PREFACE.

THE Publishers of HAYDN'S DICTIONARY OF DATES, (a work which, under their careful supervision, has been completely remodelled,) had long formed a plan for a DICTIONARY OF BIOGRAPHY, which, in my opinion, is an indispensable companion to the older work. Long prior to the communication of this design to me, I had formed a strong desire to compile such a book, because, during some years' experience as a journalist, I had keenly felt its need. A well-read man of average memory recollects, in the main, the salient features in the history of a nation and of a man; but his retention must indeed be prodigious if he can carry about with him those dates which are absolutely necessary for the purposes of writing or of comparison. It is to give to the public a copious, if not an exhaustive, Date-book of Biography, which, while portable, shall be somewhat wider in conception than most manuals of a like order, that the labour necessary for its careful construction has been undertaken; and to render it worthy of the reputation gained by the Dictionary of Dates no care and reading have been spared. The day of the month, where possible to be obtained, has been added to the year of each event recorded; and to save trouble in reference, the tabular form has been made use of wherever a number of occurrences come under one common head. In the labour of compilation, I have been assisted by Mr Benjamin Vincent, the Editor of the DICTIONARY OF DATES; and to the organization of record which he has established in connection with that work I attribute much of what is meritoriously exact in the following pages. It is my great ambition that the INDEX OF BIOGRAPHY shall be found no unworthy confrere of the Dictionary of DATES, and that these two works shall be deemed standard authorities in the thousand-and-one instances in daily life which render a reference to such adjutores memoriæ necessary or convenient.

AUSTRIA.

In 800, Charlemagne, who had added to his hereditary dominions the greater part of Germany and Italy, and a portion of Spain, received, from pope Leo III., the imperial crown with the revived titles of Cæsar and Emperor of Rome. He was succeeded by eight emperors of his family, the last of whom, Louis IV., died in 912. Conrad, duke of Franconia, was then elected emperor, and the imperial crown remained elective until the dissolution of the German empire in 1806. Although the emperors were elected, they succeeded each other, with few exceptions, by dynasties. Thus, after the death of Conrad, Henry, surnamed the Fowler, duke of Saxony, was elected, whose successors, Otho I., Otho III., Otho III., and Henry II. were also his descendants. After Henry II. came Conrad of Franconia, said to have been descended from Otho I., who was followed by his son Henry III., his grandson Henry IV., and his great grandson Henry V. Conrad of Suabia was next elected in 1125. He was the son of Agnes, daughter of Henry IV., and of Frederick, count of Hohenstaufen, who was created duke of Suabia. His family gave six emperors, and reigned till 1269. Then succeeded the famous Rodolph of Hapsburg, whose descendant—through the female line of Maria Theresa, who married Francis I., duke of Lorraine—now reigns in Austria.

In 1806, after Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Baden, Hesse Darmstadt, Nassau, and several other States were formed into the Confederation of the Rhine, the Emperor Francis resigned the title of Emperor of Germany, and took that of Emperor of Austria.

The Confederation of the Rhine lasted till 1813. In 1815, the congress of Vienna established the Germanic Confederation, composed of all the independent States of Germany. At the Diet of this confederation, which held its sittings at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Austria presided and held a casting vote.

The Germanic Confederation was overthrown by Prussia in the war of 1866, and the North German Confederation was afterwards formed, under the lead of Prussia. The official name for the Austrian dominions, adopted since Nov. 14, 1868, is "Austro-Hungarian Monarchy."

Francis Joseph (Charles) I., emperor of Austria, king of Hungary, of Bohemia, &c., eldest son of the archduke Francis Charles Joseph, and of the archdukes Sophia Frederica Dorothy Wilhelmina, daughter of Maximilian I., king of Bavaria, was born August 18, 1830.

His education was carefully attended to, and he is said to be well acquainted with all the languages spoken in his dominions. In 1848, when the existence of the empire was threatened by the insurrection in Hungary, and the successive risings in Vienna, it was thought that the accession to the throne of a young prince, as yet unconnected with politics, would do much to allay the discontent which existed throughout the States of Austria. His father accordingly renounced his claim to the throne, and the Emperor Ferdinand I., his uncle, who was without children, abdicated in his favour, Dec. 2, 1848.

The commencement of his reign was beset with difficulties. The Italian provinces, supported by Sardinia, were in open revolt, and Hungary had constituted itself a republic under Kossuth. The Italian insurrection was soon quelled by the decisive victory gained by general Radetski at Novara, which compelled Sardinia to sue for peace and pay the expenses of the war. The emperor was then enabled to concentrate his forces against Hungary, and being assisted by a Russian army, sent by the emperor Nicholas, that kingdom was after a very short time brought to submission.

Having regained all his dominions by the capitulation of Venice, the emperor sought to recover the various prerogatives which had been relinquished, in 1848, by his predecessor. He disbanded the national guard, abolished the liberty of the press, and annulled the constitution, which he himself had granted to his subjects, in March, 1849. In order, as much as possible, to centralize his power, he abolished the customs dues between the German provinces of his empire, and those of Hungary and Italy. In 1855, he signed a concordat with the pope, by which the clergy acquired many important privileges; among others, the right of controlling the press and superintending public education. When hostilities broke out between Turkey and Russia he joined the Western Powers in the treaty of alliance of Dec. 2, 1854, but never took an active part in the war. In 1859, when Sardinia entered into alliance with France for the liberation of Lombardy and Venice, he sustained a series of reverses, ending in the loss of the battle of Solferino, at which he was present, which compelled his army to abandon the whole of Lombardy and retire to Venetia. He then signed the treaty of Villafranca, by which Venetia was guaranteed to him. In the following year, troubles again arose in Hungary and the Venetian territories, which induced him to re-establish the ancient constitutions of Hungary, Croatia and Transylvania, and at the same time to concentrate a powerful force in Venice, to oppose the movement for Italian unity, which had triumphed in the greater part of the Peninsula. In 1864, he joined Prussia, in the expedition against Denmark to enforce the views of the German Confederation, with regard to the duchies of Sleswig and Holstein, and a dispute having arisen between Austria and Prussia, in consequence of the appropriation of Holstein by Prussia, an offensive and defensive alliance was entered into between the last named country and Italy, by which it was arranged that in the event of Austria's not acceding to the demands of Prussia to disarm, each should attack her at the same moment. Austria, in the war of seven weeks which followed, being thus obliged to divide her forces, found herself at an immense disadvantage; she, nevertheless, gained a signal victory over the Italians at Custozza, and the Austrian fleet greatly distinguished itself at Lissa; she was, however, unable to resist Prussia and her allieswhose strength, both materially and morally, was greatly increased by the needle gun, and, after several reverses, sustained a decisive defeat at Sadowa. It was then that the emperor gave up the Venetian territory to the Emperor of the French, who at once entered into negotiations with Prussia, which resulted in the treaty of peace concluded at Prague, Aug. 23, 1866. by which the emperor of Austria agreed to recognise a new formation of Germany, in which Austria should take no part; and in that between Austria and Italy, by which Venetia was ceded to the latter country.

The emperor married, April 24, 1854, Elizabeth Amelia Eugénie, the daughter of Maximilian Joseph, duke in Bavaria, and has issue:—

- Gisella Louisa Mary, b. July 12, 1856.
- 2. Rodolph Francis Charles Joseph, b. Aug. 21, 1858.
- 3. Mary Matilda Valeria Amelia, b. April 22, 1868.

HOUSE OF CHARLEMAGNE,
1. CHARLEMAGNE, 814.
2. LOUIS, le Debonnaire, 840.

BADEN.

Herman, count of Zähringen and Hochberg, a grandson of Berthold who was count of Breisgau in the 11th century, having acquired, by marriage, the territory of Baden, combined his various possessions into one state, and assumed the title of Margrave of Baden. His descendants added considerably to their territory, which, however, was also, from time to time, divided amongst collateral branches of the family. At the death of Christopher in 1547 the Margraviate was divided between his two sons, Bernhard and Ernest; the former inheriting Baden Baden, and the latter becoming founder of the line of Baden Durlach. At the death of Augustus William George in 1771 the line of Baden Baden became extinct, and the territory reverted to Charles Frederick Margrave of Baden Durlach, who became an Elector of the Empire in 1803, and Grand-Duke in 1806. At the congress of Vienna Baden would probably have been shared between Austria and Bavaria, had not the Emperor Alexander, the son-in-law of the Grand-Duke, insisted that it should remain "one and indivisible."

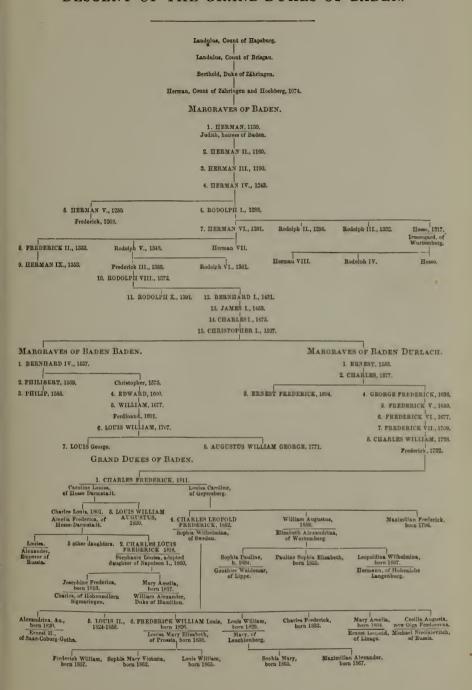

Charles Frederick died in 1811, and was succeeded by his grandson Charles Louis Frederick, his eldest son, Charles Louis, having died before him. The third Grand-Duke was Louis William Augustus, the second son of Charles Frederick, who was succeeded by his half-brother, Charles Leopold Frederick.

The present Grand-Duke, FREDERICK William Louis, is the second son of Charles Leopold Frederick, and was born, September 9, 1826. At the death of his father, April 24, 1852, he assumed the government as regent—his elder brother, Louis, being unfit to rule in consequence of physical and mental infirmities—and took the title of Grand-Duke, September 5, 1856. On the 7th December 1853 he narrowly escaped assassination. During his reign great contentions have occurred between the government, the religion of which is evangelical, and the Roman Catholic clergy. By a proclamation of April 7, 1860, the Grand-Duke established the independence of the Roman Catholic Church in his dominions, and the rights of both churches are now equally respected.

He married, on the 20th September 1856, Louisa Mary Elizabeth, the daughter of William I., king of Prussia, by whom he has issue:—

- 1. Frederick William Louis Leopold Augustus, born July 9, 1857.
- 2. Sophia Mary Victoria, born August 7, 1862.
- 3. Louis William Charles Frederick Berthold, born June 12, 1865.

DESCENT OF THE GRAND-DUKES OF BADEN.

BAVARIA.

The dukedom of Bavaria was conferred upon Otho the Great, Count of Wittelsbach, ancestor of the present dynasty, by the emperor Frederick Barbarossa in 1180, and to this was added, in 1215, the palatinate of the Rhine. The duchy was in 1623 raised into an electorate by the emperor Ferdinand. II.; but the territories acquired by the dukes of Bavaria were at various times divided between rival claimants. The Upper Palatinate was again united to Bavaria in 1648, and the palatinate of the Rhine in 1777, when, upon the failure of the direct male line by the death of Maximilian Joseph I., without issue, the electorate of Bavaria devolved upon the elector palatine Charles Theodore, in accordance with the terms of the treaty of Pavia made in 1329, and confirmed by the late elector in 1774. The elector, Charles Theodore, died also without issue in 1799; and the branch of Sulsbach becoming thereby extinct, he was succeeded by Maximilian Joseph, duke of Deux-Ponts, the first sovereign of the reigning branch of the house of Wittelsbach. Bavaria was raised to the rank of a kingdom by the treaty of Pressburg in 1805.

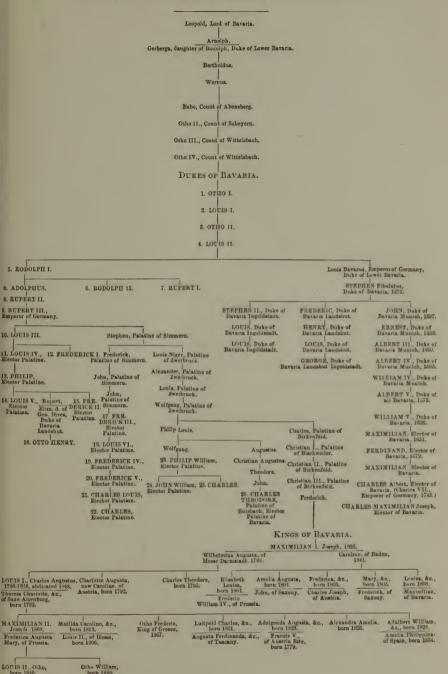

LOUIS II. (Louis Otho Frederick William), king of Bavaria and count palatine of the Rhine, was born at the palace of Nymphenburg, near Munich, August 25, 1845. He is the elder of the two sons of the late king, Maximilian II., by the princess Frederica Frances Augusta Mary Hedwiga (who was born 15) Oct. 1825, and is still living), second daughter of the late prince Frederick William Charles of Prussia. The revolutionary events that agitated so many of the states of Europe in the early part of 1848 having forced upon king Louis I. the necessity for political and administrative reforms that he could not have effected to the satisfaction of his people, owing mainly to the influence acquired over him by the notorious Lola Montes, whom he had created countess of Landsfeld, he had the wisdom to save the crown for his dynasty by abdicating, March 21, in favour of his eldest son, Maximilian Joseph, who occupied the Bavarian throne until his death on March 10, 1864. He was succeeded by the reigning sovereign, who had only attained his majority in the preceding year, and had hitherto taken no part in state affairs. Highly endowed by nature, both in mind and body, his education was superintended at first with the greatest care by his mother, and subsequently by count La Rosée and lieutenant von Wülffen, his classical studies being directed by professor Steininger. He ascended the throne at a time when the questions of the Zollverein and of Schleswig-Holstein were still pending, and Bavaria was endeavouring to constitute herself a mediator, and to rally round her the secondary states of Germany in opposition to the pretensions of Austria and of Prussia. At first the young king evinced an inclination to take the reins of government into his own hands, and showed more decision and capacity for business than had characterised his father. This tendency combined with his affability to render him very popular, and this impression was strengthened by his speech at the opening of the chambers at the commencement of 1865, which was pacific and full of good intentions towards Germany, and in reply to which an address was voted expressive of devotion to his dynasty, and grateful remembrance of the late sovereign. The administration of public affairs still remained in the hands of Herr Von Schrenk, who was replaced before the end of 1864 by Herr Von der Pfordten, without causing any change in the policy of Bavaria. The first independent act of the new sovereign was to invite to Munich the eminent composer, Richard Wagner, as well known by his visionary and revolutionary opinions as by his musical failures. This event is said to have been caused by the king, having once been much impressed by the performance of Wagner's "Lohengrin," a romantic opera founded on the legend of the Knight of the Swan, which is connected with the old castle of Hohenschwangau, where king Louis had passed his childhood. This intimacy gave rise to a rumour that the composer, under pretence of instructing the king in music, had introduced to his notice the philosophical works of Büchner and Feuerbach. All parties united to oppose this sinister influence, and an urgent remonstrance having been addressed to the king by the people of Munich, Herr Wagner was dismissed early in 1866. No party has, however, been able to obtain any ascendency over the king, who has since maintained an almost complete isolation. The vacillation of Bavaria in 1866, in the great conflict for supremacy in Germany between Prussia and Austria, the ultimate alliance of her forces with those of the latter power, and the unfavourable terms of the Bavaro-Prussian treaty of peace, are events of which the responsibility must be considered to rest with his chief minister at that period, Herr Von der Pfordten, rather than with the sovereign. Herr Von der Pfordten was replaced at the close of 1866 by the prince of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst, who still remains at the head of affairs.

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF BAVARIA.

BELGIUM.

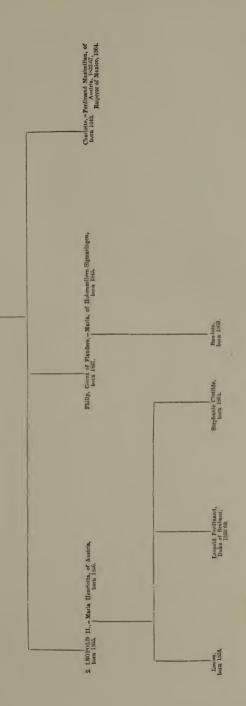

THE history of the royal family of Belgium is that of the house of Saxony to the birth of Leopold the first king of the Belgians. Ernest, the eldest son of Francis duke of Saxe Coburg Saalfeld, succeeded to his father's dukedom in 1806; and, having married the daughter of the duke of Saxe Gotha, who died without heirs male, succeeded also to the dominions of that prince in 1825. His brother Leopold was born on the 16th of December 1790. At the age of fifteen he was well acquainted with the classical and also with the principal modern languages, and had studied the sciences and public law. The marriage of his sister with the grand Duke Constantine, induced him to enter the service of Russia, which he was, however, obliged to leave in 1810 to attend to the affairs of Saxe Coburg, after which he travelled till 1813. He then reentered the Russian army, and served with much distinction in the campaigns which terminated by the entry of the allies into Paris and the final overthrow of Napoleon. At the visit of the allied sovereigns to this country, he had accompanied the Emperor Alexander, and it was then that he had become acquainted with the Princess Charlotte, whom he married, May 2d, 1816, when a pension was granted to him of £50,000 a year. After the death of the princess in 1817, he lived in retirement at Claremont till the beginning of 1830, when he was offered the crown of Greece. Having refused this offer, he was soon afterwards requested to accept that of Belgium, which he did on the 12th July 1831. He made his entry into Brussels on the 21st, from which date he gave up £35,000 of the pension he had derived from England, stipulating only that the Claremont estate should be kept up. In 1830, he married the Princess Louisa of Orleans, daughter of Louis Philippe, and in the same year hostilities were commenced against Belgium by Holland, when a French army came to the assistance of the Belgians, and took the citadel of Antwerp. It was not till the 10th April 1839, however, that the differences between Belgium and Holland were finally settled by treaty. In 1833 was promulgated the constitution of Belgium, which is one of the most liberal in Europe. It insures civil and political equality, the right of meeting, the equality of all religions, and the liberty of the press. The executive power is placed in the hands of the king, the legislative power is confided to two chambers elected by what amounts almost to universal suffrage. It was always the greatest desire of King Leopold I. to rule according to the provisions of this constitution and to satisfy public opinion, which he had great tact in ascertaining. The most serious difficulties of his reign were occasioned by the antagonism of the two great parties (the catholic and the liberal) which have divided Belgium. Each of these, by turn, has had the ascendency, and they still continue to exist. Belgium passed through the critical period of 1848 without any serious commotion, although some feeble republican manifestations were made. In 1860 vague rumours of annexation to France produced a number of loyal addresses to the king, and gave rise to the volunteer movement throughout the country. The Belgian government has entered into treaties of commerce with France, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and Sweden and Norway. Conventions have also been entered into with France and other countries for the protection of literary and artistic property, by which Belgian piracy has been virtually abolished. Leopold I. died December 10, 1865, and was succeeded by his son LEOPOLD (Louis Philip Maria Victor) II., who was born April 9, 1835. In the speech which he made to both chambers of the legislature on the day of his inauguration, Dec. 17, 1866, he said, "I shall religiously follow the example and precepts of my father, I will be a Belgian from my heart and soul. I love those great institutions which guarantee order and liberty, and which are the most solid bases of the throne." The respect and admiration which the king has always evinced for parliamentary liberty, have nobly redeemed these words. In Oct. 1866 he and his subjects gained great popularity among Englishmen, by the magnificent manner in which they received and entertained a large body of English volunteers who had gone over to celebrate the anniversary of Belgian national independence. In the return visit, the following year, the Belgian volunteers were greeted in London with equal cordiality and enthusiasm. Before his accession to the throne, King Leopold II. travelled through Egypt, Lower Nubia, and Sinai, and is the only reigning sovereign who has ever visited India and China. In 1866 he was created a knight of the garter. On the 22d January 1869, he experienced deep affliction at the loss of his only son, the prince royal, Leopold, Duke of Brabant, who died after a lingering illness in his tenth year. In Nov. 1869, the king visited London, was entertained by the Queen, and by the Corporation of London, and received an immense deputation from the Officers of the Army, Navy, and Volunteers, accompanied by the Mayors of most of the cities of Great Britain. Leopold II. married (Aug. 22, 1853) Maria Henrietta Anne, archduchess of Austria, by whom he has surviving issue, I. Louisa Maria Amelia, born Feb. 18, 1858; 2. Stephanie Clotilda Louisa Herminia Maria Charlotte, born May 21, 1864.

The heir presumptive is Philip, count of Flanders, brother to the king.

Brazil, from its discovery almost simultaneously by Vicente Yañez Pinzon and Pedro Alvarez Cabral in 1500, until recent times has been the most important possession of Portugal beyond Many attempts were made from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century by the French and Dutch to gain a settlement on its coasts, but each alike eventually failed. French invasion of Portugal in 1807 having compelled the royal house of Braganza to leave that country, they retired to Brazil, and landed there in 1808. In 1815 Brazil was raised by John VI. to the rank of a kingdom, and his eldest son, Dom Pedro, was left by him as regent upon his return to Portugal in 1821. The speedy recall of the regent by the Cortes at Lisbon brought to a climax the growing discontent of the Brazilians with the Portuguese government, and Dom Pedro was urged to refuse compliance with the orders that he had received. The independence of Brazil was declared in 1822, and Dom Pedro crowned emperor, but these acts were not recognised by Portugal until 1825. Upon the death of king John VI. in 1826, the crown of Portugal devolved upon the emperor Dom Pedro, the two countries thus being again united under the same sovereign. The emperor, however, resigned the Portuguese throne to his daughter, Dona Maria da Gloria, in order that the old discontent with the mother country might not be revived. Nevertheless, disputes that arose between the emperor and the Chamber of Deputies, and the disordered state of the national finances, increased the universal dissatisfaction to such an extent that Dom Pedro resolved to abdicate, April 7, 1831, in favour of his infant son, the present emperor. Dom Pedro I. died at Lisbon, September 24, 1834, at the age of thirty-six.

