. In re Bombino, 44 Utah, 141, 138 Pac. 1155.

[64] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Summers v. Abbott, 122 Fed. 36, 58 C. C. A. 352, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; In re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782; Platt v. Archer, 13 Blatchf. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 11,214; In re Marble Products Co., 199 Fed. 668, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384. Contra, see In re Cohn, 6 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966; Eichholz v. Polack, 140 App. Div. 551, 125 N. Y. Supp. 1108.

[65] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[66] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348; Platt v. Archer, 13 Blatchf. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 11,214; Clark v. Marx, 6 Ben. 275, Fed. Cas. No. 2,830.

the assignee be reimbursed for expenses or fees incurred by him in dealing with the assigned property after the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy,[67] nor for any items which will result in subjecting the estate to double charges for the same thing.[68]

As to the mode of enforcing the assignee's claim, it is held that he has a lien on the assets in his hands for his necessary expenses and for the value of his services which were beneficial to the estate, and is therefore entitled to a preference in payment.[69] If he submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, and that court makes an order requiring him to surrender to the trustee the assets in his hands, it may expressly except from the operation of the order such sums as he may be entitled to claim by way of credit or allowance.[70] Or if he is sued by the trustee in bankruptcy for the surrender of the estate, he may set off his claim for compensation and expenses against the amount demanded of him by the trustee.[71] But in respect to such credits and allowances, the assignee must be considered as occupying the position of an "adverse claimant." And therefore the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to adjudicate the merits of his claim to retain out of the estate money disbursed by him, or which he claims on account of his commission as assignee, unless he consents to the exercise of such jurisdiction.[72]

[67] In re Solomon, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 460.

[68] In re Kurth, 17 N. B. R. 573, Fed. Cas. No. 7,948; In re Kingman, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 518.

[69] Randolph v. Scruggs, 190 U. S. 533, 23 Sup. Ct. 710, 47 L. Ed. 1165, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Chase, 124 Fed. 753, 59 C. C. A. 629, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677. Compare In re Lains, 16 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 7,989; In re Rogers, 116 Fed. 435, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[70] Neill v. Jackson, 8 Fed. 144.

[71] Catlin v. Foster, 1 Sawy. 37, 3 N. B. R. 540, Fed. Cas. No. 2,519.

[72] Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 22 Sup. Ct. 293, 46 L. Ed. 413, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Galbraith v. Vallely, 255 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 415, 65 L. Ed. —, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

CHAPTER XXIII

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES VOIDABLE BY TRUSTEE

§ 445. Statutory Provisions.—The bankruptcy act provides that the trustee in bankruptcy shall be vested by operation of law with "the title of the bankrupt" to "property transferred by him in fraud of his creditors."[1] Since the bankrupt himself has no title whatever to property transferred by him, though in fraud of creditors, it is evident that this clause is self-contradictory and without effect. But the subject is covered by other provisions of the statute which are more explicit and consistent. The sixty-seventh section contains the following language: "All conveyances, transfers, assignments, or incumbrances of his property, or any part thereof, made or given by a person adjudged a bankrupt under the provisions of this act subsequent to the passage of this act and within four months prior to the filing of the petition, with the intent and purpose on his part to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or any of them, shall be null and void as against the creditors of such debtor, except as to purchasers in good faith and for a present fair consideration; and all property of the debtor conveyed, transferred, assigned, or encumbered as aforesaid shall, if he be adjudged a bankrupt, and the same is not exempt from execution and liability for debts by the law of his domicile, be and remain a part of the assets and estate of the bankrupt and shall pass to his said trustee, whose duty it shall be to recover and reclaim the same by legal proceedings or otherwise for the benefit of the creditors."[2] This evidently refers to such conveyances and transfers as would be fraudulent and voidable at common law and at the instance of creditors.

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a.

The same section contains the following further provision: "All conveyances, transfers, or incumbrances of his property made by a debtor at any time within four months prior to the filing of the petition against him, and while insolvent, which are held null and void as against the creditors of such debtor by the laws of the state, territory, or district in which such property is situate, shall be deemed null and void under this act against the creditors of such debtor if he be adjudged a bankrupt, and such property shall pass to the assignee [probably meaning the trustee in bankruptcy] and be by him reclaimed and recovered for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt."[3] This is plainly meant to cover such conveyances and transfers as are denounced as fraudulent by the local statutory law, but which are not so at common law. Since both these provisions are found in a section of the act which bears the general heading "Liens," and since five of the six subdivisions of that section relate distinctly and exclusively to liens, properly so called, the natural reading of the language which we have quoted above would restrict it likewise to liens operating in fraud of creditors, as distinguished from transfers by deed or bill of sale. But in view of the broad terms employed ("conveyances, transfers, assignments, or incumbrances") the courts have felt constrained to give this part of the section a much wider scope than the general title of the section would warrant. But the conveyances or transfers intended by this part of the section are only such as are fraudulent either at common law or under the statutes of the state, as distinguished from those which are in fraud of the bankruptcy act itself.[4] It is further necessary to remark that, while both of the provisions quoted require that the conveyance, etc., shall have been made within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the former (relating to conveyances fraudulent at common law) requires an intent and purpose on the part of the debtor to hinder or defraud his creditors, but not that he should have been insolvent at the time, whereas the latter cannot be brought into play unless the debtor was insolvent when the conveyance, etc., was made, but does not require any purpose on his part with reference to obstructing or defrauding creditors, but only that the particular transaction should be "held null and void as against the creditors" by the laws of the state.

[2] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67e.
[3] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67e, in finem.
[4] Allen v. Montgomery, 48 Miss. 101, 10 N. B. R. 503; Bailey v. Wood, 211 Mass. 37, 97 N. E. 902, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 950.

Still another part of the statute provides that "the trustee may avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor of such bankrupt might have avoided, and may recover the property so transferred, or its value, from the person to whom it was transferred, unless he was a bona fide holder for value prior to the date of the adjudication. Such property may be recovered or its value collected from whoever may have received it, except a bona fide holder for value." [5] It might naturally be supposed that this clause was intended to add nothing to the description of conveyances and incumbrances which should be void or voidable under the act, but was merely meant as an explicit declaration concerning the trustee's right of action, namely, that he should be vested with the same right of action to avoid transfers and incumbrances which would be possessed by any creditor of the bankrupt if bankruptcy had not intervened. But it is significant that this clause omits all reference to the four-months' limitation. And consequently it is held that, if there be any kind of transfer of property which a creditor of the grantor might have avoided, though it was neither made with intent to delay or defraud creditors nor is denounced as void by the laws of the state, then the trustee in bankruptcy may avoid it, and without any regard to the time when it was made as compared with the date of bankruptcy.[6] But the effect of this clause is merely to vest the trustee with the same rights possessed by the creditor; it does not clothe him with any new or additional right in the premises over those possessed by the creditor, and he is subject to the same limitations and disabilities which would have beset the creditor in the prosecution of the action on his own behalf; and the rights of the parties are to be determined, not by any provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, but by the applicable principles of the common law or the laws of the state in which the right of action may arise.[7]

§ 446. Rights of Trustee as to Transfers.—With respect to the ownership of property in general, and so far as regards valid sales, liens, and incumbrances, the trustee merely succeeds to the title of the bank-

[5] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70e.

[6] Joseph v. Raff, 176 N. Y. 611, 68 N. E. 1118; Treseder v. Burgor, 130 Wis. 201, 109 N. W. 957; Friedman v. Verchofsky, 105 Ill. App. 414; Sharp v. Fitzhugh, 75 Ark. 562, 88 S. W. 929; Boyd v. Arnold, 103 Ark. 105, 146 S. W. 118; Thomas v. Fletcher, 153 Fed. 226, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Toothaker Bros., 128 Fed. 187, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99; In re Schenck, 116 Fed. 554, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; Irwin v. Maple, 252 Fed. 10, 164 C. C. A. 122, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532; Neuburger v. Felis, 203 Ala. 142, 82 South. 172.

[7] Davis v. Willey (D. C.) 263 Fed. 588, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; Coleman v. Hagey, 252 Mo. 702, 158 S. W. 829.

rupt and has no stronger rights than he,[8] and if the filing of a petition in bankruptcy were merely an appropriation by the bankrupt of his property for the payment of his debts, like a common-law assignment, the trustee would be equally bound with the bankrupt in respect to prior conveyances and transfers made in fraud of creditors.[9] But by the express terms of the act, the trustee represents creditors, succeeds to their rights, and is invested with the same rights of action which they would have had (if bankrupcy had not intervened) concerning any such conveyances or transfers.[10] It follows that the trustee in bankruptcy may, by proper proceedings, avoid or annul any transfer made by the bankrupt which any creditor might have attacked by similar proceedings.[11] In fact, the trustee occupies exactly as strong a position, and especially since the amendment of 1910, as a creditor who has levied an attachment or one who holds a judgment or an unsatisfied execution,[12]

[8] In re Great Western Mfg. Co., 152 Fed. 123, 81 C. C. A. 341, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[9] At common law, the right of a creditor to attack and set aside a conveyance made by his debtor, on the ground of fraud, does not pass to an assignee or trustee appointed by the debtor. It will not pass to an assignee for the benefit of creditors, unless by force of some statute of the state. Sandwich Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 22 Fed. 631; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co.'s Trustee, 172 Fed. 177, 96 C. C. A. 629, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442.

[10] In re Lukens, 138 Fed. 188, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683; Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Millbourne Mills Co.'s Trustee, 172 Fed. 177, 96 C. C. A. 629, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; In re Rodgers, 125 Fed. 169, 60 C. C. A. 567, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; Pfeiffer v. Roe, 108 App. Div. 54, 95 N. Y. Supp. 1014; In re Grocers' Baking Co. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 900, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150. The fact that, long before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, there were creditors who were entitled under the state law to attack a particular transfer or conveyance by their debtor, as being fraudulent as to them, though not fraudulent as to subsequent creditors, does not give those creditors any priority in the bankruptcy proceedings, nor prevent the application of the provision of the Bankruptcy Act for the dissolution of liens obtained within four months; the trustee in bankruptcy succeeds to the rights of all the creditors in such matters. Globe Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 236 U. S. 288, 35 Sup. Ct. 377, 59 L. Ed. 583, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[11] Sanborn-Cutting Co. v. Paine, 244 Fed. 672, 157 C. C. A. 120, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; In re Cutler & John (D. C.) 228 Fed. 771, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420; Wright v. H. B. Ehrlich & Co., 146 Ga. 400, 91 S. E. 412; Beasley v. Smith, 144 Ga. 377, 87 S. E. 293; Albert Pick & Co. v. Natalby, 211 Ill. App. 486; Blake v. Thwing, 185 Ill. App. 187; Gregory v. Binghamton Trust Co., 168 App. Div. 805, 154 N. Y. Supp. 376; Bronaugh v. Evans, 204 Ala. 153, 85 South. 556; Ignatius v. Farmers' State Bank (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 33, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; Minott v. Johnson (Me.) 113 Atl. 464; Durrett v. Harris (Ark.) 228 S. W. 386; Thomas v. Roddy, 122 App. Div. 851, 107 N. Y. Supp. 473; Cox v. Wall, 132 N. C. 730, 44 S. E. 635; Landis v. McDonald, 88 Mo. App. 335; Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Elsey-Hemphill Carriage Co., 152 Mo. App. 401, 133 S. W. 412; Earle v. National Metallurgic Co., 77 N. J. Eq. 17, 76 Atl. 555; Hunt v. Doyal, 128 Ga. 416, 57 S. E. 489; In re Mullen, 101 Fed. 413, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; Everett v. Stone, 3 Story, 446, Fed. Cas. No. 4,557; Bradshaw v. Klein, 2 Biss. 20, 1 N. B. R. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 1,790; In re Metzger, 2 N. B. R. 355, Fed. Cas. No. 9,510; In re Leland, 7 Ben. 156, 9 N. B. R. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 8,230; In re Leland, 10 Blatchf. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 8,234.

[12] In re Rodgers, 125 Fed. 169, 60 C. C. A. 567, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; Bunnell v. Bronson, 78 Conn. 679, 63 Atl.

and he may maintain a suit to set aside any fraudulent conveyance, made within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, which could have been attacked by creditors in that position,[13] although the particular transaction would have been valid and binding as between the immediate parties to it,[14] so that the bankrupt himself could not have sustained an action to recover the money or property, vacate the conveyance, or otherwise annul his own act.[15] But more than this, the act provides (§ 67e) that property conveyed in fraud of creditors shall "be and remain a part of the assets and estate of the bankrupt and shall pass to his said trustee," and also (§ 70a) that the trustee shall be vested with title to property conveyed by the bankrupt in fraud of his creditors. As to such property, therefore, the trustee is not merely a successor to the rights of defrauded creditors, but he is invested with the title,[16] and may sue to vacate or avoid any fraudulent transfer of the bankrupt's property, whether or not there is any creditor armed with a lien or otherwise in position to attack such transfer,[17] and a bill by the trustee for this purpose should be maintained in his own name as 396; Putnam v. Southworth, 197 Mass. 270, 83 N. E. 887; In re Carpenter, 125 Fed. 831, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147. Since an execution creditor may maintain an action of trespass on the case against persons who have fraudulently conspired to secrete and transfer the property of the debtor, such an action may be maintained by the debtor's trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed, by virtue of the amendment of 1910 giving him the rights and remedies of an execution creditor. Sattler v. Slonimsky, 199 Fed. 592, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

[13] Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. 351, 21 L. Ed. 542; In re Ricketts, 234 Fed. 285, 148 C. C. A. 187, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124; Winslow v. Staab, 233 Fed. 305, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420; Park v. South Bend Chilled Plow Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 843; Grand Rapids Trust Co. v. Nichols, 199 Mich. 126, 165 N. W. 667; Miley v. Heaney, 169 Wis. 58, 169 N. W. 64; Schmitt v. Dahl, 88 Minn. 506, 93 N. W. 665, 67 L. R. A. 590; Adams' Assignee v. Branch, 3 Ky. Law Rep. 178; McMaster v. Campbell, 41 Mich. 513, 2 N. W. 836. A corporation's trustee in bankruptcy has capacity to contest the validity of a mortgage covering the bankrupt's real and personal property. Pacific State Bank v. Coats, 205 Fed. 618, 123 C. C. A. 634, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665. The trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation is entitled to maintain a bill to set aside transfers of property by the corporation to one of its directors as in fraud of its creditors. Henderson v. Garner, 200 Ala. 59, 75 South. 387.

[14] Adams v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. 396, 2 Fed. 174; Crooks v. Stuart, 2 McCrary, 13, 7 Fed. 800; Mann v. Flower, 25 Minn. 500.

[15] Elmore v. Symonds, 183 Mass. 321, 67 N. E. 314; Bennett v. Ætna Ins. Co., 201 Mass. 554, 88 N. E. 335, 131 Am. St. Rep. 414; Carr v. Gale, 3 Woodb. & M. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 2,435.

[16] Hillyer v. Le Roy, 84 App. Div. 129, 82 N. Y. Supp. 80; Annis v. Butterfield, 99 Me. 181, 58 Atl. 898; Starks v. Curd, 88 Ky. 164, 10 S. W. 419; In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117; Mann v. Flower, 25 Minn. 500; Neuburger v. Felis, 203 Ala. 142, 82 South. 172; Barrett v. Kaigler, 200 Ala. 404, 76 South. 320; Buttz v. James, 33 N. D. 162, 156 N. W. 547; Ernest Wolff Mfg. Co. v. Battreal Shoe Co., 192 Mo. App. 113, 180 S. W. 396.

[17] Sheldon v. Parker, 66 Neb. 610, 92 N. W. 923, 95 N. W. 1015. See also Faulkner v. Kaplon, 203 Fed. 114. Compare Coleman v. Hagey (Mo.) 158 S. W. 829. This provision of the Bankruptcy Act vests in the trustee title to all property transferred by the bankrupt at any time, in fraud of creditors existing at the trustee, and not in the name of the bankrupt or of any creditor.[18] But as it is the duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to represent the unsecured creditors, he is not entitled to sue to annul a conveyance merely as given in fraud of a creditor who has a lien on the property.[19] Nor can the trustee complain of the fraudulent character of a mortgage given by a purchaser from the bankrupt to a third person, unless he can impeach the sale from the bankrupt to the purchaser on other grounds.[20]

§ 447. Election by Trustee.—It is not the imperative duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to reclaim and attempt to recover all the property alleged to have been conveyed away by the bankrupt in fraud of his creditors. There may be circumstances rendering the necessary litigation so costly, protracted, and doubtful that the ultimate benefit to the estate might be very small. In such cases he may elect to claim the property and proceed for its recovery or not to do so, and if he does not elect to take it within a reasonable time, it is deemed an election to reject it.[21] And if he has once elected not to attempt to set aside a conveyance or transfer by the bankrupt, he cannot afterwards come into equity to attack it.[22] Thus, where a debtor, within four months before his bankruptcy, sold and assigned certain accounts to a third person, and his trustee, with full knowledge of the facts, applied for and obtained an order from the court of bankruptcy requiring the bankrupt to turn over a part of the proceeds of the sale which had not been accounted for, such action of the trustee was held an election to affirm the sale and he could not thereafter maintain a petition against the assignee to recover the accounts, on the ground that the sale was fraudulent.[23]

§ 448. Trustee's Right of Action Exclusive.—The provisions of the bankruptcy law relating to fraudulent conveyances by the bankrupt have the effect, not only to vest in the trustee in bankrutpcy the right to maintain actions for the avoidance of such conveyances, but also to take away that right from creditors. After the adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee,[24] no creditor has the right to institute legal proceedings to set aside a transfer or conveyance alleged to have been fraudulent, as that right pertains to the trustee alone.[25] And the adjuditime of the bankruptcy. Barrett v. Kaigler, 200 Ala. 404, 76 South. 320.

18 Exchange Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 158 Ala. 218, 48 South. 487.

19 Cowan v. Staggs (Ala.) 59 South. 153.

20 Sellers v. Hayes, 163 Ind. 422, 72 N. E. 119.

21 Nash v. Simpson, 78 Me. 142, 3 Atl. 53. And see supra, §§ 282, 283, 321.

22 Laughlin v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co., 65 Fed. 441, 13 C. C. A. 1. And see Greenhall v. Carnegie Trust Co., 180 Fed. 812, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

23 Thomas v. Sugerman (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 669, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 509.

24 As to the right of creditors to institute such an action after the adjudication in bankruptcy, but before any trustee has been appointed, see Guaranty Title & Trust Co. v. Pearlman, 144 Fed. 550, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

25 Trimble v. Woodhead, 102 U. S. 647, 26 L. Ed. 290; Glenny v. Langdon, 98 U.

cation in bankruptcy and appointment of a trustee constitute a complete defense to a creditor's bill filed for such a purpose in a state court.[26] Further, the refusal or failure of the trustee in bankruptcy to sue for the avoidance of an alleged fraudulent conveyance within the time prescribed by law, or at all, does not transfer the right to any creditor or to the creditors generally, nor authorize them to sue in their own behalf.[27] The remedy of creditors who are dissatisfied with the refusal or inactivity of the trustee is to apply to the court of bankruptcy for an order directing the trustee to institute the necessary proceedings. If the court is satisfied that such action should be taken and will probably result in benefit to the estate, it has power to require the trustee to proceed,[28] though, in doubtful cases, the creditors who insist on the suit being brought may be required to indemnify the trustee against the costs and expenses.[29]

§ 449. Conditions Precedent to Trustee's Action.—Since the bankruptcy law vests the trustee with title to all property conveyed by the bankrupt in fraud of creditors, he may proceed to recover such property notwithstanding the fact that there may be, at the time, no creditor who has put his claim in judgment and thus placed himself in a position to assail the transfer as fraudulent. The trustee's title "accrues by force of the act, and not through the right of the creditor to assert the fraud." [30] Moreover, the bankruptcy law makes it impossible for creditors to re-

S. 20, 25 L. Ed. 43; Wright v. H. B. Ehrlich & Co., 146 Ga. 400, 91 S. E. 412; Kimbrough v. Alred, 202 Ala. 413, 80 South. 617; McMahon v. Pithan, 167 Iowa, 498, 147 N. W. 920; Barnes Mfg. Co. v. Norden, 67 N. J. Law, 493, 51 Atl. 454; In re Gray, 47 App. Div. 554, 62 N. Y. Supp. 618; Elder's Ex'rs v. Harris, 76 Va. 187; Bolling v. Munchus, 59 Ala. 482; Thurmond v. Andrews, 10 Bush (Ky.) 400, 13 N. B. R. 157; Anderson v. Anderson, 80 Ky. 638; Allen v. Montgomery, 48 Miss. 101, 10 N. B. R. 503; Goodwin v. Sharkey, 5 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 64, 3 N. B. R. 558; Scott v. Devlin, 89 Fed. 970; In re Lowe, 19 Fed. 589; New Orleans Nat. Banking Ass'n v. Le Breton, 14 Fed. 646; Allen v. Massey, 1 Dill. 40, 4 N. B. R. 248, Fed. Cas. No. 231. Contra, see Board of Directors v. Lowrance, 111 S. C. 295, 97 S. E. 830. As to suits begun by creditors more than four months before the bankruptcy, the right to continue them after the appointment of a trustee, and the preference gained by the suing creditors, see Boyd v. Arnold, 103 Ark. 105, 146 S. W. 118; Hillyer v. Le Roy, 179 N. Y. 369, 72 N. E. 237, 103 Am. St. Rep. 919.

[26] Leseure v. Weaver, 108 Ill. App. 616.

[27] Moyer v. Dewey, 103 U. S. 301, 26 L. Ed. 394; Ruhl-Koblegard Co. v. Gillespie, 61 W. Va. 584, 56 S. E. 898, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 305, 11 Ann. Cas. 929. Compare Bates v. Bradley, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 84.

[28] Glenny v. Langdon, 98 U. S. 20, 25 L. Ed. 43; McMaster v. Campbell, 41 Mich. 513, 2 N. W. 836; Freelander v. Holloman, 9 N. B. R. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 5,081. See Casey v. Baker (D. C.) 212 Fed. 247, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311, holding that it is the trustee's duty, if properly indemnified, to sue to set aside fraudulent transfers, and if he refuses, an interested party may sue in his own name, making the trustee a defendant, or may be permitted to sue in the trustee's name.

[29] See supra, § 283.

[30] Platt v. Matthews, 10 Fed. 280. A trustee may maintain a suit to recover property fraudulently conveyed without duce their claims to judgment after the adjudication, although this is usually necessary as a condition precedent to the right to avoid a fraudulent conveyance, or even that the creditor should hold an execution returned unsatisfied.[31] But the trustee occupies the position of an execution creditor, and hence it is not a pre-requisite to his right to institute proceedings for such purpose, nor a condition to his action, that judgments at law should have been obtained upon the claims of the creditors in whose behalf the equitable remedy is invoked.[32] Nor is any demand necessary before the commencement of an action by the trustee to recover property unlawfully transferred by the bankrupt,[33] neither is he bound to tender to the purchaser the amount which the latter may have paid to the bankrupt.[34] But the trustee is bound to show some actionable injury to himself, or rather to the estate which he represents, and therefore an action will not lie to avoid an alleged fraudulent sale of personal property, where the goods have already been seized under a warrant in bankruptcy and turned over to the trustee, whose possession is undisputed.[35]

§ 450. Same; Proof of Debts and Insufficiency of Assets.—In a suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or transfer, the trustee must be prepared to show that there were creditors of the bankrupt at the time of the alleged fraud, except in those cases where the transaction may be regarded as fraudulent with respect to subsequent creditors.[36] Also he must allege and show that there are proved and allowed claims against the estate in bankruptcy, or at least provable debts, at the time of bringing the suit, for otherwise there would be no one for him to represent and a recovery would simply inure to the benefit of the bankrupt himself, which is not the purpose of the act.[37] Hence, if the creditors pur-proving injury or first obtaining judgment on his claim. Davis v. Gates (D. C.) 235 Fed. 192, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818.

[31] Thomas v. Roddy, 122 App. Div. 851, 107 N. Y. Supp. 473; Riker v. Gwynne, 116 N. Y. Supp. 10.

[32] Mitchell v. Mitchell, 147 Fed. 280, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Mueller v. Bruss, 112 Wis. 406, 88 N. W. 229; Thomas v. Roddy, 122 App. Div. 851, 107 N. Y. Supp. 473; Crary v. Kurtz, 132 Iowa, 105, 105 N. W. 590, 109 N. W. 452, 119 Am. St. Rep. 549; Beasley v. Coggins, 48 Fla. 215, 37 South. 213, 5 Ann. Cas. 801; Hobbs v. Frazier, 61 Fla. 611, 55 South. 848; Hood v. Blair State Bank, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 432, 91 N. W. 701; Ryan v. Rogers, 14 Idaho, 309, 94 Pac. 427; Cragin v. Carmichael, 2 Dill. 519, 11 N. B. R. 511, Fed. Cas. No. 3,319; Baldwin v. Kingston (D. C.) 247 Fed. 163, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420. It is not even necessary for the trustee, before suing to set aside fraudulent transfers, to wait for the formal allowance of creditors' claims in the bankruptcy proceedings, if they have been presented and filed. Brewer v. Brown, 268 Ill. 562, 109 N. E. 264.

[33] Goldberg v. Harlan, 33 Ind. App. 465, 67 N. E. 707.

[34] Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669.

[35] Smith v. Claflin, 19 N. B. R. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 13,026.

[36] Union Trust Co. v. Amery, 67 Wash. 1, 120 Pac. 539; Cobb v. First Nat. Bank (D. C.) 263 Fed. 1000, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48.

[37] Crary v. Kurtz, 132 Iowa, 105, 105 N. W. 590, 109 N. W. 452, 119 Am. St.

porting to be represented in the action by the trustee have failed to present their claims for allowance within the time required by the statute, and are therefore barred from participation in the estate, the action cannot be maintained.[38] Such a suit may be prosecuted for the sole benefit of one person, if he is the only creditor of the bankrupt,[39] but not where that creditor has so conducted himself with reference to the transaction in suit as to estop himself from alleging its fraudulent character.[40] Further, and to put himself in a position analogous to that of a creditor holding an execution returned unsatisfied, the trustee must aver that the assets of the estate in his hands are not sufficient to satisfy the claims filed against it,[41] though it is said that this is not necessary where the bankrupt states in his petition or schedule that he has no assets.[42]

§ 451. Nature and Form of Transaction.—Under the broad and comprehensive language of the statute, relating to "conveyances, transfers, assignments, or incumbrances" of property, it may be stated in the most general terms that any disposition of real or personal property by a debtor which would have been void as against his creditors, as being fraudulent at common law or under the statutes of the state, if no petition in bankruptcy had been filed against him, will be equally void as against creditors represented by his trustee in bankruptcy.[43] And first, one may lawfully sell any part of his property for a present fair consideration, even though he is insolvent, and the transfer will not be voidable in bankruptcy, if the laws of the state were complied with in respect to delivery and other such requisites,[44] and there was no intent to place the property beyond the reach of creditors. But a transfer of property for a past consideration, or in discharge of an unsecured debt, will gen-

Rep. 549; Leavengood v. McGee, 50 Or. 233, 91 Pac. 453: Nicholas v. Murray, 5 Sawy. 320, 18 N. B. R. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 10,223. See Treseder v. Burgor, 130 Wis. 201, 109 N. W. 957. Compare Donegan v. Davis, 66 Ala. 362.

[38] Cartwright v. West, 173 Ala. 198, 55 South. 917.

[39] Level Land Co. v. Sivyer, 112 Wis. 442, 88 N. W. 317.

[40] Parker v. Travers, 74 N. J. Eq. 812, 71 Atl. 612.

[41] Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., 216 U. S. 545, 30 Sup. Ct. 412, 54 L. Ed. 610; Prescott v. Galluccio, 164 Fed. 618, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229; Mueller v. Bruss, 112 Wis. 406, 88 N. W. 229; Flint v. Chaloupka, 81 Neb. 87, 115 N. W. 535; Shelly v. Nolen, 38 Tex. Civ. App. 343, 88 S. W. 524; McKey v. Smith, 255 Ill. 465, 99 N. E. 695; Hibschman v. Bevis, 103 Wash. 317, 174 Pac. 5. Compare Entwisle v. Cohen, 141 App. Div. 834, 125 N. Y. Supp. 935.

[42] In re Schoenfield, 190 Fed. 53, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

[43] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 67e, 70e. And see Union Trust & Sav. Bank v. Amery, 72 Wash. 648, 131 Pac. 199; In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117; In re Morrill, 2 Sawy. 356, 8 N. B. R. 117, Fed. Cas. No. 9,821; Smith v. Ely, 10 N. B. R. 553, Fed. Cas. No. 13,044; Blake v. Thwing, 185 Ill. App. 187.

[44] In re Ozark Cooperage & Lumber Co., 180 Fed. 105, 103 C. C. A. 603, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835; Burnes v. Epstein, 201 Fed. 393. And see Meyer v. Perkins, 20 Cal. App. 661, 130 Pac. 206. The mere fact that the defendant, having purchased property from the bankrupt, got it at a bargain price or for much less than its actual value, is not erally be voidable either as a preference or as a fraud on the creditors.[45] So where a pretended sale is merely colorable, and amounts to no more than a device to put the apparent title in a third person while the debtor remains the real owner,[46] or where a chose in action is assigned to a third person, without any consideration, but merely that he may collect the money and hand it to the bankrupt,[47] or where the sale includes the fixtures and furniture and the lease of the debtor's place of business, and so deprives him of the means of continuing his business,[48] or where a voluntary settlement by a debtor effects the payment of debts and contingent liabilities existing at the time, but by means of contracting other obligations which afterwards result in his insolvency.[49]

Again, trustees in bankruptcy very frequently find the wife of the bankrupt in the possession and apparent ownership of considerable property, which is not satisfactorily accounted for. Undoubtedly a wife is entitled to all she obtains from sources independent of her husband, and cannot be molested therein by his creditors.[50] And she may honestly acquire property directly from him, if she gives an adequate consideration. But the peculiar relation of the parties offers a special temptation to an insolvent or embarrassed man who is seeking the means to evade the just demands of his creditors and place property beyond their reach. Hence a transfer of property by a debtor to his wife, either directly or through an intermediary, should be carefully scrutinized, and it will be voidable at the instance of his trustee in bankruptcy if found to have been without consideration and in contemplation of insolvency, or merely colorable, the wife taking the record title, but the husband retaining all the fruits of ownership and the power of disposition.[51] enough to warrant setting aside the sale as fraudulent, since mere inadequacy of price is not alone a proof of fraud. Klein v. Gallin, 141 N. Y. Supp. 831.

[45] Carpenter v. Karnow, 193 Fed. 762, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; Greenhall v. Carnegie Trust Co., 180 Fed. 812, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Connelly, 204 Fed. 479, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; Raley v. Raymond Bros. Co., 73 Neb. 496, 103 N. W. 57; In re Ansley Bros., 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457. But where a debtor, shortly before his bankruptcy, conveys real and personal property which he had previously sold and for which he had received payment, but had not yet conveyed, the conveyance is not void, although the debtor knew that he was insolvent, as the title to such propery was merely held by him in trust for the purchaser. Steadman v. Caswell, 2 Hask. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 13,330a.

[46] In re Siegel, 164 Fed. 559, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154; Visanska v. Cohen, 165 Fed. 552, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350; In re Irwin (D. C.) 268 Fed. 162, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288.

[47] O'Sullivan's Trustee v. Douglass, 98 S. W. 990, 30 Ky. Law Rep. 366. An advancement made to enable the bankrupt to keep in business long enough to prevent the avoidance of prior preferences is a fraud on the Bankruptcy Act, so that the trustee can recover property assigned in consideration of the advancement. Rubenstein v. Lottow, 220 Mass. 156, 107 N. E. 718.

[48] Brooks v. D'Orville, 7 Ben. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 1,951.

[49] Spaulding v. McGovern, Fed. Cas. No. 13,218.

[50] In re Eldred, 3 N. B. R. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 4,328.

[51] Henkel v. Seider, 163 Fed. 553, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; In re Smith, 100

For somewhat similar reasons, the courts have often denounced the scheme by which an embarrassed merchant or manufacturer procures the organization of a corporation, to which he transfers his stock and property, ostensibly as his successor in business, but which is really conducted thereafter solely for his own benefit, the purpose being to delay and defraud his creditors by interposing an apparently new ownership between the property and their claims. Such a transfer is voidable in bankruptcy.[52] But it is otherwise where the creditors themselves engineer the formation of the corporation, or cause it to be operated for their benefit, rather than for that of the debtor.[53]

Again, one may take a mortgage or other security upon the property of an insolvent or failing debtor, and maintain it as against his trustee in bankruptcy, provided full and present consideration was given and there was no knowledge of an intent to defraud or to give a preference.[54] Nor is the enforcement of an existing mechanic's lien necessarily invalid as against subsequent proceedings in bankruptcy,[55] nor a transaction the effect of which is merely to render specific a previously existing general lien,[56] or to convert alimony due and accruing under a decree of court into an annuity for life secured by a duly recorded mortgage of specific property.[57] But a mortgage or other security newly given for a debt past due is generally voidable in bankruptcy, either as a preference or as a fraud on the other creditors.[58] And even giving present

Fed. 795, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95; In re Wood, 5 Fed. 443; Fisher v. Henderson, 8 N. B. R. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 4,820; Lawrence v. Graves, 5 N. B. R. 279, Fed. Cas. No. 8,138; Saxton v. Sebring, 96 App. Div. 570, 89 N. Y. Supp. 372; Breschemier v. Houston (Iowa) 96 N. W. 756; In re Eldred, 3 N. B. R. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 4,328; Jackson v. Jetter (Iowa) 142 N. W. 431; Block v. Academy Ball Room, Inc. (D. C.) 221 Fed. 1004, 34 Am. St. Rep. 675; Milkman v. Arthe (D. C.) 213 Fed. 642.

[52] In re Berkowitz, 173 Fed. 1013, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233; In re Holbrook Shoe & Leather Co., 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. 511; In re Medina Quarry Co., 179 Fed. 929, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769; Ludvigh v. American Woolen Co., 159 Fed. 796, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 795; Foster v. Hip Lung Ying Kee & Co., 243 Ill. 163, 90 N. E. 375. See In re L. M. Alleman Hardware Co., 158 Fed. 119, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765; In re Jamaica Slate Roofing & Supply Co., 200 Fed. 460; Hane v. Crown & Keystone Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 439, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; Osborn v. Peace (D. C.) 215 Fed. 181.

[53] In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., 133 Fed. 556, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409.

[54] Grinstead v. Union Savings & Trust Co., 190 Fed. 546, 111 C. C. A. 398, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; Lindley v. Ross, 200 Fed. 733, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; First Nat. Bank v. Haverkampf, 16 N. M. 497, 121 Pac. 31. See, supra, § 366 et seq. A conveyance of property by a bankrupt to a mortgagee in payment of that and other valid liens is not voidable in the bankruptcy proceedings. Meservey v. Roby, 198 Fed. 844, 117 C. C. A. 486, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

[55] Fehling v. Goings, 67 N. J. Eq. 375, 58 Atl. 642. See supra, § 374.

[56] Duplan Silk Co. v. Spencer, 115 Fed. 689, 53 C. C. A. 321, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367.

[57] Savage v. Savage, 141 Fed. 346, 72 C. C. A. 494, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

[58] Johnstone v. Babb, 240 Fed. 668, 153 C. C. A. 466, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep 715; MacHenry v. Dwelling Building & Loan Ass'n, 259 Fed. 880, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234; In re National Boat & Engine Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 208, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154; In re Salvator Brewing Co., 183 Fed. 910, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; consideration will not always save it. For a temporary loan at exorbitant interest, upon the conveyance of the insolvent borrower's whole assets, is a fraud on the bankruptcy law and therefore void.[59] The same is true of a mortgage given by a corporation to secure the personal indebtedness of its principal stockholder,[60] or one which lacks the consent of the necessary proportion of the stockholders, as provided by the state statute.[61] And a chattel mortgage comes within the terms of the bankruptcy law, and may be avoided by the trustee, if fraudulent and void as against creditors, whether for failure to record, or because there was no change of possession, or the mortgagor was not bound to account for sales, or for other reasons.[62] And so of a pledge of personal property as security for the payment of an existing debt, disguised as a bill of sale with a separate instrument of defeasance without change of possession.[63]

Bradley v. Farwell, Holmes, 433, Fed. Cas. No. 1,779; Bradley v. Converse, 4 Cliff. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 1,776; Durack v. Wilson, 46 Misc. Rep. 237, 94 N. Y. Supp. 232; Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462. That a renewal of a chattel mortgage may be invalid as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor, see Scott v. One Thousand Island Boat & Engine Co., 134 N. Y. Supp. 150. A mortgage of all the mortgagor's property to secure overdue notes representing moneys advanced to take up other notes for the mortgagor, the latter bearing indorsements which were alleged to have been forged, must be deemed a conveyance made to hinder or defraud creditors, so as to be voidable by the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy. Dean v. Davis, 242 U. S. 438, 37 Sup. Ct. 130, 61 L. Ed. 419, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664. Where the majority stockholder of a corporation, with knowledge of its precarious financial condition, agreed to sell to the corporation its own stock of a par value of $5,100 for $2,000, receiving $500 in cash and notes secured by a deed of trust covering all the corporation's assets for the balance, the transaction was fraudulent as against the corporation's creditors and void as against its trustee in bankruptcy. M. V. Moore & Co. v. Gilmore, 216 Fed. 99, 132 C. C. A. 343.

[59] Brooks v. Davis, Fed. Cas. No. 1,950.

[60] American Wood Working Machinery Co. v. Norment (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 801, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

[61] In re Eagle Steam Laundry Co., 176 Fed. 740, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 859.

[62] In re Geiver, 193 Fed. 128, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413; Egan State Bank v. Rice, 119 Fed. 107, 56 C. C. A. 157, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re Platts, 110 Fed. 126, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; Kappner v. St. Louis & St. J. R. Ass'n, 3 Dill. 228, Fed. Cas. No. 7,612; In re Leland, 10 Blatchf. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 8,234; In re Jaconson & Perrill, 200 Fed. 812, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603; Johnson v. Dismukes, 204 Fed. 382, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 686; In re Raney, 202 Fed. 996. Compare In re Durham, 114 Fed. 750, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115. See supra, § 367. And see also In re Purtell (D. C.) 215 Fed. 191; Peterson v. Sabin, 214 Fed. 234, 130 C. C. A. 608, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599; In re Haywood Wagon Co., 219 Fed. 655, 135 C. C. A. 391, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618; In re F. H. Saunders & Co., 272 Fed. 1003, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Zehner v. Southern Surety Co., 272 Fed. 954, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; General Securities Co. v. Driscoll (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 296; In re Pine Tree Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 515, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; In re Bonk (D. C.) 268 Fed. 1012, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

[63] In re Groezinger (D. C.) 199 Fed. 935, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732. See In re American Fibre Reed Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 309, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223; Home Bond Co. v. McChesney, 210 Fed. 893, 127 C. C. A. 552; Petition of National Discount Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 570, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

Money also is property within the meaning of the law, and its transfer may be fraudulent as against creditors. Thus, where the owner of all the stock of a trading corporation, when it was indebted and within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against it, transferred the greater part of its bank deposit, which constituted practically its sole assets, to himself in payment of alleged claims, leaving not enough to pay other claims, it was held that the transaction constituted not only a preference, but also a transfer with intent to hinder and defraud creditors.[64] So, where the bankrupt, who was the owner of a business corporation, at a time when it was desperately involved, diverted revenues of its business for his own benefit and that of others by overpayments for services, exorbitant hire of teams, and other expenses, his trustee in bankruptcy was held entitled to reach such money and property in the hands of those benefited.[65] So where one who knows himself to be insolvent makes a payment on a debt barred by the statute of limitations, the resulting implied promise to pay the remainder of the outlawed debt is an "incumbrance" which may be avoided by the trustee in bankruptcy, since its effect is to defeat the defense of limitations, and that is a valuable right which passes to his creditors in bankruptcy.[66] On similar principles, where property is purchased by a man with his own money, but, by his direction or procurement, the conveyance is made to his wife and the title vested in her, it may properly be said, within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, that the money so paid by him is "transferred," and if this is done in fraud of his creditors, the title to the fund will pass to his trustee in bankruptcy, and the land, as representing it, may be subjected to the administration of the estate.[67] And of course the rule is the same when any third person, other than the bankrupt's wife, is made the cover to receive the title, the bankrupt furnishing the money.[68] But one may loan money to his wife to enable her to purchase real estate, and if the loan is repaid before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings against the husband, the land cannot be taken from the wife or impressed with a trust for the husband's creditors.[69] It may also be a fraudulent "transfer" of property, within the meaning of the statute, when funds are diverted by an insolvent debtor from the claims of his creditors and invested in a homestead,[70] or when a payment to a creditor covers not [64] Boston West Africa Trading Co. v. Quaker City Morocco Co. (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 665, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315.

[65] Kimbrough v. Alred, 202 Ala. 413, 80 South. 617.

[66] In re Salmon (D. C.) 239 Fed. 413, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[67] Platt v. Mead, 9 Fed. 91; In re Meyers, 2 Ben. 424, 1 N. B. R. 581, Fed. Cas. No. 9,518; In re Schonberg, 7 Ben. 211, Fed. Cas. No. 12,477.

[68] Hyde v. Cohen, 11 N. B. R. 461, Fed. Cas. No. 6,967; Parker v. Travers, 74 N. J. Eq. 812, 71 Atl. 612.

[69] Clark v. Else, 21 S. D. 112, 110 N. W. 88.

[70] Painter v. Napoleon Township, 190 Fed. 637, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; John-only existing debts but also the amount of a note not yet due.[71] But a set-off by a bank of a deposit account due to a bankrupt against his liability to the bank on a note is not a "transfer of property" by the bankrupt.[72] A gift of money or property of considerable value by a husband to his wife is in fraud of his creditors, and recoverable by his trustee in bankruptcy, if made while he was insolvent and in contemplation of the bankruptcy which shortly followed,[73] and this includes payments made by him on policies of insurance on his own life for the wife's benefit.[74]

So again, a debtor may "transfer" his property to another by voluntarily confessing judgment in favor of such other and allowing him to issue execution and make a levy and sale resulting in his becoming the purchaser.[75] But the plaintiff in a pending suit has the right to abandon or settle the contest at any stage, at his election, and on his subsequent adjudication as a bankrupt his trustee has no cause of action growing out of the settlement of the case, unless in the direction of pursuing the proceeds of a compromise actually received by the bankrupt.[76] And where property of the debtor is sold under execution in coercive adversary proceedings, in which he made an active though unsuccessful defense, it cannot be said that the sale is in any sense a fraud upon his creditors.[77]

§ 452. Sales of Merchandise in Bulk.—Where a merchant sells his entire stock in trade at one time to one purchaser, it is such an unusual occurrence and so far out of the ordinary course of business as to be presumptive evidence of fraud and to charge the purchaser with knowledge of the facts and with bad faith, so that the burden is on him to sustain the validity of his purchase by showing that he took all reasonable and proper steps to ascertain the seller's financial condition and that he bought in good faith and for a present fair consideration.[78] And if it is son v. May, 16 N. B. R. 425, Fed. Cas. No. 7,397. But see In re Letson, 157 Fed. 78, 84 C. C. A. 582, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

[71] Irish v. Citizens' Trust Co., 163 Fed. 880, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

[72] Booth v. Prete, 81 Conn. 636, 71 Atl. 938, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 863, 15 Ann. Cas. 306. See In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 267, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

[73] Wiley v. McBride, 74 Ark. 34, 85 S. W. 84; In re Friedman, 153 Fed. 939.

[74] In re Bear, 11 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 1,178.

[75] Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[76] Edington v. Masson, 177 Fed. 209, 101 C. C. A. 379, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

[77] Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., 178 Fed. 136.

[78] Walbrun v. Babbitt, 16 Wall. 577, 21 L. Ed. 489; In re Calvi, 185 Fed. 642, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; Dokken v. Page, 147 Fed. 438, 77 C. C. A. 674, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Knopf, 144 Fed. 245, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432; In re Hemstreet, 139 Fed. 958, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823; Norton v. Billings, 9 Biss. 528, 4 Fed. 623; Main v. Glen, 7 Biss. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 8,973; In re Dean, 2 N. B. R. 89, Fed. Cas. No. 3,700; Foster v. Hackley, 2 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 4,971; Parker v. Sherman, 201 Fed. 155; In re Lipman, 201 Fed. 169, shown that the sale was made secretly, or with an evident desire to conceal it, that it was made at night, or made hurriedly and with little or no preliminary negotiation, that it was made after a superficial examination of the goods or without taking an inventory, and particularly if the price paid was considerably less than the value of the goods, these are indicia of fraud counting heavily against the purchaser in the trustee's suit to set aside the sale as fraudulent.[79] Such a transaction may also be held void under § 67e of the Bankruptcy Law, as a transfer "held null and void under the laws of the state," since the "bulk sales laws" now in force in numerous states forbid such a transfer except where certain conditions are complied with.[80] But if the state law is construed as available only in favor of those creditors whose claims arose from the sale of the stock of merchandise or some part of it, and only as giving such a creditor a lien, analogous to a vendor's lien, which may be enforced by appropriate legal proceedings in the event of a sale in violation of the provisions of the act, but not as enabling any creditor to treat the sale as a nullity and proceed with the collection of his entire debt, then a sale made in defiance of the statute is not such a one as may be impeached by the trustee in bankruptcy of the seller, for the general estate of the seller can derive no benefit from such impeachment.[81] Further, where personal property, part of the bankrupt merchant's stock in trade, was sold to the same defendant, but at three different times, shortly before bankruptcy, the goods not comprising the entire stock in trade, it was not a sale in bulk.[82] Substantially the same rules apply to the case of a mortgage covering an entire stock in trade or the whole assets of a partnership or corporation.[83]

§ 453. "Preference" and "Fraudulent Transfer" Distinguished.—There is a marked distinction, which should be constantly kept in view, between a payment or transfer of property constituting a "preference" and a "fraudulent conveyance." It is true that a given transaction by an insolvent debtor may constitute both a preference and a fraudulent

29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139. Compare Shelton v. Price, 174 Fed. 891, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431.

[79] Dokken v. Page, 147 Fed. 438, 77 C. C. A. 674, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Knopf, 146 Fed. 109, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48; Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., 155 Fed. 268, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48.

[80] In re Clayton (D. C.) 259 Fed. 911, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; Brown v. Kossove, 255 Fed. 806, 167 C. C. A. 134, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408; In re Thompson (D. C.) 242 Fed. 602, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82; Philoon v. Babbitt, 119 Me. 172, 109 Atl. 817; Niklaus v. Lessenhop, 99 Neb. 803, 157 N. W. 1019.

[81] Sellers v. Hayes, 163 Ind. 422, 72 N. E. 119. And see Gorham v. Buzzell (D. C.) 178 Fed. 596, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

[82] Carpenter v. Karnow (D. C.) 193 Fed. 762, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21. And see Sabin v. Horenstein, 260 Fed. 754, 171 C. C. A. 492, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 422.

[83] Pollock v. Jones, 124 Fed. 163, 61 C. C. A. 555, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; Zartman v. First Nat. Bank, 189 N. Y. 267, 82 N. E. 127, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1083.

transfer.[84] But a transfer of money or property by an insolvent is not necessarily fraudulent under § 67e of the Bankruptcy Act, merely because it results in giving a preference to the creditor as defined in § 60 of the Act.[85] But though a preferential transfer is not in itself, or in its inception, fraudulent, it may be so manipulated or carried into later steps in an attempt to defeat a recovery by the trustee in bankruptcy as to bring the parties within that part of the statute which relates to fraudulent conveyances.[86] Thus where a creditor, having secured from his insolvent debtor a transfer of property, the enforcement of which would effect a preference under the Bankruptcy Act, advanced money to the debtor, upon an assignment of certain book accounts, for the purpose of tiding the insolvent over the period of four months, so that the preference could not be vacated in the bankruptcy proceedings, it was held that the trustee could recover the value of the accounts.[87] These distinctions may be further illustrated by some quotations from judicial opinions. "A consideration of the provisions of the bankruptcy law as to preferences and conveyances shows that there is a wide difference between the two, notwithstanding they are sometimes spoken of in such a way as to confuse the one with the other. A preference, if it have the effect of enabling one creditor to obtain a greater portion of the estate than others of the same class, is not necessarily fraudulent. Preferences are set aside when made within four months, with a view of obtaining an equal distribution of the estate, and in such cases it is only essential to show a transfer by an insolvent debtor to one who himself or by his agent knew of the intention to create a preference." [88] "In a preferential transfer, the fraud is constructive or technical, consisting in the infraction of that rule of equal distribution among all creditors which it is the policy of the law to enforce when all cannot be fully paid. In a fraudulent transfer the fraud is actual,—the bankrupt has secured an advantage for himself out of what in law should belong to his creditors, and not to him." [89] "A preferential payment may be constructively fraudulent, but it is not in and of itself a fraudulent conveyance. It can only become the latter in the unusual case where actual fraud in addition to the preference is established. Thus, a secret trust in favor of a person making such payments might turn [84] Chapman v. Hunt (D. C.) 248 Fed. 160, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482; Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219.

[85] Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473.

[86] Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473.

[87] Rubenstein v. Lottow, 223 Mass. 227, 111 N. E. 973.

[88] Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[89] In re Maher, 144 Fed. 503, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340. And see Meservey v. Roby, 198 Fed. 844, 117 C. C. A. 486, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Doyle, 199 Fed. 247, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102.

a mere preference into a fraudulent conveyance." [90] The question whether a given transaction constitutes the one or the other is therefore a question of fact, depending, on the one hand, on the fraudulent purpose and intent of the debtor, or, on the other hand, on the creditor's knowledge or reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended. But if, in a case of payments made to certain creditors to the exclusion of others, there is any substantial evidence of an intent to delay or defraud the unpaid creditors, it is properly submitted to the consideration of the jury.[91]

It follows that a payment of money or a transfer of property by an insolvent debtor, for the purpose of discharging or securing a bona fide existing debt, in good faith and without any intent to affect other creditors injuriously beyond what must necessarily result from the corresponding diminution of the debtor's assets, is not in itself a "fraudulent transfer," nor evidence of an intent to delay or defraud creditors, and is not voidable by the trustee in bankruptcy unless violative of those provisions of the statute which relate specifically to preferences.[92] In order to recover money paid or property transferred by way of preference, it is necessary for the trustee to show that "the person receiving it, or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference." [93] Lacking proof of such cause of belief, a transaction such as we have supposed above, is not voidable under those provisions of the law which relate to fraudulent conveyances.[94] It is not enough to show that the debtor intended to give a preference, or that he had a fraudulent design to exclude his other creditors or make them suffer.[95] But conversely, if the debtor intended to give a preference, and the creditor knew it or had reasonable cause to believe it, the transfer is voidable in the character of a preference, without regard to an actual fraudulent intent on either part.[96] Thus, a mortgage given by an insolvent debtor, subsequently and within four months, adjudged a bankrupt, to secure money

[90] Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co., 174 Fed. 518, 98 C. C. A. 300, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345. And see Githens v. Shiffler, 112 Fed. 505, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; In re Doyle, 199 Fed. 247, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; Ex parte Stubbins, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 58; Kingsbury v. First Nat. Bank, 71 Kan. 570, 81 Pac. 187; Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Elsey-Hemphill Carriage Co., 152 Mo. App. 401, 133 S. W. 412. Compare In re Hill, 140 Fed. 984, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499; Allen v. French, 178 Mass. 539, 60 N. E. 125.

[91] Webb's Trustee v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 106 Va. 726, 56 S. E. 581.

[92] Coder v. Arts, 152 Fed. 943, 82 C. C. A. 91, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; Manning v. Evans, 156 Fed. 106, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 217; Congleton v. Schreihofer (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 144; Maffi v. Stephens (Tex. Civ. App.) 93 S. W. 158.

[93] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60b.

[94] Townes v. Alexander, 69 S. C. 23, 48 S. E. 214; Sargent v. Blake, 160 Fed. 57, 87 C. C. A. 213, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

[95] Blakey v. Boonville Nat. Bank, 95 Fed. 267, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[96] Ferguson v. Lederer, Strauss & Co., 128 Iowa, 286, 103 N. W. 794.

borrowed at the time for the purpose of preferring certain of his creditors, is voidable, provided the lender knew or had reason to believe that such was his purpose.[97] But it must be admitted that, although the theoretical distinction is clear, the complex circumstances of many cases often make it difficult to draw the line sharply. Thus, in one case a corporation executed mortgages covering all its property, to certain favored creditors, who were not pressing it for payment nor asking to be secured, intending thereby to force indulgence from its other creditors and further advances from those secured. It was held that the mortgages were intended to "hinder, delay, and defraud" creditors, and were on that ground voidable in bankruptcy.[98]

§ 454. Transfers Void Under State Laws.—By the express provisions of the bankruptcy law all transfers, conveyances, or incumbrances of property made by an insolvent debtor, within four months before his bankruptcy, are voidable at the suit of the trustee in bankruptcy, if held null and void as against creditors by the law of the state, whether or not they would be voidable at common law, and whether or not within the specific denouncements of the bankruptcy act.[99] Thus where the action is to set aside a conveyance alleged to be fraudulent and void under the state law, actual fraud or an actual fraudulent intent is not necessary to be made out unless the state law requires it. If that law avoids, as to creditors, transactions only presumptively fraudulent, or attended by "legal" as distinguished from "actual" fraud, the same will be void at the suit of the trustee in bankruptcy.[100] And in determining the validity of any transfer or incumbrance alleged to be voidable under the law of the state, and assailed distinctly on that ground, the courts of bankruptcy will follow and be governed by the applicable decisions of the courts of the state.[101] In the case of a conflict of laws, [97] In re Pease, 129 Fed. 446, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

[98] In re Steininger Mercantile Co., 107 Fed. 669, 46 C. C. A. 548, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 68.

[99] Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. 351, 21 L. Ed. 542; In re Bement, 172 Fed. 98, 96 C. C. A. 412, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; Wright v. Sampter, 152 Fed. 196, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Broome, 3 Ben. 488, 3 N. B. R. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 1,966; In re J. S. Appel Suit & Cloak Co., 198 Fed. 322, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818; Pew v. Price, 158 S. W. 338, 251 Mo. 614; Goodwin v. Tuttle, 70 Or. 424, 141 Pac. 1120.

[100] In re Geiver, 193 Fed. 128, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413.

[101] Allen v. Massey, 17 Wall. 351, 21 L. Ed. 542; Chicago Bank v. Kansas Bank, 136 U. S. 223, 10 Sup. Ct. 1013, 34 L. Ed. 341; Etheridge v. Sperry, 139 U. S. 266, 11 Sup. Ct. 565, 35 L. Ed. 171; Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. 329, 45 L. Ed. 457; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 25 Sup. Ct. 306, 49 L. Ed. 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 25 Sup. Ct. 567, 49 L. Ed. 956, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; Swager v. Smith (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 762, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660; Howard v. Prince, 1 Hughes, 239, 11 N. B. R. 322, Fed. Cas. No. 6,762; Sieg v. Greene, 225 Fed. 955, 141 C. C. A. 79, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1006, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; Deupree v. Watson, 216 Fed. 483, 132 C. C. A. 543; In re Thorson Bros. (D. C.) 209 Fed. 961;

where the transfer sought to be set aside was a transfer of real property, the law of that state will govern in which the property is situated.[102] In the case of a contract, the decision will be made in accordance with the law of the place of its performance, rather than that of the place where the contract was made.[103] In a case where personal property of the bankrupt, mortgaged in Illinois, was, with the consent of the mortgagees, removed to Tennessee, and thence to Mississippi, and finally to Arkansas, where the mortgagor was adjudged bankrupt, it was held that the rights of the mortgagees and the general creditors must be determined by the laws of Arkansas.[104]

In the case of a chattel mortgage, aside from any question of actual fraud or of an intention to contravene or defeat the bankruptcy law, the validity of such an instrument is to be tested by the law of the state; and if that law prescribes certain conditions as essential to its validity when attacked by other creditors,—such as registration or filing for record, change of possession, accountability for sales out of stock, or the like,—the trustee in bankruptcy may assail and avoid it for lack of compliance with those conditions.[105] So he may take advantage of Stewart v. Asbury, 199 Mo. App. 123, 201 S. W. 949; Woodman v. Butterfield, 116 Me. 241, 101 Atl. 25; Holbrook v. International Trust Co., 220 Mass. 150, 107 N. E. 665; Potter v. American Printing & Lithographing Co., 182 Iowa, 458, 165 N. W. 1044.

[102] Hall v. Glenn (D. C.) 247 Fed. 997, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54.

[103] Gielow v. Eastern Shore Shipbuilding Corp. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 845.

[104] In re Davies (D. C.) 256 Fed. 52, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458.

[105] Holt v. Crucible Steel Co., 224 U. S. 262, 32 Sup. Ct. 414, 56 L. Ed. 756, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; Angle v. Bankers' Surety Co., 244 Fed. 401, 157 C. C. A. 27, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; Scandinavian-American Bank v. Sabin, 227 Fed. 579, 142 C. C. A. 211, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Kemper, 220 Fed. 847, 136 C. C. A. 593, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; Millikin v. Second Nat. Bank, 206 Fed. 14, 124 C. C. A. 148, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; Smith v. Carukin, 259 Fed. 51, 170 C. C. A. 51, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; Calkins v. Lichtig, 251 Fed. 844, 164 C. C. A. 60, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Palmer (D. C.) 218 Fed. 74, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; In re Cooper's Estate (D. C.) 226 Fed. 317, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Roberts (D. C.) 227 Fed. 177, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 137; In re Schilling (D. C.) 251 Fed. 972, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698; Rader v. Star Mill & Elevator Co., 258 Fed. 599, 169 C. C. A. 541, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; In re Steiner (D. C.) 249 Fed. 880; In re Perpall (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 858, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; In re Roseboom (D. C.) 253 Fed. 136, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Stewart v. Asbury, 199 Mo. App. 123, 201 S. W. 949; Goldberg v. Brule Timber Co., 140 Minn. 335, 168 N. W. 22; Davis v. Harlow, 130 Md. 165, 100 Atl. 102; In re Noethen, 195 Fed. 573, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 910; In re Jules & Frederic Co., 193 Fed. 533, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; Alter v. Clark, 193 Fed. 153; In re Geiver, 193 Fed. 128, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413; In re Jackson Brick & Tile Co., 189 Fed. 636, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 915; Mishawaka Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Teasdale, 145 Wis. 73, 129 N. W. 671; Low v. Taylor, 73 N. J. Eq. 406, 68 Atl. 128; In re Walden Bros. Clothing Co., 199 Fed. 315, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; L. A. Becker Co. v. Gill (C. C. A.) 206 Fed. 36, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429; In re United States Lumber Co., 206 Fed. 236, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682. And see supra, § 367. Compare Johnstone v. Babb, 240 Fed. 668, 153 C. C. A. 466, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Mosher (D. C.) 224 Fed. 739, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; Davis v. Hanover Savings Fund Society, 210 Fed. 768, 127 C. C. A. 318, 31 Am. Baukr. Rep. 368.

A mortgage covering both real and pera state law which avoids, as to creditors, a mortgage made by any corporation while insolvent or when its insolvency is imminent,[106] or made without such authorization or consent on the part of the stockholders as is required by the state law,[107] or, following the course of judicial decisions in the state, he may assail the validity of a chattel mortgage where the principal part of the property covered consists of articles perishable in their nature or which would ordinarily be consumed in the use before a sale on foreclosure could be made.[108] But where the failure to file or record a chattel mortgage in accordance with the laws of the state is cured by the act of the mortgagee in taking actual possession of the mortgaged property before the bankruptcy proceedings, the lien of the mortgage will be good as against the trustee in bankruptcy, unless he can find some other ground to attack it than the mere want of record;[109] and if the mortgage was valid between the parties and given in good faith more than four months prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, the act of the mortgagee in taking possession within that period is not a voidable transfer.[110]

The rule is substantially the same as to contracts of conditional sale. The claim of the vendor will not prevail against the trustee in bankruptcy of the purchaser if the contract was not acknowledged, filed, recorded, etc., as required by the laws of the state.[111] And a contract for sonal property and duly recorded as a real-estate mortgage, is nevertheless void as against the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy unless also recorded as a chattel mortgage. Pacific State Bank v. Coats, 205 Fed. 618, 123 C. C. A. 634, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 846, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 655.

106 McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702; Empire State Trust Co. v. Trustees of Wm. F. Fisher & Co., 67 N. J. Eq. 602, 60 Atl. 940, 3 Ann. Cas. 393.

107 In re Progressive Wall Paper Corp. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 171, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207.

108 Swager v. Smith, 194 Fed. 762, 114 C. C. A. 482, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660.

109 Coggan v. Ward, 215 Mass. 13, 102 N. E. 336; First Nat. Bank v. Wegener, 94 Or. 318, 181 Pac. 990, 186 Pac. 41; Jones v. Bank of Excelsior Springs, 201 Mo. App. 545, 213 S. W. 892. Compare Schaupp v. Miller (D. C.) 206 Fed. 575, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699.

110 Kettenbach v. Walker, 32 Idaho, 544, 186 Pac. 912.

111 L. A. Becker Co. v. Gill, 206 Fed. 36, 124 C. C. A. 170, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429; Gielow v. Eastern Shore Shipbuilding Corp. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 845; In re Bennett (D. C.) 264 Fed. 533, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565; In re A. E. Savage Baking Co. (D. C.) 259 Fed. 976, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721; In re Mutual Motors Co. (D. C.) 260 Fed. 341, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Capital City Cap Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 664, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; In re Kruse (D. C.) 234 Fed. 470, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; Columbus Merchandise Co. v. Kline (D. C.) 248 Fed. 296; In re M. L. B. Sturkey Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 251, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Pacific Electric & Automobile Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 220, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 222; In re Vandewater & Co. (D. C.) 219 Fed. 627, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; In re Johnson (D. C.) 215 Fed. 666, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104; In re O'Brien (D. C.) 215 Fed. 129, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 347; In re Johnson (D. C.) 212 Fed. 311, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579; In re United States Lumber Co. (D. C.) 263 Fed. 236, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682. Compare Baker Ice Machine Co. v. Bailey, 209 Fed. 603, 126 C. C. A. 425, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593; Delaval Separator Co. v. Jones, 117 Me. 95, 102 Atl. 968.

the absolute sale of goods to the bankrupt, but with a reservation of a lien for the purchase price, must be recorded, if that is required by the law of the state, in order to be valid against the trustee in bankruptcy.[112] So, where a contract for the sale of fertilizers on credit to the bankrupt provided that the proceeds of sales made by him should be held for the seller to be applied on the price, it was held that such debts constituted personal property and required the contract to be recorded, under the local law, in default of which the seller was not entitled to a lien as against the trustee in bankruptcy.[113] But a mining lease reserving a lien for royalties is not a conveyance to secure a debt, such as must be recorded in Alabama, but is valid and enforceable, on the bankruptcy of the lessee, for past-due royalties.[114] So, also, the trustee in bankruptcy, as the representative of creditors, may resist adverse claims to property or liens thereon on the ground of failure of compliance with a state statute providing that every sale of goods in the possession of the vendor, not accompanied by immediate delivery and change of possession, shall be presumed fraudulent as to creditors,[115] or one regulating sales in bulk,[116] or a state law or course of judicial decisions invalidating an assignment of a chose in action unless there is delivery of the property or the evidence of it and notice given to the person against whom it is available.[117] In South Carolina, an assignment of a bond for title, and the recording of such an instrument, without its being proved in the manner required by law, by one who subsequently became bankrupt, is a nullity.[118] And under the law of Mississippi, requiring transfers between husband and wife to be in writing and recorded, in order to be good as against third persons, the trustee in bankruptcy of a married woman may recover a stock of goods verbally transferred.[119] So also, a trustee in bankruptcy may defeat an adverse [112] Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Machine Co. v. Croll, 231 Fed. 679, 145 C. C. A. 565, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; In re Stoughton Wagon Co., 231 Fed. 676, 145 C. C. A. 562, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592; In re American Steel Supply Syndicate (D. C.) 256 Fed. 876, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271.

[113] Townsend v. Ashepoo Fertilizer Co., 212 Fed. 97, 128 C. C. A. 613, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

[114] In re Gallagher Coal Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 183, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766.

[115] Skillen v. Endelman, 39 Misc. Rep. 261, 79 N. Y. Supp. 413; In re Waite-Robbins Motor Co. (D. C.) 192 Fed. 47, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; In re Colonial Mill & Lumber Co. (D. C.) 215 Fed. 640. See Williamson v. Richardson, 205 Fed. 245, 123 C. C. A. 427, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. As to the law of Pennsylvania applicable to such sales, see In re Komara, 251 Fed. 47, 163 C. C. A. 297, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

[116] In re Schoenfield (D. C.) 190 Fed. 53, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64. And see, supra, § 452.

[117] In re Hawley Down Draft Furnace Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 471, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584. See In re Rosenthal (D. C.) 238 Fed. 597, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; Ward v. American Agricultural Chemical Co., 232 Fed. 119, 146 C. C. A. 311, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321.

[118] In re Rosenthal (D. C.) 238 Fed. 597, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30.

[119] McCabe v. Guido, 116 Miss. 858, 77 South. 801.

claim to property by relying upon a state statute prohibiting any corporation, while incurring debts and liabilities, from giving to a stockholder and director for the benefit of another stockholder or director any part of its capital.[120] And a transfer or mortgage of property, which is invalid under the law of the state because made to one having knowledge or reasonable cause to suspect that it was made with the intention of hindering or defrauding creditors, will be voidable by the trustee in bankruptcy.[121] But the case must be brought within the very terms of the statute. Thus, where it provides that certain transfers of property shall be declared void "at the suit of any creditor," it cannot be invoked in a case where bankruptcy proceedings were instituted before any such suit was commenced.[122] And though the rights of a trustee in bankruptcy and those of an assignee in insolvency under the state statute are defined in similar terms, yet it does not follow that a state statute making a certain transfer void as against an assignee eo nomine will also make it void as against a trustee in bankruptcy.[123] If the state statute requires the recording of conveyances, chattel mortgages, conditional sales, etc., in order to make them valid as against subsequent purchasers and incumbrancers in good faith without notice, but not as against general creditors, a transfer which is good between the parties though not recorded is not avoidable by the trustee in bankruptcy, since he does not come within either of those descriptions.[124] But if the statute makes an unrecorded transfer or contract voidable at the instance of "creditors," then it may be avoided by the trustee in bankruptcy, not only because he represents the creditors, but because, since the 1910 amendment to the Bankruptcy Act, he has the status of a creditor armed with a lien.[125]

[120] Hazard v. Wight, 201 N. Y. 399, 94 N. E. 855.

[121] In re Walden Bros. Clothing Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 315, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[122] In re Chadwick (D. C.) 140 Fed. 674, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. And see Mayhew v. Todisman, 246 Mo. 288, 151 S. W. 436.

[123] In re Loveland, 155 Fed. 838, 84 C. C. A. 72, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

[124] Carey v. Donohue, 240 U. S. 430, 36 Sup. Ct. 386, 60 L. Ed. 726, L. R. A. 1917A, 295, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; Martin v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 228 Fed. 651, 143 C. C. A. 173, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; In re I. S. Remson Mfg. Co., 232 Fed. 594, 146 C. C. A. 552, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799; In re Virgin (D. C.) 224 Fed. 128, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494; Robertson v. Schlotzhauer, 243 Fed. 324, 156 C. C. A. 104, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Dagwell (D. C.) 263 Fed. 406, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358; Johnson v. Barrett (D. C.) 237 Fed. 112, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464; In re Bolstad (D. C.) 224 Fed. 283, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; Toof v. City Nat. Bank, 206 Fed. 250, 124 C. C. A. 118, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re Mosher (D. C.) 224 Fed. 739, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[125] National Bank of Bakersfield v. Moore, 247 Fed. 913, 160 C. C. A. 103, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; Hawkins v. Dannenberg Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 752, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; In re Marriner (D. C.) 220 Fed. 542, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Pittsburgh-Big Muddy Coal Co., 215 Fed. 703, 132 C. C. A. 81. See In re Wall (D. C.) 207 Fed. 994, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 901; In re White's Express Co., 215 Fed. 894, 132 C. C. A. 234, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

If it is voidable only at the instance of a creditor who has taken some positive step, such as attaching the property or otherwise fixing a lien upon it, then it may be avoided by the trustee only in case a superior position has been gained by some creditor whom he represents or whose place he is entitled to take, before the recording.[126] Thus, if the law of the state is such that a chattel mortgage is voidable only in favor of a creditor who fixes a lien on the property before the instrument is recorded, and if it is in fact recorded before the bankruptcy proceedings and before any creditor has acquired superior rights, though within the four months' period, it is valid as against the trustee, because the latter acquires his lien or status as a lien creditor only upon and by the bankruptcy proceedings.[127] It is true, however, that a mortgage given by a bankrupt, though for a valid consideration and valid as between the parties, if withheld from record in pursuance of an agreement between them, so as not to impair the mortgagor's credit, may be set aside at the suit of his trustee as a fraudulent transaction.[128] But the mere failure to record the instrument is not sufficient evidence of an agreement between the bankrupt and the mortgagee to withhold it from record for improper purposes.[129] Finally, it should be remembered that although an instrument may escape the charge of being a fraudulent transfer, the circumstances may still be such as to render it voidable as a preference.[130]

§ 455. Transfers Fraudulent as to Partnership or Individual Creditors.—The trustee of a bankrupt partnership can sue to set aside fraudulent transfers of its property or assets on the same grounds and under the same conditions as in the case of an individual bankruptcy.[131] But since the bankruptcy of a firm does not necessarily involve that of its members, the distinction must be carefully drawn between transfers or conveyances by the firm and such as are made by the partners individually. Thus, the validity of a mortgage given by the partnership as such is not affected by bankruptcy proceedings within four months thereafter against one of the partners alone.[132] It is a fundamental rule of [126] Bradley v. Robie (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 884, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; In re Brown (D. C.) 228 Fed. 533, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826; In re Bradley (D. C.) 263 Fed. 446, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; American Laundry Machinery Co. v. Everybody's Laundry, 185 Iowa, 760, 171 N. W. 161.

[127] Martin v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 245 U. S. 513, 38 Sup. Ct. 176, 62 L. Ed. 441, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765.

[128] National Bank of Athens v. Shackelford, 208 Fed. 677, 125 C. C. A. 575, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464.

[129] In re Anderson (D. C.) 252 Fed. 272, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731.

[130] Bunch v. Maloney, 233 Fed. 967, 147 C. C. A. 641, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[131] Barker v. Franklin, 37 Misc. Rep. 292, 75 N. Y. Supp. 305; Shainwald v. Lewis (D. C.) 6 Sawy. 556, 6 Fed. 753; Hull v. Hudson, 9 Del. Ch. 205, 80 Atl. 674.

[132] McNair v. McIntyre, 113 Fed. 113, 51 C. C. A. 89, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

equity as well as of bankruptcy that partnership assets are for partnership creditors and individual assets for individual creditors,[133] and any attempt to appropriate assets of the one class to the satisfaction of creditors of the other class is fraudulent in law. Hence where an insolvent partnership, within four months prior to its bankruptcy, incumbers its property to secure the individual debt of one partner, or pays such debt with firm assets, the transfer is voidable by the trustee,[134] unless in the case where all who were creditors of the firm at the time consented to the transaction or were paid off before the bankruptcy.[135] Again, the dissolution of a partnership while insolvent, and the division of the firm property among the partners, to be held as their individual property, thus giving individual creditors a more advantageous position than firm creditors, the latter being justly and equitably entitled to priority of payment from such property, is contrary to the whole theory of the bankruptcy law; and where such dissolution takes place within four months before the firm is adjudged bankrupt, it will be treated as a void transfer, and the property in the hands of both partners will be treated as firm property, without regard to any actual fraudulent intention on their part.[136] More especially, a pretended dissolution of a partnership, with a fraudulent intention to place the continuing partner in such a position that he could claim individual exemptions in bankruptcy out of the firm's assets is ineffectual as against partnership creditors.[137] Different problems arise where one of the partners of an insolvent firm sells and transfers his entire interest in the firm and its business to his co-partner, the latter agreeing to assume the firm debts. Such a transfer is not necessarily fraudulent and voidable under the bankruptcy law,[138] but it is so if made in contemplation of the bankruptcy of the continuing partner and with no bona fide expectation of continuing the business,[139] or if the sale was fictitious, the money paid being covertly returned to the buyer and afterwards used in the firm's business.[140] And a chattel mortgage taken by the retiring partner and covering all the goods in stock and to be acquired, and which is by agreement kept from the record, is fraudulent and void as to subsequent creditors.[141] So also,

[133] Supra, § 123.

[134] In re W. J. Floyd & Co., 156 Fed. 206, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438. But see Crawford v. Sternberg, 220 Fed. 73, 135 C. C. A. 641, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

[135] Merchants' Bank v. Thomas, 121 Fed. 306, 57 C. C. A. 374, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 84 Miss. 54, 36 South. 65.

[136] In re Head, 114 Fed. 489, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556; In re Terens, 175 Fed. 495, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680. See Hodgskin v. Heim, 33 Misc. Rep. 548, 67 N. Y. Supp. 876.

[137] In re Abrams, 193 Fed. 271, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552.

[138] In re Rudnick, 102 Fed. 750, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[139] In re Byrne, 1 N. B. R. 464, Fed. Cas. No. 2,270.

[140] Burrill v. Lawry, 2 Hask. 228, 18 N. B. R. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 2,199.

[141] In re Stephens, 3 Biss. 187, 6 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 13,365.

where a firm which became bankrupt paid a substantial sum of money to one of the partners in return for his investment in the business, after he saw that it was not going to be profitable, and when the partners knew that the financial condition of the firm was precarious, it was held that this constituted a withdrawal of the partner's interest before the firm's debts were paid, and he was therefore bound to repay the amount to the firm's trustee in bankruptcy.[142]

§ 456. Property or Rights Transferred.—Under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act relating to fraudulent transfers of "property," that term is taken in a very wide sense. It may include money, if a payment is made with a purpose to benefit one creditor at the expense of others or to defeat the operation of the bankruptcy law.[143] It may include a growing crop on land owned or rented by the debtor,[144] or a piece of jewelry given to a friend.[145] It may include the furniture and other belongings of the debtor's own house, when given to his wife without consideration and while he is insolvent.[146] It may also include a lease or leasehold interest, if it has value,[147] or a claim for money or other chose in action,[148] or the salary of a city official, when assigned by him in fraud of his creditors,[149] or a policy of life insurance having a cash surrender value,[150] or a paid-up endowment life policy taken out by the bankrupt, the insured, and transferred to his wife.[151] But since creditors can be defrauded only by the transfer of something to which they might have had recourse for the satisfaction of their claims, the statute does not apply to a transfer of real property in which the bankrupt had no beneficial interest though he held the legal title, such title being held merely in trust for his wife.[152] And the trustee in bankruptcy cannot maintain an action to recover property which never stood in the bankrupt's name, although he paid the price of it, when it was transferred directly from the seller to a third person, notwithstanding this course was taken in pursuance of a purpose, on the part of the bankrupt and the person taking the title, to hinder and defraud creditors, since the property cannot be said to have

[142] In re Rosenthal (D. C.) 200 Fed. 190, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[143] Smith v. Powers (D. C.) 255 Fed. 582, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303; Wartell v. Moore (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 762, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

[144] Crawford v. Broussard, 260 Fed. 122, 171 C. C. A. 158, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187.

[145] Pollock v. Simon (D. C.) 205 Fed. 1005, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

[146] In re Pierce, 7 Biss. 426, 15 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 11,139.

[147] Jones v. Slauson, 33 Fed. 632; Lyon v. Moore, 259 Ill. 23, 102 N. E. 179.

[148] O'Sullivan's Trustee v. Douglass, 98 S. W. 990, 30 Ky. Law Rep. 366. See Williamson v. Colcord, 1 Hask. 620, 13 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 17,752.

[149] O'Sullivan's Trustee v. Douglass, 98 S. W. 990, 30 Ky. Law Rep. 366.

[150] Kirkpatrick v. Johnson, 197 Fed. 235, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

[151] Bailey v. Wood, 202 Mass. 549, 89 N. E. 147, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 722.

[152] Phillips v. Kleinman, 232 Pa. St. 571, 81 Atl. 648.

been transferred by the bankrupt.[153] So also with respect to exempt property. Since this could not in any event be reached by creditors, they are not defrauded by its transfer. And any mortgage or conveyance of a homestead or other exempt property which would be good against the debtor under the state law will also be good against his trustee in bankruptcy.[154] And in some of the federal courts (following the local law and decisions) it is held that the use of money or of the proceeds of non-exempt property by an insolvent debtor to purchase a homestead, or to discharge a lien thereon, is not fraudulent and does not invalidate his claim to the homestead exemption, or give his trustee in bankruptcy the right to subject the homestead to a lien for the amount so diverted from his creditors.[155]

§ 457. Time of Conveyance or Transfer.—The sixty-seventh section of the bankruptcy act gives to a trustee in bankruptcy the right to avoid any conveyance, transfer, assignment, or incumbrance of the bankrupt's property which would be fraudulent and voidable as to his creditors under the principles of the common law, or which would be held null and void as to such creditors under the laws of the state where the property is situated, but expressly limits this right to transactions occurring within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Therefore if no petition in bankruptcy is filed by or against the debtor until more than four months have elapsed after a sale or other transfer of property by him, or the giving of a mortgage thereon, or a gift or a preferential payment or an assignment for creditors, the transaction will remain valid so far as the bankruptcy law is concerned, and cannot be impeached by a trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed.[156] But the transfer must have been made, or the lien given, more than four months before the bankruptcy. If made or given within that period, it will not be saved by the fact that it merely carried into effect an agreement entered into [153] London v. Epstein, 138 App. Div. 513, 123 N. Y. Supp. 399.

[154] In re National Grocer Co., 181 Fed. 33, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; Cowan v. Burchfield, 180 Fed. 614, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; Hackney v. First Nat. Bank, 68 Neb. 588, 94 N. W. 805, 98 N. W. 412. See Bohannon v. Clark, 78 S. W. 479, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 1710.

[155] In re Wilson, 123 Fed. 20, 59 C. C. A. 100, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615, 74 Pac. 303. Contra, In re Boston, 98 Fed. 587, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388.

[156] Sturdivant Bank v. Schade (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 188, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Shinn, 185 Fed. 990, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 833; Little v. Holley-Brooks Hardware Co., 133 Fed. 874, 67 C. C. A. 46, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 422; In re Kindt, 101 Fed. 107, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148; Joseph v. Raff, 176 N. Y. 611, 68 N. E. 1118; Murphy v. W. T. Murphy & Co., 126 Iowa, 57, 101 N. W. 486; McIntire v. Jennings, 38 Wash. 119, 80 Pac. 278; Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; Watson v. Taylor, 21 Wall. 378, 22 L. Ed. 576; In re Braus, 248 Fed. 55, 160 C. C. A. 195, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668; Johnson v. Wilson (D. C.) 217 Fed. 99, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; First Nat. Bank v. Exchange Nat. Bank, 179 App. Div. 22, 153 N. Y. Supp. 818, 164 N. Y. Supp. 1092. See In re Taylor, 95 Fed. 956; Merrill v. Hussey, 101 Me. 439, 64 Atl. 819.

at an earlier date.[157] Again, it is the date when the transfer or incumbrance is executed, not the date when it is recorded, which fixes the question of its validity in bankruptcy.[158] This may seem inequitable as to creditors, who may have no means of discovering an unrecorded mortgage or the like. But it is a necessary deduction from the language of the statute, which takes the time of recording an instrument as the starting point for the period of limitations in two particular cases, namely, with reference to the time when a petition must be filed after the commission of an act of bankruptcy and with reference to the recovery of preferences, but makes no mention whatever of such an exception to the period of limitation prescribed by the section relating to fraudulent conveyances. Under former bankruptcy laws, it was held that the trustee might recover property conveyed away by the bankrupt with intent to defraud his creditors, though the conveyance was made before the passage of the bankruptcy act.[159] But in view of the fact that the present statute speaks of conveyances, etc., made "subsequent to the passage of this act," the contrary rule must now be applied.[160] Although the statute makes no specific provision covering the case of a sale or transfer of property by the bankrupt after the filing of the petition against him, yet such an attempt to control the disposition of his assets is of course a fraud upon the law itself, and is clearly voidable by the trustee in bankruptcy, at least when made to a party chargeable with knowledge of the facts.[161]

But another part of the bankruptcy act provides that "the trustee may avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor of such bankrupt might have avoided, and may recover the property so transferred, or its value, from the person to whom it was transferred, [157] Vitzthum v. Large, 162 Fed. 685, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666. But compare Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 171 Fed. 940, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 803. And see Belding-Hall Mfg. Co. v. Mercer & Ferdon Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 175 Fed. 335, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595, holding that property delivered by a bankrupt in good faith within four months prior to the bankruptcy on a previous contract of sale does not vest in the trustee, even though the transfer may be voidable as a preference.

[158] Bonner v. First Nat. Bank, 248 Fed. 692, 160 C. C. A. 592, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60; Davis v. Hanover Savings Fund Society, 210 Fed. 768, 127 C. C. A. 318, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368; Getman v. Lippert, 171 App. Div. 536, 157 N. Y. Supp. 867; Underleak v. Scott, 117 Minn. 136, 134 N. W. 731; Dean v. Plane, 96 Ill. App. 428, affirmed, 195 Ill. 495, 63 N. E. 274. Contra, Cartwright v. West, 185 Ala. 41, 64 South. 293; Sieg v. Greene, 225 Fed. 955, 141 C. C. A. 79, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1006, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; In re Tysor-Cheatham Mercantile Co. (D. C.) 178 Fed. 733, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434; Arnold v. Eastin's Trustee, 116 Ky. 686, 76 S. W. 855, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 895.

[159] Bradshaw v. Klein, 2 Biss. 20, 1 N. B. R. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 1,790; Carr v. Hilton, 1 Curt. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 2,436; In re Hollenshade, 2 Bond, 210, 2 N. B. R. 651, Fed. Cas. No. 6,610; In re Rosenfield, 1 N. B. R. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 12,058; Storm v. Waddell, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 494.

[160] In re Brown, 91 Fed. 358; Gardner v. Haines, 19 S. D. 514, 104 N. W. 244. Compare Shelley v. Nolen, 39 Tex. Civ. App. 307, 88 S. W. 524.

[161] In re Denson, 195 Fed. 854, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158.

unless he was a bona fide holder for value prior to the date of the adjudication." [162] It is very difficult to reconcile this broad and sweeping declaration with the more precise details concerning fraudulent conveyances given in the sixty-seventh section of the act. As stated in an earlier part of this chapter,[163] a reasonable construction of the act as a whole would lead to the conclusion that this declaration was not meant to add anything to the description of conveyances and incumbrances which should be voidable in bankruptcy, but should be taken merely as an explicit affirmation of the trustee's right of action in such cases. But it omits any mention of a limitation of time within which the transfer of property must have been made, and the courts have unanimously decided that, if a trustee in bankruptcy bases his suit distinctly on this provision of the statute,—that is, on his statutory right to avoid any transfer of property which any creditor of the bankrupt might have avoided,—then it is immaterial whether the transfer or conveyance which he attacks was made more or less than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[164] But the opinion has been advanced that, in this case, a recovery by the trustee will inure to the benefit of only those creditors whose claims antedated the conveyance or transfer set aside.[165]

§ 458. Insolvency of Debtor.—As before stated, subdivision "e" of the sixty-seventh section of the bankruptcy act is divisible into two parts, the former relating to conveyances or incumbrances of property fraudulent as against creditors under the principles of the common law, and the latter to transfers of property held null and void as against creditors by the law of the state. The latter provision requires that the transfer shall have been made by the bankrupt "while insolvent;" the former contains no such restriction. Yet an intent to "hinder, delay, or defraud" creditors in the act of conveying or incumbering property is seldom if ever compatible with a condition of solvency. Hence the re-

[162] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70e.

[163] Supra, § 445.

[164] Stellwagen v. Clum, 245 U. S. 605, 38 Sup. Ct. 215, 62 L. Ed. 507, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Cooper Grocery Co. v. Penland, 247 Fed. 480, 159 C. C. A. 534, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 589; Scales v. Holje, 41 Cal. App. 733, 183 Pac. 308; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420; Thomas v. Fletcher, 153 Fed. 226, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Toothaker Bros., 128 Fed. 187, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99; In re Schenck, 116 Fed. 554, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; Cartwright v. West, 155 Ala. 619, 47 South. 93; Commercial State Bank & Trust Co. v. Bates, 96 Miss. 386, 51 South. 599; Joseph v. Raff, 176 N. Y. 611, 68 N. E. 1118; Treseder v. Burgor, 130 Wis. 201 109 N. W. 957; Friedman v. Verschofsky, 105 Ill. App. 414; Sharp v. Fitzhugh, 75 Ark. 562, 88 S. W. 929; Boyd v. Arnold, 103 Ark. 105, 146 S. W. 118; Underleak v. Scott, 117 Minn. 136, 134 N. W. 731; Cookingham v. Ferguson, 8 Blatchf. 488, 4 N. B. R. 635, Fed. Cas. No. 3,182; Cady v. Whaling, 7 Biss. 430, Fed. Cas. No. 2,285; In re Herpich, 7 Biss. 387, 15 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 6,418; Knowlton v. Moseley, 105 Mass. 136. Compare Smith v. Seibel (D. C.) 258 Fed. 454, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

[165] American Trust & Savings Bank v. Duncan, 254 Fed. 780, 166 C. C. A. 226, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 7.

quirement of insolvency, expressly stated in the latter part of the subdivision, may fairly be read into the former part by implication. And it follows as a general rule that a conveyance or incumbrance of property made at a time when the debtor was solvent is not voidable at the suit of his trustee, although bankruptcy follows within four months.[166] And if the trustee, in such an action, does not allege insolvency at the date of the transfer or offer evidence tending to show that fact, the court will presume that the bankrupt was solvent at that time.[167] But the opinion has sometimes been advanced that a transfer of property is voidable by the trustee if the remaining assets of the debtor would be insufficient to pay his debts, or in other words that, although he may have been solvent before making the particular transfer of property which is in question, yet if that transfer left him insolvent, the statute is satisfied.[168] And this doctrine derives some support from the declaration of the bankruptcy act that a person shall be deemed insolvent when his property, exclusive of that conveyed in fraud of creditors, is insufficient in amount, at a fair valuation, to pay his debts.[169] But it is thought that this general definition cannot prevail over the explicit provision of the statute that a fraudulent conveyance shall be void if made by the bankrupt "while insolvent." This obviously means that he must be insolvent before and at the moment of making the transfer. If he is solvent then, it can scarcely be said that the transfer was made "while" insolvent, merely because its effect is to leave him with insufficient assets. And this latter view is supported by cases of respectable authority.[170] But when the point at which insolvency becomes material has been determined, the condition itself is to be ascertained by applying the statutory definition, taking into account all the primary and contingent indebtedness of the bankrupt and all his property, the latter at a fair valuation.[171]

But under section 70e of the Bankruptcy Act, the trustee may avoid [166] Adams v. Collier, 122 U. S. 382, 7 Sup. Ct. 1208, 30 L. Ed. 1207; Butcher v. Cantor, 185 Fed. 945, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Rogers, 53 Fed. 776, 3 C. C. A. 666; Richardson v. Winnissimmet Nat. Bank, 189 Mass. 25, 75 N. E. 97; Mercer's Trustee v. Mercer, 74 S. W. 285, 24 Ky. Law Rep. 2469; Dutton v. Cloar, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 65 S. W. 70; Schilling v. Curran, 30 Mont. 370, 76 Pac. 998; In re Cornwall, 9 Blatchf. 114, 6 N. B. R. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 3,250; Sedgwick v. Wormser, 7 N. B. R. 186, Fed. Cas. No. 12,626; Sedgwick v. Lynch, 5 Ben. 489, 8 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 12,615; In re Sola e Hijo (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 822, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; In re Stringer, 253 Fed. 352, 165 C. C. A. 134, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

[167] Schilling v. Curran, 30 Mont. 370, 76 Pac. 998.

[168] National Bank & Loan Co. v. Spencer, 53 App. Div. 547, 65 N. Y. Supp. 1001; Hamlin v. Arbolino, 72 Misc. Rep. 190, 131 N. Y. Supp. 45. See Weld v. McKay, 218 Fed. 807, 134 C. C. A. 495, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

[169] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 15.

[170] Upson v. Mt. Morris Bank, 103 App. Div. 367, 92 N. Y. Supp. 1101; Schilling v. Curran, 30 Mont. 370, 76 Pac. 998; Owens v. Daniel, 230 Fed. 101, 144 C. C. A. 399, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433.

[171] Rutland County Nat. Bank v. Graves, 156 Fed. 168, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep.

any transfer by the bankrupt which any creditor of the latter might have avoided under the laws of the state, without regard to the bankrupt's condition of solvency or insolvency at the date of the transfer.[172]

§ 459. Intention of Debtor.—In the case of conveyances held null and void as to creditors under the laws of the particular state, it is probably not necessary to show an actual fraudulent purpose on the part of the debtor, in order to avoid them in bankruptcy, since these laws usually apply to cases of constructive, technical, or presumed fraud.[173] But where an action to avoid a conveyance or incumbrance is based on the provision of the bankruptcy law which makes such transfers or liens voidable when made within four months prior to bankruptcy and "with the intent and purpose to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or any of them," an actual fraudulent purpose on the part of the debtor is an essential element of the trustee's right of action, and unless it is affirmatively established the transaction must stand good.[174] It is not enough to show that the necessary consequence of the transfer or incumbrance is to hinder creditors in enforcing their claims, or that it defrauds them in the sense of leaving the debtor insolvent or even penniless, or that the property so disposed of was more in value than the debtor could rightfully withdraw from the reach of his creditors.[175] The statute cannot be read as denouncing any transfer which produces a given result, irrespective of the motive. On the contrary it is aimed only at such conveyances as would be fraudulent and voidable at common law or under the statute of Elizabeth, and under the bankruptcy act, as in those cases, an actual fraudulent intent on the part of the debtor is essential.[176] Thus, a sale, payment, or mortgage made in 446; Bailey v. Wood, 211 Mass. 37, 97 N. E. 902, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 950; Gill v. Ely-Norris Safe Co., 170 Mo. App. 478, 156 S. W. 811.

[172] Baldwin v. Kingston (D. C.) 247 Fed. 163, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; Holbrook v. International Trust Co., 220 Mass. 150, 107 N. E. 665; Buttz v. James, 33 N. D. 162, 156 N. W. 547.

[173] Lavender v. Bowen (Iowa) 101 N. W. 760.

[174] Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co., 174 Fed. 518, 98 C. C. A. 300, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; Coder v. Arts, 152 Fed. 943, 82 C. C. A. 91, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; In re Kayserm, 177 Fed. 383, 100 C. C. A. 615, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174; Rutland County Nat. Bank v. Graves, 156 Fed. 168, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; In re Burnstine, 131 Fed. 828, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11, 104 Am. St. Rep. 899 (affirmed, 196 U. S. 516, 25 Sup. Ct. 306, 49 L. Ed. 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437); Conley v. Nelin (Tex. Civ. App.) 128 S. W. 424; Barnard v. Davis, 54 Ala. 565; Vowinkel v. Moser, 213 Pa. St. 587, 63 Atl. 130. But if a conveyance was made with an intent on the part of the bankrupt to defraud his creditors, it is voidable, though free from any moral turpitude. Reed v. Chase (Mass.) 130 N. E. 257.

[175] Adams v. Collier, 122 U. S. 382, 7 Sup. Ct. 1208, 30 L. Ed. 1207. See Bryant v. Wolf, 94 Misc. Rep. 683, 158 N. Y. Supp. 678.

[176] Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Sargent v. Blake, 160 Fed. 57, 87 C. C. A. 213, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1040, 15 Ann. Cas. 58, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; In re Braus, 248 Fed. 55, 160 C. C. A. 195, 40 Am.

good faith and for the honest purpose of discharging a debt, and in the expectation that by so doing the person could continue in business, cannot be set aside as a fraudulent transfer, whatever may be the effect on the other creditors,[177] nor would it be voidable where a fair and honest sale of property was made with the particular view of keeping out of bankruptcy.[178] Such a transaction might indeed be voidable as a preference, but that would be under a different provision of the bankruptcy act and would require, on the part of the creditor receiving it, knowledge or reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended. On similar principles, though a man is insolvent, he may give to his wife a reasonable and suitable amount of money for current household expenses,[179] and a transfer of exempt property is not voidable by the trustee.[180] But a conveyance of property by a debtor for the purpose of compelling a creditor to compromise, by the hindrance and delay thereby occasioned, is voidable as to all creditors.[181]

§ 460. Same; Intention as to Future Creditors.—A conveyance or transfer by a person who afterwards becomes bankrupt may be avoided by the trustee as a fraud upon creditors whose claims accrued after the conveyance or transfer, that is, if it was made by the bankrupt with the expectation of incurring future debts and with a distinct purpose to hinder or defraud those who should subsequently become his creditors.[182] But this cannot be the case with regard to debts which the bankrupt then did not expect to incur or creditors whose existence he then had no reason to anticipate.[183] Questions of this kind, however, most frequently arise where a person puts his property in the name of his wife or children, and afterwards incurs debts and becomes bankrupt.

Bankr. Rep. 668; Johnson v. Barrett (D. C.) 237 Fed. 112, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464; Boise v. Talcott (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 61, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Jackson v. Jetter, 160 Iowa, 571, 142 N. W. 431; Bryant v. Wolf, 94 Misc. Rep. 683, 158 N. Y. Supp. 678; Kentucky Bank & Trust Co. v. Pritchett, 44 Okl. 87, 143 Pac. 338. The law implies a fraudulent intent from a debtor's conveyance with a secret trust reserved for his benefit. Devorkin v. Security Bank & Trust Co., 243 Fed. 171, 156 C. C. A. 37, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738. A mortgage given by a bankrupt to secure advances to be made to a corporation of which he was an officer and stockholder, and on whose paper he was indorser, to be used in carrying out contracts in which he was vitally interested, is not necessarily fraudulent nor preferential. Angle v. Bankers' Surety Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 289, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 71; In re Mosher (D. C.) 224 Fed. 739, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[177] Tiffany v. Lucas, 15 Wall. 410, 21 L. Ed. 198. And see Richardson v. Germania Bank, 263 Fed. 320, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351.

[178] Darby v. Lucas, 1 Dill. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 3,573; Mercer v. Warfield's Guardian, 1 Ky. Law Rep. 273.

[179] Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615, 74 Pac. 303.

[180] Bohannon v. Clark, 78 S. W. 479, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 1710.

[181] Voorheis v. Blanton, 89 Fed. 885, 32 C. C. A. 384.

[182] Greil v. Durr, 203 Ala. 644, 84 South. 743; Lummis v. Crosby, 176 App. Div. 315, 162 N. Y. Supp. 444; Calkins v. Lichtig, 251 Fed. 844, 164 C. C. A. 60, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

[183] Greil v. Durr, 203 Ala. 644, 84 South. 743.

It is clearly held that a person who is free from debt, or at any rate abundantly able to meet such debts as he may have, may convey property without consideration to his wife or child, by way of settlement, gift, or advancement, and subsequent creditors cannot attack the transfer merely on the ground of its being voluntary. If it was made in good faith and without any fraudulent purpose at the time, it is not voidable though the grantor thereafter contracts debts, becomes insolvent, and is thrown into bankruptcy.[184] But if a person is engaged in a hazardous business and fears loss, and conveys property to his wife or children as an anchor to protect his family in case of insolvency, or if he takes this course because he is about to embark in new enterprises or speculations and means to secure his property against seizure for the debts which he expects to contract, then the transfer is fraudulent as to those who subsequently become his creditors and will be voidable by his trustee in bankruptcy.[185] "In order to defeat a settlement made by a husband upon his wife, it must be intended to defraud existing creditors, or creditors whose rights are expected shortly to supervene, or creditors whose rights may and do so supervene, the settler proposing to throw the hazards of business in which he is about to engage upon others, instead of honestly holding his means subject to the chance of those adverse results to which all business enterprises are liable." [186]

§ 461. Consideration.—A sale, assignment, or mortgage of property by one who is afterwards adjudged a bankrupt is not voidable at the instance of his trustee if the purchaser or mortgagee took the same in good faith and gave a present consideration fairly proportioned to the value of the property, irrespective of the motive or purpose of the bankrupt.[187] This rule rests not only upon the explicit provisions of 184 Warren v. Moody, 122 U. S. 132, 7 Sup. Ct. 1063, 30 L. Ed. 1108; Savage v. Savage, 141 Fed. 346, 72 C. C. A. 494, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599; Herring v. Richards, 1 McCrary, 570, 3 Fed. 439; Sedgwick v. Place, 5 Ben. 184, 5 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 12,620; Jones v. Clifton, 2 Flip. 191, 18 N. B. R. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 7,457; Anonymous 1 Wall. Jr. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 474.

185 Beasley v. Coggins, 48 Fla. 215, 37 South. 213, 5 Ann. Cas. 801; United States v. Griswold, 7 Sawy. 311, 8 Fed. 556; Barker v. Smith, 2 Woods, 87, 12 N. B. R. 474, Fed. Cas. No. 986; Scott v. Mead, 37 Fed. 865; Sedgwick v. Place, 12 Blatchf. 163, 10 N. B. R. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 12,621; Burdick v. Gill, 2 McCrary, 486, 7 Fed. 668; Antrim v. Kelly, 4 N. B. R. 587, Fed. Cas. No. 494; Case v. Phelps, 39 N. Y. 164, 5 N. B. R. 452; Caller v. McNabb, Fed. Cas. No. 2,322. Compare In re Foss, 147 Fed. 790, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

186 Smith v. Vodges, 92 U. S. 183, 23 L. Ed. 481.

187 Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473; In re Baar, 213 Fed. 628, 130 C. C. A. 292; National Bank of Goldsboro v. Hill (D. C.) 226 Fed. 102; In re Paul, 260 Fed. 114, 171 C. C. A. 150; Phillips v. Carter (D. C.) 266 Fed. 444, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33; Lewis v. Julius (D. C.) 212 Fed. 225, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; Sullivan v. Myer, 137 Tenn. 412, 193 S. W. 124; Potter v. American Printing & Lithographing Co., 182 Iowa, 458, 165 N. W. 1044; Anderson v. J. O. & N. B. Chenault, 208 Fed. 400, 125 C. C. A. 616, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; Vollmer v. Plage, 186 Fed. 598, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590;

the bankruptcy act,[188] but is also supported by sound reason, because the net result of such a transaction is not to impair the remedies of creditors nor to diminish the aggregate of the assets upon which they may have recourse for the satisfaction of their claims.[189] Even a sale by an insolvent trader of his entire stock in trade, if for its full value, and without any marks of secrecy, haste, or intent to defraud or prefer, cannot be impeached in his subsequent bankruptcy.[190] Although it may be proved or admitted that the transfer was made with intent to defraud creditors, yet if it is also established that the purchaser acted in good faith, then the only question for decision is whether the price paid was a present fair consideration.[191] But the fact of payment and the amount of the consideration must be clearly and fully established by satisfactory evidence.[192]

The consideration may be cash or solvent credit.[193] It may consist in the surrender of securities of equal value,[194] or real property deeded in exchange for other land;[195] or the assumption of the unpaid balance of purchase money due on the property transferred,[196] or the relinquishment of a dower interest in the bankrupt's lands, at least to the extent of the value of the dower released.[197] Marriage may be a good consid-

In re McCord (C. C. A.) 174 Fed. 820, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164; Perry v. Avery, 148 Mich. 211, 111 N. W. 746; Schilling v. Curran, 30 Mont. 370, 76 Pac. 998; Rosenfeld v. Siegfried, 91 Mo. App. 169; Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462; Friedman v. Verchofsky, 105 Ill. App. 414; Piedmont Sav. Bank v. Levy, 138 N. C. 274, 50 S. E. 657, 3 Ann. Cas. 785; In re Pusey, 7 N. B. R. 45, Fed. Cas. No. 11,478; In re Keefer, 4 N. B. R. 389, Fed. Cas. No. 7,636; Flournoy v. Newton, 8 Ga. 306. Where the bankrupt executed a mortgage to induce the defendant to make advances to a construction company, a misapplication of the advances by an officer of the company, with the consent of the bankrupt, furnishes no ground to avoid the mortgage. Angle v. Bankers' Surety Co., 244 Fed. 401, 157 C. C. A. 27, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90.

188 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 69d, e.

189 For instance, where land purchased with the separate funds of the bankrupt's wife was conveyed to the bankrupt without the consent of the wife, under a promise that the bankrupt would immediately reconvey the land to his wife, who had no knowledge that the conveyance had not been properly made to her in the first instance until shortly before the bankrupt in fact reconveyed the land prior to the bankruptcy, it was held that such reconveyance was not fraudulent as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Young v. Allen, 207 Fed. 318, 125 C. C. A. 68, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261.

190 In re Strenz (D. C.) 8 Fed. 311.

191 Montgomery v. McNicholas (D. C.) 138 Fed. 956, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93.

192 Greensfelder v. Corbett, 190 Ill. 565, 60 N. E. 847.

193 Unmack v. Douglass, 75 Conn. 633, 55 Atl. 12; Grandison v. Robertson, 231 Fed. 785, 145 C. C. A. 605, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 452. A mortgage given by one subsequently bankrupt, to induce persons to indorse his note so that he could obtain a loan, is not a preference or fraudulent conveyance. In re Mosher (D. C.) 224 Fed. 739, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

194 Shaffer v. Fritchery, 4 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 12,697; First State Bank v. Sibley County Bank, 96 Minn. 456, 105 N. W. 485, 489; Butterfield v. Woodman, 223 Fed. 956, 139 C. C. A. 486, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510. See In re Farrand (D. C.) 235 Fed. 809, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

195 Hoffman v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 198 Ill. 452, 64 N. E. 1027.

196 Unmack v. Douglass, 75 Conn. 633, 55 Atl. 12. See Gray v. Breckheimer, 193 App. Div. 231, 183 N. Y. Supp. 748.

197 Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 472, 76 C. C. A. 242, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648;

eration for a transfer of property, but not where the gift to the wife consists of house furnishings of large value bought on credit, she having knowledge of the husband's insolvency, and the whole transaction being part of a scheme to defraud his creditors,[198] nor where the woman had a husband living and was therefore incapable of entering into the marriage contract with the bankrupt.[199] So, past services rendered by a relative in the capacity of a housekeeper, which were given gratuitously at the time and not regarded as the foundation of any indebtedness, cannot support a transfer of property as against the trustee in bankruptcy.[200] And in a suit by the trustee to recover the consideration for an annuity purchased by the bankrupt in fraud of creditors, the payments to begin several years later, the execution of the insurance company's executory contract does not constitute a payment of value which would prevent a termination of the contract and recovery of the consideration.[201]

A mortgage, deed of trust, or other form of security, based solely upon an antecedent debt and without any new consideration, is voidable if given within four months before bankruptcy, because it lacks the saving element of a "present fair consideration," because it operates as a preference, and because it is constructively fraudulent, since it removes from the reach of general creditors part of the assets to which they might have had recourse.[202] Where the mortgagor or other lien is given partly to secure an old debt, but partly also in consideration

Baldwin v. Kingston (D. C.) 247 Fed. 163, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; Greil v. Durr, 203 Ala. 644, 84 South. 743.

[198] Hosmer v. Tiffany, 54 Misc. Rep. 402, 105 N. Y. Supp. 1055. Where the value of property transferred by a bankrupt to his wife was not disproportionate to his pecuniary obligation to support her, in a suit by his trustee against the wife to set aside the conveyance as in violation of the Bankruptcy Act, the equitable doctrine that, where the consideration for a conveyance is inadequate, the conveyance will be sustained to the extent of the consideration actually given, has no application. Baldwin v. Kingston, 257 Fed. 554, 168 C. C. A. 538, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

[199] Hosmer v. Tiffany, 115 App. Div. 303, 100 N. Y. Supp. 797.

[200] Bartlett v. Mercer, 8 Ben. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 1,078.

[201] Smith v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 178 Fed. 510, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514.

[202] Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 466, 76 C. C. A. 236, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; William Firth Co. v. South Carolina Loan & Trust Co., 122 Fed. 569, 59 C. C. A. 73; Empire State Trust Co. v. Trustees of Wm. F. Fisher & Co., 67 N. J. Eq. 602, 60 Atl. 940; Lehrenkrauss v. Bonnell, 138 App. Div. 493, 122 N. Y. Supp. 866; In re Antisdel, 18 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 490; Gillespie v. McKnight, 3 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 5,435; Wilson v. Mitchell-Woodbury Co., 214 Mass. 514, 102 N. E. 119; In re Petersen (D. C.) 252 Fed. 849, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653. But see Hagar v. Watt (D. C.) 232 Fed. 373, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370. Compare Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473, holding that there is nothing inherently fraudulent in a bankrupt's recognizing and paying a debt honestly due to his wife, though it is barred by limitations. That a transfer by a failing husband to his wife, though absolute in form, was in fact a mortgage, does not show that it was fraudulent, where she did not claim the value of the property, but only a lien for a debt. Weld v. McKay, 218 Fed. 807, 134 C. C. A. 495, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

of fresh advances, it will constitute a valid lien to the extent of the new consideration (if otherwise unimpeachable) but no further.[203] And indeed, although the consideration may consist wholly of a present loan or advance of money, without including any past debts, still the mortgage will be sustainable in bankruptcy only to the extent of the money actually advanced, with proper interest, not to the extent of an exaggerated or fictitious value recited in the notes or mortgage.[204]

Where the transaction in question is a sale of goods, it will be voidable in bankruptcy if the price paid was so inadequate that it cannot be regarded as a "fair consideration."[205] But if the transfer was made in good faith and for a valuable consideration, it is not necessary, in order to save it, to show strictly that the price paid was fully equal to the value of the property, provided it was not so inadequate as to amount in itself to an actual fraud on creditors.[206] Or, as otherwise stated, the sale will not be set aside on this ground unless there was such a gross inadequacy of price as would put the purchaser upon inquiry as to the fraudulent intent of the seller in disposing of the goods,[207] or such as would impress him with the conviction that the sale could not have been made in good faith.[208]

§ 462. Knowledge, Bad Faith, or Participation of Transferee.—A transfer or incumbrance of property cannot be set aside, although the party making it is insolvent at the time and is adjudged bankrupt within four months, if the person receiving it, in addition to giving a present fair consideration, is a "purchaser in good faith,"[209] even though [203] In re Grocers' Baking Co. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 900, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; City Nat. Bank v. Bruce, 109 Fed. 69, 48 C. C. A. 236, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311; Phillips v. Kahn, 96 App. Div. 166, 89 N. Y. Supp. 250; Asbury Park Building & Loan Ass'n v. Shepherd (N. J. Eq.) 50 Atl. 65; Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67d, as amended by Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

[204] In re Sawyer (D. C.) 130 Fed. 384, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269; Jackson v. Sedgwick (C. C.) 189 Fed. 508, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 836.

[205] Ott v. Doroshow (D. C.) 147 Fed. 762, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417; Myers v. Fultz, 124 Iowa, 437, 100 N. W. 351; Gans v. Weinstein, 83 App. Div. 358, 82 N. Y. Supp. 280.

[206] Meservey v. Roby, 198 Fed. 844, 117 C. C. A. 486, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. A sale by the directors of a bankrupt corporation shortly before its bankruptcy may be held valid, notwithstanding a subsequent offer of a slightly increased price. In re Copiag-Lindenhurst Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 431, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412.

[207] Dunlop v. Thomas, 28 Wash. 521, 68 Pac. 909.

[208] Myers v. Fultz, 124 Iowa, 437, 100 N. W. 351.

[209] Greey v. Dockendorff, 231 U. S. 513, 34 Sup. Ct. 166, 58 L. Ed. 339, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407; Weld v. McKay, 218 Fed. 807, 134 C. C. A. 495, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; Young v. Allen, 207 Fed. 318, 125 C. C. A. 68, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261; Shelton v. Price (D. C.) 174 Fed. 891, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 174 Ill. App. 339; Potter v. American Printing & Lithographing Co., 182 Iowa, 458, 165 N. W. 1044; Knisely v. People's Sav. Bank, 199 Mich. 501, 165 N. W. 673; Coleman v. Dana, 191 Mo. App. 370, 178 S. W. 256; Pratt v. Christie, 95 App. Div. 282, 88 N. Y. Supp. 585; Kennedy v. Pierce's Loan Co., 100 Mo. App. 269, 73

a fraudulent intent on the part of the bankrupt to cheat or obstruct his creditors is fully made out.[210] But on the other hand, if the purchaser or incumbrancer acted in collusion with the bankrupt, participated in his fraudulent purpose, or even had a guilty knowledge of it, the sale or lien cannot stand as against the trustee in bankruptcy.[211] Knowledge on the part of the purchaser or lienor, such as will defeat the transaction, is knowledge that the bankrupt is not acting in good faith and with an honest purpose but is seeking to gain an advantage for himself by defeating or obstructing his creditors,[212] or, as otherwise stated, knowledge that there are equitable claims upon the property in question such as should prevent the debtor from disposing of it in the way and at the price intended.[213] This knowledge may be constructive as well as actual. If there are any circumstances attending the transaction sufficient to arouse the suspicions of an ordinarily careful and prudent person, then the purchaser is bound to exercise ordinary diligence in making and pursuing inquiries in order to ascertain whether or not the seller can make a transfer of the property which will not be in violation of the bankruptcy law, and he will be chargeable with any knowledge which such reasonable inquiries would have revealed.[214] Thus, a voluntary transfer of all his property by a person in failing or insolvent condition is a circumstance so out of the ordinary as to put

S. W. 357; Clarke v. Sherman, 128 Iowa, 353, 103 N. W. 982; Bunnell v. Bronson, 78 Conn. 679, 63 Atl. 396; Lewis v. First Nat. Bank, 46 Or. 182, 78 Pac. 990. Compare Beecher v. Clark, 12 Blatchf. 256, 10 N. B. R. 385, Fed. Cas. No. 1,223.

