PREFACE.

Some time must pass before the completion of an adequate description and analysis of the Chamberlain Collection of Autographs. Meanwhile it is desirable that somewhat be known of its size and scope, particularly for the information of libraries and students at a distance. A portion, however, is already exposed to public view in a series of framed documents and tablets. Placed as these tablets are, in a position to attract the notice of younger students of American history, they are now rendered most intelligible and useful by historical prefaces which introduce their titles throughout the following pages. In a few months it is proposed to print in separate form the full text of the four great documents, mentioned more fully beyond, and with them to reprint the prefaces to them, as well as the descriptions of the tablets.

The account which here follows of the general collection coincides in part with an article written a few years ago for the Boston Sunday Herald, by the Rev. Julius H. Ward, from memoranda furnished by the Hon. Mel- len Chamberlain.

In the preparation of this pamphlet, especially of the part relating to the framed documents and tablets, the Library has secured the assistance of Edwin M. Bacon, Esq., who has gained an intimate knowledge of the Collection by his classification of the material therein.

Lindsay Swift,
Editor of Library Publications.

THE CHAMBERLAIN COLLECTION.

The collection of historical documents, manuscripts, autographs, portraits, and engravings, together with a few printed volumes, belonging to the Hon. Mellen Chamberlain, and proposed to be left, by testamentary bequest, to the Boston Public Library, is now deposited in the library. It is arranged in two parts: the general collection and the series of framed tablets. The latter consists of four great documents: the Address to the King, 1774; the Declaration of Independence, 1776; the Articles of Confederation, 1777; and the Constitution, 1787; and of sixty-three framed tablets, made up of autograph signatures cut from receipts, franked envelopes, or from historical documents of no intrinsic value, here grouped, and illustrated by portraits, biographical sketches, and historical notes. The tablets, which are described in detail below, are displayed on the walls of the room for Younger Readers, off the Chavannes corridor.

THE GENERAL COLLECTION.

The general collection occupies a room opening from the Librarian's room and especially fitted to receive it. When bound and catalogued, the collection will be more fully open to examination than is now practicable. It consists of bound and unbound volumes of manuscripts, and of printed books, expanded and extra-illustrated; in all, more than three hundred and fifty volumes, conveniently to be divided for the purpose of description, into American and European sections, and unclassified material.

THE AMERICAN SECTION.

In the American section, relating to the colonial, provincial, and revolutionary periods, are twelve volumes of Massachusetts historical manuscripts; three devoted to New Hampshire, from the first settlement; fifteen to famous men, from all the colonies, connected with the Revolution; three to the signers of the Declaration of Independence; and five to Washingtoniana. One volume is given to the prominent Quakers who suffered persecution in Boston, in 1660; one to Burgoyne's campaign, in 1777; and one to the actors in the Salem witchcraft tragedy. Five royal-octavo volumes, richly bound, contain letters, documents, manuscripts, and portraits, relating to Benjamin Franklin, to John Adams, to John Hancock, to Samuel Adams and Joseph Warren, and to those engaged, on both sides, in the battles of Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill.

Among the volumes relating to this early period, some merit particular description. The volume given up to the Quakers persecuted in Boston contains the unpublished letter which William Dyer, the husband of the unfortunate Mary Dyer, wrote to the Court of Assistants in 1659, pleading for the life of his wife; also the original "Warning" of Margaret Smith — the original of Whittier's "Margaret Smith's Journal" — "given forth in the House of Correction in Boston, New England, December 1660," and other papers respecting the treatment of the Quakers by the Massachusetts authorities.

The five volumes relating to Washington may properly be classed with the series of the Revolution, although they include letters and documents written by Washington between the age of eighteen and the closing years of his life, with letters and portraits of his contemporaries associated with him both in military and civil affairs. Among these contemporaries represented are Braddock, Lord Loudon, Baron Steuben, the titular Lord Stirling, Israel and Rufus Putnam, Knox, Gates, Charles Lee, Henry Lee, Greene, Sullivan, Arnold, Lord and Sir William Howe, Sir Henry Clinton, Cornwallis, Lafayette, Rochambeau, de Grasse, Duportail, Earl Buchan, Luzerne, Genet, Jefferson, Hamilton, Randolph, Wolcott and Habersham. One volume is made up of the various portraits, prints of busts and monuments of Washington, with portraits and autographs of the distinguished artists to whom he sat. It contains every known portrait of Washington which has any merit as a likeness or as a work of art.

The volume of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence contains a very curious series of about twenty autograph poems, which George Wythe of Virginia and William Ellery of Rhode Island addressed to each other, and probably composed while the question of independence was under discussion in the Congress of 1776.