Dom Pedro II. d'Alcantara (John Charles Leopold Salvador Bibiano Francis Xavier de Paul Leocadio Michael Gabriel Raphael Gonzaga), Emperor of Brazil, only son of the emperor Dom Leocadio Michael Gabriel Kaphael Gonzaga), Emperor of Brazil, only son of the emperor Dom Pedro I., and his first wife, the empress Maria Leopoldina Caroline Josephine, second daughter of Francis I., Emperor of Austria, was born at Rio Janeiro, December 2, 1825. He ascended the throne in accordance with the act of abdication of his father, signed at Boavista, April 7, 1831, under the guardianship of the celebrated José Bonifacio de Andrada e Silva. The affairs of the empire were directed by a council of regency of three persons until October 1835, when Diogo Antonio Feijo became sole regent. He was replaced in September 1837 by Pedro de Araujo Lima, afterwards marquess of Olinda, who held the office until the majority of the young emperor, which was fixed for the completion of his eighteenth year. His aptitude for business and his popularity were, however, so great that he was declared of age by the Chambers, July 23, 1840. He accordingly assumed the reins of government, and his coronation took place July 18, 1841. His highly cultivated abilities and varied attainments bear ample testimony to the care with which his education was directed by the eminent statesman who was his guardian. The chief measures of his reign have been directed with much success to the increase of the commercial and agricultural prosperity of Brazil, and to the extinction of slavery throughout the empire. He is also a warm patron of science, literature, and of all industrial enterprises. The wreck and plunder of the British ship "Prince of Wales" in 1861, at Albardão, on the coast of Brazil, and the murder of some of the crew, led to reprisals on the part of the British, and eventually, in 1863, to a suspension of diplomatic intercourse between the two countries. which was not resumed until more than two years after. The decision of the late king of the Belgians in favour of Brazil, in further disputes that arose with Great Britain out of this affair, tended greatly to establish the Brazilian prestige in Europe. The war with Rosas, the dictator of Buenos Ayres, in 1851-52, and that which broke out with Paraguay at the close of 1864, in which Brazil has been allied with Uruguay and the Argentine Confederation, and which has lasted with progressive fortune to the present time, have still further extended the influence of the Empire, the Emperor himself leading the army against the forces of Lopez, but latterly it has been under the command of the count of Eu. The actual President of the ministry is the Viscount de Itaborahy.

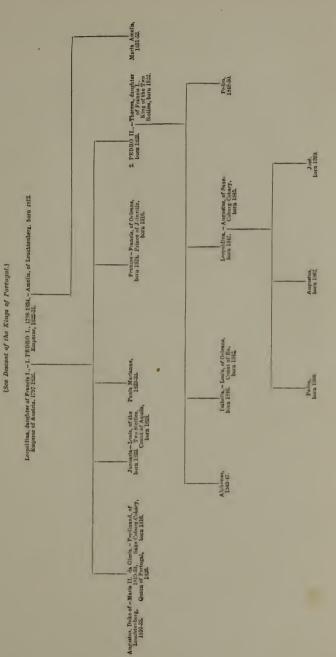

Dom Pedro II. married in person, September 4, 1843, the princess Theresa Christina Maria, fourth daughter of the late Francis I., king of the Two Sicilies. The empress was born March 14, 1822, and has had issue, besides two sons who died in infancy, two daughters:—

I. The Princess Imperial Dona Isabella Christina Leopoldina Augusta Michaella Gabriella Raphaella Gonzaga, born July 29, 1846, and married at Rio Janeiro, October 15, 1864, to Louis Philip Maria Ferdinand Gaston of Orleans, count of Eu, (born April 28, 1842,) eldest son of Louis, duke of Nemours, and grandson of Louis Philippe, late king of the French. She is the heiress presumptive to the throne.

2. Princess Dona Leopoldina Theresa Frances Caroline Michaella Gabriella Raphaella Gonzaga, born July 13, 1847, and married December 15, 1864, to prince Louis Augustus Maria Eudes of Saxe-Coburg-Cohary, (born August 9, 1845,) second son of prince Augustus of Saxe-Coburg-Cohary, and grandson of Louis Philippe, late king of the French, by whom she has issue three sons, Pedro, born March 19, 1866, Augustus, born December 6, 1867, and José, born May 21, 1869.

DESCENT OF THE EMPERORS OF BRAZIL.

HOUSE OF BRAGANZA.

BRUNSWICK.

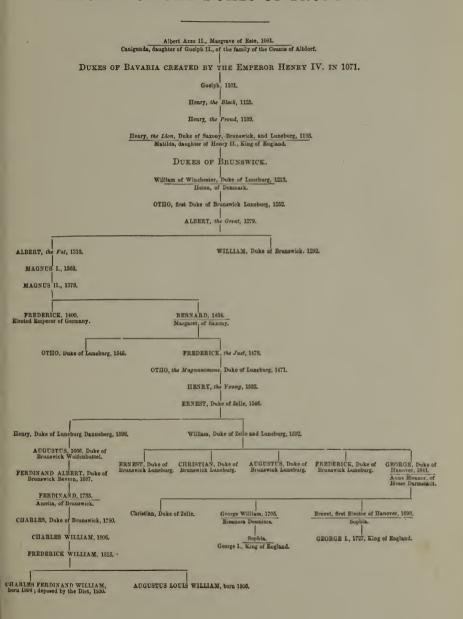

The founder of the family of Brunswick is generally considered to be Albert Azzo, margrave of Este, who, towards the end of the eleventh century, married Cunigunda, a daughter of Guelph of the family of the counts of Altdorf. His son, Guelph I., acquired the dukedom of Bavaria, and inherited all the possessions of the Guelph family. His successors continued to add to their territory, principally by their alliances, until their dominions reached from Italy to the Baltic. The great grandson of Guelph I., Henry the Lion, however was deprived of Bavaria, Saxony, Austria, and other possessions by ban of the empire, in 1179, for having seized Holstein and Mecklenburg, and was allowed to retain only Luneburg, Kalenberg, Gottingen, Grubenhagen, and Brunswick Wolfenbuttel. Otto, the grandson of Henry the Lion, was the first to receive the title of Duke of Brunswick. At his death, his possessions were divided between his two sons Albert and John, but became united again, under Magnus II., in consequence of the extinction of the line founded by John. Magnus left four sons, of whom Frederick, his immediate successor, became Emperor of Germany; Bernard continued the main line, and Henry founded the intermediate line of Brunswick, which became extinct in 1634. Ernest, a descendant of Bernard, inherited Brunswick and Luneburg. His eldest son Henry, duke of Luneburg Danneburg, founded the line of Brunswick Wolfenbuttel, and William, his younger son, that of Brunswick Luneburg. The great grandson of the latter, George Louis, became king of England in 1714.

At the death of Augustus, the son of Henry, the line of Brunswick Wolfenbuttel, was divided into two branches. Ferdinand Albert, the son of Augustus, inherited the duchy of Bevern, and founded the line of that name, and his nephews, Augustus William and Louis Rodolphus, dying without male issue, he succeeded to their title and reunited the territory. During the reign of his great grandson Charles William Ferdinand, who was killed at the battle of Auerstadt, Brunswick was occupied by the French, and taken to form the kingdom of Westphalia. Frederick William, son of the last mentioned, a general in the English service, distinguished himself greatly in the war against France, at the head of 7,000 of his own troops, including his celebrated regiment of Hussars, the Black Brunswickers. In 1813, he was enabled to assume the government of his dominions, but at the return of Napoleon from Elba, again took the field, and was killed at Quatre Bras, June 16, 1815, leaving two sons to the guardianship of their uncle, the Prince Regent of England, afterwards George IV.

Charles (Frederick Augustus William) the elder, was born October 30, 1804, and Augustus Louis William Maximilian Frederick, April 25, 1806. Their infancy was passed in exile; first, in Sweden, with their mother, afterwards at Baden and Vienna, and ultimately in England. At the death of their father, Charles succeeded to the duchy, which was governed during his minority, by Count Münster, the regent's minister at Hanover. He was declared of age, in October, 1823, and, two years afterwards, ruled in person. During his seven years' reign he was constantly at variance with his uncle, George IV. of England, as to the disposal of his private fortune. Finally, by what Prince Metternich termed a "revolution de famille," he was forced to quit his duchy, and further declared incapable of reigning by the Germanic Diet. His brother, who was then at Berlin, immediately assumed the government, and was recognised by the Diet and by his family, as the legal successor, April 25, 1831. His rule, at first, did not give entire satisfation, but, in 1848 and 1849, he established trial by jury, the equality of all religions before the law, liberty of the press, and various other liberal measures, which had probably the effect of preventing a revolution in his dominions, during that critical period.

Neither the reigning duke nor his brother has issue, and at their death the duchy would have reverted to the house of Hanover, had not that family been deprived of its territories. Brunswick now forms part of the North German Confederation.

DESCENT OF THE DUKES OF BRUNSWICK

DENMARK.

The ancient kingdoms of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, were united by the treaty or union of Calmar in 1397 under queen Margaret, who has been styled the Semiramis of the North, and this union continued until Sweden, led by Gustavus Vasa in 1521, enforced its separation from the two other kingdoms. In 1448 the late royal house of Oldenburg ascended the throne in the person of Christian, count of Oldenburg, who was also elected count of Holstein and duke of Schleswig in 1459. His descendants were elected kings without intermission until 1665, when Frederick III. changed the elective into an hereditary and absolute monarchy vested in his own family. Norway remained annexed to Denmark until 1814, when it was ceded to Sweden by the treaty of Kiel in exchange for Pomerania and Rügen, which were again exchanged in 1815 with Prussia for the duchy of Lauenburg. The Oldenburg dynasty was terminated by the death without issue of king Frederick VII., November 15, 1863, when the crown devolved upon the reigning sovereign by virtue of the Protocol of Warsaw, May 24— June 5, 1851, and of the conference-protocol concluded in London, May 8, 1852, by the great European powers, and following the law of the Danish succession passed July 31, 1853, by which the throne was settled in the line of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg.

CHRISTIAN IX., King of Denmark, of the Vandals and of the Goths, duke of Slesvig, Holstein, Stormarsken, Ditmarsken, Lauenborg, and Oldenborg, is the fourth son of the late duke Frederick William Paul Leopold of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, by the duchess Louisa Caroline, daughter of the landgrave Charles of Hesse-Cassel. He was born at the castle of Luisenlund near Schleswig, April 8, 1818, and for some time occupied the post of inspectorgeneral and commander-in-chief of the Danish cavalry. When the insurrection broke out in the duchies in 1848, he was the only prince of the house of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg who remained in the military service of Denmark during the war of 1848-50. He ascended the throne in accordance with the above-mentioned acts upon the decease of king Frederick VII., November 15, 1863, at a time when the relations between Denmark and the Duchies had assumed a most critical aspect. His first act was to give his assent to the new constitution that had been passed by the rigsraad. Duke Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Augustenburg immediately asserted his claims to the sovereignty of the duchies, although his father duke Christian had renounced in favour of Denmark, December 30, 1852, all his rights to them for a compensation of 3,500,000 dollars. The aspect of affairs was thus completely changed, and the diet of the Germanic Confederation resolved to support the pretensions of duke Frederick. Federal execution was decreed at Frankfort, December 21, 1863, and the Saxon and Hanoverian troops entered Altona. The Danes thereupon retired from Holstein in order to avoid a collision with the federal army. Dissensions, however, arose between Austria and Prussia and the rest of the Germanic Confederation, and resulted in an alliance of the former powers to secure to themselves the entire direction of the war in opposition to the wishes of the Diet. The Austrian and Prussian troops occupied Holstein, and invaded Schleswig after overcoming by mere force of numbers the heroic defence of the Danes. An eventful campaign ensued for the possession of the duchies, and after many desperate contests the decisive assault by the allies of the fortifications of Düppel, the bombardment of Alsen, and the occupation of Jutland, led to the termination of hostilities by a treaty of peace signed at Vienna, October 30, 1864. By this treaty the king of Denmark renounced all his rights to the duchies of Schleswig, Holstein, and Lauenburg, and placed them at the disposal of the allies. He also consented to a rectification of the Danish frontier, and to the indemnification by the duchies of the allies for the expenses incurred by them during the war. The inhabitants of the duchies were accordingly released from their allegiance, November 16, 1864.

The only subsequent events of importance have been the new constitution, sanctioned by the king in July 1866, and the treaty for sale of the Danish West Indian islands of St. Thomas and St. John to the United States in October 1867 for £1,500,000, which, however, has not been as yet ratified by the latter power. The now president of the ministry is the count

Christian Emil Krag-Juel-Vind-Frijs de Frijsenborg.

King Christian married, May 26, 1842, Louise Wilhelmine Frederikke Caroline Auguste Julie, princess of Fressen-Cassel, daughter of the late landgrave William of Hesse-Cassel, and of the princess Louise Charlotte of Denmark, sister of king Christian VIII. The queen was born September 7, 1817, and has issue:—
1. The Crown Prince Christian Frederik William Carl, general, heir-apparent to the throne.

born June 3, 1843. He married, July 28, 1869, the princess Louisa, only child of Charles XV., king of Sweden and Norway, who was born October 31, 1851.

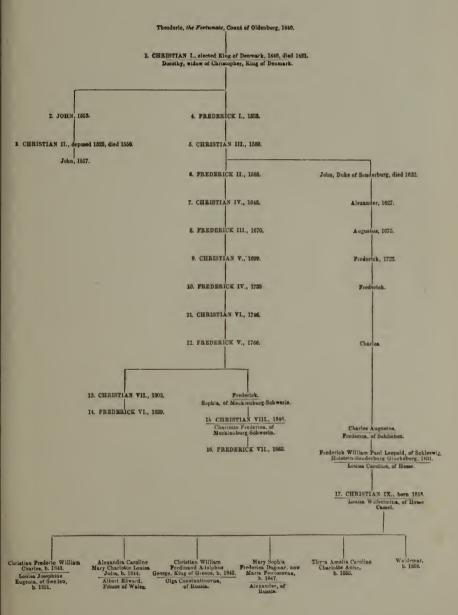

2. Princess Alexandra Caroline Marie Charlotte Louise Julie, born December 1, 1844, and married March 10, 1863, to Albert Edward, prince of Wales.

3. Prince Christian Wilhelm Ferdinand Adolph Georg, born December 24, 1845, now King

Georg I. of the Hellenes.

- 4. Princess Maria Sophia Frederikke Dagmar, born November 26, 1847, now grandduchess Maria Feodorovna. Married, November 9, 1866, Alexander Alexandrovitch, czarevitch of Russia.
- Princess Thyra Amalia Caroline Charlotte Anna, born September 29, 1853.
 Prince Valdemar, born October 27, 1858.

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF DENMARK.

EGYPT.

EGYPT, which had been under the sovereignty of the Borgeëh or Circassian Mamelukes since 1382, was taken by Selim I., Sultan of the Turks, in 1517. It then became tributary to Turkey, and was governed by Mameluke beys under a pacha, appointed by the sultan, till the French invasion of 1799. The French having been dispossessed in 1801 by the English, the Turkish government was restored. Mehemet Ali, a man of humble origin, who had been raised to high command in the Turkish army, was at that time with his corps of Albanians at Cairo, and became popular on account of the strict discipline and order which he maintained among his own troops, whose behaviour contrasted favourably with that of the Mamelukes, who had rendered themselves odious by numerous acts of violence. Having been proclaimed pacha in 1804, Mehemet Ali refused the dignity, which was then conferred on Khurshed. The latter, however, in a short period, became detested on account of his exactions, and then Mehemet Ali declared against him, and, with the support of the sheiks and backed by the interest of France, was appointed to the Pashalic of Egypt by the Sultan in 1806. The first few years of his reign were passed in contentions with the Mamelukes, whose power, however, he effectually subdued by the massacre of their chiefs in 1811. Having overcome opposition in Egypt, the efforts of Mehemet Ali were directed to the accomplishment of a scheme for emancipating himself from the yoke of Turkey; and in 1830 a circumstance occurred which served him, as a pretext, for setting the authority of his sovereign at defiance. Several thousand fellahs had quitted Egypt, and settled at Acre. On the refusal of Abdallah, the Pasha of that city, to give them up, Mehemet Ali sent an expedition, under the command of his reputed son, Ibrahim, to enforce his demands. This expedition, on account of a serious outbreak of cholera, did not start till the following year, when Syria was invaded, and the towns of Gaza, Jaffa, and Caïffa soon surrendered. Acre resisted longer and made a heroic defence, but was, at length, taken by assault after a six months' siege. The invasion of Syria being a clear act of rebellion, the Sultan decreed the deposition of the viceroy and his son, and sent an army against them. The Turks were defeated at Homs (Emesa), 19th July, 1832, and again at Konieh, December 20, 1832, when the forces of the Sultan were so completely shattered that the empire itself was, for a moment, at the mercy of the conqueror. The principal European powers then intervened and matters were arranged, for a time, by the treaty of Kutahieh, May 14, 1833, Syria remaining in the possession of Ibrahim. The systematic evasion, on the part of the Pacha, of all obligations entered into between the Porte and other countries, especially England and Austria, compelled the Sultan, in order to maintain good relations abroad, to enforce his authority by arms. He was again unsuccessful in the field (June 24, 1839), and had the further mortification of seeing the Turkish admiral pass over, with his fleet, to the enemy, (July 14, 1839). The triumph of the Pacha then seemed complete. Negotiations were attempted by the principal powers, but France, whose influence had always been paramount with the Pacha, could not be brought to countenance any measures of coercion against him. England, Austria, Prussia, and Russia, therefore, signed the treaty of London, without France, and began operations immediately. Sidon, Beyrout, and Acre were captured, and the Egyptians were driven out of Syria. On the other hand, the Sultan was prevailed upon by the powers to make the Pachalic of Egypt hereditary in the family of Mehemet Ali.

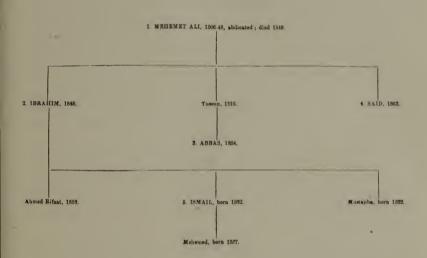

Mehemet Ali abdicated in favour of his adopted son Ibrahim in Sept. 1848, and died Aug. 2, 1849. Ibrahim reigned only a few months, dying Nov. 10, 1848. The successors of Ibrahim were Abbas, the son of Tussun Bey, Mehemet's eldest son, who died, July 14, 1854; Said, the fourth son of Mehemet, who died, Jan. 18, 1864.

ISMAIL PACHA, the present Viceroy, who has assumed the title of Khedive, is the second son of Ibrahim, and was born at Cairo in the year of the Hegira 1248, (1832). He was educated with his eldest brother, Ahmed Rifaat, at the Staff College at Paris. On his return to Egypt in 1849, he joined the party then opposed to the Viceroy Abbas. In 1855, he was sent by his uncle, Mohammed Said, on a confidential mission to the court of France, and on his return, through Italy, visited the Pope, to whom he was the bearer of an autograph letter of the Viceroy, accompanied by magnificent presents. In the absence of Said from Egypt in 1861, he carried on the government, and at the end of the same year took command of an army sent to subdue some revolted tribes on the frontiers.

He succeeded to the pachalic at the death of his uncle Saïd, on the 18th January, 1863. One of his first cares was to promote the cultivation of cotton, the supply of which had become very much diminished in consequence of the American civil war. In Nov. 1866, he established an Assembly of Deputies, which, however, has the power of discussing such subjects only as the Viceroy chooses to lay before it. The policy of the Viceroy, which, in accordance with that of his family, seems to be directed to the ultimate emancipation of Egypt from the sovereignty of the Porte, lately threatened to cause a rupture between him and his suzerain. He has, however, thought proper to accept the conditions set forth in a late firman of the Sultan, requiring that all taxes should be levied in the Sultan's name, that no new taxes should be imposed without necessity, and that no new foreign loan should be contracted without the Sultan's authorisation. He has also intimated his willingness to surrender to the Porte the breech-loaders and iron-clads which had been ordered by him.

The reign of Ismail Pacha will be remembered in connection with the completion, in 1869, of the canal through the Isthmus of Suez; a work commenced in 1859, during the pachalic of Saïd, and carried through, with indomitable energy and perseverance, by its projector, M. Ferdinand de Lesseps, now Duke of Suez, in spite of considerable opposition from various quarters, as well as from the present Viceroy himself, at the beginning of his reign. Should the canal be able to retain a sufficient depth of water, it will greatly facilitate traffic between the shores of the Mediterranean and countries on the Indian ocean.

SUCCESSION OF THE VICEROYS OF EGYPT.

FRANCE LEGITIMIST.

HENRY IV., the first prince of the house of Bourbon, who reigned in France, came to the throne in August 1589, when the family of Valois became extinct at the death of Henry III. The Bourbons reigned without interruption until 1791, when Louis XVI., the fifth sovereign of the line, was deposed during the revolution, Jan. 20, 1793, and subsequently executed.

