(☎) 0364-2211285; GS Rd; d/tr from ₹1050/1350) Popular with backpackers and budget travellers, Baba hides many floors below the road level, and offers clean, spartan accommodation in rooms that open past a prim wood-panelled reception area lined with fish-filled aquariums. The pricier rooms have running hot water. There's basic in-house food.

Earle Holiday Home HOTEL $
(☎) 0364-2228614; Oakland Rd; d from ₹750; (♿) This hotel has character but is amusingly disorganised. The cheaper rooms are original half-timbered affairs within a classic 1920 Shillong hill house adorned with sweet little turrets. Pricier rooms in the concrete annexe are less atmospheric but more comfortable.

Hotel Rainbow HOTEL $
(☎) 0364-2222534; www.hotelrainbowshillong.com; GS Rd; d from ₹1300) This lovely little place has a string of pleasantly styled rooms with wood panelling, moody lighting and tasteful ethnic decor. The best is room 103 which has a little balcony. Expect some street noise though, as it's on a main thoroughfare.

Aerodene Cottage GUESTHOUSE $$$
(☎) 9774065366; www.aerodene.com; Lower Cleve Colony; d incl breakfast from ₹3200; (♿) A charming garden-fronted Assam-style bungalow converted into a guesthouse, Aerodene has atmospheric rooms with soft beds, wood floors, period decor and lots of light and fresh air. The newer annexe block to the right has rooms that are less ambient but equally comfortable. The food is simply delicious; dinner costs an additional ₹250 per person.

Hotel Centre Point HOTEL $$$
(☎) 0364-2220480; www.shillongcentrepoint.com; Police Bazaar Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3700/4200; (♿) Located bang on Police Bazaar, this is arguably the best business hotel in Shillong. Run by professional and helpful staff, it has smart rooms with wood flooring and large windows overlooking the town centre. All requisite creature comforts are at your disposal, and the Cloud 9 rooftop lounge bar is a good place for evening beers and (occasionally) live music.

Blueberry Inn HOTEL $$$
(☎) 0364-2500655; www.blueberryinn.in; Rita Rd; d from ₹3800; (♿) A spiffy address down a quiet lane past Pinewood Hotel, this place has excellent, bright rooms with fluffy beds, clean loos and a range of small comforts to match its premium price tag. The decor could come across as a bit over-the-top, though. The in-house kitchen serves good food.

(☎) 9862420300; www.rikynjai.com; Umiam Lake; d incl breakfast from ₹8700; (♿) This divine resort on the banks of pristine Umiam Lake, 22km from Shillong, is a gem of a getaway. Spacious wood-pillared cottages with fabulous lake views lie scattered about its lush, green gardens and each is impeccably presented with elegant furnishings and lavish bathrooms. There's a spa done up in traditional decor, restaurant and bar with lake views.

GARO & JAINTIA HILLS

Far from well-trodden tracks, lush Garo Hills in the far west of Meghalaya is worth exploring if you have a few days (and a sense of adventure) to spare. Easier to reach from Guwahati than Shillong, its main urban hub is the tiny settlement of Tura, where the friendly tourist office (☎ 03651-242394; ☺ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri) can arrange local guides. Buses run here from Guwahati and accommodation is available at the Rikman Continental (☎ 03651-220744; www.hotelrikman.com; Circular Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹1200/1500; 🍴🚰), which has a mix of standard and semi-luxury rooms.

For most people, a visit to Garo Hills involves an encounter with the endangered Hoolock gibbon, a friendly primate that lives in the forests of the Nokrek Biosphere Reserve. The other highlight of the region is an excursion to tribal villages deep in the mountains, where you can see villagers practise the ancient slash-and-burn method of jhum cultivation. Intriguing borangs (traditional tree houses) dot the lush landscape around here. If you're with a reliable local guide, it's also possible to visit a traditional Garo village and sample their rice-beer-soaked hospitality. Remember to leave a tip in return. In autumn Garo Hills hosts the four-day Wangala festival (☺ Oct/Nov), renowned for its impressive tribal dancing and traditional drum recitals.

The Jaintia Hills, meanwhile, is home to the village of Nartiang, where you can visit an intriguing complex of stone monoliths erected by different clans between the 16th and 19th centuries. It's unattended and overgrown – beware of snakes in the undergrowth. Nartiang is located 62km southeast of Shillong, and can be visited on a day trip by hiring a taxi (₹1600).

Guwahati ₹130/170, 3½ hours

Silchar ₹380, 10 hours

Siliguri ₹490, 12 hours

Tura bus/Sumo ₹350/450, 12 hours via Guwahati

Khasi Hills Tourist Taxi Cooperative (☎ 0364-2223895; Kacheri Rd) charges ₹2200 to ₹2500 for a day trip to Cherrapunjee; for a ride to the Bangladesh border near Dawki it's ₹2000. For Guwahati airport, a full taxi costs ₹2200, or you can share with other passengers for ₹350.

Cherrapunjee (Sohra)

Laid out along razorlike ridges of a high mountain wall, Cherrapunjee sits on the edge of the Himalayas, overlooking the pancake-flat plains of Bangladesh. The village was once feted as the wettest place on earth because of the prodigious monsoon rainfall. The road from Shillong to this tiny village passes through pretty scenery that becomes dramatic at the Dympep viewpoint, where a photogenic V-shape valley slits deeply into the plateau.

The grassy moors surrounding Cherrapunjee justify Meghalaya's over-played 'Scotland of the East' tourist-office soubriquet, although they're dotted with monoliths and scarred by quarrying. The Nohkalikai Falls are particularly dramatic, especially in the monsoon when their capacity increases 20-fold. You can see them from the viewpoint (admission ₹10, camera/video ₹20/50; ☀ 8am-5pm) located on a plateau at the end of a mountain ridge 4.4km from Sohra market. Local taxis (₹50) shuttle passengers to the viewpoint. Much more impressive, however, is the series of 'grand canyon' valleys around the region, which plunge into deep lush chasms of tropical forest.

The most fascinating sight around Cherrapunjee are the incredible root bridges – living rubber fig-tree roots which ingenious Khasi villagers have, over decades, trained

i BORDER CROSSING: DAWKI TO BANGLADESH

The border post is at Tamabil, 1.5km from Dawki market (a taxi costs ₹100). There are frequent Tamabil–Sylhet minibuses on the other side. The border is open from 9am to 6pm. There's no foreign-exchange booth here, but you might find helpful nonofficial personnel on the Bangladesh side.

across streams to form natural pathways. Three of these root bridges (including an amazing 'double-decker') are near Nongriat. Access is via the pretty village of Tyrna, 2km from Mawshamok. The round trip into the canyon where these root bridges stand is an eight-hour slog from Tyrna, involving a 2000-step ascent and descent through very steep terrain.

Although straggling for several kilometres, Cherrapunjee (known locally as Sohra) has a compact centre. Huddling beside the marketplace is the Sumo stand, with connections to Shillong (₹250, three hours).

Sleeping & Eating

Cherrapunjee Holiday Resort RESORT $$
(☎ 09436115925; www.cherrapunjee.com; Laitkynsew village; d from ₹2230; @) Run by a warm and affable Khasi lady and her South Indian husband, this delightful resort comprises an older building (with cheaper rooms thrown around a spacious refectory) and a new multistoreyed block (which has newer deluxe rooms). The home-cooked meals are simply fantastic. The resort provides guides for local hikes, and organises tented accommodation in the dry season.

A daily bus leaves nearby Laitkynsew village for Shillong (₹70, 6am). Going the other way it leaves Shillong at 1pm. Otherwise a taxi from Cherrapunjee costs ₹400.

Why Go?

Odisha (Orissa) slipped off the tourist radar once Puri's hippy-hangout days began to fade, but it's beginning to re-establish itself as an off-the-beaten-track favourite for more adventurous types. Those who make the effort are rewarded with an intricate patchwork of history, culture and natural beauty, along with a sprinkling of sun and sand.

The forested hills of the southwest (and overly officious bureaucracy) keep Adivasi (tribal) groups hidden from mainstream tourism, but it is still possible to visit their fascinating weekly markets. Forests elsewhere – both inland and along the coast – are home to some of Odisha's intriguing nature reserves – 6m-long crocodiles, anyone?

Foodies will relish a whole new set of regional flavours cooked up in Odishan kitchens, while history buffs will be left salivating over long-lost Buddhist universities, ancient Jain rock carvings and centuries-old Hindu relics, including Konark's unparalleled Sun Temple.

When to Go

History

Formerly known as Kalinga, Utkala and more recently Orissa, Odisha (per a long-standing name-change campaign that finally received government approval in 2010) was once a formidable maritime empire that had trading routes leading down into Indonesia, but its history is somewhat hazy until the demise of the Kalinga dynasty in 260 BC at the hands of the great emperor Ashoka. Appalled at the carnage he had caused, Ashoka forswore violence and converted to Buddhism.

Around the 1st century BC Buddhism declined and Jainism was restored as the faith of the people. During this period the monastery caves of Udayagiri and Khandagiri (in Bhubaneswar) were excavated as important Jain centres.

By the 7th century AD Hinduism had supplanted Jainism. Under the Kesari and Ganga kings, trade and commerce increased and Odishan culture flourished – countless temples from that classical period still stand. The Odishans defied the Muslim rulers in Delhi until finally falling to the Mughals during the 16th century, when many of Bhubaneswar's temples were destroyed.

Until Independence, Odisha was ruled by Afghans, Marathas and the British.

Since the 1990s a Hindu fundamentalist group, Bajrang Dal, has undertaken a violent campaign against Christians in Odisha in response to missionary activity. The often illiterate and dispossessed tribal people have suffered the most from the resulting communal violence, which has been as much about power, politics and land as religious belief.

Violence flared up again in 2008 after the killing of a Hindu leader in Kandhamal district, and thousands of Christians were moved to government relief camps outside the district after their homes were torched.

The creation of the neighbouring states of Jharkhand and Chhattisgarh has prompted calls for the formation of a separate, tribal-oriented state, Koshal, in the north-west of Odisha, with Sambalpur as the capital. A separatist political party, the Kosal Kranti Dal (KKD), fielded candidates in the 2009 state election and took to disruptive transport protests in 2010.

The last few years have seen something of an industrial boom in Odisha, with an influx of big steel plants and controversial mining projects.

Climate

Monsoonal rains and cyclones from July to October can seriously affect transport. Particularly devastating monsoonal disasters struck Odisha in 1999 and 2008, causing significant damage, loss of life and massive flooding.

Dangers & Annoyances

Mosquitoes in some parts here have a record of being dengue and malaria carriers. Arm yourself with repellent and cover up.

BHUBANESWAR

Once dubbed the 'Temple City', Bhubaneswar is an enthralling pit stop for a day or two as you take in the old city's holy centre around the ceremonial tank called Bindu Sagar. Here once stood thousands of medieval stone temples; now around 50 remain.

Sights

The best way to tour the temples is on foot. That way you have the opportunity to stumble across and explore some of the numerous smaller temples that dot the way. You could also consider hiring a cycle-rickshaw for a half-day tour (around ₹300 for four hours).

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Adivasi Mela (p604) Features art, dance and handicrafts of Odisha's tribal groups in Bhubaneswar.

Rath Yatra (p611) Immense chariots containing Lord Jagannath, brother Balabhadra and sister Subhadra are hauled from Jagannath Mandir (Puri's foremost Hindu temple) to Gundicha Mandir (a temple beside Puri's main bus stand).

Puri Beach Festival (p611) Song, dance, food and cultural activities on the beach in Puri.

Konark Festival (p614) Features traditional music and dance and a seductive temple ritual.

★ Lingaraj Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

The 54m-high Lingaraj Mandir, dedicated to Tribhuvaneshwar (Lord of Three Worlds), dates from 1090 to 1104 (though parts are over 1400 years old) and is surrounded by dozens of smaller temples and shrines. The granite block, representing Tribhuvaneshwar, is bathed daily with water, milk and bhang (marijuana). The main gate, guarded by two moustachioed yellow lions, is a spectacle in itself as lines of pilgrims approach, prasad (temple-blessed food offering) in hand.

Because the temple is surrounded by a wall, and closed to non-Hindus, foreigners can see it only from a viewing platform (this can also include foreign Hindus). Face the main entrance, walk right, then follow the wall around to the left and find the viewing platform on your left, just before you reach Chitrakarini Temple. There have been reports of aggressive hassling for 'donations' at the viewing platform. The money will not go to the temple; stand your ground and do not pay.

Mukteswar Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

The small but beautiful 10th-century Mukteswar Mandir is one of the most ornate temples in Bhubaneswar; you'll see representations of it on posters and brochures across Odisha. Intricate carvings show a mixture of Buddhist, Jain and Hindu styles – look for the Nagarani (Snake Queen), easily mistaken by Westerners for a mermaid, who you'll also see at the Raja Rani Mandir. The ceiling carvings and stone arch are particularly striking, as is the arched torana (architrave) at the front, clearly showing Buddhist influence.

Siddheswar Mandir, in the same compound, is a later but plainer temple with a fine red-painted Ganesh. Over the pathway is the whitewashed Kedargauri Mandir, one of the oldest temples in Bhubaneswar, although it has been substantially rebuilt.

Bus 225 goes past here en route to Dhauli.

Vaital Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

This 8th-century temple, with a double-storey 'wagon roof' influenced by Buddhist cave architecture, was a centre of tantric worship, eroticism and bloody sacrifice. Look closely and you'll see some very early erotic carvings on the walls. Chamunda (a fearsome incarnation of Devi), representing old age and death, can be seen in the din-

Parsurameswar Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

Just west of Lewis Rd lies a cluster of about 20 smaller but important temples. Best preserved is Parsurameswar Mandir, an ornate Shiva temple built around AD 650. It has lively bas-reliefs of elephant and horse processions, and Shiva images.

Raja Rani Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, camera ₹25; ☀ dawn-dusk) Built around 1100, this temple surrounded by manicured gardens is famous for its ornate deul (temple sanctuary) and tower. Around the compass points are pairs of statues representing eight dikpalas (temple guardians). Between them, nymphs, embracing couples, elephants and lions peer from niches and decorate the pillars.

Brahmeswar Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

Standing in well-kept gardens, flanked on its plinth by four smaller structures, this 9th-century temple is a smaller version of Lingaraj Mandir. It's notable for its finely detailed sculptures with erotic elements. Turn right at the 13th-century Bhaskareswa Temple.

★ Udayagiri & Khandagiri Caves

HISTORIC SITE

(admission both sites Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀ dawn-dusk) Six kilometres west of the city centre are two hills riddled with rock-cut shelters. Many are ornately carved and thought to have been chiselled out for Jain ascetics in the 1st century BC.

Ascending the ramp at Udayagiri (Sunrise Hill), note Swargapuri (Cave 9) to the right with its devotional figures. Hathi Gumphra (Cave 14) at the top has a 117-line inscription relating the exploits of its builder, King Kharavela of Kalinga, who ruled from 168 BC to 153 BC.

Bhubaneswar

Around to the left you'll see Bagh Gumpha (Tiger Cave; Cave 12), with its entrance carved as a tiger mouth. Nearby are Pavana Gumpha (Cave of Purification) and small Sarpa Gumpha (Serpent Cave), where the tiny door is surmounted by a three-headed cobra. On the summit are the remains of a defensive position. Around to the southeast is the single-storey elephant-guarded Ganesh Gumpha (Cave 10), almost directly above the two-storey Rani ka Naur (Queen's Palace Cave; Cave 1), carved with Jain symbols and battle scenes.

Continue back to the entrance via Chota Hathi Gumpha (Cave 3), with its carvings of elephants, and the double-storey Jaya Vijaya Cave (Cave 5), with a bodhi tree carved in the central area.