Memorials of various sorts are collected in the volumes relating to the unfortunate expedition against Canada in 1690, which was paid for by the first issue of paper money instead of by expected booty; to the capture of Louisburg in 1745, which was followed by the expatriation of the Acadians; and to the proposed attack on Crown Point in 1755. In one or the other of these expeditions Governor Shirley, the Pepperrells, Commodore Warren, and Colonel John Winslow were prominent. The period of the Stamp Act and the later military actions during the Revolution, at Bennington, Saratoga, Stony Point, in the Southern Campaigns, and at the crowning victory at Yorktown, are illustrated by letters and documents; as are also Naval, Diplomatic, and Congressional affairs.

The beginnings of the Revolution, particularly the part played by Massachusetts, are illustrated in the bound volumes of letters of Franklin, Hancock, the Adamses and others. In these are numerous documents, in manuscript or printed, relating to the "Boston Massacre," including the action of the Town, the General Court, and popular assemblies. The proceedings at the time of the destruction of the tea in 1773 are fully illustrated by rare printed placards. Among other papers are original letters to the selectmen written by Samuel Adams and others; the resolutions of the Boston Town meeting in Adams's handwriting; and letters of Richard Clarke & Sons to John Hancock, respecting the cargo of tea consigned to them. In the collection are also many letters of Committees of Correspondence; non-importation agreements in manuscript; papers relating to the treatment of loyalists before the outbreak of hostilities, and letters on questions of the day, by the Otises, father and son, the Quincys, senior and junior, Joseph and James Warren, Paul Revere and others, together with political hand-bills, broadsides and caricatures.

The Lexington and Concord fights, and the battle of Bunker Hill, are fully illustrated by original contemporary letters and documents interleaved in the monographs printed in 1875, commemorating the centennials of those events. These manuscripts include the name of nearly every man of distinction found on either side of the contest, among them General Gage, Lieut.-Colonel Smith, who led the main party of the British, Lord Percy, who brought up the relieving columns, Paul Revere and William Dawes, who carried the alarm to Middlesex, James Barrett and Major Buttrick, who were conspicuous on the American side, Gerry, Orne and Lee, of the Committee of Safety and Supplies, who escaped capture by the British only by a precipitate flight from their beds at the Black Horse Tavern in Menotomy (Arlington), Joseph Warren, and the Rev. Jonas Clarke, in whose house John Hancock and Samuel Adams had been entertained the night before the fight. One of the most interesting documents here is the original bill of Dr. Joseph Fisk for medical services rendered to the "King's Troops on the 19th of April."

The monograph of Bunker-Hill, June 17, 1775, bound with that of Lexington and Concord, is even more fully illustrated, and contains several letters and documents written on the day of the battle and relating to it. One is a letter of Israel Putnam to the Committee of Supplies relative to forwarding eighteen barrels of powder from Connecticut. Here also is found the letter of Daniel Webster correcting the proof sheets of his oration at the laying of the cornerstone of Bunker-Hill monument, and the original invitation to deliver the oration on the completion of the monument. On blank pages of the volume Whittier has transcribed his "Lexington, 1775," Emerson, his famous Concord Bridge hymn, and Holmes, his "Grandmother's Story of Bunker Hill Battle."

Following the Revolution, there are memorials of the Constitutional Convention of 1787, and of the successive administrations from Washington to Grant. In these are grouped the presidents, cabinets, diplomats, judges, speakers of the House, and the leading statesmen in both houses of Congress.

American artists occupy six volumes; American inventors, one volume; men of affairs, twenty-three volumes; Massachusetts judges and lawyers, eight volumes; miscellanies, twenty-three volumes; historic houses of the United States, illustrated with autographs, views and portraits, two volumes. Duyckinck's "Cyclopædia of American Literature" is expanded into forty-seven volumes by portraits, autograph letters and original manuscripts of poems or other writings of the greater part of the authors treated in that work, and of many others incidentally mentioned in its biographical notices. This work is supplemented by twenty-three volumes of literary characters not included in Duyckinck. In the volumes devoted to American artists is found every memorable name from Copley to recent times.

THE EUROPEAN SECTION.

The European section includes four volumes devoted to sovereigns, thirty to men of affairs, eleven to men of letters, one to musicians, two to actors and actresses, six to artists, two to philosophers, four to scientific men, ten to the period of the Revolution in France, and six to Shakespeare.

