A TREATISE

ON THE

LAW AND PRACTICE

OF

BANKRUPTCY

UNDER THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF 1898 AND ITS AMENDMENTS

BY

HENRY CAMPBELL BLACK, LL. D.

AUTHOR OF BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY AND OF TREATISES ON JUDGMENTS, CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, INTERPRETATION OF LAWS, JUDICIAL PRECEDENTS, INCOME TAXES, RESCISSION OF CONTRACTS, ETC.

THIRD EDITION

KANSAS CITY, MO.
VERNON LAW BOOK COMPANY
1922

(BLK.BKR.3D ED.)

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

EIGHT years having passed since the publication of the former edition of this book, a very considerable expansion and development of the law and practice in bankruptcy having come about in the interval, and many demands for a new edition having been presented by members of the Bar, the author has subjected the entire work to a complete and systematic revision, giving full attention to the changes in the law and the applications of it to new states of fact, and incorporating at the same time the doctrines and principles of the decisions which have been rendered from the date of the last edition to the printing of the present volume. An idea of the amount of the new material thus added can be gathered from the fact that it covers the bankruptcy cases reported in the last sixty-seven volumes of the Federal Reporter. That this treatise, in its present form, may deserve, and may continue to receive, the very gratifying measure of favor which has hitherto been accorded to it by the Bench and Bar is the sincere hope of the author.

HENRY CAMPBELL BLACK.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January, 1922.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER I

THE NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY ACT AND ITS EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

CHAPTER II

COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY, THEIR JURISDICTION AND POWERS

CHAPTER III

APPELLATE JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

CHAPTER IV

REFEREES IN BANKRUPTCY, THEIR APPOINTMENT AND QUALIFICATIONS

CHAPTER V

POWERS AND DUTIES OF REFEREES

CHAPTER VI

ACTS OF BANKRUPTCY

CHAPTER VII

WHO ARE SUBJECT TO BANKRUPTCY LAW

CHAPTER VIII

BANKRUPTCY OF PARTNERSHIPS

CHAPTER IX

BANKRUPTCY OF CORPORATIONS

CHAPTER X

PETITION AND ADJUDICATION

CHAPTER XI

SUITS BY AND AGAINST THE BANKRUPT

CHAPTER XII

CUSTODY AND PROTECTION OF PROPERTY BEFORE APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE

CHAPTER XIII

THE BANKRUPT, HIS RIGHTS AND DUTIES

CHAPTER XIV

EXEMPTIONS OF BANKRUPT

CHAPTER XV

EXAMINATIONS IN BANKRUPTCY

CHAPTER XVI

RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF CREDITORS

CHAPTER XVII

APPOINTMENT, QUALIFICATION, AND TENURE OF TRUSTEES

CHAPTER XVIII

POWERS AND DUTIES OF TRUSTEE

CHAPTER XIX

PROPERTY VESTING IN TRUSTEE

CHAPTER XX

EFFECT OF BANKRUPTCY ON EXISTING LIENS

CHAPTER XXI

SUITS BY AND AGAINST TRUSTEES IN BANKRUPTCY

CHAPTER XXII

RIGHTS OF TRUSTEE AS AGAINST PRIOR ASSIGNEE FOR CREDITORS

CHAPTER XXIII

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES VOIDABLE BY TRUSTEE

CHAPTER XXIV

SALES OF PROPERTY BY TRUSTEES

CHAPTER XXV

PROVABLE DEBTS AND CLAIMS

CHAPTER XXVI

PROOF AND ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS

CHAPTER XXVII

SET-OFF OF MUTUAL DEBTS

CHAPTER XXVIII

SECURED CREDITORS

CHAPTER XXIX

PREFERENCES AND PREFERRED CREDITORS

CHAPTER XXX

DEBTS ENTITLED TO PRIORITY

CHAPTER XXXI

DIVIDENDS

CHAPTER XXXII

COMPOSITIONS

CHAPTER XXXIII

DISCHARGE OF BANKRUPT

CHAPTER XXXIV

DEBTS AFFECTED BY DISCHARGE

CHAPTER XXXV

REVIVAL OF DEBTS BARRED BY DISCHARGE

CHAPTER XXXVI

COSTS AND FEES

CHAPTER XXXVII

CRIMES AND CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

THE LAW OF BANKRUPTCY

CHAPTER I

THE NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY ACT AND ITS EFFECT ON STATE LAWS

Sec.

§ 1. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.—The Constitution of the United States provides that "the Congress shall have Power * * * To establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization and uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States."[1] The first national bankruptcy act was passed in 1800 and repealed in 1803. It was modeled upon the British statute then in force, was directed against insolvent "traders," and provided only for involuntary or compulsory proceedings. The power of Congress was again exercised in this behalf in 1841, and the statute remained in force for two years when it was repealed. Again in 1867, a bankruptcy law was enacted, which, after being several times amended, was finally repealed in 1878. This act, as well as that of 1841, contained provisions for voluntary bankruptcy and was primarily intended for the benefit of insolvent debtors. Each was designed to relieve the conditions following a financial panic or period of severe industrial depression, and each was taken off the statute book as soon as it was supposed to have accomplished its purpose. For twenty years after the repeal of the act of 1867, the power vested in the national legislature remained unexercised, and the settlement of the affairs of insolvent debtors was left to the incomplete and unsatisfactory regulation of the laws of the various states. During the most of this period, however, there was an insistent demand for the enactment of a national bankruptcy law, proceeding now chiefly from the creditor class, which became so urgent that at least one President (Harrison), in a message to Congress, recommended the passage of a law on the subject, no longer as a temporary expedient, but to become "a permanent part of our general legislation." Numerous bills on the subject were introduced in the two houses of Congress, and considerable attention given to it. Finally the statute now in force was adopted and was approved July 1, 1898.

[1] Const. U. S., art. 1, § 8.

Concerning the history of this enactment, it has been said from the bench: "This bankruptcy act was as carefully considered a piece of legislation as any given us for years by that body [Congress]. The Senate first passed what was known as the 'Nelson' bill on the subject. The House of Representatives, after long discussion, passed, as a substitute, the 'Henderson' bill, carrying out substantially the provisions of the Torrey measure, which had been for several years prior discussed in legal associations and journals. The matter was finally referred to a conference committee composed of Senators Hoar, Lindsay, and Nelson, on behalf of the Senate, and Representatives Henderson, Ray (now judge of the Northern District of New York) and Terry on behalf of the House, lawyers as able as the country could afford, who, after several months' deliberation, reported a compromise which was passed without amendment and became the existing act." [2]

Nevertheless, when brought to the test of practical experience, it was found that the statute was by no means free from ambiguities and inconsistencies. Questions of very grave import early arose, and the courts were put to the necessity of applying the processes of construction to the act with a view to harmonizing and explaining its various provisions. As the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court was severely restricted, the solution of these problems was left to the circuit courts of appeals, for the most part, and while each has generally been consistent in adhering to its own former determinations, they have not usually deferred to each other, and hence it results that neither the interpretation of the law nor its application can truly be said to be "uniform throughout the United States." Moreover, the statute was found to be unsatisfactory in some particulars, and lacking in efficiency in others. To remedy these defects three amendatory acts have been passed, that of February 5, 1903 (32 Stat. 797), that of June 15, 1906 (34 Stat. 267), and that of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 838). The text of the act of 1898, as thus amended, is printed in an appendix to this book, where the reader may also find, for purposes of comparison, the text of the act of 1867.

[2] Per Dayton, Dist. J., in Re Henderson, 142 Fed. 588, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91.

§ 2. Constitutionality of National Bankruptcy Law.—Under the clause of the federal constitution from which the power of Congress in this behalf is derived, it is within the competence of the national legislature, untrammeled by any state laws, to enact any and all forms of legislation tending to promote the distribution of an insolvent's estate among his creditors and his discharge from their demands, providing only that its enactments are not wanting in the character of uniformity.[3] In particular, it has been decided that the authority of Congress over the subject of bankruptcy is not to be gauged or limited by the British statutes of bankruptcy which were in force at the time of the adoption of our constitution. Though those statutes, as then in force, applied only to persons engaged in trade, Congress is not obliged to limit its laws on the subject to merchants or traders.[4] Nor has any success attended the argument that the constitution contemplated only a law which would permit creditors to force an application of the debtor's property to the payment of their claims. On the contrary, the voluntary features of the bankruptcy law, allowing a debtor to present his own voluntary petition for adjudication and to obtain his discharge in the proceedings had thereon, have been amply vindicated by the decisions of the courts.[5] The same is true of the provision relating to compositions in bankruptcy. It has been strongly urged that a law relating to compositions with creditors is not a "law on the subject of bankruptcies." But the courts hold that the grant of authority to Congress in the constitution carries unlimited power (save only for the requirement of uniformity) to pass such laws as Congress shall deem best to regulate the mutual rights of a debtor who does not pay his debts and his creditors, as to the person and property of the debtor.[6] Moreover, it is within the constitutional power of Congress to attach such conditions or limitations as it may see fit to the granting of a discharge in bankruptcy. It is not an indispensable element of a bankruptcy law that it should provide for the discharge of all persons against whom it may operate. Although the act may withhold a discharge from whole classes of debtors (as the act of 1867 refused a discharge to corporations), or may direct that a discharge shall be denied if the bankrupt has done certain unlawful acts, or may require the consent of a certain proportion of his creditors, yet it cannot be said that, for that reason, it is not a "law on the subject of bankruptcies," or that it is unconstitutional.[7] Further, the power to create a system of bankruptcy involves the authority to provide for its administration; and this implies the selection of the courts which are to have jurisdiction in bankruptcy and the regulation of the modes of procedure. "The power under that clause is sufficiently comprehensive to enable Congress to adopt a uniform system of bankruptcy, commit its administration to such of the courts of the United States as it might choose, and to provide the modes of procedure, special or otherwise, as they might, in their discretion, deem best adapted to secure and accomplish the objects of the act; and if such proceedings should differ from those in ordinary cases and suits, they would, notwithstanding, be obligatory upon the courts, as Congress has, by the constitution, plenary authority over that subject."[8] Thus, in a case in the Supreme Court, under the present act, it was urged that the statute operated to [5] Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Klein, 1 How. (U. S.) 277, note; In re Klein, Fed. Cas. No. 7,865; State Bank v. Wilborn, 6 Ark. 35; Lalor v. Wattles, 8 Ill. 225; Loud v. Pierce, 25 Me. 233; Thompson v. Alger, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 428; Kunzler v. Kohaus, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 317; Morse v. Hovey, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 404.

[3] Hurley v. Devlin, 151 Fed. 919, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627; In re Silverman, 1 Sawy. 410, 2 Abb. U. S. 243, 4 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 12855; Keene v. Mould, 16 Ohio, 12; Rowan v. Holcomb, 16 Ohio, 463; Pope v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 152 Wis. 611, 140 N. W. 348. Though Congress may have no power to declare what shall constitute "property" passing to the trustee the section dealing with this subject is not invalid as attempting to make property out of things which are not such. Board of Trade of City of Chicago v. Weston, 243 Fed. 332, 156 C. C. A. 112, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

[4] Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Kunzler v. Kohaus, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 317; In re Silverman, 1 Sawy. 410, 2 Abb. U. S. 243, 4 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 12,855. The bankruptcy act is not unconstitutional because it applies to corporations as well as to natural persons. In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315. The first bankruptcy act, that of 1800, applied only to merchants and to bankers, brokers, factors, underwriters, and marine insurers, and some doubt was expressed by the courts as to whether it would be within the power of Congress to extend the provisions of such an act to all citizens generally, without regard to the fact of their being merchants or traders. Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, 79, Fed. Cas. No. 66. In its subsequent enactments, however, Congress took no note of such a distinction, the acts of 1841, 1867, and 1898 all applying in terms to other persons.

[6] In re Reiman, 12 Blatchf. 562, 13 N. B. R. 128, Fed. Cas. No. 11,675; In re Reiman, 7 Ben. 455, 11 N. B. R. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 11,673.

[7] In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No 2,315.

[8] Goodall v. Tuttle, 3 Biss. 219, 7 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 5,533; Mitchell v. Great Works Mill & Mfg. Co., 2 Story, 648, Fed. Cas. No. 9,662; McLean v. Lafayette Bank, 3 McLean, 185, Fed. Cas. No. 8,885.

deprive creditors of their property without due process of law, and was therefore unconstitutional because it does not provide for notice to them of the filing of a voluntary petition, and also because it does not require personal service of notice of the application for the discharge in voluntary proceedings, and because the notice provided for is unreasonably short, and the right to oppose the discharge unreasonably restricted. But as to the first of these contentions, the court denied that it had any validity, saying that the facts set forth in a voluntary petition, and on which the adjudication was based, were not issuable facts in such sense as to require that creditors should have notice and an opportunity to contest the application; and besides, even in voluntary cases, ample provision is made by the law for notice of the first meeting of creditors and of each subsequent step in the administration and of the proceedings on the application for discharge. As to the second point, it was said: "Considering the plenary power of Congress, the subject-matter of the suit, and the common rights and interests of creditors, we regard this contention as untenable. Congress may prescribe any regulations concerning discharge in bankruptcy that are not so grossly unreasonable as to be incompatible with the fundamental law, and we cannot find anything in this act on that subject which would justify us in overthrowing its action. Nor is it possible to concede that personal service of notice of the application for a discharge is required." [9]

The validity of the penal and criminal provisions of the bankruptcy act has also been sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States, in a case where it was said that it is competent for Congress to enforce, by suitable penalties, all legislation necessary or proper to the execution of the powers with which it is intrusted, and any act committed with a view to evading such legislation, or fraudulently securing its benefits, may be made an offense against the United States.[10]

More particularly with reference to the constitutional requirement that bankruptcy laws shall be "uniform throughout the United States," it is held that the uniformity required is geographical and not personal, and that no limitation is imposed upon Congress as to the classification of persons who are to be affected by such laws, provided only that the laws shall have uniform operation throughout the United States. For this reason, the present bankruptcy act is not lacking in the "uniformity" required by the constitution, although it discriminates, in respect to the right to file a voluntary petition, between natural and artificial persons, withholding that right from all corporations. Neither is it invalid because, in respect to amenability to involuntary proceedings, it distinguishes between different classes of corporations, being made applicable only to those of a certain character or engaged in certain pursuits, and also between different classes of natural persons, exempting wage-earners and farmers. Nor is the classification actually adopted by Congress unreasonable or beyond the limits of its discretion.[11]

[9] Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[10] United States v. Fox, 95 U. S. 670, 24 L. Ed. 538.

But objection has frequently been made to the validity of that clause of the bankruptcy law which adopts the exemption laws of the several states, or accords to the bankrupt the exemptions allowed him by the law of the state of his domicile. Since these laws vary to the widest possible extent, in respect to the character and amount of the exemption granted, it is contended that their recognition as the rule of exemption under the bankruptcy act robs that act of the "uniformity" required by the constitution. But the courts have never conceded any force to this argument. The system of bankruptcy, they say, is uniform throughout the United States in a relative sense, since the trustee takes in each state whatever would have been available to the recourse of execution creditors if the bankruptcy act had never been passed. Though the states vary in the extent of the exemptions which they allow, yet what remains the bankruptcy law distributes equally among the creditors; and a bankruptcy law which, by its terms, is made applicable alike to all the states, without distinction or discrimination, is not unconstitutional merely because its operation may be wholly different in one state from another. It may therefore be regarded as settled that this section of the act is not unconstitutional.[12] And the same remarks apply to the application, under the act, of the varying laws of the states with reference to such matters as the right of dower of the bankrupt's wife, the priority of claims, and the like. This does not deprive the act of the requisite uniformity, nor amount to an attempt by Congress unlawfully to delegate its legislative power to the states.[13]

Again, although the bankruptcy act invades and annuls vested rights,

[11] Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[12] Stellwagen v. Clum, 245 U. S. 605, 38 Sup. Ct. 215, 62 L. Ed. 507, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Deckert, 2 Hughes, 183, 10 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 3,728; Darling v. Berry, 4 McCrary, 470, 13 Fed. 659; In re Beckerford, 1 Dill. 45, 4 N. B. R. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 1,209; In re Jordan, 8 N. B. R. 180, Fed. Cas. No. 7,514; In re Duerson, 13 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 4,117; Dozier v. Wilson, 84 Ga. 301, 10 S. E. 743.

[13] Stellwagen v. Clum, 245 U. S. 605, 38 Sup. Ct. 215, 62 L. Ed. 507, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Hanover Nat. Bank v.

and impairs or destroys the obligation of contracts, by releasing debtors from their obligations upon a partial payment or without any payment at all, even in respect to debts contracted before the enactment of the law, and making its provisions compulsory upon creditors, it is not for that reason unconstitutional.[14] The provision of the federal constitution relating to the obligation of contracts is a limitation upon the power of the legislatures of the states only, and does not affect the authority of Congress. "It has been repeatedly held that there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States which forbids Congress to pass laws impairing the obligation of contracts, although that power is denied to the states; and it is no longer controverted that Congress may, by the enactment of a uniform bankruptcy law, discharge debtors entirely from the obligation of their contracts."[15] Moreover, Congress is not prevented by anything contained in the constitution from destroying any lien upon the property of the bankrupt, if it shall be deemed necessary for the effective working of the law and for preserving the equal rights of creditors, whether such lien was created by contract, by statute, or by judgment.[16] But indeed, even if the prohibition against laws impairing the obligation of contracts could be construed as applying to Congress, the bankruptcy act would not be liable to this objection, in respect to that part of it which operates to dissolve liens acquired within four months prior to the proceedings; for such liens relate only to the remedy for the enforcement of the contract, and not to the obligation of the contract.[17]

§ 3. Policy and Purpose of Act.—The purpose of the bankruptcy law is twofold; first, to bring within the control and administration of the court absolutely the entire available property of the bankrupt and distribute it among those entitled, and second, to secure to the bankrupt immunity from further liability for his debts (except as to certain classes) by granting him a discharge which shall be a complete defense against all further proceedings. As to the distribution of the property, it is the intention of the act to divide the estate of the bankrupt between Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Thomas v. Woods, 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

[14] In re Kean, 2 Hughes, 322, 8 N. B. R. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 7,630; In re Smith, 8 N. B. R. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 12,986; Evans v. Eaton, Pet. C. C. 322, Fed. Cas. No. 4,559; In re Owens, 12 N. B. R. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 10,632; Keene v. Mould, 16 Ohio, 12; Morse v. Hovey, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 404; In re Klein, Fed. Cas. No. 7,865; Loud v. Pierce, 25 Me. 233; Cutter v. Folsom, 17 N. H. 139.

[15] In re Owens, 6 Biss. 432, 12 N. B. R. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 10,632; In re Everitt, 9 N. B. R. 90, Fed. Cas. No. 4,579.

[16] In re Jordan, 8 N. B. R. 180, Fed. Cas. No. 7,514.

[17] In re Rhoads, 98 Fed. 399, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 380; Corner v. Miller (Md. Com. Pleas) 1 N. B. R. 403. See also Bank of Columbia v. Overstreet, 10 Bush (Ky.) 150.

himself, his wife, and his children on the one hand, and his creditors on the other hand, as the laws of the state of his domicile authorize its division under like circumstances,[18] saving to the bankrupt and his family every right and exemption which would have been theirs as against creditors enforcing claims by ordinary judicial process.[19] Thereupon it is the further purpose of the act to relieve an honest debtor, who shows himself entitled to its benefits, from any further legal prosecution for his debts, in order to enable him to start afresh in business life.[20] But it is said that the primary and principal purpose of the law regards the rights of creditors, and that it is its intent to secure an absolutely equal and impartial distribution of the assets among the creditors, as speedily as possible, preventing all preferences and favoritism, defeating all fraudulent attempts to secrete property, and providing a remedy against every act by which a failing debtor seeks an unequal distribution.[21] It is the duty of the courts to carry this purpose into effect to the extent which the language of the statute justifies, and not to tolerate any scheme or artifice to evade the letter and spirit of the law.[22]

Moreover, as the bankruptcy law is a high and important manifestation of public policy with reference to insolvent debtors, it is not in any way to be evaded or defeated. No state court, for example, has power to suspend the operation of the bankruptcy law, or to restrain a judgment debtor from availing himself of its provisions.[23] Nor can anyone be prohibited by law or ordinance from taking the benefit of the bankruptcy law, nor be in any way penalized or punished for so doing. On this ground a municipal ordinance which required members of the city's fire department to make prompt payment of all necessary personal and household expenses, and provided that the failure of a fireman to do so

[18] In re McKenzie, 142 Fed. 383, 73 C. C. A. 483, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Hurley v. Devlin, 151 Fed. 919, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627.

[19] In re Cohn, 171 Fed. 568, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

[20] In re Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 180 Fed. 549, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282; In re Munford (D. C.) 255 Fed. 108, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 218; Schexnailder v. Fontenot, 147 La. 467, 85 South. 207.

[21] Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; In re Blount, 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 180 Fed. 549, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282; Webb's Trustee v. Lynchburg Shoe Co., 107 Va. 807, 60 S. E. 130; Whitwell v. Wright, 115 N. Y. Supp. 48; Hewitt v. Boston Straw Board Co., 214 Mass. 260, 101 N. E. 424; Utah Ass'n of Credit Men v. Boyle Furniture Co., 43 Utah, 523, 136 Pac. 572. But it is also the purpose of the law to preserve, rather than to destroy, rights and advantages enjoyed by creditors under state laws, save to the extent they are repugnant to or inconsistent with the specific provisions of the bankruptcy law. Schexnailder v. Fontenot, 147 La. 467, 85 South. 207.

[22] In re Blount, 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[23] In re Kepecs, 123 N. Y. Supp. 872; Brenen v. Dahlstrom Metallic Door Co., 189 App. Div. 685, 178 N. Y. Supp. 846.

should be ground for discharging him, was held to be superseded and invalidated by the bankruptcy law, in so far as it affected debts of a fireman which would be dischargeable in a bankruptcy proceeding pending against him.[24] No more can a debtor voluntarily engage himself in advance to renounce the benefit of the act. Thus, the maker of a judgment note containing a waiver of "all rights under the bankruptcy laws of the United States" is not thereby estopped from setting up a subsequent discharge in bankruptcy as a defense to his liability, since the waiver is void as contrary to public policy.[25]

§ 4. Interpretation and Construction of Bankruptcy Act.—The bankruptcy law is a remedial statute and should not be subjected to a narrow or illiberal interpretation; it should be construed reasonably and according to the fair import of its terms, with a view to effect its objects and to promote justice.[26] "It is true that laws relating to bankruptcy and insolvency operate with severity upon the debtor, since

[24] In re Hicks, 133 Fed. 739, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

[25] May v. Merchants' & Mechanics' Bank, 109 Pa. St. 145.

[26] Botts v. Hammond, 99 Fed. 916, 40 C. C. A. 179, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 775; Blake, Moffitt & Towne v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Norcross v. Nathan, 99 Fed. 414, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912; In re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991, 6 N. B. R. 22; Mims v. Lockett, 20 Ga. 474; Campbell v. Perkins, 8 N. Y. 430. There is an English decision and there are some cases in the state courts holding that bankruptcy or insolvency laws must be strictly construed, but these cases are not authoritative upon the interpretation of the national bankruptcy law. See Calladay v. Pilkington, 12 Mod. 513; Salters v. Tobias, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 338; People v. Sutherland, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 192. In the case of In re Muller, supra, it was said by Judge Deady: "Counsel have insisted that this is a special proceeding, purely statutory, and that the act must be taken most strictly against the creditor and in favor of the bankrupt. In my judgment, this view of the matter is not supported by reason or authority. The act does not attempt to punish the bankrupt, but to distribute his property fairly and impartially between his creditors, to whom in justice it belongs. It is remedial, and seeks to protect the honest creditor from being overreached and defrauded by the unscrupulous. It is intended to relieve the honest but unfortunate debtor from the burden of liabilities which he cannot discharge, and allow him to commence the business of life anew. The power to pass bankruptcy laws is one of the express grants of power to the national government; and history teaches that the want of a uniform law on this subject throughout the states was one of the prominent causes which led to the assembling of the constitutional convention and consequent formation and adoption of the federal constitution. Such a statute is not to be construed strictly, as if it were an obscure or special penal enactment, and this were the sixteenth instead of the nineteenth century. The act establishes a system and regulates, in all their details, the relative rights and duties of the debtor and creditor. Such an enactment must be construed—as indeed should all acts—according to the fair import of its terms, with a view to effect its objects and to promote justice." But at the same time the Act must receive a construction which will effectuate its purpose, and it must not be so interpreted as to permit debtors to retain their property free from the claims of creditors. In re Evans (D. C.) 235 Fed. 956, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361.

they deprive him of the control and disposition of all his property and subject him to heavy penalties for any fraud, concealment, or false dealing. It is true also that they restrict the creditors to one particular mode of obtaining payment of their claims, and often compel them to accept less than the full amount in discharge and satisfaction of their debts; and in these respects, such statutes ought not to be enlarged by intendment or implication beyond the clear expression of the legislative meaning. But yet such laws are founded in a sound and wise public policy, and are designed to accomplish beneficent results, and it would be an abuse of the power of interpretation if they were subjected to so narrow and severe a construction as to defeat the very objects which they are intended to promote. The construction should be strict as to the imposition of penalties, liberal as to the powers of the trustee and as to the rights of the creditors, and liberal also as to the discharge of an honest debtor." [27]

Former bankruptcy acts may be resorted to as an aid in the construction of the present statute only in cases of doubt or ambiguity, not in any case where the present meaning of Congress is plain and free from doubt, as derived from the words employed. But in cases where the present act is vague, inexplicit, or general in its terms, while the former act, in relation to the same matter, gave minute and specific directions, it would appear that the earlier statute might be resorted to, as explaining more fully the mind of Congress, provided there is no inconsistency between the general terms of the new act and the specific language of the old. Of course, where words and phrases are used in the new act which had acquired a settled meaning as employed in the old statute, by the construction of the courts, they are to be taken as having been used in the same sense. This is in accordance with a well-known rule of statutory interpretation.[28]

[27] Black, Interp. Laws (2d edn.) p. 479. The earlier English statutes on this subject were not only extremely severe in their application to debtors, but their original design appears to have been to prevent and defeat the frauds of criminal debtors. "The bankrupt being deemed an offender and being completely divested of the disposition of his property, these statutes would naturally at the first be considered penal statutes; for this reason, I presume, the statute 21 Jac. I, c. 19, begins by declaring that 'the aforesaid statute shall be largely and beneficially construed and expounded for the aid and relief of the creditors.'" 2 Black. Comm. 472, Christian's note in loco. But it is now held that statutory provisions as to the conditions on which bankrupts may be discharged are remedial, and the strict rules of construction appropriate to retrospective laws are not applicable to them. In re Scott, 126 Fed. 981, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327.

[28] First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 198 U. S. 280, 25 Sup. Ct. 693, 49 L. Ed. 1051, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 21 Sup. Ct. 735, 45 L. Ed. 1009, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829; Hiscock v. Mertens, 205 U. S. 202, 27 Sup. Ct. 488, 51 L. Ed. 771, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483; In re Levin, 176 Fed. 177, 99 C. C. A. 531, 23 Am.

With reference to the construction of particular clauses of the bankruptcy act, it should be remarked, in the first place, that those provisions which confer jurisdiction and power upon the courts of bankruptcy are to be interpreted liberally, not narrowly, in order that the act may have the beneficial effect intended by Congress and be capable of harmonious execution.[29] But on the other hand, it has been held that the provisions of the act prescribing the requisites of a composition with creditors are to be strictly construed as against those who seek by this means to deprive non-assenting creditors of their right to have the debtor's property administered upon and distributed in the ordinary course of bankruptcy proceedings.[30] To a considerable extent, possible ambiguities in the act of 1898 are cleared up by the definitions contained in the first section. But this "interpretation clause," like all the other parts of the act, is itself subject to construction by the courts. And while the definitions and rules of construction contained in the first section are a part of the law and are binding on the courts, yet they will not be extended beyond their necessary import, nor will they be allowed to defeat the intention of the legislature otherwise clearly manifested in the act.[31] Thus, a provision in the first section that a given word shall "include" a certain thing does not necessarily exclude other meanings.[32] But on questions of the construction of the bankruptcy act, opinions expressed by individual members of Congress in the debates on the passage of the act, as to the object and effect of its particular clauses, are entitled to little or no weight.[33]

The proceeding contemplated by the bankruptcy act is not a mere personal action against the bankrupt for the collection of debts, but is also a proceeding in rem to impound all of his nonexempt property and to distribute it equitably among his creditors; and hence the court must, if possible, so construe the act as to secure uniformity in its administration.[34] Further the construction of the law ought in theory to be exactly the same throughout the United States. At any rate, it cannot be varied in each state of the Union by the local law. And therefore, in Bankr. Rep. 845; Woolsey v. Cade, 54 Ala. 378, 25 Am. Rep. 711; Whitcomb v. Rood, 20 Vt. 49; Black, Interp. Laws (2d edn.) p. 607.

[29] Murray v. Beal, 97 Fed. 567, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315.

[30] In re Rider, 96 Fed. 808, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

[31] See Black, Interp. Laws (2d edn.) pp. 269–274, for a general discussion of "interpretation clauses," their legal effect, and their interpretation.

[32] In re Harper, 175 Fed. 412, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 918.

[33] Carter v. Hobbs, 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215. And see Black, Interp. Laws (2d edn.) p. 312, and cases there cited.

[34] Hills v. F. D. McKinniss Co., 188 Fed. 1012, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

construing its terms giving or excluding its benefits, resort must be had to their meaning in the common law, rather than in the local law of the state where the proceedings are had.[35] In construing the bankruptcy law, the federal courts are not bound by decisions of state courts upon similar terms in the insolvency law of the state.[36] But on the other hand, the construction or interpretation of the various provisions of the bankruptcy act, as settled by the decisions of the federal courts, particularly the Supreme Court, will be accepted and applied by the state courts, in all cases before them arising under or involving that statute, without an independent consideration of the question presented, if applicable rulings of the federal courts are brought to their notice.[37] It may be here added that the forms prescribed by the General Orders in bankruptcy are not absolutely binding, but may be altered to suit circumstances. For instance, in making proof of a claim, if the creditor cannot make the deposition exactly as prescribed in the form, it does not follow that his claim must be rejected.[38]

§ 5. Time of Taking Effect.—The concluding section of the bankruptcy law of 1898 is as follows: "This act shall go into full force and effect upon its passage; Provided, however, that no petition for voluntary bankruptcy shall be filed within one month of the passage thereof, and no petition for involuntary bankruptcy shall be filed within four months of the passage thereof. Proceedings commenced under state insolvency laws before the passage of this act shall not be affected by it." The act was approved on the first day of July, 1898. The bankruptcy act of 1867 provided: "This act shall commence and take effect, as to the appointment of officers and the promulgation of rules, from and after the date of its approval, provided that no petition or other proceeding under this act shall be filed, received, or commenced before the first day of June," which was three months after its passage. It was held that, as to its effect in suspending state insolvency laws and depriving state courts of jurisdiction to proceed under such laws, the federal statute took effect, not from the day of its approval, but from June 1st. Consequently, where a state court had acquired jurisdiction of a proceeding

[35] Austill v. Crawford, 7 Ala. 335.

[36] In re Knight, 2 Biss. 518, 8 N. B. R. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 7,880; In re Plotke, 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A. 282, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[37] Rugely v. Robinson, 19 Ala. 404; Burnham v. Ft. Dodge Grocery Co., 144 Iowa, 577, 123 N. W. 220; Stewart v. Hoffman, 31 Mont. 184, 77 Pac. 689, 81 Pac. 3; Mount v. Manhattan Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 211, 3 Atl. 726; Wagner v. Burnham, 224 Pa. 586, 73 Atl. 990; Ferrell v. Madigan, 76 Va. 195; Bank of Garrison v. Malley, 103 Tex. 562, 131 S. W. 1064; Broadnax v. Bradford, 50 Ala. 270; Russell v. Cheatham, 8 Smedes & M. (Miss.) 703; Kreitz v. Egelhoff, 231 Mo. 694, 132 S. W. 1124.

[38] In re Strachan, 3 Biss. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 13,519.

in insolvency after the date of the passage of the bankruptcy act, but before the first of June, its jurisdiction to proceed with the case was not ousted.[39] But this rule does not apply under the present act. In view of its declaration that it "shall go into full force and effect upon its passage," and that proceedings under state insolvency laws commenced "before the passage of this act" shall be saved, it is held that its operation in suspending the insolvency laws of the states, and depriving the courts of jurisdiction thereunder, is to be dated from the day of its approval, July 1st, and not from November 1st, the day when petitions in involuntary cases could first be filed.[40]

It is also held under the present statute, as it was under the law of 1867,[41] that the statute took effect from the date of its approval, rather than from the date when proceedings under it might be commenced, as to all acts done in fraud of the purpose of the statute, such as the giving of preferences or the transfer or conveyance of property in fraud of creditors, or the commission of an act of bankruptcy.[42] Further, it was held under the former law that, for the purpose of dissolving liens acquired within four months before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, the act of 1867 was to be considered as having gone into operation on the day of its passage, although the right to file petitions under it was postponed for three months thereafter,[43] and the same rule will apply under the present act.

Where the endeavor is made to save the validity of a transfer or mortgage of property recorded on the same day on which the bankruptcy act was approved, evidence is admissible to show that the instrument in question was actually placed on the record several hours before the President approved the act by his signature.[44] But in the absence of [39] Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208, 2 N. B. R. 629; Day v. Bardwell, 97 Mass. 246, 3 N. B. R. 455; Chamberlain v. Perkins, 51 N. H. 336; Augsbury v. Crossman, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 389. The same ruling was made under the bankruptcy act of 1841. Larrabee v. Talbott, 5 Gill (Md.) 426, 46 Am. Dec. 637.

[40] In re Bruss-Ritter Co., 90 Fed. 651, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58, holding also that the postponement of the right to file petitions in involuntary cases until four months after the passage of the bankruptcy act did not authorize state courts, in the interval, to take jurisdiction of proceedings begun under state insolvency laws (on the ground that the creditor would otherwise be without a remedy), being a mere regulation of procedure, and not a denial or impairment of the rights of suitors. And see Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Hamilton, 172 Mass. 178, 51 N. E. 529, 70 Am. St. Rep. 258.

[41] Traders' Bank v. Campbell, 14 Wall. 87, 6 N. B. R. 353; In re Louis, 3 Ben. 153, 2 N. B. R. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 8,527; Perry v. Langley, 1 N. B. R. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 11,006.

[42] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; Blake, Moffitt & Towne v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372.

[43] Corner v. Miller (Md. Com. Pleas) 1 N. B. R. 403.

[44] In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117.

evidence to show at what hour on the first day of July, 1898, the President signed his approval to the bankruptcy act, it will be presumed to have taken effect from the earliest moment of that day; and therefore, under the provision that "no petition for involuntary bankruptcy shall be filed within four months of the passage" of the act, such a petition, filed on the first day of November, 1898, was not premature.[45]

The amendments to the present statute, passed respectively on February 5, 1903, and June 25, 1910, are not retroactive in their operation.[46]

§ 6. Validity of State Insolvency Laws.—Insolvency laws may be passed by the several states, regulating the distribution of the estates of insolvent debtors, on their own petition or on compulsory proceedings against them, and authorizing the discharge of debtors from their obligations and liabilities on just and reasonable terms, and the same will be operative in the absence of a national bankruptcy law.[47] But these state laws are subject to three important limitations. First, they cannot have any effective operation while a national bankruptcy law is in force, except, perhaps, as to persons or cases not covered by the federal statute. Whether the federal law is enacted before or after the passage of the state law, it suspends all state statutes on the same subject so long as it continues in effect. Second, state laws of this kind cannot apply to citizens of other states having claims against the debtor, for the state has no jurisdiction over them, unless they voluntarily submit their claims to the jurisdiction and agree to participate in the distribution of the estate. Third, such state laws cannot apply to contracts entered into before their enactment, for that would impair the obligation of such contracts.[48] But the fact that the constitution vests in Congress the exclusive power to enact bankruptcy laws uniform throughout the United States does not deprive the states of authority to

[45] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[46] Holt v. Henley, 232 U. S. 637, 34 Sup. Ct. 459, 58 L. Ed. 767, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re Docker-Foster Co., 123 Fed. 190, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584; In re Gartman, 186 Fed. 349; In re Calhoun Supply Co., 189 Fed. 537, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re New Amsterdam Motor Co., 180 Fed. 943, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757; Breck v. Brewster, 153 App. Div. 800, 138 N. Y. Supp. 821. But compare In re Farmers' Co-operative Co., 202 Fed. 1008, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

[47] Butler v. Goreley, 146 U. S. 303, 13 Sup. Ct. 84, 36 L. Ed. 981.

[48] Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. 223, 17 L. Ed. 531; Gilman v. Lockwood, 4 Wall. 409, 18 L. Ed. 432; Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 454, 12 Sup. Ct. 958, 36 L. Ed. 773; Hempsted v. Bank, 78 Wis. 375, 47 N. W. 627. That a discharge under a state insolvency law is no bar to an action by a citizen of another state who did not appear or take part in the insolvency proceedings, see Newton v. Hagerman, 22 Fed. 525; Roberts v. Atherton, 60 Vt. 563, 15 Atl. 159, 6 Am. St. Rep. 133. Compare Orr v. Lisso, 33 La. Ann. 476.

make and enforce insolvency laws until Congress acts. "It is well settled that the power granted to Congress by the constitution, to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States, does not, until the power is exercised and such laws are put into operation by Congress, exclude the right of the states to pass similar laws; and that the operation of state insolvency laws is therefore superseded and suspended, so far, at least, as the two are applicable to the same persons, as soon as a national bankruptcy law has taken effect, and not before." [49]

§ 7. State Insolvency Laws Suspended by National Bankruptcy Law.—It is well settled by a multitude of incontestible authorities that the passage of a national bankruptcy law by Congress renders it the supreme law of the land, binding alike upon state and federal tribunals. All state insolvency laws in force at the time must yield to it, and can no longer operate upon persons or cases within the purview of the federal statute. The latter does not, indeed, repeal or destroy the state laws on the same subject, but it supersedes them and suspends their operation for the time being.[50] Territories are included in this rule;

[49] Day v. Bardwell, 97 Mass. 246, 3 N. B. R. 455. See also Pettit v. Seaman, 2 Root (Conn.) 178; Pugh v. Bussel, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 394.

[50] Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. Ed. 529; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. 223, 17 L. Ed. 531; In re Brinn (D. C.) 262 Fed. 527, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; In re Pickens Mfg. Co., 158 Fed. 894, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; In re F. A. Hall Co., 121 Fed. 992, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Curtis, 94 Fed. 630, 36 C. C. A. 430, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226; Torrens v. Hammond, 10 Fed. 900; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co., 92 Fed. 329, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Bruss-Ritter Co., 90 Fed. 651, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58; In re Richard, 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Langley, 1 N. B. R. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 11,006; In re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, 6 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991; In re Atkinson, 7 N. B. R. 143, 3 Pittsb. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 606; In re Temple, 6 Sawy. 77, Fed. Cas. No. 13,826; Ex parte Eames, 2 Story, 322, Fed. Cas. No. 4,237; In re Barrow, 1 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,057; In re Bunster, 5 Ben. 242, 5 N. B. R. 82; Fed. Cas. No. 2,136; In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, 6 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; In re Independent Ins. Co., Holmes, 103, 6 N. B. R. 260, Fed. Cas. No. 7,017; In re Safe-Deposit & Sav. Inst., 7 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 12,211; Freelander v. Holloman, 9 N. B. R. 331, Fed. Cas. No. 5,081; In re Green Pond R. Co., 13 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 5,786; Capital Lumber Co. v. Saunders, 26 Idaho, 408, 143 Pac. 1178; Harbaugh v. Costello, 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363, 75 Am. St. Rep. 147; First Nat. Bank v. Ware, 95 Me. 388, 50 Atl. 24; Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Hamilton, 172 Mass. 178, 51 N. E. 529, 70 Am. St. Rep. 258; Foley-Bean Lumber Co. v. Sawyer, 76 Minn. 118, 78 N. W. 1038; Armour Packing Co. v. Brown, 76 Minn. 465, 79 N. W. 522; E. C. Wescott Co. v. Berry, 69 N. H. 505, 45 Atl. 352; Potts v. Smith Mfg. Co., 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 206; Hickman v. Parlin-Orendorf Co., 88 Ark. 519, 115 S. W. 371; Rosenfeld v. Siegfried, 91 Mo. App. 169; Mauran v. Crown Carpet Lining Co., 23 R. I. 324, 50 Atl. 331; Hoover v. Ober, 42 Pa. Super. Ct. 308; Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208; Barber v. Rodgers, 71 Pa. St. 362; Hudson v. Bigham, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 58, 8 N. B. R. 494; Rowe v.

and under the Organic Act for Porto Rico, declaring that federal statutes not locally inapplicable shall be effective in Porto Rico, local laws relating to the distribution of insolvent estates are unavailing, in so far as the matter is governed by the Bankruptcy Act, and those provisions which are contrary to that act are of no effect.[51] The reason for this rule is found in the inevitable conflict between two statutes affecting, for similar purposes, the same subject-matter, the same property, the same rights, and the same persons. Since they could not subsist together without direct and positive collision, the federal enactment must prevail; for a valid act of Congress is declared by the constitution to be the "supreme law of the land."

We have said that the bankruptcy act, while it suspends the operation of state insolvency laws, does not repeal or destroy them. Several important consequences follow from this doctrine. In the first place, no legislation by the state is necessary to put its insolvency law into abeyance during the life of the bankruptcy act, or to justify its courts in refusing to take jurisdiction of cases under such law; the suspension is accomplished by the mere supremacy of the act of Congress and its paramount authority. Secondly, a state insolvency law which was in force at the time a national bankruptcy law was passed, or which has been enacted during the time the latter continues effective, is revived by the repeal of the federal statute, and at once resumes all its original force and operation, and this without any new legislation by the state. In other words, there is no necessity of re-enacting a state insolvency law; it did not cease to be a law of the state; and the repeal of the bankruptcy act suffices to remove the bar to its enforcement.[52] Nor does

Page, 54 N. H. 190, 13 N. B. R. 366; In re McKee (Ky.) 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 139; In re Reynolds, 8 R. I. 485, 9 N. B. R. 50, 5 Am. Rep. 615; Lavender v. Gosnell, 43 Md. 153, 12 N. B. R. 282; Steelman v. Mattix, 36 N. J. Law, 344; Fisk v. Montgomery, 21 La. Ann. 446; Van Nostrand v. Carr, 30 Md. 128; Boese v. Locke, 53 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 148; Commonwealth v. O'Hara, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 402. Contra, In re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782.

[51] In re Vidal, 233 Fed. 733, 147 C. C. A. 499, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 783.

[52] Butler v. Goreley, 146 U. S. 303, 13 Sup. Ct. 84, 36 L. Ed. 981; Tua v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 201, 6 Sup. Ct. 565, 29 L. Ed. 855; In re Wright, 95 Fed. 807, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592; Lothrop v. Highland Foundry Co., 128 Mass. 120; Ward v. Proctor, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 318, 39 Am. Dec. 782; Lavender v. Gosnell, 43 Md. 153, 12 N. B. R. 282; Orr v. Lisso, 33 La. Ann. 476. In some of the earlier cases there was a disposition to regard the effect of a national bankruptcy law upon state insolvency laws as that of an actual repeal. See Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, 79, Fed. Cas. No. 66. In Meekins v. Creditors, 19 La. Ann. 497, 3 N. B. R. 511, it was said that the effect of the enactment of a bankruptcy law was to "repeal" the insolvency law of the state; and that this doctrine had been recognized by the legislature of Louisiana, which passed an act in 1843 to "revive" the insolvency law of the state, apparently considering that, when the federal bankruptcy act of 1841 was repealed, it was necessary to revive the state law by re-enactment. But as early as the case of Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat.

the legislation of Congress annul that of the state in any such sense that the state law may not be amended without re-enactment after its operation is revived by the repeal of the national law. So also, where the court of bankruptcy refuses to grant a discharge to a bankrupt before it, his creditors, after the repeal of the bankruptcy law, may take proceedings against him under the state insolvency law and prove their claims against his estate.[53] And again, a state insolvency law, suspended during the operation of a national bankruptcy law and revived by its repeal, may take cognizance of all acts within its provisions done while it was so suspended, and will apply to contracts made during that time.[54] Moreover, it is competent for a state legislature to enact, amend, or repeal a state insolvency law while the bankruptcy act is in force. A state law of this character, passed while the federal act is operative, will not come into effect at once, but this does not make it void ab initio. The legislature has the power to make the time when its enactment shall take effect depend upon the happening of some future event. This event being the repeal of the bankruptcy law, the postponement of the efficiency of the state law until it occurs may be implied, and until that time the insolvency law will remain in abeyance.[55]

§ 8. Same; What State Laws Affected.—In connection with the question of the validity of national bankruptcy laws and of the insolvency laws of the several states, and the effect of the one upon the other, numerous attempts have been made (but without any marked

122, 196, 4 L. Ed. 529, Chief Justice Marshall had said: "It has been said that Congress has exercised this power, and by doing so has extinguished the power of the states, which cannot be revived by the repeal of the law of Congress. We do not think so. If the right of the states to pass a bankrupt law is not taken away by the mere grant of that power to Congress, it cannot be extinguished—it can only be suspended—by the enactment of a general bankrupt law. The repeal of that law cannot, it is true, confer the power on the states, but it removes a disability to its exercise which was created by the act of Congress."

[53] Torrens v. Hammond, 4 Hughes, 596, 10 Fed. 900; Fisher v. Currier, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 424.

[54] Palmer v. Hixon, 74 Me. 447. A conveyance by way of preference, made by an insolvent debtor, in contravention of the provisions of the insolvency law of the state, while the federal bankruptcy act is in force, is a sufficient cause for instituting proceedings in insolvency against the debtor after the repeal of the bankruptcy act. Lothrop v. Highland Foundry Co., 128 Mass. 120.

[55] Tua v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 201, 6 Sup. Ct. 565, 29 L. Ed. 855; In re Wright, 95 Fed. 807, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592; Damon's Appeal, 70 Me. 153; Boedefeld v. Reed, 55 Cal. 299; Lewis v. County Clerk, 55 Cal. 604; Seattle Coal Co. v. Thomas, 57 Cal. 197; In re Peckham's Assigned Estate, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 330.

[56] In the case of Adams v. Storey, 1 Paine, 79 Fed. Cas. No. 66, will be found a detailed discussion of the nature of bankruptcy and insolvency laws and the differences between them, and the constitutional power of the states with ref-success) to draw a sharp line of distinction between a bankruptcy law, properly so called, and an insolvency law.[56] But in truth, as regards the matter under discussion, the question is not whether a particular law of a state is a "bankruptcy" law or an "insolvency" law, but whether the statute, without regard to its being called by one or the other of those names, or by neither of them, is incompatible with the effective administration of the national bankruptcy act, by invading the special field which the latter covers, or by usurping for the courts of the state the exclusive province of the bankruptcy courts to collect and distribute the assets of an insolvent debtor who is amenable to the act of Congress. For example, the test of the validity of proceedings under a state law does not lie in the question whether or not it purports to release the insolvent from his obligations. "In so far as a state law attempts to administer on the effects of an insolvent debtor and distribute them among creditors, it is to all intents and purposes an insolvent law, although it may not authorize a discharge of the debtor from further liability."[57] Thus, a statute of Georgia which provides for the distribution of the assets of insolvents, is held to be in effect a bankruptcy law, and as such suspended by the act of Congress, although it only authorizes the chancellor to recommend to the creditors of the defendant that they should release him from further liability.[58] This distinction is further brought out by a consideration of the statute law of Louisiana with reference to "respite proceedings" and the "cessio bonorum." Under these statutes, where a debtor believes himself to be solvent or able to recover his solvency, he may ask a respite (or general extension of time for payment of his debts), and thereupon pending proceedings against him may be stayed and a meeting of his creditors convoked to vote on the question of accepting his proposition and granting the respite. If their action is affirmative, the proceedings are not in the nature of insolvency proceedings, and there is no conflict with the bankruptcy law. But if they reject the debtor's proposals and vote for the appointment of a syndic (or trustee) to collect and administer erence to the enactment of such laws. But in fact, as pointed out in Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208, 2 N. B. R. 629, the only substantial difference between a bankruptcy law and an insolvency law lies in the circumstance that the former affords relief upon the application of the creditor, and the latter upon the application of the debtor. In the general character of the remedy, there is no difference, however much the modes in which the remedy may be administered may vary. An act which (like the present act of Congress) embodies provisions for both voluntary and involuntary proceedings is in effect both a bankruptcy law and an insolvency law.

[57] In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, 6 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441. Compare Ex parte Rank, Crabbe, 493, Fed. Cas. No. 11,566. And see, contra, Greene v. Rice, 32 Idaho, 504, 186 Pac. 249.

[58] Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

his property under the state insolvency law, this is incompatible with the bankruptcy law, and the state law in such a case must give way.[59]

In regard to the winding-up of insolvent corporations, there has been some hesitation and some difference of opinion. But the rule has been finally settled by the Supreme Court of the United States, substantially as follows: The bankruptcy act does not interfere with the general equity powers of state courts to appoint receivers for corporations in that condition, nor does it actually suspend the operation of a state statute authorizing the appointment of receivers in such circumstances. But the nomination of a receiver "on the ground of insolvency" constitutes an act of bankruptcy,[60] and gives to creditors the opportunity of filing a petition in the proper federal court. And when proceedings begun under the state statute take the form of proceedings to dissolve the corporation or forfeit its charter, and to wind up its affairs and distribute its assets, then the attempt is made to cover the same ground and administer the same relief that would be obtained under the bankruptcy law. That this would be enough by itself to terminate the jurisdiction of the state court and make its further proceedings void has not been authoritatively decided. But it is settled that if a proceeding in bankruptcy against the corporation is thereupon commenced, in the proper federal court and on a proper petition, this will displace the proceedings in the state court and put an end to its jurisdiction. "The operation of the bankruptcy laws of the United States cannot be defeated by insolvent commercial corporations applying to be wound up under state statutes. The bankruptcy law is paramount, and the jurisdiction of the federal courts in bankruptcy, when properly invoked, in the administration of the affairs of insolvent persons and corporations, is essentially exclusive." [61] It follows also that the persons whom the state court has placed in charge of the corporation for the purpose of winding it up, whether called receivers, commissioners, liqui-

[59] Duffy v. His Creditors, 122 La. 600, 48 South. 120, construing La. Civ. Code, art. 3098.

[60] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a, clause 4, as amended by Act Congress Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[61] In re Watts, 190 U. S. 1, 23 Sup. Ct. 718, 47 L. Ed. 933, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113. And see In re Standard Fuller's Earth Co., 186 Fed. 578, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 862; In re Standard Cordage Co., 184 Fed. 156, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448; In re Storck Lumber Co., 114 Fed. 360, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86; Chandler v. Siddle, 3 Dill, 477, 10 N. B. R. 236, Fed. Cas. No. 2,594; French v. O'Brien, 52 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 394; Barber v. International Co., 73 Conn. 587, 48 Atl. 758; Moody v. Port Clyde Development Co., 102 Me. 365, 66 Atl. 967; Watson v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 5 Rich. (S. C.) 159; State v. Superior Court of King County, 20 Wash. 545, 56 Pac. 35, 45 L. R. A. 177; In re Weedman Stave Co., 199 Fed. 948, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460; Continental Building & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court, 163 Cal. 579, 126 Pac. 476; Lyon v. Russell, 41 App. D. C. 554; Carter, Carter & Meigs Co. v. Stewart Drug Co., 115 Me. 289, 98 Atl. 809.

dators, or by any other name, cannot successfully oppose its adjudication in bankruptcy on the ground of the pending proceedings in the state court; and indeed, if the state law is to be regarded as an insolvency law, their appointment must be treated as void by the bankruptcy court, and they have no standing in the latter court to be heard on the petition for adjudication in bankruptcy.[62]

Further, to determine the jurisdiction of a state court in all such cases, the real object of the proceeding must be regarded, rather than its mere form. Thus, there is nothing in the bankruptcy act to prevent a mortgage creditor from foreclosing his security, supposing that it is not impeachable as a preference or as given in fraud of other creditors; and clearly also he has the right to ask for the appointment of a receiver on alleging the inadequacy of the security and the insolvency of the mortgagor. Hence, where the main purpose of a suit is to foreclose a mortgage, and there is also an incidental prayer for relief appropriate to insolvency proceedings, a receiver's possession thereunder will not be affected by a subsequent adjudication in bankruptcy. But on the other hand, where the main purpose is to obtain relief appropriate only in insolvency proceedings, the fact that a mortgage may be foreclosed as an incident thereto will not save the case from the nullifying effect of bankruptcy proceedings on pending insolvency proceedings.[63]

But a state law which merely protects the person of a debtor from imprisonment, without affecting the debt or contract or the other means for its enforcement, or which provides only for the release of poor debtors arrested on civil process, is not of such a nature as to be suspended by the bankruptcy law.[64] And of course the latter act does not affect the general laws of the states providing for the settlement of the estates of insolvent persons deceased.[65] Nor, it is said, does the bankruptcy law suspend a state law enabling a creditor to prevent the departure of his debtor from the state,[66] or one which authorizes the arrest and imprisonment of a judgment debtor on a showing that he is about to remove or has concealed property with intent to defraud his creditors, although it also provides that he may be released on giving bond to apply for the benefit of the state insolvency law and comply with its requirements.[67] And a statute designed to prevent debtors, in [62] Thornhill v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 Woods, 1, 5 N. B. R. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 13,992. And see In re Salmon & Salmon, 143 Fed. 395, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

[63] Merry v. Jones, 119 Ga. 643, 46 S. E. 861. And see Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Rylee, 139 Ga. 669, 78 S. E. 27.

[64] Sullivan v. Heiskell, Crabbe, 525, Fed. Cas. No. 13,594; Ex parte Jacobs, 12 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) N. S. 273; Jordan v. Hall, 9 R. I. 220, 11 Am. Rep. 245.

[65] Hawkins v. Learned, 54 N. H. 333.

[66] Gottschalk v. Meyer, 28 La. Ann. 885.

[67] Ex parte Crawford, 154 Fed. 769, 83 C. C. A. 474, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618.

contemplation of insolvency, from giving preferences to favored creditors, is not a bankruptcy law and is not suspended by the act of Congress.[68] So also of a statute which confers on resident creditors priority in the distribution of the assets of foreign corporations doing business within the state.[69] And the opinion has been expressed that an action brought by a receiver in proceedings supplementary to execution is not a proceeding commenced under a state insolvency law, within the meaning of the saving clause of the bankruptcy act regarding such proceedings pending at the time of its taking effect.[70]

§ 9. Same; Cases Not Covered by Bankruptcy Law.—While the state insolvency laws are suspended by the enactment and administration of a national bankruptcy law, as to all matters and cases coming within the purview of the latter, it does not necessarily follow that they are wholly annulled. On the contrary, they remain operative within a limited range. The federal statute provides only for particular cases, and the state laws are suspended only in so far as they conflict with the act of Congress. But as to any cases not covered by the bankruptcy law, or expressly or impliedly omitted from its operation, it may be presumed that Congress did not intend to interfere with the laws of the several states, and they may therefore still be put into effect.[71] For example, the present bankruptcy law, in its original form and until the amendment of 1910, made no provision for the voluntary bankruptcy of corporations, but expressly excluded them from taking the benefit of the act in that form. Hence it was held that the act did not preclude a state court from taking jurisdiction of a stockholder's suit for the appointment of a receiver and for winding up the affairs of the corporation, at least in the absence of proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy begun by creditors.[72] Again, the compulsory features of the present act are not applicable to all classes of corporations, but only (under the amend-

[68] Stellwagen v. Clum, 245 U. S. 605, 38 Sup. Ct. 215, 62 L. Ed. 507, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Irwin v. Maple, 252 Fed. 10, 164 C. C. A. 122, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532; Grunsfeld Bros. v. Brownnell, 12 New Mex. 192, 76 Pac. 310.

[69] In re Standard Oak Veneer Co., 173 Fed. 103, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 883.

[70] In re Meyers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 293, per Hotchkiss, Referee.

[71] Johnson v. Crawford, 154 Fed. 761, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581; In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; In re Reynolds, 8 R. I. 485, 9 N. B. R. 50, 5 Am. Rep. 615; Singer v. National Bedstead Mfg. Co., 65 N. J. Eq. 290, 55 Atl. 868; Appeal of Geery, 43 Conn. 289, 21 Am. Rep. 653; Pitcher v. Standish, 90 Conn. 601, 98 Atl. 93, L. R. A. 1917A, 105; Pugh v. Bussel, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 394; Fisk v. Montgomery, 21 La. Ann. 446; Simpson v. City Sav. Bank, 56 N. H. 466, 15 N. B. R. 385, 22 Am. Rep 491; Steelman v. Mattix, 36 N. J. Law, 344.

[72] Roberts Cotton Oil Co. v. F. E. Morse & Co., 97 Ark. 513, 135 S. W. 334; Keystone Driller Co. v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 138 Cal. 738, 72 Pac. 398.

ment of 1910) to "any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation." Hence if proceedings under a state insolvency law, or under a law for the winding up of insolvent corporations, are commenced against a corporation which is not amenable to the bankruptcy law, but which is within the terms of the state law, it is difficult to see on what grounds they are to be held invalid, for there is no possibility of conflict between the two statutes. And in effect it is held that the states are left free to deal in their own courts with those classes of corporations which are expressly excepted from the operation of the bankruptcy law or which do not come within its general terms.[73] This would apply not only to railroads, insurance companies, and incorporated banks and savings institutions, but also to educational, charitable, benevolent, and religious corporations, and to any others coming within the terms of the state statute but not included in the class of "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations." Again, the act of Congress forbids the institution of involuntary proceedings against "a wage earner or a person engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil." As to such persons, therefore, the insolvency law of the state is not suspended, but may be put into effective operation, if they come within its terms.[74] Again, the bankruptcy act authorizes proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy against a debtor only in case he owes debts to the amount of $1,000 or over. But if the state insolvency law permitted compulsory proceedings against a person whose debts amounted to less than that sum (so that he would not at all be subject to the federal law, unless he chose voluntarily to apply for its benefits), it would certainly appear that the state law might be put in force in such a case; and it is generally so held.[75] Further, it is held that the act of Congress does not suspend state insolvency laws so far as concerns debts and claims of a nature not to be dischargeable in bankruptcy.[76] This is illustrated by a case in Pennsyl-

[73] State Nat. Bank v. Syndicate Co. of Eureka Springs, 178 Fed. 359; Dille v. People, 118 Ill. App. 426; Rogers v. Boston Club, 205 Mass. 261, 91 N. E. 321, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 743; R. H. Herron Co. v. Superior Court of San Franciso, 136 Cal. 279, 68 Pac. 814, 89 Am. St. Rep. 124; Simpson v. City Sav. Bank, 56 N. H. 466, 15 N. B. R. 385, 22 Am. Rep. 491.

[74] Old Town Bank v. McCormick, 96 Md. 341, 53 Atl. 934, 60 L. R. A. 577, 94 Am. St. Rep. 577; Hoover v. Ober, 42 Pa. Super. Ct. 308; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Gass, 29 Pa. Super. Ct. 125; Miller v. Jackson, 34 Pa. Super. Ct. 31; In re Rittenhouse's Insolvent Estate, 30 Pa. Super. Ct. 468; Lace v. Smith, 34 R. I. 1, 82 Atl. 268; Pitcher v. Standish, 90 Conn. 601, 98 Atl. 93, L. R. A. 1917A, 105; Rockville Nat. Bank v. Latham, 88 Conn. 70, 89 Atl. 1117.

[75] Appeal of Shepardson, 36 Conn. 23; Corner v. Miller (Md.) 1 N. B. R. 403. Contra, Littlefield v. Gay, 96 Me. 422, 52 Atl. 925.

[76] Johnson v. Crawford, 154 Fed. 761, 766, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608, citing Scully v. Kirkpatrick, 79 Pa. St. 324, 21 Am.

vania, where a debtor had gone through bankruptcy and obtained his discharge. Afterwards he was taken on a ca. sa. from a state court, issuing on a debt contracted in actual fraud, and therefore not affected by the discharge in bankruptcy, and on this process he was incarcerated. He applied for the benefit of the insolvency law of the state, whereby he could obtain his release from imprisonment. It was objected that, the national bankruptcy law being still in force, the state law was in suspense and could afford no relief to the debtor. But it was held that this was a case not covered by the act of Congress, but expressly excepted from it, and there being no possibility of conflict between the two statutes, the state law was not suspended quoad hoc, and the debtor might take the benefit of its provisions.[77] So also, the act of Congress does not supersede or suspend the operation of "poor debtor laws and those which provide for the release of insolvent convicts, the bankruptcy law having no provision adapted to these cases, and the parties to whom they apply being otherwise left without remedy." [78]

Another illustration of the point here in question is found in the effect of the bankruptcy act of the statute of Pennsylvania relating to domestic attachments. This law provides for the sequestration of the entire estate of an absconding or concealed debtor, on a writ of attachment, for the appointment of trustees to be vested with title to such estate, and for its distribution to creditors. Now the bankruptcy act of 1867 declared that it should be an act of bankruptcy if a debtor should depart from the state with intent to defraud his creditors, or should conceal himself to avoid service of legal process; and in view of this provision it was held that the state domestic attachment law was suspended while the federal act of 1867 remained in force.[79] But the bankruptcy act of 1898 does not contain any provision relating to absconding or concealed debtors, and the opinion is now advanced that it does not in any way conflict with the state law, and therefore does not suspend or supersede it,[80] although proceedings begun under the state statute might be superseded by an adjudication in bankruptcy against such a debtor.

Rep. 62; Hubert v. Horter, 81 Pa. St. 39; Ex parte Winternitz, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 380, 18 Pittsb. Leg. J. (N. S.) 61. And see Landis Machine Co. v. Cooper, 53 Pa. Super. Ct. 416.

[77] In re Winternitz, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 380, 18 Pittsb. Leg. J. (N. S.) 61.

[78] Johnson v. Crawford, 154 Fed. 761, 766, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608, citing Jordan v. Hall, 9 R. I. 219, 11 Am. Rep. 245.

[79] Tobin v. Trump, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 123, 3 Brewst. 288.

[80] McCullough v. Goodhart (Pa. Com. Pleas) 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 512. And see Scully v. Kirkpatrick, 79 Pa. St. 324, 21 Am. Rep. 62.

§ 10. Same; Laws Regulating Assignments for Creditors.—In this branch of our subject, the most difficult questions arise in connection with the effect of the bankruptcy law upon state statutes which authorize or regulate assignments for the benefit of creditors. Notwithstanding a considerable difference of opinion, the following principles appear to be fairly well settled upon the authorities. First, the common law relating to such assignments is not a part of the state insolvency law, since it neither places the administration of the state under the control of the courts, nor exonerates the debtor from personal liability, nor releases him or his future acquisitions from the unpaid balance of his debts. And hence it is not suspended by the enactment of a bankruptcy law. That is, an assignment made as at common law will be valid unless it is impeached and overthrown by proceedings in bankruptcy begun within the statutory time.[81] In the next place, we are to consider the statutes, in force in several of the states, which are designed to prevent fraudulent assignments and strike down preferences. These laws provide that any assignment, mortgage, or deed of trust, made by a debtor in contemplation of insolvency and for the purpose of giving a preference, shall operate as an assignment and transfer of all his property and inure to the benefit of all his creditors pro rata, if proceedings for that purpose are begun within a limited time. It is held that these statutes are not insolvency laws in such sense as to be suspended or superseded by the bankruptcy law.[82] In the next place there are laws in many of the states which regulate the administration of estates voluntarily assigned for the benefit of creditors. Differing largely in details, these laws yet present the following usual features. They require such an assignment to be recorded and give to some court of the state the control of the settlement and administration of the estate. They require the assignee to give a bond, and to file an inventory of the property. They require creditors who wish to claim under the assignment to present their claims within a stated time. They authorize the collection of assets by the assignee by suit, and his discharge upon the settlement of the trust. And they provide for the distribution of the proceeds of the assigned estate among the creditors pro rata. If the law of the state goes no further than this, it is not to be considered an insolvency law; and proceedings commenced under it are not absolutely void merely by reason of the existence of a national bankruptcy law, although they are liable to be avoided at the instance of a trustee in bankruptcy of the insolvent assignor subsequently appointed in bankruptcy proceedings in the proper federal court.[83] But there are laws in some of the states which are not confined to regulating the administration of an assigned estate on just and equitable principles, but embrace features characteristic of an insolvency law properly so called. Without compelling any debtor to make an assignment, they treat such an assignment as an act of insolvency, and direct the administration of the estate to proceed substantially as would be the case in voluntary proceedings under an insolvency act, and in particular, they provide that any creditor who has proved his claim shall be thereafter debarred from prosecuting an action on it; in other words, they grant the insolvent a discharge from his provable debts. As to statutes of this character, the authorities hold that their operation must be considered as suspended by the enactment of the national bankruptcy law.[84]

[81] In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Pogue v. Rowe, 236 Ill. 157, 86 N. E. 207; Danville Auburn Auto Co. v. National Trust & Credit Co., 212 Ill. App. 116; Thompson v. Shaw, 104 Me. 85, 71 Atl. 370; Cook v. Rogers, 31 Mich. 391, 13 N. B. R. 97; In re Hawkins, 34 Conn. 548, 2 N. B. R. 378; Haas v. O'Brien, 66 N. Y. 597, 16 N. B. R. 508; Von Hein v. Elkus, 15 N. B. R. 194. A creditor who does not assent to an assignment for the benefit of creditors is entitled to attack it in any appropriate proceeding, and is not required to resort to a petition in bankruptcy as a means of avoiding it. Moore v. Cushing, 116 Minn. 142, 133 N. W. 561, Ann. Cas. 1913A, 816.

[82] Bell v. Blessing, 225 Fed. 750, 141 C. C. A. 34, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672; Linthicum v. Fenley, 11 Bush (Ky.) 131; Ebersole v. Adams, 10 Bush (Ky.) 83, 13 N. B. R. 141; Downer v. Porter, 116 Ky. 422, 76 S. W. 135; Louisville Dry Goods Co. v. Lanman, 135 Ky. 163, 121 S. W. 1042, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 363, 135 Am. St. Rep. 451. See Martin v. Hausman, 14 Fed. 160.

[83] Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 13 N. B. R. 440, 23 L. Ed. 377; In re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Farrell, 176 Fed. 505, 100 C. C. A. 63, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826; Peck v. Parker, 65 Pa. St. 262, 3 Am. Rep. 625; Strong v. Carrier, 17 Conn. 319; Duryea v. Guthrie, 117 Wis. 399, 94 N. W. 365; Binder v. McDonald, 106 Wis. 332, 82 N. W. 156; Patty-Joiner & Eubank Co. v. Cummins (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 297. In the case of Mayer v. Hellman, supra, it was said: "In the argument of the plaintiff's counsel, the position is taken that the bankrupt act suspends the operation of the act of Ohio regulating the mode of administering assignments for the benefit of creditors, treating the latter as an insolvent law of the state. The answer is that the statute of Ohio is not an insolvent law in any proper sense of the term. It does not compel, or even in terms authorize, assignments; it assumes that such instruments were conveyances previously known and only prescribes a mode by which the trust created shall be enforced. It provides for the security of the creditors by exacting a bond from the trustees for the discharge of their duties; it requires them to file statements showing what they have done with the property, and affords, in various ways, the means of compelling them to carry out the purposes of the conveyances. There is nothing in the act resembling an insolvent law. It does not discharge the insolvent from arrest or imprisonment; it leaves his after-acquired property liable to his creditors precisely as though no assignment had been made. The provisions for enforcing the trust are substantially such as a court of chancery would apply in the absence of any statutory provision. The assignment in this case must therefore be regarded as though the statute of Ohio, to which reference is made, had no existence. There is an insolvent law in that state but the assignment in question was not made in pursuance of any of its provisions."

[84] First Nat. Bank of Bandon v. Manassa, 80 Or. 53, 150 Pac. 258; Pelton v. Sheridan, 74 Or. 176, 144 Pac. 410. See In re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2

Under the former class of statutes certainly, and probably also under the latter, an assignment for the benefit of creditors, though voidable at the instance of a trustee in bankruptcy subsequently appointed, is not void ab initio. Though it constitutes an act of bankruptcy under the federal statute, and though it was made for the very purpose of giving preferences and otherwise evading the provisions of that law, it is not a mere nullity, in any such sense as to leave the title to the property in the assignor as if no assignment had been made. If no proceedings are instituted in a court of bankruptcy within the time limited, for the adjudication of the assignor as a bankrupt, and for the purpose of securing the administration of the property in that court, the assignment will be valid, at least for the purpose of securing an equal distribution of the estate among the creditors; that is, it will be valid as at common law, though not as an attempt to invoke the state insolvency law.[85] Nevertheless, a general assignment by an insolvent debtor, though made for the equal and common benefit of all his creditors, without preferences, and without any actual fraudulent intent, either as to creditors or as to the evasion of the bankruptcy law, is an act of bankruptcy, upon which the assignor may be adjudged bankrupt, if proceedings are begun within four months thereafter, and if the other requisites as to jurisdiction are found to exist.[86] Moreover, the complete jurisdiction

Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re McKee, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 139; Lyman v. Bond, 130 Mass. 291. A decision of the supreme court of a state that a statute of that state regulating the administration and distribution of estates under general assignments for the benefit of creditors is an insolvency law, will be followed by the federal courts of bankruptcy in deciding upon the effect of the enactment of the national bankruptcy law upon the operation of such a statute. In re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

[85] Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 379, 2 Sup. Ct. 765, 27 L. Ed. 760; In re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Johnson v. Crawford, 154 Fed. 761, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Ostrander v. Meunch, 2 McCrary, 267, 12 Fed. 562; Wald v. Wehl, 18 Blatchf. 495, 6 Fed. 163; Boese v. King, 78 N. Y. 471; Pogue v. Rowe, 236 Ill. 157, 86 N. E. 207; Armour Packing Co. v. Brown, 76 Minn. 465, 79 N. W. 522; Binder v. McDonald, 106 Wis. 332, 82 N. W. 156; Patty-Joiner & Eubank Co. v. Cummins, 93 Tex. 598, 57 S. W. 566; Hilliard v. Burlington Shoe Co., 76 Vt. 57, 56 Atl. 283; Hoague v. Cumner, 187 Mass. 296, 72 N. E. 956; Louisville Dry Goods Co. v. Lanman, 135 Ky. 163, 121 S. W. 1042, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 363, 135 Am. St. Rep. 451; Lucas v. Lucas' Assignee, 76 S. W. 371, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 822; Barnes v. Rettew, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 133, Fed. Cas. No. 1,019; Sparhawk v. Drexel, 12 N. B. R. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 13,204; Seaman v. Stoughton, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 344; Strong v. Carrier, 17 Conn. 319; Cook v. Rogers, 31 Mich. 391; Bostwick v. Burnett, 74 N. Y. 317; Maltbie v. Hotchkiss, 38 Conn. 80, 5 N. B. R. 485, 9 Am. Rep. 364; Atkins v. Spear, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 490; Sadler v. Immel, 15 Nev. 265; Thrasher v. Bentley, 59 N. Y. 649; Williams v. Pitts, 55 How. Prac. 331; Sabin v. Chrisman, 79 Or. 191, 154 Pac. 908.

[86] Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 379, 2 Sup. Ct. 765, 27 L. Ed. 760; Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Cragin v. Thompson, 2 Dill. 513, 12 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 3,320; Perry v. Langley, 1 N. B. R. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 11,006; In re Pierce, 3 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No.

of the court of bankruptcy over the estate of the bankrupt is not affected by the fact that an assignment for the benefit of creditors under the state law had been made prior to the adjudication. The trustee in bankruptcy takes title to the whole of the estate, including that assigned; the assignment is voidable at his instance; and he may recover the property or its proceeds from the assignee.[87] The assignment, however, will be saved by the lapse of four months without the institution of bankruptcy proceedings. That is to say, if the debtor is adjudged bankrupt, and a trustee appointed, but not until more than four months from the making of the assignment, the latter will not have the right to set aside the assignment, nor will he be entitled to the possession and administration of the estate as against the voluntary assignee. In such a case, the trustee in bankruptcy, saving questions of fraud, will take only such rights as the bankrupt had and could himself claim at the time of the bankruptcy.[88]

§ 11. Practical Effect of Suspension of State Insolvency Laws.—Although there is no dispute as to the general rule above stated, that state insolvency laws are superseded or suspended in their operation by the enactment of a national bankruptcy law, yet there is much uncertainty as to the practical working of this principle, especially where the validity of proceedings under the state laws is questioned collaterally. If the bankruptcy law gives to the courts of the United States exclusive jurisdiction of all proceedings for winding up the estate of an insolvent debtor, and suspends the operation of all state laws having the same general character, it would seem that, such a federal statute being in existence, it is the right and duty of state courts to refuse to take juris-

11,141; In re Smith, 4 Ben. 1, 3 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 12,974; Barnes v. Rettew, 8 Phila. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 1,019; Barton v. Tower, Fed. Cas. No. 1,085; In re Burt, 1 Dill. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 2,210; In re Chamberlain, 3 N. B. R. 710, Fed. Cas. No. 2,574; In re Croft, 8 Biss. 188, 17 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 3,404; Jones v. Sleeper, Fed. Cas. No. 7,496; In re Kasson, 18 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 7,617; In re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Spicer v. Ward, 3 N. B. R. 512, Fed. Cas. No. 13,241; In re Randall, Deady, 557, 3 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 11,551.

[87] Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Gutwillig, 92 Fed. 337, 34 C. C. A. 377, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Troth, 1 Fed. 405; Pool v. McDonald, 15 N. B. R. 560, Fed. Cas. No. 11,268; Cragin v. Thompson, 2 Dill. 513, 12 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 3,320; In re Temple, 4 Sawy. 92, 17 N. B. R. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 13,825; Macdonald v. Moore, 8 Ben. 579, 15 N. B. R. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 8,763; Boese v. Locke, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 270. Compare Morning Telegraph Pub. Co. v. S. B. Hutchinson Co., 146 Mich. 38, 109 N. W. 42; Scott v. Grinstead, 4 Ky. Law Rep. 614.

[88] Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 13 N. B. R. 440, 23 L. Ed. 377; In re Arledge, 1 N. B. R. 644, Fed. Cas. No. 533; In re Kimball, 16 N. B. R. 188, Fed. Cas. No. 7,770.

diction of proceedings attempted to be instituted under the state law, and that when an insolvent files a petition in a state court seeking the benefit of that law, the court should dismiss the petition; and it has been so held.[89] But not all the state courts agree in this proposition. By some it is held that they will not be ousted of jurisdiction over an insolvency case unless proceedings in bankruptcy are instituted against the same debtor. But they concede that when such a conflict actually arises, then the state court must decline to proceed further with the action pending before it.[90] On the same line, the federal courts hold that in a case where proceedings are pending in the two courts under the two statutes, the federal court may stay the action in the state court, or, if an assignee has been appointed under the state law, he may be enjoined from taking possession of the property of the insolvent, or required to surrender it up to the trustee in bankruptcy.[91]

But the really difficult question arises when no proceedings under the bankruptcy act have been taken, so that there is no conflict between courts, but only the mere existence of the bankruptcy act stands in the way of the proceedings under the state law. Here we have to inquire whether any validity can be predicated of the action of the state court under the state law, or of the title of the assignee thereunder, or of the title of a purchaser at a sale made by such assignee. Are these proceedings valid, void, or voidable; and if the latter, at whose instance may they be avoided? Some cases have gone so far as to hold that all proceedings under a state insolvency law, the bankruptcy act being in force, are absolutely null and void for all purposes.[92] Thus, they rule that a discharge granted to the insolvent under the state law, as the result of proceedings had while the national bankruptcy law was operative and would have been applicable to his case, is entirely inoperative and constitutes no defense to an action subsequently brought against [89] Closser v. Strawn (D. C.) 227 Fed. 139, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864; Van Nostrand v. Carr, 30 Md. 128, 2 N. B. R. 485; Harbaugh v. Costello, 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363, 75 Am. St. Rep. 147; Barber v. International Co. of Mexico, 73 Conn. 587, 48 Atl. 758. In Baxter County Bank v. Copeland, 114 Ark. 316, 169 S. W. 1180, it is held that a state court should not assume jurisdiction of a general assignment for creditors within four months after the date of the assignment, since within that time it may be invalidated by a proceeding in bankruptcy.

[90] In re McKee (Ky. County Ct.) 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 139. In this case, creditors applied for an order requiring the insolvent to appear before the state court and submit to an examination touching his estate, as authorized by the state law, but on his filing an affidavit setting forth the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings against him, the state court denied the motion for examination.

[91] Ex parte Eames, 2 Story, 322, Fed. Cas. No. 4,237.

[92] Thornhill v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 Woods, 1, 5 N. B. R. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 12,992; Littlefield v. Gay, 96 Me. 422, 52 Atl. 925; Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208, 2 N. B. R. 629; Comm. v. O'Hara, 1 N. B. R. 86.

him by a domestic creditor.[93] Decisions are to be found going much further even than this. A case in Massachusetts rules that an assignee under the state law has no title or claim to the property of the debtor such as will enable him to maintain an action for its recovery against a third person, the existence of the bankruptcy law, which would be applicable to the debtor, being a full defense to such an action; and this, although no proceedings under the federal statute are ever had against the insolvent.[94] So there is a decision in Connecticut to the effect that, in similar circumstances, the trustee in insolvency acquires no such interest in the insolvent's estate as will entitle him to maintain an action to set aside a fraudulent and preferential conveyance, although no adjudication of bankruptcy has been had against the insolvent in the federal courts.[95] Again, it is held that the invalidity of proceedings had under a state insolvency law, including the invalidity of the pretended title of the assignee under such law, by reason of the existence at the time of a national bankruptcy law, may be asserted, with effect, in a contest between attaching creditors and such assignee.[96]

But all these positions are controverted by authorities of equal importance. Numerous cases hold that proceedings may be had and jurisdiction exercised under the state laws until their authority is called in question by the bankruptcy courts; that judicial action taken, and titles accruing, under the insolvency laws are voidable at the most; and that they are not to be avoided unless proceedings in bankruptcy are instituted, and then only at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy.[97] In one of the cases it was said: "So far as the state insolvency laws may prevent or even impede the operation of the bankruptcy law, they must yield to it in order that it may accomplish its object of establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States; but while the state laws thus yield, they are not entirely abrogated. They exist

[93] Shears v. Solhinger, 10 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) N. S. 287; Cassard v. Kroner (Md.) 4 N. B. R. 569.

[94] Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 16. Compare Shryock v. Basehore, 82 Pa. St. 159, 15 N. B. R. 283.

[95] Ketcham v. McNamara, 72 Conn. 709, 46 Atl. 146, 50 L. R. A. 641.

[96] Rowe v. Page, 54 N. H. 190, 13 N. B. R. 366; Shryock v. Basehore, 82 Pa. St. 159, 15 N. B. R. 283. Compare Cook v. Rogers, 31 Mich. 391, 13 N. B. R. 97; Reed v. Taylor, 32 Iowa, 209, 4 N. B. R. 710, 7 Am. Rep. 180.

[97] Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; Boston Mercantile Co. v. Ould-Carter Co., 123 Ga. 458, 51 S. E. 466; Patty-Joiner & Eubank Co. v. Cummins, 93 Tex. 598, 57 S. W. 566; State v. Superior Court of King County, 20 Wash. 545, 56 Pac. 35, 45 L. R. A. 177; Jensen-King-Byrd Co. v. Williams, 35 Wash. 161, 76 Pac. 934; Lavender v. Gosnell, 43 Md. 153, 12 N. B. R. 282; Steelman v. Mattix, 36 N. J. Law, 344; Reed v. Taylor, 32 Iowa, 209, 4 N. B. R. 710, 7 Am. Rep. 180; Cook v. Rogers, 31 Mich. 391, 13 N. B. R. 97; Ebersole v. Adams, 10 Bush (Ky.) 83, 13 N. B. R. 141; Maltbie v. Hotchkiss, 38 Conn. 80, 5 N. B. R. 485, 9 Am. Rep. 364; Shaw v. Standard Piano Co., 87 N. J. Eq. 350, 100 Atl. 167.

and operate with full vigor until the bankruptcy law attaches upon the person and property of the bankrupt, and that is not until it is judicially ascertained that the petitioner is a person entitled to the benefit of the bankruptcy law by his being declared a bankrupt by a decree of the court. Before that time, upon a sound construction of the bankruptcy act, it does not necessarily come in conflict with the insolvency laws of the state."[98] Notwithstanding the existence of a bankruptcy law which would be applicable to the case (it is held in another decision), the parties interested may, by consent, use the state law as a means of collecting and distributing the debtor's estate. Should proceedings in bankruptcy be instituted, and the federal court claim the administration of the estate, the state courts would yield; but in the absence of such a claim, the mere fact that a federal law is in existence, under which proceedings might be taken, is no objection to the jurisdiction of the state court.[99] And again, even as against an adjudication in bankruptcy, the state insolvency law may have a limited applicability and effect. Thus, where such a law gives priority of payment out of insolvents' estates to a certain class of debts, the same debts will be entitled to priority of payment out of bankrupts' estates.[100] And again, where the main purpose of a suit is to foreclose a mortgage, and there is also an incidental prayer for relief appropriate to insolvency proceedings, a receiver's possession of the property mortgaged will not be affected by a subsequent adjudication in bankruptcy.[101]

Finally, a case may arise where the debtor refuses to file his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and yet refrains from committing any act of bankruptcy on which his creditors could proceed. Here there is no possibility of conflict between courts; and it is held that proceedings under the state law, even though compulsory in their nature, may be sustained, for the purpose of securing an equal distribution of the debtor's property among his creditors.[102]

§ 12. Pending Proceedings Under State Laws.—The concluding section of the bankruptcy act of 1898 provides as follows: "Proceedings commenced under state insolvency laws before the passage of this act shall not be affected by it." The effect of this is that the bankruptcy law does not deprive the state courts of the jurisdiction necessary to the final administration of the estate of an insolvent against whom, or

[98] Ex parte Ziegenfuss, 24 N. C. 463.

[99] Maltbie v. Hotchkiss, 38 Conn. 80, 5 N. B. R. 485, 9 Am. Rep. 364.

[100] In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

[101] Nelson v. Spence, 129 Ga. 35, 58 S. E. 697.

[102] Appeal of Geery, 43 Conn. 289, 21 Am. Rep. 653.

by whom voluntarily, proceedings under the state insolvency law had been instituted before the passage of the federal statute, but the state court may proceed with the case to its final conclusion, and its action in the matter will be as valid as if no national bankruptcy law had been enacted.[103] But it is only as to pending cases that the state law remains operative; as to all others it is suspended. Hence when such a law provides that the insolvent, on being convicted of fraud, shall be "forever" deprived of the benefit of laws passed in favor of insolvent debtors in the state, the most that can be adjudged against an insolvent in this situation is to deprive him of the benefit of the particular state law under which the proceedings are had, that is, to deny him a discharge.[104] It is held that the pendency of proceedings in insolvency under a state law, on the debtor's voluntary petition, begun before the passage of the bankruptcy act, will not be ground for dismissing the debtor's subsequent voluntary petition in bankruptcy, although he has contracted no new debts, where it appears that one or more of the creditors scheduled by the bankrupt are citizens of other states than that in which the insolvency proceedings were instituted, because in this case the bankruptcy law can afford the debtor a more extensive relief than he could obtain under the state law.[105] Where proceedings in insolvency against a partnership and the individuals composing it were begun in a state court, before the passage of the bankruptcy act, and remained pending at the time one of the partners was individually adjudged bankrupt, but no discharge had been granted or applied for under the state law, it was held that a debt of the partnership was provable in the bankruptcy proceedings, notwithstanding the fact that it had been proved and allowed in the insolvency proceedings and that there were assets of the firm for distribution in the state court; but such debt could not share in the individual assets of the bankrupt until his separate creditors had been paid.[106]

§ 13. Nature and Effect of Proceedings in Bankruptcy.—A proceeding against a debtor to have him adjudged a bankrupt is a civil proceeding and not a criminal proceeding.[107] And further it is a pro-

[103] First Nat. Bank v. Ware, 95 Me. 388, 50 Atl. 24; Hood v. Blair State Bank, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 432. 91 N. W. 701; Osborn v. Fender, 88 Minn. 309, 92 N. W. 1114; Meekins v. Creditors, 19 La. Ann. 497, 3 N. B. R. 511; Martin v. Berry, 37 Cal. 208, 2 N. B. R. 629; Lavender v. Gosnell, 43 Md. 153, 12 N. B. R. 282; Longis v. Creditors, 20 La. Ann. 15; In re Holmes, 5 Law Rep. 360. Fed. Cas. No. 6,633; In re Horton, 5 Law Rep. 462, Fed. Cas. No. 6,708.

[104] Longis v. Creditors, 20 La. Ann. 15.

[105] In re Mussey, 99 Fed. 71, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592.

[106] In re Bates, 100 Fed. 263, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

[107] In re De Forest, 9 N. B. R. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 3,745.

ceeding in rem, or at least quasi in rem. It is not a personal action against the debtor, but a proceeding to determine the question of his status, as bankrupt or not, and, upon his adjudication, to sequester his property and distribute it among those entitled. Hence the proceedings may be perfectly valid and effective although the bankrupt himself has no notice or knowledge of them. For it is held that an adjudication may be made against an absent and absconding debtor upon such notice by publication as the statute directs.[108] Hence, jurisdiction of the res having attached, an adjudication of the court in bankruptcy has all the effect of a judgment in rem, and is of itself notice to all concerned, and is binding and conclusive not only upon the parties immediately before the court but upon all the world.[109] Also, the further proceedings in a bankruptcy case are, generally speaking, in the nature of proceedings in rem, so that creditors may be bound by the proceedings for the distribution of the estate and for the discharge of the debtor, without personal service of notice on them, and on such notice by mail or by publication as may be prescribed by the statute.[110] Again, the adjudication is a judicial determination, not a mere administrative order, and has all the sanctity attaching to ordinary judgments at law, so that it cannot be set aside or recalled, or in any way modified, by the legislative department of the government.[111] The decree in bankruptcy also divests the bankrupt of his title to all his property, and the same is transferred by operation of law to his trustee.[112] Again, the proceeding in bankruptcy is equivalent to the general creditors' bill in chancery, and is a plenary proceeding, its practice being prescribed by the statute, and to that extent varying from the chancery practice obtaining in creditors' bills.[113] Bankruptcy proceedings are matters of record, though not required to be recorded at large, and copies of such records, duly certified by the clerk of the court under the seal of the court, are, in all cases and in all courts of the country, prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.[114] The national bankruptcy law, as above stated,

[108] Sidney L. Bauman Diamond Co. v. Hart, 192 Fed. 498, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632; In re Oldstein, 182 Fed. 409, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138.

[109] Shawhan v. Wherritt, 7 How. 627, 12 L. Ed. 847; Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398, 22 L. Ed. 520; Johnson v. United States, 163 Fed. 30, 89 C. C. A. 508, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; Whitney v. Wenman, 140 Fed. 959, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; Morse v. Godfrey, 3 Story, 391, Fed. Cas. No. 9,856; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; Downer v. Rowell, 25 Vt. 336.

[110] Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[111] In re Raffauf, 6 Biss. 150, 10 N. B. R. 69, Fed. Cas. No. 11,525.

[112] May v. New Orleans & C. R. Co., 44 La. Ann. 444, 10 South. 769.

[113] In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482.

[114] Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418, 16 N. B. R. 440, 24 L. Ed. 437.

is the supreme law of the land, being enacted in pursuance of an express grant of power to Congress by the constitution, and state courts, being no less bound to follow and obey it than the courts of the United States, will take judicial notice of its existence and of its provisions.[115]

§ 14. Foreign Bankruptcy.—The American rule as to the effect of foreign bankruptcy proceedings on the property of the bankrupt, as stated by Story, is that an adjudication abroad is not regarded as vesting the trustee with title to the property of the debtor wihch may be without the jurisdiction of the country where the proceedings take place, or that, if it is recognized as having that effect (which is the case with some of our courts), at least it is universally held that we are not bound by comity to give effect to foreign bankruptcy laws to the extent of impairing the remedies, or lessening the securities, which our laws have provided for our own citizens.[116] "It seems to be the settled law of this state," says a court in New York, "that our courts will not recognize or enforce a right or title acquired under foreign bankrupt law or foreign bankrupt proceedings, so far as affects property within their jurisdiction or demands against residents of this state."[117] It was probably in view of this doctrine that Congress provided, in the present bankruptcy act, that the courts of bankruptcy shall have jurisdiction to adjudge persons bankrupt "who have been adjudged bankrupts by courts of competent jurisdiction without the United States and have property within their jurisdictions,"[118] and that "whenever a person

115 Mims v. Swartz, 37 Tex. 13, 10 N. B. R. 305.

116 Story, Confl. Laws (8th edn.) pp. 565, 575. And see Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch. 289, 3 L. Ed. 104; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed 606; Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 353, 6 Am. Dec. 466; Merrick's Estate, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 9; Mosselman v. Caen, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 66; Blane v. Drummond, 1 Brock. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 1,531; Chicago Lumbering Co. v. Powell, 120 Mich. 51, 78 N. W. 1022; Smith v. Eaton, 36 Me. 298, 58 Am. Dec. 746; Abraham v. Plestoro, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 538, 20 Am. Dec. 738. The assignee of a bankrupt under the bankruptcy law of a foreign country is not entitled to an injunction in the courts of this country, to restrain the transfer of property by the bankrupt, before the recovery of judgment by such assignee. Abraham v. Plestoro, supra.

117 Mosselman v. Caen, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 647, 10 N. B. R. 512.

118 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, cl. 1. This means that although a debtor has already been adjudicated a bankrupt by a foreign court, yet, if he has property within the jurisdiction of a United States court of bankruptcy, he may be adjudged bankrupt by the latter court also. In this case, it would seem that the jurisdiction of the United States court would in effect be ancillary only to that of the foreign court, and limited to the administration of the assets within its territorial jurisdiction. For although the statute also makes it the duty of a bankrupt to "execute to his trustee transfers of all his property in foreign countries" (§ 7a, cl. 5), yet the court of bankruptcy could not empower the trustee, or require the bankrupt, to act with reference to any assets already within the judicial control of the foreign court. Yet the law does not intend that, in such a case as this, the estate within the jurisdiction of the American court shall have been adjudged a bankrupt by a court without the United States and also by a court of bankruptcy, creditors residing within the United States shall first be paid a dividend equal to that received in the court without the United States by other creditors, before creditors who have received a dividend in such court shall be paid any amounts." [119]

Since bankruptcy laws have no ex-territorial operation, it follows that a discharge in bankruptcy, granted under the laws and by the courts of one country, cannot be effective against a creditor who is a citizen of another country or his claim.[120] But to this rule there are two well-recognized exceptions. First, if the contract in question was made and to be performed in the country where the bankruptcy proceedings take place, or the debt in question is payable there, it will be released by the discharge, being otherwise within its terms, without reference to the citizenship of the creditor in another country.[121] Second, a creditor who voluntarily appears in bankruptcy proceedings in a foreign state, and receives a dividend on his debt, thereby waives his exterritorial immunity from the operation of the bankruptcy law of such state and will be barred by the debtor's discharge.[122] Conversely, a discharge in bankruptcy granted by a court of the United States will not prevent an alien creditor from suing the bankrupt on his debt in the courts of his own country.[123] But a bankrupt within the United States should be divided up among domestic creditors alone. For it appears from the statute (§ 65d) that foreign creditors may prove their claims and participate in the distribution of the estate here; for it is there provided that domestic creditors shall first be paid dividends equal in amount to any dividends paid in the foreign court to other creditors, before creditors who have received dividends in such foreign court shall be entitled to receive any sum whatever. This evidently means that if the foreign court has paid any dividends to creditors, whether foreign or domestic, domestic creditors who have not participated in the foreign proceedings, and therefore have not received anything from the foreign court, shall first be entitled to be made equal to those who have been partially paid, and that the American assets are to be used for this purpose; and if, after this is done, anything remains for distribution, it is to be divided equally among all creditors who have proved their claims.

[119] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 65d.

[120] Munroe v. Guilleaume, 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 334; McMillan v. McNeill, 4 Wheat. 209, 4 L. Ed. 552; Green v. Sarmiento, 3 Wash. C. C. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 5,760; Long v. Hammond, 40 Me. 204. See Mansfield v. Andrews, 41 Me. 591; Philipe v. James, 1 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) N. S. 311; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 698, 62 Am. Dec. 605.

[121] Very v. McHenry, 29 Me. 206; Long v. Hammond, 40 Me. 204; May v. Breed, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 15, 54 Am. Dec. 700; Peck v. Hibbard, 26 Vt. 698, 62 Am. Dec. 605; Marsh v. Putnam, 3 Gray (Mass.) 551; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124.

[122] Clay v. Smith, 3 Pet. 411, 7 L. Ed. 723; Phelps v. Borland, 103 N. Y. 406, 9 N. E. 307, 57 Am. Rep. 755; Philipe v. James, 26 N. Y. Super. Ct. 720. See Morel v. Garelly, 16 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 269.

[123] Moore v. Horton, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 393; Ritchie v. Garrison, 10 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 246; Lizardi v. Cohen, 3 Gill (Md.) 430; McDougall v. Page, 55 Vt.

cannot, in violation of the provisions of our bankruptcy law, transfer to an alien creditor property within the United States. Although the bankruptcy law cannot be enforced as to an alien beyond the territorial limits of the United States, yet, for a violation of the law within the United States, the courts will enforce its provisions if jurisdiction of the violators of the law is obtained, even though they are aliens.[124]

187, 45 Am. Rep. 602; McMenomy v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 435.

[124] Olcott v. McLean, 50 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 455, 14 N. B. R. 379.

CHAPTER II

COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY, THEIR JURISDICTION AND POWERS

§ 15. Courts of Bankruptcy.—The courts of bankruptcy, as defined by the statute, include "the district courts of the United States in the several states, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the district courts of the several territories, and the United States courts in the Indian Territory and the District of Alaska."[1] To these must now be added the United States district courts in Hawaii and Porto Rico. The bankruptcy act, it has been ruled, intends and provides for only one court of bankruptcy within the territory prescribed, although there may be several district judges attached to, or authorized to hold, the court.[2] A district court does not cease to exist because of a vacancy in the office of judge, in such sense that proceedings in bankruptcy may not be instituted therein; but in such a case it is the duty of the clerk to receive and file the petition when offered, and it seems that he may also issue a subpœna thereon, tested in his own name.[3] It should further be observed that the term "court," as used throughout the act, is defined to mean "the court of bankruptcy in which the proceedings are pending, and may include the referee."[4] In actual practice, as will fully appear

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2.

[2] In re Steele, 161 Fed. 886, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446.

[3] In re Urban & Suburban Realty Title Co., 132 Fed. 140, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

[4] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 7.

from the following pages in general, the referees in bankruptcy exercise most of the powers and perform most of the functions of the courts of bankruptcy, except as to certain matters specially reserved by the statute for the consideration and determination of the judge.

§ 16. General Jurisdiction of Courts of Bankruptcy.—A court of bankruptcy derives all its jurisdiction from the statute which creates it,[5] and its proceedings are open to collateral impeachment on questions of jurisdiction.[6] Though the district courts of the United States, on the bankruptcy side, are courts of record, and not inferior courts in any proper sense, yet they are courts of statutory and limited jurisdiction, and it has been held that the record of a bankruptcy court must disclose the facts necessary to confer jurisdiction in any particular case, but that, when its jurisdiction is shown to have attached, the subsequent proceedings are presumed to have been regular, and the decision of the court, whether correct or otherwise, upon every question properly arising in the case, is binding and conclusive on all other courts until reversed on appeal.[7] The strictness of the rule requiring jurisdiction to appear on the face of the record has been relaxed by the statute in one particular,[8] and has been seriously questioned, and indeed positively denied, in its application to the judgments and decrees of the courts of bankruptcy.[9]

[5] Jobbins v. Montague, 6 N. B. R. 509, Fed. Cas. No. 7,330; In re Williams, 120 Fed. 38, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741; Houston v. Shear (Tex. Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 976. For the extent of the jurisdiction granted to the courts of bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2. See also Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 24, as follows: "The district courts shall have original jurisdiction as follows: * * * Nineteenth. Of all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy."

[6] Adams v. Terrell, 4 Woods, 337, Fed. Cas. No. 796.

[7] Smith v. Engle, 44 Iowa, 265, 14 N. B. R. 481; In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Marion Contract & Construction Co., 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Williams, 120 Fed. 38, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741. A court of bankruptcy has unlimited jurisdiction in respect of its powers over proceedings in bankruptcy, conferred by the Bankruptcy Act. Sabin v. Larkin-Green Logging Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 984, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210.

[8] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21f, provides that "a certified copy of an order confirming or setting aside a composition, or granting or setting aside a discharge, not revoked, shall be evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings, and of the fact that the order was made."

[9] In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; Allen v. Thompson, 10 Fed. 116. In the case last cited, it was said: "It is sometimes, indeed very often, said loosely that it is never too late to take objection to the jurisdiction of a federal court; and there is not wanting a kind of judicial sanction for the notion that, in determining questions of jurisdiction in these courts, a more strict rule is to be applied than to other courts, and that they must be treated with that degree of scrutiny that is applied to jurisdiction obtained by extraordinary process, or that belonging to courts of extraordinary powers. I dissent entirely from this view; and while we are constrained by authority in that class of cases where jealousy of these courts has resulted in very strict

The grants of jurisdiction in bankruptcy are found in the second section of the act of 1898. In the nineteen clauses of this section are enumerated most of the steps which occur in the course of an ordinary proceeding in bankruptcy, from the adjudication of the bankrupt to the final discharge of the trustee. But the section also contains some comprehensive provisions, among which the most important are those which give to the courts of bankruptcy authority to "bring in and substitute additional persons or parties in proceedings in bankruptcy when necessary for the complete determination of a matter in controversy";[10] cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money, and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided; enforce obedience by bankrupts, officers, and other persons to all lawful orders by fine or imprisonment; and "make such orders, issue such process,[11] and enter such judgments, in addition to those specifically provided for, as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this act." It will be observed that the bankruptcy law gives to courts of bankruptcy full power to enjoin all persons within their jurisdiction from doing any act that will interfere with or prevent its due administration, whether such persons are parties to the proceedings or not; and where they are litigants in a state construction of their jurisdiction and the mode of obtaining it, the principle does not at all apply in bankruptcy, admiralty, and other proceedings of which they have exclusive cognizance, so far as pertains to jurisdiction over persons or res involved in the litigation." In the case of Reed v. Vaugn, 10 Mo. 447, it was held that, in a bill filed by a bankrupt to enjoin a judgment which had been included in his schedule, it was not necessary to plead the jurisdiction of the court which granted the discharge, as the district courts of the United States are not courts of inferior jurisdiction whose authority to render a judgment must be made to appear. And see In re Casey, 195 Fed. 322, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359.

[10] Under the broad powers conferred by Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2(7), when property has become subject to a bankruptcy court, jurisdiction exists to determine the extent and character of liens thereon and rights therein, and to bring in additional parties when necessary to a complete determination of a matter in controversy. In re National Boat & Engine Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 208, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154. And see In re Baudouine (D. C.) 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

[11] This clause, taken in connection with the general grant of power to issue writs given by Rev. Stat. U. S. § 716, and Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 262, confers a very broad authority. The section of the Code referred to provides that "the Supreme Court and the district courts shall have power to issue writs of scire facias. The Supreme Court, the circuit courts of appeals, and the district courts shall have power to issue all writs not specifically provided for by statute, which may be necessary for the exercise of their respective jurisdictions, and agreeable to the usages and principles of law." With particular regard to injunctions, it is provided that "the writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy." Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 265; Rev. Stat. U. S. § 720.

court, no rule of comity requires the court of bankruptcy to compel persons whose rights under the bankruptcy law are jeopardized by such litigation to resort to the state court for protection.[12] The statute also provides that "nothing in this section contained shall be construed to deprive a court of bankruptcy of any power it would possess were certain specific powers not herein enumerated."[13] The purpose of the bankruptcy law is to bring all the property of the bankrupt into the court of bankruptcy for administration, and that court is furnished with all the needful power to collect the assets, settle all conflicting claims or liens upon such property, and cause it to be distributed to those who are entitled to share in it.[14] All the property and estate of the bankrupt are considered as in custodia legis from the date of the adjudication,[15] if not from the time of filing the petition,[16] and are under the jurisdiction and control of the court of bankruptcy, in which court alone all persons who claim rights in the property so sequestrated or who seek to participate in its distribution, must assert their claims, the jurisdiction of the federal court in this particular being not only paramount but exclusive.[17]

The fact that a state is a creditor, and therefore in a certain sense a party to the proceeding, does not affect the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court.[18] Where proceedings in bankruptcy affect property not embraced in the assets of the bankrupt, they can bind only such persons in interest as have actual notice of them; but in so far as the proceedings affect only the assets in bankruptcy, they are in the nature of proceedings in remand conclusive upon all persons, actual notice not being essential to the jurisdiction of the court.[19]

Even if there are technical defects in the jurisdiction of the court in [12] In re Hornstein, 122 Fed. 266, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308.

[13] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2.

[14] In re Sacchi, 10 Blatchf. 29, 6 N. B. R. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 12,200.

[15] Beekman Lumber Co. v. Acme Harvester Co., 215 Mo. 221, 114 S. W. 1087; In re Wells, 114 Fed. 222, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75.

[16] In re Weinger, Bergman & Co., 126 Fed. 875, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; Zeigler v. Shomo, 78 Pa. St. 357.

[17] Carter v. Hobbs, 92 Fed. 594, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215; Davis v. Anderson, 6 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 3,623; In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482; In re Fisher, 98 Fed. 89, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406; Zeigler v. Shomo, 78 Pa. St. 357; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383. A fund in the hands of the bankruptcy court will be detained pending suits to determine adverse claims to its ownership. In re Sabin, 18 N. B. R. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 12,195. Custody of property by the bankruptcy court, though acquired by agreement of the person in possession, nevertheless confers jurisdiction to hear and determine claims to the ownership thereof. In re Traunstein (D. C.) 225 Fed. 317, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

[18] In re Greenville & C. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 5,787.

[19] In re Judkins, 2 Hughes, 401, Fed. Cas. No. 7,560; Rayl v. Lapham, 27 Ohio St. 452; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. Ed. 1113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

a particular case, these may be waived by the conduct of parties concerned. Thus, an alleged bankrupt who files a motion to dismiss the petition against him, and appears in court to testify in support of allegations made therein, thereby waives any merely technical objection to the jurisdiction of the court over his person and estate.[20] So, in a proceeding in bankruptcy against stockholders of a corporation to compel the delivery of their stock to the bankrupt's trustee, the stockholders, by answering to the merits, will waive any objection to the jurisdiction of the court to determine the issue of title to the stock.[21]

The important subject of the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy over controversies between the trustee in bankruptcy and adverse claimants of the property alleged to belong to the estate may properly be reserved for discussion in another chapter. At present it may be sufficient to point out that the general policy of the act is to distinguish between matters and proceedings in bankruptcy and controversies arising in the course of the proceedings. The former include the ordinary steps in a bankruptcy case, and the court has jurisdiction of the settlement of all claims to property within its custody or which is in such a situation that it can summarily order its surrender. But the latter, being controversies between the trustee as the representative of the estate, on the one hand, and adverse claimants in good faith and with a colorable title, on the other hand, are generally remitted to the jurisdiction of the state courts, except in cases where the bankrupt and the adverse claimant are citizens of different states, and except in cases where the suit is brought in a federal court by the consent of the proposed defendant, and except in the case of suits by the trustee to avoid a preference or to recover property conveyed in fraud of creditors.[22]

§ 17. Jurisdiction of Bankruptcy Courts Exclusive.—The jurisdiction vested in the courts of the United States in all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy is expressly declared by law to be "exclusive of the courts of the several states."[23] In all matters, therefore, which properly concern the administration of an estate in bankruptcy, the jurisdiction of the proper federal court is exclusive and not to be shared with any state court, and is plenary and not to be interfered with.[24]

[20] In re Smith, 117 Fed. 961, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

[21] In re Mills, 179 Fed. 409, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278.

[22] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 23, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903 (32 Stat. 797) and Act Cong. June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 838). The Bankruptcy Act does not of itself confer upon the courts of bankruptcy any jurisdiction over independent suits at law or in equity. Maryman v. Dreyfus, 117 Ark. 17, 174 S. W. 549.

[23] Federal Judicial Code, 1911, § 256. And see Denison-Gholson Dry Goods Co. v. Simmons (Mo. App.) 227 S. W. 855; Norin v. Scheldt Mfg. Co., 297 Ill. 521, 130 N. E. 791.

[24] In re Mullings Clothing Co., 238 Fed.

"The jurisdiction of a district court of the United States sitting as a court of bankruptcy is superior and exclusive in all matters arising under the statute. The estate surrendered is placed in the custody of the court so sitting in bankruptcy, and the officer appointed to manage it is accountable to the court appointing him, and to that court alone. No court of an independent state jurisdiction can withdraw the property surrendered, nor determine, in any degree, the manner of its disposition." [25] Thus, all the property which is brought within the administration of the court is subject to its sole orders and disposition and so remains during the entire time the proceeding in bankruptcy is pending.[26] In general, an adjudication of bankruptcy vests the bankruptcy court with exclusive jurisdiction to administer the property of the bankrupt, as against any state court which may have obtained possession of such property through proceedings instituted within four months prior to the adjudication, and it is immaterial that the proceedings in the state court were for the enforcement of valid liens not affected by the bankruptcy act.[27] Thus, when the lien of an attachment from a state court is annulled by an adjudication in bankruptcy, such court loses jurisdiction of the property, which passes into the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, and the question of comity cannot affect such jurisdiction.[28] So, when a general assignment for the benefit of creditors is made by a debtor, the same being an act of bankruptcy, the right immediately arises in his creditors to have the estate administered under the bankruptcy law; and where the enforcement of this right is demanded by a proper proceeding within four months after its inception, no action by any court in any suit brought after the commission of the act of bankruptcy can defeat it, without the consent of the 58, 151 C. C. A. 134, L. R. A. 1918A, 539, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; Commercial Trust & Savings Bank v. Busch-Grace Produce Co., 228 Fed. 300, 142 C. C. A. 592, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385; In re Grafton Gas & Electric Light Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 668, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; In re Sage (D. C.) 224 Fed. 525, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Greene v. Moore (Cal. App.) 184 Pac. 506; De Muth v. Faw, 103 Wash. 279, 174 Pac. 18; In re Barrow, 1 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,057; Newman v. Fisher, 37 Md. 259; In re Anderson (D. C.) 23 Fed. 482. Where the trustee of a bankrupt corporation had in his possession a fund claimed by corporate creditors, and also by creditors of an insolvent firm, the bankruptcy court has exclusive jurisdiction to decide conflicting claims. In re Cobb's Consol. Cos. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 458, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 812.

[25] In re Barrow, 1 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,057.

[26] In re McAusland (D. C.) 235 Fed. 173, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; Roszell Bros. v. Continental Coal Corp. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 343, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; Darrough v. First Nat. Bank of Claremore, 56 Okl. 647, 156 Pac. 191; Markson v. Haney, 47 Ind. 31.

[27] In re Knight (D. C.) 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; State of Missouri v. Angle, 236 Fed. 644, 149 C. C. A. 640, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394.

[28] In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

court of bankruptcy, whose jurisdiction is exclusive, and, on the making of the adjudication, relates back to the act of bankruptcy.[29]

§ 18. Territorial Limits of Jurisdiction.—Although the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to take cognizance of a petition, whether voluntary or involuntary, and make an adjudication thereon, depends upon the residence of the debtor, or his having his principal place of business, within the limits of its district, yet, when jurisdiction has once attached, the authority of the court in respect to assets or claims is not territorially restricted to the boundaries of the judicial district or of the state. It was the intention of Congress to make the act operative throughout the United States; it does not stop at state lines. The bankruptcy court has jurisdiction of the debtor's entire estate. Property, wherever situated, which is not exempt, passes to and vests in the trustee, who is an officer of the court, and thus is in the custody or under the control of the court. So also debts, wherever payable, and creditors, wherever they reside, are subject to the jurisdiction of the court, and it has power and authority to determine all questions concerning liens upon the bankrupt's property or interests affecting it.[30] The court may also issue citations to persons in another jurisdiction to appear before it in respect to such matters.[31] It is true the act confers jurisdiction upon the several courts of bankruptcy "within their respective territorial limits," but this rather designates the place where the jurisdiction is to be exercised than the limits of the jurisdiction itself. There was a similar clause in the bankruptcy act of 1867, where original jurisdiction in bankruptcy was conferred upon the district courts "in their respective districts." But upon this language it was remarked by the Supreme Court of the United States: "Their jurisdiction is confined to their respective districts, it is true; but it extends to all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy without limit. When the act says that they shall have jurisdiction in their respective districts, it means that the jurisdiction is to be exercised in their respective districts. Each court, within its own district, may exercise the powers conferred; but those powers extend to all matters of bankruptcy without limitation." [32] But according to the highest authority at present available, a court of bankruptcy cannot issue process to be enforced in another territorial jurisdiction, nor make a summary order for the delivery of property which must be there enforced. Such an order can only be obtained by ancillary proceedings by the trustee in the court of the district where it must be executed.[33]

[29] In re Knight, 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[30] Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 30 Sup. Ct. 372, 54 L. Ed. 402, 17 Ann. Cas. 969, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; Wood v. Henderson, 210 U. S. 246, 28 Sup. Ct. 621, 52 L. Ed. 1046, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Thomas v. Woods, 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; Staunton v. Wooden, 179 Fed. 61, 102 C. C. A. 355, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; In re Dempster, 172 Fed. 353, 97 C. C. A. 51, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; In re Muncie Pulp Co., 151 Fed. 732, 81 C. C. A. 116, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; Guardian Trust Co. v. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co., 171 Fed. 43, 96 C. C. A. 285; In re Granite City Bank, 137 Fed. 818, 70 C. C. A. 316, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; Whitridge v. Taylor, 66 N. C. 273.

[31] Staunton v. Wooden, 179 Fed. 61, 102 C. C. A. 355, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

§ 19. Jurisdiction as Dependent on Residence or Domicile.—The statute confers upon the courts of bankruptcy authority "to adjudge persons bankrupt who have had their principal place of business, resided, or had their domicile within their respective territorial jurisdictions for the preceding six months, or the greater portion thereof." [34] This enactment must be understood as making an exception to the general provisions of the act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. 433) that "no civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts [circuit or district courts] against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant." For the "principal place of business" of a bankrupt may be in a district other than that where he resides or is an "inhabitant." But whether the jurisdiction is invoked on the ground of residence, domicile, or place of business, it must be within the judicial district where the petition is filed. It is not enough that it should be within the same state. Thus, if a debtor resides or has his principal place of business in the northern district of New York, he cannot file his petition in the southern district of New York.[35] Further, the residence or domicile of the bankrupt within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, or his having carried on business within the district, for the prescribed period of time before the filing of a petition by or against him, is an essential jurisdictional fact, without the existence of which the court will have no authority to proceed, as it is the fact which determines the court in which the proceedings are to be taken.[36] And this essential fact

[32] Lathrop v. Drake, 91 U. S. 516, 23 L. Ed. 414.

[33] Orinoco Iron Co. v. Metzel, 230 Fed. 40, 144 C. C. A. 338, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; Staunton v. Wooden, 179 Fed. 61, 102 C. C. A. 355, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; In re Waukesha Water Co., 116 Fed. 1009, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Williams, 120 Fed. 38, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741; In re Steele, 161 Fed. 886, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; In re Alphin & Lake Cotton Co., 131 Fed. 824, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653. And see In re J. & M. Schwartz, 204 Fed. 326, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[34] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 1.

[35] In re Palmer, 1 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. No. 10,680; Fogarty v. Gerrity, 1 Sawy. 233, 4 N. B. R. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 4,895. But see Clark-Herrin-Campbell Co. v. H. B. Claflin Co., 218 Fed. 429, 134 C. C. A. 229, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

[36] Fogarty v. Gerrity, 1 Sawy. 233, 4 N. B. R. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 4,895; In re Leighton, 4 Ben. 457, 5 N. B. R. 95, Fed. Cas. No. 8,221; In re Little, 3 Ben. 25, 2

must appear affirmatively and distinctly and not be left to presumption or conjecture.[37] Nor can this requirement as to jurisdiction be waived by the bankrupt or the creditors. Neither consent nor failure to object can confer authority to proceed upon a court which would not have jurisdiction under the express language of the statute.[38] But a bankrupt who has procured the dismissal of involuntary proceedings against him, on his sworn plea denying his residence within the district and asserting it to be within another district which he names, may be estopped to object to the jurisdiction of the court in the latter district, when fresh proceedings are commenced against him there by the same creditors.[39]

"Residence" and "domicile" do not mean the same thing, and careful attention should be given to the difference in their signification in order to understand the full scope of this clause of the bankruptcy act. "The act of residence does not alone constitute the domicile of a party, but it is the fact of residence, accompanied by an intention of remaining, which constitutes domicile. The distinction between domicile and mere residence may be shortly put as that between residence animo manendi and residence animo revertendi. Mere residence may be for a transient purpose, as for business, for a fixed period, or limited by an expected future event, upon the happening of which there is a purpose to return or remove. The two elements of residence and the intention that such residence shall be permanent must concur to make citizenship [domicile]. It has consequently been held from the beginning that an averment of residence is not the equivalent of an averment of citizenship [domicile] for the purpose of supporting jurisdiction in the courts of the United States." [40] Hence a court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction of a petition filed by a debtor who has had his domicile within the dis-

N. B. R. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 8,391; In re Palmer, 1 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. No. 10,680; In re Boston-Cerillos Mines Corp. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 794, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

[37] In re Plotke, 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A. 282, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[38] Finn v. Carolina Portland Cement Co., 232 Fed. 815, 147 C. C. A. 9, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; Fogarty v. Gerrity, 1 Sawy. 233, Fed. Cas. No. 4,895; In re Palmer, 1 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. No. 10,680. But compare Clark-Herrin-Campbell Co. v. H. B. Claflin Co., 218 Fed. 429, 134 C. C. A. 229, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414, in which an alleged bankrupt corporation, by pleading to the merits in its answer and otherwise submitting to the jurisdiction, was held to have waived its objection that the proceeding was not brought in that division of the federal district in which it had its domicile.

[39] Long v. Lockman (D. C.) 135 Fed. 197, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 172.

[40] Marks v. Marks, 75 Fed. 321. And see In re Watson, 4 N. B. R. 613, Fed. Cas. No. 17,272; Haskell v. Bailey, 63 Fed. 873, 11 C. C. A. 476; Danahy v. National Bank of Denison, 64 Fed. 148, 12 C. C. A. 75; Poppenhauser v. India Rubber Comb Co., 14 Fed. 707; McDonald v. Salem Flour Mills Co., 31 Fed. 577; Bartlett v. New York, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 44; In re Garneau, 127 Fed. 677, 62 C. C. A. 403, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Anderson v. Anderson, 42 Vt. 350, 1 Am. Rep.

trict for the preceding six months, although, during the greater portion of that time he has resided elsewhere, either in another state or in foreign countries, provided there was no abandonment of the original domicile, nor acquisition of a new one, and the debtor returned to the district, before the filing of the petition, with the intention of making his permanent home there.[41] It should also be noted, as further emphasizing the distinction between residence and domicile, that whereas either may confer jurisdiction to make an adjudication of bankruptcy, yet the exemptions of the bankrupt are to be regulated by the laws of the state wherein he has had his domicile (not residence) for the six months or the greater portion thereof immediately preceding the filing of the petition.[42] Hence one may be adjudicated a bankrupt, as residing or doing business, in one state, and have his exemptions determined by the laws of another state.

Since adjudications are occasionally made against married women and infants, it is important to remark that the domicile of a wife follows that of her husband during the continuance of the marriage relation, but a divorce leaves the wife at liberty to choose and fix her own domicile.[43] A minor may acquire a separate domicile from that of his father during the latter's life-time. But that result can be accomplished only by the emancipation of the minor and a complete surrender of the parental control either to the minor himself or to some one standing in the place of the parent as to the choice of domicile.[44]

It is further requisite to give jurisdiction of proceedings in bankruptcy that residence within the district should be bona fide; and the removal of a person from one district to another for the express purpose of filing a petition in bankruptcy therein and with the intention of leaving the district as soon as he obtained a discharge, does not make him a resident so as to confer jurisdiction on the court.[45] In view of 334; Salem v. Lyme, 29 Conn. 74; In re Lemen, 208 Fed. 80, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

[41] In re Williams, 99 Fed. 544, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677; In re Walker, 1 Low. 237, 1 N. B. R. 386, Fed. Cas. No. 17,061.

[42] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 6.

[43] Bennett v. Bennett, 1 Deady, 299, Fed. Cas. No. 1,318; Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Gorbach, 70 Pa. St. 150.

[44] Woolridge v. McKenna, 8 Fed. 650; Dresser v. Edison Illuminating Co., 49 Fed. 257. See In re Kingsley, 160 Fed. 275, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

[45] In re Garneau, 127 Fed. 677, 62 C. C. A. 403, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679. Yet if there is an actual intention to take up a permanent residence in the district to which the removal is made, it is no sufficient reason for refusing to take jurisdiction that the party was primarily actuated by a desire to file his petition in bankruptcy in that particular court, or, generally speaking, to get a case into a federal court which otherwise would not have had jurisdiction of it. See Gardner v. Sharp, 4 Wash. C. C. 609, Fed. Cas. No. 5,236; Robertson v. Carson, 19 Wall. 94, 22 L. Ed. 178; Catlett v. Pacific Ins. Co., 1 Paine, 594, Fed. Cas. No. 2,517; Briggs v. French, 2 Sumn. 251, Fed. Cas. No. 1,871; Case v. Clarke, 5 Mason, 70, Fed. Cas. No. 2,490; Johnson v. Mouell, Woolw. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 7,399.

the very comprehensive language of the statute, cases must be extremely rare in which it cannot be said that a person has either resided or had his domicile or had his principal place of business within any given district for the greater portion of the preceding six months. Yet such a case occurred, where the court refused to take jurisdiction of proceedings against an itinerant gambler who was shown to have resided within the district for only about two months before the filing of the petition, although admitting that the same conditions might be found to exist in any other district, so that the debtor might altogether escape from the law.[46]

Under the statute, proceedings in bankruptcy may be instituted in the district either of the debtor's residence or domicile or of his principal place of business,[47] and in the latter case, the place of his residence or domicile is immaterial.[48] But if he is not shown to have any place of business, or to have had a place of business within the district for the requisite length of time, then jurisdiction must depend upon either residence or domicile.[49] The "business" intended by the statute may be of almost any nature. One may have a place of business though the only business carried on there is that which he transacts as agent and attorney for another person,[50] or although he merely works there as clerk to the successors in the business in which he had previously failed.[51] Under the act of 1867 it was held that one whose only occupation was that of a book-keeper could not be said to be "carrying on business." [52] But the case is of very doubtful authority. If, as often happens, the same person is engaged in various occupations or pursuits, then it becomes necessary to determine as a question of fact which is his "principal" business, or that in which the major part of his capital is invested, which engages the chief part of his time and efforts, or on

[48] In re Williams, 120 Fed. 34, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736. "It is true," said the court, "that in cases of this kind, where the debtor belongs to that roving class which never remains but for a short time in one place, as is the case in this proceeding, there can be no adjudication of bankruptcy. These considerations, not without weight so far as the policy of legislation is concerned, are properly to be addressed to Congress, but they cannot control the interpretation of the statute where its words are so plain and unambiguous as to exclude the consideration of extraneous circumstances."

[47] Ex parte Hall, 5 Law Rep. 269, Fed. Cas. No. 5,919.

[48] In re Alabama & C. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 390, 6 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 124.

[49] In re Plotke, 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A. 282, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re Lipphart, 201 Fed. 103, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 705. A traveling salesman has no place of business which gives jurisdiction of his petition in voluntary bankruptcy to a District Court of a district in which he does not reside. In re Price (D. C.) 231 Fed. 1001, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656.

[50] In re Baily, 2 Ben. 437, 1 N. B. R. 613, Fed. Cas. No. 753.

[51] In re Belcher, 2 Ben. 468, 1 N. B. R. 666, Fed. Cas. No. 1,237.

[52] In re Magie, 2 Ben. 369, 1 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 8,951.

which he principally depends for his income.[53] Thus, where a petitioner in voluntary bankruptcy resides in one district and is there employed as a clerk in a store, but is engaged in trade on his own account, as a general merchant, in another district, the court in the latter district has jurisdiction of his petition, the bankrupt's principal place of business being within its territorial limits.[54] Though a corporation may have its "home office" in one state, where its officers are to be found, and where its directors meet, its records are kept, and its finances administered, this is not its principal place of business if its actual operations are conducted in another state, where its shops, factories, mills or other works are located.[55] But if a corporation shuts down its factory, or ceases to do any active business at the place where its plant is located, but still maintains a head office in another state or district, where its executive and financial business is transacted, the latter becomes its principal place of business, so as to give jurisdiction to the federal court there.[56]

In regard to the requirement that the residence or domicile of the debtor, or his maintenance of a principal place of business within the district, shall have continued for "the preceding six months or the greater portion thereof," it is logically necessary to understand that the period of six months must be referred to the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. A strict construction would make it refer to the date of adjudication, since the language quoted occurs in a sentence beginning "to adjudge persons bankrupt," and no other point of time is there fixed. But practically the courts have proceeded on the assumption that the time of filing the petition was meant.

In the early days of the operation of the present statute, it was thought to mean that the debtor must have established his residence or domicile within the territorial jurisdiction at least six months before the filing of the petition, and that, during such period of six months, he should not have absented himself, unless it were for a time of less than three months. The requirement was thought to be similar to that in

[53] In re Mackey, 110 Fed. 355, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577. See In re Foster, 3 Ben. 386, 3 N. B. R. 236, Fed. Cas. No. 4,962.

[54] In re Brice, 93 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

[55] In re E. & G. Theatre Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 657, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255; In re Monarch Oil Corp. (D. C.) 272 Fed. 524, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65; In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co. (D. C.) 272 Fed. 527, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82; In re Alabama & C. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 390, 6 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 124. As to jurisdiction of corporations depending on their residence or place of business, see more fully, infra, Ch. IX, § 132.

[56] In re Marine Machine & Conveyor Co., 91 Fed. 630, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., 159 Fed. 901, 87 C. C. A. 81, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785. Compare In re Little, 3 Ben. 25, 2 N. B. R. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 8,391.

the divorce laws of most of the states, requiring the complainant to have resided within the state for a given period.[57] Also it was thought that the petition must be filed in the district where the debtor had made the longest residential stay during the preceding six months, no matter how short a time that might cover, the statute not intending that his residence in the district should necessarily have extended over three months.[58] This was in analogy to the decisions under the act of 1867, where it was held that the petition might be filed on the very day after the establishment of the debtor's residence in a given district, as in the case of an American citizen returning from abroad. "If a person resides within the United States, and no district can be shown in which he has had a longer residence (within six months) than that in which he petitions, he has chosen the proper district." [59] Both these views, however, have been abandoned, and it may now be regarded as settled, first, that it is not necessary that the residence or domicile should have begun six months before the petition in bankruptcy, but it is sufficient if it commenced at such a time that it may be said to have included "the greater portion thereof," that is, the greater portion of the preceding six months, and second, that it must have continued in the particular district for at least one or more days over three months, for it is not sufficient that the debtor should have resided within the district for a longer time than he has resided in any other district; in addition to that his residence must have continued more than three months; and if during the period of the preceding six months the debtor has neither resided, had his domicile, nor maintained a principal place of business in any one district for so long a period as three months, then there is no court in which a petition by or against him can be filed.[60] The case of a citizen returning from abroad will depend, not on residence, but on domicile, and the domicile of origin may have been preserved notwithstanding the residence abroad, so that the court at that place may have jurisdiction.[61]

This consideration is applicable to the case of a fugitive from justice, or an absconding debtor, whose present residence is unknown.

[57] In re Stokes, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 106.

[58] In re Ray, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 336.

[59] In re Goodfellow, 1 Low. 510, 3 N. B. R. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 5,536.

[60] In re Fackelman (D. C.) 248 Fed. 565, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; In re Plotke, 104 Fed. 964, 44 C. C. A. 282, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re Williams, 120 Fed. 34, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; In re Berner, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 330; Longley Bros. v. McCann, 90 Ark. 252, 119 S. W. 268; In re Leighton, 4 Ben. 457, 5 N. B. R. 95, Fed. Cas. No. 8,221. And see In re Hurley, 204 Fed. 126, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567.

[61] In re Williams, 99 Fed. 544, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

Since the statute does not require the personal presence of the debtor in involuntary proceedings, nor personal service upon him, nor his residence within the district, but only his domicile there, an adjudication may be made against a person in this situation, upon a petition filed in the court of bankruptcy at the place where he was domiciled at the time of his departure, provided the domicile was established at least six months before the filing of the petition, unless there was an intention on his part to change his domicile and acquire a new one elsewhere, and the burden of proving that fact is on those who object to the jurisdiction.[62]

The act also confers jurisdiction upon the proper courts to adjudge persons bankrupt "who do not have their principal place of business, reside, or have their domicile within the United States, but have property within their jurisdictions, or who have been adjudged bankrupts by courts of competent jurisdiction without the United States and have property within their jurisdictions." [63] The latter of these two clauses was probably meant to apply to American citizens who have been adjudged bankrupts in foreign courts. But both clauses plainly apply to aliens. In this respect the present statute is wider than the act of 1867,[64] and in the case here contemplated jurisdiction depends solely upon the presence within the district of property available to the creditors through the instrumentality of proceedings in bankruptcy.

§ 20. Jurisdiction Dependent on Amount of Debts.—In the case of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, the amount of the petitioner's indebtedness is immaterial. But when the proceedings are involuntary and instituted by creditors, it is made a jurisdictional requisite that the person or corporation proceeded against should "owe debts to the amount of one thousand dollars or over." [65] And the statute defines "debts" as including "any debt, demand, or claim provable in bankruptcy." [66] There must therefore be an aggregate of one thousand dollars of debts directly owing by the alleged bankrupt and provable against his estate. In one case, where a petition was filed against a partnership after its dissolution, and its indebtedness was not shown to reach [62] Hills v. F. D. McKinniss Co., 188 Fed. 1012, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Oldstein, 182 Fed. 409, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138; In re Filer, 108 Fed. 209, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332; Cobb v. Rice, 130 Mass. 231.

[63] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 1. Under this provision, bankruptcy courts have jurisdiction if there is property within the jurisdiction, though the bankrupt or his creditors, or both, are aliens; and a deposit in bank, to the credit of an alien, is property having its situs within the district where the bank is situated. In re Berthoud (D. C.) 231 Fed. 529, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[64] See In re Burton, 9 Ben. 324, 17 N. B. R. 212, Fed. Cas. No. 2,214.

[65] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 4.

[66] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 11.

the required amount, except by including some debts which accrued after the dissolution and which became obligations of the firm only on the ground of estoppel in favor of such creditors as had no notice of the dissolution, the court refused to make an adjudication of bankruptcy.[67] The opinion was advanced (under the act of 1867) that the jurisdiction, in so far as it depended upon the amount of indebtedness, must exist at the time of the trial and adjudication, and that, although the debts might amount to the requisite sum at the time of filing the petition, yet if they were thereafter reduced by payments made, so as to amount to less than the jurisdictional sum, the court lost jurisdiction and could not make an adjudication.[68] But under the present statute, the opinion appears to prevail that it is enough if this jurisdictional fact, like others, exists at the time of filing the petition. And some courts have thought that the statute should be construed as having reference to the amount of indebtedness at the time of the commission of the act of bankruptcy charged, on the ground that, when a debtor commits an act of bankruptcy denounced by the statute, his creditors immediately acquire a vested right to avail themselves of it, to file a petition, and to have the estate administered by the court of bankruptcy.[69] At any rate, a payment made to a creditor after the commission of an act of bankruptcy would almost certainly amount to a voidable preference. And the authorities are unanimous in holding that, in computing the amount of indebtedness of the alleged bankrupt, the claims of preferred creditors must be included, if their preferences were given under such circumstances as to be voidable, since they will be entitled to prove their claims in the bankruptcy proceedings when they have surrendered their preferences or when the same have been voluntarily relinquished.[70] This doctrine was applied in a case where the act of bankruptcy charged was the making of a general assignment by a debtor who, at the time, owed much more than the required amount. Some of the creditors assented to the assignment and released the debtor on receiving their proportional part of the assets covered by the assignment. But other creditors, refusing to assent, filed a petition in bankruptcy. The settlement with assenting creditors had then reduced the amount of unreleased indebtedness below the sum of one thousand dollars. Nevertheless the court held that it had jurisdiction and that an adjudication should be

[67] In re Pinson & Co., 180 Fed. 787, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804.

[68] In re Skelley, 3 Biss. 260, 5 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 12,921.

[69] In re Jacobson, 181 Fed. 870, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 927.

[70] In re McMurtrey & Smith, 142 Fed. 853, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; In re Tirre, 95 Fed. 425, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493; In re Norcross, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 257; In re Cain, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379.

made, on the ground that the released debts should be regarded as still existing and unpaid, at least for the purpose of the present proceeding and in order to secure to the non-assenting creditors the rights and remedies with which they became vested upon the commission of the act of bankruptcy.[71]

§ 21. Jurisdiction of Bankrupt's Person.—In voluntary cases, the bankrupt submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court by filing his petition and asking an adjudication. In involuntary cases, jurisdiction of his person is acquired by the filing of the petition against him and the due service upon him of a copy of the petition and of a subpœna.[72] In either case, jurisdiction once attaching is retained until the bankrupt's application for a discharge is heard and determined. During all this period, he remains, as it were, in the custody of the court, and his obedience to all its lawful orders may be promptly and effectively enforced. He may be summarily ordered to pay over to his trustee money found to be in his possession or control and properly belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, and to transfer any other property to which the trustee is entitled.[73] His death or supervening insanity does not abate the proceedings, but the same are to be conducted, and concluded, so far as possible, in the same manner as if no such event had occurred.[74] Moreover, for the purpose of securing his attendance whenever it shall be necessary for the purpose of examining him touching his property and affairs, or for enforcing the other duties laid upon him by the act, the court is invested by the statute with full authority to protect him from arrest on civil process except in certain specified cases, to place him under arrest when it is shown that he is about to leave the district, and to procure his return to the district, when he has escaped therefrom, by extradition proceedings.[75]

§ 22. Summary Jurisdiction.—From the fact that they are invested with jurisdiction in equity as well as at law, and that this jurisdiction may be exercised in vacation in chambers, as well as during a stated term, and from the general purpose and policy of the bankruptcy law to settle up estates with expedition and without unnecessary expense, the courts of bankruptcy have deduced the doctrine that controversies arising in the course of a proceeding in bankruptcy may, in many in-

[71] In re Jacobson, 181 Fed. 870, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 927.

[72] In re Brett, 130 Fed. 981, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492. As to service of process, and jurisdiction as dependent thereon, see infra, § 166.

[73] In re Pevear, 21 Fed. 121; In re Purvine, 96 Fed. 192, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787.

[74] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 8.

[75] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 9, 10.

stances, be determined summarily, that is, upon petition and rule to show cause in the bankruptcy proceeding itself, instead of by plenary suit at law or bill in equity. It has, indeed, been broadly stated that the district courts in bankruptcy are authorized by summary proceedings to administer all the relief which a court of equity could administer under like circumstances upon regular proceedings.[76] It may not be necessary to accept this statement in its widest extent. And yet the nature of a bankruptcy case is such that most of the questions incidentally contested in its progress may be heard and determined summarily without injustice and without violating the requirement of due process of law. Thus, where persons have forcibly and unlawfully seized and taken out of the judicial custody of a court of bankruptcy property which had lawfully come into its possession as part of a bankrupt's estate, the court has power summarily to require them to restore the property,[77] and the possession of a receiver appointed by the court, or its marshal, or a trustee in bankruptcy is the possession of the court, for the purposes of this rule.[78] And it is held that property which is in the actual possession of the bankrupt at the time of the filing of the petition and the appointment of a receiver is constructively in the possession of the bankruptcy court, so that a stranger who thereafter takes the property on a writ of replevin from a state court may be cited before the referee and his rights determined in a summary proceeding.[79] So also, where a mortgage held by a creditor, and alleged to have been given by way of preference, is foreclosed, the property sold, and the proceeds deposited in the bankruptcy court, that court may determine the validity of the mortgage on a petition filed by the trustee.[80] Again, the court of bankruptcy has summary jurisdiction over all contracts made with itself respecting the bankrupt's property, and where a forthcoming bond has been given for the release of goods under seizure, the court may summarily order the goods, or their value, to be brought into court by the parties to the bond.[81] And the bankrupt himself is always sub-

[76] In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094.

[77] White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 20 Sup. Ct. 1007, 44 L. Ed. 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

[78] In re Landis, 151 Fed. 896, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 483. But where a receiver in bankruptcy delivered certain goods in the possession of the bankrupt to a claimant, on the ground that the title to the property was in the claimant and not in the bankrupt, the court's custody of the property was thereby surrendered, and the trustee was not thereafter entitled to recover the value of the property against the claimant in summary proceedings on an order to show cause. Hinds v. Moore, 134 Fed. 221, 67 C. C. A. 149, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[79] In re Briskman, 132 Fed. 201, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[80] In re Noel, 137 Fed. 694, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[81] Rosenbaum v. Garnett, 3 Hughes, 662, 19 N. B. R. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 12,053.

ject to the orders of the court, and a proceeding to compel him to surrender property or money which is claimed as assets of his estate need not be by a bill in equity; a summary petition is sufficient.[82] And the same is true where the property is held for him by an agent, trustee, or other representative, not setting up an independent claim of title thereto.[83] Again, the trustee in bankruptcy is an officer of the court, and his possession is that of the court, and hence any claimant may proceed, if he so chooses, by summary petition against the trustee in respect to any property or funds in the latter's hands.[84] This is true, not only of an application for the allowance of a claim against the bankrupt's estate which the trustee disallows, but also where property which has been seized as the property of the bankrupt, and has thus come to the trustee's hands, is claimed by a stranger as his own. In such case it is proper for the claimant to proceed for its recovery in specie by petition to the court of bankruptcy.[85] But the converse of this rule does not always hold good. Summary process of the court of bankruptcy may be invoked by the trustee where the property to which he lays claim, and which he seeks to recover in this manner is in the possession of the bankrupt himself or of some one who holds it as his agent or representative. And it is also true that the trustee cannot be compelled to resort to a suit to recover the possession of property where his right is not contested, but any one withholding the possession, while making no claim to the property for himself, may be dealt with summarily.[86] But where the trustee claims, as assets of the estate, property which is in the actual possession of a third person who asserts his own title thereto in opposition to the bankrupt or the trustee, whether such title

[82] In re Ettinger, 18 N. B. R. 222, Fed. Cas. No. 4,543. And see infra, § 227.

[83] In re Baudouine, 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; Clay v. Waters, 178 Fed. 385, 101 C. C. A. 645, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

[84] See Ex parte Christy, 3 How. 292, 11 L. Ed. 603; Ferguson v. Peckham, 6 N. B. R. 569, Fed. Cas. No. 4,741; In re Evans, 1 Low. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 4,551. Compare Hurst v. Teft, 12 Blatchf. 217, 13 N. B. R. 108, Fed. Cas. No. 6,939. Jurisdiction to foreclose a mortgage on the estate of the bankrupt, at the instance of the mortgagee or holder, is not included in the powers to be exercised summarily by the court of bankruptcy. In re Casey, 10 Blatchf. 376, 8 N. B. R. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 2,495. Where, pursuant to an offer of composition, the trustee executed a deed to the bankrupt's property to carry out a sale, contingent on confirmation of the composition, and the matter was referred to a special referee, after an increased offer, it was held, on exceptions to such referee's report, that the court had no jurisdiction to order the trustee's deed expunged from the records, it having been recorded without authority. In re Kligerman (D. C.) 253 Fed. 778, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670.

[85] In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 379, 6 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 2,802; In re Moses, 1 Fed. 845; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 4 Sup. Ct. 27, 28 L. Ed. 145; In re Harthill, 4 Ben. 448, 4 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 6,161; Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

[86] In re Moore, 104 Fed. 869, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

was derived from the bankrupt himself before the proceedings, or from an independent source, the rights of such adverse claimant cannot be adjudicated in a summary manner in the bankruptcy proceeding, but only in a plenary suit brought against him by the trustee.[87] On this subject it has been well and forcibly said: "If in a proceeding in bankruptcy proper the trustee could intrude a separate suit against every debtor of the bankrupt, no difference what the demand might be, we should have a conglomeration of issues of the most remarkable extent and character in a bankruptcy proceeding. Nothing of the sort was contemplated by Congress, nor provided for by the act. On the contrary, the trustee, if he succeeds to the rights of the bankrupt, must do as the latter would have been compelled to do, and if he have any claim to property or any right to recover upon any indebtedness alleged to be due from another person, he must, like every other litigant, institute his own separate and independent action in a court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and have his claim regularly adjudicated in due course of law. Being a trustee in bankruptcy gives him no special privileges in the courts. He stands there like other people. These general propositions seem to admit of no doubt. There are cases, however, which are exceptional, and in them summary proceedings may be resorted to, for example, in cases where property is in the possession of the trustee and therefore in custodia legis. If that possession is interfered with, summary action is admissible, and where the bankrupt refuses, or some agent of his refuses, to deliver to the trustee property belonging to the estate, a similar course is open. But these exceptions do not embrace cases where there are adverse claims to the property made in good faith, nor those in which there is an outstanding indebtedness of any character. Nor do they embrace a case where a third person has the property in his possession claiming it adversely, nor a case where a recovery on a contract is sought, for in respect to all such cases it cannot be said that the debtor is in possession of any property of the estate within the rule as to summary proceedings." [88]

[87] Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 551, 21 L. Ed. 481; Smith v. Mason, 14 Wall. 419, 20 L. Ed. 748; In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; Camp v. Zellars, 94 Fed. 799, 36 C. C. A. 501; In re Rockwood, 91 Fed. 363, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Kelly, 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Brodbine, 93 Fed. 643, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Cohn, 98 Fed. 75, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Griffith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 546; In re Fowler, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 215; In re Carter, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 162; In re Staib, 3 Fed. 209; In re Waitzfelder, 18 N. B. R. 260, Fed. Cas. No. 17,048; In re Stevens, Fed. Cas. No. 13,390; In re Evans, 1 Low. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 4,551. And see infra, § 402.

[88] In re Howe Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 193 Fed. 524, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

§ 23. Equitable Powers and Jurisdiction.—The act of Congress invests the courts of bankruptcy with "such jurisdiction at law and in equity as will enable them to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings."[89] Within the limits of their own particular subject-matter they therefore possess the powers of courts of equity and may take cognizance of equitable rights and claims, follow equitable modes of procedure, and administer equitable relief.[90] "A proceeding in bankruptcy is a proceeding in equity, and for the purpose of enforcing and protecting its jurisdiction a court of bankruptcy has all the inherent powers of a court of equity. This being the case, it may be appealed to by supplemental and ancillary bill to enforce its orders, sustain its jurisdiction, and protect parties before it in the enjoyment of rights secured through and under it; and this is always true where jurisdiction is reserved or still retained, and even afterwards where the result would be a re-litigation of the same subject-matter between the same parties. A bill addressed to this power of the court is essentially supplemental and ancillary in its nature and inheres in the general equity jurisdiction of the court."[91] Although there was no provision in the act of 1867 authorizing the appointment of receivers by the bankruptcy court, yet it was held to be within the general equity powers of a court of bankruptcy, after the adjudication and before the appointment of a trustee, to appoint a receiver for the temporary care and custody of the estate, when special circumstances rendered it desirable.[92] This authority is

[89] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2.

[90] Grief Bros. Cooperage Co. v. Mullinix (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 391; Bridgeton Nat. Bank v. Way, 253 Fed. 731, 165 C. C. A. 35, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; Clark v. Johnson, 245 Fed. 442, 157 C. C. A. 604, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; Ogden v. Gilt Edge Consol. Mines Co., 225 Fed. 723, 140 C. C. A. 597, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893; In re Seal (D. C.) 261 Fed. 112, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556; In re Connecticut Brass & Mfg. Corp., (D. C.) 257 Fed. 445, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376; In re Association Dairy Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 749, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Ohio Copper Mining Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 711, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; In re Syracuse Gardens Co. (D. C.) 231 Fed. 284, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354; In re Gillaspie, 190 Fed. 88, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; In re Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 180 Fed. 549, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282; In re Appel, 163 Fed. 1002, 90 C. C. A. 172, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 890; In re Siegel-Hillman Dry Goods Co., 111 Fed. 980, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Rochford, 124 Fed. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Fendley, 10 N. B. R. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 4,728; Fowler v. Dillon, 1 Hughes, 232, 12 N. B. R. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 5,000; Ex parte Foster, 2 Story, 131 Fed. Cas. No. 4,960; In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482. "In equity, and in bankruptcy, which is a branch of equity, names and forms are unimportant where the truth is evident." Swarts v. Siegel, 117 Fed. 13, 16, 54 C. C. A. 399, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689. A court of bankruptcy is a court of equity, and ought not to permit itself to be used for the purpose of perpetrating a fraud or attaining an inequitable result which a state court is successfuly endeavoring to prevent. Martin v. Oliver, 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739.

[91] In re Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 180 Fed. 549, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282.

[92] Lansing v. Manton, 14 N. B. R. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 8,077.

now expressly given by the present statute, but it is also held that the court may exercise its general equity jurisdiction to protect its receivers and enforce contracts made by them.[93] So again, the court has full equity powers in dealing with partnership matters, and may do as a court of equity would do in marshalling partnership property for the benefit of firm creditors and so on.[94] So the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy extends to bills in equity in behalf of the trustee, in regard to the recovery of assets, as well as to actions at law.[95] And such a court will have jurisdiction to entertain a suit in equity to establish a trust in funds claimed to belong to the bankrupt's estate.[96] And generally, "property in the custody of a court of equity for administration is always held by it in trust for those to whom it rightfully belongs. The jurisdiction to inquire and determine who are the lawful owners of it, and to that end to call before it all claimants by a reasonable notice or order to present their claims to the court within a reasonable time, or to be barred of any right or interest in the property, is a power inherent in every court of equity, incidental and indispensable to the authority to administer the property in its possession and to distribute its proceeds." [97] The plenary form of proceedings common to suits in equity is not always necessary in the exercise of the equity powers of a court of bankruptcy.[98] In many instances the more simple and expeditious procedure by petition and rule to show cause will be applicable, although, as stated in the preceding section, this is not a proper method of determining the rights of strangers to the proceeding in bankruptcy, who claim adversely to the bankrupt and the trustee. A court of bankruptcy, in virtue of the peculiar nature of its jurisdiction, may entertain proceedings in equity, although an action at law could have been maintained.[99] But when a distinct suit is brought in the court of bankruptcy, it must be determined whether it properly belongs on the law side or the equity side, and if the latter, it must proceed according to the proper practice of the federal courts in equity cases, and relief must be administered in accordance with the general principles and

[93] Mason v. Wolkowich, 150 Fed. 699, 80 C. C. A. 435, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 765, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.

[94] In re Filmar, 177 Fed. 170, 100 C. C. A. 632, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194.

[95] Flanders v. Abbey, 6 Biss. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 4,851.

[96] Shainwald v. Davids, 69 Fed. 687.

[97] In re Rochford, 124 Fed. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; Chauncey v. Dyke Brothers, 119 Fed. 1, 55 C. C. A. 579, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; Searle v. Mechanics' Loan & Trust Co., 249 Fed. 942, 162 C. C. A. 140, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786.

[98] In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; International Agr. Corp. v. Cary, 240 Fed. 101, 153 C. C. A. 137, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753.

[99] Chemung Canal Bank v. Judson, 8 N. Y. 254. But see Sessler v. Nemcof, 183 Fed. 656, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618.

practices of equity. Thus, a proceeding by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or an illegal preference, when brought in a federal court, is a suit in equity, and must be governed by the rules of pleading and practice in equity which obtain in the United States courts, independently of the practice in the courts of the particular state.[100] But generally speaking, proceedings in bankruptcy proper are governed by the rules of practice in equity where the act of Congress and the general orders do not prescribe a specific course of procedure.[101] But it should not be forgotten, in this connection, that a court of bankruptcy, as such, does not possess the chancery powers of a court of unlimited jurisdiction, its equity jurisdiction being limited to that conferred by the act of Congress, namely, such as is necessary to "enable them to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings." [102]

§ 24. Ancillary Jurisdiction.—As originally interpreted, the present bankruptcy act was thought to have made no provision for any ancillary or auxiliary proceedings in any district court other than that in which the bankruptcy proceeding was pending. But a clause was inserted in the amendatory act of 1910 which provides that the courts of bankruptcy may "exercise ancillary jurisdiction over persons or property within their respective territorial limits in aid of a receiver or trustee appointed in any bankruptcy proceedings pending in any other court of bankruptcy." (Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838, § 2.) Such ancillary jurisdiction carries with it power for the ancillary tribunal to decide questions of liens and priorities to property over which it exercises jurisdiction.[103] But a claim for attorney's fees for services rendered after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings must be determined by the court having jurisdiction of the administration of the estate, and cannot be determined by a bankruptcy court exercising ancillary jurisdiction.[104] And a bankruptcy court of ancillary jurisdiction which has taken possession of mortgaged property, is without au-

[100] Westall v. Avery, 171 Fed. 626, 96 C. C. A. 428, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673.

[101] In re Irwin, 177 Fed. 284, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Gillaspie, 190 Fed. 88, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59; In re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

[102] Nelson v. Svea Pub. Co. (D. C.) 178 Fed. 136. Thus, for instance, the general equity jurisdiction of the United States District Court for Alaska is not to be confounded with the equity jurisdiction of the United States District Court for Alaska in bankruptcy. These courts have one and the same name, but they are created by separate and distinct acts of Congress, passed in pursuance of constitutional powers entirely different from each other. Each court has its own jurisdiction and its own method of procedure. McKenna v. Randle, 5 Alaska, 590.

[103] Emerson v. Castor, 236 Fed. 29, 149 C. C. A. 239, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719.

[104] In re A. Musica & Son (D. C.) 205 Fed. 413, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555, affirmed, 211 Fed. 326, 127 C. C. A. 575, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

thority, regardless of the court of primary jurisdiction, to release such property to the mortgagee for the purpose of an independent foreclosure suit.[105]

It is very doubtful whether a suit can be maintained by a trustee in bankruptcy, to recover assets or to set aside preferences or fraudulent conveyances, in any district court other than the one in which the proceedings in the particular bankruptcy are pending and from which he derives his authority. If the latter court has jurisdiction of an action of this kind against a stranger (which has been both affirmed and denied under the present statute) it can only be on the ground that the suit is an incident of the main proceeding and is drawn within the jurisdiction of the court by its relation to the general business of collecting the assets of the bankrupt. But if the trustee is obliged to go beyond the bounds of the district to seek his adversary, it would seem that he must have recourse to a state court of competent jurisdiction,[106] except in cases where a federal court would have cognizance of the action on account of the presence of jurisdictional facts, such as the diverse citizenship of the bankrupt and the defendant; but in that case of course, its jurisdiction would not be ancillary but original.

§ 25. Jurisdiction to Reverse or Set Aside Former Proceedings.—By the ordinary rules of law a court loses control over its judgments at the expiration of the term at which they were rendered and cannot thereafter revoke or modify them. But it is not so with the United States district courts sitting in bankruptcy. For the exercise of this jurisdiction they are considered as always open and as having no separate terms, and a case in bankruptcy is one continuous proceeding from its inception to the closing of the estate and discharge of the trustee. Therefore any order, decision, or decree made in the progress of such a cause remains subject to the control of the court until the final close of the case, and, saving only vested rights which may have accrued under it, may be corrected if found to be erroneous, modified to suit the facts, or vacated and set aside, without regard to the fact that one or more of the periods appointed for the stated terms of the court may have elapsed.[107] And an application for the re-examination of an order or decree in bankruptcy may be made by motion or petition, according to the circumstances of the case; and such a motion or petition will not have the effect of a new suit, but of a proceeding in an old one.[108] But this power of the court can only be exercised in the same bankruptcy case in which the previous order or decision was made. Each bankruptcy is a distinct proceeding from every other. And a decision or order made in one case is final and conclusive when the rights of the same parties to the same property, or growing out of the same transaction, shall come up for decision in a subsequent and distinct case. Though the court may, in the mean time, have changed its mind regarding the title to the property or the legal effect of the transaction in question, still it has no rightful authority, in the subsequent case, to make an order inconsistent with, or substantially vacating, its order made in the earlier case. This can only be done by a proceeding taken directly for the purpose in the same bankruptcy case in which the order was made.[109]

[105] In re Patterson Lumber Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 578, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 545.

[106] See Jobbins v. Montague, 6 N. B. R. 509, Fed. Cas. No. 7,330; Lamb v. Damron, 7 N. B. R. 509, Fed. Cas. No. 8,014; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098. Compare Goodall v. Tuttle, 3 Biss. 219, 7 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 5,533; Sherman v. Bingham, 3 Cliff. 552, 7 N. B. R. 490, Fed. Cas. No. 12,762; Payson v. Dietz, 2 Dill. 504, 8 N. B. R. 193 Fed. Cas. No. 10,861.

[107] Sandusky v. Bank, 23 Wall. 289, 23 L. Ed. 155; In re Ives, 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692; In re Tucker, 153 Fed. 91, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378; In re Henschel, 114 Fed. 968,

§ 26. Conflicts of Jurisdiction with State Courts.—The bankruptcy law provides that the courts of bankruptcy shall have authority to order a stay of proceedings in suits pending against a bankrupt in the state courts, and this power may be exercised, if need be, by the writ of injunction. Moreover, their jurisdiction is by law made exclusive in all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy. Hence "the jurisdiction of a district court of the United States, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, is superior and exclusive in all matters arising under the statute. The estate surrendered is placed in the custody of the court so sitting in bankruptcy, and the officer appointed to manage it is accountable to the court appointing him, and to that court alone. No court of an independent state jurisdiction can withdraw the property surrendered, nor determine in any degree the manner of its disposition."[110] And when the bankruptcy law cannot be properly administered by the court of bankruptcy, in consequence of the interference of a state court and its determination to adjudicate upon the rights of parties and property in

8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201; Mahoney v. Ward, 100 Fed. 278, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770.

[108] Sandusky v. Bank, 23 Wall. 289, 23 L. Ed. 155.

[109] In re Lemmon & Gale Co., 112 Fed. 296, 50 C. C. A. 247, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

[110] Orinoco Iron Co. v. Metzel, 230 Fed. 40, 144 C. C. A. 338, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247; In re Barrow, 1 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,057; Zeigler v. Shomo, 78 Pa. 357; Hall v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 88 Neb. 20, 128 N. W. 645; In re Ross, 11 R. I. 427. A bankruptcy court having first acquired jurisdiction of the bankrupt's estate by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, such jurisdiction is exclusive of the right of a state court to entertain jurisdiction of an action in detinue by a claimant to recover property alleged to belong to the estate. Corbett v. Riddle, 209 Fed. 811, 126 C. C. A. 535, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330.

the bankruptcy court, the latter ought not to hesitate to assert its authority; for in this matter they are not independent, but the federal court is the superior.[111]

It does not appear that the mere filing of a petition in bankruptcy is sufficient to withdraw from creditors and from the process of the state courts all the administrable property of the debtor. The statute provides that the trustee shall be vested with title to the bankrupt's property "as of the date he was adjudged bankrupt." [112] It is therefore the adjudication, and not the filing of a petition, which places the property in the custody or constructive possession of the bankruptcy court, and prevents the state courts from interfering with it. Hence a writ of replevin, issued from a state court and executed after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, but before the federal court takes any action thereon, draws the property into the custody and control of the state court, which may proceed and determine the replevin suit free from the interference of the federal court.[113] But an adjudication of bankruptcy fixes the status of the bankrupt and brings both his person and his property under the jurisdiction and control of the bankruptcy court. Thereupon the property is to be considered as sequestrated and set apart for a specific purpose and a specific course of administration. "Such property is then brought into the bankruptcy court in its entirety and under its protection as fully as if actually brought into the visible presence of the court. No other court, and no person acting under process, can, without the permission of the bankruptcy court, interfere with it, and so to interfere is a contempt." [114] Even in the case of a third person who claims that particular items of property are his, and not the bankrupt's at all, a writ of replevin issuing from a state court is void process, and a seizure under it is unlawful and a contempt of the bankruptcy court, which has authority summarily to order the restoration of the property. These principles are fully and completely established by the authorities in cases where the property in question, at the time of its 111 In re Miller, 6 Biss. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 9,551.

112 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70. And it has been held that bankruptcy proceedings in which there has been no adjudication or appointment of a receiver do not deprive a state court of jurisdiction of a general creditors' bill. Morgan Bros. v. Dayton Coal & Iron Co., 134 Tenn. 228, 183 S. W. 1019, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 42.

113 In re Wells, 114 Fed. 222, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; McFarlan Carriage Co. v. Wells, 99 Mo. App. 641, 74 S. W. 878. But compare In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 781. See, also, Austin v. Hayden, 171 Mich. 38, 137 N. W. 317; Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. First State Bank of Channing (Tex. Civ. App.) 149 S. W. 779.

114 In re Cobb, 96 Fed. 821, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129. Property in the possession of the bankrupt's trustee cannot be taken on replevin without the consent of the bankruptcy court. In re Brockton Ideal Shoe Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 764, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377.

seizure, was in the actual or constructive possession of a receiver appointed by the bankruptcy court or of the trustee in bankruptcy.[115] And even in advance of the appointment of a receiver or trustee, if an adjudication has been made, and the court, through any of its officers, has made any motion towards taking possession of the property, its custody cannot rightfully be interfered with under color of process from any other court. This was ruled in a case where the referee, to whom the case had been referred after the adjudication, ordered the store which contained the bankrupt's stock of goods to be locked. It was considered that the property was then in the custody of the referee, as the representative of the court; and the action of a sheriff, armed with a writ of replevin from a state court, in breaking into the store and seizing the goods was held unlawful.[116]

Of course this does not mean that an adverse claimant in good faith must lose his property, or that he is without a remedy for its recovery. He has a simple and effective remedy by petition to the court of bankruptcy.[117] But it is to that court, and that alone, that he must apply. No state court can entertain his suit or petition. It has indeed been thought that such a claimant might maintain an action in a state court merely for the purpose of establishing his title to the property in question.[118] But its judgment could not be followed by any effective process; and even the right to maintain such an action is denied where its object (in addition to establishing title) is to restrain the trustee in bankruptcy from selling the property.[119] Thus, a state court may set aside a fraudulent conveyance in the trustee's suit therefor, but it cannot enter a personal judgment against the bankrupt, and it has no jurisdiction to order a sale of the property and an application of the proceeds on the bankrupt's debts.[120]

The rule is not restricted to actions of replevin, but applies equally to any proceeding or process from a state court which would involve

[115] White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 20 Sup. Ct. 1007, 44 L. Ed. 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; Murphy v. John Hofman Co., 211 U. S. 562, 29 Sup. Ct. 154, 53 L. Ed. 327, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. Ed. 749; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. Ed. 257; In re Endl, 99 Fed. 915, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 813; In re Cobb, 96 Fed. 821, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re Rosenberg, 3 Ben. 366, 3 N. B. R. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 12,055; Mishawaka Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Powell, 98 Mo. App. 530, 72 S. W. 723; John Hofman Co. v. Murphy, 116 N. Y. Supp. 506; Crosby v. Spear, 98 Me. 542, 57 Atl. 881, 99 Am. St. Rep. 424.

[116] White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 20 Sup. Ct. 1007, 44 L. Ed. 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

[117] Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

[118] Crosby v. Spear, 98 Me. 542, 57 Atl. 881, 99 Am. St. Rep. 424.

[119] Keegan v. King, 96 Fed. 758, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

[120] Douthat v. Roberts, 73 W. Va. 358, 80 S. E. 819.

taking property from the custody of the bankruptcy court or its officers, such as the writ of attachment,[121] or execution, although it is said that a mere threat by a judgment creditor of a bankrupt to levy execution on his property, pending the bankruptcy proceedings, does not constitute a contempt of the court of bankruptcy or its process, where there has been no actual levy made on such property, nor any interference with it by the creditor after the adjudication in bankruptcy.[122] Neither is the rule restricted to property in specie, but it extends also to the proceeds of its sale. Thus, dividends declared by a bankrupt's trustee, while still in his possession and unpaid to the claimants, are in the custody of the court, and cannot be reached by attachment, garnishment, or any other process from a state court.[123] So also as to the status of the bankrupt. After the institution of proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy against a corporation, the proceedings cannot be stayed or affected by a decree entered in a state court dissolving the corporation.[124]

On the other hand, the bankruptcy court will not attempt to seize property which was lawfully in the custody of a state court at the time of the adjudication.[125] But where property of a bankrupt is held adversely to his estate under a claim of seizure under process from a state court, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to inquire and determine, summarily, whether the adverse claim has an actual basis or is merely colorable; and if it decides that the seizure was effected by an abuse of process it has power to order the surrender of the property by the person in possession to its own receiver or the trustee in bankruptcy.[126] It is no objection to the exercise of jurisdiction by a court of bankruptcy over specific property that it is already in course of administration by a probate court of a state as in the case of a proceeding in bankruptcy against a firm where one of the partners is dead.[127] And where a debtor has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors and

[121] French v. White, 78 Vt. 89, 62 Atl. 35, 2 L. R. A. (N. S.) 804, 6 Ann. Cas. 479.

[122] In re McBryde, 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

[123] In re Argonaut Shoe Co., 187 Fed. 784, 109 C. C. A. 632, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584; Gilbert v. Quimby, 1 Fed. 111; Cowart v. W. E. Caldwell Co., 134 Ga. 544, 68 S. E. 500, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 720.

[124] In re White Mountain Paper Co., 127 Fed. 180, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491. The institution by a stockholder of a corporation of a suit for its dissolution in a state court does not deprive other stockholders of the right to institute proceedings in bankruptcy. In re Dressler Producing Corporation (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 257, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

[125] In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 1016, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; S. Bartolotta & Co. v. Their Creditors, 144 La. 919, 81 South. 399.

[126] In re Weinger, Bergman & Co. (D. C.) 126 Fed. 875.

[127] In re Pierce (D. C.) 102 Fed. 977, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489; E. R. Hawkins & Co. v. Quinette, 156 Mo. App. 153, 136 S. W. 246.

the assignee is proceeding under the orders or directions of a state court and the debtor is thereupon adjudged bankrupt, the assignee cannot retain the property and its custody, but must surrender the same to the trustee in bankruptcy on the order of the court of bankruptcy. This, it is said, is not a case of concurrent jurisdiction, where that court which first obtains possession of the estate is entitled to continue in its administration, but the jurisdiction of the federal court in bankruptcy is paramount to that of the state court and is exclusive.[128] And the jurisdiction of the state court over the property of an insolvent corporation, assumed in a creditors' suit more than four months before the petition in bankruptcy does not deprive the bankruptcy court of jurisdiction on a petition filed within four months after the commission of the act of bankruptcy relied on.[129]

But a judgment of a state court of competent jurisdiction, regular and valid on its face, must be accorded full faith and credit, and cannot be assailed in the bankruptcy court, but the trustee and creditors must resort to the state court to test its validity.[130] Thus, the validity of a decree of a state court, rendered in a suit by judgment creditors against their debtor and his assignee, setting aside the assignment as fraudulent and void, establishing the liens of the plaintiffs on the property, and ordering its sale, cannot be impeached by the debtor's trustee in bankruptcy, in a proceeding in the court of bankruptcy to obtain possession of the property and have it sold by the trustee, on the ground of fraud and collusion between the parties to the suit in the state court, at least where the trustee had opportunity to intervene in that suit and there allege such fraud.[131] Where particular property of a bankrupt is covered by a lien, not fraudulent or preferential, but valid and enforceable notwithstanding his bankruptcy, a state court has concurrent jurisdiction with the bankruptcy court to foreclose the lien and satisfy the debt. The trustee in bankruptcy may indeed elect and claim the right to sell the property, for the sake of saving for general creditors whatever may remain out of its proceeds after satisfying the lien claimant. But if he does not take this course, he is considered as abandoning the property to the lienor, and there is then nothing to prevent a [128] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; In re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782; In re Smith, 92 Fed. 135, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9. And see infra, Ch. XXI.

[129] Graham Mfg. Co. v. Davy-Pocahontas Coal Co., 238 Fed. 488, 151 C. C. A. 424, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[130] In re Burns, 1 N. B. R. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 2,182; In re Lodi Land & Lumber Co., 5 Sawy. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 8,461.

[131] Frazier v. Southern Loan & Trust Co., 99 Fed. 707, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710.

state court from entertaining a foreclosure suit or other proper proceeding.[132]

§ 27. Same; Effect of Appointment of Receiver by State Court. —It is a well-settled general rule that, when property is seized and held under mesne or final process of either a state court or a court of the United States, it is in the custody of the law and within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court from which the process has issued, for the purposes of the writ, and the possession of the officer having it in custody cannot be disturbed by another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, or its officers, by attachment, levy of execution, replevin, or otherwise; and also that, as between a federal and a state court, when the one court has appointed a receiver of property and he has taken possession, the other court will not interfere with his custody and control of the property, by the appointment of another receiver or otherwise.[133] But difficulty arises in the application of these rules when the contest for the possession of property is between a trustee in bankruptcy and a receiver appointed by a state court. In the first place, it is settled that although an insolvent corporation may be in the hands of a receiver appointed by a state court, or although such a court may have appointed a receiver to wind up the affairs of a partnership, or to foreclose a mortgage, this fact will not deprive the federal court of jurisdiction of proceedings in bankruptcy against the corporation or persons concerned, for any other rule would entirely defeat the operation of the bankruptcy act.[134] And indeed, since the amendment of [132] In re Zehner, 193 Fed. 787, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; In re Pennell, 159 Fed. 500, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 909; In re Vogt, 163 Fed. 551, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457; In re Kavanaugh, 99 Fed. 928, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832. Proceedings in bankruptcy against a tenant are not a bar to an action in a state court by the landlord against one who purchased property of the tenant upon which the landlord had a landlord's lien. Boles v. Missouri Valley Elevator Co., 183 Iowa, 517, 166 N. W. 1057.

[133] Wallace v. McConnell, 13 Pet. 136, 10 L. Ed. 95; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. Ed. 1028; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 4 Sup. Ct. 355, 28 L. Ed. 390; Peale v. Phipps, 14 How. 368, 14 L. Ed. 459; Porter v. Sabin, 149 U. S. 473, 13 Sup. Ct. 1008, 37 L. Ed. 815; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 15 Sup. Ct. 570, 39 L. Ed. 660.

[134] In re Grafton Gas & Electric Light Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 668, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567; In re Yaryan Naval Stores Co., 214 Fed. 563, 131 C. C. A. 15, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269; Bank of Andrews v. Gudger, 212 Fed. 49, 128 C. C. A. 505, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11; In re McKinnon Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 869, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727; Lea v. George M. West Co., 91 Fed. 237, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261; In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240; In re Sterlingworth Ry. Supply Co., 164 Fed. 591, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341; Scheuer v. Smith & Montgomery Book & Stationery Co., 112 Fed. 407, 50 C. C. A. 312, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Kersten, 110 Fed. 929, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 516; In re Green Pond R. Co., 13 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 5,786; In re Safe Deposit & Sav. Inst., 7 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 12,211; In re Washington Marine Ins. Co., 2 Ben. 292, Fed. Cas. No. 17,246; In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, Fed.

1903, the very fact of the appointment of a receiver "because of insolvency" is an act of bankruptcy and the starting point for the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[135] Even though the state court should thus have acquired possession of all the assets which would be administrable in bankruptcy, still it cannot be said that an adjudication in bankruptcy would be futile and unnecessary. On this point it has been said: "In opposition to the adjudication, it has been very vigorously insisted in this court that the adjudication in bankruptcy should not be rendered because the state chancery court, through its receiver and under the judgment of dissolution, has taken possession of all the property of the corporation, and that by reason of the comity which does and ought to prevail between courts of the states and courts of the United States, the adjudication in bankruptcy can result in no administration or other beneficial effect. For the purposes of this case we may concur with the learned counsel in his views on this matter of comity, but we are of opinion, notwithstanding, that the petitioning creditors have the right to have their insolvent debtor adjudged a bankrupt, if for no other reason, still for the purpose of insisting upon the application of the provisions of the bankruptcy law annulling preferences in certain cases." [136]

It is clear, therefore, that there is nothing in the situation supposed which should prevent the making of an adjudication of bankruptcy. If an undoubted act of bankruptcy is made out, and a petition is filed by a sufficient number of creditors having the requisite amount of provable claims, it is their right to have the relief demanded. But if the case is doubtful, and specially if the commission of an act of bankruptcy can be made out only by implication or by straining the construction of the statute, the fact of an existing receivership in a state court, which promises to work out all the equities in the case and result in benefit to the creditors may well incline the federal court to refrain from taking jurisdiction. This was the ground of the decision in a notable case in New York, where an insolvent corporation, engaged in the publishing business, had applied to a state court for a decree for its dissolution and the settlement of its affairs, and thereupon a receiver was appointed

Cas. No. 9,441; In re National Life Ins. Co., 6 Biss. 25, Fed. Cas. No. 10,046; In re Noonan, 3 Biss. 491, 10 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 10,292; In re Hathorn, 2 Woods, 73, Fed. Cas. No. 6,214; Doyle-Kidd Dry Goods Co. v. Sadler-Lusk Trading Co., 206 Fed. 813, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[135] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a, as amended by Act Cong. February 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[136] Scheuer v. Smith & Montgomery Book & Stationery Co., 112 Fed. 407, 50 C. C. A. 312, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Maplecroft Mills (D. C.) 218 Fed. 659, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

who took charge of the assets and entered upon the discharge of his duties. Ninety per cent. of the creditors, representing more than three million dollars, approved of the proceedings as the best possible course for the benefit of the creditors in general. The interests involved were very large and the administration of the property required exceptional care and competency. No actual fraud was shown, and the federal court entertained serious doubts as to whether the act of the corporation constituted an act of bankruptcy under the law as it then stood. For these reasons an adjudication of bankruptcy was refused.[137] It should also be remarked that if the appointment of a receiver by the court of bankruptcy is asked for, to be made at the same time with the adjudication, and the property is already in the possession of a receiver of a state court, notice of the application should be given to the latter.[138]

In the next place, the authorities sustain the doctrine that a court of bankruptcy is not prevented from taking jurisdiction of a petition against a debtor, and taking possession of his estate for the purpose of administration in bankruptcy, by the mere fact that proceedings are already pending in a state court, in which a receiver has been asked for, if no appointment has yet been made, nor even by the appointment of a receiver by the state court, if he has not reduced the property in question to his possession nor taken any steps to do so.[139] But the crucial question arises when a state court has appointed a receiver,—whether in proceedings supplementary to execution, or on a creditor's bill, or in a partnership or corporation case, or otherwise,—and he has obtained actual possession of the property committed to his charge, and thereafter the debtor is adjudged bankrupt, and a trustee in bank-

[137] In re Harper & Brothers, 100 Fed. 266, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804. And see, as a somewhat similar case, In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191.

[138] Sidney L. Bauman Diamond Co. v. Hart, 192 Fed. 498, 113 C. C. A. 104, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

[139] Brown v. Crawford (D. C.) 254 Fed. 146, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Bruss-Ritter Co., 90 Fed. 651, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58; In re Nolan, 8 Ben. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 10,289. Where creditors have brought suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance of property, and procured the appointment of a receiver, who has obtained possession of the property in question, but in the meantime the fraudulent grantee has voluntarily restored the title to the grantor, and the latter is afterwards adjudicated a bankrupt, the possession and administration of the property belongs to the court of bankruptcy, and the receiver cannot retain the custody thereof as against that court. In re Brown, 91 Fed. 358, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107. A decree of bankruptcy overrides all rights sought to be acquired by the appointment of a receiver in a state court after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Smith v. Buchanan, 8 Blatchf. 153, 4 N. B. R. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 13,016. But contrary to the rule stated in the text, see Frazier v. Southern Loan & Trust Co., 99 Fed. 707, 40 C. C. A. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710, where it was held that the order of the state court appointing a receiver brought the property within the custody and control of that court.

ruptcy or a receiver appointed. Is it within the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to order the state court receiver to surrender the property in his hands to such trustee or receiver in bankruptcy? Very few cases have answered this question in the affirmative.[140] Certain other decisions have maintained that where the very act of bankruptcy alleged is the appointment of a receiver by the state court, on the debtor's own application or "because of his insolvency," under the bankruptcy act as amended in 1903, the federal court should not be deterred from requiring the surrender of the entire estate by the receiver of the state court, since otherwise the purpose of Congress in adding the new act of bankruptcy to the existing list would be automatically defeated; that is, the appointment of a receiver would constitute an act of bankruptcy, but would at the same time prevent a court of bankruptcy from taking jurisdiction and administering the estate.[141] But aside from these cases, it may be considered as definitely settled, by a great preponderance of authority, that where property of an estate in bankruptcy is in the actual custody and control of a state court of competent jurisdiction, through its receiver, its possession of the property will not be interfered with, nor its disposition of the same restrained, by any process from the court of bankruptcy.[142] Further, if property has been [140] In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268. In re J. W. Zeigler Co., 189 Fed. 259, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; In re Lengert Wagon Co., 110 Fed. 927, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; In re Whipple, 6 Biss. 516, 13 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 17,512; Lea v. George M. West Co., 91 Fed. 237, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261. In the case last cited it was held that, where a corporation has made a general assignment for the benefit of its creditors, and a state court, on a bill in equity, has appointed the assignee as receiver to take charge of the assigned estate and wind up the affairs of the assignor, and the corporation is afterwards adjudged bankrupt, jurisdiction to administer and distribute the entire estate belongs to the court of bankruptcy, to the exclusion of the state court, and the former court may enjoin all parties from further proceedings in the latter court. But this decision was based expressly on the ground that the assignment was an act of bankruptcy by the statute, and that the purpose of the bankruptcy law would be defeated if the assignment, the basis of the receiver's title, were allowed to stand.

[141] Pugh v. Loisel, 219 Fed. 417, 135 C. C. A. 221, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580. In re Knight, 125 Fed. 35, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Hooks v. Aldridge, 145 Fed. 865, 76 C. C. A. 409, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658. In the latter case, while the authority of the bankruptcy court in such a situation was strongly maintained, the court found it unnecessary to make a ruling as to the propriety of imperatively commanding the surrender of the property by the receiver appointed by the state court, as the trustee and the receiver had mutually agreed to abide the decision, as to who was entitled to the possession, and both courts had approved their agreement.

[142] In re Williams (D. C.) 240 Fed. 788, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762. In re Kavanaugh, 99 Fed. 928, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Heckman, 140 Fed. 859, 72 C. C. A. 8, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; In re Bay City Irr. Co., 135 Fed. 850, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370; Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Price, 92 Fed. 987, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606; Alden unlawfully taken from the custody of the receiver, the court of bankruptcy will not summarily order its sale by the trustee against the protest of the receiver,[143] and it has even been held that, if such a sale has been made, it will be set aside, at least as against one having notice of the illegality, and the purchase money ordered refunded.[144]

It is evident, therefore, that if the court of bankruptcy cannot aid the trustee, when he finds the assets in the possession of a receiver, his claims must be made in the state court which appointed the receiver. It is clearly open to the trustee to file his petition in the state court and ask for an order requiring the receiver to surrender to him the property in his possession,[145] and this course is approved by the authorities. But the course which the state court will take is by no means certain. So far as can be judged from the earlier cases, the state courts were disposed to regard applications of this kind with extreme disfavor, and invariably refused them.[146] More recent cases, however, show a strong tendency to recognize the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court as paramount, although, as a rule, they hold only that the state court "should" direct its receiver to yield up the property to the trustee in bankruptcy, or that it "may" do so, or that "it is not error" for the court to make such an order.[147] But if the trustee has a legal right to

v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 5 N. B. R. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 152; Goodrich v. Remington, 6 Blatchf. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 5,546; Bradley v. Healey, Holmes, 451, Fed. Cas. No. 1,781; In re Clark, 4 Ben. 88, 3 N. B. R. 491, Fed. Cas. No. 2,798; Davis v. Railroad Co., 1 Woods, 661, 13 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 3,648; Sedgwick v. Menck, 6 Blatchf, 156, 1 N. B. R. 675, Fed. Cas. No. 12,616; Appleton v. Bowles, 2 Thomp. & C. 568, 9 N. B. R. 354.

[143] Frazier v. Southern Loan & Trust Co., 99 Fed. 707, 40 C. C. A. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710; In re Hulst, 7 Ben. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 6,863. But see Union Electric Co. v. Hubbard, 242 Fed. 248, 155 C. C. A. 88, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

[144] Davis v. Railroad Co., 1 Woods, 661, 13 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 3,648.

[145] In re Price, 92 Fed. 987, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606; In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; McGahee v. Cruickshank, 133 Ga. 649, 66 S. E. 776; Ex parte Waddell, Fed. Cas. No. 17,027; Loudon v. Blandford, 56 Ga. 150. But compare Southwell v. Church, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 111 S. W. 969.

[146] State v. Superior Court of King County, 28 Wash. 35, 68 Pac. 170, 92 Am. St. Rep. 826; Porter v. Cummings, 108 Ga. 797, 33 S. E. 986; Myer v. Crystal Lake Pickling Works, 14 N. B. R. 9 (decision by an inferior court in Illinois); Freeman v. Fort, 52 Ga. 371, 14 N. B. R. 46; Watson v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 5 S. C. 159, 9 N. B. R. 458. And see Carr v. Hardeman & Phinizy, 144 Ga. 54, 86 S. E. 215; State v. Sage, 267 Mo. 493, 184 S. W. 984; Lambert v. National Hog Co., 263 Pa. 354, 106 Atl. 541.

[147] Hanson v. Stephens, 116 Ga. 722, 42 S. E. 1028; McGahee v. Cruickshank, 133 Ga. 649, 66 S. E. 776; Davis v. Coe, 19 Ohio Cir. Ct. R. 639; I. Trager Co. v. Cavaroc Co., 123 La. 319, 48 South. 949; First Nat. Bank v. Zangwill, 61 Fla. 596, 54 South. 375; Bloch v. Bloch, 42 Misc. Rep. 278, 86 N. Y. Supp. 1047; Gay v. Ray, 195 Mass. 8, 80 N. E. 693; Mauran v. Crown Carpet Lining Co., 23 R. I. 324, 50 Atl. 331. And see Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Tex. Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 791; Lambert v. National Hog Co., 72 Pa. Super. Ct. 378. But an order by the state court for the delivery, to the receiver in bankruptcy of the defendant corporation, of possession of land, the title to which was in the property (as, where the title of the receiver is impeachable under the bankruptcy act) and this right is not regarded by the state court, he has a remedy by carrying the case to the highest court of the state, and thence to the Supreme Court of the United States.[148]

On the other hand, resistance by the state court and its officers to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy may sometimes be proper. Thus, the state court may make an order directing its receiver to appear in the bankruptcy proceedings and oppose the adjudication of the defendant, and this is not a surrender by the state court to the bankruptcy court of its jurisdiction of the property.[149] So, where the officers and directors of a corporation filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy for it, but this was in violation of the orders of a state court which had already appointed a receiver, but the referee in bankruptcy appointed a receiver on the petition, it was held that the receiver of the state court should be directed to apply to the judge of the federal court to vacate the order appointing the receiver.[150] And so, where a receiver appointed by a state court has voluntarily surrendered property to the receiver in bankruptcy, either through a mistake as to his rights in the matter or in pursuance of an order of the court which appointed him, but which order is afterwards revoked or overruled, he may be directed to apply to the bankruptcy court for restoration of the property,[151] though it seems that such an application may properly be denied by the court of bankruptcy.[152]

If the state court decides to yield to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy and surrender the assets, its course is then to settle its receiver's accounts, order the transfer of the assets, and close its connection with the matter.[153] But there is an unsettled question as to the payment of the receiver's compensation and the other expenses. Some of the decisions maintain that it is in the rightful authority of the state court to deduct from the assets to be surrendered a sum sufficient to cover the commissions or fees of its receiver and the other expenses issue in an insolvency action brought against the corporation in the state court by creditors, was held error, though an order for the delivery to the receiver of all assets clearly belonging to the bankrupt and not in controversy, would have been proper. Harris v. Luxury Fruit Co., 142 Ga. 67, 82 S. E. 447.

148 Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, 8 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 7,373.

149 Blair v. Brailey, 221 Fed. 1, 136 C. C. A. 524, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

150 Cavagnaro v. Indian Tire & Rubber Co., 90 N. J. Eq. 532, 107 Atl. 643. And see Zeitinger v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 Fed. 719, 157 C. C. A. 167, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

151 Luxury Fruit Co. v. Harris, 142 Ga. 866, 83 S. E. 1093.

152 Dure v. Wright, 228 Fed. 1021, 142 C. C. A. 654.

153 Loveless v. Southern Grocer Co., 159 Fed. 415, 86 C. C. A. 395, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re Board of Directors of Suburban Const. Co. (Sup.) 143 N. Y. Supp. 363.

of the proceeding before it.[154] Other cases are to the effect that such an order by the state court is coram non judice and void, and that the receiver must apply to the court of bankruptcy for an allowance for his fees, as that court alone has authority to dispose of the assets and no other court can incumber them with charges or expenses.[155]

Upon the whole matter, therefore, the course most generally approved by the authorities, and most likely to avoid an unseemly conflict between the courts of the two systems, is for the trustee in bankruptcy (or the receiver of the federal court), acting under the instructions of the court, to make a suitable application to the state court for the surrender to him of the assets of the bankrupt's estate, and pending such application, the court of bankruptcy may enjoin the receiver appointed by the state court from disposing of the property otherwise.[156] In one of the cases, where this course was taken, the bankruptcy court, speaking of its own receiver, said: "This officer will be directed to apply in terms of suitable respect to [the judge of the state court] and seek at his hands an order directing the receiver of the state court to turn over to the receiver of this court the assets of the alleged bankrupt in his hands. The time at which this application should be made will also be directed by order." [157]

But if the state court refuses to recognize the superior jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and refuses the trustee's or receiver's application for surrender of the assets, the federal court will not seek to compel it nor enter upon an unseemly scramble for the assets. Though the jurisdiction of the two courts in such cases is not concurrent, but that of the bankruptcy court is paramount, yet the proper principles of comity are not to be disregarded.[158] "It is said that, under the rules of comity, the possession of the property by the state court should not [154] Shannon v. Shepard Mfg. Co., 230 Mass. 224, 119 N. E. 768; Wilson v. Parr, 115 Ga. 629, 42 S. E. 5; McGahee v. Cruickshank, 133 Ga. 649, 66 S. E. 776; State v. German Exchange Bank, 114 Wis. 436, 90 N. W. 570.

[155] In re Standard Fuller's Earth Co., 186 Fed. 578, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562; In re Rogers, 116 Fed. 435, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; Bloch v. Bloch, 42 Misc. Rep. 278, 86 N. Y. Supp. 1047; Hanson v. Stephens, 116 Ga. 722, 42 S. E. 1028. Receiver of the property of a corporation, who was supplanted by a trustee in bankruptcy, cannot properly pay claims for wages incurred by the company before the receivership, no sale of corporate property having taken place. Appeal of Pramuk, 250 Pa. 45, 95 Atl. 326.

[156] In re Lengert Wagon Co., 110 Fed. 927, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; Ross-Meeham Foundry Co. v. Southern Car & Foundry Co., 124 Fed. 403, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; In re Electric Supply Co., 175 Fed. 612, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647; In re Price, 92 Fed. 987, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606; In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[157] In re Electric Supply Co., 175 Fed. 612, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647.

[158] In re Watts, 190 U. S. 1, 23 Sup. Ct. 718, 47 L. Ed. 933, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113.

be interfered with without its consent; that the decision of the state court not to surrender the property is controlling till it is reversed; that parties objecting to it should reserve the federal question, and obtain relief by appeal or writ of error, and finally by application to the United States Supreme Court if necessary. * * * At a proper time the federal courts, of course, may decree the enforcement of the supremacy of the constitution and laws of the United States. * * * But it is, without doubt, the duty of both the state and federal courts to exercise the greatest caution to avoid this necessity where it is possible. The orders of the state court and of the federal court in this case are in conflict, and if each court was attempting to enforce its own order as to the possession of the property, it would lead to a resort to physical force on the part of the executive officers of the respective courts." [159]

[159] Hooks v. Aldridge, 145 Fed. 865, 76 C. C. A. 409, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658. The application of the various principles discussed in this section is well illustrated by the history of the litigation over the estate of the firm of Clark & Bininger in the federal and state courts in New York. This firm became insolvent and was dissolved, and one of the partners sued the other in a state court for an accounting and for the appointment of a receiver. The state court appointed a receiver who took possession. Pending this action, the firm was adjudged bankrupt, and the marshal was ordered to take the property, but the receiver refused to deliver it. The court of bankruptcy then held that the bankrupt's rights of action in suits pending in state courts vested in his assignee, and it ordered the bankrupt plaintiff to execute proper instruments to enable the assignee to represent him in his action in the state court, and enjoined further proceedings in respect thereof without its leave. But the assignee's prayer that the receiver be ordered to surrender the property was postponed, because, as the court said, "it is quite probable that, if the assignee be substituted as plaintiff in the action, it may be desirable that the possession of the receiver should not be disturbed until such substitution shall take place." In re Clark, 4 Ben. 88, 3 N. B. R. 491, Fed. Cas. No. 2,798. Meanwhile a motion was made in the state court to punish the assignee in bankruptcy for contempt in attempting to disturb the possession of the receiver appointed by the court. This motion was granted, and a nominal punishment inflicted. In deciding the question, the superior court of New York laid down the principle that where a state court, on a bill by one partner against another for a dissolution of the firm and the winding up of the partnership business, has appointed a receiver, who has taken possession of the partnership property, and the firm is afterwards adjudged bankrupt, the assignee has no right to the assets as against the receiver, and the federal court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the state court in its administration of the property, nor to oust the latter court of its jurisdiction to proceed with the case. Clark v. Binninger, 38 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 341, 3 N. B. R. 518. The assignee then applied to the state court to be substituted for the bankrupt partner in the pending suit. But before he had obtained a decision on this application, he came again into the federal court and renewed his application for an order commanding the marshal to take from the receiver the possession of the partnership property, and for an injunction forbidding the receiver to interfere further therewith. This application was now denied by the bankruptcy court. After pointing out that the jurisdiction of the state court in the case pending before it was not questioned, and that the transfer to its receiver was not impeached as fraudulent or as a preference, or otherwise as being in violation of the bankruptcy law, Judge Blatchford said: "When property is lawfully placed in

In this emergency, the approved course is for the trustee in bankruptcy to apply, by petition filed in the state court, for leave to intervene in the action there pending, in order that he may assert and protect the interests of the general creditors of the estate, and ask that the administration proceed in accordance with the provisions of the bankruptcy law, for the benefit of the creditors, as, by avoiding preferences, and the like.[160] This does not involve a dissolution of the receivership, but enables the trustee, as the representative of creditors, to secure their just rights in the working out of the estate through the receivership. To enable the trustee thus to intervene in the state court, the court of bankruptcy may temporarily order a stay of proceedings, or the custody of a receiver, by the court which appoints such receiver, it is in the custody and under the protection and control of such court for the time being, and no other court has a right to interfere with such possession, unless it be some court which has a direct supervisory control over the court whose process has first taken possession, or some superior jurisdiction in the premises." Citing Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. Ed. 841; Williams v. Benedict, 8 How. 107, 12 L. Ed. 1007; Wiswall v. Sampson, 14 How. 52, 14 L. Ed. 322; Peale v. Phipps, 14 How. 368, 14 L. Ed. 459; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. Ed. 1028; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. Ed. 749; Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. Ed. 257. The court continued: "In the present posture of this case, it does not appear that this court has such superior jurisdiction in the premises, or such supervisory control over the state court in respect to the property in question, as to authorize it to take away from the state court the possession of such property, or to enjoin the receiver from further interfering with such property. This court will always be sedulous to enforce its just powers, but it will not demand from any other tribunal anything which it would not itself be willing to concede under like circumstances. In the case referred to, In re Vogel, 2 N. B. R. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 16,983, it compelled the restitution to an assignee in bankruptcy of property which had been taken away by process of a state court from the custody of this court, and its decision was affirmed by the circuit court on review. The principle on which such restitution was enforced would authorize the state court, in the present case, to compel restitution to its receivers of such property as this court should take away by force from the custody of such state court, and this court might then retaliate, and the confusion and endless strife would ensue which are so forcibly characterized by the supreme court in the opinion delivered in the case of Buck v. Colbath, before cited." In re Clark, 4 Ben. 88, 3 N. B. R. 524, Fed. Cas. No. 2,798. The final decision of the state court on the questions involved was that the assignee in bankruptcy might take upon himself the conduct of the action pending in the state court between the bankrupt and his partner, and might continue the prosecution of the same, and might, from time to time, as he should be advised, make such applications to the state court in such action as should be necessary for its determination. To this extent only the assignee would be deemed substituted in the place of the bankrupt. But it was firmly held that the assignee had no power to take possession of the property held by the receiver under the authority of the state court, and that if he attempted it he would be deemed in contempt. But after the termination of the proceedings there the state court would direct that any balance in the hands of the receiver should be paid over to the assignee. Clark v. Binninger, 39 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 363.

[160] Scheuer v. Smith & Montgomery Book & Stationery Co., 112 Fed. 407, 50 C. C. A. 312, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Klein, 97 Fed. 31, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

restrain all parties, for a reasonable length of time, from the further prosecution of the action in the state court.[161] Finally it is to be observed that a trustee in bankruptcy of a bankrupt whose property has been seized under a mortgage and is in possession of a receiver appointed in the mortgage foreclosure suit by a state court of competent jurisdiction, is entitled to the possession of any property not covered by the mortgage, and also to the excess of the proceeds of a sale of the mortgaged property over the mortgage debt and costs of foreclosure.[162]

When the trustee in bankruptcy recovers or receives the property from the hands of the state court's receiver, he cannot be prejudiced by anything the latter may have done in regard to it. Thus, the trustee is not bound by the receiver's repudiation of a lease entered into by the bankrupt corporation.[163]

§ 28. Same; Property in Possession of Sheriff.—Property in the hands of a sheriff under execution or attachment from a state court levied before the proceedings in bankruptcy were commenced cannot be taken out of the possession of the sheriff by the federal court at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy. In such a case the possession of the sheriff is the possession of the court of which he is the officer, and while his possession as such officer continues, no other court can interfere with it.[164] But it must be understood that this rule, and the cases cited in support of it, apply only where the trustee seeks to impeach the validity of the levy on the ground of fraud or as a preference. If the case is one in which the lien is dissolved by mere force of the adjudication in bankruptcy, as provided by § 67f of the Bankruptcy Act, the situation is different. Here it cannot be said that the sheriff continues to hold possession under his writ, because the writ is abated, and the lien extinguished, by the adjudication in bankruptcy. Consequently the officer no longer holds the property in the character of an officer of the state court, but as a mere temporary custodian, and there is no longer any reason, founded on judicial comity or the rights of an inde-

[161] In re Klein, 97 Fed. 31, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

[162] Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[163] In re Mullings Clothing Co., 238 Fed. 58, 151 C. C. A. 134, L. R. A. 1918A, 539, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189.

[164] Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 551, 21 L. Ed. 481; Townsend v. Leonard, 3 Dill. 370, Fed. Cas. No. 14,117; Goddard v. Weaver, 1 Woods, 257, 6 N. B. R. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 5,495; In re Shuey, 9 N. B. R. 526, Fed. Cas. No. 12,821; Mollison v. Eaton, 16 Minn. 426 (Gil. 383), 10 Am. Rep. 150; State v. Taylor, 3 Mo. App. 351. Some cases go so far as to hold that this rule should apply even where the lien is dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy. See Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, 8 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 7,373. But compare the cases cited in the next note.

pendent tribunal, why he should not be required, like any other custodian, to surrender it to the person having a paramount right to it. Therefore, if an action is begun in a state court and a writ issued and levied on property of an insolvent debtor, within four months before the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy against him, the trustee is entitled to recover possession of such property from the sheriff holding the same under the levy; and the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to order the surrender of the property on a petition by the trustee.[165] But the section above referred to applies only to goods which are actually the property of the bankrupt. It does not profess to vest in the trustee title to any property which was in the hands of the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication, but to which a third person had a paramount right, as, for instance, property sold to the bankrupt under an uncompleted conditional sale reserving title in the vendor, or property which the bankrupt had procured by fraud and false representations. Hence if the claimant of such property has procured its seizure on a writ of replevin or in an action of claim and delivery, and it remains in the hands of the sheriff, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to compel him, by a summary order, to deliver it to a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy.[166]

The same principles apply where the sheriff has sold the property under his writ, but still has the proceeds in hand at the time the trustee in bankruptcy demands them. Although the Bankruptcy Act (§ 67f) provides that the title of a bona fide purchaser at the sheriff's sale, without notice, shall not be impaired or destroyed, this does not affect the disposition of the money paid by him and remaining in the hands of the officer; and it is held that this fund does not belong to the creditor suing out the writ, if the lien was dissolved by the adjudication in bankruptcy, but to the estate of the bankrupt, and may be recovered by the trustee.[167] There is, however, some difference of opinion as to [165] In re Francis-Valentine Co., 94 Fed. 793, 36 C. C. A. 499, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Richards, 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Francis-Valentine Co., 93 Fed. 953, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188; In re Schnepf, 2 Ben. 72, 1 N. B. R. 190, Fed. Cas. No. 12,471; Goodnough Mercantile Co. v. Galloway, 48 Or. 239, 84 Pac. 1049; Lindner v. Brock, 40 Mich. 618. Where a sheriff levied a distress warrant and took possession of goods, and with consent of plaintiff's attorney delivered them to the receiver of the defendant bankrupt, who had been directed to take possession, the receiver will not be ordered to restore the possession to the sheriff. Covington v. Barber, 147 Ga. 804, 95 S. E. 705.

[166] In re L. Rudnick & Co., 160 Fed. 903, 88 C. C. A. 85, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33; Rock Island Plow Co. v. Western Implement Co., 21 N. D. 608, 132 N. W. 351.

[167] In re Kenney, 95 Fed. 427, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494, same case on rehearing, 97 Fed. 554, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353; In re Richards, 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Franks, 95 Fed. 635, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634.

the method in which the trustee should proceed to claim the fund. Certain cases hold that if the sale was made before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, the proceeds, remaining in the hands of the sheriff, are beyond the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, and that it has no power to enjoin him from paying over the fund to the creditor; also that the sheriff cannot be ordered to pay over the money to the trustee on a summary petition in the court of bankruptcy, but that the trustee must apply for such an order to the state court from which the writ issued, and if refused there, his remedy is to sue the sheriff for money had and received.[168] But these decisions are contrary to the weight of authority. The majority of the cases hold that, since the officer holds the proceeds of a sale merely in the place of the goods sold, and holds either the goods or the money as a mere custodian for the bankrupt, to whose estate they belong, and not by an independent and adverse title, there is no necessity for resorting to plenary proceedings for their recovery, but the same may be ordered by the court of bankruptcy upon the summary petition of the trustee.[169]

The pendency of proceedings in bankruptcy, unknown to any of the parties concerned or to the court, does not prevent a territorial court having the custody of perishable property through its receiver appointed under an attachment levied before the petition in bankruptcy was filed, from ordering a sale thereof, on finding that (in the words of the local statute) "the interests of both plaintiff and defendant will be promoted by the sale," but such sale is valid and the claim of the trustee in bankruptcy is transferred to the proceeds.[170]

§ 29. Power to Enjoin Proceedings in State Courts.—The federal statutes provide that "the writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy."[171] The present bankruptcy act directs that "a suit which is founded upon a claim from which a discharge would be a release, and which is pending against a person at the time of the filing of a petition against him, shall be stayed until after an adjudication or the dismissal of the petition; if such person is adjudged a bankrupt, such action may be further stayed until twelve [168] In re Easley, 93 Fed. 419, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Franks, 95 Fed. 635, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634; People v. Brennan, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 666, 12 N. B. R. 567.

[169] In re Kenney, 97 Fed. 554, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Francis-Valentine Co., 94 Fed. 793, 36 C. C. A. 499, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; Mills v. Davis, 3 Jones & S. (N. Y.) 355.

[170] Jones v. Springer, 226 U. S. 148, 33 Sup. Ct. 64, 57 L. Ed. 161, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204.

[171] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 720; Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 265.

months after the date of such adjudication, or if, within that time, such person applies for a discharge, then until the question of such discharge is determined." [172] Moreover, the courts of bankruptcy are authorized to "make such orders, issue such process, and enter such judgments, in addition to those specifically provided for, as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this act." [173] These statutory provisions amply support the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to stay or suspend all proceedings in the state courts, founded on claims of the character mentioned (or, without reference to the nature of the claim, where the object of the proceeding is to withdraw from the custody and administration of the bankruptcy court any part of the assets of the bankrupt), either then pending or thereafter commenced by any creditor or any person having an adverse interest, to enforce his rights, or to obtain redress against the bankrupt or his assets after the bankruptcy,—not, indeed, by acting on the courts, over which it possesses no authority, but by acting on the parties through the instrumentality of an injunction or restraining order, upon due application made by the bankrupt or his trustee, and a proper case being laid before the court for such interference.[174] Thus, for instance, where proceedings supplementary to execution against the bankrupt, in a state court, begun within four months before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, are pending at the time of the adjudication therein, the court of bankruptcy will, by injunction, stay all further proceedings in the action in the state court.[175]

A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to stay the prosecution of an action against the bankrupt in a state court, on a debt from which his discharge would be a release, pending the determination of the question of his discharge, although the action was begun after the filing of the petition. Although the act of Congress explicitly authorizes such a stay only in cases where the action is "pending at the time of the filing

[172] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11.

[173] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 15.

[174] Ex parte Christy, 3 How. 292, 11 L. Ed. 603; Roger v. J. B. Levert Co., 237 Fed. 737, 150 C. C. A. 491; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Penny v. Taylor, 10 N. B. R. 200, Fed. Cas. No. 10,957; In re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, 6 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991; Platt v. Archer, 9 Blatchf. 559, 6 N. B. R. 465, Fed. Cas. No. 11,213; In re Schwartz, 14 Fed. 787; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Kimball, 97 Fed. 29, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re Kletchka, 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 479; In re Jackson, 9 Fed. 493; In re Lady Bryan Min. Co., 6 N. B. R. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 7,980; In re Atkinson, 3 Pittsb. 423, 7 N. B. R. 143, Fed. Cas. No. 606; In re Citizens' Sav. Bank, 9 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 2,735; In re Duryea, 17 N. B. R. 495, Fed. Cas. No. 4,196; Samson v. Burton, 5 Ben. 343, 5 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 12,286; Fowler v. Dillon, 1 Hughes, 232, 12 N. B. R. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 5,000; Morehouse v. Giant Powder Co., 206 Fed. 24.

[175] In re Kletchka, 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 479; In re Cefola (D. C.) 222 Fed. 171.

of the petition," yet the power to stay suits thereafter commenced is essential to the due administration of the law, and its exercise is justified by the consideration that the creditor could gain no lawful or proper advantage by being allowed to prosecute such a suit to judgment.[176] Nor is the power to stay pending suits confined to such as are in form against the bankrupt himself. It may be exercised in proper cases where the right of the bankrupt to certain property is involved in a suit pending in a state court between two parties who are not parties to the proceedings in bankruptcy, at least where the trustee cannot obtain leave to intervene in such suit.[177]

When it is desired to obtain an injunction from the court of bankruptcy to restrain creditors from levying execution on property of the estate or otherwise interfering with it, or from proceeding against the bankrupt in the state court, it is not necessary that resort should be had to the formal and plenary proceedings common to suits in equity in the federal courts. A petition stating the facts and praying for the order or relief sought for will be sufficient. Nor need notice be given of the application for an injunction unless directed by the court. For similar reasons, any party who desires to obtain the dissolution of an injunction so granted may apply therefor by motion.[178] But the power to enjoin pending suits should be exercised circumspectly, and only where it appears to be necessary for the conservation of the rights of parties in interest. In a case where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy charged that certain creditors of the alleged bankrupt had gained an unlawful preference by attachments on his property, and had procured the appointment of a receiver by a state court, who had sold the property and held the proceeds, and prayed for an injunction against such creditors and the receiver, forbidding them to take proceedings in the state court for the distribution of the fund so held, but it was not shown that such creditors were insolvent, or that, for any other reason, a suit against them by the trustee in bankruptcy, subsequently to be appointed, would not be an adequate remedy for the avoidance of the [176] In re Basch, 97 Fed. 761, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235.

[177] Wilkinson v. Barnard, 9 Ben. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 17, 669. A party who was denied leave to intervene in a bankruptcy proceedings but who on various occasions addressed the court, did not thereby become a "party" so as to authorize the bankruptcy court to restrain him from taking proceedings affecting the orders or decrees of the bankruptcy court in other courts, since the casual presence of a litigant or attorney in the bankruptcy court is not an "appearance." But such injunctions may be issued against one who has been permitted, on his own motion, to intervene in the bankruptcy proceedings. In re Ohio Copper Mining Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 711, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[178] In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; Ex parte Carlton, 5 Law Rep. 120, Fed. Cas. No. 2,415. Compare In re Ogles, 93 Fed. 426, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

alleged preference and the recovery of its fruits, it was intimated that the injunction should be refused and the parties left to work out their rights through the trustee when appointed.[179]

But the power to stay actions against the bankrupt, by injunction, is vested only in that court in which the proceedings in bankruptcy are pending. A federal district court cannot enjoin proceedings in a state court on the ground that proceedings in bankruptcy are pending in some other court of bankruptcy.[180] Moreover, this species of control over the state courts can be exercised only in connection with some proceeding in bankruptcy and in aid thereof. Thus, where a petition in bankruptcy was filed against a defendant, and an injunction was issued to restrain a plaintiff from prosecuting a garnishment action against him in a state court, but no adjudication of bankruptcy was made and the proceedings for that purpose were abandoned, it was thereafter held that the injunction was not a bar to the action in the state court.[181]

It should also be remarked that the court of bankruptcy has ample authority to protect the estate of the bankrupt and keep it together, after the filing of the petition and pending the appointment of a trustee, or until the latter has opportunity to take possession, by enjoining all persons from attempting to get possession of particular assets by levy of execution or attachment, or from selling the property under such writs already levied.[182]

§ 30. Rules of Practice.—The thirtieth section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 provides that "all necessary rules, forms, and orders as to procedure and for carrying this act into force and effect shall be prescribed, and may be amended from time to time, by the Supreme Court of the United States." That court has performed the duty thus imposed upon it, and promulgated a series of thirty-eight "General Orders in Bankruptcy." These orders, being ordained by the Supreme Court in pursuance of an express grant of authority, are of binding force. They may be amended, in its discretion, by the same court which enacted them, or they might be superseded, in any particular, by a legislative amendment of the statute itself. But so long as they remain in force, they possess exactly the same imperative and binding effect as if incorporated in the statute, provided, of course, that there is no conflict between the statute and the rule. In case of disagreement or incon-

[179] In re Ogles, 93 Fed. 426, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

[180] In re Richardson, 2 Ben. 517, 2 N. B. R. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,774; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098; In re Hirsch, 2 Ben. 493, 2 N. B. R. 3, Fed. Cas. No. 6,529.

[181] Beekman Lumber Co. v. Acme Harvester Co., 215 Mo. 221, 114 S. W. 1087.

[182] See infra, §§ 204–206.

sistency, the act of Congress must prevail and the general order give way.[183]

As to the authority of the courts of bankruptcy to adopt rules of practice for bankruptcy proceedings, it has been said that a district court has no power to make general rules in bankruptcy, such power being vested by the act in the Supreme Court alone.[184] But Rev. Stat. U. S. § 918, provides that "the several circuit and district courts may from time to time, and in any manner not inconsistent with any law of the United States, or with any rule prescribed by the Supreme Court, make rules and orders directing the returning of writs and processes, the filing of pleadings, the taking of rules, the entering and making up of judgments by default, and other matters in vacation, and otherwise regulate their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice, and the prevention of delays in proceedings." This would undoubtedly confer upon the district courts authority to make general rules of practice in bankruptcy,—general, in the sense of being applicable to all cases in bankruptcy instituted in such courts,—subject of course to the general orders prescribed by the Supreme Court and not inconsistent with any provision of the act itself. And indications of such an authority are not wanting in the act. Thus, section 38 declares that the referees in bankruptcy are to perform such duties as shall be prescribed "by rules or orders of the courts of bankruptcy of their respective districts." It is the evident intention of this section that the district courts should regulate the jurisdiction and duties of referees, in so far as the same are left undefined by the act itself and by the general orders.[185]

As to the forms in bankruptcy promulgated by the Supreme Court with the direction that "the several forms annexed to these orders shall be observed and used, with such alterations as may be necessary to suit the circumstances of any particular case," [186] they are commended

[183] Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223 Fed. 501, 139 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179; In re Jaffe (D. C.) 272 Fed. 899, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714; In re Baker (D. C.) 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re Gerber, 186 Fed. 693, 108 C. C. A. 511, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608. In bankruptcy cases the proceedings are governed by the equity rules, except where prescribed by the statute. In re Fosgate (D. C.) 268 Fed. 985, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596. But compare In re Hughes (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 500.

[184] In re Kennedy, 7 N. B. R. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 7,699.