210 In re Benjamin, 140 Fed. 320, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; Schilling v. Curran, 30 Mont. 370, 76 Pac. 998. Compare Sherman v. Luckhardt, 67 Kan. 682, 74 Pac. 277; Lehrenkrauss v. Bonnell, 138 App. Div. 493, 122 N. Y. Supp. 866; Clowe v. Seavey, 208 N. Y. 496, 102 N. E. 521; Illoway v. Daly, 65 Pa. Super. Ct. 333.

211 McAtee v. Shade (C. C. A.) 185 Fed. 442, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; Bolander v. Gentry, 36 Cal. 105, 95 Am. Dec. 162, 2 N. B. R. 655; Crump v. Chapman, 1 Hughes, 183, 15 N. B. R. 571, Fed. Cas. No. 3,455. And see Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712. Compare Lyon v. Wallace, 221 Mass. 351, 108 N. E. 1075. And see Reed v. Chase (Mass.) 130 N. E. 257.

212 In re Soudan Mfg. Co., 113 Fed. 804, 51 C. C. A. 476, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45; Houck v. Christy, 152 Fed. 612, 81 C. C. A. 602, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330. A deed of trust executed to secure a present advancement by the beneficiary, with knowledge of the bankrupt's insolvency, in order to take up notes held by a pressing creditor, with knowledge that foreclosure would result in the reduction of the value of the bankrupt's assets, the payment of a preferred debt, and failure to pay other debts, is constructively fraudulent and invalid under the Bankruptcy Act. Dean v. Davis, 212 Fed. 88, 128 C. C. A. 658, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808.

213 Friedman v. Verchofsky, 105 Ill. App. 414.

214 In re Moody, 134 Fed. 628, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Calvi, 185 Fed. 642, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; McWilliams v. Thomas (Tex. Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 596; Gans v. Weinstein, 37 Misc. Rep. 209, 75 N. Y. Supp. 155; Lumpkin v. Foley (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 372, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Lewis v. Julius (D. C.) 212 Fed. 225, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; Blake v. Thwing, 185 Ill. App. 187. Contra, see Chambers v. Continental Trust Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 441, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78.

the transferee upon inquiry, though he himself acted in good faith, and if he could have discovered by such inquiry that it was the purpose of the grantor to defraud his creditors and secure the property for himself and his children, the transfer will be held void.[215] The same rule applies where a bankrupt merchant sells his entire stock of goods. Mere personal good faith on the part of the purchaser is not enough to save the transaction. He should inquire into the transaction to see if a fraud upon creditors is intended, and if he omits to do so, he does not occupy the position of a bona fide purchaser.[216] And mortgaging an entire stock of goods is an act out of the ordinary course of business, and is evidence of the mortgagor's intention to hinder and delay creditors, and charges the mortgagee with notice that the mortgagor is insolvent.[217] But a mortgagee is not to be charged with knowledge of a fraudulent purpose on the part of the debtor merely because he is aware that a large part of the money borrowed is to be used in paying outstanding unsecured debts,[218] nor merely because he has acted as attorney for the bankrupt.[219] On the other hand, where a mortgagor of chattels is selling off the goods for his own use with the consent of the mortgagee, the latter is not a bona fide holder of the mortgage.[220]

An even stronger case is presented where the person taking the property, or acquiring a lien on it, acted in collusion with the seller or mortgagor, not only knowing of his fraudulent purpose, but joining in the transaction for the purpose of assisting him in carrying it out. Here the sale or lien is voidable at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy, even though it was based upon an honest debt or though the purchaser gave full value.[221] In this connection, an agreement to withhold the deed or mortgage from the record is a suspicious circumstance and one which requires explanation. It is not of itself such evidence of a fraudulent purpose as to constitute fraud in law, and so to warrant setting aside the conveyance or mortgage without more, but it is a fact which constitutes more or less cogent evidence of a want of good

[215] Clowe v. Seavey, 208 N. Y. 496, 102 N. E. 521, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 284.

[216] Bentley v. Young (D. C.) 210 Fed. 202, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

[217] Pierre Banking & Trust Co. v. Winkler, 39 S. D. 454, 165 N. W. 2.

[218] Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co., 227 U. S. 575, 33 Sup. Ct. 343, 57 L. Ed. 652, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478; In re Soudan Mfg. Co., 113 Fed. 804, 51 C. C. A. 476, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45.

[219] Webb v. Manheim, 109 App. Div. 63, 95 N. Y. Supp. 1003.

[220] Skillen v. Endelman, 39 Misc. Rep. 261, 79 N. Y. Supp. 413; Pierre Banking & Trust Co. v. Winkler, 39 S. D. 454, 165 N. W. 2.

[221] Gorham v. Buzzell, 178 Fed. 596, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440; In re Kyte, 182 Fed. 166, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Pease, 129 Fed. 446, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; E. S. Bonnie & Co. v. Perry's Trustee, 117 Ky. 459, 78 S. W. 208; Parker v. Travers, 74 N. J. Eq. 812, 71 Atl. 612; Babbitt v. Walbrun, 6 N. B. R. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 695. And see In re Groezinger, 199 Fed. 935, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732.

faith, according to the particular situation of the parties and the intent as indicated by all the facts and circumstances of the case.[222]

§ 463. Rights and Liabilities of Transferees.—When a sale or incumbrance of property is set aside at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy as fraudulent in fact, the buyer or lienor having taken in bad faith, with knowledge of the circumstances, or having participated in the bankrupt's fraudulent purpose, such transferee is not entitled to retain any portion of the property, or to receive credit for property or money actually advanced, in other words, he loses any consideration which he may have given for the transfer.[223] Neither is he entitled to reimbursement for the cost of improvements made on the property or for money advanced to reduce incumbrances.[224] And the fact that the fraudulent vendee of real property, prior to accepting an absolute transfer of it from the bankrupt, held a mortgage upon the same property will not entitle him to a lien thereon.[225] But if the transferee acted in good faith, having no knowledge of the fraudulent design of the bankrupt and giving value, and it is therefore decided that the transfer is not void in toto, but only voidable to the extent of the excess of the value of the property over the consideration given, then the transferee is entitled to be protected to the extent of the actual present consideration paid or given,[226] and the trustee cannot have the sale or mortgage [222] Rogers v. Page, 140 Fed. 596, 72 C. C. A. 164, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; Cowan v. Burchfield, 180 Fed. 614, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; Dean v. Plane, 195 Ill. 495, 63 N. E. 274.

[223] Feilbach Co. v. Russell, 233 Fed. 412, 147 C. C. A. 348, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; In re Friedman (D. C.) 241 Fed. 603, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777; Rubenstein v. Lottow, 220 Mass. 156, 107 N. E. 718; Blake v. Thwing, 185 Ill. App. 187; Johnson v. Cohn, 39 Misc. Rep. 189, 79 N. Y. Supp. 139; Rosenbluth v. De Forrest & Hotchkiss Co., 85 Conn. 40, 81 Atl. 955; Holloway v. Brame, 83 Miss. 335, 36 South. 1; Allen v. French, 180 Mass. 487, 62 N. E. 987; Jackson v. Sedgwick, 193 Fed. 374; Scammon v. Hobson, 1 Hask. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 12,434. A creditor to whom a bankrupt has granted a preference cannot surrender part of the property received in partial reduction of the damages sustained by the estate in bankruptcy. Wilson v. Mitchell-Woodbury Co., 214 Mass. 514, 102 N. E. 119. But a purchaser of property of a corporation within four months prior to the adjudication of the corporation in bankruptcy, who complied with a request of the seller's president by applying a portion of the purchase price toward discharging personal debts incurred for the corporation's benefit, cannot be required to make such payments a second time to the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy. Doughty v. Moors, 41 Cal. App. 664, 183 Pac. 199.

[224] In re Liller, (D. C.) 253 Fed. 845. 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; In re Mead, 19 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 9,365. Compare Sieg v. Greene, 225 Fed. 955, 141 C. C. A. 79, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1006, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; In re Bradley (C. C.) 263 Fed. 446, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30.

[225] Railton v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 125 Ill. App. 617, affirmed 224 Ill. 485, 79 N. E. 600. See Utah Ass'n of Credit Men v. Jones, 49 Utah, 519, 164 Pac. 1029.

[226] In re Howard (D. C.) 207 Fed. 402, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; Golden & Co. v. Loving, 42 App. D. C. 489; Payne v. Sehon, Stevenson & Co., 81 W. Va. 128, 94 S. E. 34; Jackson v. Sedgwick, 189 Fed. 508, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 836; In re Chase, 133 Fed. 79, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep.

cancelled and recover the specific property without returning the consideration received,[227] or giving bonds to secure the transferee for the amount that is found to be due to him.[228] And even though a transfer is set aside as being fraudulent as to the creditors of the grantor, still it may remain good as between the parties to it. Thus, where a deed of land from the bankrupt to his wife is vacated as voluntary and therefore fraudulent, still the wife is entitled to a homestead allowance out of the proceeds of the property.[229] And if the trustee in bankruptcy sues the transferee for the value of the property and recovers a judgment, and the transferee thereupon pays the judgment, he becomes invested with full title to the property itself, in so far as title was vested in the bankrupt or the trustee.[230]

It is sometimes impossible for the fraudulent transferee to restore the property to the trustee in the condition in which he received it, as, for instance, in consequence of a loss by fire. In this case, the rule appears to be that the proceeds of insurance on a building which stood on land which had been conveyed to the insured in fraud of the grantor's creditors do not take the place of the property destroyed, and the grantor's trustee in bankruptcy may not recover them.[231]

Where an assignment of a cause of action constitutes an unlawful preference in bankruptcy, but no steps are taken in the bankruptcy court to set it aside, it is not subject to collateral attack by a defendant in an action of fraud by the assignor to the use of the assignee.[232]

§ 464. Rights of Bona Fide Purchasers.—Although one may have acquired property under such circumstances that the transfer constituted a fraud upon the creditors of the grantor, and therefore may be unable to hold the property as against the grantor's trustee in bank-

294; Paddock v. Fish, 10 Fed. 125; Clowe v. Seavey, 74 Misc. Rep. 254, 131 N. Y. Supp. 817; Weatherwax v. Gorman, 150 Mich. 316, 113 N. W. 1105. And see Unity Banking & Sav. Co. v. Boyden, 159 Fed. 916, 87 C. C. A. 96, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264. Where, after the execution of a fraudulent bill of sale of a certain vessel, the buyer paid various claims which were valid liens thereon, and after the sale had been adjudged void at the instance of the seller's trustee in bankruptcy, the buyer voluntarily surrendered the vessel to the trustee, it was held that the court had no further jurisdiction to require the trustee to reimburse the buyer to the amount of the liens so paid as a condition to decreeing a delivery to the trustee. Arnold v. Eastin's Trustee, 116 Ky. 686, 76 S. W. 855. As to the right of the grantee or lienor to add interest to the amount of his valid claims, see Dean v. Plane, 195 Ill. 495, 63 N. E. 274; Senft v. Lewis, 239 Fed. 116, 152 C. C. A. 158, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

227 Sharood v. Jordan, 90 Minn. 249, 95 N. W. 1108.

228 Horton v. Bamford, 79 N. J. Eq. 356, 81 Atl. 761.

229 Smith v. Kehr, 2 Dill. 50, Fed. Cas. No. 13,071, affirmed in Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 22 L. Ed. 313.

230 Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99.

231 Trenholm v. Klinker, 108 Miss. 263, 66 South. 738, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 289; Underwood v. Winslow, 234 Mass. 550, 125 N. E. 631.

232 Leonard v. Springer, 174 Ill. App. 516.

ruptcy, yet, until proceedings for its recovery are begun, his title is defeasible only and not absolutely void, and therefore he may in the mean time convey a good and unimpeachable title to a third person, and if the latter took in good faith, gave value, and had no notice of the facts which would invalidate the title of his immediate grantor, the trustee in bankruptcy has no remedy against him.[233] The trustee may indeed proceed against the fraudulent grantee and recover judgment for the value of the property transferred,[234] and if the third purchaser gave a mortgage for part of the price, the trustee in bankruptcy may claim the mortgage and the right to enforce it, as representing the bankrupt's creditors,[235] but in no case should the court decree the setting aside of the conveyance from the bankrupt to his immediate grantee, since this would have the effect to cloud the title of the innocent holder.[236] On the same principle, if a fraudulent grantee of property executes a mortgage on the same to one who lends his money in good faith, on the credit of the mortgagor's apparent title and without notice of any claims which might be asserted against that title by the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor, the rights of such mortgagee must be fully recognized and protected in the bankruptcy proceedings,[237] provided he has recorded his mortgage before the adjudication in bankruptcy.[238] So also, the bankruptcy law does not prevent a creditor of the fraudulent grantee, without notice, from acquiring rights in the property superior to those of the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor, as, by levying an attachment on the property.[239] So also, the bona fide purchaser of negotiable paper secured by a mortgage, before maturity and without notice, takes the mortgage, as he does the notes, free from equities arising between the previous parties thereto, and also free from any latent equity existing in a trustee in bankruptcy at the time of the assignment of the notes, of which latent equity there is no

[233] Bush v. Export Storage Co., 136 Fed. 918, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138; Paddock v. Fish, 10 Fed. 125; Jarrell v. Harrell, 1 Woods, 476, 7 N. B. R. 400, Fed. Cas. No. 7,222; Dennett v. Mitchell, Fed. Cas. No. 3,789; Judson v. Kelty, 5 Ben. 348, 6 N. B. R. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 7,567; Coolidge v. Ayers, 76 Vt. 405, 57 Atl. 970; Hackney v. First Nat. Bank, 68 Neb. 588, 94 N. W. 805, 98 N. W. 412; Unmack v. Douglass, 75 Conn. 633, 55 Atl. 12; Union Trust & Savings Bank v. Amery, 72 Wash. 648, 131 Pac. 199; Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473; Merrick v. Pattison, 85 Wash. 240, 147 Pac. 1137; Gray v. Breslof (D. C.) 273 Fed. 526.

[234] Hackney v. First Nat. Bank, 68 Neb. 588, 94 N. W. 805, 98 N. W. 412; Gray v. Breslof (D. C.) 273 Fed. 526.

[235] Prescott v. Galluccio, 164 Fed. 618, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

[236] Skillin v. Maibrunn, 176 N. Y. 588, 68 N. E. 1124.

[237] Putnam v. Southworth, 197 Mass. 270, 83 N. E. 887; Brooks v. D'Orville, 7 Ben. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 1,951; Sedgwick v. Place, 12 Blatchf. 163, 10 N. B. R. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 12,621; Angle v. Bankers' Surety Co., 244 Fed. 401, 157 C. C. A. 27, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90.

[238] Putnam v. Southworth, 197 Mass. 270, 83 N. E. 887.

[239] In re Mullen, 101 Fed. 413, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224.

notice actual or constructive.[240] And therefore he is entitled to protection and to the benefit of his security, as against the trustee, although his immediate vendor held it under such circumstances of fraud as would have made him liable to an action by the trustee to set aside the security.[241]

But a purchaser from the fraudulent grantee may of course be chargeable with the consequences of the original fraud, if he knew of it. But this must be clearly made out. The mere fact that there was something unusual in the original transaction (as, that it embraced the whole of a stock of goods) may not be enough to charge him with notice.[242] But if he had reasonable cause to believe that the transfer was fraudulent, or was aware of suspicious circumstances and omitted to make proper inquiries, he cannot claim to occupy the position of an innocent purchaser without notice.[243] And although the mere institution of proceedings in bankruptcy does not give constructive notice to third persons that they must be on their guard in dealing with property which the bankrupt had previously conveyed or incumbered, because there may be ground to attack such conveyance or incumbrance as fraudulent,[244] yet after the trustee in bankruptcy has begun his action to set aside a transfer of property as fraudulent, no third person can acquire a good title to it from the defendant in that action.[245]

§ 465. Jurisdiction, Form of Action, Parties, and Pleading.—A suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance by the bankrupt may be maintained either in the court of bankruptcy or in any state court which would have had jurisdiction of a similar action by the creditors; for this purpose the jurisdiction of the two courts is concurrent.[246] But when the court of bankruptcy has taken [240] In re Schwarz, 200 Fed. 309, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700. This rule is firmly settled so far as the federal courts are concerned, by the decision in Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271, 21 L. Ed. 313, though it must be admitted that elsewhere there is considerable conflict of authority upon the question. See Clement v. Saratoga Holding Co., 161 App. Div. 898, 145 N. Y. Supp. 628, holding that the purchaser must bring himself within the definition of a bona fide holder under the Bankruptcy Act, and not merely within the definitions of a state law on the subject of negotiable instruments.

[241] Myers v. Hazzard, 4 McCrary, 94, 50 Fed. 155.

[242] Babbitt v. Walbrun, 1 Dill. 19, 4 N. B. R. 121, Fed. Cas. No. 694. See Faulkner v. Kaplon, 203 Fed. 114. The purchaser of mortgaged premises is not charged with notice of the mortgagor's fraudulent intent as to creditors by his knowledge of the fact that the mortgage was not recorded, that the parties to it were brothers-in-law, that the mortgagor was heavily indebted, or that he retained possession of the property after the mortgage. Kimbrough v. Alred, 202 Ala. 413, 80 South. 617.

[243] Darby v. Lucas, 1 Dill. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 3,573; In re Moody, 134 Fed. 628, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

[244] In re Mullen, 101 Fed. 413, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; Paddock v. Fish, 10 Fed. 125.

[245] Brewster v. Goff, 164 Fed. 127, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239.

[246] Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; Carter v. Hobbs, 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am.

jurisdiction, any proceedings in the state court which would interfere with the full exercise of that jurisdiction or with its control of the property in suit may be restrained.[247] Formerly, a suit of this character might also be brought in a federal circuit court.[248] And under the present statute it appears that a non-resident defendant may be sued in the federal district court of the district where he is domiciled, since jurisdiction is given to "any" court of bankruptcy.[249] Where an action of this kind has been begun in a United States court by judgment creditors, its jurisdiction to proceed with the case is probably not affected by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor,[250] but it should not take jurisdiction of a creditor's bill when proceedings in bankruptcy have already been commenced.[251]

Since a trustee's suit to set aside a fraudulent transfer of property is in the nature of a creditor's bill, he may appropriately proceed by a bill in equity, notwithstanding the fact that there may be a remedy at law.[252] Or, according to the circumstances of the particular case, he may bring an action for money had and received,[253] or trover,[254] or assumpsit where the goods transferred have been converted into money.[255] But the claims of the trustee against an alleged fraudulent transferee or preferred creditor cannot be determined summarily by the court of bankruptcy on motion and rule.[256] If the trustee, upon his appointment, finds a suit already commenced and in progress in a state court by one or more of the creditors to set aside a fraudulent conveyance by the bankrupt, he may apply to the court of bankruptcy for permission to intervene in such action, and leave will generally be granted if it appears to be for the best interests of the estate.[257]

Bankr. Rep. 215. And see Whittington v. Simmons, 32 Ark. 377. Supra, §§ 410–414.

247 Kellogg v. Russell, 11 Blatchf. 519, 11 N. B. R. 121, Fed. Cas. No. 7,666.

248 Woolridge v. McKenna, 8 Fed. 650; Nicholas v. Murray, 5 Sawy. 320, Fed. Cas. No. 10,223.

249 Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 67e, 70e, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

250 National Bank of the Republic v. Hobbs, 118 Fed. 626, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

251 Cruchet v. Red River Min. Co., 155 Fed. 486, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

252 Parker v. Black, 151 Fed. 18, 80 C. C. A. 484, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15; Wall v. Cox, 101 Fed. 403, 41 C. C. A. 408, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659; Cox v. Wall, 99 Fed. 546; Schrenkeisen v. Miller, 9 Ben. 55, Fed. Cas. No. 12,480; In re Hunt, 2 N. B. R. 539, Fed. Cas. No. 6,881; Lisberger v. Garnett, 1 Hughes, 620, Fed. Cas. No. 8,383; Gnichtel v. First Nat. Bank, 66 N. J. Eq. 88, 53 Atl. 1041; Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 84 Miss. 54, 36 South. 65. Compare Gray v. Beck, 6 Fed. 595. And see Frank v. Musliner, 76 App. Div. 616, 78 N. Y. Supp. 369; Blake v. Thwing, 185 Ill. App. 187.

253 Elmore v. Symonds, 183 Mass. 321, 67 N. E. 314.

254 Mowry v. Reed, 187 Mass. 174, 72 N. E. 936.

255 Lyon v. Clark, 129 Mich. 381, 88 N. W. 1046.

256 Supra, § 403. See In re Green (D. C.) 207 Fed. 693, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464.

257 In re Riker, 107 Fed. 96, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Kimmouth v. Braeutigam (N. J. Eq.) 57 Atl. 1013; Bunch v. Smith, 116 Tenn. 201, 93 S. W. 80; At-

The bankrupt himself is neither a necessary nor a proper party to a bill in equity by his trustee to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance or transfer.[258] But where several persons are all connected with various fraudulent undertakings for the purpose of preventing the bankrupt's property from reaching the control of the trustee, although they are not all connected with each fraudulent act, but some of them performed one act and some another, all tending to the same result, the trustee may join them all in one suit to obtain possession of the property involved.[259] But in a suit to recover a preferential transfer only those persons who have received some benefit or advantage from it are proper defendants.[260]

As to matters of pleading and practice, the trustee's suit will be governed by the laws and rules of the court where it is brought, and where that is a federal court, the suit is treated as one in equity and will be governed by the rules of pleading and practice in equity, independently of the state practice.[261] But in any case, the trustee's bill or complaint must set forth specifically all the facts and circumstances necessary to show the nature of the transaction in controversy and its fraudulent character.[262] Thus, as a basis for the suit, the bill must show that there were creditors existing at the time of the transfer which is attacked, or else allege such a fraudulent intent as would make the transfer or conveyance void as against subsequent creditors; and it must state the aggregate amount of the claims proved in the bankruptcy proceedings and aver that the assets are not sufficient to satisfy such claims; but it is not necessary to name the unsecured creditors whom kins v. Globe Bank & Trust Co. (Ky.) 124 S. W. 879; Tharp v. Tharp's Trustee (Ky.) 119 S. W. 814. See Davis v. W. F. Vandiver & Co., 143 Ala. 202, 38 South. 850.

[258] Buffington v. Harvey, 95 U. S. 99, 24 L. Ed. 381; Benton v. Allen, 2 Fed. 448; Huntington v. Saunders, 14 Fed. 907.

[259] Potts v. Hahn, 32 Fed. 660; Jones v. Slauson, 33 Fed. 632; Strasburger v. Bach, 157 Fed. 918, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732; Norcross v. Nathan, 99 Fed. 414, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; Rubenstein v. Lottow, 220 Mass. 156, 107 N. E. 718.

[260] Page v. Moore, 179 Fed. 988, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

[261] Westall v. Avery, 171 Fed. 626, 96 C. C. A. 428, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

[262] Flanders v. Coleman, 250 U. S. 223, 39 Sup. Ct. 472, 63 L. Ed. 948, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; In re McIntosh, 150 Fed. 546, 80 C. C. A. 250, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 169; Johnston v. Forsyth Mercantile Co., 127 Fed. 845, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; Comstock v. Tracey, 46 Fed. 162; Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615, 74 Pac. 303; Crim v. Rice, 232 Fed. 570, 146 C. C. A. 528, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Kimbrough v. Alred, 202 Ala. 413, 80 South. 617; Ury v. Van Every, 181 Cal. 604, 188 Pac. 985; McKey v. Cochran, 262 Ill. 376, 104 N. E. 693. A bill by the trustee of a bankrupt corporation to recover the amount paid by the corporation on an accommodation note in fraud of its creditors while insolvent, is insufficient if it does not allege that the holder knew of the fraud. Gullege v. Woods, 108 Miss. 233, 66 South. 536. If a trustee, suing to recover property fraudulently transferred, seeks to recover property subsequently acquired by the transferee as the proceeds of the transferred property, the complaint must show the necessary facts. Hane v. Crown & Keystone Co (D. C.) 223 Fed. 439, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175.

the trustee represents nor to specify or describe their respective debts.[263] The bill must also offer to do equity. For instance, if the transaction was fraudulent only in part, the defendant being entitled to retain or receive what he gave in the way of a present valid consideration, the trustee must offer in his bill to pay the defendant what may equitably be due to him.[264]

Such a bill, seeking to set aside a chattel mortgage and a sale thereunder, and also an assignment for the benefit of creditors, as fraudulent against creditors, and to recover the property, is not multifarious, its object being to recover the estate and clear it of incumbrances, and all the acts of the defendants having been done with a common purpose.[265] The answer should deny specifically the essential allegations of the bill,[266] and may plead any proper defense, but it is not necessarily a defense that the property is already in the possession of the trustee, having been seized by the marshal,[267] nor that the bankrupt's discharge was granted notwithstanding opposition to it on the ground of the same alleged fraudulent transaction.[268] As to pleading the statute of limitations as a defense, it was formerly held that the trustee could not maintain the suit if a similar action by creditors would have been barred by the state statute.[269] But since his title is based on the bankruptcy act, and since the operation of that act cannot be in any way affected by state legislation, it is thought that the only applicable statute of limitations is that contained in the bankruptcy act itself, to the effect that "suits shall not be brought by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed."[270]

§ 466. Burden of Proof and Evidence.—In a suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent transfer of property, the trustee must assume the burden of proving the fraud charged by clear and satisfactory evidence.[271]

[263] Cartwright v. West, 185 Ala. 41, 64 South. 293; Barrett v. Kaigler, 200 Ala. 404, 76 South. 320; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420.

[264] Albert Pick & Co. v. Natalby, 211 Ill. App. 486.

[265] Platt v. Preston, 19 N. B. R. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 11,219. And see O'Farrell v. Poston, 105 S. C. 30, 89 S. E. 483.

[266] Prestridge v. Wallace, 155 Ala. 540, 46 South. 970.

[267] Kellogg v. Russell, 11 Blatchf. 519, 11 N. B. R. 121, Fed. Cas. No. 7,666.

[268] Jones v. Milbank, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 73.

[269] Jones v. Smith, 38 Fed. 380; Martin v. Smith, 1 Dill. 85, 4 N. B. R. 274, Fed. Cas. No. 9,164. And see Lehman v. La Forge, 42 Fed. 493.

[270] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11d. And see Bean v. Brookmire, 1 Dill. 25, 4 N. B. R. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 1,168.

[271] Osley v. Adams (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 114, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; Reed v. Chase (Mass.) 130 N. E. 257; Angle v. Bankers' Surety Co., 244 Fed. 401, 157 C. C. A. 27, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; Johnstone v. Babb, 240 Fed. 668, 153 C. C. A. 466, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Mosher (D. C.) 224 Fed. 739, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; In re Grocers' Baking Co. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 900, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; French v. Cunningham (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 909, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534; Murray v. Ray, 251 Fed. 866, 164 C. C. A. 82, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315; Peterson v. Mettler, 198 Fed. 938, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158; Jacobs v. Van Sickel, 123 Fed. 340, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep.

A purpose to hinder or defraud creditors, and knowledge thereof on the part of the transferee, cannot be presumed from the bare fact of a conveyance of property by one who was then insolvent and afterwards becomes bankrupt,[272] though proof of highly suspicious facts in connection with the transfer or in the conduct of the parties may make out a prima facie case of fraud.[273] But the fact alone that a sale is made out of the usual course of business of the debtor is not sufficient to stamp the transaction as fraudulent, though it may be a badge of fraud, depending for its effect on the surrounding facts.[274] In this connection, the trustee is entitled to avail himself, in like manner as any judgment creditor, of a decree of a state court declaring the transfer or conveyance by the debtor to have been fraudulent and void,[275] and every declaration of the bankrupt in reference to defrauding his creditors and acts on his part showing the nature and intent of the fraudulent scheme are admissible where a prima facie case of conspiracy is made out.[276] And it may be shown that, eight days after another sale made a month before the sale in question, a secret agreement was entered into between the parties whereby the vendor was reinvested with an interest in the property sold.[277] But evidence of transactions with others than the transferee in question, proper to be considered in deter-

519; Benton v. Allen, 2 Fed. 448; Joseph v. Raff, 176 N. Y. 611, 68 N. E. 1118; Klein v. Gallin, 141 N. Y. Supp. 831; Smith v. Eldredge, 143 N. Y. Supp. 87; Kanne v. Kanne, 119 Minn. 265, 138 N. W. 25; Halbert v. Pranke, 91 Minn. 204, 97 N. W. 976; Sharood v. Jordan, 90 Minn. 249, 95 N. W. 1108; Bailey v. Wood, 211 Mass. 37, 97 N. E. 902, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 950; Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; Falls City Tinware Co.'s Trustee v. Levine, 104 S. W. 716, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 1103; Coleman v. Hagey (Mo.) 158 S. W. 829; Horine v. Luria, 49 Pa. Super. Ct. 171; Gilmore v. Wall, 31 Okl. 754, 123 Pac. 1060; McCrory v. Donald, 192 Ala. 312, 68 South. 306; McKey v. Cochran, 262 Ill. 376, 104 N. E. 693; Finch v. Cecil, 170 N. C. 114, 86 S. E. 991; Holbrook v. International Trust Co., 220 Mass. 150, 107 N. E. 665; Putnam v. United States Trust Co., 223 Mass. 199, 111 N. E. 969; Jones v. Shiro, 116 Me. 512, 102 Atl. 76. In a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to reach property transferred by the bankrupt to his wife, the mere fact that neither husband nor wife was called by the defense, does not sustain the plaintiff's burden of showing a secret trust. Lyon v. Wallace, 221 Mass. 351, 108 N. E. 1075.

[272] Webb's Trustee v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 106 Va. 726, 56 S. E. 581; Dutton v. Cloar, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 65 S. W. 70; Love v. Export Storage Co., 143 Fed. 1, 74 C. C. A. 155, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171. Compare Thomas v. Roddy, 122 App. Div. 851, 107 N. Y. Supp. 473. And see Fouche v. Shearer, 172 Fed. 592, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828; Phillips v. Huffaker, 35 Cal. App. 531, 170 Pac. 431.

[273] In re Hunt, 2 N. B. R. 539, Fed. Cas. No. 6,881. In a creditors' suit against the members of an insolvent banking firm, to set aside alleged fraudulent transfers of the bank's assets the failure of the defendants to produce the important books of the bank when required, or to account for the same, raises a presumption of fraud of the most damaging character. National Bank of Republic v. Hobbs, 118 Fed. 626, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

[274] Houck v. Christy, 152 Fed. 612, 81 C. C. A. 602, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; Babbitt v. Walbrun, 1 Dill. 19, 4 N. B. R. 121, Fed. Cas. No. 694.

[275] In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[276] Tyler v. Angevine, 15 Blatchf. 536, Fed. Cas. No. 14,306.

[277] Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185, 4 Sup. Ct. 382, 28 L. Ed. 395.

mining the bankrupt's intention, or as bearing on the question of his insolvency, is not admissible against the transferee without evidence that he had knowledge of such transactions.[278] So, evidence of what the bankrupt said to the defendant some days before, when he borrowed the money of him, as to what he wanted it for, or of statements then made by the bankrupt as to his financial condition, or of the time fixed for repayment, has no bearing on the question whether the defendant knew or had reasonable cause to believe the bankrupt was insolvent when he repaid the loan.[279] And testimony that the bankrupt secreted the money which he received on the sale in question, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, does not show that the defendant had any knowledge of such fraudulent intent.[280] And so, where a bill of sale is attacked as fraudulent, evidence that the bankrupt secreted certain of his property is not admissible except for the purpose of showing what goods were on hand at the date of the bill of sale.[281] And generally, the trustee's case must fail where the only witnesses introduced, who were the parties to the transaction attacked, all testify that the transfer was made in good faith and for a fair consideration.[282]

It is also necessary for the trustee to prove that there were creditors of the bankrupt whose claims were in existence at or before the time of the transaction assailed as fraudulent, or else that he had, at that time, a fraudulent intention as to those who might afterwards become his creditors.[283] Likewise the trustee must not only allege but prove that the assets of the estate in bankruptcy are not sufficient to satisfy the claims against it, and on this point, evidence as to all the claims, whether secured or unsecured, will be admissible.[284]

It is also incumbent on the trustee to prove, by competent and satisfactory evidence, that the bankrupt was insolvent at the time of the transaction in question and that the transferee knew of it or had sufficient cause to believe it.[285] The insolvency may be shown by the books

[278] Doxsee v. Waddick, 122 Iowa, 599, 98 N. W. 483.

[279] Goodrich v. Wilson, 119 Mass. 429, But see Johnson v. Canfield-Swigart Co., 292 Ill. 101, 126 N. E. 608.

[280] Schilling v. Curran, 30 Mont. 370, 76 Pac. 998.

[281] Frank v. Musliner, 76 App. Div. 616, 78 N. Y. Supp. 369.

[282] Entwisle v. Seidt, 155 Fed. 864, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185.

[283] In re Snodgrass, 209 Fed. 325, 126 C. C. A. 251, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; Coleman v. Hagey, 252 Mo. 102, 158 S. W. 829; Longbottom v. Emery, 261 Pa. 163, 104 Atl. 561; Scales v. Holje, 41 Cal. App. 733, 183 Pac. 308.

[284] Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420.

[285] Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co., 174 Fed. 518, 98 C. C. A. 300, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; Gans v. Weinstein, 83 App. Div. 358, 82 N. Y. Supp. 280; Joseph v. Raff, 176 N. Y. 611, 68 N. E. 1118; Horton v. Bamford, 79 N. J. Eq. 356, 81 Atl. 761; Way v. Ruff, 112 Minn. 57, 127 N. W. 564, 609; Moran v. Morgan, 252 Fed. 719, 164 C. C. A. 559, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430. Compare Senft v. Lewis, 239 Fed. 116, 152 C. C. A. 158, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

of the bankrupt, including private memorandum books,[286] or by the debtor's schedules in bankruptcy, if filed shortly after the transfer in question,[287] but not if filed more than a year after the transaction which is alleged to have been fraudulent.[288] Evidence that a bankrupt, while insolvent, conveyed valuable property to his brother for an inadequate consideration, that by agreement between them the brother withheld the deeds from record, and that the bankrupt afterwards borrowed large sums of money on his representation that he owned such property, will be sufficient to establish actual fraud and entitle the bankrupt's trustee to recover the property.[289] Where the transfer attacked is a payment of money, it is not necessary to trace it to the present possession of the defendant.[290] Where the trustee's contention is that the bankrupt conspired with several other persons to secure or convert his property, and withdraw it from the reach of the creditors, he will establish his case by proof that any two of the defendants acted in concert in the fraudulent scheme, though he may be unable to prove that all of the defendants were parties to the conspiracy.[291]

On the other hand, at least when the trustee has made out a prima facie case, the defendant must assume the burden of proving that he was a purchaser for value and in good faith and for a fair consideration.[292] For this purpose he must be allowed to present all competent evidence bearing on the question of the good faith of the transaction and the consideration given.[293] And he is not estopped from claiming that the conveyance in question was valid as to him by the fact that [286] In re E. S. Wheeler & Co., 158 Fed. 603, 85 C. C. A. 425, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641.

[287] Saxton v. Sebring, 96 App. Div. 570, 89 N. Y. Supp. 372.

[288] Barr v. Sofranski, 130 App. Div. 783, 115 N. Y. Supp. 533.

[289] Peterson v. Mettler, 198 Fed. 938, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158.

[290] Smith v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (C. C.) 178 Fed. 510, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514.

[291] McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702; Gregory v. Binghamton Trust Co., 168 App. Div. 805, 154 N. Y. Supp. 376; Saxton v. Sebring, 96 App. Div. 570, 89 N. Y. Supp. 372.

[292] Owens v. Daniel, 230 Fed. 101, 144 C. C. A. 399, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433; Klinger v. Hyman, 223 Fed. 257, 138 C. C. A. 499, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; Harvey v. Stowe, 219 Fed. 17, 134 C. C. A. 635; Rison v. Parham, 219 Fed. 176, 134 C. C. A. 550, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571; Stroecker v. Patterson, 220 Fed. 21, 135 C. C. A. 597, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287; Sturdivant Bank v. Schade, 195 Fed. 188, 115 C. C. A. 140, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Harper v. Sanderson (D. C.) 264 Fed. 857, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579; In re Musica (D. C.) 263 Fed. 156, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; Winslow v. Staab (D. C.) 233 Fed. 305, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; Bentley v. Young (D. C.) 210 Fed. 202, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; Pope v. Cantwell (D. C.) 206 Fed. 908, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 802; Lawrence v. Lowrie (D. C.) 133 Fed. 995, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297; Garland v. Arrowood, 177 N. C. 371, 99 S. E. 100; McNamara v. Farnsworth, 106 Wash. 523, 180 Pac. 466; Abele v. Beacon Trust Co., 228 Mass. 438, 117 N. E. 833; Eberline v. Prager, 209 Mich. 322, 176 N. W. 428; Lockhart v. Edge, 40 S. D. 307, 167 N. W. 164; Wick v. Hickey (Iowa) 103 N. W. 469.

[293] Joseph v. Raff, 176 N. Y. 611, 68 N. E. 1118; Hunt v. Doyal, 128 Ga. 416, 57 S. E. 489. The bona fide character of a conveyance by a failing husband to his wife may be established by the uncorroborated, but uncontradicted, testimony the adjudication in bankruptcy was based upon an allegation that it was a fraudulent conveyance and an act of bankruptcy,[294] nor by the fact that the same transaction was specified as a ground of opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge.[295] The question whether or not the conveyance or transfer drawn in question was fraudulent is a question of fact,[296] which must go to the jury.[297]

§ 467. Nature and Extent of Trustee's Recovery.—In the case of a fraudulent conveyance of real property, vacated at the suit of the trustee in bankruptcy, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree declaring and establishing the title as vested in him,[298] or requiring the defendant to execute the necessary deed.[299] In the case of a fraudulent transfer of a note and mortgage, the trustee is entitled to an order requiring that they shall be assigned to him.[300] If the property transferred was a certificate of corporate stock, and it still remains in the hands of the defendant, he may be required to surrender the certificate itself to the trustee in bankruptcy and to account for dividends received.[301] If the property in controversy consisted of chattels, they are to be delivered in specie to the trustee.[302] And generally, if it is in the power of the fraudulent transferee to restore the status quo by delivering to the trustee the identical property which he received from the bankrupt, this is the relief which the trustee must seek and obtain, and he cannot abandon the pursuit of the property itself and simply have a judgment in personam for its value against the defendant.[303] In the case of a fraudulent payment of money, however, the natural and only appropriate judgment is one against the transferee personally for the sum shown to have been received by him.[304] Where the transfer assailed consisted in the assign-of the husband or wife. Weld v. McKay, 218 Fed. 807, 134 C. C. A. 495, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

294 In re Marter, 12 N. B. R. 185, Fed. Cas. No. 9,143.

295 Bradley v. Hunter, 50 Ala. 265.

296 Bailey v. Wood, 211 Mass. 37, 97 N. E. 902, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 950; Webb's Trustee v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 107 Va. 807, 60 S. E. 130.

297 Coolidge v. Ayers, 76 Vt. 405, 57 Atl. 970; Dutton v. Cloar, 26 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 65 S. W. 70; Sherman v. Luckhardt, 96 Mo. App. 320, 70 S. W. 388.

298 Currie v. Look, 14 N. D. 482, 106 N. W. 131. And see Bergin v. Blackwood, 145 Minn. 363, 177 N. W. 493.

299 McFarland v. Goodman, 6 Biss. 111, 11 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 8,789.

300 Clarke v. Sherman, 128 Iowa, 353, 103 N. W. 982.

301 Wasey v. Holbrook, 141 App. Div. 336, 125 N. Y. Supp. 1087. See In re Kessler & Co., 174 Fed. 906, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 391.

302 Edwards v. Schillinger Bros. Co., 153 Ill. App. 219.

303 Phillips v. Sedgwick, 95 U. S. 3, 24 L. Ed. 591; Wasey v. Holbrook, 141 App. Div. 336, 125 N. Y. Supp. 1087; Off v. Hakes, 142 Fed. 364, 73 C. C. A. 464, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696. But if the surrender of certificates of corporate stock (the property fraudulently transferred) would offer insufficient relief because of their depreciation in value, the court may render a personal judgment against the transferee. Wasey v. Holbrook, 65 Misc. Rep. 84, 120 N. Y. Supp. 675. And see Gill v. Ely-Norris Safe Co., 170 Mo. App. 478, 156 S. W. 811.

304 Andreas' Assignee v. Rust, 3 Ky. Law Rep. 772; Greenhall v. Carnegie Trust Co. (D. C.) 180 Fed. 812, 25 Am.

ment of a judgment, the collection of the judgment should not be enjoined, but the court should direct payment to be made to the trustee in bankruptcy.[305]

But if the property has passed into the possession of a bona fide holder for value, taking by assignment or transfer from the original fraudulent transferee without notice, so that it can no longer be reclaimed or recovered by the trustee in bankruptcy, then the appropriate relief of the latter is a judgment for damages against the fraudulent grantee, measured by the value of the property, [306] and including, in the case of real estate, the rents and profits which he received or should have received from it while in his hands.[307] The value of the property, for the purpose of the trustee's recovery, is not measured by the price the fraudulent transferee paid for it,[308] nor necessarily by its estimated value at the time of the transfer, but rather by the price for which he sold it to the present holder.[309] In this sense and to this extent, he may be held to account for any profit he made out of the property.[310] Thus, for instance, where a new corporation, organized to succeed the bankrupt, took the latter's assets under a lease which was void for fraud as against creditors, and operated the bankrupt's property for a considerable period, the corporation is not to be considered as a mere trespass-

Bankr. Rep. 300; Smith v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. (C. C.) 158 Fed. 365, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707. The trustee's recovery should be limited to the amount by which the assets of the estate have been depleted by the transaction complained of. Continental & Commercial Trust & Sav. Bank v. Breen & Kennedy, 188 Ill. App. 467. But chattel mortgagees who had wrongfully foreclosed cannot complain because the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy recovers a judgment for the value of the property which exceeds the claims filed in the court of bankruptcy, especially if the judgment provides that any surplus left after administering the bankrupt's estate shall be returned to the mortgagees. Simpson v. Combes, 107 Wash. 575, 182 Pac. 566.

[305] Barnard v. Davis, 54 Ala. 565.

[306] Skillin v. Maibrunn, 176 N. Y. 588, 68 N. E. 1124; Pfeiffer v. Roe, 108 App. Div. 54, 95 N. Y. Supp. 1014; Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615, 74 Pac. 303.

[307] Gray v. Chase, 184 Mass. 444, 68 N. E. 676.

[308] In re Denson (D. C.) 195 Fed. 854, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158. In a suit to recover property sold under execution within four months before bankruptcy, or its value, the value at the time of the execution sale should be adopted as the basis for the decree. Dreyer v. Kicklighter (D. C.) 228 Fed. 744, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199. Where the bankrupt spent his money in making improvements on the land of another, with the latter's consent, knowing that he did not retain sufficient property to satisfy his creditors, the lien of the trustee in bankruptcy on the land is merely for the increased value by reason of such improvements, and not for the amount actually expended. Garland v. Arrowood, 179 N. C. 697, 103 S. E. 2. Where a corporation never received any consideration for a note given to one of its directors, he is liable to the company's trustee in bankruptcy for the amount he has received on account of the note, with interest. Schmid v. Neuberger, 174 App. Div. 670, 160 N. Y. Supp. 701.

[309] Russell v. Powell, 38 Wash. 651, 80 Pac. 837.

[310] Shuman v. Fleckenstein, 4 Sawy. 174, 15 N. B. R. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 12,826. See Dunlop v. Thomas, 28 Wash. 521, 68 Pac. 909.

er, but is liable in an accounting for its acts under the lease for the net profits earned after allowance of expenditures other than taxes.[311]

In the case of a joint purchase, fraudulent and voidable under the bankruptcy act, each purchaser is liable for the full value of the property, although they were interested in different proportions.[312] But where the actual purchaser was only acting as agent for another, and surrendered the property to his principal, it would be error to make an order requiring the agent to turn over the property to the trustee.[313] So where the fraudulent transaction consisted of a sale of the bankrupt's property and application of the proceeds to the discharge of an unrecorded chattel mortgage, and the trustee's action is to set aside the sale, the court should not adjudge that the mortgage be canceled, the mortgagee not being a party to the suit, and the mortgage not being void to the extent that it evidenced a debt, though not a lien against subsequent creditors.[314] It should also be remarked in this connection that, as against the trustee in bankruptcy, the wife of the bankrupt is not barred or estopped to claim dower by reason of her having joined her husband in a deed which is fraudulent as to creditors, and which has for that reason been set aside at the instance of the trustee. When the deed is decreed to be fraudulent and void at the suit of the trustee, he cannot set it up to defeat the right of the wife to dower. "Such a position involves this inconsistency, viz., that it asks that the same instrument be held void as to creditors, and then, in their favor, held valid as to the wife." [315]

§ 468. Rights of Creditors in Property or Fund Recovered.—It is well settled that when the trustee in bankruptcy procures a fraudulent conveyance or transfer of property of the bankrupt to be set aside, and the property subjected to the payment of the provable debts in bankruptcy, this will inure to the benefit of all the creditors of the bankrupt having provable claims, including those whose claims accrued subsequent to the transfer, and not merely to the advantage of those who, as existing creditors, or holding judgment, would have been entitled to attack the conveyance at the time it was made.[316] Thus, a fraudu-

[311] In re Medina Quarry Co., 179 Fed. 929, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769.

[312] Schulenburg v. Kabureck, 2 Dill. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 12,487.

[313] In re Denson, 195 Fed. 854, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158.

[314] E. S. Bonnie & Co. v. Perry's Trustee, 117 Ky. 459, 78 S. W. 208.

[315] Cox v. Wilder, 2 Dill. 45, 7 N. B. R. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 3,308.

[316] Globe Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 236 U. S. 289, 35 Sup. Ct. 377, 59 L. Ed. 583, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162; Kehr v. Smith, 20 Wall. 31, 22 L. Ed. 313; Platt v. Mead, 9 Fed. 91; In re Lowe, 19 Fed. 589; Smith v. Kehr. 2 Dill. 50, 7 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 13,071; Pratt v. Curtis, 2 Low. 87, 6 N. B. R. 139, Fed. Cas. No. 11,375; White v. Jones, 6 N. B. R. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 17,550; Treseder v. Burger, 130 Wis. 201, 109 N. W. 957; Maffi v. Stephens, 49 Tex. Civ. App. 354, 108 S. W. 1008. See, also, In re Martin, 193 Fed. 841, 113 C. C. A. 627, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 545; Boyd v. Arnold, 103 Ark. 105, 146 S. W. 118; Allen v.

lent conveyance being good as between the parties to it, a judgment thereafter recovered does not attach as a lien on the property, and when it is vacated at the suit of the trustee, there is no superior equity, or right to prior satisfaction, in a creditor who holds a judgment.[317] So, a creditor's bill instituted subsequent to an adjudication in bankruptcy against the debtor, to set aside a chattel mortgage and a sale of a stock of merchandise, does not give rise to a lien in favor of the creditor filing the same on the goods sought to be reached.[318]

McMannes, 156 Fed. 615, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 276; Shaver v. Mowry, 262 Pa. 381, 105 Atl. 505; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420.

[317] Neal v. Foster, 36 Fed. 29; Wood v. Wright, 9 Biss. 365, 4 Fed. 511. See Pool v. Ragland, 57 Ala. 414.

[318] Moore-Schafer Shoe Mfg. Co. v. Billings, 46 Or. 401, 80 Pac. 422.

CHAPTER XXIV

SALES OF PROPERTY BY TRUSTEES

§ 469. Authority of Trustees and Orders of Court.—Before the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, the court has authority to order the sale of particular assets of the bankrupt if special circumstances render it necessary or desirable.[1] But when a trustee is appointed he becomes invested by operation of law with title to all the non-exempt property of the bankrupt and is charged with the duty of reducing the same to money. This applies to all property in the possession of the bankrupt when the proceedings were instituted.[2] Property salable by the trustee may thus include such diverse items as, for instance, a mining lease,[3] the equity or right of redemption in property of the bankrupt which has been sold on foreclosure,[4] and a right of action against a railroad for damages to property in transit.[5] Where a promissory note becomes the property of an estate in bankruptcy, it is said that title thereto cannot be passed in any other way than by a sale in bankruptcy.[6] The personal medical and surgical practice and good will of a bankrupt as a physician are not subject to sale by his trustee, although his proper-

[1] In re Hitchings, 4 N. B. R. 384, Fed. Cas. No. 6,542; In re Vila, Fed. Cas. No. 16,941. And see supra, § 217.

[2] In re Union Trust Co., 122 Fed. 937, 59 C. C. A. 461, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 767; Olitsky v. Estersohn, 90 N. J. Eq. 459, 108 Atl. 88; Gee v. Parks (Tex. Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 767.

[3] In re Barnhardt Coal & Limestone Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 385, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170.

[4] In re Ohio Copper Mining Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 490, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

[5] Southern Ry. Co. v. Avey, 173 Ky. 598, 191 S. W. 460.

[6] Segen v. Fabacher, 136 La. 568, 67 South. 369.

ty interest in a practice and good will purchased from another may be so sold.[7]

As it is the duty of the trustee to sell every right, title, interest, or claim of the bankrupt to which he can give a title, and for which he can find a purchaser, it is held that property conveyed in fraud of creditors more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy may be sold by the trustee, and the purchaser will take such title as the trustee may have had, together with the right to institute an action in his own name to set aside the fraudulent conveyance.[8] But this does not apply to the right to recover property transferred by the bankrupt as a preference, since it is the clear intention of the Bankruptcy Act that no one but the trustee can maintain such an action.[9] The trustee, however, may and should sell even contingent, uncertain, or litigated claims, if any one will pay a substantial price for them.[10] If he fails or refuses to sell available assets for the benefit of the creditors, he may be held personally responsible.[11] But the power of the trustee to sell and convey the bankrupt's estate is wholly statutory, and a sale otherwise than as the statute directs will not be valid.[12] If the sale is to be private instead of public, or if the property is incumbered with valid liens, the trustee must have an order of the court to authorize it, and if he proceeds without such an order, the sale is a nullity.[13] But except in these cases, he may and should proceed on his own responsibility, and no special order of court is necessary to enable him to give a good title.[14] General directions as to the conduct of bankruptcy sales are given in the statute and the general orders,[15] and the particular court of bankruptcy may make a standing rule or order prescribing when and how such sales are to be held, and in ordinary cases, the trustee needs no further or specific authority or direction.[16] It is otherwise, however, when the trustee has never gained possession of the property in question and the title is in litigation. If such property can be sold at all, it may only be done

[7] In re Myers, 208 Fed. 407, 125 C. C. A. 569, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24.

[8] In re Downing, 201 Fed. 93, 119 C. C. A. 431, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; Strong v. Durdle, 94 Wash. 157, 162 Pac. 6. Contra, Neuberger v. Felis, 203 Ala. 142, 82 South. 172.

[9] Lovell v. Latham & Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 374, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191.

[10] In re Gutterson (D. C.) 136 Fed. 698, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495. And see In re Crouse (D. C.) 196 Fed. 907, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540.

[11] In re Jackson, 2 N. B. R. 508, Fed. Cas. No. 7,127.

[12] Wisner v. Brown, 50 Mich. 553, 15 N. W. 901.

[13] In re Eden Musee American Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 925, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[14] In re La France Copper Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 207, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; Olitsky v. Estersohn, 90 N. J. Eq. 459, 108 Atl. 88; Hallyburton v. Slagle, 130 N. C. 482, 41 S. E. 877; In re White, 2 Ben. 85, Fed. Cas. No. 17,531; Curdy v. Stafford, 88 Tex. 120, 30 S. W. 551.

[15] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70b; General Order No. 18.

[16] Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Eno, 35 Fed. 89; In re La France Copper Co., 205 Fed. 207, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381.

under an order of the court of bankruptcy, made on the trustee's petition and after notice to the parties claiming adversely.[17]

If, for any reason, a special order of the court is sought and obtained for the sale, it should fix the time and place of the sale. It would be irregular and void for omitting these details,[18] but not because it does not fix an upset price for the property.[19] An order of this kind is administrative rather than judicial; it is not to be relied on as an adjudication that the property in question belonged to the bankrupt.[20] For the purpose of making such an order, the referee is the court and may exercise its full powers,[21] and the trustee's petition for authority to sell should be filed with the referee and not with the clerk of the court.[22] In the case of joint trustees, all should join in the petition. But in a case where the creditors irregularly elected two trustees instead of three, and the two so chosen presented a petition for authority to sell assets, and afterwards the creditors appointed a third trustee, it was held that the irregularity was cured by his joining in the petition.[23] The pendency of composition proceedings may prevent a sale of the bankrupt's assets, if all [17] See Shaw v. Lindsey, 60 Ala. 344; In re Ludwigson, 3 Woods, 13, Fed. Cas. No. 8,601; Knight v. Cheney, 5 N. B. R. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 7,883; Stanley v. Sutherland, 54 Ind. 339. A sale by the trustee of property of the bankrupt which has never come into his possession, but is in the possession of another claiming a lien thereon, though confirmed by the bankruptcy court, does not vest in the buyer the title and right to immediate possession necessary to maintain trover. American Bottle Co. v. Finney, 203 Ala. 92, 82 South. 106.

[18] Osborn v. Baxter, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 406.

[19] Schuler v. Hassinger, 177 Fed. 119, 100 C. C. A. 539, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184. Instead of directly ordering a sale, the court may direct the trustee to receive bids and submit them to the court with recommendations. In re Glas-Shipt Dairy Co., 239 Fed. 122, 152 C. C. A. 164, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554.

[20] Wilkins v. Tourtellott, 28 Kan. 825. But a sale of personal property by a trustee in bankruptcy, acting under an order of sale issued by the court, is a "judicial sale." Carney v. Averill, 110 Me. 172, 85 Atl. 494; American Bottle Co. v. Finney, 203 Ala. 92, 82 South. 106. In a proceeding by a trustee for an order authorizing the sale of real estate in his possession, the court of bankruptcy is without jurisdiction to cite into court a mortgagee of such land and adjudicate upon the validity of his mortgage, without his consent and over his objection. In re Henderson (D. C.) 206 Fed. 139, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468. But an adverse claimant of property, which is also claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy, has no standing to object to an order directing the trustee to sell his "right, title, and interest" in the property. In re Vanoscope Co., 244 Fed. 445, 157 C. C. A. 71, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70.

[21] In re Sanborn, 96 Fed. 551, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; In re Bank of North Carolina, 19 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 896; In re Styer, 98 Fed. 290, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424. But it is said (in the case last cited) that if the property is in the hands of a receiver at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, an order for its appraisement and sale can be made only by the judge sitting as the court of bankruptcy. An order for the sale of property of a bankrupt is none the less an order of court because signed by the judge. There is no practical distinction in a court of bankruptcy between an order of the judge and an order of the court, because the court in bankruptcy is always open, and whenever the judge acts, wherever he may be, the act is the act of the court. In re Mott, 6 Fed. 685.

[22] In re William F. Fisher & Co., 135 Fed. 223, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366.

[23] In re William F. Fisher & Co., 135 Fed. 223, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366.

nas been done that is necessary to make the composition effective.[24] But on the other hand, the sale is not void merely because it does not follow immediately after the order authorizing it, nor even because so long a period as six years is allowed to elapse.[25] But when the trustee once sells particular property at public auction, he divests himself of all title to it, and an attempted second sale thereafter is entirely void.[26] It remains to be added that where the bankrupt's assets include a stock of liquors, the trustee may sell them in bulk without being obliged to take out a license or pay a tax under either state or federal laws.[27]

§ 470. Sale of Incumbered Property.—Where the real estate of a bankrupt is incumbered by valid liens, the trustee may sell it either subject to the incumbrances or absolutely and free therefrom. But in the latter case, he must, before selling, obtain from the bankruptcy court an order for that purpose; and if he sells the property without such order, he can only sell it subject to the incumbrances, and the purchaser will take no better title than the bankrupt had; that is, he will take only the bankrupt's equity of redemption, or take the property subject to the liens.[28] And where property is thus sold subject to liens, by order of the court of bankruptcy, it passes out of its jurisdiction, and the state courts may then proceed to enforce the liens,[29] and by ordering and confirming a sale under a mortgage, the bankruptcy court exhausts its jurisdiction, so as to invalidate a subsequent sale under a purported vendor's lien.[30] If the trustee obtains an order for the sale of the property, but the order does not mention liens, it will be construed as only authorizing a sale subject to existing valid liens.[31] But the trustee may petition for and obtain an order directing the sale to be made subject to a

[24] In re William F. Fisher & Co., 135 Fed. 223, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366.

[25] Potter v. Martin, 122 Mich. 542, 81 N. W. 424.

[26] Townshend v. Thomson, 60 N. Y. Super. Ct. 454, 18 N. Y. Supp. 870.

[27] In re Becker, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 225. And see Wildermuth v. Cole, 77 Mich. 483, 43 N. W. 889; State v. Johnson, 33 N. H. 441; Gignoux v. Bilbruck, 63 N. H. 22; Williams v. Troop, 17 Wis. 463.

[28] See v. Rogers, 31 W. Va. 473, 7 S. E. 436; Ray v. Norseworthy, 23 Wall. 238, 23 L. Ed. 116; In re Mebane, 3 N. B. R. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 9,380; In re Addison, 3 Hughes, 430, Fed. Cas. No. 76; Boulware v. Hartsook's Adm'r, 83 Va. 679, 3 S. E. 289; King v. Bowman, 24 La. Ann. 506; In re McClellan, 1 N. B. R. 389, Fed. Cas. No. 8,694; In re Stewart, 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re States Printing Co., 241 Fed. 245, 154 C. C. A. 165, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722; Charak v. Durphee (D. C.) 252 Fed. 885, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 110; Kelly v. Minor, 252 Fed. 115, 164 C. C. A. 227, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275; In re Cutler & John (D. C.) 228 Fed. 771, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420. One buying property at a bankruptcy sale, subject to the lien of a mortgage thereon, does not thereby assume payment of the mortgage debt, but he becomes the owner of the property subject to the incumbrance. Kerman v. Leeper (Mo. App.) 157 S. W. 984.

[29] Beall v. Walker, 26 W. Va. 741.

[30] J. M. West Lumber Co. v. Lyon, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 648, 116 S. W. 652.

[31] In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; Ex parte City of Anderson, 82 S. C. 131, 63 S. E. 534.

certain specified lien or incumbrance,[32] or, vice versa, to be made free from a specified lien. In either case, the sale will not divest a superior lien not mentioned in the order and the holder of which was not made a party to the proceeding.[33] But if there is a direction to sell free from first or superior liens, the fact that inferior liens are not mentioned will not prevent their being divested in accordance with the ordinary rule governing judicial sales.[34]

Where other courts have taken full jurisdiction of property on which liens are asserted, the court of bankruptcy will not ordinarily interfere.[35] And where it is reasonably certain that the market value of the property does not exceed the amount of the valid liens upon it, it is not the duty of the trustee to petition for its sale, nor is it a proper exercise of the court's discretion to order it sold.[36] For such a course would result in no benefit to the general creditors, and would amount merely to putting through a sale for the benefit of the lien-holder, saving him the cost of foreclosure and making the expense fall unjustifiably upon the general estate.[37] In such a case, it is entirely proper for the court to order the surrender of the property to the lien creditor, if he will take it in satisfaction of his claim; if not, he should be allowed to foreclose on his own account.[38]

§ 471. Sale Free of Incumbrances.—The court of bankruptcy has power and authority to order the sale of any property of the bankrupt free and clear of all liens or incumbrances then resting upon it, transferring the liens to the fund realized by the sale, or rather, transforming the lien creditors' contractual right into an equity to claim satisfaction out of the proceeds of the sale.[39] But in order to do this, it is absolutely

[32] For form of petition and order for sale of property subject to liens, see Official Form No. 44.

[33] In re McGilton, 3 Biss. 144, 7 N. B. R. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 8,798; Cain v. Sheets, 77 Ala. 492; Bassett v. Thackara, 72 N. J. Law, 81, 60 Atl. 39. In a proceeding by a trustee for an order authorizing the sale of real estate in his possession, the bankruptcy court does not have jurisdiction to cite into court a mortgagee of such real estate and adjudicate upon the validity of his mortgage, without his consent or over his objection. In re Henderson, 206 Fed. 139.

[34] McKay v. Hamlll (C. C. A.) 185 Fed. 11, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164.

[35] In re Taliafero, 3 Hughes, 422, Fed. Cas. No. 13,736.

[36] In re Rose, 193 Fed. 815, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752; In re Foster, 181 Fed. 703, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96; In re Union Trust Co., 122 Fed. 937, 59 C. C. A. 461, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 767; In re Mebane, 3 N. B. R. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 9,380; In re Ludwigson, 3 Woods, 13, Fed. Cas. No. 8,601; In re Dillard, 2 Hughes, 190, 9 N. B. R. 8, Fed. Cas. No. 3,912; In re Hahnlen, Fed. Cas. No. 5,901; In re Bowie, 1 N. B. R. 628, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728.

[37] In re Cogley, 107 Fed. 73, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731.

[38] Equitable Loan & Security Co. v. R. L. Moss & Co., 125 Fla. 609, 60 C. C. A. 345, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; In re Rose, 193 Fed. 815, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752; In re Lausman, 183 Fed. 647, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186.

[39] Ray v. Norseworthy, 23 Wall. 128, 23 L. Ed. 116; In re Kohl-Hepp Brick Co., 176 Fed. 340, 100 C. C. A. 260, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; In re Loveland, 155 Fed. 838, 84 C. C. A. 72, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18; Sturgiss v. Corbin, 141 essential that each lien creditor whose rights may be affected should have personal notice of the trustee's application for an order directing the sale to be made in this manner, and be accorded an opportunity to present any objections he may have,[40] unless his conduct at or after the sale may be taken as a waiver of notice or acquiescence in the order of the court, as, where he was present at the sale and raised no objections,[41] or where he brings trover against the trustee for the conversion of the property sold.[42] The actual consent of the lien creditor to a sale of the property free of liens will of course obviate any possible question as to the jurisdiction and power of the court.[43] But jurisdiction is based upon the court's control over the estate in bankruptcy, and the consent of a creditor is not essential to the authority of the court to decide how the

Fed. 1, 72 C. C. A. 179, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543; In re Leslie-Judge Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 886, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; In re North Star Ice & Coal Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 301, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; In re West (D. C.) 232 Fed. 903, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Whiteside (D. C.) 230 Fed. 937, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 870; In re Progressive Wall Paper Corp. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 87, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508; In re Pittsburgh-Big Muddy Coal Co., 215 Fed. 703, 132 C. C. A. 81; In re Roger Brown & Co., 196 Fed. 758, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336; In re Trayna & Cohn, 195 Fed. 486, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; In re Shoe & Leather Reporter, 129 Fed. 588, 64 C. C. A. 156, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248; In re Torchia, 185 Fed. 576, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188; In re United States Graphite Co., 161 Fed. 583, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; In re Keet, 128 Fed. 651, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Prince & Walter, 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; In re Union Trust Co., 122 Fed. 937, 59 C. C. A. 461, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 767; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Pittelkow, 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Worland, 92 Fed. 893, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450; In re Mead, 58 Fed. 312; In re Kahley, 2 Biss. 383, 4 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 7,593; In re Kirtland, 10 Blatchf. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 7,851; Sutherland v. Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & I. Co., 9 N. B. R. 298, Fed. Cas. No. 13,643; In re Rhodes, 3 Pittsb. 340, Fed. Cas. No. 11,746; Giveen v. Smith, 1 Hask. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 5,467; In re Barrow, 1 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,057; Foster v. Ames, 1 Low. 313, 2 N. B. R. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 4,965; In re Columbian Metal Works, 3 N. B. R. 75, Fed. Cas. No. 3,039; Meeks v. Whatley, 48 Miss. 337, 10 N. B. R. 498; Blair v. Carter's Adm'r, 78 Va. 621; Toler v. Crowder, 127 Ark. 552, 192 S. W. 905. The power of a court of bankruptcy to order a sale of the bankrupt's property free from liens is not expressly conferred, but it is necessarily implied, since such a sale is often necessary to the due execution of the power and duty to reduce the assets to money and distribute it to creditors. Gantt v. Jones, 272 Fed. 117.

[40] Factors' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 4 Sup. Ct. 679, 28 L. Ed. 582; Ray v. Norseworthy, 23 Wall. 128, 23 L. Ed. 116; In re Kohl-Hepp Brick Co., 176 Fed. 340, 100 C. C. A. 260, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; In re Stewart, 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Saxton Furnace Co., 136 Fed. 697, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; Anonymous, Fed. Cas. No. 456; Ex parte Drewry, 2 Hughes, 435, Fed. Cas. No. 4,081; In re Taliafero, 3 Hughes, 422, Fed. Cas. No. 13,736; In re Major, 2 Hughes, 215, Fed. Cas. No. 8,981; In re Rowland, 2 Hughes, 210, Fed. Cas. No. 12,096; Murphy v. Factors' & Traders'. Ins. Co., 33 La. Ann. 454; Meeks v. Whatley, 48 Miss. 337, 10 N. B. R. 498.

[41] Giveen v. Smith, 1 Hask. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 5,467.

[42] In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

[43] Chauncey v. Dyke Bros., 119 Fed. 1, 55 C. C. A. 579, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Caldwell, 178 Fed. 377, 24

property shall be sold.[44] The mortgagee or other lienor must indeed have notice and a hearing, but he may be brought in by a rule to show cause,[45] and while the court will give due weight to any objections which he may interpose, it is not constrained by them. In other words, the mere fact that a lien creditor objects is not enough to prevent the court from ordering a sale free of incumbrances, if that course shall appear best for the general interests of the estate.[46] So mortgaged chattels may be ordered sold free of liens notwithstanding the fact that the mortgagee has, by his contract, a right to the immediate possession of the goods and desires to avail himself of that right.[47]

When a sale is made under an order of this kind, the purchaser will take an entirely free and unincumbered title,[48] and it is entirely immaterial that the proceeds of the sale may not be sufficient to discharge the various liens on the property or even the senior lien alone.[49] Of course it is for the interest of the mortgagee or other creditor to attend the sale and bid enough to protect himself, or at least to see that the final bid is not less than what he considers the fair market value of the property. If an outsider becomes the purchaser, the rights of the mortgagee or other lienor are transferred to the fund arising from the sale, and as the lien is extinguished, it is not necessary for him to take any further steps in the way of continuing or renewing it.[50]

Am. Bankr. Rep. 495. Where a lienholder accepted service of the petition to sell the property free from liens, it amounted to a consent to that mode of sale. Gugel v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 239 Fed. 676, 152 C. C. A. 510, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160.

[44] In re Kronrot, 183 Fed. 653, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; In re Howard (D. C.) 207 Fed. 402, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

[45] In re E. A. Kinsey Co., 184 Fed. 694, 106 C. C. A. 648, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

[46] In re E. A. Kinsey Co., 184 Fed. 694, 106 C. C. A. 648, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; In re Howard, 207 Fed. 402.

[47] Foster v. Ames, 1 Low. 313, 2 N. B. R. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 4,965. And a clause in a mortgage securing bonds, giving the holders the right to bid on their bonds at any foreclosure sale, does not in any way limit the power of a court of bankruptcy to sell the property free from liens. In re Franklin Brewing Co., 249 Fed. 333, 161 C. C. A. 341, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[48] Ray v. Norseworthy, 23 Wall. 128, 23 L. Ed. 116. A sale of a bankrupt's mortgaged property free from liens under an order of the bankruptcy court gives the purchaser the same title as if the sale were made in any other court of equity to foreclose the mortgage or marshal the assets of an insolvent, and his title is good against the privies of the mortgagor and mortgagee, including the wife of the mortgagor when she has renounced her dower. Gantt v. Jones (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 117, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351. Since in bankruptcy the court can order the sale of the property free from incumbrances, where the mortgagee consents to such sale his lien on the land is wiped out, and no release of the mortgage (as provided in the state statute) is necessary to pass the title. Toler v. Crowder, 127 Ark. 552, 192 S. W. 905.

[49] Houston v. City Bank of New Orleans, 6 How. 486, 12 L. Ed. 526; In re Sanborn (D. C.) 96 Fed. 551, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54.

[50] Gantt v. Jones (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 117, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Bradley (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 784; In re Plantations Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 273, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; Moran v. Schnugg, 7 Ben. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 9,786; Shinn v. Kemp & Hebert, 73 Wash. 254, 131 Pac. 822. Where the trustee in bankruptcy,

The power thus vested in the court of bankruptcy may be exercised by the referee. That is, the referee has authority, in the exercise of a judicial discretion, to order the sale of property free from liens, transferring the claims of lien creditors to the proceeds of sale, and to confirm the sale when made.[51]

But the court of bankruptcy will not order the trustee to sell property free of liens, unless satisfied that the interests of the general creditors will be advanced thereby, by the production of a fund available for their claims over and above the liens, and that the interests of creditors holding liens will not be injuriously affected.[52] The proper inquiry for both the trustee and the court is: On what terms will the property bring most for the creditors, subject to or discharged from the incumbrances upon it?[53] As illustrating the circumstances which may properly influence the court in deciding this question, we may mention a case where a portion of the bankrupt's property was subject to a valid attachment lien, and it appeared that the sale of the attached property by the sheriff would dismember the property and result in destroying its value, while a sale of the whole property by the bankrupt's trustee would enable the creditors to obtain a better price. Here it was held proper to order the sale free from liens.[54] So where, by a prompt sale of the bankrupt's assets, interest accruing on liens thereon and taxes would be saved, and the sale could be made by the trustee with less expense than by the sheriff on foreclosure of the liens, and a sale by the trustee would enable the estate to be settled promptly, without awaiting the outcome of an action by lien creditors to enforce their knowing the facts creating an equitable lien on property, sold the property and used the proceeds in paying costs of administration primarily chargeable against the general assets, a court of equity, following the maxim that equity will look upon that as done which ought to have been done, will follow the proceeds into the entire mass of the estate, giving the party injured by the unlawful diversion a priority of right over the other creditors. In re Plantations Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 273, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

[51] In re Miners' Brewing Co., 162 Fed. 327, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; In re Sanborn, 96 Fed. 551, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; In re Waterloo Organ Co., 118 Fed. 904, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

[52] In re Fayetteville Wagon-Wood & Lumber Co., 197 Fed. 180, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; In re Shaeffer, 105 Fed. 352, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248; In re Styer, 98 Fed. 290, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; In re Pittelkow, 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472. See Equitable Trust Co. v. Vanderbilt Realty Improvement Co., 155 App. Div. 723, 140 N. Y. Supp. 1008; In re Progressive Wall Paper Corp. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 87, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[53] In re National Iron Co., 10 Phila. (Pa.) 274, 8 N. B. R. 422, Fed. Cas. No. 10,045.

[54] In re United States Graphite Co., 161 Fed. 583, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573. The sale of personalty of a bankrupt separate from the realty, which together constituted and were used as a business plant and were mortgaged as such, thus destroying the business entity of the property, is erroneous. In re Franklin Brewing Co., 249 Fed. 333, 161 C. C. A. 341, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

liens, and the bankrupt's wife had quitclaimed her dower in the property to the trustee, these facts were held sufficient to move the court to exercise its discretion to order an immediate sale of the assets free from the liens.[55]

§ 472. What Interests Not Divested.—Since a trustee in bankruptcy can sell no more than the bankrupt himself owned, a sale of real estate by the trustee does not bar or extinguish an inchoate right of dower therein existing in the bankrupt's wife.[56] But as it is highly desirable to make the sale free from such dower right, as the property will ordinarily bring a much better price, the wife's consent to release her dower should be obtained if possible, and in that case she may be compensated by a fair allowance out of the proceeds of the sale.[57] For reasons of another kind, it has generally been held that the liens of state and municipal taxes are not divested by a bankruptcy sale, even though ordered to be made free of all incumbrances,[58] unless, perhaps, as suggested in one of the cases, the revenue officer or other proper representative of the state is made a party to the trustee's application for an order of sale.[59] But in a case where the court of bankruptcy ordered the sale of real estate subject only to a first mortgage thereon, it was held that all other liens were divested, including a lien for taxes, and this,

[55] In re Keet, 128 Fed. 651, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117.

[56] Porter v. Lazear, 109 U. S. 84, 3 Sup. Ct. 58, 27 L. Ed. 865; In re Shaeffer, 105 Fed. 352, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248; In re Hays (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 674, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; In re Angier, 4 N. B. R. 619, Fed. Cas. No. 388; Dwyer v. Garlough, 31 Ohio St. 158; Kelso's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 7; Lazear v. Porter, 87 Pa. St. 513, 30 Am. Rep. 380; Worcester v. Clark, 2 Grant (Pa.) 84; Cooper v. Tabor, 8 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 341. See Baird v. Winstead, 123 N. C. 181, 31 S. E. 390; Kelly v. Minor, 252 Fed. 115, 164 C. C. A. 227; Haggett v. Jones, 111 Me. 348, 89 Atl. 140; Harlin v. American Trust Co., 67 Ind. App. 213, 119 N. E. 20. Under the law of Pennsylvania, this question is doubtful. There are some decisions holding that, since the 1910 amendment to the Bankruptcy Act, which gives to the trustee in bankruptcy the rights and status of a creditor holding a judgment or other lien, the land of a Pennsylvania bankrupt can be sold free from the dower rights of his wife, such rights under the state laws being subject to the claims of creditors. In re Kligerman (D. C.) 253 Fed. 778, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; In re Codori (D. C.) 207 Fed. 784, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453. But the decision in In re Chotiner (D. C.) 216 Fed. 916, is directly to the contrary.

[57] Savage v. Savage, 141 Fed. 346, 72 C. C. A. 494, 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 923, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599. And see In re Strauch (D. C.) 208 Fed. 842, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Carver v. Ward, 81 W. Va. 644, 95 S. E. 828. In a case where the bankrupt's wife had an inchoate dower interest in the surplus proceeds of his lands sold under foreclosure, it was directed that one-third of such surplus should be invested in government bonds, to be held by the clerk after settlement of the estate. In re Munford (D. C.) 255 Fed. 108, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

[58] In re Gerry, 112 Fed. 958, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Keller, 109 Fed. 131, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; Stokes v. State, 46 Ga. 412, 9 N. B. R. 191, 12 Am. Rep. 588. Compare In re New York & Philadelphia Package Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 219, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94.

[59] Meeks v. Whatley, 48 Miss. 337, 10 N. B. R. 498.

although a statute of the state provided that taxes should be a continuing lien on property notwithstanding a judicial sale of it, unless the proceeds of the sale were sufficient to pay them, where it further appeared that this statute was not enacted until after the creation of the first mortgage and that it was not retroactive.[60] There are some other exceptional cases in which outstanding interests in realty will not be divested by the sale. Thus, a person holding the legal title to lands, but bound under a deed of trust to account to third persons for specific interests therein, conveyed the same to his trustee in bankruptcy. No issues were framed or determined in the court of bankruptcy as between the trustee and such third persons, and at the trustee's sale, the bankrupt repurchased the lands. It was held that the sale did not divest the interests of the third persons, and that the bankrupt took the lands still burdened with the trust.[61] So, where certain realty was conveyed by an alleged fraudulent conveyance from husband to wife, and subsequently they jointly executed a mortgage thereon to a third party, it was held that the subsequent private sale in bankruptcy of the realty in question as the property of the husband could not discharge the land from the lien of the mortgage, since the mortgage was good under the wife's title, which would remain perfect until directly impeached by the husband's creditors.[62]

§ 473. Sale of Perishable Property.—Where property of a bankrupt is of a perishable nature and must be disposed of immediately in order to prevent its dissipation or loss, it may be ordered sold at any time after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, even before the adjudication,[63] or before the appointment of a trustee.[64] These cases, as well as the more ordinary cases of sales by trustees, are covered by the General Orders in bankruptcy, wherein it is provided that "upon petition by a bankrupt, creditor, receiver, or trustee, setting forth that a part or the whole of the bankrupt's estate is perishable, the nature and location of such perishable estate, and that there will be loss if the same is not sold immediately, the court, if satisfied of the facts stated and that the sale is required in the interest of the estate, may order the same to be sold, with or without notice to the creditors, and the proceeds to be deposited in court."[65] When the trustee has sold property as perishable, and his action is confirmed by the court on his petition, it is not necessary to state the grounds on which the property, taken as a whole, was

[60] In re Prince & Walter, 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675.

[61] Roby v. Colehour, 146 U. S. 153, 13 Sup. Ct. 47, 36 L. Ed. 922.

[62] Schwartz v. Kleber (Pa.) 7 Atl. 209.

[63] In re Kelly Dry-Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[64] Supra, § 217.

[65] General Order No. 18, par. 3. For form of petition and order for sale of considered to be in the nature of perishable property.[66] But the court has no power to order the sale of such property unless it is in the possession of the bankrupt or the trustee or of some officer of the court appointed to take charge of it, such as the marshal or a receiver.[67] An order authorizing the receiver of a bankrupt to sell perishable property consisting of produce in storage, "at public or private sale within his discretion, at current rates, without notice," will justify a sale in bulk of all the property in the hands of a warehouseman, after it has been offered in car load lots.[68] An order for the sale of perishable property is within the jurisdiction and authority of the referee in bankruptcy.[69]

§ 474. Land in Another District or State.—As the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy embraces all the property of the bankrupt wherever situate, it is not bound by state laws or state lines in ordering its sale. Thus, a state statute providing that lands taken in execution shall be sold in the county where the property is situated has no application to a proceeding in bankruptcy in a federal court, and a trustee in bankruptcy may conduct a sale of land in a county other than that in which the land lies.[70] So the fact that land of a bankrupt may be situated in a state beyond the federal district where the proceedings are pending is no obstacle to converting it into cash for the benefit of the estate. If the trustee has taken possession, it is within the custody of the court of bankruptcy, and the referee has jurisdiction to order its sale free from liens.[71] As to the place where the sale should be conducted, in the case of land in another state, it has been held that the trustee may hold the sale at the place where he would sell any chattel, that is, where the estate is being administered.[72] Generally, however, it would be more advantageous to sell the property where it lies. But when this is done, it is not necessary for the trustee to perishable property, see Official Form No. 46.

[66] Rogers v. Abbot, 206 Mass. 270, 92 N. E. 472, 138 Am. St. Rep. 394.

[67] In re Metzler, 1 Ben. 356, 1 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 9,512.

[68] In re Roberts, 166 Fed. 96, 92 C. A. 80, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573.

[69] This appears from Official Form No. 46, which is expressly prepared to be signed by the referee. And see In re Kelly Dry-Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. It was held otherwise under the act of 1867. See In re Graves, 2 Ben. 100, 1 N. B. R. 237, Fed. Cas. No. 5,709.

[70] James v. Koy (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 295. And the Act of Congress of March 3, 1893, requiring sales of land to be made on the property or at the courthouse in the county where the land lies, does not apply to sales in bankruptcy proceedings. In re Britannia Mining Co. (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 450, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re La France Copper Co., 205 Fed. 207, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381.

[71] In re Wilka, 131 Fed. 1004, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; Robertson v. Howard, 229 U. S. 254, 33 Sup. Ct. 854, 57 L. Ed. 1174, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611; T. E. Wells & Co. v. Sharp, 208 Fed. 393, 125 C. C. A. 609, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[72] Oakey v. Corry, 10 La. Ann. 502. And see In re Britannia Mining Co., 197 Fed. 459, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

go in person to the place of sale, in order to be present and superintend it, but he may employ an auctioneer to conduct the sale. It was so held in a case where the land to be sold was situated in Arizona, but the estate in bankruptcy was being administered in Massachusetts.[73]

§ 475. Notice.—The act provides that creditors shall have ten days' notice by mail (unless they waive notice in writing) of all proposed sales of the bankrupt's property.[74] This is in order that they may have an opportunity to appear and show cause against the proposed sale or against the time, place, or terms of sale.[75] But the courts incline to the opinion that the only requirements as to notice of bankruptcy sales which the courts are bound to regard are to be found in the bankruptcy act itself, and therefore that the act of Congress of March 3, 1893, requiring publication of notice of judicial sales once a week for four weeks, does not apply.[76] But when the time fixed by order for the sale has expired without the sale being held, notice to creditors and others interested must be given de novo before a new order of sale is made.[77] In addition to this, all holders of liens on the property and claimants of interests therein must be served with notice or process, which must affirmatively appear by the record, or the sale will be ineffectual to divest their liens or interests.[78] Under the former bankruptcy law it was held that the requirement of notice of the time and place of sale of the bankrupt's real estate was directory only, affecting the accountability of the trustee but not the title of a purchaser in good faith.[79] This may well be the case as to the notice required to be mailed to creditors. But it is otherwise as to adverse claimants and lien holders. Even such an one, however, may waive the objection of a want of notice; and he will be held to have done so where he is personally present at the sale and interposes no objection.[80] The notice for the sale should of course con-

[73] In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[74] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a (4).

[75] In re Vila, 5 Law Rep. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 16,941.

[76] Robertson v. Howard, 229 U. S. 254, 33 Sup. Ct. 854, 57 L. Ed. 1174, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611; In re Edes, 135 Fed. 595, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92. But see, contra, In re Britannia Mining Co., 197 Fed. 459, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

[77] Allgair v. William F. Fisher & Co., 143 Fed. 962, 75 C. C. A. 148, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278.

[78] Factors' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 4 Sup. Ct. 679, 28 L. Ed. 582; Ex parte Bryan, 2 Hughes, 273, 14 N. B. R. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 2,061; Moorman v. Arthur, 90 Va. 455, 18 S. E. 869; In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co, 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re Reading Hat Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 786, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 884; Pace v. Berry, 176 Ky. 61, 195 S. W. 131. And see supra, § 471. Notice to the trustee in a mortgage is enough to give jurisdiction over holders of the bonds secured. Equitable Trust Co. v. Vanderbilt Realty Improvement Co., 155 App. Div. 723, 140 N. Y. Supp. 1008. Stockholders of a bankrupt corporation are not entitled to this notice. In re Witherbee (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 896, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314.

[79] Crowley v. Hyde, 116 Mass. 589.

[80] Keyser v. Wessel, 128 Fed. 281, 62

tain such particulars, as to the description of the property to be sold, the time and place of sale, and the like, as are ordinarily required in notices of judicial sales or sales by executors or receivers. A notice in bankruptcy, serving in a double capacity, as a notice to creditors that application for a sale of property will be made, and as notice to bidders that they may attend and offer bids, though irregular, will not vitiate the sale, if it is shown that the notice was freely advertised, and it does not appear that further publicity would have produced a better bid.[81] It is also to be observed that, while the statute requires notice to be given to creditors of sales by trustees, it does not require notice to be given of sales by pledgees, and hence a trustee, while acting as receiver, is not chargeable for a sale of pledged collaterals under an order authorizing a public or private sale thereof, without notice to creditors.[82]

§ 476. Manner and Conduct of Sale.—The General Orders provide that "all sales shall be by public auction unless otherwise ordered by the court," but that "upon application to the court, and for good cause shown, the trustee may be authorized to sell any specified portion of the bankrupt's estate at private sale; in which case he shall keep an accurate account of each article sold, and the price received therefor, and to whom sold; which account he shall file at once with the referee."[83] By making this order the Supreme Court must be regarded as having construed the Bankruptcy Act in such a manner as that a court of bankruptcy or a referee has discretionary power to order a private sale of the bankrupt's property, with or without notice.[84] But authorization from the court is strictly necessary. A private sale made by the trustee without an order of the court allowing him so to sell is void.[85] As to the distinction between public and private sales, it is held that there is a "public" sale in bankruptcy, where all persons are permitted to bid, where bids are not held open except with the bidders' consent, and where notice inviting bids is publicly given, though the sale is not made by auction, and is combined with a meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt held for the purpose of enabling such creditors to vote on the acceptance of the bid

C. C. A. 650, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Caldwell, 178 Fed. 377, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495.

[81] In re Nevada-Utah Mines & Smelters Corp. 198 Fed. 497, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409.

[82] In re James Carothers & Co., 193 Fed. 687, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 921.

[83] General Order No. 18. For form of petition and order for sale of real estate at auction, see Official Form No. 42. For form of petition and order for private sale of property, see Official Form No. 45.

[84] In re Hawkins, 125 Fed. 633, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49; In re Edes, 135 Fed. 595, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re Gutterson, 136 Fed. Cas. 698, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495; In re Knox Automobile Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 569, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67.

[85] Reid v. Robrecht, 102 Cal. 520, 36 Pac. 875. Compare Curdy v. Stafford, 88 Tex. 120, 30 S. W. 551.

or bids made.[86] It is also a permissible method of conducting a sale in bankruptcy for the trustee, under an order of court, to invite sealed bids for specified property, to be accompanied by certified checks for a certain amount, such bids to be opened in the presence of the referee on a day and at an hour named, and the property to be awarded to the highest bidder, subject to confirmation by the court, upon the hearing and determination of objections, which are directed to be filed by a certain day and appointed to be heard on a designated other day.[87] A petition by the trustee to the bankruptcy court for an order authorizing a meeting of creditors, the object of the meeting being to enable the creditors to act upon any bid for certain property of the bankrupt which may be submitted at the meeting, is irregular, but yet is sufficient to authorize the referee to act upon it, and is sufficient notice that a sale is proposed.[88]

It is a rule applicable to trustees under deeds of trust and similar instruments that any sale of the property must be made by the trustee himself in person,[89] and that he must be present during the whole of the sale.[90] But there is no specific requirement in the bankruptcy act that sales shall be made personally by the trustee, and therefore it is held to be within the power and discretion of the court of bankruptcy to appoint commissioners to make a given sale,[91] or to appoint an auctioneer to sell property of a bankrupt's estate in advance of any particular occasion therefor.[92] The trustee may also employ an auctioneer to cry the sale, but only under the authority of the court.[93]

The time and place of the sale are generally to be fixed by the trustee. And here it should be remembered that it is his duty to sell the property of the estate to the best possible advantage, and to choose a time when there is a good market for the property, wherein he should exercise not only fidelity to his trust, but also good business judgment and sagacity. And if he sacrifices the property by selling at an improper or ill-chosen time, though his intentions were good, he will be liable for the deficiency [86] In re Nevada-Utah Mines & Smelters Corp., 198 Fed. 497, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409. On appeal in this case ([C. C. A.] 202 Fed. 126, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754), it was held that a sale made under an order passed at a meeting of creditors, according to a notice addressed to "creditors, stockholders, and other parties in interest," but not inviting the public to attend and bid, was a private sale, but was justified in the circumstances of the case.

[87] See In re Chandler (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 944, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89.

[88] In re Nevada-Utah Mines & Smelters Corp., 198 Fed. 497, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409.

[89] Fuller v. O'Neil, 69 Tex. 349, 6 S. W. 181, 5 Am. St. Rep. 59.

[90] Brickenkamp v. Rees, 69 Mo. 426.

[91] Sturgiss v. Corbin, 141 Fed. 1, 72 C. C. A. 179, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

[92] In re Benjamin, 136 Fed. 175, 69 C. C. A. 191, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 481.

[93] In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92; In re Pegues, 3 N. B. R. 80, Fed. Cas. No. 10,907.

in the proceeds of the sale.[94] Still, the object of the bankruptcy act is an expeditious settlement and distribution of the estate, and the trustee cannot keep the creditors waiting indefinitely in the hope that the property will eventually command a better price. It is his duty to sell the property with all reasonable promptness, unless all the creditors will consent to a delay.[95] But a mere mistake in judgment as to the proper place for the sale will not invalidate it, in the absence of fraud or collusion.[96] In pursuance of his duty to realize as much as possible for the creditors, it is also incumbent upon the trustee not to sell in bulk, but to divide the property into portions, if susceptible of division, and if it will thus command a higher price; if his failure to do this results in a sacrifice of the property, the sale will be set aside.[97] Anything like collusion or an attempt to stifle competition will of course invalidate the sale but this result does not follow because of a private arrangement between the attorney for the purchaser and the auctioneer that the bid of any other person should be raised $50 each time until a sign to stop was given.[98] The property should be sold to the highest bidder, and a "bid" means an offer by a purchaser to pay something to the trustee for the property purchased which the trustee may distribute among creditors.[99] The "highest bidder" is the one who makes the highest bid in good faith. For a trustee is not bound to accept every bid, and the court will always sustain him in refusing bids which would manifestly frustrate the very object and purpose of the sale.[100] And a bid which was not accepted will not give the bidder any standing to complain either of its rejection of a sale to another at a higher price.[101] Generally speaking, the trustee is bound to obtain the best possible price, under the conditions attending the sale, and will be held responsible for any negligence in failing to do so.[102]

[94] See Snyder's Adm'rs v. McComb's Ex'x, 39 Fed. 292; Melick v. Voorhees, 24 N. J. Eq. 305; Holbrook v. Coney, 25 Ill. 543.

[95] Hart v. Crane, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 37.

[96] Hills v. Alden, 2 Hask. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 6,507.

[97] In re Lloyd, 11 Fed. 586; Chesley v. Chesley, 49 Mo. 540; Smith v. Scholtz, 68 N. Y. 41. But a sale of a bankrupt's assets en masse, for a larger sum than was bid for the property in parcels, under the court's order of sale, will be held valid. In re Haywood Wagon Co., 219 Fed. 655, 135 C. C. A. 391, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618.

[98] In re Ketterer Mfg. Co., 156 Fed. 719, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638. And see In re Ohio Copper Mining Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 490, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

[99] In re J. B. & J. M. Cornell Co. (D. C.) 186 Fed. 859, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252. A sale through bankruptcy proceedings is a judicial sale, subject to the same rules as an auction; so that a bid may be withdrawn before the hammer falls. In re Glas-Shipt Dairy Co., 239 Fed. 122, 152 C. C. A. 164, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554. But see In re Lane Lumber Co., 207 Fed. 762, 125 C. C. A. 300, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

[100] Gray v. Veirs, 33 Md. 18.

[101] In re Chandler (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 944, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89. But see In re Williams, 197 Fed. 1, 116 C. C. A. 523, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

[102] In re Ryan, 6 N. B. R. 235, Fed. Cas. No. 12,182; In re Knott, Fed. Cas. No. 7,893; Hawkins v. Alston, 4 Ired. Eq. (39 N. C.) 137.

§ 477. Terms of Sale.—There is nothing in the bankruptcy act which specifically forbids the sale of a bankrupt's property by the trustee on credit. And under the act of 1867, it was held that a sale so made was not necessarily invalid for that reason alone.[103] But a trustee who sells on any other terms than immediate cash takes a serious responsibility, and one which he should not assume without the express permission of the court or the consent of all the creditors. At least, it has been held that if the trustee, without the sanction of the court, sells the effects of the estate on credit, taking the purchasers' notes for the price, and then is so dilatory or negligent in his efforts to collect the notes that he suffers them to become outlawed, he is personally responsible for the loss, whether the makers of the notes were originally responsible or not.[104] It is also a requirement of the statute that "all real and personal property belonging to bankrupt estates shall be appraised by three disinterested appraisers. Real and personal property shall, when practicable, be sold subject to the approval of the court; it shall not be sold otherwise than subject to the approval of the court for less than seventy-five per centum of its appraised value."[105] The appraisers should value the property at its fair market price, that is, the price which it might be expected to bring at a private sale in the ordinary course of business or in the ordinary methods of selling such property, and not at the price which it might be expected to bring at a forced sale. This is shown by the fact that the law does not require the property to bring its appraised value, but only provides that, if it is sold without the approval of the court, it must bring not less than three-fourths of that value.

§ 478. Who may purchase.—A referee in bankruptcy cannot, directly or indirectly, purchase any property of an estate in bankruptcy over which he has jurisdiction as a referee. This is expressly forbidden by the act, and moreover, it is made a criminal offense and conviction thereof vacates his office.[106] For similar reasons, one who has been employed in appraising the property cannot buy it, either directly or through the agency of an attorney.[107] Neither can the trustee himself

[103] Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 6 Sup. Ct. 155, 29 L. Ed. 467. Compare (as to sales by assignees for the benefit of creditors), Muller v. Norton, 132 U. S. 501, 10 Sup. Ct. 147, 33 L. Ed. 397; Schuler v. Israel, 27 Fed. 851; Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 398.

[104] In re Newcomb, 32 Fed. 826.

[105] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70b. And see supra, § 300. An appraisal made by persons appointed by the court will be presumed honest and accurate, and while the approval of the court is not necessary if the property is sold for as much as 75 per cent. of the appraised value, yet, if a less sum is bid, the court is bound to exercise its best discretion in the matter. In re American Beaver Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 599, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603.

[106] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39b, par. 3; Id., § 29c, par. 2.

[107] In re Frazin & Oppenheim, 181 Fed. 307, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

become the purchaser at his own sale. This is forbidden on principles of public policy.[108] Such a sale will be set aside; and though the trustee may not be required to lose the value of improvements made by him on the property after the sale, yet it is not enough to prevent a resale that he accounts for the value of the property at the time of the sale, if it largely appreciated thereafter.[109] Still, there may be exceptional circumstances in which it will be proper for the court to permit the trustee to become a bidder at his own sale. Thus in one case, where real estate came to the trustee incumbered with liens exceeding its value, the trustee himself being one of the judgment creditors, it was held competent for the court to grant him leave to proceed in a state court to sell the property on his judgment and to bid in his individual right at the sheriff's sale.[110] So a sale in bankruptcy is not voidable because one of the three trustees of the bankrupt was a stockholder and officer of a new corporation organized for the purpose of purchasing the bankrupt's property, when the creditors appointed him with full knowledge of this fact, and the new company was promoted by a reorganization committee of the bankrupt's creditors for the purchase of the property, and all the stockholders of the bankrupt corporation were given full opportunity to participate.[111] Where the subject of the sale was certain claims against the United States, and they were bought by a person who had formerly been the manager of the bankrupt corporation, and he had more knowledge of the merit of the claims and more confidence of ultimate success in collecting them than the creditors had, it was held that this did not require that the sale should be set aside, where there was no fraud or concealment, and the creditors had an opportunity to ascertain for themselves the situation in respect to the claims.[112] Where land of the bankrupt is sold subject to a mortgage, the mortgagee, not having proved his claim in the bankruptcy proceeding, may, like any other person, bid for the bankrupt's equity of redemption.[113] The wife of the bankrupt may become a purchaser at the sale, but she has the burden of showing that the purchase was not made with money furnished by the bankrupt.[114]

There is nothing to prevent the bankrupt himself from buying any portion of his former assets when offered for sale by his trustee, if he can pay the price either out of his exempt property or out of property acquired after the adjudication; and if he does so purchase, he will take [108] Citizens' Bank v. Ober, 1 Woods, 80, 13 N. B. R. 328, Fed. Cas. No. 2,731.

[109] In re Hawley, 117 Fed. 364, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 61.

[110] In re Carrier, 39 Fed. 193.

[111] In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[112] Bray v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 533, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

[113] In re Old Oregon Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 236 Fed. 804, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409.

[114] Woodford v. Rice (D. C.) 207 Fed. 473, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455.

a new title, embracing all the interest which the trustee had to convey.[115] So he may make the purchase through an attorney.[116] And it does not invalidate the sale that the successful bid was made by an attorney employed by the purchaser for that purpose and that the attorney had acted as counsel for the bankrupt and also for the trustee in rendering certain legal services required locally, where he had no connection with the bankruptcy proceedings.[117] Any collusive or fraudulent combination among creditors or other bidders will of course be ground for setting aside the sale.[118] But when the property of a bankrupt corporation is for sale, it is perfectly proper for the bondholders, stockholders, or officers to form a syndicate or a reorganization committee or a new corporation, for the purpose of bidding on the property and acquiring it if they can fairly, and if they make no attempt to stifle or exclude independent competition.[119]

§ 479. Rights and Liabilities of Purchasers.—The powers of a trustee in bankruptcy are in no sense judicial, and his acts bind only those whom he represents. In the sale of the bankrupt's estate, he acts only for the creditors who prove their claims, and in such matters he can conclude the rights of no one else.[120] And a purchaser at a bankruptcy sale must take notice that nothing is sold except the bankrupt's interest.[121] Thus, where the trustee sells land, the title to which was acquired by the bankrupt after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, [115] Hallyburton v. Slagle, 130 N. C. 482, 41 S. E. 877; Gates v. Fraser, 9 Ill. App. 624; Udall v. School District No. 4, 48 Vt. 588; Arnold v. Leonard, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 258.

[116] Beall v. Chatham, 100 Tex. 371, 99 S. W. 1116.

[117] In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[118] In re Troy Woolen Co., 8 Blatchf. 465, 4 N. B. R. 629, Fed. Cas. No. 14,201.

[119] In re Pittsburgh Dick Creek Mining Co., 197 Fed. 106, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; In re Prudential Outfitting Co. (D. C.) 250 Fed. 504, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621. Schuler v. Hassinger, 177 Fed. 119, 100 C. C. A. 539, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184. In the case last cited it was said: "That there should be a reorganization agreement for the purpose of buying in the property of the bankrupt corporation cannot be objected to. In fact it furnishes the only way that a large diversified property and plant like that of the S. Company can be sold and purchased without disastrous results to creditors and stockholders, and the creditors have every right to organize themselves for the purpose of protecting their interests. These are propositions that need neither argument nor authority to support. That the trustees should in good faith encourage and approve a plan which looked to the successful settlement and winding up of the bankruptcy estate, and which met with the approval of creditors and had the consent of all classes interested, was perfectly proper."

[120] Second Nat. Bank v. National State Bank of New Jersey, 10 Bush (Ky.) 367.

[121] Asheville Supply & Foundry Co. v. Machin, 150 N. C. 738, 64 S. E. 887. And see Whitman v. Cammack, 7 Rob. (La.) 361; Shesler v. Patton, 114 App. Div. 846, 100 N. Y. Supp. 286. Where a bankrupt constructed an addition to a leased building on leased ground, the question whether such building constituted a fixture, or whether it was removable, as against the landlord, by a purchaser at a sale of the bankrupt's assets, could not be determined in advance of a sale and an attempt to sever. In re Gorwood, 138 Fed. 844, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

the burden is on him and those who claim under him to show that the land equitably belonged to the bankrupt when the petition was filed.[122] Further, although a sale is ordered and confirmed by the court, this is not an adjudication that the property sold belonged to the estate of the bankrupt, but only that whatever title the bankrupt had to the property legally passed to the purchaser at the sale.[123] Further, it is a well-settled principle of law that there is no warranty in judicial sales and that the rule of caveat emptor applies to such sales with full force.[124] But a court of equity, in pursuance of justice, may set aside a sale made by a trustee in bankruptcy where it is shown that the purchaser has been innocently misled by the advertised notice of the sale.[125] But where the purchaser was expressly informed that the trustee was selling only such title as he possessed, and knew that such title was in litigation, and that the trustee assumed no personal responsibility and did not warrant the title or salability of the property, the purchaser cannot recover the money paid therefor, when it is subsequently determined that the trustee had no interest which he could convey.[126] In fact, it is the duty of an intending purchaser at such a sale to make an independent investigation of the nature and validity of the bankrupt's title, and to follow up all inquiries which are suggested by his discovery of doubtful or suspicious circumstances, otherwise he is in no position to ask aid or relief from the court.[127] But he is entitled to rely on an absolute compliance with the terms of the sale, and on the absolute fairness of an auction conducted under the order of the court.[128] He is not bound to see that every particular in the appointment and qualification of the trustee has been complied with.[129]

The purchaser becomes so far a party to the proceedings as to give the court of bankruptcy jurisdiction to make any and all orders necessary to compel him to complete his purchase.[130] And if he abandons his [122] Wilkins v. Tourtellott, 28 Kan. 825.

[123] Chellis v. Coble, 37 Kan. 558, 15 Pac. 505. Where a bankrupt has no title to land, a sale thereof by the trustee conveys no title as against persons not parties to the bankruptcy proceeding. Anderson v. Daugherty, 169 Ky. 308, 183 S. W. 545.

[124] A person purchasing the bankrupt's assets from the trustee is charged with knowledge of any lack of authority on the part of the trustee, and also of the fact that the sale must be approved. In re Eden Musee American Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 925, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111. Where the trustee sells property which never has been in his possession, the proceeds must stand for the benefit of one having a valid claim or lien upon it. Johnson v. American Smelting & Refining Co., 99 Neb. 633, 157 N. W. 337.

[125] Searcy v. McChord, 1 Fed. 261. And see In re Mott, 1 N. B. R. 223, Fed. Cas. No. 9,879; Carney v. Averill, 110 Me. 172, 85 Atl. 494.

[126] In re Frasin (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 343, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212; Taylor v Kimmerle, 232 Fed. 134, 146 C. C. A. 326, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 34.

[127] Webber v. Clark, 136 Ill. 256, 26 N. E. 360, 32 N. E. 748.

[128] In re Kronrot, 183 Fed. 653, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738.

[129] Zeigler v. Shomo, 78 Pa. St. 357.

[130] Where, after a sale in bankruptcy, but before its confirmation by the court, purchase, without any attempt to secure the property (transferable only on certain conditions) he will be liable for the loss on a resale.[131] So long as the proceedings are pending in the court of bankruptcy, as, on application to have the sale confirmed, the property is still within the control of that court, and it may give the purchaser what aid he may need.[132] But when the sale has been made, the proceeds received by the trustee, and the sale ratified by the court, it has no further jurisdiction over the property, and cannot interfere, by injunction or otherwise, to protect the purchaser against the assertion of adverse claims. He is thereafter left to himself, and must protect his own interests in any appropriate court, but cannot treat the bankruptcy court as a general warrantor of title.[133] As stated in one of the cases: "The court does not follow the property of the estates of bankrupts into the hands of purchasers, but only to the hands of purchasers. After they have once had the property, they must take care of it and of the possession of it." [134]

Where the property sold is a chose in action, the purchaser may of course sue on it, and it is sufficient evidence of the authority of the trustee in bankruptcy that he acted as such, without record evidence thereof.[135] And where a debt due to the bankrupt from a third person is sold, it cannot be offset by a debt due from the bankrupt to such third person which was acquired after the bankruptcy.[136] Where an equity of redemption is sold and a valid conveyance made, the purchaser may maintain a suit to redeem.[137] The special short statute of limitations contained in the bankruptcy act does not apply to actions by purchasers to recover property or collect debts bought by them.[138] the property is so seriously damaged by a flood as to become substantially worthless, the loss cannot be visited upon the purchaser; the court has a judicial discretion to exercise in the matter of confirming the sale, and it would be an abuse of such discretion to require the purchaser to bear the loss. In re Finks, 224 Fed. 92, 139 C. C. A. 648, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 749.

131 Snyder v. Bougher, 214 Pa. St. 453, 63 Atl. 893; In re Myers-Wolf Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 205 Fed. 289, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

132 Potter v. Martin, 122 Mich. 542, 81 N. W. 424.

133 Adams v. Crittenden, 17 Fed. 42; Briggs v. Stephens, 7 Law Rep. 281, Fed. Cas. No. 1,873; Henrie v. Henderson, 145 Fed. 316, 76 C. C. A. 196, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617.

134 In re Hale, 19 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 5,912. Assets of a bankrupt corporation having been sold to a reorganization committee, a court in a bankruptcy proceeding has no jurisdiction to control the rights to be given by such committee to stockholders of the old company in the reorganization. In re Witherbee, 202 Fed. 896, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314.

135 Arnold v. Leonard, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 258. See Breakstone v. Buffalo Foundry & Machine Co., 79 Misc. Rep. 496, 141 N. Y. Supp. 159; Jennings v. Whitney, 224 Mass. 138, 112 N. E. 655.

136 Judson v. Lathrop, 6 La. Ann. 587.

137 Davis v. Ives, 75 Conn. 611, 54 Atl. 922. But the right of a mortgagor (under a state statute) to redeem within two years after a foreclosure does not pass to a purchaser from his trustee in bankruptcy. Leith v. Galloway Coal Co., 189 Ala. 204, 66 South. 149.

138 Judson v. Lathrop, 6 La. Ann. 587.

§ 480. Nature and Extent of Title Conveyed.—A purchaser at a trustee's sale of the property of a bankrupt acquires no higher title or greater rights than the bankrupt himself had in the property sold.[139] Thus, a deed of land given on such a sale conveys only an interest in the surface of the land, when the bankrupt had previously conveyed by a recorded deed the coal and other minerals underlying it.[140] So, where the tenant of a building places fixtures therein, the purchaser of the same from his trustee in bankruptcy acquires only such right to remove the fixtures as the tenant may have had.[141] And one who buys land from a trustee in bankruptcy knowing that the bankrupt held the land in trust for another, though by a deed absolute in form, acquires no title on which he can maintain a writ of entry.[142] One who buys the bankrupt's interest in a contract for the conveyance of land to him has all the rights therein which the bankrupt would have had but for the bankruptcy.[143] And a sale by the trustee of land held in trust by the bankrupt to secure debts due to himself passes to the purchaser the debts secured as well as the legal estate in the land, and entitles him to possession until the debts are paid.[144] It is to be observed that the purchaser acquires whatever title the bankrupt had in the land at the time of the sale, and if the bankrupt acquired any better or different title from the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy to the time the sale was made, that title inures to the benefit of the purchaser.[145] But it is otherwise as to a title vesting in the bankrupt by devise after the sale.[146] It is also a general principle that a purchaser of property at a bankruptcy sale takes it subject to all the equities with which it was chargeable in the hands

[139] McKiernan v. Fletcher, 2 La. Ann. 438; Wallace v. Meeks, 99 Ark. 350, 138 S. W. 638; Watson v. Conrad, 38 W. Va. 536, 18 S. E. 744; Winter, Loeb & Co. v. Montgomery Cooperage Co., 169 Ala. 628, 53 South. 905; Noyes v. Willard, 1 Woods, 187, Fed. Cas. No. 10,374; Converse v. Sorley, 39 Tex. 515; Roberts v. W. H. Hughes Co., 86 Vt. 76, 83 Atl. 807; Osborn v. Mills, 20 Cal. App. 346, 128 Pac. 1009; Brown v. Brown, 172 Ky. 754, 189 S. W. 921; Bailey v. Anderson, 142 Ga. 11, 82 S. E. 290. The sale and conveyance by a trustee of a bankrupt, in which the only property described was real estate, does not pass title to a house standing on the property, which, to the knowledge of the purchaser, belonged to another person. Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church v. Vedder, 80 Misc. Rep. 541, 142 N. Y. Supp. 870. One purchasing a note at a bankruptcy sale after its maturity acquires only such title or interest as the bankrupt had, and the maker has the right to the same defenses against the purchaser that he would have if the trustee in bankruptcy were the plaintiff. Phillips v. Matthews, 205 Ala. 480, 88 South. 641.

[140] Catlin Coal Co. v. Lloyd, 180 Ill. 398, 54 N. E. 214, 72 Am. St. Rep. 216. And so also as to a mining lease. See Pittsburgh & West Virginia Gas Co. v. Ankrom, 83 W. Va. 81, 97 S. E. 593, 5 A. L. R. 1157.

[141] Jacob v. Kellogg, 56 Misc. Rep. 661, 107 N. Y. Supp. 713. See Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church v. Vedder, 80 Misc. Rep. 541, 142 N. Y. Supp. 870.

[142] Faxon v. Folvey, 110 Mass. 392.

[143] Harriman v. Tyndale, 184 Mass. 534, 69 N. E. 353.

[144] Green v. Green, 79 N. C. 343.

[145] McAlpine v. Tourtelotte, 24 Fed. 69.

[146] Wilson v. Dresser, 152 Ill. 387, 38 N. E. 888.

of the bankrupt.[147] And unless the court of bankruptcy orders the property sold free of incumbrances, the purchaser will take it subject to all valid and recorded liens, that is, he will take only the equity of redemption, and the holder of a mortgage or other lien may proceed to enforce it against such purchaser,[148] or, conversely, the purchaser will have the right to redeem from a mortgage or other lien or from a sale on foreclosure thereof.[149] But the purchaser will be protected against a prior unrecorded deed of the bankrupt if he has no notice of it and is not chargeable with knowledge of facts sufficient to put him on inquiry.[150] But an announcement made at the sale, concerning the existence of an unrecorded mortgage or deed, will charge the purchaser with notice.[151] And where the order of court directing the sale authorizes the trustee to sell only the right, title, and interest of the bankrupt in the property and to convey by a quitclaim deed, a purchaser who has actual notice of an agreement made by the bankrupt and binding him to pay certain royalties on mining operations conducted on the land to the former owner, the same constituting a covenant running with the land, will take subject to the same and not free from it.[152] But if a previous conveyance, transfer, or assignment of the property in question, made by the bankrupt, is voidable under the bankruptcy law as having been preferential or as made in fraud of creditors, the purchaser of the property at the trustee's sale of it will succeed to the trustee's right to vacate or annul such transfer or assignment, and may maintain an appropriate action to do so.[153]

147 Renick v. Dawson, 55 Tex. 102; Baker v. Vining, 30 Me. 121, 50 Am. Dec. 617; Anderson v. Miller, 7 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 586; Steadman v. Taylor, 77 N. C. 134; Consolidated Arizona Smelting Co. v. Hinchman, 212 Fed. 813, 129 C. C. A. 267.

148 In re Wylie, 153 Fed. 281, 82 C. C. A. 411, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 503; In re Allin, 12 Fed. 433; Bucknam v. Dunn, 2 Hask. 215, 16 N. B. R. 470, Fed. Cas. No. 2,096; In re Cooper, 16 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 3,190; Horkan v. Eason, 10 Ga. App. 236, 73 S. E. 352; Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556, 73 N. W. 977; Moore v. First Nat. Bank, 135 Ark. 369, 205 S. W. 902; Collier v. Seward & Roper, 116 Va. 377, 82 S. E. 100; Crouch v. Fahl, 63 Ind. App. 257, 113 N. E. 1009. One buying property at a bankruptcy sale subject to a mortgage thereon does not assume payment of the mortgage debt, but becomes owner of the property subject to the incumbrance. Kerman v. Leeper, 172 Mo. App. 286, 157 S. W. 984.

149 Greene v. Taylor, 132 U. S. 415, 10 Sup. Ct. 138, 33 L. Ed. 411.

150 Webber v. Clark, 136 Ill. 256, 26 N. E. 360, 32 N. E. 748; Holbrook v. Dickenson, 56 Ill. 497; Lynch v. Johnson, 170 N. C. 110, 86 S. E. 995.