Across the road, Khandagiri offers fine views over Bhubaneswar from its summit. The steep path splits about one-third of the way up the hill. The right path goes to Ananta Cave (Cave 3), with its carved figures of athletes, women, elephants and geese carrying flowers. Further along is a series of Jain temples; at the top is another (18th-century) Jain temple.

Buses don't go to the caves, but some go close (Bus 801 to Baramunda bus stand, for example). A shared/private autorickshaw shouldn't cost much more than ₹20/200.

★ State Museum

MUSEUM

(www.odishamuseum.nic.in; Lewis Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/50, camera ₹10/100; ☀ 10am-4.30pm Tue-Sun) Odisha's best collection of rare palm-leaf manuscripts, as well as patachitra (Odishan cloth paintings), traditional and folk musical instruments, Bronze Age tools, an armoury, and an impressive collection of Buddhist, Jain and Brahmanical sculptures (look for the haunting 8th-century sculpture of Chamunda).

Museum of Tribal Arts & Artefacts MUSEUM
 (☀️ 10am-5pm Tue-Sun) FREE For anyone considering a visit to the tribal areas, this museum is recommended. Dress, ornaments, weapons, household implements and musical instruments are displayed. The museum is located off National Hwy 5; bus 801 goes close to here – up Azad Marg, before turning left to Baramunda bus stand.

🛏 Sleeping

Most hotels have 24-hour checkout. Many cheaper hotels don't accept foreigners.

Railway Retiring Rooms RETIRING ROOM $ (Platform 1, Bhubaneswar Railway Station; dm ₹70-280, r ₹250-500, with AC ₹450-900; 🚿) These large but simple rooms are the cheapest place foreigners can stay in Bhubaneswar. Rooms are in a quiet corner of the station, but it's still a train station so pretty noisy. Secure your room at the booking window beside 'Enquiries', which is just inside the station's main entrance.

Hotel Nirmal Inn HOTEL $
(☎0674-2534411; Rajpath; s/d from ₹600/700) Not accustomed to taking foreign guests (you may be asked to provide your own photocopy of your passport and visa), but does accept them with a smile. This no-frills place has good-value rooms, which are small but clean and modern. Has a restaurant, but no internet.

Hotel Richi HOTEL $
(☎9437012316, 2534619; www.richihotels.com; 122A Station Sq; s ₹500-550, d ₹750-950, with AC from ₹1350, all incl breakfast; 🚿) Unfriendly, but will accept foreigners (although they'll try to steer you towards the AC rooms). Rooms don't have hot water, but are decent value for Bhubaneswar, and the location is about as central as it gets, which also means it fills up fast. You can only book one day in advance.

Hotel Upasana HOTEL $$
(☎2310044; upasana_bbsr@rediffmail.com; 2282 Laxmisagar, off Cuttack Rd; s/d ₹850/1000; 🚿@📺) One of the friendliest guesthouses in town, this family-run place, located behind Bhubaneswar Hotel, has bright, airy rooms with hot showers and small balconies. There are computer terminals in the lobby and wi-fi extends to some rooms. No restaurant.

ODISHA'S INDIGENOUS TRIBES

Sixty-two Adivasi (tribal) groups live in an area that encompasses Odisha, Chhattisgarh and Andhra Pradesh. In Odisha they account for one-quarter of the state's population and mostly inhabit the jungles and hilly regions of the centre and southwest. Their distinctive cultures are expressed in music, dance and arts.

Of the more populous tribes, the Kondh number about one million and are based around Koraput in the southwest, Rayagada and the Kandhamel district in the central west. The 500,000-plus Santal live around Baripada and Khiching in the far north. The 300,000 Saura live near Gunupur near the border with Andhra Pradesh. The Bonda, known as the 'Naked People' for wearing minimal clothing but incredibly colourful and intricate accessories, have a population of about 5000 and live in the hills near Koraput.

As of 2012, permission from the District Collector was required to visit specific areas designated as home to Particularly Vulnerable Tribal Groups (PVTGs) and bans on overnight lodging, private home visits, photographs and video had all been put in place. It is possible to visit tribal regions independently (see the Koraput section for details), but most travellers choose a customised tour, organised through private tour agencies in Bhubaneswar or Puri.

(📍 9040402003, 0674 2535894; 59 Janpath; s/d ₹1200/1400, with AC ₹1300/1500; 🍷) Simple, straightforward midrange hotel with clean spacious rooms, hot showers and cable TV. No internet or restaurant.

Hotel Grand Central

HOTEL $$

(📍 0674-2313411; www.hotelgrandcentral.com; Old Station Bazaar; s/d incl breakfast from ₹2100/2300; 🍷🍷) Whitewashed corridors and marble floors lead to smart, well-fitted rooms at this new business-class hotel, located just behind the train station. Rates include wi-fi. There's a restaurant, bar and car rental.

New Marrion

HOTEL $$$

(📍 2380850; www.hotelnewmarrion.com; 6 Janpath; r from ₹3800; 🍷@🍷🍷) Great value for a top-end hotel, Marrion has rooms with a contemporary, classy design – LCD TVs, dark-wood panelling and a small sofa space. Restaurants include South Indian, Italian-Mexican combo and Chinese, a great kebab house, a Café Coffee Day in the building out front and a contemporary Scottish bar. There's a Thai spa to round off the allure, and service is top-notch.

Eating*★ Dalma

ODISHAN $

(Lewis Rd; mains ₹50-150, thali ₹110-200; ☀️ noon-10.30pm) Down some steps from Lewis Rd, this small Bhubaneswar chain is widely regarded by locals as the best place in town to sample authentic Odia cuisine, including aloo bharta (a delicious mashed potato and aubergine combination), dalma (the restaurant's speciality dhal dish, cooked with coconut), chhena poda (Odisha's cottage-cheese dessert from heaven) and numerous Odishan thalis.

It's nothing flash – there's a canteen feel to the place, with dishes served on metal trays – but the food is nothing short of sensational, especially when you consider the prices. First-time visitors to the region will welcome the well-translated menu with clear, English descriptions of every dish.

Khana Khazana

INDIAN $

(Kalpana Sq; mains ₹40-140; ☀️ 5.30-10.30pm) This long-standing evening-only street stall – with plastic chairs and tables spread across the pavement – does a bang-up job with tandoori chicken, delicious chow mein and tasty biryanis. The chicken dum bir-

ODIA CUISINE

Mustard is the staple in Odishan kitchens, used ubiquitously in seed, paste and oil forms, giving many Odia dishes a distinct pungent flavour. A typical meal consists of bhata (rice) served alongside a variety of tasty side dishes such as kaharu phula bhaja (fried pumpkin flower); dalma (dhal cooked with pumpkin, potato, plantains and eggplant, then fried in a five-spice oil of fenugreek, cumin, black cumin, anise and mustard, topped with grated coconut); and besara (vegetables or river fish with mustard-paste gravy). Saga bhaja – leafy greens lightly fried with garlic paste and a five-seed mixture called pancha phutan (cumin, mustard, anise, black cumin and chilli) – is also a treat here. On the coast, fish and prawns are omnipresent: sarison macha is a superb favourite fish dish cooked in a mustard-based curry.

yani (₹90) is particularly popular with the locals, as are the great-value rolls (roti wraps that come with various fillings and are a speciality of Kolkata; ₹35 to ₹50).

Truptee

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Cuttack Rd; mains ₹50-130; ☀️ 7am-10.30pm) A great choice for South Indian breakfasts, this clean, family-friendly restaurant does a fine line in dosas (paper-thin lentil-flour pancake), vada (doughnut-shaped deep-fried lentil savoury) and idli (spongy, fermented rice cake) before bringing out the curries and tandoor flat breads later in the day. Also does thalis (₹80 to ₹120).

Sri Ram Mandir Tiffin Centre

ODISHAN $

(Janpath; dishes ₹5-20; ☀️ 6.30am-9pm) Dahi vada (vada in a slightly spicy yoghurt sauce) is the classic Odishan breakfast dish, and locals flock to this street-side stall beside Sri Ram Mandir Temple to have their fill of it, along with other tasty offerings such as samosas, aloo chops (deep-fried potato snack) and small portions of veg curry.

There's no seating; punters just stand on the pavement, breakfast tray in one hand, spoon in the other. There's also no menu, but the food is laid out on the counter, canteen style, so just point, pay and tuck in.

WORTH A TRIP

SLEEP LIKE A KING

Located a mere 3km from the Dhenkanal train station (an easy train ride from Bhubaneswar), the wonderful Gajlaxmi Palace (☎9861011221; www.gajlaxmipalace.com; s/d incl meals & nature walk ₹3000/6000), tucked away amid stunning scenery in the untapped forests of the Dhenkanal district, dates back to 1935. The palace belonged to Rajkumar Shri Shesh Pratap Singh Deo, a member of the Dhenkanal royal family. Today, his grandson, JP Singh Deo, and Navneeta, his lovely wife, have opened up two rooms inside their tranquil slice of royal history to guests.

Sleeping here is like overnighing in a museum – the whole place is chock full of Singh Deo's antiques collected around the world and the whole place lives and breathes of decadent days gone by. The surrounding forest hides at least 22 wild elephants, a common sight on JP's morning and evening nature walks. Wild boar, jungle fowl and barking deer also roam freely outside the palace doors. JP grew up here and is ever too pleased to take you to rarely visited Sabara tribal villages or nearby Joranda Temples, or spin tales of elephant and tiger kills in crazier days over wonderful meals sourced from their own organic gardens. Paradise found.

★ Odisha Hotel

ODISHAN $$

(☎9437419279; Market Bldg, Sahid Nagar; thali ₹140-340; ☎12.30-4pm) This dead-simple lunchtime-only restaurant is one of the best spots to try authentic Odia cuisine, served in huge proportions thali-style in traditional bell-metal dishware. The menu board is entirely in Odia, so just order veg or nonveg (not always available) and sit back and await this Hindu last supper!

Make sure you ask for a small spread, and double check the price of it before you tuck in. Otherwise you'll be given the enormous ₹340 thali, which one person could never finish. To get here, walk or take a shared autorickshaw (₹5) along Janpath to Sahid Nagar (the name of the area the restaurant is in). Still on Janpath, turn right beside Panda Lifestyle shopping centre, which is just past the easier-to-spot Khimji wedding store. The restaurant is about 500m along this side road; go straight over the crossroads, then take the right fork and it's on your right.

★ Hare Krishna Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Lalchand Market Complex, Janpath; mains ₹100-220; ☎11.30am-3.30pm & 7pm-10.45pm) The beautifully lacquered Gujarati sankheda furniture stands out at this stylish but unpretentious veg restaurant where you can enjoy delicious curries, biryanis and tandoor flat breads in a soothing atmosphere. Enter through Lalchand shopping complex.

★ Maurya Gardens

INDIAN, CHINESE $$

(Station Sq; mains ₹100-250; ☎noon-11pm) This small, low-lit, AC-cooled restaurant is a welcome respite from the train station chaos outside. The curries (veg and nonveg) are nice and hot, but you can cool them down with a beer (from ₹165).

★ Drinking & Nightlife

Local bars and bottle shops are dotted around the city, often attached to a hotel or restaurant. There's a clutch of them by the train station and along Cuttack Rd.

★ BNC

CAFE

(Brown n Cream; Janpath; ☎8am-10.30pm) AC-cooled coffee shop with good-value fresh coffee (₹60), plus sandwiches, muffins and ice cream.

★ Shopping★ Ekamra Haat

MARKET

(www.ekamrahaat.in; Madhusudan Marg; ☎10am-10pm) A wide-ranging exposition of Odishan handicrafts (and snack stalls) can be found at this permanent market, located within pleasant, well-tended gardens.

★ Utkalika

HANDICRAFTS

(Odisha State Handloom Cooperative; Eastern Tower, Market Bldg; ☎10am-8.30pm) Located in the busy all-day market streets known as Market Building, the state-government emporium features Odishan textiles, including appliqué and ikat (a technique involving tie-dyeing the thread before it's woven), as well as some traditional palm-leaf paintings.

i Information

ATMs are plentiful along Janpath and Cuttack Rd. There's also a couple at the train station.

Apollo Hospital (☎ 0674-2301819, 0674-6660413; www.apollohospitals.com; Plot No 251, Old Sainik School Rd; ☎ 24hr) A new modern private medical facility with 24-hour trauma centre and pharmacy; it's where you want to be if you're ill.

Cyber Cafe (Janpath; per hour ₹30; ☎ 9am-10pm)

India Tourism (www.incredibleindia.org; Paryatan Bhavan, 2nd fl, Lewis Rd; ☎ 9am-6pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) Dishes out national information. Located in the same building as Odisha Tourism.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Bhubaneswar's modern Biju Patnaik Airport is just a couple of kilometres from the centre.

A number of airlines have ticket offices at the airport, including IndiGo (☎ 0674-2596174; www.goindigo.in), GoAir (www.goair.in) and Air India (www.airindia.com; Rajpath; ☎ 10am-4.45pm Mon-Sat), which between them fly daily to Delhi, Kolkata, (Bengaluru) Bangalore and Mumbai.

BUS

For most destinations northeast of Bhubaneswar, it's quicker catching a bus to Cuttack's Badambari bus stand and then catching an onwards service from there. To get to Cuttack, either take a bus from Baramunda bus stand, or take Bus 324 from the Master Canteen bus stand, or jump on any bus heading east along Cuttack Rd.

To reach Baramunda bus stand, catch bus 801 from Master Canteen bus stand (₹10, 20 minutes).

Services from Baramunda bus stand (National Hwy 5) include:

Baripada ₹270, six hours, hourly 9am to 11pm

Berhampur ₹140, four hours, every two hours

Cuttack ₹20, one hour, frequent

Jeypore seat/sleeper ₹550/600, 13 hours, 6pm, 7pm, 8pm and 8.30pm

Kolkata non-AC seat/sleeper ₹300/700, AC seat/sleeper ₹400/900, 12 hours, frequent 6.30pm to 9.30pm

Konark ₹50, two hours, frequent

Puri ₹40, 1¼ hours, frequent

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

SATKOSIA GORGE SANCTUARY

This 525-sq-km forested sanctuary (☎ 8763102681; www.satkosia.org; per day Indian/foreigner ₹20/1000; ☎ 6am-6pm) is straddled by a breathtaking gorge, cut by the mighty Mahanadi River, and is one of the most beautiful natural spots in Odisha. The sanctuary as a whole is home to significant populations of gharial and mugger crocodiles, plus 38 species of mammal, including elephants, leopards, sambar deer, wild dogs, jackals, giant squirrels and around a dozen tigers. However, this is not a place to come for a wildlife safari; tourists are not allowed inside the park's core zone, where most of the wildlife is found, and 4WD safaris are not on offer. The main appeal of coming here is the opportunity to spend some time deep inside the protected forests of a stunning national park. The setting is gloriously peaceful and you can spot crocs in the crocodile sanctuary or on the riverbank if you take a boat trip from Tikarpada.

The main entry gate of the reserve is at Pampasar, 30km southwest of Angul. Satkosia Wildlife Division (☎ 8763102681; Hakimpada, Angul) manages four or five sets of accommodation that are run by local communities. The nicest is the new Nature Camp Chhotkei (s/d incl meals, guide & nature hike ₹3000/3500) 🍴, where you'll find five spacious eco-cottages. Meals are simple but tasty and served proudly and substantially by villagers. Simpler cottages and tents are available at Nature Camp Purunakote (tent/cottage per person ₹1000/1200). Meals here cost an extra ₹500 per person per day, although there are cheaper restaurants in the village. Nature Camp Tikarpada (tent incl meals & nature hike ₹1800-2200; ☎ Dec-Mar) has the most spectacular setting, perched above the golden-sand beaches of the Mahanadi River with the gorge as a scenic backdrop. Tented accommodation here is basic – even the 'deluxe' tents have outhouse bathrooms, albeit private ones, and the standard tents have no showers. As at Chhotkei, rates include meals and a morning nature hike, which here includes a visit to the nearby crocodile sanctuary. Boat rides (₹1000) along the river are also available.