[185] Under the Act of 1867, it was held that the proceedings in bankruptcy, when not controlled by the statute and the rules of the Supreme Court, must be prescribed by the district courts sitting in bankruptcy. In re Kerosene Oil Co., 3 Ben. 35, Fed. Cas. No. 7,725. A rule of court fixing the fees in case of reference to the referee as a special master cannot be changed nunc pro tunc after reference so as to allow him greater fees. In re Growe Const. Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 981, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

[186] General Order No. 38.

for their simplicity, and it is said that they should be followed, and that there should be no unnecessary departures from them by falling into a habit of using the more costly, prolix, and less suitable forms of special pleadings and procedure used in chancery cases.[187] When a rule made by a district court in bankruptcy is found to be in conflict with one of these official forms, the rule is void and must give way.[188]

§ 31. Practice in Bankruptcy.—It is directed that "in proceedings in equity, instituted for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the act, or for enforcing the rights and remedies given by it, the rules of equity practice established by the Supreme Court of the United States shall be followed as nearly as may be. In proceedings at law, instituted for the same purpose, the practice and procedure in cases at law shall be followed as nearly as may be. But the judge may, by special order in any case, vary the time allowed for return of process, for appearance and pleading, and for taking testimony and publication, and may otherwise modify the rules for the preparation of any particular case so as to facilitate a speedy hearing."[189] "A review of the bankruptcy law as a whole, and of the general orders promulgated under and in pursuance of it, and to carry its provisions into effect, will show that, ample as are the powers vested in the courts and in the judges who are to administer it, these powers are to be exercised, so far as may be, and when no special provision is otherwise made, in accordance with settled and well-known forms of judicial procedure."[190] But state laws regulating practice have no reference to proceedings in bankruptcy and cannot control them.[191] The proceeding in bankruptcy, it is said, is equivalent to a general creditors' bill in chancery, and is a plenary proceeding, its practice being prescribed by the statute, and to that extent variant from the chancery practice obtaining in creditors' bills. So far as not varied by statute, the practice should be the same. The collateral proceedings incident to and arising in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding, in the form of petitions and motions nisi, against persons already parties to the bankruptcy proceeding, are of the same character as like collateral proceedings incident to and arising in a creditor's bill

187 W. A. Gage & Co. v. Bell, 124 Fed. 271, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

188 In re Johnson, 158 Fed. 342, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

189 General Order No. 37.

190 In re Hunt, 2 N. B. R. 539, Fed. Cas. No. 6,881. See Fitts v. Custer Slide Mining & Development Co. (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 864, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101. Jurisdiction of a bankruptcy court to grant an injunction on motion to vacate is not affected by the fact that an earlier restraining order was made without notice. Orinoco Iron Co. v. Metzel, 230 Fed. 40, 144 C. C. A. 338, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

191 In re Baudouine, 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

in chancery, and are summary only where they would be so in a creditor's bill, except where allowed by the statute.[192] Also it is provided that the statutory jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy may be exercised "in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms." The effect of this clause is that there are no separate "terms" of a court of bankruptcy, and consequently the general rule that a court has no power to set aside or modify its judgments or decrees after the term at which they were rendered does not apply to orders and decrees in a bankruptcy proceeding.[193] On the contrary the courts of bankruptcy are always open for the transaction of bankruptcy business, and may at any time hear petitions and motions in bankruptcy proceedings proper. In fact, a proceeding in bankruptcy, from the filing of the petition until the final settlement of the estate, is but one suit; and the district court, for all purposes of its bankruptcy jurisdiction, is always open. Therefore proceedings in any pending suit are at all times open for re-examination upon proper application being made, and any order made in the progress of a cause may be subsequently set aside or modified upon cause shown, provided rights have not become vested under it which would be disturbed by such action.[194] For the same reason, it is not necessary for the clerk of a district court to make an entry showing the opening and closing of the court on days when he enters proceedings in bankruptcy cases.[195]

§ 32. Powers and Authority of Judge.—It is provided by the bankruptcy act that the word "judge," as used in the statute, "shall mean a judge of a court of bankruptcy, not including the referee."[196] And various specific duties are imposed by the act upon the judge, exclusive of the referee, such as appointing referees, making adjudications or dismissing petitions therefor, and hearing applications for discharge. And it has been held that where there are two judges in the same district, either may hold a court of bankruptcy and perform all the duties thereof, at the same place or a different place within the district, while the other judge is also holding a court of bankruptcy.[197] But the new Judi-

192 In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482.

193 In re Burr Mfg. & Supply Co., 217 Fed. 16, 133 C. C. A. 126; In re Rochester Sanitarium & Baths Co., 222 Fed. 22, 137 C. C. A. 560, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Barker Piano Co., 233 Fed. 522, 147 C. C. A. 408, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271.

194 Sandusky v. First Nat. Bank, 23 Wall. 289, 12 N. B. R. 176, 23 L. Ed. 155; Boutwell v. Allderdice, 2 Hughes, 121, Fed. Cas. No. 1,708; In re Peabody, 16 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 10,886. And see Hume v. Myers, 242 Fed. 827, 155 C. C. A. 415, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

195 Keatley v. United States, 45 Ct. Cl. 36.

196 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 16.

197 Ex parte Steele, 162 Fed. 694, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575. But compare Ex parte Steele, 161 Fed. 886, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446.

cial Code provides (§ 23) that, "in districts having more than one district judge, the judges may agree upon the division of business and assignment of cases for trial in said district; but in case they do not so agree, the senior circuit judge of the circuit in which the district lies shall make all necessary orders for the division of business and the assignment of cases for trial in said district."

A judge who was a creditor of the bankrupt at the time of his failure, but who has since sold and assigned his claim, and has taken no part in the proceedings other than to prove such claim, is not thereby disqualified from sitting in the bankruptcy case, although the motive on the part of the purchaser of the claim may have been to remove the disqualification and enable the particular judge to act.[198]

§ 33. Priority of Petitions and Transfer of Causes.—If two or more petitions in involuntary bankruptcy are filed against the same debtor in the same court of bankruptcy, and he appears and defends against them, that petition is to be first tried which alleges the commission of the earliest act of bankruptcy. If the several acts of bankruptcy are alleged in the different petitions to have been committed on the same day, the petitions may be consolidated. If an adjudication is made on either petition, it shall not be necessary to proceed to a hearing upon the remaining petitions, unless proceedings are taken by the debtor for the purpose of causing the adjudication to be annulled or vacated.[199] A similar rule obtains in the case of two or more voluntary petitions by the same debtor. If a bankrupt files two petitions setting forth the same debts, and the first is still pending, proceedings under the second will be stayed.[200] The Act of Congress also provides that, if two or more involuntary petitions are filed against the same debtor (or against different members of a partnership) in different courts of bankruptcy, each of which has jurisdiction, "the cases shall be transferred by order of the courts relinquishing jurisdiction, to and be consolidated by the one of such courts which can proceed with the same for the greatest convenience of parties in interest."[201] And another clause gives to the courts of bankruptcy jurisdiction to "transfer cases to other courts of bankruptcy."[202] The general order framed by the Supreme Court for carrying these provisions into effect directs that, "in case two or more petitions shall be filed against the same individual in different dis-

[198] In re Sime, 2 Sawy. 320, 7 N. B. R. 407, Fed. Cas. No. 12,860.

[199] General Order in Bankruptcy, No. 7.

[200] In re Wielarski, 4 Ben. 468, 4 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 17,619.

[201] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 32.

[202] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 19.

tricts, the first hearing shall be had in the district in which the debtor has his domicile * * * and in case of two or more petitions against the same partnership in different courts, each having jurisdiction over the case, the petition first filed shall be first heard * * * and in either case the proceedings upon the other petition may be stayed until an adjudication is made upon the petition first heard; and the court which makes the first adjudication of bankruptcy shall retain jurisdiction over all proceedings therein until the same shall be closed. * * * But the court so retaining jurisdiction shall, if satisfied that it is for the greatest convenience of parties in interest that another of said courts should proceed with the cases, order them to be transferred to that court." [203] Although both the statute and the general order speak of petitions filed "against" the same debtor, thus implying that they relate only to compulsory proceedings, yet it is held, by analogy, that the provisions just quoted are equally applicable to a case where an involuntary petition is presented in one district and the debtor's own voluntary petition in another.[204] Under the act of 1867, it was generally held that, where petitions for adjudication were filed in two or more district courts, each having jurisdiction, the court in which the petition is first filed ought to be accorded exclusive jurisdiction over the case.[205] And some of the decisions under the present statute rule that priority of jurisdiction is determined by the date of the filing of the petition, rather than by the date of the adjudication.[206] But it will be observed that the general order apparently restricts this rule to petitions against a partnership, and directs that, in the case of an individual, the first hearing shall be had in the district where the debtor has his domicile, without regard to actual priority as between the petitions.

As to the provision of the general order that jurisdiction shall be retained by the court which makes the "first adjudication," the adjudication referred to must have been made in accordance with the other provision of the order as to the place of first hearing. Hence creditors, by filing a second petition against an individual in another district, and obtaining a first hearing and adjudication thereon, cannot thereby oust the jurisdiction of the court in the district of the bankrupt's domicile, [203] General Order in Bankruptcy, No. 6. See Fogarty v. Gerrity, 1 Sawy. 233, 4 N. B. R. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 4,895.

[204] In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392.

[205] In re Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 409, 6 N. B. R. 222, Fed. Cas. No. 1,678; In re Leland, 5 Ben. 168, 5 N. B. R. 222, Fed. Cas. No. 8,228; In re Brown, 19 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 1,982.

[206] In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; In re Tybo Mining & Reduction Co., 132 Fed. 697, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62; In re Continental Coal Corp., 238 Fed. 113, 151 C. C. A. 189, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

in which a petition had been first filed by other creditors.[207] Where two petitions have been filed against the same person, one in the district in which he has resided for the greater portion of the preceding six months, and the other in a district to which he has recently removed and established his residence there, the former is the "district of his domicile," within the meaning of the general order.[208] It is also held that the word "individual" is used in the order in the sense of a single person, and as a corporation is a person under the statute, so it is also an individual under the order.[209] And where two petitions are filed against a corporation, one in the state by which it was incorporated, and one in a district in which it does business, the first hearing should be had at the former place, as that is the place of its domicile, and proceedings in the other court will be stayed to await such hearing and the decision thereon.[210] In case there is substantial doubt as to the domicile or place of residence of a debtor, against whom petitions are filed in different districts, the court having jurisdiction of the petition earliest in date should be allowed to hear and determine the question of jurisdiction as depending on domicile, and the other court, without dismissing the petition before it, will stay proceedings thereon to await the result.[211]

The provision of the statute which allows the transfer of causes to the court which can proceed therein with the greatest convenience to the parties in interest is of great importance. And the provision of the general order, that the court which makes the first adjudication shall "retain jurisdiction over all proceedings," is of course to be taken subject to the direction of the statute.[212] This provision is not to be read as narrowly restricted to the bankruptcy of single debtors, but it applies equally to cases where different petitions are filed against a partnership.[213] The "parties in interest" whose convenience is to be con-

[207] In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484. But compare In re Vanoscope Co., 233 Fed. 53, 147 C. C. A. 123, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778.

[208] In re Isaacson, 161 Fed. 779, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430.

[209] In re United Button Co., 137 Fed. 668, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; In re Globe Sec. Co., 132 Fed. 709.

[210] In re Globe Sec. Co., 132 Fed. 709; In re United Button Co., 132 Fed. 378, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761. A court of bankruptcy may rightly take jurisdiction of a voluntary proceeding by a corporation having its domicile and residence in the district, notwithstanding the earlier filing of an involuntary petition in another district, in which it was claimed to have a place of business. In re R. H. Pennington & Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 388, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832.

[211] In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392.

[212] In re Isaacson (D. C.) 161 Fed. 779, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 430. The question of the convenience of the parties should be determined by the court having preferred jurisdiction. In re New Era Novelty Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 298, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[213] In re Sears (D. C.) 112 Fed. 58, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279.

sulted, are not limited to unsecured creditors of the bankrupt, but the term is intended to include all persons whose pecuniary interests may be directly affected by the bankruptcy proceedings.[214] The burden of proof, however, as to the place where the proceedings will be most convenient for parties in interest rests upon those who ask for a transfer. And where the applicants are a minority of the creditors, and represent only a small part of the indebtedness, a transfer will not be warranted by the single fact that the greater part or all of the bankrupt's property is in the other district, as the court has power to order its sale there if deemed best.[215] So a transfer will not be ordered where the request therefor is presented by creditors who have received preferences which they do not offer to surrender, and it is doubtful whether the transfer will be for the greater convenience of the creditors who have not been preferred.[216] Proximity of the place of business of a bankrupt to the court entertaining proceedings in bankruptcy, and proximity of a majority of the bankrupt's creditors in number or amount of claims, is persuasive, but not conclusive, in determining the court which shall assume final jurisdiction.[217] Thus, where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against a debtor was filed in Georgia, and, pending a hearing thereon, he filed his voluntary petition in New York, alleging that he was a resident of the latter state, but it appeared that he had formerly been engaged in business in Georgia, that the debts to be affected were all contracted there, that his present business was as an agent or employé of the corporation which succeeded his former firm, that he was accustomed to spend a part of his time in Georgia, and that his creditors desired that the bankruptcy proceedings should be conducted in the latter state, it was held that it would be for the "greatest convenience of [214] In re United Button Co. (D. C.) 137 Fed. 668. The term "parties in interest" includes not only general creditors, but also prior and secured creditors, and also the bankrupt and every other party whose pecuniary interest is affected by the proceedings, and the "greatest convenience" depends on all the circumstances—proximity of creditors of every kind to the court, proximity to the court of bankrupts and witnesses necessary to proper administration, the location of the assets, etc. And where, in the district of voluntary adjudication, there were practically all the assets of the bankrupt corporation, its official headquarters, its books and records, and there was pending in the state court in such district an action to foreclose mortgages on the bulk of its assets, it was held that the proceedings would not be transferred to the federal court in another state, where an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was pending against it, although a majority in amount and number of its general creditors lived there, and also the majority of stockholders and many witnesses as to claims. In re Devonian Mineral Spring Co. (D. C.) 272 Fed. 527, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82.

[215] In re Tybo Mining & Reduction Co. (D. C.) 132 Fed. 978, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 68.

[216] In re Sears (D. C.) 112 Fed. 58, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279.

[217] In re United Button Co. (D. C.) 137 Fed. 668, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

the parties in interest" that the court in Georgia should proceed with the case.[218]

Relationship between the bankrupt and the deputy clerk of the district court in whose office the petition was filed will be cause for transferring the case to another seat of the court in the same district and division and ordering the record to be filed and docketed in the office of the clerk of the court at the latter place.[219]

[218] In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392. And see further as to considerations affecting question of "greatest convenience," In re Southwestern Bridge & Iron Co., 133 Fed. 568, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304; In re General Metals Co., 133 Fed. 84, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Okmulgee Producing & Refining Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 736, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631.

[219] Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

CHAPTER III

APPELLATE JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

§ 34. Statutory Provisions.—The Bankruptcy Act of 1898 provides (§ 24a) that "the Supreme Court of the United States, the circuit courts of appeals of the United States, and the supreme courts of the territories" shall have "appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases," and "the Supreme Court of the United States shall exercise a like jurisdiction from courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States and from the supreme court of the District of Columbia." This jurisdiction may be exercised "in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms as now or as they may be hereafter held." The next clause of the same section, marking a sharp distinction between appellate and revisory jurisdiction, and conferring the latter only upon the circuit courts of appeals, provides that those courts "shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. Such power shall be exercised on due notice and petition by any party aggrieved." Specifically as to appeals, the act provides (§ 25) that "appeals, as in equity cases, may be taken in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy to the circuit court of appeals of the United States, and to the supreme court of the territories, in the following cases, to wit, (1) from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt; (2) from a judgment granting or denying a discharge; and (3) from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over." Out of the three specific cases thus enumerated, in which the review may be had on an appeal proper, only one admits of being carried up to the Supreme Court. For the act provides (§ 25b) that "from any final decision of a court of appeals, allowing or rejecting a claim under this act, an appeal may be had, under such rules and within such time as may be prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the following cases and no other: (1) Where the amount in controversy exceeds the sum of two thousand dollars, and the question involved is one which might have been taken on appeal or writ of error from the highest court of a state to the Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) where some justice of the Supreme Court of the United States shall certify that in his opinion the determination of the question or questions involved in the allowance or rejection of such claim is essential to a uniform construction of this act throughout the United States." But another statute, not repealed by the Bankruptcy Act provides that "appeals and writs of error may be taken from the district courts, including the United States district court for Hawaii, direct to the Supreme Court in the following cases: In any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, in which case the question of jurisdiction alone shall be certified to the Supreme Court from the court below for decision; * * * in any case that involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States; in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority is drawn in question; and in any case in which the constitution or law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States."[1] It is also provided by the Bankruptcy Act (§ 25d) that "controversies may be certified to the Supreme Court of the United States from other courts of the United States, and the former court may exercise jurisdiction thereof and issue writs of certiorari pursuant to the provisions of the United States laws now in force or such as may be hereafter enacted."[2] As to the general appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals, which may be sometimes invoked in regard to controversies which originate in a court of bankruptcy, it is provided that "the circuit courts of appeals shall exercise appellate jurisdiction to review by appeal or writ of error final decisions in the district courts, including the United States district court for Hawaii, in all cases other than those in which appeals and writs of error may be taken direct to the Supreme Court."[3]

[1] Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 238.

§ 35. Jurisdiction of United States Supreme Court.—The Bankruptcy Act of 1898, recognizing the policy and purpose of the act creating the circuit courts of appeals, has restricted the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States, in bankruptcy matters, within very narrow limits. In the first place, that court is made the proper forum for appeals, in controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, "from courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States."[4] The obvious reason is that, in such a case, there is no circuit court of appeals in which a review could properly be sought. Under this provision, an appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court from the United States district court for Porto Rico.[5] But it should be noted that this appellate jurisdiction is restricted to "controversies" arising in the course of a proceeding in bankruptcy, as dis-

[2] For the general rule on this point, see Federal Judicial Code 1911, §§ 239, 240, where it is provided: "In any case within its appellate jurisdiction as defined in section 128, the circuit court of appeals at any time may certify to the Supreme Court of the United States any questions or propositions of law concerning which it desires the instruction of that court for its proper decision; and thereupon the Supreme Court may either give it instruction on the questions and propositions certified to it, which shall be binding upon the circuit court of appeals in such case, or it may require that the whole record and cause be sent up to it for its consideration, and thereupon shall decide the whole matter in controversy in the same manner as if it had been brought there for review by writ of error or appeal. In any case, civil or criminal, in which the judgment of the circuit court of appeals is made final by the provisions of this title, it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require, by certiorari or otherwise, upon the petition of any party thereto, any such case to be certified to the Supreme Court for its review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court."

[3] Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 128. These statutory provisions are exclusive. A federal District Court will not entertain a bill in equity to adjudicate any matter or review any proceeding in the course of administration in a bankruptcy court, since the jurisdiction of the latter is exclusive. Gibbons v. Dexter Horton Trust & Savings Bank (D. C.) 225 Fed. 424, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

[4] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 24a. Under the act of 1841, it was held that no appeal would lie, in a bankruptcy case, to the Supreme Court of the United States from a district court, although held in a district where no circuit court was established by law. Crawford v. Points, 13 How. 11, 14 L. Ed. 29.

[5] Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, 32 Sup. Ct. 67, 56 L. Ed. 118, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338. And see Munsuri v. Fricker, 222 U. S. 121, 32 Sup. Ct. 70, 56 L. Ed. 121, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

tinguished from steps taken in the ordinary course of the bankruptcy proceeding. A ruling of the lower court allowing or rejecting a claim against the bankrupt's estate is not such a "controversy;" it is a "proceeding in bankruptcy," and therefore is not appealable.[6] The Supreme Court is also invested with appellate jurisdiction, under like restrictions, over the supreme court of the District of Columbia.[7]

In the next place, the bankruptcy statute does not repeal the fifth section of the act of 1891, by which it is enacted that appeals or writs of error may be taken from a district court direct to the Supreme Court "in any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, in any case that involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, in any case in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States is drawn in question, and in any case in which the constitution or law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States."[8] Under this provision, the circuit courts of appeals have decided that they have no jurisdiction of a writ of error from the district court when the jurisdiction of that court is in question for review.[9] And the fact that the ruling of the district court, involving a question of jurisdiction, has been affirmed by the circuit court of appeals on a petition for revision, will not preclude a writ of error from the Supreme Court to the district court to review the final decision in the case.[10] But it is essential that the jurisdiction of the inferior court should be actually and necessarily in issue. Thus, the question whether the petition in a case of involuntary bankruptcy alleges an act of bankruptcy does not go to the jurisdiction of the court, and therefore the decision is reviewable by the circuit court of appeals

[6] Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, 32 Sup. Ct. 67, 56 L. Ed. 118, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338. And see Munsuri v. Fricker, 222 U. S. 121, 32 Sup. Ct. 70, 56 L. Ed. 121, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[7] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 24a. The same rule obtained under the act of 1867. See Smith v. Mason, 14 Wall. 419, 20 L. Ed. 748. This provision appears to ignore the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, which otherwise has appellate jurisdiction over the Supreme Court of the District. But it cannot be thought to have been inserted through inadvertence, since the same language is repeated in the Federal Judicial Code of 1911, § 252. And see Sullivan v. Goldman, 38 App. D. C. 319. A decree adjudging a person not a bankrupt is not a controversy arising in those proceedings, within the provision for appellate jurisdiction over the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Swift & Co. v. Hoover, 242 U. S. 107, 37 Sup. Ct. 56, 61 L. Ed. 175, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429.

[8] Act Cong. March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. 826, § 5; Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 238.

[9] In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11; United States v. Sutton, 47 Fed. 129; Davis & Rankin Bldg. Co. v. Barber, 60 Fed. 465, 9 C. C. A. 79; Cabot v. McMaster, 65 Fed. 533, 13 C. C. A. 39.

[10] Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., 212 U. S. 445, 29 Sup. Ct. 332, 53 L. Ed. 591, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

rather than by the Supreme Court.[11] So also, the question whether a corporation against which a petition is filed comes within one of the classes of corporations made amenable to the bankruptcy law is a question upon which the jurisdiction may depend, but it is an issue which the district court has jurisdiction to determine, and hence an appeal cannot be taken direct to the Supreme Court.[12] So again, since the act confers upon courts of bankruptcy jurisdiction to determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions, the decision of such a court that it has authority to adjudicate the validity of an alleged equitable lien upon property which it decides to be assets of the estate in bankruptcy and not exempt property, does not create a question of jurisdiction which will sustain a direct appeal to the Supreme Court.[13] It has also been ruled that the acts of Congress do not authorize a district court to certify questions of its jurisdiction to the Supreme Court for decision, in order to obtain the instruction of that court for its guidance, before deciding the case; and such a certificate, made before the final judgment or decree in the case, will be dismissed.[14]

In the next place, although the statute provides in general terms that the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as the circuit courts of appeals, "are hereby invested with appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases," this does not broaden the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and has no relation to appeals from the circuit court of appeals. This grant, in other words, does not give authority to entertain an appeal from every decision in bankruptcy rendered by the intermediate courts, the same being specifically limited by other provisions of the statute.[15]

As the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 stood originally, it gave the Supreme Court a considerable appellate jurisdiction over the final decisions of the circuit courts of appeals. But this was somewhat abruptly terminated by an Act of Congress approved January 28, 1915 (38 Stat. 804, ch. 22) which provides: "That the judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of appeals in all proceedings and cases arising under the Bankruptcy Act and in all controversies arising in such proceedings

[11] Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 825, 101 C. C. A. 39, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216.

[12] Columbia Ironworks v. National Lead Co., 127 Fed. 99, 62 C. C. A. 99, 64 L. R. A. 645, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

[13] Lucius v. Cawthon-Coleman Co., 196 U. S. 149, 25 Sup. Ct. 214, 49 L. Ed. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

[14] Bardes v. Hawarden Bank, 175 U. S. 526, 20 Sup. Ct. 196, 44 L. Ed. 262, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

[15] Hutchinson v. Otis, 123 Fed. 14, 59 C. C. A. 94, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275. And see Nelson v. Carland, 1 How. 265, 11 L. Ed. 126.

and cases shall be final, save only that it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require by certiorari, upon the petition of any party thereto, that the proceeding, case, or controversy be certified to it for review and determination, with the same power and authority as if taken to that court by appeal or writ of error; but certiorari shall not be allowed in any such proceeding, case, or controversy unless the petition therefor is presented to the Supreme Court within three months from the date of such judgment or decree." This statute, it is declared by the Supreme Court, "manifested the purpose of Congress to relieve this court from the necessity of considering cases of this character, except when brought here by writ of certiorari." [16] The writ of certiorari, it will be remembered, is not a writ of right, but the granting of it is in the sound discretion of the court. The effect of this statute is therefore to make the judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of appeals absolutely final in all bankruptcy matters, except when the Supreme Court, in its discretion, will permit the bringing up of a case on certiorari.

§ 36. Same; On Certification of Questions.—A further provision of the bankruptcy act is that "controversies may be certified to the Supreme Court of the United States from other courts of the United States, and the former court may exercise jurisdiction thereof and issue writs of certiorari pursuant to the provisions of the United States laws now in force or such as may be hereafter enacted." [17] This is to be read in connection with the act creating the circuit courts of appeals, which directs that, "in any case within its appellate jurisdiction, the circuit court of appeals at any time may certify to the Supreme Court of the United States any questions or propositions of law concerning which it desires the instruction of that court for its proper decision; and thereupon the Supreme Court may either give its instruction on the questions and propositions certified to it, which shall be binding upon the circuit court of appeals in such case, or it may require that the whole record and cause be sent up to it for its consideration, and thereupon shall decide the whole matter in controversy in the same manner as if it had been brought there for review by writ of error or appeal." [18] The latter of these two statutory provisions is a limitation upon the former. Although the former provides for certification of questions "from other courts of the United States," the latter shows that only the circuit courts of appeals are intended. Hence a district court sitting in bankruptcy is not authorized to certify to the Supreme Court a question concerning its jurisdiction in the case before it, before deciding the case.[19] Certifications of questions under this provision have not been numerous, but an instance may be cited where a circuit court of appeals certified, with a request for instructions, the question whether the making of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors would constitute an act of bankruptcy notwithstanding the fact that the debtor was solvent at the time of the filing of the petition against him.[20]

[16] William R. Staats Co. v. Security Trust & Savings Bank, 243 U. S. 121, 37 Sup. Ct. 336, 61 L. Ed. 632.

[17] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 25d; Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 252.

[18] Act Cong. March 3, 1891, 26 Stat. 826, § 6; Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 239.

But it is probable that this provision also is restricted if not repealed by the Act of January 28, 1915 (38 Stat. 804) which makes the decisions of the circuit courts of appeals final in all bankruptcy cases, "save only that it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require by certiorari, upon the petition of any party thereto, that the proceeding, case, or controversy be certified to it for review and determination." In other words, a case can now be certified for review only when the Supreme Court, on the petition of a party in interest, shall so "require."

§ 37. Same; Certiorari.—In connection with the provisions of the bankruptcy act (§ 25d) authorizing the Supreme Court to "issue writs of certiorari" pursuant to the laws of the United States, should be read the section of the Judicial Code (§ 240) which directs that, "in any case, civil or criminal, in which the judgment or decree of the circuit court of appeals is made final by the provisions of this title, it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require, by certiorari or otherwise, upon the petition of any party thereto, any such case to be certified to the Supreme Court for its review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court."[21] It is evident that, so far as concerns proceedings in bankruptcy, these provisions are meant to be supplementary to those which allow appeals to the Supreme Court in specified cases. Thus, a decree rendered by the circuit court of appeals in the exercise of its jurisdiction to "superintend and revise in matter of law" the proceedings of the inferior courts of bankruptcy, and not in the way of allowing or rejecting a claim, is not the proper subject for an appeal to the Supreme Court, but it may be reviewed by that court on writ of certiorari.[22]

[19] Bardes v. Hawarden Bank, 175 U. S. 526, 20 Sup. Ct. 196, 44 L. Ed. 262, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680. Compare In re Jacobs, 99 Fed. 539, 39 C. C. A. 647, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

[20] George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[21] So far as concerns controversies and proceedings in bankruptcy, this language is repeated in the Act of Congress of January 28, 1915, 38 Stat. 804.

§ 38. Same; Writ of Error to Supreme Court of State.—Nothing contained in the present bankruptcy act impairs or in any way affects the jurisdiction vested in the Supreme Court of the United States, by the original judiciary act, to review a final judgment or decree of the highest court of a state, by means of a writ of error, when the decision of such state court is against the validity of a statute of the United States or an authority exercised thereunder, "or where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the constitution, or any treaty or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against the title, right, privilege, or immunity specially set up or claimed by either party under such constitution, treaty, statute, commission, or authority."[23] This power of the Supreme Court may be exercised in cases where a decision is rendered against a title, right, or authority claimed under the national bankruptcy law. For example, where the only controversy in a case in a state court is as to the effect to be given to an order of a district court of the United States sitting in bankruptcy, for the sale of mortgaged property free from liens, a writ of error will lie from the federal supreme court to review a decision denying the right claimed by one of the parties.[24] So when a state court decides against the claim of a trustee in bankruptcy to certain property of the bankrupt, the decision is against a right or title claimed under a statute of the United States, within the meaning of the judiciary act, and the judgment of the court of last resort of the state is subject to review by the United States Supreme Court.[25] Again, where the issue is as to the validity of a transfer by a trustee in bankruptcy, and whether the suit is barred by the limitation of the bankruptcy act, the Supreme Court has jurisdiction on writ of error to the highest court of the state.[26] On the

[22] Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 24 Sup. Ct. 45, 48 L. Ed. 116, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786; Bryan v. Bernheimer, 175 U. S. 724, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 44 L. Ed. 338, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 181 U. S. 620, 22 Sup. Ct. 293, 45 L. Ed. 1031, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Kyle v. Hammond, 192 Fed. 559.

[23] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 709, Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 237. On the construction of this statute, see Black. Const. Law (3d edn.) pp. 177-179.

[24] Factors' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 738, 4 Sup. Ct. 679, 28 L. Ed. 582; New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 5 Sup. Ct. 1009, 29 L. Ed. 244.

[25] Williams v. Heard, 140 U. S. 529, 11 Sup. Ct. 885, 35 L. Ed. 550.

[26] Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 6 Sup. Ct. 155, 29 L. Ed. 467.

other hand, where the question actually decided by the state court was whether the bankrupt had title to certain property, and not whether the title would pass to the trustee in bankruptcy by operation of the bankruptcy law, this is not such a decision as can be reviewed on error.[27] Again, the United States Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to review the decision of a state court dismissing a bill brought by creditors against a bankrupt to set aside his discharge, and to which the defendant demurred on the ground of staleness; for if the state court made any decision on the bankruptcy act, it must have sustained, not denied, the privilege claimed by the bankrupt.[28]

§ 39. Rules Governing Appeal to Supreme Court.—It is ordered that an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under the bankruptcy act "shall be taken within thirty days after the judgment or decree, and shall be allowed by a judge of the court appealed from or by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States." Further, "in every case in which either party is entitled by the act to take an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, the court from which the appeal lies shall, at or before the time of entering its judgment or decree, make and file a finding of the facts, and its conclusions of law thereon, stated separately; and the record transmitted to the Supreme Court of the United States on such an appeal shall consist only of the pleadings, the judgment or decree, the finding of facts, and the conclusions of law." [29]

As to the limitation of time prescribed by this order, it is held that it relates only to appeals taken expressly under the bankruptcy statute, and not to an appeal from a decision rendered on a formal appeal from the district court in a controversy arising in a bankruptcy proceeding.[30] But the fact that an appeal is allowed from a circuit court of appeals in a bankruptcy case, on the certificate of a justice of the Supreme Court, cannot operate as an adjudication that the appeal was taken in due time.[31] In regard to the requirement of a finding of facts and a separate statement of the conclusions of law, it is said that this does not require a circuit court of appeals, of its own motion, to ascertain and determine in advance of its decision, whether a question is raised on which a party is entitled to the allowance of an appeal to the Supreme Court, but such

[27] Scott v. Kelly, 22 Wall. 57, 22 L. Ed. 729.

[28] Calcote v. Stanton, 18 How. 243, 15 L. Ed. 348.

[29] General Order in Bankruptcy, No. 36.

[30] Hobbs v. Head & Dowst Co., 191 Fed. 811, 112 C. C. A. 325, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[31] Conboy v. First Nat. Bank, 203 U. S. 141, 27 Sup. Ct. 50, 51 L. Ed. 128, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

right, if claimed, should be called to the court's attention in advance of its decision, by a request for findings in the event of an adverse ruling on the question claimed to be appealable.[32] Further, this requirement as to findings does not apply where the appeal is from a "controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings," as distinguished from a proceeding in the bankruptcy case proper, since, in such a case, the manner of review in the Supreme Court is not governed by the bankruptcy statute but by the act creating the circuit court of appeals.[33] When a party appeals from a decision of the circuit court (now the circuit court of appeals) to the Supreme Court of the United States, the allowance of the appeal is to relate back to the time when the original application was made for an appeal to the judge of the circuit court, and entitles a party to a stay of proceedings.[34] The provision of the bankruptcy act (§ 25c) that "trustees shall not be required to give bond when they take appeals or sue out writs of error," appears to be applicable to appeals to the Supreme Court.

§ 40. Jurisdiction of Circuit Court of Appeals on Writ of Error.—As a general rule, a proceeding in bankruptcy is in the nature of a proceeding in equity, and orders and decrees made therein cannot be reviewed by writ of error.[35] But there are some exceptional cases in which this is the appropriate and exclusive method of obtaining a revision of the judgments of the court of bankruptcy. One is the case where the defendant in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy demands as of right, and receives, a trial by jury. This is not like the trial of an issue sent out of chancery, but is a trial according to the course of the common law, and therefore, under the well-settled principles of the common law, as well as the constitution and laws of the United States, the judgment cannot be reviewed by what is technically known as an "appeal," but must be the subject of a writ of error, as that writ was known at the common law.[36] Now there is no provision of the present bankruptcy statute which authorizes the review of an adjudication of bankruptcy, or of a judgment dismissing the petition, following a trial by jury, by means of a writ of error. It is true that the twenty-fifth section gives jurisdiction to review "a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge

[32] Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., 162 Fed. 675, 89 C. C. A. 467, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; Crucible Steel Co. v. Holt, 174 Fed. 127, 98 C. C. A. 101, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

[33] Knapp v Milwaukee Trust Co., 216 U. S. 545, 30 Sup. Ct. 412, 54 L. Ed. ——.

[34] Thornhill v. Bank of Louisiana, 5 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 13,991.

[35] Lockman v. Lang, 128 Fed. 279, 62 C. C. A. 550, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597.

[36] Duncan v. Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; Elliott v. Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. 133, 47 L. Ed. 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

the defendant a bankrupt;" but this is explicitly by means of an "appeal as in equity cases." So also, the superintending and revisory power of the circuit courts of appeals, granted by the twenty-fourth section, is confined to "matter of law," and is described as a "jurisdiction in equity." Besides, the seventh amendment to the federal constitution provides that "no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law." The bankruptcy act, therefore, does not permit of a writ of error in this particular case.[37] But the sixth section of the act creating the circuit courts of appeals,[38] which is not repealed by the bankruptcy act,[39] provides that "the circuit courts of appeals shall exercise appellate jurisdiction to review by appeal or writ of error final decisions in the district courts, in all cases other than those in which appeals and writs of error may be taken direct to the Supreme Court, unless otherwise provided by law." And it is held that the reviewing authority here conferred is wide enough to authorize a review of a judgment of the district court, entered on the verdict of a jury, upon a petition for adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy, and the granting of a writ of error therefor.[40] Accordingly it is now well settled that, in this specific case, a writ of error as at common law is not only a proper means of bringing up for review the judgment of the bankruptcy court, but is the exclusive remedy.[41]

Another instance is found in the case of an order of the district court in bankruptcy adjudging a defendant in contempt for disobeying a previous order whereby he was required to surrender certain property to the trustee in bankruptcy, and imposing a fine payable to the United States as a punishment, and not as compensation to the trustee for damages. This is in effect a criminal judgment, although made as a part of the proceeding in bankruptcy, and is therefore reviewable by a writ of error, and not by a petition for revision.[42] On the other hand, proceed-

[37] Elliott v. Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. 133, 47 L. Ed. 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

[38] Act Cong. March 3, 1891, § 6, 26 Stat. 826; Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 128.

[39] Elliott v. Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. 133, 47 L. Ed. 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

[40] Duncan v Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649.

[41] Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., 203 U. S. 502, 27 Sup. Ct. 161, 51 L. Ed. 292, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Elliott v. Toeppner, 187 U. S. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. 133, 47 L. Ed. 200, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Comstock, 16 Wall. 258, 21 L. Ed. 493; Bower v. Holzworth, 138 Fed. 28, 70 C. C. A. 396, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128; Lennox v. Allen-Lane Co., 167 Fed. 114, 92 C. C. A. 566, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; Duncan v. Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649.

[42] Brown v. Detroit Trust Co., 193 Fed. 622, 113 C. C. A. 490. So also of a suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy against a third person to enjoin him ings for contempt in a court of bankruptcy for refusal to obey an order to turn over property to a bankrupt's receiver or trustee, where no such fine or penalty is contemplated, but only enforcing obedience to the order, are for a civil and not for a criminal contempt, and are not reviewable on a writ of error, although, in such a case, the court may treat the writ of error as a "petition to revise" where the latter remedy would have been appropriate if taken in time.[43] A plenary action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover money only, alleged to have been paid as a preference in favor of a surety and his principal, is an action at law, reviewable on writ of error instead of appeal.[44]

§ 41. Appellate Jurisdiction of Circuit Court of Appeals.—Appeals may be taken from the district courts, sitting as courts of bankruptcy, to the circuit courts of appeals, in three specified classes of cases. These are (1) "from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt;" (2) "from a judgment granting or denying a discharge;" and (3) "from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over."[45] In these particular cases, appeal is the proper and only method of obtaining a review of the judgment of the court of bankruptcy.[46] So far as regards "proceedings in bankruptcy," that is, the successive steps in the ordinary administration of an estate in bankruptcy, the specification of these three classes of appealable judgments implies an exclusion of all others, and in matters of this kind no appeal lies from any order or decree of the court of bankruptcy, unless it comes within one of the specified classes.[47] But the twenty-fourth section of the act invests the circuit courts of appeals with "appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings from interfering with the alleged possession by the trustee of property claimed by both parties. Stelling v. G. W. Jones Lumber Co., 116 Fed. 261, 53 C. C. A. 81, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521. And so of a suit by the trustee to recover property alleged to have been transferred in fraud of creditors. Delta Nat. Bank v. Easterbrook, 133 Fed. 521, 67 C. C. A. 236, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

[43] Freed v. Central Trust Co. of Illinois, 215 Fed. 873, 132 C. C. A. 7, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

[44] Turner v. Schaeffer, 249 Fed. 654, 161 C. C. A. 564, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829.

[45] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 25a. Except as to this one matter of allowing or rejecting a claim, the right of appeal in bankruptcy proceedings given by § 24a of the act is not affected by the amount in controversy. Emerson v. Castor, 236 Fed. 29, 149 C. C. A. 239, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719.

[46] Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136.

[47] Bank of Clinton v. Kondert, 159 Fed. 703, 86 C. C. A. 571, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; In re Whitener, 105 Fed. 180, 44 C. C. A. 434, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198; Ogden v. Gilt Edge Consol. Mines Co., 225 Fed. 723, 140 C. C. A. 597, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893. While doubtless the circuit court of appeals has power to revise even interlocutory proceedings in bankruptcy, such procedure is not favored when the matter can be raised by appeal or petition from the order or decree finally disposing of the matter. In re Horowitz, 250 Fed. 106, 162 C. C. A. 278, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases." This is a different provision and relates to a different class of judgments. It is not revoked or limited by the subsequent enumeration of the three kinds of appealable orders, all of which are "proceedings in bankruptcy," as distinguished from "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings."[48] Under this grant, therefore, appellate jurisdiction may be exercised in other classes of cases, as, for instance, to review a decision on an application to transfer the bankruptcy proceeding from one district court to another.[49] So a decree in a suit by a bankrupt's trustee to set aside an instrument, in form a deed, from the bankrupt conveying certain described real estate is reviewable by appeal rather than by writ of error.[50] And a proceeding on a petition by the trustee to sell lands, on the theory that a warranty deed evidenced an equitable mortgage, opposed by the grantee, is a "controversy" arising in bankruptcy proceedings, rather than a "proceeding in bankruptcy," and hence an appeal to review the judgment therein lies under the general appellate jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals.[51] And the appearance of the mortgagees, on notice of a petition by the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy, and their assertion of conflicting rights, may be held equivalent to an affirmative intervention in connection with the trustee's petition so as to raise an appealable controversy in bankruptcy.[52]

But the section under consideration must be read in connection with the act creating the circuit courts of appeals wherein is found a description of the judgments and decrees of the district courts from which an appeal may be taken.[53] In the first place, all cases are excluded in which an appeal may be taken direct to the Supreme Court of the United States. In the second place, there are a few exceptional cases (as shown in the preceding section) in which a writ of error, and not an appeal, is the appropriate remedy. And thirdly, an appeal lies only from a "final decision" of the district court. For this reason an order denying to a stranger the right to intervene in a bankruptcy proceeding, [48] Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Mueller, 135 Fed. 711, 68 C. C. A. 349, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

[49] Kyle Lumber Co. v. Bush, 133 Fed. 688, 66 C. C. A. 592, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535.

[50] Carey v. Donohue, 209 Fed. 328, 126 C. C. A. 254, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210.

[51] Sauve v. M. L. More Inv. Co., 248 Fed. 642, 160 C. C. A. 542, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281.

[52] Robert Moody & Son v. Century Sav. Bank, 239 U. S. 374, 36 Sup. Ct. 111, 60 L. Ed. 336, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95.

[53] In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 112 Fed. 643, 50 C. C. A. 406, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441; Act Cong. March 3, 1891, § 6, 26 Stat. 828. And see In re Strauss, 211 Fed. 123, 127 C. C. A. 521, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237.

not being a final decision upon the merits of his case, is not appealable.[54] So an order enjoining the prosecution of an action of replevin, brought in a state court against a trustee in bankruptcy by a third person claiming goods in his possession, and referring the claim of such party to a referee in bankruptcy to ascertain and report the facts, is not a final decision nor appealable.[55] And so of an interlocutory order entered by a court of bankruptcy, reversing a ruling of the referee, made during the examination of the bankrupt, refusing to require him to produce his books.[56] An exception to this rule is created by the seventh section of the circuit court of appeals act,[57] in reference to an interlocutory order granting an injunction. Such an order, made by a district court in bankruptcy, is reviewable on appeal where the nature of the cause or proceeding is such that the final decree therein would be reviewable by appeal under the provisions of the act; but it is not appealable where the final decree or order would be one in a "proceeding in bankruptcy," reviewable only on petition to "revise in matter of law."[58] But an appealable controversy in bankruptcy was held not to have been initiated by an attempted intervention in a summary proceeding in a court of ancillary jurisdiction to restore certain property of the bankrupts, in the custody of those having no right to it, to the bankruptcy court, where the interveners claimed under an assignment made after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[59] And an order of the referee requiring the bankrupt to answer a petition for an order for the payment of money in his possession is not such an order as can be reviewed before final judgment.[60] The same is true of an order merely granting leave to the trustee in bankruptcy to institute a suit.[61] But in a bankruptcy proceeding, where stockholders are contesting the right to levy assessments against them, in which some were not formally made parties, the circuit court of appeals will nevertheless proceed to the merits, where both sides have assumed that the order of assessment was a final and appealable order.[62]

[54] In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 112 Fed. 643, 50 C. C. A. 406, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441. A decree or order does not take effect, for the purpose of an appeal or a petition to revise, while a motion for rehearing is pending. Yaryan Rosin & Turpentine Co. v. Isaac (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 710, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[55] In re Russell, 101 Fed. 248, 41 C. C. A. 323, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658. And see In re Consumers' Packing Co. (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 198, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

[56] Goodman v. Brenner, 109 Fed. 481, 48 C. C. A. 516, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

[57] Act Cong. March 3, 1891, § 7, 26 Stat. 828.

[58] O'Dell v. Boyden, 150 Fed. 731, 80 C. C. A. 397, 10 Ann. Cas. 239, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751.

[59] Lazarus, Michel & Lazarus v. Prentice, 234 U. S. 263, 34 Sup. Ct. 851, 58 L. Ed. 1305, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

[60] In re Graboyes (D. C.) 228 Fed. 574, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[61] Board of Road Com'rs of Monroe County v. Keil, 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[62] Thoms & Brenneman v. Goodman,

§ 42. Same; Adjudication of Bankruptcy.—The provision of the bankruptcy act allowing an appeal from a "judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt," is to be understood as applying to cases of involuntary bankruptcy, for the use of the word "defendant" implies that the proceeding is instituted against him by creditors. Hence it would appear that an order of the district court vacating (or refusing to vacate) an adjudication of bankruptcy made upon the voluntary petition of the debtor would not be subject to appeal.[63] Under the former statute, the rule was that if a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was tried by the district court without a jury, and an adjudication made, its decision might be reviewed by the appellate court under its superintending and revisory power, but not on appeal.[64] But this rule is exactly reversed by the express terms of the present act, and it is held that such an adjudication can be reviewed only on appeal, and not on a petition for revision.[65] But if the case is tried by a jury, the method of obtaining a review, both under the act of 1867 and the present statute, is not by appeal but by writ of error.[66] When an appeal is taken from such an adjudication, it is an "appeal as in equity cases," under the terms of the statute, that is to say, both the facts and the law are brought before the reviewing court.[67] An order of the district court dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy, is a judgment "refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt," and is therefore appealable under the statute.[68] But it seems that an order sustaining a demurrer to a petition filed for the purpose of vacating an adjudication in bankruptcy is not a judgment from which an appeal will lie under this provision of the statute.[69] And it may in fact be said to be the settled rule that an order made upon an application or motion to vacate or set aside an adjudication in bankruptcy, whichever way it is decided (whether, for instance, the court vacates

254 Fed. 39, 165 C. C. A. 449, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 688.

[63] See In re Hall, 1 Dill. 587, Fed. Cas. No. 5,920.

[64] In re Picton, 2 Dill. 548, 11 N. B. R. 420, Fed. Cas. No. 11,136; In re O'Brien, 1 N. B. R. 176, Fed. Cas. No. 10,397.

[65] In re Good, 99 Fed. 389, 39 C. C. A. 581, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136.

[66] Supra, § 40. But appeal, and not a writ of error, is the proper remedy, though a jury was demanded, if the demand was withdrawn and a hearing had without a jury. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 854, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[67] In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128.

[68] Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., 150 Fed. 71, 80 C. C. A. 25, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

[69] In re Ives, 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692; B. R. Electric & Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Ætna Life Ins Co., 206 Fed. 885, 124 C. C. A. 545, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

the adjudication and dismisses the petition for want of jurisdiction or for any other reason, or whether the order dismisses a creditor's petition to vacate the adjudication for fraud) is not appealable, though it may be reviewed on a petition to revise.[70] And an order that, if the alleged bankrupt shall appear and plead to the petition within five days, the adjudication will be set aside and the motion to quash service of subpœna granted, cannot be appealed, because it is conditional and therefore not final.[71] Nor does an order come within the description of appealable judgments which simply adjudges an individual to be a member of a bankrupt partnership and to be liable for its debts.[72]

§ 43. Same; Decision on Discharge or Composition.—The bankruptcy act provides that an appeal may be taken from an order granting or denying a discharge. This clause will of course apply equally to voluntary and involuntary cases, and the right of appeal may be claimed by the bankrupt when his application for discharge is denied, and by the creditors who have filed specifications in opposition to the discharge, when the same is granted.[73] An order of a court of bankruptcy dismissing an application for discharge on the ground of want of prosecution is, in substance and effect, one denying a discharge and is therefore appealable.[74] But where a creditor applies for an order to set aside the discharge of the bankrupt, and it is denied on the ground that, if all the facts claimed by the creditor were established, they would not warrant the court in refusing a discharge, this action of the court is more properly reviewable on a petition for revision.[75] Where a bank-

[70] Vallely v. Northern Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 254 U. S. 348, 41 Sup. Ct. 116, 65 L. Ed. ——, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; In re De Camp Glass Casket Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 558, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Bank of Elberton v. Swift (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 305, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; Hart-Parr Co. v. Barkley, 231 Fed. 913, 146 C. C. A. 109, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; In re Vanoscope Co., 233 Fed. 53, 147 C. C. A. 123, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778; B-R Electric & Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 206 Fed. 885, 124 C. C. A. 545, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

[71] In re Sutter Hotel Co., 241 Fed. 367, 154 C. C. A. 247, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620.

[72] Francis v. McNeal, 170 Fed. 445, 95 C. C. A. 168, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

[73] Feder v. Goetz (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 619, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57. But an order simply affirming the report of a special master on a contested application for a discharge is not a "judgment granting or denying a discharge," and therefore is not appealable. Ragan, Malone & Co. v. Cotton & Preston, 195 Fed. 69, 115 C. C. A. 576, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; Id., 200 Fed. 546, 118 C. C. A. 640, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597. And review of an order overruling objections to a bankrupt's discharge will be denied until the order is amended so as to show whether the objections were overruled on the merits, or under the impression that a proposed compromise had made them immaterial. In re Doyle, 220 Fed. 434, 137 C. C. A. 28, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28.

[74] In re Kuffler, 127 Fed. 125, 61 C. C. A. 259, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469. A denial of a motion to dismiss an application of a bankrupt for a discharge on undisputed facts presents a question of law reviewable by petition to revise. Lindeke v. Converse, 198 Fed. 618, 117 C. C. A. 322, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

[75] In re White, 248 Fed. 115, 160 C.

rupt's application for discharge was dismissed for a technical error, but no order was entered on the judge's minutes, and new proceedings were instituted, in which the former denial was pleaded as res judicata, it was held that the bankrupt was still entitled to have an order entered on the prior decision and to appeal therefrom.[76] An order denying an application for discharge will be reversed on appeal where clearly inconsistent with the testimony in the case and the referee's report overruling the specifications of objection.[77]

Since the statute provides (§ 14c) that "the confirmation of a composition shall discharge the bankrupt from his debts, other than those agreed to be paid by the terms of the composition and those not affected by a discharge," a judgment confirming a composition is in effect a judgment granting a discharge, and is therefore reviewable on appeal under this provision of the act.[78] On the same principle, an appeal lies from an order of the district court refusing to confirm a composition tendered by the debtor and accepted by the required number of creditors. The right of appeal given by this section, it is said, is reciprocal, and as the confirmation of a composition discharges the bankrupt, opposing creditors clearly have a right to appeal from such an order, and the bankrupt has an equal right to appeal from an order refusing the confirmation. Such an appeal, moreover, is within the spirit of the provisions for review, since the order in either case is a final termination of the composition proceedings which are provided for by the act as one of the methods for the settlement of the bankrupt's debts, and the effecting of his discharge from further liability thereon.[79]

C. A. 255, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458; In re Louisville Nat. Banking Co., 158 Fed. 403, 85 C. C. A. 513, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309. See Commercial Bank of Manchester v. Buckner, 20 How. 108, 15 L. Ed. 862. A petition to revise, and not an appeal, is the proper mode of reviewing an order setting aside a discharge. In re Jacobs, 241 Fed. 620, 154 C. C. A. 378, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385.

[76] In re Elkind, 175 Fed. 64, 99 C. C. A. 86, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

[77] Boyd v. Arnold, 149 Fed. 187, 79 C. C. A. 135, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 839.

[78] In re Friend, 134 Fed. 778, 67 C. C. A. 500, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595; In re Bay State Milling Co., 223 Fed. 778, 139 C. C. A. 598, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Gottlieb (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 730, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180.

[79] United States v. Hammond, 104 Fed. 862, 44 C. C. A. 229, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736, reversing In re Adler, 103 Fed. 444, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583. But see In re McVoy Hardware Co. (C. C. A.) 200 Fed. 949, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 322. Where an order dismissing a petition for confirmation of a composition was predicated wholly on the proposition of law that the proposed offer was not a "composition," and in no manner involved the question of the right of the bankrupt to be discharged, the order involves matter of law arising in bankruptcy proceedings and is reviewable on petition to revise and not on appeal. In re Graham & Sons, 252 Fed. 93, 164 C. C. A. 205, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 52.

§ 44. Same; Allowance or Rejection of Claim.—A judgment of the district court allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of a creditor against the estate of the bankrupt may be reviewed on appeal to the circuit court of appeals, provided the sum in controversy amounts to five hundred dollars.[80] In this case the remedy by appeal is exclusive, and the contested matters cannot be brought before the reviewing court on petition for the exercise of its power to "superintend and revise in matters of law."[81] Some of the circuit courts of appeals have thought that this latter power was properly invoked, instead of the remedy by appeal, where there was no dispute as to the validity or amount of the claim, but only a contention as to whether or not it was entitled to priority of payment out of the assets of the bankrupt estate.[82] But these rulings appear to be inconsistent with a late decision of the Supreme Court to the effect that, although the validity of the claim as a general claim against the estate is not denied, still an order of the district court establishing it as a lien against the estate is appealable, and is not the proper subject of a review under the revisory power of the circuit court of appeals. The court observed that "the fact that, after the adjudication of the claim, the trustee made no objection to its allowance as a valid claim, but intended only to contest its validity as a lien upon the bankrupt's estate, made no difference as to the appellate character of the controversy." And, speaking of section 24b of the bankruptcy act it was said: "We think this subdivision was not intended to give an additional remedy to those whose rights could be protected by an appeal under section 25 of the act. That section provides a short method by which rejected claims can be promptly reviewed by appeal in the [80] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 25a. And see Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Elliotte, 218 Fed. 567, 134 C. C. A. 295, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375; Keith v. Kilmer (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 643, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92; Duff v. Carrier, 55 Fed. 433, 5 C. C. A. 177; In re Place, 8 Blatchf, 302, 4 N. B. R. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 11,200; Morris v. Brush, 2 Woods, 354, 14 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 9,828.

[81] In re Dickson, 111 Fed. 726, 49 C. C. A. 574, 55 L. R. A. 349, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; Cooper v. Miller, 203 Fed. 383, 121 C. C. A. 567, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; Matter of Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 32 Sup. Ct. 446, 56 L. Ed. 725, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 852; First Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 20 Wall. 171, 22 L. Ed. 273; Pindel v. Holgate, 221 Fed. 342, 137 C. C. A. 158, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; King Lumber Co. v. National Exchange Bank of Roanoke, 253 Fed. 946, 165 C. C. A. 388, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651. In re Thompson (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 913, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; In re Craig Lumber Co. (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 692, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; In re Place, 8 Blatchf. 302, 4 N. B. R. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 11,200. But the denial of an application by an individual creditor of a bankrupt member of a firm for an allowance of interest out of the individual estate, subsequent to the allowance of his claim, is reviewable on original petition to revise. In re Chandler, 184 Fed. 887, 107 C. C. A. 209, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 865.

[82] In re Rouse, Hazard & Co., 91 Fed. 96, 33 C. C. A. 356, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234; In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496.

circuit court of appeals, and, in certain cases, in this court. The proceeding under section 24b, permitting a review of questions of law arising in bankruptcy proceedings, was not intended as a substitute for the right of appeal under section 25." [83]

In regard to the jurisdictional minimum of $500, it is held that the restriction has reference, not to the amount of the original claim, but to the amount of the allowance or rejection, and therefore to the amount which will be put in controversy by the appeal. Hence if a claim is reduced by the court and allowed for an amount smaller than that asserted by the creditor, or if a claim made up of various items is sifted, and some of the items disallowed and others allowed, it is necessary, in order to give a right of appeal, that the matter which will come before the appellate court, namely, the amount of the reduction or of the partial allowance or rejection, should reach the jurisdictional sum.[84] Thus, where a state filed a claim against a bankrupt corporation for the amount of a franchise tax alleged to be in arrear, and more than $500 of the claim was disallowed, the state was entitled to appeal.[85]

Where claims are made for the allowance of expenses, costs, and counsel fees, incurred by the petitioning creditors in involuntary cases, or by the trustee or by creditors who co-operate with him in contesting claims and prosecuting suits, it is held that an order of the court of bankruptcy allowing or disapproving such a claim is not a "judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim," but is an administrative order reviewable only on petition to revise.[86] But it is otherwise where the disputed item constitutes an integral part of the claim of a creditor. Thus, where a mortgage creditor of a bankrupt proves his claim as a secured debt, including the amount stipulated to be paid as an attorney's fee in case of foreclosure, and the district court reverses the action of

[83] Matter of Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 32 Sup. Ct. 446, 56 L. Ed. 725, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 852.

[84] Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., 138 Fed. 344, 70 C. C. A. 634, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780, citing Hilton v. Dickinson, 108 U. S. 165, 2 Sup. Ct. 424, 27 L. Ed. 688; Dows v. Johnson, 110 U. S. 233, 3 Sup. Ct. 640, 28 L. Ed. 128. Where the allowed claim against the bankrupt is for $2,500, with specific liens as security, an appeal lies to the circuit court of appeals, although no one of the liens amounts to $500, and the contest is only as to them. Stuart v. Britton Lumber Co., 227 Fed. 49, 141 C. C. A. 597, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719.

[85] In re Cosmopolitan Power Co., 137 Fed. 858, 70 C. C. A. 388, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[86] Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Switzer, 153 Fed. 362, 82 C. C. A. 438, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; W. J. Davidson & Co. v. Friedman, 140 Fed. 853, 72 C. C. A. 553, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489. And see Streeter v. Lowe, 184 Fed. 263, 106 C. C. A. 405, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774. Compare In re Curtis, 100 Fed. 784, 41 C. C. A. 59, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17.

the referee in rejecting the latter item, and orders its allowance, this constitutes an appealable judgment.[87]

The judgment must be one either "allowing or rejecting" a debt or claim, and this has reference to its right to share in the distribution of the estate.[88] Thus, an order allowing (or refusing to allow) a certain claim to be filed for the purpose of voting in the election of a trustee, is not of this character and therefore not appealable.[89] So of an order denying the right of a petitioner to participate in the individual assets of a member of a bankrupt firm, until after the individual creditors should have been paid.[90] But on the other hand, where a referee announces that, as the proofs stand before him, he declines to allow a creditor's claim as established, and the district court approves and affirms his decision, the creditor's claim has been "rejected" so as to give him a right of appeal.[91] And so there is an "allowance" where a creditor holding a note given by a bankrupt firm, and signed as surety by a member of the firm, also in bankruptcy, having proved the debt against the firm estate, also files it as an individual debt against the estate of the surety, and the court decides that it is provable against such individual estate.[92] And again, there is an appeal where the court of bankruptcy decides that the bankrupt is not entitled to a business homestead in certain property covered by a deed of trust, and orders that the incumbered property shall be applied to the claim of the creditor holding the security.[93] And so, where a creditor of a bankrupt, after the [87] In re Roche, 101 Fed. 956, 42 C. C. A. 115, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[88] A decision of the court of bankruptcy in a contest between the trustee and an adverse claimant of property may be reviewed on appeal, but not under the provision here under consideration, but on the ground that it involves a "controversy arising in a bankruptcy proceeding." See Rode & Horn v. Phipps, 195 Fed. 414, 115 C. C. A. 316, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; Fidelity Trust Co. v. Gaskell, 195 Fed. 865, 115 C. C. A. 527, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; In re Hamilton Automobile Co., 198 Fed. 856, 117 C. C. A. 135, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Kirkpatrick v. Harnesberger, 199 Fed. 886, 118 C. C. A. 334, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439; Franklin v. Stoughton Wagon Co., 168 Fed. 857, 94 C. C. A. 269, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; Houghton v. Burden, 228 U. S. 161, 33 Sup. Ct. 491, 57 L. Ed. —, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 16; Kiskadden v. Steinle, 203 Fed. 375, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346; Shea v. Lewis (C. C. A.) 206 Fed. 877, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[89] Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, 218 U. S. 299, 31 Sup. Ct. 25, 54 L. Ed. 1047, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66. An order expunging a claim filed on behalf of an estate, because not signed by both of the executors, is properly reviewable on petition to revise. In re Schaffner (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 977, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681.

[90] Euclid Nat. Bank v. Union Trust & Deposit Co., 149 Fed. 975, 79 C. C. A. 485, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834.

[91] Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 27 Sup. Ct. 681, 51 L. Ed. 945, 18 Am. Baukr. Rep. 1.

[92] In re Mueller, 135 Fed. 711, 68 C. C. A. 349, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

[93] Burow v. Grand Lodge of Sons of Hermann, 133 Fed. 708, 66 C. C. A. 538, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

filing of the petition, sold securities which he held, credited the proceeds on his debt, and filed a claim for the balance due, an order disallowing such sale and directing a resale of the securities at public auction is an order "rejecting" the claim and therefore appealable.[94]

Where the real contest is as to the right of a creditor who claims to occupy a favored position, either as being entitled to priority of payment or as entitled to assert a lien, the authorities are not entirely free from doubt on the right of appeal. But the better doctrine appears to be that, if there is no contest as to the validity of the claim as such, nor as to its amount, still, a decision of the district court either allowing or disallowing the creditor's claim to priority or to a lien is an appealable judgment under the statute.[95] At any rate, it is clear that, where the disallowance of a claim against the bankrupt's estate is properly before the circuit court of appeals on an appeal respecting the provability of the claim in general or respecting its amount, any question concerning an alleged lien, security, rank, or priority of the claim is an incident to its allowance or rejection and may therefore be reviewed by the appellate court, and such an appeal brings up both questions of law and of fact.[96]

Where a proof of debt is disallowed by the district court and an appeal taken to the circuit court of appeals, the cause of action prose-

[94] In re Mertens, 144 Fed. 818, 75 C. A. 548, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

[95] Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Matter of Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 32 Sup. Ct. 446, 56 L. Ed. 725, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 852; Bell v. Arledge, 192 Fed. 837, 113 C. C. A. 161, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; In re Doran, 154 Fed. 467, 83 C. C. A. 265, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; Nauman Co. v. Bradshaw, 193 Fed. 350, 113 C. C. A. 274, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565; In re Streator Metal Stamping Co. (C. C. A.) 205 Fed. 280, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; Wuerpel v. Commercial Germania Trust & Savings Bank, 238 Fed. 269, 151 C. C. A. 285, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 223; In re Hartzell, 209 Fed. 775, 126 C. C. A. 499, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; Bernard v. Lea, 210 Fed. 583, 127 C. C. A. 219, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Sterne v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 216 Fed. 862, 133 C. C. A. 66, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; Home Bank for Savings v. Lohm, 223 Fed. 633, 139 C. C. A. 179, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; In re Lane Lumber Co., 217 Fed. 546, 133 C. C. A. 398, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497; New Hampshire Savings Bank v. Varner, 216 Fed. 721, 132 C. C. A. 631, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. Compare Hutchinson v. Otis, 190 U. S. 552, 23 Sup. Ct. 778, 47 L. Ed. 1179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; Gaudette v. Graham, 164 Fed. 311, 90 C. C. A. 243; Emerson v. Castor, 236 Fed. 29, 149 C. C. A. 239, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719. In re York, 1 Abb. U. S. 503, 4 N. B. R. 479, Fed. Cas. No. 18,139. It is very difficult to reconcile the rulings of the Supreme Court in the three cases above cited, but the doctrine stated in the text appears to be in accordance with its latest decisions.

[96] In re Cosmopolitan Power Co., 137 Fed. 858, 70 C. C. A. 388, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; Courier-Journal Job Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., 101 Fed. 699, 41 C. C. A. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183; Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, 103 Fed. 932, 43 C. C. A. 377, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192; In re Hartzell, 209 Fed. 775, 126 C. C. A. 499, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; Morris v. Brush, 2 Woods, 354, 14 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 9,828.

cuted in the latter court must be the same one which was rejected by the former; and it is not permissible, under cover of an appeal, to transform the claim into a new and distinct cause of action.[97] The right of appeal in cases of this kind is not confined to the trustee and the creditor whose claim is in question, but may be exercised by a creditor who has opposed its allowance.[98] A trustee in bankruptcy may also appeal from an order denying his motion to expunge a claim allowed, unless further preferences were surrendered, and directing a return of a preference previously surrendered by the creditor.[99]

§ 45. Revisory Jurisdiction of Circuit Court of Appeals.—By the language of the statute, "the several circuit courts of appeal shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. Such power shall be exercised on due notice and petition by any party aggrieved." (Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 24b.) It will be observed that the proceeding thus authorized to be taken is not an appeal. The jurisdiction of the reviewing court is original and not appellate, and is to be invoked simply by a petition filed by the party seeking a review. In fact, as will be shown in the next section, many decisions hold that the provisions of the act relating to appeals and to petitions for review are mutually exclusive. And the two remedies are neither cumulative nor is one intended as a substitute for the other.[100]

The revisory jurisdiction, it is held, extends only to orders made in the bankruptcy proceedings proper, and does not embrace proceedings in plenary suits by the trustee against third parties which might have been maintained in a state court.[101] But it is otherwise as to orders made respecting funds or property in the control or custody of the court of bankruptcy, since these matters are subject to its summary jurisdiction. Thus, a petition lies under this clause of the act to review an order requiring the bankrupt to surrender to his trustee money or

[97] In re Jaycox, 12 Blatchf. 209, 13 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 7,237.

[98] In re Joseph, 2 Woods, 390, Fed. Cas. No. 7,532.

[99] Livingstone v. Heineman, 120 Fed. 786, 57 C. C. A. 154, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

[100] Matter of Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 32 Sup. Ct. 446, 56 L. Ed. 725, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 852. And see In re Charles Knosher & Co., 197 Fed. 136, 116 C. C. A. 560, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

[101] In re Rusch, 116 Fed. 270, 53 C. C. A. 631, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Jacobs, 99 Fed. 539, 39 C. C. A. 647, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671. Compare In re Bonesteel, 7 Blatchf. 175, 3 N. B. R. 517, Fed. Cas. No. 1,627. Where a court of bankruptcy has erroneously retained jurisdiction to adjudicate the rights of an adverse claimant, its judgment may be reviewed on petition to revise. Shea v. Lewis, 206 Fed. 877, 124 C. C. A. 537, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

property alleged to be in his possession and to belong to his estate in bankruptcy,[102] an order adjudging him in contempt for disobeying an order requiring him to pay over money to his trustee,[103] an order requiring him to indorse a liquor license so that it may be transferred to the trustee,[104] an order requiring the surrender of property by the bankrupt's voluntary assignee for creditors, or by his alienee.[105] So also, the decision of a court of bankruptcy on a petition claiming ownership of funds in the hands of a bankrupt's trustee, may be reviewed on petition where the facts are not in dispute,[106] and where a mortgagee in possession of property of the bankrupt surrenders it to the trustee, reserving the right to assert his lien against the proceeds of its sale, the proceeds are held by the court as assets of the bankrupt estate, and in dealing with the fund it acts as a court of bankruptcy, and its action on the claim of the mortgagee is subject to review on petition.[107] And this is also the proper method of reviewing a decision as to the effect of the adjudication in bankruptcy upon a judgment lien acquired within four months prior thereto.[108] Generally speaking, any order made by the district court in the exercise of its summary jurisdiction may be reviewed in this manner,[109] as also the various steps taken in the ordinary and usual administration of estates. Thus, a petition lies to revise [102] In re Purvine, 96 Fed. 192, 37 C. C. A. 446, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787; In re Shidlovsky, 224 Fed. 450, 140 C. C. A. 654, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 861; Henkin v. Fousek, 246 Fed. 285, 159 C. C. A. 15, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701.

[103] In re Cole, 163 Fed. 180, 90 C. C. A. 50, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 255, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; Henkin v. Fousek (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 557, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[104] Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646.

[105] In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Gutwillig, 92 Fed. 337, 34 C. C. A. 377, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388.

[106] Hutchinson v. Le Roy, 113 Fed. 202, 51 C. C. A. 159, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20. A summary order adjudicating an adverse claim, of which the court was without jurisdiction in such proceeding, is reviewable by petition to revise. Charles H. Brown Paint Co. v. Rockhold (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 139, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246.

[107] In re Antigo Screen Door Co., 123 Fed. 249, 59 C. C. A. 248, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359. And see In re Flatland, 196 Fed. 310, 116 C. C. A. 130, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476.

[108] In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 472, 76 C. C. A. 242, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

[109] In re Casey, 10 Blatchf. 376, 8 N. B. R. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 2,495; Hurst v. Teft, 12 Blatchf. 217, 13 N. B. R. 108, Fed. Cas. No. 6,939; In re Goldstein, 216 Fed. 887. Orders upon the allowance of counsel fees in connection with a proposed composition are reviewable by petition to revise. In re Kinnane Co.'s Estate, 242 Fed. 769, 155 C. C. A. 357, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593. And an order allowing fees to the counsel for the trustee is reviewable by petition to revise, and not by appeal. Yaryan Rosin & Turpentine Co. v. Isaac (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 710, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

in matter of law an order appointing a referee in bankruptcy,[110] an order removing or refusing to remove a trustee in bankruptcy from his office,[111] an order refusing to a bankrupt the right to amend his schedule in order to supply an accidental omission and claim his exemptions,[112] an order made on petition of a creditor directing the sale of property which had previously been set apart to the bankrupt as a homestead,[113] a decision upon an application to confirm a sale of the bankrupt's estate,[114] an order directing the distribution of the proceeds of a sale of real estate made by a trustee in bankruptcy,[115] a decision of the court of bankruptcy upon an application for the confirmation of a composition,[116] and an order directing that a set-off of mutual debts be allowed.[117] So also, where a proceeding in bankruptcy is dismissed for want of jurisdiction, the trustee, having duly excepted, is entitled to have the order of dismissal reviewed, for error in matters of law, on an original petition in the circuit court of appeals.[118] But the latter court will not ordinarily review a mere incidental question of practice in the district court.[119] And the reviewing court is not required to revise every interlocutory order in a bankruptcy proceeding, but only such decrees as have a certain degree of definiteness and finality.[120]

It should be remarked that the jurisdiction of the circuit court of appeals to review the proceedings of the district courts in bankruptcy, under this provision of the statute, is not limited by any measure of the amount in controversy or the value of the property involved.[121] But proceedings for review do not operate to transfer to the appellate court the entire bankruptcy proceeding, to be continued there as in a court of first instance. The proceeding is not a removal of the case to the appellate court, and the statute confers no power to execute the decrees

110 Ex parte Steele, 162 Fed. 694, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575.

111 In re Briggs, 61 Fed. 498, 9 C. C. A. 585.

112 Goodman v. Curtis, 171 Fed. 644, 98 C. C. A. 398, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

113 Ingram v. Wilson, 125 Fed. 913, 60 C. C. A. 618, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192.

114 In re York, 1 Abb. U. S. 503, 4 N. B. R. 479, Fed. Cas. No. 18,139.

115 In re Groetzinger & Sons, 127 Fed. 124, 62 C. C. A. 124, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467.

116 In re South Boston Iron Co., 4 Cliff. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 13,183.

117 Wilson v. National Bank of Rolla, 1 McCrary, 538, 3 Fed. 391.

118 In re New England Breeders' Club, 169 Fed. 586, 95 C. C. A. 84, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124. And see In re Seebold, 105 Fed. 910, 45 C. C. A. 117, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

119 In re Robinson, 6 Blatchf. 253, 2 N. B. R. 341, Fed. Cas. No. 11,939.

120 In re Chotiner, 218 Fed. 813, 134 C. C. A. 501, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288. Thus, a mere order of the District Court, allowing the trustee to amend his specifications of objection to the discharge of the bankrupt, has not the finality necessary for review. In re Pechin, 227 Fed. 853, 142 C. C. A. 377, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738.

121 In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 379, 6 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 2,802; In re Rouse, Hazard & Co., 91 Fed. 96, 33 C. C. A. 356, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234.

of the district court, or to assume primary exercise of the jurisdiction conferred on the latter as a court of bankruptcy.[122]

§ 46. Appellate and Revisory Jurisdiction Contrasted; Choice of Remedies.—Several of the circuit courts of appeals have held that the two grants of appellate jurisdiction to those courts contained in the bankruptcy act—that which gives them authority to review by appeal a controversy in bankruptcy, and that which gives them authority to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy—are not exclusive of each other, but are concurrent or cumulative grants, the former allowing a review of both questions of law and questions of fact, and the latter being restricted to the review of matters of law only, and that consequently an aggrieved party often has, and may exercise, a choice of remedy as between these two methods of bringing his contention before the appellate court.[123] And this view obtains some support from a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on a question certified to it by the circuit court of appeals in the eighth circuit. A petition for revision had been filed in the latter court, bringing up for review an order of the district court dismissing an involuntary petition in bankruptcy. This was clearly a "judgment refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt," and therefore certainly an appealable order under the statute. The circuit court of appeals requested the instruction of the Supreme Court on the question whether it had jurisdiction to review the order on original petition, and the question was answered in the affirmative. But the point actually decided by the Supreme Court was that the circuit court of appeals in the eighth circuit had jurisdiction to review on original petition the proceedings in bankruptcy in the district courts of Oklahoma (then a territory), although the appellate jurisdiction, properly so called, over those courts was vested in the supreme court of the territory.[124]

In accordance with this view of the statute, it has been held that the circuit court of appeals should not decline to take jurisdiction of a petition for revision, notwithstanding the fact that the controversy is one which ought to have been brought up by appeal, where no objection to the method of seeking a review is presented by the parties,

[122] In re Bininger, 7 Blatchf. 165, 3 N. B. R. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 1,418.

[123] In re McKenzie, 142 Fed. 383, 73 C. C. A. 483, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; In re Lee, 182 Fed. 579, 105 C. C. A. 117, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Holmes, 142 Fed. 391, 73 C. C. A. 491, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176.

[124] Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, 194 U. S. 311, 24 Sup. Ct. 725, 48 L. Ed. 992.

and where only questions of law are presented for its consideration.[125] So there is a decision that a party who has made a mistake in appealing from an order which is not appealable may be permitted, in lieu of his appeal, to file a petition for revision.[126] And several rulings may be noted to the effect that, where a party has duly taken an appeal from an order in bankruptcy, which is not appealable, the appellate court need not dismiss the appeal and put the party to the necessity of commencing anew with a petition for revision, but may simply treat the appeal as if it were a petition for revision, and proceed to decide the controversy, provided that questions of fact are not involved.[127] Further, the doubt and confusion which has hitherto prevailed as to the proper method of seeking a review of particular kinds of orders, increased by many conflicting decisions in different courts, has led counsel, in numerous instances, to take an appeal and at the same time file a petition for revision, in the same case and on the same question, in order to make sure of being heard by the appellate court. And several of the courts have held that taking this course does not defeat the right to have the matter determined on the merits in whichever proceeding is held to be appropriate, so that the circuit court of appeals, having both an appeal and a petition before it, may dismiss the one which it deems improper and retain and adjudicate upon the other, or, indeed, according to some of the authorities, it may retain both proceedings and hear both and grant relief upon either or both, according to its view of the justice and necessity of the case.[128]

But with the possible exception of the principle last stated, a generally contrary rule has come to prevail. In numerous cases it has been [125] In re Endlar, 192 Fed. 763, 113 C. C. A. 48. And see Samson v. Blake, 6 N. B. R. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 12,284.

[126] In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266.

[127] Chesapeake Shoe Co. v. Seldner, 122 Fed. 593, 58 C. C. A. 261, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466; Gaudette v. Graham, 164 Fed. 311, 90 C. C. A. 243; In re Williams' Estate, 156 Fed. 934, 84 C. C. A. 434, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266. But this course cannot be taken where the questions presented for review all involve matters of fact. In re Whitener, 105 Fed. 180, 44 C. C. A. 434, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198.

[128] In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; Nauman Co. v. Bradshaw, 193 Fed. 350, 113 C. C. A. 274, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565; Hendricks v. Webster, 159 Fed. 927, 87 C. C. A. 107, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Creech Bros. Lumber Co., 240 Fed. 8, 153 C. C. A. 44, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Fourth Nat. Bank of Wichita v. Smith, 240 Fed. 19, 153 C. C. A. 55, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 771. If a claimant whose demand has been rejected by the District Court brings both an appeal and a petition to revise, and on the appeal obtains reversal of the judgment below, he has then exhausted his remedies, and the petition should be thereupon dismissed. Union Nat. Bank v. Neill, 149 Fed. 720, 79 C. C. A. 426, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 853.

held that the right of appeal and the right of review on petition to revise are mutually exclusive; that an appealable judgment cannot be brought up on petition, and a question properly subject to be reviewed on petition cannot be made the subject of an appeal; that an appeal erroneously brought cannot be heard and determined as if it were a petition, and vice versa; and consequently, that a party who has mistaken his remedy must be dismissed and put to the institution of a new proceeding in the proper form.[129] The rule as now established recognizes the distinction between questions of law and questions of fact as the criterion by which to determine whether a petition or an appeal is the proper remedy. If the order or decision of the bankruptcy court sought to be reviewed resulted from a consideration of disputed facts and depended on findings made thereon, it is reviewable only by appeal, and not by petition to revise.[130] Thus, for example, an order based on a finding that a certain deed of trust had been paid involves a question of fact and can be reviewed only on appeal.[131] So, questions of fact concerning the rejection of a claim offered as a preferred claim, the chattel mortgage relied on being declared fraudulent, cannot be reviewed on petition for revision, but only by appeal.[132] And the allowance by the bankruptcy court for the services of attorneys of the petitioning creditors instituting involuntary bankruptcy proceedings, involves questions of fact only, so that a petition to revise should be denied.[133] But on the other hand, if only questions of law arise, no dispute as to facts being involved, appeal is not the proper remedy, but a petition for revision will lie.[134] And this is the case also where the facts upon which [129] Matter of Loving, 224 U. S. 183, 32 Sup. Ct. 446, 56 L. Ed. 725, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 852; In re Mueller, 135 Fed. 711, 68 C. C. A. 349, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256; Brady v. Bernard, 170 Fed. 576, 95 C. C. A. 656, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 342; Dickas v. Barnes, 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 654, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Kuffler, 127 Fed. 125, 61 C. C. A. 259, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469; First Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 131 Fed. 430, 65 C. C. A. 414, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440; In re Friend, 134 Fed. 778, 67 C. C. A. 500, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595; Salsburg v. Blackford, 204 Fed. 438, 122 C. C. A. 624, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; In re Martin, 201 Fed. 31, 119 C. C. A. 363, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 935; Kirsner v. Taliaferro, 202 Fed. 51, 120 C. C. A. 305, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; Courtney v. Shea, 225 Fed. 358, 140 C. C. A. 382, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753; Bothwell v. Fitzgerald, 219 Fed. 408, 135 C. C. A. 212, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261; In re Thompson (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 913, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; Feder v. Goetz (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 619, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[130] In re Leigh (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 678, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72; In re Prudential Lithograph Co. (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 469, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; T. E. Wells & Co. v. Sharp, 208 Fed. 399, 125 C. C. A. 615, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; Henderson v. Morse, 235 Fed. 518, 149 C. C. A. 64, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Henkin v. Fousek, 246 Fed. 285, 159 C. C. A. 15, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701.

[131] Rison v. Parham, 219 Fed. 176, 134 C. C. A. 550, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571.

[132] In re Russell, 247 Fed. 95, 159 C. C. A. 313, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234.

[133] Hall v. Reynolds, 224 Fed. 103, 139 C. C. A. 659, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707.

[134] In re Hawley Down-Draft Furnace

the order of the bankruptcy court was based were stipulated by the parties, so that the order involves only questions of law.[135]

§ 47. "Controversies" and "Proceedings in Bankruptcy" Distinguished.—The present bankruptcy act, in its twenty-third, twenty-fourth, and twenty-fifth sections, establishes a clear distinction between "proceedings in bankruptcy" and "controversies at law and in equity arising in bankruptcy proceedings." The statute also, in connection with that creating the circuit courts of appeals, prescribes the manner in which judgments or orders in each class of cases are reviewable, and such particular mode is exclusive. A judgment or decree in a controversy at law or in equity arising in bankruptcy proceedings is reviewable by the circuit court of appeals under its organic act and under § 24a of the bankruptcy law by appeal or on writ of error, as may be appropriate, while a judgment or order in a proceeding in bankruptcy, if one of those specifically enumerated in § 25a, is reviewable only by appeal, and, if not within such excepted cases (save a judgment rendered on the verdict of a jury, which may be reviewed on writ of error), can only be reviewed on original petition for revision in matter of law, as provided in § 24b of the bankruptcy act.[136]

It therefore becomes important to ascertain the nature of the distinction between these two classes of cases. And first, it is said that the term "proceedings in bankruptcy" includes "all questions arising in the administration of the bankrupt's estate, such as the appointment of receivers and trustees, orders requiring the bankrupt to surrender property of the estate in bankruptcy, orders requiring the bankrupt's voluntary assignee to surrender property of the estate, orders giving priority to the claim of a creditor, orders directing a set-off of mutual debts, and orders confirming a composition. These are questions which, with a view to the prompt administration and distribution of the assets of the bankrupt, the law permits to be summarily disposed of by revision." [137] Or as otherwise stated, proceedings in bankruptcy are con-

Co., 238 Fed. 122, 151 C. C. A. 198, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219; Weidhorn v. Levy, 252 U. S. 268, 40 Sup. Ct. 534, 64 L. Ed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493; Yaryan Rosin & Turpentine Co. v. Isaac (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 710, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Petition of Stuart (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 938; Nelson v. Hecksher, 219 Fed. 682, 135 C. C. A. 354; In re Reilly, 258 Fed. 121, 169 C. C. A. 207, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159. Where a decision of a district court involves both questions of law and questions of fact, it is reviewable by appeal, and not by petition to revise. In re Eilers Music House (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 915, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[135] In re J. B. Judkins Co., 205 Fed. 892, 124 C. C. A. 205, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

[136] In re Friend, 134 Fed. 778, 67 C. C. A. 500, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595. And see In re O'Gara Coal Co., 260 Fed. 742, 171 C. C. A. 480, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

[137] Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 337, 100 C. C. A. 647, fined to questions arising between the bankrupt and his creditors, and are the subject of administrative orders and judgments of the district court, from the petition for adjudication to the discharge, including intermediate administrative steps, and such controversies as arise between the parties to the bankruptcy proceedings as are involved in the allowing of claims and fixing their priorities, sales, allowances, and other matters which are disposed of summarily.[138] On the other hand, the "controversies" spoken of in the act are distinct and separable issues, raised between intervening parties, involving substantial rights, and such as might arise at common law or in equity, and of which the circuit courts of appeals would have had jurisdiction if those controversies had arisen in the federal courts in other cases outside of bankruptcy proceedings.[139] They are "those independent or plenary suits which concern the bankrupt's estate, and arise by intervention or otherwise between the trustees representing the bankrupt's estate and claimants representing some right or interest adverse to the bankrupt or his general creditors." [140]

24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; Barton Lumber & Brick Co. v. Prewitt, 231 Fed. 919, 146 C. C. A. 115, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718; In re John W. Farley & Co., 227 Fed. 378, 142 C. C. A. 74, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88. An order of the bankruptcy court refusing leave to intervene to stockholders of a corporation defendant in involuntary bankruptcy, is reviewable on petition to revise. Ogden v. Gilt Edge Consol. Mines Co., 225 Fed. 723, 140 C. C. A. 597, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893. So of an order overruling objections to its jurisdiction of the parties and the matter set forth in a petition by the trustee in bankruptcy for instructions to begin a suit. Board of Road Com'rs of Monroe County v. Keil, 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259. And a petition to revise is the proper remedy for reviewing an order enjoining the prosecution of a suit involving a fund over which the bankruptcy court has exclusive jurisdiction. Orinoco Iron Co. v. Metzel, 230 Fed. 40, 144 C. C. A. 338, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247. And so of an order fixing the fees of counsel for petitioning and intervening creditors. In re Jacobson, 239 Fed. 79, 152 C. C. A. 129, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[138] Thompson v. Mauzy, 174 Fed. 611, 98 C. C. A. 457, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489; In re Monarch Acetylene Co., 245 Fed. 741, 158 C. C. A. 143, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381, 818; J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Powell, 228 Fed. 1, 142 C. C. A. 457, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790; In re Weidhorn, 253 Fed. 28, 165 C. C. A. 48, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592. See Jones v. Ford, 254 Fed. 645, 166 C. C. A. 143, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88; Emerson v. Castor, 236 Fed. 29, 149 C. C. A. 239, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719. Compare In re Leterman, Becher & Co., 260 Fed. 543, 171 C. C. A. 327, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115. An order fixing the compensation of a referee in bankruptcy is reviewable by petition to revise and not by appeal. Kinkead v. J. Bacon & Sons, 230 Fed. 362, 144 C. C. A. 504, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390. And so of an order made by the court of bankruptcy directing a trustee to carry out a settlement previously made pursuant to authority given to him on his petition. Petition of Baxter (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 344, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453.

[139] In re Prudential Lithograph Co. (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 469, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; Burleigh v. Foreman, 125 Fed. 217, 60 C. C. A. 109, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74; Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Breyer Printing Co., 216 Fed. 878, 133 C. C. A. 82. A question of liability of petitioning creditors for costs of a receivership had in a bankruptcy proceeding is a controversy arising in bankruptcy between such creditors and adverse interests, so that an appeal, and not a petition to revise, is the proper remedy to review an order relating thereto. In re Veler, 249 Fed. 633, 161 C. C. A. 543, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[140] Barnes v. Pampel, 192 Fed. 525,

Among the class of "proceedings in bankruptcy," which are of a summary nature and are reviewable by petition for revision, we may include an order of the court of bankruptcy requiring a bankrupt to assign and turn over to his trustee certain property of his estate,[141] an order similarly made requiring the members of a bankrupt partnership to schedule and surrender their individual property,[142] and an order, made in the exercise of the summary jurisdiction, directing the turning over of money or property by any third person to a trustee in bankruptcy,[143] as, for instance, one to whom the bankrupt had previously made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and who has possession of the property,[144] or a receiver of a state court similarly in possession of assets of the estate.[145] This is also true of an order requiring a creditor of the bankrupt to return property which was mistakenly surrendered to him by a receiver in bankruptcy,[146] or one requiring such creditor to pay to the trustee the amount of an unlawful preference.[147] It may also be noted that orders of a court of bankruptcy relating to the sale of property of the bankrupt's estate are regular steps in the proceedings, and not "controversies" within the meaning of the act.[148] And so of decisions concerning the validity of mort-

113 C. C. A. 81, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192. A petition asserting a lien on property in possession of the bankruptcy court presents a controversy in a bankruptcy proceeding, reviewable by appeal. In re Sola e Hijo (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 822, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372. But a question raised by the claimant of property adverse to a trustee in bankruptcy, whether the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to determine that claim, is a question in a proceeding in bankruptcy, reviewable by petition to revise. Gibbons v. Goldsmith, 222 Fed. 826, 138 C. C. A. 252, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40. An order made in a common-law action wherein the bankrupt was a defendant cannot, after bankruptcy, be reviewed on a petition to revise orders in bankruptcy. In re Vanoscope Co., 233 Fed. 53, 147 C. C. A. 123, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778.

141 In re Mertens, 142 Fed. 445, 73 C. C. A. 561, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; Horton v. Mendelsohn, 240 Fed. 185, 161 C. C. A. 221, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648. But see Galbraith v. Rosenstein, 250 Fed. 415, 162 C. C. A. 515, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91. And compare Jones v. Blair, 242 Fed. 783, 155 C. C. A. 371, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

142 Dickas v. Barnes, 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 654, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

143 In re Rose Shoe Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 168 Fed. 39, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 725; O'Dell v. Boyden, 150 Fed. 731, 80 C. C. A. 397, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; Board of Education of Salt Lake City v. Leary, 236 Fed. 521, 149 C. C. A. 573, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

144 In re Farrell, 176 Fed. 505, 100 C. C. A. 63, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826; In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266. See Greey v. Dockendorff, 231 U. S. 513, 34 Sup. Ct. 166, 58 L. Ed. 339, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407.

145 In re Hecox (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 823, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314; State of Missouri v. Angle, 236 Fed. 644, 149 C. C. A. 640, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394.

146 In re Strobel (C. C. A.) 160 Fed. 916, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

147 In re First Nat. Bank, 155 Fed. 100, 84 C. C. A. 16, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766; Wuerpel v. Canal-Louisiana Bank & Trust Co., 231 Fed. 934, 146 C. C. A. 130, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 802.

148 Schuler v. Hassinger, 177 Fed. 119, 100 C. C. A. 539, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184; First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 198 U. S. 280, 25 Sup. Ct.

gages or deeds of trust on his property made by the bankrupt,[149] And an order allowing or rejecting the claim of a creditor offered for proof in the bankruptcy proceedings is not a "controversy" but a "proceeding in bankruptcy."[150] And so of the decision on objections by creditors to the accounts rendered by the trustee,[151] and of an order dismissing a petition for the revocation of the bankrupt's discharge.[152]

But on the other hand, a separate and independent litigation, whether instituted by petition in the bankruptcy court in the nature of a bill in equity or by intervention or by a plenary suit at law, concerning property alleged to belong to the estate in bankruptcy, and maintained between the trustee in bankruptcy, as representing the estate, and an adverse claimant representing some right or interest adverse to the bankrupt or his general creditors, is a "controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings."[153] Thus, where a trustee instituted proceedings

693, 49 L. Ed. 1051, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; In re McMahon (C. C. A.) 147 Fed. 684, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530; Pindel v. Holgate, 221 Fed. 342, 137 C. C. A. 158, Ann. Cas. 1916C, 983, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600; In re Veler, 249 Fed. 633, 161 C. C. A. 543, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736; Griffin v. Lenhart (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 675, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134. On petition to revise an order confirming a sale of a homestead, the allowance of a claim will be reviewable, where the necessity of a sale was mainly dependent upon the validity of such claim. Pindel v. Holgate, 221 Fed. 342, 137 C. C. A. 158, Ann. Cas. 1916C, 983, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600. An order sustaining the referee's dismissal of a rule to compel the trustees to convey land to the highest bidder, is not reviewable by appeal. Untereiner v. Camors, 228 Fed. 890, 143 C. C. A. 288, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122. An appeal cannot be taken from an order of sale of the bankrupt's real estate freed and discharged of the wife's right of dower, such order being reviewable only on petition to revise. Kelly v. Minor, 252 Fed. 115, 164 C. C. A. 227, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

[149] Morgan v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 466, 76 C. C. A. 236, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; Ritchie County Bank v. McFarland, 183 Fed. 715, 106 C. C. A. 153, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893. And so of an order determining the right to participate in the proceeds of admittedly valid securities. Snow v. Dalton, 203 Fed. 843, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240. And see Hutting Sash & Door Co. v. Stitt, 218 Fed. 1, 133 C. C. A. 641, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; Luck v. Staples, 255 Fed. 637, 167 C. C. A. 13, 42 Am. St. Rep. 198; Whitney Central Trust & Savings Bank v. United States Const. Co., 250 Fed. 784, 163 C. C. A. 116, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381. But appeal is the proper remedy to review an order in bankruptcy setting aside a deed as a voidable preference. Bridgeton Nat. Bank v. Way, 253 Fed. 731, 165 C. C. A. 325, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204. And see City Nat. Bank v. Slocum (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 11, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47.

[150] Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, 32 Sup. Ct. 67, 56 L. Ed. 118, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

[151] In re Moore, 166 Fed. 689, 92 C. C. A. 285, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; In re Kuhn Bros., 234 Fed. 277, 148 C. C. A. 179.

[152] Thompson v. Mauzy, 174 Fed. 611, 98 C. C. A. 457, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489. An order of a court of bankruptcy denying to a creditor a motion to set aside an order of adjudication is reviewable on petition to revise. Armstrong v. Norris, 247 Fed. 253, 159 C. C. A. 347, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735. See Youtsey v. Niswonger, 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109.

[153] Hewit v. Berlin Machine Works, 194 U. S. 296, 24 Sup. Ct. 690, 48 L. Ed. 986, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709; Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, 32 Sup. Ct. 67,

to set aside certain conveyances of real estate alleged to have been made in fraud of the bankrupt's creditors, and also to vacate the lien of a mortgage thereon as against the mortgagee, who was not a party to the bankruptcy proceedings and not a creditor of the estate, but a stranger thereto, asserting rights paramount to and independent of those of the estate, the proceeding was held to be a "controversy," as distinguished from a "proceeding in bankruptcy," within the meaning of the statute.[154] And so of a petition by a trustee to have certain adverse claims and liens on property belonging to the estate declared void, and for a sale of the property free and clear of the same,[155] and of a decision that a chattel mortgage on the property of the bankrupt is voidable by the trustee, and that the mortgagee has no lien and no preference in payment out of its proceeds.[156] So, where proceedings are instituted by the trustee to compel the payment to him of the proceeds of a sale of the bankrupt's assets, this is a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings,[157] and the same is true of a proceeding on a petition filed by an adverse claimant to recover property from a trustee in 56 L. Ed. 118, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; Barnes v. Pampel, 192 Fed. 525, 113 C. C. A. 81, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192; Deroshow v. Ott, 134 Fed. 740, 67 C. C. A. 644, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 34; Hinds v. Moore, 134 Fed. 221, 67 C. C. A. 149, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Mound Mines Co. v. Hawthorn, 173 Fed. 882, 97 C. C. A. 394, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; Loeser v. Savings Deposit Bank & Trust Co., 163 Fed. 212, 89 C. C. A. 642, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845; Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., 162 Fed. 675, 89 C. C. A. 467, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; Security Warehousing Co. v. Hand, 143 Fed. 32, 74 C. C. A. 186, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49; Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; John Deere Plow Co. v. McDavid, 137 Fed. 802, 70 C. C. A. 422, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653; In re First Nat. Bank, 135 Fed. 62, 67 C. C. A. 536, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; Walter Scott & Co. v. Wilson, 115 Fed. 284, 53 C. C. A. 76, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; Warren v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 9 Blatchf. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 17,201. But see In re Petronio, 220 Fed. 269, 136 C. C. A. 285, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470. A decree rejecting a landlord's claim against a bankrupt, but allowing a lien covering a portion of the rent is reviewable by appeal. Courtney v. Fidelity Trust Co., 219 Fed. 57, 134 C. C. A. 595, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400. An action on the bond of a trustee in bankruptcy is a plenary action, and the judgment therein is not reviewable by petition to revise. United States v. Ruggles, 221 Fed. 256, 137 C. C. A. 109, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91.

154 Barnes v. Pampel, 192 Fed. 525, 113 C. C. A. 81, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192. And see McCarty v. Coffin (C. C. A.) 150 Fed. 307, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148. See Bassett v. Evans, 253 Fed. 532, 165 C. C. A. 202, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 587. Where, on a petition by the trustee to sell the property of the bankrupt, a lien claimant files an intervening petition asserting the priority of his lien over a deed of trust, and the trustee under the trust deed files an answer, the question of priority thus raised is a controversy arising in a bankruptcy proceeding, and reviewable only by appeal. Feick v. Stephens, 250 Fed. 191, 162 C. C. A. 327, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333.

155 Thomas v. Woods, 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1180, 19 Ann. Cas. 1080, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132. See In re Streator Metal Stamping Co., 205 Fed. 280, 123 C. C. A. 444, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

156 Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176.

157 Mason v. Wolkowich, 150 Fed. 699, 80 C. C. A. 435, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 765, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.

bankruptcy.[158] So also is a dispute between a receiver in bankruptcy and an outside person as to whether a contract was made between them for the sale and purchase of property of the estate, brought before the bankruptcy court for determination,[159] and an order of the court of bankruptcy requiring the bankrupt's attorney to account for a payment received in contemplation of bankruptcy,[160] and an order to show cause why petitioners should not be punished for contempt for violating an injunction of the court of bankruptcy in a collateral matter.[161] And where a claim to personal property sold by the claimant to the bankrupt under a conditional sale was denied, because not filed within a year after the adjudication in bankruptcy, and also because the state law regulating such sales had not been complied with, the decision of the district court may be reviewed on appeal, as being a "controversy arising in bankruptcy."[162]

§ 48. Reviewing Discretionary Action of District Court.—In the ordinary course of a proceeding in bankruptcy, there are many matters which are not governed by fixed and invariable rules, but are necessarily confided to the sound judicial discretion of the judge of the bankruptcy court, to be exercised upon a consideration of the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case and in accordance with equitable principles. His decisions upon these matters may be brought before the circuit court of appeals for review, either by appeal or petition for revision, according as the one procedure or the other is appropriate. But the appellate courts have established and will apply the rule that, in cases of this kind, they will not reverse the decision of the court below unless it is unmistakably wrong, or unless a plain abuse of discretion is [158] Smith v. Means, 148 Fed. 89, 78 C. C. A. 10, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433; Liddon & Bro. v. Smith, 135 Fed. 43, 67 C. C. A. 517, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; American Piano Co. v. Heazel, 240 Fed. 410, 153 C. C. A. 336, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677; Howard D. Thomas Co. v. Beharrell, 229 Fed. 691, 144 C. C. A. 101, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 688; Gibbons v. Goldsmith, 222 Fed. 826, 138 C. C. A. 252, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re H. L. Herbert & Co. (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 351, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20; In re Gold, 210 Fed. 410, 127 C. C. A. 142, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18; Scandinavian-American Bank v. Sabin, 227 Fed. 579, 142 C. C. A. 211, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; Petition of National Discount Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 570, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12; In re Toole (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 195, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243. See In re Pierson, 233 Fed. 519, 147 C. C. A. 405, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 10. Denial of a petition filed by a claimant of money which had been turned over to the court of bankruptcy, asking to intervene against the trustee, was held reviewable only by petition to revise, and not by appeal. In re Consumers' Packing Co. (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 198, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338.

[159] In re J. Jungmann, Inc., 186 Fed. 302, 108 C. C. A. 380, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401. And see Dalton v. Humphreys, 242 Fed. 777, 155 C. C. A. 365, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360.

[160] In re Raphael (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 874.

[161] Morehouse v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 337, 100 C. C. A. 647, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

[162] Nauman Co. v. Bradshaw (C. C. A.) 193 Fed. 350, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565.

shown.[163] Thus, a circuit court of appeals will not attempt to control the discretion of the district court in the matter of appointing and removing referees.[164] And where the trustee selected by the creditors has been approved by the district judge, the appointment will not be disturbed unless an abuse of discretion is shown.[165] Again, the bankruptcy act provides that suits pending against a bankrupt "may be stayed" for a period of twelve months or until the question of his discharge is determined. This invests the bankruptcy court with authority, but does not impose upon it an invariable duty; and the granting or refusing of an order staying a pending suit rests in the discretion of the district court, and its action will not be interfered with by the appellate court unless it is plain that such discretion has been abused.[166] So, in the examination of third persons as witnesses in bankruptcy proceedings and the scrutiny of their books and papers, the court of bankruptcy should see to it that the examination is confined to the legitimate objects of such an investigation, that is, the discovery of assets of the bankrupt or of grounds of opposition to his discharge. But in this matter it is invested with a wide discretion, and a manifest abuse of such discretion must be shown before the appellate court will interfere.[167] The same rule has been applied on review of the action of the court of bankruptcy in refusing to permit an amendment of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy for the purpose of inserting additional alleged acts of bankruptcy,[168] its denying to a creditor the right to amend his specifica-

[163] In re J. B. Judkins Co. (C. C. A.) 205 Fed. 892, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; Blackstone v. Everybody's Store (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 752, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497; Fallows v. Continental & Commercial Trust & Savings Bank, 235 U. S. 300, 35 Sup. Ct. 29, 59 L. Ed. 238; In re Graff, 250 Fed. 997, 163 C. C. A. 247, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32; Babbitt v. Read, 240 Fed. 694, 153 C. C. A. 492, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508; In re Margolies (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 203, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412. Thus, rejection of charges against a receiver in bankruptcy for expenses incurred under receiver's orders or contracts for the preservation or care of the bankrupt's estate is within the discretion of the bankruptcy court, and its action thereon will not be reviewed on appeal. O'Brien v. Ely (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 64, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[164] Birch v. Steele, 165 Fed. 577, 91 C. C. A. 415, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[165] In re Merritt Const. Co., 219 Fed. 555, 135 C. C. A. 323, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616.

[166] In re Lesser, 99 Fed. 913, 40 C. C. A. 177, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758; New River Coal Land Co. v. Ruffner Bros., 165 Fed. 881, 91 C. C. A. 559, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; In re Guanacevi Tunnel Co. (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 316, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229. And the determination of the district judge as to whether administration of a mortgaged stock of merchandise shall be left to the state court, which had taken jurisdiction, or be brought into bankruptcy, will not be reviewed unless his discretion was clearly abused. Bank of Dillon v. Murchison, 213 Fed. 147, 129 C. C. A. 499, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740.

[167] In re Horgan, 98 Fed. 414, 39 C. C. A. 118, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 253.

[168] Pittsburgh Laundry Supply Co. v. Imperial Laundry Co., 154 Fed. 662, 83 C. C. A. 486, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756. And see Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223

tions in opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge,[169] its action in granting an alleged bankrupt more than the statutory five days in which to answer,[170] or in taking off the trustee's default in respect to opposing the bankrupt's discharge and allowing him to file objections,[171] the dismissal of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy for want of prosecution,[172] the refusal of a judge sitting in bankruptcy to sanction an arrangement between the bankrupt and certain of his creditors and persons who had received preferential transfers,[173] the refusal to allow a commission to a broker who had negotiated a sale of property of the bankrupt,[174] the action of the district court in fixing the time; terms, and conditions of a sale of the bankrupt's property,[175] and its adoption or rejection of a verdict of a jury which was taken as advisory only.[176] Even on the hearing of an application for discharge there may be room for the exercise of a judicial discretion which should not be interfered with on appeal. Thus, where the granting of a discharge to a bankrupt was objected to on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed the proceeds of property sold, and there was reasonable ground for the action of the district judge in discrediting his testimony given in explanation, the exercise of his discretion will not be reviewed.[177]

In view of the wide discretionary power of the court of bankruptcy over the allowance and fixing of fees to counsel, receivers, and others, its decisions on these matters will not be reversed on review unless a plain abuse of discretion appears.[178] Thus, on a petition to revise an order making certain allowances to a bankrupt's receiver and his counsel, where the record merely showed the receipts and disbursements and that nearly half of the assets were used for expenses of administration, this was held not sufficient to show an abuse of the discretion vested in the court of bankruptcy.[179]

Fed. 501, 139 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179.

[169] In re Carley, 117 Fed. 130, 55 C. C. A. 146, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720.

[170] Blackstone v. Everybody's Store, 207 Fed. 752, 125 C. C. A. 290, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep.. 497.

[171] In re Horowitz, 250 Fed. 106, 162 C. C. A. 278, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[172] In re Levi & Klauber, 142 Fed. 962, 74 C. C. A. 132, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294.

[173] Mulford v. Fourth Street Nat. Bank, 157 Fed. 897, 85 C. C. A. 225, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742.

[174] Gold v. South Side Trust Co., 179 Fed. 210, 102 C. C. A. 476, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578.

[175] Schuler v. Hassinger, 177 Fed. 119, 100 C. C. A. 539, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184; In re Throckmorton, 196 Fed. 656, 116 C. C. A. 348, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487. The discretion of the bankruptcy court in approving or setting aside a public sale of the bankrupt's property will not be disturbed or interfered with unless abused. Jacobsohn v. Larkey, 245 Fed. 538, 157 C. C. A. 650, L. R. A. 1918C, 1176, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563.

[176] Oil Well Supply Co. v. Hall, 128 Fed. 875, 63 C. C. A. 343, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738.

[177] Seigel v. Cartel, 164 Fed. 691, 90 C. C. A. 512.

[178] In re Grant, 238 Fed. 132, 151 C. C. A. 208, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210; In re Kinnane Co.'s Estate, 242 Fed. 769, 155 C. C. A. 357, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593.

[179] In re Cash-Papworth Grow-Sir, 210

§ 49. Time of Taking Appeal or Petition for Review.—As to appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, it is provided by General Order No. 36 that an appeal to that court "from a circuit court of appeals, or from the supreme court of a territory, or from the supreme court of the District of Columbia, or from any court of bankruptcy whatever, shall be taken within thirty days after the judgment or decree." But it is held that this limitation does not apply to a writ of error from the federal supreme court to a court of bankruptcy, presenting the question of the jurisdiction of the latter to make an adjudication of bankruptcy, but such proceeding is governed by the two-year limitation fixed by other statutes.[180] But where the limitation of thirty days is applicable, the time cannot be extended by filing a petition for rehearing after the thirty days have expired.[181] The same order requires that the court below, at or before the time of entering the judgment, shall make and file findings of fact and conclusions of law. A sufficient compliance with this direction is shown where, the appeal having been taken within the thirty days, the circuit court of appeals made its findings of fact and conclusions of law a part of the record by an order made within the thirty days, directing the same to be filed nunc pro tunc as of the date of the judgment.[182]

As to appeals from a court of bankruptcy to a circuit court of appeals, in the three cases specified in the twenty-fifth section of the bankruptcy act, the requirement is that "such appeal shall be taken within ten days after the judgment appealed from has been rendered." In connection with this provision is to be read another section of the act, which directs that "whenever time is enumerated by days in this act, the number of days shall be computed by excluding the first and including the last, unless the last fall on a Sunday or holiday, in which event the day

Fed. 24, 126 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.

[180] Frederic L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., 212 U. S. 445, 29 Sup. Ct. 332, 53 L. Ed. 591, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484. So an appeal to the Supreme Court from a decree of a circuit court of appeals on a bill in equity brought by a trustee in bankruptcy to set aside a transfer of property by the bankrupt, alleged to have been made in fraud of creditors, need not be taken within the thirty days prescribed by the general orders, but as the appellate jurisdiction is under, or the same as that under, the circuit court of appeals act of 1891, the appeal is in time if taken within a year. Thomas v. Sugarman, 218 U. S. 129, 30 Sup. Ct. 650, 54 L. Ed. 967, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 250. In effect, the limitation of time in the bankruptcy act and in the general orders relates only to appeals taken expressly under the bankruptcy statute, and does not apply to an appeal from a decision rendered on a formal appeal taken under section 24a of the act in a "controversy" arising in a bankruptcy proceeding. Hobbs v. Head & Dowst Co. (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 811, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[181] Conboy v. First Nat. Bank, 203 U. S. 141, 27 Sup. Ct. 50, 51 L. Ed. 128, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

[182] Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 53 L. Ed. 772, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

last included shall be the next day thereafter which is not a Sunday or a legal holiday." [183] A judgment of a court of bankruptcy is presumptively "rendered" on the date of its filing with the clerk, and the ten days for taking an appeal will begin to run from that time, notwithstanding the order bears an earlier date.[184] Where an appeal in a proper case is prayed and allowed within the ten days, as prescribed by the statute, the failure to file a bond and serve the citation until a few days after such period will not necessitate a dismissal of the appeal, no material prejudice being shown.[185] But the requirement as to the time of taking the appeal itself is imperative. If the appeal is not taken within the ten days limited, the appellate court will have no jurisdiction of the case and must dismiss the attempted appeal.[186] An appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy does not stay further proceedings in the case (such as ruling the bankrupt to file his schedules), unless a supersedeas is also taken.[187]

The very short time allowed for taking an appeal in these cases has led to numerous attempts to obtain a review by some indirect method [183] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 31. See In re York, 1 Abb. U. S. 503, 4 N. B. R. 479, Fed. Cas. No. 18,139. The word "holiday" includes "Christmas, the fourth of July, the twenty-second of February, and any day appointed by the President of the United States or the Congress of the United States as a holiday or as a day of public fasting or thanksgiving." Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 14.

[184] Peterson v. Nash Bros., 112 Fed. 311, 50 C. C. A. 260, 55 L. R. A. 344, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; First Nat. Bank of Paris v. Yerkes, 238 Fed. 278, 151 C. C. A. 294, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136. The time for taking an appeal from a judgment entered nunc pro tunc as of an earlier date runs from the actual entry of the judgment, not from the earlier date. In re Stafford (D. C.) 240 Fed. 155, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469. Where an order of adjudication was set aside on motion, from which no appeal was taken, and a subsequent independent order of adjudication was made after further hearing, the time for taking an appeal was held to run from the date of the second order. Cameron v. National Surety Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 874, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67.

[185] Columbia Ironworks v. National Lead Co., 127 Fed. 99, 62 C. C. A. 99, 64 L. R. A. 645, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; Morris v. Brush, 2 Woods, 354, 14 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 9,828; Fellows v. Burnap, 14 Blatchf. 63, Fed. Cas. No. 4,721. Compare Norcross v. Nave & McCord Mercantile Co., 101 Fed. 796, 42 C. C. A. 29, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317. An appeal is taken in time where the petition for appeal was filed within ten days and promptly presented, though allowed more than ten days after the decree. Robertson Banking Co. v. Chamberlain, 228 Fed. 500, 143 C. C. A. 82, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198.

[186] Williams Bros. v. Savage, 120 Fed. 497, 56 C. C. A. 647, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Nazima Trading Co. v. Martin (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 838, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; Sedgwick v. Fridenberg, 11 Blatchf. 77, Fed. Cas. No. 12,611; In re Alexander, Chase, 295, 3 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 160; In re Kyler, 6 Blatchf. 514, 3 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 7,957; In re Place, 8 Blatchf. 302, 4 N. B. R. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 11,200; Ex parte Woollen, 104 U. S. 300, 26 L. Ed. 768; Wood v. Bailey, 21 Wall. 640, 12 N. B. R. 132, 22 L. Ed. 689. And see Rhame v. Southern Cotton Oil Co., 230 Fed. 403, 144 C. C. A. 545, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732. But it seems that an appeal not taken in time may be treated as a petition to revise (which would be in time), where the only question raised is one of law. Graham v. Faith, 253 Fed. 32, 165 C. C. A. 52, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

[187] In re Brady, 169 Fed. 152, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364.

of proceeding after the expiration of the time. But the courts have generally disapproved such devices. Some have gone so far as to declare that the time limited by the statute cannot be extended or revived by any subsequent proceeding whatever.[188] Thus, when the right to appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy has been lost by the expiration of the ten days, it cannot be revived by moving to vacate the adjudication,[189] nor by the subsequent entry of an alias adjudication.[190] But the favorite method of seeking to recover a right of appeal lost by the expiration of the limited time has been to move for a rehearing. In a case under the act of 1867, where the omission to take an appeal in due time arose from a mistake in the selection of the remedy (the appellant thinking that he should take a petition for review), the Supreme Court of the United States suggested that perhaps the district court would grant a review of its own decree, in order that a regular appeal might, if necessary, be taken.[191] And in one of the earlier decisions under the present statute this course was taken, the district court granting a rehearing to a trustee in bankruptcy who had lost his right of appeal by the expiration of the time prescribed, but without culpable neglect on his part, for the mere purpose of reviving such right.[192] But the general weight of opinion is against this practice. The doctrine is apparently established that, while the district court has power to grant a rehearing for the sole purpose of reviving a right of appeal, the effect is to nullify the explicit provisions of the statute, which, no doubt, were inserted for very good reasons, and therefore if the court is of opinion that there is no sufficient ground for a rehearing on the merits (aside from any question of appealing) it should not be granted on a mere pretense and for the real purpose of permitting an appeal to be taken.[193] But if a petition for rehearing is filed within ten days after the judgment or order complained of, an appeal taken within ten days after the court's ruling on the petition will be in time.[194]

[188] Brady v. Bernard, 170 Fed. 576, 95 C. C. A. 656, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 342.

[189] In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; In re Goldberg, 167 Fed. 808, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828.

[190] In re Berkebile, 144 Fed. 577, 75 C. C. A. 333, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277.

[191] Stickney v. Wilt, 23 Wall. 150, 11 N. B. R. 97, 23 L. Ed. 50.

[192] In re Wright, 96 Fed. 820, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184.

[193] Conboy v. First Nat. Bank, 203 U. S. 141, 27 Sup. Ct. 50, 51 L. Ed. 128, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773; In re Hudson Clothing Co., 140 Fed. 49, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; Morgan v. Benedum, 157 Fed. 232, 84 C. C. A. 675, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Girard Glazed Kid Co., 129 Fed. 841, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295; Rode & Horn v. Phipps (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 414, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; In re Thompson (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 913, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500.

[194] Mills v. J. H. Fisher & Co., 159 Fed. 897, 87 C. C. A. 77, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237. Where, after an order allowing a claim in bankruptcy, a rehearing is granted, the time for taking an appeal is extended and runs from the time the order is made final. Todd v.

In the three cases specified in the twenty-fifth section of the statute, viz., appeals from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt, from a judgment granting or denying a discharge,[195] and from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over,[196] the ten-day limitation is imperative, and these cases cannot be otherwise appealed or after that time. But this limitation does not apply to appeals in "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings," or independent proceedings instituted for the recovery of assets of the estate, or to set aside alleged preferences, which are governed by the general provisions regulating appeals to the circuit courts of appeals, and may be brought within the time fixed by the statute creating those courts, which is six months.[197]

When the proceeding is by petition for revision, neither the statute nor the general orders prescribe any limitation of time. In the second circuit, Rule 38 of the circuit court of appeals directs that the petition for revision must be filed and served within ten days after the entry of the order sought to be reviewed, unless, before the expiration of that time, and for cause shown, the judge of the court of bankruptcy shall make an order enlarging the time. This rule is enforced, and it is held that stipulations by the parties cannot take the place of the discretionary order of enlargement by the bankruptcy court.[198] In the first and eighth

Alden, 245 Fed. 462, 157 C. C. A. 624, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323.

[195] The same provision applies to an appeal from an order denying an application to revoke a bankrupt's discharge. Thompson v. Mauzy, 174 Fed. 611, 98 C. C. A. 457, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 489. And to an appeal from an order confirming a composition. In re Brookstone Mfg. Co., 239 Fed. 697, 152 C. C. A. 531, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552.

[196] Postlethwaite v. Hicks, 165 Fed. 897, 91 C. C. A. 575, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70.

[197] Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Kemper, 220 Fed. 847, 136 C. C. A. 593, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; Bank of Ragland v. Hudson, 247 Fed. 241, 159 C. C. A. 335, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 61; Youtsey v. Niswonger, 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109; Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 107 Feb. 891, 47 C. C. A. 43, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13; Steele v. Buel, 104 Fed. 968, 44 C. C. A. 287, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Youngstrom, 153 Fed. 98, 82 C. C. A. 232, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572; Kenova Loan & Trust Co. v. Graham, 135 Fed. 717, 68 C. C. A. 355, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; In re Martin, 201 Fed. 31, 119 C. C. A. 363, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 935.

[198] In re John M. Linck Const. Co., 225 Fed. 488, 140 C. C. A. 18, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 860; In re Vanoscope Co., 233 Fed. 53, 147 C. C. A. 123, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778; In re Armann, 247 Fed. 483, 159 C. C. A. 537, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666; Feder v. Goetz (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 619, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; In re Tanenhaus, 211 Fed. 971, 128 C. C. A. 469, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Strobel, 160 Fed. 916, 88 C. C. A. 98, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; In re Brown, 174 Fed. 339, 98 C. C. A. 211, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; In re Light, 174 Fed. 341, 98 C. C. A. 213. But where an extension of time for filing a petition to revise is obtained, the petition may be considered though not filed within the ten-day period prescribed by the rule of court. In re Armann, 247 Fed. 954, 160 C. C. A. 618, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Grant, 238 Fed. 132, 151 C. C. A. 208, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210. Where the rule of court requires a petition to revise to be filed within 20 days, but authorizes the District Judge to en-circuits, the time has been fixed at six months,[199] that being the time allowed for appeals in cases other than bankruptcy proceedings. The reasoning of these courts is that the petition is in the nature of an appeal, and since the matter brought up is not within the three classes of cases in which the bankruptcy law imposes a limitation of ten days, it must be governed by the general law of appeals. Or else they proceed on the theory that a petition for revision more nearly resembles a bill of review than any other known proceeding, and it is the settled rule in equity in the federal courts that a bill of review must be filed within the time allowed by statute for appeal.[200] But elsewhere it is held, as it was held under the act of 1867, which also omitted to prescribe any particular time within which a petition for revision must be filed, that the application must be made within a reasonable time, in order that the purpose of the act to effect a speedy settlement of the bankrupt's affairs may not be thwarted, but that it should not be dismissed unless it appears that there has been an unreasonable delay, amounting to laches, and operating to the prejudice of parties in interest.[201] What is a reasonable time must of course depend upon the particular circumstances. But it has been held that a delay of thirty days is not too great a time,[202] that the lapse of more than six months is not necessarily an imperative reason for dismissing the petition,[203] but that (in view of the particular circumstances) a delay of six months and twelve days does not answer the requirement of reasonably prompt action,[204] that neglect to file the petition for over seven months amounts to laches,[205] and that a petition filed three years after the matter sought to be reviewed had been disposed of was clearly too late.[206] large the time for such filing, it is not imperatively necessary that jurisdiction to extend the time should be exercised within the original 20 days. In re De Camp Glass Casket Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 558, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[199] In re Worcester County, 102 Fed. 808, 42 C. C. A. 637, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; In re Thomlinson Co., 154 Fed. 834, 83 C. C. A. 550, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691; In re Holmes, 142 Fed. 391, 73 C. C. A. 491, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689.

[200] Reed v. Stanley (C. C. A.) 97 Fed. 521.

[201] First Nat. Bank v. Cooper, 20 Wall. 171, 22 L. Ed. 273; In re Beck, 31 Fed. 554; In re New York Economical Printing Co., 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 665, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; In re Groetzinger & Sons, 127 Fed. 124, 62 C. C. A. 124, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467; In re Milgraum, 133 Fed. 802, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Wink (D. C.) 206 Fed. 348, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298. The bankruptcy court has power, upon cause shown, to suspend the rule requiring petitions for review to be set down within a limited number of days. In re Libby (D. C.) 253 Fed. 278.

[202] Littlefield v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 3 Cliff. 371, 4 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 8,400.

[203] In re Groetzinger & Sons, 127 Fed. 124, 62 C. C. A. 124, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467; In re Kinnane Co.'s Estate, 242 Fed. 769, 155 C. C. A. 357, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593.

[204] In re Milgraum, 133 Fed. 802, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

[205] First Nat. Bank v. Peavy, 133 Fed. 1019, 66 C. C. A. 125.

[206] Blanchard v. Ammons, 183 Fed. 556, 106 C. C. A. 102, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

The right of review on petition can be claimed only in respect to some proceeding which is pending in the court of bankruptcy.[207] But the supervisory jurisdiction may be exercised by the circuit court of appeals before the district court has taken final or even interlocutory action on the matter in question, if it has been considered and an opinion rendered by the latter court.[208] And exceptions to a proposed distribution of the bankrupt's estate must be filed before the final decree of confirmation is entered; exceptions taken, and a petition for review based thereon, if not filed until after the confirmation and after the final dividend has been distributed in accordance with it, will not be considered.[209]

§ 50. Parties to Appeal or Review.—Where a single order or judgment is made by a district court in a bankruptcy proceeding, which determines a question affecting alike different claimants, they may unite in an appeal therefrom, although their interests are several and distinct,[210] and although some complain of one alleged error and some of another, since, on such an appeal, all prior rulings are reviewable.[211] And if necessary parties are not joined in an appeal, in due time, it will become inoperative in so far as it challenges or affects their rights.[212] Specially in regard to an appeal from a decree of the district court making an adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy, it is held that creditors who appear in opposition to the petition and contest the adjudication have a right to appeal from the decree.[213] So also in regard to opposition to a bankrupt's discharge.[214] But a bankrupt whose application to have a composition confirmed was not formally opposed by creditors cannot appeal from a decree of refusal, there being a want of parties.

[207] In re Alexander, Chase, 295, 3 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 160.

[208] In re Kyle (C. C.) 181 Fed. 617. The time to file a petition for review commences from the entry of orders directing payment to a trustee in bankruptcy and denying an application to open the case for additional testimony. In re Place (D. C.) 224 Fed. 778, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426. But a petition to review a proceeding for the adjudication of a bankrupt must not be filed prematurely. It is necessary that the issues raised by the answer should first be tried, and that an adjudication should be granted or refused. In re Berthoud, 238 Fed. 797, 151 C. C. A. 647, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

[209] In re Heebner, 132 Fed. 1003, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

[210] Crim v. Woodford, 136 Fed. 34, 68 C. C. A. 584, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

[211] Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., 150 Fed. 71, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

[212] Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., 138 Fed. 344, 70 C. C. A. 634, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

[213] In re Meyer, 98 Fed. 976, 39 C. C. A. 368, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Dandridge & Pugh, 209 Fed. 838, 126 C. C. A. 562, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15. The bankrupt himself must be a party to an appeal from the adjudication, but though not originally joined, he may make himself a party by voluntary appearance and waiver of notice. Hill v. Western Electric Co., 214 Fed. 243, 130 C. C. A. 613, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333.

[214] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 14, 25a. A creditor's right to be heard on appeal with respect to the granting of the bankrupt's discharge cannot be prejudiced by the acceptance of a proposed compromise as the question is merely between the bankrupt and the court.[215] But if a composition is confirmed, and the assenting creditors have received the amounts to which they are entitled, they are necessary parties to an appeal by another creditor.[216]

In the case where a creditor presents a claim against the estate of the bankrupt, and another creditor objects to and contests it, and it is allowed, the authorities are not agreed as to whether an appeal may be taken directly by the contesting creditor.[217] Some decisions maintain that, as his share of the estate will be increased or diminished by the decision of the question at issue, he is so directly affected by the ruling of the district court as to be entitled to appeal in his own name.[218] But other authorities hold the view that the contesting creditor is not the only person whose pecuniary interests will be affected, but the same is true of all the creditors of the estate alike, and consequently the appeal can only be taken by the trustee in bankruptcy, who is the representative of all the creditors.[219] However, if the trustee, in such a case, refuses to appeal, the objecting creditor may move the district court to direct the trustee to take an appeal or to permit the creditor to prosecute an appeal in the name of the trustee. The granting of such leave is in the discretion of the court, and may be conditioned on the payment of the costs of the litigation by the objecting creditor, if the appeal is unsuccessful.[220] In one case, the circuit court of appeals refused to dismiss an appeal taken by the objecting creditor, instead of by the trustee, where it appeared that the latter had refused to allow the use of his name for the purpose of an appeal, when the time for appealing by a majority of the other creditors. In re Doyle, 220 Fed. 434, 137 C. C. A. 28, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28.

215 Ross v. Saunders, 105 Fed. 915, 45 C. C. A. 123, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

216 Marshall Field & Co. v. Wolf & Bro. Dry Goods Co., 120 Fed. 815, 57 C. C. A. 326, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 693. But see In re Gottlieb (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 730, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 464, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180, holding that, to an appeal from an order confirming a composition by a creditor who objected on grounds which go to the bankrupt's right to a discharge, other creditors are not necessary parties.

217 Where, after proof of a claim against a bankrupt's estate by an importer of wool, it was assigned to another, and later expunged, on a holding that the claim belonged to a bank, there was a sufficient controversy between the bank and the assignee of the claim to entitle the latter to appeal. Assets Realization Co. v. Sovereign Bank of Canada, 210 Fed. 156, 126 C. C. A. 662.

218 In re Roche, 101 Fed. 956, 42 C. C. A. 115, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., 138 Fed. 344, 70 C. C. A. 634, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; In re Creech Bros. Lumber Co., 240 Fed. 8, 153 C. C. A. 44, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

219 Chatfield v. O'Dwyer, 101 Fed. 797, 42 C. C. A. 30, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; Foreman v. Burleigh, 109 Fed. 313, 48 C. C. A. 376, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 230.

220 Chatfield v. O'Dwyer, 101 Fed. 797, 42 C. C. A. 30. And see In re National Pressed Brick Co., 212 Fed. 878, 129 C. C. A. 398; Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, 163 Fed. 155, 89 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 919.

had so nearly expired that it was impossible to obtain an order requiring him to consent in time, and that the district court had subsequently made an order that the appeal taken should be continued in the name of the trustee in connection with the appealing creditor.[221]

Where the proceeding is by petition for revision, instead of appeal, greater latitude is permissible, as this somewhat summary and exceptional procedure is not governed by the rules relating to appeals proper.[222] But still, there must be, in the language of the statute, a "party aggrieved," in order to sustain the petition.[223] A person who is not a party to the bankruptcy proceeding at all cannot file such a petition.[224] Nor will the appellate court review an order or decision at the instance of a petitioner who cannot be in any manner prejudiced by it,[225] or one who has no longer any interest in the particular matter to be determined.[226] So, where an order requiring a bankrupt to turn over to his trustee a life insurance policy which he had assigned to another person prior to the adjudication does not purport to affect the rights of the assignee, neither such assignee nor the bankrupt can be heard to complain of it, the former because his rights are not in jeopardy, the latter because his title, whatever it was, passed to the trustee by operation of law.[227] The bankrupt himself may bring a petition for revision. And the fact that he has accepted the benefit of a decision of the referee allowing him certain personal property exemptions, does not preclude him from appealing from so much of the same order as relates to his homestead exemption.[228] Any lien creditor may maintain a petition for revision of the proceedings of the court below,[229] including a judgment creditor who has proved his claim.[230] And on the other hand, where claims adverse or paramount to the rights of the estate in bankruptcy are put forward by attaching or other creditors, the trustee is a proper party to maintain a petition for revision, as the representative of creditors in general.[231] A statement by counsel that they are authorized by a cor-

[221] McDaniel v. Stroud, 106 Fed. 486, 45 C. C. A. 446, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685.

[222] In re Jemison Mercantile Co., 112 Fed. 966, 50 C. C. A. 641, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588.

[223] An alleged bankrupt is not a "party aggrieved" by an order for the examination of his wife, and he cannot maintain a petition to revise the same. In re Weidenfeld, 254 Fed. 677, 166 C. C. A. 175, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[224] Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 7 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 127.

[225] In re Shoe & Leather Reporter, 129 Fed. 588, 64 C. C. A. 156, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248.

[226] In re Baker, 104 Fed. 287, 43 C. C. A. 536, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778.

[227] In re Madden, 110 Fed. 348, 49 C. C. A. 83, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614.

[228] In re Letson, 157 Fed. 78, 84 C. C. A. 582, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

[229] In re Taliafero, 3 Hughes, 422, Fed. Cas. No. 13,736.

[230] Clark v. Pidcock, 129 Fed. 745, 64 C. C. A. 273, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309.

[231] In re Glenn Iron Works, 20 Fed. 674; In re Utt, 105 Fed. 754, 45 C. C. A. 32, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

poration to file such a petition, for a review of proceedings in bankruptcy against the corporation, and to appear for it in the appellate court, will be taken as conclusive evidence of their authority, in the absence of proof to the contrary.[232]

§ 51. Practice on Appeal.—Since a proceeding in bankruptcy is in the nature of a suit in equity, and since the statute provides that "appeals as in equity cases" may be taken in bankruptcy, the practice on an appeal in bankruptcy is governed by substantially the same rules as an appeal in equity, except where otherwise directed.[233] General Order No. 36 directs that "appeals from a court of bankruptcy to a circuit court of appeals, or to the supreme court of a territory, shall be allowed by a judge of the court appealed from or of the court appealed to, and shall be regulated, except as otherwise provided in the act, by the rules governing appeals in equity in the courts of the United States."[234] The statute itself directs that "such appeal shall be taken within ten days after the judgment appealed from has been rendered, and may be heard and determined by the appellate court in term or vacation, as the case may be."[235]

Where a creditor desires to appeal from the rejection of his claim by the district court,—and generally speaking, where any party in interest desires a review of a judgment or order affecting his rights,—he must strictly comply with the requirements of the act and of the general order applicable to the case, and in default of such compliance, the appellate court must dismiss the attempted appeal.[236] Thus, if notice of the appeal is now necessary, as it was under the act of 1867, it is an indispensable requisite, and for want of it the appeal must be dismissed.[237] But the present statute makes no requirement as to notice, except in the case of a petition for revision, which is altogether a different proceeding from an appeal, and it is doubtful whether a notice or citation is now a jurisdictional requisite in an appeal proper, in the sense that it must issue within the time limited for taking the appeal, though it is clearly necessary in order to perfect the appeal, unless possibly

[232] Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 126.

[233] Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135; First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Kaplan, 234 Fed. 866, 148 C. C. A. 464, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104.

[234] As to allowance of appeal, see In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 10 Ariz. 39, 85 Pac. 656.

[235] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 25a.

[236] In re Coleman, 7 Blatchf. 192, 2 N. B. R. 671, Fed. Cas. No. 2,979.

[237] Ex parte Mead, 109 U. S. 230, 3 Sup. Ct. 129, 27 L. Ed. 914; Wood v. Bailey, 21 Wall. 640, 12 N. B. R. 132, 22 L. Ed. 689; Mead v. Platt, 17 Fed. 509; Hawkins v. Hastings Nat. Bank, 1 Dill. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 6,245.

where the appeal was prayed in open court; and the appellate court will not proceed to a hearing until citation has been issued and served.[238]

[238] See In re T. E. Hill Co., 148 Fed. 832, 78 C. C. A. 522, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517, where it was said: "The general rule is established that no citation is required when an appeal is allowed in open court at the same term when the decree was rendered. In appeals in bankruptcy, however, this rule may not be applicable, for the reason that there are no stated terms of the bankruptcy court as such, but the jurisdiction is exercised by the district courts throughout the proceedings, in vacation, in chambers, and during their respective terms. The contention is that an appeal in such cases, not allowed instanter, is not 'taken' within the meaning of section 25a, unless a citation issue and bond is filed within the ten days. Whether a citation is needful, by way of notice to the parties, in any appeal in bankruptcy, may not be clear under the authorities; and the cases cited for and against the present motions are not harmonious in reference to citation or bond, as requisites to confer jurisdiction of any appeal. In Jacobs v. George, 150 U. S. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. 159, 37 L. Ed. 1127, and Mattingly v. Northwestern Virginia R. R., 158 U. S. 53, 15 Sup. Ct. 725, 39 L. Ed. 894, however, the general doctrine is established for appeals in equity that neither signing nor service of the citation is jurisdictional, its only office being to give notice to the appellees, and that failure or defects therein may be cured after the time limited for appeal. Under these decisions the circuit court of appeals of the sixth circuit so ruled in reference to appeal in bankruptcy in Columbia Iron Works v. National Lead Co., 127 Fed. 99, 62 C. C. A. 99, 64 L. R. A. 645, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; and as well the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit in Lockman v. Lang, 132 Fed. 1, 65 C. C. A. 621, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497, and Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., 138 Fed. 344, 70 C. C. A. 634, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780. We concur in the view that bankruptcy appeals are within the rule thus stated, so that citation and bond are not jurisdictional requisites." But although a citation may not be necessary to confer jurisdiction, it appears that it is necessary to perfect the appeal, and that the omission of it will be ground for dismissing the appeal. In Columbia Iron Works v. National Lead Co., cited supra, it was said: "The general rule is that, when an appeal is allowed within the time prescribed by law, it is sufficient for the purpose of removing the case, though it is necessary, in order to perfect the appeal, that a bond should be filed and that a citation should be issued and served, where, as in this case, the appeal is not prayed in open court." In the case of Lockman v. Lang, supra, it was said: "As there are no terms in bankruptcy it is conceded that a citation was necessary in this case, because the appeal cannot be said to be perfected at the term at which the judgment below was rendered. Nevertheless the appeal was perfected by the acceptance of the bond within the statutory time and by the docketing of the case in this court at the ensuing term. A citation to appear at the hearing in the appellate court is not jurisdictional in its nature. Its only purpose is to give notice to the appellees that the appeal will be prosecuted, so that they may appear and have a hearing if they desire. It is a part of the procedure prescribed, not to give jurisdiction to the appellate court, but to secure to the appellees a fair opportunity to present to that court their arguments in support of the decision below. If through accident or mistake the citation has been omitted, and no notice has been given to the appellees of the hearing, the appellate court has ample power to direct its issue and to continue the case until reasonable notice of the hearing has been given. But it may not dismiss an appeal, which is a matter of right, and which is duly allowed by the trial court by the mere acceptance of security for its prosecution, until an opportunity to give the requisite notice has been furnished, whether the application for the citation is made before or after the statutory time for the appeal has elapsed." And in Gray v. Grand Forks Mercantile Co., supra, it was held that, where an appeal to which necessary parties are omitted is seasonably docketed, but no application for an alias citation to them

As to appeals by trustees in bankruptcy, the statute provides (§ 25c) that "they shall not be required to give bond when they take appeals or sue out writs of error," probably on the theory that they are officers of the several courts of bankruptcy. But other appellants are not exempt from the necessity of giving a proper bond on appeal, and unless such an instrument is filed and is sufficient in form and substance, the appeal will be ineffective, the cases generally holding that, for want of a bond, it must be dismissed.[239] Compliance is also required with the rules in regard to entering and filing the appeal.[240]

§ 52. Practice on Petition for Revision.—The act of 1867 prescribed no particular form of proceeding to obtain a review of a decision of a court of bankruptcy by the appellate court; it was sufficient if some "proper process" was used; and it was held that a writ of error would serve the purpose.[241] The present statute, however, directs that the application for review shall be made by a "petition," which, of course, should be addressed to and filed in the proper circuit court of appeals.[242] In analogy to the rules governing the allowance of appeals and writs of error, a petition for review by the circuit court of appeals of a proceeding in the district court in bankruptcy may be presented to, and allowed by, a judge of the circuit court of appeals, though not, it seems, by the judge of the district court.[243] It should state specifically the is made before the expiration of the first term at which the case can be heard, the appeal becomes inoperative, in so far as it challenges the rights of the omitted parties. And see also Ruby v. Atkinson, 93 Fed. 577, 35 C. C. A. 458; Norcross v. Nave & McCord Mercantile Co., 101 Fed. 796, 42 C. C. A. 29, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317.

[239] In re Miller, 13 Okl. 557, 75 Pac. 1128; Hawkins v. Hastings Nat. Bank, 1 Dill. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 6,245; In re Alexander, Chase, 295, 3 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 160; Benjamin v. Hart, 4 Ben. 454, 4 N. B. R. 408, Fed. Cas. No. 1,302. But compare In re T. E. Hill Co., 148 Fed. 832, 78 C. C. A. 522, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517. As to form and sufficiency of bond, see In re Barton's Estate, 144 Fed. 540, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; Flickinger v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 162, 76 C. C. A. 132, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 678. The bond on appeal must be approved by the judge, and authority to approve it may not be delegated to the clerk of the court. In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 10 Ariz. 39, 85 Pac. 656. As to the effect of the bond on appeal as a supersedeas, the necessity of giving a supersedeas bond, and the practice in the case of an appeal by the trustee in bankruptcy, see T. E. Hill Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 184 Ill. App. 528; Pacific Coast Casualty Co. v. Harvey, 250 Fed. 952, 163 C. C. A. 202, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 193; and as to granting leave to bankrupt to prosecute an appeal in forma pauperis, see Henkin v. Fousek (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 957, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 172.

[240] In re Coleman, 7 Blatchf. 192, 2 N. B. R. 671, Fed. Cas. No. 2,979.

[241] Cleveland Ins. Co. v. Globe Ins. Co., 98 U. S. 366, 25 L. Ed. 201.

[242] In re Williams, 105 Fed. 906. A petition for review filed in a district court in a bankruptcy proceeding is ineffectual to remove the case for any purpose into the circuit court of appeals. Bridgeton Nat. Bank v. Way, 253 Fed. 41, 165 C. C. A. 665, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498.

[243] In re Williams, 105 Fed. 906. Compare In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266. And see Meyer Bros. Drug Co. v. Pipkin Drug Co., 136 Fed. 396, 69 C. C. A. 240, 14

question of law which was involved and ruled upon by the district court, and as to which a reversal of its action is sought, and should be accompanied by a certified copy of so much of the record as will exhibit the manner in which the question arose and its determination; and the question of law so presented is the only question which will be decided by the appellate court.[244] Thus, where petitioners in bankruptcy ask the court of appeals to review restraining and reference orders made by the district court, enjoining the prosecution of suits against the bankrupt in a state court, and referring the claims in suit to a special master for liquidation, they cannot obtain a review of the district court's jurisdiction of the entire bankruptcy proceeding.[245] Where the response to such a petition is not filed within the time prescribed by the applicable rule of court, the failure of the defendant to deny allegations of fact in such petition will be taken as an admission that they are true.[246] By the terms of the statute, "due notice" is a prerequisite to the exercise of the jurisdiction of the reviewing court. This means that proper and sufficient notice of the petition for review must be served upon the party occupying a position in the controversy adverse to that of the petitioner, or upon his attorney, within a reasonable time.[247]

The jurisdiction conferred upon the circuit courts of appeals by this section of the act is declared to be "either interlocutory or final," which probably means that they may review and revise interlocutory orders and decrees of the courts of bankruptcy, as well as their final judgments. But there must be something in the nature of an appealable decision to be brought before the reviewing court. Thus, an order of the district court setting aside a sale of the bankrupt's property and directing a re-

Am. Bankr. Rep. 477, holding that a petition for revision will not be dismissed because it was not allowed by a judge.

[244] Steiner v. Marshall, 140 Fed. 710, 72 C. C. A. 103, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486; In re Taft, 133 Fed. 511, 66 C. C. A. 385, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417; Courier-Journal Job Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., 101 Fed. 699, 41 C. C. A. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183; In re Baker, 104 Fed. 287, 43 C. C. A. 536, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778; In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; Littlefield v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 3 Cliff. 371, 4 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 8,400; In re South Boston Iron Co., 4 Cliff. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 13,183; In re Sutherland, 2 Biss. 405, Fed. Cas. No. 13,636; In re Grant, Fed. Cas. No. 5,690. The statements in a petition for review, like those in any other pleading, must be taken as true on demurrer, and if sufficient, the decree below will be reversed. Curran v. Munger, 6 N. B. R. 33, Fed. Cas. No. 3,487. A stipulation that two petitions to review orders in bankruptcy, with certified copies transmitted by the clerk of the district court, should be printed in one appeal book, is not sufficient to constitute a waiver of any legal objection to the petitions. In re Strobel (C. C. A.) 160 Fed. 916, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[245] In re New York Tunnel Co., 159 Fed. 688, 86 C. C. A. 556, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25.

[246] In re Frank (C. C. A.) 182 Fed. 794, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486.

[247] Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 126; In re Seebold, 105 Fed. 910, 45 C. C. A. 117, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358. See In re Sweetser (C. C. A.) 168 Fed. 1018.

sale is not reviewable on petition until after the resale has been made and confirmed.[248]

§ 53. Assignment of Errors.—The eleventh rule of the circuit courts of appeals provides that "the plaintiff in error or appellant shall file with the clerk of the court below, with his petition for the writ of error or appeal, an assignment of errors which shall set out separately and particularly each error asserted and intended to be urged. No writ of error or appeal shall be allowed until such assignment of errors shall have been filed. Such assignment of errors shall form part of the transcript of the record, and be printed with it. When this is not done, counsel will not be heard, except at the request of the court; and errors not assigned according to this rule will be disregarded, but the court, at its option, may notice a plain error not assigned." [249] This rule is applicable to appeals taken under the bankruptcy act, such as an appeal from a judgment making or refusing to make an adjudication, granting or denying a discharge, or allowing or rejecting a claim. If, on such an appeal, no assignment of errors is filed, the judgment of the district court will be affirmed.[250] And an assignment not conforming to the rule, in failing to point out the errors complained of, is not entitled to be considered, although, where a general assignment is made, the court is not without jurisdiction and may permit an amendment.[251] And where specific questions are raised by the assignment of errors, no others will be reviewed by the appellate court.[252] As a proceeding in bankruptcy is substantially a proceeding in equity, no bill of exceptions is ordinarily necessary,[253] except in the case of a trial by jury, and not then if the verdict of the jury was taken as merely advisory.[254] In the case of a petition for revision, as distinguished from an appeal, no formal assignment of errors is necessary. But the petition must set forth clearly and specifically the matter of law, or questions of law, de-

[248] Sturgiss v. Corbin, 141 Fed. 1, 72 C. C. A. 179, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543.

[249] 150 Fed. xxvii.

[250] In re Dunning, 94 Fed. 709, 36 C. C. A. 437; Lloyd v. Chapman, 93 Fed. 599, 35 C. C. A. 474; In re Smith (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 369, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; In re Federal Contracting Co., 212 Fed. 693, 129 C. C. A. 229.

[251] Flickinger v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 162, 76 C. C. A. 132, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 678. An error in adjudging a party bankrupt on the petition of creditors who were estopped to set up the act of bankruptcy relied on should be noticed though not properly assigned. Ohio Motor Car Co. v. Eiseman Magneto Co., 230 Fed. 370, 144 C. C. A. 512, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237.

[252] Buckingham v. Estes, 128 Fed. 584, 63 C. C. A. 20, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182.

[253] Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Lane Lumber Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 780, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 749.

[254] In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128. Where the bankruptcy court on its own motion submitted to a jury the question of the alleged bankrupt's insolvency, the verdict of the jury is merely advisory, and error is not predicable on the court's cided by the district court and as to which a reversal of its judgment is desired, so that the issue may be clearly defined before the appellate court, and only such errors of law as are thus plainly presented will be considered on the review.[255] But where there is no sufficient specification of legal error, presenting the questions sought to be reviewed, but the evidence is such as to raise a doubt as to the merits of the petitioner's claim, the revisory petition may be dismissed without prejudice to such further proceedings as the district court may consider to be proper.[256]

§ 54. Record on Appeal.—The rules of the circuit courts of appeals provide that "no case will be heard until a complete record, containing in itself, and not by reference, all the papers, exhibits, depositions, and other proceedings which are necessary to the hearing in this court, shall be filed."[257] This rule is applicable to appeals in bankruptcy cases.[258] And if the record is not filed within the time allowed by law, nor any application made for an extension of the time, the appeal will be dismissed.[259] If it does not clearly set forth facts necessary to a determination of the questions involved, it will be remanded to the district court with directions to have the facts fully reported to it and to pass on the same.[260] In bankruptcy appeals, the "record" required to be certified and filed is the record of the case in the bankruptcy court,[261] and in the absence of a stipulation or agreement of the parties, the whole of the record, in the strict sense of the word, must be transmitted to the appellate court,[262] and the court of bankruptcy from which the appeal is taken has no jurisdiction to designate what records shall be certified on which the appellate court shall determine the appeal.[263] The parties to the appeal may agree as to the contents of the appeal record, but if they remarks or on its charge to the jury. Morrison v. Rieman, 249 Fed. 97, 161 C. C. A. 149, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[255] Ross v. Stroh, 165 Fed. 628, 91 C. C. A. 616, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; In re Lans, 158 Fed. 610, 85 C. C. A. 432, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458. And see supra, § 52. But compare Davis v. Crompton, 158 Fed. 735, 85 C. C. A. 633, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53. See In re Witherbee (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 896, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314; In re Wood, 248 Fed. 246, 160 C. C. A. 324, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810.

[256] Ross v. Stroh, 165 Fed. 628, 91 C. C. A. 616, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644.

[257] Rule 14. See 150 Fed. xxviii.

[258] Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135. And see Synnott v. Tombstone Consol. Mines Co. (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 544.

[259] In re Alden Electric Co., 123 Fed. 415, 59 C. C. A. 509, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370.

[260] Devries v. Shanahan, 122 Fed. 629, 58 C. C. A. 482, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518.

[261] Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

[262] In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., 135 Fed. 220, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341; Dodge v. Norlin, 133 Fed. 363, 66 C. C. A. 425, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176. See In re Watkinson, 205 Fed. 145, 123 C. C. A. 377, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48.

[263] In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., 135 Fed. 220, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341.

are unable to do so, it is the duty of the appellant to file a præcipe with the clerk pointing out specifically what records, in his judgment, should be certified, leaving the appellee, if he thinks the records certified are insufficient, to suggest a diminution of the record and ask for a certiorari.[264]

The appellate court will not travel outside the record, nor pass upon questions which it does not raise or which are not clearly defined by the facts and data included,[265] except in so far as it may be aided by the presumptions usual and proper in such cases.[266]

On a petition to superintend and revise in matter of law, the rules in some circuits require that a record shall be filed the same as in case of an appeal.[267] And at any rate the record brought up must contain a finding of facts, or so far disclose the facts as clearly to show the question of law which was raised and passed upon by the district court, and also show whether the particular question sought to be reviewed was decided by the district court as one of fact or of law.[268] The want of such findings or statements of the facts cannot be supplied by the mere opinion rendered by the district court in deciding the case.[269] But still the opinion may be looked to for the purpose of determining in a general way the propositions on which the case was disposed of, and especially the questions of law which were passed upon.[270]

Where questions of fact or of mixed law and fact are sought to be reviewed on an appeal in bankruptcy, the evidence must be brought up,[271] otherwise, it will be presumed that the facts disclosed were sufficient to sustain the decision of the court below, and only such matters of law as are apparent on the face of the record can be considered.[272]

[264] In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., 135 Fed. 220, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341.

[265] Buckingham v. Estes, 128 Fed. 584, 63 C. C. A. 20, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re Oakland Lumber Co., 174 Fed. 634, 98 C. C. A. 388, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; In re Myer, 14 N. M. 45, 89 Pac. 246; In re Grant, Fed. Cas. No. 5,690.

[266] Shaffer v. Koblegard Co., 183 Fed. 71, 105 C. C. A. 363, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 898; In re National Pressed Brick Co., 212 Fed. 878, 129 C. C. A. 398.

[267] Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

[268] Landry v. San Antonio Brewing Ass'n, 159 Fed. 700, 86 C. C. A. 568, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226; Hegner v. American Trust & Sav. Bank, 187 Fed. 599, 109 C. C. A. 429, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757; In re Boston Dry Goods Co., 125 Fed. 226, 60 C. C. A. 118, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Throckmorton, 196 Fed. 656, 116 C. C. A. 348, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Johansen Bros. Shoe Co. v. Alles, 197 Fed. 274, 116 C. C. A. 636, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

[269] In re Boston Dry Goods Co., 125 Fed. 226, 60 C. C. A. 118, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757.

[270] Samel v. Dodd, 142 Fed. 68, 73 C. C. A. 254, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757.

[271] In re Murphy, 229 Fed. 988, 144 C. C. A. 270, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712; In re Myer, 14 N. M. 45, 89 Pac. 246.

[272] In re Baum, 169 Fed. 410, 94 C. C.

If the record does not contain all the evidence, a motion to include additional matter may be granted, reserving the right to determine which party shall ultimately bear the expense thereof.[273] But the failure to incorporate any evidence in the record on an appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy will not be ground for dismissal where it does not appear from the record that any evidence was taken, but rather that the case was submitted on petition and answer.[274] As the testimony is ordinarily taken before referees in bankruptcy, it becomes important to notice that, when a referee has certified to the district judge the question presented before him and his decision thereon, with a "summary of the evidence relating thereto," as directed by General Order No. 27, and the matter has been heard and determined by the district judge on the record so made, it is that summary, and not the original evidence before the referee, which should be included in the record on appeal to the circuit court of appeals.[275] It has also been laid down that examiners, masters, referees, and the court taking evidence in bankruptcy in the absence of a jury, should record, and in case of appeal, return, all the evidence, so that, if the appellate court thinks that the evidence rejected should have been received, it may consider it and render a final decree without remanding the suit. But from this rule should be excepted evidence plainly privileged and evidence so clearly irrelevant or immaterial that it would be an abuse of process to compel its production.[276]

§ 55. Scope of Review; Law and Facts.—An appeal in bankruptcy (as distinguished from a petition for revision) is subject to the rules governing appeals in equity, and therefore, on such an appeal, the facts as well as the law are before the appellate court, if proper assignments of error have been filed, and it is its duty to review questions of fact as well as of law.[277] But since the statute explicitly provides that an

A. 632, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295. And see Chestertown Bank v. Walker (C. C. A.) 163 Fed. 510, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 840.

[273] Herman Keck Mfg. Co. v. Lorsch, 179 Fed. 485, 103 C. C. A. 65, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 705. A court of bankruptcy in a proceeding on its equity side may allow and certify a bill of exceptions nunc pro tunc to bring on the record evidence introduced on a prior hearing. Freed v. Central Trust Co., 215 Fed. 873, 132 C. C. A. 7, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

[274] C. C. Taft Co. v. Century Sav. Bank, 141 Fed. 369, 72 C. C. A. 671, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534.

[275] Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, 103 Fed. 932, 43 C. C. A. 377, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192. And see In re French & Holmes, 13 Okl. 549, 75 Pac. 278.

[276] Missouri-American Electric Co. v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., 165 Fed. 283, 91 C. C. A. 251, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[277] Ross v. Stroh, 165 Fed. 628, 91 C. C. A. 616, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; Hatch v. Curtin, 154 Fed. 791, 83 C. C. A. 495, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 82; Rush v. Lake, 122 Fed. 561, 58 C. C. A. 447, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455; Courier-Journal Job Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., 101 Fed. 699, 41 C. C. A. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183; Simonson v. Sinsheimer, 100 Fed. 426, 40 C. C. A.

appeal may be taken from a "judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt," such an adjudication may be reviewed on appeal, although only questions of law are presented for the consideration of the appellate court.[278]

But it is otherwise in the case of a petition for revision of the proceedings of the court of bankruptcy. Since jurisdiction for this purpose is given only as to "matter of law," it is held that the statute does not contemplate any review of the facts by the appellate court, and only questions of law decided by the court below can be brought up for revision in this mode.[279] Thus, for instance, the issue whether an order should be made requiring the bankrupt to turn over money or property to his trustee is purely of a civil character, determinable on a preponderance of evidence, and at least partially dependent on the question of fact whether the money or property is in the possession or under the control of the bankrupt, and the finding thereon cannot be reviewed by the circuit court of appeals on a petition for revision in matter of law, unless so wholly unsupported by the proofs that the court would be justified, on a writ of error, in setting aside a verdict of a jury for 474, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824; In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; Feder v. Goetz (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 619, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 854, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[278] C. C. Taft Co. v. Century Sav. Bank, 141 Fed. 369, 72 C. C. A. 671, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[279] Feder v. Goetz (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 619, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; In re De Ran, 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; In re A. Bolognesi & Co., 254 Fed. 770, 166 C. C. A. 216, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; King Lumber Co. v. National Exchange Bank of Roanoke, 253 Fed. 946, 165 C. C. A. 388, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; Gardner v. Gleason, 259 Fed. 755, 170 C. C. A. 555; In re Canister Co., 252 Fed. 70, 164 C. C. A. 182, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278; Sauve v. M. L. More Inv. Co., 248 Fed. 642, 160 C. C. A. 542, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; Hunter, Walton & Co. v. J. G. Cherry Co., 247 Fed. 458, 159 C. C. A. 512, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732; In re Armann, 247 Fed. 954, 160 C. C. A. 618, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Pierce, Butler & Pierce Mfg. Co., 246 Fed. 814, 159 C. C. A. 116, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 445; Wm. B. Moore Dry Goods Co. v. Brooks, 240 Fed. 943, 153 C. C. A. 629, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617; Lott v. Salsbury, 237 Fed. 191, 150 C. C. A. 337, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 796; Kinkead v. J. Bacon & Sons, 230 Fed. 362, 144 C. C. A. 504, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390; In re Stearns Salt & Lumber Co., 225 Fed. 1, 140 C. C. A. 461, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264; Hall v. Reynolds, 224 Fed. 103, 139 C. C. A. 659, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; Synnott v. Tombstone Consol. Mines Co., 207 Fed. 544, 125 C. C. A. 596, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124; Whitla & Nelson v. Boyd, 213 Fed. 587, 130 C. C. A. 167; Williamson v. Richardson, 205 Fed. 245, 123 C. C. A. 427, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; Stuart v. Reynolds, 204 Fed. 709, 123 C. C. A. 13, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Witherbee, 202 Fed. 896, 121 C. C. A. 254, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314; In re Holden, 203 Fed. 229, 121 C. C. A. 435, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re J. B. Judkins Co., 205 Fed. 892, 124 C. C. A. 205, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Zinner, 202 Fed. 197, 120 C. C. A. 411, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 860; B-R Electric & Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 206 Fed. 885, 124 C. C. A. 545, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; In re Donnelly, 187 Fed. 121, 109 C. C. A. 39; In re Stewart, 179 Fed. 222, 102 C. C. A. 348; Ryan v. Hendricks (C. C. A.) 166 Fed. 94, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570; Ross v. Stroh, 165 Fed. 628, 91 C. C. A. 616, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; Lesaius v. Goodman, 165 Fed. 889, 91 C. C. A. 567, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; want of any evidence whatever to sustain it.[280] As further illustrations of questions which are not reviewable on petition to revise, because wholly or partly depending on matters of fact, we may mention the following: The question whether money deposited by a bankrupt in a bank in his own name as attorney belonged to him or to his wife;[281] whether or not the bankrupt was guilty of fraud in a given transaction, where, so far as appears from the record, there may have been a conflict of testimony as to the facts;[282] whether a certain sum was a reasonable allowance for an attorney's fee in a case of voluntary bankruptcy;[283] whether a creditor of the bankrupt did or did not have reasonable ground to believe his debtor to be insolvent at the time he obtained security for his debt;[284] whether the lien claimed by a creditor of the bankrupt under a trust deed constituted a valid preference under the bankruptcy law;[285] and the question whether the court below erred in ordering a sale of property free from incumbrances, on the ground that it was covered by a mortgage which left no equity of redemption of value to the estate.[286]

The court will not undertake to decide issues which are, or have become, merely moot questions.[287] Nor will it reverse for error not prejudicial to the complaining party.[288]

§ 56. Same; Questions Not Raised Below.—On appeals in bankruptcy, as in other cases, the general rule obtains that the appellate court will review only those issues and questions which were raised in the court below and passed on and decided by it. In other words, par-

In re Graessler & Reichwald, 154 Fed. 478, 83 C. C. A. 304, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; In re Throckmorton, 149 Fed. 145, 79 C. C. A. 15, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 856; Kenova Loan & Trust Co. v. Graham, 135 Fed. 717, 68 C. C. A. 355, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; In re Antigo Screen Door Co., 123 Fed. 249, 59 C. C. A. 248, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359; Courier-Journal Job Printing Co. v. Schaefer-Meyer Brewing Co., 101 Fed. 699, 41 C. C. A. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183; In re Rosser, 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Richards, 96 Fed. 935, 37 C. C. A. 634, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 145; In re Purvine, 96 Fed. 192, 37 C. C. A. 446, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787; In re Great Western Tel. Co., 5 Biss. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 5,739; In re Salkey, 6 Biss. 280, 11 N. B. R. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 12,254.

[280] In re Cole, 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; Ellis v. Krulewitch, 141 Fed. 954, 73 C. C. A. 270, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615; Frederick v. Silverman, 250 Fed. 75, 162 C. C. A. 247, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24.

[281] In re Donnelly, 187 Fed. 121, 109 C. C. A. 39.

[282] In re Letson, 157 Fed. 78, 84 C. C. A. 582, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506.

[283] In re Irwin, 174 Fed. 642, 98 C. C. A. 396, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

[284] In re Eggert, 102 Fed. 735, 43 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; Whitmore v. Swank, 252 Fed. 135, 164 C. C. A. 247, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378.

[285] Kenova Loan & Trust Co. v. Graham, 135 Fed. 717, 68 C. C. A. 355, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313.

[286] In re Union Trust Co., 122 Fed. 937, 59 C. C. A. 461.

[287] Ward v. Central Trust Co. of Illinois, 252 Fed. 127, 164 C. C. A. 239, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65; Lawhead v. Monroe Bldg. Co., 252 Fed. 758, 164 C. C. A. 598, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800.

[288] Bergdoll v. Harrigan, 217 Fed. 943, 133 C. C. A. 615, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394.

ties will not be permitted to urge for the first time, on appeal, objections or contentions which they neglected to take advantage of in the court below when they might have done so.[289] Thus, on appeal from a district court's decree in a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings, the only objection as to a want of jurisdiction available to the appellant, when raised for the first time in the court of appeals, is that the district court had no jurisdiction to render the decree appealed from.[290] A court of bankruptcy, for instance, has jurisdiction of a suit in behalf of the bankrupt's estate to recover an alleged preference, if the defendant consents; and after a hearing on the merits, without any objection by the defendant on the ground of a want of jurisdiction, he cannot raise that objection for the first time on an appeal.[291] So on an appeal from an adjudication of bankruptcy, where creditors appeared and contested the adjudication solely on the ground that the occupation of the alleged bankrupt was such as to exempt him from the statute, and they appeal from the decree, they cannot be heard to raise the objection of a want of evidence or of findings as to the alleged act of bankruptcy.[292] So, where the capacity of a trustee in bankruptcy to sue, on account of alleged defects in the petition for adjudication and the proofs on which it was based, was not challenged at the trial, the question cannot be raised on appeal.[293] And where it was not objected in the court below that property of a bankrupt ordered to be sold had [289] Dean v. Davis, 242 U. S. 438, 37 Sup. Ct. 130, 61 L. Ed. 419, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664; Wartell v. Moore (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 762, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; Feick v. Stephens, 250 Fed. 185, 162 C. C. A. 321; Moody-Hormann-Boelhauwe v. Clinton Wire Cloth Co., 246 Fed. 653, 158 C. C. A. 609, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441; Sanborn-Cutting Co. v. Paine, 244 Fed. 672, 157 C. C. A. 120, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; Household Supply Co. v. Whiteaker, 236 Fed. 730, 150 C. C. A. 62, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408; In re O'Gara Coal Co., 235 Fed. 883, 149 C. C. A. 195, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 131; Ohio Motor Car Co. v. Eiseman Magneto Co., 230 Fed. 370, 144 C. C. A. 512, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Friedman (C. C. A.) 161 Fed. 260, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37; In re Bacon, 159 Fed. 424, 86 C. C. A. 404, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; Love v. Export Storage Co., 143 Fed. 1, 74 C. C. A. 155, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re O'Connell, 137 Fed. 838, 70 C. C. A. 336, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; Buckingham v. Estes, 128 Fed. 584, 63 C. C. A. 20, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; In re Cale, 191 Fed. 31, 111 C. C. A. 89. But, see In re Cole (C. C. A.) 163 Fed. 180, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; Bramble v. Brett, 230 Fed. 385, 144 C. C. A. 527, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[290] Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co., 162 Fed. 675, 89 C. C. A. 467, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671. On petition to revise an order in summary proceedings requiring the bankrupt's wife to turn over money to the trustee, it is too late to object that a plenary suit should have been brought. In re Hopkins, 229 Fed. 378, 143 C. C. A. 498, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158.

[291] Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 107 Fed. 891, 47 C. C. A. 43, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13; In re Canfield, 193 Fed. 934, 113 C. C. A. 562.

[292] Armstrong v. Fernandez, 208 U. S. 324, 28 Sup. Ct. 419, 52 L. Ed. 514, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746.

[293] Knapp v. Milwaukee Trust Co. 162 Fed. 675, 89 C. C. A. 467, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; Fairbanks Steam Shovel Co. v. Wills, 240 U. S. 642, 36 Sup. Ct. 466, 6 L. Ed. 841, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754.

not been inventoried in the manner required by the statute, the objection will not be considered on a revisory petition.[294] The same rule prevails on appeals from orders granting or refusing a discharge to the bankrupt. An appeal from an order discharging a bankrupt will be dismissed on the motion of the appellee, when the record does not show that the question of law suggested in the assignment of errors on which the appeal is based was ruled by the court below.[295] Where a referee passed upon only one of a number of objections filed to the discharge of the bankrupt, which objection he sustained, and his report was confirmed by the district court, an appeal from the order denying the discharge brings only that specific objection before the appellate court for consideration.[296] So where creditors appear in opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge and file their specifications of objection, as provided by the act, objections to the sufficiency of such specifications must be presented to and decided by the district court, and if no objection is there made, no criticism of the specifications will be heard on appeal.[297]

§ 57. Review of Evidence and Findings.—On an appeal in bankruptcy (as distinguished from a petition for revision), where the evidence is in the record, it is within the province of the appellate court to review the same and thereupon to scrutinize the correctness of the decisions of the court below on questions of fact or evidence, proper assignments of error having been made.[298] But it will not, of course, hear additional evidence.[299] Where the proceedings to be reviewed are had, in the first instance, before a referee, parties who desire a review of the evidence should either have the testimony before the referee taken down stenographically, and by him certified to the judge, or they should

[294] In re Shoe & Leather Reporter, 129 Fed. 588, 64 C. C. A. 156, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248.

[295] Fidelity Trust Co. v. Robinson, 192 Fed. 562, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784; Vehon v. Ullman, 147 Fed. 694, 78 C. C. A. 82, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

[296] Shaffer v. Koblegard Co., 183 Fed. 71, 105 C. C. A. 363, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 898.

[297] Osborne v. Perkins, 112 Fed. 127, 50 C. C. A. 158, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 250; E. H. Godshalk Co. v. Sterling, 129 Fed. 580, 64 C. C. A. 148, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Singer, 251 Fed. 51, 163 C. C. A. 301, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 503.

[298] Bernard v. Lea, 210 Fed. 583, 127 C. C. A. 219, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128; In a suit by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover an alleged preferential payment, where the circumstances under which the payment was made were set out in the agreed statement of facts, and the parties proceeded in the submission of the facts upon the idea that the court should draw such inferences as were warranted and necessary, the court of appeals may dispose of the case by drawing such inferences as are necessary. Watchmaker v. Barnes, 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

[299] In re Great Western Tel. Co., 5 Biss. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 5,739. See Heyward v. Goldsmith (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 946, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

specifically point out to the referee the particular evidence which they wish summarized and should ask him to certify specific findings of fact.[300] Where the evidence is not in the record, the appellate court will presume that it was sufficient to establish the particular facts on which the decision was based,[301] and where an application for discharge was heard by the referee, and the court affirmed his report and ordered the discharge, it will be presumed in support of the order that the court investigated objections made thereto and overruled the same on the merits.[302] Where the decision complained of was based on the court's opinion of the weight and tendency of conflicting evidence, it will not be reversed on appeal unless some error of law has intervened, or unless a serious mistake of fact is plainly apparent.[303] The same rules apply on an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. Where the question is one of fact, as, concerning the existence of a partnership, the concurring decisions of the two courts below will not be reversed on appeal if the evidence fairly tends to support them.[304]

Generally speaking, when it is sought, on appeal to the circuit court of appeals, to reverse an order made by the district court on a question of fact, the appellant must very clearly satisfy the appellate court that the decision of the court below was erroneous; it will not be reversed unless plain and manifest error appears, or unless plainly contrary to the weight of the evidence.[305] On a parity of reasoning, findings of [300] In re Cohen (D. C.) 131 Fed. 391, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[301] Gray v. Gudger, 260 Fed. 931, 171 C. C. A. 573, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Stitt, 252 Fed. 1, 164 C. C. A. 113, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777; International Agr. Corp. v. Cary, 240 Fed. 101, 153 C. C. A. 137, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753; In re Vidal, 233 Fed. 733, 147 C. C. A. 499, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 783; Bunch v. Maloney, 233 Fed. 967, 147 C. C. A. 641, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; First State Bank v. Haswell, 174 Fed. 209, 98 C. C. A. 217, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330.

[302] Kentucky Nat. Bank v. Carley, 127 Fed. 686, 62 C. C. A. 412, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119.

[303] Peeples v. Georgia Iron & Coal Co., 248 Fed. 886, 160 C. C. A. 644; Lake View State Bank v. Jones, 242 Fed. 821, 155 C. C. A. 409, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 148; In re Kaplan, 234 Fed. 866, 148 C. C. A. 464, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104; Flower v. Central Nat. Bank, 223 Fed. 323, 138 C. C. A. 585, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; Abele v. Beacon Trust Co., 228 Mass. 438, 117 N. E. 833; First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Sullivan, 14 Okl. 400, 78 Pac. 85; In re Straschnow, 181 Fed. 337, 104 C. C. A. 167, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 948. See Walker Grain Co. v. Gregg Grain Co. (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 510, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121.

[304] Manson v. Williams, 213 U. S. 453, 29 Sup. Ct. 519, 53 L. Ed. 869, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[305] Cutler v. Nu-Gold Ring Co. (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 836, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; Henkin v. Fousek, 246 Fed. 285, 159 C. C. A. 15, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; In re O'Gara Coal Co., 235 Fed. 883, 149 C. C. A. 195, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 131; In re Hopkins, 229 Fed. 378, 143 C. C. A. 498, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 158; Owens v. Farmers' Bank of Abbeville, 228 Fed. 508, 143 C. C. A. 90, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; Ft. Worth Heavy Hardware Co. v. Shapleigh Hardware Co., 221 Fed. 257, 137 C. C. A. 110, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21; In re Schulman, 177 Fed. 191, 101 C. C. A. 361, 23 Am.

fact made by a referee in bankruptcy upon the testimony of witnesses examined before him, especially if the evidence was conflicting, have every reasonable presumption in their favor, and (particularly after they have been approved or confirmed by the district court) will not be disregarded or set aside on appeal, unless it very clearly appears that there was error or mistake on his part, but in the absence of such plain error, they will be accepted without review by the appellate court.[306] But Bankr. Rep. 809; In re Noyes Bros., 127 Fed. 286, 62 C. C. A. 218, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; Osborne v. Perkins, 112 Fed. 127, 50 C. C. A. 158, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 250; In re D. Levy & Co., 142 Fed. 442, 73 C. C. A. 558, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; Adler v. Jones, 109 Fed. 967, 48 C. C. A. 761, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245; In re Mooney, 14 Blatchf. 204, 15 N. B. R. 456, Fed. Cas. No. 9,748; In re Dorr, 196 Fed. 292, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505.

[306] Page v. Rogers, 211 U. S. 575, 29 Sup. Ct. 159, 53 L. Ed. 332, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; Dodge Sales & Engineering Co. v. First Nat. Bank (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 364, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Libby v. Beverly (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 63, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; In re Morrison (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 355, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; Rosenberg v. Semple, 257 Fed. 72, 168 C. C. A. 284, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; In re Lake Chelan Land Co., 257 Fed. 497, 168 C. C. A. 501, 5 A. L. R. 557, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14; Dothan Nat. Bank v. Jones, 255 Fed. 332, 166 C. C. A. 502, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; Luck v. Staples, 255 Fed. 637, 167 C. C. A. 13; In re Model Incubator Co., 255 Fed. 76, 166 C. C. A. 404, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743; Hagan v. McNiel, 253 Fed. 716, 165 C. C. A. 310, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 792; Manson v. Mesirov, 254 Fed. 799, 166 C. C. A. 245, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; Whitney Central Trust & Savings Bank v. United States Const. Co., 250 Fed. 784, 163 C. C. A. 116, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; In re Turpin Hotel Co., 248 Fed. 25, 160 C. C. A. 165; In re Johnson (D. C.) 247 Fed. 135, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; In re Fackler (D. C.) 246 Fed. 864, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; In re Nankin, 246 Fed. 811, 159 C. C. A. 113, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; Stephen Putney Shoe Co. v. Dashiell, 246 Fed. 121, 158 C. C. A. 347, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375; International Trust Co. v. Myers, 245 Fed. 110, 157 C. C. A. 406, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 71; In re Shelley, 242 Fed. 251, 155 C. C. A. 91, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519; Continental Coal Corp. v. Roszelle Bros., 242 Fed. 243, 155 C. C. A. 83, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562; Sheinberg v. Hoffman, 236 Fed. 343, 149 C. C. A. 475, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24; Henderson v. Morse, 235 Fed. 518, 149 C. C. A. 64, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22; Wilson v. Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 824, 147 C. C. A. 18, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444; Walter A. Wood Mowing & Reaping Mach. Co. v. Croll, 231 Fed. 679, 145 C. C. A. 565, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; Aller-Wilmes Jewelry Co. v. Osborn, 231 Fed. 907, 146 C. C. A. 103, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714; Schmid v. Rosenthal, 230 Fed. 818, 145 C. C. A. 128, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; Carroll v. Stern, 223 Fed. 723, 139 C. C. A. 253, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570; Deupree v. Watson, 216 Fed. 483, 132 C. C. A. 543; In re Pennell, 214 Fed. 337, 130 C. C. A. 645, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241; Wells v. Lincoln, 214 Fed. 227, 130 C. C. A. 641, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620; Epstein v. Steinfeld, 210 Fed. 236, 127 C. C. A. 54, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6; In re Bradley (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 784; Canner v. Webster Tapper Co. (C. C. A.) 168 Fed. 519, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; Ellsworth v. Lyons (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 55; Stephens v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 154 Fed. 341, 83 C. C. A. 119, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560; John Naylon & Co. v. Christiansen Harness Mfg. Co., 158 Fed. 290, 85 C. C. A. 522, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 789; Southern Pine Co. v. Savannah Trust Co., 141 Fed. 802, 73 C. C. A. 60, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618; In re Sweeney, 168 Fed. 612, 94 C. C. A. 90, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866; In re Caponigri, 183 Fed. 307, 105 C. C. A. 519, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 509; Sicard v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. Co., 15 Blatchf. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 12,831; Lumpkin v. Foley (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 372, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; Salisburg v. Blackford (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 438, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; In re Coney Island Lumber Co., 199 Fed.

where the findings of fact of the bankruptcy court, which are in conflict with those of the referee, are based on deductions from uncontradicted evidence, the appellate court need not follow them, but may deduce its own conclusions, just as the trial court can disregard the findings of the referee.[307] And if there are no findings of fact by either the referee or the district court, the court of appeals, lacking the aid of the presumption which ordinarily attaches to such findings, must determine the questions of fact for itself upon a review of the evidence.[308]

On a petition for revision, the appellate court will not review findings of fact on which the order of the lower court was based, and the evidence will be considered only for the purpose of ascertaining whether the order complained of was wholly unsupported by the evidence.[309]

§ 58. Determination on Appeal or Review and Effect Thereof.— Where an appeal has been duly taken and perfected under the bankruptcy act, the district court is thereby deprived of jurisdiction to consider further or act upon any matters involved in the appeal.[310] But the proceeding is still pending in the court of first instance while the case stands on appeal in the appellate court, and the appeal bond does not operate to stay proceedings, unless a supersedeas is also taken, so that, as to other steps or proceedings in the cause, it is still competent for the court of bankruptcy to act.[311] It is indeed within the authority of the circuit court of appeals to order a stay of proceedings pending the appeal, on an application made to the court, not to a judge,[312] but it ought 803; In re San Miguel Gold Min. Co., 197 Fed. 126, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 901; In re J. Jungmann, 197 Fed. 159, 116 C. C. A. 596; In re Walden Bros. Clothing Co., 199 Fed. 315, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80. Though a finding of facts in a proceeding in bankruptcy submitted to a special master was, in his report, stated as a conclusion of law, his method of statement cannot affect the binding nature of the finding as a finding of fact. In re Pierce, Butler & Pierce Mfg. Co., 246 Fed. 814, 159 C. C. A. 116, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 445.

307 Walter v. Atha (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 75, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150.

308 Burleigh v. Foreman, 130 Fed. 13, 64 C. C. A. 381, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 88.

309 Shea v. Lewis, 206 Fed. 877, 124 C. C. A. 537, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Olmsted-Stevenson Co. v. Miller, 231 Fed. 69, 145 C. C. A. 257, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816; Good v. Kane, 211 Fed. 956, 128 C. C. A. 454, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; In re Bean, 230 Fed. 405, 144 C. C. A. 547; Stuart v. Reynolds, 204 Fed. 709, 123 C. C. A. 13, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Frank, 182 Fed. 794, 105 C. C. A. 226, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486; In re Pettingill & Co., 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757. The appellate court may reverse an order on an application to punish the bankrupt for contempt, where the trial court made no sufficient examination of the bankrupt's ability to comply, but denied the application on an erroneous ground. In re Sobol, 242 Fed. 487, 155 C. C. A. 263, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252.

310 First Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 131 Fed. 430, 65 C. C. A. 414, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

311 In re Barton's Estate, 144 Fed. 540, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Chandler, 135 Fed. 893, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614.

312 In re Ironclad Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 190 Fed. 320; In re Oregon Bulletin Co., not to be granted where it does not appear that the rights of the party applying will be prejudiced or seriously endangered if the proceedings in the court below are allowed to continue in their ordinary course.[313] In a case arising under the bankruptcy act of 1867, where two partners had been jointly adjudged bankrupt in the district court, and one of them had brought the decree of adjudication before the circuit court for review, and was, at the same time, prosecuting suits in the state courts against his co-partner in respect to the firm property, the circuit court held that it had no authority to issue a writ of prohibition to the state court to forbid it from further entertaining such suits; for the power of the federal courts to issue the writ is limited to cases where it is necessary for the exercise of their jurisdiction, and in the present instance, that jurisdiction being merely revisory, the writ was not essential to its exercise.[314]

The appellate court is not bound to act upon the appeal where neither justice nor practical considerations require it to consider and decide the points presented.[315] Thus, the appeal will be dismissed where the same question has previously been fully determined in another appeal in the same case,[316] or where the question has become merely academic, as where, pending an appeal from an order dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, the defendant has been adjudged bankrupt in the district court of another district,[317] or where a person appeals from an order made in summary proceedings requiring him to indorse a liquor license, held by him jointly with the bankrupt, in order that it may be sold, with which order he has nevertheless complied.[318] But it was held under the former statute that if an order of the district court, removing a trustee in bankruptcy, was right when made, it cannot be reversed on appeal, notwithstanding the only creditors who were competent to move against the trustee have since withdrawn from the proceedings and are no longer in the case.[319] If the appellate court proceeds with the appeal, it is not bound to reverse on strictly legal

3 Sawy. 529, 14 N. B. R. 394, Fed. Cas. No. 10,560.

[313] In re Oregon Bulletin Co., 3 Sawy. 529, 14 N. B. R. 394, Fed. Cas. No. 10,560.

[314] In re Bininger, 7 Blatchf. 159, 3 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,417.

[315] Lawhead v. Monroe Building Co., 252 Fed. 758, 164 C. C. A. 598, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; In re Donnelly, 211 Fed. 118, 128 C. C. A. 20, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232.

[316] In re Kehler, 162 Fed. 674, 89 C. C. A. 466, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669; Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., 120 Fed. 736, 57 C. C. A. 150, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762.

[317] In re Sears, Humbert & Co., 128 Fed. 275, 62 C. C. A. 623. A petition to revise an order setting a bankrupt's petition for discharge for hearing at a future date will be dismissed where that date has passed. Allen v. Sweeney, 238 Fed. 563, 151 C. C. A. 499, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442.

[318] Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed. 860, 43 C. C. A. 381, 51 L. R. A. 292, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646.

[319] In re Prouty, 24 Fed. 554.

grounds, if satisfied that the facts were correctly found and that no injustice has been done.[320] Thus, if an adjudication of bankruptcy is supported by a sufficient allegation and proof of an act of bankruptcy, it cannot be set aside on appeal because other acts alleged were neither properly pleaded nor sufficiently proved.[321] The motion of a bankrupt to dismiss an appeal from a judgment allowing certain exemptions, for want of jurisdiction, may be denied without consideration on the merits, when the bankrupt fails to take a cross appeal.[322] In disposing of the appeal, the court of appeals may reverse or modify the judgment of the court below, or remand the cause with specific instructions as to the further steps to be taken,[323] or may shortcut a situation where the rights of the parties are perfectly plain, by issuing its own order to a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy to perform the duty which it decides to be incumbent on him.[324]

It is of course, the duty of the district court to make such orders or take such action as may be directed by the mandate of the appellate [320] In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 379, 6 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 2,802; Lazarus, Michel & Lazarus v. Harding, 223 Fed. 50, 138 C. C. A. 414, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271. That petitioner was denied the right to vote for trustee is harmless error where his claim was so small that had the right not been denied, the selection of the trustee could not have been affected. National Bank of San Francisco v. Continental Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 828, 147 C. C. A. 22, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[321] In re Lynan, 127 Fed. 123, 62 C. C. A, 123, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 466.

[322] McGahan v. Anderson, 113 Fed. 115, 51 C. C. A. 92, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641.

[323] White v. Thompson, 119 Fed. 868, 56 C. C. A. 398, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653. And see In re Medina Quarry Co., 197 Fed. 308, 117 C. C. A. 54; In re Franklin Brewing Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 301, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719; In re Blum, 244 Fed. 417, 157 C. C. A. 43, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; In re Braun, 239 Fed. 113, 152 C. C. A. 155, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651; In re Mossler Co., 239 Fed. 262, 152 C. C. A. 250, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604. Dismissal of an appeal from so much of an order as disallowed a general claim, because not taken within ten days, does not require dismissal of an appeal from so much of the order as disallowed a claim of lien. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Kemper, 220 Fed. 847, 136 C. C. A. 593, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80. On petition to revise an order fixing compensation of referee, the appellate court cannot make or direct a complete apportionment of commissions between two referees in advance of action by the court below. Kinkead v. J. Bacon & Sons, 230 Fed. 362, 144 C. C. A. 504, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390. The circuit court of appeals cannot, on petition to revise an order approving a compromise between the trustee in bankruptcy and stockholders of the bankrupt corporation, direct a modification of the order, so as to permit the petitioners for revision to obtain in the court below an adjudication of their claimed priorities over other creditors, based on the claim that petitioners were ignorant of the terms of the sale of stock, notwithstanding the defense that other stockholders had extended credit with knowledge of the terms of such sale. Petition of Stuart (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 938.

[324] Sprague Canning & Machinery Co. v. Fuller, 158 Fed. 588, 86 C. C. A. 46, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157. But where a claimant in bankruptcy did not appeal from an order allowing him only a small portion of his claim as filed, he cannot be allowed more on the appeal of objecting creditors. Spencer v. Lowe, 198 Fed. 961, 117 C. C. A. 497, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 876. See Empress Theater Co. v. Hor-court in sending the case back.[325] But, except as so directed, it has no further power to deal with the judgment or order appealed from. If reversed, it is annulled for all purposes. If affirmed, it must stand as made. In neither case, has the district court any authority to change or modify or amend the judgment or order or to grant a rehearing.[326]

On an appeal in a bankruptcy proceeding, findings of fact and conclusions of law will not ordinarily be stated by the circuit court of appeals, unless notice is given of an intended appeal to the Supreme Court, or unless they are requested, and in that case the request should be made at the time of the argument.[327]

§ 59. Jurisdiction of Territorial Supreme Courts.—Appellate jurisdiction of "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" is conferred by the twenty-fourth section of the act on the supreme courts of the territories, "from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases." The following section gives these courts appellate jurisdiction in three specified classes of cases, which are regarded as "proceedings" in bankruptcy rather than "controversies" in bankruptcy, namely, judgments making or refusing an adjudication of bankruptcy, judgments granting or refusing a discharge, and judgments allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over.[328] But the authority to "superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction," given by section 24b of the act, is explicitly confined to "the several circuit courts of appeal." The supreme courts of the territories, therefore, have no jurisdiction of these special proceedings for review on petition for revision,[329] but they must be brought in the proper circuit court of appeals. It may seem a curious anomaly that appellate jurisdiction over territorial district courts should thus be divided between a federal court and the territorial supreme court. But the United States Supreme Court has declared that the law must be taken as it is ton (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 657, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[325] Brown v. Persons, 122 Fed. 212, 58 C. C. A. 658, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416; Ex parte First Nat. Bank of Chicago, 207 U. S. 61, 28 Sup. Ct. 23, 52 L. Ed. 103, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

[326] In re Lesaius (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 690, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; In re Lennox, 181 Fed. 428, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 922; In re Hudson River Electric Co., 184 Fed. 970, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 873.

[327] Washington v. Tearney, 197 Fed. 307, 117 C. C. A. 53, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Lumpkin v. Foley (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 372, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 673; In re Martin (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 31, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157.

[328] See In re McCasland, 16 Okl. 499, 85 Pac. 1118. An appeal does not lie from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of less than five hundred dollars. Ex parte Stumpff, 9 Okl. 639, 60 Pac. 96.

[329] Ex parte Stumpff, 9 Okl. 639, 60 Pac. 96; In re American Copper Co., 11 Ariz. 36, 89 Pac. 516.

written, and that there is no reason for thinking that it does not, in this particular, express the real intention of Congress.[330] It was held, in the case cited, that jurisdiction to "superintend and revise in matter of law" the proceedings in bankruptcy in a district court of Oklahoma (then a territory) was vested in the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit, to which the territory had been judicially assigned, notwithstanding that jurisdiction on appeal or writ of error was vested in the territorial supreme court. But the circuit courts of appeals possess this revisory jurisdiction only over the inferior courts of bankruptcy "within their jurisdiction," and it is held that this phrase is meant to designate the inferior courts which were within their respective jurisdictions at the time of the passage of the bankruptcy act. For this reason, the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit holds that it has no revisory jurisdiction over the proceedings of the courts of bankruptcy in the Indian Territory, the court of appeals for the territory alone having appellate jurisdiction over such courts since its creation three years before the enactment of the bankruptcy law.[331]

[330] Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, 194 U. S. 311, 24 Sup. Ct. 725, 48 L. Ed. 992.

[331] In re Blair, 106 Fed. 662, 45 C. C. A. 530, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 793; In re Crawford, 152 Fed. 169, 81 C. C. A. 419, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

CHAPTER IV

REFEREES IN BANKRUPTCY, THEIR APPOINTMENT AND QUALIFICATIONS

§ 60. Appointment of Referees.—The office of "referee in bankruptcy," created by the bankruptcy act of 1898, corresponds to that of "register" under the act of 1867. The present statute provides that the several courts of bankruptcy, within their respective territorial limits, shall have power to appoint referees in bankruptcy, each for a term of two years. Such a number of referees are required to be appointed as may be necessary to assist in expeditiously transacting the bankruptcy business pending in the various courts of bankruptcy; and those courts are given the authority to designate, and from time to time change, the limits of the districts of referees, so that each county, where the services of a referee are needed, may constitute at least one district.[1] Whenever the office of a referee is vacant, or its occupant is absent or disqualified to act, it is provided that the judge himself may act, or he may appoint another referee, or designate another referee, holding his appointment from the same court, to fill the vacancy temporarily. Under this provision it is held that, when the referee to whom a case in bankruptcy would regularly be referred is absent or disqualified, the judge may appoint a special referee and send the case to him; and this may be done before the answer of the alleged bankrupt is filed, and does not require the consent or approval of the respondent or his attorney.[2]

Appointment to office is ordinarily an executive function, rather than legislative or judicial. But the Constitution authorizes Congress to vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the courts of law. (Art. 2, section 2.) This is held to justify the provision of the bankruptcy act which delegates to the several courts of bankruptcy the appointment of the necessary referees.[3] Where there are two district judges for the same federal judicial district, both authorized to hold the district court and sit in bankruptcy cases, either one of them, holding the court at the time, has power to appoint or remove a referee in bankruptcy, and such action does not require the concurrence of the two judges.[4] While probably the action of a district court in appointing a referee in bankruptcy may be subject to review by the circuit court of appeals on petition to revise, yet the latter court will not in any way attempt to control the discretion of the district court in making an appointment to an office so intimately connected with its own functions, and where the qualifications of the nominee are so peculiarly within its own knowledge.[5]

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 34, 37. "The word 'county' includes a parish, or any other equivalent subdivision of a state or territory of the United States." Rev. Stat. U. S. § 2. The state of Louisiana is divided into parishes. The District of Columbia might be considered a county within the meaning of this act, although it is not so denominated in law. A referee in bankruptcy, it has been held, cannot fulfill the duties of his appointment for any county in which the business in bankruptcy must wait upon his convenience, or in which he cannot hold sessions whenever business may require them, or cannot continue them at convenient intervals; nor can he fulfill the requirements of his official duty as to any county in which the books and papers of his office are not open to inspection at the local seat of justice. In re Sherwood, 1 N. B. R. 344, Fed. Cas. No. 12,774.

[2] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 43; Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

§ 61. Qualifications, Oath, and Bond.—The thirty-fifth section of the bankruptcy act provides that "individuals shall not be eligible to appointment as referees unless they are respectively (1) competent to perform the duties of that office; (2) not holding any office of profit or emolument under the laws of the United States or of any state other than commissioners of deeds, justices of the peace, masters in chancery, or notaries public;[6] (3) not related by consanguinity or affinity, within the third degree as determined by the common law, to any of the judges of the courts of bankruptcy or circuit courts of the United States,

[3] Birch v. Steele, 165 Fed. 577, 91 C. C. A. 415, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[4] Birch v. Steele, 165 Fed. 577, 91 C. C. A. 415, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539. And see In re Steele, 161 Fed. 886, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446; In re Steele, 156 Fed. 853, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; Ex parte Steele, 162 Fed. 694, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575.

[5] Birch v. Steele, 165 Fed. 577, 91 C. C. A. 415, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[6] The term "office of profit" is frequently used to designate offices otherwise known as "lucrative" offices. It describes an office to which salary, compensation, or fees are attached, and the amount of the salary or compensation is not material. Baker v. Board of Crook County Com'rs, 9 Wyo. 51, 59 Pac. 797. "Emolument" is defined by Webster as the profit arising from office or employment; that which is received as a compensation for services or which is annexed to the possession of an office as salary, fees, and perquisites; advantage; gain, public or private." This definition is adopted in Apple v. Crawford Co., 105 Pa. St. 300, 51 Am. Rep. 205. The office of postmaster is an office both of profit and trust under the authority of Congress. McGregor v. Balch, 14 Vt. 434, 39 Am. Dec. 231; Foltz v. Kerlin, 105 Ind. 221, 4 N. E. 439, 5 N. E. 672, 55 Am. Rep. 197. A member of the state legislature holds an office of profit as well as of honor. State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29. The offices of county recorder and county commissioner are lucrative offices within the meaning of the state constitution. Dailey v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 329. So is the office of inspector of customs. Crawford v. Dunbar, 52 Cal. 36. So is the office of surveyor general. People v. Whitman, 10 Cal. 38. An officer of the United States army on the retired list holds an office of "trust or profit" under the United States. State v. De Gress, 53 Tex. 387. And see In re Corliss, 11 R. I. 638, 23 Am. Rep. 538.

or of the justices or judges of the appellate courts of the districts wherein they may be appointed;[7] and (4) residents of, or having their offices in, the territorial districts for which they are to be appointed." It will be observed that the act does not require that a referee in bankruptcy should be an attorney at law, but only that he should be "competent" to perform the duties of the office; and probably this word is to be taken in a popular sense, and as involving a certain degree of intelligence and familiarity with affairs. But the duties of a referee, though partly clerical, and requiring a measurable degree of knowledge of book-keeping, accounts, and other business details, are, in their most important aspect, quasi-judicial. Difficult questions of law often come before them for solution, and though their determinations are subject to review by the court, the expeditious administration of estates in bankruptcy demands that referees should be men of legal training and experience.[8]

Referees in bankruptcy are required by law to take the same oath of office as that prescribed for judges of the United States courts, before proceeding to perform the duties of their office.[9] The referee must

[7] Consanguinity is the relationship between persons who are descended from the same stock or common ancestor. The method of determining degrees of relationship by the common law is the same as that prevailing in the canon law, and is as follows: To begin at the common ancestor and reckon downward, one degree for each person, until the computation reaches that one of the two persons whose relationship is to be determined who is the more remote from the common ancestor, or until they are both reached if they are equally distant from that ancestor; and the number of degrees thus reckoned will be the degree in which they are related. 2 Bl. Comm. 206. According to this method of computation, first cousins are related in the second degree, and second cousins in the third degree. The other method of computation is that of the civil (Roman) law, which is to count upward, from either of the persons related, to the common stock, and then downward to the other, reckoning a degree for each person both ascending and descending. In other words, the canon or common-law rule takes the number of degrees in the longest line; the civil law, the sum of the degrees in both lines. "Affinity" means the relationship or connection which arises from a marriage, between the husband and the blood relations of the wife, and between the wife and the blood relations of the husband. Its degrees are reckoned in the same way as degrees of consanguinity. In this connection, see also Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 67, providing that "no person shall be appointed to or employed in any office or duty in any court who is related by affinity or consanguinity within the degree of first cousin to the judge of such court."

[8] It appears that there is nothing in the statute to prevent a woman from being appointed a referee in bankruptcy, if the requirements as to competence, residence, relationship to the judges, and the holding of other offices are met. Since women who are otherwise qualified may now be admitted to practice as attorneys before the Supreme Court of the United States (Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 255), there is apparently no reason why they might not hold the office in question.

[9] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 36. This oath is as follows: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will administer justice without respect to persons, and do equal right to the poor and to the rich, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all the duties incumbent on me as referee in also qualify by entering into a bond to the United States, in such sum as shall be fixed by the court, but not exceeding $5,000, with such sureties as the court shall approve, conditioned for the faithful performance of his official duties.[10] There must be at least two sureties upon the bond, and the court shall require evidence as to the actual value of their property, which, over and above their liabilities and exemptions, must at least equal the amount of the bond; but bonding or surety companies may be accepted as sureties by the court. The bond is to be filed of record in the office of the clerk of the court and may be sued on in the name of the United States for the use of any person injured by a breach of its condition; but suit on such bond shall not be brought subsequent to two years after the alleged breach of condition.[11] The court is to fix the time within which the referee must qualify by executing his bond, and it is provided that if any referee shall fail to give the bond within the time limited, he shall be deemed to have declined his appointment, and such failure shall create a vacancy in the office.[12]

§ 62. Disqualification by Interest.—If the referee to whom a case would ordinarily be referred is "disqualified to act," the judge may himself act, or appoint another referee, or send the cause to another referee holding his appointment under the same court.[13] The statute expressly declares that "referees shall not act in cases in which they are directly or indirectly interested," and that if a referee knowingly acts in such a case, it shall be a criminal offense, punishable by fine, and shall also vacate his office.[14] The object of statutory provisions disqualifying judicial officers from acting in causes in which they are interested is to secure the utmost fairness and impartiality, and hence they ought to be construed liberally to effect that object, and any doubt as to the qualification of the officer in a particular case should be resolved against his right to sit.[15] But the interest which disqualifies a judicial officer "is not the kind of interest which one feels in public proceedings or public measures. It must be a pecuniary or property interest, or one affecting his individual rights, and the liability or pecuniary gain or relief to the judge must occur upon the event of the suit, not result bankruptcy, according to the best of my abilities and understanding, agreeably to the Constitution and laws of the United States." Official Forms in Bankruptcy, No. 16; Rev. Stat. U. S. § 712. As to who may administer this oath, see Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 20.

10 The condition of the bond of a referee in bankruptcy is this; that he shall "well and faithfully discharge and perform all the duties pertaining to the office of referee in bankruptcy." Official Form No. 17.

11 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 50.

12 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 50k.

13 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 43.

14 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39, clause b; § 29, clause 1.

15 Dodd v. Northrop, 37 Conn. 216.

remotely, in the future, from the general operation of laws and government upon the status fixed by the decision."[16] The statutory restriction as to referees acting in cases in which they are interested does not apply to the interest of a referee by way of commissions on sums paid to creditors as dividends. This is a necessary interpretation of the law, since a contrary construction would disqualify referees from acting in any cases at all, and would in fact abolish the office and put an end to all procedure under the present machinery of the act.[17] It has also been decided that a referee is not disqualified by interest from acting in a particular case because he is a debtor to the bankrupt. The interest which will disqualify is an interest either in the proceedings in bankruptcy or in the estate of the bankrupt; and the bankrupt's debtor cannot be said to be "interested" in this way, since his liability is not increased, diminished, or in any way changed by the proceedings. At the same time it is said that the judge, on being apprised of the fact that the referee is a debtor of the bankrupt, may, in his discretion, revoke the order of reference and send the case to another referee.[18]

§ 63. Removal of Referees.—It is provided in the law, that a court of bankruptcy may, in its discretion, remove from office the referees holding their appointment under such court, "because their services are not needed or for other cause."[19] No case is found in the reports in which a referee or register in bankruptcy was removed from office for causes affecting his character or competency, though in one case there is an intimation that a register who is habitually careless and negligent should be removed, and that if he makes a practice of signing and furnishing in blank certificates or other papers which are required to be issued by him in his official capacity, it will be cause for his removal.[20] Although the power of removal given to the judge in the language quoted above is discretionary and almost unlimited, and although the authority and control which a court possesses over its own officers may be exercised summarily, yet, on general principles of law and justice, an order removing a referee for "other cause" than his superfluity should not be entered without due notice to him nor without according him a full and fair opportunity to defend or exculpate himself. Still the [16] Foreman v. Town of Marianna, 43 Ark. 324. And see Sjoberg v. Nordin, 26 Minn. 501, 5 N. W. 677; Ellis v. Smith, 42 Ala. 349; Pearce v. Atwood, 13 Mass. 324; State v. Sutton, 74 Vt. 12, 52 Atl. 116; Taylor v. Williams, 26 Tex. 583; City of Austin v. Nalle, 85 Tex. 520, 22 S. W. 668, 960; Higgins v. City of San Diego, 126 Cal. 303, 58 Pac. 700, 59 Pac. 209; Bennett v. State, 4 Tex. App. 72.

[17] In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

[18] Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 162, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[19] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 34.

[20] In re Jaycox, 7 N. B. R. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 7,240.

discretion of the district court in this particular will not be reviewed or controlled by the circuit court of appeals. In one case in which such relief was sought, it was said: "We find neither in the statute nor in the adjudged cases any authority conferred on this court to control the court of bankruptcy, on the facts alleged in the petition, in the exercise of its discretion in making the order of removal. Congress, exercising an authority conferred by the constitution, has vested the power to appoint referees exclusively in the courts of bankruptcy, and, when appointed, the referee holds the office at the discretion of the court that appointed him. It follows, we think, that this court can have no control over the appointment or removal, nor can it make inquiry into the grounds of removal." [21]

[21] Birch v. Steele, 165 Fed. 577, 587, 91 C. C. A. 415, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

CHAPTER V

POWERS AND DUTIES OF REFEREES

§ 64. Reference and Transfer of Causes.—The jurisdiction of a referee in bankruptcy over a particular case is founded upon the order by which the case is referred to him. This order is to be made, in some cases, by the clerk of the court; in others, by the judge. The act provides, in the case of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, that "if the judge is absent from the district, or the division of the district, in which the petition is pending, on the next day after the last day on which pleadings may be filed, and none have been filed by the bankrupt or any of his creditors, the clerk shall forthwith refer the case to the referee."[1] And when a petition in voluntary bankruptcy is filed, if the judge is absent from the district or division "at the time of the filing," the clerk shall forthwith refer the case to the referee.[2] When a petition is thus referred by the clerk, another part of the act confers upon the referee authority and jurisdiction to "make the adjudication or dismiss the petition," although in this respect his action is subject to review by the judge.[3] It has been ruled, under the present bankruptcy act, that the

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 18, clause f. The form to be used by the clerk in making this order of reference is Form No. 15. It is under the hand of the clerk and the seal of the court. See In re Murray, 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[2] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 18, clause g.

[3] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 38. The referee has jurisdiction to consider a petition and make an adjudication or dismiss the petition only in the single case where the petition has been thus referred to him by the clerk in the absence of the judge. Section 18 of the act requires the "judge" to make the adjudication, unless he is absent from the district. This duty cannot be delegated by the judge to the referee, if the former is within the district; for the specific term "judge," used in this connection, is plainly defined in another part of the act as not including the referee. Section 1, clause 16. See In re De Ford, 18 N. B. R. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 3,744. Also it is held in some of the cases that the referee cannot act at all on a petition thus sent to him if it is contested, and issues authority to refer a petition in bankruptcy to the referee, in the absence of the judge, has not been conferred upon a deputy clerk of the court, but can be exercised only by the clerk in person.[4]

If the judge is within the district, the case will take the more usual course; and "after a person has been adjudged a bankrupt, the judge may cause the trustee to proceed with the administration of the estate, or refer it generally to the referee, or specially with only limited authority to act in the premises or to consider and report upon specified issues, or to any referee within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, if the convenience of parties in interest will be served thereby, or for cause, or if the bankrupt does not do business, reside, or have his domicile in the district." [5]

This section of the act, it is held, does not permit of a reference of the case to a referee until after an adjudication has been made.[6] That is, if the judge is present in the district, it is his duty to hear the petition and make the adjudication or dismiss the petition, as the case may be, and it is only after an adjudication that the case can be sent to a referee. But the judge may then exercise his discretion as to which of the referees within his jurisdiction shall be placed in charge of the case, supposing none of them to be personally disqualified, and in so doing he should consider what will best subserve the convenience of the parties are raised by the bankrupt or any of the creditors on the facts stated, but he must certify the case to the judge. In re L. Humbert Co., 100 Fed. 439, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; In re Murray, 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[4] Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153. The clerk, says the court, "has no judicial powers in bankruptcy, but is a ministerial officer subject to the orders of the district judge, and a deputy clerk is not mentioned in the act. The deputy's authority and power are confined to those conferred by Rev. Stat. § 558. An order signed by the judge and attested by the deputy clerk with the seal of the court is valid, but alone a deputy clerk cannot make an order of reference in bankruptcy. Whether he can do so in the name of the clerk, quære?" Notwithstanding the foregoing decision, however, it seems clear, from the terms of the bankruptcy act itself, that a deputy clerk may receive the petition for filing, and in a proper case refer it to the referee. This is shown by section 1, clause 20, where a petition is defined as a paper filed in a court of bankruptcy "or with the clerk or deputy clerk," and clause 18 of the same section, which provides that the imposing of a duty upon any officer "shall include any person authorized by law to perform the duties of such officer." And see Gilbertson v. United States, 168 Fed. 672, 94 C. C. A. 158, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32.

[5] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 22. The form to be used for a reference after adjudication is Form No. 14.

[6] In re Back Bay Automobile Co., 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835. But see In re Ruos, 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257. But where answers are filed to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, it is proper for the court to refer the case to the referee (in the character of a special commissioner or master) to take and return the evidence and report upon the questions presented. Clark v. American Mfg. & E. Co., 101 Fed. 962, 42 C. C. A. 120, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Lacov, 134 Fed. 237, 67 C. C. A. 19, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400. But compare, as to this point, In re King, 179 Fed. 694, 103 C. C. A. 240, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606.

interested in the estate.[7] But this section refers only to referees appointed within the district where the case is pending, and the court has no jurisdiction to refer a case, for any purpose whatever, to a referee appointed and residing in another district.[8] As to referring a case specially, it is stated to be the general practice, when petitions are presented for the reclamation of property by or from a trustee, or requiring the determination of questions respecting assets claimed as a part of the bankrupt's estate, to refer them to a special master, or to a referee in bankruptcy acting as special master, to take the testimony and report his conclusions of fact and law thereon.[9] The powers of a special referee, appointed on the petition of a receiver for the property of an alleged bankrupt pending a hearing on the petition, with authority to examine the bankrupt and other witnesses in relation to the property and assets of the bankrupt, and for that special purpose, with a view to discover what had become of the bankrupt's property, are superseded on the making of an adjudication and an order of general reference.[10] It should further be observed that, according to the provision of the statute, "the judge may, at any time, for the convenience of parties or for cause, transfer a case from one referee to another." [11]

The general orders in bankruptcy (No. 12) provide that "the order referring a case to a referee shall name a day upon which the bankrupt shall attend before the referee; and from that day the bankrupt shall be subject to the orders of the court in all matters relating to his bankruptcy. A copy of the order shall forthwith be sent by mail to the referee, or be delivered to him personally by the clerk or other officer of the court. And thereafter all the proceedings, except such as are required by the act or by these general orders to be had before the judge, shall be had before the referee." The fact that the order of reference designates a day "on" which the bankrupt shall attend before the referee does not prevent that officer from taking proper proceedings when the bankrupt appears within a reasonable time after the day fixed. His

[7] In re Western Inv. Co., 170 Fed. 677, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367. Where the place of business of a bankrupt firm, and also the residence of one of its members, were in one of the counties comprised within the federal judicial district where the adjudication was made, but the other partners resided in two other counties in the same district, it was held to be within the discretion of the court of bankruptcy to send the case to the referee in either one of the three counties. In re Watkinson, 205 Fed. 145, 123 C. C. A. 377.

[8] In re Schenectady Engineering & Construction Co., 147 Fed. 868, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279.

[9] In re Tracy, 179 Fed. 366, 102 C. C. A. 644, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539; In re Thomas, 35 Fed. 337. And see U. S. v. Ward, 257 Fed. 372, 168 C. C. A. 412, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711.

[10] In re Ruos, 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

[11] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 22.

failure to appear on or before the appointed day will not make it necessary to obtain a new order of reference.[12]

§ 65. Jurisdiction and Powers of Referees.—Referees in bankruptcy, although they are not strictly speaking "judges," are by no means merely ministerial officers. They are commissioners or aides of the district court, clothed by law with extensive judicial powers, and invested with a large measure of judicial discretion.[13] "Referees are important officers in the administration of the bankrupt law, and great weight should be given to their decisions. * * * Referees are not only judicial officers charged with the performance of the duties prescribed in the statute, for the faithful performance of which they take and subscribe an official oath, but are also required to give bond to insure the observance of the oath. This is an unusual requirement of a quasi judicial officer." [14] Under the act of 1867, the jurisdiction of a register in bankruptcy (except as to administrative details) was expressly confined to such matters and cases as were not contested; upon the raising of a contested issue of law or fact in any case before a register, he was required to adjourn it into the court.[15] No such distinction is made by the present statute; and, as will more fully appear in the following sections, the jurisdiction of a referee in bankruptcy extends to almost every matter which is within the power of the court itself, save in a few specially excepted cases, and subject at all times to review by the judge.[16] The jurisdiction of referees, however, is territorially restricted; for the same section of the law which confers it provides that their powers shall be exercised "within the limits of their districts as established from time to time." [17] This [12] In re Hatcher, 1 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 6,210. But if the petitioner does not appear before the referee at the time fixed in the order, or within a reasonable time thereafter, excusing his delay, the petition may be dismissed. Id.

[13] But the Supreme Court, in a recent decision, has rather pointedly called attention to the fact that the referee in bankruptcy is not a separate court, nor is he endowed with any independent judicial authority, but is merely an officer of the court of bankruptcy, with no power except as conferred by the order of reference. Weidhorn v. Levy, 253 U. S. 268, 40 Sup. Ct. 534, 64 L. Ed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493.

[14] In re Covington, 110 Fed. 143, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373.

[15] See In re Gettleston, 1 N. B. R. 604, Fed. Cas. No. 5,373; In re Lanier, 2 N. B. R. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 8,070; In re Bank of North Carolina, 19 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 896. And see Rev. Stat. U. S. §§ 4998, 5009.

[16] When a District Court has entertained ancillary proceedings in bankruptcy, a referee to whom the matter is referred to proceed under the order has no authority to determine that the court was without jurisdiction to make such order. In re Flaherty (D. C.) 265 Fed. 741, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

[17] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 38. See In re Schenectady Engineering & Construction Co., 147 Fed. 868, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279. In an early decision by a referee it was held that such referee, after adjudication, has jurisdiction to enjoin a sale of the bankrupt's real estate on foreclosure of a mortgage in a state court, although such real estate is situated in another county than that for which the referee was appointed, pro-is a different matter from the determination of jurisdiction by reference to the bankrupt's domicile. Ordinarily a case will be sent to that referee within whose district the bankrupt lives, but the judge may refer the case to any referee within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, if the convenience of parties in interest will be served thereby, or for other cause.[18]

§ 66. Specific Powers and Authorities of Referees.—The powers and duties of referees in bankruptcy are prescribed by the act, and still further defined by the general orders in bankruptcy.[19] Speaking generally, it may be said that a referee has jurisdiction and authority, in the cases referred to him, and within the limits of his district, and subject to a review by the judge, of all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy except, first, an adjudication of bankruptcy or other final action upon a petition when the judge is within the district;[20] second, the determination of questions arising out of an application for a discharge or for the confirmation of a composition; and third, certain matters which, by the terms of the law, are confided to the judge alone. The statute, it should be observed, in its grants of authority and directions as to detail, sometimes speaks of the "court" or "court of bankruptcy," and sometimes of vided it is within the federal judicial district where the adjudication was made and the referee appointed. In re Sabine, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 45, per Referee Hotchkiss.

[18] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 22.

[19] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 38, reading as follows: "Referees respectively are hereby invested, subject always to a review by the judge, within the limits of their districts as established from time to time, with jurisdiction to (1) consider all petitions referred to them by the clerks and make the adjudications or dismiss the petitions; (2) exercise the powers vested in courts of bankruptcy for the administering of oaths to and the examination of persons as witnesses and for requiring the production of documents in proceedings before them, except the power of commitment; (3) exercise the powers of the judge for the taking possession and releasing the property of the bankrupt in the event of the issuance by the clerk of a certificate showing the absence of a judge from the judicial district, or the division of the district, or his sickness, or inability to act; (4) perform such part of the duties, except as to questions arising out of the application of bankrupts for compositions or discharges, as are by this act conferred on courts of bankruptcy and as shall be prescribed by rules or orders of the courts of bankruptcy of their respective districts, except as herein otherwise provided; and (5) upon the application of the trustee during the examination of the bankrupts, or other proceedings, authorize the employment of stenographers at the expense of the estates at a compensation not to exceed ten cents per folio for reporting and transcribing the proceedings." As to the authority of a referee to administer oaths, see also § 20. And see In re Dean, 2 N. B. R. 89, Fed. Cas. No. 3,700. In regard to requiring the production of documents in cases before them, another part of the act provides that the term "document" shall include any book, deed, or instrument in writing. § 1, cl. 13. General Order No. 12 provides that, after the reference of the case, "all the proceedings, except such as are required by the act or by these general orders to be before the judge, shall be had before the referee."