All the sovereigns of England from Henry VII. to Victoria, except Edward VI., are included; of France from Louis XII. to Louis XVI.; representatives of the French Directory, the Consulate, the First empire, and of the Bonaparte family; and such rulers of other nations (to mention only some of the most famous) as Ferdinand and Isabella, the Philips of Spain, Gustavus Adolphus, Charles XII., Frederick the Great, Maria Theresa, Catherine II. and Alexander I. of Russia. Among the volumes given to men of affairs, letters or documents are found of the earls of Essex, of Leicester, Fairfax, Sully, Mazarin, Colbert, Richelieu, Coke, Cecil, Fox, George Grenville, Lord North, the younger Pitt, Grattan and his eminent contemporaries, and of such of the French revolutionary characters as Robespierre, Danton, Carnot, Marat, Necker, and his daughter, Madame de Staël. Among names distinguished in military affairs are Piccolomini, Turenne, Vauban, Peterborough, Eugene, Marlborough, Wolfe, and Wellington; Napoleon and his marshals form a group by themselves. Among the great divines represented are Melancthon, Calvin, Bossuet, Fénelon, Jeremy Taylor, Bishop Burnet, Berkeley, Dr. Samuel Clarke, Warburton, Hurd, Whately, and others equally eminent; among men of science and inventors, Newton, Watt, the Herschels, Faraday, the Stephensons, and the great French and German astronomers; among philosophers and metaphysicians, Leibnitz, Bayle, d'Alembert, Diderot, Erasmus, Darwin, Hutcheson, Locke, Hume, Voltaire, Condorcet, Rousseau, St. Simon, Kant, Marmontel, Maupertuis, Richard Price, Baron Grimm, Fichte, Hegel, Helvetius, Herder, Hobbes, Lotze, Adam Smith, Reid, Priestley, Schelling, Schlegel, Schopenhauer, Sir William Hamilton, John Stuart Mill, Isaac Taylor, Cousin, and Herbert Spencer.

Among continental and British artists, represented by signed or attributed specimens of their work in original drawings or pen and ink sketches, are found the names of such eminent painters, sculptors, and architects as Domenichino, Del Sarto, Correggio, Holbein,

Paul Veronese, Andrea Sacchi, Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Gabriel Metsu, Sir Peter Lely, Sir Christopher Wren, Sir James Thornhill, George Vertue, Hogarth, Richard Wilson, Campagniola, Sir Joshua Reynolds, George Romney, James Barry, James Northcote, William Blake, Cruikshank, Landseer, Millais, Thorwaldsen, Overbeck, Winckelmann, Delaroché, and Delacroix. Among musicians, composers and performers, are the names, some of them accompanied by manuscripts of compositions and all with portraits, of Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Auber, Schneider, Weber, Sontag, Meyerbeer, Schumann, Wagner, Sir Henry R. Bishop, Jennie Lind, and Ole Bull; among actors, of Garrick, the Kembles, Talma, Mrs. Siddons, Mrs. Inchbald, Macready, Buckstone, John Maddison Morton (the farce writer), Junius Brutus Booth, Forrest, Charles Kean, Vandenhoff, Edwin Booth, and John Brougham.

The volumes of Shakesperiana include autograph letters of nearly all the Shakesperian editors and scholars — Edmund Malone, Mrs. Montagu, Bishop Percy, Thomas Tyrwhitt, Richard Farmer, Dr. Nathan Drake, Charles Knight, Sir Harris Nicholas, George Steevens, Isaac Reed, Anna Seward, the Rev. Thomas Bowdler, Alexander Chalmers, Francis Douce, Ireland the forger, Alexander Dyce, James O.

Halliwell, J. Payne Collier, Joseph Ritson, and Joseph Haslewood.

In the European section, as in the American, it has often been found practicable by the collector to group letters and other interesting matters under a general heading, as "Some Eminent Scotchmen," or round some distinguished name, as Sir Walter Scott, Francis Jeffrey, and Lord Macaulay, concerning whom notable illustrated monographs have appeared in magazines. These monographs, inlaid to uniform size, have been prepared to receive additional illustration in the form of letters, not only of the principal characters written about, but also of many who are incidentally mentioned. For example: in the "Eminent Scotchmen" series are found, in connection with the descriptive letter-press, an original poem of Allan Ramsay, letters of James Thomson, author of "The Seasons," of Burns (a poem signed), of Thomas Reid, David Hume, Dr. William Cullen, Dr. William Hunter, Hugh Blair, Adam Smith, Adam Ferguson, Dr. John Moore, James Beattie, James Watt, James Macpherson, "translator" of Ossian, Henry Mackenzie, Mrs. Anne Grant, and others.

The other Scotch monographs must be treated more concisely. The principal men of the coterie of which Scott was the centre, those associated with Constable, who founded, and with Jeffrey and his associates, who for many years carried on the "Edinburgh Review," and those associated with William Blackwood, of "Blackwood's Magazine," are respectively represented by autographs, and in some cases by leaves of the original copy of one or more of their published articles. The names of some of those thus associated are Archibald Constable, Francis Horner, Francis Jeffrey, Sydney Smith, Lord Brougham, John Ballantyne, Dugald Stewart, Thomas Campbell, James Hogg, William Blackwood, John Galt, Allan Cunningham, John Wilson, George Combe, Alexander Carlyle, Basil Hall, J. R. McCulloch, Edward Irving, Lockhart, Carlyle, David M. Moir ("Delta"), Motherwell, Dr. John Brown, Dr. Thomas Chalmers, Thomas Guthrie, Robert and William Chambers.