You'll need to stop by Satkosia Wildlife Division in Angul for permissions and reservations – a mere formality, but bring a copy of your passport and visa. The office is a 1km walk from the bus stand; turn left at the restaurant called Hotel Sagar, then left at the green cavalryman statue, keep walking to the end of the road, turn left and the office is on your right. From the train station it costs ₹100 in an autorickshaw. If you get stuck in Angul, Hotel Santi (☎ 06764-230386; www.santihotels.com; Bus Stand, Angul; s/d ₹750/1000, with AC ₹1500/1800; 🍴 📶), overlooking the bus stand, has comfortable rooms, a good restaurant and free wi-fi. It can also arrange a car and driver for you to visit Satkosia; expect to pay around ₹2000, leaving one day and returning the next.

Four buses go from Angul bus stand to Tikarpada (₹35, 2½ hours, 6am, 9.30am, 3.30pm and 5pm), via the park gate at Pampasar, where you're supposed to pay your park fees (travellers sometimes get away without paying this if travelling by bus), the turn-off for Chhotkei (5km from the main road) and Purunakote. Return buses leave Tikarpada at 6.30am, 10.30am and 1pm.

From Angul bus stand there are frequent buses to Bhubaneswar (₹100/140, four hours) and Cuttack (non-AC/AC ₹80/110, three hours) between 6am and 6pm.

The quickest way to get to Angul from Bhubaneswar is on either the 12893 Bhubaneswar–Balangir Express (2nd class/AC chair ₹70/222, 2¼ hours, 6.45am) or the 18106 Bhubaneswar–Rourkella Express (2nd class/AC chair ₹70/222, two hours and 10 minutes, 1.40pm). There are at least four other slightly slower daily trains. Returning, the Bhubaneswar–Balangir Express (now numbered 12894) leaves Angul for Bhubaneswar at 7.35pm.

Kolkata 2nd class/sleeper ₹140/290, seven to eight hours, seven daily (7.55am to 11.55pm)

Puri 2nd-class unreserved seat from ₹15, two hours, more than a dozen (7am to midnight)

i Getting Around

BUS

Bhubaneswar has a relatively foreigner-friendly numbered city-bus system that runs between 7am and 9pm from the bus stand known as Master Canteen, right by the train station. Double check your bus is going where you want it to, as some bus numbers run along more than one route.

Note that for Puri, it's cheaper to catch a private bus (₹40) from outside the State Museum.

City buses leaving from Master Canteen bus stand:

Airport Bus 207A, ₹10, 15 minutes

Baramunda bus stand Bus 801, ₹10, 20 minutes

Dhaulti Bus 225, ₹10, 30 minutes

Lingaraj Temple Bus 333, ₹10, 20 minutes

Mayfair Hotel Bus 207N, ₹10, 20 minutes

Mukteswar Temple Bus 225, ₹10, 15 minutes

Pipli Bus 701, ₹50, 50 minutes

Puri Bus 701, ₹100, two hours

Udayagiri Caves Bus 801 or 405

CAR

OTDC (p603) offers car-and-driver services for tours around the area. For destinations within 200km, the charges are ₹110 per hour and ₹11 per kilometre for an AC Indigo, or ₹72 per hour and ₹7 per kilometre for a non-AC Ambassador. Book in person at least a day in advance.

TAXI/AUTORICKSHAW

An autorickshaw/taxi to the airport costs ₹50/250. There's a prepaid taxi stand at the airport. Autorickshaws are allowed to drop-off passengers at the airport, but they're not really supposed to pick-up from there, so you may have to walk to the main road to hail one.

AROUND BHUBANESWAR

Chausath Yogini

Rediscovered in the 1950s among rice fields 15km south of the city, this small but serene 9th-century open-roofed temple is dedicated to yoginis (female goddess attendants) and is one of only four of its kind in India. The temple – no larger than a village hut – contains 64 (chausath) carved yoginis, each shown standing on top of her vaharna (vehicle; often in animal form). Few tourists make it out here, which adds to the tranquility of the location, beside a large pond and surrounded by farmland.

While you're here, don't miss visiting the fascinating Soumya Handicraft (Chausath Yogini, Hirapur; ☎8am-5pm), the small workshop-gallery of a local artist who paints, carves and sells his work from his home, close to the temple. On display are fabulously detailed patachitra (₹500 to ₹2000), quirky brightly painted whiskey and beer bottles (₹200 to ₹800) and some stunning palm-leaf scroll carvings (₹200 to ₹8000). Some pieces are distinctly tribal Odishan in design, others have Buddhist influences or a Hindu tantric flavour. His palm-leaf representations of the yoginis make wonderfully unique souvenirs.

No buses come out this way, so you'll have to take an autorickshaw. Expect to pay around ₹100 to ₹150 one-way from Tankapani Rd, and more like ₹200 from Cuttack Rd. Note that not everyone has heard of this place, so you may have to ask more than one driver before you get a response. The temple is pronounced 'chorsat jorgini' in Odia.

Dhaulti

In about 260 BC, 11 of Ashoka's 14 famous edicts were carved onto a large rock at Dhaulti, 8km south of Bhubaneswar. The rock, now a small tourist attraction called the Ashokan Rock Edicts, is protected by a grill-fronted facade. A large sign offers English translations of each edict. Above the edicts, on top of a mound, is a carved elephant, representing Buddha, seemingly emerging from a small rock.

Just beyond the rock edicts is the huge, white Shanti Stupa (Peace Pagoda), built by Japanese monks in 1972 on a hill to the right. Older Buddhist reliefs are set into the modern structure, and there are great views of the surrounding countryside from the top.

Bus 225 goes to Dhaulti (₹10, 30 minutes) from Bhubaneswar's Master Canteen bus stand. From the turn-off, it's a pleasant, largely tree-shaded 3km walk to the rock edicts (on your left), and then a short, steep walk to the stupa (slightly further along on your right). Alternatively take a shared/private autorickshaw (₹5/50 one-way) from the turn-off. You can continue on to Puri from the turn-off, flagging down any bus passes.

Pipli

This colourful town, 16km southeast of Bhubaneswar, is notable for its brilliant appliqué craft, which incorporates small mirrors and is used for door and wall hangings and the more traditional canopies hung over Jagannath and family during festival time. Lampshades and parasols hanging outside the shops turn the main road into an avenue of rainbow colours. The work is still done by local families in workshops behind the shops; you may be able to go back and have a look. During Diwali, it's particularly vibrant. Pipli is easily accessible by any bus between Bhubaneswar and Puri or Konark.

SOUTHEASTERN ODISHA

Southeastern Odisha hugs the coast of the Bay of Bengal and is home to the state's most visited spots, including the backpacker outpost of Puri and the Unesco-protected Sun Temple at Konark.

Puri

Hindu pilgrims, Indian holidaymakers and foreign travellers all make their way to Puri, setting up camp in different parts of town. For Hindus, Puri is one of the holiest pilgrimage places in India, with religious life revolving around the great Jagannath Mandir and its famous Rath Yatra (Car Festival). The town's other attraction is its long, sandy beach – better for strolling than swimming.

In the 1970s, travellers on the hippie trail through Southeast Asia were attracted here by the sea and bhang (marijuana), which is legal in Shiva's Puri. There's little trace of that scene today (though the bhang hasn't departed); travellers come just to hang out and recharge their backpacking spirit.

The action is along a few kilometres of coast. The backpacker part of town is bunched up towards the eastern end of Chakra Tirtha (CT) Rd, while Bengali holidaymakers flock to busy New Marine Rd, where there is lots of hang-out action on the long esplanade.

i Dangers & Annoyances

Muggings and attacks on women have been reported along isolated stretches of beach, even during the day, so take care. Ocean currents can become treacherous in Puri, and drownings are not uncommon, so don't venture out beyond your depth. Ask one of the nolias (fishermen/lifeguards), with their white-painted, cone-shaped wicker hats, for the best spots and keep a look out for Sea Riders, a group of traditional fishermen turned lifeguards through an initiative of a local NGO.

👁 Sights

Jagannath Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

This mighty temple belongs to Jagannath (Lord of the Universe), an incarnation of Vishnu. The jet-black deity with large, round, white eyes is hugely popular across Odisha; figures of Jagannath are tended and regularly dressed in new clothes at shrines across the state. Built in its present form in 1198, the temple (closed to non-Hindus) is surrounded by two walls, but you can spot its 58m-high sikhara (spire) topped by the flag and wheel of Vishnu.

Guarded by two stone lions and a pillar crowned by the Garuda that once stood at the Sun Temple at Konark, the eastern entrance (Lion Gate) is the passageway for the chariot procession of Rath Yatra.

Jagannath, brother Balbhadr and sister Subhadra reside supreme in the central jagamohan (assembly hall). Priests continually garland and dress the three throughout the day for different ceremonies. The temple employs about 6000 men to perform the complicated rituals involved in caring for the gods. An estimated 20,000 people – divided into 36 orders and 97 classes – are dependent on Jagannath for their livelihood.

Non-Hindus can spy from the roof of Raghnandan Library (cnr Temple & Swargadwar Rds; ☎ 9am-1.30pm & 4-6pm Mon-Sat) opposite; a 'donation', while not officially compulsory, is expected (₹10 is fine, though they will ask for more). The library is closed on Sunday, so touts who will help you to a nearby rooftop prey on tourists and demand ₹100 – easily negotiated down to ₹50. Enter around the back of the building to the right-hand side and follow the arrows and signs through a fascinating ruined monastery.

Model Beach

BEACH

(www.puribeach.net) 🌴 Puri is no palm-fringed paradise – the beach is wide, shelves quickly with a nasty shore break and is shadeless – but the newly crowned Model Beach, part of a sustainable, community-run beach tourism initiative, offers a 700m stretch of sand that's easily Puri's finest and cleanest. Palm umbrellas provide shade and cabana boys/lifeguards, known as Sea Riders, hawk fixed-price beach chairs (₹20) and massages (₹50 to ₹200) and are responsible for keeping the beach clean.

Swargdwar

SACRED SITE

(off New Marine Rd; 🕒 24hr) These hallowed cremation grounds are the end stop of choice for Eastern India's Hindu population and beyond – some 40 bodies are cremated here daily. One can watch or walk among the open-air ceremonies providing you behave in a respectful manner and avoid taking photos. It's an obviously solemn affair, but a fascinating glimpse into Puri's role as one of India's holiest cities.

🌿 Bubu is a tribal and cultural tourism veteran whose tour company focuses on rural and special-interest ethnic tourism. In addition to multiday tribal tours and car hire, Heritage also offers cycle-rickshaw tours (two hours ₹300) around the backstreets of old Puri, and Odishan-cuisine cookery classes (half-day ₹500) at the excellent Wildgrass Restaurant (p613), also owned by Bubu.

Heritage is interesting for its 'Green Riders' program, in which 75 cycle-rickshaw riders are trained in fixed pricing, self-respect and why spiking prices for foreign tourists is uncool. That said, we found we still had to negotiate fares with them! Bubu's latest venture is the beautiful tribal-region countryside retreat, Desia (p621).

Grass Routes

DON'T MISS

CHHENA PODA

Puri Cheesecake (Temple Rd, Dolanadap Sahi; per piece ₹16; 🕒 7am-11pm) The narrow lanes of Puri's holy quarter are full of makeshift sweet shops, perhaps none more famous than Puri Cheesecake. Bikram Sahoo and his six brothers have been churning out this unique Odishan delight, known as chhena poda (burnt cheese), for 45 years. It's cottage cheese, sugar and cardamom cooked in an iron pan over an open flame – a real treat. Though it's more like a flan than traditional cheesecake, it's off the mark by name only.

To find it, walk down Temple Rd from Jagganath Mandir, pass a small public square about 300m on the right, and it's another 100m on your right next door to Jagganath Pump House.

Rooms are large and airy, and come with high ceilings, chunky wooden furniture and spotless bathrooms (including the shared one). Management is far from helpful, but once you're in you can safely ignore them. There's a restaurant, evening films shown in the TV room, and wi-fi in common areas.

Mayfair

HOTEL $$$

(☎️ 227800; www.mayfairhotels.com; off CT Rd; d incl breakfast & dinner from ₹11,000; 📶📶📶) The benchmark for Puri luxury, this modern hotel has two buildings side by side. The 12-year-old Mayfair Heritage has rooms (₹10,750) and cottages (₹12,900), all with sea views, dotted around freshly clipped gardens, while the brand new Mayfair Waves has luxury rooms (₹12,900) and suites (₹16,000) as well as a gym and spa.

Both buildings have garden pools and top-notch restaurants, and guests can use facilities at either.

Eating & Drinking

A few restaurants (such as Peace and Jabari Garden) can 'find' a beer for you, but be discreet.

Peace Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $

(CT Rd; mains ₹35-250; ☎️ 7am-4pm & 6-11pm) This Puri stalwart, with seating in a shaded front courtyard, is still the most pleasant budget option, doing nice work with Western breakfasts and pasta, but excelling at Indian food. Save room for the house dessert, a fried empanada-like banana or apple turnover laced with sugar, cinnamon and honey.

Jabari Garden Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $

(CT Rd; mains ₹60-150; ☎️ 8.30am-3pm & 6-10.30pm) This place is popular with Puri long-termers and does decent Western comfort food as well as excellent local fare. The garden is a dazzle of fairy lights come evening.

★ Wildgrass Restaurant

ODISHAN $$

(☎️ 9437023656; VIP Rd; mains ₹80-200, thali ₹100-220; ☎️ 11am-11pm) A delightful restaurant, Wildgrass has an AC-cooled main room, but it's more fun to sit outside at one of the thatched pavilions dotted around the lush garden. The menu is superb, with local and regional specialities categorised by their origins (Odishan, Chilikan and Puriwala).

Ask about its Odishan-cuisine cooking classes (₹500), which include a morning trip to the local food market to buy the ingredients with which you'll be cooking your lunch.

Honey Bee Bakery & Pizzeria

CAFE $$

(CT Rd; pizza & mains ₹80-300; ☎️ 8.30am-2pm & 6-10pm) Pizzas and pancakes, espresso-machine coffee (₹70), toasted sandwiches and breakfast fry-ups (including bacon!) – all the comforts of home are here at this cute and clean cafe-restaurant with rooftop seating.

Grand

NORTH INDIAN $$

(☎️ 222829; Grand Centre, Grand Rd; mains ₹80-130; ☎️ 11.30am-3.30pm & 7.30-10.30pm) This large, pure-veg locals' favourite offers plenty of off-menu dishes, so even if you don't see the bhindi chatpati (okra), gobi Hyderabadi (cauliflower), or kadhai veg (creamy curried vegies) on the menu, ask for them anyway. Also has a healthy list of dosas (₹30 to ₹75).

A bonus to the fab food is the open-air terrace, from which there are striking views of Jagannath Mandir and the hubbub of Grand Rd below. From the temple, it's 100m down Grand Rd.

BUS

The easiest way to Bhubaneswar is Bus 171 (₹100, two hours), which leaves from Medical Sq on Grand Rd every 30 to 45 minutes between 7.45am and 5.30pm and will drop you at the Master Canteen bus stand, next to Bhubaneswar's train station. But private buses, leaving from the same place, are cheaper (₹40, two hours).

Frequent buses to Konark (₹25, 45 minutes) leave from the Konark bus stand. The last bus back is at 6.30pm.

Next to the Konark bus stand is the sprawling main bus stand (☎ 224461), where frequent buses head to Bhubaneswar (₹40, two hours), Cuttack (₹50, 2½ hours) and Satapada (₹33, two to three hours), as well as AC (seat/sleeper ₹550/580, 13 hours, 6pm to 8pm) and non-AC (seat ₹350, 13 hours, from 3pm) buses to Kolkata.

