A Foreword By Donald Trump

I've written hundreds of forewords. People ask me all the time, "Donald, will you write a foreword for my book?" I'm very good at it. This is why they ask me. A lot of the forewords I've written have been for very big books. You would know the names if I told you. Big names. Much bigger than this one, I have to tell you.

How great is this foreword going to be? Let's face it, this foreword just started and it's already the best foreword you've ever read. Nobody outwrites me when it comes to forewords. Nobody.

I see bad forewords all over the place. I read a book the other day. The foreword was written by Desmond Tutu. Nice guy—I like him—but he can't write a foreword to save his life. Maybe he's a good bishop. (In fact, from what I've been told, he's a mediocre bishop.) But a foreworder? Please. He doesn't know what he's doing. I'm doing a much better job.

I've been thanked in a lot of books, too, by the way. In the acknowledgments. A lot of books. I don't think Desmond Tutu has ever been thanked in a book. I've certainly never seen it if he has.

As for this book, I'm sure it'll be a tremendous success because I wrote the foreword.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature of Donald Trump in black ink, written in a cursive style.

Local Boy Suffers Undertow Accident

CONEY ISLAND

A boy was rescued after sustaining hair-related injuries Tuesday from being caught in a Coney Island undertow. Local authorities reported. Donald Trump, 6, son of Queens real-estate developer Fred Trump, spent nearly 20 minutes fighting the pull of the undertow against his head before being dragged from the water.

Lifeguard Sam Stefano noticed the young Donald splashing and heroically swam out to save him, according to beach-goers on the scene. Once on the shore, he discovered the boy's hair had sustained serious damage. "I could tell right away there was something wrong with this boy's head, then I realized, 'Gosh, that is his hair.'"

The rapidly shifting hydrodynamic forces Donald was subjected to while caught in the undertow have left his hair permanently misshapen—twisted into a wave or seashell-like form that is not recognizable as human hair.

Donald and his family were taken by ambulance to Coney Island Hospital where physicians confirmed a severe case of Traumatic Follicle Deformation. According to Staff Hair Physician Raymond Talgher,

"Patients who suffer this kind of accident will never grow normal hair again. The damage is too extensive." Dr. Talgher stated that even with corrective surgery, young Donald's hair will always be "off-putting and bizarrely malformed." He continued, "I fear we have failed little Donald, but unfortunately, medical science has only come so far."

Hospital staff reported that the boy seems to be in good spirits despite his ordeal. His family plans to leave the hospital within the next day and prepare their son for a lifetime of curious looks and whispered comments.

Said Donald's mother, Mary Trump, "Donald has always been such a kind, loving boy. I fear that, to deflect criticism of his grotesque hairdo, he will warp into an angry boy who must lash back at the world, and to overcompensate for his deformity, he will develop a dark lust for material success."

Trump's Warthogs Top Bowling Green State 14-10

PHILADELPHIA — The Wharton Warthogs football team won their second home game of the season against the BGSU Falcons Friday 14-10. Michael Sheldon paced Wharton with 109 yards on 22 carries, scoring on runs of 2 and 5 yards. Wharton's players were congratulated in the locker room after the game by their classmate and the team's owner, Donald Trump. "My guys played very well," Trump said.

Warthogs Running Back MICHAEL SHELDON (L) carried for over 30 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter. Trump "pleased."

To Whom It Should Concern,

As one of your esteemed readers, I find the reporting in The Wharton Journal to be, frankly, lousy. In fact, it could be considered "third rate." I do not mean to be disrespectful. Actually, maybe I do. Whatever the case, this situation could potentially be a disaster.

How will students know what is happening on campus when we cannot trust the publication charged with keeping us informed? In particular, your feature "Things For Students To Do Out On The Town" was lazy reporting. Several local activities were not included on your list, such as horseback riding, enjoying a malted milk, or apple-picking.

I have to tell you, I have not written a letter calling out the shortcomings of the press since I was 9, when Highlights Magazine had to be dressed down for their reporting on tree-house construction. I felt it was unfair to tree-house developers.

Perhaps you could look for some new reporters who are smarter? The students at Brown are laughing at us when they read the - okay, I will say it - garbage that you are printing in The Wharton Journal.

I'm off to write more letters now. Maybe Playboy Magazine. Some of their centerfolds lately have not been so good.

Yours Truly,
Donald J. Trump

STARTING A BUSINESS WITH NOTHING BUT ELBOW GREASE, A CAN-DO ATTITUDE, AND A VERY SMALL LOAN OF $1 MILLION

Many people believe Donald Trump is a self-made billionaire who forged his massive real-estate fortune out of the sweat and toil of his own bare-knuckled hands, his cowboy-like bearing in stark silhouette against the setting sun. This is correct. But before he struck it rich, Trump looked up to his father, Fred Trump, who worked tirelessly to support his family on a meager $80 million annual salary.

Small Real-Estate Firm Struggles to Repel Blacks Like the Big Guys

By DENNIS T. NELSON,
Staff Writer

QUEENS—Local real-estate company E. Trump & Son has been a "mom and pop" business for decades, modestly fending off Black renters in Brooklyn and Queens one family at a time. Now, with several larger property-management corporations moving into the marketplace, E. Trump & Son is beginning to feel the strain. Owner Fred Trump, 66, expressed concern for the future of his company, saying, "I've got these wonderful apartments in Coney Island. On a good day, I can keep out maybe two or three Negro families, but these big fancy conglomerates can keep out 15 or 20. How can I compete with that?"

One of the largest corporate entities in the Queens real-estate market is Consolidated Management. CEO Henry Edwards addressed their smaller competition. "Consolidated Management and these small firms are competing to deny the same service to the same unwanted customer. If we can do it better and faster, that's good for the industry, it's good for the Caucasian consumer, and it's good for the country. That's the way the free market is supposed to work."

Edwards says the failure of family companies like E. Trump & Son to keep pace, and the fact that many Black families remain in the city's apartment buildings as a result, is unfortunate, but the cost of progress.

Naturally, Fred Trump is working to prevent any slowing of Black evictions in the future. He says E. Trump & Son was founded with the simple dream of denying quality, affordable housing to Black families, and would continue to work toward that goal. One of the company's first development projects was on 198th Street in Queens building single-family houses. "I still remember the pride I felt when I told my first Negro family to take a hike. It's the moments like those that keep me in this business."

Trump says he offers something the big companies can't: fresh ideas and techniques for Black-repelling that could revolutionize the city's racially exclusive housing market. "We offer a more personal touch," he says. "My wife and I know these Negroes personally, and the fact that we can visit them in their own homes and tell them to get the hell out means so much to us."

Fred Trump plans to one day hand the business to son Donald, who is expected to begin working for the company after graduating from college. Said Donald, "The Trump family has a long-standing tradition of developing quality real estate for Whites going back to 1927, and nobody's going to take that away from us."

WINNERS NEVER SLEEP

While many people would be satisfied with being a luxury real-estate mogul, multi-billionaire, top-rated television personality, multiple best-selling author, chairman and president of the Trump Organization, founder of Trump Entertainment Resorts, philanthropist, Emmy Award nominee, casino owner, university founder, world-famous billionaire investor, owner of the Miss Universe and Miss USA pageants, fine-dining restaurant owner, and president of the United States, Donald Trump is not a man to rest on his laurels. He is always creating and investing in exciting new businesses and projects.

Young Casino Owner Offers Urban Kids Gambling Tips

By DEIRDRE AUERBACH

THE SIXTH GRADERS OF Brooklyn's P.S. 235 had a different kind of math class today when local real-estate developer Donald Trump visited their school to give them a special introduction to the world of gambling. Mr. Trump, who owns several casinos in Atlantic City, had been looking for a way to give back to the community. "The casino business has been very good to me, as you've probably heard, so I wanted to do something to inspire the next generation of gamblers."

Trump introduced the kids to popular table games, including roulette, craps, and blackjack, as well as various slot machines which he donated to the school. He offered tips for how much money to put into action on each game, which he said depended on how much you're winning, and whether you feel lucky enough to win even more.

Trump said he hoped to leave the students with a sense of the variety and excitement that awaits them in the gaming industry. "Many children in underprivileged communities like this one have never considered a future in gambling, but I'm showing them they can win, and win big."

Trump's generosity and philanthropy had gotten through to at least some of the third graders of P.S. 235.

'Low energy' Jeb fuels Trump, Inc. drink

DONALD Trump interrupted his campaign for the Republican nomination for president Monday to introduce Bushed, a Trump-branded low-energy drink inspired by rival Jeb Bush. At a Trump Tower press conference, Trump offered the drink to not only his fellow candidate but to "anyone looking for a powerful boost of lethargy."

A jolt of Bushed promises up to one hour of push-me-down, Trump said, "for nap time, rainy weekends, when you need to lose a debate, or when you're simply looking to hit single-digit poll numbers."

Reuters Pictures

Jeb Bush inspired Donald Trump's latest product, the low-energy drink Bushed.

Twelve-year-old Jermaine Davis discovered a natural interest and enthusiasm for games of chance. "Mr. Trump taught me that math can be fun and that only morons don't split their aces." Davis and his fellow students were invited to join Trump's Junior High Roller League, a community-outreach program that offers after-school craps and poker. First to sign up was Gabriel Garcia, 11, who said, "When I grow up, I'm going to put it all on the line chasing an outside straight."

"There's a lot of potential in these kids," Trump said. "My advice to them is to double down and bet it all on a hunch."

To encourage achievement in the gambling field and recognize outstanding students, Trump has established a $2,000 high-interest loan to qualifying kids, awarded nightly.

An excerpt from Donald Trump's sixth and most popular volume from his Trump's Thrilling Detectives series, Tennessee Johnny's Last Score (1998, Vintage Crime/Black Lizard)

The fist came at Trump and he had just enough time to think it was going to hurt. He was right. Spitting the blood onto the pavement, he looked up at Darryl Crowne. "Now Crowne, use your words."

Crowne snarled and wound up for another punch. Trump hit him in his ribs. Crowne grabbed his cracked rib and let out a grunt. Trump used the opportunity to grab his hair and pull his head back. He socked Crowne right in the jaw, laying him out on his backside. He shook the blood from his nose and began to get up. The cocking of Trump's Glock 19 made him freeze in place.

"Okay, Crowne, now that that's out of your system, you're going to answer the goddamned question. Where is Victor Carlo?"

"Fuck you!"

Trump sighed, then pressed the heel of his wing-tip into Crowne's cracked rib, releasing a howl.

"Would you like to rethink your answer?"

"Okay, okay!" Crowne cried out. Trump took his foot off the rib. Crowne caught his breath. "The last I heard, Vic was going over to Mikey's."

"Who the hell is Mikey? Mikey Bivona?"

"No man, Mikey's, the titty bar on 14th and Western."

"They got good wings there."

"Yeah." Crowne inhaled. "So, are we fucking done here?"

"Yeah, we're done."

Trump slugged Crowne in the jaw one last time just for kicks, then walked to his Lincoln Town Car, leaving Crowne on the ground. As he drove away, he shifted in his seat uncomfortably. The last time he was at Mikey's, the owner told him that if he ever showed his face in there again he would personally blow it off with the sawed-off he kept under the bar.

Donald Trump wins again outside the Blimpie on 3rd Ave in Manhattan

Trump card wins free sandwich

Three days after dropping his business card into a plastic jar at the Blimpie on 3rd Avenue, billionaire businessman Donald Trump received word Friday he'd won a free sandwich from the sub shop.

"You might think my odds were slim when I put my card in that big jar with, like, a hundred others," the wealthy businessman said upon receiving the news. "But this is what I do. I win." Trump left his office immediately to claim the prize, telling associates, "This is perfect. I knew I would win, and I knew this is what I would have for lunch today."

At Blimpie, Trump is said to have ordered the deli tuna sandwich with no lettuce before asking the Blimpie employee whether his prize came with a combo fountain drink and cookie. According to clerks, the business executive and reality-TV personality was visibly upset upon learning extras were not included, but perked up considerably when told he was still eligible to enter his card in the next drawing. "I will get what I am entitled to from Blimpie," Trump said.

PRESIDENT TRUMP

AMERICA'S NEW BOSS

PUTTING THE “EXECUTIVE” IN “EXECUTIVE BRANCH”

The world changed on the afternoon of Friday, January 20, 2017, a day that will forever be remembered as the day America became great again. Donald J. Trump stood in front of millions of adoring citizens and was formally sworn in as the 45th president of the United States. Men, women, and children alike wept at the greatness bestowed upon us.

TRUMP

INTERNATIONAL HOTEL & TOWER
NEW YORK

Inaugural Address by Donald J. Trump (ROUGH DRAFT)

Thank you, Chief Justice (???????) ...I want to thank the good people who voted for me. Fantastic job. You nailed it. You treated me very well. To be honest, it was an easy decision, but still, good for you.

The rest of you... Should I say it? Should I? Ok, I'll say it. You let us all down. What can I tell you?

(wait for Applause to die down) I'm honored to stand here today as your 45th president, stepping into the role that so many great men have filled. Well... they're not all great. Don't get me wrong, some of them were good. But frankly most of them are overrated. I won't get into details now, but a few were real losers.

But today isn't about the mistakes of the past. It's about me being President. Honestly, that's why we're here, isn't it? (Big applause here)

This Nation has seen better days. America is not a big money-maker. I don't need the money from this job, by the way. I can tell you that, it's not a big deal. (ad lib how rich). Our country needs to start being smarter, making better deals. Iran is walking all over us. Mexico is eating our lunch. And China.

Beginning now we're going to be winning. A lot. You've got good leadership now, so that's a good start. I'll turn this whole thing around so fast, it'll make your head spin. We're going to make America great again. Big league.

Thank you. You've been a wonderful crowd. Not the biggest crowd I've ever spoken to, but pretty big. Thank you.

MEET THE "FIRST" LADY

Melania Trump

As is customary, the First Lady will champion a cause close to her heart: closing her eyes and pretending she's not having sex with Donald Trump.

Slovenian-born model and jewelry designer Melania Trump brings effortless grace and elegance to the White House. She will use her position to promote awareness of her signature issue. "Closing my eyes and pretending I'm not having sex with Donald Trump is the most important mission in my life," Mrs. Trump says, "and I will give this issue the national attention it deserves." She'll launch the "Just Think No" campaign, and speak to schoolchildren across the nation about her hope to escape into a "world of the mind" far, far away during sex with her husband. She believes her message will inspire young people to understand the importance of gritting her teeth and somehow suffering through yet another abhorrent bout of Donald Trump-initiated intercourse. "If we Americans can send a man to the moon," she says, "then surely I can block out the sound of this repugnant man grunting his own name over and over while he penetrates me."

FIRST LADY FACTS

- Genuinely likes "the people"
- Enjoys long walks on the beach that her husband installed on the 35th floor of Trump Tower
- Passionate about saving endangered minks
- Unaware marriage has term limit

TRUMP FACT

Every Valentine's Day, Donald Trump gives his wife a single, chocolate-covered baboon heart.

OUR NEW First Penis

Bold and mighty like America itself, Donald Trump's penis is known for setting the standard of genital excellence in both business and politics. Circumcised and meticulously groomed, it's kept at 72° Fahrenheit with a stable humidity (45–55%). It's clothed in vicuña-wool underwear that's worn just once and is then ceremoniously burned in a Swarovski-crystal fireplace.

Twice a week, famed hairstylist Rossano Ferretti is flown in to style the Trump pubic hair, always making it elegant and gorgeous, and leaving the Trump balls hairless and smooth as Fabergé eggs.

Two nude female Japanese models always accompany the Trump penis and cradle it during urination. After urination, it's then washed in agarwood oil and put gently back into the pants. While sleeping, the Trump penis is lain unto rest on a silk eiderdown pillow, where it is not disturbed until morning. Six nude Venezuelan models awaken it with soft kisses.

Ready to begin the day, the Trump penis works on our behalf, solving problems and doing everything it can to make America great again.

Majority of Trump Wikipedia edits traced to Oval Office

WASHINGTON — The majority of edits to the Wikipedia page of President Donald Trump have been traced to an IP address in the Oval Office, sources confirmed Monday. Over 70 percent of 7,531 edits over the past six months were made by the user WikiWinner. Wikipedia officials confirmed that details updated from the Oval Office IP address included a new section on "Trump's real hair," a repeated lowering of his age, and the addition of a claim that Trump is the first president whose "sex number" is greater than 500. Although the identity of WikiWinner could not be established, Wikipedia has suspended the user's access. The White House has not responded to the findings except to issue a brief statement of intent to "shut down" Wikipedia.

THE FIRESIDE SCOLDINGS

A New American Tradition

One of the cherished hallmarks of Donald Trump's presidency is surely his weekly fireside scoldings. Just as FDR's famous fireside chats soothed a nation in the grip of the Great Depression and World War II, Trump's fireside scoldings repudiate a nation full of morons, lightweights, and clowns.

You're too stupid to go to college. Go to a barbecue."

SAY HELLO TO THE NEW FIRST PET

The official pet of Donald Trump's White House is Strongy, an 800-pound silverback gorilla. Americans enjoy watching the loyal pet chase down and flip over the vice president's motorcade, play fetch with the nuclear football, or come out of nowhere to mount visiting foreign dignitaries. Rest assured, everyone who meets Strongy will fall in love with his never-scripted and always straight-from-the-heart feces throwing and public masturbating.

FIRST PET'S RESPONSIBILITIES

It isn't all fun and games for Strongy. He has some important duties as the nation's First Pet.

15 WAYS THE STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS CAN TURN A PROFIT

Many of the constitutionally mandated practices of our democracy have been operating at a financial loss for more than 200 years. President Trump won't stand for that. A smart businessman doesn't leave money on the table. Here are just a few ways he can leverage one of our countless forgotten, long-dead government assets: the State of the Union address.

Trump Rebuts Every Negative Response to State of the Union

By MARK FLEMMING
and JANICE WEISMAN

WASHINGTON—President Donald Trump concluded his State of the Union address Tuesday night by vowing to rebut each and every negative response, starting with the official Democratic response, but not stopping there.

"Every American deserves to be given a simple 'You're wrong and I'm right,'" Trump said at the close of his 90-minute improvised speech to Congress.

