The Papyrus of Ani, which was acquired by the Trustees of the British Museum in the year 1888, is the largest, the most perfect, the best preserved, and the best illuminated of all the papyri which date from the second half of the XVIIIth dynasty (about B.C. 1500 to 1400). Its rare vignettes, and hymns, and chapters, and its descriptive and introductory rubrics render it of unique importance for the study of the Book of the Dead, and it takes a high place among the authoritative texts of the Theban version of that remarkable work. Although it contains less than one-half of the chapters which are commonly assigned to that version, we may conclude that Ani's exalted official position as Chancellor of the ecclesiastical revenues and endowments of Abydos and Thebes would have ensured a selection of such chapters as would suffice for his spiritual welfare in the future life. We may therefore regard the Papyrus of Ani as typical of the funeral book in vogue among the Theban nobles of his time.

The first edition of the Facsimile of the Papyrus was issued in 1890, and was accompanied by a valuable Introduction by Mr. Le Page Renouf, then Keeper of the Department of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities. But, in order to satisfy a widely expressed demand for a translation of the text, the present volume has been prepared to be issued with the second edition of the Facsimile. It contains the hieroglyphic text of the Papyrus with interlinear transliteration and word for word translation, a full description of the vignettes, and a running translation; and in the Introduction an attempt has been made to illustrate from native

Egyptian sources the religious views of the wonderful people who more than five thousand years ago proclaimed the resurrection of a spiritual body and the immortality of the soul.

The passages which supply omissions, and vignettes which contain important variations either in subject matter or arrangement, as well as supplementary texts which appear in the appendixes, have been, as far as possible, drawn from other contemporary papyri in the British Museum.

The second edition of the Facsimile has been executed by Mr. F. C. Price.

INTRODUCTION.

THE VERSIONS OF THE BOOK OF THE DEAD.

THE history of the great body of religious compositions which form the Book of the Dead of the ancient Egyptians may conveniently be divided into four¹ periods, which are represented by four versions :—

The four great versions of the Book of the Dead.

- I. The version which was edited by the priests of the college of Annu (the On of the Bible, and the Heliopolis of the Greeks), and which was based upon a series of texts now lost, but which there is evidence to prove had passed through a series of revisions or editions as early as the period of the Vth dynasty. This version was, so far as we know, always written in hieroglyphics, and may be called the Heliopolitan version. It is known from five copies which are inscribed upon the walls of the chambers and passages in the pyramids² of kings of the Vth and VIth dynasties at Şakḳâra;³ and sections of it are found inscribed upon tombs, sarcophagi, coffins, stelæ and papyri from the XIth dynasty to about A.D. 200.⁴

⁴ In the XIth, XIIth, and XIIIth dynasties many monuments are inscribed with sections of the Unâs text. Thus lines 206-69 are found in hieroglyphics upon the coffin of Amamu (British Museum, No. 6654. See Birch, Egyptian Texts of the Earliest Period from the Coffin of Amamu, 1886. Plates XVII.-XX.); ll. 206-14 and 268-84 on the coffin of , Āpâ-ānkh, from Şakḳâra (see Lepsius, Denkmäler, ii., Bl. 99 b; Maspero, Recueil, t. iii., pp. 200 and 214 ff.); ll. 206-10

- II. The Theban version, which was commonly written on papyri in hieroglyphics and was divided into sections or chapters, each of which had its distinct title but no definite place in the series. The version was much used from the XVIIIth to the XXth dynasty.
- III. A version closely allied to the preceding version, which is found written on papyri in the hieratic character and also in hieroglyphics. In this version, which came into use about the XXth dynasty, the chapters have no fixed order.
- IV. The so-called Saïte version, in which, at some period anterior probably to the XXVIth dynasty, the chapters were arranged in a definite order. It is commonly written in hieroglyphics and in hieratic, and it was much used from the XXVIth dynasty to the end of the Ptolemaic period.

The earliest inscribed monuments and human remains found in Egypt prove that the ancient Egyptians took the utmost care to preserve the bodies of their and 268-89 on the coffin of Antef (see Lepsius, Denkmäler, ii., Bl. 145; Maspero, Recueil, t. iii., pp. 200, 214); line 206 on a coffin of Menthu-hetep at Berlin (see Lepsius, Aelteste Texte, Bl. 5); lines 269-94 on the sarcophagus of Heru-hetep (see Maspero, Mémoires, t. i., p. 144). A section is found on the walls of the tomb of Queen Neferu (see Maspero, Recueil, t. iii., p. 201 ff.; Mémoires, t. i., p. 134); other sections are found on the sarcophagus of  Ṭākā (see Lepsius, Denkmäler, ii., Bl. 147, 148; Maspero, Guide au Visiteur, p. 224, No. 1053; Mémoires, t. i., p. 134); lines 5-8 occur on the stele of Āpā  (see Ledrain, Monuments Égyptiens de la Bibl. Nationale, Paris, 1879, foll. 14, 15); lines 166 ff. are found on the stele of Nchi (see Mariette, Notice des Mon. à Boulay, p. 190; Maspero, Recueil, t. iii., p. 195); and lines 576-83 on the coffin of Sebek-Āā  (see Lepsius, Aelteste Texte, Bl. 37; Maspero, Recueil, t. iv., p. 68). In the XVIIIth dynasty line 169 was copied on a wall in the temple of Hātshepset at Dér el-bahārī (see Dümichen, Hist. Inschriften, Bl. 25-37; Maspero, Recueil, t. i., p. 195 ff.); and copies of lines 379-99 occur in the papyri of Mut-hetep (British Museum, No. 10,010) and Nefer-uten-f (Paris, No. 3092. See Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 197; Aeg. Zeitschrift, Bd. XXXII., p. 3; and Naville, Einleitung, pp. 39, 97). In the XXVIth dynasty we find texts of the Vth dynasty repeated on the walls of the tomb of Peta-Āmen-āpt, the chief kher-heb at Thebes (see Dümichen, Der Grabpalast des Patuamenap in der Thebanischen Nekropolis, Leipzig, 1884-85); and also upon the papyrus written for the lady Saïs , about A.D. 200 (see Devéria, Catalogue des MSS. Égyptiens, Paris, 1874, p. 170 No. 3155). Signor Schiaparelli's words are:—"Esso è scritto in ieratico, di un tipo paleografico "speciale: l' enorme abbondanza di segni espletivi, la frequenza di segni o quasi demotici o quasi "geroglifici, la sottigliezza di tutti, e l' incertezza con cui sono tracciati, che rivela una mano più abituata "a scrivere in greco che in egiziano, sono altrettanti caratteri del tipo ieratico del periodo esclusivamente "romano, a cui il nostro papiro appartiene senza alcun dubbio." Il Libro dei Funerali, p. 19. On Devéria's work in connection with this MS., see Maspero, Le Rituel du sacrifice Funéraire (in Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, t. xv., p. 161).

dead by various processes of embalming. The deposit of the body in the tomb was accompanied by ceremonies of a symbolic nature, in the course of which certain compositions comprising prayers, short litanies, etc., having reference to the future life, were recited or chanted by priests and relatives on behalf of the dead. The greatest importance was attached to such compositions, in the belief that their recital would secure for the dead an unhindered passage to God in the next world, would enable him to overcome the opposition of all ghostly foes, would endow his body in the tomb with power to resist corruption, and would ensure him a new life in a glorified body in heaven. At a very remote period certain groups of sections or chapters had already become associated with some of the ceremonies which preceded actual burial, and these eventually became a distinct ritual with clearly defined limits. Side by side, however, with this ritual there seems to have existed another and larger work, which was divided into an indefinite number of sections or chapters comprising chiefly prayers, and which dealt on a larger scale with the welfare of the departed in the next world, and described the state of existence therein and the dangers which must be passed successfully before it could be reached, and was founded generally on the religious dogmas and mythology of the Egyptians. The title of "Book of the Dead" is usually given by Egyptologists to the editions of the larger work which were made in the XVIIIth and following dynasties, but in this Introduction the term is intended to include the general body of texts which have reference to the burial of the dead and to the new life in the world beyond the grave, and which are known to have existed in revised editions and to have been in use among the Egyptians from about B.C. 4500 to the early centuries of the Christian era.

Early forms of the Book of the Dead.

The Book of the Dead.

The home, origin, and early history of the collection of ancient religious texts which have descended to us are, at present, unknown, and all working theories regarding them, however strongly supported by apparently well-ascertained facts, must be carefully distinguished as theories only, so long as a single ancient necropolis in Egypt remains unexplored and its inscriptions are untranslated. Whether they were composed by the inhabitants of Egypt, who recorded them in hieroglyphic characters, and who have left the monuments which are the only trustworthy sources of information on the subject, or whether they were brought into Egypt by the early immigrants from the Asiatic continent whence they came, or whether they represent the religious books of the Egyptians incorporated with the funeral texts of some prehistoric dwellers on the banks of the Nile, are all questions which the possible discovery of inscriptions belonging to the first dynasties of the Early Empire can alone decide. The evidence derived from the enormous mass of new material which we owe to the all-important discoveries of maṣtaba tombs and pyramids by M. Maspero, and to his publication of the early religious texts, proves beyond all doubt that the greater part of the texts comprised in the Book of the Dead are far older than the period of Menâ (Menes), the first historical king of Egypt.¹ Certain sections indeed appear to belong to an indefinitely remote and primeval time.

Uncertainty of the history of its sources.

Its antiquity.

Internal evidence of its antiquity.

The earliest texts bear within themselves proofs, not only of having been composed, but also of having been revised, or edited, long before the days of king Menâ, and judging from many passages in the copies inscribed in hieroglyphics upon the pyramids of Unâs (the last king of the Vth dynasty, about B.C. 3333), and Tetâ, Pepi I., Mer-en-Râ, and Pepi II. (kings of the VIth dynasty, about B.C. 3300–3166), it would seem that, even at that remote date, the scribes were perplexed and hardly understood the texts which they had before them.² The most moderate estimate makes certain sections of the Book of the Dead as known from these tombs older than three thousand years before Christ. We are in any case justified in estimating the earliest form of the work to be contemporaneous with the foundation of the civilization³ which we call Egyptian in the valley of remote period. To quote the words of Chabas, the chapter was regarded as being "very ancient, very mysterious, and very difficult to understand" already fourteen centuries before our era.¹

² "Le nombre des prières et des formules dirigées contre les animaux venimeux montre quel effroi le serpent et le scorpion inspirait aux Égyptiens. Beaucoup d'entre elles sont écrites dans une langue et avec des combinaisons de signes qui ne paraissent plus avoir été complètement comprises des scribes qui les copiaient sous Ounas et sous Pepi. Je crois, quant à moi, qu'elles appartiennent au plus vieux rituel et remontent au delà du règne de Mini." Maspero, La Religion Égyptienne (in Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, t. xii., p. 125). See also Recueil de Travaux, t. iv., p. 62.

Antiquity of Chapter LXIV.

The rubric on the coffin of Queen Menthu-ḥetep, which ascribes the chapter to Ḥesep-ti, states that "this chapter was found in the foundations beneath the "ḥennu boat by the foreman of the builders in the time of the king of the "North and South, Ḥesep-ti, triumphant";² the Nebseni papyrus says that "this chapter was found in the city of Khemennu (Hermopolis) on a block of "ironstone (?) written in letters of lapis-lazuli, under the feet of the god";³ and the Turin papyrus (XXVIth dynasty or later) adds that the name of the finder was Ḥeru-tā-tā-f, , the son of Khufu or Cheops,⁴ the second king of the IVth dynasty, about B.C. 3733, who was at the time making a tour of inspection of the temples. Birch⁵ and Naville⁶ consider the chapter one of ¹ Chabas, Voyage d'un Égyptien, p. 46. According to M. Naville (Einleitung, p. 138), who follows Chabas's opinion, this chapter is an abridgement of the whole Book of the Dead; and it had, even though it contained not all the religious doctrine of the Egyptians, a value which was equivalent to the whole.

Bunsen, Egypt's Place in Universal History, London, 1867, p. 142. The block of stone to which Dr. Birch refers is described by Golénischeff, Ermitage Impériale, Inventaire de la Collection Égyptienne, No. 1101, pp. 169, 170. M. Maspero thinks it was meant to be a "prétendu fac-similé" of the original slab, which, according to the rubric, was found in the temple of Thoth, Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, t. xv., p. 299, and Études de Mythologie, t. i., p. 368.

the oldest in the Book of the Dead; the former basing his opinion on the rubric, and the latter upon the evidence derived from the contents and character of the text; but Maspero, while admitting the great age of the chapter, does not attach any very great importance to the rubric as fixing any exact date for its composition.¹ Of Ḥeruṭāṭāf the finder of the block of stone, we know from later texts that he was considered to be a learned man, and that his speech was only with difficulty to be understood,² and we also know the prominent part which he took as a recognized man of letters in bringing to the court of his father Khufu the sage Ṭeṭṭeta.³ It is then not improbable that Ḥeruṭāṭāf's character for learning may have suggested the connection of his name with the chapter, and possibly as its literary reviser; at all events as early as the period of the Middle Empire tradition associated him with it.

² Chabas, Voyage, p. 46; Wiedemann, Aegyptische Geschichte, p. 191. In the Brit. Mus. papyrus No. 10,060 (Harris 500), Ḥeruṭāṭāf is mentioned together with I-em-hetep as a well known author, and the writer of the dirge says, "I have heard the words of I-em-hetep and of Ḥeruṭāṭāf, whose many and varied writings are said and sung; but now where are their places?" The hieratic text is published with a hieroglyphic transcript by Maspero in Journal Asiatique, Sér. VII^{ème}, t. xv., p. 404 ff., and Études Égyptiennes, t. i., p. 173; for English translations, see Trans. Soc. Bibl. Arch., vol. iii., p. 386, and Records of the Past, 1st ed., vol. iv., p. 117.

³ According to the Westcar papyrus, Ḥeruṭāṭāf informed his father Khufu of the existence of a man 110 years old who lived in the town of Ṭeṭṭet-Seneferu: he was able to join to its body again a head that had been cut off, and possessed influence over the lion, and was acquainted with the mysteries of Thoth. By Khufu's command Ḥeruṭāṭāf brought the sage to him by boat, and, on his arrival, the king ordered the head to be struck off from a prisoner that Ṭeṭṭeta might fasten it on again. Having excused himself from performing this act upon a man, a goose was brought and its head was cut off and laid on one side of the room and the body was placed on the other. The sage spake certain words of power (𓂏𓂏𓂏𓂏𓂏𓂏), whereupon the goose stood up and began to waddle, and the head also began to move towards it; when the head had joined itself again to the body the bird stood up and cackled 𓂏𓂏𓂏𓂏. For the complete hieratic text, transcript and translation, see Erman, Die Märchen des Papyrus Westcar, Berlin, 1890, p. 11, plate 6.

The Book of the
dynasty.

Passing from the region of native Egyptian tradition, we touch firm ground with the evidence derived from the monuments of the IIInd dynasty. A bas-relief preserved at Aix in Provence mentions Ásen and Ánkef,¹ two of the priests of Sent or Sentá  (), the fifth king of the IIInd dynasty, about B.C. 4000; and a stele at Oxford² and another in the Egyptian Museum at Gizeh³ record the name of a third priest, Sherá , or Sheri , a "royal relative" . On the stele at Oxford we have represented the deceased and his wife seated, one on each side of an altar ,⁴ which is covered with funeral offerings of pious relatives; above, in perpendicular lines of hieroglyphics in relief, are the names of the objects offered,⁵ and below is an inscription which reads,⁶ "thousands of loaves of bread, thousands of vases of ale, thousands of linen garments, thousands of changes of wearing apparel, and thousands of oxen."⁷ Now from this monument it is evident that already in the IIInd dynasty a priesthood existed in Egypt which numbered among its members relatives of the royal family, and that a religious system which prescribed as a duty the providing of meat and drink offerings for the dead was also in active operation. The offering of specific objects goes far to prove the existence of a ritual or service wherein their signification would be indicated; the coincidence of these words and the prayer for "thousands of loaves of bread, thousands of vases of ale," etc., with the promise, "Ánpu-khent-Ámenta shall give thee thy thousands of loaves of bread, thy thousands of vases of ale, thy thousands of vessels monuments prove that many of the priestly officials were still relatives of the royal family, and the tombs of feudal lords, scribes, and others, record a number of their official titles, together with the names of several of their religious festivals. The subsequent increase in the number of the monuments during this period may be due to the natural development of the religion of the time, but it is very probable that the greater security of life and property which had been assured by the vigorous wars of Seneferu,¹ the first king of this dynasty, about B.C. 3766, encouraged men to incur greater expense, and to build larger and better abodes for the dead, and to celebrate the full ritual at the prescribed festivals. In this dynasty the royal dead were honoured with sepulchral monuments of a greater size and magnificence than had ever before been contemplated, and the chapels attached to the pyramids were served by courses of priests whose sole duties consisted in celebrating the services. The fashion of building a pyramid instead of the rectangular flat-roofed maṣṭaba for a royal tomb was revived by Seneferu,² who called his pyramid Khā; and his example was followed by his immediate successors, Khufu (Cheops), Khāf-Rā (Chephren), Men-kau-Rā (Mycerinus), and others.

Revision of certain chapters in the IVth dynasty.

In the reign of Mycerinus some important work seems to have been undertaken in connection with certain sections of the text of the Book of the Dead, for the rubrics of Chapters XXXB. and CXLVIII.³ state that these compositions were found inscribed upon "a block of iron (?) of the south in letters of real lapis-lazuli under the feet of the majesty of the god in the time of the King " of the North and South Men-kau-Rā, by the royal son Ḥeruṭāṭāf, triumphant." That a new impulse should be given to religious observances, and that the revision of existing religious texts should take place in the reign of Mycerinus, was only to be expected if Greek tradition may be believed, for both Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus represent him as a just king, and one who was anxious to efface from the minds of the people the memory of the alleged cruelty of his predecessor by re-opening the temples and by letting every man celebrate his own sacrifices and discharge his own religious duties.¹ His pyramid is the one now known as the "third pyramid of Gîzeh," under which he was buried in a chamber vertically below the apex and 60 feet below the level of the ground. Whether the pyramid was finished or not² when the king died, his body was certainly laid in it, and notwithstanding all the attempts made by the Muḥammadan rulers of Egypt³ to destroy it at the end of the 12th century of our era, it has survived to yield up important facts for the history of the Book of the Dead.

In 1837 Colonel Howard Vyse succeeded in forcing the entrance. On the 29th of July he commenced operations, and on the 1st of August he made his way into the sepulchral chamber, where, however, nothing was found but a rectangular stone sarcophagus⁴ without the lid. The large stone slabs of the floor and the linings of the wall had been in many instances removed by thieves in search of treasure. In a lower chamber, connected by a passage with the sepulchral chamber, was found the greater part of the lid of the sarcophagus,⁵ together with portions of a wooden coffin, and part of the body of a man, consisting of ribs and vertebræ and the bones of the legs and feet, enveloped

³ According to 'Abd el-Laṭîf the Khalîf's name was Mâmûn, but M. de Sacy doubted that he was the first to attempt this work; the authorities on the subject are all given in his Relation de l'Égypte, Paris, 1810, p. 215-221. Tradition, as represented in the "Arabian Nights," says that Al-Mâmûn was minded to pull down the Pyramids, and that he expended a mint of money in the attempt; he succeeded, however, only in opening up a small tunnel in one of them, wherein it is said he found treasure to the exact amount of the moneys which he had spent in the work, and neither more nor less. The Arabic writer Idrîsî, who wrote about A.H. 623 (A.D. 1226), states that a few years ago the "Red Pyramid," i.e., that of Mycerinus, was opened on the north side. After passing through various passages a room was reached wherein was found a long blue vessel, quite empty. The opening into this pyramid was effected by people who were in search of treasure; they worked at it with axes for six months, and they were in great numbers. They found in this basin, after they had broken the covering of it, the decayed remains of a man, but no treasures, excepting some golden tablets inscribed with characters of a language which nobody could understand. Each man's share of these tablets amounted to one hundred dinars (about £50). Other legendary history says that the western pyramid contains thirty chambers of parti-coloured syenite full of precious gems and costly weapons anointed with unguents that they may not rust until the day of the Resurrection. See Howard Vyse, The Pyramids of Gîzeh, vol. ii., pp. 71, 72; and Burton, The Book of the Thousand Nights and a Night; 1885, vol. v., p. 105, and vol. x., p. 150.

⁴ Vyse, The Pyramids of Gîzeh, vol. ii., p. 84. A fragment of this sarcophagus is exhibited in the British Museum, First Egyptian Room, Case A, No. 6646.

⁵ With considerable difficulty this interesting monument was brought out from the pyramid by Mr. Raven, and having been cased in strong timbers, was sent off to the British Museum. It was in a coarse woollen cloth of a yellow colour, to which a small quantity of resinous substance and gum adhered.¹ It would therefore seem that, as the sarcophagus could not be removed, the wooden case alone containing the body had been brought into the large apartment for examination. Now, whether the human remains² there found are those of Mycerinus or of some one else, as some have suggested, in no way affects the question of the ownership of the coffin, for we know by the hieroglyphic inscription upon it that it was made to hold the mummified body of the king. This inscription, which is arranged in two perpendicular lines down the front of the coffin reads:—³

Ausâr	suten net	Men-kau-Râ	ânꜥ	t'etta	mes en	pet	âur
[Hail] Osiris, { King of the North } Men-kau-Râ, living for ever, born of heaven, conceived of embarked at Alexandria in the autumn of 1838, on board a merchant ship, which was supposed to have been lost off Carthage, as she never was heard of after her departure from Leghorn on the 12th of October in that year, and as some parts of the wreck were picked up near the former port. The sarcophagus is figured by Vyse, Pyramids, vol. ii., plate facing p. 84.

¹ As a considerable misapprehension about the finding of these remains has existed, the account of the circumstances under which they were discovered will be of interest. "Sir, by your request, I send you the particulars of the finding of the bones, mummy-cloth, and parts of the coffin in the Third Pyramid. In clearing the rubbish out of the large entrance-room, after the men had been employed there several days and had advanced some distance towards the south-eastern corner, some bones were first discovered at the bottom of the rubbish; and the remaining bones and parts of the coffin were immediately discovered all together. No other parts of the coffin or bones could be found in the room; I therefore had the rubbish which had been previously turned out of the same room carefully re-examined, when several pieces of the coffin and of the mummy-cloth were found; but in no other part of the pyramid were any parts of it to be discovered, although every place was most minutely examined, to maké the coffin as complete as possible. There was about three feet of rubbish on the top of the same; and from the circumstance of the bones and part of the coffin being all found together, it appeared as if the coffin had been brought to that spot and there unpacked.—H. Raven." Vyse, Pyramids, vol. ii., p. 86.

² They are exhibited in the First Egyptian Room, Case A, and the fragments of the coffin in Wall-Case No. 1 (No. 6647) in the same room.

⁵ It seems that we should read this god's name Keb (see Lefébure, Aeg. Zeitschrift, Bd. XXXI., p. 125); for the sake of uniformity the old name is here retained.

Now it is to be noted that the passage, "Thy mother Nut spreadeth herself over thee in her name of 'Mystery of Heaven,' she granteth that thou mayest be without enemies," occurs in the texts which are inscribed upon the pyramids built by the kings of the VIth dynasty,¹ and thus we have evidence of the use of the same version of one religious text both in the IVth and in the VIth dynasties.²

Even if we were to admit that the coffin is a forgery of the XXVIth dynasty, and that the inscription upon it was taken from an edition of the text of the Book of the Dead, still the value of the monument as an evidence of the antiquity of the Book of the Dead is scarcely impaired, for those who added the inscription would certainly have chosen it from a text of the time of Mycerinus.

In the Vth dynasty we have—in an increased number of maṣtabas and other monuments—evidence of the extension of religious ceremonies, including the celebration of funeral rites; but a text forming the Book of the Dead as a whole does not occur until the reign of Unás (B.C. 3333), the last king of the dynasty, who according to the Turin papyrus reigned thirty years. This monarch built on the plain of Şakḳâra a stone pyramid about sixty-two feet high, each side measuring about two hundred feet at the base. In the time of Perring and Vyse it was surrounded by heaps of broken stone and rubbish, the result of repeated attempts to open it, and with the casing stones, which consisted of compact limestone from the quarries of Ṭura.¹ In February, 1881, M. Maspero began to clear the pyramid, and soon after he succeeded in making an entrance into the innermost chambers, the walls of which were covered with hieroglyphic inscriptions, arranged in perpendicular lines and painted in green.² The condition of the interior showed that at some time or other thieves had already succeeded in making an entrance, for the cover of the black basalt sarcophagus of Unás had been wrenched off and moved near the door of the sarcophagus chamber; the paving stones had been pulled up in the vain attempt to find buried treasure; the mummy had been broken to pieces, and nothing remained of it except the right arm, a tibia, and some fragments of the skull and body. The inscriptions which covered certain walls and corridors in the tomb were afterwards published by M. Maspero.³ The appearance of the text of Unás⁴ marks an era in the history of the Book of the Dead, and its translation must be regarded as one of the greatest triumphs of Egyptological decipherment, for the want of determinatives in many places in the text, and the archaic spelling of many of the words and passages presented difficulties which were not easily overcome.⁵ Here, for the first time, it was shown that the Book of the Dead was no compilation of a comparatively late period in the history of Egyptian civilization, but a work belonging to a very remote antiquity; and it followed naturally that texts which were then known, and which were thought to be themselves original ancient texts, proved to be only versions which had passed through two or more successive revisions.

Continuing his excavations at Şakḳâra, M. Maspero opened the pyramid of Tetâ,¹ king of Egypt about B.C. 3300, which Vyse thought² had never been entered, and of which, in his day, the masonry on one side only could be seen. Here again it was found that thieves had already been at work, and that they had smashed in pieces walls, floors, and many other parts of the chambers in their frantic search for treasure. As in the case of the pyramid of Unâs, certain chambers, etc., of this tomb were found covered with inscriptions in hieroglyphics, but of a smaller size.³ A brief examination of the text showed it to be formed of a series of extracts from the Book of the Dead, some of which were identical with those in the pyramid of Unâs. Thus was brought to light a Book of the Dead of the time of the first king⁴ of the VIth dynasty.

The Book of the Dead in the VIth dynasty.

Evidence of the text of the pyramid of Tetâ;

The pyramid of Pepi I., king of Egypt about B.C. 3233, was next opened.⁵ It is situated in the central group at Şakḳâra, and is commonly known as the pyramid of Shêkh Abu-Manşûr.⁶ Certain chambers and other parts of the tomb were found to be covered with hieroglyphic texts, which not only repeated in part those which had been found in the pyramids of Unâs and Tetâ, but also contained a considerable number of additional sections of the Book of the Dead.⁷ In the same neighbourhood M. Maspero cleared out the pyramid of Mer-en-Râ, the fourth king of the VIth dynasty, about B.C. 3200;⁸ and the pyramid of Pepi II., the fifth king of the VIth dynasty, about B.C. 3166.⁹

and of the pyramid of Pepi I., Mer-en-Râ, and Pepi II.

⁴ The broken mummy of this king, together with fragments of its bandages, was found lying on the floor.

⁵ See Vyse, Pyramids of Gizeh, vol. iii., p. 51.

⁸ It was opened early in January, 1880, by Mariette, who seeing that the sarcophagus chamber was inscribed, abandoned his theory that pyramids never contained inscriptions, or that if they did they were not royal tombs. The hieroglyphic texts were published by Maspero in Recueil de Travaux, t. ix., pp. 177-91, Paris, 1887; t. x., pp. 1-29, Paris, 1888; and t. xi., pp. 1-31, Paris, 1889. The alabaster vase in the British Museum, No. 4493, came from this pyramid.

⁹ This pyramid is a little larger than the others of the period, and is built in steps of small stones; it is commonly called by the Arabs Haram el Maştabat, because it is near the building usually called

evidence.

Thus we have before the close of the VIth dynasty five copies of a series of texts which formed the Book of the Dead of that period, and an extract from a well-known passage of that work on the wooden coffin of Mycerinus ; we have also seen from a number of maṣtabas and stelæ that the funeral ceremonies connected with the Book of the Dead were performed certainly in the IInd, and with almost equal certainty in the Ist dynasty. It is easy to show that certain sections of the Book of the Dead of this period were copied and used in the following dynasties down to a period about A.D. 200.

The Book of the Dead a collection of separate works.

The fact that not only in the pyramids of Unās and Tetā, but also in those of Pepi I. and his immediate successors, we find selected passages, suggests that the Book of the Dead was, even in those early times, so extensive that even a king was fain to make from it a selection only of the passages which suited his individual taste or were considered sufficient to secure his welfare in the next world. In the pyramids of Tetā, Pepi I., Mer-en-Rā and Pepi II. are found many texts which are identical with those employed by their predecessors, and an examination of the inscription of Pepi II. will show that about three-fourths of the whole may be found in the monuments of his ancestors. What principle guided each king in the selection of his texts, or whether the additions in each represent religious developments, it is impossible to say ; but, as the Egyptian religion cannot have remained stationary in every particular, it is probable that some texts reflect the changes in the opinions of the priests upon matters of doctrine.¹ The "Pyramid Texts" prove that each section of the religious books of the Egyptians was originally a separate and independent composition, that it was written with a definite object, and that it might be arranged in any order in a series of similar texts. What preceded or what followed it was never taken into con-

Maṣtabat el-Far'ūn. See Vyse, Pyramids, vol. iii., p. 52. The hieroglyphic texts are published by Maspero in Recueil de Travaux, t. xii., pp. 53-95, and pp. 136-95, Paris, 1892 ; and t. xiv., pp. 125-52, Paris, 1892. There is little doubt that this pyramid was broken into more than once in Christian times, and that the early collectors of Egyptian antiquities obtained the beautiful alabaster vases inscribed with the cartouches and titles of Pepi II. from those who had access to the sarcophagus chamber. Among such objects in the British Museum collection, Nos. 4492, 22,559, 22,758 and 22,817 are fine examples.

“ of the god [Osiris] before his great throne. . . . The two beings who are over the throne of the great god proclaim Pepi to be sound and healthy, [therefore] Pepi shall sail in the boat to the beautiful field of the great god, and he shall do therein that which is done by those to whom veneration is due.”¹ Here clearly we have a reference to the historical fact of the importation of a pigmy from the regions south of Nubia ; and the idea which seems to have been uppermost in the mind of him that drafted the text was that as the pigmy pleased the king for whom he was brought in this world, even so might the dead Pepi please the god Osiris² in the next world. As the pigmy was brought by boat to the king, so might Pepi be brought by boat to the island wherein the god dwelt ; as the conditions made by the king were fulfilled by him that brought the pigmy, even so might the conditions made by Osiris concerning the dead be fulfilled by him that transported Pepi to his presence. The wording of the passage amply justifies the assumption that this addition was made to the text after the mission of Assà, and during the VIth dynasty.³

Authorship of the Book of the Dead.

Like other works of a similar nature, however, the pyramid texts afford us no information as to their authorship. In the later versions of the Book of the Dead certain chapters⁴ are stated to be the work of the god Thoth. They certainly belong to that class of literature which the Greeks called “ Hermetic,”⁵ and it is pretty certain that under some group they were included in the list of the forty-two works which, according to Clement of Alexandria,⁶ constituted the sacred books of the Egyptians.⁷ As Thoth, whom the Greeks called Hermes, is in Egyptian texts styled “ lord of divine books,”⁸ “ scribe of the company of the gods,”⁹ and “ lord of divine speech,”¹⁰ this ascription is well founded. The the just were there united to their spiritual or glorified bodies, and that they lived there face to face with the deity for all eternity.¹ Judging from the fact that the texts in the tombs of Ḥeru-ḥetep and Neferu, and those inscribed upon the sarcophagus of Ṭakà, all of the XIth and XIIth dynasties, differ in extent only and not in character or contents from those of the royal pyramids of Šakḳàra of the Vth and VIth dynasties, it has been declared that the religion as well as the art of the first Theban empire are nothing but a slavish copy of those of northern Egypt.²

Theban version.

The Theban version, which was much used in Upper Egypt from the XVIIIth to the XXth dynasty, was commonly written on papyri in the hieroglyphic character. The text is written in black ink in perpendicular rows of hieroglyphics, which are separated from each other by black lines; the titles of the chapters or sections, and certain parts of the chapters and the rubrics belonging thereto, are written in red ink. A steady development in the illumination of the vignettes is observable in the papyri of this period. At the beginning of the XVIIIth dynasty the vignettes are in black outline, but we see from the papyrus of Hunefer (Brit. Mus. No. 9901), who was an overseer of cattle of Seti I., king of Egypt about B.C. 1370, that the vignettes are painted in reds, greens, yellows, white, and other colours, and that the whole of the text and remembered. The heavenly Ànnu was the capital of the mythological world (see Naville, Todtenbuch (Einleitung), p. 27), and was, to the spirits of men, what the earthly Ànnu was to their bodies, i.e., the abode of the gods and the centre and source of all divine instruction. Like many other mythological cities, such as Àbtu, Tattu, Pe, Tep, Khemennu, etc., the heavenly Ànnu had no geographical position.

¹ The importance of Ànnu and its gods in the VIth dynasty is well indicated by a prayer for the pyramid of Pepi II. (for the texts see Maspero, Recueil, t. x., p. 8, and t. xii., p. 146), which reads:—

“ Hail, ye great nine gods who dwell in Ànnu, grant ye that Pepi may flourish, and grant ye
 “ that this pyramid of Pepi, this building built for eternity, may flourish, even as the name of the “ god Tmu, the chief of the great company of the nine gods, doth flourish. If the name of Shu,
 “ the lord of the celestial shrine in Ànnu flourisheth, then Pepi shall flourish, and this his pyramid “ shall flourish, and this his work shall endure to all eternity. If the name of Tefnut, the lady of “ the terrestrial shrine in Ànnu endureth, the name of Pepi shall endure, and this pyramid shall “ endure to all eternity. If the name of Seb flourisheth the name of Pepi shall flourish, “ and this pyramid shall flourish, and this his work shall endure to all eternity. If the name of “ Nut flourisheth in the temple of Shenth in Ànnu, the name of Pepi shall flourish, and this “ pyramid shall flourish, and this his work shall endure to all eternity. If the name of Osiris “ flourisheth in This, the name of Pepi shall flourish, and this pyramid shall flourish, and this his “ work shall endure to all eternity. If the name of Osiris Khent-Àmenta flourisheth, the name
 “ of Pepi shall flourish, and this pyramid shall flourish, and this his work shall endure to all “ eternity. If the name of Set flourisheth in Nubt, the name of Pepi shall flourish, and this “ pyramid shall flourish, and this his work shall endure to all eternity.”

vignettes are enclosed in a red and yellow border. Originally the text was the most important part of the work, and both it and its vignettes were the work of the scribe; gradually, however, the brilliantly illuminated vignettes were more and more cared for, and when the skill of the scribe failed, the artist was called in. In many fine papyri of the Theban period it is clear that the whole plan of the vignettes of a papyrus was set out by artists, who often failed to leave sufficient space for the texts to which they belonged; in consequence many lines of chapters are often omitted, and the last few lines of some texts are so much crowded as to be almost illegible. The frequent clerical errors also show that while an artist of the greatest skill might be employed on the vignettes, the execution of the text was left to an ignorant or careless scribe. Again, the artist at times arranged his vignettes in wrong order, and it is occasionally evident that neither artist nor scribe understood the matter upon which he was engaged. According to M. Maspero¹ the scribes of the VIth dynasty did not understand the texts which they were drafting, and in the XIXth dynasty the scribe of a papyrus now preserved at Berlin knew or cared so little about the text which he was copying that he transcribed the LXXVIIth Chapter from the wrong end, and apparently never discovered his error although he concluded the chapter with its title.² Originally each copy of the Book of the Dead was written to order, but soon the custom obtained of preparing copies with blank spaces in which the name of the purchaser might be inserted; and many of the errors in spelling and most of the omissions of words are no doubt due to the haste with which such "stock" copies were written by the members of the priestly caste, whose profession it was to copy them.

Palæography of the version.

The papyri upon which copies of the Theban version were written vary in length from about 20 to 90 feet, and in width from 14 to 18 inches; in the XVIIIth dynasty the layers of the papyrus are of a thicker texture and of a darker colour than in the succeeding dynasties. The art of making great lengths of papyrus of light colour and fine texture attained its highest perfection in the XIXth dynasty. An examination of Theban papyri shows that the work of writing and illuminating a fine copy of the Book of the Dead was frequently distributed between two or more groups of artists and scribes, and that the sections were afterwards joined up into a whole. Occasionally by error two groups of men would transcribe the same chapter; hence in the papyrus of Ani, Chapter XVIII. occurs twice (see within, p. cxlviii.).

Selection and
chapters.

The sections or chapters of the Theban version are a series of separate and distinct compositions, which, like the sections of the pyramid texts, had no fixed order either on coffins or in papyri. Unlike these texts, however, with very few exceptions each composition had a special title and vignette which indicate its purpose. The general selection of the chapters for a papyrus seems to have been left to the individual fancy of the purchaser or scribe, but certain of them were no doubt absolutely necessary for the preservation of the body of the deceased in the tomb, and for the welfare of his soul in its new state of existence. Traditional selections would probably be respected, and recent selections approved by any dominant school of religious thought in Egypt were without doubt accepted.

Change in forms.

While in the period of the pyramid texts the various sections were said or sung by priests, probably assisted by some members of the family of the deceased, the welfare of his soul and body being proclaimed for him as an established fact, in the Theban version the hymns and prayers to the gods were put into the mouth of the deceased. As none but the great and wealthy could afford the ceremonies which were performed in the early dynasties, economy was probably the chief cause of this change, which had come about at Thebes as early as the XIIth dynasty. Little by little the ritual portions of the Book of the Dead disappeared, until finally, in the Theban version, the only chapters of this class which remain are the XXIInd, XXIIIrd, CVth, and CL^{ist}.¹ Every chapter and prayer of this version was to be said in the next world, where the words, properly uttered, enabled the deceased to overcome every foe and to attain to the life of the perfected soul which dwelt in a spiritual body in the abode of the blessed.

Theban title of the Book of the Dead.

The common name for the Book of the Dead in the Theban period, and probably also before this date, is  per em hru, which words have been variously translated: "manifested in the light," "coming forth from the day," "coming forth by day," "la manifestation au jour," "la manifestation à la lumière," "[Kapitel von] der Erscheinung im Lichte," "Erscheinen am Tage," "[Caput] egrediendi in lucem," etc. This name, however, had probably a meaning for the Egyptians which has not yet been rendered in a modern language, and one important idea in connection with the whole work is expressed by another title² which calls it "the chapter of making strong (or perfect) the Khu."