For Pipli and Raghurajpur, take a Bhubaneswar bus.

TRAIN

At least a dozen daily trains go to Bhubaneswar (2nd-class unreserved seat ₹10 to ₹50, two hours, from 6am to 11.50pm). The daily 58417 Puri-GNPR Express goes to Brahmapur (2nd-class seat ₹40, 4½ hours) at 8am. The 12801 Purushottam Express heads to Delhi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹715/1860/2720, 31 hours) at 9.45pm, while the 18410 Sri Jagannath Express leaves for Kolkata (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹300/805/1150, 10 hours) at 10.30pm.

i Getting Around

A few places along CT Rd rent bicycles (per day ₹50), mopeds (per day ₹250) and motorbikes (per day ₹350).

From CT Rd, cycle-rickshaws charge about ₹30 to the train station and ₹40 to ₹50 to the bus stands or Jagannath Mandir.

Raghurajpur

The fascinating artists' village of Raghurajpur, 14km north of Puri, is two streets and 120 thatched brick houses adorned with murals of geometric patterns and mythological scenes – a traditional art form that has almost died out in Odisha.

The village is most famous for its pat-achitra (Odishan cloth paintings). With eye-aching attention and a very fine brush, artists mark out animals, flowers, deities and demons, which are then illuminated with bright colours. It makes for very beautiful and unique souvenirs.

Take the Bhubaneswar bus from Puri and look for the 'Raghurajpur The Craft Village' signpost 11km north of Puri, then walk the last 1km. Don't get cornered by the few shops that have set up first but which are technically outside the village itself.

Konark

The iconic Sun Temple at Konark – listed as a Unesco World Heritage Site – is one of India's signature buildings and Odisha's raison d'être. Most visitors are day-trippers from Bhubaneswar or Puri, which makes sense, as Konark isn't a particularly nice place to stay. However, you might want to consider staying a bit closer, at one of the excellent coastal retreats (p616) located just a few kilometres away, between here and Puri.

Originally nearer the coast (the sea has receded 3km), Konark was visible from far out at sea and known as the 'Black Pagoda' by sailors, in contrast to Puri's whitewashed Jagannath. The inland lighthouse near Chandrabhaga Beach is an odd testament to that fact.

★ Festivals & Events

Konark Festival

DANCE

(☎ 1-5 Dec) Steeped in traditional music and dance, the Konark Festival takes place in the open-air auditorium with the gorgeous Sun Temple as a backdrop.

SUN TEMPLE

The massive Sun Temple (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25, guide per hr ₹150; ☀ dawn-8pm) was constructed in the mid-13th century, probably by Odishan king Narashimhadev I to celebrate his military victory over the Muslims, and was in use for maybe only three centuries. In the late 16th century the 40m-high sikhara (spire) partially collapsed: speculation about causes ranges from marauding Mughals removing the copper over the cupola to a ransacking Kalapahad displacing the Dadhinauti (arch stone), to simple wear and tear from recurring cyclones – the truth was apparently lost with Konark's receding shoreline.

The entire temple was conceived as the cosmic chariot of the sun god Surya. Seven mighty prancing horses (representing the days of the week) rear at the strain of moving this stone leviathan on 24 stone cartwheels (representing the hours of the day) that stand around the base. The temple was positioned so that dawn light would illuminate the deul (temple sanctuary) interior and the presiding deity, which may have been moved to Jagannath Mandir in Puri in the 17th century – the interior of the temple was filled in with stone in 1903 'in order to preserve this superb specimen of old Indian architecture'.

The gajasimha (main entrance) is guarded by two stone lions crushing elephants and leads to the intricately carved nriya mandapa (dancing hall). Steps, flanked by straining horses, rise to the still-standing jagamohan (assembly hall). Behind is the spireless deul, with its three impressive chlorite images of Surya aligned to catch the sun at dawn, noon and sunset.

The base and walls present a chronicle in stone of Kalinga life; you'll see women cooking and men hunting. Many are in the erotic style for which Konark is famous and include entwined couples as well as solitary exhibitionists.

Guides can be useful here as the temple's history is a complicated amalgam of fact and legend, and religious and secular imagery, and the guides' explanations can be thought provoking. But make sure you get a government-approved one; the tourist office at Yatrinivas hotel, beside the Archaeological Museum, can help.

Sleeping & Eating

Suntemple Hotel

INDIAN $$

(☎ 236890; Bus Stand Rd; mains ₹60-200; ☀ 8am-3.30pm & 6-10pm) A busy, friendly, AC restaurant with a big range of Indian veg and nonveg dishes, as well as traveller favourites such as chips and banana pancakes. Also has a few simple rooms (r ₹400-500, with AC ₹800) out back if you get stuck here. It's right by the bus drop-off, two minutes walk from Sun Temple.

Information

There's an ATM and a couple of internet cafes in the dusty lane leading to Sun Temple. Restaurants and cheap hotels cluster the main road by the bus drop-off. The bus stand is set back from the main road, 200m further away from the temple.

Getting There & Away

Bus 441 is the most comfortable to Puri (₹40, one hour), but cheaper, more frequent private buses (₹25) also ply the route. There are also frequent departures to Bhubaneswar (₹45, two hours).

Chilika Lake

Chilika Lake is Asia's largest brackish lagoon. Swelling from 600 sq km in April and May to 1100 sq km in the monsoon, the shallow lake is separated from the Bay of Bengal by a 60km-long sand bar called Rajhansa.

The lake is noted for the million-plus migratory birds – including grey-legged geese, herons, cranes and pink flamingos – that flock here in winter (from November to mid-January) from as far away as Siberia and Iran and concentrate in a 3-sq-km area within the bird sanctuary on Nalabana Island.

Other attractions are rare Irrawaddy dolphins near Satapada, the pristine beach along Rajhansa, and Kalijai Island temple where Hindu pilgrims flock for the Makar Mela festival in January.

Satapada

📍 06752

Little more than a bus stand, a hotel, and a cluster of road-shack restaurants beside a jetty, the tiny village of Satapada, on a headland jutting southwards into Chilika Lake, is the starting point for dolphin-spotting boat trips; the boats usually cruise towards the new sea mouth for a paddle in the sea and some dolphin- and bird-spotting en route. Travellers have reported dolphins being (illegally) herded and otherwise harassed; make it clear you don't want this.

OTDC (📍 262077; Yatrivas Hotel; per person ₹180-250) runs a three-hour tour of the lake which leaves from between 9.30am and 10am each morning. Price per person depends on the group size.

Dolphin Motor Boat Association (📍 7377653372; Satapada Jetty; 1½hr/3hr/4hr/8hr trips per boat ₹1900/2100/2400/3700), a cooperative of local boat owners, has set-price trips that include dolphin sightseeing, Nalabana Bird Sanctuary and Kalijai Island temple. Note, there are two rival associations running under the same name; they run similar tours, but we feel the one to the left of the jetty is more trustworthy, albeit slightly more expensive. Don't forget to take water on your boat trip.

The grandly named Chilika Ecopark (Satapada Jetty) is a small but pleasant palm-tree-shaded park by the jetty which has on display the 12m-long skeleton of a baleen whale that was washed up on the shore near here in 2007.

Considering the potential storybook lakeside setting, Yatrivas (📍 262077; d ₹550, with AC ₹1500; 🍷) is surprisingly uninspired. Its three ageing non-AC rooms have seen better days, but are very spacious and, like the more modern AC rooms, have balconies with lake views. The restaurant (mains ₹50-150) is decent value.

The daily ferry crossings to Barkul stopped some time ago. However, there is one daily ferry to Balugaon (₹50, five hours), a few kilometres north of Barkul. It leaves Satapada at around 1.30pm. The return leaves Balugaon at 6.30am. An autorickshaw from Balugaon to Barkul is around ₹100.

If you want to charter your own boat from Satapada, expect to pay at least ₹3000 for a trip across the lake to Barkul.

More frequent ferries (pedestrians/bicycles/motorbikes/cars ₹4/5/15/300, 30 minutes) ply between Satapada and the

LOCAL KNOWLEDGE

COASTAL RETREATS

For an idyllic getaway that's still within shouting distance of both Puri and Konark, consider one of these coastal retreats.

Nature Camp, Konark Retreat (📍 9437029989; www.naturecampindia.com; s/d incl breakfast ₹2000/3000) Plopped down on the banks of the Ramchandi River, just across from a sandy Bay of Bengal beach, and only 10km south of Konark, this friendly, laid-back tented camp has a shanty feel to it with tented rooms dotted around a slightly unkempt forest clearing. The tents are fan-cooled only, and are comfortable rather than luxurious, but come with cute attached shower rooms with sit-down flush toilets.

The food comes in the form of two sumptuous Odia thalis (veg ₹250, nonveg ₹350), both cooked in a traditional charcoal-fired chulha (stove) and served on a banana leaf.

The camp is about 500m off the main Puri-Konark road; there's a big sign on the main road so you can take any bus (Puri ₹20, Konark ₹5) and jump off when you see it.

Lotus Resorts (📍 06758-236161; www.lotusresorthotels.com; Puri-Konark Marine Dr; cottage incl breakfast from ₹3500; 🍷) About 6km from Konark, on pretty Ramchandi Beach, this collection of rustic, weathered Canadian-pine cottages is a beautiful getaway across a calm and swimmable islet catering to a few local fisherman and not much else. Accommodation is stylish and amenities include a small ayurvedic spa (high-season only) and a nice sand-side restaurant (mains ₹120 to ₹350).

Each cottage has TV, AC and a modern bathroom, but there's no internet. To get here take any bus between Puri (₹20) and Konark (₹5) and look for the big sign on the main road.

Janhikuda jetty just to the west, where vehicles can then head west, and around to the north side of the lake. It's a wonderfully scenic route. Daily departures are at 7.30am, 10am, 1pm and 4pm, returning at 8am, 10.30am, 1.30pm and 4.30pm.

A bus to Berhampur (₹75, 3½ hours), near Gopalpur-on-Sea, travels on the 7.30am ferry before following the beautiful countryside road for two hours until it meets up with the main highway. Wait for the bus on the ferry, then jump on as it drives off. It will already be full of villagers by the time it reaches Satapada so don't expect a seat, but passengers get off along the way so you won't have to stand for long. The bus will drop you at the turn-off for Gopalpur-on-Sea, if you ask, from where you can wave down any passing bus (₹11, 20 minutes). The return bus leaves Berhampur at 12.40pm and crosses Chilika Lake on the 4.30pm ferry to Satapada.

Pretty much every hotel and travel agent in Puri does day trips to Chilika Lake, but it's easy to come here independently by bus (₹33, two to three hours). The last bus back to Puri leaves Satapada at around 6pm.

Barkul

☎ 06756

On the northern shore of Chilika, Barkul is just a scattering of houses, small guesthouses and food stalls on a lane which runs from the main highway down to the government-run hotel property Panthanivas Barkul. From here boats make trips to Nalabana Island (full of nesting birds in December and January) and Kalijai Island (which has a temple on it), though you could charter your own boat to anywhere; deal directly with the boat hands.

Panthanivas Barkul hotel runs two-hour round trips to Kalijai for ₹955 per boat (up to seven passengers), including some time on the island. The four-hour trip to Kalijai and Nalabana costs ₹2865 per boat, but tends only to be done in December and January when the birds are on Nalabana. You can also get out on the lake on a pedal boat (₹40 to ₹60).

Panthanivas Barkul (☎227488; pns.barkul@gmail.com; d ₹900, with AC ₹2250, AC cottage ₹2600, all incl breakfast; 🍷@) has a great setting, and is one of the best government-run hotels in Odisha, with comfortable rooms overlooking the lake. The AC rooms and cottages are newer and cleaner but all rooms are good here. The restaurant (mains ₹50-170) does decent Indian and Chinese food, including some seafood. And there's a bar (☺11am-10pm), which is dimly lit and has plastic chairs, but sells large bottles of Kingfisher Light (₹130) and is run by a friendly old guy.

There's a handful of cheaper guesthouses on the lane leading to Panthanivas Barkul.

Frequent buses dash along National Hwy 5 between Bhubaneswar (₹80, 1½ hours) and Berhampur (₹60, 1½ hours). You can get off anywhere en route.

Panthanivas Barkul is at least 2km walk from the main highway. If you don't have much luggage it's a lovely, signposted walk past village homes. Alternatively, hop in a passing autorickshaw (shared/private ₹10/50).

A ferry for Satapada (₹50, five hours) leaves from nearby Balugaon at 6.30am. It's about ₹100 to get to Balugaon in an autorickshaw.

Rambha

The village of Rambha, on the northwestern shore of Chilika Lake, is the nearest place to stay for turtle-watching on Rushikulya beach.

Panthanivas Rambha (☎278346; rabi.dash09@gmail.com; dm ₹200, d ₹800, with AC ₹1560, AC cottage ₹3150, all incl breakfast; 🍷) is a fine government-run property with good-value non-AC rooms with balconies and lake views. The AC rooms are more modern, but not worth the extra money. The huge eight-bed dorm is extremely spartan, but does have its own bathroom. The restaurant (mains ₹50-170) is decent, and there's also a bar here. Speedboat (per hour ₹2000) or motorboat (per hour ₹700) tours of the lake are available. If you want to charter your own boat across the lake, it costs around ₹2000 for Satapada.

The hotel is a 1km walk from the main highway (ignore the sign that says 5km), or hop in a passing autorickshaw (₹10).

From the highway you can easily wave down buses to Barkul (₹30, 30 minutes), Berhampur (₹30, one hour) and Bhubaneswar (₹110, two hours).

Gopalpur-on-Sea

If you dig nosing about decaying seaside resorts, Gopalpur-on-Sea, a seaside town the British left to slide into history until Bengali holidaymakers rediscovered its attractions in the 1980s, could be just your thing. Prior to this, it had a noble history as a seaport with connections to Southeast Asia, the evidence of which is still scattered through the town in the form of romantically deteriorating old buildings.

It's no paradise, but the peaceful and relatively clean beach is great for a stroll or a paddle, and it's oddly charismatic in its own strange, antiquated way. And, unlike Puri, there's proper seaside accommodation right on the beach.

The main village is a couple of hundred metres back from the beach, along the road to Berhampur. Here you'll find the turn-off for Mayfair Palm Beach as well as a couple of internet cafes (per hour ₹20), a post office and a police station. For cash, there's an ATM on the seafront.

Sights

Lighthouse

LIGHTHOUSE

(Indian/foreigner/child ₹10/25/3, camera ₹20; ☀ 3.30-5.30pm) Peering over the town is the lighthouse, with its immaculate gardens and petite staff cottages. It's a late-afternoon draw card and after puffing up the spiral staircase you're rewarded with expansive views and welcome cooling breezes.

Sleeping & Eating

Gopalpur-on-Sea can be booked out during holiday and festival times, and it gets quite busy at weekends generally.

In the main village, right at the end, there's a Foreign Liquor Off Shop (☀ 10.30am-10.30pm), which sells big bottles of Kingfisher for ₹90.

ODISHA'S OLIVE RIDLEY MARINE TURTLES

One of the smallest sea turtles and a threatened species, the olive ridley marine turtle swims up from deeper waters beyond Sri Lanka to mate and lay eggs on Odisha's beaches. The main nesting sites are Gahirmatha (in Bhitarkanika Wildlife Sanctuary), Devi River mouth near Konark, and Rushikulya River mouth by Chilika Lake.

Turtle deaths due to fishing practices are unfortunately common. Although there are regulations, such as requiring the use of turtle exclusion devices (TEDs) on trawl nets and banning fishing from certain prohibited congregation and breeding areas, these laws are routinely flouted in Odisha.