The president spent the next few hours returning volley after volley of YouTube comments, tweets, and blog postings addressing any critic who gave his speech less than effusive praise.

Sources confirmed early this morning the bleary-eyed president struggled to stay focused during his daily intelligence briefing as he thumbed through more than 200 lukewarm responses to his speech on Facebook, which he promised to immediately fact-check or dismiss with a derogatory insult.

At press time, the president was said to have canceled today's meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to stay on top of any slights made by the nation's morning-radio DJs.

STUPID WHITE HOUSE TRADITIONS THAT WILL BE BANISHED

To the great relief of the American people, President Trump will discontinue several White House and presidential traditions. "These traditions are stupid and a waste of my time," President Trump says. He will banish these "pathetic" activities and replace them with "fantastic, better ones," which will in turn become the cherished traditions of future presidents.

OLD TRADITION

NEW TRADITION

Pardoning the Thanksgiving turkey

President Trump will take the honorary first bite of the turkey's deep-fried gizzard.

Hosting championship sports teams

President Trump will host Tom Brady after every major sports championship.

White House Easter egg hunt for children

The president will find the most eggs and defeat every child who joins in the Easter egg hunt.

Giving away pens after bill signing

These are good pens. If people want one, they will be charged $5,000 per pen.

Reading "Twas the Night Before Christmas" to children at Christmas

The president will read Crippled America to children at Christmas.

Outgoing president leaving a note for the incoming president

The outgoing president will leave an autographed 8"x10" photo of Trump for the incoming president.

ROLLER COASTERS, SANDALS, CORN DOGS, AND WATCHES: TRUMP ON THE ISSUES

ROLLER COASTERS

“They’re great, but why are they so short? If I were running the theme park, all the rides would be 30 minutes long, minimum. And they need better leaders. The people who put you in the roller coaster and put the safety bar down—they’re clowns. Have you been to Six Flags? Great park, terrific rides. But the people who work there are some of the biggest losers you’ve ever seen—and I’ve seen a lot. Bottom line: roller coasters need to be longer. Period.”

SANDALS

“These are a no-brainer. People buy half a shoe for the price of a full shoe. It’s smart business. I don’t wear them because they’re disgusting and they make you look dumb. And I wouldn’t sell them because they don’t fit the Trump brand. However, if I did sell them, they would make me a lot of money. Do you know how much it costs to make a sandal in China or one of the other countries? I do. I called one of the best shoe men, a good friend of mine. He told me. If you knew the price, you wouldn’t have to ask. That’s your first lesson. Write it down.”

CORN DOGS

“Think of it. How much money do you save by not having to buy the bun? I’ll have to ask some people I know, but I’m guessing it’s a lot. And a lot of people will pay a premium for it. But not me. I don’t eat food on a stick.”

WATCHES

“Who wears watches to tell time? People with no class. I wear a watch, but not to tell time. I wear it as jewelry. It’s a very nice watch. If I need to know what time it is, my people tell me. Chinese watches are very poorly made. The Japanese make a good watch, but I don’t trust them. They’ve got robots. Watch the news. You’ll see. Ask any watchmaker about wearing a watch if you don’t believe me. I know some very smart watchmakers. They’re Jewish and I guarantee they know more about watches than the Chinese.”

DONALD TRUMP'S PRESIDENTIAL SCHEDULE

Presidential routines are as varied as the officeholders themselves. Regular habits speak volumes about the tone and character of a presidency. THE GREAT TRUMP SPEECHES WE'LL REMEMBER FOR GENERATIONS

"MY HAIR IS REAL"

February 23, 2017, New York, NY

Address to the United Nations General Assembly

"People think my hair is fake or that I wear a toupee. That's ridiculous! Anyone from any country, come and pull my hair. China? Italy? Come on. Pull it. I'll tell you exactly where to pull it and how, once you're up here. Let's go. Come on up."

"MR. NO-GOOD HOOLIGAN, CLEAN UP THIS WALL"

August 12, 2018, the Texas-Arizona border

Speech to border guards and local officials

"Mr. Unknown Vandal, you're not going to get away with this. I promise you that. Find a big brush. Get a bucket and some soap, because Mr. Worthless Piece of Garbage who drew the 90-mile-long penis along the U.S.-Mexico border, clean up this wall!"

THE NEW HOTEL BUILT OVER THE GETTYSBURG CEMETERY ADDRESS

November 19, 2020, Gettysburg, PA

Address to builders and developers of the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce

"Four score and I don't know how many years ago—lot of years—Abraham Lincoln gave a great speech about this place. A good speech, we'll say. An okay speech. But we're here today to break ground on a really nice piece of property. A great hotel. The parking lot will go right here. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this."

"ASK NOT WHAT YOUR COUNTRY CAN DO FOR YOU, ASK WHAT YOU CAN BUY FROM THE TRUMP COLLECTION GIFT STORE"

January 21, 2021, Washington, DC

Second inaugural address

"There are so many great deals in the Trump Collection gift store right now. These are great for Valentine's Day, which is coming up. If you really want to give the gift of class, or give the gift that will tell your loved ones that you really care, and that you think of them as worth an expensive luxury item, and that you have that kind of disposable income—very important—we've got it. Chandeliers, satin bedding, nice socks even. It's all wonderful stuff."

"I HAVE A PLANE"

August 28, 2023, Washington, DC

Speech to assembled marchers on the Washington Mall

"I have a plane. I have a plane that will one day rise up over this nation and live out the true meaning of the words, 'luxury air travel.' I have a plane."

HOW DOES PRESIDENT TRUMP COPE WITH LIVING IN A PLAIN WHITE HOUSE BUILT FOR POOR MEN?

Built in 1792, the White House may have seemed like suitable quarters at the time, but that was also a time when man could only move as fast as a horse could run. A lot has changed since then! The nation will no longer tolerate its president traveling by horse, and nor should it now tolerate its first family being relegated to a rickety, 200-year-old, colorless hovel that's scarcely bigger than 50,000 square feet. After the sacrifices they've made on the campaign trail, they deserve better.

The president's new home, Trump Presidential Plaza, will feature over 200,000 square feet of premium retail space in addition to 116 luxury condominiums, a state-of-the-art office complex where the president will work, and a 10-story executive penthouse where the first family can finally live and grow in peace, far from the intrusion of tour groups or the press. The original White House will be preserved as a historical attraction within the plaza, part of an interior courtyard surrounded by a five-star food court and amusement-park-style rides, including the world's tallest marble waterslide.

Upon the complex's grand opening in June 2018, Americans can finally take pride in the residence of their commander in chief, a house of grandeur befitting the greatest leader of the world's greatest nation. Visitors from all over the world who pass the religious test will be welcomed through its grand south entrance, marked by a towering row of letters that will include the renovated Washington Monument serving as the vertical segment of the "T" in "TRUMP," at the apex of which will be a rotating five-star restaurant and casino.

MEMO TO WHITE HOUSE STAFF: HOW TO UNSEE WHAT YOU'VE JUST SEEN

As the White House domestic staff begins serving a new administration, they must also adjust to living with a new family who calls the official residence their home. This internal memo provides an intimate look at how White House attendants, housekeeping, and other staff will maintain their tact and aplomb as they organize, sanitize, and beautify 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

MEMORANDUM

Date: February 21, 2017
To: White House Residence Staff
From: Margaret Hagestad, White House Chief Usher
RE: How to Unsee What You've Just Seen

There may be a time when you see something you immediately wish you had not seen. In these moments, you must exercise extreme discretion. Do not acknowledge to the President or First Family what you have seen. Instead, retreat and remove the incident from your mind's eye forever.

Blocking out what you've seen may be difficult under certain circumstances. I recommend the following:

- Any strange stains found on the President's laundry are likely from a type of béarnaise sauce you've never encountered before.
- Beautiful, exotic women roaming the halls are the responsibility of the Secret Service. Ignore them.
- Any maps or globes with large red X's over many countries were like that before Trump bought them. Dust and move on.
- When working near the President's large meditation pod, if you glimpse what you believe to be splotchy red spots or scars on the back of his anemic scalp as something orange is mechanically lowered onto his head, be advised that this is simply a grooming routine involving his natural hair and certain creams.
- The President hosts many lavish events with many influential people. The figures you may have seen sharing cigars with the President were part of an extraterrestrial-themed party.
- The vacuum-sealed steel door marked "Gene Replication Facility" is nothing more than a donated prop from one of the President's film-industry friends.

THE NEW, IMPROVED WHITE HOUSE PRESSROOM

The old White House Pressroom was as plain and boring as its uninspiring name. Little more than a room with a podium, this sad excuse for a presidential platform failed to project the grandeur and stately tone you can expect when a truly great president addresses the dishonest jackasses in the media.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR PHOTOGRAPHERS HOW TO TAKE THE BEST PHOTOS OF TRUMP

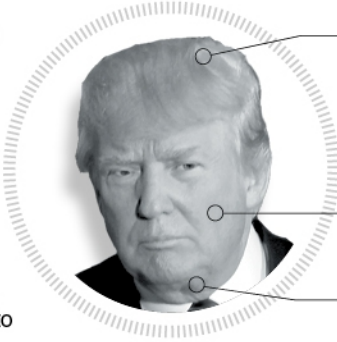

To accentuate Trump's youthful features, photographs are best taken between 1964 and 1985.

Camera must angle up 45 degrees to convey deference.

In some photos, Trump may appear with red, demonic eyes. Unfortunately, there is no way to correct this.

If winds are NNE at more than 3 mph, all camera equipment must face due west to ensure proper hair position.

To give skin healthy glow, lighting must only come from gold or crystal chandelier.

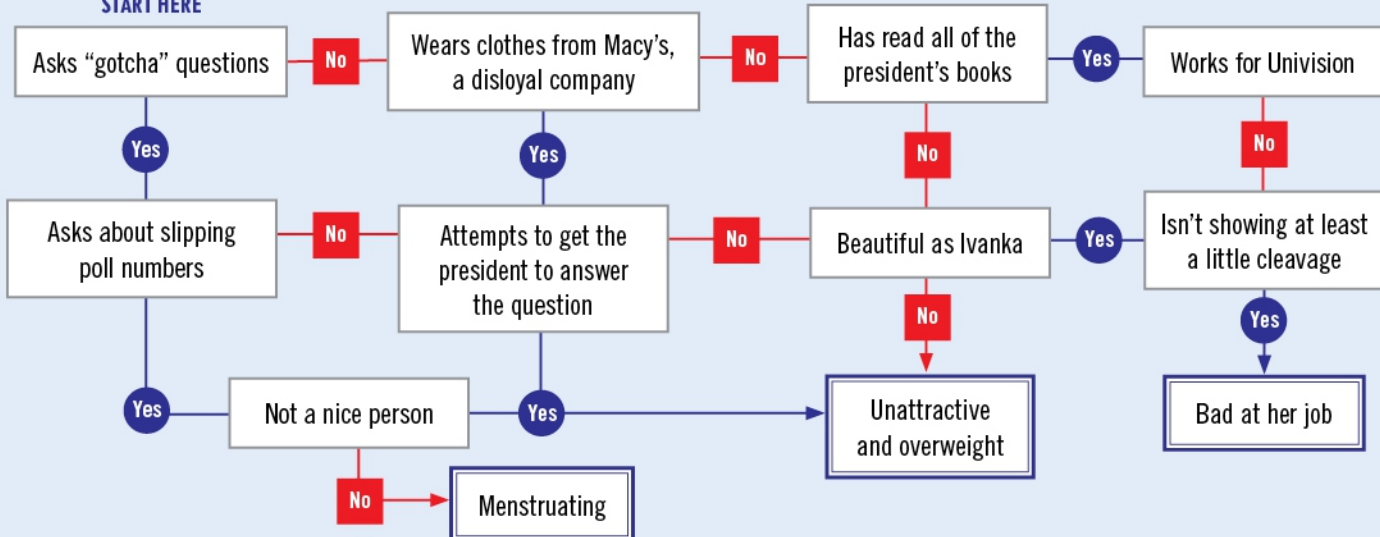

Photo retouching is unethical in journalism, unless it's to highlight the true radiance of Trump's turkey neck.

US 'won't negotiate with terrorists unless they bring A-game'

By CARMINE PURVIS

WASHINGTON — President Trump clarified his position on terrorist negotiations at a White House press conference today, stating his refusal to engage in discussions unless ISIS officials "really bring it." Trump pledged to walk away from any "hack" terrorist-negotiators: "When they come to the table dressed in dirty rags, that's not treating me with any respect. If they would come in a suit and tie with nice dress shoes, then I know I'm dealing with serious people." Trump expressed a lack of faith that negotiations with ISIS will be successful. "We could have a good deal; a win-win deal. But these people so far are not very impressive. They undercut their value and don't even know a dollar figure for their cut-and-run point. Basic stuff, folks." Trump told reporters he has sent top ISIS commanders several Arabic translations of "The Art of the Deal" and is waiting for their rave reviews.

President Trump chastises a student while speaking to a group of first graders at Phoebe Hearst Elementary School in Washington.

First-graders maul heckler during Trump visit

BY ANTON WALDVOGEL

WASHINGTON—A visit to a local elementary school turned violent Thursday when a group of first graders attacked fellow student Carlson Nunemacher, who interrupted the president's reading of "The Day The Crayons Quit."

The boy suffered minor bruises and scratches, and was rushed to the school nurse's office shortly after the incident.

Some observers expressed concern that President Trump seemed to encourage the crowd of children to be rough with Nunemacher, 6.

Planned as a cordial visit with children to provide a photo-op for the president, the event turned to chaos when Nunemacher interrupted Trump's ad-libbed comments, which he made frequently while reading the book. Nunemacher yelled out, "Those aren't the words, you dummy."

The other children immediately rose to the president's defense, shouting over the boy with chants of "USA, USA, USA!" drowning him out and compelling the president to pause.

Some children shoved the boy. The president, while not acting to control the situation, quietly motioned to his Secret Service detail to escort the child out of the room.

As the Secret Service worked their way through the group of children, President Trump appeared annoyed at being made to wait while agents dealt with the disturbance.

"Get rid of him!" the president suddenly yelled. "Get him the hell out."

This sudden comment stoked the children further, as cheers rose above the jeers and boos, and some children even struck the boy.

"But don't hurt him," The president added quietly as other children continued to cheer, yell, hit the boy, and tear at his clothes.

The children applauded wildly when the boy was removed from the classroom crying.

President Trump continued, "I feel a lot of love in this room. There's something special going on here. The silent majority is not silent anymore."

According to the teacher, Beverly Parker, Trump had set the stage for the aggressive behavior by "whipping the children into a frenzy," prior to the incident.

"He paused a lot while he read and would go off about how everybody should get dessert instead of vegetables at every meal, and stay up all night. The children loved it. They were cheering. He had them eating out of his hand," Parker said.

The president also talked about the teacher during his reading, saying, "Your teacher is not a leader, is she? She's made stupid decisions. And that's why your class doesn't have fun anymore. You have homework and tests. We don't like those, do we?"

The president went on to question the need for teachers, asking the students if they thought all the teachers should be banned from the school, calling them "despicable."

"But I promise I wouldn't kill them. I hate them. I think some of them—many of them—are terrible people—but I would never kill a teacher. That would be wrong."

The president added: "But..." knowingly pausing as if considering the prospect.

"That's when it really got scary," according to Alison Du-mound, a teacher's aide assigned to the class. "He was tapping into a very dark place in these children, and they smelled blood in the water."

Trump did not comment on the disturbance, only to indicate that he thought the visit was "very nice."

Students expressed overall approval of the president's visit.

"He says the things we're thinking but we know better not to say, and I really liked that," said student Caroline Thede, 7.

Trump Creates Presidential Anti-Defamation League

By PATRICK JOHANSON

WASHINGTON — In a signing statement Friday, President Trump created the Presidential Anti-Defamation League as part of the broader Presidential Fairness and Protection Act. Mr. Trump's statement decried the mistreatment of President-Americans and vowed the new agency would "make the forces of hate and injustice accountable."

"Discriminatory slurs like 'President Chump' and 'Insult-er in Chief' are directed toward only those who happen to be president," Mr. Trump said in the statement. "Such attacks are a shameful relic of our bigoted past."

The league will work to protect those of presidential origin by establishing stiffer punishments, including prison time, for overtly presidentist remarks that unfairly target anyone in the U.S.-executive-office-holding minority.

The Rev. Garland Hall, a presidential rights attorney, worked with Mr. Trump on the creation of the new rights organization. Said Mr. Hall, "For too long this office has been victimized by the hate and injustice of presidentaphobes. We will overcome."

Last week, Mr. Trump urged Congress to send him a presidential hate-crimes bill to expand protections for people of presidential origin against bias from the media and protesters.

A LOOK AT EVERY PRESIDENT IN AMERICAN HISTORY AND WHY TRUMP TRUMPS THEM ALL

Although singular in the scope and dimension of his reign, President Trump will remain a leader firmly situated within the context of a long line of historic commanders in chief. Having thoroughly skimmed the primary achievements of our nation's past presidents, Trump has found ways to improve upon them all and, in so doing, finally fulfill the promise of their failed legacies.

TRUMP FACT

If he dies in office, Trump asks that instead of the vice president taking over, America descend into chaos.

DATE: February 16, 2017
FROM: President Donald Trump <DTRUMP@WHITEHOUSE.GOV>
TO: Major General George J. Franz III <GJFRANZ@USARMY.GOV>
SUBJECT: CONTENTS OF CRATE #9906755

Major General Franz,

As the newly elected president it's my duty to protect the people. We have a lot of enemies out there who are laughing at us and want to destroy us. The Chinese, ISIS, the Russians, and the illegal immigrants, just to name a few.

For this reason, I'm ordering the Intelligence Branch of the United States Army to retrieve Crate #9906755 from its top-secret location. I've known about the existence of this crate for a long time. We've kept it hidden, and for what? Now is the time to reveal this fabulous weapon to our enemies.

It's time to release the ARK OF THE COVENANT

I realize it's a dangerous artifact, and in the wrong hands, it could do irreparable damage, yadda yadda yadda. But with these big threats we're facing and all of these people waiting to take a shot at us, we have no choice.

I've spoken to the top men — really, the very best guys — and they tell me that if we open the Ark now, our army will be invincible — so strong that no one will mess with us.