In the Theban version the main principles of the Egyptian religion which were held in the times when the pyramid texts were written are maintained, and the views concerning the eternal existence of the soul remain unaltered. Many passages in the work, however, show that modifications and developments in details have taken place, and much that is not met with in the early dynasties appears, so far as we know, for the first time. The vignettes too are additions to the work; but, although they depict scenes in the life beyond the grave, they do not seem to form a connected series, and it is doubtful if they are arranged on any definite plan. A general idea of the contents of this version may be gathered from the following list of chapters¹:—

The Saïte and Ptolemaic version was in vogue from the period of the XXVIth dynasty, about B.C. 550, to probably the end of the rule of the Ptolemies over Egypt. The chapters have a fixed and definite order, and it seems that a careful revision of the whole work was carried out, and that several alterations of an important nature were made in it. A number of chapters which are not found in older papyri appear during this period; but these are not necessarily new inventions, for, as the kings of the XXVIth dynasty are renowned for having revived the arts and sciences and literature of the earliest dynasties, it is quite possible that many or most of the additional chapters are nothing more than new editions of extracts from older works. Many copies of this version were written by scribes who did not understand what they were copying, and omissions of signs, words, and even whole passages are very common; in papyri of the Ptolemaic period it is impossible to read many passages without the help of texts of earlier periods. The papyri of this period vary in colour from a light to a dark brown, and consist usually of layers composed of strips of the plant measuring about 2 inches in width and $14\frac{1}{2}$ to 16 inches in length. Fine examples of Books of the Dead of this version vary in length from about $24\frac{1}{2}$ feet (B.M. No. 10,479, written for the utcheb Hēru, the son of the utcheb Tchehṛā ) to 60 feet. Hieroglyphic texts are written in black, in perpendicular rows between rules, and hieratic texts in horizontal lines; both the hieroglyphics and the hieratic characters lack the boldness of the writing of the Theban period, and exhibit the characteristics of a conventional hand. The titles of the chapters, catchwords, the words  which introduce a variant reading, etc., are sometimes written in red. The vignettes are usually traced in black outline, and form a kind of continuous border above the text. In good papyri, however, the scene forming the XVIth Chapter, the scene of the Fields of Peace (Chapter CX.), the Judgment scene (Chapter CXXV.), the vignette of Chapter CXLVIII., the scene forming Chapter CLI. (the sepulchral chamber), and the vignette of Chapter CLXI., fill the whole width of the inscribed portion of the papyrus, and are painted in somewhat crude colours. In some papyri the disk on the head of the hawk of Horus is covered with gold leaf, instead of being painted red as is usual in older papyri. In the Græco-Roman period both texts and vignettes are very carelessly executed, and it is evident that they were written and drawn by ignorant workmen in the quickest and most careless way possible. In this period also certain passages of the text were copied in hieratic and Demotic upon small pieces of papyri which were buried with portions of the bodies of the dead, and upon narrow bandages of coarse linen in which they were swathed.

THE LEGEND OF OSIRIS.

The main features of the Egyptian religion constant.

The chief features of the Egyptian religion remained unchanged from the Vth and VIth dynasties down to the period when the Egyptians embraced Christianity, after the preaching of St. Mark the Apostle in Alexandria, A.D. 69, so firmly had the early beliefs taken possession of the Egyptian mind; and the Christians in Egypt, or Copts as they are commonly called, the racial descendants of the ancient Egyptians, seem never to have succeeded in divesting themselves of the superstitious and weird mythological conceptions which they inherited from their heathen ancestors. It is not necessary here to repeat the proofs of this fact which M. Amélineau has brought together,¹ or to adduce evidence from the lives of the saints, martyrs and ascetics; but it is of interest to note in passing that the translators of the New Testament into Coptic rendered the Greek ἀδης by ament,² amenti, the name which the ancient Egyptians gave to the abode of man after death,³ and that the Copts peopled it with beings whose prototypes are found on the ancient monuments.

Persistence of the legend of Osiris and the belief in the resurrection.

The chief gods mentioned in the pyramid texts are identical with those whose names are given on tomb, coffin and papyrus in the latest dynasties; and if the names of the great cosmic gods, such as Ptaḥ and Khnemu, are of rare occurrence, it should be remembered that the gods of the dead must naturally occupy the chief place in this literature which concerns the dead. Furthermore, we find that the doctrine of eternal life and of the resurrection of a glorified or transformed body, based upon the ancient story of the resurrection of Osiris after a cruel death and horrible mutilation, inflicted by the powers of evil, was the same in all periods, and that the legends of the most ancient times were accepted without material alteration or addition in the texts of the later dynasties.

The story of Osiris is nowhere found in a connected form in Egyptian literature, but everywhere, and in texts of all periods, the life, sufferings, death and resurrection of Osiris are accepted as facts universally admitted. Greek writers have preserved in their works traditions concerning this god, and to Plutarch in particular we owe an important version of the legend as current in his day. It is clear that in some points he errs, but this was excusable in dealing with a series of traditions already some four thousand years old.¹ According to this writer the goddess Rhea [Nut], the wife of Helios [Rā], was beloved by Kronos [Seb]. When Helios discovered the intrigue, he cursed his wife and declared that she should not be delivered of her child in any month or in any year. Then the god Hermes, who also loved Rhea, played at tables with Selene and won from her the seventieth part of each day of the year, which, added together, made five whole days. These he joined to the three hundred and sixty days of which the year then consisted.² Upon the first of these five days was Osiris brought forth;³ and at the moment of his birth a voice was heard to proclaim that the lord of creation was born. In course of time he became king of Egypt, and devoted himself to civilizing his subjects and to teaching them the craft of the husbandman; he established a code of laws and bade men worship the gods. Having made Egypt peaceful and flourishing, he set out to instruct the other nations of the world. During his absence his wife Isis so well ruled the state that Typhon [Set], the evil one, could do no harm to the realm of Osiris. When Osiris came again, Typhon plotted with seventy-two comrades, and with Aso, the queen of Ethiopia, to slay him; and secretly got the measure of the body of Osiris, and made ready a fair chest, which was brought into his banqueting hall when Osiris was present together with other guests. By a ruse Osiris was induced to lie down in the chest, which was immediately closed by Typhon and his fellow conspirators, who conveyed it to the Tanaitic mouth of the Nile.⁴ These things happened on the seventeenth day of the month Hathor,¹ when Osiris was in the twenty-eighth year either of his reign or of his age. The first to know of what had happened were the Pans and Satyrs, who dwelt hard by Panopolis; and finally the news was brought to Isis at Coptos, whereupon she cut off a lock of hair² and put on mourning apparel. She then set out in deep grief to find her husband's body, and in the course of her wanderings she discovered that Osiris had been united with her sister Nephthys, and that Anubis, the offspring of the union, had been exposed by his mother as soon as born. Isis tracked him by the help of dogs, and bred him up to be her guard and attendant. Soon after she learned that the chest had been carried by the sea to Byblos, where it had been gently laid by the waves among the branches of a tamarisk tree (ἐρείκη τυλί), which in a very short time had grown to a magnificent size and had enclosed the chest within its trunk. The king of the country, admiring the tree, cut it down and made a pillar for the roof of his house of that part which contained the body of Osiris. When Isis heard of this she went to Byblos, and, gaining admittance to the palace through the report of the royal maidens, she was made nurse to one of the king's sons. Instead of nursing the child in the ordinary way, Isis gave him her finger to suck, and each night she put him into the fire to consume his mortal parts, changing herself the while into a swallow and bemoaning her fate. But the queen once happened to see her son in flames, and cried out, and thus deprived him of immortality. Then Isis told the queen her story and begged for the pillar which supported the roof. This she cut open, and took out the chest and her husband's body,³ and her lamentations were so terrible that one of the royal children died of fright. She then brought the chest by ship to Egypt, where she opened it and embraced the body of her husband, weeping bitterly. Then she sought her son Horus in Buto, in Lower Egypt, first having hidden the chest in a secret place. But Typhon, one night hunting by the light of the moon, found the chest, and, recognizing the body, tore it into fourteen pieces, which he scattered up and down throughout the land. When Isis heard of this she took a boat made of papyrus¹—a plant abhorred by crocodiles—and sailing about she gathered the fragments of Osiris's body.² Wherever she found one, there she built a tomb. But now Horus had grown up, and being encouraged to the use of arms by Osiris, who returned from the other world, he went out to do battle with Typhon, the murderer of his father. The fight lasted many days, and Typhon was made captive. But Isis, to whom the care of the prisoner was given, so far from aiding her son Horus, set Typhon at liberty. Horus in his rage tore from her head the royal diadem; but Thoth gave her a helmet in the shape of a cow's head. In two other battles fought between Horus and Typhon, Horus was the victor.³

Plutarch's version of the legend.

³ Osiris was born on the first day, Horus on the second, Set on the third, Isis on the fourth, and Nephthys on the fifth; the first, third, and fifth of these days were considered unlucky by the Egyptians.

Plutarch's version.

This is the story of the sufferings and death of Osiris as told by Plutarch. Osiris was the god through whose sufferings and death the Egyptian hoped that his body might rise again in some transformed or glorified shape, and to him who had conquered death and had become the king of the other world the Egyptian appealed in prayer for eternal life through his victory and power. In every funeral inscription known to us, from the pyramid texts down to the roughly-written prayers upon coffins of the Roman period, what is done for Osiris is done also for the deceased, the state and condition of Osiris are the state and condition of the deceased; in a word, the deceased is identified with Osiris. If Osiris liveth for ever, the deceased will live for ever; if Osiris dieth, then will the deceased perish.¹

³ An account of the battle is also given in the IVth Sallier papyrus, wherein we are told that it took place on the 26th day of the month Thoth. Horus and Set fought in the form of two men, but they afterwards changed themselves into two bears, and they passed three days and three nights in this form. Victory inclined now to one side, and now to the other, and the heart of Isis suffered bitterly. When Horus saw that she loosed the fetters which he had laid upon Set, he became like a "raging panther of the south with fury," and she fled before him; but he pursued her, and cut off her head, which Thoth transformed by his words of magical power and set upon her body again in the form of that of a cow. In the calendars the 26th day of Thoth was marked triply deadly ☩☩☩. See Chabas, Le Calendrier, p. 28 ff.

Hymn to Osiris.

“(1) Hail to thee, Osiris, lord of eternity, king of the gods, thou who hast many names, thou disposer of created things, thou who hast hidden forms in the temples, thou sacred one, thou KA who dwellest in Tattu, thou mighty (2) one in Sekhem, thou lord to whom invocations are made in Anti, thou who art over the offerings in Annu, thou lord who makest inquisition in two-fold right and truth, thou hidden soul, the lord of Qerert, thou who disposest affairs in the city of the White Wall, thou soul of Rā, thou very body of Rā who retest in (3) Suten-ḥenen, thou to whom adorations are made in the region of Nārt, thou who makest the soul to rise, thou lord of the Great House in Khemennu, thou mighty of terror in Shas-ḥetep, thou lord of eternity, thou chief of Ābtu, thou who sittest upon thy throne in Ta-tchesert, thou whose name is established in the mouths of (4) men, thou unformed matter of the world, thou god Tum, thou who providest with food the ka's who are with the company of the gods, thou perfect khū among khū's, thou provider of the waters of Nu, thou giver of the wind, thou producer of the wind of the evening from thy nostrils for the satisfaction of thy heart. Thou makest (5) plants to grow at thy desire, thou givest birth to; to thee are obedient the stars in the heights, and thou openest the mighty gates. Thou art the lord to whom hymns of praise are sung in the southern heaven, and unto thee are adorations paid in the northern heaven. The never setting stars (6) are before thy face, and they are thy thrones, even as also are those that never rest. An offering cometh to thee by the command of Seb. The company of the gods adoreth thee, the stars of the uat bow to the earth in adoration before thee, [all] domains pay homage to thee, and the ends of the earth offer entreaty and supplication. When those who are among the holy ones (7) see thee they tremble at thee, and the whole world giveth praise unto thee when it meeteth thy majesty. Thou art a glorious sāhu among the sāhu's, upon thee hath dignity been conferred, thy dominion is eternal, O thou beautiful Form of the company of the gods; thou gracious one who art beloved by him that (8) seeth thee. Thou settest thy fear in all the world, and through love for thee all proclaim thy name before that of all other gods. Unto thee are offerings made by all mankind, O thou lord to whom commemorations are made, both in heaven and in earth. Many are the shouts of joy that rise to thee at the Uak* festival, and cries of delight ascend to thee from the (9) whole world with one voice. Thou art the chief and prince of thy brethren, thou art the prince of the company of the gods, thou stablishest right and truth everywhere, thou placest thy son upon thy throne, thou art the object of praise of thy father Seb, and of the love of thy mother Nut. Thou art exceeding mighty, thou overthrowest those who oppose thee, thou art mighty of hand, and thou slaughterest thine (10) enemy. Thou settest thy fear in thy foe, thou removest his boundaries, thy heart is fixed, and thy feet are watchful. Thou art the heir of Seb and the sovereign of all the earth;

THE DOCTRINE OF ETERNAL LIFE.

The ideas and beliefs which the Egyptians held in reference to a future existence are not readily to be defined, owing to the many difficulties in translating religious texts and in harmonizing the statements made in different works of different periods. Some confusion of details also seems to have existed in the minds of the Egyptians themselves, which cannot be cleared up until the literature of the subject has been further studied and until more texts have been published. That the Egyptians believed in a future life of some kind is certain ; and the doctrine of eternal existence is the leading feature of their religion, and is enunciated with the utmost clearness in all periods. Whether this belief had its origin at Ánnu, the chief city of the worship of the sun-god, is not certain, but is very probable ; for already in the pyramid texts we find the idea of everlasting life associated with the sun's existence, and Pepi I. is said to be "the Giver of life, stability, power, health, and all joy of heart, like the Sun, living for ever."¹ The sun rose each day in renewed strength and vigour, and the renewal of youth in a future life was the aim and object of every Egyptian believer. To this end all the religious literature of Egypt was composed. Let us take the following extracts from texts of the VIth dynasty as illustrations :—

Constancy in the relief in the resurrection.

There is, however, no doubt that from first to last the Egyptians firmly believed that besides the soul there was some other element of the man that would rise again. The preservation of the corruptible body too was in some way connected with the life in the world to come, and its preservation was necessary to ensure eternal life; otherwise the prayers recited to this end would have been futile, and the time honoured custom of mummifying the dead would have had no meaning. The never ending existence of the soul is asserted in a passage quoted above without reference to Osiris; but the frequent mention of the uniting of his bones, and of the gathering together of his members,³ and the doing away with all corruption from his body, seems to show that the pious Egyptian connected these things with the resurrection of his own body in some form, and he argued that what had been done for him who was proclaimed to be giver and source of life must be necessary for mortal man.

The khat or physical body.

The physical body of man considered as a whole was called khat  , a word which seems to be connected with the idea of something which is liable to decay. The word is also applied to the mummified body in the tomb, as we know from the words "My body (khat) is buried."⁴ Such a body was attributed to the god Osiris;⁵ in the CLXIIInd Chapter of the Book of the Dead "his great divine body rested in Annu.”¹ In this respect the god and the deceased were on an equality. As we have seen above, the body neither leaves the tomb nor reappears on earth; yet its preservation was necessary. Thus the deceased addresses Tmu²: “Hail to thee, O my father Osiris, I have come and I have “embalmed this my flesh so that my body may not decay. I am whole, even as my “father Kheperà was whole, who is to me the type of that which passeth not away. “Come then, O Form, and give breath unto me, O lord of breath, O thou who art “greater than thy compeers. Stablish thou me, and form thou me, O thou who art “lord of the grave. Grant thou to me to endure for ever, even as thou didst grant “unto thy father Tmu to endure; and his body neither passed away nor decayed. “I have not done that which is hateful unto thee, nay, I have spoken that which thy “ka loveth; repulse thou me not, and cast thou me not behind thee, O Tmu, to “decay, even as thou doest unto every god and unto every goddess and unto “every beast and creeping thing which perisheth when his soul hath gone forth “from him after his death, and which falleth in pieces after his decay “Homage to thee, O my father Osiris, thy flesh suffered no decay, there were no “worms in thee, thou didst not crumble away, thou didst not wither away, thou “didst not become corruption and worms; and I myself am Kheperà, I shall “possess my flesh for ever and ever, I shall not decay, I shall not crumble away, “I shall not wither away, I shall not become corruption.”

But the body does not lie in the tomb inoperative, for by the prayers and ceremonies on the day of burial it is endowed with the power of changing into a sāhu, or spiritual body. Thus we have such phrases as, “I germinate like the “plants,”³ “My flesh germinateth,”⁴ “I exist, I exist, I live, I live, I germinate, I “germinate,”⁵ “thy soul liveth, thy body  germinateth by the command of Rā

The word sāhu , though at times written with the determinative of a mummy lying on a bier like khat, “ body,” indicates a body which has obtained a degree of knowledge² and power and glory whereby it becomes henceforth lasting and incorruptible. The body which has become a sāhu has the power of associating with the soul and of holding converse with it. In this form it can ascend into heaven and dwell with the gods, and with the sāhu of the gods, and with the souls of the righteous. In the pyramid texts we have these passages :—

nuk sah em ba - f
 I am a sāh with his soul.³

In the late edition of the Book of the Dead published by Lepsius the deceased is said to “look upon his body and to rest upon his sāhu,”⁴ and souls are said “to enter into their sāhu”;⁵ and a passage extant both in this and the older Theban edition makes the deceased to receive the sāhu of the god Osiris.⁶ But that Egyptian writers at times confused the khat with the sāhu is clear from a passage in the Book of Respirations, where it is said, “Hail Osiris, thy name endureth, thy “body is stablished, thy sāhu germinateth”;⁷ in other texts the word “germinate” is applied only to the natural body.

In close connection with the natural and spiritual bodies stood the heart, or rather that part of it which was the seat of the power of life and the fountain of good and evil thoughts. The ab or heart. And in addition to the natural and spiritual bodies, man also had an abstract individuality or personality endowed with all his characteristic attributes. This abstract personality had an absolutely independent existence. It could move freely from place to place, separating itself from, or uniting itself to, the body at will, and also enjoying life with the gods in heaven. This was the ka ¹, a word which at times conveys the meanings of its Coptic equivalent $\kappa\omega$, and of $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\delta\omega\lambda\omicron\nu$, image, genius, double, character, disposition, and mental attributes. The funeral offerings of meat, cakes, ale, wine, unguents, etc., were intended for the ka; the scent of the burnt incense was grateful to it. The ka dwelt in the man's statue just as the ka of a god inhabited the statue of the god. In this respect the ka seems to be identical with the sekhem  or image. In the remotest times the tombs had special chambers wherein the ka was worshipped and received offerings. The priesthood numbered among its body an order of men who bore the name of "priests of the ka" , and who performed services in honour of the ka in the "ka chapel" .

In the text of Unās the deceased is said to be "happy with his ka"² in the next world, and his ka is joined unto his body in "the great dwelling";³ his body

¹ The first scholar who seriously examined the meaning of the word  was Dr. Birch, who collected several examples of the use and discussed them in his Mémoire sur une Patère Égyptienne du Musée du Louvre, Paris, 1858, p. 59 ff. (Extrait du t. xxiv. des Mémoires de la Société impériale des Antiquaires de France). Dr. Birch translated the word by être, personne, emblème, divin, génie, principe, esprit. In September, 1878, M. Maspero explained to the Members of the Congress of Lyons the views which he held concerning this word, and which he had for the past five years been teaching in the Collège de France, and said, "le ka est une sorte de double de la personne humaine d'une matière moins grossière que la matière dont est formé le corps, mais qu'il fallait nourrir et entretenir comme le corps lui-même; ce double vivait dans le tombeau des offrandes qu'on faisait aux fêtes canoniques, et aujourd'hui encore un grand nombre des génies de la tradition populaire égyptienne ne sont que des doubles, devenus démons au moment de la conversion des fellahs au christianisme, puis à l'islamisme." These views were repeated by him at the Sorbonne in February, 1879. See Comptes Rendus du Congrès provincial des Orientalistes, Lyons, 1878, t. i., pp. 235-263; Revue Scientifique de la France et de l'Étranger, 2^e série, 8^e année, No. 35, March, 1879, pp. 816-820; Bulletin de l'Association Scientifique de France, No. 594, 1879, t. xxiii., p. 373-384; Maspero, Études de Mythologie et d'Archéologie, t. i., pp. 1, 35, 126. In March, 1879, Mr. Renouf read a paper entitled "On the true sense of an important Egyptian word" (Trans. Soc. Bibl. Arch., vol. vi., London, 1879, pp. 494-508), in which he arrived at conclusions similar to those of M. Maspero; and in September of the same year M. Maspero again treated the subject in Recueil de Travaux, t. i., p. 152 f. The various shades of meaning in the word have been discussed subsequently by Brugsch, Wörterbuch (Suppl.), pp. 997, 1230; Dümichen, Der Grabpalast des Patuamenap, Abt. i., p. 10; Bergmann, Der Sarkophag des Panehemisis (in Jahrbuch der Kunsthistorischen Sammlungen des allerhöchsten Kaiserhauses, Vienna, 1883, p. 5); Wiedemann, Die Religion der alten Aegypter, p. 126.

having been buried in the lowest chamber, "his ka cometh forth to him."¹ Of Pepi I. it is said :—

The ka, as we have seen, could eat food, and it was necessary to provide food for it. In the XIIth dynasty and in later periods the gods are entreated to grant meat and drink to the ka of the deceased; and it seems as if the Egyptians thought that the future welfare of the spiritual body depended upon the maintenance of a constant supply of sepulchral offerings. When circumstances rendered it impossible to continue the material supply of food, the ka fed upon the offerings painted on the walls of the tomb, which were transformed into suitable nourishment by means of the prayers of the living. When there were neither material offerings nor painted similitudes to feed upon, it seems as if the ka must have perished; but the texts are not definite on this point.

The following is a specimen of the ka's petition for food written in the XVIIIth dynasty :— A prayer of the ka.

" May the gods grant that I go into and come forth from my tomb, may the " Majesty refresh its shade, may I drink water from my cistern every day, may all

The ba or soul.

To that part of man which beyond all doubt was believed to enjoy an eternal existence in heaven in a state of glory, the Egyptians gave the name ba , a word which means something like “sublime,” “noble,” and which has always hitherto been translated by “soul.” The ba is not incorporeal, for although it dwells in the ka, and is in some respects, like the heart, the principle of life in man, still it possesses both substance and form : in form it is depicted as a human-headed hawk , and in nature and substance it is stated to be exceedingly refined or ethereal. It revisited the body in the tomb and re-animated it, and conversed with it ; it could take upon itself any shape that it pleased ; and it had the power of passing into heaven and of dwelling with the perfected souls there. It was eternal. As the ba was closely associated with the ka, it partook of the funeral offerings, and in one aspect of its existence at least it was liable to decay if not properly and sufficiently nourished. In the pyramid texts the permanent dwelling-place of the ba or soul is heaven with the gods, whose life it shares :—

supported by a passage in the XCIIInd Chapter of the Book of the Dead,¹ where it is said :—

em	χενά	ba - ā	sauti	χαιbit-ā	un	uat

And again, in the LXXXIXth Chapter the deceased says :—

maa - ā	ba - ā	χαιbit-ā

May I look upon my soul and my shadow.²

Another important and apparently eternal part of man was the khu which, The khu or intelligence. judging from the meaning of the word, may be defined as a “shining” or translucent, intangible casing or covering of the body, which is frequently depicted in the form of a mummy. For want of a better word khu has often been translated “shining one,” “glorious,” “intelligence,” and the like, but in certain cases it may be tolerably well rendered by “spirit.” The pyramid texts show us that the khu's of the gods lived in heaven, and thither wended the khu of a man as soon as ever the prayers said over the dead body enabled it to do so. Thus it is said, “Unās standeth with the khu's,”³ and one of the gods is asked to “give him his sceptre among the khu's ;”⁴ when the souls of the gods enter into Unās, their khu's are with and round about him.⁵ To king Tetà it is said :—

And again, when the god Khent-mennut-f has transported the king to heaven, the god Seb, who rejoices to meet him, is said to give him both hands and welcome him as a brother and to nurse him and to place him among the imperishable khu's.³ In the XCIIInd Chapter the deceased is made to pray for the liberation of his soul, shadow, and khu from the bondage of the tomb, and for deliverance from those "whose dwellings are hidden, who fetter the souls, who fetter souls and khu's "and who shut in the shadows of the dead";⁴ and in the XCIIst Chapter⁵ is a formula specially prepared to enable the khu to pass from the tomb to the domains where Rā and Hathor dwell.

The sekhem or form.

Yet another part of a man was supposed to exist in heaven, to which the Egyptians gave the name sekhem . The word has been rendered by "power," "form," and the like, but it is very difficult to find any expression which will represent the Egyptian conception of the sekhem. It is mentioned in connection with the soul and khu, as will be seen from the following passages from the pyramid texts:—

Thus, as we have seen, the whole man consisted of a natural body, a spiritual body, a heart, a double, a soul, a shadow, an intangible ethereal casing or spirit, a form, and a name. All these were, however, bound together inseparably, and the welfare of any single one of them concerned the welfare of all. For the well-being of the spiritual parts it was necessary to preserve from decay the natural body ; and the king is identified with this ladder: "Isis saith, 'Happy are they who see the 'father,' and Nephthys saith, 'They who see the father have rest,' speaking unto the father of this Osiris Pepi when he cometh forth unto heaven among the stars and among the luminaries which never set. With the uræus on his brow, and his book upon both his sides, and magic words at his feet, Pepi goeth forward unto his mother Nut, and he entereth therein in his name Ladder."¹ The gods who preside over this ladder are at one time Rā and Horus, and at another Horus and Set. In the pyramid of Unās it is said, "Rā setteth upright the ladder for Osiris, and Horus raiseth up the ladder for his father Osiris, when Osiris goeth to [find] his soul; one standeth on the one side, and the other standeth on the other, and Unās is betwixt them. Unās standeth up and is Horus, he sitteth down and is Set."² And in the pyramid of Pepi I. we read, "Hail to thee, O Ladder of God, hail to thee, O Ladder of Set. Stand up, O Ladder of God, stand up, O Ladder of Set, stand up, O Ladder of Horus, whereon Osiris went forth into heaven. . . . This Pepi is thy son, this Pepi is Horus, thou hast given birth unto this Pepi even as thou hast given birth unto the god who is the lord of the Ladder. Thou hast given him the Ladder of God, and thou hast given him the Ladder of Set, whereon this Pepi hath gone forth into heaven. . . . Every *kh*u and every god stretcheth out his hand unto this Pepi when he cometh forth into heaven by the Ladder of God . . . that which he seeth and that which he heareth make him wise, and serve as food for him when he cometh forth into heaven by the Ladder of God. Pepi riseth up like the uræus which is on the brow of Set, and every *kh*u and every god stretcheth out his hand unto Pepi on the Ladder. Pepi hath gathered together his bones, he hath collected his flesh, and Pepi hath gone straightway into heaven by means of the two fingers of the god who is the Lord of the Ladder."³ Elsewhere we are told that Khonsu and Set "carry the Ladder of Pepi, and they set it up."

The notion that, by eating the flesh, or particularly by drinking the blood, of another living being, a man absorbs his nature or life into his own, is one which appears among primitive peoples in many forms. It lies at the root of the widespread practice of drinking the fresh blood of enemies—a practice which was familiar to certain tribes of the Arabs before Muḥammad, and which tradition still ascribes to the wild race of Caḥṭân—and also of the habit practised by many savage hunters of eating some part (e.g., the liver) of dangerous carnivora, in order that the courage of the animal may pass into them.¹ The flesh and blood of brave men also are, among semi-savage or savage tribes, eaten and drunk to inspire courage.² But the idea of hunting, killing, roasting and eating the gods as described above is not apparently common among ancient nations; the main object of the dead king in doing this was to secure the eternal life which was the peculiar attribute of the gods.

THE EGYPTIANS' IDEAS OF GOD.

The word neter and its meaning.

To the great and supreme power which made the earth, the heavens, the sea, the sky, men and women, animals, birds, and creeping things, all that is and all that shall be, the Egyptians gave the name neter  .¹ This word survives in the Coptic ⲛⲟⲩⲧ , but both in the ancient language and in its younger relative the exact meaning of the word is lost. M. Pierret,² following de Rougé, connects it with the word   and says that it means "renovation" (renouvellement), but Brugsch³ renders it by "göttlich," "heilig," "divin," "sacré," and by three Arabic words which mean "divine," "sacred or set apart," and "holy" respectively. By a quotation from the stele of Canopus he shows that in Ptolemaic times it meant "holy" or "sacred" when applied to the animals of the gods. Mr. Renouf⁴ says that "the notion expressed by nutar as a noun, and nutra as an adjective or verb, must be sought in the Coptic ⲛⲟⲩⲧ , which in the translation of the Bible corresponds to the Greek words δύναμις, ἰσχὺς, ἰσχυρός, ἰσχυρόω, 'power,' 'force,' 'strong,' 'fortify,' 'protect,'"⁵ and he goes on to show that the word neter means "strong" or "mighty." M. Maspero, however, thinks that the Coptic nomti has nothing in common with neter, the Egyptian word for God, and that the passages quoted by Mr. Renouf in support of his theory can be otherwise explained.⁶ His own opinion is that the signification "strong," if it ever existed, is a derived and not an original meaning, and he believes that the word is so old that its first sense is unknown to us. The fact that the Coptic translators of the Bible used the word nouti to express the name of the Supreme Being shows that no other word conveyed to their minds their conception of Him, and supports M. Maspero's views on this point. Another definition of the word given by Brugsch makes it to mean "the active power which produces and creates things in regular recurrence; which bestows new life upon them, and gives back to them their youthful vigour,"¹ and he adds that the innate conception of the word completely covers the original meaning of the Greek φύσις and the Latin natura.

But side by side with neter, whatever it may mean, we have mentioned in texts of all ages a number of beings or existences called neteru , or , or , or , or , or , or , which Egyptologists universally translate by the word "gods." Among these must be included the great cosmic powers and the beings who, although held to be supernatural, were yet finite and mortal, and were endowed by the Egyptians with love, hatred, and passions of every sort and kind. The difference between the conceptions of neter the one supreme God and the neteru is best shown by an appeal to Egyptian texts.

All these extracts are from texts of the Vth and VIth dynasties. It may be urged that we might as well translate neter by "a god" or "the god," but other evidence of the conception of neter at that early date is afforded by the following passages from the Prisse papyrus,⁵ which, although belonging at the earliest to the XIth dynasty, contains copies of the Precepts of Kaqemna, written in the reign of Senerfu, a king of the IVth dynasty, and the Precepts of Ptaḥ-ḥetep, written during the reign of Assá, a king of the Vth dynasty.⁶

The passages from the pyramid of Pepi show at once the difference between neter as God, and the "gods" neteru; the other passages, which might be multiplied almost indefinitely, prove that the Being spoken of is God. The neteru or "gods" whom Unās hunted, and snared, and killed, and roasted, and ate, are beings who could die; to them were attributed bodies, souls, ka's, spiritual bodies, etc. In a remarkable passage from the CLIVth Chapter of the Book of the Dead (Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 179, l. 3) the deceased king Thothmes III. prays:—

Of these mortal gods some curious legends have come down to us; from which the following may be selected as illustrating their inferior position.

THE LEGEND OF RĀ AND ISIS.

Now Isis was a woman who possessed words of power; her heart was wearied with the millions of men, and she chose the millions of the gods, but she esteemed more highly the millions of the khu's. And she meditated in her heart, saying, "Cannot I by means of the "sacred name of God make myself mistress of the earth and become a goddess like unto

Legend of Rā and Isis.

“Rā in heaven and upon earth?” Now, behold, each day Rā entered at the head of his holy mariners and established himself upon the throne of the two horizons. The holy one had grown old, he dribbled at the mouth, his spittle fell upon the earth, and his slobbering dropped upon the ground. And Isis kneaded it with earth in her hand, and formed thereof a sacred serpent in the form of a spear ; she set it not upright before her face, but let it lie upon the ground in the path whereby the great god went forth, according to his heart’s desire, into his double kingdom. Now the holy god arose, and the gods who followed him as though he were Pharaoh went with him ; and he came forth according to his daily wont ; and the sacred serpent bit him. The flame of life departed from him, and he who dwelt among the cedars (?) was overcome. The holy god opened his mouth, and the cry of his majesty reached unto heaven. His company of gods said, “What hath happened?” and his gods exclaimed, “What is it?” But Rā could not answer, for his jaws trembled and all his members quaked ; the poison spread swiftly through his flesh just as the Nile invadeth all his land. When the great god had stablished his heart, he cried unto those who were in his train, saying, “Come unto me, O ye who have come into being from my body, ye gods who have come forth from me, make ye known unto Kheperā that a dire calamity hath fallen upon me. My heart perceiveth it, but my eyes see it not ; my hand hath not caused it, nor do I know who hath done this unto me. Never have I felt such pain, neither can sickness cause more woe than this. I am a prince, the son of a prince, a sacred essence which hath proceeded from God. I am a great one, the son of a great one, and my father planned my name ; I have multitudes of names and multitudes of forms, and my existence is in every god. I have been proclaimed by the heralds Tmu and Horus, and my father and my mother uttered my name ; but it hath been hidden within me by him that begat me, who would not that the words of power of any seer should have dominion over me. I came forth to look upon that which I had made, I was passing through the world which I had created, when lo! something stung me, but what I know not. Is it fire? Is it water? My heart is on fire, my flesh quaketh, and trembling hath seized all my limbs. Let there be brought unto me the children of the gods with healing words and with lips that know, and with power which reacheth unto heaven.” The children of every god came unto him in tears, Isis came with her healing words and with her mouth full of the breath of life, with her enchantments which destroy sickness, and with her words of power which make the dead to live. And she spake, saying, “What hath come to pass, O holy father? What hath happened? A serpent hath bitten thee, and a thing which thou hast created hath lifted up his head against thee. Verily it shall be cast forth by my healing words of power, and I will drive it away from before the sight of thy sunbeams.”

The holy god opened his mouth and said, “I was passing along my path, and I was going through the two regions of my lands according to my heart’s desire, to see that which I had created, when lo! I was bitten by a serpent which I saw not. Is it fire? Is it water? I am colder than water, I am hotter than fire. All my flesh sweateth, I quake, my eye hath no strength, I cannot see the sky, and the sweat rusheth to my face even as in the time of summer.” Then said Isis unto Rā, “O tell me thy name, holy father, for whosoever shall be delivered by thy name shall live.” [And Rā said], “I have made the heavens and the earth, I have ordered the mountains, I have created all that is above them, I have made the water, I have made to come into being the great and wide sea, I have made the ‘Bull of “his mother,” from whom spring the delights of love. I have made the heavens, I have stretched out the two horizons like a curtain, and I have placed the soul of the gods within them. I am he who, if he openeth his eyes, doth make the light, and, if he closeth them, darkness cometh into being. At his command the Nile riseth, and the gods know not his name. I have made the hours, I have created the days, I bring forward the festivals of the year, I create the Nile-flood. I make the fire of life, and I provide food in the houses. I am Kheperā in the morning, I am Rā at noon, and I am Tmu at even.” Meanwhile the poison was not taken away from his body, but it pierced deeper, and the great god could no longer walk.

Legend of Rā and Isis.

Then said Isis unto Rā, “What thou hast said is not thy name. O tell it unto me, and the poison shall depart; for he shall live whose name shall be revealed.” Now the poison burned like fire, and it was fiercer than the flame and the furnace, and the majesty of the god said, “I consent that Isis shall search into me, and that my name shall pass from me into her.” Then the god hid himself from the gods, and his place in the boat of millions of years was empty. And when the time arrived for the heart of Rā to come forth, Isis spake unto her son Horus, saying, “The god hath bound himself by an oath to deliver up his two eyes” (i.e., the sun and moon). Thus was the name of the great god taken from him, and Isis, the lady of enchantments, said, “Depart, poison, go forth from Rā. O eye of Horus, go forth from the god, and shine outside his mouth. It is I who work, it is I who make to fall down upon the earth the vanquished poison; for the name of the great god hath been taken away from him. May Rā live! and may the poison die, may the poison die, and may Rā live!” These are the words of Isis, the great goddess, the queen of the gods, who knew Rā by his own name.¹

Thus we see that even to the great god Rā were attributed all the weakness and frailty of mortal man; and that “gods” and “goddesses” were classed with beasts and reptiles, which could die and perish. As a result, it seems that the word “God” should be reserved to express the name of the Creator of the Universe, and that neteru, usually rendered “gods,” should be translated by some other word, but what that word should be it is almost impossible to say.²

From the attributes of God set forth in Egyptian texts of all periods, Dr. Brugsch, de Rougé, and other eminent Egyptologists have come to the opinion that the dwellers in the Nile valley, from the earliest times, knew and worshipped one God, nameless, incomprehensible, and eternal. In 1860 de Rougé wrote:—“The

The belief in One God.

² A similar difficulty also exists in Hebrew, for אֱלֹהִים means both God and “gods”; compare Psalm lxxxii., 1.

“unity of a supreme and self-existent being, his eternity, his almightiness, and external reproduction thereby as God ; the attributing of the creation of the world and of all living beings to this supreme God ; the immortality of the soul, completed by the dogma of punishments and rewards : such is the sublime and persistent base which, notwithstanding all deviations and all mythological embellishments, must secure for the beliefs of the ancient Egyptians a most honourable place among the religions of antiquity.”¹ Nine years later he developed this view, and discussed the difficulty of reconciling the belief in the unity of God with the polytheism which existed in Egypt from the earliest times, and he repeated his conviction that the Egyptians believed in a self-existent God who was One Being, who had created man, and who had endowed him with an immortal soul.² In fact, de Rougé amplifies what Champollion-Figeac (relying upon his brother's information) wrote in 1839 : “The Egyptian religion is a pure monotheism, which manifested itself externally by a symbolic polytheism.”³ M. Pierret adopts the view that the texts show us that the Egyptians believed in One infinite and eternal God who was without a second, and he repeats Champollion's dictum.⁴ But the most recent supporter of the monotheistic theory is Dr. Brugsch, who has collected a number of striking passages from the texts. From these passages we may select the following :—

God is one and alone, and none other existeth with Him—God is the One, the One who hath made all things—God is a spirit, a hidden spirit, the spirit of spirits, the great spirit of the Egyptians, the divine spirit—God is from the beginning, and He hath been from the beginning, He hath existed from old and was when nothing else had being. He existed when nothing else existed, and what existeth He created after He had come into being, He is the Father of beginnings—God is the eternal One, He is eternal and infinite and endureth for ever and aye—God is hidden and no man knoweth His form. No man hath been able to seek out His likeness ; He is hidden to gods and men, and He is a mystery unto His creatures. No man knoweth how to know Him—His name remaineth hidden ; His name is a mystery unto His children. His names are innumerable, they are manifold and none knoweth their number—God is truth and He liveth by truth and He feedeth thereon. He is the king of truth, and He hath stablished the earth thereupon—God is life and through Him only man liveth. He giveth life to man, He breatheth the breath of life into his nostrils—God is father and mother, the father of fathers, and the mother of mothers. He begetteth, but was never begotten; He produceth, but was never produced; He begat himself and produced himself. He createth, but was never created; He is the maker of his own form, and the fashioner of His own body—God Himself is existence, He endureth without increase or diminution, He multiplieth Himself millions of times, and He is manifold in forms and in members—God hath made the universe, and He hath created all that therein is; He is the Creator of what is in this world, and of what was, of what is, and of what shall be. He is the Creator of the heavens, and of the earth, and of the deep, and of the water, and of the mountains. God hath stretched out the heavens and founded the earth—What His heart conceived straightway came to pass, and when He hath spoken, it cometh to pass and endureth for ever—God is the father of the gods; He fashioned men and formed the gods—God is merciful unto those who reverence Him, and He heareth him that calleth upon Him. God knoweth him that acknowledgeth Him, He rewardeth him that serveth Him, and He protecteth him that followeth Him.¹

Because, however, polytheism existed side by side with monotheism in Egypt, M. Maspero believes that the words "God One" do not mean "One God" in our sense of the words; and Mr. Renouf thinks that the "Egyptian nutar never became a proper name."² Whether polytheism grew from monotheism in Egypt, or monotheism from polytheism we will not venture to say, for the evidence of the pyramid texts shows that already in the Vth dynasty monotheism and polytheism were flourishing side by side. The opinion of Tiele is that the religion of Egypt was from the beginning polytheistic, but that it developed in two opposite directions: in the one direction gods were multiplied by the addition of local gods, and in the other the Egyptians drew nearer and nearer to monotheism.³

Monotheism and polytheism co-existent.