151 Roberts v. W. H. Hughes Co., 86 Vt. 76, 83 Atl. 807.

152 Hinchman v. Consolidated Arizona Smelting Co., 198 Fed. 907, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893.

153 In re Downing (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 93, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; Bryan v. Madden, 79 App. Div. 636, 80 N. Y. Supp. 1131; s. c., 109 App. Div. 876, 90 N. Y. Supp. 465; Dwinel v. Perley, 32 Me. 197; Bartles v. Gibson, 17 Fed. 293; Hinton v. Williams, 170 N. C. 115, 86 S. E. 994; Finney v. Knapp Co., 145 Ga. 400, 89 S. E. 413. But see Annis v. Butterfield, 99 Me. 181, 58 Atl. 898; Belding-Hall Mfg. Co. v. Mercer & Ferdon Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 175 Fed. 335, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595.

Whatever title the purchaser takes, it is understood to be absolute and final, and not provisional or defeasible. The court has no power to deprive him of whatever rights he may acquire by his purchase, and therefore cannot grant leave to a creditor of the estate, or to any one else, to redeem from the sale on reimbursing the purchaser.[154] The latter will also be entitled to the rents and profits of real property purchased from the day of the sale, and not merely from the date of its confirmation.[155] But he cannot claim the bankrupt's right to any portion of the crops growing on the land and stipulated to be paid to him by way of rent.[156] Where the property sold consists of a going business, the purchaser will take it with the good will, if that was meant to be included in the sale,[157] and he may probably continue the business in the name of the former owner, a corporation,[158] or at least, he will have the right to advertise himself, by store signs or otherwise, as the "successor" of the bankrupt in the business.[159] Taxes due on the property at the time of the sale will of course be taken into account in fixing the price.[160] But taxes assessed after the sale, though before the payment of the balance of the purchase price and delivery of the deed must be paid by the purchaser, and he cannot claim reimbursement out of the funds of the estate, and this although the sale was made free of liens and incumbrances, since this applies only to such liens as existed at the date of the sale.[161]

[154] In re Novak, 111 Fed. 978, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[155] Hall v. Scovel, 10 N. B. R. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 5,945. As to application of rents on interest and principal of prior mortgage, see In re Ketterer Mfg. Co., 162 Fed. 583, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694.

[156] In re Bledsoe, 12 N. B. R. 402, Fed. Cas. No. 1,533. A parol agreement to plant, cultivate, and care for an orchard on the land of another, and to divide the net proceeds after the trees have come to bearing age, is a mere license, and does not pass under a sale of the licensee's property in bankruptcy. McFerren v. Deardorff, 69 Pa. Super. Ct. 154.

[157] James Van Dyk Co. v. F. V. Reilly Co., 73 Misc. Rep. 87, 130 N. Y. Supp. 755. The sale by a corporation's trustee in bankruptcy of the assets and property of its business, without its good will and trade marks, destroys both the good will and trade marks as things of value, and will preclude the trustee from thereafter selling them as property of the bankrupt, and if he attempts to do so, he may be restrained. In re Jaysee Corset Co., 201 Fed. 779, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856.

[158] S. F. Myers Co. v. Tuttle, 188 Fed. 532, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

[159] Freeman v. Freeman, 86 App. Div. 110, 83 N. Y. Supp. 478. See Hotel Claridge Co. v. George Rector, Inc., 164 App. Div. 185, 149 N. Y. Supp. 748.

[160] As to trustee's sale of land free from lien of taxes, see supra, § 472. The liability of a purchaser of the bankrupt's real estate for taxes thereon, constituting a lien under the law of the state, depends on the terms of the sale. In re Reading Hat Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 786, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 884. The purchaser at a bankruptcy sale of property on which a city had a lien for taxes takes it subject to the taxes, if the sale was not declared to be free of tax liens, and the city had no notice of the bankruptcy proceedings or that its claim was or would be adjudicated therein. Citizens' Savings Bank v. City of Paducah, 159 Ky. 583, 167 S. W. 870.

[161] In re Crowell (D. C.) 199 Fed. 659, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308. And see In re Reading Hat Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 357, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207.

Where certain personal property was not inventoried as an asset of the bankrupt's estate in the possession of the trustee, or as property to which the trustee claimed title, and was not mentioned in the appraisal nor in any transfer from the trustee, the purchaser of the bankrupt's property from the trustee acquired no legal title to that particular property.[162]

§ 481. Approval or Confirmation of Sale.—The statute directs that "real and personal property shall, when practicable, be sold subject to the approval of the court; it shall not be sold otherwise than subject to the approval of the court for less than seventy-five per centum of its appraised value."[163] This is construed to mean that any sale for which it is practicable to obtain the approval of the court of bankruptcy must be approved or confirmed, and that the sale passes no title until approved or confirmed, either expressly or impliedly.[164] And if the matter is drawn in question, a purchaser under a trustee's sale which was not approved by the court has the burden of proving that it was impracticable to make the sale subject to such approval.[165] The authority of the court in this respect may be exercised by the referee.[166] And since only the "approval" of the court is spoken of, it is not necessary that there should be a formal order confirming the sale in so many words. Thus, where, after an alleged unauthorized sale of the bankrupt's assets, the trustee applied for an order directing that the proceeds be delivered to him, which was duly entered by the court, this was held to constitute an affirmance of the sale.[167] But where the trustee makes a sale under order of the court and reports it for confirmation, the general rules governing judicial sales apply, and the validity of the title acquired depends upon the validity of the order of confirmation.[168] The creditors of the estate are not entitled to notice of an application for the confirmation of a sale.[169] But they may, it appears, offer objections to its confirmation if they have any substantial reasons for so doing. An unsuccessful bid-

[162] Ellis v. Feeney & Sheehan Building Co., 187 App. Div. 481, 176 N. Y. Supp. 61. And see Union Trading Co. v. Drach, 58 Colo. 550, 146 Pac. 767.

[163] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70b. Under the act of 1867, some of the courts of bankruptcy made a practice of not having trustees' sales reported to them for confirmation. See In re Alden, 16 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 151; In re Donnell, Fed. Cas. No. 3,986a.

[164] In re Shea, 126 Fed. 153, 61 C. C. A. 219, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207; Everett v. Selden & Wright, 127 La. 573, 53 South. 867. Compare James v. Koy (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 295.

[165] Davis v. Ives, 75 Conn. 611, 54 Atl. 922.

[166] In re American Beaver Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 599, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603: Davis v. Ives, 75 Conn. 611, 54 Atl. 922.

[167] Mason v. Wolkowich, 150 Fed. 699, 80 C. C. A. 435, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 765, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.

[168] J. M. West Lumber Co. v. Lyon, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 648, 116 S. W. 652.

[169] In re Nevada-Utah Mines & Smelters Corp., 198 Fed. 497, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409. Compare In re Peabody, 16 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 10,866.

der at the sale may object to confirmation, but not merely on the ground that he would have bid more if the property had been sold as a whole instead of separately. But the high bidder has a standing in court to urge the acceptance of his bid and the confirmation of the sale.[170] No case has been found in which the bankrupt himself was admitted to oppose the confirmation of a sale; but in one instance this right was given to the heirs of a deceased bankrupt (whose estate had proved to be solvent) on their objection that the land in question, which was in another state, had not been appraised, and was insufficiently advertised.[171]

As to the matters to be considered on such an application, the approval or disapproval of the sale rests very much in the discretion of the court,[172] and it may withhold its approval on account of mere inadequacy of price, without more;[173] it is not necessary that there should be fraud shown, or such gross inadequacy of price as to be proof of fraud.[174] Still it must be remembered that the purchaser at the sale has substantial rights, which are to receive the first consideration. The highest bidder at the sale, provided he is able and willing to comply with the terms of sale, is entitled to have his bid accepted and reported for confirmation, and to have the sale to him confirmed, if the sale was made on sufficient notice and for a fair price, and there appears to have been a compliance with all necessary and proper requirements for holding the sale, and honesty and fair dealing in the sale itself.[175] But the court may impose equitable terms or conditions upon the purchaser, as, for instance, by requiring him to give security for the payment of future rent on the sale of a leasehold interest.[176] An order of confirmation has [170] Jacobsohn v. Larkey, 245 Fed. 538, 157 C. C. A. 650, L. R. A. 1918C, 176, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563.

[171] In re Irvine (D. C.) 255 Fed. 168, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

[172] In re Sanborn, 96 Fed. 551, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54. Olitsky v. Estersohn, 90 N. J. Eq. 459, 108 Atl. 88.

[173] See In re Ohio Copper Mining Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 490, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; Bryant v. Charles L. Stockhausen Co. (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 921, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

[174] In re Groves, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 30; In re O'Fallon, 2 Dill. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 10,445. See In re Thompson, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 355. The court, in deciding whether or not to confirm or approve a sale, where the only question is whether the price offered is the best that could be obtained, should consider what is for the benefit of the creditors in general, and may properly be influenced by their wishes, if a large majority concur in their views. See In re Peerless Finishing Co., 199 Fed. 350, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429.

[175] In re Williams, 197 Fed. 1, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258; In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92; In re Throckmorton, 149 Fed. 145, 79 C. C. A. 15, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; In re Ewing, 16 Fed. 753; In re Kronrot, 183 Fed. 653, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738. Where the high bid at a bankruptcy sale does not amount to 75 per cent. of the appraised value, the bidder does not acquire an equitable title to the property. In re American Beaver Co. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 599, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603.

[176] In re Varley & Bauman Clothing Co., 188 Fed. 761, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104. Where the referee, as part of a composition plan, sold property of a bankrupt, and confirmation of the sale was conditioned upon confirmation of the offer of composition by the court, the the effect of a judgment and may raise an estoppel against parties whose rights were before the court,[177] but it is not a ratification of any act of the trustee done in excess of his authority, where it does not appear that the excess of power exercised was brought to the knowledge of the court.[178] The order of confirmation relates back to the date of the sale, so as to invest the purchaser with the character of an owner from the day of his purchase.[179]

§ 482. Payment or Recovery of Purchase Money.—The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction and power to enforce in a summary manner the completion of the contract of sale, and to compel the purchaser to pay the stipulated price, which may also include interest if there has been unreasonable delay.[180] On the other hand, the purchaser may be entitled to a deduction or refund of part of the purchase money on account of a shortage in the quantity of the property sold.[181] And he may even be entitled to be excused from paying any part of the price, or to a restoration of what he may have paid, when it proves impossible for the trustee to make a title.[182] An order for a sale in bankruptcy may properly contain a provision that, in case of a purchase by a lien creditor, he may have credit on the price for such portion thereof as would otherwise accrue to him by reason of his lien.[183] And on the same principle, where property incumbered by a mortgage securing an issue of sale is null and void, where the offer of composition is rejected. In re Kligerman (D. C.) 253 Fed. 778, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670.

177 Blood v. Munn, 155 Cal. 228, 100 Pac. 694.

178 In re McGilton, 3 Biss. 144, 7 N. B. R. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 8,798.

179 Lathrop v. Nelson, 4 Dill. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 8,111. A contract of sale made between the court as the vendor of property through the agency of a trustee, and the purchaser, is not regarded as consummated until it has received the sanction and ratification of the court. If the purchaser has not assumed the responsibility of protecting the property, by taking possession of it, any loss that may be sustained by its injury or deterioration, in the interval between the sale and final ratification, falls upon the vendor. Still it gives to the purchaser an inchoate and equitable title, which becomes complete by the ratification of the court. The ratification retroacts, and the purchaser is regarded, by relation, as the owner from the period of sale. He is entitled to the intermediate rents and profits; he cannot escape from the sale because disadvantageous; and he is bound to pay interest on the purchase money from its date. Wagner v. Cohen, 6 Gill (Md.) 97, 46 Am. Dec. 660. And see In re Finks, 224 Fed. 92, 139 C. C. A. 648, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 749.

180 Mason v. Wolkowich, 150 Fed. 699, 80 C. C. A. 435, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 765, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709; In re Myers-Wolf Mfg. Co., 205 Fed. 289, 123 C. C. A. 441, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

181 In re Drumgoole, 140 Fed. 208, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261. See Owens v. Bruce, 109 Fed. 72, 48 C. C. A. 239, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 322. And see In re McCann (D. C.) 250 Fed. 1006, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

182 In re Caponigri, 210 Fed. 897, 127 C. C. A. 466, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158. In re Miller (D. C.) 171 Fed. 263; In re Comer & Co. (D. C.) 171 Fed. 261.

183 Clark Hardware Co. v. Sauve, 220 Fed. 102, 136 C. C. A. 194, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674. And see Baker Motor Vehicle Co. v. Hunter, 238 Fed. 894, 152 C. C. A. 28, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

bonds is sold in bankruptcy, the holders of bonds, if they become the purchasers, must be permitted to use their bonds in paying the purchase price.[184] But this does not apply where the bonds are void under the constitution of the state.[185] And the court will not ratify a sale where the bondholders of the bankrupt corporation, who do not include all of its creditors, propose to take over its property and assets, by transfer to a new corporation, and to pay the non-included creditors only a percentage of their claims or else give them obligations of the new corporation, for the court has no power thus arbitrarily to preclude the claims of the non-assenting creditors.[186]

§ 483. Conveyance and Delivery.—In the case of sales of real property of an estate in bankruptcy, the statute directs that the title "shall be conveyed to the purchaser by the trustee."[187] The deed should be made in exact accordance with the directions of the court, but an error in this respect will be cured by an order confirming the deed.[188] It should be executed by the trustee in his official capacity, as by describing himself as "trustee in bankruptcy,"[189] but need not contain a recital of the order of the court of bankruptcy authorizing the sale to be

[184] In re Fayetteville Wagon-Wood & Lumber Co., 197 Fed. 180, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307; In re Saxton Furnace Co., 136 Fed. 697, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; In re Waterloo Organ Co., 118 Fed. 904, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; Schuler v. Hassinger, 177 Fed. 119, 100 C. C. A. 539, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184. In the case last cited it was said: "The proposition that the terms of sale were unequal and unfair, and competition was thereby stifled, is based upon the fact that the purchaser was permitted, by the terms of the order of sale, to turn in, in payment of the price, admitted securities [bonds of the bankrupt corporation], the argument being that the holders of securities could buy without paying cash, while an outsider would be compelled to pay cash. The contention in this case seems to disregard the general rule which prevails in all foreclosure and execution sales, wherein it is not deemed proper and necessary to require purchasers to put up cash with one hand to take it down with the other."

[185] In re Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 153 Fed. 787.

[186] In re J. B. & J. M. Cornell Co., 186 Fed. 859, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252.

[187] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70c. Where there is a valid sale, under which the price has been paid, the mere failure to deliver a deed will not authorize a resale. In re King, 3 Fed. 839. Under the act of 1867, it was held that the cost of making and acknowledging the deed must be borne by the purchaser. In re Davenport, 3 N. B. R. 77, Fed. Cas. No. 3,587; In re Tulley, 3 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 14,235. The present statute, however, casts upon the trustee the duty of conveying the title, and would authorize the cost of a deed to be included in his account of expenses incurred in administering the estate. But undoubtedly it would be competent for the court (as is often done in foreclosure sales) to order that "conveyancing shall be at purchaser's cost."

[188] Harman v. Stearns, 95 Va. 58, 27 S. E. 601.

[189] Coryell v. Klehm, 157 Ill. 462, 41 N. E. 864. An individual deed by a trustee in bankruptcy of property held in his official capacity, after the title had revested in the bankrupt, is ineffective for any purpose. Calligan v. Calligan, 259 Ill. 52, 102 N. E. 247. Where a deed by a trustee in bankruptcy is relied on in an action against strangers, preliminary proof of the trustee's title and his authority to make the sale is necessary. Brown v. White, 153 Ky. 452, 156 S.

private,[190] and will be sufficient to pass title although not sealed.[191] It should, however, be acknowledged before a competent officer,[192] and should contain a sufficient description of the property to identify it with reasonable certainty.[193] It should run to the purchaser at the sale, unless he directs it to be made out in the name of some other person,[194] and a state court has no jurisdiction to enjoin the execution of a deed to the purchaser, on a bill filed by one claiming to be jointly interested with him in the purchase of the property.[195] In the absence of specific covenants of title, they are not to be read into a trustee's deed by implication.[196] And the duty of the trustee to the purchaser ceases upon the delivery of a good and sufficient deed. Thus, a bankrupt in possession of realty at the time of its sale by his trustee, who thereafter agrees with the purchaser to vacate on a certain day, holds as a tenant under the purchaser, and a petition will not lie by the trustee in bankruptcy for delivery of possession.[197]

In case of the sale of personal property, the duty of the trustee is to deliver it to the purchaser. But it is said that his authority as trustee ceases when he has sold the property, and his subsequent failure to make delivery is a personal, and not an official, breach of duty.[198] On his refusal to deliver, the purchaser may maintain trover against him in a state court, to which action, however, an order of the court of bankruptcy setting aside the sale would be a complete defense.[199] In the case of intangible property or choses in action, delivery to the purchaser will include whatever is necessary to make his title clear and his ownership effective, as, for instance, a written assignment of a mortgage which was the subject of the sale.[200] But on the sale of a negotiable note by a trustee in bankruptcy, after its indorsement by the payee, or where it was payable to bearer, it is not necessary in order to pass title that the trustee should indorse the note, mere delivery being sufficient.[201] An assignment by a trustee in bankruptcy in pursuance of an order of sale of the bankrupt's bills receivable includes a debt due

W. 96. But see, as to aiding the trustee's deed by presumptions after a great lapse of time, Lacey v. Southern Mineral Land Co. (Ala.) 60 South. 283.

190 Ryder v. Rush, 102 Ill. 338.

191 Westfeldt v. Adams, 131 N. C. 379, 42 S. E. 823.

192 Harris v. Pratt, 37 Kan. 316, 15 Pac. 216.

193 James v. Koy (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 295.

194 Wilson v. Winslow, 145 Mass. 339, 14 N. E. 103. And see Olitsky v. Estersohn, 90 N. J. Eq. 459, 108 Atl. 88.

195 Henderson v. Henrie, 61 W. Va. 183, 56 S. E. 369, 11 Ann. Cas. 741.

196 Clark v. Post, 113 N. Y. 17, 20 N. E. 573.

197 In re Hale, 19 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 5,912.

198 Sheldon v. Rounds, 40 Mich. 425.

199 Ives v. Tregent, 29 Mich. 390, 14 N. B. R. 60.

200 In re Franklin Sav. Fund Soc., Fed. Cas. No. 5,059.

201 Wade v. Elliott, 11 Ga. App. 646, 75 S. E. 989; Arnold v. Leonard, 12 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 258.

to the bankrupt for goods sold, although the debt, without the knowledge of the trustee or the purchaser, had been previously reduced to judgment.[202]

§ 484. Application of Proceeds.—Out of the proceeds of a trustee's sale are to be paid first the costs and expenses of the sale,[203] and then any proper expenses incurred in caring for the property or putting it in condition to be sold, such as premiums for insurance,[204] and the value of improvements put upon the property by a purchaser at a former sale which was set aside.[205] Where the property is incumbered by a valid mortgage or other lien, it is wrong practice to charge the mortgagee with a proportionate part of the costs and expenses of the sale, but these should first be paid out of the proceeds, and then the mortgage creditor should be paid in full if the fund is sufficient for that purpose.[206] But the commissions of the trustee and referee do not outrank the mortgage debt, in case of a deficiency. That is, if the proceeds of sale are no more than sufficient to pay the mortgage, the holder of it is entitled to the full amount without deduction for such commissions, at least if there is any general fund of the estate against which they can be charged,[207] except, perhaps, in cases where the mortgagee himself petitioned for the sale or knew of it and made no objection.[208] But

202 Rogers v. Abbot, 206 Mass. 270, 92 N. E. 472, 138 Am. St. Rep. 394.

203 In re Utt, 105 Fed. 754, 45 C. C. A. 32, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; Arnold v. Greene Gold-Silver Co., 68 Misc. Rep. 449, 125 N. Y. Supp. 29; In re Johnston, Fed. Cas. No. 7,424; In re Whitehead, 2 N. B. R. 599, Fed. Cas. No. 17,562; In re Johnson (D. C.) 224 Fed. 180. Counsel for the trustee may be allowed a fee as a charge against the fund arising from a sale of real estate in which both the bankrupt and the estate of an insolvent decedent held an interest, where his services were for the benefit of both classes of creditors. In re Tietje (D. C.) 263 Fed. 917, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

204 In re Prince & Walter, 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675.

205 In re William F. Fisher & Co., 148 Fed. 907, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404.

206 In re Sanderlin, 109 Fed. 857, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; McNair v. McIntyre, 113 Fed. 113, 51 C. C. A. 89, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638. But see In re Howard, 207 Fed. 402. Only those fees, charges, and expenses necessary for the preservation of the property and the foreclosure of the lien may be charged against the fund realized from the sale, without the consent of a lienholder, of a bankrupt's property subject to the lien, the sale having been made free from liens. In re New York & Philadelphia Package Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 219, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94.

207 In re Harralson, 179 Fed. 490, 103 C. C. A. 70, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Stewart, 193 Fed. 791, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Blue Ridge R. Co., 2 Hughes, 224, 13 N. B. R. 315, Fed. Cas. No. 1,570. The necessary expenses of the sale should be allowed, but not the expenses of administration in the bankruptcy court. The court cannot sell mortgaged premises free of the lien and use the proceeds in paying the expenses of administration, but may ascertain the amount actually due and make proper allowances for the expense of so doing. In re Howard (D. C.) 207 Fed. 402, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

208 In re Torchia, 188 Fed. 207, 110 C. C. A. 248, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579; In re Chambersburg Silk Mfg. Co., 190 Fed. 411, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

where a first mortgage lien on the property is paid in full, not only the costs of sales but also commissions of officers may be satisfied out of the balance before any distribution to holders of valid but inferior liens, on the principle that the expenses of creating a fund are to be paid out of it.[209]

If the sale was made subject to incumbrances, the holder of a lien remains undisturbed in the possession of his security, but he cannot claim payment out of the proceeds of the sale.[210] On the other hand, if the sale was ordered to be made free of incumbrances, the liens of mortgagees and other secured creditors are transferred to the fund arising from the sale.[211] And this will apply to a creditor whose lien expired by limitation between the making of the order for sale and the actual sale; for a conversion will be regarded as having been made at the time of the order for the sale, and therefore whatever claim was a lien on the land when the order was made will be entitled to share in the proceeds.[212] A creditor whose lien is thus transferred is entitled to priority of payment out of the proceeds of the sale to the full amount of his debt.[213] And if the fund is sufficient for the purpose, he will also be entitled to interest on his claim up to the day of the sale,[214] and to reimbursement for money paid by him for insurance on the property, if that expenditure was authorized by the mortgage,[215] and a reasonable fee to his attorney for services rendered in connection with the sale and the distribution of the proceeds, but not necessarily the full ten per cent. stipulated for in the mortgage.[216] The order of liens is not displaced by a sale in bankruptcy, and if there are several liens on the property sold, they are transferred to the proceeds of the sale in the same relative rank and priority and are to be paid accordingly, so far as the fund will suffice.[217]

[209] In re Torchia, 185 Fed. 576, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188.

[210] In re Gerry, 112 Fed. 957, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

[211] In re Randolph, 187 Fed. 186, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; McKay v. Hamill, 185 Fed. 11, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164; Goodnough Mercantile & Stock Co. v. Galloway, 171 Fed. 940, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 803; In re Vogt, 163 Fed. 551, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457; In re Bourlier Cornice & Roofing Co., 133 Fed. 958, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 585; Crampton v. Massie, 236 Fed. 900, 150 C. C. A. 162.

[212] Davis v. Stitzer, 19 N. B. R. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 3,654.

[213] In re Lausman, 183 Fed. 647, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Stevens, 173 Fed. 842, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; In re Oconee Milling Co., 109 Fed. 886, 48 C. C. A. 703; In re Mebane, 3 N. B. R. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 9,380.

[214] In re Stevens, 173 Fed. 842, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239; In re Fabacher, 193 Fed. 556, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534; Coder v. Arts, 152 Fed. 943, 82 C. C. A. 91, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; In re Devore, 16 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 3,847; In re Hershberger (D. C.) 208 Fed. 94, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[215] In re Fabacher, 193 Fed. 556, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534.

[216] In re Fabacher, 193 Fed. 556, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534.

[217] In re Bartenbach, 11 N. B. R. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 1,068; In re Worland, 92

Where claimants have liens on separate portions of the property, all of which is sold as a whole for a lump sum, it is the duty of the referee to apportion the proceeds among such claimants, and in so doing, if he has no other evidence on which to decide, he may properly fix the value of the various portions in accordance with the bids made previously for portions of the property when offered separately.[218] But where property is sold as an entirety and for a lump sum, only part of which is subject to a valid lien, and it would be impossible to determine with any accuracy how much of the price was given in consideration of the incumbered portion, there cannot be an apportionment of the gross price, so as to entitle the lien-holder to a preference to the extent of his claim, at least where he permitted the sale to be made in that manner and did not insist on a sale in portions.[219] But it seems that he may save his rights by a timely objection and by procuring a reservation of them in the order for sale, in which case it becomes the duty of the referee to recognize and enforce such rights, taking evidence, if necessary, to determine as nearly as possible what portion of the proceeds of the sale represented the property covered by the lien.[220] But all that has been said above applies only in the case of liens which are recognized as valid and binding by the laws of the state and are otherwise free from defect or infirmity. There can, for example, be no claim to priority of payment out of the proceeds of a bankruptcy sale in favor of one who asserts a vendor's lien on the property when the law of the state does not recognize any lien existing in an unpaid vendor apart from his legal estate in the land,[221] nor in favor of the holder of a mechanic's lien which is defective on its face,[222] or the holder of a mortgage on the bankrupt's liquor license, when the pledging of such property is discountenanced by the local law as contrary to public policy.[223]

Fed. 893, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450. And see Chauncey v. Dyke Bros., 119 Fed. 1, 55 C. C. A. 579, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re Cullen, 176 Fed. 463, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793; In re Jamison Bros. & Co., 209 Fed. 541, 126 C. C. A. 363, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 972.

218 In re Benz, 218 Fed. 50, 134 C. C. A. 26, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363.

219 Keyser v. Wessel, 128 Fed. 281, 62 C. C. A. 650, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Smith, 123 Fed. 188, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; Vollmer v. McFadgen (C. C. A.) 161 Fed. 914, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; In re Gerry, 112 Fed. 957, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; In re Klapholz, 113 Fed. 1002, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703. And see In re James Carothers & Co., 182 Fed. 501; First Savings & Banking Co., v. Kilmer (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 497, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 366; In re B. A. Lockwood Grain Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 873, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640.

220 George Carroll & Bro. Co. v. Young, 119 Fed. 576, 56 C. C. A. 380, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643.

221 In re Clark, 118 Fed. 358, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252. See In re Rector's, 220 Fed. 645, 136 C. C. A. 253.

222 In re Miners' Brewing Co., 162 Fed. 327, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717.

223 In re McArdle, 126 Fed. 442, 11

The proceeds of a sale in bankruptcy are not to be charged with the costs and expenses of proceedings by creditors which were terminated or rendered nugatory by the bankruptcy proceedings. Thus, where a distress warrant had been issued but was stayed by bankruptcy proceedings against the tenant, and the goods were sold by the receiver in bankruptcy, it was held that the constable was not entitled to fees out of the proceeds as for a sale.[224]

If disputes arise among the claimants of the proceeds of sale, or as to the order of distribution, the court of bankruptcy (including the referee) has authority and jurisdiction to hear and determine the validity, extent, and relative priority of all claims,[225] but not to adjudicate upon the rights of one who claims an interest adverse to the bankrupt and who is a stranger to the proceedings.[226] If any balance remains, after paying the expenses and satisfying valid liens, the trustee will retain it as a part of the general funds of the estate for distribution to general creditors.[227]

§ 485. Vacating and Setting Aside Sale.—A state court has no jurisdiction, for any cause whatever, to interfere with or set aside a sale of a bankrupt's property by the trustee.[228] But the court of bankruptcy may vacate or annul such a sale, when sufficient reason is shown, and may proceed to do so in a summary manner, unless rights of third persons have intervened,[229] in which case the remedy must be sought in a plenary action against the purchaser and others concerned.[230] And it is no obstacle that the sale has been consummated by the delivery of a deed to the purchaser. If such deed was executed by the trustee improvidently, irregularly, or without due authority, or was procured by imposition or fraud practiced upon the court, or if it was designedly so drawn as to grant more than the order of the court warranted or to vary from it in material particulars, and if the title is still in the purchaser at the sale, who is chargeable with notice of the fraud or irregularity, the court has jurisdiction to vacate the sale and order the deed to be sur-

Am. Bankr. Rep. 358. See In re Fisher, 98 Fed. 89, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

[224] In re Hageman (D. C.) 218 Fed. 708.

[225] In re Miners' Brewing Co. (D. C.) 162 Fed. 327, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; Leech v. Kay (C. C.) 4 Fed. 72; Globe Bank & Trust Co. v. Martin, 236 U. S. 289, 35 Sup. Ct. 377, 59 L. Ed. 583, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162; In re Bradley (D. C.) 263 Fed. 446, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; Durand v. Brown, 236 Fed. 609, 149 C. C. A. 605; Danville Ben. & Bldg. Ass'n v. Huff (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 403, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124; In re National Boat & Engine Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 208, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

[226] In re Muhlhauser, 121 Fed. 669, 57 C. C. A. 423, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

[227] In re Sanderlin, 109 Fed. 857, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

[228] Akins v. Stradley, 51 Iowa, 414, 1 N. W. 609.

[229] In re Mott, Fed. Cas. No. 9,878.

[230] In re Charles Knosher & Co., 197 Fed. 136, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Herdic, 40 Fed. 360.

rendered and canceled.[231] And even the intervening rights of a third person who has bought the property, or a part of it, from the original purchaser may not be sufficient to prevent the setting aside of a fraudulent or irregular sale, where the circumstances indicate knowledge or complicity on the part of such third person, or, assuming his innocence, it is possible to restore him to his original situation.[232]

But it is not consistent with the effective administration of the bankruptcy law that trustees' sales should be constantly overhauled for trivial causes. On the contrary, such sales should not be set aside except for cause sufficient to move the conscience of the court,[233] or where, as stated in one of the cases, "it would be a gross discredit to the administration of justice if the sale should be permitted to stand." [234] But it is essential that the sale should be fair and open, and any manipulation of it which tends to prevent the attendance of bidders, or to stifle competition among them, will be sufficient ground for vacating it.[235] Inadequacy of price will also be ground for setting aside a sale in bankruptcy, but only in case it is unconscionable or so gross as fairly to raise a presumption of fraud.[236] No general rule can be formulated on this point. But it is said that the appraisal fixes the value of the bankrupt's property, in the absence of reliable evidence impeaching it, and a sale for more than the appraised value, confirmed by the court, will not be set aside by an ap-[231] In re Hyde, 19 Blatchf. 115, 6 Fed. 587; In re King, 3 Fed. 839; In re Stevenson, 6 Fed. 710. On the trustee's bill filed for this purpose, there must be a tender to the purchaser of the sum he bid at the sale. Lanham v. State Bank of Rome (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 458, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

[232] In re Frazin & Oppenheim, 181 Fed. 307, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; In re Finlay, 104 Fed. 675, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Stevenson, 6 Fed. 710.

[233] In re Metallic Specialty Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 300, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408; Bray v. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 533, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

[234] In re Troy Woolen Co., 8 Blatchf. 465, 4 N. B. R. 629, Fed. Cas. No. 14,201.

[235] In re Shea, 126 Fed. 153, 61 C. C. A. 219, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207; In re Ethier, 118 Fed. 107, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160. But see In re Pittsburgh Dick Creek Mining Co., 197 Fed. 106, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613, where it was held that a sale otherwise satisfactory will not be set aside at the instance of a creditor who alleges that there was a conspiracy to keep him away from the sale and otherwise to defraud him of his just rights, since, if such was really the case, he has a remedy at law for damages. And see In re Kronrot, 183 Fed. 653, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738. An agreement between two creditors to bid against each other at a bankruptcy sale, until a certain figure was reached, in order to induce other bids, and if no higher bids were received to buy the property for their joint account and divide the profits, is not invalid. Schaap v. Robinson, 133 Ark. 113, 201 S. W. 292. The fact that the only other bidder at a bankruptcy sale was a puffer employed to run up bids is not ground for releasing the successful bidder, if there was no assurance to the puffer or belief that he would not be held liable. Williams v. Hogue, 219 Fed. 182, 134 C. C. A. 556, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

[236] In re National Mining Exploration Co., 193 Fed. 232, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92; In re Burr Mfg. & Supply Co., 217 Fed. 16, 133 C. C. A. 126; In re Metallic Specialty Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 300, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408; In re Shapiro, 154 Fed. 673, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125; In re Throckmorton, 149 Fed. 145, 79 C. C. A. 15, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; In re Bousfield, 16 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No.

pellate court on the ground of inadequacy of price.[237] And the mere fact that the property has increased in value since the sale, or that it is discovered to possess a value which was not then suspected, will not warrant annulling the sale,[238] nor will the naked fact that a third person offers to pay a better price than that realized at the sale.[239] But an offer of an advanced price, made by a genuine and responsible bidder, is strong evidence that the price given at the sale was inadequate, and if the court is in this way satisfied that there was a gross discrepancy between the actual value of the property and the price obtained, it may properly vacate the sale and order a resale.[240] But the advance offered must be substantial, not a mere trifle,[241] and the intending purchaser may be required to enter into an agreement with the court (or even to give security) that he will attend the resale and bid at least as much as he has offered.[242]

Applications to vacate such sales are generally made by the creditors of the estate.[243] But they must be reasonably prompt and vigilant, in

1,702. And see Ballentyne v. Smith, 205 U. S. 285, 27 Sup. Ct. 527, 51 L. Ed. 803, where the following instructive remarks were made by Mr. Justice Brewer: "Something may be said on each side of the question; on the one, that a court of equity owes a duty to the creditors seeking its assistance in subjecting property to the payment of debts, to see that the property brings something like its true value in order that, to the extent of that value, the debts secured upon the property may be paid; that it owes them something more than to merely take care that the forms of law are complied with, and that the purchaser is guilty of no fraudulent act; on the other, that it is the right of one bidding in good faith at an open and public sale to have the property for which he bids struck off to him if he be the highest and best bidder; that if he be free from wrong he should not be deprived of the benefit of his bid simply because others do not bid, or because parties interested have done nothing to secure the attendance of those who would likely give for the property something nearer its value; that if the creditors make no effort and are willing to take the chances of a general attendance, they have no right to complain on the ground that the property did not bring what it should have brought. In England, the old rule was that in chancery sales, until confirmation of the master's report, the bidding would be opened upon a mere offer to advance the price 10 per cent; but this rule has been rejected, and now both in England and this country a sale will not be set aside for mere inadequacy of price unless that inadequacy be so gross as to shock the conscience, or unless there be additional circumstances against its fairness. But if there be great inadequacy, slight circumstances of unfairness in the conduct of the party benefited by the sale will be sufficient to justify setting it aside. Graffam v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 191, 6 Sup. Ct. 686, 29 L. Ed. 839. It is difficult to formulate any rule more definite than this, and each case must stand upon its own peculiar facts."

[237] Schuler v. Hassinger, 177 Fed. 119, 100 C. C. A. 539, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184.

[238] Tyson v. Mickle, 2 Gill (Md.) 376; Phelps v. McDonald, 2 MacArthur (D. C.) 375, 16 N. B. R. 217.

[239] In re Ethier, 118 Fed. 107, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160; In re Belden, 120 Fed. 524, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Jacobsohn v. Larkey, 245 Fed. 538, 157 C. C. A. 650, L. R. A. 1918C, 1176, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; Day v. Luna Park Co., 174 Ill. App. 477.

[240] In re Palmer, 13 Fed. 870; In re Collins, 8 Ben. 328, Fed. Cas. No. 3,005.

[241] Sturgiss v. Corbin, 141 Fed. 1, 72 C. C. A. 179, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

[242] In re Shea, 126 Fed. 153, 61 C. C. A. 219, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207.

[243] In re Haywood Wagon Co., 219 Fed. 655, 135 C. C. A. 391, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618; In re Prudential Outfitting Co.

order to entitle their petition to favorable consideration, and a creditor who, with full knowledge of the circumstances of a sale, accepts a dividend from the proceeds, and silently allows the purchaser to sell the property, cannot avoid the sale even for fraud and collusion.[244] Nor will this action be taken at the instance of one who is an entire stranger to the proceedings and whose rights, if any, in the property could not be prejudiced by the sale.[245] The special short statute of limitations contained in the bankruptcy act does not apply to proceedings to vacate a sale.[246] And when an order to this effect is made, based on causes for which the purchaser was not in any way responsible, he will be entitled to have his money refunded and also such expenses as he has reasonably and properly incurred in the preservation of the property.[247]

§ 486. Collateral Impeachment of Sale.—The validity of a trustee's sale in bankruptcy is not open to inquiry or impeachment in any collateral proceeding, either in a state or federal court,[248] more especially after the lapse of a considerable period of time, during which all parties in interest have acquiesced in the sale,[249] or where the attack upon the sale is based on mere irregularities.[250] But where a bankrupt's liquor license was sold subject to the condition that its transfer to the purchaser must be authorized by the local court having jurisdiction, an inquiry by the court of bankruptcy to ascertain the grounds on which the local court refused to approve the transfer, is not a collateral attack on its order.[251]

(D. C.) 250 Fed. 504, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621.

[244] Hills v. Alden, 2 Hask. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 6,507.

[245] In re Muhlhauser, 121 Fed. 669, 57 C. C. A. 423, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236. A stockholder of a bankrupt corporation, as such, has no standing in the bankruptcy case to require the trustee to answer his petition to set aside a sale of the bankrupt's assets to a reorganization committee. In re Witherbee (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 896, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314.

[246] Clark v. Clark, 17 How. 315, 15 L. Ed. 77.

[247] In re Troy Woolen Co., 8 Blatchf. 465, 4 N. B. R. 629, Fed. Cas. No. 14,201.

[248] Buckler's Adm'r v. Rogers, 54 S. W. 848, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 1265; Trumbo v. Fulk, 103 Va. 73, 48 S. E. 525; Keller v. Faickney, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 483, 94 S. W. 103; Chilton v. Metcalf, 234 Mo. 27, 136 S. W. 701; Mims v. Swartz, 37 Tex. 13; Steele v. Moody, 53 Ala. 418, 16 N. B. R. 558; Equitable Trust Co. v. Vanderbilt Realty Improvement Co., 155 App. Div. 723, 140 N. Y. Supp. 1008; Thompson v. Sunrise Coal Co.'s Trustee, 181 Ky. 158, 204 S. W. 89; Trahue v. Ash (Tex. Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 415.

[249] Buckler's Adm'r v. Rogers, 54 S. W. 848, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 1265.

[250] Robertson v. Howard, 229 U. S. 254, 33 Sup. Ct. 854, 57 L. Ed. 1174, 30 Am. Baukr. Rep. 611; James v. Koy (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 295; Herbst v. Bates, 13 Wkly. Law Bul. (Ohio) 565; Smith v. Long, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 429.

[251] In re Miller, 171 Fed. 263, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

CHAPTER XXV

PROVABLE DEBTS AND CLAIMS

§ 487. Statutory Provisions.—The varieties of debts and claims which are provable in a bankruptcy proceeding are arranged by the statute in five groups or classes, as follows:

1. A fixed liability, evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition, whether then payable or not, with any interest which would have been recoverable at that date, or with a rebate of interest on such claims as were not then payable and did not bear interest.

2. Claims due as costs taxable against an involuntary bankrupt who was, at the time of the filing of the petition against him, plaintiff in a cause of action which would pass to the trustee and which the trustee declines to prosecute after notice.

3. Claims founded upon a claim for taxable costs incurred in good faith by a creditor before the filing of the petition, in an action to recover a provable debt.

4. Claims founded upon an open account, or upon a contract express or implied.

5. Claims founded upon provable debts reduced to judgment after the filing of the petition and before the consideration of the bankrupt's application for a discharge, less costs incurred and interest accrued after the filing of the petition and up to the time of the entry of such judgments.

To this it is added that "unliquidated claims against the bankrupt may, pursuant to application to the court, be liquidated in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate." [1]

These several subdivisions of the section are not to be regarded as an enumeration of a group of characteristics all of which are essential to a provable claim, but as a classification, each specifying a separate class of provable claims independently of the others; and hence the provision of the first clause, limiting the claims provable thereunder to those which were a fixed liability absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition, does not impose the same limitation upon claims which fall within the other classes.[2] In general, it is said, this whole section of the statute should be so construed as to make all debts fairly within its meaning provable debts, in order to effectuate the purpose of the act in relieving insolvent debtors, and any doubt whether a debt is provable, or whether it is an unliquidated demand which may be made provable, should be resolved in favor of its provability.[3] In particular, it may be remarked that the fourth clause, which allows proof of debts founded upon a "contract express or implied," may be given a construction sufficiently broad to include quasi contracts arising upon a conversion of property where the tort has been waived.[4]

§ 488. Who Are Creditors Within the Act.—A creditor is defined by the act as "anyone who owns a demand or claim provable in bankruptcy." This includes the United States as well as any state or municipal corporation.[5] Foreign creditors, as well as domestic, are also en-

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63.

[2] In re Smith, 146 Fed. 923, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112.

[3] Dycus v. Brown, 135 Ky. 140, 121 S. W. 1010, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 190.

[4] Reynolds v. New York Trust Co., 188 Fed. 611, 110 C. C. A. 409, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

[5] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57j. And see In re Mansfield, 6 N. B. R. 388, Fed. Cas.

titled to prove their claims and share in the estate.[6] Secured creditors may prove their demands as secured, and receive dividends on so much of the claim as remains unsatisfied after liquidating and applying the security or realizing on it, or they may waive the security and prove their debts as unsecured.[7] A preferred creditor may prove his claim if he will surrender his preference.[8] Also the claim of any estate which is being administered in bankruptcy against any like estate may be proved by the trustee, and will be allowed in the same manner and upon like terms as the claims of other creditors.[9] And a court of bankruptcy may permit the bankrupt himself, acting in a representative capacity as the administrator of an estate, to prove an equitable debt, arising from a loan of funds borrowed from the estate of his intestate, whether such loan was lawful or not.[10] In proper cases, one to whom the bankrupt had previously made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors may be permitted to prove a claim,[11] as also a surety for the bankrupt,[12] or a committee representing the bondholders of a bankrupt corporation.[13] The peculiar questions arising out of the bankruptcy of a partnership, and concerning the provability of claims of the partners as against each other and against the firm, have been considered in another place.[14] A corporation may of course be a creditor and prove a claim in bankruptcy; but ordinarily claims are not provable as between two corporations, one of which is merely an agency, branch, or reorganization of the other.[15]

But, to constitute a "creditor," it is always essential that there should be a debt measurable and payable in money, or a claim which is capable of being reduced to this kind of certainty, and also that it should be supported by a consideration or by a clear right of action. This excludes mere accommodation paper not based on any actual consideration,[16] and also the case of one who has dealt with a bankrupt corporation, but has

No. 9,049; In re Wright, 95 Fed. 807, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592. As to proof of claim by a municipal corporation or by its treasurer, see Greil v. Durr, 203 Ala. 644, 84 South. 743.

[6] See Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 65d.

[7] See infra, §§ 561–563.

[8] See infra, §§ 604–607. And see In re Franklin Brewing Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 301, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719; In re Dix (D. C.) 267 Fed. 1016, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199.

[9] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57m.

[10] Warner v. Spooner, 3 Fed. 890.

[11] In re Rudd, 180 Fed. 312, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35.

[12] Sessler v. Paducah Distilleries Co. (C. C. A.) 168 Fed. 44, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[13] In re Medina Quarry Co., 179 Fed. 929, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769.

[14] See supra, § 130. And see In re Hirth, 189 Fed. 926, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666; In re Dillon, 100 Fed. 627, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Savage, 16 N. B. R. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 12,381.

[15] See Clere Clothing Co. v. Union Trust & Savings Bank, 224 Fed. 363, 140 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Georgia Steel Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 473, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; Carroll v. Stern, 223 Fed. 723, 139 C. C. A. 253, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[16] Merchants' & Manufacturers' Nat. Bank of Columbus, Ohio, v. Galbraith, 157 Fed. 208, 84 C. C. A. 656, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319.

agreed to accept shares of its stock in satisfaction of his claim.[17] Again, it is necessary that the consideration should have proceeded from the claimant himself or from some one to whose rights he has succeeded by a clear title.[18] Thus a claim cannot be allowed where it is shown that the money in question was not advanced by the claimant personally, but by a corporation in which he is a stockholder.[19] And further it is necessary to show that the bankrupt received or benefited by the consideration on which the claim is founded. But it is no objection to the allowance of a claim against a bankrupt corporation for money lent that it passed through several hands, where the claimant furnished the money with the intention that it should be a loan to the corporation, and the latter received it and used it as such.[20] And where a new company is organized to take over and carry on the business of a failing corporation, which afterwards becomes bankrupt, one who, being a director in both the old and the new company, takes an active part in organizing the new concern, and subscribes and pays for some of its stock in cash, may be considered as a creditor of the bankrupt corporation to that extent.[21] Nor can a creditor who lent money to the bankrupt be debarred from proving his claim by the fact that he himself borrowed the money from a bank, pledging as collateral the note and security given him by the bankrupt.[22] But one who sells property on credit to a third person, who turns it over to a corporation which does not become a party to the contract of sale, does not thereby become a creditor of the corporation so as to be entitled to prove a claim against its estate in bankruptcy.[23] The rule that one may take advantage of a contract to which he was not a party, but which was made for his benefit between two other persons, is also effective in bankruptcy, but his assent to the agreement must have been made effective before the bankruptcy of the promisor.[24] It is also [17] Where a bank furnished money or credit with which certain imported wool was purchased in a foreign country, taking bills of lading and trust receipts in its own name, and, when the wool was sold by the importer, became the owner of the account, it alone was entitled to prove the claim against the estate of the purchaser in bankruptcy. Assets Realization Co. v. Sovereign Bank of Canada, 210 Fed. 156, 126 C. C. A. 662.

[18] In re Le Sueur County Co-operative Co., 195 Fed. 926, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 882.

[19] In re Watkinson, 143 Fed. 602, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

[20] In re American Specialty Co. (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 807, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463. But one furnishing materials to a subcontractor of a general contractor of the United States, who gave bond in conformity with the act of Congress of Feb. 24, 1905, will be required to pursue the remedy prescribed by that act, and cannot prove a claim under the bankruptcy law against the estate of the bankrupt contractor. In re Hawley, 194 Fed. 751, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

[21] In re Holbrook Shoe & Leather Co., 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

[22] Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, 163 Fed. 155, 89 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

[23] In re Builders' Lumber Co., 148 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.

[24] Blake v. Atlantic Nat. Bank, 33 R. I. 464, 82 Atl. 225, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 874.

a rule that a creditor of a bankrupt, who is also his debtor in a larger amount, will not be permitted to prove his claim against the estate so long as his own debt remains unpaid.[25] But on the other hand, where the father of a bankrupt, to whom the bankrupt was indebted, died after his adjudication, the right of the executor to prove the full indebtedness against the estate in bankruptcy is not affected by the fact that the father, by his will, left the bankrupt a share of his estate, from which any indebtedness due from the bankrupt was directed to be deducted.[26]

§ 489. Estoppel to Prove Claim.—The ordinary principles of estoppel may apply to a creditor seeking to prove a claim in bankruptcy,[27] and also the rule that a creditor having his choice between two inconsistent remedies must make his election, and cannot pursue both,[28] and the rule that one cannot rescind a contract and recover the original consideration, and at the same time prove a claim upon the contract itself.[29] But a creditor of a bankrupt who, after the bankruptcy, has taken a new promise based on the original debt, is not thereby precluded from maintaining his proof against the estate in bankruptcy and receiving dividends thereon, and at the same time proceeding against the bankrupt on the new obligation, so long as he receives but a single satisfaction of his debt.[30] And the fact that a creditor, prior to the bankruptcy, had begun a suit to set aside a deed as fraudulent does not estop him, on the deter-

[25] In re Gerson, 105 Fed. 893, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 850; In re Wiener & Goodman Shoe Co., 96 Fed. 949, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200. On the same principle, a creditor of a bankrupt corporation, who, as a holder of its capital stock, is liable on calls or assessments, cannot participate in the assets of the estate until he has paid or satisfied such assessments. In re Manufacturers' Box & Lumber Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 957, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763; In re Caledonia Coal Co. (D. C.) 254 Fed. 742, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93. See Moise v. Scheibel, 245 Fed. 546, 157 C. C. A. 658, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311.

[26] In re Woods (D. C.) 133 Fed. 82, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

[27] Sledge v. Denton (Tex. Civ. App.) 147 S. W. 281. Carroll v. Stern, 223 Fed. 723, 139 C. C. A. 253, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[28] Du Vivier & Co. v. Gallice (C. C. A.) 149 Fed. 118, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 557. And see In re W. A. Silvernail Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 977, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[29] In re Kenyon, 156 Fed. 863, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; Scott v. Abbott, 160 Fed. 573, 87 C. C. A. 475, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335. And see In re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Howard, 100 Fed. 630, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69. But where, prior to the bankruptcy, a claimant sought to replevin the balance of a bill of goods remaining in the bankrupt's possession unsold, in which he was unsuccessful, it was held that he was entitled to file against the bankrupt's estate for his whole claim. In re Venstrom, 205 Fed. 325, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569. And see Boden & Haac v. Lovell, 203 Fed. 234, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353, where certain foreign attachment litigation was held unavailable to sustain an estoppel preventing claimants from asserting claims not involved in such litigation against the bankrupt. Under a lease of machinery providing for redelivery at B., and the payment of certain charges, the lessor's acceptance of the machinery at a different place was held not a release of such charges. In re Desnoyers Shoe Co., 227 Fed. 401, 142 C. C. A. 97, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[30] In re Sweetser, 128 Fed. 165, affirmed Dowse v. Hammond, 130 Fed. 103, 64 C. C. A. 437.

mination of the suit against him, from claiming the benefit of a lien reserved by such deed for his benefit.[31] So where the bankrupt commenced a suit before his bankruptcy, which was tried after the adjudication, and the defendant in that action set up in defense a particular claim as a distinct cause of action, but offered no evidence in support of it, and judgment went in favor of the bankrupt, this does not estop such defendant from proving his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings.[32] And though one named as assignee in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, which is voided by the bankruptcy of the assignor, has accepted the trust, this does not preclude him from proving a bona fide debt which he has against the bankrupt.[33] So a mere covenant by a creditor not to sue an accommodation acceptor does not prevent such creditor from proving against the drawer's estate in bankruptcy.[34] Again, where the president of a bankrupt corporation had loaned money to it on notes, he is not estopped to claim the allowance thereof against the corporation's estate in bankruptcy because of statements of assets and liabilities made at various times, which did not include the notes, in the absence of any evidence that he had knowledge of their contents, or that credit was extended to the corporation, and the position of creditors changed, on the faith thereof.[35] So, although the bankrupt's bookkeeper prepared a financial statement which was submitted to a bank as a basis for credit, and the statement did not show that the bankrupt was indebted to the bookkeeper for his salary, this does not estop the latter to file a claim for unpaid salary, in the absence of evidence that credit was extended on the faith of the statement.[36] But on the other hand, where one advanced a large sum of money to a corporation on an agreement that he should receive stock in exchange for it when the capital stock of the company should be increased, and in the mean time that he should receive interest and also dividends, and this advance was represented to creditors as an increase of capital, and the lender held himself out as being connected with the business, and the corporation became bankrupt, it was held that the lender was estopped, as to creditors who had relied on the representations, to claim that he was a creditor and not a stockholder.[37] So, where [31] Maxwell v. McDaniels (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 426, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[32] In re People's Safe Deposit & Sav. Inst., 10 Ben. 38, 18 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 10,971.

[33] In re Horton, 5 Ben. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 6,707.

[34] Downing v. Traders' Bank, 2 Dill. 136, 11 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 4,046.

[35] Spencer v. Lowe (C. C. A.) 198 Fed. 961, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 876. So, the president of a bankrupt corporation, who had advanced money in connection with a composition in a former proceeding, was held not estopped from proving his claim because of representations that the money would be raised outside the assets of the corporation. McKey v. Bruns, 243 Fed. 370, 156 C. C. A. 150, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189.

[36] In re Cox (D. C.) 199 Fed. 952, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 456.

[37] In re Desnoyers Shoe Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 533, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

the only claim filed by a brother of the bankrupt against his estate was based on notes and a mortgage which were clearly fraudulent, he was held bound by such action, and not permitted to prove the claim as one for wages of labor and so entitled to priority.[38]

§ 490. Fraudulent Conduct Barring Proof of Claim.—Where a creditor of a bankrupt actively participates or assists him in the execution of a scheme to delay or defraud his other creditors, and in furtherance thereof advances money or incurs expense, the entire transaction is contaminated by the fraud, and the court of bankruptcy will not aid the conspirators by allowing claims for such advances or expenses against the estate.[39] So also, where money is loaned or advances made for the purpose of establishing a fictitious credit for the bankrupt and so enabling him to cheat others.[40] And so where a creditor has attempted to gain an advantage over other creditors by including in his proof fictitious items or exaggerated amounts, or by including fraudulent or illegal and non-provable claims, his proof will not be allowed even to the extent of an honest debt which may be included in it, but will be rejected as an entirety.[41] And the same rule has been applied where a creditor holding collateral security under a pledge, took the opportunity, as soon as a petition in bankruptcy had been filed, to sell the security to himself at a pretended auction at a small fraction of its face value, and without notice to any party in interest.[42] But there is nothing illegal in endeavoring to buy up all the claims against the estate of a bankrupt, for the purpose of staying the bankruptcy proceedings altogether; and if the purchaser fails in this, he should nevertheless be allowed to prove such claims as he has acquired as though he were an original creditor.[43] And

[38] In re Hemstreet, 139 Fed. 958, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823.

[39] Butcher v. Werksman, 204 Fed. 330, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332; In re Friedman, 164 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; In re L. M. Alleman Hardware Co., 172 Fed. 611, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871; In re Lansaw, 118 Fed. 365, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167; In re Knox, 98 Fed. 585, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Hugill, 100 Fed. 616, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 686; In re Hatje, 6 Biss. 436, 12 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 6,215. But see In re Medina Quarry Co., 179 Fed. 929, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769. And compare In re L. M. Alleman Hardware Co. (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 810, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 331.

[40] In re Friedman, 164 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; In re Royce Dry Goods Co., 133 Fed. 100, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

[41] In re Friedman, 164 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; In re Flick, 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; In re Elder, 1 Sawy. 73, 3 N. B. R. 670, Fed. Cas. No. 4,326; Marrett v. Atterbury, 3 Dill. 444, 11 N. B. R. 225, Fed. Cas. No. 9,102.

[42] In re Mertens, 134 Fed. 101, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226. But see Turner v. Metropolitan Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 495, where a purchase of pledged collateral by the pledgee was held, under the particular circumstances, not to prevent proof against the estate in bankruptcy.

[43] In re Pease, 6 N. B. R. 173, Fed. Cas. No. 10,880; In re Strachan, 3 Biss. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 13,519. So of an agreement by one creditor to advance funds to effect a composition, on condition that his claim should be paid in full. In re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

the act of a creditor in withholding from record a chattel mortgage securing his debt, by agreement with the mortgagor, until the latter's bankruptcy, while it may render the mortgage invalid as a lien as against subsequent creditors without notice, does not of itself affect his right to prove his debt in bankruptcy, nor subordinate it to the claims of subsequent creditors.[44] Such fraudulent conduct on the part of a creditor as will forfeit his right to prove against the bankrupt estate may also operate to the disadvantage of others who, though not directly implicated, are still bound by his acts, as in the case of a partner who, though innocent himself, cannot disavow fraudulent acts of his copartner done in the firm name.[45] And where the holder of a note has forfeited his claim against the estate of the bankrupt maker by taking a preference, the guarantors of the note have no right to prove it against the estate, their liability having been discharged by the principal.[46] But it has been ruled in a well-considered case that where a creditor advances money to his debtor, knowing him to be insolvent, but believing that the loan will enable him to regain sufficient prosperity to pay off his debts, the mere fact that the creditor omits to notify the other creditors of the debtor's insolvency does not constitute a breach of duty, or a fraud or deceit on the other creditors, or authorize the disallowance of such creditor's claim against the debtor's estate in bankruptcy. For each creditor of an insolvent debtor is a competitor of all the others, and no fiduciary or confidential relation exists between them; and to constitute such a fraud as will estop a creditor from sharing with others in the distribution of the estate, he must have been guilty of some moral turpitude or breach of duty whereby the other creditors were deceived to their damage.[47]

§ 491. Nature of Claims Provable in General.—In general, it may be stated that every debt which is recoverable either at law or in equity is provable in bankruptcy,[48] or that any debt which may be proved by com-

[44] In re Ewald & Brainard, 135 Fed. 168, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; In re Abell, 198 Fed. 484, 117 C. C. A. 243. But see In re Thweatt, 199 Fed. 319, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

[45] Capelle v. Hall, 12 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 2,391.

[46] In re Ayers, 6 Biss. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 685.

[47] Crowder v. Allen-West Commission Co., 213 Fed. 177, 129 C. C. A. 521, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134.

[48] In re Jordan, 2 Fed. 319; In re H. V. Keep Shirt Co., 200 Fed. 80, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765. See In re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365. "Provable" debts and "allowable" debts in bankruptcy are not necessarily equivalent terms. On the distinction, see R. P. Williams & Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 11 Ga. App. 635, 75 S. E. 1067. Claims which are entitled to priority under the statute (such as claims for wages of labor) are provable and must be proved. But the fact that a father employed his minor son to work as his chief clerk, while the son paid board to his mother, does not establish an emancipation of the son, so as to entitle him to prove a claim for wages against his father's estate. In re Riff, 205 Fed. 406, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504. Compare In re Kanter (D. C.) 215 Fed. 276.

plying with any of the provisions of the statute is provable,[49] and the fact that a claim arises as a consequence of the bankruptcy is sufficient to render it provable as a fixed liability absolutely owing at the date of the petition.[50] A claim against the bankrupt for money loaned is liquidated and provable,[51] and claims upon an "open account" (which is the same thing as an "account current") are specially enumerated by the statute as among the claims which shall be provable.[52] Again, it is no objection to the proof and allowance of a claim that it is of such a character as not to be barred or released by the bankrupt's discharge, as in the case of a debt created by his fraud or created by him while acting in a fiduciary capacity.[53] And a debt evidenced by a note or other writing is provable notwithstanding the fact that it is expressed to be payable in a particular species of currency or in gold coin,[54] or even in labor and merchandise.[55] An attorney may file and prove a claim against the bankrupt for professional services rendered to him before the bankruptcy and in matters not connected therewith, although there was no express contract fixing the amount of his fees,[56] at least where his services conduced to the benefit of the estate or to its more prompt administration, as where they resulted in obtaining a reduction of taxes assessed [49] Rankin v. Florida, A. & G. C. R. Co., 1 N. B. R. 647, Fed. Cas. No. 11,567. The fact that certain claims may be entitled to payment in priority to the claim of a particular creditor does not affect his right to prove the claim and have it allowed. McKey v. Bruns, 243 Fed. 370, 156 C. C. A. 150, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189.

[50] In re Neff, 157 Fed. 57, 84 C. C. A. 561, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 349, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23, 911.

[51] In re Halsey Electric Generator Co. (D. C.) 163 Fed. 118, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738. Where a loan was in fact made to the corporation which is in bankruptcy, the claim is provable against it, though evidenced by the individual notes of its executive officers. Hogin v. Central Nat. Bank, 223 Fed. 325, 138 C. C. A. 587, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81. Where a subscriber for an increase of stock paid the price thereof in advance, under an agreement that such payment should be treated as a loan until the issuance of the stock, and before that the corporation was adjudged bankrupt, the subscriber was entitled to have his claim allowed as a general claim against the bankrupt. Clark v. Hamilton, 217 Fed. 229, 133 C. C. A. 223, L. R. A. 1918E, 750, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198.

[52] In re Stanton, Fed. Cas. No. 13,295. "An open account is one in which some item of the contract is not settled by the parties, whether the account consists of one item or many; or where there have been running or current dealings between the parties, and the account is kept open with the expectation of fresher transactions." Sheppard v. Wilkins, 1 Ala. 62; Goodwin v. Harrison, 6 Ala. 438. An open account, in legal as well as in ordinary language, means an indebtedness subject to future adjustment, and which may be reduced or modified by proof. Nisbet v. Lawson, 1 Ga. 275; Gayle v. Johnston, 72 Ala. 254, 47 Am. Rep. 405; McCamant v. Batsell, 59 Tex. 368; Purvis v. Kroner, 18 Or. 414, 23 Pac. 260.

[53] In re Tebbetts, 5 Law Rep. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 13,817; Bourne v. Maybin, 3 Woods, 724, Fed. Cas. No. 1,700.

[54] In re Whittaker, 4 N. B. R. 160, Fed. Cas. No. 17,598; In re Elder, 1 Sawy. 73, 3 N. B. R. 670, Fed. Cas. No. 4,326.

[55] In re Spot Cash Hooper Co., 188 Fed. 861, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546; McMullin v. Bank of Penn Township, 2 Pa. St. 343.

[56] In re Coney Island Lumber Co., 199 Fed. 803.

against the property or stopping the prosecution of an attachment suit.[57] So a ward may prove his claim against his guardian's estate in bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that the accounts of the guardian are in course of settlement in the probate court of the state.[58] The government also, if it holds a claim against a debtor in bankruptcy, may and should file proof of the same.[59] In the case of a bankrupt insurance company, under the former statute, it was held that a claim founded on a covenant to repay part of the premium paid for insurance on cancellation of the policy was provable.[60] And although money advanced to the bankrupt was purely in the form of a bonus, to induce him to erect and operate a manufacturing plant in a given locality, yet on his failure to do so and his ensuing bankruptcy, the amount so paid constitutes a provable claim.[61] Again, although the debt was not originally contracted by the bankrupt, yet if he assumed and agreed to pay it (as in the case of one buying a going business and taking the assets and liabilities together, or buying mortgaged land with an assumption of the mortgage), it will be provable against his estate.[62] So where a sale by an insolvent person, the proceeds of which were used to pay certain creditors in full, was set aside as constructively fraudulent as to other creditors, the vendee has a valid claim against the vendor's trustee in bankruptcy for the amount of the money he paid, less the expenses of setting aside the sale.[63] In those states also where the separate property of a married woman is liable in equity for her business obligations, though under the local law she is not technically a free trader, if she engages in business on her own account, her obligations contracted in the business are provable debts in bankruptcy.[64]

But on the other hand, the amount contributed by a partner to the capital of the partnership cannot, on the bankruptcy of the firm, be proved as a debt entitled to share ratably with the claims of the general creditors.[65] And so, where one induces others to join with him in a pur-

[57] In re Duran Mercantile Co., 199 Fed. 961, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450.

[58] Bourne v. Maybin, 3 Woods, 724, Fed. Cas. No. 1,700.

[59] United States v. Murphy, 11 Biss. 415, 15 Fed. 589.

[60] In re Independent Ins. Co., 2 Low. 187, Fed. Cas. No. 7,019. But see In re Western Ins. Co., 6 Ben. 159, Fed. Cas. No. 17,435.

[61] Sturgiss v. Meurer, 191 Fed. 9, 111 C. C. A. 551, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851.

[62] In re Baumblatt, 153 Fed. 485, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Begein v. Brehm, 123 Ind. 160, 23 N. E. 496. But the estate of a bankrupt, who was defrauded of a stock of merchandise by another, but afterwards recovered it by suit, cannot be held liable for debts contracted by such other while conducting the business in his own name. Van Slyke v. Huntington (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 86, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173.

[63] Barber v. Coit, 144 Fed. 381, 75 C. C. A. 319. 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

[64] MacDonald v. Tefft-Weller Co., 128 Fed. 381, 63 C. C. A. 123, 65 L. R. A. 106, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800.

[65] In re W. J. Floyd & Co., 156 Fed. 206, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438. And money invested and lost by a creditor of a corporation by subscribing to its capital stock cannot be included in his claim in bankruptcy. In re Franklin Brewing Co.

chase of property, by representations as to its value which prove to be incorrect, but without any express promise to reimburse them for any loss which they may sustain, the law will not raise such a promise by implication, so as to create a liability as on an implied contract provable against his estate in bankruptcy.[66] Owelty of partition is a legal charge on the land, but not created by the contract of the parties but by the law, and therefore is not provable in bankruptcy.[67] And where one institutes a suit against his debtor and against another as garnishee, and the latter goes into bankruptcy before the recovery of any judgment, the creditor has no provable claim against the garnishee's estate.[68] Finally it has been held that a claim for an account of profits against an infringer of a patent-right is not provable against his estate in bankruptcy.[69]

§ 492. Amount of Claim Provable.—In order to arrive at the correct amount for which a creditor should be allowed to prove, the court will inquire into the accounts and dealings of the parties, and if necessary reduce the amount of the claim as filed.[70] Thus, on a claim by one member of a syndicate of banking firms against the estate of a bankrupt member, the court will examine into the accounts of all the members, in order to make a definite allowance against the bankrupt's estate.[71] So, where a corporation gave its note to a bank for the indebtedness of a third party, for which it was not responsible, and also for its own debt, the note was invalid in the hands of the bank (having knowledge of the facts) to the extent of the amount of the debt of the third party, and it was held that the bank's claim against the estate of the corporation in bankruptcy must be reduced to the amount which the corporation itself owed when the note was given.[72] So again, where a manufacturer consigned goods to factors, who advanced him their notes to an amount larger than was ultimately realized on the goods, which notes were indorsed by him and discounted, and both parties became bankrupt, and the factors, employing the goods then in their possession, made a composition with their creditors, including the holders of the notes, who

(D. C.) 265 Fed. 301, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719.

[66] Switzer v. Henking, 158 Fed. 784, 86 C. C. A. 140, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1151, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

[67] Ex parte Walker, 107 N. C. 340, 12 S. E. 136.

[68] Ex parte Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Low. 5, Fed. Cas. No. 3,037.

[69] In re Boston & F. Iron Works (C. C.) 23 Fed. 880, citing Root v. Railway Co., 105 U. S. 189, 26 L. Ed. 975.

[70] A claim by a large stockholder of a bankrupt corporation against the estate for merchandise transferred to it at an agreed valuation may be subject to proof to determine the fair market value of the property, and to reduction accordingly. In re Peerless Shoe Co. (D. C.) 226 Fed. 1020, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 71.

[71] In re Cooke, 12 N. B. R. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 3,170.

[72] Mapes v. German Bank of Tilden, 176 Fed. 89, 99 C. C. A. 609, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

reserved the right to prove in full against all other parties to them, it was held that such creditors, in proving against the estate of the manufacturer, would not be required to give credit for the full amount received by them on the composition, but would be required to abate their proof by giving credit for the property of such manufacturer so employed by the factors, which might, upon their application, have been applied towards paying their debts.[73]

Again, the amount to be allowed on a claim may depend upon an inquiry into and disclosure of the actual and true consideration.[74] Thus, an indorsee before maturity of a negotiable note, without notice of existing equities, can only prove against the estate of the maker the amount paid therefor.[75] And so, where a mortgage is given to indemnify the mortgagee for his advances, and he loans his acceptances to the mortgagor, and, after the bankruptcy of the latter, buys up the paper at a discount, he can charge against the mortgaged property only what he paid in cash to take up the acceptances.[76] But it has been held that the pledgee of notes held to secure a debt in a smaller amount may prove them against the maker's estate to their full amount, and receive dividends to the extent of his debt.[77] The creditor may also be estopped to claim the full nominal amount of his debt or damage, either by his own previous agreement or by his laches or wrongful conduct. Thus, in a case where the fund to be distributed among the creditors of a bankrupt storage company consisted entirely of the proceeds of insurance on the property of such creditors, burned while in storage, the amount of which had been determined by an agreement between the insurers and the respective owners as to the value of the property of each, it was held that the creditors were bound by such valuations as between themselves, and one cannot be permitted to prove a larger claim.[78] So, where the bankrupt's brokers were carrying stocks on a margin, and, at the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, could have sold them at a profit, but carried the stocks until a decline and finally sold them at a loss, all without application to the court, it was held that they could not prove their claim for differences against the estate.[79] And on a [73] Ex parte Harris, 2 Low. 568, 16 N. B. R. 432, Fed. Cas. No. 6,109.

[74] See Edgar v. Ames, 255 Fed. 835, 167 C. C. A. 163, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697.

[75] In re Shelbourne, 19 N. B. R. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 12,745.

[76] Ex parte Ames, 1 Low. 561, 7 N. B. R. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 323.

[77] Bailey v. Nichols, 2 N. B. R. 478, Fed. Cas. No. 741. See Turner v. Metropolitan Trust Co. of City of New York, 207 Fed. 495, 125 C. C. A. 157, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

[78] In re Reliance Storage & Warehouse Co., 105 Fed. 351, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249.

[79] In re Daniels, 6 Biss. 405, Fed. Cas. No. 3,566. So, where brokers made an unauthorized pledge of customers' stock, and the pledgee, upon the brokers' bankruptcy, sold a portion of the stock to satisfy the brokers' indebtedness, the stock not so sold, in ascertaining the amount of the claim of the owner thereof, will be valued as of the day upon which the first sale of similar stock was made on somewhat similar principle, where the general manager of a trading corporation (who was also a stockholder and director) had been allowed a salary for his services at a fixed monthly rate, but by the mere agreement of the board of directors without any by-law or resolution or entry of record, it was held that he was not entitled to prove a claim against the estate of the corporation in bankruptcy for arrears of salary at the rate so fixed, but only for the reasonable value of his services as determined by the court.[80]

In cases of breach of contract, the amount to be proved and allowed is determined by the ordinary rules relating to the measure of damages.[81] Thus, for a buyer's breach of a contract for the manufacture and sale of certain articles of merchandise, the measure of the seller's damage, on the allowance of his claim against the bankrupt estate of the buyer, is the difference between the cost of manufacture and the contract price, notwithstanding the entire lot of goods were not manufactured or ready for delivery.[82] So, where an agreement indemnifying a contractor's surety, containing an assignment of the contractor's plant on the work in case he should be unable to carry out the contract, was executed more than four months before the contractor became bankrupt and while he was solvent, the amount of the surety's claim against the bankrupt is not the amount which the latter might have paid by reason of his liability on the bonds, independent of the plant so assigned, but the amount of the loss the surety might sustain in completing the contract with such aid as he might gain by taking and using the plant.[83]

§ 493. Payment or Satisfaction.—A note which is subject to an offset for a larger amount is not a provable debt in bankruptcy.[84] Nor will a creditor be permitted to prove a claim which he has expressly waived or released to the bankrupt,[85] or which he had previously settled by an accord and compromise, receiving the consideration then agreed on, though less than the amount of the debt,[86] or where he has the Stock Exchange, where the exchange had been closed because of the war at the time of the filing of the bankruptcy petition, and not opened until more than a month later, during which time the stock had appreciably increased in value. In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

[80] In re Grubbs-Wiley Grocery Co. (D. C.) 96 Fed. 183, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442.

[81] Where a bankrupt, on full consideration paid before his bankruptcy, had contracted absolutely to pay the claimant $3 per day during the remainder of his life, the mortality tables should be used to determine the claimant's life. In re Miller (D. C.) 225 Fed. 331, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333.

[82] In re Duquesne Incandescent Light Co., 176 Fed. 785, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; Pratt v. Auto Spring Repairer Co., 196 Fed. 495, 116 C. C. A. 261, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483.

[83] Wood v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 143 Fed. 424, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

[84] In re Ford, 18 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 4,932.

[85] See In re Howard, 100 Fed. 630, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69.

[86] In re Decker, 8 Ben. 81, Fed. Cas.

once adjusted his claim by accepting from the trustee in bankruptcy a surrender of the property in dispute or a quitclaim deed.[87] Similarly, a vendor of goods under a conditional sale to the bankrupt may (if the transaction is not voidable under the bankruptcy law) affirm the sale and enforce a claim on the notes given by the bankrupt, or he may retake the property, but he cannot do both, and if he chooses the latter course, he cannot then prove the notes as a claim against the estate.[88] Neither will proof be permitted upon so much of a claim as has previously been satisfied by a payment in cash, or by a transfer and acceptance of property,[89] or otherwise. But merely taking a note, without any payment on it, does not discharge an original debt having any privileges under the bankruptcy law, and either may be proved.[90] So while the acceptance of shares of stock in a corporation in lieu of payment of a debt may cancel the debt so that it will no longer be provable in bankruptcy, if the creditor expressly releases the debtor from liability,[91] this is not the case if there is no sufficient proof that the creditor ever accepted the stock,[92] or if it was merely given as a substitute for collateral security held by the creditor and is not of value.[93] Again, where a creditor has received a partial payment on his debt under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, made before the bankruptcy, he cannot prove for the whole of the debt but only for the balance remaining unsatisfied.[94]

No. 3,723; In re Lathrop, 3 Ben. 490, 3 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 8,103.

[87] Kenyon v. Mulert, 184 Fed. 825, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184; In re Davis, 179 Fed. 871, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667.

[88] In re Norton, 181 Fed. 901, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794; In re Heinsfurter, 97 Fed. 198, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113. See Patten's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 151, 84 Am. Dec. 479. Where, prior to the bankruptcy, the claimant sought to replevin the balance of a bill of goods remaining in the bankrupt's possession unsold, in which he was unsuccessful, he was entitled to file against the bankrupt's estate for the whole claim. In re Venstrom (D. C.) 205 Fed. 325, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

[89] In re Carpenter, 179 Fed. 743. See Haas-Baruch & Co. v. Portuondo, 138 Fed. 949, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 130. See In re Franklin Brewing Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 828, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485. Where claimant made advances to the bankrupt to enable her to buy a motor car, and the bankrupt, being unable to repay the advances, delivered the car to claimant, who sold it, the amount received by the claimant from the sale of the car should be credited on the claim. In re Wray, 233 Fed. 418, 147 C. C. A. 354, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28. If a landlord obtains by an action of replevin a part of his rent from the goods of a subtenant upon the premises, his claim against the bankrupt estate of the tenant should be reduced by the amount so received. Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480. The holder of a note indorsed by the bankrupt, not due at the time of the bankruptcy, but which became due before proof of claim, and on which in the mean time a payment was received from the maker, can prove only for the amount due thereon at maturity. In re Shatz, 251 Fed. 351 (D. C.), 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

[90] In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; Dowse v. Hammond, 130 Fed. 103, 64 C. C. A. 437.

[91] In re Norris (D. C.) 190 Fed. 101, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945.

[92] In re Blumer, 11 Fed. 700.

[93] In re Lorillard, 107 Fed. 677, 46 C. C. A. 553, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

[94] In re Folb, 91 Fed. 107, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; In re Hamilton, 1 Fed. 800.

The case of a creditor whose claim is proved and allowed after the declaration of a dividend is somewhat peculiar. Here the law provides that the proof of such claim shall not affect the dividend so declared, but that such creditor shall receive an equal dividend (if the estate is sufficient) before other creditors receive any further dividends. But where the holder of a note made by a partnership and indorsed by one of the partners, both maker and indorser having been adjudicated bankrupts, proves his claim against the partnership estate after a dividend has been declared and paid to other creditors, his right to a preference in future dividends cannot be considered equivalent to a dividend actually declared in his favor, or to an actual part payment of his note by the maker, and hence he is entitled to prove his claim against the estate of the indorser for the full amount of the note.[95] Generally, however the holder of a note who has received a dividend from the estate in bankruptcy of the maker, can prove only the balance against the estate of the bankrupt indorser.[96] But on the other hand, a creditor whose claim has been partly paid by an accommodation indorser may prove the claim to its full amount without giving the estate the benefit of such part payment.[97] And so, where a creditor has received partial payment of his debt from a surety of the bankrupt, the right to prove the claim for its entire amount, against the estate in bankruptcy, is in the creditor in preference to the surety.[98]

§ 494. Time of Accrual of Claims.—The provability of a claim depends upon its status at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, which is the date when the right of creditors to share in the estate becomes fixed; and any claim which is not then a provable debt, as defined in the act, cannot be proved although it may thereafter come within such definition.[99] And a debt or claim which did not accrue or come into existence until after the filing of the petition is not provable,[100] even though it was for money loaned to the bankrupt to be used

[95] In re Swift, 106 Fed. 65, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 415.

[96] In re Howard, 4 N. B. R. 571, Fed. Cas. No. 6,750; In re Pulsifer, 9 Biss. 487, 14 Fed. 247.

[97] In re Noyes Bros., 127 Fed. 286, 62 C. C. A. 218, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673. But see In re Broich, 7 Biss. 303, 15 N. B. R. 11, Fed. Cas. No. 1,921. See A. S. Coats Shingle Co. v. Chester Snow Log & Shingle Co., 106 Wash. 227, 179 Pac. 862.

[98] In re Heyman, 95 Fed. 800, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

[99] Zavelo v. Reeves, 227 U. S. 625, 33 Sup. Ct. 365, 57 L. Ed. 676, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493; Sexton v. Dreyfus, 219 U. S. 339, 31 Sup. Ct. 256, 55 L. Ed. 244, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363; In re American Vacuum Cleaner Co., 192 Fed. 939, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 143, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

[100] Colman Co. v. Withoft (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 250, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328; In re Walker, 176 Fed. 455, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805; In re Reading Hosiery Co., 171 Fed. 195, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562; In re Rome, 162 Fed. 971, 19 Am.

in complying with the terms of a composition agreement.[101] And it is immaterial that the debt accrued or came into existence before any adjudication was made upon the petition, if it did not exist when the petition was filed; for the statute is explicit in fixing the date of filing the petition, and not the date of the adjudication, as the decisive time.[102] An apparent exception to the rule here mentioned, but really only an extension of it, is found in the case where the filing of the petition in bankruptcy itself operates as a breach of an executory contract, because equivalent to a refusal to perform. Here the filing of the petition and the accrual of a claim for damages are exactly contemporaneous, and the creditor may prove his claim for damages as one existing at the time of the filing of the petition.[103] Although the first subdivision of the sixty-third section of the bankruptcy act is the one which defines a provable debt as one "absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition," and this language is not repeated in the fourth subdivision, which allows proof of a claim "founded upon an open account or upon a contract express or implied," yet the decisions unanimously hold that the limitation of time contained in the first subdivision must be read into the fourth, the two being in pari materia, and hence a claim founded upon an open account or a contract is not provable in bankruptcy, any more than any other kind of claim, unless it existed at the time of the filing of the petition.[104] Further, a debt to be provable in bankruptcy, must continue to exist in the same condition after as at the time of the commencement of the proceedings; and proof of a claim as indorser upon a note made by the bankrupt will be disallowed where it appears that, after the adjudication of bankruptcy, a new note had been given and the first note taken up.[105] On this principle also, a claim against a bankrupt for work done under a contract after the filing of the Bankr. Rep. 820; In re Black Diamond Copper Mining Co., 11 Ariz. 415, 95 Pac. 117; In re Riker, 18 N. B. R. 393, Fed. Cas. No. 11,833; In re Merell, 19 Fed. 874; In re Ward, 12 Fed. 325; Phenix Nat. Bank v. Waterbury, 123 App. Div. 453, 108 N. Y. Supp. 391; Hardcastle v. National Clothing Co., 137 Tenn. 64, 191 S. W. 524. On bankruptcy of the debtor, each creditor becomes an equitable cestui que trust in the assets in the ratio which his claim bears to the total amount, and his right to participate may not be diminished by claims arising subsequently to the bankruptcy, his right to participate being determined as of the date of the bankruptcy. In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 267, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

[101] Zavelo v. J. S. Reeves & Co., 171 Ala. 401, 54 South. 654.

[102] In re Burka, 104 Fed. 326, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12; In re Merrill, 21 Fed. 120. Compare Spalding v. Dixon, 21 Vt. 45.

[103] In re Swift, 112 Fed. 315, 50 C. C. A. 264, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374.

[104] Colman Co. v. Withoft (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 250, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328; In re Roth & Appel, 181 Fed. 667, 104 C. C. A. 649, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 270, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Swift, 112 Fed. 315, 50 C. C. A. 264, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374; In re Adams, 130 Fed. 381, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368; In re Burka, 104 Fed. 326, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

[105] In re Montgomery, 3 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 9,730.

petition cannot be proved as a debt against the estate, although the contract was entered into before the commencement of the proceedings, but was then wholly executory.[106]

Judgments recovered against the bankrupt after the filing of the petition, and before consideration of his application for a discharge, may be proved as debts, but only on condition that they are founded on debts provable at the commencement of the proceedings, and even in that case there must be deducted costs incurred and interest accrued after the filing of the petition and up to the time of the entry of judgment.[107]

§ 495. Claims on Contracts and Damages for Breach Thereof.—Claims founded upon an "open account or upon a contract express or implied" are specifically made provable by the bankruptcy act, and this clause is not limited by the provision in an earlier part of the same section that debts may be proved and allowed which are "a fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing." [108] Hence an account for the balance due for goods sold and delivered is a provable debt,[109] as is also the amount due on a conditional sale of property, assuming that that form of contract is not invalid under the laws of the state,[110] or a fixed sum due for subscriptions to a mercantile agency,[111] or a claim for damages for breach of an appeal bond.[112]

Moreover, a claim for damages for the breach of an executory contract is a claim "founded upon a contract" within the meaning of the statute, and is provable in bankruptcy, equally as in the case where the contract itself is for the payment of a fixed sum.[113] And if the bankrupt,

[106] In re Adams, 130 Fed. 381, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368.

[107] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a, cl. 5. See In re Fitzgerald, 191 Fed. 95, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; United States v. The Rob Roy, 1 Woods, 42, 13 N. B. R. 235, Fed. Cas. No. 16,179.

[108] In re Lyons Beet Sugar Refining Co. (D. C.) 192 Fed. 445, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610. But compare In re D. C. Clark Shoe Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 341, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238. A cause of action sounding either in contract or tort at the election of the holder is a provable claim in bankruptcy. Reinhardt v. Friederich, 58 Ind. App. 421, 108 N. E. 258. A claim on a protested check, which was given to make good an overpayment on an account for goods sold, is a cause of action in contract and provable in bankruptcy. Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman, 264 Fed. 826, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573. Where a bankrupt, on full consideration paid before the bankruptcy, contracted absolutely to pay the claimant $3 a day during the remainder of his life, the claim is fixed and provable. In re Miller (D. C.) 225 Fed. 331, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333.

[109] Standard Sewing Machine Co. v. Kattell, 132 App. Div. 539, 117 N. Y. Supp. 32.

[110] In re Gray, 170 Fed. 638, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375.

[111] In re Glick, 184 Fed. 967, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871.

[112] Coe v. Waters, 16 Colo. App. 311, 64 Pac. 1054.

[113] In re Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co., 130 Fed. 881. 66 C. C. A. 78, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; In re Adams, 130 Fed. 381, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368; In re Stern, 116 Fed. 604, 54 C. C. A. 60, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Swift, 112 Fed. 316, 50 C. C. A. 264, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374; Ex at the time of the bankruptcy, by disenabling himself from performing his part of a particular contract, and by repudiating its obligation, could give to the other party the right to maintain at once a suit in which damages could be assessed at law or in equity, then such other party may prove as a creditor in the bankruptcy proceedings, on the ground that bankruptcy is the equivalent of disenablement and repudiation or is an anticipatory breach of the contract.[114] But this is on the supposition that the claimant is not himself in default, for if he has failed to carry out his own part of the contract he cannot file a claim for damages.[115] And in no case can his claim be allowed for more than the actual damage sustained. Thus, the courts will not allow the creditor to take this means of enforcing a mere penalty,[116] or the collection of a sum named in the contract as liquidated damages in case of default, where it is not shown that the claimant has sustained any actual damage by the bankrupt's breach of the contract.[117] So, in a case where one holding a patent for an invention had granted to a corporation an exclusive license to manufacture the product, and the corporation had thereupon contracted to pay to the patentee a bonus or royalty on the patented articles sold with a guaranty of a minimum number during the year, and the corporation became bankrupt before the end of the year, it was held that the patentee was entitled to prove a claim for the amount of royalty which had accrued up to the time of the bankruptcy at the minimum rate, irrespective of the number of articles actually sold, but that he could not prove a claim for future royalties accruing during the remainder of the term, although he was entitled to prove a claim for damages parte Pollard, 2 Low. 411, 17 N. B. R. 228, Fed. Cas. No. 11,252; Forest City Steel & Iron Co. v. Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co., 154 Mich. 182, 117 N. W. 645; Lothrop v. Reed, 13 Allen (Mass.) 294. Compare Watson v. Merrill, 136 Fed. 359, 69 C. C. A. 185, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453.

[114] Central Trust Co. of Illinois v. Chicago Auditorium Ass'n, 240 U. S. 581, 36 Sup. Ct. 412, 60 L. Ed. 811, L. R. A. 1917B, 580, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 143, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728; In re Swift, 105 Fed. 493, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335; In re Saxton Furnace Co., 142 Fed. 293, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 445; Pratt v. Auto Spring Repairer Co. (C. C. A.) 196 Fed. 495, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; In re Duquesne Incandescent Light Co., 176 Fed. 785, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Spittler, 151 Fed. 942, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425; In re Neff, 157 Fed. 57, 84 C. C. A. 561, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re National Wire Corp., 166 Fed. 631, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; Wood v. Fisk, 156 App. Div. 497, 141 N. Y. Supp. 342. Contra, In re Imperial Brewing Co., 143 Fed. 579, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 110; In re Inman & Co., 175 Fed. 312, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; Board of Commerce of Anu Arbor v. Security Trust Co., 225 Fed. 454, 140 C. C. A. 486, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; In re Frank E. Scott Transfer Co., 216 Fed. 308, 132 C. C. A. 452. See In re 35% Automobile Supply Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 377, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re Leslie & Griffith Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 465, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744. See Heyward v. Goldsmith (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 946, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

[115] In re Morgantown Tin Plate Co., 184 Fed. 109, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 836.

[116] In re Bevier Wood Pavement Co., 156 Fed. 583, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

[117] Northwest Fixture Co. v. Kilbourne & Clark Co., 128 Fed. 256, 62 C. C. A. 638, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 725.

for the breach of the contract, to be estimated in view of the fact that, the license having fallen in, he was at liberty to dispose of it again.[118]

The case of the breach of a contract of employment presents somewhat different features. One employed as a salesman, superintendent, manager, secretary, etc., may regard his contract of employment as dissolved by the employer's adjudication in bankruptcy (especially, it is said, in the case where the bankrupt is a corporation or a partnership) and may prove a claim for the unpaid balance of his salary to the time of the filing of the petition,[119] if it was fixed by a valid written contract or other instrument, or otherwise he may claim the reasonable value of his services.[120] But as to the right to prove a claim for so much of the agreed salary as would have been earned and payable (if bankruptcy had not intervened) from the date of the bankruptcy to the end of the stipulated period of employment, the decisions are not altogether in harmony. It has been ruled that the measure of the employé's damages in such a case would be the amount which he would have received under the contract for the remainder of the term fixed, less such amount as he would be able to earn during that time from other sources.[121] But the preponderance of authority is to the effect that the employé cannot prove a claim for any salary beyond the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, on the theory that his expectation of receiving a salary during the remainder of the term, if it can be called a debt or a claim for damages, is no more than a contingent liability, and the present statute has made no provision for the proof or allowance of claims of that character.[122] The rule is substantially the same where the contract required the payment of commissions to a salesman in addition to his salary. Such commissions as were actually earned before the date of bankruptcy constitute a provable debt, but a claim for commissions on sales which possibly or probably might have been made if the contract had continued to its appointed term is too speculative and remote to be available as a provable debt in bankruptcy.[123]

[118] In re Dr. Voorhees Awning Hood Co., 187 Fed. 611.

[119] Ex parte Pollard, 2 Low. 411, 17 N. B. R. 228, Fed. Cas. No. 11,252. See In re B. H. Gladding Co., 120 Fed. 709, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700.

[120] In re Grubbs-Wiley Grocery Co., 96 Fed. 183, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442. And see In re McCarthy Portable Elevator Co., 196 Fed. 247, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45.

[121] In re Silverman, 101 Fed. 219, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83; In re Schultz & Guthrie (D. C.) 235 Fed. 907, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[122] In re Inman & Co., 171 Fed. 185, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524; In re American Vacuum Cleaner Co., 192 Fed. 939, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; In re Dr. Voorhees Awning Hood Co., 187 Fed. 611; Orr v. Ward, 73 Ill. 318; In re D. Levy & Sons Co., 208 Fed. 479, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; In re Montague & Gillet (D. C.) 212 Fed. 452, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106.

[123] See Clairemonte v. Napier Motor Co., 11 Cal. App. 265, 104 Pac. 712; In re Silverman, 101 Fed. 219, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83.

§ 496. Promissory Notes; Consideration; Good Faith of Holder.—A promissory note is a provable debt in bankruptcy as being a "fixed liability evidenced by an instrument in writing," and may be proved by the payee or indorsee as the case may be.[124] Notes made by a corporation are provable against its estate in bankruptcy, if duly executed under proper authority and for a legitimate corporate purpose.[125] And a claim on a note may be proven against the estate of the bankrupt indorser.[126] Under former statutes it was held that a note was none the less provable in bankruptcy because it was payable in specific articles on demand,[127] though such a claim would probably now be regarded as an unliquidated demand, and its equivalent in cash would have to be fixed before proving.

But a claim founded on a promissory note will not be allowed where it appears that it was not founded upon a good and valid consideration,[128] and a renewal note, which is not supported by any fresh consideration, is not provable where the original note was without consideration.[129] But a note given by a bankrupt corporation to a stockholder for money borrowed with which to effect a composition, and which was so used, is not without consideration and may be proved as a debt in a second bankruptcy proceeding.[130] Further it is necessary that the claimant offering to prove on the note should be a holder in good faith and for value or at least (in the case of a remote indorsee) that he should prove affirmatively that his immediate indorser was a bona fide holder for value.[131] A person to whom notes are sent for discount, and who fails to pay drafts drawn against the proceeds in favor of an indorser of the notes, cannot prove his claim on the notes against the bankrupt payee of the drafts, for, having failed to pay the drafts, he has no right to retain the notes and is not a holder for value.[132] But where the holder of a note is a corporation, its position is not necessarily prejudiced by bad faith or even illegal conduct on the part of one of its officers in regard to the acquisition of the note where full value was given in cash. Thus, in one of the cases it appeared that the cashier of a national bank had discounted notes for the maker of them, far in excess of the amount

[124] In re Shelbourne, 19 N. B. R. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 12,745.

[125] In re New York Car Wheel Works, 141 Fed. 430, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571. See Moerschel v. O'Bannon, 246 Fed. 887, 159 C. C. A. 159, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786.

[126] In re Bruce, 6 Ben. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 2,044.

[127] Chandler v. Windship, 6 Mass. 310; Barker v. Mann, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 302.

[128] In re Hook, 11 N. B. R. 282, Fed. Cas. No. 6,672.

[129] In re Stanford Clothing Co., 187 Fed. 172, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124; In re Cornwall, 4 N. B. R. 400, Fed. Cas. No. 3,251. See In re New York Car Wheel Works, 139 Fed. 421, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595.

[130] In re C. H. Bennett Shoe Co., 162 Fed. 691, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

[131] In re Hopper-Morgan Co., 156 Fed. 525, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518, affirmed 166 Fed. 1020, 91 C. C. A. 37.

[132] In re Howard, 6 N. B. R. 372, Fed. Cas. No. 6,751.

which the bank could legally loan to one person, and beyond the ability of the maker and indorser of the notes to pay, and this was done without the knowledge or consent of the other officers of the bank. A criminal prosecution was instituted against the cashier and he was sentenced to imprisonment for misapplying the funds of the bank, and criminal proceedings against the maker of the notes for aiding him in so doing likewise resulted in a conviction. The bank having become insolvent, its receiver sued on the cashier's bond and recovered judgment for the amount of the penalty of such bond. But it was held that these facts did not affect the validity of the notes, nor the bank's ownership of them, and the receiver might prove the same in bankruptcy against the estate of the indorser.[133] A pledgee in good faith and for value of a promissory note, transferred to him before maturity, may prove it for its full amount against the estate in bankruptcy of the maker, whatever may have been the equities between the maker and the pledgor; but if there are such equities as would prevent the pledgor from proving, then the pledgee can receive in dividends only the amount for which he holds the note in pledge.[134]

§ 497. Judgments.—Although a verdict, not followed by the entry of judgment before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, is not a provable debt,[135] yet a judgment recovered before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy is expressly made provable by the terms of the statute,[136] irrespective of the nature of the cause of action in the suit in which it was rendered, and even though that cause of action would not of itself have constituted a provable claim.[137] Hence, provided the judgment was obtained before the beginning of the bankruptcy proceedings, it will be a provable debt when based on a cause of action for obtaining property by false and fraudulent representations,[138] or where the action was in trover to recover goods purchased by the bankrupt while insolvent, no fraudulent misrepresentations being shown,[139] or where the the cause of action was against a city marshal for paying over attached rents to the attaching creditor after notice of an assignee's claim to them,[140] and proof may be made on a judgment against [133] In re Edson, 119 Fed. 487, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505.

[134] Ex parte Kelty, 1 Low. 394, Fed. Cas. No. 7,681.

[135] In re Ostrom, 185 Fed. 988, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; Black v. McClelland, 12 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,462.

[136] Johnson v. Joslyn, 45 Wash. 310, 88 Pac. 324; Graham v. Pierson, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 247; People's Nat. Bank v. Maxson, 168 Iowa, 318, 150 N. W. 601.

[137] Howland v. Carson, 28 Ohio St. 625. But compare Turner v. Turner, 108 Fed. 785, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289, holding that a judgment for alimony is not a provable debt, as to which see infra, § 509.

[138] In re Lockwood (D. C.) 240 Fed. 158, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478.

[139] Kreitlein v. Ferger, 238 U. S. 21, 35 Sup. Ct. 685, 59 L. Ed. 1184, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 862.

[140] Ulner v. Doran, 167 App. Div. 259, 152 N. Y. Supp. 655.

the bankrupt for injuries to the judgment creditor's property caused by the bankrupt's negligence,[141] or for damages sustained by the creditor in an automobile accident.[142] The same conditions being fulfilled, as to the time of recovery of the judgment, a judgment in an action for a tort, such as fraud, conspiracy, or deceit, is provable in bankruptcy,[143] and so is a judgment for damages for negligence causing death,[144] or for breach of promise of marriage,[145] or a judgment recovered by a woman against her seducer,[146] or one fixing the liability of a stockholder of an insolvent corporation for a contribution equal to the amount of his stock to pay its debts.[147] Further, the judgment is conclusive of the validity and amount of the claim,[148] though it may perhaps be impeached on the ground of fraud or collusion in its procurement or for want of jurisdiction.[149] And its conclusiveness, and its availability as a provable claim, are not impaired by the fact that an appeal is pending or a writ of error with supersedeas of execution.[150] But this effect cannot be attributed to a mere decree nisi which, under the law of the state, is only preliminary and requires a further order to make it final.[151] It has also been held that, for the purpose of proving a claim in bankruptcy, a debt is not so merged in a judgment recovered upon it that the judgment must be proved instead of the debt. Hence where a creditor has a provable claim and has brought suit upon it before the adjudication in bankruptcy, and recovers a judgment after the adjudication and before the debtor's application for discharge, he may prove the original debt, although the judgment was for a less sum than the debt claimed and offered for proof.[152]

As to the effect of a judgment recovered after the commencement

[141] In re Cunningham (D. C.) 253 Fed. 663, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

[142] Jefferson Transfer Co. v. Hull, 166 Wis. 438, 166 N. W. 1.

[143] Landgraf v. Griffith, 41 Ind. App. 372, 83 N. E. 1021.

[144] In re Putnam, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923.

[145] In re Fife, 109 Fed. 880, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258; In re Sidle, 2 N. B. R. 220, Fed. Cas. No. 12,844.

[146] In re McCauley, 101 Fed. 223, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

[147] Dight v. Chapman, 44 Or. 265, 75 Pac. 585, 65 L. R. A. 793.

[148] McKinsey v. Harding, 4 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 8,866.

[149] In re Pease, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 657; In re Phelps, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 481; In re Van Buren, 19 N. B. R. 149, Fed. Cas. No. 16,833.

[150] In re Leszynsky, 3 Ben. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 8,278; In re Sheehan, 8 N. B. R. 356, Fed. Cas. No. 12,737; In re Berlin Dye Works & Laundry Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 683, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823; Moore v. Douglas, 230 Fed. 399, 144 C. C. A. 541, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740.

[151] In re Wiseman, 123 Fed. 185, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 545, affirmed Hibberd v. Bailey, 129 Fed. 575, 64 C. C. A. 143, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104.

[152] In re Pinkel, 1 Nat. Bankr. News 138; In re Brown, 5 Ben. 1, 3 N. B. R. 584, Fed. Cas. No. 1,975; In re Crawford, 3 N. B. R. 698, Fed. Cas. No. 3,363; In re Stansfield, 4 Sawy. 334, 16 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 13,294; In re Vickery, 3 N. B. R. 696, Fed. Cas. No. 16,930; Blair v. Carter, 78 Va. 621. And see In re Smith, 176 Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

of the bankruptcy proceedings, upon a pre-existing debt, the terms of the act of 1867 were made the subject of various and conflicting decisions by the courts.[153] But the question has been clearly settled by the language of the present statute, which includes among the "debts which may be proved" those which are "founded upon provable debts reduced to judgments after the filing of the petition and before the consideration of the bankrupt's application for a discharge, less costs incurred and interests accrued after the filing of the petition and up to the time of the entry of such judgments."[154] Under this provision, a creditor holding a promissory note, valid and enforceable against the maker at the date of the latter's adjudication in bankruptcy, but against which the statute of limitations has nearly run, may reduce the same to judgment by suit brought in a state court after such adjudication, and the judgment will establish the claim and stop the running of the statute, though it will not give the creditor a lien or priority or enable him to levy on the bankrupt's property.[155] But a judgment so recovered will not be provable in bankruptcy unless the claim or demand in suit was a provable debt at the date of the filing of the petition. Thus, a claim for damages for negligence causing personal injuries is not a provable debt, and it is not made provable by the recovery of a judgment on it after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[156] And if the claim (for damages) was not of a provable character, a judgment upon it against the bankrupt in a state court, actually rendered after the bankruptcy, will not be a provable debt, although, by direction of an appellate court, which reversed a judgment in the bankrupt's favor, it was entered nunc pro tunc as of the date of the reversed judgment, which was before the bankruptcy.[157]

It is also a provision of this part of the statute that the judgment, to be provable as a debt, should have been rendered before the consideration of the bankrupt's application for discharge. But it has sometimes been held by the state courts that they may render final judgment against the bankrupt after his discharge, though in this case the [153] See Black v. McClelland, 12 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,462; In re Maybin, 15 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 9,337; In re Stansfield, 4 Sawy. 334, 16 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 13,294; In re Gallison, 2 Low. 72, 5 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 5,203; In re Williams, 2 N. B. R. 229, Fed. Cas. No. 17,705; Randall v. Sutton, 2 Houst. (Del.) 510.

[154] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a, clause 5. See In re McBryde, 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729. Compare Hackett v. Supreme Council A. L. H., 206 Mass. 139, 92 N. E. 133. And see Gordon v. Texas Co., 119 Me. 49, 109 Atl. 368.

[155] In re McBryde, 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

[156] In re Crescent Lumber Co., 154 Fed. 724, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112. But see In re Standard Aero Corp. of New York (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 779, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

[157] In re Kroeger Bros. (D. C.) 262 Fed. 463, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

judgment merely establishes the amount of the debt or claim, and it should be framed in such limited form as not to involve a judgment in personam, though adequate to enable the creditor to reap the benefit of his proof of claim.[158]

The judgments spoken of in this part of the statute are evidently those recovered against the bankrupt himself. Judgments against the trustee in bankruptcy apparently stand upon a different footing. At least it has been held, in a case where the trustee, eighteen months after the adjudication, brought an action in a state court against a supposed debtor of the estate, but was defeated, and the defendant recovered a judgment on a counterclaim against the bankrupt, that the trustee was liable for the costs of the action, but that the creditor, having filed no claim within the time allowed, could not prove his judgment against the estate.[159]

§ 498. Equitable Claims and Demands.—As courts of bankruptcy have jurisdiction in equity as well as at law, equitable claims against a bankrupt are provable if within the purview of the general rules of equity, even though they have no status at law.[160] Thus, in one case, it appeared that the wife of a bankrupt had loaned a large sum of money to a partnership of which her husband was a member. It was argued that she could not file a claim for the money against the estate in bankruptcy, for the reason that, under the local law, a married woman could not make contracts with her husband. But it was held that in equity, and therefore in bankruptcy, a married woman could contract with her husband in relation to her separate estate and even sue him with regard to it, and hence the claim in question, being enforceable in equity was provable in bankruptcy.[161] But a mere claim in equity to rescind a contract is not a "debt" which is provable in bankruptcy.[162]

§ 499. Contingent Demands and Liabilities.—The bankruptcy act of 1841 provided for the proving of "uncertain or contingent demands" against the estate of the bankrupt. But it was held that, so long as it

[158] Barry v. New York Holding & Construction Co., 229 Mass. 308, 118 N. E. 639.

[159] In re Havens (D. C.) 182 Fed. 367, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116.

[160] In re Putman, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; In re Upson, 123 Fed. 807, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602; Sigsby v. Willis, 3 Ben. 371, 3 N. B. R. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 12,849; In re Blandin, 1 Low. 543, 5 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 1,527; In re Buckhause, 2 Low. 331, 10 N. B. R. 206, Fed. Cas. No. 2,086; In re Coney Island Lumber Co., 199 Fed. 803; Walter v. Atha (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 75, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150.

[161] In re James, 131 Fed. 401, 65 C. C. A. 385, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 321, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573. And see In re Batchelder & Lincoln Co., 122 Fed. 355, 58 C. C. A. 517, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; In re Jordan & Blake, 2 Fed. 319.

[162] Doggett v. Emerson, 1 Woodb. & M. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 3,962.

remained wholly uncertain whether a contract or engagement would ever give rise to an actual duty or liability, and there were no means of removing the uncertainty by calculation, the contract or engagement was not provable.[163] The act of 1867 provided for the proof and allowance of "contingent debts and contingent liabilities," but only in case the contingency should happen before the order for the final dividend.[164] The present statute makes no provision whatever for the proof of contingent claims or demands, and therefore they are not provable.[165] A contingent claim, in this sense, has been defined as one where "all the facts necessary to be shown to establish the bankrupt's liability to the claimant had not occurred before the petition in bankruptcy was filed."[166] Thus, bonds of a corporation which by their terms were payable only out of funds created from the surplus earnings of the company are not provable in bankruptcy against the company, where there never had been any surplus earnings, and such funds had therefore never been created.[167] And in other cases it has been thought to be a claim "the valuation or estimation of which it is substantially impossible to prove," on account of the uncertain or fortuitous elements which might enter into it.[168] But perhaps it is a better definition to say that a "contingent" claim is one as to which it remains uncertain, at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, whether or not the bankrupt will ever become liable to pay it.[169] If it is certain that he will have to pay the claim, or some proportion of it, though it cannot yet be said when he will have to pay or how much, the claim is "unliquidated" but not contingent. In this view the liability of an indorser of the bankrupt's promissory note, not due at the time of the filing of the petition, is no real exception to the rule against proving contingent demands.[170] On the oth-

[163] Riggin v. Magwire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. Ed. 282.

[164] Zimmer v. Schleehauf, 115 Mass. 52, 11 N. B. R. 313.

[165] Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 23 Sup. Ct. 757, 47 L. Ed. 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139; In re American Vacuum Cleaner Co., 192 Fed. 939, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621; In re Inman & Co., 171 Fed. 185, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524; In re Wilson, 194 Fed. 564, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 867; In re Hartman, 166 Fed. 776, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; Phenix Nat. Bank v. Waterbury, 123 App. Div. 453, 108 N. Y. Supp. 391; Leader v. Mattingly, 140 Ala. 444, 37 South. 270; Cotting v. Hooper, Lewis & Co., 220 Mass. 273, 107 N. E. 931.

[166] Colman Co. v. Withoft (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 250, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328. A seller of lumber to an individual, with the understanding that a corporation should take over the lumber, is not entitled, on the corporation's being adjudged a bankrupt, to prove a claim against it for the amount due. In re Lance Lumber Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 598.

[167] Synnott v. Tombstone Consol. Mines Co., 208 Fed. 251, 128 C. C. A. 451, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[168] Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 23 Sup. Ct. 757, 47 L. Ed. 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

[169] In re Mullings Clothing Co., 238 Fed. 58, 151 C. C. A. 134, L. R. A. 1918A, 539, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189.

[170] "An apparent exception to the rule that contingent claims may not be proved under section 63a is the case of an indorser of the commercial paper of the bankrupt, not due at the time of the filing of the petition, but whose liability er hand, the liability of a bankrupt on a guaranty executed by him of the payment by a corporation of dividends at a certain rate on its stock, owned by another, with respect to dividends not due or payable at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, is so far contingent that a claim based thereon is not a provable debt.[171] And the same rule has been applied to an agreement by the bankrupt to pay an annuity to his divorced wife "during her life or until she remarries."[172] And so of a claim against the bankrupt by his lessee for prospective profits of the business conducted at a stand on the bankrupt's premises, on breach of the lease by the bankrupt.[173] Nor can a claim be proved on a covenant in a lease permitting the lessor, on default, to re-enter and relet the premises at the risk of the lessee, the latter to remain liable for the rent and be credited with the sums actually realized.[174] But a contract liability of the bankrupt, contingent at the time the petition was filed, but liquidated within the year allowed for making proof, is a provable debt.[175]

The mere giving of notes to evidence, or in prepayment of, obligations which are clearly conditional, will not annul the condition or make an otherwise unprovable claim allowable in bankruptcy.[176] But on the other hand, the pendency of proceedings to open a guardian's settlement of accounts does not preclude the former ward from filing as claims against the guardian on his bankruptcy notes which he had given her for the amount which he admitted to be due.[177]

§ 500. Unliquidated Demands.—After enumerating five classes of provable debts, the bankruptcy act provides that "unliquidated claims

as indorser thereafter becomes fixed. Moch v. Market Street Bank, 107 Fed. 897, 47 C. C. A. 49, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41; In re Semmer Glass Co., 135 Fed. 77, 67 C. C. A. 551, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; In re Smith, 146 Fed. 923, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112. But it may be doubted whether the liability of an indorser in that class of cases is in any true sense contingent. The extent of his liability is at all times known, for it is measured by the note itself. Upon the adjudication in bankruptcy it would seem that there is an end to the contingency that the bankrupt himself may pay the note, and that there remains between that date and the maturity of the indorser's liability nothing but a question of time." Colman Co. v. Withoft (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 250, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

[171] In re Pettingill, 137 Fed. 143, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728. Bonds of a corporation which by their terms were payable only out of funds created from the surplus earnings of the company, are not provable in bankruptcy against the company, where there never had been any surplus earnings, and such funds had therefore never been created. Synnott v. Tombstone Consol. Mines Co., 209 Fed. 251.

[172] Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 23 Sup. Ct. 757, 47 L. Ed. 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

[173] In re Leland, 8 Ben. 254, Fed. Cas. No. 8,233.

[174] Ex parte Lake, 2 Low. 544, 16 N. B. R. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 7,991; Bowditch v. Raymond, 146 Mass. 109, 15 N. E. 285. And see In re Gallacher Coal Co., 205 Fed. 183, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766.

[175] In re James Dunlap Carpet Co., 163 Fed. 541, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 882.

[176] In re Wisconsin Engine Co., 234 Fed. 281, 148 C. C. A. 183, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106.

[177] Beaven v. Stuart, 250 Fed. 972, 163 C. C. A. 222, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

against the bankrupt may, pursuant to application to the court, be liquidated in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate." [178] But it is held that this clause is not to be understood as defining an additional class of debts which shall be provable. It relates merely to procedure, and provides for the liquidation of such of the claims enumerated in the preceding paragraph as may require that process in order to fix their amount. In other words, it covers only such claims as, when liquidated, will be provable debts under the specifications of the preceding paragraph, and does not enlarge the class of provable debts, nor permit the proof of claims for damages for torts not reduced to certainty by judgment.[179]

The difference between a liquidated and an unliquidated claim relates only to the certainty of its amount, not to the certainty of its being due.[180] That is, the term "unliquidated claims" includes demands for which the bankrupt is certainly answerable in some sum, though that sum is not yet ascertained, but not demands for which he may not be liable at all.[181] Thus, a claim for damages for breach of a contract, where the amount of damages is to be ascertained by proof and not by mere calculation, is an unliquidated demand,[182] and so is the liability

[178] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63b.

[179] Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 23 Sup. Ct. 747, 47 L. Ed. 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139; In re Southern Steel Co., 183 Fed. 489, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358; In re New York Tunnel Co., 159 Fed. 688, 86 C. C. A. 556, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; In re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; Brown & Adams v. United Button Co., 149 Fed. 48, 79 C. C. A. 70, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565. As to claims for unliquidated damages for torts, not reduced to judgment, see infra, § 514.

Moore v. Douglas, 230 Fed. 399, 144 C. C. A. 541, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740. The claim of an injured employee against his employer, unliquidated and not reduced to judgment until after the employer's adjudication in bankruptcy, is not a provable debt. Eberlein v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 164 Wis. 242, 159 N. W. 553.

[180] Where a corporation had made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against one of the stockholders, and the latter's liability for the difference between the amount of his stock subscription and the value of property transferred in payment thereof had ceased to be contingent, although not yet liquidated, since the corporate debts for which a subscription would be a trust fund were then capable of determination, the receiver of the corporation can prove a claim for such liability against the bankrupt's estate. In re Thompson (D. C.) 257 Fed. 140, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142.