Deliver the crate to the White House this afternoon, and provide me with the proper rabbinic robes and headdress for the opening ritual.

Some have said that there may be a risk to me in opening the Ark and looking inside. I don't think so. I rebuilt Atlantic City. I can handle opening a box.

Sincerely,

President Trump

Trump to serve as grand marshal for every U.S. parade

President will take over candy throwing

Everett Dietz
USA TODAY

WASHINGTON In a new initiative designed to improve what he calls the "sad and very poor" quality of parades nationwide, President Trump signed an executive order Monday stipulating that all parades will feature Trump as grand marshal. His duties will include kicking off parades, throwing candy from leading floats, and ensuring that the parade presents a "fun and dazzling spectacle worthy of an American parade."

According to the executive order, the effort will give parades the credibility and competence they could not otherwise achieve under their current leadership, which Trump called "a hodgepodge of unreliable or drunken clowns."

Parades covered under the new order include only those celebrating American holidays, patriotism, American business, American products, approved cultures, American intervention in foreign wars, and President Trump himself. All parades are to take place within the city where President Trump happens to be at any given time and are subject to being relocated and rescheduled for the president's convenience. All residents of towns in which parades are scheduled will be required to attend.

Several regiments of U.S. soldiers as well as local National Guardsmen are to be provided to each parade to march in formation. Armed nuclear missiles, if located in silos within 100 miles from the parade route, are required to be removed and transported by the morning of the parade and displayed on large flatbed trucks as part of the procession.

The White House Domestic Policy Council estimates the president will spend roughly 135 days every year fulfilling his new grand-marshal duties.

A BETTER, SMARTER IRS

Get ready for some big changes when it comes to taxes. We'll have new tax brackets, for starters. And whether you're in the Loser tax bracket or the Total Loser tax bracket, you'll benefit from Trump's tax plan for America. You'll especially benefit if you're in the Rich, Super Rich, Billionaire, Super-Billionaire, or Trump tax bracket. (You are not in the Trump bracket.) Here are just a few of the other new tax laws you can look forward to:

- ★ Taxes will be paid by mailing gold bricks directly to the IRS. If you have run out of gold bricks, payment is also accepted in Rolls-Royces, hotels, or eastern-European models.
- ★ You may claim up to three golf courses as dependents.
- ★ Check box 110-a if you would like your tax refund to be reinvested into the Trump real-estate portfolio. (Checking box 110-a is mandatory.)
- ★ If you earned any income in Mexico during the current fiscal year, a representative from the Deportation Force will be in touch with you shortly.
- ★ If you earned any income in China during the current fiscal year, check box 13-b, which states, "I wish to donate my entire adjusted gross income to the U.S. Treasury."
- ★ Income from writing a best-selling business book qualifies for a deduction, pending President Trump's review.
- ★ If you have been sued by the president this year, be sure to mark that in box 48-f.
- ★ If you are a woman between the ages of 16 and 21, please remember to attach an 8"x10" glossy headshot with your tax return.
- ★ Haircuts may be counted as a business expense. Looking good is half of making the deal.
- ★ If you find yourself being audited, don't panic. Simply remember that whatever happens to you, President Trump will be just fine.

Bureau of Labor Statistics Report: 'Trump Keeps Knocking Reports Out of Our Hands'

By BRADLEY SCHROEDER

WASHINGTON — The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today that President Trump repeatedly knocks reports out of their hands. The report showed the frequency of incursions was consistent, regardless of the nature of the report or the time of day it's carried by agency personnel through hallways of government buildings.

"President Trump always seems to find us whenever we've released a new report," said Albert Haberstroh, the department's secretary who coauthored the report.

From a department-wide study citing reported instances of incursions by Mr. Trump, the emerging pattern, according to department analysts, consists of Mr. Trump advancing "seemingly from nowhere" to quickly slap the report to the ground, causing papers to fly about and scatter. The report adds, "The president typically laughs hardily after each occurrence." Additional incidents have involved the president pointing at something in the distance, saying, "What's that?" then grabbing the report and running away.

The agency found a slightly higher probability the president would knock a report out of their hands if it was contained in a folder, unbound. "We believe this provided the president with more papers to be strewn across the floor," Haberstroh said.

According to the report, 65 percent of instances involving loose paper resulted in the president ordering the department official to pick up all the papers. Said the secretary: "Very often he has admonished us for being 'clumsy,' or 'messing up his hallway' despite the fact that we were not at fault." The report noted Mr. Trump's key advisors or cabinet members frequently snicker alongside him during the encounters.

Based on key findings, the study projects a statistical trend in the next fiscal year in which upcoming reports on wage changes and new unemployment figures will result in more incursions, including Mr. Trump writing "kick me" on a piece of paper and taping it to the bureau undersecretary's back.

On Tuesday, Secretary Haberstroh presented the report to Mr. Trump and he slapped it to the floor.

Agriculture Secretary Rebuked for Not Giving Food-Safety Briefing 'Any God-Damned Showmanship'

By ELIZABETH KOZDIAK AND PETER E. HINES

WASHINGTON—Agriculture Secretary Ronald Schwartzman was taken to task by President Trump Wednesday

Ronald Schwartzman

after a "zero pizzazz" annual food safety briefing in the Oval Office. Said the president, "I told him, 'All the bananas in America could be poisoned and I would have no idea, because you can't seem to keep my attention for more than one second."

The agriculture secretary reportedly began the briefing by presenting several facts and statistics, then proceeded to a list of recommendations. "No zing," Mr. Trump said.

Tensions have mounted at the White House in recent weeks, as several cabinet members have failed to spice up key in-person meetings with Mr. Trump. The secretary of education's request for more funding was "out-of-this-world boring," according to White House Press Secretary Bret Michaels, and the attorney general's summary of recent hate crimes was "a snooze-fest."

At a meeting scheduled for tomorrow with FEMA Director Allen Thorsberg to discuss the decimation of Miami from a Category 5 hurricane, the president is expected to look away while doing a hand-job motion.

Ambassador from Ecuador tipped $2 for 'extra hustle'

Raymond Ellis

USA TODAY

WASHINGTON — In what has become a common practice since Donald Trump took office, the president tipped Ecuadorian Ambassador to the U.S. Guillermo Villagrán two dollars on Thursday, citing his appreciation for Mr. Villagrán's "extra hustle."

"I saw him waiting outside the Oval Office five minutes early and wanted to let him know I appreciated it," President Trump said. "His next cup of coffee is on me."

Mr. Villagrán is the most recent in a series of officials who have become beneficiaries of the president's gratuities. U.K. Prime Minister Theresa May received a five-dollar bill from Mr. Trump after she held the door open for him before at a recent G8 Summit in Brussels.

"These kids are doing a sensational job, they really are," the president said. "If they keep it up, there's more where that came from."

Sources close to the president report that he approves of the recent performance of Pope Francis as well. On the way out of a lengthy private meeting in the Oval Office, Trump is said to have folded an undisclosed amount of cash, slipped it into the Pontiff's hand during a handshake, and told him to "get something nice."

"ARE THESE THE BIGGEST

INSIDE THE TWITTER WAR ROOM

In 21st century America, the gravest decision a leader makes is whether to declare Twitter war.

Every modern president faces the grim prospect of sending young American characters—sometimes as many as 140—to write on the field of battle, and sometimes make the ultimate sacrifice by being deleted in the line of duty.

In Twitter wartime, we need a commander in chief with the experience and track record to win.

Donald Trump is that president.

To lead tweets in combat, we have in President Trump a seasoned veteran who has served with distinction in multiple Twitter wars, including the Rosie O'Donnell Campaign of 2011, the Battle of Cher's Surgery, and the Second Deadspin War. In conflict after conflict, he has proven himself a masterful literary strategist whose relentless Twitter offensives leave the opposing force broken, silent, and humiliated in the eyes of its followers.

With bravery and resolve, secure in the knowledge the American people will not unfollow him, President Trump considers every option at his disposal, including personal attacks, counter-insults, and even, as a last resort, the F-bomb.

Consider this all-too-real scenario: It is 3 a.m. and the president is awakened by a Twitter alert on his red smartphone. A sitcom writer–producer has gone rogue and is threatening to unleash inflammatory content that will result in serious notifications. The president calls for an immediate Twitter war-room meeting with his top social-media strategists and the Joint Tweets. The experts tell him that, according to the most up-to-date hashtag analyses, an international Twitter incident is imminent. How will President Trump respond? Given the gravity of the situation, we must trust he will tweet decisively, with the safety and Twitter-account security of our nation in his thoughts and tweets.

Inside the Twitter war room, President Trump will never rest. He bears the strong and steady hand of @realDonaldTrump, building a coalition of mentions, favoriting our allies, launching surgical strikes against tyrannical talk-show hosts, and keeping our nation's reserve Twitter warriors in a state of retweet readiness. One thing we can be sure of is that in the annals of Twitter war history, President Donald Trump will proudly stand and answer the call of "What's happening?"

TRUMP'S SECRET PLAN TO DEFEAT ISIS

One day, Donald Trump's covert ISIS strategy will be fully declassified. And that day will come only after the plan's clear and decisive implementation succeeds in exterminating from God's Earth every last tendril of ISIS and all who pay them tribute. Until then, select citizens have access to this redacted copy. As one of those citizens, you must remember the most important weapon in any commander in chief's arsenal is secrecy. So, don't show this to anyone from ISIS!

TRUMP FACT

Donald Trump considers himself a war veteran after his brutal negotiation with NBC for season 6 of The Apprentice.

HOW TRUMP WOULD HAVE WON EVERY MAJOR U.S. WAR IN THREE DAYS OR LESS

As commander in chief, Donald Trump, surrounded by top military people such as Carl Icahn, believes he can win any war quickly and decisively. Some previous American wars help him illustrate his point.

AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Actual Duration: 8 years
Trump Estimate: A day or two

"This war was a disaster. George Washington was a good guy, but he was not a leader. The soldiers had no shoes—in winter! We could have finished before lunch if I'd written our deal with the British, but we had Thomas Jefferson, who was weak. I give it an extra day or so because there were no phones. Can you imagine that?"

Think of it. That's nothing. As a nation, we're not thinking. Build a wall now and you'll stop having wars with Mexicans, that I can tell you."

CIVIL WAR

Actual Duration: 4 years
Trump Estimate: The whole thing would have been over so fast that it wouldn't even have been a memorable event historically

"Why do people think Lincoln was a great president? A lot of people died and the country was better off before the war. I'm against slavery. I've been against it for a long time. And I would have abolished it before the war and saved everybody a lot of trouble. But I would have won the war. It's easy if you know what you're doing. Just use some common sense."

WORLD WAR I

Actual Duration: 4 years
Trump Estimate: A week, tops

"What a mess. Our soldiers would dig a dirt trench, then they would die in the trench from mustard gas. And what did we get out of it? Nothing. All those lives lost and we got nothing. We didn't even get to keep the dirt. I create a lot of dirt when I dig the foundation for a new building, and I sell it. You can sell dirt and do very well."

WAR OF 1812

Actual Duration: 2 years 8 months
Trump Estimate: About half an hour

"No British person is going to burn down the White House when I'm living there. It's not going to happen. They would pay for that, believe me."

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

Actual Duration: 4 months
Trump Estimate: A few hours

"Teddy Roosevelt was heavysset. Probably too fat to get on a horse. I'm older than he was and I'm in great shape. Fantastic shape, really. Talk to my doctors, who are highly respected. They'll tell you the same thing."

WORLD WAR II

Actual Duration: 6 years
Trump Estimate: 24 hours

"The Japanese and the Germans were very nasty in this war. And the Japanese are very smart people. I win against the Japanese all the time. I wrote The Art of the Deal."

MEXICAN-AMERICAN WAR

Actual Duration: 2 years
Trump Estimate: If wall were built, just a few minutes

"Back in 1800 or whenever it was, you could have built a wall on the Mexican border for about $5,000.

VIETNAM WAR

Actual Duration: 19 years

Trump Estimate: A day and a half

"A terrible disaster of a war. It never should have happened. It went on too long and we sacrificed too many American lives. And these are our wounded warriors we're talking about. These are our best people. It shouldn't have happened, folks. People ask me, they say, 'Donald, how would you have done it differently?' And I have a simple answer for them: if I had been captured like John McCain—and I don't think I would have been—I would have escaped. The war would have been over in as long as it took me to make a rope from my bedsheets, climb out a window, and get the hell out of there before the guards woke up."

GULF WAR

Actual Duration: 6 months

Trump Estimate: 6 seconds

"I told a story at a dinner party during the Gulf War. I suppose it was more a joke than a story. I don't remember the exact story, but that's not important. What's important is that a lot of important people were listening. Generals, movie actors. And when I told the joke—it had something to do with 'golf' and 'gulf' getting mixed up. Of course, not genuinely—it was just part of the joke. So, I told this joke and you should have heard the laughter. Several of the people later told me that it was the funniest story they'd ever heard."

IRAQ WAR

Actual Duration: 8 years

Trump Estimate: 3 days

"I spoke out very strongly against invading Iraq. I knew it was going to be a big mistake. I also said we should take the oil, but ISIS got the oil. It's all in my book, which I wrote at the time, The Trump University Guide to Golf Course Development. In the chapter, "Winning in Iraq," I laid out a comprehensive plan for victory that would have taken about three days, give or take a few hours. I encourage you to look at it. Powerful stuff. And you'll also learn a lot about how to make money with your golf course. A lot."

AFGHANISTAN

Actual Duration: Ongoing since 2001

Trump Estimate: No more than a day

"There's not very much in Afghanistan to get excited about. There are not a lot of good restaurants, and as for the architecture, all I can say is that I'm not impressed. But the Taliban is there, and they're bad guys. They've done a lot of bad things. So we've got to get rid of them. None of our leaders fighting this war—and there have been a lot of them—have had any clue what they're doing. We don't even know if we're winning or losing. One thing I can promise you: with me, we're winning. That much I can tell you. Don't we have a nuclear bomb we could use in just the right place, like right in the center of the country, that would take care of a lot of the problems? I don't want to say too much because I want to be unpredictable. Let's table that conversation. It's an idea that's definitely on the short list."

THE AL SMITH DINNER

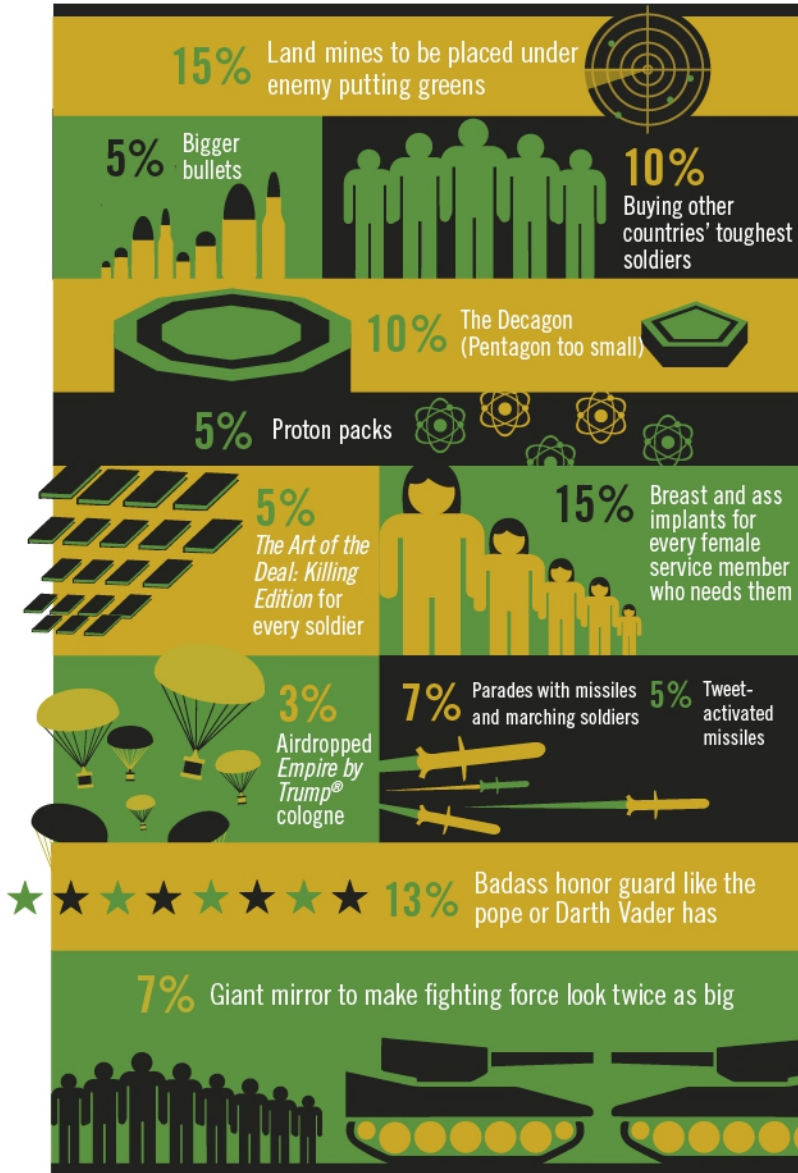

Actual Duration: 3 hours

Trump Estimate: 0 seconds

"Those of us who fought to stay awake during this awful dinner and lived to tell about it are the ones who will write its history. We bonded from the grueling experience, and now when I see some of my fellow attendees, like New York Mayor Mike Bloomberg, we share something special because of what we went through. The speeches went on and on through the night. It was a relentless assault. If I had been running this dinner, it wouldn't have happened at all. I don't want to listen to Helen Gurley Brown for two seconds, and she had the podium for 40 minutes. And Joe Franklin talked so long, I thought he was going to die of old age on stage. The catering was also very bad."

TRUMP'S MILITARY BUDGET

HONORING SOLDIERS WHO WEREN'T CAPTURED

America remains the greatest nation on Earth because of the brave fighting men and women who defend us overseas, evade capture by enemy forces, and then return home safely. We owe these soldiers—and only these soldiers—an eternal debt of gratitude, which is why President Trump will, upon their homecoming, personally welcome every service member who is confirmed to have never been taken prisoner.