Casuarina trees have been planted to help preserve Devi beach but they occupy areas of soft sand that are necessary for a turtle hatchery. Other potential threats include the upcoming Astaranga Seaport and Thermal Power Plant and the proposed Palur port, which is planned right next to the Rushikulya River mouth nesting site (which it would destroy if allowed to continue as planned).

In January and February the turtles congregate near nesting beaches and, if conditions are right, come ashore. If conditions aren't right, they reabsorb their eggs and leave without nesting.

Hatchlings emerge 50 to 55 days later and are guided to the sea by the luminescence of the ocean and stars. They can be easily distracted by bright lights; unfortunately National Highway (NH) 5 runs within 2km of Rushikulya beach. Members of local turtle clubs in Gokharkuda, Podampeta and Purunabandha village gather up disoriented turtles and take them to the sea. It's best to visit the nesting beach at dawn when lights are not necessary.

The best place to see nesting and hatching is on the northern side of Rushikulya River, near the villages of Purunabandha and Gokharkuda, 20km from the nearest accommodation in Rambha. During nesting and hatching, activity takes place throughout the night: don't use lights.

Ask staff at Panthanivas Rambha (p617) what conditions are like, or contact the Wild-life Society of Odisha (☎ 6712311513; www.wildlifeorissa.org; Shantikunj, Link Rd, Cuttack). Rickshaws between Rambha and Rushikulya cost ₹400 return for a half day and ₹800 for the full day.

★ Hotel Seaside Breeze HOTEL $
 (☎ 2343075; s/d ₹600/750, with AC ₹1100/1350; ㊟) Right on the beach, this friendly no-frills guesthouse has clean, brightly painted rooms with sea-facing terraces. Cute corner room No 15 has a private balcony with sweeping views of the beach – it's the smallest and cheapest (single/double ₹500/650), but we think the best. There's no restaurant, but the balconies have tables and chairs, and the great-value menu (mains ₹35 to ₹120) includes sea fish.

★ Hotel Sea Pearl HOTEL $$
 (☎ 2343557; www.hotelseapearlgopalpur.com; d ₹700-900, with AC ₹1400-1780; ㊟) Right on the beach, Sea Pearl is a decent midrange option. Rooms are a little on the small side, but all have a sea view of some description (except the cheapest non-AC ones). Has a restaurant.

★ Mayfair Palm Beach HOTEL $$$
 (☎ 6660101; www.mayfairhotels.com; r incl breakfast & dinner from ₹11,000; ㊟) First opened as a luxury resort in 1914, this historic property was renovated by Mayfair in 2012 and transformed into one of this region's stand-out hotels. The grounds contain winding walkways, a beautiful pool and immaculate terraced gardens leading down to the beach. Rooms are tasteful, but understated – it's worth paying the extra ₹2000 for the deluxe-category rooms, which have fabulous beach-facing balconies.

There's also a large children's play area, a spa, an excellent restaurant (mains ₹350-900) and a huge indoor lounge with a striking teak-wood bar (beer from ₹200). The bar and restaurant are both open to nonguests.

★ Sea Shell Fast Food INDIAN, CHINESE $
 (mains ₹30-80; ☺ 8am-10.30pm) Cheap-and-cheerful alfresco dining on the esplanade overlooking the beach.

📍 Getting There & Away

Comfortable, half-hourly buses shuttle between the beachfront and Berhampur (₹14, 30 minutes) between 7am and 7.45pm, from where you can catch onward transport by rail or bus.

From Berhampur's new bus stand there are frequent buses throughout the day to Bhubaneswar (₹140, three hours, frequent), via Rambha (₹30, one hour) and Barkul (₹60, 1½ hours). There are two buses to Rayagada (₹140, eight hours, 9.45am and 1.45pm), and one daily bus to Satapada (₹75, three hours, 12.40pm) via the scenic route along southeast shore of Chilika Lake and then on the ferry.

SOUTHWESTERN ODISHA

As of 2012, prior permission from the District Collector was required for foreigners wishing to visit some specific parts of tribal regions. Some agencies were saying this rule may change, so check online travel forums before you fork out for an expensive tour; you may be able to do your trip independently. Assuming the rules don't change, the permissions process is taken care of either by a government-approved tour agency, a government-approved guide or a local tourism office, and usually takes two to three days to arrange (just give them a copy of your passport and visa, and wait), though it can take up to five days.

Photography and overnight stays in Adivasi households are strictly prohibited by law.

Koraput

Up in the cool, forested hills, the small market town of Koraput is by far the nicest of the main towns in which to base yourself in this region. There's a friendly village feel to it, a weekly market for which you don't need special permission to visit, and the main temple here is fascinating, especially for non-Hindus who can't enter the Jagannath Mandir in Puri.

👁️ Sights & Activities

Koraput's helpful tourist office (☎ 06852-250318; www.orissatourism.gov.in; Tourist Complex, near Station Circuit House; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) can put you in touch with government-approved guides for visits to the region's weekly markets (p620). The guides themselves will process the 'prior permission' that's required for foreigners to visit these markets. All you need to do is give them a copy of your passport and visa, and tell them where you wish to visit; it should only take one or two days to process, but can take up to five. Don't feel disheartened if you miss the market you wanted. There are weekly markets held at various villages in Koraput district every day of the week; see the boxed text for details.

At the time of research foreigners had to be accompanied by a government-approved guide to visit any of the tribal areas where the markets are held, but ask for confirmation of this at the tourist office when you arrive in Koraput. It's possible to get to some of the markets by bus, but you will need to hire a car for the day to visit others.

Guides charge from between ₹1000 and ₹2000 per day. Expect to pay around ₹1500 per day on top of that for car hire. Guides are often reluctant to use public transport.

To get to the tourist office, continue walking past Raj Residency, round the corner and head up the hill (200m).

Jagannath Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

While you're hanging around in Koraput, waiting for permission to visit the markets, don't miss visiting Jagannath Temple, whose whitewashed sikhara (temple spire) overlooks the town. The courtyard around the sikhara contains numerous colourfully decorated statues of the wide-eyed Jagannath, the deity of Odisha, which you'll see painted on homes across the state. Below the sikhara, in a side hall, you'll walk past more than two dozen linga (phallic symbols of Shiva), before reaching some attractive displays of local ossa (traditional patterns made with white and coloured powders on doorsteps; also known as rangoli).

Sunday Market

MARKET

There's a market here every day, but it's Koraput's all-day Sunday Market that's the big one and worth exploring. Tribespeople and local traders alike buy and sell food produce and handmade goods in the lanes around the bus stand and behind the police station, and buying stuff from them is a rare opportunity for you to interact with tribespeople on your own.

Sleeping & Eating

The Jagannath Temple manages three great-value budget hotels just outside its grounds. Atithi Bhavan (☎250610; atithibhavan@gmail.com; d ₹250, with AC ₹500; ☹), just to the right of the steps that lead to the temple, is easily the best of them, with comfortable rooms and a pure veg restaurant (thalis ₹50). Atithi Nivas (☎250610; atithibhavan@gmail.com; s ₹150), to the left of the temple steps, has singles only. Yatri Nivas (☎9337622637; d ₹175), up towards the

WEEKLY MARKETS

There are weekly haats (markets) held every day at different villages in Koraput district, sometimes two or three at different places on the same day. Tribespeople from surrounding villages will descend on the market of the day to trade handicrafts, clothes, jewellery and foodstuffs. They are fabulously colourful places to visit, and the best chance foreign tourists have of interacting with Odishan tribespeople.

Ondakelli Market – one of the most fascinating of all the haats – trades during the morning only. Other markets last all day. Kundli is the region's largest food market, while Koraput itself has a Sunday haat which, because of its location in the town centre, is open to foreigners even without special permission.

Selected haats include:

Monday Subai – small market, 34km from Koraput

Tuesday Ramgiri – 64km from Koraput

Wednesday Nandapur – 45km from Koraput

Thursday Onkadelli – numerous tribes represented, including Bonda, 65km from Jeypore

Friday Kundli – region's largest food market; numerous tribes represented

Saturday Laximpur – 56km from Koraput; accessible on any Rayagada-bound bus

Sunday Koraput – in the town centre; also one of the bigger markets

COUNTRYSIDE RETREATS IN THE TRIBAL SOUTHWEST

Strict regulations prohibit homestays in tribal regions these days, but for something approaching full immersion of Adivasi (tribal) culture, consider staying at one of these two fabulous countryside retreats, both of which are nestled in the village-dotted hills near Koraput.

Chandoori Sai (📞9439528602, 9443342241; www.chandoorisai.com; Goudaguda; s/d incl meals ₹3500/5000; 📍) On the scenic hill road and train line between Koraput and Rayagada, and just a couple of kilometres from the tiny town of Kakirigumma, Chandoori Sai is a beautiful, Australian-run rural retreat in a village called Goudaguda, and is one of Odisha's most stylish countryside getaways.

Run by Grass Routes (p611), a tour agency based in Puri, this unpretentious villagelike resort is a sustainable earthen-walled refuge with beautiful terracotta flooring and bamboo-sheeted ceilings. The food is fabulous, but the real coup is the guest interaction with tribal women, who act as cultural ambassadors on the property and guides through the village, and in doing so offer a brief assimilation into the vibrant Adivasi way of life.

To reach Chandoori Sai, take any bus between Koraput (40km) and Rayagada (70km) and get off at Kakirigumma; staff will then pick you up from there. Alternatively, catch the 18447 Hirakhand Express from Koraput to Bhubaneswar and get off at Kakirigumma Train Station. It leaves Koraput at 5.25pm, arriving in Kakirigumma an hour later. An unreserved 2nd-class seat costs ₹30; a sleeper is ₹140. From Bhubaneswar, the 18448 Hirakhand Express leaves at 7.35pm and arrives in Kakirigumma at 8.11am the next morning. Sleeper tickets cost ₹345.

Desia (📞9437023656; www.desiakoraput.com; Bantalabiri Village, Lamptaput; Apr-Sep s/d incl meals ₹2500/3500, Oct-Mar ₹3000/4700) A gorgeous rural retreat tucked away in the tribal hills of the Koraput region, this stylish villagelike resort is run by the excellent, Puri-based Heritage Tours (p611) and was just getting off the ground at the time of research. Activities on offer include hiking, cooking, craftwork and local market trips.

You can come here independently or with an all-inclusive 'tribal tour' package, starting at ₹19,000 for a four-day trip for two people. Desia is only 20km from Koraput, on the road to Rayagada. If you're not on a tour, it's best to call for a pick up from Koraput, although you could take any Rayagada-bound bus from Koraput to the village of Podagada, which is close by.

Raj Residency

HOTEL $$

(📞251591; www.hotelrajresidency.com; Post Office Rd; s/d ₹750/950, with AC from ₹1250/1500; 📍📍) Raj Residency has the best digs in town, offering modern rooms with plasma TVs, friendly service and free wi-fi (lobby only). The Indian/Chinese restaurant (mains ₹60-170; 🕒7.30am-11am, noon-3pm & 7.30pm-10.30pm) is also the best place for food in Koraput. To get here, turn left up Post Office Rd, walk past the post office and keep going straight (400m).

Information

There are ATMs on the walk up to the tourist office, and a few internet cafes dotted around town. At the bus stand, there's a handy travel agency that can book train tickets for you (commission ₹30 to ₹50).

Getting There & Away

BUS

From the Koraput bus stand, there are half-hourly buses to Jeypore (₹15, 40 minutes) between 6am and 8.30pm. Seven buses make the scenic trip to Rayagada (₹90, four hours) between 6am and 7pm. And at least four evening buses leave for Bhubaneswar (₹520, 12 hours) between 5pm and 7pm.

To get a bus to Onkadelli Market, you'll have to first catch a bus to the scruffy town of Jeypore. From there, the 7.30am bus to Onkadelli (₹30, two to three hours) should get you there in time to catch the last couple of hours of the market. The Onkadelli buses leave from Jeypore's private bus stand, which is located in front of Jeypore's government bus stand. From Jeypore's government bus stand, there are frequent buses to Visakhapatnam (₹230, six hours, 5am to 11pm) in Andhra Pradesh.

TRAIN

The train station is 3km from the centre; it costs ₹10/50 in a shared/private autorickshaw to get here from the bus stand.

The 18448 Hirakhand Express plies daily between Bhubaneswar and Koraput. It leaves Koraput at 5.25pm, passes Rayagada at 10.05pm, and arrives in Bhubaneswar at 8.25am the next morning. Sleeper tickets cost ₹360.

There are three fabulously scenic, daily trains to Jagdalpur in Chhattisgarh, leaving at 9.50am, 1pm and 8.50pm. It takes around three hours. Sleeper tickets cost ₹100 to ₹140; unreserved, 2nd-class seats cost ₹40.

Rayagada

The small town of Rayagada is the base for visiting the weekly Wednesday Chatikona market at Bissamcuttack (about 40km north). Here, highly ornamented Dongria Kondh and Desia Kondh villagers from the surrounding Niayangiri Hills bring their produce and wares to sell. Alongside piles of chillies and dried fish are bronze animal sculptures made locally using the lost wax method. The market is considered tourist-friendly, but it's a bit of a process organising a permit; you'll need to track down Rayagada's tourist officer, Ramal Loechan Gamango (☎9439838936), and provide a copy of your passport and visa. He will then facilitate your paperwork through the appropriate channels.

Rayagada's daily market is between the train station and the bus stand; turn right out of the bus stand, take the second right and it's on your left. Here you'll see colourfully dressed tribespeople weaving bamboo baskets alongside local traders selling fruit and veg, spices, dried fish and the like.

Tejasvi International (☎224925; www.hoteltejasvi.com; Collector Residence Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹1360/1600; 🍷🍷) is a smart business hotel with good service, comfortable rooms and wi-fi throughout. Friendly Hotel Rajbhavan (☎223777; Main Rd; d/tr ₹600/900, with AC from ₹1160/1500; 🍷) is cheaper, but also decent and has a good multicuisine restaurant (mains ₹50-170) open for lunch and dinner only. The latter is just across the main road from the train station – don't confuse it with nearby Hotel Raj, which isn't as good. Tejasvi is also walkable – take a right out of the station, then first left and keep walking to the end (500m).

From Rayagada bus stand, there are three early-morning local buses to Chatikona (₹30, two hours, 4.45am, 6.30am and 9.30am). Buses to Jeypore (₹100, five hours, 6.30am, 10.30am, noon, 2pm and 4pm) all go via Koraput (₹90, four hours); the route over the forested hills is fabulously scenic. There are frequent evening buses to Bhubaneswar (₹350, 12 hours) between 4pm and 7pm.

The 18447 Hirakhand Express departs Bhubaneswar daily at 7.35pm reaching Rayagada at 4.50am and Koraput at 9.50am. Sleeper tickets cost ₹300 and ₹360 respectively. The return leaves Rayagada at 10.30pm.

SIMILIPAL NATIONAL PARK

The 2750-sq-km Similipal National Park (www.similipal.org; per day Indian/foreigner ₹40/1000, camera per 3 days ₹50/100; ☀ Oct–mid-Jun) has long been Odisha's prime wildlife sanctuary. However, due to several issues, including ongoing Maoist activity in the region, the park has been off-limits to foreign tourists in recent years. When it is open, there are waterfalls to see and wildlife safaris to take; wild elephants are relatively common, tigers less so.

Mayur Tours & Travels

entry to the latter at time of research) and the excellent Buddhist ruins at Ratnagiri, Udayagiri and Lalitgiri.

Pusphagiri Ruins

These fascinating Buddhist ruins are the remnants of one of India's earliest mahaviharas (Buddhist monasteries which were, effectively, the universities of their day). Pusphagiri Mahavihara had three campuses – Ratnagiri, Udayagiri and Lalitgiri – each built upon a small hilltop in the low-lying Langudi Hills. The Kelua River provided a scenic backdrop, and these days supports small farming communities and their mud-and-thatch villages which dot the rural landscape.