[181] In re Wisconsin Engine Co., 234 Fed. 281, 148 C. C. A. 183, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106; Crane v. Eastern Transp. Line, 48 Conn. 361. "We understand by liquidation an amount certain and fixed, either by the act and agreement of the parties or by operation of law—a sum which cannot be changed by the proof—it is so much or nothing—and that the term does not necessarily refer to a writing. An open account is the reverse of this." Nisbet v. Lawson, 1 Ga. 275, 287. A claim under an agreement by a bankrupt to pay an annuity to his divorced wife "during her life or until she remarries" is not a provable debt on account of the substantial impossibility of estimating the value of the contingency of a remarriage. Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 23 Sup. Ct. 757, 47 L. Ed. 1084, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

[182] In re Erie Lumber Co. (D. C.) 150 Fed. 817, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689. A claim against a bankrupt for breach of promise to marry, on which a suit is pending in a state court, is an unliqarising upon a written guaranty to pay the future indebtedness of another person upon an open account,[183] and the liability of a bankrupt broker for stock purchased by him for a customer and converted to his own use, the exact time of the conversion not being shown.[184] So where plaintiff was a partner with defendant in a transaction involving the purchase and sale of a certain commodity, and plaintiff knew, when defendant filed his petition in bankruptcy, that the venture would result in a loss, leaving the defendant indebted to him, though the exact amount was not then known and could not be ascertained until the rest of the stock on hand was disposed of, it was held that plaintiff had an "unliquidated claim" against defendant at the date of the bankruptcy.[185] In this classification also are included losses suffered by a broker in disposing of goods purchased for the bankrupt which he failed or refused to receive,[186] and a claim against a testamentary trustee for negligence and mismanagement.[187] But on the other hand, a claim against the estate of a bankrupt for sums of money obtained by him from the claimants, while in their employment, by means of forged indorsements, pilfering of cash, and inducing them to purchase stocks on false and fictitious orders, cannot be denied allowance, on the ground of its being an unliquidated demand, where the amounts taken from and paid out by the claimants are certain.[188]

When a creditor's claim against the bankrupt is unliquidated in this sense, he cannot at once proceed to make proof of it and have it allowed. He must first make an application to the court to have the claim "liquidated," and it will then be liquidated in such manner as the court shall direct,—or it must be liquidated by suit or in some other manner which the court will allow or accept, without a previous application to it,—and thereafter he may prove the claim in the manner prescribed by law, and secure its allowance for the amount fixed by such liquidation.[189] As the manner of liquidating a claim of this kind is left to the direction of the court, any kind of judicial investigation will be sufficient which results in establishing the validity of the claim and definitely fixing its amount, provided the court will direct or sanction it. Thus, the liquidation may be effected by a hearing before the referee, by a plenary suit uidated claim, and the court may properly order it liquidated by trial in the state court. In re Martin, 228 Fed. 184, 142 C. C. A. 540, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776.

183 Hargroves v. Cooke, 15 Ga. 321.

184 In re Graff, 117 Fed. 343, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744.

185 Dycus v. Brown, 135 Ky. 140, 121 S. W. 1010, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 190.

186 In re Smith, 6 Ben. 187, Fed. Cas. No. 12,975.

187 In re Griffin, 188 Fed. 389.

188 In re Filer, 125 Fed. 261, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

189 In re Rubel, 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Silverman, 101 Fed. 219, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83; In re Heinsfurter, 97 Fed. 198, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113; In re Clough, 2 Ben. 508, 2 N. B. R. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 2,905.

in a court of competent jurisdiction, or by permitting an action pending in any court to proceed to judgment.[190] Hence where an action on an unliquidated claim is pending in a state court when bankruptcy occurs, and the trustee does not apply for a stay but permits the case to go to judgment, the claim is thereby liquidated, and the judgment affords proper proof of the amount of the claim.[191] And where a claim secured by a mortgage on the bankrupt's stock in trade was attacked by the trustee as a preference, and thereupon the creditor sued in a state court to establish the validity of his mortgage, and in that action the mortgage was held to be invalid as a preference, it was held that the creditor's claim was thereby "liquidated," and was provable as an unsecured claim.[192]

§ 501. Assigned Claims.—Where a provable claim against the bankrupt existed at the time the petition was filed, a subsequent assignment of it will carry with it all the rights and remedies which the assignor had, as to participating in the bankruptcy proceedings and receiving a share of the estate.[193] But, except in the case of negotiable paper, the assignee will take the claim in the same condition in which his assignor held it, and will acquire no stronger or higher rights.[194] He may, however, prove the claim for its full amount although he purchased it at a discount,[195] and he may prove the claim and receive dividends on it, notwithstanding that the assignment was intended only as collateral security.[196] But where various creditors have all assigned their claims to a committee, with a view to purchasing the bankrupt's property and selling it for the benefit of the assignors, the right to prove the claims in the bankruptcy is in the committee, and not in the individual creditors.[197] The form by which a claim against a bankrupt is transferred is immaterial, and cannot affect the right of the assignee to prove the claim, provided only that it is sufficient to estop the original holder from asserting any right to it.[198]

[190] In re Buchan's Soap Corp., 169 Fed. 1017, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re Duquesne Incandescent Light Co., 176 Fed. 785, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re United Button Co., 140 Fed. 495, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

[191] In re Buchan's Soap Corp., 169 Fed. 1017, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Barry v. New York Holding & Construction Co., 229 Mass. 308, 118 N. E. 639.

[192] Powell v. Leavitt (C. C. A.) 150 Fed. 89.

[193] In re Fitzgerald, 191 Fed. 95, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; In re Breakwater Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 375, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752.

[194] In re Wiener & Goodman Shoe Co., 96 Fed. 949, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; Humphreys v. Blight, 1 Wash. C. C. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 6,870.

[195] In re Houghton, 5 Law Rep. 321, Fed. Cas. No. 6,728.

[196] In re American Specialty Co. (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 807, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463. Compare In re Eagles, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

[197] In re E. T. Kenney Co., 136 Fed. 451, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611.

[198] In re Miner, 117 Fed. 953, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100.

But proof of an assigned claim may be defeated by evidence of a design to defraud other creditors or to defeat the operation of the bankruptcy act. It is not, indeed, unlawful to buy up claims against an insolvent person for the purpose of preventing or stopping proceedings in bankruptcy against him.[199] And it has even been held that the allowance of a claim, in favor of an assignee who acquired it after the adjudication, but from an innocent and bona fide holder in whose hands it was valid and provable, will not be set aside upon an allegation by other creditors that the assignee bought the claim for the purpose of acquiring a majority interest in the estate, of controlling the bankruptcy proceedings in the interest of the bankrupt and himself, and of hindering and defrauding the other creditors, when it does not appear that such fraudulent purpose has actually been carried out to the injury of other creditors.[200] But where a person intending to go into bankruptcy procured a friend to buy up a large part of his indebtedness at a small fraction of its nominal value, by disseminating false and discouraging statements as to the amount of dividends his estate would pay, it was remarked that no court of bankruptcy would hesitate to hold that claims thus tinctured with fraud should not be proven against the estate.[201] Yet, if the trustee has assets in hand more than sufficient to pay all other claims, debts purchased by agents for the bankrupt may be allowed to the extent of the sums paid therefor by the purchasers.[202]

§ 502. Debts Payable in the Future.—It is no objection to the proof and allowance of a claim that the time fixed for its payment, by the agreement of the parties or by the instrument which evidences it, has not arrived at the date of filing the petition in bankruptcy, provided that it was at that date a "fixed liability" and "absolutely owing."[203] But if the debt was not yet payable, at the commencement of the proceedings, and did not bear interest, the same clause of the statute requires that there shall be a "rebate of interest" upon it, which apparently means that the claim cannot be proved for its full amount, but must be discounted at the legal rate of interest, or that it can be proved only for its "present worth." To take the simplest form of illustration of the general rule, a promissory note made by the bankrupt is a provable debt in bankruptcy, although not due at the time of the filing of the petition but at a future day.[204] So in the case of an ordinary debt, if the debtor

[199] In re Strachan, 3 Biss. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 13,519.

[200] In re Headley, 97 Fed. 765, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

[201] In re State Ins. Co., 16 Fed. 756.

[202] In re Lathrop, 5 Ben. 199, 5 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 8,104.

[203] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a. See De Long v. Mechanics & Metals Nat. Bank, 168 App. Div. 525, 153 N. Y. Supp. 1010.

[204] In re Percy Ford Co., 199 Fed. 334, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 919.

has procured an extension of time for its payment, and becomes bankrupt, the creditor has a provable claim, even before the expiration of the time agreed on.[205] As to future accruing installments on a contract to pay an annuity, the law is not so clear. But the best present opinion appears to be that a penal bond, executed by a person who is thereafter adjudged a bankrupt, to secure the payment to the obligee of an annuity during life, is an instrument creating a fixed liability absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition, payable in the future, and is provable as a debt against the bankrupt's estate for the amount of the penalty stated therein, where the value of the annuity, computed on the life tables, exceeds such penalty.[206]

§ 503. Interest Accrued and Accruing.—Where a creditor's claim was "absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition" in bankruptcy, his proof of debt may include, and he should be allowed, "any interest thereon which would have been recoverable at that date."[207] And interest in the case of a debt put into judgment before the petition was filed may be proved with the debt.[208] But when the statute speaks of interest "recoverable" at the commencement of the proceedings, it evidently means that interest can be claimed and added to the debt only in cases where the parties have expressly agreed that the debt should bear interest, or where the debt is of such a character that it carries legal interest by force of law without the stipulation of the parties. Hence the creditor must show either a debt entitled to interest by operation of law, or else a mutual agreement of the parties that interest should be charged.[209] The right to claim interest in bankruptcy proceedings may also depend upon the making of a previous demand for payment.[210] And on the other hand, even though the parties may have agreed that no interest should be payable on a loan of money, yet where this stipulation was based on the performance of certain acts on the part [205] Ecfort v. Greely, 6 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 4,260.

[206] Cobb v. Overman, 109 Fed. 65, 48 C. C. A. 223, 54 L. R. A. 369, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324 (overruling Bray v. Cobb, 100 Fed. 270, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788); Haywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. Law, 94; Roosevelt v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 266.

[207] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a. See In re Orne, 1 Ben. 361, 1 N. B. R. 57, Fed. Cas. No. 10,581; J. & S. Ferguson v. Lyle, 267 Fed. 817, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Mobile Chair Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 211, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134. The holder of tax certificates on mortgaged property belonging to an estate in bankruptcy is entitled to interest at the ordinary legal rate of 6 per cent. but not to the larger interest required by the local law to be paid on redemption from tax sales. Dayton v. Stanard, 241 U. S. 588, 36 Sup. Ct. 695, 60 L. Ed. 1190, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Clark Realty Co., 253 Fed. 938, 166 C. C. A. 38, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 403.

[208] Ex parte O'Neil, 1 Low. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 10,527.

[209] In re Stevens, 104 Fed. 323, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9. See A. S. Coats Shingle Co. v. Chester Snow Log & Shingle Co., 106 Wash. 227, 179 Pac. 862.

[210] In re North Carolina Car Co., 127 Fed. 178, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488.

of the borrower, his failure to observe the contract may entitle the lender to claim interest as against his estate in bankruptcy.[211] But it is said that interest should not be allowed where the debt is one which would have been barred by the statute of limitations if it had not been saved by a new promise.[212] And if, by the law of the state, the taking of usury causes a forfeiture of all interest, when the debt is put in suit, the same consequence attends the presentation in bankruptcy of a claim on which usury has been exacted.[213]

In the case of all ordinary debts, interest accruing subsequent to the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy is not provable.[214] But interest may run on a valid debt secured by a mortgage or other specific lien up to the time of its payment out of the proceeds of a sale of the property.[215] And in the unusual case where an estate in bankruptcy proves to be solvent, that is, where all proved claims are paid in full and there remains a balance in the hands of the trustee, the proving creditors are entitled to an additional allowance of interest, from the date of filing the petition to the date when the last payment on their debts was made, before any part of the surplus shall be returned to the bankrupt.[216]

§ 504. Costs, Expenses, and Collection Fees.—The statute provides for the proof and allowance of a claim for "taxable costs incurred in good faith by a creditor before the filing of the petition in an action to recover a provable debt."[217] This will include costs incurred in an attachment proceeding prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, though the lien of the attachment is dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy,[218] more especially, it appears, where the attachment proceedings had the effect of preserving the property for the benefit of the general creditors.[219] So also, costs incurred by a judgment creditor in obtaining the judgment and in defending an appeal therefrom are [211] In re Fenn, 172 Fed. 620, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 833.

[212] In re Reed, 6 Biss. 250, 11 N. B. R. 94, Fed. Cas. No. 11,635.

[213] In re Prescott, 5 Biss. 523, 9 N. B. R. 385, Fed. Cas. No. 11,389.

[214] In re Haake, 2 Sawy. 231, 7 N. B. R. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 5,883; In re Bugbee, 9 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 2,115.

[215] In re Torchia, 185 Fed. 576, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188.

[216] Johnson v. Norris, 190 Fed. 459, 111 C. C. A. 291, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; In re John Osborn's Sons & Co., 177 Fed. 184, 100 C. C. A. 392, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65; Bromley v. Goodere, 1 Atkyns, 75; Ex parte Mills, 2 Ves. Jr. 295; Clemons v. Clemons, 69 Vt. 545, 38 Atl. 314; In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[217] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a, clause 3. See Ex parte Foster, 2 Story, 131, Fed. Cas. No. 4,960; In re Preston, 5 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 11,393.

[218] In re Allen, 96 Fed. 512, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; In re Preston, 5 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 11,393; In re Romm (D. C.) 235 Fed. 383, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 509. Compare In re Hatje, 6 Biss. 436, 12 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 6,215.

[219] In re Heller, 176 Fed. 656, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 792.

provable against the estate of the surety on the appeal bond.[220] And although the "costs" allowable are ordinarily only those taxable under the law of the state where the action was maintained, and must be limited to the amounts fixed by that law, yet it is competent for the parties to a litigation to stipulate for the payment to such officers as a referee or master in chancery, and also to a stenographer, of fees in excess of the statutory rate, and when they have done so, the amount agreed upon may be proved and allowed in bankruptcy.[221] But costs, to be allowable at all, must have been incurred in an action to recover a provable debt, and hence the costs of an attachment laid by the wife of the bankrupt in a libel for divorce are not provable in the bankruptcy.[222] And further, the costs must have been incurred "in good faith." But a creditor who sues, recovers judgment, and levies execution before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy cannot be charged with bad faith merely because he may have known or believed that the debtor was in financial straits when he began his suit.[223] But expenses and disbursements incurred by a creditor in endeavoring to defeat the bankruptcy act and to obtain a preference over other creditors cannot be allowed as a claim against the estate.[224] The question of the allowances to be made to an assignee for the benefit of creditors, including compensation for his own services, when the assignment is avoided by the adjudication of the assignor in bankruptcy, and the property turned over to the trustee, has been considered in an earlier section.[225]

Where the creditor's claim is based upon a note which contains a stipulation for the payment of an attorney's fee, in addition to principal and interest, in case the note is "placed in the hands of an attorney for collection," the right to add the attorney's fee to the amount of the claim, in proving it in bankruptcy will depend upon the concurrence of two things, the maturity of the note and the placing it in an attorney's hands for collection, both before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. If the note fell due and was so placed for collection, and the bankruptcy of the maker occurred after both these events, then the creditor will be entitled to prove his claim for the stipulated attor-

220 Coe v. Waters, 16 Colo. App. 311, 64 Pac. 1054.

221 In re J. B. Brewster & Co., 180 Fed. 109, 103 C. C. A. 42, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838.

222 In re Foye, 2 Low. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 5,021.

223 In re Harnden, 200 Fed. 172, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

224 In re Archenbrown, 8 N. B. R. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 503.

225 Supra, § 444. And see Summers v. Abbott, 122 Fed. 36, 58 C. C. A. 352, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; Bramble v. Brett, 230 Fed. 385, 144 C. C. A. 527, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526; In re Sobol (D. C.) 230 Fed. 652, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804; Hume v. Myers, 242 Fed. 827, 155 C. C. A. 415, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

ney's fee in addition to the face of the note.[226] But if the note did not mature until after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, no such fee can be claimed, although it may have been given to an attorney for collection when due.[227] And on the other hand, although the note fell due before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, yet if it was not placed in the hands of an attorney for collection until after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, the claim for an attorney's fee cannot be proved, because not a "fixed liability absolutely owing" at the commencement of the proceedings.[228] Further, where the law of the state regards a stipulation of this kind as merely a contract of indemnity,—that is, as creating a liability for reasonable fees for services rendered, not exceeding the amount stipulated,—a creditor will not be entitled to the allowance of such a fee unless he gives proof of collection services actually rendered and entitling him to indemnification.[229] Nor should an attorney's fee be allowed where the payee of the note, filing it for proof, is himself an attorney.[230] In the case of an attorney's fee stipulated for in a mortgage, its allowance or rejection in bankruptcy will depend upon the wording of the particular instrument.[231] Where the mortgagee proves his claim as a secured creditor, and the property is sold by the trustee in bankruptcy at private sale under orders of the court, a fee for the mortgagee's attorney cannot be claimed where the instrument only stipulated for such a fee in case it became "necessary to forclose" the mortgage "by suit or proceedings in court," [232] but otherwise where it provided for an attorney's fee "in case legal services should become necessary to protect the interests" of the mortgagee.[233] Although a state statute provides that a mortgagee may recover attorneys' fees on foreclosure, provided he will previously give a certain notice of his intention to foreclose, yet such [226] In re Edens Co., 151 Fed. 940, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643; In re Ledbetter (D. C.) 267 Fed. 893, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677. But see In re Mobile Chair Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 211.

[227] In re T. H. Thompson Milling Co., 144 Fed. 314, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; In re Edens Co., 151 Fed. 940, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643; In re Garlington, 115 Fed. 999, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602. And see In re Harris (D. C.) 272 Fed. 351, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

[228] In re Keeton, Stell & Co., 126 Fed. 426, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; In re V. & M. Lumber Co., 182 Fed. 231; In re Gebhard, 140 Fed. 571, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381. Compare Merchants' Bank v. Thomas, 121 Fed. 306, 57 C. C. A. 374, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

[229] McCabe v. Patton, 174 Fed. 217, 98 C. C. A. 225, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335.

[230] In re Hersey (D. C.) 171 Fed. 1004, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863.

[231] A claim for attorney's fees under a stipulation in a mortgage which was not due when the petition was filed, and under which no services had been rendered, is not allowable against the bankrupt's estate. British & American Mortgage Co. v. Stuart, 210 Fed. 425, 127 C. C. A. 157, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465.

[232] In re Roche, 101 Fed. 956, 42 C. C. A. 115, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[233] In re Holmes Lumber Co., 189 Fed. 178, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119.

fees do not constitute a provable claim in bankruptcy, where the bankruptcy of the mortgagor intervened after the giving of such notice, but before any foreclosure was had.[234]

As to the allowance of fees to the attorneys of creditors, independently of the agreement of the parties or of any statutory provisions, the rule is that such an allowance may be made on equitable considerations for services from which the estate in bankruptcy has derived benefit, and to the extent only that such services were beneficial in fact.[235] Thus, attorneys who filed a petition in involuntary bankruptcy for creditors, which was defective and insufficient to warrant an adjudication, a second petition presented by other creditors resulting in an adjudication, are not entitled to an allowance of fees from the estate.[236] So, where an adjudication of bankruptcy was made against a corporation which was already in the hands of a receiver appointed by a state court, and the attorneys for the receiver antagonized the bankruptcy proceedings and instigated litigation which delayed and obstructed such proceedings and caused a large amount of expense to the estate, it was held that they were not entitled to the allowance of any fees from the estate, and their belief that they were within their legal rights, and that the state court had prior jurisdiction of the case, was considered immaterial; and it was further held that they could not be allowed compensation for any services which were actually beneficial to the estate, where it appeared that, as a whole, their services cost the estate and the general creditors several times the amount, in increased expenses of administration.[237]

§ 505. Liability of Bankrupt as Indorser, Guarantor, or Surety.—The liability of a bankrupt as an indorser of commercial paper is undoubtedly a debt provable against his estate.[238] And where a note has matured at the time of the filing of the petition, and there have been presentation, demand of payment, and protest, the liability of an in-

[234] In re Weiland, 197 Fed. 116, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620.

[235] In re Zier & Co., 142 Fed. 102, 73 C. C. A. 326, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646. See In re Crave & Martin Co., 183 Fed. 769, 106 C. C. A. 180; In re Duran Mercantile Co., 199 Fed. 961, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450; In re Coney Island Lumber Co., 199 Fed. 803. Where a receiver, appointed by a state court which was without jurisdiction to administer property of the bankrupt, performed valuable services in conserving the property, he may, on petition to the court of bankruptcy, be allowed compensation. State of Missouri v. Angle, 236 Fed. 644, 149 C. C. A. 640, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394.

[236] In re Fischer (C. C. A.) 175 Fed. 531, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

[237] In re Zier & Co., 142 Fed. 102, 73 C. C. A. 326, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re M. Zier & Co., 127 Fed. 399, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527.

[238] In re Letchworth, 19 Fed. 873; Hunt v. Taylor, 108 Mass. 508, 4 N. B. R. 683; In re Morse, 11 N. B. R. 482, Fed. Cas. No. 9,853; Ex parte Farnsworth, 1 Low. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 4,672; In re Henry & S. G. Lindeman (D. C.) 238 Fed. 639, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

dorser thereon is a "fixed liability absolutely owing," within the meaning of the bankruptcy act.[239] But some of the cases have maintained that no provable claim on an indorsement can be said to have arisen unless dishonor, protest, and notice have preceded the institution of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[240] And in the case of a promissory note payable on demand, and which must therefore be presented for payment within a reasonable time in order to charge the indorser, it has been said that where such a note is not presented nor any demand made within four years, a protest made after that lapse of time does not fix any liability on the indorser, and a claim founded on the note cannot be proved against his estate in bankruptcy.[241] But these views have not the support of the weight of authority. The prevailing opinion is that the liability of a bankrupt indorser of negotiable paper, though it does not become absolute (by dishonor and protest) until after the filing of the petition, is nevertheless a "debt" within the meaning of the statute, which enumerates debts on contract, express or implied, among those provable in bankruptcy; and it may be proved against his estate after such liability has become fixed, if within the time limited for proving claims.[242] And it has even been held that the holder of a note might prove a claim against the estate of the bankrupt indorser, notwithstanding the fact that the note would not be due for more than a year after the adjudication in bankruptcy. "In this case, the claim must of course have been proved within the year, but its liquidation would be delayed until the security was all realized. This is a thing which may occur very frequently in bankruptcy." [243] Even where the note in question is rendered non-negotiable by the insertion of a restrictive provision in regard to the mode of its payment, a proof against the bankrupt as an indorser of it will not be expunged where it is shown that it was negotiated for his sole benefit.[244] But on the other hand, the bankrupt

[239] Whitwell v. Wright, 136 App. Div. 246, 120 N. Y. Supp. 1065.

[240] In re Loder, 4 Ben. 305, 4 N. B. R. 190, Fed. Cas. No. 8,457; In re Schaefer, 104 Fed. 973; Stowell v. Richardson, 3 Allen (Mass.) 64. Compare Ex parte Russell, 16 N. B. R. 476, Fed. Cas. No. 12,148. Notice of nonpayment of a note is not necessary to bind the estate in bankruptcy of an indorser where the estates of the maker and the indorser are both represented by the same trustees. In re T. A. McIntyre & Co., 198 Fed. 579, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[241] In re Crawford, 5 N. B. R. 301, Fed. Cas. No. 3,364.

[242] Moch v. Market Street Nat. Bank, 107 Fed. 897, 47 C. C. A. 49, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11; In re Phillip Semmer Glass Co., 135 Fed. 77, 67 C. C. A. 551, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; In re Smith, 146 Fed. 923, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Gerson, 105 Fed. 891, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; McNell v. Knott, 11 Ga. 142; In re Nickodemus, 3 N. B. R. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 10,254; Manheim v. Loewe, 185 App. Div. 601, 173 N. Y. Supp. 260.

[243] In re Buzzini & Co., 183 Fed. 827.

[244] In re Granger, 8 N. B. R. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 5,684.

cannot be held liable where it is shown that his indorsement on the note was forged and that he never received any benefit from the proceeds of it.[245]

The liability of the bankrupt as a surety on a replevin bond,[246] or on a bond of a guardian,[247] is also a provable claim. And under the act of 1867, which allowed proof of "contingent" claims, a claim was provable against the surety on any bond even before breach of condition.[248] But the present law is not construed as permitting proof of a claim against a surety until there has been an actual forfeiture or breach of condition or failure of performance, or (in the case of an indemnity bond) some actual loss or injury to the obligee.[249] So also in the case of a contract by which the bankrupt assumes the liability of a guarantor. If there is nothing presently due or capable of liquidation at the time of the bankruptcy, and no certainty that anything will ever be due or that any liability will ever arise, no claim can be proved against the bankrupt's estate.[250] It is the same with a contract of indemnity. Hence where, after the dissolution of a partnership, the bankrupt agreed with the claimant, his former partner, to pay the firm debts, which remained as joint obligations of both, the claimant cannot prove the amount of such debts against the estate in bankruptcy where he has paid none of them.[251]

§ 506. Rights of Bankrupt's Surety or Indorser.—A surety on a bond, who has made the payment or discharged the obligation for which the principal was liable, has a provable claim against the latter's estate in bankruptcy.[252] But a merely contingent or possible liability as surety is not provable. In other words, the bankrupt's surety has no provable claim, to be set up in his own name, until he has paid the debt or damages or liquidated the obligation called for by the bond.[253] And a partial [245] In re Lamon, 171 Fed. 516, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[246] Choate v. Quinichett, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 427.

[247] Davis v. McCurdy, 50 Wis. 569, 7 N. W. 665.

[248] Jones v. Knox, 46 Ala. 53, 8 N. B. R. 559, 7 Am. Rep. 583.

[249] Loeser v. Alexander, 176 Fed. 265, 100 C. C. A. 89, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; Kingman v. Fowle, 5 Allen (Mass.) 133; Corbett v. Woodward, 5 Sawy. 403; Fed. Cas. No. 3,223; Loring v. Kendall, 1 Gray (Mass.) 305.

[250] In re Merrill & Baker, 186 Fed. 312, 108 C. C. A. 390; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 143, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728. A note guaranteed by a corporation is provable against its estate in bankruptcy. In re Romadka Bros. Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 944.

[251] In re Tassinari (D. C.) 249 Fed. 990, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148.

[252] In re Lyons Beet Sugar Refining Co., 192 Fed. 445, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; Liddell v. Wiswell, 59 Vt. 365, 8 Atl. 680; In re Halsey W. Kelley & Co., Inc. (D. C.) 215 Fed. 155.

[253] In re Astoroga Paper Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 792, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; Insley v. Garside, 121 Fed. 699, 58 C. C. A. 119, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; R. P. Williams & Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 11 Ga. App. 635, 75 S. E. 1067; Hester v. Baldwin, 2 Woods, 433, Fed. Cas. No. 6,438; Steele v. Graves, 68

payment is not sufficient to give him a provable claim pro tanto. Unless and until the debt or claim is paid in full, the right to prove it as a debt in bankruptcy is in the original creditor and not in the surety.[254] But a surety need not necessarily pay in cash. If his individual note is expressly received and accepted in payment, he may then prove against the bankrupt principal.[255] But where the surety holds collateral securities, for his own indemnity, and pays the debt of the principal, he can prove only the difference between the debt and the amount realized on the securities.[256] But the bankruptcy act contains a provision that "whenever a creditor, whose claim against a bankrupt is secured by the individual undertaking of any person fails to prove such claim, such person may do so in the creditor's name, and if he discharge such undertaking in whole or in part, he shall be subrogated to that extent to the rights of the creditor."[257] Of this provision it has been said: "No one has any rights under the bankruptcy law outside of what it gives him, and those of a surety are defined by this section, beyond which he cannot go. By it he has the right to prove, in case the principal creditor fails to do so. He does not, indeed, have to discharge the obligation in order to have this privilege, but in case he does do so, in whole or in part, he becomes entitled to that extent to the right of subrogation and, in any event, when he proves the debt, he proves it not in his own name, but in that of the original holder. The particular point to be noticed in the present connection with regard to the position of the surety is that he has only a right to prove in case the principal creditor fails to do so, and the latter cannot be said to fail until he has had an opportunity and passed it by, which can only occur when, by proceedings duly instituted, the estate of the debtor has been drawn into the bankruptcy court to be there administered, and all parties have been called upon to make known

Ala. 21; Ecker v. Bohn, 45 Md. 278, 16 N. B. R. 544. Compare Lipscomb v. Grace, 26 Ark. 231, 7 Am. Rep. 607. On this principle, a guarantor of rent cannot prove the amount of his contingent liability as a claim against the estate in bankruptcy, but may prove in the name of the lessor. In re Baker & Edwards (D. C.) 224 Fed. 611, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469. But it seems that a surety on a bond to dissolve a garnishment, when judgment has been recovered against him subsequent to the bankruptcy, has a provable and allowable claim. Kilpatrick v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 228 Fed. 587, 143 C. C. A. 109, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[254] In re Heyman (D. C.) 95 Fed. 800, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; In re Hollister (D. C.) 3 Fed. 452; United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Carnegie Trust Co., 177 App. Div. 176, 164 N. Y. Supp. 92. See In re Blanchard (D. C.) 253 Fed. 758, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177.

[255] In re Morrill, 2 Sawy. 356, Fed. Cas. No. 9,821.

[256] In re Baldwin, 19 N. B. R. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 796.

[257] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57i. See J. S. Farming Co. v. Brannon (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 891, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425. The filing of his claim by the creditor does not prevent the surety from filing the claim, under this provision of the Bankruptcy Act, where the creditor's claim was withdrawn and he released all right to dividends. Kilpatrick v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 228 Fed. 587, 143 C. C. A. 109, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

their claims. When that has been done, and he neglects to act, the surety, so as not to be prejudiced, may himself prove the debt in his stead. This, so far as I can see, is all the relief given by the act, and, whether adequate or inadequate, it must suffice. It follows from this that, at the outstart, the surety who has not taken up the obligation has no provable claim, and therefore has no standing to petition. It is not provided in the law that at that stage he can intervene, either in his own name or in the name of the creditor, and institute involuntary proceedings. All that he can do is to prove the claim later on if the creditor fails to do so, after somebody else has moved." [258]

On the same principle, an indorser of the bankrupt's paper may prove a claim for the amount, in his own name, against the estate, after he has paid the note, but not before.[259] Though such an indorser may have become absolutely liable to the holder of the note, by due notice of its dishonor, before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, this does not make him a creditor of the bankrupt.[260] But it was held, under the former statute, that when the holder of a note fails to prove the same against the maker's estate, thus showing that he looks to the indorser alone for payment, the indorser may prove it and receive dividends, though he has not proved the note.[261] And apparently this course might be taken under that section of the present statute which was quoted above as applicable to the case of a surety.[262] Under a state statute providing that, where a party to a negotiable instrument has been adjudged bankrupt, notice may be given either to the party himself or to his trustee, and that notice of dishonor is not necessary where the drawer and drawee are the same person, or to an indorser where he is the person to whom an instrument is presented for payment, where the maker and indorser of [258] Phillips v. Dreher Shoe Co., 112 Fed. 404, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326. And see Insley v. Garside, 121 Fed. 699, 58 C. C. A. 119, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52; In re Carter, 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; Rosenthal v. Nove, 175 Mass. 559, 56 N. E. 884, 78 Am. St. Rep. 512.

[259] In re Salvator Brewing Co., 193 Fed. 989, 113 C. C. A. 626, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Dr. Voorhees Awning Hood Co., 187 Fed. 611; In re Morse, 11 N. B. R. 482, Fed. Cas. No. 9,853; Marks v. Barker, 1 Wash. C. C. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 9,096. See In re Elletson Co., 193 Fed. 84, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434. Where the holder of a note of the bankrupt has proved a claim upon it, and thereafter the indorser pays the note, he becomes subrogated to the rights of the claimant. In re Griffith Stillings Press (D. C.) 244 Fed. 315, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 813.

[260] In re Riker, 18 N. B. R. 393, Fed. Cas. No. 11,833.

[261] In re Ellerhorst, 5 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 4,381.

[262] Where the indorsers of notes of the bankrupt paid a portion of the debt and secured their release as indorsers, and the holders of the notes proved the notes for the entire amount against the bankrupt's estate, the indorsers were not entitled to prove the amount paid by them as claims against the estate, since under Bankruptcy Act, § 57i, they were only entitled to receive from the holders any overplus, after crediting dividends received from the bankrupt's estate and the amount paid by the indorsers. In re Manhattan Brush Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 209 Fed. 997, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

notes were partners, and were adjudged bankrupts, both as partners and individually, before the notes matured, and the same trustees were appointed for all the estates, it was held that notice of non-payment on the maturity of the notes was not necessary to bind the estate of the indorser.[263]

§ 507. Rights of Creditor Where Several Parties are Liable.—The holder of a claim upon which several parties are personally liable may prove his claim against the estates of any of them who become bankrupt, and may at the same time pursue the others at law, and notwithstanding partial payments after the bankruptcy, received from the non-bankrupts or from the estates of those in bankruptcy, the creditor may recover dividends from each estate in bankruptcy upon the full amount of his claim, as it stood at the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed therein, until, from all sources he has received full payment of his claim.[264] Thus, the holder of a bill of exchange is entitled to prove his debt in bankruptcy against the drawer, the acceptor, and the payee, and to receive dividends from all their estates until his debt is paid in full; and if only one of the parties is in bankruptcy, he may prove his claim against that one, and also proceed against the others at law.[265] So, when the holder of a note proves his debt in bankruptcy against the maker of the note for the full amount thereof, as an unsecured claim, this does not affect or release an indorser from his liability on the note.[266] But the estate of a bankrupt is entitled to the benefit of a partial payment of the debt made, before the bankruptcy, by any of the other parties liable for it, and in this case the creditor can prove against the bankrupt only the unpaid balance of his claim after crediting the payment.[267] An exception to this general rule, however, is found in the case where the maker of a note becomes bankrupt after the holder has received part payment from the indorser. Here, it is said, the creditor should prove a claim in the bankruptcy proceedings for the entire face of the note, be-

[263] In re T. A. McIntyre & Co., 198 Fed. 579, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[264] Board of Com'rs of Shawnee County v. Hurley, 169 Fed. 92, 94 C. C. A. 362, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re Simon, 197 Fed. 105, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611; In re Girvin, 160 Fed. 206, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Downing v. Traders' Bank, 2 Dill. 136, 11 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 4,046; In re Hicks, 19 N. B. R. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 6,456; In re Howard, 4 N. B. R. 571, Fed. Cas. No. 6,750. Where two bankrupt estates were liable for a debt due to a bank, the entire claim might be proven against both, and the fact that security not applied to the debt had been given by one bankrupt will not diminish the claim against the other. In re New York Commercial Co., 233 Fed. 906, 147 C. C. A. 580, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769.

[265] In re Babcock, 3 Story, 393, Fed. Cas. No. 696.

[266] Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Comstock, 55 N. Y. 24, 14 Am. Rep. 168, 11 N. B. R. 235.

[267] In re Pulsifer, 14 Fed. 247; Ex parte Harris, 2 Low. 568, 16 N. B. R. 432, Fed. Cas. No. 6,109; In re Weeks, 8 Ben. 265, 13 N. B. R. 263, Fed. Cas. No. 17,349; Sohier v. Loring, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 537.

cause he is in the position of a trustee for the indorser, and if he receives, in dividends, more than enough to satisfy the unpaid balance of his claim, he will hold the surplus for the indorser, who will be entitled to reimbursement.[268] But in other cases, nothing short of actual payment, or a present right to receive a dividend from an estate in bankruptcy, will operate to prevent the creditor from proving in full against the estates of the other persons liable; the fact that one of the debtors, being in bankruptcy, has offered notes for composition payments will not have this effect.[269] So where a creditor, who had sold goods to the bankrupt, for which a third person became surety, afterwards received from the surety, as security, a note of the bankrupt arising upon a separate transaction, it was held that such note, being the property of the surety, did not inure to the bankrupt's interest, but to that of the surety, and was a separate debt, and that the creditor was entitled to prove on both claims.[270] But where a creditor of a bankrupt has a lien on the property of a third party, as part of the security for his debt, he cannot release his lien for a consideration without crediting the amount of the consideration on his claim.[271]

§ 508. Claims of Bankrupt's Wife.—In bankruptcy a wife may be a creditor of her husband, and may prove and sustain a claim against his estate for money which was her separate property, and which she loaned to him, intrusted to his keeping and management, or allowed him to use in his business, if it clearly appears that no gift was intended, but only a loan or trust.[272] And this rule applies notwithstanding the fact that the law of the particular state may not give to husband and wife any right to contract with each other or to sue each other, and for this reason an agreement to repay the wife's money could not be enforced by a suit at law. For in the first place, a proceeding in bankruptcy is not a suit against the bankrupt nor even adverse to him. And secondly, an express or implied undertaking to repay the wife's money, in the case supposed, is a contract which courts of equity will uphold and enforce, and courts of bankruptcy are governed by the principles of [268] In re Souther, 2 Low, 320, 9 N. B. R. 502, Fed. Cas. No. 13,184; In re Ellerhorst, 5 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 4,381. And see In re Baxter, 18 N. B. R. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 1,120.

[269] In re Hicks, 19 N. B. R. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 6,456.

[270] In re H. V. Keep Shirt Co., 200 Fed. 80, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765.

[271] Seay v. Wilson, 3 McCrary, 121, 9 Fed. 589.

[272] In re Remmerde, 206 Fed. 826, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; In re Nickerson, 116 Fed. 1003; In re Neiman, 109 Fed. 113; Tucker v. Curtin, 148 Fed. 929, 78 C. C. A. 557, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354; Clark v. Hezekiah, 24 Fed. 663; In re Bigelow, 3 Ben. 198, 2 N. B. R. 556, Fed. Cas. No. 1,398; In re Blandin, 1 Low. 543, 5 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 1,527. The failure of a married woman to register a claim against her husband as her separate property, under the laws of Oregon, does not affect her right to prove the same against his estate in bankruptcy. In re Miner, 117 Fed. 953, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100.

equity, and there is no distinction in such respect between an estate to the wife's separate use, as known to the chancery courts, and a separate estate created by statute.[273] But the wife's claim against her bankrupt husband must be supported, like any other, by a valid consideration, and she cannot prove a claim where she has already received satisfaction of the debt in the form of a conveyance of property,[274] or where she had no valid title to the property placed in her husband's hands, having previously received the same from him as a gift under circumstances which rendered the transfer invalid.[275] And where a wife allows her husband to appropriate the income of her separate estate in the support of the family, this does not create such a debt on his part as is provable in bankruptcy against his estate.[276]

Subject to the foregoing considerations, it may be stated as a general principle that the wife of a bankrupt is entitled to the allowance of a claim for money lent to her husband, which she procured by mortgaging her own realty,[277] or to prove a claim on a note given to her by the bankrupt, regardless of the consideration therefor, if it is not shown that the bankrupt was indebted at the time the note was made.[278] And under the civil law prevailing in Louisiana, a husband's debt to his wife for paraphernal property is provable against him in bankruptcy.[279] As to a wife's claim of payment for services rendered to her husband in his business, as, in the capacity of a clerk, bookkeeper, or the like, the law is not so clear. But apparently a claim may be proved in bankruptcy for the value of such services if the law of the state has removed the disabilities of married women,[280] but not where the common law in this respect still prevails.[281] Under a state statute providing that a wife who is granted a divorce from her husband shall be entitled to one-third of his personal property absolutely, the interest of a wife in the personal property of her husband, after the commencement of an action for divorce, but before decree is not such a claim as is provable against his estate in bankruptcy.[282]

[273] James v. Gray, 131 Fed. 401, 65 C. C. A. 385, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 321, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; In re Hill, 190 Fed. 390, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 146; In re Domenig, 128 Fed. 146, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; In re Nickerson, 116 Fed. 1003. Compare In re Talbot, 110 Fed. 924, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[274] In re Carpenter, 179 Fed. 743.

[275] In re Tucker, 148 Fed. 928, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[276] In re Jones, 6 Biss. 68, 9 N. B. R. 556, Fed. Cas. No. 7,444.

[277] In re Foss, 147 Fed. 790, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[278] In re Kyte, 164 Fed. 302, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 110. See In re Chapman, 105 Fed. 901, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[279] Fleitas v. Richardson, 147 U. S. 550, 13 Sup. Ct. 495, 37 L. Ed. 276.

[280] In re Domenig, 128 Fed. 146, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; In re Cox, 199 Fed. 952, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 456.

[281] In re Suckle, 176 Fed. 828, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 861; In re Winkels, 132 Fed. 590, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

[282] Hawk v. Hawk, 102 Fed. 679, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

§ 509. Claims for Alimony.—Notwithstanding some difference of opinion among the earlier cases decided under the present bankruptcy act, the rule is now well settled that alimony awarded to a divorced wife by the decree of a competent court does not constitute a debt or claim which is provable against the estate of the husband in bankruptcy, whether the claim be for arrears remaining unpaid at the date of the bankruptcy or for installments to accrue thereafter.[283] The reasons for this rule are thus explained by the United States Supreme Court: "Alimony does not arise from any business transaction, but from the relation of marriage. It is not founded on contract, express or implied, but on the natural and legal duty of the husband to support the wife. The general obligation to support is made specific by the decree of the court of appropriate jurisdiction. Generally speaking, alimony may be altered by that court at any time, as the circumstances of the parties may require. The decree of the court of one state, indeed, for the present payment of a definite sum of money as alimony is a record which is entitled to full faith and credit in another state, and may therefore be there enforced by suit. But its obligation in that respect does not affect its nature. In other respects, alimony cannot ordinarily be enforced by action at law, but only by application to the court which granted it, and subject to the discretion of that court. Permanent alimony is regarded rather as a portion of the husband's estate to which the wife is equitably entitled, than as strictly a debt; alimony from time to time may be regarded as a portion of his current income or earnings; and the considerations which affect either can be better weighed by the court having jurisdiction over the relation of husband and wife than by a court of a different jurisdiction."[284] But where a wife, after securing a decree of divorce granting alimony, removes into another state, and there sues to recover unpaid arrears of alimony and obtains a judgment, and the [283] Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 21 Sup. Ct. 735, 45 L. Ed. 1009, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829; In re Hubbard, 98 Fed. 710, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; Turner v. Turner, 108 Fed. 785, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Shepard, 97 Fed. 187; In re Anderson, 97 Fed. 321, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 858; In re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 837; In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 471; In re Lawrie, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 77; In re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 235, 11 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252; In re Lachemeyer, 18 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966; Beach v. Beach, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 181; Barclay v. Barclay, 184 Ill. 375, 56 N. E. 636, 51 L. R. A. 351; Welty v. Welty, 96 Ill. App. 141; Maisner v. Maisner, 62 App. Div. 286, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1107; Lemert v. Lemert, 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 253; Brown v. Brown, 172 Ky. 754, 189 S. W. 921. Contra, In re Challoner, 98 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; In re Houston, 94 Fed. 119, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; In re Van Orden, 96 Fed. 86, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; Arrington v. Arrington, 131 N. C. 143, 42 S. E. 554, 92 Am. St. Rep. 769. Proceedings in a state court to enforce a decree awarding alimony, whether for installments past due or those to accrue in the future, against the bankrupt, will not be stayed or enjoined by the court of bankruptcy. Supra, § 189.

[284] Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 21 Sup. Ct. 735, 45 L. Ed. 1009, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829.

husband lists the said judgment as an indebtedness in his schedules in bankruptcy, it constitutes a provable debt against his estate.[285]

§ 510. Unpaid Subscriptions to Stock and Stockholder's Statutory Liability.—The liability of a stockholder in a corporation to make good the difference between the face value of stock for which he has subscribed and the amount he has actually paid on it is a debt founded on contract, and is therefore provable against his estate in bankruptcy, at the instance of a judgment creditor of the corporation, although no assessment or call has yet been made by the corporation.[286] As to the last part of this rule, however, it must be admitted that the decisions are not entirely in harmony, as some courts have thought that such a liability could not be regarded as a provable debt until the corporation itself had been required to make the necessary assessment upon its stockholders, so that the extent of the liability of each might be thus determined.[287] But probably this might be dispensed with if it were shown that the corporation was so far insolvent that all the unpaid stock subscriptions, if collected and added to its present assets, would no more than pay the debts.

As to the liability imposed by statute upon the stockholders of certain classes of corporations to be personally answerable for the debts of their company to an extent proportioned to their holdings, even though their stock has been paid in full, it is generally held that this is not such a claim as can be proved in bankruptcy against a stockholder,[288] at least if his personal responsibility remains uncertain and contingent, or the amount for which he may become liable has not been ascertained,[289] but otherwise if it is liquidated and ascertained by a judgment or a decree in equity before the expiration of the time limited for proving debts,[290] or if the receiver of the corporation can certainly determine the amount of it by ascertaining the amount of the assets and 285 In re Williams' Estate, 118 N. Y. Supp. 562.

286 In re Putman, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; Carey v. Mayer, 79 Fed. 926, 25 C. C. A. 239; Glenn v. Abell, 39 Fed. 10; Marr v. Bank of West Tennessee, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 578. See In re Watkinson, 143 Fed. 602, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245; In re Franklin Brewing Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 828, 46 Am. Bankr. 485.

287 Gibson v. Lewis, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 476, 11 N. B. R. 247, Fed. Cas. No. 5,398; Sayre v. Glenn, 87 Ala. 631, 6 South. 45; Glenn v. Howard, 65 Md. 40, 3 Atl. 895. Receivers of an insolvent insurance company cannot prove a claim against the estate of a bankrupt subscriber to the stock of the company, where it does not appear that the subscription is necessary to pay the debts, or that in an equalization between stockholders the bankrupt would be in the debtor class instead of the creditor class. In re Bass (D. C.) 215 Fed. 275.

288 James v. Atlantic Delaine Co., 11 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 7,179; Bristol v. Sanford, 12 Blatchf. 341, 13 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,893; Bangs v. Lincoln, 10 Gray (Mass.) 600.

289 Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 27 Fed. 591.

290 Garrett v. Sayles, 1 Fed. 371.

liabilities of the corporation, and thus determining how much will be needed from the stockholders to make up the deficiency of the assets of the corporation.[291]

§ 511. Debts Created by Bankrupt's Fraud.—Under the former bankruptcy law, it was held that a debt or liability created by the fraud of the bankrupt could be proved and allowed against his estate, notwithstanding the fact that it would not be released by his discharge, the result being that any dividend received on it would be merely a payment on account, leaving the bankrupt liable for the unpaid balance.[292] But under the present statute, the point is not free from doubt. It is true that the seventeenth section of the act provides that a discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from "all of his provable debts, except such as * * * were created by his fraud," thereby implying that debts created by fraud are provable debts. But this must be read in connection with the explicit definitions of provable debts given in the sixty-third section, where there is nothing applicable to fraudulent debts save a provision for the proof of claims "founded upon an open account or upon a contract express or implied." Hence the true rule appears to be that a debt or liability is provable if essentially of a contractual character, though induced by fraud, or if the circumstances were such that the claimant might waive the tort and sue as upon an implied contract.[293] Thus, a claim arising out of the conversion by stockbrokers of shares purchased and held by them on a customer's account is provable on this theory,[294] and creditors in bankruptcy proceedings may invoke the principle that money procured by fraud may be recovered back by proving a demand for money had and received by the bankrupt to their use.[295] So, there is an obligation resting upon a defaulting testamentary trustee, independently of his bond, to restore the value of the assets embezzled, which is of a contractual character, and affords a basis for proof of a claim against his estate in bankruptcy therefor by his successor in the trust.[296] Again, where a bankrupt, who was in the em-

[291] Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 17 Fed. 308.

[292] In re Wright, 2 N. B. R. 41, Fed. Cas. No. 18,070; In re Rosenberg, 3 Ben. 14, 2 N. B. R. 236, Fed. Cas. No. 12,054; In re Rundle, 2 N. B. R. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 12,138; In re Clews, 19 N. B. R. 109, Fed. Cas. No. 2,891; In re Eureka Mfg. Co., 1 Low. 500, Fed. Cas. No. 4,550.

[293] Crawford v. Burke, 195 U. S. 176, 25 Sup. Ct. 9, 49 L. Ed. 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659; In re Filer, 125 Fed. 261, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835; In re Schwartz, 14 Blatchf. 196, 15 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 12,502.

[294] Crawford v. Burke, 195 U. S. 176, 25 Sup. Ct. 9, 49 L. Ed. 147, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659.

[295] In re E. J. Arnold & Co., 133 Fed. 789, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320. But a claim against a bankrupt for money received cannot be based on a check which was secured from the claimant by fraud and indorsed to the bankrupt, who was a bona fide purchaser for value without notice. In re United States Hair Co., 239 Fed. 703, 152 C. C. A. 537.

[296] Clarke v. Rogers, 183 Fed. 518, 106 C. C. A. 64, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413, ploy of a firm of brokers, caused them to purchase stocks on false and fictitious orders purporting to have been given by customers, such purchases being in fact intended for his own benefit, the firm will have the right to treat him as the principal in the transactions, and to prove the debt against him in bankruptcy, as one for money paid at his request and for his use.[297] For similar reasons, a creditor who advanced money to the bankrupt on the strength of the latter's false and fraudulent representations concerning his credit or resources may prove a claim in bankruptcy for the amount, for though the loan was induced by fraud, there was none the less a contract for its repayment.[298] So where the creditor has by similar means been induced to part with goods, he may affirm the contract and file a claim for the value of the goods, instead of electing to claim for damages sustained by the fraud.[299]

§ 512. Taxes, and Interest and Penalties Thereon.—State and municipal taxes due from a bankrupt do not constitute a claim against his estate to be proved like those of creditors, and the rule that interest will not be allowed on debts after the filing of the petition has no application thereto, but it is the duty of the court of bankruptcy to direct the payment of such taxes, together with such penalties or interest as have accrued thereon under the laws of the state to the time of actual payment.[300] "Under the bankruptcy law, public taxes do not constitute a 'claim' in bankruptcy. It is not necessary for the public authorities to appear in a court of bankruptcy as ordinary claimants. They have no right in the administration as creditors and no voice in the selection of a trustee, and the liability for taxes is in no way affected by the discharge of the bankrupt. On the other hand, the duty of affirmative action rests upon the court of bankruptcy. It is the duty of the trustee to ascertain from the public records the amount due for taxes and bring the matter to the attention of the court, and thereupon it is the duty of the court to order their payment if there are sufficient funds in the estate for that purpose." [301] But taxes which have been actually paid, though irregularly, are not a liability of the estate in this sense nor a provable debt,[302] affirmed, 228 U. S. 534, 33 Sup. Ct. 587, 57 L. Ed. 953, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

[297] In re Filer, 125 Fed. 261, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[298] In re E. J. Arnold & Co., 133 Fed. 789, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320. Compare In re Schuchardt, 8 Ben. 585, 15 N. B. R. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 12,483.

[299] In re Hildebrant, 120 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184.

[300] In re Kallak, 147 Fed. 276, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Scheidt Bros., 177 Fed. 599, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778; In re Duryee, 2 Fed. 68; Warren R. Co. v. Belvidere, 35 N. J. Law, 584; Stanard v. Dayton, 220 Fed. 441, 137 C. C. A. 35, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; In re Wenatchee Heights Orchard Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 787, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; United States v. Brown-Alaska Co., 4 Alaska, 89.

[301] In re Kallak, 147 Fed. 276, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

[302] City of Pittsburgh v. South Side Trust Co., 208 Fed. 984, 126 C. C. A. 72, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 897; See In re as where the bankrupt, being a deputy tax collector, has settled with his principal for the taxes on his own property, though the latter remains personally liable for the amount to the municipality,[303] or where the taxes have been deducted from the value of property taken by creditors under attachments valid as against the trustee.[304] It is also to be noted that the provisions for the payment of taxes by the trustee in bankruptcy do not apply to an annual license fee imposed by the state law on corporations, which has been held by the courts of the state not to be a tax, but an arbitrary imposition laid on corporations as a condition of their continued existence; and neither is it a contractual obligation attaching by implication from the inception of the company, so as to be provable as a debt founded on contract, at least against the estate of a corporation becoming bankrupt before the fee for the year is assessed or collectible.[305]

A sale of real estate for delinquent taxes while the estate of the owner is in process of administration in the court of bankruptcy is irregular and invalid, at least if made without leave of the bankruptcy court; but if such a sale is made, the purchaser of the property is entitled to be reimbursed out of the general assets of the bankrupt on the surrender and cancellation of his certificate of purchase.[306]

When a claim for payment of a state tax is presented against an estate in bankruptcy, the court of bankruptcy has power to examine it and revise it, to determine the question of liability; but if the tax claimed is valid under the law of the state, the federal court cannot disallow it as unjust or unlawful.[307]

§ 513. Breaches of Real Covenants.—Under the bankruptcy acts of 1841 and 1867, there were several decisions to the effect that a claim for damages for the breach of covenants in a deed, such as those of warranty of title, of possession, and of quiet enjoyment, and against incumbrances, constituted a provable debt in bankruptcy.[308] This view was, however, controverted by authorities of perhaps quite equal force,[309] and in one of the cases it was pointed out that the covenants in a deed

Gracey (D. C.) 241 Fed. 981, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[303] Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 480, 76 C. C. A. 250, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 607.

[304] Foster v. Inglee, 13 N. B. R. 239, Fed. Cas. No. 4,973.

[305] In re Danville Rolling Mill Co. (D. C.) 121 Fed. 432, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327.

[306] Dayton v. Stanard, 241 U. S. 588, 36 Sup. Ct. 695, 60 L. Ed. 1190, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Clark Realty Co., 253 Fed. 938, 166 C. C. A. 38, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 403.

[307] In re United Five & Ten Cent Store (D. C.) 242 Fed. 1005, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 146.

[308] Parker v. Bradford, 45 Iowa, 311; Reed v. Pierce, 36 Me. 455, 58 Am. Dec. 761; Abbott v. Rowan, 33 Ark. 593; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 686.

[309] Riggin v. Magwire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. Ed. 232; Murray v. De Rottenham, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 52; Burrus v. Wilkinson, 31 Miss. 537; Magwire v. Riggin, 44 Mo. 512. See Bates v. West, 19 Ill. 134; Bailey v. Moore, 21 Ill. 165.

are not in the nature of an obligation to pay a debt, but amount merely to an undertaking to pay to the vendee whatever damages he may sustain by the property being taken from him under adverse claims, or subjected to prior incumbrances. The claim of the creditor, in such a case, it was thought, was purely one of damages, not reducible to any certain or specific amount, and which could not be ascertained but by the verdict of a jury, and hence not provable in bankruptcy.[310]

But since the present statute allows "unliquidated claims" to be proved, after they shall have been liquidated in such manner as the court shall direct, it appears that claims of this character may be provable in bankruptcy, provided, first, that the claimant shall have sustained actual loss or injury (not merely the apprehension of it) and second, that a breach of the covenant occurred before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. The first point may be illustrated by the case of a sale of personal property which is fraudulent because in contravention of the rights of a prior mortgagee and therefore voidable. This will give the purchaser a right of action against the seller for breach of the implied warranty of title, but he has not a debt provable in bankruptcy against the seller until he has been damnified by losing the property to another.[311] As to the second point, if the breach of covenant occurred before the petition in bankruptcy was filed, then the claimant's damages were at that time capable of being liquidated and so made into a provable claim.[312] But debts, to be provable at all, must have existed at the time of the filing of the petition. And hence, for example, a lessee cannot prove a claim for damages for breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment in the lease against the estate of his lessor in bankruptcy because of an eviction which did not take place until after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[313]

§ 514. Claims for Torts.—Under the terms of the present bankruptcy act, a claim for damages for a tort, not connected with any contractual liability, and not reduced to judgment before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, is not a provable debt.[314] Such a claim is not made provable by that clause of the act which provides that "unliquidated [310] Bush v. Cooper, 26 Miss. 599, 59 Am. Dec. 270.

[311] Bennett v. Bartlett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 225.

[312] Merrill v. Schwartz, 68 Me. 514; Willlams v. Harkins, 55 Ga. 172, 15 N. B. R. 34.

[313] In re Pennewell, 119 Fed. 139, 55 C. C. A. 571, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490.

[314] Schall v. Camors, 251 U. S. 239, 40 Sup. Ct. 135, 64 L. Ed. 247, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599; Brown & Adams v. United Button Co., 149 Fed. 48, 79 C. C. A. 70, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565, affirming In re United Button Co., 140 Fed. 495, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390; In re Bailey, 2 Woods, 222, Fed. Cas. No. 729; Bever v. Swecker, 138 Iowa, 721, 116 N. W. 704; Newman v. Goodard, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 563; Lomax v. Spear, 51 Ala. 532. Provability of claims for torts reduced to judgment before the filing of the petition, see supra, § 497.

claims" may be liquidated in such manner as the court shall direct and may thereafter be proved and allowed; for this relates only to a matter of procedure, and does not enlarge the class of claims provable under the preceding paragraph, and contemplates only the liquidation of claims founded on contracts or on open accounts.[315] Nor are the debts which may be proved in bankruptcy enlarged by the fact that it is assumed in the seventeenth section of the act (regulating the effect of a discharge) that liabilities for torts are provable and therefore released by a discharge, certain specified torts being thereupon excepted from the effect of a discharge. For this section, as originally enacted, referred only to judgments already recovered in actions for torts of the specified kinds, and was therefore not inconsistent with the sixty-third section of the statute, relating to provable debts. And the present want of harmony between the two sections is the result of the amendment of 1903, and therefore, in case of conflict, the sixty-third section, being specifically devoted to the enumeration and description of the classes of provable debts, must control.[316]

In accordance with these rules, a claim for unliquidated damages for negligence resulting in personal injuries is not a provable debt,[317] nor a cause of action for negligence causing the death of a human being,[318] or for negligence or nuisance resulting in injury to goods,[319] or for trespass to land,[320] or for deceit,[321] or for assault and battery and false imprisonment.[322] But in all those cases where the tort could be waived and a recovery had as upon a quasi contract, the claim may be provable, if the amount is definitely fixed, or after being liquidated as the court may direct.[323] On this principle, a claim for the conversion of personal property is a provable debt.[324]

[315] Supra, § 500. And see In re Hutchcraft (D. C.) 247 Fed. 187, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238.

[316] Brown & Adams v. United Button Co., 149 Fed. 48, 79 C. C. A. 70, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565. See Biela v. Urbanczyk, 38 Tex. Civ. App. 213, 85 S. W. 451; Schall v. Camors, 251 U. S. 239, 40 Sup. Ct. 135, 64 L. Ed. 247, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

[317] Imbriani v. Anderson, 76 N. H. 491, 84 Atl. 974.

[318] In re New York Tunnel Co., 159 Fed. 688, 86 C. C. A. 556, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25.

[319] Brown & Adams v. United Button Co., 149 Fed. 48, 79 C. C. A. 70, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565; Dusar v. Murgatroyd, 1 Wash. (C. C.) 13, Fed. Cas. No. 4,199.

[320] Weisfield v. Beale, 231 Pa. 39, 79 Atl. 878; Kellogg v. Schuyler, Denio (N. Y.) 73; Gilman v. Cate, 63 N. H. 278.

[321] In re Schuchardt, 8 Ben. 585, 15 N. B. R. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 12,483.

[322] Beers v. Hanlin, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Hennocksburgh, 6 Ben. 150, 7 N. B. R. 37, Fed. Cas. No. 6,367.

[323] In re Griffin, 188 Fed. 389; In re Southern Steel Co., 183 Fed. 498, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358; Burgoyne v. McKil-

[324] Pitcairn v. Scully, 252 Pa. 82, 97 Atl. 120; Weaver v. Voils, 68 Ind. 191; Cole v. Roach, 37 Tex. 413, 10 N. B. R. 288. A claim against a bailee for hire for the destruction of the goods bailed, though suable in either contract or tort, may be proved against the estate of the bailee in bankruptcy. Fingold v. Schacter, 223 Mass. 274, 111 N. E. 903.

§ 515. Fines, Penalties, and Forfeitures.—A judgment imposing a fine as a punishment for a crime or misdemeanor or any violation of a state statute is not a debt provable against the estate of the defendant in bankruptcy. Although it comes within the terms of that section of the bankruptcy law which defines provable debts (as being a "fixed liability evidenced by a judgment, absolutely owing"), if literally construed, yet it cannot be supposed to have been the intention of Congress that a discharge in bankruptcy should release a defendant from a fine imposed as a punishment for a criminal offense against the laws either of the United States or of a state, and that section should be construed as applying only to civil liabilities and claims.[325] To hold such a judgment provable as a debt, with the necessary consequence of its being released by the discharge, "would be allowing the national government, through its courts, to grant pardons for crimes committed against a state. A person convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to pay a fine of $1000 would be relieved, by a discharge in bankruptcy, from the punishment affixed by law to his crime. I do not think that the act, while it reasonably admits of any other construction, ought to be construed so as to permit or allow such a consequence." [326] For similar reasons, a judgment or sentence in a bastardy proceeding, condemning the defendant to pay a fixed sum for the maintenance of the child, is not a debt provable in bankruptcy.[327] And the liability of a bankrupt for the statutory penalty for cutting trees, imposed by a state statute, is not a debt founded on an implied contract, such as can be proved against his estate in bankruptcy.[328]

But there is another section of the bankruptcy law applicable, not lip, 182 Fed. 452, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; Clingman v. Miller, 160 Fed. 326, 87 C. C. A. 278, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; In re Filer, 125 Fed. 261, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835; In re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; First Nat. Bank of Enosburg Falls v. Bamforth, 90 Vt. 75, 96 Atl. 600; In re Schenderlein (D. C.) 268 Fed. 1018, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128; Stalick v. Slack (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 123, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385. For an excellent discussion of the whole subject of waiving a tort and suing as upon a quasi contract, see Keener, Quasi Contracts, ch. III, pp. 159–312.

[325] In re Moore, 111 Fed. 145, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590. Contra, In re Alderson, 98 Fed. 588, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544. A fine imposed on the bankrupt by a state court, as a punishment for a civil contempt in disobeying its order, is not a provable debt. People v. Sheriff of Kings County, 206 Fed. 566, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84. See In re Abramson, 210 Fed. 878, 127 C. C. A. 462, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156. A fine adjudged against a corporation on its conviction for using the mails to promote a fraud, under U. S. Crim. Code, § 215, is a "penalty" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, and not provable as a claim in bankruptcy; but the United States is entitled to prove all the costs which it paid or incurred in the prosecution as a pecuniary loss sustained by it. United States v. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co., 258 Fed. 562, 169 C. C. A. 502, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430.

[326] In re Sutherland, Deady, 416, 3 N. B. R. 314, Fed. Cas. No. 13,639, per Deady, J.

[327] In re Baker, 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re Cotton, Fed. Cas. No. 3,269; Hawes v. Cooksey, 13 Ohio, 242; Commonwealth v. Erisman, 21 Pittsb. Leg. J. O. S. (Pa.) 69.

[328] In re Southern Steel Co., 183 Fed. 498, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

indeed to fines for criminal offenses, but to penalties and forfeitures incurred in civil cases. It provides that "debts owing to the United States, a state, a county, a district, or a municipality as a penalty or forfeiture shall not be allowed, except for the amount of the pecuniary loss sustained by the act, transaction, or proceeding out of which the penalty or forfeiture arose, with reasonable and actual costs occasioned thereby and such interest as may have accrued thereon according to law." [329] Primarily this section would seem to apply to penalties imposed, in a fixed sum, without regard to the amount of damage involved, for breaches of contract between private individuals, on the one hand, and governmental or municipal authorities on the other hand, as, for example, a penalty of so many dollars a day for not completing a public work under contract within the time limited. But there are also cases where the mulct, although imposed as a punishment on an offender, is also intended as recompense to the public for injury to its property or revenues, and these cases would also come within the statute. For example, the laws of the United States impose, in certain cases, a "fine" for cutting timber on the public lands, the amount of which is to be "triple the value" of the timber cut. Here, it seems, the government might prove a claim for the whole amount of the penalty, especially if reduced to judgment, but it could be "allowed" only to the extent of the pecuniary loss sustained, that is, the single value of the timber. And the same principle would apply to the fines and penalties imposed under the internal revenue laws for failure to affix the proper stamps to various designated products.[330] Forfeitures are also imposed by the laws of the United States for various causes,—forfeitures of vessels for violations of the navigation laws and the neutrality laws, forfeitures of distilleries and apparatus for fraud in the evasion of the internal revenue laws, forfeitures of goods imported for non-payment of duties. In all such cases, it seems, the test of the applicability of this section of the bankruptcy law must be the sustaining of pecuniary loss by the government.[331] And a [329] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57j.

[330] See In re Rosey, 6 Ben. 507, 8 N. B. R. 509, Fed. Cas. No. 12,066. In this case, under the act of 1867, the government had sued the bankrupt, and recovered a judgment against him, for penalties incurred for several violations of the stamp-tax law, in selling boxes of matches not stamped. The amount of the stamp required in each case was one cent. The amount of the penalty prescribed for each violation of the statute was $50. The judgment was for more than $5,000. The amount of the stamps required on the various boxes in question would have been about one dollar. Now if the "pecuniary loss sustained" was the value of the stamps which should have been affixed, it would follow, under the plain wording of the present statute, that the United States could prove its claim in such a case as this for the amount of the judgment, $5,000, but that the claim could be allowed only to the extent of one dollar. This looks like a legal absurdity, but it is the will of Congress expressed in plain terms.

[331] See In re Vetterlein, 13 Blatchf. 44, 12 N. B. R. 526, Fed. Cas. No. 16,929. In the case, under the bankruptcy act of 1867, before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings the United claim of the United States on a forfeited recognizance for bail in a criminal case has been held to be a "penalty or forfeiture" within the meaning of this provision.[332]

What is here said of the United States government is also true, mutatis mutandis, of the states and of penalties and forfeitures for violations of municipal ordinances. Thus, the provision in question applies to a penalty imposed by the state law on a corporation for failure to report and pay the prescribed fee or bonus to the state on an increase of its capital stock.[333]

It is also necessary, in some cases, to consider the right of an informer to share in the penalty. But generally this is not a matter for the bankruptcy court at all. Where the government has recovered a judgment against the bankrupt for a penalty incurred by a violation of the revenue laws, for example, and has proved its claim as a creditor of the bankrupt, the informer by whose procurement the penal action was prosecuted has no right to come into the bankruptcy court with a petition asking for a summary adjudication of his right to a share of the penalty as against the United States. The court has no jurisdiction to effect such an adjustment in a proceeding in bankruptcy against the debtor. The claim of the informer is not against the bankrupt but against the government, and it must be worked out in the manner prescribed by the revenue laws, and not in a bankruptcy proceeding.[334]

§ 516. Debts Barred by Limitations.—A debt or claim, once valid and which otherwise would be provable in bankruptcy, but which is barred by the statute of limitations of the state in which the bankrupt resides and where the proceeding in bankruptcy is pending, at the time of the filing of the petition, cannot be proved or allowed,[335] notwithstanding the fact that it is not barred under the statute of some other state, as, for example, that in which the creditor resides or that in which both parties lived when the contract was made.[336] And the same rule applies States brought an action against the bankrupts to recover the value of goods which had been forfeited for violation of the customs revenue laws. After the adjudication, the bankrupts admitted the right of the government to recover and a judgment was rendered. It was held that this was a provable debt.

[332] In re Caponigri, 193 Fed. 291, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

[333] Commonwealth v. York Silk Mfg. Co., 192 Fed. 81, 112 C. C. A. 613, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525.

[334] In re Jayne, 28 Fed. 419.

[335] In re Putman, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; Nicholas v. Murray, 5 Sawy. 320, 18 N. B. R. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 10,223; In re Doty, 16 N. B. R. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 4,017; In re Kingsley, 1 Low. 216, 1 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 7,819; In re Hardin, 1 Hask. 163, 1 N. B. R. 395, Fed. Cas. No. 6,048; In re Reed, 6 Biss. 250, 11 N. B. R. 94, Fed. Cas. No. 11,635; In re Noeson, 6 Biss. 443, 11 N. B. R. 422, Fed. Cas. No. 10,288; In re Cornwall, 9 Blatchf. 114, 6 N. B. R. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 3,250; Ex parte Dewdney, 15 Ves. 479; Pace's Trustee v. Pace, 162 Ky. 457, 172 S. W. 925; In re Ballantine (D. C.) 232 Fed. 271, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[336] Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, 122 Fed. 232, 58 C. C. A. 596, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225; In re Res-to a dormant judgment against the bankrupt; that is, a judgment is not a provable debt unless it has been kept alive in such manner as the law of the state prescribes, by suit or scire facias upon it, by the issue or levy of execution, or otherwise according to the local law, within the time limited by that law before the bankruptcy.[337] And the doctrine or rule of adverse possession may be invoked for a like purpose. Thus, an intervener who, with knowledge of facts and without any claim of ownership, allowed the bankrupt to hold exclusive possession of certain residence property and to make improvements, could not, after more than twenty years, contravene the lien of the trustee in behalf of the creditors, for whose debts the property was expressly or impliedly pledged, to his knowledge.[338]

A due and sufficient acknowledgment of a barred debt, or new promise to pay it, though made in contemplation of bankruptcy, is not necessarily a fraud on the other creditors, and will make the debt provable.[339] Thus, a partial payment on a debt barred by limitations will revive it to the extent of making it provable in bankruptcy, though it was made for that very purpose.[340] But if the law of the state makes any particular requirements as to what will be effective to take a note out of the statute of limitations, as that an extension of it must be in writing, signed by the maker, and containing an acknowledgment of the debt, these must be complied with or else the note will not be provable.[341] But if a debtor, within four months before the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, gives a bond and mortgage to a creditor whose claim is outlawed under the state statute of limitations, the bond will revive the debt, even though the mortgage is voidable as a preference.[342] But the mere fact that the bankrupt includes in his schedule of debts a claim already barred by the statute of limitations does not revive it so as to make it a provable claim against his estate, to the prejudice of his other creditors, but it is the duty ler, 95 Fed. 804, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602; In re Hardin, 1 Hask. 163, 1 N. B. R. 395, Fed. Cas. No. 6,048; In re Kingsley, 1 Low. 216, 1 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 7,819. But see a strong argument to the contrary of this view, in the case of In re Ray, 2 Ben. 53, 1 N. B. R. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 11,589, where it is said that the fact that the debt is barred by the statute of limitations of the state where the debtor resides is not enough to prevent its being proved in bankruptcy, because the effect of a state statute of limitations is merely to prevent the maintenance of a suit on the barred cause of action in the courts of that state; but the bankruptcy law extends throughout the United States, and its operation upon a particular debt or claim cannot be affected by anything less than an equally extensive impossibility of collecting such debt or claim by suit.

[337] In re Rebman, 150 Fed. 759, 80 C. C. A. 594, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 767; In re Farmer, 116 Fed. 763, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; In re Lipman, 94 Fed. 353, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46; In re Morris, Crabbe, 70, Fed. Cas. No. 9,825.

[338] In re Rawlins Mercantile Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 164.

[339] In re Blankenship (D. C.) 220 Fed. 395, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756.

[340] In re Banks (D. C.) 207 Fed. 662, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

[341] Wood v. Ledgerwood, 210 Fed. 163, 127 C. C. A. 13.

[342] In re Stendts, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 509.

of the trustee in bankruptcy to oppose the allowance of the claim, on the ground of limitations, in behalf of the creditors in general.[343] But it has been thought that this rule should not be invoked for the benefit of the bankrupt himself where no other creditor could be prejudiced by allowing the claim. If the estate proves sufficient to pay all the expenses of administration and all the other proved and allowed claims, the creditor whose debt was outlawed, but was included in the bankrupt's list of debts, should be entitled to satisfaction out of the surplus, because, as between the bankrupt and himself, the listing of the debt was a sufficient acknowledgment to take it out of the statute.[344] And a debt which was not barred by the statute of limitations at the time when the petition was filed will remain valid against the trustee throughout the bankruptcy proceedings, and will be provable at any time within a year after the adjudication, notwithstanding the whole term fixed by the statute of limitations has expired when the claim is offered for proof, for the institution of bankruptcy proceedings stops the running of the statute.[345]

§ 517. Claims Founded on Illegal or Immoral Consideration.—The bankruptcy act of 1867 expressly forbade the allowance of a claim in bankruptcy which was "founded in illegality." But this is only in affirmance of the common law,[346] since no court will lend its aid to the enforcement of an immoral or illegal contract. And although the present act contains no such express provision, it cannot be doubted that a claim arising on such a contract must be rejected.[347] Thus, a claim for money alleged to be due under a stock-gambling transaction, or other form of wagering contract, is not provable in bankruptcy,[348] although money placed in the bankrupt's hands for the purpose of being used in a gambling transaction, since it could be recovered in an action at law, [343] In re Banks, 207 Fed. 662; In re Resler, 95 Fed. 804, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602; In re Lipman, 94 Fed. 353, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46; In re Wooten, 118 Fed. 670, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; In re Kingsley, 1 Low. 216, 1 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 7,819; In re Ray, 2 Ben. 53, 1 N. B. R. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 11,589; In re Hardin, 1 Hask. 163, 1 N. B. R. 395, Fed. Cas. No. 6,048. Compare In re Hertzog, 18 N. B. R. 526, Fed. Cas. No. 6,433.

[344] In re Currier, 192 Fed. 695, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597.

[345] In re McKinney, 15 Fed. 912; In re Graves, 9 Fed. 816; In re Wright, 6 Biss. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 18,068; In re Maybin, 15 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 9,337; Wofford v. Unger, 53 Tex. 634; Minot v. Thacher, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 348, 41 Am. Dec. 444.

[346] In re Pittock, 2 Sawy. 416, 8 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 11,189.

[347] Forsyth v. Woods, 11 Wall. 484, 20 L. Ed. 207; Bailey v. Milner, 1 Abb. U. S. 261, 1 N. B. R. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 740; Buckner v. Street, 1 Dill. 248, 7 N. B. R. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 2,098. A claim, the consideration for which was illicit sexual relations, is not provable. In re Wray, 233 Fed. 418, 147 C. C. A. 354, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28.

[348] In re Ætna Cotton Mills, 171 Fed. 994, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 629; Hill v. Levy, 98 Fed. 94, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374; In re Chandler, 9 N. B. R. 514, Fed. Cas. No. 2,590; In re Green, 7 Biss. 338, 15 N. B. R. 198, Fed. Cas. No. 5,751.

may likewise support a claim in bankruptcy.[349] And even if a contract to purchase stock was originally invalid as a gambling transaction on margins, in violation of a state statute, still the illegality cannot be asserted by the broker's trustee in bankruptcy against a claim by the purchaser, where the contract was executed by the broker purchasing the stock, and where he disposed of it without the claimant's knowledge or consent, and misappropriated the proceeds.[350] On similar principles, a claim founded upon a sale of intoxicating liquors, illegal and void under the laws of the state where made, is not provable in bankruptcy.[351] But a note which was given in part for a valid consideration, and in part for a consideration against public policy, if the two portions are distinguishable, may be proven in bankruptcy for so much as was originally valid.[352] Where the laws of the state provide for the forfeiture of the entire debt where it is tainted with usury, so that the creditor could not recover any portion of it by action in a state court, no part of such debt will be provable in bankruptcy, [353] and notes given by the bankrupt for the excess or bonus over the legal interest are not provable.[354] But if the statute merely provides for the forfeiture of all interest reserved, in case of usury, this will not prevent the proof and allowance of the principal sum.[355] But not every violation of a statute will necessarily render the party's debt or claim unenforceable in bankruptcy. The federal courts have always observed the distinction between acts mala in se and those merely mala prohibita, and it is a well settled rule that when a statute imposes specific penalties for its violation, the act concerned not being malum in se, and the purpose of the statute can be accomplished without declaring contracts in violation thereof illegal, the inference is that it was not the intention of the lawmakers to render such contracts illegal and unenforceable.[356] This is the view which has been taken in bank-

[349] Streeter v. Lowe, 184 Fed. 263, 106 C. C. A. 405, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774; In re E. J. Arnold & Co., 138 Fed. 789, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Ex parte Young, 6 Biss. 53, Fed. Cas. No. 18,145.

[350] In re Dorr, 186 Fed. 276, 108 C. C. A. 322, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408. And see In re Norris, 190 Fed. 101, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945.

[351] Jacobs v. Ballantine Breweries Co., 193 Fed. 393, 113 C. C. A. 389, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918; In re Town, 8 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 14,111; In re Paddock, 6 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 10,657. See Black, Intox. Liq. § 249. But a claim for the price of spirituous liquors lawfully sold in New York to a citizen of Maine, who intended them for sale in Maine in violation of law, is provable in bankruptcy in Maine, though it could not be recovered in the courts of that state. In re Murray, 1 Hask. 267, 3 N. B. R. 765, Fed. Cas. No. 9,954. And see Thompson, Belden & Co. v. Leisy Brewing Co., 249 Fed. 462, 161 C. C. A. 420, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

[352] Batchelder & Lincoln Co. v. Whitmore, 122 Fed. 355, 58 C. C. A. 517, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641.

[353] In re Pittock, 2 Sawy. 416, 8 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 11,189.

[354] Shaffer v. Fritchery, 4 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 12,697.

[355] National Exchange Bank v. Moore, 2 Bond, 170, 1 N. B. R. 470, Fed. Cas. No. 10,041.

[356] See In re Wylly (D. C.) 210 Fed. 954, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145.

ruptcy of a statute providing that no property transported by a carrier shall be delivered except on surrender and cancellation of the bills of lading.[357] On the other hand, corporate bonds issued to a promoter, in violation of a state statute, are voluntary obligations not enforceable in bankruptcy to the prejudice of other actual creditors.[358]

§ 518. Ultra Vires and Unlawful Contracts of Corporations.—As a general rule, a claim is not provable in bankruptcy where either the bankrupt or the creditor is a corporation and the contract or transaction out of which the claim arose was beyond the lawful powers of the corporation. Thus, a corporation has no power to purchase its own stock, where the transaction will render it insolvent and so operate as a fraud on its creditors, and if this is done, notes given by it for the purchase price are invalid and cannot be proved against its estate in bankruptcy, at least in the hands of the selling stockholder.[359] So, a company chartered for the purpose of buying and selling building materials has no power to bind itself as guarantor for the performance of a building contract by another, and such a contract, being ultra vires and void, affords no basis for a claim against its estate in bankruptcy.[360] So where a savings bank, in violation of its charter, and the laws of the state, discounts notes of the bankrupt, neither the notes nor a claim for money loaned thereon can be proved.[361] The same rule applies where the charter of a manufacturing corporation limits the amount of indebtedness which it may lawfully incur to one-half the amount of its paid-up capital stock; debts contracted in excess of this limit are not provable.[362] And so, a claim cannot be proved in bankruptcy against a corporation on a note which it gave to cover the indebtedness of a third party, for which it was in no way responsible,[363] or on notes which were authorized by the stockholders, but which were issued by the managing officer direct to his personal creditors as collateral security for a prior indebtedness of his own.[364]

[357] In re T. H. Bunch Co., 180 Fed. 519.

[358] In re Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 153 Fed. 787.

[359] In re S. P. Smith Lumber Co., 132 Fed. 618, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123, affirmed, Menefee v. Phelan, 140 Fed. 988, 72 C. C. A. 682; Keith v. Kilmer (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 733, 9 A. L. R. 1287, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304.

[360] In re S. P. Smith Lumber Co., 132 Fed. 620, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[361] In re Jaycox, 12 Blatchf. 209, 13 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 7,237. But the fact that a bank which lent money to a manufacturing corporation, taking secured notes therefor, made an ultra vires agreement to accept a share of the net profits of the business, but from which it received nothing, does not debar it from proving its notes against the corporation in bankruptcy. In re Machine Metals Producers Co., 251 Fed. 280, 163 C. C. A. 436, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505.

[362] Cunningham v. German Insurance Bank, 101 Fed. 977, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363.

[363] Mapes v. German Bank, 176 Fed. 89, 99 C. C. A. 609, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

[364] American Woodworking Machinery Co. v. Norment (C. C. A.) 157 Fed. 801, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

Again, where the law of a state forbids all foreign corporations to do business within its limits until they have complied with certain requisites (such as appointing a resident agent upon whom process may be served, or the like) a foreign corporation which has not complied with the statute has no power to make contracts or to bring suits within the state. Consequently a contract made by the corporation, under such circumstances, with a citizen of the state is illegal, and is not provable against the estate of such citizen in bankruptcy. As the bankrupt himself might have avoided it, his trustee may object to its being proved.[365] But the holder of special stock of a corporation, which was illegally issued, may prove against the estate of the corporation in insolvency (and presumably also in bankruptcy) a claim for the amount paid by him for the stock, deducting any dividends received, although he did not rescind the contract before the insolvency.[366]

§ 519. Landlord's Rights and Remedies.—Upon the bankruptcy of a tenant, his possession of the leased premises becomes the possession of the court of bankruptcy, and thereafter the rights and claims of the landlord must be worked out through the bankruptcy proceedings, and not by independent action.[367] So also the right of the bankrupt tenant to remove machinery or other fixtures from the building passes to his trustee in bankruptcy.[368] The landlord may prove a claim in bankruptcy for rent accrued up to the commencement of the proceedings, if he has a written lease or a valid oral agreement, or even an implied promise to pay rent,[369] and he may claim his rent out of the proceeds of goods which were specifically liable for it while on the demised premises and which have been sold by the trustee in bankruptcy,[370] or out of money paid to the tenant in eminent domain proceedings on the basis of his obligation to pay rent.[371] So also, the landlord may prove a claim for rent accruing during a period when the premises stood vacant, having been surrendered by the tenant, the latter having agreed to account for the rent until they were relet,[372] and where the original tenant assigned the lease or sublet the premises, the landlord, having agreed to the transfer, may prove his claim in bankruptcy against the estate of the assignee or sub-

[365] In re Comstock, 3 Sawy. 218, 11 N. B. R. 169, Fed. Cas. No. 3,078; In re Montello Brick Works, 174 Fed. 498, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375; In re Springfield Realty Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 785, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 105.

[366] Reed v. Boston Machine Co., 141 Mass. 454, 5 N. E. 852.

[367] In re Steadman, 8 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 13,330.

[368] In re Breck, 8 Ben. 93, 12 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 1,822.

[369] In re Miller, 132 Fed. 414, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87; In re Sherwoods, 210 Fed. 754, 127 C. C. A. 304, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 940, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769; In re Mullings Clothing Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 681, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

[370] In re Bowne, 12 N. B. R. 529, Fed. Cas. No. 1,741.

[371] In re Clancy, 10 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 2,782.

[372] In re Bruce, 6 Ben. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 2,044.

lessee.[373] It is also competent for a landlord to require the tenant to pay current taxes on the leased premises, and municipal assessments, and water rates, and to stipulate that they shall constitute a part of the rent reserved, and when this is done, he may include the amount thereof, remaining unpaid at the date of the bankruptcy, in his claim against the estate of the bankrupt tenant.[374] But a state statute providing that, where a tenant unlawfully withholds possession of rented premises from his landlord, judgment shall go against such tenant "for double the rent reserved or stipulated to be paid," relates merely to the measure of the amount for which the tenant shall be liable, and does not characterize the landlord's demand for double rent during the period of unlawful detention as a debt springing out of the original contractual relation; and hence such demand, not arising ex contractu, is not provable in bankruptcy.[375] So again, where a lease provided that the tenant might make alterations in the premises, he agreeing to restore the property at the expiration of the lease to its former condition, and before the end of the term the tenant became bankrupt, and the landlord resumed possession of the premises and leased them to the trustee in bankruptcy, afterwards seeking to prove a claim against the estate for the estimated cost of restoring the property, it was held that the claim was not provable, as the clause in the lease contemplated the expiration of the lease by its own terms, and not by re-entry by the landlord.[376]

§ 520. Same; Landlord's Lien.—The general principles governing landlords' liens, in the bankruptcy of the tenant, have been discussed in an earlier section.[377] It remains to be stated that a landlord to whom rent is due for the use of the premises by the bankrupt will not be required to bring an action in a state court for the establishment of his lien, as provided by the state statute, as a condition precedent to the assertion of his rights against the bankrupt's property in the hands of [373] Witherow v. South Side Trust Co., 181 Fed. 753; Wylie v. Smith, 2 Woods, 673, Fed. No. 18,110.

[374] Ellis v. Rafferty, 199 Fed. 80, 117 C. C. A. 592, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192; McCann v. Evans, 185 Fed. 93, 107 C. C. A. 313, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47; In re Criblier (D. C.) 184 Fed. 338, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765. Where a lease required the bankrupt lessee to pay taxes two months after they became a lien on the premises, taxes which were assessed and became a lien prior to the tenant's bankruptcy were provable as a claim against the estate, though they were not in fact payable until after the adjudication. In re Sherwoods, 210 Fed. 754, 127 C. C. A. 304, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 940, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769. It seems that a landlord's claim for taxes and water rents which the tenant was bound to pay may be a provable debt though, at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, the amount had not been fixed by assessment. In re Spies-Alper Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 535, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

[375] Hamilton v. McCroskey, 112 Ga. 651, 37 S. E. 859.

[376] In re Arnstein, 101 Fed. 706, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246. And see In re O'Malley & Glynn, 191 Fed. 999, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 143.

[377] Supra, § 373.

the trustee, but he may at once prove his debt and be heard in the court of bankruptcy in support of his claim to priority of payment.[378] But under the laws of some of the states, a landlord who takes from his tenant a mortgage on the personalty used or kept on the demised premises, covering not only arrears of rent but also other debts, is deemed to have waived his statutory lien on such property for rent due, and he will not be entitled to enforce such a lien against the property in the hands of the tenant's trustee in bankruptcy.[379] Up to the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, the landlord may enforce his lien by distress, if allowed by the laws of the state, and the security thus acquired is not invalidated by the adjudication of the tenant in bankruptcy, though within four months thereafter.[380] But upon the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the whole estate comes into the constructive custody and possession of the bankruptcy court, and thereafter the landlord will not be permitted to seize the goods on a distress warrant, but must proceed against the trustee in bankruptcy.[381]

§ 521. Same; Rent to Accrue After Adjudication.—A landlord cannot maintain a claim in bankruptcy against the estate of his tenant for any rent accruing or to accrue under the terms of the lease after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[382] And it is im-

[378] In re Byrne, 97 Fed. 762, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268.

[379] In re Wolf, 98 Fed. 74, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558. See Lontos v. Coppard, 246 Fed. 803, 159 C. C. A. 105, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575.

[380] Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 551, 21 L. Ed. 481; Goodwin v. Sharkey, 80 Pa. St. 149, 15 N. B. R. 526.

[381] In re Bishop, 153 Fed. 304, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635; Buckey v. Snouffer, 10 Md. 149, 69 Am. Dec. 129; Noe v. Gibson, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 513.

[382] In re H. M. Lasker Co., 251 Fed. 53, 163 C. C. A. 303, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234; In re Mullings Clothing Co., 238 Fed. 58, 151 C. C. A. 134, L. R. A. 1918A, 539, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; In re Gallacher Coal Co., 205 Fed. 183, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766; South Side Trust Co. v. Watson, 200 Fed. 50, 118 C. C. A. 278, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; In re Abrams, 200 Fed. 1005, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Scruggs, 205 Fed. 673, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Quaker Drug Co., 204 Fed. 689, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 398; Colman Co. v. Withoft (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 250, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328; In re Roth & Appel, 181 Fed. 667, 104 C. C. A. 649, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 270, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Rubel, 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; Watson v. Merrill, 136 Fed. 359, 69 C. C. A. 185, 69 L. R. A. 719, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; In re Roth & Appel, 174 Fed. 64, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Hays, Foster & Ward Co., 117 Fed. 879, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144; Atkins v. Wilcox, 105 Fed. 595, 44 C. C. A. 626, 53 L. R. A. 118, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; In re Mahler, 105 Fed. 428, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; In re Arnstein, 101 Fed. 706, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; Bray v. Cobb, 100 Fed. 270, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Jefferson, 93 Fed. 948, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; Treadwell v. Marden, 123 Mass. 390, 25 Am. Rep. 108; Scott v. Demarest, 75 Misc. Rep. 289, 135 N. Y. Supp. 264; Kamioner v. Balkind, 93 Misc. Rep. 458, 158 N. Y. Supp. 310. As to special rules under the statutory law of Pennsylvania, see Rosenblum v. Uber, 256 Fed. 584, 167 C. C. A. 614, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

material that the tenant may have given notes for the installments of rent to accrue in the future; they cannot be proved as debts against his estate.[383] As to the effect of a covenant in the lease that, on default in the payment of any installment of rent, the rent for the entire term shall at once become due and payable, there is more doubt. But it has been held that the bankruptcy of the lessee, while so in default, will give the landlord a right to prove a claim for the entire rent so far as it is definitely fixed by the terms of the lease,[384] though he must take the position of an ordinary general creditor, and will not be entitled to priority of payment,[385] but that if the tenant is not in default at the time of his bankruptcy, the filing of the petition will not cause the rent for the whole term to become exigible or mature notes given for future installments.[386] And a provision in the lease that, in case the tenant shall be adjudicated a bankrupt, the lessor may re-enter and terminate the lease, and that the lessee will then pay to the lessor "as damages" a sum representing the difference between the rental value of the premises and the rent reserved for the residue of the term, does not create a liability which can be proved as a debt against the estate.[387] So a state statute giving to the lessor a lien on the tenant's property on the premises, to secure the payment of one year's rent due or to become due, does not entitle the landlord, when the tenant becomes bankrupt during the term, to priority of payment out of his estate for a year's rent from the date of the adjudication.[388]

[383] Atkins v. Wilcox, 105 Fed. 595, 44 C. C. A. 626, 53 L. R. A. 118, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; In re Hays, Foster & Ward Co., 117 Fed. 879, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144.

[384] In re Pittsburg Drug Co., 164 Fed. 482, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 227. Unaccrued rent under a lease of a store service apparatus may be provable in bankruptcy, where the apparatus was required to be specially adapted to the premises and could not be used again to advantage, and the parties have so provided in their contract. In re Caswell-Massey Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 571, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426.

[385] In re Cronson, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 474.

[386] Atkins v. Wilcox, 105 Fed. 595, 44 C. C. A. 626, 53 L. R. A. 118, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; In re Miller Bros. Grocery Co., 219 Fed. 851, 135 C. C. A. 521, L. R. A. 1916B, 1099, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 946, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704. Where a lease to a bankrupt of a store service system for a term of 10 years provided that, on breach by the lessee or its bankruptcy, the lessor might enter and take possession of the property, which it did after the bankruptcy, a further provision that in such case the rent for the entire term should immediately become due and payable was held to create a penalty, and a claim therefor against the bankrupt estate was disallowed. In re Merwin & Willoughby Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 116, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485.

[387] Slocum v. Soliday, 183 Fed. 410, 106 C. C. A. 56, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460; In re Rhoads, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 179. Compare In re Goldstein, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 422. See In re Merwin & Willoughby Co., 206 Fed. 116, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485.

[388] In re Jefferson, 93 Fed. 948, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

§ 522. Same; Occupation and Use of Premises by Trustee.—Where there is a leasehold estate among the assets of the bankrupt, the trustee may accept it if it is salable and has a money value, but he is not bound to do so unless it appears to be for the interest of the creditors.[389] If he accepts the term, for the purpose of realizing its value as an asset, he is bound by the covenants of the lease, including that for the payment of rent at the stipulated rate.[390] But there must be some positive and unequivocal act of acceptance by the trustee before he will be held liable on the lease,[391] and he does not accept the premises and become responsible for the rent merely by leaving some goods there,[392] and occupation of the leased premises by the trustee independently of the lease, where he pays for such occupation, is not evidence of an election to accept the lease.[393]

But if the trustee, without accepting or assuming the lease (or holding over after the expiration of the bankrupt's term), continues to occupy and use the demised premises for purposes connected with the administration of the estate, the landlord will be entitled to compensation for the reasonable value of the use of the premises by the trustee, from the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy until the possession is surrendered to him.[394] In ordinary circumstances, this may be fairly measured by the rent which the bankrupt was paying, and compensation to the lessor will be allowed at the rate of the rent reserved in the lease, if this appears fair and reasonable to the court.[395] But this is not always the case. If the trustee continues to occupy and use the premises only for the purpose of storing the goods of the bankrupt therein until they can be sold, he should pay rent to the landlord only to the extent to which the estate in bankruptcy has been benefited by the use of the premises. That is, the landlord cannot recover the 389 White v. Griffing, 44 Conn. 437. And see, supra, § 307.

390 Ex parte Faxon, 1 Low. 404, 4 N. B. R. 32, Fed. Cas. No. 4,704; White v. Griffing, 44 Conn. 437.

391 In re Washburn, 11 N. B. R. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 17,211.

392 In re Yeaton, 1 Low. 420, Fed. Cas. No. 18,133.

393 In re Ten Eyck, 7 N. B. R. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 13,829.

394 In re Abrams, 200 Fed. 1005, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Hunter, 151 Fed. 904, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; In re Hinckel Brewing Co., 123 Fed. 942, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; Bray v. Cobb, 100 Fed. 270, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Chambers, 98 Fed. 865, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537; In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re McGrath, 5 Ben. 183, 5 N. B. R. 254, Fed. Cas. No. 8,808; In re Walton, 1 N. B. R. 557, Fed. Cas. No. 17,131; In re Ives, 18 N. B. R. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 7,116; In re Metz, 6 Ben. 571, Fed. Cas. No. 9,509; In re Croney, 8 Ben. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 3,411; In re Hamburger, 12 N. B. R. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 5,975; In re Hufnagel, 12 N. B. R. 554, Fed. Cas. No. 6,837. And see supra, §§ 211, 307.

395 In re Breck, 8 Ben. 93, 12 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 1,822; In re Appold, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 469, 1 N. B. R. 621, Fed. Cas. No. 499; In re Cronson, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 474.

amount which would be a proper rental for the premises if used as a place of business by a merchant in trade, but only what they were worth as a mere store-house.[396] And even to this extent, the trustee is chargeable only for the time he actually used the place,[397] and if he surrenders the keys immediately after he receives them, he incurs no liability for rent which accrued before he took possession.[398] And in a case where the premises had been used by the bankrupt for the purpose of storing his goods, under a lease, and the trustee knew nothing of the lease until two or three months after his appointment, when he was applied to for the rent, whereupon he denied his liability and removed the goods, it was held that, as he had not accepted the lease and in fact derived no benefit from the premises, he was not liable to the landlord for any sum.[399]

Whatever may be the sum to which the landlord is entitled for the use of his premises by the trustee, he is not required to prove it as a debt in the bankruptcy proceedings and share with other creditors. It should be settled by the court, paid as a part of the expenses of administering the estate, and entered as a credit item on the trustee's accounts.[400] And if the trustee has no cash in hand with which to pay the landlord's charges, he may be ordered to sell sufficient personal property for that purpose, and this will take precedence of the bankrupt's claim to have his exemptions set apart out of such personalty.[401]

§ 523. Same; Damages for Breach of Contract or Covenant.—The rule stated in a preceding section,[402] that a landlord cannot maintain a claim in bankruptcy against the estate of his tenant for any rent accruing or to accrue after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, has sometimes worked hardship, and landlords of bankrupt tenants have attempted to prove a claim for the rent which would have accrued under the lease during the remainder of the term, on the theory that such a sum was recoverable as damages for the tenant's breach of his contract or covenant to pay the stipulated rent. But such claims

396 In re Fowler, 8 Ben. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 4,997; In re Lucius Hart Mfg. Co., 17 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 8,592; In re Wheeler, 18 N. B. R. 385, Fed. Cas. No. 17,490; In re Dunham, Fed. Cas. No. 4,145.

397 In re Merrifield, 3 N. B. R. 98, Fed. Cas. No. 9,465. See Longstreth v. Pennock, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 394, 7 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 8,488.

398 In re Criblier, 184 Fed. 338, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765.

399 In re Washburn, 11 N. B. R. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 17,211.

400 In re Jefferson, 93 Fed. 948, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; In re Butler, 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 369, 6 N. B. R. 501, Fed. Cas. No. 2,236; In re Webb, 6 N. B. R. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 17,315; In re Rose, 3 N. B. R. 265, Fed. Cas. No. 12,043; In re Hoagland, 18 N. B. R. 530, Fed. Cas. No. 6,545.

401 In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

402 Supra, § 521.

have generally been disallowed.[403] And the same rule is applied where the lease contains an express covenant that, upon the bankruptcy of the lessee, the lessor may terminate the lease and re-enter, and that the lessee shall thereupon be liable for all loss and damage sustained by the lessor on account of the premises remaining unlet or being let for the remainder of the term for a less rent than that reserved in the lease. A claim for the breach of such a covenant does not constitute a "fixed liability absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy," but the liability is altogether contingent, because of the uncertainty as to whether the lessor will re-enter and terminate the lease, and, if he does, whether there will be any loss, and its amount; nor is such a claim provable as a debt "founded upon express contract," under the clause of the statute relating thereto, because this cannot be construed as permitting the proof of claims which are contingent both as to liability and amount at the commencement of the proceedings.[404] And for similar reasons it has been held that a claim for damages against a lessee for abandoning the premises, a dwelling house, so that it was wrongfully entered, and burned and destroyed, is not a provable claim in bankruptcy proceedings.[405]

In the case of the lease of machinery or similar property, the lessor may be entitled to prove a claim for damages for having it thrown back on his hands by the bankruptcy of the lessee. If such a lease provides, for instance, that it shall be terminated upon the bankruptcy of the lessee, and the lessee covenants to pay to the lessor, on breach or termination of the lease, certain sums to cover the cost of transportation of the machinery back to the lessor, an allowance for depreciation, and the expense of repairing it for the use of another lessee, these items will be provable as a claim against the estate of the lessee in bankruptcy.[406] But it has been held that a claim of the lessor of a coal [403] In re Leslie & Griffith Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 465, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744; Ratshesky v. Whiting, 251 Fed. 268, 163 C. C. A. 424, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640; Watson v. Merrill, 136 Fed. 359, 69 C. C. A. 185, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; In re Arnstein, 101 Fed. 706, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; Ex parte Houghton, 1 Low. 554, Fed. Cas. No. 6,725; In re Croney, 8 Ben. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 3,411; In re Hufnagel, 12 N. B. R. 554, Fed. Cas. No. 6,837. Compare In re Caloris Mfg. Co., 179 Fed. 722, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609; In re Mullings Clothing Co., 238 Fed. 58, 151 C. C. A. 134, L. R. A. 1918A, 539, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189. And see In re Mullings Clothing Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 667, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756.

[404] In re Shaffer (D. C.) 124 Fed. 111, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; In re Roth & Appel, 181 Fed. 667, 104 C. C. A. 649, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 270, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Ells (D. C.) 98 Fed. 967, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564.

[405] Winfree v. Jones, 104 Va. 39, 51 S. E. 153, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 201.

[406] In re Desnoyers Shoe Co., 227 Fed. 401, 142 C. C. A. 97, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; In re D. C. Clark Shoe Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 341, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238. Contra, see In re Jorolemon-Oliver Co., 213 Fed. 625, 130 C. C. A. 217.

mine for the cost of pumping the mine after abandonment of the lease, due to the bankruptcy of the lessee, in view of stipulations in the lease, was for a contingent liability, dependent on continuance of the term, and therefore not provable against the estate.[407]

[407] In re Gallacher Coal Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 183, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766.

CHAPTER XXVI

PROOF AND ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS

§ 524. Necessity of Proof.—There are certain things which a creditor of a bankrupt may do without proving his claim. He may, for example, procure an order for the examination of the bankrupt, when he desires by this means to discover whether it will be worth his while to prove his claim.[1] But if the creditor wishes to participate in the distribution of the bankrupt's estate, through and by means of the bankruptcy proceedings, it is absolutely necessary that he should establish his status and the validity and amount of his claim in the manner which the act prescribes.[2] A secured creditor, it is true, may prefer to rely upon his security and avoid the bankruptcy proceedings altogether, and he will not generally be interfered with by the court unless there is reason to think that something might be realized on the security for the benefit of the general creditors, if it were foreclosed by the trustee in bankruptcy.[3] And there are certain privileged claims which need not

[1] In re Jehu, 94 Fed. 638, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; In re Walker, 96 Fed. 550, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35.

[2] In re Dunn Hardware & Furniture Co., 132 Fed. 719, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147; In re Kligerman (D. C.) 219 Fed. 758, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608. Where all things necessary to bring a proposed composition before the court for confirmation have been done, the court cannot as a matter of law refuse confirmation on the objection of creditors whose claims, though mentioned in the schedules, have not been proved or allowed. In re French, 181 Fed. 583.

[3] Infra, § 566. And see In re Goldsmith, 118 Fed. 763, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re North Star Ice & Coal Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 301, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; In re Old Oregon Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 236 Fed. 804, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409. A landlord, having a lien or charge for the be proved, such as taxes. Of taxes it has been said: "The bankruptcy act evidently does not contemplate that they shall be proved like an ordinary debt, providing, as it does, that they shall be paid by the trustee on the order of the court, and that he shall have credit in his accounts upon filing the receipts of the proper officers therefor." [4] And while the lien of a judgment is not lost by failure to prove the claim in bankruptcy,[5] yet a judgment creditor cannot share in the distribution of the estate without doing so.[6]

And where formal proof of the debt is imperative, nothing can avail as a substitute for it. Thus, the finding, in a decree of adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy, that the petitioning creditor has a valid and provable claim to a certain amount, is not conclusive upon the trustee and creditors, so as to dispense with proof of the debt of that creditor, or to preclude questioning his right to participate in the distribution of the estate.[7] And a voluntary litigation against the trustee of a claim against the estate, resulting in a judgment against the trustee, does not create a preferred debt which can be enforced directly against the estate, but its only effect is to liquidate the claim, and the judgment must be proved.[8] Again, the statement of a debt in the schedule of the bankrupt is not a proof of it; it may be stated in fraud and may not exist, or the bankrupt may have made payments upon it or have counterclaims against it. The debt must be proved by the oath of the creditor as the law directs.[9] Furthermore, a creditor who proves his debt in bankruptcy must do so absolutely and according to the directions of the statute and the rules of the court; he will not be allowed to interpose any protest, qualification, or reservation.[10] It should be added that the ordinary proceedings upon the proof and allowance of the demands presented by creditors are a part of the entire proceeding in bankruptcy, and are not to be regarded as so many separate suits at law or in equity.[11] rent due him on the property of his tenant at the time of the latter's bankruptcy, but the amount of which has not been adjudicated, must, in order to preserve his priority, establish his claim by proof, the same as other creditors. In re Hayward, 130 Fed. 720, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264.

[4] In re Prince & Walter, 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; In re Harvey, 122 Fed. 745, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; Paine v. Archer, 233 Fed. 259, 147 C. C. A. 265, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

[5] Cottrell v. Pierson, 12 Fed. 805.

[6] In re Rosenberg, 144 Fed. 442, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465. Where a defendant in a judgment is adjudicated a bankrupt, and the plaintiff, with knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings, fails to prove his judgment therein, he cannot afterwards set off his judgment against a judgment which the bankrupt had recovered against him prior to the bankruptcy proceedings. Shoemaker v. Hurwitz, 56 Pa. Super. Ct. 632.

[7] In re Harper, 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918; In re Cleveland Ins. Co., 22 Fed. 200.

[8] In re Havens, 182 Fed. 367, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116.

[9] In re Davis, 2 N. B. R. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 3,618.

[10] Dutton v. Freeman, 5 Law Rep. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 4,210.

[11] Wiswall v. Campbell, 93 U. S. 347,

§ 525. Effect of Proof.—By proving his claim in bankruptcy a creditor submits the same to the jurisdiction of the court. If he is a nonresident, he will so far accept the jurisdiction of the court over him, by this course, that his obedience to its orders in the bankruptcy proceeding may be enforced by the power of striking out his claim;[12] and if an alien creditor voluntarily appears and proves his claim and receives a dividend thereon, he will be held thereby to have waived the exterritorial immunity from the operation of the bankruptcy law which otherwise would have saved him from the effect of the discharge granted to the bankrupt.[13] Again, the proof of a debt establishes the status of the claimant as a creditor of the bankrupt, connects him with the proceedings, and gives him the right to participate therein to the fullest extent allowed to creditors,[14] so that he may, for example, join in a call for a meeting of creditors,[15] or file charges against the trustee and ask for his removal.[16] Moreover, the proof establishes the validity and provable character of the claim, and its amount, and the right of the creditor to receive dividends thereon, in a manner which will be final and conclusive on all parties, unless an appeal is taken from the allowance of the claim or a motion for its re-examination shall be made and prevail.[17]

The bankruptcy act of 1867 provided that no creditor proving his debt or claim should be allowed to maintain any suit at law or in equity therefor against the bankrupt, but should be deemed to have waived all right of action and suit against him; and it was held that such implied waiver applied to all other courts, as well as the bankruptcy court, and that any suit thereafter commenced by such creditor against the bankrupt should be enjoined.[18] The present statute contains no such provision, although it allows pending suits against the bankrupt to be stayed until the question of his discharge is determined. But unless the creditor is thus controlled by the court, in the interest of the estate as a whole, the doctrine appears to prevail that the filing of a proof of his claim is not a waiver of his right of action on it in another court.[19] Certainly, it

23 L. Ed. 923; Maryman v. S. G. Dreyfus Co., 117 Ark. 17, 174 S. W. 549.

[12] In re Kyler, 2 Ben. 414, 2 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,956.

[13] Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. 411, 7 L. Ed. 723.

[14] See In re Smith, 2 Ben. 113, 1 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 12,971; Dutton v. Freeman, 5 Law Rep. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 4,210; In re Baldwin, 6 Ben. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 795.

[15] In re Back Bay Automobile Co., 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[16] In re Roanoke Furnace Co., 152 Fed. 846, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 661.

[17] Sabin v. Larkin-Green Logging Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 984, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210. See In re Merrick, 7 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 9,463; American Woolen Co. v. Samuelsohn, 226 N. Y. 61, 123 N. E. 154.

[18] In re Meyers, 2 Ben. 424, Fed. Cas. No. 9,518; Wilson v. Capuro, 41 Cal. 545; Burns v. Buricke (Ky.) 1 S. W. 821.

[19] Bay State Milling Co. v. Susman Feuer Co., 91 Conn. 482, 100 Atl. 19; Beyer v. Sadvoransky, 108 Misc. Rep. 463, 177 N. Y. Supp. 705; In re Buchan's Soap Corp., 169 Fed. 1017, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Ringenoldus v. Abresch, 119 Wis.

does not preclude the creditor from proceeding independently against any other person who may be separately liable on the same demand, such as a surety,[20] or another partner in the same firm who is not in bankruptcy;[21] nor will it waive his right to assert and enforce a lien upon particular property,[22] or to claim securities held as collateral,[23] or to pursue an independent remedy given by the state law, as, by the arrest of the debtor in the case of a debt fraudulently contracted.[24] So, if the creditor holds a note containing a waiver of exemptions, his proving the note as an unsecured debt in the bankruptcy proceedings will not debar him from proceeding in a competent court to subject the exempt property to the satisfaction of the demand.[25] As to the specific case of goods obtained by false representations and not paid for, the creditor does not waive his right of action for damages by proving his claim in bankruptcy,[26] but, so far as the bankruptcy proceedings are concerned, he is put to his election either to confirm the sale and assume the position of a creditor for the price or to repudiate the sale and recover the goods; and having made his election, with knowledge of the facts, by proving his claim and voting as a creditor in the bankruptcy proceedings, he is concluded thereby, and cannot afterwards withdraw his claim and demand the goods.[27] On a similar principle, it has been held that where the princi-410, 96 N. W. 817. See In re E. B. Havens & Co., 186 Fed. 583; Graves v. Neosho Falls Bank, 89 Kan. 179, 131 Pac. 146. Filing a claim in bankruptcy against an agent, without knowledge of an undisclosed principal, does not preclude an action against the latter. Sweeney v. Douglas Copper Co., 149 App. Div. 568, 134 N. Y. Supp. 247. Compare Commercial Bank of Boonville v. Central Nat. Bank (Mo. App.) 203 S. W. 662. After an adjudication of bankruptcy on the voluntary petition of the debtor, creditors who had previously filed an involuntary petition do not lose their right to attack a preferential transfer by filing their claims with the referee. International Silver Co. v. New York Jewelry Co., 233 Fed. 945, 147 C. C. A. 619, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91.

[20] United States v. Schofield Co., 182 Fed. 240; Curtin v. Katchinski, 31 Cal. App. 768, 161 Pac. 764; Tutt v. Fighting Wolf Min. Co. (Mo. App.) 209 S. W. 304.

[21] Robinson v. First Nat. Bank, 98 Tex. 184, 82 S. W. 505.

[22] Coles County v. Haynes & Lyons, 134 Ill. App. 320; Sessler v. Paducah Distilleries Co., 168 Fed. 44, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; Horton v. Queens County Machinery Corp., 101 Misc. Rep. 31, 166 N. Y. Supp. 662; Joseph Nelson Supply Co. v. Leary, 49 Utah, 493, 164 Pac. 1047. But see Brown v. City Nat. Bank, 72 Misc. Rep. 201, 131 N. Y. Supp. 92.

[23] Thomas v. Taggart, 209 U. S. 385, 28 Sup. Ct. 519, 52 L. Ed. 845, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710. But see First Nat. Bank v. Exchange Nat. Bank, 179 App. Div. 22, 153 N. Y. Supp. 818, 164 N. Y. Supp. 1092.

[24] In re Lewensohn, 104 Fed. 1006, 44 C. C. A. 309, affirming 99 Fed. 73, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[25] In re Loden, 184 Fed. 965, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 917; In re Meredith, 144 Fed. 230, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 331. See In re Strickland, 167 Fed. 867, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734; Drees v. Armstrong, 180 Iowa, 29, 161 N. W. 40.

[26] Maxwell v. Martin, 130 App. Div. 80, 114 N. Y. Supp. 349; Standard Sewing Mach. Co. v. Alexander, 68 S. C. 506, 47 S. E. 711; Sanger Bros. v. Barrett (Tex. Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1087; J. K. Orr Shoe Co. v. Upshaw & Powledge, 13 Ga. App. 501, 79 S. E. 362.