In a ceremony held monthly at the White House, all newly returned veterans who are untainted with the stain of having spent time in foreign captivity will enjoy a grand banquet in their honor, culminating with a toast from President Trump himself:

“You’re the best,” the president will tell them. “You fought very well because you got out of there. You earned a seat at this table because you didn’t weaken and fall into the hands of the bad guys. You made it to the helicopter just before it took off without getting shot or falling down or whatever.”

The president’s remarks will be followed by a receiving line in which he will personally thank each veteran for not helping our enemies win by letting themselves get caught.

Soldiers will be given a special medal to commemorate their brave resistance to being a prisoner of war. The president will bestow each golden medal, inscribed with the words, “I got this award at a fabulous banquet—not in some foreign prison while being tortured and crying for home, because I am a winner.”

President Trump will hold a separate ceremony to honor hero military-academy students who could have gone to war but chose lucrative business careers instead.

Cure for Whatever Kept Trump Out of Military Discovered

By JONATHAN ALEXANDER and SONIA KAILING

BALTIMORE—Researchers at Johns Hopkins University announced Friday they have developed a treatment for the mysterious infirmity that prevented an otherwise healthy 22-year-old Donald Trump from serving in the Vietnam War.

"I am proud to say that we have developed a cure for this insidious disease that can take a baseball- and tennis-playing college senior and render him unable to serve his country despite wanting to desperately," said lead investigator Dr. Kalpit Shah, a specialist in almost imperceptible but completely debilitating diseases.

Aside from the president, other victims of the extremely serious condition are expected to celebrate the cure around the world, but as yet no one has come forward.

Though announcing the cure, researchers were quick to point out that administering treatment to Mr. Trump or any others stricken with the ailment will require more research, as well as time to develop, test, and approve a vaccine.

"Unfortunately, the president must continue to suffer," Mr. Shah said. "To that, my team and I can only say we're sorry, Sir. Please hold on if you can. We are working as fast as we can."

In a statement from the White House, President Trump pledged to distribute the cure at his expense to young men and women of draft age in the U.S. so they will not have to miss out on their chance to serve as he did.

Dr. Kalpit Shah, left, develops the breakthrough cure for the enigmatic illness that exempted Donald Trump from the draft in 1969 and likely left him debilitatingly ill for the next 50 years.

TRUMP DECLARES WAR ON GERMS

GAGE SKIDMORE, USA TODAY

"Germs are everywhere. They're coming in all over the place—doorknobs, toilet seats, people—and we have to wipe them out," President Trump said.

Pledges to prevent new microbial threats from entering his body

Jacob Linderman
USA TODAY

WASHINGTON—President Trump addressed the nation from the East Wing of the White House today to outline a major offensive against germs, which he said are crossing his epidermal border every day, bent on the destruction of his health. "They're coming across a very weak epidermal barrier very easily, and there's no protection. Our leaders in the past have not kept them out, and we have to do something," he said.

Trump put all bacteria on notice, wherever it was attempting to infiltrate his body, including the hands and mouth. The digestive tract would also be targeted. "Hundreds come in and they're a burden to the internal health-care system, and they reproduce. And I'm supposed to take care of those baby germs for the rest of their lives? I don't think so."

In his speech, the president urged medical science to begin work on a germicidal serum that could wipe out every foreign invader from his body. "Get them off of me!" he said.

The president's war plan is divided into two fronts: the first aims to root out the germ-occupying territory on his own body, the second is to eliminate germ hotspots abroad.

Surgeon General William Fitzpatrick, formerly of Purell, is charged with coordinating the global counter-microorganism effort from his command post at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. Manned and unmanned aircraft armed with an-

INVADERS: Microscopic security footage proves germs are plotting to find the weakest entry points to Trump timicrobial payloads will target known germ breeding grounds, such as public restrooms, banisters, and people who shake hands with the president.

Children who fail to wash their hands before interacting with Trump will be a top priority. They will be targeted by F-18 fighter jets refitted with high-powered industrial-grade antibacterial soap spray.

Of particular interest to President Trump are overseas germs, which could target him personally when he travels to meet foreign leaders and is exposed to high-risk foreign germs unknown in the U.S.

To reduce potential germ strikes, the president will either stay home or travel in a full-body plastic ethylene-oxide-treated containment bag.

Trump's ultimate aim for the War on Germs is to eradicate all germs on the Earth that could possibly pose a danger, ramping up firepower to germicidal bombs and other industrial disinfectants, blanketing the world in a thick antiseptic film.

Sanitizer-drone strikes will begin as early as next month.

Trump vows to end hunger in third-rate countries

BY DELIA BAKER

MARY AGEE/REUTERS

Trump's call for immediate aid would impact undeveloped and untalented nations like Ethiopia.

WASHINGTON—President Trump announced a new initiative today that would feed third-rate nations suffering from drought, famine, or political inferiority. The plan, which Trump issued in a written statement, would offer the world's poorest-quality nations immediate relief.

Most of the nations targeted, such as Ethiopia, Liberia, and Bhutan rank low on the UN's Worldwide Prestige Index.

"These nations are full of bozos who can't eat," Trump said in the statement.

As part of the plan, third-rate nations would receive airdropped Trump-brand steaks. Normally $80 per serving, each steak will be offered by Trump for only $45. "I'm taking a loss on the meat," the president said in the statement. The steaks will give the under-respected nations a much-needed infusion of class, according to Trump.

"America can't do this by itself," Trump went on to say in the proposal. "Second-rate nations have to chip in." He also called on the billionaire-president-CEOs of low-performing countries to take care of their own problems "so that I don't have to do everything."

Entire Diplomatic Trip to England Spent in Air Force One and DANIELLE REISCH

LONDON—Despite agreeing to attend several prearranged discussions with British officials on the War in Iraq as well as England's energy crisis, U.S. President Donald Trump spent his entire two-day diplomatic visit to England inside Air Force One.

"I was busy," Trump told reporters by phone when asked why he never left his plane, adding that he had already been to England "millions of times," and that the country was "nothing special."

According to sources, President Trump opened the plane's side door only once Monday afternoon in order to shoo away Prime Minister Theresa May.

The visit officially ended as Queen Elizabeth ascended the stairs to Air Force One for an official meet-and-greet, at which point the plane abruptly pulled away and flew back to America.

UNDERSTANDING ISLAM

Islam is a worldwide religion boasting over a billion adherents, yet it is responsible for producing more Muslims than any religion in the world. What do we really know about it?

ISLAM FACTS

Name of religion: Islam

Name for person who practices religion: Bloodthirsty terrorist

Most famous adherent: U.S. President Barack Obama

Countries where it's popular: Countries you don't want to visit

Holy book: Koran (suspicious alternate spelling: "Qur'an")

Copies of the Koran sold this year: 100 million

Copies of The Art of the Deal sold per year: Probably more

Islam, the only religion with a history of violence, comes from a word that, literally translated, means, "People we tolerate because of their oil." Islam's two holiest cities are Mecca and Medina. Neither has a Trump hotel because they don't deserve them. Mosques are what Muslims call their places of worship. Every mosque contains a super-fun zip line that non-Muslims are not allowed to use.

Think they can be Americans simply because they live here and have a job and pay taxes

Value a life of humility and modesty, which is convenient since they're all ugly and poor

Probably living in your neighborhood—stay vigilant

TRUMP KILLS ISIS LEADER WITH BARE HANDS ON BACK OF PRESIDENTIAL SPEEDBOAT

Culmination of Deadly Chase

Trump Acts Alone, Foils ISIS Nuclear Strike with Seconds to Spare

By SOPHIA H. DACHREN and BRYANT MILLER

NEW YORK — President Trump today killed ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi in a hand-to-hand fight that ended in a fiery explosion on the back of the presidential speedboat. Mr. Trump narrowly escaped the fireball, diving out of the way as it consumed the ISIS chief, who died instantly.

"Let's just say his escape plan blew up in his face," Mr. Trump told reporters calmly on the deck of the Coast Guard rescue boat that arrived on the scene shortly after the fight was decisively concluded by Mr. Trump.

The confrontation between the two men began with a lengthy car chase through lower Manhattan involving numerous overturned fruit carts, scrambling civilians, a team of ISIS motorcycle assassins, and near-constant machine-gun fire between the many crisscrossing vehicles.

Mr. Trump was seen dangling from the rope ladder of his own helicopter during one phase of the long chase, according to police reports.

NYPD officers observed the chase as it passed through their respective precincts, but were unable to keep pace with or even join the constantly heightening high-speed pursuit.

It appeared to officers in the path of the chase that President Trump had the situation well in hand, New York City Police Commissioner William Bratton said. He credited Mr. Trump for personally saving the lives of several officers on Broadway in Manhattan's SoHo neighborhood. Mr. Trump, he said, dispatched an ISIS henchman moments before he would have shot between four and five officers with a rocket launcher at point-blank range from his motorcycle. "They were sitting ducks," Bratton added.

According to one of the officer's reports, Mr. Trump, clinging to the undercarriage of the presidential limousine at the time, broke off a stabilizer bar from the axle and thrust it into the front-wheel spokes of the motorcycle, causing the bike to flip and the rider to be catapulted off and killed in traffic.

The president himself recounted how he first engaged Mr. al-Baghdadi in a fistfight by driving his car off the Brooklyn Bridge, leaping from the plummeting vehicle, then landing on the stolen presidential speedboat moments before the terrorist might have escaped.

"His getaway was very poorly planned," the president said, "So, I said to him, 'Mind if I drop by?'"

The president reportedly clung to the boat's bow while dodging the terrorist's machine-gun fire. Mr. Trump then jumped 14 feet into the main cabin. Once there, according to a Coast Guard official who witnessed the fight from several yards away, "the president punched the ISIS leader in the face and stomach repeatedly, and seemed to be able to deftly avoid getting hit despite the fact that this terrorist was clearly an expert in kung-fu or other kind of martial art."

Trump ended the fight with two final and decisive blows, punctuated in succession by two words: "you're" and "fired," according to the official witness report of the fight.

ROGER SIMMONS/AP

Mr. Trump's final uppercut to Mr. al-Baghdadi's face was seen to have lifted him off his feet, throwing him backwards to the rear of the boat, where a gas leak, sparked by a lighter the president tossed, resulted in a large fireball that devoured the terrorist.

The lighter, records indicate, was made of solid gold. It was given to Mr. Trump as a gift from Mr. al-Baghdadi at a posh Saudi Arabian dinner party just three days before the fight, which Mr. al-Baghdadi attended disguised as a member of the Saudi royal family allegedly to get close to Mr. Trump and learn state secrets. It was inscribed, "to a winner."

It is believed the ISIS leader, before Mr. Trump killed him, was piloting the stolen presidential speedboat to an ISIS submersible vessel several miles east of New York Harbor, waiting to take him safely to the Middle East, where he had planned to launch a nuclear strike against every major city in the United States.

Homeland Security officials confirm Mr. al-Baghdadi was the only individual in possession of the nuclear launch codes that would have made the strike possible.

Shortly after the fight, according to officials, Mr. Trump excused himself to meet with a sexy CIA intelligence analyst for a private debriefing.

DECISIVE VICTORY IN TERROR WAR

ISIS Surrenders

By THOMAS P. PINCHON and GABRIEL PÉREZ

WASHINGTON — U.S. Secretary of State Rex Tillerson announced from the White House today that ISIS commanders have offered their unconditional surrender to U.S. forces.

The unexpected move came moments after Mr. Trump killed ISIS leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi in New York Harbor.

"ISIS has lost, because they made the mistake of fighting Donald Trump, an opponent who cannot lose," Secretary Tillerson said.

He laid out the conditions of the ISIS surrender, which include handing over all the oil, as well as praising President Trump in a series of punitive tweets.

Military officials welcomed the war's end at a special Pentagon press briefing this afternoon.

"We owe it all to President Trump's fighting ISIS and his keen insights into ISIS strategy," said Iraq Field Commander Gen. Bertrand Sykes.

An escalation of the ground wars in Iraq, Syria, and Africa, as well as continued drone strikes on ISIS targets around the world had been planned for the coming weeks. But Gen. Sykes took out the plans during the briefing, tore them up, and threw them in the garbage.

Now defeated, ISIS is expected to begin disbanding its military goals and training its members to become entrepreneurs.

DEFEATING ISIS THROUGH LUXURY HOTEL DEVELOPMENT

The disillusioned youth who join ISIS share a blinding anger at the perceived injustice of Western aggression. The solution: luxury hotels. Over the course of his administration, Trump, through his resort-development companies, will break ground on over 1,700 new hotel and casino developments in Iraq and Syria, offering not only a good investment opportunity for ISIS leaders, but jobs for the ISIS rank and file.

“The Trump brand is an international beacon of American opportunity and success,” Trump says. “The sad kids who are joining ISIS think they have nothing to hope for. Now they do. However, I will insist they shave and dress nicer.”

The first project slated for completion, Trump Oasis Towers Ramadi, expects to employ hundreds of former ISIS members as bellboys, concierges, and hotel managers when it opens its doors in 2018. Each tower boasts a 50-story atrium outfitted entirely in Tuscan marble, and the Middle East’s largest golden chandelier—which once hung in Saddam Hussein’s palace—will grace its lobby.

PLACES TO VISIT OUTSIDE THE WALLS

There are many beautiful places to see and cultures to experience around the world, but where can you go to escape the drug dealers, murderers, and rapists who live there? A select few tourist destinations offer a fraction of the comfort and protection of our walls. If you dare to leave the safe confines of America, consider the following hot spots.

VATICAN CITY

With magnificent architecture, sacred grounds, and a big, beautiful wall, Vatican City makes American tourists feel right at home. Stay within its confines, however, as they will give you a clear line of separation from all the Muslims and gays who have infiltrated the area recently.

GREECE

Take advantage of their current low prices with a trip to this beautiful country. Their walls are top notch and were likely built before the collapse of their government.

JERUSALEM

The Jewish homeland of Israel is a first-class nation that offers many inspiring religious sites and a rich history. Their wall keeps out most of the Palestinian terrorists, but a few get through. Bring your gun.

CHINA

China has delicious food, exotic vistas, and many historical sites, including the Great Wall, which has provided good protection from the barbarian hordes to the north for hundreds of years. China itself is full of Chinese, so the safest place to be is directly on top of the wall, which has little walls along either side to protect against both threats.

BERLIN

Be sure to travel with a professional bodyguard if you visit this location, as the wall is no longer functional and leaves you vulnerable to potential attacks from Germans on both sides. Stay in your hotel.

SOUTH KOREA

The good Koreans enjoy one of the all-time strongest walls. It was built by the United States, so it's almost as safe as staying home. For the best experience, avoid going outside or seeing or interacting with anyone.

YOUR CAR

Regardless of where you travel, it's always safe to see the sights from within the walled-in cocoon of your car, outside of which throngs of diseased strangers are likely pawing at its exterior to try to infect you. Put on a DVD and enjoy your travels!

TRUMP'S MEXICAN VACATION

Anyone who accuses Donald Trump of running away from danger does not know Donald Trump! He endured a weeklong family vacation in Mexico, despite the fact that border agents whom Trump has spoken to confirm the country is overrun by criminals. Trump's private journal entries provide an intimate peek.

Saturday, March 14

ARRIVED. SURPRISINGLY CLEAN AIRPORT. CROWDED. MANY MEXICANS. FELT VERY SAFE. DIDN'T SEE A MURDERER OR A RAPIST ALL DAY, AS FAR AS I KNOW.

Sunday, March 15

AGAIN NO RAPE. AT LEAST, I WASN'T RAPED. MANY OTHER PEOPLE PROBABLY WERE, IN ALL FAIRNESS. NICE PLACE OVERALL. A MEXICAN GOT VERY CLOSE TO ME AT ONE POINT. I WAS STARTLED BECAUSE IT SEEMED LIKE HE WAS GOING TO KILL ME. BUT HE WAS JUST BRINGING ME GRAPEFRUIT JUICE.

Monday, March 16

THIRD DAY OF NOT BEING RAPED OR KILLED. I LIKE MEXICO. THE STAFF AT THE RESORT IS VERY NICE. I ASKED WHICH ONE OF THEM WERE THE MURDERERS AND RAPISTS. THEY WOULDN'T TELL ME, PROBABLY BECAUSE THE KIDNAPPERS TOLD THEM THEY'D RAPE THEM AND KILL THEM IF THEY TALKED.

WENT INTO THE TOWN TODAY. NO CRIMINALS. JUST A BUNCH OF SHOPS. NO ONE TRIED TO SELL US DRUGS. NICE DAY. I FINALLY SAW SOME RAPISTS ON THE STREET. THEY DENIED IT, BUT I KNOW WHICH ONES THEY WERE. YOU DON'T OUTFIGHT ME. AND NOW EVERYONE WILL KNOW BECAUSE I CALLED THEM OUT LOUDLY, AND POINTED AT THE ONES I SAW.

Wednesday, March 18

AWOKE TODAY TO FIND MY WIFE GONE! I CALLED THE POLICE AND TOLD THEM SHE'D BEEN KIDNAPPED AND RAPED BY MEXICANS. THEN SHE CAME BACK FROM A WALK ON THE BEACH AS IF NOTHING HAD HAPPENED. I INSISTED THE POLICE ARREST ALL THE RAPISTS, KIDNAPPERS, MURDERERS, AND DRUG DEALERS WHO ARE TERRORIZING MY FAMILY.

Thursday, March 19

THE POLICE FAILED TO PROVIDE AN ARMED ESCORT AFTER WHAT WE'D BEEN THROUGH YESTERDAY. THEY'RE A DISGRACE. THEY'RE PROBABLY OWNED BY THE DRUG CARTELS. DECIDED TO END THE VACATION. DODGED A LOT OF RAPE GANGS, KIDNAPPERS, AND SERIAL MURDERERS IN THE LIMO AS WE RACED BACK TO THE AIRPORT. BARELY GOT OUT OF MEXICO WITH OUR LIVES.

Putin-Trump Talks Break Down

At Issue: the Best Way To Pose with a Tiger

By SAMUELE KNOPF and TERRANCE UZAN

MOSCOW — Talks between President Trump and Russian President Vladimir Putin, anticipated to address the rise in global temperatures as well as the ongoing battle against ISIS, were suspended late Thursday during a heated exchange concerning a hypothetical photo shoot involving a live tiger. The tense negotiations collapsed when the hot-button issue of how a world leader should pose with a tiger, if ever presented with the opportunity, sparked sharp disagreement.