In 1814 the dynasty was restored for a short period in the person of Louis XVIII., who was, however, obliged to leave France on the return of Napoleon from Elba, but was brought back again by the allies after the battle of Waterloo in 1815. At his death, in 1824, he was succeeded by his brother, Charles X., who reigned till July 1830, when, in consequence of the ordinances which he issued, suppressing the liberty of the press, and reconstituting the Chamber of Deputies, a revolution took place in Paris, which ended in the expulsion of the elder branch of the Bourbon family from the country.

Henry Charles Ferdinand Maria Dieudonné d'Artois, duke of Bordeaux, and count of Chambord, (Henry V. of France), the representative of the elder branch of the house of Bourbon, was born at Paris on the 29th of September 1820. He is the son of Charles Ferdinand d'Artois, duke of Berry, who was assassinated, Feb. 13, 1820, and of Caroline Ferdinanda Louisa, daughter of Francis I., king of Naples, now the widow of the Marquis Lucchesi Palli Campo Pignatelli.

After the revolution of July 1830, his uncle, the Duke of Angoulême, having renounced his rights to the throne as eldest son of Charles X., the latter abdicated in his favour, and he was proclaimed King of France, under the name of Henry the Fifth, in the presence of the troops assembled at Rambouillet. His reign, however, never had any practical existence, and he accompanied his family into exile.

For the next six years he resided by turns at Holyrood House, Prague, and Goritz, after which he spent a few years in visiting the military establishments of the principal countries of Europe, in most of which he was treated with honours which are usually only paid to de facto sovereigns. At the end of 1843 he settled for a time in London at a house in Belgrave Square, where he established his court, and received the homage of the principal members of the legitimist party.

Not having thought proper to take any active measures to advance his cause, when the revolution of February 1848 drove Louis Philippe from the throne, the political acts of the Duke of Bordeaux have been limited principally to declarations in favour of the temporal power of the Pope, to keeping together the members of the legitimate party, and to endeavouring to effect a union with the Orleans branch of his family, in order that his prospects may be the better should circumstances ever arise in his favour.

On the 16th November 1846, he married Maria Theresa Beatrix Gaetana, the eldest daughter of the Duke of Modena, and up to the present time (Nov. 1869) has no children.

FRANCE IMPERIAL.

THE vast empire of Charlemagne, including not only the ancient Franconia, but likewise Saxony, Upper Italy, Spain, and Burgundy, became dismembered during the feeble reign of his son and successor, Louis le Debonnaire, and the Carlovingian dynasty came to an end with the death of Louis the Indolent in 987. Hugues Capet was thereupon elected king by the nobles, and the crown remained in his family until the decease of Charles IV. in 1328, when it passed to the house of Valois in the person of Philip VI., and continued in that line until the assassination of Henry III. in 1589. Henry, king of Navarre, then ascended the throne and established the dynasty of the Bourbons, who reigned until overthrown by the Revolution of 1792. public was then constituted, but was virtually terminated by the appointment of Napoleon Bonaparte as first consul in 1799. The empire was proclaimed May 18, 1804, and finally ended with the abdication of Napoleon I., June 22, 1815. The restoration of the Bourbon dynasty followed, but was of short duration, for on the 30th of July, 1830, Charles X. was deposed, and the succession transferred to the younger branch of the Bourbons, the house of Orleans. Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans, was raised to the throne, August 9, 1830, and occupied it until February 24, 1848, when he was compelled to abdicate. France was then declared a Republic, and Louis Napoleon Bonaparte elected president, which office he held until December 2, 1852, when he was proclaimed emperor.

NAPOLEON III., (Charles Louis Napoleon), Emperor of the French, is the third son of Louis Bonaparte, sometime king of Holland, brother of the emperor Napoleon I., by his wife Eugénie Hortense de Beauharnais, daughter of the empress Josephine by her first marriage. He was born at the palace of his mother, rue Cerute (now Lafitte), April 20, 1808, and was baptized by cardinal Fesch at the palace of Fontainebleau, November 10, 1810, the emperor Napoleon and the empress Maria Louisa being sponsors. At the age of seven commenced his training in the school of adversity, when he left France as an exile. His education was most carefully conducted by his mother, and he went through the usual curriculum at the gymnasium of Augsburg. In 1824 they fixed their residence at Arenenberg on the lake of Constance, and he became an officer in the federal army. After having been engaged, in 1830, in the vain effort of the Italians to regain their independence, he resolved on making at Strasbourg, October 30, 1836, the rash attempt to gain possession of the throne of France. The affair proved a miserable failure, and he was arrested and exiled to America. He however soon returned to England, and on the 6th of August, 1840, made a second descent upon the French coast near Boulogne, but was again captured and sentenced to imprisonment for life. Sent to the fortress of Ham, he remained there until May 25, 1846, when he succeeded in effecting his escape to England in the disguise of a carpenter. Here he resided until the revolution of 1848 broke out, when he was elected a member of the National Assembly. This honour he at first declined; but upon being afterwards re-elected, he accepted the position, and took his seat on the 26th of September. The choice of a president of the Republic ensued on the 10th of December, and Louis Napoleon Bonaparte was elected by an overwhelming majority. On the 2d of December, 1851, by a coup-d'état he dissolved the National Assembly and decreed universal suffrage, and on the 22d of the same month was elected president for ten years. The re-establishment of the empire in the person and family of the princepresident was voted by the senate, November 7, 1852, and this being fully ratified by the voice of the nation, Louis Napoleon Bonaparte was proclaimed emperor, December 2, 1852, by the title of Napoleon III. The marriage of the emperor with Mademoiselle de Montijo, countess of

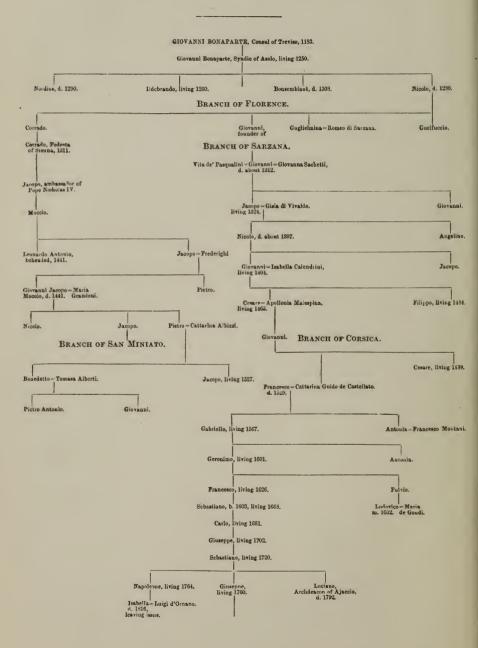

FRANCE IMPERIAL.

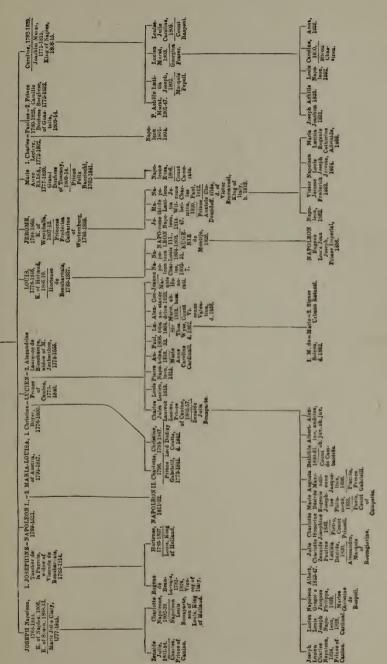

Teba, took place January 29, 1853, in November of which year an attempt was made to assassinate the emperor. The Crimean war, in which France and England were allied with Turkey against Russia, commenced in March 1854, and after many glorious victories was ended by the treaty of Paris in March 1856. In April 1855, the emperor and empress visited London, and later in the same year two attempts were made upon the life of the emperor. Besides these, his assassination was attempted by Orsini and his accomplices in January 1858, as he was going to the opera. The Italian war arose in May 1859, and France entered into an alliance with Sardinia against Austria. The emperor himself took the command of the French army throughout the campaign, and defeated the Austrians at the battle of Magenta, June 4, and again at Solferino, June 24. Peace was agreed to at Villa Franca, July 12, and the emperor returned to Paris, the empress having been left regent during his absence. The annexation of Savoy and Nice, March 24, 1860, formed a sequel to the war, and in February the greatest part of the principality of Monaco was purchased for four million francs. War was declared against Mexico, April 16, 1862, of which the only result was the placing of the unfortunate archduke Maximilian upon the throne of that country. The convention with Italy for the evacuation of Rome was concluded September 15, 1864, in accordance with which the French troops left the Holy City in December 1865, but were at a later period compelled by unforeseen events to return. During these eventful years the emperor has been aided by many trusted friends, among whom may be named the count Walewski, the duke de Morny, the duke de Persigny, and M. Rouher, who was minister of state from October 1863 until July 1869, when he resigned in consequence of the adoption by the emperor of reforms demanded by the liberal majority of the legislative assembly. M. Rouher however still remained the chief adviser of the emperor until December 1869, when a liberal cabinet was formed under the presidency of M. Emile Ollivier.

During the long years of his exile, as well as since his accession, the emperor Napoleon has been much devoted to the study of history, and of military and engineering science. His "Rêveries politiques," published in 1832, "Idées Napoléoniennes," 1839, "Fragments historiques, ou Comparaison des Révolutions de 1688 et 1830," 1841, and "Etudes sur le Passé et l'Avenir de l'Artillerie," 1846-63, his "Mélanges," collected and republished in his "Œuvres," 1856, and lastly, his "Histoire de Jules César," 1865-66, the two volumes of which already issued have been translated into several European languages—all bear indubitable testimony to his great ability and profound knowledge of historical events.

The emperor married, January 29, 1853, Marie Eugénie de Montijo de Guzman y Porto-Carrero, countess of Teba, second daughter of Manoel, count of Montijo and of Teba, and duke of Peneranda. She was born at Granada, May 5, 1826, and has one son, the Prince Imperial Napoleon Eugene Louis John Joseph, who was born at the palace of the Tuileries, March 16, 1856.

FRANCE ORLEANIST.

THE Orleans dynasty in France lasted from the overthrow of Charles X. in July 1830, to that of Louis Phillippe on the 24th of February 1848.

Louis Philippe Albert d'Orleans, count of Paris, representative of the Orleans branch of the house of Bourbon, is the eldest son of Ferdinand Philip Louis Charles Henry Joseph, duke of Orleans, eldest son of King Louis Philip, and of Helena Louisa Elizabeth, daughter of Frederick Louis, Prince of Mecklenburg Schwerin, and was born August 24, 1838. His father had always been a favourite with the French people. He had been educated at the College of Louis le Grand, like the son of a private gentleman, and had carried off prizes without a suspicion having ever arisen of his having gained them except by merit. He had afterwards distinguished himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and also at the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in two campaigns in Africa, and the siege of Antwerp, and had endeared himself in the siege of Antwerp in th self to the poor by many an act of charity. Had his life been spared, it is not unreasonable to suppose that his influence would have become powerful in the councils of his father, and that the events of the last quarter of a century would have been considerably modified, not only in France, but in Europe. The duke died in consequence of a fall from his carriage in July 1842. The Count de Paris was then but four years old. Five and a half years later the revolution of February drove his grandfather from power, and then took place the most momentous occurrence of the young prince's life, an occurrence which nearly had the effect of placing him on the throne. On the 24th of February the Chamber of Deputies was summoned to meet at three o'clock. Most of the members had already arrived at half-past twelve, and were scattered in the various offices adjoining the great chamber, discussing the momentous events then taking place in Paris. Before one o'clock the President, at the request of the members present, declared the sitting to be opened, and ordered business to begin. At that moment M. Dupin entered the chamber, accompanied by the Duchess of Orleans, and the Duke de Nemours, the Duchess leading her two little sons, the Count de Paris and the Duke de Chartres. M. Dupin announced that, "In consequence of the events which had taken place, the King had abdicated in favour of H.R.H. the Count de Paris, and had constituted the Duchess of Orleans regent." Here arose cries of "Vive le Roi! Vive le Prince! Vive la Régente!"

"Gentlemen," continued M. Dupin, "these cheers, so gratifying to the new king and to the regent, are not the first which have greeted them. They have just traversed the Tuileries and the Place de la Concorde on foot, with no other escort than the people and the national guard. Gentlemen, it is the most earnest desire of the regent to govern in accordance with the wishes of the people for the public good, and for the glory and prosperity of France." These words were received with renewed cries of "Vive le Roi!" and M. Dupin urged the president to record that the new king and the regent had been accepted by acclamation by the Chamber. The president was about to comply, when he was interrupted by M. Lamartine, who moved that the sitting should be suspended. A number of strangers, consisting of mechanics, students, national guards, and others, some armed with muskets and swords, had, by this time, made their way into the Chamber. The Duke de Nemours and several deputies urged the duchess to retire. She, however, kept her place. General Oudinot said, "If the duchess wishes to leave, we will accompany her; if she chooses to remain, let her do so, and she will do well, for she will be protected by our devotion." The pressure of strangers kept increasing, the deputies were being driven into the centre of the room. The duchess then retired towards the steps leading to the door under the clock, and took up her position on the last row of seats. The president called in vain on the strangers to retire. M. Marie, after many endeavours to get a hearing, said, "That a law already existed, fixing the regency on the Duke of Nemours, and that the Chamber had no power to create a regency; their immediate duty was to form a provisional government." MM. Crémieux, Odillon, Barrot, Ledru Rollin, and Larochejaquelin, collaboration of the control of followed to the same purpose; the multitude all the time continued waving flags, brandishing weapons, and shouting, "Down with the king." M. Chevalier, who was not a member, here rose and said, "Beware of proclaiming the Count of Paris without authority, but only let the duchess and the count have the courage to show themselves on the boulevards in the midst of the people, and the national guard and I will answer for their safety; and, if the people do not raise him to power—" All eyes were now turned towards the seats lately occupied by the duchess and her family, but the royal party had left. The remainder of the speaker's words were drowned in cries of "Vive la République." The prince's chance was lost.

Since 1848 the prince has resided principally in England, with the exception of a short period during the American war, when he and his brother served in the Federal army on the staff of General MacClellan. The count is said to be the author of an article in the Revue des Deux Mondes, entitled "L'Allemagne et ses Tendences Nonvelles."

The Count of Paris married on the 30th May, 1864, Mary Isabella, the daughter of the Duke of Montpensier, and has issue—

I. Mary Amelia Louisa Helen, born Sept. 28, 1865.

2. Louis Philip Robert, born Feb. 6, 1869.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Stuart dynasty having been terminated in 1714 by the death of Queen Anne, and the exile of Prince James, usually called the Pretender, the only surviving child of King James II., the crown of Great Britain and Ireland was transferred to the House of Hanover, in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Settlement of 1700. George Louis, Elector of Hanover, son of the Electress Sophia, and grandson of Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, the eldest daughter of James I., thereupon ascended the British throne as George I., and after an unpopular reign of nearly thirteen years, was succeeded in 1727 by his son, George III., at whose decease, in 1760, the crown devolved upon his grandson, George III., the eldest son of Frederick, Prince of Wales, and father of George IV., William IV., and Edward, Duke of Kent, the father of our present most gracious sovereign.

ALEXANDRINA VICTORIA, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, is the only daughter of Edward, Duke of Kent, fourth son of George III., and of the Princess Victoria Mary Louisa of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, fourth and youngest daughter of Francis, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, and widow of Emich Charles, Prince of Leiningen. She was born at Kensington Palace on the 24th of May 1819, her parents having hastened their return from Leiningen in order that their child might be "born a Briton," and baptized there on the 24th of June, the sponsors being the Prince Regent, the Emperor Alexander of Russia, the Queen-Dowager of Wurtemberg, and the Duchess-Dowager of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld. Upon the sudden death of the Duke of Kent, January 23, 1820, the care and education of the young Princess devolved upon her mother, who was greatly aided in her arduous task by her brother Leopold, the late King of the Belgians, by whose advice the superintendence of her studies was at first intrusted to the Baroness Lehzen, who was replaced at a later period by the talented Duchess of Northumberland.

The Princess Victoria ascended the throne at the decease of her uncle, William IV., on the 20th of June 1837, when she had just completed her eighteenth year, and was crowned in Westminster Abbey, June 28, 1838, amidst the most enthusiastic demonstrations of loyal affection. Two years subsequently she married, February 10, 1840, her cousin, Prince Francis Albert Augustus Charles Emmanuel of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who was born August 26, 1819, and styled "Prince Consort" by royal warrant, dated June 25, 1857. The administration of public affairs was retained from the date of the late king's death until August 1841 by Lord

GREAT BRITAIN.

Melbourne, who had instructed her Majesty in the principles of the constitution previously to her accession. The chief events of this period were the adoption of Sir Rowland Hill's scheme of the penny postage, and the outbreak of the war with China in March 1839, which did not terminate until August 1842, when the Melbourne cabinet had given way to the Tory government of Sir Robert Peel. About this time two infamous attempts were made to assassinate her Majesty, by firing at her whilst driving in the parks; the first by Edward Oxford, June 10, 1840, the second by John Francis, May 30, 1842; both happily were alike unsuccessful. In the autumn of 1843, the Queen went to France on a visit to Louis Philippe at the Château d'Eu, and two years later paid her first visit to Germany. The railway mania and the anti-corn-law agitation engrossed public attention during the year 1845, and on June 26, 1846, the act for the repeal of the corn laws received the royal assent. This was followed in the next month by the resignation of the Peel ministry, and the formation of an administration by Lord John Russell. At the close of 1845, the Sikh war broke out, and after a series of brilliant victories, was terminated by the annexation of the Punjab to the British dominions, March 29, 1849. The next salient feature of the present reign was the Great Exhibition of 1851, which was opened by her Majesty on May I, and owed its complete success to the exertions of the Prince Consort. In February 1852, the Russell ministry yielded up the reins of government to Lord Derby, who was, however, unable to retain them longer than December following, when Lord Aberdeen came into office at the head of a coalition ministry. The eastern question soon after assumed a serious aspect, and in March 1854 led to the alliance of Great Britain with France and Turkey, and the declaration of war against Russia. The Crimean war ensued, marked by the glorious achievements of the Alma, Balaklava, and Inkermann, and brought to an end by the storming of Sevastopol in September 1855, and the treaty of Paris, March 30, 1856. Meantime, an adverse vote in the House of Commons, respecting the conduct of the war, caused the resignation of Lord Aberdeen in February 1855, and the reconstruction of the ministry by Lord Palmerston, and in the same year a visit of the Emperor and Empress of the French to London was returned by the Queen and Prince Consort visiting Paris. War again arose with China in October 1856, and after the capture of Canton, was concluded by the treaty of Ticn-tsin, June 26, 1858. The mutiny of the Indian army was, however, by far the most serious event that has occurred since the Crimean war, threatening as it did the very existence of our Indian empire. The outbreak began in March 1857, accompanied by fearful atrocities, and spread rapidly throughout Bengal. Delhi and Cawnpore were retaken and Lucknow relieved by the exertions of Sir H. Havelock and Lord Clyde, but the pacification of the country was not accomplished before May 1859. Previously to this, the sovereignty of the East India Company had ceased, September 1, 1858, and her Majesty had been proclaimed Empress throughout India. The return to office of Lord Derby in February 1858, was followed by the formation of the Palmerston cabinet in June 1859. The Chinese war recommenced in August 1860, but was finally terminated two months later by the surrender of Pekin.

Early in the year 1861 the decease of the Duchess of Kent cast a gloom over the royal household, which was ere long deepened a hundred-fold by the sudden death of the Prince Consort, December 14, and which has never yet been entirely dispelled. The International Exhibition of 1862 shed some radiance upon that year, but this was destined soon to be obscured by the great distress caused by the cotton famine that ensued upon the outbreak of the civil war in the United States. The decease of Lord Palmerston, October 18, 1865, caused a rearrangement of the government under the premiership of Lord Russell, who resigned in June 1866, on account of being defeated upon his Reform Bill. The control of State affairs for a third time devolved upon Lord Derby, who was successful in repressing the Fenian disturbances, and in passing the Reform Act of 1867, to which the Reform Acts for Scotland and Ireland of 1868 formed the sequel. In February 1868, Lord Derby was compelled by ill-health to resign the lead of the Conservative party to Mr Disraeli, who held office until the ensuing December. The helm of State has since that time been directed by Mr Gladstone who has already signalised his administration by the act for the disestablishment of the Irish Church.

Her Majesty has always devoted much time to literature and art, and contributed largely to the "Early Years of H.R.H. the Prince Consort," published in 1867, since which she has published "Leaves from the Journal of our Life in the Highlands," 1868.

DESCENT OF THE SOVEREIGNS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

GREECE.