[27] Standard Varnish Works v. Haydock, 143 Fed. 318, 74 C. C. A. 456, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; Lynch v. Bronson (D. C.) 160 Fed. 139, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep.

pal of several joint wrongdoers has become bankrupt, and the creditor has proved his claim as upon an implied contract and received dividends, he cannot thereafter maintain an action in tort against those who assisted the principal in converting the property.[28] But this doctrine is not unquestioned. For instance, in an action against an agent for conversion for the unauthorized investment of plaintiff's funds in certain notes, it was held that the proving of such notes in bankruptcy against the estate of the maker, and the receipt of a dividend thereon, did not estop the plaintiff from proceeding with the action, but especially, in this case, where an order of the court in the case required the proving of the claim and directed that it should be without prejudice.[29] So, where a debtor, in pursuance of a scheme to defraud his creditors, conveyed land, took back a mortgage, and assigned the mortgage, it was considered that a creditor, by filing his proof of claim in the bankruptcy proceeding against the debtor, did not waive his right of action against the assignee of the mortgage for the fraud.[30] In another case, where a creditor of a partnership pledged notes to one of the partners for collection, and that partner, in violation of his agreement to pay the proceeds of the notes to the creditor, used the money to pay off other indebtedness, it was held that the creditor, by accepting a dividend in the bankruptcy proceedings against the partnership, did not waive his right of action against the partner for misappropriation.[31] If the bankrupt does not succeed in his application for a discharge, then a creditor who has proved his claim is remitted, as to any unpaid balance, to his former rights and remedies, and will not be estopped from pursuing any such remedy by the mere fact that he proved his claim and received a dividend in the bankruptcy proceedings.[32] Proof of a claim against a corporation in bankruptcy is not a bar to an action thereon against the stockholders.[33]

409; In re Kaplan & Myers (D. C.) 236 Fed. 260, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 630; Edwin Clapp & Son v. Knorr, 106 Kan. 733, 189 Pac. 936. But see, as to reserving a right to reclaim the goods, In re Kaplan & Myers, 241 Fed. 459, 154 C. C. A. 291, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367. And see Smith v. Carukin, 259 Fed. 51, 170 C. C. A. 51, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278.

[28] Shonkweiler v. Harrington, 102 Neb. 710, 169 N. W. 258. And see Werner v. Manson, 107 Misc. Rep. 76, 176 N. Y. Supp. 742.

[29] Parkerson v. Borst (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 761, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[30] Jasper v. Rozinski, 228 N. Y. 349, 127 N. E. 189.

[31] Beal-Burrow Dry Goods Co. v. Talburt, 139 Ark. 113, 213 S. W. 20.

[32] Frey v. Torrey, 175 N. Y. 501, 67 N. E. 1082; Dingee v. Becker, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 196, 9 N. B. R. 508, Fed. Cas. No. 3,919; Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. v. New Lamp Chimney Co., 53 N. Y. 123, 13 Am. Rep. 476, 10 N. B. R. 355; Hoyt v. Freel, 8 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 220, 4 N. B. R. 131; Valente v. Cosentino, 218 Mass. 125, 105 N. E. 551. But one whose claim has been proved against the estate of a bankrupt, and afterwards expunged, cannot thereafter prosecute it in a state court. Pease v. Bennett, 17 N. H. 124.

[33] Chamberlin v. Huguenot Mfg. Co., 118 Mass. 532; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371; Hall v. Robertson, 213 Ill. App. 147. But see Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. v. Owen, 37 Okl. 616, 133 Pac. 193, L. R. A. 1916C, 189.

§ 526. Time of Making Proof.—The statute declares that "claims shall not be proved against a bankrupt estate subsequent to one year after the adjudication; or, if they are liquidated by litigation, and the final judgment therein is rendered within thirty days before or after the expiration of such time, then within sixty days after the rendition of such judgment; provided that the right of infants and insane persons without guardians, without notice of the proceedings, may continue six months longer." [34] The cases cited in the margin will illustrate the meaning of the phrase "liquidated by litigation" in the above provision.[35] Specifically, it is held that the term "litigation" is not limited to proceedings having for their object only the ascertainment of the amount due on the claim, but includes as well proceedings to ascertain the kind and character or validity of the claim,[36] and hence applies to a case where the creditor has claimed to hold security, and has litigated that question and been defeated, and thereafter attempts to prove as a general creditor.[37] In any case, therefore, where the creditor has a suit pending which will determine the validity, nature, and amount of his claim, he has the right to wait until the end of the litigation and then prove his claim, though more than a year from the date of the adjudication may then have elapsed.[38] In the words limiting the right of proof to a year after the "adjudication," this term, as elsewhere defined in the statute, means the date of the entry of a decree that the defendant is a bankrupt, or, if such decree is appealed from, then the date when such [34] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57n. Under this provision, claims liquidated by litigation can be filed no later than one year and ninety days after the adjudication. In re Edelen, 248 Fed. 580, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834. A creditor is not chargeable with laches in proving his claim, where it is presented within the year allowed by the statute, unless the rights of others have been prejudiced by his delay. In re Dunlap Carpet Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 726, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664. Failure of a landlord to present a claim for a lien for rent under Rev. Stat. Tex. art. 5490, until more than 30 days after the adjudication of the tenant as a bankrupt does not defeat his right. Lontos v. Coppard, 246 Fed. 803, 159 C. C. A. 105, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575.

[35] In re Clover Creamery Ass'n, 176 Fed. 907; 100 C. C. A. 377, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 884; Powell v. Leavitt, 150 Fed. 89, 80 C. C. A. 43; In re Lyons Beet Sugar Refining Co., 192 Fed. 445, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; In re Clark, 176 Fed. 955, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., 171 Fed. 673, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Fagan, 140 Fed. 758, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; In re E. O. Thompson's Sons, 123 Fed. 174, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581; In re Landis, 156 Fed. 318, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420; Moore v. Simms, 257 Fed. 540, 168 C. C. A. 524, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

[36] In re Standard Telephone & Electric Co., 186 Fed. 586, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[37] In re Salvator Brewing Co., 188 Fed. 522, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; First Nat. Bank v. Cameron, 209 Fed. 611, 126 C. C. A. 433, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209, 695.

[38] In re Baird, 154 Fed. 215, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 655; In re Keyes, 160 Fed. 763, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183; Powell v. Leavitt, 150 Fed. 89, 80 C. C. A. 43; In re Salvator Brewing Co., 193 Fed. 989, 113 C. C. A. 626, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Venstrom, 205 Fed. 325, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; Platt v. Ives, 86 Conn. 690, 86 Atl. 579; In re Louis J. Bergdoll Motor Co., 233 Fed. 410, 147 C. C. A. 346, 37 Bankr. Rep. 501.

decree is finally confirmed.[39] This includes not only the case where an appeal from a decree of adjudication is "affirmed," but also where such an appeal is dismissed.[40] If the debt of the particular creditor was not scheduled in time for proof and allowance, it will not be affected by the discharge of the bankrupt, except when the creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[41]

The generally accepted rule is that the bar of the statute, as to the time for proving claims, is absolute and prohibitive; that a creditor cannot be permitted under any circumstances whatever to come in for the purpose of making proof after the end of the year (except as specially stated in the statute), but forfeits all right in that behalf by delay; and that the court has no discretionary power to permit the filing of proofs after the end of the year, either nunc pro tunc or otherwise.[42] This rule is applied so strictly that it is held to make no difference that the particular claim was not scheduled and that the creditor had no notice of the proceedings,[43] or that, during the statutory year, the creditor was asserting and litigating the validity of a preference, and was thereby prevented from making his proof,[44] or that a composition had been effected,[45] or that the failure to make proof in due time was caused solely by accident and mistake,[46] or because the creditor was misled and omitted to prove his claim in consequence of the fraudulent concealment of assets by the bankrupt, who listed no property.[47] And a claim cannot be allowed, after the end of the year, under the guise [39] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 2. Where an adjudication in bankruptcy was vacated and the proceedings dismissed, but the order of vacation was reversed on appeal, and pursuant to mandate the adjudication and proceedings were reinstated, it was held that the court had power to allow a year thereafter for filing claims. In re Malkan (D. C.) 265 Fed. 867, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86.

[40] In re Lee, 171 Fed. 266, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 820.

[41] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 17.

[42] In re Ingalls Bros., 137 Fed. 517, 70 C. C. A. 101, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512; In re Blond, 188 Fed. 452; In re Peck, 168 Fed. 48, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; In re Hawk, 114 Fed. 916, 52 C. C. A. 536, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 71; Bray v. Cobb, 100 Fed. 270, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Co-operative Knitting Mills, 202 Fed. 1016, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; In re Knosco, 208 Fed. 201; In re Thompson, 227 Fed. 981, 142 C. C. A. 439, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Trion Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 521, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480; In re McCarthy Portable Elevator Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 986, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[43] Santa Rosa Bank v. White, 139 Cal. 703, 73 Pac. 577; In re Muskoka Lumber Co., 127 Fed. 886, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

[44] In re Leibowitz, 108 Fed. 617, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; In re Kemper, 142 Fed. 210, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; In re Rhodes, 105 Fed. 231, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

[45] In re Brown, 123 Fed. 336, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Bickmore Shoe Co. (D. C.) 263 Fed. 926, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24.

[46] In re Sanderson, 160 Fed. 278, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

[47] In re Meyer, 181 Fed. 904, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44; In re Peck, 161 Fed. 762, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 629; Chapman v. Whitsett, 236 Fed. 873, 150 C. C. A. 135, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

of an amendment or substitute for a prior claim, filed in due time but afterwards withdrawn.[48]

But this severe rule has been felt to work hardship in numerous cases, and the courts have often attempted to mitigate it in favor of creditors who were not to blame for the delay. Thus, it has been held that the statute should not be so construed as to prevent proof of a valid claim after the expiration of the year, where objection is not made by any other creditor or by the trustee, but by the bankrupt alone, and the delay was caused by the latter's own fraud.[49] So where the peculiar circumstances of the case rendered it impossible to file the claim for proof within the limited time.[50] And it has been thought that where a preferred creditor is compelled to surrender a voidable preference, he should thereafter be allowed to prove his claim before the estate is finally settled, though more than a year after the adjudication.[51] And in a case where the bankruptcy court ordered a sale of the bankrupt's estate, on condition that the purchaser should pay to each unsecured creditor a specified per cent of his claim, and the purchaser paid the money to the receiver, who turned it over to the trustee, who declared a dividend to the unsecured creditors, but excluding one creditor on the ground that he had failed to prove his claim within the statutory time, it was held that the court must permit the filing nunc pro tunc of an amended formal proof of the claim.[52] Further, this limitation of time is not binding on the United States as a creditor,[53] nor does it apply to a claim of ownership of property adverse to the bankrupt and to his estate.[54] And as to specific claims to funds in the possession of the trustee, it is held that the court of bankruptcy may limit the time for claimants to prove their title to less than a year, provided that notice is given to them and a reasonable length of time accorded.[55]

The present bankruptcy statute also declares that if any creditors do not make proof of their claims until after dividends have been de-

[48] In re E. O. Thompson's Sons, 123 Fed. 174, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581. But a claim the proof of which was defective because it lacked a statement of the official character of the officer signing the jurat, and was returned to the creditor's attorney for correction, was held properly allowed, though not redelivered to the referee for two years. In re Haskell (D. C.) 228 Fed. 819, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 428.

[49] In re Towne, 122 Fed. 313, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[50] In re Fagan, 140 Fed. 758, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

[51] In re Otto F. Lange Co., 170 Fed. 114, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

[52] In re Basha (C. C. A.) 200 Fed. 951, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225.

[53] In re Stoever, 127 Fed. 394, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; United States v. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co., 258 Fed. 562, 169 C. C. A. 502, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430.

[54] Nauman Co. v. Bradshaw, 193 Fed. 350, 113 C. C. A. 274, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565.

[55] In re T. A. McIntyre & Co., 176 Fed. 552, 100 C. C. A. 140, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; In re Lathrop, Haskins & Co., 223 Fed. 912, 139 C. C. A. 392, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

cleared and paid to the others, the right of such others shall not be affected thereby, but the late proving creditors are to receive dividends equal in amount to those already received by the other creditors, if the estate amounts to so much, before such other creditors are paid any further dividends.[56] The law plainly intends that the first proof of claims shall ordinarily take place at the first meeting of creditors. But it is held that creditors are entitled to prove their claims before the day of such first meeting, so as to make themselves parties to the proceeding and be entitled to an order for the examination of the bankrupt.[57] The presentation and delivery of proof of a claim to the trustee in bankruptcy, within the limited time, is a sufficient filing of it.[58] And where a creditor prosecutes a suit or petition against the trustee, and recovers judgment, his claim is so far before the court that it may be considered as "proved" for the purpose of saving the bar of the statute.[59] So, a claim duly proved within the year may be increased after that time where it is made necessary by a requirement that the creditor shall return preferences received as a condition to its allowance.[60] And where a claim against a bankrupt's estate was originally filed within the year, but was disallowed, and subsequent proceedings showed that it should have been filed for a larger amount, it was held that the amendment filed after the year had expired was not barred by the one-year limitation.[61] This limitation is restricted, according to its spirit and purpose, to claims which existed as such at the time of the adjudication, that is, claims which were then available against the bankrupt himself. It does not apply to expenses or liabilities incurred by the receiver or the trustee after the adjudication, such, for example, as a landlord's claim for rent of premises while they were occupied by the trustee.[62]

§ 527. Persons Authorized to Prove.—Any person being the lawful owner of a claim against the bankrupt may prove it against his estate, and the fact that another has previously filed a claim as a creditor on the same account does not prejudice his right to offer proof of it.[63] Where various claims of the same general order have been pooled or placed in the hands of a committee or a trustee, they may be proved [56] William Openhym & Sons v. Blake, 157 Fed. 536, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 65c. See In re Coulter (D. C.) 206 Fed. 906, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75.

[57] In re Patterson, 1 Ben. 448, 1 N. B. R. 100, Fed. Cas. No. 10,814.

[58] J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green, 204 U. S. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. 195, 51 L. Ed. 390, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72; Orinoco Iron Co. v. Metzel, 230 Fed. 40, 144 C. C. A. 338, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[59] Buckingham v. Estes, 128 Fed. 584, 63 C. C. A. 20; In re Strobel, 163 Fed. 787, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 884.

[60] In re Shiebler, 165 Fed. 363, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309.

[61] In re Hamilton Automobile Co., 209 Fed. 596, 126 C. C. A. 418, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205.

[62] In re Green (D. C.) 231 Fed. 253, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188.

[63] In re James Dunlap Carpet Co., 171 Fed. 532, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Dunlap Carpet Co., 206 Fed. 726, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664.

by such representative,[64] but the fact that a series of bonds issued by the bankrupt corporation are secured by a mortgage to a trustee does not exclude the right of individual bondholders to prove their several claims.[65] Where the creditor has become bankrupt, his trustee in bankruptcy is the proper person to prove the claim against the debtor's estate.[66] There are also cases where two or more creditors may join as provants or petitioners, as where joint indorsers of the bankrupt's note have taken it up, each advancing half the necessary funds.[67] There is no reason why a county or other municipal corporation should not file and prove a claim against an estate in bankruptcy.[68] But a creditor whose claim is one for unliquidated damages should first make application to the court to direct the manner in which it shall be liquidated, and when that is done, he may file and prove his claim.[69]

In case the creditor is a partnership, either of the partners may prove the claim in the manner provided by law. It is only necessary that the deposition proving the debt should contain a sworn statement that the deponent is a member of the firm, with such slight changes of phraseology as are rendered necessary by the circumstances.[70] When the debt is due to a corporation, the rule is that "the deposition shall be made by the treasurer, or if the corporation has no treasurer, by the officer whose duties most nearly correspond to those of treasurer." [71] But it is held, on the broad general principle that any person who is authorized to give an acquittance of a debt is entitled to prove that debt in bankruptcy, that a receiver appointed to take charge of a corporation upon its dissolution, or upon proceedings in bankruptcy or insolvency against it, in either a state or federal court, may properly make proof of a debt due to such corporation from a bankrupt debtor.[72] The fact that the [64] In re Salvator Brewing Co., 188 Fed. 522, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; In re E. T. Kenney Co., 136 Fed. 451, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611.

[65] Mackay v. Randolph Macon Coal Co., 178 Fed. 881, 102 C. C. A. 115, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719. See In re A. J. Ellis, Inc., 252 Fed. 483, 164 C. C. A. 399, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

[66] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57m.

[67] In re Farmers' Supply Co., 170 Fed. 502, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460.

[68] In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

[69] In re Silverman, 101 Fed. 219, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83.

[70] General Order No. 21, clause 1; Form No. 24. Where a partnership is in bankruptcy, the firm may prove against an individual partner and vice versa. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5g.

[71] General Order No. 21, clause 1. This order was amended, Nov. 1, 1915, by adding this provision: "If the treasurer or corresponding officer is not within the district wherein the bankruptcy proceedings are pending, the deposition may be made by some officer or agent of the corporation having knowledge of the facts." As to proof by the president of a corporation, who performs the ordinary duties of a treasurer, see In re Eisenberg (D. C.) 251 Fed. 427, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

[72] Ex parte Norwood, 3 Biss. 504, Fed. Cas. No. 10,364; In re Republic Ins. Co., 8 N. B. R. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 11,705; In re Baxter, 18 N. B. R. 560, Fed. Cas. No. 1,121; Dight v. Chapman, 44 Or. 265, 75 Pac. 585, 65 L. R. A. 793.

president of a corporation has ceased to be a stockholder cannot be raised as an objection to proof of a claim by him in favor of the corporation against his estate in bankruptcy.[73] If the claim to be proved is due to a state, the proof should be made by the state treasurer or by some officer holding a relation to the state government similar to that which a treasurer or cashier bears to a business corporation of which he is such officer.[74] Proof of claim for wages of labor due to a minor is properly made by his father, at least if there is nothing to show emancipation.[75] And one of two or more executors may sign and verify a claim on behalf of the estate.[76]

§ 528. Proof by Agent or Attorney.—The present bankruptcy act provides that a proof of claim shall be "signed by a creditor"; but then, another clause provides that the term "creditor" may include "his duly authorized agent, attorney, or proxy."[77] And although the official form (No. 35) provided for the proof of a claim by agent or attorney requires the deponent to state the reason why the deposition "can not" be made by the claimant in person, yet the General Order (No. 21) which is of higher authority than the form, is fully satisfied if the deposition sets forth the reason why it "is not" made by the claimant in person. Upon the whole, therefore, we conclude that if there is any good reason for the proof being made by an agent or attorney it may be so made, notwithstanding it would not have been entirely impossible for the claimant to make the proof in person.[78] Thus, as held in some of the cases under the former statute, where the creditor himself has no personal knowledge of the facts respecting the debt, proof may be made by an agent who has had exclusive charge and control of the same, and who has personal knowledge of all the facts required to be sworn to in making the proof.[79] Authority to prove a debt in bankruptcy proceedings in behalf of the creditor may be conferred by a formal power of attorney, which must be "proved and acknowledged before a referee, or a United States commissioner or a notary public."[80] But if the creditor, at the time of making [73] In re Morgan, 8 Ben. 186, Fed. Cas. No. 9,797.

[74] In re Corn Exchange Bank, 15 N. B. R. 216, Fed. Cas. No. 3,243.

[75] In re Haskell (D. C.) 228 Fed. 819, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 428.

[76] In re Schaffner (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 977, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681.

[77] Compare Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57, with Id., § 1, cl. 9.

[78] While the statute allows proof of claim to be made by an agent, it is not contemplated that proof of claim can be so made when the principal is present and able to file his own proof. And a claim will be disallowed where the proof is made by an agent as the principal, without disclosing the agency, for it is in that case false. In re Collins (D. C.) 235 Fed. 937, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[79] In re Watrous, 14 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 12,270.

[80] General Order No. 21, par. 5. Under the former statute, a power of attorney to prove a debt in bankruptcy was not required to be acknowledged. In re Barnes, 1 Low. 560, Fed. Cas. No. 1,012; In re South Boston Iron Co., 4 Cliff. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 13,183. An attorney in fact may prepare and present the power of attorney, is in a foreign country, the instrument may be acknowledged before a United States consul in such country.[81] It is also held that a power of attorney duly executed to either of three persons as substitutes, but acknowledged before one of them, though void as to that one, may lawfully be executed by either of the other two.[82]

Guardians, executors, administrators, and all other persons acting in a representative capacity, may make proof in bankruptcy of the claims of the persons or estates represented by them.[83] But it seems that the bankrupt himself cannot act as the trustee or representative of a creditor in proving the latter's claim against his own estate and securing its allowance.[84] But while the attorney for the bankrupt should not be permitted to appear in the proceedings as attorney for a creditor also, yet, in the absence of a rule of court on the subject, a claim duly proved against the bankrupt's estate should not be rejected merely because filed for the creditor by the bankrupt's attorney, it being apparent that the attorney acted in entire good faith.[85]

§ 529. Proof by Assignee of Claim.—The assignee of a nonnegotiable chose in action may prove it against the estate of the debtor in bankruptcy upon his own deposition, and it is not necessary to the sufficiency of the proof that the deposition of the assignor should be added, if the assignment was made before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, although, in that case, the deposition should show the name of the original creditor.[86] Under the provision of the law which requires the proof of debt to set forth the "consideration" of the claim, it is necessary, in the case of a simple chose in action, or a contract for the payment of money not negotiable, in the hands of an assignee or purchaser of the same, that the proof should state the consideration upon which it rested as between the original parties, and a proof of claim, but only for one particular creditor; that is, he may not engage in what is practically the business of an attorney at law by collecting and managing large numbers of claims. In re H. E. Ploof Machinery Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 421, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 795.

[81] In re Sugenheimer, 91 Fed. 744, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425. This is in view of the fact that section 20 of the bankruptcy law provides that oaths required by the act may be administered by "diplomatic or consular officers of the United States in any foreign country."

[82] In re Sugenheimer, 91 Fed. 744, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[83] In re Republic Ins. Co., 8 N. B. R. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 11,705.

[84] In re Mitteldorfer, Chase, 276, 3 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 9,674.

[85] In re Kimball, 100 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144.

[86] In re McCarthy Portable Elevator Co., 205 Fed. 986, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; Ex parte Davenport, 1 Low. 384, 3 N. B. R. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 3,586; In re Kenny (D. C.) 269 Fed. 54, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214. The fact that certain creditors have made a champertous agreement with a third party for the collection of their debts from the bankrupt furnishes no ground for the disallowance of such claims, on petition of a creditor. In re Lathrop, 3 Ben. 490, 3 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 8,103.

not merely the consideration upon which it passed to the present holder. But negotiable paper, acquired in good faith before maturity, may be proved against the estate of the maker in bankruptcy by an indorsee upon showing a valid consideration paid by him; and such showing, in such a case, will be held to be a compliance with the requirement of the statute, and it will not be required of the holder to show that, as between the maker of the paper and its original payee, there was a good and valid consideration, or what that consideration was.[87]

Even after the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy against a debtor, claims against him may be assigned and transferred. There is nothing in the statute or its policy to restrain the negotiability of debts. On the contrary the law recognizes this as something that will take place and makes provision for proof accordingly.[88] And where, after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by or against the debtor, a creditor transfers or assigns his debt to another, the debt is to be proved by the person who is the owner of it at the time of making proof; but in this case, the deposition of the owner must be "supported" by a deposition of the person who was the owner at the time of the commencement of the proceedings, setting forth the true consideration of the debt and the particulars as to its being secured or unsecured, and the language of the form prescribed for the proof of debts will have to be modified to suit the circumstances of the case.[89] It is held that the receiver of the property of a creditor is an "assignee" of the debts due to such creditor, and may prove the debt in bankruptcy in the manner contemplated for proof by a conventional assignee.[90] But a mere agent holding negotiable paper, not as owner or indorsee, but simply for his principal, cannot prove it except in the name and for the benefit of the real owner, and not at all when the owner is in a situation to make the proof for himself.[91]

§ 530. Proof by Persons Contingently Liable for Bankrupt.—The bankruptcy law provides that "whenever a creditor, whose claim against [87] In re Lake Superior Ship-Canal, R. & I. Co., 10 N. B. R. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 7,998.

[88] In re Murdock, 1 Low. 362, Fed. Cas. No. 9,939. And see In re Sweetser (D. C.) 131 Fed. 567. Where assignment is made of a claim which has already been proved and allowed in the bankruptcy proceedings, it is neither necessary nor proper for the assignee to make a fresh proof of it in his own name; and this is true, even though the assignor questions the fact or validity of the assignment. In re Breakwater Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 375, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752; In re Louis J. Bergdoll Motor Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 248, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265. The allowance by the referee of the transfer of a claim against the bankrupt estate is binding upon other creditors, who might have opposed it, whether they did so or not. In re Sweetser (D. C.) 240 Fed. 167.

[89] In re McCarthy Portable Elevator Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 986, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; In re Murdock, 1 Low. 362, Fed. Cas. No. 9,939; In re Ford, 18 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 4,932; General Order No. 21, clause 3.

[90] In re Mills, 17 N. B. R. 472, Fed. Cas. No. 9,612

[91] In re Saunders, 2 Low. 444, 13 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 12,371.

a bankrupt estate is secured by the individual undertaking of any person, fails to prove such claim, such person may do so in the creditor's name, and if he discharge such undertaking in whole or in part he shall be subrogated to that extent to the rights of the creditor." And in execution of this provision, the General Orders in bankruptcy provide that "the claims of persons contingently liable for the bankrupt may be proved in the name of the creditor when known by the party contingently liable. When the name of the creditor is unknown, such claim may be proved in the name of the party contingently liable, but no dividend shall be paid upon such claim, except upon satisfactory proof that it will diminish pro tanto the original debt.[92]

§ 531. Form and Sufficiency of Deposition.—The bankruptcy act provides that "proof of claims shall consist of a statement under oath, in writing, signed by a creditor, setting forth his claim, the consideration therefor, and whether any, and, if so, what, securities are held therefor, and whether any, and, if so, what, payments have been made thereon, and that the sum claimed is justly owing from the bankrupt to the creditor." To this the general orders in bankruptcy add the requirement that the proof shall be made by a "deposition" which shall be correctly entitled in the court and in the cause; and the officially prescribed forms contain precedents for proofs of claims in various circumstances.[93] Depositions to prove claims must contain the averments and the particular details required by the statute, and must be made by the party authorized, and conform substantially to the official forms.[94] Thus, a claim is not duly proved unless it appears from the deposition that a debt exists which the creditor has a present right to have paid out of the bank-

[92] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57i; General Order No. 21, cl. 4. A creditor whose claim is secured by the liability of a co-debtor of the bankrupt, or one who is a guarantor or surety for him, is not obliged, by anything in the law, to prove his claim and proceed in the bankruptcy proceedings. If he chooses, he may rely wholly upon the secondary liability, neglecting the bankrupt's estate, and the liability of the guarantor or surety will not be affected by the bankrupt's discharge. But if the creditor takes this course, the act very justly gives to the person contingently or secondarily liable for the bankrupt a right to prove the claim in the name of the creditor, and to pay it wholly or in part, with the right of subrogation. If, then, he thinks the bankrupt's estate may be made to pay a part of the claim, this is the course for him to pursue, for he will thus indemnify himself, to the extent of the dividends received, though remaining liable to the creditor for the unpaid balance. See In re Levy, 2 Ben. 169, 1 N. B. R. 327, Fed. Cas. No. 8,297.

[93] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57; General Order No. 2; Forms Nos. 31–37. The word "deposition," as here used, is not to be understood as requiring the same sort of desposition by which the testimony of a witness is taken. The requirements, both of the act and the general order, are satisfied by a paper prepared by the creditor himself or by his attorney, containing all that is necessary, in the form of an affidavit. See In re Merrick, 7 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 9,463.

[94] In re Port Huron Dry Dock Co., 14 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 11,293. Though a proof of debt fails to state one of the essential facts required by good rupt's estate.[95] But it is not the duty of the refereee in bankruptcy to examine claims filed further than to discover whether or not the deposition contains the formal requisites prescribed by the statute, the general order, and the forms.[96] But an allegation on information and belief, on a vital point in a proof of claim in bankruptcy, is not sufficient as proof of such allegation.[97] And the absence of a date to the creditor's proof of claim is a fatal defect.[98]

As to the particular averments of the deposition, it is, in the first place, strictly required and imperatively necessary that it should state whether the claim is secured or unsecured; and if the creditor has a lien on property to secure it, he must disclose its particular character, so that it can be identified, and, if necessary, liquidated by the trustee in bankruptcy.[99] It is also necessary to set forth the fact and the particulars of any partial payments which may have been made upon the claim.[100] And it is indispensable that the consideration for the claim, and the particulars of the consideration, should be duly and adequately stated in the deposition.[101] The statements in regard to the consideration must be sufficiently full and specific to enable other creditors to pursue proper and legitimate inquiries as to the fairness and legality of the claim; if too meagre or general to serve this purpose, they will be held inadequate, and the proof of debt will be expunged, unless leave is given to amend.[102] pleading, yet if it complies apparently with the forms in bankruptcy and the orders and the statute itself, it is the duty of the referee to allow it. In re Ankeny, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 511. The fact that, at the head of a proof of claim, the title of the court is not given as required by the general order and form, is not sufficient to vitiate the proof so far as to prevent the creditor from participating in the creditors' meeting. In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36. A proof of claim need not observe all the formalities required in ordinary pleadings. Kelsey v. Munson, 198 Fed. 841, 117 C. C. A. 483, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

[95] In re Walton, Deady, 510, Fed. Cas. No. 17,129. As to proof of claim against bankrupt partnership and the individual partners, see Adams v. Brown, 226 Fed. 688, 141 C. C. A. 444, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Collins (D. C.) 215 Fed. 247.

[96] In re Ankeny, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 511. The referee has power to require a bill of particulars of an item in the claim, whether liquidated or unliquidated, and the matter is within his judicial discretion. In re Henry Siegel Co., 223 Fed. 368, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128.

[97] In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 201 Fed. 445, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 848.

[98] In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[99] Cunningham v. Cady, 13 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 3,480; In re Bridgman, 1 N. B. R. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 1,866; Emerine v. Tarault, 219 Fed. 68, 134 C. C. A. 606, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

[100] In re Girvin, 160 Fed. 197, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 490.

[101] In re Elder, 1 Sawy. 73, 3 N. B. R. 670, Fed. Cas. No. 4,326. A claim for legal services rendered to the bankrupt is insufficient if it does not show the nature of the services, their value, or the time consumed. In re Hudson Porcelain Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 325, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18. Where a creditor holds more than one note against the bankrupt they should be proved as a single claim. Frederick v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 231 Fed. 667, 145 C. C. A. 553, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[102] In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 201 Fed. 445, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 848; In re Goble Boat Co., 190 Fed. 92, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48; In re Griffin,

A proof of debt on a promissory note is not sufficient although it sets out the note in full, unless it also states what was the consideration and whether any payments have been made thereon.[103] But this rule does not apply to a debt which has been reduced to judgment; that is to say, it is not necessary in proving on the judgment to recite or describe the consideration of the original debt, as that is now merged in the judgment.[104] In the case of an open account, the rules provide that the deposition "shall state when the debt became or will become due; and if it consists of items maturing at different dates, the average due date shall be stated, in default of which it shall not be necessary to compute interest on it. All such depositions shall contain an averment that no note has been received for such account, nor any judgment rendered thereon." [105]

"Whenever a claim is founded upon an instrument of writing, such instrument, unless lost or destroyed, shall be filed with the proof of claim. If such instrument is lost or destroyed, a statement of such fact and of the circumstances of such loss or destruction shall be filed under oath with the claim." [106] A judgment is not an "instrument of writing" within the meaning of this provision.[107] Consequently if the creditor's claim is founded on a judgment, it will not be necessary for him to file with the proof of the claim a transcript of the judgment, but the deposition should contain a brief recital of the judgment, such as will enable other parties interested to identify it and to consult the record of it in the court where rendered. When, therefore, the creditor held a promissory note made by the bankrupt and has already recovered a judgment upon it, if he proves his claim on the note, it must be filed with the deposition, but if he proves a claim on the judgment, instead of the note, the note need not be produced, because it is merged in the judgment as a debt of a higher order, and the judgment need not be set out in full in the deposition, nor accompany it, because it is not an "instrument of 188 Fed. 389; In re Watertown Paper Co., 169 Fed. 252, 94 C. C. A. 528, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., 166 Fed. 516, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Morris, 154 Fed. 211, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828; In re Blue Ridge Packing Co., 125 Fed. 619, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re Stevens, 107 Fed. 243, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806; In re Scott, 93 Fed. 418, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

[103] In re Loder, 4 Ben. 125, 3 N. B. R. 655, Fed. Cas. No. 8,456.

[104] In re Mott, Fed. Cas. No. 9,878b.

[105] General Order No. 21, clause 1.

[106] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57a. But see Kelsey v. Munson (C. C. A.) 198 Fed. 841, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520, holding that all the formalities required in ordinary pleadings do not apply to proofs in bankruptcy, and that a failure to file a written instrument upon which a claim is founded does not raise a presumption against the existence of the writing. Where claimant had made various loans to the bankrupt, giving him a check for the amount in each instance, the items cannot be deemed founded on an instrument in writing, in such sense as to necessitate setting forth the various checks in the proof of claim. In re Keller (D. C.) 252 Fed. 942, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[107] This is shown not only by the con-writing."[108] If a promissory note of the bankrupt was made payable in coin, the holder, in proving his debt in the bankruptcy, should set forth that fact in his deposition, and the demand should be entered upon the books of the trustee as payable in the stipulated currency.[109] In proving a claim founded upon a note in which only the initials of the Christian names are given, the full names must appear.[110] Finally, it should be observed that the creditor, in making out his proof of claim, will do well to add his proper address, in order that notices thereafter mailed may duly reach him, for these notices are to be sent to the creditors by mail "to their respective addresses as they appear in the list of creditors of the bankrupt, or as afterwards filed with the papers in the case by the creditors."[111]

§ 532. Acknowledgment of Deposition.—Depositions in support of claims filed in bankruptcy must be verified. The following provision of the statute is applicable to this matter: "Oaths required by this act, except upon hearings in court, may be administered by (1) referees, (2) officers authorized to administer oaths in proceedings before the courts of the United States, or under the laws of the state where the same are to be taken, and (3) diplomatic or consular officers of the United States in any foreign country."[112] A notary public is authorized to administer the oath to a proof of claim, and such oath is sufficiently authenticated, prima facie, by what purport to be the notary's official signature and seal, although made in a different state from that in which the proceedings are pending, and without regard to the special requirements of the statutes of either state.[113] And it has been held that it is not a valid objection to the proof of a claim that the officer taking the acknowledgment was the creditor's own attorney.[114]

§ 533. Receiving and Filing Proofs.—The mere execution and acknowledgment of a proof of claim is not sufficient to establish the status text, but further by the distinction which the act makes in the section relating to provable debts (§ 63) where it speaks of a "fixed liability evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing." Under a statute providing that, where a pleading is founded on any "written instrument," the original thereof or a copy must be filed with the pleading, it is held that a judgment is not a written instrument. Lytle v. Lytle, 37 Ind. 281.

[108] In re Knoepfel, 1 Ben. 398, 1 N. B. R. 70, Fed. Cas. No. 7,892. See In re Jaycox, 7 N. B. R. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 7,240; In re Haskell (D. C.) 228 Fed. 819, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 428.

[109] In re Elder, 1 Sawy. 73, 3 N. B. R. 670, Fed. Cas. No. 4,326.

[110] In re Valentine, 4 Biss. 317, 12 N. B. R. 389, Fed. Cas. No. 16,812.

[111] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a.

[112] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 20. In regard to acknowledging the deposition in a foreign country, see also In re Lynch, 16 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 8,635.

[113] In re Pancoast, 129 Fed. 643, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275. See In re Nebe, 11 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 10073; In re McKibben, 12 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 8,859.

[114] In re Kimball, 100 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144. Compare In re Nebe, 11 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 10,073; In re Keyser, 9 Ben. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 7,748.

of the creditor. It is further necessary that the claim, thus proved, should be filed or presented in the bankruptcy proceeding.[115] This is ordinarily done by the creditor in person, or by his attorney or some one else authorized to act for him. The bankrupt's attorney should not be employed for this purpose. He cannot properly represent any creditor. But the mere fact that he filed a claim for a creditor will not be sufficient to justify its rejection if the claim was duly proved and it appears that he acted in entire good faith.[116] The practice in regard to the filing and custody of proofs of claims is to be learned from several provisions of the statute and the general orders. First, "claims, after being proved, may, for the purpose of allowance, be filed by the claimants in the court where the proceedings are pending, or before the referee if the case has been referred."[117] Again, "proofs of claims and other papers filed subsequently to the reference, except such as call for action by the judge, may be filed either with referee or with the clerk."[118] The claimant may hand his proof to the trustee, if one has been appointed, but "proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the case is referred."[119] And the handing of a verified claim to an employé of the trustee in the latter's office does not constitute a filing of the claim, where it was not in fact filed and it does not appear in what capacity the person with whom it was left was employed by the trustee.[120] And a trustee in bankruptcy cannot file with himself his proof of his own claim against the bankrupt estate, nor will the delivery of such claim to his attorney, to be filed with the referee be deemed the equivalent of a delivery to such referee.[121] Finally, it is provided that "the referee shall forthwith transmit to the clerk a list of the claims proved against an estate, with the names and addresses of the proving creditors."[122] From these various provisions it appears that the referee in bankruptcy is the proper person to receive the proofs of debts; that, if they are filed in the clerk's office, they must be transmitted to the referee; that the referee is to retain the custody of the depositions until the termination of the case; and that it devolves upon the trustee to call on the referee and procure a list of the proved claims.

[115] In re French, 181 Fed. 583, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 77.

[116] In re Kimball, 100 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 144.

[117] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57c.

[118] General Order No. 20.

[119] General Order No. 21. As to the authority of the Supreme Court to make this order, see J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green, 204 U. S. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. 195, 51 L. Ed. 390, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

[120] In re Lathrop, Haskins & Co., 197 Fed. 164, 116 C. C. A. 601, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756.

[121] J. B. Orcutt Co. v. Green, 204 U. S. 96, 27 Sup. Ct. 195, 51 L. Ed. 390, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

[122] General Order No. 24.

The referee will not generally refuse to receive a proof of debt which appears on its face to have been taken before a proper officer and to be correct in form and substance.[123] But the statute is not satisfied by the creditor's merely swearing to the validity of his claim. A creditor who, after making a deposition to prove his debt, retains possession of the deposition, and does not allow it to go upon the files, cannot be considered as a creditor who has proved his debt.[124] On the other hand, a creditor cannot be prejudiced by the loss from the files of his proof of debt; he will still be entitled to receive the notices provided for by the act.[125]

§ 534. Allowance or Disallowance of Proved Claims.—The bankruptcy law provides that "claims which have been duly proved shall be allowed, upon receipt by or upon presentation to the court, unless objection to their allowance shall be made by parties in interest, or their consideration be continued for cause by the court upon its own motion."[126] Undoubtedly the word "court," as here used, includes the referee, especially as another part of the act provides that, at the first meeting of creditors, "the judge or referee shall preside and may allow or disallow the claims of creditors there presented."[127] The first meeting of creditors here spoken of means the first meeting after the adjudication, and claims cannot be allowed without a meeting of the creditors.[128] It should be observed that the "proof" and the "allowance" of claims are separate and distinct steps, so that, for instance, if a claim is duly proved and filed within the year granted for that purpose, it is enough to take it out of the statutory limitation, and its allowance or disallowance may come later.[129] And further, the filing of a proved claim does not necessarily constitute an allowance thereof, since, until a direct or indirect order of allowance is made, objections may properly be filed.[130] But a proof of debt, made in the mode re-

[123] In re Merrick, 7 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 9,463; In re Ankeny, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 511. See In re Loder, 4 Ben. 125, 3 N. B. R. 655, Fed. Cas. No. 8,456. The referee has no right to refuse to file a claim presented, on the ground of its informality. In re Drexel Hill Motor Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 673, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411.

[124] In re Sheppard, 1 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 12,753.

[125] In re Friedlob, 19 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 5,118.

[126] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57d. See In re James Dunlap Carpet Co., 171 Fed. 532, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; Keith v. Kilmer (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 643, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[127] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55b. See Clendening v. Red River Valley Nat. Bank, 12 N. D. 51, 94 N. W. 901.

[128] In re Back Bay Automobile Co., 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[129] In re J. M. Mertens & Co., 147 Fed. 177, 77 C. C. A. 473, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 825.

[130] In re Two Rivers Woodenware Co., 199 Fed. 877, 118 C. C. A. 325, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518.

quired by the statute, and conforming on its face to all the requirements of the act and the general orders, makes a prima facie case, though it is subject to objection and counter proof, and will entitle the creditor to have his debt allowed as an established claim against the estate, unless objections are interposed.[131] In the latter case, the jurisdiction of the court to hear and determine the claim and objections is undoubted, as the voluntary appearance of the creditor for the purpose of filing his claim places it within the control of the court.[132] But if the claim is rejected, on the ground that the creditor holds security for it, the court has then no jurisdiction to value the security and enter a decree against the creditor for the excess of its value over the debt.[133] It should further be noticed that there is nothing in the act which makes a proof of claim an entirety, which the court must either accept in full or reject altogether. If part of the claim is found to be valid, and part must be rejected for want of proper proof or other reasons, the referee may allow the claim the extent that it is valid, and it is not necessary to order it to be amended and resworn.[134]

In allowing or disallowing claims against an estate in bankruptcy, the court is bound by the established rules of law and equity, and cannot arbitrarily exercise its power to allow or reject a claim.[135] But an order either allowing or rejecting a claim is an adjudication of all the issues properly before the court for its determination and binding upon all who have been made parties to the proceeding in bankruptcy, and therefore it cannot be impeached or questioned collaterally.[136] It should, however, be adequately recorded. It has been ruled that a mere minute showing the disallowance of a claim by a referee in bankruptcy

[131] In re J. M. Mertens & Co., 147 Fed. 177, 77 C. C. A. 473, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 825; In re Saunders, 2 Low. 444, 13 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 12,371; In re Colman, 2 N. B. R. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 3,021; In re Ankeny, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 511; International Agr. Corp. v. Carry, 240 Fed. 101, 153 C. C. A. 137, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753.

[132] In re Jackson Brick & Tile Co., 189 Fed. 636, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 915; In re L'Hommedieu, 146 Fed. 708, 77 C. C. A. 134, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 850.

[133] Fitch v. Richardson, 147 Fed. 197, 77 C. C. A. 423, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[134] In re Goldstein, 199 Fed. 665, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 301; Streeter v. Lowe, 184 Fed. 263, 106 C. C. A. 405, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774; In re T. L. Kelly Dry Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. In re Louis J. Bergdoll Motor Co. (D. C.) 229 Fed. 262; Reynolds v. Hourigan, 254 Fed. 690, 166 C. C. A. 188, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75. See In re Perlmutter (D. C.) 256 Fed. 860, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 725.

[135] In re Springfield Realty Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 785, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 105.

[136] Carr v. Barnes, 138 Mo. App. 264, 120 S. W. 705; Spencer Commercial Club v. Bartmess, 70 Ind. App. 294, 123 N. E. 435. See Skilton v. Codington, 105 App. Div. 617, 93 N. Y. Supp. 460. The disallowance of a claim in bankruptcy for usury is available to a prior purchaser as res judicata of the claim of the holder of a mortgage antedating such purchase and given to secure the usurious debt. De Watteville v. Sims, 44 Okl. 708, 146 Pac. 224.

is not a record of a judgment and is not admissible in evidence to show the final disposition of the claim.[137] And an order of allowance, in so far as concerns its binding effect on the trustee and the other creditors, does not amount to an adjudication that the particular creditor has not previously received an illegal or voidable preference, that question not being necessarily involved in it.[138]

§ 535. Postponement of Proofs.—The bankruptcy act of 1867 contained a provision to the effect that "when a claim is presented for proof before the election of an assignee, and the judge or register entertains doubts of its validity or of the right of the creditor to prove it, and is of opinion that such validity or right ought to be investigated by the assignee, he may postpone the proof of the claim until the assignee is chosen."[139] Although the present act is not so explicit on this point, still it does provide that claims duly proved shall be allowed upon presentation, unless "their consideration be continued for cause by the court upon its own motion."[140] The interpretation put upon the act of 1867 was that it rested in the discretion and judgment of the court or register to postpone the proof of a claim whenever he deemed it questionable or of doubtful validity, either in respect to its consideration or the right of the particular creditor to prove it, or on the ground of its being voidable under the act as a preference or otherwise; and this was to be done with a view to the investigation by the trustee, when appointed, of the claim in question, and the effect of postponing proofs was to prevent such claims from being voted upon in the election of a trustee.[141] The corresponding provision of the present act, it is said, intends that, if objection to a claim is interposed, or if the court is not satisfied with the prima facie case made out by the claimant's sworn statement, the claim shall not be accepted as proved until the objection has been disposed of, or until the court is convinced, by testimony or otherwise, of the validity of the claim.[142]

When a review by the judge of the action of the referee in such [137] Hall v. Robertson, 213 Ill. App. 147. But compare De Watteville v. Sims, 44 Okl. 708, 146 Pac. 224.

[138] Stearns Salt & Lumber Co. v. Hammond, 217 Fed. 559, 133 C. C. A. 411, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; Buder v. Columbia Distilling Co., 96 Mo. App. 558, 70 S. W. 508; Utah Ass'n of Credit Men v. Boyle Furniture Co., 39 Utah, 518, 117 Pac. 800. Compare Clendening v. Red River Valley Nat. Bank, 12 N. D. 51, 94 N. W. 901.

[139] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5083, being § 23 of the act of 1867.

[140] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57d.

[141] In re Stevens, 4 Ben. 513, 4 N. B. R. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 13,391; In re Jacoby, Fed. Cas. No. 7,166; In re Bartusch, 9 N. B. R. 478, Fed. Cas. No. 1,086; In re Jones, 2 N. B. R. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 7,447; In re Frank, 5 Ben. 164, 5 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 5,050.

[142] In re Sumner, 101 Fed. 224, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Dreeben, 101 Fed. 110, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 146.

cases is sought, the better practice on behalf of the creditors who object to such postponement of their claims is to have the objection noted, obtain a stay of proceedings, and have the case certified, before any further action is taken before the referee, for if no objection is made at the time, and the trustee is appointed and enters upon his duties, the court will not interfere.[143] When the claim of a creditor, at the first meeting, is postponed by the referee, and again presented after the election of a trustee, the proof of claim must be treated in all respects as if it had not been before tendered; that is, such action does not cast upon the creditor the necessity of producing evidence in support of its validity, or of taking any other affirmative action not required in ordinary cases for the proof of a debt.[144]

§ 536. Objections to Claims; Who May Object.—The bankruptcy act provides that objections to the allowance of a claim offered for proof by a creditor of the bankrupt may be made by "parties in interest."[145] This vague phrase, so frequently used in the act, may probably, in this connection, include the bankrupt himself. If he should prove to be solvent (which may happen, and occasionally does happen, in a case of voluntary bankruptcy), any surplus of the estate remaining after paying creditors and the cost of the proceeding will belong to the bankrupt. Further, it is to his "interest" in the popular if not the legal sense that his creditors should receive as large a dividend as may be. Moreover, the act makes it the duty of the bankrupt to "examine the correctness of all proofs of claims filed against his estate," and "in case of any person having to his knowledge proved a false claim against his estate, disclose that fact immediately to his trustee."[146] This seems to contemplate that the objections should be made by the trustee on information to be furnished by the bankrupt. But if false claims are offered for allowance at or before the first meeting of creditors, and therefore before a trustee has been appointed, it is more consonant to the general purpose and policy of the act that the bankrupt should object to their allowance than that he should allow them to be proved and afterwards advise the trustee of their fraudulent character, as, in that 143 In re Jackson, 7 Biss. 280, 14 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 7,123.

144 In re Herrmann, 4 Ben. 126, 3 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 6,425.

145 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57d.

146 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, clauses 3 and 7. Where the bankrupt is a corporation, and its stockholders are the only persons who would be injuriously affected by the allowance of a contested claim, since its allowance would necessitate an assessment upon them, they are "parties in interest" and entitled to object to the claim. Rosenbaum v. Dutton, 203 Fed. 838, 122 C. C. A. 156, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

case, the only remedy of the trustee would be to move for their reconsideration and expunction.[147]

As to other "parties in interest," it is clear that the trustee himself, as the representative of all the creditors, is authorized to contest the allowance of any claim filed against the estate.[148] And if he neglects or refuses to take this action, in regard to any claim alleged to be fraudulent, false, or exaggerated, creditors who have proved their debts may personally intervene and oppose its allowance.[149] And the general trend of the decisions is to the effect that any creditor may proceed on his own initiative to object to the allowance of a claim offered by another, and is not required to present his objections through the trustee, or to show that the latter has been asked to act and has refused,[150] provided, however, that the contesting creditor shall first have proved his own claim and secured its allowance.[151] But an objecting creditor cannot further contest the claim of another creditor after a decision on its validity by the court. Proceedings to review such decision must be taken by the trustee by appeal.[152] And the creditor at whose instance the trustee contests the claim of another creditor is liable to the latter for costs where the claim is allowed.[153] It should be added that the right to contest claims does not belong to those who are merely debtors or alleged debtors of the bankrupt.[154]

§ 537. Same; Manner and Form of Objections.—Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, it was held that objections to the proof of a claim

147 See In re Ankeny, 100 Fed. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72; In re Torchia, 185 Fed. 576, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188. But compare Trabue v. Ash (Tex. Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 415.

148 Atkins v. Wilcox, 105 Fed. 595, 44 C. C. A. 626, 53 L. R. A. 118, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; In re Two Rivers Woodenware Co., 199 Fed. 877, 118 C. C. A. 325, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439. But where the validity of a claim is conceded, and the only dispute is between two persons about the ownership of it, the controversy concerns them alone, and the trustee, as the representative of the other creditors, has no interest. In re Dunlap Carpet Co., 206 Fed. 726, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664.

149 First Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 20 Wall. 171, 22 L. Ed. 273; In re Knox Automobile Co. (D. C.) 229 Fed. 241.

150 In re Canton Iron & Steel Co., 197 Fed. 767, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 791; In re Hatem, 161 Fed. 895, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; In re Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 153 Fed. 787; In re Joseph, 2 Woods, 390, Fed. Cas. No. 7,532; In re Overton, 5 N. B. R. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 10,625. Compare In re Randall, 1 Sawy. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 11,552.

151 Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; First Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 20 Wall. 171, 22 L. Ed. 273. Claimants whose claims have been disallowed cannot object to the payment of dividends to creditors whose claims are uncontested. In re Stringer (D. C.) 244 Fed. 629, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

152 In re Troy Woolen Co., 9 Blatchf. 191, Fed. Cas. No. 14,202. A creditor cannot object to the allowance of claims of other creditors where he did not move to expunge them and took no exception to the decision of the referee allowing them. In re Collins (D. C.) 235 Fed. 937, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

153 In re Troy Woolen Co., 8 N. B. R. 412, Fed. Cas. No. 14,203.

154 In re Sully, 152 Fed. 619, 81 C. C. A. 609, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

must be made by written allegations, which should specify with reasonable certainty the particular grounds of objection.[155] Though the present statute contains no positive requirement to this effect (the act merely providing that claims duly proved shall be allowed "unless objection to their allowance shall be made by parties in interest") it is unquestionably good practice to file the objections in this form, and the later decisions so recommend, with the further statement that the allegations should be sufficiently explicit to indicate to the claimant the nature and character of the objections.[156] But no particular form for the objections has been prescribed, the matter resting very largely in the discretion of the referee, and it is not necessary, nor even proper, that they should take the shape of a formal pleading.[157] Nor is the statement of objections required to be under oath.[158] And it is within the discretion of the referee to permit a merely oral statement on the part of the objecting creditor, provided it is definite and to the point.[159] But it is held that creditors who desire to contest the allowance of a claim must make their objections on their own behalf, and they cannot become parties to the issue merely by formally adopting objections filed by the bankrupt, nor have they any standing to contest such claim on an appeal taken from the decision of the court by the trustee, in which they did not join.[160]

§ 538. Same; Grounds of Objection.—As to the grounds on which objection may be made to a claim offered for proof, it is clear that it may be contested for fraud, illegality,[161] or want of consideration;[162] also for being fictitious or exaggerated; or because it is not of a nature to be provable under the bankruptcy law; or because it has been paid or discharged, wholly or in part, or is barred by the statute of limitations;[163] or because the proving creditor has received a preference which he has not surrendered,[164] or a security which he has not mentioned; or because of defects in the form or manner of the proof.[165]

155 In re Walton, Deady, 442, Fed. Cas. No. 17,128.

156 Spencer v. Lowe, 198 Fed. 961, 117 C. C. A. 497, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 876; In re Royce Dry Goods Co., 133 Fed. 100, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

157 Orr v. Park, 183 Fed. 683, 106 C. C. A. 33, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544; In re Carter, 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

158 In re Wooten, 118 Fed. 670, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

159 In re Cannon, 133 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; Embry v. Bennett, 162 Fed. 139, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

160 Ayres v. Cone, 138 Fed. 778, 71 C. C. A. 144, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

161 In re Fenn, 172 Fed. 620, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 833.

162 In re Romadka Bros. Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 944.

163 In re John J. Lafferty & Bro., 122 Fed. 558, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 290; Pace's Trustee v. Pace, 162 Ky. 457, 172 S. W. 925. Compare In re Gibson, 4 Ind. T. 498, 69 S. W. 974, 4 Ann. Cas. 938.

164 Stern v. Louisville Trust Co., 112 Fed. 501, 50 C. C. A. 367, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

165 Where a claim was allowed

But a mere informality in the proof will not cause the rejection of the claim when the creditor, under examination, has testified positively to facts which establish its validity.[166] And the fact that one presenting a claim against the bankrupt is closely related to him, while it will justify a rigid scrutiny of the claim, will not alone warrant its rejection.[167]

When a judgment debt is offered for proof, the petition of the bankrupt having been filed after the rendition of the judgment, it may be objected to by the trustee or by other creditors on the ground of fraud or irregularity, including fraudulent preference; for they, not being parties or privies to the judgment, are not precluded from attacking it collaterally.[168] For similar reasons, the trustee is not bound by a mere settlement or accounting, not followed by payment or transfer of property, between the bankrupt and a creditor, but he may show that it was erroneous or fraudulent.[169] And so also the trustee may set up usury as a defense to the claim of a creditor.[170] But as against a negotiable note made by the bankrupt, the trustee can avail himself only of such defenses as were available to the maker, not including collateral issues between the indorsers subsequent to delivery.[171]

§ 539. Same; Contest and Determination.—The law intends that contests of this character shall be promptly disposed of. It declares that "objections to claims shall be heard and determined as soon as the convenience of the court and the best interests of the estates and the claimants will permit."[172] Hence if objection is made to the allowance of a claim presented at a meeting of the creditors, the question of against a bankrupt firm and the bankrupt estate of an individual partner, the trustee was estopped after four years to object that the claim was insufficient in form to justify its allowance against the partner's estate. In re Collins (D. C.) 215 Fed. 247.

[166] McKinsey v. Harding, 4 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 8,866.

[167] Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, 163 Fed. 155, 89 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

[168] Chandler v. Thompson, 120 Fed. 940, 57 C. C. A. 230; Ex parte O'Neil, 1 Low. 163, 1 N. B. R. 677, Fed. Cas. No. 10,527; Bourne v. Maybin, 3 Woods, 724, Fed. Cas. No. 1,700; In re Continental Engine Co., 234 Fed. 58, 148 C. C. A. 74, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; In re Stucky Trucking & Rigging Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 287, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690. Compare Stilwell v. Walker, 17 N. B. R. 569, Fed. Cas. No. 13,451.

[169] In re Comstock, 3 Sawy. 620, 12 N. B. R. 110, Fed. Cas. No. 3,079. Where a claim against a bankrupt corporation was based on the theory that it had assumed payment of a mortgage, but it appeared that there had been no such assumption, the claimant cannot sustain his claim on a different theory. In re Amsdell-Kirchner Brewing Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 492.

[170] In re Stern, 144 Fed. 956, 76 C. C. A. 10, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510 (reversing In re Worth, 130 Fed. 927, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566); In re Moore, Fed. Cas. No. 9,752; Bromley v. Smith, 2 Biss. 511, 5 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 1,922; Loganville Banking Co. v. Forrester, 17 Ga. App. 246, 87 S. E. 694.

[171] In re Schwarz, 200 Fed. 309, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700.

[172] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57f.

its allowance should be heard as soon as feasible, and if the court is not satisfied with the weight of the evidence, the hearing may be adjourned to a future time.[173] A creditor presenting his claim for proof and allowance against the estate of the bankrupt, which is contested by the trustee, is not entitled to demand a trial by jury.[174] Proceedings in bankruptcy being of equitable cognizance, the seventh amendment to the Constitution of the United States does not apply thereto, and no act of Congress at present in force authorizes trial by jury in such cases.[175] Such contests are intended to be heard and determined by the referee, and he has full jurisdiction over them.[176] And it is not necessary that he should adhere to any prescribed order of proof.[177]

Where the trustee objects to the allowance of a claim on the ground that the claimant has received an unlawful preference, and the referee, on hearing, decides that such is the case, his judgment disallowing the claim is res judicata on the question of the preference, and the creditor cannot litigate the question again in a plenary action by the trustee to recover the preference.[178]

§ 540. Same; Burden of Proof and Evidence.—The burden of proof is on one claiming to be a creditor of a bankrupt and presenting a demand against his estate.[179] But he sustains the burden in the first instance, and makes out a prima facie case, when he files a proof of his claim, sufficient in form and substance, and duly verified by his affidavit, as required by the statute, as such proof is regarded rather as a deposition than as a pleading.[180] Thereupon the burden is shifted to the objecting creditor or creditors, or the trustee as the representative of all the creditors, and they are required to rebut the claimant's prima facie case by evidence having a probative value at least equal to his [173] In re Eagles (D. C.) 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

[174] But the claimant is entitled to notice of the objections and an opportunity to be heard. But where he appears before the referee and files a response to the referee's objection to his claim, this amounts to a waiver of notice of the objection which should have been given him, and cures all defects therein. Davenport Sav. Bank v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 176 Iowa, 745, 158 N. W. 737.

[175] In re Christensen (D. C.) 101 Fed. 243, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99.

[176] In re Schwarz (D. C.) 200 Fed. 309, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; McCulloch v. Davenport Sav. Bank (D. C.) 226 Fed. 309, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765.

[177] In re Montgomery (D. C.) 185 Fed. 955, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431.

[178] Lincoln v. People's Nat. Bank (D. C.) 260 Fed. 422, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; Ullman, Stern & Krausse v. Coppard, 246 Fed. 124, 158 C. C. A. 350, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; Davenport Sav. Bank v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 176 Iowa, 745, 158 N. W. 737.

[179] In re Graves (D. C.) 182 Fed. 443, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; In re Hopper-Morgan Co. (D. C.) 156 Fed. 533, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[180] Whitney v. Dresser, 200 U. S. 532, 26 Sup. Ct. 316, 50 L. Ed. 584, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326; In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 201 Fed. 445, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 848; In re Schwarz, 200 Fed. 309, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Montgomery, 185 Fed. 955, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431; In re Baumhauer, 179 Fed. 966, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 750; In re James Dunlap Carpet Co., 171 Fed. 532, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 788; In re Jones, affidavit.[181] Likewise, where the claim is for damages for breach of a contract, and the claimant has sufficiently established the elements of his case, the burden is on objecting creditors to show any circumstances in reduction or mitigation of damages.[182] But in order to support the claimant's demand and warrant its allowance the proof of claim must conform to the requirements of the law and be fair on its face. It is not self-proving if insufficient in form, or if its recitals are contradictory and irreconcilable, or if the facts alleged are improbable and suspicious.[183] And it is a rule that if the claimant does not choose to rely on the presumption of correctness of his claim raised by the formal proof of it, but elects to offer additional evidence, and such evidence is insufficient to establish his case or contradicts the allegations of his petition, he must abide by the result, and be taken to have waived the advantage of the position which he originally occupied.[184]

When objection is made to a proof of claim, the proving creditor may be summoned as a witness and be questioned (in the nature of cross-examination) by the trustee or the objecting creditors, concerning his claim and its particulars; and if he fails to appear and submit to such examination, he will be taken to have admitted the objections to his claim, and the same will be rejected.[185] But testimony of the bank-

151 Fed. 108, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; In re Castle Braid Co., 145 Fed. 224, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 143; In re Carter, 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Dresser, 135 Fed. 495, 68 C. C. A. 207, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747; In re Wooten, 118 Fed. 670, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; In re Shaw, 109 Fed. 780, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499; In re Sumner, 101 Fed. 224, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; Flower v. Commercial Trust Co., 223 Fed. 318, 138 C. C. A. 580, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; Moore v. Crandall, 205 Fed. 689, 124 C. C. A. 11, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517; In re Arthur E. Pratt Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 917, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406; In re Welborne (D. C.) 266 Fed. 385; Board of Commerce of Ann Arbor v. Security Trust Co., 225 Fed. 454, 140 C. C. A. 486, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762.

[181] In re Harper, 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918; In re Carter, 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Sanger, 169 Fed. 722, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Pfaffinger, 154 Fed. 523, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807; In re Coventry Evans Furniture Co., 166 Fed. 516, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; West v. W. A. McLaughlin & Co.'s Trustee, 162 Fed. 124, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654; In re Canton Iron & Steel Co., 197 Fed. 767, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 791. Compare Mason v. St. Albans Furniture Co., 149 Fed. 898, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 868; In re Hull (D. C.) 224 Fed. 796, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447; In re O'Gara & Maguire (D. C.) 259 Fed. 935, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49; Britton v. Union Inv. Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 111, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[182] In re Duquesne Incandescent Light Co., 176 Fed. 785, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

[183] In re Goble Boat Co., 190 Fed. 92, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48; Orr v. Park, 183 Fed. 683, 106 C. C. A. 33, 25 Am. Baukr. Rep. 544; In re Shaw, 112 Fed. 947, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458; In re Hudson Porcelain Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 325, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18. Failure to file a written instrument which is the basis of a claim against the bankrupt's estate, as required by the statute, does not raise a presumption against the existence of the writing. In re Dresser, 135 Fed. 495, 68 C. C. A. 207, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

[184] In re Greenfield, 193 Fed. 98, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; In re T. A. McIntyre & Co., 174 Fed. 627, 98 C. C. A. 381, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[185] Baumhauer v. Austin, 186 Fed. 260, 108 C. C. A. 306, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep.

rupt or other witnesses taken before the referee in other issues in the bankruptcy proceedings, to which the claimant was not a party and when he was not present, cannot be used against him.[186] If it becomes necessary to take the evidence of witnesses at a distance, the act provides that, when depositions are to be taken in opposition to the allowance of a claim, notice shall be served upon the claimant and filed with the referee.[187] Upon questions of evidence arising upon the proof of debts, the laws of the United States must govern, and not those of the state in which the court may be sitting. This rule was applied in a case where the bankrupt was dead, and it was held that the proving creditor was a competent witness in his own favor to prove the contract out of which his claim arose; for under Rev. Stat. U. S. § 858, a witness cannot be excluded on account of interest except in actions by or against executors, administrators, or guardians, and a proceeding in bankruptcy is in rem and not against the executor of a deceased bankrupt.[188] Under the same rule and the same provision of the Revised Statutes, it is held that, where a contest is made as to a claim offered to be proved against the estate of a bankrupt by his wife, she is a competent witness in her own behalf.[189] But a judgment recovered by the creditor in a state court is not conclusive evidence either of the existence or the amount of his claim, when he seeks to prove it in the bankruptcy proceedings, at least where the trustee was not a party to the suit.[190] And the general rule of law that a party can only recover on the cause of action alleged in his pleading applies to claims presented in bankruptcy, and a claimant who has filed a statement of his demand under oath, as required by the statute, cannot sustain it by evidence of an indebtedness arising in a different manner from that stated.[191] As in other cases, the evidence may be circumstantial on questions of motive, intent, good faith, and the like,[192] and the claimant, if put to his defense, must show all the elements of a valid and enforceable demand, just as on the trial of an issue in a plenary suit,[193] and if he and the bankrupt 385; In re Sumner, 101 Fed. 224, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Lount, 11 N. B. R. 315, Fed. Cas. No. 8,543.

[186] In re Keller, 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; In re Hersey, 171 Fed. 1004, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863; In re National Boat & Engine Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 208, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

[187] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21c.

[188] In re Merrill, 9 Ben. 165, 16 N. B. R. 35, Fed. Cas. No. 9,466. Conversely, the bankrupt is a competent witness where a claim against his estate is contested, though the creditor is dead and the claim is presented by his executor, In re Moore, Fed. Cas. No. 9,752.

[189] In re Richards, 17 N. B. R. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 11,770; In re Bean, 14 N. B. R. 182, Fed. Cas. No. 1,166. Compare In re Bechtel, Fed. Cas. No. 1,204.

[190] In re Freeman, 117 Fed. 680, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 68; Bourne v. Maybin, 3 Woods, 724, Fed. Cas. No. 1,700.

[191] In re Lansaw, 118 Fed. 365, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167; Orr v. Park, 183 Fed. 683, 106 C. C. A. 33, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544.

[192] In re Friedman, 164 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213; In re Herman, 207 Fed. 594.

[193] Farnsworth v. Union Trust & Deposit Co., 211 Fed. 912, 128 C. C. A.

are the only witnesses and they squarely contradict each other, circumstances tending to corroborate the one or the other will turn the scale.[194] Where the claimant is the wife, child, or other near relative of the bankrupt, the experience of the courts has taught them that the claim must be closely and carefully scrutinized, though it is also to be remembered that the honest or dishonest character of such a claim is not to be determined by the mere fact of relationship.[195]

The referee should of his own motion consider the credibility of the witnesses and of their testimony, and he is not obliged to allow the claim even if the evidence in its support is uncontradicted.[196] The court retains considerable control over the proceedings in these cases, and if the evidence offered by a claimant is not sufficient to establish his claim, it is in the discretion of the court to direct or allow the taking of additional proof, even after the referee or master has made his report.[197]

§ 541. Amendment and Withdrawal of Proofs.—Proofs of debt may always be amended, if application is made in proper time, in respect to the correction of clerical errors, the supplying of omissions, or to remedy technical defects in the proofs in matters of form, and when the proof is amended so as to comply with the law, it will relate back to the original filing, unless the rights of others have in the mean time intervened.[198] On this point, it has been said: "The court undoubtedly possesses the power, in its discretion, to allow proofs of debt to be 290; Central State Bank v. McFarlan, 257 Fed. 535, 168 C. C. A. 519, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Maiman (D. C.) 256 Fed. 127, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507; In re Rosenthal & Lehman (D. C.) 120 Fed. 848, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Banks (D. C.) 207 Fed. 662, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270. Where a claimant relies on certificates of indebtedness issued by a building and loan association, and it appears that they were fraudulently issued and that the association received no consideration, the purchaser must show that he was a purchaser in good faith and for value. In re German Savings & Loan Ass'n, 253 Fed. 722, 165 C. C. A. 316, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. An attorney who makes a claim against the estate of a bankrupt corporation for legal services must clearly establish the value of his services. In re United States Molybdenum Co. (D. C.) 255 Fed. 790, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

[194] In re Kaldenberg (D. C.) 105 Fed. 232, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6.

[195] Walter v. Atha (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 75, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; In re Crumling (D. C.) 214 Fed. 503, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656; In re Kanter (D. C.) 215 Fed. 276.

[196] In re Cannon (D. C.) 133 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114.

[197] In re J. C. Wilson & Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 631, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

[198] In re New York Commercial Co., 233 Fed. 906, 147 C. C. A. 580, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769; In re Ballantine (D. C.) 232 Fed. 271, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; In re Soltmann (D. C.) 238 Fed. 241, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; In re A. J. Ellis, Inc., 252 Fed. 483, 164 C. C. A. 399, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387. In re Myers, 99 Fed. 691, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Salvator Brewing Co., 193 Fed. 989, 113 C. C. A. 626, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Medina Quarry Co., 179 Fed. 929, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769; In re Stevens, 107 Fed. 243, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806; In re Maybin, 15 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 9,337; In re Myrick, 3 N. B. R. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 10,000; In re Montgomery, 3 N. B. R. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 9,729; In re Lowerre, 1 Ben. 406, 1 N. B. R. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 8,577. In re Basha (C. C. A.) 200 Fed. 951, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225.

amended, and in cases of mistake or ignorance, whether of fact or of law, will generally exercise that power in the absence of fraud, and when all parties can be placed in the same situation they would have been in if the error had not occurred, and where justice seems to demand that it should be done. But where the proceeding is in any manner tainted by fraud, or where the creditor has gained any permanent advantage by the omission, or the estate has been permanently injured thereby, the creditor guilty of such omission will be left where his own act has placed him."[199] Thus if a creditor, in proving his claim, has illegally increased the amount of it, or if a portion of the consideration is good and a portion illegal, he will not be allowed, on the detection of the fraud, to separate the good from the bad and amend his proof, or have it allowed for the valid portion only, for his fraud taints the whole.[200] So, where a claim of lien under a mortgage has been declared fraudulent, the claimant is not entitled to amend so as to prove his claim as a general claim against the estate.[201] Neither is it permissible, under the guise of an amendment, to introduce a wholly new and different claim against the bankrupt.[202]

An amended proof of claim against a bankrupt's estate, filed more than a year after the adjudication, may be substituted for the original proof when the latter was defective, irregular, or otherwise insufficient, notwithstanding the provision of the act limiting the time for original filing of proofs.[203] But this rule is subject to two conditions. In the first place, it cannot be invoked for the purpose of enabling the creditor to set up an entirely new and separate claim.[204] But this does not apply to a change in the form or statement of the claim, the actual contract or consideration remaining the same.

[199] In re Parkes, 10 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754.

[200] In re Elder, 1 Sawy. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 4,326.

[201] In re Vogt (D. C.) 188 Fed. 764. But see Seligman v. Gray, 227 Fed. 417, 142 C. C. A. 113, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 516, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 894.

[202] In re Miners' Brewing Co. (D. C.) 162 Fed. 327, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; In re Montgomery, 3 N. B. R. 430, Fed. Cas. No. 9,731.

[203] Hutchinson v. Otis, Wilcox & Co., 190 U. S. 552, 23 Sup. Ct. 778, 47 L. Ed. 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; In re Keller (D. C.) 252 Fed. 942, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Schaffner (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 977, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Drexel Hill Motor Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 673, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Roeber, 127 Fed. 122, 62 C. C. A. 122, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464; Hutchinson v. Otis, 115 Fed. 937, 53 C. C. A. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re Salvator Brewing Co., 188 Fed. 522, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; In re Standard Telephone & Electric Co., 186 Fed. 586, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Kessler, 184 Fed. 51, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512; In re Fisk & Robinson, 185 Fed. 974; In re McCarthy Portable Elevator Co., 205 Fed. 986, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247. But compare In re Amsdell-Kirschner Brewing Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 783, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; In re Booth (D. C.) 216 Fed. 575, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183; In re Moebius (D. C.) 116 Fed. 47, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

[204] In re McCallum & McCallum (D. C.) 127 Fed. 768, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447; In re Stevens (D. C.) 107 Fed. 243, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806.

Thus, where a creditor filed a claim in the form of a book account, an amended claim, based on promissory notes of the bankrupt, may be treated as an amendment of the original claim, and the court may permit it to be filed after the expiration of the year, where it is shown that the notes were given in settlement of the account, but were not shown by the creditor's books, and that the original claim was based on the account, rather than the notes, through mere inattention or because the creditor did not realize that it would make any difference as to the form of proof.[205] So, where the creditor originally filed on a note and the claim was disallowed because it carried usurious interest, he was allowed to amend his proof by substituting therefor a claim for money fraudulently obtained by the bankrupt and received to the claimant's use.[206] In the second place, the original proof must contain a sufficient statement of the claim to support an amendment, or there must have been a sufficient "filing" of it to justify such action.[207] But as to this, the courts are quite liberal. Thus, for example, though a claim was not formally filed within the year, but an assignment of it was executed and filed with the referee, it was held that this might be treated as sufficiently presenting the claim to permit an amendment after the year.[208] So a paper filed by a creditor, denominated an "application for the sale of collateral," and containing all the statements essential to a formal proof of claim, may be used as the foundation for an amendment after the expiration of the year.[209] And again, where the trustee circulated a paper among the creditors for their signatures, containing a proposal for a settlement, each creditor to state on it the amount of his claim, and it was signed by all and returned and filed with the referee within a year after the adjudication, it was held to constitute a sufficient claim to be amendable, after the end of the year, by a creditor who signed it in the belief that a proof of his claim was not required, but without whose assent the settlement could not have been effected.[210] Further, a court of bankruptcy may allow an amended proof, filed with the trustee's consent, to be substituted for the defective original proof, although the trustee has an appeal pending from the decree of the court permitting the creditor to prove his claim.[211]

[205] Brown v. O'Connell, 200 Fed. 229, 118 C. C. A. 415, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653.

[206] In re Robinson (D. C.) 136 Fed. 994, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626.

[207] In re Thompson, 227 Fed. 981, 142 C. C. A. 439, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Drexel Hill Motor Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 673, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411.

[208] Bennett v. American Credit Indemnity Co., 159 Fed. 624, 86 C. C. A. 614, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

[209] In re Faulkner, 161 Fed. 900, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542. Compare In re Basha, 193 Fed. 151, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

[210] In re Fairlamb, 199 Fed. 278, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[211] Hutchinson v. Otis, Wilcox & Co., 190 U. S. 552, 23 Sup. Ct. 778, 47 L. Ed. 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

The power of allowing amendments is not infrequently appealed to in behalf of secured creditors; and it is well settled that where a creditor of this class has proved his claim as unsecured, but this has been done through inadvertence or mistake or ignorance of his rights, it is in the discretion of the court to allow him to amend his proof so as to state the facts correctly, even after the lapse of a year from the adjudication, provided this will not operate to the prejudice of any other creditor, or provided all parties can be restored to their original positions.[212] And it is not an insuperable objection to the allowance of such an amendment that the creditor has already received a dividend on his claim as unsecured, for it can be made a condition of the leave granted to him to amend that he shall refund to the trustee the sum so received as a dividend.[213] On similar principles, where a bankrupt had money on deposit in a bank and was indebted to the bank on promissory notes for a larger sum, and the cashier of the bank made proof against the bankrupt's estate for the entire sum of the notes, omitting, through mistake or forgetfulness, to offset the amount of the deposit, it was held that the bank should be permitted to amend its proof so as to retain the amount of the deposit, credit the same on the notes, and prove a claim for the balance.[214]

In regard to allowing a creditor who has proved his claim to withdraw the same entirely, so as to put himself outside the bankruptcy proceedings, the authorities are not so harmonious. Some of the cases hold that the withdrawal of a proof of debt cannot be permitted after the same has been filed in the case and allowed,[215] and especially after leave has been granted to the creditor to amend his proof.[216] But on the other hand, there are decisions sustaining the principle that a creditor who has proved his claim in the bankruptcy may be permitted to withdraw the same, if it was made under a mistake of fact or law, pro-

[212] Maxwell v. McDaniels (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 426, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692; Lontos v. Coppard, 246 Fed. 803, 159 C. C. A. 105, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575; In re James Carothers & Co., 182 Fed. 501; In re Wilder, 101 Fed. 104; In re Falls City Shirt Mfg. Co., 98 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re Clark, 5 N. B. R. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 2,806; In re Parkes, 10 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754; In re Hubbard, 1 Low. 190, 1 N. B. R. 679, Fed. Cas. No. 6,813; In re Jaycox, 8 N. B. R. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 7,242; Ex parte Harwood, Crabbe, 496, Fed. Cas. No. 6,185; Ex parte Lapsley, Fed. Cas. No. 8,083; In re Hope Min. Co., 1 Sawy. 710, Fed. Cas. No. 6,681; In re Baxter, 12 Fed. 72. But see In re E. B. Havens & Co., 186 Fed. 583.

[213] In re Parkes, 10 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754; In re Baxter, 12 Fed. 72.

[214] In re Myers, 99 Fed. 691, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

[215] In re McIntosh, 2 N. B. R. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 8,826; In re Emison, 2 N. B. R. 595, Fed. Cas. No. 4,459; In re Lowerre, 1 Ben. 406, 1 N. B. R. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 8,577. But a creditor who has proved a claim on a note may withdraw the note, by the permission of the court, on leaving a copy on file. In re Loden, 184 Fed. 965, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 917.

[216] In re Hallie, 7 Ben. 182, Fed. Cas. No. 5,960.

vided neither the bankrupt nor the other creditors who have proved will be injured thereby.[217] Thus a creditor who was in fact deprived of his property through the fraudulent acts of the bankrupt, of which the creditor was ignorant and which he only discovers on the examination of the bankrupt, after he has proved his claim as a general creditor, is not then estopped to withdraw his claim and demand the return of his property.[218] But the court will not grant leave to withdraw a proof merely for the purpose of allowing the creditor to continue an arrest of the bankrupt which was made before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[219]

§ 542. Re-Examination of Claims and Expunging.—The bankruptcy act provides that "claims which have been allowed may be reconsidered for cause and reallowed or rejected in whole or in part, according to the equities of the case, before but not after the estate has been closed." [220] And the general orders, in execution of the foregoing provision, declare that "when the trustee or any creditor shall desire the re-examination of any claim filed against the bankrupt's estate, he may apply by petition to the referee to whom the case is referred for an order for such re-examination, and thereupon the referee shall make an order fixing a time for hearing the petition, of which due notice shall be given by mail addressed to the creditor. At the time appointed the referee shall take the examination of the creditor and of any witnesses that may be called by either party, and if it shall appear from such examination that the claim ought to be expunged, or diminished, the referee may order accordingly." [221]

[217] In re Hubbard, 1 Low. 190, 1 N. B. R. 679, Fed. Cas. No. 6,813; American Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Munson, 93 Wash. 78, 159 Pac. 1195.

[218] In re Stewart, 178 Fed. 463, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

[219] In re Wiener, 14 N. B. R. 218, Fed. Cas. No. 17,620.

[220] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57k. Also jurisdiction to "reconsider allowed or disallowed claims, and allow or disallow them," is given to the courts of bankruptcy by § 2, clause 2. But this does not apply to claims against the estate for expenses of administration, such as the charges and expenses shown on the account of a receiver appointed to take charge of the bankrupt's estate. In re Reliance Storage & Warehouse Co., 100 Fed. 619, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49. Nor does it apply to fixed liens on the real estate of the bankrupt. Hawthorne v. Hendrie & Bolthoff Mfg. & Supply Co., 50 Colo. 342, 116 Pac. 122.

[221] General Order No. 21, clause 6. See International Agr. Corp. v. Cary, 240 Fed. 101, 153 C. C. A. 137, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753. Under the corresponding provisions of the act of 1867 and the rules in bankruptcy, the order for the re-examination of a claim, or for reducing or expunging it, could be made only by the judge of the court of bankruptcy; this jurisdiction was not conceded to the register, unless, perhaps, in cases where no objection was interposed by the creditor. See Comstock v. Wheeler, 2 N. B. R. 561, Fed. Cas. No. 3,084; In re Loring, Holmes, 483, Fed. Cas. No. 8,512; In re Muldauer, 8 Ben. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 9,906; In re Aspinwall, 7 Ben. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 590. But an order for the re-examination of claims made by a register without objection cannot be revoked by him upon its return. Idem.

In bankruptcy proceedings, the court's power to reconsider and revise its orders and decrees does not expire with the term at which they were made,[222] and reconsideration of a claim should be allowed as a general rule when asked by the trustee at any time before the estate has been closed, that being the only limitation prescribed by the statute. Yet parties in interest (that is, the trustee or other creditors) may certainly lose their right to move for the expunging of an allowed claim when they have acquiesced in it for such a length of time as to be justly chargeable with laches.[223] But a delay of a year or even more, no other facts appearing, and where no dividend has been declared, cannot be said to constitute by itself such laches as to bar the re-examination of a claim.[224] And while it would be an abuse of discretion for the court to set aside an order allowing a claim and to grant a rehearing, for the sole purpose of extending the time within which an appeal may be taken, yet such an order, like all others, is within the control of the court, and may, in its sound discretion, be set aside for good cause shown, even after the expiration of the time allowed for appeal.[225]

It is the policy of the act to do equal and exact justice between the estate of the bankrupt and the creditors. The court has ample power to investigate a claim at any stage of the proceedings, before the final closing of the estate, and to make any correction that equity and justice demand,—not only to reduce the amount of the claim if it is found to have been allowed for too large a sum, but also to increase it if, through inadvertence or mistake, it is less than by right it should be, or to allow the proofs to stand for any sum which, upon examination, is found to be actually due.[226] Consequently, when a trustee in bankruptcy is not [222] In re Keyes, 160 Fed. 763, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

[223] In re Pittsburg Lead & Zinc Co., 198 Fed. 316, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 880; In re Hinckel Brewing Co., 123 Fed. 942, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; In re Hamilton Furniture Co., 116 Fed. 115, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588; In re Effinger, 184 Fed. 724, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 924; In re Merwin & Willoughby Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 293, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385; In re Williams (D. C.) 224 Fed. 984, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[224] In re Globe Laundry, 198 Fed. 365, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 831; In re Caledonia Coal Co. (D. C.) 254 Fed. 742, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93.

[225] West v. W. A. McLaughlin & Co.'s Trustee, 162 Fed. 124, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

[226] In re W. A. Paterson Co., 186 Fed. 629, 108 C. C. A. 493, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 31, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 855; In re Montgomery, 3 N. B. R. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 9,730; In re New Brunswick Carpet Co., 4 Fed. 514; Courtney v. Fidelity Trust Co., 219 Fed. 57, 134 C. C. A. 595, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400. See In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 267, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824. But on motion to expunge a proof of debt and establish a set-off, a personal judgment cannot be rendered against the creditor for money in his hands. In re Forbes, 5 Biss. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 4,922; In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159. Where a referee's order disallowing claims in bankruptcy on the sole ground that the claims were not offered for proof within the time required was sustained on a petition for review, and shortly afterwards the Circuit Court of Appeals in another case so construed the bankruptcy act that such claims would not have satisfied of the legality or correctness of any claim which has been proved and allowed against the estate, or desires to contest such claim in respect either to its validity or amount, the proper practice is for him to move to have it re-examined, under the provisions of the general order, and proceed as therein directed.[227] And in the first place, the proceeding should be begun by the filing of a petition by the trustee, which should be distinct and specific. But it is said that it need not allege facts which, if proved, would defeat the claim, but only facts which constitute a sufficient cause for the re-examination of it which is demanded.[228] And if the petition is faulty in this respect, the proper method of objecting to it is by motion for a more specific statement, not by motion to strike out parts of the petition.[229] The creditor whose claim is in contest should file an answer; and if he fails to do so, and does not seek or obtain an extension of the time for answering, it will be a proper case for the entry of a decree against him pro confesso, carrying the ordinary incidents and consequences of such a decree.[230]

The general order, it will be noticed, gives the right of moving for the reconsideration of a claim to the "trustee or any creditor."[231] Although the corresponding general rule under the act of 1867 was worded in the same way, it was held that a petition for the re-examination of a proved and allowed claim might be presented by the bankrupt himself, as well as by the trustee or a creditor.[232] And in view of the purpose and policy of this provision of the act, and bearing in mind that the general order, though narrower than the statute, cannot operate as a restriction upon it, there seems good reason to hold that a petition by the bankrupt himself asking for a review of a proved claim ought not to be rejected.[233] As between the trustee and the general creditors of the estate, it has been held that the trustee alone is vested with the right to been barred, the claimants were held entitled to a rehearing, although no appeal was claimed. In re Keyes, 160 Fed. 763, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

[227] In re Firemen's Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 462, 8 N. B. R. 123, Fed. Cas. No. 4,796. See In re Brown (D. C.) 228 Fed. 533, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826.

[228] In re George Watkinson & Co., 130 Fed. 218, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; In re Ankeny, 100 Fed. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

[229] In re Ankeny, 100 Fed. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

[230] In re Docker-Foster Co., 123 Fed. 190, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584; In re Lewis, Eck & Co., 153 Fed. 495, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 657.

[231] In the bankruptcy of a partnership, where a claim has been proved and allowed against the individual estate of a partner, the referee has jurisdiction and power, on his own motion, to disallow the claim, and then reallow it against the firm estate. Cary v. International Agr. Corp. (C. C.) 243 Fed. 475, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

[232] In re Pease, 29 Fed. 593.

[233] In re Ankeny, 100 Fed. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72. Compare In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526. If the bankrupt can be estopped from disputing the validity of a claim against his estate, or from applying to have it expunged after it has been proved, by reason of his having included it in his sworn schedule of debts, no such estoppel can be claimed in favor of a purchaser of the claim who was informed by the bankrupt, before purchasmove for the reconsideration of a claim which has been allowed, that the provision authorizing "any creditor" to do so is meant to apply only to the case where a trustee has not yet been appointed, and that, after the appointment of a trustee, such a proceeding may not be instituted by a creditor without the concurrence of the trustee.[234] Hence if any creditor is dissatisfied with the allowance of another creditor's claim, his proper course is to demand of the trustee that the latter shall move for its reconsideration. But if the trustee refuses to do so, then the creditor may apply to the court for an order requiring the trustee so to move, or for permission for the objecting creditor to move in his own name.[235] And where it appears that a claim has been properly disallowed on objections made and conducted by the creditors in their own names, who voluntarily assumed liability for costs and expenses, the order of disallowance will not be disturbed on the theory that the trustee was the only proper person to attack the claim.[236] And the right to have a claim re-examined should not be denied to creditors who clearly have an interest therein because they seek such re-examination chiefly or solely in the interest of a third party.[237]

Any objection to a claim which would have been ground for refusing to allow it will be ground for expunging it on motion. If found to be exaggerated in amount, or illegal as to a severable portion, it may be reduced in amount. But if the claim as made is disproved in form and substance, it should be wholly expunged.[238] It may be stricken out on proof that the creditor had received a fraudulent preference which had not been surrendered, whereby he was disabled from proving any part of his debt,[239] or on account of an accomplished purpose of hindering and defrauding other creditors,[240] or because, after the proof and allowance of a debt founded on a judgment, the court in which such judgment was rendered has set it aside,[241] or when the claim is shown to have been barred by the statute of limitations at the time the petition in bankruptcy was filed.[242]

ing, that the seller of the claim had no valid claim against the estate. In re Pease, 29 Fed. 593.

[234] In re Sully, 142 Fed. 895, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304; In re Lewensohn, 121 Fed. 538, 57 C. C. A. 600, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368. But see In re Collins, 235 Fed. 937, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[235] In re Mexico Hardware Co., 197 Fed. 650, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; In re Stern, 144 Fed. 956, 76 C. C. A. 10, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

[236] In re Canton Iron & Steel Co., 197 Fed. 767, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 791.

[237] In re Sully, 152 Fed. 619, 81 C. C. A. 609, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

[238] In re Mead, 14 Fed. 287.

[239] In re Headley, 97 Fed. 765, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Leland, 14 Blatchf. 240, 16 N. B. R. 505, Fed. Cas. No. 8,235.

[240] In re Headley, 97 Fed. 765, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

[241] In re Bruce, 6 Ben. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 2,044.

[242] In re Lipman, 94 Fed. 353, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46.

The burden of showing that a creditor's claim, duly proven according to the provisions of the statute, is founded in mistake or fraud, or otherwise is not a valid claim against the estate, rests upon the trustee or the creditor moving to have it expunged. In proving the claim as the law provides, the creditor makes a prima facie case in favor of it. The proof is not conclusive. It may be attacked. But the person who attacks it must assume the burden of proof, for the claimant is entitled to stand upon his own deposition until overcome by countervailing evidence.[243] This evidence, however, may be extracted from the creditor himself. He will be ordered to appear for examination concerning the nature and particulars of his claim, and if he does not obey, or refuses to answer questions, it is at his peril. Even though he lives in another state, this is no obstacle to the order for his appearance. For, by proving his claim, he subjects himself to the jurisdiction of the court and is thereafter bound to obey all lawful orders touching his debt. If he disobeys the order to appear and be examined, the court can deprive him of the benefit of the act by expunging his claim.[244] If the testimony of the bankrupt is desired on a motion to expunge a proved claim, it may be obtained by summoning him as a witness.[245] The referee is required to give due notice to the creditor whose claim is challenged of the time fixed for hearing the petition,[246] but there is nothing requiring him to give notice to either party of his findings and decision on the petition. That becomes a matter of record, of which a creditor who has proved a claim is bound to take notice, the same as he would, if he were a party to a suit, of the final action or judgment of the court in such suit.[247]

As against collateral attack, an order of a court of bankruptcy expunging one's claim for the list of proved and allowed claims, and excluding it from participation in the distribution, is conclusive upon the facts and issues involved.[248] And where a referee in bankruptcy makes an order expunging a claim by a creditor against the bankrupt, because the creditor had received a preference in excess of the claim, such order is res judicata as to the fact of the preference.[249] But the effect of expunging a claim, and thereby excluding the creditor from participation [243] In re Frazin (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 86, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214; In re Pittsburg Lead & Zinc Co., 198 Fed. 316, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 880; In re Howard, 100 Fed. 630, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; In re Felter, 7 Fed. 904; In re Robinson, 8 Ben. 406, 14 N. B. R. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 11,938; Canby v. McLear, 13 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 2,378; In re Elk Valley Coal Mining Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 386, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 545.

[244] In re George Watkinson & Co., 130 Fed. 218, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; Laffoon v. Ives, 159 Fed. 861, 87 C. C. A. 41, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174; In re Kyler, 2 Ben. 414, 2 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,956.

[245] Canby v. McLear, 13 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 2,378.

[246] In re Stoever, 105 Fed. 355, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 250.

[247] In re Pease, 29 Fed. 593.

[248] John Nix & Co. v. Andrews, 88 N. J. Law, 721, 96 Atl. 1012.

[249] Hartranft v. Ives, 64 Pa. Super. Ct. 338.

in the bankruptcy proceedings, is to remit him to such remedies as he may have outside the bankruptcy, and thus set him free to reduce his claim to judgment and subject to its payment such property of the bankrupt as has not been absorbed by the bankruptcy proceedings.[250]

§ 543. Review of Referee's Proceedings by Judge.—Under the former bankruptcy law it was held that the register had power to pass upon the question of the regularity and formality of the proofs, but when any question of law or fact was raised in respect to the claim, he was obliged to certify the same to the judge for decision.[251] But under the present law, the referee not only has jurisdiction in the first instance to hear objections to the proof of claims, and pass upon the question of allowing or disallowing them, but also to entertain and decide motions for their reconsideration or expunction. And the only remedy to obtain a review of his decision on such a motion lies in the court of bankruptcy.[252] And a person dissatisfied must file a petition for a review of the referee's order.[253] The matter cannot be brought into the district court for review by filing exceptions in that court.[254] Further, a person desiring a review of the order must present his petition within the time limited therefor by any rule of the court,[255] and even if no such rule applies, he must act with reasonable promptness, or he will be subject to the imputation of laches and may for that reason be barred of all relief.[256]

On such a petition for review, the burden of proof is on those who object to the referee's decision and desire its reversal.[257] And since the referee is vested with a large measure of discretion, his decision on any [250] Andrews v. John Nix & Co., 246 U. S. 273, 38 Sup. Ct. 249, 62 L. Ed. 711, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260.

[251] In re Bogert, 2 N. B. R. 435, Fed. Cas. No. 1,598; In re Clark, 6 N. B. R. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 2,808.

[252] Clendening v. Red River Valley Nat. Bank, 12 N. D. 51, 94 N. W. 901. As to procedure on finding referee's decision wrong, and remand of case for rehearing, see Moore v. Crandall (C. C. A.) 205 Fed. 689, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517.

[253] In re Russell, 105 Fed. 501, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Wood, 248 Fed. 246, 160 C. C. A. 324, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810; Irwin v. Maple, 252 Fed. 10, 164 C. C. A. 122, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532. Compare In re John A Baker Notion Co., 180 Fed. 922, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808. Ordinarily a general creditor may not prosecute before the bankruptcy court a petition for review of the allowauce of the claim of another creditor; only the trustee may do so. In re Mexico Hardware Co., 197 Fed. 650, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[254] In re Hawley, 116 Fed. 428, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632. Where, after disallowing a claim, but before perfecting findings, the referee in bankruptcy died, it is proper for the district judge to direct the whole matter to be certified to him, so that it can be tried de novo. In re Wray, 233 Fed. 418, 147 C. C. A. 354, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28.

[255] In re T. M. Lesher & Son, 176 Fed. 650, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218; In re L. & R. Wister & Co., 237 Fed. 793, 151 C. C. A. 35, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215.

[256] In re Nichols, 166 Fed. 603, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216; Cary v. International Agr. Corp. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 475, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

[257] In re Williams, 120 Fed. 542, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731; In re Pittsburgh Lead & Zinc Co., 198 Fed. 316, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 880.

matter of fact or evidence will be entitled to at least the weight accorded to the verdict of a jury, and will not be reversed by the court unless plainly unsupported by the evidence or otherwise palpably erroneous.[258] The court, however, may of course reverse and remand if satisfied that the referee was in error. But where, in his decision to reject a claim, he ignored material legal evidence, it would not be proper for the court to allow the claim, in addition to reversing the decision of the referee; the proper procedure is to remand the claim to the referee for a new hearing.[259]

[258] Baumhauer v. Austin, 186 Fed. 260, 108 C. C. A. 306, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385; In re Schwarz, 200 Fed. 309, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Montgomery, 185 Fed. 955, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431; In re Levin, 173 Fed. 119, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Carter, 138 Fed. 846, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Grant, 118 Fed. 73, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; In re Stout, 109 Fed. 794, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; In re Rider, 96 Fed. 811, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192; In re Charles R. Partridge Lumber Co. (D. C.) 215 Fed. 973, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537; In re New York & Philadelphia Package Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 219, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Miller (D. C.) 225 Fed. 331, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333; In re La Jolla Lumber & Mill Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 1004, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; In re Schilling (D. C.) 251 Fed. 972; In re Anderson (D. C.) 252 Fed. 272, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731; In re Caledonia Coal Co. (D. C.) 254 Fed. 742, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; In re Petersen (D. C.) 252 Fed. 846, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637.

[259] Moore v. Crandall, 205 Fed. 689, 124 C. C. A. 11, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517.

CHAPTER XXVII

SET-OFF OF MUTUAL DEBTS

§ 544. Right of Set-Off in General.—The bankruptcy act provides that "in all cases of mutual debts or mutual credits between the estate of a bankrupt and a creditor the account shall be stated and one debt shall be set off against the other, and the balance only shall be allowed or paid," provided, however, that the creditor's claim is of a nature to be provable under the act and was not purchased with a view to its use as a set-off.[1] "Stating an account" consists in the allowance or disallowance of the several claims or items, computing or striking a balance as due from one party to the other, and the agreement of the parties, express or implied, as to the correctness of such balance and the fact of its being due. If there is a disagreement between the trustee and the creditor as to the allowance of items in the mutual account, or the validity of claims, or as to the amount of the balance due, the trustee may apply to the court for leave to arbitrate or compromise the controversy,[2] or the court itself might settle the question in a summary manner or direct a suit to be brought.[3]

This provision, however, is permissive rather than mandatory,[4] and does not enlarge the doctrine of set-off and cannot be invoked in cases where the general principles of legal or equitable set-off would not authorize it.[5] The matter, moreover, is largely within the control of the [1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 68. The object of this provision of the act is to give to the bankruptcy court the right to apply the principles of set-off to mutual credits when its action is invoked for that purpose. Cumberland Glass Mfg. Co. v. De Witt, 237 U. S. 447, 35 Sup. Ct. 636, 59 L. Ed. 1042, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[2] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 26, 27. Where a claim as originally filed recited that there was no counterclaim or offset to it, but it appeared that the bankrupt had a claim and a lien against property of the claimant, it was held that the claim might be amended so as to require a set-off against that of the claimant and the extinguishment of the lien. In re Progressive Wallpaper Corp. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 807, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 557.

[3] See In re Barnes Gear Co. (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 597, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468.

[4] In re Kyte (D. C.) 182 Fed. 166, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Co. v. Maguire, 251 Fed. 581, 163 C. C. A. 575, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319.

[5] Wagner v. Citizens' Bank & Trust court of bankruptcy, its discretion in these cases being governed by the principles of equity. Thus, it may disallow a claim of a set-off against the bankrupt, when its allowance would work injustice,[6] and on the other hand, it may order a set-off where injustice would otherwise result, though an action at law could not be maintained on the claim in question.[7] Thus, where a debtor of the bankrupt who had a claim against the latter which the law would allow him to offset, mistook his legal rights in the matter and acted on incompetent advice, to the effect that the bankruptcy law would prevent any set-off, and therefore paid the entire amount of his debt to the trustee in bankruptcy, it was held that he was entitled to a return of the money so paid by him.[8] But a claim cannot be used in this way where the transaction out of which it arose was fraudulent.[9] But it must be remarked that, although the allowance of a set-off enables the particular creditor to obtain payment in full of his claim, while other creditors are only partially paid, and thus he becomes a preferred creditor, yet it is a preference growing out of the business relations of the parties as they stood at the time, and not one contrived between them, and therefore it is not obnoxious to the act.[10]

The claim proposed as a set-off, whether brought forward by the trustee or the creditor, must be in the nature of a debt or a credit. For this reason, a perfectly gratuitous expenditure of money with no expectation of repayment (as by a father for the support and education of his children) cannot be made the subject of a set-off.[11] And a payment on a note given by an insolvent to close up an existing account with a Co., 122 Tenn. 164, 122 S. W. 245, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 484, 135 Am. St. Rep. 869, 19 Ann. Cas. 483; Morris v. Windsor Trust Co., 213 N. Y. 27, 106 N. E. 753, Ann. Cas. 1916C, 972; Planters' Oil Co. v. Gresham (Tex. Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 145. See In re Colwell Lead Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 922, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228.

[6] Hitchcock v. Rollo, 3 Biss. 276, Fed. Cas. No. 6,535.

[7] Wyckoff v. Williams, 136 App. Div. 495, 121 N. Y. Supp. 189.

[8] In re Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank (D. C.) 13 Fed. 361.

[9] McKay v. Weager (Sup.) 134 N. Y. Supp. 66. A bank which, as pledgee, had wrongfully sold property of the bankrupts at private sale for the amount of its lien, but afterwards received the profit from resales by the purchaser, which it held as its own, was held estopped, on an accounting to the trustee, to apply such sum on unsecured indebtedness of the bankrupts. Howard v. Mechanics' Bank (D. C.) 262 Fed. 699, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112. Where the trustee in bankruptcy sues for the recovery of certain commissions which had been paid to the defendant in the character of a factor acting for the corporation in its business, on the ground that the factor had made secret payments out of his commissions to the president of the corporation, in violation of the penal law of the state, the factor cannot offset claims which he holds against the corporation. Palmer v. Doull Miller Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 309.

[10] Drake v. Rollo, 3 Biss. 273, Fed. Cas. No. 4,066. Compare In re White, 177 Fed. 194, 101 C. C. A. 364, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

[11] Embry v. Bennett, 162 Fed. 139, 89 C. C. A. 163, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651. And so of a payment made by a surety of the bankrupt, in exoneration of a default or defalcation of the bankrupt, but which the surety was under no legal obligation to make, his liability as surety having been already terminated by circumstances which he might have discreditor, made within four months of the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, cannot be treated as a set-off against a new debt afterwards created by him with the same creditor, when he seeks to prove the latter in the bankruptcy proceedings.[12] So also, a creditor proving a claim against the bankrupt on an open account cannot be subjected to a set-off which would reduce or extinguish it, merely because he applied funds sent to him by the bankrupt to the satisfaction of another claim (which was secured by mortgage) instead of applying them, as the debtor directed, to the open account.[13] On similar principles, it is held that a contingent obligation or liability cannot be set off against a debt absolutely owing to the bankrupt,[14] nor a claim for unliquidated damages for a tort or a breach of contract.[15] So, a judgment obtained by a trustee in bankruptcy for a penalty incurred by the violation of a state statute against usury cannot be set off against a claim of the judgment debtor against the bankrupt estate.[16] And money or property held or due under a trust must be employed or applied according to the terms of the trust, and cannot be made the subject of a set-off as against the private debt or obligation of the trustee.[17]

But subject to these qualifications and restrictions, the set-off allowed by the statute is not confined to pecuniary demands, but embraces such claims as may or must give rise to or result in a "debt," as, for instance, where a creditor has goods of the bankrupt in his hands, which could be reached only by a suit at law or in equity.[18] So a creditor of the bankrupt who has in his possession, at the time of the bank-covered on proper inquiry. In re Hallock (D. C.) 226 Fed. 821, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[12] In re Seay, 113 Fed. 969, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 700; In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 406, 50 C. C. A. 310, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332.

[13] Stewart v. Hopkins, 30 Ohio St. 502.

[14] Abbott v. Hicks, 7 Scott, 715; In re American Paper Co., 246 Fed. 790, 159 C. C. A. 92, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141.

[15] Rose v. Sims, 1 Barn. & Ad. 521; In re Becker Bros., 139 Fed. 366, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; Pindel v. Holgate, 221 Fed. 342, 137 C. C. A. 158, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; In re Barnes Gear Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 764, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325; Custard v. McNary, 85 W. Va. 516, 102 S. E. 216. Compare In re Harper (D. C.) 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918. The rule is otherwise if damages for a tort or breach of contract have been liquidated. Marcus Shipping Ass'n v. Barnes, 169 Iowa, 377, 151 N. W. 525. In the bankruptcy of a stockbroker, who had been purchasing stock for customers where the number of shares he had on hand at the time of the bankruptcy was less than required to satisfy the demands of the customers, any customer who is indebted to the broker may set off his indebtedness against the shares not recoverable. In re H. B. Hollins & Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 317.

[16] Wilson v. National Bank of Rolla (C. C.) 1 McCrary, 538, 3 Fed. 391.

[17] Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 196 U. S. 502, 25 Sup. Ct. 339, 49 L. Ed. 571, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447; Libby v. Hopkins, 104 U. S. 303, 26 L. Ed. 769; In re Davis, 119 Fed. 950, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; Scammon v. Kimball, 5 Biss. 431, Fed. Cas. No. 12,435; In re Troy Woolen Co., 8 N. B. R. 412, Fed. Cas. No. 14,203; In re Lane, 2 Low. 305, 13 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 8,043.

[18] Murray v. Riggs, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 571; In re W. & A. Bacon Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 109, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep.

ruptcy, goods consigned to him by the bankrupt for sale, may sell the goods and, as against a claim for the proceeds, set off his claim against the bankrupt.[19] The value of property converted by the bankrupt may also be set off, [20] and so, perhaps, may a claim for breach of a contract, where the amount which would be recoverable is fixed and certain.[21] Thus, a claim for loss under an insurance policy may be set off by the insured against his indebtedness to the company.[22] And where a landlord received a specified sum from the tenant for an extension of the lease for a definite period, but the lessee obtained no benefit from the extension because of his bankruptcy during the original term, in proceedings to establish claims for rent and for damages to the leased premises, the lessor must account to the estate for the sum so received.[23] A creditor having two distinct debts, and holding property in pledge for one of them, with power of sale existing at the date of the bankruptcy, may apply the surplus proceeds after paying the first debt to the discharge of the second.[24] In partnership cases, the right of set-off cannot be so applied as to run counter to the cardinal rule that firm assets are for firm creditors and the separate estates of the partners for their individual creditors. But as between the partners themselves, claims arising out of independent dealings may be offset against demands growing out of the partnership affairs.[25]

§ 545. Meaning of Mutual Debts and Mutual Credits.—In order that debts may be set off under this provision of the bankruptcy law, they must be mutual and must be in the same right.[26] By the term "mutual

196. Claims due the bankrupt against mortgagees who took possession of the property under an invalid foreclosure may be set off against claims of the mortgagees. Roger v. J. B. Levert Co., 237 Fed. 737, 150 C. C. A. 491, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

19 Goodrich v. Dobson, 43 Conn. 576, Fed. Cas. No. 18,297.

20 McCabe v. Winship, 17 N. B. R. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 8,668.

21 See In re Wheeler, 2 Low. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 17,488; In re Manneschmidt, 202 Fed. 815; Clifford v. Oak Valley Mills Co. (D. C.) 229 Fed. 851, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 867; In re Pottier & Stymus Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 955, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469; Wolins v. Wilmerding, 102 Misc. Rep. 667, 169 N. Y. Supp. 594; In re Barnes Gear Co. (D. C.) 259 Fed. 320, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

22 Drake v. Rollo, 3 Biss. 273, 4 N. B. R. 689, Fed. Cas. No. 4,066.

23 In re Abrams, 200 Fed. 1005, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

24 Ex parte Whiting, 2 Low. 472, 14 N. B. R. 307, Fed. Cas. No. 17,573; In re McVay, 13 Fed. 443; In re Searles, 200 Fed. 893, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

25 In re Voetter, 4 Fed. 632; Warren v. Burnham, 32 Fed. 579.

26 In re Howe Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 193 Fed. 524, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477. See In re American Paper Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 753, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121. Trust funds are not applicable by way of set-off against a debt of the bankrupt to the person in charge of such funds, since the relation is fiduciary in the one instance and personal in the other. Alvord v. Ryan, 212 Fed. 83, 128 C. C. A. 539, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. A debt owing from a bankrupt partnership to a creditor and one owing from the creditor to an individual partner are not "mutual debts" which may be set off against each other. In re Neaderthal, 225 Fed. 38, 140 C. C. A. 364, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

credit," as used in the rule under which courts of equity allow set-off in cases of mutual credit, we are to understand a knowledge on both sides of an existing debt due to one party, and a credit by the other party, founded on and trusting to such debt as a means of discharging it.[27] But the term "mutual credits" in the bankruptcy law is more comprehensive than the same term as used in the equity rule or in statutes relating to the subject of set-off. The term "credit" is synonymous with "trust," and the trust or credit need not be of money on both sides. Where the creditor has goods or choses of action of the bankrupt put in his hands before the bankruptcy, by a valid contract, by the terms of which the deposit will result in a debt, as, if they are deposited for sale or collection, the case of mutual credits has arisen within the meaning of the bankruptcy law.[28] Thus, where there is a debt due on one side, and on the other a delivery of property with directions to turn it into money, the property thus delivered constitutes a "credit" within the meaning of the statute.[29] But where a bankrupt had deposited chattels with a bailee for the purpose of having certain work done upon them, and the trustee sought to recover them in an action of trover, it was held that the defendant was not entitled to retain them for his general balance for such work done by him for the bankrupt previously to the bankruptcy, for this was not a case of mutual credits.[30] So, in an action by the trustee in bankruptcy of an insolvent corporation, which carried on a livery stable, for board of defendant's horses, the latter cannot offset his personal claims against the former owner of the stable, who had conducted the business in the same name adopted by the corporation, and afterwards managed the business, since, whatever equities the defendant may have against such former owner, he has no counterclaim against the trustee.[31] Again, where a claim against a bankrupt insurance company for loss under its policies has been assigned, after notice of insolvency, the assignee cannot set it off against his previous indebtedness to the company, the debts and credits not being "mutual" within the meaning of the law.[32] So, where the trustee of a bankrupt corporation is prose-

[27] King v. King, 9 N. J. Eq. 44.

[28] Ex parte Caylus, 1 Low. 550, Fed. Cas. No. 2,534; Marks v. Barker, 1 Wash. C. C. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 9,096; Rose v. Hart, 8 Taunt. 499. And see Walther v. Williams Mercantile Co., 169 Fed. 270, 94 C. C. A. 546, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

[29] Goodrich v. Dobson, 43 Conn. 576, Fed. Cas. No. 18,297. A customer of a bankrupt stockbroker is entitled to a set-off equal to the value of stock converted, and may have the value of the stock fixed as of the date of the bankruptcy. In re J. F. Pierson, Jr., & Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 889, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213.

[30] Rose v. Hart, 8 Taunt. 499; Birdwood v. Raphael, 5 Price, 593.

[31] Davis v. Lohsen, 34 Misc. Rep. 769, 68 N. Y. Supp. 795.

[32] Hitchcock v. Rollo, 3 Biss. 276, 4 N. B. R. 690, Fed. Cas. No. 6,535. And see, as to assigned claims, Moulton v. Perkins, 116 Me. 218, 100 Atl. 1020. But compare Standard Engineering & Const. Co. v. Smyser-Royer Co., 68 Pa. Super. Ct. 437.

cuting an action against another corporation for goods sold, a creditor of the bankrupt cannot have the value of the property credited on his claim against the bankrupt, and have the action dismissed, on the contention that the goods were bought by him from the bankrupt and sold by him to the other corporation, when it appears that he was an officer of the bankrupt corporation and in charge of its sales, and at the same time an officer and agent of the purchasing corporation.[33] In another case, it appeared that a claimant ordered materials from a corporation, but another corporation which became bankrupt, intending to charge the same to the claimant, furnished the materials. The claimant, before changing his position or suffering any loss, learned of the facts and insisted on receiving the materials from the bankrupt. It was held that the claimant made himself a debtor to the bankrupt without any right to offset against the shipment any claim he had against the other corporation.[34]

§ 546. Time of Accrual of Debts or Claims.—To entitle a person to a set-off against the estate of a bankrupt, his debt or demand must be a provable one, and therefore must have been in existence at the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy,[35] and further, if he was not the original holder of the claim, he must have acquired it before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[36] Thus, for example, the mutual accounts between a bankrupt and his bank of deposit are closed by operation of law at the time when the petition in bankruptcy is filed, and no right of set-off exists in the bank as to deposits made after that time, even though neither party knew of the filing of the petition when the deposit was made.[37] So, a creditor of a bankrupt cannot obtain a preference of his debt by purchasing the property of the bankrupt through the intervention of an agent, and tendering the notes of the bankrupt in payment for the same; and in an action by the trustee to recover the value of such property, the creditor cannot set off the notes of the bankrupt.[38] But if a debt or claim constitutes a fixed and definite liability at the time of the bankruptcy, it is a provable debt, although the time for its payment has not yet arrived. Hence a debt not yet due may be set off against a debt due immediately, if it is of a provable nature.[39]

[33] In re Fort Wayne Electric Corp., 95 Fed. 264, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 503.

[34] In re Belleview Pipe & Foundry Co., 189 Fed. 169.