"Putin insisted that the proper course of action would be to put your head in the tiger's open mouth, which evidently is a tradition firmly rooted in Russian culture," President Trump's Press Secretary Katrina Pierson said. "That's when the wheels came off."

President Trump asserted that he would never be "stupid enough" to put his head in a tiger's mouth, and countered that standing erect over the tiger, wearing a silk cape, diamond-encrusted crown, and holding an ornate scepter with one foot on the beast's prostrate flank was the only sensible method.

Mr. Putin's spokesperson,

Dmitry Peskov, characterized Mr. Trump's proposal as "idiotic."

The strained diplomatic meeting, which involved months of planning and which both sides had hoped would address stalemates in climate change as well as international terrorism, had first been at loggerheads when Mr. Putin expressed backhanded admiration for Mr. Trump's "little" helicopter collection. The U.S. president initially seemed to take the comment in stride, but quickly broached the subject of Miss Russia, who he said was "not all that hot" when compared to Miss USA.

The Trump administration rejected a Russian effort to broker a compromise agreement over which band is better, Rush or Lynyrd Skynyrd, which Mr. Trump dismissed as "beyond Putin's ability." Officials close to Mr. Putin say talks will be suspended at least until a reopening of last summer's failed international summit on which leader looks best without a shirt on.

Said Mr. Trump: "I admire Putin on many levels. It's a shame I'll have to consider military action against him for this."

Trump: 'China'

VIRGINIA BEACH, VA— Speaking Friday at a re-election campaign rally in Virginia Beach, President Donald Trump announced to thousands of supporters that China.

Addressing the cheering crowd at the Wave Convention Center, he began by acknowledging that China, and later pointing out that "Believe me, China." The president then changed his tone, explaining to voters that with China, there's China to consider.

"China," he added. After citing such examples as China, China, China, China, the Chinese people, and China, the president concluded that "China, China. China? China! China China China China China China China."

The president added: "I'm telling you, so help me God, China."

SOLVING THE CHINESE DEBT CRISIS WITH AN OCEAN'S ELEVEN-STYLE HEIST

China holds over a trillion dollars of U.S. debt, and like a Tiananmen Square tank, it's crashing through the U.S. economy. But one lone man is willing to stand defiantly in front of that tank: Donald Trump. He'll take an elite team of the finest Americans under the cover of night to infiltrate China's Forex Reserves and make off with over a trillion dollars in Chinese gold, as well as the legendary diamond egg of Kublai Khan.

No one will believe it's really Trump without a beautiful girl on his arm. And with Melania still on Interpol's list for the Bucharest job, Scarlett Johansson will have to suffice.

CLASSIFIED

THE JOB

"THE ROLLING JOE" Trump Casino Macau will announce "The World Championship of Pai Gow Poker." The bogus game will attract many gambling-crazed Chinese, the most important of which: Chinese Premier Li Keqiang. Trump will walk the red carpet with Johansson and briefly engage Li and his mysterious mistress, Thran, in captivating chitchat.

"SETTING THE DOG'S KNOB" At the Reserves, Musk will drop off the ground crew and hide electric cars in an adjacent parking garage previously rented out by a Trump subsidiary. Woz, hidden in an offshore yacht, will release a virus into the Forex Reserve computer system that enables the ground crew to enter dressed as custodial personnel, with Buffett hidden in a trash receptacle.

In Li's luxury suite overlooking the gaming floor, Trump will coyly sample Thran's DNA and store it on a microchip embedded in his penis (not essential to the plan). The infuriated Li will barge in, demanding Trump be taken into custody.

"THE PATTERAN" The ground crew will position Buffett near a Reserves air duct. He'll remove his speed suit, cover himself in Crisco, then slip through the air shaft, deftly avoiding motion sensors with his "slow and steady" approach. Once at the vault, he will signal Woz to reset the locks and pressure sensors.

Trump will engage in a battle of wit and will with Li, and they will agree to settle it over a gentlemen's game of poker. It's a game Li can't win. No man can. During his second winning hand, Trump will make a casual turn towards the window overlooking Macau and tell the Prime Minister "Li, welcome to the art of the steal."

"DOWN THE NANNY GOAT" Woz resets the vault doors, leaving them ajar while tricking the security computer into thinking they're closed. Buffett will squeeze in and lay down a line of liquid C4 explosive concealed in a can beneath his genitals. The floor will be blown, and the gold will fall into the mining cars arranged by Titan in the old coal access tunnels deep below the Reserves.

Once the explosion occurs, security will descend on the vault. Stewart will intercept and engage the security force before falling back to the vault and entering the tunnel with Buffett and Woz. Police will arrive, and she'll dispatch them with her Martha Stewart Home Collection death gas made from simple lemon and vinegar.

Also, Johansson will beat up a bunch of guys.

"ON THE TOAST" Trump will raise the stakes in the final hand to $1 trillion. Thran will warn him that "Li is not a world leader to be toyed with—he is the boss!" Nonetheless, Li will take the bait, and Trump will win on the five-card hand, revealing a joker in a straight flush that beats Li's full house for a cool $2 trillion, netting Trump $1 trillion in pure profit.

In the tunnels, Titan will send the coal cars filled with gold to Musk and his electric space-cars and decoys. Woz will blind Chinese security systems and turn the already congested streets of Beijing into an impossible traffic jam while maintaining an easy escape route.

"A RAKE WITH ARTHUR ASHE" President Trump shakes hands with Li as the U.S.-China debt deal is settled. Titan leaves the gold on the street with a tip to Chinese authorities to recapture it and claim they busted a thievery ring.

The crew will meet back at the White House for a few Trump-brand filet mignons and a laugh. Buffett will present the president with Kublai Khan's egg, keistered just before the escape. Trump will tweet a picture of the egg to the PM, reminding him that the real boss is in the Oval Office.

THE TRUMP SPACE WALL

President Donald Trump will secure our nation's border to keep out illegal aliens from Mexico by building a big wall. But how will he secure our planet's borders to keep out illegal aliens from outer space? By building an even bigger wall, one that goes around the entire planet Earth. Introducing the Trump Space Wall, a project that President Trump will undertake at a cost of only $100 Trillion—half of what any competing real-estate developer would charge—and yet the Trump Space Wall will actually be better. What's more, it won't even be our money. Space aliens will foot the bill.

THE ENVIRONMENT

HIPPIE CRAP

VOICES

Do we really need the environment?

Donald J. Trump
Special for USA TODAY

I love the environment. I've lived in it all my life. But let's be realistic. Do we really need it? Think about it.

I've made my billions not by thinking small, but by thinking big. Thinking small is saying, "Let's do something about carbon," or "Let's look at renewable energy." Thinking big is saying, "Get rid of it."

Every time I embark on a big construction project—which I've done a lot—I'm forced to file an environmental-impact statement. Only in America do we do this. In China, they don't have environmental-impact statements. They don't even know what that means. And let's say, when I'm planning my project, whether it's a tower, a golf course, a hotel, or whatever it is, there's some kind of toad that we can't kill because it lives there, and we have to protect the toad. What about our jobs? Don't we need to protect those? What about our economy? We need to prioritize jobs and our economy over frogs. Some people will say that is politically incorrect, but I don't care. I don't care about frogs.

So, in America, the environment stands in the way of progress, and you can't build. The project is over. Economic development is over. We can't have it. Therefore, the only way we're ever going to be able to compete and win against countries like China is to completely scrap the environment.

Think of all the services that can easily replace our environment. And they would be even better. They would create a lot of jobs. The hotel industry, for example. Who wouldn't rather stay in a nice hotel than out in the woods? Most of us, I'd say. Why are we preserving the woods and preventing more hotels from being built? It doesn't make any sense. Hotels offer everything the environment can, and a lot more.

Trees are great. I've seen some very nice trees. But do we really need so many? Why do we need to make so much space for them? There's one in my office in a big pot. I like it. But that's plenty of tree. And it should be plenty for anybody. Nobody needs more than one tree. It's time we started thinking about a smarter way to use the land we have on this planet—a great resource. But we can't use it because so much of it is covered with these damned trees.

The environment is clobbering us economically. Doing away with it is something that we have no choice but to consider.

Do we really need water? There are swimming pools at most of the good hotels. Very nice swimming pools in some of them, and hot tubs—some even have saunas. These are much nicer places to go than a lake or an ocean. So we don't need those anymore. Do you take a bath indoors, in a bathtub, or do you go into a lake? I think we all know the answer. Get rid of the lake.

Where are you getting your drinking water? If you're getting it from the tap, you don't know what you're doing. Trump-brand Ice spring water is the best drinking water. If we let the city water supplies dry up and instead drink, cook, and shower with Trump Ice, we'll all be a lot better off.

What good is air doing us? We have air conditioning, which is better, and more comfortable than outside air. The quality of the air-filtration systems in my buildings is the best. It's clean, it's pure. It would not be so expensive to get rid of the Earth's breathable atmosphere and replace it with truly luxury air by providing top-of-the-line air-conditioning and vents that go everywhere. It will be the best air. Don't we deserve the best?

Golf courses will be much nicer with domes over them. They'll be more exclusive—some of the best ones. And you'll never have to worry about weather problems, which will be very nice.

All the time and money we spend "protecting" the environment needs to be focused on building more hotels and office towers, with great restaurants. We'll have all the food and the water and the nice air we need, provided at a very reasonable price. By getting rid of the environment and focusing instead on real economic development, we will not only save trillions that we're now throwing away, we'll build a thriving environment-free economy that's based on innovation, bringing us quality indoor services at a fraction of what the environment is costing us. The environment is such a waste.

We'll go into space one day, and many of the top scientists tell me—this is not me saying this, but them—that there are a lot of other planets like Earth. If we ever need an environment again, which I doubt, then we can go there and get as much of it as we want.

The future for the environment is bright, especially if we can eliminate it by 2050. I challenge the USA and the world to make this vision a reality.

THE GRAND CANYON: IS IT GRAND ENOUGH?

At 277 miles long, 18 miles wide, and over 6,000 feet deep, the Grand Canyon is considered by Donald Trump to be Earth's most magnificent dump. That's why he is proud to select the Trump Organization as the developer for the restoration and transformation of America's most iconic natural attraction.

A BETTER LOCATION

The Grand Canyon is a nice place to visit, but why does it have to be so far away? The project's first priority will be relocating the Grand Canyon to New York City. Situated just north of the Bronx, the Grand Canyon will be a 45-minute shuttle ride from LaGuardia Airport. An increase in visitors will be just the beginning. The canyon will enjoy some long-needed economic development when it's connected by commuter rail to several major northeastern cities.

THE TRUMP RIVER

The Colorado River has not done a particularly good job carving the Grand Canyon. In fact, it's the worst botch job Trump, an experienced builder, has ever seen. Needless to say, it won't be going to New York with the canyon.

The Trump Grand Canyon features proposed 210-story Trump International Canyon Resort Tower with an observation deck overlooking two new active, man-made volcanoes.

Instead, Trump will introduce the new state-of-the-art Trump River. Sourced exclusively by Trump Ice spring water, the Trump River will not only be the purest, best-tasting river on the planet, but also the fiercest, with underwater jets creating rapids so strong that no one is going to mess with them.

TRUMP INTERNATIONAL CANYON RESORT, GRAND CANYON

Soon to be The Trump Hotel Collection's flagship property, the Trump International Canyon Resort promises to be a spectacular five-star resort, highlighted by the new Trump International Hotel & Tower. Soaring 210 stories, this diamond-encrusted tower will hold the title of tallest residential building in the world. The tower's panoramic balconies and rooftop deck will offer guests unrivaled views of the Trump Grand Canyon, Trump River, and the Trump National Grand Canyon Golf Links—the world's finest 200-mile, 415-hole championship golf course designed by Jack Nicklaus.

A GRAND FACE-LIFT

Trump has called the Grand Canyon an "eyesore." To give it a makeover befitting the new elegant brand of America under President Donald Trump, the Grand Canyon will be reshaped into the likeness of Trump's face.

MORE TRUMP

The south, east, and west rims of the canyon will be meticulously chiseled to form Donald's soft chin and jawline. Miles of rolling rock formations will be sculpted to resemble the president's nose and jowl. The Trump River will be routed to accentuate his strong cheekbones. A pair of active, 800-foot titanium volcanoes will serve as Trump's fiery eyes, and his furrowing eyebrows will be suggested with a pair of 11,000-acre weeping-willow forests. For Trump's hair, 750,000 acres of the world's most pristine, golden sand will be flown in from Hawaii and laid along the northern rim of the canyon, emptying all the sand from the Hawaiian island of Kauai.

The Grand Canyon took over 17 million years to form, but the Trump Organization will have the project finished in just 17 days—under budget, too. And while President Trump never understood what was so grand about the Grand Canyon in the first place, he's eager to give it a touch of sophistication and class and transform it into a true natural wonder that's undeniably Trump.

9 PATHETIC SPECIES WHO DESERVE TO GO EXTINCT

Many species on Earth face extinction. These life-forms consume our resources but fail to contribute to the success of any of Donald Trump's businesses. Nor are they doing anything to make America great again. Therefore, our endangered-species laws can't be allowed to protect them. Nature has already made up its mind: they should die.

TRUMP'S GUIDE TO PROFITABLY SOURCED SEAFOOD

Every day, global populations of fish are caught and sold at alarmingly low profit margins. To ensure you're eating only the most sustainably lucrative seafood and doing your part to preserve the financial health of our nation's commercial-fishing interests—one of whom is Donald Trump—use this helpful guide when making your menu selection.

HUGELY PROFITABLE	REASONABLY PROFITABLE	BARELY WORTH EATING	WORTHLESS
Eat liberally. These fish are rich in the essential fatty cats you need for good financial health. Consuming this seafood not only enriches the fine-dining environment, it also gives you peace of mind; you're eating something that very, very few people can afford.	Eat no more than once a week. Profits for these fish are depleting rapidly and can only be maintained through responsibly gouged fisheries.	In moderation only. Some of these fish may have trace contaminants of mere single-digit profit-margin percentile.	Avoid at all costs. May contain dangerously low levels of currency for the seller.
 Tahitian oysters (pearls still inside)	 Anything with "Market" listed as its price on a restaurant menu	 Mussels, scallops, etc. Poor people scrape and eat "food" off rocks every day, so why should you?	 Goldfish. Real or cracker, don't be fooled: no actual gold.

DONALD TRUMP, EARTH-FRIENDLY HERO

To capitalize on kids' naive interest in saving the environment, Trump partnered with Japanese comics conglomerate Shogakukan to create Trump's Green Winners, a four-part action series that shows how we can bring the environment to heel in the interest of commerce. It features a super-strong, super-genius Trump and his family saving the planet Earth's profit potential and showing tough love to doomed species he knows he can turn into winners. Comic-book Trump—and real-life Trump—made millions in the process.

HOW TO COME OUT ON TOP, SAVE FACE, AND LOOK INCREDIBLE AFTER THE NUCLEAR WARS

The nuclear wars are probably going to happen. There are simply too many crazy world leaders with their finger on the button to expect anything less. The only real question is, which madman will press it first? President Trump may decide to prevent that horrible fate by striking preemptively, just to be prudent. No matter how the nuclear fire rains down on the world, you can rest assured Trump will do everything he can to make sure he—and possibly you, too—comes out a winner.

BUILD A LUXURIOUS FALLOUT SHELTER LIKE TRUMP'S Lined with 7 feet of solid gold and equipped with a sensual radiation bath/Jacuzzi, tanning bed, and Success By Trump® cologne-filtration system, Donald Trump's fallout shelter will ensure he and his family are not only safe, but pampered—for decades, if necessary.

HELP OTHERS BY ASSURING THEM TRUMP IS OKAY Trump will broadcast live readings of his Twitter feed to any mutants or roving cannibal militias who are able to receive his signal. These desperate throngs will be sick with worry about the state of Donald Trump. As you evade violent gangs and deadly contamination, be sure to prioritize a search for existing Wi-Fi hotspots so you can assure your loved ones Donald Trump and his family are extremely comfortable.

REBUILD AMERICA, BIGGER AND BETTER THAN BEFORE Instead of fleeing uninhabitable wastelands, take charge of rebuilding a radiated America and making it even greater. That's what Donald Trump will do. He'll summon his prowess as a successful real-estate developer to build enormous skyscrapers that will tower over the radiation clouds and diseased hordes. He will make many billions of dollars renting luxury apartments, rousing Americans—and the entire world—to cheer his great success once again.

REPOPULATE THE COUNTRY Help collect the world's remaining beautiful, unmutated women and present them to Trump, who will offer his precious seed to as many of these lucky women as possible. (Some mutants may be allowed if their mutation makes them sexier, like the blue lady from X-Men.) Additionally, Trump-brand semen will be marketed as a premium product for discerning survivors who want to produce uninfected winners. In fact, Trump has already begun collecting ejaculate in anticipation of the frenzied demand. Reserve your order online now at www.trumpseed.com.

SCIENCE

“IF EINSTEIN WAS SO SMART, WHY WASN'T HE RICH?”

SOME SCIENCE IS GREAT, SOME SCIENCE IS GARBAGE

Donald Trump has always appreciated science that gets results, and that won't change now that he's president. This draft speech to the National Science Foundation offers a unique glimpse into how important science is in a Trump administration.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

SPEECH TO NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

CANCEL?

I like science. Science has been great for me. Gravity, I love. If it wasn't for gravity, golf would be impossible.

But there are a lot of scientists—not all of them, but some—who are trying to sell us a bill of goods.

We're not buying it anymore.

Some science is true, and some is not. Some science is fiction. And I'm not talking about the good kind with the good-looking alien women. I'm talking about so-called science that's nothing but a lot of nonsense.

We've made some very stupid investments in science. I don't like bad investments, clearly. (I'm worth billions.) Now, I'm not saying we should completely abolish all science. At least, not now. But something's got to be done. We need a new approach.

So, it's time to put science, and the scientists who do it, on notice in our country. We need someone to look over their findings. What science needs is a strong leader.

The point is, Americans are being told a lot of garbage that isn't science. As President, I'm going to do something about it. What's going to happen is we're going to get tough on science. We're going to show it who's in charge. And in the end, a few eggheads might get fired. Big deal.