In the Macaulay monograph are biographical notices of the Rev. Zachary Macaulay, father of Lord Macaulay, and of many of the members of the "Clapham Set." There are letters of Granville Sharp, Hannah More, Bishop Percy, Catherine Macaulay, Dr. Johnson, Mrs. Thrale, Winthrop M. Praed, Bulwer, Jeffrey, Samuel Rogers, John Wilson, James Montgomery, and of others, in some way associated with the Macaulay family. This volume is supplemented by autograph letters of some of the subjects of Macaulay's Essays, including Fanny Burney, Lord Burleigh, Francis Bacon, Sir William Temple, Chatham, Walpole, Warren Hastings, Sir Philip Francis, Sir James Mackintosh, Lord Holland, Southey, Hallam, Croker, and Gladstone.

UNCLASSIFIED.

Besides the classified collection is a considerable mass of manuscripts of great historical or literary value, awaiting arrangement, in which are in particular two papers of more than ordinary interest. The earliest is a printed broadside in folio, announcing the acting of the "Tragedy of Zara" in Faneuil Hall "by a society of ladies and gentlemen." The play was given in the winter of 1775-76, when the British army under Sir William Howe, and many loyalists, were held in Boston by Washington's army. The play-bill is very rare, and this copy of it probably unique in having on its back a finely written cast of the characters.

The other paper is also very rare, since it is one of the only two of the same kind said to have been removed from their place in the days of the Commune. It is a pay-roll of the members of the French National Institute, December, 1801. Among the receipting signatures are the names of Legendre, Delambre, Lacroix, Carnot, Cuvier, Lamarck, Jussieu, Saint Pierre, abbé Sicard, Merlin, Cassini the astronomer, Vauquelin the chemist, abbé Sabatier the famous surgeon, Ducis the French dramatist, and the following famous painters or sculptors, — David, Regnault, Julien, Roland, and Houdon. About one hundred signatures appear on this pay-roll, every one of which was written by a man of distinction.

PRINTED BOOKS.

Though the Chamberlain Collection consists mainly of autograph letters and documents, it includes also several volumes bearing the autographs of famous men; and others, besides many pamphlets, which are the inscribed gifts of authors. Among the former is a copy of Scaliger's Poetics, with two autographs of Pope; another entitled "Desiderii Erasmi Flores," date of 1645, with Mather Byles's autograph on the title page; another made up of Thomas Moore's autograph notes for a History of Ireland; another, and perhaps the most interesting of them, is the little duodecimo volume in which Coleridge, Charles Lamb, and Lloyd, made their venture in publishing their poems, in 1797. This was Lamb's own copy in which he transcribed at the end of his printed poems his sonnet to "Miss Kelly," signed "C. Lamb, Sept. 1819." He at first inadvertently wrote this sonnet on the blank half page separating the poems of Lloyd from his own. Discovering his mistake, he cut out the leaf, and in doing so also excised two stanzas of Lloyd's poems printed on the reverse of the leaf. To restore these stanzas he copied them in his own hand on the margins, and rewrote his sonnet in its proper place, as it now appears.

"The Courtship of Miles Standish, and other Poems," by Longfellow, is, perhaps, the most interesting volume in this part of the collection. The edition is the English duodecimo, illustrated by Sir John Gilbert. It is inlaid to folio size to accommodate a letter, which must be regarded as the most interesting document of the early Plymouth Colony. The volume contains a portrait and characteristic note of Gilbert. In it are also to be found many photographic and engraved portraits of Longfellow selected by him from a large number from which he excluded eight or ten as "not altogether pleasing." These latter, though not included, have been preserved. The portraits included all bear Longfellow's autograph, and the text is preceded by the opening stanza in his autograph. The letter inserted in the volume is a well-preserved folio, dated February 6, 1631/2, of considerable historical importance, addressed to Governor John Winthrop. Winthrop's indorsement and Bradford's seal are on the fourth page. It is in Bradford's handwriting, signed by Bradford himself, Governor Thomas Prentice, Dr. William Fuller, the famous physician not only of Plymouth but of the Massachusetts Colony as well, and by two of the principal characters of the poem, — Miles Standish and John Alden. Besides these autographs the volume contains letters of Governor Winslow, Cotton Mather and others, and many engraved illustrations of scenes and events referred to in the poem.