From a number of passages drawn from texts of all periods it is clear that the form in which God made himself manifest to man upon earth was the sun, which the Egyptians called Rā ,⁴ and that all other gods and goddesses were forms of him. The principal authorities for epithets applied to God and to His visible emblem the sun are the hymns and litanies which are found inscribed upon the walls of tombs,¹ stelæ, and papyri² of the XVIIIth dynasty; and these prove that the Egyptians ascribed the attributes of the Creator to the creature. The religious ideas which we find in these writings in the XVIIIth dynasty are, no doubt, the outcome of the religion of earlier times, for all the evidence now available shows that the Egyptians of the later periods invented comparatively little in the way of religious literature. Where, how, and in what way they succeeded in preserving their most ancient texts, are matters about which little, unfortunately, is known. In course of time we find that the attributes of a certain god in one period are applied to other gods in another; a new god is formed by the fusion of two or more gods; local gods, through the favourable help of political circumstances, or the fortune of war, become almost national gods; and the gods who are the companions of Osiris are endowed by the pious with all the attributes of the great cosmic gods—Rā, Ptaḥ, Khnemu, Kheperā, and the like. Thus the attributes of Rā are bestowed upon Khnemu and Kheperā; the god Horus exists in the aspects of Ḥeru-maati, Ḥeru-khent-ân-maa, Ḥeru-Khuti, Ḥeru-nub, Ḥeru-beḥuṭet, etc., and the attributes of each are confounded either in periods or localities: Tmu-Rā, and Menthu-Rā, and Amen-Rā are composed of Tmu and Rā, and Menthu and Rā, and Amen and Rā respectively, and we have seen from the hymn quoted above (p. lii.) that already in the XVIIIth dynasty the god Osiris had absorbed the attributes which belonged in the earlier dynasties to Rā alone.

The sun the emblem of God.

Confusion of gods.

History of the god Amen.

Still more remarkable, however, is the progress of the god Amen in Egyptian theology. In the early empire, i.e., during the first eleven dynasties, this god ranked only as a local god, although his name is as old as the time of Unās;³ and it is not until the so-called Hyksos have been expelled from Egypt by the Theban kings of the XVIIth dynasty that Ámen, whom the latter had chosen as their great god, and whose worship they had declined to renounce at the bidding of the Hyksos king Ápepi,¹ was acknowledged as the national god of southern Egypt at least. Having by virtue of being the god of the conquerors obtained the position of head of the company of Egyptian gods, he received the attributes of the most ancient gods, and little by little he absorbed the epithets of them all. Thus Ámen became Ámen-Rā, and the glory of the old gods of Ánnu, or Heliopolis, was centred in him who was originally an obscure local god. The worship of Ámen in Egypt was furthered by the priests of the great college of Ámen, which seems to have been established early in the XVIIIth dynasty by the kings who were his devout worshippers. The extract from a papyrus written for the princess Nesi-Khonsu,² a member of the priesthood of Ámen, is an example of the exalted language in which his votaries addressed him.

He giveth long life and multiplieth the years of those who are favoured by him, he is the gracious protector of him whom he setteth in his heart, and he is the fashioner of eternity and everlastingness. He is the king of the North and of the South, Amen-Rā, king of the gods, the lord of heaven, and of earth and of the waters and of the mountains, with whose coming into being the earth began its existence, the mighty one, more princely than all the gods of the first company thereof.”

Theories of the origin of the gods.

With reference to the origin of the gods of the Egyptians much useful information may be derived from the pyramid texts. From them it would seem that, in the earliest times, the Egyptians had tried to think out and explain to themselves the origin of their gods and of their groupings. According to M. Maspero¹ they reduced everything to one kind of primeval matter which they believed contained everything in embryo; this matter was water, Nu, which they deified, and everything which arose therefrom was a god. The priests of Annu at a very early period grouped together the nine greatest gods of Egypt, forming what is called the paut neteru or “ company of the gods,” or as it is written in the pyramid texts, paut āāt , “ the great company of gods ” ; the texts also show that there was a second group of nine gods called paut nel'eset , or “ lesser company of the gods ” ; and a third group of nine gods is also known. When all three pauts of gods are addressed they appear as .² The great cycle of the gods in Annu was composed of the gods Tmu, Shu, Tefnut, Seb, Nut, Osiris, Isis, Set and Nephthys ; but, though paut means “ nine,” the texts do not always limit a paut of the gods to that number, for sometimes the gods amount to twelve, and sometimes, even though the number be nine, other gods are substituted for the original gods of the paut. We should naturally expect Rā to stand at the head of the great paut of the gods ; but it must be remembered that the chief local god of Annu was Tmu, and, as the priests of that city revised and edited the pyramid texts known to us, they naturally substituted their own form of the god Rā, or at best united him with Rā, and called him Tmu-Rā. In the primeval matter, or water, lived the god Tmu, and when he rose for the first time, in the form of the sun, he created the world. Here at once we have Tmu assimilated with Nu. A curious passage in the pyramid of Pepi I. shows that while as yet there was neither heaven nor earth, and when neither gods had been born, nor men created, the god Tmu was the father of human beings,¹ even before death came into the world. The first act of Tmu was to create from his own body the god Shu and the goddess Tefnut,² and afterwards Seb the earth and Nut the sky came into being. These were followed by Osiris and Isis, Set and Nephthys.

Dr. Brugsch's version of the origin of the gods as put forth in his last work on the subject³ is somewhat different. According to him there was in the beginning neither heaven nor earth, and nothing existed except a boundless primeval mass of water which was shrouded in darkness and which contained within itself the germs or beginnings, male and female, of everything which was to be in the future world. The divine primeval spirit which formed an essential part of the primeval matter felt within itself the desire to begin the work of creation, and its word woke to life the world, the form and shape of which it had already depicted to itself. The first act of creation began with the formation of an egg⁴ out of the primeval water, from which broke forth Rā, the immediate cause of all life upon earth. The almighty power of the divine spirit embodied itself in its most brilliant form in the rising sun. When the inert mass of primeval matter felt the desire of the primeval spirit to begin the work of creation, it began to move, and the creatures which were to constitute the future world were formed according to the divine intelligence Maā. Under the influence of Thoth, or that form of the divine intelligence which created the world by a word, eight elements, four male and four female, arose out of the primeval Nu, which possessed the properties of the male and female. These eight elements were called Nu and Nut,¹ Heh and Hehet,² Kek and Keket,³ and Enen and Enenet,⁴ or Khemennu, the "Eight," and they were considered as primeval fathers and mothers.⁵ They are often represented in the forms of four male and four female apes  who stand in adoration and greet the rising sun with songs and hymns of praise,⁶ but they also appear as male and female human forms with the heads of frogs or serpents.⁷ The birth of light from the waters, and of fire from the moist mass of primeval matter, and of Rā from Nu, formed the starting point of all mythological speculations, conjectures, and theories of the Egyptian priests.⁸ The light of the sun gave birth to itself out of chaos, and the conception of the future world was depicted in Thoth the divine intelligence; when Thoth gave the word, what he commanded at once took place by means of Ptaḥ and Khnemu, the visible representatives of the power which turned Thoth's command into deed. Khnemu made the egg of the sun,⁹ and Ptaḥ gave to the god of light a finished body.¹⁰ The first paut of the gods consisted of Shu, Tefnut, Seb, Nut, Osiris, Isis, Set, Nephthys and Horus, and their governor Tmu or Ātmu.¹¹

In a late copy of a work entitled the "Book of knowing the evolutions of Rā," Egyptian account of the Creation. the god Neb-er-tcher, the "lord of the company of the gods," records the story of the creation and of the birth of the gods:—"I am he who evolved himself under "the form of the god Kheperā, I, the evolver of the evolutions evolved myself, "the evolver of all evolutions, after many evolutions and developments which "came forth from my mouth.¹² No heaven existed, and no earth, and no "terrestrial animals or reptiles had come into being. Summary of theories.

The reader has now before him the main points of the evidence concerning the Egyptians' notions about God, and the cosmic powers and their phases, and the anthropomorphic creations with which they peopled the other world, all of which have been derived from the native literature of ancient Egypt. The different interpretations which different Egyptologists have placed upon the facts demonstrate the difficulty of the subject. Speaking generally, the interpreters may be divided into two classes : those who credit the Egyptians with a number of abstract ideas about God and the creation of the world and the future life, which are held to be essentially the product of modern Christian nations ; and those who consider the mind of the Egyptian as that of a half-savage being to whom occasional glimmerings of spiritual light were vouchsafed from time to time. All eastern nations have experienced difficulty in separating spiritual from corporeal conceptions, and the Egyptian is no exception to the rule ; but if he preserved the gross idea of a primeval existence with the sublime idea of God which he manifests in writings of a later date, it seems that this is due more to his reverence for hereditary tradition than to ignorance. Without attempting to decide questions which have presented difficulties to the greatest thinkers among Egyptologists, it may safely be said that the Egyptian whose mind conceived the existence of an unknown, inscrutable, eternal and infinite God, who was One—whatever the word One may mean here—and who himself believed in a future life to be spent in a glorified body in heaven, was not a being whose spiritual needs would be satisfied by a belief in gods who could eat, and drink, love and hate, and fight and grow old and die. He was unable to describe the infinite God, himself being finite, and it is not surprising that he should, in some respects, have made Him in his own image.

legs form the four pillars upon which the heavens are supported. Nut, the sky goddess, was the wife of Seb, the earth god, from whose embrace she was separated by Shu, the god of the air; when this separation was effected, earth, air, and sky came into being. Signor Lanzone has collected a number of illustrations of this event from papyri and other documents,¹ wherein we have Seb lying on the ground, and Shu uplifting Nut with his outstretched hands. The feet of the goddess rested on the east, and her hands on the west; this is shown by the scene wherein Shu is accompanied by two females who have on their heads  "east" and  "west" respectively.² The child of the union of Seb and Nut was the Sun, who was born in the east in the morning, and who made his course along his mother's body, until he set in the west in the evening. The moon followed the sun's course along his mother's body, but sometimes a second female is represented bowed beneath Nut¹ (Fig. 2), and this is believed to signify the night sky across which the moon travels. In an interesting picture which M. Jéquier has published² the goddess is depicted lying flat with her arms stretched out at full length above her head; on her breast is the disk of the sun, and on her stomach the moon. Those who believed that the sky was an iron plane imagined that the stars were a numbers of lamps which were hung out therefrom, and those who pictured the sky as a goddess studded her body with stars. round in a circle; the space enclosed by it represents according to Dr. Brugsch the Ṭuat ¹ or Egyptian underworld, wherein dwelt the gods of the dead and the departed souls. This view is supported by the scene from the sarcophagus of Seti I. (Fig. 1). In the watery space above the bark is the figure of the god bent round in a circle with his toes touching his head, and upon his head stands the goddess Nut with outstretched hands receiving the disk of the sun.² In the space enclosed by the body of the god is the legend, "This is Osiris; his circuit is the Ṭuat."³ Though nearly all Egyptologists agree about the meaning of the word being "the place of departed souls," yet it has been translated in various ways, different scholars locating the Ṭuat in different parts of creation. Dr. Brugsch and others place it under the earth,⁴ others have supposed it to be the space which exists between the arms of Shu and the body of Nut,⁵ but the most recent theory put forth is that it was situated neither above nor below the earth, but beyond Egypt to the north, from which it was separated by the mountain range which, as the Egyptians thought, supported the sky.⁶ The region of the Ṭuat was a long, mountainous, narrow valley with a river running along it; starting from the east it made its way to the north, and then taking a circular direction it came back to the east. In the Ṭuat lived all manner of fearful monsters and beasts, and here was the country through which the sun passed during the twelve hours of the night; according to one view he traversed this region in splendour, and according to another he died and became subject to Osiris the king, god and judge of the kingdom of the departed.

The souls of the dead made their way to their abode in the "other world" by a ladder, according to a very ancient view, or through a gap in the mountains of Abydos called Peḫa  according to another; but, by whichever way they passed from earth, their destination was a region in the Ṭuat which is called in the pyramid and later texts Sekhet-Āaru,⁷ which was situated in the

Here dwell Horus and Set, for the fields of Āaru and Ĥetep are their domains,² and here enters the deceased with two of the children of Horus on one side of him, and two on the other,³ and the "two great chiefs who preside over the throne of the great god proclaim eternal life and power for him."⁴ Here like the supreme God he is declared to be "one,"⁵ and the four children of Horus proclaim his name to Rā. Having gone to the north of the Āaru Field he makes his way to the eastern portion of the tuat, where according to one legend he becomes like the morning star, near⁶ his sister Sothis.⁷ Here he lived in the form of the star Sothis, and "the great and little companies of the gods purify him in the Great Bear."⁸ The Egyptian theologians, who conceived that a ladder was necessary to enable the soul to ascend to the next world, provided it also with an address which it was to utter when it reached the top. As given in the pyramid of Unās it reads as follows⁹:—"Hail to thee, O daughter of Āmenta, mistress of Peteru(?) of "heaven, thou gift of Thoth, thou mistress of the two sides of the ladder, open a "way to Unās, let Unās pass. Hail to thee, O Nāu, who art [seated] upon the "brink of the Lake of Kha, open thou a way to Unās, let Unās pass. Power of the gods of Ánnu.

The souls of the dead could also be commended to the care of the gods above by the gods of Ánnu, and thus we find it said in the pyramid of Unás: "O gods of the west, O gods of the east, O gods of the south, O gods of the north, ye four [orders of gods] who embrace the four holy ends of the universe, and who granted to Osiris to come forth to heaven, and to sail over the celestial waters thereof with his son Horus by his side to protect him and to make him to rise like a great god from the celestial deep, say ye to Unás, 'Behold 'Horus, the son of Osiris, behold Unás, the god of the aged gods, the son of 'Hathor, behold the seed of Seb, for Osiris hath commanded that Unás shall 'rise like the second of Horus, and the four khu's who are in Ánnu have 'written this command to the great gods who are in the celestial waters.'"¹ And again, "When men are buried and receive their thousands of cakes and thousands of vases of ale upon the table of him that ruleth in Ámenta, that being 'is in sore straits who hath not a written decree: now the decree of Unás is "under the greatest, and not under the little seal."²

The plan of the Sekhet-Ḥetep which we find in the Book of the Dead during the Theban period will be described below, and it is therefore sufficient to say here that the ideas of the happy life which the deceased led had their origin in the pyramid texts, as may be seen from the following passage:—"Unás hath offered incense unto the great and little companies of the gods, and his mouth is pure, and the tongue which is therein is pure. O ye judges, ye have taken Unás unto yourselves, let him eat that which ye eat, let him drink that which ye drink, let him live upon that which ye live upon, let your seat be his seat, let his power be your power, let the boat wherein he shall sail be your boat, let him net birds in Áaru, let him possess running streams in Sekhet-Ḥetep, and may he obtain his meat and his drink from you, O ye gods. May the water of Unás be of the wine which is of Rā, may he revolve in the sky like Rā, and may he pass over the sky like Thoth."³

Of the condition of those who failed to secure a life of beatitude with the gods in the Sekhet-Áaru of the Ṭuat, the pyramid texts say nothing, and it seems as if the doctrine of punishment of the wicked and of the judgment which took place after death is a development characteristic of a later period.

THE GODS OF THE BOOK OF THE DEAD.

The following are the principal gods and goddesses mentioned in the pyramid texts and in the later versions of the Book of the Dead :—

Nu  represents the primeval watery mass from which all the gods were evolved, and upon which floats the bark of “millions of years” containing the sun. This god’s chief titles are “Father of the gods,” , and “begetter of the great company of the gods,” . He is depicted in the form of a seated deity having upon his head disk and plumes .¹

Nut , the female principle of Nu; she is depicted with the head of a snake surmounted by a disk, or with the head of a cat.²

Ptah  was associated with the god Khnemu in carrying out at the Creation the mandates of Thoth the divine intelligence; his name means the “opener,” and he was identified by the Greeks with Ἡφαιστος, and by the Latins with Vulcan. He was worshipped at a very early date in Memphis, which is called in Egyptian texts “The House of the Ka of Ptah,” , and according to Herodotus his temple there was founded by Menâ or Menes.³ He is called the “exceedingly great god, the beginning of being,” , “the father of fathers and power of powers,” ; and “he created his form, death and precedes the entry into eternal life, and the symbols with which he is accompanied explain the character attributed to this god.¹

The god Ptaḥ is also united with the gods Hāpi, Nu and Tanen when he represents various phases of primeval matter.

Khnemu  worked with Ptaḥ in carrying out the work of creation ordered by Thoth, and is therefore one of the oldest divinities of Egypt; his name means "to mould," "to model." His connexion with the primeval water caused him to be regarded as the chief god of the inundation and lord of the cataract at Elephantine. He dwelt in Ānnu, but he was lord of Elephantine , and "the builder of men, the maker of the gods, and the father from the beginning." Elsewhere he is said to be

He supported the heaven upon its four pillars  in the beginning, and earth, air, sea, and sky are his handiwork. He is depicted in the form of a man having a ram's head and horns surmounted by plumes, uræi with disks, etc.; in one hand he holds the sceptre  and in the other the emblem of life . Occasionally he is hawk-headed, and in one representation he holds the emblem of water , in each hand. On a late bas-relief at Philæ we find him seated at a potter's table upon which stands a human being whom he has just fashioned.²

Khepera  was a form of the rising sun, and was both a type of matter which is on the point of passing from inertness into life, and also of the dead body which is about to burst forth into a new life in a glorified form. He is depicted in the form of a man having a beetle for a head, and this insect was his type and emblem among ancient nations, because it was believed to be self-begotten and self-produced; to this notion we owe the myriads of beetles or scarabs which are found in tombs of all ages in Egypt, and also in the Greek islands and settlements in the Mediterranean, and in Phœnicia, Syria, and elsewhere. The seat of the god Kheperá was in the boat of the sun, and the pictures which present us with this fact¹ only illustrate an idea which is as old, at least, as the pyramid of Unás, for in this monument it is said of the king:—

In the XVIIIth dynasty Queen Hâtshepset declared herself to be “the creator of things which came into being like Khepera” ,³ and in later times the scribes were exceedingly fond of playing upon the word used as a noun, adjective, verb and proper name.⁴

Tum  or Atemu  i.e., “the closer,” was the great god of Ánnu, and the head of the great company of the gods of that place. It would seem that he usurped the position of Rā in Egyptian mythology, or at any rate that the priests of Ánnu succeeded in causing their local god, either separately or joined with Rā, to be accepted as the leader of the divine group. He represented the evening or night sun, and as such he is called in the XVth chapter of the Book of the Dead “divine god,” “self-created,” “maker of the gods,” “creator of men,” “who stretched out the heavens,” “the lightener of the tuat with his two eyes,” etc.⁵

The "cool breezes of the north wind," for which every dead man prayed, were supposed to proceed from him. He is, as M. Lefébure has pointed out, always depicted in the form of a man; he wears the crowns  and holds both the sceptre  and emblem of life . On a mummy case at Turin he is depicted in the boat of the Sun, in company with the god Kheperá; between them are the beetle and sun's disk .¹ In later times the Egyptians called the feminine form of Tmu Temt .

Rā  was the name given to the sun by the Egyptians in a remote antiquity, but the meaning of the word, or the attribute which they ascribed to the sun by it, is unknown. Rā was the visible emblem of God, and was regarded as the god of this earth, to whom offerings and sacrifices were made daily; and when he appeared above the horizon at the creation, time began. In the pyramid texts the soul of the deceased makes its way to where Rā is in heaven, and Rā is entreated to give it a place in the "bark of millions of years" wherein he sails over the sky. The Egyptians attributed to the sun a morning and an evening boat, and in these the god sat accompanied by Kheperá and Tmu, his own forms in the morning and evening respectively. In his daily course he vanquished night and darkness, and mist and cloud disappeared from before his rays; subsequently the Egyptians invented the moral conception of the sun, representing the victory of right over wrong and of truth over falsehood. From a natural point of view the sun was synonymous with movement, and hence typified the life of man; and the setting of the one typified the death of the other. Usually Rā is depicted in human form, sometimes with the head of a hawk, and sometimes without.³ As early as the time of the pyramid texts we find Rā united with Tmu to form the chief god of Ánnu, and at the same period a female counterpart Rāt  was assigned to him.⁴

Shu , the second member of the company of the gods of Ánnu, was the firstborn son of Rā, Rā-Tmu, or Tum, by the goddess Hathor, the sky, and was the twin brother of Tefnut. He typified the light, he lifted up the sky, Nut, from the earth, Seb, and placed it upon the steps  which were in Khemennu.

He is usually depicted in the form of a man, who wears upon his head a feather , or feathers , and holds in his hand the sceptre . At other times he appears in the form of a man with upraised arms; on his head he has the emblem , and he is often accompanied by , the four pillars of heaven, i.e., the cardinal points.¹ Among the many faïence amulets which are found in tombs are two which have reference to Shu: the little models of steps  typify the steps upon which Shu rested the sky in Khemennu        ; and the crouching figure of a god supporting the sun's disk symbolizes his act of raising the sun's disk into the space between sky and earth at the time when he separated Nut from Seb.

Tefnut   , the third member of the company of the gods of Ännu, was the daughter of Rā, Rā-Tmu, or Tmu, and twin-sister of Shu; she represented in one form moisture, and in another aspect she seems to personify the power of sunlight. She is depicted in the form of a woman, usually with the head of a lioness surmounted by a disk or uræus, or both;² in faïence, however, the twin brother and sister have each a lion's head. In the pyramid texts they play a curious part, Shu being supposed to carry away hunger from the deceased, and Tefnut his thirst.³

Seb or Qeb  , the fourth member of the company of the gods of Ännu, was the son of Shu, husband of Nut, and by her father of Osiris, Isis, Set, and Nephthys. Originally he was the god of the earth, and is called both the "father of the gods"    , and the "erpā  (i.e., the tribal, hereditary head) of the gods." He is depicted in human form, sometimes with a crown upon his head and sceptre  in his right hand; and sometimes he has upon his head a goose,⁴ which bird was sacred to him. In many places he is called the "great cackler"                , and he was supposed to have laid the egg from which the world sprang. Already in the pyramid texts he has become a god of the dead by virtue of representing the earth wherein the deceased was laid.

Aūsār or Osiris , the sixth member of the company of the gods of Ānu, was the son of Seb and Nut, and the husband of his sister Isis, the father of "Horus, the son of Isis," and the brother of Set and Nephthys. The version of his sufferings and death by Plutarch has been already described (see p. xlviij.). Whatever may have been the foundation of the legend, it is pretty certain that his character as a god of the dead was well defined long before the versions of the pyramid texts known to us were written, and the only important change which took place in the views of the Egyptians concerning him in later days was the ascription to him of the attributes which in the early dynasties were regarded as belonging only to Rā or to Rā-Tmu. Originally Osiris was a form of the sun-god, and, speaking generally, he may be said to have represented the sun after he had set, and as such was the emblem of the motionless dead; later texts identify him with the moon. The Egyptians asserted that he was the father of the gods who had given him birth, and, as he was the god both of yesterday and of to-day, he became the type of eternal existence and the symbol of immortality; as such he usurped not only the attributes of Rā, but those of every other god, and at length he was both the god of the dead and the god of the living. As judge of the dead he was believed to exercise functions similar to those attributed to God. Alone among all the many gods of Egypt, Osiris was chosen as the type of what the deceased hoped to become when, his body having been mummified in the prescribed way, and ceremonies proper to the occasion having been performed and the prayers said, his glorified body should enter into his presence in heaven; to him as "lord of eternity," by which title as judge of the dead he was commonly addressed, the deceased appealed to make his flesh to germinate and to save his body from decay.¹ The various forms in which Osiris is depicted are too numerous to be described here, but generally speaking he is represented in the form of a mummy wearing a crown and holding in his hands the emblems of sovereignty and power. A very complete series of illustrations of the forms of Osiris is given by Lanzone in his Dizionario, tavv. 258-299. The ceremonies connected with the celebration of the events of the sufferings, the death and the resurrection of Osiris occupied a very prominent part in the religious observances of the Egyptians, and it seems as if in the month of Choiak a representation of them took place in various temples in Egypt; the text of a minute description of them has been published by M. Loret in Recueil de Travaux, tom. iii., p. 43 ff., and succeeding volumes. A perusal of this work explains the signification of many of the ceremonies connected with the burial of the dead, the use of amulets, and certain parts of the funeral ritual; and the work in this form being of a late date proves that the doctrine of immortality, gained through the god who was "lord of the heavens and of the earth, of the underworld and of the waters, of the mountains, and of all which the sun goeth round in his course,"¹ had remained unchanged for at least four thousand years of its existence.

Auset or Isis , the seventh member of the company of the gods of Annu, was the wife of Osiris and the mother of Horus; her woes have been described both by Egyptian and Greek writers.² Her commonest names are "the great goddess, the divine mother, the mistress of charms or enchantments"; in later times she is called the "mother of the gods," and the "living one." She is usually depicted in the form of a woman, with a head-dress in the shape of a seat , the hieroglyphic for which forms her name. The animal sacred to her was the cow, hence she sometimes wears upon her head the horns of that animal accompanied by plumes and feathers. In one aspect she is identified with the goddess Selk or Serq, and she then has upon her head a scorpion, the emblem of that goddess;³ in another aspect she is united to the star Sothis, and then a star  is added to her crown. She is, however, most commonly represented as the mother suckling her child Horus, and figures of her in this aspect, in bronze and faïence, exist in thousands. As a nature goddess she is seen standing in the boat of the sun, and she was probably the deity of the dawn.

Heru or Horus , the sun-god, was originally a totally distinct god from Horus, the son of Osiris and Isis, but from the earliest times it seems that the two gods were confounded, and that the attributes of the one were ascribed to the other; the fight which Horus the sun-god waged against night and darkness was also at a very early period identified with the combat between Horus, the son of Isis, and his brother Set. The visible emblem of the sun-god was at a very early date the hawk , which was probably the first living thing worshipped by the early Egyptians; already in the pyramid texts the hawk on a standard  is used indiscriminately with  to represent the word "god." The principal forms of Horus the sun-god, which probably represent the sun at various periods of the day and night, are:—Hēru-ur  (Ἄρωῆρει), "Horus the Great"; Hēru-merti , "Horus of the two eyes," i.e., of the sun and moon;¹ Hēru-nub , "the golden Horus"; Hēru-khent-khat ; Hēru-khent-ān-maa  , "Horus dwelling in blindness"; Hēru-khuti , "Horus of the two horizons,"² the type of which on earth was the Sphinx; Hēru-sam-taui , "Horus the uniter of the north and south"; Hēru-ḥekenu , "Horus of Heken"; and Hēru-beḥuṭet , "Horus of Behutet."³ The cippi of Horus, which became so common at a late period in Egypt, seem to unite the idea of the physical and moral conceptions of Horus the sun-god and of Horus the son of Osiris and Isis.

Horus, the son of Osiris and Isis, , appears in Egyptian texts usually as Hēru-p-khart , or "Horus the child," who afterwards became the "avenger of his father Osiris," and occupied his throne, as we are told in many places in the Book of the Dead. In the pyramid texts the deceased is identified with Hēru-p-khart, and a reference is made to the fact that the god is always represented with a finger in his mouth.⁴ The curious legend which Plutarch relates concerning Harpocrates and the cause of his lameness⁵ is probably sister and wife of Set. When the sun rose at the creation out of the primeval waters, Nephthys occupied a place in his boat with Isis and other deities; as a nature goddess she either represents the day before sunrise or after sunset, but no portion of the night. She is depicted in the form of a woman, having upon her head the hieroglyphics which form her name, “lady of the house” . A legend preserved by Plutarch¹ makes her the mother of Anpu or Anubis by Osiris. In Egyptian texts Anpu is called the son of Rā.² In religious texts Nephthys is made to be the companion of Isis in all her troubles, and her grief for her brother's death is as great as that of his wife.

Anpu, or Anubis, , the son of Osiris or Rā, sometimes by Isis and sometimes by Nephthys, seems to represent as a nature god either the darkest part of the twilight or the earliest dawn. He is depicted either in human form with a jackal's head, or as a jackal. In the legend of Osiris and Isis, Anubis played a prominent part in connexion with the dead body of Osiris, and in papyri we see him standing as a guard and protector of the deceased lying upon the bier; in the judgment scene he is found as the guard of the balance, the pointer of which he watches with great diligence. He became the recognized god of the sepulchral chamber, and eventually presided over the whole of the “funeral mountain.” He is always regarded as the messenger of Osiris.

Another form of Anubis was the god Ap-uat, the    of the pyramid texts,³ or “Opener of the ways,” who also was depicted in the form of a jackal; and the two gods are often confounded. On sepulchral stelæ and other monuments two jackals are frequently depicted; one of these represents Anubis, and the other Ap-uat, and they probably have some connexion with the northern and southern parts of the funereal world. According to M. Maspero the god Anubis led the souls of the dead to the Elysian Fields in the Great Oasis.⁴

Among the primeval gods are two, Hu   and Saa    , who are seen in the boat of the sun at the creation. They are the children of Tmu or Tmu-Rā, but the exact part which they play as nature gods has not yet, it seems, been satisfactorily made out. The first mention of them in the pyramid texts records their subjugation by the deceased,⁵ but in the Theban Book of the Dead they appear among the company of the gods who are present when the soul of the deceased is being weighed in the balance.

Tehuti or Thoth  represented the divine intelligence which at creation uttered the words that were carried into effect by Ptaḥ and Khnemu. He was self-produced, and was the great god of the earth, air, sea and sky; and he united in himself the attributes of many gods. He was the scribe of the gods, and, as such, he was regarded as the inventor of all the arts and sciences known to the Egyptians; some of his titles are "lord of writing," "master of papyrus," "maker of the palette and the ink-jar," "the mighty speaker," "the sweet-tongued"; and the words and compositions which he recited on behalf of the deceased preserved the latter from the influence of hostile powers and made him invincible in the "other world." He was the god of right and truth, wherein he lived, and whereby he established the world and all that is in it. As the chronologer of heaven and earth, he became the god of the moon; and as the reckoner of time, he obtained his name Tehuti, i.e., "the measurer"; in these capacities he had the power to grant life for millions of years to the deceased. When the great combat took place between Horus, the son of Isis, and Set, Thoth was present as judge, and he gave to Isis the cow's head in the place of her own which was cut off by Horus in his rage at her interference; having reference to this fact he is called Ap-reḥui , "The judge of the two combatants." One of the Egyptian names for the ibis was  Tekh, and the similarity of the sound of this word to that of Tehu, the name of the moon as a measurer of time, probably led the Egyptians to depict the god in the form of an ibis, notwithstanding the fact that the dog-headed ape was generally considered to be the animal sacred to him. It has been thought that there were two gods called Thoth, one being a form of Shu; but the attributes belonging to each have not yet been satisfactorily defined. In the monuments and papyri Thoth appears in the form of a man with the head of an ibis, which is sometimes surmounted by the crown , or , or , or by disk and horns , or , and he holds in his left hand the sceptre , and in the right ; sometimes he is depicted holding his ink-jar  and the crescent moon , and sometimes he appears in the form of an ape holding a palette full of writing-reeds.¹ Thoth is mentioned in the pyramid texts² as the brother of Osiris, but whether he is the happiness; and the Greeks identified her with their own Aphrodite. She is often depicted in the form of a woman having disk and horns upon her head, and at times she has the head of a lion surmounted by a uræus. Often she has the form of a cow—the animal sacred to her—and in this form she appears as the goddess of the tomb or Ta-sertet, and she provides meat and drink for the deceased.¹

Meḥ-urt  is the personification of that part of the sky wherein the sun rises, and also of that part of it in which he takes his daily course; she is depicted in the form of a cow, along the body of which the two barks of the sun are seen sailing. Already in the pyramid texts we find the attribute of judge ascribed to Meḥ-urt,² and down to a very late date the judgment of the deceased in the hall of double Maāt in the presence of Thoth and the other gods was believed to take place in the abode of Meḥ-urt.³

Net or Neith , or , “the divine mother, the lady of heaven, the mistress of the gods,” was one of the most ancient deities of Egypt, and in the pyramid texts she appears as the mother of Sebek.⁴ Like Meḥ-urt she personifies the place in the sky where the sun rises. In one form she was the goddess of the loom and shuttle, and also of the chase; in this aspect she was identified by the Greeks with Athene. She is depicted in the form of a woman, having upon her head the shuttle  or arrows , or she wears the crown  and holds arrows , a bow , and a sceptre in her left hand; she also appears in the form of a cow.⁵

Sekhet  was in Memphis the wife of Ptaḥ, and the mother of Nefer-Tmu and of Ī-em-ḥetep. She was the personification of the burning heat of the sun, and as such was the destroyer of the enemies of Rā and Osiris. When Rā determined to punish mankind with death, because they scoffed at him, he sent Sekhet, his “eye,” to perform the work of vengeance; illustrative of this aspect of her is a figure wherein she is depicted with the sun’s eye for a head.⁶ Usually she has the head of a lion surmounted by the sun's disk, round which is a uræus; and she generally holds a sceptre , but sometimes a knife.

Bast , according to one legend, was the mother of Nefer-Tmu. She was the personification of the gentle and fructifying heat of the sun, as opposed to that personified by Sekhet. The cat was sacred to Bast, and the goddess is usually depicted cat-headed. The most famous seat of her worship was the city of Bubastis, the modern Tell Basta, in the Delta.

Nefer-Tmu  was the son either of Sekhet or Bast, and he personified some form of the sun's heat. He is usually depicted in the form of a man, with a cluster of lotus flowers upon his head, but sometimes he has the head of a lion; in the little faïence figures of him which are so common, he stands upon the back of a lion.¹ He no doubt represents the sun-god in the legend which made him to burst forth from a lotus, for in the pyramid of Unâs the king is said to and to "come forth on the horizon every day."²

Neheb-ka  is the name of a goddess who is usually represented with the head of a serpent, and with whom the deceased identifies himself.

Sebāk , a form of Horus the sun-god, must be distinguished from Sebāk the companion of Set, the opponent of Osiris; of each of these gods the crocodile was the sacred animal, and for this reason probably the gods themselves were confounded. Sebāk-Rā, the lord of Ombos, is usually depicted in human form with the head of a crocodile, surmounted by , , or , or .³

Amsu ,⁴ or Amsi  is one of the most ancient gods of Egypt. He personified the power of generation, or the reproductive force of nature; he was the "father of his own mother," and was identified with "Horus the mighty," or with Horus the avenger of his father Un-nefer or Osiris. The Greeks identified him with the god Pan, and called the chief city where his worship was celebrated Khemmis,¹ after one of his names. He is depicted usually in the form of a man standing upon ; and he has upon his head the plumes , and holds the flail  in his right hand, which is raised above his shoulder.²

Neb-er-tcher , a name which originally implied the "god of the universe," but which was subsequently given to Osiris, and indicated the god after the completed reconstruction of his body, which had been hacked to pieces by Set.

Un-nefer , a name of Osiris in his capacity of god and judge of the dead in the underworld. Some make these words to mean the "good being," and others the "beautiful hare."

Āstennu  a name given to the god Thoth.

Mert , or Mer-sekert , "the lover of silence," is a name of Isis or Hathor as goddess of the underworld. She is depicted in the form of a woman, having a disk and horns upon her head.³

Serq or Selk  is a form of the goddess Isis. She is usually depicted in the form of a woman, with a scorpion upon her head; occasionally she appears as a scorpion with a woman's head surmounted by disk and horns.⁴

Ta-urt , the Thoueris of the Greeks, was identified as the wife of Set or Typhon; she is also known under the names Āpt  and Sheput . Her common titles are "mistress of the gods" , and "bearer of the gods" . She is depicted in the form of a hippopotamus standing on her hind legs, with distended paunch and hanging breasts, and one of her forefeet rests upon ; sometimes she has the head of a woman, but she always wears the disk, horns, and plumes .

Uatchit  was a form of Hathor, and was identified with the appearance of the sky in the north when the sun rose. She is either depicted in the form of a woman, having upon her head the crown of the north  and a sceptre , around which a serpent is twined, or as a winged uræus wearing the crown of the north.

Beb, Bebti, Baba, or Babu, , mentioned three times in the Book of the Dead, is the "firstborn son of Osiris," and seems to be one of the gods of generation.

Hāpi  is the name of the great god of the Nile who was worshipped in Egypt under two forms, i.e., "Hāpi of the South," , and "Hāpi of the North," ; the papyrus was the emblem of the one, and the lotus of the other. From the earliest times the Nile was regarded by the Egyptians as the source of all the prosperity of Egypt, and it was honoured as being the type of the life-giving waters out of the midst of which sprang the gods and all created things. In turn it was identified with all the gods of Egypt, new or old, and its influence was so great upon the minds of the Egyptians that from the earliest days they depicted to themselves a material heaven wherein the Isles of the Blest were laved by the waters of the Nile, and the approach to which was by the way of its stream as it flowed to the north. Others again lived in imagination on the banks of the heavenly Nile, whereon they built cities; and it seems as if the Egyptians never succeeded in conceiving a heaven without a Nile and canals. The Nile is depicted in the form of a man, who wears upon his head a clump of papyrus or lotus flowers; his breasts are those of a woman, indicating fertility. Lanzone reproduces an interesting scene¹ in which the north and south Nile gods are tying a papyrus and a lotus stalk around the emblem of union , to indicate the unity of Upper and Lower Egypt, and this emblem  is found cut upon the thrones of the kings of Egypt to indicate their sovereignty over the regions traversed by the South and North Niles. It has already been said that Hāpi was identified with all the gods in turn, and it follows as a matter of course that the attributes of each were ascribed to him; in one respect, however he is different from them all, for of him it is written :—

Here the scribe gave to the Nile the attributes of the great and unknown God its Maker.

In the pyramid texts we find a group of four gods with whom the deceased is closely connected in the "other world"; these are the four "children of Horus" , whose names are given in the following order:—Hāpi , Ṭuamāutef * , Āmset , and Qebḥsennuf . ² The deceased is called their "father."³ His two arms were identified with Hāpi and Ṭuamāutef, and his two legs with Āmset and Qebḥsennuf;⁴ and when he entered into the Sekhet-Āaru they accompanied him as guides, and went in with him two on each side.⁵ They took away all hunger and thirst from him,⁶ they gave him life in heaven and protected it when given,⁷ and they brought to him from the Lake of Khemta the boat of the Eye of Khnemu.⁸ In one passage they are called the "four Khu's of Horus" ,⁹ and originally they represented the four pillars which supported the sky , or Horus. Each was supposed to be lord of one of the quarters of the world, and finally became the god of one of the cardinal points. Hāpi represented the north, Ṭuamāutef the east, Āmset the south, and Qebḥsennuf the west. In the XVIIIth dynasty the Egyptians originated the custom of embalming the intestines of the

We have seen above¹ that among other titles the god Ámen was called the “ only

One ”  but the addition of the words “ who hast no second ” is remarkable as showing that the Egyptians had already conceived the existence of a god who had no like or equal, which they hesitated not to proclaim side by side with their descriptions of his manifestations. Looking at the Egyptian words in their simple meaning, it is pretty certain that when the Egyptians declared that their god was One and that he had no second, they had the same ideas as the Jews and Muḥammadans when they proclaimed their God to be "One"¹ and alone. It has been urged that the Egyptians never advanced to pure monotheism because they never succeeded in freeing themselves from the belief in the existence of other gods, but when they say that a god has "no second," even though they mention other "gods," it is quite evident that like the Jews, they conceived him to be an entirely different being from the existences which, for the want of a better word, or because these possessed superhuman attributes, they named "gods."

darkness or evil.