TRUMP TIP

If you are ever confronted with a science, do not run. Spread your arms to make yourself look bigger and shout at the science until it retreats.

A SMARTER SCIENTIFIC METHOD

TRUMP FACT
President Trump invests heavily in the American alchemy industry.

THE SCIENTIFIC METHOD: AN INEFFECTIVE BUSINESS MODEL

“We need to teach our scientists to make deals.” – Donald Trump

Science has given us modern medicine and lightweight carbon-fiber golf clubs. Its strength lies in great minds like Galileo and Newton who reveal new truths and unleash periodic scientific advancements. But now it's time to hand the reins of science to someone who can actually get things done—Donald Trump.

No longer will researchers fritter away taxpayer dollars on an endless cycle of observation, hypothesizing, experimentation, and critical analysis. According to Trump, “They’ll stop wasting time on repetitive experiments and spend more time thinking about return on investment.”

“We need to teach our scientists to make deals,” Trump says. “Big deals.” As president, Trump directs scientists from both government and public universities to consider ways their science can generate revenue, or else. Says Trump, “If NASA’s going to build a spaceship, they’d better make regular trips to someplace exciting, and they’d better sell a lot of tickets.”

Trump predicts that scientific money holes like astronomy, ecology, and anthropology will be operating at a healthy surplus by 2018.

BRANCHES OF SCIENCE RANKED BY EARNING POWER

1. ASTRONOMY. Earning power: $104,245 per year
 “An astronomer is someone who failed at becoming an astronaut. They’re paid mostly out of pity.”
2. PHYSICS. Earning power: $88,525 per year
 “Physicists have the power to create a black hole and destroy the universe, so they get paid a decent amount to keep them from doing that.”
3. GEOLOGY. Earning power: $68,052 per year
 “The study of what’s in the ground is important because that’s where oil is, but they don’t get paid a lot. You’re a lot better off becoming an oil baron.”
4. BIOLOGY. Earning power: $67,940 per year
 “Biology is all about instinct. No need for this field.”
5. MICROBIOLOGY. Earning power: $63,908 per year
 “Just a smaller, harder-to-see version of biology. Pathetic.”

TRUMP CALLS ON TOP ELEVATOR ENGINEERS

URGENT ACTION NEEDED

‘We Must Make My Ride Up Trump Tower Smoother’

By STEPHEN KIRSCHENBAUM

NEW YORK—Calling it the most critical challenge facing modern science, President Trump announced today he had begun a search for the world’s foremost engineers to help make his elevator ride in Trump Tower a little smoother. “On behalf of the American people, I ask the world’s top engineers to rise up and achieve this pinnacle of engineering achievement,” Trump told a crowd of reporters gathered in Trump Tower’s elevator bank. “I take this elevator all the time, and don’t get me wrong, it is a very smooth ride, believe me—one of the best. [The] cables alone cost millions,” he said. “But we can not rest until it is the very best.”

The president provided some specifics for his vision, including a call to “create, before this decade is out, a Trump Tower elevator ascent that is more cloud-like.” President Trump acknowledged one challenge in the mission: the little bump he feels around floor 55.

“This will not be easy, but being the best never is,” he said.

The president said the project would inspire future generations of Americans, who he predicts will beam with pride when they hear stories of the current generation’s most brilliant minds coming together to lift him hundreds of feet into the air without a noticeable teeter or jostle.

1 President congratulates astronauts on ‘meaningless journey’

BY LEWIS HAMMOND

WASHINGTON—In a phone call from the Oval Office today, President Trump welcomed three astronauts who returned from a trip to deep space Friday, docking at the International Space Station. He congratulated them for their “pointless and dumb” trip.

“Earth is the greatest planet in history—nothing else comes close,” the president said during the one-minute call with explorers Steven Adlard, Lee Traynor, and Kenneth Drewell. “You risked your lives to leave Earth to go into the empty nothingness of space. And for what?”

The president chided the astronauts for visiting outer space when there are better places to explore on Earth. “But seriously,” he said, “who among us hasn’t stared up at the night sky, realized what a waste of time that is, and then gotten back to work?”

Trump ended the call by explaining that the astronauts were no longer needed and would be fired immediately upon their return to Earth tomorrow afternoon.

Trump awards chemist who explained why women find Trump irresistible

BY MIRIAM BILLINGS

A leading researcher in Trump sexual chemistry received the National Medal of Science from President Trump at a Rose Garden Ceremony Saturday. The recipient, Dr. Gerald Templeton, has published several papers quantifying President Trump's immensely powerful sex appeal with women, work that may help future researchers comprehend and ultimately understand the raw sexual allure of Trump.

Trump praised the Scripps Research Institute chemist for "shedding light on one of the great mysteries of our time." He urged more chemists to join the research, and called on young people to pursue careers in science so that the matter can be investigated and written about for decades to come.

Templeton remarked that the medal, the highest tribute the president can award for distinguished scientific achievement, will help scientists understand the power of Trump's appeal to women, especially those who are 8s or higher.

In his research, funded by a special White House science grant, Templeton conducted interviews with Trump's wife and ex-wives, logging volumes of data on Trump's sexual magnetism and dangerous sexual electricity. He also conducted several studies in which Trump, who cleared his schedule last fall to participate, was placed in close contact with hundreds of women. In in-depth interviews, Templeton found that the small percentage who were able to resist Trump's charm were independently described by Trump as either "manly" or "confused."

At the ceremony, Trump announced a new scientific grant program to investigate why he is so virile for his age.

A Mars Rover begins construction on Trump Tower Mars.

MARS IS BEATING US. HOW CAN WE WIN?

American scientists have sent Mars expensive robots, rockets, and fancy cameras. But what have we gotten in return? Nothing. Trump has made it clear the “chuckleheads” at NASA don’t know what they’re doing. Says Trump: “Mars is laughing at us and pushing us around, and it’s time to change the rules of the game.”

Trump has proposed several ways to start getting payback from Mars today.

- ★ Build ultra Mars space laser pointed at Earth to aid in international negotiations
- ★ Bring back Martian rocks to throw at illegals trying to climb the wall
- ★ Send second rover to Mars to fight the first rover, sell the footage
- ★ Send Muslims to colonize Mars and mine potential resources
- ★ Fill canyons with Trump Ice spring water to create life

Regardless of the outcome, Mars is on notice. Trump has pledged that if our Red Planet fortunes can’t be turned around, he will blow it up.

THE PLANETS RANKED BY TRUMP

	1. JUPITER “The biggest, the best.”
	2. SATURN “I respect it.”
	3. EARTH “The smartest. Who’s got robots all over space? Not Mercury.”
	4. PLUTO “Unfairly disgraced by the politically correct science police. Still a planet.”
	5. NEPTUNE “I don’t have time for Neptune.”
	6. MARS “A disappointment.”
	7. URANUS “Grow up.”
	8. VENUS “Not buying it.”
	9. MERCURY “A joke.”

WOMEN: WHAT ARE THEY?

The bedroom. The workplace. Frozen-yogurt shops. Women can be found just about anywhere. But what are they, and how can we cherish them? In Trump's America, this is an important pursuit.

THE DIFFERENT TYPES

Women come in all different shapes and sizes, some attractive, some not. All can be volatile, emotionally explosive, and critical. Trump has had many run-ins with angry women, and he's handled each one with grace and self-control thanks to his sensitivity and sex appeal—essential qualities when dealing with women and the controversial issues that surround them.

YOGA AND HOW TO AVOID IT

You may have heard of yoga and even been intrigued by the sight of women stretching in tight pants, but beware. Yoga encourages women to promote meditation, a vegetarian lifestyle, and even gluten-free food. Women can be very persuasive, and if you express any interest in yoga, it's likely that you will never be served steak again. Firmly reject any invitations to participate.

WINNING ARGUMENTS WITH WOMEN

Irate women who suffer from what Sigmund Freud called "penis envy" often try to draw Trump into arguments. Trump is able to defeat these efforts with deal-making skills. But how can you?

First, compliment the woman by comparing her to a pig or a dog. These are animals that are traditionally revered for their intelligence, usefulness, and adorable antics. Women take this as a great compliment. Next, suggest that the woman might be experiencing mood shifts due to her menstrual cycle. This is a helpful reminder that women suffer from a shameful biological side effect of being a woman, and it shows that you sympathize with them. Finally, rate her looks on a scale of 1–10. Women love to be told how beautiful they are, and they appreciate honesty. This will also let a woman know where she ranks on your personal attractiveness meter, and whether she has a chance at being taken to dinner by you. If you think an argument is over, don't stop. Continue arguments for years. Women like to know that you're still thinking about them, even after they've moved on with their lives.

A COST ANALYSIS

What's the bottom line when it comes to women? Money is often something women can be seen whining about, but the truth is, they can be costly, and many are not worth the investment. Mathematically speaking, the number of back rubs, foot rubs, and intercourse you receive from a woman is proportional to the amount of money you spend. Marriage is a different set of financial risks, but a prenuptial agreement can reduce your losses.

TRUMP FACT

Trump can bench whatever you can bench, plus 10 pounds.

HOW TO MAKE SUPERIOR CHILDREN USING THE PATENTED TRUMP ELITE CONCEPTION METHOD

Not only is procreation an essential component of capitalism, it's downright fun. But all those mind-blowing orgasms are for nothing if you don't produce fine, strong, American children. The United States is behind China in the production of children. So, in order to make America great again, Donald Trump has created a mating process guaranteed to produce superior offspring without failure every time.

STEP 1 Get her in the mood. A candlelit dinner in the Trump Plaza Hotel honeymoon suite should do the trick.

STEP 2 Foreplay. Not that important. Time is money.

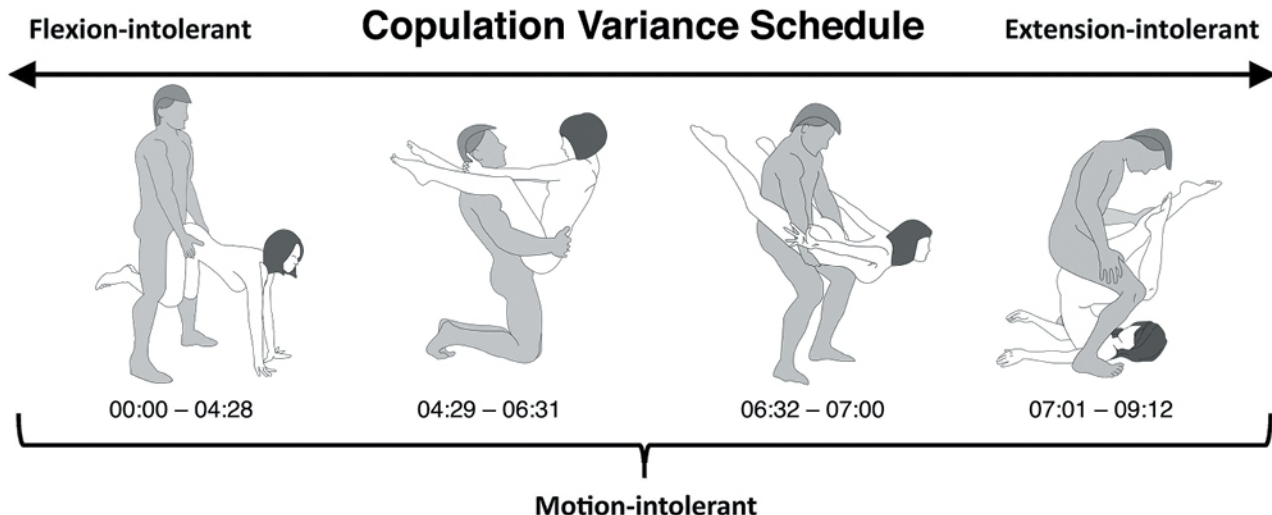

STEP 3 Position the woman on a Trumpurepedic bed made with satin sheets with a thread count of no less than 1,200. After she has signed your Declaration of Optimal Menstrual Cycle Timing agreement, she must be placed on her back, ankles behind the neck in a gentle, loving contortion. This ensures the semen will be deposited and drained directly into the uterus without any chance of leakage.

STEP 4 Position yourself in a horizontal teeter-totter stance using the supermodel's hips as a fulcrum.

STEP 5 Rotate in a clockwise motion. Gain momentum as you spin. Your intertwined bodies should resemble Trump's private helicopter taking off to an important business conference downtown.

STEP 6 Ejaculate at precisely 7 to 9 minutes after Step 4 re-entry. A child conceived at this juncture will be born with the drive necessary to succeed in the resort, gaming, or reality-TV fields.

STEP 7 Cuddle. 20 seconds maximum. Get back to work.

NEW TRUMP-ERA GADGETS

Buckle up! The speed of technology with President Trump in office will be blinding due to the unending stream of victories American companies will enjoy. Here's just a sampling of Trump's "world of tomorrow."

THE MEXIBOT

With our border sealed, who will bus our tables, mow our lawns, and wash our cars? The Mexibot, naturally. Just as hard working as the illegal help you're used to, this obedient mechanical servant is also clean, speaks English, and is guaranteed to never rape you. (A malfunctioning Mexibot may rape you.)

THE VERY SMART PHONE

It's time for America to realize that the so-called "smart" phones of today are stupid. Our phones should diagnose and cure disease, teleport us anywhere in the galaxy, and have a "stun" and "kill" setting. Rest assured, with Trump as president, they will.

NANO-TRUMPS

Tiny Donald Trumps will win on a subatomic level. Have prostate cancer? Nano-Trump will blast your tumor. And while they're in you, they'll increase the length of your penis, too.

Women will enjoy surprise pregnancies with the best babies.

TRUMP-BRAND PROTEIN PASTE

After the Trump Gene Wars have destroyed all the livestock and crops, this miracle food will feed the world. What will it be made of? Well, Trump won't divulge the recipe, but one thing is for sure—it won't be ground-up undesirables, no matter what everyone says. However, vegetarians may want to avoid the food and subsist instead on the underground breast-milk market.

WHAT'S IN OUR CHILDREN'S VACCINES?

- ★ Autism
- ★ Expensive placebos
- ★ An admission that your child is too weak to fight off polio himself
- ★ The foolish worries of women
- ★ Doctors' lies
- ★ An FDA-approved level of rat feces

TRUMP FACT
Donald Trump sells a Trump-brand luxury vaccine, and recommends parents test it on their children.

POISON CONTROL

How Trump Gained Immunity To 400 Different Poisons, And How You Can Too

- 1 Ingest 8 ounces of poison on an empty stomach.
- 2 Don't ask for help. The poison will sense weakness.
- 3 Stay awake. Poison doesn't sleep. Neither should you.
- 4 Initiate rolling blackouts of your internal organs. Shut down the spleen. When the poison shows up, it will see it's closed for business and move on to the liver. Fire up the spleen and shut down the liver. Keep the poison guessing.
- 5 Invite the poison on a conference call. The poison will get so bored it will die. Nothing gets done on a conference call.
- 6 Take more poison. Turn your body into a death cage where the poisons turn on each other.
- 7 Poison the poison. Turn the tables and give the poison a lethal dose of you. Two can play at this game.

NASA'S NEW MISSION: TO SEARCH FOR INTERSTELLAR CANDIDATES FOR THE MISS UNIVERSE PAGEANT

President Donald Trump has issued a bold challenge to NASA: to end the decades-old Earth bias in the selection of the most beautiful woman in the universe. Trump will lead humanity in a new era of both space exploration and the judging of female excellence. He will call on NASA to begin an extensive search through the vast reaches of outer space to find contestants stunning enough to give Earth women some serious competition.

NASA scientists will recalibrate their radio signals, adjust the Kepler and Hubble space telescopes, and finely tune all other instruments to scan the near-ultraviolet, visible, and near-infrared spectra beyond Earth for the most “amazing looking” and “elegant” female aliens.

“We need to look for any sign of life on other planets that’s got that classic hourglass shape, and has some element of poise—that’s what we’re really going to be looking for,” Trump says.

NASA scientists have already found several Earth-like planets outside our solar system that many believe contain the elements necessary to sustain gorgeous extraterrestrial life.

“Regardless of the chemical composition of the life-form, we will be looking for the nice figure, the bright smile, and a certain elegance or class, which is what sets the Miss Universe Pageant apart.”

KEPLER-186F

Barely within its star’s “habitable zone,” this planet’s beauty contestants are likely composed of frozen nitrogen.

KEPLER 62E

This oceanic planet has plenty of water to hydrate any life-forms, likely resulting in radiant alien skin.

KEPLER 62F

Miss Universe officials say this close neighbor of Kepler 62e may already judge female organisms from both planets, making for competitors already familiar with universe-wide pageant rules.

GLIESE 667CC

With high temperatures due to its close orbit around a red sun, this planet, according to NASA Interstellar Researcher Tim Kitagawa, may literally offer “sizzling hot babes.”

Black holes hold tremendous potential in the search for additional contestants. Known to be portals to parallel universes, black holes would likely produce many alternate-universe versions of the most beautiful lifeforms. To take advantage of this resource, our best scientists will need to create new technologies capable of not only transporting beauty contestants, but preemptively eliminating any competition from their counterparts. President Trump, in order to maintain his status as a world leader and advisor to the Miss Universe pageant, will also need special technology to kill any alternate-universe President Trumps.

Tryouts will take place on the moon before contestants are eligible for Earth competition.

Milk, plasma, or whatever the potential contestants secrete will be examined in a lab for its potency of elements and value of matter, and then drunk by Donald Trump. Contestants will be chosen after he judges the taste.

President Trump will appoint William Shatner to lead the search for interstellar babes.

“WE MUST FIND AND DEFEAT BIGFOOT”

Trump has vowed to locate and eradicate the most dangerous individual threat to American safety and security: Bigfoot. A danger particularly to residents of our nation’s beautiful wooded areas, Bigfoot, Trump believes, must be eliminated in order to protect all Americans from the creature’s unprecedented reign of terror.

“WE’VE GOT TO FIND HIM, ONCE AND FOR ALL, AND GET RID OF HIM.”

Trump offers the following essential steps for ending Bigfoot’s decades-long menace to civilized society:

1. Cut off access to his most important assets: fruit and small game. Trump recommends knocking out all the edible berries in the area by sending in large teams of experienced pickers to pick all the bushes clean. Then, take all the rabbits out of the woods with large nets. Once Bigfoot is starved out, Trump believes all those berries and rabbits ought to be given back to Americans.