Another book, enlarged in a similar way, is the "Salem Witchcraft," by Charles W. Upham, in two volumes. It contains many of the original complaints, depositions, executions, and other papers used at the trials of those charged with witchcraft, together with documents or letters of many persons who, like Cotton Mather, were conspicuous in that delusion.

SKETCH OF MELLEN CHAMBERLAIN.

It is fitting that a few facts of the life of Judge Chamberlain, and of the conditions under which the collection was made, should be recorded here. Mellen Chamberlain was born, June 4, 1821, at Pembroke, N. H. In 1844 he graduated, with high rank, from Dartmouth College. After teaching for several years in Brattleboro, Vt., in 1846 he entered the Harvard Law school, and soon after was appointed Librarian of that department of the university. In 1849 he was admitted to the bar, and in June of the same year became a citizen of Chelsea, where he still resides. He was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1858-59; of the Senate, 1863-64, the second year serving as chairman of the committee on the judiciary; an Associate Justice of the Municipal Court of Boston from June 29, 1866 to Dec. 1, 1870; Chief Justice of that court from that date to August, 1878; and Librarian of the Boston Public Library from August, 1878 to October, 1890.

At the age of nineteen he was elected a member (the youngest ever chosen) of the New Hampshire Historical Society. He is a corresponding member of the New York, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania historical societies, and a member of the American academy, the New England Historic genealogical society, and the Massachusetts Historical society. The following are among his contributions to American historical work: "John Adams, the statesman of the American Revolution" (1884); A review of McMaster's History (Andover Review, June, 1886); The Revolution impending (Narrative and critical history of America, vol. 6); and a review of Palfrey's History of New England (The Nation, July 10, 1890). Since his retirement from his office in the Boston Public Library, which he resigned on October 1, 1890, by reason of advancing age and impaired health, Judge Chamberlain has been engaged on a history of Chelsea, to which he had committed himself by acceptance of a request made by the City Government.

This collection was begun at a time when the present interest, and the competition resulting, had not yet developed. As a consequence, not only signatures and letters, but historical documents of considerable importance, were often to be had for the asking. Even in public offices a disregard of historical papers led to their disposal in ways which put them easily into the hands of collectors. Judge Chamberlain and the late Dr. George H. Moore, of the Lenox Library, both benefited, even as early as when at school together in Concord, N. H., by this disregard and prevailing indifference.

Later, association with Dr. John Farmer, the genealogist, at that time employed by the state of New Hampshire to arrange its archives, widened and strengthened Judge Chamberlain's interest. It was his good fortune, also, to have for correspondents several famous collectors, among others the Rev. Dr. Sprague, of Albany, I. K. Tefft, Esq., of Savannah, and Robert Gilmor, Esq., of Baltimore.

Judge Chamberlain has always been a man of affairs. Notwithstanding, however, his devotion to the main business of his life, he has maintained his interest in this collection of autographs and historical manuscripts, until to-day the Chamberlain collection, while it is strong in general interest, is unrivalled in the scope and variety of its material relating to New England.

AUTOGRAPHS FROM THE CHAMBERLAIN COLLECTION.

[Mounted on the south wall of the Room for Younger Readers.]

Framed Documents; Tablets of autographs, with illustrative portraits, prints and text; and Seals.

The Tablets, as now exhibited, are surmounted by four Documents which marked the beginning of the American Revolution by all the colonies, their declaration of independence, their first attempt at making a general government, and its consummation by the Constitution of 1787. These are the Address to the King signed by the Congress of 1774, one of the few great papers of that body; the Declaration of Independence; the Articles of Confederation; and the Constitution of the United States.

To these Documents have been affixed the autographs (only in a few cases in fac-simile) of the signers. These signatures were secured by cutting them from franks, deeds, commissions and other papers of little or no importance. When attached to letters or documents these several groups of autographs are doubtless found in all great collections; but in the form in which they are seen in the Chamberlain Collection, are probably unique. The first, third and fourth Documents were printed by Judge Chamberlain to conform in size and form with the fac-simile of the Declaration of Independence, in order that, to all of them, might be attached original signatures of their respective signers.

These four Documents are too long to print entire here. Only titles and the beginning and end of each are given below; but it is intended to present the full text in another form.

DOCUMENT A.

Address to the King by the Congress of 1774.