The gods above enumerated represent the powers who were the guides and protectors and givers of life and happiness to the deceased in the new life, but from the earliest times it is clear that the Egyptians imagined the existence of other powers who offered opposition to the dead, and who are called in many places his "enemies." Like so many of the ancient gods, these powers were originally certain forces of nature, which were believed to be opposed to those which were regarded as beneficent to man, as for example darkness to light, and night to day; with darkness and night were also associated the powers which contributed in any way to obscure the light of the sun or to prevent his shining. But since the deceased was identified with Horus, or Rā, and his accompanying gods, the enemies of the one became the enemies of the other, and the welfare of the one was the welfare of the other. When the Egyptians personified the beneficent powers of nature, that is say, their gods, they usually gave to them human forms and conceived them in their own images; but when they personified the opposing powers they gave to them the shapes of noxious animals and reptiles, such as snakes and scorpions. As time went on, the moral ideas of good and right were attributed to the former, and evil and wickedness to the latter. The first personifications of light and darkness were Horus and Set, and in the combat—the prototype of the subsequent legends of Marduk and Tiamat, Bel and the Dragon, St. George and the Dragon, and many others—which took place between them, the former was always the victor. But, though the deceased was identified with Horus or Rā, the victory which the god gained over Set only benefited the spiritual body which dwelt in heaven, and did not preserve the natural body which lay in the tomb. The principal enemy of the natural body was the worm, and from the earliest times it seems that a huge worm or serpent was chosen by the Egyptians as the type of the powers which were hostile to the dead and also of the foe against whom the Sun-god fought. Already in the pyramid of Unas a long section of the text contains nothing but formulæ, the recital of which was intended to protect the deceased from various kinds of snakes and worms.¹ These are exceedingly ancient, indeed, they may safely be said to form one of the oldest parts of the funeral literature of the Egyptians, and we find from the later editions of the Book of the Dead and certain Coptic works that the dread of the serpent as the emblem of physical and moral evil existed among the Egyptians in all generations, and that, as will be seen later, the belief in a limbo filled with snakes swayed their minds long after they had been converted to Christianity.

The charms against serpents in the pyramid texts of the Vth and VIth dynasties have their equivalents in the XXXIst and XXXIIIrd Chapters of the Book of the Dead, which are found on coffins of the XIth and XIIth dynasties;² and in the XVIIIth dynasty we find vignettes in which the deceased is depicted in the act of spearing a crocodile³ and of slaughtering serpents.⁴ In the Theban and Saïte versions are several small chapters⁵ the recital of which drove away reptiles; and of these the most important is the XXXIXth⁶ Chapter, which preserved the deceased from the attack of the great serpent Āpep or Apep  or Apep , who is depicted with knives stuck in his folds .⁷ In the period of the later dynasties a service was performed daily in the temple of Āmen-Rā at Thebes to deliver the Sun-god from the assault of this fiend, and on each occasion it was accompanied by a ceremony in which a waxen figure of Āpep was burnt in the fire; as the wax melted, so the power of Āpep was destroyed.⁸ Another name of Āpep was Nāk , who was pierced by the lance of the eye of Horus and made to vomit what he had swallowed.⁹

The judgment scene in the Theban edition of the Book of the Dead reveals the belief in the existence of a tri-formed monster, part crocodile, part lion, and part hippopotamus, whom the Egyptians called Am-mit , i.e., "the eater of the Dead," and who lived in Amenta; her place is by the side of the scales wherein the heart is weighed, and it is clear that such hearts as failed to balance the feather of Maāt were devoured by her. In one papyrus she is depicted crouching by the side of a lake.¹ Other types of evil were the insect Āpshai ,² confounded in later times with the tortoise³ , which dies as Rā lives;⁴ the crocodile Sebāk, who afterwards became identified with Rā; the hippopotamus, the ass, etc.

The devils of the underworld.

The pyramid texts afford scanty information about the fiends and devils with which the later Egyptians peopled certain parts of the Țuat, wherein the night sun pursued his course, and where the souls of the dead dwelt; for this we must turn to the composition entitled the "Book of what is in the Țuat," several copies of which have come down to us inscribed upon tombs, coffins, and papyri of the XVIIIth and following dynasties. The Țuat was divided into twelve parts, corresponding to the twelve hours of the night; and this Book professed to afford to the deceased the means whereby he might pass through them successfully. In one of these divisions, which was under the rule of the god Seker, the entrance was guarded by a serpent on four legs with a human head, and within were a serpent with three heads, scorpions,⁵ vipers, and winged monsters of terrifying aspect; a vast desert place was their abode, and seemingly the darkness was so thick there that it might be felt. In other divisions we find serpents spitting fire, lions, crocodile-headed gods, a serpent that devours the dead, a huge crocodile, and many other reptiles of divers shapes and forms.

From the descriptions which accompany the scenes, it is evident that the Țuat was regarded by the Egyptians of the XVIIIth dynasty from a moral as well as from a physical point of view.⁶ Āpep, the emblem of evil, was here punished and overcome, and here dwelt the souls of the wicked and the righteous, who received their punishments or rewards, meted out to them by the decree of Rā and his company of gods. The chief instruments of punishment employed by the gods were fire and beasts which devoured the souls and bodies of the enemies of Rā ; and we may see from the literature of the Copts, or Egyptians who had embraced Christianity, how long the belief in a hell of fire and torturing fiends survived. Thus in the Life of Abba Shenuti,¹ a man is told that the “ executioners of Āmenti will not show compassion upon thy wretched soul,”² and in the history of Pisentios, a Bishop of Coptos in the seventh century of our era, we have a series of details which reflect the T̄uat of the ancient Egyptians in a remarkable manner. The bishop having taken up his abode in a tomb filled with mummies, causes one of them to tell his history.³ After saying that his parents were Greeks who worshipped Poseidon, he states that when he was dying already the avenging angels came about him with iron knives and goads as sharp as spears, which they thrust into his sides, while they gnashed their teeth at him ; when he opened his eyes, he saw death in all its manifold forms round about him ; and at that moment angels without mercy (πιδυρελος ἢ ἀθια) came and dragged his wretched soul from his body, and tying it to the form of a black horse they bore it away to Amenta (εεεετ = ). Next, he was delivered over to merciless tormentors, who tortured him in a place where there were multitudes of savage beasts ; and, when he had been cast into the place of outer darkness, he saw a ditch more than two hundred feet deep filled with reptiles, each of which had seven heads, and all their bodies were covered as it were with scorpions. Here also were serpents, the very sight of which terrified the beholder, and to one of them which had teeth like iron stakes was the wretched man given to be devoured ; for five days in each week the serpent crushed him with his teeth, but on the Saturday and Sunday there was respite. Another picture of the torments of Hades is given in the Martyrdom of Macarius of Antioch, wherein the saint, having restored to life a man who had been dead six hours, learned that when he was about to die he was surrounded by fiends, ῥαπληκλιπος, some of whom had the faces of dragons, ἦρο ἦραρακιπ, others of lions, ἦρο π εε εεωοτι, others of crocodiles, ἦρο ἦεεεεεε, and others of bears, ἦρο ἦλαβοι. They tore his soul from his body with great violence, and they fled with it over a mighty river of fire, in which they plunged it to a depth of four hundred cubits ; then they took it out and set it before the Judge of Truth, εε πικριτης εε εεηη. After hearing the sentence of the Judge the fiends took it to a place of outer darkness where no light came, and they cast it into the cold where there was gnashing of teeth. There it beheld a snake which never slept, ϥⲉⲛⲧ ⲛ̀ ⲁⲧ ⲉⲛⲕⲟⲧ, with a head like that of a crocodile, and which was surrounded by reptiles which cast souls before it to be devoured, ⲉⲣⲉ ⲛⲓⲃⲁⲧϥⲓ ⲧⲏⲣⲟⲩ ⲃⲁⲧⲟⲧϥ ⲉⲣⲥⲓⲛ̀ ⲛ̀ ⲛⲓⲱⲧⲭⲏ ⲉⲓⲧⲉⲛ̀ ⲛ̀ⲛ̀ⲟⲩ; when the snake's mouth was full it allowed the other reptiles to eat, and though they rent the soul in pieces it did not die. After this the soul was carried into Amenta for ever, ⲁⲙⲉⲛ̀ⲛ̀ⲧⲓ ⲱⲁ ⲉ̀ⲛⲉⲉ.¹ The martyr Macarius suffered in the reign of Diocletian, and the MS. from which the above extract is taken was copied in the year of the Martyrs 634 = A.D. 918. Thus, the old heathen ideas of the Egyptian Tuat were applied to the construction of the Coptic Hell.

THE PRINCIPAL GEOGRAPHICAL AND MYTHOLOGICAL PLACES IN THE BOOK OF THE DEAD.

Ābtu, , the Abydos of the Greeks (Strabo, XVII., i., 42), the capital of the eighth nome of Upper Egypt. It was the seat of the worship of Osiris, and from this fact was called Per-Āusār , or Busiris, “the house of Osiris”; the Copts gave it the name εδωτ.¹ Egyptian tradition made the sun to end his daily course at Abydos, and to enter into the T̄uat at this place through a “gap” in the mountains called in Egyptian peq, .² These mountains lay near to the town; and in the XIIth dynasty it was believed that the souls of the dead made their way into the other world by the valley which led through them to the great Oasis, where some placed the Elysian Fields.³

Āmenta or Āmentet, , or , was originally the place where the sun set, but subsequently the name was applied to the cemeteries and tombs which were usually built or hewn in the stony plateaus and mountains on the western bank of the Nile. Some believe that Āmenta was, at first, the name of a small district, without either funereal or mythological signification. The Christian Egyptians or Copts used the word Amenti to translate the Greek word Hades, to which they attributed all the ideas which their heathen ancestors had associated with the Āmenta of the Book of the Dead.

Ānnu, , the Heliopolis of the Greeks (Herodotus, II., 3, 7, 8, 9, 59, 93; Strabo, XVII., i, 27 ff.), and the capital of the thirteenth nome of Lower Egypt.

The Hebrews called it On (Genesis xli., 45, 50; xlii., 20), Aven (Ezekiel xxx., 17), and Bêth-Shemesh (Jeremiah xliii., 13); this last name is an exact translation of the Egyptian  per Rā, "house of the sun," which was also a designation of Annu. The Copts have preserved the oldest name of the city under the form $\omega\pi\tau$.¹ A Coptic bishop of this place was present at the Council of Ephesus. The city of Annu seems to have become associated with the worship of the sun in prehistoric times. Already in the Vth dynasty its priesthood had succeeded in gaining supremacy for their religious views and beliefs throughout Egypt, and from first to last it maintained its position as the chief seat of theological learning in Egypt. The body of the Aged One, a name of Osiris, reposed in Annu, and there dwelt the Eye of Osiris. The deceased made his way to Annu, where souls were joined unto bodies in thousands, and where the blessed dead lived on celestial food for ever.

Ān-ruṭf or Naāruṭf , is a section or door of the Tuat which lies to the north of Re-stau; the meaning of the word is "it never sprouteth."

Ān-ṭes(?)  (see within, p. 323), an unknown locality where , a light tower (?), was adored.

Āpu , the Panopolis of the Greeks (Πανῶν πόλις, Strabo, XVII., i., 41), the metropolis of the ninth nome of Upper Egypt, and the seat of the worship of the god , whose name is variously read Amsu, Khem, and Min. In ancient days it was famous as the centre for stone cutting and linen weaving, and the latter industry still survives among the modern Coptic population, who, following their ancestors, call their city $\omega\pi\tau\omega\omega$, which the Arabs have rendered by Akhmim.

Āqert , a common name for the abode of the dead.

Bast , more fully Pa-Bast or Per-Bast , the Bubastis of the Greek writers (Herodotus, II., 59, 137, 156, 166; Strabo, XVII., i., 27), the metropolis of the eighteenth nome of Lower Egypt, and the seat of the worship of Bast, a goddess who was identified with the soul of Isis, ba en Auset, . The city is mentioned in the Bible under the form פִּי בֶּסֶת (Ezekiel xxx., 17), Pi-beseth,

Pe , a district of the town of Per-Uatchet , the Buto of the Greeks (Βούτρος, Strabo, XVII., i., 18), which was situated in the Delta.

Punt , the tropical district which lay to the south and east of Egypt, and which included probably a part of the Arabian peninsula and the eastern coast of Africa along and south of Somali land.

Re-stau  or , a name given to the passages in the tomb which lead from this to the other world; originally it designated the cemetery of Abydos only, and its god was Osiris.

Sa , the Saïs of the Greeks (Σαίς, Strabo, XVII., i., 23), the metropolis of the fifth nome of Lower Egypt, and the seat of the worship of the goddess Neith.

Sekhem  or , the Letopolis of the Greeks, and capital of the Letopolites nome (Strabo, XVII., i., 30); it was the seat of the worship of Hēru-ur , "Horus the elder," and one of the most important religious centres in Egypt.

Sekhet-Āanru , the "Field of the Āanru plants," was a name originally given to the islands in the Delta where the souls of the dead were supposed to live. Here was the abode of the god Osiris, who bestowed estates in it upon those who had been his followers, and here the beatified dead led a new existence and regaled themselves upon food of every kind, which was given to them in abundance. According to the vignette of the CXth Chapter of the Book of the Dead, the Sekhet-Āanru is the third division of the Sekhet-ḥetepu, or "Fields of Peace," which have been compared with the Elysian Fields of the Greeks.

Set Āmentet , i.e., "the mountain of the underworld," a common name of the cemetery, which was usually situated in the mountains or desert on the western bank of the Nile.

Suten-ḥenen , more correctly Hēnen-su, the metropolis of the twentieth nome of Upper Egypt, called by the Greeks Heracleopolis Magna (Strabo, XVII., i., 35). The Hebrews mention the city (חֲנַנְיָ, Isaiah xxx., 4) Hanes as the representative of Upper Egypt, and in Coptic times it was still of considerable size and importance; the Copts and Arabs have preserved the ancient name of the city under the forms Ⲭⲏⲛⲥ and اهناس, Ahnas.

Ṭanenet , a district sacred to the gods Osiris and Ptaḥ; it was probably situated near Memphis.

Ṭa-sert  or Ta-tchesertet, a common name for the tomb.

Ṭep , a district of the town Per-Uatchet , the Buto of the Greeks (Strabo, XVII., i., 18), which was situated in the Delta.

Ṭettet , a name given both to the metropolis¹ of the ninth nome and to the chief city² of the sixteenth nome of Lower Egypt.

Ṭuat * , a common name for the abode of the departed.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

In illustration of the ceremonies which accompanied the burial of the dead the reader will find extracts from different texts printed in the Appendix on p. 264 ff. To these may be added an extract from the curious ritual which was in vogue in the Vth and VIth dynasties, and which commemorated the ceremonies which were performed for the god Osiris. It is to be noticed how closely the deceased is identified with Osiris, the type of incorruptibility. Osiris takes upon himself "all that is hateful" in the dead: that is, he adopts the burden of his sins; and the dead is purified by the typical sprinkling of water. While the gods are only accompanied by their ka's, the deceased, in right of his identification with a higher power, is accompanied by his *Ṭet*¹ also, that is, by his Osiris.

Throughout the ceremony, the Eye of Horus,² which is represented by various substances, plays a prominent part, for it is that which gives vigour to the heart of the dead and leads him to the god. That portion of the ceremony which was believed to procure the unlocking of the jaws and the opening of the mouth of the deceased, or of the statue which sometimes represented him, was performed after the purification by water and incense had been effected; and hereby was he enabled to partake of the meat and drink offerings, wherein the friends and relatives also participated, in order that they might cement and seal their mystic unity with the dead and with the god with whom he was identified.³

² On the eyes of Horus, see Lefébure, Le Mythe Osirien—Les Yeux d'Horus, Paris, 1874; and Grébaud, Les deux yeux du Disque Solaire (Recueil de Travaux t. i., pp. 72, 87, 112-131).

³ To discuss the origin and development of animal sacrifice among the early Egyptians lies outside the scope of this work. For information on the significance of sacrifice among the Semites, in whose customs many originally Egyptian ideas probably survived, see Robertson Smith, Religion of the Semites, p. 294 ff. On the origin of sacrificial acts, see Max Müller, Natural Religion, London, 1889, p. 184; and E. B. Tylor, Primitive Culture, vol. ii., p. 340. Whether the Egyptians regarded the sacrifice of bulls, geese, etc., at the tomb as expiatory offerings, can hardly yet be decided.

Certain formulæ were directed to be repeated four times : a direction which takes us back to the time when the Egyptians first divided the world into four parts, each corresponding to one of the four pillars which held up the sky, that is to say, to one of the four cardinal points, East, South, West, and North, presided over by a special god. The deceased sought to obtain the assistance of each of the four gods of the cardinal points, and to have the right to roam about in his district ; hence the formula was repeated four times. Originally four animals or four geese were sacrificed, one to each god, but subsequently East and North, and West and South were paired, and two bulls (or birds) only were sacrificed, one of which was called the Bull of the North,* and the other the Bull of the South. The custom of four-fold repetition continued to the Ptolemaic timest† and even later.

The priest whose official title was kher heb, , recited the prayers, and the sem or setem priest  presented the prescribed offerings. The rubrical directions are given on the margin for the sake of clearness.

“ O Osiris,‡ all that is hateful in Unäs hath been brought unto thee,¹ and all the evil words which have been spoken in his name. THE PAPYRUS OF ANI.

General description

The papyrus of Ani, , was found at Thebes, and was purchased by the Trustees of the British Museum in 1888. It measures 78 feet by 1 foot 3 inches, and is the longest known papyrus of the Theban period.¹ It is made up of six distinct lengths of papyrus, which vary in length from 26 feet 9 inches to 5 feet 7 inches. The material is composed of three layers of papyrus supplied by plants which measured in the stalks about 4½ inches in diameter. The several lengths have been joined together with great neatness, and the repairs and insertion of new pieces (see plates 25, 26) have been dexterously made. When first found, the papyrus was of a light colour, similar to that of the papyrus of Hunefer (B.M., No. 9901), but it became darker after it had been unrolled, and certain sections of it have shrunk somewhat.

It contains a number of chapters of the Book of the Dead, nearly all of which are accompanied by vignettes; and at top and bottom is a border of two colours—red and yellow.² At the beginning and end of the papyrus spaces of six and eleven inches respectively have been left blank. The inscribed portion is complete, and the loss of the few characters which were damaged in unrolling³ does not interrupt the text. It was written by three or more scribes; but the uniformity of the execution of the vignettes suggests that fewer artists were employed on the illustrations. The titles of the chapters, rubrics, catchwords, etc., are in red. In some instances the artist has occupied so much space that the scribe has been obliged to crowd the text (e.g., in plate 11) and at times he has written it on the border (see plates 14, 17). This proves that the vignettes were drawn before the text was written. General description.

All the different sections of the papyrus were not originally written for Ani, for his name has been added in several places¹ by a later hand. As however such additions do not occur in the first section, which measures 16 feet 4 inches in length, it must be concluded that that section was written expressly for him, and that the others were some of those ready-written copies in which blank spaces were left for the insertion of the names of the deceased persons for whom they were purchased. The scribe who filled in Ani's name in these spaces wrote hurriedly, for in Chapter XXXB., line 2 (pl. 15), he left himself no space to write the word "Osiris" in the phrase, "Ani victorious before Osiris" (compare , pl. 1, line 5); in Chapter XLIII., lines 1, 2 (pl. 17), he has written it twice; in Chapter IX., l. 1 (pl. 18), he has omitted the determinative ; in Chapter XV., line 2 (pl. 20) he meant to write "Ani, victorious in peace"  (pl. 19), but wrote "Ani in triumph" ; in Chapter CXXV., line 18 (pl. 30), the word  is written twice, probably, however, with the view of filling up the line; in Chapter CLI. (pl. 34) the name is written crookedly, and the determinative is omitted; and in Chapters XVIII. (Introduction, pl. 12) and CXXXIV. (pl. 22). the scribe has, in two spaces, omitted to write the name. It seems tolerably certain that all the sections of the papyrus were written about the same time, and that they are the work of scribes of the same school; the variations in the depth of the space occupied by the text and the difference in the colours of the border only show that even the best scribes did not tie themselves to any one plan or method in preparing a copy of the Book of the Dead. The text has many serious errors: by some extraordinary oversight it includes two copies of the XVIIIth Chapter, one with an unusual introduction and the other without introduction; and a large section of the XVIIth Chapter, one of the most important in the whole work, has been entirely omitted. Such mistakes and omissions, however, occur in papyri older than that of Ani, for in the papyrus of Nebseni (B.M., No. 9900), which was written at Memphis early in the XVIIIth dynasty, of Chapters L., LVI., LXIV., CLXXX., two copies each, of

Chapters C. and CVI., three copies, and of Chapter XVII. two extracts are given in different parts of the papyrus.¹

The papyrus of Ani is undated, and no facts are given in it concerning the life of Ani, whereby it would be possible to fix its exact place in the series of the illustrated papyri of the Theban period to which it belongs. His full titles are :—

the lords	of Thebes ;

and he is said to be “beloved of the lord of the North and South” , and to “love him” . The name of the king thus referred to cannot be stated. That Ani’s rank of “royal scribe”² was not titular only is shown by the addition of the word “veritable,” and his office of scribe and accountant of all the gods was probably one of the highest which a scribe could hold.³ His other offices of “governor of the granary of the lords of Abydos,” and “scribe of the sacred property of the lords of Thebes,” further prove his rank and importance, for Abydos and Thebes were the most ancient and sacred cities of Egypt. Ani’s wife Thuthu  is described as “the lady of the house, the gemätet of Āmen” .⁴ What the title “lady of the house”

² See Brugsch, Aegyptologie, p. 223.

³ In the list of the high officers of the priesthood given by Brugsch (Aegyptologie, p. 218), we meet with an official whose title is , “the scribe set over the sacred property of the gods”; Ani held a similar appointment.

⁴ Plate 19; her name is nowhere else mentioned in the papyrus.

means has not yet been decided, but gemāt is the title applied to the noble ladies who sang or played on an instrument in the temple of a god.¹ The lady Thuthu belonged to the number of the priestesses of the god Amen-Rā at Thebes, and she always carries in her hands the sistrum and the instrument menāt , the emblems of her office. Thus Ani and his wife were high ecclesiastical dignitaries connected with the famous confraternity of the priests of Amen.

An examination of the papyri of the Theban period preserved in the British Museum shows that two distinct classes of Book of the Dead papyri existed in the XVIIIth dynasty. In the first both text and vignettes are traced in black outline,² the rubrics, catchwords, etc., alone being in red colour; in the second the text only is black, the rubrics, etc., being red, and the vignettes beautifully painted in a number of bright colours. To the latter class the papyrus of Ani belongs, but, if the text and vignettes be compared with those found in any other early Theban papyri, it will be seen that it occupies an independent position in all respects. Though agreeing in the main with the papyri of the XVIIIth dynasty in respect of textual readings, the papyrus of Ani has peculiarities in spelling, etc., which are not found in any of them. The handwriting of the first section at least suggests the best period of the XVIIIth dynasty; but as the scribe forms some of the characters in a way peculiarly his own, the palæographic evidence on this point is not decisive. That the papyrus belongs to the period which produced such documents as the papyrus of Neb-qet,³ and the papyrus of Qenna,⁴ i.e., to some period of the XVIIIth dynasty, is tolerably certain; and we may assume that it is older than the papyrus of Hunefer, which was written during the reign of Seti I.; for, though belonging to the same class of highly decorated papyri, the execution of the vignettes is finer and more careful, and the free, bold forms of the hieroglyphics in the better written sections more closely resemble those of the texts inscribed in stone under the greatest kings of the XVIIIth dynasty. The "lord of the two lands," i.e., of Upper and Lower Egypt, or the North and South, mentioned in pl. 4, is probably one of the Thothmes or Amenhetep kings, and accordingly we may place the period of our papyrus Age of the papyrus.

Chapter VIII. "The Chapter of passing through Āmenta, and of coming forth by day." (See pp. 119, 320, and pl. 18.) List of Chapters.

As a separate composition, this Chapter is found in only two other papyri of the XVIIIth dynasty.¹

Chapter IX. "The Chapter of coming forth by day, having passed through the tomb." (See pp. 120, 321, and pl. 18.)

The vignette in the papyrus of Ani is similar to that which stands at the head of Chapters VIII. and IX. in other papyri of this period.

Chapter X. [See Chapter XLVIII., pp. 123, 321, and pl. 18.]

Chapter XV. 1. "A hymn of praise to Rā when he riseth in the eastern sky." (See pp. 1, 236, and pl. 1.)

This version is found in no other papyrus.

Chapter XV. 2. "A hymn of praise to Osiris Unnefer, the great god in Abydos,"² etc. (See pp. 8, 253, and pl. 2.)

Chapter XV. 3. "A hymn of praise to Rā when he riseth in the eastern sky, "and when he setteth in the [land of] life." (See pp. 123, 322, and pl. 18-21.)

The Litany to Osiris (pl. 19) and the hymn to Rā (ppl. 24, 25) which follow are variants of the XVth Chapter, similar to those published by M. Naville.³

Chapter XVI. consists of a vignette only. (See p. 252, and pl. 2.) Strictly speaking, it should form the vignette of the XVth Chapter, or of that part of it which refers to the rising sun. Like many other ancient papyri, the papyrus of Ani has no vignette referring to the sunset.

Chapter XVII. "Here begin the praises and glorifyings of coming out from "and of going into the glorious Neter-khert in the beautiful Amenta, of coming "forth by day in all the transformations which please him, of playing at draughts, "and of sitting in the Sekh hall, and of coming forth as a living soul." (See pp. 27, 280, and pl. 7-10.)

This is one of the oldest and most important of all the Chapters in the Book of the Dead, and it contains the most complete statements concerning the Egyptian cosmogony as formulated by the college of priests of Heliopolis. The scribe seems to have accidentally omitted a large section.

Chapter XVIII. This Chapter has no title.

¹ I.e., in British Museum papyrus, No. 9964, and in a papyrus in Rome; see Naville, Einleitung, p. 118.

² This hymn may form no part of the XVth chapter, and may have been inserted after the hymn to Rā on account of Ani's official connection with the ecclesiastical endowments of Abydos.

³ Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 14-20.

List of Chapters.

The papyrus of Ani contains two copies of this Chapter. In the first the gods of the localities are grouped separately, and it is preceded by a very rare introduction, in which the An-mut-f and Sa-mer-f priests introduce Ani to the gods, whom he addresses in two speeches. (See p. 71, 301, and pll. 12-14.) In the second the text is not divided into distinct sections, and the gods are not grouped. (See p. 330, and pll. 23-24.)

Chapter XXII. "The Chapter of giving a mouth to Osiris Ani, the scribe "and teller of the holy offerings of all the gods." (See pp. 25, 274, and pl. 6.)

The ceremony of giving a mouth to the deceased was, according to the vignette in the papyrus of Nebseni, performed by the "Guardian of the Balance" . In the papyrus of Ani there is no vignette, and it is remarkable that this Chapter follows immediately after Chapter I.

Chapter XXIII. "The Chapter of opening the mouth of Osiris, the scribe "Ani." (See pp. 84, 306, and pl. 15.)

Chapter XXIV. "The Chapter of bringing charms unto Osiris Ani in "Neter-khert." (See pp. 85, 306, and pl. 15.)

As with other ancient Theban papyri, the papyrus of Ani gives no vignette.

Chapter XXVI. "The Chapter of giving a heart unto Osiris Ani in Neter-khert." (See pp. 88, 308, and pl. 15.)

The vignette is probably unique.

Chapter XXVII. "The Chapter of not letting the heart of a man be taken "away from him in Neter-khert." (See pp. 100, 312, and pl. 15.)

The vignette is unusual.

Chapter XXIX. "The Chapter of not letting the heart of a man be taken "away from him in Neter-khert." (See pp. 97, 311, and pl. 15.)

No other copy of this Chapter is at present known.

Chapter XXIXB. "The Chapter of a heart of carnelian." (See pp. 228, 359, and pl. 33.)

Chapter XXXB. "The Chapter of not letting the heart of Osiris Ani be "driven away from him in Neter-khert." (See pp. 11, 90, 258, 309, and pl. 15.)

Chapter XLII. This Chapter is without title (see pp. 213, 353, and pl. 32), but in other ancient papyri it is called "Repulsing of slaughter in Suten-henen "

Chapter XLIII. "The Chapter of not letting the head of a man be cut off "from him in Neter-khert." (See pp. 111, 317, and pl. 17.)

As in other ancient Theban papyri, this Chapter is without vignette.

Chapter XLIV. "The Chapter of not dying a second time in Neter-khert."
(See pp. 105, 315, and pl. 16.)

The vignette is peculiar to the papyrus of Ani.

Chapter XLV. "The Chapter of not suffering corruption in Neter-khert."
(See pp. 106, 315, and pl. 16.)

Only one other copy of the text of this Chapter is known.¹ Among Theban papyri the vignette is peculiar to the papyrus of Ani.

Chapter XLVI. "The Chapter of not perishing and of becoming alive in "Neter-khert." (See pp. 107, 316, and pl. 16.)

Only one other copy of the text of this Chapter is known (B.M. No. 9900). Among Theban papyri the vignette is peculiar to the papyrus of Ani.

Chapter XLVIII. "Another Chapter of one who cometh forth by day "against his foes in Neter-khert." (See pp. 123, 321, and pl. 18.)

Only one other copy of the text of this Chapter is known (B.M. No. 9900). Among Theban papyri the vignette is peculiar to the papyrus of Ani.

Chapter L. "The Chapter of not entering in unto the block." (See pp. 108, 315, and pl. 16.)

The text of this Chapter agrees rather with the second version in the papyrus of Nebseni than with that in B.M. papyrus No. 9964. As the Ani papyrus is of Theban origin this was to be expected.

Chapter LIV. "The Chapter of giving breath in Neter-khert." (See pp. 94, 310, and pl. 15.)

Only one other copy of this Chapter is known, and it is without vignette.²

Chapter LVIII. "The Chapter of breathing the air, and of having power "over the water in Neter-khert." (See pp. 103, 314, and pl. 16.)

No other copy of this Chapter is known.

Chapter LIX. "The Chapter of breathing the air, and of having power over "the water in Neter-khert." (See pp. 104, 315, and pl. 16.)

Only one other copy of this Chapter is known.²

Chapter LXI. "The Chapter of not letting the soul of a man be taken away "from him in Neter-khert." (See pp. 91, 309, and pl. 15.)

The vignette is similar to that in the papyrus of Sutimes, which M. Naville believes to be no older than the XIXth dynasty.³

List of Chapters.

Chapter LXXII.—Rubric. (See pp. 26, 275, and pl. 6.)

Chapter LXXIV. “The Chapter of walking with the legs and of coming “forth upon earth.” (See pp. 118, 320, and pl. 18.)

Chapter LXXVII. “The Chapter of changing into a golden hawk.” (See pp. 152, 332, and pl. 25.)

Chapter LXXVIII. “The Chapter of changing into a divine hawk.” (See pp. 154, 333, and pl. 25, 26.)

Chapter LXXX. “The Chapter of changing into the god who giveth light “in the darkness.” (See pp. 182, 341, and pl. 28.)

Chapter LXXXIA. “The Chapter of changing into a lotus.” (See pp. 181, 340, and pl. 28.)

The pool of water in the vignette is uncommon.

Chapter LXXXII. “The Chapter of changing into Ptah.” (See pp. 170, 337, and pl. 27.)

As in other XVIIIth dynasty papyri, this Chapter has a vignette.

Chapter LXXXIII. “The Chapter of changing into a bennu bird” (phœnix?).
(See pp. 176, 339, and pl. 27.)

Like other XVIIIth dynasty papyri, this Chapter lacks the addition which is found in the papyrus of Sutimes.

Chapter LXXXIV. “The Chapter of changing into a heron.” (See pp. 178, 339, and pl. 28.)

Chapter LXXXV. “The Chapter of changing into the soul of Tmu.” (See pp. 172, 338, and pl. 27.)

The vignette to this Chapter is similar to that of the papyrus of Tura, surnamed Nefer-uben-f, of the XVIIIth dynasty.¹

Chapter LXXXVI. “The Chapter of changing into a swallow.” (See pp.
150, 331, and pl. 25.)

Chapter LXXXVII. “The Chapter of changing into Seta.” (See pp. 169, 337, and pl. 27.)

Chapter LXXXVIII. “The Chapter of changing into a crocodile.” (See
pp. 170, 337, and pl. 27.)

Chapter LXXXIX. “The Chapter of causing the soul to be united to its “body in Neter-khert.” (See pp. 112, 318, and pl. 17.)

The two incense burners which stand, one at the head and one at the foot of

Chapter XCI. "The Chapter of not letting the soul of a man be captive in Neter-khert." (See pp. 114, 319, and pl. 17.) List of Chapters.

Chapter XCII. "The Chapter of opening the tomb to the soul and the shadow, of coming forth by day, and of getting power over the legs." (See pp. 115, 319, and pl. 17.)

The vignette of this Chapter is unusual and of great interest, for in it Ani's soul accompanies his shadow.

Chapter XCIII. "The Chapter of not letting a man pass over to the east in Neter-khert." (See pp. 109, 317, and pl. 17.)

The vignette as here given is peculiar to the papyrus of Ani.

Chapter XCIII A. "Another Chapter." (See pp. 110, 317, and pl. 17.)

Chapter CX. "Here begin the Chapters of the Sekhet-hetepu, and the Chapters of coming forth by day, and of going into and coming out from Neter-khert, and of arriving in the Sekhet-Āanru, and of being in peace in the great city wherein are fresh breezes." (See pp. 236, 362, and pl. 34.)

Chapter CXXIV. "The Chapter of going unto the divine chiefs of Osiris." (See pp. 146, 330, and pl. 24.)

In the vignette we should expect four, instead of three, gods.

Chapter CXXV. "The Chapter of entering into the Hall of double Right and Truth: a hymn of praise to Osiris." (See pp. 189, 344, and pl. 30.)

The Introduction to this Chapter as found in the papyrus of Ani is not met with elsewhere; the text which usually follows the "Negative Confession" is however omitted. The vignette as here given is peculiar to the papyrus of Ani.

Chapter CXXXII. "The Chapter of making a man to return to see again his home upon earth." (See pp. 121, 321, and pl. 18.)

Chapter CXXXIII. "[A Chapter] to be said on the day of the month." (See pp. 138, 327, and pl. 21.)

Chapter CXXXIII.—Rubric. (See pp. 142, 328, and pl. 22.)

Chapter CXXXIV. "A hymn of praise to Rā on the day of the month wherein he saileth in the boat." (See pp. 142, 329, and pl. 22.)

Chapter CXLVI. "The Chapter of renewing the pylons in the House of Osiris which is in the Sekhet-Āanru." (See pp. 63, 295, and pls. 11, 12.)

Chapter CXLVII. "A Chapter to be said when Ani cometh to the first Ārit." (See pp. 56, 291, and pls. 11, 12.)

Chapter CXLVIII. Without title. See pp. 239, 366, and pl. 35.)

List of Chapters.

Chapter CLI. Scene in the mummy chamber. (See pp. 229, 360, and pl. 33, 34.)

Chapter CLV. "The Chapter of a Ṭeṭ of gold." (See pp. 225, 357, and pl. 33.)

Chapter CLVI. "The Chapter of a Buckle of carnelian." (See pp. 227, 358, and pl. 33.)

Chapter CLXVI. "The Chapter of the Pillow which is placed under the "head." (See pp. 228, 359, and pl. 33.)

Chapter CLXXV. "The Chapter of not dying a second time." (See pp. 184, 341, and pl. 29.)

Only one other much mutilated copy of this most important Chapter is known. In it it is declared that neither men nor gods can conceive what great glory has been laid up for Ani in his existence in the next world, and that his life therein shall be for "millions of millions of years."

Chapter CLXXXV. "A Hymn of Praise to Osiris, the dweller in $\dot{\text{A}}$ menta, "Un-nefer within $\dot{\text{A}}$ b $\dot{\text{t}}$ u (Abydos)." (See pp. 241, 367, and pl. 36.)

Chapter CLXXXVI. "A Hymn of praise to Hathor." (See pp. 242, 368, and pl. 37.)

¹ In the papyrus of Hunefer (British Museum No. 9901) this chapter ends with the words, "the Shenit, in the presence of the great god, lord of Amenta," but in several others, all of a later date, the chapter has here the words:—

 pleasant [is it] to hear gladness of heart at the weighing of words.

Here follows the petition, "let not lies be spoken ( equals ) against me near the great god, in the presence of the great god, lord of Amenta," and the chapter ends with,

māk benθ - k un - θä em māxerū

 "Verily how great wilt thou be rising up in triumph!"

PLATE I.

Vignette: The scribe Ani , standing with hands raised in adoration before a table of offerings consisting of haunches of beef , loaves of bread and cakes , , vases of wine and oil , , fruits, lotus , , and other flowers. He wears a fringed white and saffron-coloured linen garment; and has a wig, necklace, and bracelets. Behind him stands his wife "Osiris, the lady of the house, the lady of the choir of Amen, Thuthu,"¹ similarly robed and holding a sistrum  and a vine (?) -branch in her right hand, and a menât  in her left.²

² The menât, which is often called "the counterpoise of a collar," consists of a disk, with a handle attached, and a cord. It was an object which was usually offered to the gods, with the sistrum; it was presented to guests at a feast by their host; and it was held by priestesses at religious festivals. It was either worn on the neck or carried in the left hand; and it was an emblem which brought joy to the bearer. Interesting examples of the pendent menât in the British Museum are No. 17,166, inscribed, , "Beautiful god, lord of the two lands, maker of things, King of the North and South, Khnem-âb-Râ, son of the Sun, Ââhmes (Amâsis), beloved of Hathor, lady of sycamore trees"; and No. 13,950* in faïence; and Nos. 8172, 8173, and 20,607 in hard stone. No. 18,109 is the disk of a menât in faïence, inscribed, , "Hathor, lady of the town of Ânithâ." No. 20,760 is a disk and handle in bronze, the disk having, in hollow work, the figure of a cow, sacred to Hathor, and the handle, the upper part of which is in the form of the head of Hathor, having a sistrum. On the one side is the prenomens of Amenophis III. , and on the other is , "Hathor, lady of the sycamore." The meaning and use of the menât is discussed by Lefébure in Le Menât et le Nom de l'eunuque (Proc. Soc. Bibl. Arch., 1891, pp. 333-349).

* A duplicate is in the Louvre; see Perrot and Chipiez, Histoire de l'Art, l'Égypte, p. 821, No. 550.