[35] Shepherd v. Turner, 3 McCord (S. C.) 249, 15 Am. Dec. 631; Smith v. Brinkerhoff, 2 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 369; Moore v. Third Nat. Bank, 41 Pa. Super. Ct. 497; Bramham v. Lanier Bros., 138 Tenn. 702, 200 S. W. 830.

[36] Smith v. Brinkerhoff, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 519; Ogden v. Cowley, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 274.

[37] In re Michaelis & Lindeman, 196 Fed. 718.

[38] Fleming v. Andrews, 9 Biss. 348, 3 Fed. 632.

[39] Ex parte Prescot, 1 Atk. 230; Ex parte Wagstaff, 13 Ves. 65; In re City Bank, 6 N. B. R. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 2,742.

Thus, notes made by the bankrupt, though not due at the time of the bankruptcy, may be used as a set-off in an action against the holder by the trustee in bankruptcy.[40] And an indorser or surety who pays the debt of his principal after the latter's bankruptcy, may claim the benefit of it as a set-off, provided his contract of indorsement or suretyship was made before the filing of the petition.[41]

§ 547. Claims Purchased With a View to Set-Off.—The bankruptcy act provides that "a set-off or counterclaim shall not be allowed in favor of any debtor of the bankrupt which was purchased by or transferred to him after the filing of the petition, or within four months before such filing, with a view to such use and with knowledge or notice that such bankrupt was insolvent, or had committed an act of bankruptcy."[42] The rule was substantially the same under the act of 1867, the question turning upon the person's knowledge or notice of the fact of insolvency, or, in the case of involuntary bankruptcy, of the commission of an act of bankruptcy.[43] If this particular fact is drawn in issue, the burden is on the party claiming the right of set-off to show that he had no notice or knowledge of the insolvency of the party with whom he was dealing, and consequently no intention of using the claim in question as a set-off in the latter's bankruptcy.[44] Though this clause of the statute speaks only of claims "purchased by or transferred to" the debtor of the bankrupt, it is held that, where an indorser of the bankrupt's paper takes it up within four months prior to the bankruptcy, knowing that the bankrupt is insolvent, and for the purpose of setting it off against his debt to the bankrupt, the statute applies, and it cannot be so used.[45]

§ 548. Claims Already Filed or Proved.—Proving his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings is a waiver by the creditor of all right of action or suit against the bankrupt in respect of such claim. Hence, where the creditor proved his claim, but omitted to credit the bankrupt with a debt due to him from the creditor, and the trustee sued for such debt, it was held that the creditor could not offer the claim already proved, by way of set-off to that suit; for his doing so would be equivalent to the prosecution of an original suit for its amount, the right to which he had [40] Frank v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 182 N. Y. 264, 74 N. E. 841, 108 Am. St. Rep. 805.

[41] Marks v. Barker, 1 Wash. C. C. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 9,096; In re Dillon, 100 Fed. 627, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63. But compare Ex parte Hale, 3 Ves. 304.

[42] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 68b.

[43] See Mattocks v. Lovering, 3 Fed. 212; Rollins v. Twitchell, 2 Hask. 66, 14 N. B. R. 201, Fed. Cas. No. 12,027; Mattox v. Cady, Fed. Cas. No. 9,301; Hovey v. Home Ins. Co., 10 N. B. R. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 6,743.

[44] In re Shults, 135 Fed. 623, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378.

[45] Mason v. National Herkimer County Bank, 172 Fed. 529, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

waived.[46] But there is also a decision to the effect that a creditor who has proved his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings may withdraw the same and plead it as a set-off in a suit brought against him by the trustee, and that if he is not allowed thus to plead the claim, and judgment goes against him in the trustee's suit, the court of bankruptcy, having full power over such a judgment, is bound by the statute to set off against it the claim of the creditor at its proper value.[47]

§ 549. Joint Debts and Credits.—Under the bankruptcy law of 1867 it was held that, where one of two joint debtors becomes bankrupt, the creditor may set off the debt against his separate indebtedness to the bankrupt.[48] But generally the courts adhered to the rule that a set-off is enforced in equity only when there are mutual debts or credits, or where there exists some equitable consideration or agreement between the parties which would render it unjust not to allow a set-off. Hence, where a bankrupt owed a debt to two persons jointly, and held a joint note given by one of them and a third person, it was held that the two claims were not subject to set-off under the bankruptcy act, being neither mutual debts or credits.[49] So, it is now held that a solvent partnership which is indebted to a bankrupt cannot set off against such indebtedness a claim due from the bankrupt estate to one of the partners,[50] and a claim on promissory notes of a partner cannot be set off against a judgment in behalf of the firm, the debts not being in the same right.[51] So where five persons, only one of whom was solvent, had a joint claim against the estate of a bankrupt, and each of them had severally become liable to the trustee in bankruptcy, the amounts of such liabilities aggregating more than the claim, but it did not appear that the joint liability and the separate debts grew out of the same transaction, or that either formed the inducement or consideration for the other, it was held that there could be no set-off of such claims.[52] In the case of a person jointly liable with the bankrupt and who is also his creditor, the right may depend on whether or not the common creditor proves his claim. Thus, where the bankrupt and a person who was indebted to him were jointly liable on a promissory note to a bank, and the bank proved its claim on the note, and thereafter the bankrupt's

[46] Brown v. Farmers' Bank of Kentucky, 6 Bush (Ky.) 198; Russell v. Owen, 61 Mo. 185, 15 N. B. R. 322.

[47] Harmanson v. Bain, 1 Hughes, 391, Fed. Cas. No. 6,073.

[48] In re Carrier, 39 Fed. 193. And see Cosgrove v. Cosby, 86 Ind. 511; Tucker v. Oxley, 5 Cranch, 34, 3 L. Ed. 29.

[49] Gray v. Rollo, 18 Wall. 629, 21 L. Ed. 927.

[50] In re Shults, 132 Fed. 573, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

[51] In re T. M. Lesher & Son, 176 Fed. 650, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218; In re Neaderthal, 225 Fed. 38, 140 C. C. A. 364, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

[52] In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., 100 Fed. 265, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

debtor took up the note, it was held that the latter could not set off against his indebtedness to the estate the moiety of the note which the bankrupt should have paid, but that, on paying his debt to the trustee, he should be subrogated to the rights of the bank as to that moiety, and entitled to receive such dividends as should be declared thereon.[53] On the other hand, where a debtor of the bankrupt paid a debt to a creditor on which he was jointly liable with the bankrupt, and the creditor to whom the payment was made had received a preference, which he had not surrendered, and therefore was not entitled to prove his claim in the bankruptcy, it was held that the debtor paying the claim was not entitled to set off the payment against his debt to the bankrupt by virtue of his right of subrogation to the rights of the creditor, since he succeeded to the creditor's disabilities as well as to his rights, but that the claim of such debtor was a "mutual credit," within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, and on that ground he was entitled to have the same set off against the claim of the bankrupt's estate against him.[54] Where part of a claim accrued to the bankrupt himself before the bankruptcy, but the remainder to his trustee after the bankruptcy, one desiring to set off a claim in his own favor must show against which portion of the trustee's claim, if any, it is available by way of set-off.[55]

§ 550. Set-Off Against Deposit Account in Bank.—A general deposit account in a bank subject to check becomes, upon the bankruptcy of the depositor, a security for, and a payment pro tanto of, his liabilities to the bank, by the operation of the law of mutual credits.[56] Hence where a bankrupt is indebted to a bank, on promissory notes or otherwise, in which he also has a balance to the credit of his general deposit account, the bank is entitled to have the one claim set off against the other, and to account to the trustee in bankruptcy only for the balance of the money on deposit after satisfying its own claims, or, if those claims exceed the amount of the bankrupt's balance, then to prove its claim for the remainder.[57] And this rule is not affected by the fact that [53] In re Bingham, 94 Fed. 796, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223.

[54] Morgan v. Wordell, 178 Mass. 350, 59 N. E. 1037, 55 L. R. A. 33.

[55] Howard v. Magazine & Book Co., 147 App. Div. 335, 131 N. Y. Supp. 916.

[56] Hough v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Biss. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 6,721; Ex parte Howard Nat. Bank, 2 Low. 487, 16 N. B. R. 420, Fed. Cas. No. 6,764.

[57] New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 24 Sup. Ct. 199, 48 L. Ed. 380, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 23 L. Ed. 483; In re Myers, 99 Fed. 691, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Little, 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Meyer, 107 Fed. 86, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593; In re Kalter, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 264; In re Petrie, 5 Ben. 110, 7 N. B. R. 332, Fed. Cas. No. 11,040; Blair v. Allen, 3 Dill. 101, Fed. Cas. No. 1,483; Booth v. Prete, 81 Conn. 636, 71 Atl. 938, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 863, 15 Ann. Cas. 306; Steinhardt v. National Park Bank, 120 App. Div. 255, 105 N. Y. Supp. 23; Whitaker v. Crowder State Bank, 26 Okl. 786, 110 Pac. 776; West v. Bank of Lahoma, 16 Okl. 328, 85 Pac. 469; Toof v. City Nat. Bank, 206 Fed. 250, 124 C. C. A. 118, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re Wright-Dana Hardware Co., 212 Fed. 397, 129 C. C. A.

the debt to the bank, if fixed and absolute, was not due at the date of the bankruptcy,[58] as in the case of notes of the bankrupt which were discounted by the bank prior to the filing of the petition, whether matured or unmatured at the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy,[59] or where the bankrupt's liability was as an indorser of a note held by the bank, though that liability did not become absolute until after the filing of the petition.[60] And it appears that, even though the deposit account may have been transferred on the books of the bank to an assignee for creditors or a receiver, or even to the trustee in bankruptcy, yet if there has been no actual payment of the money nor any change of possession, it is not too late to claim the right of set-off.[61] And in one case it was held that where a bank, holding a note of the bankrupt and also having funds of his on deposit sufficient to satisfy it, paid over the entire fund to the trustee in bankruptcy, through oversight, without first satisfying the note, it was entitled to recover the amount of the note from the trustee in a court of equity, without first offering to satisfy the note or bringing it into court for cancellation.[62] On the same principle, if a bank, after the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, collects money on drafts deposited with it by the bankrupt before that time, it may apply the money towards the payment of a note of the bankrupt held by it.[63] And a firm note to a bank, assumed by an insolvent partner on the dissolution of the firm, becomes his individual indebtedness, so that such debt and the amount due to him as a depositor, independent of any partnership consideration, become mutual debts within the meaning of the bankruptcy law.[64]

73, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816; Wilson v. Citizens' Trust Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 697, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86; In re Friedman (D. C.) 241 Fed. 603, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777; Chisholm v. First Nat. Bank, 269 Ill. 110, 109 N. E. 657; Conquest v. Broadway Nat. Bank, 134 Tenn. 17, 183 S. W. 160; Dunlap v. Seattle Nat. Bank, 93 Wash. 568, 161 Pac. 364; Bennett v. North Philadelphia Trust Co., 66 Pa. Super. Ct. 261; Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Conn.) 114 Atl. 120; In re Cross (C. C. A.) 273 Fed. 39, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[58] Germania Savings Bank & Trust Co. v. Loeb, 188 Fed. 285, 110 C. C. A. 263, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238; In re Radley Steel Const. Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 462; De Long v. Mechanics & Metals Nat. Bank, 168 App. Div. 525, 153 N. Y. Supp. 1010; Shields v. John Shields Const. Co., 83 N. J. Eq. 21, 89 Atl. 1022.

[59] Frank v. Mercantile Nat. Bank, 100 App. Div. 449, 91 N. Y. Supp. 488, affirmed, 182 N. Y. 264, 74 N. E. 841, 108 Am. St. Rep. 805.

[60] In re Philip Semmer Glass Co., 135 Fed. 77, 67 C. C. A. 551, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25.

[61] In re Myers, 99 Fed. 691, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760. But compare Pearsall v. Nassau Nat. Bank, 74 App. Div. 89, 77 N. Y. Supp. 11.

[62] Union Nat. Bank v. McKey, 102 Fed. 662, 42 C. C. A. 583.

[63] In re Farnsworth, 5 Biss. 223, 14 N. B. R. 148, Fed. Cas. No. 4,673. And see In re Northrup, 152 Fed. 763, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335. But compare Continental & Commereial Trust & Savings Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 199 Fed. 704, 118 C. C. A. 142.

[64] Hooks v. Gila Valley Bank & Trust Co., 12 Ariz. 315, 100 Pac. 806.

But a liability as indorser, where the principal is solvent, cannot be set off against a bank deposit by the indorser on his bankruptcy.[65] And where deposits are made and accepted for a special purpose, the relation of the bank and the depositor is not that of debtor and creditor, but the bank becomes the bailee of the depositor, or holds the fund under a species of trust, and in this event it cannot set off its own claims against the depositor in his bankruptcy.[66] It was so held in a case where the money was deposited under an agreement that the bankrupt should use it to pay salary checks and pay-roll checks and for certain other specified purposes,[67] and also in a case where the bank received a deposit from a customer merely for safe-keeping, the money to be ultimately appropriated for the benefit of his creditors, and the bank knew him to be insolvent.[68] So, where the treasurer of a town deposited money in a bank which failed, and town warrants paid with the bank's money were in the hands of the bank at the time of its bankruptcy, and the trustee in bankruptcy obtained the warrants, it was held that, although the town was liable to him on the warrants, no right to set-off could exist in favor of the treasurer and the sureties on his bond.[69] Again, a bank has no right to a set-off as to deposits made by the bankrupt after the actual filing of a petition against him, although neither party knew that it had been filed.[70] And where a bank claims a set-off against the claim of the bankrupt's trustee for money on deposit, its claim arising out of the bankrupt's alleged conversion of certain property of which the bank was the real owner, the claim can be adjudicated only in a plenary suit, and cannot be reached by a summary order.[71]

The converse of the main rule stated above is equally true. That is, on the bankruptcy of a bank or banker, a depositor, having a balance to the credit of his deposit account, is entitled to set off the same against a note on which he is indebted to the bank.[72]

§ 551. Unpaid Stock Subscriptions.—As the capital stock of a corporation (and more especially unpaid subscriptions thereto) constitutes a trust fund for the benefit of the general creditors of the corporation, it follows that a stockholder indebted to a bankrupt corporation for un-

[65] Ex parte Howard Nat. Bank, 2 Low. 487, 16 N. B. R. 420, Fed. Cas. No. 6,764.

[66] Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank v. Park, 209 Fed. 613, 126 C. C. A. 607, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

[67] Continental & Commercial Trust & Sav. Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 118 C. C. A. 142, 199 Fed. 704.

[68] Lynam v. Belfast Nat. Bank, 98 Me. 448, 57 Atl. 799.

[69] Town of Cicero v. Grisko, 240 Ill. 220, 88 N. E. 478.

[70] In re Michaelis & Lindeman, 196 Fed. 718.

[71] In re Boston-Cerrillos Mines Corporation, 206 Fed. 794, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

[72] In re Shults, 132 Fed. 573, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84; Winslow v. Bliss, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 220; Mandel v. Koerner (Mun. Ct. N. Y.) 149 N. Y. Supp. 455.

paid shares of stock cannot set off against such liability a debt due to him from the corporation. The debts are not in reality mutual, and to allow such a set-off would enable the stockholder to turn his fiduciary relation to his own benefit and the detriment of the creditors.[73] Thus, where the trustee of a bankrupt insurance company sues a stockholder for the unpaid balance of his subscription to its capital, the latter cannot set off a claim against the company for a loss under its policy.[74] And the fact that stockholders of a bankrupt corporation are also bondholders, and as such entitled to share in the distribution of the estate, does not entitle them to set off their claims as such in a suit against them by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover unpaid subscriptions.[75] But the trustee of a bankrupt corporation may interpose as a set-off against the claim of a stockholder a claim against him for the difference between the value of property turned over by him in payment for his stock and the nominal value of the stock, and the court, in the interest of creditors, will scrutinize with care the integrity and fairness of the transaction.[76]

§ 552. Set-Off by or Against Trustee.—A trustee in bankruptcy, substituted as defendant in a suit begun against the bankrupt, in replevin by the plaintiff, claiming under a transfer from the bankrupt, can set up as a counterclaim his right to avoid the transfer under the Bankruptcy Act.[77] But a trustee who has paid a note of the bankrupt cannot set off the amount thereof against the claim of an accommodation maker or indorser of the note.[78] As to the right of set-off or counterclaim against the trustee, it is held that he has no other or greater rights than the bankrupt had when he became bankrupt; and hence when a third person had at that time a right as against the bankrupt to a credit, he is entitled to assert such right in a suit against him by the trustee,[79] and for the purpose of a set-off in such a suit, it is immaterial that the creditor has not proved his claim in bankruptcy, or that the year allowed for that purpose has expired.[80] So a party against whom a judg-

[73] Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. 610, 21 L. Ed. 731; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362, 23 L. Ed. 483; Scammon v. Kimball, 5 Biss. 431, 8 N. B. R. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 12,435; In re Howe Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 524, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; Kiskadden v. Steinle, 203 Fed. 375, 121 C. C. A. 559, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; Boatmen's Bank v. Laws, 257 Fed. 299, 168 C. C. A. 383, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683; In re La Jolla Lumber & Mill Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 1004, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; Whaley v. King, 141 Tenn. 1, 206 S. W. 31; Cochran v. Monteith (Tex. Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1055.

[74] Scammon v. Kimball, 5 Biss. 431, 8 N. B. R. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 12,435.

[75] Babbitt v. Read, 173 Fed. 712, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

[76] In re Royce Dry Goods Co., 133 Fed. 100, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

[77] Gleason v. Bush, 166 App. Div. 865, 152 N. Y. Supp. 54.

[78] In re Jules Bouy & Co. (D. C.) 244 Fed. 896, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784.

[79] Wasey v. Whitcomb, 167 Mich. 58, 132 N. W. 572.

[80] Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Graham, 145 Fed. 809, 76 C. C. A. 385, 16 Am.

ment has been rendered in favor of the trustee may, by proper proceedings in equity, be allowed to offset against the same a claim allowed in his favor against the bankrupt.[81] The opinion has also been advanced that the provision of the statute in relation to the set-off of mutual debts or credits is broad enough to include a liability on the part of a creditor which has accrued to a trustee in bankruptcy as such, though not to the bankrupt himself, when the creditor's claim and such liability are mutual.[82] But in an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover the price of certain live stock, where defendant set up as a counterclaim a demand for services rendered by him in keeping the stock before and after the time when the trustee acquired title thereto, it was held that so much of the claim as related to services rendered before the plaintiff acquired title was not a valid claim against the estate, and could not be allowed as a counterclaim, but otherwise as to so much of the claim as related to services rendered after the plaintiff acquired title to the property.[83] And so a claim based on a breach of contract by a bankrupt after the bankruptcy is not available as a counterclaim against a claim for services or materials supplied by the trustee in bankruptcy, while continuing a contract partly performed by the bankrupt, because of want of mutuality, though the claim is available as against any claim of the bankrupt set up by the trustee.[84] But a corporation which had made advances to the bankrupt to enable him to continue in the business of manufacturing staves, under an agreement that it should purchase his entire output, and which paid the full purchase price in advance, has an equitable lien superior to the rights of other creditors, even though the legal title to the property remained in the bankrupt; and hence, where the trustee adopted the contract and continued manufacturing staves under the same arrangement, the corporation cannot, at a later date, be required to pay for all of the staves turned over to it, without deduction for the advances made.[85]

§ 553. Suit to Recover Preference.—In a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover an unlawful preference, the creditor will not be allowed to set off the debt in respect to which the preferential transfer of property or payment was made,[86] nor will he be entitled to credit for Bankr. Rep. 610; Wagner v. Burnham, 224 Pa. St. 586, 73 Atl. 990.

[81] Tootle-Weakley Millinery Co. v. Billingsley, 74 Neb. 531, 105 N. W. 85.

[82] In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., 100 Fed. 265, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

[83] Moran v. Bogert, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 603, 14 N. B. R. 393.

[84] Howard v. Magazine & Book Co., 147 App. Div. 335, 131 N. Y. Supp. 916.

[85] Greif Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 391, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

[86] Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 129 Fed. 728, 64 C. C. A. 256, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; Moody v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 233; Harris v. Second Nat. Bank, 110 Tenn. 239, 75 S. W. 1053; Schmidt v. Bank of Commerce, 15 N. Mex. 470, 110 Pac. 613, 33 services rendered or disbursements made in caring for or disposing of the property in question.[87] So a court of equity, in a suit by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover a preference, will not entertain a cross-bill for the recovery by the defendant of the amount of the dividend to which he claims to be entitled from the bankrupt estate, but will require him to prove his claim in the bankruptcy court, though it may permit him, on the giving of security, to retain in his hands sufficient of the amount which the complainant is entitled to recover to cover his dividend in case his claim shall be allowed.[88] Nor is this rule confined to cases in which the trustee is forced to bring suit in order to avoid the preference. It is likewise applicable where he opposes the allowance of a claim filed by a creditor, on the ground that the creditor has received a preference which he has not surrendered.[89]

L. R. A. (N. S.) 558; State Bank of Clearwater v. Ingram, 237 Fed. 76, 150 C. C. A. 278, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447.

[87] Ommen v. Tallcott, 175 Fed. 261, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

[88] Ommen v. Tallcott, 175 Fed. 259, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[89] In re Christensen, 101 Fed. 802, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202.

CHAPTER XXVIII

SECURED CREDITORS

§ 554. Who Are Secured Creditors.—A secured creditor is defined by the bankruptcy act of 1898 as "a creditor who has security for his debt upon the property of the bankrupt of a nature to be assignable under this act, or who owns such a debt for which some indorser, surety, or other person secondarily liable for the bankrupt has such security upon the bankrupt's assets."[1] To come within this definition, therefore, the creditor must either hold security against the property of the bankrupt himself, or be secured by the individual obligation of another who holds such security.[2] The latter part of the definition is important; for it was held under the former bankruptcy law that a creditor was not to be treated as "secured" merely because a surety or guarantor of the debt was protected by a lien on the bankrupt's property.[3] And to constitute a lien or security, within the meaning of the act, there must be a security additional to the personal obligation of the debtor.[4] Thus, a

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 23.

[2] Gorman v. Wright, 136 Fed. 164, 69 C. C. A. 76, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135. And see In re Russell Falls Co. (D. C.) 249 Fed. 260, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448. A "secured" creditor is one who directly holds as security for his debt property which would otherwise swell the assets of the bankrupt estate, or indirectly holds like property through having the debt obligation of another person who himself holds such property. In re Shatz (D. C.) 251 Fed. 351, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

[3] In re Lloyd, 15 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 8,429. But compare In re Jaycox, 8 N. B. R. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 7,242.

[4] Shoemaker v. National Mechanics' Bank, 1 Hughes, 101, Fed. Cas. No. 12,801. As to the preferential right of a subcontractor to the balance of the money due the contractor from the principal, banker has no lien upon the moneys of a depositor for any separate debt which the depositor may owe to him, and the mere fact that he holds such moneys on deposit at the time of the bankruptcy does not make him a secured creditor.[5] Further, although there may be an additional or collateral security, this does not make the creditor a secured creditor, unless the person furnishing it has a lien on assets of the bankrupt. Thus, where a firm is dissolved and one of the partners assumes payment of all the debts, this makes him a principal debtor and the other partner a surety, but it does not follow that a creditor of the partnership becomes a secured creditor.[6] So, where the bankrupt had bought goods on credit, and payment was guaranteed to the seller by a third person, the creditor is not "secured," unless the guarantor has taken security from the bankrupt.[7] So a mere promise by a subsequent purchaser of property subject to a mechanic's lien, in consideration of forbearance, to pay the demand secured by the lien, is not "collateral security" and does not discharge the lien.[8] Again, it is necessary that the security should attach to the bankrupt's "property" or "assets"; that is, there must be a lien upon property which would otherwise go into the general fund or be available for the claims of general creditors,[9] and a creditor holding security on property which never belonged to the bankrupt may prove his whole debt without first disposing of the security.[10]

But subject to these conditions, the term "security," as used in the bankruptcy act, will include every interest or right attached to or which is a charge upon specific property, or which entitles the owner thereof to be paid out of specific property, whether legal or equitable, absolute or contingent.[11] Thus, where the by-laws of a corporation provide that it shall have a lien on the stock of any shareholder for his indebtedness to the corporation, and an indebted stockholder becomes bankrupt, the corporation is a secured creditor.[12] Taxes, particularly those assessed by municipalities, may or may not attach to real property as liens, according to the local law, and upon this will depend the position of the state or municipality as a secured or unsecured creditor.[13] Again, it is im-see Baker Lumber Co. v. A. A. Clark Co., 53 Utah, 336, 178 Pac. 764.

[5] In re Warner, 5 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 17,177; In re Weeks, 8 Ben. 265, 13 N. B. R. 263, Fed. Cas. No. 17,349.

[6] Schmitt v. Greenberg, 58 Misc. Rep. 570, 109 N. Y. Supp. 881.

[7] In re Anderson, 7 Biss. 233, 12 N. B. R. 502, Fed. Cas. No. 350. And see United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Carnegie Trust Co., 177 App. Div. 176, 164 N. Y. Supp. 92.

[8] Mervin v. Sherman, 9 Iowa, 331.

[9] In re Spades, 6 Biss. 448, 13 N. B. R. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 13,196.

[10] In re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. 253, 12 N. B. R. 413, Fed. Cas. No. 4,157. A bank holding the note of a third person, secured by a pledge of stock which does not belong to the bankrupt, the latter being liable thereon as an indorser, may prove its claim against the bankrupt's estate without surrendering the stock. In re Thompson, 208 Fed. 207.

[11] Storm v. Waddell, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 494, 507.

[12] In re Morrison, 10 N. B. R. 105, Fed. Cas. No. 9,839.

[13] See In re Harvey, 122 Fed. 745, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567.

portant to notice that, when property or securities are delivered to a creditor, it may be the intention and understanding of the parties that a payment and discharge of the debt shall be effected, rather than the creation of a lien, and of course, in the former case, the creditor cannot present himself in the guise of a secured creditor, though he may have been disappointed in the value of the property turned over to him.[14] And it is not permissible for the bankrupt himself, after receiving his discharge, to purchase and take an assignment to himself of debts against his own estate in bankruptcy secured by liens, and collect the same for his own use out of assets in the hands of his trustee, to the exclusion of subsequent lien holders. His purchase of his own debt operates to extinguish the debt, and this rule is not affected by the fact of his having been discharged, because the discharge does not destroy or extinguish the debt, though it bars the remedy for its recovery.[15]

§ 555. Same; Mortgagees.—The holder of a mortgage on real or personal property of the bankrupt is a secured creditor,[16] though the mortgage was not made by the bankrupt himself, but by his predecessor in the title,[17] and though it covers after-acquired property as well as that in possession at the time.[18] So, the joint note of a husband and wife secured by a deed of trust on the wife's property should be allowed as a secured claim against the estate of the husband in bankruptcy, although the wife may have died leaving heirs.[19] But it is doubtful whether a mortgage on exempt property of the bankrupt puts the mortgagee in the position of a secured creditor. Probably, however, it should be so held, since it would give him an inequitable advantage if he were allowed to realize on his security and at the same time compete with unsecured creditors.[20] Equitable mortgages, as well as legal, may come [14] In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 11 Ariz. 415, 95 Pac. 117.

[15] In re Burton (D. C.) 29 Fed. 637.

[16] Krugmeier v. Hackett, 134 Wis. 57, 113 N. W. 1103. Bondholders of a bankrupt corporation are not precluded from proving their debts as secured because of their omission to record the deed of trust securing the bonds. In re Charles Town Light & Power Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 846, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721. A secured creditor who took the legal title to land mortgaged to secure pledged bonds, is still a pledgee or mortgagee, and only entitled to prove the excess above the security. In re J. G. Reichard & Bro. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 525.

[17] McKay v. Hamill, 185 Fed. 11, 107 C. C. A. 115, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164. See In re Altenheim, 1 Ben. 431, Fed. Cas. No. 268.

[18] Barnard v. Norwich & W. R. Co., 4 Cliff. 351, 14 N. B. R. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 1,007. See In re Baker, 1 Hask. 593, Fed. Cas. No. 762. Mortgagees, until they assert their rights in the rents by proceedings to sequester them, cannot assert any rights as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor to rents collected before such assertion, though the rents were included in the mortgage. In re Clark Realty Co., 234 Fed. 576, 148 C. C. A. 342, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129.

[19] In re Hartel, 7 N. B. R. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 6,157.

[20] See In re Lantzenheimer, 124 Fed. 716, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Fenley v. Poor, 121 Fed. 739, 58 C. C. A. 21, 10 Am.

within this rule. Thus, if no state law forbids, a vendee under a contract for the purchase of land, who has recorded his bond for a deed and paid the purchase money, is entitled, on the bankruptcy of the vendor without having conveyed, to prove his claim as one secured by an equitable lien on the land.[21] And so, where money is loaned or advanced under an agreement that it is to be used to discharge an incumbrance on the borrower's property, and the lender is to have a first lien to secure its repayment, and the money is so used, the lender may be subrogated to the rights of the incumbrancer whose debt was paid, against the borrower's trustee in bankruptcy.[22]

§ 556. Same; Judgment Creditors.—Ownership of a judgment against the bankrupt will constitute the creditor a "secured creditor," within the meaning of the act, provided there is property of the bankrupt upon which the judgment may attach, or has attached, as a lien.[23] But not so if the law of the state confines the lien of judgments to real property and the estate of the particular bankrupt consists wholly of personalty.[24] And in any case, where the creditor claims the rights of a secured creditor by virtue of an alleged judgment lien on the property of the estate, the burden is on him to show that he has done everything required by statute to make his judgment attach as a lien.[25] Now at common law, a judgment does not by itself constitute a lien on property of the defendant, either real or personal, nor is a lien created by the issuing of a writ of fieri facias upon such judgment; nothing but a levy upon specific property will produce that effect.[26] And when this rule is in force in the state where the proceedings are pending and where the debtor's property is situated, the docketing of a judgment against him, or the issuance of a writ thereon, will not create such a lien as will be respected and enforced by the court of bankruptcy.[27] So, where a judgment recovered before a justice of the peace is not a lien on land until docketed in the superior court, this step must have been taken before the bankruptcy, or the judgment will not constitute a security within the meaning of the bankruptcy law.[28] And the same is true of a judgment which has been allowed to become dormant, unless the statute of limitations is applicable only in favor of subsequent purchasers and judg-

Bankr. Rep. 377. Compare In re Bailey, 176 Fed. 990, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201.

[21] In re Peasley, 137 Fed. 190, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

[22] In re Lee, 182 Fed. 579, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Dewey v. Kelton, 18 N. B. R. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 3,850.

[23] In re Cale, 182 Fed. 439, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; Guardians of Poor v. Ovens, L. R. 8 Ex. 37. See American Woolen Co. v. Maaget, 86 Conn. 234, 85 Atl. 583.

[24] In re Erwin, 3 N. B. R. 580, Fed. Cas. No. 4,524.

[25] In re Wood, 95 Fed. 946, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

[26] 1 Black, Judgm. §§ 397, 398.

[27] In re McIntosh, 2 N. B. R. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 8,826.

[28] In re Wood, 95 Fed. 946, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

ment creditors, in which case, not being available in favor of the judgment debtor, it cannot be set up in favor of his trustee in bankruptcy,[29] or unless the dormant judgment has been duly revived.[30] Nor does a judgment creditor acquire a lien, which will be protected under the bankruptcy law, by commencing proceedings supplementary to execution; for until the appointment of a receiver, his right is not a lien.[31] And the same is true (at least in some states) of a judgment creditor who attacks an alleged fraudulent conveyance, but does not procure a decree setting it aside until after the bankruptcy of the debtor.[32] And it must not be understood that the creditor, even if his judgment lien is perfect, will have the right to issue and levy an execution and cause a sale of the property, after it has passed into the control of the trustee in bankruptcy. While he has the advantageous position of a secured creditor, he will not be allowed to interfere, at will, with property in the custody of the bankruptcy court.[33] But one whose judgment is a lien on property which had been sold and conveyed by the bankrupt in good faith before the bankruptcy is differently situated. He may claim and secure in the bankruptcy proceedings his portion of the estate of the bankrupt, in virtue of the debt evidenced by his judgment, without accounting or giving credit for anything on account of the lien.[34] Under the bankruptcy act of 1841, it was held that a power of attorney to confess judgment was a "security" within the meaning of that statute,[35] but it is not probable that it would be so held under the narrower terms of the present law.

§ 557. Same; Pledgees, Assignees, and Holders of Collateral.—One holding specific personal property in pledge, as a means of enforcing the payment of a debt, is a secured creditor within the bankruptcy act,[36] and so also where the pledge is of any of those various forms of intangible property which are commonly known in the business world under the general description of "collateral," such as bonds or stock of corporations, mortgages, notes, and other marketable securities.[37] The same principle applies also to one who holds a policy of insurance on the life

[29] In re Huddell, 47 Fed. 207.

[30] Appeal of Bucknor (Pa.) 4 Atl. 738.

[31] In re Wheeler, 18 N. B. R. 385, Fed. Cas. No. 17,490.

[32] In re Estes, 5 Fed. 60.

[33] Pennington v. Sale, 1 N. B. R. 572, Fed. Cas. No. 10,939; Davis v. Anderson, 6 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 3,623; Russel v. McCord, 2 Flip. 139, 17 N. B. R. 508, Fed. Cas. No. 12,157.

[34] McAden v. Keen, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 400.

[35] Buckingham v. McLean, 13 How. 151, 14 L. Ed. 91.

[36] In re Peebles, 2 Hughes, 394, 13 N. B. R. 149, Fed. Cas. No. 10,902.

[37] In re McVay, 13 Fed. 443; Dayton Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 37 Ohio St. 208; Mitchell v. Roberts, 17 Fed. 776; Dumont v. Fry, 14 Fed. 293. "Any species of property or thing in action, which is capable of assignment, may be pledged as collateral security for the payment of a debt, by the delivery or assignment of such property. All forms of negotiable paper, such as promissory notes, bonds, and other evidences of debt may be pledged as collateral security.

of his debtor as collateral security for his debt.[38] And an assignment of a lease running to the debtor may constitute the creditor a secured creditor,[39] and so of the transfer of an order drawn on a third person,[40] or an assignment of money to become due under a contract.[41] But the holder of a warehouseman's receipt which is attached to a note executed to the warehouseman, as collateral security, is not a secured creditor in the bankruptcy of the warehouseman.[42] There may also be circumstances in which a court of bankruptcy—in view of its equitable powers and duties—would recognize a merely equitable assignment as putting the assignee in the position of a secured creditor. But it has been held that the holder of a protested draft, drawn by a bankrupt bank, is not entitled to priority of payment over other creditors of the bank, merely because the drawee (another bank) may have had funds of the drawer in its hands at the time it refused to accept the draft. "If it were assumed or conceded that under any circumstances such a draft can amount to an equitable assignment in favor of the payee of that amount of the drawer's funds in the hands of the drawee, such a principle cannot be applied where it would contravene the purpose of the bankruptcy act." [43]

§ 558. Same; Holders of Notes.—A promissory note is not a security for the payment of a debt, but only an evidence of the debt.[44] And although it may be indorsed, this does not make the claim a secured one,[45] unless, under the terms of the statute, the indorser holds a security on the property of the bankrupt. But the opinion has been advanced that a creditor who holds a note of the bankrupt containing a waiver of exemptions is in the position of a secured creditor, since his

Other evidences of debt, negotiable or quasi-negotiable, may be pledged in accordance with the usuages or customs of the commercial world, or pursuant to statutory enactments. Thus, by custom or usage, where statutory enactments do not prohibit it, corporate stock, mortgages securing promissory notes, and warehouse receipts or bills of lading may be pledged as collateral security." Colebrooke, Collat. Sec. (2d Ed.) § 2a.

[38] Burlingham v. Crouse, 181 Fed. 479, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; In re Mertens, 134 Fed. 101, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226; In re Newland, 6 Ben. 342, 7 N. B. R. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 10,170; In re Shoenberger, Fed. Cas. No. 12,802.

[39] Fitch v. Richardson, 147 Fed. 197, 77 C. C. A. 423, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[40] In re Hines, 144 Fed. 54, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495.

[41] In re De Long Furniture Co., 188 Fed. 686, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469.

[42] State v. Federal Union Surety Co., 156 Mo. App. 603, 137 S. W. 613.

[43] Bank of Commerce v. Russell, 2 Dill. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 884.

[44] United States Trust Co. v. Brady, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 119.

[45] In re Broich, 7 Biss. 303, 15 N. B. R. 11, Fed. Cas. No. 1,921. A creditor holding the bankrupt's indorsed note for part of his claim is not therefore a "secured" creditor, and he is entitled to a dividend on the full claim though the indorser paid the note after the proofs of claim were filed. Young v. Gordon, 219 Fed. 168, 135 C. C. A. 66.

right to resort to the exempt property is in the nature of a security, if not a lien.[46]

§ 559. Effect of Additional Security or Claim Against Third Person.—The bankruptcy act provides that "the liability of a person who is a co-debtor with, or guarantor, or in any manner a surety for, a bankrupt shall not be altered by the discharge of such bankrupt."[47] And it is a general rule that if a creditor of the bankrupt holds security in the form of any obligation of a third person whether it be a mortgage or pledge of property, an indorsement, or a contract of suretyship or guaranty, provided only that the third person does not hold countersecurity, the creditor may prove his debt in the bankruptcy without surrendering the security, and may, notwithstanding such proof, proceed to enforce his security against such third person, provided, however, that he does not take, under the bankruptcy and the security, more than the full amount of his debt.[48] The reason is that the enforcement of the security in this case does not diminish the estate of the bankrupt to which the general or unsecured creditors must look for satisfaction, and moreover, the court of bankruptcy would have no authority to interfere between the creditor and the third person, the latter being a stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings.[49] So, if a judgment is recovered against two co-defendants, and execution thereon is levied on the property of one of them, and the other is adjudged bankrupt, the judgment creditor may prove his claim against the bankrupt as unsecured.[50] And a creditor of a bankrupt partnership is not required to apply securities in his hands, which are the individual property of one of the partners upon his claim against the partnership estate.[51] The rule is the same where the creditor is additionally secured by the undertaking of a third person to guaranty the performance of the bankrupt's contract

[46] In re Meredith, 144 Fed. 230, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 331.

[47] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 16.

[48] In re Babcock, 3 Story, 393, Fed. Cas. No. 696; In re Thomas, 8 Biss. 139, 17 N. B. R. 54, Fed. Cas. No. 13,886; In re Beaver Knitting Mills, 154 Fed. 320, 83 C. C. A. 240, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Otto F. Lange Co., 170 Fed. 114, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Kinne, 5 Fed. 59; In re Sauthoff, 7 Biss. 167, 14 N. B. R. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 12,379; In re Myer, 14 N. Mex. 246, 89 Pac. 246. Where a creditor whose claim against the bankrupt was secured by a chattel mortgage on property of the bankrupt's wife, made full disclosure as to his security in the bankruptcy proceedings, and the bankrupt in effect denied any interest in the mortgaged property, the proving of the claim against the bankrupt and the receipt of a dividend thereon did not constitute a waiver of the mortgage. P. Ballantine & Sons v. Fenn, 88 Vt. 166, 92 Atl. 3.

[49] In re Thomas, 8 Biss. 139, 17 N. B. R. 54, Fed. Cas. No. 13,886.

[50] In re Headley, 97 Fed. 765, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

[51] In re Mertens, 144 Fed. 818, 75 C. C. A. 548, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362. A corporation which proves an unsecured claim against a bankrupt partnership, of which one of its stockholders is a member, does not thereby waive any lien it may have on the stock of that partner. Bank of Searcy v. Merchants' Grocer Co., 123 Ark. 403, 185 S. W. 806.

or to be surety for him. The creditor loses none of his rights or remedies against the surety by proving his debt in the bankruptcy proceedings and participating in the distribution of the estate.[52] And the surety upon a promissory note is liable in an action on the note, although the principal has been adjudged a bankrupt and the note has been filed by the payee in the bankruptcy proceedings.[53] And on the other hand, where the bankrupt was indorser on a note, and his liability has become fixed and absolute, the creditor holding the note may prove its full amount against him, notwithstanding the primary liability of the maker of the note, and even though he holds a mortgage on the latter's property, to secure it, which has not been foreclosed and which he does not surrender.[54] And where both the maker and indorser of a note are in bankruptcy, the holder may prove the amount of the note as a claim against each, and receive dividends from both estates, up to the full amount of his debt.[55] But a creditor holding a note of the bankrupt, and, as collateral security therefor, another note on which the bankrupt is also liable, is not entitled to prove his claim against the estate in bankruptcy for both, but only for the amount of the actual indebtedness to him.[56] But in all these cases, the person who is secondarily liable for the bankrupt has an interest and an equity to have the estate of the bankrupt applied as far as it will go towards the satisfaction of the debt. Thus, where a mortgage was made by the bankrupt to secure the mortgagee as a surety for him, it was held that the mortgagee was not entitled to be paid personally the amounts of the debts for which he was surety out of the bankrupt's estate, but was entitled to have such debts paid to the creditors out of the proceeds of the mortgaged property, and to be released from his liability as surety.[57]

§ 560. Joinder in Petition and Rights at Creditors' Meetings.—Secured creditors may join in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, but in making up the required jurisdictional amount ($500), such creditors are to be counted only to the extent of the excess of the claim over the value of the security held for it.[58] Under the act of 1867, it was held that the act of a secured creditor in joining in the petition without any [52] In re Levy, 2 Ben. 169, 1 N. B. R. 327, Fed. Cas. No. 8,297; Gorman v. Wright, 136 Fed. 164, 69 C. C. A. 76, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; Vette v. J. S. Merrell Drug Co., 137 Mo. App. 229, 117 S. W. 666.

[53] Gregg v. Wilson, 50 Ind. 490, 15 N. B. R. 142.

[54] In re Cram, 1 Hask. 89, 1 N. B. R. 504, Fed. Cas. No. 3,343; Gorman v. Wright, 136 Fed. 164, 69 C. C. A. 76, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

[55] National Mt. Wollaston Bank v. Porter, 122 Mass. 308.

[56] First Nat. Bank v. Eason, 149 Fed. 204, 79 C. C. A. 162, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593.

[57] In re Randolph, 187 Fed. 186, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[58] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 59b. Further as to the right of secured creditors to join in the petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, see supra, § 153.

mention of the security which he held amounted to a waiver of it.[59] But this was on the theory that under the terms of that statute, only unsecured creditors had the privilege of petitioning in bankruptcy, whereas the present act directly contemplates the joinder of secured creditors, by providing that they may be counted only to the extent that the security is deficient. It is also the right of secured creditors to vote at creditors' meetings, and they may be counted in computing the number and amount of creditors required for any action, but only when the amount of their claims exceeds the value of the security, and then only for such excess.[60] It is also provided that "claims of secured creditors may be allowed, to enable such creditors to participate in the proceedings at creditors' meetings held prior to the determination of the value of their securities, but shall be allowed for such sums only as shall to the courts seem to be owing over and above the value of their securities." [61] Where a partnership creditor holds securities on both the property of the partnership and the individual property of one of the partners (the firm and all its members being in bankruptcy together), the value of the security on the individual property of the partner need not be deducted in ascertaining the voting power of the creditor, but only the value of the security on the firm property.[62] But a mortgage creditor who, after the adjudication, sells the mortgaged premises, and himself becomes the purchaser, cannot vote on the deficiency as an unsecured creditor.[63]

§ 561. Proof of Claim as Secured.—Proof of claim by a secured creditor differs from that to be made by an unsecured creditor only in that the former must specify "what securities are held therefor." [64] If a creditor in this position wishes to participate in the bankruptcy proceedings at all, he must make himself a party by filing a proof of his claim, according to the requirements of the statute, disclosing the particular nature of the security which he holds.[65] But it is to be noted that a creditor is "secured" only when he holds a security on property of the bankrupt, or when a person secondarily liable for the bankrupt, in respect to the debt in question, holds such security on the bankrupt's assets. Hence when the creditor holds a mortgage or pledge on property belonging to a third person (the latter not having counter-security) he [59] In re Bloss, 4 N. B. R. 147, Fed. Cas. No. 1,562; In re Broich, 7 Biss. 303, 15 N. B. R. 11, Fed. Cas. No. 1,921; In re Bear, 5 Fed. 53.

[60] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 56b. And see supra, §§ 277, 288.

[61] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57e.

[62] In re Coe, Powers & Co., 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 294.

[63] In re Hunt, 17 N. B. R. 205, Fed. Cas. No. 6,884.

[64] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57a. For the manner of proving a secured debt, in person or by agent, see Official Forms Nos. 32 and 36.

[65] In re Bridgman, 1 N. B. R. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 1,866.

is not bound to disclose or mention it in his proof of debt.[66] When a creditor thus proves his debt as secured, he does not waive, abandon, or surrender the security, or in any way relinquish or prejudice his rights under it. On the contrary, this is the proper method of claiming and preserving his security.[67] "It is well settled that a creditor holding security for a debt does not in any manner prejudice his claim to the security he holds by proving his debt as a debt with security, and setting out in his proof the particulars of the security and its estimated value. He does not, by such a form of proof, release his security, and prove his debt as an unsecured debt. On the contrary, such a form of proof insists on and maintains the security."[68] And moreover, as an adjudication of bankruptcy brings the assets of the bankrupt into the custody of the court of bankruptcy for administration, a creditor of the bankrupt having a lien on such property, at that time, is not bound to follow the course of procedure prescribed by the state statute under which the lien arises, requiring certain action to be taken within a limited time for its preservation, but only to prove his claim as the bankruptcy law directs.[69] But if any other creditor is interested in objecting to the claim of the proving creditor to an alleged security, or avers that the lien claimed is invalid under the laws of the state or is a voidable preference, or otherwise should not be allowed, it is within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy or the referee (and it is the proper practice) to determine whether the claim is a secured or an unsecured claim, so far as concerns its allowance as such, though such a determination will not have the effect to deprive the creditor of his lien, if he has one, for that question can be decided only in a proper action or proceeding brought by the trustee in bankruptcy, and not on a summary hearing.[70] But the claim of a broader lien than the facts warrant will not affect the actual lien of the creditor.[71] And where a mortgage is made in good faith, prior to the commencement of the proceedings against the mortgagor, a mistake [66] Merchants' & Farmers' State Bank v. Sheridan, 156 Ill. App. 25. And see supra, § 560.

[67] In re Medina Quarry Co., 179 Fed. 929, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769; Bucknam v. Dunn, 2 Hask. 215, 16 N. B. R. 470, Fed. Cas. No. 2,096; In re Bolton, 2 Ben. 189, 1 N. B. R. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 1,614; Kohout v. Chaloupka, 69 Neb. 677, 96 N. W. 173; Bassett v. Thackara, 72 N. J. Law, 81, 60 Atl. 39. A creditor of a bankrupt corporation whose debt is secured by a valid pledge of its mortgage bonds is not required to prove his claim as a general creditor to entitle him to have his bonds participate in the mortgage fund. Butterfield v. Woodman, 223 Fed. 956, 139 C. C. A. 436, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

[68] In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830.

[69] In re Falls City Shirt Mfg. Co., 98 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

[70] In re Quinn, 165 Fed. 144, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264; In re Cramond, 145 Fed. 966, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; In re Braselton, 169 Fed. 960, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Harrison, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 541.

[71] McKinsey v. Harding, 4 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 8,866.

in the description of the premises in such mortgage may be corrected as against the trustee in bankruptcy to the same extent as would have been allowed against the mortgagor.[72] But where a mortgage given by the bankrupt secures a certain note only, and not an open account, an agreement that the account should also be covered by the mortgage cannot be implied.[73] Finally, it must be remembered that mortgagees who prove their debts in the bankruptcy proceedings become creditors of the mortgagor's general estate only for the balance of the debt remaining after deducting the value of the mortgaged property.[74]

§ 562. Waiver of Security and Proof of Debt as Unsecured.—A secured creditor will not be allowed to prove his entire claim against the estate in bankruptcy without surrendering or abandoning the security.[75] But on the other hand, he cannot be required, at the instance of other creditors, to rely upon his security and prove only for the deficiency, if any. He has the option to prove his debt as unsecured.[76] The latter course, entitling him to share with others in the distribution of the general estate, may be advantageous to him, and will be permitted, if his lien is not such as can be enforced against other creditors, for want of record or otherwise,[77] or even after its validity has been attacked or decided adversely to him.[78] But if the creditor has accepted a conveyance of property in lieu of his secured claim, it is then too late for him to prove his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings or have the value of his security determined.[79] It is also a general rule that if a creditor proves the whole amount of his claim, and particularly if he accepts a dividend thereon, it places him on a par with all the general creditors, and is deemed a waiver and relinquishment of any security which he may [72] Schultze v. Bolting, 8 Biss. 174, 17 N. B. R. 167, Fed. Cas. No. 12,489.

[73] In re Johnson, 125 Fed. 838, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138.

[74] McHenry v. Société Française, 95 U. S. 58, 24 L. Ed. 370; In re Little, 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681.

[75] In re Norris, 2 Hask. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 10,303; In re Jaycox, 8 N. B. R. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 7,240; In re Granger, 8 N. B. R. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 5,684; In re High, 3 N. B. R. 191, Fed. Cas. No. 6,473; In re Holbrook, 2 Low. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 6,588.

[76] In re Little, 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; Stewart-Noble Drug Co. v. Bishop-Babcock-Becker Co., 62 Colo. 197, 162 Pac. 159; In re Interborough Realty Co., 223 Fed. 646, 139 C. C. A. 300, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

[77] Post v. Berry, 175 Fed. 564, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699; In re Burlage Bros., 169 Fed. 1006, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 410.

[78] McAleer v. People's Bank, 202 Ala. 256, 80 South. 94; In re Vogt (D. C.) 188 Fed. 764; In re Moyer (D. C.) 97 Fed. 324.

[79] In re M. I. Hibbler Mach. Supply Co. (D. C.) 192 Fed. 741, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612. See Beal-Burrow Dry Goods Co. v. Talburt, 139 Ark. 113, 213 S. W. 20. Where plaintiff had a negotiated note given it by defendant and sent him a check with the notation "To be used in part renewal of note," proving up in bankruptcy the note, which had not been taken up as directed, did not extinguish plaintiff's claim for the amount of the check. R. S. Howard Co. v. International Bank of St. Louis, 198 Mo. App. 284, 200 S. W. 91.

have held.[80] But a creditor cannot be deprived of the benefit of a lien by the unauthorized filing of his claim as an unsecured debt.[81] And there is no presumption on appeal that he intentionally omitted to disclose the existence of his security, and thereby waived it.[82] Nor will such a waiver be inferred from doubtful or inexplicit terms in the statement of proof. Thus, if the proof shows that the debt in question has been reduced to judgment and that the judgment is in force, but omits to state that the judgment is a lien upon real estate (such being the fact) it does not amount to a proof of the debt as unsecured with a consequent waiver of the lien.[83] If the trustee in bankruptcy does not choose to take advantage of such a waiver of security, probably the other creditors may insist upon it, but not a subsequent mortgagee who has not proved his debt in the bankruptcy proceedings,[84] and certainly not the bankrupt himself.[85] And if the holder of a note, the indorser of which is secured by a mortgage, proves the note as unsecured, the mortgage is not thereby extinguished, but the trustee in bankruptcy will be subrogated to the rights of the holder.[86]

§ 563. Same; Amendment of Proof to Claim Security.—If a secured creditor proves his claim as unsecured, but does so through mistake or inadvertence or ignorance of his legal rights, and without being aware of the effect which such a course may have as a waiver or abandonment of his security, he should not be compelled to forego the benefit of the security and participate as a general creditor, but it is in the discretion of the court to permit him to withdraw his proof and rely upon the security, or to amend the proof by stating the fact and the particulars of the security, and this permission will ordinarily be granted where [80] In re Burr Mfg. & Supply Co., 217 Fed. 16, 133 C. C. A. 126; United States Trust Co. v. Gordon, 216 Fed. 929, 133 C. C. A. 117, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Luber (D. C.) 261 Fed. 221, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292; First Nat. Bank of Waterloo v. Exchange Nat. Bank, 179 App. Div. 22, 153 N. Y. Supp. 818, 164 N. Y. Supp. 1092; In re Fisk & Robinson, 185 Fed. 974; White v. Crawford, 9 Fed. 371; In re Spring, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 509; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Comstock, 55 N. Y. 24, 14 Am. Rep. 168, 11 N. B. R. 235; Jones v. Hawkins, 60 Ga. 52; Heard v. Jones, 56 Ga. 271, 15 N. B. R. 402; Shorten v. Booth, 32 La. Ann. 397; In re Meyers, 2 Ben. 424, 1 N. B. R. 581, Fed. Cas. No. 9,518; Wallace v. Conrad, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 329, 3 N. B. R. 41; Ex parte Morris, 2 Low. 424, 16 N. B. R. 572, Fed. Cas. No. 9,823. Compare McAlpin v. Lee, 57 Ga. 281; Johnson v. Worden, 47 Vt. 457, 13 N. B. R. 335. But where a creditor having an aggregate claim, made up of several items, for one or more of which, but not all, he has a lien on assets of the estate in bankruptcy, receives a dividend on the whole amount of his claim, this does not estop him from afterwards asserting the lien. Brown Bros. Co. v. Smith Bros. Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 475, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30.

[81] In re Bear (D. C.) 8 Fed. 429.

[82] Hatch v. Seeley, 37 Iowa, 493, 13 N. B. R. 380.

[83] Sedgwick v. Stewart, 9 Ben. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 12,625.

[84] Cook v. Farrington, 104 Mass. 212.

[85] Starks v. Curd, 88 Ky. 164, 10 S. W. 419.

[86] Hiscock v. Jaycox, 12 N. B. R. 507, Fed. Cas. No. 6,531.

no fraud appears and no one else will be prejudiced in his rights.[87] But the rule is more strict when the proceedings have advanced so far that a dividend has been declared and the creditor has received his share of it. Here it is said that an amendment will be allowed only in case of mistake or ignorance, and in the absence of all fraud, and where all persons can be placed in statu quo, and the creditor seeking to amend must refund a proportional part of the dividend, and pay the costs of his application.[88]

§ 564. Settling Value of Security.—"The value of securities held by secured creditors shall be determined by converting the same into money according to the terms of the agreement pursuant to which such securities were delivered to such creditors, or by such creditors and the trustee, by agreement, arbitration, compromise, or litigation, as the court may direct, and the amount of such value shall be credited upon such claims, and a dividend shall be paid only on the unpaid balance." [89] This statutory rule applies where a creditor claims a lien on property which has been set apart to the bankrupt as exempt.[90] Jurisdiction is vested in the bankruptcy court to liquidate liens on the bankrupt's estate, and to determine, in the exercise of a sound discretion, in what manner disputes as to the value of securities shall be settled.[91] And if a

[87] In re Weaver, 144 Fed. 229, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Wilder, 101 Fed. 104; In re Falls City Shirt Mfg. Co., 98 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re Friedman, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 208; In re Richard, 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Bear, 8 Fed. 429; In re Van Buren, 2 Fed. 643; In re Brand, 2 Hughes, 334, 3 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 1,809; Ex parte Harwood, Crabbe, 496, Fed. Cas. No. 6,185; In re McConnell, 9 N. B. R. 387, Fed. Cas. No. 8,712; Ex parte Lapsley, Fed. Cas. No. 8,083; Phillips v. Bowdoin, 52 Ga. 544, 14 N. B. R. 43; Britton v. Thomas, 238 Fed. 125, 151 C. C. A. 201, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

[88] In re Parkes, 10 N. B. R. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754; In re Kaufman, 8 Ben. 394, Fed. Cas. No. 7,626.

[89] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57h. Officers of a corporation who were sureties for it, and who paid the obligation and received the bonds which had been given as collateral security therefor, can claim on the bonds, in the bankruptcy of the corporation, only the amount paid by them, and not the face value of the bonds, the latter sum being much greater. Sauve v. Fleschutz, 219 Fed. 542, 135 C. C. A. 310, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49. But see In re Anger Baking Co., 228 Fed. 181, 142 C. C. A. 537, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261, holding that a pledgee of notes of a bankrupt may prove for their full amount, although the debt secured is less, where that is necessary to cover his claim. And where indorsers of the bankrupt's notes paid them, they are entitled to prove, as against the bankrupt's estate, the face value of the notes, regardless of any amount they may have received on foreclosure of a security mortgage, applying the proceeds on the balance of the claim. In re Astoroga Paper Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 792, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751. The value of collateral deposited by a bankrupt to secure a note is the amount realized from the sale of such collateral, where the creditor has disposed of it, and not the value of the collateral at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, where that was much less. In re Isaacs, 246 Fed. 820, 159 C. C. A. 122, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468.

[90] In re Little (D. C.) 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681.

[91] In re Addison, 3 Hughes, 430, Fed. Cas. No. 76; In re Winn, 1 N. B. R. 499, Fed. Cas. No. 17,876.

creditor voluntarily appears in the court of bankruptcy and asks the aid of the court for the enforcement of a lien which he claims on the bankrupt's property, the court thereby acquires jurisdiction to proceed and dispose of the whole matter in a summary way.[92] The intention of the statute seems to be that, if the creditor does not desire to foreclose his lien or realize on the security held, and the trustee does not deem it advantageous for the estate to take the matter out of his hands and force a foreclosure, they shall endeavor to agree upon a valuation of the security, and may, if the court so directs, submit the matter to arbitration. But if they cannot agree, the creditor has the right to have the valuation fixed by litigation before the referee.[93] Or if the trustee has received or collected securities pledged, the court may, on petition of the pledgee, direct the trustee to apply the proceeds for the benefit of the pledgee.[94] Or if the parties have agreed on a valuation of the security, and thereafter new facts are developed or occur, which show the valuation to have been erroneous, the court may order a new valuation to be made, if such a course is manifestly in furtherance of justice and the rights of the parties in interest.[95] Ordinarily, no steps will be taken towards compelling the valuation and application of a security until a trustee of the estate has been appointed, since the general creditors are to be represented by that officer, and it may be important for him to exercise his judgment as to the best manner of dealing with the situation.[96] Much may depend, in such cases, upon the sound discretion of the trustee. But his duty is only to the general or unsecured creditors. Hence if a particular piece of property will be wholly absorbed in satisfying an established first lien on it, the trustee is under no duty to ascertain the validity of subsequent liens.[97] But if it becomes necessary for him to carry the matter into the courts, he may file a bill against all incumbrancers, with the object of ascertaining the validity, priority, and amount of their several claims.[98] And in one case, where the creditor relied on the lien of a judgment, but it was represented to the trustee that the bankrupt was insane at the time of the service of process in the suit and at the date of the judgment, it was held that this, if true, was matter of fact which would render the judgment erroneous, and that the trustee should go into the court where it was rendered and sue out a writ of error coram nobis.[99]

[92] In re Worthington, 14 N. B. R. 388, Fed. Cas. No. 18,052.

[93] In re Davison, 179 Fed. 750, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460.

[94] In re Wiley, 4 Biss. 171, Fed. Cas. No. 17,655.

[95] In re Newland, 7 Ben. 63, 9 N. B. R. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 10,171.

[96] In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830.

[97] Mattocks v. Farrington, 2 Hask. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 9,298.

[98] McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 415, Fed. Cas. No. 8,886.

[99] McKinsey v. Harding, 4 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 8,866.

The manner of valuing and applying the security must depend in many cases on the particular circumstances present, the object being always to effect exact justice as between the secured creditor, on the one hand, and the body of unsecured creditors on the other hand. For instance, in one case it appeared that the creditor, after the adjudication of his debtor in bankruptcy, took out a policy of insurance on the life of the debtor as security for the debt, and paid all the premiums with his own money. He also proved his debt in bankruptcy and received dividends thereon. The bankrupt died prior to the declaration of the last dividend, and the insurance company paid the creditor in full the original amount of the debt. It was held that the creditor must pay to the trustee in bankruptcy the whole amount received from the insurance company over the sum sufficient, with the dividends and payments previously made, to pay the debt in full, but that he was entitled also to deduct the amount of premiums paid by him, with interest from the time of payment.[100]

In regard to the costs and expenses of realizing on securities, the creditor should not ordinarily be charged with more than he would have had to expend if he had effected a foreclosure independently of the bankruptcy proceedings. But on the other hand, the estate in bankruptcy should not be burdened with expense where it gains no corresponding advantage. Thus, where a mortgage creditor attempted to foreclose his mortgage in a state court, but without leave of the bankruptcy court and without joining the trustee, and the proceeding was held invalid, it was considered that attorneys' commissions and costs stipulated to be paid on foreclosure should not be allowed.[101] But a mortgagee in possession is not chargeable with any part of the costs in bankruptcy, nor with the expenses of the sale of any of the property other than that on which his mortgage was a valid lien.[102]

§ 565. Claim for Deficiency and for Interest and Costs.—If the security held by a lien creditor is valued by agreement between himself and the trustee, or under the direction of the court, but the valuation is less than the amount of his debt or claim,—or if the lien is foreclosed or the security otherwise realized, and results in a deficiency,—the creditor, in either case, will be entitled to prove a claim in the bankruptcy proceedings for such deficiency or unsatisfied balance,[103] al-

[100] In re Newland, 7 Ben. 63, 9 N. B. R. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 10,171.

[101] In re Devore, 16 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 3,847.

[102] In re Eldridge, 2 Biss. 362, 4 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 4,330.

[103] McHenry v. Société Française, 95 U. S. 58, 24 L. Ed. 370; In re Rudd, 180 Fed. 312, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35; In re Ball, 123 Fed. 164, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564; In re Linforth, 87 Fed. 386; In re Letchworth, 18 Fed. 822; In re Winn, 1 N. B. R. 499, Fed. Cas. No. 17,876; In re Bolton, 2 Ben. 189, 1 N. B.

though, quoad hoc, he will not be entitled to any preference or advantage over other creditors, but simply to take his proportionate share out of the bankrupt's general assets.[104] Further, if a mortgagee forecloses within a year after the adjudication in bankruptcy, he cannot prove his claim for a deficiency after the expiration of such year, as he had the right to prove it in the first instance as a secured claim.[105] And as to his right to obtain and enforce a deficiency decree in the foreclosure proceeding, that right will be suspended pending the bankrupt's application for a discharge, and will be lost if the discharge is granted.[106] If the property is sold on foreclosure proceedings and is bid in by the lien creditor for a merely nominal sum, with no competing bid against him, or, according to some of the authorities, if his successful bid is less than the amount due, the actual value of the property may be inquired into, and he will be allowed to prove a claim, as on a deficiency, only for the difference between the amount of his original debt and the value so ascertained.[107] And some of the cases rule that a mortgagee cannot be permitted to come upon the estate for any deficiency where he proceeded to foreclose in a state court without obtaining leave of the bankruptcy court and without making the trustee a party, as this amounts to an election on his part to rely wholly on his security and stay out of the bankruptcy.[108] But other cases hold that such a claim may be allowed in

R. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 1,614; In re Grant, Fed. Cas. No. 5,690; Ex parte Dalby, 1 Low. 431, 3 N. B. R. 731, Fed. Cas. No. 3,540; In re Ruehle, 2 N. B. R. 577, Fed. Cas. No. 12,113; Watkins v. Worthington, 2 Bland. (Md.) 509; In re Clark Realty Co., 253 Fed. 938, 166 C. C. A. 38, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 403; In re Progressive Wall Paper Corp. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 143; In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; In re Bash (D. C.) 245 Fed. 808, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341. A creditor of a bankrupt corporation holding its notes secured by its mortgage bonds as collateral, after realizing from the mortgaged property, cannot prove against the general estate both the balance due on the notes and the balance due on the bonds, but is entitled to dividends only on the amount of the actual indebtedness to him. In re Battle Island Paper Co. (D. C.) 259 Fed. 921, 44 Am. Bankr Rep. 240.

[104] In re Snedaker (Utah) 4 N. B. R. 168.

[105] In re Sampter, 170 Fed. 938, 96 C. C. A. 98, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

[106] Scott v. Ellery, 142 U. S. 381, 12 Sup. Ct. 233, 35 L. Ed. 1050.

[107] In re Dix, 176 Fed. 582, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 889; In re Graves, 182 Fed. 443, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; In re Woods, 7 Fed. 665. In the case last cited, it was said that the amount of the proceeds of a subsequent sale of the property by the creditor is no test of the actual value of the property and should not be credited as such to the bankrupt, in the absence of an agreement between the parties that the creditor should sell the property and apply the proceeds towards the satisfaction of the debt. Upon a claim for the balance of a secured debt after sale of the security, the court of bankruptcy, in the absence of a legal rule in the state making the sum for which the property is bought in at a public sale conclusive of its value, is bound to consider the question of value on an allegation that the price realized at such a sale was inadequate. In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[108] In re Soltmann, 249 Fed. 455, 161 C. C. A. 413, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; In re A. J. Ellis, Inc. (D. C.) 242 Fed. 156, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Astoroga Paper Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 792, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; In re Miller, 19 N. B.

the discretion of the court.[109] And in a case where a mortgage creditor obtained permission of the bankruptcy court to foreclose his mortgage in a state court, but upon condition of waiving any personal claim for deficiency, but the creditor, for good reasons and without laches, failed to prosecute his suit to judgment, it was held that he was not bound, as by an election, to rely solely on the mortgaged property, but he might be subsequently admitted as a creditor against the estate on account of the same debt.[110]

It is also held by some of the decisions that the mortgagee of property of a bankrupt is equitably entitled to have the rents and profits of the property, collected by the trustee in bankruptcy, applied on the interest on his debt, if the security itself is insufficient,[111] particularly if he has secured an equitable lien on the rents by bill in equity and the appointment of a receiver after default.[112] But this is not undisputed, and certain other cases maintain that the mortgagee in such a case is not entitled to the rents unless, in addition to showing the insufficiency of his security, he actually intercepts and receives them.[113]

As to interest on the mortgage or other secured debt, it will ordinarily stop with the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, as debts accruing after that time are not provable in bankruptcy. Hence a secured creditor who sells the security after the filing of the petition, and finds the proceeds insufficient to pay the whole amount of his claim, is not entitled to apply such proceeds first to interest accrued since the filing of the petition, and then to the principal debt, and then prove a claim for the balance.[114] But in the exceptional case where an estate in bankruptcy is amply sufficient for the purpose, a mortgagee may be allowed full interest on his debt.[115] As to costs and fees, where these are stipulated in the mortgage to be paid in case of foreclosure by proceedings in court, they may be allowed when the security is realized on in the manner specified, but not where the property covered is sold by the trustee in bankruptcy at private sale under order of the court.[116]

R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 9,555; In re Herrick, 17 N. B. R. 335, Fed. Cas. No. 6,421.

[109] In re Moller, 14 Blatchf. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 9,700.

[110] In re Linforth, 87 Fed. 386.

[111] In re Industrial Cold Storage & Ice Co., 163 Fed. 390, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 904. And see In re Bennett, 2 Hughes, 156, 12 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 1,313; Bindseil v. Liberty Trust Co., 248 Fed. 112, 160 C. C. A. 252, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

[112] In re Snedaker (Utah) 4 N. B. R. 168.

[113] Foster v. Rhodes, 10 N. B. R. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 4,981; In re Hollenfeltz, 94 Fed. 629, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

[114] Sexton v. Dreyfus, 219 U. S. 339, 31 Sup. Ct. 256, 55 L. Ed. 244, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 363, reversing In re Kessler, 180 Fed. 979, 103 C. C. A. 582, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287, which affirmed In re Kessler & Co., 171 Fed. 751, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606.

[115] Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[116] In re Roche (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. 956, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369. And see

§ 566. Right to Rely on Security and Disregard Bankruptcy.—According to the great preponderance of authority, a secured creditor may, if he so chooses, rely entirely upon his security, refrain from proving his debt or making himself in any way a party to the proceedings in bankruptcy, and in effect disregard those proceedings altogether. It is true that he may be brought in by rule or petition, at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy or the court, and submit his security and have its value determined, if there is reason to believe that the property affected may be of greater value than the amount of his claim. But so far as it depends on the creditor's own initiative, he is not bound to file a proof of debt or take any notice of the proceedings.[117] If he has no occasion to apply to the bankruptcy court for aid in the enforcement of his lien, he may rely upon his security and omit to prove his claim, and by so doing he will lose nothing but his right to participate in the distribution of the general estate of the bankrupt.[118] "A secured creditor can resort to one of three remedies. 1. He may rely upon his security. 2. He may abandon it and prove the whole debt as unsecured, or, 3, he may be admitted only as a creditor for the balance remaining after the deduction of the value of the security. If he takes either of the two courses last named, he must of course prove his debt. But suppose he chooses to rely upon his security, there is no positive provision nor is there anything in the policy of the bankruptcy law requiring proof of the debt, unless he seeks the aid of the bankruptcy court to enforce his lien."[119] And if the creditor is in physical possession of personal property or collaterals pledged to him by the bankrupt, or chattels covered by a chattel mortgage, he cannot be compelled to surender the possession to the trustee in bankruptcy without satisfaction of his debt.[120]

There are, however, some decisions to the contrary of these propositions. It has occasionally been held that creditors secured by mort-

Gugel v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 239 Fed. 676, 152 C. C. A. 510, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160.

117 Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst., 95 U. S. 764, 24 L. Ed. 589; Ward v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 609, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 312; In re Barber, 97 Fed. 547, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; Courtney v. Fidelity Trust Co., 219 Fed. 57, 134 C. C. A. 595, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400; In re Haake, 2 Sawy. 231, 7 N. B. R. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 5,883; Jones v. Lellyet, 39 Ga. 64; Spilman v. Johnson. 27 Gratt. (Va.) 33, 16 N. B. R. 145; Selfridge v. Gill, 4 Mass. 95. As to the effect of bankruptcy on existing liens in general, see supra, §§ 363–391.

118 Cottrell v. Pierson, 2 McCrary, 390, 12 Fed. 805.

119 Wicks v. Perkins, 1 Woods, 383, 13 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 17,615.

120 Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst., 95 U. S. 764, 24 L. Ed. 589; Cadmus v. Beman, Fed. Cas. No. 2,281; In re Buntrock Clothing Co., 92 Fed. 886, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; Dallas v. Flues, 8 Phila. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 3,544.

gage, judgment, or otherwise, must prove their debts, or else they will be barred of the right to collect the same and lose the benefit of their securities.[121] And a few decisions have insisted on the right of the trustee in bankruptcy to require and demand the surrender of personal property or collaterals held by a creditor as security.[122] While these views cannot be admitted as correct, yet much must depend upon the activity and discretion of the trustee in bankruptcy. It was well said by a learned referee in bankruptcy that it is the duty of the trustee to investigate property held by creditors as security or on which they claim liens, to determine its value and find out how and by what right it is held by them, and to determine whether there is any interest in the property which may be obtained for the general creditors. And although a creditor who holds collateral security which is of less value than the amount of his debt, may not offer to prove his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings, and may disclaim all intention of taking any part therein, yet he may be ordered to appear and produce the evidences of his debt and give an account of the amount, kind, and value of the securities held by him.[123] Yet it must be remembered that "an assignee in bankruptcy represents the general or unsecured creditors, and his duties relate chiefly to their interests. He is in no respect the agent or representative of secured creditors who do not prove their claims. He need not take measures for the sale of incumbered property unless the value of the property is greater than the incumbrance. He has nothing to do with the disputes of secured creditors among themselves, unless it becomes necessary for him to interfere in order to settle their rights in the general estate, or to determine whether there is an excess of property over what is required for the purposes of the security. He cannot enforce contracts between creditors, except so far as they may directly or indirectly affect the fund he is to get into his hands for distribution under the law." [124]

But the court of bankruptcy always has jurisdiction, if the interests of the creditors at large are involved, to determine questions of liens on the property of the bankrupt or their validity or amount, and this jurisdiction may be invoked by the secured creditor himself, though [121] Davis v. Anderson, 6 N. B. R. 145. Fed. Cas. No. 3,623; In re Davis, 2 N. B. R. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 3,618.

[122] In re Cobb, 96 Fed. 821, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Huddleston, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 214. See, as an extreme exponent of this view, the case of Phelps v. Sellick, 8 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 11,079.

[123] In re Coffin, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 507.

[124] Dudley v. Easton, 104 U. S. 99, 26 L. Ed. 668.

he has not proved his debt.[125] And it cannot be said that the secured creditor has such an absolute right to disregard the proceedings in bankruptcy that he can proceed to enforce the security by the aid of the state courts without being interfered with by the trustee or the court of bankruptcy. If he brings a suit in a state court, after the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, to foreclose a mortgage or enforce any other lien, not having proved his debt or otherwise participated in the proceedings in bankruptcy, he may be enjoined from proceeding further with his suit, and such injunction may issue in a case where the trustee alleges that the mortgage or other security was fraudulent and void.[126] But still, if he takes this course under circumstances which appeared to justify it at the time, and it does not appear that other creditors were injured, it is the authority and discretion of the bankruptcy court to ratify and confirm a sale so made, as if leave to make it had first been obtained.[127]

Since the statute vests the trustee in bankruptcy with title to the bankrupt's property "as of the date when he was adjudged a bankrupt," it is held that, until that date, a lienor or pledgee is at liberty to make any disposition of or perfect any title to the property which the nature of the lien permits, and where he has converted the security into money pursuant to his contract rights, he may prove the unsatisfied balance of his claim.[128] It remains to be stated that, if the creditor relies on his security and omits to prove his claim in the bankruptcy, a discharge granted to the bankrupt will not be a bar or defense to any proceedings to enforce the lien, but will preclude the creditor from setting up any claim for a deficiency.[129]

§ 567. Foreclosure by Secured Creditor Independently of Bankruptcy.—A mortgagee or other lien creditor may prosecute a suit in a state court for the establishment and enforcement of his lien without regard to the pendency of proceedings in bankruptcy against the debtor, provided that he has not made himself a party to those proceedings and subjected himself to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy by prov-

[125] In re High, 3 N. B. R. 191, Fed. Cas. No. 6,473.

[126] Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; In re Snedaker (Utah) 3 N. B. R. 629; In re Brooks, 91 Fed. 508, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830. See Barstow v. Peckham, 5 N. B. R. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 1,064.

[127] Bradley v. Adams Exp. Co., 3 Fed. 895.

[128] In re Mertens, 144 Fed. 818, 75 C. C. A. 548, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

[129] Dixon v. Barnum, 3 Hughes, 207, Fed. Cas. No. 3,928; Pease v. Ritchie, 132 Ill. 638, 24 N. E. 433, 8 L. R. A. 566; Cohn v. Colby, 57 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 168; Barnett v. Salyers (Ky.) 12 S. W. 303; Kinloch v. Savage, Speer, Eq. (S. C.) 464.

ing his claim or otherwise, and provided that no action is taken by the trustee in bankruptcy to interfere with such suit, nor any order to that effect issued by the bankruptcy court.[130] And particularly if foreclosure proceedings have proceeded in a state court so far as the rendition of a judgment or decree before any adjudication in bankruptcy is made, the whole matter is then within the exclusive jurisdiction of the state court, and the execution of the decree will not be stayed or enjoined.[131] There is, however, an interval during which it would be unsafe for the creditor to proceed in this manner, and during which other creditors would have good ground for applying to the bankruptcy court to stay his hand. This is the time which elapses between the adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee. Since that officer, when appointed, will be under the duty of investigating the security and the property which it is alleged to cover, and of determining whether there is any equity which can be made available for the general creditors, a sale made before he is qualified will be at least voidable as against him.[132] And some of the cases hold that the trustee will not be barred or in any way affected by a decree of foreclosure if he was not joined as a party in the suit in which it was rendered, since he succeeds in title to the equity of redemption of the bankrupt.[133] And since all property of the bankrupt is at least constructively in the possession of the trustee, a chattel mortgagee cannot take possession of the property covered, after the appointment of the trustee, unless it be with the consent of the latter. Possession so taken is not lawful and cannot be retained against the demand of the trustee for the surrender of the [130] Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734, 24 L. Ed. 136; In re Roseberry, 8 Biss. 112, 16 N. B. R. 340, Fed. Cas. No. 12,052; Sedgwick v. Grinnell, 9 Ben. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 12,612; In re Davis, 1 Sawy. 260, 4 N. B. R. 715, Fed. Cas. No. 3,620; In re Smith, 2 Ben. 432, 1 N. B. R. 599, Fed. Cas. No. 12,973; Swope v. Arnold, 5 N. B. R. 148, Fed. Cas. No. 13,702; Yeadon v. Planters' & Mechanics' Bank, Fed. Cas. No. 18,130; Brown v. Gibbons, 37 Iowa, 654, 13 N. B. R. 407; Hayes v. Dickinson, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 277, 15 N. B. R. 350; Barber v. Terrell, 54 Ga. 146; Cumming v. Clegg, 52 Ga. 605, 14 N. B. R. 49; Winship v. Phillips, 52 Ga. 593, 14 N. B. R. 50; Hall v. Bliss, 118 Mass. 554, 19 Am. Rep. 476, 14 N. B. R. 329; Hatcher v. Jones, 53 Ga. 208, 14 N. B. R. 387; Biddle's Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 13, 9 N. B. R. 144; Green v. Arbuthnot, 4 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 357. Further as to foreclosure and sale by secured creditor, see, supra, §§ 387, 390. Contra, see In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117; Ex parte Taylor, 1 Hughes, 617, 16 N. B. R. 40, Fed. Cas. No. 13,773; Blum v. Ellis, 73 N. C. 293, 13 N. B. R. 345; In re Gerdes, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 131; Stewart-Noble Drug Co. v. Bishop-Babcock-Becker Co., 62 Colo. 197, 162 Pac. 159.

[131] In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; In re Holloway, 93 Fed. 638, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659. See Callagan v. American Trust & Savings Bank, 196 Ill. App. 102.

[132] In re Brooks, 91 Fed. 508, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; Taylor v. Robertson, 21 Fed. 209.

[133] Barron v. Newberry, 1 Biss. 149, Fed. Cas. No. 1,056; Townshend v. Thomson, 60 N. Y. Super. Ct. 454, 18 N. Y. Supp. 870; Griffin v. Hodshire, 119 Ind. 235, 21 N. E. 741.

property.[134] But the adjudication is no bar to an ejectment by a mortgagee against a third person, not connected with the trustee in bankruptcy, even though such suit is brought without permission of the court of bankruptcy, where the trustee never assumed possession of nor intermeddled with the estate affected.[135] And in general, if the trustee is satisfied that the secured creditor's claim is valid and that the property covered is of no greater value than will be sufficient to pay it, he may abandon the property to the creditor;[136] and when this is done it is perfectly permissible for the creditor to proceed as if no proceeding in bankruptcy were pending, and for a state court to take and exercise jurisdiction without regard to such proceeding;[137] and such abandonment may be presumed when the trustee takes no steps to bring the property within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy for administration,[138] or when he permits a pending foreclosure suit to proceed without objection or intervention.[139] As for the court of bankruptcy, it will, in general, interfere with the creditor's proceedings only where the interests of the general creditors will be materially affected or where there is controversy as to the validity of the alleged lien.[140] In the absence of such circumstances, it may permit the creditor to proceed in his own way and allow him to make a sale of the property.[141] But still, even in such a case, if any fraud is discoverable in the sale, the bankruptcy court will not hesitate to interfere, as was done in a case where a pledgee of valuable collateral sold it to himself at a pretended auction sale for about one-sixth its nominal value, after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the pledgor, and without any other authority than the contract of pledge, and without notice to the pledgor or any other party in interest.[142] And where the mortgagee of property has proved his debt in the bankruptcy proceedings, and the court of [134] In re Gutman, 114 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Rosenberg, 3 Ben. 366, 3 N. B. R. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 12,055; Hutchings v. Muzzy Iron Works, 8 N. B. R. 458, Fed. Cas. No. 6,952.

[135] Eyster v. Gaff, 2 Colo. 228.

[136] Second Nat. Bank v. National State Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.) 367; In re Moller, 8 Ben. 526, Fed. Cas. No. 9,699.

[137] Stoddard v. Locke, 43 Vt. 574, 5 Am. Rep. 308, 9 N. B. R. 71; Second Nat. Bank v. National State Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.) 367.

[138] Crowe v. Reid, 57 Ala. 281.

[139] In re Stansfield, 4 Sawy. 334, 16 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 13,294.

[140] Goddard v. Weaver, 1 Woods, 257, 6 N. B. R. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 5,495. And see Bean v. Parker, 89 Vt. 532, 96 Atl. 17. Whether the administration of a mortgaged stock of merchandise should be left to the state court, which had taken jurisdiction, or be brought into the bankruptcy proceedings, is for the determination of the judge of the bankruptcy court. Bank of Dillon v. Murchison, 213 Fed. 147, 129 C. C. A. 499, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740.

[141] In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830; In re Sacchi, 10 Blatchf. 29, 6 N. B. R. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 12,200.

[142] In re Mertens, 134 Fed. 101, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226.

bankruptcy has made an order for the sale of the property, in a proceeding to which he was a party, he cannot then go into a state court and sue for foreclosure.[143]

Where the security takes the form of a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage, the rights of the secured creditor (beneficiary) are not materially different from those of the mortgagee in a common-law mortgage. There is some authority for the doctrine that a power of sale given in a mortgage is not a power coupled with an interest, and therefore is revoked by the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, as it would be by his death.[144] But this cannot be the case with a deed of trust by which the legal title is vested in one or more trustees for the benefit of the lawful holder of the obligation secured, since in this case nothing comes within the scope of the bankruptcy proceedings but the grantor's reversionary or equitable title.[145]

Where, prior to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, a receiver is appointed in an action in a state court to foreclose a mortgage, property in his possession cannot be taken by the trustee in bankruptcy without discharging the mortgage debt.[146] But after the appointment of the trustee, a receiver will not be appointed for the bankrupt's mortgaged land, as the trustee is clothed with like functions as a receiver.[147]

§ 568. Same; Obtaining Permission of Bankruptcy Court.—Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, there were numerous decisions to the effect that, after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, a creditor secured by a mortgage or deed of trust, or a pledge or a mechanic's lien, or holding an execution, could not proceed to enforce his security by sale of the property without the permission of the bankruptcy court first obtained, and that a sale made without such leave was voidable and would be set aside on a proper application.[148] And at least one decision under the present statute has been rendered to the same effect.[149] Fur-

[143] Levy v. Haake, 53 Cal. 267.

[144] Lockett v. Hoge, 9 N. B. R. 167, Fed. Cas. No. 8,444. And see Morris v. Davidson, 49 Ga. 361, 11 N. B. R. 454.

[145] McGready v. Harris, 54 Mo. 137, 9 N. B. R. 135. See In re Davis, 2 N. B. R. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 3,618.

[146] Davis v. Railroad Co., 1 Woods, 661, 13 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 3,648.

[147] In re Bennett, 2 Hughes, 156, 12 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 1,313.

[148] Smith v. Kehr, 2 Dill, 50, 7 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 13,071; In re Cook, 3 Biss. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 3,151; In re McGilton, 3 Biss. 144, 7 N. B. R. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 8,798; Lee v. Franklin Avenue German Sav. Inst., 3 N. B. R. 218, Fed. Cas. No. 8,188; Phelps v. Sellick, 8 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 11,079; Dooley v. Virginia Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 2 Hughes, 482, Fed. Cas. No. 3,998; The Skylark, 4 Biss. 388, Fed. Cas. No. 12,929; Stemmons v. Burford, 39 Tex. 352; In re Needham, Fed. Cas. No. 10,081a; Société d'Epargnes v. McHenry, 49 Cal. 351. Contra, In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830; In re Moller, 14 Blatchf. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 9,700.

[149] In re Emslie (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 291, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

ther, it was held that, in order to entitle a mortgagee to apply for leave to foreclose in another court, he must first prove his debt, and his petition for leave must fully describe his debt, its nature and amount, and the property affected, the other incumbrances, if any, and the actual value of the property; and if the value of the property was greater than the incumbrances, the petition must make it appear that the rights of the creditor could not be fully protected by a sale made by the trustee in bankruptcy,[150] and the creditor must notify the trustee of his application, failing which it should be dismissed.[151] But the Supreme Court refused to accept or sanction this doctrine, and held that the lienor was entitled to perfect his title and enforce his rights as though no proceeding in bankruptcy had been commenced, and without first applying to the bankruptcy court for leave,[152] and the best modern decisions accord with this last view.[153]

§ 569. Same; Authority of Bankruptcy Court to Stay or Enjoin Proceedings.—The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to "assume the entire administration of the estate of the debtor, to determine all questions touching the existence of liens thereon, and to ascertain and settle the amount of such liens, and make provision for the liquidation and settlement thereof; and as incidental to this, it has ample power to restrain a claimant of such lien from proceeding elsewhere to enforce his lien."[154] And it is generally proper so to enjoin the secured creditor when the value of the property exceeds the amount secured by the mortgage or other lien, or where the validity or amount of the lien is disputed, or there is danger that the property may be sacrificed, or where the course taken by the secured creditor would be prejudicial to the interests of the general body of creditors.[155] And where there is no

[150] In re Sabin, 9 N. B. R. 383, Fed. Cas. No. 12,193.

[151] In re Frizelle, 5 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 5,133.

[152] Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. Ed. 403; Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734, 24 L. Ed. 136.

[153] In re Mertens, 144 Fed. 818, 75 C. C. A. 548, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

[154] In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 372, 6 N. B. R. 403, Fed. Cas. No. 2,801.

[155] In re San Gabriel Sanatorium Co. (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 310, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197; In re Pittelkow, 92 Fed. 901. 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 479; In re Snedaker (Utah) 3 N. B. R. 629; In re Iron Mountain Co., 9 Blatchf. 320, 4 N. B. R. 645, Fed. Cas. No. 7,065; The Skylark, 4 Biss. 388, Fed. Cas. No. 12,929; McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 185, Fed. Cas. No. 8,885; Platt v. Dickenson, Fed. Cas. No. 11,216a; In re Kerosene Oil Co., 3 Ben. 35, 2 N. B. R. 528, Fed. Cas. No. 7,725; In re Hanna, 4 Ben. 469, 4 N. B. R. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 6,026; Getz v. First Nat. Bank, Fed. Cas. No. 5,374; In re New York Kerosene Oil Co., 3 N. B. R. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 10,206; Foster v. Ames, 1 Low. 313, 2 N. B. R. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 4,965; In re Brinkman, 7 N. B. R. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 1,884; Whitman v. Butler, 8 N. B. R. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 17,579; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill, 497. 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; McKay v. Funk, 37 Iowa, 661, 13 N. B. R. 334; Markson v. Haney, 47 Ind. 31, 12 N. B. R. 484.

dispute as to the title to the property but only a question as to the enforcement of a lien upon it, a formal or plenary proceeding is not necessary, but the petition to enjoin the creditor from foreclosing may be heard and determined in a summary manner.[156] But courts of bankruptcy will be chary of interfering with a creditor who is proceeding to enforce an admittedly valid lien in the manner ordinarily appropriate for that purpose. The drastic step of enjoining him will be taken only when it is necessary to protect an equity of the bankrupt or to prevent a sacrifice of, or serious injury to, the interests of the creditors at large.[157] Hence, if it is clearly shown that the property affected is of no value beyond the admitted incumbrances upon it, so that there is nothing to be gained for the general creditors, an injunction will be refused, or, if issued, will be dissolved.[158] And a trustee in bankruptcy cannot have an injunction against a foreclosure in a state court of a mortgage against the bankrupt, where he appeared and permitted the proceedings to advance to a final adjudication, and no injury is done thereby to the estate of the bankrupt.[159]

§ 570. Redemption of Property by Trustee.—A trustee in bankruptcy is vested with such an interest in the mortgaged real estate of the bankrupt as entitles him to pay off the mortgage debt and have the mortgage assigned to himself or to a person designated by him, although it is not in process of foreclosure, where it is shown that such a course will be for the benefit of the estate, by enabling him to sell the property to better advantage; and the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction, on his petition, to compel the mortgagee to accept payment and execute the assignment.[160] The procedure for this purpose has been prescribed as follows: "Whenever it may be deemed for the benefit of an estate of a bankrupt to redeem and discharge any mortgage or other pledge, or deposit or lien, upon any property real or personal, ... the trustee, or the bankrupt, or any creditor who has proved his debt, may file his petition therefor, and thereupon the court shall appoint a suitable time and place for the hearing thereof, notice of which shall be given as the court shall direct, so that all creditors and other persons interested may appear and show cause, if any they have, why

[156] In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 372, 6 N. B. R. 403, Fed. Cas. No. 2,801.

[157] In re Davis, 8 N. B. R. 167, Fed. Cas. No. 3,619; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Pennington v. Sale, 1 N. B. R. 572, Fed. Cas. No. 10,939; In re Wilbur, 1 Ben. 527, 3 N. B. R. 276, Fed. Cas. No. 17,633.

[158] In re O'Malley, Fed. Cas. No. 10,507a; In re Iron Mountain Co., 9 Blatchf. 320, 4 N. B. R. 645, Fed. Cas. No. 7,065; McLean v. Rockey, 3 McLean, 235, Fed. Cas. No. 8,891.

[159] Augustine v. McFarland, 13 N. B. R. 7, Fed. Cas. No. 648.

[160] In re Bacon, 132 Fed. 157, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re Straub, 158 Fed.

an order should not be passed by the court upon the petition authorizing such act on the part of the trustee." [161] Where payment of an alleged specific lien is made by a bankrupt's trustee after notice to all creditors and without objection, a general judgment creditor claiming a prior lien cannot thereafter object, the rule being that lien creditors who are not prompt and persistent in asserting their rights may lose them.[162]

§ 571. Sale of Property by order of Bankruptcy Court.—The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction and power to dispose of incumbered property of the bankrupt in any manner deemed best for the interests of all concerned. It may order such property to be sold by the trustee in bankruptcy, and may direct the sale to be made subject to a particular lien, admitted to be valid, or free of all liens and incumbrances, and in the latter case the proceeds of the sale will be brought into court for distribution to those entitled, and any valid lien will be transferred from the property to the fund in court.[163] And this action may be taken not only at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy, but the lien creditor himself may petition the court to take charge of the property and order its sale, or for leave to conduct the sale himself, in either case first proving his debt and making at least a prima facie showing as to the validity and priority of his lien.[164] An order of the bankruptcy court so made will oust the jurisdiction of the state courts to foreclose the lien in the ordinary way.[165] But it can only be justified by the existence of an equity in the property which can be made available for the general creditors. And hence, if it is quite clear that the property is not worth anything more than the amount of the mortgage or other incumbrance upon it, the court will not order its sale, but will leave the creditor to deal with it in his own way.[166] If, however, a sale has been ordered and made and the proceeds brought into court, all questions concerning the right of the creditor to payment out of the fund, or the amount to which he is entitled, must be determined by the bankruptcy

375, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808; Foster v. Ames, 1 Low. 313, 2 N. B. R. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 4,965. And see supra, § 305.

[161] General Order in Bankruptcy, No. 28.

[162] In re Torchia, 185 Fed. 576, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188.

[163] In re Booth, 96 Fed. 943, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Pittelkow, 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 479; In re Schnepf, 2 Ben. 72, 1 N. B. R. 190, Fed. Cas. No. 12,471; In re Bowie, 1 N. B. R. 628, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728; In re Hambright, 2 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 5,973; Davis v. Anderson, 6 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 3,623; In re Salmons, 2 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 12,268; Second Nat. Bank v. National State Bank, 10 Bush (Ky.) 367, 11 N. B. R. 49. And see supra, §§ 470, 471.

[164] In re Stewart, 1 N. B. R. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 13,418; In re Bigelow, 2 Ben. 480, 1 N. B. R. 632, Fed. Cas. No. 1,396.

[165] In re Devore, 16 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 3,847.

[166] In re Lambert, 2 N. B. R. 426, Fed. Cas. No. 8,026; Foster v. Ames, 1 Low. 313, 2 N. B. R. 455, Fed. Cas. No. 4,965.

court on a petition for distribution, not by a suit at law.[167] And if the property does not bring as much as the amount of the lien, the creditor is not entitled to be paid in full out of the estate as holding a privileged debt; in other words, he cannot come upon the general funds of the estate for the deficiency in the character of a lien creditor, though he may prove a claim for such deficiency as a general or unsecured creditor.[168] And even ahead of the claim of the lien creditor, the proper costs and expenses of the sale must be paid out of the proceeds.[169]

§ 572. Marshalling Assets.—As among the various secured creditors of a bankrupt, the general equitable principle of marshalling securities will be applied, so that a creditor having security on two or more funds or properties will be required to exhaust that on which his lien stands alone, before proceeding against that on which other creditors beside himself have liens.[170] Thus, where a creditor held several judgment notes against a debtor and also some mortgages and two insurance policies as collateral, and caused judgment to be entered on the notes and execution issued thereon, and shortly afterwards a petition was filed against the debtor and he was adjudged bankrupt, it was held that the court had power so to marshal the assets as to require such creditor to foreclose a mortgage before resorting to the general fund.[171] But where the purchaser of a tract of land gave a mortgage back covering the entire property and afterwards divided it into lots, and sold some of them, and others remained on his hands at the time of his adjudication in bankruptcy, and these were sold by the trustee in bankruptcy discharged of incumbrances, thus displacing the lien of a second mortgage which covered these lots only, it was held that the fund belonged to the first mortgagee and not to the second. The second mortgagee attempted to invoke the equitable principle that where several pieces of real estate, subject to a common incumbrance, are successively aliened, they are liable for the incumbrance in the inverse order of alienation. But the court said that there was here but one fund for distribution, and on that the senior mortgage was unquestionably the prior lien, and that the junior mortgagee must seek subrogation and indemnity in another proceeding.[172]

[167] In re Masterson, 4 N. B. R. 553, Fed. Cas. No. 9,268.

[168] In re Purcell, 2 Ben. 485, 2 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 11,469.

[169] In re Baughman, 163 Fed. 669, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Ellerhorst, 2 Sawy. 219, 7 N. B. R. 49, Fed. Cas. No. 4,380; In re Dumont, 4 N. B. R. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 4,127.

[170] In re Sauthoff, 7 Biss. 167, 14 N. B. R. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 12,379; In re Bowler, 2 Hughes, 319, Fed. Cas. No. 1,735; McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 4 McLean, 430, Fed. Cas. No. 8,889. And see In re Thompson (D. C.) 208 Fed. 207, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

[171] In re Sauthoff, 7 Biss. 167, 14 N. B. R. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 12,379.

[172] In re Carothers, 12 Fed. 692.

CHAPTER XXIX

PREFERENCES AND PREFERRED CREDITORS

§ 573. Preferences at Common Law.—At common law, and except as expressly forbidden by statute, an insolvent debtor has the right to prefer one creditor over others by a payment, transfer, or pledge of property which will satisfy that creditor in full or to a greater extent than other creditors; and although such a preference may be inherently unjust, and may prevent other creditors from collecting their debts, yet it is not fraudulent or voidable if made in satisfaction of a real debt, and in good faith, with no secret arrangement for the debtor's own benefit.[1] It follows, therefore, that a preference is not voidable when made before the enactment of the bankruptcy law,[2] nor in any case unless brought plainly within the express terms of that statute. Hence payments made to the government by a United States revenue collector, within four months prior to his being adjudged a bankrupt, though actually intended to give a preference, are not within the statute; for, aside from the fact that the United States is probably not included in the term "creditor," preferential payments to the government are not expressly forbidden by the act, and the government is not bound unless expressly named.[3]

§ 574. Preferences Under Bankruptcy Act.—Preferences are defined, and provision is made for their recovery or avoidance, in two subsections of the bankruptcy act of 1898, the first of which was amended in 1903, and the second, after having been also amended in 1903, was materially changed by a further amendment in 1910. The former now reads as follows: "A person shall be deemed to have given a preference if, being insolvent, he has, within four months before the filing of the petition, or after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication, procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself in favor of any person, or made a transfer of any of his property, and the effect of the enforcement of such judgment or transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class. Where the preference consists in a transfer, such period of four months shall not expire until four months after the date of the recording or registering of the transfer, if by law such recording or registering is required." The amendment of 1903 consisted substantially in adding to the original provision the above clause as to making the four months' period run from the recording or regis-

[1] In re Terrill, 100 Fed. 778, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; Voorhees v. Blanton, 83 Fed. 234; Cary & Moen Co. v. McKey, 40 Fed. 858; Strauss v. Abrahams, 32 Fed. 310; Means v. Montgomery, 23 Fed. 421; Smith v. Craft, 11 Biss. 340, 12 Fed. 856; Bean v. Brookmire, 1 Dill. 25, 4 N. B. R. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 1,168; Forsaith v. Merritt, 1 Low. 336, 3 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 4,946; Hislop v. Hoover, 68 N. C. 141; Hafner v. Irwin, 1 Ired. (23 N. C.) 490. A preference under the Bankruptcy Act differs from a fraudulent transfer at common law, in that the former is only malum prohibitum, while the latter malum in se. Richardson v. Germania Bank (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 320, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351.

[2] In re Terrill, 100 Fed. 778, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145.

[3] Tiffany v. Morrison, 3 Colo. 43, 18 N. B. R. 365. But see Parker v. Sherman, 212 Fed. 917, 129 C. C. A. 437.

tering of the transfer. As to this, the amendatory act was held not to be retrospective.[4] The second subsection, as now in force, declares that "if a bankrupt shall have procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against him in favor of any person, or have made a transfer of any of his property, and if, at the time of the transfer, or of the entry of the judgment, or of the recording or registering of the transfer if by law recording or registering thereof is required, and being within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy or after the filing thereof and before the adjudication, the bankrupt be insolvent and the judgment or transfer then operate as a preference, and the person receiving it or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall then have reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of such judgment or transfer would effect a preference, it shall be voidable by the trustee and he may recover the property or its value from such person."[5] Where a mortgage, or any other transfer, was executed by the bankrupt to a creditor subsequent to June 25, 1910, the question whether it was a voidable preference is governed by the section above quoted as amended on that date.[6]

The bankruptcy act does not prohibit or annul all transfers of property by an insolvent debtor, but only those which are made under the special conditions and circumstances which it sets forth.[7] And a conveyance or security given to a creditor, made and operating as a preference, may even be an act of bankruptcy and yet be valid to the extent that the property or security transferred cannot be wrenched from the creditor by the trustee in bankruptcy.[8] Further, as has previously been pointed out, there is a very material difference between a fraudulent transfer and a preferential transfer.[9] And if a given transfer of property was not fraudulent in fact, the question whether it is voidable as a

[4] Murphy v. W. T. Murphy & Co., 126 Iowa, 57, 101 N. W. 486.

[5] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60; a, b, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 3, 1903 (32 Stat. 797), and Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838. This, like other provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, is for carrying out its main purpose of securing to creditors the bankrupt's entire property. Corey v. Blackwell Lumber Co., 24 Idaho, 642, 135 Pac. 742. It is of the essence of a preference that it enables the creditor to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors "of the same class." This refers to the four classes of creditors specified in § 64, namely, tax creditors, creditors for wages, creditors entitled by law to priority, and general creditors; and secured general creditors are in the same class as unsecured creditors. In re Star Spring Bed Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 176, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

[6] Ogden v. Reddish (D. C.) 200 Fed. 977, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[7] Andrews v. Kellogg, 41 Colo. 35, 92 Pac. 222; Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 145 N. C. 320, 59 S. E. 154, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 935; In re Chicago Car Equipment Co., 211 Fed. 638, 128 C. C. A. 142, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617.

[8] Ashby v. Steere, 2 Woodb. & M. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 576.

[9] Supra, § 453. And see Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co., 174 Fed. 518, 98 C. C. A. 300, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Elsey-Hemphill Carriage Co., 152 Mo. App. 401, 133 S. W. 412.

preference must be determined entirely in accordance with the express provisions of the statute.[10] And if a trustee in bankruptcy sues to set aside a transfer, alleging it to have been given as an illegal preference, he cannot recover on showing that the conveyance was void at common law or under the law of the state.[11]

§ 575. Essentials of a Voidable Preference.—The following elements of a voidable preference are enumerated by the statute: First, there must have been either an act of the debtor in procuring or suffering a judgment to be entered against him or making a "transfer" of any of his property, taking that term in the very wide sense in which it is defined by the bankruptcy act. Second, the debtor must have been insolvent either at the time of the transfer, or of its recording, or of the entry of the judgment. Third, these things must have concurred within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or after the filing and before the adjudication. Fourth, the judgment or transfer must operate as a preference, that is, enable the creditor to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of the same class. Fifth, the person receiving it or to be benefited by it (or his agent acting in the transaction) must have had reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the judgment or transfer would effect a preference. These various elements will be separately discussed in the following sections of this chapter. But at present it is necessary to remark that all of them must be present or concur in order to give the trustee in bankruptcy the right to recover the payment or property or avoid the transfer as a preference.[12] Further, it is necessary that the transfer or giving of se-

[10] In re Armstrong, 145 Fed. 202, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583; Sheppard-Strassheim Co. v. Black, 211 Fed. 643, 128 C. C. A. 147, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574.

[11] Cragin v. Carmichael, 2 Dill. 519, 11 N. B. R. 511, Fed. Cas. No. 3,319.

[12] First Nat. Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. 325, 22 L. Ed. 542; Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 Fed. 800, 145 C. C. A. 620, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; Smith v. Powers (D. C.) 255 Fed. 582, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303; Hagar v. Watt (D. C.) 232 Fed. 373, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; Mayes v. Palmer, 208 Fed. 97, 125 C. C. A. 325, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225; In re Starkweather & Albert (D. C.) 206 Fed. 797, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743; Sparks v. Marsh (D. C.) 177 Fed. 739, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 280; In re Gesas, 146 Fed. 734, 77 C. C. A. 291, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 466, 76 C. C. A. 236, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; Rubenstein v. Lottow, 223 Mass. 227, 111 N. E. 973; Abele v. Beacon Trust Co., 228 Mass. 438, 117 N. E. 833; Craig v. Sharp (Mo. App.) 219 S. W. 95; Newman v. Tootle-Campbell Dry Goods Co., 174 Mo. App. 528, 160 S. W. 825; Ernest Wolff Mfg. Co. v. Battreal Shoe Co., 192 Mo. App. 113, 180 S. W. 396; Corey v. Blackwell Lumber Co., 24 Idaho, 642, 135 Pac. 742; Cauthorn v. Burley State Bank, 26 Idaho, 532, 144 Pac. 1108; Soule v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Idaho, 66, 140 Pac. 1098; Baden v. Bertenshaw, 68 Kan. 32, 74 Pac. 639; Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529, 76 Pac. 243; Whitwell v. Wright, 115 N. Y. Supp. 48; Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955; M. Kahn & Bro. v. Bledsoe, 22 Okl. 666, 98 Pac. 921; Stewart v. Hoffman, 31 Mont. 184, 77 Pac. 689, 81 Pac. 3; Locke v. Winning, 3 Mass. 325. The giving of a preference must be the act of the bank-curity should be actual and in such form as to be effective if not avoided in the bankruptcy proceedings. A mere intent to give or to gain a preference is nothing at all if not accomplished by the execution of the purpose.[13] It is essential that the creditor should actually receive some portion of the bankrupt's property or assets. And though the bankrupt may have made a transfer of property, intending that the creditor should receive it and thereby be preferred, this is not enough if the creditor does not receive the property.[14] So, a creditor who has never accepted a deed of trust or mortgage which would give him a preference may disclaim all interest in it and prove his debt as unsecured.[15] And a preference cannot be created by an attempted conveyance which was originally and remains a mere and absolute nullity.[16]

Again, it must be noted that the preference must be created by the act or procurement of the debtor, not by the creditor's assertion of an existing legal right or remedy. Thus, the act of one who simply retakes the possession of property of his own which is in the possession of the bankrupt does not make him a preferred creditor.[17] And this applies to the reclamation of property originally placed in the bankrupt's hands under a contract of conditional sale reserving title in the seller until payment.[18] And so, an unpaid vendor of goods who exercises the right of stoppage in transitu does not thereby gain a preference, though it be with the consent of the debtor, for the latter cannot be considered as active in the creation of a preference merely because he assents to what he could not lawfully prevent.[19]

Next, it is essential to a preferential transfer that the bankrupt should have turned over to the creditor some portion of his own property, so that his available estate is thereby diminished.[20] And the property transferred must have been of such a nature that his creditors would have the right to subject it to the satisfaction of their claims.[21]

rupt himself. Where a receiver in bankruptcy deposits money in a checking account with a bank to which the bankrupt was indebted, and which afterwards closes its doors, this is not the giving of a preference. In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 267, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

[13] In re Bousfield & Poole Mfg. Co., 16 N. B. R. 489, Fed. Cas. No. 1,703.

[14] Aiello v. Crampton, 201 Fed. 891, 120 C. C. A. 189, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Engel v. Union Square Bank, 182 N. Y. 544, 75 N. E. 1129.

[15] In re Saunders, 2 Low. 444, Fed. Cas. No. 12,371.

[16] Rosenbluth v. De Forest & Hotchkiss Co., 85 Conn. 40, 81 Atl. 955.

[17] In re Wright-Dana Hardware Co., 205 Fed. 335, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

[18] In re Farmers' Co-operative Co., 202 Fed. 1005, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; In re Anson Mercantile Co., 203 Fed. 870; In re Levin, 173 Fed. 119, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

[19] In re Foot, 11 Blatchf. 530, 11 N. B. R. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 4,907.

[20] Mason v. National Herkimer County Bank, 172 Fed. 529, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; In re Grocers' Banking Co. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 900, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; In re Schwab (D. C.) 258 Fed. 772, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185; O'Connell v. City of Worcester, 225 Mass. 159, 114 N. E. 201.

[21] In re Leech, 171 Fed. 622, 96 C. C. A. 424, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

Hence the transfer of an exempt homestead does not come within the denunciation of the act though every other element of a preference be present, except in so far as its value may exceed the statutory limit of the exemption.[22] And an assignment (as security for a loan) of something which does not constitute legal "property" but is no more than a mere revocable license or privilege, as, a newspaper agency or route, does not constitute a preference.[23] And mere fictitious book entries, though made through collusion between the creditor and the bankrupt, for the purpose of deceiving others, but which do not succeed in such purpose and do not affect the rights of other creditors, do not constitute a preference.[24] And so of the mere giving of an indorsed note by the bankrupt, as the advantage secured by the creditor is not out of the bankrupt's estate.[25] But on the other hand, it is immaterial to whom the transfer is made, if it is meant to pay the claim of one creditor in preference to others;[26] and a transfer by a bankrupt indirectly or through a third person may constitute a preference, if made with this purpose and intent.[27] And the making of the preference and incurring its penalty are independent of any actual fraud,[28] and the result is the same whether or not the transfer is fraudulent at common law, or under the statute of fraudulent conveyances, or otherwise.[29] And the mere failure to record a deed or mortgage given as security until after the bankruptcy of the grantor does not constitute the same an unlawful preference.[30]

But there must have been a real antecedent debt or claim of the creditor to be satisfied. It is held that a contract between a bank making loans from day to day to a stockbroker and the broker, which stipulates that the day loans shall be used specifically for the release of the broker's pledged securities, that their proceeds or the proceeds of substituted securities shall be immediately deposited in the bank in repayment of the loan, and that the broker shall actually take up the pledged securities and deliver them to purchasers against payment of the price, does not create a voidable preference by the broker. For "the loan and repayment the same day should be regarded as one transaction, the fact [22] First Nat. Bank v. Lanz, 202 Fed. 117, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; First Nat. Bank of Cleveland v. Orten, 43 Okl. 325, 142 Pac. 1096.

[23] In re Martin, 200 Fed. 940, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[24] In re Steam Vehicle Co., 121 Fed. 939, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385.

[25] Dalrymple v. Hillenbrand, 62 N. Y. 5, 20 Am. Rep. 438.

[26] Bank of Wayne v. Gold, 146 App. Div. 296, 130 N. Y. Supp. 942.

[27] In re Harrison Bros., 202 Fed. 244; Wickwire v. Webster City Sav. Bank, 153 Iowa, 225, 133 N. W. 100; First Nat. Bank v. Blackburn, 256 Fed. 527, 167 C. C. A. 599, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

[28] Wright v. Cotten, 140 N. C. 1, 52 S. E. 141.

[29] Webb's Trustee v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 107 Va. 807, 60 S. E. 130; Williams v. German-American Trust Co., 219 Fed. 507, 135 C. C. A. 257, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600.

[30] In re McIntosh, 150 Fed. 546, 80 C. C. A. 250, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 169; In re Sola e Hijo (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 822, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372.

that they were not literally contemporaneous being a necessary result of the nature of the business." [31] And it is essential that the effect of the preference should enable the creditor to obtain a larger proportion of his total claim than goes to other creditors of the same class.[32] Hence there is no preference if the creditor accepts only that part of his debt to which he would be entitled if all the property liable to the debtor's debts should be apportioned among his creditors.[33] But the test is this actual receiving of a larger percentage than other creditors; it is not whether or not, in view of the obligation of sureties to pay the claim, the payment actually benefited the preferred creditor.[34] And a payment is none the less a preference because some other creditors have also obtained larger payments on their claims than they would have been entitled to in the bankruptcy proceedings.[35] But if all the creditors consented to a discrimination in the payment of claims,[36] or if they all joined in the arrangement by which the transfer was made, no one can raise the objection that an unlawful preference was created, though one creditor did secure more than his share.[37] And if there is a surplus of the estate after paying all the other creditors, the preferred creditor is entitled to what he has secured, for, as between the bankrupt and himself, the preference is not voidable.[38]

§ 576. Transferee as "Creditor" or "Person Benefited."—A transfer or security, to amount to a preference, must have been given to a [31] Ernst v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank, 201 Fed. 664, 120 C. C. A. 92, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289. But the bank obtains a preference, voidable on the subsequent bankruptcy of the brokers, where after their suspension, it receives securities to make good the brokers' obligation to the bank, with notice in terms that it is thereby receiving a preference and that the brokers are going into bankruptcy. National City Bank v. Hotchkiss, 231 U. S. 50, 34 Sup. Ct. 20, 58 L. Ed. 115, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

[32] Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 Fed. 800, 145 C. C. A. 620, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; John S. Brittain Dry Goods Co. v. Bertenshaw, 68 Kan. 734, 75 Pac. 1027; Sellers v. Hayes, 163 Ind. 422, 72 N. E. 119. Whether a payment effects a preference depends on its effect at the time when made, and not upon what other creditors receive on the final settlement. Slayton v. Drown, 93 Vt. 290, 107 Atl. 307. A preference by a bankrupt made within four months of his bankruptcy may be unlawful though only sufficient to pay a part of the indebtedness for which it is given. William Schuette & Co. v. Swank, 265 Pa. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

[33] Herzberg v. Riddle, 171 Ala. 368, 54 South. 635.