“THAT MONKEY-MAN IS OUT THERE LAUGHING AT US.”

2. Trump believes Bigfoot’s biggest vulnerability is his trust in other animals who may be unlawfully harboring him. A reward must be offered to any bear, elk, or puma who will divulge Bigfoot’s whereabouts to U.S. authorities. Rewards to consider are food, safe passage, or an opportunity to join the circus. Once Bigfoot is alone and friendless in his vast wooded refuge, he will be much easier to capture.

3. Finally, Trump advises a strong military approach. This leaves nothing to chance. If Bigfoot hasn’t already given himself up after the first two steps, he'll certainly be crushed by the U.S. military, aided by local militias if necessary. Troops will sweep the woods, banging on pots and pans and yelling slurs and insults at Bigfoot to not only flush him out, but destroy his will to live. They'll follow with a slash and burn, leaving Bigfoot's formerly tranquil home in ashes.

"BIGFOOT IS AMERICA'S BIGGEST PROBLEM THAT NOBODY TALKS ABOUT."

Trump promises to implement this solution to the Bigfoot menace within his first 100 days as president. He further guarantees that, as an avid hunter, he will finish the job himself. Once Bigfoot is weak, hungry, subdued, and whimpering at Trump's feet, Trump will look into the mongrel's eyes and personally shoot him in the face.

In a world without Bigfoot, Americans will once again venture into our state and national parks to enjoy all the natural beauty and splendor they offer, without fear that a hideous monster will be lurking in the distance. Because that monster will be dead.

Study Suggests Benefits of Playing 'Art of the Deal' Audiobook to Unborn

By PATRICIA GOODWIN and HARRIS TULEGARUE

The authors of a study published in The New England Journal of Medicine have found evidence suggesting playing the audiobook of Donald Trump's "The Art of the Deal" to babies while in the womb can have significant cognitive, physical, and emotional benefits.

"Many parents have long believed, without supporting evidence, that playing classical music to a fetus might somehow enhance brain development," lead researcher Danielle Blair said. "However, our study showed conclusively that playing 'The Art of the Deal' audiobook was more effective than Mozart, Haydn, or Bach."

Ms. Blair's study, ongoing since 2015, has found that no music of the classical composers or even the voice of an unborn child's parents are as effective as Mr. Trump's voice at growing healthier, more confident, and better-looking children.

Anecdotally, many new parents have reported remarkable qualities in children who listened to "The Art of the Deal" while in the womb. Sherry Wordstrom, a mother in Pasadena, wrote in her parenting blog "Trump Youth" that her newborn son Avery began pounding his fists on top of desks as early as six months, and had learned to negotiate for longer breast-feedings even younger than that.

"My son is smarter, stronger, and more successful than other babies," she said. "In short, he wins."

Among the benefits specified by the study, playing the audiobook to fetuses led to increased self-confidence, an increased ability to make and close deals, and an intrinsic understanding of the high-end New York real-estate market.

Bred for Success

In a years-long study, fetal brains exposed to the voice of Donald Trump reading the unabridged "The Art of the Deal" audiobook showed marked increases over control groups in cognitive function under pressure, intuition, and high-stakes deal-making.

HOW TO KILL MONSTERS

There are terrifying spectres in this world, things that live in the darkness. You may never encounter one, but if you do, you'd better be prepared. Donald Trump has spent his life fighting these evils. Trained in the old ways by his Bavarian forefathers, Trump comes from a long lineage revered for its brave monster hunts throughout the centuries. Here he reveals his ancestors' strategies as written in the ancient Trump Book of Ghouls.

A FRANKENSTEIN

A Frankenstein is a creature that is composed of different dead body parts sewn together and then given life by heretical science. People may say, "Frankenstein was the name of the scientist, not the monster." In the time it takes those people to make that observation, the Frankenstein has crushed their skulls. What is important is that the Frankenstein, an abomination of God and men, is pursued until dead.

The lifeless tissue that makes up a Frankenstein's body creates the effect of a lumbering gait. It is not difficult to outrun a Frankenstein. A Frankenstein is easily distracted and startled. It can only focus its half-dead mind on one thing. However, great caution must be exercised, for if it gets a hold, it can keep hold with a deadly grip. For this reason, it is best to avoid fighting a Frankenstein alone. Every man in the village must be roused to a great fervor, pitchforks, bludgeons, and torches in hand, convinced in their rightness to destroy the sad monster.

Fire is the only known method of killing a Frankenstein. Removal of the brain from the rest of the body is also recommended as a safeguard. Even burning and decapitated, a Frankenstein's body may be able to walk and grab for as long as one hour. Be aware and keep a distance until it finally falls. When that happens, make certain both head and body are burned to ashes.

A VAMPIRE

A Vampire is thought to be a lascivious aristocrat which prowls the night for twisted, undead love. For this reason it is to be admired. There is much we can learn from the Vampire, such as projecting powerful psychic desires within the minds of captivated thralls, and maintaining strength, sexual vitality, and smooth hair with an unearthly shimmer until far beyond an age when such traits would be natural.

While legend has put forth that the way to kill a Vampire is with a wooden stake or direct sunlight, the truth is that only decapitation will kill a Vampire. But before you kill it, learn its secrets. Let it drink your blood. This course of action will bestow upon you a long life of untold personal magnetism and worldly success.

A WEREWOLF

A Werewolf is a dumb brute, a man who shape-shifts into a man-wolf under a full moon. A Werewolf can be harmed by wolfsbane and holy artifacts, but only silver to the heart is lethal. Harming a Werewolf is unwise. A Werewolf fearing for its life can kill a hundred men before it tires. Shots are best fired from a great distance, as one scratch from the Werebeast will pass the infliction onto you. Alas, there is no known cure for lycanthropy. To blot out the Werewolf we must work toward a future in which the Dark Arts and Science develop a weapon capable of destroying the moon.

TRUMP VS. A CREATURE FROM THE BLACK LAGOON

“A few years ago at Mar-a-Lago Club, the famous and historic twenty-acre waterfront estate, named by the American Academy of Hospitality Sciences as ‘the best private club in the world,’ I started getting reports from the workers of a ‘fish-man’ lurking in the waters near the resort. I knew exactly what we were dealing with—a merman. I went into the hunter chest that I keep at Mar-a-Lago and got out my golden trident. A golden trident is the only known thing that can kill a merman. I went out on the water with George Ross, executive vice president and senior counsel of the Trump Organization, and we spent over 48 hours searching for this thing, and we finally found it.

“When I shone a light on it, it let out an unholy hissing sound and jumped toward us on the boat. It grabbed onto George’s arm and nearly yanked it off. Luckily, I rammed the golden trident right into its chest just in time. It let out a death howl and went limp. I pulled its disgusting, slime-covered body onto the boat and George and I brought it onto shore where we burned it.”

WHAT TO DO IF YOU HAVE AN ANCIENT AZTEC CURSE PUT ON YOU

The worst people sometimes resort to the worst weapon: curses. The ancient Aztec dark arts have been handed down over the generations, and there’s very little you can do to stop them if you don’t know what you’re doing. Due to his stance on Mexicans, Donald Trump has tangled with his fair share of ancient Aztec curses. Here is his step-by-step guide to dispelling the evil hexes.

- 1 Construct a pyramid-shaped temple with a westward-facing facade. Sunlight must shine directly through the 24-pound polished gemstone perched in the doorway, creating a luxurious interplay of light and shadow within the antechamber.
- 2 Perform an incantation to the feathered serpent Quetzalcoatl.
- 3 Make a blood sacrifice. This may cause trouble, but you must ask yourself: would you rather face our nation’s weak justice system, or the damnation of unspeakable forces from the underworld realm of Mictlan?
- 4 To prevent a curse being recast, close the temple with the seal of the cloud serpent, hewn from puma skulls.
- 5 Summon a muertos vivos and cover it with one part red earth consecrated by an Aztec priest, and one part pure snow from a mountain peak. Send the creature forth as your avatar.
- 6 Wear the sacred headdress of the tlamacazqui order until you are certain the curse has fully dissipated.

YOUR LIFE

A STUDY IN LOSING

10 SIMPLE TIPS TO TRANSFORM YOURSELF FROM A TOTAL LOSER TO JUST A LOSER

As president, Donald Trump does not tolerate total losers among the American citizenry. If you are currently a total loser, you need to start remaking yourself today. Here are 10 things you can do right now. If you have your sights on being a Trump-caliber winner, too bad. Only Donald Trump can be that good. You need to focus on becoming a better kind of loser.

1. You are the company you keep. Get rid of all your total-loser friends and surround yourself with only loser friends.

2. Remove all references to your being a total loser from your LinkedIn profile.

3. Get an assistant loser who is a bigger loser than you.

4. Buy a StairMaster and set it for Trump's penthouse level (80 flights) then walk it 20 times per day while chanting "I'm a loser."

5. You may never date a beauty from a classy Eastern European country, but try your luck with Moldova or Azerbaijan.

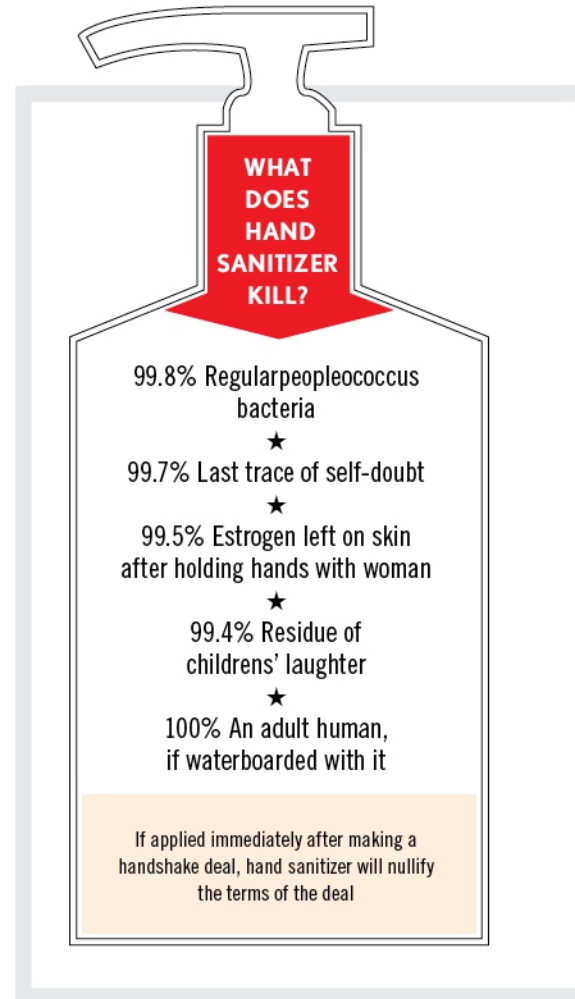

6. Start saving for a low-end helicopter.

7. Get your assistant an assistant. If your assistant already has an assistant, get her a hotter assistant. If your assistant's assistant is already a 10, make her your assistant and fire the first one for not being hot enough.

8. Call others "total losers" to distance yourself from the stigma.

9. Surround yourself with total bozos to distract you from being a total loser.

10. Stop drinking out of the garden hose.

COMPLETE-DISASTER PREPAREDNESS GUIDE

You never know when complete disaster will strike. Whether it's Jeb Bush's disastrous campaign for the Republican nomination or Obamacare, it's always a good idea to be prepared. In Trump's America, you can rest assured that Trump has thought of every contingency. You can be ready for anything with these easy-to-follow emergency guidelines.

Complete Disaster: Your limo guy is running late

Response: Call your helicopter guy

Complete Disaster: The concierge did not greet you at the hotel

Response: Buy the hotel, tear it down, build a Trump hotel in its place and make billions

Complete Disaster: You spill soup on your tie at a restaurant

Response: Text your assistant and instruct her to buy a new tie and bring it to you. If you can't reach your assistant—day or night—or don't know if she'll do anything you ask of her, you've got the wrong assistant

Complete Disaster: You shake too many hands and are overrun with germs

Response: Surgically remove hands and replace them with golden robot hands

Complete Disaster: You're forced to hear a woman speak for more than one minute

Response: Slip on sunglasses with pictures of Ivanka on the back of the lenses

Complete Disaster: Air conditioning doesn't work

Response: Get a clue

Complete Disaster:

You find yourself in the vicinity of a Black Lives Matter rally
Response: Take cover inside the nearest Trump skyscraper

Complete Disaster: You find yourself in a foreign country

Response: Retrace your steps until you're no longer in a foreign country

Complete Disaster: Your wife is not as hot as she used to be Response: Release her back into the Siberian hinterlands

OUTDOOR SURVIVAL TIPS

Lost? Look around for a giant building with your name on it.

Mark your trail through wooded areas by lighting several fires so that you know where you've been.

Find the biggest bear you can and shoot him in the face. Now all the other animals know you're at the top of the food chain.

Follow any source of water you find. It will most likely lead you to a town with grocery stores, where Trump Ice spring water is likely sold.

In cases of extreme emergency, your driver or personal assistant can be a source of both food and shelter.

Call up Dante and make a reservation for two tonight. Just because you're outside doesn't mean you shouldn't eat well.

Always remember the clubhouse is near the second hole.

If you get lost in the woods, buy the woods and evict anything that might bite or scratch you.

HOW TO HUNT MAN

Serve an Elegant Dinner

Welcome your guest into your jungle chateau. Offer a lavish meal. Over dinner, calmly explain that you're going to hunt him for sport.

Survey Your Island Estate

Thoroughly sweep the tropical grounds that surround your mansion to be sure it's escape-proof and free of any items that your quarry could, with desperate cunning, fashion into a crude weapon.

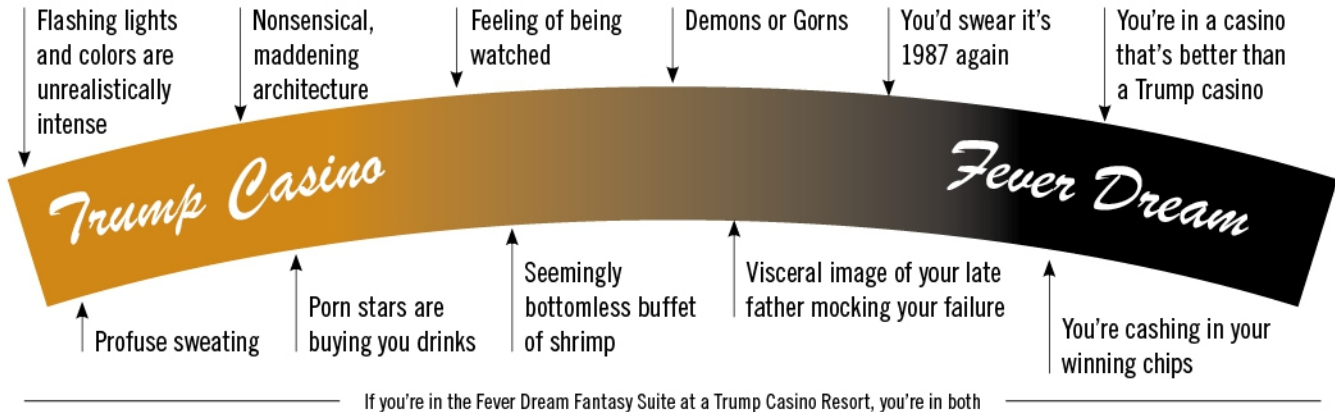

Let the Hunt Begin

Use your hunting rifle, of course, but also toy with your prey's mind. Explain to him that you are above the moral code of civilized society, and that his naive devotion to it makes him no better than wild game. Let his faith in man's inherent goodwill be his undoing.

Enjoy Yourself

You've earned this. Having tired of hunting animals, the thrill of tracking and killing a creature with reason is the only thing that offers any kind of challenge. Have fun with it.

Trump: 'Every child deserves to be maybe half as great as me'

President inspires kids to be small percentage of what he's become.

as great as himself.

"If you put in the time and work, maybe, and you learn to be confident at all costs, which is very difficult especially if you have no spine, you can be almost as unstoppable as Trump," Trump said.

He tasked each child to make the most of their opportunities. "With your business connections, which I can tell you pale in comparison to mine, your net worth, which is a fraction of Trump's at best, coupled with the inspiration you take from this incredible speech, maybe, one day, if you put all that together, you'll deserve to be mentioned in the same sentence as me. Maybe."

Trump stressed that this ideal was something the children could hope for only under the best circumstances. "Worst-case scenario, you'll remain nobodies."

In answer to a girl's question about Mideast peace, Trump complimented her appearance, and expressed optimism that she could possibly achieve sub-Trump greatness one day. "But certainly no more than that," he said.

TRUMP ON FAITH

For all of his tough talk of the Wall, getting rid of Muslims, and the need to rough up protesters from time to time, there is one thing that is very special to Donald Trump: religion.

“I love the Bible and am very close to God, but I’ve got a few bones to pick with his son. I love Jesus, too, but there are a lot of things I would have done differently. First, I’m not a fan of people who let themselves be crucified. I prefer saviors who win. If I were Jesus, my apostles would be made up of people who were very big in their fields. The top scholars. Who did Jesus have as apostles? Weirdos and lowlifes. This was a bunch of freeloaders, and the church is in a terrible state to this day because of it. Put me in charge of the church and I could fix it in a week. Get the brightest people in there and throw the dummies out. I could make church very successful again—very successful.

“Let’s look at everything Jesus ever did: he gave speeches, did some miracles, and then let himself be killed. That’s not the life of a winner.

David Blaine can do two out of three of those things, but that doesn’t make him a savior. I know David. He’s a friend of mine and I’ve seen a lot of his shows. No one knows how to liven up a crowd like David, except maybe for me, I have to be honest with you.

“I’m worth over 8 billion dollars, how much was Jesus worth? Do you really want to take life-investment advice from a nobody? I know business. I know the market. I know deals. Can Jesus say that? Well, you can’t ask him because he died.

“When I read the Bible and see where we had all of Jesus’s so-called miracles, I have to laugh. I’ve done what he’s done 10 times over. He brought a guy back from the dead. Hey, I’ve got to tell you: I brought thousands of casinos back from the brink. That’s what I do. Jesus never did business with China. The Chinese love me. From what I’ve been told, they don’t like Jesus very much. And for good reason. He was lazy.