If you leave early, and restrict yourself to just one of the three sites, it's possible to visit the area in a day trip by bus from Bhubaneswar, but there are decent places to stay and doing so not only gives you the chance to explore each of the three sites properly, it also allows you the opportunity to soak up the peaceful charms of village life in the Odishan countryside.

Ratnagiri

Ratnagiri has the most interesting and extensive ruins (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☺ dawn-dusk). Two large monasteries flourished here from the 6th to 12th centuries. Noteworthy are an exquisitely carved doorway and the remains of a 10m-high stupa. Stone remains are scattered across the hill here, some still half-buried in the grass, some even dotted around the village. The fine museum (admission ₹5; ☺ 9am-5pm Sat-Fri) contains beautiful sculptures from all the three sites.

Udayagiri

Another monastery complex is being excavated here in lush surrounds. There's a large pyramidal brick stupa with a seated Buddha and some beautiful doorjamb carvings. There's no entry fee, but unhelpful guides may attach themselves to you then ask for a donation (not compulsory). The ruins are a 1km to 2km walk from the main road.

Lalitgiri

Several monastery ruins (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☺ dawn-dusk) are scattered up a hillside leading to a small museum and a hillock crowned with a shallow stupa. During excavations of the stupa in the 1970s, a casket containing gold and silver relics was found. Like Ratnagiri, Lalitgiri is also notable for its surrounding village atmosphere.

Toshali has three other similar hotels; two near the ruins of Udayagiri (☎ 9668013550; www.toshaliudayagiri.com; r ₹2500) and Lalitgiri (☎ 9937282626; www.toshalilalitgiri.com; r ₹3500) and another, called Hotel Toshali Pusphagiri (☎ 9937292311; www.toshalipusphagiri.com; Paradeep Rd; r ₹2500), on the main road 5km before Lalitgiri.

📍 Getting There & Away

From Bhubaneswar, catch a bus to Cuttack (₹20, one hour, frequent) then change for a bus to Chandikhol (₹25, one hour, frequent) where, from the road leading off to the right, you can catch shared minivans to Ratnagiri (₹25, 45 minutes) via Udayagiri (₹20, 30 minutes), or to Lalitgiri (₹20, 30 minutes) via Hotel Toshali Pusphagiri. Minivans start drying up at around 3.30pm.

Udayagiri is 23km from Chandikhol. Ratnagiri is 9km past Udayagiri. Lalitgiri is 22km from Chandikhol, but down a different lane, 8km beyond the Ratnagiri/Udayagiri turn-off.

ONKADELLI

This small village, 65km from Jeypore, has a most remarkable and vibrant Thursday market that throngs with Bonda, Gadaba, Mali and Didai villagers. In the morning it's all business on the vegetable side; in the afternoon, the alcohol market revs up, and entire families get sloshed. The best time to visit is between 10am and 1pm.

The market has been traditionally popular with tour groups; however, due to Maoist activity in the region, outcries of 'Human safari!' by some and an Odishan government that cannot (or will not) ensure security of tourists, visits to Onkadelli have declined in recent years and some conservative local tour operators have dropped it from their regularly scheduled tours. Check the latest with tour operators in Bhubaneswar or Puri, or on travel forums.

Onkadelli is best accessed by hire car, although the early morning bus from Jeypore is another option, and can only be visited with a professional guide, who will enrich your experience, keep the peace if things get ugly among the alcohol and the bows and arrows, and help enforce things such as the no-photography rules for tourists. It's feasible to come to Jeypore or Koraput independently and organise a guide (₹1000 to ₹1500). If you opt to go on your own, remember that photographs are strictly prohibited by law, and you'll need to stop by the tourist office (p619) in Koraput to handle the paperwork. Plan ahead – at least five days to be safe – and bring a copy of your passport and visa.

For those willing to put in the effort, Onkadelli is a sight for the senses and a true Odisha highlight.

Apr) Three rivers flow out to sea at Bhitarkanika forming a tidal maze of muddy creeks and mangroves. This is India's second largest mangrove region after the Sunderbans, and most of the 672-sq-km delta forms this wonderful sanctuary, a significant biodiversity hotspot. The only way to get around most of the sanctuary is by boat, and the main reason to come is to spot some of the hundreds of crocodiles that make these rivers their home.

There are three types: long-snouted gharials, short squat mugghers, and the enormous estuarine crocodiles, or 'salties', which bask on mud flats before diving into the water for cover as your boat chugs past.

The best time to visit is from December to February, but you'll see crocs all year round, and may also see monitor lizards, spotted deer, wild boar and all sorts of birds, including eight species of brilliantly coloured kingfishers. Herons arrive in early June and nest until early December, when they move on to Chilika Lake, while raucous open-billed storks have set up a permanent rookery here.

It's also worth knowing that this area has the highest concentration of king cobras found anywhere in India, though hopefully you won't meet any of those.

The park entrance is at the beautiful, but very poor, mud-hut village of Dangmal (pronounced Dang-ger-mal).

Sleeping & Eating

There are only two accommodation options in Dangmal.

Forest Rest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(d from ₹1900) The Forestry Department-run Forest Rest House is located just inside the sanctuary's main gate. Annoyingly, rooms have to be prebooked through the Divisional Forest Officer (☎9437037370, 06729-242460; Rajnagar) at Rajnagar village, about an hour's drive back up the road. Cheaper rooms are available for Indian tourists.

★ Nature Camp

Bhitarkanika

CAMPGROUND $$$

(☎9437016054; www.bhitarkanikatour.com; s/d/tr/q incl meals ₹2000/4000/5000/6000)

A special experience awaits at this small, privately run tented camp at the heart of Dangmal village, built with the help of villagers, with a sustainable foot on the ground and just 200m before the sanctuary gate. The stylish Swiss Cottage tents are fully equipped with electricity, fans, sit-down flush toilets and pleasant terraces, and the wonderful rustic Odishan cuisine is almost worth the trip alone. Nature Camp happily welcomes walk-in guests, though you'd be wise to book, given the lack of other options.

You can organise boat trips here for only slightly more than if dealing directly at the park gate. A popular trip is the half-day morning tour (₹3500 per boat, up to 18 people), which includes a nature hike around the forests after the boat trip. Tours which include pick-up and drop-off in Bhubaneswar (two/three/four people ₹6700/4800/3900 per person, all inclusive) can also be arranged.

i Information

Permits (bring a copy of your passport), park entrance tickets and boat trips (₹2500 to ₹3000 per boat) can all be arranged in Dangmal at the park gate.

i Getting There & Away

Getting here is a bit of a mission, but the beautiful countryside scenery along the final, single-lane road leading to Dangmal makes it worthwhile.

Two or three direct buses to Dangmal leave from Cuttack between noon and 1pm. Otherwise, frequent buses go from Cuttack to Pattamundai (₹60, three hours), from where you can catch onward buses to Dangmal (₹40, 2½ hours, last bus 5pm), passing Rajnagar en route.

There are three early-morning buses from Dangmal. The 5am and 7am both go as far as Kendrapara (a small town, just past Pattamundai), from where you can catch onward transport to Cuttack or Chandikhol (for the Puspagiri Ruins). The 6am bus goes all the way to Cuttack. After that, you'll have to catch an autorickshaw from Dangmal to Rajnagar (around ₹500) from where the last bus to Cuttack leaves at 2pm.

The really adventurous might like to take the 4pm ferry (called a 'launch' in these parts) from Nalitapatia jetty (2km walk up the road from Dangmal) to Chandibali (₹16, 1½ hours), where you can find cheap guesthouses and onward buses in the morning to Bhadrak, which is on the main highway between Cuttack and Kolkata.

Why Go?

The spotlight doesn't hit Madhya Pradesh (MP) with quite the same brilliance as it does on its more celebrated neighbouring states, which is why it rewards travellers with unparalleled opportunities to detour from the tourist trail and delve into India's heartland.

Khajuraho's temples boast some of the finest stone carvings in India, but these exquisite erotic sculptures are a mere slice of architectural wonder in a region blessed with palaces, forts and stupas, the former most gloriously prominent in the postcard-perfect village of Orchha. Tigers are the other big attraction, and your chances of spotting a wild Royal Bengal in MP's national parks are as good as anywhere in India. Laid-back traveller havens like Maheshwar and Omkareshwar display the spiritual, scenic, and chilled-out flavours for which India is renowned, while the adventurous can foray into tribal Chhattisgarh, which split from Madhya Pradesh in 2000 and remains fascinatingly far removed from mainstream Indian culture.

When to Go

Bhopal

Nov–Feb The most pleasant time to visit central India, despite chilly mornings.

Apr–Jun Best chance of spotting tigers due to thin vegetation and fewer water sources.

Jul–Sep Monsoon time, but places such as Chhattisgarh are at their most beautiful.

Madhya Pradesh & Chhattisgarh Highlights

- 1 Tracking tigers at one of India's two best tiger parks: Bandhavgarh National Park (p678) or Kanha National Park (p676)
- 2 Blushing at the erotic carvings on the exquisite temples in Khajuraho (p638)
- 3 Sleeping in a mud hut homestay in Orchha (p636)
- 4 Dining like a prince at Ahilya Fort (p669) in Maheshwar
- 5 Cooling off under a waterfall in Pachmarhi (p657), Madhya Pradesh's only hill station
- 6 Cycling around India's finest Afghan ruins in Mandu (p669)
- 7 Marvelling at the Jain Rock Sculptures at the magnificent Gwalior Fort (p629)
- 8 Wandering the fascinating tribal markets of Baster near Jagdalpur (p683)

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Festival of Dance (p645; ☺ Feb/Mar) Weeklong event with the cream of Indian classical dancers performing amid floodlit temples.

Shivaratri Mela (☺ Feb/Mar; Pachmarhi) Up to 100,000 Shaivite pilgrims, sadhus (spiritual men) and Adivasis (tribal people) attend celebrations at Mahadeo Cave. Participants bring symbolic tridents and hike up Chauragarh Hill to plant them by the Shiva shrine.

Magh Mela (p661; ☺ Apr/May) Huge annual religious fair held at Ujjain; pilgrim numbers are massive every 12th year for the Kumbh Mela (p661).

Ahilyabai Holkar Jayanti Mahotsav (p669) The Holkar queen's birthday is celebrated with processions through the town.

Navratri (p661; ☺ Sep/Oct) Celebrated with particular fervour in Ujjain, where lamps are lit at Harsiddhi Mandir.

Tansen Music Festival (p632; ☺ Nov/Dec) Gwalior music festival featuring classical musicians and singers from all over India.

Dussehra (p683; ☺ Oct) Dedicated to local goddess Danteshwari, this 75-day festival culminates in eight days of (immense) chariot racing in the streets of Jagdalpur.

History

Virtually all phases of Indian history made their mark on the region historically known as Malwa, starting with the rock paintings at Bhimbetka and Pachmarhi, which date back more than 10,000 years. They tell of a cultural succession through the late Stone Age to the start of recorded Indian history in the 3rd century BC, when the Buddhist emperor Ashoka controlled the Mauryan empire from Malwa and built Sanchi's Great Stupa.

The Mauryas were followed by the Sungas and the Guptas – Chandragupta II (r AD 382–401) ruled from Ujjain and had the caves cut at Udaigiri – before the Huns rampaged across the state. Around 1000 years ago the Parmaras reigned in southwest Madhya Pradesh – notably Raja Bhoj, who ruled for over half a century across this region and who founded the now-ruined town of Bhojpur, the magnificent fort of Mandu and, according to some scholars, the city of Bhopal.

The Chandelas ruled over much of central India from the 9th to the 13th centuries. It was their nimble-fingered sculptors who enlivened the facades of some 85 temples in Khajuraho with erotic scenes before the dynasty eventually moved its capital from Khajuraho to Mahoba. Between the 12th and 16th centuries, the region experienced continuing struggles between Hindu and Muslim rulers, and Mandu was the scene of some decisive clashes. The Mughals were eventually superseded by the Marathas after a 27-year war (1681–1707) – the longest in India's history. The Marathas went on to rule the region for more than a century before they fell to the British (1818), for whom the Scindia maharajas of Gwalior were powerful allies.

With the States Reorganisation Act of 1956, several former states were combined to form Madhya Pradesh. In 2000, Chhattisgarh became an independent state.

NORTHERN MADHYA PRADESH

Gwalior

📍 0751 / POP 1.05 MILLION

Famous for its medieval hilltop fort, and described by Mughal emperor Babur as 'the pearl amongst fortresses in India', Gwalior makes an interesting stop en route to some of the better-known destinations in this part of India. The city also houses the elaborate Jai Vilas Palace, the historic seat of the Scindias, one of the country's most revered families.

History

Gwalior's legendary beginning stems from the 8th century when a hermit known as Gwalipa is said to have cured the Rajput chieftain Suraj Sen of leprosy using water from Suraj Kund tank (which remains in Gwalior Fort). Renaming the chieftain Suhana Pal, Gwalipa foretold that Suhana's descendants would remain in power as long as they retained the name Pal. Suhana's next 83 descendants did just that, but number 84 changed his name to Tej Karan and, naturally, lost his kingdom.

In 1398 the Tomar dynasty came to power. Gwalior Fort became the focus of continual clashes with neighbouring powers and reached its ascendancy under Raja Man Singh (r 1486–1516). Two centuries of Mughal rule followed, ending with the fort's capture by the Marathas in 1754.

Over the next 50 years the fort changed hands several times, including twice to the British, before finally passing to the Scindias.

During the First War of Independence (Indian Uprising) in 1857, Maharaja Jayajirao remained loyal to the British but his troops rebelled, and in mid-1858 the fort was the scene of some of the uprising's final events. Near here the British defeated rebel leader Tantia Topi and it was in the final assault on the fort that the rani (wife) of Jhansi was killed.

👁️ Sights

★ Gwalior Fort

There are two approaches to the fort, both of which are steep treks. Autorickshaws can drive you up to Urvai Gate, the western entrance, so it's tempting to go that way because vehicles cannot drive up from the eastern entrance. But the western entrance is an anticlimax compared with the formidable view of the fort from the eastern approach, which makes entering from the east well worth the climb. Don't, however, miss the rock sculptures, which are part of the way down the western side.

A sound-and-light show (Indian/foreigner ₹75/250; 🌙 English 8.30pm Mar-Oct, 7.30pm Nov-Feb, Hindi 7.30pm Mar-Oct, 6.30pm Nov-Feb) is held nightly in the amphitheatre.

➔ Eastern Entrances

From the east a series of gates punctuates the worn steps of the path leading up to the fort. At the bottom, the first gate you pass through is Gwalior Gate (Alamgiri Gate), dating from 1660, and leads to the State Archeological Museum. The second, Bansur (Archer's Gate), has disappeared, so the next is Badalgarh, named after Badal Singh, Man Singh's uncle.

Further up is Ganesh Gate, built in the 15th century. Nearby is Kabutar Khana, a small pigeon house, and a small four-pillared Hindu temple to the hermit Gwalipa, after whom both fort and town are named.

You'll pass a 9th-century Vishnu shrine known as Chatarbhuj Mandir (Temple of the Four-Armed) before reaching the fifth gate, Hathiya Paur (Elephant Gate), now the entrance to the palace grounds (as the sixth gate, Hawa Gate, no longer exists).

➔ ★ Jain Rock Sculptures

While there are sculptures carved into the rock at a few points on the plateau, including on the way up from Gwalior Gate, the most impressive is the upper set on the western approach, between Urvai Gate and the inner fort walls. Mostly cut into the cliff face in the mid-15th century, they represent nude figures of tirthankars (the 24 great Jain teachers). They were defaced by Babur's Muslim army in 1527 but have been more recently repaired.