[34] Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Star Spring Bed Co., 243 Fed. 957, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. A transfer of property, having all the essential elements of a preference, is voidable although the creditor received only an indirect benefit by the satisfaction of an obligation for which he was liable as a guarantor or otherwise. Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219.

[35] In re Jacob Y. Shantz & Son Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 425, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; In re Mayo Contracting Co., 157 Fed. 469, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551.

[36] Curran v. Munger, 6 N. B. R. 33, Fed. Cas. No. 3,487.

[37] Judson v. Courier Co., 8 Fed. 422.

[38] In re McGuire, 8 Ben. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 8,813.

"creditor" or "person to be benefited thereby." Nothing is within the purview of this provision except with reference to debts which may be proved for a dividend, but, on the other hand, anything which may be proved is within its purview.[39] It is therefore not necessary that the creditor's claim should be presently due, it is sufficient if it exists as a fixed liability,[40] and a creditor who receives property in settlement of a claim not yet matured may be chargeable with accepting a preference.[41] Again, it is immaterial that the creditor may be an officer of the bankrupt corporation.[42] But a bankrupt who pays money to the creditors of his wife does not give a preference, although the effect is to reduce the percentage which would otherwise be paid to his own creditors.[43] So a person who has contracted to purchase property from the bankrupt and has made an advance payment thereon is not a "creditor" in any proper sense and the deduction of the amount of such advance from the price when payment was made on delivery is not the receiving of a preference.[44] The same is true of persons who may have a cause of action to [39] Clarke v. Rogers, 183 Fed. 518, 106 C. C. A. 64, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413. And see Bailey v. Baker Ice Mach. Co., 239 U. S. 268, 36 Sup. Ct. 50, 60 L. Ed. 275, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; In re Webb Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 258, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; Bridgeton Nat. Bank v. Way, 253 Fed. 731, 165 C. C. A. 325. A bank which has discounted notes of third persons made payable to the bankrupt and indorsed by him is a general creditor of the bankrupt, as respects the question of receiving a preference. In re Star Spring Bed Co. (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 133, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650. Though the bankrupt may have obtained money from another person by fraud, the latter has a claim against him provable in the bankruptcy proceedings and therefore is a creditor. Watchmaker v. Barnes, 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632. But the provision as to preferences has no application to owners of property, who have no claim against a bankrupt contractor, on account of possible liens by a preferred subcontractor. Jump v. Bernier, 221 Mass. 241, 108 N. E. 1027. And where a corporation, at a time when it was solvent and a going concern, declared and paid dividends to its stockholders, which were received by them in ignorance of the fact that they were really paid out of the capital stock, the trustee, in the corporation's subsequent bankruptcy, cannot recover such dividends. Carlisle v. Ottley, 143 Ga. 797, 85 S. E. 1010, L. R. A. 1917C, 395, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 573.

[40] Moody v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 138 Ill. App. 233; Burpee v. First Nat. Bank, 5 Biss. 405, 9 N. B. R. 314, Fed. Cas. No. 2,185; Bean v. Brookmire, 1 Dill. 25, 4 N. B. R. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 1,168. Extension of credit to a bankrupt for the price of stocks which were sold to it for cash will constitute the seller a general creditor, and render a mortgage given to secure the price a voidable preference. Security Trust & Sav. Bank v. Wm. R. Staats Co., 233 Fed. 514, 147 C. C. A. 400, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547.

[41] Mathews v. Riggs, 80 Me. 107, 13 Atl. 48.

[42] Cooper v. Miller (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 383, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194. Where the owner of all the stock of a trading corporation, when it was indebted and within four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against it, transferred the greater part of its bank deposit, which constituted practically its only asset, to himself in payment of alleged claims, the transaction constituted a preference. Boston West Africa Trading Co. v. Quaker City Morocco Co. (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 665, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315.

[43] In re Kayser, 177 Fed. 383, 100 C. C. A. 615, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

[44] Templeton v. Kehler, 173 Fed. 575, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41. But a husband's charge the debtor with a statutory liability for the debts of a corporation.[45] And where one partner sells to the other his entire interest in the property of the firm, the transferee is not a creditor, and the transaction is not impeachable as a preference.[46] Again, where the bankrupt feloniously or fraudulently got possession of personal property which was in the custody of a warehouseman as bailee of the owner, and, on being discovered, settled with the warehouseman by turning over money, property, or securities, this does not constitute the giving of a preference, because the warehouseman was not a creditor of the bankrupt.[47] As to the meaning of the phrase "person to be benefited thereby," it is held that a transaction which has the purpose and effect of exonerating or releasing a surety for the bankrupt "benefits" the latter within the meaning of the statute.[48] And so, a transfer of property by an insolvent debtor by means of which a note given by himself and a surety is paid, and the transferee, who had obligated himself to indemnify the surety against loss thereon, is released from his liability, is one by which such transferee is benefited.[49]

To constitute a preference, it is further necessary that the preferred creditor should be placed in position to collect a greater percentage of his claim than "any other creditor of the same class." If all the creditors of the same class are equally interested in and benefited by the transaction in question, there is no preference.[50] And it is said that the test of the classification of creditors is the percentage of their claims which they are entitled to draw out of the estate of the bankrupt. If they are entitled to receive the same percentage, they are in the same class, but if different percentages, in different classes.[51] And the fact that a debt owing by an insolvent is secured does not prevent a transfer of property by the insolvent to pay it from being preferential as to creditors not secured.[52] At least, creditors whose claims are secured by indorsement or guaranty of one or more third persons are in the same class breach of agreement to convey to his wife land purchased with her money, the title being taken in his own name, will make her a creditor, so that a conveyance in derogation of the rights of other creditors will operate as a preference. In re Kean (D. C.) 237 Fed. 682, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628.

45 Cookingham v. Ferguson, 8 Blatchf. 488, 4 N. B. R. 635, Fed. Cas. No. 3,182.

46 In re Rudnick, 102 Fed. 750, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

47 Keystone Warehouse Co. v. Bissell, 203 Fed. 652, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 213.

48 In re Sanderson, 149 Fed. 273, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871. And the rule is the same as to the accommodation indorser of the bankrupt's note. Goldman v. Cohen (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 672, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

49 Huntington v. Baskerville, 192 Fed. 813, 113 C. C. A. 137, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219.

50 Gill v. Bell's Knitting Mills, 128 App. Div. 691, 113 N. Y. Supp. 90.

51 Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

52 Horstman v. Little (Tex. Civ. App.) 88 S. W. 286.

as those whose claims are not so secured.[53] But strictly speaking, there are only two general classes of creditors, first, those who have priority and who are to be paid in full, and second, creditors who are entitled to equal dividends after the claims entitled to priority have been paid.[54] Hence, for instance, payments made by a bankrupt to a clerk within three months prior to the filing of the petition, in the absence of specific application to other debts, are to be applied in payment of the wages earned by the clerk during that time, but such payments, up to the amount of wages so earned, do not constitute a preference which must be surrendered before the clerk can prove his claim for the remainder due him, unless the bankrupt's assets are insufficient to pay all the priority claims.[55]

§ 577. Same; Guarantors, Sureties, and Indorsers.—A guarantor or surety for the bankrupt, or an indorser of his notes, or the accommodation maker of a note for his use and benefit, is a "creditor" within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, and if he receives money or security or collateral from the bankrupt to meet the obligation when it shall mature, or to secure himself against loss, under such circumstances as would constitute it a preference in other cases, he is to be treated as a preferred creditor, and must surrender his preference before being admitted to prove his debt, or may be required to surrender it at the suit of the trustee.[56] Thus, where an agreement for the indemnification of a contractor's surety assigned to the latter all the contractor's plant in the event of the contractor's being unable to complete the undertaking, and the contractor subsequently abandoned the contract and was adjudged bankrupt, the surety became a creditor from the date of the abandon-

[53] Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673. See In re Harpke, 116 Fed. 295, 54 C. C. A. 97, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535.

[54] Livingstone v. Heineman, 120 Fed. 786, 57 C. C. A. 154, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

[55] In re Flick, 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465.

[56] Cohen v. Goldman, 250 Fed. 599, 162 C. C. A. 615, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; Chapman v. Hunt (D. C.) 248 Fed. 160, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482; Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; Lazarus v. Eagan, 206 Fed. 518, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207; Paper v. Stern (C. C. A.) 198 Fed. 642, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592; Kobusch v. Hand, 156 Fed. 660, 84 C. C. A. 372, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; Stern v. Paper, 183 Fed. 228, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451; Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; In re Christopher Bailey & Son, 166 Fed. 982, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; Swarts v. Siegel, 117 Fed. 13, 54 C. C. A. 399, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; Crandall v. Coats, 133 Fed. 965, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712; Thomas v. Woodbury, 1 Hask. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 13,916; Smith v. Little, 5 Biss. 490, 9 N. B. R. 111, Fed. Cas. No. 13,072; Scammon v. Cole, 3 Cliff. 472, 5 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 12,432; Ahl v. Thorner, 2 Bond, 287, 3 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 103; Sill v. Solberg, 10 Biss. 252, 6 Fed. 468; Goldberg v. Harlan, 33 Ind. App. 465, 67 N. E. 707; Bank of Wayne v. Gold, 146 App. Div. 296, 130 N. Y. Supp. 942; Platt v. Ives, 86 Conn. 690, 86 Atl. 579; M. Kahn & Bro. v. Bledsoe, 22 Okl. 666, 98 Pac. 921; Horstman v. Little (Tex. Civ. App.) 88 S. W. 286. Compare Horton v. Bamford, 79 N. J. Eq. 356, 81 Atl. 761.

ment of the contract, within the provisions of the statute relating to preferences, although the amount of the surety's claim depended on contingencies and was not liquidated.[57] So a surety for the bankrupt who has discharged the debt, either before or after the bankruptcy, is subrogated to the rights of the creditor, but is also affected by any preference received by the creditor before payment, which inheres in the claim.[58] But where an indorser receives from the maker of the note an amount sufficient to pay a part thereof, and loans him the balance required to pay it, he will not be chargeable with taking a preference beyond the amount actually paid to him by the maker.[59] On the same principle, a creditor who receives the debtor's note or check, indorses it, and procures it to be discounted at a bank, remains a creditor within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, and the payment of the note or check to the bank after the debtor's insolvency and within four months prior to his bankruptcy, constitutes a preferential transfer of property to the indorser, which will debar him from the allowance of any claim in his favor, unless the amount so paid is first surrendered.[60] Likewise, the payment to a bank by an insolvent, within four months prior to his bankruptcy, of notes given to third persons, but which have been indorsed to and are owned by the bank, constitutes a preference given to the bank, which it must surrender before proving a claim against the estate.[61] But a note discounted by a bank without knowledge of the insolvency of the maker and in due course of business, by crediting the payee with the amount of the discount, which note in the hands of the payee and indorser would not be provable against the maker's estate in bankruptcy until certain preferences received were surrendered, is provable by the bank as a bona fide holder.[62]

§ 578. Nature and Form of Transaction.—Whether or not a given transaction amounts to a preference is to be determined by its effect in giving an undue advantage to the particular creditor, rather than by its form, for the court will look to the result and not to the way in which

[57] Wood v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 143 Fed. 424, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

[58] Livingston v. Heineman, 120 Fed. 786, 57 C. C. A. 154, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39; In re Schmechel Cloak & Suit Co., 104 Fed. 64, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719. But see In re New, 116 Fed. 116, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

[59] Thomas v. Woodbury, 1 Hask. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 13,916.

[60] Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Lyon, 121 Fed. 723, 58 C. C. A. 143, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; In re Meyer, 115 Fed. 997, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; In re Waterbury Furniture Co., 114 Fed. 255, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79. But see In re Bullock, 116 Fed. 667, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; Thomas v. Woodbury, 1 Hask. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 13,916.

[61] In re George M. Hill Co., 130 Fed. 315, 64 C. C. A. 561, 66 L. R. A. 68, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221.

[62] In re Levi, 121 Fed. 198, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Wyly, 116 Fed. 38, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

it is accomplished.[63] In regard to "transfers" of property, this word is to be taken in the very broad sense assigned to it in the first section of the bankruptcy law, where it is declared that it shall include "the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security." Hence, if the other conditions are present, any form of mortgage or other lien which is meant to give to one or more creditors an undue advantage over others, will be a voidable preference,[64] including a chattel mortgage,[65] or a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage,[66] or an unrecorded bill of sale of furniture and fixtures given by a tenant as security for past-due rent,[67] or a bill of sale of property to a creditor who has attached it.[68] So, an assignment by an insolvent trader of his stock, book accounts, and other assets to one of his creditors, the latter in return agreeing to assume and pay certain debts, is a preference if it enables that creditor to secure his own debt in full or in a larger proportion than other creditors.[69] The same is true of the assignment of a policy of life insurance,[70] or of a claim against a fire insurance company for a loss under its policy.[71] And where a mortgage is given on property under circumstances such as to render it a voidable preference, and insurance is taken out on the mort-[63] Rogers v. Fidelity Sav. Bank & Loan Co., 172 Fed. 735, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re C. J. McDonald & Sons, 178 Fed. 487, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446. A transaction by which a bankrupt changed its indebtedness to a bank, so that it matured at an earlier date, and assigned collateral, the proceeds of which the bank at such earlier date applied on the indebtedness, was held to have effected a voidable preference. Fifth Nat. Bank v. Lyttle, 250 Fed. 361, 162 C. C. A. 431, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370. A provision of law in Porto Rico gives a preferential status to debts when authenticated by acknowledgment before a notary. When this device is resorted to, with reference to a promissory note, by a creditor and an insolvent debtor within four months of his bankruptcy, to defeat the bankruptcy law, it must fail, as an attempt to create a preference. In re Vidal, 233 Fed. 733, 147 C. C. A. 499, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 783.

[64] In re Hawkins (D. C.) 243 Fed. 792, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271; McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 185, Fed. Cas. No. 8,885. A contract of conditional sale, by which the seller is allowed to retake possession of the goods in case of the buyer's default or bankruptcy, is not an unlawful preference, as the bankrupt buyer does not transfer any property or secure any antecedent debt. John Deere Plow Co. v. Edgar Farmer Store Co. (Wis.) 143 N. W. 194; Big Four Implement Co. v. Wright, 207 Fed. 535, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125.

[65] Marsh v. Walters, 220 Fed. 805, 136 C. C. A. 409, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; In re Hersey (D. C.) 171 Fed. 1004, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863; Matthews v. Westphal (C. C.) 48 Fed. 664, 1 McCrary, 446.

[66] Dean v. Davis, 212 Fed. 88, 128 C. C. A. 658, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808; May v. Le Claire (C. C.) 18 Fed. 164.

[67] In re Eckenroth, Fed. Cas. No. 4,265.

[68] Parsons v. Topliff, 119 Mass. 245, 14 N. B. R. 547.

[69] Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 Fed. 800, 145 C. C. A. 620, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; In re Gottlieb & Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 139, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; Bryant v. Wolf, 94 Misc. Rep. 683, 158 N. Y. Supp. 678; Leonard v. Springer, 174 Ill. App. 516; North v. House, 6 N. B. R. 365, Fed. Cas. No. 10,310.

[70] Barnes v. Vetterlein, 16 Fed. 218.

[71] Hanson v. W. L. Blake & Co., 155 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

gaged property in the name of the mortgagor, but at the instance and expense of the mortgagee, and, a loss occurring, the insurance is collected by the mortgagee, being less in amount than the mortgage debt, the insurance contract is no less a preference than the mortgage, and its proceeds are merely a substitute for the mortgage pro tanto, and therefore recoverable by the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy.[72] Again, a lease of a manufacturing establishment, made by an insolvent debtor to one of his creditors as part of a fraudulent scheme to place his property within the exclusive control of such creditor, and accepted by the latter with knowledge of the lessor's insolvency, and with an intention of securing to himself an advantage over the other creditors, will be set aside as a preference.[73] A preference is also involved (the other conditions being present) in the sale of a partner's interest in the business to his co-partner and the taking of the latter's notes for the price,[74] and in the act of a creditor in appropriating property in his hands under a claim of a factor's lien,[75] or an alleged vendor's lien,[76] or an agreement between the debtor and creditor enabling the latter to enforce a lien by attachment.[77]

But on the other hand, where an unpaid vendor of merchandise accepts a return thereof, instead of payment, it may be regarded as a rescission of the contract of sale, rather than as a transfer of property.[78] And an insurance effected by an insolvent debtor upon the house he occupies in pursuance of covenants in the lease is not a preference,[79] nor is the surrender of a policy of insurance under a stipulation giving such right, with a return of a part of the premium paid.[80] The same is true of the equitable lien upon funds or property arising from the acceptance of a bill of exchange.[81] And a deed of property executed by the bankrupt in pursuance of a decree of a state court, on a showing that he had misappropriated trust funds which had been finally invested in such [72] Brown City Sav. Bank v. Windsor, 198 Fed. 28; State Bank of Clearwater v. Ingram, 237 Fed. 76, 150 C. C. A. 278, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447. Compare Sullivan v. Myer, 137 Tenn. 412, 193 S. W. 124.

[73] Carter v. Hobbs, 94 Fed. 108, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224.

[74] Crampton v. Jerkowski, 2 Fed. 489; Mattocks v. Rogers, 1 Hask. 547, Fed. Cas. No. 9,300. And see Off v. Hakes, 142 Fed. 364, 73 C. C. A. 464, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

[75] Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426, 23 L. Ed. 286.

[76] In re Klingaman, 101 Fed. 691, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

[77] Samson v. Burton, 5 Ben. 325, 4 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 12,285.

[78] In re Aspinwall, 11 Fed. 136. See Ellet-Kendall Shoe Co. v. Martin, 222 Fed. 851, 138 C. C. A. 277, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502. Where a creditor obtains, in good faith, as security, a receipt for coal in the debtor's yard not separated from the common mass, he may take possession after discovering the insolvency of the debtor. Sherman v. Traders' Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. 216, Fed. Cas. No. 12,770.

[79] In re Rosenfeld, 2 N. B. R. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 12,057.

[80] In re Independent Ins. Co., 2 Low. 187, Fed. Cas. No. 7,019.

[81] In re Baxter, 28 Fed. 452.

property in his own name, is not voidable as a preference,[82] though of course it is otherwise in regard to a sale under a decree which was procured by fraud and imposition practiced on the court.[83] In another case it appeared that the bankrupt was a member of a stock exchange, the rules of which provided that, when a member became insolvent, he should assign his seat to be sold, and that the proceeds should be first applied to the payment of his debts to the members of the exchange, to the exclusion of his other creditors, but the purchaser of the seat could not become a member, or enjoy any of the privileges of membership, unless elected by the exchange. On this state of facts, it was held a member who became insolvent, complied with this rule, and was afterwards adjudged a bankrupt, was not guilty of giving a preference to those creditors whose debts were in this manner paid first; for while his incorporeal right to his seat was indeed property, yet it was subject to certain valid conditions and restrictions, including that of payment to members, and would not vest in his trustee in any event until those conditions had been complied with.[84]

It should further be remarked that a preference is none the less voidable because it was given in and as a part of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, which assignment is annulled by the adjudication in bankruptcy.[85] And where a debtor enters upon a plan of composition and compromise with all his creditors, if one of them secures full payment while the others receive less, it is a preference voidable under the bankruptcy act,[86] as, where the debtor compromises with all of his creditors except one, whom he promises to pay in full on a large extension of time, transferring to him property as security therefor.[87] But where, pursuant to a contemplated compromise settlement of a bankrupt's debts, defendant, a judgment creditor, was paid a stipulated amount to obtain a discharge of his lien, and he received the same in good faith, and it appeared that the settlement would have been completed but that the bankrupt became insane, and it was then abandoned, [82] In re Myers, 2 Hughes, 230, Fed. Cas. No. 9,984.

[83] Stern v. Louisville Trust Co., 112 Fed. 501, 50 C. C. A. 367, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305. An order in void receivership proceedings whereby the bankrupt's property was transferred to defendant, may, when made within four months of bankruptcy, be vacated as a preference. Jones v. Schaff Bros. Co., 187 Mo. App. 597, 174 S. W. 177.

[84] Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523, 24 L. Ed. 264.

[85] Stern v. Louisville Trust Co., 112 Fed. 501, 50 C. C. A. 367, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305; Wilson v. Taylor, 154 N. C. 211, 70 S. E. 286. But dividends paid by an assignee under an assignment, made within four months prior to bankruptcy, are not preferences which the creditors must surrender before proving their claims. In re Vorck (D. C.) 235 Fed. 655, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 203. See supra, §§ 441, 442.

[86] In re Amory, Fed. Cas. No. 336b; Harrison v. McLaren, 10 N. B. R. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 6,139. And see In re Jacob v. Shantz & Son Co., 205 Fed. 425, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552.

[87] Eefort v. Greely, 6 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 4,260.

it was held that the payment so received was not recoverable as a preference.[88] And several creditors may, with the aid of their debtor, conspire to gain an advantage over other creditors, by a voluntary preference, if the means used are not unlawful, and the preference is made more than four months before the bankruptcy of the debtor.[89]

§ 579. Procuring or Suffering Judgment.—By the terms of the present bankruptcy act, a person shall be deemed to have given a preference if, being insolvent, he has "procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself." Under the act of 1867, it was an act of preference if the insolvent "procured or suffered any part of his property to be attached, sequestered, or seized on execution." The important difference is that, under the existing statute, it is not necessary that the entry of a judgment should have been followed by the issue or levy of final process; it is sufficient if "the effect of the enforcement of such judgment will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class."[90] But so far as concerns the participation of the debtor himself in the transaction, the words of the statute remain the same. He must "procure or suffer" the judgment. And it was laid down by the Supreme Court that something more than passive non-resistance on the part of an insolvent debtor is necessary to invalidate a judgment and levy on his property, when the debt is due and he has no defense. In such case, there is no legal obligation on the debtor to file a petition in bankruptcy to prevent the judgment and levy, and a failure to do so is not sufficient evidence of an intent to give a preference to the judgment creditor or defeat the operation of the bankruptcy law. But very slight circumstances which tend to show the existence of an affirmative desire on the part of the bankrupt to give a preference, may, by giving color to the whole transaction, render the lien voidable as a preference.[91] It is therefore competent for a creditor to institute a suit against an insol-

[88] Templeton v. Woollens, 200 Fed. 257, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 208. And see In re Folb, 91 Fed. 107, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[89] Van Kleeck v. Miller, 19 N. B. R. 484, Fed. Cas. No. 16,860.

[90] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60a. See Moore v. John H. Smith & Sons, 205 Fed. 431, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413. The amount paid for property sold under execution within four months before the bankruptcy may be recoverable from the execution creditor as a voidable preference. Dreyer v. Kicklighter (D. C.) 228 Fed. 744, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199.

[91] Wilson v. City Bank of St. Paul, 17 Wall. 473, 21 L. Ed. 723; Parsons v. Caswell, 1 Fed. 74; Henkelman v. Smith, 42 Md. 164, 12 N. B. R. 121; Sleek v. Turner, 76 Pa. St. 142, 10 N. B. R. 580; Kemmerer v. Tool, 81 Pa. St. 467, 12 N. B. R. 334; Mason v. Warthens, 7 W. Va. 532, 14 N. B. R. 346. But see Hyde v. Corrigan, 9 N. B. R. 466, Fed. Cas. No. 6,968, distinguishing the doctrine of Wilson v. City Bank, supra, as to "passive non-resistance," on the ground that that rule is applicable only to a case where the debtor is making "an honest struggle to meet his debts and to avoid the breaking up of his business." See also In re Dibblee, 3 Ben. 283, 2 N. B. R. 617, Fed. Cas. No. 3,884.

vent debtor and to obtain judgment and issue execution, and unless the bankrupt does some act by which he has participated in some way in the action of the creditor, the preference thereby acquired is valid as against other creditors, so far as it is affected by this particular part of the statute.[92] "A creditor may pursue his insolvent debtor to judgment and execution, with full knowledge of the insolvency, notwithstanding the provisions of the bankruptcy act, provided the debtor does nothing to aid the pursuit. If there be no collusion between the debtor and the creditor, the ordinary remedies of the law are open to the latter."[93] "The mere existence of a desire on the part of a debtor, however strong such a desire, that a particular creditor may succeed by suit, judgment, execution, and levy, in obtaining a preference over other creditors, so that such preference may be maintained even as against proceedings in bankruptcy which may be subsequently commenced, is not sufficient to establish that the debtor procured or suffered his property to be taken on legal process, with intent to prefer such creditor, if the proceedings of the creditor were the usual proceedings in a suit, unaided by any act of the debtor, either by facilitating the proceedings as to time or method, [92] In re Runzi, 3 Fed. 790. But compare Golden Hill Distilling Co. v. Logue, 243 Fed. 342, 156 C. C. A. 122, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731. Where notes which had been given to a bankrupt were sold under attachment in another state, no preference resulted where there was no transfer by the bankrupt and he did not procure or suffer the judgment to be rendered. De Friece v. Bryant (D. C.) 232 Fed. 233, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

[93] Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. 360, 22 L. Ed. 568. On the difference in meaning between the two words "procure" and "suffer," the following remarks by Blatchford, J., are instructive: "There is a clearly recognized distinction between procuring and suffering. The act of 6 Geo. IV, ch. 16, § 3, provided that if any trader should 'suffer' himself to be arrested for any debt not due, or 'suffer' himself to be outlawed, or 'procure' himself to be arrested, or his goods, money, or chattels to be attached, sequestered, or taken in execution, he might be brought into bankruptcy. In Gibson v. King, 1 Car. & Marsh. 458, a creditor had brought an action against the bankrupt for a debt, and judgment had been suffered to go by default, and an execution had been issued on it, on which the bankrupt's goods had been taken, and the question arose whether 'suffering' the judgment to go by default in the action, and 'suffering' the goods to be taken on the execution on the judgment, was 'procuring' the goods to be taken in execution, within the statute. The court held that the bankrupt had 'suffered' the goods to be taken in execution, but had not 'procured' them to be so taken. The same view of the distinction between the words in the English act was taken in Gore v. Lloyd, 12 Mees. & W. 463. The distinction there maintained by Baron Alderson was that the bankrupt 'procured' his goods to be taken in execution when the initiation of the proceedings came from him, when he was the person who began to procure, when he caused the thing to be done, in the ordinary sense of the word, but that the signing, reluctantly and under strong pressure from a creditor, of a warrant to confess a judgment, under a stipulation that the warrant should not be unnecessarily put in force, was 'suffering,' and not 'procuring,' goods to be taken in execution which were taken on an execution issued on a judgment entered upon the warrant. 'The English and other decisions as to pressure by a creditor, and as to what it is to 'procure,' have no application to the question of 'suffering.'" In re Black, 2 Ben. 196, 1 N. R R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 1,457.

or by obstructing other creditors who otherwise would obtain priority." [94]

A debtor does not procure or suffer judgment who merely consents to an amicable action or revival, which gives the creditor no advantage which he could not at once have secured by adversary process,[95] or who merely agrees to give notice to a certain creditor when execution is issued against him and does so notify that creditor.[96] But a judgment by default is prima facie fraudulent and one seeking to retain a preference secured thereby must negative all the circumstances under the statute making such a transfer void.[97] And a judgment obtained by service of process on an absconding debtor who secretly returns within the jurisdiction to permit such service is procured or suffered by him, within the meaning of the statute.[98] So also if the debtor contribute to the rendition of the judgment at an earlier day than, without his aid, it could have been entered,[99] or where a member of an insolvent firm delivers a message at the request of a creditor, though unwillingly, directing an attorney to enter judgment on a judgment note which the firm had previously given,[100] or where the judgment debtor agrees that the sheriff shall place a cashier in charge of his store, and that the proceeds of each day's sales shall be paid over to the sheriff and applied on the execution.[101]

A confession of judgment, or the giving of a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, by an insolvent debtor, with the intention of preferring the particular creditor, may be a voidable preference, and especially where this course is taken for the purpose of enabling that creditor to levy his execution before other creditors can do so.[102] And it has been ruled that a debtor who voluntarily confesses judgment in favor of the creditor, and allows him to issue an execution and to make a levy and sale, resulting in the creditor becoming the purchaser, "transfers" his property within the meaning of the bankruptcy law.[103] And 94 Brown v. Jefferson County Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. 315, 9 Fed. 258.

95 Kemmerer v. Tool, 81 Pa. St. 467, 12 N. B. R. 334.

96 Gaskill v. Benton, 8 Fed. 746.

97 In re Binns, 4 Ben. 152. Fed. Cas. No. 1,422.

98 Beattie v. Gardner, 4 Ben. 479, 4 N. B. R. 323, Fed. Cas. No. 1,195.

99 Rogers v. Palmer, 102 U. S. 263, 26 L. Ed. 164.

100 In re Benton, 16 N. B. R. 75, Fed. Cas. No. 1,333.

101 In re Metzger Toy & Novelty Co., 114 Fed. 957, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307.

102 First Nat. Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. 325, 22 L. Ed. 542; Buchanan v. Smith, 16 Wall. 277, 21 L. Ed. 280; Grant v. National Bank of Auburn (D. C.) 232 Fed. 201, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; Benjamin v. Chandler, 142 Fed. 217, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439; Haughey v. Albin, 2 Bond. 244, 2 N. B. R. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 6,222; Fitch v. McGie, 2 Biss. 163, 2 N. B. R. 531, Fed. Cas. No. 4,835; Zahm v. Fry, 9 N. B. R. 546, Fed. Cas. No. 18,198; Street v. Dawson, 4 N. B. R. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 13,533.

103 Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

the same principles apply in the case of a decree entered by consent.[104] But an order or decree requiring a trustee to pay over money to his successor, made in a proceeding by the cestui que trust to have him removed on the ground of his insolvency, resulting in an adversary decree appointing a new trustee, is not a judgment "procured or suffered" by the insolvent.[105] And the same is true of a judgment which merely confirms an award made more than four months before the bankruptcy of the debtor.[106] And although a judgment by confession may be entered under such circumstances as to make it a voidable preference, yet where it was merely intended as collateral security for the aggregate amount of several existing and valid judgments, its invalidity does not in any way affect the original judgments.[107]

§ 580. Transfers of Property.—The bankruptcy act does not permit an insolvent debtor to transfer any portion of his property in kind to a creditor in settlement of the debt, though it be an honest and valid one, if the effect will be to prefer that creditor over others, and the creditor has reasonable cause to believe that such result will follow.[108] But the term "transfer," as used in the act, includes much more than the turning over of property in settlement of a claim. It is declared to mean "the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security."[109] Hence a preferential transfer of property may include a mortgage or any other kind of lien voluntarily created by the debtor,[110] or a deed of land delivered with the understanding that it is not to be recorded but held as security,[111] or a bill of sale of a stock of merchandise,[112] or an order

[104] In re Mayo Contracting Co., 157 Fed. 469, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551.

[105] Fry v. Pennsylvania Trust Co., 195 Pa. St. 343, 46 Atl. 10.

[106] In re Koslowski, 153 Fed. 823, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[107] Vogle v. Lathrop, 4 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 16,985.

[108] Sherman v. Luckhardt, 96 Mo. App. 320, 70 S. W. 388; In re House, Fed. Cas. No. 6,735. A bill of sale of all his property, executed by a person who is adjudicated a bankrupt within four months thereafter, may be set aside as a preference, though it was intended to protect his creditors. In re Einstein (D. C.) 245 Fed. 189, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 507.

[109] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 25. Where an insolvent person, adjudged bankrupt within four months afterwards, assigned accounts receivable to a creditor, who knew he was receiving a preference, the transaction is voidable by the trustee in bankruptcy. McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702.

[110] Coder v. Arts, 152 Fed. 943, 82 C. C. A. 91, 15 L. R. A. (N. S.) 372, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; MacHenry v. Dwelling Building & Loan Ass'n (D. C.) 259 Fed. 880, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234; In re Ed. W. Wright Lumber Co. (D. C.) 114 Fed. 1011, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; In re Jones (D. C.) 118 Fed. 673, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262. But the mere filing of an affidavit of renewal of a chattel mortgage within four months prior to bankruptcy of the mortgagor is not a preferential "transfer of property." In re Dagwell (D. C.) 263 Fed. 406, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

[111] Ragan v. Donovan, 189 Fed. 138, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311.

[112] W. B. Belknap & Co. v. Lyell, 89 Miss. 197, 42 South. 799. But the record-drawn by the bankrupt on a third person and accepted by the latter,[113] and an agreement to "transfer" property may be construed as an agreement to "deliver" it.[114] So, where the creditor simply takes possession of property of the debtor, meaning to satisfy his claim out of it, this may constitute a preference,[115] at least where the debtor thereupon gives the creditor a written release.[116] But a preference is not created by the act of a creditor in taking possession of collaterals deposited as security, though within four months before the bankruptcy, where the collateral was set apart years before to secure the debtor's drawing credit.[117] And a sum retained by a corporate creditor, with knowledge of the debtor's insolvency and within four months before his bankruptcy, which sum was due and owing to the bankrupt under an agreement by which the corporation, in paying its employés, was to deduct from their wages the amounts due from them to the bankrupt for supplies furnished by him to them, and was to remit to him the amount so deducted, irrespective of any indebtedness otherwise due by him to the corporation, is not a voidable preference.[118] And the performance of labor by an insolvent debtor for his creditor, for which he is given credit on his indebtedness, is not a transfer of property.[119]

A transfer may constitute a voidable preference under the act although the property is not conveyed directly to the preferred creditor, if the effect of the transaction is to enable him to secure a larger share of the debtor's estate than other creditors of the same class will receive in the bankruptcy.[120] Hence it is sufficient if the transfer is made to a third person for the creditor's benefit,[121] and a debtor cannot escape the effect of giving a preference by passing the conveyance through his wife and having her convey or mortgage it to the creditor.[122] And sim-ing of a contract of conditional sale under which a bankrupt obtained possession of property is not a transfer of property by him which could be attacked by the trustee as preferential. In re Terrell, 246 Fed. 743, 159 C. C. A. 45, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

[113] In re Hines, 144 Fed. 543, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495.

[114] Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 145 N. C. 320, 59 S. E. 154, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 935.

[115] Bailey v. Henderson, 9 Ben. 534, Fed. Cas. No. 737.

[116] Collidge v. Ayers, 76 Vt. 405, 57 Atl. 970.

[117] Sexton v. Kessler & Co., 225 U. S. 90, 32 Sup. Ct. 657, 56 L. Ed. 995, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85.

[118] Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 196 U. S. 502, 25 Sup. Ct. 339, 49 L. Ed. 571, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447.

[119] In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., 110 Fed. 738, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315.

[120] Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown, 129 Fed. 728, 64 C. C. A. 256, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111. But see this case on appeal, 196 U. S. 502, 25 Sup. Ct. 339, 49 L. Ed. 571, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447.

[121] National Bank of Newport v. National Herkimer County Bank, 225 U. S. 178, 32 Sup. Ct. 633, 56 L. Ed. 1042, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218. A conveyance of real estate within four months before bankruptcy, made by the bankrupt to a stockholder of a creditor corporation, who held the same for the company, and paid for it with money which was furnished by the company, and received back by it from the bankrupt, is a voidable preference. Golden & Co. v. Loving, 42 App. D. C. 489.

[122] Gibson v. Dobie, 5 Biss. 198, 14 N. B. R. 156. Fed. Cas. No. 5,394.

ilarly a preference is created where the creditor induces and procures a third person to lend money to the bankrupt with which the creditor's claim is to be satisfied, taking a mortgage on the bankrupt's stock in trade as security.[123] It makes no difference who the creditor may be. The officers of a corporation, for instance, may lawfully lend it money, but cannot take a preferential transfer of its property when it is insolvent.[124] As to the property affected by the transfer, it may be said that the act of a foreign creditor in obtaining a lien on property of the debtor in a foreign country may constitute a preference,[125] but since property of the bankrupt which is exempt under the laws of the state will not in any event constitute a part of his estate in bankruptcy for the purpose of distribution among the creditors, a conveyance or incumbrance of exempt property for the benefit of one particular creditor cannot be said to amount to a preference within the meaning of the statute.[126]

§ 581. Same; Transfer of Property in Substitution or Satisfaction of Lien.—No voidable preference is created where a debtor, though insolvent, transfers or surrenders to a creditor property on which the latter already has a valid lien, in satisfaction and discharge of the debt and the lien securing it, or property in substitution for that on which the lien attaches, provided the property is of no greater value than the amount of the lien, so that the debtor's general estate is not thereby depleted.[127] But it is otherwise, of course, if the value of the property transferred or surrendered is in substantial excess of the creditor's claim,[128] or if the [123] In re Beerman, 112 Fed. 663, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431.

[124] Atherton v. Emerson, 199 Mass. 199, 85 N. E. 530; Moody v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 126 Ill. App. 68; Cullen v. Veasey, 5 Boyce (Del.) 588, 95 Atl. 655.

[125] In re Pollmann, 156 Fed. 221, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

[126] Huntington v. Baskerville, 192 Fed. 813, 113 C. C. A. 137, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; In re Leech, 171 Fed. 591; Vitzthum v. Large, 162 Fed. 685, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666.

[127] Root Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 219 Fed. 897, 135 C. C. A. 139, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; In re Federal Biscuit Co., 214 Fed. 221, 130 C. C. A. 635, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; Ashuelot Bank v. Frost, 19 Fed. 237; Coxe v. Hale, 10 Blatchf. 56, 8 N. B. R. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 3,310; Catlin v. Hoffman, 2 Sawy. 486, 9 N. B. R. 342, Fed. Cas. No. 2,521; Boothe v. Brooks, 12 N. B. R. 398, Fed. Cas. No. 1,650; Hallack v. Tritch, 17 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 5,956; Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; Posey v. McManis, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 452, 67 S. W. 792; Macdonald v. Ætna Indemnity Co., 90 Conn. 415, 97 Atl. 332; Davis v. Billings, 254 Pa. 574, 99 Atl. 163; Lloyd v. Sichler, 94 Wash. 611, 162 Pac. 979; McKnight v. Shadbolt, 98 Wash. 665, 168 Pac. 473. No preference can be predicated on the fact that the money received from the sale of grain which had been pledged by the bankrupt was not kept physically isolated until paid to the secured creditor, but was deposited in bank with other money of the bankrupt, and a check for the amount immediately given to the creditor. Britton v. Union Inv. Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 111, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[128] Waring v. Buchanan, 19 N. B. R. 502, Fed. Cas. No. 17,176. But a transfer by a bankrupt to a creditor of property of no more value than such creditor's lien thereon and the amount of the claims of certain other creditors of the bankrupt, which he then pays, by agreement with the bankrupt, is not a preference, though such other claims were un-transaction puts the creditor in a materially better position with reference to the enforcement of his claim.[129] And to justify a transaction of this kind, there must be an actual and valid lien of some kind, not a mere promise or unexecuted agreement to give security.[130] But if a creditor holds a valid and subsisting lien on the debtor's property, and the equity of redemption therein is released to him under such circumstances as to make it a fraudulent preference, though the conveyance is void, this will not divest the lien, but the parties will be remitted to their original position.[131]

§ 582. Restoration of Specific Property or Funds.—A transfer or surrender of property by an insolvent debtor will not constitute a voidable preference where the person receiving it was actually the owner of the property, and no title was vested in the bankrupt in any such sense that it could have been made available for his general creditors.[132] Thus, where a broker buys stock for a customer on a margin, the title to the stock is in the customer, and not in the broker, the latter holding it merely as a pledgee to secure the advances made by him in the purchase. Hence the customer is not a creditor of the broker, and no preference is created by the transfer of the stock to the customer on the settlement of his account,[133] or by the broker's action in redeeming the stock (already pledged by him) and turning it over to the customer on demand.[134] So, a transfer of realty by an insolvent, though made within four months before his bankruptcy, is not a preference if made in good faith to his secured. Russell's Trustee v. Mayfield Lumber Co., 158 Ky. 219, 164 S. W. 783.

[129] In re Dibblee, 3 Ben. 283, Fed. Cas. No. 3,884.

[130] Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 29 Sup. Ct. 159, 53 L. Ed. 332, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; Sharp v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 19 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 12,709a; Lacy v. Chandler (Tex. Civ. App.) 163 S. W. 328. Payment by an insolvent to one who assumes an indebtedness of the insolvent therefor is a preference; and so also, where one pays an indebtedness of an insolvent on condition that a mortgage in his name, which has been paid, shall remain effective. McKnight v. Shadbolt, 98 Wash. 665, 168 Pac. 473.

[131] Avery v. Hackley, 20 Wall. 407, 22 L. Ed. 385.

[132] Sieg v. Greene, 225 Fed. 955, 141 C. C. A. 79, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 1006, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; In re Wright-Dana Hardware Co. (D. C.) 205 Fed. 335, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; Bradley, Clark & Co. v. Benson, 93 Minn. 91, 100 N. W. 670; Sears v. Gilman, 199 Mass. 384, 85 N. E. 466. Compare Smith v. Tostevin, 247 Fed. 102, 159 C. C. A. 320, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212. Where a bank purchased with its own funds silk for certain bankrupts, taking title in its own name, and delivered the silk to the bankrupts under a trust receipt binding the latter to hold the goods or their proceeds for the bank until the price was paid, it was considered that, as the title had never passed to the bankrupts, their agreement while insolvent to return the goods to the bank was not a preference. In re Killian Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 209 Fed. 498.

[133] Robinson v. Roe, 233 Fed. 936, 147 C. C. A. 610, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26; Richardson v. Shaw, 147 Fed. 659, 77 C. C. A. 643, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 842; In re Graff (D. C.) 117 Fed. 343, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744.

[134] Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 28 Sup. Ct. 512, 52 L. Ed. 835, 14 Ann. Cas. 981, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; Robinson v. Roe, 233 Fed. 936, 147 C. C. A. 610, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26.

wife in replacement of her dotal property alienated by him, and the subject of the transfer does not exceed in value such dotal property.[135] Money, as well as other property, may be subject to this rule.[136] Thus, the return of excessive margins by an insolvent stockbroker to a customer does not constitute a preference.[137] So where money is placed in the hands of one who afterwards becomes bankrupt, but on the agreement that it shall be used for a particular purpose, and it is not so used, but is returned to the owner, this does not create a preference.[138] But it is necessary to distinguish the case where money is delivered to the bankrupt under such circumstances that the person giving it becomes simply a general creditor for the amount. Thus, where it appeared that the defendant in an action to recover a preference had discounted a note for the bankrupt, but discovered the next day that an indorsement on the note was forged and called on the bankrupt to return the money, but the bankrupt was unable to do this, but gave the defendant a postdated check, which the latter accepted, and this check was shortly paid, it was held that this transaction constituted a preference and could not be upheld on the theory that the defendant was merely procuring a return of his money, for, by accepting a postdated check, which was paid from the bankrupt's general funds, he had accepted the position of a general creditor.[139]

So, also, the general rule does not apply where goods have passed to the bankrupt under a contract of sale. It is an unlawful preference if the seller accepts a return of the goods or a part of them in settlement of his claim, unless he has retained title in himself by some lawful reservation or agreement.[140] It has been held, however, that where goods are obtained on credit by an insolvent buyer and by means of false pretenses, the seller's recovery of them before they have been unpacked does not work a preference under the bankruptcy law.[141]

§ 583. Same; Trust Funds and Moneys Converted or Embezzled.—Questions often arise as to the creation of a preference where an insol-[135] Gomila v. Wilcombe, 151 Fed. 470, 81 C. C. A. 268, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 143.

[136] Wallerstein v. Gallagher (D. C.) 236 Fed. 602, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287.

[137] Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 28 Sup. Ct. 512, 52 L. Ed. 835, 14 Ann. Cas. 981, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717.

[138] Sharp v. Simonitsch, 107 Minn. 133, 119 N. W. 790; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; In re W. W. Mills Co., 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501.

[139] Watchmaker v. Barnes, 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

[140] Benjamin v. Buell (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 792, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; Plummer v. Myers, 137 Fed. 660, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805; West v. Fulling, 36 Ind. App. 617, 76 N. E. 325. As to the reclamation by a creditor of property held by the bankrupt under a contract of conditional sale, see John Deere Plow Co. v. Edgar Farmer Store Co., 154 Wis. 490, 143 N. W. 194; In re Bennett (D. C.) 264 Fed. 533. And see, supra, § 358.

[141] Mulroney Mfg. Co. v. Weeks, 185 Iowa, 714, 171 N. W. 36.

vent person has been forced to restore or make good funds which he has stolen or embezzled, or which he has misappropriated to his own use while holding them in the character of a trustee. The general rule is that if the particular fund has been kept separate and apart from the bankrupt's own money, or if it is distinctly traceable into property or other funds into which it has been converted, the owner may follow it and reclaim it from the trustee in bankruptcy, on the theory that it does not constitute any part of the assets in bankruptcy. From this it follows that if the fund (or its avails) is surrendered or restored to the owner before bankruptcy intervenes, it cannot be said to constitute the giving of a preference.[142] But if the person entitled to the fund, having knowledge of the embezzlement or conversion, and of the debtor's insolvency, accepts a payment out of the latter's general funds or a conveyance of property or a security offered, this is an election to treat the misappropriation as creating a debt, and consequently he will stand in no better position than any general creditor.[143] Under these circumstances, therefore, a payment or transfer of property, or the giving of a mortgage or other security, will constitute a voidable preference, supposing the other elements of a preference to be present.[144] And the United States Supreme Court has ruled that, independently of his liability on any bond, there is an obligation of a contractual nature resting upon a defaulting testamentary trustee to restore to the trust estate the value of assets embezzled, and this obligation is a provable debt in bankruptcy. Hence, where one is a trustee in several trusts, and knowing himself to be insolvent, and within four months prior to his bankruptcy, he transfers his own property from himself individually to one of those trusts and to himself in the character of trustee therein, to make good a shortage, and the effect is to enable that trust to recover a larger share of its debt than the others, a voidable preference is given.[145]

§ 584. Giving of Present Consideration; Security for Present Loan or Future Advances.—"An insolvent person may properly make efforts 142 Block v. Rice, 167 Fed. 693, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691; McNaboe v. Columbian Mfg. Co., 153 Fed. 967, 83 C. C. A. 81, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 684; Goode v. Elwood Lodge, 160 Ind. 251, 66 N. E. 742. And see supra, § 354.

143 Atherton v. Green, 179 Fed. 806, 103 C. C. A. 298, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

144 Clarke v. Rogers, 183 Fed. 518, 106 C. C. A. 64, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413; In re Dorr, 196 Fed. 292, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; Burgoyne v. McKillip, 182 Fed. 452, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re Kearney, 167 Fed. 995, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721; Smith v. Township of Au Gres, 150 Fed. 257, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745. Where a bankrupt which assigned accounts to defendants converted payments received on such accounts, but defendant could not trace such conversions into other unassigned accounts, it cannot, on the theory of a trust, sustain a subsequent preferential assignment of other accounts. McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702.

145 Clarke v. Rogers, 228 U. S. 534, 33 Sup. Ct. 587, 57 L. Ed. 953, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

to extricate himself from his embarrassments, and therefore he may borrow money and give, at the time, security therefor, provided always the transaction be free from fraud in fact and upon the bankruptcy act. And hence it is a settled principle of bankruptcy law, both in England and in this country, that advances made in good faith to a debtor to carry on business, upon security taken at the time, do not violate either the terms or the policy of the bankruptcy act. This is manifestly right, since the power to raise ready money may save the party from bankruptcy and ruin, and since his creditors are not injured nor his estate impaired, because he gets a present equivalent for the debt he creates and the security he gives." [146] In effect, an unlawful preference is created, within the meaning of the act, only when a transfer is made or security given for a pre-existing debt.[147] This the creditor is not allowed to exact, at least if he has reasonable cause to believe that he is securing a preference. But at the time when a debt is created, the creditor has the right to dictate the terms on which he will part with his money or property, and he may therefore demand that he shall first be secured to such an extent as will satisfy him, and with this the bankruptcy act does not interfere.[148] Moreover, the statute expressly provides that "liens given or accepted in good faith and not in contemplation of or in fraud upon this act, and for a present consideration, which have been recorded according to law, if record thereof was necessary in order to impart notice, shall not be affected by this act." [149] It is therefore a well-settled rule that a creditor who takes security, though the debtor is insolvent and though his bankruptcy follows within four months, does not receive a preference which is voidable under the act, if the consideration was a loan or advance of money to the bankrupt made at the same time with the giving of the security.[150] So a mortgage made in good faith to secure future sales of [146] Darby v. Boatmen's Sav. Inst., 1 Dill. 141, Fed. Cas. No. 3,571. Thus, where the directors of an insolvent corporation, in good faith and with the intention of saving the business, borrowed money from a director and a stockholder to meet the most pressing obligations, and executed mortgages on all of the corporate assets to secure the same, it was held, on the subsequent bankruptcy of the corporation, that the mortgages could not be questioned as preferential. In re Lake Chelan Land Co., 257 Fed. 497, 168 C. C. A. 501, 5 A. L. R. 557, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14.

[147] In re Perpall (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 466, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Clifford (C. C. A.) 136 Fed. 475, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; William Schuette & Co. v. Swank, 265 Pa. 576, 109 Atl. 531; In re Busby (D. C.) 124 Fed. 469, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650. Whether a debt, to secure which a lien was created within four months of bankruptcy, was a pre-existing debt must be determined as of the date of the creation of the lien. In re Mossler Co., 239 Fed. 262, 152 C. C. A. 250, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[148] In re Busby (D. C.) 124 Fed. 469. 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

[149] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 67d.

[150] Dean v. Davis, 242 U. S. 438, 37 Sup. Ct. 130, 61 L. Ed. 419, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664; Lake View State Bank v. Jones, 242 Fed. 821, 155 C. C. A. 409, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148; Dodge v. Harris, 224 Fed. 434, 140 C. C. A. 128; Withoft v. Andrews (D. C.) 217 Fed. 421, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; Tiffany v. Boatmen's Sav. Inst., 18 Wall. 375, 21 L. Ed.

goods to the mortgagor is valid to the extent of the advances actually made, and to such extent is not defeated but protected by the bankruptcy act.[151] And where new sales succeed payments, and the net result is to increase the value of the debtor's estate, payments made by an insolvent debtor on a running account are not to be considered preferential.[152] So a mortgage given for money borrowed at the time to pay the purchase price of the property mortgaged, whether or not the same identical money is used to make the payment, is in effect a purchase-money mortgage and entitled to high rank and protection.[153] The same principle applies where the transaction takes the form of a transfer of property, rather than a security. A person may sell or exchange his property, though he is insolvent at the time, if it is done in good faith and with no fraudulent design as against his creditors.[154] And one who takes a conveyance of such property, acting in equal good faith, and who has already advanced the money therefor, or gives a present and adequate consideration for it, is not chargeable with receiving a preference.[155] And either in the case of a security or a conveyance, it is not necessary

868; Lindley v. Ross, 200 Fed. 733, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; In re Empire Cork Co., 193 Fed. 225; In re Sayed, 185 Fed. 962, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; Powell v. Gate City Bank, 178 Fed. 609, 102 C. C. A. 55, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316; In re Hersey, 171 Fed. 1004, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863; In re Bartlett, 172 Fed. 679, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 891; In re Farmers' Supply Co., 170 Fed. 502, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460; McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline Ry. Co., 164 Fed. 1007, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; Crim v. Woodford, 136 Fed. 34, 68 C. C. A. 584, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; Farmers' Bank of Edgefield v. C. D. Carr & Co., 127 Fed. 690, 62 C. C. A. 446, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; Young v. Upson, 115 Fed. 192, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377; In re Little, 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Davidson, 109 Fed. 882, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Wolf, 98 Fed. 84, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; In re Little River Lumber Co., 92 Fed. 585, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; Neill v. Barbaree, 135 Ga. 771, 70 S. E. 638; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 34 Misc. Rep. 450, 70 N. Y. Supp. 271; Claridge v. Evans, 137 Wis. 218, 118 N. W. 198, 803, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 144; Eason v. Garrison, 36 Tex. Civ. App. 574, 82 S. W. 800; O'Connell v. City of Worcester, 225 Mass. 159, 114 N. E. 201; Dunlap v. Seattle Nat. Bank, 93 Wash. 568, 161 Pac. 364; McNamara v. Farnsworth, 106 Wash. 523, 180 Pac. 466.

[151] Marvin v. Chambers, 12 Blatchf. 495, 13 N. B. R. 77, Fed. Cas. No. 9,179; In re Watkinson, 142 Fed. 782, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; Peterson v. Nash Bros., 112 Fed. 311, 50 C. C. A. 260, 55 L. R. A. 344, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181.

[152] Joseph Wild & Co. v. Provident Life & Trust Co., 153 Fed. 562, 82 C. C. A. 516, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

[153] In re Franklin, 151 Fed. 642, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218.

[154] Blake v. Thwing, 185 Ill. App. 187. Where one who had been fraudulently induced to sell goods on credit, accepted from the buyer, within four months before the latter's bankruptcy, a transfer of accounts in payment for the goods, it was held that the transfer was made in consideration of the release of the right to rescind and recover the goods, and therefore was not a preference. Illinois Parlor Frame Co. v. Goldman, 257 Fed. 300, 168 C. C. A. 384, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287.

[155] Ernst v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 664, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; Mills v. Virginia-Carolina Lumber Co., 164 Fed. 168, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 750; In re Rosenfeld, 2 N. B. R. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 12,057; Harrison v. McLaren, 10 N. B. R. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 6,139; Sparhawk v. Richards, 12 N. B. R. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 13,205; Weeks v. Spooner, 142 N. C. 479, 55 S. E. 432. But see Kerr v. Melum, 27 S. D. 208, 130 N. W. 83.

that the transfer and the giving of the consideration should be exactly contemporaneous. For an advance will be considered a present consideration for a conveyance made within a reasonable time thereafter and in pursuance of a prior agreement.[156]

But it is strictly necessary that the whole transaction should be entirely free from fraud. If one lends money to an insolvent debtor (whose bankruptcy follows within four months), and knows at the time that the borrower's purpose is not to use the money in supporting his credit or carrying on his business, but to use it in paying off one of the creditors, thereby giving a preference, the lender is so far affected by the fraudulent purpose that any security given to him for the loan will be voidable at the suit of the trustee in bankruptcy.[157] And it seems that actual knowledge on the part of the lender is not necessary to produce this result, if the circumstances were so unusual and suspicious as to lay upon him the duty of making reasonable inquiries concerning the destination of the money, which inquiries would have enlightened him as to the debtor's purpose.[158] Further, if the consideration for a security or transfer, though contemporaneous with it, was illegal, as being contrary to law, to good morals, or to public policy, it will not support the lien or conveyance.[159]

Where it appears that the transfer or security was given in part to secure a pre-existing debt, and in part to secure a new advance of money made at the same time with it, and there was no actual fraud in the transaction as to the other creditors or upon the bankruptcy act, the creditor will be entitled to enforce his security against the estate of the debtor in bankruptcy to the extent of the money advanced at the time, although it is void as a preference so far as concerns the pre-existing debt.[160] Thus, an increase in a mortgage lien on a bankrupt's property, supported by a new and adequate consideration, and not lessening his estate or impairing in any respect the fund available to pay general creditors, must be sustained, although made within four months prior to 156 Douglass v. Vogeler, 6 Fed. 53; Gattman v. Honea, 12 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 5,271; In re Sutherland Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 663, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

157 Bucknam v. Goss, 1 Hask. 630, 13 N. B. R. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 2,097; Bryant v. Wolf, 94 Misc. Rep. 683, 158 N. Y. Supp. 678; Sherrill v. Hutson, 187 Ala. 189, 65 South. 538.

158 Ex parte Mendell, 1 Low. 506, 4 N. B. R. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 9,418; Parker v. Sherman, 212 Fed. 917, 129 C. C. A. 437.

159 Sharp v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 10 Fed. 379; Adams v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 9 Biss. 396, 2 Fed. 174.

160 In re Wolf, 98 Fed. 84, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; In re Cobb, 96 Fed. 821, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Sanderlin, 109 Fed. 857, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Hull, 115 Fed. 858, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Dismal Swamp Contracting Co., 135 Fed. 415, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; In re First Nat. Bank, 155 Fed. 100, 84 C. C. A. 16, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766; Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219. But see Tuttle v. Truax, 1 N. B. R. 601, Fed. Cas. No. 14,277.

his bankruptcy.[161] But the bankruptcy law cannot be evaded by a pretense of advancing an additional consideration which bears no reasonable relation to the existing indebtedness. Thus, an assignment of collateral by an insolvent debtor with intent to give a preference to a creditor who has reasonable grounds to believe that a preference is intended, made a short time before an adjudication of bankruptcy, as security for a pre-existing debt, and also for a small additional loan, is void as to the whole.[162]

§ 585. Effect of Prior Agreement to Give Security or Make Transfer.—It has often been ruled that, where an agreement is made or a promise given, at the time when money is loaned or advanced, that a transfer of property shall be made or a security given to the lender, the subsequent execution of the transfer or giving of security does not constitute an illegal preference, though it takes place at a time when the debtor is insolvent and within four months prior to his bankruptcy.[163] But on the other hand, there are important decisions to the effect that a transfer of property to a creditor by an insolvent debtor four months prior to his bankruptcy, which would otherwise constitute a voidable preference, is not deprived of that character by the fact that it was made pursuant to a prior agreement made more than four months before the bankruptcy.[164] The true doctrine appears to be that if the promise or agreement was of such a specific nature and related to such specific property as to give rise to an inchoate or equitable lien (in advance of its execution) then the creation of a specific lien at a later time, in accordance with the prior promise, will not violate the bankruptcy law.[165] But [161] State Bank of Williamson v. Fish, 120 N. Y. Supp. 365.

[162] Grannis v. Beardsley, Fed. Cas. No. 5,688.

[163] Tomlinson v. Bank of Lexington, 145 Fed. 824, 76 C. C. A. 400, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; Ryttenberg v. Schefer, 131 Fed. 313, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 652; Payne v. Solomon, 14 N. B. R. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 10,856; In re Wood, 5 N. B. R. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 17,937; Burdick v. Jackson, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 488, 15 N. B. R. 318; M. & M. National Bank v. Brady's Bend Iron Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 171, 5 N. B. R. 491, Fed. Cas. No. 9,018; Smoot v. Morehouse, 8 Ala. 370, 42 Am. Dec. 644; In re Metropolitan Dairy Co., 224 Fed. 444, 140 C. C. A. 646, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466.

[164] Citizens' Trust Co. v. Tilt, 200 Fed. 410, 118 C. C. A. 562, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 906; Lathrop Bank v. Holland, 205 Fed. 143, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62; In re Thomas, 199 Fed. 214, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 945; Tilt v. Citizens' Trust Co., 191 Fed. 441, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; In re Smith 176 Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864; In re Great Western Mfg. Co., 152 Fed. 123, 81 C. C. A. 341, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Dismal Swamp Contracting Co., 135 Fed. 415, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; In re Mandel, 127 Fed. 863, affirmed 135 Fed. 1021, 68 C. C. A. 546; In re Ronk, 111 Fed. 154, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; Second Nat. Bank v. Hunt, 11 Wall. 391, 20 L. Ed. 190; In re Connor, 1 Low. 532, Fed. Cas. No. 3,118; Lloyd v. Strobridge, 16 N. B. R. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 8,435; Chapman v. Hunt, 254 Fed. 768, 166 C. C. A. 214, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 509; In re Herman (D. C.) 207 Fed. 594, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; John Agnew Co. v. Board of Education of City of Paterson, 83 N. J. Eq. 49, 89 Atl. 1046.

[165] Johnson v. Root Mfg. Co., 241 U. S. 160, 36 Sup. Ct. 520, 60 L. Ed. 934,

these conditions are not met by a general parol agreement, entered into when the debt was contracted, not pledging any specific property, but merely that security should be given when required,[166] or if the debtor should become financially embarrassed.[167] So, a mere promise by the debtor, at the time the debt was contracted, to give a mortgage to secure it, but without specifying the nature of the mortgage or the property on which it was to be given, does not create an equitable mortgage, and the execution of a mortgage on a subsequent renewal of the debt, at a time when the debtor is insolvent and within four months before his bankruptcy, constitutes a transfer of property to secure an antecedent debt, and creates a preference.[168] In other words, the prior promise must contemplate the giving of a specific and definite security, not merely "some" security; it must be such an agreement as could be enforced by a bill for specific performance.[169] An agreement that the creditor shall have a general lien on the property of the debtor, a corporation, will not suffice.[170] And an agreement to pledge personal property as security for a debt is not executed where the goods are not delivered to the creditor nor set apart and treated as his property, so that where the creditor takes possession of the property shortly before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, the transaction is voidable as a preference.[171] And an agreement, while negotiating a loan, to make repayment out of a certain fund, does not create a lien on the fund; and hence when repayment is made out of it within four months before a proceeding in bankruptcy, it will be deemed to be preferential and voidable at the suit of the trustee.[172]

§ 586. Exchange or Substitution of Securities.—An exchange or substitution of one valid security for another does not create an unlawful preference, though occurring when the debtor is insolvent and within 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 764; Sahin v. Camp, 98 Fed. 974, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578; Stover v. Kennedy, Fed. Cas. No. 13,510. And see Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 255, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251. Where the owner of a mercantile business assigns to a creditor a fire policy to enable him to collect the same and apply it in payment of a prior loan, the assignment is not an unlawful preference, though made within four months of bankruptcy, where it was made pursuant to a prior agreement by which the policy was pledged as security for advances. Hecker v. Commercial State Bank, 35 N. D. 12, 159 N. W. 97.

166 In re Connor, 1 Low. 532, Fed. Cas. No. 3,118; Southwick v. Whipple, 2 Fed. 770.

167 Sebring v. Wellington, 63 App. Div. 498, 71 N. Y. Supp. 788. But compare Stennick v. Jones, 252 Fed. 345, 164 C. C. A. 269.

168 Pollock v. Jones, 124 Fed. 163, 61 C. C. A. 555, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

169 In re Jackson Iron Mfg. Co., 15 N. B. R. 438, Fed. Cas. No. 7,153.

170 Mathews v. Hardt, 79 App. Div. 570, 80 N. Y. Supp. 462.

171 In re Sheridan, 98 Fed. 406, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554; In re Arkonia Fabric Mfg. Co., 151 Fed. 914, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470. But compare In re Harvey (D. C.) 212 Fed. 340, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

172 Torrance v. Winfield Nat. Bank, 66 Kan. 177, 71 Pac. 235.

four months prior to his bankruptcy, provided the new security is not of greater value than the old and does not put the creditor in better position with reference to enforcing his claim, since, in this case, nothing is taken away from the general creditors of the bankrupt.[173] Within this rule, the giving of a mortgage or pledge is not a preference when it is executed upon a renewal of the debt or loan, which was originally secured by a like mortgage or pledge.[174] Nor is a preference created by the substitution and recording of a mortgage correcting a mistake in a prior unrecorded mortgage,[175] or in place of one not formally executed;[176] nor by the release of pledged property and the taking of a pledge on other property to secure the same debt,[177] or the substitution of different collaterals for those already held by the creditor;[178] nor by the giving of a chattel mortgage in place of a prior valid bill of sale of the same property,[179] or in place of collateral security;[180] nor by a confession of judgment for a debt already secured by a prior valid lien;[181] nor by the substitution of a deed of trust for a mechanic's lien on the same property;[182] nor by a mere change in the form of the obligation

[173] Sawyer v. Turpin, 91 U. S. 114, 23 L. Ed. 235; Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. 332, 21 L. Ed. 933; Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. 360, 22 L. Ed. 568; Douglass v. Vogeler, 6 Fed. 53; Brett v. Carter, 2 Low. 458, 14 N. B. R. 301, Fed. Cas. No. 1,844; Albany Exchange Bank v. Johnson, 5 Law Rep. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 133; Sawyer v. Turpin, Holmes, 226, Fed. Cas. No. 12,409; Deland v. Miller & Chaney Bank, 119 Iowa, 368, 93 N. W. 304; Hutchinson v. Murchie, 74 Me. 187. See Oberneier v. Kass, 219 Fed. 529, 135 C. C. A. 279, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37. A preferential assignment of accounts within four months prior to bankruptcy cannot be sustained as a substitution for accounts theretofore assigned, where it appears that the previously assigned accounts had been collected by the bankrupt, with the assignee's consent, before the later assignment. Wolfe v. Bank of Anderson, 238 Fed. 343, 151 C. C. A. 359, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

[174] Hagan v. McNeil, 253 Fed. 716, 165 C. C. A. 310, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 792; In re Noel (D. C.) 137 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; Chattanooga Nat. Bank v. Rome Iron Co. (C. C.) 102 Fed. 755, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441; In re Doran, Fed. Cas. No. 4,000.

[175] Player v. Lippincott, 4 Dill. 124, Fed. Cas. No. 11,223.

[176] Stewart v. Hoffman, 31 Mont. 190, 77 Pac. 689, 81 Pac. 3. The bankruptcy act does not give the trustee a lien prior to the lien of a bank to which a written chattel mortgage was given shortly before bankruptcy, in the place of a previous oral mortgage which was valid under the laws of the state except as against innocent purchasers and lien creditors. Border Nat. Bank v. Coupland, 240 Fed. 355, 153 C. C. A. 281.

[177] Perry v. Booth, 67 App. Div. 235, 73 N. Y. Supp. 216. But see Anniston Iron & Supply Co. v. Anniston Rolling Mill Co. (D. C.) 125 Fed. 974, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200. Where bankrupt conveyed land as security by deed which was not recorded, and within four months before bankruptcy conveyed other land upon surrender of the unrecorded deed and notes evidencing indebtedness, it was not a preference. Marsh v. Leseman, 242 Fed. 484, 155 C. C. A. 260, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[178] In re Reese-Hammond Fire Brick Co., 181 Fed. 641, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323.

[179] Sawyer v. Turpin, 91 U. S. 114, 23 L. Ed. 235. But a chattel mortgage is voidable as a preference, where the prior security was a conditional contract of sale, which was invalid because not recorded. L. A. Becker Co. v. Gill (C. C. A.) 206 Fed. 36, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429.

[180] In re Davidson, 109 Fed. 882, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[181] Reber v. Gundy, 13 Fed. 53.

[182] In re Weaver, 9 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 17,307.

from an account to a note.[183] So, where the bankrupt's debt consists of a sum of money with accumulated interest, some time overdue, secured by a valid mortgage, and the parties have an accounting and compute the amount due to date for both principal and interest, and a new mortgage is given for the sum so ascertained, upon the same property, the old mortgage being canceled, this is not to be regarded as an unlawful preference, though done within the time limited before the debtor's bankruptcy.[184] And a creditor who has obtained a valid lien by execution on property of greater value than the amount of the judgment may receive from the debtor bills receivable, accounts, and cash up to the amount of the execution, without violating the bankruptcy law, if the execution is thereupon released and the judgment satisfied.[185] And a broker who holds stocks of a customer as security for the money advanced in their purchase, does not gain a preference by selling the stocks and applying the proceeds on his claim.[186]

But where a loan of money is simply evidenced by an indorsed promissory note, the substitution for it of a bond and mortgage is not such an exchange of securities as will prevent the mortgage being considered a preference, the other elements being present.[187] And a preference may be created by the substitution of one note for another, where that last given is made by a different party or is indorsed with a better name or matures earlier,[188] or enables the creditor more easily or quickly to obtain judgment and levy on the debtor's property.[189] Still it does not necessarily follow that the new security is voidable to its entire extent. Where a debtor gives a mortgage in exchange or substitution for an existing valid mortgage, but of greater value, it may be voidable by his trustee in bankruptcy, but only as to such excess of value.[190]

§ 587. Payments by Debtor.—Payment of a debt in money is a "transfer" of property within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, and if made under such circumstances as would constitute a preference in the case of a transfer of any other form of property, may be recovered by the debtor's trustee in bankruptcy.[191] It is immaterial in what form

183 O'Connor v. Parker, 23 Mich. 22, 4 N. B. R. 713.

184 Bernhisel v. Firman, 22 Wall. 170, 22 L. Ed. 766. But see In re Jordon, 9 N. B. R. 416, Fed. Cas. No. 7,529; Forbes v. Howe, 102 Mass. 427, 3 Am. Rep. 475.

185 Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. 360, 22 L. Ed. 568; Livingston v. Bruce, 1 Blatchf. 318, Fed. Cas. No. 8,410.

186 In re Filer, 125 Fed. 261, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

187 In re Hirschowitz, 199 Fed. 202, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571; In re Wolf, 98 Fed. 84, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

188 McAtee v. Shade, 185 Fed. 442, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; In re Lane, 2 Low. 333, 10 N. B. R. 135, Fed. Cas. No. 8,044; In re Star Spring Bed Co. (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 133, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

189 Loudon v. First Nat. Bank, 2 Hughes, 420, 15 N. B. R. 476, Fed. Cas. No. 8,525.

190 In re Manning (D. C.) 123 Fed. 181, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

191 West Philadelphia Bank v. Dickson, 95 U. S. 180, 24 L. Ed. 407; Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S.

the payment is made, whether in cash or by a certified check,[192] or by the acceptance of a draft drawn on the debtor by the creditor,[193] or an order on a third person to pay to the creditor money which is due to the debtor,[194] or by giving a lien on property from which the creditor realizes his debt in cash.[195] So, the declaration of a dividend by a corporation, with the understanding that the treasurer's portion of it should be returned to the corporation in settlement of his indebtedness to it, which was done, constitutes a preference recoverable by the treasurer's trustee in bankruptcy.[196] And where creditors of a bankrupt company, with knowledge of its insolvency, placed a representative in charge, and furnished goods on credit to replenish its stock, and would have succeeded in re-establishing the business had not the issuance of execution by another creditor precipitated bankruptcy, it was held that payments made for goods so furnished within four months prior to the adjudication were preferential.[197]

438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; D. C. Wise Coal Co. v. Small, 225 Fed. 524, 140 C. C. A. 508, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682; Scheuer v. Katzoff (D. C.) 233 Fed. 473, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; In re Miller (D. C.) 221 Fed. 471, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275; In re W. A. Silvernail Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 979, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; Vollmar v. Plage, 186 Fed. 598, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Rice, 164 Fed. 514, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 211; In re W. W. Mills Co., 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; Wright v. William Skinner Mfg. Co., 162 Fed. 315, 89 C. C. A. 23, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527; Sargent v. Blake, 160 Fed. 57, 87 C. C. A. 213, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; Wright v. Sampter, 152 Fed. 196, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re John Morrow & Co., 134 Fed. 686, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; In re Colton Export & Import Co., 121 Fed. 663, 57 C. C. A. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Fixen, 102 Fed. 295, 42 C. C. A. 354, 50 L. R. A. 605, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10; In re Sloan, 102 Fed. 116, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; In re Christensen, 101 Fed. 802, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Strobel & Wilken Co. v. Knost, 99 Fed. 409, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631; In re Ft. Wayne Electric Corp., 99 Fed. 400, 39 C. C. A. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634; In re Conhaim, 97 Fed. 923, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; In re Ft. Wayne Electric Corp., 96 Fed. 803, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Baxter, 25 Fed. 700; Metcalf v. Officer, 2 Fed. 640; Paige v. Loring, Holmes, 275, Fed. Cas. No. 10,672; Andrews v. Kellogg, 41 Colo. 35, 92 Pac. 222; Landry v. Andrews, 22 R. I. 597, 48 Atl. 1036; Chism v. Citizens' Bank, 77 Miss. 599, 27 South. 637; Sherman v. Luckhardt, 96 Mo. App. 320, 70 S. W. 388; Wright v. Cotten, 140 N. C. 1, 52 S. E. 141; West v. Bank of Lahoma, 16 Okl. 328, 85 Pac. 469; Rogers v. American Halibut Co., 216 Mass. 227, 103 N. E. 689; Schnetz v. International Harvester Co., 167 Iowa, 634, 149 N. W. 855. Where the bankrupt was accustomed to deposit in a bank checks drawn on other banks, and immediately thereafter to check against such deposits, without waiting to see whether the checks were good, and the bank, which was required by the clearing house to make good worthless checks credited by it, required payments from the bankrupt to protect itself against excessive use of its cash reserves, it was held that there was no indebtedness from the bankrupt to the bank, and such payments were not preferences. Snipes v. Mutual Trust Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 318, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546.

[192] Cannon v. James M. Bell Co., 34 Misc. Rep. 734, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1024.

[193] Fox v. Gardner, 21 Wall. 475, 22 L. Ed. 685.

[194] In re The Leader, 190 Fed. 624, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668.

[195] In re Belding, 116 Fed. 1016, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718.

[196] Arthur v. Harrington (D. C.) 211 Fed. 215, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216.

[197] In re Farmers' Store & Supply Co.

Nor does it affect the case that the payment is not made directly into the creditor's own hands, but reaches him through one or more intermediaries, as where the debtor's check passes through several banks and a clearing house and is finally credited to the creditor.[198] So where a creditor of the bankrupt assigns his account to a purchaser of the bankrupt's property, under an arrangement whereby such purchaser pays the claim, the legal effect is to appropriate out of the assets of the bankrupt the amount used in satisfying such claim by the purchaser assuming the liability, and an unlawful preference results therefrom.[199] This is also the case where the paying teller of a bank, claiming to be its creditor, draws his check and pays himself the amount out of the funds on hand, just before the bank closes its doors.[200] And where a bank which acts as agent for another bank for clearing house purposes pays, upon the day of its failure, to the latter, which has knowledge of its insolvency, deposits which have been made on its general account to meet checks in the clearing house, such payment is an illegal preference.[201] And where the president and general manager of a bankrupt corporation acts for it in purchasing certain accounts against it, he can only charge the corporation for the amount actually paid by him for the acounts, and must account to the trustee in bankruptcy for all profits made.[202] And a trustee in bankruptcy is not precluded from recovering, from the payee of a note, money paid by the bankrupt on the note within four months before his adjudication, by reason of the fact that there is a solvent indorser on the note.[203]

But the rule must not be applied with unreasonable strictness. There is no violation of the law against preferences where a debtor turns over money to his wife to be used, and which is in fact used, by her in defraying necessary household and family expenses, though she is also a creditor of his.[204] Nor is the payment of house rent or rent of a store the giving of a preference where there is no intention to cheat other

(D. C.) 214 Fed. 505, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

198 In re Lyon, 114 Fed. 326, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Hunter Arms Co. (D. C.) 226 Fed. 866, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 883.

199 Hackney v. Hargreaves Bros., 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822, 99 N. W. 675; Rogers v. Fidelity Sav. Bank & Loan Co., 172 Fed. 735, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

200 In re Plant, 148 Fed. 37, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272.

201 Phelan v. Iron Mountain Bank, 4 Dill. 88, 16 N. B. R. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 11,069.

202 Atherton v. Emerson, 199 Mass. 199, 85 N. E. 530.

203 Harris v. Second Nat. Bank, 110 Tenn. 239, 75 S. W. 1053; Bartholow v. Bean, 18 Wall. 635, 21 L. Ed. 866.

204 Neumann v. Blake, 178 Fed. 916, 102 C. C. A. 294, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575. Property bought by the wife of a bankrupt with money saved by her from sums given her by her husband from time to time for household expenses, when he was not indebted, and for which he asked no accounting, cannot be recovered by his trustee for the benefit of his subsequent creditors, but it is otherwise as to money similarly given to her after he became indebted to such creditors. Milkman v. Arthe, 223 Fed. 507, 139 C. C. A. 55, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

creditors or to evade the law.[205] And payment of interest in advance to a bank, to secure a renewal of a note held by it, is not giving a preference.[206] So of the payment of the salary of an officer of the bankrupt corporation, provided the amount does not exceed a fair compensation for his services.[207] And so of the payment of accrued interest on a statutory dower in real estate.[208] So, where a debtor, just before filing his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, went to two of his creditors, whose debts were barred by the statute of limitations, and paid each of them one dollar, and did this for the purpose of taking their claims out of the statute, so that they might share with the other creditors in the impending bankruptcy, and they had no knowledge or cause to believe that he meant to give them any advantage other than the revival of their debts, it was held that no preference was created.[209] And where gold dust is deposited in a bank to the credit of the depositor (who afterwards becomes bankrupt), and its value is at once ascertained and the amount entered on the books to his credit, there is no preference given, though the same sum is offset by the bank against an indebtedness to it of the depositor, because the total value of his estate available for creditors is not diminished.[210] But a debt due to a railroad company for freight is not in any way privileged, and to pay it may constitute a preference, if under circumstances which would produce that result in the case of any other creditor.[211] And a payment by insolvent makers to the holder of a note, for the purpose of relieving an indorser, is a preference forbidden by the bankruptcy law.[212]

It is of course unnecessary, to constitute a preference, that the creditor should have been paid in full. The giving and acceptance of a partial payment may be equally within the statute. But a payment by an insolvent debtor of a percentage on claims of a part of his creditors, which does not lessen the percentage which his other creditors will receive, is not a preference nor forbidden by the bankruptcy law.[213]

[205] In re Locke, 1 Low. 293, 2 N. B. R. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 8,439. But where an insolvent debtor, having a leasehold interest in a bakery where he carries on his business, pays the rent due on the same, as a means of enabling himself to continue the business, but with the purpose of defrauding his creditors, by hoarding and secreting the proceeds of the business so continued, and incurring new business debts without paying any old ones, the payment of the rent should be considered as a fraudulent preference under the bankruptcy law. In re Lange, 97 Fed. 107.

[206] In re Kellar, 110 Fed. 348, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621.

[207] Atherton v. Emerson, 199 Mass. 199, 85 N. E. 530.

[208] In re Riddle's Sons, 122 Fed. 559, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204.

[209] In re Banks (D. C.) 207 Fed. 662, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

[210] American Bank of Alaska v. Johnson, 245 Fed. 312, 157 C. C. A. 504, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[211] Farrin v. Crawford, 2 N. B. R. 602, Fed. Cas. No. 4,686.

[212] Landry v. Andrews, 22 R. I. 597, 48 Atl. 1036; Arnold v. Knapp, 75 W. Va. 804, 84 S. E. 895.

[213] In re Hapgood, 2 Low. 200, Fed. Cas. No. 6,044.

Payment of a debt by the bankrupt after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy against him is unauthorized, and ordinarily the trustee is entitled to recover the amount paid; but if the debt was one wholly or in part enforceable as against the trustee, it is a proper exercise of discretion for the court to deny such recovery, either in whole or pro tanto.[214]

If the payment was made in total or partial discharge of a valid existing lien on property of the bankrupt, which would not have been disturbed by the bankruptcy proceedings, it cannot be considered a preference, because the assets available for general creditors are not thereby diminished. This has been ruled where the creditor merely held an inchoate lien,[215] and much more where the obligation is in the form of a valid mortgage.[216] But a mortgage or deed of trust never delivered as a subsisting obligation cannot excuse a payment by the mortgagor on the indebtedness covered thereby, which payment otherwise would be invalid as a preference.[217] And a creditor holding security for less than the amount of his claim cannot, if he knows the debtor to be insolvent, obtain a valid preferential payment of the unsecured part of his debt within four months before the adjudication in bankruptcy.[218]

Where insurance was effected on mortgaged property, and the proceeds thereof having been collected, a portion thereof was surrendered to the mortgagor, who had become bankrupt, that it might be repaid to the mortgagee in liquidation of an unsecured debt, it was held that the amount so relinquished at once became the property of the mortgagor, and when repaid constituted a preference.[219]

§ 588. Payment or Transfer by Third Person.—A payment received by a creditor of a bankrupt from a third person, which does not come out of the assets of the bankrupt, does not constitute a preference.[220] Thus, where, after the bankrupt had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and just before bankruptcy proceedings were instituted against him, a firm of which he was a member paid an entire claim against him on which the firm was at most only partially liable, it was held that this payment did not constitute a preference.[221] So, payments

[214] Toof v. City Nat. Bank, 206 Fed. 250, 124 C. C. A. 118, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

[215] In re Lynn Camp Coal Co., 168 Fed. 998, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60.

[216] Stewart v. Hopkins, 30 Ohio St. 502. But compare Shutts v. First Nat. Bank, 98 Fed. 705, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

[217] Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 29 Sup. Ct. 159, 53 L. Ed. 332, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

[218] Claridge v. Evans, 137 Wis. 218, 118 N. W. 198, 803, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 144.

[219] Stearns Salt & Lumber Co. v. Hammond, 217 Fed. 559, 133 C. C. A. 411, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[220] Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; Mason v. National Herkimer County Bank, 172 Fed. 529, 97 C. C. A. 155, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; McKay v. Sperry Flour Co., 95 Wash. 209, 163 Pac. 377.

[221] In re Hines, 144 Fed. 543, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495. And see Nestor v.

made by the wife of the bankrupt out of her separate estate in settlement of claims against him, though made within four months before his bankruptcy, are not preferential.[222] And where directors of a corporation borrow money, which is used by the corporation, and thereafter, when the corporation is insolvent, pay the debt with money which they borrow by giving their individual notes, secured by mortgage on their own property, there is no preference given by the corporation.[223] But where an insolvent trader conveys his stock to certain persons who are sureties on his note given to a bank, and the sureties, in consideration of the transfer, agree to pay the debt to the bank, the bank not participating in this arrangement, and not being paid by the sureties out of the proceeds of the property, there is a preference as to the sureties, but not as to the bank.[224] Payment is made by the bankrupt, within the meaning of the provisions of the Act relating to illegal preferences, when it is made under his authority or by his direction by his debtor to his creditor.[225] And in a case where the seller of property was originally entitled to the benefit of insurance placed on the property by the buyer, but this agreement had been superseded by the giving of a chattel mortgage, and afterwards the buyer became insolvent, it was held that a payment of the insurance money to the seller constituted a preference.[226]

§ 589. Payments to Attorneys For Past or Future Services.—The bankruptcy act provides that "if a debtor shall, directly or indirectly, in contemplation of the filing of a petition by or against him, pay money or transfer property to an attorney and counselor at law, solicitor in equity, or proctor in admiralty, for services to be rendered, the transaction shall be re-examined by the court on petition of the trustee or any creditor, and shall only be held valid to the extent of a reasonable amount to be determined by the court, and the excess may be recovered by the trustee for the benefit of the estate." [227] It is therefore not unlawful for a person who expects to file his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, or expects that creditors will petition against him, to retain an attorney for the purpose of such proceedings, and to pay him in advance a reasonable fee for his services, or transfer property to him in compensation for such services or give him security for the payment of his fee.[228] This

Joseph (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 246, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 5.

[222] Goode v. Elwood Lodge, 160 Ind. 251, 66 N. E. 742.

[223] Keegan v. Hamilton Nat. Bank, 163 Ind. 216, 71 N. E. 647.

[224] Horstman v. Little, 99 Tex. 530, 90 S. W. 1095.

[225] De Forest v. Crane & Ordway Co., 55 Mont. 489, 179 Pac. 291. And see Turnbull v. Potlatch Lumber Co. (Sup.) 181 N. Y. Supp. 56.

[226] Bunday v. Huntington, 224 Fed. 847, 140 C. C. A. 415.

[227] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60d. This does not apply to fees paid to an attorney by assignees under a general assignment made by the bankrupt prior to the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Geller (D. C.) 216 Fed. 558.

[228] In re Cummins, 196 Fed. 224, 28 does not constitute the giving of a preference, under the statute, to such attorney,[229] and the transaction will be valid as against the subsequent proceedings in bankruptcy, unless there was a fraudulent purpose to place assets out of the reach of the creditors,[230] or unless some party in interest objects to it and petitions to have the transaction examined by the court, in which case the question of the reasonableness of the fee paid is to be determined and the excess, if any, refunded.[231] But this part of the statute refers only to services rendered to the bankrupt prior to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[232] Another section of the statute provides for the payment (as a priority claim) of "one reasonable attorney's fee, for services actually rendered ——— to the bankrupt in involuntary cases while performing the duties herein prescribed, and to the bankrupt in voluntary cases as the court may allow."[233] But both of these provisions of the act refer only to such professional services as are rendered in aid of the bankruptcy proceedings and for the benefit of the creditors, or in the administration and distribution of the bankrupt's estate;[234] and they will not validate a transfer of an insolvent's property to an attorney in consideration of an agreement to negotiate with the creditors of the insolvent for a settlement of his difficulties without resort to the bankruptcy court, nor a payment or transfer of property for services to be performed in defending the bankrupt against anticipated criminal proceedings, which are not brought until after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[235] And although, in a case coming within the provisions of the statute, a transfer of property may be equally allowable as a payment of money, yet an agreement that the attorney shall take certain goods in payment for his services, where there is no actual delivery or change of possession, does not constitute a "transfer" of the property, and if the attorney takes possession of the goods after the adjudication, and therefore after they have

Am. Bankr. Rep. 385; Triplett v. Hanley, 1 Dill. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 14,179; Williams v. Pultze, 5 Ohio Dec. 503; Lyon v. Marshall, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 241; Furth v. Stahl, 205 Pa. St. 439, 55 Atl. 29. Compare In re Evans, 3 N. B. R. 261, Fed. Cas. No. 4,552.

229 Swartz v. Frank, 183 Mo. 438, 82 S. W. 60.

230 Goodrich v. Wilson, 119 Mass. 429, 14 N. B. R. 555.

231 In re Morris, 125 Fed. 841, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Porter, 253 Fed. 552, 165 C. C. A. 222.

232 Pratt v. Bothe, 130 Fed. 670, 65 C. C. A. 48, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

233 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 64b, 3.

234 A debtor's contract, made three days after a fire, with an attorney to collect the insurance, where the insurers questioned their liability, was a proceeding in the usual course of business, having no necessary relation to bankruptcy; and such contract could not of itself justify the conclusion that it was made "in contemplation of the filing of a petition" in bankruptcy, within the meaning of the Act, although a petition in bankruptcy was actually filed against the debtor five days after the payment to the attorney. Tripp v. Mitschrich, 211 Fed. 424, 128 C. C. A. 96, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

235 In re Habegger, 139 Fed. 623, 71 C. C. A. 607, 3 Ann. Cas. 276, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198.

passed ino the custody of the law, he must restore them.[236] As to a payment for legal services rendered in the past, and not relating to the bankruptcy proceedings, it stands on the same footing as a payment to any other creditor, and will be preferential in the same circumstances or under the same conditions,[237] unless the attorney has a lien on a particular fund or an agreement which amounts to an equitable assignment of it.[238]

§ 590. Set-Off or Adjustment of Mutual Accounts.—The bankruptcy law does not prevent parties from adjusting their mutual accounts or exercising a right of set-off which would belong to them even after the institution of bankruptcy proceedings.[239] Thus, the application by a bank of the amount standing to the credit of a depositor in his general account, subject to check, on a note of the depositor or other indebtedness to the bank, does not constitute a voidable preference, though made while the depositor was insolvent and within four months prior to his bankruptcy.[240] But this rule does not apply if the bank knew or had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended to be giv-

[236] In re Corbett (D. C.) 104 Fed. 872, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224.

[237] Magee v. Fox, 229 Fed. 395, 143 C. C. A. 515, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re George W. Shiebler & Co. (D. C.) 163 Fed. 545, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777.

[238] In re Coney Island Lumber Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 803, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; Van Slyke v. Huntington (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 86, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173.

[239] See Gleason v. Bush, 100 Misc. Rep. 608, 166 N. Y. Supp. 321; Putnam v. United States Trust Co., 223 Mass. 199, 111 N. E. 969.

[240] Continental & Commercial Trust & Savings Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 229 U. S. 435, 33 Sup. Ct. 829, 57 L. Ed. 1268, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; Studley v. Boylston Nat. Bank, 229 U. S. 523, 33 Sup. Ct. 806, 57 L. Ed. 1313, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; New York County Nat. Bank v. Massey, 192 U. S. 138, 24 Sup. Ct. 199, 48 L. Ed. 380, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; In re Cross (C. C. A.) 273 Fed. 39, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; In re Cross (D. C.) 265 Fed. 769, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695; In re Looschen Piano Case Co. (D. C.) 259 Fed. 931, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; American Bank of Alaska v. Johnson, 245 Fed. 312, 157 C. C. A. 504, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; Fourth Nat. Bank of Wichita v. Smith, 240 Fed. 19, 153 C. C. A. 55, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 771; American Bank & Trust Co. v. Coppard, 227 Fed. 597, 142 C. C. A. 229, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; In re Radley Steel Const. Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 462; Johnson v. American Bank, 5 Alaska, 145; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. Federal Trust & Sav. Bank, 192 Fed. 967; In re Wright-Dana Hardware Co., 207 Fed. 636; Tomlinson v. Bank of Lexington, 145 Fed. 824, 76 C. C. A. 400, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; In re George M. Hill Co., 130 Fed. 315, 64 C. C. A. 561, 66 L. R. A. 68, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221; In re Scherzer, 130 Fed. 631, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451; Robinson v. Wisconsin, M. & F. Ins. Co. Bank, 9 Biss. 117, 18 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 11,969; Habegger v. First Nat. Bank, 94 Minn. 445, 103 N. W. 216, 110 Am. St. Rep. 379; Cox v. First Nat. Bank, 126 La. 88, 52 South. 227; Booth v. Prete, 81 Conn. 636, 71 Atl. 938, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 863, 15 Ann. Cas. 306; West v. Bank of Lahoma, 16 Okl. 328, 85 Pac. 469; Conner v. First Nat. Bank (Wash.) 194 Pac. 562; Parker v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Vt. 69, 94 Atl. 1; Putnam v. United States Trust Co., 223 Mass. 199, 111 N. E. 969; Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Conn.) 114 Atl. 120. Contra. In re Kellar, 110 Fed. 348, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621. And see Evans v. National Broadway Bank, 48 Misc. Rep. 248, 96 N. Y. Supp. 789; In re Starkweather & Albert, 206 Fed. 797, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743.

en,[241] or if it appears that there was an intent on the part of the bank to accumulate funds of the bankrupt in its possession for its own ultimate security, or that there was any restriction imposed by it on the bankrupt's withdrawal of such funds, or an appropriation of such funds by the bank towards the payment of its claim,[242] or if the deposit was made for a special purpose and therefore did not create the relation of debtor and creditor, but that of bailor and bailee,[243] or if the claim was assigned with knowledge of insolvency and for the express purpose of being used as a set-off in expected bankruptcy proceedings.[244] And so, where a bank, to which the bankrupt was largely indebted on the day the latter became insolvent, closed its account and credited the balance, including a deposit just made, on the bankrupt's indebtedness to it, such deposit amounted to a payment pro tanto of the loan, and its application an unlawful preference.[245] And where a depositor's debt to the bank exceeds the amount standing to his credit, and he settles by giving the bank a check for the amount of such credit balance and cash for the remainder of the debt, the payment in cash will be a fraudulent preference, though the giving of the check may not.[246] On the same principle it is held that a bank which receives from a clearing house association the proceeds of checks presented for clearing by a member short-[241] First Nat. Bank of El Centro v. Harper, 254 Fed. 641, 166 C. C. A. 139, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82; In re Fairburn Oil & Fertilizer Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 835, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 211; Ridge Avenue Bank v. Studheim, 145 Fed. 798, 76 C. C. A. 362, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863; Ernst v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank, 201 Fed. 664, 120 C. C. A. 92, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Warner, 5 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 17,177; Knoll v. Commercial Trust Co., 249 Pa. 197, 94 Atl. 750, L. R. A. 1916A, 683, Ann. Cas. 1916C, 988. Payment by a bankrupt of notes held by a bank on which he was indorser, a few days before the bankruptcy and before their maturity, by a check on his deposit in such bank, is not valid as a set-off, but is a voidable preference. Heyman v. Third Nat. Bank (D. C.) 216 Fed. 685. The payment of the proceeds of checks by a bankrupt directly to a bank, with the intention of extinguishing a pre-existing indebtedness (a note owed to the bank) and without having such proceeds credited to his account, is voidable as a preference. Chisholm v. First Nat. Bank, 206 Ill. App. 493.

[242] In re National Lumber Co., 212 Fed. 928, 129 C. C. A. 448; In re Percy Ford Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 334, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 919; Johnson v. Gratiot County State Bank, 193 Mich. 452, 160 N. W. 544.

[243] Continental & Commercial Trust & Sav. Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 199 Fed. 704. But see this case on appeal, 229 U. S. 435, 33 Sup. Ct. 829, 57 L. Ed. 1268, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

[244] In re Shults, 132 Fed. 573, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

[245] Ernst v. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank (D. C.) 200 Fed. 295.

[246] Hough v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Biss. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 6,721. And see Farmers' State Bank v. Freeman, 249 Fed. 579, 161 C. C. A. 505, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286. Where a bank, holding its depositor's demand note, on discovering that his financial condition was unsatisfactory, demanded a check for the amount of the deposit, and on receiving it, canceled the note, and took a new note for the amount due, less the deposit, the transaction was held a payment to the bank and a voidable preference, and not an exercise of the right of set-off. In re Cross (D. C.) 265 Fed. 769, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

ly before suspending payment, cannot escape liability to account to the estate in bankruptcy of the defaulting member, where the clearing house, in revising the day's clearings because of such suspension, eliminated and returned the checks which had been debited against the defaulting, member, on the theory that, under the doctrine of rescission and following of trust funds, the bank had the right to appropriate any property of the defaulting member and apply it to the reduction of an advance of currency made on that day, especially where such currency was paid out by such defaulting member over its counter to its customers;[247] nor is the transaction any the less a preference because the clearing house, under its rules, might have called on its other members to pay pro rata the amount of the checks drawn upon the defaulting member, and might have treated the credits in favor of the defaulting member as belonging proportionally to the contributing members, since, even under these rules, a check which was the result of the clearings of the previous day would not be entitled to participation.[248] So also, the trustee in bankruptcy can recover the amount of a check given by the bankrupt in good faith before the adjudication in bankruptcy, but which was deposited in a bank other than the one on which it was drawn, and not presented to the drawee bank until after the adjudication.[249]

§ 591. Partial Payments on Running Accounts.—The provisions of the bankruptcy act relating to preferences are not so construed as to require a creditor to surrender partial payments received by him on account in the usual course of business where the transactions covered by the account between the parties, taken together, result in increasing the net indebtedness to the creditor and correspondingly increasing the bankrupt's estate.[250] Thus, payments made on an open account, though within four months of the debtor's adjudication in bankruptcy, which are received in good faith and without the creditor having knowledge of the debtor's insolvency, and which are less in amount than the credit sales made by such creditor to the debtor during that period, do not constitute a preference within the meaning of the bankruptcy law.[251] This [247] Rector v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 200 U. S. 420, 26 Sup. Ct. 294, 50 L. Ed. 533, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 347.

[248] Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., 200 U. S. 405, 26 Sup. Ct. 289, 50 L. Ed. 527, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 336.

[249] Edison Electric Illuminating Co. v. Tibbetts, 241 Fed. 468, 154 C. C. A. 300, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640.

[250] In re Dickson, 111 Fed. 726, 49 C. C. A. 574, 55 L. R. A. 349, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Sagor, 121 Fed. 658, 57 C. C. A. 412, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; Kimball v. E. A. Rosenham Co., 114 Fed. 85, 52 C. C. A. 33, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718; C. S. Morey Mercantile Co. v. Schiffer, 114 Fed. 447, 52 C. C. A. 249, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; Butterfield v. Woodman, 223 Fed. 956, 139 C. C. A. 436, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510; Dunlap v. Seattle Nat. Bank, 93 Wash. 568, 161 Pac. 364. Compare In re Arndt, 104 Fed. 234, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

[251] Jaquith v. Alden, 189 U. S. 78, 23 Sup. Ct. 649, 47 L. Ed. 717, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; Yaple v. Dahl-Millikan rule has been applied in a case involving transactions between a stockbroker (the bankrupt) and a customer. Four months before the adjudication, the broker was indebted to the customer to the extent of $1,550, and afterwards he was employed to purchase and carry stocks on a margin, receiving considerable sums of money from the customer, and paying him considerable, but less, sums as profits on his operations. At the date of the adjudication, the bankrupt owed the customer $6,500. It was held that no injustice would be done in this case by treating the parties simply as debtor and creditor, and as the effect of the whole series of transactions was to increase the net indebtedness to the customer, and presumably to increase the bankrupt's estate, the customer was not in the position of one who had received a voidable preference.[252]

But payments made by an insolvent person to his landlord within four months of his adjudication in bankruptcy, and applied by the landlord, not to rent for the current year, but to rent in arrears, constitute a preference.[253]

§ 592. Time of Giving Preference.—A preference given to a creditor, whether in the form of a payment, transfer of property, or security, is not contrary to the bankruptcy law unless given within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, or after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication. If it antedates that period, it is not impeachable in the subsequent bankruptcy of the debtor, nor can the creditor be required to surrender it.[254]

Grocery Co., 193 U. S. 526, 24 Sup. Ct. 552, 48 L. Ed. 776, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596; Jaquith v. Alden, 118 Fed. 270, 55 C. C. A. 364, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165.

[252] In re Topliff, 114 Fed. 323, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141. Compare In re Gaylord, 113 Fed. 131, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

[253] In re Louis J. Bergdoll Motor Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 87, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

[254] Atherton v. Beaman (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 878, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212; In re Baird (D. C.) 245 Fed. 504, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; In re Martinez (D. C.) 223 Fed. 433, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; Hagar v. Watt (D. C.) 232 Fed. 373, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; Sturdivant Bank v. Schade, 195 Fed. 188, 115 C. C. A. 140, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Jackson v. Sedgwick, 189 Fed. 508, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 836; In re Arden, 188 Fed. 475, 26 Am Bankr. Rep. 684; In re Farrell, 176 Fed. 505, 100 C. C. A. 63, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826; Wood v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 143 Fed. 424, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; In re Kindt, 101 Fed. 107, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148; In re Terrill, 100 Fed. 778, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Wise, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 151; Maurer v. Frantz, 4 N. B. R. 431; Ashby v. Steere, 2 Woodb. & M. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 576; Pratt v. Christie, 95 App. Div. 282, 88 N. Y. Supp. 585; Joseph v. Raff, 82 App. Div. 47, 81 N. Y. Supp. 546; Brown v. City Nat. Bank, 72 Misc. Rep. 201, 131 N. Y. Supp. 92; McKay v. Weager, 134 N. Y. Supp. 66; Hurlbutt v. Brown, 72 N. H. 235, 55 Atl. 1046; Aretz v. Kloos, 89 Minn. 432, 95 N. W. 216, 769; Hawes v. Bank of Elberton, 124 Ga. 567, 52 S. E. 922; Beatty v. Dudley, 80 Ky. 381; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Slaton, 180 Ky. 700, 203 S. W. 565; Arbury v. De Niord (Sup.) 152 N. Y. Supp. 763; Tube City Min. & Mill Co. v. Otterson, 16 Ariz. 305, 146 Pac. 203, L. R. A. 1916E, 303. As to the validity of renewals of liens or securities, see Brent v. Simpson, 238 Fed. 285, 151 C. C. A. 301, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 813; Stockgrowers' State Bank v. Corker, 220

According to the prevailing opinion, a preference given to a creditor by means of a note or bond with warrant of attorney to confess judgment, is given, not when the note and warrant are executed and delivered, but when the warrant is executed by the entry of a judgment thereon and the levy of an execution on the debtor's property. Hence if judgment is entered on such a warrant within four months before bankruptcy, under circumstances making it fraudulent or preferential, it is not saved by the fact that the warrant may have been given any length of time before.[255] But there are some highly respectable authorities to the contrary.[256] Where the alleged preference consists of the giving of security in the nature of a mortgage, its liability to be avoided in subsequent bankruptcy proceedings may depend upon the date when it was recorded.[257] But aside from this question, it may be stated as a general rule that a mortgage, pledge, or bill of sale of chattels takes effect from the time it is given, rather than from the time when the mortgagee or pledgee takes possession of the goods. Hence if the security was valid when given (at least as between the parties), and was given more than four months before the institution of bankruptcy proceedings against the mortgagor or pledgor, it cannot be assailed as a preference merely because the act of the secured creditor in taking possession occurred within that period, but such act will be considered as relating back to the inception of the lien.[258] Likewise, an agreement to pledge collaterals as security, or to assign a claim against a third person, a particular fund, or the like, may constitute an equitable assignment thereof, and if so, will take effect, so far as regards this provi-

Fed. 614, 136 C. C. A. 222, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392.

[255] In re Moyer, 93 Fed. 188, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; Hood v. Karner, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 160, 5 N. B. R. 348, Fed. Cas. No. 6,664; Golson v. Niehoff, 2 Biss. 434, 5 N. B. R. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 5,524; In re Lord, 5 N. B. R. 318, Fed. Cas. No. 8,503; Ford v. Keys, Fed. Cas. No. 4,933.

[256] Balfour v. Wheeler, 18 Fed. 893; Field v. Baker, 12 Blatchf. 438, 11 N. B. R. 415, Fed. Cas. No. 4,762; Shimer v. Huber, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 402, 19 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 12,787; Lonergan v. Fenlon, Fed. Cas. No. 8,475.

[257] See infra, § 594. And see In re Cahill (D. C.) 208 Fed. 193, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794.

[258] Thompson v. Fairbanks, 196 U. S. 516, 25 Sup. Ct. 306, 49 L. Ed. 577, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; Humphrey v. Tatman, 198 U. S. 91, 25 Sup. Ct. 567, 49 L. Ed. 956, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; In re East End Mantel & Tile Co., 202 Fed. 275, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793; First Nat. Bank v. Lanz, 202 Fed. 117, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; Fisher v. Zollinger, 149 Fed. 54, 79 C. C. A. 76; In re National Valve Co., 140 Fed. 679, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524; In re Rogers & Woodward, 132 Fed. 560, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; In re Automobile Livery Service Co., 176 Fed. 792, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799; Thompson v. Fairbanks, 75 Vt. 361, 56 Atl. 11, 104 Am. St. Rep. 899; Woods v. Klein, 223 Pa. St. 256, 72 Atl. 523; Christ v. Zehner, 212 Pa. St. 188, 61 Atl. 822; Farnham v. Friedmeyer, 109 Ill. App. 54; Coggan v. Ward, 215 Mass. 13, 102 N. E. 336; Kettenbach v. Walker, 32 Idaho, 544, 186 Pac. 912. But see In re Ball, 123 Fed. 164, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564; Landis v. McDonald, 88 Mo. App. 335; In re Klingaman, 101 Fed. 691, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

sion of the bankruptcy law, from the date of the agreement and not from the time of the actual delivery or formal pledge of the subject-matter.[259] But to constitute an equitable assignment within this rule there must be something more than a mere promise to assign upon a future contingency, something, in fact, sufficient to bind the parties in a court of chancery and to justify the application of the rule that equity will regard that as done which ought to have been done.[260] An agreement to give a mortgage, if definite and certain and relating to specific property, will be held in equity as equivalent to an actual mortgage, and may be sustained in the bankruptcy proceedings though actually executed within the four months period.[261] So also, where the mortgage first offered to the creditor was rejected by him because considered defective in form, a subsequent mortgage accepted and delivered will relate back to the former.[262] And where there was a valid transfer of goods by the bankrupt to a creditor in payment of the debt, sufficient to pass title, more than four months before the bankruptcy, the rights of the creditor will not be affected by the fact that the debtor, within the four months, entertaining a doubt as to the validity of the transaction, attempted to perfect it by filing a claim of exemption with reference to the goods transferred and then executing a bill of sale to the creditor.[263] But a transfer of property by a corporation as security for a past indebtedness, within four months prior to [259] McDonald v. Daskam, 116 Fed. 276, 63 C. C. A. 554, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543; Godwin v. Murchison Nat. Bank, 145 N. C. 320, 59 S. E. 154, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 935; Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Cotton Manufacturers' Sales Co. (D. C.) 209 Fed. 629; Britton v. Union Inv. Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 111, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; Wiener v. Union Trust Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 709, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610. An agreement made more than four months before bankruptcy, by which a fund was created for the payment of claims against the bankrupt, may create an equitable lien in favor of a claimant, the payment of which within the four months would not operate as a preference. Root Mfg. Co. v. Johnson, 219 Fed. 397, 135 C. C. A. 139, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[260] Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 Fed. 800, 145 C. C. A. 620, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; First Nat. Bank v. Yerkes, 238 Fed. 278, 151 C. C. A. 294, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136; Johnston v. Huff, Andrews & Moyler Co., 133 Fed. 704, 66 C. C. A. 534, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287; Long v. Farmers' State Bank, 147 Fed. 360, 77 C. C. A. 538, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 585, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103. A lien on part of the raw material used in a factory was held not to support an assignment to the holder of all of the accounts or finished products sold, made within four months prior to bankruptcy of the manufacturer. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Corr, 221 Fed. 419, 137 C. C. A. 217, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527.

[261] Murray v. Beal, 23 Utah, 548, 65 Pac. 726. Compare Lathrop Bank v. Holland, 205 Fed. 143, 123 C. C. A. 375, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62.

[262] In re Montgomery, 12 N. B. R. 321, Fed. Cas. No. 9,732. But mortgages promised and given more than four months before bankruptcy for a present consideration have been held voidable preferences where they were not acknowledged until within the four months. In re Caslon Press, 229 Fed. 133, 143 C. C. A. 409, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127.

[263] In re Ratliffe (D. C.) 177 Fed. 587.

its bankruptcy, when it was insolvent and the creditor had reason to believe it insolvent, is voidable as a preference, even though such transfer was made in ratification of an unauthorized transfer made by an officer of the corporation before the four months period.[264]

Where the alleged preference is a payment in money, the date is fixed by its receipt by the creditor, rather than by any prior promise or agreement to pay. Thus, where the bankrupt gave his note to a creditor, which he afterwards paid, the preference, if any, is in the payment and not in the giving of the note, and must be considered as having been given at the date of such payment.[265] But where a note of the bankrupt, payable at a bank, was presented to the bank for payment on the day of its maturity, and was duly certified, and subsequently paid by the bank, the time of certification is to be taken as the time of payment, in determining whether the payment was preferential.[266] But the fact that accounts assigned by the bankrupt to a creditor as collateral security more than four months before the bankruptcy are collected within the four months period, does not entitle the trustee to recover such collections as preferences.[267] And where a debtor makes an absolute sale of property, under an agreement that the purchase money shall be applied by the vendee in paying the claims of certain creditors of the seller, the time of giving a preference, if any, is the time when the buyer takes possession of the property, and not the time when he pays those creditors.[268] A secret advantage given by a debtor to one creditor in a composition, made several years prior to the debtor's bankruptcy, cannot be reached and avoided as a preference under the present bankruptcy statute.[269]

§ 593. Same; Time of Filing Petition.—The four months period within which preferences given by a bankrupt may be declared void is to be determined by computing four calendar months backward from the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and not by comput-

[264] In re W. W. Mills Co., 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; In re Kansas City Stone & Marble Mfg. Co., 9 N. B. R. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 7,610.

[265] In re Wolf & Levy, 122 Fed. 127, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[266] In re Frazin, 201 Fed. 86, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214.

[267] Lowell v. International Trust Co., 158 Fed. 781, 86 C. C. A. 137, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 853; In re Bird, 180 Fed. 229, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24. A garnishment lien cannot be tacked to the lien of an execution issued on a judgment against defendant, and levied upon the indebtedness owing the garnishee, so as to make out the four-month period. Marsh v. Wilson Bros., 124 Minn. 254, 144 N. W. 959.

[268] Fitch v. Bank of Grand Rapids, 146 Wis. 439, 131 N. W. 1095.

[269] Batchelder & Lincoln Co. v. Whitmore, 122 Fed. 355, 58 C. C. A. 517, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641. But compare In re Chaplin, 115 Fed. 162, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121.

ing the time by days.[270] And either the day on which the transfer or payment was made, or the day on which the petition was filed, must be excluded.[271] Amendments to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy filed by a single creditor or by an insufficient number of creditors, whereby other creditors join in the petition and set out their claims, relate back to the original filing of the petition, and do not advance the date of its filing, with reference to reckoning the prohibited period for preferences, though such joinder of creditors was necessary to make it sufficient.[272] But if the petition originally filed was void, as, for instance, because the creditors joining in it were estopped or disqualified to do so, an intervening petition subsequently filed by duly qualified creditors can draw no support from it, and hence payments made more than four months before the filing of the intervening petition, though within four months before the first petition, are not preferential.[273] A transfer of property made on the same day on which the petition in bankruptcy is filed will constitute an unlawful preference, if the other essentials of a preference are present.[274] But under the former statutes, a payment or other disposition of property by the debtor after the filing of the petition was not regarded as a preference, but was held void as an unlawful meddling with property already constructively in the custody of the law.[275] But this point is covered by the present statute, which makes a preference voidable if given "after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication."[276] And it will be observed that "adjudication," with respect to the time, means the date of the entry of a decree that the defendant is a bankrupt, or, if such decree is appealed from, then the date when such decree is finally confirmed.[277]

§ 594. Same; Time of Recording or Filing Lien.—The bankruptcy act provides that, "where the preference consists in a transfer, such period of four months shall not expire until four months after the date of the recording or registering of the transfer, if by law such recording or registering is required."[278] Another provision of the statute, relating [270] Kelly v. Skaggs, 90 Ill. App. 543. And see Rubenstein v. Lottow, 223 Mass. 227, 111 N. E. 973.

[271] Dutcher v. Wright, 94 U. S. 553, 24 L. Ed. 130; Kelly v. Skaggs, 90 Ill. App. 543; Whitley Grocery Co. v. Roach, 115 Ga. 918, 42 S. E. 282.

[272] First State Bank v. Haswell, 174 Fed. 209, 98 C. C. A. 217, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; Manning v. Evans, 156 Fed. 106, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 217. See Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. 758.

[273] Despres v. Galbraith, 213 Fed. 190, 129 C. C. A. 534, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170.

[274] Keller v. Falckney, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 483, 94 S. W. 103; Morse v. Godfrey, 3 Story, 364, Fed. Cas. No. 9,856.

[275] In re Randall, 1 Sawy. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 11,552.

[276] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60a.

[277] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 2.