[20] See Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 18, 38. And see In re De Ford, 18 N. B. R. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 3,744.

the "judge." And it is provided (section 1, clause 7) that the former term "may" include the referee, but that the word "judge" shall not include the referee. From the general policy of the act, and from its interpretation by the Supreme Court in the general orders, it is evident that the word "court" must be held to include the referee in every case where it occurs, unless the context plainly shows that only the judge is meant. The following are the principal occurrences of the word "court" and the word "judge" in the act, which are significant in this connection:

Section 3e provides that the bond to be given upon the seizure of the bankrupt's property before adjudication shall be approved by "the court or a judge thereof." But section 69, which is in pari materia with this clause, directs that a warrant to the marshal to seize the bankrupt's property may be issued by a "judge" only; and section 38 permits the referee to exercise the powers of the judge in this matter only upon a certificate from the clerk showing that the judge is absent, ill, or unable to act.

Section 7 provides that the bankrupt shall attend the first meeting of his creditors, if directed by "the court or a judge thereof" to do so, and that he shall then, and at such other times as "the court" shall order, submit to an examination. That an order for the examination of the bankrupt may be made by the referee appears from Form No. 28.

Section 9 provides for the arrest and detention of a bankrupt who is about to leave the district. The warrant for that purpose may be issued only by the "judge", not including the referee. But apparently an order to the marshal to keep the bankrupt in custody after his arrest upon such warrant and after a hearing, may be made either by the judge or the referee. And, on the other hand, by General Order No. 12, the bankrupt "may receive from the referee a protection against arrest, to continue until the final adjudication on his application for a discharge, unless suspended or vacated by order of the court."

Section 11 provides that "the court" may order a trustee in bankruptcy to defend pending suits against the bankrupt or to prosecute suits commenced by him. Such orders may clearly be made by the referee.[21] But applications for "an injunction to stay proceedings of a court or officer of the United States or of a state shall be heard and decided by the judge; but he may refer such an application, or any specified issue arising thereon, to the referee to ascertain and report the facts." General Order No. 12.

[21] The referee, in case there is delay in winding up the estate in bankruptcy, may properly inquire why a settlement has not been made, and suggest the propriety of making progress, and indicate what steps the trustee should take. In re Bank of North Carolina, 19 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 896.

By sections 12–15 jurisdiction to confirm or reject a composition, and to set it aside after confirmation, and to grant or refuse, or revoke, a discharge is vested in the judge alone. But he may refer an application for a discharge or for the confirmation of a composition, or any specified issue arising thereon, to the referee to ascertain and report the facts. General Order No. 12.[22]

Power to make the initiatory process in a proceeding in bankruptcy returnable later than fifteen days from its issue is given to the "judge," (section 18), for the obvious reason that the jurisdiction of the referee does not attach (except in the case where a petition is referred to him by the clerk in the judge's absence) until after adjudication.

By section 21, power to order persons other than the bankrupt to appear and be examined is vested in the "court of bankruptcy." The referee may clearly authorize the issuance of a summons to a witness (Form No. 30), and he is specially invested with power to examine the witness and require the production of documents; but has no authority to commit persons for disobedience to such process. Section 38.

Sections 26 and 27 provide that the trustee, in the course of settlement of the estate, may submit any controversy to arbitration pursuant to the direction of the "court," and may compromise any controversy with the approval of "the court." Undoubtedly the term must here be taken as including the referee.

As to the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy by the "court" when the creditors fail to make an appointment, the approval of a trustee's bond, and the power to order that no trustee be appointed (in the case provided for in General Order No. 15), the forms promulgated by the Supreme Court show that these are all matters within the jurisdiction of the referee, though of course his action is subject to review by the judge. The same remark applies to the order allowing the final account of a trustee and discharging him, and to the order for the appointment of a new trustee upon the death, removal, or resignation of the former one.[23] But an order for the removal of a trustee for cause can be made by the judge only.[24]

Meetings of creditors are to be called by the "court."[25] This plainly includes the referee.

[22] The referee has power to make an order requiring the trustee to give the bankrupt a certificate of the names and addresses of the creditors who have proved their claims, to enable him to apply for his discharge. In re Blaisdell, 5 Ben. 420, 6 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,488.

[23] Forms 23, 26, 27, 51, and 55.

[24] General Order No. 13; Form No. 54.

[25] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55; General Order No. 25. The referee has authority to order notice to creditors of a meeting to authorize the trustee to oppose the bankrupt's application for discharge. In re Hockman, 205 Fed. 330.

By section 57 of the act it is provided that claims of creditors which have been duly proven may be allowed by the "court;" that thereafter the "court" may allow the withdrawal of the instrument on which the debt is founded; that the consideration of the allowance of a claim may be continued by the "court" for cause upon its own motion, and that the claims which have been allowed may be reconsidered for cause, and reallowed, reduced in amount, or expunged. In all these matters, the referee may be, and primarily is, the court.[26]

By the express terms of the statute, dividends are to be declared by the referee (section 39), but by a later section, if they are to be declared oftener or in smaller portions than the act directs, power to do this is given to the "judge" only. Section 65b.

Orders empowering the trustee to sell real estate at auction, to redeem property of the bankrupt from liens upon it, to sell the property subject to such liens, to dispose of property at private sale, or to sell perishable property immediately, are to be made by the referee.[27]

It may be added that, by the twentieth section of the act, referees have authority to administer all oaths required by the statute, except in the case of a hearing in court; and they may therefore administer the oath to witnesses appearing for examination or in any hearing before them.[28] In the case where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is sent to a referee by the clerk of the court on account of the absence of the judge, the referee may either make an adjudication or, if the facts do not warrant it, may dismiss the petition. But this is the only instance in which he has power to take the latter course. He has no authority to dismiss the bankruptcy proceeding generally, or any particular matter in bankruptcy referred to him, after the adjudication.[29] It is also within the jurisdiction and the discretion of a referee in bankruptcy to order amendments to be made in the petition and schedules of a voluntary bankrupt referred to him, in particulars as to which he finds them defective or insufficient, and to refuse to call a first meeting of creditors

[26] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55, clause b; General Order No. 21, par. 6; Forms Nos. 38, 39.

[27] Forms Nos. 42, 43, 44, 45, 46. See In re Matthews, 109 Fed. 603, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96; In re T. L. Kelly Dry Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. By section 70 of the act, "all real and personal property belonging to bankrupts' estates shall be appraised by three disinterested appraisers; they shall be appointed by and report to the court." That the word "court" here means "referee" appears from Form No. 13. On a petition to sell mortgaged property free from the lien and transfer the same to the proceeds, there being no allegation in the petition nor in the notice that an attack was made on the validity of the mortgage, the referee has no jurisdiction to adjudge it void. In re Martin, 210 Fed. 620, 127 C. C. A. 256, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[28] United States v. Simon, 146 Fed. 89, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41; In re Dean, 2 N. B. R. 89, Fed. Cas. No. 3,700.

[29] In re Elby, 157 Fed. 935, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

until such amendments are made.[30] But he has no authority to collect or receive money belonging to an estate in bankruptcy.[31] And although courts of bankruptcy have jurisdiction and authority to authorize the business of the bankrupt to be continued for a limited time, when that is for the best interests of the estate, yet a referee in bankruptcy should not take it upon him to exercise such authority, where it involves transactions of considerable magnitude, especially since the amount of his own compensation may be directly involved, nor in any case should he authorize the issue of trustee's certificates to raise money to accomplish that end.[32]

§ 67. Same; Surrender or Reclamation of Property.—A referee in bankruptcy has jurisdiction of an application by a trustee in bankruptcy for an order requiring the bankrupt to surrender money or property of his estate alleged to be in his possession or control and to be withheld or concealed from the trustee, to cite the bankrupt before him to show cause, and to make an order in accordance with his findings.[33] His action is of course subject to review by the judge of the court of bankruptcy, but his decision will not be reversed unless plainly erroneous or based on clearly insufficient evidence.[34] If, however, the order of the referee requiring a surrender of property was based on a mistake of fact, the referee has power, on petition of the bankrupt, filed within the time limited for review of his decision, to reopen and reconsider the matter, and, the mistake being shown, to set aside the order.[35] If the bankrupt fails or refuses to obey an order of this kind, lawfully made, the referee may enter the fact on his record, and it is then his duty to certify the facts to the judge, as the latter alone has the authority to adjudge the bankrupt in contempt and impose a punishment therefor.[36]

Similarly, the referee has power in the first instance to enter an order against a third person to show cause why he should not be required

[30] In re Brumelkamp, 95 Fed. 814, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

[31] In re Pierce, 111 Fed. 516, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

[32] Bray v. Johnson, 166 Fed. 57, 91 C. C. A. 643, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[33] In re Oliver, 96 Fed. 85, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 783; In re Tudor, 96 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808; In re Mayer, 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re Miller, 105 Fed. 57, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184; Prather v. Prather, 4 Ky. Law Rep. 454; In re Kramer (D. C.) 209 Fed. 627, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377. The referee has power to approve a compromise between the trustee and the bankrupt whereby the trustee accepts a less amount than the bankrupt was ordered by the court to pay as the amount the court found the bankrupt was concealing where such compromise is for the best interests of the estate. In re Goldman (C. C. A.) 241 Fed. 385, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

[34] In re Tudor, 96 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808.

[35] In re Brenner, 190 Fed. 209, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646.

[36] In re Miller, 105 Fed. 57, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 184.

to surrender or pay over to the trustee property or money in his hands, alleged to belong to the estate in bankruptcy, and, upon a hearing, to make an order requiring such surrender or payment within a limited time.[37] Thus he may compel a creditor to return money received from the bankrupt after the institution of the proceedings,[38] or order the officers of a bankrupt corporation to pay over the proceeds of sales of its stock alleged to belong to the corporation, and also to pay an amount assessed against them for unpaid shares.[39] But the referee has no power or jurisdiction to order third persons, in possession of property claimed by the trustee, to deliver it to the latter, where the possession of the third person is not admitted to be in subordination to the bankrupt's title, but is based on a bona fide adverse claim.[40] This is the rule which may now be regarded as definitely settled. For although there had been a disposition to enlarge the jurisdiction of referees in these matters, and some cases had gone so far as to hold that a referee in bankruptcy had jurisdiction of a bill in equity by the trustee to avoid a transfer alleged to have been in fraud of creditors,[41] yet in 1920 the Supreme Court of the United States, reversing the most important of the decisions so holding, took occasion to define rather sharply the powers of referees, and put a conclusive negative upon the claim for any such extensive jurisdiction. The court pointed out that "the referee is not in any sense a separate court, nor endowed with any independent judicial authority, and is merely an officer of the court of bankruptcy, having no power except as conferred by the order of reference, reading this of course in the light of the act; and that his judicial functions, however important, are subject always to the review of the bankruptcy court." And on the merits, it was said: "We find nothing

[37] Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; In re Famous Clothing Co., 179 Fed. 1015, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780. Compare Woodward v. McDonald, 116 Ga. 748, 42 S. E. 1030. See also In re Logan, 196 Fed. 678, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543. The referee has no jurisdiction of a suit by the trustee to collect a debt nor of a suit to enforce specific performance of a contract between the bankrupt and a third person. In re Ballou (D. C.) 215 Fed. 810, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

[38] Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160 Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

[39] In re Kornit Mfg. Co., 192 Fed. 392, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244. And see Bilder v. Ellis, 75 Misc. Rep. 255, 133 N. Y. Supp. 425.

[40] In re Blum (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 883, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332; In re Gill, 190 Fed. 726, 111 C. C. A. 454, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 883; In re Peacock, 178 Fed. 851, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159; In re F. M. & S. Q. Carlile, 199 Fed. 612, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373; In re Bacon, 196 Fed. 986, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565. As to consent of defendant conferring jurisdiction in such cases, see Kilgore v. Barr, 114 Va. 70, 75 S. E. 762.

[41] Graham v. Faith, 253 Fed. 32, 165 C. C. A. 52, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Weidhorn, 253 Fed. 28, 165 C. C. A. 48, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592. And see In re Looschen Piano Case Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 93, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

in the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act that makes it necessary or reasonable to extend the authority and jurisdiction of the referee beyond the ordinary administrative proceedings in bankruptcy and such controversial matters as arise therein and are in effect a part thereof, or to extend the authority of the referee under the general reference so as to include jurisdiction over an independent and plenary suit such as the one under consideration. * * * Reviewing the entire matter, we conclude that, under the language of the Bankruptcy Act and of the general orders in bankruptcy, a referee, by virtue of a general reference under Order XII (1), has not jurisdiction over a plenary suit in equity against a third party to set aside a fraudulent transfer or conveyance under section 70e, and affecting property not in the custody or control of the court of bankruptcy." [42]

But when property demanded by the trustee is in the possession of a third party, who claims it as his own, it is proper for the referee to hear the testimony, in order to determine whether the third person's claim is read or pretended. If he finds that the claim is made in good faith and is probably real, but of doubtful validity or questionable faith, it should then be determined in a plenary suit; but if he finds that the claim is without any actual merit or legal foundation, he should require a surrender of the property to the trustee.[43]

A referee also has jurisdiction to entertain and determine a claim set up by a third person, by intervening petition or otherwise, asserting a lien upon or interest in property which is lawfully in the possession of the trustee, or asserting that it is the property of the petitioner and not of the estate in bankruptcy.[44] And likewise he has jurisdiction to determine whether a preference has been received by a secured creditor.[45]

[42] Weidhorn v. Levy, 253 U. S. 268, 40 Sup. Ct. 534, 64 L. Ed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493, reversing In re Weidhorn, 253 Fed. 28, 165 C. C. A. 48, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592, and therefore sustaining the position originally taken in this case in the District Court, In re Weidhorn (D. C.) 243 Fed. 756, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338. And see further, in support of the general proposition stated in the text, In re Continental Producing Co. (D. C.) 261 Fed. 627, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216; Charles H. Brown Paint Co. v. Rockhold (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 139, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 246; In re Vallozza (D. C.) 225 Fed. 334, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 409; In re Petronio, 220 Fed. 269, 136 C. C. A. 285, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470.

[43] In re Holbrook Shoe & Leather Co., 165 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

[44] In re Rochford, 124 Fed. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Drayton, 135 Fed. 883, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602. The referee in bankruptcy has power to fix a time limit for customers and creditors of a bankrupt stockbroker to file petitions for the reclamation of securities and claims to establish liens on cash in the possession of the trustee. In re Gay & Sturgis (D. C.) 224 Fed. 127, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417.

[45] In re Keystone Press, 203 Fed. 710, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

§ 68. Same; Grant of Injunction.—The General Orders provide that "applications for an injunction to stay proceedings of a court or officer of the United States or of a state, shall be heard and decided by the judge, but he may refer such an application, or any specified issue arising thereon, to the referee to ascertain and report the facts." [46] In this particular case, therefore, it is clear that a referee in bankruptcy has no power to award an injunction. The provision has been assailed as invalid, because it is thought to put a limitation upon the powers of referees as defined and granted by the act itself; but this contention has not been sustained.[47] But aside from an application to stay proceedings, it may be stated as the general result of the authorities that it is within the power of a referee, in a proper case, to issue a restraining order or an order having the force of an injunction.[48] And this appears to accord well with the general purpose of the act to commit to the referee the judicial administration of the whole proceeding in bankruptcy, after the adjudication, with the exception of a very few specific matters reserved for the decision of the judge himself, and also to be necessary for the prompt and efficient working of the act. Thus in a case before the United States District Court in Connecticut, a trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to the possession of premises leased by the bankrupt, as against persons to whom the landlord had granted a lease after the adjudication, and it was held that the referee had power to enjoin those persons from interfering with the possession of the trustee. "In his injunctive order," said the judge, "I do not think that the referee exceeded the power which the act confers upon him. It would be a sad state of things if, in such emergencies, the referee should be compelled to discover the judge in time to save the situation. The matter in hand was peculiarly within the knowledge of the referee, and the court will, in advance, thank all like officers who shall relieve it from an unnecessary burden." [49] And whatever may be the limits of the referee's authority in such cases, the courts refuse to interfere with

[46] General Order No. 12, par. 3.

[47] In re Berkowitz, 143 Fed. 598, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Siebert, 133 Fed. 781, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348.

[48] In re Matthews, 109 Fed. 603, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; In re Booth, 96 Fed. 943, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Steuer, 104 Fed. 976, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re Wilkes, 112 Fed. 975, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574; In re Northrop, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; In re Adams, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 167; In re Rogers, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 211; In re Kilian, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 267; In re Kerski, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79. But a referee in bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to restrain the trustee from proceeding for the commitment of the bankrupt for failure to comply with an order for the surrender of assets. In re Epstein (D. C.) 219 Fed. 635, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606.

[49] In re Adams, 134 Fed. 142, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23.

his action in granting an injunction where the parties in interest have voluntarily appeared before him and submitted the questions at issue to his determination, as, for instance, where his decision is that incumbered property of the bankrupt estate shall be taken in charge by the trustee and sold free of liens, and the proceeds distributed among those entitled, and this includes an order enjoining the incumbrancer from making a sale.[50] But where a referee has already decided that certain property does not belong to the estate in bankruptcy, but to a third person, he has no further jurisdiction over it, and therefore cannot enjoin its seizure by a sheriff under a writ of replevin issued from a state court, in an action brought therein by the trustee against such third person.[51]

§ 69. Same; Appointment of Receiver.—The general grant to referees in bankruptcy of the powers and functions of the court, except in the few particulars where the decision of specific questions is reserved for the judge, is broad enough to include the authority to appoint a receiver to take charge of the property of a bankrupt until the appointment and qualification of a trustee, in the case provided for by the statute, viz., where it is absolutely necessary for the preservation of the estate. And this authority is not limited by the provision of the act which gives the referee power to exercise the functions of the judge in regard to taking possession of or releasing the bankrupt's property in the event of the judge's absence, sickness, or inability to act, to be shown by the certificate of the clerk of the court. But the referee's authority to appoint a receiver dates from the time the order of court referring the case to him is actually placed in his hands, and not from the time of its signing or filing. Hence the action of a referee in appointing a receiver before the delivery of the order of reference to him, and immediately upon his being informed by a telephone message that such an order had been made, would be improvident and unauthorized. All the foregoing points were ruled in the case cited in the margin.[52]

§ 70. Duties of Referees.—The duties of a referee in bankruptcy depend, in a large measure, upon the exigencies of the particular case, since it is committed to his general oversight and control. But there are certain specific duties imposed upon him by the act and the General Orders which must be noticed in this connection. In the first place, he is to send out all notices to creditors,[53] to call the first meeting of credi-

[50] In re Matthews, 109 Fed. 603, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96; In re Benjamin, 140 Fed. 320, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351.

[51] In re Berkowitz, 143 Fed. 598, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

[52] In re Florcken, 107 Fed. 241, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 802.

[53] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 39, 58.

tors and preside at such meeting,[54] to confirm the trustee chosen by the creditors, or, if they fail to make a choice, to appoint a trustee, or, in the case where the schedule of a voluntary bankrupt discloses no assets and no creditor appears at the meeting, to make an order that no trustee be appointed,[55] and further, "it shall be the duty of the referee immediately upon the appointment and approval of the trustee, to notify him in person or by mail of his appointment; and the notice shall require the trustee forthwith to notify the referee of his acceptance or rejection of the trust, and shall contain a statement of the penal sum of the trustee's bond." [56]

It is also the business of the referee, in case the bankrupt complies with his duty and files a schedule of his property and a list of the creditors, to examine the same, and cause them to be amended if they are incomplete or defective; and if the bankrupt fails, refuses, or neglects to file the schedule or list, then it is made the duty of the referee to prepare and file these papers, or to cause it to be done.[57]

It is further the duty of the referee to transmit to the clerk of the court, "forthwith, a list of the claims proved against an estate, with the names and addresses of the proving creditors." [58] Also he is to transmit to the clerk "such papers as may be on file before him whenever the same are needed in any proceedings in courts, and in like manner secure the return of such papers after they have been used, or, if it be impracticable to transmit the original papers, to transmit certified copies thereof by mail," and upon the conclusion of each case in bankruptcy, to transmit to the clerk his record thereof.[59] The further duties of these officers are thus specified in the statute: "Referees shall declare dividends, and prepare and deliver to trustees dividend sheets showing the divi-

[54] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55, clause b.

[55] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 44; General Orders Nos. 13 and 15; Official Forms Nos. 22, 23, 27.

[56] General Order No. 16.

[57] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39. It is within the jurisdiction and the discretion of a referee in bankruptcy to order amendments to be made in the petition and schedule of a voluntary bankrupt referred to him, in particulars as to which he finds them defective or insufficient, and to refuse to call a first meeting of creditors until such amendments are made. In re Brumelkamp, 95 Fed. 814, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318. If the list of creditors is incomplete or imperfect in not giving their addresses, or giving them wrongly, it should be corrected by the referee in this respect, with the aid of such information as the creditors themselves furnish him; for all notices to creditors are to be sent "to their respective addresses as they appear in the list of creditors of the bankrupt, or as afterwards filed with the papers in the case by the creditors." Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a. If the referee needs any further information as to the bankrupt's assets, the liens on his property, the state of the title, etc., to enable him to prepare or complete the schedule and list, he can cause a summons to be issued requiring any designated person to appear before him and be examined. Idem. § 21a.

[58] General Order No. 24.

[59] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39.

dends declared and to whom payable; furnish such information concerning the estates in process of administration before them as may be requested by the parties in interest; make up records embodying the evidence, or the substance thereof, as agreed upon by the parties in all contested matters arising before them, whenever requested to do so by either of the parties thereto, together with their findings thereon, and transmit them to the judges; upon application of any party in interest, preserve the evidence taken, or the substance thereof as agreed upon by the parties, before them when a stenographer is not in attendance; and whenever their respective offices are in the same city or town where the court of bankruptcy convenes, call upon and receive from the clerks all papers filed in courts of bankruptcy which have been referred to them." [60]

Three important prohibitions are laid upon the referees. They must not act in cases in which they are directly or indirectly interested. They may not practice as attorneys or counselors at law in any bankruptcy proceeding. They must not purchase, either directly or indirectly, any property of an estate in bankruptcy. If a referee violates this last prohibition, it is a punishable offense, and conviction thereof will vacate his office.[61]

§ 71. Proceedings Before Referees.—The proceedings before a referee in bankruptcy are, generally speaking, under his own regulation and control, and if there is any irregularity it should be complained of in due season. Thus, where the administrator of an estate appeared in bankruptcy proceedings in response to an order of the referee to show cause, and went to trial upon the merits without questioning the jurisdiction, it was considered that he had waived his right to insist that the referee should have proceeded against him by an action.[62] In pursuance of the general policy of the act, all proceedings before the referee should advance with reasonable expedition. There should be no unreasonable delays, nor any dilatory proceedings. In regard to allowing postponements and adjournments, no inflexible rule can be laid down; the referee must exercise a proper legal discretion; but it may be said that he should not grant adjournments except for good cause properly substantiated. "The common practice of granting adjournments for convenience only should not be imitated, but progress with diligence be enforced by short adjournments only, except for good cause." [63] With regard to petitions and other pleadings before referees, no special rules

[60] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39.

[61] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39b; Idem. § 29c (2).

[62] In re F. W. Hall & Sons (D. C.) 208 Fed. 578, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 434.

[63] In re Finkelstein, 93 Fed. 989; In re Morris, 154 Fed. 211, 18 Am. Bankr.

have been laid down, with the exception of such as may be found in the general orders and official forms. It is in the discretion of a referee to allow or refuse a proposed amendment to a pleading in a case before him, on the same terms and in the same circumstances as would ordinarily be operative in a court of justice,[64] and he should dismiss a petition presented to him by a trustee in bankruptcy but not filed in the office of the clerk of the court where such filing is necessary,[65] or one which is not supported by sufficient evidence to enable the referee to find the facts to sustain the order prayed for.[66] While the referee is to preside at the first meeting of the creditors, when a trustee is to be chosen, and the choice of the creditors is subject to his approval, it is highly improper for him to interfere in any way with their election of a trustee or to attempt to influence them in their choice, and on a petition by creditors alleging such interference the cause will be sent to another referee.[67] It is provided that, "in all orders made by a referee, it shall be recited, according as the fact may be, that notice was given and the manner thereof, or that the order was made by consent, or that no adverse interest was represented at the hearing, or that the order was made after hearing adverse interests." [68] And where there is an appearance in a contest before a referee, the litigating parties should be notified of his decision; but where creditors do not appear, or they appear and their appearance is not noted, no duty rests upon the referee to give notice of his decisions, especially where claims are presented and no objection is made.[69]

§ 72. Same; Taking and Preservation of Evidence.—The General Order (No. 22) provides that "the examination of witnesses before

Rep. 828; In re Hyman, 3 Ben. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 6,984, 2 N. B. R. 333.

[64] Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160 Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355. Where part of the subject-matter of a petition filed by a trustee before a referee is within the jurisdiction of the court, and a part is not, it should be retained, and an amendment allowed limiting it to the matter within the jurisdiction. In re Newfoundland Syndicate, 196 Fed. 443, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119.

[65] In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346.

[66] In re Canister Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 587, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625.

[67] In re Smith, 2 Ben. 113, 1 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 12,971.

[68] General Order No. 23. An order of the referee, pursuant to a petition in the proceeding, affecting a third person, is not necessarily invalid because it was based on an order to show cause which was mailed to that person, instead of being personally served upon him. Courtney v. Youngs, 202 Mich. 384, 168 N. W. 441. In a proceeding before a referee to compel the delivery of property by a third person to the trustee, it was irregular to receive and hear the evidence before the trustee's petition was filed and before an order to show cause had been issued to the third person. In re Ballou (D. C.) 215 Fed. 810, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21.

[69] In re Nichols, 166 Fed. 603, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216.

the referee may be conducted by the party in person or by his counsel or attorney, and the witnesses shall be subject to examination and cross-examination, which shall be had in conformity with the mode now adopted in courts of law. A deposition taken upon an examination before a referee shall be taken down in writing by him, or under his direction, in the form of narrative, unless he determines that the examination shall be by question and answer. When completed it shall be read over to the witness and signed by him in the presence of the referee. The referee shall note upon the deposition any question objected to with his decision thereon; and the court shall have power to deal with the costs of incompetent, immaterial, or irrelevant depositions, or parts of them, as may be just." It is clearly the duty of the referee to be present in person throughout the progress of an examination and hear the evidence, unless, perhaps, where his presence is waived by the parties. It is not at all a proper practice to administer the oath to a witness, and then leave the parties to proceed with a stenographer.[70] It is further the duty of the referee to take and preserve all the evidence offered upon the examination, and the remedy for his refusal to do so is by application to the district court, and, failing there, to the circuit court of appeals, for an order that it be taken and preserved.[71]

There has been some uncertainty as to the duty of a referee where formal objection is taken to a particular question or line of testimony, and, in his opinion, the objection is well founded. He is required, as above stated, to note upon the deposition any question objected to and his decision thereon. And some courts have thought that this gives him authority to exclude altogether any question or line of questions which he decides to be inadmissible.[72] But the better opinion, and that supported by the weight of authority, is otherwise. Expedition in the settlement of bankruptcy cases is the great purpose of the act, and it would be very ill served in this respect if it were necessary to remand a proceeding to the referee every time the judge differed from the referee in regard to the admissibility of evidence. Besides, upon a review of the referee's decision, the judge is not bound to reverse because of the erroneous admission or exclusion of evidence, but it is his duty to determine the issue do novo upon all the evidence in the record which he decides to be competent.[73] Therefore, when an objection is interposed, it is the duty of the referee to incorporate in the deposition

[70] In re Wilde's Sons, 131 Fed. 142, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714.

[71] First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[72] In re Graves, 182 Fed. 443, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; In re Wilde's Sons, 131 Fed. 142, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714.

[73] In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

the question asked, the fact of objection and the reasons given for objection, and his ruling on the objection, and then, even though he decides the question to be improper, to allow and require it to be answered and the answer to be entered in the deposition.[74] From this rule, however, should be excepted evidence attempted to be extracted from a witness who is privileged against testifying, also particular items of evidence as to which privilege is claimed and where the claim should clearly be allowed, and further, evidence which is clearly and unmistakably incompetent, irrelevant, or immaterial, in so much that it would be an abuse of process or of the power of the court to compel its production or permit its introduction.[75]

§ 73. Same; Review and Reopening of Case.—Some of the authorities hold that the mode of reviewing an order or decision of a referee provided by the General Order No. 27, that is to say, by petition to the district court, is exclusive, and that a referee cannot review or revoke his own orders after the expiration of the time fixed for filing a petition for such review by the court.[76] Within that time, however, it is clear that an order is still within the control of the referee, and that he may set it aside, reconsider the case, and make a new order, for cause shown, as, for instance, that the original order was based on a mistake of fact.[77] And without special reference to the lapse of time, other authorities hold that a referee may revise and change his findings and orders on proper application and for sufficient reasons, such as mistake, misunderstanding of counsel, or new evidence, though in such a case it is the proper practice to give notice to counsel, so that they may be reheard on the question if they desire.[78] But where a party has had an opportunity to call and examine his witnesses in a proceeding before a referee, and the matter is closed, he should not be permitted to reopen the case for the purpose of introducing omitted evidence, unless there is a special reason therefor.[79] And it has been said that "referees, in their hear-

[74] Bank of Ravenswood v. Johnson, 143 Fed. 463, 74 C. C. A. 597, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; In re Sturgeon (C. C. A.) 139 Fed. 608, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Harrison, 197 Fed. 320, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; In re Romine, 138 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; In re Lipset, 119 Fed. 379, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 32; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436. And see In re Neuman (D. C.) 251 Fed. 667, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; In re Krug (D. C.) 218 Fed. 860.

[75] First Nat. Bank v. Abbott, 165 Fed. 852, 91 C. C. A. 538, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[76] In re Marks, 171 Fed. 281, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568; In re Greek Mfg. Co., 164 Fed. 211, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[77] In re Brenner, 190 Fed. 209, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646.

[78] In re Hawley, 116 Fed. 429, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 629; In re Porter, 14 Phila. 449.

[79] In re Booss, 154 Fed. 494, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658.

ings, within the scope of their power, are clothed with the authority of judges, and their orders and decrees are to be reviewed, reversed, or annulled under the same rules and conditions as those governing other courts of equity, subject always to the express provisions of the bankruptcy act." And accordingly it was held that a petition filed before a referee to review an order previously entered by him after a hearing is in the nature of a bill of review in equity and governed by the same rules of procedure. It can only be filed for error of law apparent upon the face of the decree, or because of the discovery of new evidence since the hearing, and, when on the latter ground, it can only be filed by express leave, and the evidence relied on must be relevant, material, and such as would have produced a different result, and it must have been unknown to the petitioner at the time of the hearing and such as he could not have discovered by the exercise of due diligence.[80] Where a proceeding before a referee is dismissed by the court for want of jurisdiction, all that has been done in the proceeding is necessarily annulled, including the findings of the referee and the taking of evidence by him; and he cannot thereafter, in a new proceeding, base a determination of the same issues on the findings made in the prior proceeding, or consider the evidence taken therein, unless by stipulation of the parties.[81]

§ 74. Certifying Questions for Review by Judge.—The bankruptcy law provides that the exercise by referees of the jurisdiction conferred upon them shall be "subject always to a review by the judge." Courts of bankruptcy are invested with jurisdiction to "consider and confirm, modify or overrule, or return, with instructions for further proceedings, records and findings certified to them by referees." And by another section, for the purposes of such a review, it is made the duty of referees, whenever requested thereto by either of the parties, to make up the record in any contested matter and transmit it to the judge.[82] In addition, General Order No. 27 provides that "when a bankrupt, creditor, trustee, or other person shall desire a review by the judge of any order made by the referee, he shall file with the referee his petition therefor, setting out the error complained of, and the referee shall forthwith certify to the judge the question presented, a summary of the evidence relating thereto, and the findings and order of the referee thereon." Compliance with the practice here prescribed is imperative. A party desiring the judge to review an order of the referee must file his petition as required by the General Order, in default of which the application for review will be dismissed.[83] On a similar principle, the decision of the referee on a contest between the bankrupt and one of his creditors cannot be certified to the judge for review when the referee's finding is not followed by any order made by him.[84]

[80] In re McIntire, 142 Fed. 593, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[81] In re Rosenberg, 116 Fed. 402, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

[82] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 38, 2, 39.

In order to be properly certified to the judge, the question must arise regularly in the course of proceedings before the referee, and between parties having the legal right to raise it. No opinion can be asked, or will be given, upon merely abstract questions or hypothetical questions, nor upon such as are merely anticipated or likely to arise. The question must be one actually arising and existing on issues of law or fact in proceedings had. Questions stated by consent must be by parties in a particular case upon proceedings actually had.[85]

Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, the only "parties" who were entitled to have the register certify a question and decision for review by the judge were the bankrupt and the creditors; and it was held that a witness under examination was not a "party" in this sense, and could not have a review of the register's decision on the question of his being subject to examination.[86] But while the present statute speaks only of the "parties," it will be observed that the General Order gives this right of applying for review to "a bankrupt, creditor, trustee, or other person." But the review must be asked for by some person entitled. The referee should not certify any question to the court until requested to do so in a proper manner.[87] And where no party in interest has asked [83] In re Avoca Silk Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 607, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 391; In re Zartman (D. C.) 242 Fed. 595, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544; In re Petersen (D. C.) 252 Fed. 846, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637; In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; Craddock-Terry Co. v. Kaufman, 175 Fed. 303, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; In re Sharick, 1 Alaska, 398; In re Smith, 93 Fed. 791, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190; In re Schiller, 96 Fed. 400, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704. Specific questions arising in proceedings before a referee in bankruptcy, and upon which the opinion of the district judge is desired, should be presented on the certificate of the referee, or, in the case of orders entered, on petition for review, and not in the form of an assignment of errors. In re T. L. Kelly Dry-Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. Counsel desiring to be heard by the court must file exceptions to the findings of the referee, as required by the rule of the court. In re Carolina Cooperage Co., 96 Fed. 604.

[84] In re Smith, 93 Fed. 791, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190. An order of a referee denying a motion to dismiss a petition by the trustee to require the bankrupt to turn over property is not reviewable because not a final order. In re Schimmel, 203 Fed. 181, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361.

[85] In re Pulver, 1 Ben. 381, 1 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 11,466; In re Wright, 1 N. B. R. 393, Fed. Cas. No. 18,069; In re Sturgeon, 1 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 13,564; In re Bray, 2 N. B. R. 139, Fed. Cas. No. 1,818; In re Peck, 3 N. B. R. 757, Fed. Cas. No. 10,887; In re Haskell, 4 N. B. R. 558, Fed. Cas. No. 6,191.

[86] In re Fredenberg, 2 Ben. 133, 1 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 5,075.

[87] In re Ruos, 159 Fed. 252, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 281; In re Clark Coal & Coke Co., 173 Fed. 658, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 273. But where other creditors were not parties to a petition by the trustee for leave to transfer a part of the bankrupt's property pursuant to a contract made before bankruptcy, such creditors, though they did not appeal that an order of the referee be certified for review, it is not reviewable merely on a report by the referee of his proceedings in the case, including the order.[88] And the referee himself has no jurisdiction, of his own motion, to certify a question not raised by the parties to the bankruptcy proceeding, but which the referee anticipates may arise, and on which he desires to be advised.[89]

It is not necessary for the purpose of obtaining a review that formal exceptions should have been taken to the decision and ruling of the referee; the want of them will not prevent the court from reviewing the matter in question, unless they are required by a local rule of court.[90] But if exceptions are taken before a referee in bankruptcy, they must be specific, as required by the settled practice of the federal courts.[91] And in the absence of such exceptions, the specific errors of law complained of must be clearly and distinctly pointed out in the petition for review.[92]

The petition for review is not to be filed in the office of the clerk of the court, but with the referee, but if it is wrongly filed, by inadvertence, it rests within the discretion of the court, in the absence of any rule on the subject, to permit the mistake to be corrected, even though the time ordinarily limited for the filing of such petitions has elapsed.[93]

Since neither the statute nor the rules prescribed by the Supreme Court fix any particular time within which a party aggrieved by a ruling or order of a referee must file his petition for review, the time may be limited by a rule of the particular court, and if this is not done, the only limitation is that the petition must be filed within a reasonable time.[94] from the decision of the referee wherein he found that one objecting to the order had a lien on the property, are not bound, and may subsequently question the objector's interest. In re Collins (D. C.) 235 Fed. 937, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[88] In re Kimmel, 183 Fed. 665, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595.

[89] In re Reukauff, Sons & Co., 135 Fed. 251, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[90] In re Peoples' Department Store Co., 159 Fed. 286, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Swift, 118 Fed. 348, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Miner, 117 Fed. 953, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100.

[91] Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., 119 Fed. 531, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

[92] In re Carver, 113 Fed. 138, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539; In re Covington, 110 Fed. 143, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373.

[93] In re Nippon Trading Co., 182 Fed. 959, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

[94] In re Verdon Cigar Co., 193 Fed. 813, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56; In re Foss, 147 Fed. 790, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439; In re Rome, 162 Fed. 971, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 820; Bacon v. Roberts, 146 Fed. 729, 77 C. C. A. 155, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Grant, 143 Fed. 661, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256; In re Sharick, 1 Alaska, 398; Crim v. Woodford, 136 Fed. 34, 68 C. C. A. 584, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Nichols, 166 Fed. 603, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216. But where a local rule of court requires a petition for review to be filed within a limited time (as, 10 days), it is imperative and must be complied with. In re Isert (D. C.) 232 Fed. 484, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 431; In re Kruse (D. C.) 234 Fed. 470, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; In re Stringer (D. C.) 244 Fed.

Whether or not this requisite has been complied with is a question to be determined by the district court in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, having regard to the general policy of the act to expedite proceedings and to the circumstances of the case, especially such as may offer a good excuse for the delay, or, on the other hand, charge the party with laches. And its decision will not be reversed by the appellate court except for an abuse of discretion or manifest error.[95] Some of the courts have defined the term "reasonable time," for this purpose, as the same time fixed by law for taking an appeal from the same class of orders.[96] But, generally speaking, no arbitrary time has been limited, the courts preferring to decide each case on its own facts, but with a generally observable tendency to regard thirty days as the limit of a "reasonable time," unless there are special and peculiar circumstances to excuse a longer delay. Thus, it is said: "In view of the general aim and purpose of the bankruptcy act to facilitate and expedite the proceedings in the settlement of the estates of bankrupts, and in view of analogous provisions requiring prompt and speedy action, it may be stated with certainty that the circumstances and conditions must be extreme which will excuse a delay of more than thirty days in asking for a review of an order of the referee."[97] In one case, it was held that an order dismissing a petition for review filed fifty days after the making of the order sought to be reviewed, on the ground of unreasonable delay, was not an abuse of discretion, where no good reason for the delay was shown.[98] In another case, a petition filed more than three months after the order was made, and on the day fixed for the declaring of a dividend, was held to be unreasonably late, especially as the referee had repeatedly called the attention of counsel to the matter, and it was held that, on the objection of the trustee, the referee was justified in refusing to certify the matter to the court.[99] A petition filed six months after the date of the order complained of is clearly and certainly too late and should be dismissed.[100] But this rule does not apply to a motion to vacate an order made by a referee in bankruptcy, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to make it. Such a motion should

629, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474; In re El Sevilla Restaurant (D. C.) 253 Fed. 410, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

[95] Bacon v. Roberts, 146 Fed. 729, 77 C. C. A. 155, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[96] In re Nichols, 166 Fed. 603, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216; In re Nippon Trading Co., 182 Fed. 959, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

[97] In re Verdon Cigar Co., 193 Fed. 813, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56. And see In re Foss, 147 Fed. 790, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439; In re Rome, 162 Fed. 971, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 820; In re Wink, 206 Fed. 348, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298.

[98] Bacon v. Roberts, 146 Fed. 729, 77 C. C. A. 155, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[99] In re Grant, 143 Fed. 661, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

[100] In re Sharick, 1 Alaska, 398.

be entertained at any time and disposed of on the merits, as the doctrine of laches does not apply in such a case.[101] It should also be remarked that a referee is not required to stop proceedings before him and certify to the court for decision questions raised on objections to evidence.[102]

In the absence of any provision in the statute or the rules of the court, a petition to review an order of a referee in bankruptcy does not of itself operate as a supersedeas, and whether or not it shall have that effect rests in the discretion of the reviewing or reviewed authority in the particular case; but the district court may provide by rule that such a petition for review shall not operate as a supersedeas, unless a bond be given to indemnify the opposite party in such sum as may be prescribed by the referee or the judge, or it may require the petitioner to give security for the costs of the review.[103]

The duty of the referee, on the filing of such a petition, is to "certify to the judge the question presented, a summary of the evidence relating thereto, and the finding and order of the referee thereon." (General Order No. 27.) Referees should strictly observe these directions. In one case, where the referee transmitted to the clerk of the court the creditor's petition for review, the notes of the testimony, and his own opinion, it was held that this was not a compliance with the order. It was said: "There is no attempt to certify the precise question that was ruled upon, and there is no summary of the evidence relating thereto. Both these provisions are important and should be carefully observed. The certification of the question prevents disputes among counsel concerning the point presented and decided, and the summary of the evidence is required in order to save the judge the labor of examining what is often a mass of testimony on many different questions and of extracting so much as may be relevant to the point immediately in hand. The summary may also be valuable as showing what evidence has been considered by the referee before coming to a conclusion." [104] And where any matter is referred to a referee in bank-

[101] In re Willis W. Russell Card Co. 174 Fed. 202, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

[102] Bank of Ravenswood v. Johnson, 143 Fed. 463, 74 C. C. A. 597, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

[103] In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

[104] In re Kurtz, 125 Fed. 992, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Turetz, 205 Fed. 400, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752. And see Gardner v. Gleason, 259 Fed. 755, 170 C. C. A. 555, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644. But in another case, where it appeared that the referee, instead of making a summary of the evidence, returned all the evidence that was taken, and the matter was determined by the judge without any motion having been made to require the evidence to be summarized, it was held that the proceeding for review was not invalidated, where it involved substantial matters, because the rule was not observed by the referee. Crim v. Woodford, 136 Fed. 34, 68 C. C. A. 584, 14

ruptcy to find the facts, it is proper for him in his report to state his conclusions on the facts found.[105]

§ 75. Review of Proceedings by Judge.—Jurisdiction to review the orders and rulings of referees in bankruptcy is confided exclusively to the district courts.[106] It is only after a decision by the district court that the matter can be brought before the circuit court of appeals, not by petition or appeal directly from the referee.[107] On such a petition, the district court is given authority to "consider records and findings certified to it by referees," and either to confirm the decision of the referee, to modify or overrule it, or to return the case to him with instructions for further proceedings.[108] This does not contemplate a general review of the entire proceeding before the referee,[109] nor a

Am. Bankr. Rep. 302. Where objections to evidence offered before a referee were sustained, the referee, at the request of the party offering the same, was not required to certify the objections made to the court for revision. In re Romine, 138 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785. An order of a referee in a matter in which there is a dispute of fact must be supported by a finding of the ultimate facts; the specific facts to be found depending on the particular case. In re Canister Co. (D. C.) 248 Fed. 587, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625.

105 In re Baker (D. C.) 212 Fed. 765, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378.

106 The judicial functions of a referee in bankruptcy, however important, are always subject to the review of the bankruptcy court. Weidhorn v. Levy, 253 U. S. 268, 40 Sup. Ct. 534, 64 L. Ed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 493.

107 Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160 Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Octave Mining Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 457.

108 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 10. Where a court of bankruptcy, on a petition for review of an order of a referee requiring a bankrupt to turn over certain property to his trustee, or to pay its value, made an order giving the bankrupt a stated time within which to comply with the order of the referee, it was impliedly an affirmance of such order, and it is not again subject to review in subsequent proceedings. In re Hershkowitz, 136 Fed. 950, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86. But the fact that the court, in affirming such order, struck out a provision for the commitment of the bankrupt in case of his default, and gave him additional time, is not an adjudication that he should not be so punished, but leaves that matter to be brought up anew by motion in case the bankrupt fails to obey the order within the time allowed. Idem. As to remanding a case to the referee with instructions for further proceedings, see Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160 Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355. Where a referee's findings were not sufficiently definite to enable the court on a petition for review to determine the legal questions involved, the proceeding will be remanded to the referee for further hearing and additional findings. In re Hawley Down Draft Furnace Co. (D. C.) 214 Fed. 500, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

109 In re T. L. Kelly Dry-Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. In re Stokes, 185 Fed. 994, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255. And see In re Tudor, 96 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808. Where the only matter certified to the district court for review by the referee was an order overruling a demurrer to and denying a motion to strike out portions of a motion filed by a trustee, a subsequent order made by the referee on such motion was not before the district court for review. Ellis v. Krulewitch, 141 Fed. 954, 73 C. C. A. 270, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615. On a petition to review an order of a referee, the court will not review the order under which the matter was referred to the referee for hearing. In re Graff (D. C.) 255 Fed. 239, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164.

trial de novo,[110] but only a consideration and review of the particular question certified up, in the light of the record and evidence transmitted. Still, the provision is very broad, and the courts are not disposed to be overstrict in limiting the scope of the review. It is said, for instance, that the court may properly consider any point presented by the record before it, whether or not such point was discussed before or by the referee.[111] And it has even been held that it is perfectly permissible for the judge to take new testimony if it is offered before him.[112] But generally speaking, on the analogy of appeals properly so called, the judge will restrict his consideration of the case to the specific errors complained of in the petition, and to such objections and exceptions as were raised in the proceedings before the referee, and matters not then pressed, or not mentioned in the petition, will be considered as waived.[113] Yet this rule will not be applied with inflexible severity. A proceeding in bankruptcy, as it is often remarked, is a proceeding in equity; and substantial rights will not be sacrificed to technicalities. Thus, on petition to review an order of the referee, the court is authorized to protect and secure to the bankrupt any substantial right of his which may have been overlooked by the referee, though there may be no specific assignment of error in relation thereto.[114]

In matters which are within the sound discretion of the referee, such as questions concerning the best interests of the estate as involved in the sale of the bankrupt's assets or the performance of his contracts, the referee's decision is either not subject to review at all, or if it is, will not be reversed unless clearly improvident.[115] As to the result of the review by the court, it is to be observed that creditors who petition for such a review and obtain a reversal of the referee's order are not [110] In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168. Where the evidence before a referee is not in serious conflict, the court may hear the matter de novo and consider questions not raised by formal exceptions to the referee's decision. In re Elmore Cotton Mills (D. C.) 217 Fed. 810, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544.

[111] In re Samuel Wilde's Sons, 144 Fed. 972, 75 C. C. A. 601, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 386; In re Mills Tea & Butter Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 815, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711. See In re French, 250 Fed. 644. In a summary proceeding before a referee to enforce performance of the bankrupt's contract, it is not too late to question the referee's jurisdiction on a petition to review his order. In re Ballou (D. C.) 215 Fed. 810, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 21. But compare In re Goldman (C. C. A.) 241 Fed. 385, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

[112] In re Leech, 171 Fed. 622, 96 C. C. A. 424, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

[113] In re McCann Bros. Ice Co., 171 Fed. 265, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; In re Rome, 162 Fed. 971, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 820; In re Scott, 99 Fed. 404, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625; In re Carolina Cooperage Co., 96 Fed. 604; In re Cohn, 171 Fed. 568, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; In re Rayford Truck & Tractor Co. (D. C.) 250 Fed. 634, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; In re Stucky Trucking & Rigging Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 427; In re Levy (D. C.) 261 Fed. 432, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 248.

[114] In re Monongahela Distillery Co., 186 Fed. 220.

[115] In re Knox Automobile Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 569, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67; In thereby placed in a position of any preference or priority over other creditors (with similar rights) who did not join in the petition for review.[116]

§ 76. Same; Effect of Referee's Findings of Fact.—On review of a ruling or order of a referee in bankruptcy, his decision upon a question of fact will be entitled to respectful consideration, but will not possess any conclusive or constraining force, where it is a deduction or inference from admitted or established facts, of which the judge may take a different view.[117] But if his findings of fact are based upon a review of conflicting evidence, or have involved the necessity of weighing the credibility of witnesses, they are entitled to very great weight, and will not be rejected or disregarded by the court unless clearly and manifestly erroneous.[118] It has indeed been said that the findings of re Schilling (D. C.) 251 Fed. 966, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 705.

[116] In re Jamison Bros. & Co., 209 Fed. 541, 126 C. C. A. 363, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 972.

[117] In re McCrary Bros., 169 Fed. 485, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, 163 Fed. 155, 89 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Peoples' Department Store Co., 159 Fed. 286, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Georgia Steel Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 473, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re Aboudara (D. C.) 246 Fed. 469, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; In re Blanchard (D. C.) 253 Fed. 758, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177; Walter v. Atha (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 75, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150. The referee's findings of fact, while presumptively correct, are not as conclusive as the verdict of a jury, or as findings of fact made by a judge in an action at law, where a jury has been waived. In re Hawks, 204 Fed. 309, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

[118] In re Booth, 96 Fed. 943, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Rome Planing Mill Co., 99 Fed. 937, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766; In re Waxelbaum, 101 Fed. 228, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 120; In re Stout, 109 Fed. 794, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; In re Covington, 110 Fed. 143, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 373; In re Miner, 117 Fed. 953, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 100; In re Williams, 120 Fed. 542, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731; In re Shults, 135 Fed. 623, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378; In re Benjamin, 140 Fed. 320, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Simon & Sternberg, 151 Fed. 507, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; In re Kenyon, 156 Fed. 863, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; In re Littman, 159 Fed. 233, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Hatem, 161 Fed. 895, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 470; Ohio Valley Bank Co. v. Mack, 163 Fed. 155, 89 C. C. A. 605, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Braselton, 169 Fed. 960, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re MacKissic, 171 Fed. 259, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 817; Fouche v. Shearer, 172 Fed. 592, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 828; In re Hoffman, 173 Fed. 234, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; In re C. K. Hutchins Co., 179 Fed. 864, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647; In re Schwartz, 179 Fed. 767, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37; In re Baumhauer, 179 Fed. 966, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 750; In re Boner, 189 Fed. 93, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Brenner, 190 Fed. 209, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646; In re American National Beverage Co., 193 Fed. 772; In re Silverman, 206 Fed. 960; Couts v. Townsend, 126 Fed. 249, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Soloway & Katz, 195 Fed. 103, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; In re Charlestown Light & Power Co., 199 Fed. 846, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721; In re Cox, 199 Fed. 952, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 456; In re Malschick & Levin (D. C.) 206 Fed. 71, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Heffron Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 642, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; In re Cozatsky (D. C.) 216 Fed. 920, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323; In re Kligerman (D. C.) 219 Fed. 758, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Gay & Sturgis (D. C.) 224 Fed. 127, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417; In re Rosenfeld-Goldman Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 921, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; In re Ylia (D. C.) 233 Fed. 476; In re Aronson (D. C.) a referee have the same effect as if rendered by any court of general jurisdiction.[119] But it is probably a better statement of the rule to say that, while no arbitrary rule can be laid down for determining the weight which should be attached to a finding of fact by a referee in bankruptcy, yet, as his position and duty are analogous to those of a special master, the rules applicable to a master's report apply to a referee's finding of facts, and if it is based on conflicting evidence, involving questions of credibility, and the referee has heard the witnesses, the District Judge should not disturb his findings unless there is most cogent evidence of mistake.[120]

Still, they are not absolutely conclusive, and if the judge reaches a different conclusion upon the whole record before him, it is certainly within his province to do so. This is explained by a circuit court of appeals in the following terms: "Although, in a loose sense, parties who are dissatisfied with the conclusions of the referee are said to appeal to the district court, yet the action of that court on the findings of the referee did not assume the formalities of an appellate tribunal. Neither, according to the usual practice, are the proceedings before the referee brought before the court on exceptions, and thus made a part of the record, as in the case of a master in chancery. The relations between the court and the referee are usually of an informal character." Section 38 of the Bankruptcy Act and General Order No. 27 "provide for review by the court of the orders of referees in the most general terms, and are far from limiting the court to the rules which govern a chancery suit. Therefore, according to the common practice, the district court was authorized to disregard the findings of the referee entirely if it saw fit so to do, and proceed de novo, or reject them for reasons of law, or refuse to accept them in whole or in part, without assigning reasons therefor. The position of the petitioner in this particular would require this court [the circuit court of appeals] to be bound conclusively by the findings of the referee of the preliminary and ultimate facts, although the district court was not so bound, a position which defeats itself on its very face." [121] Moreover, there are exceptional cases in which the rule does not apply. Thus, on review by the district judge of an order made by the referee in bankruptcy, requiring the bankrupt to surrender to his trustee money or property alleged to be in his possession and to constitute assets of his estate, the ordinary rule as to the force of the referee's findings of fact is not applicable, because the determination is not governed by the weight of testimony, but it is the duty of the judge to ascertain that cause is shown for making such an order beyond a reasonable doubt.[122]

233 Fed. 1022, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 385; In re Farmers' Dairy Ass'n (D. C.) 234 Fed. 118, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672; Chambers v. Continental Trust Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 441, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re Schultz & Guthrie (D. C.) 235 Fed. 907, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; In re Biehl (D. C.) 237 Fed. 720, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; In re Atkinson-Kerce Grocery Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 481, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 819, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Golub (D. C.) 245 Fed. 512, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810; In re Najour (D. C.) 246 Fed. 167; In re Association Dairy Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 749, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Mullings Clothing Co. (D. C.) 252 Fed. 667, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756; In re Campion (D. C.) 256 Fed. 902, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625; In re Wilson-Nobles-Barr Co. (D. C.) 256 Fed. 966, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Rosen's Estate, (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 704, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 5; In re Prentice (D. C.) 267 Fed. 1019, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38.

[119] McCulloch v. Davenport Savings Bank (D. C.) 226 Fed. 309, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765.

[120] Sternburg v. M. Cohen & Co., 254 Fed. 1, 165 C. C. A. 411, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 456.

§ 77. Records and Accounts of Referees.—The Bankruptcy Act makes it the duty of the referee, when his office is in the same city or town where the court of bankruptcy convenes, to call upon and receive from the clerk all papers filed in the court which have been referred to him, and the duty of the clerk to deliver to the referee such papers on his application; but if the office of the referee is not in the same city or town as the office of the clerk, then the latter is to transmit such papers to the former by mail.[123] Among the papers referred to must be included the schedule of the bankrupt, for another clause of the act requires this document to be executed in triplicate, and provides that one copy thereof shall be "for the referee." [124] It is further the duty of the referee to "indorse on each paper filed with him the day and hour of filing, and a brief statement of its character." [125] He is to keep a record of the proceedings in each case in a separate book or books, and these shall, together with the papers on file, constitute the records of the case. The records of all proceedings before the referee are to be kept, as nearly as may be, in the same manner as records are kept in equity cases in the federal courts. And when a case is concluded before the referee, the book or books containing the record of it are to be certified to by him, and, together with such papers as are on file before him, be transmitted to the court of bankruptcy, there to remain as a part of the records of that court.[126] The provisions of the statute do not constitute the referee the keeper of the records, or authorize [121] In re Pettingill, 137 Fed. 840, 70 C. C. A. 338, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757.

[122] In re Mayer, 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533. But where the referee has considered carefully the evidence on the issue of whether the bankrupt is concealing assets, his findings should not be disturbed in the absence of a demonstration that a plain mistake has been made. In re Bass (D. C.) 257 Fed. 137, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 280. And see In re Heyman (D. C.) 214 Fed. 491.

[123] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 39, 51, clause 3.

[124] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, clause 8.

[125] General Order No. 2.

[126] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 42. See In re Graves, 182 Fed. 443, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372.

him to certify records directly to a circuit court of appeals.[127] It is further provided that certified copies of proceedings before a referee, or of a paper issued by the referee, "shall be admitted as evidence with like force and effect as certified copies of the records of district courts of the United States are now or may hereafter be admitted as evidence." [128] A referee must permit a reasonable opportunity for the inspection of the accounts relating to the affairs of, and the papers and records of, estates in his charge by parties in interest. If he refuses to do so, application should be made to the court for an order requiring him thereto. If he refuses when directed by the court, it is a punishable offense, and conviction thereof will vacate his office.[129] But a referee, while he must permit inspection and furnish information, is not required to furnish copies of the papers or proceedings before him; and the jurisdiction of a referee to proceed with a hearing on a reference made by the court is not affected by his refusal to furnish to a party, on demand, a copy of the petition on which the hearing is based and of the order of reference.[130] Original papers referred to in the bankrupt's deposition and annexed thereto cannot be withdrawn from the files at the option of the bankrupt, but the court may order a withdrawal for good reason shown by a party interested.[131]

The provision as to the accounts of referees is that "every referee shall keep an accurate account of his traveling and incidental expenses, and of those of any clerk or other officer attending him in the performance of his duties in any case which may be referred to him; and shall make return of the same under oath to the judge, with proper vouchers when vouchers can be procured, on the first Tuesday in each month." [132] Exceptions to the referee's charges against the estate in bankruptcy for his expenses therein will not be heard by the court, when the referee's account of such expenses has been duly kept and returned to the court under oath with vouchers, as required by law, and approved by the court, and especially when distribution of the estate has already been made before such exceptions are presented.[133] Finally, it is made the duty of "officers," including the referees,[134] to "furnish in writing and transmit by mail such information as is within their knowledge,

127 Cook Inlet Coal Fields Co. v. Caldwell, 147 Fed. 475, 78 C. C. A. 17, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 135.

128 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21, clause d.

129 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39, clause 3; § 29, clause c, 3.

130 In re Lewin, 103 Fed. 850, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

131 In re McNair, 2 N. B. R. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 8,908.

132 General Order No. 26. And see Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 62.

133 In re Tebo, 101 Fed. 419, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235.

134 The term "officer" includes the clerk, marshal, receiver, referee and trustee. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 18.

and as may be shown by the records and papers in their possession, to the attorney general, for statistical purposes, within ten days after being requested by him to do so." [135].

§ 78. Contempts before Referees.—It is provided by the statute that no person, in proceedings before a referee, shall (1) "disobey or resist any lawful order, process, or writ; (2) misbehave during a hearing or so near the place thereof as to obstruct the same; (3) neglect to produce, after having been ordered to do so, any pertinent document; or (4) refuse to appear after having been subpœnaed, or, upon appearing, refuse to take the oath as a witness, or, after having taken the oath, refuse to be examined according to law." The referee himself has no power to punish for contempt; but he "shall certify the facts to the judge, if any person shall do any of the things forbidden in this section. The judge shall thereupon, in a summary manner, hear the evidence as to the acts complained of, and, if it is such as to warrant him in so doing, punish such person in the same manner and to the same extent as for a contempt committed before the court of bankruptcy, or commit such person upon the same conditions as if the doing of the forbidden act had occurred with reference to the process of, or in the presence of, the court." [136] Since it is the court alone that possesses the power of punishment for contempt, it is error to leave the question of commitment by way of punishment, or as a means of enforcing obedience, to the discretion of the referee.[137] At the same time, the contempts which are within the purview of this section are committed against the court as represented by the referee, not the court as represented by the judge. Hence, for example, in the case of disobedience to an order, it is the order as made by the referee, not the order as finally approved by the judge, which must be obeyed under penalty of punish-

[135] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 54.

[136] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 41. As to the general power of the federal courts to punish for contempts, the acts of Congress provide that they "shall have power to impose and administer all necessary oaths, and to punish, by fine or imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, contempts of their authority: Provided, that such power to punish contempts shall not be construed to extend to any cases except the misbehavior of any person in their presence, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of said courts in their official transactions, and the disobedience or resistance by any such officer, or by any party, juror, witness, or other person, to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree or command of the said courts." Rev. Stat. U. S. § 725, Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 268. The provision of the Bankruptcy Act above referred to does not apply to a proceeding in contempt against a bankrupt for violation of an order of the court, which may be prosecuted in the usual form by his trustee. Biderman v. Cooper (C. C. A.) 273 Fed. 683.

[137] Smith v. Belford, 106 Fed. 658, 45 C. C. A. 526, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291; In re Haring, 193 Fed. 168, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

ment for contempt. In other words, if a party affected by an order of the referee, requiring him to take certain action forthwith, files a petition for review by the judge, but does not secure a supersedeas, the referee's order continues operative, and the failure to obey it is a contempt, which cannot be justified on the theory that it is not an offense to disobey the order until after it has been confirmed by the court.[138] All classes and kinds of orders made by referees fall within this rule, provided that they are not unlawful or entered without jurisdiction, but perhaps the most usual examples are found in the case of orders requiring the bankrupt or some third person to surrender money or property to the trustee in bankruptcy.[139] The case of misbehavior or contumacy on the part of witnesses summoned for examination in bankruptcy proceedings will be more fully considered in the chapter relating to examinations in bankruptcy.[140]

As to the procedure in cases of this kind, it is held that the directions of the statute must be strictly observed. "In order that the court may take cognizance of the offense and punish the offender, he must be proceeded against strictly in accordance with the mode pointed out by the bankruptcy act, and any deviation from that procedure the bankrupt [respondent] may take advantage of on a motion to dismiss the proceedings. The statutory procedure, being full and complete, must be strictly followed, and a failure to do so will be fatal." Accordingly, in the case from which this quotation is taken, the court dismissed a proceeding to punish a bankrupt for contempt because it was instituted by a petition filed by the trustee, for a rule on the bankrupt to show cause, instead of being based on a certificate of the referee, as the law

[138] In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168. But see Brown v. Detroit Trust Co., 193 Fed. 622, 113 C. C. A. 490, holding that where a third person was ordered by the referee to surrender property of the bankrupt in his possession within a limited time, and, before the expiration of such time, he took proceedings to review the order of the referee, those proceedings suspended the operation of the referee's order, and therefore a judgment imposing a fine on defendant for contempt in failing to comply with the order was erroneous.

[139] See In re Graessler & Reichwald, 154 Fed. 478, 83 C. C. A. 304, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; In re Home Discount Co. (D. C.) 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; In re Soloway & Katz (D. C.) 195 Fed. 100, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225. Where the referee ordered the trustee to make a demand upon his own attorney for money in the latter's hands, claimed to be assets of the estate, and the trustee obeyed the order, he cannot be charged with contempt for failing to secure the money, where the attorney refused to surrender it. In re Stemper (D. C.) 222 Fed. 690, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806. Where the referee orders a private sale of property of the bankrupt, if the bankrupt and a creditor induce the bidder to withdraw his bid, in order that another may purchase at a lower price, they are punishable as for contempt. In re Boyd (D. C.) 228 Fed. 1003, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

[140] The refusal to be examined, for which a bankrupt may be committed, in-

requires.[141] The referee may certify contumacious behaviour on the part of the bankrupt to the court for punishment as for contempt, without notice to him, as he will have notice and an opportunity to be heard in the proceedings before the court.[142] The proceedings in the court are to be "summary," and this applies to the pleadings. But while it is probable that no pleading on the part of the respondent is strictly necessary, yet it is said that it is often advantageous to set out the defense in a definite manner, with a view of bringing the issues clearly before the court.[143] But it has also been ruled that the statute does not invest courts of bankruptcy with broader powers in the matter of punishment for contempt than are possessed by other federal courts; and the mode of proceeding in such courts to determine whether a constructive contempt has been committed should conform to the established practice in like cases in other courts of the United States, as near as may be.[144] An order of commitment of a bankruptcy court is not invalid because it does not run in the name of the United States.[145]

As to the defenses available at the hearing before the court, it may be said, in the first place, that the referee's order must be based upon a sufficient finding of the facts to inform the party affected, fully and completely, of the action which he is required to take; otherwise he cannot be held in contempt.[146] But he will not ordinarily be heard to allege in defense matters which were set up and contested in the proceedings before the referee, as such contentions are res judicata.[147] And intentional and willful disobedience of an order clearly within the jurisdiction of the referee to make, persistently continued, cannot be justified as having been under the advice of counsel.[148] But it has been held that, in a proceeding to punish a bankrupt for failure or refusal to obey an order of the referee requiring him to surrender to his trustee property alleged to be in his possession and to constitute assets of his estate in bankruptcy, the order of the referee is not conclusive as to volves contumaciousness, and must be distinguished from lack of candor, untruthfulness and perjury. In re Blitz (D. C.) 232 Fed. 276, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863.

141 In re Gitkin, 164 Fed. 71, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113.

142 In re Magen, 179 Fed. 572, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63. But where the referee does not act on his own motion, in contempt proceedings against a bankrupt, but on the motion or petition of some one else, the bankrupt should be accorded notice and a hearing before the referee. Idem.

143 In re Goodrich, 184 Fed. 5, 106 C. C. A. 207, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787.

144 Boyd v. Glucklich, 116 Fed. 131, 53 C. C. A. 451, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393.

145 Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224.

146 In re Rogowski, 166 Fed. 165, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

147 In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; In re Strobel, 163 Fed. 380, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754.

148 In re Home Discount Co., 147 Fed. 538, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

the existence of the facts which would justify it, or as to the ability of the bankrupt to comply.[149] In the case cited, in an opinion distinguished by much learning and by convincing reasoning, it was concluded that, in the case supposed, it is the imperative duty of the court to make an independent investigation of the facts disclosed by the entire evidence in the case, and to make its own independent decision as the result of such investigation.

[149] In re Haring (D. C.) 193 Fed. 168, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

CHAPTER VI

ACTS OF BANKRUPTCY

§ 79. Acts of Bankruptcy Enumerated and Defined.—An act of bankruptcy is an act committed by a debtor which will render him liable to be proceeded against in involuntary bankruptcy by his creditors, and will warrant the court in adjudging him bankrupt on a proper petition in that behalf. Five acts of bankruptcy are enumerated by the present statute. It is declared by the third section of the statute that such an act shall be deemed to have been committed by a person who has:

1. "Conveyed, transferred, concealed, or removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, any part of his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or any of them, or

2. Transferred, while insolvent, any portion of his property to one or more of his creditors with intent to prefer such creditors over his other creditors, or

3. Suffered or permitted, while insolvent, any creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings, and not having at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference vacated or discharged such preference, or

4. Made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors, or, being insolvent, applied for a receiver or trustee for his property or because of insolvency a receiver or trustee has been put in charge of his property under the laws of a state, of a territory, or of the United States,[1] or

5. Admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts and his willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt on that ground."[2]

This provision of the statute, though remedial as to creditors is penal as to the bankrupt, and must be construed with a reasonable measure of strictness. No one can be adjudged bankrupt on the ground of his having committed an act which, though not among those enumerated by the statute, produces equivalent results. The acts of bankruptcy defined and classified by the statute cannot be enlarged by construction so as to include transactions similar or analogous to, but not identical with, those specified.[3]

In the present chapter we are concerned with the commission of acts of bankruptcy by individuals. Acts of bankruptcy committed by partnerships and by corporations will be separately considered in the chapters relating to the bankruptcy of those organizations.[4]

§ 80. Nature and Effect of an Act of Bankruptcy.—In this, as in many other cases, when the prohibited act has been done, ignorance of the law is no excuse. A debtor who has committed one of the enumerated acts of bankruptcy cannot save himself from the consequences by alleging that his action was taken unwarily or without any thought of the bankruptcy law, or without any contemplation of bankruptcy, or even that he did not know that there was any such law in existence as the bankruptcy statute.[5] Neither can the legal liability for an act of bankruptcy be discharged or evaded by a subsequent rescission of the transaction.[6] Nor is the motive or intention of the debtor material.

[1] The provision as to the making of an assignment for the benefit of creditors was in the act of 1898 as originally passed, but the provision making the appointment of a receiver, in the cases specified, an act of bankruptcy was added by an amendment passed February 3, 1903, 32 Stat. 797. Prior to this amendment, it was held that obtaining the appointment of a receiver by an insolvent partnership, through dissolution proceedings in a state court, was not an act of bankruptcy, though such action was taken for the very purpose of preventing the bankruptcy court from obtaining possession of the assets. In re Varick Bank, 119 Fed. 991, affirmed In re Burrell, 123 Fed. 414, 59 C. C. A. 508, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625.

[2] The filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy is not of itself an act of bankruptcy, but simply institutes a proceeding in which the court acquires jurisdiction to adjudge bankruptcy if the facts warrant it. In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[3] In re Empire Metallic Bedstead Co. (C. C. A.) 98 Fed. 981, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575. See McLean v. Brown, 4 N. B. R. 585, Fed. Cas. No. 8,880. Compare Continental Building & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 163 Cal. 579, 126 Pac. 476.

[4] As to acts of bankruptcy by partnership, see infra, § 113. Acts of bankruptcy by corporation, see infra, § 144.

[5] In re Craft, 2 Ben. 214, 1 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 3,316.

[6] In re Ryan, 2 Sawy. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 12,183.

except where the law makes it an ingredient of the act. Thus, where the execution of a general assignment is proved or admitted, an adjudication of bankruptcy will follow although the respondent denies that he had any actual intention to defeat or delay the operation of the bankruptcy act.[7] So in the case of giving a preference, a payment of money by an insolvent debtor, made the basis of a petition on this ground, is none the less a preference because it was made in good faith, and was a judicious action and necessary to preserve valuable property.[8] And it is not sufficient ground for dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, against a debtor who has given a preference, that he only yielded to the pressure or urgent solicitation of the creditor, or to threats of legal process or arrest and to the fear of disgrace.[9] But a man cannot be made bankrupt for an act done by another which he did not authorize and in which he did not participate, except in the case of a copartnership. Thus, an act of bankruptcy by one of two persons who are jointly and severally liable for a debt, but are not partners, is no ground for an adjudication of bankruptcy against the other.[10]

§ 81. Insolvency as an Element in Acts of Bankruptcy.—In considering the question of a debtor's solvency or insolvency as bearing on his liability to be adjudged bankrupt, we are to remember that the term "insolvency" has been specially defined in the bankruptcy act. In the first section of the statute it is provided that "a person shall be deemed insolvent, within the provisions of this act, whenever the aggregate of his property, exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed, or removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors, shall not, at a fair valuation, be sufficient in amount to pay his debts." It is in this sense that the word is used throughout the statute, and it is to be so understood in determining the question of the commission of an act of bankruptcy.[11]

A comparison of the first four paragraphs of the third section of the bankruptcy act will show that, in so far as the liability to be ad-

[7] In re Smith, 4 Ben. 1, 3 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 12,974.

[8] In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, 6 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441.

[9] Clarion Bank v. Jones, 21 Wall. 325, 22 L. Ed. 542; In re Batchelder, 1 Low, 373, 3 N. B. R. 150, Fed. Cas. No. 1,098; In re Dibblee, 3 Ben. 283, 2 N. B. R. 617, Fed. Cas. No. 3,884; Campbell v. Traders' Nat. Bank, 2 Biss. 423, 3 N. B. R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 2,370.

[10] James v. Atlantic Delaine Co., 11 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 7,179.

[11] Lansing Boiler & Engine Works, v. Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, 128 Fed. 701, 63 C. C. A. 253, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558; In re Golden Malt Cream Co. (C. C. A.) 164 Fed. 326, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; Hewitt v. Boston Straw Board Co., 214 Mass. 260, 101 N. E. 424.

judged bankrupt depends upon the insolvency of the debtor at the time of the commission of an act of bankruptcy, or at the time a petition against him is filed, there are important differences between the several acts of bankruptcy enumerated. In respect to the first of these, viz., the transfer, concealment, or removal of property with intent to delay or defraud creditors, the test of liability to be adjudicated a bankrupt is insolvency at the time of the filing of the petition. If the debtor was insolvent at the time the fraudulent conveyance or concealment was made, yet regains a condition of solvency before a petition is filed, the petition must be dismissed. Conversely, if he was not insolvent at the time of the fraudulent transfer or concealment, yet becomes insolvent within the next four months, and is insolvent at the time creditors file a petition, he may be adjudged bankrupt.[12] In regard to the second and third acts of bankruptcy, (giving a preference by a conveyance or transfer, or suffering a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings), these can be committed only "while insolvent," and further, the act declares that a petition may be filed against a person who is insolvent and who has committed an act of bankruptcy. Hence, as to these acts of bankruptcy, insolvency must have existed at the time of the preference and must have continued to the time of the filing of a petition, or, at any rate, must exist at these two particular times, though there might possibly be cases where a debtor, hovering on the verge of insolvency, and sometimes on one side of the line and sometimes on the other, might, in the interval, have periods of solvency. But he cannot be adjudged on these grounds if he was solvent at the time the preference was given, although insolvent at the time of the filing of the petition, nor, probably, when he is solvent at the date of the petition, though insolvent when the act of bankruptcy was committed, since the act is explicit in declaring that a petition may be filed only against a "person who is insolvent and who has committed an act of bankruptcy."[13] As to the fourth act of bankruptcy (making a general assignment for the benefit of creditors) the rule apparently settled is that it is not necessary to show that the debtor was insolvent either at the date of the assignment or at the time of the filing of the petition.[14] But as to the new or supplemental provision respecting the appointment of a receiver, it is clear that insolvency at the time of the act is necessary, since the statute makes it an act of bankruptcy if a person, "being insolvent," applies for a receiver, or if a court appoints a receiver "because of insolvency." As to the fifth act of bankruptcy, which is committed where a person makes a written admission of his "inability to pay his debts" and his willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt on that ground, the words quoted may be taken as equivalent to a confession of "insolvency," and it is scarcely conceivable that a person who was actually solvent would commit this act of bankruptcy.

[12] George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Acme Food Co. v. Meier, 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

[13] In re Rome Planing Mill Co., 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; In re Dunham, 2 Ben. 488, 2 N. B. R. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 4,143. But see Acme Food Co. v. Meier, 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550, holding that, if the act of bankruptcy charged is the giving or permitting a preference, insolvency must have existed at the time of the preference but that solvency or insolvency at the time of the

To render a transfer of property void under the bankruptcy act, it is not necessary that the debtor should have known or believed himself to be insolvent. The act treats insolvency as a condition of fact, not of belief; and he is chargeable in law with the knowledge of it and of its consequences. Hence when a man, insolvent in fact, gives a mortgage to an existing creditor, he necessarily does so with a view to giving him a preference.[15]

§ 82. Fraudulent Conveyances.—It is an act of bankruptcy if a debtor shall have "conveyed or transferred any part of his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or any of them."[16] These words are clearly applicable to every conveyance which would be fraudulent at common law or under the state statutes relating to fraudulent conveyances. But they go beyond this. It is held that any conveyance is an act of bankruptcy which contravenes the provisions and objects of the bankruptcy law, though it would not be im-filing of the petition can have only a reflex importance as evidence. Compare Johansen Bros. Shoe Co. v. Alles, 197 Fed. 274, 116 C. C. A. 636, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

[14] George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153. The possibility of the commission of an act of bankruptcy by a perfectly solvent person, even under the oldest statutes, is shown by the following passage: "If any surplus remains after selling his estates and paying every creditor his full debt, it shall be restored to the bankrupt. This is a case which sometimes happens to men in trade, who involuntarily or at least unwarily commit acts of bankruptcy, by absconding and the like, while their effects are more than sufficient to pay their creditors. And if, any suspicious or malevolent creditor will take the advantage of such acts, and sue out a commission, the bankrupt has no remedy, but must quietly submit to the effects of his own imprudence, except that, upon satisfaction made to all the creditors, the commission may be superseded." 2 Bl. Comm. 488.

[15] Hall v. Wager, 3 Biss. 28, 5 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 5,951.

[16] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a, clause 1. A conveyance or transfer of property by a debtor with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or any of them, constitutes an act of bankruptcy, although he may have been solvent at the time. In re Larkin, 168 Fed. 100, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711.

peachable for fraud at common law or under the state statutes. The reason is that the bankruptcy law confers certain peculiar rights and privileges upon creditors, which were unknown to the common law and are not recognized by the state statutes, such as the right to choose their own trustee, to examine the bankrupt, to have notice of all important steps in the administration of the estate, and to have the assets converted into money and distributed under the supervision and control of a court of bankruptcy; and a conveyance by the debtor which would defeat these rights of the creditors (such as a deed of trust directing the trustee to convert all the debtor's property into money and pay his debts according to the state law) must be considered as made with the intent to "hinder, delay, and defraud" them, and is therefore an act of bankruptcy.[17]

The bankruptcy act provides that the word "transfer" shall "include the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security." [18] Hence a gift by an insolvent debtor of all his property to his wife is an act of bankruptcy.[19] So is a deed of valuable property to any person made without consideration.[20] So is a conveyance of property by a father to his sons in consideration of their agreement to support him.[21] So is the giving of a mortgage of the whole of a debtor's estate and effects to one creditor, with intent to hinder and delay the others.[22] But on the other hand, a conveyance made in good faith and intended only as security for an existing debt, or to secure the grantee as a surety for the grantor, does not constitute an act of bankruptcy.[23] So, where a [17] Rumsey & Sikemier Co. v. Novelty & Machine Mfg. Co., 99 Fed. 699, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Gutwillig, 92 Fed. 337, 34 C. C. A. 377, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; Gassett v. Morse, 21 Vt. 627, Fed. Cas. No. 5,264. But see Githens v. Shiffler, 112 Fed. 505, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453.

[18] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 25. Where property conveyed by an alleged bankrupt largely exceeded the debts assumed or discharged by the grantee, the conveyance must be deemed an act of bankruptcy, and intended to hinder and delay the petitioning creditor, whose claim was not assumed. Morrison v. Rieman, 249 Fed. 97, 161 C. C. A. 149, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[19] In re Alexander, 1 Low. 470, 4 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 161; In re Hughes, 183 Fed. 872, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556.

[20] In re Leland, 185 Fed. 830, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209. And see In re Donnelly, 193 Fed. 755, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

[21] Avery v. Johann, 3 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 675.

[22] Baldwin v. Rosseau, Fed. Cas. No. 803; In re Cowles, 1 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 3,297; In re McKibben, 12 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 8,859.

[23] Acme Food Co. v. Meier, 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550. Paying a bonus to secure a loan on chattel mortgage, the proceeds of which are used to pay off a prior mortgage, is not an act of bankruptcy. In re Hallin, 199 Fed. 806, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708.

bill in equity asking for the appointment of a receiver is brought against a corporation, and the defendant makes no opposition to the suit, but tacitly permits the receiver to be appointed and to take charge of its property, this cannot be said to be a transfer or conveyance within the meaning of the bankruptcy law,[24] though it may, under the amendment of 1903, constitute an act of bankruptcy on another and independent ground. Again, the exchange of goods covered by a warehouse receipt in the warehouse of the vendor for others of equal or less value is not an act of bankruptcy,[25] nor is the transfer of firm property from one member of a solvent firm to another.[26] And a transfer of property by an individual member of a firm, although with intent to defraud individual and firm creditors, is not an act of bankruptcy on the part of the partnership which will sustain a petition in bankruptcy against it.[27] So, where a retail merchant had ordered goods for a customer, but the latter, on inspection, refused to accept them, whereupon the merchant returned them to the seller, it was held that this was not an act of bankruptcy, not being done with a view of giving a preference or defrauding his creditors, but as a prudent and proper business transaction.[28]

An actual wrongful or fraudulent intent to hinder and delay creditors, or to defraud them, is an essential element of this act of bankruptcy.[29] And an intent to hinder and delay creditors involves a purpose wrongfully or unjustifiably to prevent, obstruct, embarrass, or postpone them in the collection or enforcement of their claims.[30] And [24] In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; In re Henry Zeltner Brewing Co., 117 Fed. 799, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Harper & Bros., 100 Fed. 266, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804. An instrument appointing trustees to wind up a corporation's affairs was held not a conveyance or transfer with intent to defraud creditors within the Bankruptcy Act, in In re Ambrose Matthews & Co. (D. C.) 229 Fed. 309, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501.

[25] Sharp v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., Fed. Cas. No. 12,709a.

[26] In re Munn, 3 Biss. 442, 7 N. B. R. 468, Fed. Cas. No. 9,925. But the withdrawal of money from an insolvent firm by one of the partners, and its secret transfer to a third person, in connection with other concurrent transactions between the partners, was held a conveyance and transfer of property with intent to hinder and delay creditors, by both partners, which constituted an act of bankruptcy. In re Shapiro, 106 Fed. 495, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 839.

[27] In re Stovall Grocery Co., 161 Fed. 882, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537.

[28] Doan v. Compton, 2 N. B. R. 607, Fed. Cas. No. 3,940.

[29] In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581; In re McLoon, 162 Fed. 575, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719. Creditors of an alleged bankrupt cannot complain of the transfer of a homestead interest of the bankrupt and a dower interest of his wife, to a corporation organized by him, and the fraudulent intent necessary to render such a transfer an act of bankruptcy could not be predicated thereon. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 854, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[30] In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581.

it is to be noted that, as the language of the statute is in the disjunctive, an intent either to hinder or to delay or to defraud creditors is enough. Hence an act of bankruptcy is committed by the making of a transfer or conveyance with the intention of obstructing creditors in their endeavor to collect their claims, or of putting the property temporarily out of their reach, although there is no intention to defraud them, and although it is the intention of the debtor that, ultimately, all creditors shall receive full satisfaction of their claims.[31] But it is not necessary to show that any creditor actually was hindered or delayed by the debtor's proceedings.[32] Under the former act, the intent required was an intent to delay or defraud creditors generally; but it was held that, if the conveyance was made with the intent to delay one particular creditor, but its necessary effect was to delay all, it was an act of bankruptcy.[33] But it will be observed that the present law is satisfied with an intent to hinder or defraud "his creditors or any of them." But a conveyance of property by a debtor to certain creditors cannot be charged as an act of bankruptcy, where he had at the time no other creditors.[34]

The intent with which the transfer or conveyance was made is seldom susceptible of explicit proof, but it may be made out by inference from the circumstances of the transaction, attention being given to all the acts done and all the circumstances surrounding the transaction;[35] and an intention to delay or defraud creditors may be inferred from the fact that that is the natural and necessary result of the transfer in question.[36] But conversely, the presumption of a wrongful intent may also be rebutted by inferences drawn from the facts and circumstances. Thus, where a partnership is dissolved, and the whole stock in trade transferred to the only solvent partner, for the purpose of settling the affairs of the firm, a sale of the whole stock by such partner is not an act of bankruptcy, for the circumstances rebut any presumption of fraud.[37] So again, the sale of a stock of goods will not be considered an act of bankruptcy where there is no evidence of the seller's insolvency at the time of the sale, and it appears that his only object in making the sale was to change his

[31] In re Hughes, 183 Fed. 872, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556. And see In re Muir, (D. C.) 212 Fed. 495, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[32] Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 270.

[33] In re Williams, 1 Low, 406, 3 N. B. R. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 17,703.

[34] Brake v. Callison, 129 Fed. 201, 63 C. C. A. 359, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797.

[35] In re Larkin, 168 Fed. 100, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711; In re Minard, 156 Fed. 377, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Cole, 149 Fed. 708, 79 C. C. A. 414, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44.

[36] Bean-Chamberlain Mfg. Co. v. Standard Spoke & Nipple Co., 131 Fed. 215, 65 C. C. A. 201, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610.

[37] In re Weaver, 9 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 17,307.

business.[38] An indorsement of a bill of lading to a third person, to protect the property from attachment and save it for the benefit of all the creditors, is not an act of bankruptcy.[39] Nor is it an act of bankruptcy for a person to transfer property, after he has become involved, in pursuance of an agreement made while he was in prosperous circumstances, to transfer specific property as collateral security for advances made.[40] Again, an intent to prefer is not to be confounded with an intent to defraud, nor a preferential transfer with a fraudulent one. Hence, while a man may not connive with others to get his property out of the way by sale or otherwise, yet a fair and open disposition of it on a full consideration cannot be given a fraudulent character, although it may incidentally have the effect of leaving nothing which creditors can reach, and even though the debtor does this in order to meet some of his obligations rather than others.[41] Finally the statute nowhere denounces a mere intent on the part of an insolvent debtor not to become a bankrupt; and the doing or permitting of any of the things specified in this section of the act, for the purpose and with the intention of escaping being thrown into bankruptcy, is not necessarily doing or permitting them with an intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors.[42]

§ 83. Concealment or Removal of Property.—The bankruptcy act of 1867 made it an act of bankruptcy for a debtor to "conceal or remove any of his property to avoid its being attached, taken, or sequestered on legal process."[43] The present statute uses the words "concealed or removed or permitted to be concealed or removed, any part of his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors or any of them."[44] This language is plainly more comprehensive than that of the earlier act; and a secreting of goods by an insolvent debtor, to prevent their being seized on an attachment, would certainly be held to be a concealment of them with intent to delay or defraud his creditors generally, or at least the attaching creditors.[45] On the other hand, where a debtor sells his property for the purpose of investing the proceeds in

[38] In re Valliquette, 4 N. B. R. 307, Fed. Cas. No. 16,823.

[39] Ex parte Potts, Crabbe, 469, Fed. Cas. No. 11,344. And see In re McLoon, 162 Fed. 575, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 719.

[40] Ex parte Potts, Crabbe, 469, Fed. Cas. No. 11,344.

[41] Githens v. Shiffler, 112 Fed. 505, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453. The execution of a chattel mortgage by the debtor, where the only intent as to hindering, delaying, or defrauding creditors was to give the chattel mortgagee a priority, does not constitute an act of bankruptcy as a conveyance in fraud of creditors, this clause of the Bankruptcy Act having the same construction as the Statute of Elizabeth. Johnson-Baillie Shoe Co. v. Bardsley, Elmer & Nichols, 237 Fed. 763, 150 C. C. A. 517, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

[42] In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581.

[43] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5021.

[44] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a, clause 1.

[45] See Anonymous, 1 Pac. Law Rep. 173, Fed. Cas. No. 466.

a legitimate business enterprise, into which he expects to enter, and shows good faith in respect to the care of the money received therefor, he is not to be adjudged bankrupt simply because he kept the proceeds in cash in his own hands, instead of converting the fund again into tangible property such as could have been levied on under legal process; for this is not a "concealment" of his property with intent to defraud creditors.[46] But consigning property to a person out of the district, by one who contemplates bankruptcy, and with the intent to keep the property from the trustee, amounts to removing it from the district with intent to defraud his creditors.[47] A more serious question is whether the words of the statute must be restricted to a physical concealment or removal of property, or may be made to extend to a concealment of the actual title and possession of the property.[48] Under the former statute it was held that, if the debtor procured an attachment to issue upon a fictitious debt and to be levied on the property, for the purpose of preventing the levy of an attachment by a genuine creditor, this amounted to a concealment of the property.[49] But there are also decisions to the effect that the concealment or removal of property, as distinct from a fraudulent conveyance of it, must be actual and not constructive, that is, must involve an actual or physical change in the position or locality of the property;[50] and hence the mere taking possession of property by a receiver appointed by competent authority is not such a "removal" of it as constitutes an act of bankruptcy, and the failure of the debtor to oppose and contest the appointment of a receiver is not "permitting" his property to be concealed or removed.[51] On similar principles, where a partner of an insolvent firm withdrew from the firm's bank account a certain sum of money, by a check which he at once deposited to his personal account in another bank, but thereupon drew a larger check upon that bank and deposited it to the firm's credit in its

[46] Fox v. Eckstein, 4 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 5,009.

[47] In re Hammond, 1 Low. 381, 3 N. B. R. 273, Fed. Cas. No. 5,999.

[48] See In re Glazier, 195 Fed. 1020, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 391.

[49] In re Williams, 1 Low. 406, 3 N. B. R. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 17,703; In re Hussman, 2 N. B. R. 437, Fed. Cas. No. 6,951. "Concealment is the doing of an act, whether by way of conveyance or transfer, by which the true title and ownership of the debtor is kept from the view of the creditor, when done with the intent and purpose of preventing its being attached or taken on execution." O'Neil v. Glover, 5 Gray (Mass.) 144. There was a concealment of property constituting an act of bankruptcy when the debtor, asked by a creditor what he had done with certain money, said he had left it in a safe place, but that he had offsets exceeding the creditor's claim. In re Burg (D. C.) 245 Fed. 173, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

[50] In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581; Livermore v. Bagley, 3 Mass. 487; Fox v. Eckstein, 4 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 5,009.

[51] Vaccaro v. Security Bank, 103 Fed. 436, 43 C. C. A. 279, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474; In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581.

bank, the transaction was held not to constitute a withdrawal of firm funds nor an act of bankruptcy.[52] And where no depletion of his estate occurs as a result of the debtor's removal of his property from one place to another, such removal is not an act of bankruptcy of which creditors can complain.[53]

Under the provisions of the former bankruptcy act, it was an act of bankruptcy if the debtor departed from the state, district, or territory of which he was an inhabitant, with intent to defraud his creditors, or if, being absent, he should, with such intent, remain absent, or if he concealed himself to avoid the service of legal process. There is no corresponding provision in the present act. But if a debtor should abscond with his available assets, it is very clear that he may be adjudged bankrupt on the ground of having "removed" his property with intent to defraud his creditors.[54] But it is not an act of bankruptcy on the part of one partner to influence or procure the departure of another from the state, although the circumstances are such that the absconding partner makes himself liable to the law.[55]

It should be observed that the present statute denounces not only the act of a debtor who has "concealed or removed" his property with intent to delay or defraud creditors, but also the act of one who has "permitted" this to be done, with like intent. But one does not permit a removal of property who has neither the power nor the right to prevent its being taken away.[56] And hence, where a creditor of a bankrupt removed goods from the bankrupt's store during the latter's absence, and retained possession of them against his protest, the bankrupt's failure to take legal proceedings to recover the possession of the goods did not amount to "permitting" their removal, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy, at least in the absence of any evidence of collusion.[57]

§ 84. Giving a Preference.—It is an act of bankruptcy if an insolvent debtor shall have "transferred any portion of his property to one or more of his creditors with intent to prefer such creditors over his other creditors;" and a preference is deemed to have been given when "the effect of the enforcement of such transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class."[58] The bankruptcy law, it is said, [52] In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

[53] In re McGraw (D. C.) 254 Fed. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38.

[54] In re Filer, 108 Fed. 209, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332.

[55] In re Terry, 5 Biss. 110, Fed. Cas. No. 13,836.

[56] In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 581.

[57] In re Belknap, 129 Fed. 646, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326.

[58] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a, clause 2; Idem, § 60a. See Folger v. Putnam, 194 Fed. 793, 114 C. C. A. 513, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173. Payments by an insolvent perdoes not prohibit an insolvent debtor from dealing with or exchanging his property before proceedings in bankruptcy are instituted against him, provided there is no purpose to defraud or delay his creditors, or to give a preference to any one, and the value of his estate is not thereby impaired.[59] According to the language of the clause in question, there are several ingredients, all of which are essential to the commission of this act of bankruptcy. First of all, there must be an intention on the part of the debtor to prefer one or more creditors over others; without this, there is no act of bankruptcy.[60] Next, the transfer or payment must have been made at a time when the debtor was insolvent.[61] Next, it must have been made within four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him.[62] Again, it must operate to the disadvantage of some other creditor or creditors. Thus, a transfer of property, though made by an insolvent person to a creditor, is not an act of bankruptcy, unless there was, as the time of the transfer, some other creditor holding a claim or demand against the insolvent such as would be provable in bankruptcy.[63] And of course the person to be benefited by the transfer must occupy the position of a "creditor." A trustee for creditors, however, is in the same position as a creditor. Thus, where an alleged bankrupt was a stockholder in an insolvent bank, which was in the hands of the bank commissioner, and he executed a note to the commissioner for the amount of his double liability, secured by a mortgage on nonexempt real property, it was held that he was guilty of an son to certain creditors of 25 per cent. of their claims, pursuant to an arrangement made by a creditors' committee, approved by most of them, for the settlement of all his indebtedness on that basis, where he had secured funds to complete the settlement, do not constitute an act of bankruptcy as the giving of a preference. In re Bloomberg (D. C.) 253 Fed. 94, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115. Further, the preference must have been given by the bankrupt. The settlement of a suit brought on a note, by the attorney for the alleged bankrupt, who himself paid the money and had not been repaid when the petition was filed, was held not an act of bankruptcy. In re Kerlin, 209 Fed. 42, 126 C. C. A. 184, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

[59] Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. Ed. 816. Where a corporation conveys all its property in trust, with directions to the trustee to sell the same, and, out of the proceeds, to pay first the costs and expenses, second, debts entitled to priority under the laws of the state, third, the claims of the creditors of the company, whose names, with the amounts due them, are all set forth in the deed, and fourth, to pay over to the grantor any balance which may remain, the deed does not effect a preference to any creditor, since all are treated alike, and it cannot be made the basis of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy on allegations of preferences. Rumsey & Sikemier Co. v. Novelty & Machine Mfg. Co., 99 Fed. 699, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704. But compare In re Cutler & John (D. C.) 228 Fed. 771, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420.

[60] Goodlander-Robertson Lumber Co. v. Atwood, 152 Fed. 978, 82 C. C. A. 109, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

[61] Wilder v. Watts, 138 Fed. 426, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[62] In re Bogen, 134 Fed. 1019, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

[63] Beers v. Hamlin, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

act of bankruptcy.[64] But it makes no difference that the creditor is the wife of the bankrupt; it is equally against the law to give her a preference as to prefer any other creditor.[65] An accommodation indorser of notes, even before payment, is a creditor of the maker,[66] and so is a surety on the bond of a contractor for government work, who, under the federal statute, is directly liable to laborers to whom the contractor is indebted for labor performed under the contract.[67] Next, it is necessary that the property or money transferred should amount to something substantial, and not be such a mere trifle as to be beneath the consideration of the law. Thus, it is held that the payment of a debt of three dollars by a firm engaged in trade is not such a substantial preference as will constitute an act of bankruptcy sufficient in itself to sustain an involuntary petition.[68] Finally, there must be some actual advantage accruing to the creditor preferred. Thus, where a debtor sold some of his property, for nearly its full value, for the purpose of raising money to satisfy a creditor who was threatening him with a criminal prosecution, but the creditor refused to receive the money, the mere sale, though made with the intention of preferring that creditor, was not an act of bankruptcy.[69] It is evident that many transactions may occur, involving the sale or transfer of property, which do not amount to acts of bankruptcy because they involve some, but not all, of the necessary elements mentioned. For instance, where a debtor, being the owner of a leasehold interest in land having a term of years to run but not assignable without the consent of the landlord, sells the same and applies part of the proceeds in paying the arrears of rent due, taxes on the property, and the incidental expenses of the sale, such payment does not constitute a preference of the creditors paid, but merely a means of realizing the value of the leasehold, and therefore is not an act of bankruptcy on which a petition against the debtor may be maintained.[70] Again, the retirement of one partner from the firm, and the consequent transfer of assets and liabilities to the other, are not necessarily acts of bankruptcy

[64] Fulkerson v. Shaffer, 217 Fed. 355, 133 C. C. A. 271, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[65] In re McCartney, 188 Fed. 815, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548.

[66] In re O'Donnell, 131 Fed. 150, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621.

[67] United Surety Co. v. Iowa Mfg. Co., 179 Fed. 55, 102 C. C. A. 623, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726.

[68] In re Stovall Grocery Co., 161 Fed. 882, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537. And see In re Hallin, 199 Fed. 806, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708. A transfer by an alleged bankrupt to a creditor of an automobile which he had bought in good faith, and to which he had added accessories which he paid for, is a transfer of property and an act of bankruptcy, although in fact the automobile had been stolen and the bankrupt did not acquire the legal title. In re Schenderlein (D. C.) 268 Fed. 1018, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128.

[69] In re Belknap, 129 Fed. 646, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326.

[70] In re Pearson, 95 Fed. 425, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482.

by the partnership, but may be so if intended to give a preference to separate creditors over partnership creditors, or in any other way to cover actual or legal fraud.[71]

As to the intention of the debtor, this may sometimes be imputed to him from the acts of his subordinates or agents. For example, if a wife is the owner of a business, but intrusts its entire management and control to her husband, his acts and intentions, in the giving of preferences to creditors and the like, may constitute acts of bankruptcy on which she may be adjudged bankrupt.[72] So a payment made, in the establishment of an insolvent partnership, out of its funds, by the recognized agent of the partners, without objection on their part, which has the effect to produce a preference, will be regarded as having been made by the partnership with the intention of giving a preference.[73] In this connection, it is important to observe that, where a transfer of property by an insolvent debtor with intent to prefer a creditor, is made the basis of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against him, the intent of the debtor is alone material; it is not necessary to show the intent with which the creditor received the transfer, nor that he had reasonable cause to believe a preference was intended.[74] It is true that, when a trustee in bankruptcy sues to set aside a conveyance of property on the ground of its being an unlawful preference, he must show, not only that the bankrupt intended to give a preference, but also that the creditor receiving it had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was intended. But as regards the commission of an act of bankruptcy, no such knowledge or belief on the part of the creditor is required, nor any unlawful intent on his part. In this case, the law looks only to the intention of the debtor. Hence it follows that a transaction may constitute an act of bankruptcy, such as to warrant an adjudication against the debtor, although the conveyance is not voidable under the law.[75]

Under the comprehensive meaning of the word "transfer," as defined [71] Ex parte Shouse, Crabbe, 482, Fed. Cas. No. 12,815; In re Waite, 1 Low. 207, 1 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 17,044.

[72] Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, 3 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676. And see In re Berkebile, 144 Fed. 572.

[73] Sedgwick v. Sheffield, 6 Ben. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 12,624.

[74] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Ed. W. Wright Lumber Co., 114 Fed. 1011, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 84 Miss. 54, 36 South. 65; In re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[75] Alter v. Clark, 193 Fed. 153; In re Drummond, 1 N. B. R. 231, Fed. Cas. No. 4,093; In re Williams, 1 Low. 406, 3 N. B. R. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 17,703; In re Locke, 1 Low. 293, 2 N. B. R. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 8,439; In re Beck, 6 Phila. 475, 1 N. B. R. 588, Fed. Cas. No. 1,205. The verdict on the question as to whether an act of bankruptcy has been committed in giving a preference will not affect the question of the right to recover back the property transferred or the right to a discharge. In re Dibblee, 3 Ben. 283, 2 N. B. R. 617, Fed. Cas. No. 3,884; Harmanson v. Bain, 1 Hughes, 188, 15 N. B. R. 173, Fed. Cas. No. 6,072.

in the bankruptcy act, a preference may be given by an insolvent debtor by a conveyance of property by way of an absolute sale or gift,[76] or by a mortgage, pledge, or other form of security.[77] But the giving of a mortgage by the debtor upon a present consideration and in good faith, to raise a contested attachment and to pay overdue paper, to enable the debtor to continue in business, is not an act of bankruptcy.[78] Nor is the giving of a chattel mortgage to secure an antecedent debt, where it is given in good faith in renewal of a prior mortgage covering the same property, nor even where it includes additional property, if the mortgagor receives a further present consideration sufficient to warrant the additional security.[79] Also it is settled that money is "property," and the payment of a debt in money is a transfer of property, such as will constitute an act of bankruptcy, if the other elements are present.[80] And if the debtor was insolvent and a preference was intended, it is not material that the debt was a just one and that no fraud was perpetrated or designed.[81] Thus, it is an act of bankruptcy for an insolvent debtor to sell all of his property to one not a creditor, and then to apply the proceeds to the full payment of a part of his creditors, leaving others unpaid, the transaction being in effect a transfer of property with intent to give a preference.[82] And so of an assignment by an insolvent debtor

[76] See Peckham v. Burrows, 3 Story, 544, Fed. Cas. No. 10,897; In re Warner, 5 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 17,177.

[77] In re Edelman, 130 Fed. 700, 65 C. C. A. 665, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 238; In re Riggs Restaurant Co., 130 Fed. 691, 66 C. C. A. 48, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508; Arnold v. Maynard, 2 Story, 349, Fed. Cas. No. 561; Baldwin v. Rosseau, Fed. Cas. No. 803; In re Ryan, 2 Sawy. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 12,183; Jones v. Sleeper, Fed. Cas. No. 7,496; In re Rogers, 2 N. B. R. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 12,002. But see Martin v. Hulen, 149 Fed. 982, 79 C. C. A. 492, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510; In re Puget Sound Engineering Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 353, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310. Where a deed, originally intended to operate as a mortgage, was withheld from record by agreement of the parties, and was afterwards allowed by their agreement to stand as security for any balance in favor of the grantee, and later, at a time when the grantor was insolvent and within four months of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, the deed was placed on record, and shortly thereafter the parties agreed that it should operate as an absolute transfer of the property, an act of bankruptcy was committed when the deed was recorded, as it then operated as a forbidden preference. In re Donnelly, 193 Fed. 755, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

[78] In re Sanford, 7 N. B. R. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 12,310.

[79] In re Cutting, 145 Fed. 388, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751.

[80] Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; Boyd v. Lemon & Gale Co., 114 Fed. 647, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Pinson, 180 Fed. 787, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804; In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; In re Foley, 140 Fed. 300, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 830; In re Ft. Wayne Electric Corp., 96 Fed. 803; In re Conhaim, 97 Fed. 923, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249; In re Wise, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 151; Payne v. Solomon, 14 N. B. R. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 10,856.

[81] Brock v. Terrell, 2 N. B. R. 643, Fed. Cas. No. 1,914.

[82] Boyd v. Lemon & Gale Co., 114 Fed. 647, 52 C. C. A. 343, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

to a creditor of earnings to become due under a building contract.[83] Payment by the indirect method of turning over property to the creditor is equally within the inhibition of the statute. Thus, the payment and discharge of a debt, by an insolvent debtor, by a conveyance to the creditor of personal property of greater value than the debt, the debtor receiving the difference in cash, is a preference of such creditor and an act of bankruptcy.[84] It has been held to be no defense to a petition founded on a preferential payment that it was made in the ordinary course of business.[85] But payments so made by a person who does not know that he is actually insolvent, and who expects to deal with all his other creditors in the same way, that is, to meet all his obligations as they fall due in the ordinary course of business, would lack the essential element of an intent to give a preference, and therefore could not be held to be acts of bankruptcy.[86] There is some doubt as to whether payment of the ordinary and necessary running expenses of the debtor's business will constitute a preference. It has been held that such a payment is not an act of bankruptcy, where there is no design to give the payee an advantage over other creditors, but merely the endeavor to keep the business alive.[87] And this doctrine seems to be well in accord with the spirit and reason of the law. But it does not pass entirely without question.[88]

§ 85. Same; Intention of Debtor Presumed.—Where a transfer of property, or the giving of a mortgage, or the payment of a debt, made by an insolvent debtor to one of his creditors, actually and necessarily operates to give that creditor a preference over others, it will be presumed that the debtor intended to bring about that result. Direct evidence of an intent on his part to prefer the creditor will not be required; but it will devolve on the insolvent, if he denies that the transaction was designed as a preference, to prove his real intention in the matter, on some theory not inconsistent with the facts of the case. This rule is deduced from the familiar principle that every man is presumed to intend the natural and necessary consequences of his volun-

[83] In re O'Donnell, 131 Fed. 150, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621.

[84] Johnson v. Wald, 93 Fed. 640, 35 C. C. A. 522, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84. And see Goldman v. Smith, 93 Fed. 182, 1 Am. Bankr Rep. 266.

[85] In re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Pub. Co., 13 N. B. R. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 10,559.

[86] In re Morgan, 184 Fed. 938, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 861.

[87] Smith v. Teutonia Ins. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 13,115; In re Union Feather & Wool Mfg. Co., 112 Fed. 774, 50 C. C. A. 524, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 205 Fed. 980, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 471; In re Brown Commercial Car Co., 227 Fed. 387, 142 C. C. A. 83, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45.

[88] See In re Kenyon, 1 Utah, 47, 6 N. B. R. 238.

tary acts.[89] For instance, where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy charges the debtor with having transferred property with intent to give a preference, his intent to prefer may be presumed from the fact of his having made a transfer of a large part of his property, while insolvent, to a single creditor; and when this is shown, the burden is on the debtor to show that he was ignorant of his insolvency and had reason to believe he could pay his debts in full.[90] The presumption, as we have stated, is not conclusive. It is open to the debtor to prove that he was actuated by a different motive, and had no intention of preferring the particular creditor, and if this is satisfactorily established, an adjudication of bankruptcy will not be made on that ground.[91] It is ordinarily sufficient to rebut the presumption for the debtor to show that he actually did not know himself to be insolvent.[92] For a preference, as defined in the sixtieth section of the act, does not include paying one creditor promptly while others are made to wait, or making it easy for one creditor to collect his claim while others are evaded or contested, but only "enabling one creditor to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of the same class." Hence there can be no intention to give a preference, within the meaning of the law, unless the debtor knows, or at least has reason to believe, that the effect of the transaction will be to reduce his assets to a point where they will be insufficient to satisfy his other creditors. On this principle it has been held that payments of comparatively small sums of money to [89] Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. Ed. 481; Traders' Nat. Bank v. Campbell, 14 Wall. 87, 20 L. Ed. 832; In re Condon, 209 Fed. 800, 126 C. C. A. 524, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754. Johnson v. Wald, 93 Fed. 640, 35 C. C. A. 522, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84; Rex. Buggy Co. v. Hearick, 132 Fed. 310, 65 C. C. A. 676, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726; In re Flint Hill Stone & Const. Co., 149 Fed. 1007, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Smith, 176 Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864; In re Gilbert, 112 Fed. 951, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re McGee, 105 Fed. 895, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; Catlin v. Hoffman, 2 Sawy. 486, 9 N. B. R. 342, Fed. Cas. No. 2,521; Campbell v. Traders' Nat. Bank, 2 Biss. 423, 3 N. B R. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 2,370; Haughey v. Albin, 2 Bond. 244, 2 N. B. R. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 6,222; Morgan v. Mastick, 2 N. B. R. 521, Fed. Cas. No. 9,803; In re Black, 2 Ben. 196, 1 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 1,457; In re Craft, 2 Ben. 214, 1 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 3,316; Webb v. Sachs, 4 Sawy. 158, 15 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 17,325; In re Perry, Fed. Cas. No. 10,999; Warren v. Delaware, L. & W. Ry. Co., 7 N. B. R. 451, Fed. Cas. No. 17,194; Warren v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 10 Blatchf. 493, 7 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 17,202; Vanderhoof v. City Bank, 1 Dill. 476, 5 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 16,842; Martin v. Toof, 1 Dill. 203, 4 N. B. R. 488, Fed. Cas. No. 9,167; In re Silverman, 1 Sawy. 410, 2 Abb. U. S. 243, 4 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 12,855; Vogle v. Lathrop, 3 Pittsb. 268, 4 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 16,985; Rison v. Knapp, 1 Dill. 187, 4 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 11,861; In re Alexander, 1 Low. 470, 4 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 161.

[90] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

[91] In re Seeley, 19 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 12,628; In re Frantzen, 20 Fed. 785.

[92] In re Gilbert, 112 Fed. 951, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

each of a number of creditors, made by a corporation in the usual course of its business, though at a time when it was actually insolvent, do not raise a presumption of an intention to prefer those creditors over others so as to establish an act of bankruptcy.[93]

§ 86. Suffering Preference Through Legal Proceedings.—It is declared to be an act of bankruptcy if the debtor, while insolvent, shall have "suffered or permitted any creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings," provided the debtor does not, "at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference," vacate or discharge the preference.[94] The motive or intention of the debtor is not material in this connection. An act of bankruptcy can be committed in this way although there was no collusion between the debtor and the creditor, although the former had no wish or intention that the latter should obtain a preference, and even although the debtor did not know that there was any such law as the bankruptcy law in existence, and therefore could not have directly intended to evade or defeat it.[95] But it is held that this provision of the statute does not apply to liens acquired by legal proceedings more than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy and which, therefore, will not be dissolved by an adjudication.[96] The phrase "legal proceedings" means any proceeding in a court of justice, either inter-

[93] In re Douglas Coal & Coke Co., 131 Fed. 769, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[94] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3a, clause 3. Suffering a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings involves insolvency, suffering the preference, not avoiding it within five days before sale, and a sale of the property affected. In re Fisher (D. C.) 219 Fed. 638, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628.

[95] In re Craft, 2 Ben. 214, 1 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 3,316; In re Meyers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 207. But compare In re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[96] In re Superior Jewelry Co., 243 Fed. 368, 156 C. C. A. 148, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575. Colston v. Austin Run Min. Co. (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 929, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92; In re Chapman, 99 Fed. 395, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 607; In re Ferguson, 95 Fed. 429, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; In re Deer Creek Water & Water Power Co., 205 Fed. 205, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; Owen v. Brown, 120 Fed. 812, 57 C. C. A. 180, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717. See In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123, where it is suggested by Judge Coxe that the gaining of an advantage by one creditor over other creditors by seizing the debtor's property, which the debtor suffers or permits, may be an act of bankruptcy, and yet not be voidable by the trustee. See also In re Schick, 2 Ben. 5, 1 N. B. R. 177, Fed. Cas. No. 12,455, where it was held that, although the judgment complained of was entered against the bankrupt before the passage of the bankruptcy act, yet if it was fraudulent and fictitious, and the debtor has taken no steps to set it aside, and, after the enactment of the law, the judgment being still in force, his property is seized on an execution issuing thereon, it is a "procuring or suffering his property to be taken on legal process." Where a judgment creditor delays more than four months in advertising or directing sale under execution, no act of bankruptcy is committed, though the judgment then becomes invulnerable to attack under the act. In re D. F. Herlehy Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 369, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

locutory or final, by which the property of the debtor is seized and diverted from his general creditors.[97] It is a substitute for certain language found in the act of 1867, which made it an act of bankruptcy for a debtor to "procure his property to be taken on legal process." The most familiar methods of gaining a preference through "legal proceedings" are found in the levy of an execution or attachment on property of the debtor.[98] But the phrase in question has a wider scope than this. It includes all liens obtained by legal proceedings which are valid under state laws,[99] such as the lien on real estate of a judgment duly docketed, particularly when followed by an execution and levy,[100] but not a livery stable keeper's lien, given by a state statute, but not established by any proceeding in the courts.[101] But in order that the debtor should commit an act of bankruptcy by failing to discharge the lien of an execution on his property, it is necessary that there should first have been an actual and valid levy by the proper officer, and it is open to him to show, in contradiction of the recitals of the sheriff's return, that there was no actual levy at all or that the pretended levy was wholly invalid.[102]

It is also held that the phrase "legal proceedings" may include the appointment of a receiver by a state court and the vesting of the debtor's property in him. But to make this an act of bankruptcy, it must be shown, first, that the receiver was appointed at the instance of the debtor, or that the latter tacitly permitted and acquiesced in the appointment, and second, that the effect of the receivership and the distribution of the estate under his administration will be to give a preference to one or more creditors, as, where creditors who are entitled to priority under the laws of the state will receive a greater amount under the receivership than they would receive under the bankruptcy act.[103]

[97] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

[98] In re Storm, 103 Fed. 618, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Ferguson, 95 Fed. 429, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; Barnes v. Billington, 1 Wash. C. C. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 1,015.

[99] In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.

[100] In re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824; Zugalla v. International Mercantile Agency, 142 Fed. 927, 74 C. C. A. 97, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67; Bogen v. Protter, 129 Fed. 533, 64 C. C. A. 63, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288.

[101] In re Mero, 128 Fed. 630, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[102] In re Bodek, 188 Fed. 817, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476. A void execution levy on the equity of redemption of an alleged bankrupt in mortgaged personal property was held not to diminish his estate nor constitute a final disposition of his property, and hence was not an act of bankruptcy. In re Moark-Nemo Consol. Mining Co. (D. C.) 219 Fed. 340, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201.

[103] Mather v. Coe, 92 Fed. 333, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Hardy, 7 Blatchf. 262, 3 N. B. R. 385, Fed. Cas. No. 6,058; In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, 6 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; In re Bininger, 7 Blatchf. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 1,420. In another case it was held that,

Further, to constitute this act of bankruptcy, a preference must have been obtained through legal proceedings by a "creditor" of the alleged bankrupt, and to be a creditor the person must own a claim or demand provable in bankruptcy; and it is doubtful whether the character of a creditor is sufficiently established by the mere fact of his having brought a suit in contract against the alleged bankrupt and attached property on mesne process, when there has been no trial of the action at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and consequently nothing to show whether the claim is well founded or not.[104]

§ 87. Same; Attachment.—It has been held in several cases that the levy of an attachment on property of an insolvent debtor constitutes the obtaining of a preference "through legal proceedings," so that the failure of the debtor to discharge the attachment will constitute an act of bankruptcy.[105] "We hold it incumbent upon an insolvent person to discharge or vacate a lien secured by an attachment upon his property at least five days before a period of four months expires following the date of the levy of such attachment, and if he fails therein he commits the third act of bankruptcy. [Since otherwise it becomes an irrevocable preference.] It may be, and has been, suggested that this will sometimes force a person into bankruptcy when the attachment is acquired upon an invalid or spurious claim, or one not provable against the bankrupt's estate; but it seems to us better that this contingency should obtain than that the very statute itself should be defeated in its fundamental purpose." [106]

But there are strong authorities to the contrary. In one case it was said that "the mere suing out of an attachment and levying the same does not suffice to constitute an act of bankruptcy. A judgment must be rendered thereon which would result in creating a preference among creditors, and a failure for at least five days to vacate and discharge the preference in terms refers to the five days before a sale or final disposi-where a corporation makes no defense to a bill in equity against it in a state court, and tacitly permits the appointment of a receiver and the vesting of its property in him, it is not an act of bankruptcy by the corporation, although certain classes of persons may be entitled to larger dividends under the receivership proceedings than they would obtain in bankruptcy, if it does not appear that any such persons are concerned, or that any sale or final disposition of the property affected by the receivership has been made. In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605.

[104] In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.

[105] Folger v. Putnam (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 793, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173; In re Putnam, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Stoever (C. C. A.) 97 Fed. 330, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220; In re Reichman, 91 Fed. 624, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17.

[106] Folger v. Putnam (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 793, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173.

tion of any property affected." [107] In another case, in which a very able opinion was rendered, it was laid down that an attachment on mesne process, before any trial of the action or the rendition of any judgment, is not enough in itself to constitute a preference obtained by the plaintiff, within the meaning of the statute. For the act of bankruptcy is not completed by the mere attaching of a lien of this kind, but there must also be a failure on the part of the debtor to vacate or discharge it within five days before a sale or final disposition of the property. Having had as yet no opportunity to contest and disprove the claim set up, he could vacate or discharge it only by paying it, and he should not be required to do this against his own contention that the claim is unjust or without merit. Giving a bond to dissolve the attachment would not vacate the alleged preference, since it would leave the attaching creditor in exactly as strong a position as before. Hence if, in these circumstances, the attached property is sold, at the instance of the plaintiff, on the ground that the expense of keeping it would be too great and out of all proportion to its value, and the sheriff retains in his hands the proceeds of the sale to stand in place of the property and to await the issue of the suit, the failure of the defendant to vacate or discharge the attachment before such sale cannot be held to constitute an act of bankruptcy. The court said: "In the cases which have held preferences to have been obtained through legal proceedings, and an attachment has formed part of the proceedings, the attachment has either been after judgment in the suit, or, if before judgment, has been followed by a judgment before the petition in bankruptcy, so that the attachment lien has passed beyond the stage during which it remains wholly uncertain whether there is really any claim against the defendant or not." [108] It was further held, in the same case, that the sheriff's sale of the property, above mentioned, could not be considered such a "sale or final disposition" of the property as the statute intends. There was a sale, it is true, but not a sale effecting any final disposition of the property. "It is difficult to believe the language of the section intended to include sales which accomplished no diminution of the bankrupt's assets, but merely substitute money for property, without rendering the 'preference' obtained by an attachment any more effective in the plaintiff's favor than it was before the sale was made."

[107] Seaboard Steel Casting Co. v. William R. Trigg Co., 124 Fed. 75, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594. And see In re Vetterman, 135 Fed. 443, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

[108] In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co. (D. C.) 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.

§ 88. Same; Failure to Vacate or Discharge.—It should be observed that the act of bankruptcy described in the clause under consideration does not consist merely in permitting a creditor to secure a judgment or a lien. It must be a preference which would be dissolved by an adjudication in bankruptcy. Hence the failure of an insolvent to discharge a lien obtained through judicial proceedings more than four months prior to bankruptcy proceedings, is not an act of bankruptcy, although the time fixed for the sale of the property was within the four months period.[109] Nor is this all. There must further be an impending sale or other final disposition of the property affected and the failure of the debtor to avoid it within a limited time before its expected occurrence. Thus, if an execution is levied on property of an insolvent debtor, the mere fact that he remains inactive and allows creditors to file a petition in bankruptcy against him, without any offer or attempt to lift the lien of the execution, does not constitute an act of bankruptcy. The levy does not constitute a "final disposition" of the property; and the circumstance which will make him liable to an adjudication in bankruptcy is not his inactivity with respect to the lien, but a failure to vacate or discharge the preference at least five days before a sale or final disposition.[110] But creditors who seek to secure an adjudication of bankruptcy on this ground need not wait until a sale has taken place. If the debtor, five days before the advertised day of sale, has not discharged the preference, creditors may then file a petition against him, and, on a proper showing, have the sale enjoined.[111] But under the rule prescribed by the statute for the computation of time when days are mentioned, the debtor has the whole of the fifth day preceding that appointed for the sale in which to discharge the lien, and is not guilty of an act of bankruptcy until that day has expired without effective action.[112] It is held, however, that an independent act of bankruptcy is also committed by a failure to discharge the lien on each succeeding day, including the day of the sale.[113] By analogy, where a debtor permitted a judgment against him to remain unsatisfied

[109] In re Superior Jewelry Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 373, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275, 412; In re Murphy (D. C.) 228 Fed. 1018, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320.

[110] Citizens' Banking Co. v. Ravenna Nat. Bank, 234 U. S. 360, 34 Sup. Ct. 806, 58 L. Ed. 1352, on certification of questions by Circuit Court of Appeals, 202 Fed. 892, 121 C. C. A. 250. And see In re McGraw (D. C.) 254 Fed. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Stoever, 97 Fed. 330, 38 C. C. A. 200, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220; In re Windt (D. C.) 177 Fed. 584, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536; In re R. L. Radke Co. (D. C.) 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950.

[111] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

[112] Pittsburgh Laundry Supply Co. v. Imperial Laundry Co., 154 Fed. 662, 83 C. C. A. 486, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756.

[113] In re Nusbaum, 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

after execution had been issued thereon, and garnishment proceedings instituted on the judgment proceeded so far that the garnishee answered, admitting a sum to be due from him to the debtor, it was held that an act of bankruptcy had been committed where more than five days had elapsed after the time when the garnishee might have answered under the statute and paid the money into court.[114] execution or an actual sale would, in my judgment, be a final disposition, of the property affected, it has been said: "Congress had in mind, when it enacted this law, the fact that there were different ways or modes of disposing of property, of enforcing executions, judgments, and liens, and it referred to the ordinary method of disposition by way of sale, and then used the words 'or final disposition' to cover every other method of passing the control and dominion of the property from the debtor, or insolvent person, to another or to others either absolutely or as security to the preferred creditor to the exclusion of his other creditors."[115] In the same case it was further remarked: "It has been held that this act of bankruptcy is not committed until a sale is at least advertised or the property to be affected by the preference is to be finally disposed of, and the fifth day prior to the proposed sale or proposed final disposition of the property affected has arrived. In the case of personal property, a sale or proposed sale on execution issued on a judgment is, of course, the sale or final disposition intended, as there is no right of redemption. In the case of real estate, an advertised sale on execution or an actual sale would, in my judgment, be a final disposition, notwithstanding there is a right of redemption."

As to the debtor's duty to "vacate or discharge" the preference, it is probable that the former term relates to the taking of such measures in the "legal proceedings" spoken of as will cause the claim of the creditor to be defeated or the lien or attachment to be extinguished or annulled, while to "discharge" the claim is to pay it. But it is held that the commencement of voluntary proceedings for the dissolution of a corporation does not have the effect of extinguishing the liens of levies on executions against the corporate property, so as to relieve the corporation from the operation of this clause of the bankruptcy law.[116]

§ 89. Same; Meaning of "Suffer or Permit."—The bankruptcy act of 1867 provided that it should be an act of bankruptcy if an insolvent debtor should "procure or suffer his property to be taken on legal process, with intent to give a preference to one or more of his creditors."[117]

[114] In re Harper, 105 Fed. 900, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567.

[115] In re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811.

[116] In re Storm, 103 Fed. 618, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[117] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5021, clause 7.

Many of the lower federal courts held that this provision made it the duty of an insolvent man, when sued, to take measures to secure the equal distribution of his property among his creditors, by filing his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and that if he failed to take this step, and made no defense to the action nor any attempt to prevent the acquisition of a preference, and one or more of his creditors seized his property under legal process, he might be held to have "suffered" his property to be taken, although he did not act in collusion with the creditors, nor procure, induce, or influence them to act.[118] Eventually, however, the Supreme Court of the United States put a different construction upon the statute. It was held that something more than passive nonresistance on the part of an insolvent debtor was necessary to make a judgment and levy on his property an act of bankruptcy when the debt was due and he had no defense. In such a case, the court ruled, the debtor's failure to file a petition in bankruptcy, in order to prevent a judgment and levy, was not sufficient evidence of an intent to give a preference or to defeat the operation of the bankruptcy law, and it could not be said that he had "procured or suffered" his property to be taken.[119] But in this construction of the statute, the word "suffer" was made to take its color from the associated word "procure," and the opinion of the court on the question of interpretation was further fortified by the consideration that another section of the act of 1867, avoiding fraudulent preferences, was directed against attachments or seizures "procured" by the debtor. Both of these sections, said the court, "describe substantially the same acts of payment, transfer, or seizure of property so declared void. It is therefore very strongly to be inferred that the act of 'suffering' the debtor's property to be taken on legal process, in section thirty-nine, is precisely the same as 'procuring' it to be attached or seized on execution in section thirty-five."[120] But the present statute does not use the word "procure" in the definition of acts of [118] In re Wells, 3 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 17,388; In re Heller, 3 Biss. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 6,337; Fitch v. McGie, 2 Biss. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 4,835; In re Forsyth, 7 N. B. R. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 4,948; Vogle v. Lathrop, 3 Pittsb. 268, 4 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 16,985; Smith v. Buchanan, 8 Blatchf. 153, 4 N. B. R. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 13,016; Linkman v. Wilcox, 1 Dill. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 8,374.

[119] Wilson v. City Bank of St. Paul, 17 Wall. 473, 21 L. Ed. 723; Tenth Nat. Bank v. Warren, 96 U. S. 539, 24 L. Ed. 640; Parsons v. Caswell, 1 Fed. 74; Henkelman v. Smith, 42 Md. 164, 12 N. B. R. 121; Sleek v. Turner, 76 Pa. St. 142, 10 N. B. R. 580; Kemmerer v. Tool, 81 Pa. St. 467, 12 N. B. R. 334; Mason v. Warthens, 7 W. Va. 532, 14 N. B. R. 346; Warren v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 5 Ben. 395, 5 N. B. R. 479, Fed. Cas. No. 17,200; Rankin v. Florida, A. & G. C. R. Co., 1 N. B. R. 647, Fed. Cas. No. 11,567; Jones v. Sleeper, Fed. Cas. No. 7,496; Wright v. Filley, 1 Dill. 171, 4 N. B. R. 610, Fed. Cas. No. 18,077.

[120] Wilson v. City Bank of St. Paul, 17 Wall. 473, 21 L. Ed. 723.

bankruptcy. It is true the section relating to the avoidance of preferences declares that an insolvent debtor shall be deemed to have given a preference if he shall have "procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself." But this provision is not so wide as that relating to acts of bankruptcy. For it does not necessarily involve an actual levy on property, but merely that the enforcement of the judgment, if it comes to be enforced, will result in giving an advantage to the creditor, whereas the act of bankruptcy is not committed unless there has been a levy or attachment, for the law gives the debtor an opportunity to save himself by discharging the preference "five days before a sale or final disposition of the property affected." If, then, the construction of the words "suffered or permitted a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings" cannot be determined by other parts of the act, and if the two words here employed must color each other, according to the doctrine of the Supreme Court, it is evident that the idea of any active participation or procurement on the part of the debtor must be excluded, and that to "suffer" a preference to be acquired through legal proceedings and to "permit" it mean the same thing, and that either word is satisfied by mere passive nonresistance or supine submission on the part of the debtor. This is the doctrine of the cases decided under the present law. They hold that, in order to commit an act of bankruptcy of the kind described, it is not necessary that the debtor should do any affirmative act. If suit is brought against an insolvent debtor, and he makes no defense, and judgment is rendered against him, and an attachment or execution issued and levied on his property, and he allows a sale to be made without applying to be adjudged bankrupt, he commits an act of bankruptcy. And this is true, although the debt on which the judgment rests was valid, though the debtor did not in any way procure the institution of the proceedings or the issuance of process, though there was no collusion between the parties, and though the debtor had no actual intention to give the creditor a preference.[121]

It should be noted that the real act of bankruptcy, so far as concerns [121] In re Rung Furniture Co., 139 Fed. 526, 71 C. C. A. 342, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12; In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Moyer, 93 Fed. 188, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Cliffe, 94 Fed. 354, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Meyers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 207; In re Reichman, 91 Fed. 624, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 17. Compare In re Nelson, 98 Fed. 76, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570. An insolvent corporation which suffers or permits a creditor to obtain a preference by means of an attachment on its property and a sale thereunder, commits an act of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the fact that one method of preventing such a result, viz., filing a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, was prohibited to corporations as the law stood at that time. Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Stoever (C. C. A.) 97 Fed. 330, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220.

the conduct of the debtor, consists in the failure to vacate or discharge the lien or other advantage secured by the creditor. One can hardly be said to suffer or permit a thing over which he has no influence or control. Ordinarily the steps taken by a creditor to obtain a preference or lien are hostile to the debtor, not at all under his control, and often a surprise to him. It is only after the inception of such a lien that he has any choice in the matter, or any power to decide whether he will suffer or permit the creditor to obtain an advantage over other creditors, or not. If he has the opportunity and the power to vacate or discharge the lien, and decides not to do so, then he suffers or permits the creation of a preference and commits an act of bankruptcy.[122] Even though the debtor actively resists the legal proceedings through which a creditor seeks to obtain a preference, still this does not prevent such preference constituting an act of bankruptcy, if the debtor fails to discharge the preference within the time limited.[123]

If, then, the circumstances are such that a creditor has obtained an advantage through legal proceedings, which will ripen into an irrevocable preference if not vacated or discharged, and there is no legal ground on which the debtor could vacate it, and he is unable to discharge it by payment, is it his duty to file his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, as a means of defeating the impending preference, and is he guilty of an act of bankruptcy if he fails to do so? This question has been answered in the affirmative by the Supreme Court of the United States, in an opinion in which its former contrary decisions under the act of 1867 were carefully noted, but held to be inapplicable on account of the intentional and radical change in the language of the present statute.[124] And this decision has been either anticipated or followed by some of the inferior federal courts.[125] But against its authority may be alleged the fact that the decision was pronounced by a divided court, four of the nine judges dissenting, and the existence of a very strong and well-reasoned opinion to the contrary by a very able bench of judges sitting in the circuit court of appeals.[126] In the opinion last mentioned, it was pointed out that such a construction of the statute would force the debtor, in the case supposed, to become a bankrupt either on his own petition or on the motion of his creditors, and this, solely as the result or effect 122 In re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824; White v. Bradley Timber Co., 119 Fed. 989, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

123 White v. Bradley Timber Co., 119 Fed. 989, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

124 Wilson Brothers v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 22 Sup. Ct. 74, 46 L. Ed. 147, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142.

125 In re Putnam, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; In re Cliffe, 94 Fed. 354, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Moyer, 93 Fed. 188, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

126 Duncan v. Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649.

of the creditor's act in obtaining a preference, which the debtor was powerless to prevent, and not by reason of any act of his own. Such a construction, it was said, is not justified by the language used, nor by the general spirit and scope of the act construed as a whole.

While, as above stated, "suffering or permitting" the acquisition of a preference does not include "procuring" it, and the statute is satisfied without any active participation by the debtor, yet one who procures a creditor to seize his property also suffers or permits it. Hence if the debtor directly or indirectly instigates or assists or facilitates the recovery of a judgment against him and the issuance of process thereon, he is guilty of "suffering" the creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings.[127] If his co-operation is not necessary to complete the act of bankruptcy, neither will it save him from the consequences of the act. Thus, where the members of an insolvent firm appeared in a suit against them for the appointment of a receiver, and proposed candidates for the office of receiver, they must be held to have suffered or permitted any preference obtained by the creditors through such suit.[128] So, where an insolvent corporation has allowed some of its creditors to obtain preferences through legal proceedings, and then its stockholders and officers sue for and obtain a dissolution for the express purpose of hindering and delaying creditors, and the effect of such proceedings is to permit the preferences obtained to stand in full force, it has committed an act of bankruptcy, by permitting effective preferences to be fastened upon its property.[129]

Finally, it is no defense that the debtor's submission to an attachment or levy was forced by the pressure or insistence of the creditor. "To say that there cannot be a 'suffering' where there is pressure by a creditor is to destroy the plain meaning of the word. To suffer or permit implies pressure and action from without. Pressure being thus an inherent element of sufferance, to say that where there is pressure there can be no sufferance is to utter a fallacy. Where a person permits what he can prevent, he suffers or allows the thing to be done, whether he is threatened or pressed or not. A debtor who is threatened or pressed can prevent the taking of his property on legal process by going into voluntary bankruptcy. If he does not, he clearly suffers or allows or permits the taking."[130]

[127] Sage v. Wyncoop, 104 U. S. 319, 26 L. Ed. 749; In re Woods, 7 N. B. R. 126, Fed. Cas. No. 17,990; Fisher v. Currier, Fed. Cas. No. 4,818; In re Dunkle, 7 N. B. R. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 4,160; Wight v. Muxlow, 8 Ben. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 17,629; Sage v. Wyncoop, 16 N. B. R. 363, Fed. Cas. No. 12,215.

[128] In re Kersten, 110 Fed. 929, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 516.

[129] Scheuer v Smith & Montgomery Book & Stationery Co., 112 Fed. 407, 50 C. C. A. 312, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

[130] In re Craft, 2 Ben. 214, 1 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 3,316, per Blatchford, J.

§ 90. Warrant of Attorney; Confession of Judgment.—The confession of a judgment (or his participation in proceedings to secure a default judgment against himself) by an insolvent debtor, with intent either to defraud his creditors or to prefer a given creditor, is an act of bankruptcy.[131] If he confesses judgment with the expectation and intention that one of his creditors shall thereby obtain a preference over others, it constitutes the second of the enumerated acts of bankruptcy; but if there is no such intention, still it is suffering or permitting a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings and therefore an act of bankruptcy in that aspect.[132] Hence if a judgment is entered up on his warrant of attorney and an execution issued, his failure to vacate the judgment or discharge the lien of the execution is an act of bankruptcy.[133] And the Supreme Court of the United States has held that the failure of an insolvent debtor to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy at least five days before a sale of his property under a judgment entered against him upon an irrevocable power of attorney (though given years before) constitutes the suffering or permitting the creditor to obtain a preference, which amounts to an act of bankruptcy, although the judgment is entered without the knowledge or consent of the debtor, and he is unable to prevent its enforcement in any other way than by going into voluntary bankruptcy.[134]

§ 91. Assignment for Creditors.—Under the provision of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, that it shall be an act of bankruptcy if a debtor shall have "made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors," such an assignment, though it embraces all the property of the debtor and is made for the equal and common benefit of all his creditors, without preferences, and without any actual fraudulent intent, either as to creditors or as to an evasion of the bankruptcy law, and though it would be valid under the laws of the state, is nevertheless an act of bankruptcy, on which an adjudication may be made if a petition therefor is duly presented within the prescribed time.[135] And the rule is the same

[131] In re Irish (D. C.) 238 Fed. 411, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263.

[132] In re Musgrove Mining Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 99, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; In re Fisher (D. C.) 219 Fed. 638, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628.

[133] In re Moyer, 93 Fed. 188, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; Pittsburgh Laundry Supply Co. v. Imperial Laundry Co., 154 Fed. 662, 83 C. C. A. 486, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 756; In re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570.

[134] Wilson Brothers v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 191, 22 Sup. Ct. 74, 46 L. Ed. 147, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142. Contra, see Duncan v. Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649.

[135] Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 379, 2 Sup. Ct. 765, 27 L. Ed. 760; In re Federal Mail & Express Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 691, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240; In re Utley (D. C.) 235 Fed. 905, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670; In re Meyer, 98 Fed. 976, 39 C. C. A. 368, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; Griffin v. Dutton, 165 Fed. 626, 91 C. C. A. 614, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re Salmon, whether the assignment is made within or without the United States, and whether it is a voluntary or a statutory assignment.[136] Though not in itself unlawful prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, yet the assignment is constructively a wrongful and fraudulent act as to creditors, if they choose so to treat it, being in effect an invitation to them to institute proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy against the debtor at their election; and if they take that course, within the proper time, an adjudication of bankruptcy will avoid the assignment and subject the assigned property to the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy.[137] For even stronger reasons it is held that a general assignment by an insolvent debtor for the benefit of certain preferred creditors is an act of bankruptcy, even though made without moral fraud and under the importunity of the creditors.[138] But the words of the statute must be taken in their proper technical signification and restricted to "general assignments" strictly so called, and cannot be extended by implication. Thus, an absolute and unconditional sale and conveyance of his property by a debtor, free from all reservation, in payment and satisfaction of antecedent debts, cannot be declared a general assignment, though it may embrace all his property, and though he may be insolvent,[139] and generally, a direct transfer to creditors, without the intervention of a trustee, is not an assignment for the benefit of credi-

143 Fed. 395, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122; Whittlesey v. Philip Becker & Co., 142 App. Div. 313, 126 N. Y. Supp. 1046; Costello v. Harbaugh, 83 Ill. App. 29 (affirmed, Harbaugh v. Costello, 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363, 75 Am. St. Rep. 147); In re Burt, 1 Dill. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 2,210; Cragin v. Thompson, 2 Dill. 513, 12 N. B. R. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 3,320; In re Smith, 4 Ben. 1, 3 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No 12,974; Spicer v. Ward, 3 N. B. R. 512, Fed. Cas. No. 13,241; In re Randall, Deady, 557, 3 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 11,551; Jones v. Sleeper, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 131, Fed. Cas. No. 7,496; In re Kasson, 18 N. B. R. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 7,617; In re Pierce, 3 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 11,141; Barnes v Rettew, 8 Phila. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 1,019; Barton v. Tower, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 8, Fed. Cas. No. 1,085; In re Chamberlain, 3 N. B. R. 710, Fed. Cas. No. 2,574; In re Croft, 8 Biss. 188, 17 N. B. R. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 3,404; In re Mendelsohn, 3 Sawy. 342, Fed. Cas. No. 9,420; In re Frisbee, 14 Blatchf. 185, 15 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 5,129: McLean v. Meline, 3 McLean, 199 Fed. Cas. No. 8,890; Hobson v. Markson, 1 Dill. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 6,555; Harding v. Crosby, 17 Blatchf. 348, Fed. Cas. No. 6,050; In re Kraft, 4 Fed. 523; Wald v. Wehl, 6, Fed. 163. There are a few decisions to the contrary of this proposition, but they are not entitled to consideration, being opposed to the overwhelming weight of authority. See, for example, Farrin v. Crawford, 2 N. B. R. 602, Fed. Cas. No. 4,686; In re Kintzing 3 N. B. R. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 7,833; Anonymous, 1 Pa. Law J. 323, Fed. Cas. No. 467.

[136] In re Berthoud (D. C.) 231 Fed. 529, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[137] In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Cohen v. American Surety Co., 192 N. Y. 227, 84 N. E. 947; In re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440; Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Louis Neuburger, Inc., 240 Fed. 947, 153 C. C. A. 633, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

[138] Ex parte Breneman, Crabbe, 456, Fed. Cas. No. 1,830; Hutchins v. Taylor, Fed. Cas. No. 6,953; In re Broome, 3 N. B. R. 444, Fed. Cas. No. 1,967.

[139] Otis v. Maguire, 76 Ala. 295.

tors, although it may be an act of bankruptcy on another ground, namely, that of giving a preference.[140] It has also been held that the same rule applies to a deed of trust directing the trustee to sell the property and pay the debts of the grantor, and turn over to the latter any balance that may remain. The condition of defeasance and the reservation of an equity in the property to the grantor, it is thought, distinguish such a conveyance from a general assignment, at least if this form of deed is used in good faith and not with a design of evading the provisions of the bankruptcy law.[141] But there are decisions directly to the contrary,[142] and it has been held that a confession of judgment by a debtor to a trustee for all his creditors amounts to a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, under the law of Pennsylvania, and constitutes an act of bankruptcy.[143] On similar principles, it is ruled that a mortgage by a corporation to secure all its creditors equally out of its earnings, or to pay to such as refuse the security their ratable proportion of the proceeds, is not an act of bankruptcy.[144] And where a corporation, under the provisions of a state statute, files in a state court its voluntary application for dissolution and for the appointment of a receiver to wind up its affairs and distribute its assets, on the ground of its insolvency, and procures the appointment of a receiver thereon, such application is not a "general assignment for the benefit of its creditors" within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, and does not constitute the particular act of bankruptcy herein denounced,[145] although, since the amendment to the statute enacted in 1903, the precise transaction here described is an independent act of bankruptcy in itself. But it must be so alleged, and not called an assignment for creditors. Even if such a proceeding were equivalent to an assignment for creditors, still the provisions of the statute, defining acts of bankruptcy, cannot be extended by construction to embrace transactions equivalent to.

[140] Anniston Iron & Supply Co. v. Anniston Rolling Mill Co., 125 Fed. 974, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

[141] Rumsey & Sikemier Co. v. Novelty & Machine Mfg. Co., 99 Fed. 699, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; Fidelity Trust Co. v. Kline, 74 N. J. Eq. 445, 70 Atl. 151.

[142] In re Thomlinson Co., 154 Fed. 834, 83 C. C. A. 550, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691; In re Salmon, 143 Fed. 395, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122. The execution of a deed to trustees for creditors, pursuant to an agreement with the creditors, is not an act of bankruptcy where the deed was delivered in escrow for delivery only in case all the creditors should consent. N. L. Carpenter & Co. v. Lybrand, 230 Fed. 84, 144 C. C. A. 382, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

[143] In re Green, 106 Fed. 313, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 848.

[144] In re Union Pac. R. Co., 10 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 14,376.

[145] In re Empire Metallic Bedstead Co., 98 Fed. 981, 39 C. C. A. 372, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575, affirming 95 Fed. 957, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; In re Ambrose, Matthews & Co., 236 Fed. 539, 149 C. C. A. 591, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18, affirming (D. C.) 229 Fed. 309, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501.

but not identical with, those denounced as acts of bankruptcy.[146] And for the same reason, a resolution of the stockholders of a corporation, authorizing a committee of the directors to advertise and sell the corporate property at auction at not less than a stated price, and to pay the debts of the corporation with the proceeds, with power to declare such sale revoked or not to take place in a certain contingency, is not an assignment for the creditors.[147] And although a general assignment, as an act of bankruptcy, may be made without a formal deed, yet the mere preparation of a deed of general assignment, not signed nor out of escrow, is not an act of bankruptcy, nor is the mere adoption by a corporation of resolutions authorizing its treasurer to convert the corporate assets into cash and to deposit the same with a trust company for the benefit of its creditors, where the plan is not carried out.[148]

§ 92. Same; What Constitutes "General" Assignment.—To constitute this act of bankruptcy, there must be a "general" assignment for the benefit of creditors. A general assignment is one by which a debtor voluntarily transfers all (or substantially all) of his property to an assignee, in trust to collect the assets, convert them into cash, and apply the proceeds to the payment of the debts of the assignor, being made either for the benefit of one or more preferred creditors or for the creditors generally.[149] An assignment may be general although it does not include every one of the creditors, or although it does not transfer all of the debtor's property, provided it is available to substantially all of the creditors (though some may be preferred) and conveys substantially all of the property. Thus, the assignment is none the less general because it provides for the payment of only those creditors who shall as-

[146] In re Empire Metallic Bedstead Co., 95 Fed. 957, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

[147] In re Hartwell Oil Mills, 165 Fed. 555, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586.

[148] In re Federal Lumber Co., 185 Fed. 926, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438.

[149] See Anders Bros. v. Latimer, 198 Ala. 573, 73 South. 925; Bishop v. Catlin, 28 Vt. 71; Burrill, Assignments, § 13. The phrase "general assignment for the benefit of creditors" as used in the Bankruptcy Act, "does not concern itself merely with such acts of a debtor as would constitute an assignment for the benefit of creditors under the laws of the state in which it was made, or merely with the form of the written instrument employed to effectuate such purpose; on the contrary, the act does concern itself with, and does contemplate, all acts of a debtor, regardless of the manner or form of their accomplishment, by which he parts with the title and possession of all his property of every kind and nature for the benefit of his creditors, to be disposed of as his trustee or assignee by him selected and named may employ, independent of the Bankruptcy Act." In re Heleker Bros. Mercantile Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 963, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 503. But the appointment of special commissioners to sell West Virginia lands of a judgment debtor, execution having been returned "nulla bona," does not constitute an act of bankruptcy by the debtor, either on the theory of its being a general assignment or on the theory of his permitting the appointment of a trustee or receiver. In re McGraw (D. C.) 254 Fed. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38.

sent to it and agree to accept the dividend thereunder in full satisfaction of their claims. "Had all the creditors accepted, it certainly would have operated as a general assignment. We do not think that the question as to whether an instrument of that character constitutes a general assignment or a mortgage is dependent upon the subsequent event of its acceptance by each and all of the debtor's creditors." [150] And as to the property conveyed, the reservation of some trivial or insignificant portion of the debtor's estate, for the very purpose of evading the legal consequences of making a general assignment, will not make it a partial assignment. For this would be a fraud upon the law. And if, without such fraud, the property omitted is insignificant in amount, with reference to the whole, or is mainly beyond the reach of process, or is exempt from process, or of such a character as not readily to be made available either to the creditors or the debtor, and the great mass of the debtor's property which constitutes the basis of his business operations, and which can alone form any reliance to himself for support, or to his creditors for payment, is included in the deed, it must be regarded as a general assignment.[151] An assignment by a partnership for the benefit of its creditors, purporting to transfer all the property of the firm, is a general assignment, such as to constitute an act of bankruptcy by the firm and on which the firm may be adjudged bankrupt, although, considered as an assignment by the individual partners, it would be but partial, by reason of not including their separate property.[152]

§ 93. Same; Invalid Assignment.—If a deed of general assignment made by a debtor is invalid by reason of its defective execution, or for want of conformity to the laws of the state regulating such instruments, or for any other reason, so that it could not be enforced or relied on in the courts of the state, some of the earlier cases held that it ought not to be considered as amounting to an act of bankruptcy.[153] But recent decisions of high authority rule that the language of the bankruptcy act applies to any instrument which is or purports to be a 150 Courtenay Mercantile Co. v. Finch (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 368, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 688; In re Courtenay Mercantile Co., 186 Fed. 352, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

151 Mussey v. Noyes, 26 Vt. 462; United States v. Clark, 1 Paine, 629, Fed. Cas. No. 14,807.

152 In re Meyer (C. C. A.) 98 Fed. 976, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

153 In re Dunham, 2 Ben. 488, 2 N. B. R. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 4,143; In re Mendelsohn, 3 Sawy. 342, 12 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 9,420. In the latter case, it was held that an assignment, invalid under the state laws and so defective in its execution that it cannot be enforced, may perhaps not be an act of bankruptcy, but if designed and used as a means of giving a preference to certain creditors over others, it is an act of bankruptcy on that ground.

general assignment, without distinguishing between valid and invalid instruments, and that it is no defense to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, based on this ground, that the instrument in question would not be valid or enforceable under the state law or in the state courts.[154] Thus, upon a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against a firm, alleging, as an act of bankruptcy, the making of an assignment for the benefit of its creditors, which purports to transfer all the property of the firm, though it was executed by one partner only, the question of the validity of the assignment as to the partners not joining is immaterial.[155] So, an assignment for the benefit of such creditors only as should accept its terms, and release their claims on receiving the dividend to be paid by the assignee is an act of bankruptcy, it being unnecessary that the assignment should be valid as to dissenting creditors.[156]

§ 94. Same; Solvency No Defense.—Under the provision of the statute that it shall be an act of bankruptcy if a debtor shall have "made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors," it is no defense to an involuntary petition, alleging such an assignment as an act of bankruptcy, that the debtor was solvent at the time of the assignment. The making of such an assignment is itself sufficient to warrant an adjudication, without averment or proof of the debtor's insolvency either at the time of its execution or at the time of the filing of the petition.[157] "As a deed of general assignment for the benefit of creditors is made by the bankruptcy act alone sufficient to justify an adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy against the debtor making such deed, without reference to his solvency at the time of the filing of the petition, the denial of insolvency by way of defense to a petition based upon the making of a deed of general assignment is not warranted by the bankruptcy law." [158]

[154] Griffin v. Dutton, 165 Fed. 626, 91 C. C. A. 614, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re Courtenay Mercantile Co., 186 Fed. 352, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365; In re Federal Lumber Co., 185 Fed. 926, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; Canner v. Webster Trapper Co., 168 Fed. 519, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Lawrence, 10 Ben. 4, 18 N. B. R. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 8,133.

[155] In re Meyer, 98 Fed. 976, 39 C. C. A. 368, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

[156] In re Courtenay Mercantile Co., 186 Fed. 352, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

[157] George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Day v. Beck & Gregg Hardware Co., 114 Fed. 834, 52 C. C. A. 468, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; Green River Deposit Bank v. Craig, 110 Fed. 137, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; Couts v. Townsend, 126 Fed. 249, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Sully, 142 Fed. 895, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 304; Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; Lea v. George M. West Co., 91 Fed. 237, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261; In re Farthing, 202 Fed. 557, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732; Corbett v. Riddle, 209 Fed. 811, 126 C. C. A. 535, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330.

[158] George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

§ 95. Appointment of Receiver or Trustee.—By an amendment to the bankruptcy law enacted in 1903, Congress has declared that it shall be an act of bankruptcy if a person, "being insolvent," shall have "applied for a receiver or trustee for his property, or because of insolvency a receiver or trustee has been put in charge of his property under the laws of a state, of a territory, or of the United States."[159] Prior to this amendment, the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the affairs of an insolvent corporation or partnership, whether on its voluntary application for a dissolution or receivership, or on its consent or acquiescence in hostile proceedings against it, could not generally be held to be an act of bankruptcy by itself. It was settled that such an appointment, brought about in either of the ways mentioned, was not a "general assignment for the benefit of creditors."[160] Nor was the consent of partners or of a corporation to the appointment of a receiver an act of bankruptcy as involving a fraudulent transfer or concealment or removal of their property.[161] It might amount to "suffering a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings," but only where it appeared that there were one or more creditors interested in the property who would be entitled to larger dividends under the receivership proceedings than they would receive if the estate were administered and distributed in bankruptcy.[162] It was probably in view of these considerations that the amendment was enacted. It is not, however, retroactive; and the appointment of a receiver for a firm or corporation because of insolvency, prior to the passage of the amendatory act, will not support a petition in involuntary bankruptcy filed after that time, although the receivership still continues.[163]

Considering first that clause of the act which makes it an act of bankruptcy for an insolvent to "apply for" a receiver or trustee, it is apparent that the application intended is one made to a court, state or federal. But it is held that the fact that an application by an insolvent corporation to a state court for the appointment of a receiver for its property was not authorized by the laws of the state does not prevent 159 Act Cong. February 5, 1903, c. 487, § 2; 32 Stat. 797; U. S. Comp. St. Supp. 1903, p. 410.

160 In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; In re Empire Metallic Bedstead Co., 95 Fed. 957, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Gilbert, 112 Fed. 951, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; Vaccaro v. Security Bank, 103 Fed. 436, 43 C. C. A. 279, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474; Seaboard Steel Casting Co. v. William R. Trigg Co., 124 Fed. 75, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594. Compare Moody-Hormann-Boelhauwe v. Clinton Wire Cloth Co., 246 Fed. 653, 158 C. C. A. 609, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

161 In re Burrell, 123 Fed. 414, 59 C. C. A. 508, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62.

162 In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; Mather v. Coe, 92 Fed. 333, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

163 Seaboard Steel Casting Co. v. William R. Trigg Co., 124 Fed. 75, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

it from constituting an act of bankruptcy.[164] But it is essential that the applicant corporation or partnership, should be "insolvent" within the meaning of that term as used in the bankruptcy law, that is, that the aggregate of its property, exclusive of property conveyed in fraud of creditors, should not be sufficient, at a fair valuation, to pay its debts.[165] And where a bill in equity filed by creditors against a corporation alleges that it is unable to meet its obligations as they mature, and that it will be for the advantage of creditors and stockholders that its affairs shall be wound up, but that it is solvent, the filing of an answer by the corporation, admitting such allegations and joining in the request for a receiver, is not an act of bankruptcy, as there is no showing of insolvency and no "application" by the corporation.[166] But where the proceedings are instituted by the voluntary application for a receiver, preferred by the corporation itself, while the fact of insolvency must exist, in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy, it is not necessary that the receiver should have been appointed and put in charge "because of insolvency" as required by the other clause of the amendatory statute.[167] And where an insolvent applies for a receiver of his assets, he commits an act of bankruptcy in so doing, though his purpose was not to have his assets liquidated and distributed among his creditors.[168]

But under the second clause, the appointment of a receiver on the application of creditors is not an act of bankruptcy unless it was made on the ground of insolvency.[169] It is not necessary, however, that it

[164] Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 825, 101 C. C. A. 39, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216.

[165] In re Electric Supply Co., 175 Fed. 612, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647; In re McKinnon Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 869, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[166] Shannon v. Shepard Mfg. Co., 230 Mass. 224, 119 N. E. 768; In re Edward Ellsworth Co., 173 Fed. 699, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284. The consent of a corporation to the appointment of a receiver for its property, on an application by others, is not equivalent to its having "applied for" a receiver, as an act of bankruptcy. In re Gold Run Mining & Tunnel Co., 200 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563. But see James Supply & Hardware Co. v. Dayton Coal & Iron Co., 223 Fed. 991, 139 C. C. A. 367, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649. Bankruptcy proceedings cannot be maintained against one who merely stipulated that a receiver might be appointed in a suit against him by creditors. In re Big Pines Lime & Transp. Co. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 141, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

[167] Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 825, 101 C. C. A. 39, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216; Blackstone v. Everybody's Store (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 752, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497. Where an application for a receiver was nominally made by a creditor, but the evidence shows that it was actually filed by the debtor, it may be treated as a case where the insolvent "applied" for a receiver. In re Muir (D. C.) 212 Fed. 495, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[168] Hill v. Western Electric Co., 214 Fed. 243, 130 C. C. A. 613, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 332.

[169] In re Spalding, 139 Fed. 244, 71 C. C. A. 370. 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; Schumert & Warfield v. Security Brewing Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 358, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 676; In re Butte Duluth Mining Co.

should appear of record that the insolvency was the sole reason which moved the court to appoint a receiver, if the appointment was in fact made on that and other grounds. "As the statutes of bankruptcy are to have an honest and practical interpretation, we are not to inject into what we have quoted therefrom such phraseology as would require that the cause of the receivership need be solely insolvency. If insolvency, either as a distinct ground of proceeding or as coupled with others, was one of the substantial reasons for the appointment of the receiver, the case would come within the reasonable construction of the statute." [170] The question, then, whether the appointment was made "because of insolvency," must be determined by reference to the pleadings and record in the case.[171] Although the state statute under which the proceedings were had authorizes the appointment of a receiver upon the dissolution of a corporation on various stated grounds, which do not include insolvency by name, and for "other good and sufficient reasons," this is not alone determinative of the question. If the record and findings in the state court show that the appointment was in fact, though not in name, made because of insolvency, there is proof of an act of bankruptcy.[172] If the decree of the court recites the ground for the appointment of a receiver it is conclusive. If it recites that the receivership was ordered on the ground that the defendant had conveyed property and was threatening to make further conveyances of property in fraud of the plaintiff's rights, it is decisive against the commission of an act of bankruptcy.[173] If the ground of appointment is not stated in the decree, it must be sought in the pleadings. And where

(D. C.) 227 Fed. 334, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101. The term insolvency as here used means insolvency as defined by the bankruptcy act. The appointment of receivers for a corporation on the ground that it is unable to meet its obligations as they mature in the ordinary course of business, is not an appointment because of insolvency, and therefore not an act of bankruptcy. In re Wm. S. Butler & Co., 207 Fed. 705, 125 C. C. A. 223, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502. And see Karst v. Black Diamond Range Co., 82 N. J. Eq. 231, 88 Atl. 692. But compare In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-Op. Packing & Produce Co. (D. C.) 268 Fed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287, holding that actual insolvency satisfies the statute.

[170] Beatty v. Anderson Coal Min. Co., 150 Fed. 293, 80 C. C. A. 181, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738.

[171] If the proceedings, pleadings, or orders in the state court by which a receiver was appointed do not state the ground for the appointment, this will not defeat the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to make an adjudication on that ground, for the presumption will be indulged that the appointment was made because of insolvency. In re Maplecroft Mills (D. C.) 218 Fed. 659, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815. But see In re Commonwealth Lumber Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 667, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202.

[172] In re Belfast Mesh Underwear Co., 153 Fed. 224, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620.

[173] In re Spalding, 139 Fed. 244, 71 C. C. C. A. 370, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129. And see Maplecroft Mills v. Childs, 226 Fed. 415, 141 C. C. A. 245, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311.

the bill or complaint alleges insolvency, and it is confessed by the defendant, or the receiver is appointed by the consent of both parties, this is sufficient evidence that he was appointed because of insolvency.[174] But otherwise where the prayer for a receiver is based on allegations of fraud and mismanagement by the officers or majority stockholders of a corporation,[175] or, in addition to such charges, on an allegation that the corporation is in danger of becoming insolvent, without averring that it is presently insolvent.[176] And so, the appointment of a receiver for the property of a corporation in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, in which the bill does not allege insolvency, but a breach of the covenants of the mortgage, does not authorize an adjudication of bankruptcy against the corporation, although it may in fact have been insolvent, and such insolvency may have caused its default.[177]

It is not necessary that the proceedings for a receivership should have been instituted by creditors. The appointment by a state court of a receiver for an insolvent domestic corporation, at the suit of a stockholder, is an act of bankruptcy.[178] And the provision of the statute that it shall be an act of bankruptcy where, because of insolvency, "a receiver or trustee has been put in charge" of the property, does not mean exclusively that a trustee must have been put in charge by order of a court, but embraces as well a case where liquidating trustees have been elected by an insolvent corporation and put in charge of its property for the purpose of winding up its affairs.[179] And under a state statute which provides that, on the return of an execution against a corporation unsatisfied, the judgment creditor may procure a special writ of fieri facias, on which all the property of the corporation, except real estate held in fee, shall be sold and the proceeds distributed by the sheriff among all its creditors, it is held that such a proceeding results in placing the sheriff, in the character of a receiver or trustee, in

[174] In re Pickens Mfg. Co., 158 Fed. 894, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; Lowenstein v. Henry McShane Mfg. Co., 130 Fed. 1007, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Wenatchee Heights Orchard Co., 204 Fed. 674, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

[175] In re Boston & Oaxaca Mining Co., 181 Fed. 422, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923.

[176] In re Perry Aldrich Co., 165 Fed. 249, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244. But compare In re Maplecroft Mills (D. C.) 218 Fed. 659, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[177] In re Douglas Coal & Coke Co., 131 Fed. 769, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[178] Roberts Cotton Oil Co. v. F. E. Morse & Co., 97 Ark. 513, 135 S. W. 334. Proceedings instituted by the officers and directors of a corporation, holding a majority of the stock, for the appointment of a receiver of its assets, are the act of the corporation itself. Doyle-Kidd Dry Goods Co. v. Sadler-Lusk Trading Co., 206 Fed. 813, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604. But see In re Valentine Bohl Co., 224 Fed. 685, 140 C. C. A. 225, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 855. And compare Hansen v. Uniform Seamless Wire Co., 243 Fed. 177, 156 C. C. A. 43, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627.

[179] In re Hercules Atkin Co., 133 Fed. 813, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; In re C. H. Bennett Shoe Co., 140 Fed. 687, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

charge of the property of the corporation because of its insolvency, so as to constitute an act of bankruptcy.[180]

It has been held to be immaterial whether receivers appointed for an alleged bankrupt corporation are temporary or permanent, with reference to the commission of an act of bankruptcy.[181] But the better doctrine appears to be that the appointment of merely temporary receivers for a corporation, by a court acting under its general equity powers, in a pending suit which has not been heard, and in which there has been no adjudication of insolvency, does not amount to an act of bankruptcy.[182] And probably the same rule should apply where the court, on account of the pendency of a prior bill or for other reasons, had no jurisdiction to make the appointment.[183]

§ 96. Confession of Insolvency.—The bankruptcy act of 1898 introduces a new act of bankruptcy, not previously known in the federal legislation on this subject. It is committed by a debtor who has "admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts and his willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt on that ground." (§ 3a.) It should be observed that inability to pay one's debts is not synonymous with "insolvency" as the latter term is used in the bankruptcy law. The phrase here used has reference to a present inability to satisfy the claims of creditors, not to the ultimate insufficiency of assets for that purpose. And therefore it is not necessary to constitute this act of bankruptcy that the debtor should admit in writing that he is "insolvent," nor can the petition for adjudication be resisted by other creditors on the ground that he is not actually insolvent.[184]

A voluntary application for the benefit of the bankruptcy law would come within the terms of this clause, and would therefore appear to constitute an act of bankruptcy; so that, once made, such an application could not be withdrawn by the debtor, for his attempt to do so would give creditors the right to file an involuntary petition.[185] Under [180] In re International Coal Min. Co. 143 Fed. 665, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309.

[181] Blue Mountain Iron & Steel Co. v. Portner, 131 Fed. 57, 65 C. C. A. 295, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Wm. S. Butler & Co., 207 Fed. 705, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[182] In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191; Zugalla v. International Mercantile Agency, 142 Fed. 927, 74 C. C. A. 97, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67; In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 205 Fed. 980, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 471.

[183] Blue Mountain Iron & Steel Co. v. Portner, 131 Fed. 57, 65 C. C. A. 295, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

[184] In re Kersten, 110 Fed. 929, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 516; In re Northampton Portland Cement Co., 179 Fed. 726, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 61. In re Wellesly (D. C.) 252 Fed. 854, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Dressler Producing Corporation (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 257, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420.

[185] See Van Nostrand v. Carr, 30 Md. 128, holding that an application by a this provision of the law it is held that where a corporation, by the unanimous vote of its stockholders, authorizes one of its officers to appear on behalf of the company in the federal court and make the admission of insolvency contemplated by the statute, "in the event of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy being filed against said company," this is not in itself such an unqualified admission as is required by the act, and is therefore not an act of bankruptcy on the part of the corporation. Further, where such officer makes a written admission that the company is not able to pay its debts and is willing to be adjudged bankrupt on that ground, but this writing is not executed until after the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the corporation, it constitutes no ground for an adjudication on that petition.[186] So, a letter written by the president of an alleged bankrupt corporation to its creditors, is not necessarily an admission that the corporation had committed an act of bankruptcy.[187] And it is not an act of bankruptcy for an insolvent debtor to sign and publish a statement of his affairs showing an excess of liabilities over assets.[188] And a debtor, by admitting the allegations of a bill requesting an equitable receivership and alleging the debtor's insolvency, does not thereby commit an act of bankruptcy.[189] debtor for the benefit of the insolvency law of a state is an act of bankruptcy.

[186] In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605. Further as to admission of insolvency by corporations, as an act of bankruptcy, see infra, § 145.

[187] Lackawanna Leather Co. v. La Porte Carriage Co., 211 Fed. 318, 127 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658.

[188] In re Berthoud (D. C.) 231 Fed. 529, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[189] In re Connecticut Brass & Mfg. Corp. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 445, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376.

CHAPTER VII

WHO ARE SUBJECT TO BANKRUPTCY LAW

§ 97. Voluntary Bankruptcy.—The present bankruptcy law as originally enacted in 1898, provided that "any qualified person may file a petition to be adjudged a voluntary bankrupt" (§ 59), and that "any person who owes debts, except a corporation, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act as a voluntary bankrupt." (§ 4.) But in 1910, the latter clause was amended so as to read thus: "Any person, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act as a voluntary bankrupt." [1] It appears therefore that the right of voluntary bankruptcy, though originally withheld from all corporations, is now withheld from only the four classes specifically mentioned, and is open to all others. It is also open to all natural persons without distinction as to occupation or pursuit.[2] Further, the statute makes the word "person" include a partnership, and hence a firm as such may be adjudged bankrupt on the voluntary petition of the partners.[3] It is next to be noted that the amendatory statute omits the requirement that the petitioner shall "owe debts." But as it is inconceivable that any person who did not owe debts should desire the benefit of the act, and as the existence of at least some indebtedness is ap-

[1] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

[2] Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 21 Sup. Ct. 735, 45 L. Ed. 1009, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829. As to the provision which extends the benefit of the act in voluntary cases to "any person who owes debts," the court, in the case cited, said: "An officer in the army falls within this description, and it may be that he is not bound to include his pay in his schedule. Flarty v. Odlum, 3 Term, 682; Apthorpe v. Apthorpe, L. R. 12 Prob. Div. 192. Our bankrupt act contains no such provision as the English bankruptcy act of 1883, authorizing the court, when the bankrupt is an officer in the army or navy or employed in the civil service, to order a portion of his pay to be applied for the benefit of his creditors in bankruptcy. Re Ward [1897] 1 Q. B. 266. But the question now before us is not whether his pay can be reached in bankruptcy, but whether he is entitled to a discharge from the arrears of alimony due to his former wife."

[3] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 19.

parently essential to the jurisdiction of the court, there being otherwise nothing for the statute to operate upon, this provision may be understood as still silently present. But no minimum amount of indebtedness is specified, nor is it required that the petitioner should be insolvent. And the fact that he owes debts contracted in a fiduciary capacity, which would not be affected by his discharge, is no objection to his being adjudged bankrupt and obtaining the benefit of the act, if he owes other debts not of a fiduciary character.[4] But if the existence of at least one debt is a jurisdictional necessity, then it must be of such a kind as to be provable in bankruptcy, and an unliquidated claim for damages for a personal tort is not such a debt.[5] Hence a petition in voluntary bankruptcy which schedules no property except such as is exempt under the law of the state, and only one debt, which is a judgment from which the petitioner would not be released by a discharge, fails to disclose any subject-matter upon which the court can act, and should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.[6] Next, it is not required that the proposed voluntary bankrupt should have any assets. Even if he has not enough money to pay the ordinary filing fee and cannot obtain it, he may present his petition "in forma pauperis" on making affidavit as to his poverty.[7] Hence a person who owes but one debt and has no assets to which a trustee could take title may become a voluntary bankrupt.[8] It is further requisite that the petitioner should have "had his principal place of business, resided, or had his domicile" within the territorial jurisdiction of the court in which his petition is filed "for the preceding six months or the greater portion thereof," or, if an alien, he must have property within such jurisdiction.[9]

To a person possessing these qualifications the law gives the right of voluntary bankruptcy as a privilege and an absolute right. If he chooses to take the benefit of the act, no one can legally prevent him. There is no provision of the law which can be construed as authorizing creditors to file answers to a voluntary petition and oppose the adjudication thereon. The proceeding is entirely ex parte. The adjudication is made as of course and "upon the filing of the petition," and no person can intervene to contest it.[10]

In the voluntary bankruptcy of a partnership, as will more fully appear hereafter, only one petition is needed, and on that petition the firm

[4] In re Tebbetts, 5 Law Rep. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 13,817.

[5] In re Yates, 114 Fed. 365, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69.

[6] In re Maples, 105 Fed. 919, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426.

[7] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 51.

[8] In re Schwaninger, 144 Fed. 555, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

[9] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 1.

[10] In re Jehu, 94 Fed. 638, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372.

may be adjudged bankrupt and also the individual partners, however numerous they may be. But proceedings in voluntary bankruptcy cannot be conducted in the united names of parties who have no common interest and do not seek a common decree; and individuals cannot associate and make a joint and several petition with a view to a separate decree in favor of each applicant.[11] It should be remarked, however, that in those states where the system of community property prevails, it is held that a husband and wife may file a joint petition in voluntary bankruptcy, in the nature of a partnership petition; for though they are not exactly partners, yet, where joint debts and obligations are contracted, there is a joint liability such as will sustain a joint petition.[12]

Voluntary bankruptcy being the privilege of a person who possesses the necessary qualifications, he can neither be prevented from availing himself of his rights in this regard nor forced to seek an adjudication as a voluntary bankrupt. A state court, for example, will not grant an injunction restraining a party from applying for the benefits of the bankruptcy law on his voluntary petition.[13] And, on the other hand, "no creditor can either compel a debtor to go into voluntary bankruptcy or compel a partner to petition for the adjudication of his fellows. Nor can any man lawfully be called upon to show cause why he should not go himself, or put any body else, into voluntary bankruptcy."[14] Where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed, and the debtor, before an adjudication thereon, filed his voluntary petition, and was duly adjudged a bankrupt, it was held that the pendency of the first proceeding was no bar to the institution of the second, and that the court would proceed in the latter, and the further prosecution of the former would be stayed.[15] And so, the pendency of proceedings in insolvency under a state law, on the debtor's voluntary petition, begun before the passage of the bankruptcy act, will not be ground for dismissing the debtor's subsequent voluntary petition in bankruptcy, although he has contracted no new debts, when it appears that one or more of the creditors scheduled by the bankrupt are citizens of states other than that in which the insolvency proceedings were instituted.[16] It should be added that the default of the defendant to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy through failure to appear, does not convert the proceeding into a case of voluntary bankruptcy, so that if he belonged to one of the exempt classes, as, for instance, farmers, and therefore could not be adjudged in [11] In re Moritz, 5 Law Rep. 325, Fed. Cas. No. 9,814.

[12] In re Ray, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 276.

[13] Fillingin v. Thornton, 49 Ga. 384, 12 N. B. R. 92.

[14] In re Harbaugh, 15 N. B. R. 246, Fed. Cas. No. 6,045.

[15] In re Flanagan, 5 Sawy. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 4,850.

[16] In re Mussey, 99 Fed. 71, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 592.

involuntary proceedings, he cannot be adjudged on default, though he might have filed his voluntary petition had he so chosen.[17]

§ 98. Involuntary Bankruptcy; General Considerations.—The provision of the statute as to involuntary bankruptcy stood originally as follows: "Any natural person, except a wage-earner or a person engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil, any unincorporated company, and any corporation engaged principally in manufacturing, trading, printing, publishing, or mercantile pursuits, owing debts to the amount of one thousand dollars or over, may be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt upon default or an impartial trial, and shall be subject to the provisions and entitled to the benefits of this act. Private bankers, but not national banks or banks incorporated under state or territorial laws, may be adjudged involuntary bankrupts."[18] An amendment enacted in 1903 added to the category of corporations subject to the act those engaged in "mining." There was some doubt whether the provision as to being "engaged principally in manufacturing, trading," etc., should be restricted to corporations or was intended to apply equally to natural persons.[19] But this ambiguity cannot be said to exist under the statute as amended in 1910, for the whole of the provision quoted is stricken out, and the following substituted for it: "Any natural person, except a wage-earner or a person engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil, any unincorporated company, and any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation, owing debts to the amount of one thousand dollars or over, may be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt upon default or an impartial trial, and shall be subject to the provisions and entitled to the benefits of this act."[20] Apart, therefore, from wage-earners and farmers, the law now subjects to involuntary bankruptcy any natural person who owes a sufficient amount of debts, without reference to the character of his pursuits. "The statute makes subject to its provisions any natural person unless he is chiefly engaged in the exempt occupations, and the man who has no active business, but is only giving attention to his investments of capital, as an ordinary investor does, would seem to be subject to adjudication."[21] The burden of proof is primarily on the petitioning creditors to show that the alleged bankrupt is not among the exempt classes, but it may be shifted according to the course

[17] In re Taylor (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 728, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[18] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 4.

[19] See Cleage v. Laidley, 149 Fed. 346, 79 C. C. A. 284, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; In re Excelsior Café Co., 175 Fed. 294, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701.

[20] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

[21] In re Leland, 185 Fed. 830, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209.

of the evidence.[22] A more difficult question arises in the case of a man who has been engaged in various occupations successively. The problem is to fix the point of time at which he must have been a wage-earner or a farmer in order to escape liability to adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy. According to some of the authorities this point is the time when the debts due to the petitioning creditors were contracted so that, if he was then engaged in a business which was not exempt, he cannot escape adjudication by showing that subsequently, and at the time of filing the petition, he was a farmer.[23] But although there is much to be said in favor of this position, the weight of the argument appears to be with those decisions which hold that the question of exemption or non-exemption by reason of occupation should be determined as of the date of the alleged act of bankruptcy.[24]

§ 99. Aliens.—An alien, as well as an American citizen, may be adjudicated a bankrupt in either voluntary or involuntary proceedings. For the statute provides that the courts of bankruptcy shall have jurisdiction to adjudge persons bankrupt who "do not have their principal place of business, reside, or have their domicile within the United States, but have property within their jurisdictions, or who have been adjudged bankrupts by courts of competent jurisdiction without the United States and have property within their jurisdictions."[25] Although this language might be interpreted as applying only to citizens of the United States residing and doing business in foreign countries, it is not conceivable that Congress intended it should be so narrowly construed. The bankruptcy act of 1867 was not so comprehensive as the present law, for, both in the case of voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy, it was required that the proposed bankrupt should "reside within the jurisdiction of the United States."[26] But under this provision it was held that an alien coming into the country might file his voluntary petition as soon as he had acquired a residence within the United States, and be adjudged bankrupt thereon.[27] Under the present stat-

[22] In re Leland, 185 Fed. 830, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209.

[23] Tiffany v. La Plume Condensed Milk Co., 141 Fed. 444, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413; In re Burgin, 173 Fed. 726, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574; In re Crenshaw, 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[24] Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., v. Shelhorse, 228 Fed. 493, 143 C. C. A. 75, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Flickinger v. First Nat. Bank, 145 Fed. 162, 76 C. C. A. 132, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 678; In re Leland (D. C.) 185 Fed. 830, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re Folkstad (D. C.) 199 Fed. 363, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 77; Harris v. Tapp (D. C.) 235 Fed. 918, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564; In re Disney (D. C.) 219 Fed. 294, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656.

[25] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, clause 1.

[26] Rev. Stat. U. S. §§ 5014, 5021. See In re Burton, 9 Ben. 324, 17 N. B. R. 212, Fed. Cas. No. 2,214.

[27] In re Goodfellow, 1 Low. 510, 3 N. B. R. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 5,536; In re Boynton, 10 Fed. 277; Judd v. Lawrute, it is said that there is no reason why an Indian, a member of the Chickasaw tribe, should not take the benefit of the bankruptcy law on his own petition.[28]

§ 100. Married Women.—There has been some doubt, and uncertainty as to the power of courts of bankruptcy to proceed against married women; but the true rule on this subject appears to be that the federal court, when called upon to adjudge a feme covert bankrupt, must regard the laws of the state of her domicile; and if, in that state, by enabling statutes, her common-law disabilities have been taken away to such an extent as to allow her to make valid and enforceable contracts in the way of trade or business, then she is amenable to the bankruptcy law; and that in any case where a plea of coverture would not avail her in an action on the debt, she may be proceeded against in bankruptcy. These views are supported by both the English and American cases.[29] Thus, in New York and some other states, a married woman who is a partner in her husband's business, or who engages in business in her own name, by her husband, acting as her agent, he exercising the entire control and management of the same in his discretion, may be adjudged bankrupt.[30] So, in Illinois, where a married ence, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 531; Cutter v. Folsom, 17 N. H. 139. Blackstone, speaking of the English bankruptcy laws in force at the close of the eighteenth century, says: "The benefits, as well as the penal parts of the law, are extended as well to aliens and denizens as to natural-born subjects, being intended entirely for the protection of trade, in which aliens are often as deeply concerned as natives. Any person, whether native, denizen, or alien, who trades in England, although he never resides here as a trader, may be a bankrupt, if he should come to England and commit an act of bankruptcy whilst he is here." 2 Bl. Comm. 475, and Christian's note in loco.

[28] In re Rennie, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 335, per Robnett, Referee. An Indian was adjudged bankrupt (apparently without any opposition) in Re Russie, 96 Fed. 609, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6.

[29] Lavie v. Phillips, 3 Burr. 1783; Johnson v. Gallagher, 3 De Gex, F. & J. 494; In re Matthewman, L. R. 3 Eq. 781; Picard v. Hine, L. R. 5 Ch. App. 274; McHenry v. Davies, L. R. 10 Eq. 88; In re Kinkead, 3 Biss. 405, 7 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 7,824; In re O'Brien, 1 N. B. R. 176, Fed. Cas. No. 10,397; In re Lyons, 2 Sawy. 524, Fed. Cas. No. 8,649; In re Collins, 3 Biss. 415, 10 N. B. R. 335, Fed. Cas. No. 3,006; In re Ruddell, 2 Low. 124, Fed. Cas. No. 12,109. It would appear that a married woman may be adjudged bankrupt if the debts due to the petitioning creditors are such as she had the power to contract and such as are legally binding upon her and upon her separate estate by the laws of the state of her domicile. But if the laws of the state are such that she had no power to contract the particular debts claimed by the petitioning creditors, and such debts are not legally binding upon her, of course they are not provable in bankruptcy, and if not provable, they will not support the petition. In such cases, therefore, she may avail herself of her coverture to defeat the debt; that is, she cannot be adjudged bankrupt. In re Slichter, 2 N. B. R. 336, Fed. Cas. No. 12,943.

[30] Graham v. Stark, 3 Ben. 520, 3 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 5,676; In re Steele, 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549. For other cases in which married women have been adjudged bankrupt in New York, under the present statute, see In re Meyers, 96 Fed. 408, 2 Am. Bankr.

woman has entire control of her separate estate, whether owned before marriage or since acquired, and may make contracts in respect to the same, enforceable either at law or in equity, and may engage in trade, using her own property, it was held that where she formed a business partnership with her husband, contributing her separate money to the capital of the concern and her time and skill to the management of its affairs, the firm might be adjudged bankrupt, and it was thought that the wife might be so adjudged individually.[31] So, where a married woman was authorized by her husband to carry on business as a partner with other members of a firm, and was separate in property from her husband, it was held that it was not necessary to make the husband a party in a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy against the firm.[32] And it has been held that the statute authorizes the adjudication of a married woman as an involuntary bankrupt, where she was engaged in business on her own account, and owed business obligations of the amount required by the statute, for which her separate property would be liable in equity though not at law.[33]

But on the other hand, if the statutes of the state have not removed the common-law disabilities of a married woman, so that she is still incompetent to contract, a petition in bankruptcy will not lie against her, at least where it is not shown that she has a separate estate.[34] And in one of the cases, where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed against a married woman having a separate estate, founded on the nonpayment of certain promissory notes made by her, it was held that, inasmuch as it did not appear on the face of the notes that it was her intention to bind her separate estate, and there being no allegation that they were given for the benefit of her separate estate, or in the course of trade, the petition must be dismissed, but with permission to amend.[35] A married woman, where no fraud is intended, may take advantage of bankruptcy with respect to debts contracted while she was sole.[36]

§ 101. Insane Persons.—A person who is under guardianship as a lunatic or incompetent may be adjudged bankrupt, upon compulsory

Rep. 707; In re Hyman, 97 Fed. 195, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 169.

[31] In re Kinkead, 3 Biss. 405, 7 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 7,824.

[32] Lastrapes v. Blanc, 3 Woods, 134, Fed. Cas. No. 8,100.

[33] MacDonald v. Tefft-Weller Co., 128 Fed. 381, 63 C. C. A. 123, 65 L. R. A. 106, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800.

[34] In re Goodman, 5 Biss. 401, 8 N. B. R. 380, Fed. Cas. No. 5,540.

[35] In re Howland, 2 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 6,791.

[36] Lawver v. Gladden (Pa. Sup.) 1 Atl. 659. That husband and wife may file a joint petition in voluntary bankruptcy, in a state where the system of community property obtains, where they have contracted joint debts, see In re Ray, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 276.

Missing Page

Missing Page

majority, and, by presenting a petition to that effect, ratify and confirm involuntary proceedings begun against him during his minority. If the court never acquired jurisdiction of his person, jurisdiction cannot be conferred upon it by any such retroactive process.[44]

It must be stated, however, that exceptions have sometimes been made to the rule above given. An English decision holds that if an infant, representing himself to be of full age, engages in trade and incurs debts, his creditors relying on such representations, he may be adjudged bankrupt and such debts are provable against his estate.[45] And in a recent American case, the state statute relating to the liabilities of a minor was made the test of his being subject to the bankruptcy law. This statute provides that a minor may not disaffirm his contracts on reaching full age when, "from his having engaged in business as an adult, the other party has good reason to believe him capable of contracting." [46] And it was held that if a minor engages in business as a merchant, and parties consequently assume that he is of full age and deal with him in that belief, no inquiry or representation being made as to his minority, he becomes absolutely liable for the debts contracted in such business, and may be adjudged bankrupt on his own petition, though still an infant.[47] And generally, there is respectable authority for the proposition that the bankruptcy act does include an infant when he owes debts for which his property is legally chargeable.[48]

A somewhat different question arises when proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy are instituted against a firm, and it appears that one of the partners is a minor, but that the latter has taken no action to repudiate the partnership relation. The authorities on this point teach that an adjudication may be made against the adult partners and against the firm as such, but as to the infant partner, no adjudication can be made, but the petition must be dismissed. The assets of the firm and the separate estates of the adult partners may be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings, and must be applied to the payment of the partnership debts in full, before the infant partner is entitled to receive any portion of the firm's assets.[49]

[44] In re Derby, 6 Ben. 232, 8 N. B. R. 106, Fed. Cas. No. 3,815.

[45] Ex parte Unity Banking Ass'n, 3 De Gex & J. 63.

[46] Code Iowa, 1897, § 3190.

[47] In re Brice, 93 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

[48] In re Walrath, 175 Fed. 243, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541.

[49] Jennings v. Stannus (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 347, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Duguid, 100 Fed. 274, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794; In re Dunnigan, 95 Fed. 428, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; Lovell v. Beauchamp [1894] App. Cas. 607. See In re Minor, 11 Fed. 406. A person against whom and his partner proceedings in insolvency have been instituted under the state law, cannot avoid them on the ground that his partner was an infant when the proceedings were begun, if the infant was then represented by a guard-

§ 103. Decedents' Estates.—The bankruptcy act does not authorize the institution of proceedings against the estate of a deceased person, nor provide for the administration of such an estate in the court of bankruptcy; nor does the court acquire jurisdiction of the estate of a decedent by proceedings against a partnership of which he was a member.[50] And it has been held that an adjudication against a firm, on the voluntary petition of one of the partners, is void when it appears that the firm had been dissolved by the death of the co-partner.[51]

§ 104. Executors and Other Trustees.—Executors, administrators, guardians, and other trustees are not generally liable to be proceeded against in bankruptcy in their representative capacity. In one of the cases it appeared that a testator, who was engaged in business as a private banker, made his wife his general executrix, but, by a codicil to his will, nominated two other persons as his executors for the limited purpose of winding up his business, and clothed them with the powers necessary to carry on the business to effect that object without injury to his estate or to his customers. These persons qualified, and carried on the business for some time, until forced by a financial panic to suspend business and stop payment. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against them, but was dismissed on the ground that they were not subject to the operation of the law. The court observed that the bankruptcy act did not in general embrace trustees, such as executors, administrators, and guardians, and others acting strictly in a fiduciary capacity; that under the English law there were instances in which executors had been adjudged bankrupt, but it was where they were directed by the will to carry on trade in partnership with others, or where a specific sum was placed in their hands to be employed in trade, and was so employed, and acts of bankruptcy were committed; but in all such cases the business was conducted not for the purpose of winding it up, but for the purpose of employing the capital for the acquisition of profits and the benefit of the beneficiaries under the will; and that this was not one of the class of executorships designed to be administered under the bankruptcy act.[52]

§ 105. Wage-Earners.—These persons, by the express terms of the act, are exempt from liability to be adjudged bankrupts. The word

ian ad litem and has ratified the proceedings after coming of age. Winchester v. Thayer, 129 Mass. 129.

[50] Adams v. Terrell, 4 Woods, 337, 4 Fed. 796; In re Daggett, 8 N. B. R. 287. Fed. Cas. No. 3,535; In re Fackelman (D. C.) 248 Fed. 565, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14.

[51] In re Temple, 4 Sawy. 92, 17 N. B. R. 345, Fed. Cas. No 13,825.

[52] Graves v. Winter, 9 N. B. R. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 5,710.

"wage-earner" is not a technical term of the law, but has come to be much used of late years, especially by writers on political and social economy, as a substitute for the term "laborer" or the phrase "laboring class." It might be expected that difficulties would arise in its construction in view of the complex conditions of modern business life and the manifold nature of the relation of employer and employed. The first section of the statute provides that the term "wage-earner" shall mean an "individual who works for wages, salary, or hire, at a rate of compensation not exceeding one thousand five hundred dollars per year." But obviously the terms of this definition require explanation, and especially the words "wages" and "salary." According to Webster, the former expression means "hire, reward, that which is paid or stipulated for services, but chiefly for services by manual labor, or for military and naval services. We speak of servants' wages, a laborer's wages, or soldiers' wages; but we never apply the word to the rewards given to men in office, which are called fees or salary." Another authority defines wages as "the agreed compensation for services rendered in a menial or subordinate capacity." [53] Bouvier defines the same term as "a compensation given to a hired person for his or her services." [54] In a recent work of high authority, "wages" is defined as "that which is paid for a service rendered; what is paid for labor; hire. In common use the word 'wages' is applied specifically to the payment made for manual labor or other labor of a menial or mechanical kind, distinguished (but somewhat vaguely) from 'salary' and from 'fee,' which denotes compensation paid to professional men, as lawyers and physicians." And a wage-earner is "one who receives stated wages for labor." [55] "The word 'wages,' in its popular use, signifies the remuneration of hired labor. As so used, it is more or less disparaging, being commonly placed in contrast with the words 'salaries,' 'fees,' 'honorarium,' etc., by which it is sought to denote the remuneration of services of a higher or more intellectual character." [56] In a case in Pennsylvania, Chief Justice Sharswood observed: "The truth is, and this the lexicographers seem to hold, that if there is any difference in the popular sense between 'salary' and 'wages,' it is only in the application of them to more or less honorable services. A farmer pays his farm hand, in common speech, wages, whether by the day, the week, the harvest, or the year. If for any reason he has occasion to employ [53] Abbott, Law Dict.; Ryan v. Hook, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 185.

[54] Bouvier, Law Dict.

[55] Century Dict., s. v. The fees of lawyers, physicians, and other like professional men are not to be classed as "wages." Vane v. Newcombe, 132 U. S. 220, 10 Sup. Ct. 60, 33 L. Ed. 310.

[56] F. A. Walker, in Lalor's Polit. Cyclop.

an overseer, his compensation, no matter how measured, is called a 'salary.' An ironmaster pays his workmen wages; his manager receives a salary. A merchant pays wages to his servant who sweeps the floor, makes the fire, and runs his errands; but he compensates his salesman or clerk by a salary." [57] In another case it is said: "'Fees' are compensation for particular acts or services, as the fees of clerks, sheriffs, lawyers, physicians, etc. 'Wages' are the compensation paid or to be paid for services by the day, week, etc., as of laborers, commissioners, etc. 'Salaries' are the compensation per annum to men in official and some other situations." [58] But according to other opinions, "this compensation to a laborer may be a specified sum for a given time of service, or a fixed sum for specified work; that is, payment may be made by the job. The word 'wages' does not imply that the compensation is to be determined solely upon the basis of time spent in service; it may be determined by the work done. It means compensation estimated in either way." [59]

[57] Com. v. Butler, 99 Pa. St. 542. And see South & North Alabama R. Co. v. Falkner, 49 Ala. 118; People v. Remington, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 328. In First Nat. Bank v. Barnum, 160 Fed. 245, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439, it was said: "The terms 'wages,' 'salary,' and 'hire' mean much the same thing, and are no doubt collectively used in order to cover the different possible kinds of employment comprehended within the general idea. Wages, as distinguished from salary, are commonly understood to apply to the compensation for manual labor, skilled or unskilled, paid at stated times, and measured by the day, week, month, or season, and also by the piece, but not by the job nor including profits on the services of others. Neither is it so broad a term as 'earnings,' which comprehend the returns from skill and labor in whatever way acquired. Indeed the act itself, in exempting wage-earners, recognized that there are other kinds. Salary, on the other hand, has reference to a superior grade of services, and implies a position or office. By contrast, therefore, 'wages' indicate inconsiderable pay for a lower and less responsible character of employment, where 'salary' is suggestive of something higher, larger, and more permanent. The word 'hire' is rather associated with the act of employment than the reward for services done; and in the latter connection is more on the plane of wages than of salary, although in a certain sense it comprehends both, and is also applied to engaging the use of property. We hire a coachman, a gardner, or a cook, or a carriage to take a ride. And we may also be said to hire a superintendent, a bookkeeper, or a clerk, although it would seem more correct, in the latter instances, to say 'engage' or 'employ.' And coming up from the people, as the word thus does, it is sometimes applied, out of place, to the securing of professional services, as where one is said to hire a lawyer, a doctor, or a person of that class."

[58] Cowdin v. Huff, 10 Ind. 85.

[59] Ford v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co., 54 Iowa, 728, 7 N. W. 126; In re Gurewitz, 121 Fed. 982, 58 C. C. A. 320, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350; Swift Mfg. Co. v. Henderson, 99 Ga. 136, 25 S. E. 27. "Wages" includes compensation for labor performed under a contract by which the laborer is to have the price of his services applied on a lot of ground which his employer contracts to sell to him, though the contract is broken by the employer. Scott v. Watson, 36 Pa. St. 342. But one who threshes out grain by the job does not work for "wages." Johnston v. Barrills, 27 Or. 251, 41 Pac. 656, 50 Am. St. Rep. 717. And debts due by customers to a blacksmith for work done by him in carrying on an independent business for himself as the proprietor of a blacksmith shop are not ex-

A fixed annual compensation paid to the secretary of a business corporation is a salary; it is not wages.[60] Where the receiver of a railroad corporation is directed by the order of the court to pay "wages of employés" out of the income of the road, this term does not include the services of counsel employed for special purposes.[61] So, it is held that the term "wages" does not include the salary of the president, manager, or superintendent of a business corporation; nor sums payable to attorneys at law for professional services rendered to the corporation upon occasional retainers; nor the compensation of a person who is employed by the company to sell its goods in a foreign country, at a fixed annual salary, with the addition of a commission and his traveling expenses.[62] Again, the term "wages" is not applicable to the compensation of the public officers of a municipal corporation, who receive annual salaries, which are not due until the end of the year, and who are entitled to be paid so long as they hold their offices without regard to the services rendered.[63] So also, a person who takes a contract to perform a specified work, as, to build a house according to plans and specifications, to execute a cutting on a line of railway at a given sum per cubic yard, or the like, and who employs men under him to do the actual work or to assist him in doing it, is not a "workman" or "laborer," although he does a portion of the work himself, and his compensation is not "wages."[64] So again, where manufacturers receive raw material from another, and work it up for him into a finished or partly finished product, by the use of their machinery and the labor of their employés, under a contract specifying a fixed rate of payment, the money due them therefor is not wages.[65] But on the other hand, in one state, under a constitutional and statutory provision that "current wages for personal service" shall not be subject to garnishment, it has been held that the exemption might be claimed by one who was employed by a live-stock company as manager, at a monthly salary of $200, though he was also a stockholder of the company.[66] empt from garnishment as "wages." Tatum v. Zachry, 86 Ga. 573, 12 S. E. 940.

[60] Gordon v. Jennings, 9 Q. B. Div. 45.

[61] Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 138 U. S. 505, 11 Sup. Ct. 405, 34 L. Ed. 1023.

[62] People v. Remington, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 329. But as to the latter part of the proposition stated in the text, compare Hamberger v. Marcus, 157 Pa. St. 133, 27 Atl. 681, 37 Am. St. Rep. 719; In re Luxton & Black Co., 35 App. Div. 243, 54 N. Y. Supp. 778.

[63] People v. Meyers, 25 Abb. New Cas. 368, 11 N. Y. Supp. 217.

[64] Riley v. Warden, 2 Exch. 59; Heard v. Crum, 73 Miss. 157, 18 South. 934, 55 Am. St. Rep. 520; Smith v. Brooke, 49 Pa. St. 147; Diller v. Frantz, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 306; Henry v. Fisher, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 71. But see Howell v. McDowell, 47 N. J. Law, 359, 1 Atl. 474; Moore v. Heaney, 14 Md. 558.

[65] Lang v. Simmons, 64 Wis. 525, 25 N. W. 650; Campfield v. Lang, 25 Fed. 128.

[66] Bell v. Indian Live Stock Co. (Tex.) 11 S. W. 344, 3 L. R. A. 642.

If it were not for the definition contained in the bankruptcy act itself, we should be justified in concluding, from these authorities, that "wage-earner" must be taken as synonymous with "laborer," as the latter term is ordinarily employed in statutes and in legal speech, or as denoting one who subsists by his physical labor, as distinguished from one who subsists by professional skill.[67] But since the statute makes the term "wage-earner" include not only a person who works for wages, but also one who works for "salary" or "hire," it is generally held to include almost all classes of employés, whatever be the nature of their labor, who are compensated at a fixed rate not exceeding $1,500 per annum, but excluding independent contractors and all those persons whose remuneration is given for specific services rendered upon an occasional employment, and not under a permanent engagement, and who are employed in such occupations as require something more than mere physical labor or mere clerical ability. For example, a teacher receives compensation for his instruction which cannot properly be described as either "wages" or "hire." And if he charges so much per lesson or per hour of instruction, it is not "salary." But one who teaches in the public schools at a fixed monthly or annual salary comes squarely within the bankruptcy law.[68] So one who owns a team of horses and wagons and a plow, and who works by the day for different employers as he can obtain work, earning usually not more than $15 per week, and who works alone when he cannot find work for his team, is not an independent contractor but a wage-earner.[69] The tendency of the later decisions is to construe this part of the statute according to its spirit and purpose, without too great technicality. And as to this, it has been said: "It is evidently intended to relieve from adverse proceedings those who, not being engaged in business or trade, depend for a living upon the result of individual labor or effort, without the aid of property or capital." [70] Thus, it is held that one who is engaged in manufacturing and trading pursuits, does not become a wage-earner, so as to be exempt from compulsory bankruptcy, merely because, while so engaged, he also earns wages by working for another in a different occupation.[71] Neither is one to be included in the exempt class merely because he receives a small salary, when the greater part of [67] Weymouth v. Sanborn, 43 N. H. 173, 80 Am. Dec. 144; Pennsylvania & D. R. Co. v. Leuffer, 84 Pa. St. 168, 24 Am. Rep. 189.

[68] First Nat. Bank v. Barnum, 160 Fed. 245, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[69] In re Yoder, 127 Fed. 894, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 445.

[70] First Nat. Bank v. Barnum, 160 Fed. 245, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439. And see In re Wakefield, 182 Fed. 247, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[71] In re Naroma Chocolate Co., 178 Fed. 383, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 154.

his income is derived from independent business or from investments. "Every individual who is paid a salary of less than $1,500 a year is not necessarily therefore a wage-earner within the meaning of the law. A person extensively engaged in some mercantile or manufacturing business might at the same time incidentally earn a salary of less than $1,500 a year in some collateral employment; or the individual owner of a large business might incorporate it, and, being entitled as the holder of a great majority of the stock to practically all of the dividends earned, might prefer that his salary as president and head of the business should be placed at a nominal figure, or at a figure less than $1,500 a year, and much less than he would expect to draw for his services in the management of the business. Manifestly Congress did not intend to exempt such persons as these from the operation of the law." [72] But in another case the court refused to make an adjudication of bankruptcy against a person whose occupation was that of secretary and financial manager for a corporation at a salary of $100 a month, and who had no other business. He was also a stockholder in the company, but apparently derived no income from his stock, as the corporation was stated to be bankrupt. The court held that his ownership of stock in the company could not be treated as a separate business or occupation, and that it would not affect his exemption.[73] In a case where the alleged bankrupt was a traveling salesman and received a salary of $100 a month and also his expenses while traveling, and it was proved that his employer's agreement to pay his expenses was worth $40 a month to him, it was held that his total compensation exceeded $1,500 a year, and therefore he was not exempt from adjudication in bankruptcy.[74]

§ 106. Farmers.—By the express terms of the bankruptcy law (§ 4b) a petition in involuntary bankruptcy will not lie against "a person engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil." Such a person cannot commit an act of bankruptcy, and does not become subject to the statute by making a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors.[75] But one engaged in trade or some other nonexempt pursuit and who commits an act of bankruptcy cannot be permitted to evade the provisions of the statute by engaging in farming and making that his chief occupation, after the act of bankruptcy and before the filing of a

[72] Carpenter v. Cudd, 174 Fed. 603, 98 C. C. A. 449, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[73] In re Pilger, 118 Fed. 206, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

[74] In re Hurley, 204 Fed. 126, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567.

[75] Olive v. Armour, 167 Fed. 517, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 901; In re Doroski (D. C.) 271 Fed. 8, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

petition against him.[76] It is also to be noted that this clause of the statute is construed as applying only to natural persons and not to corporations.[77]

As to what constitutes farming, it is said that "a farmer is one who is devoted to the tillage of the soil, and persons who follow this occupation may call themselves horticulturists, viticulturists, or gardeners, but they are farmers."[78] But the operation of farming plainly must mean something more than the cultivation of a small plot of ground. It has been remarked that a person may be said to be "engaged in the science of agriculture when he derives the support of himself and his family, in whole or in part, from the tillage and cultivation of fields. He must cultivate something more than a garden, though it may be much less than a farm. If the area cultivated can be called a field, it is agriculture."[79] Primarily the mention of farming suggests the raising of crops of grain and hay, though it may be observed, in passing, that the operation of a grist mill is not farming, at least in so far as it consists in grinding grain produced on the land, and by the labor, of others.[80] But of course farming is not restricted, either in scientific or in popular language, to these products. The cultivation of vegetables for the market and of berries and small fruits is called "truck farming." And undoubtedly one whose land was devoted entirely to the purpose of an orchard would be within the statute; for if fruit-raising is not "farming," certainly it is "tillage of the soil." But there is a more serious question as to whether the terms of the statute include the business of stock-raising, or of maintaining and operating ranches for the raising of horses or cattle for the market, or the business which is commonly described as operating a "dairy-farm." If the words "tillage of the soil" are to be understood as a definition or explanation of what is meant by "farming," then they operate as a limitation upon the broader senses of which the latter word is capable. But the authorities generally hold that this is not the true construction of the statute.[81] And although [76] In re Mackey, 110 Fed. 355, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Luckhardt, 101 Fed. 807, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 307.

[77] In re Lake Jackson Sugar Co., 129 Fed. 640. But it seems that a partnership engaged chiefly in farming is not subject to adjudication in bankruptcy. H. D. Still's Sons v. American Nat. Bank, 209 Fed. 749, 126 C. C. A. 473, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320.

[78] In re Slade's Estate, 122 Cal. 434, 55 Pac. 158.

[79] Springer v. Lewis, 22 Pa. St. 191.

[80] State v. Patterson, 98 N. C. 657, 4 S. E. 47; Bachelder v. Bickford, 62 Me. 526. One who is chiefly engaged in threshing for hire grain raised by others is not engaged chiefly in farming or tillage of the soil, so as to be exempt from involuntary bankruptcy. Hart-Parr Co. v. Barkley, 231 Fed. 913, 146 C. C. A. 109, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540.

[81] In re Thompson, 102 Fed. 287, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; In re Dwyer, 184 Fed. 880, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 913; In re Brown (D. C.) 251 Fed. 365, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

there is some difference of opinion, the accredited rule appears to be that a person whose principal occupation is the raising of cattle, sheep, hogs, or other live stock for the market, his farm being devoted to use as pasture land and for raising grass, hay, and corn with which to feed and fatten the stock, is exempt from the bankruptcy law, being a "farmer" though not a tiller of the soil, and does not lose this character by the fact that he incidentally supplements the products of his own farm by the purchase of fodder for the stock, nor by the fact that he does not entirely restrict his operations to cattle raised on his own land.[82] But on the other hand, one whose chief occupation is the purchase and sale of live stock, and who uses his lands as a mere feeding station, and, even for the maintenance of the cattle while on his lands, relies chiefly on purchased supplies, is not engaged in either farming or the tillage of the soil, but is a trader.[83] Much the same principles apply to the business of dairy-farming. It is held that a farmer does not cease to be "engaged chiefly in farming," within the meaning of the statute, because he establishes a dairy as one of the branches of his industry, to utilize the products of his farm and convert them to profitable uses, nor because he may sell the products of his dairy at retail; but that one is not exempt as [82] In re Dwyer, 184 Fed. 880, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 913; In re Sutter (D. C.) 270 Fed. 248, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; In re Thompson, 102 Fed. 287, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; State v. Patterson, 98 N. C. 657, 4 S. E. 47; Simons v. Lovell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 510. The farmer "may also include breeding, feeding, and rearing of live stock, embracing cattle, horses, mules, sheep, and hogs, for domestic use and for market. If he find it more profitable to feed his agricultural products or his grasses to live stock than to rely upon marketing the surplus, he may not be limited to the quantity of live stock for such purpose to what he may breed or rear on his farm. For this purpose he may rely entirely upon the purchase of such live stock from his neighbors or on the market, and utilize his farm products in feeding and fattening such 'feeders' for market. Neither, in my opinion, should the act be so construed as to restrict the farmer entirely, under all circumstances and conditions, to the corn and hay and grasses he may produce for rearing such feeders and preparing them for market. In other words, where he relies largely upon his pasture lands for grazing his cattle, and his crops of corn may not be sufficient to carry them through the particular winter and the feeding season, he may supplement these by purchasing from without sufficient corn and the like to meet the requirement. But certainly there should be apparent such relation between his method of farming and the buying and feeding of cattle, hogs, and the like, for market, as to reasonably indicate that his farming is not made principally subsidiary to the business of buying and selling cattle. So that, if his chief business is that of thus trading in cattle, using his lands as a mere feeding station, relying upon the purchase feed from the market for preparing them for sale much more than on his agricultural products, he may cross the dividing line between farming as his chief business and trading in cattle as his chief source of livelihood. No hard and fast rule can safely be laid down by the courts indifferently applicable to all cases. Each must depend more or less upon its own particular facts." Bank of Dearborn v. Matney, 132 Fed. 75, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482, per Philips, J.

[83] Bank of Dearborn v. Matney, 132 Fed. 75, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482; In re Brown, 132 Fed. 706, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140; Trustees of Rochester v. Pettinger, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 265.

a farmer whose business is to maintain a herd of cows and sell the milk, owning no farm but only the barn in which they are kept and buying from others the grain and other forage to maintain them.[84]

It is next necessary that the person claiming to be exempt should be "engaged" in farming, and this necessarily implies either the expenditure of one's personal labor on the farm or the direction and control of farm laborers.[85] For this reason, where the title to a farm stood in the name of a wife, and she performed only such services as are generally performed by the wives of farmers, the husband taking full charge of the farming operations, it was held that the wife was not "engaged chiefly in farming."[86] On the same principle, the owner of a farm, who does not work it himself, but lets it to a tenant, retaining a general supervision to the extent of seeing that the tenant carries on the work as agreed, but taking no active direction or control, and who has no active business of any kind except looking after his investments, is not "engaged in farming" so as to be exempt from involuntary bankruptcy.[87] At the same time, it is certainly not necessary that the farmer should labor with his own hands. If a man's principal occupation is the management and control of a large plantation, which he owns, upon which he resides, and upon which he relies for his income, he is engaged chiefly in farming, and it is not material that part of the property is rented to tenants, the owner exercising supervision and control of their operations, nor that, as to the rest, the manual labor is performed by hired servants, the owner himself not personally working on the land.[88]

Further, it is essential that the person should be engaged "chiefly" in farming or the tillage of the soil. From the use of the word quoted, it was evidently the intention of Congress to exclude from the compulsory features of the law persons whose principal occupation is agriculture, and whose main support is derived from husbandry, although they may, at the same time, be engaged in other kinds of business, but only incidentally or as a temporary or occasional matter. Each such case must be determined on its own facts, and by a comparison of the relative importance to the individual of the various pursuits or lines of business

[84] Gregg v. Mitchell, 166 Fed. 725, 92 C. C. A. 415, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 148, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 659.

[85] A so-called "retired" farmer, who incurred considerable indebtedness in purely commercial ventures, is not a person engaged chiefly in farming, so as to be exempt from involuntary bankruptcy, though at times he assisted his son, to whom he had rented his farm. In re Driver (D. C.) 252 Fed. 956, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106.

[86] In re Johnson, 149 Fed. 864, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

[87] In re Leland, 185 Fed. 830, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re Matson, 123 Fed. 743, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 473. And see In re Hoy, 137 Fed. 175, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

[88] Wulbern v. Drake, 120 Fed. 493, 56 C. C. A. 643, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

which he may be carrying on.[89] But the general rule emerges that a person's chief occupation is that which is of principal concern and importance to him, which is his permanent pursuit and not merely transitory, and upon which he mainly depends for his living and support, and if this main occupation is some form of agriculture, he is exempt from the bankruptcy law, though he may devote some minor part of his time and energy to side lines or incidental pursuits, and thereby supplement his income.[90] Thus, one who resides with his family on a farm and cultivates it, and derives his main support from it, is a farmer, though he is also the publisher of a weekly newspaper and the proprietor of patent medicines,[91] or the owner of a small store, from which he derives a profit, but very small in comparison with the income from his farm.[92] But one having regular clerical employment in a city, but whose home is upon a farm, where he spends his Sundays and one night in each week, the management of which is, in his absence, in the hands of men hired by him for the purpose, is not a farmer.[93]

§ 107. Second Bankruptcy.—There is nothing in the bankruptcy act which prevents a person who has received his discharge as a bankrupt from applying a second time for the benefits of the law, if he has [89] American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Brinkley, 194 Fed. 411, 114 C. C. A. 373, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 100, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438. Where an alleged bankrupt is engaged in several occupations at the same time, what constitutes his principal occupation is to be determined from all the circumstances of the particular case. Harris v. Tapp (D. C.) 235 Fed. 918, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564. A man who regularly follows two occupations is not, at the time of the commission of an act of bankruptcy, chiefly engaged in one of them merely because at that time he is giving his principal attention to it rather than to his other pursuit. In re Disney (D. C.) 219 Fed. 294, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656. In determining whether an alleged bankrupt is chiefly engaged in farming, all his activities are to be taken into consideration, the relative amount of time devoted to each, and the comparative amount of revenue received and indebtedness incurred in each. And an alleged bankrupt who, although conducting a large farm, also built and operated a packing house, creamery, and poultry yards, buying live stock and poultry, and who contracted the larger part of his indebtedness in connection with business other than farming, is not chiefly engaged in farming. In re Brown, 253 Fed. 357, 165 C. C. A. 139, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 452. One who cultivates about two acres of land and has a few farming implements, but who has various outside pursuits, cannot be said to be "chiefly engaged" in farming. In re Spengler (D. C.) 238 Fed. 862, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64. In determining the question of a person's chief or principal occupation, all his pursuits must be considered as a whole, although as to some of them he is in partnership with other persons. American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Brinkley, 194 Fed. 411, 114 C. C. A. 373, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 100, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438.

[90] In re Mackey, 110 Fed. 355, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Shelhorse, 228 Fed. 493, 143 C. C. A. 75, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; In re Terry (D. C.) 208 Fed. 162, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 631.

[91] McCue v. Tunstead, 65 Cal. 506, 4 Pac. 510.

[92] Rise v. Bordner, 140 Fed. 566, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297.