On December 16, 1773, the inhabitants of Boston assembled at the Old South Church to act about several cargoes of teas shipped to that port by the East India Company of English merchants, which the Boston people determined should not be landed. Finding that the teas would not be sent back to England, the meeting dissolved and fifty men disguised as Indians went to the wharf where the tea ships lay and threw the teas overboard. When the news of these proceedings reached England, Parliament, to punish the people of Boston for these riotous acts, on March 28, 1774, passed the "Boston Bill," which closed the town as a port of entry and caused great distress to the inhabitants. About the same time Parliament passed a bill radically changing the charter of Massachusetts. These measures affected all the colonies and aroused their resentment. To express this popular feeling and to pass retaliatory measures, a General Congress of the colonies assembled at Philadelphia, September 5, 1774, and continued in session nearly eight weeks, during which it formed a "Plan of Association" against importation or consumption of English goods, and against exportation of Colonial products to England. It also prepared addresses to the people of Great Britain, to those of the British colonies, and to the inhabitants of Quebec; passed a Declaration of Colonial rights; and, on October 26, 1774, AN ADDRESS TO THE KING. Of these papers, Lord Chatham, on moving an address to the King, January 20, 1775, to recall the troops from Boston, said: "When your lordships look at the papers transmitted us from America; when you consider their decency, firmness, and wisdom, you cannot but respect their cause, and wish to make it your own. For myself, I must declare and avow, that in all my reading and observation — and it has been my favourite study — I have read through Thucydides, and have studied and admired the master-states of the world — that for solidity of reasoning, force of sagacity, and wisdom of conclusion, under such a complication of difficult circumstances, no nation, or body of men, can stand in preference to the General Congress at Philadelphia.”

The Address is printed in full in Force's Archives: Ser. IV., vol. I., page 934. Below is given the title and the opening lines of the Address, which is omitted by reason of its length. Appended to the framed text are original signatures of all who signed it, save of Henry Middleton, the President of Congress, whose name is printed.

In Congress, October 26, 1774. “To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.”

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN: We, your Majesty's faithful subjects of the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Counties of New-Castle, Kent, and Sussex, on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina, in behalf of ourselves and the inhabitants of those Colonies who have deputed us to represent them in General Congress, by this our humble Petition, beg leave to lay our Grievances before the Throne.

We therefore most earnestly beseech your Majesty, that your Royal authority and interposition may be used for our relief, and that a gracious Answer may be given to this Petition.

That your Majesty may enjoy every felicity through a long and glorious Reign, over loyal and happy subjects, and that your descendants may inherit your prosperity and Dominions till time shall be no more, is, and always will be, our sincere and fervent prayer.

Henry Middleton, President.

DOCUMENT B.

The Declaration of Independence as signed by the Continental Congress at Philadelphia, August 2, 1776.

When Richard Henry Lee's resolution, "That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be dissolved," was agreed to by the Congress on July 2, 1776, the battle had been fought and won. This was the day of which John Adams, writing to his wife, July 3, said, "Yesterday the greatest question was decided, which was ever debated in America, and a greater, perhaps, never was nor will be decided among men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, 'that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States,' etc. . . . The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. . . . It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance." But July 4, when the Declaration drafted by Jefferson was made, is regarded as the more memorable day, partly, it may have been, because of the belief long prevalent that on that day the Declaration was signed by the members of Congress. But it was otherwise; for on July 4 it was signed only by John Hancock, President, and Charles Thomson, Secretary of Congress; and in that form ordered to be printed and sent to the several States, and to be proclaimed at the head of the army. On July 19 Congress resolved, That the Declaration passed on the Fourth be fairly engrossed on parchment, with the title, etc.; and that the same, when engrossed, be signed by every member of Congress. The Secret Journal of the Congress for August 2 says, The Declaration of Independence, being engrossed and compared at the table, was signed by the members. It is not unlikely that several members were absent on that day and signed shortly after. It is said that McKean did not sign until 1781; but it is certain that he was in Philadelphia on October 13, 1776, and signed a letter as one of a Congressional committee. This letter is in the Chamberlain Collection. Thornton of New Hampshire did not take his seat until November 4, and as a matter of course signed after that date. On January 18, 1777, it was Ordered, that an authenticated copy of the Declaration of Independence, with the names of the members of Congress subscribing to the same, be sent to each of the United States, and they be desired to have the same put upon record. The Boston Public Library possesses one of these copies which seems to have strayed from the archives of some State. The same Library also possesses a somewhat reduced photographic fac-simile of the original in its present condition with the autographs nearly faded out, a mishap said to have been caused many years ago by taking a copy by the anastatic process. A specimen of such a copy is here presented with the fac-simile signatures covered by original autographs. No other copy so enriched by original signatures is known.

In Congress, July 4, 1776. The Unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America.

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

* * * * *

We therefore the representatives of the United States of America in General Congress assembled, appealing to the supreme judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do in the name, and by the authority of the good people of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, that these united Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent States may of right do.

And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

DOCUMENT C.