Text: [Chapter XV.] (1)¹ A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ WHEN HE RISETH IN THE EASTERN PART OF HEAVEN. Behold Osiris Ani the scribe who recordeth the holy offerings of all the gods, (2) who saith: "Homage to thee, O thou who hast come as "Khepera,² Khepera, the creator of the gods. Thou risest, thou shinest, (3) making "bright thy mother [Nut], crowned king of the gods. [Thy] mother Nut³ "doeth homage unto thee with both her hands. (4) The land of Manu⁴ "receiveth thee with content, and the goddess Maât⁵ embraceth thee at the two "seasons. May he give splendour, and power, and triumph, and (5) a coming-forth "[i.e., resurrection] as a living soul to see Horus of the two horizons⁶ to the

² The god Khepera is usually represented with a beetle for a head; and the scarab, or beetle, was sacred to him. The name means "to become, to turn, to roll," and the abstract noun kheperu may be rendered by "becomings," or "evolutions." The god was self-created, and was the father of all the other gods; men and women sprang from the tears which fell from his eyes; and the animal and vegetable worlds owed their existence to him. Khepera is a phase of Tmu, the night-sun, at the twelfth hour of the night, when he "becomes" the rising sun or Harmachis (i.e., Horus in the horizon). He is also described as "Khepera in the morning, Rā at mid-day, and Tmu in the evening." See Lanzone, Dizionario, p. 927 ff.; Grébaut, Hymne à Ammon-Rā, p. 164, note 2; Pierret, Panthéon, pp. 74, 75; Lefébure, Traduction Comparée des Hymnes au Soleil, p. 39; De Rougé, Inscription d'Ahmés, p. 110; Archaeologia, vol. 52, p. 541 ff.; Wiedemann, Die Religion der Alten Aegypter, p. 17; Brugsch, Religion und Mythologie, p. 245, etc.

⁶ Heru-khuti, i.e., "Horus of the two horizons," the Harmachis of the Greeks, is the day-sun from his rising in the eastern horizon to his setting in the western horizon; for the various forms in which he is represented, see Lanzone, Dizionario, tav. 129. Strictly speaking, he is the rising sun, and is one of the most important forms of Horus. As god of mid-day and evening he is called Rā-Harmachis and Tmu-Harmachis respectively. The sphinx at Gizeh was dedicated to him.

 “all ye gods of the Temple of the Soul,⁴ who weigh heaven and earth in the “balance, and who provide food and abundance of meat. Hail Tatunen,⁵ One, “(7) creator of mankind and of the substance of the gods of the south and of the “north, of the west and of the east. Ascribe [ye] praise unto Rā, the lord of “heaven, the (8) Prince, Life, Health, and Strength, the Creator of the gods, and “adore ye him in his beautiful Presence as he riseth in the *ātet*⁶ boat. (9) They “who dwell in the heights and they who dwell in the depths worship thee.
 “Thoth⁷ and Maāt both are thy recorders. Thine enemy⁸ is given to the (10) “fire, the evil one hath fallen; his arms are bound, and his legs hath Rā taken
 “from him. The children of (11) impotent revolt shall never rise up again.

¹ According to the Egyptian belief man consisted of a body  ka, a soul  ba, an intelligence  χu, and  a ka. The word ka means “image,” the Greek εἰδωλον (compare Coptic κω, Peyron, Lexicon, p. 61). The ka seems to have been the “ghost,” as we should say, of a man, and it has been defined as his abstract personality, to which, after death, the Egyptians gave a material form. It was a subordinate part of the human being during life, but after death it became active; and to it the offerings brought to the tomb by the relatives of the dead were dedicated. It was believed that it returned to the body and had a share in its re-vivification. See Birch, Mémoire sur une patère Égyptienne (in Trans. Soc. Imp. des Antiquaires de France, 1858; Chabas, Papyrus Magique, pp. 28, 29; Maspero, Étude sur quelques peintures, p. 191 ff.; Trans. Soc. Bibl. Arch., vol. vi., p. 494 ff.; Brugsch, Aegyptologie, p. 181; Wiedemann, Religion der alten Aegypter, p. 126 f.).

² The deceased is always identified with Osiris, or the sun which has set, the judge and god of the dead. As the sun sets in the west and rises again in the east, so the dead man is laid in his tomb on the western bank of the Nile, and after being acquitted in the Hall of Judgment, proceeds to the east to begin a new existence.

⁴ Compare

“The House of the Prince¹ keepeth festival, and the sound of those who rejoice is in the (12) mighty dwelling. The gods are glad [when] they see Rā in his rising; his beams flood the world with light. (13) The majesty of the god, who is to be feared, setteth forth and cometh unto the land of Manu; he maketh bright the earth at his birth each day; he cometh unto the place where he was yesterday. (14) O mayest thou be at peace with me; may I behold thy beauties; may I advance upon the earth; may I smite the Ass; may I crush (15) the evil one; may I destroy Apep² in his hour³; may I see the *ābtu*⁴ fish at the time of his creation, and the ānt fish in his creation, and the (16) *ant*⁴ boat in its lake. May I see Horus in charge of the rudder, with Thoth

³ Compare the following scenes which represent Āpep in the form of a serpent and crocodile and ass being pierced by the deceased.

⁴ The ābtu and the ānt fishes are sometimes depicted on coffins swimming at the bows of the boat of the sun.

“and Maāt beside him; may I grasp the bows of the (17) *sektet*¹ boat, and the stern of the ātet boat. May he grant unto the ka of Osiris Ani to behold the disk of the Sun and to see the Moon-god without ceasing, every day; and may my soul (18) come forth and walk hither and thither and whithersoever it pleaseth. May my name be proclaimed when it is found upon the board of the table of (22) offerings; may offerings be made unto me in my (24) presence, even as they are made unto the followers of Horus; may there be prepared for me a seat in the boat of the Sun on the day of the going forth of the (26) god; and may I be received into the presence of Osiris in the land (28) of triumph!”

I. (1) A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ WHEN HE RISETH IN THE EASTERN PART OF HEAVEN. Behold Osiris, Qenna the merchant, (2) who saith: “Homage to thee, in thy rising thou Tmu in thy crowns of beauty. Thou risest, thou risest, thou Rā shinest, (3) thou shinest, at dawn of day. Thou art crowned like unto the king of the gods, and the goddess Shuti doeth homage unto thee. (4) The company of the gods praise thee from the double-dwelling. Thou goest forth over the upper air and thy heart is filled with gladness. (5) The sektet boat draweth onward as [Rā] cometh to the haven in the ātet boat with fair winds. Rā rejoiceth, Rā rejoiceth. (6) Thy father is Nu, thy mother is Nut, and thou art crowned as Rā-Harmachis. Thy sacred boat advanceth in peace. Thy foe hath been cast down and his (7) head hath been cut off; the heart of the Lady of life rejoiceth in that the enemy of her lord hath been overthrown. The mariners of Rā have content of heart and Annu rejoiceth.”

(8) The merchant Qenna saith: “I have come to thee, O Lord of the gods, Tmu-Harmachis, who passest over the earth (9) I know that by which thou dost live. Grant that I may be like unto one of those who are thy favoured (10) ones [among the followers] of the great god. May my name be proclaimed, may it be found, may it be lastingly renewed with (11) The oars are lifted into the sektet boat, and the sacred boat cometh in peace. (12) May I see Rā when he appeareth in the sky at dawn, and when his enemies have fallen at the block. (13) May I behold [Horus] guiding the rudder and steering with [his] two hands. (14) May I see the ābtu fish at the moment of his creation; and may I see the ant fish when he maketh himself manifest at creation, and the ant boat upon its lake. O thou Only One, O thou Mighty One, thou Growing One, (15) who dost never wax faint, and

“from whom power cannot be taken, the devoted (17) servant of
“the lord of Abtu.”

The merchant Qenna saith: (18) “Homage to thee Heru-Khuti-Tmu, Heru-Khepera, “mighty hawk, who dost cause the body [of man] to make merry, beautiful of face by “reason of thy two great plumes. Thou (19) wakest up in beauty at the dawn, when “the company of the gods and mortals sing songs of joy unto thee; hymns of “praise are offered unto thee at eventide. The (20) starry deities also adore thee. O thou “firstborn, who dost lie without movement, (21) arise; thy mother showeth loving- “kindness unto thee every day. Rā liveth and the fiend Nāk is dead; thou dost endure “for ever, and the (22) fiend hath fallen.

“Thou sailest over the sky with life and strength. The goddess Nehebka is in “(23) the ātet boat; the sacred boat rejoiceth. Thy heart is glad and thy brow is “wreathed with the twin serpents.”

II. (1) A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ WHEN HE RISETH IN THE EASTERN PART OF HEAVEN. Behold Osiris, Qenna the merchant, triumphant, who saith: (2) “Homage to thee, O thou who risest in Nu, and who at thy birth dost make the world “bright with light; all the company of the gods (3) sing hymns of praise unto thee. The “beings who minister unto Osiris cherish him as King of the North and of the South, the “beautiful and beloved man-child. When (4) he riseth, mortals live. The nations rejoice “in him, and the Spirits of Annu sing unto him songs of joy. The Spirits of the towns of “Pe and Nekhen (5) exalt him, the apes of dawn adore him, and all beasts and cattle “praise (6) him with one accord. The goddess Sebā overthroweth thine enemies, there- “fore rejoice (7) within thy boat; and thy mariners are content thereat. Thou hast arrived “in the ātet boat, and thy heart swelleth with joy. O Lord of the gods, when thou “(8) dost create them, they ascribe praises unto thee. The azure goddess Nut doth “compass thee on every side, and the god Nu floodeth thee with his rays of light. “(9) O cast thou thy light upon me and let me see thy beauties, me, the (10) Osiris “Qenna the merchant, triumphant! When thou goest forth over the earth I will sing “praises unto thy fair (11) face. Thou risest in the horizon of heaven, and [thy] disk is “adored [when] it resteth upon the mountain to give life unto the world.”

Saith Qenna the merchant, triumphant: (12) “Thou risest, thou risest, coming forth “from the god Nu. Thou dost become young again and art the same as thou wert “yesterday, O mighty youth who hast created thyself. Not my hand. (13) “Thou hast come with thy splendours, and thou hast made heaven and earth bright with “thy rays of pure emerald light. The land of Punt is (14) established for the perfumes “which thou smellest with thy nostrils. (15) Thou risest, O thou marvellous Being, in “heaven, the twin serpents are placed upon thy brow, and thou art lord of the world and “the inhabitants (16) thereof; [the company] of the gods and Qenna the merchant, “triumphant, adore thee.”

III. (1, 2) A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ WHEN HE RISETH IN THE EASTERN PART OF HEAVEN. (3) Behold Osiris Hunefer, triumphant, who saith: “Homage to “thee, O thou who art Rā when thou (4) risest and Tmu when thou settest. Thou “risest, thou risest; thou shinest, (5) thou shinest, thou who art crowned king of the “gods. Thou art the lord of heaven, [thou art] the lord of earth, [thou art] the creator “of those who dwell in the heights (6) and of those who dwell in the depths. [Thou “art] the One god who came into (7) being in the beginning of time. Thou didst create “the earth, (8) thou didst fashion man, thou didst make the watery abyss of the sky, “thou didst form Hapi [the Nile], and thou art the maker of streams and of the “(9) great deep, and thou givest life to all that is therein. Thou hast knit (10) together “the mountains, thou has made mankind and the beasts of the field, thou hast created “the heavens and the earth. Worshipped be thou whom the goddess Maät embraceth “at morn and at eve. Thou dost travel across the (11) sky with heart swelling with “joy; the Lake of Testes is at peace. The fiend Nāk hath fallen and his two arms are “cut off. The sektet boat receiveth fair winds, and the heart of him that is in his shrine “rejoiceth. Thou (12) art crowned with a heavenly form, the Only one, provided [with all “things]. Rā cometh forth from Nu in triumph. O thou mighty youth, thou everlasting “son, self-begotten, who didst give thyself birth, (13) O thou mighty One, of myriad “forms and aspects, king of the world, Prince of Annu, lord of eternity and ruler of the “everlasting, the company of the gods rejoice when thou risest and when thou sailest “(14) across the sky, O thou who art exalted in the sektet boat. Homage to thee, “O Amen-Rā, thou who dost rest upon Maät, thou who passest over the heaven, and “every face seeth thee. Thou dost wax great as thy (15) Majesty doth advance, and “thy rays are upon all faces. Thou art unknown and canst not be searched out “his fellow except thyself; thou art (16) the Only One [Men] praise thee in “thy name [Rā], and they swear by thee, for thou art lord over them. Thou hast heard “(17) with thine ears and thou hast seen with thine eyes. Millions of years have gone “over the world; I cannot tell the number of them, through which thou hast passed. “Thy heart hath decreed a day of happiness in thy name [of Rā]. Thou dost pass over “(18) and travellest through untold spaces of millions and hundreds of thousands of “years; thou settest out in peace, and thou steerest thy way across the watery abyss to “the place which thou lovest; this thou doest in one (19) little moment of time, and “thou dost sink down and makest an end of the hours.”

Osiris, the governor of the palace of the lord of the two lands (i.e., Seti I.), Hunefer, triumphant, saith: (20) “Hail my lord, thou that passest through eternity and whose “being is everlasting. Hail thou Disk, lord of beams of light, thou risest and thou “makest all mankind to live. Grant thou that I may behold thee at dawn each day.”

IV. A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ by Nekht, the royal scribe, captain of soldiers, who saith: “Homage to thee, O thou glorious Being, thou who art provided [with all “things]. O Tmu-Ĥeru-khuti, when thou risest in the horizon of heaven, a cry of joy “cometh out of the mouth of all peoples. O thou beautiful Being, thou dost renew “thyself in thy season in the form of the Disk within thy mother Hathor; therefore in “every place every heart swelleth with joy at thy rising, for ever. The eastern and the “western parts of heaven come to thee with homage, and give forth sounds of joy at thy “rising. O Rā, thou who art Ĥeru-khuti (Harmachis), the mighty man-child, the heir of “eternity, self-begotten and self-born, king of earth, prince of the netherworld, governor “of the mountains of Āukert (i.e., the netherworld), thou dost rise in the horizon of “heaven and sheddest upon the world beams of emerald light; thou art born from the “water, thou art sprung from Nu, who fostereth thee and ordereth thy members. O thou “who art crowned king of the gods, god of life, lord of love, all the nations live when “thou dost shine. The goddess Nut doeth homage unto thee, and the goddess “Maāt embraceth thee at all times. They who are in thy following sing unto thee with “joy and bow down to the earth when they meet thee, the god of heaven, the lord of “earth, the king of right and truth, the god of eternity, the everlasting ruler, the prince “of all the gods, the god of life, the creator of eternity, the maker of heaven by whom “is established all that therein is. The company of the gods rejoice at thy rising, the “earth is glad when it beholdeth thy rays; the peoples that have been long dead come “forth with cries of joy to see thy beauties. Thou goest forth over heaven and earth, “made strong each day by thy mother Nut. Thou passest through the uppermost “heaven, thy heart swelleth with joy; and the Lake of Testes is content thereat.

 “The Enemy hath fallen, his arms are hewn off, the knife hath cut asunder his joints.
 “Rā liveth in Maa¹ the beautiful. The sektet boat draweth on and cometh into port;
 “the south, the north, the west and the east turn to praise thee, O thou unformed substance
 “of the earth, who didst create thyself. Isis and Nephthys salute thee, they sing unto thee
 “in thy boat hymns of joy, they shield thee with their hands. The souls of the East “follow thee, the souls of the West praise thee. Thou art the ruler of all gods and thou “hast joy of heart within thy shrine; for the Serpent Nāk is condemned to the fire, and “thy heart shall be joyful for ever. Thy mother Nut is adjudged to thy father Nu.”

PLATE II.

Vignette I.: The disk of the Sun ☉, supported by a pair of arms , proceeding from the ankh , the sign of life, which in turn is supported by a tet , the emblem of the East and of the god Osiris. The tet stands upon the horizon . On each side of the disk are three dog-headed apes, spirits of the Dawn, their arms raised in adoration of the disk. On the right hand side of the tet is the goddess Nephthys , and on the left is Isis ; each goddess raising her hands in adoration of the tet, and kneeling upon the emblem aāt , or hemisphere. Above is the sky . This vignette belongs properly to the hymn to the rising sun.²

In some papyri the apes are four (Naville, Das Aeg. Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 26), or seven (Naville, op. cit., Bd. I., Bl. 21) in number.

I., Bl. 22), on one side of which are three hawk-headed deities, and on the other three jackal-headed deities (see Lanzzone, Dizionario, pp. 56, 57.). Beneath are Isis and Nephthys kneeling in adoration before two lion-gods, which represent yesterday and to-morrow. An interesting variant of the latter vignette occurs in British Museum papyrus No. 10,472, which was made for the lady Anhai, a singer in the temple of Amen at Thebes, about B.C. 1000, where, in addition to the apes and figures of the goddesses (the titles of Isis being  and those of Nephthys ), there are represented, on each side (1) the winged utchat  with pendent uræus  and shen  (emblematic of the sun's circuit) and feather ; (2) a man, prostrate, adoring the disk; (3) four men, upright, with both hands raised in adoration; and (4) a human-headed bird , emblematic of the soul of the deceased lady, standing upon a pylon.

⁵ Seker is, like Ptah, Osiris, and Tenen, a form of the night sun. At the festival of this god, the Henu boat, , a symbol of the god Seker of Memphis, was drawn round the sanctuary at dawn at the moment when the sun casts its golden rays upon the earth. Vignette: Scene of the weighing of the Heart of the Dead. Ani and his wife enter the Hall of Double Law or Truth, wherein the heart , emblematical of the conscience, is to be weighed in the balance against the feather , emblematical of law. Above, twelve gods, each holding a sceptre , are seated upon thrones before a table of offerings of fruit, flowers, etc. Their names are:—

 Harmachis, “the great god within his boat”;  Tmu;  Shu;  Tefnut, “lady of heaven”;  Seb;  Nut, “lady of Heaven”;  Isis;  Nephthys;  Horus, “the great god”;  Hathor, “lady of Amenta”;  Hu; and  Sa. Upon the beam of the scales sits the dog-headed ape ³ which was associated Thoth protecteth thee and maketh thy soul to stand up in the māāt boat in thy name of Moon.” For the identification of Ani with Horus, see Naville, La Litane du Soleil, p. 99, note 10. The god Ani is also addressed as “Eye of Horus” by the deceased in the 89th chapter of the Book of the Dead, which refers to the “uniting of a soul to its body in the underworld.”

The double Maāt goddesses are at times represented standing beside the balance to watch the result of the weighing, and at the same time Maāt is also placed in the scale to be weighed against the heart of the deceased (Fig. 1) (see Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. presiding over the birth-chamber, and Renenet¹ probably superintending the rearing of children. Behind the mesken is the soul of Ani in the form of a human-headed bird standing on a pylon. On the right of the balance, behind Anubis, stands Thoth,² the scribe of the gods, with his reed-pen and palette³ containing black and red ink, with which to record the result of the trial. Behind Thoth stands the female monster *Āmām*⁴ , the "Devourer," or Ām-mit , "the eater of the Dead."

² Thoth was the personification of intelligence. He was self-created and self-existent, and was the "heart of Rā." He invented writing, letters, the arts and sciences, and he was skilled in astronomy and mathematics. Among his many titles are "lord of Law," "maker of Law," and "begetter of Law." He justified Osiris against his enemies, and he wrote the story of the fight between Horus, the son of Osiris, and Set. As "lord of Law" he presides over the trial of the heart of the dead, and, as being the justifier of the god Osiris against his enemies, he is represented in funereal scenes as the justifier also of the dead before Osiris (see Lanzone, Dizionario, p. 1264 ff., and tav. ccciv., No. 1; Pierret, Panthéon, pp. 10-14; and Brugsch, Religion und Mythologie, p. 439 ff.). Brugsch connects the name Tehuti (Thoth) with the old Egyptian word tehu, "ibis," and he believes that it means the "being who is like an ibis." The word teḫ also means "to measure," "to compute," "to weigh"; and as this god is called "the counter of the heavens and the stars, and of all that therein is," the connexion of the name Thoth with teḫ is evident. Bronze and faïence figures of the god represent him with the head of an ibis, and holding an utchat  in his hands (see Nos. 481, 490 a, and 11,385 in the British Museum). The utchat, or eye of the sun, has reference to the belief that Thoth brought back each morning the light of the sun which had been removed during the night.

³ The palettes of the Egyptian scribe were rectangular, and were made of wood, stone, basalt, ivory (see Nos. 5512a, 5513, 5525a, and 12,779, etc., in the British Museum). They measure from 10 to 17 inches in length, and from 2 to 3 inches in width. They usually contain two round cavities to hold red and black ink, and a groove to hold the reed-pens. The inscriptions on them, which usually have reference to Thoth, are cut, or written in ink, or inlaid in colour; the name of the owner of the palette is generally added. The colours with which the Egyptians wrote were made of vegetable substances, coloured earths, and preparations of copper.

Text: [Chapter XXXB.] Osiris, the scribe Ani, saith:¹ "My heart my mother, "my heart my mother, my heart my coming into being! May there be nothing to "resist me at [my] judgment; may there be no opposition to me from the Tchatcha;² "may there be no parting of thee from me in the presence of him who keepeth the "scales! Thou art my ka within my body [which] knitteth³ and strengtheneth my "limbs. Mayest thou come forth to the place of happiness to which⁴ I am advancing. "May the *Shenit*⁵ not cause my name to stink, and may no lies be spoken against "me in the presence of the god!⁶ Good is it for thee to hear."⁷ Thoth, the righteous judge of the great company of the gods who are in the presence of the god Osiris, saith: "Hear ye this judgment. The heart of Osiris "hath in very truth been weighed, and his soul hath stood as a witness for him; "it hath been found true by trial in the Great Balance. There hath not been "found any wickedness in him; he hath not wasted the offerings in the temples; "he hath not done harm by his deeds; and he uttered no evil reports while he "was upon earth."

The great company of the gods reply to Thoth dwelling in Khemenu: "That "which cometh forth from thy mouth hath been ordained. Osiris, the scribe

The Devourer usually stands near the balance instead of behind Thoth; but there is one papyrus quoted by Naville, (Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 136) in which she is shown crouching beside the lake of fire in the infernal regions.

² The four gods of the cardinal points, Mesthâ, Hâpi, Tuamâutef, and Qebhsennuf (see Naville, Todtenbuch Einleitung, p. 164).

³ Some copies read, "Thou art my ka within my body, the god Khnemu (i.e., "Moulder"), who uniteth (or formeth) and strengtheneth my limbs." Khnemu was called "builder of men, maker of the gods, the father from the beginning; creator of things which are," etc.

⁵ A class of divine beings.

⁷ This sentence appears to be unfinished; see the Egyptian text, p. 12.

“Ani, triumphant, is holy and righteous. He hath not sinned, neither hath he done evil against us. Let it not be given to the devourer \bar{A} memet to prevail over him. Meat-offerings and entrance into the presence of the god Osiris shall be granted unto him, together with a homestead for ever in Sekhet-hetepu, as unto the followers of Horus.”

PLATE IV.

Vignette: Ani, found just, is led into the presence of Osiris. On the left the hawk-headed god Horus, the son of Isis, wearing the double crown of the North and the South, takes Ani by the hand and leads him forward towards “Osiris, the lord of eternity”  Osar neb t'etta, who is enthroned on the right within a shrine in the form of a funereal chest. The god wears the atef crown with plumes; a menat (see p. 245, note 2) hangs from the back of his neck; and he holds in his hands the crook \uparrow , sceptre \uparrow , and flail \wedge , emblems of sovereignty and dominion. He is wrapped in bandages ornamented with scale work. The side of his throne is painted to resemble the doors of the tomb. Behind him stand Nephthys on his right hand and Isis on his left. Facing him, and standing on a lotus flower, are the four “children of Horus (or Osiris),” or gods of the cardinal points. The first, Mestha, has the head of a man; the second, Hāpi, the head of an ape; the third, Tūamāutef, the head of a jackal; and the fourth, Qebhsennuf, the head of a hawk. Suspended near the lotus is an object which is usually called a panther's skin,¹ but is more probably a bullock's hide.

The roof of the shrine is supported on pillars with lotus capitals, and is surmounted by a figure of Horus-Sept or Horus-Seker and rows of uræi.

In the centre Ani kneels before the god upon a reed mat, raising his right hand in adoration, and holding in his left hand the kherp sceptre \uparrow . He wears a whitened wig surmounted by a “cone,” the signification of which is unknown. Round his neck is a deep collar of precious stones. Near him stands a table of offerings of meat, fruit, flowers, etc., and in the compartments above are a number of vessels for wine, beer, oil, wax, etc., together with bread, cakes, ducks, a wreath, and single flowers.

Appendix: The shrine is in some instances represented in the shape of a pylon, the cornice of which is ornamented either with uræi , or with the disk of the sun and feathers, emblematic of Maāt, . It usually rests upon a base made in the shape of a cubit, . The throne upon which Osiris sits is placed upon reed mats (British Museum papyrus No. 10,471), or upon the cubit-shaped base, or in a pool of water, from which springs a lotus flower with buds and having the four gods of the cardinal points (see British Museum papyrus No. 9901) standing upon it. In some of the oldest papyri the body of Osiris is painted white, and he stands upright. Isis is described as “great lady, divine mother,” and Nephthys as “the mistress of the underworld.” In British Museum papyrus No. 10,471 the scene of the presentation of the deceased to Osiris is unusual and of interest. On the right the scribe Nekht  and his wife Thuau  stand with both hands raised in adoration of Osiris. Behind them, upon a cubit-shaped base, is a house with four windows in its upper half, and upon the roof two triangular projections similar to those which admit air into modern houses in the East. Before the door are a sycamore (?) tree and a palm tree, with clusters of fruit; on the left is the god Osiris on his throne, and behind him stands “Maāt, mistress of the two countries, daughter of Rā,” above whom are two outstretched female arms proceeding from a mountain and holding a disk between the hands. In the centre, between Osiris and the deceased, is a pool of water with three sycamore (?) trees on each side, and at each corner a palm tree bearing clusters of dates; and from it there springs a vine laden with bunches of grapes.

In British Museum papyrus No. 10,472 the god seated in the shrine wears the crown of the god Tanen , and is called “Ptah-Seker-Åusār, within the hidden place, great god, lord of Ta-sert, king of eternity, prince of the everlasting.”

Text: Saith Horus, the son of Isis: “I have come unto thee, O Unnefer, and “I have brought the Osiris Ani unto thee. His heart is [found] righteous coming “forth from the balance, and it hath not sinned against god or goddess. Thoht “hath weighed it according to the decree uttered unto him by the company

“of the gods; and it is very true and righteous. Grant him cakes and ale; “and let him enter into the presence of Osiris; and may he be like unto the “followers of Horus for ever.”

Behold, Osiris Ani saith: “O Lord of Amentet (the underworld), I am in thy “presence. There is no sin in me, I have not lied wittingly, nor have I done “aught with a false heart. Grant that I may be like unto those favoured ones “who are round about thee, and that I may be an Osiris, greatly favoured of the “beautiful god and beloved of the lord of the world, [I] the royal scribe indeed, “who loveth him, Ani, triumphant before the god Osiris.”

Appendix: The usual title of this chapter [XXXB.] is, “Chapter of not allowing the heart of [the deceased] to be driven away from him in the underworld.”¹ It is an address by the deceased to his own heart, which he calls his ka or “double” within his body. It should be accompanied by a vignette of the trial of the heart in which the heart is weighed against the dead man himself, as in the ancient Nebseni papyrus.

In the Ani papyrus, however, it will be observed that the heart is being weighed against the feather of the Law, Maât, a scene which often accompanies Chapter CXXXV.

Interesting variants of the vignettes of Chapter XXXB. are given by Naville (Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 43), where we find the deceased addressing either his heart placed on a stand , or a beetle, or a heart to which are attached the antennæ of a beetle. In certain papyri this chapter is followed by a rubric:—“ [This chapter is] to be said over a “scarab² of green stone encircled with smu metal, and [having] a ring of silver, which “is to be placed upon the neck of the dead. This chapter was found in Khemenu,³

² Chapter XXXA. is never found inscribed upon scarabs.

It was the abode of the “eight” (chemenu) great primeval gods, and of Thoth, the scribe of the gods. (See Meyer and Dümichen, Geschichte des alten Aegyptens, p. 185.)

“ written upon a slab of steel of the South, in the writing of the god himself, under the feet of the majesty of the god, in the time of the majesty of Men-kau-Ra,¹ the king of the North and of the South, triumphant, by the royal son Ḥeru-ṭāṭā-f,² who found it while he was journeying to inspect the temples.”³

The scarabs which are found in the mummies, or lying upon the breast just above the position of the heart, form an interesting section of every large Egyptian collection. In the British Museum series every important type of the funereal scarab is represented. They are made of green basalt, green granite (Nos. 7894 and 15,497), white limestone (Nos. 7917, 7927, 15,508), light green marble (No. 7905), black stone (Nos. 7907, 7909, 7913), blue paste (Nos. 7904, 14,549), blue glass (No. 22,872), and purple, blue, or green glazed faïence (Nos. 7868, 7869). They vary in size from 5 inches to 2 inches in length. On the hard stone examples the text of the Chapter of the Heart, more or less complete, is usually cut on the base in outline; but it is sometimes traced in red ink (No. 7915), or in gold (No. 15,518). Incuse hieroglyphics are sometimes filled with gold (No. 7881). The name of the person with whom the scarab was buried usually precedes the text of the Chapter of the Heart; but in many instances blank spaces are found left without insertion of the name—a proof that these amulets were bought ready-made. The base however is often quite plain (Nos. 7965, 7966), or figures of Osiris, Isis, and Nephthys occupy the place of the usual inscription (Nos. 15,500, 15,507). The backs of scarabs are generally quite plain, but we find examples inscribed with figures of the boat of the Sun , Osiris, with flail and crook , the bennu bird , and the u'tat  (No. 7883), Rā and Osiris (No. 15,507), and the bennu bird with the inscription  neteri ab en Rā, “ the mighty heart of Rā ” (No. 7878). A finehard, green stone scarab of the Greek or Roman period has upon the back the figures of four Greek deities (No. 7966). In rare instances, the beetles have a human face (Nos. 7876, 15,516) or head (No. 7999). Carefully made scarabs have usually a band of gold across and down the back where the wings join: an example of the late period (No. 7977) has the whole of the back gilded. The scarab was set in a gold oval ring, at one end of which was a smaller ring for suspension from the neck or for attachment to the bandages of the mummy (No. 15,504). The green glazed faïence scarab of Thothmes III. (No. 18,190) was suspended by a gold chain from a bronze torque. A thick gold wire to fit the neck is attached to No. 24,401. The base of the scarab is sometimes in the form of a heart (Nos. 7917, 7925). A remarkable example of this variety is No. 7925, in which are group of wailing women, followed by attendants carrying on yokes boxes of flowers, vases of unguents, etc. In the right centre are a cow with her calf, chairs of painted wood with flowers upon them, and an attendant with shaven head, carrying a haunch , newly cut, for the funereal feast. The group on the right is performing the last rites. Before the door of the tomb stands the mummy of Ani to receive the final honours; behind him, embracing him, stands Anubis, the god of the tomb; and at his feet, in front, kneels Thuthu to take a last farewell of her husband's body. Before a table of offerings stand two priests: the Sem priest, who wears a panther's skin, holding in his right hand a libation vase, and in his left a censer; and a priest holding in his right hand an instrument¹ with which he is about to touch the mouth and eyes of the mummy, and in his left the instrument  for "opening the mouth." Behind or beside them on the ground, in a row, lie the instruments employed in the ceremony of "opening the mouth,"² etc., the mesxet instrument , the sepulchral box , the boxes of purification , the bandlet , the libation vases , the ostrich feather , and the instruments called Seb-ur, Temānu or Tun-tet , and the Pesh-en-kef . The Kher-heb priest stands behind reading the service of the dead from a papyrus.

Appendix : In the papyrus of Hunefer a slab or stele with rounded top  is placed by the door of the tomb (Fig. 1, p. 265). In the upper part of it the deceased is shown adoring Osiris, and below is the legend,³ "Hail, Osiris, the chief of Amenta, the lord of eternity, “spreading out in everlastingness, lord of adorations, chief of the company of his gods; and hail, Anubis [dweller] in the tomb, great god, chief of the holy dwelling. May they grant that I may go into and come out from the underworld, that I may follow Osiris in all his festivals at the beginning of the year, that I may receive cakes, and that I may go forth into the presence of [Osiris]; I, the double (ka) of Osiris, the greatly favoured of his god, Hu-nefer.” In the upper register of this section of the papyrus is the text of the “Chapter of opening the mouth of the statue of Osiris.” The complete scene, including this stele and vignette, appears in the tomb of Pe-ta-Amen-Apt. In the vignette of the first chapter of the Book of the Dead in the papyrus of Neb-qet¹ the soul of the deceased is represented descending the steps of the tomb to carry food to its mummy in the underground chamber (Fig. 2).

The ceremonies² which took place at the door of the tomb in an Egyptian funeral are of considerable interest. The priest called Kher-heb, holding the Sem priest by the arm, gives directions for the slaughter of “a bull of the South.” The slaughterer, standing on the bull, cuts off a fore-leg (Fig. 3) and takes out the heart. A woman, called the Tcherâuur, who personifies Isis, then whispers in the deceased’s ear, “Behold, thy lips are set in order for thee, so that thy mouth may be opened.” Next, an antelope³ and a duck⁴

“thee thy mouth¹ and thy teeth.” The Kher-heb next calls on the Sem priest four times : “O Sem, take the *Seb-ur*² (Fig. 5) and open the mouth and the eyes”; and while the Sem priest is performing the ceremony the Kher-heb continues : “Thy mouth was closed, but I have set in order for thee thy mouth and thy teeth. I open for thee thy mouth, I open for thee thy two eyes. I have opened for thee thy mouth with the instrument of Anubis. I have opened thy mouth with the instrument of Anubis, with the iron tool with which the mouths of the gods were opened. Horus, open the mouth, Horus, open the mouth. Horus hath opened the mouth of the dead, as he whilom opened the mouth of Osiris, with the iron which came forth from Set, with the iron tool (Fig. 6) with which he opened the mouths of the gods. He hath opened thy mouth with it. The dead shall walk and shall speak, and his body shall [be] with the great company of the gods in the Great House of the Aged one in Annu, and he shall receive there the ureret crown from Horus, the lord of mankind.” The Kher-heb next says : “Let the Ami-Khent priest (Fig. 7) stand behind him (i.e., the deceased), and say, ‘My father, my father,’ four times.” The eldest son of the deceased then stands behind the deceased, and in his

A tomb-official, Am-ás, then takes up his position behind the deceased, and the Se-mer-f and the Kher-heb stand in front; the Kher-heb repeating four times: “The Se-mer-f openeth the mouth and the two eyes of the deceased, first with a needle¹ of iron, then with a rod of smu metal”; the Am-ás addressing the deceased: “Behold the Se-mer-f”; and the Kher-heb saying, in the name of the Se-mer-f: “I have pressed for thee thy mouth, even as thy father pressed it in the name of Seker. Hail, Horus hath pressed thy mouth for thee, he hath opened thine eyes for thee; Horus hath opened thy mouth for thee, he hath opened for thee thine eyes; they are firmly stablished. Thy mouth was closed; I have ordered thy mouth and thy teeth for thee in their true order. Thou hast [again] opened thy mouth; Horus hath opened thy mouth. I have stablished thy mouth firmly. Horus hath opened for thee thy mouth, Horus hath opened for thee thy two eyes.” The Kher-heb then speaks on behalf of the Sem priest: “Thy mouth was closed up. I have ordered aright for thee thy mouth and thy teeth. Thy mouth is firmly stablished. Thy mouth was tightly closed. His mouth is firmly stablished, and [his] two eyes are firmly stablished.” The Sem priest next presents to the deceased (Fig. 9) a cone-shaped offering Δ ,² and at the same time the Kher-heb says: “Open the mouth and the two eyes, open the mouth and the two eyes. Thou hadst tightly closed thy mouth, thou hast [again] opened thy two eyes.” Then the Kher-heb says, on behalf of the Smer (Fig. 10) priest who stands behind the deceased:

The Sem priest, holding a vase of ointment in his left hand, and smearing the mouth with his fore-finger (Fig. 16), says: "I have anointed thy face with ointment, I have anointed thine eyes. I have painted thine eye with uatch and with mestchem. Thy two eyes are decked therewith in its name of Uatch, which maketh thee to give forth fragrance, in its name of "Sweet-smelling." A number of scented unguents and perfumes are brought forward, and at the presentation of each a short sentence is recited by the Kher-heb having reference to the final triumph of the deceased in the underworld and to the help which the great gods will render to him.

Appendix: The text of Chapter LXXII. does not occur in the Papyrus of Ani. It is given by M. Naville (see Todtenbuch, I., Bl. 84) from a papyrus in the Louvre. In the vignettes which accompany it, the deceased is represented as adoring three gods, who are either standing in a shrine or are seated upon it. In other instances, the deceased stands by a sepulchral chest or outside a pylon with hands raised in adoration. The following is a translation of the Louvre text:—

PLATES VII.-X.

Vignette : The vignette of these plates, forming one composition, runs along the top of the text. The subjects are :—

Plate VII. 1. Ani and his wife in the seh hall;¹ he is moving a piece on a draught-board² (to illustrate lines 3 and 4 of the text).

2. The souls of Ani and his wife standing upon a pylon-shaped building. The hieroglyphics by the side of Ani's soul read  ba en Ausâr, “ the soul of Osiris.”

3. A table of offerings, upon which are laid a libation vase , plants, and lotus flowers .¹

4. Two lions seated back to back and supporting the horizon , over which extends the sky . The lion on the right is called  Sef, i.e., "Yesterday," and that on the left  Tuau, i.e., "Tomorrow" (to illustrate lines 13-16).

5. The bennu bird ,² and a table of offerings (to illustrate lines 26-30).

6. The mummy of Ani lying on a bier  within a funerary shrine ; at the head and foot are Nephthys and Isis in the form of hawks , . Beneath the bier are vases painted to imitate variegated marble or glass,³ a funerary box, Ani's palette, etc.⁴

³ For examples of such vases see Nos. 4875, 4879, 4887, 9529, in the Fourth Egyptian Room.

⁴ In many papyri the soul of the deceased in the form of a human-headed bird is seen hovering over the dead body. (Fig. 1.)

Text: [Chapter XVII.] (1.) HERE BEGIN THE PRAISES AND GLORIFYINGS² OF COMING OUT FROM AND GOING INTO (2) THE GLORIOUS NETER-KHERT IN THE BEAUTIFUL AMENTA, OF COMING OUT BY DAY³ IN ALL THE FORMS OF EXISTENCE WHICH

² Pierret renders, "résurrection des mânes." See Le Livre des Morts, p. 53.

³ Some copies read, "to be with the followers of Osiris, and to feed upon the food of Un-nefer, to come forth by day"; and others, "may I drink water at the sources of the streams, and be among the followers of Un-nefer; may I see the disk every morning." For the texts, see Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. II., Bl. 29.

(13) Who then is this? It is Tmu in his disk, or (as others say), It is Rā in (14) his rising in the eastern horizon of heaven.

“I am Yesterday; I know (15) Tomorrow.”