[93] Johnson v. London Guaranty & Accident Co., 115 Mich. 91, 72 N. W. 1115, 40 L. R. A. 440, 69 Am. St. Rep. 549.

contracted new debts which he is unable to pay, except the provision added by the amendment of 1903, which forbids the granting of a discharge if the bankrupt has, in voluntary proceedings, been granted a discharge within six years.[94] This provision, it is held, is not retroactive as applied to cases where the first proceedings were had prior to its enactment, as it creates no new offense and imposes no new penalty, but only fixes new conditions of discharge in the case of petitions filed after its passage.[95] But it is to be noted that it applies only to cases where the first proceedings were voluntary, and to cases where a discharge was granted, not where a discharge was refused or never applied for. It was held under the act of 1867 (and the same rule now applies) that a bankrupt who has not been discharged, or to whom a discharge has been refused, and who has contracted new debts sufficient in amount to give the court jurisdiction, may file a second petition in bankruptcy; but a discharge under such new petition would apply only to new debts and to such old debts as had been proved anew.[96] The denial of a bankrupt's application for discharge renders the issue as to his right to a discharge res judicata as to debts which were provable in that proceeding, and it is held that his failure to apply for a discharge has the same effect.[97] Hence where, in a subsequent voluntary proceeding, the bankrupt schedules the same debts and the same assets, the second proceeding is a manifest attempt to evade the effect of the former, and should be dismissed, or the bankrupt should be restrained by the court from prosecuting a second application for a discharge. But where a considerable time has elapsed, and new debts are also scheduled, the bankrupt has the right to maintain the proceeding as to those, and an order granting a stay should be limited accordingly.[98]

[94] Act Cong. February 5, 1903, c. 487, § 4; 32 Stat. 797.

[95] In re Carleton, 131 Fed. 146, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475.

[96] In re Drisko, 2 Low. 430, 13 N. B. R. 112, Fed. Cas. No. 4090, affirmed 14 N. B. R. 551, Fed. Cas. No. 4086; Fisher v. Currier, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 424.

[97] In re Pullian, 171 Fed. 595, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

[98] In re Kuffler, 151 Fed. 12, 80 C. C. A. 508, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 16; In re Pullian, 171 Fed. 595, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

CHAPTER VIII

BANKRUPTCY OF PARTNERSHIPS

§ 108. Jurisdiction in Partnership Cases.—The jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy over partnerships is founded upon the following provisions of the bankruptcy act: Those courts are invested with jurisdiction to "adjudge persons bankrupt who have had their principal place of business, resided, or had their domicile within their respective territorial jurisdictions for the preceding six months or the greater portion thereof." (Section 2, clause 1.) The word "persons," as used in the act, shall include partnerships. (Section 1, clause 19.) "A partnership, during the continuation of the partnership business, or after its dissolution and before the final settlement thereof, may be adjudged a bankrupt. The court of bankruptcy which has jurisdiction of one of the partners may have jurisdiction of all the partners and of the administration of the partnership and individual property." (Section 5, clauses "a" and "c.") It will be observed that this act, unlike previous bankruptcy statutes, treats a partnership as a legal entity, which may be adjudged a bankrupt, separately from the individuals composing it, as though it were an independent legal person.[1] But it must be shown that a partnership exists in fact, and who are the members of it, before the court can act intelligently upon a petition against it, and an adjudication will be denied until these matters are before the court.[2]

[1] Francis v. McNeal, 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 479, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; In re Everybody's

It will also be perceived from the provisions quoted that the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy over a firm may be based either upon the residence or domicile of one or more of the partners within the district, or upon the fact that the principal place of business of the firm is within the district, without regard to the domicile of the members of the firm. Hence, if one of the partners has been a resident of the district for the required length of time, he may there file a petition for the adjudication of the firm, notwithstanding the fact that the business of the firm is carried on in another district or state, or that the other partners reside elsewhere, although, in such a case, the other members of the firm must be given an opportunity to join in the petition or to oppose it.[3] The same rule applies to a petition by creditors against the firm. And a bankruptcy court which has jurisdiction over one of the partners may take jurisdiction over the firm, without reference to the question whether the firm is six months old, or three months old (so as to have had a "principal place of business" for the "preceding six months or the greater portion thereof"), and without any specific allegation as to its principal place of business.[4] But if the petition is distinctly based on the ground of residence or domicile, it will be dismissed where it is shown that none of the members of the firm had his domicile or resided within the district long enough to support the Grocery & Meat Market, 173 Fed. 492, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 925; In re L. Stein & Co., 127 Fed. 547, 62 C. C. A. 272, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536. In the case last cited, it was said: "The present bankruptcy act recognizes the equitable rule that partnership property is primarily a fund for the payment of copartnership debts, and that the interest of a copartner is subject to that special equity, and attaches only to the surplus remaining after the payment of the copartnership debts. It treats a copartnership as a legal entity, irrespective of the status or separate rights of the individual copartners. It deals with the copartnership as a person for the purpose of subjecting the partnership property to the satisfaction of copartnership liabilties. In this respect, the present act is a marked departure from the previous bankruptcy acts. And so it has been held that a copartnership may be adjudged a bankrupt after death of one partner, upon an act of bankruptcy committed by the surviving partner, and that the adjudication of bankruptcy of a copartnership does not necessarily draw into the proceedings the estate of every individual member." But see H. D. Still's Sons v. American Nat. Bank, 209 Fed. 749, 126 C. C. A. 473, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320; holding that a partnership, in bankruptcy, is not an entity separate and distinct from its partners, but is a natural person within the meaning of § 4b of the Bankruptcy Act.

[2] In re McLaren, 125 Fed. 835, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141.

[3] In re Penn, 5 Ben. 89, 5 N. B. R. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 10,927; Ex parte Hall, 5 Law Rep. 269, Fed. Cas. No. 5,919; Whitson v. Farber Bank, 105 Mo. App. 605, 80 S. W. 327. And see In re J. & M. Schwartz, 204 Fed. 326, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[4] In re Mitchell, 219 Fed. 690, 135 C. C. A. 362, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

jurisdiction of the court.[5] On the other hand, if the principal place of business of a partnership has been within a given district for the requisite length of time, the court of bankruptcy of that district will have jurisdiction of a voluntary or involuntary petition against the partnership, irrespective of the fact that some of the partners may be nonresidents.[6] And where a partnership has had its only place of business within a given judicial district for a period of more than three months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against it in such district, the court therein will have jurisdiction of the petition, although, during a part of that time, the only business carried on was in the way of winding up the affairs of the firm by two of the partners, the others having retired.[7]

In the case of two or more petitions being filed against the same partnership in different courts, each having jurisdiction over the case, it is provided that "the petition first filed shall be first heard, and may be amended by the insertion of an allegation of an earlier act of bankruptcy than that first alleged, if such earlier act is charged in either of the other petitions; and in either case the proceedings upon the other petition may be stayed until an adjudication is made upon the petition first heard, and the court which makes the first adjudication of bankruptcy shall retain jurisdiction over all proceedings therein until the same shall be closed. In case two or more petitions shall be filed in different districts by different members of the same partnership, for an adjudication of the bankruptcy of said partnership, the court in which the petition is first filed, having jurisdiction, shall take and retain jurisdiction over all proceedings in such bankruptcy until the same shall be closed; and if such petitions shall be filed in the same district, action shall be first had upon the one first filed. But the court so retaining jurisdiction shall, if satisfied that it is for the greatest convenience of parties in interest that another of said courts should proceed with the cases, order them to be transferred to that court."[8] Such a case of double jurisdiction arises where the partners are domiciled in differ-

[5] In re Blair, 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588.

[6] Cameron v. Canieo, 9 N. B. R. 527, Fed. Cas. No. 2,340; In re Flaherty (D. C.) 265 Fed. 741, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638; In re Gurler & Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 1016, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 418. A nonresident partner may be served by publication, but there can be no adjudication against him personally until he has been given a proper opportunity to answer. In re J. & M. Schwartz, 204 Fed. 326, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[7] In re Blair, 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588.

[8] General Order No. 6. See supra, § 33. And see Ex parte Hall, 5 Law Rep. 269, Fed. Cas. No. 5,919; In re Greenfield, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 469, 5 Ben. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 5,772; In re Smith, 1 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 12,983.

ent districts and the firm maintains a business establishment in each district. Petitions being filed in both districts, that court in which the petition is first filed possesses exclusive jurisdiction to determine which of the two courts can proceed with the case for the greater convenience of the parties in interest.[9] It has been held that where the same persons constitute two separate partnerships engaged in business, similar or dissimilar, in different states, each partnership having a distinct firm name, an adjudication of bankruptcy in either jurisdiction, on petition of creditors of one firm only, will apply to all the debts and assets of both partnerships.[10] But the adjudication of a firm in one district does not prevent a subsequent adjudication in another district of a firm only in part composed of the same persons.[11]

§ 109. Same; Minority or Insanity of One Partner.—From the doctrine that the present statute treats a partnership as a distinct legal entity, it follows that an adjudication of bankruptcy may be passed upon a firm, notwithstanding the fact that one of the partners may be a minor or insane. In one of the cases so holding it was said: "We perceive no valid reason why this manifest purpose of the bankruptcy act [to treat the partnership as a distinct entity apart from the partners composing it] should not have full effect. In the case of a decedent, the proper probate court assumes charge of and the disposition of his estate. But even then the partnership of which he was a member might, as we think, be properly adjudicated bankrupt as against the survivors, and the partnership estate administered by the bankruptcy court, since the decedent's interest in the estate extends only to the surplus after the payment of the partnership debts. So also, in respect to a minor, neither he nor his estate is responsible for debts contracted by him during his minority. And yet we perceive no objection, where he is a partner in a copartnership, his interests therein being subordinate to the partnership debts, to the adjudication of such copartnership as a bankrupt under the provisions of the present bankruptcy act. Conceding for the purpose of the argument—a question which we do not determine—that an insane person may not be adjudicated a bankrupt, nevertheless we think a copartnership of which he was or is a member may be so adjudicated, and the firm property applied to the payment of the firm debts. There is here no attempt to adjudicate the insane partner a bankrupt individually. The proceeding is merely to subject partnership property to the payment of partnership debts, and for an adjudication of bankruptcy against the sane partner." [12] As to minors, it may be regarded as now well settled, that a partnership in which one member is a minor may be adjudged bankrupt, as also the adult members of the firm, and the partnership property and the separate estates of such adult partners may be administered in bankruptcy, although no adjudication can be made against the infant partner individually.[13]

[9] In re Sterne & Levi, 190 Fed. 70, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259.

[10] Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546.

[11] In re Jewett, 7 Biss. 473, 16 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 7,307.

§ 110. Proceedings in Partnership Cases.—Under the bankruptcy act of 1867, a partnership was regarded simply as an aggregation of the partners, and the bankruptcy of the partners conditioned the bankruptcy of the firm.[14] But under the present law, as above stated, a partnership is a "person" and a distinct entity in law. It owns its property and owes its debts apart from the individual property of its members and apart from their individual debts, and it may be adjudged bankrupt upon its voluntary petition, or in involuntary proceedings if it has committed an act of bankruptcy, irrespective of any adjudication of the individual partners; and the adjudication of the firm will subject the separate estates of the partners, as well as the firm property, to administration in bankruptcy.[15] Even though one of the partners has not been, and could not be, adjudicated a bankrupt individually, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to take possession of his property and to administer the same so far as necessary to a settlement of the [12] In re L. Stein & Co., 127 Fed. 547, 62 C. C. A. 272, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

[13] Jennings v. Stannus (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 347, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Dunnigan, 95 Fed. 428, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628.

[14] In re Bertenshaw, 157 Fed. 363, 85 C. C. A. 61, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

[15] Fidelity Trust Co. v. Gaskell, 195 Fed. 865, 115 C. C. A. 527, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4; In re Meyer, 98 Fed. 976, 39 C. C. A. 368, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Bertenshaw, 157 Fed. 363, 85 C. C. A. 61, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; Mills v. Fisher, 159 Fed. 897, 87 C. C. A. 77, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; New Orleans Acid & Fertilizer Co. v. Guillory & Co., 117 La. 821, 42 South. 329; Lacey v. Cowan, 162 Ala. 546, 50 South. 281; In re Samuels, 215 Fed. 845, 132 C. C. A. 187; Abbott v. Anderson, 265 Ill. 285, 106 N. E. 782, L. R. A. 1915F, 668, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 741. Where a petition in voluntary bankruptcy is presented both in the name of a partnership and in the names of the individual partners, and is accompanied by schedules setting forth the debts and assets of the firm and also of the partners, and thereupon the petitioners are adjudged bankrupts as prayed, it is not necessary that each partner should also file an individual petition, in order to be relieved from his individual debts, but the court of bankruptcy may administer upon the separate estates of the partners as well as upon the estate of the firm in a single proceeding, and may grant to the partners a discharge from both separate and joint debts. In re Gay, 98 Fed. 870, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. Where a voluntary petition in bankruptcy by partners prays that "the petitioners" may be adjudged bankrupts, instead of "the said firm," but otherwise follows the official form for a partnership petition, describing the petitioners as the members of the firm, and the schedules show that all their debts are firm debts, and the order of adjudication corresponds with the petition, the defect of form in the petition and adjudication is not material on opposition to the application for dispartnership estate.[16] And further, that provision of the act (section 5h) which relates to the right of an unadjudicated partner to wind up the partnership business does not apply to a case where the partnership itself has been adjudged bankrupt. It only applies to cases where some of the partners, but not all, have been adjudged, and not the firm as such. Consequently, at least in cases where the act of bankruptcy on which the adjudication was made involved the insolvency of the partnership (including the insolvency of all its members) though the adjudication is against the partnership only, or against the partnership and some of its members, but not all, yet the estates of all the members are drawn into the proceedings for administration in bankruptcy.[17]

Proceedings in the bankruptcy of a partnership do not differ from those proper to be had upon the adjudication of an individual, except in a very few particulars specified in the statute. It is directed that "the creditors of the partnership shall appoint the trustee; in other respects, so far as possible, the estate shall be administered as herein provided for other estates." [18] The creditors here meant are those to whom the firm, as a firm, is indebted. A person holding a claim against one of the individual partners may be, in a sense, a creditor of the firm, in view of the fact that he may have an ultimate right to come upon the assets of the firm, but he is not a "creditor of the partnership" in the sense of the statute, and therefore has no right to vote in the choice of a trustee.[19] It is also provided that "the trustee shall keep separate accounts of the partnership property and of the property belonging to the individual partners," and "the expenses shall be paid from the partnership property and the individual property in such proportions as the court shall determine." [20] Under the act of 1867, there was no provision similar to this, but it was there directed that the "net proceeds" of the partnership property should go to the firm creditors, and the net proceeds of separate property to individual creditors; and it was held that the costs of the proceeding must be apportioned pro rata between the partnership and separate estates.[21] charge, but may be amended nunc pro tunc. In re Meyers, 97 Fed. 757, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260.

[16] Dickas v. Barnes, 140 Fed. 849, 72 C. C. A. 261, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 654, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Samuels & Lesser, 207 Fed. 195, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; In re R. F. Duke & Son, 199 Fed. 199, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93.

[17] Francis v. McNeal, 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029, L. R. A. 1915E, 706, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; affirming 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; Menke v. Sunderman, 186 Fed. 486, 108 C. C. A. 464.

[18] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5b.

[19] In re Phelps, 1 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,071; In re Scheiffer, 2 N. B. R. 591, Fed. Cas. No. 12,445; In re South Boston Iron Co., 4 Cliff. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 13,183.

[20] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5e.

[21] In re Blumer, 12 Fed. 489; In re Smith, 13 N. B. R. 500, Fed. Cas. No.

§ 111. What Constitutes Partnership.—The fifth section of the bankruptcy act, relating to "partners," does not apply to limited partnerships, unless the members of such a partnership remain individually liable for the debts of the firm; for the first section declares that the term "corporation" (as to which there are special provisions) "shall include limited or other partnership associations organized under laws making the capital subscribed alone responsible for the debts of the association." If, however, persons who attempt to organize a limited partnership fail in law to accomplish that result, for lack of compliance with the statutory provisions governing such associations, then they may be put into bankruptcy as general partners.[22] And for a similar reason, where persons associate themselves together, intending to form a corporation, or assuming to be a corporation and using a corporate name, but without authority of law, they are individually liable as partners for the debts of the association, and a creditor who has dealt with them as a corporation is not thereby estopped from setting up his claim against them individually in bankruptcy.[23] But the directors or stockholders of a corporation, who have made themselves personally liable for its debts, by failure to obey the laws governing corporations of that class, are not subject to be proceeded against in bankruptcy as partners.[24]

To warrant an adjudication of bankruptcy against an alleged partnership, or against an individual as a member of a partnership, the existence of a partnership in fact must be shown, and the burden of proof on this issue rests upon the petitioning creditors.[25] A mere "holding out," by which one may have become liable to some creditors on the principle of estoppel, is not sufficient; "otherwise a bankrupt might become liable to some creditors and not liable to others, and the proceedings in bankruptcy might be good as to some and void as to others. Partnership in fact must be actually proven in order to sustain an adjudication."[26] But whether a partnership exists as between the parties themselves depends on their intention, and that intention must be as-

12,987; In re Ingalls, 5 Law Rep. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 7,032. And see In re Gay, 98 Fed. 870, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

[22] In re Merrill, 12 Blatchf. 221, 13 N. B. R. 91, Fed. Cas. No. 9,467.

[23] Manson v. Williams, 153 Fed. 525, 82 C. C. A. 475, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674; In re Hudson Clothing Co., 148 Fed. 305, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826; In re Mendenhall, 9 N. B. R. 497, Fed. Cas. No. 9,425.

[24] James v. Atlantic Delaine Co., 11 N. B. R. 390, Fed. Cas. No. 7,179.

[25] Buffalo Milling Co. v. Lewisburg Dairy Co., 159 Fed. 319, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279; Jones v. Burnham, Williams & Co., 138 Fed. 986, 71 C. C. A. 240, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; In re Beckwith & Co. 130 Fed. 475, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453.

[26] In re Beckwith & Co., 130 Fed. 475, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453; In re Hudson Clothing Co., 148 Fed. 305, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826.

certained from the whole evidence and the circumstances in the case.[27] "The existence of a partnership may be deduced from facts and circumstances, and does not have to be established by proof of an express agreement, either oral or written. Where two or more parties are engaged in a joint business enterprise, to which they contribute their capital, skill, or labor, upon an understanding, tacit or otherwise, that they will share in common the profits accruing therefrom, they are partners in fact and in law, both between themselves and as to creditors." [28]

When an issue is raised as to the persons who constitute a bankrupt partnership, the court of bankruptcy has power and jurisdiction to determine it.[29] A person who is not actually a member of the firm cannot properly be adjudged bankrupt in proceedings by or against the firm.[30] But the proceedings will not be rendered invalid as to the actual partners by the inclusion of persons who are not partners; but on the application of a person thus wrongfully included, the proceedings may be vacated so far as they relate to him,[31] unless, perhaps, in cases where there has been a slothful acquiescence in the proceedings for such a length of time that rights and interests of third persons have grown up under the adjudication and been adapted to it.[32] For the purposes of an adjudication in bankruptcy, participation in the profits of a business is presumptive or primary proof that the participator is a partner in such business, and in the absence of other proof, is sufficient evidence thereof; but such presumption may be overcome by showing that such profits were received by the party simply as wages for services performed, or interest for money loaned to the persons carrying on the business.[33] In an action by the trustee in bankruptcy of a partnership, the issue being as to whether all the persons composing the firm were included in the adjudication of bankruptcy, the trustee is not bound or concluded by the record of a prior judgment wherein the persons

[27] In re Hirth, 189 Fed. 926, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666.

[28] In re Beckwith & Co., 130 Fed. 475, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 453.

[29] In re Griffith, 18 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 5,820.

[30] In re Berryman, 2 Hask. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 1,360.

[31] Hanson v. Paige, 3 Gray (Mass.) 239.

[32] In re Griffith, 18 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 5,820; In re Gilbert, Fed. Cas. No. 5,411.

[33] In re Francis, 2 Sawy. 286, 7 N. B. R. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 5,031; In re Kobre, 224 Fed. 104, 139 C. C. A. 660. Under Civ. Code S. Dak. § 1723, which provides that a partnership is the association of two or more persons for the purpose of carrying on business together and dividing its profits between them, a business conducted in the name of a bankrupt and his brother as partners, was not a partnership business, but the individual business of the bankrupt, where his brother had no capital invested and worked for a salary, and there was no agreement between them that he should share in either profits or losses. In re Gibson, 191 Fed. 665, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

composing the firm were ascertained and determined, although he, in his private capacity, was a party to that judgment.[34]

The bankruptcy law is applicable not only to general partnerships, and to the rare instances of "universal partnerships," [35] but also to the case of what is sometimes called a "special" partnership, that is, a partnership formed for the single purpose of prosecuting some special adventure or enterprise.[36] But where two firms shared in a certain venture, and kept an account in a bank in the name of one firm with the addition of the word "Co.," and so signed the checks, it was held that these checks did not establish a copartnership between the two firms, and that a holder of a check so signed could not file a petition in bankruptcy against the members of both firms.[37] A judgment procured against three persons as partners may be proved against the estate of two, regarding the other as a surety, where the third has been held, in the bankruptcy proceedings, not a partner.[38]

§ 112. Secret and Presumptive Partners.—It is not essential to the validity of an adjudication in bankruptcy against a partnership that a secret or dormant partner should have been made a party defendant; where only the ostensible partners are served and proceeded against, this will at least bind the partnership property.[39] But a secret partner may be included in the adjudication under proper circumstances. Thus, where the petitioning creditors, at the time the indebtedness was incurred, knew that a person was a secret partner in a firm, and such partner is a guarantor on commercial paper of the firm, he may, although solvent, and having personally committed no acts of bankruptcy, be adjudged a bankrupt on a petition filed against him and his partners.[40] There is, however, a decision by a circuit court of appeals that a bankruptcy court, in proceedings against a partnership, has no jurisdiction to administer on the estate of an alleged secret partner without declaring him a bankrupt or finding him to be insolvent; that neither under the provision relating to examinations in bankruptcy nor independently of it, has the bankruptcy court any jurisdiction of a creditors' petition in proceedings against a firm to try the question of an alleged secret

[34] Abendroth v. Durant, 1 Fed. 849.

[35] See In re Culver, 176 Fed. 450, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 779.

[36] See Thrall v. Crampton, 9 Ben. 218, 16 N. B. R. 261, Fed. Cas. No. 14,008.

[37] In re Warner, 7 N. B. R. 47, Fed. Cas. No. 17,178.

[38] In re Kitzinger, 19 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 7,861.

[39] In re Gibson, 191 Fed. 665, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401; In re Harris, 108 Fed. 517; Metcalf v. Officer, 5 Dill. 565, Fed. Cas. No. 9,496; In re Kenney, 97 Fed. 554, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353; In re Lane, 2 Low. 333, 10 N. B. R. 135, Fed. Cas. No. 8,044. And see In re Samuels & Lesser, 207 Fed. 195, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

[40] In re Ess, 3 Biss. 301, 7 N. B. R. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 4,530.

partner's membership in the firm against his will, or to compel him to file schedules of assets and liabilities; and that, if no petition in bankruptcy has been filed against him as an individual, and he asserts under oath that he is not a partner, he cannot be summarily adjudged such on an inquiry before a referee in bankruptcy to which he does not consent.[41] At any rate, it is necessary, to charge a person as a silent partner in the business of a bankrupt, so as to debar him from the rights of a creditor of the estate where there has been no holding out as such, an actual and definite agreement must be proved binding on all the parties thereto.[42] The trustee in bankruptcy of a dormant partner is not entitled to the possession of the partnership effects, as against attaching creditors of the partnership.[43] But on the other hand, where the adjudication in bankruptcy has been made against the ostensible partner, his trustee cannot be kept out of possession of property of the firm by one who claims title under a mortgage given by the secret partner.[44]

Although a person who is not actually a partner in a firm may incur liabilities by holding himself out to the world as a partner, or permitting this to be done, and may so found a claim against him on the part of those who are thereby induced to do business with the firm and become its creditors, this does not render him liable to be adjudged bankrupt as a partner in the firm. The law applies only to actual partners, not to those who may have incurred responsibilities to particular creditors on the principle of estoppel.[45] On the other hand, where a partner has retired from the firm, but permits his name to remain in the style of the firm and to be used for the benefit of the other partners, he is liable [41] In re Samuels, 215 Fed. 845, 132 C. C. A. 187, reversing In re Samuels & Lesser (D. C.) 207 Fed. 195, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

[42] In re Clark, 111 Fed. 893, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96. This decision was reversed in Rush v. Lake, 122 Fed. 561, 58 C. C. A. 447, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455, but on the evidence and not on the proposition of law laid down. And see In re Kaplan, 234 Fed. 866, 148 C. C. A. 464, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104.

[43] Talcott v. Dudley, 5 Ill. (4 Scam.) 427.

[44] White v. Farnham, 99 Me. 100, 58 Atl. 425, 105 Am. St. Rep. 261.

[45] Moore v. Walton, 9 N. B. R. 402, Fed. Cas No. 9,779; In re Murray, 13 Fed. 530. In the case last cited, there was a petition in bankruptcy against a partnership conducting the business of private bankers. The question was as to the liability of certain of the respondents to be adjudged bankrupt with the rest. The court said that, even if, by failing publicly to disclaim a printed statement that they were directors of the bank, and by allowing their neighbors to believe that they were in some manner interested in the bank, the respondents would be estopped from denying their liability to those who trusted the bank in reliance upon their supposed connection with it, yet a resort to a court of bankruptcy would not be proper. For, to declare such parties bankrupt would render them liable not only to those actually deceived, but to all who had claims against the bank, whether they were deceived or not; and those who were actually deceived had a perfect remedy in the state courts. And see, supra, § 111.

to a person who takes notes of the new firm, or gives it credit, in ignorance of the dissolution and in reliance on the name of the retiring partner; and on the petition of such creditors for an adjudication of bankruptcy against the firm, the retiring partner will be made bankrupt with the others.[46] But "bankruptcy, like the death of a partner, dissolves the partnership, and as it is a public, notorious proceeding, all creditors are bound to take notice of it, and no further notice need be given. The publication of bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings is legal notice to all persons, by which they are bound." Consequently, where a member of a firm withdraws and subsequently becomes insolvent, and receives his discharge in insolvency (or bankruptcy), a creditor of the firm cannot maintain an action against him on a debt incurred by the firm subsequent to his insolvency, although, at the time of his withdrawal, no notice was given to the creditor, who was then also a creditor of the firm.[47]

§ 113. Acts of Bankruptcy by Partners.—In considering the commission of acts of bankruptcy on which an involuntary petition against a partnership may be founded, it is necessary to discriminate between the acts of the firm and the acts of the partners. Under the bankruptcy law, a partnership is so far a "person" or entity that it can commit an act of bankruptcy and be adjudged bankrupt, irrespective of any adjudication of the individual partners as bankrupts; and the act of the firm does not necessarily imply the concurrence of all the partners. Consequently, when an act of bankruptcy has been committed by an insolvent firm, as such, it may be made bankrupt on the petition of its creditors, although some of the partners have not committed, nor participated in committing, any act upon which they, as individuals, could be adjudged bankrupt. Thus, where the liquidating partner makes a general assignment of the firm's property for the benefit of its creditors, the other partner making no attempt to prevent such assignment, it is an act of bankruptcy upon which the firm as such may be adjudged bankrupt. Moreover, in such a case, the liquidating partner may also be adjudged bankrupt, as an individual, since the assignment tends to hinder, delay, and defraud his individual creditors. But no adjudication can be made against a partner who has not committed, nor participated in committing, any of the acts specified in the statute as acts of bankruptcy, although, if a petition is filed against the firm, he is within the jurisdiction of the court, and is a proper party to the proceedings and entitled to the rights of a party.[48] So also, where a petition in bankruptcy is filed by one member of a firm against the firm and his partners, it is involuntary in so far as it affects the non-consenting partners, and they cannot, as individuals, be adjudged bankrupts, unless it is alleged and shown that they personally have committed acts of bankruptcy within four months before the petition was filed.[49] Pursuing the distinction between the acts of the firm and of the partners one step further, it has been held that a conveyance by one partner of his individual property, although an act of bankruptcy as against him, will not sustain a proceeding in bankruptcy against the firm, even though such conveyance was made with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud firm creditors, or with a view to give a preference to a firm creditor. In such case, the proceedings must be against such partner alone, not against the firm.[50] But where the members of a firm jointly owning real estate convey or incumber the same, without consideration, in fraud of the creditors of the firm, such transaction is an act of bankruptcy by the firm.[51] And when a firm is insolvent, it is an act of bankruptcy for a member thereof to suffer the partnership property to be taken on legal process, with intent to prefer a creditor of the firm.[52] The taking of firm property, when the firm is insolvent, to pay a debt not a debt of the firm, is an act of bankruptcy, although each of the partners may be liable therefor.[53] A sale by one partner to his copartner when the firm is insolvent and on the eve of bankruptcy is presumptively fraudulent as to firm creditors, the effect of such transfer being to change the order of payment and prefer private creditors to partnership creditors, and the court should set it aside and distribute the property as firm property.[54] But the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by one partner against his copartners is not [48] The foregoing principles were settled in the important case of Chemical Nat. Bank v. Meyer, 92 Fed. 896, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565, affirmed on appeal in Re Meyer (C. C. A.) 98 Fed. 976, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. Compare Ex parte Galbraith, Fed. Cas. No. 5,187; Fisher v. Currier, Fed. Cas. No. 4,818. See In re Kobre (D. C.) 224 Fed. 106, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

[46] In re Krueger, 2 Low. 66, 5 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 7,941. See also Lyon v. Johnson, 28 Conn. 1; Dickinson v. Dickinson, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 321.

[47] Eustis v. Bolles, 146 Mass. 413, 16 N. E. 286, 4 Am. St. Rep. 327.

[49] In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[50] Hartman v. John Peters & Co., 146 Fed. 82, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 61; Mills v. J. H. Fisher & Co., 159 Fed. 897, 87 C. C. A. 77, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Redmond, 9 N. B. R. 408, Fed. Cas. No. 11,632. But one member of a firm which is insolvent and without assets, who applies his whole separate estate to the payment of a creditor of the firm, thereby gives such creditor a preference over others of the same class, and commits an act of bankruptcy which may be made the basis of a petition against him individually. Mills v. J. H. Fisher & Co., supra.

[51] Lastrapes v. Blanc, 3 Woods, 134, Fed. Cas. No. 8,100.

[52] In re Black. 2 Ben. 196, 1 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 1,457.

[53] In re Matot, 16 N. B. R. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 9,282.

[54] In re Cook, 3 Biss. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 3,150; Collins v. Hood, 4 McLean, 186, Fed. Cas. No. 3,015.

an act of bankruptcy on the part of the firm.[55] And a written admission by one of the three partners composing a firm, that the firm is unable to pay its debts and is willing on that ground to be adjudged a bankrupt, is not an act of the partnership, and is therefore insufficient to support an adjudication against the opposition of the other partners.[56]

It should also be remarked that an assignment by a partnership for the benefit of its creditors, purporting to transfer all the property of the firm, is a "general" assignment, such as to constitute an act of bankruptcy by the firm and on which the firm may be adjudged bankrupt, although, considered as an assignment by the individual partners, it would be but partial, by reason of not including their separate property.[57] So, a voluntary assignment of all the property and assets of a firm operating a private bank constitutes an act of bankruptcy, though done by one of the partners and not participated in by the other.[58] And where a partnership and the individuals composing it make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the act of bankruptcy is committed by all.[59]

§ 114. Same; Insolvency of Firm and of Partners.—Following out the "entity" doctrine of partnership under the bankruptcy law, some of the courts have held that, in so far as insolvency is necessary to constitute an act of bankruptcy and to warrant an adjudication, it is enough to allege and show the insolvency of the firm, without inquiry into the solvency of the individual partners.[60] But this doctrine is opposed to the weight of authority. It is more generally held that, insolvency being a necessary element of the particular act of bankruptcy charged, the firm cannot be adjudged bankrupt unless all its members are also shown to be insolvent, or that it is not enough to show that the assets of the firm, as such, are insufficient to pay its debts, if some or all of the partners, residing within the jurisdiction, are personally solvent.[61] In one

[55] In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[56] In re Wellesley (D. C.) 252 Fed. 854, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412.

[57] In re Meyer (C. C. A.) 98 Fed. 976, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. And see Moss Nat. Bank v. Arend, 146 Fed. 351, 76 C. C. A. 629, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 867.

[58] Yungbluth v. Slipper (C. C. A.) 185 Fed. 773, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

[59] Green River Deposit Bank v. Craig, 110 Fed. 137, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381.

[60] In re Everybody's Grocery & Meat Market, 173 Fed. 492, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 925; In re McMurtrey & Smith, 142 Fed. 853, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427; In re Bertenshaw, 157 Fed. 363, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Solomon & Carvel, 163 Fed. 140, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488; In re Morgan & Williams, 184 Fed. 938, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 861; Peterson v. Peregoy & Moore Co., 180 Iowa, 325, 163 N. W. 224.

[61] Vaccaro v. Security Bank, 103 Fed. 436, 43 C. C. A. 279, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474; Tumlin v. Bryan, 165 Fed. 166, 91 C. C. A. 200, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 960, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 319; In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; Washington Cotton Co. v. Morgan, 192 Fed. 310, 112 C. C. A. 568, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638; In re Perley & Hays, 138 Fed. 927, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; Davis v. Stevens, 104 Fed. 235, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763; Francis v. McNeal, 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; of the cases so holding it was said: "A partnership cannot be adjudged a bankrupt in an involuntary proceeding unless it has committed an act of bankruptcy. If the act charged be one involving insolvency, since every partner is liable in solido for all the partnership debts, the adjudication against the partnership must be based on allegations and proofs that the assets of its members, in excess of their individual debts, plus the assets of the partnership, are insufficient to pay the partnership debts. Otherwise there is no partnership insolvency, notwithstanding the entity doctrine. That doctrine furnishes a direct proceeding against the partnership as a legal entity, but it does not authorize an adjudication of bankruptcy against a partnership, where the act of bankruptcy charged is one involving insolvency, unless, as above stated, it is shown that there is an insufficiency of partnership and individual assets to pay the partnership debts. If a partnership is insolvent in the sense above explained, all the assets of the partnership and its members are needed for the proper winding up of the partnership affairs." [62]

§ 115. Involuntary Proceedings Against Firm.—It is not necessary that involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy against a firm should be instituted by its creditors. A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to adjudge a partnership bankrupt on the petition of one of its members and against the objection of the others.[63] But when involuntary proceedings are instituted against a partnership, all the partners must be joined as parties defendant. A firm cannot be adjudged bankrupt in a proceeding to which one of its members is not a party; and the petition cannot be amended by adding a new party after all the testimony has been taken and the case is on hearing before the court.[64] Further, an adjudication of bankruptcy against a firm must be made in one proceeding and on one petition. The adjudication of one member of a firm in one proceeding, and of the remaining member or members of it in a separate proceeding, with such effect as to bring the firm into bankruptcy, is a thing not contemplated by the statute.[65] For similar reasons, distinct firms, consisting of three persons, one of whom was a partner in both, cannot be joined in one proceeding, though one was the successor affirmed, 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029, L. R. A. 1915E, 706, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; Abbott v. Anderson, 265 Ill. 285, 106 N. E. 782, L. R. A. 1915F, 668, Ann. Cas. 1916A, 741; In re Samuels, 215 Fed. 845, 132 C. C. A. 187.

[62] Francis v. McNeal, 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555, affirmed, 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029, L. R. A. 1915E, 706, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

[63] In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[64] In re Pitt, 8 Ben. 389, 14 N. B. R. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 11,188.

[65] In re Plumb, 9 Ben. 279, 17 N. B. R. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 11,231. Compare In re Kelley, 19 N. B. R. 326, Fed. Cas. No. 7,656.

of the other and undertook to pay its debts.[66] When the requisite number of creditors join in a petition against a firm, it is not necessary that they should all be creditors of the partnership, if they are creditors of the partners.[67] In a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against a firm it is not sufficient merely to allege that "the partnership is insolvent," but there must also be an averment as to the insolvency of each of the partners.[68]

§ 116. Effect of Dissolution of Firm.—Although a partnership has been dissolved by mutual consent, yet if the members continue to treat each other as partners after the alleged dissolution, and to act as such in their business transactions with third parties, a petition in bankruptcy may be filed against the firm as if there had been no dissolution.[69] Further, under the act of 1867, it was held that a formal dissolution of a partnership would not prevent the bankruptcy court from taking jurisdiction of proceedings against the firm so long as any unfinished business, debts, credits, or assets remained.[70] This rule has been formally enacted in the present bankruptcy statute, which declares that a partnership may be adjudged bankrupt "during the continuance of the partnership business, or after its dissolution and before the final settlement thereof."[71] And the courts have decided that there can be no final settlement of the affairs of a firm until its debts are paid or in some other way extinguished; and consequently an adjudication may be made upon the voluntary petition of the partners, or in involuntary proceedings against them, when it appears that there are any firm debts remaining unsatisfied, although the assets of the firm have been entirely consumed, and although it has long since ceased to do business and has been dissolved by the partners.[72] But it has been held that the "continuance" of a partnership, within the meaning of the act, is its actual

[66] In re Wallace, 12 N. B. R. 191, Fed. Cas. No. 17,095.

[67] In re Matot, 16 N. B. R. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 9,282.

[68] In re Blair, 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588. And see, supra, § 114.

[69] In re McFarland, 10 N. B. R. 381, Fed. Cas. No. 8,788; In re Tomes, 19 N. B. R. 36, Fed. Cas. No. 14,084.

[70] In re Crockett, 2 Ben. 514, 2 N. B. R. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,402; In re Noonan, 3 Biss. 491, 10 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 10,292; In re Williams, 1 Low. 406, 3 N. B. R. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 17,703; Hunt v. Pooke, 5 N. B. R. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 6,896; In re Gorham, 9 Biss. 23, 18 N. B. R. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 5,624. Compare (under the act of 1841) Ex parte Hartz, Fed. Cas. No. 6,174.

[71] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5a. But a partnership cannot be adjudged bankrupt after its dissolution, even under § 5a of the Bankruptcy Act, so long as there is a solvent former partner. In re Young (D. C.) 223 Fed. 659, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

[72] Holmes v. Baker & Hamilton, 160 Fed. 922, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Hirsch, 97 Fed. 571, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Levy, 95 Fed. 812; In re Webster, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 54. Where an agreement that the accounts of a firm should be used to pay firm debts was not incorporated in a partnership dis-status as a firm, as distinguished from a status created by estoppel against a partner, and it is therefore essential that the partnership should exist as such, or that its affairs should be still unsettled at the time of the filing of a petition, in order to subject it to adjudication. And further, although the affairs of a partnership are "unsettled," so as to subject it to adjudication, so long as the partnership debts are unpaid, yet debts which are binding on partners only by way of estoppel as to creditors without notice of dissolution, are not firm debts in this sense.[73]

§ 117. Dissolution of Firm by Death of Partner.—As to the power to make an adjudication of bankruptcy in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved by the death of one of its members, the authorities are not in agreement. Clearly, a court of bankruptcy can have no jurisdiction to adjudge a dead man bankrupt, nor to administer upon his estate, whether solvent or insolvent. And in at least one case it has been held that where one partner, on his voluntary petition, obtained an adjudication against a firm of which he had been a member, but which had been dissolved by the death of his copartner, the adjudication was void.[74] But the preponderance of judicial opinion appears to be that the surviving partner may file his petition, and that, if it is properly framed for that purpose, the court may adjudge him bankrupt both as an individual and also in his capacity as surviving partner; that the same decree may be made upon an involuntary petition, when the respondent has committed an act of bankruptcy in administering the partnership assets; and that, under such an adjudication, the court will have jurisdiction of the partnership property which remains in the hands of the surviving partner, as well as of his individual estate,[75] though it will not attempt to take from the custody and control of the executor of the deceased partner the individual estate of the latter, nor any of the partnership assets which may have been committed to the hands of solution agreement, an outgoing partner is not entitled to enforce such provision as against partnership creditors in bankruptcy. In re Wilson, 194 Fed. 564, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 867.

[73] In re Pinson & Co., 180 Fed. 787, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804.

[74] In re Temple, 4 Sawy. 92, 17 N. B. R. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 13,825. In this case, it was said: "Although partners are deemed to continue to be such quoad creditors, notwithstanding a formal dissolution inter sese, where there are joint assets and joint creditors, it has never been held that a partnership dissolved by the death of one of the members can be treated as still subsisting so as to be subject to the provisions of the bankruptcy law. The status of a deceased person cannot be passed upon by a bankruptcy court, nor has he any property the title to which can vest in an assignee appointed in a proceeding by or against the surviving partner."

[75] In re Coe, 157 Fed. 308, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618; In re Stevens, 1 Sawy. 397, 5 N. B. R. 112, Fed. Cas. No. 13,393; Briswalter v. Long, 7 Sawy. 74, 14 Fed. 153. Contra, In re Evans, 161 Fed. 590, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406.

such executor for administration.[76] Though a deceased partner's interest in a partnership claim vests in the surviving partner, it does not pass to the latter's trustee in bankruptcy, so that the surviving partner can maintain an action thereon in his own name.[77] But a surviving partner, after the adjudication, has no power to consent to an allowance to the widow and children of the deceased partner out of the assets of the firm prior to the payment of the firm debts.[78] And the trustee in bankruptcy of the surviving partner is not entitled, as against judgment creditors of the latter suing on firm obligations, to a surplus arising from a foreclosure against firm property.[79] Where a partner carries on business with the consent of the personal representatives of the deceased partner, upon the surviving partner being adjudged bankrupt, there is no priority of payment between debts contracted before, and those contracted after, the death of the partner.[80]

§ 118. Bankruptcy of Firm Without Adjudication of Any Partner. —It is clear beyond question, from the explicit terms of the present bankruptcy act, that a partnership, as such, may be adjudged bankrupt without any adjudication being made against any one of the members of the firm. But in such a case, is the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy restricted to the partnership property, or may it be extended to the individual estates of the partners? In case of an insufficiency of assets of the partnership, may the creditors work out their claims against the separate estates of the partners through the instrumentality of the trustee in bankruptcy of the firm, or are they left to their ordinary remedies at law? These questions are not yet fully settled. But there is a decision of the Supreme Court that an individual partner who has not been adjudged a bankrupt may be required to turn over his separate estate for administration to the trustee in bankruptcy of the firm, where the partnership and individual estates together are not enough [76] In re Daggett, 8 N. B. R. 287, Fed. Cas. No. 3,535, affirmed, 3 Dill. 83, 8 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 3,536; French v. Grenet, 57 Tex. 273. But compare Hewitt v. Hayes, 204 Mass. 586, 90 N. E. 985, 27 L. R. A. (N. S.) 154, where it was held that the trustee in bankruptcy of a surviving partner may sue the executors of the deceased partner for whatever firm assets and property have come into their hands; and that, where the executors of a deceased partner acted individually under a power of attorney given by the surviving partner, and they deposited in a bank in their names, "for the benefit of whom it may concern," funds made up of cash on hand belonging to the firm and of sums belonging to the firm as proceeds of its property, or as commissions due to it, or otherwise, the trustee in bankruptcy of the surviving partner was entitled to the fund.

[77] McCandless v. Hadden, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 186.

[78] In re F. Dobert & Son, 165 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634.

[79] Moses v. Pond, 32 Misc. Rep. 406, 66 N. Y. Supp. 600.

[80] In re Mills, 11 N. B. R. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 9,611.

to pay the partnership debts, and especially where such partner has not objected that he should have been put into bankruptcy along with the firm.[81] Likewise, some of the inferior federal courts have held that the adjudication of a partnership as a bankrupt draws to the court of bankruptcy for administration the individual estates of the partners, although they, personally and individually, are not adjudged bankrupts, and that the court may compel any partner to transfer his individual property to the trustee.[82] Against these decisions may be placed a very able opinion of the circuit court of appeals in the eighth circuit, in which it was held that, in the case supposed, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to order the surrender of his separate property by a partner who has not been adjudged bankrupt and who is not shown to be insolvent.[83] To a certain extent, the latest decisions on the point attempt to reconcile these contrary views, in holding that the property of a solvent partner is not drawn into the administration, where only the firm is adjudged bankrupt, but that if the adjudication is based upon or involves the insolvency of the firm (which necessarily implies the insolvency of each of the partners as well), then even unadjudicated partners may be compelled to turn over their separate estates to the trustee. "In our opinion," says the circuit court of appeals in the third circuit, "the subdivisions of section 5 preceding subdivision 'h' mean that a partnership is a legal entity that may be adjudged a bankrupt, irrespective of an adjudication against any of its members; that it may be so adjudged either in a voluntary or an involuntary proceeding; that in an involuntary proceeding, where the act of bankruptcy charged does not involve insolvency of the partnership, and where there is an adjudication against the partnership only, probably nothing is involved but partnership assets; that in an involuntary proceeding, where the act of bankruptcy charged is one that does involve insolvency of the partnership, there can be no adjudication against the partnership unless it and all its members are insolvent; and that in such a case, though the adjudication be against the partnership only, or against the partnership

[81] Francis v. McNeal, 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029, L. R. A. 1915E, 706, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244, affirming 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[82] Vaccaro v. Security Bank, 103 Fed. 436, 43 C. C. A. 279, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474; Armstrong v. Fisher, 224 Fed. 97, 139 C. C. A. 653, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; In re Hansley & Adams (D. C.) 228 Fed. 564, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Ft. Pitt Coal & Coke Co. v. Diser, 239 Fed. 443, 152 C. C. A. 321, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; In re Lattimer (D. C.) 174 Fed. 824, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re Stokes (D. C.) 106 Fed. 312, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262.

[83] In re Bertenshaw, 157 Fed. 363, 85 C. C. A. 61, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577. But this decision was spoken of with disapproval by the Supreme Court in Francis v. McNeal, 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029, L. R. A. 1915E, 706, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

and some, but not all, of its members, the estates of all the members are drawn into the proceeding for administration." [84]

§ 119. Voluntary Petition by One or More Partners.—Under the bankruptcy act of 1841, it was held that a decree in bankruptcy could not be rendered against a firm on a voluntary application therefor, unless all the partners united in the petition.[85] But under the act of 1867, the rule prevailed that a partnership might be adjudged bankrupt on the voluntary petition of one or more of the partners,[86] provided that those who did not join in the petition were either formally made parties to the proceeding or given an opportunity to contest the adjudication, or assented to the decree of bankruptcy.[87] It was held, in fact, that the right of one partner to have the firm adjudged bankrupt was co-extensive with the right of the firm creditors or of another partner.[88] The present statute and the general orders in bankruptcy promulgated by the Supreme Court contemplate the adjudication of a partnership as such (not merely of the individual petitioner) upon a voluntary application by one or more members of the firm without the joinder of the rest. But it is provided that "any member of a partnership who refuses to join in a petition to have the partnership declared bankrupt shall be entitled to resist the prayer of the petition in the same manner as if the petition had been filed by a creditor of the partnership, and notice of the filing of the petition shall be given to him in the same manner as provided by law and by these rules in the case of a debtor petitioned against; and he shall have the right to appear at the time fixed by the court for the hearing of the petition, and to make proof, if he can, that the partnership is not insolvent or has not committed an act of bankruptcy, and to make all defenses which any debtor proceeded against is entitled to make by the provisions of the act; and in case an adjudication of bankruptcy is made upon the petition, such partner shall be required to file a schedule of his debts and an inventory of his property in the same manner as is required by the act in cases of debtors against whom adjudication of bankruptcy shall be made." [89]

[84] Francis v. McNeal, 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555, affirmed 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029; Menke v. Sunderman (C. C. A.) 186 Fed. 486.

[85] Ex parte Hartz, Fed. Cas. No. 6,174.

[86] In re Smith, 16 Fed. 465; In re Foster, 3 Ben. 386, 3 N. B. R. 236, Fed. Cas. No. 4,962; In re Mitchell, 3 N. B. R. 441, Fed. Cas. No. 9,656; In re Stowers, 1 Low. 528, Fed. Cas. No. 13,516.

[87] In re Lewis, 2 Ben. 96, 1 N. B. R. 239, Fed. Cas. No. 8,311; In re Crockett, 2 Ben. 514, 2 N. B. R. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,402; In re Moore, 5 Biss. 79, Fed. Cas. No. 9,750.

[88] In re Gorham, 9 Biss. 23, 18 N. B. R. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 5,624.

[89] General Order No. 8. And see In re

Hence it appears that, when some of the members of a partnership file their petition in bankruptcy asking for an adjudication against the firm, the other partners not joining, the proceeding is, in its inception, a voluntary proceeding in bankruptcy, and it will remain so in its entirety unless the other partners, on due notice, dissent from the petition and contest the adjudication, in which case the proceeding becomes, as to those partners, an involuntary one.[90] In consequence of the original voluntary nature of the proceeding, it is not necessary that the petitioning partner should allege acts of bankruptcy to have been committed by the firm, though the absence of such acts will be a defense to the partners who do not join.[91] And, as it is expressly provided in the general order, the dissenting partner may show that the firm is not insolvent.[92]

Where one of the partners files his petition in bankruptcy, with the object of obtaining a discharge from debts of the firm as well as his individual debts, the petition should set forth the names of the partners and pray for a discharge from partnership debts, the schedules should list both the petitioner's individual property and debts and the property and debts of the firm, notices to creditors should inform them that firm creditors are affected and that the bankrupt seeks a discharge from their debts, and notice of the filing of the petition and of creditors' meetings should be sent to the partners who have not joined.[93] Notice to the Junck & Balthazard, 169 Fed. 481, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298; In re Hansley & Adams (D. C.) 228 Fed. 564, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[90] In re Junck & Balthazard, 169 Fed. 481, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298; In re Carleton, 131 Fed. 146, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475; In re Murray, 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601. In the case last cited it was also held that where a petition in bankruptcy is filed by certain of the members of a partnership, praying an adjudication against the firm and averring that the partner who has not joined in the petition is not a resident of the district and that his residence is unknown to the petitioners, if the judge of the court of the bankruptcy is absent from the district, or the division of the district in which the petition is filed, at the time of its filing, the clerk should forthwith refer the case to the proper referee; but that if partners who did not join in the petition shall, upon notice, enter their appearance and contest the adjudication of the firm, the referee cannot act upon the petition (it being then an involuntary case), but must certify the case to the judge, before whom the issue will be heard and determined. See also In re Wilson, 2 Low. 453, 13 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 17,784. If the nonjoining partner afterwards comes in and confesses himself a bankrupt, and is so adjudged, it is a case of involuntary bankruptcy. Metsker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 66, 2 Sup. Ct. 351, 27 L. Ed. 654.

[91] In re Junck & Balthazard, 169 Fed. 481, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298; In re Noonan, 3 Biss. 491, 10 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 10,292. But compare In re Forbes, 128 Fed. 137, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787.

[92] In re Fowler, 1 Low. 161, 1 N. B. R. 680, Fed. Cas. No. 4,998.

[93] In re Laughlin, 96 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Hartman, 96 Fed. 593, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65. If the petition and schedule as originally filed do not conform to these requirements, they should be amended before an adjudication is made. If adjudication has already passed, it may be set aside, and partners not joining is absolutely essential to any adjudication against the firm as such. No adjudication can be made until the non-joining members of the firm have had due notice of the filing of the petition and a proper opportunity to defend against the same; or, if an adjudication has been made without such notice, it will be vacated and set aside on motion.[94] If the partners who have not joined in the petition can be found, whether within the district or without it, personal service of such notice must be made upon them. But if personal service cannot be had, then, upon the filing of an affidavit showing the fact, the court will order publication of the notice in the same manner as in equity cases.[95]

A petition by a partner of a dissolved firm against his copartners will be dismissed where it appears that the firm was dissolved by judicial decree, and all its assets transferred to a receiver.[96] It should also be remarked that where one of the partners files his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, as an individual, and does not seek an adjudication against the firm nor a release from firm debts, the proceeding cannot be turned into a partnership proceeding by the voluntary joinder therein of the other partners.[97] And if the bankrupt lists only his individual leave granted to the petitioner to amend, and thereupon an adjudication should be again entered and the case proceeded with de novo. Idem.

[94] In re Altman, 95 Fed. 263, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407; In re Murray, 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Russel, 97 Fed. 32, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91; In re Gorham, 9 Biss. 23, 18 N. B. R. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 5,624. Where certain of the members of a partnership file their voluntary petition in bankruptcy, asking for an adjudication of the firm, but the other partners do not join and are not notified of the proceedings, the defect is not cured by filing in court, after the adjudication, a paper purporting to embody the consent of the non-joining partners, but which is unverified, qualified in its terms, and signed only by their attorneys. In re Altman, 95 Fed. 263, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407.

[95] In re Murray, 96 Fed. 600, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601. Under the act of 1867, it was held that there was no jurisdiction over the firm, as such, if the non-joining partners did not reside or have their places of business within the judicial district, or if service of the notice was made upon such a partner beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the court. Isett v. Stuart, 80 Ill. 404, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194, 16 N. B. R. 191; In re Martin, 6 Ben. 20, Fed. Cas. No. 9,150; In re Prankard, 1 N. B. R. 297, Fed. Cas. No. 11,366. But this objection is now met by the provision of the present act that "the court of bankruptcy which has jurisdiction of one of the partners may have jurisdiction of all the partners and of the administration of the partnership and individual property." Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5c. But a firm having failed more than eight years before a member thereof petitioned individually to be adjudged a bankrupt, and more than nine years before the other partner was cited, without any proof of bankruptcy, a rule on the latter to show cause why he and the partnership should not be adjudged bankrupt was held properly discharged. Royston v. Weis, 112 Fed. 962, 50 C. C. A. 638, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584.

[96] In re Oehninger, 8 Ben. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 10,441; Hopkins v. Carpenter, 18 N. B. R. 339, Fed. Cas. No. 6,686. Compare In re Hathorn, 2 Woods, 37, Fed. Cas. No. 6,214.

[97] In re Boylan, 1 Ben. 266, 1 N. B. R. 2, Fed. Cas. No. 1,757. See In re Lewis, debts and assets, and does not seek an adjudication of the partnership, nor cause notice to be given to his co-partners or to the creditors of the firm, the discharge which he may receive will not release him from partnership debts.[98] But a firm may be declared bankrupt although one of its members has already been adjudicated in involuntary proceedings against him by creditors,[99] and conversely, the fact that a partnership has been adjudicated bankrupt, and the partners have been denied a discharge in such proceedings, does not preclude one of the partners from filing an individual petition, although he schedules the same debts and the same assets.[100]

§ 120. Individual Bankruptcy of One or More Partners.—Since in the contemplation of the statute, a partnership is a distinct entity, its bankruptcy must be conditioned upon a petition specifically directed against it, alleging an act of bankruptcy in which it is expressly involved, and resulting in an adjudication against the partnership itself, irrespective of and in addition to any that may be made against the individual members, and even simultaneous proceedings against all the individual members of the firm do not necessarily bring the partnership itself into court so as to authorize an amendment calling for an adjudication against it.[101] And upon a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against one person as an individual, no adjudication can be made against other persons who were in partnership with him, even though the latter voluntarily come in and consent to be adjudged bankrupts. If such persons desire to take the benefit of the act, they must file their individual petitions, deposit the fees required, and proceed strictly according to law.[102] And although a voluntary petitioner in bankruptcy may be a member of a firm, he may apply for adjudication simply in his private capacity, and without seeking to bring the partnership into bankruptcy. But it is his duty in such a case to include in his schedule not merely his individual assets, but also his interest in the partner-

2 Ben. 96, 1 N. B. R. 239, Fed. Cas. No. 8,311. Where a petition in bankruptcy is signed in the firm name by a partner who has purchased the other partner's interest, it will be regarded as instituted by him individually doing business in the firm name. In re Baker & Edwards, (D. C.) 224 Fed. 611, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469.

[98] In re Little, 2 Ben. 186, Fed. Cas. No. 8,390; In re Noonan, 3 Biss. 49, Fed. Cas. No. 10,292; Hudgins v. Lane, 2 Hughes, 361, Fed. Cas. No. 6,827; In re Plumb, 9 Ben. 279, Fed. Cas. No. 11,231.

[99] Hunt v. Pooke, 5 N. B. R. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 6,986.

[100] In re Feigenbaum, 151 Fed. 508, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339.

[101] In re Mercur, 116 Fed. 655, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275; affirmed, 122 Fed. 384, 58 C. C. A. 472, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; In re Bertenshaw, 157 Fed. 363, 85 C. C. A. 61, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577, and numerous cases cited. And see Lacey v. Cowan, 162 Ala. 546, 50 South. 281.

[102] Mahoney v. Ward, 100 Fed. 278, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; Lacey v. Cowan, 162 Ala. 546, 50 South. 281.

ship and its property, since even his private creditors may have an ultimate or reversionary right in the assets of the firm.[103] But the question arises whether a partner thus filing his individual petition, and not asking nor obtaining an adjudication of the firm, can receive a discharge which will release him from his responsibility for the debts of the partnership as well as from his private debts. The earlier cases generally held that this could not be done, although some of the judges saw no obstacle to the granting of such a discharge in cases where there were no partnership assets to be administered.[104] But the present statute provides a special rule for the administration of firm property in cases where one or more of the partners become bankrupt, without an adjudication against the others or against the firm. And in view of this rule, the modern cases appear to agree that if the bankrupt, being a member of a partnership which is not in bankruptcy, seeks a discharge from both individual and firm debts, the creditors of the firm may prove their debts against the bankrupt and cause his interest in the firm property to be subjected to the payment thereof; and if a proper foundation is laid in the pleadings and in the notices to creditors, the discharge granted to the bankrupt will release him from both classes of debts.[105] But where one member of a firm thus files his separate petition, with the object of obtaining a discharge from the debts of the firm as well as from his private obligations, the petition should set forth the names of the partners and pray for a discharge from partnership debts, the schedules should list both the petitioner's individual property and debts and the assets and debts of the firm, notices to creditors should [103] In re Brick, 4 Fed. 804; Ex parte Norcross, Fed. Cas. No. 10,293. The firm property may be administered on the bankruptcy of the sole surviving partner, both individually and as sole surviving partner. In re Stringer, 253 Fed. 352, 165 C. C. A. 134, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

[104] Hudgins v. Lane, 2 Hughes, 361, 11 N. B. R. 462, Fed. Cas. No. 6,827; In re Little, 2 Ben. 186, 1 N. B. R. 341, Fed. Cas. No. 8,390; In re Noonan, 3 Biss. 491, 10 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 10,292; In re Winkens, 2 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 17,875; In re Marks, Fed. Cas. No. 9,094; In re Abbe, 2 N. B. R. 75, Fed. Cas. No. 4; Crompton v. Conkling, 15 N. B. R. 417, Fed. Cas. No. 3,408; West Philadelphia Bank v. Gerry, 106 N. Y. 467, 13 N. E. 453. One of the later cases has held that partners are not entitled to a discharge in bankruptcy affecting the debts of the firm, when the partnership, as such, is not in bankruptcy, but only the individual partners on their separate voluntary petitions, and when there is evidence of the existence of firm assets not brought into the bankruptcy, or circumstances justifying the inference that there has been a fraudulent concealment of partnership assets. In re Meyers, 96 Fed. 408, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707.

[105] In re Laughlin, 96 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re McFaun, 96 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Hartman, 96 Fed. 593, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65; In re Russel, 97 Fed. 32, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91; In re Wilcox, 94 Fed. 84, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117. See also In re Frear, 2 Ben. 467, 1 N. B. R. 660, Fed. Cas. No. 5,074.

inform them that firm creditors are affected and that the bankrupt seeks a discharge from their debts, and notice of the filing of the petition and of creditors' meetings should be sent to the other partners.[106] Failing compliance with these requirements, the petitioner's responsibility for the firm debts will not be affected, although, on a seasonable application by the bankrupt, the adjudication may be set aside, and leave granted him to file an amended petition, and thereupon an adjudication may again be entered and the case proceeded with de novo.[107]

The statutory rule for the distribution of assets as between individual and firm creditors—that partnership property goes to firm creditors, and separate property to individual creditors, and that only the surplus of either estate is available to creditors of the other class—applies not only to the case of the adjudication of the partnership as such, but also to the case where one member of the firm is adjudged bankrupt in his individual capacity; and creditors of the firm will not be entitled to receive dividends out of the bankrupt's separate estate until his individual creditors have been paid in full; and this rule prevails notwithstanding the fact that there are no partnership assets.[108]

Where a partnership is dissolved, and one of the partners sells his interest to his copartner, and the latter is adjudged a bankrupt, creditors of the firm may, as against the bankrupt's individual creditors, have the firm property applied to the payment of their debts in the settlement of the bankrupt's estate.[109]

§ 121. Effect of Adjudication of One or More Partners.—We have now to consider the effect on the firm and its assets of an adjudication [106] In re Hartman, 96 Fed. 593, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 65; In re Russel, 97 Fed. 32, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91; In re McFaun, 96 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

[107] In re McFaun, 96 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

[108] In re Wilcox, 94 Fed. 84, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Morse, 13 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 9,854. Compare In re Goedde, 6 N. B. R. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 5,500. Where a partnership has been dissolved by decree of a state court, and its affairs wound up and all its assets distributed to its creditors, and no partner remains solvent, and afterwards one of the partners is adjudged bankrupt in his individual capacity, creditors of the firm who proved their claims and received the dividend in the state court, and who do not offer to surrender the same, are not entitled to participate in the distribution of the bankrupt's estate, as to the residue of their debts, until all his individual creditors have been paid in full. In re Mills, 95 Fed. 269, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667. If one member of a firm is adjudged bankrupt, but not the other partners of the firm, a joint creditor may prove against the separate estate of the bankrupt. He cannot compete with the separate creditors in the distribution of separate assets, but he will receive dividends from any joint assets which the trustee may obtain, and from any surplus of the separate assets after the separate debts are paid. Wilkins v. Davis, 2 Low. 511, 15 N. B. R. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 17,664.

[109] In re Young (D. C.) 223 Fed. 659, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; In re Suprenant (D. C.) 217 Fed. 470, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454. But compare In re Zartman (D. C.) 242 Fed. 595, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544.

in bankruptcy passed against one or more of the partners individually, the firm itself not being in bankruptcy. And first, it is held that where all the members of a firm are adjudged bankrupts, but there has been no adjudication against the firm as such, the trustee appointed in the individual cases has no authority to reclaim or interfere with the assets of the firm, notwithstanding that all the cases were instituted at the same time by the same creditors, and the same trustee was appointed for all the partners.[110] But practical difficulties arise in the case of the bankruptcy of some, but not all, of the members of a firm, in view of the fact that the firm's surplus of assets over liabilities may constitute a secondary fund for the satisfaction of individual creditors of the bankrupts. It is the rule that the bankruptcy of one member of a firm will ipso facto dissolve the partnership.[111] And under the earlier bankruptcy laws it was generally held (following the English rule) that an adjudication against one partner, the firm itself not being in bankruptcy, would have the effect of making the trustee in bankruptcy of the bankrupt partner a joint owner or tenant in common of the partnership property with the remaining partners.[112] They must join as plaintiffs in any action for the recovery of partnership property,[113] and the trustee in bankruptcy alone could not maintain a suit to set aside a preference or to recover money or other property alleged to have been paid away or transferred in fraud of the creditors of the firm.[114] In this state of affairs, neither of the joint owners or tenants in common would be exclusively entitled to the possession and administration of the entire property of the partnership. Only one of the partners being adjudged bankrupt, his trustee would take only his private property and his interest in the assets of the firm, but would have no superior right to the control of the partnership estate for the purpose of ascertaining and segregating that interest.[115] On the other hand, the partner who [110] In re Mercur, 122 Fed. 384, 58 C. C. A. 472, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505, affirming 116 Fed. 655, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275; Ludowici Roofing Tile Co. v. Pennsylvania Inst. for Instruction of the Blind, 116 Fed. 661, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739; Oldmixon v. Severance, 119 App. Div. 821, 104 N. Y. Supp. 1042; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Coover, 27 Okl. 131, 111 Pac. 217, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 787.

[111] Wilkins v. Davis, 2 Low. 511, 15 N. B. R. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 17,664; Blackwell v. Claywell, 75 N. C. 213, 15 N. B. R. 300.

[112] Ayer v. Brastow, 5 Law Rep. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 682; Wilkins v. Davis, 2 Low. 511, 15 N. B. R. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 17,664; Forsaith v. Merritt, 1 Low. 336, 3 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 4,946; McNutt v. King, 59 Ala. 597; Halsey v. Norton, 45 Miss. 703, 7 Am. Rep. 745; Morgan v. Marquis, 9 Exch. 145. But the partnership effects in the possession of the bankrupt partner could be surrendered by him to his trustee. Judson v. Lathrop, 6 La. Ann. 587.

[113] Murray v. Murray, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 60; Peel v. Ringgold, 6 Ark. 546.

[114] Amsinck v. Bean, 22 Wall. 395, 22 L. Ed. 801; Forsaith v. Merritt, 1 Low. 336, 3 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 4,946; Withrow v. Fowler, 7 N. B. R. 339, Fed. Cas. No. 17,919.

[115] Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch, 289, 3 L. Ed. 104; Wright v. Nostrand, 94 was not bankrupt could not claim that he had the sole right to administer upon the entire estate of the firm, including the bankrupt partner's interest, even though he himself was solvent.[116] It was, however, decided by the courts that while each of the parties would primarily have the right to the possession and management of such of the joint property as he might happen to have, subject to account to the other, the court of bankruptcy had power to commit the administration of the entire partnership estate to either. If the partner who stood outside of the bankruptcy proceedings was solvent and responsible, it would generally be left to him to wind up the affairs of the firm and account for the interest of the bankrupt partner. But it might become necessary for the court of bankruptcy to take into its own hands the exclusive management and settlement of the joint assets, and forbid the other partner to intermeddle. Such action would be taken with caution, and only when it seemed absolutely necessary, as, for instance, where the remaining partner, though not adjudged a bankrupt, was insolvent or incompetent to liquidate the business of the firm.[117] Another course sometimes resorted to was to appoint a receiver, on the application of the trustee of the bankrupt partner, who should settle the affairs of the firm and account.[118] But it was held that there could be no recovery of property from the estate of a deceased partner who had not been adjudged bankrupt. This, it was said, would be "too great a stretch of the jurisdiction of the court." [119]

The present bankruptcy law cuts the knot of these difficulties by providing that "in the event of one or more, but not all, of the members of a partnership being adjudged bankrupt, the partnership property shall not be administered in bankruptcy, unless by consent of the partner or partners not adjudged bankrupt; but such partner or partners not adjudged bankrupt shall settle the partnership business as expeditiously as its nature will permit, and account for the interest of the partner or partners adjudged bankrupt." [120] This section applies to the case (and only to the case) where the partnership as such is not in bank-

N. Y. 31; In re Shepard, 3 Ben. 347, 3 N. B. R. 172, Fed. Cas. No. 12,754.

[116] In re Shanahan, 6 Biss. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 12,701; Hubbard v. Guild, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 662. Compare Ogden v. Arnot, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 146.

[117] Forsaith v. Merritt, 1 Low. 336, 3 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 4,946; Parker v. Muggridge, 2 Story, 334, Fed. Cas. No. 10,743; Wilkins v. Davis, 2 Low. 511, 15 N. B. R. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 17,664; Ayer v. Brastow, 5 Law Rep. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 682.

[118] Cory v. Clark, Fed. Cas. No. 3,260.

[119] In re Frazier, 2 Hughes, 293, Fed. Cas. No. 5,070.

[120] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5h. See Lacey v. Cowan, 162 Ala. 546, 50 South. 281; Williams v. Lane, 158 Cal. 39, 109 Pac. 873; Marnet Oil & Gas Co. v. Staley, 218 Fed. 45, 133 C. C. A. 108, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; H. C. Denny & Co. v. Lee (Tex. Com. App.) 221 S. W. 947.

ruptcy, and one or more of the partners have also escaped adjudication or have not been petitioned against, while another or others of the firm have been adjudged bankrupt in their individual capacities.[121] That it cannot apply to a case where the partnership itself is in bankruptcy is shown by the words "the partnership property shall not be administered in bankruptcy," which would lead to evidently absurd results if the firm as such had been included in the adjudication. Moreover, it plainly means that both the partner who remains outside the bankruptcy proceedings and the firm itself should be solvent, that is, that the assets of the firm plus the unadjudged partner's surplus of assets over liabilities should at least equal the liabilities of the firm. For otherwise there would be nothing for that partner to account for, as the "interest of the partner or partners adjudged bankrupt," upon his settlement of the partnership business. And in fact, where the total assets of the partners and of the firm are insufficient to pay the partnership debts, it would be the proper course to render an adjudication of bankruptcy against both the firm and the individual partners, though one of them may be personally solvent.[122]

It has been ruled under this section that the court of bankruptcy has power to require the non-bankrupt partner either to consent to the administration of the partnership property in bankruptcy or to proceed himself to settle the partnership business with expedition.[123] And in the same case it was decided that where such partner had become insane and therefore could not speak or act in the bankruptcy proceedings, he could do so through a guardian appointed for him by the court of bankruptcy, and by such guardian might give consent to the administration of the partnership property in bankruptcy. But it is said that this provision of the statute does not apply to a case where the infancy of the partner not adjudged bankrupt was the only ground for dismissing the petition in bankruptcy as to him. In such a case, the firm, as a firm, may be adjudged bankrupt, and its whole property administered in the bankruptcy proceedings, though there can be no adjudication against the infant partner.[124]

Where the non-bankrupt partner elects to wind up the affairs of the firm, he cannot be interfered with by the trustee of the bankrupt

[121] Francis v. McNeal, 186 Fed. 481, 108 C. C. A. 459, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555, affirmed 228 U. S. 695, 33 Sup. Ct. 701, 57 L. Ed. 1029; In re Junck & Balthazard, 169 Fed. 481, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298; Armstrong v. Fisher, 224 Fed. 97, 139 C. C. A. 653, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701.

[122] Yungbluth v. Slipper (C. C. A.) 185 Fed. 773, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265.

[123] In re O'Brian, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 312, per Moss, Referee.

[124] In re Dunnigan, 95 Fed. 428, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; In re Duguid, 100 Fed. 274, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794.

partner. Such trustee has no right to sue for or take possession of any of the assets of the firm.[125] But the liquidating partner is not entirely free from the supervision of the court of bankruptcy. At least he is bound to report to the court the residuum of assets remaining to be distributed by the court among the partnership creditors, if not to report the details of his settlement of the firm's affairs,[126] and, when he has completed the settlement of the firm's affairs, to pay over the share of the bankrupt partner to his trustee.[127]

§ 122. Continuing or Liquidating Partner.—When a partnership is dissolved by mutual consent, and all its property is transferred to one of the partners, who proposes to continue the business and who assumes the payment of the firm debts, the assets of the partnership become the separate estate of the continuing partner, provided the transfer was made in good faith and for consideration, and will be so treated on his bankruptcy.[128] And since, under such an arrangement, he becomes individually responsible for the debts, the partnership creditors may, at their option, prove their claims as separate creditors of such partner and share pari passu with his individual creditors.[129] But they are not compelled to do so as against their own interest. And if the equities of the case require it, the law will still distinguish partnership assets and debts from the assets and debts of the individual bankrupt, and require the application of property belonging to the firm at the time of its dissolution to the satisfaction of debts existing against it at that time, and the application of the separate estate of the bankrupt partner to the payment of his individual debts, leaving only the surplus of either estate available to creditors of the other class.[130] Moreover, the terms

[125] Burke v. Rollinson, 23 R. I. 177, 49 Atl. 694; Lane v. Tanner, 156 Cal. 135, 103 Pac. 846. An intervening trustee in bankruptcy was held not entitled to a fund garnisheed, where it appeared that the fund was obtained from the assets of the partnership, which had not been adjudicated a bankrupt, and not from the assets of the bankrupt partner. Foot, Schulze & Co. v. Porter, 131 Minn. 224, 154 N. W. 1078.

[126] Dycus v. Brown, 135 Ky. 140, 121 S. W. 1010, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 190; In re Junck & Balthazard, 169 Fed. 481, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298.

[127] Mills v. J. H. Fisher & Co., 159 Fed. 897, 87 C. C. A. 77, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237.

[128] In re Long, 7 Ben. 141, 9 N. B. R. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 8,476; In re Collier, 12 N. B. R. 266, Fed. Cas. No. 3,002; In re Montgomery, 3 Ben. 565, 3 N. B. R. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 9,727. But see In re Morse, 13 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 9,854.

[129] In re Lloyd, 22 Fed. 88; In re Long, 7 Ben. 141, 9 N. B. R. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 8,476; In re Rice, 9 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 11,750.

[130] In re Denning, 114 Fed. 219, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133; In re Filmar, 177 Fed. 170, 100 C. C. A. 632, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; Oxley v. Willis, 1 Cranch, C. C. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 10,639; In re Young (D. C.) 223 Fed. 659, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; In re Suprenant (D. C.) 217 Fed. 470, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454. Compare In re Zartman (D. C.) 242 Fed. 595, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544.

of the dissolution agreement may set apart particular items of the firm's property for the payment of particular creditors, and such an appropriation (if not voidable as a preference) will be respected and enforced in the bankruptcy proceedings against the liquidating partner. But it must have been effected by such an assignment or other form of transfer as would take the property out of the hands of the parties, or else it must have been incorporated in the written agreement for the dissolution of the firm. A mere oral agreement of the partners at the time of dissolution will not suffice.[131]

It should be remarked that the conveyance of the firm assets to a continuing partner may amount to a fraudulent preference as against the firm creditors. This will depend upon the motives of the parties and the circumstances of the particular case. If such transfer constitutes a preference, it may be set aside by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy within four months thereafter. But where the continuing partner has assumed the joint debts, the firm creditors may assent to the conveyance, after petition, and they will then be entitled to come in with the individual creditors upon the separate estate of the bankrupt partner.[132] Where the liquidating partner of an insolvent firm makes a general assignment of the firm's property for the benefit of its creditors, it is an act of bankruptcy upon which such partner, as an individual, may be adjudged bankrupt, being a conveyance or transfer of a portion of his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his individual creditors.[133]

With regard to the position of the retiring partner, it may be observed that he is liable to be drawn into the bankruptcy proceeding if creditors insist upon it. For the express terms of the statute permit an adjudication against a partnership "after its dissolution and before the final settlement thereof."[134] But the retiring partner will not ordinarily be adjudged bankrupt on the petition of the continuing partner, at least where the latter has assumed the joint debts and given bond for their payment, and the creditors do not desire such an adjudication.[135] But on the other hand, the retiring partner cannot interfere and claim the administration of the firm's property. It is true the statute provides for the case where one partner is adjudged bankrupt and the other not, and directs that, in such a case, the partnership property

131 In re Wilson, 194 Fed. 564, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 867.

132 In re Johnson, 2 Low. 129, Fed. Cas. No. 7,369.

133 In re Meyer, 98 Fed. 976, 39 C. C. A. 368, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559, affirming Chemical Nat. Bank v. Meyer, 92 Fed. 896, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 565.

134 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5a. And see supra, § 116.

135 In re Bennett, 2 Low. 400, 12 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 1,314.

shall not be administered in bankruptcy without the consent of the non-bankrupt partner, but that the latter shall settle the partnership business and account for the interest of the bankrupt partner. (§ 5h.) But this provision is not applicable to the case of the bankruptcy of a liquidating partner.[136] Generally, the retiring partner occupies the position of a surety; and he cannot make proof for the difference between the amount of the firm debts and the dividend which the firm assets will pay, when he has not actually paid any part of such difference.[137] But assets withdrawn by the retiring partner are subject to the payment of the firm debts, where the remaining assets are insufficient, and may be reached for the benefit of the creditors.[138]

§ 123. Distribution of Estate.—The bankruptcy act provides that "the net proceeds of the partnership property shall be appropriated to the payment of the partnership debts, and the net proceeds of the individual estate of each partner to the payment of his individual debts. Should any surplus remain of the property of any partner after paying his individual debts, such surplus shall be added to the partnership assets and be applied to the payment of the partnership debts. Should any surplus of the partnership property remain after paying the partnership debts, such surplus shall be added to the assets of the individual partners in the proportion of their respective interests in the partnership."[139] This statute is in affirmance of a rule which has always prevailed in English and American bankruptcy law—that partnership assets are for partnership creditors and individual property for separate creditors, and that individual creditors cannot receive anything out of the firm assets until partnership creditors have been paid in full, and conversely that creditors of the partnership cannot share in the assets of either of the partners until his individual creditors have received the full amount of their claims.[140] It is even said that, under the express [136] In re Denning, 114 Fed. 219, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133.

[137] In re Phelps, 9 Ben. 286, 17 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 11,070.

[138] In re Sauthoff, 8 Biss. 35, 16 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 12,380; In re Pease, 13 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 10,881.

[139] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5f.

[140] In re Mills, 95 Fed. 269, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667; Collins v. Hood, 4 McLean, 186, Fed. Cas. No. 3,015; In re Williams, Fed. Cas. No. 17,702; In re Warren, 2 Ware, 322, Fed. Cas. No. 17,191; In re Ingalls, 5 Law Rep. 401, Fed. Cas. No. 7,032; In re Byrne, 1 N. B. R. 464, Fed. Cas. No. 2,270; In re Wiley, 4 Biss. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 17,656; In re Smith, 13 N. B. R. 500, Fed. Cas. No. 12,987; In re Estes, 3 Fed. 134, 6 Sawy. 459; In re Hollister, 3 Fed. 452; In re Lloyd, 22 Fed. 90; In re Wilcox, 94 Fed. 84, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Jones, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 193; In re Bates, 104 Fed. 263; Murray v. Murray, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 60; New York Inst. for Instruction of Deaf and Dumb v. Crockett, 117 App. Div. 269, 102 N. Y. Supp. 412; Gray v. Brunold, 140 Cal. 615, 74 Pac. 303; Ex parte Cook, 2 P. Wms. 500. And see Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 206 U. S. 28, 27 Sup. Ct. 681, 51 provisions of the bankruptcy law, partnership creditors have an equitable lien upon partnership property for the payment of the partnership debts.[141] But the fact that partnership creditors have reduced their claims to judgments in a state court against both the partnership and the individual members of it does not give them the right to primary participation in the distribution of the assets of the individual partners.[142] But the holder of a firm's notes indorsed by one of the partners is entitled to have them paid out of the partner's individual estate, unless the indorsement was given to effect a preference.[143] Where members of a partnership operated at different times under different firm names and under their individual names, creditors have no right of preference in bankruptcy because of the use of a particular name in their particular transaction.[144] And any scheme or device resorted to by persons contemplating bankruptcy for the purpose of charging partnership assets with individual debts is in violation of the act and will be frustrated by the court.[145] Of course the other part of the rule is equally respected. The firm creditors cannot compete with separate creditors in the distribution of individual assets, unless there should be a surplus. But a partnership debt on which a bankrupt partner remains liable is none the less provable against his estate because there may be no surplus of his individual assets over his separate debts. The provability of a debt depends on the nature of the liability, not on the existence or the prospect of assets for its satisfaction.[146]

It will be noticed that the law directs that a surplus remaining after paying the partnership creditors shall be divided between the individual estates of the partners, for distribution to their separate creditors, "in the proportion of their respective interests in the partnership." But this applies only to a surplus. In the primary distribution partnership assets must be applied to partnership debts, without reference to any

L. Ed. 945, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Wood, 248 Fed. 246, 160 C. C. A. 324, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 810; International Agr. Corp. v. Cary, 240 Fed. 101, 153 C. C. A. 137, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 753; Schall v. Camors, 250 Fed. 6, 162 C. C. A. 178, 10 A. L. R. 846, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76; Lansing Liquidation Corp. v. Heinze, 184 App. Div. 129, 171 N. Y. Supp. 738.

[141] In re Abrams, 193 Fed. 271.

[142] Cutler Hardware Co. v. Hacker, 238 Fed. 146, 151 C. C. A. 222, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488, affirming In re F. J. Hacker & Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 869, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 647.

[143] In re Frazer (D. C.) 221 Fed. 83, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467.

[144] In re W. S. Kuhn & Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 935, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823.

[145] In re Jones (D. C.) 100 Fed. 781, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141; but see Stringer v. Stevenson, 240 Fed. 892, 153 C. C. A. 578, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170, holding that the priority of firm creditors depends on the existence of the partner's lien, and if the partners consent that the firm assets shall become the individual property of one partner, the priority of firm creditors is gone.

[146] In re Bates, 100 Fed. 263, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

disproportion between the interests of the individual partners therein.[147] The general rule of distribution applies to all creditors without distinction. Thus, where the United States holds claims against the individual members of a firm, it is not entitled to priority of payment out of the partnership assets, but only out of the individual estates.[148] Satisfaction of his claim as it stood at the date of the adjudication, or of proof made, is all that a creditor of either class can claim before creditors of the other class shall be admitted to share with him. For example, where the separate estate of one of the partners is more than sufficient to pay his individual debts, but the partnership assets are not sufficient for firm creditors, the separate creditors are not entitled, as against the joint creditors, to receive interest on their debts for the period subsequent to the adjudication.[149] Where a bankrupt partner is a member of two firms, one of which also in bankruptcy, the assets of that firm should be applied to the payment of the firm debts, and any surplus of the individual assets that may remain, after paying the individual debts in full, distributed pro rata among the creditors of both firms.[150] Where the bankrupt is a partnership, the members or some of the members of which are themselves partnerships, the creditors of such a constituent firm are entitled to have their debts first paid out of its assets, before creditors of the bankrupt partnership may participate therein.[151]

This general rule of distribution as between individual and firm creditors is subject to one important exception in the English practice, which was quite generally recognized in this country until recently, namely, that if there are no partnership assets and no solvent partner, both partnership and separate debts may be proved against the separate estates of the partners, and those estates will be divided pro rata among all the creditors so proving, both firm and individual creditors, without preference or discrimination.[152] This exception rests upon the principle

[147] In re Lowe, 11 N. B. R. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 8,564.

[148] In re Webb, 2 N. B. R. 614, Fed. Cas. No. 17,313.

[149] In re Chandler, 184 Fed. 887, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 865; In re Berrian, 6 Ben. 297, 44 How. Pr. 216, Fed. Cas. No. 1,351.

[150] In re Dunkerson, 12 N. B. R. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 4,159. See In re Vetterlein, 44 Fed. 57.

[151] Bank of Reidsville v. Burton, 259 Fed. 218, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374.

[152] In re Green, 116 Fed. 118, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553; In re Keller, 109 Fed. 118, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 334; Conrader v. Cohen, 121 Fed. 801, 58 C. C. A. 249, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619; In re Conrader, 118 Fed. 676, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; In re West, 39 Fed. 203; In re Lloyd, 22 Fed. 88; In re Litchfield, 5 Fed. 47; In re Slocum, Fed. Cas. No. 12,950; In re Jewett, 1 N. B. R. 491, Fed. Cas. No. 7,304; In re Knight, 2 Biss. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 7,880; In re Gray (D. C.) 208 Fed. 959, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 146. The general rule and its exception are not limited to the case where there has been an adjudication in bankruptcy against the firm. Both the rule and the exception apply where the individual partners have been adjudged bankrupts on that partnership debts are both joint and several, and that there is no marshalling of assets unless there is a joint as well as a several fund before the court. But the Supreme Court of the United States, upon a comparison and consideration of all the clauses of the present bankruptcy law relating to partnerships, has refused to recognize such an exception. It holds that the lack of any partnership assets and of any solvent partner does not alter the rule that a creditor of an individual partner in a bankrupt firm is entitled to be paid out of that partner's individual estate, to the exclusion, if necessary, of the creditors of the firm.[153] The cases admitting the exception to the rule hold that, where firm creditors claim the right to share with individual creditors in the individual estate, on the ground that there was no partnership property, the test of available assets of the firm is whether, at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, there was an available fund to pay firm creditors; and neglect by firm creditors to avail themselves of such fund then existing whereby it has been dissipated or lost to them, does not enlarge their equity against the individual estate, although in fact they have received nothing on their debts.[154] If in fact there is any joint fund, however small, and even though it was purposely created by separate creditors by purchasing worthless partnership assets, still firm creditors cannot prove against the separate estate in competition with the separate creditors.[155] But if the joint estate has all been expended in payment of costs, it is considered that partnership creditors may share pari passu with the individual creditors.[156] But this exception would not apply where there were originally partnership assets, which would have been applicable to the payment of firm debts, but which have been totally expended by the trustee in a vain and fruitless attempt to realize more.[157] And even if there are no actual assets of the firm, still a firm creditor cannot share in the separate property of a bankrupt partner, in competition with his individual creditors, while there remains a member of the firm who is solvent and not in bank-petitions against them individually. In re Litchfield, 5 Fed. 47. Compare In re Downing, 1 Dill. 33, Fed. Cas. No. 4,044; Lewis v. United States, 92 U. S. 618, 23 L. Ed. 513; In re Pease, Fed. Cas. No. 10,881.

153 Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank of Philadelphia v. Ridge Avenue Bank, 240 U. S. 498, 36 Sup. Ct. 461, 60 L. Ed. 767, L. R. A. 1917A, 135, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728. And see In re Hull (D. C.) 224 Fed. 796, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 447; In re Wilcox (D. C.) 94 Fed. 84, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; Euclid Nat. Bank v. Union Trust & Deposit Co., 149 Fed. 975, 79 C. C. A. 485, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834; In re Henderson (D. C.) 142 Fed. 588, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91; In re Janes, 133 Fed. 912, 67 C. C. A. 216, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341.

154 In re Litchfield, 5 Fed. 47.

155 In re Marwick, 2 Ware, 233, Fed. Cas. No. 9,181.

156 In re McEwen, 6 Biss. 294, 12 N. B. R. 11, Fed. Cas. No. 8,783; In re Slocum, Fed. Cas. No. 12,950.

157 In re Blumer, 12 Fed. 489.

ruptcy. For it is obvious that firm creditors, in their power to hold the solvent partner responsible for the debts of the firm, have an advantage over the separate creditors of the bankrupt partner which should preclude rivalry between them.[158] On the other hand, if one member of the firm, though thrown into bankruptcy with the rest, owes no private debts, his individual assets are to be distributed among the partnership creditors.[159]

§ 124. Marshaling Assets.—The bankruptcy act provides (section 5 g) that the court may "marshal the assets of the partnership estate and the individual estates so as to prevent preferences and secure the equitable distribution of the property of the several estates." This grant of jurisdiction is probably to be taken in a somewhat wider sense than the rule already laid down in the statute, that partnership assets are for partnership creditors and individual assets for separate creditors, and in a somewhat wider sense, also, than the ordinary equity rule which prevails between two creditors one of whom has recourse to only one fund while the other may come upon two funds, since one of the specific objects of the grant of authority is to "prevent preferences," as well as to secure the "equitable distribution of the property." It has been held that where there are both partnership creditors and individual creditors, a partnership creditor, who has a lien on both the partnership and the individual assets, will be required to exhaust the funds of the partnership estate before resorting to the individual fund.[160] But under the act of 1867, the cases generally agreed in holding that a creditor of a firm, holding security from one partner, might prove against the joint estate without surrendering or selling his security or applying its value on the claim.[161] And a lien acquired before bankruptcy, by execution on the individual property of a member of the bankrupt firm, under a judgment against the firm, will not yield to the equities of the separate creditors of such partner.[162] As an example of the application of the present statute, may be cited a case in which it appeared that one of the members of a firm, who was indebted to a relative on his individual note, long overdue, caused the note to be indorsed

[158] In re Dunham, 1 Hask. 495, Fed. Cas. No. 4,144.

[159] In re Leavitt, 1 Hask. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 8,169.

[160] In re Lewis, 2 Hughes, 320, 8 N. B. R. 546, Fed. Cas. No. 8,313; In re May, 17 N. B. R. 192, Fed. Cas. No. 9,327.

[161] In re Holbrook, 2 Low. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 6,588; In re Thomas, 8 Biss. 139, 17 N. B. R. 54, Fed. Cas. No. 13,886. But a note given by the firm as an accommodation to a partner, to enable him to raise his share of the firm's capital, may be proved against the firm, but securities pledged by the individual partner must first be applied to its payment. In re Norris, 2 Hask. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 10,302.

[162] In re Sandusky, 17 N. B. R. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 12,308.

in the name of the firm, no new consideration moving to the firm. The partnership was then financially embarrassed, as the creditor knew, and within four months thereafter became bankrupt on its voluntary application. The firm had assets, but neither partner had any separate estate. It was held that the transaction was a fraudulent attempt to prefer the holder of the note over other creditors, by converting the individual debt of the maker into a partnership obligation, and that the court of bankruptcy, under its power to marshal the assets of the bankrupts, should not allow the proof of the note as a claim against the joint estate.[163] So, where the actions of partners, in connection with the transfer by one of his interest in the firm to the other, are fraudulent and constitute acts of bankruptcy upon which both partners and the firm are adjudged bankrupt, the property will be marshaled, as between firm and individual creditors, as though no transfer had been made.[164] Where the members of a bankrupt partnership were a natural person and another partnership, which was also insolvent, in the marshaling of assets in the bankruptcy proceedings the constituent partnership is to be treated as an individual partner, and its assets applied first to the payment of its own creditors.[165]

§ 125. Partnership Assets.—In the application of the general rule of distribution,—that partnership assets are for partnership creditors and individual assets for separate creditors,—questions sometimes arise as to whether particular property belongs to the firm or to the partners, and whether particular debts are due by the partnership or by a member thereof. While these questions must generally be determined by the circumstances of each case, a few general principles may here be laid down. In the first place, it is a rule that any particular property which is contributed by one of the partners to the capital of the firm, which thereupon passes out of his individual ownership and control and into the control and possession of the firm, becomes a part of the assets of the firm upon its supervening bankruptcy. This rule has been applied in a case where the property in question was a seat in a stock exchange.[166] And the rule applies even in cases where all the capital was in fact contributed by one of the partners alone.[167] In the next place, real estate, purchased

[163] In re Jones, 100 Fed. 781, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141.

[164] In re Shapiro, 106 Fed. 495, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 839.

[165] In re Knowlton & Co. (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 480, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729, affirming 196 Fed. 837, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

[166] In re Hurlbutt, 135 Fed. 504, 68 C. C. A. 216, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Stringer, 253 Fed. 352, 165 C. C. A. 134, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 510.

[167] Buckingham v. First Nat. Bank, 131 Fed. 192, 65 C. C. A. 498, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465.

with partnership funds and used by the firm in its business, and constituting a part of its capital, though the legal title may stand in the name of one or more of the partners, is to be treated as personalty so far as to be charged with the debts of the firm in the first instance; that is, it is assets in bankruptcy for the creditors of the firm, not for the separate creditors.[168] Even where a creditor has obtained a judgment against those members of the firm in whose name the legal title stands, he will have no prior lien thereon.[169] Again, if one of the partners has fraudulently converted to his own use property or money of the firm, or taken the funds of the firm for the purchase of property in his own name, it remains partnership assets and may, under the equitable powers of the court, be subjected to the payment of the debts of the firm.[170] So where property of an insolvent firm is sold within a month of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and the proceeds divided, and one partner, with his share, purchases property, it will be regarded as partnership assets.[171] Where the same partners, under different firm names carry on the same business at two different places, the assets of both nominal firms are equally applicable to the payment of all the creditors of both.[172]

§ 126. Individual Assets.—The "separate estate" of a member of a firm, or his "individual estate," within the meaning of the bankruptcy act, is that in which such partner is separately interested at the time of the bankruptcy. The term can only be applied to such property as belonged to one or more of the partners to the exclusion of the others.[173]

[168] In re Groetzinger, 127 Fed. 814, 62 C. C. A. 494, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; In re Farmer, 18 N. B. R. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 4,650; In re Lawrence, 5 Fed. 349. Real estate owned and held by a firm as partnership property and brought into the firm stock is not converted absolutely and for all purposes. It is to be treated as personalty in so far as may be necessary to secure the payment of the firm debts and advances made by the partners respectively, but for every other purpose it remains real estate. Hence a judgment against the firm for a partnership debt is a lien on partnership real estate, and in the bankruptcy of the firm, if such judgment is valid and not voidable under the act, the judgment creditor is entitled to enforce his lien against such realty, and the trustee in bankruptcy, as representing the unsecured creditors of the firm, cannot claim the land on the theory of its conversion into personalty. In re Codding, 9 Fed. 849. The nature of the title to real estate held by partners cannot be changed to the prejudice of the rights of separate creditors by their classification thereof in their schedule. In re Zug, 16 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 18,222.

[169] Marrett v. Murphy, 11 N. B. R. 131, Fed. Cas. No. 9,103.

[170] In re Hamilton, 1 Fed. 800; Patrick v. Central Bank, 1 Dill. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 10,803.

[171] In re Melvin, 17 N. B. R. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 9,406.

[172] In re Williams, 3 Woods, 493, Fed. Cas. No. 17,707.

[173] In re Lowe, 11 N. B. R. 221, Fed. Cas. No. 8,564. Policies insuring the life of one member of a bankrupt partnership, and payable to himself or his legal representatives (or in one case, to his wife and children if they should outlive him), and which have been individ-

But where property once belonging to a partnership has, by a bona fide contract, ceased to be partnership property, and become the separate property of one of the partners who afterwards becomes bankrupt, the partnership creditors are not entitled to any preference over the bankrupt's individual creditors in relation to such property.[174] And so, where a partner sues for a dissolution of the firm, and bankruptcy proceedings are begun against the firm, the amount claimed by such partner on dissolution is his individual property, which will pass to the trustee for the payment of his separate debts.[175] But on the bankruptcy of a person who is, actually and in fact, the sole owner of a business, although it was conducted in the name of himself and another as partners, the property and assets of such business will pass to his trustee as his individual property without regard to any liability of the ostensible partner to the creditors.[176]

§ 127. Partnership Debts and Claims.—It is necessary to discriminate carefully between debts due by a partnership, as such, and debts due by the partners jointly or individually. For instance, a claim founded on a note or bond signed by the individual members of a firm, but not given for a firm debt, is not entitled, as against partnership creditors, to be paid out of the assets of the firm in bankruptcy; for though it is a joint debt, it is not a partnership debt.[177] But if notes are given for liabilities of the partnership, they constitute debts of the firm, though not ually pledged by him, do not belong to the partnership estate, although the firm may have pledged the policies in connection with his separate individual pledge. Hiscock v. Varick Bank, 200 U. S. 28, 27 Sup. Ct. 681, 51 L. Ed. 945, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[174] In re Wiley, 4 Biss. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 17,656; Crane v. Morrison, Sawy. 138, 17 N. B. R. 393, Fed. Cas. No. 3,355; In re Zartman (D. C.) 242 Fed. 595, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 544. But compare In re Young (D. C.) 223 Fed. 659, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; In re Suprenant (D. C.) 217 Fed. 470, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

[175] In re Clark, 4 Ben. 88, 3 N. B. R. 491, Fed. Cas. No. 2,798.

[176] In re Gibson, 191 Fed. 665, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

[177] In re L. B. Weisenberg & Co., 131 Fed. 517, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417; In re Webb, 2 N. B. R. 614, Fed. Cas. No. 17,313; In re Nims, 16 Blatchf. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 10,269; In re Roddin, 6 Biss. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 11,989; In re Nashville Laundry Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 795, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22. "It is not certain that a promise by a partnership and a promise by the individual partners collectively have the same effect. If a firm be composed of two persons associated for the conduct of a particular branch of business, it can hardly be maintained that the joint contract of two partners, made in their individual names respectively, on a matter that has no connection with the firm business, creates a liability of the firm as such. The partnership is a distinct thing from the partners themselves, and it would seem that the debts of the firm are different in character from other joint debts of the partners. If it is not so, the rule that sets apart the property of a partnership exclusively in the first instance for the payment of its debts may be of little value. That rule presumes that a partnership debt was incurred for the benefit of the partnership, and that its property consists, in whole or in part, of what has been obtained from its creditors. The reason of the rule fails when a debt or liability has not been incurred by the firm as such, even though all the signed by the firm name, but as the joint and several notes of the partners, and notwithstanding the individual liability of the partners thereon.[178] And notwithstanding some difference of opinion, the decided weight of authority is to the effect that a note made jointly by all the members of a firm, strictly in the course of the partnership business, and for a consideration passing to the firm, is to be treated as the debt of the firm, though not signed in the firm name, and not as the debt of the individual partners.[179] And so, where property has been wrongfully converted by a partnership and inures to the benefit of the firm, and the owner, waiving the tort, seeks to recover the value of the property as on an implied contract, his claim is against the firm, and not against any individual partner.[180] But there must be something to show that the debt in question is properly chargeable to the firm, rather than to the partners jointly, or that the firm had the benefit of the transaction out of which it arose. A note signed by the members of the firm as individuals, with nothing on its face to indicate that it was given for a partnership debt, is presumptively the debt of the individuals, and cannot be proved as a claim against the estate of the partnership in bankruptcy to share with firm creditors.[181] And the real nature of the transaction relating to a note given by a bankrupt firm may be shown, to determine whether the debt is one provable against the firm or the individual partners, notwithstanding the failure to enter the transaction at large on the books of the creditor.[182] It is also important to consider whether the consideration for the obligation passed directly to the firm, or through the agency of the partners.

persons who compose the firm may be the parties to the contract." Forsyth v. Woods, 11 Wall. 484, 20 L. Ed. 207.

[178] In re Mosier, 112 Fed. 138, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; Frederick v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 251 Fed. 667, 145 C. C. A. 553, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[179] In re L. B. Weisenberg & Co., 131 Fed. 517, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417, citing In re Warren, 2 Ware, 322, Fed. Cas. No. 17,191; In re Thomas, 8 Biss. 139, 17 N. B. R. 54, Fed. Cas. No. 13,886; Davis v. Turner, 120 Fed. 605, 56 C. C. A. 669, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704. There are some authorities to the contrary, as, for instance, In re Bucyrus Machine Co., 5 N. B. R. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 2,100; In re Holbrook, 2 Low. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 6,588; In re Herrick, 13 N. B. R. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 6,420; Strause v. Hooper, 105 Fed. 590, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255; In re Jones, 116 Fed. 431, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626. But it was pointed out in the Weisenberg Case that at least two of the foregoing cases (In re Holbrook and In re Herrick) may be distinguished by the fact that the note there in question was also signed by other persons, not members of the firm, as sureties, and was the joint and several note of all and not the joint note of less than all.

[180] Reynolds v. New York Trust Co., 188 Fed. 611, 110 C. C. A. 409, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

[181] In re Jones, 116 Fed. 431, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626.

[182] In re Stevens, 104 Fed. 323, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9. The right of one who advanced securities, to assist a partnership, to prove the claim against the firm is not affected by the fact that the loan was entered on the firm's books as a loan to one of the partners and not to the firm. In re Stringer (D. C.) 234 Fed. 454, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713. But see this case on appeal, Stringer v. Stevenson, 240 Fed. 892, 153 C. C. A. 578, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170.

Thus, in one case, it appeared that a bank made a loan of money to each of the two members of a firm, taking in each case a note signed by both partners. The proceeds were passed to the individual accounts of the partners respectively, but they thereupon, by their checks, transferred the money to the partnership account and it was used in the firm's business. But it was held that the notes did not constitute debts of the firm provable against its estate in bankruptcy, because it had received the money from the partners and not from the bank.[183] But a firm note separately indorsed by one of the partners is a firm obligation, whether the indorser's liability has become fixed or not, and cannot be made the basis of a claim against his estate in bankruptcy as an individual debt.[184] The mortgagee in a chattel mortgage of a stock of goods cannot prove his claim against a partnership formed after the making of the mortgage and before its maturity.[185] And an agreement between two traders to unite their stocks in trade as the capital of a partnership to be formed between them, and to convert the separate business debts of either into joint debts of the firm, will not entitle a separate creditor who has not acceded in any way to the arrangement before the bankruptcy of the firm to prove his claim as a joint creditor of the firm against the partnership estate.[186] A bank holding a draft drawn by one firm and accepted by another, where both are adjudged bankrupts, cannot share with the individual creditors in the separate assets of one who was a partner in both firms.[187] Proof of a debt in the case of a bankrupt firm should show with reasonable certainty whether it was contracted by the firm or the individual partners; and proof against the partnership should not be joined with proof of a debt against an individual partner.[188]

§ 128. Separate Debts of Partners.—Where a member of a firm gives his individual note, bond, or mortgage (not executed in the name of the firm nor by the other partner), to secure an existing creditor of the firm, or to secure the future payment of the price of goods purchased for the firm's stock in trade, it is his separate debt, and the creditor cannot come upon the partnership assets in competition with partnership creditors.[189] So, where a creditor of a firm, holding its promissory note

[183] In re L. B. Weisenberg & Co., 131 Fed. 517, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417.

[184] Lamoille County Nat. Bank v. Stevens' Estate, 107 Fed. 245, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164; In re Speer Bros., 144 Fed. 910, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524.

[185] In re Forbes, 5 Biss. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 4,922. See In re Van Buren, 2 Fed. 647.

[186] In re Isaacs, 3 Sawy. 35, 6 N. B. R. 92, Fed. Cas. No. 7,093. But compare In re Sickman & Glenn, 155 Fed. 508, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232.

[187] In re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 4,158.

[188] In re Walton, Deady, 510, Fed. Cas. No. 17,129.

[189] In re Forse, 184 Fed. 85, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843; In re Stevens, 104 Fed. 323, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9; In re Dobson, for money loaned, surrendered the same and accepted in lieu thereof the individual note of a member of the firm for the same amount, the assumption of the debt by that partner being part of the consideration for the purchase of an interest in the firm for her son-in-law, and the latter note was twice renewed and was finally reduced to a judgment against the maker and within four months thereafter the partnership and its members became bankrupt, it was held that the debt was that of the individual partner, not of the firm, notwithstanding the fact that the interest on the new note had always been paid by the firm.[190] Again, an indebtedness contracted by a member of a partnership individually, before the partnership was formed, cannot be converted into a firm obligation by its entry as such on the books without the creditor's knowledge, or by making payments thereon by checks of the firm.[191] So, where one member of a firm gives a note signed in the firm name, but in fraud of his copartners and for his private benefit, or even, as some of the cases hold, without the consent of the other partners, the firm being insolvent, and the transaction not being in any way for the benefit of the firm, it does not create a debt provable against the assets of the partnership,[192] except in the hands of a bona fide holder for value, who has no knowledge or notice of the fraud or want of authority, or of any intended misapplication of the proceeds.[193] It has even been held that a mortgage given by one partner on partnership property, although with the consent of his copartner, cannot be enforced as against firm creditors in bankruptcy,[194] at least where given to secure his individual debt. So, a note given by the bankrupt firm to a member for his contribution to the capital stock, and by him turned over to his wife, who furnished the money, is evidence only of the individual debt of such member, and not provable against the firm.[195] On the other hand, where, after the failure of a firm and while they were endeavoring to settle with their creditors, one partner, at the request of the holder of a firm obligation, guaranties

2 Nat. Bankr. News, 514; In re Linforth, 87 Fed. 386.

[190] In re Lehigh Lumber Co., 101 Fed. 216, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221.

[191] Hibberd v. McGill, 129 Fed. 590, 64 C. C. A. 158, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

[192] First Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 131 Fed. 422, 65 C. C. A. 406, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429; In re Forsyth, 7 N. B. R. 174, Fed. Cas. No. 4,948; In re Golder, 2 Hask. 28, Fed. Cas. No. 5,510; In re Irving, 17 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 7,074. A partner cannot bind the firm by notes given in the firm name in renewal of his individual notes, and the burden rests upon the creditor seeking to prove the same against the partnership estate in bankruptcy to show that the other partner knew of the transaction and assented thereto. In re McIntire, 132 Fed. 295, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787.

[193] In re White, 183 Fed. 310, 105 C. C. A. 522, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 541; Bush v. Crawford, 9 Phila. 392, 7 N. B. R. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 2,224; In re Dunkle, 7 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 4,161.

[194] In re Blanchard, 161 Fed. 793, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417.

[195] In re Frost, 3 N. B. R. 736, Fed. Cas. No. 5,135.

its payment, such guaranty is without legal effect and does not entitle that creditor to prove against the separate estate of the guarantor upon a subsequent adjudication of bankruptcy.[196] A judgment against partners and others jointly is a several claim as against the bankrupt partners, and cannot receive a dividend from the joint estate.[197] But a creditor holding a claim against the partners jointly, which is not a firm debt, may file separate proofs of the same claim to its full amount against each of the members of the firm.[198] In one case, where a firm, failing without assets, resumed business under the name of one of its members as "agent," and again failed, it was held that the debts contracted under the former name were not entitled to share in the assets of the second failure.[199] In some states, by a peculiarity of the local law, taxes assessed against a firm are individual liabilities of the several partners, and where this is the case they may be proved against the separate estates in bankruptcy.[200]

§ 129. Joint and Several Liability; Double Proof.—There are some instances in which a creditor will be entitled to prove his claim against both the bankrupt partnership and the several members of the firm, and to receive dividends from both sources until satisfaction. Thus, a creditor who holds commercial paper made by the bankrupt firm and indorsed by an individual member of the firm, also a bankrupt, may prove his debt against both estates and share in the dividends of each. For he would have a right of action against each, though entitled to only one satisfaction.[201] This rule is of course subject to modification

196 In re Blumer, 13 Fed. 622.

197 In re Herrick, 13 N. B. R. 312, Fed. Cas. No. 6,420. A debt founded on a judgment against the two members of a firm jointly, in a suit on a partnership note, does not entitle the creditor to dividends out of the separate estate of each member of the firm, on an equal footing with the separate creditors of each member. In re Berrian, 6 Ben. 297, Fed. Cas. No. 1,351.

198 In re Beers, 5 N. B. R. 211, Fed. Cas. No. 1,229.

199 In re Nims, 16 Blatchf. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 10,269. And see In re Cobb's Consol. Cos. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 458, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 812.

200 In re Green, 116 Fed. 118, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

201 Buckingham v. First Nat. Bank. 131 Fed. 192, 65 C. C. A. 498, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465; Bank of Reidsville v. Burton, 259 Fed. 218, 170 C. C. A. 286. In re McCoy, 150 Fed. 106, 80 C. C. A. 60, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Thomas, 8 Biss. 139, 17 N. B. R. 54, Fed. Cas. No. 13,886; Emery v. Canal Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. 507, 7 N. B. R. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 4,446; In re Bigelow, 3 Ben. 146, 2 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 1,397; In re Howard, 4 N. B. R. 571, Fed. Cas. No. 6,750; Stephenson v. Jackson, 2 Hughes, 204, 9 N. B. R. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 13,374; In re Farnum, 6 Law Rep. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 4,674; In re Bradley, 2 Biss. 515, Fed. Cas. No. 1,772. Where a firm composed of three persons gave, in settlement of part of a debt due to one creditor, the note of the copartnership with the indorsement of one of the partners, and, for other parts of it, severally, three notes, each made by one of the partners and indorsed by the others, and the firm was adjudged bankrupt, and the creditor proved his debt against the makers alone of the four notes, it was held that he was in cases where either the making of the note or its indorsement would constitute a fraudulent preference under the bankruptcy act,[202] and its operation may in some instances be restrained by the principle of the marshalling of assets, discussed in a preceding section.[203] But generally speaking, a joint and several obligation given by a partnership is also provable as an individual obligation against the estate of either of the parties.[204] A joint and several note, given for money borrowed by a firm and signed in the firm name, with other names following, may be proved against the joint assets of the firm; but not one which is signed individually by certain of the partners and by others as sureties.[205] On similar principles, where one member of a firm, with the knowledge and assent of his copartners, misappropriates trust funds (as, the money of an estate of which he is executor, or the money of a corporation of which he is the treasurer or agent) and invests the same in the business of the firm, the obligation thus created is both joint and several; and proof of the claim may be made against the partnership as well as against the individual partner.[206] A parallel rule applies to the case of a liability to the United States, incurred by a fraudulent undervaluation of goods entered at the custom house; the claim of the government against the firm for the tort is joint and several and may be proved against both estates.[207] And in general, and notwithstanding some vigorous dissent, the rule may be said to be fairly well established that the commission of a tort by a partnership makes the partners also jointly and severally liable, and the party injured may prove his claim both against the estate of the firm in bankruptcy and against the sep-entitled to dividends according to such proofs out of the several estates, joint or separate, against which the proofs were made. Mead v. Nat. Bank of Fayetteville, 6 Blatchf. 180, 2 N. B. R. 173, Fed. Cas. No. 9,366.

[202] In re Jones, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 193.

[203] Supra, § 124. If a creditor having a firm note indorsed by one partner, and holding property of that partner as security, obtains payment by a sale of the security after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, the separate creditors are entitled to receive from the joint fund a sum equal to the dividend on the note. In re Foot, 8 Ben. 228, 12 N. B. R. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 4,906.

[204] In re Biehl (D. C.) 237 Fed. 720, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 150; Ex parte Miller, Fed. Cas. No. 9,550. A creditor who has proved a joint and several claim against the bankrupt members of a firm separately, and not against the firm, is entitled to dividends out of the several assets of the individual partners. In re Bigelow, 3 Ben. 146, 2 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 1,397.

[205] In re Holbrook, 2 Low. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 6,588; Robinson v. Seaboard Nat. Bank of New York, 247 Fed. 667, 159 C. C. A. 569, 10 A. L. R. 842, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263; In re W. S. Kuhn & Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 935; Anderson v. Stayton State Bank, 82 Or. 357, 159 Pac. 1033.

[206] In re Baxter, 18 N. B. R. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 1,119; In re Tesson, 9 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 13,844; In re Jordan, 2 Fed. 319.

[207] In re Vetterlein, 20 Fed. 109.

arate estates of the partners.[208] But merely because proofs of individual claims for fraud against bankrupt partners have established the responsibility of each partner for the fraud, so that they are liable in solido, not only as partners, but individually, it does not follow that the unliquidated, unprovable claims in tort for the fraud are provable both against the individual partners and against the firm as claims in quasi contract or equitable debt, the basis of such a liability being unjust enrichment, where the facts show that no benefit accrued to the individuals as a result of the fraud beyond what accrued to the firm.[209]

§ 130. Claims of Partners Inter Sese and Against the Firm.—It is provided by the present bankruptcy act that "the court may permit the proof of the claim of the partnership estate against the individual estates, and vice versa." [210] In respect to the allowance of such claims, the authorities under the act of 1867 were not entirely clear. It appears to have been settled that if a member of an insolvent partnership fraudulently misappropriated the funds of the firm, for the purpose of paying off his private debts, the trustee in bankruptcy of the firm would be entitled to recover the amount so diverted or prove a claim therefor against the estate of that partner.[211] But some of the authorities maintained that no such proof could be made for money withdrawn from the assets of the firm by one of the partners, if this was done without fraud against his copartners, or with their consent or privity.[212] On the other hand, there were decisions that money advanced by a firm to one of its members beyond his share of the capital was a separate debt of the firm against such member, and that the trustee of the firm might prove it;[213] and that the claim of a firm against one of its bankrupt members, who acted as treasurer under the articles of copartnership, [208] In re Parkers, 19 Q. B. Div. 84; Blyth v. Fladgate, L. R. Ch. Div. (1891) 337; In re Blackford, 35 App. Div. 330, 54 N. Y. Supp. 972; In re Baxter, 18 N. B. R. 62, Fed. Cas. No. 1,119; In re Jordan, 2 Fed. 319; In re Coe, 169 Fed. 1002, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384. The last-cited case was affirmed on appeal, In re Coe, 183 Fed. 745, 106 C. C. A. 181, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352.

[209] Schall v. Camors, 251 U. S. 239, 40 Sup. Ct. 135, 64 L. Ed. 247, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599. And see Reynolds v. New York Trust Co., 188 Fed. 611, 110 C. C. A. 409, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698.

[210] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 5g. In at least one case under the act of 1867, it was held that, when all the partners are in bankruptcy, the separate estate of one partner could not claim against the joint estate of the partnership in competition with the joint creditors, nor the joint estate against the separate estate in competition with the separate creditors. In re Lloyd, 22 Fed. 90.

[211] Brecher v. Fox, 1 McCrary, 48, 1 Fed. 273; Ryan v. Cavanagh (D. C.) 238 Fed. 604, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44.

[212] In re May, 19 N. B. R. 101, Fed. Cas. No. 9,328; In re Lane, 2 Low. 333, 10 N. B. R. 135, Fed. Cas. No. 8,044; In re McEwen, 6 Biss. 294, 12 N. B. R. 11, Fed. Cas. No. 8,783.

[213] In re McLean, 15 N. B. R. 333, Fed. Cas. No. 8,879.

might be proved against his separate estate.[214] Under the present statute, providing that the court "may" permit the proof of such a claim, the question of its allowance would appear to rest always in the sound discretion of the court, to be determined on equitable principles, and by the application of a just and fair judgment to the circumstances of the particular case. But it is held that, while the trustee of a partnership estate may prove a claim against the individual estate of one partner, such claim is not entitled to payment pro rata with the claims of individual creditors, but only from the surplus, if any, remaining after the individual claims have been paid.[215]

The converse case—that of a claim by one of the partners against the firm—is chiefly met with in instances where one of the partners has made advances of goods or money to the firm or used his private means in paying off the debts of the insolvent or embarrassed partnership. The authorities clearly recognize the rule that a claim of this character may be proved by the partner against the partnership estate in bankruptcy, when its amount has been definitely fixed by an accounting and settlement of the partnership affairs, which, however, may be had in the bankruptcy proceedings before the referee,[216] but they also maintain that the partner is not entitled to share in the distribution of the partnership estate, under the quoted provision of the bankruptcy act, or at all, until all the other creditors of the partnership have been paid.[217] But this does not apply to a debt which was due from the firm to the particular partner before he entered into the partnership, and which was not brought into the firm's capital, but was overlooked and remained unpaid until after the bankruptcy.[218] But the act of a partner in advancing money or paying off debts may be regarded as creating separate claims against his copartners for their proportionate shares, and thus entitle him to prove against their separate estates in the bank-

214 Brown v. Curtis, 5 Mason, 421, Fed. Cas. No. 2,000. Where a surviving partner converts the property of the deceased partner to his own use, and the administrators of the latter consent, they may prove a claim therefor against the estate of the former in bankruptcy. In re Mills, 11 N. B. R. 74, Fed. Cas. No. 9,611. One partner, as between himself and the firm creditors, cannot estop himself by any dealings with the other partner from claiming partnership assets. In re Gorham, 9 Biss. 23, 18 N. B. R. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 5,624.

215 In re Telfer, 184 Fed. 224, 106 C. C. A. 366.

216 In re Hirth, 189 Fed. 926, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666.

217 In re Effinger, 184 Fed. 728, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 930; In re Denning, 114 Fed. 219, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 133; In re Rice, 164 Fed. 509, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; Wallerstein v. Ervin, 112 Fed. 124, 50 C. C. A. 129, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256; In re Carmichael, 96 Fed. 594, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; In re Ervin, 109 Fed. 135, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356. See In re Lough (C. C. A.) 182 Fed. 961, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597.

218 In re Ervin, 114 Fed. 596.

ruptcy proceedings. Thus, where judgments against a firm, in favor of certain of its creditors, were bought up by one of the partners, who took assignments of the judgments to himself, it was held that he thereby became a creditor of each of his copartners for their respective shares of the money advanced by him in purchasing the judgments, and was entitled to prove a claim for such share against the individual estate of one of the copartners in bankruptcy.[219] So, where a partnership is dissolved by consent, one partner buying the assets and assuming all the debts and liabilities of the firm, from which he agrees to save the other harmless, the relation of the former partners becomes that of principal and surety, and if the retiring partner is compelled to pay a debt of the firm, after an adjudication in bankruptcy against the continuing partner, the former may prove the amount so paid as a claim against the latter's estate in bankruptcy, making such proof in the name of the creditor; or if the creditor has already proved the debt, the partner paying it may have himself subrogated to the rights of such creditor.[220] In another case it appeared that, out of a firm consisting of four partners, two were insolvent, one was a bankrupt, and the fourth paid off and discharged all the firm debts out of his separate estate. It was held that he was entitled to prove against the separate estate of the bankrupt one-half of the amount so paid by him.[221] But a partner who has taken notes on the sale of his interest to his copartner cannot receive a dividend from the estate of the latter in bankruptcy until all partnership debts have been paid.[222] Where a member of a bankrupt firm is also a member of another firm, his partner, as the remaining member of the latter firm settling its affairs, may prove a debt against the bankrupt firm.[223] But the fact that two firms, carrying on business under different names in different places, are composed of identically the same persons, will not operate to give the claims of one firm against another firm the character of individual demands, as distinguished from partnership demands, against the others.[224]

[219] In re Carmichael, 96 Fed. 594, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815. See In re Mason, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 331; In re Eagles, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733. As to the right of the partner paying the debt to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor, see In re Smith, 16 N. B. R. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 12,991.

[220] In re Dillon, 100 Fed. 627, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63. And see In re Baker & Edwards (D. C.) 224 Fed. 611, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469.

[221] In re Deil, 5 Sawy. 344, Fed. Cas. No. 3,774.

[222] In re Jewett, 1 N. B. R. 495, Fed. Cas. No. 7,309.

[223] In re Buckhause, 2 Low. 331, 10 N. B. R. 206, Fed. Cas. No. 2,086.

[224] In re Stanton, Fed. Cas. No. 13,295. And see In re Vetterlein, 5 Ben. 311, Fed. Cas. No. 16,927.

§ 131. Discharge of Partners.—Where a firm and its members have been adjudged bankrupt on the voluntary petition of the partners composing it, either partner, without reference to the others, may present his individual petition for a separate discharge; and the petition should recite the adjudication of the firm and of the petitioner as a member of it, and should pray for a discharge from both firm and individual debts, and the notice to creditors should advise them of the same facts.[225] And while the trial of objections to the discharge of partners may be joint, the decrees thereon must be several.[226] The grounds of objection to an application for discharge will be fully discussed in another chapter. At present it will suffice to remark that the failure to keep proper books of account may prevent the discharge of both partners, although the fault was wholly that of one of them.[227] The discharge of one partner cannot be made operative in favor of the other; that is, it will not release the other from the indebtedness of the firm.[228] And a discharge in bankruptcy of two general partners cannot be set up in favor of a special partner in an action against the three as general partners, on the ground that the special partner had made himself liable as a general partner.[229] A discharge in bankruptcy granted to a member of a firm, in proceedings based on a voluntary petition in which both the firm and the individual partners joined, and on which the petitioners were adjudged bankrupt as prayed, should be made to cover his liability on the debts of the firm and also his individual indebtedness.[230] But when the partnership as such is not in bankruptcy, but only the individual partners on their separate voluntary petitions, they are not entitled to a discharge which will release them from the debts of the firm.[231] And conversely, when the proceeding in bank-

[225] In re Meyers, 97 Fed. 757, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260. Where a member of a firm filed a petition individually to be adjudged a bankrupt, and the petition was silent as to any partnership assets or liabilities, though the schedule disclosed individual and partnership debts, and the creditors of the firm were not notified, the bankrupt was not entitled to a discharge from firm debts, though the firm had been dissolved and was without assets, and the firm debts were barred by limitation. In re Morrison, 127 Fed. 186, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498.

[226] In re George, 1 Low. 409, Fed. Cas. No. 5,325.

[227] In re George, 1 Low. 409, Fed. Cas. No. 5,325.

[228] Payne v. Able, 7 Bush (Ky.) 344, 3 Am. Rep. 316, 4 N. B. R. 220.

[229] Abendroth v. Van Dolsen, 131 U. S. 66, 9 Sup. Ct. 619, 33 L. Ed. 57.

[230] In re Gay, 98 Fed. 870, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. See Keeler v. Snodgrass, 8 Wkly. Law Bul. (Ohio) 219: Curtis v. Woodward, 58 Wis. 499, 17 N. W. 328, 46 Am. Rep. 647. A discharge purporting on its face to release one member of a firm from his individual debts will not discharge him from the firm liabilities. Honegger v. Wettstein, 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 125.

[231] In re Meyers, 96 Fed. 408, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707.

ruptcy is against the firm, as a legal entity, but does not include adjudications against the partners separately, it is only the firm which is entitled to a discharge, and the court cannot grant discharges to the partners as individuals.[232]

[232] In re Neyland, 184 Fed. 144, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 879; In re Hale, 107 Fed. 432, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35.

CHAPTER IX

BANKRUPTCY OF CORPORATIONS

§ 132. Jurisdiction of Corporations.—Under the present Bankruptcy Act, as amended in 1910, all kinds of private corporations, including limited partnerships and other quasi corporate organizations, may file voluntary petitions in bankruptcy, except only railroad, insurance, and banking companies. Whether the directors of a corporation, without authority from the stockholders, have power to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, must be determined by the law of the state in which the corporation is organized. But under the general law, and in the absence of any provision on the subject in the statutes of the state, or in its articles of incorporation or its by-laws, the directors of a corporation have authority to execute a general assignment of its property for the benefit of its creditors; and such power may well be extended to the filing of a petition in voluntary bankruptcy.[1] A state court has no power, by any form of order or injunction, to limit the operation of the Bankruptcy Act, and therefore cannot enjoin a corporation from filing its petition

[1] In re Ann Arbor Mach. Corporation (C. C. A.) 274 Fed. 24; In re De Camp Glass Casket Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 558, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Fitts v. Custer Slide Mining & Development Co. (C. C, A.) 266 Fed. 864, 46 Am. Bankr. 101. After a receiver has been appointed for a corporation by a state court, under authority of the law of the state, with power to take possession of and hold the property of the corporation, its directors are without power to authorize the filing of a petition in voluntary bankruptcy and the surrender of its property to the bankruptcy court. In re Associated Oil Co. (D. C.) 271 Fed. 788, 46 Am. Bankr.

in voluntary bankruptcy.[2] But a court of bankruptcy cannot be compelled to exercise its jurisdiction in aid of a fraud, and it has power to permit the intervention of stockholders to contest a voluntary petition filed on behalf of the corporation by its officers and directors, upon a showing that the object of the proceeding was to avoid the effect of a judgment obtained by stockholders against the corporation and its directors for the appointment of a receiver for the corporation, and for an accounting by the directors for fraudulent mismanagement.[3]

As to compulsory or involuntary proceedings, the present provision is that an adjudication may be made in such proceedings against "any unincorporated company, and any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation, owing debts to the amount of one thousand dollars or over." A petition in involuntary bankruptcy against a corporation which does not show that it belongs to one or other of the enumerated classes is not sufficient to support an adjudication.[4] It is within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to determine whether the respondent is amenable to involuntary bankruptcy or not, in view of the nature of its business or occupation.[5] In other respects, the proceeding against a corporation is the same as in the case of an individual debtor. The same proportion of creditors, in number and amount, must join in a proceeding to force a corporation into bankruptcy that is required in the case of a natural person.[6]

In regard to the jurisdiction of the courts of bankruptcy over the

Rep. 482. There is no presumption of authority in an officer of a corporation to make and file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy for it, and he may not do so without the consent of the directors. Regal Cleaners & Dyers v. Merlis (C. C. A.) 274 Fed. 915. But a petition in voluntary bankruptcy filed by the attorney of a corporation, whose action was ratified by a majority of the stockholders and by all the directors who were competent to act for it, the other directors having claims against it, was held sufficient to give the court jurisdiction. In re People's Warehouse Co. (D. C.) 273 Fed. 611.

[2] In re Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 155, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142. The decree in this case was reversed on appeal (Zeitinger v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 Fed. 719, 157 C. C. A. 167, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324, but not on the proposition stated in the text, but because the directors, in filing a voluntary petition for the corporation, were attempting a fraud on the stockholders.

[3] Zeitinger v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 Fed. 719, 157 C. C. A. 167, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

[4] In re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Pub. Co., 3 Sawy. 614, Fed. Cas. No. 10,561.

[5] T. E. Hill Co. v. Contractor's Supply & Equipment Co., 156 Ill. App. 270. Though a company against which a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed may not have been subject to adjudication, yet a court of bankruptcy which entertained the petition and appointed a receiver had jurisdiction over the parties and the subject-matter. In re Wilkes-Barre Light Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 807, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99.

[6] In re Leavenworth Sav. Bank, 4 Dill. 363, 14 N. B. R. 92, Fed. Cas. No. 8,165; In re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Pub. Co., 3 Sawy. 614, 14 N. B. R. 405, Fed. Cas. No. 10,561.

person of the debtor, the terms of the act are very broad. They have authority to make an adjudication in bankruptcy against persons (including corporations) who "have had their principal place of business, resided, or had their domicile, within their respective territorial jurisdictions for the preceding six months or the greater portion thereof." (Section 2, clause 1.) It is now reasonably well settled that the residence or domicile of a corporation can be only in that state from which it derives its charter or under whose laws it was organized. For purposes of federal jurisdiction, it does not become a "citizen" or a "resident" of any other state by maintaining a place of business in such other state, even though that may be its principal or exclusive place of business.[7] But the terms of the bankruptcy act are much wider than this, and, indeed, it would be singularly lacking in efficiency if an adjudication could only be made in the district where a corporation was officially a "resident" or had its "domicile." And it is now well settled that, in the case of a corporation organized under the laws of one state but which carries on business in another state or in several other states, it is not necessary that proceedings in bankruptcy should be instituted in the federal court in the state from which it derives its charter (though that court would have jurisdiction by reason of the "domicile" of the corporation), but may be maintained in that district, wherever it may be, in which the company has its chief or principal place of business.[8] The whereabouts of the principal place of business of a corporation, for the purposes of jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings against it, is a question of fact, and the decision of it is not controlled either by the place of incorporation or by any provision in the charter of the company as

[7] In re Mathews Consol. Slate Co., 144 Fed. 724, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 779, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350; Germania Fire Ins. Co. v. Francis, 11 Wall. 210, 20 L. Ed. 77; Shaw v. Mining Co., 145 U. S. 444, 12 Sup. Ct. 935, 36 L. Ed. 768; Southern Pacific Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 13 Sup. Ct. 44, 36 L. Ed. 942; Ward v. Blake Mfg. Co., 56 Fed. 437, 5 C. C. A. 538; National Typographic Co. v. New York Typographic Co., 44 Fed. 711; Overman Wheel Co. v. Pope Mfg. Co., 46 Fed. 577; Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 6 Blatchf. 105, Fed. Cas. No. 6,204; Guinn v. Iowa Cent. Ry. Co., 14 Fed. 323.

[8] In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., 159 Fed. 901, 87 C. C. A. 81, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re Alaska American Fish Co., 162 Fed. 498, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712; Dressel v. North State Lumber Co., 107 Fed. 255, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744; In re Magid-Hope Silk Mfg. Co., 110 Fed. 352, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; Tiffany v. La Plume Condensed Milk Co., 141 Fed. 444, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413; Home Powder Co. v. Geis (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 568, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580. But in determining in what jurisdiction the principal place of business of a bankrupt corporation is located, doubt should be resolved in favor of that jurisdiction where it obtained its corporate existence, and where it is usually required to maintain an office. In re Tennessee Const. Co., 207 Fed. 203. The court of the district in which the corporation has its domicile has priority of jurisdiction over the court of the district in which it has its chief place of business. In re New Era Novelty Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 298, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

to where its principal office shall be located.[9] It is likewise immaterial that a corporation which maintains its principal place of business in a state other than that in which it was incorporated has not complied with the laws of the foreign state, as to filing its articles of incorporation, obtaining a certificate, paying a license fee, or other requirements necessary to its lawful right to do business therein.[10] Actual maintenance of a principal place of business therein is sufficient to give jurisdiction, though it be unlicensed or otherwise contrary to law. But questions of great difficulty sometimes arise in determining what is the "principal" place of business. There are some decisions to the effect that, although a company may have its home office in one state, where its officers are and where its directors meet, and where its records are kept and its finances administered, this is not the place where it is "carrying on business" if its actual operations are conducted in another state, where its mines, shops, factories, mills, or railroad are located.[11] But the modern decisions have generally abandoned this rule, probably in view of the change in methods of corporate management and the tendency to separate the office from the factory and to establish the executive administration in the larger cities, and probably also in view of the fact that it is ordinarily much more convenient to settle the affairs of an insolvent corporation at the place where its records are kept and its financial business transacted. Accordingly, it is generally held that where a corporation operates factories, mills, mines, or other works in one state, but maintains a head office in another state, from which supreme direction and control are exercised over all its business, and where its directors hold their meetings, its records and accounts are kept, its correspondence conducted, and its banking business mainly done, it is the latter place, and not the former, which constitutes the company's principal place of business, and where proceedings in bankruptcy against it may be instituted.[12]

[9] In re Pennsylvania Consol. Coal Co., 163 Fed. 579, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Guanacevi Tunnel Co. (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 316, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229; In re Wenatchee-Stratford Orchard Co., 205 Fed. 964, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; In re R. H. Pennington & Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 388, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; In re San Antonio Land & Irrigation Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 984, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512.

[10] In re Duplex Radiator Co., 142 Fed. 906, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; In re Perry Aldrich Co., 165 Fed. 249, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

[11] In re Alabama & C. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 390, 6 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 124; Continental Coal Corp. v. Roszelle Bros., 242 Fed. 243, 155 C. C. A. 83, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562; Roszell Bros. v. Continental Coal Corp. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 343, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; In re Beiermeister Bros. Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 945, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

[12] Burdick v. Dillon, 144 Fed. 737, 75 C. C. A. 603; In re Marine Machine & Conveyor Co., 91 Fed. 630, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Mathews Consol. Slate Co., 144 Fed. 724, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 779, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350; In re Pennsylvania Consol. Coal Co., 163 Fed. 579, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872. Compare In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; In re Tygarts River Coal Co., 203 Fed. 178, 30 Am. Bankr.

But where a company having both its executive offices and its plant in one state ceases to manufacture any products, the fact that it continues to make sales of its finished goods through an agent in another state does not operate to transfer its principal place of business to the latter state.[13] And so, where a company, incorporated in one state and doing business in another, sold most of its stock and gave up its place of business, and went into the hands of receivers appointed by a court of the state of its domicile, who took charge of the remaining property in the other state, all about six months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against it, it was held that a federal court in the latter state had no jurisdiction of the petition.[14]

Returning to the subject of residence or domicile, it may be observed that if a corporation, already enjoying corporate existence under the laws of one state, receives also a charter from another state, it becomes, for purposes of jurisdiction, a resident or citizen of either state and of both.[15] And where the same corporation thus enjoys a corporate existence by legislative recognition in two states at once, and successive petitions in bankruptcy are filed against it in the federal courts within each of those states, that court which first acquires jurisdiction by the filing of the petition will retain it, and must be permitted to exercise it to the fullest extent, without interference by any other court.[16] And so, where a bankrupt corporation has its domicile in one judicial district, and its principal place of business in another, the courts of bankruptcy of both districts will have concurrent jurisdiction of involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy against it.[17]

§ 133. Same; Effect of Proceedings for Dissolution Under State Law.—A corporation which is subject to the provisions of the act, and has committed an act of bankruptcy, and which is in existence when the petition against it is filed and when the proper papers are served on its proper officer, cannot oust the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to proceed to an adjudication on the return day, because a decree dissolving the corporation has been made after such service and before such

Rep. 183. And see In re Worcester Footwear Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 760, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

[13] In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[14] In re Perry Aldrich Co., 165 Fed. 249, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244. And see In re Thomas McNally Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 291, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382.

[15] Railroad Co. v. Harris, 12 Wall. 65, 20 L. Ed. 354; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Alabama, 107 U. S. 581, 2 Sup. Ct. 432, 27 L. Ed. 518; Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co., 2 Abb. U. S. 323, Fed. Cas. No. 9,645; Horne v. Boston & M. R. Co., 18 Fed. 50.

[16] In re Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 101, 6 N. B. R. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 1,677.

[17] In re United Button Co., 137 Fed. 668, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; In re New Era Novelty Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 298, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

return day.[18] And it is even held that the federal court has power to declare a corporation bankrupt, notwithstanding its dissolution by decree of a state court, and the appointment of a receiver to wind up its affairs, before the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, provided that such proceedings are begun within four months after such dissolution, that being the time within which an act of bankruptcy must be alleged.[19] At any rate it seems clear that where a corporation, being insolvent, commits an act of bankruptcy by preferring certain of its creditors, the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to adjudge it bankrupt and administer its property attaches, and the company cannot avoid such jurisdiction and validate its preferences by instituting proceedings for its dissolution in a state court before proceedings in bankruptcy against it are commenced.[20] It is also held that proceedings taken by a state to forfeit the charter of one of its corporations for nonpayment of state taxes, or to suspend it or enjoin it from all corporate activity until such delinquency shall be removed, do not destroy the corporation so as to prevent the institution of proceedings in bank-

[18] Platt v. Archer, 9 Blatchf. 559, 6 N. B. R. 465, Fed. Cas. No. 11,213. "It is argued that, as the dissolution of the corporation has been adjudged and decreed in the state court prior to the hearing, although since the institution of the proceedings in the bankruptcy court, such proceedings abated, and no adjudication in bankruptcy should be rendered, as the corporation is dead, and no judgment can be rendered against a dead man. As to this, we think it only necessary to refer to section 8 of the bankruptcy act in relation to the death or insanity of the bankrupt, and by analogy hold that the section applies to a corporation that seeks by suicide to defeat properly instituted proceedings in bankruptcy." Scheuer v. Smith & Montgomery Book & Stationery Co., 112 Fed. 407, 50 C. C. A. 312, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

[19] Morehouse v. Giant Powder Co. (C. C. A.) 206 Fed. 24; In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., 159 Fed. 901, 87 C. C. A. 81, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; Tiffany v. La Plume Condensed Milk Co., 141 Fed. 444, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 413; In re Belfast Mesh Underwear Co., 153 Fed. 224, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620; White Mountain Paper Co. v. Morse, 127 Fed. 643, 62 C. C. A. 369, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; In re Independent Ins. Co., 2 Low. 97, 6 N. B. R. 169, Fed. Cas. No. 7,018; In re Green Pond R. Co., 13 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 5,786; In re Safe Deposit & Sav. Inst., 7 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 12,211; In re Washington Marine Ins. Co., 2 Ben. 292, 2 N. B. R. 648, Fed. Cas. No. 17,246; Thornhill v. Bank of Louisiana, 1 Woods, 1, Fed. Cas. No. 13,992; In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; In re New Amsterdam Ins. Co., 6 Ben. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 10,140. And see In re Storck Lumber Co., 114 Fed. 360, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86, where it was said: "Upon the broad principle that the national bankrupt law is to govern the administration of the estates of all insolvent debtors, and supersedes all the state laws having a like object, when its provisions are invoked by the requisite creditors and acts of bankruptcy are proven, a motion made by the receiver of a corporation, appointed under a suit [statute?] for winding up insolvent corporations, which is in the nature of a proceeding in insolvency, to quash the petition in involuntary bankruptcy theretofore filed against the corporation, upon the ground that the state court had full jurisdiction when it entered its decree dissolving the corporation, and that, when said petition was filed, the corporation was no longer in existence, must be overruled."

[20] In re Adams & Hoyt Co., 164 Fed. 489, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; Scheuer v.

ruptcy against it or its appearance by attorney therein.[21] The same is true of the proceedings taken under a statute of Pennsylvania, by which all the property of an insolvent corporation is sold under a special writ of fieri facias for distribution among its creditors. This does not work a dissolution of the corporation so as to defeat subsequent bankruptcy proceedings against it, based on such proceedings as an act of bankruptcy.[22] Neither is the court of bankruptcy deprived of jurisdiction by the appointment of receivers for a manufacturing corporation and its ceasing to do business in consequence, before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against it,[23] nor by its election of liquidating trustees, as authorized by a state statute, which further provides that, upon their giving notice by publication, the company "shall cease to carry on its business, except so far as may be required for the beneficial winding up thereof." [24]

Some of the state courts have held that, under state laws empowering them to dissolve a corporation which has abandoned its business and neglected to wind up its affairs, they are not precluded from doing so because a federal court has obtained control of the corporation's property by proceedings in bankruptcy.[25] This may be correct doctrine, so far as regards a mere decree of dissolution. But no federal court could be expected to admit that the process of the state court could extend to the property within its own control, or in any manner regulate its administration or distribution. For the jurisdiction of a federal court, once attaching in bankruptcy proceedings, is not co-ordinate with that of the state courts, but superior and exclusive.

§ 134. Corporations Amenable to Bankruptcy Law.—As originally enacted the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 provided for proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy against "any corporation engaged principally in manufacturing, trading, printing, publishing, or mercantile pursuits," with the further provision that "private bankers, but not national banks or banks incorporated under state or territorial laws, may be adjudged involuntary bankrupts." Section 4. Doubts having arisen whether companies engaged in the business of mining should be considered as

Smith & Montgomery Book & Stationery Co., 112 Fed. 407, 50 C. C. A. 312, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

[21] In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., 159 Fed. 901, 87 C. C. A. 81, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re Double Star Brick Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 980, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 149.

[22] In re International Coal Min. Co., 143 Fed. 665, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309; Cresson & Clearfield Coal & Coke Co. v. Stauffer, 148 Fed. 981, 78 C. C. A. 609, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573.

[23] In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

[24] In re Hercules Atkin Co., 133 Fed. 813, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[25] Hart v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 40 Conn. 524.

within the terms of the act,[26] they were expressly included by an amendment adopted in 1903.[27] But seven years later, this section of the act underwent a drastic revision, and there was substituted for the language above quoted a provision bringing within the terms of the law, as to involuntary proceedings, "any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation."[28] The statute, it is held, is not lacking in the "uniformity" required by the Constitution although it discriminates between different classes of corporations, nor is the classification adopted by Congress unreasonable or beyond the limits of its discretion.[29] But it is to be strictly construed in this regard, and cannot be held to include any corporation not clearly within the enumeration.[30] The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine whether or not a given corporation comes within the terms of the law.[31]

There has been some doubt as to whether it was a jurisdictional requisite that the corporation should be actually carrying on one of the enumerated lines of business, at the time of the institution of proceedings against it, chiefly in view of the original provision giving jurisdiction over corporations "engaged principally" in manufacturing, etc. Some of the cases hold that a corporation chartered for a certain purpose is to be regarded (in bankruptcy proceedings) as engaged in the business contemplated by the charter from the time it starts to put itself in shape to pursue the object for which it was incorporated, and is amenable to bankruptcy proceedings although it has not yet completed its plant, or started its works, or turned out any finished product.[32] But perhaps the better reason as well as the preponderance of authority is with the decisions which maintain that, to authorize an adjudication against a corporation on the ground of its being "engaged principally" in some line of business within the terms of the statute, it is not sufficient that its charter authorizes it to engage in such business, nor that it may have the intention of so engaging. If, up to the time of the filing of a petition against it, it has never done any business, except of a

[26] See Infra, § 139.

[27] Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[28] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

[29] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[30] In re New York & New Jersey Ice Lines, 147 Fed. 214, 77 C. C. A. 440, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832.

[31] T. E. Hill Co. v. Contractors' Supply & Equipment Co., 249 Ill. 304, 94 N. E. 544. See In re Broadway Savings Trust Co. (C. C. A.) 152 Fed. 152, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

[32] Bollinger v. Central Nat. Bank, 177 Fed. 609, 101 C. C. A. 235, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44; In re Bloomsburg Brewing Co., 172 Fed. 174, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625; White Mountain Paper Co. v. Morse, 127 Fed. 643, 62 C. C. A. 369, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; In re White Mountain Paper Co., 127 Fed. 180, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491.

preparatory kind, it is not subject to adjudication.[33] It is further to be remarked that the liability of a corporation to bankruptcy proceedings depends on the business it actually transacts, and not on the business it is empowered by its charter to do.[34] And if the occupation which it pursues is one that brings it within the terms of the act, it is no defense to a petition against it that such business was ultra vires.[35] There is also to be considered the case where a corporation is engaged in two or more distinct lines of business, one of which would subject it to the operation of the bankruptcy act, while the other or others would not. Here it is held that the question of the liability of the company to involuntary proceedings depends on the nature of that business which is its chief or principal pursuit.[36] But if it is carrying on two lines of business, both of which are within the terms of the act, it is of course immaterial which is to be considered its "principal" business.[37] And if the business of the corporation was of one of the kinds enumerated in the statute, it is none the less liable to be adjudged bankrupt because it has ceased to operate before the commencement of the proceedings.[38]

§ 135. Trading and Mercantile Corporations.—Though the original provision of the statute in regard to companies engaged in "trading or mercantile pursuits" has now been superseded by the wider provision as to "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations," it is important to consider the judicial constructions given to the earlier clause, because the amendment of 1910 was probably adopted in view of the fact that many corporations were escaping from bankruptcy proceedings, by reason of such constructions, which, in the judgment of Congress, should be made amenable to the law.

[33] In re Coolidge Refrigerator & Car Co., 190 Fed. 908, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; In re New England Breeders Club, 165 Fed. 517, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; In re Chicago-Joplin Lead & Zinc Co., 104 Fed. 67, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712; In re Tontine Surety Co., 116 Fed. 401, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; In re Toledo Portland Cement Co., 156 Fed. 83, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117.

[34] In re Kingston Realty Co., 160 Fed. 445, 87 C. C. A. 406, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845. But see In re H. J. Quimby Freight Forwarding Co., 121 Fed. 139, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424, holding that, while the susceptibility to bankruptcy of a corporation does not depend wholly on its charter, yet it can hardly be brought within the scope of the act by a principal business outside its charter; and therefore a company whose only authorized business is that of a carrier is not liable to bankruptcy on the ground that its principal business is in fact that of a trader.

[35] In re Kingston Realty Co., 157 Fed. 299, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465.

[36] Cate v. Connell, 173 Fed. 445, 97 C. C. A. 647; In re Interstate Paving Co., 171 Fed. 604, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572. See In re Humphrey Advertising Co., 177 Fed. 187, 101 C. C. A. 1, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41.

[37] Burdick v. Dillon, 144 Fed. 737, 75 C. C. A. 603.

[38] Robertson v. Union Potteries Co., 177 Fed. 279, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121. See J. W. Calnan Co. v. Doherty, 174 Fed. 222, 98 C. C. A. 130, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297.

At the present day it cannot be said that there is any practical distinction between a "trader" and a "merchant," or between "trading" and "mercantile pursuits." Although, in a very colloquial sense, "trade" means the exchange of commodities, its legal signification is not so restricted. A merchant or trader is a person who pursues the business of buying commodities, either for money or in exchange for other commodities, for the purpose and with the intention of selling them again at a profit. He is, in fact, one whose avocation is to buy goods, wares, and merchandise to sell again, and who does both, not occasionally or incidentally, but habitually and as a business.[39] Both the elements of purchase with a view to sale, and of habit or continuity in the business, are necessary to constitute a trader. The mere purchase of articles and their subsequent sale will not make one a merchant or trader, within the meaning of the law, if the commodities were not bought for the purpose of being sold again.[40] And again, occasional or incidental dealings in the way of trade will not fix this character upon him. He must pursue it as a business. This is especially true under the provision of the act that proceedings in bankruptcy would lie against a corporation engaged "principally" in trading or mercantile pursuits. To illustrate, a person whose business is that of farming is not a trader, though he may occasionally buy and sell horses, cattle, and hay.[41] Nor is a teamster who, even to a very considerable extent, buys and sells hay and straw, for the bona fide purpose of keeping his teams from standing idle,[42] nor a theatrical manager who buys costumes and machinery for use in his business, and who on a few occasions has sold some such property,[43] nor a bank cashier who buys paintings from time to time, and sells them at auction.[44] So, although a water company may be authorized by its charter to "buy, sell, use, and deal in water for power, manufacturing, and hydraulic purposes," yet if its business is actually confined to supplying water for domestic consumption and to municipal fire departments, it cannot be said to be "engaged principally in trading or mercantile pursuits."[45]

[39] Zugalla v. International Mercantile Agency, 142 Fed. 927, 74 C. C. A. 97, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67; In re H. J. Quimby Freight Forwarding Co., 121 Fed. 139, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; In re Tontine Surety Co., 116 Fed. 401, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421; Com. v. Natural Gas Co., 32 Pittsb. Leg. J. 309; State v. Smith, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 394; Lansdale v. Brashear, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 330; In re Tyler, 4 N. B. R. 104, Fed. Cas. No. 14,305; Wakeman v. Hoyt, 5 Law Rep. 309, Fed. Cas. No. 17,051.

[40] In re Rogers, 1 Low. 423, 3 N. B. R. 564, Fed. Cas. No. 12,001.

[41] In re Cote, 2 Low. 374, 14 N. B. R. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 3,267; In re Ragsdale, 7 Biss. 154, 16 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 11,530.

[42] In re Kimball, 7 Fed. 461.

[43] In re Duff, 4 Fed. 519.

[44] In re Chapman, 9 Ben. 311, Fed. Cas. No. 2,601.

[45] In re New York & W. Water Co., 98 Fed. 711, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

The following persons have been held to be "merchants" or "traders," within the meaning of former bankruptcy statutes: A dealer in natural ice;[46] a person engaged in the manufacture and sale of lumber;[47] one engaged in the operation of a planing mill;[48] a person who buys and sells furniture on his own account and has a shop where his goods are displayed;[49] a tin-smith who also keeps a stock of hardware;[50] a baker who buys flour, which he makes into bread, and sells the bread to daily customers;[51] a man who boards horses;[52] a person who keeps a bar or an inn and sells there, for cash and on credit, cigars and liquors bought in quantity;[53] a stair-builder who buys lumber, nails, and other necessary materials, and works them up into stairs for persons who give him orders therefor and pay him a gross price therefor delivered and completed;[54] a butcher who buys cattle on the hoof, and sells some of them, and converts the rest into money by slaughtering and disposing of the product as meat.[55] It has also been held, under the present statute, that a corporation which owns and maintains a private hospital for consumptives, conducting its business for profit and not as a charity, furnishing to its patients the usual accommodations of a hotel, and treating their disease chiefly by the inhalation of an antiseptic vapor chemically prepared on the premises, though it is not a "manufacturing" corporation, within the meaning of the statute, is "engaged principally in trading or mercantile pursuits," and may therefore be adjudged bankrupt in involuntary proceedings against it.[56] A similar ruling has been made in regard to a corporation conducting the business of a mercantile agency, and chiefly occupied in gathering information and printing and publishing a book of ratings with respect to the standing of merchants.[57] Also, on the theory that electricity generated for the purpose of light, heat, and power is a product of "manufacture" and a commercial commodity, it has been held that a corporation whose business is to buy electricity and resell it to consum-

[46] City of Kansas v. Vindquest, 36 Mo. App. 584.

[47] In re Cowles, 1 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 3,297.

[48] Baldwin v. Rosseau, Fed. Cas. No. 803.

[49] In re Newman, 3 Ben. 20, 2 N. B. R. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 10,175.

[50] In re Sawyer, 2 Hask. 337, Fed. Cas. No. 12,394.

[51] In re Cocks, 3 Ben. 260, Fed. Cas. No. 2,933.

[52] In re Morton Boarding Stables, 108 Fed. 791, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763; In re Odell, 9 Ben. 209, 17 N. B. R. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 10,426. But compare In re Wilkis Cab & Automobile Co., 178 Fed. 113, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 593.

[53] In re Sherwood, 9 Ben. 66, 17 N. B. R. 112, Fed. Cas. No. 12,773; In re Ryan, 2 Sawy. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 12,183.

[54] In re Garrison, 5 Ben. 430, 7 N. B. R. 287, Fed. Cas. No. 5,254.

[55] In re Bassett, 8 Fed. 266.

[56] In re San Gabriel Sanatorium Co., 95 Fed. 271, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408.

[57] In re Mutual Mercantile Agency, 111 Fed. 152, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 607. But compare Zugalla v. International Mercantile Agency, 142 Fed. 927, 74 C. C. A. 97, 16 Am. Bankr. 67.

ers for such purposes at a profit is engaged in "trading," within the meaning of the statute.[58]

On the other hand, in regard to the following, it has been held that they are not to be accounted merchants or traders within the meaning of the law: An owner of oil lands, who divides them into leaseholds and receives the rent in oil, as he deals only in the product of his land;[59] a water-supply company, engaged in the business of obtaining, transporting, and supplying pure water for municipal and domestic use;[60] a man who speculates in stocks, buying and selling them through brokers, but not keeping an office for that purpose nor acting as a commission broker for others;[61] a corporation whose charter authorizes it to deal in notes, loans, and bonds;[62] one who contracts with a railroad company to grade and build its road;[63] the keeper of a livery stable;[64] one who superintends the running of a steamboat, and, as treasurer of the corporation owning her, receives and disburses the money earned by the vessel;[65] a corporation engaged in conducting a general fire insurance agency;[66] one occupied in buying and selling improved and unimproved real estate;[67] one operating, for profit, a circulating library;[68] a building and loan association;[69] a corporation conducting a public warehouse;[70] one engaged in the business of soliciting advertisements and placing them in newspapers at rates previously obtained;[71] a company incorporated for the purpose of giving theatrical performances and engaged solely in that business;[72] a common carrier;[73] a cor-

[58] In re Charles Town Light & Power Co., 183 Fed. 160, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

[59] In re Woods, 7 N. B. R. 126, Fed. Cas. No. 17,990.

[60] In re New York & W. Water Co., 98 Fed. 711, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[61] In re Surety Guarantee & Trust Co., 121 Fed. 73, 56 C. C. A. 654, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Marston, 5 Ben. 313, Fed. Cas. No. 9,142; In re Woodward, 8 Ben. 563, Fed. Cas. No. 18,001. But see In re H. R. Leighton & Co., 147 Fed. 311, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

[62] Murphy v. Penniman, 105 Md. 452, 66 Atl. 282, 121 Am. St. Rep. 583.

[63] In re Smith, 2 Low. 69, Fed. Cas. No. 12,981; In re Minnesota & A. Const. Co., 7 Ariz. 137, 60 Pac. 881.

[64] Hall v. Cooley, Fed. Cas. No. 5,928; Gallagher v. De Lancey Stables Co., 158 Fed. 381, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801.

[65] In re Merritt, 7 Fed. 853.

[66] In re Moore & Muir Co., 173 Fed. 732, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

[67] In re Kingston Realty Co., 160 Fed. 445, 87 C. C. A. 406, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845.

[68] In re Parmelee Library, 120 Fed. 235, 56 C. C. A. 583, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568. On nearly the same principle, a corporation whose business is renting films for moving pictures is not engaged in trading or a mercantile pursuit. In re Imperial Film Exchange, 198 Fed. 80, 117 C. C. A. 188, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[69] In re New York Building-Loan Banking Co., 127 Fed. 471, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[70] In re Pacific Coast Warehouse Co., 123 Fed. 740.

[71] In re Snyder & Johnson Co., 133 Fed. 806, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[72] In re Oriental Society, 104 Fed. 975, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 219. So as to a corporation whose business is renting films for moving pictures. In re Imperial Film Exchange, 198 Fed. 80, 117 C. C. A. 188, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[73] In re Philadelphia & Lewes Transp.

poration engaged in conducting a hotel, a restaurant, or a saloon;[74] and one operating a laundry.[75]

But it is very essential to notice that most, if not all, of the avocations or pursuits mentioned in the preceding paragraph would come within the terms of the law as it now stands. That is to say, a corporation engaged in carrying on any one of those various lines of business would almost certainly be held to be within the description of "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations."

§ 136. Manufacturing Corporations.—For the reasons stated in the preceding section, it is necessary also to pay some attention to the previous decisions construing the term "manufacturing." For while a manufacturing corporation may or may not be also describable as a "commercial" corporation, it is certainly a "moneyed" or a "business" company; and on the other hand, many companies which were held not to be "engaged principally in manufacturing" would clearly come within the broader language of the amendment of 1910. And first, it is necessary to advert to the distinction between "manufacturing" and "mercantile pursuits." In the case of a merchant, as well as a manufacturer, there is a common element of purchasing personal property with a view of making a gain or profit. But a manufacturer attains the object "by adding to the value of the property after purchase, by some process or combination with other materials, while the merchant is supposed to get his advanced price or profit by selling the article as it is, without subjecting it to any change by hand, by machinery, or by art. The material entering into the manufactured article may be modified more or less in its identity, as it passes through the several stages of a manufacturing process, but the merchant deals in the manufactured article itself, or its constituents, by buying and selling them in the same condition in which he purchases them. His business is that of exchanges, and not of making or fabricating from raw materials."[76]

Co., 114 Fed. 403, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707; In re H. J. Quimby Freight Forwarding Co., 121 Fed. 139, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

[74] Toxaway Hotel Co. v. J. L. Smathers & Co., 216 U. S. 439, 30 Sup. Ct. 263, 54 L. Ed. 558, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; Nollman & Co. v. Wentworth Lunch Co., 217 U. S. 591, 30 Sup. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 895; In re United States Hotel Co., 134 Fed. 225, 67 C. C. A. 153, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 403; In re Wentworth Lunch Co., 159 Fed. 413, 86 C. C. A. 393, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Chesapeake Oyster & Fish Co., 112 Fed. 960, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173; In re Barton Hotel Co., 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335.

[75] In re Eagle Steam Laundry Co., 184 Fed. 949, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 868.

[76] Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Bankr. Rep. 103. And see further, People v. Roberts, 90 Hun, 533, 36 N. Y. Supp. 73; Eaton v. Walker, 76 Mich. 579, 43 N. W. 638, 6 L. R. A. 102; Walker Roofing & Heating Co. v. Merchant & Evans Co., 173 Fed. 771, 97 C. C. A. 495, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185; In re Church Const. Co., 157 Fed. 298, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

Proceeding now to specify examples of these questions, we find decisions to the effect that the production of illuminating gas and supplying it to consumers is a manufacture, and that corporations organized for this purpose and engaged in this business are "manufacturing companies." [77] Not so, however, with natural gas. A company engaged in supplying natural gas to customers for light and heat is not a manufacturing company.[78] As to electric companies, the decisions are squarely opposed. In some states, it is held that a company generating electricity and selling it to consumers for power, illuminating, or heating purposes, is not a manufacturing company, within the meaning of statutes exempting the capital stock of such companies from taxation.[79] But in other states, it is as decidedly held that such a corporation is within the terms of a similar statute.[80] Again, a corporation engaged in supplying its tenants with steam power, to enable it the more readily to rent its buildings and rooms, has been adjudged not a manufacturer.[81] And on the same principle which was held to determine the case of natural gas, that it is a product of nature and not of any manufacturing process, it has been ruled that hay is not a "manufactured article." [82] As to natural ice, there is again a difference of judicial opinion. It was very sensibly said by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts: "The cutting of ice produced by the agencies of nature, on the surface of a pond, into pieces of a size convenient for handling, and storing the pieces in a building, cannot in any proper sense be called a maufacture. The material is in no way changed or adapted to any new or different use; it still remains ice, to be used simply as ice; it is no more a manufacture than putting the water from the pond into casks for transportation and use would be a manufacture." [83] And a similar conclusion has been reached by the courts in New York.[84] On the other hand, in Michigan, it is ruled that the business of cutting natural ice from a river or lake and preparing it for use as an article of consumption, by clearing it from [77] Nassau Gas-Light Co. v. City of Brooklyn, 89 N. Y. 409. But see Shreveport Gas Co. v. Assessor, 47 La. Ann. 65, 16 South. 650; Ottawa Gas-Light Co. v. Downey, 127 Ill. 201, 20 N. E. 20.

[78] Emerson v. Com., 108 Pa. St. 111. And see Com. v. Natural Gas. Co., 32 Pittsb. Leg. J. 309.

[79] Com. v. Northern Electric L. & P. Co., 145 Pa. St. 105, 22 Atl. 839, 14 L. R. A. 107; Com. v. Edison Electric L. & P. Co., 170 Pa. St. 231, 32 Atl. 419; Frederick Electric L. & P. Co. v. Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 Atl. 362, 36 L. R. A. 130; Com. v. Brush Electric Light Co., 145 Pa. St. 147, 22 Atl. 844.

[80] People v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 29 N. E. 808, 14 L. R. A. 708; People v. Campbell, 88 Hun, 527, 34 N. Y. Supp. 711.

[81] Com. v. Arrott Steam-Power Mills Co., 145 Pa. St. 69, 22 Atl. 243.

[82] Frazee v. Moffitt, 20 Blatchf. 267, 18 Fed. 584.

[83] Hittinger v. Westford, 135 Mass. 258.

[84] People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669. And see In re New York & New Jersey Ice Lines, 147 Fed. 214, 77 C. C. A. 440, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832.

snow and reducing it to blocks of a convenient size, is manufacturing.[85] And however this may be, a company carrying on a wholesale and retail ice business, and selling not only ice of its own harvesting, but also large quantities which it buys from third parties, is certainly engaged in "mercantile pursuits," and liable to adjudication in bankruptcy.[86] And it is also clear that the production of artificial ice by frigorific processes, as an article of commerce, is within the description of "manufacturing."[87] In this connection it may be mentioned that an aqueduct company is not a manufacturing corporation, although it purifies the water before distributing it by means of filters and screens.[88] The business of slaughtering cattle and refrigerating the carcasses and shipping them to points for sale is not manufacturing,[89] though it seems that a company which buys and slaughters hogs, and subjects them to certain processes and combinations with other materials, requiring the application of skill, labor, and capital, and converts them into lard and cured meats, for the purpose of adding to the value thereof, with a view of making gain or profit, is engaged in manufacturing.[90] And so of a company carrying on the business of catching fish, and preserving them by salt and marketing them, and which owns and operates a plant for the preparing, preserving, and packing of the fish.[91] It is also held that the term "manufacturing" includes the business of refining and preparing for use oil, coal, and other minerals.[92] But the business of converting trees and logs into marketable lumber, in a saw mill, is not manufacturing,[93] though it seems that a corporation whose business is the production of kindling-wood from slabs, by the use of machinery, skill, capital and labor, which article is different in form and condition from the material out of which it was made, being specially prepared for use as a kindler for anthracite coal, and known under a distinctive name, is engaged in the business of manufacturing.[94] On the other hand, it has been held that a planing mill, engaged in dressing rough lumber into plain and [85] Attorney General v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 26 N. W. 311, 60 Am. Rep. 287.

[86] First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448; City v. Kansas v. Vindquest, 36 Mo. App. 584.

[87] People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669. Compare Greenville Ice & Coal Co. v. City of Greenville, 69 Miss. 86, 10 South. 574.

[88] Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp., 100 Mass. 183.

[89] People v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 408, 50 N. E. 53, 41 L. R. A. 228.

[90] Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Rep. 103. And see State v. Whittaker, 33 Mo. 457; In re Bassett, 8 Fed. 266.

[91] In re Alaska-American Fish Co., 162 Fed. 498, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[92] Hawes v. Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Co., 101 Mass. 385.

[93] Jones v. Raines, 35 La. Ann. 996. Compare In re Chandler, 1 Low. 478, 4 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. No. 2,591.

[94] People v. Roberts, 20 App. Div. 514, 47 N. Y. Supp. 122. Compare Correio v. Lynch, 65 Cal. 273, 3 Pac. 889.

tongued and grooved weatherboarding, flooring, and ceiling, and also in making mouldings, door and window casings, baseboards, and wainscoting, is not a manufacturing concern such as to be entitled to be exempt from taxation.[95] But a corporation which buys lumber, iron, and other materials in the rough, and at its own shops finishes, shapes, designs, and makes such materials suitable for use, and puts the same together in the erection of bridge, roofs, and other structures, is a manufacturing company.[96] And generally, a construction company is to be regarded as engaged in manufacturing, whether its products be ships and vessels, concrete piers, waterworks and sewers, bridges, houses, or other structures.[97] But not one which merely constructs houses on its own land.[98] A company operating a steam flouring mill is a manufacturing corporation,[99] but not a grain elevator company engaged in buying, selling, and storing grain, building and operating grain warehouses, and incidentally dealing in coal, lime, and cement.[100] A book-binder who also makes blank books has been held to be a manufacturer,[101] but not one who prints bill-heads, orders, and other forms for commercial purposes, on paper bought by him, and who cuts and folds the paper into shapes for such purposes, as well as to serve for ledgers and other commercial books.[102] A company engaged in mixing teas and in roasting, grinding, and mixing coffee is not a manufacturing corporation.[103] Nor is the making of soda, vichy, seltzer, and similar drinks, a manufacture of chemicals, within a statute granting exemption from taxation.[104] But the building and construction of locomotive engines is manufacturing, and not the less so because a portion of the materials used in the con-

[95] Whited v. Bledsoe, 49 La. Ann. 325, 21 South. 538.

[96] Com. v. Keystone Bridge Co., 156 Pa. St. 500, 27 Atl. 1.

[97] Friday v. Hall & Kaul Co., 216 U. S. 449, 30 Sup. Ct. 261, 54 L. Ed. 562, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 475, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610; United Surety Co. v. Iowa Mfg. Co., 179 Fed. 55, 102 C. C. A. 623, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726; In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Marine Construction & Dry Dock Co., 130 Fed. 446, 64 C. C. A. 648, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640; Columbia Ironworks v. National Lead Co., 127 Fed. 99, 62 C. C. A. 99, 64 L. R. A. 645, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; In re Niagara Contracting Co., 127 Fed. 782, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643. But compare In re T. E. Hill Co., 148 Fed. 832, 78 C. C. A. 522, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517; Butt v. C. F. MacNichol Const. Co., 140 Fed. 840, 72 C. C. A. 252, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515, affirming In re MacNichol Const. Co., 134 Fed. 979, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188; In re New York Tunnel Co., 166 Fed. 284, 92 C. C. A. 202, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[98] In re Kingston Realty Co., 160 Fed. 445, 87 C. C. A. 406, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845.

[99] Carlin v. Western Assur. Co., 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440.

[100] Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343, 41 N. W. 1074.

[101] Seeley v. Gwillim, 40 Conn. 106.

[102] Patterson v. City of New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 275, 16 South. 815.

[103] People v. Roberts, 145 N. Y. 375, 40 N. E. 7.

[104] Crescent City Seltz & M. W. Co. v. City of New Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 68, 19 South. 943.

struction of the engines is bought by the manufacturers in such a state of progress as to be adapted to the purpose designed with less labor than the raw material would require.[105] Under the former bankruptcy laws, there was some doubt as to whether a corporation engaged in the business of printing and publishing a newspaper was a manufacturer.[106] But it would clearly come within the present statute as a "business corporation." The following kinds of corporations were held not to be "engaged principally in manufacturing," and therefore not to be subject to the bankruptcy law, although all of them would now be properly described as "business or commercial corporations," viz., a corporation engaged in producing plays and giving theatrical entertainments;[107] one conducting the business of a cold storage warehouse;[108] one engaged in running a laundry;[109] and one operating a restaurant.[110]

§ 137. Banks and Bankers.—The original provision of the bankruptcy law on this point was that "private bankers, but not national banks or banks incorporated under state or territorial laws, may be adjudged involuntary bankrupts." (Section 4.) The amendment of 1910 excludes from the operation of the act "banking corporations," which apparently leaves the matter much as it stood before. It had already been held under the act of 1867, which contained no such exception, that a national bank was not liable to be proceeded against in bankruptcy.[111] And under the present statute, the ruling is that no corporation organized under the laws of a state can be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt under the description of a "private banker." For this term had, "long before the passage of the bankruptcy law, received a definite and settled meaning. A private banker is a person or firm, not a corporation, engaged in banking without having special privileges or authority from the state."[112] And even a private person cannot be adjudged bankrupt, although he carries on the business of a private banker, if his chief occupation is farming.[113] But an association of in-

[105] Norris v. Com., 27 Pa. St. 494.

[106] See In re Capital Publishing Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 405; In re Kenyon, 6 N. B. R. 238.

[107] In re J. J. Reisler Amusement Co., 171 Fed. 283, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501.

[108] In re Philadelphia Freezing Co., 174 Fed. 702, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

[109] In re Eagle Steam Laundry Co., 178 Fed. 308, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457; In re White Star Laundry Co., 117 Fed. 570, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30. But see In re Troy Steam Laundering Co., 132 Fed. 266, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[110] In re Wentworth Lunch Co., 159 Fed. 413, 86 C. C. A. 393, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[111] In re Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 5 Biss. 499, Fed. Cas. No. 9,051; Smith v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 9 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 13,076.

[112] In re Surety Guarantee & Trust Co., 121 Fed. 73, 56 C. C. A. 654, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129, citing People v. Doty, 80 N. Y. 225; Perkins v. Smith, 116 N. Y. 441, 23 N. E. 21; In re Sage (D. C.) 224 Fed. 525, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436.

[113] Couts v. Townsend, 126 Fed. 249, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

dividuals, formed to carry on the business of a private bank, as authorized by a state statute, but not incorporated, is a partnership, and as such is subject to be adjudged a bankrupt, though entitled to exercise some of the attributes of a corporation.[114] But the exception in the statute applies to a corporation organized for the purpose of carrying on a banking business under the general incorporation laws of a state which has no special laws relating to the formation of banking corporations.[115] An interesting question, which does not appear to have arisen as yet, would be in regard to a trust company, organized under a charter broad enough to give it the powers of a bank, and which does in fact carry on a general banking business. Instances are not wanting in which almost the whole revenue of such a company is derived from its banking department, the proper business of a trust company constituting but a small part of its activity. If such an institution is a "banking corporation," it would not be liable to proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy. If it is to be regarded as a "moneyed corporation" other than a banking corporation, it would be so liable. The solution of this question by the courts cannot be anticipated. But it is suggested that the general purpose of the statute (more clearly made manifest by the amendment of 1910) is to bring within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts all forms of corporations which properly ought to be subject to the statute, and which can conveniently be wound up and their affairs settled by the means of a proceeding in bankruptcy. If this is so, the clause excepting certain classes of corporations ought to be strictly construed; and a strict construction of it would not save from the statute a corporation engaged in banking merely as one branch of its business, but organized for various other forms of business as well.

§ 138. Railroad and Insurance Companies.—It will be observed that the amendment of 1910 (36 Stat. 838), while extending the compulsory features of the bankruptcy law to "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations," expressly excepts railroad and insurance corporations. Under the act of 1867, which contained identically the same language quoted above, but without the exception, it was held by the circuit courts that a railroad company was amenable to proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy, and the Supreme Court of the United States refused to change the rule which their decisions had established.[116] It was also settled that an insurance company came within the law, as a "business" corporation, and was therefore liable to be adjudged bankrupt.[117] But under the act of 1898, as it stood originally, it was decided that a petition in involuntary bankruptcy could not be maintained against an incorporated mutual fire insurance company, such a corporation not being "engaged principally in manufacturing, trading, or mercantile pursuits," within the meaning of the statute.[118] It would be interesting to inquire whether a street railway, operated by electricity, cable, or horse power, comes within the designation of "railroad corporations." Although the authorities are not entirely harmonious, it may be said that the tendency of modern decisions is to hold that the term in question, as used generally in statutes of various kinds, does not include street railways.[119] On the other hand, the operation of a street railway is a "business," within the meaning of a statute requiring the payment of a license fee for carrying on business,[120] and corporations of this kind must certainly be classed as "business corporations." But as will be shown in a later section, there is also a tendency to hold that the bankruptcy act should not be so construed as to authorize compulsory proceedings against any kind of public-service corporations.

114 Burkhart v. German-American Bank, 137 Fed. 958, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 222.

115 In re Oregon Trust & Sav. Bank, 156 Fed. 319, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

116 New Orleans, S. F. & L. R. Co. v. Delamore, 114 U. S. 501, 5 Sup. Ct. 1009, 29 L. Ed. 244; In re Alabama & C. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 390, 6 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 124; Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 126; Rankin v. Florida, A. & G. C. R. Co., 1

N. B. R. 647, Fed. Cas. No. 11,567; In re Southern Minn. R. Co., 10 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 13,188; In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315; In re Greenville & C. R. Co., Fed. Cas. No. 5,787.

117 In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 162, 6 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; In re Hercules Mut. Life Assur. Soc., 6 Ben. 35, 6 N. B. R. 338, Fed. Cas. No. 6,402; In re Independent Ins. Co., Holmes, 103, 6 N. B. R. 260, Fed. Cas. No. 7,017.

118 In re Cameron Town Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (D. C.) 96 Fed. 756, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372. Under the act as it now stands, there is no power in a court of bankruptcy to make an adjudication of bankruptcy against any insurance corporation. Vallely v. Northern Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 255 U. S. —, 41 Sup. Ct. 116, 65 L. Ed. —, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

119 See Funk v. St. Paul City Ry. Co., 61 Minn. 435, 63 N. W. 1099, 29 L. R. A. 208, 52 Am. St. Rep. 608; Bloxham v. Consumers' Electric Light & Street R. Co., 36 Fla. 519, 18 South. 444, 29 L. R. A. 507, 51 Am. St. Rep. 44; State v. Duluth Gas & Water Co., 76 Minn. 96, 78 N. W. 1032, 57 L. R. A. 63; Board of Railroad Com'rs v. Market Street Ry. Co., 132 Cal. 677, 64 Pac. 1065; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Sioux City Cable Ry. Co., 68 Fed. 82; Riley v. Galveston City Ry. Co., 13 Tex. Civ. App. 247, 35 S. W. 826; City of Newark v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 55 N. J. Law, 145, 26 Atl. 137; Fidelity Loan & Trust Co. v. Douglas, 104 Iowa, 532, 73 N. W. 1039; Massillon Bridge Co. v. Cambria Iron Co., 59 Ohio St. 179, 52 N. E. 192; Montgomery's Appeal, 136 Pa. St. 96, 20 Atl. 399, 9 L. R. A. 369; Sams v. St. Louis & M. R. Co., 174 Mo. 53, 73 S. W. 686, 61 L. R. A. 475; Lincoln St. Ry. Co. v. McClellan, 54 Neb. 672, 74 N. W. 1074, 69 Am. St. Rep. 736; Ferguson v. Sherman, 116 Cal. 169, 47 Pac. 1023, 37 L. R. A. 622; Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Simon, 20 Or. 60, 25 Pac. 147, 10 L. R. A. 251, 23 Am. St. Rep. 86.

120 City of New Orleans v. New Orleans City & L. R. Co., 40 La. Ann. 587, 4 South. 512.

§ 139. Mining and Quarrying Companies.—Under former bankruptcy statutes, as also under the act of 1898 in its original form, it was held that corporations engaged in the business of mining gold, silver, or other metals, or coal, were not amenable to proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy, because their business could not be described as "manufacturing," [121] nor as "trading or mercantile pursuits." [122] There was, however, some doubt as to companies operating quarries for the extraction of marble, stone, or slate, the general tendency being to hold that they were "manufacturing corporations" if the principal part of their business consisted in dressing the output of their quarries into specified sizes and shapes, or into such as would be generally convenient to the trade, and marketing the product thus finished.[123] But in 1903, probably in consequence of these decisions, Congress adopted an amendment to the bankruptcy act which, inter alia, added to the enumeration of the kinds of corporations which should be subject to involuntary bankruptcy those engaged in "mining." [124] And it was held that this term was to be taken in a broad and general sense, and therefore would include the extraction of stone or slate from an open quarry.[125] This portion of the statute was again revised in 1910, and while specific reference to such pursuits as manufacturing, mining, or trading was dropped, there was substituted a general provision that the compulsory features of the law should be applicable to "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations." [126] Undoubtedly this phrase, much broader than its predecessors, will be held to include both mining companies and quarry companies.

[121] Horn Silver Min. Co. v. New York, 143 U. S. 305, 12 Sup. Ct. 403, 36 L. Ed. 164; In re Rollins Gold & Silver Min. Co., 102 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327; Com. v. Lackawanna Iron Co., 129 Pa. St. 346, 18 Atl. 133; People v. Horn Silver Min. Co., 105 N. Y. 76, 11 N. E. 155; Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131. But see In re Tecopa Mining & Smelting Co., 110 Fed. 120, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 250.

[122] In re Keystone Coal Co., 109 Fed. 872, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377; In re Woodside Coal Co., 105 Fed. 56, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Elk Park Mining & Milling Co., 101 Fed. 422, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 131; In re Chicago-Joplin Lead & Zinc Co., 104 Fed. 67, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 712.

[123] In re Mathews Consol. Slate Co., 144 Fed. 724, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 779, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350; Com. v. East Bangor Slate Co., 162 Pa. St. 599, 29 Atl. 706.

[124] Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797. A corporation chartered for the purpose of mining and dealing in coal, and which for a time engaged in such business, but which for more than two years had neither mined nor purchased coal, but which was engaged solely in transporting coal for others, was not subject to involuntary bankruptcy, under the 1903 amendment, as a "corporation engaged principally in mining or mercantile pursuits." In re C. Jutte & Co. (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 357, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28.

[125] Burdick v. Dillon, 144 Fed. 737, 75 C. C. A. 603; In re Mathews Consol. Slate Co., 144 Fed. 724, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 779, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 350.

[126] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

§ 140. Public-Service Corporations.—Under this description may be included street railway companies, gas companies, water companies, electric light and power companies, and perhaps telegraph and telephone companies. It is doubtful whether a corporation engaged in any of these activities is liable to be proceeded against in involuntary bankruptcy. They were generally held to be exempt from such proceedings under the act of 1898 as it stood originally, on the ground that their business could not properly be described as "manufacturing, trading, or mercantile pursuits." We find decisions to this effect in the case of a water company, engaged in the business of obtaining, transporting, and supplying pure water for domestic and municipal use,[127] a company engaged in making and distributing illuminating gas and also in generating, transmitting, and selling electricity for light and power,[128] and a company organized to furnish water for irrigation.[129] But unquestionably these and all other such companies are "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations" within the meaning of the 1910 amendment to the statute. But the question arises whether such companies ought not to be held exempt on the ground of public policy. To maintain this position, however, it is necessary to imply an exception to the general terms of the statute in addition to those exceptions which are specified,—a procedure which is contrary to the generally accepted canons of statutory construction.[130] Yet the argument from public convenience, as involving public policy, is a very strong one. Its force was recognized in the case of the irrigation company,[131] and later, in that of a gas and electric light company, wherein it was remarked by the circuit court of appeals in the second circuit: "Without considering these several arguments, we find sufficient reason to sustain the decrees in the peculiar character of these companies. If they do manufacture and do trade, they do much more. Under authority conferred by the state and by various local authorities, they are 'principally engaged' in sup-

[127] In re New York & Westchester Water Co., 98 Fed. 711, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508, affirmed, In re Morris, 102 Fed. 1004, 43 C. C. A. 91.

[128] In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191; In re Wilkes-Barre Light Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 248, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697. But see In re Charles Town Light & Power Co., 183 Fed. 160, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687, in which an electric light and power company was adjudicated bankrupt on the ground of its being engaged principally in "trading." And see City of Holland v. Holland City Gas Co., 257 Fed. 679, 168 C. C. A. 629, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Grafton Gas & Electric Light Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 668, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 567. In these two cases a gas company and an electric light company were allowed to go into voluntary bankruptcy.

[129] In re Bay City Irrigation Co., 135 Fed. 850, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370.

[130] See Black, Interp. Laws (2d edn.) pp. 219–222.

[131] In re Bay City Irrigation Co., 135 Fed. 850, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 370.

plying the means whereby streets, avenues and public places in the state are lighted and the public safety and comfort thereby promoted. They are corporations of public utility, and if they did not themselves light these localities, the public authorities would no doubt be constrained to do so themselves. By reason, moreover, of the circumstance that they are given this authority, with, to a certain extent, the right of exercising eminent domain, they are correlatively charged with a duty to the public, which is no part of the obligations of ordinary corporations engaged in 'manufacturing, trading, printing, publishing, mining, or mercantile pursuits.' And as a result, when financial adversity overtakes them, there are interests which have to be considered other than those which require attention when the ordinary corporation of the enumerated classes becomes insolvent. In the case of an ordinary manufacturing or trading corporation, the matters presented for disposition are in their last analysis merely the disposition of dollars and cents. The assets are to be realized and their proceeds distributed among creditors of different classes and the residue, if any, to the owners. But in the case of a public utility corporation, such as these, the public itself, the community in which the corporation is rendering service, has a right superior even to creditors of every class, and which right cannot be extinguished by the payment of a dividend in money. With the power to terminate franchises for failure to discharge the obligation inherent in their grant, the state or local authorities can destroy what is usually the most valuable asset of the defaulting company, against the wishes of all creditors and before the latter might succeed in finding an assignee of the franchise satisfactory to local authorities who would assume the burden and perhaps pay something for the transfer. Moreover, the public safety and comfort imperatively demand that, whatever else may happen, the corporation, devoid of ready cash though it be, shall not make default on its public obligations, with the result of plunging the community in darkness or stopping the transportation of passengers, and that in some way or other the public service shall be rendered while the financial affairs of the company are being wound up. There are no indications in the bankrupt act that Congress intended to arrange any administrative machinery competent to accomplish these results. On this branch of the case the opinion of Judge Ray is especially illuminative when it is remembered that he was chairman of the House judiciary committee when the bankrupt act was passed. He says: 'There was a serious and wide difference of opinion in the committee on the judiciary and in the Congress itself whether corporations, any corporation, should be brought under the operation of the law. There was a feeling on the part of some that railroad corporations should be included, if any were. But when it was considered that railroads are the arteries of commerce and transportation, state and interstate, created by state laws in the main, and extending with their connecting lines from state to state and lakes to gulf, under consolidation and merger agreements, it was seen that, to properly administer the property of such corporations in the bankruptcy courts and under a bankruptcy law, it would be necessary to make many special and extraordinary provisions for those cases, if the public service was to be considered and the interests of the public conserved.'"[132] On the other hand, there is a decision, of perhaps quite equal authority, to the effect that a corporation, otherwise amenable to the bankruptcy law, is not exempt from its operation on the ground of being a quasi-public corporation and subserving a public use, if its franchise is assignable, so that its functions might be exercised by any transferee to whom its powers might pass through proceedings in bankruptcy.[133] On the whole, and notwithstanding the possible inconvenience of administering the affairs of such a company in bankruptcy, it seems probable that the courts will eventually decide that public-service companies are not exempt from the statute, and that they will reach this conclusion on the ground that they have no authority to add any exceptions to those specifically created by Congress in the statute itself.

§ 141. Amendment of 1910; Business and Commercial Companies. —In 1910 the bankruptcy act was amended so as to make its compulsory features applicable to "any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation."[134] This language is much broader than the corresponding provision in the amended act, and from this circumstance the courts have rightly inferred that the intention of Congress was to bring within the terms of the statute some classes of corporations which would not have been subject to involuntary proceedings theretofore.[135] But it is held that the amendment is not retroactive, and hence a corporation which was not subject to involuntary bankruptcy under the original act of 1898 (such as one engaged in conducting a restaurant) cannot be sub-

[132] In re Hudson River Power Transmission Co., 183 Fed. 701, 106 C. C. A. 139, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

[133] In re New York & Westchester Water Co., 98 Fed. 711, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508, affirmed, In re Morris, 102 Fed. 1004, 43 C. C. A. 91.

[134] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.

[135] In re H. J. Quimby Freight Forwarding Co., 121 Fed. 139, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

jected to proceedings in bankruptcy because of an act of bankruptcy committed prior to the adoption of the amendment.[136]

The phrase "moneyed, business, or commercial corporations" (but not the exception which follows) was directly copied from the bankruptcy act of 1867, showing the intention of Congress that it should have the same interpretation which it then bore.[137] Hence the definitions and decisions made concerning it by the federal courts when administering the earlier statute are now of binding authority.[138] And first, "moneyed" corporations are, properly speaking, those dealing in money or in the business of receiving deposits, loaning money, and exchange; but in a wider sense the term is applied to all business corporations having a money capital and employing it in the conduct of their business.[139] Thus, the term, as used in a state statute concerning actions against directors and stockholders of moneyed corporations, is broad enough to include a mortgage trust company of another state authorized to issue and sell its bonds secured by mortgages.[140] It may also include a building and loan association. In the course of an opinion holding that such a company was not engaged in "trading or mercantile pursuits," it was said by one of the federal courts: "By the law of New York, building and loan associations are ranked as moneyed corporations, and are made subject to the supervision of the banking department, the law relating to them having been in the last revision included in the general banking law. Undoubtedly, a building and loan association is not a bank, or a savings bank, and does not conduct a banking business. It constitutes a corporation in a class by itself, carrying on a business which is peculiar and distinct from all other corporations. But the fact that the state of New York regards it as a moneyed corporation, performing functions somewhat analogous to those performed by savings banks, and therefore to be included in the same general department and to be subjected to the same general supervision, is entitled to such consideration in determining the general character of the corporation."[141] Again, a corporation engaged in leasing its own property and collecting the rents, having also power to sue and be sued, to contract debts, and to dispose of its property is [136] In re United States Restaurant & Realty Co. (C. C. A.) 187 Fed. 118, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 915.

[137] See Black, Interp. Laws (2d edn.) P. 607.

[138] In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950.

[139] In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315; Hobbs v. National Bank, 101 Fed. 75, 41 C. C. A. 205; Mutual Ins. Co. v. Erie County, 4 N. Y. 444; Gillet v. Moody, 3 N. Y. 487.

[140] Hobbs v. National Bank of Commerce, 101 Fed. 75, 41 C. C. A. 205.

[141] In re New York Building-Loan Banking Co., 127 Fed. 471, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

a "moneyed business" corporation, although it may not be a "commercial corporation," and is therefore liable to adjudication in proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy.[142]

A "business" corporation is one formed for the purpose of transacting business in the widest sense of that term, including not only trade and commerce, but manufacturing, mining, banking, insurance, transportation, and practically every form of commercial or industrial activity, where the purpose of the organization is pecuniary profit. These are contrasted with religious, charitable, educational, and other like organizations, which are sometimes grouped in the statutory law of a state under the general designation of "corporations not for profit."[143] And in fact, as the term "business" is used in a state statute authorizing the formation of corporations for the purpose of engaging in any lawful enterprise, "business," pursuit, or occupation, it is not restricted in meaning to a scheme for making money, but includes any object which is consistent with the interests of society and may engage the attention of men and invite their co-operation. Hence a corporation may lawfully be organized under such a statute for the purpose of guarantying bonds of an educational institution to strengthen its credit.[144] Again, as business is not limited to trade it may include agriculture, or the cultivation of a farm, ranch, or truck garden.[145] Hence if a corporation is "engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil," it is liable to proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy in the character of a "business corporation," though a natural person in the same circumstances would not be. So, also, the work of a contractor who engages for the erection or construction of buildings and other such works is "business" within the ordinary meaning of the word.[146] But a trades council is not a business institution, where the only element of business in which it engages is the furnishing to tradesmen of printed cards certifying that they are proper persons for the members of trades unions to deal with, the cards being suitable for display in a shop or store, and being supplemented by a small pamphlet giving the names and addresses of tradesmen in the 142 In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950. Such a company would not have been subject to adjudication under the act as it stood before the amendment of 1910. See Altonwood Park Co. v. Gwynne, 160 Fed. 448, 87 C. C. A. 409, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31.

143 Black's Law Dict., citing Winter v. Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co., 2 Dill. 487, 7 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 17,890; In re Independent Ins. Co., 13 Fed. Cas. 13; McLeod v. College, 69 Neb. 550, 96 N. W. 265, 98 N. W. 672.

144 Maxwell v. Akin, 89 Fed. 178.

145 Snow v. Sheldon, 126 Mass. 332, 30 Am. Rep. 684; Hickey v. Thompson, 52 Ark. 234, 12 S. W. 475; Waggener v. Haskell, 89 Tex. 435, 35 S. W. 1.

146 Brown v. German-American Title & Trust Co., 174 Pa. St. 443, 34 Atl. 335.

town, but no compensation being either required or received by the trades council from the tradespeople for granting such indorsements.[147]

Finally, a "commercial" corporation is one engaged in commerce in the widest sense of that term, including not only trade or the marketing of commodities, but also their transportation. Hence it would include a railroad company,[148] and these corporations would thus become subject to the bankruptcy law, if it were not for the specific exception in their favor.

§ 142. Religious, Charitable, Educational, and Other Corporations Not for Profit.—In construing the corresponding provision of the act of 1867, it was held to be the clear intent of Congress to bring within the scope of the statute all corporations except those organized for religious, charitable, literary, educational, municipal, or political purposes. As to the latter, it was said: "These may all be in one sense moneyed or business corporations, for they must all have and use money and transact business, to some extent, in order to carry out their objects. But we do not call them moneyed corporations as we would a bank, nor do we call them business corporations as we would a manufacturing or mining company or express company, because their chief and primary object is not to transact business or make gain. They necessarily transact business in order to accomplish other ends than the mere doing of business and making profit."[149] Religious societies in the United States are almost invariably corporations, and although they may buy and hold real and personal property and perhaps sell some of it again, and though they may raise money for church purposes by fairs and entertainments, conduct parochial schools, and enter into business contracts with those employed in their service, yet they are clearly not to be classed as business corporations, for the reasons above given.[150] So the fact that a college may acquire and convey property necessary to the accomplishment of its object, and may charge fees for tuition or instruction, does not make it a business or trading corporation.[151] And 147 Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881.

148 Sweatt v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 3 Cliff. 339, 5 N. B. R. 234, Fed. Cas. No. 13,684.

149 Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 126.

150 See Parker v. May, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 336, 345, as to the character and status of religious corporations. It seems, however, that an association of persons organized for religious or ecclesiastical purposes, but which has not complied with the statutes of the state with respect to the steps necessary to secure a corporate existence, might be proceeded against as an "unincorporated company," provided it did not have "any of the powers and privileges of private corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships" (which would bring it within the definition of a corporation in the first section of the bankruptcy act), and provided it owed debts to the amount of $1,000.

151 McLeod v. Lincoln Medical College, 69 Neb. 550, 96 N. W. 265, 98 N. W. 672.

again, an incorporated club, of which the principal object is social intercourse, any business conducted by it being merely incidental, is not subject to proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy.[152]

§ 143. Unincorporated and Joint Stock Companies.—In the present bankruptcy law, the term "unincorporated company" is put in contrast with the term "corporation." The fourth section of the act provides that "any natural person" except such as follow certain enumerated pursuits, "any unincorporated company," and "any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation," with certain exceptions, may be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt, thus making three classes or groups subject to the law. But the introductory section of the act makes the word "corporation" include "all bodies having any of the powers and privileges of private corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships," and "limited or other partnership associations organized under laws making the capital subscribed alone responsible for the debts of the association." Now if the term "corporation," in the clause relating to involuntary bankruptcy, is to be taken in this comprehensive sense, then, being contrasted with "unincorporated company," it will include, and "unincorporated company" will not include, limited partnerships and joint stock associations. The effect of this reading will be that such partnerships and associations are not amenable to the law unless describable as "moneyed, business, or commercial," while any other form of unincorporated company is subject to the law without reference to the nature of its business.[153] Proceedings in bankruptcy may be brought against an unincorporated company in the name which it has adopted and under which it carries on its affairs, and with proper notice to its officials, though it is not a legal entity nor suable as a corporation.[154] A trust association for investment purposes, created by an instrument of trust, and in which the shareholders have the power to amend such instrument and to terminate the trust, is an "unincorporated company," within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act and subject to adjudication as a bankrupt.[155] But a partnership engaged chiefly in farming is not subject to adjudication in bankruptcy as an unincorporated company.[156]

[152] In re Fulton Club, 113 Fed. 997, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670.

[153] In re Seaboard Fire Underwriters (D. C.) 137 Fed. 987, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722, holding that an unincorporated Lloyd's association of fire underwriters was subject to adjudication. The Tidewater Coal Exchange, which was an association organized by shippers of bituminous coal during the war with Germany, formed at the instance of the Council of National Defense, for the purpose of speeding the transshipment of coal from cars to ships at tidewater, etc., involving a general pooling arrangement for coal, with debit and credit charges against and for each member, was held an "unincorporated company" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, so as to give a federal court jurisdiction of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against it. In re Tidewater Coal Exchange (D. C.) 274 Fed. 1008.

[154] In re Order of Sparta, 242 Fed. 235, 155 C. C. A. 75, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 523.

A limited partnership is "a partnership consisting of one or more general partners, jointly and severally responsible as ordinary partners, and by whom the business is conducted, and one or more special partners, contributing in cash payments a specific sum as capital to the common stock, and who are not liable for the debts of the partnership beyond the fund so contributed."[157] If the statute authorizing the formation of such concerns goes no further than this, it is evident that the association could not be brought within the definition of a "corporation" in the bankruptcy law, nor could it even be regarded as an "unincorporated company." For all purposes of bankruptcy law it is simply a partnership and nothing more. But in some of the states, the laws provide that a "limited partnership" or "joint stock association limited," may be organized by a certain number of persons, who subscribe and contribute capital thereto, "which capital shall alone be liable for the debts of such associations," thus bringing them exactly within the terms of the bankruptcy act. Such, for example, is the statute of Pennsylvania,[158] and an association formed under it, having some of the characteristics of a partnership and some of a corporation, including the right to a common seal, the ownership of property real and personal by the association, and the right to sue and be sued by the corporate name, is regarded as a new artificial person, and one which may be described as a "citizen" of the state for purposes of federal jurisdiction.[159] Such an association, organized under the statute mentioned, is subject to be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt, whether regarded as an unincorporated company or a corporation.[160]

155 In re Associated Trust (D. C.) 222 Fed. 1012, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851.

156 H. D. Still's Sons v. American Nat. Bank, 209 Fed. 749, 126 C. C. A. 473, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 320.

157 Black, Law Dict., voc. "Partnership." And see Moorehead v. Seymour, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1054; Taylor v. Webster, 39 N. J. Law, 104.

158 Laws Penna. 1874, c. 153, p. 271.

159 Bushnell v. Park Bros. & Co., 46 Fed. 209; Youngstown Coke Co. v. Andrews Bros. Co., 79 Fed. 669. Compare Carnegie v. Hulbert, 53 Fed. 10, 3 C. C. A. 391. "The persons composing a partnership may agree with each other to invest a certain fixed sum each in the common venture and no more. Such an agreement may limit the interest of each in the property and profit of the firm, but it will not limit the liability of any for the firm debts. Each member will be liable individually for the entire indebtedness of the firm. The act of 1874 was passed to relieve against the risk and inconvenience attending general partnerships, by providing a mode by which individuals might invest a fixed sum in a business enterprise, without liability to loss beyond the sum so invested. The method provided is the creation of a new artificial person, to be called a 'joint stock association,' having some of the characteristics of a partnership and some of a corporation." Hill v. Stetler, 127 Pa. St. 161, 13 Atl. 306, 17 Atl. 887.

160 In re Hercules Atkin Co., 133 Fed. 813, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

A joint stock association is an unincorporated association of individuals for business purposes, of a hybrid character, as it resembles a partnership in many respects, but is like a corporation in other respects, possessing a common fund or capital stock, divided into shares, which are apportioned among the members according to their respective contributions, and which are assignable by the owner without the consent of the other members.[161] In the absence of legislation to the contrary, the members of a joint stock company, like the members of a partnership, are liable for all the debts of the association. Hence, unless the rule of liability is changed by a statute of the state, such an association is not a "corporation," within the meaning of the bankruptcy law though it is an "unincorporated company." In some states (as New York) the laws authorize such associations to sue and be sued in the name of the president for the time being,[162] and in some other respects distinguish them from ordinary partnerships; and it is possible that their possession of some of the "powers and privileges of private corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships" might be held to bring them within the terms of the bankruptcy law. But it has been held that a joint stock company, organized under such a statute as that of New York, is not a corporation, and hence cannot be a "citizen" of that state, but, for all purposes of federal jurisdiction, is to be regarded as a partnership.[163] On this view, such an association might file its voluntary petition in bankruptcy, as a partnership, and would be liable to involuntary proceedings without reference to the nature of the business in which it was employed.

It should also be remarked that persons who associate themselves together for business purposes, if their organization is so defective as to fall short of creating a corporation within the statute, become in legal effect partners, and may be proceeded against under the bankruptcy law as an unincorporated company.[164] If the respondent in bankruptcy claims the right to exist as a corporation, and actually carries on business under a corporate form of organization, it is probable that the validity of its incorporation could not be inquired into. There is a decision to the effect that proceedings in bankruptcy may be had against a corporation which is only so de facto, and the validity of a de facto corporation cannot be questioned collaterally, but only in a direct suit for that pur-

[161] See In re Jones, 28 Misc. Rep. 356, 59 N. Y. Supp. 983; Allen v. Long, 80 Tex. 261, 16 S. W. 43, 26 Am. St. Rep. 735; Adams Expr. Co. v. Schofield, 111 Ky. 832, 64 S. W. 903; Kossakowski v. People, 177 Ill. 563, 53 N. E. 115; Willis v. Chapman, 68 Vt. 459, 35 Atl. 459.

[162] Laws New York 1849, c. 258; Rev. St. Wis. § 3210.

[163] Chapman v. Barney, 129 U. S. 677, 9 Sup. Ct. 426, 32 L. Ed. 800. See 1 Pars. Contr. 144, 214.

[164] Whipple v. Parker, 29 Mich. 369.

pose. But even a de facto corporation can only exist by color of law; and an association of persons cannot claim to be even a de facto corporation, unless there was a statute under which they might have been incorporated for their particular purpose. Hence, if, for example, the laws of the state made no provision for the incorporation of banks, an association of persons claiming to be incorporated as a bank, and which conducts a banking business under the corporate name assumed, is not a corporation within the meaning of the bankruptcy law, but may be proceeded against as a partnership.[165]

A voluntary association of persons organized for moral, social, benevolent, or charitable purposes, might be considered as amenable to the bankruptcy law, under the character of an "unincorporated company," but the cases must be rare in which such a society would owe debts to the amount of a thousand dollars and commit an act of bankruptcy. Moreover, if within the letter, they are not within the spirit and policy of the bankruptcy law.[166] Such an association is regarded as a charity within the jurisdiction of equity, and its members are not partners as between themselves, whatever may be their relation as to third persons.[167] It has been held, however, that an unincorporated fraternal beneficial association, having no capital stock and practically no assets except those derived from assessments paid by members, but issuing to its members benefit certificates payable from the contributions of members, which requires members to pass a medical examination, and whose principal object is beneficial rather than social, is subject to be adjudged bankrupt under the act as amended in 1910, since the word "company," as there used, at least includes any unincorporated association or group of individuals, whose object and purpose are either wholly or chiefly of the same kind as the object and purpose of a "moneyed, business, or commercial corporation."[168]

§ 144. Acts of Bankruptcy by Corporations.—As to the commission of acts of bankruptcy, upon which involuntary proceedings may be founded, the law makes no distinction between corporations and natural persons. And it is no defense to a proceeding in bankruptcy against a corporation that the act of bankruptcy charged was ultra vires, or not within its charter powers, and therefore not a corporate act.[169] Each 165 Davis v. Stevens, 104 Fed. 235, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763.

166 See Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 5 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 126.

167 Lafond v. Deems, 81 N. Y. 507; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 98.

168 In re Order of Sparta, 242 Fed. 235, 155 C. C. A. 75, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 523; In re Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 199, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634. And so of a lodge of Odd Fellows. In re Carthage Lodge No. 365, I. O. O. F. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 694, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 873.

169 Badders Clothing Co. v. Burnham-of the five acts of bankruptcy enumerated in the statute can be as well committed by a corporate body as by an individual. For instance, it is an act of bankruptcy to make a general assignment for the benefit of creditors. This can be committed by a corporation without a formal deed of assignment, but some corporate act purporting to transfer all the property of the corporation must be shown, and the mere adoption of resolutions authorizing the treasurer to convert the property into cash and deposit it with a trustee for the creditors does not constitute an act of bankruptcy where the plan was not executed.[170] An assignment by the corporation does not require the unanimous consent of the stockholders; it constitutes an act of bankruptcy if directed by a majority vote at a stockholders' meeting, and then by resolution of the board of directors.[171] Where a corporation, under the provisions of a state statute, files in a state court its voluntary application for dissolution and for the appointment of a receiver to wind up its affairs and distribute its assets, on the ground of its insolvency, and procures the appointment of a receiver thereon, such application is not a "general assignment for the benefit of its creditors," within the meaning of the bankruptcy law. Nor can such a proceeding be held to be an act of bankruptcy on the ground that it produces results equivalent to those brought about by a general assignment for creditors; for the acts of bankruptcy enumerated and classified by the statute cannot be enlarged by construction so as to include transactions similar or analogous to, but not identical with, those specified.[172] But it will be observed that the amendment of 1903 makes just such a proceeding an independent act of bankruptcy. And it is accordingly held that, where a suit is brought against a corporation in which the court is asked to appoint a receiver on the ground that it is insolvent and cannot meet its obligations, and on other grounds, and the corporation admits such averments and either consents to or joins in the prayer for a receiver, and one is accordingly appointed, it is an act of bankruptcy on which an adjudication may be based.[173] But the Munger-Root Dry Goods Co., 228 Fed. 470, 143 C. C. A. 52, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

170 In re Federal Lumber Co., 185 Fed. 926, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438. As to assignments for the benefit of creditors as acts of bankruptcy in general, see supra, § 91.

171 Clark v. American Mfg. & Enameling Co., 101 Fed. 962, 42 C. C. A. 120, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351.

172 In re Empire Metallic Bedstead Co., 98 Fed. 981, 39 C. C. A. 372, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 575.

173 Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 826, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; Doyle-Kidd Dry Goods Co. v. Sadler-Lusk Trading Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 813, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604. An insolvent corporation commits an act of bankruptcy by procuring the appointment of a receiver through an application by its president in a suit in which the corporation and the president are defendants. Graham Mfg. Co. v. Davy-Pocahontas Coal Co., 238 Fed. 488, 151 C. C. A. 424, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

mere institution by minority stockholders of a suit to dissolve the corporation, in which the appointment of a receiver is asked, does not entitle creditors to relief in the bankruptcy court until the corporation becomes insolvent and commits an act of bankruptcy.[174]

Again, a trust to sell all the debtor's property and divide the proceeds ratably among his creditors may be an act of bankruptcy. But it has been held that it is not an act of bankruptcy for a corporation to convey its property in trust to secure bonds to be issued and sold, and the proceeds to be applied to pay all its unsecured debts, the same being done in good faith and with a view to enable the company to continue its legitimate business, though it may be technically insolvent or likely soon to be so.[175]

As to transfers of property, it has been doubted whether the act of an insolvent corporation in voluntarily applying to a state court for a decree dissolving the corporation and winding up its affairs, pursuant to a state law, through the agency of a receiver, is a transfer of its property with intent to hinder and defraud its creditors, because operating to deprive them of the remedies provided by the bankruptcy law.[176] But the question is not of much practical importance at present, because this would clearly constitute an act of bankruptcy under the provisions of the amendment of 1903, relating to the appointment of receivers on voluntary application or "because of insolvency."[177] However, it is held that the sale of property by an insolvent corporation, and the use of the proceeds in paying the current salary of its president, is not a transfer with intent to prefer a creditor, such salary being a legitimate current expense so long as the corporation is a going concern.[178] Nor does an insolvent corporation occupying leased premises commit an act of bankruptcy by permitting its property on such premises, which is subject to a mortgage given to secure its bonds, to be sold under a distress warrant lawfully issued for rent past due, which by the state statute is made a lien on such property; this does [174] Bank of Andrews v. Gudger, 212 Fed. 49, 128 C. C. A. 505, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11. And see Standard Warehouse & Compress Co. v. George H. McFadden Bros. Agency (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 251; W. H. Baker, Inc. v. Monarch Wholesale Mercantile Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 794, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 309.

[175] In re Union Pac. R. Co., 10 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 14,376.

[176] In re Harper & Bros., 100 Fed. 266, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804.

[177] Hooks v. Aldridge, 145 Fed. 865, 76 C. C. A. 409, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658. And see supra, § 95.

[178] Richmond Standard Steel Spike & Iron Co. v. Allen, 148 Fed. 657, 78 C. C. A. 389, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583. The owner of the stock of a solvent corporation does not necessarily commit an act of bankruptcy on the part of the corporation by selling its property and depositing the proceeds to his own credit. In re M. S. Fersko, Inc., 250 Fed. 357, 162 C. C. A. 427, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395.

not operate to give any creditor a "preference through legal proceedings." [179]

§ 145. Same; Admission of Insolvency and Willingness to be Adjudged Bankrupt.—It is an act of bankruptcy for a person (including a corporation) to "admit in writing his inability to pay his debts and his willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt on that ground." [180] This is the ground on which proceedings in bankruptcy have been most usually taken against corporations, and indeed the impression has prevailed that this method was sometimes resorted to by corporations, as a means of evading the provision of the statute (as originally enacted) which forbade them to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. It was said that, where it is apparent that the admission of insolvency was made for the very purpose of inducing creditors to take the action which the corporation itself was forbidden to take, and that the real motive was the desire of the managers of the company to liquidate its affairs through the court of bankruptcy, that court should discourage the attempt to evade the law.[181] Since insolvency is not a necessary element of this particular act of bankruptcy, the question whether the company is actually unable to pay its debts or not is immaterial, and a creditor intervening to oppose the petition cannot prove its solvency as a defense.[182] The admission of insolvency need not be made in the form of a resolution of the directors or stockholders. A published notice or letter to creditors will be sufficient. But in any case it must be explicit and unqualified. Thus, a letter written by the clerk of a corporation, by authority of its directors, stating its inability to pay its debts in full and that the only course open to non-attaching creditors was to bring involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy, in which case the company would admit its insolvency and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, is not such an unqualified admission as to constitute an act of bankruptcy.[183] Where the company itself files a bill in a state court asking for the appointment of a receiver, this may constitute an effectual admission of insolvency.[184] And so, where hostile

179 Richmond Standard Steel Spike & Iron Co. v. Allen, 148 Fed. 657, 78 C. C. A. 389, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583.

180 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3. And see supra, § 96.

181 In re Bates Machine Co., 91 Fed. 625, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129. But see In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240; In re T. L. Kelly Dry-Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

182 In re Duplex Radiator Co., 142 Fed. 906, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240, affirming 123 Fed. 965, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656; In re Russell Wheel & Foundry Co. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 569, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

183 In re Standard Shipyard Co. (D. C.) 262 Fed. 522, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67.

184 Moody v. Port Clyde Development Co., 102 Me. 365, 66 Atl. 967.

proceedings are instituted against it in a state court, its answer may constitute an act of bankruptcy if it thereby admits both its insolvency and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, though the former admission is not enough without the latter.[185] And so, if a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is filed by creditors against the corporation, and its answer waives process, admits the allegations of the petition, and declares its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, it is an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of the statute,[186] though the opinion has been advanced that such an admission cannot be availed of as a ground of adjudication on the pending petition, but may constitute the foundation for a new petition.[187] Where a petition in bankruptcy is filed against a corporation, it is not necessary, in order to authorize counsel to appear and admit the acts of bankruptcy charged, that the corporators or stockholders should previously vote to authorize that act or direct it to be done.[188]

As to where the authority resides to commit the corporation to bankruptcy by making an admission of this kind, the authorities differ materially. In the first place, it is clear that no officer of a corporation can commit an act of bankruptcy in its name and behalf, by admitting its inability to pay its debts and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, without express authority from some competent source,[189] nor, it is said, can his unauthorized admission be made effective by subsequent ratification by the directors.[190] As to the authority of the board of directors, much depends on the statute law of the state in respect to the distribution of corporate power between the directors and the stockholders. Thus, it has been ruled that, under the laws of Massachusetts and of Maine, the directors of a manufacturing corporation have no authority to make a written admission of its inability to pay its debts and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt. Such an admission is in excess of their authority, and therefore does not con-

[185] In re Wilmington Hosiery Co., 120 Fed. 179, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 579.

[186] In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411. But where a corporation authorizes one of its officers to appear on behalf of the company in the federal court and make the admission of insolvency contemplated by the statute, "in the event of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy being filed against said company," this is not in itself such an unqualified admission as is required by the act, and is therefore not an act of bankruptcy on the part of the company. In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605.

[187] In re Baker-Ricketson Co., 97 Fed. 489, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605.

[188] Leiter v. Payson, 9 N. B. R. 205, Fed. Cas. No. 8,226.

[189] In re Southern Steel Co., 169 Fed. 702, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; In re Jefferson Casket Co., 182 Fed. 689, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663. And a written admission signed by a majority of the directors, but individually and not in their official capacity, is ineffective. In re Gold Run Mining & Tunnel Co., 200 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563.