[278] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60a. And see Carey v. Donohue, 209 Fed. 328, 126 C. C. A. 254, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210; In to the four months period after the commission of an act of bankruptcy within which the petition may be filed, declares that if the act of bankruptcy is the giving of a preference, the time shall not expire until four months after the recording or registering thereof "if by law such recording or registering is required or permitted, or, if it is not, from the date when the beneficiary takes notorious, exclusive, or continuous possession of the property, unless the petitioning creditors have received actual notice of such transfer or assignment." [279] But these two provisions are entirely independent and do not in any way limit or control each other.[280] Under the former bankruptcy laws it was held that a chattel mortgage given to secure a creditor more than four months before a petition in bankruptcy was filed, but kept off the record until within the four months, was not a fraudulent preference, for the limitation began to run from the time the security was given, and not from the time when creditors might have notice of it.[281] But it will be perceived that this is distinctly changed by the present statute.

There has been some difficulty in determining when the recording or registering of a transfer is "required by law" within the meaning of this provision. Some cases have held that the word "required" has reference to the character of the instrument of transfer required to be recorded by the state law, rather than to the particular individuals who, by reason of adventitious circumstances, may or may not be affected by an unrecorded instrument,[282] and that a state statute which requires a conveyance or transfer to be recorded in order to be effectual against any class or classes of persons is a law by which such recording is "required," [283] or that a law may "require" a chattel mortgage to be recorded although it does not make an unrecorded mortgage void absolutely and under all circumstances.[284] But there is strong authority in support of the rule that, where the local law is such that failure to file or record a chattel mort-re Alden (D. C.) 233 Fed. 160, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 611.

[279] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3b. And see Williams v. German-American Trust Co., 219 Fed. 507, 135 C. C. A. 257, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; Staples v. Warren, 46 App. D. C. 363.

[280] Little v. Holley-Brooks Hardware Co., 133 Fed. 874, 67 C. C. A. 46, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 422. And see Murphy v. W. T. Murphy & Co., 126 Iowa, 57, 101 N. W. 486; Asbury Park Building & Loan Ass'n v. Shepherd (N. J. Eq.) 50 Atl. 65.

[281] Matthews v. Westphal, 1 McCrary, 446, 48 Fed. 664; Gilbert v. Vail, 60 Vt. 261, 14 Atl. 542. And see Miller v. Shriver, 197 Pa. St. 191, 46 Atl. 926; Babbitt v. Kelly, 96 Mo. App. 529, 70 S. W. 384; National Bank of Fredericksburg v. Conway, 1 Hughes, 37, 14 N. B. R. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 10,037; Rogers v. Page, 140 Fed. 596, 72 C. C. A. 164, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[282] First Nat. Bank v. Connett, 142 Fed. 33, 73 C. C. A. 219, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

[283] Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank & Trust Co., 148 Fed. 975, 78 C. C. A. 597, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; Bowler v. First Nat. Bank, 21 S. D. 449, 113 N. W. 618, 130 Am. St. Rep. 725.

[284] First Nat. Bank v. Connett, 142 Fed. 33, 73 C. C. A. 219, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662.

gage or other such instrument does not affect its validity as between the parties or as against general creditors, but only as against creditors having a lien or subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers in good faith, the mortgage is not one which is "required" to be recorded or filed.[285]

This provision of the statute applies ordinarily to such instruments as deeds of conveyance,[286] deeds of trust in the nature of mortgages,[287] chattel mortgages,[288] and bills of sale of chattels.[289] But it does not apply to the lien given by an oral chattel mortgage,[290] nor to a conveyance of real estate absolute on its face but intended as a security, where the local law prohibits such a deed from being reduced to a mortgage except by a defeasance in writing, signed, sealed, and delivered by the grantor at the same time and recorded within sixty days.[291] And where a contract providing for the execution of a trust deed to secure bonds of a corporation given for advances is not recorded, a trust deed executed pursuant to such contract within four months prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings cannot take effect by relation as of the date of the contract in order to sustain the same as against unsecured creditors.[292]

The only effect of the provision concerning the recording or registering of a transfer is to carry forward the four months period within which a recordable transfer, which was in fact preferential, might be attacked as voidable, leaving the question whether or not the transfer constituted a voidable preference to be determined according to the conditions and intentions of the parties at the date when it was actually made; and a [285] Bailey v. Baker Ice Mach. Co., 239 U. S. 268, 36 Sup. Ct. 50, 60 L. Ed. 275, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; Bonner v. First Nat. Bank, 248 Fed. 692, 160 C. C. A. 592, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60; Hoshaw v. Cosgriff, 247 Fed. 22, 159 C. C. A. 240, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; In re Roberts (D. C.) 227 Fed. 177, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 137; Deupree v. Watson, 216 Fed. 483, 132 C. C. A. 543; In re Boyd, 213 Fed. 774, 130 C. C. A. 288, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; In re Jacobson & Perrill (D. C.) 200 Fed. 812, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 603; Rogers v. Page, 140 Fed. 596, 72 C. C. A. 164, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Pipkin Drug Co., 136 Fed. 396, 69 C. C. A. 240, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; In re Hunt, 139 Fed. 283; In re Chadwick (D. C.) 140 Fed. 674, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; Wooldridge v. Williams, 5 Alaska, 149; Pew v. Price, 251 Mo. 614, 158 S. W. 338. Compare Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank & Trust Co., 148 Fed. 975, 78 C. C. A. 597, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628. And see First Nat. Bank v. Connett, 142 Fed. 33, 73 C. C. A. 219, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 662; In re Montague, 143 Fed. 428, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

[286] Ragan v. Donovan, 189 Fed. 138, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311; In re Cahill, 208 Fed. 193, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794.

[287] Harris v. Exchange Nat. Bank, 4 Dill. 133, 14 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 6,119. And see Marsh v. Leseman, 242 Fed. 484, 155 C. C. A. 260, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[288] In re Mission Fixture & Mantel Co. (D. C.) 180 Fed. 263, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 873; First Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 68 Neb. 641, 94 N. W. 837, 4 Ann. Cas. 485.

[289] In re Reynolds, 153 Fed. 295, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666. But see Coggan v. Ward, 215 Mass. 13, 102 N. E. 336.

[290] Mower v. McCarthy, 79 Vt. 142, 64 Atl. 578, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 418, 118 Am. St. Rep. 942.

[291] English v. Ross, 140 Fed. 630, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370.

[292] Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 466, 76 C. C. A. 236, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639.

transfer which was then made for a present consideration, and was therefore not preferential, does not become so because of delay in recording it; in other words, delay in placing the instrument on the record does not warrant the court in treating it as if made as security for an antecedent debt.[293] And it has been decided by a learned court in an able opinion that this rule is not affected by the amendment of 1910, changing the wording of this section of the statute.[294] It may perhaps be conceded that this is true in the case where a present and adequate consideration was given at the time the transfer was made. But in all other cases the amendment explicitly provides that a transfer shall be voidable as preferential if "at the time of the transfer, or of the entry of the judgment, or of the recording or registering of the transfer," the bankrupt shall be insolvent, and if the transfer shall "then" operate as a preference, and the person receiving it shall "then" have reasonable cause to believe that its enforcement will effect a preference.[295]

§ 595. Insolvency of Debtor.—In order that a judgment rendered against a debtor, or a transfer of property or payment of money made by him, should operate as a voidable preference, it is essential that he should have been insolvent, for if solvent he has the right to give voluntary satisfaction to any one or more of his creditors, leaving the others to their legal remedies.[296] But the amendatory act of 1910 so far changes this [293] Martin v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 228 Fed. 651, 143 C. C. A. 173, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; Big Four Implement Co. v. Wright, 207 Fed. 535, 125 C. C. A. 577, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1223, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125. In re Watson, 201 Fed. 962, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871; Debus v. Yates, 193 Fed. 427, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823; In re Jackson Brick & Tile Co., 189 Fed. 636, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 915; In re Sturtevant, 188 Fed. 196, 110 C. C. A. 68, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574; Mattley v. Giesler, 187 Fed. 970, 110 C. C. A. 90, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116; In re Sayed, 185 Fed. 962, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; Seager v. Lamm, 95 Minn. 325, 104 N. W. 1; Bradley, Clark & Co. v. Benson, 93 Minn. 91, 100 N. W. 670; Farnham v. Friedmeyer, 109 Ill. App. 54; Claridge v. Evans, 137 Wis. 218, 118 N. W. 198, 803, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 144; Gray & Dudley Hardware Co. v. Guthrie, 200 Ala. 6, 75 South. 318.

[294] In re Watson, 201 Fed. 962, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 871. And see Martin v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 228 Fed. 651, 143 C. C. A. 173, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; Brigman v. Covington, 219 Fed. 500, 135 C. C. A. 250, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644.

[295] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60b, as amended by Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838. And see In re T. H. Bunch Commission Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 243, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[296] Angle v. Bankers' Surety Co., 244 Fed. 401, 157 C. C. A. 27, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; Stephens v. Union Bank & Trust Co., 250 Fed. 192, 162 C. C. A. 328, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; In re Kassel, 195 Fed. 492, 115 C. C. A. 402, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233; Coleman v. Decatur Egg Case Co., 186 Fed. 136, 108 C. C. A. 248, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248; In re Sayed, 185 Fed. 962, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; In re W. W. Mills Co., 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; In re Wittenberg Veneer & Panel Co., 108 Fed. 593, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271; In re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Publishing Co., 13 N. B. R. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 10,559; Empire State Trust Co. v. William F. Fisher Co., 67 N. J. Eq. 88, 57 Atl. 502; Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Kastor, 17 Wyom. 180, 97 Pac. 921; Northrop v. P. W. Finn Const. Co., 260 Pa. 15, 103 Atl. 544; Keystone Brewing Co. v. Schermer, 241 Pa. 361, 88 Atl. 657.

rule that, in the case of a transfer required by law to be recorded, it is sufficient if the debtor is insolvent either at the time of making the transfer or at the time it is recorded.[297] But it is not necessary in any case that the insolvent condition of the debtor at the time of making the transfer should be perpetuated by the existence of the same debts as compared with the same assets, up to the time the trustee takes action to avoid the conveyance. Continuous insolvency is sufficient, though none of the debts existing at the time of the transfer may remain, if new ones have been contracted in their place.[298] In the case of a partnership, it must be shown that both the firm and the individual partners are insolvent or were insolvent at the time, that is, that the aggregate of the partnership and individual assets is not sufficient to pay the debts.[299]

It is not enough to show that the debtor was financially embarrassed and hard pressed by his creditors. This condition may exist and yet he may be solvent.[300] "Insolvency" must here be understood in the sense given to it by the bankruptcy act itself, that is, "a person shall be deemed insolvent when the aggregate of his property, exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed, or removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, with intent to defraud, hinder or delay his creditors, shall not, at a fair valuation, be sufficient in amount to pay his debts." [301] In making this estimate and comparison, all the property of the debtor which has value must be included, not omitting property exempt under the law of the state, and including property transferred in payment of or as security for a just debt, irrespective of whether or not it constitutes a preference, but not property transferred in fraud

297 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60b, as amended by Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838. And see McElvain v. Hardesty, 169 Fed. 31, 94 C. C. A. 399, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320.

298 O'Neill v. Kilduff, 81 Conn. 116, 70 Atl. 640. But the insolvency of the debtor at the time of giving an alleged preference is not shown by proof of his insolvency a month later. Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Conn.) 114 Atl. 120.

299 Levor v. Seiter, 34 Misc. Rep. 382, 69 N. Y. Supp. 987; Rodolf v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Okl. 631, 121 Pac. 629, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 204. And see supra, § 114.

300 In re Farmers' Supply Co., 170 Fed. 502, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460.

301 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 15. And see Ogden v. Reddish, 200 Fed. 977, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; Empire State Trust Co. v. William F. Fisher Co., 67 N. J. Eq. 88, 57 Atl. 502; Des Moines Sav. Bank v. Morgan Jewelry Co., 123 Iowa, 432, 99 N. W. 121; Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529, 76 Pac. 243; In re Chappell, 113 Fed. 545, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; Paper v. Stern, 198 Fed. 642, 117 C. C. A. 346, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592; Hicks Co. v. Moore (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 773, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; William Schuette & Co. v. Schwank, 265 Pa. 576, 109 Atl. 531; Newman v. Tootle-Campbell Dry Goods Co., 174 Mo. App. 528, 160 S. W. 825. Contra, see Simpson v. Western Hardware & Metal Co., 97 Wash. 626, 167 Pac. 113. The test of insolvency is not merely that the debtor may not be able to pay all his debts in money, if all were presented at the given time, but that all his property at a fair valuation would then be insufficient for the purpose. In re Walker Starter Co., 235 Fed. 285, 148 C. C. A. 645, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122; McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702.

of creditors.[302] Property subject to a mortgage must be included if the mortgage is not shown to be fraudulent as against creditors.[303] And accounts against third persons in favor of the debtor are to be reckoned in if they are not shown in any way to be uncollectible.[304] Where the principal asset consists of a plant or property which loses value if not kept in continuous operation,—such as a hotel, a periodical publication, and some kinds of manufacturing establishments,—the value assigned to it in making the estimate must be what it is worth as a going concern and not what it is worth as dead property after bankruptcy has intervened.[305] On the other hand, in adding up the bankrupt's debts, it is proper to include his liability as guarantor of the debt of a third person, the latter being insolvent, though the guaranty was oral and therefore within the statute of frauds.[306]

The trustee in bankruptcy, assailing a judgment or transfer as preferential, must assume the burden of showing the insolvency of the debtor by satisfactory and sufficient evidence; in the absence of this, the transaction cannot be disturbed.[307] The existence of unsatisfied judgments against the debtor does not necessarily prove his insolvency,[308] though the fact that his paper has gone to protest may do so, in connection with other circumstances.[309] Evidence showing that the debtor was not in possession of ready money with which to meet a particular debt, of which he obtained a renewal, falls short of what is required,[310] and the fact that a corporation, engaged in the performance of a contract which required a considerable expenditure before it was entitled to any 302 Utah Ass'n of Credit Men v. Boyle Furniture Co., 39 Utah, 518, 117 Pac. 800.

303 Posey v. McManis, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 452, 67 S. W. 792.

304 Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Kastor, 17 Wyom. 180, 97 Pac. 921.

305 In re Klein, 197 Fed. 241; J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Goembel, 143 Fed. 295, 74 C. C. A. 433, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. John A. Roebling's Sons Co., 107 Fed. 71, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368. But this rule does not apply unless the debtor was in fact a going concern at the time of the alleged preference. In re Fred D. Jones Co. (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 818, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

306 Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349. Debts of the bankrupt's partnership on which he is jointly liable, and whose debts, on its dissolution, he had agreed to pay, are properly added to his personal debts, to ascertain his entire indebtedness. Rubenstein v. Lottow, 223 Mass. 227, 111 N. E. 973.

307 Cleage v. Laidley, 149 Fed. 346, 79 C. C. A. 284, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; In re Clifford, 136 Fed. 475, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; In re Alexander, 102 Fed. 464, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376; Evans v. National Broadway Bank, 48 Misc. Rep. 248, 96 N. Y. Supp. 789; Kimball v. Dresser, 98 Me. 519, 57 Atl. 787; Deland v. Miller & Chaney Bank, 119 Iowa, 368, 93 N. W. 304; Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 467, 75 N. E. 837; McAleer v. People's Bank, 202 Ala. 256, 80 South. 94. Insolvency may, and in many cases must, be proved by proof of other facts, from which the ultimate fact of insolvency may be presumed or inferred. Rosenberg v. Semple, 257 Fed. 72, 168 C. C. A. 284, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

308 Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529, 76 Pac. 243; Levor v. Seiter, 34 Misc. Rep. 382, 69 N. Y. Supp. 987.

309 In re Louis, 3 Ben. 153, 2 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 8,527.

310 In re Chappell (D. C.) 113 Fed. 545, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

payments, arranged with a bank for making overdrafts, is no evidence that it was insolvent.[311]

§ 596. Intention of Debtor.—Under the bankruptcy acts which preceded the present statute it was always held to be an essential element of a voidable preference that the debtor should have intended the transaction to have that effect, that is, that he should have willed and meant to give the particular creditor an advantage over others or a larger share of his debt than they could obtain. And the act of 1898, before the latest amendment, made it a condition to the voidability of a preferential transfer, not exactly that the debtor should have intended to give a preference, but that the person receiving it or to be benefited by it should have had "reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference." And a majority of the cases decided before 1910 ruled that there could be no voidable preference under the statute unless there was an actual intention (not merely an assumed or attributed intention) on the part of the debtor to give a preference to the creditor receiving it or to be benefited by it.

But all uncertainty on this point was removed by the amendment of 1910, affecting this section of the bankruptcy law,[312] which (aside from the limitation as to time) only requires that the debtor shall be insolvent, that the transfer shall operate as a preference, and that the creditor shall have reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the transfer will effect a preference. Since this amendment, therefore, it is not necessary to prove the existence of the debtor's intent to prefer, or the cause for belief on the creditor's part that a preference was intended, or that the debtor knew of his insolvency, the test being whether the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that the bankrupt was then insolvent, and that, in accepting and retaining the transfer, the creditor would receive a larger percentage of his debt than any other creditor of the same class.[313]

311 McDonald v. Clearwater Shortline Ry. Co. (C. C.) 164 Fed. 1007.

312 Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60b.

313 Richardson v. Germania Bank (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 320, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Jones (D. C.) 259 Fed. 927, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 253; In re Campion (D. C.) 256 Fed. 902, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625; Heyman v. Third Nat. Bank (D. C.) 216 Fed. 685; Covington v. Brigman (D. C.) 210 Fed. 499, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35; In re Herman (D. C.) 207 Fed. 594, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; In re Harrison Bros. (D. C.) 202 Fed. 243; Abele v. Beacon Trust Co., 228 Mass. 438, 117 N. E. 833; Batchelder v. Home Nat. Bank, 218 Mass. 420, 105 N. E. 1052; Rogers v. American Halibut Co., 216 Mass. 227, 103 N. E. 689; Wilson v. Mitchell-Woodbury Co., 214 Mass. 514, 102 N. E. 119; Patterson v. Baker Grocery Co., 73 Or. 433, 144 Pac. 673. Compare Grandison v. Robertson, 231 Fed. 785, 145 C. C. A. 605, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 452; In re Freeman Cotting Coat Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 548; Wills v. Venus Silk Glove Mfg. Co., 170 App. Div. 352, 156 N. Y. Supp. 115; People's Bank v. McAleer, 204 Ala. 101, 85 South. 413.

§ 597. Creditor's Knowledge or Reasonable Cause of Belief.—To constitute a voidable preference it is strictly essential that the person receiving it or to be benefited by it, or his agent acting for him in the transaction, should have reasonable cause to believe that a preference will be effected by the enforcement of the judgment, transfer, security, or payment, as the case may be. Failing this, it cannot be recovered from him by the trustee in bankruptcy, nor can he be required to surrender it, notwithstanding that it was given by an insolvent debtor and within four months prior to his bankruptcy, and although it may actually result in the preferred creditor's receiving full satisfaction or a larger proportion of his debt than other creditors receive.[314] But it is im-

[314] Pyle v. Texas Transport & Terminal Co., 238 U. S. 90, 35 Sup. Ct. 667, 59 L. Ed. 1215, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843; Joseph Wild & Co. v. Provident Life & Trust Co., 214 U. S. 292, 29 Sup. Ct. 619, 53 L. Ed. 1003, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109; First Nat. Bank v. Galbraith (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 687; Frederick v. People's Bank of California, 246 Fed. 84, 158 C. C. A. 310, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473; Chambers v. Continental Trust Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 441, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re French (D. C.) 231 Fed. 255, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; Rosenthal v. Bronx Nat. Bank (D. C.) 222 Fed. 83, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273; Stockgrowers State Bank v. Corker, 220 Fed. 614, 136 C. C. A. 222, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; Sheppard-Strassheim Co. v. Black, 211 Fed. 643, 128 C. C. A. 147, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574; L. A. Becker Co. v. Gill, 206 Fed. 36, 124 C. C. A. 170, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429; Mayes v. Palmer, 208 Fed. 97, 125 C. C. A. 325, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225; Reber v. Shulman, 183 Fed. 564, 106 C. C. A. 110, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep 475; Greenhall v. Carnegie Trust Co., 180 Fed. 812, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co., 178 Fed. 136; In re Kullberg, 176 Fed. 585, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758; In re Evans Lumber Co., 176 Fed. 643, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 881; In re Neill-Pinckney-Maxwell Co., 170 Fed. 481, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401; In re Burlage Bros., 169 Fed. 1006, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 410; Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, 163 Fed. 155, 89 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 919; Irish v. Citizens' Trust Co., 163 Fed. 880, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39; Coder v. Arts, 152 Fed. 943, 82 C. C. A. 91, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; In re Maher, 144 Fed. 503, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; McNair v. McIntyre, 113 Fed. 113, 51 C. C. A. 89, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638; In re Dundas, 111 Fed. 500, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Blair, 102 Fed. 987, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220; In re Eggert, 98 Fed. 843, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; Levor v. Seiter, 69 App. Div. 33, 74 N. Y. Supp. 499; Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 467, 75 N. E. 837; Cullinane v. State Bank, 123 Iowa, 340, 98 N. W. 887; Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 84 Miss. 54, 36 South. 65; Wilson v. Weighle, 69 N. J. Eq. 561, 62 Atl. 458; Galveston Dry Goods Co. v. Frenkel, 39 Tex. Civ. App. 19, 86 S. W. 949; Johnston v. George D. Witt Shoe Co., 103 Va. 611, 50 S. E. 153; Lampkin v. People's Nat. Bank, 98 Mo. App. 239, 71 S. W. 715; Hawes v. Bank of Elberton, 124 Ga. 567, 52 S. E. 922; Blankenbaker v. Charleston State Bank, 111 Ill. App. 393; North v. Taylor, 61 App. Div. 253, 70 N. Y. Supp. 339; Lewis v. First Nat. Bank, 46 Or. 182, 78 Pac. 990; Townes v. Alexander, 69 S. C. 23, 48 S. E. 214; Gamble v. Elkin, 205 Pa. St. 226, 54 Atl. 782; Johnson v. Anderson, 70 Neb. 233, 97 N. W. 339; Cummings v. Kansas City Wholesale Grocery Co., 123 Mo. App. 9, 99 S. W. 470; Herzberg v. Riddle, 171 Ala. 368, 54 South. 635; Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Kastor, 17 Wyo. 180, 97 Pac. 921; Stuart v. Farmers' Bank, 137 Wis. 66, 117 N. W. 820, 16 Ann. Cas. 821; Brooks v. Bank of Beaver City, 82 Kan. 597, 109 Pac. 409; Maxwell v. Davis Trust Co., 69 W. Va. 276, 71 S. E. 270; Soule v. First Nat. Bank, 26 Idaho, 66, 140 Pac. 1098; Kentucky Bank & Trust Co. v. Pritchett, 44 Okl. 87, 143 Pac. 338; Williams v. Davidson, 104 Wash. 315, 176 Pac. 334, 181 Pac. 874; Liberty Trust Co. v. Haggerty (N. J. Ch.) 113 Atl. 596. As respects the issue of the creditor's having reasonable portant to notice that the statute does not require that the preferred creditor should have any actual knowledge on the subject of the debtor's insolvency or the result of the transaction in giving a preference, nor even that he should have any actual belief on that point. What he really thinks or believes is entirely immaterial. What the law requires is "reasonable cause to believe," and if this exists it is enough, without regard to the actual state of the creditor's mind or opinion.[315] And the "preference" which a transferee must have reasonable cause to believe will be effected is not the preference or advantage over unsecured creditors necessarily obtained by one who acquires a mortgage or other lien on property, but a preference made and accepted to evade the rule for equal distribution to all creditors of the same class.[316]

As a first and essential requisite the creditor must have reasonable cause to believe that the debtor is insolvent. This is necessarily implied in, and must serve as a foundation for, reasonable cause to believe that a preference will result from the transaction. Without this, there can be no cause, within the limits of reason, for the creditor to suppose that he is gaining a preference, and consequently the transaction will not be voidable though it does actually result in a preference.[317] "As no great-cause to believe that the bankrupt was insolvent at the time of a payment to the creditor, the latter's subsequent knowledge is not material, and it does not matter what the debtor knew. Wrenn v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Conn.) 114 Atl. 120.

[315] Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 49, 20 L. Ed. 481; Healy v. Wehrung, 229 Fed. 686, 144 C. C. A. 96, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re The Leader, 190 Fed. 624, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 668; In re Hines, 144 Fed. 543, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495; Sundheim v. Ridge Avenue Bank, 138 Fed. 951, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; In re Eggert (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 735, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, 3 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676; Wilson v. Taylor, 154 N. C. 211, 70 S. E. 286; Utah Ass'n of Credit Men v. Boyle Furniture Co., 39 Utah, 518, 117 Pac. 800; Abele v. Beacon Trust Co., 228 Mass. 438, 117 N. E. 833; Underwood v. Winslow, 231 Mass. 595, 121 N. E. 524; Cauthorn v. Burley State Bank, 26 Idaho, 532, 144 Pac. 1108.

[316] In re Chicago Car Equipment Co., 211 Fed. 638, 128 C. C. A. 142, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617. And see In re Edwards (D. C.) 217 Fed. 102, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530; Shuetz v. Walter Boyt Saddlery Co., 166 Iowa, 523, 147 N. W. 897.

[317] Auffmordt v. Rasin, 102 U. S. 620, 26 L. Ed. 262; Bank of Commerce v. Brown, 249 Fed. 37, 161 C. C. A. 97, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; American Bank of Alaska v. Johnson, 245 Fed. 312, 157 C. C. A. 504, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; In re Looschen Piano Case Co. (D. C.) 259 Fed. 931, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; Rosenthal v. Bronx Nat. Bank, 231 Fed. 691, 145 C. C. A. 577, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 888; Egner v. Parshelsky Bros., 258 Fed. 238, 169 C. C. A. 304, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; In re Gottlieb & Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 139, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; In re Rockaway Soda Water Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 226 Fed. 520, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627; City Nat. Bank v. Slocum (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 11, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47; Kennard v. Behrer (D. C.) 270 Fed. 661, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70; In re Greenberger, 203 Fed. 583, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Ogden v. Reddish, 200 Fed. 977, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; In re Pfaffinger, 154 Fed. 523, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807; Wright v. Sampter, 152 Fed. 196, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Oliver, 109 Fed. 784, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Eggert, 98 Fed. 843, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; Stobaugh v. Mills, 8 N. B. R. 361, Fed. Cas. No. 13,461; Gillenwaters v. Miller, 49 Miss. 150; Pearsall v. Nassau er percentage could be received under the transaction if the debtor be solvent and all his debts be paid in full, a creditor cannot be said to have reasonable cause to believe the enforcement of the transfer would effect a preference, unless, either at the time the transfer was made or at the time it was recorded, he had reasonable cause to believe that his debtor was then insolvent." [318] As to knowledge of insolvency and the means of acquiring it, it is said that if a creditor knows that a payment to him is made out of a fund which, if the debtor should become bankrupt, would be needed equally by the other creditors, the transaction will constitute a voidable preference, if bankruptcy intervenes within four months.[319] And a managing officer and director of an insolvent corporation will be estopped to plead ignorance of its insolvency when he received a preference.[320] But a banker is entitled to transact business with a customer in the ordinary way, take renewal notes, and receive partial payments, and to assume that the customer is solvent, and is therefore not liable to restore payments when the latter becomes bankrupt.[321] It does not follow that because a creditor knows of the insolvency of a firm, he has any cause to believe in the insolvency of one of the partners who is his individual debtor.[322] But where a creditor of a corporation knows of the insolvency of the corporation, as well as of the insolvency of its controlling stockholders, a note given such creditor by stockholders for the amount of its claim against the corporation constitutes a legal fraud against individual creditors of the stockholders, and is not provable against them individually.[323] Neither the fact that a debtor's accounts are past due, nor the fact of his being financially embarrassed, is suffi-

Nat. Bank, 74 App. Div. 89, 77 N. Y. Supp. 11; Des Moines Sav. Bank v. Morgan Jewelry Co., 123 Iowa, 432, 99 N. W. 121; Wright v. Cotten, 140 N. C. 1, 52 S. E. 141; Evans v. Claridge, 137 Wis. 218, 118 N. W. 198, 803, 25 L. R. A. (N. S.) 144; Shelton v. First Nat. Bank, 31 Okl. 217, 120 Pac. 959; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 174 Ill. App. 339; Scott County Milling Co. v. Powers, 112 Miss. 798, 73 South. 792. See William Schuette & Co. v. Swank, 265 Pa. 576. 109 Atl. 531, holding that, where a contractor who, within four months, became a bankrupt, gave a creditor who had furnished lumber for the construction of certain buildings for a coal company an order on the coal company, which it accepted, the validity of the transaction did not turn upon the creditor's personal belief that the contractor was solvent, but upon his reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the transfer would effect a preference, such cause depending upon all the circumstances, and not merely upon the debtor's declaration that he was solvent.

[318] In re Sam Z. Lorch & Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 944, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784. The time for determining whether the creditor had cause to believe that a payment operates as a preference is the time of payment, and not the time of distribution. W. S. Peck & Co. v. Whitmer, 231 Fed. 893, 146 C. C. A. 89, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

[319] Scheuer v. Katzoff (D. C.) 233 Fed. 473, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476.

[320] Arnold v. Knapp, 75 W. Va. 804, 84 S. E. 895.

[321] Grandison v. Robertson (D. C.) 220 Fed. 985, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

[322] In re Hull (D. C.) 224 Fed. 796, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447; Jacobs v. Van Sickel (C. C.) 123 Fed. 340, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519.

[323] In re Hawkins (D. C.) 249 Fed. 355, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

cient to impeach the good faith of a creditor in taking security, so as to render it voidable as a preference, where there were circumstances which tended to explain such embarrassment upon grounds other than insolvency.[324] But in general it is enough if the creditor had knowledge or information of such facts and circumstances as would be calculated to put a reasonably prudent person on inquiry, and if such inquiry, when followed up, would lead to a knowledge of the debtor's insolvency.[325]

If the creditor knows or has reasonable ground to believe that the debtor is insolvent, then it may be inferred without further proof, that he has also reasonable ground to believe that the enforcement of the judgment or transfer which he takes will effect a preference, such being its natural and inevitable result,[326] at least if the payment, transfer, or security puts him in position to collect the whole amount of his claim. But if the preference alleged consists only in giving to one of the creditors a part of the amount of his claim, then he must have reasonable ground to believe that other creditors will not be able to secure so large a dividend, and even positive knowledge of the debtor's insolvency may not be sufficient to warn him of this. For though the debtor may not be able to pay his debts in full, yet he may be able to pay to all his creditors at least as large a share of their claims as goes to the creditor alleged to have been preferred. And where an offer of compromise is made, creditors are not bound to investigate the debtor's ability to pay the amount offered, and ascertain whether it is his intention to pay it to all creditors alike, but are entitled to believe that the offer is made in good faith and to all the creditors, unless something occurs to put them on inquiry.[327] Thus, where a mercantile company, shortly before its bankruptcy, sent a circular letter to its creditors, in which it stated that its last season's business had not been good and that it was unable to meet its payments; that it was about to make a special sale, to be strongly advertised, for the purpose of paying its bills, and would prorate the receipts from the sale among its creditors; and that it was solvent and hoped to pay in full within thirty days, it was held that creditors receiving such circulars, and [324] J. W. Butler Paper Co. v. Goembel, 143 Fed. 295, 74 C. C. A. 433, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26.

[325] People's Bank of Mobile v. McAleer, 204 Ala. 101, 85 South. 413.

[326] In re Lynden Mercantile Co., 156 Fed. 713, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, 3 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676; In re Hauck, 17 N. B. R. 158, Fed. Cas. No. 6,219; In re Kingsbury, 3 N. B. R. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 7,816; Johnson v. Cohn, 39 Misc. Rep. 189, 79 N. Y. Supp. 139; Hess v. Theodore Hamm Brewing Co., 108 Minn. 22, 121 N. W. 232; Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822, 99 N. W. 675; Bryant v. Wolf, 94 Misc. Rep. 683, 158 N. Y. Supp. 678. But what the statute requires in this respect is reasonable cause on the part of the creditor to believe that a preference "will" result from the transaction; belief or cause to believe that a preference "may" result is not sufficient. Sumner v. Parr (D. C.) 270 Fed. 675, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

[327] Smith v. Hewlett Robin Co., 178 Fed. 271, 101 C. C. A. 576, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

a few days thereafter small payments on their claims, were not chargeable with reasonable cause to believe that they were intended as a preference, though the debtor was in fact insolvent and did not distribute the proceeds of the sale pro rata.[328] And a sale by a debtor will not be avoided because the purchaser was aware of the intention of the seller to prefer certain of his creditors by the use of the proceeds of the sale.[329] But where a mortgagee of a bankrupt had reasonable cause to believe that the mortgage would "effect a preference," he had reasonable cause to believe that it would "operate as a preference," these phrases, as used in the bankruptcy act, being synonymous.[330]

§ 598. Same; Grounds of Suspicion or Doubt.—To invalidate a payment, transfer, or security, as a preference, it is not enough that the creditor should entertain doubts concerning the solvency of the debtor or the effect of the transaction as preferential, or that he should have cause to regard the debtor's circumstances or the transaction in hand with suspicion. He must have a knowledge of such facts as will carry him beyond this and furnish a reasonable ground to believe that the enforcement of his transfer or security will give him a preference over other creditors.[331] "Suspicion, fear, and facts that arouse suspicion and fear in the mind of the creditor or party to be benefited, but give no reasonable ground for him to believe that a preference is intended by the transfer, [328] In re Varley & Bauman Clothing Co., 191 Fed. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 840. But see Benjamin v. Chandler, 142 Fed. 217, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[329] Van Kleeck v. Miller, 19 N. B. R. 484, Fed. Cas. No. 16,860.

[330] Ogden v. Reddish, 200 Fed. 977, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[331] Stucky v. Masonic Sav. Bank, 108 U. S. 74, 2 Sup. Ct. 219, 27 L. Ed. 640; Grant v. First National Bank, 97 U. S. 80, 24 L. Ed. 971; Richardson v. Germania Bank (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 320, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; Cohen v. Tremont Trust Co. (D. C.) 256 Fed. 399, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; Smith v. Powers (D. C.) 255 Fed. 582, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303; Bank of Commerce v. Brown, 249 Fed. 37, 161 C. C. A. 97, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; Donohue v. Dykstra (D. C.) 247 Fed. 593, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; Rosenman v. Coppard, 228 Fed. 114, 142 C. C. A. 520, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786; Nichols v. Elken, 225 Fed. 689, 140 C. C. A. 563, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; Brookheim v. Greenbaum (D. C.) 225 Fed. 635; Beall v. Bank of Bowden (D. C.) 219 Fed. 316, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re F. M. & S. Q. Carlile, 199 Fed. 612, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373; First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Powell v. Gate City Bank, 178 Fed. 609, 102 C. C. A. 55, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316; In re Eggert, 102 Fed. 735, 43 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; Off v. Hakes, 142 Fed. 364, 73 C. C. A. 464, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696; May v. Le Claire, 18 Fed. 164, Claridge v. Kulmer, 1 Fed. 399; Mackel v. Bartlett, 36 Mont. 7, 91 Pac. 1064; King v. Storer, 75 Me. 62; Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Wilson, 4 Neb. (Unof.) 606, 95 N. W. 609; Suffel v. McCartney Nat. Bank, 127 Wis. 208, 106 N. W. 837, 115 Am. St. Rep. 1004; Sirrine v. Stoner-Marshall Co., 64 S. C. 457, 42 S. E. 432; Gnichtel v. First Nat. Bank (N. J. Eq.) 57 Atl. 508; Stevenson v. Milliken-Tomlinson Co., 99 Me. 320, 59 Atl. 472; Rubenstein v. Lottow, 223 Mass. 227, 111 N. E. 973; Batchelder v. Home Nat. Bank, 218 Mass. 420, 105 N. E. 1052; Craig v. Sharp (Mo. App.) 219 S. W. 98; Newman v. Tootle-Campbell Dry Goods Co., 174 Mo. App. 528, 160 S. W. 825; Dunlap v. Seattle Nat. Bank, 93 Wash. 568, 161 Pac. 364; Mantz v. Capital City State Bank (Iowa) 181 N. W. 3.

do not make such a preference voidable." [332] For example, knowledge of the mere fact that the debtor is not able to pay the creditor's debt in cash may awaken suspicion as to his solvency, but is not of itself reasonable cause to believe that a preference is intended.[333] And so of the fact that the debtor is offering to sell his business,[334] or that he has called his creditors together for the purpose of making terms with them.[335] General reputation or common talk as to the debtor's solvency is not a safe test of the creditor's good faith.[336] Actual knowledge that the debtor is at the time in failing circumstances may be enough to establish the character of the transfer or security as a preference, if he is adjudged bankrupt within four months thereafter.[337] But not so of knowledge, gained from the debtor's statement, that he had previously been financially embarrassed and hard pressed by his creditors, where he afterwards assured the creditor that he had financed his business and was then "all right." [338]

§ 599. Same; Facts Putting on Inquiry; Duty to Investigate.—Where a creditor, about to receive a payment or security from his debtor, has knowledge or notice of facts which would incite a man of ordinary prudence and business intelligence to inquire as to the debtor's solvency and the probable effect of the transaction as a preference, he is bound to prosecute a reasonably diligent inquiry to ascertain the truth; and if he fails to do so, he is chargeable with knowledge of the facts which such an inquiry would have disclosed; and if such ultimate knowledge would give him reasonable cause to believe that the transaction would result in giving him a preference, within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, then he cannot safely accept the payment, transfer, or security, for if the debtor's bankruptcy follows within four months, the transaction will be voidable at the suit of the trustee.[339] In fact, "reasonable cause to be-

[332] Paper v. Stern, 198 Fed. 642, 117 C. C. A. 346, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592.

[333] Andrews v. Kellogg, 41 Colo. 35, 92 Pac. 222.

[334] Taft v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 8 Ohio N. P. 59.

[335] In re Kerr, 2 N. B. R. 388, Fed. Cas. No. 7,728.

[336] Carey v. Donohue, 209 Fed. 328, 126 C. C. A. 254, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210.

[337] Peninsula Bank of Williamsburg v. Wolcott, 232 Fed. 68, 146 C. C. A. 260, Ann. Cas. 1918C, 477, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327.

[338] In re Salmon, 249 Fed. 300, 161 C. C. A. 308, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45.

[339] Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 49, 20 L. Ed. 481; In re Star Spring Bed Co. (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 133, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650; Farmers' State Bank v. Freeman, 249 Fed. 579, 161 C. C. A. 505, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; National Bank of Bakersfield v. Moore, 247 Fed. 913, 160 C. C. A. 103, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; In re Sutherland Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 663, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305; McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702; In re States Printing Co., 238 Fed. 775, 151 C. C. A. 625, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526; Aronin v. Security Bank of New York, 228 Fed. 888, 143 C. C. A. 286, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17; R. H. Herron Co. v. Moore, 208 Fed. 134, 125 C. C. A. 356, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221; Walters v. Zimmerman (D. C.) 208 Fed. 62, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; Lowell v. Ashton (D. C.) 272 Fed. 536, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; Tilt v. Citizens' Trust Co., 191 Fed.

lieve," in the bankruptcy act, covers substantially the same field as "notice" in determining whether a person is a bona fide purchaser of property.[340] Thus, if the creditor knows that the debtor has lost his position because of a defalcation, that his principal indorser is dead, and that his notes are overdue and unpaid, it is sufficient to put him on inquiry,[341] as is also the fact that the creditor holds unpaid protested paper of the bankrupt,[342] or that the debtor, on drawing up the mortgage in question, asked to be allowed to secure other creditors in the same instrument.[343] But mere knowledge that the debtor fails to meet his obligations promptly is not sufficient for this purpose,[344] nor is the fact that there are outstanding and unsatisfied judgments against the debtor,[345] or that he is engaged in a business of a speculative character, and that the creditor does not know of any other property owned by the debtor except his interest in certain contracts.[346] If, however, the creditor knows that the bankrupt has committed forgery, this is a circumstance which would incite a person of ordinary prudence to inquiry as to his condition, and the creditor must be charged with notice of all facts

441, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; Ragan v. Donovan, 189 Fed. 138, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311; In re Thomas Deutschle & Co., 182 Fed. 435, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; In re C. J. McDonald & Sons, 178 Fed. 487, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; Brewster v. Goff Lumber Co., 164 Fed. 124, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106; In re W. W. Mills Co., 162 Fed. 42, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; In re Tindal, 155 Fed. 456, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; English v. Ross, 140 Fed. 630, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; In re Virginia Hardwood Mfg. Co., 139 Fed. 209, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; In re Eggert, 102 Fed. 735, 43 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 560, 76 N. E. 258; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 122 Iowa, 443, 98 N. W. 284; Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Kastor, 17 Wyo. 180, 97 Pac. 921; Wilson v. Taylor, 154 N. C. 211, 70 S. E. 286; Andrews v. Kellogg, 41 Colo. 35, 92 Pac. 222; Whitwell v. Wright, 115 N. Y. Supp. 48; Atherton v. Emerson, 199 Mass. 199, 85 N. E. 530; Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955; Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822, 99 N. W. 675; Walker v. Tenison Bros. Saddlery Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 94 S. W. 166; Christopherson v. Oleson, 19 S. Dak. 176, 102 N. W. 685; McAleer v. People's Bank, 202 Ala. 256, 80 South. 94; Chisholm v. First Nat. Bank, 176 Ill. App. 382; Russell's Trustee v. Mayfield Lumber Co., 158 Ky. 219, 164 S. W. 783; Jacobs v. Saperstein, 225 Mass. 300, 114 N. E. 360; Craig v. Sharp (Mo. App.) 219 S. W. 95; Walter v. National Fire Ins. Co., 101 Neb. 639, 164 N. W. 569; First Bank of Maysville v. Alexander, 49 Okl. 418, 153 Pac. 646; Utah Ass'n of Creditmen v. Boyle Furniture Co., 43 Utah, 68, 136 Pac. 572; Slayton v. Drown, 93 Vt. 290, 107 Atl. 307.

[340] Stern v. Paper (D. C.) 183 Fed. 228, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451; Bassett v. Evans, 253 Fed. 532, 165 C. C. A. 202, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 587.

[341] Sebring v. Wellington, 63 App. Div. 498, 71 N. Y. Supp. 788.

[342] Swan v. Robinson (C. C.) 5 Fed. 287; Conners v. Bucksport Nat. Bank (D. C.) 214 Fed. 847; Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce (D. C.) 220 Fed. 981, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

[343] Lloyd v. Strobridge, 16 N. B. R. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 8,435.

[344] Arkansas Nat. Bank v. Sparks, 83 Ark. 324, 103 S. W. 626; Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822, 99 N. W. 675. And see Sumner v. Parr (D. C.) 270 Fed. 675, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

[345] Summerville v. Stockton Milling Co., 142 Cal. 529, 76 Pac. 243.

[346] Curtiss v. Kingman, 159 Fed. 880, 87 C. C. A. 60, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95.

which a reasonably diligent inquiry would have disclosed.[347] This is also the case where the creditor knows not only that the debtor is insolvent but that he has absconded.[348] So, in another case, the debtor was a partner in a firm which was hopelessly insolvent, and a personal creditor of his received from him, in partial payment of notes which were not yet due, merchandise which had been bought entirely on the credit of the firm, as the creditor well knew. Taken in connection with the creditor's otherwise intimate knowledge of the affairs of the firm, this was held such knowledge or notice on his part as to render the payment a voidable preference.[349]

But on the other hand, where a creditor makes adequate inquiry as to his debtor's financial condition, and honestly, though mistakenly, believes that he is solvent, the taking of a security for a debt from him will not constitute a preference.[350] As to the kind of investigation to be conducted by a creditor thus "put on inquiry," his duty is not discharged by inquiries addressed to the debtor alone, at least if any better or more reliable sources of information are open to him.[351] And his intentional avoidance of obvious and reliable sources of information will charge him with the knowledge he could have obtained from them.[352] At the same time, he is not obliged to trace to its ultimate source any information of a suspicious nature which may come to his knowledge,[353] and if the question of the debtor's solvency is so close as to require an inventory and a list of debts to determine it, the failure to use this degree of diligence will not charge the creditor with knowledge.[354] Nor can he be charged with notice of facts which could be learned only from intimate and inaccessible sources, such as the books of the bankrupt, but he is only responsible for such information as could be obtained by open observation and reasonable inquiry.[355] At the same time, if the creditor is permitted to examine the books of the debtor, or does make an independent investigation of his business and affairs, especially through the medium of an expert or accountant, he may claim the benefit of the knowledge so acquired, and if the result is not such as to furnish reasonable ground to believe the debtor insolvent and a preference intended, the creditor will be safe from the attack of the trustee

[347] Watchmaker v. Barnes, 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

[348] De Forest v. Crane & Ordway Co., 55 Mont. 489, 179 Pac. 291.

[349] Gooch v. Stone, 257 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 581, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86.

[350] In re Gaylord (D. C.) 225 Fed. 234, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544.

[351] McGirr v. Humphreys Grocery Co. (D. C.) 192 Fed. 55, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; Singer v. Jacobs (C. C.) 11 Fed. 559.

[352] Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. v. Edwards, 148 Fed. 377, 78 C. C. A. 191, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447.

[353] Blankenbaker v. Charleston State Bank, 111 Ill. App. 393.

[354] Edwards v. Carondelet Milling Co., 108 Mo. App. 275, 83 S. W. 764.

[355] In re Wolf Co., 164 Fed. 448, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

in bankruptcy.[356] So, also, where he inquired about the condition of the debtor corporation, not only from its officers, but also from others who were in position to know, and was assured that it was solvent and that its embarrassment was only temporary.[357] And the rule of constructive notice and diligent inquiry should be applied with due regard to the relative situation of the parties. For instance, it should not be applied with too great severity in the case of a young woman of no business experience whatever dealing with a banker, who was also a relative in whom she had confidence, she being "incapable of comprehending the significance of business facts which would have been more enlightening to men of the business world." [358]

§ 600. Same; Circumstances Constituting Ground for Belief.—What constitutes "reasonable ground to believe" that a debtor is insolvent or intends a preference must depend on the facts and circumstances of each case.[359] And although the general business transactions and condition of the bankrupt, at the time of giving a preference, may not have been sufficient to raise this reasonable ground of belief, yet if the special facts and circumstances passing between the particular parties, and out of which the preference grew, were such as to give a reasonable cause for such belief, the creditor is chargeable with notice.[360] The mere fact that the creditor's claim is past due when a payment is made on it or security given for it, is not alone sufficient to charge him with knowledge that the debtor is insolvent or that a preference will be effected,[361] nor the mere fact that an adjudication in bankruptcy actually follows within four months afterwards,[362] though it is otherwise if the creditor at the time knew that the bankrupt's attorney was then engaged in preparing a petition in bankruptcy.[363] Again, a creditor may know that his debtor is financially embarrassed, and may be insistent in his 356 Stratton v. Lawson, 27 Wash. 310, 67 Pac. 562; Brown v. Guichard, 37 Misc. Rep. 78, 74 N. Y. Supp. 735; Hussey v. Richardson-Roberts Dry Goods Co., 148 Fed. 598, 78 C. C. A. 370, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511; In re Mayo Contracting Co., 157 Fed. 469, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551; In re Bartlett, 172 Fed. 679, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 891.

357 In re Wolf Co., 164 Fed. 448, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

358 Wright v. Sampter, 152 Fed. 196, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

359 Whitwell v. Wright, 136 App. Div. 246, 120 N. Y. Supp. 1065.

360 Alderdice v. State Bank of Virginia, 1 Hughes, 47, 11 N. B. R. 398, Fed. Cas. No. 154. Evidence that the bankrupt had for some considerable time been insolvent, and that a creditor to whom a payment was made within four months of bankruptcy had had a long course of dealings with the bankrupt, was frequently in his place of business, and had opportunity for intimate knowledge of his affairs, will sustain a finding that the creditor knew of the bankrupt's insolvency when the payment was made. Benjamin v. Buell (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 792, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404.

361 In re Goodhile, 130 Fed. 471, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374; Lyon v. Clark, 129 Mich. 381, 88 N. W. 1046.

362 Laundy v. First Nat. Bank, 66 Kan. 759, 71 Pac. 259.

363 In re Galvin, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 146.

demands for settlement, and yet he may not have a reasonable cause to believe the debtor insolvent,[364] nor is such reasonable cause to be deduced from the mere fact that the debtor had some time previously compromised with his creditors at forty-five cents on the dollar.[365] But statements by a debtor to the creditor's agent, who was seeking to collect past-due debts for which the debtor had given checks which were dishonored by the banks, that the debtor had not and could not obtain money to pay the debts, that its real estate was mortgaged for all it was worth, and that there were judgments outstanding against it, gave the creditor reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent, so that he must have known that the enforcement of a chattel mortgage then taken would be a preference.[366] So where a bank, to which the bankrupt transferred accounts the day before the petition in bankruptcy was filed, knew that he had overdrawn his account, and that he had deceived the bank as to securities held by it, and that the transaction was handled for the bankrupt by an attorney, and the bank made haste to enter the transaction on its books and to notify persons concerned that it was the holder by assignment of the transferred accounts, this was held to justify the conclusion that the bank's officers believed the debtor to be insolvent.[367] And the fact that suits are pending against the debtor on claims which he does not dispute, is a very suspicious circumstance, and, if coupled with other facts, may be enough to charge the creditor with notice.[368] And a business man who allows his paper to go to protest, suspends payment, and closes the door of his place of business, proclaims to the world that he is insolvent.[369] So, where the creditor learned that an account which the bankrupt had assigned as security was fictitious, and that his place of business was closed, and that it was rumored that he had absconded, and placed its claim in the hands of its attorney for collection, although it was not due, and the claim was paid shortly before the adjudication in bankruptcy, it was held that the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended by such payment.[370] On the other hand, the mere fact that a creditor demands security for a debt previously unsecured does not show that he has reasonable ground for believing the debtor

[364] Sharpe v. Allender, 170 Fed. 589, 96 C. C. A. 104, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431; Stackhouse v. Holden, 66 App. Div. 423, 73 N. Y. Supp. 203. But see In re Kingsbury, 3 N. B. R. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 7,816; In re Hines, 144 Fed. 543, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 495.

[365] Warren v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 5 Ben. 395, Fed. Cas. No. 17,200.

[366] In re Campion (D. C.) 256 Fed. 902, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625.

[367] In re Star Spring Bed Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 176, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

[368] Crittenden v. Barton, 59 App. Div. 555, 69 N. Y. Supp. 559; Empire State Trust Co. v. William F. Fisher Co., 67 N. J. Eq. 88, 57 Atl. 502.

[369] Markson v. Hobson, 2 Dill. 327, Fed. Cas. No. 9,099; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Cook, 95 U. S. 342, 24 L. Ed. 412.

[370] Pratt v. Columbia Bank, 157 Fed. 137, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

to be insolvent,[371] especially where the security also covers a contemporary loan of money,[372] but the case is altered when, in addition to this, it appears that the security given pledges substantially all of the debtor's unexempt property,[373] or the creditor knows that the property would be insufficient to satisfy the other creditors after paying his own debt.[374] Evidence that the creditor was investigating the financial standing of the bankrupt immediately prior to and continuously up to the time when the transfer was executed is admissible on this point,[375] and it may be shown that he knew that the debtor was hard pressed and without credit, and that he himself had been persistently pressing his own claim for several months.[376] And reasonable cause to believe a debtor insolvent may arise from the fact that he conveyed his residence for the benefit of an insistent creditor, stating at the time that it was his only available resource.[377] Circumstances justifying such a belief may also be found in the fact that the debtor settled with creditors by returning goods bought from them,[378] or that a creditor indirectly bought back goods from the debtor and sold them again at a loss,[379] or accepted for part of his claim goods for which he had no use, or which were not of a kind that he dealt in or employed in his business,[380] or that the money to make a payment was obtained by the sale of the debtor's entire stock in trade, especially if such sale was made secretly or under any suspicious conditions.[381] And where it appears that overdrafts were made by a merchant in collusion with a defaulting teller in the bank, for which a deed of preference was given to the bank just before the bankruptcy of the merchant, the deed is voidable, as such facts constitute reasonable cause for the bank to believe that the debtor was insolvent and that a preference was intended.[382]

§ 601. Imputed Knowledge of Agent or Attorney.—A preference will be voidable if reasonable cause to believe that the debtor is insol-

[371] Perry v. Booth, 80 App. Div. 373, 80 N. Y. Supp. 706; Congleton v. Schreihofer (N. J. Eq.) 54 Atl. 144. But see In re Hickerson, 162 Fed. 345, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

[372] Stedman v. Bank of Monroe, 117 Fed. 237, 54 C. C. A. 269, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4.

[373] Coder v. McPherson, 152 Fed. 951, 82 C. C. A. 99, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 523; Roberts v. Johnson, 151 Fed. 567, 81 C. C. A. 47, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

[374] Robinson v. Tuttle, 2 Hask. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 11,968.

[375] Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 550, 76 N. E. 258.

[376] Wright v. William Skinner Mfg. Co., 162 Fed. 315, 89 C. C. A. 23, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527.

[377] Brewster v. Goff, 164 Fed. 127, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 239.

[378] In re Andrews, 135 Fed. 599, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[379] Hardy v. Gray, 144 Fed. 922, 75 C. C. A. 562, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387.

[380] In re Christopher Bailey & Son, 166 Fed. 982, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; Fowler State Bank v. White, 198 Fed. 631, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

[381] Thomas v. Adelman, 136 Fed. 973, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510. See Dunlop v. Thomas, 28 Wash. 521, 68 Pac. 909.

[382] Alderdice v. State Bank of Virginia, 1 Hughes, 47, 11 N. B. R. 398, Fed. Cas. No. 154.

vent and a preference intended is brought home either to the creditor himself or to "his agent acting therein" If the agent has knowledge of facts which should have induced such a belief, or of facts which should have put him upon inquiry as to the debtor's financial condition,[383] that knowledge is imputed to the principal and the effect is the same as if he himself had taken part in the transaction being in possession of such information,[384] and it is no defense to the trustee's suit to recover the preference that the creditor had no personal knowledge of the debtor's insolvency.[385] And it is immaterial how or when the agent obtained his knowledge, or that he had confidential relations with the bankrupt, or personal interests which prevented him from disclosing his knowledge to his principal.[386] But the agent must be one acting for the creditor "therein," that is, in the particular transaction by which the preference was created, though a general financial agent may answer this description,[387] but not one who was the clerk or agent of the bankrupt at the time the preference was given and who was not employed by the creditor until afterwards.[388] And it is important to observe that knowledge gained by a sub-agent or an agent of an agent is not imputable to the principal of the original agent. Thus, for example, if the holder of a note sends it to a bank for collection, the bank is his agent, and he is to be charged with whatever knowledge the bank possesses.[389] But where a bank, being the holder of a note, and having no correspondent in the town where the maker lives, sends it to its correspondent in the nearest large city for collection, and the latter sends it to the local bank for collection, although the local bank may know facts about the maker which would render the payment of the note to it a preference under the bankruptcy act, that knowledge is not imputable to the creditor, for the col-

[383] In re Nassau, 140 Fed. 912, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828; Constam v. Haley, 206 Fed. 260, 124 C. C. A. 128. In the case last cited, it is said that, where the holder of a note against a bankrupt is charged with an agent's knowledge of facts indicating the bankrupt's insolvency, such notice is not limited to its effect to convert into preferences payments obtained through the activities of the agent, but extends as well to subsequent payments made by the bankrupt direct to the holder.

[384] Sage v. Wynkoop, 16 N. B. R. 363, Fed. Cas. No. 12,215; Mathews v. Riggs, 80 Me. 107, 13 Atl. 48; In re Cramer & Rogers Grocery Co., 252 Fed. 112, 164 C. C. A. 224, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 283; Smith v. Coury (D. C.) 247 Fed. 168, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219.

[385] Plummer v. Myers, 137 Fed. 660, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805.

[386] Campbell v. Balcomb, 183 Fed. 766, 106 C. C. A. 474, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538. But naturally, this rule does not apply where the agent is playing false to both debtor and creditor, as where one acting in the transaction as the agent of the creditor was at the same time business manager of the debtor corporation, and was engaged in a scheme to defraud either the creditor or the corporation or both. Scott County Milling Co. v. Powers, 112 Miss. 798, 73 South. 792.

[387] Wright v. Cotten, 140 N. C. 1, 52 S. E. 141.

[388] Whitson v. Farber Bank, 105 Mo. App. 605, 80 S. W. 327.

[389] Hooker v. Blount, 44 Tex. Civ. App. 162, 97 S. W. 1083.

lecting bank is not its agent.[390] On the same principle, if the creditor sends his claim to a collection agency, and the agency employs an attorney to collect it, and the latter procures a confession of judgment, knowing the debtor to be insolvent, this does not affect the validity of the preference so far as concerns the creditor, the attorney not being his agent.[391] But an attorney at law employed directly by the creditor to take proceedings for the enforcement of the claim, or to effect a settlement with the debtor, is the creditor's "agent," and his knowledge is imputable to the creditor.[392] And it is immaterial that the attorney, unknown to the creditor employing him, has special and peculiar facilities for acquiring information, as, by being the professional adviser of the debtor also. So long as the disclosure of the knowledge acquired would not involve a breach of professional confidence, the creditor is chargeable with it.[393] In the case of a corporation which is a creditor, the knowledge of any of its principal officers will be imputed to the corporation itself,[394] but not knowledge possessed by an officer who resigned before the giving of the alleged preference, though he is also the principal stockholder of the bankrupt corporation.[395] And conversely, a person will be held to have notice as an individual of what he does as the president of a corporation.[396] It appears that this rule applies also to public or municipal corporations. Thus, it is held that knowledge possessed by a township trustee as to the insolvency of his brother, a defaulting township treasurer, is imputable to the township itself.[397] In the case of a banking corporation, either the president or the cashier may be re-

[390] Balcomb v. Old Nat. Bank, 201 Fed. 679, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

[391] Hoover v. Wise, 91 U. S. 308, 23 L. Ed. 392.

[392] Rogers v. Palmer, 102 U. S. 263, 26 L. Ed. 464; Wight v. Muxlow, 8 Ben. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 17,629; Vogle v. Lathrop, 3 Pittsb. 268, 4 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 16,985; Mayer v. Hermann, 10 Blatchf. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 9,344; Hewitt v. Boston Straw Board Co., 214 Mass. 260, 101 N. E. 424.

[393] Brown v. Jefferson County Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. 315, 9 Fed. 258; Farmers' State Bank v. Freeman, 249 Fed. 579, 161 C. C. A. 505, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286.

[394] Farmers' Bank of Edgefield v. C. D. Carr & Co., 127 Fed. 690, 62 C. C. A. 446, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; In re W. A. Silvernail Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 979, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; Patterson v. Baker Grocery, Co., 73 Or. 433, 144 Pac. 673. This rule was applied in a case where the treasurer of a corporation, who had supplied practically all of its capital, and who had been led to believe that a claim against the corporation was unfounded, though other corporate officers knew it to be well founded, paid over to himself on his own claims almost all of the corporate assets. It was held that such payment was preferential, since the corporation was charged with the knowledge of all of its officers. In re Boston-West Africa Trading Co. (D. C.) 255 Fed. 924, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382. But where the bankrupt was treasurer of a corporation, the fact that he knew himself to be insolvent at the time he made a payment on his indebtedness to the corporation did not charge it with knowledge of such fact. Arthur v. Harrington (D. C.) 211 Fed. 215, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216.

[395] Benner v. Blumauer-Frank Drug Co. (D. C.) 198 Fed. 362, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798.

[396] Lancaster v. Collins (C. C.) 7 Fed. 338.

[397] Painter v. Napoleon Tp., 190 Fed. 637, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

garded as the "agent" of the bank, so that if either has knowledge of circumstances which would furnish reasonable ground to believe that the debtor of the bank was insolvent and that a preference would result from any payment, transfer, or security given to the bank, then the preference so given will be voidable.[398]

§ 602. Solicitation, Coercion, or Threats by Creditor.—Under former bankruptcy statutes, where an "intention" on the part of the debtor to give a preference was essential to its consummation, it was often argued, and sometimes held, that this implied a willingness or disposition on his part to place the preferred creditor in an advantageous position, or the voluntary selection of one or more creditors to be favored above the rest.[399] But this doctrine did not prevail. It was held by the great majority of the decisions that a preference was none the less a preference because it was not yielded voluntarily, but was wrung from the debtor by urgent solicitation, threats of prosecution, fear of exposure and disgrace, or any other form of coercion or pressure.[400] And these decisions will naturally be applicable under the present bankruptcy act, since it makes no reference to the debtor's intention or to any influence brought to bear upon him.

§ 603. Preference of Partnership or Individual Creditors.—The purpose of the bankruptcy act with reference to the joint assets of a bankrupt partnership is that they shall be first applied, in good faith, to the payment of partnership debts, and that the individual property of the several partners shall first be applied in payment of their separate debts; and any scheme or device resorted to by persons contemplating bankruptcy for the purpose of charging partnership assets with individual debts, or vice versa, is in violation of the act and will be frustrated by the court, the law being administered in such a manner as to pre-

[398] Nisbit v. Macon Bank & Trust Co., 12 Fed. 686, 4 Woods, 464; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 72 App. Div. 331, 76 N. Y. Supp. 92, 495; Collett v. Bronx Nat. Bank, 205 Fed. 370, 123 C. C. A. 392.

[399] Ashby v. Steere, 2 Woodb. & M. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 576. This was also once the rule in England. "If such a preference to a particular creditor be not given voluntarily, but from an apprehension of legal process, it is not fraudulent, and cannot afterwards be vacated." 2 Blackst. Comm. 478, note, citing Thompson v. Freeman, 1 Durn. & E. 155.

[400] First Nat. Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. 325, 22 L. Ed. 542; Strain v. Gourdin, 2 Woods, 380, 11 N. B. R. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 13,521; Van Kleeck v. Thurber, Fed. Cas. No. 16,861; Campbell v. Traders' Nat. Bank, 2 Biss. 423, 3 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 2,370; In re Amory & Leeds, Fed. Cas. No. 336c; Atkinson v. Farmers' Bank, Crabbe, 529, Fed. Cas. No. 609; Rison v. Knapp, 1 Dill. 186, 4 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 11,861; Foster v. Hackley, 2 N. B. R. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 4,971; Wilson v. Brinkman, 2 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 17,794; Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, 3 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676.

vent preferences and secure the equitable distribution of the estate.[401] Hence if a creditor of a firm, knowing the firm to be insolvent, takes a mortgage on the individual property of one of the partners, it is an unlawful preference.[402] And the rule is the same if a member of the firm, owing a private debt, gives the firm's note for it, or his own note indorsed by the firm.[403] But on the other hand, a mortgage given by a partner on his individual property to secure his individual debt is not voidable as a preference in the subsequent bankruptcy of the firm,[404] or at least, the creditors of the firm will have no standing to object to it and seek its vacation.[405] And so, a mortgage given by a partnership on its property is not affected by subsequent bankruptcy proceedings against one of the partners alone.[406] But it may be remarked that, in a suit by a trustee in bankruptcy of a partnership to recover payments made to a creditor as a preference, it must be shown that both the firm and the partners individually were insolvent when the payment was made.[407] As to transactions between the partners themselves, it is held that where one partner sells to his co-partner his entire interest in the property of the firm, the transfer cannot be impeached as a preference, since the transferee is not a creditor, and the effect of the transfer is a loss to all the creditors of the firm alike.[408]

Where the bankrupt obtained credit after he became for the second time a sole trader, by buying out his partner, those extending credit, though they acted in ignorance of the dissolution, will not be presumed to have extended credit solely to the firm and to be merely firm creditors, because of their option to hold the withdrawing partner, where such presumption would preclude the trustee in bankruptcy

[401] In re Jones, 100 Fed. 781. And see Johnson v. Hanley-Hoye Co., 188 Fed. 752, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748.

[402] Mayes v. Palmer (C. C. A.) 208 Fed. 97; In re Parker, 6 Sawy. 248, 11 Fed. 397; Pollock v. Jones, 124 Fed. 163, 61 C. C. A. 555; Ft. Pitt Coal & Coke Co. v. Diser, 239 Fed. 443, 152 C. C. A. 321, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566. Compare Sargent v. Blake, 160 Fed. 57, 87 C. C. A. 213, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1040, 15 Ann. Cas. 58, A partner's individual indorsement of the firm's notes, while the firm is insolvent, will give the payee a voidable preference. In re Frazer (D. C.) 221 Fed. 83, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467.

[403] In re Jones, 100 Fed. 781, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141. But if a note so indorsed is paid by the firm, and the individual partner becomes bankrupt (but not the firm) his creditors cannot object to the payment as a preference, because the payee has not received any of the property of the bankrupt. Catchings v. Chatham Nat. Bank, 180 Fed. 103, 103 C. C. A. 601, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843.

[404] Hewitt v. Northrup, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 543, 16 N. B. R. 27, affirmed 75 N. Y. 506.

[405] In re Lehigh Lumber Co., 101 Fed. 216, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221.

[406] In re Sanderlin, 109 Fed. 857, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; Rubenstein v. Lottow, 220 Mass. 156, 107 N. E. 718.

[407] Tumlin v. Bryan, 165 Fed. 166, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319; Worrell v. Whitney, 179 Fed. 1014, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 749; Forsaith v. Merritt, 1 Low. 336, 3 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 4,946. See Anderson v. Stayton State Bank, 82 Or. 357, 159 Pac. 1033.

[408] In re Rudnick, 102 Fed. 750, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; Barnes v. Vetterlein, 16 Fed. 759.

from recovering as preferential a payment made by the bankrupt to an old individual creditor after dissolution of the firm, on the theory that there were no other creditors of the same class as the one to whom payment was made.[409]

§ 604. Rights of Preferred Creditor as to Proving Claim.—The provision of the statute (§ 57g) is that claims of creditors who have received voidable preferences "shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender such preferences." This is not a penal requirement in such sense that it must be construed strictly.[410] And it applies only to transactions which constitute preferences within the meaning of the other provisions of the act, where preferences are defined and declared to be voidable.[411] But as the law stood originally, this clause contained no limitation as to time, and hence the claim of a preferred creditor could not be allowed without a surrender of the preference, though it was given more than four months before the beginning of the bankruptcy proceedings.[412] This, however, was changed by the amendment of 1903. If, therefore, a creditor files proof of his claim and asks its allowance, and it is opposed on the ground of his having received a preference, and this is found to be the fact, allowance of the claim will be refused or withheld until he shall surrender the preference,[413] and the referee has jurisdiction to determine whether or not a preference has been received when the creditor offers to prove his claim as an unsecured debt.[414] Or if the claim has been proved and allowed, and it is afterwards discovered that the creditor had been preferred, the claim may be expunged on motion of the trustee and at the cost of the creditor.[415] The statute is imperative that the preference must be surrendered before the claim can be allowed. A creditor who has received partial satisfaction of his debt, by means of a preference, cannot retain it and prove a claim for the unsatisfied balance. The amount of the preference cannot be treated as a set-off, either to reduce the amount of his claim, or against the dividend to be received thereon, but the amount must be surrendered [409] Wartell v. Moore (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 762, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

[410] Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

[411] In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159.

[412] In re Busby, 124 Fed. 469, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650; In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 406, 50 C. C. A. 310, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332.

[413] In re Flynn & Co., 126 Fed. 422, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318; In re Graff, 117 Fed. 343, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744; In re Keller, 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; In re Hoffman, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 554; Cookingham v. Morgan, 7 Blatchf. 480, 5 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 3,183; Bingham v. Richmond, 6 N. B. R. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 1,415.

[414] In re Keystone Press, 203 Fed. 710, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[415] In re Forsyth, 7 N. B. R. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 4,948; In re Wise, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 151.

to the trustee.[416] And a creditor having both a claim entitled to priority and a common claim cannot so apply a preferential payment received as to reduce or extinguish the common claim and then prove the priority claim in full.[417]

But if the creditor will surrender his preference, all taint of fraud arising out of it is removed and he is restored to an equality with all other creditors, and may then prove his entire claim as unsecured.[418] In fact, a creditor in this position has his option either to make the surrender and take his place in the ranks of the unsecured creditors, or to retain and rely upon the preference received.[419] In the latter case, he is open to the attack of the trustee, for it is not necessary to the trustee's right of action to avoid an alleged preference that the creditor should have come into the bankruptcy proceedings in any way.[420] But if no proceeding for that purpose is brought, or if the trustee's attack fails, the creditor remains entirely outside of the bankruptcy proceedings, so far as concerns the claim affected by the preference. And even if he comes into the court of bankruptcy to claim a fund which has been paid into court subject to the rights of conflicting claimants, yet if he does not seek to prove his claim as a general creditor, the fund must be paid over to him intact, on his title to it being decided, and without deducting a preference which he had received.[421]

If allowance of the claim is opposed on this ground, it is incumbent upon the trustee to show the actual receipt by the creditor of money, goods, or other property or security which, if retained, will diminish the assets available for general creditors and give the preferred creditor an advantage over the rest.[422] But if the property preferentially transferred was a note of a third person, the creditor must be charged with the face value of it, without regard to the amount he actually realized

[416] In re Chaplin, 115 Fed. 162, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121; In re Sumner, 101 Fed. 224, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Colton Export & Import Co., 115 Fed. 158, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; In re Keller, 109 Fed. 306, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Batchelder & Lincoln Co. v. Whitmore, 122 Fed. 355, 58 C. C. A. 517, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641.

[417] In re Henry C. King Co., 113 Fed. 110, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619.

[418] In re Richard, 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Israel, 4 Dill. 501, Fed. Cas. No. 7,112; In re Huntenberg, 153 Fed. 768, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; In re Nathan, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 611. The lien of a mortgage given by a bankrupt, which is voidable as a preference, is in effect discharged by the bankruptcy for all purposes. Petition of Rouse, 208 Fed. 881, 126 C. C. A. 90, L. R. A. 1915B, 148, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

[419] In re Privett, 132 Fed. 592, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

[420] In re Nathan, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 611.

[421] In re West Norfolk Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 759, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648. A claim by a chattel mortgagee to the proceeds of a sale of the mortgaged property is not such a claim as will be disallowed until the surrender of an illegal preference. In re Johnson (D. C.) 224 Fed. 180.

[422] In re Hickey, 112 Fed. 287, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282; In re George M. Hill Co., 130 Fed. 315, 64 C. C. A. 561, 66 L. R. A. 68, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221; In re Christensen, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 695.

on it.[423] But the return of unsalable goods to the unpaid vendor of them, under an agreement that they may be exchanged for new and salable stock, does not constitute the giving of a preference such that he must account for their value before being allowed to prove his claim.[424]

If the bankrupt's estate proves sufficient to pay in full the claims of all unpreferred creditors, and leave a surplus, then a creditor who had received a preference, and had been excluded from participation in the division of the estate in bankruptcy because of his refusal to surrender it, will be entitled, as against the bankrupt, to share in such surplus.[425]

§ 605. Same; Creditor's Knowledge of Intent to Prefer.—As the bankruptcy act of 1898 stood originally, it simply provided that "the claims of creditors who have received preferences shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender their preferences." (Section 57g.) And it was held that any advantage gained by the creditor which was in the nature of a preference must be surrendered, irrespective of the intention of the debtor in the transaction or the creditor's knowledge of it, and though the preference was given in the usual course of business and innocently received by the creditor. In other words, though the creditor could not be forced to yield up the payment, property, or security received, at the suit of the trustee in bankruptcy, unless it could be shown that he took it with reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent and that a preference was intended or would result, yet no such knowledge or reasonable cause of belief need be shown as a ground for disallowing his claim when offered for proof. If there was a preference, it must be surrendered, and nothing else was necessary.[426] But this was changed by the amendatory act of 1903, which provides that "the claims of creditors who have received preferences, voidable under section sixty, [423] In re Chaplin, 115 Fed. 162, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121.

[424] In re Nicholas, 122 Fed. 299, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

[425] In re Morton, 118 Fed. 908, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[426] Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 406, 50 C. C. A. 310, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332; In re Dickson, 111 Fed. 726, 49 C. C. A. 574, 55 L. R. A. 349, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; Mills v. Lewis, 110 Fed. 512, 49 C. C. A. 131, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; In re Keller, 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; In re Bashline, 109 Fed. 965, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; In re Seckler, 106 Fed. 484, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579; In re Flick, 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; In re Alexander, 102 Fed. 464, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376; In re Fixen, 102 Fed. 295, 42 C. C. A. 354, 50 L. R. A. 605, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10; In re Sloan, 102 Fed. 116, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; Strobel & Wilken Co. v. Knost, 99 Fed. 409, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631; In re Fort Wayne Electric Corp., 99 Fed. 400, 39 C. C. A. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634; In re Conhaim, 97 Fed. 923, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; In re Jourdan, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 581; In re Wise, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 151; Harris v. Second Nat. Bank, 110 Tenn. 239, 75 S. W. 1053.

subdivision b, or to whom conveyances, transfers, assignments, or incumbrances, void or voidable under section sixty-seven, subdivision e, have been made or given, shall not be allowed unless such creditors shall surrender such preferences, conveyances, transfers, assignments, or incumbrances."[427] And it is now held that the claim of a creditor cannot be disallowed or expunged after proof, unless it is shown that the preference would be voidable in a suit by the trustee, that is, it must be shown that the bankrupt was insolvent at the time and that the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the transfer, payment, or security would effect a preference.[428] But if a given payment received by a creditor without knowledge of insolvency need not be surrendered before proof, not being a preference within the bankruptcy act because the result of the whole transaction was to increase the net indebtedness to the creditor, the same payment, received with knowledge of insolvency, is not a preference and need not be surrendered.[429]

§ 606. Same; What Constitutes "Surrender" of Preference.—There have been many decisions to the effect that a "surrender" of a preference, to entitle the creditor to have his claim allowed, must be voluntary, that is, not forced or compulsory, but following upon the mere demand of the trustee; that if the creditor chose to abide the issue of adversary proceedings against him, the allowance of his claim as well as the retention of the preference must depend upon the result; and that it was too late to make a surrender, within the meaning of the act, after the trustee had begun a suit for the avoidance of the preference, or at any rate after the recovery of a judgment therein.[430] But the Supreme Court of the United States has established a different rule at least in cases where the transaction is not tainted by actual fraud. It has ruled that a [427] Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57g.

[428] In re Frazin, 201 Fed. 86, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214; In re Sam Z. Lorch & Co., 199 Fed. 944, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784; Hardy v. Gray, 144 Fed. 922, 75 C. C. A. 562, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re Bloch, 142 Fed. 674, 74 C. C. A. 250, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748; In re Oppenheimer, 140 Fed. 51, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; In re Pettingill & Co., 135 Fed. 218; In re Ratliff, 107 Fed. 80, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

[429] In re Henry C. King Co., 113 Fed. 110, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619.

[430] In re Greth, 112 Fed. 978, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; In re Owings, 109 Fed. 623, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; In re Israel, 4 Dill. 501, Fed. Cas. No. 7,112; In re Davidson, 4 Ben. 10, 3 N. B. R. 418, Fed. Cas. No. 3,599; In re Richter's Estate, 1 Dill. 544, 4 N. B. R. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 11,803; In re Tonkin, 4 N. B. R. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 14,094; In re Ayers, 6 Biss. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 685; In re Leland, 7 Ben. 156, 9 N. B. R. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 8,230; In re Montgomery, 3 N. B. R. 374, Fed. Cas. No. 9,728; In re Stephens, 3 Biss. 187, 6 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 13,365; In re Graves, 9 Fed. 816; In re Drummond, 4 Biss. 149, Fed. Cas. No. 4,094; Phelps v. Sterns, 4 N. B. R. 34, Fed. Cas. No. 11,080; In re Scott, 4 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 12,518; In re Forsyth, 7 N. B. R. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 4,928; In re Cramer, 13 N. B. R. 225, Fed. Cas. No. 3,345; Burr v. Hopkins, 6 Biss. 345, 12 N. B. R. 211, Fed. Cas. No. 2,192; In re Riorden, 14 N. B. R. 332, Fed. Cas. No. 11,852.

creditor who has in good faith received a preference, which is voidable under the bankruptcy law only because given within four months prior to the filing of the petition, and who has in good faith retained the preference until deprived thereof by the judgment of a court in a suit by the trustee, may still prove the debt so voidably preferred, notwithstanding the statutory provision concerning the "surrender" of preferences.[431]

As to the manner of making the surrender, it naturally depends on the character of the preference given. If it was a payment of money, the sum must be paid over to the trustee in bankruptcy, and an offer by the creditor to allow the amount of the preference to be deducted from any dividend payable to him on his claim is not sufficient.[432] As to reimbursing the estate for the costs of legal proceedings, it may or may not be equitable to require this according to the circumstances of the case.[433] But on the other hand, when a conveyance of land is surrendered as having been preferential, the creditor is entitled to be reimbursed for money expended in paying off incumbrances on the property.[434] Where the property transferred was a note of a third person, the statute is satisfied by a return of the note itself, and the trustee cannot refuse to receive it and demand its face value in cash.[435] But the surrender of a chose in action must be completed by such indorsements or other forms of assignment as may be necessary to pass title.[436] A written waiver of [431] Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank, 197 U. S. 356, 25 Sup. Ct. 443, 49 L. Ed. 790, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 29 Sup. Ct. 159, 53 L. Ed. 332, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; Streeter v. Jefferson County Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 36, 13 Sup. Ct. 236, 37 L. Ed. 68; State Bank of Clearwater v. Ingram, 237 Fed. 76, 150 C. C. A. 278, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447; In re Louis J. Bergdoll Motor Co., 233 Fed. 410, 147 C. C. A. 346, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; Union Central Life Ins. Co. v. Drake, 214 Fed. 536, 131 C. C. A. 82, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Cahill (D. C.) 208 Fed. 193, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794; In re Hamilton Automobile Co., 209 Fed. 596, 126 C. C. A. 418, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205. In re Elletson Co., 193 Fed. 84, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434; In re John A. Baker Notion Co., 180 Fed. 922, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808; In re Clark, 176 Fed. 955, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re Otto F. Lange Co., 170 Fed. 114, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Baker, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 195; In re Newcomer, 18 N. B. R. 85, Fed. Cas. No. 10,148; In re Cadwell, 17 Fed. 693; In re Currier, 2 Low. 436, 13 N. B. R. 68, Fed. Cas. No. 3,492.

[432] In re Flick (D. C.) 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465. But where a creditor has received a preference in money which is less than the amount of his claim, the court, instead of requiring the repayment thereof, may properly permit proof of the creditor's claim, and provide by its final decree for the deduction of the amount of the preference, with interest, from the dividend due such creditor. In re Wright-Dana Hardware Co., 212 Fed. 397, 129 C. C. A. 73, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816. And where the trustee in bankruptcy holds money belonging to a creditor who has received a voidable preference, the two sums may be offset and the balance only paid to the trustee as a condition of allowing the creditor's claim. In re French (D. C.) 231 Fed. 255, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

[433] In re Moyer (D. C.) 97 Fed. 324.

[434] Crandall v. Coats (D. C.) 133 Fed. 965, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[435] Dickinson v. Security Bank of Richmond, 110 Fed. 353, 49 C. C. A. 84, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551.

[436] Traders' Ins. Co. v. Mann, 118 Ga. 381, 45 S. E. 426.

a lien may be a sufficient surrender of it,[437] but not a mere admission on the part of the creditor that the security given is voidable as having been in fraud of creditors,[438] though it appears that a specific surrender of a mortgage may not be necessary where the lien was cut off by the foreclosure of a prior mortgage before the creditor filed his proof of claim.[439] If the creditor has instituted proceedings in a state court to establish or enforce a lien, they must be abandoned or dismissed as a part of the surrender of his preference.[440]

The surrender of a preference must be made to the trustee in bankruptcy, and not to the bankrupt or to any other person,[441] and pending the appointment and qualification of a trustee, the proof of debt must be postponed, and the preferred creditor cannot vote in the election for trustee.[442] Ordinarily it is intended that the surrender shall be made by the creditor himself. But where the preference consisted in a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage, it is sufficient if the trustee therein surrenders the property covered.[443] Where the question of preference has been contested, and decided by the referee in bankruptcy adversely to the creditor, the referee should fix a reasonable time within which the creditor may surrender his preference and have his claim allowed.[444] And where the creditor, on demand of the trustee in bankruptcy, has promised and agreed to pay over to him the amount of a preferential payment received by him, which promise he afterwards fulfills, he is not debarred from having his proof of claim allowed by the fact that, for the convenience of counsel, the actual payment of the money was delayed for a few days beyond the close of a year after the adjudication in bankruptcy.[445]

§ 607. Same; Separate or Independent Claims.—According to the preponderance of authority, the provision of the bankruptcy act relating to the surrender of preferences, as a condition to the allowance of claims, is aimed at the preferred creditor, rather than the particular debt sought to be proved; and the sum total of the bankrupt's indebtedness to that creditor at the time the preference was given is affected by it, no matter what may be the nature and number of the items of that indebtedness, so that, although the preference was given in discharge of or as security for [437] In re Bolinger, 108 Fed. 374, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[438] In re Leeman, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 331.

[439] In re Stendts, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 509.

[440] In re Heinsfurter, 97 Fed. 198, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113; Buckingham v. Schuylkill Plush & Silk Co., 38 Misc. Rep. 305, 77 N. Y. Supp. 857.

[441] In re Bailey, 176 Fed. 990, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201; In re Currier, 2 Low. 436, 13 N. B. R. 68, Fed. Cas. No. 3,492.

[442] In re Parham, 17 N. B. R. 300, Fed. Cas. No. 10,712.

[443] In re Clarke, 2 Hughes, 405, 10 N. B. R. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 2,843.

[444] In re Oppenheimer, 140 Fed. 51, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[445] Hutchinson v. Otis, Wilcox & Co., 190 U. S. 552, 23 Sup. Ct. 778, 47 L. Ed. 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

one particular debt, yet the creditor cannot be allowed to prove a claim upon any other debt, existing at that time, however separate and distinct, unless he will surrender the preference.[446] And a creditor having several claims against the same debtor, who receives a payment on account without special appropriation, under circumstances making it a preference, cannot apply the payment to the extinguishment of some of the claims, and then prove the others as unsecured.[447] And the same principle applies where part of the original indebtedness has been transferred or assigned by the creditor to a third person; no part of it can be allowed as a claim against the estate in bankruptcy until the preference has been surrendered.[448] But this applies only to the state of the accounts between the parties at the time the preference was given. A creditor who has received a preference is not thereby debarred from proving a claim in bankruptcy on a separate and new debt created after the giving of the preference, and to which the preference could have no relation.[449] But where notes given by a debtor to close an account are still held by the creditor and unpaid at the time a further indebtedness on account is contracted, both the notes and the account will constitute the indebtedness then due, and a payment of the notes thereafter, when the debtor is insolvent and within four months prior to his bankruptcy, will con-

[446] In re Mayo Contracting Co., 157 Fed. 469, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551; Dunn v. Gans, 129 Fed. 750, 64 C. C. A. 278, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316; In re Delling, 124 Fed. 852, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 688; Livingstone v. Heineman, 120 Fed. 786, 57 C. C. A. 154, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39; In re E. O. Thompson's Sons, 121 Fed. 607; In re Lyon, 121 Fed. 723, 58 C. C. A. 143, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25; Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Dickson, 111 Fed. 726, 49 C. C. A. 574, 55 L. R. A. 349, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Rogers Milling Co., 102 Fed. 687, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; In re Teslow, 104 Fed. 229, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757; In re Flick, 105 Fed. 503, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; In re Gillette, 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119; In re Conhaim, 97 Fed. 923, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; In re Beswick, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 808; In re Myers, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 765; In re Richter, 1 Dill. 544, 4 N. B. R. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 11,803; In re Kingsbury, 3 N. B. R. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 7,816; In re Barnes, Fed. Cas. No. 1,013; State Nat. Bank v. Monroe Cotton Press Co., 39 La. Ann. 834, 2 South. 605. Contra, In re Hurst, 188 Fed. 707, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 781; In re Wise, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 151; In re Comstock, 3 Sawy. 320, 12 N. B. R. 110, Fed. Cas. No. 3,079; Whiston v. Smith, 2 Low. 101, Fed. Cas. No. 17,523; In re Stephens, 3 Biss. 187, 6 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 13,365; Corbett v. Woodward, 5 Sawy. 403, Fed. Cas. No. 3,223; Cramton v. Tarbell, Fed. Cas. No. 3,349.

[447] Kimball v. E. A. Rosenbam Co., 114 Fed. 85, 52 C. C. A. 33, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718; C. S. Morey Mercantile Co. v. Schiffer, 114 Fed. 447, 52 C. C. A. 249, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; Dunn v. Gans, 129 Fed. 750, 64 C. C. A. 278, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316; In re Conhaim, 97 Fed. 923, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; In re Kingsbury, 3 N. B. R. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 7,816; Stearns Salt & Lumber Co. v. Hammond, 217 Fed. 559, 133 C. C. A. 411, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[448] Swarts v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 117 Fed. 1, 54 C. C. A. 387, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

[449] In re Wolf & Levy, 122 Fed. 127, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 406, 50 C. C. A. 310, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332; In re Weissner, 115 Fed. 421, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177; In re Jourdan, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 581; In re Arnold, 2 N. B. R. 160, Fed. Cas. No. 551.

stitute the giving of a preference, which must be surrendered before the account can be proved and allowed.[450]

§ 608. Proceedings to Recover Preference; Jurisdiction.—When a creditor who is alleged to have received a preference submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, the question of his rights and liabilities may be determined summarily.[451] But the trustee cannot require a creditor in this situation, who has not in any way become a party to the bankruptcy proceedings, to appear before the referee and litigate the question of preference, but he must proceed by plenary suit against the creditor in a proper court.[452] The federal district court has jurisdiction of an action at law for this purpose.[453] And indeed it is expressly provided by statute that "for the purpose of such recovery any court of bankruptcy, as hereinbefore defined, and any state court which would have had jurisdiction if bankruptcy had not intervened, shall have concurrent jurisdiction."[454] And an action by a trustee against a creditor to recover an alleged preference, begun by summons and complaint, is an action at law within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, notwithstanding an allegation in the complaint of the conversion of the property by the creditor.[455] And the federal court is not prevented from taking jurisdiction by the fact that the alleged preference consisted of a confessed judgment, under which there has been a levy and sale and a distribution of the proceeds to lien creditors.[456] But if the proceeds of a sale remain in the custody of the state court, the proper course for the trustee is to file an intervening petition, asking that such proceeds should be ordered delivered over to him,[457] and in any case the fund, if recovered, must be turned over to the bankruptcy court and administered by it as a part of the bankrupt's estate.[458]

§ 609. Same; Right of Action.—Since a trustee in bankruptcy represents the whole body of creditors, and not merely lien claimants or the bankrupt, it is his right and duty to contest the validity of any conveyance, mortgage, payment, or other transfer of property by which one [450] In re Jones, 123 Fed. 128, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; In re Meyer, 115 Fed. 997, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

[451] In re Black, 2 Ben. 196, 1 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 1,457. And see Giveen v. Smith, 1 Hask. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 5,467.

[452] In re Keystone Press, 203 Fed. 710, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re F. M. & S. Q. Carlile, 199 Fed. 612, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373.

[453] Kraver v. Abrahams, 203 Fed. 782, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; Fenlon v. Lonergan, 29 Pa. St. 471; In re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, 6 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991.

[454] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60b, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797, and Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838. And see supra, §§ 410, 414.

[455] Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[456] First Nat. Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. 325, 22 L. Ed. 542.

[457] Bear v. Chase (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 920, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746.

[458] Lovell v. Latham & Co., 186 Fed. 602, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

creditor has obtained a preference over others, and he is the only proper party to bring the necessary action;[459] it cannot be brought by another creditor, certainly not by one who has not made himself a party to the bankruptcy proceedings.[460] The proper defendant in such an action is the party receiving the alleged preference or who is to be benefited by it,[461] and it is immaterial that such party is a municipal corporation.[462] Nor is it necessary to the trustee's right of action that the creditor should have actually received money or property. A preference, voidable at the suit of the trustee, is equally given by the creation of a security, or by a release of the debtor's equity or right of redemption,[463] or by a transfer of a claim against a third person, which is credited upon the price of the bankrupt's stock in trade when bought by the preferred creditor.[464] And where the trustee, alleging that a sale by the bankrupt just prior to his adjudication was fraudulent, brings an action against the purchaser for the value of the goods, and receives money in settlement of such claim, he is not thereby precluded from following the money received by the bankrupt for the goods into the hands of preferred creditors.[465] A previous demand for the return or surrender of a preference is not a condition precedent to the trustee's right to sue for its recovery or annulment.[466]

§ 610. Same; Form of Action or Proceeding.—Where a trustee in bankruptcy seeks to recover a preference, but without showing the need of an injunction or discovery or accounting, or of specific performance or the reformation or cancellation of any instrument, but merely asks a decree for the amount of the preference, he has an adequate remedy at law.[467] But if it is necessary to his case that he should avoid a conveyance, transfer, or incumbrance apparently good, or a judgment valid 459 In re Metzger, 2 N. B. R. 355, Fed. Cas. No. 9,510; Balfour v. Wheeler, 15 Fed. 229. If he sues in a state court, it is of course necessary for the trustee to allege and show his official status, which may be done by the record of the bankruptcy proceedings. Anderson v. Stayton State Bank, 82 Or. 357, 159 Pac. 1033.

460 Smith v. Brainerd, 37 Minn. 479, 35 N. W. 271.

461 Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615, 74 Pac. 303.

462 Painter v. Napoleon Tp., 156 Fed. 289, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412.

463 Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955.

464 Hackney v. Raymond Bros. Clarke Co., 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822, 99 N. W. 675.

465 Lampkin v. People's Nat. Bank, 98 Mo. App. 239, 71 S. W. 715.

466 Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Jackman, 204 U. S. 522, 27 Sup. Ct. 391, 51 L. Ed. 596, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; McCulloch v. Davenport Sav. Bank (D. C.) 226 Fed. 309, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765; Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 166 Ind. 427, 76 N. E. 529; Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 467, 75 N. E. 837; Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. Moody, 233 Ill. 634, 84 N. E. 656; Bowler v. First Nat. Bank, 21 S. D. 449, 113 N. W. 618, 130 Am. St. Rep. 725.

467 Detroit Trust Co. v. Old Nat. Bank, 155 Mich. 61, 118 N. W. 729; Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 166 Ind. 427, 76 N. E. 529; Allen v. Gray, 201 N. Y. 504, 94 N. E. 652, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 123. Equity has no jurisdiction of a bill by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover on its face, his proper course is to sue in equity, and it is none the less an equitable action because the ultimate relief sought is a money judgment.[468] And at any rate, a trustee's suit to recover a prohibited preference is analogous to a suit by a judgment creditor to set aside a fraudulent conveyance, and hence its maintenance as a suit in equity is not objectionable on the ground of the existence of an adequate remedy at law.[469] But where a suit in equity is brought by a trustee to avoid an alleged preferential transfer, and to recover a fund to be administered by the bankruptcy court, one claiming a lien on the fund if recovered cannot intervene and enforce such lien by cross-bill, for the rule is that the subject-matter of a cross-bill must be a defense to the original bill, or essentially connected with and necessary to a complete determination of the original suit.[470] Where the action is maintained in the bankruptcy court, it must be a plenary suit, and not a mere summary hearing, unless the defendant will consent; but if he is properly brought into court, it is competent for him to waive an objection of this kind, and in that case the issue may be determined in any appropriate form of proceeding.[471]

§ 611. Same; Pleading.—In the trustee's bill or complaint to avoid or recover a preference, it is not necessary to allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of real estate, all that is necessary being sufficient allegations of a preference given by an insolvent within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[472] The plaintiff must naturally show his own capacity to sue, and this is done by alleging the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the adjudication of the bankrupt, and the appointment and qualification of the plaintiff as trustee, together with an allegation of demand and re-an alleged preference, consisting of a payment of money only. First State Bank of Milliken v. Spencer, 219 Fed. 503, 135 C. C. A. 253, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[468] Dyer v. Kratzenstein, 103 App. Div. 404, 92 N. Y. Supp. 1012; Lesser v. Bradford Realty Co., 116 App. Div. 212, 101 N. Y. Supp. 571; Andrews v. Mather, 134 Ala. 358, 32 South. 738; In re Swenk, 9 Fed. 643. And see supra, § 401.

[469] Pond v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 124 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; Johnson v. Hanley, 188 Fed. 752, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748; Goodenow v. Milliken, 1 Hask. 348, Fed. Cas. No. 5,535; Houghton v. Stiner, 92 App. Div. 171, 87 N. Y. Supp. 10. Contra, Baden v. Bertenshaw, 68 Kan. 32, 74 Pac. 639; Brock & Spight v. Oliver, 149 Ala. 93, 43 South. 357.

[470] Lovell v. Latham & Co., 186 Fed. 602, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

[471] In re Noel, 137 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Ulrich, 3 Ben. 355, 3 N. B. R. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 14,327. And see supra, § 403.

[472] Marion State Bank v. Gossett, 175 Ind. 211, 93 N. E. 996; Lesser v. Bradford Realty Co., 116 App. Div. 212, 101 N. Y. Supp. 571; Benson v. Johnson, 85 Or. 677, 165 Pac. 1001, 167 Pac. 1014; Williams v. German-American Trust Co., 219 Fed. 507, 135 C. C. A. 257, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; Wilson v. Citizens' Trust Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 697, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86. And see Collett v. Adams, 249 U. S. 545, 39 Sup. Ct. 372, 63 L. Ed. 764, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

fusal of surrender of the preference.[473] Aside from this, the four essential allegations of the complaint are (1) that the bankrupt was insolvent when the alleged preference was given; (2) that it was within four months prior to the bankruptcy; (3) that the effect of the enforcement of the judgment or transfer will be to enable the defendant to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other creditor of the same class; (4) that defendant had reasonable ground to believe that a preference would result from the transaction. The omission of any one of these allegations will render the complaint demurrable.[474] The allegation of the debtor's insolvency must be specific; it is not sufficient to state that he was in failing circumstances and unable to meet his debts in full.[475] And it is necessary to show, explicitly or by necessary allegation, that the payment was made or property transferred out of the estate of the bankrupt.[476] As to the allegation that the preference, if permitted to stand, will enable the defendant to obtain a larger percentage of his claim than other creditors of the same class, this is strictly necessary.[477] To show this, it is probably necessary to insert allegations disclosing the existence of other creditors,—general unsecured creditors who are entitled to participate in the distribution of the estate.[478] And it has been held that the bill is demurrable if it fails to allege that there are not sufficient assets to pay all the creditors who have filed claims against the estate,[479] or that if the complaint alleges that the schedules of the bankrupt show a certain amount of unsecured claims, it must also show the amount of preferred and secured claims.[480] But later and perhaps better considered decisions are to the effect that the trustee need not allege that the assets of the estate are not sufficient to pay the creditors in full,[481] or even that any creditor has filed a claim in the bankruptcy proceeding or any fact showing the necessity for recov-

[473] Lesser v. Bradford Realty Co., 116 App. Div. 212, 101 N. Y. Supp. 571; Capital Nat. Bank v. Wilkerson, 36 Ind. App. 467, 75 N. E. 837. But see supra, § 609, as to the necessity of demand before suit.

[474] Painter v. Napoleon Tp., 156 Fed. 289, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; Ferguson v. Lederer, Strauss & Co., 128 Iowa, 286, 103 N. W. 794.

[475] Martin v. Bigelow, 36 Misc. Rep. 298, 73 N. Y. Supp. 443; McNeel v. Folk, 75 W. Va. 57, 83 S. E. 192.

[476] Richter v. Nimmo, 63 App. Div. 422, 71 N. Y. Supp. 501.

[477] Schreyer v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 74 App. Div. 478, 77 N. Y. Supp. 494; West v. Bank of Lahoma, 16 Okl. 329, 85 Pac. 469; Lesser v. Bradford Realty Co., 116 App. Div. 212, 101 N. Y. Supp. 571; Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 46 App. Div. 335, 61 N. Y. Supp. 604.

[478] Gering v. Leyda, 186 Fed. 110, 108 C. C. A. 222, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 137. It is not necessary to allege the identity of the existing creditors with those who were creditors at the time of the alleged preferential transfer. Minnesota & Ontario Power Co. v. Losey, 260 Fed. 689, 171 C. C. A. 427, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

[479] Lesser v. Bradford Realty Co., 47 Misc. Rep. 463, 95 N. Y. Supp. 933.

[480] Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[481] Kraver v. Abrahams, 203 Fed. 782, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; Sherwood v. Holbrook, 98 Misc. Rep. 668, 163 N. Y. Supp. 326.

ering the alleged preference.[482] And the value of the debtor's property and the extent of his indebtedness need not be set out, as these are matters of evidence.[483] It is strictly necessary to aver that the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the judgment or transfer would result in giving him a preference,[484] but not to state why he had such cause of belief or the evidence of it.[485] It is not sufficient to allege that the transaction in question was fraudulent, or that there was a fraudulent intent on the part of the debtor or of the creditor; this kind of allegation cannot take the place of specific statements of the insolvency of the debtor and of the effect of the transaction as a preference.[486] But on the other hand, if all the elements of a voidable preference are pleaded, no allegation of fraud is needed, as the statute does not require the presence of any other fraud than such as is implied in the particular kind of transactions which it denounces as preferential.[487] In an action at law by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover a preference, the complaint is not demurrable merely because it demands judgment for too large a sum.[488]

§ 612. Same; Defenses.—Ignorance of the law is no defense to a creditor who is sued for the recovery of an illegal preference,[489] nor a decree of a land court granting registration of title to the property in question under the conveyance assailed as preferential, at least if the defendant is not a bona fide purchaser taking in reliance on the registered title,[490] nor can the preferred creditor resist the trustee's action on the ground that he has expended money in the custody and care of the property in question, his claim for compensation being one which must be presented for allowance against the estate in bankruptcy.[491] But he may defend on the ground that his taking of the property was merely in pursuance of his rescission of a contract by which he had sold it to the bankrupt,[492] or he may escape liability by repudiating all

[482] Jackman v. Eau Claire Nat. Bank, 125 Wis. 465, 104 N. W. 98, 115 Am. St. Rep. 955.

[483] Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 46 App. Div. 335, 61 N. Y. Supp. 604.

[484] Greene v. Montana Brewing Co., 29 Mont. 380, 72 Pac. 751; Johnson v. Anderson, 70 Neb. 233, 97 N. W. 339; Peck v. Connell, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 22; Hoshaw v. Cosgriff, 247 Fed. 22, 159 C. C. A. 240, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; Watson v. Adams, 242 Fed. 441, 155 C. C. A. 217, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473; Johnson v. American Bank, 5 Alaska, 145.

[485] Crooks v. People's Nat. Bank, 46 App. Div. 335, 61 N. Y. Supp. 604.

[486] In re Leech, 171 Fed. 622, 96 C. C. A. 424, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599; Severin v. Robinson, 27 Ind. App. 55, 60 N. E. 966; Hallack v. Tritch, 17 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 5,956.

[487] Chism v. Bank of Friars Point (Miss.) 27 South. 610; Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 84 Miss. 54, 36 South. 65.

[488] Grant v. National Bank of Auburn, 197 Fed. 581, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[489] Martin v. Toof, 1 Dill. 203, 4 N. B. R. 488, Fed. Cas. No. 9,167.

[490] Morris v. Small, 160 Fed. 142, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138.

[491] In re Nechamkus, 155 Fed. 867, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189.

[492] Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Kastor, 17 Wyo. 180, 97 Pac. 921.

claim to the property or its proceeds,[493] or he may show that the payment or transfer was not received from the bankrupt, but from a third person.[494]

§ 613. Same; Set-Off of Amount of New Credit.—The bankruptcy act provides that "if a creditor has been preferred, and afterwards in good faith gives the debtor further credit without security of any kind, for property which becomes a part of the debtor's estate, the amount of such new credit remaining unpaid at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy may be set off against the amount which would otherwise be recoverable from him."[495] This, it is held, entitles such a creditor to a deduction of the amount of the new credit from a preference which he is required to surrender before proving his claim, and is not limited in its application to cases where the trustee sues to recover the preference.[496] But there was, at one time, much discussion as to whether the provision quoted applied to preferences received innocently and in good faith and without knowledge of the debtor's insolvency, the current doctrine being that a creditor must surrender even a preference so received, before his claim could be allowed, though it would not be voidable at the suit of the trustee.[497] But the necessity for determining this point no longer exists, since the amendment of 1903 provides that the surrender of preferences before the allowance of claims shall include only such preferences as are subject to be set aside or recovered by the trustee.[498] But it is the intention of the provision relating to set-off that the preference shall have been given in settlement and discharge of an existing debt, and that a new and unconnected transfer of property on credit shall have ensued.[499] Hence where [493] Giveen v. Smith, 1 Hask. 296, Fed. Cas. No. 5,466.

[494] North v. Taylor, 61 App. Div. 253, 70 N. Y. Supp. 339.

[495] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 60c.

[496] Kahn v. Cone Export & Commission Co., 115 Fed. 290, 53 C. C. A. 92, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157; Gans v. Ellison, 114 Fed. 734, 52 C. C. A. 366, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; McKey v. Lee, 105 Fed. 923, 45 C. C. A. 127, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; Peterson v. Nash Bros., 112 Fed. 311, 50 C. C. A. 260, 55 L. R. A. 344, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; In re Southern Overalls Mfg. Co., 111 Fed. 518, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; In re Ryan, 105 Fed. 760, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396; In re Seckler, 106 Fed. 484, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579; In re Soldosky, 111 Fed. 511, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123. Contra, see In re Keller, 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; In re Christensen, 101 Fed. 802, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; In re Abraham Steers Lumber Co., 110 Fed. 738, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315.

[497] See C. S. Morey Mercantile Co. v. Schiffer, 114 Fed. 447, 52 C. C. A. 249, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; In re Oliver, 109 Fed. 784, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Ratliff, 107 Fed. 80, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713; In re Thompson, 112 Fed. 651, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 214; In re Jones, 123 Fed. 128, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

[498] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 57g, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[499] In re John Morrow & Co., 134 Fed. 686, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; In re Bailey, 110 Fed. 928, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 26. Deposits in bank by an insolvent custom-preferential payments have been made on an account for goods sold, and the trustee demands their surrender before the creditor's claim shall be allowed, the latter cannot set off the unpaid balance.[500] Further, it is necessary that the property for which the credit was given should have been acquired by the bankrupt from the preferred creditor himself,[501] but not that it should remain a part of the debtor's estate until his adjudication in bankruptcy, or that it should be used in payment of preferred debts.[502] But the creditor claiming this right of set-off must allege and show all the facts essential to entitle him to it, the same as if he sought to maintain a separate action on his claim.[503]

§ 614. Same; Burden of Proof and Evidence.—In an action to set aside or recover a transfer, incumbrance, or payment, alleged to constitute an unlawful preference, the burden of proof is on the trustee in bankruptcy to establish the existence of each of the statutory elements of a voidable preference.[504] To show the fact that the bankruptcy law has become applicable to the transaction in question, by reason of the debtor's having been adjudged bankrupt as of a certain date, a properly certified copy of the adjudication of bankruptcy is admissible.[505] er after the bank's cashier had forbidden the payment of checks against the deposit, and very shortly before the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the customer, constitute a voidable preference, and cannot be allowed by way of set-off against the customer's debt to the bank. Mechanics' & Metals Nat. Bank v. Ernst, 231 U. S. 60, 34 Sup. Ct. 22, 58 L. Ed. 121, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302. And see Chisholm v. First Nat. Bank, 269 Ill. 110, 109 N. E. 657; In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 267, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

500 In re Christensen (D. C.) 101 Fed. 802, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Rotan Grocery Co. v. West, 246 Fed. 685, 158 C. C. A. 641, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Ryan (D. C.) 105 Fed. 760, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 396.

501 Carleton Dry Goods Co. v. Rogers, 120 Fed. 14, 57 C. C. A. 34, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787.

502 Kaufman v. Tredway, 195 U. S. 271, 25 Sup. Ct. 33, 49 L. Ed. 190, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 682.

503 In re Oliver (D. C.) 109 Fed. 784, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626.

504 Turner v. Schaeffer, 249 Fed. 654, 161 C. C. A. 564, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829; W. S. Peck & Co. v. Whitmer, 231 Fed. 893, 146 C. C. A. 89, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722; Carey v. Donohue, 209 Fed. 328, 126 C. C. A. 254, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210; Mayes v. Palmer, 208 Fed. 97, 125 C. C. A. 325, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225; Northern Neck State Bank v. Smith, 205 Fed. 894, 124 C. C. A. 207, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 527; In re Dorr, 196 Fed. 292, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; Kimmerle v. Farr (C. C. A.) 189 Fed. 295, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818; Brown v. Streicher, 177 Fed. 473, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; Crane v. Penny, 2 Fed. 187; Parsons v. Topliff, 119 Mass. 245, 14 N. B. R. 547; Burnham v. Ft. Dodge Grocery Co., 144 Iowa, 577, 123 N. W. 220; Getman v. Second Nat. Bank, 89 N. Y. 136; Starbuck v. Gebo, 48 Misc. Rep. 333, 96 N. Y. Supp. 781; Keith v. Gettysburg Nat. Bank, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 14; Wickwire v. Webster City Sav. Bank, 153 Iowa, 225, 133 N. W. 100; Hackney v. First Nat. Bank, 68 Neb. 588, 94 N. W. 805, 98 N. W. 412; McDonough v. Cohen, 90 Conn. 469, 97 Atl. 861; Kentucky Bank & Trust Co. v. Pritchett, 44 Okl. 87, 143 Pac. 338. It is not incumbent upon the trustee to prove the existence of other creditors or indebtedness in order to defeat a mortgage, made within four months before the bankruptcy, and which operates as a preference. Pierre Banking & Trust Co. v. Winkler, 39 S. D. 454, 165 N. W. 2.

505 Calkins v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank, 99 Mo. App. 509, 73 S. W. 1098;

And it is proper to show that the defendant's attorney was present when the bankruptcy proceedings were had, as showing notice thereof.[506] But the fact that the particular transaction on which the trustee's suit is based was alleged as an act of bankruptcy in the petition in bankruptcy, and that the adjudication was based on it, is not conclusive proof against the defendant that it constituted an illegal preference, because the issues in the two proceedings are not the same.[507] But on the other hand, a decree of a state court adverse to the creditor, in a suit between the trustee and himself, is a conclusive estoppel upon the creditor if he seeks afterwards to prove his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings.[508]

One thing absolutely essential to constitute a voidable preference is that the debtor should have been insolvent at the time it was given, and the trustee has the burden of proving this fact.[509] The mere fact that the debtor was afterwards adjudged bankrupt raises no presumption that he was insolvent at any given time within four months prior to the filing of the petition.[510] And the giving of a confession of judgment does not of itself raise a presumption of insolvency.[511] But the verified schedules of the bankrupt, containing a presumptively complete list of his assets and liabilities, are admissible in evidence on the question

Whitson v. Farber Bank, 105 Mo. App. 605, 80 S. W. 327.

506 Calkins v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank, 99 Mo. App. 509, 73 S. W. 1098.

507 Hussey v. Richardson-Roberts Dry Goods Co., 148 Fed. 598, 78 C. C. A. 370, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511; In re Dunkle, 7 N. B. R. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 4,160. And see supra, § 182.

508 In re Dakin, 19 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 3,539. A judgment of the referee in bankruptcy, disallowing, on objections by the trustee, a claim against the bankrupt's estate, on the ground that the claimant had received a preference, is admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit by the trustee to recover the preference. Ullman, Stern & Krausse v. Coppard, 246 Fed. 124, 158 C. C. A. 350, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426.

509 In re F. M. & S. Q. Carlile, 199 Fed. 612, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373; In re Arkonia Fabric Mfg. Co., 151 Fed. 914, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; Edwards v. Carondelet Milling Co., 108 Mo. App. 275, 83 S. W. 764; J. W. Crancer & Co. v. Wade, 26 Okl. 757, 110 Pac. 778; McGill v. Commercial Credit Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 637, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702; In re Gaylord (D. C.) 225 Fed. 234, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544; Anderson v. Stayton State Bank, 82 Or. 357, 159 Pac. 1033; Simpson v. Western Hardware & Metal Co., 97 Wash. 626, 167 Pac. 113. But in an action by the trustee to recover money paid by the bankrupt prior to his adjudication in alleged satisfaction of a debt, where the question at issue is whether any such debt existed in fact, it is not necessary to show that there were unsatisfied creditors at the time the payment was made, or at the time of bringing suit or of the trial. Breckons v. Snyder, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575.

510 In re Chappell, 113 Fed. 545, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Swartz v. Frank, 183 Mo. 438, 82 S. W. 60. But where the undisputed facts established that the bankrupt was insolvent to a large extent at the time of the bankruptcy, even disregarding his contingent obligations, there is prima facie proof that he was insolvent at the time of making the transfer a month before, where there was no going business which substantially affected the situation in so short a time. In re Dix (D. C.) 267 Fed. 1016, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199.

511 In re Dibblee, 3 Ben. 283, 2 N. B. R. 617, Fed. Cas. No. 3,884.

of his insolvency at the time of the transaction in suit, at least if it occurred not very long before the bankruptcy and without opportunity for any great change in either property or debts.[512] And the bankrupt's books of account are competent evidence on this issue, to which either party may have recourse, and while their showing as to the debtor's solvency or insolvency is not conclusive, yet it is ordinarily important evidence and entitled to much weight.[513] The bankrupt may also be called as a witness in the trustee's suit, and his testimony may be received concerning his financial condition at the date in question; and if the giving of a preference excites a suspicion of collusion between the bankrupt and the preferred creditor, or of a desire on the part of the former to aid and shield the latter, this only goes to the bankrupt's credibility, not his competency.[514] And it is proper and permissible for the trustee in bankruptcy to testify as to the value of the assets of the bankrupt coming into his hands, the amount of debts proved, the amount he realized at a sale at auction of the bankrupt's assets, and other like matters, as all these matters have a tendency to show the bankrupt's solvency or insolvency at the time of the alleged preference, although of course they must be considered in connection with any changes in his financial condition which may be shown to have occurred in the interval.[515] And where the validity of a mortgage is in issue, it is proper to show that, on the day following its execution, the mortgagor made a voluntary conveyance to his son of substantially all his property.[516]