THE classic land of Greece, after having been subject to the Turkish yoke for three centuries, regained her independence by the treaty of Adrianople in 1829, at the close of an heroic struggle that lasted for upwards of eight years. The sovereignty of the newly-constituted kingdom was offered in 1830 to the late king of the Belgians, then Prince Leopold of Saxe-Cobourg-Saalfeld, but he thought it prudent to decline the honour. The choice of the three protecting powers, Great/Britain, France, and Russia, by a treaty concluded at London, May 7, 1832, then fell upon Prince Otho, second son of Louis I., king of Bavaria, who ascended the throne of Greece as Otho I. The government was carried on by a regency under the presidency of Count Ludwig von Armansperg until June 1, 1835, when it was assumed by the young king upon the completion of his twentieth year. His rule, although well-intentioned towards his adopted country, utterly failed to enlist the sympathies of his people, and a long and troubled reign was at length closed by his flight and deposition, October, 22, 1862. He died in exile at Bamberg in Bavaria, July 26, 1867, aged 52. The throne having thus become vacant, it was by universal suffrage conferred upon Prince Alfred of Great Britain by 230,016 out of 241,202 votes, the young Duke of Leuchtenberg, nephew of the Emperor Alexander II. of Russia, being also a candidate. He was declared king by the National Assembly, February 3, 1863, but the proferred crown was not accepted by the British Government. It was then proposed to the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha that he should become a candidate for the vacant throne, but he declined after some negotiations as to the conditions upon which he would consent, one of which was that he should govern Greece only until his nephew, the Prince of Coburg-Cohary, should be old enough to assume the government. The Duke d'Aumale and King Ferdinand of Portugal having also declined to be nominated for the sovereignty, it was resolved by the National Assembly, March 18, 1863, to offer it to Prince William of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, the reigning sovereign.

George I. (Christian William Ferdinand Adolphus George), king of the Hellenes, was born December 24, 1845. He is the second son of Christian IX., the present king of Denmark, by his queen, Louisa, third daughter of the late Landgrave William of Hesse-Cassel, and is brother of the Princess of Wales and of the Czarevna of Russia, the Princess Dagmar. Prince William entered the Danish naval service, in which he holds the rank of admiral. He was proclaimed by the National Assembly at Athens as King George I., March 30, 1863, and the venerable admiral Kanaris proceeded to Copenhagen to make a formal offer of the crown, with the consent of Great Britain, France, and Russia, the three protecting powers, on condition of the annexation of the Ionian Islands to Greece. This was accepted on Prince William's behalf by the late King Frederick VII. of Denmark, June 6, 1863. The newly-elected king was declared of age June 27; he arrived at Athens, October 30, and took the oath to the constitution on the following day. On September 12, 1863, he signed an act giving precedence over himself to his younger brother, Prince Waldemar, and his issue, in the line of succession to the throne of Denmark. The stipulated annexation to Greece of the Ionian Islands took place May 28, 1864, and a visit was paid to them by the king a few days afterwards. In November 1864 a new constitution was passed by the National Assembly and accepted by the sovereign. The succeeding years of his reign have been chiefly marked by endeavours to improve the financial position of the state, by frequent changes of ministry, and by the popular sympathy manifested towards the Cretan insurrectionists, which almost involved the country in war with the Ottoman empire. The principal statesman at the head of affairs have been Balbis, Kanaris, Kournoundouros, Boulgaris, and Zaimis, who is the actual president of the council.

King George married, October 27, 1867, in the chapel of the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg, the Grand-Duchess Olga Constantinovna, eldest daughter of the Grand-Duke Constantine Nicolaievitch of Russia, and niece of the Emperor Alexander II. His uncle, Prince John of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg was appointed regent during the king's absence from Greece. The Queen of the Hellenes was born, September 3, 1851, and has two sons, Constantine, Duke of Sparta, born at Athens, August 2, 1868, who is the heir apparent to the

HANOVER.

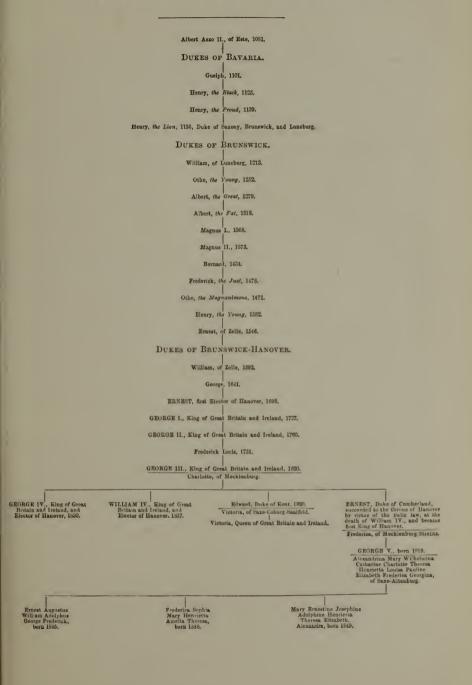

The founder of the present house of Hanover was William, the second son of Ernest, duke of Brunswick Luneburg, of the illustrious family of Guelph, who acquired the duchy of Luneburg in 1549, to which, in 1585, he added the county of Diepholz. He was succeeded, successively, by his sons, Ernest, Christian, Augustus, who obtained the principality of Calenberg, and the county of Hoya, and Frederick. The successors of Frederick were Christian Louis and George William, first and second sons of the above mentioned William. George William died in 1705 without male issue, and was succeeded by his younger brother, Ernest Augustus, who married Sophia, grand-daughter of James I., and received, in 1692, the title of Elector of Hanover. His son, George Louis, (George I. of England), united the territories of Luneburg into one state, which was further augmented, during the northern war in 1716, by the duchies of Bremen and Verden; in 1803 by Osnaburgh; and in 1814 and 1815 by Hilderheim, East Friesland, and other places. In 1803 Hanover was occupied by the French. In 1806 it was given by Napoleon I. to the king of Prussia, and in the following year the greater part of it was combined with the newly-created kingdom of Westphalia. In 1813 it reverted to its former sovereign, and in 1814 was erected into a kingdom. Hanover continued a part of the British empire until the death of William IV. in 1837, when it came into the possession of Ernest Augustus, duke of Cumberland, fifth son of George III., by virtue of the law regulating the succession in the Guelphic German dominions, which gives preference to the male branch.

George V., the son of Ernest Augustus, by the Princess Frederica Sophia Charlotte of Mecklenburg Strelitz, was born, May 27, 1819. At an early age he lost his sight, and it was doubtful whether it would be possible for him, on account of his infirmity, to rule the kingdom. His father, however, took the precaution to have the question settled at an early period by a decree, ordering that all documents presented to the future sovereign, for signature, should be read to him in the presence of a committee of twelve witnesses, and countersigned by their secretary. He succeeded his father, Nov. 18, 1851. During the fifteen years of his reign the prosperity of his country was greatly promoted by the establishment of docks and harbours at Harburg, Geestemunde, Emden, Leer, and Papenburg, and by the construction of numerous roads and railways; while international commerce was benefited by the abolition of the Staden dues. During the war in the Crimea he remained neutral, and would not permit recruiting to take place in his dominions for the service of England. In the war which Prussia waged against Austria and the Germanic Confederation, he defended the confederation, and, accompanied by his son, the crown-prince Ernest Augustus, led his army to the field and was present at the battle of Langensalza, which he won over a body of Prussians and Coburgers. On the following day, however, being surrounded by an army three times superior to his own in numbers, he was obliged to capitulate. At the termination of the war, the kingdom of Hanover was annexed to Prussia by decree of Sept. 20, 1866, against which King George protested before all the courts of Europe. Since the loss of his dominions King George has resided at Hietzing near Vienna. He is passionately fond of music, and has composed several pieces.

He married, Feb. 18, 1843, Alexandra Maria, the daughter of Joseph, duke of Saxe-Altenburg, and has issue:—

- 1. Ernest Augustus William Adolphus George Frederick, born Sept. 21, 1845.
- 2. Frederica Sophia Mary Henrietta Amelia Theresa, born Jan. 9, 1848.
- 3. Mary Ernestine Josephine Adolphine Henrietta Theresa Elizabeth Alexandra, born Dec. 3, 1849.

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF HANOVER.

HAYTI AND SAINT DOMINGO.

The island of St. Domingo, the second in extent of the West Indies, was discovered by Columbus, in December, 1492. It remained a Spanish colony until 1630, when its western portion was captured by French buccaneers. This portion became a colony of France in 1677, and remained so till 1791, when the black population revolted, and two years later massacred nearly all the whites. Toussaint L'Ouverture, the chief of the insurgents, was recognised by the French Directory as general in chief of the troops in 1794. In 1795, the eastern part of the island was ceded to France by Spain. Toussaint L'Ouverture, however, attempted to establish an independent republic in 1801, but, in the following year, was taken prisoner by the French who sent him to France, where he died shortly after. In consequence of a fresh insurrection raised by general Dessalines, a negro, the French evacuated the island in 1803. Dessalines was raised to power, October 8, 1804, under the title of Emperor, and styled James the First, and was assassinated, Oct. 17, 1806.

In 1808, the empire was divided into two parts; the blacks forming a monarchy under Christophe, a man of colour, who styled himself Henry I., king of Hayti; and the Mulattos constituting themselves a republic, under the presidency of Pethion. The latter was succeeded in 1818 by Boyer, who, at the death of Christophe, who committed suicide in 1825, was elected regent for life, over both States, and recognised by France in 1825. He was, however, deposed in 1843, when St. Domingo declared itself a republic, and chose for its president Pedro Santana, who was recognised by France in 1848, and by Great Britain in 1850. In March, 1861, during the presidency of José Valdevende, St. Domingo declared for annexation to Spain, and the offer was accepted by the Queen, on the 20th May. In 1863, it revolted against the Spanish authority, and after a war of two years, Spain renounced her sovereignty over the state by a royal decree, dated May 5, 1865, and the Spanish troops finally evacuated the country in September following. General Buenaventura Baez was then elected President of the Republic, but was driven away in consequence of a revolution organised by Pimentel in June, 1866; he returned, however, but the whole country revolted against him, and civil war continued until March, 1869, when general Cabral, the ex-President, promised submission and fidelity to President Baez. The project formed by the latter of giving up the Bay of Samana to the United States aroused much discontent. By the latest intelligence from New York, dated January 10, 1870, it appears that Commissioner Perry is in treaty with President Baez for the annexation of St. Domingo to the United States.

Hayti, after the successive short reigns of several presidents, elected General Soulouque who took the title of emperor, August 26, 1849, and styled himself Faustin I. His government having proved very tyrannical, an insurrection took place at Gonaïves in December, 1858, when General Geffrard was proclaimed president of the republic of Hayti by the French provinces of Artibonite and the "Nord." General Geffrard appears to have governed with wisdom and moderation. In 1862 a conspiracy, at the head of which was General Legros, occasioned the condemnation to death of twelve persons whose sentence, however, was commuted by President Geffrard into that of imprisonment. Another revolt occurred in 1865, under Salnave, which was suppressed, partly by the assistance of a British squadron, which, in consequence of an insult to the British consul by Salnave, bombarded the forts of Cape Hayti, after which the government troops took the place by assault, and Salnave made his escape to St. Domingo. Revolts occurred again in July, 1866, and in March, 1867, when President Geffrard abdicated and sailed for Jamaica. On the 16th June following, General Salnave was elected president for four years. Another revolution began in July, 1868, since which time civil war has been chronic in the state. By the latest advices received from Hayti, we learn that President Salnave was captured, by the revolutionary party, and having been tried by court-martial, was shot, Jan. 10, 1870.

HOLLAND.

The House of Nassau, although its early history may be open to some doubt, is certainly one of the most ancient and illustrious of Europe. Its genealogy can be traced to Otho, count of Nassau, a general in the army of Henry the Fowler, emperor of Germany. Henry II., his descendant, left two sons, Walram, from whom are descended the branches of Nassau, Wiesbaden, Weilberg, and Idstein; and Otho the founder of the branch of Dillemburg, Orange, and Siegen. William, called the elder, a descendant of the latter, shared the patrimony with his brother Henry, obtaining for his portion the counties of Nassau, Dillemburg, Beilstein, and Diest. It was he who introduced the protestant religion into his dominions. William, prince of Orange, one of his sons, became chief of the united provinces of the Netherlands in their struggle against Spain for independence, and was assassinated by Balthasar Gerard in 1584. At his death, the principality of Orange devolved successively upon his sons Philip William, who was a catholic and favoured the pretensions of Spain; Maurice, stadholder of the Netherlands, and Frederick Henry, also stadholder. William II., the son of the last named, was the father of William III., who, by his marriage with Mary, the daughter of James II., became king of England. Henrica Emilia, daughter of Frederick Henry, married Frederick William, count of Nassau Dietz, whose father, Ernest Casimir, count of Dietz, was the grandson, and whose grandfather, John, count of Dillemburg, was the son of William the elder. From Frederick Henry and Henrica Émilia followed, in the direct line, Henry Casimir, John William, William IV., who became hereditary stadholder, and William V., who retired on the invasion of the French in 1795. The House of Orange was restored in 1813, when William, the son of the last mentioned, assumed the title of king of the Netherlands. He was succeeded in the direct line by William II. and the present king.

William (Alexander Paul Frederick Louis) III., the eldest son of William II. and Anne Paulovna, the sister of the emperor Nicholas, was born February 19, 1817, and came to the throne, at the death of his father, March 17, 1849. During his reign the provisions of the new constitution, which came into force shortly before his accession, have been carried out in a most liberal spirit. Many important reforms have also been effected in the administration of the law, in the working of the post office, &c. A treaty has been concluded with Belgium for the abolition of the Scheldt dues, and many privileges, formerly exclusively enjoyed by the Dutch shipping interest, have been extended to traders of other countries. The finances, also, have reached so healthy a condition that the receipts have, for many years past, exceeded the expenses, the king, himself, having given an early example of economy, by considerably reducing the civil list, which in the budget of 1869 is put down at only 750,000 florins. Religious equality is established in the Netherlands, and the king has allowed the court of Rome to establish ecclesiastical dignities. The prosperity of the country has also been much enhanced by the construction of railways and canals, the draining of the lake of Haarlem, and various other important works.

In 1866 occurred a difficulty which threatened to kindle a war in Europe. Prussia having acquired a great accession of territory by her war against Austria, France, among other demands, insisted that no political union should continue to exist between Germany and any territory belonging to the Netherlands, and, consequently, that the Prussian garrison should be withdrawn from the fortress of Luxemburg. Prussia, unwilling to accede to this demand, pretended, in a dispatch addressed to the Netherlands' government, that her troops occupied the town not only as a federal garrison, but by virtue of the treaties of 1816 and 1856 between Holland and Prussia. The Dutch government in its reply, however, declined to admit a solution of the question which endeavoured to reconcile the dissolution of the German confederation with the presence of Prussian troops in Luxemburg, especially as Luxemburg had been declared a federal fortress as far back as 1814 and 1815. After much angry feeling had been excited, the matter was settled at a conference held at London, under the presidency of Lord Stanley, by the representatives of the powers who had signed the treaty of 1839, and it was agreed that Luxemburg should remain under the sovereignty of the house of Orange Nassau, that it should be neutral, and that its fortress should be demolished.

In September, 1868, the Roman catholic bishops published a declaration against the law of 1857, on public education, which law, however, the Chamber of Deputies refused to modify. With regard to the late acts of the Dutch legislature it may be mentioned that, in December, 1868, a large majority in the Chamber of Deputies (53 to 8), voted against the abolition of capital punishment, and that the two chambers have since abolished stamps on newspapers.

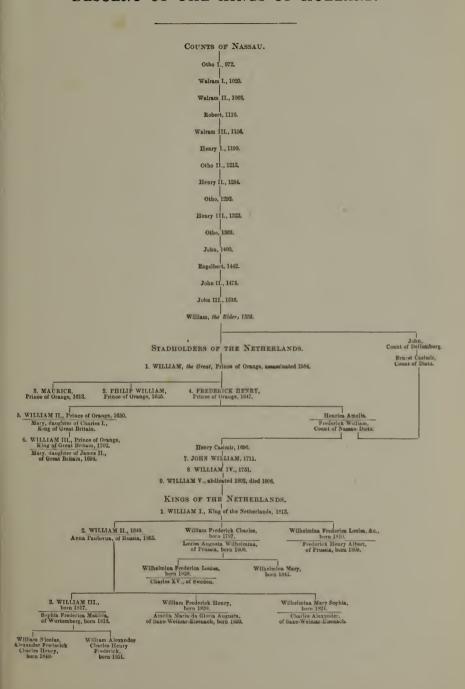

King William III. married, on the 18th June, 1839, Sophia Frederica Matilda, daughter of William I., king of Wurtemberg, and has issue:-

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF HOLLAND.

ITALY.

HUMBERT I., vicercy of Arles and count of Maurienne, the son of Berthold of Saxony, who lived in the eleventh century, is generally considered by genealogists to be the founder of the royal family of Savoy. Having obtained Chablais and the Valais as a recompence for services rendered to Germany in the field, he left the lordships of Savoy, Maurienne and the Valais to his son Amadeus, at whose death they came into the possession of his brother Otho, who, by his marriage with the daughter of the Marquess Manfred, had already acquired the marquessate of Susa with Turin, Pignerol, the valley of Aosta, and other places. Peter, the eldest son of Otho, dying without male heirs, the whole of the territory came into the possession of Amadeus II., his second son. Amadeus II. was succeeded in the direct line by Humbert II., Amadeus III., Humbert III., Thomas I., Amadeus IV., and Boniface. The last dying without male issue, his uncle Peter took possession of the crown. Peter was succeeded by his next brother, Philip, archbishop of Lyons, at whose death, without issue, the crown descended to his nephew, Amadeus V., the second son of Thomas, an elder brother of Peter and Philip, who had died during the reign of Boniface. Amadeus V., called the Great, added considerably to his dominions, and defended Rhodes against the Turks. After Amadeus V. the succession followed in the direct line in the persons of Aymon, Amadeus VI., Amadeus VII., and Amadeus In the reign of the last mentioned, Savoy was erected into a duchy by the Emperor Sigismund. Amadeus VIII. abdicated in 1434 in favour of his son Louis, and was afterwards elected pope under the name of Felix V. In 1449 he renounced the tiara, and died in 1451. Louis, his son, added parts of Novara and other places to his territories. Amadeus IX., and Philibert I., followed in direct succession. The latter, who died at the age of seventeen, was succeeded by his brother, Charles, then 14 years old. Charles conquered Saluzzo and Carmagnola, and acquired the title of king of Cyprus by the will of Charlotte, widow of Louis of Savoy, his uncle. He was succeeded by his son, Charles II., at whose death, in 1496, the line of Amadeus IX. becoming extinct, Philip, the son of Louis, came to the throne, who was followed by Philibert II. and Charles III., his first and second sons, after whom followed in direct succession Emmanuel Philibert, Charles Emmanuel the Great, Victor Amadeus I., and Francis Hyacinth I. The last dying at the age of six, after a reign of one year, was succeeded by his brother, Charles Emmanuel II., in whose reign some of the most magnificent structures of Turin were erected, and the passage was cut through Monteviso. Victor Amadeus II., the son of Charles Emmanuel II., followed, who, after the war of the Spanish succession, was made king of Sicily by the treaty of Utrecht in 1713, but exchanged that title for that of king of Sardinia. In 1730 he abdicated in favour of his son, Charles Emmanuel III., by whom he was afterwards imprisoned, and died in 1732. Victor Amadeus III. and Charles Emmanuel IV. followed in direct succession. The former having joined with other powers of Europe to put down the French revolution, lost Savoy, and the latter, after having been deprived of all his possessions with the exception of the island of Sardinia, abdicated in 1802. Victor Emmanuel I., his brother, succeeded, but Sardinia was incorporated into the kingdom of Italy in 1805, and remained part of the French empire till the fall of Napoleon in 1814, when Victor Emmanuel was restored. The congress of Vienna reestablished the limits of the kingdom of Sardinia as they had been in 1792. Victor Emmanuel was succeeded in 1821 by his brother, Charles Felix, at whose death, without issue, in 1831, the crown devolved upon Charles Albert, the father of the present king of Italy, a descendant of Thomas Francis, prince of Carignano, a younger son of Charles Emmanuel I.

VICTOR EMMANUEL (Maria Albert Eugene Ferdinand Thomas) II. is the son of Charles Albert king of Sardinia, and Queen Theresa, the daughter of Ferdinand, grand-duke of Tuscany, and was born March 14, 1820. In 1849 he accompanied his father in the war against Austria, and was wounded at the battle of Goito. After the defeat of the Sardinian army at Novara. March 23, 1849, he succeeded to the crown by the abdication of his father. Allowing the idea of Italian unity to remain in abeyance for a time, he inaugurated his reign, under the able ministry of the Marquess d'Azeglio, and afterwards of Count Cavour, by accomplishing various important internal reforms, such as establishing order in the finances, reorganising the army, &c. At the proposal of Count Cavour, the privileges of the clergy were very much curtailed, and public education was taken out of the hands of the religious corporations, by whom it had hitherto been monopolised. On the 10th April, 1855, he entered into a convention with England and France to assist in the war against Russia, and sent 15,000 men to the Crimea, under the command of General La Marmora, who greatly distinguished themselves at the battle of the Tchernaya.

About this time, the king lost within a short period, his mother, his wife, his brother, and his youngest child, and he himself suffered a serious illness. The organs of the ultramoutane party both in Italy and France did not fail to attribute this to the wrath of heaven. The king, however, continued resolutely in his course. In 1857, Austria remonstrated against the attacks of the free Sardinian press, but obtaining no satisfaction from Count Cavour, diplomatic relations between the two countries were broken off, and it was felt that peace would not be of long duration.

