Part 3
Summary

Vowels:

a = a in sofa
ā = a in father
i = i in pin
ī = i in pique
u = u in put
ū = u in rune
r̄ = re in fibre (or = ri) ṛ like r̄ but long l̄ = le in able
e = ei in rein
ai = ai in aisle
o = o in opal
au = ou in out

Note: a i u r̄ l̄ are short; all other vowels are long.

Note: Retroflex letters ṭ ṭh ḍ ḍh ṇ = dental letters t th d dh n — except that for the former the tongue touches the roof of the mouth, for the latter it touches the back of the teeth.

Consonants:

b bh = English b
c ch = ch in church
d dh = English d
g gh = g in good
h = English h
j jh = English j
k kh = English k
l = English l
m = English m n = English n
ṅ = ng in singing
ñ = ny in canyon
p = p in spin
ph = p in pat (never = f) r = English r
s = English s
ś ṣ = English sh
t = t in stop
th = t in top, th in Thomas (not = th in thin or this) v = English v or w
y = y in yodel (not the y in gym)

The aspirate letters, kh gh ch jh th dh th dh ph bh, are single letters pronounced with a heavy breath — something like big-horn or wart-hog, if divided as bi-ghorn and war-thog.

The consonant cluster jñ, found in many words derived from jñā (know), is pronounced as nny, dny, or gy — never as j-n. Thus, prajñā (wisdom) is pronounced pran-nyā, prad-nyā, or pra-gyā — never as praj-nyā or praj-nā.

The letter ḥ stands for an aspiration (a light h sound) after a vowel.

The letter ṁ or ṁ is a nasal. Before y r l v ś ṣ s h it indicates a nasalized vowel (as in French bon), or it can be pronounced n. Before other consonants it stands for the corresponding nasal consonant: saṁtāna = santāna, śaṁkara = śaṅkara. At the end of a word it is pronounced m.

Accentuation: A light syllable contains a short vowel at the end of a word or followed by a single consonant. A heavy syllable contains a long vowel, or a short vowel followed by two or more consonants. Generally, the heavy syllable closest to the end of a word is stressed. Thus:

rā-mā-ya-ṇa, ve-dān-ta, ma-hā-bhā-ra-ta