Who then is this? Yesterday is Osiris, and (16) Tomorrow is Rā, on the day when he shall destroy the (17) enemies of Neb-er-tcher, and when he shall stablish as prince and ruler (18) his son Horus, or (as others say), on the day when we commemorate the festival (19) of the meeting of the dead Osiris with his father Rā, and when the battle of the (20) gods was fought in which Osiris, lord of Amentet, was the leader.

What then is this? (21) It is Amentet, [that is to say] the creation of the souls of the gods when Osiris was leader in Set-Amentet; or (22) (as others say), Amentet is that which Rā hath given unto me; when any god cometh, he doth arise and (23) doeth battle for it.

“I know the god who dwelleth therein.”

(24) Who then is this? It is Osiris,” or (as others say), Rā is his name, even Rā (25) the self-created.

“I am the *bennu*¹ bird (26) which is in Annu, and I am the keeper of “the volume of the book of things² which are and of things which shall be.”

Who (27) then is this? It is Osiris, or (as others say), It is his dead body, or (as others say), (28) It is his filth. The things which are are and the things which shall be are his dead body; or (as others say), (29) They are eternity and everlastingness. Eternity is the day, and everlastingness (30) is the night.

“I am the god Amsu³ in his coming-forth; may his (31) two plumes be set upon my head.”

² Or, “I am he that presideth over the arrangement (or ordering) of things,” etc. Birch renders it, “The Creator of beings and existences,” and Pierret, “La loi de l'existence et des êtres.” In a hymn Rā is called  | neb enti, “lord of things which are,” and  | ari enti, “maker of things which are,” and  | ari unenet, “maker of things which shall be.” See Grébaud, Hymne à Ammon-Rā, pp. 5, 16, 27, who, however, believes  to mean inanimate objects; see p. 130.

³  The name of this god was first read Khem, and then Min, but it has been proved (Aeg. Zeitschrift, 1877, p. 98, and Trans. Soc. Bibl. Arch., Vol. VIII., p. 204, note 2) that the correct

Who then is this? Amsu is Horus, the (32) avenger of his father, and his coming-forth is his birth. The (33) plumes upon his head are Isis and Nephthys when they go forth to set themselves (34) there, even as his protectors,¹ and they provide that which (35) his head lacketh,² or (as others say), They are the two exceeding great uræi which are upon the head of their (36) father Tmu, or (as others say), His two eyes are the two plumes.

(37) "Osiris Ani, the scribe of all the holy offerings, riseth up in his place in triumph; he cometh into (38) his city."³

What then is this? It is the horizon of his father Tmu.

(39) "I have made an end of my shortcomings, and I have put away my faults."

What then (40) is this? It is the cutting off of the corruptible⁴ in the body of Osiris, the scribe Ani, (41) triumphant before all the gods; and all his faults are driven out.

(42) What then is this? It is the purification [of Osiris] on the day of his birth.

(43) "I am purified in my exceeding great double nest⁵ which is in Suten-
"henen, (44) on the day of the offerings of the followers of the great god who "is therein."

(45) What then is this? "Millions of years" is the name of the one reading is Amsu (compare the variants in Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. II., Bl. 41). This god was associated with Amen-Ra, and represented the power of reproduction (see Pierret, Panthéon, p. 39; and Lanzone, Dizionario, p. 935). The seat of his worship was Apu , the Panopolis of the Greeks, and the Akhmim of Arabic writers. For the forms of the name of the town, see Brugsch, Dict. Géog., p. 19. Figures of Amsu, in bronze and faïence, are common, and good examples are Nos. 43, 44, 45, 46 47a, and 13,520 in the Third Egyptian Room.

² The chief variant readings are ; .

³ British Museum papyrus No. 9900 has, "I rise up in my land, I come into (or from) mine eye." The papyrus of Kenna at Leyden has the same reading as that of Ani.

⁴ The papyrus of Kenna has , "the hind-parts."

⁵ The chief variants are . See Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. II., Pl. xvii.

What then is this? It is the drops of blood (61) which fell from Rā when he went forth (62) to cut himself. They sprang into being as the gods H̄u and Sa, who are in the (63) following of Rā and who accompany Tmu (64) daily and every day.

“I, Osiris, Ani (65) the scribe, triumphant, have filled up for thee the “*utchat*¹ after it was darkened (66)² on the day of the combat of the Two “Fighters.”³

What then (67) is this? It is the day on which Horus fought with (68) Set, who cast filth in the face of Horus, and when Horus destroyed the (69) powers of Set. Thoth did this with his own hand.

(70) “I lift the hair[-cloud]⁴ when there are storms in the sky.”

What then is this? (71) It is the right eye of Rā, which raged against [Set] when (72) he sent it forth. Thoth raiseth up the hair[-cloud], and bringeth the eye (73) alive, and whole, and sound, and without defect to [its] lord; or (as others say), It is the eye of Rā when it is sick and when it (74) weepeth for its fellow eye; then Thoth standeth up to cleanse it.

(75) “I behold Rā who was born yesterday from the (76) buttocks⁵ of the “cow Meḥ-urt; ⁶ his strength is my strength, and my strength is his strength.”

What then (77) is this? It is the water of heaven, or (as others say), (78) It is the image of the eye of Rā in the morning at his daily birth. (79) Meḥ-urt is the eye of Rā. Therefore Osiris, the (80) scribe Ani, triumphant, [is] a great one among the gods (81) who are in the train of Horus. The words are] spoken for him that loveth his lord.⁷

I.e., the eye of the Sun.

³ Rehui was a name given in the first instance to Horus and Set, but subsequently it was applied to any two combatants (see the passages quoted by Brugsch, Wörterbuch, Suppl., p. 734). British Museum papyrus No. 10,184 (Sallier IV.), states that the battle between Horus and Set took place on the 26th day of the month of Thoth, i.e., October (see Chabas, Le Calendrier, p. 28).

⁴ The scribe has omitted the words  em utchat, “from the eye of the sun.” The word  shen is a name for the clouds which cover the eye of the sun, and which are in appearance like hair. Brugsch in his Wörterbuch (Suppl.), p. 1193, gives the word  as meaning “tempest.”

⁵ The papyrus has .

⁶ For figures of this goddess, see Lanzone, Dizionario, plate 131.

⁷ The meaning of this passage is doubtful. Birch renders, “one of the gods who belong to Horus, whose words exceed the wish of his Lord”; and Pierret, “un de ces dieux qui suivent Horus, et parlent selon la volonté de leur seigneur.”

(82) What then is this? [i.e., who are these gods?] Mesthâ, Hâpi, Tuamâutef, and Qebhsennuf.

(83) "Homage to you, O ye lords of right and truth, and ye holy ones " who [stand] behind Osiris, who utterly do away with (84) sins and crime, and [ye] " who are in the following of the goddess H̄etep-se(85)-khus, grant that I " may come unto you. Destroy ye all the faults which (86) are within me, " even as ye did for the seven Shining Ones (87) who are among the followers " of their lord Sepa.¹ (88) Anubis appointed their place on the day [when was " said], 'Come therefore thither.'"

What then (89) is this? These lords of right and truth are Thoth and (90) Astes, lord of Amenta. The holy ones who stand behind Osiris, even Mesthâ, (91) Hâpi, Tuamâutef, and Qebhsennuf, are they who are (92) behind the Thigh² in the northern sky. They who do away with (93) sins and crime and who are in the following of the goddess H̄etep-se-khus (94) are the god Sebek in the waters. The goddess H̄etep-se-khus is the eye of (95) Râ, or (as others say), It is the flame which followeth after Osiris to burn up (96) the souls of his foes. As concerning all the faults which are (97) in Osiris, the scribe of the holy offerings of all the gods, Ani, triumphant, [they are all that he hath done against the lords of eternity]³ since he came forth (98) from his mother's womb. As concerning (99) the seven Shining Ones, even Mesthâ, Hâpi, Tuamâutef, Qebhsennuf, (100) Maa-atef-f, Kheri-beq-f, and Horus-Khenti-maa, Anubis appointed (101) them protectors of the body of Osiris, or (as others say), (102) [set them] behind the place of purification of Osiris; or (as others say), Those seven glorious ones are (103) Netcheh-netcheh, Aqet-qet, An-ertanef-bes-f-khenti-heh-f,⁴ (104) Aq-her-unnut-f,⁵ Teshher-maa-âmmi (105) -het-Ânes,⁶

³ Some such words as  have been omitted. See Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. II., Pl. lv.

⁴ I.e., "He doth not give his flame, he dwelleth in the fire."

⁵ I.e., "He goeth in at his hour."

Ubes-hra-per-em-khet khet,¹ and Maa (106) -em-qerh-an-nef-em-hru.² The chief of the holy ones (107) who minister in his chamber is Horus, the avenger of his father. As to the day (108) [upon which was said] "Come therefore thither," it concerneth the words, "Come (109) then thither," which Rā spake unto Osiris. Lo, may this be decreed for me in Amentet.

"I am the soul which dwelleth in the two (110) tchafi."

What then is this? It is Osiris [when] he goeth into Tattu (111) and findeth there the soul of Rā; there the one god (112) embraceth the other, and souls spring into being within the two tchafi.³

["I am the Cat which fought (?) by the Persea tree hard by in Annu, on the "night when the foes of Neb-er-tcher were destroyed."

What then is this? The male cat is Rā himself, and he is called Maâu⁴ by reason of the speech of the god Sa [who said] concerning him: "He is like (maâu) unto that which he hath made, and his name became Maâu"; or (as others say), It is Shu who maketh over the possessions of Seb to Osiris. As to the fight (?) by the Persea tree hard by, in Annu, it concerneth the children of impotent revolt when justice is wrought on them for what they have done. As to [the words] "that night of the battle," they concern the inroad [of the children of impotent revolt] into the eastern part of heaven, whereupon there arose a battle in heaven and in all the earth.

"O thou who art in the egg (i.e., Rā), who shinest from thy disk and risest "in thy horizon, and dost shine like gold above the sky, like unto whom there is "none among the gods, who sailest over the pillars of Shu (i.e., the ether), who "givest blasts of fire from thy mouth, [who makest the two lands bright with thy "radiance, deliver] the faithful worshippers from the god whose forms are hidden, "whose eyebrows are like unto the two arms of the balance on the night of the "reckoning of destruction."

² I.e., "The one who seeth by night, and leadeth by day."

³ This reading differs from that of any other papyrus of this period. After the words, "spring into being within the two tchafi," the papyrus of Nebsemi has, "It is Horus, the avenger of his father, and Horus-khenti-en-maa," or (as others say), "'the two souls within the tchafi' are the soul of Rā [and] the soul of Osiris, [or] the soul which is in Shu and the soul which is in Tefnut, that is, the two souls which are in Tattu." It appears that the scribe of the Ani papyrus has here accidentally omitted a long section; the text is therefore supplied within brackets from the Nebsemi papyrus, plate xiv., l. 16 ff.

⁴ Note the play upon the words maâu, "cat," and maâu, "like."

Who then is this? It is An-ā-f, the god who bringeth his arm. As concerning [the words] "that night of the reckoning of destruction," it is the night of the burning of the damned, and of the overthrow of the wicked at [the sacred] block, and of the slaughter of souls.

Who then is this? It is Nemu, the headsman of Osiris; or (as others say), It is Āpep when he riseth up with one head bearing maāt (i.e., right and truth) [upon it]; or (as others say), It is Horus when he riseth up with two heads, whereof the one beareth maāt and the other wickedness. He bestoweth wickedness on him that worketh wickedness, and maāt on him that followeth after righteousness and truth; or (as others say), It is the great Horus who dwelleth in [Se]khem; or (as others say), It is Thoth; or (as others say), It is Nefer-Tmu, [or] Sept,¹ who doth thwart the course of the foes of Neb-er-tcher.

"Deliver me from the Watchers who bear slaughtering knives, and who have "cruel fingers,² and who slay those who are in the following of Osiris. May they "never overcome me, may I never fall under their knives."

What then is this? It is Anubis, and it is Horus in the form of Khent-en-maa; or (as others say), It is the Divine Rulers who thwart the works of their [weapons]; it is the chiefs of the sheniu chamber.

"May their knives never get the mastery over me, may I never fall under "their instruments of cruelty, for I know their names, and I know the being "Māchet³ who is among them in the house of Osiris, shooting rays of light from "[his] eye, but he himself is unseen. He goeth round about heaven robed in the "flame of his mouth, commanding Hāpi, but remaining himself unseen. May I be "strong upon earth before Rā, may I come happily into haven in the presence of "Osiris. Let not your offerings be hurtful to me, O ye who preside over your "altars, for I am among those who follow after Neb-er-tcher according to the "writings of Kheperā. I fly as a hawk, I cackle as a goose; I ever slay, even as "the serpent goddess Nehebka."

What then is this? They who preside at the altars are the similitude of the eye of Rā and the similitude of the eye of Horus.

"O Rā-Tmu, lord of the Great House, prince, life, strength and health of all "the gods, deliver thou [me] from the god whose face is like unto that of a dog, "whose brows are as those of a man, and who feedeth upon the dead, who watcheth

² Or instruments of death.

³ I.e., the "Oppressor."

“at the Bight of the Fiery Lake, and who devoureth the bodies of the dead and “swalloweth hearts, and who shooteth forth filth, but he himself remaineth unseen.”

Who then is this? “Devourer for millions of years” is his name, and he dwelleth in the Lake of Unt.¹ As concerning the Fiery Lake, it is that which is in Anrutf, hard by the Shenit chamber. The unclean man who would walk thereover doth fall down among the knives; or (as others say), His name is “Mathes,”² and he is the watcher of the door of Amenta; or (as others say), His name is “Heri-sep-f.”

“Hail, Lord of terror, chief of the lands of the North and South, lord of the red glow, who preparest the slaughter-block, and who dost feed upon the inward parts!”

Who then is this? The guardian of the Bight of Amenta.

What then is this? It is the heart of Osiris, which is the devourer of all slaughtered things. The urerit crown hath been given unto him with swellings of the heart as lord of Suten-ḥenen.

What then is this? He to whom hath been given the urerit crown with swellings of the heart as lord of Suten-ḥenen is Osiris. He was bidden to rule among the gods on the day of the union of earth with earth in the presence of Neb-er-tcher.

What then is this? He that was bidden to rule among the gods is [Horus] the son of Isis, who was appointed to rule in the place of his father Osiris. As to the day of the union of earth with earth, it is the mingling of earth with earth in the coffin of Osiris, the Soul that liveth in Suten-ḥenen, the giver of meat and drink, the destroyer of wrong, and the guide of the everlasting paths.

Who then is this? It is Rā himself.

“Deliver thou [me] from the great god who carrieth away souls, and who “devoureth filth and eateth dirt, the guardian of the darkness [who himself “liveth] in the light. They who are in misery fear him.”

As concerning the souls within the (113) tchafi [they are those which are] with the god who carrieth away the soul, who eateth hearts, and who feedeth (114) upon offal, the guardian of the darkness who is within the seker boat; they who live in (115) crime fear him.

Who then is this? It is Suti, or (as others say), It is Smam-ur,³ (116) the soul of Seb.

“Hail, Kheperā in thy boat, the twofold company of the gods is thy body. “Deliver thou Osiris (117) Ani, triumphant, from the watchers who give judgment, ³ I.e., Great Slayer.

“ who have been appointed by Neb-er(118)-tcher to protect him and to fasten the fetters on his foes, and who slaughter in the shambles (119); there is no escape from their grasp. May they never stab me with their knives, (120) may I never fall helpless in their chambers of torture. (121) Never have the things which the gods hate been done by me, for I am pure within the Mesqet. (122) Cakes of saffron have been brought unto him in Tanenet.”

Who then is this? (123) It is Kheperà in his boat. It is Rā himself. The watchers (124) who give judgment are the apes Isis and Nephthys. The things which the gods hate (125) are wickedness and falsehood; and he who passeth through the place of purification within the Mesqet is Anubis, who is (126) behind the chest which holdeth the inward parts of Osiris.

He to whom saffron cakes have been brought in (127) Tanenet is Osiris; or (as others say), The saffron cakes (128) in Tanenet are heaven and earth, or (as others say), They are Shu, strengthener of the two lands in (129) Sutenhenen. The saffron cakes are the eye of Horus; and Tanenet is the grave (130) of Osiris.

Tmu hath built thy house, and the two-fold Lion-god hath founded thy habitation; (131) lo! drugs are brought, and Horus purifieth and Set strengtheneth, and Set purifieth and Horus strengtheneth.

(132) “ The Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant before Osiris, hath come into the land, and hath possessed it with his feet. He is Tmu, and he is in the city.”

(133) “ Turn thou back, O Rehu, whose mouth shineth, whose head moveth, “turn thou back from before his strength”; or (as others say), Turn thou back from him who keepeth watch (134) and is unseen. “The Osiris Ani is safely guarded. “ He is Isis, and he is found (135) with [her] hair spread over him. I shake it out over his brow. He was conceived in Isis and begotten in (136) Nephthys; “and they cut off from him the things which should be cut off.”

Fear followeth after thee, terror is upon thine (137) arms. Thou art embraced for millions of years in the arms [of the nations]; mortals go round about thee. Thou smitest down the mediators of thy (138) foes, and thou seizest the arms of the powers of darkness. The two sisters (i.e., Isis and Nephthys) are given to thee for thy delight. (139) Thou hast created that which is in Kherāba, and that which is in Annu. Every god feareth thee, for thou art exceeding great and terrible; thou [avengest] every (140) god on the man that curseth him, and thou shootest out arrows. Thou livest according to thy will; thou art Uatchit, the Lady of Flame. Evil cometh (141) among those who set themselves up against thee.

What then is this? The hidden in form, granted of Menhu, (142) is the name of the tomb. He seeth [what is] in [his] hand, is the name of the shrine, or (143) (as others say), the name of the block. Now he whose mouth shineth and whose head moveth is (144) a limb of Osiris, or (as others say), of Rā. Thou spreadest thy hair and I shake it out over his brow (145) is spoken concerning Isis, who hideth in her hair and draweth her hair over her. Uatchi, the Lady of Flames, is the eye of Rā.¹

PLATES XI. AND XII.

Vignette I.: Ani and his wife Thuthu approaching the first Ārit,³ the cornice of which is ornamented with  i.e., emblems of power, life, and stability. Appendix : The several "texts" of the next eleven Pylons are wanting in this papyrus. Translations of them are here given as they are found in a papyrus published by Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 161, 162. It will be observed that the names of the doorkeepers are wanting, and also that each text, except in the case of the twenty-first Pylon, ends with words which refer to the examination of the dead at each gate.

THE ELEVENTH PYLON. "Lo, she who repeateth slaughter, the burner up of fiends, "she who is terrible at every gateway, who rejoiceth on the day of darkness. She "judgeth the feeble swathed one."

THE TWELFTH PYLON. "Lo, the invoker of the two lands, who destroyeth with "flashings and with fire those who come, the lady of splendour, who obeyeth her lord "daily. She judgeth the feeble swathed one."

THE THIRTEENTH PYLON. "Lo, Isis, who hath stretched forth her hands and arms "over it, and hath made Hāpi to shine in his hidden place. She judgeth the feeble "swathed one."

THE FOURTEENTH PYLON. "Lo, the lady of the knife, who danceth in blood ; she "maketh [the festival of] the god Hak on the day of judgment. She judgeth the feeble "swathed one."

THE FIFTEENTH PYLON. "Lo, the Bloody Soul, who searcheth out and putteth to "the test, who maketh inquiry and scrutiny, who cometh forth by night, and doth "fetter the Fiend in his lair ; may her hands be given to the Still-Heart in his hour, and "may she make him to advance and come forth unto her. She judgeth the feeble "swathed one."

THE SIXTEENTH PYLON. Saith Osiris, when he cometh unto this pylon : "Lo, the "Terrible one, the lady of the rain storm, who planteth ruin in the souls of men, the "devourer of the dead bodies of mankind, the orderer and creator of slaughters, who "cometh forth. She judgeth the feeble swathed one."

THE SEVENTEENTH PYLON. "Lo, the Hewer-in-pieces in blood, the lady of "flame. She judgeth the feeble swathed one."

THE EIGHTEENTH PYLON. "Lo, the Lover of fire, the purifier of sinners (?), the "lover of slaughter, the chief of those who adore, the lady of the temple, the slaughterer "of the fiends in the night. She judgeth the feeble bandaged one."

THE NINETEENTH PYLON. "Lo, the Dispenser of light while she liveth, the "mistress of flames, the lady of the strength and of the writings of Ptaḥ himself. She "maketh trial of the swathings of Pa-an."

THE TWENTIETH PYLON. "Lo, she who is within the cavern of her lord, Clothor "is her name ; she hideth what she hath made, she carrieth away hearts and greedily "drinketh water. She judgeth the feeble swathed one."

THE TWENTY-FIRST PYLON. "Lo, the knife which cutteth when [its name] is "uttered, and slayeth those who advance towards its flames. It hath secret plots and "counsels."

In the late recensions of the Book of the Dead,¹ the text referring to the twenty-first Pylon reads :—

(71) "Hail," saith Horus, "O twenty-first pylon of the Still-Heart. (72) I have "made the way, I know thee, I know thy name, I know the name of the goddess who "guardeth thee: 'Sword that smiteth at the utterance of its [own] name, the unknown (?) "goddess with back-turned face, the overthrower of those who draw nigh unto her flame' "is her name. Thou keepest the secret things of the avenger of the god whom thou "guardest, and his name is Āmem.² (73) He maketh it to come to pass that the persea "trees grow not, that the acacia trees bring not forth, and that copper is not begotten in "the mountain. The godlike beings of this pylon are seven gods. (74) Tchen or Āt is "the name of the one at (?) the door; *Ĥetep-mes*³ is the name of the second one; "Mes-sep⁴ is the name of the third one; Utch-re⁵ is the name of the fourth one; "Āp-uat⁶ is the name of the fifth one; Beq⁷ is the name of the sixth one; Anubis is the "name of the seventh one."

(75) "I have made the way. I am Āmsu-Horus, the avenger of his father, the heir "of his father Un-nefer. I have come and I have overthrown all foes of my father "Osiris. I have come day by day with victory, doing myself the worship of the god, "(76) in the house of his father Tmu, lord of Annu, triumphant in the southern "sky. I have done what is right and true to him that hath made right and truth; I "have made the Haker festival for the lord thereof; I have led the way in the "festival; (77) I have made offerings of cakes to the lords of the altars; and I have "brought offerings and oblations, and cakes and ale, and oxen and ducks, to my father "Osiris Un-nefer. I rise up in order that my soul may be made one wholly; I cause the "bennu bird to come forth at [my] words. I have come daily into the holy house to "make offerings of incense. (78) I have brought garments of byssus. I have set forth "on the lake in the boat. I have made Osiris, the overlord of the netherworld, to be "victorious over his enemies; and I have carried away all his foes to the place of "slaughter in the East; they shall never come forth from the durance of the god Seb "therein. (79) I have made those who stand up against Rā to be still, and [I have] "made him to be victorious. I have come even as a scribe, and I have made all things "plain. I have caused the god to have the power of his legs. I have come into the "house of him that is upon his hill,⁸ and I have seen him that is ruler in the sacred hall. "(80) I have gone into Re-stau; I have hidden myself, and I have found out the way; "I have travelled unto An-rutf. I have clothed those who are naked. (81) I have sailed "up to Abtu; I have praised the gods Hu and Sau. (82) I have entered into the house "of Astes, I have made supplication to the gods Khati and Sekhet in the house of Neith," or, as others say, "the rulers. I have entered into Re-stau; I have hidden myself, Vignette¹ [CHAPTER XVIII.—INTRODUCTION] (Upper register): The priest  An-māut-f, who has on the right side of his head the lock of Heru-pa-khrat, or Horus the Child, and who wears a leopard's skin, introducing Ani and his wife to the gods whose names are given in Plates XIII. and XIV.

Text: An-māut-f saith: “I have come unto you, O mighty and godlike rulers “who are in heaven and in earth and under the earth; (2) and I have brought “unto you Osiris Ani. He hath not sinned against any of the gods. Grant “ye that he may be with you for all time.”

(1) The adoration of Osiris, lord of Re-stau, and of the great company of the gods who are in the netherworld beside Osiris, the scribe Ani, who saith: “(2) “Homage to thee, O ruler of Amenta, Unnefer within Abtu! I have come unto “thee, and my heart holdeth right and truth. (3) There is no sin in my body; “nor have I lied wilfully, nor have I done aught with a false heart. Grant thou “to me food in the tomb, (4) and that I may come into [thy] presence at the altar “of the lords of right and truth, and that I may enter into and come forth from the “netherworld (my soul not being turned back), and that I may behold the face of “the Sun, and that I may behold the Moon (5) for ever and ever.”

Vignette (Lower register): The priest  Se-mer-f,³ who has on the right side of his head the lock of Heru-pa-khrat and wears a leopard's skin, introducing Ani and his wife to the gods whose names are given in Plates XIII. and XIV.

² Osiris is also called Ān-māut-f; see Lepsius, Todtenbuch, chap. cxlii., l. 7.

³ For the functions of this priest see above, p. 268.

Text : Se-mer-f saith : “(1) I have come unto you, O godlike rulers who “are in Re-stau, and I have brought unto you Osiris Ani. Grant ye [to him], as “to the followers of Horus, cakes and water, and air, and a homestead in “Sekhet-Hetep.”¹

(1) The adoration of Osiris, the lord of everlastingness, and of all the godlike rulers of Re-stau, by Osiris, [the scribe Ani], who (2) saith : “Homage to thee, “O king of Amenta, prince of Akert, I have come unto thee. I know thy ways, “(3) I am furnished with the forms which thou takest in the underworld. Grant “thou to me a place in the underworld near unto the lords (4) of right and truth. “May my homestead be abiding in Sekhet-hetep, and may I receive cakes in thy “presence.”

PLATE XIII.

Vignettes (Upper register) : A pylon, or gateway, surmounted by the feathers of Māat and uræi wearing disks. (Lower register) : A pylon, surmounted by Anubis  and an utchat .

Text [CHAPTER XVIII.] : [“(1) Hail Thoth, who madest Osiris (2) victorious “over his enemies, make thou Osiris [the scribe Ani] to be victorious over “his enemies, as thou didst make Osiris victorious over his enemies, in the “presence of (3) the godlike rulers who are with Rā and Osiris in Annu, on the “night of ‘the things for the night,’² and on the night of battle, and (4) on the “shackling of the fiends, and on the day of the destruction of Neb-er-tcher.”]³

§ A. Vignette : The gods Tmu, Shu, Tefnut, Osiris,⁴ and Thoth.

Text : (1) The great godlike rulers in Annu are Tmu, Shu, Tefnut [Osiris, and Thoth], (2) and the shackling of the Sebau signifieth the destruction of the fiends of Set when he worketh evil (3) a second time.

“Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious over his enemies, make thou the “Osiris (4) Ani to be victorious over his enemies in the presence of the great “divine beings who are in Tattu, on the night of making the Tat to stand up in “Tattu.”

³ This section, omitted in the Ani papyrus, is supplied from the papyrus of Nebseni.

§ B. Vignette : The gods Osiris, Isis, Nephthys, and Horus.

Text : (1) The great godlike rulers in Tattu are Osiris, Isis, Nephthys, and Horus, the avenger of his father. Now the “night of making the Tat stand (2) up in Tattu” signifieth [the lifting up of] the arm and shoulder of Osiris, lord of Sekhem ; and these gods stand behind Osiris [to protect him] even as the swathings which clothe¹ him.

(3) “Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious over his enemies, make thou “the Osiris Ani triumphant over his enemies (4) in the presence of the great “godlike rulers who are in Sekhem, on the night of the things of the night “[festival] in Sekhem.”

§ C. Vignette : The gods Osiris and Horus, two utchats upon pylons, and the god Thoth.

Text : (1) The great godlike rulers who are in Sekhem are Horus, who is without sight, and Thoth, who is with the godlike rulers in Naareruḫf. (2) Now the “night of the things of the night festival in Sekhem” signifieth the light of the rising sun on the coffin of Osiris.

“Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious (3) over his enemies, make thou the “Osiris Ani triumphant over his enemies in the presence of the great godlike “rulers in Pe and Tep,² on the (4) night of setting up the columns of Horus, and “of making him to be established the heir of the things which belonged to his “father.”

§ D. Vignette : The gods Horus, Isis, Mesthà and Hāpi.

Text : (1) The great divine rulers who are in Pe and Tep are Horus, Isis, Mesthà, and Hāpi. Now “setting up the columns (2) of Horus” [signifieth] the command given by Set unto his followers : “Set up columns upon it.”

“Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious over his enemies (3), make thou “the Osiris Ani triumphant over his enemies in the presence of the great godlike

§ F. Vignette : The gods Osiris, Isis, and Ap-uat, and the ΤΕΤ.

Text [CHAPTER XVIII.] : (1) The great godlike rulers who are in Abtu are Osiris, Isis, and Ap-uat.

“Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious (2) over his enemies, make thou the “Osiris Ani, the scribe and teller of the sacred offerings of all the gods, to be “victorious (3) over his enemies in the presence of the godlike rulers who judge the “dead, on the night of (4) the condemnation of those who are to be blotted out.”

§ G. Vignette : The gods Thoth, Osiris, Anubis, and Astennu.²

Text : (1) The great godlike rulers in the judgment of the dead are Thoth, Osiris, Anubis, and Astennu. Now (2) the “condemnation of those who are to be blotted out” is the withholding of that which is so needful to the souls of the children of impotent revolt.

§ H. Vignette: The three gods of the festival of breaking up the earth in Tattu.

Text: (1) When the fiends of Set come and change themselves into beasts, the great godlike rulers, on the festival of the breaking and turning up of the earth in Tattu, (2) slay them in the presence of the gods therein, and their blood floweth among them as they are smitten down. (3) These things are allowed to be done by them by the judgment of those who are in Tattu.

“Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious over his enemies, make thou the Osiris Ani to be victorious over his enemies in the presence of the godlike rulers (4) who are in Naáruṭef, on the night of him who concealeth himself in divers forms, even Osiris.”¹

§ I. Vignette: The gods Rā, Osiris, Shu, and Bebi,² dog-headed.

Text: (1) The great godlike rulers who are in Naáruṭef are Rā, Osiris, Shu, and Bebi.³ Now the “night of him who concealeth himself in divers forms, even Osiris,” is when the thigh [and the head], and the heel, and the leg, are brought nigh unto the coffin of Osiris Un-nefer.

“Hail, Thoth, who madest Osiris victorious (3) over his enemies, make thou the Osiris Ani (triumphant before Osiris) victorious over his enemies in the presence of the great godlike rulers who are in (4) Re-stau, on the night when Anubis lay with his arms and his hands over the things behind Osiris, and when Horus was made to triumph over his enemies.”

Appendix : In many early papyri the text of Chapter LXI. forms part of a longer composition which M. Naville calls Chapters LXI.,⁴ LX.,⁵ and LXII.,⁶ and which reads:—

(1) CHAPTER OF DRINKING WATER IN THE UNDERWORLD. [He saith]: "I, even I, am he who cometh forth from (2) Seb. The flood hath been given unto him,

³ The chapter as here given is incomplete; the missing words are :

 "pleasant for us, pleasant is the hearing, and there is gladness of heart at the weighing of words. Let not lies be spoken against me near the god, in the presence of the great god, the lord of Amentet. Verily, how great shalt thou be when thou risest up in triumph!"

“and he hath gotten power over it as Hāpi I, even I, open the (3) two doors of “heaven : and the two doors of the watery abyss have been opened unto me by Thoth “and by Hāpi, the divine twin sons of heaven, (4) who are mighty in splendours. “O grant ye that I may gain power over the water, even as Set overcame his foes on the “day(?) (5) when he terrified the world. I have passed by the great ones shoulder “against shoulder, even as they have passed by that great and splendid god who is (6) “provided [with all things] and whose name is unknown. I have passed by the mighty “one of the shoulder. (7) The flood of Osiris hath been passed through by me, and “Thoth-Hāpi-Tmu, the lord of the horizon, hath opened unto me the flood in his name, “‘Thoth, the cleaver of the earth.’ (8) I have gained power over the water, even as Set “gained power over his foes. I have sailed over heaven. I am Rā. I am the Lion-god. “I am the young bull (9). I have devoured the Thigh, I have seized the flesh. I have “gone round about the streams in Seket-Aru. Boundless eternity hath been granted “unto me, and, behold, (10) I am the heir of eternity ; to me hath been given ever- “lastingness.”

Closely connected with the above chapter are the two following short chapters :—¹

Vignette : The deceased drinking water from a running stream.

Text [CHAPTER LXIII.A.] : (1) THE CHAPTER OF DRINKING WATER AND OF NOT BEING BURNED IN THE FIRE. [The deceased] saith : “Hail, Bull of Amenta. I am “brought unto thee, I am the oar of Rā (3) wherewith he ferried over the aged ones ; let “me not be buried nor consumed. I am Beb,² (4) the first-born son of Osiris, who doth “wash every god within his eye in Annu. I am the Heir, (5) the exalted (?), the mighty “one, the Still [of Heart]. I have made my name to flourish, and I have delivered [it], “that I may make myself to live [in remembrance] on this day.”

Vignette : The deceased standing near flames of fire .

Text [CHAPTER LXIII.B.] : (1) THE CHAPTER OF NOT BEING SCALDED WITH WATER. [He saith] : “I am the oar (2) made ready for rowing, wherewith Rā ferried “over the Aged godlike ones. (3) I carry the moistures of Osiris to the lake away from “the flame which cannot be passed (4) ; he is turned aside from the path thereof and he “is not burned in the fire. I lie down with the hamemu ; (5) I come unto the Lion’s “lair, killing and binding ; and I follow the path by which he came forth.”

heart of Osiris Ani is pleasant unto the gods; he is victorious, he hath Appendix : The three following chapters, which do not occur in the Ani papyrus, form part of the group of the chapters relating to the heart. They are here supplied from Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Pl. xl., xlii., xxxix.

¹ In Naville's edition there follow the words  hab-nef ab-f xenti xat-f temam ab-f er neteru sexem am-f, “his heart goeth to inhabit his body; his heart is perfect before the gods, he gaineth possession of it.”

² The reading of Naville's edition is better here.  “Ye who steal hearts, and who make the heart of a man to come into existence according to that which hath been done by him; may it (i.e., his heart) be made strong by you.”

Text [CHAPTER XXIXA.]:¹ (1) THE CHAPTER OF THE HEART NOT BEING CARRIED AWAY IN THE UNDERWORLD. He saith: "My heart (2) is with me, and it shall never come to pass that it shall be carried away. Let me be brought to an end, may I not be carried into the " East to take part in the festivals of the fiends who are my enemies (10); may no " cruel gashes be made in me. I, Osiris, the scribe Ani, the teller of the divine " offerings of all the gods, triumphant with happy victory, the lord to be revered. " am not carried away into the East."

Text [CHAPTER XLIII.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF NOT LETTING THE HEAD OF A MAN BE CUT OFF FROM HIM IN THE UNDERWORLD. Saith Osiris Ani: (2) " I " am the great One, son of the great One; I am Fire, the son of Fire, to whom " was (3) given his head after it had been cut off. The head of Osiris was not " carried away from him; let not the head of Osiris Ani (4) be carried away from " him. I have knit together my bones, I have made myself whole and sound; " I have become young once more; I am Osiris, the Lord of eternity."

Text [CHAPTER LXXXIX.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CAUSING THE SOUL TO BE UNITED TO ITS BODY IN THE UNDERWORLD. Saith Osiris Ani: "Hail, thou god "Annitu! Hail, O Runner, (2) dwelling in thy hall! O thou great god, grant thou "that my soul may come unto me from wheresoever it may be. If it would tarry, "then bring thou unto me (3) my soul from wheresoever it may be. [If] thou findest " [me], O Eye of Horus, make thou me to stand up like those beings who are like "unto Osiris and who never lie down in death. Let not (4) Osiris Ani, triumphant, "triumphant, lie down in death in Annu, the land wherein souls are joined unto their "bodies, even in thousands. My soul doth bear away with it my victorious spirit " (5) whithersoever it goeth¹ (6) If it would tarry, grant thou that my "soul may look upon my body. [If] thou findest [me], O Eye of Horus, make thou "me to stand up like unto those¹ (7) Hail, ye gods, who row in the boat "of the lord of millions of years, who tow it (8) above the underworld, who make "it to pass over the ways of Nu, who make souls to enter into their glorified "bodies, (9) whose hands are filled with righteousness, and whose fingers grasp your "sceptres, destroy ye (10) the foe. The boat of the Sun rejoiceth, and the great "god advanceth in peace. Behold [ye gods], grant that this soul of Osiris Ani " (11) may come forth triumphant before the gods, and triumphant before you, from "the eastern horizon of heaven, to follow unto the place where it was yesterday, in "peace, in peace, in Amenta. (12) May he behold his body, may he rest in his "glorified frame, may he never perish, and may his body never see corruption."

Text [CHAPTER IX.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF COMING FORTH BY DAY, HAVING PASSED THROUGH THE TOMB. Saith Osiris Ani: "Hail Soul, thou mighty one of strength! (2) Verily I am here, I have come, I behold thee. I have passed through the underworld, I have seen [my] father (3) Osiris, I have scattered the gloom of night. I am his beloved one. I have come; I behold my father (4) Osiris. I have stabbed Set to the heart. I have done the things [needed] by my father Osiris. (5) I have opened every way in heaven and upon earth. I am the son beloved of his father Osiris (6). I have become a ruler, I have become glorious, I am furnished [with what I need]. Hail, all ye gods, and all ye shining ones, make ye a way for me, the Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant."

Text [CHAPTER CXXXII.]: THE CHAPTER OF MAKING A MAN TO RETURN TO SEE AGAIN HIS HOME UPON EARTH. Saith Osiris Ani: "I am the Lion-god (2) coming forth with strides. I have shot forth arrows, I have wounded [the prey], I have wounded the prey. I am the Eye of Horus; I have opened the (3) eye of Horus in his hour. I am come unto the furrows. Let Osiris Ani come in peace."

Text [CHAPTER X. [XLVIII.]]: ANOTHER CHAPTER OF ONE WHO COMETH FORTH BY DAY AGAINST HIS FOES IN THE UNDERWORLD. Saith Osiris Ani: "I have divided the heavens, (2) I have passed through the horizon, I have traversed the earth, [following] upon his footsteps. I am borne away by the mighty and shining ones because, behold, (3) I am furnished with millions of years which “ have magic virtues. I eat with my mouth, I chew with my jaws ; and, behold, “ (4) I am the god who is the lord of the underworld. May there be given unto “ me, Osiris Ani, that which abideth for ever without corruption.”