In the autumn of 1858, Count Cayour paid a memorable visit to the Emperor Napoleon at Plombières, at which the future course of the French and Sardinian governments is considered to have been arranged. On the new year's day following, the emperor, at his reception, declared to the Austrian ambassador that the "relations between France and Austria were not so good as formerly." On the 30th January, 1859, the alliance between Sardinia and France was cemented by the marriage of the Princess Clotilda, the daughter of the king, with Prince Napoleon, the emperor's cousin. The king, in his speech at the opening of parliament this year, said that "cries of woe had reached him from all parts of Italy." Both Austria and Sardinia had, in the meantime, been increasing their forces and strengthening their positions to the utmost. Austria, however, began hostilities, on the 26th April, by crossing the Ticino, and, on the following day, Victor Emmanuel took the field. The emperor of the French declared war against Austria, on the 3d of May, and he also joined his army. The allies were successful at Montebello, Palestro (where the king displayed great personal valour) Magenta, Malegnano, and finally at Solferino, at which last battle the emperors of France and Austria, and the king of Italy were present. Lombardy was then in the possession of the allies, and the war was brought to a close, without any attempt being made on Venetia, where the Austrians were exceedingly strong, by the emperor of the French and the emperor of Austria signing preliminaries of peace at Villafranca, to The revolted states of Tuscany, Parma, Modena, and Romagna were soon after, at their request, annexed to Sardinia. The expedition of Garibaldi to Sicily and Naples, at first diplomatically disavowed by Count Cavour, afterwards received support from the Sardinian government, who sent an expedition through the territories of Umbria and the Marches, lately taken from the Pope, and completed the conquest of the kingdom of the Two Sicilies by the capture of Gaeta. In the case of all these annexations the wishes of the people were ascertained by universal suffrage, and in a year and a half from the commencement of the Austrian war, Victor Emmanuel was in possession of the whole of Italy, with the exception of Rome and the Venetian provinces, and took the title of king of Italy, by virtue of a law passed 17th March, 1861. The difficulty of the Italian government, after this, was to restrain the premature action of Garibaldi and his party, impatient for the annexation of the rest of the peninsula. Prior to the breaking out of hostilities between Austria and Prussia in 1866, the king of Italy had concluded a treaty of alliance with the latter country, and on the 18th June declared war against Austria, on the pretext that Austria had notified her intention of defending the German confederation against Prussia. The king joined the army on the 21st, leaving the government in the hands of the prince of Carignano. In the war which followed, the king's two sons, Humbert and Amadeus, displayed great bravery, and the latter received a wound in the chest. The Italians took Borgoforte, and were successful in some minor engagements, but were repulsed, with heavy loss, at Custozza, and were defeated at the naval battle of Lissa. Austria, however, being unsuccessful against the Prussians, ceded Venetia to France. In October following, France gave up Venice to a communal council of that city, and on the 4th November the king of Italy received a deputation from Venetia, transmitting to him the result of a popular vote, by which all the Venetian provinces declared their desire for annexation to Italy. After this, the only portion of Italy not in the possession of the king was Rome, with its surrounding territory. There were, however, serious difficulties in the way of its acquisition. On the 15th September, 1864, the king had signed with the French government a treaty for the departure, within two years, of the French troops from Rome, in which he had guaranteed that the papal territory should not be attacked from without, and that Florence should be made the capital of his kingdom. The French troops, in consequence, had quitted Rome in Dec. 1866. The aspirations of the Italian people for the possession of Rome had been put into form by a resolution which had been passed almost unanimously by the senate and the chamber of deputies as far back as 1861, to the effect that Rome ought to be the capital of Italy, but that it ought to be acquired by moral means. When, therefore, in Oct. 1867, Garibaldi published a proclamation in Florence, inviting the nation to join in an expedition against Rome, the Italian government, not wishing to lose popularity, took no measures to prevent him from carrying his scheme into execution. But matters did not turn out as they had done in Sicily and Naples. France immediately sent troops to assist the pope, and uphold the treaty of September, and Garibaldi was defeated at Mentana. The Roman question has since remained in abeyance, and the Italian government has, during the last two years, directed its chief attention to matters of finance.

King Victor Emmanuel, who from his personal uprightness, has acquired the well-deserved appellation of $R \geq Galantuomo$, married, on the 12th of April, 1842, Mary Adelaide Frances Rainera Elizabeth Clotilda, the daughter of Rainer, archduke of Austria, by whom (who died Jan. 20, 1855), he has surviving issue:—

I. Clotilda Maria Theresa Louisa, born March 2, 1843; married, January 30, 1859, to Prince Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte.

2. Humbert Rainer Charles Emmanuel John Maria Ferdinand Eugene, prince of Piedmont, born March 14, 1844; married, April 22, 1868, to Maria Margaret Theresa Jane, princess of Savoy, who has issue:—

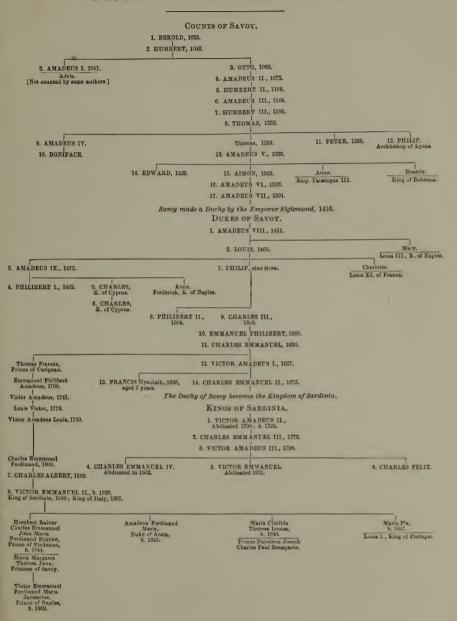

Victor Emmanuel Ferdinand Maria Januarius, prince of Naples, born Nov. 11, 1869.

3. Amadeus Ferdinand Maria, duke of Aosta, born May 30, 1845; married May 30, 1867, to Maria Victoria Charlotte Henrietta Jane, the daughter of prince Charles Emmanuel dal Pozzo della Cisterna, and has issue:—

Emmanuel Philibert Victor Eugene Albert Genoa Joseph Maria, duke of Apulia, born Jan. 13, 1869.

4. Maria Pia, born November 16, 1847; married, Oct. 6, 1862, to Louis, king of Portugal.

DESCENT OF THE KING OF ITALY.

LUCCA.

Lucca, a small territory in the north of Italy, on the shores of the Mediterranean, at one time a Roman colony, passed under successive rulers until 1370, when it purchased its freedom of the emperor Charles IV. for 200,000 florins. After this it retained its independence until the invasion of the French, and was styled the most serene republic of Lucca, (La serenissima Repubblica di Lucca). In 1805, it was united to Piombino, and formed into a principality by Napoleon I., who assigned it to his sister Eliza, the wife of colonel Bacciocchi. After the fall of Napoleon, the congress of Vienna created Lucca a duchy, and conferred it on Maria Louisa, the daughter of Charles IV., of Spain, and widow of Louis, king of Etruria, and her children; the conditions being that, should the duchess or her children come into possession of the duchy of Parma, or should the family become extinct, the duchy of Lucca should be united to the Grand-Duchy of Tuscany. Maria Louisa assumed the reins of government in 1818, and died March 13, 1824.

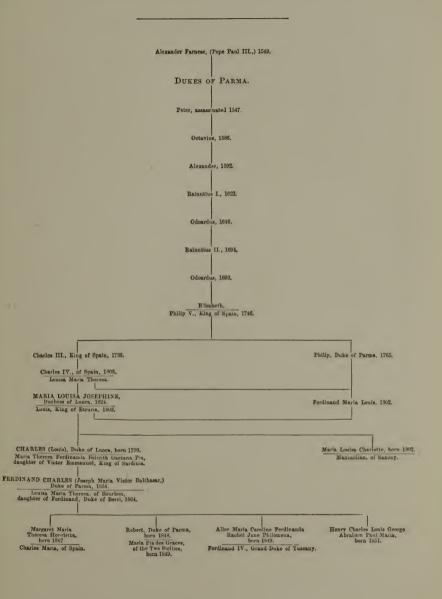

CHARLES LOUIS, her son and successor was born 23rd December, 1799. Being assured of one day obtaining the duchy of Parma, he does not appear to have taken a great personal interest in the affairs of the lesser state, the government of which he left to his ministers. After the death of the Marquess di Mansi, the finances of the duchy fell into apparently hopeless confusion, through the mismanagement of his successor, and the duke experienced much anxiety in consequence. He was extricated from his difficulty, however, by the administrative skill of a young native of Yorkshire, who had entered his service as groom, and on whom he subsequently confered the title of baron. Baron Ward had a genius for diplomacy, and was, above all, an honest man. When the duke had discovered his merits, he left the management of affairs entirely to him. "He consulted him (says Sir Bernard Burke in his Vicissitudes of Families) in many perplexed and difficult cases, and he invariably found such benefit from the advice of his new counsellor that he began to regard him as almost infallible."

In 1838, the duke attended the coronation of the Emperor of Austria, at Milan, as king of Lombardy, and then proceeded to England to be present at that of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. In 1847, when it was clear, from the state of health of the archduchess Maria Louisa, that the sovereignty of Parma would soon devolve upon him, he ceded Lucca to Leopold, grand-duke of Tuscany, October 5, 1847; but his escape from the cares of state was not of long duration. Maria Louisa died on the 18th of the following month, when he was required to assume the sovereignty of Parma. Here again he was relieved from much trouble by baron Ward, who, according to the above-named authority, governed the Italian principality, although generally residing at Vienna, where he was accredited Minister Plenipotentiary. When troubles arose in 1848, the duke established a regency, which was replaced by a provisional government a few days afterwards. He quitted the duchy on the 19th of April, renouncing the sovereignty in favour of his son, Ferdinand Charles, March 14, 1849.

CHARLES LOUIS, since his abdication, has resided principally on his Tuscan estate near Viareggio. He married, September 5, 1820, Maria Theresa Ferdinanda Felicia Gaetana Pia, daughter of Victor Emmanuel I., king of Sardinia, and had issue, one daughter, who died in infancy, and the above-named son Ferdinand Charles, who was born Jan. 14, 1823, and assassinated, March 27, 1854.

Ferdinand Charles married Louisa Maria Theresa of Bourbon, the daughter of the duke of Berry, and had issue, Robert Charles Louis Maria, heir to the families of Plantagenet, Stuart, Tudor and Bourbon, born 19th July, 1848, and married (April 5, 1869) to Maria Pia, the daughter of Gaetan, count of Girgenti, Infant of Spain.

DESCENT OF THE DUKE OF LUCCA.

Benito Juarez, the present president of Mexico, is descended from the Indian race of the Tapatecos, and was born in 1802. Although without the advantage of fortune, he was enabled, by his own efforts, to acquire a regular education. He graduated in the college of Oaxaca, studied law, and, in 1830, became a member of the Institute of Arts and Sciences of Mexico. In 1833 he was elected member of the Chamber of Deputies, and successively held the important posts of Professor of Canon Law at the Institute of Oaxaca, secretary to the Supreme Tribunal of Justice, substitute judge of the same, civil judge of the first instance, and attorney-general of Oaxaca. In 1846 he became a member of Congress, where he advocated the secularization of church property. In 1851 he became president of the Supreme Court of Justice.

When President Comonfort was compelled to make way for President Zuloaga, in January, 1858, Juarez, who was then chief of the constitutional party, refused to recognise the new president, and established a government of his own at Vera Cruz. Civil war ensued, but without any important result during the presidency of Zuloaga. When Zuloaga was deposed in December, 1858, and General Miramon placed in power, the latter laid siege to Vera Cruz, but was obliged to retire to defend Mexico, which was threatened by the constitutional party. In April, 1859, the government of the United States, which had previously recognised General Miramon, being unable to obtain the ratification of a treaty for placing the provinces of Chihuahua and Sonora, situated on the highway to the Gulf of California, under the protection of the United States, transferred its confidence to Juarez, who made the concessions required. This was a triumph to the latter, who turned his advantage to account by at once confiscating the property of the clergy, establishing civil marriage, carrying on the railway from Vera Cruz to Mexico, and performing and promising many other important acts. In the meantime the civil war continued, but Juarez had the immense advantage of In the meantime the civil war continued, but Juarez had the immense advantage of being well supplied with funds from the custom-house of Vera Cruz, while money was scarce in the treasury of his rival. On the 22d of December, 1860, General Miramon was finally defeated at the battle of San Miguelito, and Juarez entered Mexico on January 11, 1861. He immediately dismissed the officials of the previous government, expelled the representatives of foreign powers who had shown sympathy with General Miramon, and, after having been recognised by England and France, caused himself to be re-elected to the presidency, June 11, 1861. His difficulties, however, were not over. Depending for funds on forced loans, confiscations, and extortions of all kinds, and being, consequently, unable to meet his engagements he passed a decree on June 17th and being, consequently, unable to meet his engagements, he passed a decree, on June 17th, 1861, suspending for two years payments to creditors of the state. This violation of good faith induced England, France, and Spain to combine in an armed expedition to enforce their claims. England and Spain, having declared themselves satisfied with concessions promised to them, withdrew from the expedition, and France was left to carry on the war alone. Juarez made preparations for a stout resistance, and obtained a loan of 25,000,000 dollars from the United States, pledging as security several provinces of Mexico. The French received a check at Puebla, but, after receiving reinforcements under General Forey, succeeded in occupying the country from the coast to the city of Mexico. Juarez, in the meantime, though obliged to fall back, never ceased to keep a semblance of government in some part or other of the Mexican territory. An assembly of notables having met at Mexico, July 8, 1863, to deliberate on the future form of government, decided—1. That Mexico should adopt a limited hereditary monarchy under a Catholic prince. 2. That the sovereign should bear the title of emperor. 3. That the imperial crown should be offered to the Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian of Austria. 4. That, should the Archduke Maximilian be prevented from accepting the offer, the Emperor Napoleon III. should be requested to designate some other Catholic prince. A deputation was sent to the archduke at his seat at Miramar, who accepted the crown on the conditions that the whole Mexican nation should confirm the wishes of the capital, and that the integrity of the new empire should be sufficiently guaranteed. These conditions being obtained, he gave up his claims to the Austrian succession, and departed for Mexico. He arrived at Vera Cruz, May 28, 1864, where he was well received by the native population, and made his entry into the city of Mexico on the 12th of June following. The emperor initiated several reforms, and his reign, had it been permitted to continue, would doubtless have been a boon to the country. He was, however, engaged in a constant struggle not only with the supporters of Juarez, but with those of General Ortega, who claimed the presidency for himself. There were also other opponents to his rule, supported by bands of filibusters organised in the United States. After the departure of the French army, which was withdrawn at the beginning of 1867, he left Mexico at the head of all his available troops, and marched on Queretaro, which he reached on February 19. After a brave defence, this city was taken (May 15) by General Escobedo. The emperor was made prisoner of war, and on the 19th of June following condemned to death by a council of war, and shot, together with Generals Miramon and Mejia, notwithstanding the protests of the European powers.

Since the overthrow of the empire, President Juarez has had to contend against several serious insurrections raised by Martinez, Ortega, and Negrete, candidates for the presidency. In June, 1869, General Vega endeavoured to organise an independent confederation in the northern part of the republic.

SUCCESSION OF THE RULERS OF MEXICO.

MEXICO, from its conquest by the Spaniards in 1821, until it sequired its independence, was governed by viceroys nominated by the King of Spain.

In 1821, after a struggle extending over eleven years, it threw off the Spanish yoke, and has since been ruled by the following Emperors, Presidents, and Dictators:—

AUGUSTINE ITURBIDE, Generalissimo, 1821.

AUGUSTINE ITURBIDE, Emperor, 1822

Generals GUERRERO, BRAVO, and NEGRETE, Dictators 1823.

MONACO.

SITUATED upon the confines of France and of Italy, the little state of Monaco is bounded on the south by the gulf of Genoa, on the north and east by Savoy, and on the west by the department of Var. The sovereignty of this territory has been vested in the noble Genoese family of Grimaldi ever since the year 968, when the Emperor Otho I. bestowed upon Grimaldi I. the fortress and lordship of Monaco, from which he had expelled the Saracens. One of his descendants. Charles the Great, led the renowned Genoese archers and perished in their discomfiture at the battle of Crécy in 1346. After having been since 1450 under the protection of Spain, Honorius II., in 1553, invoked the protection of Francis I. of France, but soon returned to his allegiance to the king of Spain, and fought valiantly at the battle of Lepanto; Honorius II., his grandson, in 1641, drove the Spaniards from his dominions, and by the treaty of Péronne again placed them under the protectorate of France. For this act his Milanese and Neapolitan possessions were confiscated by Spain, and he received from Louis XIV., as compensation for these losses, the duchy of Valentinois and other estates. The direct male line of the Grimaldi princes of Monaco became extinct upon the death of Prince Anthony, February 26, 1731, when the principality was carried into the house of Matignon by the marriage of his eldest daughter, Louisa Hippolyta, with Jacques François de Léonor Goyon-Matignon, count of Torigny, who assumed the surname and arms of Grimaldi, and received the duchy of Valentinois upon his marriage in 1715.

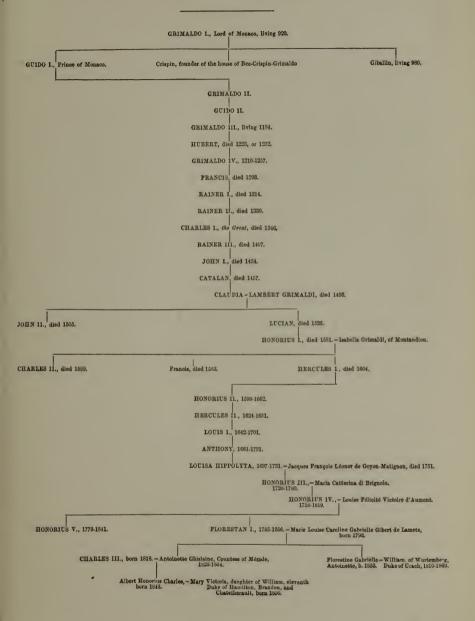

United to France in 1793, by decree of the national convention, Monaco regained its independence in 1814 under Honorius V., and by the treaty of Paris, November 20, 1815, was placed under the military protectorate of Sardinia. In 1848 the communes of Mentone and Roquebrune revolted against the authority of his brother and successor Florestan I., and demanded to be annexed to Piedmont. This was decreed by Charles Albert, king of Sardinia, September 18, 1848, and Mentone and Roquebrune were occupied by his troops, but upon appeal to France their annexation was suspended, and the Sardinian troops withdrawn. Florestan I., who in his younger days had been an actor at the theatre of the Ambigu-Comique, died at Paris on the 20th of June, 1856.

Charles III., Honorius, prince of Monaco, and duke of Valentinois, is the only son of Florestan I., prince of Monaco, by his wife the Princess Maria Louisa Caroline Gabriella Gibert de Larnetz, who was born, July 18, 1793, and is still living. He was born on the 8th of December 1818, and in 1853 endeavoured to excite at Mentone a public demonstration in his favour against his father. No sooner, however, was he recognised, than the people rose against him, and he owed his safe escape to the national guard and Sardinian carabineers, who escorted him to prison and thence to Genoa, where he was at once released.

He succeeded his father, June 20, 1856, and on the 2d of February 1861 he ceded to France his sovereign rights over the communes of Mentone and Roquebrune, receiving as indemnity the sum of four million francs. These communes now form part of the department of the Alpes Maritimes. Monaco, with its beautiful château, and its casino, was alone reserved by Prince Charles, who resides for six months alternately there and at Paris.

Prince Charles married, September 28, 1846, Antoinette Ghislaine, countess of Mérode, who was born September 28, 1828, and died February 10, 1864, leaving issue an only son, Albert Honorius Charles, duke of Valentinois, a lieutenant in the French navy, born November 13, 1848, and married September 21, 1869, to the Lady Mary Victoria Hamilton-Douglas, (b. 11 Dec. 1850), only daughter of William, late duke of Hamilton, Brandon, and Châtelherault, and the Princess Marie of Baden.

DESCENT OF THE PRINCES OF MONACO.

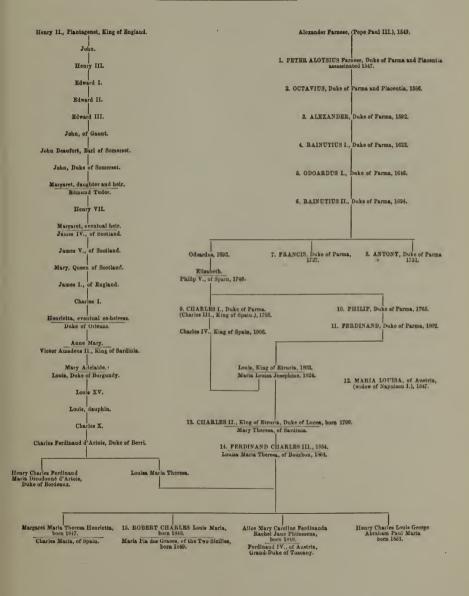

PARMA.