There are more than 30 images, including a splendid 17m-high standing sculpture of the first tirthankar, Adinath.

➔ ★ Man Singh Palace

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; 🌅 dawn-dusk) This imperial-style palace is one of the more unusually decorated monuments you'll see in India: the outer walls include a frieze of yellow ducks! These – and mosaic tiling of elephants, tigers and crocodiles in blue, yellow and green – give it its alternative identity of Chit Mandir (Painted Palace).

Gwalior

Built by Tomar ruler Man Singh between 1486 and 1516, this fine example of early Hindu architecture consists of two open courts surrounded by apartments on two levels. Below ground lie another two storeys constructed for hot weather, connected by 'speaking tubes' built into the walls, and used by the Mughals as prison cells.

The ticket counter is opposite the palace, while another ticket counter nearby sells tickets for the ruins of Shah Jahan Palace, Karan Palace and several other dilapidated palaces in the northwest of the fort. Also opposite the palace is the small Archeo- logical Survey of India museum (ASI; ₹5; ☺9am-5pm Sat-Thu) that was a hospital under British rule.

★ Jai Vilas Palace & Scindia Museum

PALACE
(Indian/foreigner ₹75/450, camera/video ₹70/50; ☺10am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) The museum occupies some 35 rooms of the Scindias' opulent Jai Vilas Palace, built by Maharaja Jayajirao in 1874 using prisoners from the fort. The convicts were rewarded with the 12-year job of weaving the hall carpet, one of the largest in Asia.

Supposedly, eight elephants were suspended from the durbar (royal court) hall ceiling to check it could cope with two 12.5m-high, 3.5-tonne chandeliers, each with 250 light bulbs – said to be the largest pair in the world.

Bizarre items fill the rooms: cut-glass furniture, stuffed tigers and a ladies-only swimming pool with its own boat. The cavernous dining room displays the pièce de résistance, a model railway with a silver train that carried after-dinner brandy and cigars around the table.

Note: the gates to the north and south are locked so you have to enter the palace from the west.

State Archaeological Museum MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner ₹10/100, camera/video ₹50/200; ☺ 10am-5pm) This museum is within Gujari Mahal, just through Gwalior Gate at the base of the fort. Built in the 15th century by Man Singh for his favourite rani, the palace is now rather deteriorated. There's a large collection of Hindu and Jain sculptures, including the famed Salabhanjika (an exceptionally carved female figure) plus copies of Bagh Caves frescoes.

Sasbahu Temples HINDU TEMPLE

The Mayan-like Sasbahu (Mother-in-Law and Daughter-in-Law Temples), date from the 9th to 11th centuries. Mother-in-Law, dedicated to Vishnu, has four gigantic pillars supporting its heavy roof, layered with carvings. The smaller Daughter-in-Law, dedicated to Shiva, is also stacked with sculptures.

Teli ka Mandir HINDU TEMPLE

Used as a drinks factory and coffee shop by the British after the First War of Independence (Indian Uprising) of 1857, this 30m-high, 8th-century temple is the oldest monument in the compound.

The modern, gold-topped gurdwara (Sikh Temple) nearby is dedicated to Sikh hero Guru Har Gobind, who was imprisoned in Man Singh Palace from 1617 to 1619.

Tomb of Tansen ISLAMIC TOMB

Tucked away in the winding lanes of the old town, and in the same compound as the resplendent tomb of Mohammed Gaus, is the smaller, simpler tomb of Tansen, a singer much admired by Akbar and held to be the father of Hindustani classical music. Chewing the leaves from the tamarind tree here supposedly enriches your voice.

👉 Tours

Gwalior Darshan CITY TOUR

(☎ 0751-2340370; MP Tourism, Tansen Residency; adult/child ₹155/80) MP Tourism's little yellow bus, Gwalior Darshan, takes passengers on a full-day city tour, taking in all the main sights, including Gwalior Fort and Jai Vilas Palace. Enquire at the tourist office at Tansen Residency, where the tour begins. Minimum eight passengers.

★ Festivals & Events

Tansen Music Festival

MUSIC

Four-day music festival in November or December attracting classical musicians and singers from all over India; free performances are usually staged at the tomb of Tansen, one of the most revered composer-musicians of Hindustani classical music.

🛏 Sleeping

Hotel DM

HOTEL $

(☎ 0751-2342083; Link Rd; s/d from ₹550/660, with AC from ₹1320; 🛏) Rooms are a bit cramped so it feels slightly pricy – wi-fi would help ease that blow. However, they are slightly better than the other budget options around town, and the chirping birds at the end of the well-lit room corridor are nice. All have clean bathrooms and an old TV locked securely inside a cabinet (when was the last time you stole a hotel TV?).

WORTH A TRIP

SHIVPURI'S MARBLE CENOTAPHS

A possible day trip from Gwalior is to the old Scindia summer capital of Shivpuri. This rarely visited town is the site of the Scindia family's chhatris (cenotaphs), appropriately grand memorials to maharajas and maharanis gone by.

Two kilometres' walk from the bus stand (autorickshaw ₹30), and set in formal gardens, the chhatris (admission ₹40, camera/video ₹10/40; ☀ 8am-noon & 3-8pm) are magnificent walk-in marble structures with Mughal-style pavilions and sikharas (Hindu temple spires) facing each other across a pool with a criss-cross of walkways. The chhatri to Madhorao Scindia, built between 1926 and 1932, is exquisitely inlaid with intricate pietra dura (marble inlay work).

Buses leave regularly from the Shivpuri bus stand for Gwalior (₹110, 2½ hours) and Jhansi (₹95, three hours), meaning you don't have to backtrack.

Hotel India

HOTEL $

(☎ 0751-2341983; Station Rd; s/d ₹660/940, with AC ₹1410/2000; 🛏) Basic rooms and facilities are on offer at this 2nd-floor hotel across from the train station, where you'll have the added advantage of room service from Indian Coffee House, which owns and operates the hotel. Perch yourself on the 2nd-floor breezeway looking out on the street below and watch India run.

Tansen Residency

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0751-4056789; www.mptourism.com; 6A Gandhi Rd; s/d incl breakfast & bed tea from ₹3040/3510; 🛏🍷🍷) A distinctly average midrange run by MP Tourism, which means it's better than expected for a government hotel. Rooms are modern, all with updated bathrooms. There's a bar and restaurant and the location is central.

Hotel Gwalior Regency

BUSINESS HOTEL $$

(☎ 0751-2340670; www.hotelregencygroup.com; Link Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3620/4780; 🛏🍷🍷) A paint-by-numbers Indian business hotel. Standard-issue rooms are perfectly decent, though the central air-con struggles to make much of an impact. You can pay an extra ₹700 to ₹1000 for 'grande deluxe' rooms with modern furnishings (wall-mounted wide-screen TV, glass-walled shower room, free wi-fi). There's a legitimate bar with DJs each night as well.

★ Usha Kiran Palace

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0751-2444000; www.tajhotels.com; Jayendraganj; r from ₹14,680; 🛏🍷🍷) Live like royalty in this grand, nearly 130-year-old building that was built as a guesthouse for the Prince of Wales (later King George V). Every room has its own unique touches, but all feature understated heritage luxury – while the villas even come with their own private pool!

There's a gorgeous main pool with separate kids' pool, the soothing Jiva Spa (massage treatments from ₹1900), the excellent Silver Saloon restaurant and the spiffing Bada Bar (beer ₹415) with its century-old, four-ton, Italian-slate snooker table.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Indian Coffee House

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Station Rd; mains ₹45-250; ☀ 7.30am-10.30pm) Hugely popular branch that does all the breakfast favourites – real coffee, dosas, scrambled eggs – but also has a main-course menu, including excellent thalis (₹120 to ₹220), in a separate 1st-floor family section.

★ Moti Mahal Delux NORTH INDIAN $$
(Link Rd; mains ₹170-440; ☺ noon-11pm) The flavours pop on anything coming out of the tandoor at this stylish nonveg Delhi transplant, as they have done for nearly 100 years. The founder invented tandoori chicken and they work magic with Northwest frontier cuisine, especially the chicken tikka biryani and chicken tikka masala. It's next to the bus stand.

Silver Saloon INDIAN $$$
(Usha Kiran Palace, Jayadranganj; mains ₹350-1100; ☺ 7am-11pm) Mouth-watering Indian and continental dishes, as well as some Thai, Nepali and Marathi specialties, are served in the AC restaurant or the palm-shaded verandah of this exquisite heritage hotel.

HQ BAR
(Hotel Gwalior Regency, Link Rd; minimum spend ₹500; ☺ 2pm-midnight) This small but trendy bar inside the Gwalior Regency does good cocktails (₹250 to ₹380) set to choice tunes. A DJ (well, a guy with iTunes) 'spins' nightly and there are theme nights throughout the week (Bollywood, Sufi, ladies night, etc). Nice bar service.

i Information

MP Tourism (☎ 0751-2340370; Tansen Residency, 6A Gandhi Rd; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) The main tourist office is located at Tansen Residency. There's also a branch at the train station (☎ 0751-4040777; Train Station; ☺ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat) – it's hard to find, but it's tucked away next to the State Bank of India ATM near the exit.

Post Office (www.indiapost.gov.in; Station Rd; ☺ 9.30am-6pm Mon-Fri, 10am-3.30pm Sat) A convenient branch near the train station. The GPO is at Jayaji Chowk.

More than 20 daily trains go to Agra's Cantonment station and to Jhansi for Orchha or Khajuraho and Delhi, while more than 15 go to Bhopal.

i Getting Around

Cycle-rickshaws, autorickshaws and taxis are plentiful. An auto to the airport, 10km northeast of the centre, will cost at least ₹200.

Orchha

This historic village, on the banks of the boulder-strewn Betwa River, showcases a supreme display of Mughal architecture, some of which is similar to that of nearby Khajuraho (albeit without such high-quality artistry), with much grander palaces and cenotaphs dotting the pastoral landscape as well. The atmosphere in Orchha, though, is far more laid-back and hassle-free, which makes for a relaxing stay. There are great homestay options as well as opportunities to enjoy the surrounding countryside, with walking, cycling and rafting all on the agenda.

Orchha

History

Orchha was the capital of the Bundela rajas from the 16th century to 1783, when they decamped to nearby Tikamgarh. Bir Singh Deo ruled from Orchha between 1605 and 1627, and built Jhansi Fort. A favourite of Mughal prince Salim, Bir Singh feuded with Salim's father, Emperor Akbar, who all but ruined his kingdom.

Sights

The combined ticket (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, camera/video ₹25/100) for Orchha's sites covers seven monuments – Jehangir Mahal, Raj Mahal, Raj Praveen Mahal, the camel stables, the chhatris, Chaturbhuj Temple and Lakshmi Narayan Temple – and is only for sale at the ticket office (🕒8am–5pm) at Raj Mahal. You can walk around the palace grounds for free.

brings you to a fortified complex dominated by two wonderfully imposing 17th-century palaces – Jehangir Mahal and Raj Mahal. If you look closely at the top of some buildings, you can still see some of the few remaining turquoise-coloured tiles that once decorated the palaces here.

Jehangir Mahal (☉dawn-dusk), an assault course of steep staircases and precipitous walkways, represents a zenith of medieval Islamic architecture. Behind the palace, sturdy camel stables (☉dawn-dusk) overlook a green landscape dotted with monuments.

In the nearby Raj Mahal (☉dawn-dusk), the caretaker will open the painted rooms where Rama, Krishna and Orchha royalty wrestle, hunt, fight and dance across the walls and ceilings. A sound-and-light show (Raj Mahal; Indian/foreigner ₹75/250; ☉in English 7.30pm Mar-Oct, 6.30pm Nov-Feb, in Hindi 8.45pm Mar-Oct, 7.45pm Nov-Feb) that's more sound than light takes place here each evening. Those interested in Orchha's history will be the most enthusiastic about this tall tale that dramatically sets Raj Mahal alight under the stars. The story has it all – galloping horses, lion attacks, war, infidelity, attempted suicide and murder – but it still struggles to hold the attention of all but the most serious of historians.

Downhill from the palace compound are the smaller Raj Praveen Mahal (☉9am-5pm), a pavilion and formal Mughal garden, and Khana Hammam (☉dawn-dusk), with some fine vaulted ceilings.

On the other side of the village, Palki Mahal (☉9am-6pm) was the palace of Dinman Hardol (the son of Bir Singh Deo), who committed suicide to 'prove his innocence' over an affair with his brother's wife. His memorial is in the adjacent Phool Bagh (☉9am-6pm), a traditional charbagh (formal Persian garden, divided into quarters). Prince Hardol is venerated as a hero in Bundelkhand culture. Women sing songs about him, tie threads onto the jali (carved marble lattice screen) of his memorial and walk around it five times, clockwise, to make wishes they hope he'll grant.

Chhatris

Cenotaphs to Orchha's rulers, including Bir Singh Deo (☉9am-5.30pm), the immense and serene chhatris rise beside the river about a kilometre south of the village. They're best seen at dusk, when the birds reel above the children splashing at the river ghats and cinematic sunsets drop across the Betwa River.

Temples

Orchha's impressive 16th-century temples still receive thousands of Hindu pilgrims.

★ Ram Raja Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉9am-1pm & 7-11pm Oct-Mar, 8am-1pm & 8-11pm Apr-Sept) At the centre of a lively square is the pink- and gold-domed Ram Raja Temple, the only temple where Rama is worshiped as a king. Built as a palace for Madhukar Shah's wife, it became a temple when an image of Rama, temporarily installed by the rani, proved impossible to move. In addition to shoe removal, you must also remove any leather belts to enter, and photography is prohibited.

Chaturbhuj Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉9am-5pm) Ram Raja is overlooked by the spectacular towers of Chaturbhuj Temple, an immensely solid building on a cruciform plan. Buy a cheap torch from the bazaar and climb the internal stairs to the roof where, from among the mossy spires and domes, you get the best view in town.

Lakshmi Narayan Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉9am-5pm) Lakshmi Narayan Temple, on the road out to Ganj village, has fine rooftop views and well-preserved murals on the ceilings of its domed towers.

Activities

Several hotels open their pools to nonguests for a fee; otherwise, just cool off in the Betwa – it's one of India's cleanest rivers.

River-rafting trips (raft per 1½ hours ₹1200) start from the boat club, but tickets must be bought through MP Tourism at Hotel Sheesh Mahal or Betwa Retreat. Rafts take one to six people.

Orchha Wildlife Sanctuary

WALKING, CYCLING

(Indian/foreigner ₹15/150; ☉7am-6pm) A 44-sq-km island surrounded by the Betwa and Jamni Rivers. You need a ticket to enter the reserve (the ticket office is 250m on the right after the bridge), then you are free to explore. The nature trail is well marked and the roads are signposted, making this a nice place to cycle. Wildlife that you're likely to see on the trail includes monkeys, deer, monitor lizards and peacocks.

VILLAGE IMMERSION HOMESTAYS IN GANJ

Thanks to Friends of Orchha (☎9993385405; www.orchha.org; s/d from ₹600/800, meals ₹50-220; ☎), a nonprofit organisation run by Dutchman Louk Vreeswijk and his Indian wife, Asha D'Souza, travellers have the opportunity to stay with local people in the village of Ganj.

This is a wonderful chance to experience Indian village life, so don't expect luxury, but the rooms – spread close by one another around the village – are better and more charming than a lot of budget hotels. The eight rooms offer insulated walls and tiled roofs and are equipped with fans and mosquito nets. Facilities vary but most have running water and sit-down flush toilets, and others have dry-composting squat toilets or a squat toilet linked to a bio-gas digester.