Text [CHAPTER XV.]: (1) A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ WHEN HE RISETH UPON THE HORIZON, AND WHEN HE SETTETH IN THE [LAND OF] LIFE. Saith Osiris, the scribe Ani : “ Homage to thee, O Rā, (2) when thou risest [as] Tmu-Ḥeru-khuti “ (Harmachis). Thou art adored [by me] when thy beauties are before mine eyes, “ and when thy shining rays (3) [fall] upon my body. Thou goest forth in peace “ in the Sektet boat with [fair] winds, and thy heart is glad ; [thou goest forth] in “ the Ātet boat, (4) and its heart is glad. Thou stridest over the heavens in peace, “ and thy foes are cast down ; the never-resting stars (5) sing hymns of praise unto “ thee, and the stars which never set glorify thee as thou (6) sinkest in the horizon “ of Manu, O thou who art beautiful in the two parts of heaven, thou lord who livest “ and art established, O my lord ! Homage to thee, O thou who art Rā when “ thou risest, and Tmu (7) when thou settest in beauty. Thou risest and shinest “ upon the back of thy mother [the sky], O thou who art crowned king (8) of the “ gods. Nut doth homage unto thee, and everlasting and never-changing order “ embraceth thee at morn and at eve. Thou stridest over the heaven, being glad “ of heart, and the Lake (9) Testes is at peace. The Fiend hath fallen to the “ ground ; his arms and his hands have been hewn off, and the knife hath severed “ the joints of his body. Rā hath a fair wind (10) ; the Sektet boat goeth forth “ and sailing along it cometh into port. The gods of the south and of the north, “ of the west and of the east praise thee, (11) from whom all forms of life came “ into being. Thou sendest forth the word, and the earth is flooded with silence, “ O thou only One, who livedst in heaven before ever the earth and the mountains

“ were made. (12) O Runner, Lord, only One, thou maker of things which are, “ thou hast moulded the tongue of the company of the gods, thou hast drawn forth “ whatsoever cometh from the waters, and thou springest up from them over the “ flooded land of the Lake of Horus (13). Make me to sniff the air which cometh “ forth from thy nostrils, and the north wind which cometh forth from thy mother “ [the Sky]. Make thou glorious my shining form, O Osiris, make thou (14) “ strong my soul. Thou art worshipped in peace, O lord of the gods, thou art “ exalted by reason of thy wondrous works. Shine with thy rays of light upon my “ body day by day, upon me, (15) Osiris, the scribe, the teller of the divine offerings “ of all the gods, the overseer of the granary of the lords of Abydos, the royal “ scribe in truth, who loveth him (i.e., Rā); Ani, triumphant in peace.”

Text [CHAPTER XV.]: (1) A HYMN OF PRAISE. “ O OSIRIS, lord of eternity, “ Un-nefer, Horus of the two horizons, whose forms are manifold, whose creations “ are without number, (2) Ptaḥ-Seker-Tem in Annu, the lord of the tomb, and the “ creator of Memphis and of the gods, the guide of the underworld, whom [the “ gods] (3) glorify when thou settest in Nut. Isis embraceth thee in peace, and “ she driveth away the fiends from the mouth of (4) thy paths. Thou turnest thy “ face upon Amenta, thou makest the world to shine as with smu metal. The “ dead rise up to behold thee, they breathe the (5) air and they look upon thy “ face when the disk shineth on its horizon; their hearts are at peace for that they “ behold thee, O thou who art eternity and everlastingness.”

[Litany]: (1) “ Homage to thee, [O lord of] starry deities in An, and of “ heavenly beings in Kher-āba; thou god Unti, who art more glorious than the “ gods who are hidden in Annu.

“ (2) Homage to thee, O An in Antes (?), Horus, thou dweller in both “ horizons, with long strides thou stridest over heaven, O thou who dwellest in “ both horizons.

“ (3) Homage to thee, O soul of everlastingness, thou Soul who dwellest in “ Tattu, Un-nefer, son of Nut; thou art lord of Akert.

“ (4) Homage to thee in thy dominion over Tattu ; the urerit crown is established upon thy head ; thou art the One whose strength is in himself, and thou dwellest in peace in Tattu.

“ (5) Homage to thee, O lord of the acacia tree, the Seker boat is set upon its sledge ; thou turnest back the Fiend, the worker of evil, and thou caustest the utchat to rest upon its seat.

“ (6) Homage to thee, O thou who art mighty in thine hour, thou great and mighty god, dweller in An-rut-f, lord of eternity and creator of everlastingness ; thou art the lord of Suten-henen.

“ (7) Homage to thee, O thou who restest upon Right and Truth, thou art the lord of Abtu, and thy limbs are joined unto Ta-sertet ; thou art he to whom fraud and guile are hateful.

“ (8) Homage to thee, O thou who art within thy boat, thou bringest Hāpi (i.e., the Nile) forth from his source ; the light shineth upon thy body, and thou art the dweller in Nekhen.

“ (9) Homage to thee, O creator of the gods, thou King of the North and of the South ; O Osiris, victorious, ruler of the world in thy gracious seasons ; thou art the lord of the world.

“ O grant thou unto me a path whereon I may pass in peace, for I am just and true ; I have not spoken lies wittingly, nor have I done aught with deceit.”

PLATE XX.

Vignette : Osiris and Isis in a sepulchral shrine.

Text [CHAPTER XV.]: (1) A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ WHEN HE RISETH IN THE EASTERN PART OF THE HEAVEN. They who are in (2) his train rejoice, and lo ! Osiris Ani in triumph saith : “ Hail, thou Disk, thou lord of rays, who risest (3) in the horizon day by day. Shine thou with thy beams of light upon the face of Osiris Ani, who is victorious ; for he singeth hymns of praise unto thee at (4) dawn, and he maketh thee to set at eventide with words of adoration. May the soul of Osiris Ani, the triumphant one, come forth with (5) thee from heaven, may he go forth in the mātet boat, may he come into port in the sektet boat, may he cleave his path among the (6) never resting stars in the heavens.”

Osiris Ani, being at peace and in triumph, adoreth his lord, the lord of (7) eternity, saying : “ Homage to thee, O Horus of the two horizons, who art

“ Kheperà, the self-created ; when thou risest on the horizon and (8) sheddest thy beams of light upon the lands of the North and the South thou art beautiful, yea beautiful, and all the gods rejoice when they behold thee, (9) the King of heaven. The goddess Nebt-Unnet is stablished upon thy head ; her portions of the south and of the north are upon thy brow (10) ; she taketh her place before thee. The god Thoth is stablished in the bows of thy boat to destroy utterly all thy foes. (11) Those who dwell in the underworld come forth to meet thee, bowing in homage as they come towards thee, and to behold [thy] beautiful (12) Image. And I have come before thee that I may be with thee to behold thy Disk every day. May I not be shut in the tomb, may I not be turned back (13), may the limbs of my body be made new again when I view thy beauties, even as do all thy favoured ones, (14) because I am one of those who worshipped thee whilst they lived upon earth. May I come in unto the land of eternity, may I come even (15) unto the everlasting land, for behold, O my lord, this hast thou ordained for me.”

And lo, Osiris Ani, triumphant in peace, the triumphant one, saith : “ (16) Homage to thee, O thou who risest in thy horizon as Rā, thou art stablished by a law which changeth not nor can it be altered. Thou passest over the sky, and every face watcheth thee (17) and thy course, for thou hast been hidden from their gaze. Thou dost show thyself at dawn and at eventide day by day. (18) The Sektet boat, wherein is thy majesty, goeth forth with might ; thy beams shine upon [all] faces ; [the number] of thy yellow rays cannot be known, nor can thy bright beams (19) be told. The lands of the gods, and the colours of the eastern lands of Punt, must be seen, ere that which is hidden (20) [in thee] may be measured [by man]. Alone and by thyself thou dost manifest thyself [when] thou comest into being above Nu. May Ani (21) advance, even as thou dost advance ; may he never cease [to go forward], even as thy majesty ceaseth not [to go forward], even though it be for a moment ; for with strides dost thou (22) in one little moment pass over the spaces which would need hundreds of thousands and millions of years [for man to pass over ; this] thou doest, and then dost thou sink down. Thou (23) puttest an end to the hours of the night, and thou dost number them, even thou ; thou endest them in thine own appointed season, and the earth becometh light. (24) Thou settest thyself before thy handiwork¹ in the likeness of Rā ;¹ thou risest in the horizon.”

¹ There is a play on the words  and Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant, declareth his (25) praise of thee when thou shinest, and when thou risest at dawn he crieth in his joy at thy birth : (26) “ Thou art crowned with the majesty of thy beauties ; thou moulded thy limbs as thou dost advance, and thou bringest them forth without birth-pangs in the form of Rā (27), as thou dost climb up into the upper air. Grant thou that I may come unto the heaven which is everlasting, and unto the mountain [where dwell] thy favoured ones. (28) May I be joined unto those shining beings, holy and perfect, who are in the underworld ; and may I come forth with them to behold thy beauties when thou shinest (29) at eventide and goest to thy mother Nut.

PLATE XXI.

“ Thou dost place thy disk in the west, and my two hands are [raised] in adoration [of thee] when thou settest (30) as a living being. Behold, thou art the maker of eternity, and thou art adored [when] thou settest in the heavens. I have given my heart unto thee without wavering, (31) O thou who art mightier than the gods.”

Osiris Ani, triumphant, saith : “ A hymn of praise to thee, O thou who risest (32) like unto gold, and who dost flood the world with light on the day of thy birth. Thy mother giveth thee birth upon [her] hand, and thou dost give light unto the course of the Disk. (33) O thou mighty Light, who shinest in the heavens, thou dost strengthen the generations of men with the Nile-flood, and dost cause gladness in all lands, and in all (34) cities, and in all the temples. Thou art glorious by reason of thy splendours, and thou makest strong thy ka with hu and tchefau foods. O thou who art the mighty one of victories, (35) thou who art the Power of [all] Powers, who dost make strong thy throne against the powers of wickedness, who art glorious in majesty in the sektet boat, and who art exceeding (36) mighty in the ātet boat, make thou glorious Osiris Ani with victory in the netherworld ; grant thou that in the underworld he may be void of (37) sin. I pray thee to put away [his] faults behind thee ; grant that he may be one of thy venerable (38) servants who are with the shining ones ; may he be joined unto the souls which are in Ta-sertet ; and may he journey into the Sekhet-Aaru (39) by a prosperous and happy path, he the Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant.

“ (40) Thou shalt come forth into heaven, thou shalt pass over the sky, thou shalt be joined unto the starry deities. (41) Praises shall be offered unto thee in thy boat, thou shalt be hymned in the ātet boat, (42) thou shalt behold Rā within “ day by day. Behold, thou Image of gold, who possessest the splendours (8) of “ the Disk of heaven, thou lord of terror ; thou rollest along and art renewed day by “ day. Hail, there (9) is rejoicing in the heavenly horizon, and shouts of joy are “ raised to the ropes which tow thee along. May the gods who dwell in (10) heaven “ ascribe praises unto Osiris Ani, when they behold him in triumph, as unto Rā.

 “ May Osiris, the scribe Ani, be a prince (11) who is known by the ureret crown ;
 “ and may the meat offerings and the drink offerings of Osiris Ani, triumphant, “ be apportioned unto him ; may he wax exceeding strong in his body ; and may he “ be the (12) chief of those who are in the presence of Rā. May Osiris, the “ scribe Ani, triumphant, be strong upon earth and in the world under the earth ;
 “ and (13) O Osiris, scribe Ani, triumphant, mayest thou rise up strengthened “ like unto Rā day by day. Osiris Ani, triumphant, shall not tarry, (14) nor shall “ he rest without motion in the earth for ever. Clearly, clearly shall he see with “ his two eyes, and with his two ears shall he hear what is right and true.
 “ (15) Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant, cometh back, cometh back from Annu ; “ Osiris Ani, triumphant, is as Rā when he rangeth the oars (16) among the “ followers of Nu.

PLATE XXII.

“ Osiris Ani, triumphant, hath not revealed what he hath seen, (17) he hath “ not, he hath not told again what he hath heard in the house which is hidden.
 “ Hail, there are shouts of joy to Osiris Ani, triumphant, (18) for he is a god and
 “ the flesh of Rā, he is in the boat of Nu, and his ka is well pleased according to “ the will of the god. (19) Osiris Ani, triumphant, is in peace, he is triumphant like “ unto Horus, and he is mighty because he hath divers forms.”

Vignette : Rā seated in a boat, sailing across the sky towards the star-studded heaven.

Rubric : These words shall be recited over a boat (20) seven cubits in length, and painted green for the godlike rulers. Then shalt thou make a heaven of stars (21) washed and purified with natron and incense. Behold, thou shalt make an image (22) of Rā upon a table of stone painted yellow (?), and it shall be placed in the fore-part of the boat. (23) Behold, thou shalt make an image of the dead man whom thou wilt make perfect in strength (24) in the boat ; and thou shalt make it to travel in the divine boat of Rā, (25) and Rā himself will look upon it therein. Thou shalt show it to no man but thyself, (26) or to thy father or to thy son ; let them watch with their faces, and he shall be seen in the underworld as a messenger of Rā.

Vignette : Rā, hawk-headed, with a disk upon his head, seated in a boat ; before him is a large disk.

Text [CHAPTER CXXXIV.]: (1) A HYMN OF PRAISE TO RĀ ON THE DAY OF THE MONTH WHEREON HE SAILETH IN THE BOAT. [Osiris, the scribe Ani, saith]: “ Homage to thee, O thou who art in thy boat! Thou risest, thou risest, (2) thou shinest with thy rays, and thou hast made mankind to rejoice for millions of years according to thy will. Thou showest thy face unto the beings whom thou hast created, O Kheperā, (3) in thy boat. Thou hast overthrown Āpepi. O ye children of Seb, overthrow ye the foes of Osiris (4) Ani, triumphant, destroy ye the adversaries of righteousness from the boat of Rā. Horus shall cut off your (5) heads in heaven in the likeness of ducks ; ye shall fall down upon the earth and become beasts, and into the water in the likeness of fishes. [Osiris, the scribe Ani,] destroyeth every hostile fiend, male (6) and female, whether he passeth through heaven, [or] appeareth (7) upon earth, or cometh forth upon the water, or passeth along before the starry deities ; and Thoth strengtheneth them (8) coming forth from Anreti. Osiris, the scribe Ani, is silent, and becometh the second of Rā. Behold thou the god, the great slaughterer, (9) greatly to be feared, he washeth in your blood, he batheth in your gore ; Osiris, (10) the scribe Ani, destroyeth them from the boat of his father Rā-Horus. The mother Isis giveth birth unto Osiris, the scribe (11) Ani, triumphant, whose heart liveth, and Nephthys nurseth him (12) ; even as they did for Horus, who drove back the fiends of Sut. They saw (13) the urertu crown stablished upon his head, and they fell down upon their faces. Behold, O ye shining ones, ye men (14) and gods, ye damned ones, when ye behold Osiris Ani, triumphant like unto Horus and adored (15) by reason of the ureret crown, fall ye down upon your faces ; for Osiris Ani is victorious (16) over his foes in the heavens above and [on the earth] beneath, in the presence of the godlike rulers (17) of all the gods and goddesses.”

Rubric : These words shall be recited over a great hawk which hath the white crown set upon his head. Then shall the names of Tmu, (18) Shu, Tefnut, Seb, Nut, Osiris, Isis, Nephthys, be written with green colour upon a (19) new table, anointed with unguents and placed in a boat together with a figure of the dead man (20). Then shall they put incense upon the fire, and set ducks to be roasted (21). This is a rite of Rā when his boat cometh; and it shall cause the dead man to go with Rā into every place whithersoever he saileth, and the foes of Rā shall be (22) slaughtered in very truth. The Chapter of the sektet boat shall be recited on the sixth day of the festival.

Vignette : The ladder by which the soul passes from the underworld to the body.¹

PLATE XXIII. AND PLATE XXIV. (1).

The whole of Plate XXIII. and part of Plate XXIV. contain a repetition of the XVIIIth Chapter of the "Book of the Dead," which has also been given on Plates XIII. and XIV. The arrangement of the gods in the vignette is, however, slightly different.

PLATE XXIV. (2).

Vignette : Ani and his wife adoring three gods, who are seated on a pylon or door-shaped pedestal.

Text [CHAPTER CXXIV.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF GOING UNTO THE GOD-LIKE RULERS OF OSIRIS. Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant, saith: "My soul hath " builded for me a (2) dwelling-place in Tattu. I have waxed strong in the town " Pe. I have ploughed [my] fields in all my forms, and my palm tree standeth " therein like unto the god Amsu. I eat not that which I abominate, (3) I eat not " that which I loathe; that which I abominate I abominate, and I feed not upon " filth. (4) There are food offerings and meat for those who shall not be destroyed " thereby. I raise not up myself on my two arms unto any abomination, I walk " not thereupon (5) with my shoes, because my bread is [made] from white grain, " and my ale from the red (6) barley of the Nile. The sektet boat and the ātet " boat bring them unto me, and I feed upon them (7) under the trees, whose " beautiful branches I myself do know. (8) How glorious do I make the white " crown [when] I lift up the uræi! (9) Hail, guardian of the door, who givest peace " unto the two lands, bring thou unto me those who make offerings! Grant that

“ I may (10) lift up the earth ; that the shining ones may open their arms unto me ; that the company of the gods may (11) speak with the words of the shining ones unto Osiris Ani ; that the hearts of the gods may direct [him] (12) ; and that they may make him powerful in heaven among the gods who have taken unto themselves visible forms. (13) Yea, let every god and every goddess whom he passeth make Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant at the new year. He feedeth upon hearts (14) and consumeth them when he cometh forth from the east. He hath been judged by the forefather of Light. He is (15) a shining one arrayed in heaven among the mighty ones. The food of Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant, is even (16) the cakes and ale which are made for their mouths. I go in through the Disk, I come out through the god Ahui. I speak with the followers (17) of the gods, I speak with the Disk, I speak with the shining ones, and the Disk granteth me to be victorious in the (18) blackness of night within Meh-urt near unto his forehead. Behold, I am with Osiris, and I (19) proclaim that which he telleth forth among the mighty ones. He speaketh unto me the words of men, and I listen and (20) I tell again unto him the words of the gods. I, Osiris Ani, triumphant, come even as one who is equipped for the journey. Thou raisest up [right and truth] (21) for those who love them. I am a shining one clothed in power, mightier than any other shining one.”

PLATE XXV.

Vignette : A swallow perched on a conical object painted red and green.

Text [CHAPTER LXXXVI.] : (1) HERE BEGIN THE CHAPTERS OF MAKING TRANSFORMATIONS. THE CHANGING INTO A SWALLOW. (2) Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant : “ I am the swallow, [I am] the swallow, [I am] the scorpion, the daughter of Rā. (3) Hail, ye gods, whose scent is sweet ; hail, ye gods, whose scent is sweet ! Hail, thou Flame, which comest forth from (4) the horizon ! Hail, thou who art in the city. May the Guardian of the Bight lead me on. O stretch out up unto me (5) thine hands that I may be able to pass my days in the Island of Flame. I have fared forth with my warrant. I have come with the power thereof. Let the doors be opened unto me (6). How shall I tell what I have seen therein ? Horus was like unto the prince of the sacred bark, and the throne of his father was given unto him. Sut, the son of Nut, also hath gotten the fall which he (7) wrought for Horus. He who is in Sekhem passed judgment upon me. I stretched out my hands and my arms unto Osiris. I have passed on

“ to judgment, (8) and I have come that I may speak ; grant that I may pass on “ and deliver my message. I enter in, having been judged ; I come out (9) at “ the door of Neb-er-tcher magnified and glorified. I am found pure at the Great “ place of passage [of souls]. I have put away my faults. (10) I have done away “ mine offences. I have cast out the sins which were a part of me. I, even I, am “ pure, (11) I, even I, am mighty. O ye doorkeepers, I have made my way [unto “ you]. I am like unto you. I have come forth by day. I have walked with my “ legs, and I have gotten the power of the footstep wherewith do walk the shining “ ones of light (12). I, even I, know the hidden ways to the doors of the Field
 “ of Aaru ; and (13), though my body be buried, yet let me rise up ; and may I

Appendix¹ : Rubric. If this chapter be known [by the deceased], he shall come forth by day in Neter-khert, and he shall go in again after he hath come forth. If this chapter be not known, he shall not enter in after he hath come forth, nor shall he come forth by day.

Text [CHAPTER LXXVII.] : (1) CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO A GOLDEN HAWK. Saith Osiris Ani : “ (2) May I, even I, arise in the seshet chamber, like “ unto a hawk of gold (3) coming forth from his egg. May I fly and may I hover
 “ as a hawk, with a back seven (4) cubits wide, and with wings made of emeralds
 “ of the South. May I come forth from the sektet boat (5), and may my heart be “ brought unto me from the mountain of the east. May I alight on the ātet boat,
 “ and may those who are in (6) their companies be brought unto me, bowing down
 “ as they come. May I rise, may I gather myself together (7) as the beautiful “ golden hawk [which hath] the head of a bennu bird. May I enter into the “ presence of Rā daily to hear his words, and may I sit down among the (8) mighty “ gods of Nut. May a homestead be made ready for me, and may offerings of “ food and drink be put before me therein. May I eat therein ; (9) may I become “ a shining one therein ; may I be filled therein to my heart’s fullest desire ; may “ sacred wheat be given unto me to eat. May I, by myself, get power over the “ guardian of my head.”

Text [CHAPTER LXXVIII.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO A SACRED HAWK. Saith Osiris Ani : (2) "Hail, thou mighty one, come unto Tattu. " Make thou my paths, and let me pass round [to visit] my (3) thrones. Make me " to renew myself and make me to wax strong. (4) Grant that I may be feared, " and make me to be a terror. May the gods of the underworld fear me, and " may they fight for me in their (5) habitations. Let not him that would do harm " unto me draw nigh unto me. Let me walk through the house of darkness. " May I (6), the feeble, clothe and cover myself; and may they (i.e., the gods) " not do the like unto me. Hail, ye gods who hear my speech! Hail, ye rulers " who are among the followers of Osiris. Be ye therefore silent, O ye gods, " [when] the god speaketh with me; he heareth what is right and (7) true. " What I speak unto him, do thou also speak, O Osiris. Grant thou that I may " go round my course according to the order which cometh forth from thy mouth " concerning me. May I see thy forms; (8) may I be able to understand thy will. " Grant that I may come forth, that I may get power over my legs, and that I " may be like unto Neb-er-tcher (9) upon his throne. May the gods of the " underworld fear me, and may they fight for me in their habitations. Grant " thou that I may pass on my way with the godlike ones who rise up (10). " May I be set up upon my resting-place like unto the Lord of Life; may I be " joined unto Isis, the divine Lady. May the gods (11) make me strong against " him that would do harm unto me, and may no one come to see me fall helpless. " May I pass over the paths (12), may I come into the furthestmost parts of " heaven. I entreat for speech with Seb, I make supplication unto Hu (13) and " unto Neb-er-tcher that the gods of the underworld may fear me, and that they " may fight for me in their habitations, when they see that thou hast (14) provided " me with the fowl of the air and the fish of the sea.

" I am one of those shining ones who live in rays of light. (15) I have made " my form like unto the form [of the god] who cometh out and manifesteth himself " in Tattu; for I have become worthy of honour by reason of his honour, (16) and " he hath spoken unto thee of the things which concern me. Surely he hath made " the fear of me [to go forth], and hath created terror of me! The gods of the PLATE XXVI.

" underworld fear me, and they (17) fight for me [in their habitations]. I, in very " truth I am a shining one and a dweller in light, who hath been created and who " hath come into being (18) from the body of the god. I am one of the shining “ ones who dwell in light, whom (19) Tmu himself hath created, and who have “ come into being from the eyelashes of his eye. He doth create and glorify

 “ and make noble the faces of those who live with him. (20) Behold, the only “ One in Nu! They do homage unto him as he cometh forth from the horizon, “ and they strike fear of him into the gods (21) and into the shining ones who “ have come into being with him.

“ I am the One among the worms which the eye of the Lord, the only One,
 “ hath created. And lo! (22) before Isis was, and when Horus was not yet, I “ had waxed strong and flourished. I had grown old, and I had become greater “ (23) than they who were among the shining ones who had come into being with “ him, and I, even I, arose in the form of a sacred hawk (24), and Horus made “ me worthy in the form of his own soul, to take possession of all that belongeth “ unto Osiris in the underworld. The double Lion-god, (25) the warder of the “ things that belong to the house of the nemmes crown which is in his hiding “ place, saith unto me: ‘Get thee back to the heights of heaven, seeing that “ through Horus (26) thou hast become glorified in thy form; the nemmes crown
 “ is not for thee; thou hast speech even unto the ends (27) of heaven.’ I, the “ guardian, take possession of the things which belong to Horus and Osiris in the “ underworld. Horus telleth aloud unto me that which (28) his father had said “ concerning me in years [gone by], on the day of the burial [of Osiris]. I have “ given unto thee the nemmes of the double Lion-god which I possess, (29) that “ thou mayest pass onward and mayest travel over the path of heaven, and that “ they who dwell on the confines of the horizon may see thee, and that the gods “ of the underworld may fear thee (30) and may fight for thee in their habitations.
 “ The god Auhet is of them. The gods, the lords of the boundaries of heaven, “ they who are the warders (31) of the shrine of the lord, the only One, have “ fallen before my words, have fallen down before [my] words. Hail! He that “ is exalted upon his tomb is on my side, and he hath bound upon my head the “ nemmes crown. (32) The double Lion-god hath decreed it, the god Auhet “ hath made a way for me. I, even I, am exalted, and the double Lion-god hath “ bound the nemmes crown on me, and (33) my head covering hath been given unto “ me. He hath stablished my heart through his strength and through his great might,
 “ and I shall not (34) fall through Shu. I am Hetep, the lord of the two uræi, the “ being who is adored. I know the shining god, (35) and his breath is in my body. I “ shall not be driven back by the Bull which causeth men to tremble, but I shall come “ daily into the house of the double Lion-god, and I shall come forth therefrom into “ the house of Isis. I shall behold sacred things which are hidden, there shall be “ done unto me holy (37) hidden rites, I shall see what is there ; my words shall “ make full the majesty of Shu, and they shall drive away evil hap. (38) I, even I, “ am Horus who dwell in splendours. I have gained power over his crown, I have “ gained power over his radiance (39), and I have travelled over the remotest parts “ of heaven. Horus is upon his throne, Horus is upon his seat. My (40) face is “ like unto that of a divine hawk. I am one who hath been armed by his lord. I “ have come forth from Tattu. I have seen Osiris, I have risen up on (41) either “ side of him. Nut [hath shrouded me]. The gods behold me, and I have “ beheld the gods. The eye of Horus hath consumed me, who dwell in darkness.

 “ The gods (42) stretch forth their arms unto me. I rise up, I get the mastery,
 “ and I drive back evil which opposeth me. The gods open unto me the holy “ (43) way, they see my form, and they hear my words which I utter in their “ presence. O ye gods of the underworld, who set yourselves up against me, (44)
 “ and who resist the mighty ones, the stars which never set have led me on my “ way. I have passed along the holy paths of the hemtet chamber unto your “ lord, (45) the exceedingly mighty and terrible Soul. Horus hath commanded “ that ye lift up your faces to (46) look upon me. I have risen up in the likeness of “ a divine hawk, and Horus hath set me apart in the likeness of his own soul, to “ take possession of that which belongeth unto Osiris in the underworld. (47) I “ have passed along the way, I have travelled on and I have come even among those “ who live in their hiding places and who guard the house of Osiris. (48) I speak “ unto them of his power and I make them to know the terrible power of him that “ is provided with two horns [to fight] against Sut ; and they (49) know who hath “ carried off the sacred food which the power (?) of Tmu had brought for him.
 “ The gods of the underworld have proclaimed (50) a happy coming for me. O “ ye who live in your hiding places and who guard the house of Osiris, and who “ have magnified your names, (51) grant ye that I may come unto you. I bind “ together and I gather up your powers, and I order the strength of the paths of “ those who guard the (52) horizon of the hemtet of heaven. I have stablished “ their habitations for Osiris, I have ordered his ways, I have done what hath been “ bidden. (53) I have come forth from Tattu, I have beheld Osiris, I have spoken “ unto him concerning the things of his son, the divine Prince whom he loveth.
 “ There is a wound in the heart of Set, (54) and I have seen him who is without “ life. O, I have made them to know the plans of the gods which Horus hath “ devised (55) at the bidding of his father Osiris. Hail, lord, thou most terrible

“and mighty soul! Let me come, even me, (56) let me lift myself up! I have opened and passed through the underworld. I have opened the paths of the warders (57) of heaven and of the warders of the earth. I have not been driven back by them; and I have lifted up thy face, O lord of eternity.”

Appendix : The following is the end of the LXXVIIIth chapter according to the Paris papyrus quoted by Naville (Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 89, ll. 43-48):—

“Thou art exalted upon thy throne, O Osiris. Thou hearest joyful things, O Osiris. Thy strength is vigorous, O Osiris. Thy head is bound to thy body, O Osiris. Thy brow is made firm, O Osiris. Thy heart is joyful. O be thou pleased to establish gladness for thy servants. Thou art stablished as a bull of Amenta. Thy son Horus is crowned king upon thy throne; all life is with him. Unto thy son are given millions of years, and the fear of him shall endure for untold ages. The company of the gods shall fear him. Unto thy son is given of the company of the gods; he changeth not his word. Horus is the food and the altar. I go to unite myself unto [my] father; and deliverance cometh from [my] father, from [my] brother, and from the friend of Horus. Horus is in the following of his father. He dwelleth amid decay. He ruleth Khem. To thy son have the gods given the crown of millions of years, and for millions of years it maketh him to live in the eye [of Horus], the single eye of the god [which is called] Nebt-er-tcher, the queen of the gods.”

Text [CHAPTER LXXIX.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF BEING AMONG THE COMPANY OF THE GODS AND OF BEING CHANGED INTO THE (2) PRINCE OF THE GODLIKE RULERS. [The deceased] saith: “Homage to thee, O Tmu, (3) lord of heaven, thou creator of things which are and which come forth from the earth; who makest to come into being that which is sown, the lord of things which shall be, the begetter of the gods, the great god (4) who made himself, the lord of life who maketh mankind to flourish. Homage to you, O ye lords of creation, ye pure beings whose abodes (5) are hidden. Homage to you, O ye lords of eternity, whose forms are hidden, and whose dwelling-places are unknown. (6) Homage to you, O ye gods who dwell in the abode(?) of the flooded lands. Homage to you, O ye gods who live in the underworld. Homage to you, O ye gods who dwell in heaven. (7) Grant ye that I may come [unto you], for I know you. I am pure, I am holy, I am mighty, I have a soul, (8) I have become powerful, I am glorious; I have brought unto you perfume, and incense, and natron. Blot out from your hearts (9) whatsoever ye have in them against me. I have come, having done away all the evil which dwelleth in your hearts against me, I have made an end of all the sin which I committed (10) against you; I have brought unto you that which is good, I have made to come unto you that which is right and true. I, even I, know (11) you, I know your names, I know your forms which are not known, which come into being (12) with you. I have come unto you.

“I have risen among men like unto the god, living among the (13) gods. I am strong
 “before you like unto the god who is exalted upon his resting-place; when he cometh
 “the gods rejoice, and goddesses and mortal women (14) are glad when they behold him.
 “I have come unto you. I have risen (15) upon the throne of Rā, I sit upon my seat “in the horizon. I receive offerings upon my altar, (16) I drink drink-offerings at “eventide as one made noble by the lord of mortals. I am exalted (17) even as the holy “god, the lord of the great House. The gods rejoice when they see him in his (18)
 “beautiful manifestation on the body of Nut, who giveth birth unto him daily.”

Vignette : The serpent Seta, with human legs.

Text [CHAPTER LXXXVII.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO SETA. Osiris Ani, triumphant, saith: “I am the serpent Seta, whose years are many. “I lie down and I am born day by day. I am (3) the serpent Seta, which “dwelleth in the limits of the earth. I lie down, I am born, (4) I renew myself, “I grow young day by day.”

Text [CHAPTER LXXXVIII.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO A CROCODILE. Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant: (2) “I am the crocodile which dwelleth “in terror, I am the sacred crocodile and I cause destruction. (3) I am the great “fish in Kamui. I am the lord to whom homage (4) is paid in Sekhem; and “Osiris Ani is the lord to whom homage is paid in Sekhem.”

Vignette : The god Ptaḥ  in a shrine, before which is a table of offerings.

Text [CHAPTER LXXXII.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO PTAḤ. Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant: “I eat bread, (2) I drink ale, I put on apparel, (3) “I fly like a hawk, I cackle like a goose, and I alight upon the path (4) hard “by the hill of the dead on the festival of the great Being. That which is “abominable, that which is abominable, have I not eaten; and that which (5) is “foul have I not swallowed. That which my ka doth abominate hath not entered “into my body. I have lived according to the (6) knowledge of the glorious gods. “I live and I get strength from their bread, I get strength when I eat it beneath “the (7) shade of the tree of Hathor, my lady. I make an offering, and I make “bread in Tattu, and oblations in (8) Annu. I array myself in the robe of the “goddess Mātaït, and I rise up and I sit me down wheresoever my heart “desireth (9). My head is like unto the head of Rā; when my limbs are gathered “together, I am like unto Tmu. The four regions of Rā are the limits of the earth. I come forth; my tongue (10) is like unto the tongue of Ptaḥ, my throat is even as that of Hathor, and I tell forth the words of my father Tmu with my lips. He it is who constrained (11) the handmaid, the wife of Seb; and unto him are bowed [all] heads, and there is fear of him. Hymns of praise are sung in honour of my mighty deeds (12), and I am accounted the heir of Seb, the lord of the earth, the protector. The god Seb giveth cool water, he maketh his dawns to be mine. They who dwell in (13) Annu bow down their heads before me, for I am their bull. I grow strong from moment to moment; my loins are made strong for millions of years.”

Text [CHAPTER LXXXV.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO THE SOUL OF TMU. Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant: (2) “I have not entered into the house of destruction; I have not been brought to naught, I have not known decay. I am (3) Rā who come forth from Nu, the divine Soul, the creator of his own limbs. Sin is an abomination unto me, (4) and I look not thereon; I cry not out against right and truth, but I have my being (5) therein. I am the god Ḥu, and I never die (6) in my name of ‘Soul.’ I have brought myself into being together with Nu in my name of (7) ‘Kheperá.’ In their forms have I come into being in the likeness of Rā. I am the lord of light.”

Appendix : In other ancient papyri the LXXXVth Chapter of the Book of the Dead ends as follows (Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 97):—

“What I hate shall be buried (5). Let me not enter into the secret place of the god Tuaa. I ascribe glory unto Osiris, and I pacify the heart of those who dwell in the god of creation, who love me, who spread (6) abroad fear of me, and who strike terror of me into those who dwell in their own places. Behold me, for I am exalted upon my resting-place, Nu, (7) upon the place which is adjudged unto me. I am Nu, and those who work evil shall not overthrow me. I am the eldest and the first-born son of matter; my (8) soul is the gods, who are the eternal souls. I am the creator of darkness who maketh his dwelling-place in the limits of the regions of heaven. I come, and my soul advanceth (9) over the way of the Ancient Ones. I cause darkness in the limits of the sky, and at my will I come unto the boundaries thereof. I walk upon my feet, I am strong (10) to pass over the sky, and I fetter with bonds the darkness and the worm that hideth therein. I make my steps to advance unto the lord of the two hands(?) My soul (11) and the soul of my body are the uræi, and I live for “ever, the lord of years, and the prince of eternity. I am exalted as lord of the earth, I am exalted (?). I grow young in (12) the cities, I grow youthful in my homestead, my name is ‘My name decayeth not.’ I am the Soul, the creator of Nu, who maketh his dwelling-place in (13) Neter-khert. My nest is not seen, my egg is not broken. I am the lord of millions of years. I make my nest in the limits of heaven. I descend unto the earth of Seb (14). I do away with my faults. I behold my father, the lord of Māsh; and his body breatheth in Annu. I am provided with what I need (15) by Khnemu and Khui in the place of burial “in Amenta”

Vignette: A bennu bird

Text [CHAPTER LXXXIII.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO A bennu. Saith Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant in peace: “I came into being from unformed matter, (2) I created myself in the image of the god Kheperā, and I grew in the form of plants. I am hidden in the likeness of the Tortoise. I am formed out of the atoms of all the gods. (3) I am the yesterday of the four [quarters of the world], and I am the seven uræi which came into existence in the East, the mighty one who illumineth the nations (4) by his body. He is god in the likeness of Set; and Thoth dwelleth in the midst of them by (5) judgment of the dweller in Sekhem and of the spirits of Annu. I sail (6) among them, and I come; I am crowned, I am become a shining one, (7) I am mighty, I am become holy among the gods. I am the god Khonsu who driveth back all that opposeth him.”

Appendix: The following rubric to this chapter is found in a papyrus at Paris; see Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. II., Bl. 185:—

If this chapter be known, the purified one shall come forth by day after his burial, and he shall change his forms at his heart's desire. He shall dwell among the servants of Un-nefer, and he shall be satisfied with the food of Osiris, and with the meals of the tomb. He shall behold the disk of the Sun, and shall travel over the earth with Rā. He shall be triumphant before Osiris, and there shall no evil thing get dominion over him for ever and for all eternity and for ever.

PLATE XXVIII.

Text [CHAPTER LXXXIV.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF CHANGING INTO A HERON. Saith Osiris, the scribe Ani: (2) “I have gotten dominion over the beasts which are brought for sacrifice, with the knife held at their heads and their hair, (3) for “ those who dwell in their emerald [fields], the ancient and the shining ones who “ make ready (4) the hour of Osiris Ani, triumphant in peace. He maketh “ slaughter upon earth, and I make slaughter upon earth. I am strong, and I have “ passed along the (5) lofty path [which leadeth] unto heaven. I have made myself “ pure, with long strides I have gone unto my city, holding on my way to Sepu (?).

 “ (6) I have stablished [the one who is] in Unnu. I have set the gods upon their “ places, and I have made glorious the temples of those who live in their shrines.
 “ (7) I know the goddess Nut, I know the god Tatenen, I know Teshert, I have “ brought with me their horns. I know (8) Heka, I have heard his words, I am the “ red calf which is limned with the pen. When they hear [my words], the gods “ say : (9) ‘ Let us bow down our faces, and let him come unto us ; the light shineth “ beyond you.’ My hour is within my body. (10) I have not spoken [evil] in “ the place of right and truth, and each day I advance in right and truth. I am “ shrouded in darkness when I sail up to celebrate the festival of the (11) dead
 “ one, and to embalm the Aged one, the guardian of the earth—I the Osiris, the “ scribe Ani, triumphant ! I have not entered into (12) the hiding places of the “ starry deities. I have ascribed glory unto Orisis. I have pacified the heart of “ the gods who follow after him. I have not felt fear (13) of those who cause “ terror, even those who dwell in their own lands. Behold, I am exalted (14) upon “ [my] resting place upon my throne. I am Nu, and I shall never be overthrown
 “ by the Evil-doer. I am the god Shu (15) who sprang from unformed matter.
 “ My soul is god ; my soul is eternity. I am the creator of darkness, and I (16)
 “ appoint unto it a resting place in the uttermost parts of heaven. I am the prince “ of eternity, I am the exalted one [in] Nebu. I grow young in [my] city, (17) I “ grow young in my homestead. My name is ‘ Never-failing.’ My name is ‘ Soul, “ Creator of Nu, who maketh (18) his abode in the underworld.’ My nest is not “ seen, and I have not broken my egg. I am lord of millions of years. I have “ made my nest (19) in the uttermost parts of heaven. I have come down unto
 “ the earth of Seb. I have done away with my faults. I have seen my father “ (20) as the lord of Shāutat. As concerning Osiris Ani, may his body dwell in “ Annu ; may it be manifested unto those who are with the Shining One in the “ place of burial in Amenta.”

Text [CHAPTER LXXXIA.]: (1) [THE CHAPTER OF] CHANGING INTO A LOTUS. Saith Osiris Ani : “ I am the (2) pure lotus which cometh forth from the “god of light, the guardian of the nostrils of Rā, the guardian (3) of the nose of Hathor. I advance and I hasten (4) after him who is Horus. I am the “pure one who cometh forth from the field.”