PARMA and PLACENTIA were erected into a duchy in 1545, in which year they were given by pope Paul III. to his natural son, Peter Louis Farnese, in whose family they remained until the death of duke Antonio in 1731, when the male line of the Farnese dynasty became extinct, and their dominions passed to the house of Bourbon by reason of the marriage of Elizabeth Farnese with Philip V. of Spain. Don Carlos, their son, succeeded duke Antonio, and in 1735. became king of the Two Sicilies, whereupon he ceded his duchy to the house of Austria, in whose possession it remained until it was transferred by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, October 18, 1748, to Philip, brother of Don Carlos. In 1801, Louis, duke of Parma, was made king of Etruria, and the duchy united to France until April 1814, when Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla were conferred by the treaty of Paris on the archduchess Maria Louisa of Austria, wife of the emperor Napoleon I. The ex-empress Maria Louisa died December 17, 1847, and the duchy of Guastalla became annexed to Modena, whilst Parma and Placentia devolved upon Charles Louis, duke of Lucca, who resigned Lucca to the grand-duke of Tuscany, in accordance with the arrangements of previous treaties. Charles Louis was the son of Louis I., king of Etruria, whom he succeeded as Louis II., May 27, 1803, but was deprived of his kingdom by Napoleon in 1807, whilst yet a child. Born December 22, 1799, he succeeded to the duchy of Lucca upon the decease of his mother, the Infanta Maria Louisa, March 13, 1824. He assumed the dukedom of Parma as Charles II., and after a short reign abdicated, March 14, 1849, in favour of his son, Ferdinand Charles, and has since resided at Viareggio in Tuscany. Charles III. reigned five years, during which his dominions were ruled from Vienna with remarkable intelligence and dexterity by baron Ward, who was at the same time prime minister and minister-plenipotentiary to Austria. Ward, although originally but a Yorkshire groom, had by his integrity and aptitude for business won for himself the confidence and esteem of Charles Louis, duke of Lucca, who made him a minister of state, and intrusted him with the absolute direction of state affairs. His talent for diplomacy was so great as to lead prince Metternich to style him a "heaven-born diplomatist." Government by a foreigner, and with the moral support of Austria, caused, however, great public discontent, until at last the duke was stabbed in the streets of Parma, March 26, 1854, and died from his wound on the following day.

ROBERT (Charles Louis Maria of Bourbon), Duke of Parma and Placentia, the elder son of the late duke Charles III. and Louisa Maria Theresa, daughter of Ferdinand, duke of Berry, was born July 9, 1848. Being a minor at the death of his father, March 27, 1854, he succeeded to the dukedom under the regency of his mother, who immediately dismissed baron Ward, and governed the duchy until the outbreak of the war in Italy, when the Parmesans established a provisional government, and compelled the duchess-regent and her son to retire into Switzerland, May 1, 1859. The revolutionary movement proved successful, and Farina was made dictator until the annexation of Parma and Placentia to Sardinia was voted, September 12, 1859, and they were incorporated with that kingdom by the royal decree of March 18, 1860.

The duchess Louisa, who was sister of the Count de Chambord, died at Venice, February 1, 1864. Duke Robert, who now resides at Frohsdorf in Lower Austria, is presumptive heir to the most ancient dynasties of Europe. He will succeed the duke of Bordeaux as undoubted lineal heir of the royal house of Bourbon, and will be also heir of the ancient Celtic kings of Scotland, through the elder line of Baliol. He is moreover co-heir of the Stuart, Tudor, and Plantagenet kings of Great Britain. He has one brother, Henry, count of Bardi, born 12 February, 1851, and two sisters, Margaret, born 1 January, 1847, and married 4 February, 1867, to the Infant Don Carlos of Spain, and Alice, born 27 December, 1849, and married January 11, 1868, to Ferdinand IV., grand duke of Tuscany.

DESCENT OF THE GRAND-DUKES OF PARMA.

PERSIA.

The founder of the reigning dynasty of Persia was Agha Muhammad Khan Kajar who, after Persia had for many years been torn by civil war, acquired the sovereignty by his victory over Luft Ali Khan Zend in 1795. Agha Muhammad was assassinated in 1797, and succeeded by his nephew, Shah Fatah Ali, who, in his wars with Russia, lost most of his provinces on the Caspian, together with Erivan and the country of the Araxes. His successor was Muhammad, a grandson of Fatah Ali and father of Nasr Eddin, the present shah.

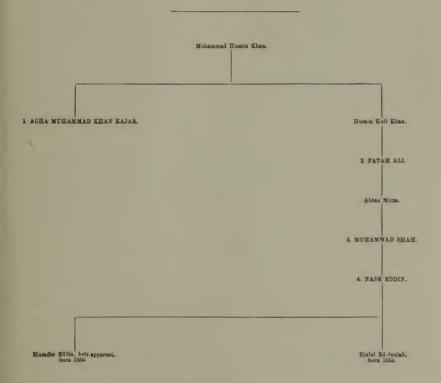

NASR EDDIN was born in 1820, and succeeded to the throne, October 13, 1848. From the geographical position of the Persian dominions it is almost impossible for a ruler of that country to avoid being swayed either by English or by Russian influence, and the present shah has doubtless, at different times, submitted to each. At the beginning of the war between Russia and Turkey he declared his neutrality, but, shortly before its close, entered into a treaty with Russia. In the following year, in consequence of the occupation of Herat by Persian troops, the government of India declared war against him (Nov. 1, 1856). After a few months' of hostilities, during which General Outram captured Karrack, Bushir, and other places, a treaty of peace was signed, at Paris, by Lord Cowley and the Persian ambassador, in which ample satisfaction was given to England. The shah has had wars with several neighbouring states, and has lately been successful in an expedition against the Turcomans.

Shah Nasr Eddin has always shown a disposition to advance the welfare of his subjects by adopting, whenever possible, the civilisation of Europe. His army is drilled after the European method, a navy is in process of formation, and the electric telegraph has been introduced into his dominions.

The children of the Shah are-

- 1. Muzaffer-Eddin, heir apparent, born in 1850.
- 2. Djilal-Eddauleh, born in 1853.

SUCCESSION OF THE SHAHS OF PERSIA, OF THE DYNASTY OF THE KAJARS.

POPE PIUS IX.

GIOVANNI MASTAI FERETTI, POPE PIUS IX., was born at Sinigaglia in 1792, and educated at the College of Volterra. At the age of eighteen, being compelled, in consequence of bad health, to abstain as much as possible from mental labour, he left College, and, after a short period, entered the corps of noble guards in the service of the Pope. His health, however, still continuing bad, he left the army, and, having entered the Church, was made Archbishop of Spoleto in 1827, Bishop of Imola in 1832, Cardinal in 1840, and became Pope, at the death of Gregory

XVI., in 1846.

His first acts as Pontiff, while they filled most of the higher clergy and officials with dismay, greatly excited the enthusiasm of the populace, and, for a time, Pius IX. was the most popular man in Italy. He dismissed his Swiss Guard; granted an unconditional amnesty to all persons suffering punishment for political offences; named a commission to reform the law; diminished the expenses of the court; and granted a constitution, which was promulgated on the 14th March, 1848. The liberal party, however, excited by the insurrectionary movements in other states of Italy, and by the French revolution of February 1848, clamoured for concessions which the Government had never intended to make. One of the most earnest wishes of the people was that the Papal States should take an active part in assisting Lombardy and Venice to gain their independence. The Pope, on the other hand, unwilling to offend Austria, delayed giving way to the popular cry as long as possible, but at length sent an army of observation of 17,000 men under General Durando. Durando, disobeying his instructions, actively assisted the insurgents, in consequence of which his conduct was immediately disavowed by the Pope. Great agitation followed. Several ministers succeeded each other without allaying the discontent, the last of whom, Rossi, was assassinated on the steps of the Chamber of Deputies. An insurrection arose the day afterwards, and the Pope left his dominions for Gaeta, in the territory of the king of Naples.

A constituent assembly was elected at Rome by universal suffrage, which decreed the overthrow of the Pope as temporal sovereign, and proclaimed a democratic republic, Mazzini, Armellini, and Saffi, being named triumvirs. The Pope, in the meantime, sought the assistance of France, Austria, Spain, and Naples, and France hastened to respond to the call in order to be in the field before Austria; the principal conditions being that a general amnesty should be proclaimed; that the Government should be secularised; and that the law should be carried out according to the Code Napoleon. Rome was besieged and taken by the French, under General Oudinot. The Pope, however, did not return immediately, but sent three Cardinals, of known conservative principles, as commissioners to rule in his name; and it was not till the 4th of April that he re-entered his dominions.

When Sardinia, supported by France, declared war against Austria, the integrity of the Roman States was guaranteed. The Emperor Napoleon even formed a scheme for establishing a confederation of Italian States, over which the Pope was to preside. A rising, however, took place in the legations, which ended in their being annexed to Sardinia; and, notwithstanding the gallant efforts of the Papal army, chiefly raised for the protection of the Roman territory, and placed under the command of General Lamoricière, little of that territory now remains in the possession of the Pope, besides Rome and Civita Vecchia.

By the convention of September 15, 1864, between the Emperor Napoleon and the King of Italy, the integrity of the Papal territory was again guaranteed. Florence was to be made the capital of Italy, and the French troops were to be withdrawn from Rome in two years. The troops were withdrawn by France, but the Italian government allowed General Garibaldi, in October, 1867, to concentrate his followers at Mentana, with the view of creating a general rising for the purpose of effecting the annexation of the remainder of the Roman territory to Italy. The Garibaldini were encountered by the Papal troops, assisted by a French detachment sent by the Emperor to cause the convention of September to be respected, and completely routed.

Having mentioned the principal acts of Pius IX. as prince, it remains to state that, as pontiff, he established the Roman hierarchy in England in 1850, signed a concordat with Austria in 1855; published the celebrated Encyclical letter in 1864; and is now occupied with the Œcumenical Council, which began its deliberations in December last.

In the arts and sciences Pius IX. is a most distinguished proficient; his attainments in the chief European languages, and his memory with regard to men and things, is far beyond the average; while his benignity and purity of life are admitted by the professors of all creeds.

PORTUGAL.

In the wars which Alfonso, king of Castile, waged against the Moors, he was very much assisted by Henry of Burgundy, a descendant of Hugh Capet, to whom, as a reward for his services, he gave his natural daughter Theresa in marriage, with the government of the northern part of what now constitutes the kingdom of Portugal. The son of Henry, Alfonso Henriques, extended his territory by conquest as far as the Tagus, and gained the memorable battle of Ourique, in which he is said to have defeated 300,000 men commanded by five Moorish kings. After the victory, which took place July 25, 1139, he was hailed king by his troops, and from that date is reckoned the foundation of the Portuguese monarchy. Alfonso Henriques was succeeded by his son and his grandson, Sancho I. and Alfonso II., who both gained important victories over the Moors. Sancho II., the son of the latter, was deposed by Pope Innocent IV. owing to priestly intrigues, and to the influence exerted over him by his queen. He was succeeded by his brother, Alfonso III., who added to his kingdom the province of Algarve. The successors of Alfonso III., in the direct male line, were Denys—who founded the university of Coimbra, formerly seated at Lisbon—Alfonso IV., Peter the Cruel, and Ferdinand I. On the death of the last, without male heirs, the crown was claimed by the husband of Beatrix, his daughter, John I., king of Castile. By the Portuguese law of succession, a daughter might succeed to the crown in default of sons, provided she were not married to a foreigner. John I, whose reign was distinguished by the maritime expedition, and geographical discoveries of his third son, Prince Henry, was succeeded in the direct male line by Edward, Alfonso V., and John II. The last dying without issue, the crown devolved on Emanuel, the grandson of Edward, in whose Join 11. The last dying without issue, the crown devolved on Emanuel, the grandson of Edward, in whose reign took place the memorable expedition of Vasco da Gama to India, round the Cape of Good Hope, Emanuel was followed by his son, John III., who was succeeded by Sebastian, his grandson. This prince, who had taken an army to Africa to assist Muley Mahomet to gain the throne of Morocco was defeated, and probably killed at the battle of Alcacarquity; although his fate was involved in an uncertainty which enabled two or three pseudo-Sebastians to claim the crown. The only male of the royal family then surviving was two or three pseudo-Sebastians to claim the crown. The only male of the royal family then surviving was Henry, a son of King Emanuel, and a cardinal, at whose death, after a reign of two years, the sovereignty was claimed by seven different candidates. Philip II. of Spain, who claimed, in right of his mother Isabel, the eldest daughter of King Emanuel, succeeded, though not without the assistance of an army under the duke of Alva, which defeated the forces of Antony, prior of Crato—an illegitimate son of Louis, Emanuel's third son—who had been proclaimed king. Portugal remained in the possession of the kings of Spain, of the house of Austria, Philip II, Philip IV, for sixty years, when the principal nobles succeeded in throwing off the yoke, and placing on the throne John, duke of Braganza, who was descended from King Emanuel, and also from Louis. Emanuel, and also from John I.

Portugal has been governed by the house of Braganza to the present time, with the exception of a short period during which it was occupied by the French. The sovereigns of this family have succeeded in the following order:-

Alfonso VI, son of John IV., was dethroned and imprisoned in 1667, and died 1683.

Pedro II. died in 1706.

John V., son of Pedro II., died 1750.

Joseph I., son of the preceding, in whose reign Portugal attained a high degree of prosperity, under the administration of his eminent minister the Marquis of Pombal, died 1777.

Mary I., the daughter of Joseph, married her uncle, Don Pedro, (Pedro III.,) and governed jointly with John VI., became insane, in 1790, when her son, John VI., became regent, and at her death, in 1816, king. It was during his regency that Portugal was invaded by the French, and, being unable to offer any effective resistance, the royal family took refuge in Brazil. In 1815 John VI. raised that possession into a kingdom, but the cortes insisting that he should reside the Europe, he returned to Lisbon in 1821, leaving Don Pedro the prince royal at Rio. The latter, in 1822, assumed the sovereignty of Brazil, and his title was recognised in 1825 by the king of Portugal. At the death of John VI., March 10, 1826, the Emperor Pedro of Brazil was proclaimed king of Portugal, as Pedro IV., but immediately abdicated in favour of his eldest daughter, Maria da Gloria, who, it was agreed, should marry her uncle, Don Miguel, who claimed the crown. Don Miguel, however, afterwards refused to fulfil the agreement, and proclaimed himself king of Portugal. This ed to the civil war which resulted in the overthrow of Don Miguel, and the secure establishment of Donna Maria on the throne in 1834. Her immediate successor was Pedro

The troubled reign of Queen Donna Maria having ended with her death on the 15th of November 1853, the crown devolved upon her eldest son, who ascended the throne as Dom Pedro V., under the regency of his father, King Ferdinand, he being then a minor. He visited England, France, Belgium, Italy, and Switzerland, in company with his brother the duke of Oporto, the present sovereign, and married, in 1857, the Princess Stephanie of Hohenzollem Sigmaringen. Dom Luis married, on the 6th of October 1862, the Princess Maria Pia (born 16th October 1847), younger daughter of Victor Emanuel, king of Italy, by whom he has issue two sons:—

King Ferdinand, the father of the sovereign, was born October 29, 1816. He has recently declined to accept the crown of Spain, having previously refused that of Greece, which was offered to him upon the dethronement of King Otho. of King Otho.

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF PORTUGAL

PRUSSIA.

The house of Hohenzollern, from which the present royal family of Prussia is descended, is known to have existed, as far back as the year Soo. Frederick VIII. of Hohenzollern, having purchased the margravate of Brandenburg, was made Elector of Brandenburg by the Emperor Sigismund in 1415.

In 1608, John Sigismund, the ninth elector, by his marriage with Anne of Prussia, added to his dominions the duchies of Prussia, of Cleves, and of Juliers. The electorate suffered greatly during the thirty years' war which began 1618 in the reign of George William, but recovered its prosperity by the prudent government of his successor, Frederick William, called the Great Elector. Frederick William was succeeded by his son Frederick, who declared himself king of Prussia, and was, in return for great services rendered by him against France, in the war of the Spanish succession, recognised as such by the Emperor Leopold in 1701. He was succeeded by Frederick William I. in 1713, by Frederick II. (the Great) in 1740, in whose reign were annexed Silesia and the provinces dismembered from Poland; by Frederick William II., in 1787; by Frederick William III., in 1797; by Frederick William IV., in 1840; and by William I., the present king, in 1861.

William I., the present king, in 1801.

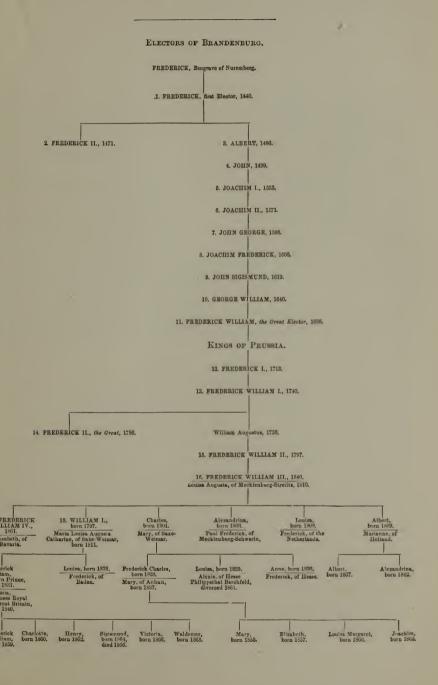

William I. (Frederick William Lewis) king of Prussia, the second son of Frederick William III., was born on the 22d March, 1797. He entered the army at an early age, and served in the campaigns of 1813 and 1815. While presumptive heir to the crown he took an active part in politics, and sat in the first Prussian Diet. During the troubles of 1848, being unpopular on account of his absolutist principles, he retired for a short time to England. On his return he was elected a member of the Prussian National Assembly; soon afterwards he took the command of the troops sent by Prussia to quell the insurrection in Baden. During the Crimean war, the Prince of Prussia was very much opposed to the neutral policy adopted by his country. His accession to the throne took place at the death of his brother on the 2d of January, 1861, and he was crowned with great pomp at Kænigsburg on the 18th of October following, when he declared that he held his crown from God alone. It had always been the ardent desire of King William—as it had been that of several of his ancestors—to raise the forces of Prussia to the highest possible pitch of power and efficiency; and he had not been long on the throne before he began to carry his views into effect by very considerably increasing the army and navy, and adding to the strength of the frontier defences. This policy, however, did not find favour with the representatives of the nation, and successive Chambers of Deputies were dissolved for refusing to pass the budget for military expenses. At length the ministry, under Count Bismark—who had been recalled from Paris on the emergency—having induced the Chamber of Peers to sanction the expenditure, the king dissolved the Chamber of Deputies, declaring himself obliged to act without their consent. Great dissatisfaction arose, in consequence, which was not allayed by the prosecution of several liberal journals, and the pubsequence, which was not altayed by the prosecution of several interal journals, and the publication of a decree suspending the liberty of the press. Public attention, however, was soon drawn from home matters to the troubles which were arising in Denmark, with regard to the succession to the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, and the relation of the latter to the German Confederation. Those difficulties were solved by Austria and Prussia sending an army to carry out their views, which, after a short campaign, brought Denmark to submission. A dispute, between Austria and Prussia, on the subject of the ultimate disposal of Holstein, led eventually to the seven weeks' war of 1866, in which Prussia, assisted by Italy and seventeen of the states of Germany obtained a complete triumph over her rival and acquired the kingdom the states of Germany, obtained a complete triumph over her rival, and acquired the kingdom of Hanover, the electorate of Hesse, the duchy of Nassau, the principality of Hesse Homburg, the republic of Frankfort, the duchies of Schleswig, Holstein, and Lauenburg, with portions of Bavaria and Hesse Darmstadt, besides her ascendency as chief of the North German Confederation.

William I. was married on the 11th June, 1829, to Mary Louisa Augusta Catherine, daughter of Charles Frederick, Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, and has issue:—

Frederick William Nicholas Charles, born October 18, 1831, married to Victoria Adelaide

Mary Louisa, Princess Royal of England; and 2. Louisa Mary Elizabeth, born December 3, 1838, and married to Frederick William Louis, the present Grand Duke of Baden.

RUSSIA.

MICHAEL FEODOROVITZ, the first czar of Russia of the house of Romanof, from whom the present imperial is descended, was elected in 1613. At his death the succession proceeded, not always In regular order, as follows:—Alexis, his son; Feodor, Ivan, and Peter the Great, three sons of Alexis; Catherine I., the widow of Peter; Peter II., his grandson; Anne, a daughter of Ivan, elected to the prejudice of Elizabeth, the daughter of Peter the Great, to whom the crown should have devolved according to the will of her father; John of Brunswick, a great grandson of Ivan, and Elizabeth the above-mentioned, daughter of Peter the Great. The throne of Russia then came into the possession of the present reigning family by the accession of Peter III., the son of Anne, daughter of Peter the Great and Charles Frederick, duke of Holstein Gottorp. Peter was murdered, and succeeded by his wife Catherine II., after whom followed his son Paul and his grandsons Alexander and Nicholas, the late emperor.

Alexander II., the son of the Emperor Nicholas and the Empress Alexandra Feodorowna, the daughter of Frederick William III. of Prussia, was born on the 29th April, 1818. His education was superintended first by General Moerder, a Protestant, and afterwards by the poet Zhukovsky, his military training being, at the same time, attended to with the greatest care by his father himself. At the age of sixteen he attained his majority, but was subject for some years afterwards to such severe discipline that his health suffered in consequence, and he was obliged to travel to recruit it. He visited Germany and made a long stay at the court of Hesse Darmstadt, where, in 1841, he married the Princess Mary, daughter of the Grand Duke

Soon after his marriage, he endeavoured to gain popularity among the inhabitants of Finland by patronising the Finnish Academy and establishing a professorship of Finnish language and literature. He also received the thanks of his father for the care with which, as director of the military schools of the empire, he had caused the youth to be trained in the "true Russian feeling"

In 1850 he visited Southern Russia, and obtained the order of St. George by his behaviour in a skirmish with the Circassians of the Caucasus.

Although he is said to have disapproved of the policy which led to the war with Turkey, he nevertheless continued the contest with vigour after his accession in March 1855, and swore "to persevere in the policy which his father had pursued." He, however, accepted peace as soon as the taking of Kars enabled him to do so without loss of dignity.

After the Crimean war he turned his attention to public education, and, by a decree of October 1855, abolished the restriction which limited the number of graduates in the universities of Russia, and also founded a chair of Eastern languages in the University of St. Petersburgh.