“You know, the more I think about it, the more I realize God is a grade-A loser, too. What kind of a schmuck lets his son—who has no talent—run around speaking for him and giving not-so-great advice about giving away all your stuff? When Donald Jr. takes over my companies, he's not going to wander around like a hippie and cure sick people for free, that much I can tell you.

"God couldn't control his brand. He wrote the Bible, but what that book needs is an editor. There were a lot of great Jew characters in the first half, but where did they go? God is a poor writer. And his son was a disappointment.

"Bottom line: Jesus is a lowlife and a wimp who couldn't keep his hair out of his eyes. And God is a lousy boss with communication problems. I am everything they weren't."

NEWS ANALYSIS

Deep Wounds In Long-Standing Language Gap

By ALLEN D. KIRKPATRICK

President Donald Trump has often leveled charges against the workers at the Manhattan salon where he pays for skin, hair, and nails treatments, accusing them of talking about him and laughing at him in a language he cannot understand.

With his address to the nation tonight, he indicated a new phase of his strained relationship with the salon workers. He is expected to introduce tough new proposals to end the threat: the creation of an Upper West Side Asian-language task force readied for deployment at a moment's notice to any salon where the staff is saying unflattering things about the president; and emergency funding for a "translator thing like they have on Star Trek."

Mr. Trump may call for military tribunals for beauticians, cosmetologists, manicurists, or waxers suspected of making unflattering comments near him.

TRUMP REBUKES ASIAN SALON MANICURISTS

President's Strongest Language on the Issue

By GERALD LA FAZIA

WASHINGTON—In a special address to the nation today from the East Room of the White House, President Trump offered his strongest language yet against the Asian women who do his skin treatments. He has singled out the group in several speeches recently, as well as in pieces of legislation he has urged Congress to enact into law.

"I've seen it happen, and you know what I'm talking about," he said. "The short one gestures at the other one. They share a laugh. Then the one doing the nails joins in. Now they're all laughing, and saying things in Chinese or Japanese or whatever it is." Trump pledged that by 2030, America will "make it stop, and make it stop now."

THE POWERFUL TRUMP SLEEP SYSTEM

Donald Trump is renowned for sleeping only four hours per night yet having boundless energy during the day. How does he do it? With his powerful Trump-brand sleep system: a proprietary method developed by Trump to create more vitality, increase productivity, and kick sleep's ass.

TRUMP'S SECRET STRATEGIES FOR 4 HOURS OF SLEEP

- ☾ Takes a six-hour-per-day power nap
- ☾ Hires people to sleep for him
- ☾ Powers down while Melania speaks
- ☾ Licenses his name and image to other people's sleep
- ☾ Sleeps across three beds, for a total of 12 hours of sleep
- ☾ Conserves energy during the day by having a team of interns perform the functions of many of his vital organs
- ☾ Sleeps on private jet crossing back and forth over the international dateline
- ☾ Goes by winner's time

A BED MADE OUT OF FASHION MODELS

Trump's bed, made from 100% living Eastern European fashion models, provides the soothing comfort he needs for a good night's rest.

TRUMP FACT

To avoid low energy, Trump's preferred pick-me-up drink is pure liquefied Mexican-coffee-plantation workers.

TRUMP

Ivanka Edition

You're a model, CEO of your own business, and the daughter of a multi-billionaire who can't stop talking about how he'd date you if you weren't his daughter.

Step inside the heels of Ivanka Trump as you walk, run, and jump anywhere to evade your dad's weird compliments. You might take your career back two spaces because his unseemly glances give your staff the heebie-jeebies. You might draw a Confrontation Card and insist he not tell reporters how hot he thinks you are. Either way, you lose!

Places to Hide:

Trunk of Bentley • As mannequin in display window • Dangle from the Trump Tower penthouse window

Inappropriate Features

• Gain 1 pound, lose a present at Christmas
• Change the entrance code to your residence, spin again • Refuse to model Miss Universe gown for father, go to room
• Move quietly— don't wake him up!
• Wear your baggy Wharton sweatshirt to avert his gaze

YES, YOU CAN DELIVER A MOVING EULOGY WHILE STILL CALLING THEM OUT FOR THE MISTAKES THEY MADE

TRUMP'S TIPS

- ✓ Mention their accomplishments and how they won't last. Gleaming skyscrapers and perfectly manicured fairways endure for ages. But whoever died likely had neither in their name, so it should be stated that whatever they did with their life was not that impressive.
- ✓ Assess whether you would have hired them. A person's life is their ultimate resumé. If this person was not a good hire, now's the time to bring that up.
- ✓ Criticize the suit they chose to be buried in. The suit you're buried in should be the nicest one you ever wear. There's no excuse for anything else. You should be able to tell just by peeking. Flip over the collar and read the label.
- ✓ Acknowledge it's a sad time, because whoever died could have lived a much better life. Did they make over a billion dollars? Did they ever get elected president? Were they Donald Trump? No. Make this point clearly and loudly.
- ✓ For every bad quality you mention about the person, say one good thing about their daughter's appearance.

CREATING MEANINGFUL, POSITIVE CHANGE THROUGH CYBERBULLYING

Just a few short years ago, if someone was a no-talent bum, there was no way to let them know. Today, the Internet makes exposing gutless frauds a fast and efficient part of everyday life. But if they bully you, how can you take the scumbags down, call them out for their lies, and have a lasting social impact?

NEVER GIVE UP

Hit attackers back as hard as you can. Attack their unsuccessful business, their hideous face, or their sow-like weight. Do they have $8 billion? Do they have a helicopter? Probably not. Are they associated with a poorly performing business or entertainment property? Most likely. These are important data points you can offer to the conversation and elevate the dialog. It's not over until your attacker comes crawling to you, begging for forgiveness, admitting they were wrong, and conceding you are their moral superior in every way.

DOES CYBERBULLYING GO FAR ENOUGH?

While cyberbullying can often result in positive change, it sometimes isn't enough. There are times when you must use other means, such as directing media attention to how big of a jackass your opponent is, or giving out your attacker's personal phone number or home address, so that others can rally to your defense.

POWER MOVES TO SILENCE INTERNET TROLLS

Don't just take on the troll, take on his whole family, organization, demographic, and race.

Start a real-estate empire, buy the property they rent, and then evict them.

Call a telecom CEO and ask him to shut down the Internet in the troll's tristate area.

Post a picture of your computer to Instagram to show the troll how much better your computer is than theirs. If it's not a very good computer, buy the best, most expensive computer on the market.

Buy Twitter, find the troll's information, post it to an ISIS message board, then have them arrested for conspiracy to commit terrorism.

Charter a private jet to the troll's parents' house, then call from the parents' phone so the troll can hear the sound of you fucking their mom.

Paste that "what a clown" tweet you copied and saved three years ago.

Buy a Trump-brand Signature tie for every negative comment you get, then Instagram photos of your magnificent ties until the troll breaks down crying over the stark inferiority of their own life.

WHAT TO DO IF YOUR CHILD IS A CYBERBULLYING VICTIM

- ★ Help your child understand that their cyberbully makes some very good points
- ★ Explain that your child's pain means they're a nerd—a valuable lesson to learn in life
- ★ Use tough love—if you overhear your child complaining about being cyberbullied, punch your child in the face
- ★ Stop having children who are nerds

3 STEPS
TO PUTTING A STOP TO UNFAIR INTERNET
COMMENTS

- 1 STOP cyberattacks preemptively by blindly insulting anyone and everyone on the Internet
- 2 STOP cyberbullying and then start it again with an even better target
- 3 STOP cruel, demeaning, or hateful attacks online by sending them through traditional mail

HOW TO AVOID GETTING SUED BY THE PRESIDENT

WILL THE PRESIDENT SUE YOU?

He might. From his seat of executive power in the White House, Donald Trump will use every advantage to make America great again, including, if necessary, suing you.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Trump has the best lawyers. They know every tool of the legal system and how to use each one with surgical precision to bring you to heel, bankrupt you, or simply drag you through the courts for years until you're a soulless shell of your former self with no memory of the innocent bliss that was once your pitiful life.

It's important to remember that Donald Trump is the victim here. You are the defendant. Whatever your future offense, there's only one person to blame: yourself.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU'RE SUED

Besides following the clear dictates of Trump's legal team, articulated in your summons or cease-and-desist letter, you can also try one of the following:

- ✓ Summon a demon more powerful than Trump.
- ✓ Invent a time machine and go back in time before you did the thing that Trump is suing you for, unless Trump is suing you for stealing his idea for a time machine. In that case, doing this will only make things worse.

SIMPLE TIPS TO AVOID BEING SUED BY PRESIDENT TRUMP

There's no way to guarantee the president won't sue you. But you can decrease the likelihood with these helpful hints:

- ✓ When speaking of the president, be sure to use one of these acceptable adjectives:
 - Terrific
 - Amazing
 - Incredible
 - Very good
 - Very nice
- ✓ Refrain from using any of the president's registered catchphrases:
 - "You're fired"
 - "Make America great again"
 - "Complete disaster"
 - "Billions"
 - "Moron"
 - "China"
- ✓ Don't disagree with Donald Trump.
- ✓ Don't write a letter to Donald Trump.
- ✓ Chant, "Trump! Trump! Trump!"
- ✓ Never initiate eye contact. And if you do, never break it.
- ✓ Don't marry Donald Trump.
- ✓ Don't do business with Donald Trump.
- ✓ Live on a life raft in international waters outside the known boundary of any recognized legal jurisdiction.
- ✓ Be directly related to Donald Trump.
- ✓ Have Donald Trump's blood type and be there when he needs your blood.
- ✓ Stop spreading the lies of science.
- ✓ Get your facts straight.
- ✓ Just shut up.
- ✓ Live in the sewers and emerge only under the cover of darkness to scavenge the filth of the street to survive.

WHAT'S NEXT

"IT WAS AN HONOR FOR YOU"

BEHOLD A MONUMENT FIT FOR A TRUMP

The always forward-thinking Donald Trump has already begun construction on a national monument to celebrate his presidency. The Trump Monument is an eight-story abstract rendition of the president encased in an impenetrable tungsten-carbide alloy with a gleaming, armored exterior. As awe-inspiring as this monument will be on the outside, what's inside is even more impressive.

STANDING PROUD AND STRONG

The structure's endoskeleton is made of carbon nanofiber-reinforced, military-grade titanium for superior structural strength and durability. Connected to this framework are thousands of hydraulics, pistons, and actuators to manipulate the monument's many powerful appendages. Of particular note are its finely articulated hands, which are capable of both removing a man's cap before the national anthem and tearing a battleship in half.

AMBULATORY AND COMBAT-READY

When not standing atop its granite pedestal, the Trump Monument is fully mobile, on land and in the air. In times of war or civil unrest, Trump himself will enter the monument and pilot it to defend loyal Americans. Outfitted with concealed 800-kilowatt lasers as well as shoulder-mounted nuclear-missile launchers, the monument is fit to lead our armies into battle or, if necessary, annihilate an American city, securing President Trump's legacy for millennia to come.

HOW TO PROPERLY SALUTE THE TRUMP MONUMENT

In time, all American citizens will be invited by special presidential edict to salute the Trump Monument, as well as any of the other monuments to Donald Trump that will surely be erected in countless cities and townships across the land in the coming years. But what is the appropriate protocol by which fealty is shown to a great leader's bust, statue, or obelisk? Only the most respectful and dignified display of abject acclaim will be acceptable. Each citizen has a responsibility to understand the proper salute form, so you'd better start practicing at home now.

REMOVE HEADGEAR

Within 100 yards of any token or likeness of Trump, or within visible distance of any statue or monument to Trump that is over 100 feet tall, headgear must be removed and placed over the heart. While headgear is decorously held in this manner, walking, talking, or continuing affairs of the day will not be tolerated within a period of not less than one hour. For due respect to be shown a monument in a moving column or parade, this salute must be rendered as the monument approaches and held until it has passed.

BOW HEAD

You confer the proper regard for a Trump monument and everything it stands for by solemnly lowering your head and looking away from any Trump monument or legion of soldiers that may be marching alongside it or in front of it. Spectators may only raise their heads within sight of a Trump monument if so ordered by a soldier, other military, police, or government authority, or by the monument itself or the pilot within it.

GENUFLECT

Dropping to one's knee as if in worship is a gesture of humility and reverence in the face of your superiors. This is the salute required if a Trump monument addresses you directly, either by loudspeaker or with targeting-computer warning.

HONOR TRUMP'S ACHIEVEMENTS

Donald Trump has given more to America than he can ever expect to receive in return. He has accepted this fact, selflessly. But as a beneficiary of his magnanimous leadership, you must show the proper gratitude. While basking in the presence of any of his monuments, take a moment to silently reflect on the gifts he has bestowed upon all of us, such as the many hours of outstanding reality television, and his mercy, for he has the power and the right to obliterate you on the spot with his monument's lasers.

TWEET

Be sure to capture for all time the inspiring moment of your encounter with a Trump monument by taking a photo with the monument and tweeting it to

TRUMP FACT

It is no longer possible to scream into the void because Donald Trump has monetized the void.

@realDonaldTrump with an accompanying remark about how incredible he is. No selfies permitted unless you are an 8 or above.

SCORN A TRUMP MONUMENT, GO TO PRISON

Improperly saluting any Trump monument will be punishable by 30 years in prison, a fine of no less than $10,000, and/or registry on the enemy kill list. Defacing a Trump monument in any way will be punishable by immediate stepping-on by the Trump Monument.

VISIT THE GIFT SHOP

Purchase souvenirs of your life-changing confrontation with a Trump monument at one of the official gift shops found at every Trump Tribute Center. Pictures and stories are great, but why not take home a small stuffed Trump Monument doll for a special child in your life? (It shoots fun toy missiles!) Or a Trump Signature refrigerator magnet? All proceeds will go to support the creation of more Trump monuments. (Minimum purchase $1,000.)

HOW WILL TRUMP AGE IN OFFICE?

HOW COULD TRUMP KEEP BEING PRESIDENT?

- ★ Run as “Donald Tromp” with a fake mustache
- ★ Run as vice president, then kill the president
- ★ Declare the executive branch bankrupt, then acquire the office in a leveraged buyout by the Trump Organization.
- ★ No one wants to follow Trump as the next president, so Trump will reluctantly agree to stay in office.
- ★ Reveal that Trump can legally continue to be president because he was technically never president in the first place. He was merely a majority shareholder in a temporary presidential holding company.
- ★ Yell very loudly until the next president caves and gives Trump what he wants
- ★ Act like it's his first day as president, and act incredulous when anyone tries to insist otherwise
- ★ Demand a do-over
- ★ Create a golem to lead, like Chuckie
- ★ Build a wall around the White House
- ★ Demonstrate that he can destroy a planet by nuking Mars
- ★ Draft and sign Declaration of Presidence
- ★ Purchase the White House, become new president's landlord
- ★ Make rigged putting-green bet with new president for control of country
- ★ Threaten to poison Trump Ice spring water unless demands are met
- ★ Arrange for Ivanka to marry the new president
- ★ Program Trumpbot to win next election, transfer consciousness into Trumpbot
- ★ Swap bodies with new president
- ★ Purchase all the land in America, rent it to the government
- ★ Demoralize new president with consistent put-downs

WHAT'S NEXT FOR TRUMP?

After he's made America great again, when he's remade it into Trump's America—or maybe when he's just had enough—Donald Trump will finally, eventually, leave the White House. What will his next great calling be? Only time will tell. For the rest of us, whether losers, lowlives, or lightweights, we will continue to stand in his shadow, blinded by the resplendent spectacle of Donald Trump, sure to be the greatest former president the world has ever known.

A NOTE TO FUTURE HISTORIAN HACKS WHO WANT TO MAKE A QUICK BUCK
BY DRAGGING A GREAT PRESIDENT THROUGH THE MUD
by Donald J. Trump

I have something to say to you historians who I know will be dying to take me down a peg with a big smear job after I'm President. You'll try to pass it off as "scholarship." But I've got news for you people: no one is buying it. People are going to know that everything you write about me is absolute garbage.

You'll say I said the wrong thing, or that I was politically incorrect when I did that one thing. Or maybe you'll say all the great things I'll do as President are somehow not great!

No matter what you say, here's what's going to happen. By the end of my presidency, America is going to love me. They're going to be so happy. And great. People will be sick and tired of being so great and happy and getting rid of all the bad things.

My legacy is going to be fabulous. Just incredible.

I'm going to pull this country from the brink of disaster where Obama left it, and give it victories, and self-respect, and all the great things. Terrorism, immigrants, Muslims, the scumbags from MSNBC. You'll never hear from them again.

These are facts, and whatever you're going to write will be something else - I don't know what. You will be totally dishonest, that much I can tell you. And why would you do that? It's because you're despicable people. Just horrible. The worst. You're probably not doing very well in your historian job. You're a little history teacher who works at a little schoolhouse, who gets paid - what, maybe forty thousand dollars? You've got a long way to go before you're going to earn anyone's respect, believe me.

The things you'll write about me in your little history books will be very unfair, and they will not be true. Not a single word. But it doesn't matter because nobody cares. Nobody will read your books. They'll read mine. And that's why you'll come after me.

So sad.

“The definitive word on the mogul.” —Esquire

“So funny . . . a must read!”
—The Huffington Post

TRUMP'S AMERICA is the hilarious, satirical handbook you need in the TRUMPOCRACY. Its colorful infographs and easy-to-skim format give you a complete look at what life will be like in one nation under Trump. In brief, it will be tremendous.

THIS BOOK REVEALS . . .

The secret behind Trump's thirty-year campaign for the White House—which isn't even as nice as his other houses!

How to spot an ISIS.

When to offer your wife to PRESIDENT TRUMP.

. . . and much, much more.

Don't get Trumped. Get Trump's America, your blueprint for surviving and thriving in the coming TRUMPOCALYPSE, which could last four to eight years—or more!

Keep this book with you at all times! (Or risk arrest and detainment at a Trump Deportation Center. Don't be scared. The centers will be very nice. But still, better to have the book.)

This work was previously published as TRUMP'S AMERICA: THE COMPLETE LOSER'S GUIDE
