THE VIKING AND THEIR GODS

During the eight,ninth and tenth centuries of our era,the very name of the 'VIKINGS' struck terror in the hearts of the people of Europe.For it was then that these formerly peaceable northern tribes came like a ball of fire to kill, maim and destroy everything they could in the then known western world.

In their magnificent longships that measured 24 metres in length and held 80 men - ships which could withstand any storm - the Vikings of Norway sailed westward to Scotland, Ireland and Iceland, destroying everything they found in these countries. They even reached Greenland and the coast of North America.

The Vikings of Denmark were no less adventurous in their travels; their longships were perfect for manoeuvring the rivers of Europe, and they sailed down to and into England, the Low Countries, France, Italy and Spain, reaching as far as the northern coastline of Africa.

The Swedish tribes went South-East through to Russia and even reached the fabulous city of Byzantium in Turkey, which they would have taken, but for the ferocity of a storm which came to the beleaguered city's rescue.

The Viking raids were wholly destructive and despicable; they would simply kill and maim the inhabitants of towns and take everything of value therein and then return to their homeland, feasting on their conquests.

They would repeat the same exercises over and over again, year after year. Eventually, they mellowed and instead of merely pillaging the lands they invaded, they began colonising them and they began farming, learned various crafts and took to town-life.

Many of the peoples of America, Canada and Australia, not to mention Europe, are descended from this fierce race of warriors. The gods and Goddesses of the Vikings were the spiritual sources of this ancient race; and from a psychological point of view, these deities represent the deepest forces within the collective consciousness of the Viking descendents. They signify great occult powers.

However, the occult power of viking beliefs is not confined to those of European racial origin. In this book, are simple chants to various Viking deities for the granting of good fortune, power, influence and so on.

The chants possess no value at all, regardless of your racial origins, if you do not believe in their power to help you. Admittedly, there is no logical reason why chanting to an unseen deity of an ancient race should bring you good luck or help you pay the rent, but this is Magick, and Magick does not belong to the same world logic. All that matters is that these chants get results. Do not wonder how it happens--just believe that it will.

Prior to the ritual, suspend all doubts and allow your mind to enter the world of the miraculous, where anything can happen--the world of Magick.

The Vikings were a fierce, hardy people, who lived in a cold and harsh climate. Consequently, they believed in a tough cosmos, populated by terrifying and awesome deities. Odin was the father of all the Gods and a powerful, primal force both within the mind of man and the cosmos--before there was the God/Jehova of the Christians, there was Odin.

Odin was lord of the sky and was also the spirit of Wisdom, Poetry, Agriculture and War. He had only one eye--he sacrificed his other eye as the price for acquiring all-pervasive wisdom.

His one eye is the Sun, which sustains all life on our planet. He is pictured as an awesome long bearded old man with two wolves seated at his throne and two ravens perched on his shoulders.

Odin was called 'Woden' by the Anglo-Saxons, and mythologists have identified him with mighty Zeus of the ancient Greeks.

Frigga was the supreme Goddess in Scandinavian mythology and was Odin's wife. She was Patroness of marriage and was pictured as a stately, mature Queen, surrounded by all her trappings of wealth and pomp. She has been likened to the Greek Hera, wife of Zeus.

Freya - compared by mythologists to the Roman Venus - was Goddess of Love, Peace, Youth and Beauty. Because of her great beneficence there are three chants to her in this book, compared to the usual one chant each for the other Gods.

Idun was a Goddess associated with youthfulness; she was the keeper of the apples which kept the youthful gods forever that way.

Sif was a Goddess who possessed luxuriant golden hair, which trailed her footsteps. Her hair represented the golden grain which covered the northern fields, and as a consequence, she came to be looked upon as a Goddess of Fertility and Growth.

Balder, son of Odin and Frigga, was supreme God of Light, the solar God, who dispersed all darkness. He has been identified with the Greek Sun-God Apollo.

Tyr was a ferocious War God, likened to the Roman Mars, and was invoked as both an inducer of fearlessness and as a protector in times of danger.

Thor was also a fearsome deity, and ranked only second in importance to Odin amongst the Viking Gods. With his destructive hammer, it is fitting that in this book, he is invoked as a Worker of Revenge.

Fenrir was a Wolf-God and was associated with the idea of savage strength. Also fearsome was Mimir, a huge water demon who controlled the source of secret knowledge and wisdom - it was to him that even the all-powerful Odin was forced to yield, when he demanded an eye as the price of wisdom.

YOUR INTRODUCTION TO THE GODS

Before you commence the magick rituals, purchase white candles, which you can inscribe with your name, before lighting. The candles add power to the rituals, and make them more effective by creating a special atmosphere but, if for any reason at all, you cannot use candles, still proceed with the chants and will whatever you desire to happen and it will!

The first ritual will be your introduction to the Norse Gods for their blessings and help.

Light two, preferably large white candles at any time of the day or night and place them on a table covered with a white cloth. Sit or stand before the candles, preferably facing East.

Close your eyes for a few minutes and 'see' in your mind a wonderful golden light encircling you in a warmth and peace.

Now commence and say:

"I call on Thee,O mighty Gods of ASGARD (AS-GUARD), to bless these candles,and (your name) so that all my wishes will be granted.May the light of these candles find the way to your mystical knowledge and strength.I thank you,O mighty Gods for listening to me,and may you forever be blessed".

Close your eyes and stay a few more minutes with the candles,thinking about your problem and knowing it will soon be solved. Leave the candles to burn out.

On the second day,you perform a ritual,which should be performed either at 6 a.m.; 12 noon; 6 p.m. or midnight.This ritual is to call upon the Norse Gods in order that you may be helped in various ways for the problems which you may have.

Light a large white candle,on which your name is inscribed.Now turn and face the north and say:

"By the power of the great and mighty Odin,I call upon,and summon all the gods of Asgard to my help,so that I may gain power, good health,wealth, and fulfilment of all my dreams and wishes.With the magickal word RAGNAROK (RAG-NOR-ROCK),I command Thee and seal this powerfull bond".

IMPORTANT FINAL NOTES

No matter which ritual you will be performing,at the end of each one spend a few minutes more by the candles and visualize whatever you wish to happen as if it has already happened,using your imagination as much as you please.

Some people say they cannot visualize,Everyone knows what day-dreaming is,and who has not done it and continues to do it,some more and some less frequently?

Day-dreaming is another kind of visualization, which can be performed at any time of day or night. This is a very important part of the ritual, so don't give it up.

If, for any reason at all, you can not spare the time during the ritual for your visualization for either lack of time or being disturbed by someone whom you do not wish to know what you are doing, then whenever you have a little time, be it during the day or when lying in bed, you can let your imagination loose and see all your dreams and wishes come true.

If, for private reasons, you cannot leave the candles to burn to the end, you may extinguish them after the ritual.

If, for private reasons, you cannot burn candles at all, you can still perform the ritual(s); just put a great deal of feeling into them.

Good Luck!