Notwithstanding several concessions made to Poland, a formidable insurrection broke out in that country, in 1861, which was not quelled till 1864.

In March 1861, the emperor performed one of the most important acts of his reign, by emancipating the Serfs to the number of about 23,000. This measure, which met with great opposition from his principal counsellors, is due almost entirely to himself. The same boon was granted, after the insurrection, to the Serfs of Poland.

In 1866, an attempt was made on the life of the emperor; Karakasoff, the would-be murderer, was executed, and thirty other persons, said to have been his accomplices, were imprisoned.

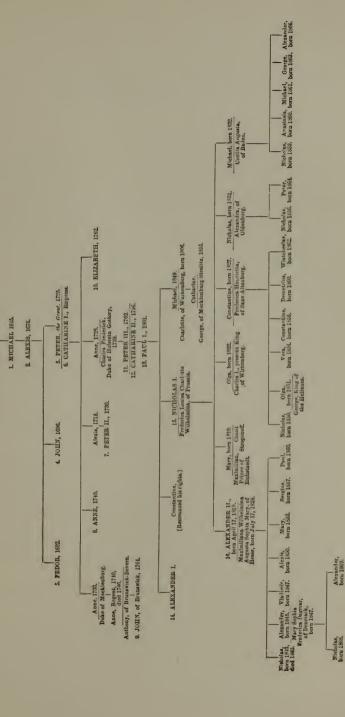

A war, of some months' standing, with the Emir of Bokara, was settled in Nov. 1866, and in May 1867 Russian America was sold to the United States for 7,200,000 dollars.

The Emperor Alexander, by his marriage with Wilhelmina Augusta Sophia Mary, daughter of Louis II., Grand Duke of Hesse, has surviving issue-

- 1. Alexander, heir-presumptive, born March 10, 1845.
- Vladimir, born April 22, 1847.
 Alexis, born January 14, 1850.
 Mary, born October 17, 1853.
- Sergius, born May 11, 1857. 6. Paul, born October 3, 1860.

SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA.

ERNEST II. (Augustus Ernest Charles John Leopold Alexander Edward) Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, the elder son of the late Duke Ernest I., by the Princess Louise, only daughter of Augustus, last reigning duke but one of Saxe-Gotha Altenburg, was born at the ducal palace at Coburg, on the 21st of June, 1818. His childhood was passed in the constant companionship of his younger brother Albert, the late Prince Consort. The marriage of their parents not having been a happy one, a separation took place in 1824; and the duchess never saw her children again, but their youth was watched over with the most devoted love and care by their grandmothers, the Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, and the Dowager Duchess of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg. When Prince Ernest was five years old, they were entrusted to the care of a tutor, Herr Florschütz of Coburg, who fulfilled his task with much success. He completed his education at the University of Bonn, where he made a special study of political economy. In 1836 he travelled in Belgium, France, and England, in company with his brother, who on this occasion first met the Queen, then Princess Victoria. He afterwards visited Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Africa.

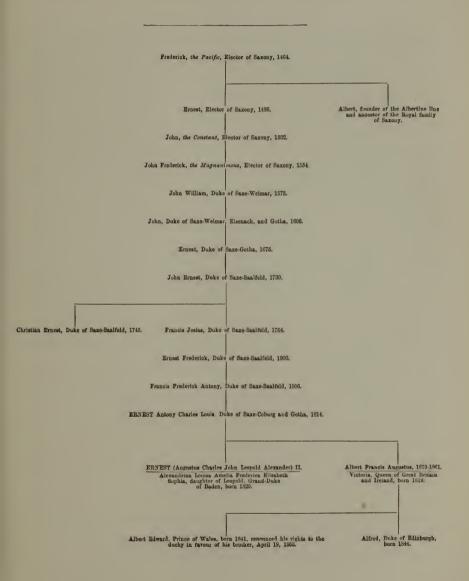

He succeeded his father, January 29th, 1844; and in 1846 anticipated the wants of his people by granting a liberal constitution to the two duchies, owing to which the critical period of 1848 and 1849 passed over without disturbance in his dominions. In 1849 he had command of a division of the federal army in the war against Denmark, and to him was due the victory at Eckernforde. After the dissolution of the Germanic confederation, the duchies of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha became incorporated in the North German Confederation, the ducal army being placed under the command of the King of Prussia.

Duke Ernest has always had a great fondness for the arts and sciences; music, especially, has been with him a favourite study from his childhood, and he has attained considerable success as a composer. Several of his operas have been well received, not only at Gotha, but in other towns of Germany. One of them, Casilda, translated into French, has been performed at Brussels, and another, Santa Chiara, appeared in 1855, at the grand opera at Paris. Among his other musical compositions, one of the most important, is a cantata for soprano and baritone with choruses and orchestral accompaniments, entitled Immer Liebe, the words by Arnot.

The duke married, on the 3d May, 1842, Alexandrina Louisa Amelia Frederica Elizabeth Sophia, daughter of Leopold, late Grand Duke of Baden.

The Prince of Wales, having resigned his rights on the 19th April, 1863, Prince Alfred of England is heir presumptive to the ducal throne.

DESCENT OF THE DUKES OF SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA.

SAXONY.

When the family of Albert the Bear, Marquess of Salzwedel, to which the duchy of Saxony had belonged, became extinct by the death of Albert III. in 1422, the duchy with the title of elector was conferred by the Emperor Sigismund on Frederick the Warlike, margrave of Misnia (Meissen), supposed to have been descended from Wittkind, the leader of the Saxons in their wars against Charlemagne. Frederick was succeeded by his son Frederick the Good, at whose death, in 1464, the territory was divided between his two sons, Emest and Albert. From the former are descended the families of Saxe-Altenburg, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Saxe-Meinnigen, and Saxe-Weimar, and from the latter the present royal house of Saxony. Ernest succeeded to the electoral dignity, which after him devolved successively on his two sons Frederick the Wise and John the Constant. The latter was succeeded by John Frederick, his son, who, having headed the Protestant league of Smalkald, was placed under the ban of the Empire and deprived of the electorate, which was transferred to Maurice, margrave of Misnia, grandson of Albert. Maurice was a great supporter of the Protestant cause, and concluded with the Emperor Charles V. the convention of Passau, which secured religious liberty to the Protestants of Germany. At his death, the electorate devolved on his brother Augustus, in whose reign his cousin John George, at the instigation of an adventurer named Grumbach, laid claim to the electorate, and attempted to raise a revolt against the Emperor Maximilian II. On the refusal of John reign his cousin John George, at the insugation of an adventurer named cirtimatin, and chain to the electorate, and attempted to raise a revolt against the Emperor Maximian II. On the refusal of John George to give up Grumbach, Augustus was ordered by the emperor to enforce the demand, which he did by taking Gotha, putting Grumbach and others to death, and sending John George captive to Vienna. Augustus was succeeded by his son Christian, whose two sons, Christian and John George, followed in succession. After John George, the electoral crown descended, in the direct line, through John George II., John George III., and John George IV., who was succeeded by his brother Frederick Augustus, who became king of Poland. The last was succeeded in the direct line by Frederick Augustus II., who also obtained the crown of Poland, Frederick Christian and Frederick Augustus, on whom the Emperor Napoleon conferred the title of king, with great accessions of territory, a large portion of which, however, was ceded to Prussia by the congress of Vienna. Frederick Augustus was succeeded by his brother, Antony Clement, who, dying without male issue, was succeeded by his nephew, the late king, Frederick Augustus II., the son of Duke Maximilian, who renounced his claim to the throne.

JOHN (Nepomucene Maria Joseph), the present king of Saxony, is the younger son of Duke Maximilian and Caroline Maria Theresa, daughter of Ferdinand, Duke of Parma, and was born December 12th, 1801. His education was superintended by General Forell, Baron Weisenberg, and General Watzdorf. In 1821 he was appointed a member of the College of Finance, of which he subsequently became vice-president. After the appointed a member of the College of Finance, of which he subsequently became vice-president. After the events of F330, he became president of a commission to maintain public order, and commander of the civic guard. By the new constitution of the kingdom, which he had assisted in drawing up, he acquired a seat in the first chamber as prince of the blood, where, besides taking an active part in the debates, he proposed several important reforms in the penal and criminal codes which were adopted by the Diet. Since his accession to the throne, August 9th, 1854, he has introduced several liberal measures and much improved the administration of justice by appointing justices of the peace throughout his dominions, notwithstanding the opposition of the nobility, jealous of their own privileges. In the Russian war his sympathies were entirely with the czar. When Prussia and Austria, after the Danish war, submitted to the German diet the convention of Gastein, one clause of which secured Lauenburg to Prussia, in consideration of a sum of money to be paid to Austria, the king of Saxony protested and asserted his own pretensions to that duchy. In November 1865, the king concluded a treaty of commerce with Italy, and formally recognised that kingdom. In June 1866, when Austria declared against the legality of the Prussian occupation of Holstein, and proposed the intervention of the Confederation and the mobilization of the federal army, Saxony was one of the powers which supported the motion. After the conclusion of the German war, the king of Saxony did not immediately accept the invitation of Prussia (dated July 16th, 1866) to form a new confederation, but concluded a separate treaty with that power on the 21st October following, by which it was settled that Saxony should become a member of the North German Confederation and pay ten millions of thalers, and that her troops should be incorporated with the confederate army under the king of Prussia.

The king of Saxony has a great taste for literary and archeological pursuits. In 1824 he became president administration of justice by appointing justices of the peace throughout his dominions, notwithstanding the

The king of Saxony has a great taste for literary and archæological pursuits. In 1824 he became president of the Society of Antiquaries of Saxony, and in 1852 and 1853 presided at the German Society of History and Antiquities. He has published a translation, in blank verse, of Dante's Divina Commedia, under the pseudonym of Philalethes, and a history of Romagna from 1274 to 1304.

King John married, on the 21st November 1822, AMELIA Augusta, the daughter of Maximilian, king of Bavaria, and has issue-

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF SAXONY.

SPAIN, formed into one kingdom in 1512 by the union of Leon and Castile with Aragon, at the marriage of Ferdinand of Aragon and Isabella of Castile, and by the subsequent conquest of Granada and Navarre, was ruled by Ferdinand the Catholic until his death in 1516, when the crown devolved upon the house of Austria in consequence of the marriage of Joanna of Castile, the daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, with the archduke Philip of Austria. The archduke Charles, their son, succeeded Ferdinand upon the throne of Spain, and in 1519 became the emperor Charles V. of Germany. He resigned the Spanish crown in 1556 to his son, Philip II., and it continued in the Austrian line until the decease, without issue, of Charles II. in 1700, who by his will nominated as his successor Philip, duke of Anjou, grandson of Louis XIV. of France, the first sovereign of the Bourbon dynasty, whose rule has lasted until the present time, excepting only the brief period from 1808 to 1813, during which time the throne was occupied by Joseph Bonaparte.

ISABELLA II., (Maria Isabella Louisa), Queen of Spain, is the elder daughter of the late king Ferdinand VII., by his fourth wife, the princess Maria Christina Ferdinanda, (who was born April 27, 1806, and is now the wife of Fernando Muñoz, duke of Rianzar's), second daughter of Francis I., king of the Two Sicilies. She was born at Madrid, October 10, 1830, and when only three years of age, September 29, 1833, succeeded her father on the throne of Spain, the Salic law having been abolished by the late king in her favour by the pragmatic sanction of March 29, 1830, to the exclusion of her uncles, Don Carlos and Don Francisco. During her minority the regency was assumed by queen Christina, who immediately found herself involved in the war of succession with the adherents of Don Carlos. The civil war lasted for seven years, when Don Carlos took refuge in France, and in October 1840 queen Christina resigned her power into the hands of marshal Espartero, who was soon after declared by the Cortes regent during the queen's minority. Insurrections in favour of the queen-mother broke out in various towns, but were quelled, until at length a successful revolution drove Espartero from office in July 1843. Isabella, although only thirteen years old, was declared by the Cortes to be of age, November 8, 1843, and marshal Narvaez appointed president of the ministry. This was followed by the return of queen Christina, and the marriages of the queen to her cousin, Don Francisco d'Assisi, and of her sister the Infanta Maria Louisa to Antoine, Duke of Montpensier, fifth son of Louis Philippe, king of the French, on the 10th of October 1846,—events that caused a serious disturbance of the friendly relations of this country with France and Spain. In May 1848 the British envoy, Sir Henry Lytton Bulwer, was ordered to leave Madrid, and diplomatic intercourse was not resumed until April 1850. In January 1851 marshal Narvaez resigned, and ministerial changes followed in quick succession. An attempt was made, February 2, 1852, by a Franciscan monk, named Merino, to assassinate the Queen as she was going to the church of Atocha at Madrid, but she escaped with only a slight stab. This led to reactionary measures, and in July 1854 a military insurrection again placed Espartero in power. He retained office until July 1856, when a new cabinet was formed by marshal O'Donnell, by whom the war with Morocco that broke out in October 1859 was successfully ended in March, 1860. O'Donnell resigned in February 1863, but, after frequent changes and conspiracies, returned to office in June 1865. January 1866 was marked by a military insurrection at Aranjuez led by general Prim, which was the prologue to the more serious outbreak that occurred at Madrid on the 22d of June, and which was not suppressed without much bloodshed. This caused the resignation of O'Donnell and the recall of Narvaez, at whose death, April 23, 1868, a new ministry was formed by Señor Gonzalez Bravo. The severe and repressive measures adopted against the reactionists, the abolition of the freedom of the press, and other causes, lighted the fires of revolution. On the 18th of September 1868, admiral Topete hoisted the insurgent flag in Cadiz Bay, and was immediately joined by marshal Serrano and general Prim, who had been, in former days, loaded by favours from the queen. In eleven days the revolution triumphed, and on the 30th of September, queen Isabella left San Sebastian to seek an asylum in France. The throne was the same day declared vacant, and a provisional government established, which at once reversed the policy of the late government. A new constitution was promulgated, June 6, 1869, and the monarchical form of government thereby continued. Meanwhile, until the succession to the throne may be decided, the government of the country is carried on by marshal Serrano, duke de la Torre, as regent, who was sworn into office June 18, 1869, and is aided by a ministry of which general Prim is president.

Queen Isabella, who has since taken up her residence in the Avenue du Roi de Rome at Paris, was married, October 10, 1846, to her cousin Don Francisco d'Assisi Maria Fernando, duke of Cadiz, eldest son of the Infant Don Francisco de Paula, who was born May 13, 1822, and by whom she has surviving issue :-

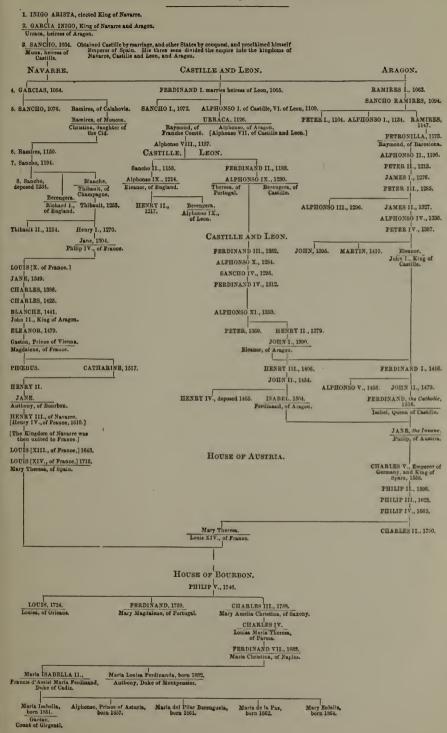

I. Maria Isabella, born 20 December, 1851, and married 14 May, 1868, to prince Gaetano

Maria Federico, count of Girgenti, brother of the ex-king Francis II. of the Two Sicilies.

2. Alfonso Francisco Pelayo Fernando Pio Juan de Maria de la Concepcion Gregorio, prince of Asturias, born 27 November, 1857. 3. Maria del Pilar, born 4 June, 1861.

DESCENT OF THE QUEEN OF SPAIN.

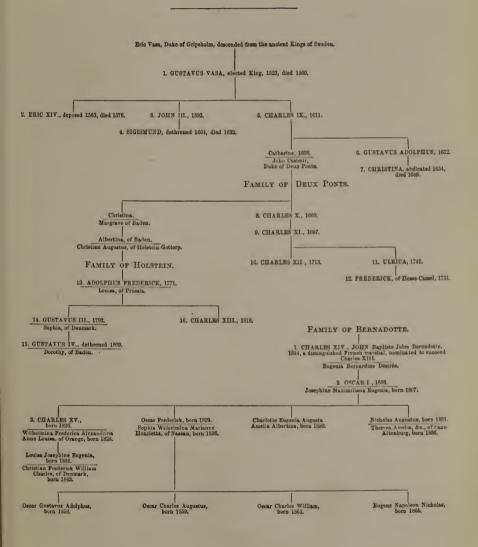

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

CHARLES XV. (Charles Louis Eugene), King of Sweden and Norway, of the Goths, and of the Vandals, was born on the 3d of May 1826. He is the eldest son of the late king Oscar I., by his queen, the princess Josephine Maximiliana Eugénie, (who was born March 14th, 1807, and is still living), eldest daughter of Eugene de Beauharnais, viceroy of Italy, and afterwards duke of Leuchtenberg. He is grandson of the celebrated marshal Bernadotte, who reigned over these kingdoms as Charles XIV. John. The kingdoms of Sweden and Norway were united in 1814, in which year Norway, which had belonged to Denmark since 1397, was ceded to Sweden by the treaty of Kiel. Marshal Bernadotte, prince of Ponte Corvo, was the first sovereign of the reigning dynasty, having been in 1810 elected crown-prince and presumptive heir to king Charles XIII., who had no children. The aged king at once transferred to him the cares of government, and he succeeded to the throne upon the death of Charles XIII. on the 5th of February 1818. He was succeeded, 8th March 1844, by his son Oscar, who governed until September 25th, 1857, when illness compelled him to transfer the reins of government to his son, the present sovereign, who was appointed regent. He ascended the throne upon the decease of his father, on the 8th of July 1859, and was crowned at Stockholm, May 3rd, and at Trondhjem August 5th, 1860. His reign has been hitherto peaceful, notwithstanding the close proximity to his kingdoms of the seat of war in Schleswig and Holstein in 1864, and the sympathies of his subjects with the Danes in their desperate struggle with Austria and Prussia to retain possession of those duchies. Some of the most important events, since 1809, in the history of the kingdom have taken place during the sway of king Charles XV. These are, a fundamental change in the constitution by the establishment of a parliament composed of two elective chambers, the establishment of free-trade, the de facto abolition of capital punishment, and the greatly extended liberty of conscience. His Majesty is an artist and poet of considerable ability and in 1868 published "Idées et Réflexions sur les mouvements de la Tactique moderne."

He married, June 19th, 1850, the princess Wilhelmina Frederica Alexandra Anna Louisa of Orange, born 5th August 1828, elder daughter of prince William Frederick Charles of the Netherlands, by whom he has an only daughter, Louisa Josephine Eugénie, who was born on the 31st of October 1851, and married the crown-prince of Denmark, July 28th, 1869. The heir presumptive to the Swedish and Norwegian crowns is his next surviving brother, the prince Oscar Frederic, duke of Ostrogothia, who was born January 21st, 1829, and married June, 6th, 1857, the princess Sophia Wilhelmina Marianna Henrietta, (born 9th July 1836), youngest daughter of William, late duke of Nassau, by whom he has issue,—

- 1. Oscar Gustavus Adolphus, duke of Wermland, born 16th June 1858.
- 2. Oscar Charles Augustus, duke of Gothia, born 15th Nov. 1859.
- 3. Oscar Charles William, duke of Westrogothia, born 27th Feb. 1861.
- 4. Eugène Napoleon Nicholas, duke of Nericia, born 1st Aug. 1865.

DESCENT OF THE KINGS OF SWEDEN.

TURKEY.

THE Turks are descended from a tribe of Tartars which, in the middle of the eighth century, settled in Armenia, and afterwards spread over a great part of Asia Minor. In 1298, their dominions were united into a single state by Othman, one of their chiefs, who assumed the sovereignty under the title of sultan, and whose family rules in Turkey at the present day. The Turks rapidly increased their dominions at the expense of the declining empire of the East, which was finally overthrown by the taking of Constantinople in 1453, by the seventh sultan Mahomet II. After this the Turkish empire continued to extend itself, and by the middle of the sixteenth century included Greece, a part of Italy, Egypt, Syria, the islands of the Archipelago, Rhodes, and Cyprus. In 1571, Turkish conquest received a check at the battle of Lepanto, where the navy of Selim was destroyed by the combined fleets of Spain, Venice, Genoa, Malta, and the Pope, under the command of Don Juan of Austria. In the course of the following hundred and fifty years the Turks took Candia and retook the Morea, but also sustained serious reverses, and before the middle of the eighteenth century their power began to decline. Their fleet was defeated by England and Russia in 1770. The Russians took the Crimea in 1784, and Turkey suffered greatly in a war with Austria and Russia in 1787-91. In 1807, she was again engaged in hostilities with England and Russia, which ended in the treaty concluded with Russia at Bucharest in 1812, by which it was stipulated that the river Pruth should be the boundary of the two empires. In 1821 began the movement in Greece to throw off the Turkish yoke, which resulted in the independence of the Greek nation in 1829. The years 1828-29 were occupied by another war with Russia. In 1831, the Pacha of Egypt revolted against the sultan, took Acre, and advanced to within eighty leagues of Constantinople. The sultan then invoked the assistance of Russia. The differences between the sultan and his vassal were settled by the interference of the western powers, who induced the sultan to make the pashalic of Egypt here-ditary in the family of Mehemet-Ali. In 1853 arose the dispute between the Greek and Latin churches as to the possession of the holy places in Palestine, which led to the last war with Russia, in which Turkey was assisted by England, France, and Sardinia. During the war with Russia, an insurrection arose in Epirus and Albania, which was fomented by the Greek government. Hostilities took place, in consequence, between Greece and Turkey, to stop which England sent troops to the Piræus, upon which the king of Greece promised to observe strict neutrality. In 1860, in consequence of a great massacre of Christians at Damascus, principally by the Druses, France sent an army which, together with Turkish troops under Fuad Pacha, attacked them and compelled them to deliver up their chiefs, several of whom were condemned to die. In the following year (June 25), the late sultan Abdul Medjid died, and was succeeded by his brother.