Vignette : A god with a disk upon his head.

Text [CHAPTER LXXX.]: (1) [THE CHAPTER OF] CHANGING INTO THE GOD WHO GIVETH LIGHT IN THE DARKNESS. Saith Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant : “I am (2) the girdle of the robe of the god Nu, which shineth and sheddeth light, which abideth in his presence and sendeth forth light into the darkness, which knitteth together the two fighters (3) who live in my body through the mighty spell of the words of my mouth, which raiseth up him that hath fallen— for (4) he who was with him in the valley of Abtu hath fallen—and I rest. I have remembered him. (5) I have carried away the god Hu from my city wherein I found him, (6) and I have led away the darkness captive by my might. I have upheld the Eye [of the Sun] when its power waned (7) at the coming of the festival of the fifteenth day, and I have weighed Sut in the heavenly mansions beside the Aged one who is with him. I have endowed (8) Thoth in the House of the Moon-god with all that is needful for the coming of the festival of the fifteenth day. I have carried off the ureret crown; right and truth are in my body. (9) The months are of emerald and crystal. My homestead is among the sapphire furrows. (10) I am the lady who sheddeth light in darkness. I have come to give forth light in darkness, and lo! it is lightened and made bright. I have illumined the blackness (11) and I have overthrown the destroyers. I have made obeisance unto those who are in darkness, and I have raised up (12) those who wept and who had hidden their faces and had sunk down. Then did they look upon me. I am the Lady, and “I will not let you hear concerning me.”

Text [CHAPTER CLXXV.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF NOT DYING A SECOND TIME. Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant : “(2) Hail, Thoth! What is it that hath happened unto the holy children of Nut? (3) They have done battle, they have upheld “ strife, they have done evil, (4) they have created the fiends, they have made “ slaughter, they have caused (5) trouble ; in truth, in all their doings the mighty “ have worked against the weak. (6) Grant, O might of Thoth, that that which “ the god Tmu hath decreed [may be done]! And thou regardest not evil, nor “ art thou (7) provoked to anger when they bring their years to confusion and “ throng in and push to disturb their months ; for in all that they have done

 “ (8) unto thee they have worked iniquity in secret. I am thy writing palette, “ O Thoth, and I have brought unto thee thine ink jar. I am not (9) of those who “ work iniquity in their secret places ; let not evil happen unto me.”

Saith Osiris, the scribe Ani : (10) “ Hail, Tmu ! What manner [of land] is this “ into which I have come ? It hath not water, it hath not air ; it is deep unfathom“ able, (11) it is black as the blackest night, and men wander helplessly therein.
 “ In it a man may not live in quietness of heart ; nor may the longings of love be “ satisfied therein. (12) But let the state of the shining ones be given unto me for “ water and for air and for the satisfying of the longings of love, and let quiet“ ness of heart be given unto me for bread (13) and for ale. The god Tmu hath “ decreed that I shall see his face, and that I shall not suffer from the things which “ pain him. May the gods hand on (14) their thrones for millions of years.
 “ Thy throne hath descended unto thy son Horus. The god Tmu hath decreed “ that his course shall be among the holy princes. (15) In truth, he shall rule “ over thy throne, and he shall be heir of the throne of the dweller in the Lake of “ Fire. It hath been decreed that in me he shall see his likeness, and that (16)
 “ my face shall look upon the lord Tmu. How long then have I to live ? It is “ decreed that thou shalt live for millions of millions of years, a life of millions of “ years. (17) May it be granted that I pass on unto the holy princes, for I am “ doing away with all that I did when this earth came into being from Nu (18), and “ when it sprang from the watery abyss even as it was in the days of old. I “ am Fate (?) and Osiris, and I have changed my form into the likeness of divers “ serpents (19). Man knoweth not, and the gods cannot see, the two-fold beauty “ which I have made for Osiris, who is greater than all the gods. I have granted
 “ that he [shall rule] in the mount of the dead (20). Verily his son Horus is seated “ upon the throne of the dweller in the double Lake of Fire, as his heir. I have “ set his throne in (21) the boat of millions of years. Horus is established upon “ his throne, amid the friends [of Osiris] and all that belonged unto him. Verily
 “ the soul of Sut, which (22) is greater than all the gods, hath departed to

 “ will. O my Osiris, thou hast done for me that which thy father

Vignette I. (PLATE XXX.): The god Osiris, bearded and wearing the "white" crown, stands in a shrine the roof of which is surmounted by a hawk's head and uræi; at the back of his neck hangs the menät (𓄿) (see above p. 245), and in his hands he holds the crook 𓃾, sceptre 𓃿, and flail 𓄀, emblems of royalty, power, and dominion. Behind him stands the goddess Isis, who rests her right hand upon his right shoulder; in her left hand she holds the sign of life 𓄱. Before Osiris, upon a lotus flower, stand the four children of Horus, the gods of the cardinal points, Mesthâ, Hâpi, Ṭuamâutef, and Qebḥsennuf.

Text [CHAPTER CXXV.]: (1) THE CHAPTER OF ENTERING INTO THE HALL OF DOUBLE RIGHT AND TRUTH: A HYMN OF PRAISE TO OSIRIS, THE DWELLER IN AMENTET. Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant, saith: (2) "I have come and I have drawn nigh to see thy beauties; my two hands are raised in adoration of thy name Right and Truth. I have drawn nigh unto the place where the acacia tree groweth not, (3) where the tree thick with leaves existeth not, and where the ground yieldeth neither herb nor grass. And I have entered in unto the place of secret and hidden things, (4) I have held converse with the god Sut Osiris, the scribe Ani, hath entered into the House of Osiris, and he hath seen the hidden (5) and secret things which are therein. The holy rulers of the pylons are in the form of shining ones. (6) Anubis spake unto him with the speech of man when he came from Ta-mera, saying, 'He knoweth our paths and our cities, I have been pacified, (7) and the smell of him is to me even as the smell of one of you.'"

Ani saith unto him: "I am Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant in peace, triumphant! (8) I have drawn nigh to behold the great gods, and I feed upon the meals of sacrifice whereon their kas feed. I have been to the boundaries [of the “lands] (9) of the Ram, the lord of Tattu, and he hath granted that I may come forth as a bennu bird and that I may have the power of speech. I have passed through the river-flood. I have made (10) offerings with incense. I have made my way by the side of the thick-leaved tree of the children (?). I have been in Abtu in the House of Satet. (11) I have flooded and I have sunk the boat of my enemies. I have sailed forth upon the Lake in the neshem boat. I have seen the noble (12) ones of Kam-ur. I have been in Tattu, and I have constrained myself to silence. I have set the divine Form upon his two feet. (13) I have been with the god Pa-tep-tu-f, and I have seen the dweller in the Holy Temple. I have entered into the House (14) of Osiris, and I have arrayed myself in the apparel of him who is therein. I have entered into Re-stau, and I have beheld the hidden things (15) which are therein. I have been swathed, but I found for myself a thoroughfare. I have entered into An-aarut-f, and I have clothed my body with the apparel (16) which is therein. The āntu unguent of women hath been given unto me. Verily, Sut spake unto me (17) the things which concern himself, and I said, ‘Let the thought of the trial of the balance by thee be even within our hearts.’”

The majesty of the god Anubis saith : (18) “Dost thou know the name of this door to declare it unto me?” Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant, (19) triumphant in peace, saith : “ ‘Driven away of Shu’ is the name of this (20) door.” Saith the majesty of the god Anubis : (21) “Dost thou know the name of the upper (22) leaf and of the lower leaf thereof?” [Osiris, the scribe Ani, triumphant in peace saith] : “ ‘Lord of right and truth, [standing] (23) upon his ‘two feet’ is the name of the upper (24) leaf, and ‘Lord of might and power, ‘dispenser of (25) cattle’ [is the name of the lower leaf].” [The majesty of the god Anubis saith] : “Pass thou, for thou knowest [the names] (26), O Osiris, the ‘scribe, teller (27) of the divine offerings of all the gods of Thebes, Ani, ‘triumphant, lord to be revered.”

Appendix : The usual introduction to the CXXVth Chapter reads (see Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 133) as follows :—

I. (1) THE FOLLOWING SHALL BE SAID BY A MAN WHEN HE COMETH UNTO THE HALL OF DOUBLE RIGHT AND TRUTH, WHEREIN HE IS PURGED (2) OF ALL THE SINS WHICH HE HATH DONE, AND WHEREIN HE SEETH THE FACES OF ALL THE GODS: “Hail to thee, great god, the lord of Right and Truth! I have come unto thee, O my lord, (3) and I have drawn nigh that I may look upon thy beauties. I know thee, and I know the names of the forty-two gods who dwell with thee in this (4) Hall of Double Right and Truth, and that they may set the sinners in the gives, who live and who feed upon their blood on the day (5) when the natures of men are accounted before Un-neferu.

“ In very truth ‘Rekhti-merti-f-ent-Maāt’ is thy name. Verily (6) I have come unto thee, and I bring before thee Right and Truth. For thy sake I have rejected wickedness. I have done no hurt unto man, nor have I wrought harm unto beasts. I have committed no crime (7) in the place of Right and Truth. I have had no knowledge of evil; nor have I acted (8) wickedly. Each day have I laboured more than was required of me. (9) My name hath not come forth to the boat of the Prince. I have not despised God. (10) I have not caused misery; nor have I worked affliction. I have done not (11) that which God doth abominate. I have caused no wrong to be done to the servant by his master. I have (12) caused none to feel pain. I have made [no man] to weep. (13) I have not committed murder; nor have I ever bidden any man to slay on my behalf. I have not wronged the people. I have not filched that which hath been offered in (14) the temples; nor have I purloined the cakes of the gods. I have not carried away the (15) offerings made unto the blessed dead. I have not committed fornication, nor have I defiled my body. (16) I have not added unto nor have I diminished the offerings which are due. I have not stolen from the orchards; nor have I trampled down the fields. I have not added to the weight of the balance; (17) nor have I made light the weight in the scales. I have not snatched the milk from the mouth of the babe. I have not (18) driven the cattle from their pastures. I have not snared the water-fowl of the gods. I have not caught fishes (19) with bait of their own bodies. I have not turned back water at its springtide. I have not broken the channel of running water. I have not quenched the flame (20) in its fulness. I have not disregarded the seasons for the offerings which are appointed; I have not turned away the cattle set apart for sacrifice. I have not thwarted the processions of the god. (21) I am pure. I am pure. I am pure. I am pure. I am pure with the purity of the great Bennu bird which is in Suten-henen; for, lo! I am the nostrils of (22) the lord of the winds who maketh all men to live on the day when the eye of the sun becometh full in Annu, in the second month of the season of coming forth until the end thereof, (23) in the presence of the lord of this earth. I behold the eye of the sun wax full in Annu. May no evil happen unto me in this land in the (24) Hall of Double Right and Truth, because I know, even I, the names of the gods who live therein and who are the followers of the great god.”

PLATES XXXI. AND XXXII.

Vignettes: The Hall of Double Right and Truth, wherein Ani has to address severally the forty-two gods, who are seated in a row in the middle of the hall.

At each end is a door ; that on the right is called “Neb-Maāt-heri-ṭep-reṭui-f,” and that on the left

a series of uræi and feathers emblematic of Maât, is a seated deity with hands extended, the right over the eye of Horus  and the left over a pool  (see the Vignette of Plate VIII. above, p. 278).¹ On the right, at the end of the hall (Plate XXXII.), are four small vignettes, in which are depicted: (1) Two seated figures of the goddess Maât, with β , emblematic of Right and Truth, on the head, and sceptres \uparrow and emblems of life \uparrow in the right and left hands. (2) Osiris, seated, wearing the atef crown, and holding in his hands the crook \uparrow and flail \wedge . Before him, by the side of an altar of offerings, stands Ani, with both hands raised in adoration. (3) A balance with the heart, symbolizing the conscience of Ani, in one scale, and β , emblematic of Right and Truth, in the other. Beside the balance is the tri-formed monster Amemit. (4) Thoth, ibis-headed, seated on a pylon-shaped pedestal, painting a large feather of Maât.

Text : [THE NEGATIVE CONFESSION.]

(1) Ani saith: "Hail, thou whose strides are long, who comest forth from Annu, I have not done iniquity."

(2) "Hail, thou who art embraced by flame, who comest forth from Kher-āba, I have not robbed with violence."

(3) "Hail, Fenġiu, who comest forth from Khemennu, I have not stolen."

(4) "Hail, Devourer of the Shade, who comest forth from Qernet, I have done no murder; I have done no harm."

(5) "Hail, Nehau, who comest forth from Re-stau, I have not defrauded offerings."

(6) Hail, god in the form of two lions, who comest forth from heaven, I have not minished oblations."

(7) "Hail, thou whose eyes are of fire, who comest forth from Saut, I have not plundered the god."

(8) "Hail, thou Flame, which comest and goest, I have spoken no lies."

(9) "Hail, Crusher of bones, who comest forth from Suten-ġenen, I have not snatched away food."

(10) "Hail, thou who shootest forth the Flame, who comest forth from Het-Ptaġ-ka, I have not caused pain."

(11) "Hail, Qerer, who comest forth from Amentet, I have not committed fornication."

(12) "Hail, thou whose face is turned back, who comest forth from thy hiding place, I have not caused shedding of tears."

(13) "Hail, Bast, who comest forth from the secret place, I have not dealt deceitfully."

(14) "Hail, thou whose legs are of fire, who comest forth out of the darkness, I have not transgressed."

(15) "Hail, Devourer of Blood, who comest forth from the block of slaughter, I have not acted guilefully."

(16) "Hail, Devourer of the inward parts, who comest forth from Mābet, I have not laid waste the ploughed land."

(17) "Hail, Lord of Right and Truth, who comest forth from the city of Right and Truth, I have not been an eavesdropper."

(18) "Hail, thou who dost stride backwards, who comest forth from the city of Bast, I have not set my lips in motion [against any man]."

(19) "Hail, Sertiu, who comest forth from Annu, I have not been angry and wrathful except for a just cause."

(20) "Hail, thou being of two-fold wickedness, who comest forth from Ati (?), I have not defiled the wife of any man."

(21) "Hail, thou two-headed serpent, who comest forth from the torture-chamber, I have not defiled the wife of any man."

(22) "Hail, thou who dost regard what is brought unto thee, who comest forth from Pa-Amsu, I have not polluted myself."

(23) "Hail, thou Chief of the mighty, who comest forth from Amentet, I have not caused terror."

(24) "Hail, thou Destroyer, who comest forth from Ḳesiu, I have not transgressed."

(25) "Hail, thou who orderest speech, who comest forth from Urit, I have not burned with rage."

(26) "Hail, thou Babe, who comest forth from Uab, I have not stopped my ears against the words of Right and Truth."

(27) "Hail, Kenemti, who comest forth from Kenemet, I have not worked grief."

(28) "Hail, thou who bringest thy offering, I have not acted with insolence."

(29) "Hail, thou who orderest speech, who comest forth from Unaset, I have not stirred up strife."

(30) "Hail, Lord of faces, who comest forth from Netchfet, I have not judged hastily."

(31) "Hail, Sekheriu, who comest forth from Utten, I have not been an eavesdropper."

(32) "Hail, Lord of the two horns, who comest forth from Saïs, I have not multiplied words exceedingly."

(33) "Hail, Nefer-Tmu, who comest forth from Het-Ptaḥ-ka, I have done neither harm nor ill."

PLATE XXXII.

(34) "Hail, Tmu in thine hour, who comest forth from Tattu, I have never cursed the king."

(35) "Hail, thou who workest with thy will, who comest forth from Tebu, I have never fouled the water."

(36) "Hail, thou bearer of the sistrum, who comest forth from Nu, I have not spoken scornfully."

(37) "Hail, thou who makest mankind to flourish, who comest forth from Saïs, I have never cursed God."

(38) "Hail, Neḥeb-ka, who comest forth from thy hiding place, I have not stolen."

(39) "Hail, Neḥeb-nefert, who comest forth from thy hiding place, I have not defrauded the offerings of the gods."

(40) "Hail, thou who dost set in order the head, who comest forth from thy shrine, I have not plundered the offerings to the blessed dead."

(41) "Hail, thou who bringest thy arm, who comest forth from the city of Maāti, I have not filched the food of the infant, neither have I sinned against the god of my native town."

(42) "Hail, thou whose teeth are white, who comest forth from Ta-she, I have not slaughtered with evil intent the cattle of the god."

Appendix : The following version of the Negative Confession is given in the Nebseni Papyrus (Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bll. 134, 135), showing important variations in the text and in the order in which the gods are addressed.

"(1) Hail, thou whose strides are long, who comest forth from Annu, I have not done iniquity. (2) Hail, thou who art embraced by flame, who comest forth from Kher-āba, I have not robbed with violence. (3) Hail Fenti who comest forth from “evil. (35) Hail, Tmu in thine hour, who comest forth from Tattu, I have not worked treason. (36) Hail, thou who workest in thy heart, who comest forth from Tebtu, I have never befouled the water. (37) Hail, thou bearer of the sistrum, who comest forth from Nu, I have not spoken scornfully. (38) Hail, thou who dost make mankind to flourish, who comest forth from thy hall, I have not cursed God. (39) Hail, Nehebnefert, who comest forth from, I have not behaved myself with arrogance (?). (40) Hail, Neheb-kau, who comest forth from thy city, I have not been overweeningly proud. (41) Hail, Tcheser-tep, who comest forth from thy hiding place, I have never magnified my condition beyond what was fitting. (42) Hail, thou who bringest thine arm, who comest forth from Aukert, I have never slighted the god in my town.”

In the Nebseni papyrus (Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bll. 137, 138), the CXXVth Chapter ends as follows:—

(2) “Homage to you, O ye gods, I know you, (3) and I know your names. Cast me not down to your (4) knives of slaughter, and bring not my wickedness into the presence of the god whom ye follow, (5) and let not the time of my failings come before you. I pray you, declare me right and true in the presence of the (6) universal God, because I have done that which is right and true in Ta-mera; I have not cursed the god.

“Homage to you, O ye gods who live in your hall of (7) Right and Truth, and who have no evil in your bodies, who feed on your own substance in (8) the presence of Horus who liveth in his disk, deliver ye me from Baabi, who feedeth on the inwards of the mighty ones on the day of the great judgment which shall be holden by you. (9) I have come unto you; I have committed no faults; I have not sinned; I have done no evil; I have accused no man falsely; therefore let nothing be done against me. I live in right and truth, (10) and I feed my heart upon right and truth. That which men have bidden I have done, and the gods are satisfied thereat. I have pacified the god, for I have done his (11) will. I have given bread unto the hungry and water unto those who thirst, clothing unto the naked, and a boat unto the shipwrecked mariner. (12) I have made holy offerings unto the gods; and I have given meals of the tomb to the sainted dead. O, then, deliver ye me, and protect me; accuse me not before the great god. (13) I am pure of mouth, and I am pure of hands. May those who see me say, ‘Come in peace, come in peace.’ For I have heard the speech which the Ass held with the Cat in the House of Hept-re. (14) I have borne witness before him [the god] and he hath given judgment. I have beheld the dividing of the persea trees (15) within Re-stau. I offer up prayers in the presence of the gods, knowing that which concerneth them. I have come forward to make a declaration of right and truth, and to place (16) the balance upon its supports within the groves of amaranth. Hail, thou who art exalted upon thy resting place, thou lord of the atef crown, who declarest thy name as the lord of the (17) winds, deliver thou me from thine angels of destruction, who make dire deeds to happen and calamities to arise, and (18) who have no covering upon their faces, because I have done right and truth, O thou Lord of right and truth. I am pure, in my fore-parts have I been made clean, and in my hinder parts have I (19) been purified; my reins have been bathed in the Pool of right and " truth, and no member of my body was wanting. I have been purified in the pool or

 " the south. I have rested in Hemet, on the north of the (20) field of the grasshoppers, " wherein the holy mariners do purify themselves in the night season, that they may
 " pacify (?) the heart of the gods after I have passed over it (21) by night and by day.
 " May the gods say unto me, 'We let him come,' and they say unto me, 'Who art
 " thou, and what is thy name?' My name is 'I grew among (22) the flowers, dwelling
 " in the olive tree.' Then shall they say unto me, 'Pass on straightway.' I have passed " by the city on the north of the groves, and the gods say, 'What didst thou see there?'
 " [I saw] the Leg and the Thigh. (23) 'What hadst thou to do with them?' I saw " rejoicings in the lands of the Fenkhu. 'What did they give thee?' They gave me a " (24) flame of fire together with a crystal tablet. 'What didst thou therewith?' I
 " burned it at the place of Maāti together with the things of the night. 'What didst
 " thou (25) find there at the place of Maāti?' A sceptre of flint which maketh a man
 " to prevail. 'What then is [the name] of this sceptre of flint?' 'Giver of winds' is its " name. 'What then didst thou unto the flame of fire with the tablet of (26) crystal
 " after thou didst bury it?' I uttered words over it, I made (27) adjuration thereby, I
 " quenched the fire, and I used the tablet to create (28) a pool of water. 'Come, then, pass " through the door of this Hall of two-fold Maāti, for thou (29) knowest us.' 'I will " not let thee enter in over me,' saith the bolt of the door, (30) 'unless thou tell my " name.' 'Weight of the place of right and truth' is thy name. 'I will not let thee
 " (31) pass in by me,' saith the right post of the door, 'unless thou tell my name.'
 " (32) 'Weigher of the labours of right and truth' is thy name. 'I will not let thee
 " enter in by me,' saith the left post (33) of the door, 'unless thou tell my name.'
 " 'Judge of (34) wine' (?) is thy name. 'I will not let thee pass,' saith the threshold of " the door, (35) unless thou tell my name.' 'Ox of Seb' is thy name. 'I will not " open unto thee,' (36) saith the bolt-socket of the door, 'unless thou tell my name.'
 " 'Flesh of his (37) mother' is thy name. 'I will not open unto thee,' saith the lock of " the door, 'unless thou tell my name.' 'The utchat of Sebek, the Lord of Bakhan,
 " liveth' is thy name. (38) 'I will not open unto thee, and I will not let thee pass
 " over me,' saith the dweller at the door, 'unless thou tell my name.' 'Arm of Shu
 " that placeth itself to protect Osiris' (39) is thy name. 'We will not let thee pass by " us,' say the posts of the door, 'unless thou tell our names.' 'Serpent children of " Rennut' are your names. 'Thou (40) knowest us, pass thou by us.' 'Thou shalt not " tread upon me,' saith the floor of the hall, 'unless thou tell my name.' 'I am silent, I " am pure.' 'I know not (41) [the names of] thy two feet with which thou wouldst walk
 " upon me; tell them unto me.' '. . . . before Amsu' is the name of my right foot,
 " 'Grief of Nephthys' is the name of (42) my left foot. 'Tread thou upon me, for thou
 " knowest me.' 'I will not question thee,' saith the warder of the door of the hall,
 " 'unless thou tell my name.' 'Discerner of hearts, (43) searcher of reins' is thy name.
 " 'I will question thee now. Who is the god that liveth in his hour? Say thou.' The " teller of the two lands. 'Who then is the teller (44) of the two lands?' It is " Thoth. 'Come then,' saith Thoth, 'come hither (?).' And I come forward to the test.
 " 'What, now, is thy condition?' I am pure from (45) all evil, I am shielded from the " baleful acts of those who live in their days, and I am not among them. 'I have tried
 " thee. (46) Who is he that goeth down into the fire, the walls whereof are [crowned]

“ with uræi, and whose paths are in the lake [of fire]?’ He who passeth through it (47) is Osiris. ‘Advance thou, in very truth thou hast been tested. Thy bread is in the utchat, thine ale is in the utchat, and meals of the tomb are brought forth unto thee upon earth from the utchat. This hath been decreed for thee.”

(1) [CHAPTER XLII.] THE CHAPTER OF DRIVING BACK SLAUGHTER IN SUTENHENEN. Saith Osiris: "O land of the sceptre! (2) O white crown of the divine Form! "O holy resting place! I am the Child. I am the Child. I am the Child. I am the Child. "Hail, thou goddess Aburt! Thou sayest daily, 'The slaughter block is (3) made ready "as thou knowest, and thou who wert mighty hast been brought to decay.' I establish "those who praise me. I am the holy knot within the tamarisk tree, more beautiful (4) in "brightness than yesterday." To be said four times. "I am Rā who establish those "who praise him. I am the knot within the tamarisk (?) tree, more beautiful in bright- "ness than the disk of yesterday (5) going forth on this day. My hair is "the hair of Nu. My face is the face of Rā. Mine eyes are the eyes of Hathor. Mine "ears are the ears of Ap-uat. (6) My nose is the nose of Khent-sheps.² My lips are the "lips of Anpu. My teeth are the teeth of Kheperā.  " me to live therewith. I am in the Sun's eye, when it closeth, and I live by the strength
 " thereof. I come forth and I shine; (15) I enter in and I come to life. I am in the " Sun's eye, my seat is on my throne, and I sit thereon within the eye. I am Horus
 " who pass through millions of years. (16) I have governed my throne and I rule it
 " by the words of my mouth; and whether [I] speak or whether [I] keep silence, I keep
 " the balance even. Verily my forms are changed. I am the (17) god Unen, from " season unto season; what is mine is within me. I am the only One born of an only One,
 " who goeth round about in his course; (18) I am within the eye of the Sun. Things are " not evil nor hostile unto me, nor are they against me. I open the door of heaven. I

 " who make you strong for millions of years, whether ye be in the heaven, or (20) in the " earth, or in the south, or in the north, or in the west, or in the east; fear of me is in " your hearts. I am the pure one who dwell within the sacred eye. I shall not die
 " (21) again. My hour resteth with you, but my forms are within my dwelling-place. I " am he who is unknown, and the gods with rose-bright countenances are (22) with me.
 " I am the unveiled one. The season wherein [the god] created heaven for me and " enlarged the bounds of the earth and made great the progeny thereof cannot be found " out. (23) My name setteth itself apart and removeth from all evil things through the " words which I speak unto you. I am he who riseth and shineth; the wall of walls;
 " the only One, [son] of an only One. Rā (24) never lacketh his form, he never passeth " away, he never passeth away. Verily, I say: I am the plant which cometh forth from " Nu, and my mother is Nut. Hail, (25) O my Creator, I am he who hath no power to

 " [but] I am he who knoweth (26) thee. I cannot be held with the hand, but I am he " who can hold thee in his hand. [Hail] O Egg! [Hail] O Egg! I am Horus who " live for millions of years, whose flame lighteth upon your faces and (27) blazeth in " your hearts. I have the command of my throne, and I advance in mine hour. I " have opened the paths, I have turned myself away from all evil. I am (28) the ape of " gold, three palms and two fingers [high], which is without legs and without arms, and " which dwelleth in the House of Ptaḥ. I go forth even as goeth forth the ape of (29)
 " gold three palms and two fingers [high], which hath neither legs nor arms, and which " dwelleth in the house of Ptaḥ." When [thou] hast said this chapter thou shalt open a way and enter thereon.

PLATE XXXIII.

Vignette: A lake of fire, at each corner of which is seated a dog-headed ape.¹

Rubric: (1) Osiris Ani, triumphant, is girt about with [fine] raiment, he is shod with (2) white sandals, and he is anointed with very precious ānta ointment; and a bull, (3) and herbs, and incense, and ducks, and flowers, and ale, and cakes have been offered unto him. And behold, thou shalt limn upon a clean tile (4) the image of a table of offerings in clean colours, and thou shalt bury it in a field whereon (5) swine have not trampled. If this word then be written upon it, he himself shall rise again, (6) and his children's children shall flourish even as Rā flourisheth without ceasing. He shall dwell in favour (7) in the presence of the king among the chiefs, and cakes and cups of drink and portions of meat shall be given unto him upon the table (8) of the great god. He shall not be thrust from any door in Amentet; he shall travel on (9) together with the kings of the north and of the south, and he shall abide with the (10) followers of Osiris near unto Un-nefer, for ever, and for ever, and for ever.

Vignette: a  ²

¹ A somewhat similar scene forms the vignette to Chapter CXXVI., but in addition to the apes there are two uræi at each corner. The text reads: "Hail, ye four apes who sit in the bows of the boat of Rā, who make the right and truth of Neb-er-tcher to advance, who apportion unto me my weakness and my strength, who pacify the gods by the flame of your mouths, who give holy offerings unto the gods, and sepulchral meals of the tomb unto the shining ones, who feed upon right and truth, who are without falsehood, and who abominate wickedness. Destroy ye the evil which is in me, do away with mine iniquity, put away the wounds which I had upon earth, and destroy all wickedness which cleaveth unto me." [The apes say]: "Enter thou in and let nothing whatever oppose thee." "Grant ye that I may pass through the tomb, and that I may enter into Re-stau, and that I may go in through the hidden doors of the underworld, and that offerings and other things may be made unto me as unto those shining ones who pass into and out from the paths of the tomb, and who go through [the doors thereof]."

² The  represents four pillars, i.e., the four quarters of heaven, or the whole universe. As a religious emblem it symbolizes the god Osiris. A fine collection of *ṭet*s is exhibited in the Fourth Egyptian Room (Table-Case K, and Wall-Case, No. 114), and among them may be noted: No. 2097, blue glazed faïence pendent ṭet, with the horns, disk, and plumes ; No. 739, blue glazed faïence pendent ṭet, with five cross-bars, and ; No. 8260, lapis-lazuli pendent ṭet, with horns, disk, and plumes; No. 8275, carnelian ṭet; No. 8270, agate ṭet; No. 20,623, opaque blue glass ṭet inscribed with the name of its owner; No. 20,636, stone ṭet inlaid with lapis-lazuli, carnelian, plasma, and mother of emerald.

deceased] he shall be among those who follow Osiris Un-nefer, triumphant. The gates of the underworld shall be opened unto him, and a homestead shall be given unto him, together with wheat and barley, in the Sekhet-Aaru; and the followers of Horus who reap therein shall proclaim his name as one of the gods who are therein.

Vignette : A heart.

Text : [CHAPTER XXIXb.]. (1) THE CHAPTER OF A HEART OF CARNELIAN. Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant : " I am the Bennu, the soul of Rā, and the guide of " the gods into (2) the underworld. The souls come forth upon earth to do the " will of their ka's, and the soul of Osiris Ani cometh forth to do the will of his ka."

Vignette : A head-rest.

Text : [CHAPTER CLXVI.]. (1) THE CHAPTER OF THE PILLOW WHICH IS PLACED UNDER THE HEAD OF OSIRIS ANI, TRIUMPHANT, TO WARD OFF WOES FROM THE DEAD BODY OF OSIRIS. (2) [Ani saith] : " Lift up thy head to the heavens, " for I have knit thee together triumphantly. Ptaḥ hath overthrown his foes " and thine ; all his enemies have fallen, and they shall never more rise up again, " O Osiris."

PLATES XXXIII AND XXXIV.

Vignette : The mummy-chamber, arranged as a plan, representing the floor and walls laid flat, in fifteen compartments. In the centre, under a canopy, is placed the bier bearing the mummy of Ani, beside which stands the god Anubis,¹ with hands outstretched over the body. At the foot of the bier kneels the goddess Isis, and at the head the goddess Nephthys, each being accompanied by a flame of fire, which is placed in the compartment immediately behind her. The Teṭ occupies the compartment immediately above the bier, and the jackal—emblematic of Anubis or Ap-uat—couchant on the tomb, with a sceptre having pendent menats—occupies the compartment below. The four children of Horus, or gods of the cardinal points—Mesthá, Hāpi, Tuamauf, and Qebhsennuf—stand in the corners of the four adjoining compartments. In each of the two upper and outer compartments is the human-headed bird emblematic of the soul, standing on a pylon, the one on the right being turned to the west or setting sun, the other on the left facing the east or rising sun. In the right lower compartment stands the figure of the Perfected Soul; in the corresponding compartment on the left is a Ushabti figure.

Text [CHAPTER CLI.]. [Isis saith:] “I have come to be a protector unto thee. I waft (2) unto thee air for thy nostrils, and the north wind, which cometh forth from the god Tmu, unto thy nose (3). I have made whole thy lungs. I have made thee (4) to be like unto a god. Thine enemies have fallen beneath thy feet. (5, 6) Thou hast been made victorious in (7) Nut, and thou art mighty to prevail with the gods.”

[Nephthys saith:] “(2) I have gone round about to protect thee, brother Osiris; (3) I have come to be a protector unto thee. [My strength shall be behind thee, my strength shall be behind thee, for ever. Rā hath heard thy cry, and the gods have granted that thou shouldst be victorious. Thou art raised up, and thou art victorious over that which hath been done unto thee. Ptaḥ hath thrown down thy foes, and thou art Horus, the son of Hathor.]”¹

[The flame of Isis saith:] "I protect thee with this flame, and I drive away him (the foe) from the valley of the tomb, and I drive away the sand from thy feet. I embrace Osiris Ani, who is triumphant in peace and in right and truth."¹

[The flame of Nephthys saith:] "I have come to hew in pieces. I am not hewn in pieces, nor will I suffer thee to be hewn in pieces. I have come to do violence, but I will not let violence be done unto thee, for I am protecting thee."

[The T̄et̄ saith:] "I have come quickly, and I have driven back the footsteps of the god whose face is hidden.² I have illumined his sanctuary. I stand behind the sacred T̄et̄ on the day of repulsing disaster.³ I protect thee, O Osiris."

[Mesthâ saith:] "I am Mesthâ, thy son, O Osiris Ani, triumphant. I have come to protect thee, and I will make thine abode to flourish everlastingly. I have commanded Ptaḥ, even as Râ himself commanded him."

[Ḥâpi saith:] "I am Ḥâpi thy son, O Osiris Ani, triumphant. I have come to protect thee. Thy head and thy limbs are knit together; and I have smitten down thine enemies beneath thee. I have given unto thee thy head for ever and for ever, O Osiris Ani, triumphant in peace."

[T̄uamâutef saith:] "I am thy beloved son Horus. I have come to avenge thee, O my father Osiris, upon him that did evil unto thee; and I have put him under thy feet for ever, and for ever, and for ever, O Osiris Ani, triumphant in peace."

nuk àhu sâ er teb àment ḫesef-â ḫesef su er teka set àu seset-nâ set àu setenem-nâ uat àu-à em sa, "I surround with sand the hidden tomb, and drive away the violent one therefrom. I lighten the valley of the tomb, I cast light therein, I traverse the ways, and I protect [Osiris]."

[Qebhsennuf saith :] “ I am thy son, O Osiris Ani, triumphant. I have come “ to protect thee. I have collected thy bones, and I have gathered together thy “ members. [I have brought thy heart and I have placed it upon its throne “ within thy body. I have made thy house to flourish after thee, O thou who “ livest for ever.]”¹

[The bird which faceth the setting sun saith]: “ Praise be to Rā when he “ setteth in the western part of heaven. Osiris Ani, triumphant in peace in the “ underworld, saith : ‘ I am a perfected soul.’ ”

[The bird which faceth the rising sun saith]: “ Praise be to Rā when he “ riseth in the eastern part of heaven from Osiris Ani, triumphant.”

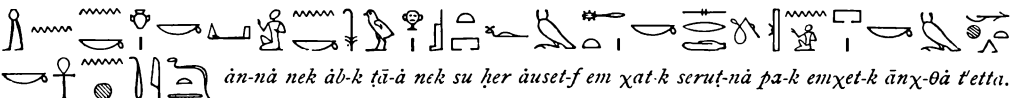

[The Perfected Soul saith]: “ I am a perfected soul in the holy egg of the “ abtu fish. I am the great cat which dwelleth in the seat of right and truth “ wherein riseth the god Shu.”

[The text near the Ushabti Figure (Chapter VI.) reads]: Osiris Ani, the over- seer, triumphant, saith : “ Hail, shabti figure! If it be decreed that Osiris [Ani] “ shall do any of the work which is to be done in the underworld, let all that standeth “ in the way be removed from before him ; whether it be to plough the fields, or “ to fill the channels with water, or to carry sand from [the East to the West].” The shabti figure replies : “ I will do [it]; verily I am here [when] thou callest.”

Vignette: Ani, with both hands raised in adoration, standing before a table of offerings ; behind him is his wife holding lotus and other flowers in her left hand.

Text: [Chapter ̒X.] (1) HERE BEGIN THE CHAPTERS OF THE SEKHE- HETEPU, AND THE CHAPTERS OF COMING FORTH BY DAY, AND OF GOING INTO AND OF COMING OUT FROM THE UNDERWORLD, AND OF ARRIVING IN THE SEKHE- (2) ̒ANRU, AND OF BEING IN PEACE IN THE GREAT CITY WHEREIN ARE FRESH BREEZES. Let me have power there. Let me become strong to plough there. (3) Let me reap there. Let me eat there. Let me drink there. [Let me woo there.]² And let me do all these things there, even as they are done upon earth.

 ân-nâ nek âb-k tî-â nek su her âuset-f em ̒at-k serut-nâ pa-k em̒et-k ân̒-â t'etta.

Saith Osiris Ani, triumphant : (4) “ Set hath carried away Horus to see what is being built in the Field of Peace, and he spreadeth the air over (5) the divine soul within the egg in its day. He hath delivered the innermost part of the body of Horus from the holy ones of Akert (?).¹ Behold I have sailed in the mighty boat on the Lake of Peace.² I, even I, have crowned him in the House of (6) Shu. His starry abode reneweth its youth, reneweth its youth. I have sailed on its Lake that I may come unto its cities, and I have drawn nigh unto the city Hetep.³ For behold, I repose at the seasons [of Horus]. I have passed through the region of the company of the gods who are aged and venerable. (7) I have pacified the two holy Fighters⁴ who keep ward upon life. I have done that which is right and fair, and I have brought an offering and have pacified the two holy Fighters. I have cut off the (9) hairy scalp of their adversaries, and I have made an end of the (10) woes which befel [their] children ; (11) I have done away all the evil which came against their souls ; I have gotten dominion over it, (12) I have knowledge thereof. Thoth, the scribe of the gods, holding pen and palette, introduces Ani, who is making an offering, and his ka to three gods who have the heads of a hare, serpent, and bull respectively, and are entitled  pauti, “ the company of the gods.” Ani and a table of offerings in a boat. The stream which flows on the convex side of the small island is called  ashet pet, "flood (?) of [heaven]." On the other island is placed a flight of steps, by the side of which is written .³ The space to the left represents the abode of the blessed dead, and is described as:—

And may I sit "down at the table [of the god] daily to receive bread of his bread, and cakes, and wine, and milk, "and tchefau food; and may I follow in the train of the god when he maketh his appearance in his "festivals in Res-tau." (For the text see Naville, Todtenbuch, Bd. I., Bl. 123.)

the boat of Rā-Harmachis when he goeth forth into the Field of Aanre.

² In other papyri the names of these animals are given as follows:

(1) , het kau nebt tcher, "the dwelling of the kas of the lord of the universe"; (2) , sentet udeset, "orbit, the raising of the god"; (3) , amenit xentet auset-s, "the hidden one dwelling in her place"; (4) , hatet sahet, "the divine noble one of the north (?)" ; (5) , urt meru tesert, "the greatly beloved, red of hair"; (6) , xnemt anxit, "the consort of life"; (7) , sehem ren-s em abet-s, "her name prevaieth in her dwelling"; (8) , ka t'ai kait, "Bull, making the kine to be fruitful."