The subject of some sort of a general government for the Colonies engaged the attention of Congress even before it had declared them independent States. It was embraced in Richard Henry Lee's resolutions of June 7, 1776; and on July 11 Congress voted to choose a committee "to prepare and digest the form of a confederation to be entered into between these colonies." On July 12 this committee reported articles which were drawn up by John Dickinson; but they were not finally adopted until five years after. The limits of this note do not permit an account of the difficulties of sectional interests, commerce, political power, and public lands, and of prejudices, which delayed the establishment of a government even as powerless as that of the Confederation proved to be. It was not until March, 1781,— five years after it was contemplated, — that the Confederation went into effect by the assent of the Maryland delegates when authorized by the people of that State. As a system of government nothing could have been framed more weak or unsatisfactory. It finally became so inefficient that there was danger lest the States should separate into two or three confederacies, or even set up as independent governments. Happily, however, six years after the adoption of the Articles of Confederation, the Convention which formed the present Constitution, met at Philadelphia and gave the people a government which has since continued to afford them satisfaction. Of the signatures appended to this document, those of Adams of Virginia, Penn and Williams of North Carolina, Hutson of South Carolina, and Walton of Georgia, are fac-similes, and with the exception of Hutson, are from the original rolls at Washington.

Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union between the States.

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, WE THE UNDERSIGNED DELEGATES OF THE STATES AFFIXED TO OUR NAMES, SEND GREETING. — Whereas the delegates of the United States of America in Congress assembled did on the 15th day of November in the Year of our Lord 1777, and in the Second Year of the Independence of America agree to certain articles of Confederation and perpetual Union between the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-bay, Rhode-island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, in the words following, viz.: — “Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union between the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia.”

ARTICLE I. — The Stile of this confederacy shall be, “The United States of America.”

* * * * *

ARTICLE XIII. — Every state shall abide by the determinations of the united states in congress assembled, on all questions which by this confederation is submitted to them. And the Articles of this confederation shall be inviolably observed by every state, and the union shall be perpetual; nor shall any alteration at any time hereafter be made in any of them; unless such alteration be agreed to in a congress of the united states, and be afterwards confirmed by the legislatures of every state.

AND WHEREAS it hath pleased the Great Governor of the World to incline the hearts of the legislatures we respectively represent in congress, to approve of, and to authorize us to ratify the said articles of confederation and perpetual union, Know Ye that we, the undersigned delegates, by virtue of the power and authority to us given for that purpose, do by these presents, in the name and in behalf of our respective constituents, fully and entirely ratify and confirm each and every of the said articles of confederation and perpetual union, and all and singular the matters and things therein contained: And we do further solemnly plight and engage the faith of our respective constituents, that they shall abide by the determinations of the united states in congress assembled, on all questions, which by the said confederation are submitted to them. And that the articles thereof shall be inviolably observed by the states we respectively represent, and that the union shall be perpetual. In witness whereof we have hercunto set our hands in Congress. Done at Philadelphia in the state of Pennsylvania the 9th day of July in the year of our Lord, 1778, and in the 3d year of the Independence of America.

DOCUMENT D.

The Convention which framed the Constitution of the United States met at Philadelphia on May 14, 1787, and very early developed diversities of opinions among its members so irreconcilable that more than once its dissolution seemed to be inevitable; and when its work was done, the Constitution was signed by only thirty-nine of the fifty-five members who at any time attended the Convention.

Besides the reasons for this diversity of opinions and sectional interests mentioned in the note to the Articles of Confederation, were the facts that the call of the Convention limited its power to a revision of those Articles and did not extend to the formation of a new constitution. Moreover, the Confederacy, by the terms of its formation purported to be a "Perpetual Union." A similar divergence of opinions appeared among the States on the question of its adoption. This was for a long time in doubt, and was finally carried in several of the largest states by slender majorities. North Carolina and Rhode Island at first refused adoption, but finally came into the Union, the former, on November 21, 1789, and the latter, May 29, 1790. It is doubtful whether a majority of the people of all the States was in favor of ratifying the work of the Convention; and it is certain that some of the earliest and ablest leaders of the Revolution, such as Samuel Adams, George Clinton, and Patrick Henry, strenuously opposed its adoption. But it was the best result attainable at the time by the ablest and most patriotic men who had ever assembled in America.

Constitution of the United States of America.

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquillity, provide for the common Defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this CONSTITUTION for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION I. All legislative Powers herein granted, shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

* * * * *

The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same.

Done in Convention by the Unanimous Consent of the States present the Seventeenth day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and Eighty-seven and of the Independence of the United States of America the Twelfth. IN WITNESS whereof We have hereunto subscribed our names.

Geo. Washington, Pres. and deputy from Virginia.

Massachusetts in the Congress of 1765. [At New York.] [On Reverse.]