[190] In re Burbank Co., 168 Fed. 719, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 838.

stitute an act of bankruptcy; nor will a vote of the stockholders ratifying the action of the directors, but taken after the filing of the petition, relate back so as to validate it, at least where creditors other than the petitioners have already entered an appearance and opposed the adjudication.[191] And a similar ruling has been made in the case of an Oregon corporation.[192] On the other hand, the federal courts in New York have decided that the directors of a New York corporation have power and authority to put it into bankruptcy in this way, without the concurrence or authorization of the stockholders, and have generalized the rule that this is not a corporate function, to be exercised by the whole body of corporators, but an administrative act, and that the act of bankruptcy in question may be committed by the board of directors alone, unless there is something in the statute law of the particular state to forbid it.[193] And the same doctrine is held in Minnesota and several other states with regard to corporations of those states.[194] If this rule prevails, it is further held that the appointment of receivers for an insolvent corporation does not dissolve it nor vacate the offices of the directors to such an extent as to make it legally impossible for them to make the admission of insolvency contemplated by the bankruptcy act.[195] But they may be otherwise disqualified or restrained from taking such action, as in a case where the court appointing the receivers granted an injunction restraining the officers of the company from commencing or prosecuting any proceeding "involving in any way the property or property rights" of the corporation, or incumbering or embarrassing the same. Here it was held that the subsequent action of the board of directors in adopting a resolution confessing the insolvency of the company and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt was a violation of the injunction and unauthorized, and therefore did [191] In re Bates Machine Co., 91 Fed. 625, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Standard Shipyard Co. (D. C.) 262 Fed. 522, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67.

[192] In re Quartz Gold Min. Co., 157 Fed. 243, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667; Van Emon v. Veal, 158 Fed. 1022, 85 C. C. A. 547.

[193] In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240; In re Rollins Gold & Silver Min. Co., 102 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327; In re Mutual Mercantile Agency, 111 Fed. 152, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 607; In re Guanacevi Tunnel Co. (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 316, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

[194] In re Kenwood Ice Co., 189 Fed. 525. 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499; Dodge v. Kenwood Ice Co. (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 577, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; In re Russell Wheel & Foundry Co. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 569, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; Home Powder Co. v. Geis, 204 Fed. 568, 123 C. C. A. 94, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580; Rudebeck v. Sanderson, 227 Fed. 575, 142 C. C. A. 207, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 146; In re Foster Paint & Varnish Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 652, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; Bell v. Blessing, 225 Fed. 750, 141 C. C. A. 34, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672; In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 1016, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501; In re S. & S. Mfg. & Sales Co. (D. C.) 246 Fed. 1005, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786.

[195] Cresson & Clearfield Coal & Coke Co. v. Stauffer, 148 Fed. 981, 78 C. C. A.

not constitute an act of bankruptcy.[196] Although ordinarily a majority of the directors of a corporation have no power to hold a meeting for the transaction of business affecting the corporation without giving notice to the minority, yet such notice may, in some circumstances, be dispensed with, and the action of the majority in putting the corporation into bankruptcy may be valid without notice to the minority directors, as, where the latter resided in a distant state and could not have attended the meeting, and there does not appear to have been any fraud or collusion,[197] where the directors not notified were only nominal members of the board and had never taken part in the meetings of the directors or given any attention to the affairs of the company,[198] or where one single director constituted the minority, and it appears that notice to him would have been entirely perfunctory and of no avail in the way of securing his attendance at the meeting or his concurrence in the views of the majority, as he had had a violent quarrel with the other directors, and had instituted a suit to rescind his contract for the purchase of stock in the company on the ground of fraud, and would have resisted the proceeding to put the company into bankruptcy in order to sustain an attachment of the company's property in his own favor.[199] It remains to be added that a resolution adopted at meetings both of the board of directors and of the stockholders of a corporation, admitting its insolvency and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, will unquestionably constitute an act of bankruptcy.[200]

§ 146. Effect of Adjudication on Status of Corporation.—On the question whether or not a corporation is dissolved by its adjudication in bankruptcy, the authorities are not in harmony. On the one hand, it has been said that a corporation, for all essential purposes, is as effectually dissolved by the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy against it as if a solemn judgment were pronounced to that effect. It is such a dissolution, it is said, as will afford creditors a remedy against the individual shareholders where they are made liable upon the "dissolution" of the company.[201] And a federal court has declared that, 609, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573; In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

196 In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191.

197 In re Lisk Mfg. Co., 167 Fed. 411, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674.

198 In re Marine Machine & Conveyor Co., 91 Fed. 630, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

199 In re Kenwood Ice Co., 189 Fed. 525, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499.

200 In re American Guarantee & Security Co. (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 405, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640.

201 State Savings Ass'n v. Kellogg, 52 Mo. 583. And see Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456, 10 Am. Dec. 273; Penniman v. Briggs, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 300; In re Washington Marine Ins. Co., 2 Ben. 292, 2 N. B. R. 648, Fed. Cas. No. 17,246.

under a state statute providing that upon the "dissolution" of a corporation its president and directors or managers shall be in law trustees for the settlement of its affairs and personally responsible to creditors to the extent of the property which may come to their hands, the mere insolvency of the concern, known to the president and directors, works a practical dissolution, so as to impose upon them the statutory consequences.[202] But there is strong authority the other way. The adjudication in bankruptcy, it is argued, does not necessarily destroy the life of the corporation any more than that of a natural person. It is true the bankrupt, while under the control of the court, is said to be civiliter mortuus; and of course all corporate functions, or at least all control of the business of the corporation, must be regarded as suspended during the continuance of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[203] But there is nothing in the language of the act, nor in the necessary consequences of such a proceeding, to prevent the corporation from resuming its business and the exercise of all its corporate functions, after it shall have obtained a discharge; and so long as that is possible, it cannot with any propriety be said that the company is dissolved.[204] This view has been picturesquely expressed by the court in Georgia in the following terms: "The bankruptcy of a corporation does not put an end to its corporate existence nor vacate the office of its directors. A corporation of this state cannot be dissolved by an act of Congress, nor by the administration thereof through the federal courts. Georgia created, and she alone can destroy. Besides, it is not the purpose of the bankruptcy law to dissolve corporations. The assets are seized, but the franchise is spared. 'Your money,' not 'your life,' is the demand made by the bankruptcy act."[205] The same view has been maintained by eminent courts in considerating the effect of proceedings under the state insolvency laws upon the existence of corporations.[206] However this may be, it is settled that a decree adjudging a corporation bankrupt is in the [202] Sprague-Brimmer Mfg. Co. v. Murphy Furnishing Goods Co., 26 Fed. 572.

[203] But it is said that, in view of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act for compositions, a corporation, though bankrupt, may elect officers and directors while its affairs are being conducted in the bankruptcy court, and such officers and directors may agree to a settlement and distribution of assets in the nature of a composition. In re O'Gara Coal Co., 260 Fed. 742, 171 C. C. A. 480, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206.

[204] Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. 737. That insolvency and the appointment of a receiver do not effect a dissolution of the corporation, see Chemical Nat. Bank v. Hartford Deposit Co., 161 U. S. 1, 16 Sup. Ct. 439, 40 L. Ed. 595; State v. Merchant, 37 Ohio St. 251.

[205] Holland v. Heyman, 60 Ga. 174. And see National Surety Co. v. Medlock, 2 Ga. App. 665, 58 S. E. 1131; Chamberlin v. Huguenot Mfg. Co., 118 Mass. 532; Shenandoah Valley R. Co. v. Griffith, 76 Va. 913.

[206] Coburn v. Boston Papier-Maché Mfg. Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 243; Boston Glass Manufactory v. Langdon, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 49, 35 Am. Dec. 292.

nature of a decree in rem as respects the status of the corporation, and if the court rendering it had jurisdiction, it can be assailed only by a direct proceeding in a competent court, unless it appears that the decree is void in form, or that due notice of the petition was not given.[207]

§ 147. Franchises as Assets.—Are the franchises of a corporation, including that by which it enjoys corporate existence, property such as will vest in its trustee in bankruptcy, and which may be sold by him in the administration of his trust? It appears that the act of 1867 contemplated an affirmative answer to this question. For No. 21 of the General Orders framed under that act provided that, "in making sale of the franchise of a corporation, it may be offered in fractional parts or in certain numbers of shares corresponding to the number of shares in the bankrupt corporation." And the courts accordingly held that the franchises of the corporation vested in the assignee in bankruptcy, as other property, and were subject to sale by him.[208] There is no such provision in the present statute nor in the present General Orders. But it is enacted that the trustee in bankruptcy shall be vested, by operation of law, with the title of the bankrupt to "property which, prior to the filing of the petition, he could by any means have transferred or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him."[209] And "transfer," according to the definitions given in the first section of the law, "shall include the sale and every other and different mode of disposing of or parting with property, or the possession of property, absolutely or conditionally, as a payment, pledge, mortgage, gift, or security."[210] Now it is a general rule, settled by the preponderance of authority, that a corporation cannot sell, mortgage, or otherwise alienate its franchises, particularly the franchise of corporate existence, unless power to do so has been expressly conferred upon it, and, consequently, that such franchises are not subject to levy and sale on execution to satisfy the debts of the corporation. But this rule will be found to have been established, and to be almost exclusively applied, in the case of such corporations as have duties to fulfill, or services to render, towards the public, where the reason for the rule is very apparent. Public corporations, properly so called, are not subject to the

[207] New Lamp Co. v. Ansonia Brass Co., 91 U. S. 656, 23 L. Ed. 336.

[208] Adams v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 1 Holmes, 30, 4 N. B. R. 314, Fed. Cas. No. 47; Sweatt v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 3 Cliff, 339, 5 N. B. R. 234, Fed. Cas. No. 13,684. But parties who purchase the property and franchises of a corporation from its assignee in bankruptcy do not thereby become its corporators and acquire the corporate entity. Metz v. Buffalo, C. & P. R. Co., 58 N. Y. 61, 17 Am. Rep. 201, 12 N. B. R. 559.

[209] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a, clause 5.

[210] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 25.

bankruptcy law. As to quasi-public corporations, or those which are organized for purposes of private gain by individuals, though they serve a public use or render service to the public generally, they may probably be adjudged bankrupt in a proper case;[211] and it would seem that their franchises might be sold by the trustee in bankruptcy, provided the public service to be rendered could be equally well performed by any purchaser and did not involve the element of a personal trust.[212] As to corporations of other kinds, it is almost universally the case that their franchises, as such, have little or no pecuniary value. Where, however, such a corporation has authority to mortgage or sell its franchises, they would seem to come clearly within the description of property vesting in the trustee under the bankruptcy law.

§ 148. Assessment on Unpaid Stock.—When the assets of a bankrupt corporation are not sufficient to pay its debts, the court of bankruptcy has power and authority to levy an assessment upon the stockholders and call upon them to make good the unpaid balance of their subscriptions to the capital stock of the company, to an amount not exceeding in the aggregate the deficiency of the other assets as compared with the debts; it has, in fact, all the powers of a court of equity in the premises.[213] A provision in the subscription and in the stock certificate that the unpaid balance was to be paid on the call of the directors "when ordered by a vote of a majority of the stockholders themselves," does not prevent the effectual exercise of this power by the court of bankruptcy; for, as a court of equity, it has all the power of the directors or [211] See supra, § 140.

[212] It has been held that a franchise to construct a turnpike road or a toll bridge, and collect tolls thereon, or to run a ferry, is a personal trust and not assignable, and will not vest in a trustee in bankruptcy. In re Scott, 6 Sawy. 234, 11 Fed. 133. But this view has been squarely denied. See Stewart v. Hargrove, 23 Ala. 429. And in the case of In re New York & W. Water Co., 98 Fed. 711, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508, the opinion is expressed that a corporation otherwise amenable to the bankruptcy law (such as a water-supply company, engaged in the business of obtaining, transporting, and supplying pure water for municipal and domestic use) is not exempted from the operation of the law on the ground of its being a quasi public corporation and subserving a public use, if its franchise is assignable, so that its functions might be exercised by any transferee to whom its powers might pass through proceedings in bankruptcy.

[213] Ogilvie v. Knox County Ins. Co., 22 How. 380, 16 L. Ed. 349; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56, 23 L. Ed. 220; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 155, 26 L. Ed. 968; Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418, 24 L. Ed. 437; In re Munger Vehicle Tire Co., 168 Fed. 910, 94 C. C. A. 314, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395; In re Remington Automobile & Motor Co., 153 Fed. 345, 82 C. C. A. 421, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; In re Miller Electrical Maintenance Co., 111 Fed. 515, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; In re Eureka Furniture Co., 170 Fed. 485, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 395; In re Monarch Corporation, 177 Fed. 464, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 428; Glenn v. Soule, 22 Fed. 417; In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., 96 Fed. 945, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; In re Republic Ins. Co., 3 Biss. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 11,704; Payson v. Stoever, 2 Dill. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 10,863; Upton v.

the stockholders or both collectively.[214] And the directors of the corporation cannot relieve the stockholders from this liability by refusing to issue a call; and where the charter provided that the company should commence business with the full amount of its capital stock paid in, the fact that it actually commenced business is enough for the trustee in bankrptcy to show, in an action against stockholders for unpaid balances, without showing any call for their subscriptions.[215]

It should be observed that this liability of subscribers for unpaid balances, up to the full par value of their stock, is an asset of the corporation itself, not a remedy available to creditors. It is in the character of an asset of the corporation that it vests in the trustee in bankrupcy, and he is thereupon solely invested with the right to maintain actions against the stockholders who are in arrear.[216] Such actions cannot be maintained either by the corporation or by the creditors. But it is necessary to distinguish carefully between a liability of this kind and one which is made by law directly available to creditors. For instance, where the statute provides (as in New York) that holders of stock in a corporation which is not fully paid shall be personally liable to certain classes of creditors to the extent of the amount unpaid on their stock, this gives the corporation itself no claim or right of action against such stockholders, and therefore no right of action thereunder passes to the Burnham, 3 Biss. 520, Fed. Cas. No. 16,799; Upton v. Jackson, 1 Flip. 413, Fed. Cas. No. 16,802; Wilbur v. Stockholders, 13 Phila. 479, 18 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 17,636; Myers v. Seeley, 10 N. B. R. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 9,994; Upton v. Hansbrough, 3 Biss. 417, 10 N. B. R. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 16,801; Lane v. Nickerson, 99 Ill. 284.

[214] Upton v. Hansbrough, 3 Biss. 417, 10 N. B. R. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 16,801.

[215] Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 186, 82 N. Y. Supp. 235.

[216] Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 186, 82 N. Y. Supp. 235; Stoddard v. Lum, 159 N. Y. 272, 53 N. E. 1108, 45 L. R. A. 551, 70 Am. St. Rep. 541; Stocker v. Davidson, 74 Kan. 214, 86 Pac. 136, 118 Am. St. Rep. 315; Harris v. Wells, 57 Misc. Rep. 172, 108 N. Y. Supp. 1078; Falco v. Kaupisch Creamery Co., 42 Or. 422, 70 Pac. 286; In re Remington Automobile & Motor Co., 153 Fed. 345, 82 C. C. A. 421, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; Foote v. Greilick, 166 Mich. 636, 132 N. W. 473; Commercial Bank of Augusta v. Warthen, 119 Ga. 990, 47 S. E. 536; Perkins v. Cowles, 157 Cal. 625, 108 Pac. 711, 30 L. R. A. (N. S.) 283, 137 Am. St. Rep. 158; Bernard v. Carr, 167 N. C. 481, 83 S. E. 816; Babbitt v. Read (D. C.) 215 Fed. 395; Mills v. Friedman, 111 Misc. Rep. 253, 181 N. Y. Supp. 285; Petition of Stuart (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 938; Babbitt v. Read (D. C.) 215 Fed. 395; De Muth v. Faw, 103 Wash. 279, 174 Pac. 18. But see Kelley v. Abbott (Cal.) 196 Pac. 39. If a subscriber for stock in a corporation has given his note in part payment of the price, the corporation's trustee in bankruptcy may sue and recover on the note. Bailey v. Anderson, 142 Ga. 11, 82 S. E. 290. Under the laws of Minnesota, however, a stockholder of a corporation of that state is liable for the difference between the par value of his stock and the agreed amount he paid therefor only to those who have given credit to the corporation on the faith of its capital stock, and consequently such liability cannot be enforced by the trustee in bankruptcy. Courtney v. Croxton, 239 Fed. 247, 152 C. C. A. 235, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

trustee in bankruptcy of the corporation.[217] So, if stock was issued in exchange for patent rights or other property, and the corporation itself cannot claim that it was not fully paid, neither can its trustee in bankruptcy.[218]

It has been held that the trustee in bankruptcy cannot levy an assessment for unpaid stock of his own motion. There must have been either corporate action to fix the liability of the stockholders or a judicial ascertainment of their liability.[219] And where a formal assessment and call are necessary, the proper practice is for the trustee to file his petition in the court of bankruptcy, asking for an order directing him to make an assessment and call upon the unpaid stock of the corporation for the purpose of paying its debts.[220] On the hearing of this petition, the court will decide the necessary preliminary questions, such as the question whether particular stock has or has not been fully paid, whether the corporation is indebted in excess of its assets, and what is the amount of its indebtedness. But the order should not be so framed as to authorize the issue of an execution against any named stockholder for the amount considered to be due from him. The trustee should proceed against each in a plenary action.[221] But the authorities favor the view that a formal assessment or call is necessary only in two cases: First, where it is not certain that the whole amount of the unpaid subscriptions to stock will be needed to pay the debts of the company, for in this case some preliminary investigation and order are necessary to determine what percentage the delinquent subscribers should be called on to pay, for they are not liable in the total sum unless it is all required to satisfy creditors.[222] Second, when no time was fixed for the payment of the successive installments on the stock, but they were to be called in by order of the directors from time to time. Here it could not be said that any stockholder is delinquent until something equivalent to such a call as the directors might have issued has been in effect issued.[223]

[217] In re Jassoy Co., 178 Fed. 515, 101 C. C. A. 641, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 622.

[218] Sternbergh v. Duryea Power Co. (C. C. A.) 161 Fed. 540, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 625. And see In re Beachy & Co., 170 Fed. 825, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; In re Jassoy Co., 178 Fed. 515, 101 C. C. A. 641, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 622.

[219] Payson v. Brooke, 1 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 89, Fed. Cas. No. 10,857.

[220] Bergdoll v. Harrigan (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 279, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633.

[221] In re Remington Automobile & Motor Co., 153 Fed. 345, 82 C. C. A. 421, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; citing Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 26 L. Ed. 968; Bergdoll v. Harrigan (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 279, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633. But see Kaye v. Metz (Cal.) 198 Pac. 1047.

[222] Kelley v. Aarons (D. C.) 238 Fed. 996, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

[223] See Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 186, 82 N. Y. Supp. 235; Phœnix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 67 N. Y. 294; Ross-Mehan Brake Shoe Foundry Co. v. Southern Malleable Iron Co., 72 Fed. 957; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 26 L. Ed. 968; Citizens' & Miners' Sav.

Compliance with the call may be enforced by a suit in equity in the federal district court in which the estate of the bankrupt corporation is being administered,[224] or the trustee may proceed against the stockholders severally in the proper state courts. In suits to enforce the collection of the assessment, the validity of the action of the bankruptcy court in making the levy cannot be brought into question.[225] Nor can a stockholder defend himself against such an action on the ground that the proceedings to increase the stock of the corporation (his subscription being made for such increase) were irregular or invalid,[226] nor on the ground that his subscription for the stock and agreement to pay for it were based on an express understanding that he was to receive the stock for two-thirds of its par value,[227] nor on the ground that he was ignorant of the condition of the company at the time the subscription was made,[228] nor on the ground that he was fraudulently misled and induced to believe that there was no personal liability for the unpaid balance, and that the amount thereof could not be assessed against him,[229] or that the word "non-assessable" was written across the face of his certificate of stock.[230] Further, the fact that a call for unpaid subscriptions was for more than was necessary to pay the debts of the company cannot be tried in an action by the trustee against an individual stockholder.[231] The fact that the defendant's name appears on the books of the corporation as a stockholder is presumptive proof that he is the owner of the stock, and proof that he received a dividend on the Bank v. Gillespie, 115 Pa. St. 564, 9 Atl. 73; Tiger Shoe Mfg. Co.'s Trustee v. Shanklin, 102 S. W. 295, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 298.

[224] In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., 96 Fed. 945, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; Shiffer v. Akenbrook (Ind. App.) 130 N. E. 241; Kelley v. Abbott (Cal.) 196 Pac. 39. A referee in bankruptcy has jurisdiction of a proceeding to compel the officers of a bankrupt corporation to pay over the proceeds of sales of its stock alleged to belong to the corporation, and also to pay an amount assessed against them for unpaid shares. In re Kornit Mfg. Co., 192 Fed. 302, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

[225] Clevenger v. Moore, 71 N. J. Law, 148, 58 Atl. 88; Payson v. Stoever, 2 Dill. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 10,863; Michener v. Payson, 13 N. B. R. 49, Fed. Cas. No. 9,524; Jeffery v. Selwyn, 220 N. Y. 77, 115 N. E. 275, 6 A. L. R. 1111; Mills v. Friedman, 111 Misc. Rep. 253, 181 N. Y. Supp. 285. Compare Lamb v. Lamb, 6 Biss. 420, 13 N. B. R. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 8,018. As to contest by nonresident stockholder, see In re Newfoundland Syndicate (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 917, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 858.

[226] Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 665, 24 L. Ed. 523.

[227] Flinn v. Bagley, 7 Fed. 785.

[228] Payson v. Withers, 5 Biss. 269, Fed. Cas. No. 10,864.

[229] Upton v. Tribilcok, 91 U. S. 45, 23 L. Ed. 203; Michener v. Payson, 13 N. B. R. 49, Fed. Cas. No. 9,524.

[230] Upton v. Burnham, 3 Biss. 520, Fed. Cas. No. 16,799. But under the laws of Minnesota, where a corporation agreed that its stock would be non-assessable, the unpaid balance of the par value of stock of any given stockholder is not recoverable by the trustee in bankruptcy. Courtney v. Georger, 228 Fed. 859, 143 C. C. A. 257, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20.

[231] Upton v. Hansbrough, 3 Biss. 417, 10 N. B. R. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 16,801.

stock renders the presumption conclusive.[232] The transferee of stock is liable on such an assessment, unless it appears that the transfer has not been accepted by him, in which case the transferror alone is liable.[233] The provision of the statute that "suits shall not be brought by or against a trustee of a bankrupt estate subsequent to two years after the estate has been closed" [234] applies to an action by a trustee to enforce against stockholders the payment of their unpaid shares.[235]

Under the doctrine that the capital of a corporation constitutes a trust fund for the benefit of its creditors, it is held that a stockholder who is indebted to the bankrupt corporation for unpaid shares cannot set off against his liability thereon a debt due to him by the corporation. The fund arising from such unpaid stock must be equally divided among all the creditors.[236] Thus the fact that stockholders of a bankrupt corporation are also holders of its bonds, and as such entitled to share in the distribution of its estate, does not entitle them to set off their claims on the bonds in a suit against them by the trustee to recover unpaid subscriptions.[237] Nor will a delinquent stockholder be permitted to prove his claim against the estate of the corporation in bankruptcy until he has paid the balance remaining due on his subscription.[238]

§ 149. Statutory Liability of Stockholders and Directors.—In many of the states, statutes impose upon stockholders in certain classes of corporations a personal liability for the debts of the company, to an extent equal to the amount of stock held by them, and there are also laws making the directors of a corporation liable for its debts when they have transacted business before the capital was paid in, failed to make annual reports to state officers, incurred debts in excess of the amount allowed by law, or declared dividends when the company was insolvent or when there were no real profits to be divided. Such a liability is a collateral obligation for the benefit of the creditors of the corporation, by which the stockholders or directors become sureties to the creditors for the debts of the company.[239] But it is not an asset, legal or equi-

[232] Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418, 24 L. Ed. 437.

[233] Wilbur v. Stockholders, 13 Phila. 479, 18 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 17,636.

[234] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11d.

[235] Walker v. Towner, 4 Dill. 165, 16 N. B. R. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 17,089; Payson v. Coffin, 5 Dill. 473, Fed. Cas. No. 10,859; Scovill v. Shaw, 4 Cliff. 549, Fed. Cas. No. 12,552.

[236] Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. 610, 21 L. Ed. 731; Jenkins v. Armour, 6 Biss. 312, 14 N. B. R. 276, Fed. Cas. No.7,260; Kaye v. Metz (Cal.) 198 Pac. 1047.

[237] Babbitt v. Read, 173 Fed. 712, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

[238] In re Wiener & Goodman Shoe Co., 96 Fed. 949, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

[239] The pendency of bankruptcy proceedings against a corporation do not stand in the way of a resort to a method provided by the laws of the state for entable, of the corporation, nor is it a right of action which the corporation itself could have enforced. Hence, upon the bankruptcy of the corporation, the trustee does not acquire any right to enforce such a liability for the benefit of the creditors. It is true he represents the creditors as well as the bankrupt, but his trust relates only to the corporate assets.[240] And the fact that directors of the bankrupt corporation have made themselves thus liable under the state law is not a circumstance which will prevent the trustee from calling upon stockholders for the unpaid balance of their stock.[241] Further, proceedings in bankruptcy against a corporation will not prevent a judgment creditor of the corporation from pursuing in a state court his remedy upon the statutory individual liability of stockholders or directors.[242]

But the case is altogether different where the officers or directors of a corporation are alleged to have "looted" it, to have divided its property among themselves, to have made a private and secret profit out of a transaction with their own company, or to have wasted or lost its assets by a violation of their duties or abuse of their powers. In such a case, whether the right of action against them be founded on a statute or considered as arising at common law, it is a right of action in favor of the corporation, not the creditors, and therefore it vests in the corpo-forcing the liability of a stockholder for corporate debts. Selig v. Hamilton, 234 U. S. 652, 34 Sup. Ct. 926, 58 L. Ed. 1518, Ann. Cas. 1917A, 104.

[240] In re Beachy & Co., 170 Fed. 825, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co., 96 Fed. 945, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194; Jacobson v. Allen, 20 Blatchf. 525, 12 Fed. 454; Bristol v. Sanford, 12 Blatchf. 341, 13 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 1,893; Dutcher v. Marine Bank, 12 Blatchf. 435, 11 N. B. R. 457, Fed. Cas. No. 4,203; Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 186, 82 N. Y. Supp. 235; John V. Farwell Co. v. Jackson Stores, 137 Ga. 174, 73 S. E. 13; Tiger Shoe Mfg. Co.'s Trustee v. Shanklin, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 298, 102 S. W. 295; Babbitt v. Read, 236 Fed. 42, 149 C. C. A. 252, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 303; Lummis v. Crosby, 176 App. Div. 315, 162 N. Y. Supp. 444; Seegmiller v. Day, 249 Fed. 177, 161 C. C. A. 213, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Huffman-Salvar Roofing Paint Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 798, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; Smith v. Kastor, 195 Ill. App. 458; Abele v. S. A. Meagher Co., 227 Mass. 427, 116 N. E. 805; State Bank of Commerce v. Kenney Band Instrument Co., 143 Minn. 236, 173 N. W. 560. But see, per contra, Cardozo v. Brooklyn Trust Co., 228 Fed. 333, 142 C. C. A. 625, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; E. L. Moore & Co. v. Murchison, 226 Fed. 679, 141 C. C. A. 435; Coleman v. Booth, 268 Mo. 64, 186 S. W. 1021; Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343, 41 N. W. 1074. In the case of Main v. Mills, 6 Biss. 98, Fed. Cas. No. 8,974, it was held that if the directors of a corporation spend its capital stock in declaring and paying dividends, when there are no actual profits to be divided, and the company is adjudged bankrupt, the trustee in bankruptcy may recover the amount so paid in dividends, at least from any officer of the corporation who was bound to know the condition of its affairs, and that he had no right to receive the dividends. And see Mackall v. Pocock, 136 Minn. 8, 161 N. W. 228, L. R. A. 1917C, 390.

[241] In re Crystal Spring Bottling Co. (D. C.) 96 Fed. 945, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 194.

[242] Allen v. Ward, 4 Jones & S. (N. Y.) 290, 10 N. B. R. 285. And see Jacobson v. Allen, 20 Blatchf. 525, 12 Fed. 454.

ration's trustee in bankruptcy as part of its assets, and may be enforced by him.[243]

§ 150. Discharge of Corporations.—The former bankruptcy law did not allow the granting of a discharge, under any circumstances, to a bankrupt corporation.[244] And as a consequence of this it was held that the provision of the statute for staying any pending suit or proceeding against the bankrupt, to await the determination of the court of bankruptcy on the question of discharge, did not apply to the case of a corporation,[245] and that the act of a creditor in proving his debt and receiving dividends in bankruptcy proceedings against a corporation was no bar to his recovering judgment for the balance in a state court.[246] But this appears to be changed by the present statute, which enacts that "any person" who has been adjudged a bankrupt "may file an application for a discharge in the court of bankruptcy in which the proceedings are pending" (section 14a), and that the word "person" as used in the act "shall include corporations except where otherwise specified" (section 1, clause 19). In the absence of any provision in the law necessarily making the discharge of a corporation impossible or inconsistent with the act, the irresistible inference from the clauses quoted is that a corporation which has been thrown into bankruptcy may have its discharge on the same conditions, and attended with the same consequences, as in the case of a natural person; and especially in view of the fact that the earlier drafts of the present bankruptcy law, in the section relating to discharges, began with the words "any person not a corporation," and that the words "not a corporation" were afterwards stricken out. There is also an explicit decision that a corporation is entitled to a discharge,[247] though in the same case it was held that such a discharge would not prevent creditors from subsequently taking a judgment against the corporation in a state court in such limited form as might enable them to enforce the secondary liability of the directors under the state statute, to which, by the terms of the statute, a judgment against the corporation would be a prerequisite.

[243] Rathbone v. Ayer, 84 App. Div. 184, 82 N. Y. Supp. 239; In re Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 180 Fed. 549, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 282. Sherwood v. Holbrook, 98 Misc. Rep. 668, 163 N. Y. Supp. 326; McCullam v. Buckingham Hotel Co., 198 Mo. App. 107, 199 S. W. 417.

[244] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5122. And see New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co., 91 U. S. 656, 666, 23 L. Ed. 336.

[245] Meyer v. Aurora Ins. Co., 7 N. B. R. 191.

[246] Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. v. New Lamp Chimney Co., 53 N. Y. 123, 13 Am. Rep. 476, 10 N. B. R. 355.

[247] In re Marshall Paper Co., 102 Fed. 872, 43 C. C. A. 38, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468.

CHAPTER X

PETITION AND ADJUDICATION

§ 151. Voluntary Petition and Adjudication Thereon.—The fifty-ninth section of the act provides that "any qualified person may file a petition to be adjudged a voluntary bankrupt;" and under the amendment of 1910, "any person," including a corporation, "except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act as a voluntary bankrupt." It appears, therefore, to be the absolute and indefeasible right of any qualified person to file his voluntary petition, and in this he cannot be hindered or restrained by injunction or otherwise.[1] On the other hand, there is no legal obligation on an insolvent debtor to file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy,[2] except perhaps in the case where he has no other means of vacating or discharging a lien which will otherwise ripen into a preference.[3] So also, a voluntary petition may be withdrawn and all further proceedings stayed on the application of the petitioner, before an adjudication has been made, upon proper cause shown and the payment of costs,[4] unless such a course is opposed by creditors, in which event the petitioner must show very substantial grounds for leave to withdraw;[5] but after the decree of bankruptcy has been passed, it is not open to the bankrupt to withdraw and obtain a dismissal of the proceedings without the concurrence of all whose interests may be affected.[6]

[1] See supra, § 3. Although a person may be actually solvent, this does not prevent him from voluntarily having his property distributed among his creditors

In these cases, the operation of the law is almost automatic. It is indeed directed (section 18g) that the judge shall "hear the petition, and make the adjudication or dismiss the petition," but the hearing is merely ex parte and no provision is made for notice to creditors or others. "The filing of the petition is of itself an act of bankruptcy, and the debtor then surrenders all his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, and is at once, without any hearing, adjudged a bankrupt. The district court is thereby clothed in such cases, upon the filing of the petition, with jurisdiction over the debtor and his property." [7] under the Bankruptcy Act. In re Pyatt (D. C.) 257 Fed. 362, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462. On the other hand, to entitle a petitioner to be adjudged a bankrupt in voluntary proceedings, it is not essential that he should own any property, or that his property, if he has any, should be subject to administration in bankruptcy. In re Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 155, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142. This last case was reversed on appeal, but on other grounds. Zeitinger v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 Fed. 719, 157 C. C. A. 167, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324. The fact that a voluntary bankrupt, who had practically no assets, filed his petition for the purpose of protecting from his creditors a legacy which he expected shortly to receive from his mother, does not warrant setting aside his adjudication as a bankrupt, for it is one of the purposes of the Bankruptcy Act to protect after-acquired property from creditors, and the fact that the bankrupt had some special property in view does not change his rights. Bank of Elberton v. Swift (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 305, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75.

[2] Richmond Standard Steel Spike & Iron Co. v. Allen, 148 Fed. 657, 78 C. C. A. 389, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583; Summers v. Abbott, 122 Fed. 36, 58 C. C. A. 352, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

[3] See supra, § 88.

[4] Ex parte Randall, 5 Law Rep. 115, Fed. Cas. No. 11,550.

[5] Ex parte Harris, 3 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 6,110. But where, upon the institution of proceedings in composition, it appeared that no adjudication had yet been made upon the bankruptcy petition, which was voluntary, it was held that an adjudication ought not to be made merely because certain creditors asked it, if the debtor did not desire it. In re Alsberg, 9 Ben. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 260.

[6] In re Gile, 5 Law Rep. 224, Fed. Cas. No. 5,423.

[7] Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372.

Voluntary bankruptcy must be upon the debtor's own initiative. Thus, where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is filed, the default of the defendant, through failure to appear, does not convert the proceeding into one of voluntary bankruptcy,[8] though it has been held that if the defendant, being a corporation, adopts a resolution consenting to an adjudication being made in the compulsory proceedings begun against it, such proceedings substantially become voluntary, though involuntary in form.[9] But where a petition is filed by one member of a firm against the firm and his partners, it is involuntary in so far as it affects the partners who do not assent, and hence they cannot be adjudged bankrupt except upon proof of the commission of an act of bankruptcy within the statutory time.[10]

It sometimes happens that both a voluntary petition and an involuntary petition against the same debtor will be pending at the same time. It is held that the pendency of the one is no bar to the filing of the other. And the question whether the court should proceed under the one petition or the other is not a question of jurisdiction or of right in the parties, but one of practice; and the adjudication should be made in that proceeding in which, under all the circumstances, it appears to be for the best interests of the entire estate. As a general rule, it should be made in the voluntary case, with proper protection to the rights of prior petitioning creditors, because quicker, less expensive, and less likely to lead to costly litigation; and the court is not precluded from acting under this general rule by the fact that the debtor may have appeared and participated in the involuntary proceeding under such circumstances as might ordinarily create an estoppel if his own interests alone were involved.[11]

§ 152. Same; Opposition by Creditors.—The present bankruptcy act does not authorize creditors of a proposed voluntary bankrupt to file answers in opposition to his petition for adjudication.[12] Thus, a

[8] In re Taylor, 102 Fed. 728, 42 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[9] In re New Amsterdam Motor Co., 180 Fed. 943, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 757.

[10] In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[11] In re New Chattanooga Hardware Co., 190 Fed. 241, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 77; International Silver Co. v. New York Jewelry Co., 233 Fed. 945, 147 C. C. A. 619, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91. And see In re Stegar, 113 Fed. 978, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Canfield, 5 Law Rep. 415, Fed. Cas. No. 2,380; In re Flanagan, 5 Sway. 312, 18 N. B. R. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 4,850. Compare In re Stewart, 3 N. B. R. 108, Fed. Cas. No. 13,419; In re Lachenmaier (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 32, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[12] In re Jehu, 94 Fed. 638, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; In re R. H. Pennington & Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 388, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; In re Greer (D. C.) 248 Fed. 131, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797; In re Ann Arbor Machine Corp. (C. C. A.) 274 Fed. 24.

creditor will not be heard to allege that the petitioner is not in reality insolvent and therefore not entitled to the benefits of the act.[13] Nor will the giving of preferences, fraudulent transfers of property, concealment of assets, or other acts done in contravention of the statute avail as grounds of objection to an adjudication on a voluntary petition.[14] There is, however, one single ground on which creditors may interpose to prevent the granting of the petition, namely, a want of jurisdiction in the particular court. Before an adjudication is made on a voluntary petition, creditors may move to set aside the petition or dismiss it, on the ground that the petitioner has not resided or had his domicile or his principal place of business within the jurisdiction of the court for the requisite length of time, or at all, and thereupon the court may inquire into the facts of jurisdiction, and make the adjudication or dismiss the petition according to the result.[15] Even after the adjudication has been made, it is not too late for creditors to object on this ground their proper course being to move the court to vacate the adjudication. But they must act promptly. If they prove their debts, choose a trustee, and otherwise participate in the proceedings so as to recognize their validity, they will be considered as having waived this objection. They cannot first set it up in opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge.[16]

§ 153. Involuntary Bankruptcy; Creditors Entitled to File Petition.—To sustain a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, it is necessary that it should be brought by not less than three of the creditors, except in the case where the debtor has less than twelve creditors in all, in which event one alone may file the petition. In either case it is required that the petitioning creditor or creditors should have provable claims against the debtor amounting to a minimum of five hundred dollars, over and above the value of any securities held by them. It is absolutely necessary, therefore, that each creditor joining in the petition should be the owner of a demand or claim "provable" against the bankrupt within the provisions of the act.[17] But it is not material to [13] In re Carleton, 115 Fed. 246, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270; In re Fowler, 1 Low. 161, 1 N. B. R. 680, Fed. Cas. No. 4,998.

[14] In re Houghton, 4 Law Rep. 482, Fed. Cas. No. 6,727; Ex parte Paget Fed. Cas. No. 10,670; In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 1016, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501. Compare In re Bailey, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 726.

[15] In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392. Where a voluntary petition is filed in a court of another district after the filing of an involuntary petition, the petitioning creditors are entitled to notice. In re Continental Coal Corp., 238 Fed. 113, 151 C. C. A. 189, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

[16] Allen v. Thompson, 10 Fed. 116; In re Mason, 99 Fed. 256, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 599.

[17] In re Howell, 215 Fed. 1, 131 C. C. A. 309, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572. In re inquire when the debt or claim accrued. A debt contracted before the passage of the bankruptcy statute is within its operation and will support a petition, and it is no objection that the statute is thus made to retroact by giving the creditor a remedy which was not available to him when the claim accrued.[18] But it has been thought by some of the authorities that only those creditors could bring or join in the petition who had provable claims against the bankrupt at the time of the commission of the alleged act of bankruptcy.[19] But these decisions proceed upon the mistaken theory that a petition in bankruptcy is analogous to a creditor's bill to set aside fraudulent conveyances, and hence maintainable only by those directly injured or defrauded. On the contrary, the whole purpose of the statute is to secure the equal distribution of the debtor's property among all his creditors alike, not to reward those whose superior activity has enabled them to unearth concealed assets or secure liens. When the bankrupt's estate shall have been collected by the trustee, it is for distribution among all the creditors whose claims have been proved and allowed, and the petitioning creditors have absolutely no higher rights than any other creditors. Further, there are acts of bankruptcy upon which a petition may be maintained which have nothing to do with the giving of preferences or the transfer or concealment of assets, and as to which, therefore, the supposed analogy breaks down. Finally the courts are not justified in adding to the statute a qualification or condition which it does not express. It merely provides that "three or more creditors who have provable claims" may petition; it does not require that the claims should have been in existence and should have been provable at a time anterior to the filing of the petition. We think therefore that the better reason is clearly with those authorities which reject this qualification, and hold that it is only necessary that the petitioning Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449, Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 59b, 63. Persons related to the alleged bankrupt within the third degree of consanguinity may bring a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against him, although it is provided that they are not to be included in computing the total number of his creditors for the purpose of ascertaining whether a sufficient proportion have joined in the petition. Perkins v. Dorman, 206 Fed. 858. A corporation of another state may be a petitioning creditor, and it is not necessary to allege that it has obtained the right to do business in the state where the proceeding is brought. In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950. But persons who extended credit to a corporation, in violation of the express provisions of the statute under which it was organized that it should neither give nor receive credit, have no claims which could be proved in bankruptcy against it, and cannot maintain a petition to have it adjudged an involuntary bankrupt. In re Wyoming Valley Co-op. Ass'n, 198 Fed. 436, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 462.

[18] Ex parte Hull, Fed. Cas. No. 6,856.

[19] Brake v. Callison, 129 Fed. 201, 63 C. C. A. 359, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 797; creditors should have provable claims at the time they sign the petition.[20]

But a creditor who has sold and assigned his claim has no standing to bring or join in the petition,[21] and this applies to one who was qualified at the time the original petition was filed, but ceased to be a creditor before the filing of an amended petition, the first having been dismissed for insufficiency.[22] But it is immaterial that he has contracted to sell his claim, agreeing, as a condition, first to join in a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor, if the transfer is not made until after the petition is filed.[23] Nor is the bankruptcy proceeding defeated by the fact that one of the petitioning creditors has received payment of his claim from the debtor after the filing of the petition.[24] But a petitioner must be the real owner of a provable claim, entitled to sue on it, and, if not the beneficial owner of the claim, at least he must be the representative or trustee of one who is the beneficial owner of a genuine and provable debt.[25] Under ordinary circumstances, the assignee of a claim succeeds to the rights of his assignor, including the right to join in a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor, unless where the assignment was taken as part of an unlawful or oppressive scheme;[26] but one is not qualified as a petitioner to whom a claim has been transferred without consideration and as a mere subterfuge to avoid a possible set-off or counterclaim.[27] This condition being fulfilled it is not necessary that the claim should be immediately enforceable. The statute only requires that it should be "a fixed liability absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition, whether then payable or not." (Section 63.) Consequently a debt payable in the future, but upon which the debtor's liability is fixed and not contingent, will support a

In re Callison, 130 Fed. 987, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Brinkman, 103 Fed. 65, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551; Beers v. Hamlin, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912.

[20] In re Hanyan, 180 Fed. 498, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72, affirmed without opinion in (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 1021, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 954; In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772; Ex parte Shouse, Crabbe, 482, Fed. Cas. No. 12,815; In re Van Horn, 246 Fed. 822, 159 C. C. A. 124, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

[21] In re Burlington Malting Co., 109 Fed. 777, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369.

[22] In re Western Savings & T. Co., 4 Sawy. 190, 17 N. B. R. 413, Fed. Cas. No. 17,442.

[23] Lowenstein v. Henry McShane Mfg. Co., 130 Fed. 1007, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[24] In re Lutfy, 156 Fed. 873, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614.

[25] In re Halsey Electric Generator Co., 163 Fed. 118, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738. One holding a note of the bankrupt as an agent or trustee of another is competent to join in an involuntary petition. In re Veler, 249 Fed. 633, 161 C. C. A. 543, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[26] In re H. E. Page Motor Car Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 318, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546.

[27] In re Pangborn, 185 Fed. 673, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

petition in bankruptcy, such as a promissory note not yet due.[28] Where there has been presentment of a note for payment, dishonor, and notice, the payee may file a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the indorser.[29] But if the debtor's liability, as distinguished from the date of payment, is uncertain or conditional, it will not suffice. Thus, a surety who has not paid the debt is not a creditor in such sense as to be entitled to file a petition in bankruptcy against the principal debtor,[30] nor a subcontractor whose claim against the contractor was not to become fixed until the latter should have been paid by the owner, the latter event not having occurred at the time of the filing of the petition.[31] So, where the law of the state provides that a tax collector may sue for the recovery of delinquent taxes only after they have remained unpaid for three months, he cannot maintain a petition in bankruptcy against the taxpayer without showing that the prescribed time has elapsed.[32] The claims of several joint makers of a note, who have discharged the same, are provable debts against the maker, who refuses to pay his pro rata share, so as to sustain a petition in bankruptcy against him.[33]

Secured creditors, as well as those who are unsecured, may file a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, although, in making up the requisite amount of debts, their claims are to be counted only to the extent to which they may exceed the value of the securities.[34] A state may be a petitioning creditor.[35] And a married woman may file a petition against her own husband, if the law of the state permits the creation of enforceable debts as between man and wife, and she is an actual creditor of her [28] In re Rothenberg, 140 Fed. 798, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485; Linn v. Smith, N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 8,375; In re Alexander, 1 Low. 470, 4 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 161; Phelps v. Clasen, Woolw. 204, Fed. Cas. No. 11,074; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912; In re Ouimette, 1 Sawy. 47, Fed. Cas. No. 10,662; Barton v. Tower, Fed. Cas. No. 1,085; In re King, Fed. Cas. No. 7,785. Compare In re Morse, 17 Blatchf. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 9,851.

[29] Doty v. Mason (D. C.) 244 Fed. 587, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

[30] Phillips v. Dreher Shoe Co., 112 Fed. 404, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 326. See Boyce v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 111 Fed. 138, 49 C. C. A. 276, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6.

[31] In re Ellis, 143 Fed. 103, 74 C. C. A. 297, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 221.

[32] In re Corwin Mfg. Co., 185 Fed. 976, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269.

[33] Wright v. Rumph, 238 Fed. 138, 151 C. C. A. 214, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235.

[34] In re Bloss, 4 N. B. R. 147, Fed. Cas. No. 1,562; In re Stansell, 6 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 13,293; In re Alexander, 1 Low. 470, 4 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 161; In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315; Morrison v. Rieman, 249 Fed. 97, 161 C. C. A. 149, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325. As to the case of a creditor who has already attached property of the debtor, see In re Automatic Typewriter & Service Co. (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 1, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377. See In re Hazens, 4 Dill. 549, Fed. Cas. No. 6,285.

[35] In re Chamberlin, 9 Ben. 149, 17 N. B. R. 49, Fed. Cas. No. 2,580.

husband in good faith, having a provable claim.[36] And creditors of a corporation, who happen also to be stockholders and directors in the company, are not precluded by reason of that relation, from commencing proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy against the corporation.[37] A creditor of a partnership is also a creditor of each member of the firm, and is entitled as such to join in a petition in bankruptcy brought against one of the partners individually,[38] and one partner may file a petition against the firm and his co-partners,[39] but not, it seems, where his only claim is for a share in the assets of the firm, growing out of unsettled partnership transactions, because in that case he could not compete with firm creditors, his right being subordinate to their claim to full satisfaction out of firm property.[40]

As to the nature of the claim in general, so long as it is a "fixed liability," it is not necessary that it should be an obligation cognizable strictly at law; it may be an equitable demand.[41] Or it may be a statutory liability, such as the liability of a stockholder in a corporation to pay the debts of the corporation to the extent of the unpaid balance on his stock,[42] or the liability of directors in certain kinds of corporations (such as savings banks) to creditors when the funds of the company have been embezzled or misappropriated by its officers.[43] Further, since the statute provides (section 63b) that unliquidated claims against the bankrupt may be liquidated in such manner as the court of bankruptcy shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate, it is held that where the claim constitutes a fixed liability and only the amount of damages remains unliquidated, it will support a petition in bankruptcy, the sufficiency of the claim in respect to its amount being determinable on the trial of the petition.[44] Such is a claim for damages for breach of an executory contract,[45] or for damages arising out of a breach of warranty on the sale of personal property,[46] though it is held [36] In re Novak, 101 Fed. 800, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 311.

[37] In re Rollins Gold & Silver Min. Co., 102 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 327; Home Powder Co. v. Geis (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 568, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580.

[38] In re Mercur, 95 Fed. 634, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626.

[39] In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459. But see Robinson v. Hanway, 19 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 11,953.

[40] Sigsby v. Willis, 3 Ben. 371, 3 N. B. R. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 12,849; In re Schenkein, 113 Fed. 421.

[41] Sigsby v. Willis, 3 Ben. 371, 3 N. B. R. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 12,849.

[42] In re Putnam, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; Walker v. Woodside, 164 Fed. 680, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

[43] In re Brown, 164 Fed. 673, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123.

[44] In re Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co., 125 Fed. 576, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 48. But see In re Big Meadows Gas Co., 113 Fed. 974, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697, as to an unliquidated claim the validity of which is not admitted, but disputed.

[45] In re Stern, 116 Fed. 604, 54 C. C. A. 60, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

[46] Frederick L. Grant Shoe Co. v. W. M. Laird Co., 212 U. S. 445, 29 Sup. Ct. 332, 53 L. Ed. 591, 21 Am. Bankr.

that one whose claim is for unliquidated damages growing out of an alleged tort is not qualified as a petitioning creditor.[47]

A debt outlawed by the statute of limitations is not a provable claim within the meaning of the bankruptcy act,[48] nor can one person force another into bankruptcy by the use of alleged debts which, by operation of law, would be extinguished by the adjudication,[49] nor where the debtor has counterclaims against the petitioning creditor, of such a nature as are provable in bankruptcy, sufficient to reduce his claim below the jurisdictional amount.[50] Creditors who have proved their claims in bankruptcy are not entitled, while the estate is still in process of administration, though after the bankrupt has been refused a discharge, to maintain proceedings to have him adjudged a bankrupt a second time on account of the same debts, on the ground that he has acquired property after the first adjudication which he is alleged to have conveyed in fraud of his creditors.[51] And one is not a creditor of a corporation, within the meaning of the law, merely because goods furnished by him were shipped to and used by the company, where they were billed and charged to another corporation, though the latter owns the stock and controls the business of the former company.[52]

§ 154. Same; Preferred Creditors.—There are numerous and respectable authorities to the effect that a creditor who has received a preference is not thereby disqualified from bringing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against his debtor.[53] According to these cases, the bankruptcy act maintains a clear distinction between the proof and the allowance of claims. That section which relates to the filing of petitions

Rep. 484. Compare In re Morales, 105 Fed. 761, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

47 In re Brinckman, 103 Fed. 65, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551, citing Beers v. Hanlin, 99 Fed. 695, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; Ex parte Charles, 14 East, 197, 16 Ves. 256. But otherwise when a claim for damages has been reduced to judgment. In re Putman, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923.

48 In re Putman, 193 Fed. 464, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 923; In re Lipman, 94 Fed. 353, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46; In re Resler, 95 Fed. 804, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602; In re Cornwall, 9 Blatchf. 114, 6 N. B. R. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 3,250.

49 In re Windt, 177 Fed. 584, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536.

50 In re Osage Valley & S. K. R. Co., 9 N. B. R. 281, Fed. Cas. No. 10,592. And see Cutler v. Nu-Gold Ring Co. (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 836, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505.

51 In re Barton's Estate, 144 Fed. 540, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

52 In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191. And see In re Eclipse Poultry Co., 250 Fed. 96, 162 C. C. A. 268, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49.

53 In re Hornstein, 122 Fed. 266, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308; In re Herzikopf, 118 Fed. 101, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; In re Norcross, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 257, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; In re Cain, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 389, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378; In re Bloss, 4 N. B. R. 147, Fed. Cas. No. 1,562; In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315; In re Stansell, 6 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 13,293; Rankin v. Railway Co., 1 N. B. R. 647, Fed. Cas. No. 11,567; Coxe v. Hale, 10 Blatchf. 56, 8 N. B. R. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 3,310.

only requires that the creditor's claim should be "provable," and the claim of a creditor is provable, so as to entitle him to join in the petition, notwithstanding the fact that he has received a preference, which he will be required to surrender before his claim is allowed. But the preponderance of authority is the other way. The majority of the decisions hold that a creditor having a preference, which he does not surrender or disclaim, is not entitled to join in the petition, and that if his elimination reduces the number of creditors (or the amount of their claims) below what the statute requires, the defect is jurisdictional and the petition must be dismissed.[54] This rule has been applied even in a case where the preferred creditor based his petition on an entirely separate and distinct debt, as to which he had received no preference.[55] The last position, however, is open to very serious doubt, as it appears to inject an entirely unnecessary limitation into the statute. At the same time, it must be conceded that there is very strong reason in favor of the view adopted by some of the courts, that a preferred creditor cannot proceed for adjudication against his debtor when he alleges as the act of bankruptcy on which his petition is founded the very act of preference to which he was a party, as he is estopped on every principle of equity, and the law should discourage a course of procedure which would amount to laying a trap for an embarrassed and unwary debtor.[56] But if the preferred creditor, in his petition, disclaims or abjures the preference which he has received, or offers to surrender or vacate it, or to bring the money into court, if it was a payment in money, or if he will otherwise, according to its nature, renounce all benefit or advantage from it, then he may join in the petition as an ordinary creditor.[57] And it should be noted that a creditor is not disqualified from petitioning, because of the receipt of a payment more than four months previously, which, if made within that time, would have been preferential, but under the actual circumstances is not.[58]

[54] In re Fishblate Clothing Co., 125 Fed. 986, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; In re Schenkein, 113 Fed. 421; In re Burlington Malting Co., 109 Fed. 777, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 369; In re Rogers Milling Co., 102 Fed. 687, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; In re Gillette, 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119; Buckingham v. Schuylkill Plush & Silk Co., 38 Misc. Rep. 305, 77 N. Y. Supp. 857; In re Hunt, 5 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 6,882; In re Rado, 6 Ben. 230, Fed. Cas. No. 11,522; Ecker v. McAllister, 45 Md. 290. But a creditor will not be considered as preferred because he holds as security for his debt a life insurance policy having no surrender value. In re Blount, 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97.

[55] In re Rogers Milling Co., 102 Fed. 687, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540.

[56] In re Currier, 2 Low. 436, 13 N. B. R. 68, Fed. Cas. No. 3,492; In re Williams, 14 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 17,706.

[57] In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118; Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co., 150 Fed. 71, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609; In re Marcer, 6 N. B. R. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 9,060; In re Murphy (D. C.) 225 Fed. 392, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[58] In re Girard Glazed Kid Co., 129 Fed. 841, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295.

§ 155. Same; Creditors Estopped to Petition.—It is well settled that where the act of bankruptcy relied on in an involuntary petition is the making of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, no creditors will be entitled to join in the petition who have recognized and assented to the assignment and participated in the proceedings under it, so as to make themselves parties to it, being estopped by the election between their rights under the assignment and those under the bankruptcy law.[59] This rule is applied as against creditors who have received and accepted dividends on their claims under the assignment,[60] who have filed their claims and permitted the assignee to sell the property and collect the proceeds, involving considerable delay and the incurring of expenses,[61] or who have simply allowed four months to elapse without attempting to institute or join in bankruptcy proceedings.[62] But there are numerous exceptions or qualifications of the rule. Thus, it is said not to apply to a creditor who merely offered to assent to the assignment if the assignee should be changed, which was not done,[63] or who applied to the state court to have the bond of the assignee increased,[64] or who merely filed his claim in the assignment proceedings, but derived no benefit from it,[65] particularly if it was done in ignorance of facts tending to show that the assignment was fraudulent and that the debtor had disposed of property in fraud of his creditors.[66] In one of the leading cases, it was ruled that creditors were not estopped to maintain a petition in involuntary bankruptcy on any or all of the following grounds: (1) That, having knowledge of the assignment and of the acts of the assignee thereunder in conducting the business and selling the stock on hand, they delayed instituting proceedings for two months; (2) that, pending a proposition for compromise, they sold to such assignee for cash small bills of [59] In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772; Moulton v. Coburn, 131 Fed. 201, 66 C. C. A. 90, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553; In re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Durham Paper Co. v. Seaboard Knitting Mills, 121 Fed. 179, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29; In re Kraft, 3 Fed. 892; Despres v. Galbraith, 213 Fed. 190, 129 C. C. A. 534, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 170; In re Henry Campe & Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 433, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 792. But while knowledge and assent will preclude a creditor from urging the debtor's general assignment as an act of bankruptcy, yet the creditor's knowledge of and assent to the execution of an instrument which did not amount to a "general" assignment will not prevent him from urging that a subsequent instrument, which was in fact a general assignment, constitutes an act of bankruptcy. Doty v. Mason (D. C.) 244 Fed. 587, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

[60] In re Brokaw, 11 Fed. 704.

[61] Simonson v. Sinsheimer, 95 Fed. 948, 37 C. C. A. 337; Utz & Dunn Co. v. Regulator Co., 213 Fed. 315, 130 C. C. A. 17, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167.

[62] In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 752, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

[63] Spicer v. Ward, 3 N. B. R. 512, Fed. Cas. No. 13,241.

[64] In re Langley, 1 N. B. R. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 11,006.

[65] In re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 440.

[66] In re Curtis, 94 Fed. 630, 36 C. C. A. 430, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226.

goods to replenish the stock and make it more salable; (3) that they submitted to the assignee, at his request, unverified statements of their claims, for the specific purpose of comparing the same with the entries in the insolvent's books; (4) that an order made by the state court for the sale of the assignor's goods was submitted to the attorneys for the said creditors and by them indorsed "seen."[67] Again, where the secretary and treasurer of a corporation, which was a creditor of the bankrupt, agreed to act as the bankrupt's assignee in his capacity as an individual only, this did not estop the corporation from joining in the bankruptcy petition.[68] For even stronger reasons, a creditor should not be held to be estopped who went into the state court only for the purpose of attacking certain alleged preferences as fraudulent,[69] or for the purpose of preventing a distribution of the assets until proceedings in bankruptcy could be begun.[70] Nor does the rule apply to creditors who were induced to assent to the assignment by the debtor's fraud or misrepresentations; in this case, they may repudiate it and allege it as an act of bankruptcy.[71] And so, there is no estoppel where the act of bankruptcy relied on is a conveyance of property not included in the assignment nor drawn into the proceedings in the state court thereunder.[72] And even where a creditor would be thus estopped in respect to a particular debt or claim, it will not preclude him from joining in the petition in bankruptcy in respect to an entirely different claim.[73] And it is said that the rule of estoppel does not apply where the state court in which the proceedings were had was entirely without jurisdiction, because operating under a statute annulled or suspended by the bankruptcy law.[74]

On analogous principles, an arrangement effected between an insolvent debtor and his creditors for the conversion of his stock in trade and accounts into cash, through the agency of a trustee, and the proportional distribution of the proceeds among the creditors, to be accepted by them in full payment, will estop creditors who participated in the agreement from petitioning in bankruptcy, when the plan has been so far carried out that a sale of the property has been accomplished.[75] And [67] Sinsheimer v. Simonson, 96 Fed. 579, affirmed Simonson v. Sinsheimer, 100 Fed. 426, 40 C. C. A. 474, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824.

[68] In re Winston, 122 Fed. 187, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[69] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[70] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[71] Canner v. Webster Tapper Co., 168 Fed. 519, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872.

[72] In re Salmon & Salmon, 143 Fed. 395, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

[73] Hays v. Wagner, 150 Fed. 533, 80 C. C. A. 275, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Johnson v. Rogers, 15 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 7,408.

[74] In re Weedman Stave Co., 199 Fed. 948, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 460.

[75] Clark v. Henne & Meyer, 127 Fed. 288, 62 C. C. A. 172, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep.

so as to creditors of a corporation who intervened in a suit against it in a state court and assisted in having receivers appointed.[76] Nor is there anything in the law to prevent the creditors of an embarrassed debtor from uniting in granting him an extension of time for payment. And it would seem that creditors who had signed such an agreement should not be allowed to maintain a petition in bankruptcy while the agreement was circulating among creditors for their signature, or until a reasonable time had been given the debtor to procure their signatures. Yet where such an agreement is not to be binding unless all the creditors will unite in it, an unequivocal dissent by any creditor will release others who had already signed, and remove any impediment to their petitioning in bankruptcy.[77] It should probably be a defense to such a petition that the creditor maintaining it had previously agreed to compromise with his debtor on receiving a certain proportion of his claim; but not where the composition was not carried into effect, and it is not shown that such an agreement on the part of one creditor was made the basis for a similar agreement by another.[78] A release of his debt would put the creditor in a position where he would no longer be entitled to petition in bankruptcy; but a release obtained by fraud and deceit may be repudiated.[79] Also an estoppel against a creditor may be based on his having consented to the giving of a preference to another creditor, at least so far as to preclude him from alleging that preference as an act of bankruptcy.[80] But obtaining the consent of an insolvent corporation to be thrown into bankruptcy (by a resolution declaring its inability to pay its debts and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt) is not necessarily collusion such as to defeat the petition, where the object of the creditor was not to obtain an advantage for himself, but to secure the equal distribution of its property among all the creditors.[81]

Since a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy is not one for the recovery of a debt, but to secure an equitable division of the debtor's

583. But otherwise where, after such a transfer and sale, the proceeds were diverted by the debtor to other purposes than that proposed. In re Gillette, 104 Fed. 769, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 119.

[76] Lowenstein v. Henry McShane Mfg. Co., 130 Fed. 1007, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601; In re Gold Run Mining & Tunnel Co., 200 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; Ohio Motor Car Co. v. Eiseman Magneto Co., 230 Fed. 370, 144 C. C. A. 512, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; In re Commonwealth Lumber Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 667, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; In re McKinnon Co. (D. C.) 237 Fed. 869, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[77] Ex parte Potts, Crabbe, 469, Fed. Cas. No. 11,344.

[78] Simonson v. Sinsheimer, 95 Fed. 948, 37 C. C. A. 337; In re Simonson, 92 Fed. 904, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

[79] Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398, 22 L. Ed. 520.

[80] In re Massachusetts Brick Co., 2 Low. 58, 5 N. B. R. 408, Fed. Cas. No. 9,259. And see In re Taylor House Ass'n (D. C.) 209 Fed. 924, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[81] In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 123 Fed. 965, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656, affirmed 130 Fed. 685, 66 C. C. A. 37, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

property, the fact that a particular creditor has brought suit for the recovery of his debt, or the pendency of such an action, is not a bar to his filing a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor,[82] and certainly not where he bases his bankruptcy petition on a distinct and independent demand.[83] Even the levy of an execution on sufficient property to satisfy the debt,[84] or the collection of a portion of it by means of execution,[85] will not estop the creditor to petition in bankruptcy, provided he will surrender the preference thus obtained, by releasing the levy or bringing into court the sum already realized.

§ 156. Same; Requisites as to Number and Amount.—According to the provisions of the statute (section 59), in every case of proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy, it is requisite that the amount of the debts represented by those joining in the petition should be at least $500. But as to the number of creditors who must join, it is provided that at least three shall unite in filing the petition, except in the case where the whole number of the creditors of the proposed bankrupt is less than twelve, in which event one creditor or two may file the petition. If the number of creditors exactly equals twelve, then three must join, for the right to petition is given to a single creditor (or to two) only in case all the creditors are "less than twelve" in number. It appears that the bankruptcy law may be made the means of collecting a single debt. If the claimant who files the petition is the solitary creditor of the proposed bankrupt, it is only necessary that his claim should amount to $500 or more, and that he should be able to prove the commission of an act of bankruptcy within four months. Cases would undoubtedly be rare in which the ordinary legal remedies would be insufficient for a creditor so situated; but at any rate he would have his option to throw his debtor into bankruptcy if he saw fit to proceed in that way. It was so held under the earlier bankruptcy law,[86] though the courts also ruled that a petition presented by a single creditor who had ample security for his claim was not within the purpose of the statute and the court should decline to take jurisdiction.[87]

[82] In re Henderson, 9 Fed. 196.

[83] Everett v. Derby, 5 Law Rep. 225, Fed. Cas. No. 4,576.

[84] In re Sheehan, 8 N. B. R. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 12,737.

[85] In re Miller, 104 Fed. 764, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

[86] In re Alexander, 1 Low. 470, 4 N. B. R. 178, Fed. Cas. No. 161. And see In re Culgin-Pace Contracting Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 245, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375, holding that a single intervening creditor may carry on an involuntary petition in bankruptcy good on its face.

[87] Avery v. Johann, 3 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 675; In re Johann, 2 Biss. 139, 4 N. B. R. 434, Fed. Cas. No. 7,331; In re Scammon, 6 Biss. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 12,428.

In computing the number of creditors, to determine whether enough have joined, or whether the total number is greater or less than twelve, the time to be taken is the date of the filing of the petition, as that is the commencement of the proceedings,[88] subject, of course, to the exception provided for in the statute, where other creditors intervene and join in the petition before the final decision.[89]

Creditors holding fraudulent or voidable preferences are not to be counted in computing the number of creditors,[90] nor are secured creditors unless their claims severally exceed the value of the securities which they hold.[91] Neither should the count include any creditors who would be estopped to join in the petition, as, by having assented to a general assignment by the debtor.[92] Further the act directs that "such creditors as were employed by him [the bankrupt] at the time of the filing of the petition, or are related to him by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, as determined by the common law,[93] and have not joined in the petition, shall not be counted."[94] But it is a fair inference from this provision that if any employés or relatives have joined in the petition, they are not to be excluded from the computation; they may then be counted either for the purpose of making up the minimum of three who must join, or, on the other hand, for making out the total number of creditors to be twelve or more. It will also be perceived that the law places no minimum limitation upon the value

[88] In re H. E. Page Motor Car Co. (D. C.) 251 Fed. 318, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546; Moulton v. Coburn, 131 Fed. 201, 66 C. C. A. 90, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553; Stroheim v. Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co. (C. C. A.) 175 Fed. 52, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695; In re Coburn, 126 Fed. 218, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212. Contra, see In re Plymouth Cordage Co., 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

[89] But see In re Kehoe, 233 Fed. 415, 147 C. C. A. 351, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 891, holding that, where there were more than 12 creditors, and only one filed an involuntary petition, creditors who acquired their claims after the filing of the petition cannot intervene as petitioning creditors.

[90] Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co. (C. C., A.) 150 Fed. 71, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609; Clinton v. Mayo, 12 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 2,899; In re Currier, 2 Low. 436, 13 N. B. R. 68, Fed. Cas. No. 3,492; In re Israel, 3 Dill. 511, 12 N. B. R. 204, Fed. Cas. No. 7,111; In re Jewett, 7 Biss. 242, Fed. Cas. No. 7,305; In re Scrafford, 4 Dill. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 12,556. Contra, see Boston West Africa Trading Co. v. Quaker City Morocco Co., (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 665, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 315, affirming In re Boston-West Africa Trading Co. (D. C.) 255 Fed. 924, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382.

[91] In re Blount, 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Crossette, 17 N. B. R. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,435; In re Bouton, 5 Sawy. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 1,706. And see Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 56b, 59b.

[92] In re Miner, 104 Fed. 520, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 710. But see In re Coburn, 126 Fed. 218, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212.

[93] As to the meaning of these terms, see supra, § 61. It has been thought that the officers of a corporation, having claims against it, should not be counted among its creditors, their relation to the corporation being analogous to consanguinity between natural persons. See In re Barrett Publishing Co., 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 80.

[94] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 59e.

of the several claims, so far as regards computing the number of creditors. It has been strongly intimated from the bench that, for this purpose, trivial debts for petty amounts, "trashy debts," as the court called them, should not be noticed, on the principle of the maxim "de minimis non curat lex."[95] But this is in the face of the statute, and there is authority for the proposition that all creditors must be counted, even those for merely nominal sums.[96] In estimating the number and amount of claims on a petition against a partner, the partnership debts and creditors must be considered.[97] Personal property taxes are debts, to be included in determining whether or not the bankrupt's debts amount to the jurisdictional sum.[98]

An insolvent debtor having more than twelve creditors cannot defeat bankruptcy proceedings against him by transferring his property for the benefit of some of his creditors, leaving less than three unprovided for, but at the same time leaving the preferred creditors actually unpaid for the purpose of requiring them to be counted, so that those remaining will be insufficient in number to maintain the petition.[99] And payments made by the bankrupt to some of the petitioning creditors, after the filing of the petition, so as to eliminate them from the count or reduce the aggregate amount of the petitioning creditors' claims below the statutory limit, will not defeat the jurisdiction of the court, at least where enough other creditors afterwards come in to raise the amount above the jurisdictional limit.[100]

In regard to the requirement that the amount due to the petitioning creditors should be at least $500, it is held to be unnecessary that the amount due to the petitioning creditor or creditors should be exactly determined (as in the case of claims for damages) provided it clearly appears that it will be more than enough to satisfy the statute.[101] Nor is it necessary that the principal sum of the debts should equal the jurisdictional amount, but accrued interest, evidently due on the face

[95] Gage v. Bell, 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696. And see In re Blount, 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97. Relative to there being less then 12 creditors, so that one holder of a claim for $500 could file a petition in involuntary bankruptcy holders of small claims for household supplies payable monthly may be disregarded. In re Burg (D. C.) 245 Fed. 173, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

[96] In re Brown, 111 Fed. 979, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102.

[97] In re Lloyd, 15 N. B. R. 257, Fed. Cas. No. 8,429.

[98] Kaw Boiler Works v. Schull, 230 Fed. 587, 144 C. C. A. 641, L. R. A. 1916E, 628, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

[99] In re Blount, 142 Fed. 263, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97. But see Leighton v. Kennedy, 129 Fed. 737, 64 C. C. A. 265, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

[100] In re Ryan, 114 Fed. 373, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 562; W. A. Gage & Co. v. Bell, 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

[101] In re Hughes, 183 Fed. 872, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556; In re Stern, 116 Fed. 604, 54 C. C. A. 60, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Manhattan Ice Co., 114 Fed. 399, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408.

of the petition, may be added for this purpose.[102] But costs cannot be added. Unless the creditors have provable claims to the amount of $500, they have no right to make costs by proceeding in bankruptcy.[103] Set-offs and counterclaims on the part of the proposed bankrupt will naturally be considered in determining the amount of indebtedness; and when a creditor has received a conditional payment, the effect of which is to reduce his claim below the amount entitling him to maintain a petition, he cannot bring proceedings in bankruptcy unless the condition has failed, so as to make the payment nugatory.[104]

The petition should affirmatively show that it is subscribed by the requisite number and amount of creditors.[105] But it is often very difficult to ascertain how many creditors an insolvent debtor may have or the amount of their claims, and the petitioning creditors should not be held to literal accuracy nor to greater precision than their available sources of information enable them to attain. It has been held that a merchant who has refused, on the demand of creditors, to give them information about his affairs sufficient to enable them to know the number and amount of his debts, will not be heard to object that a sufficient number of his creditors did not join in the petition, at least if enough have come in before the trial.[106] But on the other hand, petitioning creditors must be held to good faith in the matter of alleging and showing that they constitute the requisite quorum of creditors. They cannot "recklessly file a petition for the purpose of making the respondent file a statement of his creditors. It would be intolerable if any one or two creditors, upon either a real or pretended claim, could by a simple allegation in the words of the act compel a business man to spread upon the records a statement of his liabilities. Such a fishing petition cannot be entertained under the act." [107] And the petition will be dismissed on motion, without requiring the debtor to file a schedule, where it appears that the petitioning creditors knew that they did not constitute the requisite number.[108]

If it is averred in the petition that there are less than twelve creditors in all, and the debtor desires to contest this point, so as to prevent an adjudication being made against him on the petition of a single

[102] Sloan v. Lewis, 22 Wall. 150, 22 L. Ed. 832.

[103] In re Skelley, 3 Biss. 260, 5 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 12,921.

[104] In re Ouimette, 1 Sawy. 47, 3 N. B. R. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 10,622.

[105] In re Keeler, 10 N. B. R. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 7,638; In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315. And see infra, § 160.

[106] Perin & Gaff Mfg. Co. v. Peale, 17 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 10,981.

[107] In re Scammon, 3 Biss. 195, 11 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 12,429.

[108] In re Scammon, 3 Biss. 195, 11 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 12,429.

creditor, he must do so in the manner prescribed by the act,[109] that is, by an answer accompanied by a sworn list of all his creditors with their addresses.[110] But it is not only the bankrupt who may take issue with the petitioning creditors on this point. Another creditor, desiring to oppose the adjudication, may suggest the insufficiency of the petition in this respect, and require the bankrupt to file the list of creditors,[111] or such opposing creditor may himself file the "answer" contemplated by the statute.[112] Thereupon, all the creditors shown by the list are to be notified of the pendency of the petition. Apparently they are to be so notified by mail, since the bankrupt is required to furnish their addresses. The object is to give the petitioning creditors an opportunity to secure the concurrence of a sufficient number of other creditors to make up the jurisdictional quorum, and for this purpose they are to be accorded a reasonable length of time.[113] It was held under the act of 1867 that the case at this stage might be referred to a register or commissioner to hear and ascertain the facts,[114] on any proper evidence,[115] and probably the same course might now be pursued. If it is found that the petitioning creditors were originally sufficient in number and amount, or if, prior to or during the hearing, a sufficient number join in the petition, the case may be proceeded with, but otherwise the petition will be dismissed.

It is more difficult to determine whether or not the joinder of a sufficient number and amount of creditors in the petition is to be regarded as a jurisdictional fact. There are respectable authorities in support of the view that it is to be so considered,[116] and even that the validity of the adjudication in this respect may be collaterally questioned.[117] But the preponderance of authority is to the contrary, and it may be stated as the generally accepted rule that the joinder of the specified proportion of creditors, in number and amount, in a petition in involun-

[109] Lastrapes v. Blanc, 3 Woods, 134, Fed. Cas. No. 8,100.

[110] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 59d. And see In re Steinman, 6 Biss. 166, 10 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 13,357; In re Hymes, 7 Ben. 427, 10 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 6,986.

[111] Clinton v. Mayo, 12 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 2,899.

[112] Anonymous, 11 Chi. Leg. News, 190, Fed. Cas. No. 441.

[113] In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315; In re Rebmeister, 15 Blatchf. 467, Fed. Cas. No. 11,623; In re Bedingfield, 96 Fed. 190, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

[114] In re Hymes, 7 Ben. 427, 10 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 6,986; In re Sargent, 13 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 12,361.

[115] In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315.

[116] In re Scammon, 6 Biss. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 12,427; In re Rosenfields, 11 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 12,061; Doty v. Mason (D. C.) 244 Fed. 587, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58; Cutler v. Nu-Gold Ring Co. (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 836, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505.

[117] Buckingham v. Schuylkill Plush & Silk Co., 38 Misc. Rep. 305, 77 N. Y. Supp. 857.

tary bankruptcy is not a jurisdictional prerequisite.[118] And in one case where it plainly appeared that the petition was not presented by the requisite quorum of creditors, but the bankrupt himself consented to an adjudication thereon, the court remarked that there was great force in the suggestion that this was merely an irregularity which the bankrupt might waive.[119] And at any rate, the judgment of the court of bankruptcy that the required number and amount of creditors have joined in the petition is final, and the question so adjudged is not thereafter re-examinable, except it may be in cases of fraud or imposition practised on the court.[120]

§ 157. Same; Solicitation, Procurement, or Purchase of Claims.—The validity of a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy is not affected by the fact that it was commenced at the instigation of the bankrupt himself. There is no legal fraud in an insolvent debtor's requesting his creditors to petition against him, or soliciting a sufficent number of creditors to join in the petition, when the court otherwise has jurisdiction and he has committed an act of bankruptcy.[121] And on the same principle, an agreement to withdraw opposition to a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy, and to consent and submit to an adjudication of bankruptcy, cannot be said to be in fraud of the act.[122] So also it is permissible for a creditor, who desires the settlement of his debtor's estate through the agency of a court of bankruptcy, to use all lawful and honest means to bring about that result. There is nothing to forbid him from seeking out other creditors of the common debtor and asking them to join in the petition, or to come in after the filing of the petition and join in it, when such intervention becomes necessary to save the proceed-

[118] In re Plymouth Cordage Co., 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Haff, 136 Fed. 78, 68 C. C. A. 646, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Henderson, 9 Fed. 196; Ex parte Jewett, 2 Low. 393, 11 N. B. R. 443, Fed. Cas. No. 7,303; In re Duncan, 8 Ben. 365, 14 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 4,131.

[119] In re Williams, 6 Biss. 233, 11 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 17,700.

[120] In re Duncan, 8 Ben. 365, 14 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 4,131; In re Funkenstein, 3 Sawy. 605, 14 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. 5,158; In re Lloyd, Fed. Cas. No. 8,431.

[121] In re Ordway, 19 N. B. R. 171, Fed. Cas. No. 10,552; In re Duncan, 8 Ben. 365, 14 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 4,131; In re Bouton, 5 Sawy. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 1,706; In re Matot, 16 N. B. R. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 9,282. The fact that proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy were instigated by a promise on the part of the debtor that the petitioning creditor should be paid in full, while it would affect the right to a discharge, will not invalidate the proceedings in bankruptcy so as to make void a sale made by the bankrupt's assignee. Wallace v. Loomis, 97 U. S. 146, 24 L. Ed. 895. But a bankrupt who procures a fraudulent petition to be filed by his creditors, with intent to procure a discharge, which he could not obtain by voluntary proceedings, is in contempt of court. In re Lalor, 19 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 8,001.

[122] Sanford v. Huxford, 32 Mich. 313, 20 Am. Rep. 647.

ing.[123] And if other creditors than the one chiefly moving in the matter are unwilling to sign the petition, it is perfectly proper for other persons to purchase their claims, in order to be qualified to join, and so to make up the requisite number of petitioning creditors,[124] though if such a sale of a claim is void for fraud or want of consideration, the claim is to be considered as still belonging to the assignor, and it will be so treated in counting the number of creditors.[125] But the debts or claims thus brought into the proceeding, whether by solicitation or by transfer, must be genuine and independent of each other. A creditor of a bankrupt may not split up his claim into portions and assign some of the parts to third persons for the purpose of qualifying them as joint petitioners in a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy. This is a subterfuge, entirely contrary to the spirit and purpose of the act, and which the law will not countenance.[126] On the other hand, creditors may use proper means to prevent the filing of a petition against their debtor. It has been held that an agreement between creditors who have received preferences to contribute proportionally such sum as may be necessary to induce the other creditors to forbear to put the debtor into bankruptcy is not invalid.[127]

§ 158. Same; Withdrawal of Petitioners.—On account of the community of interest between the creditors joining in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy and the requirement that there shall be a certain number, holding claims to a certain value, in order to sustain the petition, a creditor so uniting with others in such a petition has not the same right to abandon the proceeding that the plaintiff in a suit has to discontinue it. It is in fact a well-settled rule that a creditor in this situation will not be permitted to withdraw his name from the proceedings, against the protest of the others, merely because he repents of his action or has obtained a settlement of his claim, when his withdrawal would reduce the number of creditors or the amount of debts below the jurisdictional

123 In re Smith, 176, Fed. 426, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 864.

124 In re Bevins, 165 Fed. 434, 91 C. C. A. 302, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Woodford, 13 N. B. R. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 17,972. But see Emerine v. Tarault, 219 Fed. 68, 134 C. C. A. 606, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55. Under the New York insolvency law, if an insolvent procures a person to buy up a judgment against him, and such person pays nothing, or at most a nominal consideration, for the assignment of the judgment, he can be a petitioning creditor only for the sum actually paid. Slidell v. McCrea, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 156.

125 In re Woodford, 13 N. B. R. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 17,972.

126 In re Halsey Electric Generator Co., 163 Fed. 118, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; Stroheim v. Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co. (C. C. A.) 175 Fed. 52, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695; In re Tribelhorn, 137 Fed. 3, 69 C. C. A. 601, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491; In re Independent Thread Co., 113 Fed. 998, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772.

127 Perryman v. Allen, 50 Ala. 573, 15 N. B. R. 113.

minimum, and so require the dismissal of the petition.[128] It must be said, however, that some of the more recent cases do not acquiesce in this rule. For instance, it has been said: "No doubt any petitioner may be allowed to withdraw in the court's discretion. If the original petitioners so withdraw before others intervene, that ends the proceeding completely; there is nothing left to intervene in. But until they do withdraw, there is a proceeding, in which others may intervene; and if they have done so, in the lifetime of the proceeding, subsequent withdrawal of the originators will leave the interveners free to proceed." [129] In another decision it is ruled that the withdrawal of any number of creditors who in good faith filed a petition in bankruptcy against the debtor does not prevent the court from proceeding with the adjudication, so long as one or more of the petitioning creditors, though less than the number required to institute the proceedings, desires it, since any other rule would permit the alleged bankrupt to bargain with part of the creditors to induce them to withdraw and thereby defeat the proceedings.[130] But a creditor whose name was joined with others in the petition without his knowledge or consent may repudiate the proceeding, and if he does so, the petition will be dismissed as to him, even though the result is to break the quorum.[131]. And it is in the discretion of the court to permit the withdrawal, at any time before an adjudication, of a creditor who was induced to join by misrepresentation or misunderstanding,[132] or who did so under a mistake of fact as to his having previously assented to the debtor's general assignment for the benefit of creditors,[133] or where the qualification of the creditor to become a petitioner is open to doubt or challenge.[134] And in another case, where two of the three petitioning creditors brought about the payment of a judgment on the claim of one of them and the latter's withdrawal as a petitioning creditor, it was held that both were estopped to complain of the paid creditor's withdrawal from the proceeding.[135]

[128] In re Bedingfield, 96 Fed. 190, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Quincy Granite Quarries Co., 147 Fed. 279, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823; In re Cronin, 98 Fed. 584, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; In re Vogel, 9 Ben. 498, 18 N. B. R. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 16,981; In re Heffron, 6 Biss. 156, 10 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. No. 6,321; In re Rosenfields, 11 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 12,061; In re Philadelphia Axle Works, 1 Wkly. Notes Cas. 126, Fed. Cas. No. 11,091; In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 10 Ariz. 42, 85 Pac. 653.

[129] In re Bolognesi, 223 Fed. 771, 139 C. C. A. 351, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[130] In re San Jose Baking Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 200, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635.

[131] In re Rosenfields, 11 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 12,061.

[132] In re Sargent, 13 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 12,361.

[133] In re Coburn, 126 Fed. 218, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 212.

[134] Moulton v. Coburn, 131 Fed. 201, 66 C. C. A. 90, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

[135] Cummins Grocer Co. v. Talley, 187 Fed. 507, 109 C. C. A. 273, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484. See In re J. W. Lavery & Son (D. C.) 235 Fed. 910, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 606.

§ 159. Petition in Bankruptcy; Formal Requisites.—Whether a proceeding in bankruptcy is voluntary or involuntary, it is initiated by a petition to the proper court. "Petition" is defined by the statute as "a paper filed in a court of bankruptcy, or with a clerk or deputy clerk, by a debtor praying for the benefits of this act, or by creditors alleging the commission of an act of bankruptcy by a debtor therein named,"[136] though a petition necessarily contains much more than is here specified, as, for instance, the prayer for an adjudication. The General Orders in bankruptcy direct that "all petitions and the schedules filed therewith shall be printed or written out plainly, without abbreviation or interlineation, except where such abbreviation and interlineation may be for the purpose of reference."[137] And some of the courts of bankruptcy have adopted a rule that petitions in bankruptcy will not be placed on file nor considered unless made out on the prescribed printed forms, written or typewritten petitions being returned to the parties without action.[138] Models for the various kinds of petitions, voluntary and involuntary, will be found among the official forms printed in the appendix to this book. The Supreme Court has directed that, as to the use of the official forms, "the several forms annexed to these general orders shall be observed and used, with such alterations as may be necessary to suit the circumstances of any particular case."[139] These forms are simple in character and not difficult to follow, and little comment on them is necessary. It should be observed, however, that the petition is not addressed to the court by title alone, but to the judge by name with the addition of the designation of the court. It was held, under the former statute, that the petition must give the judge's name correctly, and

[136] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, clause 20.

[137] General Order No. 5. This subject was considered in the case of In re Malcom, 4 Law Rep. 488, Fed. Cas. No. 8,986, where it was observed by Judge Betts that the petition should be free from erasures and interlineations, and the name of the petitioner signed in full. If wanting in conformity to these rules, the papers would be sent back. But it was not contemplated by the rules to destroy the merits of an application, unless the sense of the paper was ruined by such erasures and interlineations, or if the papers were grossly imperfect. It was intended to have the papers neatly made out, so they could readily be read over. Minor interlineations in the body of the petition would not vitiate it when they did not obscure the sense of the document, but rather rendered it more definite. In this case the petitioner first wrote his name in the abbreviated form "Robt." and this was then erased and the name written in full. This, it was held, was no sufficient reason for rejecting the petition. But in an anonymous case reported in 15 Pittsb. Leg. J. 81, 1 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 471, permission to file a petition in bankruptcy was refused on account of the illegible manner in which it was written.

[138] Mahoney v. Ward, 100 Fed. 278, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770.

[139] General Order No. 38. A petition in bankruptcy filed before the promulgation of the official forms by the Supreme Court should not be dismissed for want of conformity thereto, but the court will order a new petition, in the form prescribed, to be filed nunc pro tunc, the that if the name as given is not correct, it cannot be stricken out as surplusage, and the petition cannot be filed.[140] A creditor's petition should ordinarily contain no more than the official form contemplates. But it has been held that such a petition, being in fact an original petition, is not deprived of its character as such merely because it contains a prayer by the petitioner to intervene in earlier proceedings, as a cautionary measure, in order that he might not be unrepresented in such earlier proceedings.[141] It may also be noted that the court will consider a petition in bankruptcy as the joint act of all the petitioners, and wilfull falsehood in one petitioner's verification will cause the summary dismissal of the petition as the fraud of all, and no copetitioner's prayer for an amendment will be heard.[142]

As to partnership cases, official form No. 2 covers the case of a voluntary petition by partners, but as no form has been prescribed for involuntary proceedings against a firm, form No. 3, the general form of a creditors' petition, should be used for that purpose, with such adaptations as will meet the exigencies of the particular case.[143] Where a voluntary petition by partners prays that "the petitioners" may be adjudged bankrupt, instead of "the said firm," but otherwise follows the official form, the variance is not material.[144] And proceedings to adjudge a partnership bankrupt, after its dissolution by the death of one of the partners, are not invalidated by the fact that the petition did not refer to the deceased partner, nor disclose that the partners named were surviving partners, when the business was being continued as provided in the partnership articles.[145] But subject to some such exceptions as this, it is a general rule that the petition, whether by or against the firm, should set out the individual names of all the partners,[146] and this rule applies where one member of a firm files his own petition in bankruptcy, original petition, however, not to be withdrawn from the files. In re Ogles, 93 Fed. 426, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

[140] Anonymous, 3 N. B. R. 128, Fed. Cas. No. 459. A bankruptcy petition must be addressed to the court which is authorized by law to take cognizance of the case, as determined by the residence of the bankrupt. In re Mitchell, 219 Fed. 690, 135 C. C. A. 362, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[141] In re Haff, 136 Fed. 78, 68 C. C. A. 646, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362.

[142] In re Keller, 18 N. B. R. 10, Fed. Cas. No. 7,647.

[143] Mather v. Coe, 92 Fed. 333, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504. And see In re Farley, 115 Fed. 359, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; In re Gay, 98 Fed. 870, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Russell, 97 Fed. 32, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. A petition filed against a partnership by one partner alone must conform to the requirements of an involuntary petition and must allege insolvency and an act of bankruptcy by the firm. In re Ollinger & Perry (D. C.) 274 Fed. 970.

[144] In re Meyers, 97 Fed. 757, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260.

[145] In re Coe, 157 Fed. 308, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 618. And see Hawkins v. Quinette, 156 Mo. App. 153, 136 S. W. 246.

[146] Adams v. May, 27 Fed. 907.

but with the object of obtaining a discharge from the debts of the partnership as well as from his individual liabilities.[147]

§ 160. Same; Allegations.—To sustain a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, it must affirmatively show that it is brought by the requisite number of creditors. If three petitioners unite in it, the statute is satisfied and no allegation as to the whole number of the bankrupt's creditors is necessary. But if it be brought by one or two creditors only, it must allege that the whole number of such creditors is less than twelve. But since a fact of this kind is usually very difficult to ascertain, until after the bankrupt himself shall have filed a list of his creditors, it is held that this allegation need not be made in terms of such positiveness that the petitioning creditor could be prosecuted for perjury if it should prove to be incorrect; in other words, the allegation may be made upon information and belief.[148] It is also necessary that the petitioning creditors, whether one or three, should have provable claims amounting in the aggregate, in excess of securities held by them, to $500. The official form for a creditors' petition contains an allegation to this effect, and it should be followed, though it is held that the want of such an averment may be cured by amendment.[149] The petition must also set forth the nature and amount of the petitioning creditors' claims severally. An allegation that the proposed bankrupt owes a debt, but not that it is due to a petitioning creditor, is insufficient.[150] As to the degree of particularity required in describing the claims, it is held that they should be so far explained in the petition that the court may see, on the face of it, that they are provable claims.[151] But the provision 147 In re Laughlin, 96 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

148 In re Scammon, 10 N. B. R. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 12,430; In re Joliet Iron & Steel Co., 10 N. B. R. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 7,436; In re Scammon, 6 Biss. 195, 11 N. B. R. 280, Fed. Cas. No. 12,429; In re Mann, 13 Blatchf. 401, 14 N. B. R. 572, Fed. Cas. No. 9,033; Perin & Gaff Mfg. Co. v. Peale, 17 N. B. R. 377, Fed. Cas. No. 10,981; In re Roberts, 71 Me. 390.

149 In re Pangborn, 185 Fed. 673, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; Roche v. Fox, 16 N. B. R. 461, Fed. Cas. No. 11,974; Ex parte Shouse, Crabbe, 482, Fed. Cas. No. 12,815. In a case of voluntary bankruptcy, an allegation in the petition that the bankrupt owes debts establishes prima facie the existence of provable debts against him. In re Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 155, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142.

150 In re Western Savings & Trust Co., 4 Sawy. 190, 17 N. B. R. 413, Fed. Cas. No. 17,442.

151 In re Hadley, 12 N. B. R. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 5,894; In re Harmon, Fed. Cas. No. 6,078; In re White (D. C.) 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241; In re Farthing (D. C.) 202 Fed. 557, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732. The sufficiency of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, in respect to the description of the petitioner's claim, must be tested by the rules which would govern a declaration or a bill in equity in an action or suit to enforce such claims. Doty v. Mason (D. C.) 244 Fed. 587, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy which sets out contracts between petitioners and the bankrupt, and alleges tender of performance by petitioners and refusal by the bankrupt, sufficiently establishes the status of the petitioners as creditors. In re H. A. Shaver Co. (D. C.) 265 Fed. 426, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540.

of the fifty-seventh section of the act, requiring the consideration of a claim to be set forth and sworn to, relates to the proof of the claim and not to the averments of the petition.[152] This description of the several debts need not state whether they are secured or unsecured,[153] and an allegation that the indebtedness of the respondent to one of the petitioners was fraudulently contracted is impertinent, and should be stricken out on motion.[154] Where it is alleged that the claim is due, but the proof shows that it is owing but not yet due, the variance is not fatal, as the allegation was unnecessary.[155] As an example of the measure of particularity required, it may be remarked that the courts have approved as sufficient an allegation that the petitioning creditor was the owner of a promissory note, dated on such a date, made by the alleged bankrupt, payable to the order of the said creditor in three months after its date at a specified bank.[156] So of an allegation that the claim of the creditor is for goods sold and delivered, and that the bankrupt purchased the same within a year from the date of the petition.[157] But a debt sufficient to sustain the petition is not shown where the petitioner merely counts upon a judgment from which an appeal has been taken and is pending, with nothing to show the nature of his original claim, or that he would still have a provable debt if the judgment should be reversed.[158] And the petition is demurrable if it shows on its face that the claim of the petitioning creditor is barred by the statute of limitations.[159]

The petition must also contain a proper averment as to the occupation of the defendant. The statute does not subject all natural persons to its operation, but excepts such as are wage-earners and also persons engaged chiefly in farming or the tillage of the soil. So, as to corporations, it excepts municipal, railroad, insurance, and banking corporations. Now it is a well-known rule of pleading that, in proceeding on a [152] In re Brett (D. C.) 130 Fed. 981, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

[153] In re Harmon, Fed. Cas. No. 6,078. An allegation in a petition by creditors that certain of them are secured by maritime liens on vessels, but that the liens are of no value, is sufficient on demurrer to show such petitioners qualified under the Bankruptcy Act. In re Triangle S. S. Co. (D. C.) 267 Fed. 300, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109.

[154] In re Ewing, 115 Fed. 707, 53 C. C. A. 289, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269.

[155] Linn v. Smith, 4 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 8,375.

[156] In re Brett, 130 Fed. 981, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492. In a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, the claim of one of the petitioners was held sufficiently pleaded by alleging that it was for money had and received by the bankrupt on account of a protested check, representing the indebtedness, issued by the bankrupt to the creditor, a copy of which was attached. Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 826, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573.

[157] In re Hark, 135 Fed. 604, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400.

[158] In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950.

[159] In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950.

statute, the pleader must negative an exception contained in the enacting clause. Therefore a petition in involuntary bankruptcy must affirmatively show that the respondent is not within the excepted classes; and this may be done either by words of express negation or by such an allegation as to the nature of his (or its) business as will show plainly that the respondent is not exempt from the operation of the statute.[160] The want of such an averment will be ground of demurrer.[161] But it is generally held that this allegation is not jurisdictional,[162] but the want of it may be cured by amendment,[163] and that, if the parties go to trial on a petition which is defective in this respect, without objection seasonably taken, and an adjudication is made, the defect is cured by the decree, and will not constitute ground for setting aside the adjudication or impeaching it collaterally.[164]

To show jurisdiction, it is further necessary for the petition to show where the debtor has resided for the greater portion of the preceding six months, naming the town, county, and state, and averring that the place mentioned is within the federal district where the petition is filed.[165] Or if jurisdiction is claimed on the ground that he has had his principal place of business within the district, it should be so stated. Care should be taken not to confuse these terms. An allegation as to [160] Armstrong v. Fernandez, 208 U. S. 324, 28 Sup. Ct. 419, 52 L. Ed. 514, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Conway v. German, 166 Fed. 67, 91 C. C. A. 653, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; Edelstein v. United States, 149 Fed. 636, 79 C. C. A. 328, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Taylor, 102 Fed. 728, 42 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; In re Marion Contract & Const. Co., 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Rutland Realty Co., 157 Fed. 296, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546; Rise v. Bordner, 140 Fed. 566, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 297; In re Mero, 128 Fed. 630, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re Callison, 130 Fed. 987, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344; In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; In re Brett, 130 Fed. 981, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492; In re White, 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241; Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223 Fed. 501, 139 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179. McAfee v. Arnold & Mathis, 155 Ala. 561, 46 South. 870.

[161] Edelstein v. United States, 149 Fed. 636, 79 C. C. A. 328, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Taylor, 102 Fed. 728, 42 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[162] In re Broadway Savings Trust Co., 152 Fed. 152, 81 C. C. A. 58, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; Conway v. German, 166 Fed. 67, 91 C. C. A. 653, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Marion Contract & Const. Co., 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81. But compare In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; In re Imperial Film Exchange, 198 Fed. 80, 117 C. C. A. 188, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[163] Armstrong v. Fernandez, 208 U. S. 324, 28 Sup. Ct. 419, 52 L. Ed. 514, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Conway v. German, 166 Fed. 67, 91 C. C. A. 653, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Marion Contract & Const. Co., 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; In re White, 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241.

[164] In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Stern, 116 Fed. 604, 54 C. C. A. 60, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

[165] See Official Form No. 3. A petition in involuntary proceedings must affirmatively and distinctly show the essential the debtor's "principal place of residence" does not satisfy the statute, although such a defect may be considered as immaterial when the court has taken jurisdiction and granted a discharge.[166] But a petition which states disjunctively that the respondent has had his principal place of business, or has resided, or has had his domicile, within the district, is insufficient upon its face to confer jurisdiction.[167] And in a case of voluntary bankruptcy of a partnership, it has been held that, where the allegation of residence within the district as a ground of jurisdiction is false as to one of the petitioning partners, the court will have no jurisdiction as to any of them.[168] The allegation that the respondent in an involuntary petition owes debts to the amount of $1,000, or over is also indispensable, and its omission leaves the court without jurisdiction.[169]

Coming now to the allegations of acts of bankruptcy, it is first of all necessary to allege the insolvency of the respondent in all instances where insolvency is an essential element of the act of bankruptcy charged and relied on,[170] and in partnership cases it is not enough to allege that the firm is insolvent, but there must also be an averment as to the solvency or insolvency of each of the partners.[171] The petitioning creditors are not restricted to the allegation of a single act of bankruptcy, but they may include in their petition as many separate acts as they have knowledge of, provided they were all committed within the four months.[172] This last item is highly important. If the petition facts necessary to give the bankruptcy court jurisdiction. In re McGraw (D. C.) 254 Fed. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38.

[166] Ross-Lewin v. Goold, 113 Ill. App. 499, judgment affirmed 211 Ill. 384, 71 N. E. 1028.

[167] In re Laskaris, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 209.

[168] In re Beals, 9 Ben. 223, 17 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 1,165.

[169] C. C. Taft Co. v. Century Sav. Bank, 141 Fed. 369, 72 C. C. A. 671, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[170] In re Lachenmaier, 202 Fed. 32, 121 C. C. A. 368; In re Hammond (D. C.) 163 Fed. 548, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776; In re Dodge, Fed. Cas. No. 3,946a. A petition for adjudication of one as a bankrupt on the ground of his having made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors need not allege his insolvency. Moody-Hormann-Boelhauwe v. Clinton Wire Cloth Co., 246 Fed. 653, 158 C. C. A. 609, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy, alleging that the debtor is insolvent, without more, is insufficient, because pleading a conclusion. In re Connecticut Brass & Mfg. Corporation (D. C.) 257 Fed. 445, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376.

[171] In re Blair, 99 Fed. 76, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588. And see supra, § 114. Compare In re Everyhody's Grocery & Meat Market (D. C.) 173 Fed. 492, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 925. A petition against a partnership may be sufficient, where it is answered without objection, though it does not distinctly allege that the partners individually are insolvent. Houghton Wool Co. v. Morris, 249 Fed. 434, 161 C. C. A. 408, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271. But in a bankruptcy proceeding against a firm, a creditor's petition against an alleged secret partner, seeking to compel him to file schedules of assets and liabilities, but not alleging him to be insolvent, is not sustainable. In re Samuels, 215 Fed. 845, 132 C. C. A. 187.

[172] Bradley Timber Co. v. White, 121 Fed. 779, 58 C. C. A. 55, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Nusbaum, 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

does not show that the act of bankruptcy charged was committed within the time limited by the statute, it is an absolutely fatal defect.[173] And in setting out the act charged, there must be a particular statement of the facts and details, as particular as the nature of the transaction and the petitioners' means of knowledge will permit. To state an act of bankruptcy in the mere words of the statute is not enough. There must be such certainty and particularity as to time, place, persons concerned, and other details as will definitely inform the debtor of the charge which he is expected to controvert or explain.[174] But since the tortuous ways of an embarrassed debtor are often shrouded in mystery, it is naturally impossible for petitioning creditors, in all cases, to have exact and certain knowledge of all the details of a transaction alleged as fraudulent or preferential. In this situation, therefore, they are not held to any greater degree of particularity than their means of knowledge will warrant. They may make their allegation on information and belief, but they must show that they have used due diligence in the endeavor to ascertain the details, and that they have something more than mere rumor, vague hearsay, or suspicion to go on, and their allegation of the commission of an act of bankruptcy should be supplemented, in such cases, by an explanation of its lack of completeness.[175]

[173] Gross v. Potter, 15 Gray (Mass.) 556; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912; Bradley Timber Co. v. White, 121 Fed. 779, 58 C. C. A. 55, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329; In re Mason-Seaman Transp. Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 974, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

[174] In re Pressed Steel Wagon Goods Co., 193 Fed. 811, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44; In re Cliffe, 94 Fed. 354, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Hark, 135 Fed. 604, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400; In re Randall, Deady, 557, 3 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 11,551; In re Nelson, 98 Fed. 76, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; Clark v. Henne & Meyer, 127 Fed. 288, 62 C. C. A. 172, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583; In re Deer Creek Water & Water Power Co., 205 Fed. 205, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356; In re Stone, 206 Fed. 356, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; In re Sig H. Rosenblatt & Co., 193 Fed. 638, 113 C. C. A. 506, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401; In re Hallin, 199 Fed. 806, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 708; In re McGraw (D. C.) 254 Fed. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; In re D. F. Herlehy Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 369, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re Condon, 209 Fed. 800, 126 C. C. A. 524, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; In re Louisell Lumber Co., 209 Fed. 784, 126 C. C. A. 508, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356.

[175] In re Blumberg, 133 Fed. 845, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912. A person proceeded against under an insolvency law "is entitled to as specific a statement of the acts by which it is asserted he has exposed himself to the summary proceedings and severe consequences of the insolvency law, as their nature will reasonably admit of. * * * It is not meant by these observations that the allegations must be made with great minuteness of detail, or that the petitioner must establish every circumstance embraced in his averment. This would be too stringent a requirement, and would often defeat the remedial purposes of the statute. A debtor seeking to fraudulently conceal or dispose of his property resorts to secrecy and artifice in effecting his purpose, and it would be difficult to trace all the steps or discover all the facts attending the perpetration of his fraud. But the allegations should be sufficiently pointed to describe with substantial identification the material facts which justify the characterization

Applying these principles to particular acts of bankruptcy, and considering first the giving of a preference, it is absolutely necessary to aver that the transfer of property was made with the intent to prefer the particular creditor, as this is an essential element of this act of bankruptcy.[176] Further the name of the preferred creditor must be alleged if known to the petitioners.[177] An averment that the respondent paid money to one or more creditors with intent to prefer them is insufficient.[178] But if the petitioners do not know the name of the creditor preferred, the petition is good although it may only aver in general terms that the payment was made, adding a specific reason why a more particular allegation is not possible.[179] The exact date of the preference should also be given if known, though a petition which only shows that it was within four months may perhaps be sustained as against a demurrer.[180] The property transferred, if other than money, should also be particularly described, though it has been held that an insufficient description of it, if not objected to by demurrer, may be cured by the evidence.[181] of the act complained of as an act of insolvency, in order that the defendant, the court, and the jury may be informed, in substance, of the subject-matter of the accusation and inquiry." Schiff v. Solomon, 57 Md. 572. The statements made in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy in accordance with the form prescribed by the rules in bankruptcy, in which the petitioners "represent" certain facts to be true, are of matters which must necessarily be alleged on hearsay, and do not purport to be of facts to which the petitioners make oath as personal witnesses, and hence the statement in the petition that it is made on information and belief does not add to nor detract from the strength of the allegations made, nor is a statement in the verification, that affiants believe the matters so alleged on information and belief to be true, ground for dismissing the petition, although improper in form. In re Ball, 156 Fed. 682, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy may be sufficient although it does not set forth the evidence relied on to establish the facts. Graham Mfg. Co. v. Davy-Pocahontas Coal Co., 238 Fed. 488, 151 C. C. A. 424, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

[176] In re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824; In re Hammond, 163 Fed. 548, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776; In re Ewing, 115 Fed. 707, 53 C. C. A. 289, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 269; In re Musgrove Mining Co. (D. C.) 234 Fed. 99, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628.

[177] In re Hadley, 12 N. B. R. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 5,894. Where a petition averred that the debtor, while insolvent, transferred and delivered a large number of good and collectible notes, of the value of over $5,000, to C. & Co. with intent to prefer them over other creditors, it was not objectionable for failure to charge that C. & Co. were creditors of the bankrupt. In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118. As to omitting name of preferred creditor when it cannot be discovered from the books or papers of the bankrupt, see In re Standard Aero Corp. of New York (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 779, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

[178] In re Pure Milk Co., 154 Fed. 682, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735; In re Triangle S. S. Co. (D. C.) 267 Fed. 300, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109.

[179] In re Lackow, 140 Fed. 573, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514.

[180] In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[181] First State Bank v. Haswell, 174 Fed. 209, 98 C. C. A. 217, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330.

The rules are similar where the act of bankruptcy charged is a fraudulent transfer or concealment of property. The intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors must be specifically charged, as the act of bankruptcy is not complete without this,[182] or facts and circumstances must be pleaded from which such an intent may properly be inferred.[183] An allegation of a transfer of property for an "improper consideration" is not sufficient.[184] And so, a charge that claims due to the bankrupt were assigned without consideration, that suits thereon have been commenced by the assignee, and that the assignments were made to hinder and defraud creditors, does not sufficiently allege an act of bankruptcy, because it does not exclude a theory that the assignments were made merely for purposes of collection.[185] And generally the petition should state the particulars of any transfer alleged, describing the property transferred and when and to whom the transfer was made.[186] But if the petitioners cannot obtain exact knowledge of the details, it is enough if their allegation is as specific as they can make it.[187] Thus, in a case of removal and concealment of property, they may state that they have been unable to ascertain to what place the goods have been removed.[188] And where the evidence of a fraudulent concealment of assets is wholly circumstantial, it is unnecessary to set out the precise details.[189] Thus, a charge that the respondent, at a certain time, received a specific sum of money, and that he has ever since concealed it, with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud his creditors, is not defective for failing to set forth the manner and details of the concealment.[190]

[182] In re Tupper, 163 Fed. 766, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 824. In re Heleker Bros. Mercantile Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 963, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 503. And the petition is insufficient if it fails to show that the debts of petitioners were in existence at the time of the commission of an alleged act of bankruptcy by the transfer and concealment of property with intent to defraud creditors. In re Stone (D. C.) 206 Fed. 356, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392.

[183] In re White, 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241.

[184] In re Blumberg, 133 Fed. 845, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 343.

[185] In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950.

[186] Conway v. German, 166 Fed. 67, 91 C. C. A. 653, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Rosenblatt (C. C. A.) 193 Fed. 638, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401. An act of bankruptcy by the fraudulent transfer of assets is sufficiently charged by a petition which alleges that, within four months before the filing of the petition, the bankrupt corporation permitted the two persons who were its only stockholders to appropriate portions of its property to their individual use. In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950. So an averment in an involuntary petition that the defendant, who was a merchant, committed an act of bankruptcy by conveying a part of his property, consisting of real estate described, to a person named, with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud his creditors, is sufficient. In re White, 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241.

[187] In re Mero, 128 Fed. 630, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[188] In re Hark, 135 Fed. 604, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 400.

[189] In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. 310.

[190] In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310.

As to suffering a preference through legal proceedings, it is not sufficient to allege that the bankrupt suffered the recovery of a judgment against him and had not "at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference vacated or discharged the same" (in the words of the statute) without alleging the issuance of an execution on the judgment, or the levying thereof on any property of the debtor, and making no allegation of the date of any proposed sale.[191] Nor is it enough to allege that attachments have been issued and levied, which "have not to the present time been vacated," [192] or merely that executions have been levied on the bankrupt's property without stating the further history of the executions.[193] Where the ground of the petition is the appointment of a receiver for the insolvent defendant on the ground of insolvency, it should allege the fact of the appointment, and show that it was made by a court of competent jurisdiction, and that the reason for the appointment was insolvency.[194]

§ 161. Same; Multifarious and Misjoined Matter.—It is improper to incorporate in a creditors' petition for an adjudication in bankruptcy allegations charging other creditors with having received voidable preferences, or a request for a warrant directing the marshal to seize and hold the debtor's property pending an adjudication, or a prayer for the seizure of property of the alleged bankrupt in the hands of adverse claimants, or for an injunction forbidding a third person having property of the respondent in his possession (such as a receiver appointed by a state court) to dispose of the same. All these are matters which can only be litigated in a separate proceeding. And hence such allegations and prayers are multifarious and will be stricken out, or treated as having been stricken.[195]

§ 162. Signature and Verification of Petition.—The provision of the statute (section 18c) that "all pleadings setting up matters of fact shall [191] In re Pressed Steel Wagon Goods Co., 193 Fed. 811, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 44. See In re Truitt, 203 Fed. 550, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570; In re Fineman (D. C.) 223 Fed. 652, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

[192] Seaboard Steel Casting Co. v. William R. Trigg Co., 124 Fed. 75, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[193] In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[194] In re Kennedy Tailoring Co., 175 Fed. 871, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656; Exploration Mercantile Co. v. Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 825, 101 C. C. A. 39, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 216; Doyle-Kidd Dry Goods Co. v. Sadler-Lusk Trading Co., 206 Fed. 813, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; In re Maplecroft Mills (D. C.) 218 Fed. 659, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; In re Valentine Bohl Co., 224 Fed. 685, 140 C. C. A. 225, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 855.

[195] Mather v. Coe, 92 Fed. 333, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Ogles, 93 Fed. 426, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; In re Kelly, 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Hadley, 12 N. B. R. 366, Fed. Cas.

be verified under oath" is applicable to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, which must be signed and verified in duplicate by the petitioning creditors,[196] and not by one for all, but by each separately.[197] The verification may be made before any of the officers whom the bankruptcy act enumerates as authorized to administer oaths required by the act to be taken. These are referees in bankruptcy, officers authorized to administer oaths in proceedings before the courts of the United States, or under the laws of the state where the same are to be taken, and diplomatic and consular officers of the United States in any foreign country.[198] It is not a fatal defect that the notary public who took the verification was the bankrupt's own attorney,[199] and the date of the jurat is not an essential part of the verification.[200] It is important to be noted that any mere irregularity or defect in the verification of the petition will not defeat the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy. Jurisdiction attaches upon the filing of the petition, and if the verification is insufficient or defective, the court may allow it to be amended, or, if it is not seasonably objected to it will be cured by an adjudication. "An order of adjudication is a judgment, and is as effective as any other judgment to cure irregularities in practice which do not touch the jurisdiction of the court." [201] Further, an objection to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, on the ground of informality

No. 5,894; Creditors v. Cozzens, 3 N. B. R. 281, Fed. Cas. No. 3,378; In re Kintzing, 3 N. B. R. 217, Fed. Cas. No. 7,833.

[196] In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310. The verification of a petition must name the persons who swear to it. Although a creditor may have signed his name to the petition, or to the verification, it is not sufficiently verified as to him unless his name is recited as being one of the persons who appeared and made the verification. In re Rosenfields, 11 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 12,061.

[197] In re Simmons, 10 N. B. R, 253, Fed. Cas. No. 12,864. But see Green River Deposit Bank v. Craig, 110 Fed. 137, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381, holding that a petition in bankruptcy is not subject to a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction because of a failure of one of the petitioners to verify it.

[198] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 20. As to the authority of clerks and deputy clerks of the United States courts to take the verification to a petition in bankruptcy, see Schermerhorn v. Talman, 14 N. Y. 93, 134; United States v. Nihols, 4 McLean, 23, Fed. Cas. No. 15,880. A petition in bankruptcy may properly be verified before a commissioner of deeds. In re Morse (D. C.) 210 Fed. 900, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 207.

[199] In re Kindt, 98 Fed. 403, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; In re Mauer, 5 Sawy. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 9,304.

[200] In re Houghton, 4 Law Rep. 482, Fed. Cas. No. 6,727.

[201] Green River Deposit Bank v. Craig, 110 Fed. 137, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 381; In re Simmons, 10 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 12,864; In re Donnelly, 5 Fed. 783; In re Getchell, 8 Ben. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 5,371. Verification of the petition on information and belief is insufficient, but the defect is not jurisdictional, and may be cured by amendment. In re Farthing, 202 Fed. 557, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732. And see Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223 Fed. 501, 139 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179; Lackawanna Leather Co. v. La Porte Carriage Co., 211 Fed. 318, 127 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658.

or insufficiency in its verification, is waived by the tender of a plea and answer on the merits and the respondent cannot afterwards have the proceedings dismissed on account of such defect.[202]

It is not essential that the creditor in person should sign and verify the petition; it may be done for him by an attorney at law retained to represent him in the proceedings, provided that the attorney has personal knowledge of the facts directly alleged in the petition,[203] and provided he states some good and sufficient reason why the creditor does not appear in person to sign and verify, as, that he is a non-resident or is absent from the district.[204] And no other evidence of the attorney's authority to act for his client in this particular need appear than the fact that he has been admitted to practice in the federal courts.[205] For [202] Simonson v. Sinsheimer, 95 Fed. 948, 37 C. C. A. 337; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95 Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383; In re Simonson, 92 Fed. 904, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197; In re Herzikopf, 118 Fed. 101, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; In re Chequasset Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 56, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87; In re McNaughton, 8 N. B. R. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 8,912; Ex parte Jewett, 2 Low. 393, 11 N. B. R. 443, Fed. Cas. No. 7,303.

[203] In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118; In re Hunt, 118 Fed. 282, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; In re Herzikopf, 118 Fed. 101, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90; In re Raynor, 11 Blatchf. 43, 7 N. B. R. 527, Fed. Cas. No. 11,597. It must be admitted that this question has been much debated and is not entirely free from doubt. In a few cases under the act of 1867, it was held that the petitioning creditors must sign and verify the petition in person and that it could not be done for them by an agent or attorney. See In re Butterfield, 6 N. B. R. 257; Hunt v. Pooke, 5 N. B. R. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 6,896. And some intimations of a similar doctrine were given in early cases under the present act. See In re Nelson, 98 Fed. 76, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Simonson, 92 Fed. 904, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197. So far as the act of 1867 bore on this question, the only provision was that a person might be adjudged bankrupt "on the petition of one or more of his creditors," and it was held (In re Raynor, supra) that there was no necessity for construing this so strictly as to exclude a petition filed for a creditor by his duly authorized attorney or agent. The act of 1898 is not more specific. It requires all pleadings setting up matters of fact to be verified, but does not state that the verification may not be by an agent. It provides that a petition may be filed by "three or more creditors who have provable claims," but also declares that the word "creditor" may "include his duly authorized agent, attorney, or proxy." Sec. 1, clause 9. As for the official forms, that prescribed under the act of 1867, like that now in force, marked the place for signing by blank lines, with the word "petitioner" appended as descriptive of the signer. But the courts held that the blanks might be filled by the words "A. B., attorney (or agent) for the petitioner," or with the name of the petitioner "by A. B., his agent or attorney," and that no violence would be done to any form or to any prescription in the law or the rules. Moreover as finally disposing of any argument founded on the rules, it was pointed out that the general orders prescribed that the forms should be "observed and used with such alterations as may be necessary to suit the circumstances of any particular case;" and we now have the same language repeated in General Order No. 38.

[204] Rogers v. De Soto Placer Min. Co., 136 Fed. 407, 69 C. C. A. 251, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252; In re Hadley, 12 N. B. R. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 5,894.

[205] In re Herzikopf, 118 Fed. 101, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 90. Compare In re Sargent, 13 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 12,361. The fact that the attorney for a voluntary bankrupt, who signed the similar reasons, the petition may be signed and verified on behalf of a creditor by an attorney in fact or an accredited agent,[206] but in this case, proof of his agency or of express authority to do the particular act is necessary,[207] though if the petition is defective for failing to show such authority, it may be amended,[208] or supplementary proof may be received nunc pro tunc in the discretion of the court to establish the authority of the agent.[209] Where a partnership is one of the petitioning creditors, the signing and verifying may be done for the firm by one of its members.[210] And in the case of a corporation, its name may be signed and the petition verified for it by its attorney, by an agent, or by one of its officers duly authorized to act for it in this particular.[211] But this authority must be special. Neither the president nor "any officer of a corporation has authority, by virtue of his office, to sign and verify a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against a debtor of the corporation, unless specially authorized by some statute, by-law, or resolution of its board of directors. Such authority, being special, must in all cases be made to appear by the oath of the person signing and verifying the petition or other competent evidence."[212] The same rule applies, and with even greater force, to the case of a voluntary petition by a corporation. It is held that the president of a company has no inherent power to take the necessary steps to have the corporation adjudged bankrupt, and hence a voluntary petition filed on behalf of the corporation, and signed and verified by the president, but which fails to show that any action had been taken by the board of directors authorizing the filing of the petition, or empowering the president to execute the petition in the name of the corporation, is insufficient to confer jurisdiction on the court of bankruptcy.[213] petition as such attorney, had not at that time been admitted to practice in the district court where the proceedings are brought, is not a ground for dismissing the petition, but for an order on notice to the bankrupt and the attorney, that the latter will no longer be recognized as attorney in the case. In re O'Halloran, 8 Ben. 128, Fed. Cas. No. 10,463.

[206] Wald v. Wehl, 18 Blatchf. 495, 6 Fed. 163; In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315.

[207] In re Rosenfields, 11 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 12,061.

[208] In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315.

[209] In re Rosenfields, 11 N. B. R. 86, Fed. Cas. No. 12,061.

[210] Walker v. Woodside, 164 Fed. 680, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

[211] In re Chequasset Lumber Co., 112 Fed. 56, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87; Walker v. Woodside, 164 Fed. 680, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; Merriam v. Sewall, 8 Gray (Mass.) 316.

[212] In re McNaughton, 8 N. B. R. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 8,912; Roche v. Fox, 16 N. B. R. 461, Fed. Cas. No. 11,974. But see In re Summers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 266.

[213] In re Jefferson Casket Co., 182 Fed. 689, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 663.

§ 163. Amendment of Petition.—It is provided by the General Orders in bankruptcy (No. 11) that "the court may allow amendments to the petition and schedules on application of the petitioner. In the application for leave to amend, the petitioner shall state the cause of the error in the paper originally filed." Upon this it is to be remarked, in the first place, that the "court" may here include the referee, and that officer has jurisdiction and discretion to order amendments to be made in the petition and schedules of a voluntary bankrupt referred to him, in particulars as to which he finds them defective or insufficient.[214] Secondly, though the order only specifies the petition and schedules, yet formal amendments to an answer filed by a creditor to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy may be allowed at any time before adjudication.[215] Third, the application for leave to amend is fatally defective if it does not state the reason of the error or defect sought to be amended, but the applicant may be granted time to supply this omission.[216] But this provision of the General Orders does not abrogate or restrict the general power of amendment in other respects vested in the courts of bankruptcy.[217] The privilege of amending a petition in bankruptcy in effect rests in the sound judicial discretion of the court, which will not be interfered with on review unless an abuse of discretion is shown.[218] And it is perfectly proper for the court to refuse to allow an amendment as to jurisdictional facts or one going to the very foundation of the proceeding.[219] It may also be observed that a creditor who has joined in the petition cannot object to an amendment thereof which is necessary to the prosecution of the same to final effect.[220]

Amendments to a petition relate back to the time of the filing of the original petition, and have the same force and effect as if included in the petition itself.[221] For this reason, where a petition, sufficient in form to give the court jurisdiction, is filed within four months after [214] In re Brumelkamp, 95 Fed. 814, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 318.

[215] In re Harris, 155 Fed. 216, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204.

[216] In re Portner, 149 Fed. 799, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89.

[217] In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; In re Hill, 5 Law Rep. 326, Fed. Cas. No. 6,485.

[218] In re Rosenblatt (C. C. A.) 193 Fed. 638, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401; Armstrong v. Fernandez, 208 U. S. 324, 28 Sup. Ct. 419, 52 L. Ed. 514, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Woolford v. Diamond State Steel Co., 138 Fed. 582, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223 Fed. 501, 139 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179; Morrison v. Rieman, 249 Fed. 97, 161 C. C. A. 149, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[219] In re Wood, 6 Ben. 339, 13 N. B. R. 96, Fed. Cas. No. 17,935; In re Craft, 6 Blatchf. 177, 2 N. B. R. 111, Fed. Cas. No. 3,317; In re Farthing, 202 Fed. 557, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732.

[220] In re Sargent, 13 N. B. R. 144, Fed. Cas. No. 12,361.

[221] Millan v. Exchange Bank, 183 Fed. 753, 106 C. C. A. 327, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep.

the commission of the act of bankruptcy alleged, it is no sufficient objection to the allowance of an amendment that the four months have more than elapsed at the time the amendment is applied for.[222] The rule is otherwise, however, where the petition, as originally filed, was fatally defective. In this case, the date of the amendment must be taken as the date from which the limitation of four months begins to run.[223] And if the petition was fatally defective in failing to allege any act of bankruptcy, an amendment curing the defect, but not filed until more than four months after the attaching of a lien, will not take effect by relation as of the date of the original for the purpose of setting aside the lien.[224] For other purposes, that is, with reference to the course of the proceedings, it is held that amendments may be made in bankruptcy proceedings at any stage of the case, regardless of the time that has elapsed,[225] although here, as in other matters, the law contemplates a continuous prosecution of the proceedings and a speedy termination; and where the petitioning creditors have delayed for nearly a year, without sufficient excuse, to correct an averment in their petition as to the residence of the debtor, their application to amend should be refused.[226] If otherwise meritorious, the amendment may be allowed after the sustaining of a demurrer to the petition,[227] and indeed, the petition will not ordinarily be dismissed after a successful demurrer, without giving the petitioners opportunity to apply for leave to amend.[228] And amendments may even be made after adjudication, as, on the trial of the issue before a jury, when the court has power to permit amendments to be made to cover the case shown by the evidence.[229]

889; Ryan v. Hendricks, 166 Fed. 94, 92 C. C. A. 78, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570; Sherman v. International Bank, 8 Biss. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 12,765.

222 In re Shoesmith, 135 Fed. 684, 68 C. C. A. 322, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645; International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 403, 25 L. Ed. 866; Hark v. C. M. Allen Co., 146 Fed. 665, 77 C. C. A. 91, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3.

223 In re Condon, 209 Fed. 800, 126 C. C. A. 524, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; In re Triangle S. S. Co. (D. C.) 267 Fed. 303, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458.

224 In re Louisell Lumber Co., 209 Fed. 784, 126 C. C. A. 508, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 356.

225 In re Mercur, 122 Fed. 384, 58 C. C. A. 472, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; In re Mercur, 116 Fed. 655, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

226 In re Freudenfels, Fed. Cas. No. 5,112a. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy is not amendable after many years by adding a general and indefinite allegation of a preferential transfer of property. In re Lewis Shoe Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 1017, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134.

227 In re Riggs Restaurant Co., 130 Fed. 691, 66 C. C. A. 48, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 508.

228 In re Brett, 130 Fed. 981, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

229 In re Bininger, 7 Blatchf. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 1,420; In re Craft, 2 Ben. 214, 1 N. B. R. 378, Fed. Cas. No. 3,316; affirmed, 6 Blatchf. 177, 2 N. B. R. 111, Fed. Cas. No. 3,317.

The various mistakes or omissions which may be corrected by amendment cover a very wide range of subjects, of which the more important may be here instanced. In the first place, creditors may in this manner correct a mistake in the name of the alleged bankrupt as set forth in their petition,[230] or in the allegation concerning his place of residence,[231] or in that which states the length of time he has resided within the jurisdiction of the court.[232] But it is doubtful if the power of amendment can be used to bring in new parties as respondents. It is held that a petition against a firm, naming only two of the three actual partners, cannot be amended so as to make the third a party after the testimony is taken and the cause is before the court on hearing.[233] And the pendency of simultaneous proceedings against the individual members of a partnership do not necessarily bring the firm itself into court, so as to authorize an amendment calling for an adjudication against it.[234] But on the other hand, where the petition is brought against an alleged partnership and its two members, but it appears that there was no partnership in fact, and that the business was owned and the act of bankruptcy committed by one defendant individually, it is in the discretion of the court to permit the petition to be amended by dismissing as to the partnership and the other defendant.[235] For another example, it is necessary for the petition in involuntary bankruptcy to show that the proposed bankrupt, whether a corporation or a natural person, does not come within those classes which are expressly exempted from the operation of the bankruptcy law, but if this allegation is omitted, it may be supplied by amendment.[236] So also, the petitioning creditors should show that their claims amount in the aggregate to the jurisdictional minimum, and the petition is defective for want of such an averment, but it may be supplied by an amendment,[237] as may also an allegation of the nature and amount of their several debts [230] Gleason v. Smith, 145 Fed. 895, 76 C. C. A. 427, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

[231] In re Vanderhoef, 18 N. B. R. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 16,841.

[232] In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[233] In re Pitt, 8 Ben. 389, 14 N. B. R. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 11,188.

[234] In re Mercur, 122 Fed. 384, 58 C. C. A. 472, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505.

[235] In re Richardson, 192 Fed. 50, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Young (D. C.) 223 Fed. 659, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

[236] Armstrong v. Fernandez, 208 U. S. 324, 28 Sup. Ct. 419, 52 L. Ed. 514, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Conway v. German, 166 Fed. 67, 91 C. C. A. 653, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Marion Contract & Const. Co., 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Plymouth Cordage Co., 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Crenshaw, 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., 120 Fed. 736, 57 C. C. A. 150, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762; In re Bellah, 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310; McAfee v. Arnold & Mathis, 155 Ala. 561, 46 South. 870.

[237] In re Scull, 7 Ben. 371, 10 N. B. R. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 12,568; In re McKibor claims.[238] But it has been ruled that an amended petition cannot set forth, as part of the indebtedness to the petitioning creditor, a note indorsed by the debtor which did not fall due until after the original petition was filed.[239] If the petition is invalid by reason of a defect in the verification, it is amendable,[240] and so of a clerical error in the jurat; it may be cured by amendment.[241] And so a petition which alleges the insolvency of the debtor at the time of the filing of the petition may be changed by amendment so as to charge insolvency at the date of the execution of the alleged preference.[242] But an amended petition, executed as such by a creditor, to be filed in proceedings previously instituted, cannot thereafter and after the proceedings have been dismissed by the court, be converted into an original petition by striking out the word "amended," and so made the basis of a new and independent proceeding.[243]

The allegations in the petition concerning the commission of an act of bankruptcy may also be amended, where necessary, either in the way of being made more specific or in being made to conform more closely to the facts as developed. Thus, if these allegations are vague, general, and lacking in detail, the particulars may be supplied by amendment.[244] So also, if the petition charges the commission of an act of bankruptcy by a transfer of property with intent to hinder or defraud creditors, but it is developed at the hearing that the transfer was made in satisfaction of an existing debt or for a consideration, it is proper for the court to permit an amendment charging that the transfer was made with intent to prefer the creditor benefited by it.[245] As to the ben, 12 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 8,859; In re Blair, 17 N. B. R. 492, Fed. Cas. No. 1,481.

238 In re White, 135 Fed. 199, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241.

239 In re Morse, 17 Blatchf. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 9,851.

240 In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118; Sabin v. Blake-McFall Co., 223 Fed. 501, 139 C. C. A. 49, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179. See In re Frank, 239 Fed. 709, 152 C. C. A. 543, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674. But where petitioning creditors knew nothing of the facts averred and did not take oath before a notary public, although their petition bore his certificate, it was held that it could not be amended by subsequently allowing them to verify it. In re Frank (D. C.) 234 Fed. 665, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19.

241 In re Bellah (D. C.) 116 Fed. 69, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310.

242 In re Pangborn, 185 Fed. 673, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40.

243 In re Hyde & Gload Mfg. Co., 103 Fed. 617, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

244 In re Cliffe, 94 Fed. 354, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re Nelson, 98 Fed. 76, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Irish (D. C.) 228 Fed. 573, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185. Though a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against a corporation did not allege any act of bankruptcy, yet where the corporation, being in fact insolvent, afterwards adopted resolutions admitting its insolvency and inability to pay its debts and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, it was held that a new petition could thereupon be filed. In re D. F. Herlehy Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 369, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

245 Hark v. C. M. Allen Co., 146 Fed. 665, 77 C. C. A. 91, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3; In re Hark, 142 Fed. 279, 15 Am.

propriety of an amendment introducing an entirely new act of bankruptcy, not referred to in the original petition, there is more doubt. But the preponderance of authority favors the view that such an amendment is in the discretion of the court, and its allowance is not improper, especially where the testimony at the trial or hearing plainly discloses the commission of an act of bankruptcy additional to that alleged in the petition, and particularly if the proof fails as to the act originally charged, so that the proceeding will be saved and the ends of justice promoted by granting the amendment.[246] But it is necessary for the petitioning creditors, in order to obtain this privilege, to explain or excuse their omission to allege the new act of bankruptcy in their original petition.[247] This rule, however, is exceptional and entirely contrary to the general rules of pleading, which require that the cause of action shall remain unchanged, however great a latitude in the way of amendment may otherwise be allowed. And a number of the courts have preferred to adhere to the more stringent rule that a new or entirely different act of bankruptcy cannot be introduced into the petition by an amendment.[248] And even where this is allowed, it seems to be conceded that it is wholly improper to permit an amendment of this kind where the new act of bankruptcy proposed to be set up was committed more than four months before the application for leave to amend, so that it could not be made the basis of a new original petition.[249]

Bankr. Rep. 460; In re Henderson, 9 Fed. 196.

[246] International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 403, 25 L. Ed. 866; Chicago Motor Vehicle Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 141 Fed. 518, 72 C. C. A. 576, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804; In re Hamrick, 175 Fed. 279, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721; In re Nusbaum, 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598; In re Miller, 104 Fed. 764, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140; In re Lange, 97 Fed. 197, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231; In re Mercur, 95 Fed. 634, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 626; In re Strait, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 354; In re Gallinger, 1 Sawy. 224, 4 N. B. R. 729, Fed. Cas. No. 5,202; Hardy v. Bininger, 4 N. B. R. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 6,057; In re Forbes (D. C.) 235 Fed. 316, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511.

[247] White v. Bradley Timber Co., 116 Fed. 768, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671; Wilder v. Watts, 138 Fed. 426, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[248] In re Pure Milk Co., 154 Fed. 682, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735; In re Harris, 155 Fed. 216, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; In re Sears, 117 Fed. 294, 54 C. C. A. 532, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713; Reed v. Crowley, 1 N. B. R. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 11,644; In re Leonard, 4 N. B. R. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 8,255; Stern v. Schonfield, Fed. Cas. No. 13,377; In re Brown Commercial Car Co., 227 Fed. 387, 142 C. C. A. 83, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45. In the case of In re Leonard, supra, it was said: "Amendments in legal proceedings always presuppose something to amend—something in the record concerning that distinct substantive matter, not that an entirely new cause of action is to be substituted for the previous one. Substitution is not amendment." And see In re McGraw (D. C.) 254 Fed. 442, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38.

[249] In re Haff, 136 Fed. 78, 68 C. C. A. 646, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; Walker v. Woodside, 164 Fed. 680, 90 C. C. A. 644, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; In re Pure Milk Co., 154 Fed. 682, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735; In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576; In re Lewis Shoe Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 1017, 38 Am.

§ 164. Limitation of Time for Filing Petition.—The statute provides that a petition in involuntary bankruptcy may be filed within four months after the commission of an act of bankruptcy by the debtor. It cannot be maintained on alleged acts of bankruptcy occurring more than four months before the petition is filed.[250] But the fact that the general assignment for the benefit of creditors, which is alleged as the act of bankruptcy in the petition, was made in England, of which country the debtor was a resident, and that the English bankruptcy law requires action to be taken by creditors within three months after an act of bankruptcy, does not in any way deter American creditors from maintaining a proceeding in bankruptcy within the four months allowed by our own law.[251]

Where the act of bankruptcy alleged consists in the transfer of property in fraud of creditors or for the purpose of giving a preference or in the making of a general assignment, then the time does not expire until four months after the recording or registering of the transfer or assignment, if such recording or registering is required or permitted by law; if not, from the date when the beneficiary takes notorious, exclusive, or continuous possession of the property, unless the petitioning creditors have received actual notice of such transfer or assignment.[252] The statute is not retroactive, and a conveyance of property is not an act of bankruptcy when made before the passage of the law, though not recorded until after that time. The deed is operative from its date, and the act of creditors in recording it cannot be taken as the act of the grantor.[253] But a petition in involuntary bankruptcy could be maintained upon an act of bankruptcy committed before November 1, 1898, the earliest day on which such a petition, under the present statute, could be filed, provided the act was committed after July 1, 1898, the date when the law took effect.[254] In determining whether a transfer of property was made within the time limited, it will be held to have taken place at the time of the actual execution and delivery of the Bankr. Rep. 134. But compare In re C. W. Bartleson Co. (D. C.) 253 Fed. 296, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; International Silver Co. v. New York Jewelry Co., 233 Fed. 945, 147 C. C. A. 619, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91. An act of bankruptcy committed and complete more than four months prior to the amendment of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, cannot be charged for the first time in the amendment. But where such act consists of a concealment of property, which has continued, the four months period will not begin to run until discovery by the petitioning creditors. In re Havens, 255 Fed. 478, 166 C. C. A. 554, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

[250] Trammell v. Yarbrough, 254 Fed. 685, 166 C. C. A. 183, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[251] In re Berthoud (D. C.) 231 Fed. 529, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[252] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3b. See Thornhill v. Link, 8 N. B. R. 521, Fed. Cas. No. 13,993.

[253] In re Wynne, Chase, 227, 4 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 18,117.

[254] Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 95

deed, and not at its date.[255] And where an insolvent corporation sold its real estate and used the proceeds in paying some of its creditors to the exclusion of others, and a petition in bankruptcy against it, alleging the transaction as an act of bankruptcy, not on the theory of its being a conveyance of property with intent to delay and defraud creditors, but on the ground that the payments out of the price received were a transfer of property with intent to prefer certain creditors, was filed more than four months after such payments were made, though within four months after the recording of the deed, it was held that the petition was too late and must be dismissed.[256] It will be observed that the four months' limitation applies to the filing of the petition as the commencement of the proceedings, and hence, if the petition is filed in due time, the proceedings will not be vitiated by a delay in the issuance of process thereon.[257] And moreover, in such a case, it is not material that certain creditors, who joined in the petition subsequent to its filing and before an adjudication thereon, and who are to be reckoned in making up the requisite number of creditors and amount of claims, did not enter their appearance, for the purpose of such joinder, until more than four months after the act of bankruptcy.[258] The period of four months is to be computed by excluding the day on which the act of bankruptcy was committed and including that on which the petition is filed.[259]

In regard to the provision that a petition may be filed within four months after the beneficiary in a preferential conveyance takes "notorious, exclusive, or continuous possession of the property," it has been held that the word "notorious" does not mean that the fact of his taking possession should be advertised or made public by any active efforts on the part of those concerned, but only that there should be nothing secret or hidden in the transaction; the change of possession need only be such that creditors could have discovered it by proper inquiry.[260]

As to acts of bankruptcy other than the transfer of property and the making of an assignment, the limitation is simply that the petition must be filed within four months after the commission of the act of bankruptcy. Thus, it is an act of bankruptcy if an insolvent debtor shall have "suffered or permitted any creditor to obtain a preference through

Fed. 637, 37 C. C. A. 210, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[255] In re Rooney, 6 N. B. R. 163, Fed. Cas. No. 12,032.

[256] In re Mingo Valley Creamery Ass'n, 100 Fed. 282, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67.

[257] In re Lewis, 91 Fed. 632, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458.

[258] In re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461.

[259] In re Stevenson, 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Dupree, 97 Fed. 28.

[260] In re Woodward, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 352.

legal proceedings, and not having at least five days before a sale or final disposition of any property affected by such preference vacated or discharged such preference," and it is held that a petition in involuntary bankruptcy may be filed, when the preference alleged was obtained by an attachment of the defendant's property and a sale thereunder, within four months after the seizure and sale of the property, though it be more than four months after the attachment was made.[261] But where the act alleged is rather a "concealment" of property than a transfer of it, the opinion has been expressed that this is a continuing act, and the time begins to run from its discovery by the creditors.[262] As to the appointment of a receiver as cause for an adjudication of bankruptcy, it may be said that a receiver is "put in charge" of the property of a defendant when the decree appointing him is entered, and the four months' limitation begins to run from the date of the decree, rather than from the time when the receiver qualifies or takes actual possession of the property.[263] It is further necessary to remark that both the original and the duplicate petition required by the statute must be filed within the four months; it is not enough to file the original, and then, after the four months, the duplicate.[264]

As stated in a preceding section, the four months' limitation does not apply to an amendment of the petition; that is, if the original petition was filed in due time, it is no objection to an amendment that it is allowed more than four months after the act of bankruptcy charged, provided it does not introduce a wholly new act of bankruptcy.[265]

§ 165. Filing and Presenting Petition.—Proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy are commenced by the filing of the petition, and take date from that time, not from the issuance of process or its service on the defendant.[266] And the filing of a bankruptcy petition is, in effect, a caveat, and, the proceedings being in rem, gives notice to the whole world.[267] It is not necessary that the petition should be filed or presented to the court simultaneously with its execution or verification; the fact that the petition was attested a number of days before being 261 Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Stoever (C. C. A.) 97 Fed. 330, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 220; In re Nusbaum, 152 Fed. 835, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 598.

262 Citizens' Bank v. W. C. De Pauw Co., 105 Fed. 926, 45 C. C. A. 130, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345.

263 In re Perry Aldrich Co., 165 Fed. 249, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

264 In re Stevenson, 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Dupree, 97 Fed. 28.

265 Supra, § 163. And see In re R. L. Radke Co., 193 Fed. 735, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 950.

266 In re Appel, 103 Fed. 931, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722; In re Lawis, 91 Fed. 632, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 458; First Nat. Bank v. Masterson, 29 Okl. 76, 116 Pac. 162.

267 Hamilton v. Smith, 36 Mont. 1, 92 Pac. 32, 122 Am. St. Rep. 330; In re Schow (D. C.) 213 Fed. 514.

filed, affords no obstacle to its prosecution.[268] All petitions are intended by the statute to be filed with the clerk of the court in which the proceeding is to be taken, and it is bad practice to send them directly to the judge or to present them to a referee.[269] A petition in bankruptcy is to be deemed "filed," within the meaning of the law, when it is delivered personally to the clerk of the court of bankruptcy and received by him for the purpose of being placed on file, although not at his office or during office hours,[270] and the time of filing does not date from the time when the clerk presents it to the judge for his action as to issuing an order to show cause.[271] Where a voluntary partnership petition in bankruptcy was signed, verified, and presented by all the members of the firm, and was accompanied by schedules of the firm's assets and debts, but not by any individual schedules, and no adjudication was made thereon, but subsequently the petition was in part withdrawn, and a new petition was filed, with parts of the old petition pasted thereon, and individual schedules of all the partners added by way of amendment, and thereupon an adjudication was made, it was held that the petition was "filed" on the later date and not the earlier.[272]

The General Orders (No. 2) require the clerk to indorse on each paper filed with him the day and hour of filing; and when this indorsement is made it is evidence of the facts stated and is for every legal purpose a certificate.[273] In fact, the record of the bankruptcy court showing that a petition was filed at a particular time is conclusive and cannot be contradicted by parol testimony,[274] although if the recital as to the date of filing is actually incorrect, it may be made right by an order entered nunc pro tunc.[275]

The statute also provides (section 59c) that "petitions shall be filed in duplicate, one copy for the clerk and one for service on the bankrupt." This is imperative. But it applies only to involuntary proceedings, as is shown by the connection in which the clause is found, and by the further consideration that, in a case of voluntary bankruptcy, it would be wholly unnecessary for the bankrupt to duplicate his petition, since [268] In re Abrahams, 5 Law Rep. 328, Fed. Cas. No. 20.

[269] In re Sykes, 106 Fed. 669, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264. Relationship between the bankrupt and the deputy clerk of the court in whose office the petition was filed will be cause for transferring the cause to another seat of the court in the same district and division, and ordering the record to be filed and docketed in the office of the clerk of the court at the latter place. Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[270] In re Von Borcke, 94 Fed. 352. See Franks v. Houston, 9 Kan. 406.

[271] In re Bear, 5 Fed. 53.

[272] In re Washburn, 99 Fed. 84, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 585.

[273] In re Dean, 1 N. B. R. 249, Fed. Cas. No. 3,699.

[274] Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 7 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 127.

[275] Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 7 N. B. R. 145, Fed Cas.. No. 127.

no provision is made for its service on any one. But in cases where this requirement applies, it is held to mean that there shall be one petition in the form of two duplicate originals, each verified as prescribed, and both filed at the same time,[276] not merely one formal and verified petition and an unsworn copy of it. And the omission of the petitioning creditors to file both duplicates of the petition within the time limited by the statute is not cured by the appearance of the alleged bankrupt for the purpose of moving to dismiss the petition.[277] And although the court has broad and liberal powers in the way of permitting amendments, it should not undertake practically to repeal the legislative declaration that petitions must be filed in duplicate within the four months specified.[278]

When a petition in bankruptcy is offered to the clerk for filing, he must collect fees for himself ($10), for the referee ($10), and for the trustee ($5), except in the case of a voluntary petition which is accompanied by an affidavit stating that the petitioner has not the money to pay such fees and cannot obtain it.[279] This statutory affidavit is prima facie evidence of the inability of the petitioner to make the required deposit of fees, and if, upon examination as to his available means, proper inquiries being fairly answered, it appears that there was no money or property held by the petitioner at the institution of the proceedings, or obtainable through his individual earnings or efforts, the exemption from making such deposit must be allowed and the case proceed.[280]

§ 166. Service of Process.—In cases where personal service is practicable, the provision of the statute is that, "upon the filing of a petition for involuntary bankruptcy, service thereof, with a writ of subpœna, shall be made upon the person therein named as defendant in the same manner that service of such process is now had upon the commencement of a suit in equity in the courts of the United States except that it shall be returnable within fifteen days, unless the judge shall for cause fix a longer time."[281] The equity rules provide that "the process of subpœna shall [276] In re Stevenson, 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Dupree, 9 Fed. 28. But see Millan v. Exchange Bank, 183 Fed. 753, 106 C. C. A. 327, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 889, where a copy of the petition made and certified by the clerk of the court and delivered to the marshal with the summons, was held to satisfy the requirement of the statute as to the filing of the petition in duplicate.

[277] In re Stevenson, 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66. But compare In re Plymouth Cordage Co., 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

[278] In re Stevenson, 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

[279] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 40, 48, 51, 52.

[280] In re Levy, 101 Fed. 247.

[281] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 18a. Though a subpœna issued September 27, requiring the alleged bankrupt to appear on October 12, with a memorandum stating that the petition would be taken as confessed unless the answer was filed before the return day, was irregular, in that the bankrupt should have 5 days after the return day in which to answer, constitute the proper mesne process in all suits in equity, in the first instance, to require the defendant to appear and answer the exigency of the bill." [282] As to the form and sanction of the writ, it is provided that "all writs and process issuing from the courts of the United States shall be under the seal of the court from which they issue, and shall be signed by the clerk thereof. Those issuing from a district court shall bear teste of the judge, or, when that office is vacant, of the clerk thereof." [283] This is supplemented by the third general order in bankruptcy, which provides that "all process, summons, and subpœnas shall issue out of the court, under the seal thereof, and be tested by the clerk; and blanks, with the signature of the clerk and seal of the court, may, upon application, be furnished to the referees." It is not probable, however, that the last clause was intended to apply to the original process for compelling the appearance and answer of the respondent, as no provision is made by the statute for the filing of the petition with a referee, nor is that officer vested with any jurisdiction of a bankruptcy case until it has been properly referred to him.

Service of the process is to be made by the marshal or a deputy, except where that officer is a party to the cause, in which case it is to be executed by a disinterested third person specially appointed by the court for that purpose.[284] If service is not effected before the return day, the petitioning creditors are entitled to alias and successive subpœnas until due service is had.[285] And if the process is found to be irregular or defective in any way, the court may allow it to be amended.[286] As to the mode of service, the equity rules provide that "the service of all subpœnas shall be by delivery of a copy thereof by the officer serving the same to the defendant personally, or by leaving a copy thereof at the dwelling-house or usual place of abode of each defendant, with some adult person who is a member or resident in the family." [287] There is nothing to prevent service on the alleged bankrupt wherever he may be found, though it is outside the district.[288] If the defendant is a partnership, service on one member of the firm will give jurisdiction yet the irregularity will not be ground for an avoidance of the subpœna, where it was served 10 days before the return day and the bankrupt had more than 5 days before the return day in which to answer. Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 826, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573.

[282] Equity Rule No. 7.

[283] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 911.

[284] Equity Rule No. 15; Rev. Stat. U. S. § 922.

[285] Equity Rule No. 14; Gleason v. Smith, Perkins & Co., 145 Fed. 895, 76 C. C. A. 427, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 602.

[286] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 948.

[287] Equity Rule No. 13.

[288] Stuart v. Hines, 33 Iowa, 60, 6 N. B. R. 416; Hills v. F. D. McKinniss Co., 188 Fed. 1012, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329. But see In re Appel, 103 Fed. 931, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

of the firm and its property.[289] And in the case of a corporation, service is good if made on any of its principal officers,[290] as, the cashier of a banking company,[291] or, in the case of a foreign corporation, that officer of the state who has been appointed its attorney to receive service of process within the state.[292] But if the corporation has been dissolved by decree of a state court, and a receiver appointed to wind up its affairs, service may be made by publication, as this is a case where the defendant cannot be found.[293] While a defendant may ordinarily waive service of process, this cannot be done in a bankruptcy proceeding, or at least it will not justify an adjudication before the return day of the writ, because creditors have the right to intervene and plead to the petition, and they must be allowed the full statutory time for that purpose.[294]

If the defendant is temporarily absent from the district, but has his dwelling-house or usual place of abode therein, the service may be made by leaving a copy there with some adult member of the family, as authorized by the equity rules, this being a personal service within the meaning of the bankruptcy act.[295] And in one case, the validity of service was sustained where it had been effected by leaving the subpœna and a copy of the petition with the clerk of a hotel of which the bankrupt was the proprietor and where he usually resided, although, at the time, he was absent in another town in the last stage of a fatal illness.[296] It may be added that the equity rule does not require the copy of the process to be left with a person within the dwelling-house, but is satisfied by a service at the door, outside the house.[297]

If personal service cannot be had, "then notice shall be given by publication in the same manner and for the same time as provided by law for notice by publication in suits to enforce a legal or equitable lien in courts of the United States, except that, unless the judge shall other-

[289] Bail v. Hartman, 9 Ariz. 321, 83 Pac. 358.

[290] In re California Pac. R. Co., 3 Sawy. 240, 11 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 2,315. Where service of the subpœna and a copy of the petition was made on one who was a director and a stockholder of the corporation defendant, under the mistaken belief that he was its president, but in fact he handed over the papers to the real president of the corporation, it was held that the service was sufficient to warrant the court in assuming jurisdiction and adjudging the corporation a bankrupt. Lamar-Wells Co. v. Hamilton Co., 237 Fed. 54, 150 C. C. A. 256, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

[291] Platt v. Archer, 9 Blatchf. 559, 6 N. B. R. 465, Fed. Cas. No. 11,213.

[292] In re Magid-Hope Silk Mfg. Co., 110 Fed. 352, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 610.

[293] In re Washington Marine Ins. Co., 2 Ben. 292, 2 N. B. R. 648, Fed. Cas. No. 17,246.

[294] In re L. Humbert Co., 100 Fed. 439, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76.

[295] In re Norton, 148 Fed. 301, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504.

[296] In re Risteen, 122 Fed. 732, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 494.

[297] Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Wulf, 1 Fed. 775.

wise direct, the order shall be published not more than once a week for two consecutive weeks, and the return day shall be ten days after the last publication, unless the judge shall for cause fix a longer time." [298] The statute here referred to, authorizing substituted service in suits to enforce liens, provides that "it shall be lawful for the court to make an order directing such absent defendant or defendants to appear, plead, answer, or demur, by a day certain to be designated, which order shall be served on such absent defendant or defendants, if practicable, wherever found, and also upon a person or persons in possession or charge of said property, if any there be, or where such personal service upon such absent defendant or defendants is not practicable, such order shall be published in such manner as the court may direct, not less than once a week for six consecutive weeks." [299] As applied to proceedings in bankruptcy against an absconding debtor, it is held that this requires the publication of an order designating a day on which the bankrupt is required to appear and answer, demur, or plead; and where the order for publication did not designate a time for appearance, and publication was made of the citation issued by the clerk directing the marshal to summon the bankrupt, instead of the order for publication, it was held that this conferred no jurisdiction on the court to make an adjudication.[300] The manner of publication is apparently left entirely in the discretion of the judge, though there is another provision of the bankruptcy act (section 28) which requires the courts of bankruptcy to designate the newspapers in which the notices and orders in bankruptcy proceedings shall be published.

If the defendant in such proceedings desires to raise the objection that the court has no jurisdiction because the writ was improperly served, he may do so by motion or by defense at the trial, but not by demurrer.[301] But a general appearance will waive all irregularities in the service of process and confer jurisdiction of the defendant's person.[302] And where there are several defendants, as in the case of a partnership, one who was not served may appear by attorney.[303] An omission in the [298] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 18, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[299] Act Cong. March 3, 1875, § 8, 18 Stat. 472, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 513, now constituting § 57 of the Federal Judicial Code of 1911.

[300] Sidney L. Bauman Diamond Co. v. Hart, 192 Fed. 498, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632. In the same case it was held that, in case of service by publication on an absconding bankrupt, it was not necessary that personal service, other than by publication, should be made on a receiver appointed by a state court in charge of certain of the bankrupt's property.

[301] In re Seaboard Fire Underwriters, 137 Fed. 987, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 722.

[302] In re Ulrich, 3 Ben. 355, 3 N. B. R. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 14,327.

[303] In re Weyhausen, 1 Ben. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 17,474.

printed copy of an order for publication of the subpœna in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against a partnership and the members thereof, who resided without the district, will not be ground for setting aside the adjudication if the omission did not render the order unintelligible.[304]

§ 167. Notice to Creditors.—In the case where the petition is filed by one or two creditors only, and the bankrupt alleges in his answer the existence of more than twelve creditors, he is required also to file a sworn list of all his creditors, with their addresses, and thereupon the court shall cause such creditors to be notified of the proceeding and give them an opportunity to be heard. Where this is done, the mode of service of notice on such creditors is immaterial, if the creditors named in the list are actually notified in time to intervene if they desire. It is left in the discretion of the court to decide whether notice shall be served personally or by mail, and by whom the service shall be made.[305] But this is the only provision in the statute for notice to creditors of the institution of the proceedings. In all other cases, no such notice is necessary, the filing of the proper petition by proper parties in the proper court conferring jurisdiction and in itself operating as a lis pendens and as notice to all who may be concerned.[306] And although a creditor has had no notice of the petition, this will not entitle him to impeach the decree of adjudication, where the records show a regular proceeding. The fact that his name did not appear on the list of creditors and that he was not notified of the proceeding would not affect the jurisdiction of the court to proceed to an adjudication, nor will it affect the trustee's right to maintain an action against him to recover a preference or to set aside a fraudulent conveyance.[307]

[304] Hunter, Walton & Co. v. J. G. Cherry Co., 247 Fed. 458, 159 C. C. A. 512, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732.

[305] In re Tribelhorn, 137 Fed. 3, 69 C. C. A. 601, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491. Notice of bankruptcy proceedings, given to the owner of an interest in a judgment against the bankrupt, is not notice to the other co-owner. Strickland v. Capital City Mills, 74 S. C. 16, 54 S. E. 220, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 426.

[306] In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80. And see International Bank v. Sherman, 100 U. S. 406, 25 L. Ed. 866; Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 14, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; Wiley v. Pavey, 61 Ind. 457, 28 Am. Rep. 677; Coppard v. Gardner (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 650. Intervening creditors are not entitled to notice of a continued hearing before the master on the question whether the claims of the original petitioners were sufficient in amount. In re Smith (D. C.) 232 Fed. 284, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637. An indorser of a note, who had become the equitable owner of a judgment against himself and the maker, by paying the judgment, is not entitled to notice of the bankruptcy of the maker, where the maker is not shown to have had notice of the equitable assignment, and in such case notice to the judgment creditor is sufficient. Morency v. Landry, 79 N. H. 305, 108 Atl. 855, 9 A. L. R. 123.

[307] Roberts v. Fernald, 72 N. H. 198, 55 Atl. 942.

§ 168. Parties.—Strictly speaking, the only parties to a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy, before the adjudication, are the petitioning creditor or creditors and the alleged bankrupt, although other creditors have the privilege of intervening for the purpose of either sustaining or opposing the petition. Persons having a lien on property of the bankrupt passing to his trustee are not parties to the bankruptcy proceeding, unless they come into the bankruptcy court to enforce their rights.[308] So, the appearance of a nonresident as a witness in the bankruptcy proceeding, in obedience to a subpœna, does not make him a party to the proceeding.[309] Where it is necessary to reform a contract in order to sustain a petition in bankruptcy against a corporation, the corporation should be made a party to the proceeding, notwithstanding its default as to the petition, which did not ask such reformation, or the assent of its board of directors to the bankruptcy.[310]

Where the act of bankruptcy alleged is the making of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, it is perhaps not improper to join the assignee as a defendant in the bankruptcy proceeding, but his rights and interests cannot be adjudicated at this stage of the cause, and where the petition sets up no cause of action against him nor prays any special relief as to him, the mere fact of his being included does not make him continuously subject to the orders of the court without other process.[311] Where the alleged bankrupt in involuntary proceedings dies after the filing of the petition, but before service of process, the proceeding does not abate, but his heirs and personal representatives should be brought in and made parties to the proceeding before any adjudication.[312] Similarly, when the alleged bankrupt is insane, the court of bankruptcy has authority to appoint a guardian ad litem to defend against the petition, if he has no regular guardian or committee. If he has, then such guardian or committee must be brought in by process, as well as the lunatic, and may thereupon be appointed guardian ad litem for him.[313]

§ 169. Same; Intervention and Substitution of Parties.—The statute provides (section 59f) that "creditors other than original petitioners may at any time enter their appearance and join in the petition." This [308] In re Reading Hat Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 786, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 884.

[309] In re Geller (D. C.) 216 Fed. 558.

[310] In re Imperial Corp. (D. C.) 133 Fed. 73.

[311] Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 22 Sup. Ct. 293, 46 L. Ed. 413, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

[312] Shute v. Patterson, 147 Fed. 509, 78 C. C. A. 75, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99. In such a case, a recital in the subpœnas issued to the heirs, that the purpose of the proceedings is to have them adjudged bankrupts, is erroneous. Idem.

[313] In re Burka, 107 Fed. 674, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 843.

is a privilege of which any creditors having provable claims may avail themselves.[314] But it is first necessary that the petition should be sufficient on its face to give jurisdiction. If it does not show that the requisite amount of debts is represented, it cannot be amended by the joinder of other creditors having sufficient claims.[315] But if there is no want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the petition, but it transpires before adjudication that there is a deficiency in the amount of debts represented, then other creditors who have entered their appearance and joined in the petition may be reckoned in making up the statutory quorum.[316] So, if the first petitioner is disqualified by failing to show that he is a creditor, another, who has joined in the petition after filing, will be substituted for him, and all rights of amendment of the first petitioner will inure to the second.[317] To establish a right to intervene, it is not necessary that the party should have proved his debt in the ordinary form, provided he can satisfy the court that he is in fact a creditor,[318] and the fact that his petition of intervention is defective in matter of form in setting out his claim is immaterial, where the deficiency is supplied by proof on the hearing.[319] But he must be a genuine creditor having a real and provable claim.[320]

This right of additional creditors to come in and press the petition, being secured to them by law, cannot be defeated by any settlement or arrangement by which the original petitioners obtain satisfaction and seek to withdraw the petition or drop the proceedings,[321] nor by their failure to appear or their omission or neglect to prosecute the proceeding to an adjudication.[322]

[314] In re Etheridge Furniture Co., 92 Fed. 329, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112; In re Crenshaw, 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 10 Ariz. 42, 85 Pac. 653.

[315] In re Stein, 130 Fed. 377, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 364.

[316] In re Crenshaw, 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; In re Mackey, 110 Fed. 355, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Bedingfield, 96 Fed. 190, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; In re Vastbinder, 126 Fed. 417, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[317] In re Taylor, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 412. On the same principle, where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, good on its face, has been filed, other creditors, acting in good faith, have the right to file intervening petitions at any time during the pendency of the proceeding, although the original petitioners were estopped to file the petition. In re Freeman Cotting Coat Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 551.

[318] In re Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 9 Blatchf. 101, 6 N. B. R. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 1,677.

[319] Hays v. Wagner, 150 Fed. 533, 80 C. C. A. 275, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163.

[320] In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 752, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780.

[321] In re Lacey, 12 Blatchf. 322, 10 N. B. R. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 7,965; In re Calendar, 5 Law Rep. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 2,307; In re Mammouth Pine Lumber Co., 109 Fed. 308, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

[322] In re Sheffer, 4 Sawy. 363, 17 N. B. R. 369, Fed. Cas. No. 12,742; In re Calendar, 5 Law Rep. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 2,307; In re Buchanan, 10 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 2,073; In re Lacey, 12 Blatchf. 322, 10 N. B. R. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 7,965; In re Stein, 105 Fed. 749, 45 C. C. A. 29, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288.

The statute does not limit the time within which creditors may thus intervene, and therefore it is held that they may come in at any time before a final judgment is rendered on the petition, that is, before the court either makes the adjudication or dismisses the petition,[323] and it is immaterial that it may be more than four months after the commission of the act of bankruptcy alleged.[324] Where the parties appear and join issue, and no further proceedings take place and no formal adjournment is had, the matter will be regarded as pending from day to day until disposed of, to permit any other creditor to come in and prosecute the petition.[325] But it is probable that a very long and unreasonable delay (seventeen months in the case cited) will debar any creditors from the privilege of entering the case and taking up the petition for action.[326] And after the petition has been definitively dismissed, whether for want of prosecution, for insufficiency of petitioners, or because the issues were decided against them, it is then too late for any other creditors to intervene, and the petition cannot be revived for their benefit.[327] Their only course is to bring a new and independent petition against the debtor, and they must found it on acts of bankruptcy committed within four months before they file it; but in the prosecution of it they will not be estopped by the judgment of dismissal.[328]

There are also some instances in which a substitution of parties in a bankruptcy proceeding will be proper. This is the case, for example, where one of the creditors joining in an involuntary petition himself becomes a bankrupt before the hearing. In this event, his trustee in bankruptcy, who succeeds to all his rights and claims as against his debtors, should be substituted in his place as a petitioner.[329]

[323] In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 744, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770; In re Plymouth Cordage Co., 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Frisbee, 14 Blatchf. 185, 15 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 5,129. So long as the petition has not been formally dismissed, other creditors have the right to intervene, regardless of any laches which might be urged against them. In re C. Jutte & Co., 258 Fed. 422, 169 C. C. A. 438, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

[324] In re Charles Town Light & Power Co., 183 Fed. 160, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; In re Bolognesi, 223 Fed. 771, 139 C. C. A. 351, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[325] In re Buchanan, 10 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 2,073.

[326] Ex parte Freedley, Crabbe, 544, Fed. Cas. No. 5,079.

[327] In re Tribelhorn, 137 Fed. 3, 69 C. C. A. 601, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491; In re Olmsted, 4 N. B. R. 240, Fed. Cas. No. 10,505. An order in an involuntary proceeding that the petition be dismissed when the fees due the clerk and marshal shall be paid, is not a final discontinuance, so as to deprive another creditor of the right to intervene and prosecute the original petition at any time before such fees are paid. In re Lacey, 12 Blatchf. 322, 10 N. B. R. 477, Fed. Cas. No. 7,965.

[328] Neustadter v. Chicago Dry Goods Co., 96 Fed. 830, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96; Trammell v. Yarbrough, 254 Fed. 685, 166 C. C. A. 183, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 727.

[329] Hays v. Wagner, 150 Fed. 533, 80 C. C. A. 275, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; In re Jones, 7 N. B. R. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 7,450.

§ 170. Same; Persons Entitled to Oppose Adjudication.—Under the earlier bankruptcy acts, and particularly that of 1841, it was generally held that the only parties to a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy were the petitioning creditors and the alleged bankrupt; that the latter was alone entitled to set up any available defenses against the petition; and that no other creditors or other third parties could intervene for the purpose of opposing the adjudication.[330] But the present statute expressly declares (section 59f) that "creditors other than original petitioners may at any time enter their appearance and join in the petition, or file an answer and be heard in opposition to the prayer of the petition." And in another place (section 18b) it is provided that "the bankrupt or any creditor may appear and plead to the petition within ten days after the return day, or within such further time as the court may allow." This applies only to involuntary proceedings. There is nothing in the act which gives to a creditor the right to intervene and oppose an adjudication on a voluntary petition, unless perhaps on the ground of a want of jurisdiction.[331] As to the limitation of time, it rests in the discretion of the court to allow an extension, but it is a proper exercise of such discretion to refuse to allow a creditor to file an answer when he knew of the proceedings and gives no sufficient excuse for his failure to answer within the ten days.[332]

Any creditor whose interests are directly affected by the proceedings, or who conceives that he may be prejudiced by an adjudication of bankruptcy against the debtor, even a general unsecured creditor, may avail himself of this privilege and contest the petition, though the debtor himself fails to appear or to answer.[333] In particular, where the petition alleges as an act of bankruptcy the giving of an unlawful preference to a particular creditor, or that such creditor has obtained a preference through legal proceedings, he may, on his own petition, intervene and be made a party defendant, with leave to plead to the petition.[334] So a [330] Karr v. Whittaker, 5 N. B. R. 123, Fed. Cas. No. 7,613; Dutton v. Freeman, 5 Law Rep. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 4,210; In re Lawrence, 10 Ben. 4, 18 N. B. R. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 8,133; In re Bush, 6 N. B. R. 179, Fed. Cas. No. 2,222; In re Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 5 N. B. R. 232, Fed. Cas. No. 1,679. Under the present statute, debtors of an alleged bankrupt cannot be heard as objectors to an involuntary petition against him. In re Tidewater Coal Exchange (D. C.) 274 Fed. 1008.

[331] In re Carleton, 115 Fed. 246, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270. And see supra, § 152.

[332] In re Marion Contract & Const. Co., 166 Fed. 618, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Mutual Mercantile Agency, 111 Fed. 152, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 607; In re D. F. Herlehy Co. (D. C.) 247 Fed. 369, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[333] In re Jonas, 16 N. B. R. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 7,442; In re Austin, 16 N. B. R. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 662; Johansen Bros. Shoe Co. v. Alles, 197 Fed. 274, 116 C. C. A. 636, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; B–R Electric & Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 206 Fed. 885 (C. C. A.) 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

[334] Goldman v. Smith, 93 Fed. 182, 1

creditor who holds property of the alleged bankrupt under an attachment, the lien of which would be dissolved by an adjudication, may intervene and oppose the petition.[335] And so of a judgment creditor who would be injuriously affected by the bankruptcy proceedings,[336] and a receiver of the corporation defendant, who is in possession of its property and conducting its business under the orders of the court which appointed him.[337] As a general rule, the stockholders of a corporation, as such, cannot appear and defend involuntary proceedings against the corporation;[338] and an assumption that the corporation is not insolvent, and that there will be a surplus, does not make a stockholder a proper party to the bankruptcy proceeding.[339] But the court of bankruptcy clearly has the power to permit the intervention of stockholders to contest a voluntary petition filed by the officers and directors where its purpose is shown to have been fraudulent.[340]

As to the grounds of opposition open to creditors thus coming in, it may be said that any defense which would be available to the debtor himself may be pleaded and proved by the interveners. Thus, they may contest the allegations concerning the commission of an act of bankruptcy, or show that the respondent is not within the operation of the statute, or allege a want of jurisdiction or a defect in the number and amount of the petitioning creditors.[341] And in addition, they may allege and show that the proceeding is not instituted in good faith, but

Am. Bankr. Rep. 266; In re Heusted, 5 Law Rep. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 6,440; In re Donnelly, 5 Fed. 783.

335 In re C. Moench & Sons Co., 123 Fed. 977, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590; In re Williams, 14 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 17,706; In re Hatje, 6 Biss. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 6,215; In re Mendelsohn, 3 Sawy. 342, Fed. Cas. No. 9,420; In re Scrafford, Fed. Cas. No. 12,557; In re Burton, 9 Ben. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 2,214.

336 In re Jack, 13 N. B. R. 296, Fed. Cas. No. 7,119; Jackson v. Wauchula Mfg. & Timber Co., 230 Fed. 409, 144 C. C. A. 551, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408; In re Carey, 254 Fed. 688, 166 C. C. A. 186, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 553.

337 In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191; In re Gold Run Mining & Tunnel Co., 200 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; Blackstone v. Everybody's Store (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 752, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

338 In re Eureka Anthracite Coal Co. (D. C.) 197 Fed. 216, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758.

339 In re Witherbee, 202 Fed. 896, 121 C. C. A. 254, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314.

340 Zeitinger v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 Fed. 719, 157 C. C. A. 167, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324; Ogden v. Gilt Edge Consol. Mines Co., 225 Fed. 723, 140 C. C. A. 597, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 893.

341 Clinton v. Mayo, 12 N. B. R. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 2,899; In re Williams, 14 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 17,706. Where the petitioning creditors alleged 11 acts of bankruptcy, among which was that the debtor had admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts, and one creditor denied such acts, demanding trial, and the bankrupt later withdrew his denial of such acts, and his admission of inability to pay his debts was filed, the answering creditor had the right to a full and fair trial of every issue material to the adjudication of bankruptcy. Albers Commission Co. v. Richter, 251 Fed. 869, 164 C. C. A. 85, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157.

is the product of fraud and collusion between the debtor and the petitioning creditors.[342]

§ 171. Answer and Other Pleadings.—Under the former practice, the plea of the defendant in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings might take the form of a demurrer. But in view of the fact that proceedings in bankruptcy are to be conducted in accordance with the rules and practice in equity so far as consistent with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act and the general orders in bankruptcy, and since the new Equity Rule No. 29 abolishes demurrers, it is held that a demurrer will not now lie to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, but any defense in point of law arising on the face of the petition must be made by motion to dismiss or in the answer.[343]

If the defendant chooses to answer, his pleading should conform to the general rules of pleading applicable in actions at law,[344] or rather, having regard to the general equitable character of a proceeding in bankruptcy, to the rules of chancery pleading. Under the former statute, it was doubtful whether any formal answer was required at all, though it was thought better that the defendant's response to the petition should not take the form of a verbal general denial, but should be reduced to writing and signed.[345] But the present act clearly intends, as do also the official forms prescribed by the Supreme Court, that there should be a formal answer, not only signed by the respondent but verified by oath.[346] There was also much conflict of opinion under the act of 1867, as to whether the answer should be general or special, the question ultimately depending upon the rules of the particular court.[347] But at present, though the defendant might certainly use the simple [342] In re Jack, 13 N. B. R. 296, Fed. Cas. No. 7,119; In re Mendelsohn, 3 Sawy. 342, 12 N. B. R. 533, Fed. Cas. No. 9,420; In re Scrafford, 14 N. B. R. 184, Fed. Cas. No. 12,557; In re Hatje, 6 Biss. 436, 12 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 6,215. A creditor at large may suggest suspicious circumstances, upon which the court will direct an inquiry to ascertain whether the petition is not collusively and fraudulently prosecuted. In re Hopkins, 18 N. B. R. 396, Fed. Cas. No. 6,684.

[343] In re Jones (D. C.) 209 Fed. 717, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 693.

[344] In re Findlay, 5 Biss. 480, Fed. Cas. No. 4,789. An answer to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy not putting in issue any material allegation of the petition, but merely alleging that the alleged bankrupt cannot be adjudicated, because not within the terms of the statute, which is a question of law, and that it is not insolvent, which is irrelevant, and lacking a material traverse, is no hindrance to the adjudication. In re Tidewater Coal Exchange (D. C.) 274 Fed. 1011.

[345] Phelps v. Clasen, Woolw. 204, 3 N. B. R. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 11,074; In re Heydette, 8 N. B. R. 332, Fed. Cas. No. 6,444.

[346] See Day v. Beck & Gregg Hardware Co., 114 Fed. 834, 52 C. C. A. 468, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175. Where a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is verified on information and belief, the petitioners are not entitled to have a better verification of the answer. Lackawanna Leather Co. v. La Porte Carriage Co., 211 Fed. 318, 127 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658.

[347] In re Sutherland, Deady, 344, 1

form of general denial prescribed in the official forms, the circumstances of his defense are usually such as to make a detailed and specific answer proper. Still, the courts have expressed much disapproval of answers unnecessarily defensive, prolix, evasive, or responsive to multifarious matter in the petition.[348] It is always necessary for the defendant, in his answer, to deny explicitly the allegation of the petition as to his insolvency, failing which denial the allegation will be taken as admitted,[349] except in the case where insolvency is not a necessary element of the act of bankruptcy relied on, or where the particular act alleged conclusively imports a right to the adjudication in bankruptcy, if established. Here the allegation of insolvency in the petition becomes superfluous and need not be traversed.[350] A simple denial of insolvency, in the language of the official form, is ordinarily enough,[351] but the respondent is not necessarily limited to the language of the form. If the petition sets forth the debts alleged to be due by the defendant, the answer may contain detailed averments of defenses and counterclaims to such debts, showing the solvency of the respondent at the times alleged.[352] On the other hand, the defendant may admit his insolvency and his willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt, and in that case it is not necessary to substantiate the various allegations of the petition, but an adjudication may be made at once.[353]

Though the official form contains only a general denial of the fact of insolvency and of the commission of the act of bankruptcy alleged, there are other defenses open to the respondent, and which he may set up in his answer. Thus, it is clear that he has a right to plead

N. B. R. 531, Fed. Cas. No. 13,638; In re Silverman, 1 Sawy. 410, 4 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 12,855.

348 Mather v. Coe, 92 Fed. 333, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; Bradley Timber Co. v. White, 121 Fed. 779, 58 C. C. A. 55, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 329.

349 In re American Pub. Co., 15 Okl. 177, 79 Pac. 762. Where the act of bankruptcy charged in the petition was the giving of a preference while insolvent, a denial in the answer that the defendant committed such act of bankruptcy must be construed as a denial of insolvency, at least where it has been so accepted by the petitioners and evidence taken on the issue. Troy Wagon Works v. Vastbinder, 130 Fed. 232, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352.

350 George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

351 In re Ouimette, 1 Sawy. 47, 3 N. B. R. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 10,622. But see Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

352 In re Paige, 99 Fed. 538, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

353 In re Cleary, 179 Fed. 990, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; Brinkley v. Smithwick, 126 Fed. 686, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; In re Puget Sound Engineering Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 353, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310. Where the answer admitted that the bankrupt owed debts which he was unable to pay, and that he had transferred his property for cash, and had applied the proceeds in payment of some of his debts, such answer was held to constitute an admission that he had preferred some of his creditors over others, which constituted an act of bankruptcy. Brinkley v. Smithwick, supra.

that he is exempt from the operation of the bankruptcy law, as a farmer or a wage-earner, or, in the case of a corporation, that it belongs to one of the excepted classes.[354] He may also allege in his answer that the petition is not supported by the requisite number of creditors, or that they have not provable claims amounting to the jurisdictional sum.[355] If he takes exception to the sufficiency of the number of petitioning creditors, he is required by the act (section 59d) to file with his answer a sworn list of all his creditors with their addresses. This list should contain a statement of the amount due to each creditor appearing on it, the date of the debt, when it is due, whether it is due by note or account or some other form of contract, the consideration therefor, whether it is owed jointly with another as partner or otherwise, and such full particulars as will save the necessity and cost of referring the case to ascertain the facts.[356] Also, the defendant may plead such facts as will show that the creditors acting against him are, in equity, estopped to prosecute the petition.[357] And generally speaking, distinct defenses to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy should be separately pleaded.[358]

The defendant's answer or plea must be filed within five days after the return day, or within such further time as the court may allow.[359] It is held that this authorizes the judge to receive and consider a meritorious pleading, though filed after the five days, if it is interposed in good faith and not merely for purposes of delay.[360] But the time to plead cannot be extended by an agreement of counsel, without leave of the court and without the consent of the other creditors, especially in a case where, the allegations of the petition being simple and easily answered, the court would not have extended the time if applied to for that purpose.[361] If an amended petition is filed, the defendant must be allowed a reasonable time to answer it; and if it charges him with new acts of fraud and bankruptcy, a single day is not a reasonable time, at least where the defendant is not in the district.[362]

354 In re Taylor (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 728, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

355 In re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co., 92 Fed. 329, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112. In an involuntary bankruptcy proceeding, the alleged bankrupt may be entitled to a liquidation of the claims of petitioning creditors before being required to answer. In re Smith (D. C.) 209 Fed. 91, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

356 W. A. Gage & Co. v. Bell, 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696.

357 Cummins Grocer Co. v. Talley, 187 Fed. 507, 109 C. C. A. 273, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

358 In re Ouimette, 1 Sawy. 47, 3 N. B. R. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 10,622.

359 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 18d, as amended by Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797. See Stewart Petroleum Co. v. Boardman (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 826, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 573.

360 In re Cooper Bros., 159 Fed. 956, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392.

361 In re Simonson, 92 Fed. 904, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197.

362 Lockman v. Lang, 132 Fed. 1, 65 C. C. A. 621, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

If the defendant answers in the form officially prescribed, no replication on the part of the petitioning creditors is necessary, since it is in effect a plea of the general issue.[363] But if the answer alleges new matter, there must be a replication, and if none is filed, and the case is submitted on the petition and answer, the allegations of the answer must be taken as true.[364] Finally, it should be observed that a debtor who contests a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy against him, does so in his own behalf and not in the interest of his creditors, and he is at liberty to withdraw his opposition at any time, when done in good faith, without notice to his creditors or their consent.[365]

Creditors who are opposed to the adjudication of their debtor as a bankrupt may also file an answer to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against him.[366] And it is open to them to allege, in such answer, that the proceedings are not in good faith, but are the result of fraud and collusion between the debtor and the petitioning creditors.[367]

§ 172. Defenses and Grounds of Opposition.—Want of jurisdiction is of course a complete defense to a petition in bankruptcy, and jurisdiction cannot be conferred by the consent of the parties or their failure to object, if the want of it appears on the face of the pleadings.[368] This applies primarily to cases where the proceedings are brought in a court which has not jurisdiction over the defendant by reason of his residence or doing business elsewhere. But sufficient petitioning creditors are also essential to the maintenance of the proceeding. Hence the respondent may allege and show that the person bringing the petition is not a creditor, and so have the petition dismissed.[369] Or if the petitioner is in fact a creditor, the defendant may show that his debt is not such as to be provable in bankruptcy.[370] Or he may defend on the ground that the petitioning creditor or creditors do not own debts sufficient in amount to entitle them to maintain the petition.[371] Again, if he is a farmer or a wage-earner (or an exempt corporation), the court is without [363] In re Dunham, 2 Ben. 488, 2 N. B. R. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 4,143.

[364] Brinkley v. Smithwick, 126 Fed. 686, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 500; In re Taylor (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 728, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[365] In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[366] In re Cohn (D. C.) 220 Fed. 956, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 839.

[367] In re Cohn, 227 Fed. 843, 142 C. C. A. 367, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735.

[368] Hopkins v. Carpenter, 18 N. B. R. 339, Fed. Cas. No. 6,686; Fogarty v. Gerrity, 1 Sawy. 233, 4 N. B. R. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 4,895; In re Lady Bryan Min. Co., 1 Sawy. 349, 4 N. B. R. 394, Fed. Cas. No. 7,978. But compare Allen v. Thompson, 10 Fed. 116.

[369] In re Cornwall, 9 Blatchf. 114, 6 N. B. R. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 3,250. But a proceeding in involuntary bankruptcy is not void because facts show that the petitioners are estopped from taking advantage of the act of bankruptcy relied on. In re Bolognesi, 223 Fed. 771, 139 C. C. A. 351, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692.

[370] Sigsby v. Willis, 3 Ben. 371, 3 N. B. R. 207, Fed. Cas. No. 12,849.

[371] In re Ouimette, 1 Sawy. 47, 3 N.

jurisdiction over him, and this may be pleaded and proved in defense.[372] But if the undisputed facts stated in the petition make out a good case for an adjudication, it is no defense that foreclosure proceedings, instituted after the filing of the petition, will absorb all or most of the bankrupt's property since it is not a jurisdictional requisite in bankruptcy that there should be any assets for distribution.[373]

If the act of bankruptcy charged is a fraudulent conveyance or concealment of property, it will constitute a complete defense that the defendant is solvent at the time of the filing of the petition.[374] Again, the personal disability of the defendant may constitute an available defense, as in case of insanity, infancy, or coverture.[375] But an adjudication of bankruptcy duly entered on the voluntary petition of the debtor, being personally within the jurisdiction of the court, the petition being signed and verified by the bankrupt in person, will not be set aside on motion of a creditor because the attorney who appeared for the bankrupt had not been admitted to practice in the federal courts of the district, as such an irregularity does not affect the jurisdiction of the court.[376]

Under no circumstances can a plea of tender be a defense to a petition in involuntary bankruptcy. For if the debtor is insolvent, he has no right to offer payment to any creditor, nor the creditor to accept it; the transaction would be a fraud upon the other creditors and a preference. And if he is not insolvent or has not committed an act of bankruptcy, a plea of tender would be entirely outside the controversy and extraneous to the issue, as the proceeding is not one to collect a debt.[377] But payments made to petitioning creditors, after the filing of the petition and before trial or hearing thereon, are material facts on such trial, and if such payments are shown to an amount sufficient to reduce the indebtedness of the alleged bankrupt below the minimum prescribed by the act, the court loses jurisdiction to adjudge the debtor a bankrupt; and the receipt of such payments by the petitioning creditors must be considered a waiver of the alleged act of bankruptcy.[378] And where the only debt on which an adjudication may be entered is that of the

B. R. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 10,622; In re Skelley, 3 Biss. 260, 5 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 12,921.

372 In re Taylor, 102 Fed. 728, 42 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515; Counts v. Columbus Buggy Co., 210 Fed. 748, 127 C. C. A. 298, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 312.

373 Vulcan Sheet Metal Co. v. North Platte Valley Irr. Co., 220 Fed. 106, 136 C. C. A. 198, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 686.

374 George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

375 In re Kehler, 153 Fed. 235, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596; In re Ward, 161 Fed. 755, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482. And see, supra, §§ 100, 101, 102.

376 In re Kindt, 98 Fed. 867, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546.

377 In re Ouimette, 1 Sawy. 47, 3 N. B. R. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 10,622; In re Williams, 1 Low. 406, 3 N. B. R. 286, Fed. Cas. No. 17,703.

378 In re Skelley, 3 Biss. 260, 5 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No. 12,921; In re Merkle, 5 Ben. 8, Fed. Cas. No. 9,458.

petitioner, the bankrupt may have the petition dismissed on its payment with costs.[379]

Collusion between the petitioning creditors and the alleged bankrupt might probably be a ground of defense to any intervening creditor who desired to oppose the adjudication,[380] but not so the mere fact that an insolvent corporation, after admitting its inability to pay its debts and its willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt, requested certain of its creditors to file an involuntary petition against it.[381] And an agreement to withdraw opposition to bankruptcy proceedings, and to consent and submit to an adjudication, is not in fraud of the act.[382] Nor is it a defense to a bankruptcy proceeding against a partnership, on petition of one of its members, that the firm is without assets, having transferred all its property to an assignee for the benefit of creditors more than four months before the filing of the petition.[383]

It is still an unsettled question how far the existence of selfish or vindictive motives on the part of the petitioning creditors may constitute a defense to the proceedings. In some cases under the act of 1867 it was thought that, if the court is satisfied that the petition in bankruptcy is not presented in good faith, but for sinister, vexatious, or oppressive purposes, it has power to dismiss the proceedings, as where one member of a firm takes this method of vexing and harrassing his partner,[384] and this is also the practice of the English courts.[385] But other cases stand upon the strict rule that if an act of bankruptcy is shown to have been committed, and the jurisdictional requisites are present, an adjudication must follow as a matter of course, and the reasons or motives which may have instigated the proceeding are entirely immaterial.[386] Yet clearly a court of bankruptcy, as a court of equity, should require reasonably "clean hands" on the part of its suitors, and should

[379] In re Sheehan, 8 N. B. R. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 12,738.

[380] In re Cohn (D. C.) 220 Fed. 956, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 839, affirmed, 227 Fed. 843, 142 C. C. A. 367, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 735; In re Dressler Producing Corp. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 257, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457. But creditors of an alleged bankrupt are not entitled to oppose the adjudication on the ground that the bankrupt is not insolvent, that he is preparing to conceal his assets, and that false claims will be presented against his estate. In re Cohn (D. C.) 220 Fed. 956, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 839.

[381] In re Duplex Radiator Co., 142 Fed. 906, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

[382] Sanford v. Huxford, 32 Mich. 313, 20 Am. Rep. 647; First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448.

[383] In re J. M. Ceballos & Co., 161 Fed. 445, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

[384] In re Hamlin, 8 Biss. 122, 16 N. B. R. 522, Fed. Cas. No. 5,994.

[385] Ex parte Harcourt, 2 Rose, 203; Ex parte Ashworth, L. R. 18 Eq. Cas. 705; In re Davies, L. R. 3 Ch. Div. 461; Ex parte Bourne, 2 Glyn & J. 137.

[386] In re Simonson, 92 Fed. 904, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197; In re Blninger, 7 Blatchf. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 1,420; In re Duncan, 8 Ben. 365, 14 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 4,131; In re Automatic Typewriter & Service Co. (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 1, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 377.

not allow itself to be made either the instrument of private vengeance or the tool of speculators in the assets of insolvents. When there is ground to suspect the existence of such elements as these in the proceedings, or to question the good faith of the petitioning creditors, it is said that the court is justified in resolving all doubtful questions both of fact and law against them.[387]

This leads us to remark that proceedings to put a debtor into bankruptcy should never be resorted to as proceedings in terrorem to collect a debt; and if such action is taken by the creditor maliciously and without probable cause, and the petition is dismissed, the debtor is entitled to recover, in an action for that purpose, the damages he has sustained by the unlawful attempt to throw him into bankruptcy.[388]

§ 173. Issue of Insolvency.—The statute, after enumerating the various acts of bankruptcy, the first of which is the fraudulent transfer or concealment of assets, provides that "it shall be a complete defense to any proceedings in bankruptcy instituted under the first subdivision of this section to allege and prove that the party proceeded against was not insolvent as defined in this act at the time of the filing of the petition against him, and if solvency at such date is proved by the alleged bankrupt, the proceedings shall be dismissed." [389] The statute does not make insolvency an essential prerequisite in every case to and adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy.[390] And in the cases where it is necessary, the date when insolvency must have existed varies according to the act of bankruptcy alleged. If this consists in a conveyance or concealment of assets in fraud of creditors, it must have existed at the time of the filing of the petition, as above stated. But if the act charged consists in the giving or suffering a preference, or in the appointment of a receiver because of insolvency, then it must have [387] Lowenstein v. Henry McShane Mfg. Co., 130 Fed. 1007, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 601.

[388] Sonneborn v. Stewart, 2 Woods, 599, Fed. Cas. No. 13,176. This decision was reversed in Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187, 25 L. Ed. 116, but not on the ground that the action would not lie, but because of certain erroneous instructions given by the court below on the subject of malice and probable cause. See also Smith v. Broomhead, 7 Durn. & E. 296; 2 Bl. Comm. 480, note; In re Moehs & Rechnitzer, 174 Fed. 165, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; In re Haff, 135 Fed. 742, 68 C. C. A. 380, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354; In re J. Ito Terusaki (D. C.) 238 Fed. 934, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

[389] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3c.

[390] George M. West Co. v. Lea, 174 U. S. 590, 19 Sup. Ct. 836, 43 L. Ed. 1098, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463. Solvency is no defense to a petition charging that act of bankruptcy which consists in an admission of inability to pay debts and of willingness to be adjudged bankrupt. In re Russell Wheel & Foundry Co. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 569, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66. As to insolvency as an element in acts of bankruptcy, see further, supra, § 81.

existed at the time of the commission of the act of bankruptcy.[391] In either case, however, the defendant is entitled to take issue on this point and contest the petition, and the question of solvency or insolvency must be tried by a jury if he demands it.[392]

Under the act of 1867, the doctrine was well settled that insolvency does not import an absolute inability to pay one's debts at some future time, upon a settlement and winding up of his affairs, but means that a trader is not in condition to pay his debts as they mature in the ordinary course of his business, in money, as persons in trade usually do.[393] Under this definition, a person might be technically insolvent merely for the want of cash or "quick assets," though his reserves and his property not readily convertible into money might be more than sufficient to liquidate all his indebtedness. "A trader is insolvent when he cannot pay his debts in the ordinary course of business, although he may not be compelled to stop business from his inability, and although, on a settlement of his affairs, he may have sufficient to pay in full."[394] But this rule was entirely abrogated by the act of 1898. It is therein provided (section 1, clause 15) that "a person shall be deemed insolvent, within the provisions of this act, whenever the aggregate of his property, exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed, or removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors, shall not, at a fair valuation, be sufficient in amount to pay his debts." This definition makes the question depend upon the balance between total assets and total liabilities, and it establishes the fixed and invariable rule to be applied in bankruptcy proceedings, and which must be strictly adhered to.[395]

[391] Acme Food Co. v. Meier, 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

[392] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 19a.

[393] In re Doyle, 1 Holmes, 61, Fed. Cas. No. 4,050; Bailey v. Schofield, 1 Maule & S. 338; Thompson v. Thompson, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 127; In re Gay, 1 Hask. 108, 2 N. B. R. 358, Fed. Cas. No. 5,279; May v. Le Claire, 18 Fed. 164; Webb v. Sachs, 4 Sawy. 158, 15 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 17,325; Anshutz v. Hoerr, 1 Fed. 592; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. Ed. 481; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 599, 21 L. Ed. 504; Barr v. Bartram & F. Mfg. Co., 41 Conn. 502.

[394] Jackson v. McCulloch, 1 Woods, 433, 13 N. B. R. 283, Fed. Cas. No. 7,140.

[395] Duncan v. Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re Rome Planing Mill Co., 99 Fed. 937, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 766; Mackel v. Bartlett, 36 Mont. 7, 91 Pac. 1064; Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, 18 Okl. 249, 90 Pac. 418, 11 Ann. Cas. 445. And see Harmanson v. Bain, 1 Hughes, 188, 15 N. B. R. 173, Fed. Cas. No. 6,072; In re Wells, 3 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 17,388. Where it has not been shown what a person's liabilities are or what is the fair or market value of the property owned by him, he has not been proved insolvent within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. Jump v. Bernier, 221 Mass. 241, 108 N. E. 1027.

The term "fair valuation," as a measure of the defendant's assets, is probably not susceptible of exact definition, but apparently it was meant as the equivalent of such expressions as "fair price," "fair cash value," "fair market value," and the like, as used in tax laws and similar statutes. The general understanding is that all these expressions mean the price which might be fixed upon as between a vendor willing to sell, but not forced to do so, and a purchaser willing to buy, but not compelled to take the particular article.[396] "As it respects property considered in a commercial sense, I can conceive of no better or surer standard by which to arrive at a fair valuation than the market value; that is, what the property will probably bring or is worth in the general market where everybody buys. It could not be what it is worth to one person or to another specially circumstanced, or having special use for a particular article, but what it is worth as a marketable commodity at a given time, with no special conditions prevailing other than affect the market generally in the locality where the commodity is for sale." [397] Or, as stated in another case, "fair valuation" means such a price as a capable and diligent business man could presently obtain for the property after conferring with those accustomed to buy such property.[398] But there are occasional decisions recognizing as the fair value of property what it has actually brought at a sale on execution, shown to have been in all respects fair and reasonable.[399]

From the aggregate of the debtor's property there is to be deducted what he may have transferred, removed, or concealed in fraud of creditors.[400] And where he is shown to have sold property for a large sum in cash, which he retained for several months, and where he gives no information about it except to say that, since the filing of the petition, [396] Grandison v. National Bank of Commerce, 231 Fed. 800, 145 C. C. A. 620, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; Lackawanna Leather Co. v. La Porte Carriage Co., 211 Fed. 318, 127 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; In re Kobre (D. C) 224 Fed. 106, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389. Arnold v. Knapp, 75 W. Va. 804, 84 S. E. 895; In re Sedalia Farmers' Co-op. Packing & Produce Co. (D. C.) 268 Fed. 898, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287. See National Bank of Commerce v. City of New Bedford, 175 Mass. 257, 56 N. E. 288; Jones v. Whitworth, 94 Tenn. 602, 30 S. W. 736; Walker v. People, 192 Ill. 106, 61 N. E. 489; Huntington v. Attrill, 118 N. Y. 365, 23 N. E. 544; Duncan v. Landis, 106 Fed. 839, 45 C. C. A. 666, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; Martin v. Bigelow, 36 Misc. Rep. 298, 73 N. Y. Supp. 443. The market value of property is to be taken into account, rather than any special value which the property may have for the owner. Ziegler v. Thayer, 34 R. I. 288, 83 Atl. 266.

[397] In re Hines, 144 Fed. 142, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295. And see In re Marine Iron Works, 159 Fed. 753, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 390.

[398] Stern v. Paper, 183 Fed. 228, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451.

[399] In re Martin, 93 Fed. 990.

[400] In re Burg (D. C.) 245 Fed. 173, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126.

he has invested it in distant states, such sum should be treated as concealed assets, and deducted from his available property in determining the question of his solvency.[401] But property which is exempt from execution under the laws of the state is not to be excluded in computing the assets of the alleged bankrupt,[402] nor property which has been pledged as security for a just debt, or paid away in discharge of it, although the transaction would constitute a preference under the bankruptcy law, if it were made the basis of a petition.[403] Where the assets include notes, book debts, or other accounts, their value is the sum which could have been realized from their collection, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, within a reasonable time after the date of the proceeding, and not necessarily their face or par value.[404] But the liability of stockholders of a corporation for stock claimed to have been issued without payment, which claim is disputed, cannot be taken into account as an asset of the corporation,[405] nor prospective profits on goods which had been ordered from abroad, but not shipped or paid for, and for which orders had been taken to be delivered six months later.[406] On the other hand, as to debts, a bankrupt who is the manager and ostensible head of a business, cannot avoid liability for the debts contracted in the business, on the ground that another was the real party in interest and he was merely an employé, where that fact was not stated to or known by the creditors.[407] So, a note secured by mortgage is to be reckoned as one of the bankrupt's debts, though he has fraudulently conveyed away the property on which the mortgage rests.[408] But a judgment in a state court against the alleged bankrupt, which has been opened and the bankrupt permitted to appear generally and defend without conditions, cannot be reckoned as an established debt on the issue of his solvency.[409] And the same rule applies to the bank-

[401] In re Shoesmith, 135 Fed. 684, 68 C. C. A. 322, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645.

[402] In re Hines, 144 Fed. 142, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295; In re Crenshaw, 156 Fed. 628; In re Baumann, 96 Fed. 946, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 196; In re Gilmore, 5 Alaska, 293.

[403] In re Doscher, 120 Fed. 408, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547; Acme Food Co. v. Meier, 153 Fed. 74, 82 C. C. A. 208, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

[404] In re Coddington, 118 Fed. 281, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243; Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith, 18 Okl. 249, 90 Pac. 418, 11 Ann. Cas. 445; Louisiana Nat. Life Assur. Society v. Segen, 196 Fed. 903, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 407.

[405] First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448. But compare In re Commonwealth Lumber Co. (D. C.) 223 Fed. 667, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202.

[406] In re Bloch, 109 Fed. 790, 48 C. C. A. 650, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

[407] Strellow v. Schloss, 149 Fed. 907, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 881.

[408] In re Shoesmith, 135 Fed. 684, 68 C. C. A. 322, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645.

[409] McGowan v. Knittel, 137 Fed. 453, 69 C. C. A. 595, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

rupt's liability as a surety or indorser for a solvent principal.[410] Nor can a corporation be charged, for this purpose, with the outstanding individual debts of a merchant whose business it bought and continued, but without assuming liability for the debts.[411] A more difficult question arose in the case of a Pennsylvania corporation which increased its capital stock and thereupon issued a series of bonds, the law of the state authorizing such issue only to the extent of half the capital stock. The company had duly reported the increase of stock to the state authorities, as required by law, but failed to pay the tax due thereon. It was argued that this invalidated the bonds, and that therefore they should not be counted as debts of the corporation in determining the question of its solvency. But the court held that the failure to pay the tax was only an irregularity, of which the state alone could take advantage, and as the state had waived its right by subsequently accepting the tax, the delay in payment did not invalidate the bonds.[412]

Where the alleged bankrupt is a partnership, the rule generally accepted as correct, as stated in a previous section, is that the firm is not insolvent unless the individual property of the several partners, over and above their private debts, when added to the firm property, would not make up a sum sufficient to discharge the partnership debts.[413]

§ 174. Proof of Solvency or Insolvency.—If the act of bankruptcy charged in the petition is a fraudulent transfer or concealment of assets, the solvency of the defendant at the time of the filing of the petition is a matter of defense, and the petitioners are not called upon to prove insolvency, but on the contrary the burden of proving his solvency at that date is on the defendant.[414] On the other hand, if the act of bankruptcy charged is either a transfer of property with intent to give a preference or the suffering a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings, it is made the duty of the defendant to appear in court at the hearing, with his books and papers, and submit to an examination touching his solvency, and give testimony as to all matters relating thereto. If he does this, the burden of proving insolvency is on the petitioning creditors, but if he fails to obey the statute in this respect, he [410] In re Bowers (D. C.) 215 Fed. 617, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51.

[411] In re C. W. Aschenbach Co., 174 Fed. 396, 98 C. C. A. 290, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95.

[412] First Nat. Bank v. Wyoming Valley Ice Co., 136 Fed. 466, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448.

[413] Supra, § 114.

[414] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3c. And see In re West, 108 Fed. 940, 48 C. C. A. 155, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734; In re Crenshaw, 156 Fed. 638, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502; In re Burg (D. C.) 245 Fed. 173, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126; In re Wellesley (D. C.) 252 Fed. 854, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412.

must assume the burden of proving his solvency.[415] Assuming the burden to rest on the creditors, they are not required to make full and absolute proof of the debtor's insolvency, but may offer evidence tending to show that fact, sufficient at least to make out a prima facie case, and the debtor must then explain or contradict the evidence, if possible, as he is best acquainted with the condition of his own affairs.[416]

As to the admissibility and sufficiency of the evidence, it may be remarked, in the first place, that the insolvency of a person at a particular time cannot be proved by general reputation,[417] nor by the opinion of witnesses, unless the testimony also shows that they are stating conclusions based on their own knowledge of the circumstances.[418] But the inability of a person engaged in business to meet his debts, as shown by his submitting to suit on claims against which he has no defense, especially when coupled with such circumstances as his suspension of business, or the dissolution of a partnership, is strong evidence of insolvency, and may be sufficient, unless completely explained.[419] Admissions of the debtor may also be used against him for this purpose.[420] Thus, evidence of a letter written by the defendant, stating that he was unable to pay his debts, and calling a meeting of his creditors for the purpose of inducing them to accept a compromise, is prima facie proof of his insolvency, and sufficient to sustain a finding against him on that issue, unless overcome by countervailing proof.[421] There may also be cir-

[415] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3d. And see Cummins Grocer Co. v. Talley, 187 Fed. 507, 109 C. C. A. 273, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; McGowan v. Knittel, 137 Fed. 453, 69 C. C. A. 595, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; In re Electron Chemical Co. (D. C.) 208 Fed. 954, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 471.

[416] See In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 197 Fed. 280, 116 C. C. A. 642, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 628; In re Doyle, 199 Fed. 247, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; In re Kassel, 195 Fed. 492, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233; In re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Pub. Co., 13 N. B. R. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 10,559. The bankrupt's books and financial statements, showing an excess of assets over liabilities, may justify a refusal to find him insolvent. N. L. Carpenter & Co. v. Lybrand, 230 Fed. 84, 144 C. C. A. 382, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12.

[417] Stewart v. McMurray, 82 Ala. 269, 3 South. 47; Hurley v. Smith, 1 Hask. 308, Fed. Cas. No. 6,920. See Lakin v. First Nat. Bank, 13 Blatchf. 83, Fed. Cas. No. 7,999.

[418] Brundred v. Paterson Machine Co., 4 N. J. Eq. 294; Royall's Adm'r v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363.

[419] In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; In re Miller, 104 Fed. 764, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140; Mayer v. Hermann, 10 Blatchf. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 9,344. But failure to pay a single debt when due is not sufficient to establish insolvency. Driggs v. Moore, 1 Abb. U. S. 440, 3 N. B. R. 602, Fed. Cas. No. 4,083.

[420] A statement of indebtedness drawn from the books of a corporation, is admissible in evidence in proceedings in bankruptcy against it. Badders Clothing Co. v. Burnham-Munger-Root Dry Goods Co., 228 Fed. 470, 143 C. C. A. 52, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

[421] In re Lange, 97 Fed. 197, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231. A corporate officer's statement to creditors, and request for settlement on the basis of 35 cents on the dollar, may be considered on the question of insolvency, though his authority was not clear. In re Brown Commercial Car Co., 227 Fed. 387, 142 C. C. A. 83, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45.

cumstances in which the debtor would be concluded or estopped by a pleading or a judgment in proceedings in court to which he was a party. But a petition filed in a state court by the directors of a corporation, alleging its insolvency and praying for its dissolution and the appointment of a receiver, is not sufficient ground for a finding of insolvency by a court of bankruptcy in involuntary proceedings subsequently instituted against it, where the rule obtaining in the state courts as to what constitutes insolvency differs from that prescribed by the bankruptcy act.[422] But generally the evidence on this issue must consist of proof, item by item, of the debtor's available assets and their value, and of his valid liabilities and their amount. In neither instance is his own estimate to be accepted as conclusive, nor, on the other hand, is he bound by what the petitioners' witnesses may say, but each disputed item is a proper subject for testimony on both sides,[423] and if there is a wide discrepancy in the opinion of witnesses, all equally trustworthy, as to the value of assets, the doubt must be resolved against the party having the burden of proof.[424] As a hearing of this kind is generally held before a referee, the rule applies as to the effect to be given to his findings and conclusions. "As the referee heard the witnesses," said the court in one case, "his judgment of the relative value and credibility of their testimony is entitled to affirmance under these conditions, unless it appears that it rests upon an erroneous theory of valuation, or controlling testimony was disregarded in his conclusions."[425] Finally, the issue of solvency or insolvency may depend upon a single circumstance, to which the evidence should be confined, as, for instance, whether or not the defendant was a partner in a particular firm, as alleged in the petition,[426] or whether or not all his creditors had entered into and bound themselves by a composition agreement.[427]

§ 175. Examination of Debtor as to Solvency.—Where the act of bankruptcy charged is a preferential transfer of property, or the suffering a creditor to obtain a preference through legal proceedings, and the [422] In re Doscher, 120 Fed. 408, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 547. And see In re Pickens Mfg. Co., 158 Fed. 894, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202.

[423] Bogen & Trummel v. Protter, 129 Fed. 533, 64 C. C. A. 63, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288; In re Bloch, 109 Fed. 790, 48 C. C. A. 650, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; Troy Wagon Works v. Vastbinder, 130 Fed. 232, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352. The court will not, at the outset, determine a question of title, to reduce the alleged bankrupt's apparent assets and show insolvency. Blackstone v. Everybody's Store (C. C. A.) 207 Fed. 752, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497.

[424] In re Gilbert, 112 Fed. 951, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

[425] Chicago Motor Vehicle Co. v. American Oak Leather Co., 141 Fed. 518, 72 C. C. A. 576, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 804.

[426] Buffalo Milling Co. v. Lewisburg Dairy Co., 159 Fed. 319, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 279.

[427] Kinsing v. Bartholew, 1 Dill. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 7,831.

alleged bankrupt takes issue with and denies the allegation of his insolvency, "it shall be his duty to appear in court on the hearing, with his books, papers, and accounts, and submit to an examination, and give testimony as to all matters tending to establish solvency or insolvency, and in case of his failure to so attend and submit to examination the burden of proving his solvency shall rest upon him."[428] It has been held that a simple denial of the fact of insolvency in the answer by an alleged bankrupt (who had previously assigned all his property for the benefit of creditors), unaccompanied by any affidavits, schedules, or other evidence, does not raise such an issue of solvency as is contemplated by the act.[429] But assuming the issue to have been properly raised, the failure of the bankrupt to appear and submit to examination will justify the presumption of insolvency against him.[430] And if he does not appear voluntarily, he may be called and cross-examined by the creditors.[431] If he is engaged in trade, he is required to produce such books, invoices, and other accounts as should properly be kept in his business and which are necessary to show the character and amount of his assets and liabilities,[432] and even where the nature of his business is not such as to require him to keep books of account, in the ordinary or mercantile sense, yet the rule of the statute applies to such papers and accounts as he actually does keep, these being usually the best evidence of the existence of the assets, which he claims and relies on to establish his solvency, and frequently throwing light on their value.[433] Where the bankrupt appears with other witnesses and is examined, and books are produced, but neither the testimony of the witnesses nor the matters shown by the books disclose the actual financial condition of the respondent, this is not a compliance with the requirement of the statute.[434]

[428] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 3d. And see In re American Pub. Co., 15 Okl. 177, 79 Pac. 762; United States v. Coyle (D. C.) 229 Fed. 256; In re Wilkes-Barre Light Co., 208 Fed. 539, 125 C. C. A. 541, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451.

[429] Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[430] In re Perlhefter, 177 Fed. 299, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

[431] In re Coddington, 118 Fed. 281, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243. But see In re Thompson, 179 Fed. 874, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 655, where it is held that an alleged bankrupt cannot be subjected to examination on written interrogatories before adjudication at the instance of petitioning creditors.

[432] Bogen & Trummel v. Protter, 129 Fed. 533, 64 C. C. A. 63, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288. An insolvent debtor who undertakes to raise funds and compound his indebtedness, should keep accurate accounts showing what he receives and disburses, and his failure to do so will count heavily against his assertion of honesty and good faith towards his creditors. In re Bloomberg (D. C.) 253 Fed. 94, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

[433] Cummins Grocer Co. v. Talley, 187 Fed. 507, 109 C. C. A. 273, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[434] In re American Pub. Co., 15 Okl. 177, 79 Pac. 762.

§ 176. Burden of Proof and Evidence.—Except as to the issue of insolvency, as mentioned in the preceding sections, the creditors filing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy are charged with the burden of proving all the facts necessary to warrant an adjudication, in so far as the same are contested or not admitted by the alleged bankrupt, not, indeed, beyond a reasonable doubt, but by a fair preponderance of the evidence.[435] Thus, they must show the jurisdictional facts as to the debtor's residence or maintaining his principal place of business within the district for the requisite length of time, although, in the case of a voluntary petition, if the facts are ambiguous, it is the petitioner who must satisfy the court on this point.[436] So, if the answer filed on behalf of the bankrupt by his guardian or committee alleges his insanity at the time the alleged act of bankruptcy was committed, the burden is on the petitioning creditors to show that the act was done during a lucid interval.[437] They must also prove affirmatively, by a preponderance of evidence, that the person or corporation proceeded against is not within one of the classes specifically exempted from the operation of the bankruptcy act.[438] Likewise the burden is on them, if the point is disputed, to show that they have provable claims against the defendant, and that the same are sufficient in amount to support the petition,[439] although, if the debtor admits the existence of his promissory note in the hands of a petitioning creditor, but alleges that it is invalid because given in a gambling transaction, he must assume the burden of proving his con-

[435] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Rogers Milling Co., 102 Fed. 687, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 540; In re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Pub. Co., 13 N. B. R. 503, Fed. Cas. No. 10,559; In re Scudder, Fed. Cas. No. 12,563; Brock v. Hoppock, 2 N. B. R. 7, Fed. Cas. No. 1,912. Compare In re Price, 8 N. B. R. 514, Fed. Cas. No. 11,411. And see Cameron v. National Surety Co. (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 874, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 67; In re Ponzi (D. C.) 268 Fed. 997, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113; In re Saludes Lumber Co. (D. C.) 273 Fed. 303, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[436] In re Waxelbaum, 97 Fed. 562, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267; In re Tennessee Const. Co., 213 Fed. 33, 129 C. C. A. 627; In re Gurler & Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 1016, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 418.

[437] In re Kehler, 159 Fed. 55, 86 C. C. A. 245, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513.

[438] Walker Roofing & Heating Co. v. Merchant & Evans Co., 173 Fed. 771, 97 C. C. A. 495, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 185; In re Hudson River Electric Power Co., 173 Fed. 934, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 191; Philpot v. O'Brion, 126 Fed. 167, 61 C. C. A. 111, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; In re Pilger, 118 Fed. 206, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Lake Jackson Sugar Co., 129 Fed. 640; United States v. Freed, 179 Fed. 236, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; In re Leland, 185 Fed. 830, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209; American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Brinkley (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 411, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438; In re Driver (D. C.) 252 Fed. 956, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 106.