Abdul Azis, the present sultan, is the second son of Sultan Mahmud, and was born on the 9th February 1830. He is well acquainted with the English and French languages, and with the politics of the day. He began his reign by many important reforms. He reduced the civil list from 70,000,000 to 12,000,000 piastres; recognised the equality of all his subjects, of whatever religion; and declared his intention of having but one wife. His general, Omer Pasha, completely put down a serious insurrection in Montenegro, and a more formidable rebellion in Candia was also quelled, notwithstanding the assistance continually afforded to the Cretans by bands of volunteers organised in Greece.

Abdul Azis appears fully to possess the capacity of maintaining unaided his sovereignty in his own dominions, and has shown his determination to resist any undue assumption of independence on the part of his powerful vassal, the pasha of Egypt.

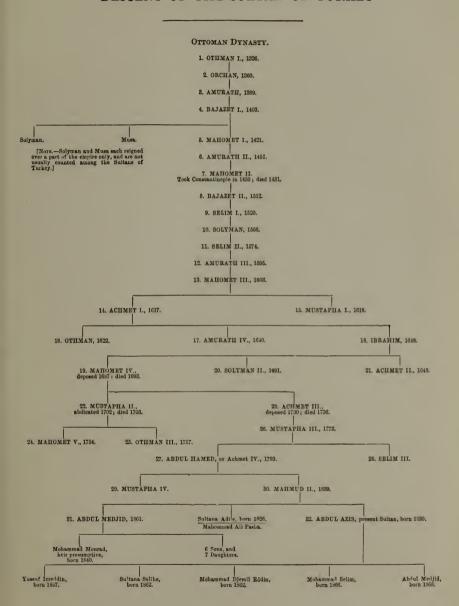

His children are—

Yussuf Izzeddin, born Oct. 9, 1857.
 Sultana Salihé, born Aug. 10, 1862.

3. Mahmud Djemil Eddin, born Nov. 20, 1862.

Mechmed Selim, born Oct. 8, 1866.
 Abdul Medjid, born June 27, 1868.

DESCENT OF THE SULTAN OF TURKEY

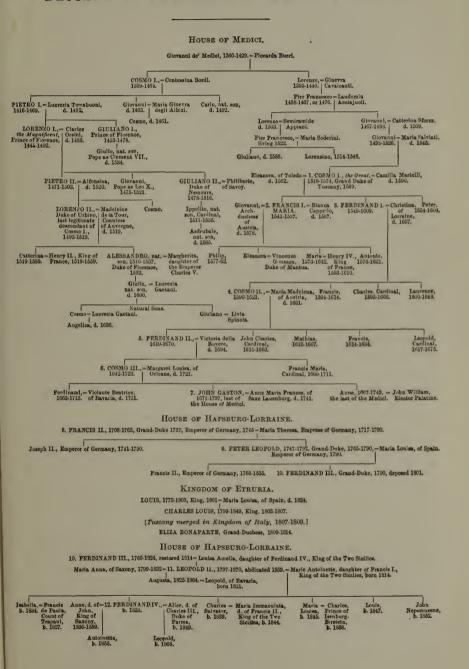

TUSCANY.

The powerful mediæval republic of Florence, which anciently formed part of the Lombard kingdom, and rose in the fifteenth century under the government of the Medici to be the foremost of the Italian republics, was made a duchy in 1531, and Alessandro de' Medici became its first duke. He was succeeded in 1537 by Cosmo de' Medici, surnamed the Great, who was invested by pope Pius V. with the title of grand-duke of Tuscany, August 24, 1569. The Medici dynasty became extinct upon the death of Giovanni Gastone, the seventh grand-duke, July 9, 1737, and Tuscany was given by the treaty of Vienna to Francis, duke of Lorraine, the husband of the empress Maria Theresa, who became in 1745 emperor of Germany. Upon his decease in 1765 Tuscany was inherited by his second son, Leopold, who also became emperor of Germany in 1790, and thereupon transferred the grand-duchy to his son Ferdinand, who was expelled by the French in 1801, and his states merged in the new kingdom of Etruria. Etruria was in turn engulphed by France in 1807, and Eliza Bonaparte, eldest sister of the emperor Napoleon, and wife of prince Bacciocchi, made Grand-Duchess of Tuscany in 1809. Upon the abdication of Napoleon in 1814, Ferdinand III. was restored to his dominions, and effected many judicious reforms. He died June 18, 1824, and was succeeded by his son, Leopold II., who was born October 3, 1797, and continued the conciliatory measures of his father. The duchy of Lucca was ceded to Tuscany in 1847. In February 1849 an insurrection at Florence drove Leopold from his capital, but he was restored by the aid of Austrian troops, and thenceforward adopted a retrograde policy, which eventually resulted in his departure from Florence, April 27, 1859, and the formation of a provisional government. On the 21st of July 1859, he abdicated in favour of his son, prince Ferdinand, and died at Rome, January He was distinguished by great love for literature and art, and Florence owes to him much that has rendered her so fascinating to the artist, connoisseur, and man of letters.

Ferdinand IV. (Salvator Maria Joseph John Baptist Francis Louis Gonzaga Raphael Rainer Januarius), Grand-Duke of Tuscany and Archduke of Austria, is the eldest son of the grand-duke Leopold II., and of his second wife, the princess Maria Antoinette Anne, (b. 19 December, 1814,) daughter of Francis I., king of the Two Sicilies. He was born June 10, 1835, and succeeded his father by virtue of his act of abdication, July 21, 1859, but the constituent assembly of Tuscany declared against the house of Hapsburg-Lorraine, and voted for annexation to Sardinia. The grand-duchy of Tuscany was united to the dominions of the king of Sardinia by the royal decree of March 22, 1860, against which act the grand-duke in vain protested, and Florence was made the capital of the newly-created kingdom of Italy, December 11, 1864.

The grand-duke Ferdinand IV. has been twice married; first, November 24, 1856, to the princess Anne, daughter of John, king of Saxony, who was born January 4, 1836, and died February 10, 1859, leaving issue a daughter, Marie Antoinette, b. 10 January, 1858; secondly, January 12, 1868, to Alice, younger daughter of Charles III., late duke of Parma, who was born December 27, 1849, and is sister of Robert, duke of Parma and Placentia.

DESCENT OF THE GRAND-DUKES OF TUSCANY.

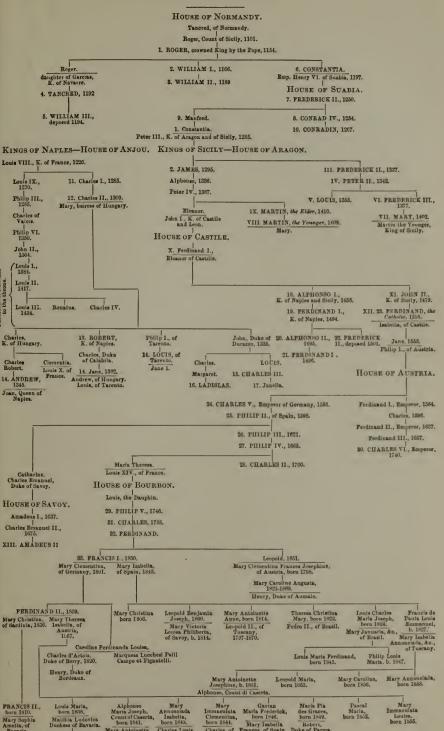

TWO SICILIES.

The kingdoms of Naples and Sicily, first united in 1085 under count Roger I., continued under one sovereign until the deposition in Sicily of Charles of Anjou in 1282, by the revolution well known as the "Sicilian Vespers." Sicily then fell under the dominion of Spain, and to this power the kingdom of Naples also became subject in 1503, under Ferdinand the Catholic. They remained in this condition until 1707, when Naples, and in 1718 Sicily, came into the possession of the archduke Charles of Austria, afterwards the emperor Charles VI. of Germany. He did not however retain them long, but surrendered them to Spain in 1734, when Charles, son of Philip V., king of Spain, was made king of the Two Sicilies, and they became vested in the Bourbon dynasty. The Two Sicilies were again separated in 1806, when the emperor Napoleon placed his brother, Joseph Bonaparte, on the throne of Naples, and Ferdinand IV. retired to Sicily. In 1808 Joseph Bonaparte was transferred to Spain, and the Neapolitan crown was conferred by Napoleon on his brother-in-law, Joachim Murat. The Bourbon dynasty was restored in 1815, when Ferdinand IV. re-ascended the throne as Ferdinand I., king of the Two Sicilies. He died January 4, 1825, and his descendants reigned over these kingdoms until they were merged into the kingdom of Italy in 1861.

Francis II. (d'Assisi Maria Leopold), King of the Two Sicilies and of Jerusalem, is the eldest son of the late king, Ferdinand II., by his first marriage with the princess Maria Christina Caroline Josephine Gaetana Eliza, daughter of Victor Emmanuel I., king of Sardinia. He was born January 16, 1836, and succeeded to the throne upon the death of his father, May 22, 1859, giving hopes that he would rule his kingdom with greater regard for the wishes of his subjects than had been the policy of his predecessor. These expectations were however not fulfilled, and on the 26th of March 1860 the foreign ambassadors were constrained to address a collective note to the king, urging upon him the necessity for reform. This remaining unheeded, an insurrection broke out in Sicily in April 1860. Garibaldi landed with a body of volunteers at Marsala, May 11, proclaimed himself dictator, took Palermo by storm, and totally defeated the royal army at Melazzo, July 20. Prior to this the king had announced a liberal change in his government, but the revolution rapidly spread to Naples, and the king and queen were forced to abandon the capital, and take refuge in the castle of Gaeta, September 6, 1860, which surrendered to the Sardinian troops under general Cialdini on the 13th of February 1861, after a gallant defence of six months' duration, forming one of the most stirring military episodes of modern times. For his intrepidity, the king received from the principal European powers their highest decorations, and the queen was presented with the military cross of St. George of Russia, and is the only lady thus distinguished. Garibaldi assumed the dictatorship until the arrival of king Victor Emmanuel, and on the 21st of October 1860 the annexation of Naples to Sardinia was voted for almost unanimously. After the fall of Gaeta the king retired to his palace in Rome, and has been unceasing in his efforts to regain his throne.

The king married by proxy at Munich, January 8, and in person at Bari, February 3, 1859, the duchess Maria Sophia Amelia, third daughter of Maximilian Joseph, duke of Bavaria, and younger sister of the empress of Austria. She was born at Possenhofen, October 4, 1841, and won the admiration of Europe by the undaunted courage and true heroism she displayed during the protracted siege of Gaeta. Her Majesty has one daughter, Christina Pia Maria Giuseppa Elizabetta Ferdinanda Natalina Ephesia, born at Rome, December 24, 1869.

TWO SICILIES.

Ferdinand Pins Maria, born 1869.

Unsuccessful claimant to the throne.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

ULYSSES SIMPSON GRANT, president of the United States of America, is of Scotch descent, and was born at Point Pleasant, Clermont County, in the state of Ohio, on the 27th of April, 1822. At the age of seventeen he entered the military college of West Point, which he left, in 1843, with the rank of brevet second lieutenant in the 4th regiment of infantry. In 1846 he served in the Mexican war, and was promoted for his bravery to the rank of brevet captain. In 1854 he quitted the service, entered into the leather trade, and married Miss Julia Dent. He afterwards settled at Galena in Illinois.

At the breaking out of the civil war he took service in the United States army, and passed rapidly through the ranks of colonel, brigadier-general of the volunteers of Illinois, commander-inchief of the army of West Tennessee, and major-general, and distinguished himself greatly at various battles and skirmishes, especially at Paducah, Fort Donelson, Pittsburg-Landing, and at the siege of Corinth, where he was at first second in command under General Halleck, and afterwards commander-in-chief. The failure of General Sherman before Vicksburg induced the Federal Government to appoint General Grant in his stead, (Dec. 27, 1862). After a succession of obstinate engagements, the outworks of that town were carried one by one, and General Pemberton with over 30,000 men surrendered unconditionally on July 14. In October 1863 he was selected to replace General Rosencranz, and, on the 2d March 1864, was appointed by President Lincoln commander-in-chief of the forces of the union. His plan appears to have been to surround the confederates, and to advance on Richmond by however slow degrees, and at whatever cost in men and money. Making the Potomac his base of operations, he directed three divisions against the confederates, he himself, with one of them, threatening the army of Lee. He at first made little progress, and his army received some checks in front of Petersburg. The battle of the Wilderness, one of the many actions in this campaign, lasted five days, and terminated in Grant's favour, but with a fearful loss. Other engagements, disastrous for both armies, but especially discouraging to the federal troops, obliged General Grant to retire from his position in Pottsylvania. In June, however, after having secured the James River, he was enabled to lay siege to Petersburg, one of the keys to Richmond. Several obstinately contested conflicts took place before that city, in one of which, on the 18th June, the federals lost more than 8000 men. At this period, although, on the whole, Grant himself was gaining ground, his generals suffered frequent defeat, and Lee was enabled several times to cross the Rappahanoc and the Potomac, and threaten Washington. Grant nevertheless pursued, with inflexible determination, his operations against Petersburg, which, after eight months' siege, and much bloodshed, surrendered, April 18, 1865. The surrender of Richmond immediately After this, the cause of the confederates was hopeless. Their resources were exhausted, and no means existed to renew them. Resistance being no longer possible, Lee and the other confederate generals laid down their arms, and the union was restored.

After the war, in the summer of 1865, General Grant visited New England and Canada, and, later in the year, made a tour of inspection through the Southern States. In 1867 he became secretary ad interim in the place of Mr Stanton, suspended by President Johnson, but gave up the keys of office when the senate passed a resolution disapproving the President's act.

On the 21st of May 1868, at the National Republican Convention assembled at Chicago, he was nominated as candidate for the presidency of the republic by General Logan, chairman of the delegation from Illinois. In a letter which he addressed to the president of the Convention, accepting the nomination, he said, "It is impossible... to lay down a policy to be adhered to, right or wrong, through an administration of four years... A purely administrative officer should always be left free to execute the will of the people... Peace and universal prosperity will lighten the burden of taxation, while it constantly reduces the national debt.

Let us have peace."

General Grant was elected President on the 3d of November 1868, and succeeded President Johnson, March 4, 1869. In his inaugural proclamation he promised to govern according to law; and, among other things, said, "Let it be understood that there must be no repudiation of a single farthing of the public debt." From his last message to Congress, Dec. 6, 1869, we gather that he is in favour of a gradual return to specie payment. That the people and government of the United States warmly sympathise with Cuba in its impending struggle, but that the insurgents have not yet established a de facto government entitling them to recognition as belligerents. That he approves the rejection of Mr R. Johnson's Alabama treaty, and declares that its provisions were inadequate for the settlement of the grave wrong sustained by the United States.

WURTEMBERG.

The history of the royal family of Wurtemberg is very uncertain before the time of Ulrich, who was count of Wurtemberg from 1246 to 1265. He considerably enlarged his dominions and left two sons, Ulrich and Eberhard, who each ruled in succession. The latter, who obtained the surname of Illustrious, made war on the imperial cities, entered into a confederacy against the emperors Rudolph and Albert, and, at the death of the latter, was a candidate for the imperial crown. When Henry, count of Luxemburg, was elected emperor, Eberhard was put under the ban of the empire for his hostility to the cities and deprived of his dominions, but regained them by the assistance of his brother-in-law, the Margrave Rudolph of Baden, at the death of the emperor in 1313. He was succeeded in 1325 by his grandson Ulrich III., who left two sons, Eberhard II. and Ulrich IV., who reigned together, until the death of Ulrich, in 1366, when Eberhard reigned alone till 1392. Eberhard was succeeded by his grandson and great grandson Eberhard III. and Eberard IV. The latter left two sons, Louis and Ulrich, who reigned together until the younger became of age, in 1433, when they divided their patrimony. In 1482, Eberhard, the son of Ulrich, gave up his territory to his cousin, Eberhard V., the son of Louis, for an annuity, and the country thus became reunited. Eberhard reigned wisely and with great advantage to his subjects, and received from the emperor Maximilian the title of duke of Wurtemberg and Teck. His cousin who had previously resigned in his favour, succeeded at his death, as Eberhard VI., but was deposed by the emperor, who conferred the duchy on his cousin Ulrich VI., who reigned till 1550. Ulrich was followed successively by his son and grandson, Christopher and Louis the Pius, and the last dying without issue, the duchy devolved on Frederick I., surnamed the Magnanimous, the son of George, duke of Mompelgard and brother of Ulrich VI. Frederick was succeeded in the direct line by John Frederick, Eberhard VII., William Louis, and Eberhard Louis, the last being succeeded, in 1733, by his cousin, Charles Alexander, the son of Frederick Charles, William Louis's brother. Charles Alexander left three sons, Charles Eugene, Louis Eugene, and Frederick Eugene, who reigned in succession after him. The French revolution began before the death of the last mentioned, and Wurtemberg suffered much in the wars which Duke Frederick Eugene was succeeded in 1797 by his son, Frederick William Charles, who in the war between France and Austria in 1805 joined France, and in the following year received the title of king from the emperor Napoleon. Frederick I. was succeeded in 1816 by his son, William I., the late king. To him Wurtemberg is indebted for the constitution by which it is now governed and for numerous liberal measures, among others for a decree extending the liberty of the press. He was opposed to the German constitution established at Frankfort in 1849; refused to recognise the king of Prussia as Emperor of Germany in 1850; and greatly assisted in replacing the Germanic confederation on its ancient basis.

Having been born in 1781, William I. was, before his death, on the 25th June, 1864, the oldest reigning monarch of Europe. He was succeeded by his son, the present king—

CHARLES (Frederick Alexander) I., who was born, 6th March, 1823, and married on the 13th July, 1846, Olga, the daughter of Nicholas, emperor of Russia.

THE HAYDN SERIES.

In Preparation, to be uniform in Size, Type, and General Treatment, with "Haydn's Dictionary of Dates," and "Haydn's Index of Universal Biography," to which works it will form a Companion Volume,

A BIBLE DICTIONARY

BIOGRAPHY, HISTORY, ANTIQUITIES, GEOGRAPHY, AND PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY, METEOROLOGY, TOPOGRAPHY, AND NATURAL HISTORY,

Including the Results of the latest Inquiries, Researches, and Explorations, and Illustrated with Map. For the use of all Readers and Students of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, and of the Apocrypha.

EDITED BY THE

REV. CHARLES BOUTELL, M.A.,

Author of "Christian Monuments in England and Wales," &c.

In itself complete, so far as completeness will have been attainable in accordance with its prescribed plan, this Dictionary, the third of the HAYDN SERIES, will be found to have been prepared with a view to adapt it equally to the use of every person who may desire to become familiar with the BIBLE in the English language.

Accordingly, while the utmost care will have been taken to exclude or omit no name or subject which ought to be noticed in a Dictionary for Universal Reference, the Editor will be no less careful from first to last to avoid all theological questions and speculations, together with whatever in any way or degree may be directly associated with religious dogma, doctrine, or profession, thus to render the work welcome to professors of all creeds. At the same time, as every proper name to be found in the Old and New Testaments, and also those in the Apocryphal Books, will appear, so also with them there will be concise historical and descriptive notice of events, incidents..&c., all of which may justly claim to have places in a Bible Dictionary, and which all persons who may have occasion to consult the pages of this Bible Dictionary will rightly expect to find in them. It is scarcely necessary to state that, with due acknowledgment, free use will have been made of the discoveries and observations of Layard, Botta, Wilkinson, Lorne, Stanley, Tristram, Porter, Finn, Wilson, Warren, Macgregor, and many others; or to enter into any particulars concerning the bringing down every article to the latest point of authentic information. It may be here inserted, however, that the plan of this Dictionary includes the introduction into the text of the modern names of well-known places in the Bible lands; and also notices of various historical personages and incidents, not named in the Bible itself, but which are closely connected with the Bible, and serve in no slight degree to explain, to illustrate, and to throw a fresh light upon what the Bible contains.

THE HAYDN SERIES.

A DICTIONARY OF SCIENCE.

BY G. FARRER RODWELL, F.C.S. ASSISTED BY EMINENT CONTRIBUTORS.

The work will comprise Chemistry, the Physical Sciences, and Astronomy, and the treatment of the subject matter will be popularly carried out with the greatest possible avoidance of technicalities and complex formulæ. At a time like the present, when Natural Science is receiving so large a share of attention in our Universities, Schools, and, indeed, by the public generally, it has been considered peculiarly desirable that a sound comprehensive work on Natural Science and Astronomy should be placed at the disposal of the general unscientific reader, and with this in view, and with a desire to advance towards completion the series to which this work will belong, the Publishers have decided upon issuing the "Dictionary of Science" next in the series to the "Dictionary of the Bible."