NOTE. The Congress of 1765, otherwise the famous Stamp Act Congress. This body adopted a Declaration of Rights and Grievances of the Colonies; an address to the king; a memorial to the House of Lords, and a petition to the House of Commons. "For a clear, accurate, and calm statement," says Judge Chamberlain in the Narrative and Critical History of America, "these papers were never surpassed; nor, until the appearance of the Declaration of Independence, was any advance made from the ground taken in them." Among other men composing the Congress, who became celebrated during the Revolution, were Johnson and Dyer of Connecticut, the Livingstons of New York, McKean and Rodney of Delaware, Tilghman of Maryland, Dickinson of Pennsylvania, Rutledge, Gadsden and Lynch of South Carolina. Timothy Ruggles, better known as Brigadier Ruggles, although the president of the Congress, did not concur in its action, and finally became a pronounced Loyalist. The Congresses of 1774 and 1775, and the Constitutional Convention of 1787, at Philadelphia, are seen on the four great Documents above the Tablets.

TABLET XXIII.

The Court and Counsel who tried Captain Preston and Soldiers.

NOTE. Captain Preston was tried Oct. 27, 1770, and William Wemms and others, soldiers of the 29th Regiment of Foot, were tried Nov. 27, 1770, for the murder of Crispus Attucks and others, March 5, 1770, called the Boston Massacre.

The plate on the obverse and the engraving on the reverse were both made by Paul Revere, and their difference is the result of the demands of pictorial representation.

OBVERSE. PAUL REVERE'S PLAN OF THE SCENE OF THE BOSTON MASSACRE, USED AT THE TRIAL.

REVERSE. Print: Paul Revere's engraving of the Massacre. Autographs: Benjamin Lynde; John Cushing; Peter Oliver; Edmund Trowbridge; Jonathan Sewall, attorney general; Samuel Winthrop, clerk; Robert Treat Paine, Samuel Quincy, counsel for the Crown; John Adams, Josiah Quincy, Jr., Sampson Salter Blowers, counsel for the soldiers.

REVERSE. Notification of town meeting, March 12, 1770, to consider, among other matters enumerated, "what steps may be further necessary for obtaining a particular account of all proceedings relative to the Massacre in King street," and "whether the town will take any measures that a public monument may be erected on the spot where the tragical scene was acted." No monument has been erected here, but the site is marked by a circle of paving in the streetway near the north-easterly corner of State and Exchange streets, where the soldiers were drawn up and from which they fired on the mob.

TABLET XXV.

Some of the Tea Party. 1773.

APPENDIX.

The correspondence between Judge Chamberlain and the Board of Trustees, accompanying the transfer, was as follows:

Chelsea, February 14, 1893.

To the Trustees of the Boston Public Library:

Gentlemen: I propose to leave to the Boston Public Library, by testamentary bequest, my collection of historical documents, manuscripts, autographs, portraits, and engravings connected therewith, together with a few printed volumes, and some matters of personal interest to me, provided the Trustees, after a more mature consideration of the subject, are still willing to accept the same agreeably to an informal understanding expressed at their meeting, January 17, 1893. That is to say, that the Trustees will furnish the room in the new building, connected with the librarian's room, substantially in accord with the plan prepared by Alex. S. Jenney, and set said room apart as the permanent home of said collection, to be and forever remain in the sole custody of the librarian, under the Trustees.

From the above conditions are to be excepted the framed Address to the King, the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederation, and the Constitution of the United States, which would be properly exhibited on the walls of some more public room.¹

While I desire to retain the property of the collection during my life, it is my wish, nevertheless, to transfer to the Library at once such portions of it as are in completed form, and the remainder as soon as it can be completed.

The collection will need an index and binding; and as I am familiar with the requirements, I think it would be well to have one or more volumes of each division bound as soon as may be, to serve as examples for the remaining volumes.

It is my purpose to make the collection as complete as I may; and to that end, after any portion of it is transferred to the Library, I shall desire free access to it at suitable times.

(Signed)

Respectfully,
Mellen Chamberlain.

Public Library of the City of Boston.

To the Hon. Mellen Chamberlain:

Dear Sir: It is my pleasant duty to inform you that I am instructed by the Trustees of the Public Library of the City of Boston, that they accept with great gratitude your proposed testamentary gift of your unique and valuable "collection of historical documents, autographs, portraits, and engravings connected therewith, together with certain printed volumes," and that they agree to perform all the conditions set forth in your letter of February 14, 1893, to which the gift is made subject.

Permit me to improve the opportunity to express my own appreciation of the great value of your proposed donation, and assure you that all the conditions referred to will be faithfully performed. The Trustees have already commenced the work of preparing a suitable room in the new Library building for the accommodation of the collection as you are pleased to allow them present possession of the same.

Very truly yours,

(Signed)

Frederick O. Prince,
President pro tem.