[439] In re Crafts-Riordon Shoe Co., 185 Fed. 931, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re Morgan & Williams, 184 Fed. 938, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 861; In re Borelli & Callahan, 142 Fed. 296, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115; In re Ferguson, 127 Fed. 407, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371; In re Lewis F. Perry & Whitney Co., 172 Fed. 745, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 772; Ex parte Foster, 5 Law Rep. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 4,959; Emerine v. Tarault, 219 Fed. 68, 134 C. C. A.

tention.[440] So also, if the proceeding is against persons alleged to constitute a partnership, the burden of proving the partnership is on the creditors.[441]

The creditors must also assume the burden of proving the commission of an act of bankruptcy. This is absolutely essential, and there can be no adjudication until the fact is satisfactorily proved or admitted.[442] But if two distinct matters are alleged conjunctively, each of which constitutes an act of bankruptcy sufficient to warrant an adjudication, it is enough if either of them be satisfactorily proven.[443] But creditors cannot travel outside their petition, and they will not be permitted to adduce evidence of acts of bankruptcy not therein alleged.[444] As to the admissibility and weight of evidence on these points, the ordinary rules prevail. It is said that, where a fraudulent transfer of property is charged as an act of bankruptcy, great latitude in the admission of evidence should be allowed on the trial, and all the circumstances fairly connected with the transaction may be shown.[445] The declarations, admissions, and letters of the respondent may be admitted as evidence against him.[446] And where the only proof of an act of bankruptcy given by the creditors is a statement of the bankrupt, such statement must be accepted, in its entirety, as true, and if it admits a transaction which would constitute an act of bankruptcy if not explained, but also includes an explanation, the latter as well as the former part of the statement must be taken as true.[447] The bankrupt's own testimony may be contradicted and impeached, but the uncorroborated testimony of a 606, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; In re Spengler (D. C.) 238 Fed. 862, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

[440] Hill v. Levy, 98 Fed. 94, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 374.

[441] Jones v. Burnham, Williams & Co., 138 Fed. 986, 71 C. C. A. 240, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 85; Lott v. Young, 109 Fed. 798, 48 C. C. A. 654, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Samuels, 215 Fed. 845, 132 C. C. A. 187. In bankruptcy proceedings against a partnership, the court has no concern with an alleged issue of fraud by which a partner had been induced to enter the firm. In re Mitchell & Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 778, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814.

[442] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Brown, 15 N. B. R. 416, Fed. Cas. No. 1,981; In re Safe-Deposit & Sav. Inst., 7 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 12,211; Lennox v. Allen-Lane Co., 167 Fed. 114, 92 C. C. A. 566, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; Jones v. Coates, 196 Fed. 860, 116 C. C. A. 422, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 249. In re Condon, 209 Fed. 800, 126 C. C. A. 524, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754. Creditors alleging that the debtor has admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts and his willingness to be adjudged a bankrupt have the burden of proving such allegations. Albers Commission Co. v. Richter, 251 Fed. 869, 164 C. C. A. 85, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 157.

[443] In re Drummond, 1 N. B. R. 231, Fed. Cas. No. 4,093.

[444] In re Sykes, 5 Biss. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 13,708; Ex parte Potts, Crabbe, 469, Fed. Cas. No. 11,344; Ex parte Shouse, Crabbe, 482, Fed. Cas. No. 12,815.

[445] In re Luber, 152 Fed. 492, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476.

[446] In re Hatje, 6 Biss. 436, 12 N. B. R. 548, Fed. Cas. No. 6,215.

[447] In re Franklin, 8 Ben. 233, Fed. Cas. No. 5,053.

single witness to a declaration stated to have been made by the bankrupt will not prevail as against his positive denial supported by other witnesses.[448] Where the act of bankruptcy alleged is the appointment of a receiver because of insolvency, the record of the court which appointed the receiver is admissible to show the fact and the reason,[449] and its recitals cannot be contradicted by evidence aliunde.[450]

A transfer, removal, or concealment of property, in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy, must have been effected "with intent" to hinder or defraud creditors, or "with intent" to give a preference, as the case may be. To make out a case for adjudication, therefore, it is necessary for the petitioning creditors to show not only the fact of transfer, concealment, etc., but also the intent of the debtor with reference to defrauding creditors or giving a preference.[451] This need not be, and ordinarily cannot be, established by direct testimony. But his conduct, actions, financial situation, and the method of dealing adopted by him on a particular occasion may be shown, and such an intent inferred therefrom, provided a careful examination of all the details warrants such an inference.[452] Or, as the authorities generally hold, where the actual and necessary result of a payment or transfer of property is to give a preference to a particular creditor, a showing of this fact raises a presumption that a preference was intended by the debtor and casts upon [448] In re Foster, 126 Fed. 1014, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 131.

[449] Blue Mountain Iron & Steel Co. v. Portner, 131 Fed. 57, 65 C. C. A. 295, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559. See In re Muir (D. C.) 212 Fed. 495, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528. Where the act of bankruptcy alleged is that because of insolvency a receiver was put in charge of the debtor's property, the issue is not directly that of insolvency, but whether the receiver was appointed on that ground. In re Maplecroft Mills (D. C.) 218 Fed. 659, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815. Where the record of a state court showed that the appointment of a receiver for a corporation was made because the corporation was insolvent, petitioners in involuntary bankruptcy against the corporation need not prove its insolvency and the appointment of a receiver for that reason, except by the record of the proceedings in the state court. Greenwood Gum Co. v. Zimmerman, 240 Fed. 637, 153 C. C. A. 635, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 198. Evidence that certain of a corporation's agents and its counsel procured a creditor to file a bill for the appointment of receivers does not show that the corporation committed an act of bankruptcy by procuring such appointment, in the absence of evidence that the agents and the counsel were authorized so to do by the directors acting as a board, or that their acts were ratified by the stockholders with full knowledge. In re Wm. S. Butler & Co., 207 Fed. 705, 125 C. C. A. 223, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[450] In re Edward Ellsworth Co., 173 Fed. 699, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[451] Clark v. Henne & Meyer, 127 Fed. 288, 62 C. C. A. 172, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 583; Cunningham v. Cady, 13 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 3,480; In re King, 10 N. B. R. 103, Fed. Cas. No. 7,783; Cribben & Sexton Co. v. North End House Furnishing Co., 222 Fed. 830, 138 C. C. A. 256, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474. Johnson-Baillie Shoe Co. v. Bardsley, Elmer & Nichols, 237 Fed. 763, 150 C. C. A. 517, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492; Houghton Wool Co. v. Morris, 249 Fed. 434, 161 C. C. A. 408, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 271; Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 854, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[452] Strauss v. Abrahams, 32 Fed. 310.

him the burden of exculpating himself.[453] And so, where the actual and necessary result of a conveyance or mortgage is to hinder and delay creditors or put property out of their reach, a fraudulent intent on the part of the debtor will be presumed, and he must assume the burden of proving his good faith.[454] But this presumption is not conclusive. It is rebuttable by the defendant, and he must be permitted to introduce evidence explaining the transaction and negativing the alleged fraudulent intention.[455] And he will succeed in this if he can show that he was ignorant of his insolvency and that his affairs were in such condition that he could reasonably expect to pay all his debts in full.[456] Moreover, the presumption of a fraudulent or preferential intent varies in intensity with the circumstances of the particular case. It is affected by the amount involved, and is not of great strength where the transfer involved a comparatively small part of the debtor's property.[457] Thus, although the debtor was certainly insolvent, the fact that he paid a sum of less than three dollars in settlement of a current store bill in the usual course of such dealings, where his total indebtedness amounted to thirteen thousand dollars, cannot raise a presumption of an intent to give a preference, as against his own testimony that the payment was not made with any such intention.[458]

§ 177. Discontinuance and Dismissal of Proceedings.—As originally enacted, the bankruptcy act provided that creditors should be entitled to at least ten days' notice by mail of the proposed dismissal of the proceedings (section 58), and that "a voluntary or involuntary petition shall not be dismissed by the petitioner or petitioners or for want of prosecution or by consent of parties until after notice to the creditors" (section 59g). This was a departure from the rule prevailing under the former statute, by which a petitioning creditor could discontinue the proceedings and have his petition dismissed before adjudication, without giving notice to any other creditors of the alleged bankrupt.[459] Now, [453] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Bloch, 109 Fed. 790, 48 C. C. A. 650, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; In re Gilbert, 112 Fed. 951, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

[454] Lansing Boiler & Engine Works v. Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, 128 Fed. 701, 63 C. C. A. 253, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558.

[455] Lansing Boiler & Engine Works v. Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, 128 Fed. 701, 63 C. C. A. 253, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558; Ex parte Potts, Crabbe, 469, Fed. Cas. No. 11,344.

[456] In re Rome Planing Mill, 96 Fed. 812, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 123; In re Pangborn, 185 Fed. 673, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Bloch, 109 Fed. 790, 48 C. C. A. 650, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; Wager v. Hall, 16 Wall. 584, 21 L. Ed. 504; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 40, 20 L. Ed. 481; Macon Grocery Co. v. Beach, 156 Fed. 1009, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558.

[457] In re Gilbert, 112 Fed. 951, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

[458] Macon Grocery Co. v. Beach, 156 Fed. 1009, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 558.

[459] In re Camden Rolling Mill Co., 3 N. B. R. 590, Fed. Cas. No. 2,338.

however, the notice to creditors is indispensable, and the dismissal of the proceedings without giving such notice is erroneous and reversible for error, if not absolutely void.[460] But it was held that no such notice was necessary where no list of creditors had been filed and no creditors other than the petitioners had intervened or appeared in any way in the proceedings, since, in such a case the court would have no means of knowing whether there were any other creditors or their names or addresses, and therefore could not give them notice.[461] Probably in consequence of these decisions, an amendment was added to the statute in 1910, by which it was provided that "the court shall, before entertaining an application for dismissal, require the bankrupt to file a list, under oath, of all his creditors, with their addresses, and shall cause notice to be sent to all such creditors of the pendency of such application, and shall delay the hearing thereon for a reasonable time to allow all creditors and parties in interest opportunity to be heard." [462] Both this amendment and the original section relate only to dismissals which withdraw the case without its having been submitted to the court for decision on the merits, and not to dismissals which follow as the result of a trial or hearing on the merits.[463]

Since the new equity rules have abolished demurrers, it should be remembered that a motion to dismiss a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is in the nature of, or takes the place of, a demurrer, so that, in determining it, the facts alleged in the petition will be considered as true.[464] And though the petition may be defective, yet if the defect could easily be cured, it should not be dismissed without opportunity given to amend.[465] But it is the duty of the court to dismiss the proceedings where it appears that there is a want of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant,[466] or that there is a want of sufficient petitioning creditors,[467] or where, the case being submitted on the petition and [460] In re Plymouth Cordage Co., 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665; In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 10 Ariz. 42, 85 Pac. 653.

[461] In re Levi & Klauber, 142 Fed. 962, 74 C. C. A. 132, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294; In re Jemison Mercantile Co., 112 Fed. 966, 50 C. C. A. 641, 7 Am. Bankr Rep. 588.

[462] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, § 10, 32 Stat. 838; Luxury Fruit Co. v. Harris, 217 Fed. 740, 133 C. C. A. 434, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228. But see In re Mason-Seaman Transp. Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 974, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677, holding that notice of motion to dismiss need not be served on all creditors, where it is opposed by the petitioning creditors, who are few in number and not joined by the great majority of the creditors.

[463] Neustadter v. Chicago Dry Goods Co., 96 Fed. 830, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

[464] Graham Mfg. Co. v. Davy-Pocahontas Coal Co., 238 Fed. 488, 151 C. C. A. 424, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118.

[465] Doty v. Mason (D. C.) 244 Fed. 587, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58.

[466] In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392. See In re Tully, 156 Fed. 634, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[467] Cummins Grocer Co. v. Talley, 187 Fed. 507, 109 C. C. A. 273, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484; In re Tribelhorn, 137 Fed. 3, 69 C. C. A. 601, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 491.

answer, and the averments of the answer being therefore taken as true, it sufficiently negatives the commission of an act of bankruptcy.[468] So if, after the institution of involuntary proceedings, the debtor files his own voluntary petition, and all the creditors, including the first petitioners, come in and prove their claims, under the last petition, this must be taken as a waiver of the involuntary petition, and it should be dismissed.[469] Moreover, it is in the discretion of the court, though perhaps not its imperative duty, to dismiss a petition in voluntary bankruptcy which schedules no debts which would be barred by a discharge,[470] or where the petitioner's only purpose is to try again for a discharge from the same debts which were listed in previous proceedings, wherein he failed to apply for a discharge or in which a discharge was denied.[471] But it is not ground for dismissing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy that the petitioning creditor, since filing the petition, has begun a suit at law against the bankrupt and prosecuted it to judgment.[472]

The court also has discretionary power to dismiss a petition in involuntary bankruptcy for want of prosecution.[473] And this may also be done, in proper cases, upon the consent or agreement of the parties concerned. But the court must be a party to it, and a discontinuance by consent can be obtained only by an order of the court upon a special application,[474] made before an adjudication has passed, for after that it is too late to settle with the debtor and drop the proceedings.[475] A voluntary petitioner in bankruptcy may be permitted to withdraw his [468] In re Doddy Jourdan & Co., 127 Fed. 771, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 344.

[469] In re Nounnan & Orr, 1 Utah, 44. But see In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392. Where an alleged bankrupt resists an involuntary proceeding, a judgment of dismissal is not res judicata nor a bar to a subsequent voluntary proceeding. In re Lachenmaier, 203 Fed. 32, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[470] In re Colaluca, 133 Fed. 255, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 292; In re Shepardson (D. C.) 220 Fed. 186, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[471] Kuntz v. Young, 131 Fed. 719, 65 C. C. A. 477, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505; In re Elby, 157 Fed. 935, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

[472] Van Kleeck v. Thurber, Fed. Cas. No. 16,861.

[473] In re Levi & Klauber, 142 Fed. 962, 74 C. C. A. 132, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294; In re Camden Rolling Mill Co., 3 N. B. R. 590, Fed. Cas. No. 2,338; In re Connecticut Brass & Mfg. Corp. (D. C.) 257 Fed. 445, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376; In re Puget Sound Engineering Co. (D. C.) 270 Fed. 353, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 310.

[474] In re Buchanan, 10 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 2,073. A bankruptcy court will not set aside a stipulation discontinuing the bankruptcy proceedings given upon a release procured by fraud, until relief is sought in a court having jurisdiction to set aside the release for fraud or to award damages. In re Bieler, 7 N. B. R. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 1,394. Where proceedings before the referee on an involuntary petition warrant an inference that the failure of petitioners to produce any proof may be pursuant to an agreement amounting to consent of parties to a dismissal, the referee should investigate the question. In re Chalfen (D. C.) 223 Fed. 379, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

[475] In re Sherburne, 1 N. B. R. 558, Fed. Cas. No. 12,758.

petition if there are no creditors who have proved their claims or who object to that course,[476] but he cannot have the petition dismissed against the protest and objection of any creditor.[477] Similarly, in involuntary proceedings, the petition may be dismissed when the bankrupt desires it and all the creditors will consent.[478] If the petitioning creditors desire to withdraw their petition, they are entitled to do so unless some other creditor objects, and cannot be prevented by the bankrupt's own objection, though he may desire an adjudication for the purpose of making secure some after-acquired property.[479] But if one or more of the petitioning creditors insists upon an adjudication being made, or an intervening creditor protests and shows cause against a dismissal, it cannot be ordered if the statutory grounds for an adjudication exist and no fraud, mistake, or oppression is shown.[480] And a trustee in bankruptcy (if one has been appointed) may appear and answer an application for dismissal.[481] This is the strict rule, and undoubtedly it is well supported by the authorities. Yet there are some indications of a disposition towards a more equitable solution of such cases. In a recent decision, where a bankrupt moved to dismiss the involuntary proceedings against him, and gave the required notice to all the creditors, and all but one of them freely assented to a dismissal, it was held that the petition was properly dismissed. It was said: "The first duty of the bankruptcy court is to administer or dispose of the estate in the interest of the creditors, and where practically all of them assent to dismissal, either affirmatively or by failure to oppose, and the statutory three creditors are not found insisting on a continuance of the proceeding and no deception is suggested to have been practised on the creditors, it should be dismissed."[482] It should also be noted, as the rule prevailing under the act of 1867, that where a majority of the creditors desire a dismissal of the proceeding, it may be so ordered upon their giving proper security for the payment of the objecting or non-assenting creditors.[483]

[476] In re Hebbart, 104 Fed. 322, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 8.

[477] In re Smith, 155 Fed. 688, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re McKee (D. C.) 214 Fed. 885. A voluntary bankruptcy proceeding will not be dismissed because instituted to escape payment of alimony and contempt proceedings in a state court, since a dismissal would merely invite involuntary proceedings against the bankrupt and result in no advantage to his wife. In re Pyatt (D. C.) 257 Fed. 362.

[478] In re Miller, 1 N. B. R. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 9,553; Bernard v. Abel, 156 Fed. 649, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 383.

[479] In re Weidenfeld (D. C.) 257 Fed. 872, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 62.

[480] In re Cronin, 98 Fed. 584, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552; In re Lewis, 129 Fed. 147, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683; In re Mendenhall, 9 N. B. R. 380, Fed. Cas. No. 9,424.

[481] In re Pennsylvania Consol. Coal Co., 163 Fed. 579, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872.

[482] In re Rosenblatt & Co. (C. C. A.) 193 Fed. 638, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

[483] In re Indianapolis, C. & L. R. Co.,

As to the persons entitled to move for a dismissal, it has been held that, where one of several partners filed a petition seeking the adjudication of the firm and himself as bankrupts, persons who denied that they were members of the firm had no standing to complain that their motion to dismiss was denied.[484] The mere fact that a corporation adjudged a bankrupt may be able to pay its creditors in full is not ground for dismissing the proceedings, although an attempt has been made by one creditor to use the bankruptcy court in an improper way.[485] Though the court of bankruptcy has expressed an opinion indicating its purpose to dismiss an involuntary petition, yet where no order of dismissal has been drawn, as directed by the opinion, the petition is not dismissed but remains pending.[486]

A petition which has been erroneously or improvidently dismissed may be reinstated and the proceedings resumed, but only when proper notice has been given to the defendant or he has appeared,[487] and not where creditors have shown an unreasonable dilatoriness in applying for such reinstatement,[488] nor where such dismissal was ordered after a trial or hearing on the merits.[489]

§ 178. Death or Insanity of Bankrupt Before Adjudication.—The eighth section of the statute provides that "the death or insanity of a bankrupt shall not abate the proceedings, but the same shall be conducted and concluded in the same manner, so far as possible, as though he had not died or become insane." From other provisions of the act we learn that the term "bankrupt" may include one who has filed his voluntary petition or against whom a petition has been filed, and that "bankruptcy," with reference to time, also refers to the filing of the petition. Hence it follows that, when once the petition is duly filed, the proceedings are saved from discontinuance upon the subsequent death of the defendant, even though that occurs before the service of process, or, after service, at any time before adjudication.[490] But thereupon his

5 Biss. 287, 8 N. B. R. 302, Fed. Cas. No. 7,023; In re Great Western Tel. Co., 5 Biss. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 5,739. And see In re Baxter & Co., 154 Fed. 22, 83 C. C. A. 106, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450.

484 In re Fook Woh & Co. (D. C.) 232 Fed. 483, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

485 In re Jamaica Slate Roofing & Supply Co., 197 Fed. 240, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 763.

486 In re C. Jutte & Co., 258 Fed. 422, 169 C. C. A. 438, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

487 Gage v. Gates, 62 Mo. 412, 15 N. B. R. 145.

488 In re Jemison Mercantile Co., 112 Fed. 966, 50 C. C. A. 641, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 588.

489 Neustadter v. Chicago Dry Goods Co., 96 Fed. 830, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

490 In re Spalding, 139 Fed. 244, 71 C. C. A. 370, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 129; In re Hicks, 107 Fed. 910, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; Shute v. Patterson, 147 Fed. 509, 78 C. C. A. 75, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99; In re Agnew (D. C.) 225 Fed. 650, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709. And see Home Buyers' Building & Loan Ass'n v. Peterman, 253 Pa. 418, 98 Atl. 619. Contra under act of 1867, see Frazier v. Mc-heirs and personal representatives should be brought in and made parties before an adjudication.[491] So, after a petition has been filed against partners, the decease of one of them prior to any adjudication upon the question of bankruptcy is no legal cause for dismissing the petition.[492] The act of 1867 required a bankrupt, on applying for his discharge, to make oath that he had done nothing which would be cause for withholding the discharge, and it was held that this was an indispensable prerequisite to the granting of a discharge, and hence, that if the bankrupt died before taking this oath, no discharge could be granted.[493] The present statute contains no such requirement, and it seems probable that the heirs and representatives of a deceased bankrupt might obtain a discharge from liability for his debts; but the point is undecided. The death of the bankrupt, however, makes this further difference in the settlement of his estate, that it is to be distributed according to the bankruptcy law, and not according to the state law which otherwise would be applicable.[494] As to insanity, the rule is that if an alleged bankrupt commits an act of bankruptcy while sane, and by reason of a petition founded on such act the court of bankruptcy obtains jurisdiction of a proceeding against him, it will continue the proceedings notwithstanding his supervening insanity; but if the bankrupt was insane when the alleged act of bankruptcy was committed, no adjudication of bankruptcy can properly be made against him.[495]

§ 179. Trial by Jury.—The respondent in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy has the right to a trial by jury in respect to the question of his insolvency (where that is a fact material to the maintenance of the petition), and in respect to the commission of the act or acts of bankruptcy alleged in the petition, provided he files a written application therefor at or before the time within which an answer may be filed.[496] This right is expressly limited to the alleged bankrupt himself. Creditors may intervene and contest the issue and oppose the adjudication, but they cannot demand a trial by jury if the defendant himself does not

Donald, 8 N. B. R. 237, Fed. Cas. No. 5,073. But compare In re Litchfield, 7 Ben. 259, 9 N. B. R. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 8,385.

[491] Shute v. Patterson, 147 Fed. 509, 78 C. C. A. 75, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99.

[492] Hunt v. Pooke, 5 N. B. R. 161, Fed. Cas. No. 6,896.

[493] In re Gunike, 4 N. B. R. 92, Fed. Cas. No. 5,868; In re Quinike, 2 Ben. 354, Fed. Cas. No. 11,514; In re O'Farrell, 3 Ben. 191, 2 N. B. R. 484, Fed. Cas. No. 10,446. Under the present statute (§ 8) it is held that, on the death of a bankrupt, his administrator may file an application for a discharge. In re Agnew (D. C.) 225 Fed. 650, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 709.

[494] In re Devlin, 180 Fed. 170, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 863.

[495] In re Kehler, 159 Fed. 55, 86 C. C. A. 245, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; In re Ward, 194 Fed. 174, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29.

[496] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 19a. A trial by jury upon a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is confined to the issue of insolvency and whether acts of bank-ask it.[497] Moreover, the bankrupt, in order to be entitled to this mode of trial, must enter his appearance and file his answer at the proper time.[498] And he must apply for a jury in the manner pointed out by the statute and within the time there limited. If he does not, he will be deemed to have waived his privilege in this respect and cannot afterwards demand it.[499] In that case, it is the province of the judge to determine all the issues arising upon the petition and answer without the intervention of a jury.[500] It is also held that if the alleged bankrupt files a general demurrer to the petition, which is overruled after argument, it is then too late for him to file a general denial and demand a trial by jury; it is then in the discretion of the court either to adjudge him bankrupt forthwith or to allow him to answer over on terms.[501]

It will be observed that jury trial is given as of right only in the two cases specified in the statute, namely, on the issue of solvency or insolvency and on that as to the commission of an act of bankruptcy. If the respondent admits or does not traverse the allegations of the petition concerning these matters, but takes issue on the ground that the petitioner is not a creditor of his, that he does not owe him the debt alleged, or that it is not a debt provable in bankruptcy, he cannot demand a trial by jury.[502] So where he chooses to contest the proceeding on the ground that he is a farmer or a wage-earner and therefore not amenable to involuntary bankruptcy; this is not an issue on which he is entitled as of right to a jury trial.[503] And so of the question whether one of the respondents was in fact a member of the partnership against which the proceedings are directed.[504] As to these and other similar matters, it is always in the discretion of the court to refer a disputed issue to a jury, but it cannot be demanded as of right, and the verdict is advisory only and not necessarily conclusive on the ruptcy were committed. Walker Grain Co. v. Gregg Grain Co (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 510, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121.

[497] In re Herzikopf, 121 Fed. 544, 57 C. C. A. 606, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745.

[498] In re Gebhardt, 3 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 5,294.

[499] In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128; Bray v. Cobb, 91 Fed. 102, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Sherry, 8 N. B. R. 142; In re Hunter, 3 McLean, 297, Fed. Cas. No. 6,902. Where the bankrupt does not demand a jury trial in his answer, it is not an abuse of the court's discretion to refuse such a demand, though made with due promptness afterwards. In re Wester, 242 Fed. 465, 155 C. C. A. 241, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89.

[500] Carpenter v. Cudd, 174 Fed. 603, 98 C. C. A. 449, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[501] In re Benham, 8 N. B. R. 94.

[502] Phelps v. Clasen, Woolw. 204, 3 N. B. R. 87, Fed. Cas. No. 11,074; Morss v. Franklin Coal Co., 125 Fed. 998, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423; Ex parte Foster, 5 Law Rep. 406, Fed. Cas. No. 4,959.

[503] Carpenter v. Cudd, 174 Fed. 603, 98 C. C. A. 449, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Stephens v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 154 Fed. 341, 83 C. C. A. 119, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 560.

[504] In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128; In re Flaherty (D. C.) 265 Fed. 741, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638; In re Samuels & Lesser (D. C.) 207 Fed. 195, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

court.[505] And so, in general, "in cases of bankruptcy, many incidental questions arise in the course of administering the bankrupt's estate, which ordinarily would be pure cases at law, and in respect of their facts triable by jury, but, as belonging to the bankruptcy proceedings, they become cases over which the bankruptcy court, which acts as a court of equity, exercises exclusive control. The bankruptcy court may, and in cases peculiarly requiring such a course will, direct an action or an issue at law to aid it in arriving at a right conclusion. But this rests in its sound discretion." [506]

As to the issue of insolvency, this involves as elements the question of the amount of indebtedness and the fair valuation of the bankrupt's property, both of which he is entitled to have determined by a jury; and the court cannot make a preliminary finding as to the validity and amount of the claims of certain creditors which will be conclusive on the jury on the trial of such issue.[507] As to the issue of the commission of an act of bankruptcy, the question whether or not the defendant made a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors is a question of fact on which he is entitled to demand a jury.[508] And so, in respect to the fourth act of bankruptcy, it is proper to submit to a jury the questions whether the respondent was insolvent, whether receivers were appointed because of such insolvency, and whether such receivers took charge and possession of his property and still continue to hold it.[509] But where the act of bankruptcy charged is a transfer of property with intent to prefer a creditor, and the answer admits the respondent's insolvency and the act charged, but merely denies the intent, this does not raise such an issue as to entitle him to a trial by jury.[510]

The statute further provides that "if a jury is not in attendance upon the court, one may be specially summoned for the trial, or the case may be postponed." [511] The court may therefore, in its discretion, issue a special venire and impanel a jury to try the issue, at any time, without regard to the question of its being term-time or vacation in the district court proper.[512] The proceedings on a jury trial held under [505] Carpenter v. Cudd, 174 Fed. 603, 98 C. C. A. 449, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Oil Well Supply Co. v. Hall, 128 Fed. 875, 63 C. C. A. 343, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; In re Naasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128; Morrison v. Rieman, 249 Fed. 97, 161 C. C. A. 149, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 325.

[506] Barton v. Barbour, 104 U. S. 126, 26 L. Ed. 672.

[507] Schloss v. Strellow, 156 Fed. 662, 84 C. C. A. 374, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 359.

[508] Day v. Beck & Gregg Hardware Co., 114 Fed. 834, 52 C. C. A. 468, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175.

[509] Blue Mountain Iron & Steel Co. v. Portner, 131 Fed. 57, 65 C. C. A. 295, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559.

[510] In re Harris, 155 Fed. 216, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204.

[511] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 19b.

[512] In re Findlay, 5 Biss. 480, 9 N. B. R. 83, Fed. Cas. No. 4,789; Lehman v. Strassberger, 2 Woods, 554, Fed. Cas. No. 8,216.

this provision of the bankruptcy act are the same in form as on the trial of an ordinary action at law in a federal court,[513] and if error is committed, it can only be reviewed on an application for a new trial or on a writ of error, and not by appeal.[514]

§ 180. Trial or Hearing; Conduct of Proceedings.—Where a trial by jury is not demanded, or is not demandable of right, as noted in the preceding section, it is for the judge of the court of bankruptcy to determine the issues presented by the pleadings. But if disputed questions of fact arise, he may refer them to a special master or to a referee in bankruptcy, to ascertain and report the facts,[515] and the report is entitled to the very greatest consideration and, if responsive to the reference, will ordinarily be regarded as conclusive and not to be set aside at the mere discretion of the court.[516] It is also within the authority of the court of bankruptcy to grant continuances or adjournments under proper circumstances,[517] and the want of an adjournment to a day certain, after issue joined as to the acts of bankruptcy alleged, does not terminate the proceedings.[518] If the issues have been tried by a jury, the court has the same power over the verdict as a court of common law, and may set it aside and order a new trial for cause shown,[519] or may award a new trial on the ground of error in its own instructions.[520] Similarly, it may, if deemed best, order the consolidation of different petitions in bankruptcy filed by different creditors against the [513] In re Ward, 161 Fed. 755, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482; Morss v. Franklin Coal Co., 125 Fed. 998, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423; In re Jelsh, 9 N. B. R. 412, Fed. Cas. No. 7,257.

[514] In re Neasmith, 147 Fed. 160, 77 C. C. A. 402, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 128. And see supra, § 40.

[515] W. A. Gage & Co. v. Bell, 124 Fed. 371, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 696; Lackawanna Leather Co. v. La Porte Carriage Co., 211 Fed. 318, 127 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; In re C. W. Bartleson Co. (D. C.) 243 Fed. 1001, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13; United States v. Coyle (D. C.) 229 Fed. 256; In re Lenoir-Cross & Co. (D. C.) 226 Fed. 227, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774. Where a bankrupt's assignment of accounts was preferential, and the transaction was very complicated, the account should be submitted to a special master to determine a disposition of it and state the same. Chapman v. Hunt (D. C.) 248 Fed. 160, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482. Intervening creditors are not entitled as of right to a re-reference of the question whether the original petitioners had sufficient claims against the alleged bankrupt, on a mere suggestion of collusion, but such re-reference may be granted by the court. In re Smith (D. C.) 232 Fed. 284, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637.

[516] In re El Sevilla Restaurant (D. C.) 253 Fed. 410, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re J. W. Lavery & Son (D. C.) 244 Fed. 959, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 807; In re Murphy (D. C.) 225 Fed. 392, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635; In re Senoia Duck Mills (D. C.) 193 Fed. 711; Philpot v. O'Brien, 126 Fed. 167, 61 C. C. A. 111, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; In re Ponzi (D. C.) 268 Fed. 997, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113.

[517] In re Cohen, 131 Fed. 391, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439; In re Pupke, 1 Ben. 342, Fed. Cas. No. 11,468.

[518] In re Buchanan, 10 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 2,073.

[519] In re De Forest, 9 N. B. R. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 3,745; Ex parte Corse, Fed. Cas. No. 3,254.

[520] In re Marks Bros., 135 Fed. 448, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 830.

same debtor,[521] but involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy against an individual cannot be changed, during their pendency and after testimony has been taken, by a mere order amending the title, so as to embrace also a proceeding against a partnership of which the original defendant is one member.[522] Where a bankrupt against whom an involuntary petition is pending files a voluntary petition, notice should be given to the creditors filing the involuntary petition before any action on the voluntary one, and such action should then be taken with respect to the two petitions as appears to be for the best interest of the estate. Thus, it would not be proper to make an adjudication on the voluntary petition and dismiss the other, where the result would be to prevent the successful impeachment of certain conveyances alleged to be preferential.[523] A court of bankruptcy also has power to make proper orders respecting the pleadings.[524] But the rule is that if the petitioning creditors move for an adjudication on the petition and answer, they thereby admit the facts properly pleaded in the answer, in accordance with the general rules of equity practice, and the only question presented is as to the legal sufficiency of the answer; and if the motion is denied, the defendant is entitled to a final decree dismissing the petition.[525]

§ 181. Adjudication.—If the alleged bankrupt or any of his creditors shall appear within the time limited and controvert the facts alleged in the petition, the judge is to determine, as soon as may be, the issues presented by the pleadings, without the intervention of a jury, except in cases where a trial by jury is granted by law and is seasonably demanded, and either make the adjudication or dismiss the petition. But if no pleadings are filed before or on the last day allowed by law for that purpose, the judge is to make the adjudication or dismiss the petition, on the next day or as soon thereafter as may be practicable. But if he is absent from the district, or the division of the district in which the petition is pending, on that day, and no pleadings have been filed, the clerk shall forthwith refer the case to the referee.[526] Thus it ap-

[521] In re McCracken & McLeod, 129 Fed. 621, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 95; Salt Lake Valley Canning Co. v. Collins, 176 Fed. 91, 99 C. C. A. 611, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716.

[522] In re Kaufman, 176 Fed. 93, 99 C. C. A. 107, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 429.

[523] In re Dwyer, 112 Fed. 777, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532.

[524] Young & Holland Co. v. Brande Bros., 162 Fed. 663, 89 C. C. A. 455, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612.

[525] In re Waugh, 133 Fed. 281, 66 C. C. A. 659, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 187; In re Taylor, 102 Fed. 728, 42 C. C. A. 1, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515. The alleged bankrupt cannot have the case set down for hearing on the petition and answer. In re Fineman (D. C.) 223 Fed. 652, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 245.

[526] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 18d, e, f, g.

pears that if no pleadings have been filed on behalf of the bankrupt or any of his creditors, and the petition is sufficient on its face, it is the duty of the judge to make an adjudication of bankruptcy.[527] It is also the plain purpose of the act that there shall be absolutely no unnecessary delay in disposing of the petition. If an unreasonably long time elapses after the filing of the pleadings, without any attempt either on the part of the petitioning creditors or the court to bring the matter to a final determination, and more especially if creditors are allowed to take their own course, outside the bankruptcy proceedings, in regard to reorganizing the debtor's business and distributing his property, it may be concluded that the court of bankruptcy has lost its jurisdiction over the case, and a state court will be justified in entertaining and proceeding with an attachment suit of a single creditor.[528]

The adjudication of bankruptcy, for which an official form has been provided (No. 12), is an order or decree of the court of bankruptcy, reciting the hearing and consideration of the petition and concluding that the respondent "is hereby declared and adjudged bankrupt accordingly." The entry of the order constitutes the adjudication; but a mere memorandum of the judge on the petition directing an order to be entered does not complete it.[529] An adjudication of bankruptcy relates back to the date of the filing of the petition.[530]

An order or judgment refusing to make the adjudication asked for may no doubt be opened for a rehearing, but this will not be done where the motion simply repeats the petitioners' original charge of in-

[527] In re Black Diamond Copper Min. Co., 10 Ariz. 42, 85 Pac. 653.

[528] Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co., 222 U. S. 300, 32 Sup. Ct. 96, 56 L. Ed. 208, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262. Herein it was said: "It was the duty of the bankruptcy court, if it intended to administer the property under the bankruptcy law, to promptly determine the question of adjudication, to proceed with the selection of a trustee and the administration and distribution of the estate, as required by the act. This it evidently declined to do, and permitted the creditors' committee, which had been organized for the avowed purpose of defeating court proceedings, to administer the estate, to buy and sell property, and mature a plan for the reorganization of the concern. This may have been for the benefit of the creditors, but it was not the administration of the law as laid down in the bankruptcy act. It is not within the province of the bankruptcy court to deny an adjudication in bankruptcy, and then hold jurisdiction over the property for the purpose of allowing some of the creditors to effect a reorganization and distribution of the property. We cannot say that we think the Supreme Court of Missouri was wrong, indeed we think it was right, in reaching the conclusion that the district court had declined to adjudicate the corporation a bankrupt and vest its property in a trustee, and, deeming it best for the creditors to follow out their plans, had found that the case was not one calling for the intervention of the bankruptcy court."

[529] In re Hill, 7 Ben. 378, 10 N. B. R. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 6,484.

[530] In re Bear, Fed. Cas. No. 1,177; Smith v. Brinkerhoff, 6 N. Y. 305.

solvency without disclosing any new evidence to combat that offered by the respondent.[531] The pendency of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to make an adjudication on a voluntary petition subsequently filed, but if this is done, the right of the petitioning creditors to set aside a preferential transfer should be preserved by the order.[532] An adjudication in bankruptcy may perhaps be amended like any other judgment, but not, it seems, after the time for taking an appeal has expired.[533]

§ 182. Conclusiveness and Effect of Adjudication.—A decree of a federal district court sitting in bankruptcy, upon a petition in involuntary proceedings, whereby the debtor is adjudged and declared a bankrupt, is in the nature of a decree in rem, since it determines his legal status in that respect, and is therefore notice, of itself, to all creditors, and is conclusive evidence that all the facts necessary to sustain the decree were proved before the court.[534] All the creditors of a bankrupt are at least constructively parties to the proceeding to have him so adjudged, and are conclusively bound by the adjudication, at least in so far as it determines the fact of his insolvency and his commission of the act of bankruptcy charged.[535] In particular, the insolvency of the debtor at the time of making the conveyance or transfer of property alleged as an act of bankruptcy is necessarily involved in the adjudication, and is conclusively established by it when the question shall again arise at any stage of the proceedings, as, when it is sought to set aside the convey-

[531] Lackawanna Leather Co. v. La Porte Carriage Co., 211 Fed. 318, 127 C. C. A. 604, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658.

[532] International Silver Co. v. New York Jewelry Co., 233 Fed. 945, 147 C. C. A. 619, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91.

[533] Rhame v. Southern Cotton Oil Co., 230 Fed. 403, 144 C. C. A. 545, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732.

[534] Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 5 Sup. Ct. 799, 29 L. Ed. 83; In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; Lewis v. Sloan, 68 N. C. 557; In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; In re Banks, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 274, Fed. Cas. No. 958; In re Ordway, 19 N. B. R. 171, Fed. Cas. No. 10,552; Shawhan v. Wherritt, 7 How. 627, 12 L. Ed. 847; Morse v. Godfrey, 3 Story, 391, Fed. Cas. No. 9,856; Rayl v. Lapham, 27 Ohio St. 452; Thornton v. Hogan, 63 Mo. 143; Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Queens County Trust Co., 226 N. Y. 225, 123 N. E. 370.

[535] Cook v. Robinson (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 785, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; In re Broadway Savings Trust Co., 152 Fed. 152, 81 C. C. A. 58, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254; In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; Bear v. Chase, 99 Fed. 920, 40 C. C. A. 182, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re American Brewing Co., 112 Fed. 752, 50 C. C. A. 517, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Lazarus v. Eagen, 206 Fed. 518, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287; In re Hecox, 164 Fed. 823, 90 C. C. A. 627, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314; In re Malkan (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 894, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433; In re Gibney Tire & Rubber Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 879, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355. A judgment of the bankruptcy court dismissing a petition in bankruptcy, on sustaining a demurrer thereto, will bar a subsequent petition in another district by creditors who intervened in the proceedings. In re Culgin-Pace Contracting Co. (D. C.) 224 Fed. 245, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 375. But compare Pepper-ance or recover the preference.[536] It has also been ruled that the adjudication is conclusive evidence of the existence of creditors, not necessarily creditors antecedent to a given conveyance by the bankrupt, but at least subsequent thereto.[537]

But in other respects an adjudication in bankruptcy is subject to the same rules which govern the conclusiveness of other judgments. It is only against parties and privies that it is conclusive of the facts in issue, and it is conclusive only as to facts which were in issue or which, though not in issue, were necessarily involved in it and without which it could not have been rendered. As to the first part of this rule, the Supreme Court of the United States has said that, while an adjudication in bankruptcy is a judgment in rem, and that while, for the purpose of administering the debtor's property, it establishes as against all the world his status as a bankrupt, yet it is not res judicata as to the facts or as to the subsidiary questions of law on which it is based, except as between the parties to the proceeding or those in privity with them; and hence, as against other persons, it is not conclusive as to particular facts found, such as that the debtor had been insolvent for a certain length of time, and that while so insolvent he had given certain preferences.[538]

As to the second part of the rule, the effect of the adjudication as an estoppel depends upon whether the matters alleged to be foreclosed by it were in issue and determined. Thus, an adjudication in bankruptcy, though it may be res judicata, as against a chattel mortgage creditor of the bankrupt, of the bankrupt's insolvency at the time he executed the mortgage, does not determine the mortgagee's right to retain the security.[539] And so, if the validity of the claim of one of the petitioning creditors is put in issue by the bankrupt's answer and the issue is decided in favor of the creditor, the adjudication of bankruptcy is conclusive evidence upon that point, not only against the bankrupt and the trustee, but against all other creditors, since, under the statute, they dine v. Bank of Seymour, 100 Mo. App. 387, 73 S. W. 890; In re Thomas, 11 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 13,891.

[536] In re V. & M. Lumber Co., 182 Fed. 231; In re American Brewing Co., 112 Fed. 752, 50 C. C. A. 517, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; Whitwell v. Wright, 136 App. Div. 246, 120 N. Y. Supp. 1065; De Graff v. Lang, 92 App. Div. 564, 87 N. Y. Supp. 78; In re Southern Arizona Smelting Co., 231 Fed. 87, 145 C. C. A. 275, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827; Lazarus v. Eagen (D. C.) 206 Fed. 518, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287. But compare Simpson v. Western Hardware & Metal Co., 97 Wash. 626, 167 Pac. 113. And see McNeel v. Folk, 75 W. Va. 57, 83 S. E. 192.

[537] Cartwright v. West, 185 Ala. 41, 64 South. 293.

[538] Gratiot County State Bank v. Johnson, 249 U. S. 246, 39 Sup. Ct. 263, 63 L. Ed. 587, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 357.

[539] Sheppard-Strassheim Co. v. Black, 211 Fed. 643, 128 C. C. A. 147, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574.

might have become parties to the proceeding, and, failing to do so, are considered as represented by the bankrupt; so that, when the claim in question is filed for allowance before the referee, it cannot be again contested by any one.[540] But if issue is taken on the question of insolvency or the commission of an act of bankruptcy, and no inquiry is made into the claims of the petitioning creditors, it is thought that the adjudication cannot be considered as conclusive on the question of the precise amount which the bankrupt owed to any one creditor or that he was indebted to any particular creditor in any sum.[541] And again, the adjudication is not conclusive as to any matter which is brought in question only collaterally, and not directly. Thus, where the defendant took issue on the question of his insolvency, and the petitioning creditors, for the purpose of proving insolvency, undertook to show the amount of existing indebtedness and offered in evidence certain promissory notes made by the debtor to third parties (who were not parties to the proceeding), and the debtor contested the validity and consideration of the notes, but the point was decided against him, and an adjudication was made, it was held that the adjudication was not conclusive as to the validity of the notes so as to prevent the bankrupt from opposing their allowance as claims against his estate.[542] As to the commission of the act of bankruptcy charged, this is always a matter concluded by the judgment.[543] For if not put in issue, it must be taken as admitted by the debtor; and if any creditors are interested in controverting it, they have the right to intervene for that purpose, and must be considered as estopped by their failure to do so. Hence, when the act of bankruptcy on which the petition was founded is made the basis of a subsequent suit by the trustee in bankruptcy (as, to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or recover a preference), the adjudication conclusively establishes the fact as against the bankrupt and all creditors.[544] But if the petition [540] Ayres v. Cone, 138 Fed. 778, 71 C. C. A. 144, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739; In re Henry Ulfelder Clothing Co., 98 Fed. 409, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425; In re Fallon, 2 N. B. R. 277, Fed. Cas. No. 4,628; Gleason v. Thaw, 234 Fed. 570, 148 C. C. A. 336, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 866. But where the alleged bankrupt and a creditor resisted an involuntary petition, because a petitioning creditor's claim was invalid and not provable, but later consented to the adjudication, it was held that the trustee was not estopped from contesting the claim on behalf of all, or any non-contesting, creditors. In re Continental Engine Co., 234 Fed. 58, 148 C. C. A. 74, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102.

[541] Cartright v. West, 155 Ala. 619, 47 South. 93; Granite City Bank v. Tvedt, 146 Minn. 12, 177 N. W. 767. But see 2 Black, Judgm. §§ 613, 615, 622, as to the conclusiveness of a judgment upon points or matters necessarily involved in it, or without which it could not have been rendered, though not put in issue.

[542] In re Henry Ulfelder Clothing Co., 98 Fed. 409, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[543] In re Veler, 249 Fed. 633, 161 C. C. A. 543, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 736.

[544] In re Hecox, 164 Fed. 823, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 314; Cook v. Robinson (C. C. A.) 194 Fed. 785, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 182; Whitwell v. Wright, 115 N. Y. Supp. 48; Hackney v. Raymond Bros.

charges different acts of bankruptcy, and the adjudication does not show upon which one of them it proceeded, it does not render either charge res judicata in the further proceedings.[545] An adjudication in a partnership case would ordinarily be conclusive as to the existence of the partnership and the identity of the persons composing it, but not, it seems, as against the trustee in bankruptcy of one of the persons included in the adjudication, who was not heard, although he filed a denial and answer.[546] But it is not only in contested cases that the conclusive effect of a judgment is to be attributed to an adjudication of bankruptcy. One entered on default for want of an answer is as binding on the bankrupt and the creditors as one entered upon a trial or hearing.[547]

From the conclusive character of an adjudication in bankruptcy it follows necessarily that it cannot be attacked or impeached as to its validity in any collateral proceeding in the same or any other court.[548]

Clarke Co., 68 Neb. 624, 94 N. W. 822, 99 N. W. 675, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164; Anderson v. Stayton State Bank, 82 Or. 357, 159 Pac. 1033. But see Pepperdine v. Bank of Seymour, 100 Mo. App. 387, 73 S. W. 890; John Silvey & Co. v. Tift, 123 Ga. 804, 51 S. E. 748, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 386. Where involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were instituted on the ground that the bankrupt had made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, the order of adjudication was held not res judicata that the transfer was a general assignment. In re McCrum, 214 Fed. 207, 130 C. C. A. 555, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[545] In re Letson, 157 Fed. 78, 84 C. C. A. 582, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Julius Bros., 217 Fed. 3, 133 C. C. A. 328, L. R. A. 1915C, 89.

[546] Manson v. Williams, 213 U. S. 453, 29 Sup. Ct. 519, 53 L. Ed. 869, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22, affirming 153 Fed. 525, 82 C. C. A. 475, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674, which affirmed In re Hudson Clothing Co., 148 Fed. 305, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826. In re Flaherty (D. C.) 265 Fed. 741, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638. See In re Hansley & Adams (D. C.) 228 Fed. 564, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. An adjudication in bankruptcy was held not conclusive of the fact that certain petitioning creditors were not at one time partners of the bankrupt. In re Bean, 230 Fed. 405, 144 C. C. A. 547.

[547] In re American Brewing Co., 112 Fed. 752, 50 C. C. A. 517, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[548] Fairbanks Steam Shovel Co. v. Wills, 240 U. S. 642, 36 Sup. Ct. 466, 60 L. Ed. 841, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 754; Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 118 U. S. 161, 6 Sup. Ct. 1009, 30 L. Ed. 196; Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398, 22 L. Ed. 520; Corbett v. Riddle, 209 Fed. 811, 126 C. C. A. 535, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; Sabin v. Larkin-Green Logging Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 984, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210; Ward v. Central Trust Co. of Illinois (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 344, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323; In re Dempster, 172 Fed. 353, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; Gilbertson v. United States, 168 Fed. 672, 94 C. C. A. 158, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep 32; In re New York Tunnel Co., 166 Fed. 284, 92 C. C. A. 202, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; In re Hintze, 134 Fed. 141, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721; Huttig Mfg. Co. v. Edwards, 160 Fed. 619, 87 C. C. A. 521, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 349; Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 14 Fed. 753; Sutton v. Mandeville, 1 Cranch C. C. 187, Fed. Cas. No. 13,651; Cromwell v. Gallup, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 49; Mount v. Manhattan Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 211, 3 Atl. 726; Slaughter v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 125 Tenn. 292, 143 S. W. 603; Chappell v. Lowe, 145 Ga. 717, 89 S. E. 777; Johnson v. Gratiot County State Bank, 193 Mich. 452, 160 N. W. 544; Riggs v. Price, 277 Mo. 333, 210 S. W. 420.

It has sometimes been said, however, that a want of jurisdiction in the court of bankruptcy is such a fatal defect as may be availed of in a collateral proceeding.[549] And this may well be true in a case of voluntary bankruptcy, where creditors may have no opportunity to plead a want of jurisdiction before the adjudication is made.[550] But the general rule is that if jurisdiction appears on the face of the proceedings, or if there is nothing on the face of the proceedings to disclose an absence of jurisdiction, then the adjudication is not impeachable collaterally even on this ground.[551] And it should be observed that jurisdiction does not so far depend upon the question whether the defendant is one of the persons or corporations subject to the act, or is exempt, as to open the adjudication to attack on this ground.[552] And the same is true as to the sufficiency of the petitioning creditors in number and amount.[553] And even if it should be conceded that the question of jurisdiction is always open still this is not the case where the bankrupt and all of his creditors have recognized the validity of the proceedings and have participated therein and sought the benefit thereof.[554] There are also some decisions to the effect that an adjudication in bankruptcy may be impeached collaterally for fraud in its procurement or fraudulent collusion between the debtor and the petitioning creditors.[555] But the better opinion is that these are matters of defense, or perhaps ground for vacating the adjudication in a direct proceeding for that purpose, but not for drawing its validity into question collaterally.[556] Still less can the adjudication be assailed collaterally for mere errors of law or irregularities of 549 Stuart v. Aumiller, 37 Iowa, 102, 8 N. B. R. 541; In re Goodfellow, 1 Low, 510, 3 N. B. R. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 5,536.

550 In re Garneau, 127 Fed. 677, 62 C. C. A. 403, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

551 Sloan v. Lewis, 22 Wall. 150, 22 L. Ed. 832; In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; United States v. Freed, 179 Fed. 236, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; In re Ives, 5 Dill. 146, 19 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 7,115. In re Sage (D. C.) 224 Fed. 525, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Davis (D. C.) 217 Fed. 113, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 16. In bankruptcy proceedings against a corporation, the fact that its principal place of business is within the district of the court is a quasi jurisdictional fact, and the court's determination thereof cannot be collaterally attacked, but is conclusive on another bankruptcy court, which has not theretofore acquired jurisdiction. Roszell Bros. v. Continental Coal Corp. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 343, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31.

552 In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411.

553 Roberts v. Fernald, 72 N. H. 198, 55 Atl. 942; Bail v. Hartman, 9 Ariz. 321, 83 Pac. 358.

554 In re Worsham, 142 Fed. 121, 73 C. C. A. 665, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 672. That the wife of a bankrupt has allowed three years to elapse since the adjudication of bankruptcy constitutes such laches as will preclude her from then contesting the allegations of insolvency in the petition upon which the adjudication was founded. In re Gibbons (D. C.) 225 Fed. 420, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620.

555 In re Billing, 145 Fed. 395, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; Benedict v. Smith, 48 Mich. 593, 12 N. W. 866.

556 Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398, 22 L. Ed. 520; Bissell v. Post, 4 Day (Conn.) 79.

practice, not sapping the foundation of the court's jurisdiction. These may be grounds for a reversal or modification of the decree on appeal, but are closed by the adjudication itself against inquiry in any other proceeding.[557] But the entry of an adjudication of bankruptcy against a corporation on the very day on which the petition against it was filed is not a mere irregularity; it is an act entirely void. The statute gives to creditors a substantial right to the limitation of a time within which they may come in and be heard, which right is not derived through the bankrupt, and consequently cannot be waived by him, nor can they be deprived of it by any act of his or by the court; and hence they may attack the validity of such an adjudication collaterally in proceedings previously instituted by them in another district.[558]

As to the effect of the adjudication in other respects, it is held that it brings the property of the bankrupt into the custody of the law and appropriates it to the payment of his debts, as effectually as if it were taken on execution or attachment, subject to the qualification, except as otherwise provided, that the property is appropriated in the same condition and subject to the same equities as when in the possession of the bankrupt.[559] Thus, the relation of landlord and tenant is not severed by the tenant's adjudication in bankruptcy.[560] The adjudication is also constructive notice to all persons, at least those within the jurisdiction of the court, of the transfer of title to the bankrupt's property, and they must take notice that the ownership of the bankrupt has ceased and that of his trustee begun.[561] This applies, for example, to assessors of taxes.[562] But the adjudication does not create an actual lien on the property in favor of the trustee.[563] It does, however, operate as a caveat to all the world, and some cases have even thought that it tacitly embodies an injunction against any interference with any of the property by any person who has not a valid interest in it or lien upon it, so that intermeddling with the property by any such person amounts to a [557] In re Getchell, 8 Ben. 256, Fed. Cas. No. 5,371; Hobson v. Markson, 1 Dill. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 6,555; Edelstein v. United States, 149 Fed. 636, 79 C. C. A. 328, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 649; In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411. Though the petition on which an adjudication in involuntary bankruptcy was based, and which was held to be sufficient, was really insufficient, the proceedings are not for that reason void so as to be open to collateral attack. Larkin-Green Logging Co. v. Sabin, 222 Fed. 814, 138 C. C. A. 240, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 86.

[558] In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[559] In re Youngstrom, 153 Fed. 98, 82 C. C. A. 232, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

[560] Shapiro v. Thompson, 160 Ala. 363, 49 South. 391.

[561] Hough v. City of North Adams, 196 Mass. 290, 82 N. E. 46.

[562] Hough v. City of North Adams, 196 Mass. 290, 82 N. E. 46.

[563] In re Hager, 166 Fed. 972; Marine Sav. Bank v. Norton, 160 Mich. 614, 125 N. W. 754.

violation of the implied injunction and may be punished as a contempt of the court.[564]

§ 183. Vacating and Setting Aside Adjudication.—An adjudication of bankruptcy taken by default, for want of appearance or answer, may be opened by the bankruptcy court, on application of the bankrupt or a creditor, to permit him to file an answer and contest the petition, provided a good excuse is shown for the default or for any delay in the application, and provided the answer proposed to be filed shows a meritorious defense and not merely a technical objection.[565] So after the entry of an adjudication as the result of a trial or hearing, it may be vacated or set aside, for good and sufficient cause, on the motion of the bankrupt himself,[566] or the receiver of the bankrupt corporation, appointed by a state court,[567] or any creditor who may conceive his interests to be injuriously affected by the adjudication,[568] such as an attaching creditor.[569] But the authorities appear to restrict the right to these persons. It is said that a petition to set aside an adjudication of bankruptcy is in the nature of a bill to review and vacate a judgment, and therefore can be maintained only by the bankrupt or by a creditor of the bankrupt owning a provable debt or claim against him. Such a motion cannot be made by a stranger, although it is in the discretion of the court to allow him to be heard as amicus curiæ, when the ground alleged is a want of jurisdiction, as that is a question which the court

564 Clay v. Waters, 178 Fed. 385, 101 C. C. A. 645, 21 Ann. Cas. 897, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; In re Reynolds (D. C.) 127 Fed. 760, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758; Ledgerwood v. Dashiell (Tex. Civ. App.) 177 S. W. 1010; Darrough v. First Nat. Bank, 56 Okl. 647, 156 Pac. 191. An adjudication in bankruptcy does not dissolve a corporation or terminate its existence. In re Russell Wheel & Foundry Co. (D. C.) 222 Fed. 569, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66.

565 In re Imperial Corp., 133 Fed. 73, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 199; In re Urban & Suburban Realty Title Co., 132 Fed. 140, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687; In re Le Favour, 8 Ben. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 8,208; In re Neilson, 7 N. B. R. 505, Fed. Cas. No. 10,090; In re Gill, 195 Fed. 643, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333; In re Mitchell & Co. (D. C.) 211 Fed. 778, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 814; B-R Electric & Telephone Mfg. Co. v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., 206 Fed. 885, 124 C. C. A. 545, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424.

566 In re McFaun, 96 Fed. 592, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66. But a bankrupt who made no defense to the adjudication, filed his schedules, and appeared personally and by attorney, is not entitled to a vacation of the adjudication without showing that fraud was practiced on him. In re Gill, 195 Fed. 643, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 333.

567 In re Atlantic Mut. Life Ins. Co., 9 Ben. 270, 16 N. B. R. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 628.

568 In re New England Breeders' Club, 169 Fed. 586, 95 C. C. A. 84, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 124; In re Scott, 111 Fed. 144, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39; In re Derby, 6 Ben. 232, 8 N. B. R. 106, Fed. Cas. No. 3,815; Blackstock v. Blackstock (C. C. A.) 265 Fed. 249, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192.

569 In re Donnelly, 5 Fed. 783; In re Bergeron, 12 N. B. R. 385, Fed. Cas. No. 1,342.

should consider whenever and however raised.[570] But where land of the bankrupt had been sold on execution, bought in by the judgment creditor, and subsequently sold by him to a third person, the latter may appeal to the court's discretion to vacate the adjudication of bankruptcy, though he must show that the vacation would be of practical value to him, as by showing that the bankrupt was not insolvent or did not commit the act of bankruptcy alleged.[571]

Whoever makes the application must exhibit reasonable promptness and diligence in so doing. He will not be heard if justly chargeable with laches. What constitutes due diligence for this purpose does not depend merely upon the actual time elapsed, but also upon the question whether the applicant had actual knowledge of the adjudication at the time, or when he received information of it, and upon the nature and extent of the proceedings which may have been taken in the case since the adjudication, and the possible intervening rights of third persons. Naturally each case must depend on its own circumstances, and no fixed rule can be laid down, but the decisons which support and illustrate the rule are cited in the margin.[572]

Want of jurisdiction is a sufficient ground for vacating an adjudication of bankruptcy,[573] as, on a showing that the person or corporation proceeded against was within the exempt or excepted classes.[574] This action is also proper where the adjudication was based upon a waiver of important rights of the alleged bankrupt, made by his attorney,[575] or where it is shown to have been the product of fraud or collusion.[576] But fraud perpetrated upon the bankrupt in connection with the proceedings is not sufficient to warrant vacating the adjudication, unless 570 In re Columbia Real Estate Co., 101 Fed. 965, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; s. c., 112 Fed. 643, 50 C. C. A. 406, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

571 Abbott v. Wauchula Mfg. & Timber Co., 240 Fed. 938, 153 C. C. A. 624, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634.

572 In re First Nat. Bank, 152 Fed. 64, 81 C. C. A. 260, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; Altonwood Park Co. v. Gwynne, 160 Fed. 448, 87 C. C. A. 409, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; In re Ives, 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692; In re Baltimore County Dairy Ass'n, 2 Hughes, 250, 11 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 828; In re Groome, 1 Fed. 464; In re Lalor, 19 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 8,001; In re Court, 17 N. B. R. 555, Fed. Cas. No. 3,284; In re Republic Ins. Co., 8 N. B. R. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 11,706; In re Meade, 19 N. B. R. 335, Fed. Cas. No. 9,370. An adjudication entered upon a confession of the acts of bankruptcy charged cannot be set aside after the death of the bankrupt on the application of a creditor who has proved his debt. In re Thomas, 11 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 13,891.

573 In re Niagara Contracting Co., 127 Fed. 782, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 643. But see In re Penn, 4 Ben. 99, 3 N. B. R. 582, Fed. Cas. No. 10,926.

574 In re Hudson River Electric Co., 167 Fed. 986, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 915. But see In re Urban & Suburban Realty Title Co., 132 Fed. 140, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

575 In re Republic Ins. Co., 8 N. B. R. 317, Fed. Cas. No. 11,706.

576 In re Lalor, 19 N. B. R. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 8,001.

it enters into the order of adjudication.[577] And the fraudulent purpose of directors of a corporation to avoid liability in a stockholders' suit, then commenced but in which no receiver had yet been appointed, by filing a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, does not require the adjudication to be set aside on the petition of the stockholders.[578] And an adjudication in bankruptcy will not be set aside merely because the bankrupt filed his petition in anticipation of the early death of his mother, who had made a will leaving him a substantial sum of money.[579] That the adjudication was entered prematurely may be ground for setting it aside, and this action should be taken even though the petition merely alleges matters which would not have prevented the adjudication being made in due season.[580] So the court may open the adjudication and grant a rehearing on the ground of newly discovered evidence,[581] and it appears that it may be set aside by consent, on proof of the assent of all known creditors.[582] But mere irregularities, not affecting the jurisdiction of the court or the substantial rights of the parties, will not be sufficient cause to induce the court to revoke and annul its decree.[583] Thus, an adjudication will not be set aside merely on showing a prior filing of the petition against the bankrupt in another district,[584] nor on the ground that the notary public who took the verification of the petition was the bankrupt's own attorney,[585] nor because the attorney who appeared for the bankrupt had not been admitted to practice in the federal courts of the district.[586] As the statute does not specifically provide for notice to the creditors of an application or proceeding to vacate the adjudication, it has been held that this action may be taken without notifying them.[587] But the bankrupt himself is in a different 577 In re S. & S. Mfg. & Sales Co. (D. C.) 246 Fed. 1005, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786.

578 In re United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 1016, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 501.

579 In re Swift (D. C.) 259 Fed. 612, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 211. And see In re Seal (D. C.) 261 Fed. 112, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556.

580 In re Gibney Tire & Rubber Co. (D. C.) 241 Fed. 879, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

581 In re Great Western Tel. Co., 5 Biss. 359, Fed. Cas. No. 5,739.

582 In re Magee, Fed. Cas. No. 8,941. But after an adjudication a bankrupt's estate can be wound up in only two ways, by distribution in bankruptcy or by distribution in composition, and the court has no power, over the objection of a creditor, to vacate the decree of adjudication on a settlement made with other creditors outside the proceedings. In re Malkan (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 894, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433.

583 But a petition to vacate the adjudication in voluntary proceedings is the correct practice, where the residence, domicile, and principal place of business are not correctly alleged in the petition. In re San Antonio Land & Irr. Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 984, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 512.

584 In re Harris, 6 Ben. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 6,111.

585 In re Kindt, 98 Fed. 403, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443.

586 In re Kindt, 98 Fed. 867, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 546.

587 Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McNairy, 42

case. Though the proceeding may be involuntary, still he has an interest in its continuance, as it may result in his discharge from his debts, and therefore he must have notice of an application to annul the adjudication.[588] It has been held (though not by a federal court) that a referee in bankruptcy has jurisdiction to set aside an adjudication, at least in the case where he himself made the adjudication, the case having been referred to him by the clerk on account of the absence of the judge.[589]

It is within the competence of the court to impose terms or conditions upon the vacating of an adjudication, as, for instance, in the case of an adjudication taken against the bankrupt by default, that he shall appear and plead within five days, and if such terms are not complied with the adjudication will stand.[590]

§ 184. Clerk's Docket.—The first of the general orders in bankruptcy prescribed by the Supreme Court directs that "the clerk shall keep a docket, in which the cases shall be entered and numbered in the order in which they are commenced. It shall contain a memorandum of the filing of the petition and of the action of the court thereon, of the reference of the case to the referee, and of the transmission by him to the clerk of his certified record of the proceedings, with the dates thereof, and a memorandum of all proceedings in the case except those duly entered on the referee's certified record aforesaid. The docket shall be arranged in a manner convenient for reference, and shall at all times be open to public inspection." It is held that this docket should show not only the fact and the date of the filing of the petition, but also that it was filed in duplicate, as required by the statute, if this requirement of the law is really complied with.[591] But as a court of bankruptcy is always open for the transaction of business and has no regular terms, it is not necessary for the clerk to make an entry showing the opening and closing of the court on days when he enters proceedings in bankruptcy cases.[592]

Tex. Civ. App. 222, 94 S. W. 111. But see In re Nash (D. C.) 249 Fed. 375.

[588] In re Bush, 6 N. B. R. 179, Fed. Cas. No. 2,222.

[589] Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McNairy, 42 Tex. Civ. App. 222, 94 S. W. 111.

[590] In re Sutter Hotel Co., 241 Fed. 367, 154 C. C. A. 247, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 620.

[591] In re Stevenson, 94 Fed. 110, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Dupree, 97 Fed. 28.

[592] Keatley v. United States, 45 Ct. Cl. 36.

CHAPTER XI

SUITS BY AND AGAINST THE BANKRUPT

§ 185. Effect of Bankruptcy on Pending Suits.—The state tribunals are not deprived, by the mere force of an adjudication of bankruptcy, of jurisdiction over suits pending at the time against the bankrupt. They may grant a stay of proceedings in such suits on a proper application in that behalf. And the court of bankruptcy making the adjudication has the power and authority to arrest or control the proceedings in such suits when it becomes necessary for the proper working of the bankruptcy law, provided the particular action is based upon a debt or claim from which the bankrupt's discharge would release him, and until the question of his discharge has been determined. But when such power is not exercised (or in the cases in which it cannot be exercised) the jurisdiction of the ordinary courts remains unimpaired, and they are not required to dismiss pending actions, but may proceed to render valid judgments therein.[1] As stated by the court in Georgia, the bank-

[1] Martin v. Oliver, 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739; Chase v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 202 Fed. 904, 121 C. C. A. 262, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; Brazil v. Azevedo, 32 Cal. App. 364, 162 Pac. 1049; In re Davis, 1 Sawy. 260, 4 N. B. R. 715, Fed. Cas. No. 3,620; Hewett v. Norton, 1 Woods, 68, 13 N. B. R. 276, Fed. Cas. No. 6,441; First Nat. Bank v. Abner, 1 MacArthur (D. C.) 590; In re Davis, 8 N. B. R. 167, Fed Cas. No. 3,619; Cutter v. Evans, 115 Mass. 27, 11 N. B. R. 448; Munson v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 120 Mass. 81, 21 Am. Rep. 499; Seymour v. Browning, 17 Ohio, 362; Serra é Hijo v. Hoffman, 29 La. Ann. 17; Brown v. Newman, 66 Ala. 275; Sutherland v. Davis, 42 Ind. 26, 10 N. B. R. 424; Brandon Mfg. Co. v. Frazer, 47 Vt. 88, 19 Am. Rep. 118, 13 N. B. R. 362; United States v. Mackoy, 2 Dill. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 15,696; Friedman v. Zweifler, 74 Misc. Rep. 448, 132 N. Y. Supp. 320; Hardesty v. Graham, 7 Ky. Law Rep. 447; Brackett v. Dayton, 34 Minn. 219, 25 N. W. 348; Lewis v. Higgins, 52 Md. 616; Hobart v. Haskell, 14 N. H. 127; McCormick v. Raymond, 13 Neb. 306, 14 N. W. 402; Esterbrook Steel Pen Mfg. Co. v. Ahern, 31 N. J. Eq. 3; Bowman v.

ruptcy of some or all of the defendants is no cause for dismissing a bill in equity prior to the hearing unless the complainant admits the bankruptcy and concedes that it bars all the relief prayed for. Suspending proceedings, in terms of the bankruptcy act, is a different thing from dismissing the bill.[2] The case is somewhat altered, however, where the object of the suit is to enforce a specific lien on property of the bankrupt. Even assuming that the lien is of such a character as not to be affected by the proceedings in bankruptcy, it is the prerogative of the court of bankruptcy to control the proceedings thereon in such a manner as to save the rights of general creditors. Hence, if an attaching creditor, who knows that proceedings in bankruptcy have been instituted, proceeds in his suit against the bankrupt to judgment before a trustee is appointed, it is a fraud upon the law, and he will not be allowed to retain the fruits of his writ.[3] And in general, while a valid judgment may be rendered against the bankrupt, if the proceedings are not stayed or arrested, its only effect is to fix the amount of his liability. That is, no judgment rendered against the bankrupt after the filing of the petition can create any lien upon his estate, for the consequence would be to withdraw some portion of the property from the exclusive control and custody of the court of bankruptcy.[4] But the execution of a decree for partition in a state court is not arrested because one of the parties to the suit becomes bankrupt; for his share of the property simply vests in his trustee.[5] And a judgment entered after the adjudication, on a default entered before the petition was filed, without fraud, mistake, or surprise, where the bankrupt had no defense, will not be set aside.[6]

Strother, 144 Mo. App. 100, 128 S. W. 848; Sively v. Campbell, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 893; Williams v. Lane, 158 Cal. 39, 109 Pac. 873; Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 7,373; Irving Nat. Bank v. Adams, 90 N. Y. 682; Nonotuck Silk Co. v. Pritzker, 143 Ill. App. 644. Compare Fellows v. Hall, 3 McLean, 487, Fed. Cas. No. 4,723. For the general rule that the pendency of a suit in a federal court cannot be pleaded in abatement of a suit in a state court (or vice versa), though it involves the same parties and the same subject-matter, see the following cases: Latham v. Chafee, 7 Fed. 529; Hospes v. O'Brien, 24 Fed. 145; Coe v. Aiken, 50 Fed. 640; Logan v. Greenlaw, 12 Fed. 10; Dwight v. Central Vermont R. Co., 9 Fed. 785; Lyman v. Brown, 2 Curt. C. C. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 8,627; Wadleigh v. Veazie, 3 Sumn. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 17,031; White v. Whitman, 1 Curt. C. C. 494, Fed. Cas. No. 17,561.

[2] Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546.

[3] Ex parte Foster, 2 Story, 131, Fed. Cas. No. 4,960; Everett v. Stone, 3 Story, 446, Fed. Cas. No. 4,577; Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co., 222 U. S. 300, 32 Sup. Ct. 96, 56. L. Ed. 208, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262. And see, infra, Chapter XX, and particularly §§ 376. 389.

[4] McLean v. Rockey, 3 McLean, 235, Fed. Cas. No. 8,891. Though a contractor has been adjudged bankrupt, this is no obstacle to a suit by materialmen on the contractor's bond, where there is no question as to the amounts due the several claimants and credit is given for a dividend already paid by the trustee. People v. Valley Mantel & Tile Co., 200 Mich. 554, 166 N. W. 839.

[5] Baum v. Stern, 1 S. Car. 415.

[6] Fiske v. Hunt, 2 Story, 582, Fed. Cas. No. 4,831. See American Wood Working Machinery Co. v. Furbush, 193 Mass. 455,

For an even stronger reason the bankruptcy of the defendant is not a bar to a motion to amend the minutes of the court, by entering nunc pro tunc a verdict rendered some years previously against him.[7] In the case of several joint defendants in a pending suit in a state court, one or more of whom are in bankruptcy, but not all, the suit will not be stayed on the application of those not affected by the bankruptcy proceedings,[8] and some courts have held that partnership creditors may attach partnership assets, though one member of the firm is a bankrupt.[9] Finally, it should be noted that, while the trustee in bankruptcy is the proper person to assume and carry on litigation in which the bankrupt is concerned, still a bankrupt who is defendant in a pending suit may defend it, if the trustee refuses to do so.[10]

§ 186. Stay of Pending Suits by State Court.—The bankruptcy act of 1867 provided that "no creditor whose debt is provable shall be allowed to prosecute to final judgment any suit at law or in equity therefor against the bankrupt until the question of the debtor's discharge shall have been determined; and any such suit or proceedings shall, on the application of the bankrupt, be stayed to await the determination of the court in bankruptcy on the question of his discharge."[11] It was held that this provision was applicable to suits pending in the state courts, as well as to any proceedings in a federal court, and was equally binding upon them. Consequently it was decided that it was the duty of a state court, in which a suit was pending against a bankrupt on a provable debt, to grant a stay of proceedings therein, upon the application of the bankrupt or his assignee, seasonably made, until the question of his discharge should have been determined; and this, without any injunction or order from the court of bankruptcy.[12] The present statute provides that a suit founded upon a claim from which a discharge in bankruptcy would be a release, and which is pending against a person at the time of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, "shall be stayed" until an adjudication is made or the petition dismissed;

79 N. E. 770. Where, after judgment on a note for plaintiff, it is discovered that he had been adjudged bankrupt, and that the note had not been scheduled, such facts constitute ground for a new trial. Juden v. Nebham (Miss.) 60 South. 45.

[7] Woolfolk v. Gunn, 45 Ga. 117, 10 N. B. R. 526.

[8] Johnson v. Waxelbaum Co., 1 Ga. App. 511, 58 S. E. 56; Ex parte Canada, 151 Mo. App. 704, 132 S. W. 754.

[9] Pelzer Mfg. Co. v. Pitts & Hartzog, 76 S. Car. 349, 57 S. E. 29, 11 Ann. Cas. 665.

[10] Lane v. Moore, 59 N. H. 80.

[11] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5106.

[12] Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S. 631, 2 Sup. Ct. 404, 27 L. Ed. 493; Boynton v. Ball, 121 U. S. 457, 7 Sup. Ct. 981, 30 L. Ed. 985; Bratton v. Anderson, 5 S. Car. 504, 14 N. B. R. 99; Ray v. Wight, 119 Mass. 426, 20 Am. Rep. 333; Braley v. Boomer, 116 Mass. 527, 12 N. B. R. 303; Rood v. Stevens, 49 Conn. 45; Frostman v. Hicks, 3 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 202, 15 N. B. R. 41.

and if such person is adjudged bankrupt, the action "may be further stayed" until his application for discharge is determined or until twelve months from the date of the adjudication have expired.[13] It has been held that this provision is substantially similar to the corresponding clause of the act of 1867, and that the rule announced under the earlier statute is clearly applicable to the present law; so that it is now, as before, the duty of the state court to grant a stay of proceedings when the suit pending against the bankrupt is founded on a debt or claim from which his discharge would release him, and when application therefor is duly made.[14] And although the court of bankruptcy has the power to order a stay of such proceedings, and may, if necessary, enjoin the plaintiff from further prosecution of his suit, it has been ruled that the application for a stay should not be made to the federal court in the first instance, but to the state court.[15]

To warrant the state court in taking this action it is necessary that the fact of the bankruptcy should be brought to its judicial attention in some proper manner, generally by a formal answer or plea.[16] A mere statement of defendant's counsel at the trial that his client is in bank-

[13] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11a.

[14] In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; Star Braiding Co. v. Stienen Dyeing Co. (R. I.) 114 Atl. 129; Maas v. Kuhn, 130 App. Div. 68, 114 N. Y. Supp. 444; First Nat. Bank v. Flynn, 117 Iowa, 493, 91 N. W. 784; McIntyre v. Malone, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 159, 91 N. W. 246; Stone v. Brookville Nat Bank, 39 Ind. 284; Turner v. Gatewood, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 613; Dickens v. Dickens, 174 Ala. 305, 56 South. 806. But some courts, particularly in Massachusetts, do not admit this rule to the fullest extent, but hold that it is entirely within their discretion whether or not to stay the suit. See Rosenthal v. Nove, 175 Mass. 559, 56 N. E. 884, 78 Am. St. Rep. 512; Feigenspan v. McDonnell, 201 Mass. 341, 87 N. E. 624; St Louis World Pub. Co. v. Rialto Grain & Securities Co., 108 Mo. App. 479, 83 S. W. 781; Smith v. Miller, 226 Mass. 187, 115 N. E. 243. An order of the state court "abating" a suit because of the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings against the defendant is properly made, but should be interpreted as staying further action until the outcome of the bankruptcy proceeding, and not as a final determination of the matter. Clark v. Fighting Wolf Mining Co. (Mo. App.) 209 S. W. 307.

[15] Ohio Motor Car Co. v. Eiseman Magneto Co., 230 Fed. 370, 144 C. C. A. 512, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237; (certiorari denied, National Carbon Co. v. Ohio Motor Car Co., 241 U. S. 673, 36 Sup. Ct. 724, 60 L. Ed. 1231); In re Geister, 97 Fed. 322, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228; McIntyre v. Malone, 3 Neb. (Unof.) 159, 91 N. W. 246; Delavergue v. Farrand, 1 Mich. N. P. 90; Stone v. Brookville Nat. Bank, 39 Ind. 284; Smith v. Soldiers' Business Messenger & Dispatch Co., 35 N. J. Law, 60. Contra, see Garrett v. Carrow, 3 Houst. (Del.) 652.

[16] Holden v. Sherwood, 84 Ill. 92; Red River Nat. Bank v. Bray (Tex. Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 968; State v. Broaddus, 234 Mo. 358, 137 S. W. 268. See Reynolds v. Pennsylvania Oil Co., 150 Cal. 629, 89 Pac. 610. A defendant who desires to plead his subsequent discharge in bankruptcy as a bar, should move for a continuance to see if he shall obtain it, and if he does, he should then plead it. Rogers v. Abbott, 206 Mass. 270, 92 N. E. 472, 138 Am. St. Rep. 394. A petition by trustees to vacate an attachment of the bankrupt's realty, after the adjudication, is the appropriate method of procedure. Ward v. Hargett, 151 N. C. 365, 66 S. E. 340.

ruptcy will not be sufficient to operate as a stay of proceedings;[17] and evidence of the fact of the defendant's bankruptcy cannot be introduced under the plea of the general issue.[18]

It has been ruled that the mere filing of a petition in bankruptcy, without any adjudication thereon, does not bar the prosecution of a suit against the debtor in a state court, and is no ground for staying the proceedings.[19] But this seems to be contrary to the plain terms of the present statute, which evidently makes the stay before adjudication imperative, though a further stay after the adjudication is perhaps discretionary. But a state court need not grant a stay of an action brought therein against the bankrupt jointly with others; it will order that proceedings on any judgment which may be obtained against him shall be stayed until the further order of the court.[20] Where, after the verdict but before the entry of a judgment thereon, in a cause pending in a state court, the defendant files his petition in bankruptcy, the court, on the filing of a certificate of his having been adjudged bankrupt, and on motion of the defendant, should stay further proceedings until the bankruptcy court passes upon his application for discharge; and on a showing that the discharge was granted, the state court will render judgment on the verdict against the defendant, but with a perpetual stay of execution.[21] A debtor, however, who files his petition in bankruptcy pending a suit against him in a state court for a debt provable in bankruptcy, while he may obtain a stay of proceedings in the suit, is under no obligation to do so. He may allow the suit to proceed to judgment without forfeiting his right to avail himself of his discharge, if he shall subsequently obtain it. And if a judgment is entered, he may apply to the court to vacate it, or he may interpose his discharge as a defense as soon as the plaintiff moves to enforce his judgment.[22] The levy of an execution issued after the defendant has made application for the benefit of the bankruptcy law, will be quashed by the court out of which it issued, on motion.[23]

If the debt or claim in suit is one which would not be affected by the defendant's discharge, no stay is necessary or proper. But if there is doubt on this point, a continuance may be ordered. Thus, where [17] McGowan v. Bowman, 79 Vt. 295, 64 Atl. 1121.

[18] Styles v. Fuller, 101 N. Y. 622, 4 N. E. 348.

[19] Rennebaum v. Atkinson, 52 S. W. 828, 21 Ky. Law Rep. 587; Givens v. Robbins, 5 Ala. 676; Stewart v. Sonneborn, 51 Ala. 126; Murphy v. Young, 6 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 317.

[20] Friedman v. Zweifler, 74 Misc. Rep. 448, 132 N. Y. Supp. 320; Hoyt v. Freel, 8 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 220, 4 N. B. R. 131.

[21] Hill v. Harding, 116 Ill. 92, 4 N. E. 361. See Rosenthal v. Nove, 175 Mass. 559, 56 N. E. 884, 78 Am. St. Rep. 512.

[22] Whyte v. McGovern, 51 N. J. Law, 356, 17 Atl. 957. But compare Darnall v. Cline, 4 Ky. Law Rep. 537.

[23] McDougald v. Reid, 5 Ala. 810.

the complaint states a cause of action for embezzlement, but the defendant asserts that his liability, if any, is on contract, it is proper for the state court to postpone the action, pending a determination against the defendant in the court of bankruptcy.[24] And where an equitable petition was filed, seeking to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment and have an equitable set-off against it established, it was held that the fact that defendant had been adjudicated a bankrupt and no trustee had been appointed, was not ground for staying a hearing on a demurrer to the petition.[25]

§ 187. Stay by Injunction or Order from Federal Court.—The authority of a court of bankruptcy to grant an injunction or restraining order staying the prosecution of a pending suit in a state court against a bankrupt is supported not only by the explicit provision of the eleventh section of the bankruptcy act, but also by the grant to the courts of bankruptcy (in the second section of the act) of jurisdiction to "make such orders, issue such process, and enter such judgments in addition to those specifically provided for as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this act." It is pertinent also to notice that the general prohibition of the use of the writ of injunction "by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state," is subject to the specific exception of "cases where such injnnction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy."[26] It may be stated, therefore, that if the pending suit is upon a debt or claim which would be released by a discharge, it is within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to order its stay or enjoin its prosecution.[27] And it makes no difference that the state court had previously denied a [24] Ex parte Butler-Keyser Mfg. Co., 174 Ala. 237, 56 South. 960.

[25] Miller v. Smith, 136 Ga. 117, 70 S. E. 887.

[26] Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 265.

[27] Mitchell Storebuilding Co. v. Carroll, 193 Fed. 616, 113 C. C. A. 484, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 894; Moore v. Green, 145 Fed. 472, 76 C. C. A. 242, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648; Bothwell v. Fitzgerald, 219 Fed. 408, 135 C. C. A. 212, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 261; Drake v. Hodgson, 192 App. Div. 676, 183 N. Y. Supp. 486; Fowler v. Dillon, 1 Hughes, 232, Fed. Cas. No. 5,000. And see supra, § 29. Where there were more than 100 separate damage claims against a bankrupt corporation, all arising from the same transaction, on some of which actions had been brought in the state courts, and in all of which liability depended on the same facts, the bankrupt was held entitled to an injunction restraining prosecution of suits on such claims until it could obtain its discharge, and its trustee was held entitled to an order requiring adjudication of the claims in the bankruptcy court, where they could be consolidated for trial as to liability. In re People's Warehouse Co. (D. C.) 273 Fed. 611. But the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to enjoin a sale of property on a judgment rendered in a state court enforcing a mortgage lien of date long prior to four months preceding the adjudication of the mortgagor as a bankrupt. Sample v. Beasley, 158 Fed. 607, 85 C. C. A. 429, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164. And see Pickens v. Dent, 106 Fed. 653, 45 C. C. A. 522, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644.

similar application by the same petitioner.[28] Even though the pending action is not directly against the bankrupt himself, the court of bankruptcy has power to enjoin its further prosecution, if the proceedings in the state court, if allowed to continue, might interfere with and delay the settlement of the bankrupt's estate, as, where the defendant in such action, though a solvent corporation and not in bankruptcy, is claimed to be a mere department or adjunct of the business of the bankrupt, and therefore its assets are claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy.[29]

Though the statute speaks only of staying suits against a defendant "against" whom a petition in bankruptcy has been filed, it applies equally to the case of voluntary bankrupts as to those adjudged bankrupt on compulsory proceedings; for the first section of the act declares that the phrase "a person against whom a petition has been filed" shall include "a person who has filed a voluntary petition." [30] Though the statute does not in terms declare that this power must be exercised by the judge of the court of bankruptcy, to the exclusion of the referee, the plain direction of the General Orders is to that effect, and the courts have sanctioned the rule that a referee has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction staying proceedings in a state court.[31] It will also be observed that, as regards the staying of an action after the adjudication in bankruptcy, the granting of an order for that purpose rests in the discretion of the district court, since the language of the law is that such action "may be stayed" until the question of the bankrupt's discharge is determined; and the action of the court of bankruptcy in this matter will not be interfered with by the appellate court, on petition for review, unless such discretion has been abused.[32] In fact, the courts should incline against any unnecessary interference with the normal action of the state courts, and their power in this behalf should be sparingly exercised,[33] upon due and careful consideration of all the equities of the case,[34] and not at all where there is legitimate scope for the judg-

[28] New River Coal Land Co. v. Ruffner Bros., 165 Fed. 881, 91 C. C. A. 559, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

[29] Mitchell Storebuilding Co. v. Carroll, 193 Fed. 616, 113 C. C. A. 484, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 894.

[30] In re Geister, 97 Fed. 322, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228.

[31] General Order No. 12, cl. 3; In re Siebert, 133 Fed. 781, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; In re Mussey, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 113. See In re Kimmel, 183 Fed. 665, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 595, where such an injunction, granted by a referee, was continued in force by the district court, no question being raised as to the referee's jurisdiction. And see In re Lombardy Inn Co. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 394, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 444.

[32] In re Lesser (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 913, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758; In re Bittle (D. C.) 239 Fed. 191, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 484.

[33] In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 196 Fed. 153, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394; In re Guanacevi Tunnel Co. (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 316, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

[34] Henry v. Harris, 191 Fed. 868.

ment of the state court without interfering with the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court.[35]

It has been made a question whether the power of a court of bankruptcy to enjoin and stay proceedings against the bankrupt extends to cases pending in any and all courts, state or federal, and whether its process issuing for this purpose may run throughout the United States, or must be confined to its own judicial district.[36] But it will be remembered that the order or process of the court of bankruptcy acts upon the parties (that is, plaintiffs in such actions) and not upon the courts where the suits may be pending. Now all creditors of the bankrupt are parties to the proceedings in bankruptcy, because such proceedings are in rem, and moreover, a court of bankruptcy has power to restrain any and all persons from unlawfully interfering with the property of the estate in bankruptcy.[37] Hence any creditor who is within reach of the process of the court may be enjoined or restrained from the further prosecution of his action. The court, indeed, cannot stay or enjoin foreign creditors proceeding against the bankrupt in a foreign court; but if they seek the aid of the court of bankruptcy for the enforcement of their demands, they will not be allowed any advantage over other creditors.[38] Thus, where the resident partners of a firm, having a partner residing abroad, prove a debt in bankruptcy, the firm becomes a party to the proceedings, and the resident partners may be restrained from prosecuting suits abroad to collect the claim.[39] It must also be remarked that the power of the bankruptcy court to restrain actions against the bankrupt or his property extends not only to the state courts, but also to the admiralty side of the same court, and a libel against the bankrupt's vessel, filed under such circumstances, will be enjoined.[40] But the power to stay actions against the bankrupt, by injunction, is vested only in that court in which the proceedings in bankruptcy are pending. A federal district court cannot enjoin proceedings in a state court on the ground that proceedings in bankruptcy against the defendant are pending in some other federal district court.[41] And while the

[35] In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 196 Fed. 153, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 394.

[36] See In re Hirsch, 2 Ben. 493, 2 N. B. R. 3, Fed. Cas. No. 6,529; Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co., 222 U. S. 300, 32 Sup. Ct. 96, 56 L. Ed. 208, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; Progressive Building & Loan Co. v. Hall, 220 Fed. 45, 135 C. C. A. 613, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; John A. Roebling's Sons Co. v. Federal Storage Battery Car Co., 185 App. Div. 430, 173 N. Y. Supp. 297.

[37] In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815.

[38] In re Bugbee, 9 N. B. R. 258, Fed. Cas. No. 2,115. And see Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Bl. 402, 414.

[39] In re Schepeler, 4 Ben. 68, Fed. Cas. No. 12,453.

[40] In re People's Mail S. S. Co., 3 Ben. 226, 2 N. B. R. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 10,970.

[41] In re Richardson, 2 Ben. 517, 2 N. B. R. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,774; Markson v. Heaney, 1 Dill. 497, 4 N. B. R. 510, Fed. Cas. No. 9,098.

bankruptcy court has power to stay pending suits against the bankrupt, and also to empower the trustee to take the place of the bankrupt therein, it has no authority to withdraw from the state court a suit pending therein and compel its trial in the district court.[42]

Application for an order staying a suit, or enjoining further proceedings therein, may be made by the trustee in bankruptcy, if one has been appointed, or by the bankrupt himself, if no trustee has yet been selected,[43] or perhaps by a creditor of the estate whose interests might be affected by the result of the litigation. As a general rule, the plaintiff in the pending suit is cited before the court of bankruptcy on a rule to show cause why he should not be restrained from the further prosecution of his action, and thereupon, if the facts developed at the hearing will warrant it, an order, in the nature of a restraining order, may issue against him. But the more formal method of a writ of injunction may be resorted to.[44] But when this is desired, it is not necessary that the formal and plenary proceedings common to suits in equity in the circuit courts should be carried out. A petition stating the facts and praying for the order desired will be sufficient. Nor is it necessary that notice should be given of the application for injunction.[45] For similar reasons, any party who desires to obtain the dissolution of an injunction so granted may apply therefor by motion.[46]

The bankruptcy act of 1867 provided that pending suits against the bankrupt might be stayed "to await the determination of the court of bankruptcy on the question of the discharge, provided there is no unreasonable delay on the part of the bankrupt in endeavoring to obtain his discharge." [47] But the present law is much more explicit. It does not allow the stay to extend for a longer period than twelve months after the adjudication in bankruptcy, except where, before the expiration of that time, an application for discharge is filed, and then only until the question of the discharge is determined.[48] After a discharge has been [42] Samson v. Burton, 5 Ben. 325, 4 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 12,285.

[43] Brock v. Terrell, 2 N. B. R. 643, Fed. Cas. No. 1,914; In re Tifft, 18 N. B. R. 78, Fed. Cas. No. 14,031.

[44] In re Citizens' Sav. Bank, 9 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 2,735.

[45] In re William E. Delaney & Co., 124 Fed. 280, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634. But see Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co., 222 U. S. 300, 32 Sup. Ct. 96, 56 L. Ed. 208, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262.

[46] In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094.

[47] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5106. See In re Sweet, 36 Fed. 761; Greenwald v. Appell, 5 McCrary, 339, 17 Fed. 140.

[48] In re Weisberg (D. C.) 253 Fed. 833, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 616; In re Federal Biscuit Co., 214 Fed. 221, 130 C. C. A. 635, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; Pell v. McCabe (D. C.) 254 Fed. 356, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 762. "Adjudication," with respect to the time, means the date of the entry of a decree that the defendant is a bankrupt, or, if such decree is appealed from, then the date when such decree is finally confirmed. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 2. As to restraining granted or denied, there is no need of staying pending suits; for in the one case the bankrupt may plead his discharge in bar, and in the other, his liability to judgment is not affected by the bankruptcy proceedings. But the fact that the bankrupt has already received his discharge is no obstacle to an injunction from the court of bankruptcy directed against the enforcement of a collusive or fraudulent judgment or transfer of property.[49]

§ 188. Leave to Continue Suit in State Court.—The former bankruptcy law provided that "if the amount due the creditor is in dispute, the suit, by leave of the court in bankruptcy, may proceed to judgment for the purpose of ascertaining the amount due, which amount may be proved in bankruptcy, but execution shall be stayed."[50] No such provision is found in the present law. But practically the same result is worked out by leaving it in the discretion of the court of bankruptcy to stay the further prosecution of a pending suit after the adjudication. It may, of course, withhold its hand and leave the creditor to proceed. For example, in a case in the second circuit, the bankrupt was entitled to support and maintenance out of a trust fund, but under the laws of the state (New York) the surplus income of such a fund, over and above what is necessary for the beneficiary's support, may be made available to satisfy the claims of his creditors. Before the bankruptcy, certain creditors had brought a suit in the state court for this purpose. There was a proposal that the trustee in bankruptcy should then institute a similar action, but a majority of the creditors in number and amount voted against this, on the ground that they did not believe the action could be maintained by him. Orders were then made allowing the creditors to continue the prosecution of their suit, but on condition that the net amount recovered should be turned over to the trustee for distribution, and that, if the action were unsuccessful, the estate in bankruptcy should not be charged with the costs and expenses. And it was held that these orders were proper and could not be complained of by the bankrupt or by other creditors.[51]

That there may be cases in which the court of bankruptcy should not interfere with the prosecution of actions in the state courts is fur-creditors from prosecuting suits after the lapse of the time provided for by the terms of a composition, see In re Nebenzahl, 9 Ben. 243, 17 N. B. R. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 10,074.

[49] See Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9.

[50] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5106. See May v. Courtnay, 47 Ala. 185: In re Rundle, 2 N. B. R. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 12,138; In re Bousfield & Poole Mfg. Co., 17 N. B. R. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 1,704; In re Cooke, Fed. Cas. No. 3,172; Rutherford v. Rountree, 68 Ga. 725.

[51] In re Buchanan, 219 Fed. 492, 135 C. C. A. 204, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

ther shown by another clause of the act, which provides that a creditor may prove, as a claim against the estate, a judgment upon a provable debt rendered after the filing of the petition and before the consideration of the bankrupt's discharge, less costs incurred and interest accrued after the filing of the petition and up to the time of the entry of the judgment. (Bankruptcy Act, § 63, cl. 5.) Thus it is not necessary to obtain leave of the court of bankruptcy to continue to judgment a suit founded in tort, pending at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, for the claim would not be provable until the judgment was obtained.[52] Again, the law provides that "unliquidated claims against the bankrupt may, pursuant to application to the court, be liquidated in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate," [53] and this implies the authority to direct the liquidation of such a claim by suit in a state court. So, a pending suit on a dischargeable debt, in which the bankrupts had been arrested and given bail more than four months prior to their bankruptcy, may be permitted to proceed to judgment to enable the plaintiff to enforce his demand against the surety in the undertaking, in case it is in form a security for the payment of the judgment.[54] Moreover, a suit to enforce a valid security against property of the bankrupt may be allowed to continue, where nothing is to be gained for the general creditors by assuming jurisdiction over the property. For instance, where several attachments were levied so far before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings as not to be affected by them, a state court may proceed to determine the question of priority of liens as between the several creditors.[55] Again, a stay of proceedings against the bankrupt in a state court may be vacated, so as to permit creditors to move the state court to punish the bankrupt for contempt committed prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition.[56] But in no case whatever will the court of bankruptcy permit property which is in the custody and possession of a trustee in bankruptcy to be seized on execution or other final process from a state court based on a judgment against the bankrupt, or against the trustee as his successor in interest.[57]

[52] In re Hennocksburgh, 6 Ben. 150, 7 N. B. R. 37, Fed. Cas. No. 6,367; Louisville Dry Goods Co. v. Lanman, 135 Ky. 163, 121 S. W. 1042, 28 L. R. A. (N. S.) 363, 135 Am. St. Rep. 451.

[53] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63b. See Blair v. Carter's Adm'r, 78 Va. 621.

[54] In re Ennis v. Stoppani, 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679. See In re Martin, 105 Fed. 753, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423.

[55] Davis v. Friedlander, 104 U. S. 570, 26 L. Ed. 818.

[56] In re Sims, 176 Fed. 645, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 899.

[57] Allen v. Montgomery, 48 Miss. 101, 10 N. B. R. 503. Creditors of a bankrupt corporation may apply to the bankruptcy

§ 189. What Actions May be Stayed.—The provision of the act of 1867, authorizing a temporary stay of pending suits against the bankrupt, made no distinction between debts which would be released by his discharge and debts which would not be so released; and it was accordingly held that, even in cases where the claim was one which would not be affected by the discharge, proceedings on it must be stayed until the question of the discharge was determined.[58] But the present act expressly restricts the stay of suits to such as are "founded upon a claim from which a discharge would be a release." It is necessary, therefore, to warrant an order staying pending proceedings, first, that the claim in suit should be one which is provable in the bankruptcy proceedings (for otherwise it could not be affected by the discharge) and second, that, if provable, it should not be within the classes of claims which are expressly excepted from the operation of a discharge.[59] It is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to determine whether these two conditions exist, and its decision on the point is final and conclusive, unless reversed on appeal,[60] and it is not bound or concluded by any decision of the state court on the same question,[61] although the bankruptcy court is not required to enter into an investigation outside of the pleadings in the action to determine the character of the claim.[62] As to the first requisite, an unliquidated claim, which might have been liquidated and proved against the bankrupt, should be treated as a provable debt for this purpose.[63] So where the debt is clearly provable in bankruptcy, an action based upon it should be stayed, although its object is not to enforce collection of the claim, but to remove the bankrupt from his position as a member of a munici-court for leave to prosecute their claims to judgment, so as to enforce the liability of stockholders; but such creditors will not be permitted to issue executions. John A. Roebling's Sons Co. v. Federal Storage Battery Car Co., 185 App. Div. 430, 173 N. Y. Supp. 297.

[58] In re Ghirardelli, 1 Sawy. 343, 4 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 5,376; In re Rosenberg, 3 Ben. 14, Fed. Cas. No. 12,054; In re Schwartz, 14 Blatchf. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 12,502; In re Van Buren, Fed. Cas. No. 16,833.

[59] In re Camelo, 195 Fed. 632, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353. A fine imposed on a bankrupt by a state court for a civil contempt, for disobedience of its orders, is not a provable debt, and hence a court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to interfere with its enforcement. People v. Sheriff of Kings County, 206 Fed. 566. Where it is substantially doubtful whether or not the particular claim is dischargeable in bankruptcy, a motion to vacate the stay should be denied. In re Dunfee, 206 Fed. 745, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 721.

[60] In re Mustin, 165 Fed. 506, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 147; American Graphophone Co. v. Leeds & Catlin Co., 174 Fed. 158, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; Wagner v. United States, 104 Fed. 133, 43 C. C. A. 445, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

[61] Knott v. Putnam, 107 Fed. 907, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[62] In re Adler, 152 Fed. 422, 81 C. C. A. 564, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

[63] In re Hilton, 104 Fed. 981, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 774. But compare In re New York Tunnel Co., 159 Fed. 688, 86 C. C. A. 556, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 25. And see Imbriani v. Anderson, 76 N. H. 491, 84 Atl. 974.

pal fire department because of his failure to pay the debt in question.[64] Generally speaking, however, suits which contemplate some other relief than the collection of a debt are not to be stayed, as their prosecution would not ordinarily interfere with the bankruptcy proceedings.[65] Examples are proceedings for an accounting before a master in a patent infringement suit, where an interlocutory judgment had been rendered before the adjudication in bankruptcy,[66] and an action of forcible entry and detainer by a landlord, under the state statute, to recover possession of the leased premises.[67] And so, where a lease without rent, granted in consideration of the delivery of corporate stock of the lessee, provided for forfeiture of the lease on the bankruptcy of the lessee, the trustee in bankruptcy of an assignee of the lease cannot have the enforcement of the forfeiture clause enjoined, at least where there is no showing of fraud or mistake.[68] For similar reasons a court of bankruptcy is without power to stay a suit in a state court for money had and received, against a third person, who, in the character of a mere stakeholder, has possession of a fund which is also claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy.[69] But on the other hand, it is held by a state court that a suit brought under the statute to have a mortgage declared a general assignment for creditors should not be stayed on the filing of respondents' special plea setting up the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings when the bill was filed.[70]

Secondly, the prosecution of a pending action in a state court against the bankrupt should not be stayed or enjoined when the debt on which it is founded is one which will not be released by his discharge in bankruptcy,[71] except, of course, in cases where the temporary suspension of the action is necessary to enable the court of bankruptcy fully to carry out the provisions of the law and to exercise without hindrance

[64] In re Hicks, 133 Fed. 739, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

[65] In re United Wireless Telegraph Co., 192 Fed. 238, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[66] In re Leeds & Catlin Co., 175 Fed. 309, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679.

[67] In re Van Da Grift Motor Car Co., 192 Fed. 1015, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 474.

[68] Empress Theatre Co. v. Horton (C. C. A.) 266 Fed. 657, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[69] In re Interocean Transp. Co. of America (D. C.) 232 Fed. 408, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 651.

[70] Anders Bros. v. Latimer, 198 Ala. 573, 73 South. 925.

[71] In re Warnock (D. C.) 239 Fed. 779, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539; In re Johnson (D. C.) 233 Fed. 841, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597; Bloemecke v. Applegate (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 595; In re Camelo, 195 Fed. 632, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 353; A. Klipstein & Co. v. Allen-Miles Co., 136 Fed. 385, 69 C. C. A. 229, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 15; Continental Nat. Bank v. Katz (Ill.) 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 165; Black v. McClelland, 12 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 1,462; In re Dowie, 202 Fed. 816, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338. Where the bankrupt, though duly served in an action on a claim barred by his discharge, made default, it was held that the court of bankruptcy could not enjoin the enforcement of the judgment of the state court, for the defense of a discharge in bankruptcy is waived unless pleaded. In re Boardway (D. C.) 248 Fed. 364, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478.

its plenary jurisdiction over the estate of the bankrupt.[72] If, for example, the plaintiff is proceeding against the bankrupt for a debt "created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity," the claim is one which will not be affected by a discharge, if granted, and therefore the action should not be stayed.[73] Again, since a suit to require a defendant corporation to issue a certificate of stock, and for damages for refusing to issue it, involves a claim from which a discharge in bankruptcy would not be a release, the suit cannot be stayed.[74] And wages earned by a bankrupt after his adjudication belong to him and not to his estate in bankruptcy, and the court has no jurisdiction to take action against a creditor who has wrongfully collected such wages on an assignment made prior to the bankruptcy.[75]

So also, according to the preponderance of authority, alimony awarded to a divorced wife by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, to be paid in fixed periodical instalments, and overdue at the time the husband files his petition in bankruptcy (or is adjudged bankrupt on an involuntary petition), is not provable as a "debt" against his estate, and is not such a claim as will be released by his discharge; and therefore the wife will not be stayed or enjoined, pending the bankruptcy proceedings, from pursuing appropriate remedies for its collec-

[72] In re Nuttall (D. C.) 201 Fed. 557, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800.

[73] In re Cole, 106 Fed. 837, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 780; In re Thaw, 180 Fed. 419, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 759; In re Lawrence, 163 Fed. 131, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698; In re Gulick, 186 Fed. 350, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Wollock, 120 Fed. 516, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685; Mackel v. Rochester, 135 Fed. 904; In re Adler, 144 Fed. 659, 75 C. C. A. 461, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Ennis & Stoppani, 171 Fed. 755, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Horter v. Harlan, 9 Phila. 63, 7 N. B. R. 238. See Gleason v. O'Mara, 180 Fed. 417, 103 C. C. A. 563, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; In re Kalk (D. C.) 270 Fed. 627, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597. A complaint in an action in a state court alleging that the defendant, having in his possession money which was the property of the plaintiff, refused to pay over the same and converted it to his own use, was held (by Judge Ray, in the Northern District of New York) to charge a "willful and malicious injury" to property, a judgment for which, if the allegations were sustained, would not be dischargeable in bankruptcy, so that the defendant, on his subsequent bankruptcy, was held not entitled to an injunction restraining further prosecution of the action. In re Northrup, 265 Fed. 420. Where the organizer and president of a corporation induced the stockholders to let him use the corporate funds for the purchase of land for the company, but represented the price paid as larger than it actually was, thus pocketing a secret profit, a stockholder's suit against him to recover such profit necessarily involves a charge against him of misappropriating money in a fiduciary capacity; and as a claim based upon such a charge is not dischargeable in bankruptcy, it follows that, the defendant becoming bankrupt, there is no ground for staying the prosecution of the stockholder's suit. In re Bloemecke (D. C.) 265 Fed. 343, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[74] In re Clipper Mfg. Co., 179 Fed. 843, 103 C. C. A. 260, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683.

[75] In re Karns (D. C.) 148 Fed. 143, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 841.

tion.[76] In a few of the district courts, however, the doctrine has prevailed that arrears of alimony, due at the time of the bankruptcy, constitute a provable debt and will be released by the discharge, and hence that contempt proceedings or other coercive means of enforcing their payment, may be stayed to await the determination of the court of bankruptcy on the question of the bankrupt's discharge.[77] But as to future instalments of alimony, that is, such as will become due and payable under the original decree after the date of adjudication in bankruptcy, it is clear that these are not provable against the bankrupt's estate, and therefore not affected by his discharge.[78] The same principle applies to a judgment in a bastardy proceeding, requiring the putative father to provide for the maintenance of the child; such an award is more in the nature of a fine or punishment than a "debt"; it is not an obligation from which the defendant will be released by his discharge in bankruptcy, and hence proceedings for its enforcement should not be stayed.[79] So again, an action for breach of promise of marriage is an action on contract and not in tort, although seduction is also alleged, and a general verdict for the plaintiff, not specifically awarding any damages for the seduction, creates a debt provable and dischargeable in bankruptcy, so that a suit for its enforcement may be stayed.[80]

[76] Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575. 21 Sup. Ct. 735; 45 L. Ed. 1009, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829; In re Hubbard, 98 Fed. 710, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; Turner v. Turner, 108 Fed. 785, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Shepard, 97 Fed. 187; In re Anderson, 97 Fed. 321, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 858; In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 471; In re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 837; In re Lawrie, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 77; In re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 233, 11 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252; In re Lachmeyer, 18 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966; Barclay v. Barclay, 184 Ill. 375, 56 N. E. 636, 51 L. R. A. 351; Welty v. Welty, 96 Ill. App. 141; Maisner v. Maisner, 62 App. Div. 286, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1107; Young v. Young, 35 Misc. Rep. 335, 71 N. Y. Supp. 944; Lemert v. Lemert, 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 253. In the recent case of In re Vadner (D. C.) 259 Fed. 614, the following rules were made: (1) A claim for alimony or for the maintenance of wife or child is not a provable claim which a discharge in bankruptcy will release, and hence a suit pending thereon in a state court cannot be stayed subsequent to the adjudication. (2) Relative to a stay ordered by the bankruptcy court, an action for divorce is not a claim which would be released by a discharge. (3) The enforcement of a judgment for the support of the wife and children of the bankrupt, rendered more than four months before the bankruptcy proceeding, and a lien therefor expressly created by the judgment on a note and mortgage, which, pursuant to the judgment, were lodged with the clerk of the court, will not be stayed.

[77] Wagner v. United States, 104 Fed. 133, 43 C. C. A. 445, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596; In re Houston, 94 Fed. 119, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; In re Van Orden, 96 Fed. 86, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; In re Challoner, 98 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; Arrington v. Arrington, 131 N. C. 143, 42 S. E. 554, 92 Am. St. Rep. 769; In re Williams' Estate, 118 N. Y. Supp. 562.

[78] See In re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 837; In re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 235, 11 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252; In re Lachemeyer, 18 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966: In re Challoner, 98 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442.

[79] In re Baker, 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101; In re Cotton, Fed. Cas. No. 3,269; Hawes v. Cooksey, 13 Ohio, 242.

[80] In re Warth, 196 Fed. 571, 28 Am.

But there are cases in which a pending action in a state court should be allowed to proceed, even though it involves a provable and dischargeable claim. Thus where the bankrupt is a corporation, and a creditor has an action pending against it, but it appears that his ultimate object is to enforce a statutory liability against the directors and stockholders, and to do this he must first have recovered a judgment against the corporation, the bankruptcy court will refuse to enjoin him and will allow him to proceed to judgment against the bankrupt.[81] So, where the creditor's object is not to collect anything from the bankrupt, but to enforce the liability of the surety on a bail bond.[82]

On the other hand, the general rule must be modified in cases where interference by the court of bankruptcy is necessary to prevent unlawful seizure of property within its exclusive jurisdiction or to avoid the acquisition of preferences or the enforcement of liens which are annulled by the adjudication in bankruptcy. Thus, the statute does not prevent the court of bankruptcy from restraining attaching creditors of the bankrupt from the further prosecution of their attachment suits in a state court, when the preference created by the levy of such attachments was the act of bankruptcy on which the adjudication was based, and the petition was filed within four months after the levy, even though the creditors' causes of action were such as would not be affected by a discharge of the debtor in bankruptcy.[83] So also, the court may interfere where proceedings between the bankrupt and another in a state court are collusive and intended to give such other an advantage over other creditors.[84] But the jurisdiction acquired before the proceedings in bankruptcy by a state court in proceedings for the partition of an estate in which the bankrupt is interested will not be interfered with by the bankruptcy court.[85]

Proceedings to enforce the payment of a tax levied by a state or a municipal corporation should not be stayed or interfered with by the court of bankruptcy. For taxes are not debts of such a character as to be released by a discharge, and moreover they are entitled to priority

Bankr. Rep. 41; In re McCauley, 101 Fed. 223, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122.

[81] In re Marshall Paper Co., 95 Fed. 419, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653; In re Remington Automobile & Motor Co., 119 Fed. 441, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; John A. Roebling's Sons Co. v. Federal Storage Battery Car Co., 185 App. Div. 430, 173 N. Y. Supp. 297.

[82] In re Franklin, 106 Fed. 666, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

[83] Bear v. Chase (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 920, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Lilienthal, 256 Fed. 819, 168 C. C. A. 165, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 665.

[84] Samson v. Burton, 5 Ben. 343, 5 N. B. R. 459, Fed. Cas. No. 12,286; In re Clark, 9 Blatchf. 372, 6 N. B. R. 403, Fed. Cas. No. 2,801.

[85] In re Caldwell, 2 Hughes, 291, Fed. Cas. No. 2,300.

of payment out of the estate of a bankrupt and outrank the claims of all other creditors.[86]

§ 190. Foreclosure of Mortgages and Other Liens.—As a general rule, the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy against a debtor does not take away the jurisdiction of a state court to proceed with a suit already pending therein for the foreclosure of a mortgage or the enforcement of any other valid lien against his property, and such pending action will not be stayed or enjoined by order of the court of bankruptcy, provided, of course, that the lien attached more than four months before the bankruptcy and is otherwise unimpeachable. The trustee in bankruptcy may be authorized or directed to intervene in such suit for the protection of the interests of the general creditors or for the purpose of setting up any defense which would be available to the bankrupt or to them. The proceedings in the state court may be stopped if there is good ground for disputing the date or the validity of the alleged lien. And it is not outside the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to restrain the creditor from proceeding further in his action, and to take charge of the property affected, for administration under its own direction, if it appears that there is a substantial excess of value in the property over the amount of the creditor's claim, and that this will probably be sacrificed at a forced sale under process of the state court, while the property could be more economically sold and at a better price by the trustee in bankruptcy. But except in such cases as these, the creditor will be allowed to proceed in the state court without interference. These general principles will be more fully discussed in a subsequent chapter.[87]

§ 191. Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment.—Where a creditor has recovered judgment and caused final process to be issued and levied on property of the debtor, before the latter's adjudication in bankruptcy, if no stay of proceedings is ordered, nor other measures taken, in the court of bankruptcy to arrest the action, the officer holding the writ may proceed to make a sale of the property, and his deed will give the purchaser a title which cannot be impeached collaterally by the trustee in bankruptcy.[88] But if the writ was issued and levied within four months before the institution of the proceedings in bankruptcy, then,

[86] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 11a, 17, 64. See In re Duryee, 2 Fed. 68.

[87] See infra, ch. 20, § 390.

[88] Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall. 642, 22 L. Ed. 549; In re Hufnagel, 12 N. B. R. 554, Fed. Cas. No. 6,837; Thames v. Miller, 2 Woods, 564, Fed. Cas. No. 13,860; Elston v. Castor, 101 Ind. 426, 51 Am. Rep. 754; Hunter v. Porch, 4 Ky. Law Rep. 826; Fisher v. Lewis, 69 Mo. 629; Thompson v. Moses, 43 Ga. 383; Wheeler v. Redding, 55 Ga. 87.

by the provisions of section 67 of the act, its lien is extinguished by the adjudication in bankruptcy, and consequently the officer holds the property as a mere temporary custodian, and the trustee is entitled to recover possession of it, and the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to order the surrender of the property, on a summary petition by the trustee.[89] Moreover, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction, by injunction, to forbid an execution creditor of the bankrupt from proceeding to sell property on which a levy has been made at the date of the adjudication, where the execution constitutes the act of bankruptcy found against the defendant, or is an unlawful preference and contrary to the provisions of the bankruptcy law.[90] Even though the judgment is not thus impeachable, the court of bankruptcy may enjoin the sale by the sheriff (at least until the trustee in bankruptcy can intervene) when it appears to be necessary for the protection of the interests of the general creditors.[91]

If it shall appear to be for the best interests of all concerned, the court of bankruptcy has power, instead of enjoining the sale by the sheriff, to allow that officer to proceed with the sale and hold the proceeds subject to its own order.[92] When this is done, the sheriff will be directed to bring the entire proceeds, less costs, into the court of bankruptcy; or he may be directed to satisfy the execution creditor (if the latter's claim is valid and not affected by the adjudication), and to pay over the remainder to the trustee in bankruptcy.[93] If the sheriff has already made a sale of the property before the adjudication in [89] In re Francis-Valentine Co. (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 793, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Richards, 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Francis-Valentine Co., 93 Fed. 953. 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 188; In re Schnepf, 2 Ben. 72, 1 N. B. R. 190, Fed. Cas. No. 12,471.

[90] In re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 815; In re Kimball, 97 Fed. 29, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re Lady Bryan Min. Co., 6 N. B. R. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 7,980; Beattie v. Gardner, 4 Ben. 479, 4 N. B. R. 323, Fed. Cas. No. 1,195; In re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, 6 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Irving v. Hughes, 2 N. B. R. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 7,076; In re Metzler, 1 Ben. 356, 1 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 9,512; Southern Loan & Trust Co. v. Benbow, 96 Fed. 514, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 9.

[91] In re Lady Bryan Min. Co., 6 N. B. R. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 7,980; In re Globe Cycle Works, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 421; Eastburn v. Yardley, Fed. Cas. No. 4,252. An injunction restraining proceedings on execution under a judgment against the bankrupt will be dissolved where the trustee has taken no measures to recover the property levied on, and the bankrupt declares that the property does not belong to him. In re Olcott, 2 Ben. 443, Fed. Cas. No. 10,478.

[92] That property is perishable is no ground for dissolving an injunction which restrained a sale thereof on execution prior to the adjudication. In re Metzler, 1 Ben. 356, 1 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 9,512.

[93] In re Bernstein, 2 Ben. 44, 1 N. B. R. 199, Fed. Cas. No. 1,350; O'Brien v. Weld, 92 U. S. 81, 23 L. Ed. 675.

bankruptcy, but still has the proceeds in his hands, he will not be restrained from paying to the execution creditor the amount of his debt, if the creditor is legally entitled thereto, but will merely be required to account to the trustee in bankruptcy for any balance that may remain. But if the lien was dissolved, because the writ was levied within four months before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, the case is different. Here, the proceeds of the sale do not belong to the execution creditor, but to the estate of the bankrupt; and although there is some difference of opinion, the rule may be stated, as sustained by the best authorities, that the officer may be enjoined from disposing of the fund in his hands, and ordered to surrender it to the trustee in bankruptcy, and this, on summary proceedings, and without the necessity of resorting to a plenary suit.[94] If the sheriff has paid over the proceeds of the execution to the creditor, after the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt, the trustee will still have a remedy by action against the creditor to recover the fund, if the levy was dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings or was voidable as a preference;[95] but otherwise where the sale was made and the proceeds paid over to the creditor before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, though less than four months prior thereto, since the statute applies only to liens existing and unsatisfied at the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[96] An adjudication in bankruptcy brings the entire estate of the bankrupt within the custody and control of the court of bankruptcy; and if a sheriff thereafter levies on goods of the bankrupt, he may be enjoined from making a sale under his levy. The title to the goods vests in the trustee in bankruptcy, and he alone must make the sale, the proceeds being subject to any valid liens or claims upon them.[97]

[94] Clark v. Larremore, 188 U. S. 486, 23 Sup. Ct. 363, 47 L. Ed. 555, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476; In re Kenney, 105 Fed. 897, 45 C. C. A. 113, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re English, 127 Fed. 940, 62 C. C. A. 572, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 674; In re Franks, 95 Fed. 635, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634; Schmilovitz v. Bernstein, 22 R. I. 330, 47 Atl. 884; In re Duguid, 100 Fed. 274, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794; Bear v. Chase, 99 Fed. 920, 40 C. C. A. 182, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; Miller v. O'Brien, 9 Blatchf. 270, 9 N. B. R. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 9,586; In re Grinnell, 7 Ben. 42, 9 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 5,830; Pennington v. Lowenstein, 1 N. B. R. 570, Fed. Cas. No. 10,938; In re Richards, 95 Fed. 258, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Fellerath, 95 Fed. 121, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Francis-Valentine Co. (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 793, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 522; Mills v. Davis, 10 N. B. R. 340; Kosches v. Libowitz (Tex. Civ. App.) 56 S. W. 613; Davis v. Jewett, 17 S. Dak. 410, 97 N. W. 16. Compare In re Easley, 93 Fed. 419, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Campbell, 1 Abb. U. S. 185, 1 N. B. R. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 2,349.

[95] Bradley v. Frost, 3 Dill. 457, Fed. Cas. No. 1,780.

[96] Davis v. Jewett, 17 S. Dak. 410, 97 N. W. 16; Levor v. Seiter, 69 App. Div. 33, 74 N. Y. Supp. 499; Greene v. Montana Brewing Co., 28 Mont. 380, 72 Pac. 751; Farrell v. W. B. Lockett & Co., 115 Tenn. 494, 91 S. W. 209.

[97] Leonard v. Yohnk, 68 Wis. 587, 32 N. W. 702, 60 Am. Rep. 884; Pennington

In a suit to revive a judgment against a bankrupt, his trustee is the proper person on whom to serve the citation, if he is still in office.[98]

§ 192. Proceedings Supplementary to Execution.—Where proceedings supplementary to execution are pending in a state court at the time of the adjudication of the judgment debtor as a bankrupt, the judgment being a debt provable in bankruptcy, the court of bankruptcy, on the application of the bankrupt or his trustee, may order a stay of all proceedings in the state court to await the determination of the court of bankruptcy on the question of the bankrupt's discharge.[99] When a judgment in a state court has been recovered against two defendants on their joint and several obligations, and one of them is afterwards adjudged bankrupt but not the other, proceedings in the state court supplementary to execution on such judgment may be stayed and enjoined as to the bankrupt, but not as to the other judgment debtor.[100] Of course, the state court may itself stay the proceedings, and it is held that a bankrupt who has omitted to apply for a stay of proceedings in an action against him, pending the question of his discharge, may nevertheless apply to the state court after judgment to have supplementary proceedings against him thereon stayed, on the ground that he has been discharged, if the plaintiff's demand is of such a nature as to be released by the discharge.[101] But the adjudication in bankruptcy will not affect the state court's jurisdiction of the supplementary proceedings, nor authorize the debtor to refuse to comply with its order directing his examination, in the absence of an application to the federal court for a stay of such proceedings.[102] If the plaintiff has procured the appointment of a receiver in his supplementary proceedings, and the latter has taken actual possession of the property, he will not, under any ordinary circumstances, be interfered with by the bankruptcy court, but leave will be given to the trustee to intervene in the creditor's action, for the purpose of contesting his claim, if there

v. Sale, 1 N. B. R. 572, Fed. Cas. No. 10,939.

98 Grayson's Ex'r v. Norton, 33 La. Ann. 1018.

99 In re Reed, 1 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 11,637; In re Kletchka, 92 Fed. 901, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 479; In re Lesser (C. C. A.) 99 Fed. 913, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758.

100 In re Burke, 155 Fed. 703, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; In re De Long, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 26.

101 World Co. v. Brooks (N. Y. Com. Pleas) 3 N. B. R. 588. And see In re Madden (D. C.) 257 Fed. 581, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 452.

102 In re William E. De Laney & Co., 124 Fed. 280, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 634. While an order in supplementary proceedings is stayed by an adjudication of bankruptcy for 12 months therefrom, the proceedings are not superseded, and they can be continued after the expiration of that period. Taylor v. Buser (Sup.) 167 N. Y. Supp. 887.

is any ground to do so, and for the protection of the interests of the general creditors.[103]

§ 193. Proceedings on Appeal.—As a general rule, the bankruptcy of a party does not prevent the hearing and determination of an appeal from a judgment of a state court by the appellate court of the state. Proceedings on such appeal are not ipso facto suspended by the adjudication in bankruptcy nor will the court of bankruptcy order them stayed.[104] Where the bankrupt was the appellant, his trustee, on producing the proper evidence of his official character, may, on motion, be substituted as appellant in the case.[105] If the trustee does not intervene and seek to be substituted, still the bankrupt, prior to his discharge, has sufficient interest in preventing the establishment of a claim against him to enable him to maintain an appeal from a judgment thereon.[106] Though the judgment was not rendered until after the adjudication in bankruptcy, yet the bankrupt may prosecute an appeal or writ of error thereon in his own name,[107] at least if his trustee will give his written consent thereto.[108] But after the bankrupt has received his discharge, he has no further interest in any action pending against him, and cannot prosecute an appeal from a judgment rendered against him before the discharge was granted, though his trustee may do so.[109]

[103] Supra, § 27. And see In re Whipple, 6 Biss. 516, 13 N. B. R. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 17,512. In re Cefola (D. C.) 222 Fed. 171.

[104] Smith v. Meisenheimer, 104 Ky. 753, 47 S. W. 1087; Flanagan v. Pearson, 42 Tex. 1, 19 Am. Rep. 40; Merritt v. Glidden, 39 Cal. 559, 2 Am. Rep. 479; Alston v. Wingfield, 53 Ga. 18; Booker v. Adkins, 48 Ala. 529; In re Hirsch, 2 Ben. 493, 2 N. B. R. 3, Fed. Cas. No. 6,529; Booker v. Blythe, 90 Ark. 165, 118 S. W. 401; Bennett v. Bennett, 65 S. W. 12, 23 Ky. Law Rep. 1281. Compare In re Metcalf, 2 Ben. 78, 1 N. B. R. 201, Fed. Cas. No. 9,494; In re Leszynsky, 3 Ben. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 8,278. See United Wireless Telegraph Co. v. National Electric Signaling Co., 198 Fed. 385, 117 C. C. A. 261, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 889; Kohn, Weil & Co. v. Weinberg, 110 Miss. 275, 70 South. 353. The court in which the appeal is pending may itself stay further proceedings, but cannot dismiss and finally determine the cause merely on a showing that the defendant has been declared a bankrupt. Tutt v. Fighting Wolf Mining Co. (Mo. App.) 209 S. W. 304.

[105] Herndon v. Howard, 9 Wall. 664, 19 L. Ed. 809; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 20 L. Ed. 287. See Sigler v. Shehy, 15 Ohio, 471.

[106] Sanford v. Sanford, 58 N. Y. 67, 17 Am. Rep. 206; O'Neil v. Dougherty, 46 Cal. 575; Hughes v. Thweatt, 57 Miss. 376; Schoonmaker v. Pittsburgh Contracting Co., 176 App. Div. 48, 161 N. Y. Supp. 186, 1055.

[107] Hill v. Harding, 131 U. S. (Appendix) cc, 26 L. Ed. 310; O'Neil v. Dougherty, 46 Cal. 575. But compare Parks v. Doty, 13 Bush. (Ky.) 727; Daugherty v. Ringo, 1 Ky. Law Rep. 282. And see Jenkins v. International Bank, 97 Ill. 568.

[108] Christy v. Des Moines City Ry. Co., 126 Iowa, 428, 102 N. W. 194.

[109] Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 20 L. Ed. 287; Wilson v. McMullen, 4 Ky. Law Rep. 895; Jones v. Barnes, 107 Miss. 800, 66 South. 212.

§ 194. Contempt Proceedings.—The power of a court of bankruptcy to stay proceedings in a state court against the bankrupt for a contempt of the latter court will depend upon the nature of the duty or obligation which is sought to be enforced. If the contempt alleged consists of a disobedience to the process or orders of the court, the violation of an injunction, the wilful use of false affidavits, or other affront to the court itself, it would appear that the court of bankruptcy could have no motive for interfering, and every principle of comity would forbid an attempt to control the action of the state tribunal.[110] On the other hand, if the proceeding for contempt is merely used as a means of enforcing a private obligation, the authority of the court of bankruptcy to forbid its prosecution must depend upon the question whether or not the creditor's claim is of a nature to be released by the discharge in bankruptcy.[111] For example those authorities which hold that alimony is a provable debt in bankruptcy, and therefore one which will be affected by the discharge, also maintain the authority of the court of bankruptcy to enjoin the person to whom such alimony is due from forcing its payment by the bankrupt by proceeding against him in the state court as for contempt.[112]

§ 195. Effect of the Stay.—When the court of bankruptcy has exercised its power to order a stay of proceedings in a pending suit against the bankrupt, founded on a debt from which his discharge would be a release, this does not divest the state court of jurisdiction over the case, and "the stay does not operate as a bar to the action, but only as a suspension of proceedings until the question of the bankrupt's discharge shall have been determined in the United States court sitting in bankruptcy. After the determination of that question in that court, the court in which the suit is pending may proceed to such judgment as the circumstances of the case may require. If the discharge is refused, the plaintiff, upon establishing his claim, may obtain a general judgment." [113] If, on the other hand, the discharge is granted, the bankrupt

[110] In re Koronsky, 170 Fed. 719, 96 C. C. A. 39, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 851; In re Hall, 170 Fed. 721, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; In re Hill, 2 N. B. R. 140, Fed. Cas. No. 6,486; People v. Sheriff of Kings County (D. C.) 206 Fed. 566, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 84.

[111] In re Adler, 144 Fed. 659, 75 C. C. A. 461, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

[112] See In re Van Orden, 96 Fed. 86, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; In re Houston, 94 Fed. 119, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; In re Challoner, 98 Fed. 82, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 442; In re Summers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 60. Contra, In re Pyatt (D. C.) 257 Fed. 362.

[113] Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S. 633, 2 Sup. Ct. 404, 27 L. Ed. 493; Byers v. First Nat. Bank, 85 Ill. 423; Tinkum v. O'Neale, 5 Nev. 93. Where a suit in equity abates by the bankruptcy of the plaintiff before the time for answering has expired, no answer is required until a plaintiff has been substituted by order of the court, and the court has no power to order entry of a decree pro con-may of course plead it in bar of the further prosecution of the action. But it is provided that "a claim for taxable costs incurred in good faith by a creditor before the filing of the petition, in an action to recover a provable debt" may be proved and allowed as a claim against the bankrupt's estate.[114] While the stay, however, remains in force it suspends all further proceedings in the action. Thus, a creditor enforcing an execution on a judgment recovered in the state court, in defiance of an injunction of the court of bankruptcy, in which the debtor has filed a voluntary petition, is guilty of contempt,[115] and a sale of property of the bankrupt on execution, after notice of the injunction, will render the officer liable.[116] But where the suit is against the bankrupt and another jointly, and proceedings are stayed as to the bankrupt, it is said that judgment may be rendered against both defendants, and an order made staying execution as to the bankrupt until the question of his discharge is determined.[117] And where the creditor has already recovered a judgment against the bankrupt and a third person, though he is enjoined from enforcing execution as against the bankrupt, this does not in any way affect his right to proceed against the other defendant.[118]

§ 196. Effect of Grant or Denial of Discharge.—An injunction issued by the court of bankruptcy, staying proceedings against the bankrupt in a state court until the question of his discharge shall have been fesso. Western Star Lodge v. Burkes Const. Co. (C. C. A.) 267 Fed. 550, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

114 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63, cl. 3.

115 In re Atkinson, 3 Pittsb. 423, 7 N. B. R. 143, Fed. Cas. No. 606. Where a bankrupt obtained an injunctive order from the bankruptcy court staying all suits and proceedings against him on the part of certain creditors, their agents and attorneys, to collect certain specified debts, and thereupon a suit by one of the creditors was discontinued, and afterwards a new suit was brought through the same attorney in the same court for the recovery of the same debt, with allegations of fraud, it was held that the last named suit was a violation of the injunction. In re Schwarz, 14 Fed. 787. But see Kittredge v. Emerson, 15 N. H. 227, where it was ruled that the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy to issue an injunction of this kind may be inquired into by the state court, and if the latter finds that the federal court has acted without authority, the injunction may be disregarded, or the parties may be enjoined from attempting to enforce it. Where, after a judgment creditor had levied execution, the debtor filed a petition and was adjudged bankrupt, and proceedings on the execution were stayed, it was held that, although the bankrupt had waived in the judgment his right to personal exemptions, it was nevertheless a contempt of court for the judgment creditor to proceed under the writ of execution to sell property set aside to the bankrupt on his claim of exemptions, the restraining order not having been modified so as to allow such proceedings; and this is so even though the creditor was entitled to reach such property. In re Braun (D. C.) 259 Fed. 309, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 695.

116 Stinson v. McMurray, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 339.

117 Byers v. First Nat. Bank, 85 Ill. 423. But compare Hinman v. Cutler, 2 Low. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 6,524.

118 Penny v. Taylor, 10 N. B. R. 200, Fed. Cas. No. 10,957.

determined, if not ipso facto dissolved by the granting of the discharge, should ordinarily be vacated as a matter of course on the application of the creditor who was stayed or enjoined.[119] After the discharge has been granted, the bankrupt's further relief against the prosecution of suits in the state courts, on causes of action such as to be affected by the discharge, must be sought and obtained in those courts only, and they will determine the effect of the discharge on his pleading it. Hence an injunction obtained ex parte in the bankruptcy court, after the discharge has been granted, continuing the previous injunction, was held to have been improvidently granted and was vacated.[120] If the defendant fails to obtain his discharge, an action pending against him in a state court at the time of the adjudication survives.[121] If such a suit was pending in an appellate court, and was ordered abated on the occurrence of the bankruptcy proceeding, and the bankrupt fails to obtain his discharge, the plaintiff may then have the case reinstated for hearing.[122]

§ 197. Pending Actions by Bankrupt as Plaintiff.—It was the doctrine of many of the earlier cases that a suit at law or in equity pending and undetermined at the time of the adjudication of the plaintiff as a bankrupt, and founded on a cause of action which would pass to his trustee in bankruptcy, would abate by reason of such bankruptcy, unless the trustee was substituted as a party, and that, if the trustee on due notice, omitted to intervene, the action should be dismissed.[123] For the rule was inflexible that, after an adjudication in bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee, the bankrupt had no right to prosecute further any action begun by him before his bankruptcy; if the action was to continue, it must be in the name of the trustee.[124] But in view of the fact that the statute makes it optional with the trustee whether or not to intervene, the better authorities now hold that a pending action

[119] In re Rosenthal, 108 Fed. 368, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799; In re Flanders, 121 Fed. 936, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; In re Thomas, 3 N. B. R. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 13,890; Kittredge v. Emerson, 15 N. H. 227. The same action should be taken by a state court, when the stay of proceedings was granted by it. Wakeman v. Throckmorton, 74 Conn. 616, 51 Atl. 554.

[120] In re Havens (C. C. A.) 272 Fed. 975, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 711; In re Herzberg, 25 Fed. 699.

[121] American Woolen Co. v. Maaget, 86 Conn. 234, 85 Atl. 583; Anders Bros. v. Latimer, 198 Ala. 573, 73 South. 925.

[122] Clark v. Fighting Wolf Mining Co. (Mo. App.) 209 S. W. 307.

[123] See Gear v. Fitch, 3 Ban. & A. 573, Fed. Cas. No. 5,290; Cook v. Lansing, 3 McLean, 571, Fed. Cas. No. 3,162; Lacy v. Rockett, 11 Ala. 1002; Brooks v. Harris, 12 Ala. 555; McNutt v. King, 59 Ala. 597; Sutherland v. Davis, 42 Ind. 26, 10 N. B. R. 424; Towle v. Davenport, 57 N. H. 149, 16 N. B. R. 478; Negley v. Jeffers, 28 Ohio St. 90; Atwood v. Bailey, 184 Mass. 133, 68 N. E. 13.

[124] Abernathy v. Phillips, 82 Va. 769, 1 S. E. 113; Charles v. Bain, 9 Ky. Law Rep. 398; Dessau v. Johnson, 66 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 4.

will not abate merely by reason of the bankruptcy of the plaintiff.[125] In fact, the transfer of the right of action to a trustee in bankruptcy is a matter of defense to be set up by the defendant, and the failure of the plaintiff to disclose the fact of his bankruptcy is not a fraud nor ground for a new trial.[126] Besides, where no trustee has been appointed, the bankrupt still retains title to his property, so that he may maintain a suit on a chose in action.[127]

Upon the appointment of a trustee, there are at least three courses open to him with regard to pending suits by the bankrupt as plaintiff. In the first place, the trustee may, with the approval of the court of bankruptcy, be permitted to prosecute as trustee any suit commenced by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication with like force and effect as though it had been commenced by him.[128] Secondly, a trustee in bankruptcy, though vested with title to all the transferable estate of the bankrupt, is not obliged to accept anything which may prove onerous or unprofitable to his charge. Hence if he judges that there is but slight prospect of a recovery in an action instituted by the bankrupt, and that his intervention is likely to involve the estate in costs and expenses without an adequate return, he may decline to prosecute the action. In that case the suit may be continued by the bankrupt in his own name and for his own benefit.[129] Thirdly, the trustee may consent that the bankrupt shall continue to prosecute the action in his own name, without losing his right to whatever may be recovered in the action, or divesting himself of the title passed to him by the adjudication in bankruptcy.[130] The right of the trustee to receive the fruits

125 Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 467, 26 L. Ed. 949; King v. Morrison, 5 Ark. 519; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Nuzum, 60 Ind. 533; Springer v. Vanderpool, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 362; Griffin v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 119 Ga. 664, 46 S. E. 870.

126 Coulson v. Ferree, 82 S. W. 1000, 26 Ky. Law Rep. 959.

127 Rand v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 186 N. Y. 58, 78 N. E. 574, 116 Am. St. Rep. 530, 9 Ann. Cas. 542.

128 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11c. And see Ames v. Gilman, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 239; Van Camp v. McCulley, 89 Ohio St. 1, 104 N. E. 1004.

129 Hubbard v. Gould, 74 N. H. 25, 64 Atl. 668; Griffin v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 119 Ga. 664, 46 S. E. 870; Towle v. Rowe, 58 N. H. 394; Ramsey v. Fellows, 58 N. H. 607; Conner v. Southern Expr. Co., 42 Ga. 37, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543, 9 N. B. R. 138; Greenall v. Hersum, 220 Mass. 278, 107 N. E. 941. But see Peters v. Wallace, 4 S. W. 914, 9 Ky. Law Rep. 215. Before a bankrupt can maintain an action on a claim which, under the adjudication in bankruptcy, passed to his trustee, on the ground that the trustee elected not to take such claim, it devolves upon the bankrupt to show that the trustee was informed of the nature of the claim and that he elected not to take it. Buckingham v. Buckingham, 36 Ohio St. 68. And note that "costs taxable against an involuntary bankrupt who was, at the time of the filing of the petition against him, plaintiff in a cause of action which would pass to the trustee, and which the trustee declines to prosecute after notice," may be proved and allowed as a claim against the bankrupt's estate. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a.

130 Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 467, 26 L. Ed. 949; Gilmore v. Bangs, of the judgment, and of the defendant to be protected in paying the amount to the proper party, may be secured by proper steps taken for that purpose.[131] If no trustee in bankruptcy has yet been appointed, the defendant may, in case of recovery, protect himself against liability to another suit by a trustee, when appointed, by an application to the court of bankruptcy.[132] It has been held that the court in which the action is tried may direct the jury, if they find for the plaintiff, to find that he recover for the use of his trustee in bankruptcy.[133] Or the court of bankruptcy may make its order requiring the defendant to pay the amount of the judgment to the trustee.[134] After the discharge of the trustee, or after the payment of all creditors and the discharge of the bankrupt, the latter may take up and continue the prosecution of any actions which were pending at the time of his bankruptcy and which remain unsettled.[135]

It remains to be stated that if the cause of action, in a suit pending in the name of the bankrupt as plaintiff at the time of the adjudication, is one which does not pass to the trustee in bankruptcy, the bankrupt himself may continue to prosecute the action without any reference to his trustee or to the proceedings in bankruptcy.[136] Thus, where the bankrupt before his adjudication had begun an action in a state court to recover damages for a malicious prosecution and arrest, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to control him in the further conduct of such suit, the right of action therein not vesting in the trustee, and 55 Ga. 403: Peck v. United States, 15 Ct. Cl. 364; Mayhew v. Pentecost, 129 Mass. 332; Williams v. Fowle, 132 Mass. 385; Thatcher v. Rockwell, 4 Colo. 375; Reed v. Paul, 131 Mass. 129. Where defendant conveyed to plaintiff, with full covenants of warranty, land from which the plaintiff was later evicted by foreclosure of a prior mortgage, it was held no defense to plaintiff's suit on his warranty that, after the conveyance and pending the foreclosure, the plaintiff was adjudged bankrupt, and the trustee and referee in bankruptcy, though rejecting this real estate, did not reject the right of action on the covenant against incumbrances. Smith v. Wahl, 88 N. J. Law, 623, 97 Atl. 261.

[131] Stone v. Jenkins, 176 Mass. 544, 57 N. E. 1002, 79 Am. St. Rep. 343; Griffin v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 119 Ga. 664, 46 S. E. 870; Southern Exp. Co. v. Connor, 49 Ga. 415, 12 N. B. R. 53. Where plaintiff sued for an accounting and for a decree that the title to land was in him and that defendant should execute title on payment of the amount due, and pending the action the plaintiff became bankrupt, a final decree should declare the amount to be due by the bankrupt and authorize its payment, and that, on the making of such payment, his trustee should have title executed to him, or, on the termination of the bankruptcy, to the person succeeding to the plaintiff's title to the land. Scott v. Lunsford, 141 Ga. 73, 80 S. E. 316.

[132] Rand v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 186 N. Y. 58, 78 N. E. 574, 116 Am. St. Rep. 530, 9 Ann. Cas. 542.

[133] Woddail v. Holliday, 44 Ga. 18, 10 N. B. R. 545.

[134] Moore v. Jones, 23 Vt. 739, Fed. Cas. No. 9,768.

[135] Bacon v. Abbott, 137 Mass. 397; Peery v. Carnes, 86 Mo. 652.

[136] Towle v. Davenport, 57 N. H. 149, 16 N. B. R. 478.

the bankrupt needs no permission from the court of bankruptcy to prosecute such suit to judgment.[137]

Pending proceedings in bankruptcy and after the appointment of a trustee, the bankrupt has no standing to commence and prosecute an action in his own name, in relation to any of his property, unless it be exempt property.[138] But the assignee of a chose in action may maintain a suit thereon in the name of his assignor, notwithstanding the fact that the latter has been adjudged a bankrupt.[139] And so, the purchaser of a chose in action from the trustee of a bankrupt's estate may maintain an action upon it in the name of such trustee.[140]

§ 198. Intervention of Trustee in Pending Suits.—The bankruptcy law provides that the court "may order the trustee to enter his appearance and defend any pending suit against the bankrupt," and that "the trustee may, with the approval of the court, be permitted to prosecute as trustee any suit commenced by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication, with like force and effect as though it had been commenced by him."[141] The trustee is therefore entitled to be made a party to suits pending in state courts by or against the bankrupt, and to assume the control of them and be substituted in place of the bankrupt, and the latter, if necessary, will be enjoined from interfering with the litigation.[142] But some of the state courts maintain that, while the trustee is hereby authorized to apply to the court in which an action is pending to be made a party, yet it rests in the discretion of the state court to grant or refuse such an application, and that its authority is not abridged by the fact that the court of bankruptcy has directed or ordered the trustee to enter his appearance or intervene, and that, in deciding such an application, the state court will be governed by state laws and judicial policy.[143] However, if leave of court is necessary to the trustee's

[137] In re Haensell, 91 Fed. 355, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286.

[138] Pickens v. Dent, 106 Fed. 653, 45 C. C. A. 522, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; Scheidt v. Goldsmith, 103 Ill. App. 623; Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248, 94 Pac. 252; Buckingham v. Buckingham, 36 Ohio St. 68; Rand v. Sage, 94 Minn. 344, 102 N. W. 864; Remmers v. Remmers, 217 Mo. 541, 117 S. W. 1117.

[139] Hayes v. Pike, 17 N. H. 564; Bonvillain v. American Sugar Refining Co. (D. C.) 250 Fed. 641, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[140] Rogers v. Union Stone Co., 134 Mass. 31.

[141] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11b, c. See Friedman v. Verchofsky, 105 Ill. App. 414.

[142] Gates v. Goodloe, 101 U. S. 612, 25 L. Ed. 895; Samson v. Burton, 5 Ben. 325, 4 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 12,285; New Orleans Acid & Fertilizer Co. v. Guillory, 117 La. 821, 42 South. 329; Williams v. Lane, 158 Cal. 39, 109 Pac. 873; Neill v. Barbaree, 135 Ga. 771, 70 S. E. 638; Lee v. Pfeffer, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 97; Armfield Co. v. Saleeby, 178 N. C. 298, 100 S. E. 611. But see Jewett Bros. v. Huffman, 14 N. D. 110, 103 N. W. 408.

[143] National Distilling Co. v. Seidel, 103 Wis. 489, 79 N. W. 744; Bank of Commerce v. Elliott, 109 Wis. 648, 85 N. W. 417; Drew v. Fort Payne Co., 186 intervention, the objection that it was not obtained comes too late after verdict.[144] Further, to authorize a trustee in bankruptcy to intervene, he must of course be in the actual exercise of his official functions at the time. But if a trustee, after intervening in a pending suit, has been inadvertently or improperly discharged, and is afterwards reinstated by the referee in bankruptcy, the suit may be revived in his name.[145]

But while the trustee thus has the right to intervene in any pending suit by or against the bankrupt, if he sees fit, yet he is not bound to do so. If he is satisfied that nothing is to be gained for the estate by prosecuting or defending such suit, his duty rather requires him to take no part in the litigation, and neither the parties to the action nor any court can compel him to intervene.[146] He may allow the action to proceed in the name of the bankrupt and claim for the estate the fruits of the litigation if it is successful.[147] It is held, however, that where a patent infringement suit is pending against the bankrupt, the court of bankruptcy may grant leave to the plaintiff to file a supplemental bill making the trustee a party defendant, in order that he may be bound by the decree; but this does not oblige him to make any defense or take anything more than a nominal part in the proceedings; whether or not he shall interfere actively is a matter to be determined by him and by the bankruptcy court.[148]

But there is an implied limitation on the right of the trustee to intervene in a pending action, in this, that the action must be one in which the estate of the bankrupt has an interest and which may therefore be prosecuted (or defended) by the trustee for the benefit of the general creditors.[149] Thus, it is a general rule that the right of action for a personal tort—an injury inflicted upon the bankrupt himself, rather than upon his property—does not pass to his trustee as assets of his estate.

Ala. 285, 65 South. 71; Gray v. Arnot, 31 N. D. 461, 154 N. W. 268.

144 Jones v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 25 Tex. Civ. App. 234, 61 S. W. 553.

145 Bunch v. Smith, 116 Tenn. 201, 93 S. W. 80.

146 In re Leeds & Catlin Co., 175 Fed. 309, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Griffin v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 119 Ga. 664, 46 S. E. 870; Heckscher v. Blanton, 111 Va. 648, 69 S. E. 1045, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 923; Serra é Hijo v. Hoffman, 29 La. Ann. 17. See Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S. 355, 23 L. Ed. 903.

147 Kessler v. Herklotz, 132 App. Div. 278, 117 N. Y. Supp. 45.

148 Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. Hawthorne & Sheble Mfg. Co., 173 Fed. 617, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 234.

149 In re Haensell, 91 Fed. 355, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286. The trustee in bankruptcy of a corporation is properly allowed to intervene in an action by a shareholder seeking to recover from the president the value of his stock which had been destroyed by the president's embezzlement of the entire corporate assets. Floyd v. Layton, 172 N. C. 64, 89 S. E. 998. In an action for the purchase price of a chattel, where the buyer counterclaimed for breach of warranty, it is proper to substitute the buyer's trustee in bankruptcy as a party to the counterclaim. Crouch v. Fahl, 63 Ind. App. 257, 113 N. E. 1009.

Hence if the bankrupt has an action of this kind pending, as, for example, for slander or libel, the trustee cannot claim to be substituted as plaintiff.[150] And so, if the bankrupt has disclaimed title to the property in suit, his trustee cannot come in and assert title.[151] This, however, does not apply to property which he has conveyed away in fraud of his creditors. On the contrary, it is well settled that the trustee has the right to intervene in a judgment creditor's suit to reach and subject such concealed assets,[152] and that his recovery is for the benefit of all the creditors and not merely for the original plaintiff, so that the trustee is entitled to have turned over to him the entire proceeds of a sale of the property.[153] For similar reasons, he will be admitted to prosecute to final judgment a suit begun by a creditor to avoid an unlawful preference,[154] or one to enforce an equitable lien on property of the bankrupt,[155] or to foreclose a mortgage, in order that he may be enabled to claim any surplus proceeds of the sale after satisfying the mortgagee.[156] Moreover, the trustee has a legal status to attack a judgment illegally entered against the bankrupt,[157] or to move to set aside a judgment entered against the bankrupt by default,[158] or to take the bankrupt's place in an action begun by him to obtain an injunction against the collection of a judgment on the ground that it had been paid.[159]

If the trustee desires to intervene in a pending suit, he should act with reasonable promptness. An unreasonable delay, operating to the prejudice of others in interest, will justify a denial of his application,[160] and if he allows the suit to go to judgment in the court of first instance, he cannot intervene after it has been taken up on appeal.[161] But sup-

150 Epstein v. Handverker, 29 Okl. 337, 116 Pac. 789.

151 Simmons v. Richards, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 112, 66 S. W. 687. But where it appears on the face of the record that the bankrupt, plaintiff in an action, has a prima facie right to sue for the property in question, his trustee's application to be substituted as plaintiff cannot be defeated by the bankrupt alleging that his wife is the real party in interest. Person v. United States, 8 Ct. Cl. 543.

152 In re Riker, 107 Fed. 96, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 720; Davis v. Vandiver, 143 Ala. 202, 38 South. 850; Kinmouth v. Braeutigam (N. J. Eq.) 57 Atl. 1013; Bunch v. Smith, 116 Tenn. 201, 93 S. W. 80; Tharp v. Tharp's Trustee (Ky.) 119 S. W. 814; Atkins v. Globe Bank & Trust Co. (Ky.) 124 S. W. 879; Googins v. Skillings, 118 Me. 299, 108 Atl. 50; Blick v. Nimmo, 121 Md. 139, 88 Atl. 116; McCrory v. Donald, 119 Miss. 256, 80 South. 643.

153 Bunch v. Smith, 116 Tenn. 201, 93 S. W. 80.

154 Miller v. New Orleans Acid & Fertilizer Co., 211 U. S. 496, 29 Sup. Ct. 176, 53 L. Ed. 300.

155 Snyder v. Smith, 185 Mass. 58, 69 N. E. 1089.

156 In re Gerdes, 102 Fed. 318, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 346.

157 Garrison v. Seckendorff, 79 N. J. Law, 203, 74 Atl. 311; Weil v. Simmons, 66 Mo. 617.

158 First Nat. Bank v. Flynn, 117 Iowa, 493, 91 N. W. 784.

159 Brandon v. Cabiness, 10 Ala. 155.

160 Freehold Const. Co. v. Bernstein, 60 Misc. Rep. 363, 113 N. Y. Supp. 368.

161 Weaver Mercantile Co. v. Thurmond, 68 W. Va. 530, 70 S. E. 126, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1061.

posing his application to be seasonably made, the proper method is by his own petition or motion in the court where the suit is pending.[162] A motion by the bankrupt himself, without any application on the part of the trustee, is not sufficient.[163] The trustee's petition should contain allegations showing the fact and the date of the adjudication of bankruptcy,[164] his own appointment as trustee,[165] and such facts as show that he has an interest in the litigation as the representative of the creditors at large.[166] But he need not prove his appointment and qualification unless his right to recover in the capacity of a trustee in bankruptcy is challenged in such form as the state law requires.[167] It should be observed that this provision of the bankruptcy law does not undertake to regulate the practice in state courts, but places on the trustee the official duty of appearing according to the rules and practice of such courts, so as to protect the interests of the general creditors.[168] He is therefore not exempt from the necessity of proper pleadings and evidence.[169] But he cannot set up either the bankrupt's adjudication or his discharge as a ground for staying proceedings or in bar of the action, as that is a right personal to the bankrupt.[170] On the other hand, where the trustee is brought in as a defendant, it is not necessary that the plaintiff's pleadings, alleging the trustee's representative capacity, and the transfer to him of the title to defendant's property, should also state a cause of action against him.[171] If the defendant in an action in a state court wishes to object to the substitution of the plaintiff's trustee in bankruptcy in place of the plaintiff himself, he must do so by objection or exception taken at the time; if he goes to trial, it will then be too late to object to any irregularity.[172]

Where the trustee thus intervenes and takes part in the prosecution of the action, or its defense, he submits himself to the jurisdiction of the state court and becomes a party in the ordinary sense and with the ordinary consequences.[173] Thus, judgment may be taken against him 162 Kent v. Downing, 44 Ga. 116, 10 N. B. R. 538.

163 Oscar Bonner Oil Co. v. Pennsylvania Oil Co., 150 Cal. 658, 89 Pac. 613.

164 Jones v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 25 Tex. Civ. App. 234, 61 S. W. 553; A. Lehmann & Co. v. Rivers, 110 La. 1079, 35 South. 296.

165 Jones v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 25 Tex. Civ. App. 234, 61 S. W. 553.

166 Hackett's Ex'rs v. Hackett's Trustee (Ky.) 118 S. W. 377; Kohout v. Chaloupka, 69 Neb. 677, 96 N. W. 173.

167 Jones v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 25 Tex. Civ. App. 234, 61 S. W. 553.

168 Bacon v. George, 206 Mass. 566, 92 N. E. 721.

169 Wikle v. Jones, 133 Ga. 266, 65 S. E. 577.

170 Serra é Hijo v. Hoffman, 29 La. Ann. 17.

171 Latimer v. McKinnon, 85 App. Div. 224, 83 N. Y. Supp. 315.

172 Chicago Legal News Co. v. Browne, 103 Ill. 317; Brandon v. Cabiness, 10 Ala. 155.

173 Rennells v. Potter, 198 Mich. 49, 164 N. Y. 475; Earl v. Jacobs, 177 Mich. 163, 142 N. W. 1079.

by default.[174] He may become liable for costs, at least those accruing after his entrance into the case.[175] And he will be bound by the judgment rendered, and if that judgment is unfavorable to the claims of the bankrupt, the court of bankruptcy will not, at the instance of the trustee, enjoin the state court's officers from executing the judgment, or from distributing its proceeds according to the orders of the state court.[176] The trustee may be authorized to compromise and settle a suit pending in a state court, in which the bankrupt is plaintiff, but not without consent of the latter's attorney, as he has a lien on any judgment recovered for his services.[177]

If the trustee declines to take up a litigation begun by the bankrupt, the suit may proceed in the name of the bankrupt himself, or the bankrupt's surety may be allowed to continue it in the name of the bankrupt but for his own protection.[178] In any case, the trustee, by taking this course, does not lose his right to claim whatever may be recovered.[179] But on the other hand, as he occupies substantially the position of a purchaser pendente lite, he will be concluded by the judgment.[180] Where, however, the action is against the bankrupt as defendant, and the trustee declines to intervene, a judgment recovered by the creditor may be proved in the bankruptcy proceedings as a liquidation or judicial ascertainment of the amount due the creditor, and as a basis of dividends, but it is effectual and operative for that purpose only.[181]

If the bankrupt was one of two joint plaintiffs on the record, the suit must be continued in the name of the trustee in bankruptcy and the other plaintiff, or, if a trustee has not yet been appointed, the action may be supported in the names of the bankrupt and the other plaintiff until a trustee comes in.[182]

§ 199. Suits Begun After Adjudication.—It may be stated as a general rule that, after an adjudication in bankruptcy and until the de-

[174] Kingsbury v. Waco State Bank, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 387, 70 S. W. 551.

[175] Kessler v. Herklotz, 132 App. Div. 278, 117 N. Y. Supp. 45. And see Murtagh v. Sullivan, 74 Misc. Rep. 517, 132 N. Y. Supp. 503.

[176] In re Van Alstyne, 100 Fed. 929, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; In re Neely, 113 Fed. 210, 51 C. C. A. 167, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 312; American Trust & Savings Bank v. Ruppe, 237 Fed. 581, 150 C. C. A. 463, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 621.

[177] In re Adamo, 151 Fed. 716, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180.

[178] Bluegrass Canning Co. v. Steward, 175 Fed. 537, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 726; Tucker v. Western Union Tel. Co., 94 Misc. Rep. 364, 157 N. Y. Supp. 873.

[179] Peck v. United States, 15 Ct. Cl. 364.

[180] Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. Ed. 403; Heckscher v. Blanton, 111 Va. 648, 69 S. E. 1045, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 923; Chickering v. Failes, 26 Ill. 507; Mount v. Manhattan Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 25, 9 Atl. 114; Cleveland v. Boerum, 24 N. Y. 613.

[181] Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S. 355, 23 L. Ed. 903.

[182] Stinson v. Fernald, 77 Me. 576, 1 Atl. 742. And see Toulmin v. Hamilton, 7 Ala. 362.

termination of the question of the bankrupt's discharge, no suit can be commenced against him in any court. He is civiliter mortuus, and the bankruptcy proceedings supersede the ordinary remedies of creditors.[183] Also it is said that the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to stay the prosecution of an action against the bankrupt in a state court, on a debt from which his discharge would be a release, pending the determination of the question of his discharge, although the action was not begun until after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[184] But on the application of a creditor the court of bankruptcy may grant him leave to begin a suit against the bankrupt in a state court, where there are special circumstances rendering such a proceeding necessary. But when the creditor has brought his suit, pursuant to such leave, and saved his rights thereby, the court of bankruptcy will then order a stay of further proceedings to await the determination of the question of discharge.[185] It is held in one state, however, that a person proving his claim in the bankruptcy court may sue for the same claim in a state court against the bankrupt, after the filing of the application for discharge, in order to obtain an attachment lien on the defendant's after-acquired and garnished property, though, where a discharge in bankruptcy would be a bar to any further proceeding on a claim filed therein, and an application for a discharge is pending, the state courts will be careful to protect the bankrupt's rights until his discharge is determined.[186]

We must also notice the provision of the statute that "unliquidated claims against the bankrupt may, pursuant to application to the court [that is, the court of bankruptcy], be liquidated in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate."[187] It may sometimes occur that the best method of liquidating such a claim would be by a suit against the bankrupt in a state court, and it appears that the court of bankruptcy might "direct" that such a course be pursued. This is further shown by the provision that "claims [183] Greenwald v. Appell, 5 McCrary, 339, 17 Fed. 140; In re Williams, 6 Biss. 233, 11 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 17,700; In re Archenbrown, 11 N. B. R. 149, Fed. Cas. No. 504; Woolfolk v. Murray, 44 Ga. 133, 10 N. B. R. 540; Wilson v. Capuro, 41 Cal. 545, 4 N. B. R. 714; Rogers v. Wentworth, 58 N. H. 318; Collins v. Scheeline, 52 Cal. 450. Compare Hackett v. Supreme Council A. L. H., 206 Mass. 139, 92 N. E. 133; Davidson v. Fisher, 41 Minn. 363, 43 N. W. 79; Thompson v. Massie, 41 Ohio St. 307.

[184] In re Basch, 97 Fed. 761, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235; In re Cohen, 19 N. B. R. 133, Fed. Cas. No. 2,961.

[185] In re Ghirardelli, 1 Sawy. 343, 4 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 5,376; Brooks v. Bates, 7 Colo. 576, 4 Pac. 1069; In re Whiting, Fed. Cas. No. 17,574; In re Scott, Fed. Cas. No. 12,520.

[186] Roth v. Pechin, 260 Pa. 450, 103 Atl. 894.

[187] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63b.

founded upon provable debts reduced to judgments after the filing of the petition and before the consideration of the bankrupt's application for a discharge," may be proved and allowed.[188] Moreover, the general rule must yield to the requirements of justice where the creditor would lose or forfeit his rights if an action were not brought. Thus, it is held that a creditor holding a promissory note, valid and enforceable against the maker at the date of the latter's adjudication in bankruptcy, but against which the statute of limitations has nearly run, may reduce the same to judgment by suit brought in a state court after such adjudication, and such judgment will establish the claim and stop the running of the statute, though it will not give the creditor any lien or priority nor entitle him to levy on the bankrupt's property.[189] And the same principle applies where it is necessary to begin a suit in order to preserve a mechanic's lien.[190] In no circumstances, however, can the creditor go further than judgment. The title of the trustee in bankruptcy attaches as of the date of the adjudication. It includes all property then owned by the bankrupt and of such a nature as to pass to the trustee. All such property comes within the custody and control of the court of bankruptcy, and no creditor can thereafter acquire a lien by judgment, execution, or otherwise upon such property,[191] or interfere with the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy by attachment,[192] or garnishment,[193] or replevin.[194] But the proceedings in bankruptcy do not bar an action against the bankrupt by one who was not a creditor at the time of the adjudication, though of course his judgment will not entitle him to levy execution upon any property except such as the bankrupt may have acquired since the adjudication.[195]

For similar reasons, one who has been adjudged a bankrupt cannot commence actions against third persons in the state courts in re-

188 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 63a, cl. 5.

189 In re McBryde, 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

190 Clifton v. Foster, 103 Mass. 233, 4 Am. Rep. 539.

191 In re Franklin Lumber Co., 147 Fed. 852, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 443; McLean v. Rockey, 3 McLean, 235, Fed. Cas. No. 8,891; In re Dey, 3 Ben. 450, 3 N. B. R. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 3,870; In re Tifft, 19 N. B. R. 201, Fed. Cas. No. 14,034; Sicard v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. Co., 15 Blatchf. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 12,831; Stuart v. Hines, 33 Iowa, 61, 6 N. B. R. 416; Manwarring v. Kouns, 35 Tex. 171; Clifton v. Foster, 103 Mass. 233, 4 Am. Rep. 539; Williams v. Merritt, 103 Mass. 184, 4 Am. Rep. 521, 4 N. B. R. 706.

192 In re Renda, 149 Fed. 614, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521; In re John L. Nelson & Bro. Co., 149 Fed. 590, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; Williams v. Merritt, 103 Mass. 184, 4 Am. Rep. 521, 4 N. B. R. 706.

193 In re Cunningham, 19 N. B. R. 276, Fed. Cas. No. 3,478; McAfee v. Arnold, 155 Ala. 561, 46 South. 870.

194 White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 20 Sup. Ct. 1007, 44 L. Ed. 1183, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; In re Platteville Foundry & Machine Co., 147 Fed. 828, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 291.

195 Miller v. Warden, 111 Pa. St. 300, 2 Atl. 90.

spect to any property or rights of action which are of such a nature as to vest in or be claimable by his trustee in bankruptcy. But where a promissory note due to the bankrupt (or a judgment recovered thereon) is set apart to him by the trustee in bankruptcy as a part of his exemption, the bankrupt can sue thereon in a state court in his own name.[196]

[196] Robinson v. Hall, 11 Gray (Mass.) 483.

CHAPTER XII

CUSTODY AND PROTECTION OF PROPERTY BEFORE APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE

§ 200. Custody and Control of Property.—The filing of a petition in bankruptcy is an assertion of jurisdiction, with a view to determining the status of the bankrupt and to a settlement and distribution of his estate; and the jurisdiction of the court in which the petition is filed is exclusive, and is so far in rem that the property of the bankrupt is regarded as being in custodia legis from the filing of the petition.[1] And after such filing, property of an alleged bankrupt may not be seized or attached without the consent of the court of bankruptcy, even though actual possession has not been taken by its officers.[2] Thus, the removal

[1] Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman Lumber Co., 222 U. S. 300, 32 Sup. Ct. 96, 56 L. Ed. 208, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; Franceschi v. Mercado (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 954, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667; Gage Lumber Co. v. McEldowney, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251; Corbett v. Riddle, 209 Fed. 811, 126 C. C. A. 535, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; In re Diamond's Estate, 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; Board of Road Com'rs of Monroe County v. Keil, 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Arctic Stores (D. C.) 258 Fed. 688; In re Wellmade Gas Mantle Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 502, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354; In re Walsh Bros. (D. C.) 159 Fed. 560, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; Norin v. Scheldt Mfg. Co., 297 Ill. 521, 130 N. E. 791; Bank of Brookings v. Aurora Grain Co., 43 S. D. 591, 181 N. W. 909; Whittlesey v. Philip Becker & Co., 142 App. Div. 313, 126 N. Y. Supp. 1046; Smith v. Berman, 8 Ga. App. 262, 68 S. E. 1014.

[2] In re Wellmade Gas Mantle Co. (D. C.) 230 Fed. 502, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354. The title to the bankrupt's property remains in him until his adjudication, and a transfer of property by him after the filing of the petition but before adjudication is not necessarily void. In re Perpall (C. C. A.) 271 Fed. 466, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302. Though, prior to ad-and concealment by third persons of property, in contemplation of the appointment of a receiver in bankruptcy, and after the filing of the petition, is a contempt against the court of bankruptcy.[3] But often a considerable interval elapses before the appointment and qualifications of a trustee. During this period, the bankrupt himself occupies the position of a temporary custodian or trustee of his property. The title remains unchanged; it is not divested until there is a trustee to take it.[4] Nor is the bankrupt to be regarded as "civilly dead" during this period.[5] The court may, in a proper case, enjoin him, as well as other persons, from disposing of the property or interfering with it in any way. But unless such action is taken, the bankrupt's possession of the estate will not be disturbed, although he will henceforth hold his property under the duty of preserving it intact until it can be handed over to a trustee duly appointed, and in the meantime the bankrupt will have the right to pursue all proper legal measures for securing and preserving the estate.[6] Thus, he may file a petition to enjoin the enforcement of a judg-judication, the bankrupt has power to dispose of his property in the ordinary course of business, it is improper for him to use his money for gaming. In re Sternburg (D. C.) 249 Fed. 980, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 476. The taking possession of property under an instrument amounting to a chattel mortgage, but invalid as against creditors because not filed as required by law, when done between the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the mortgagor and his adjudication, does not defeat the rights of the trustee subsequently appointed. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Kemper, 220 Fed. 847, 136 C. C. A. 593, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80.

[3] In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 193 Fed. 781.

[4] Schoenthaler v. Rosskam, 107 Ill. App. 427.

[5] Plant v. Gorham Mfg. Co., 174 Fed. 852, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42.

[6] Hampton v. Rouse, 22 Wall. 263, 22 L. Ed. 755; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; March v. Heaton, 1 Low. 278, 2 N. B. R. 180, Fed. Cas. No. 9,061; Myers v. Callaghan, 10 Biss. 139, 5 Fed. 726; In re Bowie, 1 N. B. R. 628, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728; Jones v. Leach, 1 N. B. R. 595, Fed. Cas. No. 7,475; In re Jessup, 19 Fed. 94; In re Steadman, 8 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 13,330. In the case last cited, it was said: "Between the filing of the petition and the appointment of a trustee, it is the duty of the bankrupt to protect and preserve the estate for the benefit of his creditors, and if he has warning that it is threatened with invasion by strong hand, or he has knowledge of impending danger from local process, he may apply to the bankruptcy court for such apprehensive [preventive?] remedy as may avert the approaching wrong. So he may, I apprehend, institute actions for any trespass to or eloignment of the estate, when committed before the assignee has qualified, if the estate remains in his care, and he may do so whether he is specially designated to collect, preserve, and utilize the estate or not. It is a power incident to his trust, and the assignee may afterwards come in and be made plaintiff, for the rights of the creditors. * * * Before the appointment of the assignee, the bankrupt is the custodian of the estate (unless the court orders it into other hands) and his fiduciary relation to the general creditors requires affirmative action on his part to gather up, guard, and preserve the estate until it is conveyed to the assignee. His trust resembles the office of a temporary administrator, under the laws of this state, or of an administrator ad colligendum, whose duty it is to collect and keep the estate of the deceased until an administrator is appointed."

ment against the property,[7] or to restrain a sheriff from selling under a levy,[8] or he may redeem land from a tax sale,[9] or maintain a suit for damages occasioned by an unlawful judicial sale of a portion of the property,[10] and he is the proper person to be notified of the dishonor of notes or bills on which he is an indorser, and is competent to waive demand and notice.[11] Further, if the bankrupt dies before the appointment of a trustee, the trust and duty of holding and preserving the property devolve upon his heirs.[12] But under no circumstances whatever can the bankrupt, after the filing of the petition, be justified in selling any portion of his property, even for the purpose of raising money to pay lawful fees, unless by leave of the court.[13] If the property is perishable, or must be sold at once for fear of deterioration, the court will order the marshal to sell it, and the bankrupt cannot become the purchaser.[14]

The provision of the statute for seizure of the bankrupt's property on petition and warrant applies only to involuntary cases. The theory of the law apparently is that the voluntary bankrupt, filing his own petition and thereby manifesting his willingness to surrender all his property for distribution to creditors, will not remove or waste it in the mean time. But he places it under the control of the court, and his own subsequent possession is merely (as already stated) that of a trustee. Hence if circumstances should arise making it necessary or proper that the court should take actual charge of the property, by a receiver or the marshal, pending the appointment of a trustee, it seems that ample power exists to pursue that course.[15] When property of the bankrupt

[7] In re Bowie, 1 N. B. R. 628, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728.

[8] Jones v. Leach, 1 N. B. R. 595, Fed. Cas. No. 7,475.

[9] Hampton v. Rouse, 22 Wall. 263, 22 L. Ed. 755.

[10] Johnson v. Collier, 222 U. S. 538, 32 Sup. Ct. 104, 56 L. Ed. 306, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454.

[11] Ex parte Tremont Nat. Bank, 2 Low. 409, 16 N. B. R. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,169.

[12] Ferguson v. Dent, 24 Fed. 412.

[13] In re Pryor, 4 Biss. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 11,457; In re Jessup, 19 Fed. 94. See Shipman v. Daubert, 7 Mo. App. 576. And compare In re Livingston & Turk, 205 Fed. 364, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531. The bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction to punish the bankrupt as for contempt, where, subsequent to the adjudication, he sold and disposed of certain of his assets and converted the money to his own use, while holding his property subject generally to the orders of the court, but his act in selling it not being in violation of any particular order. In re Probst. 205 Fed. 512, 123 C. C. A. 580. 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 600.

[14] March v. Heaton, 1 Low. 278, 2 N. B. R. 180, Fed. Cas. No. 9,061.

[15] The Ironsides, 4 Biss. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 7,069. Where a bankrupt, after the filing of the petition, absconded from the jurisdiction and was arrested in a distant city, and there subjected to search, resulting in the discovery on his person of a large sum of money belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, which was claimed by his receiver, it was held that the court was not required to order the restoration of the money to the bankrupt, on the ground that the search had been unlawful, since it would then have power immediately to order him to surrender it to the receiver. In re A. Musi-was under attachment at the time of the filing of the petition, it will ordinarily remain in the possession of the officer until a trustee is appointed, although the lien of the writ was dissolved by the adjudication. But "an attaching creditor is not under any legal compulsion to keep the sheriff or other officer in possession after the dissolution of the attachment by the adjudication in bankruptcy; on the contrary, unless the court has appointed a receiver or directed the marshal to take charge of the estate, the property attached should, upon the dissolution of the attachment, be forthwith restored to the possession of the bankrupt, to be held by him in trust for the benefit of his creditors until the qualification of a trustee." [16]

§ 201. Warrant and Seizure Before Adjudication.—The provisions of the bankruptcy act relating to the seizure and custody of property of an alleged bankrupt, after the filing of a petition but before any adjudication thereon, are quoted and compared in the margin.[17] Under ca & Son, 205 Fed. 413, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[16] In re Allen, 96 Fed. 512, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38.

[17] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, cl. 3, gives to the court of bankruptcy power to "appoint receivers or the marshals, upon the application of parties in interest, in case the courts shall find it absolutely necessary for the preservation of estates, to take charge of the property of bankrupts, after the filing of the petition and until it is dismissed or the trustee is qualified." Section 3e provides that "whenever a petition is filed by any person for the purpose of having another adjudged a bankrupt, and an application is made to take charge of and hold the property of the alleged bankrupt, or any part of the same, prior to the adjudication and pending a hearing on the petition, the petitioner or applicant shall file in the same court a bond with at least two good and sufficient sureties, * * * conditioned for the payment, in case such petition is dismissed, to the respondent, his or her personal representatives, all costs, expenses, and damages occasioned by such seizure, taking, and detention of the property of the alleged bankrupt." Although these two provisions are not precisely dovetailed, it is the evident meaning of Congress that they should be understood as relating to the same subject. The effect of reading them together is that the power of the court to appoint a receiver (or the marshal as receiver) is to be exercised on an application for that purpose, which may be made by the creditor who files the petition for adjudication or by any other creditor; it must be made to appear to the court that such action is absolutely necessary for the preservation of the estate; and a bond will be required, conditioned as specified in the act and with such sureties as the act designates. But the sixty-ninth section of the statute provides that "a judge may, upon satisfactory proof by affidavit that a bankrupt against whom an involuntary petition has been filed and is pending has committed an act of bankruptcy, or has neglected or is neglecting, or is about so to neglect his property that it has thereby deteriorated or is thereby deteriorating or is about thereby to deteriorate in value, issue a warrant to the marshal to seize and hold it subject to further orders. Before such warrant is issued, the petitioners applying therefor shall enter into a bond in such amount as the judge shall fix, with such sureties as he shall approve, conditioned to indemnify such bankrupt for such damages as he shall sustain in the event such seizure shall prove to have been wrongfully obtained. Such property shall be released, if the bankrupt shall give a bond in a sum which shall be fixed by the judge, with such sureties as he shall approve, conditioned to turn over such property, or pay the the corresponding provisions in the act of 1867 (which were much less specific and detailed than those of the present act) it was held that a provisional warrant might issue where it was shown that the debtor had disposed of a portion of his assets and had expressed an intention of going abroad.[18] The proceedings to obtain a warrant for the seizure of the debtor's property, and in execution thereof, are separate and distinct from the petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, and must be prosecuted by separate petition. The practice of uniting these two matters in one petition has met with the condemnation of the courts.[19] The application for a warrant is to be supported by affidavits, and these must set forth fully and specifically all the essential facts, including the insolvency of the debtor and the facts constituting the alleged act of bankruptcy or neglect of his property by the debtor.[20] It is not a sufficient compliance with the statute where the creditor's application is supported merely by an affidavit of the bankrupt that he waives proof of the necessary facts and consents to the issuance of the warrant.[21] On the other hand, where the affidavits show the necessary facts, the value thereof in money to the trustee, in the event he is adjudged a bankrupt pursuant to such petition." Since all parts of a statute must be read together, and the construction must be such as to give effect to every part and every word, if possible, it will be necessary to understand that two separate methods of seizing the property of a person against whom an involuntary petition is pending, for the purpose of preserving it for the creditors, are provided. The one is by the appointment of a receiver. The receiver may be some disinterested person not an officer of the court, or the marshal may be appointed to act as such receiver. To justify this, it must be shown to the satisfaction of the court that such a step is "absolutely necessary" for the preservation of the estate. The bond must conform to the requirements of section 3. The bankrupt cannot regain the possession of the property. But if the petition is dismissed or withdrawn, he may recover all costs, counsel fees, expenses, and damages occasioned by the seizure and detention of his property. The other method is by the issuance of a warrant empowering and directing the marshal to seize the property and hold it subject to further orders. To justify this course, it is not necessary to show the "absolute necessity" for seizing the estate, but it will be sufficient to make out a prima facie case in support of the petition in bankruptcy, that is, to offer satisfactory proof by affidavit that the respondent has committed an act of bankruptcy, or the creditor may secure the issuance of the warrant by showing that the conduct of the alleged bankrupt with reference to his property is, or has been, or will be so neglectful as to cause deterioration in value of the property. The bond should conform to the requirements of section 69. If it should prove that the seizure was "wrongfully obtained," the bankrupt may recover on the bond. The dismissal of the petition would probably make the seizure wrongful, and so, perhaps, would prove that the bankrupt had not been neglectful of his property. In this case the recovery is limited to "such damages as he shall sustain." The bankrupt may obtain the release of his property by giving a forthcoming bond.

[18] See Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5024; In re Hale, 18 N. B. R. 335, Fed. Cas. No. 5,911; In re Clark, 17 N. B. R. 554, Fed. Cas. No. 2,811.

[19] In re Kelly, 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

[20] In re Kelly, 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306.

[21] In re Sarsar, 120 Fed. 40, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

warrant will not be vacated where such facts are not disproved, and it appears that the purpose of the bankrupt in moving to vacate the warrant is merely to deprive the marshal of his fees.[22] The application for the warrant will regularly be made to the judge, but it is provided that a referee in bankruptcy may "exercise the powers of the judge for the taking possession and releasing of the property of the bankrupt, in the event of the issuance by the clerk of a certificate showing the absence of a judge from the judicial district, or the division of the district, or his sickness or inability to act."[23] This will most probably include authority on the part of the referee, in the circumstances named, to fix the amount of the bond to be given by the petitioners and to approve the sureties thereon. The forms for the warrant, the marshal's return thereto, the bond of the petitioning creditors, and a bond of indemnity to the marshal, have been officially prescribed.[24] There is no official precedent for the forthcoming bond to be given by the alleged bankrupt, to obtain the release of his property, but it may be in the form usually followed in cases of attachment and the like. Upon breach of the condition of such a forthcoming bond, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to proceed against the sureties on a summary petition.[25] If, however, the marshal, acting merely as the messenger of the court, has taken possession of the bankrupt's property, but without any order of court to that effect, his possession is not that of the court of bankruptcy.[26] Property in the custody of the marshal, under a warrant in bankruptcy, may be insured under the direction of the judge or referee.[27]

§ 202. Seizure of Property in Hands of Third Person.—Under a warrant such as is described in the preceding section, the marshal will be justified in taking possession not only of such property of the bankrupt as may remain in the latter's own hands, but also of all property actually belonging to the bankrupt which may be found in the possession of third persons holding it as the bankrupt's agents, custodians, or bailees.[28] But a more difficult question arises when the officer is asked

[22] In re Clark, 17 N. B. R. 554, Fed. Cas. No. 2,811.

[23] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 38, cl. 3.

[24] Official Forms Nos. 8, 9, 10.

[25] In re Mayo, 4 Hughes, 384, Fed. Cas. No. 9,353a.

[26] The Ironsides, 4 Biss. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 7,069.

[27] In re Carow, 4 N. B. R. 543, Fed. Cas. No. 2,426.

[28] Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421, 3 Sup. Ct. 289, 27 L. Ed. 984; Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L. Ed. 277; In re White, 205 Fed. 393, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358; In re Franklin Suit & Skirt Co., 197 Fed. 591, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278. A marshal appointed to take charge of the property of an alleged bankrupt has the right to seize property in the possession of a third person, even though the latter claims it adversely, where there is reason to believe that it actually belongs to the bankrupt's estate; and the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to

to seize property in the hands of a third person who claims title thereto in his own right, under a transfer or conveyance from the bankrupt made before the commencement of the proceedings, but which is alleged by creditors to have been void because fraudulent at common law or preferential, or in pursuance of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, or otherwise in a contravention of the bankruptcy act. A number of well-considered cases, both under the act of 1867 and the present statute, hold that the marshal acts at his own risk in taking possession of property thus claimed, and that the claimant cannot be deprived of the possession of the property on the ex parte application of the creditors, nor compelled to litigate his claims in summary proceedings in the bankruptcy court on the return of the warrant.[29] But the Supreme Court of the United States has unequivocally declared that property of a bankrupt in the hands of third persons is included within the provisions of the statute, so that it may be seized by the marshal, where the possessor's title rests upon a foundation which is void or voidable under the bankruptcy act, the case before the court being that of a purchaser from an assignee under a general assignment for creditors, which assignment was itself an act of bankruptcy, and the sale having been made before the appointment of a trustee in bankruptcy, but after and with notice of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.[30] This decision not only agrees with rulings made under the former statute, but has been followed in later cases, and is understood as justifying the seizure of property in the hands of third persons, not only where the possessor claims under an assignment for creditors, but also where the transfer to him was fraudulent or preferential.[31] At any rate, it determine the title thereto, and if the adverse claimant files a petition for its recovery in the bankruptcy court, he thereby assents to the jurisdiction of that court summarily to determine his rights. Further, the fact that property was unlawfully taken from one in possession of it by state officers, by an unreasonable or unlawful search and seizure, affords no reason why it may not be lawfully seized while in the possession of such authorities by the marshal acting as receiver in bankruptcy. Le Master v. Spencer (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 210, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 264. But on motion in bankruptcy to require third parties to turn over property, alleged to belong to the bankrupt, to the receiver, specific proof must be made as to the identity or value of the property; and a search of a third person's premises for property belonging to the bankrupt is proper only as specific property or to obtain known assets of the bankrupt. In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 781.

[29] In re Harthill, 4 Ben. 448, 4 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 6,161; In re Holland, Fed. Cas. No. 6,605; In re Manahan, Fed. Cas. No. 9,003; In re Rockwood, 91 Fed. 363, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 272; In re Kelly, 91 Fed. 504, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., 116 Fed. 143, 53 C. C. A. 463, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; In re Kolin, 134 Fed. 557, 67 C. C. A. 481, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531; In re Andre, 135 Fed. 736, 68 C. C. A. 374, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132. And. see In re Gibson, 22 Okl. 867, 98 Pac. 923.

[30] Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 45 L. Ed. 814, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[31] Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L.

seems clear that a third person in the possession of property may be summarily ordered to surrender it, where the validity of the title which he sets up in himself depends on a question of law rather than one of fact.[32] It is perhaps more doubtful whether the jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to authorize the seizure of property under a warrant of this kind can be extended to property which is in the possession of an officer of a state court, such as a sheriff or constable, under a writ of execution or replevin.[33] But in one case, where a justice of the peace refused to regard an adjudication in bankruptcy, but proceeded to render judgment and order the sale of attached property which, by virtue of such adjudication had passed into the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, the latter court was held justified in directing the seizure of the property by the marshal.[34] But if the property is in the hands of a receiver appointed by a state court, it cannot be seized on the warrant, as the possession of the receiver is that of the court which appointed him.[35] If property which really belongs to a third person is erroneously seized, the court of bankruptcy may order it to be returned to him. But this course should not be taken where his right to it is in good faith denied by creditors of the bankrupt; in that case the claimant will be required to assert his rights in a plenary action.[36] And in any case the restoration of the property to the claimant may be conditioned upon his compliance with proper terms imposed by the court of bankruptcy, when the circumstances justify it. Thus, where the property seized was in the possession of an assignee for the benefit of creditors (the assignment being rendered nugatory by the subsequent institution of the bankruptcy proceedings), it was said that it should be restored to him only on condition of his releasing the marshal from all damages, and his agreeing not to dispose of the property without the approval of the bankruptcy court.[37]

Ed. 277; Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421, 3 Sup. Ct. 289, 27 L. Ed. 984; In re Rochford, 124 Fed. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; McNulty v. Feingold, 129 Fed. 1001, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 338; In re Moody, 131 Fed. 525, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 718; In re Knopf, 144 Fed. 245 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432; In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 61; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912; In re Briggs, 3 N. B. R. 638, Fed. Cas. No. 1,869; Stevenson v. McLaren, 23 Minn. 111, 14 N. B. R. 403; In re Miller, 6 Biss. 30, Fed. Cas. No. 9,551.

[32] In re Michaelis & Lindeman, 196 Fed. 718.

[33] In re Hymes Buggy & Implement Co., 130 Fed. 977, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477; In re L. Popkin & Co. (D. C.) 240 Fed. 848, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20; Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. v. Babbitt, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 157. See supra, § 28.

[34] In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

[35] Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co., 113 Fed. 483, 51 C. C. A. 1, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 29. And see supra, § 27.

[36] In re Young, 111 Fed. 158, 49 C. C. A. 283, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 14.

[37] In re Manahan, 19 N. B. R. 65, Fed. Cas. No. 9,003.

§ 203. Remedies Against Marshal Seizing Property of Stranger.—Where the marshal, in the execution of a warrant of seizure in bankruptcy, has taken possession of property which did not belong to the bankrupt, but was owned by a third person, the most simple and direct remedy of the latter is to file a petition in the court of bankruptcy, setting up his title to the property in question, and praying for an order that it may be restored to him. On such intervention, the bankruptcy court has authority to grant him full protection and justice, and will order the immediate return to him of the property seized, or its proceeds if it has already been sold.[38] It has also been held that the claimant may be allowed costs, counsel fees, and damages occasioned by the seizure and detention of the property, to be paid by the creditors at whose instance his property was taken.[39] But the owner of the property has a right to trial by jury in the federal court, if he chooses to claim it, and he cannot be compelled to submit his claims to adjudication in a summary proceeding, on petition, rule to show cause, and reference of the case to a referee in bankruptcy. He may maintain a plenary action against the marshal in the bankruptcy court (or against the trustee, if a trustee has been appointed and has taken charge of the property) if he prefers to adopt that course.[40] If, on the other hand, he chooses to abandon the property and pursue his remedies against the marshal, he may maintain an action for damages against that officer, in the nature either of trespass or trover, in a state court. This involves no interference with the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, and that court will not enjoin the proceedings at the instance of the trustee in bankruptcy, claiming the property.[41] If the petitioning creditors in the bankruptcy proceedings have given the marshal a bond of indemnity, they will of course be bound to defend such suit against him

[38] In re Harthill, 4 Ben. 448, 4 N. B. R. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 6,161; In re Davidson, 2 Ben. 506, 2 N. B. R. 114, Fed. Cas. No. 3,598; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 4 Sup. Ct. 27, 28 L. Ed. 145; Lammon v. Feusier, 111 U. S. 17, 4 Sup. Ct. 286, 28 L. Ed. 337; Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 8 Sup. Ct. 379, 31 L. Ed. 374. "It is a matter of everyday practice, where the marshal is called upon to seize the assets of a bankrupt, that he in this way becomes possessed of articles of property which do not in fact belong to the bankrupt, and the uniform practice in these cases is for the owner of the property to apply to the bankruptcy court for its possession, and orders are made causing the same to be delivered." In re Bender, 106 Fed. 873, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632.

[39] In re Abraham, 93 Fed. 767, 35 C. C. A. 592, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 266.

[40] In re Russell (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. 248, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658.

[41] Buck v. Colbath, 3 Wall. 334, 18 L. Ed. 257; In re Russell (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. 248, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; Marsh v. Armstrong, 20 Minn. 81 (Gil. 66), 18 Am. Rep. 355, 11 N. B. R. 125; In re Davidson, 2 Ben. 506, 2 N. B. R. 114, Fed. Cas. No. 3,598; In re Marks, 2 N. B. R. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 9,095. See Leroux v. Hudson, 109 U. S. 468, 3 Sup. Ct. 309, 27 L. Ed. 1000. Compare Hudson v. Schwab, 18 N. B. R. 480, Fed. Cas. No. 6,835.

in the state court.[42] The fact that the claimant may have applied to the bankruptcy court to stop proceedings for the sale of the property until he could establish his title will not make him a party to the bankruptcy proceedings, nor will the decision on such application make his title res judicata in his action against the marshal for trespass.[43] But if the marshal justifies under his warrant, and the state courts hold that he had no authority under the laws of the United States to levy on the property in controversy, the decision is one which may be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States.[44]

But while a state court may have jurisdiction of an action in personam against the marshal, this is not true of any proceeding which seeks to recover the property itself. The res being within the exclusive custody and possession of the court of bankruptcy through its officer, no other court can be permitted to interfere with that possession. Consequently, if the claimant desires to regain the property itself, there is but one court which can grant him that relief, namely, the court under whose process it was seized. He cannot maintain an action of replevin in any state court against the marshal or the trustee in bankruptcy for the restoration of the property. If such action is begun, its prosecution will be enjoined by the court of bankruptcy.[45] Further, if a United States marshal, under process from the federal court, seizes property which does not belong to the defendant in the writ, but to a third person, the latter cannot have a writ of injunction from a state court forbidding the marshal to sell the property. It is for the federal court to give him relief in that behalf.[46]

§ 204. Restraining Waste or Disposition of Property by Bankrupt. —Upon the making of an adjudication in voluntary bankruptcy, or upon the commencement of involuntary proceedings against a debtor; all his property comes within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy for the purpose of the proceeding, and if the circumstances are such as to render it necessary, for the preservation of the estate, that the bankrupt himself or any third persons should be restrained from wast-

[42] In re Marks, 2 N. B. R. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 9,095.

[43] Marsh v. Armstrong, 20 Minn. 81 (Gil. 66), 18 Am. Rep. 355, 11 N. B. R. 125.

[44] Sharpe v. Doyle, 102 U. S. 686, 26 L. Ed. 277.

[45] In re Russell (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. 248, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. Ed 749; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 4 Sup. Ct. 355, 28 L. Ed. 390; Petterson v. Mater, 26 Fed. 31; Summers v. White, 71 Fed. 106, 17 C. C. A. 631; Hannebutt v. Cunningham, 3 Ill. App. 353; Feusier v. Lammon, 6 Nev. 209; Lewis v. Buck, 7 Minn. 104 (Gil. 71), 82 Am. Dec. 73; Munson v. Harroun, 34 Ill. 422, 85 Am. Dec. 316.

[46] Brooks v. Montgomery, 23 La. Ann. 450.

ing, selling, or otherwise disposing of the property, an injunction may issue for that purpose, to be in force until a trustee is elected and qualified.[47] Thus, the alleged bankrupt may be enjoined from collecting accounts due him, from squandering his assets, or from making transfers or gifts or mortgages of his property.[48] He will not be permitted to convey away his property after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy,[49] and if he, thereafter, delivers property in his possession to a third person on the pretense that the latter is the owner of the property and the bankrupt only a bailee, it is a contempt of the court of bankruptcy and may be dealt with as such.[50] Further, a creditor of a bankrupt who receives a payment in money from him after the institution of the proceedings violates the spirit and purpose of the bankruptcy law, and if he does this knowingly and fraudulently, he may be proceeded against criminally and punished on conviction, under the twenty-ninth section of the act.[51] It may even be proper to enjoin the bankrupt from disposing of his exempt property, as where a plaintiff claims such property by virtue of a waiver of exemptions.[52] And where a petition in bankruptcy is filed against a corporation, its officers may be enjoined from withdrawing its funds from the bank where they are on deposit.[53]

§ 205. Restraining Interference with Property by Third Persons.—The filing of a bankruptcy petition is supposed to give notice to all the world of the pendency of the proceedings, and operates as an attachment of the bankrupt's property and as an injunction restraining all persons from intermeddling with it.[54] But besides this implied injunction, it is within the authority of the court of bankruptcy to issue its actual injunction, for the purpose of preserving the estate intact until a trustee can be appointed to take charge of it forbidding any third per-

[47] Hampton v Rouse, 22 Wall. 263, 22 L. Ed. 755; In re Ulrich, 6 Ben. 483, 8 N. B. R. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 14,328; Hyde v. Bancroft, 8 N. B. R. 24, Fed. Cas. No. 6,966; Ex parte Harris, Fed. Cas. No. 6,110; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912; Johnson v. Price, 13 N. B. R. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 7,407; In re Camp, 1 N. B. R. 242, Fed. Cas. No. 2,346; In re Heleker Bros. Mercantile Co. (D. C.) 216 Fed. 963, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 503.

[48] In re Calendar, 5 Law Rep. 129, Fed. Cas. No. 2,308; In re Irving, 8 Ben. 463, 14 N. B. R. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 7,073.

[49] Muschel v. Austern, 43 Misc. Rep. 352, 87 N. Y. Supp. 235.

[50] In re Potteiger, 181 Fed. 640, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 648.

[51] Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160 Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355.

[52] Floyd v. Johnson, 142 Ga. 833, 83 S. E. 943.

[53] In re McGinley, 219 Fed. 159, 135 C. C. A. 57, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612.

[54] Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; In re Krinsky, 112 Fed. 972, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 535; In re Breslauer, 121 Fed. 910, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 33; In re Mertens, 131 Fed. 507, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698; In re Reynolds, 127 Fed. 760, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 758.

son whomsoever from interfering with the property, taking possession of any portion of it, selling it, or otherwise disturbing the status quo.[55] Removal or concealment by third persons of property, in contemplation of the appointment of a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy, after the filing of the petition, is in fact a contempt of the court; and any third person who has interfered with personalty which was in the bankrupt's possession when the petition in bankruptcy was filed, has the burden of showing the right under which he removed the property, and on his failure to make such showing, he is properly directed to surrender to the trustee possession of everything shown to have been in the bankrupt's possession.[56]

Thus, where the debtor had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors (which is alleged as the act of bankruptcy upon which the petition is founded), and the assignee is in possession of the estate and is about to make sale thereof, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to enjoin such assignee from proceeding further with the administration of the estate.[57] Again, pending the adjudication on an involuntary petition, the court of bankruptcy may enjoin any person from conveying away, disposing of, or interfering with any property once owned by the debtor and claimed to have been fraudulently transferred by him and concealed, upon prima facie proof of the fraud.[58] Moreover the authority of the court of bankruptcy to preserve the property intact until the proper person can be vested with its possession and control extends to cases where any portion of the bankrupt's estate is in the custody of an officer of a state court, who has levied a writ thereon. The sale or other disposition of such property, under the officer's authority may be stayed until a trustee in bankruptcy can intervene for the protection of the rights of the general creditors, or make out a case against the validity of the levy.[59] But these preliminary injunc-

[55] In re Lineberry, 183 Fed. 338, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 164; In re Berkowitz, 173 Fed. 1013, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233; Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., 116 Fed. 143, 53 C. C. A. 463, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; In re Smith, 113 Fed. 993, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; In re Moses, 6 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 9,869; In re Ulrich, 6 Ben. 483, 8 N. B. R. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 14,328; Hyde v. Bancroft, 8 N. B. R. 24, Fed. Cas. No. 6,966; In re Muller, Deady, 513, 3 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 9,912; Johnson v. Price, 13 N. B. R. 523, Fed. Cas. No. 7,407; In re Schow (D. C.) 213 Fed. 514; Floyd v. Johnson, 142 Ga. 833, 83 S. E. 943.

[56] In re Iron Clad Mfg. Co., 193 Fed. 781.

[57] In re Gutwillig, 92 Fed. 337, 34 C. C. A. 377, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; Rumsey & Sikemier Co. v. Novelty & Machine Mfg. Co., 99 Fed. 699, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; Davis v. Bohle, 92 Fed. 325, 34 C. C. A. 372, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117.

[58] In re Abbott, 1 Hask. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 10; In re Holland, 12 N. B. R. 403, Fed. Cas. No. 6,605; In re Fendley, 10 N. B. R. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 4,728.

[59] Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 5 Sup. Ct. 799, 29 L. Ed. 83; In re

tions are only intended to hold the estate together until some person, whether a receiver or trustee, can be appointed to take charge of it. They are not meant, and cannot be used, as a means of settling adverse claims or avoiding preferences or fraudulent conveyances. Thus, after a receiver is appointed, if he finds goods in the possession of a third person, which creditors claim as a part of the bankrupt's estate, but which the holder claims as his own, under a title set up in good faith and supported by a prima facie case, the receiver cannot have him enjoined from selling or removing the property; he must proceed by a plenary action.[60]

In order to justify the issuance of an injunction, it must appear that a proceeding in bankruptcy has been commenced by the filing of a petition and is pending.[61] Attempts have sometimes been made to secure process from either a state court or a federal court to impound the assets of an insolvent debtor and hold them until bankruptcy proceedings against him can be instituted. But if power to take this course exists, it can only be exercised in a very strong case and where there is absolutely no other remedy.[62] It has also been held that a court of bankruptcy has no power to enjoin third persons from interfering with property within its territorial jurisdiction but claimed as assets of an estate in bankruptcy which is being administered in the federal court in another district;[63] and conversely, that such an injunction cannot be made to apply to persons who are outside of the jurisdiction of the court and who do not come within the district to participate in the administration of the estate.[64] But both these positions must be regarded as at least doubtful since the amendment of 1910, conferring ancillary jurisdiction on courts of bankruptcy.

The application for an injunction, in cases of this kind, will ordinarily be made by the creditors who have filed the petition in bankruptcy. But any party in interest may invoke the interposition of the court of bankruptcy, including creditors other than the petitioners,[65] or their attorney acting in their behalf,[66] or the bankrupt himself.[67] But this Schloerb, 97 Fed. 326, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; In re Lutfy, 156 Fed. 873, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614. But see In re Ogles, 93 Fed. 426, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

[60] In re Glenn, 185 Fed. 554, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 806. And see In re Ward, 104 Fed. 985, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 215.

[61] In re Goldberg, 117 Fed. 692, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156.

[62] Vietor v. Lewis, 24 Misc. Rep. 515, 53 N. Y. Supp. 944, affirmed, 34 App. Div. 631, 54 N. Y. Supp. 1118.

[63] In re Dempster, 172 Fed. 353, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751.

[64] In re Isaac Harris Co., 173 Fed. 735, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237.

[65] Depauli v. Espitallier, 3 Cal. App. 239, 84 Pac. 999.

[66] In re Goldberg, 117 Fed. 692, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156.

[67] In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,049; In re Bowie, 1 N. B. R. 628, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728; Blake v. Francis-Valentine Co., power will not be exercised in aid of a purchaser of lands at a bankruptcy sale, who has been put in possession, and who, long after the estate is fully administered, is threatened with executions issued by a state court on judgments against the bankrupt.[68] No judgment can be rendered against a third person for contempt in disobeying an injunction issued in aid of the proceedings in bankruptcy, without proper proceedings taken against him, distinct from those against the bankrupt.[69]

§ 206. Enjoining Levy, Judicial Sale, or Replevin.—Between the filing of a petition in bankruptcy and the appointment of a trustee, all the property of the bankrupt is in the custody of the court of bankruptcy, and no creditor will be allowed to gain an advantage over others by appropriating any part of it under cover of judicial process. If judgment creditors are threatening to levy executions or attachments on the property, they will be enjoined from so doing.[70] If a sheriff has an execution in his hands, he will be enjoined from levying on the goods, or if he has already levied, it is in the authority of the court of bankruptcy to restrain him from making a sale.[71] But notice to a sheriff having an execution in his hands, that the judgment debtor is in bankruptcy, must come through official channels in order to be effective, and a notice of an intention to institute proceedings in bankruptcy is not enough; and the sheriff is not liable to the trustee in bankruptcy as for a conversion, though he sells property under the levy after the bankruptcy proceedings have begun, unless he had such notice.[72] It is not necessary, however, in all cases that the sheriff should be restrained from proceeding with the writ in his hands; as an alternative to this, he may be allowed to sell the property, but under the supervision and control of the court of bankruptcy, being then required

89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; Brock v. Terrell, 2 N. B. R. 643, Fed. Cas. No. 1,914; Jones v. Leach, 1 N. B. R. 595, Fed. Cas. No. 7,475.

[68] Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 348, 6 Sup. Ct. 78, 29 L. Ed. 412.

[69] Creditors v. Cozzens, 3 N. B. R. 281, Fed. Cas. No. 3,378.

[70] Samson v. Burton, 5 Ben. 325, 4 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 12,285; In re Eastern Commission & Importing Co., 129 Fed. 847, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305; Dittemore v. Cable Milling Co., 16 Idaho, 298, 101 Pac. 593, 133 Am. St. Rep. 98.

[71] Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 5 Sup. Ct. 799, 29 L. Ed. 83; In re Goldberg, 117 Fed. 692, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 156; Blake, Moffitt & Towne v. Francis-Valentine Co., 89 Fed. 691, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 372; In re Wallace, Deady, 433, 2 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 17,094; In re Bowie, 1 N. B. R. 628, Fed. Cas. No. 1,728; Brock v. Terrell, 2 N. B. R. 643, Fed. Cas. No. 1,914; Jones v. Leach, 1 N. B. R. 595, Fed. Cas. No. 7,475; In re Atkinson, 3 Pittsb. 423, 7 N. B. R. 143, Fed. Cas. No. 606; In re Mallory, 1 Sawy. 88, 6 N. B. R. 22, Fed. Cas. No. 8,991; In re Mellor, Fed. Cas. No. 9,402.

[72] Coppard v. Gardner (Tex. Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 650.

to hold the proceeds subject to the order of that court.[73] This latter course is sometimes taken where a majority of the creditors desire it, and it does not appear that the property is likely to be sacrificed or that the interests of the minority creditors will be injured.[74] But after process of execution issuing from a state court has been executed by a sale of the bankrupt's property, it is then too late for the bankruptcy court to interfere by injunction or otherwise, the purchaser having acquired a good title.[75] Nor will the court, in this case, have jurisdiction over the proceeds of the sale remaining in the hands of the sheriff, and he cannot be enjoined from paying over the same to the execution creditor.[76]

The same principles apply, and for the same reasons, to the seizure of the property under a writ of replevin. After the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, though a trustee has not yet been appointed, property scheduled as a part of the bankrupt's estate cannot rightfully be seized by an officer acting under a writ of replevin from a state court. If it is so taken, the officer will be forbidden, by injunction, to sell the property under his writ, or deliver it to the claimant, or otherwise dispose of it, and will be ordered to restore it to the custody of the court of bankruptcy, and the consequences of his disobedience will recoil upon those who may have instigated his disregard of the authority of the court of bankruptcy.[77]

§ 207. Restraining Proceedings in State Courts.—In general, any suit or proceeding in a state court which threatens to take property of the bankrupt out of the custody of the court of bankruptcy, to give particular creditors an undue advantage, or to interfere with the administration of the estate, may be enjoined or stayed pending the appointment and qualification of a trustee in bankruptcy.[78] For instance, it is within the discretion of the court of bankruptcy to enjoin the prosecution of foreclosure proceedings in a state court under a mortgage covering property of the bankrupt, and such action is generally proper if it appears that the bankrupt's equity in the property is of any value.[79] But out of comity and respect to the jurisdiction of the state

[73] Allen v. Montgomery, 48 Miss. 101, 10 N. B. R. 503; In re Jackson, 9 Fed. 493.

[74] In re Edward Ellsworth Co., 173 Fed. 699, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284.

[75] In re Fuller, 1 Sawy. 243, 4 N. B. R. 115, Fed. Cas. No. 5,148.

[76] In re Easley, 93 Fed. 419, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715.

[77] In re Schloerb, 97 Fed. 326, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 224; In re Walsh Bros., 159 Fed. 560, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Alton Mfg. Co., 158 Fed. 367, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805; In re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 481; In re Wilk, 155 Fed. 943, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

[78] See Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 11. And see supra, §§ 29, 185–198. See also Murphy v. John Hofman Co., 211 U. S. 562, 29 Sup. Ct. 154, 53 L. Ed. 327, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

[79] Pugh v. Loisel, 219 Fed. 417, 135 C. C. A. 221, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580.

courts the court of bankruptcy will not take the strong step of enjoining proceedings in such courts as a mere matter of course or without a proper showing of necessity. Where a creditor has recovered a judgment in a state court against the bankrupt on a dischargeable debt, he should not be restrained from taking steps to enforce the judgment where there is no allegation or proof of any threatened invasion of the rights of any other creditor, because of the mere possibility of action being taken which might be injurious to the creditors as a whole, and especially where no application has been made to the state court for proper relief there.[80] Moreover, this provision of the Bankruptcy Act (§ 11) must be restricted to the cases which it was intended to cover. This is shown by a case in which a voluntary bankrupt had failed to schedule certain life insurance policies which had a cash surrender value and had concealed their existence from his trustee. He obtained his discharge, but the estate was not formally closed, nor was the trustee discharged as such. After the death of the bankrupt, his executor brought suit on the policies in a state court, joining the trustee in bankruptcy and also a receiver of the bankrupt's property who had been appointed by the state court in supplementary proceedings. Then the trustee began an action on the policies in the federal court, joining the executor and the receiver. An application to the federal court to enjoin the proceedings in the state court was refused, because the case was not one within the Bankruptcy Act, but one in which the two courts had concurrent jurisdiction.[81] On the other hand, where it is alleged that certain creditors have gained an unlawful preference by means of attachments levied on the debtor's property, the appointment of a receiver, and the sale of the property, the proceeds remaining in the hands of the receiver, they may be enjoined from taking proceedings in the state court for the distribution of the fund so held, at least where the necessity of prompt action is shown and it appears that the money would be lost by the policy of waiting until a trustee subsequently to be appointed could sue them for the avoidance of the alleged preference and the recovery of its fruits.[82] So where a building leased by the bankrupt and containing his stock in trade passes into the possession of a receiver in bankruptcy, and its occupation is necessary to the proper settlement of the estate, the landlord will not be allowed to prosecute an action of ejectment in a state court to recover the building, but will be enjoined, and remitted to his proper remedy in the court of bankruptcy.[83]

[80] In re Penn Development Co. (D. C.) 220 Fed. 222, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 759.

[81] Doolittle v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York (D. C.) 249 Fed. 491, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685.

[82] In re Ogles, 93 Fed. 426, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 671.

§ 208. Indemnity Bond by Petitioning Creditors.—When application is made for the appointment of a receiver pending the adjudication of bankruptcy, the creditors must furnish the indemnifying bond required by the statute, and the authority of the court to grant their application is conditioned on this being done.[84] And where an order appointing a receiver requires the petitioner to give a bond, but fails to fix the time when the bond shall be filed, or fails to require such filing before the receiver is directed to take possession of the property, it is erroneous.[85] The creditors' bond protects a receiver in bankruptcy for his outlay in excess of the amount collected by him, but it is only in cases where the proceedings, resulting in a receivership, were instituted improvidently or without probable cause, or without good faith, or the like, that the petitioning creditors are liable for the payment of the excess of the cost of the receivership over the assets,[86] although, in a proper case, the court may require the bond to contain, as one of its conditions, that the creditors will pay the expenses of the receivership if sufficient assets applicable to that purpose are not discovered.[87] There is ordinarily no liability, on a bond of this kind, in the way of damages to the bankrupt, unless the creditors acted maliciously and without probable cause, and in that case the remedy is a suit in the nature of an action of malicious prosecution.[88] But so far as regards a right of action on the bond, if the order appointing the receiver is set aside, that is sufficient to show that the taking possession of the debtor's property was "wrongful," within the meaning of the statute, without showing malice, fraud, or lack of probable cause; and it is not necessary, to sus-

[83] In re Chambers, Calder & Co., 98 Fed. 865, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537; In re Kleinhans, 113 Fed. 107, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[84] Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., 116 Fed. 143, 53 C. C. A. 463, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751; In re Haff, 135 Fed. 742, 68 C. C. A. 380, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354.

[85] In re Haff, 135 Fed. 742, 68 C. C. A. 380, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 354.

[86] In re Metals Extraction & Refining Co., 195 Fed. 226, 115 C. C. A. 178, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11. A bond given by petitioners for the appointment of a receiver, conditioned to pay to the bankrupt all costs, expenses and damages occasioned by the appointment, in case the petition is dismissed and the receiver discharged, does not cover claims of the receiver for expenses incurred. In re El Sevilla Restaurant (D. C.) 253 Fed. 410, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608. On the dismissal of an involuntary bankruptcy petition, which furnished the basis for the appointment of a receiver, neither the sureties nor the petitioning creditors are liable for a greater amount than that fixed in the bond. In re Weissbord (D. C.) 241 Fed. 516, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243.

[87] In re McKane, 152 Fed. 733.

[88] In re Moehs & Rechnitzer, 174 Fed. 165, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; In re J. Ito Terusaki (D. C.) 238 Fed. 934, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

tain an action in a state court, that the costs and damages should first have been fixed by the court of bankruptcy.[89]

As to the bond required when the property of the bankrupt is to be seized by the marshal under a warrant, that is only given as a prerequisite to the taking of the property of an alleged bankrupt at the instance of the petitioners pending adjudication; and where property had already been seized under an execution, a bond given to secure an injunction restraining the sale is not within this provision of the statute.[90] The liability on such a bond only runs in favor of the respondent or respondents who were such when it was given, any persons subsequently becoming respondents, if they desire to be protected, being required to move for an additional bond.[91] There is a right of recovery on the bond when the petition, being against several persons as partners, is dismissed as to one or more of them.[92] Though the bond covers "all costs, counsel fees, expenses, and damages occasioned by such seizure," the bankrupt is entitled to only one allowance which must include all such items as he claims, and if he makes no claim for damages, he cannot afterwards make a further claim therefor against the petitioners and their bondsmen.[93] The costs, expenses, and damages to be recovered are such as are incident to the taking and detention of the property, but not including costs, expenses, and damages incident to the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings.[94] As an illustration of the kind of damages thus allowed, we may cite a case where the marshal, while in possession of the property, allowed certain water pipes thereon to freeze and burst, and it was held that the bankrupt was entitled to recover the resultant damages, although he had free access to the premises, since the petitioning creditors, on taking possession of the property, assumed full responsibility for its care.[95]

§ 209. Forthcoming Bond by Bankrupt.—When property of an alleged bankrupt is seized on a warrant to the marshal, upon the filing of the petition and before an adjudication, he may obtain its release "if such bankrupt shall give bond in a sum which shall be fixed by the judge, with such sureties as he shall approve, conditioned to turn over such property, or pay the value thereof in money to the trustee, in the [89] T. E. Hill Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 250 Ill. 242, 95 N. E. 150.

[90] In re Hines, 144 Fed. 147, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538.

[91] In re Spalding, 150 Fed. 120, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 667.

[92] In re Nixon, 110 Fed. 633, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 693.

[93] Nixon v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 150 Fed. 574, 80 C. C. A. 336, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174.

[94] Selkregg v. Hamilton Bros., 144 Fed. 557; In re J. Ito Terusaki, 238 Fed. 934, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 256.

[95] Selkregg v. Hamilton Bros., 144 Fed. 557.

event he is adjudged a bankrupt pursuant to such petition."[96] If the bankruptcy petition is dismissed, there is of course no further responsibility on the bond. On the other hand, if the adjudication is made, the condition of the bond requires the immediate surrender of the property, and it is not a good plea in an action on the bond that an appeal from the adjudication has been taken, without showing whether the appeal is still pending or has been determined.[97] It is a defense to such an action that the property has been actually surrendered to some one authorized to receive it, as a step in the bankruptcy proceeding, but it must be shown that such person possessed and acted in an official capacity, as, a receiver appointed in voluntary bankruptcy proceedings afterwards instituted by the bankrupt.[98] The case just cited shows that the state courts have jurisdiction of an action against the sureties on a forthcoming bond. But the court of bankruptcy also has jurisdiction to proceed against them, and the proceedings for that purpose may be based on a summary petition.[99]

§ 210. Appointment of Receiver.—The bankruptcy act invests the courts of bankruptcy with jurisdiction to "appoint receivers or the marshals, upon application of parties in interest, in case the courts shall find it absolutely necessary, for the preservation of estates, to take charge of the property of bankrupts after the filing of the petition and until it is dismissed or the trustee is qualified."[100] And it is said that, both under the express grants of authority in the act, and in the exercise of the general equity powers possessed by a court of bankruptcy, such court has authority to appoint a receiver to take charge of the property of a person against whom a petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed and hold the same until a trustee in bankruptcy is appointed and qualified.[101] The jurisdiction to make such appointment attaches upon the filing of the petition, and though the petition may be afterwards dismissed or the adjudication refused, this does not make the order of appointment void or even erroneous.[102] And since the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy in this behalf is exclusive and final, the order

[96] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 69.

[97] Moore Bros. v. Cowan, 173 Ala. 536, 55 South. 903.

[98] Moore Bros. v. Cowan, 173 Ala. 536, 55 South. 903.

[99] In re Mayo, 4 Hughes, 384, Fed. Cas. No. 9,353a.

[100] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, cl. 3.

[101] In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; Lansing v. Manton, 14 N. B. R. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 8,077; Horner-Gaylord Co. v. Miller & Bennett, 147 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; In re De Lancey Stables Co., 170 Fed. 860, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406. After an adjudication of voluntary bankruptcy, a receiver may be appointed, and where the application therefor is joined in by the bankrupt and the creditors, it will usually be granted in the absence of any charge of fraud and where no objection is made. In re Huddleston, 167 Fed. 428, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669.

[102] In re T. E. Hill Co., 159 Fed. 73, appointing a receiver cannot be collaterally attacked in the same or any other court,[103] and a state court, when asked to direct its own receiver to turn over property to the receiver in bankruptcy, has no jurisdiction to review the order of appointment and pass upon its wisdom or necessity.[104] The referee in bankruptcy may, in a proper case, make the appointment, and it has been held unnecessary that process should first issue against the bankrupt requiring him to show cause against such appointment.[105] But the better and more conservative opinion is that a receiver should not be appointed ex parte and without any notice or hearing, except in a case of imperious necessity, and when the petitioner's rights cannot be secured and protected in any other way.[106] And we call the attention of the reader to the very sensible observations made by one of the judges in a case where the action of a referee in appointing a receiver was condemned as precipitate, and the need of care and deliberation in taking such an important step was plainly pointed out.[107]

Whether a receiver should be appointed for a bankrupt, whether, if appointed, he should continue the bankrupt's business, whether he shall retain counsel, and the amount to be allowed to the receiver for his fees and for the services of counsel,—these are all matters which rest within the sound discretion of the court of bankruptcy.[108] No appointment will be made unless the court is satisfied that it is necessary for the protection of the property and that it will inure to the benefit of all the creditors.[109] Since Congress has explicitly required

86 C. C. A. 263, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73; In re Wentworth Lunch Co., 189 Fed. 831.

103 Ross v. Stroh, 165 Fed. 628, 91 C. C. A. 616, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; Moore Bros. v. Cowan, 173 Ala. 536, 55 South. 903.

104 White v. Davis, 134 Ga. 274, 67 S. E. 716.

105 In re Standard Cordage Co., 184 Fed. 156, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448; In re Abrahamson, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 23.

106 T. S. Faulk & Co. v. Steiner, Lobman & Frank, 165 Fed. 861, 91 C. C. A. 547, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; Ingram v. Ingram Dart Lighterage Co. (D. C.) 226 Fed. 58, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 622.

107 In re Florcken, 107 Fed. 241, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 802.

108 In re Cash-Papworth Grow-Sir, 210 Fed. 24, 126 C. C. A. 604.

109 In re Desrochers, 183 Fed. 991, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703; Horner-Gaylord Co. v. Miller & Bennett, 147 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; M. & M. Nat. Bank of Pittsburgh v. Brady's Bend Iron Co., 8 Phila. 171, 5 N. B. R. 491, Fed. Cas. No. 9,018; In re Federal Mail & Express Co. (D. C.) 233 Fed. 691, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240. Where, after the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against a retail trader, an application was made for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of his property until a trustee should be qualified, wherein it was alleged that he had been fraudulently induced to sell his entire stock in trade to a certain corporation for an entirely inadequate price, the major part of the same consisting of notes of such corporation, which it could not pay, and its own stock, which was worthless, and that the corporation, or its vendee, was rapidly selling off the stock at sacrifice prices, so that it would probably all be disposed of before a trustee could be apan "absolute" necessity, the petition for the appointment of a receiver must clearly and positively allege the existence of such a necessity, and not merely a belief that the appointment will be for the benefit of parties in interest,[110] and it must be supported by clear, certain, and positive proof of the necessity,[111] and the consent of the alleged bankrupt does not justify the appointment of a receiver where it is not absolutely necessary for the preservation of the estate.[112] But a receiver may properly be appointed where the apparent titles to property are such, on their face, that the marshal cannot act efficiently under the usual warrant,[113] or where there is such delay in the prosecution of the bankruptcy proceedings as to make it necessary that measures should be taken for the conservation of the property.[114]

The appointment of a receiver to take possession of an alleged bankrupt's property is a conservatory proceeding, for the benefit both of the debtor and of his creditors.[115] But it must be remembered that an application for the appointment of a receiver is distinct from, and ancillary to, the proceedings in bankruptcy, and it may be made by any creditor who has a provable debt of a nature to be affected by the bankrupt's discharge.[116]

Under the words of the statute, the marshal may be appointed to act as receiver; otherwise some competent and disinterested person, not an officer of the court will be selected.[117] In one case, where the act of bankruptcy charged was the making of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, the assignee was himself appointed receiver in bankruptcy, as it appeared that he was perfectly solvent and responsipointed, leaving nothing for the creditors of the bankrupt but the inadequate remedy of actions for damages and for stockholders' liabilities, it was held that the petition showed sufficient grounds for the appointment of a receiver. In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

[110] T. S. Faulk & Co. v. Steiner, Lobman & Frank, 165 Fed. 861, 91 C. C. A. 547, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Rosenthal, 144 Fed. 548, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 448. A petition for the appointment of a receiver in bankruptcy, merely alleging necessity therefore in the language of the statute, is not sufficient; it must allege facts which reasonably establish such necessity. Zeitinger v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co., 244 Fed. 719, 157 C. C. A. 167, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 324.

[111] In re Oakland Lumber Co., 174 Fed. 634, 98 C. C. A. 388, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 181; Badders Clothing Co. v. Burnham-Munger-Root Dry Goods Co., 228 Fed. 470, 143 C. C. A. 52, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115.

[112] T. S. Faulk & Co. v. Steiner, Lobman & Frank, 165 Fed. 861, 91 C. C. A. 547, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623.

[113] Keenan v. Shannon, 10 Phila. 219, 9 N. B. R. 441, Fed. Cas. No. 7,640.

[114] In re Cooke, Fed. Cas. No. 3,167.

[115] Harvey v. Gartner, 136 La. 411, 67 South. 197, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 900.

[116] T. E. Hill Co. v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 265 Ill. 534, 107 N. E. 194, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 78.

[117] "No clerk of a district court of the United States or his deputy shall be appointed a receiver or master in any case, except where the judge of said court shall determine that special reasons exist therefor, to be assigned in the order of appointment." Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 68.

ble, and was in possession of the assigned property and had had the same inventoried and appraised.[118] But where it appears that the receiver was in fact selected by the alleged bankrupt and nominated at his instance, he will not be appointed, or if the fact is shown after his appointment, he will be removed.[119] As to vacating the receivership or discharging the receiver, this rests very much in the discretion of the court, depending on the circumstances of the case and the necessity of continuing the receivership or the propriety of terminating it, as the case may be.[120] But the receivership will not necessarily be vacated or the property taken out of the hands of the receiver, though the court dismisses the petition in bankruptcy, where an appeal from its decision therein has been taken and is pending.[121]

§ 211. Powers and Duties of Receiver.—A receiver in bankruptcy is not invested with the bankrupt's title to his property, but he is a mere custodian of the estate, with authority to receive, collect, and retain all the assets, the purpose of his appointment being only to gather in and preserve the property and protect it from loss until a trustee can be appointed.[122] His authority dates from the entry of the decree appointing him,[123] and it is his duty to take into his possession and custody all the property of the bankrupt which may constitute assets of his estate,[124] including property held by a third person

[118] In re Etheridge Furniture Co., 92 Fed. 329, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 112.

[119] Birmingham Coal & Iron Co. v. Southern Steel Co., 160 Fed. 212, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

[120] In re Church Const. Co., 157 Fed. 298, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549; Latimer v. McNeal, 142 Fed. 451, 73 C. C. A. 567, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 43; In re Resnek (D. C.) 243 Fed. 417, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 759.

[121] In re Ward, 194 Fed. 179, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36. The refusal or dismissal of a petition in bankruptcy, upon a composition effected with the creditors, without any adjudication being made or any trustee chosen, discharges the bankrupt's receiver and places the possession of the property back in the hands of the alleged bankrupt. Vaughn-Carlton Co. v. Studebaker Corp., 22 Ga. App. 684, 97 S. E. 99.

[122] In re Leonard, 177 Fed. 503, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Rubel, 166 Fed. 131, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566; Freehold Const. Co. v. Bernstein, 60 Misc. Rep. 363, 113 N. Y. Supp. 368. And see Greenhall v. Hurwitz, 80 Misc. Rep. 186, 141 N. Y. Supp. 914; Vaughn-Carlton Co. v. Studebaker Corp., 22 Ga. App. 684, 97 S. E. 99.

[123] In re Alton Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 158 Fed. 367, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805. But the title of a receiver in bankruptcy relates back to the filing of the petition, so that the rights of the parties as to an incumbrance issued by the bankrupt to delay and hinder his creditors must be determined as of the time of the filing of the petition. Clement v. Saratoga Holding Co., 161 App. Div. 898, 145 N. Y. Supp. 628.

[124] Where the bankrupts, after absconding, were arrested and large sums of money were taken from them by an unlawful search and seizure, the court is not required (for the reason that the seizure was illegal) to order the money to be returned to the bankrupts themselves, before ordering it paid over to the receiver. In re A. Musica & Son (D. C.) 205 Fed. 413, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

as the agent or bailee of the bankrupt,[125] and including property previously transferred by the bankrupt in fraud of his creditors, in case the court of bankruptcy so directs, which it has power to do if the fraudulent nature of the transaction clearly appears.[126] In receiving a surrender of property claimed by a conditional vendor of the bankrupt, the receiver has power to make a stipulation as to its nature and extent which will be binding on the trustee subsequently appointed.[127] And in pursuance of his duty to seek out and collect the assets, the receiver has the right to apply for an order summoning designated persons to appear and submit to examination in the bankruptcy proceedings.[128]

In general, the duties of a receiver of a bankrupt's assets are limited by the powers given him in the order for his appointment.[129] But there is also authority for the view that, after the adjudication, and pending the appointment of a trustee, the receiver is not only in custody of the property in his possession, but is also the proper person to carry out any orders of the court made in the exercise of its general powers in bankruptcy, and that it is also his duty to call to the court's attention any matters suggesting the advisability of orders.[130] In the discharge of his duty of taking care of the property and preserving it from loss or dissipation, the receiver has authority to employ a watchman or other custodian at the expense of the estate,[131] to pay the overdue wages of employés when necessary to prevent delay in carrying on a current piece of work,[132] to have the property appraised,[133] and to keep it insured.[134] If he continues to occupy premises leased by the [125] In re Rieger, Kapnar & Altmark (D. C.) 157 Fed. 609, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 622. An attorney who has in his hands money belonging to the bankrupt has no right, after the appointment of a receiver, to convert the same into certificates of deposit and deliver them, indorsed in blank, to the bankrupt; he will be held liable for his act in so doing. Arnold v. Horrigan, 238 Fed. 39, 151 C. C A. 115, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174. Where the assets of the estate passing into the hands of the receiver include an item which he claims as his own personal property, it is his duty to make to the court a full disclosure of all the circumstances connected with his claim. In re Stier March Contracting Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 223, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

[126] In re Haupt Bros., 153 Fed. 239, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 585.

[127] Bryant v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 214 U. S. 279, 29 Sup. Ct. 614, 53 L. Ed. 997, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111.

[128] In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

[129] In re Metropolitan Motor Car Co. (D. C.) 225 Fed. 274, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539.

[130] In re Gottlieb & Co. (D. C.) 245 Fed. 139, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247.

[131] Weller v. Stengel, 146 App. Div. 317, 130 N. Y. Supp. 707; Rumsey v. Wolcott, 1 Wyom. 259.

[132] In re Ferguson Contracting Co., 187 Fed. 940, 109 C. C. A. 662.

[133] In re Kyte, 158 Fed. 121, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 768.

[134] In re Kyte, 158 Fed. 121, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 768; Simpson v. Kerkeslager, 41 Pa. Super. Ct. 347. Proofs of loss under a fire insurance policy running to a bankrupt who had absconded may lawfully be made by a receiver appointed by the court of bankruptcy, and expressly authorized and directed by the order appointing him to make such proofs. Sims v. Union Assur. Soc., 129 Fed. 804.

bankrupt, he should pay rent therefor at the reasonable value for the time he remains in possession.[135] Every receiver appointed by a court of the United States is required by law to "manage and operate such property according to the requirements of the valid laws of the state in which such property shall be situated, in the same manner that the owner or possessor thereof would be bound to do if in possession thereof."[136] Without stopping to inquire into all the possible applications of this provision, it may be remarked that it evidently extends to federal receivers, and to the property in their charge, all the valid police regulations of the state and municipal corporation where the property is situated. The receiver has no authority to act officially outside the district of his appointment,[137] and it is at least doubtful whether he can delegate to another his authority originally to take possession of the property, although, after he has once reduced it to possession, he may probably deal with it through an agent.[138] He cannot be required to perform duties which might have been incumbent upon the bankrupt but which do not descend upon a mere custodian of his property.[139] Receivers are generally allowed to select and employ their own attorneys, without the order or direction of the court, but should observe strict propriety in the selection and conform to the policy of the law. Thus,

See, also, Day v. Home Ins. Co. (Ala.) 58 South. 549, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 652. A policy obtained by the receiver on the property of the bankrupt, who had personally covenanted to insure for the benefit of mortgagees, is a personal contract for the benefit of the receiver. Reilley v. Buffalo German Ins. Co., 86 Misc. Rep. 69, 147 N. Y. Supp. 1086. Where, after the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings, but before a receiver was appointed, the bankrupt transferred certain insurance policies to a state court's receiver, that court will require the policies to be transferred to the receiver in bankruptcy. Davis v. Williams, 144 Ga. 637, 87 S. E. 1050.

[135] In re Youdelman-Walsh Foundry Co., 166 Fed. 381, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 509; Alexis v. Koehler, 119 N. Y. Supp. 664. The court of bankruptcy has power to authorize an assignment of a leasehold belonging to the bankrupt's estate to be made by the receiver in bankruptcy. In re Sherwoods, 210 Fed. 754, 127 C. C. A. 304, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 769.

[136] Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 65.

[137] In re Benedict, 140 Fed. 55, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232. Temporary receivers appointed for an alleged bankrupt corporation before adjudication have no such interest as entitles them to institute ancillary proceedings in the court of another district to secure a confirmation of their appointment and be put in possession of the property of the corporation in such district. In re Tygarts River Coal Co., 203 Fed. 178, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

[138] Skubinsky v. Bodek, 172 Fed. 340, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 699.

[139] American Graphophone Co. v. Leeds & Catlin Co., 174 Fed. 158, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; where the bankrupt corporation was defendant in a suit for the infringement of a patent, and the receiver in bankruptcy was appointed after an interlocutory decree against it and a reference for an accounting as to damages and profits and it was held that the receiver could not be required to prepare a statement of profits, from the company's books for use before the master, or to render any other active assistance to the complainant at the expense of the estate in bankruptcy, unless he should elect to become a party to the suit.

the attorney for the petitioning creditor, at whose instance the receiver was appointed, should not be employed as attorney for the receiver,[140] and a bargain for a division of fees between the receiver, the attorney whom he desired to appoint, and the attorney for the petitioning creditors, is illegal and unprofessional, and will require the removal of the receiver and the appointment of a new one.[141] So also, the court of bankruptcy always has power to direct the receiver to dismiss the attorney employed by him and to retain other counsel, and will do so if it appears that the attorney originally employed is incompetent, or that he is acting in the interests of one creditor or set of creditors as against others, instead of for the good of all, or that he is seeking to serve some purpose of his own in any way antagonistic to the interests of general creditors.[142]

Upon the appointment of a trustee for the estate, the receiver in bankruptcy should at once turn over to him all assets and money in his hands, except such as will probably be required to pay the expenses of the receivership, and it is not necessary that he should wait until his accounts have been passed and he is discharged.[143] But a particular fund may be permitted to remain in the hands of the receiver, after the qualification of a trustee, when the final disposition of it is doubtful, on account of pending litigation, unsettled questions of title, or the assertion of a lien upon it.[144] And a balance remaining after all creditors have been satisfied by the carrying out of a composition approved by the court, may be ordered turned over to a claimant who is clearly entitled to it as against the bankrupt himself.[145]

§ 212. Continuing Bankrupt's Business.—A receiver in bankruptcy may be authorized to carry on the business of the bankrupt.[146] And this course is sometimes highly desirable where the business is of a kind which depends largely on its good will and loses value rapidly if it ceases to be a "going concern." But this authority is to be granted only when it is "necessary in the best interest of the estate," and only for a "limited period." Since a receiver is appointed only to take charge of [140] In re Strobel (C. C. A.) 160 Fed. 916, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[141] In re Oshwitz, 183 Fed. 990, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[142] In re Champion Wagon Co., 193 Fed. 1004, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51. As to the compensation of receiver's attorney, see Leman v. Steele, 167 Ill. App. 190.

[143] In re College Clothes Shop, 192 Fed. 80. Where a receiver of a bankrupt corporation withholds its books from inspection by the bankrupt's trustee, appointed in the same court, the latter may obtain access to the books by an order on an informal application. In re Lane Lumber Co., 206 Fed. 780, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 749.

[144] In re Vogt, 159 Fed. 317, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243.

[145] In re J. C. Winship Co., 120 Fed. 93, 56 C. C. A. 45, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

[146] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, cl. 5.

the property until the trustee is qualified (supposing that the adjudication is made), it would seem that his authority to carry on the business should be limited to the time when there is a trustee competent to take charge of it. Thereupon the court may, in like circumstances, empower the trustee to conduct the business for a limited period. An order authorizing the receiver thus to carry on the business of the bankrupt rests largely in the discretion of the court and cannot be collaterally attacked, and "it would require a most extraordinary showing to persuade an appellate court to the conclusion that such discretion had been abused." [147] Where the receiver is thus authorized to go on with the business, he may either accept an unfilled contract for supplies to be furnished to the bankrupt, or reject it if he deems it burdensome, but in the latter case, the other party has his claim against the estate for damages for the breach of the contract.[148] The receiver is generally the person best able to judge of the advantage of continuing the business, and should exercise good sense and honesty in regard to it. If he persists in keeping on with the business, when he knew it to be unprofitable from the beginning and capable of being conducted only at a loss, he should be surcharged with a portion of the loss sustained.[149]

If the receiver needs funds for operating expenses, as is usually the case, the court of bankruptcy has power to authorize him to borrow money and to issue receiver's certificates therefor, having the usual priority of lien.[150] And a mortgagee who participates in the bankruptcy proceedings and makes no objection to the appointment of a receiver to carry on the business will be precluded from insisting on the priority of his mortgage over the operating expenses and other obligations incurred by the receiver under the orders of the court.[151] There is also an implied power in a receiver in bankruptcy, who is authorized to conduct the business, to purchase on credit and to borrow money, but this exists only in the absence of an express grant of authority to him by the court. Hence where the court authorizes the receiver to borrow a specified sum of money, any loans made in excess of that amount are made in violation of the authority conferred, and will bind the estate only on a showing that 147 In re Isaacson, 174 Fed. 406, 98 C. C. A. 614, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98.

148 Southern Steel & Iron Co. v. Hickman, Williams & Co., 190 Fed. 888, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 203. And see In re Niagara Radiator Co., 164 Fed. 102, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55.

149 In re Consumers' Coffee Co., 162 Fed. 786, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

150 In re Restein, 162 Fed. 986, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; In re Erie Lumber Co., 150 Fed. 817, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689.

151 In re Erie Lumber Co., 150 Fed. 817, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689.

the proceeds were used in conducting the business, and then only ratably with the claims of other creditors of the receiver.[152]

§ 213. Claims of Third Persons Against Receiver or Estate.—Property in the possession of a receiver in bankruptcy is in the custody of the law, and an attachment or garnishment levied upon it is void.[153] Ordinarily claimants must work out their rights by application to the court of bankruptcy. Thus, an attorney who is in possession of securities belonging to a bankrupt corporation will be required to turn them over to the receiver, and if he claims a lien on them, his rights may be determined in the bankruptcy court.[154] So, if the receiver occupies a store or other building leased by the bankrupt, and the landlord desires to have the bankrupt's goods removed and the premises vacated by the receiver, his remedy is by petition to the court of bankruptcy.[155] Generally, the question of the right to property or funds in custodia legis is one which the bankruptcy court may determine summarily and without the formality of technical pleadings or a plenary suit.[156] And third persons may in this manner be required to surrender to the receiver property which they hold in possession as agents or bailees of the bankrupt.[157] But a receiver in bankruptcy is not vested with the powers of a trustee, but is a mere custodian, and has no authority to take possession of property held and claimed adversely by a third person; and on a petition by such adverse claimant to recover property alleged to have been taken from his possession by the receiver without his consent, the invalidity of his title is no defense.[158] Neither has the court of bankruptcy jurisdiction, on a mere summary petition, to determine the question of right and title as between a stranger holding property by an adverse claim, asserted in good faith, and a receiver alleging that he acquired it by a fraudulent or preferential transfer.[159] But the court has jurisdiction to enter-

[152] In re C. M. Burkhalter & Co., 182 Fed. 353, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378.

[153] McAfee v. Arnold & Mathis, 155 Ala. 561, 46 South. 870.

[154] In re Eurich's Ft. Hamilton Brewery, 158 Fed. 644, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798.

[155] In re Kleinhans, 113 Fed. 107, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604.

[156] In re J. C. Winship Co., 120 Fed. 93, 56 C. C. A. 45, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

[157] In re Muncie Pulp Co., 139 Fed. 546, 71 C. C. A. 530, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70; In re Friedman, 161 Fed. 260, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 37.

[158] In re Kolin, 134 Fed. 557, 67 C. C. A. 481, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531. But where one charged with conspiring with a bankrupt to conceal assets consented that the money in his possession be impounded by the bankruptcy court to decide whether it belonged to the bankrupt, the money should not be delivered on the petition of such person until the right thereto was adjudicated. In re Robinson (D. C.) 237 Fed. 102.

[159] In re Eurich's Ft. Hamilton Brewery, 158 Fed. 644, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798; Copeland v. Martin, 182 Fed. 805, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268; In re Darlington Co., 163 Fed. 389, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 805; Knapp & Spencer Co. v. Drew, 160

tain the proceeding so far as to ascertain whether the claimant is in fact an adverse claimant, or whether he holds the property as agent or bailee of the bankrupt.[160] And where property has once come into the possession of the receiver as a part of the bankrupt's estate, and has been taken from him by an adverse claimant, either with or without his consent, the court of bankruptcy has power to protect its possession by a summary order requiring the return of the property, or its proceeds if sold, and jurisdiction to adjudicate with respect to all claims thereto.[161]

Where a sheriff's levy of execution, on judgments rendered against the bankrupt more than four months before the bankruptcy, was insufficient, and the sheriff was attempting to sell property other than that subject to a purchase-money lien in favor of one of the judgment creditors, it was held that, as the property subject to the lien was not identified, it was proper for the bankruptcy court to refuse an order for delivery of any property to the sheriff, and instead to allow its own receiver to retain possession of all the property.[162] In another case, where the bankrupt would have been entitled to the possession of goods in the hands of a carrier consigned to him, on payment of the freight, on the day on which a demand was made by his receiver in bankruptcy, in case bankruptcy had not intervened, it was considered that the receiver was entitled to the same, and the wrongful refusal of the carrier's agent to deliver the goods constituted him the agent of the receiver, thus terminating the right of stoppage in transitu.[163] Where a New York mortgage provided that, in the event of default, the mortgagee should have the right to enter and take possession of the premises and to receive the rents and profits, it was held that the mortgagee was not entitled to the rents and profits until he had entered into possession or foreclosed the mortgage, and hence the receiver in bankruptcy of the mortgagor is entitled to the rents and profits collected before the mortgage was foreclosed.[164]

Fed. 413, 87 C. C. A. 365, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 355; In re Mundle, 139 Fed. 691, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 680.

160 In re Andre, 135 Fed. 736, 68 C. C. A. 374, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; In re Livingston & Turk, 205 Fed. 364, 125 C. C. A. 582, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 531.

161 In re Rose Shoe Mfg. Co., 168 Fed. 39, 93 C. C. A. 461, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 725; In re Dialogue (D. C.) 215 Fed. 462, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 183.

162 In re Brinn (D. C.) 262 Fed. 527, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 74.

163 In re White (D. C.) 205 Fed. 393, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

164 In re Brose, 254 Fed. 664, 166 C. C. A. 162, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543. But see In re Jarmulowsky (D. C.) 224 Fed. 141, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 514.

§ 214. Actions By and Against Receiver.—The functions of a receiver appointed to "take charge of the property of the bankrupt," as authorized by the statute, are not limited to the mere receipt and custody of such property as may be voluntarily surrendered to him, but it is his duty to collect and recover the property, by suit if necessary; and the court has jurisdiction, in appointing the receiver, to authorize him to institute all necessary actions at law or in equity for the recovery of the bankrupt's property.[165] He may maintain summary proceedings in the court of bankruptcy in a case proper for that mode of procedure,[166] or replevin, where that form of action would otherwise be appropriate,[167] and he may sue in state courts as well as federal courts, and the decree authorizing him to sue will not be open to collateral impeachment in an action brought by him.[168] But the receiver will not be authorized to bring suit for the collection of assets in a jurisdiction other than the one in which he was appointed; that is, he cannot maintain an action in a federal court in another district or in a state court of another state.[169] If assets of the bankrupt are discovered in another state, the proper course is for the petitioning creditors to apply to the proper court, federal or state, in such other state, setting up the pending proceedings in bankruptcy as the basis of their action, and asking for protection for their rights in the property of the debtor within that state, by injunction, receivership, or other appropriate remedy, in which proceedings the trustee in bankruptcy, subsequently appointed, may appear and take [165] In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822. A receiver in bankruptcy may be authorized to sue a carrier for negligence in the handling of freight. Slaughter v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 125 Tenn. 292, 143 S. W. 603. A receiver in bankruptcy may sue out an attachment, or bring an action to prevent the statute of limitations from running, or sue at law to recover any debt or personal property which might otherwise be lost. McKenna v. Randle, 5 Alaska, 590. A receiver appointed in bankruptcy has no right to recover securities deposited by the bankrupt to secure a usurious loan, without tendering the amount lawfully due. Rice v. Schneck, 189 App. Div. 877, 179 N. Y. Supp. 335. A cause of action in favor of a receiver in bankruptcy for conversion of property wrongfully taken from his possession, is not assignable. Ellis v. Feeney & Sheehan Bldg. Co., 187 App. Div. 481, 176 N. Y. Supp. 61.

[166] In re Muncie Pulp Co., 139 Fed. 546, 71 C. C. A. 530, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 70.

[167] Unmack v. Douglass, 75 Conn. 633, 55 Atl. 12.

[168] Slaughter v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 125 Tenn. 292, 143 S. W. 603. But the order authorizing the receiver to sue is not conclusive on the question whether he has any cause of action. Greenhall v. Hurwitz, 80 Misc. Rep. 186, 141 N. Y. Supp. 914.

[169] Clark v. Booth, 17 How. 327, 15 L. Ed. 164; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 23 Sup. Ct. 244, 47 L. Ed. 380; In re Dunseath & Son Co., 168 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; In re National Mercantile Agency, 128 Fed. 639, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; In re Schrom, 97 Fed. 760, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352. Compare In re Dempster, 172 Fed. 353, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751. See Fletcher v. Murray Commercial Co., 72 Wash. 525, 130 Pac. 1140.

charge.[170] Or if the receiver is armed with an order of the court which appointed him, requiring the surrender of property in another state, it appears that he may apply to the court of bankruptcy in such other state for its assistance in the enforcement of the order.[171] It is not within the functions of such a receiver to attempt to vacate alleged preferential payments or transfers, to dissolve liens, or to recover property alleged to have been conveyed away in fraud of the bankrupt's creditors. Authority to take measures of this kind is indeed conferred by the bankruptcy act, but only upon the trustee in bankruptcy, not the receiver. The latter, therefore, has no authority to bring suits of this kind or for the purposes mentioned.[172]

As to actions against the receiver, an act of Congress provides that "every receiver or manager of any property appointed by any court of the United States may be sued in respect of any act or transaction of his in carrying on the business connected with such property, without the previous leave of the court in which such receiver or manager was appointed."[173] It has been pointed out that, while this section applies to receivers in bankruptcy, it does not authorize a suit without leave against such receiver unless he is carrying on the business of the bankrupt, or in respect to his acts relating merely to the care and preservation of the property of the estate.[174] It may be proper for him to enter his appearance in a suit pending against the bankrupt at the time of his appointment,[175] but in respect to claims which will be provable in the bankruptcy proceedings, the receiver is not the proper person to adjust such claims or to defend suits thereon, and an action on such a claim, against the receiver as such, will not be authorized or allowed by the [170] In re Schrom, 97 Fed. 760, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 352.

[171] In re Peiser, 115 Fed. 199, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

[172] Boonville Nat. Bank v. Blakey, 107 Fed. 891, 47 C. C. A. 43, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13; Frost v. Latham & Co., 181 Fed. 866, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313; Guaranty Title & Trust Co. v. Pearlman, 144 Fed. 550, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 461; Lansing v. Manton, 14 N. B. R. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 8,077. Compare In re Alexander, 193 Fed. 749. Where the bankrupt had sold certain of his assets to his attorney, and the latter had sold the same to another person, it was held that a receiver in bankruptcy was entitled to sue to vacate such sales, without waiting for the appointment of a trustee. In re Alexander, 193 Fed. 749. And where goods of a bankrupt alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed had been taken into the possession of an ancillary receiver, it was held that the court appointing such receiver acquired jurisdiction to determine the validity of the transfer and the rights of the parties. In re Lipman, 201 Fed. 169, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

[173] Federal Judicial Code 1911, § 66. And see In re Kelly Dry Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[174] In re Kalb & Berger Mfg. Co., 165 Fed. 895, 91 C. C. A. 573, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393; In re Lane Lumber Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 780, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 749.

[175] In re Muncie Pulp Co., 151 Fed. 732, 81 C. C. A. 116, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 56.

bankruptcy court in any event.[176] But as to the receiver's own acts and transactions, the case is different. The court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to stay or prevent the maintenance of an action against the receiver to enforce a personal liability against him for acts done beyond the scope of his authority.[177] Thus, if the receiver takes possession not only of the property designated in the order appointing him, but also of other goods, the property of a third person and which never were owned by the bankrupt, the owner thereof may maintain trespass in a state court against the receiver, as an individual, for thus interfering with property which was outside the order of the court.[178] So also, a state court has jurisdiction of an action against a receiver in bankruptcy to recover rent for premises occupied by the bankrupt under a lease which the receiver elected to accept.[179]

§ 215. Ancillary Receiverships.—Notwithstanding a few decisions to the contrary,[180] it is now quite well settled (especially since the amendment of 1910) that the statute invests courts of bankruptcy with ancillary jurisdiction to appoint receivers for property found within their territory and belonging to a debtor against whom a petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed in another district,[181] though it seems that this power ought not to be exercised without such notice to the persons in possession of the property and to other parties in interest as will answer the requirement of due process of law.[182] The court of bankruptcy thus appointing an ancillary receiver has jurisdiction to hear and determine the claims of third persons asserting title to the property or liens upon it,[183] and to settle the ancillary receiver's accounts, affording to creditors, or to the trustee of the primary juris-

176 In re Heim Milk Product Co., 183 Fed. 787, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746.

177 In re Spechler Bros., 185 Fed. 311, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 97; In re Kalb & Berger Mfg. Co., 165 Fed. 895, 91 C. C. A. 573, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393. But a receiver in bankruptcy is not personally liable for negligence of a person employed by him to remove property which he was authorized to remove, where the receiver was not guilty of any negligence in the selection of such employé. Frederick A. Stokes Co. v. Carell, 138 N. Y. Supp. 536.

178 In re Young, 7 Fed. 855; Dalton Adding Mach. Co. v. Sherrard, 207 Ill. App. 338. But see Quait v. Wortham Bros. Co., 176 Ill. App. 273, holding that the actions of a receiver in bankruptcy may not be attacked in the state courts, but resort must be had to the federal courts for relief.

179 Brooklyn Improvement Co. v. Lewis, 136 App. Div. 861, 122 N. Y. Supp. 111.

180 Ross-Meeham Foundry Co. v. Southern Car & Foundry Co., 124 Fed. 403, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; In re Dempster. 172 Fed. 353, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 751.

181 In re Dunseath & Son Co., 168 Fed. 973, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 75; In re John L. Nelson & Bro. Co., 149 Fed. 590, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 66; In re Benedict, 140 Fed. 55, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232.

182 Ross-Meeham Foundry Co. v. Southern Car & Foundry Co., 124 Fed. 403, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624.

183 Fidelity Trust Co. v. Gaskell (C. C. A.) 195 Fed. 865, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 4.

diction, an opportunity to question the correctness of the accounting in the ancillary court, the receiver not being bound to account to the court of primary jurisdiction.[184] But the ancillary receiver's duty is limited to the collection of assets and to holding the same to await the appointment of a trustee, and he will not ordinarily be authorized to sell any of the property in his custody.[185] An application to vacate the receivership, on a ground going to the root of the whole matter, as, that the alleged bankrupt was solvent and had not committed an act of bankruptcy, should not be made in the first instance to the court of ancillary jurisdiction (the same person having been appointed receiver in both districts), but to the court of original jurisdiction.[186]

§ 216. Accounts and Compensation of Receiver.—A receiver in bankruptcy, on the termination of his trust, should submit his account of receipts and disbursement, which will be audited and passed in the usual manner.[187] Exceptions to the account should be verified, though the omission of a verification is an amendable defect.[188] The receiver will be surcharged with the value of any property coming into his hands and not accounted for.[189] And though a petition is dismissed, on the ground that the alleged bankrupt was not amenable to the law, yet as the court had jurisdiction to determine that question, its appointment of a receiver was not void, and hence it may in its discretion allow and pay the expenses of the receivership out of the funds in the receiver's hands, where his services were beneficial to the estate.[190] As to allowing fees to an attorney representing the receiver, it has been said that, ordinarily, the duties of a statutory receiver for an alleged bankrupt neither require nor justify the employment of an attorney, and hence no claim for the services of an attorney so employed is chargeable per se against the estate, predicated alone on the fact of employment and service

[184] Loeser v. Dallas (C. C. A.) 192 Fed. 909, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733.

[185] In re Brockton Ideal Shoe Co., 194 Fed. 233, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577. Ancillary receivers in bankruptcy are officers of the court, and not successors in title to the bankrupt, and are therefore not charged with the bankrupt's knowledge of the contract under which he obtained title to the property, possession of which the receivers acquired from the bankrupt, though they may be charged with knowledge of the identity of the property with that claimed, if it was sufficiently described, so that its identity could be determined from inspection. In re Fosgate (D. C.) 268 Fed. 985, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 596.

[186] In re Hayes, 192 Fed. 1018, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 713.

[187] Where the accounts of a receiver in bankruptcy have been settled by a court having jurisdiction, he may be summarily ordered to pay over the balance due, and his surety may be held liable therefor. In re Reliable Bottle Box Co., 199 Fed. 670, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371.

[188] In re Ketterer Mfg. Co., 156 Fed. 719, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

[189] In re Consumers' Coffee Co., 162 Fed. 786, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[190] In re Wentworth Lunch Co., 189 Fed. 831.

rendered.[191] At any rate, if such fees are allowed, they should be allowed only to the extent that the services were rendered for the direct benefit of the entire estate, and not of any particular creditor.[192] And since the receiver is required to stand independent of the parties to the litigation, he will not be allowed to charge the estate for services rendered to him by the attorney for either party during the continuance of such relation.[193]

As to the receiver's own compensation, the bankruptcy act, as originally adopted, made no provision for this, except in the clause providing that the "actual and necessary cost of preserving the estate subsequent to filing the petition" should have priority and be paid in full out of the estate.[194] Accordingly it was held that the question of allowing commissions or compensation to the receiver, and the amount, was committed entirely to the sound judicial discretion of the court as in ordinary cases in courts of equity, to be determined upon consideration of the services rendered in the particular case.[195] But an amendment to the bankruptcy act adopted in 1910 provides on this subject that "receivers or marshals appointed pursuant to section two, subdivision three, of this act, shall receive for their services, payable after they are rendered, compensation by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, and also upon the moneys turned over by them or afterwards realized by the trustee from property turned over in kind by them to the trustees, as the court may allow, not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars: Provided, that in case of the confirmation of a composition such commissions shall not exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid creditors on such compositions: Provided further, that when the receiver or marshal acts as a mere custodian and does not carry on the business of the bankrupt as provided in clause five of section two of this act, he shall not receive nor be allowed in any form or guise more than two per centum

[191] In re T. E. Hill Co., 159 Fed. 73, 86 C. C. A. 263, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73. But compare In re Oppenheimer, 146 Fed. 140, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59. And see infra, § 784.

[192] In re Ketterer Mfg. Co., 156 Fed. 719, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638.

[193] In re T. L. Kelly Dry Goods Co., 102 Fed. 747, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

[194] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 64b.

[195] In re Schoenfeld, 183 Fed. 219, 105 C. C. A. 481, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 748; In re Kirkpatrick, 148 Fed. 811, 78 C. C. A. 501, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; In re Martin Borgeson Co., 151 Fed. 780, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; In re Gerson, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 493.

on the first thousand dollars or less, and one-half of one per centum on all above one thousand dollars on moneys disbursed by him or turned over by him to the trustee and on moneys subsequently realized from property turned over by him in kind to the trustee: Provided further, that before the allowance of compensation notice of application therefor, specifying the amount asked shall be given to creditors in the manner indicated in section fifty-eight of this act.

"Where the business is conducted by trustees, marshals, or receivers, as provided in clause five of section two of this act, the court may allow such officers additional compensation for such services by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, and in cases of receivers or marshals, also upon the moneys turned over by them or afterwards realized by the trustees from property turned over in kind by them to the trustees; such commissions not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars: Provided that in case of the confirmation of a composition such commissions shall not exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid creditors on such composition: Provided further, that before the allowance of compensation notice of application therefor, specifying the amount asked, shall be given to creditors in the manner indicated in section fifty-eight of this act." [196]

§ 217. Sale of Property Pending Proceedings.—A receiver appointed by a court of bankruptcy to take charge of the property of a bankrupt, pending the election and qualification of a trustee, may be ordered to sell the property, or any part of it, when such a course is necessary for the preservation of its value.[197] But in view of the temporary nature of the receiver's functions, such sales are justified only when the property is perishable or is rapidly depreciating in value.[198] Thus, where the receiver acquires possession of a leasehold as part of the bankrupt's

[196] Act Cong. June 25, 1910, § 9, 36 Stat. 838.

[197] In re Becker, 98 Fed. 407, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re B. D. Garner & Co., 153 Fed. 914, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; In re De Lancey Stables Co., 170 Fed. 860, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406. Where a corporation is adjudged bankrupt in Massachusetts and an ancillary receiver appointed in New York, he will not be authorized to sell the bankrupt's stock in trade in New York, in absence of any proceedings therefor in the domiciliary jurisdiction. In re Brockton Ideal Shoe Co., 194 Fed. 233, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

[198] In re Desrochers, 183 Fed. 991, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 703; In re Harris, 156 Fed. 875, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 635. "Perishable" property, in this connection is not restricted to property which deteriorates physically, but includes that which is liable to deteriorate in value estate, he should not attempt to make a sale of it.[199] And whatever be the nature of the property, he can act only under the direction of the court. A sale by a receiver in bankruptcy without the order of the court conveys no title.[200] The sale of goods as perishable is for the benefit of all concerned, the money realized standing in place of the property itself, against which the parties interested may assert their rights the same as if the sale had not taken place.[201] If the receiver is not in possession of particular property, the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to order its sale and determine the rights of adverse claimants in the proceeds,[202] unless, it may be, with the consent of the claimant who has the possession of the property.[203] and price by reason of delay in disposing of it. In re Pedlow, 209 Fed. 841, 126 C. C. A. 565, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

[199] In re Fulton (D. C.) 153 Fed. 664, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591.

[200] In re Styer (D. C.) 98 Fed. 290, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424; In re Fulton (D. C.) 153 Fed. 664, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; Muschel v. Austern, 43 Misc. Rep. 352, 87 N. Y. Supp. 235. But it is within the discretion and power of the court of bankruptcy, by confirmation of a sale made by the receiver without a prior order, to ratify and validate the sale, as it can of course subsequently ratify what it could have authorized in advance. Klintz v. Marx, 205 Ill. App. 376; Ellis v. Feeney & Sheehan Bldg. Co., 187 App. Div. 481, 176 N. Y. Supp. 61. Of course a receiver in bankruptcy has no authority to sell at private sale on his own responsibility. But if he reports to the court an offer made by an outside party for the purchase of property in his charge, and the court makes an order authorizing him to accept the offer and sell the property, the transaction becomes a judicial sale, and the purchaser can be compelled, by rule or attachment, to comply with its terms. In re J. Jungmann, Inc., 186 Fed. 302, 108 C. C. A. 380, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 401.

[201] Gealey v. South Side Trust Co., 249 Fed. 189, 161 C. C. A. 225, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 645; In re Le Vay (D. C.) 125 Fed. 990, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114.

[202] First Nat. Bank v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 198 U. S. 280, 25 Sup. Ct. 693, 49 L. Ed. 1051, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102. One who purchases property from a receiver in bankruptcy, which is listed in the receiver's inventory as property alleged to belong to a third person, must be deemed to have notice of the ownership of the property. Dalton Adding Machine Co. v. Sherrard, 207 Ill. App. 338.

[203] Ommen v. Talcott (D. C.) 175 Fed. 261, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572; In re Hollingsworth & Whitney Co., 242 Fed. 753, 155 C. C. A. 341, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 678.

CHAPTER XIII

THE BANKRUPT, HIS RIGHTS AND DUTIES

§ 218. Status of Bankrupt During Proceedings.—During the pendency of the proceedings, the bankrupt is regarded as "civiliter mortuus" so far as concerns all his property and estate which is subject to administration in bankruptcy. From the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy, he loses all power of disposing of any portion of such property, and any subsequent deed, conveyance, incumbrance, transfer, or agreement which he may make is a nullity and absolutely void as against his trustee in bankruptcy.[1] He can make no binding agreement with credi-

[1] In re Anderson, 23 Fed. 482; In re Gregg, 1 Hask. 173, 3 N. B. R. 529, Fed. Cas. No. 5,796; Johnson v. Geisriter, 26 Ark. 44; Hamilton v. Smith, 36 Mont. 1, 92 Pac. 32, 122 Am. St. Rep. 330; Redman v. Gould, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 361. It is doubtful whether a person who has been adjudged bankrupt, pending the proceedings, has such a possibility coupled with an interest in property discovered after his death as will enable such property to pass under a general devise by him. In re Morris, Crabbe, 70, Fed. Cas. No. 9,825. Without the aid of a saving clause in the statute, it appears that the widow of a bankrupt dying before his discharge would not be entitled to dower in lands belonging to him at the time of filing the petition, since, his title thereto having vested in his trustee in bankruptcy, it could not be said that he died "seised and possessed" of the lands. Bostick v. Jordan, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 370. But the present bankruptcy act (section 8) saves to the widow and children "all rights of dower and allowance fixed by the laws of the state of the bankrupt's residence." The bankruptcy of the lessee under a lease demising the premises for a fixed term with the privilege of renewal occurring during the fixed term does not dissolve the agreement so as to authorize a court of equity to cancel the renewal clause. Olden v. Sassman, 67 N. J. Eq. 239, 57 Atl. 1075, affirmed, 68 N. J. Eq. 799, 64 Atl. 1134.

tors or others as to the distribution of his estate.[2] If the bankrupt executes a mortgage upon his property, pending the proceedings, the trustee may have it set aside summarily, on petition; he need not resort to a bill in equity.[3] If the bankrupt undertakes to make an assignment of a judgment standing in his name, it passes no right or title available against the trustee.[4] The doctrine of the law is that, upon the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy against a debtor (or upon his voluntary petition), all persons are so far affected with constructive notice of the proceedings that they cannot deal with the bankrupt or his estate to the prejudice of the proceedings, or in derogation of the title of the trustee in bankruptcy.[5] Accordingly it is held that payment of a debt made to a bankrupt after the commencement of proceedings against him, though made in good faith and in the usual course of business, and without any knowledge or actual notice of the bankruptcy proceedings, is not effectual to discharge the debt, but the debtor may be required to pay the money again to the trustee in bankruptcy, unless, indeed, the bankrupt should surrender the amount of it.[6]

But the bankrupt's exempt property is brought into the proceeding only so far as to be valued and set apart by the trustee. The title does not pass to the trustee, nor is the title of the owner impaired or affected by the proceedings. He may mortgage or sell it, and he may bring and maintain suits in respect to it, without regard to the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings.[7] Further, there are some kinds of property, or rights of property, which are not of a character to be affected by the bankruptcy proceedings and do not pass to the trustee, and as to property of this description, the bankrupt, even pending the proceedings, has the right to deal with it as he sees fit, or to sue upon and arbitrate claims in regard to it.[8] This is the case, for example, in regard to the right of action for a purely personal tort against the bankrupt, such as libel or slander or malicious prosecution or false imprison-

[2] In re Anderson, 2 Hughes, 378, 9 N. B. R. 360, Fed. Cas. No. 351.

[3] In re Sims, 16 N. B. R. 251, Fed. Cas. No. 12,888.

[4] Harris v. England, 1 Ky. Law Rep. 271.

[5] Page v. Waring, 76 N. Y. 463. Even a transfer of promissory notes by the payee, pending bankruptcy proceedings against him which result in an adjudication and an injunction against disposing of his property, vests no title in the purchaser, though he had no actual notice of the proceedings. In re Lake, 3 Biss. 204, 6 N. B. R. 542, Fed. Cas. No. 7,992.

[6] Howard v. Crompton, 14 Blatchf. 328, Fed. Cas. No. 6,758; In re Hayden, 7 N. B. R. 192, Fed. Cas. No. 6,257; Mays v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 64 Pa. St. 74, 3 Am. Rep. 573. See Babbitt v. Burgess, 2 Dill. 169, 7 N. B. R. 561, Fed. Cas. No. 693; Ex parte Goodwin, 1 Atk. Ch. 100. And see infra, § 340.

[7] Henley v. Lanier, 75 N. C. 172; Winn v. Morse, 59 N. H. 210; Seiling v. Gunderman, 35 Tex. 545; Bush v. Lester, 55 Ga. 579.

[8] Tallman v. Tallman, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 325.

ment.[9] And finally, as will more fully appear in another chapter, a trustee in bankruptcy is not bound to take any property which he deems likely to be more of a burden than a benefit to the estate; and when he manifests his election not to assume the administration of such property, it reverts to the bankrupt, and the latter is of course free to deal with it as he may please.[10]

Although the bankrupt is for most purposes, as above stated, civiliter mortuus during the proceedings, yet the individual bankruptcy of a person who is a stockholder and director and officer of a corporation (which is not in bankruptcy) does not prevent him from voting on stock still standing in his name, nor incapacitate him from exercising his functions as such officer of the corporation, nor render void as to third persons the acts and conveyances of the corporation done and executed through him as its representative.[11] Also it should be observed that a bankrupt is competent to take, hold, and execute a trust. A trust estate already confided to him does not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy, nor does his discharge release him from any fiduciary debts or obligations.[12]

§ 219. Bankrupt Subject to Orders of Court.—From the time of the filing of a petition in bankruptcy until the discharge of the bankrupt (and perhaps even until the final closing of the estate), the bankrupt is always within the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy and subject to its orders in respect to the performance of all duties laid upon him by the law itself or arising out of the peculiar circumstances of his estate. This principle would be easily deducible from the very nature of the proceeding, but it is enacted as law by the provision of the act that the bankrupt shall "comply with all lawful orders of the court."[13] And lest there should be any lack of authority to enforce compliance, it is provided that the court of bankruptcy shall have jurisdiction to "enforce obedience by bankrupts, officers, and other persons to all lawful orders, by fine or imprisonment."[14]

§ 220. Duties With Relation to Estate, and Assistance to Trustee.—Prior to the appointment of the trustee, the bankrupt has sufficient interest in his property, and it is his duty, to do whatever may be necessary to protect and save it, and he may, for that purpose, institute all

[9] In re Haensell, 91 Fed. 355, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 286; Stanly v. Duhurst, 2 Root (Conn.) 52; Noonan v. Orton, 34 Wis. 259, 17 Am. Rep. 441, 12 N. B. R. 405; In re Crockett, 2 Ben. 514, 2 N. B. R. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,402; Dillard v. Collins, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 343.

[10] See infra, § 320.

[11] Atlas Nat. Bank v. Gardner, 8 Biss. 537, 19 N. B. R. 213, Fed. Cas. No. 635; State v. Ferris, 42 Conn. 560.

[12] 1 Perry, Trusts, § 58; Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 17.

[13] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7.

[14] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, cl. 13.

necessary actions.[15] After the trustee is chosen and qualified, it is made the duty of the bankrupt (by the seventh section of the statute) to "examine the correctness of all proofs of claims filed against his estate; execute and deliver such papers as shall be ordered by the court;[16] execute to his trustee transfers of all his property in foreign countries; immediately inform his trustee of any attempt, by his creditors or other persons, to evade the provisions of this act, coming to his knowledge; and, in case of any person having to his knowledge proved a false claim against his estate, disclose that fact immediately to his trustee." As to transfers of property, it should be remarked that, under the act of 1867, it was held that, as a bankruptcy law has no ex-territorial operation, the courts of bankruptcy had no jurisdiction over property of the bankrupt in a foreign country and could not compel him to make a conveyance of it to his trustee.[17] This difficulty seems to have been met by the quoted provision of the present statute. As to property within the United States, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to require the bankrupt to do whatever is necessary to make the legal transfer of it to the trustee valid and effectual.[18] Thus, he may be compelled to join in an application for the transfer of a liquor license formerly belonging to him and sold by the trustee,[19] or in such proceedings as are necessary to transfer a seat on the stock exchange.[20] And where a devise has been made to a bankrupt and accepted by him, it is a fraud upon his creditors for him to disclaim or renounce it, and the court of bankruptcy will compel him to do all acts necessary to perfect his title to the devised estate.[21] As to disclosing attempts to prove false claims, it is held that the fact that no trustee has yet been appointed will not relieve the bankrupt from the duty, or deprive him of the right, of objecting to the allowance of any false or unjust claim against his estate, or of moving for its expunction.[22]

It has been held that a claim by a bankrupt for compensation for rendering extraordinary services and assistance to his trustee, beyond [15] Johnson v. Collier, 222 U. S. 538, 32 Sup. Ct. 104, 56 L. Ed. 306, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 454; Hickcock v. Bell, 46 Tex. 610; In re Banks (D. C.) 207 Fed. 662, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

[16] Babbitt v. Dutcher, 216 U. S. 102, 30 Sup. Ct. 372, 54 L. Ed. 402, 17 Ann. Cas. 969, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 519 (compelling delivery of records and stock books of bankrupt corporation); In re Wilson, 116 Fed. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612 (punishment for contempt for refusing to turn over books of account).

[17] Phelps v. McDonald, 2 MacArthur, 375, 16 N. B. R. 217.

[18] In re Lattimer, 174 Fed. 824, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388; In re Hudson River Water Power Co., 148 Fed. 877, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 778.

[19] In re Wiesel, 173 Fed. 718, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 59.

[20] In re Hurlbutt, Hatch & Co., 135 Fed. 504, 68 C. C. A. 216, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

[21] Ex parte Fuller, 2 Story, 327, Fed. Cas. No. 5,147.

[22] In re Aukeny, 100 Fed. 614, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 72.

what was required to make the property, rights, credits, and effects available, cannot be allowed by the court, though it may be allowed by the creditors as an act of grace on their part.[23] But on the other hand, a man's professional skill, ability, and education are his own, and cannot be claimed by creditors in their own interest without compensation. Hence a bankrupt is under no obligation to render services, in his capacity as an attorney at law, in proceedings to realize his estate for the benefit of his creditors, and if he does so, he will be entitled to the payment of a fair compensation therefor out of the funds so secured.[24]

§ 221. Schedule of Assets; Preparation and Filing.—The statute makes it the duty of a bankrupt to prepare and file in court a verified schedule of his property. This paper must show the amount and kind of property, its location, and its money value in detail. It must accompany the petition for adjudication if the proceedings are voluntary, and in the case of an involuntary bankrupt, it must be filed within ten days after the adjudication, unless further time is granted. The schedule is further required to be in triplicate, one copy being for the clerk, one for the referee, and one for the trustee. Forms to be followed in the preparation of this schedule have been officially provided.[25] It is the evident intention of the rules and forms that each of the two divisions of the schedule (that is, the schedule properly so called, being the inventory of property, and the list of creditors, inappropriately called "Schedule A.,") should be separately signed and verified by the bankrupt, but there is ground to contend that a single signature and verification, at the end of the whole, would be sufficient at least to protect the proceedings against collateral attack.[26] It is, in most cases, absolutely necessary to the successful administration of the estate that the bankrupt should fully comply with his duty in this respect, thus bringing to the knowledge of the trustee and others in interest those details in regard to his property and his obligations which are, perhaps, within his exclusive knowledge.[27] The court is not without the means to compel his performance of this duty. If an explanation of the state of his affairs is necessary to enable the trustee to settle the estate, it may be obtained on an examination of the bankrupt, or the court may force him to file

[23] In re Barnes, 1 Wkly. Notes Cas. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 1,013.

[24] Blythe v. Thomas, 55 Fed. 961, 5 C. C. A. 356, affirming 45 Fed. 784.

[25] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7; Form No. 1.

[26] Brewster v. Ludekins, 19 Cal. 162. The schedule may be verified before a notary public. In re Bailey, 15 N. B. R. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 727.

[27] Where a partnership and one member of it are adjudged bankrupt, and the other member not, the latter must file a schedule and inventory within ten days. Armstrong v. Fisher, 224 Fed. 97, 139 C. C. A. 653, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701.

satisfactory schedules by withholding his discharge until this is done.[28] A bankrupt is not relieved from the duty of filing a schedule on the ground that its contents would tend to incriminate him, or could be used in evidence against him in a criminal prosecution; but even though he is under indictment at the time, he is required in good faith to make an effort to file a schedule which will comply with the requirements of the bankruptcy act, up to the point where the court can see that further obedience would violate his constitutional privilege. But he will be excused from making any statement in his schedule with reference to a transaction between himself and a third person, where it is apparent that there is immediate danger of a criminal prosecution against the bankrupt arising out of such transaction.[29] Where the bankrupt sent through the mail in June, 1911, a false financial statement, and after proceedings in bankruptcy were instituted, he was indicted for misuse of the mails in sending out such statement, it was held that there was no such connection between his condition in June and in October of the same year, when he was adjudged bankrupt, as would entitle him to refuse to file a schedule in bankruptcy, on the theory that to do so would tend to incriminate him. And at any rate, where a bankrupt claims that to furnish information will tend to incriminate him, "it must at least appear to the court from the character of the information sought or the question propounded, that his claim is justified, or the bankrupt must produce facts on which he bases such claim, in order that the court may judge of their sufficiency to support it." [30]

§ 222. Form and Contents of Schedule.—A bankrupt's schedule of property should contain a full and accurate inventory of all of his property which is of such a nature as to pass to the trustee in bankruptcy, and which the bankrupt himself could have made available for the satisfaction of his creditors.[31] He is not to decide whether it is worth including in the schedule; if there is any possibility of its having value, it must not be omitted. Nor can the bankrupt anticipate possible claims to the ownership of the property by third persons, or omit it from his schedule on the theory of his title being defeasible; these questions are for the trustee to settle at the proper time.[32] But where the bank-

[28] In re Walther, 95 Fed. 941, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702; In re Schulman & Goldstein, 164 Fed. 440, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 707. And see In re Brockton Ideal Shoe Co., 200 Fed. 745, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 76.

[29] In re Podolin, 202 Fed. 1014, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 406; 205 Fed. 563, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 576.

[30] Podolin v. Lesher Warner Dry Goods Co., 210 Fed. 97, 126 C. C. A. 611, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 796.

[31] Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., 233 Fed. 861, 147 C. C. A. 535, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[32] Corporate stock standing in the name of a bankrupt should be included in his schedule, although hypothecated rupt has no property except what he claims as exempt, and his creditors are all of one class, he is required, in making up his schedule, to use only such forms as are appropriate to and descriptive of the debts and property he is required to list.[33] Property which is exempt by the law of the state must of course be included in the schedule. This does not involve any surrender of it. On the contrary, it is necessary as a means of identifying the property which the bankrupt will claim.[34] But property or rights which are of such a character that they will not vest in the trustee need not of course be included in the schedule. This is the case with regard to a right of action for damages for a purely personal tort, and a few other interests. Not being assets in any sense that would make them available for creditors, nor included in the descriptions of property which the statute transfers to the trustee, they need not appear in the schedule.[35] Further, it must be remembered that this schedule speaks from the date of the filing of the petition, and the bankrupt is bound to set forth only such property as he has a right or interest in at the commencement of the proceedings.[36] With regard to property which the bankrupt has transferred or assigned, or for its full value. In re Hirsch, 96 Fed. 468, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715. Growing crops unmatured must be entered on the schedule. In re Schumpert, 8 N. B. R. 415, Fed. Cas. No. 12,491. So also must a claim of the bankrupt for damages on a contract for the sale of goods. In re Orne, 1 Ben. 361, 1 N. B. R. 57, Fed. Cas. No. 10,581. If the bankrupt has property in his possession and has the actual use of it as his own, although his title to it may be defeasible, he must set it out in his schedule and turn it over to his trustee. "It is not for him to rely on the title of a third person which he has not himself respected." In re Beal, 1 Low. 323, 2 N. B. R. 587, Fed. Cas. No. 1,156. The bankrupt's wilfull omission from his schedule of his interest in a vested estate in remainder to take effect in possession after the termination of a precedent life estate, is such a fraud as will vitiate his discharge. Edwards v. Gibbs, 39 Miss. 166. A grantor in an unrecorded deed, who becomes bankrupt, properly includes in his schedule the property conveyed thereby. Davis v. Pursel (Colo.) 134 Pac. 107.

[33] Anonymous, 1 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 457.

[34] Money received from the United States as a pension, and remaining in the pensioner's hands at the time of filing his petition in bankruptcy, should be listed in his schedule of assets under the heading of "cash on hand," with a statement that he claims it as exempt. If omitted without fraudulent intent, he may be permitted to insert it by amendment. In re Bean, 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53.

[35] In re Brick, 4 Fed. 804. Where a proposed voluntary bankrupt, who has no property except such as is exempt, borrows $50 wherewith to pay the fees and costs of his attorney, just before filing his petition, he is not required to list the sum so borrowed in his schedule of assets, and his omission to do so is no ground of opposition to his discharge. Sellers v. Bell (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. An interest in the net profits of a business as additional compensation for the services of a bankrupt need not be scheduled by him. In re Brown, 5 Law Rep. 121, Fed. Cas. No. 1,978.

[36] Ex parte Robertson, 5 Law Rep. 321, Fed. Cas. No. 11,921. The proceedings in bankruptcy are not constructive notice to any one of facts not necessary to appear therein, and this is true of a statement in the bankrupt's schedule as to property formerly, but not then, owned by him. Page v. Waring, 76 N. Y. 463.

covered up in the name of some relative, wtih a fraudulent design of placing it beyond the reach of his creditors, it is not to be included in the schedule. Such a conveyance or transfer may, indeed, be voidable as to the creditors. It may be set aside or annulled at the instance of a trustee in bankruptcy, either on common-law grounds or because in contravention of the bankruptcy law. But as against the bankrupt himself—and he is the person who makes and verifies the schedule—it is valid and binding.[37] This same rule applies to property which has already been sold under execution or other process, and the mere fact that property of the bankrupt, when sold at judicial sale, was bought by members of his family does not afford presumptive evidence of an ownership remaining in the bankrupt which will require him to account for the property in his schedule.[38]

The schedule must contain a substantially accurate description of each item of property, or interest, or claim listed, and the description must identify the property with such reasonable certainty as to advise the trustee of its nature and location, its value and the nature of the title or interest of the bankrupt. If these requirements are met, unimportant errors of detail, not materially misleading and not fraudulently designed, will not vitiate the schedule nor convict the bankrupt of making a false oath, and if deemed necessary they may be corrected by amendment.[39] In setting forth interests in real estate, it is probably not necessary that the schedule should describe the property with all the particularity of a deed or mortgage, but there must be a sufficient description to fix the location of the property and enable the trustee to identify it with certainty.[40] The forms officially promulgated for schedules in bankruptcy require a statement showing "what portion of debtor's property has been conveyed, by deed of assignment or otherwise, [37] In re Crenshaw, 95 Fed. 632, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Schreck, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 334; In re Warne, 12 Fed. 431; In re Freeman, 4 Ben. 245, 4 N. B. R. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 5,082; Ex parte Robertson, 5 Law Rep. 321, Fed. Cas. No. 11,921. But compare In re Skinner, 97 Fed. 190, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163.

[38] In re Bailey, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 726; In re Pomeroy, 2 N. B. R. 14, Fed. Cas. No. 11,258; In re Hummitsch, 2 N. B. R. 12, Fed. Cas. No. 6,866.

[39] See In re Soper, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 182; Phelps v. McDonald, 2 MacArthur, 375. The schedule should set forth the separate items of household furniture and wearing apparel, but a defect in this particular may be remedied by amendment. In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, 1 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481. See Sellers v. Bell (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529. Judgments in favor of the bankrupt should be entered under the heading "personal property" in the schedule, and not under the head of "unliquidated claims." In re Sallee, 2 N. B. R. 228, Fed. Cas. No. 12,256.

[40] See In re Shenberger, 102 Fed. 978, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Woods v. Little, 134 Fed. 229, 67 C. C. A. 157, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742; In re Gailey, 127 Fed. 538, 62 C. C. A. 336, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539; In re Frisbee, Fed. Cas. No. 5,130; In re Dodge, Fed. Cas. No. 3,946a.

for benefit of creditors," together with the date of such deed and the name and address of the grantee or assignee, and also a statement of the amount realized from the assigned property and the disposal of the same, so far as known to the debtor.[41] The bankrupt must also state whether or not any note has been given, or any judgment rendered, for each of the debts listed, and whether or not any person is liable with him as a partner or joint contractor.[42] Under former bankruptcy laws, it was held that, in the bankrupt's schedule or list, everything that was required to be stated or set forth must be printed or written out in full; that the sign "do.," or dots, or inverted commas, could not be used in the schedule by way of reference to indicate anything necessary to be stated.[43] And this rule was maintained notwithstanding the provisions of a general order in bankruptcy (No. 14) which declared that "all petitions and the schedules filed therewith shall be printed or written out plainly, without abbreviation or interlineation, except where such abbreviation and interlineation may be for the purpose of reference." This rule of court, or general order, has been again put in force, under the present statute, in identically the same language.[44]

§ 223. Preparation of Schedule on Bankrupt's Default.—We have seen that it is the statutory duty of the bankrupt to prepare, verify, and file in court a schedule of his property and a list of his creditors, with his petition if the proceeding is voluntary, or, in an involuntary case, within ten days after the adjudication. Congress also has made provision for the case of a debtor failing or refusing to perform this duty, for it is enacted that it shall be the duty of referees to "prepare and file the schedules of property and lists of creditors required to be filed by the bankrupts, or cause the same to be done, when the bankrupts fail, neglect, or refuse to do so."[45] Moreover, the general orders in bankruptcy provide that "in all cases of involuntary bankruptcy in which the bankrupt is absent or cannot be found, it shall be the duty of the petitioning creditor to file, within five days after the date of the adjudication, a schedule giving the names and places of residence of all the creditors of the bankrupt, according to the best information of the petitioning creditor. If the debtor is found, and is served with notice to furnish a schedule of his creditors and fails to do so, the petitioning creditor may apply for an attachment against the debtor, or may himself furnish such sched-

[41] Form No. 1, Schedule B., 4. See In re Plimpton, 4 Law Rep. 488, Fed. Cas. No. 11,227; In re Mott, Fed. Cas. No. 9,878b.

[42] In re Orne, 1 Ben. 420, 1 N. B. R. 79, Fed. Cas. No. 10,582.

[43] In re Orne, 1 Ben. 420, 1 N. B. R. 79, Fed. Cas. No. 10,582.

[44] General orders in Bankruptcy No. 5.

[45] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39, cl. 6.

ule as aforesaid."[46] It would seem that the "schedule" referred to in this general order is the same as the "list of creditors" mentioned in the statute. Reading these various provisions together, their apparent effect is this: If the bankrupt is found and is within the reach of the court, and fails to file his list of creditors within the time limited (or within a proper time after the discovery of his whereabouts), he must be served with notice to comply with his duty in this respect. If he disregards the notice, the creditor has an option either to prepare and file the list himself, or to apply for an attachment against the bankrupt to compel his obedience to the notice. Such attachment may be issued by the referee, if the case has been referred; for he has authority to "cause" the list to be prepared and filed. If the bankrupt is absent or cannot be found, the duty of making up the list of creditors falls upon the petitioning creditor in the first instance. If that creditor also neglects the duty, it devolves upon the referee either to order the creditor to perform it, or else himself to prepare and file both the schedule of property and the list of creditors, according to the best information he can obtain.

§ 224. Mistakes and Omissions in Schedule.—If the schedule of the bankrupt does not contain a full, true, and accurate inventory of his assets and liabilities, and if the omissions or falsifications are material and were made by the bankrupt knowingly and with a fraudulent design to conceal property which should pass to his trustee, or otherwise to evade the provisions of the bankruptcy law, then there is not only ground for withholding his discharge, but also for criminal prosecution and punishment.[47] But, to have these consequences, there must have been a willful and intentional omission or false entry in the schedule. If the omission or other error was the result of mere mistake, accident, or inadvertence on the part of the bankrupt or the attorney who prepared the schedule, without fraudulent design, it will not sustain a prosecution against him, nor furnish a reason for refusing to discharge him.[48] And the same rule holds good where the bankrupt's reason for not including particular property in the schedule was his honest, though mistaken, belief that he had no title to it or interest in it, or that it was worthless, or that the incumbrances upon it were so great as to leave no margin of value for the general creditors.[49] It should also be observ-

[46] General Order No. 9.

[47] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 14, 29.

[48] In re Crenshaw, 95 Fed. 632, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Hirsch, 96 Fed. 468, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; Sellers v. Bell (C. C. A.) 94 Fed. 801, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; In re Bushnell, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 528; In re Winsor, 16 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 17,885.

[49] In re Barrow, 98 Fed. 582, 3 Am.

ed that mistakes, omissions, or falsifications in the schedule, while they may require amendment and correction, and while they may, if fraudulent, expose the bankrupt to very serious consequences, do not affect the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, nor open any of its decrees or orders made in the case to collateral attack. This doctrine is held with regard to the insolvency laws of the States, and should apply with even greater force to proceedings under the bankruptcy act.[50] A proceeding in bankruptcy is in rem. Jurisdiction is founded upon the residence of the bankrupt within the territory of the court, and upon the presentation of a proper and sufficient petition, sustained if need be by evidence, on which an adjudication is made. This brings all the estate of the bankrupt within the jurisdiction of the court, without any regard to the fullness or accuracy of the schedule. Hence neither the adjudication of bankruptcy, nor the decree of the court upon the bankrupt's application for discharge, can be assailed collaterally by reason of anything contained in the schedule or anything omitted from it.[51]

But the fact that the bankrupt omitted to include a particular item of property in his schedule of assets may raise an estoppel against his subsequently claiming it as his, or at least furnish evidence or an admission that, at the time, he regarded it as belonging to another person.[52]

§ 225. List of Creditors.—Together with the schedule of his property, and under the same requirements as to signature and verification and time of filing, the bankrupt is required to furnish a list of his creditors. This list must show the residences of the creditors if known; if not known, the fact must be stated. It must also state the amount due to each of them, the consideration for the debt, and the security held by the creditor, if any.[53] It may be remarked in passing that the listing of Bankr. Rep. 414; In re Hirsch, 96 Fed. 468, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 715; In re Winsor, 16 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 17,885; In re Cushman, 7 Ben. 482, Fed. Cas. No. 3,512. But if the bankrupt describes a claim as worthless when he knows it to be of considerable value, or has reason to believe it valuable, a purchase made by him, or for his benefit, of his assets for a nominal sum, even after his discharge, at a sale by the trustee, would be considered fraudulent and void. Phelps v. McDonald, 2 MacArthur, 375. As to including debts due to the bankrupt, but which are barred by the statute of limitations or otherwise not collectible, see Pope v. Kirchner, 77 Cal. 152, 19 Pac. 264; In re Cushman, 7 Ben. 482, Fed. Cas. No. 3,512. An erroneous claim of certain articles mentioned as exempt does not affect the truth of the affidavit to the schedule which states that it contains a statement of all the bankrupt's estate. In re Whetmore, Deady, 585, Fed. Cas. No. 17,508.

[50] Bennett v. His Creditors, 22 Cal. 38; Brewster v. Ludekins, 19 Cal. 162; Pope v. Kirchner, 77 Cal. 152, 19 Pac. 264.

[51] Fuller v. Pease, 144 Mass. 390, 11 N. E. 694; Graves v. Wright, 53 Mich. 425, 19 N. W. 129.

[52] See Honaker v. Honaker, 182 Ky. 38, 206 S. W. 12; Hooker v. Peterson, 140 Tenn. 280, 204 S. W. 858.

[53] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7a, cl. 8.

a debt or claim does not amount to an admission by the bankrupt which any one can take advantage of. Thus, a bankrupt is not estopped from alleging the invalidity of a judgment because he has placed it on his schedule in the list of claims against him.[54] The reason of the requirement that the list of creditors shall include their residences is that all notices to creditors are to be sent to their respective addresses as they appear in this list, or as afterwards filed with the paper in the case by the creditors.[55] Hence the statements of the residences of creditors in the bankrupt's list should be such as will insure due delivery of notice by mail or service in person.[56] If the names and addresses of creditors are so illegibly written that the referee cannot determine with certainty who are the persons entitled to notice of the first meeting and where they are to be served, it is his duty to refuse to take any action until he has been furnished with a fair and legible copy of the list.[57] But excessive strictness should not be indulged, nor exactly literal accuracy required. It is enough if the exercise of reasonable intelligence and common sense, brought to bear on the bankrupt's list, will prevent mistake as to the persons of the creditors or their addresses.[58] A judgment due to a firm should be listed in the firm's name, without setting forth the names of its members, but giving their individual names will not vitiate the paper.[59] On the other hand, in listing a debt due to a newspaper, the name of its proprietor should be given, and not merely the name of the

The purpose of scheduling claims in bankruptcy is to inform the court of the persons who are entitled to notice, to inform trustees of the claims which will or may be proved, and to limit the effect of the bankrupt's discharge. Merchants' Bank of Brooklyn v. Miller, 176 App. Div. 412, 162 N. Y. Supp. 999. It is expressly provided that a debt which has not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance will not be released by the discharge of the bankrupt, unless the creditor has notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 17. A creditor objecting that the bankrupt does not set forth a full list of his creditors, with their residences and the amounts due, must point out the omission. In re Plimpton, 4 Law Rep. 488, Fed. Cas. No. 11,227.

[54] King v. Pickett, 32 La. Ann. 1006.

[55] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a.

[56] In re Pulver, 1 Ben. 381, 1 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 11,466. Where a creditor's address is erroneously given in the list filed, and notice is sent to that address and his true address might easily have been ascertained from the city directory, no proper notice has been given. In re Quackenbush, 122 App. Div. 456, 106 N. Y. Supp. 773.

[57] In re Hall, 2 N. B. R. 192, Fed. Cas. No. 5,922.

[58] Gatliff v. Mackey, 104 S. W. 379, 31 Ky. Law Rep. 947; In re Orne, 1 Ben. 420, 1 N. B. R. 79, Fed. Cas. No. 10,582; Merchants' Bank of Brooklyn v. Miller, 176 App. Div. 412, 162 N. Y. Supp. 999. Where a bankrupt in his schedule sets forth a debt represented by a promissory note to be due to one who is the equitable owner thereof though not the legal payee, it is sufficient. Ross-Lewin v. Goold, 113 Ill. App. 499.

[59] Anonymous, 1 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 457. And see New York Institution for Instruction of Deaf and Dumb v. Crockett, 117 App. Div. 269, 102 N. Y. Supp. 412.

newspaper.[60] Where a schedule in voluntary bankruptcy stated the present residences of certain creditors to be unknown, but gave their former residences, it was held that the statement as to the present residences was sufficient, and that the statement as to their former residences was surplusage, but the bankrupt could show, either in the list or by separate affidavit, what efforts he had made to ascertain the residences of such creditors.[61] The statement of the amount due to each creditor is sufficient if the sum and the date of the debt or judgment is given.[62] And where a judgment previously recovered against the bankrupt still appears on the records of the court which rendered it as an unsatisfied obligation against him in favor of the judgment creditor, it is rightly included in his schedule as a debt due to that creditor, although it has actually been sold to another creditor, and the bankrupt is chargeable with knowledge of the sale.[63] A contingent liability, it is said, need not be scheduled where it does not appear that the person primarily liable will not pay in full.[64] If the bankrupt willfully places upon his schedule a debt which he knows to be false, he will be guilty (the schedule being duly verified) of having "made a false oath in a proceeding in bankruptcy," and the consequence will be not merely the loss of his discharge, but also liability to punishment as for a criminal offense.[65]

§ 226. Amendment of Schedule and List.—"The court may allow amendments to the petition and schedules on application of the petitioner. Amendments shall be printed or written, signed and verified, like original petitions and schedules. If amendments are made to separate schedules, the same must be made separately, with proper refer-

[60] Anonymous, 2 N. B. R. 141, Fed. Cas. No. 462.

[61] In re Pulver, 1 Ben. 381, 1 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 11,466. In a case arising under the insolvency law of California, it was held that, when the insolvent is liable as indorser on a promissory note, it is not sufficient for him merely to state the fact, with the name of his indorsee, in the list of debts, if such indorsee has already transferred the note to another person; it is the duty of the insolvent to ascertain, if he can, and state, who is the present holder of the note, and if he cannot ascertain it he should state that the name of such creditor is unknown to him. McAllister v. Strode, 7 Cal. 428. The note at the end of part 3 of "Schedule A.," of the official forms, provides that when the name and residence of the drawer, maker, indorser or holder of a bill or note are unknown to the bankrupt, the fact must be stated, and also the name and residence of the last holder known to the debtor. A question of diligence in ascertaining the correct residence of a creditor of a bankrupt enters into the question as to whether the debt has been properly scheduled only so far as it affects the good faith of the debtor's statement in the schedule that such residence is unknown. Lutz v. Kalmus, 115 N. Y. Supp. 220.

[62] In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, 1 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481.

[63] Sellers v. Bell, 94 Fed. 801, 36 C. C. A. 502, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529.

[64] In re Greenebaum, Fed. Cas. No. 5,769.

[65] See Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 14b, and 29b. And see In re Delevan, Fed. Cas. No. 3,758.

ences. In the application for leave to amend, the petitioner shall state the cause of the error in the paper originally filed." [66] Where creditors are omitted from the list of debts, or property omitted from the inventory of assets, or either wrongly stated, but as the result of accident, mistake, or mere inadvertence, or where there is a lack of form or of compliance with the statutory requisites, this general order authorizes corrections to be made in the manner prescribed.[67] And if the bankrupt, without any fraudulent intent, has omitted from his schedule property which he means to claim as exempt, he will be allowed to insert it by amendment.[68] The phrase "the court," in the general order, of course includes the referee.[69] In fact, under the present statute, it might almost be said to exclude the judge; for it is made the express and specific duty of the referee, when the schedule and list filed by the bankrupt are incomplete or defective, to "cause them to be amended." [70] Applications for leave to amend will usually proceed from the bankrupt himself, and this is apparently all that is contemplated by the general order. But it has also been held that any creditor who has proved his claim has the right to ask that the bankrupt be required to amend defects in his petition or schedule.[71] Under the former bankruptcy law (and it would seem that the same rule applies at present) it was held that an application by the bankrupt for leave to amend and correct his list of creditors, by inserting the name of a creditor inadvertently omit-

[66] General Order in Bankruptcy No. 11. A voluntary petitoner in bankruptcy, in applying for leave to amend his schedule, must state the cause of the error in that originally filed. In re Brincat (D. C.) 233 Fed. 811, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 587.

[67] In re Perry, 1 N. B. R. 220, Fed. Cas. No. 10,998; In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481; In re Frisbee, Fed. Cas. No. 5,130. If a bankrupt fails to schedule property which should be surrendered to his trustee, and this fact is shown upon his examination, he may then be permitted to correct his schedule. In re Harrell (D. C.) 222 Fed. 160, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 809. Where a tract of land has been fraudulently conveyed by the bankrupt to his wife as her separate property in fraud of creditors, it may properly be added to his schedule by amendment as assets of his estate. Strong v. Durdle, 94 Wash. 157, 162 Pac. 6.

[68] In re Bean, 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; Harrelson v. Webb, 124 La. 1007, 50 South. 833, 134 Am. St. Rep. 529.

[69] In re Morford, 1 Ben. 264, 1 N. B. R. 211, Fed. Cas. No. 9,796.

[70] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 39, cl. 2. Under the former act and rules, it was held that the register might, of his own motion, and not on the petition of the trustee or a creditor, order an amendment of the banukrupt's schedule, when the same was found to be incomplete or defective or otherwise insufficient. In re Orne, 1 Ben. 420, 1 N. B. R. 79, Fed. Cas. No. 10,582. The present rule, which provides only that amendments may be "allowed," might not be broad enough to authorize such action, but spontaneous action of this character on the part of the referee, when he finds the proceedings embarrassed by an insufficient schedule of property or list of creditors, is not only permitted but enjoined by the section of the act above quoted.

[71] In re Jones, 2 N. B. R. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 7,447.

ted, was ex parte and grantable of course, and required no notice to creditors, and that creditors had no right to object to such amendment, and no issue of fact or law could be raised or contested in regard to it.[72] An order authorizing or requiring an amendment in the bankrupt's schedule should specify particularly the respects in which it is to be amended.[73] The right of amendment may of course be conditioned on such terms as will prevent any injustice or inequality.[74] As to the time or stage of the proceedings at which amendments may be allowed, it is held that they do not come too late if made after the filing of specifications of opposition to the discharge of the bankrupt (based on errors or omissions in the schedules), and even though a hearing may have been had on such specifications, yet if it can be shown to the court that the bankrupt was guilty of no greater fault than inadvertence or mistake, and that there is no ground for withholding the discharge by reason of any fraud or perjury, proper amendments may be ordered and the case continued, with leave to renew the application for discharge at a future time.[75] Even the granting of a discharge and the closing of the estate are not insuperable obstacles to the allowance of a proper amendment. Such a course was sanctioned in one case where the bankrupt discovered assets of substantial value, of which he had previously been unaware, and desired to claim the balance of his exemption out of the fund thus brought in.[76] But where a considerable time has elapsed since the granting of a discharge, the bankrupt will not be permitted to reopen the proceedings and amend the schedule for the purpose of including an omitted creditor who had not been made a party to the proceedings and had no notice or knowledge of them.[77] A peculiar condition arises where the bankrupt applies for leave to amend his list of creditors, after the first meeting and after the election

[72] In re Hill, 5 Fed. 448; In re Watts, 3 Ben. 166, 2 N. B. R. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 17,293; In re Heller, 5 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 6,339. But in the case last cited, it was said to be "the better practice to issue an order requiring the party to show cause why the amendments as asked for should not be allowed, specifying particularly the points in which the schedules are defective. The bankrupt or creditor will then have the right to oppose the application, and appeal from the order if dissatisfied with the decision of the register."

[73] In re Orne, 1 N. B. R. 79, 1 Ben. 420, Fed. Cas. No. 10,582.

[74] In re Ratcliffe, 6 Phila. 466, 1 N. B. R. 400, Fed. Cas. No. 11,578.

[75] In re Preston, 3 N. B. R. 103, Fed. Cas. No. 11,392; In re Heller, 5 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 6,339; In re Townsend, 2 Fed. 559. But see In re Kittler, 176 Fed. 655, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 585. It is said that the allowance of an amendment to the schedule, by adding property omitted, does not preclude a creditor from availing himself of any ground of opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge arising out of such omission. In re Watts, 3 Ben. 166, 2 N. B. R. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 17,293.

[76] In re Irwin, 177 Fed. 284, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165.

[77] In re Spicer, 145 Fed. 431, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 802.

of a trustee, and the object of the amendment is to introduce the names of other creditors holding such an amount of claims that their votes would have changed the result of the election of the trustee. In this case it has generally been considered necessary to hold a new meeting of creditors, based on new notices, and to hold a new election for trustee. If the person now chosen for trustee is a different person from the trustee previously appointed, an application to the court should be made for the removal of the present incumbent and the appointment of the newly chosen trustee in his place.[78]

An amendment of the bankrupt's list of creditors so as to include a given claim relates back to the date of filing the petition in bankruptcy, so that the owner of the claim will be affected by the bankrupt's discharge in just the same way as if the claim had been properly listed at first. If the bankrupt afterwards sues him, on a transaction occurring after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, he cannot use that claim as a set-off.[79]

§ 227. Surrender of Money or Assets to Trustee; Jurisdiction and Power to Order.—The present bankruptcy statute does not in explicit terms require the bankrupt to surrender his property and effects to the trustee. That such a surrender must be made is, however, quite clear by implication from various clauses of the act. Thus, it is provided that the trustee shall be vested by operation of law with the title of the bankrupt to all of the latter's property which is of a nature to be administered under the act, and that the bankrupt must execute to his trustee transfers of all his property in foreign countries, a procedure which is rendered necessary by the fact that the bankruptcy law can have no extraterritorial efficacy. Further, if the bankrupt conceals from his trustee any of his property, it is a criminal offense.[80] This duty of sur-

[78] See In re Perry, 1 N. B. R. 220, Fed. Cas. No. 10,998; In re Ratcliffe, 6 Phila. 466, 1 N. B. R. 400, Fed. Cas. No. 11,578; In re Morgenthal, 6 Phila. 468, 1 N. B. R. 402, Fed. Cas. No. 9,813; In re Carson, 5 Ben. 277, 5 N. B. R. 290, Fed. Cas. No. 2,460.

[79] Bramham v. Lanier Bros., 138 Tenn. 702, 200 S. W. 830.

[80] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a; § 7, cl. 5; § 29b. Compare Rev. Stat. U. S. §§ 5044, 5051, 5055. Under the British statute of 5 Geo. II, c. 30, which was in force at the beginning of the nineteenth century, the bankrupt was required to appear before the commissioners for an examination, and upon this examination, was bound "upon pain of death to make a full discovery of all his estate and effects as well in expectancy as in possession, and how he has disposed of the same, together with all books and writings relating thereto and is to deliver up all in his own power to the commissioners (except the necessary wearing apparel of himself, his wife, and his children), and in case he conceals or embezzles any effects to the amount of twenty pounds, or withholds any books or writings with intent to defraud his creditors, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy, and his goods and estates shall be divided among his creditors." 2 Bl. Comm. 482. Students render on the part of the bankrupt the court has ample power to enforce. It is now well settled that, if the court is satisfied, either from the examination of the bankrupt himself or from other evidence, that he has in his possession and control money or other property which belongs to his estate in bankruptcy and should be administered by the trustee, and if the bankrupt has neglected or refused to surrender such money or property to his trustee, or fails or refuses to give any account of his disposition of it, or attempts to account for its loss by a story which is incredible in itself or is contradicted by trustworthy evidence, then it is within the power and jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy summarily to order the bankrupt to pay the money or surrender the property to the trustee, and his obedience to this order may be enforced by committing him to prison, as for a contempt of court, where he may be held until he will comply with the command of the court, or until it becomes evident that it is impossible for him to yield such obedience.[81] The fact that a bankrupt who knowingly and fraudulently conceals from his trustee any property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy thereby commits a crime, for which he is liable to be prosecuted and punished by imprisonment, does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to order him to surrender the property and to deal with him as for contempt if he does not obey.[82] And since such an order is not an order for the payment of a debt, it cannot be said that a commitment of the bankrupt to jail to enforce his obedience to it is in any sense imprisonment for debt.[83] But two essential facts condition the law-of the progress of civilization may well compare the barbarous severity of this enactment with the indulgent kindness of the act of Congress of 1898.

[81] Schweer v. Brown (C. C. A.) 130 Fed. 328, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; In re Rosser, 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Schlesinger, 102 Fed. 117, 42 C. C. A. 207, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; In re Purvine, 96 Fed. 192, 37 C. C. A. 446, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 787; In re Shachter, 119 Fed. 1010, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 499; In re Gerstel, 123 Fed. 166, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Mayer, 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re Logan, 196 Fed. 678, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 543; Wayne Knitting Mills v. Nugent, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 714; In re Schlesinger, 97 Fed. 930, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 342; In re Wilson, 116 Fed. 419, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; In re Shaffer & Stern, 185 Fed. 549, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 54; Cummings v. Synnott, 184 Fed. 718, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 859; In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; In re Greenberg, 106 Fed. 496, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 840; In re Felson, 124 Fed. 288, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716; In re Tudor, 96 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808; In re Pevear, 21 Fed. 121; In re Salkey, 6 Biss. 269, 11 N. B. R. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 12,253, affirmed 6 Biss. 280, 11 N. B. R. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 12,254; In re Peltasohn, 4 Dill. 107, 16 N. B. R. 265, Fed. Cas. No. 10,912; In re Kempner, 6 N. B. R. 521, Fed. Cas. No. 7,689; In re Speyer, 6 N. B. R. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 13,239; In re How, 18 N. B. R. 565, Fed. Cas. No. 6,747; In re Dresser, 3 N. B. R. 557, Fed. Cas. No. 4,077.

[82] Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

[83] In re Rosser, 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

ful exercise of this power by the court; first, that the money or property directed to be delivered to the trustee shall be a part of the bankrupt's estate, and second, that the bankrupt has it in his possession or under his control at the time the order for delivery is made.[84] In speaking of the "court," in this connection, it is to be understood that the referee is included. That officer has jurisdiction of an application for an order requiring such a surrender of property, and to make an order in accordance with his findings on such application.[85]

It is not necessary that the money or property should be physically in the possession of the bankrupt. It is enough if it is held for him by some person whom he can control. Thus, where a bankrupt, within a few days before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, sold property and handed the proceeds over to his wife, she will be regarded as holding the same as his agent, and the facts will warrant an order requiring him to pay the money over to his trustee.[86] It is likewise the duty of the bankrupt to turn over to the trustee any money which he may have collected from his debtors since the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, and he may be constrained to do so in the same manner and by the same process as above indicated.[87] Where a devise has been made to a bankrupt and accepted by him, it is a fraud upon his creditors for him to disclaim or renounce it, and the bankruptcy court will compel him to do all acts necessary to perfect his title to the devised estate.[88]

Where a bankrupt, having been engaged in business in one state absconds with money belonging to his estate, and is arrested in another state, the federal District Court in the latter state has ancillary jurisdiction, at the suit of the receiver in bankruptcy, to require the surrender of the money.[89]

§ 228. Same; Petition, Order, and Proceedings Thereon.—In order to obtain a surrender of property or money by a bankrupt, it is not necessary to resort to a plenary suit, but the matter may be determined summarily, that is, on a petition by the trustee and a rule on the bank-

[84] In re Rosser, 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[85] In re Mayer, 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re Oliver, 96 Fed. 85, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 783. And see supra, § 67.

[86] In re Eddleman, 154 Fed. 160, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45. So where the owner of patents for inventions has assigned them to a corporation in exchange for its stock, he holds them thereafter merely as an agent or officer of the company, and must surrender them to its trustee. In re Cantelo Mfg. Co., 201 Fed. 158, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

[87] Howard v. Crompton, 14 Blatchf. 328, Fed. Cas. No. 6,758; In re Ettinger, 18 N. B. R. 222, Fed. Cas. No. 4,543.

[88] Ex parte Fuller, 2 Story, 327, Fed. Cas. No. 5,147.

[89] Musica v. Prentice, 211 Fed. 326, 127 C. C. A. 525, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687, affirming In re A. Musica & Son (D. C.) 205 Fed. 413, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

rupt to show cause why he should not be ordered as prayed.[90] This application can be made only by the trustee in bankruptcy, acting for the benefit of the creditors at large; a motion will not be entertained if made by a creditor or creditors independently of the trustee.[91] And if the money or property in question is supposed to be in the possession of some third person, holding as an agent or bailee of the bankrupt, the bankrupt should be dealt with first, and proceedings cannot be taken against the alleged agent to compel him to account for the property until it has been specifically traced into his hands.[92] It is of course proper before applying to the court, to make demand upon the bankrupt for the property in question, but he cannot complain of the omission of such a demand if the order for its delivery is served on him in ample time to allow of his compliance before steps are taken to punish him.[93] The trustee's petition for such an order should contain definite averments and state specifically what sum of money or what particular property the bankrupt is supposed to be concealing or withholding,[94] but it need not allege affirmatively that he is able to comply with an order requiring its surrender.[95] The bankrupt must have notice of the application and a full and fair opportunity to be heard in his own behalf, to make his defense, to produce evidence, and to cross-examine the witnesses. Failure to accord him his fundamental rights in these particulars is more than a mere irregularity. It is a fault which will render the order, if made, entirely unlawful and void.[96] The bankrupt may either demur

[90] In re Cunney (D. C.) 225 Fed. 426. 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617; Jones v. Blair, 242 Fed. 783, 155 C. C. A. 371, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Joseph R. Marquette, Jr., Inc., 254 Fed. 419, 166 C. C. A. 51, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; In re Adler (D. C.) 129 Fed. 502, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; In re Pevear (D. C.) 21 Fed. 121; In re McKenna, 9 Fed. 27; In re Thompson, 13 N. B. R. 300, Fed. Cas. No. 13,938. Though an order is made in summary proceedings of this kind, it may have the effect of a bar or estoppel. Thus, an order denying the petition of the trustee to require the bankrupt to deliver up a policy of life insurance or pay its surrender value is a bar to a later application to require him to surrender the policy or pay its loan value. In re Samuels (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 561, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13.

[91] In re Eliowich (D. C.) 148 Fed. 510, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Pearson, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 474.

[92] In re Fogelman, 188 Fed. 755, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 742. And see Richter v. Rockhold, 253 Fed. 941, 165 C. C. A. 383, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384.

[93] In re D. Levy & Co., 142 Fed. 442, 73 C. C. A. 558, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166.

[94] In re Ruos, 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; In re Greer, 189 Fed. 511, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811; Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299. A petition of the trustee, alleging that at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy a certain sum was due, owing, and unpaid to the bankrupt by a corporation, but alleging no facts, and supported by no evidence warranting the inference that the bankrupt ever had the money in his possession or under his control, is insufficient to sustain an order on him to pay it over as a concealed asset. In re Levy (D. C.) 259 Fed. 316, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 590.

[95] In re Stavrahn, 174 Fed. 330, 98 C. C. A. 202, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168.

[96] In re Atwater, 227 Fed. 511, 36 Am.

or answer to the trustee's petition,[97] but his answer, although under oath, is not conclusive on the court, but it may proceed to inquire into all the facts and circumstances.[98] Proceedings on the petition are usually had before the referee, but the court may refer the matter to a special master for hearing and examination of the bankrupt.[99] If money is found to be withheld by the bankrupt, the order should require it to be paid over to the trustee, and not into the registry of the court.[100] And if property other than money is involved, the order should describe it with reasonable certainty and as particularly as practicable, though in such a case as a stock of merchandise a general description will be sufficient, and should require its surrender in specie.[101] Where an order of a referee requiring a bankrupt thus to surrender or turn over property to his trustee was based on a mistake of fact, the referee has power, on the petition of the bankrupt, filed within the time limited for a review of his decision, and the mistake being shown, to reconsider and set aside such order.[102]

§ 229. Same; Evidence to Sustain Order.—In a proceeding to compel a bankrupt to surrender money or property alleged to be withheld or concealed by him, it is first of all necessary for the trustee to make out a prima facie case by showing that the bankrupt had such money or property in his possession or under his control at or about the time of his bankruptcy, and that it was not included in his schedule and has not since been turned over to the trustee.[103] Such a case is usually established by presumptions drawn from the facts, and positive proof is not Bankr. Rep. 109; In re Rosser, 101 Fed. 562, 41 C. C. A. 497, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Frank, 182 Fed. 794, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486; Boyd v. Glucklich, 116 Fed. 131, 53 C. C. A. 451, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393; In re Cole, 163 Fed. 180, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; In re Baum, 169 Fed. 410, 94 C. C. A. 632, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295; In re Thiessen, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 625.

97 In re Koplin, 179 Fed. 1013, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 534.

98 In re Gerstel, 123 Fed. 166, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411.

99 In re Herskovitz, 152 Fed. 316, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 247. But compare In re Nankin, 246 Fed. 811, 159 C. C. A. 113, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459.

100 In re Baum, 169 Fed. 410, 94 C. C. A. 632, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295. Where the trustee in bankruptcy claimed as against the bankrupt income arising under a testamentary trust for the bankrupt's benefit, the trustee could not be required to accept a bond and allow the payment of the money to the bankrupt. In re Reynolds (D. C.) 243 Fed. 272, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

101 Samel v. Dodd, 142 Fed. 68, 73 C. C. A. 254, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; In re Lesaius, 163 Fed. 614, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23.

102 In re Brenner, 190 Fed. 209, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 646.

103 Henkin v. Fousek, 246 Fed. 285, 159 C. C. A. 15, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; Schmid v. Rosenthal, 230 Fed. 818, 145 C. C. A. 128, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; In re Ricciardelli (D. C.) 224 Fed. 638, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35; In re Kalmanowitz (D. C.) 211 Fed. 167, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210; In re Barton Bros. (D. C.) 149 Fed. 620, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 98; In re Reynolds (D. C.) 190 Fed. 967, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

required.[104] The trustee, for instance is not required to prove by eye-witnesses that the bankrupt has in his possession the goods alleged to be concealed or that the money unaccounted for is in the bank or on the bankrupt's person.[105] Evidence showing the recent possession by the bankrupt of money or property, with no satisfactory explanation of what was done with it or what has become of it, will sustain the burden of proof resting on the trustee.[106] And when the trustee's prima facie case is established either by evidence or by the admission of the bankrupt or his failure to deny it, the burden is then shifted to the bankrupt, and it is incumbent on him to give a satisfactory reason for his failure to produce the property, by explaining in a clear, explicit, and credible manner what became of it, what disposition he made of it, or how it passed out of his possession or control.[107] If he fails to appear before the referee when cited for this purpose, or if, when under examination, he refuses to give any account of the money or property in question, there is sufficient ground for an order requiring him to surrender it to the trustee in bankruptcy.[108] Ordinarily, however, the bankrupt will attempt to meet the issue and rebut the presumption that he still holds the property. But his mere denial under oath that he has the money or property is not conclusive, and does not prevent the court from proceeding to a further investigation and making the order for surrender if sufficient contrary evidence is adduced.[109] His positive denial is of course entitled to its due weight, but this amounts to very little where it is inconsistent with the only reasonable conclusion to be drawn from the evidence, and where there are circumstances tending to discredit the bankrupt, as, that he has destroyed the books of account which would have shown the true fact,[110] or where his testimony is entirely uncor-

[104] In re Graning, 229 Fed. 370, 143 C. C. A. 490, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[105] In re Silverman (D. C.) 206 Fed. 960, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798.

[106] In re Dixon, 224 Fed. 624, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482; In re Silverman (D. C.) 206 Fed. 960, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798; Shea v. Lewis, 206 Fed. 877, 124 C. C. A. 537, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Katz (D. C.) 216 Fed. 949; In re Edelman (D. C.) 251 Fed. 429, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

[107] In re Chavkin, 249 Fed. 342, 161 C. C. A. 350, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re Pennell, 214 Fed. 337, 130 C. C. A. 645, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 241; In re Bass (D. C.) 257 Fed. 137, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 280; In re Stavrahn, 174 Fed. 330, 98 C. C. A. 202, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; In re Deuell, 100 Fed. 633, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 60; In re Nisenson, 182 Fed. 912, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 915; In re Lesaius, 163 Fed. 614, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 23; In re Schlesinger, 97 Fed. 930, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 342; In re Averick, 170 Fed. 521, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; In re Rosenthal, 200 Fed. 190, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 515.

[108] In re Smith, 185 Fed. 983, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399; In re D. Levy & Co., 142 Fed. 442, 73 C. C. A. 558, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166; In re Rosser, 96 Fed. 308, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746.

[109] Moody v. Cole, 148 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818; Schweer v. Brown, 130 Fed. 328, 64 C. C. A. 574, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; Kirsner v. Taliaferro, 202 Fed. 51, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832.

[110] In re Goodman, 196 Fed. 566, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697.

roborated, although he was given ample opportunity to obtain corroborating testimony and it appears that this could easily have been done if his own testimony was true.[111] As on the trial of other civil issues, any pertinent evidence, having a material bearing on the question, may be introduced.[112] Thus, stenographic notes of the testimony of the bankrupt when under examination at a creditors' meeting, held for the general purpose of inquiring into his affairs are admissible.[113] And circumstances showing a general disposition on the part of the bankrupt to be secretive and unfair towards his creditors, or to entertain a fraudulent purpose of overreaching them or concealing assets from them, may be admissible as tending to discredit his own story of the loss or disappearance of the property in question.[114]

Yet it must be remembered that an order imperatively requiring the bankrupt to surrender money or property, against his own denial that he has it, is a very strong measure, especially as the consequence of his failure to comply will be his incarceration. Hence, notwithstanding an occasional ruling that a fair preponderance of the evidence is enough to justify the court in making such an order,[115] it is held by the great majority of the decisions that the court must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the bankrupt has the present possession or control of the money or property in question and the present ability to comply with an order for its surrender.[116] Circumstances which merely create a strong suspicion that he is concealing assets,[117] or even a strong prob-

[111] In re Henderson, 130 Fed. 385, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 351; In re Leinweber, 128 Fed. 641, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175.

[112] In re Jacobs, 235 Fed. 706, 149 C. C. A. 126, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96. A financial statement, made by the bankrupts a short time before the bankruptcy, showing a surplus of assets not scheduled, is admissible in evidence in proceedings by the trustee to require them to turn over such assets. In re Chavkin, 249 Fed. 342, 161 C. C. A. 350, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[113] In re Wiesen Bros. (D. C.) 135 Fed. 442, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 347; Good v. Kane, 211 Fed. 956, 128 C. C. A. 454.

[114] In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[115] In re Cramer, 175 Fed. 879, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637.

[116] In re Krueger, 197 Fed. 124, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 890; In re Krall, 182 Fed. 191, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 941; In re Berman, 165 Fed. 383, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139; In re Sax, 141 Fed. 223, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 455; In re Adler, 129 Fed. 502, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 19; Moody v. Cole, 148 Fed. 295, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 818; Boyd v. Glucklich, 116 Fed. 131, 53 C. C. A. 451, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393; In re Walder, 142 Fed. 784, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 41; Samel v. Dodd, 142 Fed. 68, 73 C. C. A. 254, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; In re Anderson, 103 Fed. 854, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640; Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Mayer, 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re McCormick, 97 Fed. 566, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340; In re Thiessen, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 625; Kirsner v. Taliaferro, 202 Fed. 51, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832; In re Holden (C. C. A.) 203 Fed. 229, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; Shea v. Lewis (C. C. A.) 206 Fed. 877, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; Stuart v. Reynolds (C. C. A.) 204 Fed. 709, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Mitchell, 202 Fed. 806.

[117] In re Switzer, 140 Fed. 976, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 468; In re Adler, 170 Fed. 634, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 371.

ability,[118] will not do. The court must not take this step in a doubtful case. Particularly where the issue turns upon comparative estimates of the value of a stock of goods at different times, great care must be exercised, and an order of surrender should not be made unless the discrepancy is great and such as cannot be explained except on the theory that the bankrupt is keeping back a part.[119]

But to stay the hand of the court, the doubt which it entertains must be "reasonable." In deciding issues of this kind, "a court, when called upon to pass upon the weight of testimony and the credibility of witnesses, is not to be deprived of those faculties of judgment and discrimination as to what is true or probable, on the one hand, and untrue, improbable, or absurd, upon the other, which are permitted to be exercised by juries in similar cases." [120] Hence although the bankrupt's explanation of the loss or disappearance of his property is entirely uncontradicted by any testimony, yet the court is not bound to believe him, but may refuse to accept the explanation and make its order for the surrender of the property, when the story told by the bankrupt is so evidently manufactured for the occasion or so incredible that it would not deceive any person of reasonable sagacity.[121] That the courts are often confronted with this sort of dilemma may be seen from the cases cited in the margin. Without pursuing in detail the various surprising narratives brought forward by fraudulent bankrupts, it may be remarked that it appears to be a favorite device to allege that the money in question was stolen from them in the street or that burglars looted the home or the store. The courts have frequently declined to lend their ear to this easy falsehood.[122] And yet if the bankrupt attempts to explain the loss of the money or property by a story which, though difficult to believe, is not impossible nor an obvious fabrication, the court should not be hasty in deciding against him. It is the more prudent course to [118] In re Goldfarb Bros., 131 Fed. 643, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 386.

[119] In re Reese, 170 Fed. 986, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521. While an inventory taken by a bankrupt merchant prior to his bankruptcy may be made the basis of an order requiring him to turn over property, it should be used with caution on account of its very probable unreliability. Kirsner v. Taliaferro (C. C. A.) 202 Fed. 51, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 832.

[120] Schweer v. Brown, 130 Fed. 328, 64 C. C. A. 574, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

[121] In re Stokes, 185 Fed. 994, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255; In re Lippman, 184 Fed. 551, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 874; In re Robert Greenberg & Bro., 179 Fed. 413, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 943; In re Weinreb, 146 Fed. 243, 76 C. C. A. 609, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 702; In re Kane, 125 Fed. 984, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478; In re Frankfort, 144 Fed. 721, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 210.

[122] See, for example, In re Chamelin, 184 Fed. 553, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 570; In re De Gottardi, 114 Fed. 328, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723; In re Levin, 113 Fed. 498, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 743; Schweer v. Brown, 130 Fed. 328, 64 C. C. A. 574, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178.

order him before the judge or referee for further examination as to whether or not he has made a full disclosure of the facts.[123]

§ 230. Same; Excuses, Defenses, and Allowances.—Although money or property not turned over to the trustee may be proved or admitted to have been in the recent possession of the bankrupt, still an order for its surrender by him will not be made unless it is within his ability presently to comply. Physical inability to obey such an order will be a good plea in defense, and though his bare denial will not be enough to establish the fact, yet if he succeeds in demonstrating it, no order will be made.[124] Thus, he may show that, since the time the money is shown to have been in his hands, it has passed into the possession of others and is no longer under his control.[125] This method of proceeding cannot be employed, for instance, to reach property which is in the hands of third persons, claiming title thereto by conveyance or transfer from the bankrupt prior to the bankruptcy, although such transfer was manifestly fraudulent.[126] But money of a married woman received by her husband, but which by the law of the state is her separate property and subject to her absolute control, is presumably held by him as her agent, and the fact of his possession furnishes no excuse for her failure to deliver it to her trustee in bankruptcy, unless she shows as a matter of fact that she is unable to obtain the actual possession of it.[127] And a bankrupt cannot escape the duty of turning over to his trustee money which he has invested in his business on the pretense that he holds it as a trustee.[128] Again, since the question is not whether the bankrupt has made a proper use of his money or not, but whether he actually has it now in possession or not, it is a good defense that he has paid it away to his creditors, regardless of the fact that such payments were not justified and resulted in giving preferences.[129] In fact, it may be said that it is entirely immaterial what the bankrupt has done with his money (so far as regards a proceeding of this kind) so long as [123] In re McCormick, 97 Fed. 566, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 340.

[124] In re Cummings, 186 Fed. 1020, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 130; In re Richards, 183 Fed. 501, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Davison, 143 Fed. 673, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; Crawford v. Sternberg, 220 Fed. 73, 135 C. C. A. 641, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677; Epstein v. Steinfeld, 210 Fed. 236, 127 C. C. A. 54, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6.

[125] American Trust Co. v. Wallis, 126 Fed. 464, 61 C. C. A. 342, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360.

[126] In re Mayer, 98 Fed. 839, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533.

[127] In re Cole, 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302.

[128] In re Smith Longbottom & Sons, 142 Fed. 291, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

[129] In re Laplume Condensed Milk Co., 145 Fed. 1013, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729; In re Smith Longbottom & Sons, 142 Fed. 291, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437; In re Kane, 125 Fed. 984, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478; In re Anderson, 103 Fed. 854, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640; In re Cunney (D. C.) 225 Fed. 426, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617.

he satisfies the court that he has actually parted with it.[130] The object of the proceeding is to force the bankrupt to disgorge assets which he is concealing or withholding, not to punish him for improvident or even dishonest conduct. If he has wasted his money or paid it away, no matter for what purpose, he cannot be ordered to pay it over to his trustee. As remarked by the court in such a case: "These sums appear to have been paid out by the bankrupt for very worthy and commendable purposes, but if they had been paid out for unworthy purposes, or lost at gaming or other immoral purposes, the bankrupt could not be committed for not restoring the amounts to his trustee."[131] It should be said, however, that in at least one case a much more severe rule was applied, and the court held that, in determining what sum of money the bankrupt should be ordered to pay over to his trustee, he might be allowed credit for so much as he had spent in the reasonable cost of his living, if he had conducted himself economically and properly, but not for sums spent in a debauch, nor in journeying to a remote place in search of employment.[132] But whatever may be the excuse or explanation set up, it must be made out by a straightforward and convincing story, and will be disregarded if too improbable for belief or discredited by other and better testimony.[133] In one case, where the bankrupt had an interest in growing crops, but omitted to list them in his schedule under the honest belief that they would not vest in the trustee, and he completed their cultivation and harvesting after his adjudication, and was then ordered to surrender the crops, or the proceeds of their sale, to the trustee, it was held that he should be allowed a reasonable compensation for his work and care bestowed on them from the date of the adjudication.[134]

§ 231. Same; Commitment for Contempt.—Where a bankrupt fails or refuses to comply with a lawful order of the court of bankruptcy, requiring him to surrender a designated sum of money or certain specified property to his trustee, he is in contempt of the court, and his obedience to the order may be enforced by committing him to prison until [130] One who was nominally a member of the bankrupt firm, but really a mere clerk, should not be ordered to pay to the trustee money which he had turned over to his partner. And so, the trustee is not entitled to proceed directly against the bankrupt to require the payment of money which he had delivered to his sister, although his claim that it was delivered in payment of a debt was preposterous. In re Vyse (D. C.) 220 Fed. 727, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 378.

[131] Boyd v. Glucklich, 116 Fed. 131, 53 C. C. A. 451, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 393.

[132] In re Tudor, 100 Fed. 796, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78.

[133] In re Kempner, 6 N. B. R. 521, Fed. Cas. No. 7,689; In re Friedman, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 332.

[134] In re Barrow, 98 Fed. 582, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414.

he will purge his contempt by obedience to the order.[135] Such an order is not a judgment for the payment of a debt, and therefore the commitment of the bankrupt for failure of compliance with it is not "imprisonment for debt" within the meaning of the state and federal laws abolishing that method of collecting debts.[136]

It should be observed that the sole purpose of a contempt proceeding of the kind now under consideration is to reach and compel the surrender of money or property in the bankrupt's actual possession or control, and not to punish him for concealing his assets.[137] In view of the fact that the twenty-ninth section of the Bankruptcy Act makes it a criminal offense for a bankrupt to conceal property from his trustee, it is at least doubtful whether an attachment for contempt can be used as a means of punishing him for such a concealment.[138] Even when the bankrupt has been indicted for this crime, and has pleaded guilty and served the sentence imposed upon him, the question of his obedience to a "turnover" order requiring him to surrender the same assets alleged to have been concealed remains unsettled. If such an order was lawfully made and he is able to comply with it and refuses to do so, he is in contempt, and the contempt is not purged by the serving of the sentence.[139] Again, a contempt proceeding to enforce obedience to a "turnover" order is a different thing from a proceeding to punish the bankrupt for having squandered his assets or put them out of his reach. When a bankrupt, after having been ordered to pay over to his trustee assets which he has withheld, deals with them in such a manner as to make it impossible for him to comply with the order, he [135] In re Cole, 163 Fed. 180, 90 C. C. A. 50, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 255, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; In re Krichevsky (D. C.) 219 Fed. 347, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 362; In re Stanny (D. C.) 226 Fed. 517, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; Power v. Fuhrman, 220 Fed. 787, 136 C. C. A. 393, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 418; Clay v. Waters, 178 Fed. 385, 101 C. C. A. 645, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; In re Gerstel, 123 Fed. 166, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Rosser, 96 Fed. 308, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746; In re Salkey, 6 Biss. 269, 11 N. B. R. 423, Fed. Cas. No. 12,253; In re Speyer, 6 N. B. R. 255, Fed. Cas. No. 13,239. See Mallory Mfg. Co. v. Fox, 20 Fed. 409; In re Fogelman, 204 Fed. 351, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; In re Star Spring Bed Co., 203 Fed. 640, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 208.

[136] Samel v. Dodd, 142 Fed. 68, 73 C. C. A. 254, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 163; Schweer v. Brown, 130 Fed. 328, 64 C. C. A. 574, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 178; Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber, 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299; In re Schlesinger (C. C. A.) 102 Fed. 117, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; In re Anderson, 103 Fed. 854, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640.

[137] In re Kane, 125 Fed. 984, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 478. A motion to commit the treasurer of a bankrupt corporation for contempt for failure to obey an order of the referee requiring him to turn over money to the trustee will not be considered where he is under bail to appear and answer to indictments in the state court for the embezzlement of such money from the corporation, until after the indictments are disposed of. In re Hooks Smelting Co., 146 Fed. 336, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141.

[138] In re Elias (D. C.) 240 Fed. 448, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

[139] In re Sobol, 242 Fed. 487, 155 C. C. A. 263, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 252.

cannot be committed for failure to obey the order, since his present inability to do so is a complete defense; but his conduct, being in fraud of his creditors and in defiance of the authority and jurisdiction of the court, constitutes a criminal contempt, for which he may be punished.[140]

Where, however, the bankrupt is brought before the court for the explicit purpose of being dealt with for his disobedience to a "turn-over" order, the proceedings need not be formal, but may be based on a petition of the trustee setting forth the facts so as to inform the bankrupt of the charge he is to meet.[141] The bankrupt should be cited to show cause before being committed for contempt,[142] but it is not a proceeding in which he is entitled to claim a trial by jury.[143] It is an entirely separate and distinct proceeding from that which resulted in the order requiring him to yield up the property. That order will be conclusive of the fact that, at the time it was made, the bankrupt had in his possession or control money or property which he was then able to surrender to his trustee, and this question will not be reviewed or re-examined.[144] But it is not conclusive that he still is able to make the payment or surrender, because he may in the meantime have paid away the money or lost the property; and on this question the bankrupt is entitled to a hearing and cannot be committed until he has had an opportunity to present this defense.[145] For whatever may have been the state of the case when the order for surrender was made, the court will not send the bankrupt to jail unless it is shown that he still continues in a position of present and continuous ability to make the surrender,[146] and of this fact the court must be satisfied by clear and convincing proof, [140] In re Mardenfeld (D. C.) 256 Fed. 920, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613; In re Stern (D. C.) 215 Fed. 979.

[141] In re Cole, 163 Fed. 180, 90 C. C. A. 50, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 255, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

[142] In re Rosen's Estate (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 704, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 5.

[143] Ripon Knitting Works v. Schreiber (D. C.) 101 Fed. 810, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

[144] In re Frankel (D. C.) 184 Fed. 539, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 920; In re Marks (D. C.) 176 Fed. 1018, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re Richards (D. C.) 183 Fed. 501, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176. But compare In re Elias (D. C.) 240 Fed. 448, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 441.

[145] In re Hausman, 121 Fed. 984, 58 C. C. A. 260, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64; In re Davison, 143 Fed. 673, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Cole, 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; Frederick v. Silverman, 250 Fed. 75, 162 C. C. A. 247, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24; In re Kramer (D. C.) 210 Fed. 977, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; In re Myerson (D. C.) 253 Fed. 510, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

[146] In re Dickens, 175 Fed. 808, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660; In re Davison, 143 Fed. 673, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Marks, 176 Fed. 1018, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re Richards, 183 Fed. 501, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Mize, 172 Fed. 945, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577; In re Reynolds, 190 Fed. 967, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; In re Ruos, 164 Fed. 749, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; In re Holden, 203 Fed. 229, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 387; In re Heyman (D. C.) 225 Fed. 1000, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 108; Freed v. Central Trust Co., 215 Fed. 873, 132 C. C. A. 7, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64; In re McNaught (D. C.) 225 Fed. 511, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

or, as sometimes stated, beyond a reasonable doubt.[147] The cases differ as to whether proof of the recent possession of money or property by the bankrupt is enough to warrant committing him for contempt unless he satisfactorily explains its disappearance; but generally it may be stated that if the contempt proceeding follows close on the heels of the order for surrender, it may be presumed that the ability to pay or surrender continues, and then the bankrupt must overcome this presumption by proof.[148]

In such cases, the bankrupt's contempt is a continuing contempt, and therefore the court is not confined to committing him for a definite and limited time, as it would be in the case of a specific act, complete in itself, constituting a contempt. And if he is released on bail, he may be recommitted by order of the court, on the trustee's showing that his contumacy still continues, and if he leaves the district, he may be pursued and arrested on warrant and again recommitted until the further order of the court or until he complies.[149] But as the object is not punishment, but only to enforce obedience, the imprisonment should not be continued indefinitely, and the bankrupt should be discharged after a reasonable time when it appears that he is really unable to comply with the order.[150]

§ 232. Detention and Extradition of Bankrupts.—The present bankruptcy statute authorizes the arrest and detention of a bankrupt, after the filing of the petition and not more than one month after the qualification of a trustee, on satisfactory proof by the affidavits of at least two persons that the bankrupt "is about to leave the district in which he resides or has his principal place of business to avoid examination, and that his departure will defeat the proceedings in bankruptcy."[151] A com-

[147] Stuart v. Reynolds, 204 Fed. 709, 123 C. C. A. 13, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 412; In re Dickens, 175 Fed. 808, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 660; McNeil v. McCormack (C. C. A.) 182 Fed. 808; In re Davison, 143 Fed. 673, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Mize, 172 Fed. 945, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 577.

[148] See In re Banzai Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 183 Fed. 298, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 497; First Nat. Bank v. Cole, 144 Fed. 392, 75 C. C. A. 330, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Stavrahn, 174 Fed. 330, 98 C. C. A. 202, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 168; In re Marks, 176 Fed. 1018, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re Haring, 193 Fed. 168, 174, 175, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; In re Reynolds, 190 Fed. 967, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200.

[149] United States v. Sowles, 16 Fed. 536.

[150] In re Karp, 196 Fed. 998, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; In re Taylor, 114 Fed. 607, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 410; In re Cummings, 188 Fed. 767, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 477.

[151] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 9b. Upon this part of the statute it may be remarked, in the first place, that it applies alike to voluntary and involuntary cases, whereas the corresponding provisions of the act of 1867 were restricted to involuntary proceedings. In re Hale, 18 N. B. R. 335, Fed. Cas. No. 5,911. In the next place, it will be noticed that the warrant here authorized may be issued by "the judge." This word does not include the referee, and consequently that parison of these provisions with the only corresponding section of the act of 1867 (Rev. St. § 5024) will show radical differences. Under the earlier law, the warrant for the bankrupt's arrest might issue if there was "probable cause for believing that he is about to leave the district, or to remove or conceal his goods, or to make any fraudulent conveyance or disposition thereof;" but now, only when his object in leaving the district is to "avoid examination," and not then unless his departure will "defeat the proceedings in bankruptcy." The act of 1867 authorized the arrest of the debtor to secure his attendance at the hearing and adjudication;[152] that of 1898 is concerned only with securing the examination of the bankrupt. Still it must be noted that there are some decisions to the effect that the power of the court of bankruptcy to order the detention of a bankrupt, who is about to abscond from the jurisdiction with his assets, is not limited to the particular circumstances and specific purposes mentioned in this clause of the act, and that, under the authority to "make such orders and issue such process, in addition to those specifically provided for, as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of the act," the court has authority to issue an order in the nature of a writ of ne exeat, when the arrest of the bankrupt is shown to be necessary for the enforcement of the statute as applied to his case.[153] But the court has no authority to issue a warrant for the arrest of a bankrupt who is not within the district.[154]

The former law provided that the marshal, executing this warrant, should "arrest and safely keep" the alleged bankrupt. The present statute, with remarkable tenderness for the debtor, provides that the marshal shall "keep such bankrupt in custody, but not imprison him." The meaning of this term may not be easy to determine. It has been held that, in a sentence that the defendant "be in custody until," etc., the word "custody" imports actual imprisonment, and the duty of a sheriff under such a sentence is not performed by allowing the defendant to go at large under his general watch and control, but so doing renders him liable for an escape.[155] But in the statute under consideration the words officer has no jurisdiction to authorize the arrest of the bankrupt, although, it would appear, he may hear the evidence when the bankrupt is in custody and decide whether to detain him or not. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 16. As to the requisites of the petition and preliminary proof to authorize the issuance of the warrant, see In re Lipke, 98 Fed. 970, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re McKibben, 12 N. B. R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 8,859.

[152] Usher v. Pease, 116 Mass. 440, 17 Am. Rep. 169, 12 N. B. R. 305. See Marble v. Fulton, 1 Hask. 462, Fed. Cas. No. 9,059.

[153] In re Lipke, 98 Fed. 970, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569; In re Berkowitz, 173 Fed. 1012, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 231.

[154] In re Hassenbusch, 108 Fed. 35, 47 C. C. A. 177, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532.

[155] Smith v. Commonwealth, 59 Pa. St. 320.

"custody" and "imprison" are carefully placed in opposition to each other, whence it would appear that the statute would be satisfied if the marshal or his deputy remained constantly in the physical presence of the bankrupt, or so situated with reference to him as to be able to prevent his escape, and that the bankrupt might be kept in custody in his own house, or even allowed to go about his business if the officer was constantly with him.

If the bankrupt has already made his escape from the district, he may be brought back on a process similar to extradition. The statute provides that "whenever a warrant for the apprehension of a bankrupt shall have been issued, and he shall have been found within the jurisdiction of a court other than the one issuing the warrant, he may be extradited in the same manner in which persons under indictment are now extradited from one district within which a district court has jurisdiction to another." [156] Another section of the act provides that the courts of bankruptcy shall have jurisdiction to "extradite bankrupts from their respective districts to other districts." [157] As to the manner of effecting such extradition, it has been enacted that "only one writ or warrant is necessary to remove a prisoner from one district to another. One copy thereof may be delivered to the sheriff or jailer from whose custody the prisoner is taken, and another to the sheriff or jailer to whose custody he is committed, and the original writ, with the marshal's return thereon, shall be returned to the clerk of the district to which he is removed." [158]

§ 233. Privilege from Arrest on Civil Process.—The statute provides that the bankrupt shall not be liable to arrest on civil process, except where such process issues from a court of bankruptcy for contempt or disobedience of its lawful orders, or unless the process issues from a state court having jurisdiction, and is served within the state, and is founded upon a debt or claim "from which his discharge in bankruptcy would not be a release, and in such case he shall be exempt from such arrest when in attendance upon a court of bankruptcy or engaged in the performance of a duty imposed by this act." [159] The general orders in bankruptcy provide that "if the petitioner, during the pendency of the proceedings in bankruptcy, be arrested or imprisoned on process in any civil action, the district court, upon his application, may issue a writ of habeas corpus to bring him before the court to ascertain whether such process has been issued for the collection of any claim provable in bank-

[156] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 10.
[157] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2, cl. 14.
[158] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 1029.
[159] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 9.

ruptcy, and if so provable he shall be discharged; if not, he shall be remanded to the custody in which he may lawfully be." [160] The discrepancy between these two enactments will be at once apparent. The statute exempts the bankrupt from arrest in cases where the debt or claim on which the process is founded is of such a nature that it will be released by the discharge in bankruptcy. The general order exempts him from arrest in cases where the debt or claim is provable in bankruptcy. Now, several kinds of debts which are provable are not affected by a discharge. Such are judgments in actions for frauds, taxes, debts created by the bankrupt's fraud or breach of duties as a trustee or a public officer. In this conflict, the inferior federal courts have not hesitated to hold that the order must give way to the statute, the latter being of superior authority.[161] The test, therefore, is not the provable character of the debt, but the effect upon it of a discharge in bankruptcy. The bankrupt, if the laws of the state so provide, may be arrested in an action on a claim from which his discharge would not release him, and the bankruptcy court will not interfere to prevent the enforcement, by arrest and imprisonment, of a judgment founded on such a claim, unless such action is necessary to enable the bankruptcy court to exer-

[160] General Order No. 30. This order and the ninth section of the act are in pari materia and should be construed as a whole. United States v. Peters, 166 Fed. 613, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177. But it is a noteworthy circumstance that the order, in one respect at least, does not go nearly so far, in extending the benefits intended, as the act itself. The order, by its express terms, is applicable only to cases of voluntary bankruptcy. It provides for the release of the debtor if he is committed after the filing of "his" petition, or where "the petitioner" —that is, a voluntary petitioning bankrupt—is arrested or imprisoned during the pendency of the proceedings. If a petition in bankruptcy is filed against a debtor by his creditors, it cannot with any propriety be spoken of as "his" petition, nor can he be called "the petitioner." The order, therefore, will not apply in compulsory cases. But the district courts will be justified in acting independently of it in such cases, for the statute itself provides that "a bankrupt" shall be exempt from arrest on civil process, etc., and that the term "bankrupt" shall include "a person against whom an involuntary petition has been filed, or who has filed a voluntary petition, or who has been adjudged a bankrupt."

[161] In re Baker, 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101, General Order No. 30 was copied, with a few slight verbal changes, from the corresponding general order (No. 27) made under the act of 1867. And of that order it was said: "It would seem that the general order carries the exemption of the bankrupt from arrest further than is warranted by the statute; for the latter, by plain implication, allows an arrest for a debt or claim from which the bankrupt would not be released by his discharge. The rule was perhaps inadvertently framed, and was intended merely to prescribe the mode in which the immunity given by the act might be secured and enforced, but not to extend that immunity to cases where the act clearly shows that none was to be allowed; or perhaps the Supreme Court referred in this rule to cases of preliminary arrest at the commencement of a suit. As the twenty-first section [the eleventh section of the present act] provides for a stay of all suits for debts provable under the act [but now only where the suit is founded cise its proper authority and jurisdiction in the case.[162] On this principle it is held that, if the laws of the state authorize the arrest and detention of a defaulting taxpayer, a bankrupt in that plight will not be released on habeas corpus, since taxes due to a state or municipality are not affected by a discharge in bankruptcy.[163] The same is true of claims sounding in tort, when the torts are of the nature excepted by the statute from the effects of a discharge.[164] And if the debtor is held under arrest in a civil action in a state court founded on a debt contracted by his defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, that is a claim from which his discharge in bankruptcy would not release him, and therefore he is not entitled to be released on habeas corpus from the court of bankruptcy.[165] Also, it has been decided that a judgment in a bastardy proceeding, brought against the putative father in the name of the state and by the public prosecutor, according to the upon a claim from which a discharge would be a release], the general order requires the discharge of the bankrupt when arrested in any such suit; otherwise the proceedings might be stayed, but the bankrupt would remain in prison. But where the arrest is one on final process issued after judgment, the discharge of the bankrupt would depend on whether the arrest was for a debt from which his discharge in bankruptcy would release him." In re Ghirardelli, 1 Sawy. 343, 4 N. B. R. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 5,376. And see In re Whitehouse, 1 Low. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 17,564; In re Seymour, 1 Ben. 348, 1 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 12,684; In re Glaser, 2 Ben. 180, 1 N. B. R. 336, Fed. Cas. No. 5,474; In re Alsberg, 16 N. B. R. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 261. Some justification for the extreme breadth of the order may be found in the words of the statute, that, even in the case of a debt from which the bankrupt would not be released by his discharge, "he shall be exempt from arrest when in attendance upon a court of bankruptcy or engaged in the performance of a duty imposed by this act." Section 9. The Supreme Court, in framing the order in question, may well have taken the view that a bankrupt, from the time of filing his petition until the discharge is granted, is always "in attendance upon a court of bankruptcy," either actually, or constructively by reason of the necessity of being able to command his presence at any and all times for purposes connected with the settlement and administration of the estate, which might be seriously interfered with if he were liable to be restrained of his liberty on civil process from a state court. Thus, in one of the cases, it was said: "A bankrupt is within the jurisdiction of the court by the proceedings in bankruptcy, and being bound at all times to abide its orders and decrees in the matter of his petition, he is entitled to its protection, by being privileged from arrest on civil process pending the proceedings on his application for relief under the bankruptcy law." United States v. Dobbins, Fed. Cas. No. 14,971. And see In re Lewensohn, 99 Fed. 73, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[162] In re Pettis, 2 N. B. R. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 11,046; In re Baker, 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

[163] Aldrich v. Aldrich, 8 Metc. (Mass.) 102.

[164] In re Devoe, 1 Low. 251, 2 N. B. R. 27, Fed. Cas. No. 3,843; In re Simpson, 2 N. B. R. 47, Fed. Cas. No. 12,879; In re Whitehouse, 1 Low. 429, 4 N. B. R. 63, Fed. Cas. No. 17,564.

[165] In re Seymour, 1 Ben. 348, 1 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 12,684; Kavanaugh v. McIntyre, 128 App. Div. 722, 112 N. Y. Supp. 987. But a bankrupt arrested and held on a capias in an action to recover from him the value of property which he is alleged to have embezzled and fraudulently converted to his own use, is entitled to release on habeas corpus, where no facts are pleaded which show such embezzlement to have been committed state law, adjudging him to pay a certain sum monthly to the mother of the child for the period of ten years, and to secure such payment by a bond with sureties, is not such a debt as will be released by his discharge in bankruptcy, and hence, if he is arrested, during the bankruptcy proceedings, for failure to furnish the bond required, and committed, the court of bankruptcy will not set him at liberty on habeas corpus.[166] On the other hand, if alimony, fixed by a decree of a state court, is a provable debt in bankruptcy (which is an unsettled question), it is of a nature to be released by the discharge, and the state court cannot lawfully cause the bankrupt to be arrested and imprisoned for a contempt of its authority in omitting to pay installments of the alimony due.[167] The same is true of his arrest on a capias under a judgment recovered against him in a suit for breach of promise of marriage.[168] And again, a bankrupt cannot be held in the custody of a sheriff of the county on account of a judgment obtained against him for costs in an action in a state court,[169] unless in cases where the judgment for costs was not rendered until after the adjudication in bankruptcy.[170]

Under the act of 1867, in a case where the bankrupt, while on his way to be examined as a witness in the bankruptcy proceedings under an order of the register, was arrested on mesne process issuing from a state court, it was held that the arrest was a violation of his privilege as a party and witness, and that he was entitled to be released therefrom on application to the court of bankruptcy, without reference to the question whether the debt on which the arrest was based was one which would be affected by his discharge in bankruptcy; although, if the debt were fraudulent or fiduciary, he would be liable to be again arrested as soon as the privilege ceased.[171] The same rule is equally applicable under the present statute,[172] and moreover it is expressly provided by the ninth section of the act that, even in those cases where an arrest of the bankrupt would be lawful, having regard to the nature of the debt, he shall be exempt from such arrest "when in attendance while he was acting in a fiduciary capacity. Barrett v. Prince, 143 Fed. 302, 74 C. C. A. 440, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 64.

166 In re Baker, 96 Fed. 954, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 101.

167 In re Houston, 94 Fed. 119, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107. See In re Van Orden, 96 Fed. 86, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 471; In re Lachemeyer, 18 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966; In re Foye, 2 Low. 399, Fed. Cas. No. 5,021.

168 In re Fife, 109 Fed. 880, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 258.

169 In re Borst, 2 N. B. R. 171, Fed. Cas. No. 1,665.

170 In re Marcus, 105 Fed. 907, 45 C. C. A. 115, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 365.

171 In re Kimball, 2 Ben. 38, 1 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 7,767; Ex parte Mifflin, 1 Pa. Law Jour. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 9,537.

172 United States v. Flynn, 179 Fed. 316, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 294.

upon a court of bankruptcy or engaged in the performance of a duty imposed by this act." This clause is liberally construed, and it is held that the bankrupt's exemption is not restricted to particular occasions when his physical attendance in court is required or when he is actually engaged in performing some required duty.[173]

The exemption from arrest begins at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy,[174] and extends until the final decision on the bankrupt's application for discharge.[175] After that, his discharge, if granted, will be a sufficient protection against arrest for any debt which the discharge affects, and whether it is granted or withheld, his duties under the bankruptcy act will have been performed, so that it will no longer be necessary for the court of bankruptcy to be able to command his instant attendance. The reader will not fail to note that this privilege against arrest extends only to the apprehension of the bankrupt on "civil process." In any criminal proceeding against him, he remains of course liable to arrest and imprisonment. Where a state statute authorizes a judgment creditor, upon alleging that his debtor has fraudulently disposed of his property, to institute proceedings which begin with the arrest and imprisonment of the debtor, but such arrest is not intended as a punishment of the debtor, but as a means of obtaining a full disclosure as to his property, the proceeding is not criminal but civil, and its primary object is the collection of the creditor's judgment. Such proceedings are therefore in direct conflict with the bankruptcy law, as respects any property which has passed to a trustee in bankruptcy, and a bankrupt cannot be arrested in proceedings founded on such statute.[176] On the other hand, the bankruptcy law does not prevent a state court from committing the bankrupt to prison for a contempt, where such commitment is intended as a punishment and not as a means of collecting a debt.[177]

[173] In re Dresser, 124 Fed. 915, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

[174] State v. Rollins, 13 Mo. 179; In re Winthrop, 5 Law Rep. 24, Fed. Cas. No. 17,900. See Robb v. Powers, 7 Ala. 658; Gibson v. Holmes, 78 Vt. 110, 62 Atl. 11, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 451; Turgeon v. Bean, 109 Me. 189, 83 Atl. 557.

[175] United States v. Peters, 166 Fed. 613, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177; Herschman v. Bolster, 220 Mass. 137, 107 N. E. 543. But the court of bankruptcy, having granted a discharge, may protect the bankrupt from arrest on a judgment rendered by another court after the discharge, but only to allow him to make application to that court for relief. In re Lockwood (D. C.) 240 Fed. 161, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 482.

[176] Goodwin v. Sharkey, 5 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 64.

[177] In re Fritz, 152 Fed. 562, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244; In re Collins, 39 Misc. Rep. 753, 80 N. Y. Supp. 1119; In re Meggett, 105 Wis. 291, 81 N. W. 419. A proceeding for the punishment of the bankrupt for contempt; of a state court will not be stayed because he might be imprisoned, for his attendance before the bankrupty court could be procured by habeas corpus. In re Francisco (D. C.) 245 Fed. 216, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87.

In addition to these provisions of the statute, General Order No. 12 provides that the bankrupt "may receive from the referee a protection against arrest, to continue until the final adjudication on his application for a discharge, unless suspended or vacated by order of the court." And it is held that the court may impose terms on granting such protection, and hence, in a proper case, may require the bankrupt to furnish a bond with sureties, conditioned that during its continuance he will obey all orders of the court and not meanwhile depart from its jurisdiction.[178]

§ 234. Release from imprisonment.—A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to enforce the protection against arrest on civil process accorded to bankrupts by the statute, and for this purpose may issue the writ of habeas corpus, requiring the production of the bankrupt before it in order that it may inquire and determine whether or not the case is one within the statute, and in the former alternative, discharge the bankrupt. It is so provided by the general orders in bankruptcy,[179] and has been so ruled by the courts.[180] But the authority thus given to the district courts can be exercised only by that court in which the particular bankruptcy proceedings are pending.[181] Where a bankrupt is under arrest under process from a state court, he should first apply to [178] In re Lewensohn, 99 Fed. 73, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[179] General Order No. 30. "Before granting the order for discharge, the court shall cause notice to be served upon the creditor or his attorney, so as to give him an opportunity of appearing and being heard before the granting of the order." Idem. In addition to the provisions of this order it is enacted that "the Supreme Court and the circuit and district courts shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus. The several justices and judges of the said courts, within their respective jurisdictions, shall have power to grant writs of habeas corpus for the purpose of an inquiry into the cause of restraint of liberty." Rev. St. U. S. §§ 751, 752. The following section (753) declares that the writ of habeas corpus "shall in no case extend to a prisoner in jail." But this does not oust the federal courts of jurisdiction to release on habeas corpus, for the purpose of bringing him before a commissioner (or a referee in bankruptcy) for examination, a debtor who is in jail under executions in civil actions, for such debtor is not confined at the suit of the state, but of his creditors. In re Mineau, 45 Fed. 188. That the writ may issue to inquire into the cause of commitment under a civil process, as well as in a case of a criminal process, see Ex parte Randolph, 2 Brock. 447, Fed. Cas. No. 11,558. The power to issue the writ may be exercised by the judge of the district court at chambers and in vacation (see Bennett v. Bennett, Deady, 299, Fed. Cas. No. 1,318; Ex parte Benedict, Fed. Cas. No. 1,292; Ex parte Barnes, 1 Sprague, 133, Fed. Cas. No. 1,010), especially in view of the fact that the bankruptcy act invests the district courts with such powers "as will enable them to exercise original jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings, in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms." Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 2. But it does not appear to have been intended that this writ should be granted by a referee in bankruptcy.

[180] In re Glaser, 2 Ben. 180, 1 N. B. R. 336, Fed. Cas. No. 5,474; United States v. Dobbins; 1 Pa. Law Jour. 9, Fed. Cas. No. 14,971.

[181] In re Seymour, 1 Ben. 348, 1 N. B. R. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 12,684.

that court before coming into the court of bankruptcy to obtain his release. For this practice is less likely to produce conflicts of jurisdiction, and if he is entitled to be released under the bankruptcy act, though on no other ground, he may urge that privilege in the state court as well as in any other, for all courts, both state and federal, are bound to obey the act of congress.[182] But if the state court being thus applied to, decides against the petitioner's application for release from custody, the bankruptcy court is not in any manner bound by its determination. If, in the judgment of the latter court, the arrest and detention of the bankrupt are in violation of his statutory rights, it will not hesitate to release him from the arrest, notwithstanding that the state court has already refused to do so. The jurisdiction of the federal court is exclusive and its authority paramount, and it will protect the bankrupt in the manner contemplated by the law.[183] Further, it is immaterial whether the process on which the arrest is effected issues from a state court or from a circuit court of the United States.[184]

But the writ of habeas corpus may not always be necessary to obtain the release of a bankrupt held under civil process. Where a simple order to show cause why he should not be released from custody can be made to answer the same purpose, it will be employed instead of the writ. It will be an order in bankruptcy, and the court may compel obedience to it by the process of attachment for contempt.[185] Moreover, the court of bankruptcy has power to protect the bankrupt from imprisonment in a case where the law exempts him from arrest, not only by releasing him from actual custody, by means of the writ of habeas corpus, but also by orders staying further proceedings in the state court, or staying the issue of any capias or attachment against the bankrupt, or by enjoining the creditor from suing out such a writ, or forbidding him to execute a writ already out.[186] If the bankrupt is arrested in a foreign country, under process from its courts, it would seem that he could not obtain his release under habeas corpus from the court of bankruptcy, because the bankruptcy law has no exterritorial effect and because process from our courts does not run [182] In re O'Mara, 4 Biss. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 10,509. And see United States v. McAleese (C. C. A.) 93 Fed. 656, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 650.

[183] Knott v. Putnam, 107 Fed. 907, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; In re Wiggers, 2 Biss. 71, Fed. Cas. No. 17,623.

[184] In re Wenham, 153 Fed. 910, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

[185] In re Glaser, 2 Ben. 180, 1 N. B. R. 336, Fed. Cas. No. 5,474; In re Jacoby, 1 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 7,165.

[186] Knott v. Putnam, 107 Fed. 907, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80; In re Pettis, 2 N. B. R. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 11,046; In re Jacoby, 1 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 7,165; In re Migel, 2 N. B. R. 481, Fed. Cas. No. 9,538; In re Goldstein, 52 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 426, Fed. Cas. No. 5,523.

into a foreign jurisdiction. But it has been suggested that the bankruptcy court may have power, under some circumstances, to enjoin a citizen within its jurisdiction from holding a bankrupt under arrest in a foreign country.[187]

On an application for the release of a bankrupt who is held under arrest upon process from a state court, if the debt, obligation, or liability which is sought to be thus enforced is one which is dischargeable in bankruptcy, he will generally be entitled to deliverance on habeas corpus.[188] But it is otherwise if the debt or obligation would not be so released. And if a judgment has been rendered in the state court and the record shows that the debt was one contracted by the fraud of the bankrupt, or in a fiduciary capacity, or otherwise was of such a nature as not to be affected by his discharge in bankruptcy, the federal court will accept the record as importing absolute verity and will not inquire further into the question, and will refuse the application.[189] But if the case has not proceeded to judgment, and the capias or order of arrest was issued merely upon the preliminary showing of the plaintiff,—that is, upon the declaration or complaint, or upon an affidavit stating such facts as to bring the defendant within the state statute,—it is open to dispute how far the bankruptcy court should proceed to inquire into the facts. Some of the decisions hold that there is only a question of law before the federal court, that is, the question whether the debt, assuming it to be of the nature shown by these papers, is dischargeable in bankruptcy, and that the court should not enter upon any inquiry as to the truth of the facts alleged in the complaint or affidavit.[190] On the other hand, certain of the cases maintain the principle [187] Hazleton v. Valentine, 1 Low. 270, 2 N. B. R. 31, Fed. Cas. No. 6,287.

[188] A bankrupt in custody under a body execution upon a judgment dischargeable in bankruptcy will be released on habeas corpus, though arrested before the petition was filed. Ex parte Margiasso (D. C.) 242 Fed. 990, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524. A bankrupt imprisoned on process issued in an action for breach of promise of marriage (unaccompanied by seduction), before the filing of his petition, is entitled to discharge. In re Komar (D. C.) 234 Fed. 378, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 683. So, where a bankrupt, having recklessly driven an automobile, was arrested under order of the state court made prior to the filing of his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and judgment was recovered against him, he may be released by the bankruptcy court having jurisdiction pending his application for discharge, such a judgment being dischargeable in bankruptcy. In re Madigan (D. C.) 254 Fed. 221, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 770.

[189] In re Robinson, 6 Blatchf. 253, 2 N. B. R. 341, Fed. Cas. No. 11,939; In re Patterson, 2 Ben. 155, 1 N. B. R. 307, Fed. Cas. No. 10,817.

[190] In re Kimball, 2 Ben. 554, 2 N. B. R. 204, Fed. Cas. No. 7,768, affirmed 6 Blatchf. 292, 2 N. B. R. 354, Fed. Cas. No. 7,769; In re Valk, 3 Ben. 431, 3 N. B. R. 278, Fed. Cas. No. 16,814; In re Devoe, 1 Low. 251, 2 N. B. R. 27, Fed. Cas. No. 3,843. In the case last cited it was ruled that evidence cannot be received to contradict the declaration in the action in which the order of arrest was granted and to show that no such cause of action really exists as is there-that the bankruptcy court is not bound by the case made by the pleadings or affidavits in the proceedings in the state court, nor obliged to accept the plaintiff's allegations as conclusive on the question of fact, but may make original inquiry into the question whether or not the debt is one liable to be released by the discharge of the bankrupt, and to this end may consider all legal evidence brought before it.[191] Whatever may be the proper solution of this question, it should be remarked that the writ of habeas corpus, though it is a writ of right, does not issue as a matter of course, and it may be refused if it appears, on the showing made by the petition, that the applicant for the writ, if brought into court by its means, would have to be remanded.[192]

§ 235. Arrest Prior to Bankruptcy Proceedings.—The protection from arrest granted to a bankrupt during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings does not relieve him from an arrest existing at the time of the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings. That is to say, a bankrupt who was arrested under process from a state court, civil or criminal, before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and is held in custody under such arrest, cannot obtain his release from such imprisonment by application to the federal court, on petition for the writ of habeas corpus; and in this case it makes no difference whether the debt or claim for which he was arrested is of such a character as to be provable in bankruptcy or released by the discharge, for irrespective of any such question, the pending arrest will not be superseded by the bankruptcy proceedings.[193] If, as a matter of fact, the claim sought to be enforced by the arrest is one which is affected by the discharge in bankruptcy, then the defendant will be entitled to regain his liberty, but only after the discharge is granted, and only on application to the proper state court.[194] But it may be necessary during the proceedings in in set forth, for the bankruptcy court cannot undertake to decide whether the plaintiff's claim is well or ill founded; that must be left to the determination of the court where the suit is pending.

191 In re Alsberg, 16 N. B. R. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 261; In re Glaser, 2 Ben. 180, 1 N. B. R. 336, Fed. Cas. No. 5,474; In re Williams, 6 Biss. 233, 11 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 17,700; In re Jacoby, 1 N. B. R. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 7,165.

192 See In re King, 51 Fed. 434; In re Haskell, 52 Fed. 795.

193 In re Claiborne, 109 Fed. 74, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 812; Ex parte Ziegenfuss, 24 N. C. 463; Ex parte Rank, Crabbe, 493, Fed. Cas. No. 11,566; In re Walker, 1 Low. 222, 1 N. B. R. 318, Fed. Cas. No. 17,060; Hazleton v. Valentine, 1 Low. 270, 2 N. B. R. 31, Fed. Cas. No. 6,287; Minon v. Van Nostrand, 1 Low. 458, 4 N. B. R. 108, Fed. Cas. No. 9,642, affirmed Holmes, 251, Fed. Cas. No. 9,641; Brandon Nat. Bank v. Hatch, 57 N. H. 460, 16 N. B. R. 468. Per Contra, see Turgeon v. Emery, 182 Fed. 1016, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; People v. Erlanger, 132 Fed. 883, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 197. And see Ex parte Harrison (D. C.) 272 Fed. 543, 47 Am. Bankr. Rep. 80, holding that the word "arrest" in this part of the statute includes "imprisonment," and a bankrupt is entitled to discharge from imprisonment under a previous arrest on a dischargeable debt.

194 Brandon Nat. Bank v. Hatch, 57 N. H. 460, 16 N. B. R. 468.

bankruptcy to have the bankrupt before the referee or judge, particularly for the purpose of examination. This contingency has been met by the general order, which provides that "if, at the time of preferring his petition, the debtor shall be imprisoned, the court, upon application, may order him to be produced upon habeas corpus, by the jailer or other officer in whose custody he may be, before the referee, for the purpose of testifying in any matter relating to his bankruptcy." [195] Upon this rule it is necessary to remark, in the first place that, taken literally, it applies only to a voluntary bankrupt, but that cases of involuntary bankruptcy are equally within the spirit and reason of the rule. And secondly, the habeas corpus here referred to is not the great writ of that name used as a means of obtaining deliverance from illegal imprisonment, but rather the writ of "habeas corpus ad testificandum" which is used to bring the body of a prisoner into court when he is needed as a witness in a pending cause.

§ 236. After-Acquired Property.—The estate which vests in a trustee in bankruptcy, to be collected and distributed to creditors, is that which belonged to the bankrupt at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Whatever the bankrupt may acquire after that date, whether by inheritance, devise, or gift, or as the fruit of his own industry and skill, even though it may be acquired while the bankruptcy proceedings are still pending and before the discharge, is his own peculiar property. It is not subject to be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings; it is not within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court; it is not liable to the claims of any creditors whose claims were provable (whether actually proved or not) in the bankruptcy proceedings. The only limitation upon this rule is that, if the bankrupt fails to secure his discharge (or, as to any debts not released by his discharge) his after acquisitions may be subjected to the satisfaction of creditors, but by the ordinary processes of law, and not with any relation to the proceedings in bankruptcy.[196] We have spoken of the [195] General Order No. 30. See In re Cheney, 5 Law Rep. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 2,636; In re Gilbert, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 378.

[196] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 6 Sup. Ct. 155, 29 L. Ed. 467; Clay v. Waters (C. C. A.) 161 Fed. 815, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561; In re Harper, 155 Fed. 105, 83 C. C. A. 565, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 741; In re Rennie, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 335; In re Grant, 2 Story, 312, Fed. Cas. No. 5,693; In re Levy, 1 Ben. 496, 1 N. B. R. 136, Fed. Cas. No. 8,296; In re Patterson, 1 Ben. 508, 1 N. B. R. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 10,815; Day v. Superior Court, 61 Cal. 489; Bond v. Baldwin, 9 Ga. 9; Mays v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 64 Pa. St. 74, 3 Am. Rep. 573; Sosnowski v. Rape, 69 Ga. 548; Bank of Missouri v. Franciscus, 10 Mo. 27; Turner v. Gatewood, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 613; McLendon v. Turner, 65 Ga. 577; In re Swift (D. C.) 259 Fed. 612, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 211; In re Green (D. C.) 213 Fed. 542.

"commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy" as the moment from which the bankrupt may begin to acquire property for himself, and this is most probably to be understood, under the peculiar language of the present statute (though the point may not be free from doubt) as the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, so that property which might be acquired by the bankrupt after the presentation of the petition, but before even the adjudication, would not pass to his trustee as assets.[197]

As to all his after-acquired property the bankrupt has the unrestricted right of disposing of it as he wills, and the ordinary remedies for its protection, independently of the bankruptcy proceedings. He may maintain trover for its recovery,[198] or if his creditors seize upon it, while his application for a discharge is pending, a court of equity will interfere, by injunction, to protect his rights, and will restrain proceedings until the question of his discharge has been decided.[199] Furthermore, the bankrupt himself may become a purchaser at the trustee's sale of his own property and assets, and is not disqualified from thus buying back as much of his former belongings as he can pay for out of his exempt property, his earnings, or his subsequent acquisitions.[200] While the possession of property by a bankrupt at the time of [197] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70, provides that the trustee of the estate of a bankrupt "shall be vested by operation of law with the title of the bankrupt, as of the date he was adjudged a bankrupt, * * * to property which, prior to the filing of the petition, he could by any means have transferred or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him." There are two clauses here which stand in apparent antagonism. But the phrase "as of the date he was adjudged a bankrupt" probably has no other office than to make the trustee's title relate back to the date mentioned, since, without this provision, that title could not of course accrue any earlier than the appointment and qualification of the trustee. In other words, it fixes the date of the adjudication as the date when "by operation of law" the title passes, but it does not in any way define or limit the quantum of the estate which the trustee is to take. The other phrase, "prior to the filing of the petition," does not relate to the accrual of the trustee's title, but, in the connection in which it is found, serves to define and still further limit the property which the trustee will take. That property (with certain exceptions) must be property which the bankrupt could have transferred by his voluntary act, or which his creditors could have seized on judicial process against him, and further, it must be property to which he had such a title or claim, at the time of the filing of the petition, that it could at that moment have been so transferred or seized. If this interpretation is correct,—and it seems the only construction which gives sense and intelligibility to the statute,—then no property which the bankrupt may acquire after the filing of the petition, though it be before the adjudication, will pass to the trustee. See In re Judson, 192 Fed. 834, 113 C. C. A. 158, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704; In re Burka, 104 Fed. 326, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 12; Sibley v. Nason, 196 Mass. 125, 81 N. E. 887, 12 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1173, 124 Am. St. Rep. 520, 12 Ann. Cas. 938. A contrary rule prevailed under the act of 1841. See Ex parte Newhall, 2 Story, 360, Fed. Cas. No. 10,159.

[198] Webb v. Fox, 7 Durn. & E. 387.

[199] Mosby v. Steele, 7 Ala. 299. See In re Rogers, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 211.

[200] Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, his discharge, or immediately after, which by industry he might reasonably have acquired, does not warrant the presumption that he did not make a full surrender of his estate, yet, if the value of the property is so great as to make it improbable that it was earned since the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, it devolves upon the bankrupt to show how he became the proprietor of such property, when his discharge is impeached for fraudulent and wilfull concealment of property.[201]

All property is to be regarded as after-acquired property, in this sense and for these purposes, to which the bankrupt's title or right accrues, from any source or in any manner, so as to be available for his own uses, after the bankruptcy.[202] Thus, where an estate was conveyed to a husband and wife to be held in entirety, and the husband went into bankruptcy, and, between the adjudication and his discharge, he obtained a divorce from his wife, it was held that, when the adjudication was made, he had no interest in the real estate which could pass to the trustee, and if he gained an alienable interest by the divorce, it was a new acquisition which could not be claimed by the trustee.[203] So where a wife, being possessed of a separate estate, procured a policy of insurance on her own life, payable on her death to her husband, and paid the premiums out of her own estate for a year, before the end of which time he was adjudicated a bankrupt, and she paid out of her own estate the premiums for the two following years and then died, it was 12 Sup. Ct. 104, 35 L. Ed. 915; Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528, 6 Sup. Ct. 155, 29 L. Ed. 467; Phelps v. McDonald, 2 MacArthur, 375, 16 N. B. R. 217; Gates v. Fraser, 9 Ill. App. 624. A bankrupt who, after his discharge, becomes the bona fide holder of a note payable to himself, which had been returned in his schedule and sold by the assignee, is remitted to his original title, and may transfer it by indorsement so as to vest the right of action in his indorsee. Birch v. Tillotson, 16 Ala. 387.

201 Hargroves v. Cloud, 8 Ala. 173. See Mays v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 64 Pa. St. 74, 3 Am. Rep. 573.

202 Wages of a bankrupt, earned after the adjudication, are not properly a part of the assets to be administered. Progressive Building & Loan Co. v. Hall, 220 Fed. 45, 135 C. C. A. 613, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313. After his adjudication, the bankrupt may pay on a mortgage money earned after the filing of the petition or obtained from relatives or friends. Cohen v. Bacharach, 229 Fed. 385, 143 C. C. A. 505, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 166. But property is not "after acquired" property merely because, after the termination of the bankruptcy proceedings, it acquires a value which it did not possess at their inception. Thus, a bankrupt owned a claim against a third person, who had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. This claim was listed by the bankrupt in his schedule of assets, but all parties at that time regarded it as entirely worthless. The trustee took no action in regard to it. But after the bankrupt had obtained his discharge, circumstances occurred which made the claim valuable, and a dividend upon it was paid by the assignee. It was held that this money was not after acquired property of the bankrupt, but that it belonged to his estate in bankruptcy, which could be reopened for the purpose of administering it. In re Lighthall (D. C.) 221 Fed. 791, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

203 In re Benson, 8 Biss. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 1,328.

held that the husband was entitled to the proceeds of the policy, and not his trustee in bankruptcy.[204] So where a devise or bequest, vesting by the death of the testator after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against the heir, is coupled with a provision for the deduction of any indebtedness then existing from the heir to the testator, this does not prevent the bankrupt from being entitled to the benefit of the bequest in full so far as concerns his general creditors, subject only to the contingency of his not obtaining a discharge.[205] Again, crops planted by a bankrupt after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy do not pass to the trustee as assets for the use of creditors.[206] And a liquor license granted to one after he has been adjudicated a bankrupt belongs to him personally and not to his receiver or trustee in bankruptcy.[207] Where the bankrupt, who was indorser on a promissory note falling due after the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, pays the same, his claim against the maker is after-acquired property accruing to himself and not to the benefit of his creditors, and he may be permitted to prove such claim against the estate of the maker, the latter being also bankrupt.[208] On the other hand, income or profits accruing to the bankrupt after the adjudication, but from property in which he had a fixed and vested interest before the bankruptcy, is not to be regarded as after-acquired property.[209] So the share of a bankrupt in a trust estate is not after-acquired property, though it was decreed to him after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the rights of the parties in the trust estate being adjudicated by such decree as of a date prior to the filing of such petition.[210] And where one held land by an unrecorded deed prior to his bankruptcy, and his grantor thereafter sold the land to another, his right of action against the grantor for the proceeds of such sale is not property acquired after the bankruptcy, so as to entitle him to sue therefor in his own name.[211]

§ 237. Right to Surplus of Estate.—Where all the claims duly proved against the bankrupt's estate have been paid in full, together [204] In re Murrin, 2 Dill. 120, 8 N. B. R. 6, Fed. Cas. No. 9,968.

[205] In re Woods, 133 Fed. 82, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 240.

[206] Conley v. Nelin (Tex. Civ. App.) 128 S. W. 424; In re Barnett, 3 Pittsb. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 1,024; Jackson v. Jetter (Iowa) 142 N. W. 431.

[207] In re Whitlock's License, 39 Pa. Super. Ct. 34.

[208] In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 136.

[209] In re Baudouine, 96 Fed. 536, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 55; In re Wright, 177 Fed. 578, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 437.

[210] McNaboe v. Marks, 51 Misc. Rep. 207, 99 N. Y. Supp. 960. But where the conditions upon which the bankrupt was to become entitled to a trust fund were not performed until after his adjudication, it was held that his trustee had no title thereto for the use of the creditors. Hull v. Palmer, 155 App. Div. 636, 140 N. Y. Supp. 811.

[211] Simpson v. Miller, 7 Cal. App. 248, 94 Pac. 252.

with the costs and expenses of the proceedings and the fees and commissions of the officers, if there remains any surplus in money, or any property not disposed of by the trustee, it belongs to the bankrupt, and upon the closing of the estate and the discharge of the trustee, such surplus will be ordered turned over to the bankrupt.[212] Or if the bankrupt has died in the mean time, such surplus should be paid or delivered to his executor or administrator.[213] On the same principle, when a composition is accepted by the creditors and confirmed by the court, the estate thereupon revests in the bankrupt.[214] And after the bankrupt has been discharged, he may sue for and recover property which was not administered in the bankruptcy proceedings, and the attorney who prosecutes such suit and pays over to the bankrupt the money recovered is not, in the absence of fraud, liable for the amount so paid on the estate being reopened.[215]

It is probably not necessary that the trustee should execute a formal conveyance or assignment to the bankrupt of such surplus property, though some of the decisions intimate that this is required,[216] for the title would revest by operation of law, or rather, perhaps, the bankrupt is to be regarded as retaining a reversionary interest, which develops into a full title upon the discharge of the trustee. Even in the case where no trustee is appointed, a chose in action belonging to the bankrupt will revert to him after his creditors have satisfied themselves out of his other property.[217] There are certain cases in which it has been held that, after the trustee in bankruptcy has paid in full the debts prov-

[212] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 66b; In re Hoyt, 3 N. B. R. 55, Fed. Cas. No. 6,806; Colie v. Jamison, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 284, 13 N. B. R. 1; Dewey v. Moyer, 9 Hun (N. Y.) 473, 16 N. B. R. 1; Jones v. Pyron, 57 Tex. 43; Herndon v. Davenport, 75 Tex. 462, 12 S. W. 1111; Steevens v. Earles, 25 Mich. 40; Boyd v. Olvey, 82 Ind. 294; Page v. Waring, 76 N. Y. 463; Hunter v. Hodgson (Tex. Civ. App.) 95 S. W. 637; Wade v. Goza, 78 Ark. 7, 96 S. W. 388; Robertson v. Schard, 142 Iowa, 500, 119 N. W. 529, 134 Am. St. Rep. 430; Robertson v. Howard, 82 Kan. 588, 109 Pac. 696; Bracklee Co. v. O'Connor, 67 Misc. Rep. 599, 122 N. Y. Supp. 710; Johnson v. Norris, 190 Fed. 459, 111 C. C. A. 291, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107. A conveyance by the bankrupt alleged to be fraudulent as to creditors will not be set aside at the suit of the trustee, when there are no provable debts, as the estate, after satisfying the claims against it, belongs to the bankrupt. Nicholas v. Murray, 5 Sawy. 320, 18 N. B. R. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 10,223.

[213] In re Ohl (D. C.) 260 Fed. 338, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 328.

[214] In re McNeil Corp. (D. C.) 249 Fed. 765, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

[215] Watson v. Motley, 201 Ala. 25, 75 South. 147.

[216] Scruby v. Norman, 91 Mo. App. 517; Kempner v. Bauer, 53 Misc. Rep. 109, 104 N. Y. Supp. 76; Kruegel v. Murphy & Bolanz (Tex. Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 680. But see Frazier v. Desha's Adm'r, 40 S. W. 678, 19 Ky. Law Rep. 407. And see Raley v. D. Sullivan & Co. (Tex. Com. App.) 207 S. W. 906, holding that the title of a bankrupt to land, though not scheduled as an asset, passes to his trustee, and, notwithstanding the bankrupt's discharge, he cannot recover the same, no facts being shown revesting the title in him.

[217] Roberts v. Martin, 158 Ky. 124, 164 ed against the estate, the surplus, instead of being returned to the bankrupt, should be applied in payment of debts which, though not proved, were listed by the bankrupt in his schedule.[218] But this doctrine has been disapproved,[218] and does not commend itself to legal reason. For creditors who do not prove their claims are not parties to the proceedings, and should not be forced to reap an advantage from them which they have not sought, but should be left to their ordinary remedies at law. The court of bankruptcy is to do justice, and make a distribution of property, between the bankrupt on the one hand and, on the other hand, those of his creditors who choose to come in and make themselves parties to the suit by proving their claims. But where a preference, voidable under the act, has been wrested from the creditor at the suit of the trustee, and the creditor then makes proof of his debt, and the assets are enough to pay all the other creditors in full and leave a surplus, in this case the preferred creditor's proof may be allowed to stand, and he may be paid out of such surplus; for, as between the bankrupt and himself, he is entitled to the money.[220] So also, it is ruled that the surplus remaining after the payment of all proved claims, with interest thereon to the date of adjudication, should not be returned to the bankrupt until there has been further paid out of it interest on the proved claims from the date of adjudication to the day of payment.[221]

After the estate has been closed, the trustee discharged, and the bankrupt himself discharged, property which comes to light, not having been discovered in time to be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings, belongs to the bankrupt as a surplus of his estate, and if there are no representations of fraud or concealment on his part, or of such mistake as would vitiate the discharge, the court has no authority to appoint a new trustee to take possession of such surplus.[222] But on the other hand, a discharged bankrupt can assert no title, nor can he maintain any

S. W. 369; Griffin v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., 119 Ga. 664, 46 S. E. 870.

[218] In re Haynes, 2 N. B. R. 227, Fed. Cas. No. 6,269; In re James, 2 N. B. R. 227. These were decisions by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia sitting as a court of bankruptcy.

[219] In re Hoyt, 3 N. B. R. 55, Fed. Cas. No. 6,806, per Lowell, J. And see People's Nat. Bank of Independence v. Maxson, 168 Iowa, 318, 150 N. W. 601.

[220] In re McGuire, 8 Ben. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 8,813.

[221] In re Town, 8 N. B. R. 40, Fed. Cas. No. 14,112; In re Hagan, 6 Ben. 407, 10 N. B. R. 383, Fed. Cas. No. 5,898; In re Bank of North Carolina, 12 N. B. R. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 895.

[222] See Hanson v. First Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 128 S. W. 1147; Lasater v. First Nat. Bank, 96 Tex. 345, 72 S. W. 1057; Mayer v. Gourden, 26 Fed. 742; Burton v. Perry, 146 Ill. 71, 34 N. E. 60; In re Pintard, Fed. Cas. No. 11,170; In re Graff (D. C.) 242 Fed. 577, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 205; Davis v. Findley, 201 Ala. 515, 78 South. 869. Compare In re Lighthall (D. C.) 221 Fed. 791, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

action, in respect to property which he wilfully concealed from his trustee or failed to surrender for the benefit of his creditors.[223]

Where the trustee in bankruptcy elects not to take and charge the estate with property of the bankrupt which is incumbered, or where he abandons it, the property or right, whatever it is, remains in or reverts to the bankrupt.[224]

[223] First Nat. Gank v. Lasater, 196 U. S. 115, 25 Sup. Ct. 206, 49 L. Ed. 408, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 698; Laing v. Fish, 119 Ill. App. 645; Hunt v. Doyal, 128 Ga. 416, 57 S. E. 489. See Rand v. Iowa Cent. Ry. Co., 96 App. Div. 413, 89 N. Y. Supp. 212; Rand v. Sage, 94 Minn. 344, 102 N. W. 864; Jones v. Barnes, 107 Miss. 800, 66 South. 212; Perkins v. Alexander (Tex. Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 789.

[224] Abo Land Co. v. Tenorio (N. M.) 191 Pac. 141.

CHAPTER XIV

EXEMPTIONS OF BANKRUPT

§ 238. Exemptions Under Federal Laws.—The bankruptcy act of 1898 makes no specific exemptions to bankrupts except such as may be allowed them by the law of the state of their domicile. In this respect it differs from the act of 1867, which granted to bankrupts an exemption of household and kitchen furniture, wearing apparel, and "other articles and necessaries" to the value of $500, to be set apart by the assignee.[1] But there are certain laws of the United States, not repealed by the bankruptcy act, under which specific property may be claimed as exempt from liability for the debts of the bankrupt. Thus, his military uniform, arms, and equipment are exempted by an early act of Congress from seizure on judicial process or distress.[2] Again, since the bankruptcy law invests the trustee in bankruptcy with title to the bankrupt's property, except "property which is exempt," it is held that land acquired by the bankrupt under the United States homestead law cannot be subjected, in the bankruptcy proceedings, to the payment of any debt contracted by him before the issuance of the patent for such land, it being exempt as to all such debts by the terms of the

[1] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5045. See In re Friend, 3 Woods, 388, Fed. Cas. No. 5,120. A homestead exemption can be claimed under the Bankruptcy Act only where given by the laws of the state. Edgington v. Taylor (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 48, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 566.

[2] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 1628. This exemption is recognized in the official form No. 1, Schedule B, 5.

homestead act.[3] And a similar decision has been made with reference to land to which an Indian bankrupt was entitled, under an act of Congress allotting in severalty the agricultural lands of the tribe, but providing that the government should hold the lands for twenty-five years in trust for the sole use and benefit of the several Indian allottees, who were not allowed to convey or incumber the lands during that period of time.[4]

§ 239. Pension Money.—An act of Congress provides that "no sum of money due or to become due to any pensioner shall be liable to attachment, levy, or seizure by or under any legal or equitable process whatever, whether the same remains with the pension office, or any agent or officer thereof, or is in course of transmission to the pensioner entitled thereto, but shall enure wholly to the benefit of such pensioner."[5] In pursuance of this statute it is held that money received from the United States as a pension, and remaining unchanged in the pensioner's hands at the time of filing his petition in bankruptcy, is exempt from liability for his debts, and does not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy as assets of his estate.[6] But after a United States pension check, or the money it represents, has been deposited in a bank,[7] or placed in the hands of a third person for safe keeping,[8] or invested in any species of property,[9] it is no longer exempt from liability for the pensioner's debts, but may be reached by ordinary judicial process,

[3] In re Daubner, 96 Fed. 805, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368; In re Cohn, 171 Fed. 568, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761; In re Auge (D. C.) 238 Fed. 621, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39. See Rev. Stat. U. S. § 2296.

[4] In re Russie, 96 Fed. 609, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6. And see In re Grayson, 3 Ind. Ter. 497, 61 S. W. 984.

[5] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 4747. In New York it is held that money due to a debtor from the public authorities as a pension, granted under state or municipal law, cannot be reached by a creditor of the pensioner until actually paid over to the latter. Nagle v. Stagg, 15 Abb. Prac. N. S. (N. Y.) 348. And an annuity or pension payable to the bankrupt as a retired civil employee, under either the laws of the state or of the City of New York, as it is not a vested right, but a revocable bounty, is not an asset of his estate in bankruptcy. In re Hoag (D. C.) 227 Fed. 478, 480, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142, 145.

[6] In re Bean, 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53. But see, contra, In re Jones, 166 Fed. 337, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536. In the former case it was held that such money should be listed in the bankrupt's schedule of assets under the heading of "cash on hand," with the statement that he claims it as exempt; if it is omitted without fraudulent intent, the bankrupt may be allowed to insert it by amendment; but the liability of a voluntary bankrupt to pay the filing fees required by the statute does not depend upon his having property which is not exempt, but he is excused from such payment only in case of absolute inability. Hence he may be ordered to pay such fees out of pension money remaining in his hands at the time of filing his petition.

[7] Martin v. Hurlburt, 60 Vt. 364, 14 Atl. 649.

[8] Rozelle v. Rhodes, 116 Pa. St. 129, 9 Atl. 160, 2 Am. St. Rep. 591; Sims v. Walsham (Ky.) 7 S. W. 557.

[9] Faurote v. Carr, 108 Ind. 123, 9 N. E. 350; Robion v. Walker, 82 Ky. 60, 56 Am Rep. 878; Jardain v. Fairton Savand will therefore vest in the trustee in bankruptcy as assets of the pensioner's estate. It should be noted, however, that in one state (Iowa) a statute provides that all money received from the United States government as a pension shall be exempt from execution, whether it be in the actual possession of the pensioner "or deposited, loaned, or invested by him." [10] Also under the laws and decisions of New York, pension money "may be applied to his support and maintenance, may be saved intact for future use, or may be invested by the beneficiary in real or personal property necessary for the maintenance and support of himself and family. Such property is exempt so long as it can be strictly identified as the actual proceeds of the pension. But if the pension is embarked in business enterprises or employed in speculation, which results in intermingling the bounty of the government with other property interests and rendering the pension funds incapable of identification, then the statutory exemption is lost." And therefore a bankrupt pensioner cannot claim as exempt real property which was purchased in the first instance partly with pension money, but out of which he has withdrawn, by way of mortgage, more than the pension money originally put in, and used the money so withdrawn in other ventures.[11]

§ 240. Exemption Under State Laws.—The bankruptcy statute of 1898 provides that "this act shall not affect the allowance to bankrupts of the exemptions which are prescribed by the state laws in force at the time of the filing of the petition in the state wherein they have had their domicile for the six months or the greater portion thereof immediately preceding the filing of the petition." [12] This adoption of the various state laws as the measure of the exemption to be allowed to bankrupts is not beyond the power of Congress. On the contrary, the constitutional validity of such a provision, in reference to the requirement that laws on the subject of bankruptcy shall be "uniform" throughout the United States has been fully sustained by the courts.[13] And it is held that the section in question is to be liberally construed to ac-ings Fund Ass'n, 44 N. J. Law, 376; Friend v. Garcelon, 77 Me. 25, 52 Am. Rep. 739.

10 See Diamon v. Palmer, 79 Iowa, 578, 44 N. W. 819.

11 In re Ellithorpe, 111 Fed. 163, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18, citing Bank v. Carpenter, 119 N. Y. 550, 23 N. E. 1108, 7 L. R. A. 557, 16 Am. St. Rep. 855.

12 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 6. See In re Cobb, 1 N. B. R. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 2,920. "Exempt" property is property which is not subject to be taken under process for the enforcement of a demand. Stratton v. Ermis (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 533, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125.

13 Darling v. Berry, 4 McCrary, 470, 13 Fed. 659; Harlin v. American Trust Co. 67 Ind. App. 213, 119 N. E. 20. And see supra, § 2, and other cases there cited.

complish the purpose of the exemption.[14] The bankruptcy act, it will be observed, neither enlarges nor diminishes the exemption laws of the states. It simply takes the law of the particular state where the bankrupt is domiciled, as it exists at the time the proceeding is begun, and adopts it as the measure of the exemption to be allowed.[15] Thus, the extent and the duration of a homestead allotment made in a court of bankruptcy will be the same as prescribed by the law of the state.[16] And the nature and extent of the state exemption must be ascertained in the mode designated by the state law.[17] Further, it must be noticed that when the act of Congress speaks of the "state laws," as measuring the exemption, it means the statutory law of the state only. Hence an item of property having an actual market value (such as a seat in a stock exchange) which, if exempted from liability to satisfy the debts of the owner, is so exempted by decisions of the state courts, not resting on any exemption by reason of a state statute, but purely on definitions of property, will not be deemed exempt under the bankruptcy act.[18]

In construing the state exemption laws, for the purposes of the bankruptcy act, the federal courts will follow the decisions of the highest court of the state, if any applicable rulings are to be found,[19] but they [14] In re Tilden, 91 Fed. 500, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300; Smith v. Thompson, 213 Fed. 335, 129 C. C. A. 637, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Lenters (D. C.) 225 Fed. 878, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3.

[15] In re Bassett, 189 Fed. 410, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800; In re Boyd, 120 Fed. 999, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337; In re Staunton, 117 Fed. 507, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re Wunder, 133 Fed. 821, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; In re Manning, 112 Fed. 948, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571; Steele v. Buel, 104 Fed. 968, 44 C. C. A. 287, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Andrews & Simonds, 193 Fed. 776, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116; In re Bitner, 255 Fed. 48, 166 C. C. A. 376, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175; In re Hewit (D. C.) 244 Fed. 245, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 6; In re Gunzberger (D. C.) 268 Fed. 673, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

[16] In re Woodard, 95 Fed. 260, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339; Windley v. Tankard, 88 N. C. 223. But where the exemption law of the state has been amended by a new statute allotting additional exemptions, but such later act is void for want of conformity to the constitutional requirements as to amending statutes, a bankrupt who has had set apart to him all the exemptions allowed by the original act cannot claim anything further under the amending statute. In re Buelow, 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

[17] In re Feeley, 3 N. B. R. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 4,714; Sutman v. Hogsett, 70 Pa. Super. Ct. 180; People's Nat. Bank of Independence v. Maxson, 168 Iowa, 318, 150 N. W. 601.

[18] Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, 23 Sup. Ct. 200, 47 L. Ed. 318, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277.

[19] Libby v. Beverly (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 63, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605; In re Scheier, 188 Fed. 744, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739; In re National Grocer Co. (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 33, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; In re Cochran, 185 Fed. 913, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Meriwether, 107 Fed. 102, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435; In re McCrary Bros., 169 Fed. 485, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161; In re Stone, 116 Fed. 35, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416; In re Owings, 140 Fed. 739, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Downing, 148 Fed. 120, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423; In re Stevenson, 93 Fed. 789, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 230; In re Camp, 91 Fed. 745, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Beauchamp, 101 Fed. 106, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; In re Wyllie, 2 Hughes, 449, Fed. Cas. No. 18,112; Southern Irr. Co. v. Wharton Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.) 144 S. W. 701. But the decision are not bound to follow a mere obiter dictum.[20] It should also be remarked that, in setting out the exemption to the bankrupt, it is the "lex domicilii" which governs;[21] and property which is exempt by the laws of the state where the debtor resides and where the petition is filed will be protected wherever it may actually be situated, and if it is situated in another state, the court will not inquire into the laws of that state to see if it would be there exempt, for that question is entirely immaterial.[22] But the adoption by the bankruptcy act of the state exemption laws extends so far only as to accord the property to the debtor. Collateral provisions in the state laws, particularly in relation to the method of allotting or setting apart the exempt property, are not made a part of the bankruptcy act. In these respects it is the national law, and not the state law, which governs.[23] By this it is not meant to imply that any substantive provisions of the state law, made a prerequisite to the right to claim an exemption, may be disregarded. On the contrary, such provisions are to be strictly observed. Thus, if the state law grants the exemption to "residents of the state," the bankrupt must answer this condition or he cannot claim the exemption,[24] and one who is not a citizen of the United States or of the particular state is not entitled to exemptions.[25] It is so also in regard to the common requirement that the person claiming an exemption must be "the head of a family," [26] or a "citizen householder having a family." [27]

The right of exemption must exist, if at all, at the date of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy.[28] But where the bankrupt is entitled to the exemption at that date, his subsequent removal from the state does not deprive him of the right, though the exemption is for the federal court, and when it is about to order sale of the bankrupt's property, a state court will not recognize given property as exempt from seizure and sale, since it should not interfere with the federal court's jurisdiction, and could not enforce its decree. Aubrey v. Guillaumin, 144 La. 177, 80 South. 241.

[20] In re Sullivan, 148 Fed. 815, 78 C. C. A. 505, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578.

[21] Duncan v. Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co. (C. C. A.) 150 Fed. 269, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 155.

[22] In re Stevens, 2 Biss. 373, 5 N. B. R. 298, Fed. Cas. No. 13,392. Compare Gibbs v. Logan, 22 W. Va. 208; Campbell-Thorpe Grocer Co. v. Watkins, 135 Ark. 433, 205 S. W. 826.

[23] In re Lynch, 101 Fed. 579, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; Farmer v. Taylor, 56 Ga. 559, 15 N. B. R. 515. And see In re Culwell, 165 Fed. 828, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614; In re Lenters (D. C.) 225 Fed. 878, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3.

[24] In re Dinglehoef, 109 Fed. 866, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242; In re O'Hara, 162 Fed. 325, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714.

[25] In re Kaplan, 186 Fed. 242, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 376.

[26] In re Finklea, 153 Fed. 492, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; In re Yonngstrom, 153 Fed. 98, 82 C. C. A. 232, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572; In re Glisson, 182 Fed. 287, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re McGowan, 170 Fed. 493, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 469.

[27] In re Rainwater, 191 Fed. 738, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

[28] In re Duerson, 13 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 4,117.

is only given to residents by the state law.[29] So a bankrupt who was engaged in farming until a short time before the adjudication is entitled to the exemptions given by the state law to farmers, though he afterwards engages, temporarily, in another pursuit.[30] But where, executions being levied on his property, a debtor claims and receives the money allowed to him as exempt, and directly afterwards files his petition in bankruptcy, he cannot then claim another exemption of like amount, to be set apart to him under the bankruptcy law.[31]

§ 241. Same; Exemption by Value.—Where the state statute, as is often the case, does not specify the items of property which may be claimed as exempt, but grants to the debtor an exemption of personal property generally (or of property either real or personal) to a value not exceeding a certain sum, it is held that the exemption is in property and not in money, so that a bankrupt must select the items of property which he wishes set apart to him, not exceeding the designated value, and cannot simply claim an exemption of that much money out of the proceeds of his estate in bankruptcy.[32] But subject to this condition, the exemption may be taken out of cash remaining in the hands of the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication,[33] or in a vested expectant interest of the bankrupt in a sum of money payable at his death or at the death of another person,[34] or in real estate if the statute so provides.[35] Where the state statute is intended primarily for the benefit of the family rather than of the individual debtor, and grants an exemption to either the husband or wife, but with a proviso that the amount allowed to them jointly shall not exceed a certain sum, the rights of a married bankrupt will be determined by the same rule which would govern them in the state courts, and may thus depend on the financial condition of his wife.[36] But in the absence of a provision of [29] In re Donahey, 176 Fed. 458, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 796.

[30] In re Fly, 110 Fed. 141, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 550.

[31] In re Miller, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 263.

[32] In re Ansley Bros., 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457; In re Baughman, 183 Fed. 668, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167; In re Pfeiffer, 155 Fed. 892, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 230; In re Staunton, 117 Fed. 507, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79; In re Prince & Walter, 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675. Where the state law allows an exemption to a certain amount out of personal property, but only in case the debtor is "not the owner of a homestead," a bankrupt comes within this description where, although he had a homestead at the beginning of the proceedings, yet the proceeds of its sale were not sufficient to pay off the incumbrances upon it. In re Stitt, 252 Fed. 1, 164 C. C. A. 113, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777.

[33] In re Wilson, 108 Fed. 197, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287.

[34] In re Bennett, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 472, 2 N. B. R. 181, Fed. Cas. No. 1,315.

[35] In re Edwards, 2 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 4,293.

[36] In re McCutchen, 100 Fed. 779, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

this kind, the bankrupt is entitled to claim the full amount of the exemption specified in the statute, irrespective of the fact that his wife may own unincumbered property.[37] The court of bankruptcy will also give to a bankrupt the benefit of a state statute exempting his wages earned within a limited time or to a limited amount.[38]

§ 242. Same; Exemption of Specific Property.—In many of the states the exemption laws save to the debtor certain specified articles or kinds of property, such as wearing apparel, tools and implements of his trade, domestic animals, or household furniture. So great is the diversity of these statutes that it would not be profitable here to enter upon a discussion either of their terms or of their interpretation. In each state a bankrupt will be entitled to receive what the state law allows, and the court of bankruptcy, on any disputed construction of the law, will be guided by the decisions of the local courts.[39]

The phrase "wearing apparel" has given rise to much controversy, and particularly as between bankrupts who own watches and jewelry and claim them as exempt and creditors who seek to subject them to their claims. The general weight of authority is to the effect that a gold watch and chain, habitually carried upon the person in the ordinary mode of use, is exempt as wearing apparel, at least where the value of the time-piece is not so great as to make it primarily an article of [37] In re Tonne, 13 N. B. R. 170, Fed. Cas. No. 14,095.

[38] In re Holden, 127 Fed. 980, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

[39] As to a specific exemption of a lot in a cemetery, see Burdette v. Jackson, 179 Fed. 229, 102 C. C. A. 481, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 127. As to claiming an exemption out of a stock of goods in trade, see In re Wilson, 108 Fed. 197, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287. Concerning the effect of a state insolvency law, granting to the debtor an allowance for the support of his family, see In re Anderson, 110 Fed. 141, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555. As to a state law exempting "wages or salary," see In re Pears, 205 Fed. 255, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 563; In re Vonhee (D. C.) 238 Fed. 422, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799. On the construction of a statute exempting the "best swine or meat of a swine," see In re Libby, 103 Fed. 776, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615; Bank of Nez Perce v. Pindel, 193 Fed. 917, 113 C. C. A. 545, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69. On the exemption of earnings necessary for the support of a debtor's family, see In re Condon, 198 Fed. 947, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 907. On the question of exempting a membership in a stock exchange or chamber of commerce, having a market value, by reason of certain benefit or insurance features in its charter or rules, see In re Neimann, 124 Fed. 738, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739. As to whether a liquor license can be claimed as a part of the exemption, see In re Olewine, 125 Fed. 840, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 40; In re Myers, 102 Fed. 869, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 536. As to the exemption of growing crops, see In re T. C. Burnett & Co., 201 Fed. 162, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 872; In re Friedrich, 199 Fed. 193, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 656. Where the bankrupt is a "polyartist," or pursues several different mechanical trades at the same time, he is not required to limit his claim for exemption of tools and implements to those appropriate for the pursuit of any one of his trades, but may select those suitable for all his trades, provided he does not exceed the total amount of the exemption in value. In re Robinson, 206 Fed. 176, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 686.

ornament rather than of mere utility.[40] But it seems that if the statute only exempts "necessary wearing apparel," a watch is not included.[41] The question also occurs whether a watch carried by a mechanic may be regarded as a tool or implement of his trade, so as to be exempt under that designation. The few authorities on this point have held that, if the bankrupt can show that it is necessary for him to have a watch in order to carry on his trade, he will be allowed to claim as exempt such a watch as would be proper and sufficient for that purpose, but that if the watch which he owns is more valuable than it need be for use in his trade, he must account to his creditors for the difference.[42] As to articles of jewelry, if they are only carried as ornaments, they are not exempt under the description of "wearing apparel."[43] But in one instance the court allowed the bankrupt to retain as exempt a diamond stud which he habitually wore in the front of his shirt and for the purpose of fastening the shirt together (thus giving at least the color of usefulness to the article in question), there being no circumstances connected with its acquisition or use tending to show fraud or bad faith towards his creditors.[44] The term "wearing apparel" may also include the uniform or regalia of a fraternal order to which the bankrupt belongs, although he does not wear it as an ordinary and usual dress, but only on special occasions.[45]

Where the statute exempts the tools or implements of a mechanic or artisan necessary to the carrying on of his trade, the term is understood to apply only to such simple instruments as are operated by hand, and it cannot be stretched so as to allow the bankrupt to claim an exemption of expensive and complicated machinery propelled by steam, [40] In re H. L. Evans & Co., 158 Fed. 153, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752; In re Jones, 97 Fed. 773, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Freeman, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 569; In re Steele, 2 Flip. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 13,346; Sellers v. Bell, 94 Fed. 801, 36 C. C. A. 502, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 529; Stewart v. McClung, 12 Or. 431, 8 Pac. 447, 53 Am. Rep. 374; Brown v. Edmonds, 5 S. Dak. 508, 59 N. W. 731. Contra, In re Everleth, 129 Fed. 620, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

[41] In re Turnbull, 106 Fed. 667, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

[42] In re Coller, 111 Fed. 503, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 131; In re Turnbull, 106 Fed. 667, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549. And see In re Everleth, 129 Fed. 620, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

[43] In re Gemmell, 155 Fed. 551; In re Kasson, Fed. Cas. No. 7,616. But see In re H. L. Evans & Co., 158 Fed. 153, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 752, where the court allowed as exempt, under the statutory description of "wearing apparel," not only a gold watch and chain, but also rings and scarf-pins set with diamonds, sapphires, rubies, and pearls, aggregating over $400 in value. But later decisions refuse to recognize diamond rings as allowably exempt under the description of wearing apparel or otherwise. Rivas v. Noble, 241 Fed. 673, 154 C. C. A. 431, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; Langever v. Stitt, 237 Fed. 83, 150 C. C. A. 285, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446.

[44] In re Smith, 96 Fed. 832, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 140.

[45] In re Jones, 97 Fed. 773, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259. But compare In re Everleth, 129 Fed. 620, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236.

electricity, or other power.[46] But within the meaning of such a statute, a baker is a mechanic,[47] and so is an undertaker and embalmer,[48] and a farmer may claim as exempt a mechanical cream separator.[49] A professional guide in the Maine woods is entitled to the exemption of a canoe as a tool of his trade, but (so the court seriously held) not his rifle.[50] A horse and wagon may be so strictly necessary to the conduct of the bankrupt's business as to be exempt under the designation of implements of his trade.[51] But where the statute exempts "two horses kept and used for team work," a bankrupt is not entitled to claim as exempt a horse kept and used only as a racer.[52] Where the statute exempts "one dray or truck, by the use of which a drayman or truckman habitually earns his living," it is possible that an automobile truck may be exempt, but not unless it is clearly shown that the bankrupt habitually earns his living by the use of it.[53]

The burden of proving that an article alleged to be exempt is within the provisions of the statute rests upon the bankrupt.[54] And he must select his exemption in kind, and cannot ordinarily wait until the property has been sold and then claim the maximum value of his exemption in money from the proceeds.[55] And a bankrupt who does not happen to own any articles of the kind or class mentioned in the statute (tools, domestic animals, or the like) will not be entitled to receive out of his estate a commutation of their value in money.[56] But if articles strictly within the exemption law have been wrongfully taken by creditors, before the bankruptcy proceedings, on attachment, execution, or distress, and sold, the bankrupt will still be entitled to claim and receive the allowance of his exemptions, the sale being declared void or the money ordered refunded by the creditors or by the sheriff if still in the latter's hands.[57] And there is also authority for holding that a [46] Peyton v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Hillsboro (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 326, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295.

[47] In re Osborn, 104 Fed. 780, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; In re Petersen, 95 Fed. 417, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 630.

[48] Steiner v. Marshall, 140 Fed. 710, 72 C. C. A. 103, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 486.

[49] In re Hemstreet, 139 Fed. 958, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 823.

[50] In re Mullen, 140 Fed. 206, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 275.

[51] In re Conley, 162 Fed. 806, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 200; In re Hindman, 104 Fed. 331, 43 C. C. A. 558, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 20.

[52] In re Libby, 103 Fed. 776, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 615.

[53] In re Schumm (D. C.) 232 Fed. 414, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

[54] In re Turnbull, 106 Fed. 667, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

[55] In re Blanchard, 161 Fed. 793, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 417; In re Grady, 138 Fed. 935, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; In re Gunzberger (D. C.) 268 Fed. 673, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

[56] In re Harrington, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 513; In re Williams, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 419. And see In re Buelow, 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

[57] In re Martin, 2 Hughes, 418, 13 N. B. R. 397, Fed. Cas. No. 9,152; In re Ellis, 1 N. B. R. 555, Fed. Cas. No. 4,400; Williams v. Miller, 16 Conn. 144.

judgment recovered by a debtor against one who has unlawfully levied upon and sold his exempt property stands in place of the exemption and cannot be reached by creditors.[58] And it appears that the same doctrine applies to money due to the bankrupt from an insurance company as indemnity for the loss of his exempt property by fire.[59]

§ 243. Policies of Life Insurance.—The seventieth section of the present bankruptcy act, which describes the property the title to which is vested in a trustee in bankruptcy, contains the following proviso: "That when any bankrupt shall have any insurance policy which has a cash surrender value payable to himself, his estate, or personal representatives, he may, within thirty days after the cash surrender value has been ascertained and stated to the trustee by the company issuing the same, pay or secure to the trustee the sum so ascertained and stated, and continue to hold, own, and carry such policy free from the claims of the creditors participating in the distribution of his estate under the bankruptcy proceedings, otherwise the policy shall pass to the trustee as assets." At first the courts were disposed to hold that this proviso was a specific limitation upon the sixth section of the act, which secures to the bankrupt in general terms the benefit of the exemption law of the state, and that therefore the title to such a policy would vest in the trustee, notwithstanding the fact that it was exempt under the state laws.[60] But a contrary doctrine has prevailed. Attention has been given to the important phrase in the seventieth section which restricts the general language vesting the trustee with title to the bankrupt's property, by adding "except in so far as it is property which is exempt." And it is now held that the entire seventieth section is limited in its application, by its own terms and by section six, to property which is not exempt under the law of the state, and that the proviso above quoted applies only to insurance policies which are not so exempt. The proviso is intended to give the bankrupt the preferred right to retain a non-exempt policy on paying its cash surrender value. But if the policy is exempt under the state law, it is exempt in the bankruptcy proceeding, and the bankrupt is not obliged to pay or secure its surrender value in order to retain it as his own.[61] But if the laws of the [58] Tillotson v. Wolcott, 48 N. Y. 188.

[59] Sands v. Roberts, 8 Abb. Prac. (N. Y.) 343.

[60] In re Scheld, 104 Fed. 870, 44 C. C. A. 233, 52 L. R. A. 188, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 102; In re Lange, 91 Fed. 361, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 189; In re Steele, 98 Fed. 78, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 549.

[61] Holden v. Stratton, 198 U. S. 202, 25 Sup. Ct. 656, 49 L. Ed. 1018, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Johnson, 176 Fed. 591, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277; In re Holden, 114 Fed. 650, 52 C. C. A. 346; Steele v. Buel, 104 Fed. 968, 44 C. C. A. 287, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; Pulsifer v. Hussey, 97 Me. 434, 54 Atl. 1076; Dreyfus v. Barton, 98 Miss. 758, 54 South. 254; Chandler v. Traub, 159 Ala. 519, 49 state exempt from execution all money arising from insurance, but only to the amount of $500, a bankrupt, being the owner of a life insurance policy having a large cash surrender value, can claim only $500 of its value as exempt.[62] If, on the other hand, the bankrupt's life policy has no cash surrender value, this provision of the bankruptcy act does not apply, and if such a policy is exempt under the law of the state it will be exempt in bankruptcy.[63] A policy, if exempt, is none the less so because it has been assigned as collateral security, and even though the assignment makes it payable to the assignee absolutely.[64]

Where the state law provides that a policy of insurance expressed to be for the benefit of or payable to the wife of the assured shall inure to her benefit as against the claims of his creditors, a policy on the life of a bankrupt but payable to his wife is exempt in the bankruptcy proceedings and does not vest in his trustee.[65] But though the law may provide that insurance effected by a husband on his own life shall inure to the benefit of his widow free from the claims of his creditors, this does not exempt in favor of the husband, during his lifetime, insurance payable either to himself or to his estate.[66] And the same rule has been applied to a policy which is made payable to the assured at the end of twenty years if living, and in case of his prior death, to his wife if living, and otherwise to his legal representatives or assigns,[67] though this last ruling has been controverted.[68] But where a policy is made payable on the death of the insured to his wife by name, it is one expressed to be for her benefit, within the meaning of the statute, notwithstanding the fact that by its terms, as in most modern policies, the insured is given the right to change the beneficiary or to enjoy certain collateral rights in his lifetime in the way of obtaining loans thereon or its surrender value, and such a policy, which was so payable at the time of the bankruptcy of the insured, whether it be regarded as the property of the wife, or as exempt property of the husband, does

South. 240; In re Sawyer, 2 Hask. 153, Fed. Cas. No. 12,393; Young v. Thomason (Ala.) 60 South. 272; Elledge v. Sumpter, 140 Tenn. 11, 203 S. W. 346.

[62] In re Jones (D. C.) 249 Fed. 487, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299, 467.

[63] In re Rosenberg-Oldstein Co. (D. C.) 236 Fed. 812, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669.

[64] King v. Kellogg, 114 Miss. 375, 75 South. 134.

[65] In re Whelpley, 169 Fed. 1019, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 433; In re Carlon, 189 Fed. 815, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18; Allen v. Central Wisconsin Trust Co., 143 Wis. 381, 127 N. W. 1003, 139 Am. St. Rep. 1107. See In re Morse, 206 Fed. 350; Frederick v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (D. C.) 235 Fed. 639, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 737.

[66] In re Moore, 173 Fed. 679, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 109.

[67] In re Loveland, 192 Fed. 1005, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 765; In re Churchill. 198 Fed. 711, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[68] In re Booss, 154 Fed. 494, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 658; Eldredge v. Mutual Life Ins Co., 217 Mass. 444, 105 N. E. 361; In re Churchill, 209 Fed. 766, 126 C. C. A. 490, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

not pass to his trustee and the latter cannot recover the same, even though the right of the wife may be subsequently extinguished, or though she does not set up any claim thereto.[69]

§ 244. Homstead Exemption.—Where the law of the state in which the bankruptcy proceeding is pending allows a homestead exemption to the debtor, the same exemption may be claimed and set apart to him in the bankruptcy proceeding; and all questions in regard to the acquisition of the homestead, the steps necessary to make it effective, its measure and duration, the kinds of debts enforceable against it, and its retention or abandonment, will be determined in accordance with the laws of the state, the court of bankruptcy following the decisions of its highest courts where they are applicable.[70] And where the right of a bankrupt to a homestead exemption has been adjudicated by a state court in proceedings under a general assignment made in accordance with a state law, after a contest by creditors, and before the court of bankruptcy acquired jurisdiction by the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, such adjudication cannot be reviewed or set aside in the bankruptcy proceedings.[71] Since the rights of the parties are fixed at the date of the adjudication of bankruptcy, if no homestead was allowed by the law of the state at that time, none can be set apart to the bankrupt afterwards.[72] Moreover, the bankrupt must be in position to claim the homestead, so far as it depends upon himself, at that day. If he has merely expressed an intention to claim as a homestead a certain [69] In re Orear, 189 Fed. 888, 111 C. C. A. 150, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521; In re Fetterman (D. C.) 243 Fed. 975, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 834. But compare In re Jens (D. C.) 273 Fed. 606.

[70] See In re Rippa, 180 Fed. 603; In re Marquette, 103 Fed. 777, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 623; In re Baker, 182 Fed. 392, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Stone, 116 Fed. 35, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416; In re Reinhart, 129 Fed. 510, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 78; In re Buelow, 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389; In re Dawley, 94 Fed. 795, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; In re Harrington, 99 Fed. 390, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; In re Pope, 98 Fed. 722, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; In re Pratt, 1 Flip. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 11,370; Daughters v. Christy, 223 Ill. 612, 79 N. E. 292; Rushin v. Gause, 41 Ga. 180; Murray v. Hazell, 99 N. C. 168, 5 S. E. 428; Martin v. Lile, 63 Ala. 406. Compare Darling v. Berry, 4 McCrary, 470, 13 Fed. 659. Where a bankrupt claims property as a homestead, and proceedings are taken before the referee to subject it to the payment of a prior debt, the bankrupt should be allowed an opportunity to set up the statute of limitations against such debt. In re Bean, 100 Fed. 262, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53. The value of personal property exemptions allowed to a bankrupt cannot be set off against a homestead exemption to which he is entitled, for the purpose of diminishing the latter. In re Strauch (D. C.) 208 Fed. 842, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36.

[71] In re Rhodes, 109 Fed. 117, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173.

[72] In re Kerr, 9 N. B. R. 566, Fed. Cas. No. 7,729. See In re Vogler, 2 Hughes, 297, 8 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 16,986; In re Smith, 2 Woods, 458, 14 N. B. R. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 12,996; In re Crum (D. C.) 221 Fed. 729, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586.

tract of land belonging to him, but has taken no steps to make the intention effective, he cannot have the land set apart to him as exempt under the bankruptcy law. "A homestead cannot, any more than a domicile, be acquired by a mere naked intention." An intention formed before the bankruptcy cannot be linked to acts of occupation done after the adjudication, so as to make a complete right to a homestead.[73] The trustee in bankruptcy should include the homestead in his report of exempt property.[74]

Since the right to a homestead depends on the state law, and not primarily on the bankruptcy law, it devolves upon a bankrupt who claims this exemption to show that his situation answers the requirements of the state statute. This becomes important where, for instance, the statute grants the homestead only to one who is a "householder" or the "head of a family."[75] Thus a bankrupt (because his rights are fixed as of the date of the adjudication) cannot claim a homestead under a statute allowing such exemptions to a "householder having a family," by virtue of a marriage contracted after his adjudication.[76] And a wife cannot have a homestead on the land of her bankrupt husband, as against the trustee, nor against those claiming title thereto under a sale made by the trustee.[77] And in this connection, the question of the status of a divorced person, with reference to the right to claim a homestead, arises not infrequently and will be decided according to the laws and judicial decisions of the state.[78] Again, it is necessary that the debtor should own the property claimed as a homestead, at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy, and have a present legal right to the occupancy of it.[79] No such claim can be set up in re-

[73] In re Duerson, 13 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 4,117; In re Hatch, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 293; In re Youngstrom, 153 Fed. 98, 82 C. C. A. 232, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 572.

[74] In re Sinnett, 4 Sawy. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 12,907.

[75] See Richardson v. Woodward, 104 Fed. 873, 44 C. C. A. 235, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 94; In re Morrison, 110 Fed. 734, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 488; In re Mussey, 179 Fed. 1007, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 91; In re Eash, 157 Fed. 996, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738.

[76] In re Rainwater, 191 Fed. 738, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

[77] Lumpkin v. Eason, 44 Ga. 339, 10 N. B. R. 549.

[78] See In re Le Claire, 124 Fed. 654, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 733; In re Pope, 98 Fed. 722, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525; In re Giles, 158 Fed. 596, 85 C. C. A. 418, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Rhodes, 109 Fed. 117, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 173.

[79] In re Sale, 143 Fed. 310, 74 C. C. A. 448, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 235. But a homestead interest in lands in Ohio is none the less exempt because it is mortgaged. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 854, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162. Nor (in Georgia) because the property is subject to taxes and to unpaid purchase money, although, after being set aside as a homestead, it is subject to the payment of the purchase money. In re Johnson (D. C.) 247 Fed. 135, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687. In some states, where the bankrupt is the owner of an estate in remainder in farm lands, on which he lives with his family, his spect to given property where he has divested himself of the title to it, in any way or for any purpose, before the bankruptcy proceedings.[80] But this rule does not apply where the bankrupt has merely contracted to sell the property without parting with the title,[81] or where he has leased the property to a third person, provided that he has not abandoned it as a home, but has always intended to resume his occupancy of it.[82] Again, it is almost always required that the premises claimed as a homestead shall be actually occupied by the debtor and his family as their residence, and this point may be contested in the bankruptcy proceedings and the bankrupt's claim of exemption determined in accordance with its solution.[83] Thus, a bankrupt who resides in a city cannot claim a homestead in a tract of rural land on which he has not actually lived for several years.[84] But a debtor may change his homestead by removing from one residence and taking up another, and may mother being the tenant for life and a nonresident, he is entitled to the farm as an exemption. Grattan v. Trego, 225 Fed. 705, 140 C. C. A. 579, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 889.

[80] Hill v. Oxendine, 79 N. C. 331; In re Everitt, 9 N. B. R. 90, Fed. Cas. No. 4,579. One who, about two months before filing a petition in bankruptcy, divested himself of title to realty, to protect it against the children of his first marriage, in the interest of children of the present marriage, cannot claim the property as his homestead. Kinder v. Trotti, 130 La. 360, 57 South. 1005.

[81] In re Carmichael (D. C.) 108 Fed. 789, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551.

[82] In re Pope (D. C.) 98 Fed. 722, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 525. Under the laws of Texas, a bankrupt was allowed to claim as a homestead exemption two separate parcels of land, not contiguous, but not in the aggregate exceeding the number of acres limited for homestead purposes, where she lived on one tract and leased the other on a crop rent arrangement, using her share of the crops for her sustenance. Woodward v. Sanger Bros., 246 Fed. 777, 159 C. C. A. 79, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578. Under the laws of Iowa, a bankrupt was held entitled to exemption as a homestead of an entire building, one room of which was rented for business purposes. In re Coles (D. C.) 224 Fed. 170, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339.

[83] In re Malloy, 188 Fed. 788, 110 C. C. A. 494, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31; Cowan v. Burchfield, 180 Fed. 614, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293; In re Irvin, 120 Fed. 733, 57 C. C. A. 147, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 689; In re Dawley, 94 Fed. 795, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 496; In re Downing, 148 Fed. 120, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 423; Martin v. Lile, 63 Ala. 406; Peyton v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Hillsboro (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 326, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295. A bankrupt is entitled to have set off as a homestead property which in area and value is within the limitations of the state law, and which he purchased for a home, though he was unable to occupy it because of an existing lease running for a year. Gregory v. Pritchard, 240 Fed. 414, 153 C. C. A. 340, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 415. A bankrupt owning property used for hotel purposes, and in which he and his family reside as their home, is entitled (in Washington) to have $2,000 of the value thereof exempt to him as a homestead. In re Robison (D. C.) 215 Fed. 662, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 27. As to allowing a homestead (in Alabama) in a two-story building, part of which is occupied as a residence, and part leased for business purposes, see Burrow, Jones & Dyer Shoe Co. v. Wallace (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 532, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107.

[84] In re Buelow (D. C.) 98 Fed. 86, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389. See Patten v. Sturgeon, 214 Fed. 65, 130 C. C. A. 505, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 250.

claim the new homestead as against his trustee in bankruptcy, even though the change was made just prior to the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, provided it is done in good faith and without fraud, and the former homestead is surrendered to the trustee.[85] But if he abandons his homestead, without taking up a new one, his right to claim it as exempt in the bankruptcy proceedings is lost. This is always a question of fact, or a mixed question of fact and intention, and will be determined by the circumstances of the particular case.[86] It is held, however, that a homestead right will be protected for the benefit of the debtor's family, as against his trustee in bankruptcy, if they continue to reside on the premises, notwithstanding that the bankrupt has absconded.[87] As to the circumstances under which the homestead was acquired, it is held that, in the absence of a local rule on the subject, the bankrupt's right to claim a homestead exemption in given property is not defeated by the fact that he moved his family into the premises after he became insolvent and in contemplation of bankruptcy,[88] or even that he bought the property claimed as a homestead with funds or assets which would not be exempt in bankruptcy and when he was insolvent.[89] If the state law prescribes any particular manner of claiming or designating the homestead claimed, it must be at least substantially complied with in the bankruptcy proceedings.[90]

As a rule, the term "homestead" implies an estate in real property occupied as a home. But in some states there exists the singular anomaly known as a "business homestead," and in others a "homestead" may be allowed out of a stock of merchandise.[91] Whatever is thus available

[85] Huenergardt v. J. S. Brittain Dry Goods Co., 116 Fed. 31, 53 C. C. A. 505, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 341; In re Carlon, 189 Fed. 815, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18; In re Carmichael, 108 Fed. 789, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 551; In re Johnson, 118 Fed. 312, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257.

[86] In re Mayer, 108 Fed. 599, 47 C. C. A. 512, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Thompson, 140 Fed. 257, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 283; In re Harrington, 99 Fed. 390, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 639; In re Schulz, 135 Fed. 228, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 317; In re O'Brien, 203 Fed. 1012, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

[87] In re Pratt, 1 Flip. 353, Fed. Cas. No. 11,370; In re Luby, 155 Fed. 659, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801.

[88] In re Stone, 116 Fed. 35, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 416. Where a husband before bankruptcy transferred his homestead interest to his wife, the fact that on bankruptcy proceedings he claimed a homestead exemption does not prevent the wife from asserting her homestead exemption in the same property. Morrow v. Zane, 185 Mo. App. 111, 170 S. W. 918.

[89] In re Letson, 157 Fed. 78, 84 C. C. A. 582, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Wood, 147 Fed. 877, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 93; Rushin v. Gause, 41 Ga. 180. Compare McGahan v. Anderson, 113 Fed. 115, 51 C. C. A. 92, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641.

[90] Edgington v. Taylor, 270 Fed. 48; In re Irving (D. C.) 220 Fed. 969, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 399; In re Tobias, 103 Fed. 68, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[91] In re Tobias, 103 Fed. 68, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555. See Laderburg v. Miller, 210 Fed. 614, 127 C. C. A. 250, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 335.

under the state law will be available in bankruptcy. Where that law grants a homestead of a certain value, "to be valued at the time it is set apart," improvements or accretions made by the owner after the homestead is set apart become a part of it, and are not subject to the claims of creditors in bankruptcy, although they may so enhance the value of the property as to make it worth much more than it was originally.[92] As to whether unmatured crops growing on the homestead lands constitute a part of it, and so belong to the bankrupt, or are not included in it, and therefore vest in the trustee, the question depends entirely on the terms of the state statute, which will be applied in the bankruptcy proceedings.[93] It should be here added that a court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to allot to a bankrupt, domiciled within its district, a homestead in lands situated in another district or state.[94]

If the state law gives a homestead in real property, but not to exceed a certain designated value, and the trustee finds that the property occupied and claimed by the bankrupt as a homestead is worth more in the market than the specified sum, he will not be entitled to take possession of the premises,[95] but he may call upon the bankrupt to pay the excess value of the property over the limit of exemption, and if this is done, the bankrupt may retain the land.[96] But if it is refused, and the property is not susceptible of division for purposes of sale without a loss, the trustee should apply to the court for an order for its sale, the bankrupt being then entitled to receive out of the proceeds a sum equal to the statutory amount of the homestead exemption.[97] Where the state law provides that the homestead shall continue exempt from the payment of any debt, after the death of the owner and during the widowhood of his wife and the majority of any of his children, it is a doubtful question whether or not the reversionary interest or title in [92] In re Wardlaw, 192 Fed. 449.

[93] In re Sullivan, 148 Fed. 815, 78 C. C. A. 505, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 578; s. c., 142 Fed. 620, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 87; In re Daubner, 96 Fed. 805, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 368; In re Coffman, 93 Fed. 422, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 530; In re Hoag, 97 Fed. 543, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 290; In re Hussey, 2 Hask. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 6,945; Olmsted-Stevenson Co. v. Miller, 231 Fed. 69, 145 C. C. A. 257, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 816; In re Miller (D. C.) 221 Fed. 690, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614. See Stratton v. Ermis (C. C. A.) 268 Fed. 533, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 125.

[94] In re Owings, 140 Fed. 739, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472.

[95] In re Nye, 133 Fed. 33, 66 C. C. A. 139, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142. A bankrupt in Ohio is entitled to exemption in lieu of homestead out of personal property, and the fact that he owns a homestead incumbered for more than its value does not bar him. In re Radcliffe (D. C.) 243 Fed. 716, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612.

[96] In re Manning, 123 Fed. 180, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498. See Hatfield v. Cline, 143 Ky. 565, 137 S. W. 212.

[97] In re Nye, 133 Fed. 33, 66 C. C. A. 139, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142; In re Oderkirk, 103 Fed. 779, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617.

land set apart to a bankrupt as his homestead, to accrue upon the termination of the homestead estate, is assets of his estate in bankruptcy vesting in the trustee. This question has been answered in the affirmative,[98] and with about equal authority in the negative.[99]

§ 245. Title to Exempt Property.—Property which the bankrupt is entitled to claim as exempt does not pass to or vest in his trustee; the title thereto remains in the bankrupt. It would not be correct to say that the trustee receives the title and then imparts it to the bankrupt; he merely admeasures and sets apart the property. The title of the bankrupt to such property is not affected by the proceedings.[100] In point of fact, it is expressly provided by the statute that the trustee shall not be invested with title to the exempt property of the bankrupt.[101] It follows from this rule that the bankrupt may bring and maintain suits in respect to such property without regard to the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings. For example, he may maintain an action of replevin for the recovery of exempt property in specie, or trespass for wrongs done in respect to it, independently of the trustee in bankruptcy.[102] Moreover, the bankrupt may deal with his exempt property as he pleases.[103] He may lawfully mortgage it or convey it away. If he transfers it, or part of it, to one particular creditor, to secure a debt, even though his intention is to give that creditor an advantage

[98] In re Woodard, 95 Fed. 260, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 339; Williams v. Scott, 122 N. C. 545, 29 S. E. 877.

[99] In re Wardlaw, 192 Fed. 449; McAllister v. Bodkin, 76 Va. 809.

[100] Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, 190 U. S. 294, 23 Sup. Ct. 751, 47 L. Ed. 1061, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; Ingram v. Wilson, 125 Fed. 913, 60 C. C. A. 618, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192; In re Nye, 133 Fed. 33, 66 C. C. A. 139, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142; Bank of Nez Perce v. Pindel, 193 Fed. 917, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; In re Cale, 191 Fed. 31, 111 C. C. A. 89, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 938; In re Orear, 189 Fed. 888, 111 C. C. A. 150, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521; In re Bass, 3 Woods, 382, 15 N. B. R. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 1,091; In re Hester, 5 N. B. R. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 6,437; In re Griffin, 2 N. B. R. 254, Fed. Cas. No. 5,813; McKenney v. Cheney, 118 Ga. 387, 45 S. E. 433; Bush v. Lester, 55 Ga. 579, 15 N. B. R. 36; Felker v. Crane, 70 Ga. 484; Morgenstein v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 125 Ill. App. 397; Fellows v. Dow, 58 N. H. 21; Pollard v. Noyes, 60 N. H. 184; Finnin v. Malloy, 1 Jones & S. (N. Y.) 382; Wilkinson v. Wait, 44 Vt. 508, 8 Am. Rep. 391; Robinson v. Wilson, 15 Kan. 595, 22 Am. Rep. 272, 14 N. B. R. 565; Walker v. Carroll, 65 Ala. 61; Morris v. Covey (Ark.) 148 S. W. 257; Drees v. Armstrong, 180 Iowa, 29, 161 N. W. 40. Notes taken by a bankrupt after adjudication, for the future rental of land which is exempt, do not constitute assets of his estate in bankruptcy. In re Oleson, 110 Fed. 796, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 22.

[101] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 70a. The authority of a trustee in bankruptcy to recover property conveyed by the bankrupt in fraud of his creditors is limited by the provision that such recovery shall not apply to property which is "exempt from execution and liability for debts by the law of his domicile." Id. § 67e.

[102] Winn v. Morse, 59 N. H. 210; Henly v. Lanier, 75 N. C. 172, 15 N. B. R. 280; Scott v. Wilkie, 65 N. C. 376; Seiling v. Gunderman, 35 Tex. 545.

[103] Hunter v. Forrest, 115 Miss. 7, 75 South. 753.

which the others will not obtain, it is not a "preference" within the meaning of the law nor a fraud upon the statute.[104] The trustee cannot maintain a bill to set aside a prior mortgage on the bankrupt's homestead, otherwise valid, as giving a preference contrary to the act, nor to restrain the foreclosure of such mortgage in the state courts.[105]

But although the trustee is not invested with title to the exempt property, he has, like a sheriff levying execution, the temporary control of it until it can be set apart from the rest.[106] "The title to exempt property does not pass to the trustee; it is vested in the bankrupt. He may sell it or mortgage it. But while this is true, property of the second class cannot be considered exempt property until it is selected and set apart. It must necessarily pass to the trustee, who has temporary dominion over it until the exemptions are made. His title may be termed a defeasible title. When the exemptions are formally set apart by the trustee and affirmed by the court, the title of the bankrupt then becomes superior to that of the trustee and absolute." [107]

§ 246. Forfeiture of Exemptions.—In several of the courts of bankruptcy it has been held that a bankrupt cannot claim any exemption in property which, prior to the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, he had conveyed away in fraud of his creditors, or transferred to a particular creditor by way of preference, and which is afterwards recovered for the estate. The sale or conveyance, say these decisions, is good as against the bankrupt, and in attempting to place his property beyond the reach of his creditors, he has placed his exemption beyond his own reach.[108] Notwithstanding the plausibility of this reason-

[104] In re Scott, 6 Sawy. 234, 11 Fed. 133; Schlitz v. Schatz, 2 Biss. 248, Fed. Cas. No. 12,459; Anderson v. Brown, 72 Ga. 713; Jackson v. Jetter (Iowa) 142 N. W. 431. But it is held that, in Pennsylvania, according to the law of that state, a bankrupt's exemption is personal to himself and not assignable, and hence an assignment of his exempt property will operate as an abandonment of his right to it. In re Sloan, 135 Fed. 873, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

[105] Rix v. Capitol Bank, 2 Dill. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 11,869.

[106] Sheldon v. Rounds, 40 Mich. 425; In re Vonhee (D. C.) 238 Fed. 422, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 799; Brandt v. Mayhew, 218 Fed. 422, 134 C. C. A. 210, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845.

[107] In re Grimes, 95 Fed. 529; In re Seabolt, 113 Fed. 766, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; Pincus v. S. H. Meinhard & Bro., 139 Ga. 365, 77 S. E. 82.

[108] In re Wishnefsky, 181 Fed. 896, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798; In re Yost, 117 Fed. 792, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153; In re Coddington, 126 Fed. 891, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122; In re Long, 116 Fed. 113, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 591; In re Evans, 116 Fed. 909, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re White, 109 Fed. 635, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 451; In re Tollett, 105 Fed. 425, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305; In re Graham, 2 Biss. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 5,660; Gibbs v. Logan, 22 W. Va. 208. And see In re Denson, 195 Fed. 857, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162; Kinder v. Trottl, 130 La. 360, 57 South. 1005; In re Libby (D. C.) 253 Fed. 278; In re Hardy (D. C.) 229 Fed. 825, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

ing, the rule has been felt to be a harsh one, and the apparent tendency is not to extend but to restrict it. Thus, it is held that the allegation of facts relied on to defeat the bankrupt's claim to exemptions must be specific and the evidence complete and convincing;[109] that a bankrupt cannot be charged with a fraudulent disposition of his property, where he has sold it for a fair consideration and with an honest motive, though it has the effect of leaving nothing for creditors,[110] or merely because he has sold goods from his stock without keeping track of all such sales and the proceeds thereof;[111] that there is no actual fraud in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the bankrupt may claim his exemptions out of property so assigned after it has been voluntarily surrendered to the trustee or recovered by him.[112] So, where the local law expressly forbids the claim of a homestead exemption in any property the conveyance of which by the claimant has been set aside on the ground of fraud or want of consideration, it is held that where there has been a conveyance by the head of a family, a reconveyance and claim of homestead in the property, before the rendition of any decree setting aside the conveyance as fraudulent, makes the claim a valid one, although a creditor's suit to set aside the conveyance for fraud was instituted before the reconveyance and was then pending.[113]

Nor does the general rule above stated pass unchallenged. On the contrary, there is a formidable body of authority to the effect that, although the bankrupt has made a fraudulent or preferential conveyance of his property, and the same is set aside at the instance of his trustee, the bankrupt, if otherwise entitled, is not estopped to claim an exemption in the property so recovered by the trustee.[114] The theory, as [109] In re Tobias, 103 Fed. 68, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555.

[110] In re Duffy, 118 Fed. 926, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358.

[111] In re McUlta, 189 Fed. 250, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 480.

[112] Bashinski v. Talbott, 119 Fed. 337, 56 C. C. A. 241, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 513; In re Talbott, 116 Fed. 417, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 427.

[113] In re W. C. Allen & Co., 134 Fed. 620, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; In re Tollett, 106 Fed. 866, 46 C. C. A. 11, 54 L. R. A. 222, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404; In re Najour (D. C.) 246 Fed. 167.

[114] In re Cotton & Preston, 183 Fed. 190, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532; In re Soper, 173 Fed. 116, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 868; In re Thompson, 140 Fed. 257, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 283; In re Falconer, 110 Fed. 111, 49 C. C. A. 50, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 557; In re Park, 102 Fed. 602, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432; Feilbach Co. v. Russell, 233 Fed. 412, 147 C. C. A. 348, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; In re French (D. C.) 231 Fed. 255, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289; In re Elkin (D. C.) 218 Fed. 971, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134; In re Harrell (D. C.) 222 Fed. 160, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 809. In re Noee, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 789; Bartholomew v. West, 2 Dill. 290, 8 N. B. R. 12, Fed. Cas. No. 1,071; McFarland v. Goodman, 6 Biss. 111, 11 N. B. R. 134, Fed. Cas. No. 8,789; In re Detert, 11 N. B. R. 293, Fed. Cas. No. 3,829; Smith v. Kehr, 2 Dill. 50, 7 N. B.

stated in one of the cases, is that a bankrupt cannot be denied his exemptions as a punishment for fraudulent conduct on his part, however reprehensible it may be.[115] But where a debtor who is insolvent and contemplates bankruptcy makes an exchange of property, giving articles which would not be exempt for specific property which is exempt under the laws of the state, the transaction will be held void, and the trustee will take title to the property so attempted to be alienated.[116] and so also where the debtor, under similar conditions as to insolvency and approaching bankruptcy, converts property into cash and invests it in a homestead.[117] So where a partner takes notes belonging to the firm, and with these purchases a homestead, immediately before the bankruptcy of the firm and with knowledge of its insolvent condition, he will not be entitled to retain the homestead as exempt.[118] Moreover, in several of the states (as, Georgia, Pennsylvania, and Indiana) the exemption law provides that a debtor shall forfeit his right to the exemption ordinarily allowed, if he is guilty of willful fraud in concealing from his creditors any part of the property of which he is possessed at the time he seeks the benefit of the exemption. Since the bankruptcy law gives to a bankrupt exactly what is exempted by the law of the state of his domicile, no more and no less, it follows that, in states where this rule prevails, a bankrupt who does not make a full and fair disclosure of all the property owned by him at the time of filing his petition in bankruptcy is not entitled to have any exemption set apart to him by his trustee in bankruptcy.[119] And where the amount

R. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 13,071; Fisher v. Henderson, 8 N. B. R. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 4,820; Penny v. Taylor, 10 N. B. R. 200, Fed. Cas. No. 10,957; In re Peterson, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 215; Hatcher v. Crew, 83 Va. 371, 5 S. E. 221; Vogler v. Montgomery, 54 Mo. 577. And see In re Denson, 195 Fed. 857, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

115 In re Denson, 195 Fed. 857, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 162.

116 In re Parker, 5 Sawy. 58, 18 N. B. R. 43, Fed. Cas. No. 10,724; Pratt v. Burr, 5 Biss. 36, Fed Cas. No. 11,372.

117 In re Gerber, 186 Fed. 693, 108 C. C. A. 511, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Majors (D. C.) 241 Fed. 538, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 642; Kangas v. Robie (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 92, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 209.

118 In re Boothroyd, 14 N. B. R. 223, Fed. Cas. No. 1,652.

119 In re Rice, 164 Fed. 589, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; In re Dobbs, 172 Fed. 682, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; In re Schafer, 151 Fed. 505, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361; In re Alex, 141 Fed. 483, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 450; In re Cochran, 185 Fed. 913, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 459; In re Leverton, 155 Fed. 925, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 426; In re Sussman, 183 Fed. 331, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 909; In re Boorstin, 114 Fed. 696, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 89; In re Stephens, 114 Fed. 192, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 53; In re Williamson, 114 Fed. 190, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 42; In re West, 116 Fed. 767, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564; In re Waxelbaum, 101 Fed. 228, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 120; In re Woollcott, 140 Fed. 460, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 386; In re Simon & Sternberg, 151 Fed. 507, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; In re Hadden (D. C.) 242 Fed. 284, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 24; In re Powell (D. C.) 230 Fed. 316, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 367; In re Collins (D. C.) 213 Fed. 543; In re Anderson (D. C.) 224 Fed. 790, 35 Am.

of assets which he has concealed cannot be ascertained, the trustee should not allow his personal property exemption until all of the personal property has been accounted for.[120] But while courts of bankruptcy proceed on equitable principles, and will not sustain a positive fraud committed by the bankrupt in an endeavor to extend his exemptions, any more than it would be sustained by a court of equity,[121] yet it is only for gross fault on the part of the bankrupt that a claim for exemptions should be denied.[122] Further, it is felt that such statutes as those just mentioned are penal in their character and ought not to be extended by a loose construction or by mere analogy.[123] Under the law in Georgia, for example, the courts restrict the forfeiture clause of the statute to the claim for a homestead exemption, and will not extend it to the three hundred dollar exemption.[124] So, the good faith of a debtor required by this statute consists in making a full and fair disclosure of his property, and a court of bankruptcy would not be justified in denying his exemption because of his fraud in other respects.[125] For instance, the fact that he squandered money in gambling and other wasteful practices does not establish such fraud as will deprive him of his exemptions.[126] Nor can he be denied the right to his homestead exemption because he once conveyed the land claimed to his wife in a vain attempt to evade a debt, where it was reconveyed prior to the bankruptcy proceedings and was scheduled by him as his property.[127]

It has also been held that a bankrupt who is a fugitive from justice, and who has failed to account to his trustee for a large amount of property in his hands, has no right, after years of acquiescence, to claim an exemption out of cash in the hands of the trustee, the proceeds of property sold by him.[128] And a bankrupt who has made way with the Bankr. Rep. 487; In re Liby (D. C.) 218 Fed. 90, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 312. If the law of the state contains no such provision as the one under consideration, the trustee in bankruptcy has no authority to make deductions from the exemptions of the bankrupt on the ground that he has concealed or has not surrendered part of his assets. In re Humphreays (D. C.) 221 Fed. 997, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 655.

120 In re Ansley Bros. (D. C.) 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457; In re Aronson (D. C.) 233 Fed. 1022.

121 In re Gerber, 186 Fed. 693, 108 C. C. A. 511, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608.

122 In re Irwin (D. C.) 177 Fed. 284, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Ziff (D. C.) 225 Fed. 323, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83.

123 Under the Florida law, a preferential payment by a bankrupt of a debt due to his wife will not justify a charge of an equal amount against the bankrupt's exemptions, unless he also conceals such payment. Libby v. Beverly (C. C. A.) 263 Fed. 63, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 605.

124 In re West, 116 Fed. 767, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 564.

125 In re Castleberry, 143 Fed. 1018, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159.

126 In re Berman, 165 Fed. 383, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 139.

127 In re Thompson, 115 Fed. 924, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 283.

128 In re Moyer, 15 Fed. 598.

greater part of his assets and gotten them out of the jurisdiction, cannot ask to have an exemption set apart to him out of such property as is in the court's possession.[129] It should also be noted that a bankrupt may lose his exemptions by abandoning his claim thereto or abandoning the premises occupied as a homestead.[130] And without denying the claim of exemptions in toto, it is proper to deduct from the sum allowed by the state law any cash which the bankrupt has converted to his own use after the filing of the petition and before the property is taken into the custody of the court.[131]

§ 247. Abandonment and Waiver of Exemptions.—A bankrupt may ordinarily abandon or waive his right to exemptions. Thus, where an owner of a business homestead assigned it for the benefit of creditors, and the assignee conducted the business, and the owner, for nearly two years and until adjudged a bankrupt, did not engage in any business in which the premises would have been useful to him, it was held that he could not then claim the property as a business homestead.[132] So, where a debtor's stock in trade was destroyed by fire shortly before his bankruptcy, and he wrote to his creditors promising to apply the insurance money on their claims as far as it would go, as soon as he collected it, but instead of so doing he invested the money in a piece of property, it was held that he had created an equitable lien on the fund, and that he could not, in his bankruptcy proceedings, claim the property as a homestead.[133] But merely because a bankrupt lists in his schedule of assets a particular item of property which is exempt, such as an insurance policy, he does not thereby waive the exemption.[134] But he will be deemed to have abandoned or waived his right to exemptions when he fails to assert it and make claim for what the state law allows him in due and proper time, unless it appears that the omission resulted from mere oversight, misunderstanding, or inattention, or in consequence of the trustee's unjustifiable demand for a bond of indemnity.[135] This, however, relates to claiming the exemption in the bank-

[129] In re Taylor, 114 Fed. 607, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 410.

[130] In re Mayer, 108 Fed. 599, 47 C. C. A. 512, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 117; In re Baughman, 183 Fed. 668, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 167. See In re Crocker (D. C.) 217 Fed. 167, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

[131] In re Ansley Bros., 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

[132] In re Martin (D. C.) 214 Fed. 1012.

[133] Parlin & Orendorff Implement Co. v. Moulden, 228 Fed. 111, 142 C. C. A. 517, L. R. A. 1917B, 130, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 782.

[134] King v. Miles, 108 Miss. 732, 67 South. 182.

[135] In re Webb (D. C.) 219 Fed. 349, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204; In re Stern (D. C.) 208 Fed. 488, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694; In re Strauch (D. C.) 208 Fed. 842, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 36; In re Exum (D. C.) 209 Fed. 716, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 691; Sutman v. Hogsett, 70 Pa. Super. Ct. 180; In re Brown, 100 Fed. 441, 4

ruptcy proceedings. A waiver or abandonment of it may also result from failure to comply with what the state law prescribes as necessary. But a bankrupt is not precluded from claiming a homestead as exempt because prior to the adjudication he had failed to designate the same under the state laws, if he perfects his claim thereunder within a reasonable time after claiming the homestead.[136] And where the law of the state provides that a debtor who makes a deed of trust in the nature of an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and omits to claim in the deed the exemption to which he is entitled under the state law, loses his right to such exemption, a debtor who has taken such action and is afterwards adjudged a bankrupt is nevertheless entitled to claim his exemptions, because the bankruptcy proceeding strikes down the deed of trust, and the court of bankruptcy deals with the estate as though no such deed had been made.[137]

Moreover, by the laws in force in many of the states, it is the privilege of a debtor to waive the benefit of the exemption law with respect to any particular debt, and usually by a written agreement to that effect. Such a waiver constitutes a contract, and when once given is irrevocable. It will be recognized in the bankruptcy proceedings, and will affect particular property in the hands of the trustee before setting it apart to the bankrupt, or in the hands of the latter after allotment.[138] But it is said that the court of bankruptcy should not uphold a bankrupt's claim of homestead exemption, where that would merely enable him to prefer one of several creditors for whose benefit he had waived the exemption.[139] And although it is the right of the bankrupt to surrender or waive the right of exemption in favor of general creditors or execution creditors, or in favor of the trustee in bankruptcy as the rep-

Am. Bankr. Rep. 46; In re Osborn, 104 Fed. 780, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 111; Harrelson v. Webb, 124 La. 1007, 50 South. 833, 134 Am. St. Rep. 529; In re Eash, 157 Fed. 996, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 738; In re Maxson, 170 Fed. 356, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 424. And see Meyer v. Perkins (Cal. App.) 130 Pac. 206.

136 Brandt v. Mayhew, 218 Fed. 422, 134 C. C. A. 210, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845.

137 In re Gorman (D. C.) 226 Fed. 361, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 638; In re Dautz (D. C.) 272 Fed. 348.

138 In re Hoover, 113 Fed. 136, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 330; Sharp v. Woolsware, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 251; First Nat. Bank v. Bartlett, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 593; In re Pfeiffer, 155 Fed. 892, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 230; Citizens' Bank v. Hargraves, 164 Fed. 613, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 323; Jackson v. Edwards, 136 Ga. 888, 72 S. E. 341; In re Harber, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 449. But see In re Garner, 115 Fed. 200, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263. Under a statute which, in case of a sale in bulk of a stock of merchandise, makes the purchaser responsible for the application of the purchase price on the seller's debts, the seller by making such sale must be deemed to have assented to such application, and on his adjudication as a bankrupt he cannot claim his statutory exemptions out of the money due from the purchaser. In re Connor, 146 Fed. 998, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 784.

139 In re Anderson (D. C.) 224 Fed. 790, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

resentative of all creditors, he should not be permitted to do so as against a mortgagee in good faith and for value who, under his mortgage, has succeeded to the bankrupt's title and interest.[140]

In regard to landed property which constitutes the debtor's homestead, the waiver may be made in the form of a mortgage upon it. This will of course give a specific lien on the property, which must be respected and enforced in the subsequent bankruptcy of the mortgagor, provided it is otherwise valid; and a creditor so situated will be required to exhaust the mortgage security before coming upon the general estate of the bankrupt.[141] So also, a discharge in bankruptcy does not release the lien of a judgment obtained within four months prior to the adjudication on a note waiving the homestead exemption allowed by the state laws.[142] But where a creditor's attempt to collect a note containing a waiver of exemptions results in giving him an unlawful preference, which is frustrated by the proceedings in bankruptcy, the waiver will fall with the preference.[143] And a creditor holding a judgment-note against the bankrupt, but who has not reduced his note to judgment, is not entitled to take advantage of a waiver of exemptions provided in such note.[144] It should also be observed that a waiver of the debtor's statutory exemption in favor of a particular creditor does not inure to the benefit of the trustee in bankruptcy, nor confer any special rights upon the other creditors, nor operate in their favor so as to throw the whole property, exempt and unexempt, open to the satisfaction of their claims, nor will it prevent the bankrupt from claiming any balance of the exemption which may remain after the discharge of the particular debt as to which the waiver of exemption was made.[145]

§ 248. Same; Rights and Remedies of Creditors Holding Waivers. —The fact that the obligation evidencing the debt due to a particular creditor contains a waiver of the benefit of the exemption laws does not create any such lien on specific property as will be preserved by the bankruptcy act,[146] nor does it make that creditor a "secured" creditor, within the meaning of the law.[147] It merely gives him an individual [140] In re French (D. C.) 231 Fed. 255, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

[141] In re Sauthoff, 7 Biss. 167, 14 N. B. R. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 12,379.

[142] McKenney v. Cheney, 118 Ga. 387, 45 S. E. 433; Smith v. Zachry, 121 Ga. 467, 49 S. E. 286.

[143] In re Bolinger, 108 Fed. 374, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171.

[144] In re Brown, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 230.

[145] In re Nye, 133 Fed. 33, 66 C. C. A. 139, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 142; Hallman v. Hallman, 124 Pa. St. 347, 16 Atl. 871; Hall v. Fulgham, 86 Tenn. 451, 7 S. W. 121; In re Poleman, 5 Biss. 526, 9 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 11,247; In re Becker, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 202.

[146] In re Moran, 105 Fed. 901, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Hopkins, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 71; Coffey v. Mitchell, 139 Ga. 430, 77 S. E. 561.

[147] First Nat. Bank v. Hollinsworth, 78 Iowa, 575, 43 N. W. 536, 6 L. R. A. 92.

right of recourse against the property which is or will be set apart to the bankrupt as his exemption.[148] And even this right must be worked out independently of the proceedings in bankruptcy. Since the debtor's exempt property does not vest in the trustee, the court of bankruptcy has nothing to do with it except to allot and set it apart to the bankrupt. Before it is so ascertained and set apart, it is in the temporary possession and control of the trustee and therefore in the custody of the law, and a creditor having recourse against it by virtue of a waiver will not be allowed to attach it or levy an execution on i,,[149] alhough, where he holds a mortgage waiving exemptions and coupled with a delegation of authority to him to select the exempt property, which is permitted under the law of the particular state, the mortgagee will be entitled to select and hold the property which the bankrupt might otherwise have chosen as his exemption.[150] Also it is held that where the bankrupt's exemption is to be set apart to him, not in the form of specific articles of property, but as so much out of a fund in court realized from the sale of his assets, the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine the claims of creditors holding waivers and to order their payment out of the sum which otherwise would have been turned over to the bankrupt.[151] But this is nearly as far as its authority can be made to extend. When the bankrupt has no other property except such as is exempt under the state law, or when the property which he is entitled to hold as exempt has been set apart to him, or is definitely ascertained and ready for relinquishment to him, then the court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction or authority to retain the possession or control of such property for the purpose of administering it for the benefit of creditors holding waivers, or of adjudicating and enforcing their claims against it.[152] Such creditors must therefore obtain their redress in the state 148 Scott v. Cheatham, 78 Va. 82.

149 Byrd v. Harrold, 18 N. B. R. 433, Fed. Cas. No. 2,269; In re Sorg, 155 Fed. 550. See In re MacKissic, 171 Fed. 259, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 817.

150 In re National Grocer Co. (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 33, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360.

151 In re MacKissic, 171 Fed. 259, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 817; In re Highfield, 163 Fed. 924, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92; In re Renda, 149 Fed. 614, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521; In re Sloan, 135 Fed. 873, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435. Compare In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re Goldberg (D. C.) 254 Fed. 440, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

152 Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, 190 U. S. 294, 23 Sup. Ct. 751, 47 L. Ed. 1061, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; In re Remmerde, 206 Fed. 822, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; In re Batten, 170 Fed. 688; Bell v. Dawson Grocery Co., 120 Ga. 628, 48 S. E. 150; In re Black, 104 Fed. 289, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 776; Woodruff v. Cheeves, 105 Fed. 601, 44 C. C. A. 631, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 296; In re Moore, 112 Fed. 289, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285; In re Swords, 112 Fed. 661, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 436; In re Hill, 96 Fed. 185, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 798; In re Camp, 91 Fed. 745, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Bass, 3 Woods, 382, 15 N. B. R. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 1,091; In re Haas (D. C.) 213 Fed. 694, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 284; In re Cheatham (D. C.) 210 Fed. 370, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520; In re Anderson (D. C.)

courts. To enable them to do this, the court of bankruptcy may stay the proceedings in bankruptcy until the rights of such creditors shall have been determined in the proper forum,[153] or withhold the bankrupt's discharge (the granting of which would extinguish the debt) until the waiver creditors have opportunity to resort to such remedies as may be granted by the state courts,[154] and the bankruptcy court will not enjoin such a creditor from prosecuting an attachment suit in a state court against property claimed by the bankrupt as exempt, or at any rate, not longer than until the property shall have been set apart as exempt by the trustee.[155]

As to the nature of the creditor's remedy in the state courts there has been some difference of opinion, diverse rules being established in the two states where these questions seem chiefly to have arisen, viz., Georgia and Pennsylvania. In the former state, the Supreme Court has reached the conclusion that the creditor holding a waiver has no remedy at law, not being allowed to sue the debtor while the proceedings in bankruptcy are pending. But he has a remedy in equity, by means of a bill praying a special decree (in the nature of a judgment in rem) against the exempt property, together with the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the property if it is perishable or in danger of being wasted, and also an injunction to forbid the debtor from demanding and receiving it from the hands of his trustee in bankruptcy.[156] And the creditor is not precluded from taking this course by the fact 224 Fed. 790, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; Schexnailder v. Fontenot, 147 La. 467, 85 South. 207. There have been a number of decisions of the federal courts contrary to the rule stated in the text, but they are inconsistent with the decision in Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, supra. See In re Sisler, 96 Fed. 402, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760; In re Poleman, 5 Biss. 526, 9 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 11,247; In re Garden, 93 Fed. 423, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582; In re Graves, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 469; In re Bragg, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 82; In re Solomon, 2 Hughes, 164, 10 N. B. R. 9, Fed. Cas. No. 13,166; In re Judkins, 2 Hughes, 401, Fed. Cas. No. 7,560.

[153] In re W. C. Allen & Co., 154 Fed. 620, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518.

[154] Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, 190 U. S. 294, 23 Sup. Ct. 751, 47 L. Ed. 1061, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 107; Bell v. Dawson Grocery Co., 120 Ga. 628, 48 S. E. 150; H. S. Meinhard & Bro. v. Pincus (C. C. A.) 200 Fed. 736, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619.

[155] B. F. Roden Grocery Co. v. Bacon, 133 Fed. 515, 66 C. C. A. 497, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 251.

[156] Fidelity Produce Co. v. Perdue, 134 Ga. 778, 68 S. E. 503; Arnwine v. Beaver, 134 Ga. 377, 67 S. E. 937; Perry v. Britt-Carson Shoe Co., 129 Ga. 560, 59 S. E. 216, 121 Am. St. Rep. 232; Bell v. Dawson Grocery Co., 120 Ga. 628, 48 S. E. 150; Hudson v. Lamar, Taylor & Riley Drug Co., 121 Ga. 835, 49 S. E. 735; Wright v. Horne, 123 Ga. 86, 51 S. E. 30; Brandt v. Hofmayer Dry Goods Co., 146 Ga. 649, 92 S. E. 53. A judgment on three notes, one of which was usurious, and all of which waived homestead exemption, was held enforceable against property set apart as exempt in bankruptcy for the amount of the two notes not affected by usury, the waiver in the usurious note being invalid. Floyd v. Johnson, 142 Ga. 833, 83 S. E. 943.

that he filed his claim in the court of bankruptcy and had notice of the setting apart of the exemption and did not object thereto.[157] In Pennsylvania, on the strength of the doctrine that the title to exempt property never vests in the trustee in bankruptcy, it is held that a judgment creditor holding a waiver may have the sheriff levy upon and sell the exempt property at any time before the final discharge of the bankrupt,[158] but he must first file his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings.[159]

Where a debtor has waived his right of exemption as to one of his creditors, but not as to others, the equitable principle of marshalling assets will require the creditor having a right to resort to the exempt property to exhaust his remedies against that fund before coming upon the general estate of the debtor in competition with the creditors who have no such rights against the exempt estate.[160] Where a bankrupt assigns a fund in the hands of his trustee in bankruptcy which has been set apart to him under his exemption claim, and notice of such assignment is given to the trustee and also to the attorney of a creditor of the bankrupt who subsequently issued an attachment against the fund under a judgment waiving exemption, the assignee has priority in the distribution of the fund over the attaching creditor, and the attachment will be dissolved.[161]

§ 249. Liens on and Claims Against Exempt Property.—Proceedings in bankruptcy do not destroy existing liens on the bankrupt's exempt property. On the contrary, such liens, attaching before the commencement of the proceedings, and whether created by legal proceedings or by the act of the debtor, follow the property into the bankruptcy and are not obliterated or extinguished by the setting apart to him of such property as exempt,[162] nor by his discharge in bankrupt-

[157] Jackson v. Edwards, 136 Ga. 888, 72 S. E. 341.

[158] First Nat. Bank of Sayre v. Bartlett, 35 Pa. Super. Ct. 593; Greenfield v. Golder, 42 Pa. Super. Ct. 462. But see In re Gunzberger (D. C.) 268 Fed. 673, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690, holding that a creditor in whose favor the debtor had before bankruptcy waived exemption, and who had secured an execution lien upon the property within four months before bankruptcy, cannot claim under his lien on the exempt property, which alone was unaffected by the bankruptcy proceedings, the difference in money between the value of the exempt property claimed by the bankrupt and the $300 allowed by the state law, since he cannot follow the proceeds of exempt property, any more than the bankrupt himself could.

[159] Claster v. Soble, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 631.

[160] Hallman v. Hallman, 124 Pa. 347, 16 Atl. 871; Shelley's Appeal, 36 Pa. 373; In re Sauthoff, 7 Biss. 167, Fed. Cas. No. 12,379.

[161] La Barre v. Doney, 53 Pa. Super. Ct. 435.

[162] Kener v. La Grange Mills, 231 U. S. 215, 34 Sup. Ct. 83, 58 L. Ed. 189; In re Lightstone (D. C.) 253 Fed. 456, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619; In re J. E. Maynard & Co., 183 Fed. 823, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732; Northern Shoe Co. v. Cecka, 22 N. D. 631, 135 N. W. 177; Powers Dry Goods Co. v. Nelson, 10 N. D. 580, 88 N. W. 703, 58 L. R. A. 770; Dozier v.

cy.[163] This, of course, is on the assumption that the lien would have been valid if attaching to other property. For a lien by attachment, garnishment, etc., which is avoided by the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt within four months after its creation, is none the less avoided because it concerns or attaches to exempt property.[164] Granting this premise, the mortgaging of exempt property to a creditor is not against public policy, and a mortgage of such property, good against the debtor under the law of the state, will be good as against his trustee in bankruptcy.[165] And it is no defense to an action to foreclose a mortgage that the mortgaged premises were allotted to the mortgagor as a homestead by proceedings in the court of bankruptcy.[166] But if a mortgage covers an aggregate of property, only a part of which is exempt from execution, and its lien is avoided by the subsequent institution of proceedings in bankruptcy, and the bankrupt waives his right of exemption, the lien is divested as to all the property, for the mortgagee cannot claim for the debtor a benefit which he waives for himself.[167] And one taking a mortgage on a parcel of land claimed as a homestead, after a decree declaring that it is not exempt as such, may be summarily ordered to release his security, and without the formality of a plenary proceeding at law or in equity.[168]

The extent of the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy over exempt property on which creditors claim liens has been involved in some confusion and uncertainty. But it may be said, in the first place, that the mere fact that homestead or other exempt property has been mortgaged to certain creditors does not make it assets to be administered

McWhorter, 113 Ga. 584, 39 S. E. 106; Currier v. King, 81 Vt. 285, 69 Atl. 873; Gregory Co. v. Cale, 115 Minn. 508, 133 N. W. 75, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 156; Newberry Shoe Co. v. Collier, 111 Va. 288, 68 S. E. 974; Thole v. Watson, 6 Mo. App. 592; Dixon v. Lawson, 65 Ga. 661; Hiley v. Bridges, 60 Ga. 375; Bush v. Lester, 55 Ga. 579, 15 N. B. R. 36; Robinson v. Wilson, 15 Kan. 595, 22 Am. Rep. 272, 14 N. B. R. 565. In granting an exemption to a bankrupt, the court will order that it shall not affect or prejudice the wife's rights to alimony chargeable upon real estate claimed as a homestead. In re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 235, 11 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252.

[163] Long v. Bullard, 117 U. S. 617, 6 Sup. Ct. 917, 29 L. Ed. 1004; In re Weaver (D. C.) 144 Fed. 229, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 265; Fowler v. Wood, 26 S. C. 169, 1 S. E. 597; Watters v. Hedgpeth, 172 N. C. 310, 90 S. E. 314; F. Mayer Boot & Shoe Co. v. Ferguson, 19 N. D. 496, 126 N. W. 110. Compare Groves v. Osburn, 46 Or. 173, 79 Pac. 500.

[164] Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Hall, 229 U. S. 511, 33 Sup. Ct. 885, 57 L. Ed. 1306, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619; Southern Pacific Co. v. I. X. L. Furniture & Carpet Installment House, 44 Utah, 472, 140 Pac. 665. Compare Bank of Mendon v. Mell, 185 Mo. App. 510, 172 S. W. 484.

[165] In re National Grocer Co. (C. C. A.) 181 Fed. 33, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 360; In re Bitner, 255 Fed. 48, 166 C. C. A. 376, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 175.

[166] Brady v. Brady, 71 Ga. 71; Brown v. Hoover, 77 N. C. 40.

[167] In re Schuller, 108 Fed. 591, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 278. And see In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

[168] In re Boothroyd, 15 N. B. R. 368, Fed. Cas. No. 1,653.

in bankruptcy.[169] And a court of bankruptcy has no authority to allot the bankrupt's exemption in specie, or order the payment of the amount of his exemption in money, to a mortgagee or to any one but the bankrupt himself.[170] Yet as the court has jurisdiction to "determine the claims of bankrupts to their exemptions," it has power to decide questions incidental thereto and hence may, in a proper case, adjudicate the question whether or not a legal or equitable lien claimed by a creditor upon exempt property is valid.[171] And, to do justice to all concerned, where it is necessary to send the creditor to the state court for relief, the court of bankruptcy may so far aid him as to withhold the granting of a discharge to the bankrupt until the creditor shall have been afforded a reasonable opportunity to test his rights,[172] or direct the trustee in bankruptcy to hold the fund out of which the exemption is claimed until proceedings to determine the right thereto can be instituted in a court of competent jurisdiction.[173] But the court has no authority to hold in custody the exempt property of a bankrupt to await the determination of an action in tort against him in a state court, since his discharge would not be a bar to a recovery therein.[174] Neither will it entertain the bankrupt's petition for an injunction to restrain a creditor from selling the exempt property on an execution issued before the bankruptcy, the remedy, if any, being in the state court.[175] Where a homestead exemption is claimed out of property of larger value than the limit of the exemption as fixed by the state law, or where the lien of a creditor covers both exempt and non-exempt property, the circumstances of the case may make it proper for the bankruptcy court to partition the property, incidentally adjudging the creditor's lien to attach to the specific parcel set apart as exempt, or to order its sale as a whole and satisfy the lien-creditor out of the proceeds.[176] Or, if the homestead has been sold under foreclosure of a mortgage upon it, and it is thought that the property is more valuable than the amount 169 In re Bailey, 176 Fed. 990, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201; In re Sinnett, 4 Sawy. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 12,907.

170 In re Blanchard & Howard, 161 Fed. 797, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 422; In re Paramore & Ricks, 156 Fed. 211, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 130.

171 In re Lucius, 124 Fed. 455, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653; Smalley v. Laugenour, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786. Compare In re Little, 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681.

172 In re Brumbaugh, 128 Fed. 971, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204. See In re Tune, 115 Fed. 906, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 285.

173 In re Castleberry, 143 Fed. 1018, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 159.

174 In re Hartsell & Son, 140 Fed. 30, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 177.

175 In re Hunt, 5 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 6,883; In re Pohlig (D. C.) 236 Fed. 606, 38 Am. Bankr. Rep. 2.

176 In re Gordon, 115 Fed. 445, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255; In re Thomas, 96 Fed. 828, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99; In re Betts, 4 Dill. 93, 15 N. B. R. 536, Fed. Cas. No. 1,371; Blood v. Munn, 155 Cal. 228, 100 Pac. 694; In re Stout, 109 Fed. 794, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 505. But compare Ingram v. Wilson, 125 Fed. 913, 60 C. C. A. 618, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192.

allowed by the state law as exempt, the court may authorize the trustee in bankruptcy to redeem from the foreclosure, and in that case the bankrupt will have the same right to redeem from the trustee that he would have had to redeem from the foreclosure purchaser.[177] A mortgage covering both exempt and non-exempt property, and which constitutes an unlawful preference, is voidable by the mortgagor's trustee in bankruptcy only as to the non-exempt property.[178] But the law will not sanction any dishonest attempt on the part of the debtor to reduce the indebtedness on his homestead at the expense of his general creditors. Hence, where it appeared that the debtor, shortly before filing his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and in contemplation thereof, had sold property which was not exempt from execution and applied the proceeds in part payment of a debt secured by a mortgage on property claimed to be exempt as a homestead, it was held that the transaction was in fraud of the bankruptcy law, and that the trustee in bankruptcy, for the benefit of the creditors, should be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee to the extent of the money so paid.[179] But generally, when the trustee has set apart property to the bankrupt as exempt, and his action has been approved, and the bankrupt has taken possession, such property passes out of the jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy, and that court cannot thereafter entertain proceedings either to defend the property against adverse claims or liens or to subject it to liens or adjudicate the rights of claimants thereto.[180]

But the state courts have jurisdiction to enforce any specific lien upon exempt property of a bankrupt,[181] and proceedings for the foreclosure of a mortgage on property which the bankrupt claims as a homestead should be brought against the bankrupt himself, and not against his trustee.[182] On the other hand, the action of a federal court in bankruptcy in setting apart to a bankrupt the exemption which the state law allows him has exactly the same effect as if it had been granted and allowed by the proper state court in a proceeding before it, and the property is not any more subject to levy and sale on the part of subsequent creditors in the one case than in the other.[183]

[177] Swenson v. Halberg, 1 McCrary, 96, 1 Fed. 444.

[178] In re Bailey, 176 Fed. 990, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 201; Morris v. Covey (Ark.) 148 S. W. 257.

[179] In re Boston, 98 Fed. 587, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 388. But compare In re Henkel, 2 Sawy. 305, Fed. Cas. No. 6,362. And see In re Jackson, 116 Fed. 46, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594.

[180] In re Little, 110 Fed. 621, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re Hatch, 102 Fed. 289; Bogart v. Cowboy State Bank & Trust Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 182 S. W. 678. But see In re Hassler, 204 Fed. 139, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 502.

[181] Robinson v. Wilson, 15 Kan. 595, 22 Am. Rep. 272.

[182] Dendel v. Sutton, 20 Fed. 787.

[183] Smith v. Zachry, 115 Ga. 722, 42 S. E. 102; Evans v. Rounsaville, 115 Ga.

§ 250. Same; Claims for Unpaid Purchase Money.—In several states it is provided by law that the grant of an exemption of property to a debtor shall not prevail as against a claim for the unpaid purchase money of the property in question. Where this is the case, the debtor's rights are not enlarged by his adjudication in bankruptcy. The federal statute was not intended to override a provision of this character. On the contrary, it adopts the state exemption law as a whole, and therefore, in such states, a bankrupt cannot claim to have property set apart to him as exempt when he has not paid for it.[184] But as the exemption law is a remedial and beneficial statute, any exception to it should be construed with some strictness. Hence it is held that an indebtedness for borrowed money which was used in the purchase of the property claimed as exempt is not an "obligation contracted for its purchase," within the meaning of the state law,[185] and that a bankrupt is entitled to goods exempted by the state statute, although they were paid for out of the proceeds of goods which were not paid for.[186] Moreover the particular creditor, to be entitled to object to the bankrupt's claim, must have taken the steps required by the state law, such as reducing his claim to a judgment.[187] And the unpaid creditor is the only proper person to raise the objection, not the trustee in bankruptcy.[188] An allowance of exemptions in bankruptcy out of a stock of 684, 42 S. E. 100; Collier v. Simpson, 74 Ga. 697; Murphey v. Smith, 16 Ga. App. 472, 85 S. E. 791.

184 Mullinix v. Simon, 196 Fed. 775, 116 C. C. A. 399, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1; Cannon v. Dexter Broom & Mattress Co., 120 Fed. 657, 57 C. C. A. 119, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724; McGahan v. Anderson, 113 Fed. 115, 51 C. C. A. 92, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; In re Wells, 105 Fed. 762, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308; In re Perdue, 2 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 10,975; In re Whitehead, 2 N. B. R. 599, Fed. Cas. No. 17,562; In re Brown, 3 N. B. R. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 1,980; Camp v. Young, 119 Ga. 981, 47 S. E. 560; In re Peacock, 203 Fed. 191, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 179. See In re Hammonds, 198 Fed. 574, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811; In re Phillips (D. C.) 209 Fed. 490, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 597; In re Nunemaker (D. C.) 208 Fed. 491, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; Sheridan State Bank v. Rowell (D. C.) 212 Fed. 529; Pace v. Berry, 176 Ky. 61, 195 S. W. 131.

185 In re Bailes, 176 Fed. 460, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 789.

186 In re Tobias, 103 Fed. 68, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; Peyton v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Hillsboro (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 326, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 295.

187 In re Butler, 120 Fed. 100, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 539. As regards superiority to a claim of homestead exemption, an alternative judgment for the money value of property, in an action of tort such as trover, is not a "judgment for purchase money," purchase money being the original debt or consideration which the purchaser agrees to pay for a thing in money. Williams v. American Slicing Mach. Co., 148 Ga. 770, 98 S. E. 270.

188 In re Boyd, 120 Fed. 999, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337. But see In re Campbell, 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723. And compare In re Stitt, 252 Fed. 1, 164 C. C. A. 113, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777, holding that where the bankrupt proved that he was a married man living with his wife and not the owner of a homestead, when filing his claim for exemption under the laws of Ohio, the burden was then on the trustee in bankruptcy to show affirmatively that personalty in question had not been paid for by the bankrupt, and hence was subject to prior claims for the purchase price.

goods cannot be defeated on the theory that the stock being made up by commingling goods paid for with goods not paid for, must be treated as a unit, and that since it is not all paid for no part of it can be exempted, or that, since the assets are less than the liabilities, presumably nothing has been paid for, but in this case it is for the creditor to point out the items not paid for.[189] But the fact that property claimed as exempt is in this situation,—with a demand for unpaid purchase money standing against it,—does not bring such property within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, nor entitle the creditor to have the trustee take possession of it and administer it for his benefit,[190] nor has the creditor a right to enforce his vendor's lien in the court of bankruptcy,[191] but the trustee will be directed to surrender the property to the bankrupt in order that it may be taken on attachment or other process from the state court,[192] and the fact that the goods in question have been set apart to the bankrupt as exempt is no ground for quashing an attachment in an action for their price.[193] In some states, however, it is held that the remedy of a creditor in this situation is in equity.[194]

§ 251. Jurisdiction of Bankruptcy Court.—The jurisdiction of a court of bankruptcy to "determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions," and to set apart to them the property which they are entitled to claim as exempt, includes the consideration of preliminary questions as to the right of the bankrupt to claim the property and as to whether he has taken the steps required by the state law to make his [189] In re Rippa, 180 Fed. 603. But compare In re Tobias, 103 Fed. 68, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555. Where a bankrupt bought a stock of goods with borrowed money, and also incurred debts for goods purchased to renew the stock, he was not entitled to exemptions as against creditors for the goods so purchased but only as against the claimants for borrowed money. In re Stern (D. C.) 208 Fed. 488, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 694.

[190] In re Seydel, 118 Fed. 207, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255. See In re Boyd, 120 Fed. 999, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337. While the bankruptcy court will follow and adopt the statutes of the state as construed by its highest courts in determining the nature and extent of a bankrupt's exemptions, still the manner in which such exemptions are to be claimed, set apart, and awarded is regulated by the federal courts as a matter of procedure in the course of bankruptcy administration. In re Moore (D. C.) 274 Fed. 645.

[191] In re Wells, 105 Fed. 762, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 308. Since the title to a homestead exempt under state laws remains in the bankrupt, and does not pass except for the purpose of ascertaining his homestead right therein, the bankruptcy court may not order a sale of it because a vendor has a right under the state law to subject the homestead to the payment of a purchase-money note, but the vendor must prosecute his claim in the proper state court. Hughes v. Sebastian County Bank, 129 Ark. 218, 195 S. W. 364.

[192] In re Durham, 104 Fed. 231, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

[193] Northern Shoe Co. v. Cecka, 22 N. D. 631, 135 N. W. 177.

[194] Brooks v. Britt-Carson Shoe Co., 133 Ga. 191, 65 S. E. 411.

claim effective,[195] and the action of the trustee in setting apart property to the bankrupt as exempt is not final, but is subject to the determination of the court on the application of the bankrupt or any party in interest,[196] such jurisdiction being exercised originally by the referee, but subject to review by the judge if desired by the bankrupt or the creditors.[197] This jurisdiction to determine claims to exemptions is exclusive, and in the performance of this duty the court of bankruptcy will not be interfered with by any other court, nor can any independent proceedings in a state court for the same purpose be lawfully taken.[198] A wrongful allowance by the bankruptcy court of the property claimed as exempt by the bankrupt cannot be remedied in the state courts.[199] Nor can the order of the court of bankruptcy in that behalf be collaterally questioned. Where the trustee sells property to which the bankrupt had title at the time of the adjudication, no state court can entertain any inquiry as to whether such property was exempt to the bankrupt.[200] Furthermore the general opinion appears to be that the action of the court of bankruptcy has the same effect, in removing specific property from the reach of ordinary judicial process, that would attend the judgment of a state court setting apart such property as exempt, under the course of procedure prescribed by the state statute.[201]

But when once the bankrupt's exempt property has been designated and set apart to him by the trustee in bankruptcy, with the approval of the court, it has been administered, so far as the proceedings in bankruptcy are concerned, and passes out of the control of the bankruptcy court, and thereafter such court has no jurisdiction either to defend such property from adverse claims or liens or to enforce liens or claims against it.[202] But it is the duty of the court to see that the bankrupt's

[195] In re Highfield, 163 Fed. 924, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 92.

[196] In re White, 103 Fed. 774, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 613.

[197] In re Dobbs, 175 Fed. 319, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 569.

[198] McGahan v. Anderson, 113 Fed. 115, 51 C. C. A. 92, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; In re Gibbs, 103 Fed. 782, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619; Smalley v. Laugenour, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786; In re Overstreet, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 408; In re Askew, 3 N. B. R. 575, Fed. Cas. No. 585; Woolfolk v. Murray, 44 Ga. 133, 10 N. B. R. 540.

[199] Brengle v. Richardson, 78 Va. 406.

[200] Steele v. Moody, 53 Ala. 418, 16 N. B. R. 558.

[201] Evans v. Rounsaville, 115 Ga. 684, 42 S. E. 100; Smith v. Zachry, 115 Ga. 722, 42 S. E. 102; Collier v. Simpson, 74 Ga. 697; Ross v. Worsham, 65 Ga. 624; Brady v. Brady, 71 Ga. 71. Compare Felker v. Crane, 70 Ga. 484; Adams v. Dickson, 72 Ga. 846; Youngblood v. Lathen, 20 S. C. 370.

[202] Sullivan v. Mussey (C. C. A.) 184 Fed. 60, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 781; In re Yeager, 182 Fed. 951, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; In re MacKissic, 171 Fed. 259, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 817; In re Culwell, 165 Fed. 828, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 614; In re Sorg, 155 Fed. 550; In re Reese, 115 Fed. 993, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411; In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; Jeffries v. Bartlett, 20 Fed. 496; In re Featherston, 3 Pittsb. 480, Fed. Cas. No. 4,753; King v. Neill, 26 Fed. 721; Phillips v. Bass, 65 Ga. 427; Lathrop v. Pate, 136 Ga. 36, 70 S. E.

exempt property is secured to him. If, for instance, such property is under an attachment at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, the lien of which is dissolved by the adjudication, the attaching creditor cannot hold the property on the theory that, being exempt, it is not subject to be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings. On the contrary, the court should require the officer having possession under the attachment to surrender the property to the trustee, in order that he may set it apart to the bankrupt.[203]

§ 252. Claim of Exemptions.—The bankruptcy law provides that the bankrupt must prepare, verify, and file in court "a claim for such exemptions as he may be entitled to."[204] The official form prescribed for a debtor's petition contains a recital that he is "willing to surrender all his property for the benefit of his creditors except such as is exempt by law," and the accompanying schedule is to contain "a particular statement of the property claimed as exempted from the operation of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, giving each item of property and its valuation, and, if any portion of it is real estate, its location, description, and present use."[205] It is the duty of the bankrupt, no less than his interest, to comply with these directions. While his right to 569; McKenney v. Cheney, 118 Ga. 387, 45 S. E. 433; Brooks v. Eblen, 106 S. W. 308, 32 Ky. Law Rep. 543; Powers Dry Goods Co. v. Nelson, 10 N. D. 580, 88 N. W. 703, 58 L. R. A. 770; Newberry Shoe Co. v. Collier, 111 Va. 288, 68 S. E. 974; Watters v. Hedgpeth, 172 N. C. 310, 90 S. E. 314; In re Elkin (D. C.) 218 Fed. 971, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 134.

[203] In re Stevens, 2 Biss. 373, 5 N. B. R. 298, Fed. Cas. No. 13,392.

[204] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, cl. 8.

[205] Form No. 1, Schedule B, 5. And see In re Duffy, 118 Fed. 926, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358; In re J. E. Maynard & Co., 183 Fed. 823, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 732; In re Irwin, 174 Fed. 642, 98 C. C. A. 396, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487; In re Kelly, 199 Fed. 984, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re Diamond, 158 Fed. 370, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 811. But it has been held that it is not necessary for the bankrupt to specify the articles specially claimed to be exempt, as the official form is not intended to be mandatory, but to be altered to suit the circumstances of the particular case. Burke v. Guarantee Title & Trust Co., 134 Fed. 562, 67 C. C. A. 486, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31. But a claim by a bankrupt of an exemption out of a stock of goods, claiming the stock in bulk, is not a sufficient compliance. In re Wilson, 108 Fed. 197, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 287. So, where a bankrupt is possessed of property capable of being divided, from which he could make his selection, he must do so in his schedule, and a claim to the exemption from "proceeds of personal property" to the amount limited is not sufficient. In re Donahey, 176 Fed. 458, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 796. So if a bankrupt includes in his schedule all his lands, claiming, as a homestead exemption therein, "real estate to the value of $500," but without designating any particular portion, it is a defect, but one which is amendable, and of which advantage cannot be taken in a subsequent collateral proceeding. Walker v. Carroll, 65 Ala. 61. As a claim for exemptions is sufficient if made generally under the exemption laws of the state, an allowance of exemptions properly made will not be set aside merely because the claim erroneously designated the statute meant to be referred to. In re Dittmar, 249 Fed. 606, 161 C. C. A. 532, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

exemptions must be deduced from the state law, yet his claim must be made at the time and in the manner pointed out by the bankruptcy law, which is exclusive and controlling on these points.[206] Ordinarily it is sufficient if he makes his claim to exemptions in his schedule, and an extension of time for filing the schedule will also extend the time for making such claim.[207] But a mere claim made by a bankrupt to his trustee, asserting a right to a homestead exemption, but not incorporated in the schedule nor allowed by the trustee or the court, will not be available against a purchaser of the property at the trustee's sale.[208] If the bankrupt makes an erroneous claim to property mentioned in the schedule as being exempt, it is the duty of the trustee to correct or disregard it.[209] It is of course in the power of the bankrupt to waive the exemption, and he will generally be taken to have done so if he omits to set up the claim in his schedule, either originally or by seasonable amendment,[210] and if he does not assert his privilege, it cannot be claimed by any one else. Thus, a mortgagee of the bankrupt cannot set up the latter's rights of exemption in the mortgaged property, in order to validate his mortgage against the charge that it constituted a preference or a fraudulent conveyance.[211] But the failure of the bankrupt to claim his exemptions in his original petition will not be taken as a waiver of his right afterwards to claim the property which is exempt, by an amendment properly filed, provided, of course, that the amendment can be allowed without causing any loss or injury to persons who have acquired rights in the property in question in conse-

[206] Lipman v. Stein, 134 Fed. 235, 67 C. C. A. 17, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; In re Andrews & Simonds, 193 Fed. 776, 27 Bankr. Rep. 116; In re Le Vay, 125 Fed. 990, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; In re Kane, 127 Fed. 552, 62 C. C. A. 616, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re W. S. Jennings & Co., 166 Fed. 639, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160; In re Burnham, 202 Fed. 762, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270. But compare In re Fisher, 142 Fed. 205, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 652; In re Garner, 115 Fed. 200, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 263; Northern Alabama Ry. Co. v. Feldman, 1 Ala. App. 334, 56 South. 16. In the Fisher Case, supra, it was held that the statute does not show an intent that the claim of exemption must have been made prior to adjudication, but such claim may be allowed if perfected thereafter within the time allowed by the state law. The only question to be determined on a bankrupt's application for his exemptions under the state law is whether he is entitled to the same against general creditors. In re Brumbaugh, 128 Fed. 971, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 204.

[207] In re O'Hara, 162 Fed. 325, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 714; Brandt v. Mayhew, 218 Fed. 422, 134 C. C. A. 210, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845; In re Brincat (D. C.) 233 Fed. 811, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 587.

[208] Steele v. Moody, 53 Ala. 418, 16 N. B. R. 558.

[209] In re Whetmore, Deady, 585, Fed. Cas. No. 17,508.

[210] In re Gerber, 186 Fed. 693, 108 C. C. A. 511, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 608; In re Moran, 105 Fed. 901, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Von Kerm, 135 Fed. 447, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 403; In re Harrington, 200 Fed. 1010, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 666.

[211] Mitchell v. Mitchell, 147 Fed. 280, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; Edmondson v. Hyde, 2 Sawy. 205, 7 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 4,285; In re French (D. C.) 231 Fed. 255, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

quence of the bankrupt's neglect seasonably to assert his claims,[212] and provided the amendment is asked in good faith and for the purpose contemplated by the law. Thus, it will be refused where it is avowedly sought for the purpose of preferring certain creditors to whom the bankrupt had given notes containing a waiver of the exemption law.[213] And such action can be taken only in the court of bankruptcy, which has, in the language of the statute, jurisdiction to "determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions." If a bankrupt, instead of incorporating a claim for his exemptions in his schedule, goes into a state court and there sets up a claim and has the exemption allowed, he will not be entitled to have the exemption set off to him by the trustee in bankruptcy on his filing a record of the proceedings in the state court.[214] And for even stronger reasons it is held that, if the bankrupt omits to claim his exemptions in the proceedings in bankruptcy, as required by the law, but allows the trustee to sell the property, he cannot afterwards assert his right to it as exempt in a proceeding to set aside the sale or in a suit against the purchaser.[215] But here it must be noted that the statute expressly grants to an involuntary bankrupt a period of ten days after the adjudication in which to claim his exemptions, and if such claim is made before the expiration of the ten days, it is in time, and the bankrupt cannot be deprived of his exemptions by the fact that, in [212] In re Fisher, 142 Fed. 205, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 652; In re Berman, 140 Fed. 761, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463; In re Moran, 105 Fed. 901, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 472; In re Kaufmann, 142 Fed. 898, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 118; In re White, 128 Fed. 513, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556; Goodman v. Curtis, 174 Fed. 644, 98 C. C. A. 398, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Harrington, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 513; In re Williams, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 419; In re Radcliffe (D. C.) 243 Fed. 716, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; In re Herrin & West (D. C.) 215 Fed. 250; In re Lenters (D. C.) 225 Fed. 878, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 3. As to diligence in claiming a homestead exemption, and as to perfecting such an exemption under the state law, after having claimed it in bankruptcy, see In re Burnham, 202 Fed. 762, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 270.

[213] Moran v. King, 111 Fed. 730, 49 C. C. A. 578, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 176; In re Merry, 201 Fed. 369, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 829.

[214] In re Nunn, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 427; Gayle v. Randall, 71 Ala. 469.

[215] In re Oderkirk, 103 Fed. 779, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617; In re Wunder, 133 Fed. 821, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 701; Steele v. Moody, 53 Ala. 418, 16 N. B. R. 558. But the right of the bankrupt to the property exempted by the law of the state is a fixed and determinate right, not dependent upon the discretion of the trustee and where it is claimed and illegally refused before the trustee's sale of the property, it may be asserted against the proceeds of the property while in the hands of the court for distribution. In re Jones, 2 Dill. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 7,445. And see In re Rodenhagen, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 674. Where the law of the state does not require that exemptions be claimed by way of selection before the sale of specific articles of personal property, a bankrupt who had been depending for an exemption out of the proceeds of a sale of the homestead, which proceeds however, did not cover the mortgage debts upon it, may claim his exemption out of the proceeds of personalty after its sale. In re Stitt, 252 Fed. 1, 164 C. C. A. 113, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 777. And see Smith v. Thompson, 213 Fed. 335, 129 C. C. A. 637, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165.

the meantime, the property has been sold and converted into money by a receiver in bankruptcy appointed at the time of filing the petition.[216] But while the bankrupt must claim his exemption as prescribed by the statute, a severance of the exempted articles or property is not to be made by the debtor before adjudication, but by the trustee when appointed; and the valuation of exempt property is to be made in the first instance by the trustee. The bankruptcy act, while allowing to debtors the exemptions provided by the state law, itself regulates the manner in which such exemptions are to be claimed, set apart, and awarded.[217]

§ 253. Setting Apart Exempt Property.—It is made the duty of trustees in bankruptcy to "set apart the bankrupt's exemptions and report the items and estimated value thereof to the court as soon as practicable after their appointment." [218] This provision of the statute is mandatory and the duties which it enjoins upon the trustee cannot be performed by any one else.[219] And where a claim has been duly and properly made for the exemption allowed by the law of the state, the trustee has no right or power to refuse to set the property apart. If he persists in selling the property, the court has jurisdiction to award the proceeds to the bankrupt.[220] There are some cases, however, where no trustee is appointed. Omission to appoint a trustee is authorized by General Order No. 15, when "the schedule of a voluntary bankrupt discloses no assets, and no creditor appears at the first meeting." The term "assets" means property available for distribution to creditors, and the conditions of the general order are met when the schedule shows no property except such as is claimed as exempt. When this condition of affairs occurs, it is the practice in some districts for the referee to make an order setting off the exemptions, based on an affidavit of the bankrupt. While this practice is informal and not in accordance with the regular course of procedure, it may be sanctioned by the court, in the exercise of its equity powers, where it is satisfied that the bankrupt has no property except such as is exempt, and that therefore there is [216] Lipman v. Stein, 134 Fed. 235, 67 C. C. A. 17, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 30; In re Coddington, 126 Fed. 891, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 122; In re Gunzberger (D. C.) 268 Fed. 673, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 690.

[217] In re Friederich (C. C. A.) 100 Fed. 284, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; Burke v. Guarantee Title & Trust Co., 134 Fed. 562, 67 C. C. A. 486, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 31. And see Cowan v. Burchfield, 180 Fed. 614, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 293.

[218] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47a, cl. 11.

[219] In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730. An agreement between a bankrupt and his creditors that the exemptions shall be valued and allotted by three appraisers, whose decision shall be final and not subject to exception, is void, and an order made by the referee, by consent of parties, in the terms of such agreement, will be set aside. Idem.

[220] In re Finkelstein, 192 Fed. 738, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 229.

no occasion for the appointment of a trustee.[221] But when a trustee has been appointed and qualified, the referee has no authority to set apart the bankrupt's exemptions, nor to direct the trustee in the matter.[222] The trustee has no right to demand from the bankrupt, as a condition upon his delivering to him the property claimed as exempt and appraised for that purpose, a bond of indemnity, and where, upon demand and refusal of such a bond, the trustee sells the property in question, the bankrupt may claim the amount of his exemptions from the proceeds.[223]

If exemptions have recently been claimed and allowed to the bankrupt in proceedings under the state law, it is permissible for the trustee to adopt and sanction the allotment, if no circumstances of fraud or mistake appear.[224] But it is not the duty of the trustee to wait until exemptions have been allowed and set apart by state officers according to the procedure prescribed by the laws of the state.[225] Since, however, the bankruptcy act merely gives the debtor what the state statute allows him, he must observe any directions of that statute, which are imposed as conditions upon the allowance. If the state law withholds the exemption from him until he shall have complied with certain requirements as to the mode of claiming and securing its allowance, he must pursue the same course before he can make good his claim to the exemptions in the bankruptcy proceeding.[226] And it is said, generally, that trustees in bankruptcy, in valuing and setting apart the exemptions of bankrupts, should conform as nearly as may be to the method provided by the state law for that purpose.[227] Thus, where the state law exempts to a debtor personal property to a certain value, "to be se-

[221] In re W. C. Allen & Co., 134 Fed. 620, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518; Smalley v. Laugenour, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786.

[222] In re Peabody, 16 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 10,866.

[223] In re Brown, 100 Fed. 441, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 46.

[224] In re Vogler, 2 Hughes, 297, 8 N. B. R. 132, Fed. Cas. No. 16,986. See In re Wilson, 101 Fed. 571, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260.

[225] In re Camp, 91 Fed. 745, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165. A bankrupt to whom personalty claimed as exempt has been set apart, may thereafter execute and file for record a declaration of homestead, as required by state law, and have the same set apart as exempt. In re Lehfeldt (D. C.) 225 Fed. 681, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716.

[226] See In re Farish, 2 N. B. R. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 4,647; In re Jackson, 2 N. B. R. 508, Fed. Cas. No. 7,127; Baltimore Bargain House v. Busby, 143 Ga. 734, 85 S. E. 875.

[227] In re McCutchen, 100 Fed. 779, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81; In re Woodard, 95 Fed. 955, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692. But compare In re Lynch, 101 Fed. 579, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262. Where the state statute provides that the homestead shall be appraised by three persons, chosen respectively by the debtor, the creditor, and the officer holding the writ, a trustee in bankruptcy, when a claim of homestead is made by the bankrupt, should cause the property to be appraised by three persons, one named by himself, one by the bankrupt, and one by the creditors, and an appraisement made by three persons all chosen by the trustee, the bankrupt not being represented in lected by him," the debtor, on being adjudged bankrupt, has the right to select specific personal property, to that value, from the estate in the hands of his trustee, even though the property is not divisible without loss nor salable except as a whole.[228] On the other hand, where the state law provides that the exempt property shall be selected by the debtor, it is not permissible to allow the bankrupt to select a trifling amount of personal property and receive the entire difference in cash from the trustee.[229] A mistake made by the trustee in valuing or setting off the property may be corrected by amendment, or by a revaluation of the property, where that is the proper course.[230] When the trustee has set apart the property to be allowed as exempt and made report of his doings, and his action is either approved by the court or passes without exceptions being taken, it is then his further duty to deliver the possession to the bankrupt.[231] But he is not authorized to dispense with the requirements of the statute and simply pay the bankrupt a sum of money equivalent to the value of the exemptions, where no proper steps have been taken to select and set apart the exempt property, and especially where it does not appear that the money was placed in a designated depository and drawn out according to the rules in bankruptcy.[232] It should also be noted that the bankrupt is entitled to receive the full amount of his exemption, and it cannot be diminished by deducting from it any costs and expenses made in the proceedings, their selection, will be set aside on objections by the latter, and a new appraisement ordered. In re McCutchen, supra. But it has been ruled that there is no provision of the bankruptcy law authorizing the valuation by appraisers of the property claimed by the bankrupt as exempt, and that, where the appraisers value the entire estate of the bankrupt, as provided by law, their inventory is not binding on the trustee as respects the exempt property nor can he adopt it as his own. In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730. And see In re Andrews & Simonds, 193 Fed. 776, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116; Bank of Nez Perce v. Pindel, 193 Fed. 917, 113 C. C. A. 545, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69, holding that the time and manner of setting apart the bankrupt's exemptions must be determined by and in accordance with the bankruptcy act. And see In re Crum (D. C.) 221 Fed. 729, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586.

[228] In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

[229] In re Woodard, 95 Fed. 955, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 692. But when property claimed by the bankrupt as exempt has been sold by the trustee, the exemption should be set apart out of the proceeds of the sale. In re Park, 102 Fed. 602, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 432.

[230] Brady v. Brady, 71 Ga. 71. Where a trustee in bankruptcy, in setting off to the bankrupt the property claimed as his homestead, has adopted the value placed upon it by appraisers fifteen years before, when it was allotted to the bankrupt as a homestead under process of a state court, but it appears that the property has since increased in value beyond the amount allowed as exempt by the laws of the state, the court of bankruptcy will direct the trustee to re-value the property and set apart to the bankrupt so much thereof as shall not exceed in value the amount so allowed. In re McBryde, 99 Fed. 686, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 729.

[231] In re Soper, 173 Fed. 116, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 868.

[232] In re Hoyt, 119 Fed. 987, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574.

even the necessary cost of selling perishable property,[233] though it appears that an exception may be made as to storage charges on the specific property pending its delivery to the bankrupt.[234]

It is ordered that "the trustee shall make report to the court, within twenty days after receiving the notice of his appointment, of the articles set off to the bankrupt by him, according to the provisions of the 47th section of the act, with the estimated value of each article."[235] The time here limited, however, may be extended by the court, for good cause shown, and leave given to the trustee to make a later or further report.[236] The action of the court on this report is of course subject to review in the ordinary manner, but is not open to collateral inquiry. If the court of bankruptcy wrongfully allows and sets apart to a bankrupt the property which he claims as exempt, the remedy is not in the state courts.[237] It is remarkable that neither the act nor the general order specially provides for the taking of exceptions to the trustee's determination, as to exempt property, by the bankrupt himself. But the courts hold that if he is dissatisfied with the allowance made by the trustee, he may except to the latter's decision and have the question heard by the referee, and if necessary certified to the court.[238] It is provided that "any creditor may take exceptions to the determination of the trustee within twenty days after the filing of the report."[239] Under his provision a creditor is not precluded from objecting to the allowance

[233] In re Le Vay, 125 Fed. 990, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; In re Hopkins, 103 Fed. 781, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 619.

[234] In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730.

[235] General Order No. 17. This order requires a specification of items and a separate appraisal of the property set apart to the bankrupt. In re Manning, 112 Fed. 948, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571. And under the laws of Pennsylvania, a trustee in bankruptcy, in setting aside as exempt household goods and book accounts, must itemize them and value each item separately. Idem. But under the corresponding provision of the act of 1867, it was held that the reference was to articles of personal property exempt by the laws of the state, and not to real estate held as a homestead, the title to which does not pass to the trustee. In re Hunt, 5 N. B. R. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 6,883.

[236] In re Shields, 1 N. B. R. 603, Fed. Cas. No. 12,785. The setting apart of exempt property to the bankrupt, and the sale of real estate in which a homestead is claimed, if indivisible, should always be done promptly, and the referee should see that this is done. In re Brown (D. C.) 228 Fed. 533, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 826.

[237] Brengle v. Richardson's Adm'r, 78 Va. 406. And see Brady v. Brady, 71 Ga. 71.

[238] In re Sloan, 135 Fed. 873, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435; Richardson v. Trubey, 250 Ill. 577, 95 N. E. 971; In re Pryor, 4 Biss. 262, Fed. Cas. No. 11,457; In re Thiell, 4 Biss. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 13,882; In re Smith, 93 Fed. 791, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 190.

[239] General Order No. 17. See McGahan v. Anderson, 113 Fed. 115, 51 C. C. A. 92, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 641; E. B. Taylor Co. v. Williams (Ga.) 77 S. E. 386. The homestead exemption claimed by a bankrupt cannot be transferred until approved by the referee or until 20 days have passed without objections by creditors being filed. In re Anderson (D. C.) 224 Fed. 790, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 487.

of exemptions because he is not armed with any process,[240] nor does it exclude the trustee, who may except on behalf of all the creditors to the bankrupt's claim or the decision of the referee thereon.[241] As to the limitation of time, it is held that the word "may" in this connection is not imperative, in the sense that exceptions must be taken within twenty days or not at all, but that a certain measure of discretion is left to the courts of bankruptcy, so that, in cases of fraud or mistake or for other good cause, they may consider the objections of creditors even after the time limited,[242] though a creditor seeking this privilege must excuse his delay and clear himself of the imputation of laches.[243] As to the form of the exceptions, such a paper is not strictly speaking a pleading, and if the want of verification is a defect, at any rate it is not jurisdictional.[244]

It has been held by some of the courts that, where the bankrupt makes out a prima facie case in support of his claim to exemptions, the objecting creditors must sustain the burden of proving that he is not entitled to what he demands.[245] But there are also rulings that the burden is on the bankrupt to prove his right to the exemptions claimed, and by conclusive evidence.[246] However this may be, the issues on a hearing of this kind will be strictly confined. For instance, the court will not enter upon an inquiry as to whether or not the bankrupt had made a fraudulent conveyance of property such as would bar his right to a discharge.[247] And the rulings of the referee on questions of fact in allowing exemptions will not be reversed unless clearly erroneous.[248]

[240] In re Campbell, 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[241] In re Rice, 164 Fed. 589, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 202; In re Bonvillain (D. C.) 232 Fed. 370, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 761.

[242] In re Perdue, 2 N. B. R. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 10,975. But compare In re Cotton & Preston, 183 Fed. 190, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 532. And see In re Gainey, 2 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 5,181. Where the trustee has not filed his report within the time limited for that purpose, creditors are not bound to except to the same within twenty days after its filing. In re Peabody, 16 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 10,866. A mere report by the trustee that the bankrupt has made a claim for certain exemptions does not constitute a "setting off" of exemptions to the bankrupt, such that creditors must file their exceptions to it within the limited time. Objection by a creditor to the allowance of the exemption claimed, interposed at the first meeting of creditors, would be sufficient to preserve his right to make such objection at a subsequent stage of the proceedings. In re Harber, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 449. And see In re Krecum, 229 Fed. 711, 144 C. C. A. 121, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 172; In re Libby (D. C.) 253 Fed. 278.

[243] In re Reese, 115 Fed. 993, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 411.

[244] In re Campbell, 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[245] In re Rippa, 180 Fed. 603; In re Grimes, 94 Fed. 800, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160. In re Auge (D. C.) 238 Fed. 621, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

[246] In re Rainwater, 191 Fed. 738, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Campbell, 124 Fed. 417, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 723.

[247] In re W. C. Allen & Co., 134 Fed. 620, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 518.

[248] In re Rutland Grocery Co., 189 Fed. 765, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 942.

The decision of the court of bankruptcy will be accepted as conclusive by the state courts.[249]

§ 254. Sale of Property and Allowance of Exemptions Out of Proceeds.—Where the law of the state exempts to the debtor personal property to a certain value, "to be selected by him," the debtor, on being adjudged bankrupt has the right to select specific personal property to that value from the estate in the hands of his trustee, and although his personal estate consists of a stock of goods not divisible without loss, nor salable except as a whole, yet the court cannot order the trustee to sell the whole stock and pay the bankrupt the value of his exemptions out of the proceeds.[250] And if the trustee takes the goods selected by the bankrupt and mixes them with others and sells the whole indiscriminately, the bankrupt will not be entitled to claim out of the proceeds the maximum value allowed by the exemption law, but only the price brought by the specific goods which he had selected.[251] It has been held, however, that if the bankrupt, after making the selection, allows the selected articles to be sold with the rest, by an agreement to that effect with his trustee, that course being for the benefit of the estate, in that it makes the stock as a whole more salable the trustee should allow to the bankrupt, as his exemption, out of the proceeds of the sale, a sum of money equal to the value of the goods originally selected.[252] But under the laws of Pennsylvania, the trustee cannot set apart as exempt cash out of the proceeds of a future sale of the bankrupt's personal property.[253] If, before the appointment of a trustee, the property

[249] Morton v. Jones, 136 Ky. 797, 125 S. W. 247; McKinley v. Morgan, 36 Wash. 561, 79 Pac. 45. And see Drees v. Armstrong, 180 Iowa, 29, 161 N. W. 40; McCurry v. Sledge, 48 Okl. 27, 149 Pac. 1124. Compare Seedig v. First Nat. Bank of Clifton (Tex. Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 445.

[250] In re Grimes, 96 Fed. 529, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 730; In re Shrimer (D. C.) 228 Fed. 794, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 404. Where the exemption law of the state does not exempt money, or any sum in money, but only property to a certain value, the trustee has no right, where the bankrupt's property has been seized and sold under execution and distress for rent, leaving him no property to claim as exempt, to allow money, the proceeds of debts due to the bankrupt, for the purpose of making good the property which would have been exempted if it had not been sold. In re Lawson, 2 N. B. R. 54, Fed. Cas. No. 8,149.

[251] In re Arnold, 169 Fed. 1000, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 392; In re Friend, 3 Woods, 388, Fed. Cas. No. 5,120.

[252] In re Richard, 94 Fed. 633, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 506; In re Hutchinson, 197 Fed. 1021, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 405; In re Hargraves, 160 Fed. 758, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 186; In re Renda, 149 Fed. 614, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 521. Where personal property which the bankrupt was entitled to claim as exempt was sold, on his request that cash should be allowed him instead of the property, he should be charged with his percentage of the difference between the proceeds of the property and its appraised value as against the amount of his exemptions. In re Ansley Bros., 153 Fed. 983, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 457.

[253] In re Manning, 112 Fed. 948, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 571.

has come into the hands of a receiver in bankruptcy, who proposes to sell the same, the proper course is for the court to direct the receiver to set aside the specific property which the bankrupt claims as exempt, to await the determination of his claim.[254] But if the receiver has sold the property (as being perishable or for other good reasons) before the appointment of a trustee, and the bankrupt has duly made his claim for his exemptions, it will be his right to receive the proper amount out of the proceeds of the sale.[255] Where the statute does not give the debtor this right of selection of property, but only fixes the value of the exemption to be allowed, the rule is that, if the property in the hands of the trustee is not capable of division into parts without injury to the whole, or if it is of such a nature that it cannot advantageously be sold except as a whole, the court may order a sale of the whole, and an allowance to the bankrupt of the value of his statutory exemption, to be set apart to him out of the proceeds.[256] On a similar principle, it is held that where a bankrupt claims the property on which he resides as a homestead, but it is alleged that it exceeds in value the limit fixed by the homestead law of the state, and the evidence on the subject of value is conflicting, or responsible parties offer to bid a larger sum for the property, the proper course is to order the property sold by the trustee at public sale after due advertisement. At such sale, the bankrupt will be considered as bidding the amount fixed by the statute as the maximum value of a homestead exemption, and it will be knocked down to him at that price if no better offer is made. But if the property brings more than that amount, the bankrupt will be allotted a sum of money, out of the proceeds, equal to the value of a homestead exemption under the statute, and this will be considered as his exemption.[257] So, where a mortgage, recognized as valid in the [254] In re N. Shaffer & Son, 128 Fed. 986, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 717; In re Joyce, 128 Fed. 985, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 716.

[255] In re Zack, 196 Fed. 909, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 138; In re Le Vay, 125 Fed. 990, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 114; In re Haskin, 109 Fed. 789, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 485; In re Bolinger, 108 Fed. 374, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 171; In re Sloan, 135 Fed. 873, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435.

[256] In re Kane, 127 Fed. 552, 62 C. C. A. 616, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 533; In re Yeager, 182 Fed. 951, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 51; In re Luby, 155 Fed. 659, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; In re Grimes, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 426; In re Diller, 100 Fed. 931, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 45; In re Beede, 19 N. B. R. 68, Fed. Cas. No. 1,226; In re Poleman, 5 Biss. 526, 9 N. B. R. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 11,247.

[257] In re Lynch, 101 Fed. 579, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 262; In re Watson, 2 N. B. R. 570, Fed. Cas. No. 17,271; Bank of Nez Perce v. Pindel, 193 Fed. 917, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 69; In re Paramore & Ricks, 156 Fed. 208, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 126. And see Dunlap Hardware Co. v. Huddleston, 167 Fed. 433, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 731; Norwood v. Watson, 242 Fed. 885, 155 C. C. A. 473, 39 Am. Bankr. Rep. 348; In re Crum (D. C.) 221 Fed. 729, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 586; McBride v. Gibbs, 148 Ga. 380, 96 S. E. 1004. Compare In re Yungbluth, 220 Fed. 110, 136 C. C. A. 202, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 299.

bankruptcy proceedings, covers an undivided fractional part of the real estate out of which the bankrupt claims his homestead exemption, the court will not order the trustee to partition the land as between the bankrupt and the mortgagee, and set apart to the former a designated portion to be held by him as his homestead in severalty and free from the mortgage, as this would change, and might impair, the security of the mortgagee. But the bankrupt may apply for an order to sell portions of the land not actually occupied as a homestead, and apply the proceeds in payment of the mortgage.[258]

§ 255. Exemptions in Partnership Cases.—A partnership, as such, cannot claim exemptions out of the firm assets. It cannot be a "head of a family" or a "housekeeper," within the meaning of those and similar terms used in the state exemption laws.[259] And moreover, the adjudication in bankruptcy dissolves the firm absolutely and for every purpose, and thereafter there is no firm in existence to claim or receive the exemption.[260] But a more difficult question arises when the individual members of a bankrupt partnership claim the right to receive, each for himself, the statutory exemption out of the assets of the firm, there being no individual estate sufficient to yield the amount allowed as exempt. On this question, the courts of bankruptcy will follow the rule established by the decisions of the highest courts of the state, if any such have been rendered.[261] In many of the states, this point has been determined by the court of last resort. But in the absence of any such determination, when the bankruptcy court must put its own construction on the state law, the tendency is to hold that the individual members of the firm are not entitled to any exemption out of the partnership property, unless there should remain a surplus of such property after the payment of all firm debts.[262]

In North Carolina, the federal courts, following the decisions of the courts of the state, have decided that, in case of the bankruptcy of a partnership, where there are firm assets but no individual estate, each partner is entitled to receive, out of the partnership assets, the exemption allowed by the law of the state, provided the other partner consents thereto, and the fact that the petition in bankruptcy is signed [258] In re Thomas, 96 Fed. 828, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 99.

[259] In re Lentz, 97 Fed. 486; In re Smith, 2 Hughes, 307, Fed. Cas. No. 12,979.

[260] In re Lentz, 97 Fed. 486; In re Blodgett, 10 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 1,555.

[261] In re Beauchamp, 101 Fed. 106, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151; In re Camp, 91 Fed. 745, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Stevenson, 93 Fed. 789, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 230.

[262] Jennings v. Stannus (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 347, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Scheier, 188 Fed. 744, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 739; In re Beauchamp, 101 Fed. 106, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 151.

by both partners is conclusive evidence of such consent mutually given.[263] And in this state a surviving partner may have his personal exemption set apart to him out of the partnership effects, with the consent of the administrator of the deceased partner.[264] But where a firm consists of several partners, all must consent to the allowance of exemptions out of the firm property, and if any object it cannot be done.[265] Nor can this course be taken with reference to any partner unless it appears that he has no individual estate out of which to claim and receive the exemption, for it is not intended that a bankrupt partner should have his exemptions duplicated.[266] A similar rule, allowing partners to claim their exemptions out of firm property, in case they have no separate estate, prevails in Georgia,[267] Wisconsin,[268] Missouri,[269] New York,[270] and Michigan.[271] In these and other states, it becomes important for the bankrupt claiming exemptions to establish his actual status as a member of the firm, and this question may turn upon the effect of an executory contract to sell his interest to his copartners, his renunciation of membership in the firm, the legal consequences of a conditional sale of his interest, or his participation in the conduct of the firm's business.[272]

[263] In re Gartner Hancock Lumber Co., 173 Fed. 153, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 898; In re Seabolt, 113 Fed. 766, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; In re Stevenson, 93 Fed. 789, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 230; In re Grimes, 94 Fed. 800, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160; In re Duguid, 100 Fed. 274, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794; In re Wilson, 101 Fed. 571, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260. A partner having an equal interest with his copartner in the firm property is entitled to claim his statutory exemption therefrom, in case of the bankruptcy of the firm, although the amount contributed by him to the capital of the firm was less than the amount of such exemption. In re Grimes, 94 Fed. 800, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 160. But compare In re Rutland Grocery Co., 189 Fed. 765, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 942.

[264] In re Seabolt, 113 Fed. 766, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57; In re Dinglehoef, 109 Fed. 866, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 242.

[265] In re J. M. Monroe & Co., 156 Fed. 216, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 255.

[266] In re Steed, 107 Fed. 682, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

[267] In re Rutland Grocery Co., 189 Fed. 765, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 942; In re Camp, 91 Fed. 745, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165. Compare In re Stewart, 13 N. B. R. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 13,420.

[268] In re Friederich, 100 Fed. 284, 40 C. C. A. 378, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 801; In re Friederick, 95 Fed. 282; Ex parte Robinson, 7 Biss. 125, Fed. Cas. No. 11,933; In re Zimmerman, 202 Fed. 812, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 361. The earlier decisions were to the contrary. See In re Sauthoff, 8 Biss. 35, 16 N. B. R. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 12,380; In re Hughes, 8 Biss. 107, 16 N. B. R. 464, Fed. Cas. No. 6,842.

[269] In re Young, 3 N. B. R. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 18,148; In re Richardson, 11 N. B. R. 114, Fed. Cas. No. 11,776.

[270] Stewart v. Brown, 37 N. Y. 350, 93 Am. Dec. 578.

[271] In re Andrews & Simouds, 193 Fed. 776, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 116; In re Parks, 9 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 10,765. Compare In re Blodgett, 10 N. B. R. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 1,555; In re Boothroyd, 14 N. B. R. 223, Fed. Cas. No. 1,652. See In re Solomon & Johnson (D. C.) 254 Fed. 503, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 18.

[272] See In re E. M. Fowler & Co., 145 Fed. 270, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 580; In re Wilson, 101 Fed. 571, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 260; In re W. J. Floyd & Co., 154 Fed.

On the other hand, it is held that the individual members of a bankrupt partnership are not entitled to claim any separate exemption out of the partnership assets in Ohio,[273] South Dakota,[274] Pennsylvania, [275] Arkansas,[276] Alabama,[277] New Jersey,[278] Vermont,[279] Mississippi,[280] Indiana,[281] and Washington.[282] Here again the question of the existence of a partnership, or of the membership in it of the claimant, may become important. One is not deprived of his right to exemptions by the mere fact that he has conducted his business under a name indicating that it was owned by a firm or a corporation, if in fact he was the sole owner of it.[283] So, during the continuance of a partnership business, the partners have a right, by a transfer from one to the other, to transform the partnership property into the individual property of one of the partners, and to apply it to the payment of his individual debts, provided it is done in good faith and before creditors intervene and bring the property of the firm into court. And where this is done, and there is no fraud in the transaction, and no showing of the insolvency of the firm, the assets belong to the continuing partner as an individual, and he is entitled to claim his exemptions out of them in bankruptcy proceedings subsequently brought against him.[284] But on the other hand, where a firm which is insolvent dissolves, but there is no transfer of the property by the retiring partner to the liquidating partner, but the former simply abandons his interest in the firm, the liquidating partner will not be allowed to claim an individual exemption 757, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 827. An alleged partner who escapes adjudication on the ground of his being an infant cannot claim exemptions as a partner. In re Ellenbecker, 205 Fed. 396, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 537.

[273] In re Rosenbaum, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 541; In re Tonne, 13 N. B. R. 170, Fed. Cas. No. 14,095. Compare In re Rupp, 4 N. B. R. 95, Fed. Cas. No. 12,141.

[274] In re Abrams, 193 Fed. 271; In re Novak, 150 Fed. 602, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 236; In re Lentz, 97 Fed. 486; In re I. S. Vickerman & Co., 199 Fed. 589, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 298. Compare In re McKercher, 8 N. B. R. 409.

[275] In re Prince & Walter, 131 Fed. 546, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 675; In re Hafer, 1 N. B. R. 547, Fed. Cas. No. 5,896.

[276] In re Head, 114 Fed. 489, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 556; In re Meriwether, 107 Fed. 102, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 435; In re Handlin, 3 Dill. 290, 12 N. B. R. 49, Fed. Cas. No. 6,018.

[277] In re McCrary Bros., 169 Fed. 485, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 161.

[278] In re Demarest, 110 Fed. 638, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 232.

[279] In re Mosier, 112 Fed. 138, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 268.

[280] In re H. W. Bundy & Co. (D. C.) 218 Fed. 711, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 289.

[281] In re Turnock & Sons, 230 Fed. 985, 145 C. C. A. 179, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 316.

[282] Jennings v. Stannus (C. C. A.) 191 Fed. 347, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 384; In re Rudnick, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 769.

[283] In re Carpenter, 109 Fed. 558, 48 C. C. A. 545, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 465.

[284] In re Kolber, 193 Fed. 281, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 414, citing Sargent v. Blake, 160 Fed. 57, 87 C. C. A. 213, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 115, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1040. And see In re Bjornstad, 9 Biss. 13, 18 N. B. R. 382, Fed. Cas. No. 1,453; Crawford v. Sternberg, 220 Fed. 73, 135 C. C. A. 641, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 677.

out of the assets of the firm, on the theory that he is now the sole owner.[285]

§ 256. Dower and Allowances to Bankrupt's Widow.—The eighth section of the bankruptcy act provides that a proceeding in bankruptcy shall not be abated by the death of the bankrupt, but that, in that event, "the widow and children shall be entitled to all rights of dower and allowance fixed by the laws of the state of the bankrupt's residence." This does not create or extend any right of dower or allowance, but makes the right of a bankrupt's widow, and its nature and extent, depend entirely upon the local law.[286] She will therefore have the same right of dower and the same allowances as are granted by the laws of the state of his domicile under similar circumstances.[287] But if the bankrupt dies seised of realty in various states, the court of bankruptcy of the bankrupt's residence will have exclusive jurisdiction after his death to determine the right of the widow to dower in such lands.[288] As to real estate, the wife's inchoate right of dower is not defeated by the vesting of title thereto in the bankrupt's trustee. For this is only for purposes of administration, and the bankrupt himself remains seised of the land until his death for the purposes of inheritance and within the meaning of the statute.[289] And the trustee in bankruptcy may not sell the real estate free from the widow's rights, after the death of the bankrupt, nor divest her of her dower right without her consent.[290] But it is held otherwise as to personal property. After it has been delivered into the possession of a duly qualified trustee, the bankrupt ceases to be "seised or possessed" of it, so that his subsequent death will not entitle the widow to claim a third of it, as she might have done if he had not been adjudged bankrupt.[291] But it is not the duty of a trustee in bankruptcy to protect the dower rights of the bank-

285 In re Abrams, 193 Fed. 271.

286 In re McKenzie, 132 Fed. 986, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 227. And see Kelly v. Strange, 3 N. B. R. 8, Fed. Cas. No. 7,676; In re Hester, 5 N. B. R. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 6,437. Compare Hurley v. Devlin, 151 Fed. 919, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627.

287 In re McKenzie, 142 Fed. 383, 73 C. C. A. 483, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679. See In re Dicks, 198 Fed. 293, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 845.

288 Hurley v. Devlin, 151 Fed. 919, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 627.

289 Thomas v. Woods, 173 Fed. 585, 97 C. C. A. 535, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132; In re Slack, 111 Fed. 523, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121; Cravens v. Shippen, 77 S. W. 929, 25 Ky. Law Rep. 1322; Warford v. Noble, 9 Biss. 320, 2 Fed. 202.

290 Porter v. Lazear, 109 U. S. 84, 3 Sup. Ct. 58, 27 L. Ed. 865; In re McKenzie, 142 Fed. 383, 73 C. C. A. 483, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; Smith v. Smith, 5 Ves. 189; In re Angier, 4 N. B. R. 619, Fed. Cas. No. 388; In re Bartenbach, 11 N. B. R. 61, Fed. Cas. No. 1,068.

291 In re McKenzie, 142 Fed. 383, 73 C. C. A. 483, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 679; In re McKenzie, 132 Fed. 986, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 227; In re Slack, 111 Fed. 523, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 121.

rupt's wife against the consequences of her own acts prior to the bankruptcy.[292]

As to other grants made to a widow under the general name of "allowances," the court of bankruptcy has power and jurisdiction to give her what the state law allows and a state court would give. Thus, in Connecticut, the judge of the court of bankruptcy may make a reasonable allowance to the bankrupt's widow, from his estate in bankruptcy, for her support during the settlement of the estate.[293] In Ohio, the widow of a bankrupt having his domicile in that state is entitled to reside for a year in the mansion house of her deceased husband, if dower is not sooner assigned, and also to the allowance of a year's support for herself and children, these grants being in lieu of the exemptions which the husband would have been entitled to claim from the estate in bankruptcy if he had lived.[294] The widow must assert her claims in some proper way before the court of bankruptcy. To entitle her to dower it is not sufficient for her merely to intervene in a suit by the trustee in bankruptcy to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance, and file a suggestion of her husband's death without any further action.[295] And where a state statute provides that a wife who is granted a divorce shall be entitled to one-third of the husband's personal property absolutely, a wife who has begun an action for divorce has no such claim upon the husband's personalty, before decree, as will entitle her to enjoin the distribution of the proceeds of the property in the hands of his trustee in bankruptcy.[296]

Where the local law allows a year's support to the widow and children of a decedent out of his "estate," their right is not lost because of the fact that his estate had vested in a trustee in bankruptcy before his death,[297] nor by the fact that he had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors within four months before his adjudication in bankruptcy.[298]

[292] Dudley v. Easton, 104 U. S. 99, 26 L. Ed. 668.

[293] In re Newton, 122 Fed. 103, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345. Compare In re Seabolt, 113 Fed. 766, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 57.

[294] In re Parschen, 119 Fed. 976, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 389.

[295] Gray v. Chase, 184 Mass. 444, 68 N. E. 676.

[296] Hawk v. Hawk, 102 Fed. 679, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 463.

[297] Hull v. Dicks, 235 U. S. 584, 35 Sup. Ct. 152, 59 L. Ed. 372, 34 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1.

[298] In re Scott, 226 Fed. 201, 141 C. C. A. 653, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 746.

CHAPTER XV

EXAMINATIONS IN BANKRUPTCY

§ 257. When Examinations May be Ordered.—The act of Congress provides that "a court of bankruptcy may, upon application of any officer, bankrupt, or creditor, by order require any designated person, including the bankrupt and his wife, to appear in court or before a referee or the judge of any state court, to be examined concerning the acts, conduct, or property of a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration under this act."[1] Moreover, with special reference to the examination of the bankrupt, it is made his duty "when present at the first meeting of his creditors and at such other times as the court shall order, to submit to an examination concerning the conducting of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and, in addition, all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate."[2] The estate of an alleged bankrupt is considered as being "in process of administration" from the time of the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against him, and therefore an examination of the bankrupt or any other witness may be ordered by the court of bankruptcy, on the application of the receiver, or on the application of creditors if no receiver has been appointed, although no adjudication has yet been made,[3] more especially, it appears,

[1] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21a, as amended by Act Congress Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797.

[2] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, clause 9.

[3] Cameron v. United States, 231 U. S. 710, 34 Sup. Ct. 244, 58 L. Ed. 448, 31 Am. Bankr. Rep. 604; In re Weidenfeld, 254 Fed. 677, 166 C. C. A. 175, 42

if the bankrupt has delayed the making of an adjudication by his dilatory tactics.[4] But the making of an order for the examination of any other witness than the bankrupt, or of the bankrupt himself at any other time than at the first meeting of his creditors, is in the sound discretion of the court of bankruptcy, and will not be reviewed by the appellate court unless an abuse of that discretion is shown.[5]

§ 258. Who May Apply for Examination.—In providing that an application for the examination of a witness may be made by any "officer," Congress undoubtedly meant the referee and the trustee, for either of these officers may need further information to enable him to discharge his duties in any particular case. The term is also broad enough to cover the case of a receiver of the bankrupt's property appointed under the act, as he is within the definition of an "officer."[6] The bankrupt himself has the right to apply for an order for the examination of any designated witness. This may be necessary to enable him to repel fictitious or exaggerated claims against his estate, or to defeat the aims of hostile creditors who are fishing for facts on which to specify grounds of opposition to his discharge. Further, the right of application is given to creditors. Any person who has connected himself with the proceedings in that capacity, and established his status as a creditor by proving his debt, clearly has the right to call for an examination of the bankrupt or any other witness,[7] and when the bankrupt is summoned to an examination at the instance of a creditor who has proved his claim, counsel for other creditors have no right to interpose any objections to his examination.[8] But it is not necessary that the applicant should have proved his debt in the bankruptcy proceedings. It

Am. Bankr. Rep. 425; Rawlins v. Hall-Epps Clothing Co., 217 Fed. 884, 133 C. C. A. 594, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237. But to warrant an order for the examination of the alleged bankrupt before adjudication, where no receiver has been appointed, the application must show some unusual situation with reference to the estate which makes an examination necessary at that time for the purpose of securing or preserving the assets of the estate. In re Stell (D. C.) 269 Fed. 1008, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

[4] In re Weidenfeld, 254 Fed. 677, 166 C. C. A. 175, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[5] In re Weidenfeld, 254 Fed. 677, 166 C. C. A. 175, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 425.

[6] In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

[7] See Ex parte Jewett, 2 Low. 393, 11 N. B. R. 443, Fed. Cas. No. 7,303. A bankrupt summoned at the instance of a creditor who has proved his claim cannot refuse to be sworn and examined on the ground that the claim is not valid unless such invalidity has been proved. In re Winship, 7 Ben. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 17,878. Nor on the ground that he has a set-off which will extinguish the claim of the creditor at whose instance the order for examination issued. In re Kingsley, 6 Ben. 300, 7 N. B. R. 558, Fed. Cas. No. 7,818. Creditors whose claims have been protested against, if duly proved, will be entitled to an order for the examination of the bankrupt. In re Belden, 4 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 1,241.

[8] In re Winship, 7 Ben. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 17,878.

is held that any person who has a provable debt and who shows that he is actually a creditor of the bankrupt, by being named as a creditor in the bankrupt's schedule, or by other evidence satisfactory to the referee, is entitled to an order for the examination of the bankrupt, although he has not formally proved his claim.[9]

§ 259. Application and Order for Examination and Notice.—By the express terms of the statute, the issuance of an order to the bankrupt, or a summons to a witness, to appear and be examined must be based upon an "application." Under the act of 1867, it was decided that a creditor who desired to obtain an examination of the bankrupt must make a written application therefor, supporting the same by either a duly verified petition or an affidavit showing good cause for the granting of the order,[10] but that when the application was made by the assignee in bankruptcy, it was not necessary that it should be verified or supported, as the assignee was an officer of the court, and it was only necessary that the court should be satisfied of the bona fides of his application.[11] There is nothing in the present bankruptcy law which requires the verification of such an application, or even that it should be in writing. A creditor applying for an order for examination will do well to make a formal written application, but it is in the discretion of the referee to order the examination on a mere oral application.[12] In the case of a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy, it is held that his simple application or demand for an order or summons is all that is required to support it, and that, when a third person is to be examined, it is not necessary for the trustee to set forth, in the form of an application for the summons, the questions which are to be asked upon the examination, or the particular facts or transactions as to which he proposes to interrogate the witness.[13]

[9] In re Samuelsohn, 174 Fed. 911, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528; In re Rose, 163 Fed. 636, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 169; In re Kuffler, 153 Fed. 667, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 587; In re Jehu, 94 Fed. 638, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 498; In re Walker, 96 Fed. 550, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 35. On a similar principle, where the proposed examination of the bankrupt has a bearing on the question of his discharge, it is not a necessary prerequisite to the order for such examination that the creditor applying therefor should have filed specifications in opposition to the discharge. In re Baum, 1 Ben. 274, 1 N. B. R. 5, Fed. Cas. No. 1,116. But the right of a creditor to examine the bankrupt is suspended by the creditor's acceptance of a proposed composition. In re Tifft, 18 N. B. R. 177, Fed. Cas. No. 14,032.

[10] In re Adams, 2 Ben. 503, 2 N. B. R. 95, Fed. Cas. No. 39. See In re Vetterlein, 5 Ben. 7, 4 N. B. R. 599, Fed. Cas. No. 16,926.

[11] In re McBrien, 2 Ben. 513, 2 N. B. R. 197, Fed. Cas. No. 8,665; In re Lanier, 2 N. B. R. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 8,070.

[12] In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11. But see Craddock-Terry Co. v. Kaufman, 175 Fed. 303, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 724.

[13] In re Bryant, 188 Fed. 530, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; In re Howard, 95 Fed. 415, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

When a petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed, which the bankrupt means to contest, denying the acts of bankruptcy charged, and the petitioning creditors apply for an examination of the bankrupt before any adjudication is made, the bankrupt is entitled to notice of the application and to an opportunity to resist the making of the order asked for.[14] But when the bankrupt is cited before the referee for examination before any meeting of his creditors has been held and before the appointment of a trustee, and the object of the examination is merely to obtain information on which to prepare the schedules, it is not essential to the validity of the proceeding that notice should have been given to the creditors.[15] But after the list of creditors has been filed, all those whose names appear on it, or who have otherwise made themselves parties to the proceeding, are entitled to at least ten days' notice by mail of any proposed examination of the bankrupt.[16] It is usual to combine this notice with the notice of the first meeting of creditors, by incorporating in the latter a statement that creditors may, at such meeting, examine the bankrupt. It is also proper that an examination of the bankrupt should be had to enable creditors to prepare specifications in opposition to his discharge. Notice of this examination must be given, it must be open to all creditors, and ordinarily it will be had once for all. To avoid expense and delay, the notice to creditors to attend in opposition to the discharge may embrace a notice of examination of the bankrupt.[17] But while creditors must have notice of examinations of the bankrupt, the converse is not true. When the trustee desires to examine a witness for the purpose of discovering property of the bankrupt, and causes a summons to issue, it is not necessary to give notice to the bankrupt of the time and place of such examination.[18] As to informing third parties, whose interests may be affected by an examination in bankruptcy and the orders which may be founded on it, it is said that the proceeding is administrative in character, and one in which the jurisdiction of the court is not dependent on the service of regular process, as it would be in a suit, and hence a [14] Rawlins v. Hall-Epps Clothing Co., 217 Fed. 884, 133 C. C. A. 594, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 237.

[15] In re Franklin Syndicate, 101 Fed. 402, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 244.

[16] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58.

[17] In re Price, 91 Fed. 635, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419.

[18] In re Levy, 1 Ben. 454, 1 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 8,295; In re Duncan, 8 Ben. 541, Fed. Cas. No. 4,132. Probably the bankrupt, if present, would be allowed to cross-examine the witness, particularly if evidence were being elicited which might be used against him on his application for discharge. But as neither the act nor the general orders provide for notice to the bankrupt of the examination of a third party, it would seem that he has no such right to be present and take part as will make it necessary for the trustee to give him previous notice.

notice given by mail a reasonable time before the hearing is sufficient.[19] The order for an examination is to be made by "the court." But as this term ordinarily includes the referee, unless otherwise specified, it is held that, where a bankruptcy proceeding has been referred generally to a given referee, he has jurisdiction to order a third person, such as a secured creditor, to appear before him for examination.[20] It should be noticed that the authority to summon persons for examinations in bankruptcy includes the power to order the production of books and papers.[21]

§ 260. Process to Secure Attendance of Witness.—Power and jurisdiction to make an order requiring the bankrupt or any other competent witness to appear and submit to examination are vested in the referee in bankruptcy.[22] In case the bankrupt is the person to be examined, an order for his attendance is made by the referee and a copy of the same is to be delivered to the bankrupt forthwith.[23] He may be required in the same order, or by a separate similar order, to produce his books of account or other papers needed for the investigation of his affairs, and a formal subpœna duces tecum is neither necessary nor proper for this purpose.[24] In the rare case where the bankrupt is a prisoner in jail, his attendance may be secured by means of the writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum. But this writ does not issue as a matter of right, on the request of creditors, but its employment rests in the discretion of the court, and it will not be granted except where it is strictly necessary, and especially when the prisoner is confined by authority of a state court.[25] If a person other than the bankrupt is to be the witness, the case is governed by General Order No. 3, which provides that "all process, summons, and subpœnas shall issue out of the court, under the seal thereof, and be tested by the clerk." The process to secure the attendance of such a witness is therefore a writ which is in the nature of a subpœna, but which is officially designated a "summons," sealed and tested as required; and which must be served [19] In re Lewin, 103 Fed. 850, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632. And see Swartz v. Frank, 183 Mo. 438, 82 S. W. 60.

[20] In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

[21] In re Mendenhall, 9 N. B. R. 285, Fed. Cas. No. 9,423; In re Soloway & Katz, 195 Fed. 100, 103, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 225, 228; In re Ironclad Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 66.

[22] In re Pioneer Paper Co., 7 N. B. R. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 11,178; In re Brandt, 2 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 1,812; In re Lanier, 2 N. B. R. 154, Fed. Cas. No. 8,070; In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

[23] Official Form No. 28.

[24] In re Soloway & Katz, 195 Fed. 103, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 228.

[25] In re Thaw, 166 Fed. 71, 91 C. C. A. 657, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 561; In re Thaw, 172 Fed. 288, 22 Am. Bankr. Rep. 687.

on the witness in the usual manner.[26] If the witness fails or refuses to appear, he is to be dealt with by the judge, on a certificate of the facts from the referee, and may be punished as for contempt; but an application to the court for an attachment in the first instance, without such certificate, is irregular and improper.[27] It has also been held that orders requiring the attendance of the bankrupt or other witnesses, at a designated time and place, for the statutory examination, may be considered as "process" within the meaning of the last clause of General Order No. 3, that "blanks, with the signature of the clerk and the seal of the court, may, upon application, be furnished to the referees." And where applications to the referee for summons to witnesses, in cases before him, become so numerous that it would be exceedingly irksome to fill out each summons and send it by a messenger to the clerk's office to procure the signature of the clerk and the seal of the court, it will be a proper case for directing the clerk to furnish the blanks to the referee.[28]

§ 261. Examination of Non-Resident Witnesses.—In the matter of securing the attendance of a witness in bankruptcy proceedings, the court may exercise all the power conferred upon it in ordinary civil cases, and hence the process may run into another district.[29] But the bankruptcy law provides that no person shall be required to attend as a witness before a referee "at a place outside of the state of his residence and more than one hundred miles from the place of such residence." [30] The courts have virtually reconstructed this clause by reading it disjunctively instead of conjunctively. And it is held that a person cannot be compelled to leave the state where he resides, to be a witness before a referee in bankruptcy, though his residence is less than one hundred miles from the place of the hearing,[31] and that one cannot be compelled to attend an examination in bankruptcy at a distance of [26] Official Form No. 30. See In re Bellamy, 1 Ben. 390, 1 N. B. R. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 1,266. Where a witness is actually present before the referee in bankruptcy for examination when an order that he shall be sworn is made, the fact that the subpœna issued and served upon him was not under seal is immaterial. In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11.

[27] In re Kerber, 125 Fed. 653, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

[28] In re Bellamy, 1 Ben. 390, 1 N. B. R. 64, Fed. Cas. No. 1,266.

[29] In re Woodward, 8 Ben. 112, 12 N. B. R. 297, Fed. Cas. No. 18,000. See Rev. Stat. U. S. § 876.

[30] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 41. An alleged bankrupt, although he has removed from the district where involuntary proceedings are pending against him, yet, when in the district in attendance on such proceedings, is subject to all lawful orders of the court therein, including an order to appear for examination. In re Havens, 255 Fed. 478, 166 C. C. A. 554, 42 Am. Bankr. Rep. 734.

[31] In re Cole, 133 Fed. 414, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 300.

more than one hundred miles from where he lives, though it is within the same state.[32] But where this condition exists, the witness may be required to appear before a designated referee in the district where the witness lives, and in this case the referee conducts the examination in the capacity and with the powers of a referee in bankruptcy, and not merely as an examiner with the powers granted under the general equity rules.[33] Or the trustee or a creditor may apply to the court of bankruptcy in the district where the witness lives, and that court will have ancillary jurisdiction to order the examination within its own territory.[34] Another course is to take the evidence of the witness by deposition,[35] as to which the statute provides that the right to take depositions in bankruptcy proceedings shall be determined and enjoyed according to the general laws of the United States relating to the same subject, except that notice of the taking of depositions shall always be filed with the referee, and that when depositions are to be taken in opposition to the allowance of a claim, notice shall also be served upon the claimant, and when in opposition to a discharge, notice shall also be served upon the bankrupt.[36] It is in this connection that we discover the significance of the twenty-first section of the act, which provides that a witness in bankruptcy proceedings may be ordered to appear for examination "in court or before a referee or the judge of any state court." For it is only when the evidence of the witness is to be taken by deposition that the examination could be conducted by a state judge.[37] When a commission is issued by a court of bankruptcy and sent into another state, the circuit court in such state may compel a witness to testify or punish him for refusal.[38] If the witness resides in [32] In re Hemstreet, 117 Fed. 568, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

[33] In re Sturgeon, 139 Fed. 608, 71 C. C. A. 592, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 681; In re Williams, 123 Fed. 321, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538; In re Kyler, 2 Ben. 414, 2 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,956.

[34] In re Sutter Bros., 131 Fed. 654, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 632. Compare In re Williams, 123 Fed. 321, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 538.

[35] Under Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21b, taken in connection with Rev. Stat. § 863, the court of bankruptcy is authorized to take the depositions of witnesses who reside more than 100 miles from the place of trial, whether within or without the state. In re Washington Steel & Bolt Co. (D. C.) 210 Fed. 984, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 153.

[36] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21b. See In re Robinson (D. C.) 179 Fed. 724, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 617. The laws of the United States relating to the taking of depositions are found in Rev. Stat. §§ 863–870, 875, 1750.

[37] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 863, provides that depositions may be taken before "any chancellor, justice, or judge of a supreme or superior court, or judge of a county court or court of common pleas of any of the United States."

[38] In re Johnston, 14 N. B. R. 569, Fed. Cas. No. 7,423. On an application for attachment of witnesses for contempt in not making answers on examination under a commission sent by the bankruptcy court into another district and state, the attachment will be refused where no written interrogatories a foreign country, his testimony cannot be taken upon a deposition, but a commission must issue.[39]

§ 262. Who Subject to Examination; The Bankrupt.—The bankrupt, "when present at the first meeting of his creditors, and at such other times as the court shall order," is required to "submit to an examination concerning the conducting of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and, in addition, all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate."[40] Disobedience on the part of a bankrupt to an order of the court requiring him to appear for examination, or refusal to be sworn or to answer a proper question, or to produce books and papers, is a contempt of court which may be punished, and the bankrupt's compliance compelled, by fine and imprisonment.[41] If the bankrupt attempts to leave the district, in order to avoid examination, he may be arrested and held until he has been examined or given bail for his appearance.[42] On the other hand, he cannot be required to attend for the purpose of an examination at any place more than one hundred and fifty miles distant from his home or principal place of business, unless ordered by the court for cause shown, and although he cannot demand the fees of a witness, as a condition to his being sworn,[43] yet, by the express terms of the statute, he "shall be paid his actual expenses from the estate when examined or required to attend at any place other than the city, town, or village of his residence." (Section 7, clause 9, proviso.) Creditors must have at last ten days' notice by mail of all examinations of the bankrupt (Section 58), and the bankrupt cannot offer terms of composition to his creditors until after he has been examined in open court or at a meeting of creditors (Section 12).

As to the stage of the proceedings at which an examination of the accompanied the commission, and no information is furnished as to the particular inquiry. In re Glaser, 2 N. B. R. 398, Fed. Cas. No. 5,476.

[39] Cortes Co. v Tannhauser, 18 Fed. 667.

[40] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, cl. 9.

[41] Bankruptcy Act 1898. § 2, cl. 13. See In re Carpenter, 1 N. B. R. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 2,427; In re Holt, 3 N. B. R. 241, Fed. Cas. No. 6,646; In re Rosenfield, 1 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 12,059; In re Allen, 13 Blatchf. 271, Fed. Cas. No. 208; In re Winship, 7 Ben. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 17,878; In re Rosenblum (D. C.) 268 Fed. 381, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 584.

[42] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 9b. And where a bankrupt who has been ordered to submit to a further examination departs from the district before the time appointed, without an examination, his discharge will not be granted until he has duly submitted to the examination. In re Kingsley, 16 N. B. R. 301, Fed. Cas. No. 7,820.

[43] In re Okell, 2 Ben. 144, 1 N. B. R. 303, Fed. Cas. No. 10,474.

bankrupt may be had, it was shown above (§ 257) that he may be summoned for this purpose at any time after the filing of a petition against him, even though no adjudication has yet been made. Under the former law, it was held that the bankrupt could not be compelled to submit to an examination after he had received his discharge, or at least after the expiration of the time within which an application to set aside the discharge might be made.[44] Under the present act, the opinion has been advanced that a creditor or the trustee has the right, even after the discharge of the bankrupt, to examine him to ascertain whether he has concealed any property from his trustee, and this right continues for a year, or during the period within which the discharge could be revoked.[45]

§ 263. Same; The Bankrupt's Wife.—The bankruptcy statute of 1867 provided that "for good cause shown, the wife of any bankrupt may be required to attend before the court to the end that she may be examined as a witness; and if she does not attend at the time and place specified in the order, the bankrupt shall not be entitled to a discharge unless he proves to the satisfaction of the court that he was unable to procure her attendance."[46] No such provision was found in the act of 1898 as originally enacted, but the wife of the bankrupt was undoubtedly included in the power of the court to order the appearance for examination of "any designated person." But she could not be examined unless she was, in the words of the law, a "competent witness" (that is, for or against her husband) "under the laws of the state in which the proceedings are pending."[47] And where, by the law of the state, a wife could not be a witness for or against her husband, it was held that she could not be required, in proceedings in bankruptcy against her husband, to testify concerning property in her possession alleged to have been conveyed to her in fraud of the bankrupt's creditors, though it was thought that the trustee in bankruptcy, seeking to recover such property, might proceed by a bill of discovery against the wife.[48] But on the other hand, if competent as a witness, the wife of the bankrupt might be interrogated as to money or other property in her possession, [44] In re Jones, 6 N. B. R. 386, Fed. Cas. No. 7,449; In re Witkowski, 10 N. B. R. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 17,290; In re Dole, 11 Blachf. 499, 9 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 3,964. Compare, In re Heath, 7 N. B. R. 448, Fed. Cas. No. 6,304.

[45] In re Peters, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 165, per Olmstead, Referee.

[46] Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5088. See In re Van Tuyl, 3 Ben. 237, 2 N. B. R. 579. Fed. Cas. No. 16,879; In re Selig, 1 N. B. R. 186, Fed. Cas. No. 12,641.

[47] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21.

[48] In re Fowler, 93 Fed. 417, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 555; In re Jefferson, 96 Fed. 826, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174; In re Mayer, 97 Fed. 328, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 222.

and as to how and when the same was received or acquired, provided only that the testimony showed such questions to be reasonably pertinent to the subject of inquiry, which is, in a general sense, the nature and location of the assets of the bankrupt.[49]

But an amendment to the bankruptcy law was enacted by Congress in 1903, which materially changed the law on this point. On the one hand, it removed the requirement that the wife should be a competent witness under the laws of the state. On the other hand, it limited the scope of her examination. As at present in force, the statute provides that the court of bankruptcy may "require any designated person, including the bankrupt and his wife, to appear in court or before a referee or the judge of any state court, to be examined concerning the acts, conduct, or property of a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration under this act: Provided, that the wife may be examined only touching business transacted by her or to which she is a party, and to determine the fact whether she has transacted or been a party to any business of the bankrupt." [50] It is said, however, that a certain latitude must be permitted in her examination, and if there is reasonable ground therefor, she may be interrogated to determine whether a business conducted in her name is in fact hers or the bankrupt's, and may be asked such questions as are pertinent to that inquiry.[51] But the bankrupt's wife cannot be required to testify as to mere confessions or admissions of her husband in regard to his dealings with third persons. There is nothing in the act to destroy the privilege of such confidences.[52] If the wife of the bankrupt, being duly summoned to appear and be examined, fails or refuses to attend before the referee, or declines to be sworn or to answer any proper question, she is to be dealt with as any other witness, that is, by an attachment to enforce her attendance, and punishment as for contempt if she will not respond to the questions. [53]

§ 264. Same; Other Witnesses.—Any person who possesses information concerning the acts, conduct, or property of a bankrupt whose estate is in process of administration under the law, may be summoned for examination as a witness. This process is meant primarily [49] In re Foerst, 93 Fed. 190, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 259; In re Post, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 527.

[50] Act Cong. Feb. 5, 1903, 32 Stat. 797, amending Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 21a.

[51] In re Worrell, 125 Fed. 159, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 744.

[52] In re Jefferson, 96 Fed. 826, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 174; In re Gilbert, 1 Low, 340, Fed. Cas. No. 5,410.

[53] In re Bellis, 38 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 88, 3 N. B. R. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 1,276; In re Woolford, 4 Ben. 9, 3 N. B. R. 444, Fed. Cas. No. 18,029; In re Van Tuyl, 2 N. B. R. 70, Fed. Cas. No. 16,881.

to aid the trustee in discovering and collecting the assets. But any creditor of the estate may also apply for the examination of a third person, though his right to do so is not unqualified, it being the duty of the court to exercise its discretion as to awarding the summons asked for.[54] This examination of a third person is a proceeding entirely independent of the examination of the bankrupt himself at the instance of the creditors; and a witness cannot object to being examined on the ground that there has not yet been any examination of the bankrupt.[55] Nor can he object to being sworn and examined on the ground that no issue has been made up for determination, or that there is no fact in dispute, and that therefore he cannot be questioned in the character of a "witness." The object of such an examination is to obtain information as to the bankrupt's property and conduct, not to prove or disprove some controverted fact.[56] A person summoned for examination in a proceeding in bankruptcy, on the application of a temporary receiver appointed by the court of bankruptcy, cannot refuse to attend or be examined on the ground that the order appointing the receiver was erroneous or improvidently made.[57] A creditor, as well as any other person, may be subject to this examination and may be interrogated as to his own claim against the bankrupt, to the end that it may be stricken out if the evidence shows that it cannot be supported.[58] So also, an assignee for the benefit of creditors or a trustee in insolvency appointed by a state court, though more than four months before the bankrutcy proceedings, may be summoned for examination and interrogated concerning the disposition made by him of the bankrupt's assets.[59] Also the trustee in bankruptcy may be subpœnaed and required to testify in the same manner as any other witness. But he is not subject to examination at any time on the mere motion of a creditor, and an order for his examination will not be granted unless it is asked upon [54] In re Andrews, 130 Fed. 383, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 267.

[55] In re Levy, 1 Ben. 454, 1 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 8,295; In re Fredenberg, 2 Ben. 133, 1 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 5,075.

[56] In re Blake, 2 N. B. R. 10, Fed. Cas. No. 1,492.

[57] In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822. See In re Feinberg, 3 Ben. 162, 2 N. B. R. 425, Fed. Cas. No. 4,716.

[58] In re Kyler, 2 Ben. 414, 2 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,956; In re Cliffe, 97 Fed. 540, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257. Where a witness is the assignee of certain debts due from the bankrupt to his creditors, it is not a sufficient reason for him to refuse to testify before the referee as to the actual consideration paid for the claims, that the consideration did not come from the bankrupt or his estate, and that to answer would be revealing the private business of the witness unnecessarily and prejudice him in another suit then pending. In re Trask, 7 Ben. 60, Fed. Cas. No. 14,141.

[59] In re Pursell, 114 Fed. 371, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 96.

some issue regularly referred to the referee.[60] The law also provides that a person shall be liable to punishment as for contempt, if he shall "neglect to produce, after having been ordered to do so, any pertinent document," and that the word "document" shall include any book, deed, or instrument in writing.[61] A receiver appointed by a state court, against whom a suit is pending by the trustee in bankruptcy for the possession of the bankrupt's books, is not privileged to refuse to produce the books and testify before the referee.[62] And it is held that, where it is alleged that the bankrupt's stock of goods was sold by him to a certain corporation without adequate consideration, the sale being induced by the fraud of the vendee, a receiver of the bankrupt's estate has the right, under process from the court of bankruptcy, to examine any books or documents of such corporation showing or tending to show its receipt or disposition of said stock, or in any other way relating thereto.[63] So also, where a corporation organized as the successor of a partnership is a mere fiction, its business and assets being those of the partnership, and the firm is adjudged bankrupt, the books of the corporation must be submitted for examination in the bankruptcy proceedings, if demanded.[64]

The officers of a corporation represent it and may be required to submit to an examination in bankruptcy proceedings against the corporation.[65]

§ 265. Second Examination of Bankrupt.—It is the right of creditors to have a full disclosure, on oath, by the bankrupt of everything relating to his estate, and with such detail as may be necessary or useful to the trustee in the discharge of his duties, and it is the duty of the bankrupt to submit to such examination promptly on reasonable application. Moreover, each of the creditors has equally the right to examine the bankrupt, and the fact that one of the creditors has already exercised this privilege is not necessarily a reason why the bankrupt should not again be examined at the instance of another creditor. A full and fair opportunity must be allowed to all the creditors to inquire into the

[60] In re Smith, 14 N. B. R. 432, Fed. Cas. No. 12,988.

[61] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 41a; and § 1, cl. 13. And see In re United States Graphite Co., 159 Fed. 300, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 280.

[62] In re Hulst, 7 Ben. 40, Fed. Cas. No. 6,864. But a state prosecuting officer will not be required to deliver to a receiver or trustee in bankruptcy books and papers which he is about to use, and needs for use, in a criminal proceeding. In re Mandel (D. C.) 224 Fed. 642, 35 Am. Bankr. Rep. 386.

[63] In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

[64] In re Horgan, 97 Fed. 319; affirmed, 98 Fed. 414, 39 C. C. A. 118, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 253.

[65] Powell v. Pangborn, 161 App. Div. 453, 145 N. Y. Supp. 1073; In re Fred C. Henderson, Inc. (D. C.) 266 Fed. 254, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 446.

matters pertinent to such investigation, and it is unquestionably within the authority of the court to order the bankrupt to appear and be examined a second time, or as often as proper occasion for it may be found to exist.[66] At the same time, the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, should so regulate the time and manner and course of the examinations as to protect the bankrupt from unnecessary annoyance or oppression and delay. Thus, the court may order all the creditors to unite in one and the same examination, if that seems the proper course. And when the bankrupt has once fully submitted to an examination, he has a right to be protected against unreasonable demands upon his time for further examination, and after ample opportunity has been afforded and an apparently full examination had, a second examination will not be ordered unless some substantial reason for such an order is presented and established.[67] Where an examination of the bankrupt is abruptly terminated by the failure of the trustee's counsel to appear, and an order for a new examination is taken, the bankrupt cannot refuse to attend or to testify.[68]

§ 266. Conduct of the Examination.—It is provided by the general orders in bankruptcy that "the examination of witnesses before the referee may be conducted by the party in person or by his counsel or attorney, and the witness shall be subject to examination and cross-examination, which shall be had in conformity with the mode now adopted in courts of law."[69] In examinations in bankruptcy, as in oth-

[66] In re Bryant, 188 Fed. 530, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 504; In re Mellen, 97 Fed. 326, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 226; In re Vogel, 5 N. B. R. 393, Fed. Cas. No. 16,984; In re Brandt, 2 N. B. R. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 1,813.

[67] In re Frisbie, 13 N. B. R. 349, Fed. Cas. No. 5,131; In re Adams, 3 Ben. 7, 2 N. B. R. 272, Fed. Cas. No. 40; In re Isidor, 2 Ben. 123, 1 N. B. R. 264, Fed. Cas. No. 7,105; In re Gilbert, 1 Low. 340, 3 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 5,410.

[68] In re Van Tuyl, 2 N. B. R. 70, Fed. Cas. No. 16,881.

[69] General Order No. 22. See In re Dunn, 9 N. B. R. 487, Fed. Cas. No. 4,173. Explicit authority to the referee to administer the oath to witnesses, and to conduct the examination generally, is found in section 38, clause 2, of the act. And see United States v. Ambrose, 2 Fed. 556. The attorney for the trustee in bankruptcy may act as attorney for the creditors in the examination of the bankrupt. In re Levy, 1 N. B. R. 184, Fed. Cas. No. 8,299. Where an attorney offers to examine the bankrupt in behalf of a creditor, and it appears that his power of attorney has been revoked, it is not error for the referee to refuse the attorney the right to examine the bankrupt as to the circumstances under which the revocation of his power of attorney had been obtained. In re Tifft, 17 N. B. R. 550, Fed. Cas. No. 14,030. On the examination of a witness respecting the bankrupt's estate, on the application of a creditor, it is held that other creditors have no right to intervene and object to questions asked. In re Stuyvesant Bank, 6 Ben. 33, 7 N. B. R. 445, Fed. Cas. No. 13,582. As to the right of counsel for one witness to cross-examine another witness, and the referee's discretion in allowing or refusing it, see In re Jordan, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 640.

er proceedings, the trustee is the trustee of all the creditors, and primarily represents them all.[70] But an examination of witnesses before a referee is a "proceeding in bankruptcy" before a court, and every creditor of the bankrupt is a party in interest and entitled to participate therein.[71] But the word "creditor" does not include the agent, attorney in fact, or proxy of a creditor, and a creditor cannot appoint a representative who is not an attorney at law, to examine the witnesses before the referee.[72] Although the Bankruptcy Act gives latitude in an examination of this kind, it does not otherwise abrogate the rule as to the examination and cross-examination of witnesses which prevails in the federal courts.[73] And it is held that this rule applies to the examination of the bankrupt himself as well as to that of any other witness, and consequently, when the bankrupt has been examined by a creditor or by the trustee, he may be cross-examined by his own counsel so far as may be necessary to explain or qualify any matters brought out on the direct examination which may seem to bear unfavorably upon his conduct or dealings, or which are obscure.[74] The rules also provide that "a deposition taken upon an examination before a referee shall be taken down in writing by him or under his direction, in the form of a narrative, unless he determines that the examination shall be by question and answer. When completed, it shall be read over to the witness and signed by him in the presence of the referee." [75] It has been held that the referee, as a judicial officer, is not required either by custom, the bankruptcy act, or the rules, to take the notes of testimony personally, or to incur the expense of clerical or stenographic aid therein for the benefit of a creditor examining the bankrupt, without indemnity therefor. He should supervise or direct the taking of testimony at the expense of the parties desiring it, or he may allow it to be taken by the parties themselves.[76] But the referee, upon the application of the trus-

[70] Mechanics' & Traders' Ins. Co. v. McVay, 142 Ark. 522, 219 S. W. 34.

[71] The Prussian (D. C.) 255 Fed. 857, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13.

[72] In re Looney (D. C.) 262 Fed. 209, 44 Am. Bankr. Rep. 542.

[73] In re Kinnane Co. (D. C.) 217 Fed. 488, 33 Am. Bankr. Rep. 243.

[74] In re Noyes, 2 Low. 352, 11 N. B. R. 111, Fed. Cas. No. 10,370; In re Leachman, 1 N. B. R. 391, Fed. Cas. No. 8,157; In re Levy, 1 Ben. 496, 1 N. B. R. 136, Fed. Cas. No. 8,296. Compare In re Bragg, Fed. Cas. No. 1,799.

[75] General Order No. 22. In this order, the word "deposition" applies to all hearings in bankruptcy matters before a referee, in which the bankrupt or other witnesses are examined, and all such hearings must be taken down in writing, read over to the witness, and signed by him. In re Post (D. C.) 256 Fed. 236, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 136. The examining party has the right to insist that the examination shall be reduced to writing. In re Jackson, 8 N. B. R. 424, Fed. Cas. No. 7,128. A witness, having been examined and his testimony taken down, is entitled to read over his testimony before being required to sign it. In re Waters-Colver Co. (D. C.) 212 Fed. 761, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379.

[76] In re Warszawiak, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 135.

tee in bankruptcy, may authorize the employment of a stenographer to report and transcribe the proceedings at the expense of the estate.[77] When this is done, the testimony of the witness will be taken down by question and answer, and the hearing will be adjourned until the stenographer has transcribed his notes, after which the deposition should be read over to the witness and signed by him in the presence of the referee. If a witness should refuse to sign his deposition after it has been transcribed and read to him, it is probable that he might be required to do so by an order, disobedience to which would be a contempt.[78] The bankrupt cannot require the referee to have his testimony taken down in longhand when the trustee furnishes a stenographer.[79]

The referee has a general control over the conduct and course of the examination; but it is said that he has no authority to limit in advance the time within which the examination must be concluded.[80] He may adjourn the examination for sufficient cause,[81] and although he is required to certify to the judge for decision questions arising in the course of the proceeding, he may properly refuse to suspend the examination which is pending until the decision of such questions, at least where no creditor is at that time entitled to priority.[82]

§ 267. Same; Right to Counsel.—A stranger to the proceedings (that is, one who is neither the bankrupt himself nor a creditor) when summoned to appear and be examined in bankruptcy, at the instance of the trustee or the creditors, has no right to have the attendance and advice of counsel at his examination.[83] Neither is a creditor of the bankrupt a "party" to the proceeding, in any such sense as to entitle him to interfere with it or be represented in it by counsel, or at least it is in the judicial discretion of the referee to permit or refuse such representation.[84] But in the case of the bankrupt himself, it is different. The rule is well settled that he is entitled to be attended by his counsel on his examination, and that the attorney may interpose objections to

77 Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 38, cl. 5.

78 See Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 41; Arnold v. Kearney, 29 Fed. 820.

79 In re Frey, 9 Ben. 185, Fed. Cas. No. 5,114.

80 In re Tift, 17 N. B. R. 421, Fed. Cas. No. 14,036; In re Waitzfelder, 8 Ben. 423; Fed. Cas. No. 17,047.

81 In re Robinson, 2 N. B. R. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 11,942.

82 In re Tifft, 17 N. B. R. 550, Fed. Cas. No. 14,030.

83 In re Emigh (D. C.) 243 Fed. 988, 40 Am. Bankr. Rep. 277. In re Feinberg, 3 Ben. 162, 2 N. B. R. 425, Fed. Cas. No. 4,716; In re Fredenberg, 2 Ben. 133, 1 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 5,075; In re Feeny, 1 Hask. 304, Fed. Cas. No. 4,715; In re Stuyvesant Bank, 6 Ben. 33, 7 N. B. R. 445, Fed. Cas. No. 13,582; In re Schonberg, 7 Ben. 211, Fed. Cas. No. 12,477; In re Comstock, 3 Sawy. 517, Fed. Cas. No. 3,080; In re Howard, 95 Fed. 415, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582.

84 In re Abbey Press, 134 Fed. 51, 67 C. C. A. 161, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 11; In re Comstock, 3 Sawy. 517, 13 N. B. R. 193, Fed. Cas. No. 3,080. But see The Prussian (D. C.) 255 Fed. 857, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 13, holding that the exam-any improper questions propounded to the bankrupt.[85] But the bankrupt has no absolute right to consult with his counsel before answering any given questions, or to take his advice as to the necessity of his answering the question or the form of his answer. This privilege may be allowed to him by the referee, if the circumstances render it proper, but it cannot be claimed as of right. The referee has a discretionary power to allow such a consultation of the bankrupt with his counsel, and whether or not it shall be allowed must be determined by him according to the circumstances of each particular case.[86] On this point it has been said: "There may be a case in which such a privilege might or should be allowed, as, for example, where the examination might implicate the bankrupt in a criminal charge, or require the disclosure of facts against which he is protected by law. But even in such a case, the presence of the bankrupt's counsel will generally, if not always, furnish all the protection needed without the allowing of a private consultation." [87]

§ 268. Objections to Questions and Rulings Thereon.—Objections to questions may be raised in the usual manner and by any one qualified to object. Where the bankrupt is an attorney, he has the right to raise any question on his examination which an attorney for him could raise, and he is not in contempt for refusal to answer questions to which he presents in good faith well-founded objections.[88] The general orders in bankruptcy provide that the referee "shall note upon the deposition any question objected to, with his decision thereon, and the court shall have power to deal with the costs of incompetent, immaterial, or irrelevant depositions, or parts of them, as may be just." [89] The corresponding general order (No. 10) under the act of 1867 provided that the register should note upon the deposition the objections made to any question, but should not have power to decide on the competency, materiality, or relevancy of the question, and consequently he could not overrule or exclude any question.[90] The present practice is for the referee, when an objection is interposed, to incorporate in the deposition the question

ination of witnesses before a referee is a "proceeding in bankruptcy" before a court, and that every creditor of the bankrupt is a party in interest and entitled not only to participate in the examination but to the presence of counsel in his behalf

[85] In re Tanner, 1 Low. 215, 1 N. B. R. 316, Fed. Cas. No. 13,745.

[86] In re Patterson, 1 N. B. R. 150, Fed. Cas No. 10,819; In re Tanner, 1 Low. 215, 1 N. B. R. 316, Fed. Cas. No. 13,745; In re Judson, 2 Ben. 210, 1 N. B. R. 364, Fed. Cas. No. 7,562; In re Collins, 1 N. B. R. 551, Fed. Cas. No. 3,008; In re Lord, 3 N. B. R. 243, Fed. Cas. No. 8,502.

[87] In re Collins, 1 N. B. R. 551, Fed. Cas. No. 3,008.

[88] In re Shaffer, 104 Fed. 982, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

[89] General Order No. 22.

[90] In re Levy, 1 Ben. 496, 1 N. B. R. 136, Fed. Cas. No. 8,296; In re Patterson, 1 N. B. R. 147, Fed. Cas. No. 10,818; asked, the fact and grounds of objection, and his ruling on the objection, and then, even though he decides the question to be inadmissible, to allow and require it to be answered and the answer to be entered in the deposition. But an exception is made in the case of clearly privileged testimony, and also as to evidence which is so unmistakably incompetent, irrelevant, or immaterial that it would be an abuse of process or of the power of the court to compel its production or permit its introduction.[91]

§ 269. Scope of the Inquiry.—In reference to the examination of the bankrupt, it is provided that he may be interrogated "concerning the conducting of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and, in addition, all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate."[92] Under this broad provision, the bankrupt may be examined substantially as under a reference upon a creditor's bill, or in proceedings supplementary to execution.[93] All questions are proper which elicit answers tending to show an interest of the bankrupt in property at the time the petition was filed.[94] And it is the duty of the bankrupt to disclose whatever it may concern any parties interested to know concerning his debts, business, or estate.[95] Thus, he may be required to make known to the trustee the combination of a safe alleged to contain property of his.[96] But there are limits to the range which this examination may take, and no questions are proper which are not relevant to the matters described in the statute as the subjects of the inquiry. Thus, if the bankrupt has testified that he is not the owner of certain property, questions relating to the identity

In re Rosenfield, 1 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 12,059; In re Bond, 3 N. B. R. 7, Fed. Cas. No. 1,618; In re Koch, Fed. Cas. No. 7,916. See In re Reakirt, 7 N. B. R. 329, Fed. Cas. No. 11,614.

[91] Supra, § 72.

[92] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, clause 9. The examination of an alleged bankrupt which can be ordered under § 21a of the Act is to show the condition of the estate, and enable the court to discover its extent and whereabouts and get possession of it, and such examination cannot be employed to obtain evidence for use on the controverted issue of insolvency, examination for the latter purpose being authorized by § 3d. In re Stell (D. C.) 269 Fed. 1008, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 492.

[93] In re Pioneer Paper Co., 7 N. B. R. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 11,178.

[94] In re Carson, 2 N. B. R. 107, Fed. Cas. No. 2,461. A question as to whether a bankrupt did not make a certain statement in writing as to his assets within a few months prior to his bankruptcy, on which he obtained property on credit from certain of his creditors, is material and proper to be asked him on his examiuation. In re Jacobs & Roth, 154 Fed. 988, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 728.

[95] In re Cooke, 10 N. B. R. 126, Fed. Cas. No. 3,168. He may be examined on the question whether a composition offered to his creditors should be accepted by them and confirmed by the court, as being for the best interest of all concerned. In re Ash, 17 N. B. R. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 571.

[96] In re Hooks Smelting Co., 138 Fed. 954, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83.

of the owner, and the duration, extent, and character of the ownership of such property, are not relevant.[97] But while the debtor cannot be interrogated as to property in which he clearly has no interest, he is subject to examination as to all property in which he may have an interest. That is, it is not necessary for the examining creditor or trustee first to show that the bankrupt actually has an interest in the property, before questioning him about it, but only to show that he may have such an interest.[98] For similar reasons, it is held that a creditor who has filed proof of a debt, claiming that it was contracted by fraud, cannot examine the bankrupt as to the facts constituting the alleged fraud, the inquiry being irrelevant to the scope and purpose of the examination.[99] Neither is it proper, on the examination of the bankrupt, to interrogate him as to any property which he may have acquired since the commencement of the proceedings. For any such property is his own, and is not affected by the bankruptcy[100] Nor can he be questioned as to his prospects or future plans or expectations, since these have no bearing on the proceeding in bankruptcy.[101] But on the other hand, a creditor who is examining the bankrupt is not limited in his questions to transactions taking place since his own debt accrued,[102] and generally, the examination is not limited to facts and transactions occurring within four months prior to the bankruptcy, but may be directed to matters anterior to that time, if the circumstances in question

[97] In re Van Tuyl, 1 N. B. R. 636, Fed. Cas. No. 16,880.

[98] In re Bonesteel, 2 N. B. R. 330, Fed. Cas. No. 1,628. Where the examination has shown that the wife of the bankrupt holds valuable property transferred to her by third persons after his insolvency, and enough has come out to furnish reasonable support for the theory that the consideration for such transfer moved from the bankrupt himself, or that the transfer to the wife was a mere cover, then it is the right of the creditor to examine the bankrupt fully and minutely with reference to the whole transaction, and the bankrupt must answer all pertinent questions. Idem. And see In re Clark, 4 N. B. R. 237, Fed. Cas. No. 2,805. So where a bankrupt stated that he had sold certain property and used part of the proceeds in paying a debt for money borrowed, all the circumstances of the transaction are open to inquiry on the bankrupt's examination by his creditors. In re Brundage, 100 Fed. 613, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47.

[99] In re Wright, 2 Ben. 509, 2 N. B. R. 142, Fed. Cas. No. 18,065. Compare In re Koch, 1 N. B. R. 549, Fed. Cas. No. 7,916.

[100] In re Levy, 1 Ben. 496, 1 N. B. R. 136, Fed. Cas. No. 8,296; In re Rosenfield, 1 N. B. R. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 12,059. But he may be asked questions tending to show that, within a short time after filing his petition, he had money in his possession not acquired by the transaction of any business subsequent to such filing. In re McBrien, 3 Ben. 481, 3 N. B. R. 344, Fed. Cas. No. 8,666. And if he has acquired valuable property during the proceedings under suspicious circumstances, he may be questioned concerning it. In re Walton, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 533. And see In re Tudor, 96 Fed. 942, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 808.

[101] In re White, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 536.

[102] In re Craig, 3 Ben. 333, 3 N. B. R. 100, Fed. Cas. No. 3,322.

will throw any light upon the facts or issues pertinent to the proceedings.[103]

As to witnesses other than the bankrupt himself, the law provides that they may be examined concerning the "acts, conduct, or property of the bankrupt." The examination of a third person in a bankruptcy proceeding differs from the examination of a witness on the trial of a case. In the latter, there can be no examination of "witnesses" until there has been an issue made up and some point of fact in controversy, and then the examination must be confined to such issue or fact. But in bankruptcy, the witness may be interrogated generally as to the "acts, conduct, and property of the bankrupt," the object being to obtain information touching the estate of the bankrupt, its condition and location, and his conduct as affecting his property and his disposal of it, in order that the necessary steps may be taken for its recovery and preservation.[104] The trustee may use the right of examining a creditor or other person for the purpose of discovering the particulars of a transaction with the bankrupt which he suspects to have been fraudulent, and of getting evidence which will enable him to maintain a suit to set aside the judgment or transfer impeached. Thus, the witness may be required to give information as to property of the bankrupt fraudulently held in his name, as to preferences alleged to have been given, as to his knowledge of any property concealed by the bankrupt, as to any secret trust or other arrangement between the bankrupt and himself, so far as it affects the estate or the rights of other creditors, as to alleged liens on the property, and so forth.[105] But here, as in all judicial examinations, questions propounded must be relevant to the subject of inquiry. The course of the examination must be confined within legal limits, and though the court is vested with a wide measure of discretion as to its scope, it must not be pushed so far as to encroach upon the witness' right of privacy in relation to his own affairs, where the concerns of the bankrupt are not involved.[106] While the statute [103] In re Brundage, 100 Fed. 613, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 47.

[104] In re Blake, 2 N. B. R. 10, Fed. Cas. No. 1,492; In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822. This provision of the statute does not authorize the interrogating of a witness concerning an alleged contract regarding the bankrupt's property made, not with the bankrupt, but with the trustee himself. In re Madero Bros. (D. C.) 256 Fed. 859, 43 Am. Bankr. Rep. 669.

[105] In re Lathrop, Haskins & Co., 184 Fed. 534, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re Pioneer Paper Co., 7 N. B. R. 250, Fed. Cas. No. 11,178; Garrison v. Markley, 7 N. B. R. 246, Fed. Cas. No. 5,256.

[106] In re Horgan, 98 Fed. 414, 39 C. C. A. 118, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 253; In re Howard, 95 Fed. 415, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 582. See In re Earle, 3 N. B. R. 304, Fed. Cas. No. 4,244; In re Stuyvesant Bank, 6 Ben. 33, 7 N. B. R. 445, Fed. Cas. No. 13,582; In re Lathrop, 4 N. B. R. 94, Fed. Cas. No. 8,106. Where the person examined is the principal stockholder and manager of an alleged bankrupt corporation, it is imperative that should be liberally construed, so as to enforce full and frank answers by a witness in aid of the bankruptcy proceedings, yet it does not authorize an inquiry into his private affairs which have no relation to the "acts, conduct, or property" of the bankrupt, nor can the court require him to produce private papers having no relation thereto; and a mere affidavit of belief on the part of creditors or others is not sufficient to overcome a positive statement of the witness that the transactions inquired about or papers demanded have no relation to the bankrupt, so as to authorize the court to compel him to answer or to produce the papers.[107] So, the court cannot compel an officer of a corporation in which the bankrupt had stock, the same being admittedly in the bankrupt's possession, to give evidence as to his opinion of the value of the stock and to produce in support thereof the records relating to the financial condition of the company.[108] Again, a witness cannot be compelled to answer as to the original consideration for a negotiable bond issued by the bankrupt where the creditor is a bona fide holder for value.[109] And where the bankrupt, more than a year before the enactment of the bankruptcy law, had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors under the state law, it is not material or proper, in his examination in the bankruptcy proceedings, to inquire into the circumstances under which the assignment was made, nor to require the assignee to produce the books and papers turned over to him at the time, unless a foundation is first laid for the belief that property of the bankrupt was withheld by him at the time of such assignment and was still held as his at the time of the enactment of the bankruptcy law.[110] But it is not left to the judgment of the witness to decide whether or not the question put to him is relevant. If he declines to answer any question on this ground, he does so at his peril, for the decision as to relevancy of any question or line of inquiry is for the court.[111] Moreover, in these examinations in bankruptcy, saving the right of the witness to refuse to criminate himself, and respecting the inviolability of privileged communications, the courts will generally rule on the side of relevancy, and require the witness to answer if it seems even probable that the facts to be elicited much latitude be permitted in the examination, even though some personal affairs of the witness may be revealed, keeping in mind as the test of its scope that the inquiry concerns, primarily and objectively, the "acts, conduct, or property of the bankrupt." In re Standard Aero Corporation (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 783, 46 Am. Bankr. Rep. 517.

107 In re Carley, 106 Fed. 862, 5 Am. Bankr. Rep. 554; In re E. S. Wheeler & Co., 151 Fed. 542, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 421.

108 In re Seligman, 192 Fed. 750, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 664.

109 In re Leland, 6 Ben. 175, Fed. Cas. No. 8,229.

110 In re Hayden, 96 Fed. 199, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 670.

111 People's Bank of Buffalo v. Brown, may be relevant.[112] But creditors cannot use the process of examinations in bankruptcy for the purpose of obtaining information (from persons other than the bankrupt himself) which they can use in opposition to his discharge. In regard to such witnesses, and the facts they may know, a creditor must be left to the risk of establishing them upon the trial of the issues as parties are in ordinary trials at law.[113]

§ 270. Privileged Communications.—The rule which forbids the disclosure, as matter of evidence, of confidential communications passing between an attorney and his client will be respected and enforced in examinations in bankruptcy no less than in other judicial investigations.[114] At the same time, counsel for the bankrupt, when examined as a witness, will be bound to answer all questions except such as require him to disclose information as to the affairs of the bankrupt which he received, as such counsel, from the bankrupt or from persons to whom he was referred by the bankrupt for the purpose of obtaining information.[115] In other words, an attorney cannot refuse to answer unless the facts which he is asked to disclose came to his knowledge while acting in his professional capacity and came from the client or from some one acting for the client.[116] A witness summoned for examination in a bankruptcy proceeding cannot refuse to be sworn merely on the ground that he had been counsel for the bankrupt and was still his legal adviser. "The right to refuse to answer a question on the ground of privilege does not warrant a refusal to be sworn as a witness. The privilege cannot be interposed until a question is asked which invades the privilege."[117] Nor will it be permitted to the attorney of the bankrupt to add to his oath as a witness a reservation as to privileged communications.[118] Whether the privilege is properly claimed and should be allowed is a question which must be determined by the court and not by the witness, and hence, by way of preliminary investigation, the witness may be subjected to such an interrogation as will put the court in position to decide the question.[119]

112 Fed. 652, 50 C. C. A. 411, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475; In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822.

112 People's Bank of Buffalo v. Brown, 112 Fed. 652, 50 C. C. A. 411, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475. See Robinson v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., 28 Fed. 340; Johnson Steel Street-Rail Co. v. North Branch Steel Co., 48 Fed. 196.

113 In re Brandt, 2 N. B. R. 215, Fed. Cas. No. 1,812.

114 In re Krueger, 2 Low. 182, Fed. Cas. No. 7,942.

115 In re Aspinwall, 7 Ben. 433, 10 N. B. R. 448, Fed. Cas. No. 591; In re Donohue, 2 Hask. 17, Fed. Cas. No. 3,990; In re Bellis, 3 Ben. 386, 3 N. B. R. 199, Fed. Cas. No. 1,274.

116 In re O'Donohoe, 3 N. B. R. 245, Fed. Cas. No. 10,435.

117 In re Woodward, 4 Ben. 102, 3 N. B. R. 719, Fed. Cas. No. 17,999.

118 In re Adams, 6 Ben. 56, Fed. Cas. No. 42.

119 People's Bank of Buffalo v. Brown,

§ 271. Privilege Against Self-Criminating Testimony.—The fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that "no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself," and in the great case of Counselman v. Hitchcock,[120] it was held that this provision was not to be confined to a criminal case against the party himself, that its object was to insure that no one should be compelled, when acting as a witness in any investigation, to give testimony which might tend to show he had committed a crime. It was also held that the act of Congress which provides that no evidence given by a witness shall be in any manner used against him in any court of the United States in any criminal proceedings,[121] does not supply a complete protection from all the perils against which the constitutional prohibition was designed to guard, inasmuch as it affords no protection against that use of testimony wrung from a witness which consists in gaining therefrom a knowledge of the details of a crime, and of sources of information which may supply other means of convicting the witness or party.

These principles apply to the case of an examination in bankruptcy, and the constitutional safeguard may be appealed to by any witness undergoing such examination, whether it be the bankrupt himself or another. No witness, under such examination, can be compelled to reply to questions, when his answers would tend to criminate him, in the sense of the constitutional provision as above explained, or would furnish information or evidence which might be used against him in a criminal prosecution, and although the seventh section of the bankruptcy act (relating to the bankrupt and his examination) provides that "no testimony given by him shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding," this does not take away the right of the bankrupt to decline answering questions which tend to criminate him, because it is not a sufficient protection, not being as broad and comprehensive as the constitutional provision, and therefore not to be taken as a substitute for it or as equivalent to it.[122] Thus, where a

112 Fed. 652, 50 C. C. A. 411, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 475.

120 142 U. S. 547, 12 Sup. Ct. 195, 35 L. Ed. 1110.

121 Rev. Stat. U. S. § 860.

122 In re Hess, 134 Fed. 109, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; United States v. Goldstein, 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755; In re Nachman, 114 Fed. 995, 8 Am. Bankr. Rep. 180; In re Franklin Syndicate, 114 Fed. 205, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 511; In re Feldstein, 103 Fed. 269, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Gilbert, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 378; In re Rosser, 96 Fed. 305, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755; In re Scott, 95 Fed. 815, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49; In re Patterson, 1 Ben. 544, 1 N. B. R. 152, Fed. Cas. No. 10,816; In re Graham, 8 Ben. 419, Fed. Cas. No. 5,659; In re Koch, 1 N. B. R. 549, Fed. Cas. No. 7,916. Contra, Mackel v. Rochester, 102 Fed. 314, 42 C. C. A. 427, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 1. This provision of the statute has reference only to crimes committed previous to the giving of such testimony, and not to any criminal proceeding bas-person against whom indictments are pending in a state court is adjudged bankrupt on an involuntary petition, and brought before the referee in bankruptcy for examination, he cannot be compelled to answer any questions propounded on such examination where his answers would tend to criminate him on the trial of the pending indictments.[123]

The constitutional privilege, however, is to be claimed only when necessary, and only with reference to some particular question propounded to the witness. It does not exempt a witness from being sworn, nor permit him to add to his oath a reservation as to criminating matters; it only enables him to decline a particular question.[124] And further a witness cannot avoid answering a question by the mere statement that his answer would tend to criminate him, without regard to whether the statement is reasonable or not.[125] On the contrary, it is for the judge before whom the question arises to decide whether an answer thereto may reasonably have a tendency to criminate the witness, or to furnish proof of an element or link in the chain of evidence necessary to convict him of a crime. Where, from the course of the evidence and the nature of the question, the court can definitely see that the question, if answered in a particular way, will have that effect, the privilege claimed by the witness must be allowed.[126] On the other hand, if it is apparent that the answer could not possibly tend to criminate the ed on a crime inherent in the bankrupt's examination, and it does not protect him from a prosecution for perjury committed by false swearing during the course of his examination. And in such a prosecution, not only may the alleged false testimony be given in evidence, but any other testimony of the defendant given in the examination may be put in evidence, provided it is relevant to the issue and tends to establish the falsity of that on which the prosecution is based. Glickstein v. United States, 222 U. S. 139, 32 Sup. Ct. 71, 56 L. Ed. 128, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786; Daniels v. United States, 196 Fed. 459, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790; United States v. Brod, 176 Fed. 165, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740; Cameron v. United States, 192 Fed. 548, 113 C. C. A. 20, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 657. Further, it is to be noted that the protection afforded to the bankrupt by section 7, clause 9, of the bankruptcy act, extends only to the testimony given by the bankrupt upon his examination under that clause and section, and does not render inadmissible, on a criminal prosecution, the schedules filed by him in the bankruptcy proceedings, or the testimony of an expert accountant based upon an examination of his books which he had turned over to the trustee. Ensign v. Pennsylvania, 227 U. S. 592, 33 Sup. Ct. 321, 57 L. Ed. 658, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 408. But see Arndstein v. McCarthy, 254 U. S. 71, 41 Sup. Ct. 26, 65 L. Ed. —.

[123] In re Scott, 95 Fed. 815, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49; In re Hooks Smelting Co., 138 Fed. 954, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 83; In re Kanter, 117 Fed. 356, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 104; In re Gilbert, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 378. There are a few cases in the reports in which these principles, as applied to examinations in bankruptcy, are denied or not admitted to their full extent. See In re Bromley, 3 N. B. R. 686; In re Sapiro. 92 Fed. 340.

[124] In re Scott, 95 Fed. 815, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 49.

[125] In re Rosenblatt, 143 Fed. 663, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 306; In re Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson (D. C.) 215 Fed. 815.

[126] Ex parte Irvine, 74 Fed. 954; In re Feldstein, 103 Fed. 269, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 321; In re Shera, 114 Fed. 207, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 552.

witness, it must be given, notwithstanding the claim of privilege.[127] This point is further illustrated by the cases, so frequently arising in practice, where a bankrupt attempts to withhold his books of account and other papers from his trustee or receiver, on the assertion that they contain matter which might be used against him in a criminal proceeding and so tend to criminate him. In this event, the rule is that the bankrupt must produce and deposit the books, in order that the question of privilege may be determined by the court or referee, and if it appears that they do contain such criminating evidence, the court will make such an order as will protect the bankrupt from its use in any criminal case, and at the same time give the trustee the use of the books in the administration of the estate.[128]

Again, it is only against criminal or penal consequences of his disclosures that the constitution protects a witness. A person undergoing an examination in bankruptcy cannot refuse to answer questions concerning his dealings with the bankrupt on the ground that his answers may furnish evidence against him in a civil action pending or to brought on behalf of the trustee in bankruptcy, and in point of fact, such examinations are generally held for the precise purpose of enabling the trustee to obtain evidence for such suits, or to ascertain that there is no such evidence.[129] And the constitutional privilege of refusing to give self-criminating testimony was not intended to shield the witness from the personal disgrace or opprobrium attaching to the exposure of his crime, but only from actual prosecution and punishment. Hence, if the crime in which he was implicated was such that a prosecution against him would be barred by the statute of limitations, or if he has already received a pardon for it, he may be compelled to answer.[130] Nor is it a sufficient reason for refusing to answer a proper and pertinent question that the answer will expose the witness to the contempt of the community, or humiliate him, or bring him into general disgrace, if he would not also be liable to prosecution.[131] But if the question does not relate to any matter of fact in issue, or to any matter contained in his direct testimony, the witness need not answer it, and will not be [127] In re Levin, 131 Fed. 388, 11 Am. Bankr. Rep. 382; In re Edward Hess & Co., 136 Fed. 988.

[128] In re Harris, 221 U. S. 274, 31 Sup. Ct. 557, 55 L. Ed. 732, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 302; In re Harris, 164 Fed. 292, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 911; In re Hark, 136 Fed. 986, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 624; In re Hess, 134 Fed. 109, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 559; United States v. Rhodes (D. C.) 212 Fed. 518.

[129] In re Cliffe, 97 Fed. 540, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 257; In re Fay, 3 N. B. R. 660, Fed. Cas. No. 4,708; In re Danforth, Fed. Cas. No. 3,560.

[130] Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 16 Sup. Ct. 644, 40 L. Ed. 819.

[131] In re Richards, 4 Ben. 303, 4 N. B. R. 93, Fed. Cas. No. 11,769.

compelled, to answer it, where he states that a truthful answer would tend to degrade him.[132]

The constitutional privilege may be waived. And if the bankrupt volunteers a disclosure concerning property, assets, or business dealings, he can be compelled to go into the matter fully. He cannot stop short at his own discretion, and refuse to answer further questions, on the assertion that he might be criminated.[133] So he cannot claim the protection of the constitution where the question objected to is clearly in the line of cross-examination on what he has volunteered himself, either in his petition and schedules or in testimony already given.[134] So again, he waives the privilege if he makes no objection to testifying before the referee, but answers the questions put to him, so that any admissions made by him in the course of the examination can properly be used on his cross-examination in a criminal proceeding against him.[135] And where, at the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, he surrenders his books to the receiver without raising any question of privilege as to their use against him, so far as it is a proper use of the books by the trustee in bankruptcy to allow prosecuting authorities to use them, the bankrupt is chargeable with knowledge of that right and has waived his privilege.[136] And it has been held that no constitutional or statutory right of an accused person (either under the constitutional provisions against unreasonable searches and seizures and against the compelling of self-criminating testimony, or under the Act of Congress prohibiting the use of a party's pleading or evidence to his prejudice in a subsequent criminal proceeding against him) are infringed by the use by a grand jury, in the investigation of the charges contained in an indictment, of his books and papers procured from his receiver or trustee in bankruptcy, to whom they had been delivered under an unconditional order of the bankruptcy court, and which books and papers contain information with respect to the matters charged in the indictment against him. And further, these constitutional and statutory provisions do not prohibit the use of the books and papers of a bankrupt, in the hands of his receiver or trustee in bankruptcy, as evidence against him in a criminal prosecution for embezzlement and false pretenses, based upon disclosures in such books and papers.[137]

[132] In re Danforth, Fed. Cas. No. 3,560; In re Lewis, 4 Ben. 67, 3 N. B. R. 621, Fed. Cas. No. 8,312.

[133] In re Bendheim, 180 Fed. 918, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 254.

[134] In re Walsh, 104 Fed. 518, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 693.

[135] State v. Burrell, 27 Mont. 282, 70 Pac. 982, affirmed, Burrell v. Montana, 194 U. S. 572, 24 Sup. Ct. 787, 48 L. Ed. 1122, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 132.

[136] In re Tracy & Co. (D. C.) 177 Fed. 532, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 438.

[137] United States v. Halstead, 38 App. D. C. 69.

On the principle of waiver or estoppel, it has further been held that when the bankrupt has filed schedules of his assets, it is a representation that he has no other property, and therefore he cannot object to legitimate cross-examination with reference thereto, on the ground that it may incriminate him, so long as it does not tend to develop any independent fact.[138] But it is the doctrine of the Supreme Court that the mere voluntary filing of schedules in bankruptcy, which, standing alone, do not amount to an admission of guilt or furnish clear proof of crime, does not waive the bankrupt's privilege to stop short and refuse to answer questions concerning the schedules when he can fairly claim that to answer might tend to incriminate him.[139]

Aside from such questions, however, it is clear that the Bankruptcy Act itself protects the bankrupt against the subsequent prejudicial use of the testimony elicited from him on his examination in bankruptcy. Thus, an accused person, on trial for the crime of defrauding a national bank, cannot be cross-examined regarding the testimony given on his examination in bankruptcy.[140] And so, on a trial for embezzlement, the defendant's testimony previously given upon an examination into the affairs of the corporation whose funds he was alleged to have embezzled, given before a referee in bankruptcy, cannot be admitted.[141]

§ 272. Use and Effect of Evidence.—The testimony of a bankrupt, taken on his examination before the referee, is a part of the record, to which creditors generally are entitled to access while it remains in the custody of the referee, and this remains true although the interests of the creditor seeking to examine the testimony are antagonistic to those of the trustee, in that the latter intends to sue the former to recover an alleged preference, and though a disclosure of the bankrupt's testimony, in view of his hostility to the trustee, may result prejudicially to the creditor.[142] On the other hand, statements made by a bankrupt on his examination concerning the ownership of a particular article of property in his possession at the time of the filing of the petition, and in the absence of any documentary evidence as to the capacity in which he held it, are competent evidence, as admissions, though not conclusive, against his trustee on the hearing of a petition by an adverse claimant to reclaim the property, the trustee being at least to this ex-

138 In re Tobias, Greenthal & Mendelson (D. C.) 215 Fed. 815.

139 Arndstein v. McCarthy, 254 U. S. 71, 41 Sup. Ct. 26, 65 L. Ed. ——.

140 Bain v. United States (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 664, 45 Am. Bankr. Rep. 79.

141 People v. Lay, 193 Mich. 476, 160 N. W. 467.

142 In re Samuelsohn, 174 Fed. 911, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528.

tent in privity with the bankrupt.[143] So the testimony of the bankrupt taken on his examination and reduced to writing, is admissible against him in a subsequent proceeding by the trustee to require him to surrender money or property of the estate alleged to be in his possession or under his control, and when the bankrupt is a corporation, the same rule applies to the testimony of any of its officers; but this does not apply in the case of any third person examined as a witness in the bankruptcy proceedings.[144] When a creditor's claim is contested by the trustee, the creditor may make use of testimony elicited from the bankrupt at an examination in which the trustee participated, although the record does not show that due notice was given to creditors (as this fact may be inferred), and although the creditor had not filed or formally presented his claim at the time of the examination, as that fact did not deprive him of the right to take part in the examination.[145]

§ 273. Witness Fees and Costs of Examination.—The statute provides that no person shall be required to attend as a witness before a referee in bankruptcy unless "his lawful mileage and fee for one day's attendance shall be first paid or tendered to him," [146] and that the fees and mileage of witnesses shall be considered as a part of the "cost of administration" of an estate in bankruptcy, and shall be entitled to priority of payment.[147] The fees of a witness must be paid or tendered at the time of the service of the summons or subpœna upon him.[148] If the witness attends without the prepayment of the fees, the fees are to be collected as in ordinary actions and according to the practice of the courts therein.[149] If there is an adjournment, the witness is entitled to be paid his attendance fee for the adjourned day before he is obliged to [143] In re Thompson, 197 Fed. 681, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 794. But see Breckons v. Snyder, 211 Pa. St. 176, 60 Atl. 575, holding that, where a trustee in bankruptcy sues to recover money of a bankrupt said to be in the hands of the defendant, the testimony of the bankrupt at the preliminary examination before the referee as to his assets and liabilities is not admissible in evidence, the issue not being between the same parties.

[144] In re Alphin & Lake Cotton Co. (D. C.) 131 Fed. 824, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 653.

[145] Beaven v. Stuart, 250 Fed. 972, 163 C. C. A. 222, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 81.

[146] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 41. The fees of witnesses in the courts of the United States are fixed by law as follows: "For each day's attendance in court, or before any officer pursuant to law, one dollar and fifty cents, and five cents a mile for going from his place of residence to the place of trial or hearing and five cents a mile for returning." Rev. Stat. U. S. § 848. A witness is entitled to fees only for the days of actual attendance, and not for the days on which he was ready to attend. In re Crane, 15 N. B. R. 120, Fed. Cas. No. 3,352. Fees and mileage, at the fixed rate, are allowed to the witness whether his evidence is taken at a hearing before the judge or referee or on deposition. Rev. Stat. U. S. §§ 848, 870, 874.

[147] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 64 b, cl. 3.

[148] In re Griffen, 1 N. B. R. 371, 2 Ben. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 5,810; In re Kerber, 125 Fed. 653, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 747.

[149] In re Griffen, 2 Ben. 209, 1 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 5,810.

return on such adjourned day, and also travel fees, if it is reasonable for him to return to his home in the interval, as to which the referee is to judge.[150] The wife (or husband) of the bankrupt, if attending under an order and being examined as a witness, is entitled to the same fee and mileage as any other witness.[151] But it is doubtful whether the statute would apply in favor of a creditor who had proved his claim and was afterwards cited to appear and be examined, not concerning the affairs of the bankrupt, but concerning his own claim, the trustee desiring to discover grounds for moving to expunge it. Under the act of 1867, it was held that the creditor in such a case was not entitled to witness fees.[152] The bankrupt himself, when ordered to appear for examination in the usual course, or at the instance of the trustee or a creditor, is not entitled to fees as a witness, but the law directs that he "shall be paid his actual expenses from the estate when examined or required to attend at any place other than the city, town, or village of his residence."[153] In regard to "expert witnesses," it has been decided that extra compensation to such persons, over and above the statutory witness fee and mileage, cannot be taxed as costs or allowed against a losing party in a court of bankruptcy, nor will the court be bound to make such an allowance because counsel have so agreed.[154]

In regard to the hire of a clerk or stenographer to take down the testimony upon an examination in bankruptcy, the statute allows the referee to "authorize the employment of stenographers at the expense of the estates at a compensation not to exceed ten cents per folio for reporting and transcribing the proceedings," but only "upon the application of the trustee."[155] Except, therefore, in cases where the trustee will make an application to this effect, the general rule will apply, that the cost of taking testimony must be defrayed by the party at whose instance it is taken, whether it be creditors seeking for information which will enable them to prepare opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge, or the bankrupt himself desiring to have additional statements or explanations appear in the testimony after the

[150] In re Griffen, 2 Ben. 209, 1 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 5,810.

[151] In re Marcus, 160 Fed. 229, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 397; In re Griffen, 2 Ben. 209, 1 N. B. R. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 5,810.

[152] In re Kyler, 2 Ben. 414, 2 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,956; In re Paddock, 6 N. B. R. 396, Fed. Cas. No. 10,658.

[153] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, proviso. See In re McNair, 2 N. B. R. 219, Fed. Cas. No. 8,907.

[154] In re Carolina Cooperage Co., 96 Fed. 604, holding also that any extra compensation to such witness may be a matter of private arrangement between the witness and the party calling him.

[155] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 38, cl. 5. The laws of the United States provide that a "folio," in written or printed documents, shall mean 100 words, counting each figure as a word. When there are more than 50 and less than 100 words, they shall be counted as one folio, but a less number of words than examining creditors have finished their questions.[156] But it has been held that this provision of the statute does not apply to hearings on the examination of the bankrupt before a special commissioner, and that, in such cases, the stenographer may be allowed a larger compensation if his bill is approved by the receiver and it is shown that all the examination was necessary and resulted in benefit to the estate.[157]

§ 274. Contempts by Witnesses.—The bankruptcy act (Section 41) provides that it shall be punishable as a contempt if any person shall "misbehave during a hearing, or so near the place thereof as to obstruct the same,[158] or neglect to produce, after having been ordered to do so, any pertinent document,[159] or refuse to appear after having been subpœnaed, or, upon appearing, refuse to take the oath as a witness, or, after having taken the oath, refuse to be examined according to law." If the witness, after being duly summoned and after he has had a reasonable time in which to make his appearance, does not attend before the referee as ordered, the proper method of securing his presence is by an attachment.[160] But this applies only to ordinary witnesses, and compulsory measures of this kind will not be directed, unless strictly necessary, against one called as an expert or one wanted only in the character of an interpreter.[161] Nor can this process be resorted to in any case unless the witness was duly ordered to appear by a summons, subpœna, rule to show cause, or other proper process,[162] and was ten-

50 shall not be counted, except when the whole document contains less than 50 words. Rev. Stat. U. S. §§ 854, 828. And see Jerman v. Stewart, 12 Fed. 271.

156 In re Price, 91 Fed. 635, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 419; In re Mealy, 2 N. B. R. 128, Fed. Cas. No. 9,378; In re Eidom, 3 N. B. R. 160, Fed. Cas. No. 4,315; Scofield v. Moorhead, 2 N. B. R. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 12,510. Where, in an examination in bankruptcy, the testimony of a large number of witnesses was taken stenographically, the bankrupt is entitled to a stenographic copy of such testimony, on paying the charge fixed, as he must be deemed a party in interest. Petition of Moulthrop, 249 Fed. 468, 161 C. C. A. 426, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 654.

157 In re Stark, 155 Fed. 694, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 467.

158 It is a contempt of court to interrupt and violently break up the examination of a witness by persisting in the attempt to dictate to and prompt the witness and control his answers, when this is done in an overbearing and violent manner and so as to prevent the further continuance of the examination. United States v. Anonymous, 21 Fed. 761.

159 As to contempt of court by refusal to produce books, papers, and other documents, see In re Herr, 182 Fed. 715, 25 Am. Bankr. Rep. 141; In re Sorkin, 166 Fed. 831, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 637; In re Alper, 162 Fed. 207, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 612; In re Fellerman, 149 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; In re Johnson & Knox Lumber Co., 151 Fed. 207, 80 C. C. A. 259, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50; In re Soloway & Katz, 196 Fed. 132, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 345; In re Ironclad Mfg. Co. (C. C. A.) 201 Fed. 66: In re Cantor, 215 Fed. 61, 131 C. C. A. 369.

160 Bowen v. Thornton, 9 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 575.

161 In re Roelker, Sprague, 276 Fed. Cas. No. 11,995.

162 In re Johnson & Knox Lumber Co., 151 Fed. 207, 80 C. C. A. 259, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

dered his proper fees and mileage,[163] nor unless the summons or order for examination was duly served within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court.[164] When the contumacious conduct on the part of the witness consists in his refusal to answer a proper question, without any legal excuse or justification therefor, he may be committed as for a criminal contempt, to stand committed until he will answer the question which was propounded to him.[165] But it must appear that the matter in regard to which he was interrogated was material and relevant to the point in issue, and that his answer would not require him to criminate himself or to disclose privileged communications.[166]

But when the witness has given an answer to a question put to him, but a false one, thereby committing perjury, the authority to punish him as for a contempt is not so clear. This case is not specifically covered by the statute, for such behavior is not "refusing to be examined according to law," and it has been held that while a refusal to answer is contumacy and a contempt, yet when an answer has been given, the judge in bankruptcy cannot assume or decide that the answer was false and punish the witness for perjury as for a contempt.[167] Yet it must be admitted that the great preponderance of authority is to the effect that false swearing in an examination in bankruptcy is a contempt of the court and punishable as such, notwithstanding that it is also a crime and punishable on indictment.[168]

[163] In re Johnson & Knox Lumber Co., 151 Fed. 207, 80 C. C. A. 259, 18 Am. Bankr. Rep. 50.

[164] In re Hodges, 11 N. B. R. 369, Fed. Cas. No. 6,562. But where a federal court orders the arrest of a witness charged with having failed to obey a subpœna issued by it, and duly served, and the witness departs into another district before he can be arrested, any judge of the United States having jurisdiction in the district to which the witness has removed, may order his arrest and removal back to the district in which he is charged with the offense. In re Ellerbe, 13 Fed. 530.

[165] People v. Davidson, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 471; People v. Fancher, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 467. Where a witness fails to appear at the appointed time, and, after contempt proceedings are instituted against him, appears, apologizes, and offers himself freely for examination, he thereby purges himself of the civil contempt, and the only question remaining is the punishment to be imposed to secure respect for the court's authority. In re Farkas, 204 Fed. 343, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 337.

[166] In re Romine, 138 Fed. 837, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785; Ex parte Peck, 3 Blatchf. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 10,885.

[167] State v. Lazarus, 37 La. Ann. 314.

[168] In re Michaels, 194 Fed. 552, 28 Am. Bankr. Rep. 38; In re Wiesebrock, 188 Fed. 757, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 745; In re Shear, 188 Fed. 677; Magen v. Campbell, 186 Fed. 675, 108 C. C. A. 531, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 594; In re Bronstein, 182 Fed. 349, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 524; In re Magen, 179 Fed. 572, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 63; In re Schulman, 177 Fed. 191, 101 C. C. A. 361, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 809; In re Singer, 174 Fed 208, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 28; In re Schulman, 167 Fed. 237, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 288; In re Gordon, 167 Fed. 239, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 290; In re Gitkin, 164 Fed. 71, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 113; Ex parte Bick, 155 Fed. 908, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 68; In re Fellerman, 149 Fed. 244, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 785.

The provision of the Bankruptcy Act that no testimony given by the bankrupt on his examination "shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding" has reference only to crimes committed previous to the giving of such testimony, and not to any criminal proceeding based on a crime inherent in the bankrupt's examination or any contempt of court committed in the course of such examination. Hence it does not make such testimony inadmissible in a proceeding to punish him for contempt in giving evasive answers.[169] And it does not protect him from a prosecution for perjury committed by false swearing during the course of his examination.[170]

But as to the power to punish perjury in such an examination as a contempt of the court an examination of the cases cited will show that the question has seldom arisen in its naked form. Almost always the adjudication of contempt has been based upon the conduct and behavior of the witness through the whole course of his examination, and upon the fact that such conduct shows a settled purpose to thwart the objects of the examination, to defeat the operation of the law by concealing property, and otherwise to set the authority of the court at defiance. So that convictions for contempt of this sort have been grounded not so much on the fact that the answer to a particular question was false, as on the fact that the witness repeatedly gave vague, ambiguous, or incomplete answers to questions which he might have answered clearly, or persisted in professing ignorance or want of recollection of matters which he certainly must have known and remembered.

It is also a question how far a witness may purge a contempt by showing that it was committed under the advice or direction of counsel. The result of the authorities appears to be that if the witness refuses to answer questions or to produce books or papers, but does so under the direction of counsel who in good faith advise him to pursue that course, the circumstance will palliate though it does not excuse his contumacy, and he should not be punished (except, perhaps, to the extent of paying costs) if he will profess his readiness to submit to the examination, produce the books, etc., on the decision being rendered against him.[171]

[169] In re Kaplan Bros., 213 Fed. 753, 130 C. C. A. 267, 32 Am. Bankr. Rep. 305.

[170] Glickstein v. United States, 222 U. S. 139, 32 Sup. Ct. 71, 56 L. Ed. 128, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 786; Daniels v. United States, 196 Fed. 459, 116 C. C. A. 233, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 790; United States v. Brod (D. C.) 176 Fed. 165, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 740; Cameron v. United States, 192 Fed. 548, 113 C. C. A. 20, 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 657; State v. Frasier, 94 Or. 90, 184 Pac. 848; United States v. Coyle (D. C.) 229 Fed. 256.

[171] United States v. Goldstein, 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755; In re Fixen & Co., 96 Fed. 748, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 822; In re Rosenfield, 1 N. B. R.

The referee in bankruptcy has no power to punish for contempts committed by witnesses before him,[172] but must certify the facts to the judge. But if the judge shall find that the facts warrant the punishment of the witness, he may punish him in the same manner and to the same extent as for a contempt committed before the court of bankruptcy.[173] A rule requiring a bankrupt to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for refusing to answer "sundry questions" put to him during his examination before the referee is not insufficient, although it does not set out the questions, where it refers to the transcript filed with the certificate of the referee, from which they fully appear.[174]

319, Fed. Cas. No. 12,059; In re Winship, 7 Ben. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 17,878.

[172] Bank of Ravenswood v. Johnson, 143 Fed. 463, 74 C. C. A. 597, 16 Am. Bankr. Rep. 206; In re Schulman, 177 Fed. 191, 101 C. C. A. 361, 23 Am. Bankr. Rep. 809.

[173] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 41b.

[174] United States v. Goldstein, 132 Fed. 789, 12 Am. Bankr. Rep. 755.

CHAPTER XVI

RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF CREDITORS

§ 275. Notices to Creditors.—By the provisions of the statute, creditors of a bankrupt shall have at least ten days' notice by mail, unless they waive notice in writing, of

1. All examinations of the bankrupt.

2. All hearings upon applications for the confirmation of compositions.

3. All meetings of creditors.

4. All proposed sales of property.

5. The declaration and time of payment of dividends.

6. The filing of the final accounts of the trustee, and the time when and the place where they will be examined and passed upon.

7. The proposed compromise of any controversy.

8. The proposed dismissal of the proceedings.

9. All applications for the discharge of bankrupts, but in this last case only the law provides for thirty days' notice.[1]

In addition to these enumerated cases, it is also held, in general, that any step which in effect would end the proceedings should not be taken without notice to creditors. So, where an assignee in bankruptcy sought to renounce his trust by making an application for his discharge, based on his own affidavit, alleging that no tangible assets had come to his hands and that he had no information of any property belonging to the bankrupt other than a chose in action in favor of the estate, it was held that notice to creditors of such application was necessary.[2] In the case of the notice of the first meeting, the law directs that it shall not only be sent to the creditors by mail, but shall also be "published at least once, and may be published such number of additional times as the court may direct, the last publication to be at least one week prior to the date fixed for the meeting. Other notices may be published as the court shall direct."[3] All notices are to be given by the referee in bankruptcy unless otherwise ordered by the judge.[4] Notices by mail are to be issued at least ten days before the meeting, hearing, or other proceeding to which they relate.[5] The address of each creditor, for the purpose of such notices, is to be taken from the list of creditors furnished by the bankrupt, or from the information given by the creditor himself in the papers he files in the case.[6] Such written notice by mail is to be given to foreign creditors, as well as to those who reside within the United States,[7] and to secured as well as unsecured creditors.[8] If the name of a given creditor appears in the bankrupt's list, but with a statement that his residence is unknown, the failure to give him notice will not vitiate the proceedings.[9] It has also been ruled that notices of meetings of creditors subsequent to the first should be sent to all the known creditors, whether they have proved their debts or not.[10] The form of the notice for the first meeting of creditors has been officially prescribed. It recites the fact and date of the adjudication in bankruptcy, designates the time and place for the creditors' meeting, and provides that "said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting."[11] Clerical errors or minor inac-

[1] Bankrtupcy Act 1898, § 58, as amend .l by Act Cong. June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 838.
[2] In re Savage, 12 Fed. 719.

[3] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58b.

[4] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58c.

[5] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a. It is also provided that "Whenever time is enumerated by days in this act, or in any proceeding in bankruptcy, the number of days shall be computed by excluding the first and including the last, unless the last day fall on a Sunday or holiday, in which event the day last included shall be the next day thereafter which is not a Sunday or a legal holiday." Idem, § 31.

[6] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 58a. But "any creditor may file with the referee a request that all notices to which he may be entitled shall be addressed to him at any place, to be designated by the post office box or street number, as he may appoint, and thereafter, and until some other designation shall be made by such creditor, all notices shall be so addressed, and in other cases notices shall be addressed as specified in the proof of debt." General Order No. 21. If the creditor has appeared and acted in the prior proceedings by a "duly authorized agent, attorney, or proxy," as is authorized by the statute, it would seem that the notice should be sent to the latter.

[7] In re Heys, 1 Ben. 333, 1 N. B. R. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 6,447.

[8] This may be inferred from the requirement that the names of all secured creditors, with the securities held by them, shall appear on the bankrupt's schedule, one copy of which is to be given to the referee. Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7, cl. 8.

[9] In re Pulver, 1 Ben. 381, 1 N. B. R. 46, Fed. Cas. No. 11,466.

[10] In re Mills, 7 Ben. 452, 11 N. B. R. 117, Fed. Cas. No. 9,610; Russell v. Phelps, 42 Mich. 377, 4 N. W. 1.

[11] Official Form No. 18.

curacies in the notice will not vitiate the proceedings, provided they are not such as to mislead or deceive creditors.[12]

The requirement of the statute that notice shall be given to the creditors of the various steps in the proceeding is mandatory, in such sense that the failure to give notice of any particular meeting or other matter enumerated in the statute as requiring notice may be cause for setting aside the proceedings taken therein, or in such sense that the creditors who should have been notified, and were not, may not be bound by anything done at the meeting or in relation to the matter in hand.[13] But the jurisdiction of the court, either over the proceedings in general or over the bankrupt's application for discharge, is not made dependent upon the correctness of the bankrupt's list of creditors or upon the actual receipt of notice by the creditors. Jurisdiction is acquired by the petition and adjudication, and if the notices required by the act were duly and regularly published and served, the regularity of the proceedings, or the jurisdiction of the court to proceed with the case, is not affected by the failure of any creditor, or any number of creditors, to receive the notice.[14]

Where notice of the first meeting of creditors has been given to all those who appear on the bankrupt's list of creditors, and they have proceeded to choose a trustee, and afterwards the bankrupt is allowed to amend such list by the addition of other creditors not previously named therein, the rights of the creditors thus brought in are, as the authorities now stand, somewhat doubtful. But it has generally been thought that this development would require the calling of a new meeting, of which notice must be given to all creditors new and old, and that, at the meeting thus summoned, those creditors who may appear and prove their debts should proceed to elect a trustee. If their choice falls upon a person other than the one previously selected, they may apply to the court to remove the latter and confirm the new nominee.[15]

§ 276. Designation of Newspapers.—The statute provides that "courts of bankruptcy shall, by order, designate a newspaper published

[12] In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, 1 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481.

[13] In re Gilbert, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 378; In re Hall, 2 N. B. R. 192, Fed. Cas. No. 5,922; Anonymous, 1 N. B. R. 122, Fed. Cas. No. 457. In an action against an assignee in bankruptcy for willful neglect to give notice of creditors' meetings, it is sufficient for him to show that he placed the notice in the mail, and it is not material to show that it was received. Russell v. Phelps, 42 Mich. 377, 4 N. W. 1.

[14] In re Archenbrown, 11 N. B. R. 149, Fed. Cas. No. 504; In re Stetson, 4 Ben. 147, 3 N. B. R. 726, Fed. Cas. No. 13,381. See In re Schiller, 96 Fed. 400, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 704.

[15] See supra, § 226.

within their respective territorial districts, and in the county in which the bankrupt resides or the major part of his property is situated, in which notices required to be published by this act and orders which the court may direct to be published shall be inserted. Any court may in a particular case, for the convenience of parties in interest, designate some additional newspaper in which notices and orders in such case shall be published."[16] Power given to a court to "designate" a newspaper as the organ for the publication of judicial and legal notices is continuous. It is not exhausted by one exercise, but may be exercised from time to time, as may seem necessary and expedient to the court. It may be exercised by revoking a designation once made and making another.[17] Where the referee in bankruptcy, pursuant to a rule of the court, designates certain newspapers, approved by the court, wherein all notices required under the bankruptcy law shall be published, this amounts to a designation of such papers by the court for each particular notice therein published.[18] A referee may also, in the exercise of a wise discretion, select additional newspapers, published elsewhere than in the district, for the publication of such notices. Thus, where many of the creditors of a particular bankrupt lived in other states, it was held entirely proper for the referee to require the publication of notices, for that estate, in papers published in those other states, as well as in the papers designated by the court within the district.[19]

§ 277. Meetings of Creditors.—The first meeting of the creditors of a bankrupt is directed to be held "not less than ten nor more than thirty days after the adjudication, at the county seat of the county in [16] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 28. When legal notices are directed to be published in a newspaper, one printed in the English language is always intended, unless otherwise specified. Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22, 11 Am. Rep. 401. As to what constitutes a "newspaper," especially with reference to the official organs of the courts and periodicals devoted to legal news and legal advertising, including the publication of court notices and notices of foreclosures and judicial sales, and as to what constitutes the place of "publication" of a newspaper, the reader will find instruction in the following cases: Hanscom v. Meyer, 60 Neb. 68, 82 N. W. 114, 48 L. R. A. 409, 83 Am. St. Rep. 507; Maass v. Hess, 41 Ill. App. 282; Kellogg v. Carrico, 47 Mo. 157; Kerr v. Hitt, 75 Ill. 51; Lynch v. Durfee, 101 Mich. 171, 59 N. W. 409, 24 L. R. A. 793, 45 Am. St. Rep. 404; Turney v. Blomstrom, 62 Neb. 616, 87 N. W. 339; Lynn v. Allen, 145 Ind. 584, 44 N. E. 646, 33 L. R. A. 779, 57 Am. St. Rep. 223; In re Application for Charter, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 200; Railton v. Lauder, 126 Ill. 219, 18 N. E. 555; Beecher v. Stephens, 25 Minn. 146; Benkendorf v. Vincenz, 52 Mo. 441; Taylor v. Reid, 103 Ill. 349; Hull v. King, 38 Minn. 349, 37 N. W. 792; Leroy v. Jamison, 3 Sawy. 369, Fed. Cas. No. 8,271.

[17] Daily Register Printing & Pub. Co. v. Mayor of New York, 52 Hun, 542, 6 N. Y. Supp. 10.

[18] Hills v. Alden, 2 Hask. 299, Fed. Cas. No. 6,507.

[19] In re Robinson, 1 Ben. 270, 1 N. B. R. 8, Fed. Cas. No. 11,936.

which the bankrupt has had his principal place of business, resided, or had his domicile, or if that place would be manifestly inconvenient as a place of meeting for the parties in interest, or if the bankrupt is one who does not do business, reside, or have his domicile within the United States, the court shall fix a place for the meeting which is the most convenient for the parties in interest. If such meeting should by any mischance not be held within such time, the court shall fix the date, as soon as may be thereafter, when it shall be held." [20] A creditors' meeting should not be held on a public holiday, but the fact that it was so held will not be cause for setting aside the proceedings taken at that meeting where it appears that no one was injured thereby.[21] The bankrupt must attend this first meeting if so directed by the court, and, if present at the meeting, he must submit to an examination. But he is not required to attend a meeting at a place more than 150 miles distant from his home or principal place of business, unless ordered by the court for cause shown.[22] "At the first meeting of creditors, the judge or referee shall preside, and, before proceeding with the other business, may allow or disallow the claims of creditors there presented, and may publicly examine the bankrupt or cause him to be examined at the instance of any creditor." [23] The meeting being organized, the first step is for those who present themselves and claim to be creditors of the estate to make proof of their claims. A claim duly proved will be allowed on its filing, unless objection is made. In the latter event, the referee may forthwith decide upon its admissibility, his decision being subject to review by the judge, or postpone it for further consideration. A creditor who holds a voidable preference has a "provable" claim, in the sense that formal written proof of it may be made and filed, but it is a claim on which he cannot be allowed to vote until he has surrendered his preference.[24] And where objections are filed to a claim, on the ground that the claimant has received a preference, he should not be permitted to take any part in the creditors' meeting until the matter has been heard and determined.[25] Where, after a decision by the referee between two parties as to the right to vote upon a claim, the person aggrieved allows the vote to be taken without further objection, he cannot again reopen the question.[26] Next in order comes the ex-

[20] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55a.

[21] In re McGlynn, 2 Low. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 8,804.

[22] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 7.

[23] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55b.

[24] Stevens v. Nave-McCord Mercantile Co. (C. C. A.) 150 Fed. 71, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 609.

[25] In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[26] In re Spencer, 18 N. B. R. 199, Fed. Cas. No. 13,229.

amination of the bankrupt, and if the latter desires to offer terms of composition to his creditors, he may now do so. It is next in order for the creditors to appoint the trustee and fix the amount of his bond. They may also at this meeting, as well as at subsequent meetings, "take such steps as may be pertinent and necessary for the promotion of the best interests of the estate and the enforcement of the act." [27] In the absence of any specific provisions of law, the conduct of a creditors' meeting is properly guided by the rules and usages of parliamentary bodies.[28]

It is provided that "creditors shall pass upon matters submitted to them at their meeting by a majority vote in number and amount of claims of all creditors whose claims have been allowed and are present, except as herein otherwise provided. Creditors holding claims which are secured or have priority shall not, in respect to such claims, be entitled to vote at creditors' meetings, nor shall such claims be counted in computing either the number of creditors or the amount of their claims, unless the amounts of such claims exceed the values of such securities or priorities, and then only for such excess." [29] This provision is obviously intended for the protection of minorities. Its effect is that a few heavy creditors cannot force action against the wishes of the small creditors, if the latter constitute a numerical majority. Neither can a numerical majority of the creditors control the administration of the estate unless they also represent a majority in amount of the claims proved. The two kinds of majority must concur. If, however, the numerical majority of creditors in favor of any proposed action or policy (on which they are competent to act with binding effect) also control the major amount of the claims, they will be able to force their will upon a dissenting minority.

If there were irregularities in the calling of the first meeting or in the notices to creditors, or if, for any other cause affecting the common interest of all in the estate, it seems to the referee proper to adjourn the meeting to a future fixed day, he has power to do so.[30] But in order to take this action, the referee must himself be present at the [27] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55c.

[28] In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 6 Biss. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 9,442.

[29] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 56. After the selection of a trustee, a secured creditor cannot participate in creditors' meetings, except in so far as the security which he holds fails to cover his entire claim. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Continental Building & Loan Ass'n, 232 Fed. 828, 147 C. C. A. 22, 37 Am. Bankr. Rep. 439.

[30] In re Cheney, 19 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 2,637; In re Devlin, 1 Ben. 335, 1 N. B. R. 35, Fed. Cas. No. 3,841; In re Rosenfeld-Goldman Co. (D. C.) 228 Fed. 921, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 520.

meeting. If he is prevented from attending, he cannot adjourn the meeting by letter. In that case, the meeting wholly fails and a new meeting must be called.[31]

§ 278. Same; Special and Final Meetings.—The act provides that "a meeting of creditors, subsequent to the first one, may be held at any time and place when all of the creditors who have secured the allowance of their claims sign a written consent to hold a meeting at such time and place. The court shall call a meeting of creditors whenever one-fourth or more in number of those who have proven their claims shall file a written request to that effect; if such a request is signed by a majority of such creditors, which number represents a majority in amount of such claims, and contains a request for such meeting to be held at a designated place, the court shall call such meeting at such place within thirty days after the date of the filing of the request." [32] In addition to this, the general orders direct that "whenever, by reason of a vacancy in the office of trustee, or for any other cause, it becomes necessary to call a special meeting of the creditors in order to carry out the purposes of the act, the court may call such a meeting, specifying in the notice the purpose for which it is called." [33]

A final meeting of creditors shall be ordered "whenever the affairs of the estate are ready to be closed." [34]. Creditors, as in regard to other meetings, are to have at least ten days' notice by mail. Fifteen days before the date fixed for this final meeting, the trustee will make a final report and file a final account with the court, and at the meeting itself he is to lay before the creditors a detailed statement of the administration of the estate. The creditors now have an opportunity to scrutinize the accounts of the trustee, and determine whether any objections to his discharge are to be based thereon.[35] A final dividend will be de-

[31] In re Dickinson, 18 N. B. R. 514, Fed. Cas. No. 3,895.

[32] Bankruptcy Act 1898, §§ 55d, 55e. See In re Back Bay Automobile Co. (D. C.) 158 Fed. 679, 19 Am. Bankr. Rep. 835.

[33] General Order No. 25. It is undoubtedly in the discretion of the referee to direct that a creditors' meeting shall be called to consider whether the trustee shall be authorized to file objections to the bankrupt's application for discharge. In re Whitney (D. C.) 250 Fed. 1005, 41 Am. Bankr. Rep. 548; In re Hockman (D. C.) 205 Fed. 330, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 921. So, the referee may properly call a meeting of creditors, if he deems it advisable, to consider the course to be taken with respect to property of the bankrupt which is subject to liens. In re Cutler & John (D. C.) 228 Fed. 771, 36 Am. Bankr. Rep. 420. The meeting for the declaration of a dividend should be combined with that for the payment of the dividend so declared, and if there is to be but one dividend, the final meeting can and should in proper cases be combined with such dividend meeting. In re Smith, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 404.

[34] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55f.

[35] See In re Merchants' Ins. Co., 6 Biss. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 9,442.

clared by the referee and paid by the trustee, and thereupon the court will close the estate, if satisfied that it has been fully administered, by approving the final account of the trustee and discharging him.[36]

§ 279. Representation by Attorney or Proxy.—The act provides that the term "creditor" shall include "any one who owns a demand or claim provable in bankruptcy, and may include his duly authorized agent, attorney, or proxy," [37] from which it appears that creditors may act at their meetings by agent or attorney. And the Supreme Court has promulgated forms for a "general letter of attorney in fact when a creditor is not represented by attorney at law" and for a "special letter of attorney in fact." [38] These powers of attorney must be acknowledged before a referee in bankruptcy, a United States commissioner, or a notary public, and "when executed on behalf of a partnership or of a corporation, the person executing the instrument shall make oath that he is a member of the partnership, or a duly authorized officer of the corporation on whose behalf he acts. When the person executing is not personally known to the officer taking the proof or acknowledgment, his identity shall be established by satisfactory proof." [39] If the letter of attorney is given to two or more persons jointly, its authority cannot be exercised by one of the attorneys alone.[40] And if one of the joint proxies is disqualified (as, because he is the bankrupt's attorney) neither of them can vote under the power of attorney at a creditors' meeting.[41] If the acts which may be performed in behalf of the creditor are specifically enumerated in the power of attorney, its scope will be limited to such acts. Thus, a letter of attorney merely empowering the agent to attend and vote at meetings of creditors will not authorize him to file opposition to the bankrupt's application for discharge.[42] The question whether one constituted the creditor's general attorney by such an instrument can appoint a third person to act for the creditor in particular details will depend upon the wording of the authorization. It has been thought that such a delegation might be made under a power of attorney which authorized the attorney to sign the creditor's name to any writing proper or necessary to collect or receive debts due, with power of substitution.[43]

[36] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 47, clauses 7 and 8; Idem, § 2, clause 8. See In re Steed, 107 Fed. 682, 6 Am. Bankr. Rep. 73.

[37] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 1, cl. 9.

[38] Official Forms Nos. 20 and 21.

[39] General Order No. 21, par. 5. See In re Butterfield, 14 N. B. R. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 2,248; In re McDuffee, 2 Hask. 76, 14 N. B. R. 336, Fed. Cas. No. 8,778.

[40] In re Phelps, 1 N. B. R. 525, Fed. Cas. No. 11,071.

[41] In re Columbia Iron Works, 142 Fed. 234, 14 Am. Bankr. Rep. 526.

[42] Creditors v. Williams, 4 N. B. R. 579, Fed. Cas. No. 3,379.

[43] In re Knoepfel, 1 Ben. 398, 1 N. B. R. 70, Fed. Cas. No. 7,892.

Where the person who appears on behalf of a creditor, and proposes to act in his interest, is an attorney at law, a member of the bar of the particular court, he need not produce a written and acknowledged authority. His right to appear in behalf of his client will be presumed, and he will not be required to prove it unless it is challenged by some party in interest. This applies, however, only to such acts as fall within the ordinary scope of an attorney's duties and employment, such as filing proofs of debt or other papers, examining witnesses, objecting to the claims of other creditors, or making any ordinary motion or request.[44] But the right to cast his client's vote in the election of a trustee stands upon a different footing. This is a function which the attorney cannot exercise without showing an express authorization. "Voting for a trustee in bankruptcy is an act so essentially different in its nature and character from an attorney's ordinary duties in the conduct of litigation, and the business considerations that enter into the choice of a trustee are so foreign to a lawyer's ordinary functions or presumed special knowledge and skill, that the right to vote cannot be deemed to be a part of his implied authority, nor presumed to be conferred upon a lawyer from his mere retainer in a bankruptcy proceeding."[45]

§ 280. Assignment of Claims.—A provable claim against the estate of a bankrupt may be sold and assigned either before or after proving it. "Claims which have been assigned before proof shall be supported by a deposition of the owner at the time of the commencement of proceedings setting forth the true consideration of the debt and that it is entirely unsecured, or, if secured, the security, as is required in proving secured claims. Upon the filing of satisfactory proof of the assignment of a claim proved and entered on the referee's docket, the referee shall immediately give notice by mail to the original claimant of the filing of such proof of assignment, and if no objection be entered within ten days, or within further time allowed by the referee, he shall make an order subrogating the assignee to the original claimant. If objection be made, he shall proceed to hear and determine the matter."[46] But if the assignee of the claim is also a debtor to the bankrupt, he cannot be permitted to set off such claim against his debt to the estate, provided the claim "was purchased by or transferred to him after the filing of the petition, or within four months before such filing, with a view to such use and with knowledge or notice that such bankrupt was insolvent or had committed an act of bankruptcy." [47] Generally, where a provable claim against the bankrupt existed at the time the petition was filed, the subsequent assignment of it will carry with it all the rights and remedies which the assignor had, including the right to intervene in the bankruptcy proceedings.[48] And claims which have been proved, and then sold and assigned, before the election of a trustee must be voted upon in such election by the actual owner at the time and not by the original creditor.[49] But such an instrument as a certificate of deposit is dishonored after the bankruptcy of the maker, and after it is proved as a claim, it no longer possesses the qualities of negotiable paper.[50] It is also held that one taking an assignment of a proved claim as security for an antecedent liability of the person in whose name it is proved, who is apparently, though not really, the owner thereof, is not a purchaser for value, and cannot hold the claim against the true owner.[51]

[44] In re Scott, 15 N. B. R. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 12,519; In re Hill, 1 Ben. 321, 1 N. B. R. 16, Fed. Cas. No. 6,481; In re Pauly, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 405.

[45] In re Blankfein, 97 Fed. 191, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 165; In re Christley, 6 Biss. 154, 10 N. B. R. 268, Fed. Cas. No. 2,702.

[46] General Order No. 21, par. 3.

§ 281. Participation of Creditors in the Proceedings.—Generally speaking, and for most purposes, the right of creditors to participate in the proceedings, by motion or petition or otherwise, depends upon the proof and allowance of their claims, It is by this step that the status of the creditor is asserted and recognized. It is essential to enable a creditor to vote at any creditors' meeting, and in most other respects it may be said that the rights of creditors, as parties to the proceeding, arise and accrue upon proof of their claims.[52] A non-resident creditor subjects himself to the jurisdiction of the court by proving his debt, and is thereafter bound to obey all the orders of the court touching his claim, and the court can, in case he disobeys its orders, deprive him of all the benefit of the act, and can reject and expunge his claim.[53] It should also be noted that the provision of the statute (Section 59f) allowing other creditors than the original petitioners to enter their appearance and join in the petition, has reference only to proceedings before the adjudication in bankruptcy. After the adjudication, all creditors are in effect parties to the proceeding, and they are equally entitled to be heard without any special order permitting them to intervene.[54]

[47] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 68b.

[48] In re Fitzgerald, 191 Fed. 95, 26 Am. Bankr. Rep. 773.

[49] In re Frank, 5 Ben. 164, 5 N. B. R. 194, Fed. Cas. No. 5,050.

[50] In re Sime, 3 Sawy. 305, 12 N. B. R. 315, Fed. Cas. No. 12,861.

[51] In re Sime, 3 Sawy. 305, 12 N. B. R. 315, Fed. Cas. No. 12,861.

[52] See In re Jones, 2 N. B. R. 59, Fed. Cas. No. 7,447. "Until a creditor has proved his claim, he ought not to be heard as a creditor, and he has no right to be heard in any other character." In re Brisco, 2 N. B. R. 226, Fed. Cas. No. 1,886.

[53] In re Kyler, 2 Ben. 414, 2 N. B. R. 649, Fed. Cas. No. 7,956.

[54] In re Schwartz, 1 Nat. Bankr. News, 266.

As a general rule, the rights of creditors, after their claims have been proved and allowed, must be worked out through the trustee, and not by independent action on their part. Still, there are some circumstances in which creditors will be justified in acting for the common interest independently of the trustee, or even in opposition to him. Thus, if no trustee has yet been appointed, any creditor may petition the court to enjoin another creditor from proceeding with a pending suit, or enforcing a voidable lien or attachment against the bankrupt, and injunction may issue on such petition.[55] So also, any creditor may object to the allowance of another creditor's claim, and if it is allowed, the objecting creditor may move the court to direct the trustee to appeal, or to allow him to appeal in the name of the trustee.[56] So, if the trustee sells property of the bankrupt for a grossly inadequate price, himself discouraging competition, and refuses to have the sale set aside, a dissatisfied creditor may take action in that behalf.[57] So, while the trustee is the one in whom the title to the bankrupt's property is vested and therefore the proper person to bring all necessary actions for its recovery, yet the creditors are interested in having the assets brought in and realized upon, and the trustee cannot complain of the institution by creditors of suits to recover assets which he, the trustee, might intentionally or unintentionally permit to escape.[58]

§ 282. Advising Trustee.—Energetic creditors, who desire to promote the efficient working of the bankruptcy law, as well as to protect their own interests, will not rest satisfied with selecting a competent person to act as trustee in bankruptcy. They will be ready to advise and assist him in collecting the assets, unearthing frauds, keeping down the expenses, and securing the largest possible dividend. But the question may be asked, how far have the creditors a right to instruct the trustee in his administration of the estate? Is he bound to comply with advice or directions given to him by a majority of those in interest? If the acts or omissions of the trustee result in loss or damage to the estate, can he save himself from personal liability by showing that he acted in pursuance of directions given him by the creditors, or by a major part of those in interest? On the one hand, the trustee is required to collect and reduce to money the property of the estate "under the direction of the court." He may intervene in suits pending by or against the bankrupt by order, or with the approval, of the court, [55] See In re Carrier, 51 Fed. 900.

[56] Chatfield v. O'Dwyer (C. C. A.) 101 Fed. 797, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 313.

[57] In re Groves, 2 Nat. Bankr. News, 466.

[58] Davis v. W. F. Vandiver & Co., 143 Ala. 202, 38 South. 850.

and his sales of both real and personal property shall, when practicable, be subject to the approval of the court. On the other hand, creditors are not only empowered but required, at each of their meetings, to "take such steps as may be pertinent and necessary for the promotion of the best interests of the estate and the enforcement of this act." [59] Upon this is may be remarked that, while the trustee's administration of the estate is to be under the "direction" of the court, directions to the trustee will not generally be issued by the court sua sponte. Directions, leave, or authority for any particular action, is usually sought and obtained upon an application to the court, and such applications are commonly prompted by the creditors. In the analogous case of receiverships, when the question presented by such an application is one of expediency, the court is much influenced by the number or proportion of the creditors who urge the action to be taken or who consent to it. Unanimous consent of creditors will almost certainly induce the court to grant the authority or leave asked, provided the course proposed to be taken is not contrary to law. On the other hand, a court will be reluctant to coerce an unwilling minority, and will not do so unless thoroughly satisfied that the course proposed is clearly for the best interests of all.[60]

In so far as the modern decisions have dealt with this question, they appear to leave the matter balanced between the duty of the trustee to exercise his independent judgment and discretion and the legitimate influence of the creditors in persuading him to the course they think best. In one case it was said: "Equally removed from the interference of the creditors is the action of the trustee, so long as that officer shall act with fidelity to his trust. He is chosen to represent all the creditors, not a majority however great. The purpose of vesting the estate of the bankrupt in him is to commit to an impartial administration its management for the benefit of each and all the creditors. The creditors are the cestuis que trustent. He gives a bond for the faithful performance of his duty to all the beneficiaries. His office is one of personal confidence and cannot be delegated. He has no right to impose his duty on others, and if he does he will be responsible to the cestuis

[59] Bankruptcy Act 1898, § 55c. On this point the bankruptcy law at present in force in Great Britain makes specific provision. It directs that "the trustee shall, in the administration of the property of the bankrupt, and in the distribution thereof amongst his creditors, have regard to any directions that may be given by resolution of the creditors at any general meeting. The trustee may from time to time summon general meetings of the creditors for the purpose of ascertaining their wishes, and it shall be his duty to summon meetings at such times as the creditors may direct." English Bankruptcy Act 1883, § 89.

[60] See Keenan v. Shannon, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 219, 9 N. B. R. 441, Fed. Cas. No. 7,640; In re Treadwell, 23 Fed. 442.

que trustent. Subject to the control of the court and statutory limitations, the entire administration of the trust estate is in his hands. He cannot therefore yield his judgment to that of a majority of the creditors, merely because they are a majority, without a breach of his trust. To thus abdicate his duties is to make himself a mere passive trustee. It is proper that he should consult with the creditors upon important matters and get the benefit of their knowledge and experience, but the responsibility of decision rests upon him."[61] On the other hand, highly respectable authorities hold that, when the trustee is in serious doubt as to the expediency of some proposed step in the administration of the estate,—as, for example, the bringing of a suit the issue of which may be doubtful, or which may prove costly out of all proportion to the amount finally recovered,—he should first exercise his own intelligence and judgment and take the advice of counsel, and if still in doubt, the proper course is for him to assemble the creditors in special meeting, under the presidency of the referee and put the question to their discussion and decision by vote. Their instructions will be authoritative and will save the trustee from any personal responsibility. If he has not enough funds in hand to conduct the proposed litigation, he may also require the creditors to come to his assistance with such money as may be required.[62] But the trustee should be careful not to act (and the court will not allow him to act) under the control of any particular creditor or group of creditors. Where there is evidence of such control or attempted control, the court will direct him to report fully to a special meeting of all the creditors, to be called for the purpose, and to be governed by such directions as the meeting shall adopt.[63]