Friends of Orchha helped provide loans for some renovations, including installing ecofriendly dry toilets in the yards of each homestay house, but you will still be staying in mud huts and eating simple meals that your host family eats every day (veg and nonveg available). The interaction with villagers and immersion into village life is priceless (so stay off the wi-fi, which is ₹100 per day) and you can hop on one of their bikes (₹50 per day) when you need to explore Orchha.

Staying for a single night is discouraged for logistical reasons. If you really want to stay one night only, you can, but room rates will be slightly higher. In any case, the slow pace of life in Ganj is something that should be savoured.

Friends of Orchha also runs an after-school youth club for village children. Options to volunteer and donate are available. The Friends of Orchha office is in Ganj Village itself, on the left-hand side of the main road as you are coming from Orchha. It's about 1.5km from the main drag.

Narayan Temple offers the best budget rooms in town. It's fairly new, so everything is modern and shiny – spacious, freshly tiled bathrooms, flat-screen TVs – and small touches like painted crown moldings throughout give it a leg-up character-wise.

True to its name, the rooftop affords memorable views of the temple.

Monarch Rama

HOTEL $

(☎ 07680-252015; Jhansi Rd; s/d ₹400/500, with AC ₹900/1250; 🍷@🍷) Rave traveller reviews about value here are not unfounded. The formula? It's not rocket science: the basic rooms on offer at this Main Rd cheapie are cleaner and more affordable than the competition and the staff are more friendly and accommodating, too. Even the soap provided is better quality than usual.

Fort View Guest House

HOTEL $

(☎ 07680-252701; fortvieworchha@rediffmail.com; Jhansi Rd; r ₹500, with AC incl breakfast ₹1500-2000; 🍷🍷) This dilapidated budget hotel isn't wonderful, but it's worth considering if you can snag rooms 108, 111 or 112, which all have dramatic views to the river and Jahangir Mandir and Raja Mahal beyond. Otherwise, the juxtaposition is palpable: musty, well-worn rooms surround a cute courtyard. Also signposted as Fort View Hotel.

★ Hotel Sheesh Mahal

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎ 07680-252624; www.mptourism.com; Jehangir Mahal; s/d ₹1930/3100, ste ₹5390-5670, all incl breakfast; 🍷🍷) Literally palatial and like sleeping with history, this hotel is located in a wing of Jehangir Mahal. As you'd expect, the surrounding architecture is stunning – arches, columns, lattice windows – but the rooms themselves are gorgeous too, and each is unique, some with regal touches such as throne-like toilets.

Bundelkhand Riverside

HOTEL $$

(☎ 07680-252612; www.bundelkhandriverside.com; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3900/4500, cottage s/d ₹2800/3500; 🍷🍷) Owned by the grandson of Orchha's last king, Vir Singh, this hotel feels authentically heritage, although the main building is only 15 years old. Antique-style furniture abounds and some of the maharaja's personal art collection is displayed in the corridors. Exquisite rooms overlook either the river or the graceful gardens, which contain some 16th-century monuments as well as a small swimming pool (nonguests ₹250).

Cheaper cabins overlook the river but lack air-con. One of Orchha's best restaurants, Turquoise Diner, is here as well.

Betwa Retreat

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 07680-252618; www.mptourism.com; tents/cottages ₹3040/3510, ste ₹5040; 🍷🍷🍷) Set among shady gardens, this MP Tourism property, overlooking the river and views of the chhatris, makes an excellent family choice. The well-equipped Swiss-made safari-style tents, with iron bed-frames, TVs and minibars, are the way to go unless you can spring for the heritage suite, built within a 17th-century changing room surrounded by a large, beautifully manicured lawn.

There's a restaurant, a bar and an outdoor terrace, and it's only a five-minute walk from the main drag.

Amar Mahal

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 07680-252102; www.amarmahal.com; s/d from ₹4900/6100, ste ₹10,500; 🍷@🍷🍷) Kick your feet up like a maharaja in rooms featuring lovely wood-carved four-poster beds set around a gorgeous courtyard with white pillar verandahs or the large pool. There's an ayurvedic massage and yoga centre beside the pool (which nonguests can use for ₹300). This is probably Orchha's most luxurious stay.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Betwa Tarang

INDIAN $

(Jehangir Mahal Rd; mains ₹80-180; ☀ 8am-10pm; 🍷) This place does the best pure-veg food out of any of Orchha's budget restaurants – the thalis (₹130 to ₹200) are particularly good. It also has the attraction of a rooftop terrace, where you can sit and enjoy stupendous views of Jahangir Mahal. Beers are off menu but available.

RamRaja Restaurant

INDIAN $

(Jahangir Mahal Rd; mains ₹60-320; ☀ 7am-11.30pm; 🍷) No hygiene awards here, but this friendly, family-run streetside restaurant offers eggy breakfasts, tasty vegetarian fare and a decent espresso under the shade of a large tree. Can also scare up a beer.

Jharokha Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Hotel Sheesh Mahal; mains ₹110-380; ☀ 7am-10pm; 🍷) Good food, cold beer and friendly waiters belie the fact that this is in a government-run hotel. Indian, Chinese and continental dishes are on offer, but as usual the Indian (especially tandoori items) are recommended, especially in this grand dining room where, when we visited, there was live Indian music courtesy of an Indian drag queen flanked by two musical minions (yes, we're serious!).

The restaurant gets bonus points for not being afraid to lay down the heat if you ask for Indian spicity.

Bhola Restaurant

i Getting There & Around

BUS

There are no buses between Orchha and Khajuraho. To get there you will first need to go to Jhansi; tempos (₹20) go between Orchha and the Jhansi bus stand all day or a private autorickshaw costs ₹200. From here, catch a bus to Chhatrapur (₹130, three hours, hourly 5am to 10pm), where you can switch for Khajuraho (₹50, 1½ hours). Alternatively, taxis to Khajuraho cost ₹2300. Coming from Khajuraho, you can ask the bus driver to drop you off at the Orchha turn-off on the National Hwy, where you should be able to wave down a vehicle to take you to Orchha.

TRAIN

You can take a slow passenger train (number 51821) to Khajuraho from Orchha's tiny train station, which is on the Jhansi Rd, about 3km from the village centre. The train leaves daily at 7.25am and takes five hours (if it's on time). It has 2nd-class seats only so you can't reserve tickets. Just turn up at the station and buy a 'general' ticket (₹40). The return train leaves Khajuraho at 12.30pm.

Khajuraho

The erotic carvings that swathe Khajuraho's three groups of Unesco World Heritage Site-listed temples are among the finest temple art in the world. The Western Group of temples, in particular, contains some stunning sculptures. See our special colour illustration (p640) for more details.

Many travellers complain about the tiring persistence of touts here, and the village is fully on the tour bus map. Their complaints are well founded, but it's not so bad that you should contemplate missing out on these beautiful temples.

History

Legend has it that Khajuraho was founded by Chardravarma, the son of the moon god Chandra, who descended and saw a beautiful maiden as she bathed in a stream. Historians tell us that most of the 85 original temples (of which 25 remain) were built from AD 950 to 1050 during the Chandela dynasty, and they remained active long after the Chandelas moved their capital to Mahoba.

Khajuraho's isolation may well have helped preserve it from the desecration Muslim invaders inflicted on 'idolatrous' temples elsewhere, but perhaps for the same reason the area was slowly abandoned and eventually fell into ruin, letting the jungle take over. The wider world remained largely ignorant until British officer TS Burt was apparently guided to the ruins by his palanquin bearers in 1838.

👁 Sights

Temples

The temples are superb examples of Indo-Aryan architecture, but it's their liberally embellished carvings that have made Khajuraho famous. Around the outsides of the temples are bands of exceedingly artistic stonework showing a storyboard of life a millennium ago – gods, goddesses, warriors, musicians, and real and mythological animals.

Two elements appear repeatedly – women and sex. Sensuous, posturing surasundaris (heavenly nymphs), apsaras (dancing surasundaris) and nayikas (mortal surasundaris) have been carved with a half-twist and slight sideways lean that make the playful figures dance and swirl out from the temple. The mithuna (pairs, threesomes etc of men and women depicted in erotic poses) display the great skill of the sculptors and the dexterity of the Chandelas.

Western Group – Inside the Fenced Enclosure

Khajuraho's most striking, best-preserved temples are those within the fenced-off section of the Western Group (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25; ☺ dawn-dusk) and are the only temples you need to pay to see. An Archaeological Survey of India (ASI) guidebook to Khajuraho (₹60) and a 1½-hour audio guide (₹100) are available at the ticket office. If you'd like a guide, official government prices are ₹900 for a half day and ₹1140 for a full day for up to five people plus a ₹360 to ₹480 language allowance.

A nightly sound-and-light show (Indian/foreigner ₹200/500, child ₹100/250; ☺ in English 6.30pm Oct-Mar, 7.30pm Apr-Sep, in Hindi 7.40pm Oct-Mar, 8.40pm Apr-Sep) sees technicolour floodlights sweep across the temples of the Western Group as Indian classical music soundtracks a potted history of Khajuraho, narrated by the 'master sculptor'. Photography is prohibited.

★ Lakshmana Temple HINDU TEMPLE

The large Lakshmana Temple took 20 years to build and was completed in about AD 954 during the reign of Dhanga, according to an inscribed slab in the mandapa (pillared pavilion in front of a temple). It's arguably the best preserved of all the Khajuraho temples.

You'll see carvings of battalions of soldiers here – the Chandelas were generally at war when they weren't inventing new sexual positions. On the south side is a highly gymnastic orgy, including one gentleman proving that a horse can be a man's best friend, while a shocked figure peeks out from behind her hands. More sensuous figures intertwine between the elephants in the frieze ringing the basement, while some superb carvings can be found around the garbhagriha (inner sanctum). Lakshmana is dedicated to Vishnu, although it's similar in design to the Shiva temples Vishvanath and Kandariya-Mahadev.

Varaha, dedicated to Vishnu's boar incarnation, and the locked Lakshmi are two small shrines facing the large Lakshmana Temple. Inside Varaha is a wonderful, 1.5m-high sandstone boar, dating from AD 900 and meticulously carved with a pantheon of gods.

★ Kandariya-Mahadev HINDU TEMPLE

The 30.5m-long Kandariya-Mahadev, built between 1025 and 1050, is the largest temple and represents the high point of Chandelan architecture. It also has the most representations of female beauty and sexual acrobatics. There are 872 statues, most nearly 1m high – taller than those at the other temples. One frequently photographed sculpture illustrates the feasibility of the handstand position.

The 31m-high sikhara here is, like linga, a phallic Shiva symbol, worshipped by Hindus hoping to seek deliverance from the cycle of reincarnation. It's decorated with 84 subsidiary spires, which make up a mountain-like rooftop scene reminiscent of the Himalayan abode of the gods.

Mahadeva HINDU TEMPLE

Mahadeva, a small ruined temple on the same platform as Kandariya-Mahadev and Devi Jagadamba, is dedicated to Shiva, who is carved on the lintel of its doorway. It houses one of Khajuraho's finest sculptures – a sardula (mythical beast – part lion, part other animal – possibly human) caressing a 1m-high woman.

Devi Jagadamba HINDU TEMPLE

Devi Jagadamba was originally dedicated to Vishnu, but later to Parvati and then Kali. The carvings include sardulas accompanied by Vishnu, surasundaris, and mithunas frolicking in the third uppermost band. Its three-part design is simpler than Kandariya-Mahadev and Chitragupta. It has more in common with Chitragupta, but is less embellished with carvings so is thought to be a little older.

Chitragupta HINDU TEMPLE

North of Devi Jagadamba, Chitragupta (1000–25) is unique in Khajuraho – and rare among North Indian temples – in being dedicated to the sun god Surya. While its condition is not as good as the other temples, it has some fine carvings of apsaras and surasundaris, elephant fights and hunting scenes, mithuna and a procession of stone-carriers. In the inner sanctum, Surya drives his seven-horse chariot, while in the central niche on the south facade is an 11-headed statue of Vishnu, representing the god and 10 of his 22 incarnations.

Parvati Temple HINDU TEMPLE

Continuing around the enclosure from Chitragupta, the closed-up Parvati Temple is on your right, a small temple originally dedicated to Vishnu and now with an image of Gauri riding a godha (iguana).

Vishvanath Temple HINDU TEMPLE

Believed to have been built in 1002, the Vishvanath Temple is reached by steps on the northern and southern sides. Elephants flank the southern steps. Vishvanath anticipates Kandariya-Mahadev, with which it shares saptamatrikas (seven mothers) flanked by Ganesh and Virabhadra, and is another superlative example of Chandelan architecture. Its sculptures include sensuous surasundari writing letters, cuddling babies and playing music while languishing more provocatively than at other temples.

At the other end of the platform, a 2.2m-long statue of Nandi, Shiva's bull vehicle, faces the temple. The basement of the 12-pillared shrine is decorated with an elephant frieze that recalls similar work on Lakshmana's facade.

Pratapeswar

HINDU TEMPLE

Near Vishvanath Temple, the white temple Pratapeswar is a much more recent bricks-and-mortar structure built around 200 years ago.

Western Group – Outside the Fenced Enclosure

Matangesvara

Skirting the southern boundary of the fenced enclosure, Matangesvara is the only temple in the Western Group still in everyday use. It may be the plainest temple here (suggesting an early construction), but inside it sports a polished 2.5m-high lingam (phallic image of Shiva). From its platform you can peer into an open-air storage facility scattered with temple finds, but it's not open to the public.

Chausath Yogini

HINDU TEMPLE

The ruins of Chausath Yogini, beyond Shiv Sagar, date to the late 9th century and are probably the oldest at Khajuraho. Constructed entirely of granite, it's the only temple not aligned east to west. The temple's name means 64 – it once had 64 cells for the yoginis (female attendants) of Kali, while the 65th sheltered the goddess herself. It's reputedly India's oldest yogini temple.

Eastern Group – Old Village Temples

The Eastern Group includes three Hindu temples scattered around the old village and four Jain temples further south, three of which are in a walled enclosure.

Hanuman Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Basti Rd) The Hanuman Temple contains a 2.5m-tall statue of the Hindu monkey god. It's little more than a bright orange shrine, but the interest is in the pedestal inscription dating to AD 922, the oldest dateable inscription in Khajuraho.

Brahma Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

The granite Brahma Temple, with its sandstone sikhara overlooking Narora Sagar, is one of the oldest in Khajuraho, dating from about AD 900. The four-faced lingam in the sanctum led to it being incorrectly named, but the image of Vishnu above the sanctum doorway reveals its original dedication to Vishnu.

Javari Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Resembling Chaturbhuj Temple in the southern group, Javari Temple (1075–1100) stands just north of the old village. It's dedicated to Vishnu and is a good example of small-scale Khajuraho architecture for its crocodile-covered entrance and slender sikhara.

Vamana Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Vamana Temple (1050–75), 200m further north of Javari Temple, is dedicated to the dwarf incarnation of Vishnu. It has quirky touches such as elephants protruding from the walls, but its sikhara is devoid of subsidiary spires and there are few erotic scenes. Its roofed mahaman-dapa (main hall) is an anomaly in Khajuraho but typical among medieval west Indian temples.

Khajuraho Temples

WESTERN GROUP

The sheer volume of artwork at Khajuraho's best-preserved temples can be overwhelming. Initiate yourself with this introductory tour, which highlights some of those easy-to-miss details.

First, admire the sandstone boar ① in the Varaha shrine before heading towards Lakshmana Temple ② to study the south side of the temple's base, which has some of the raunchiest artwork in Khajuraho: first up, a nine-person orgy; further along, a guy getting very friendly with a horse. Up on the temple platform see a superb dancing Ganesh carved into a niche (south side), before walking to the west side for graceful surasundaris (nymphs): one removing a thorn from her foot; another draped in a wet sari; a third admiring herself in a mirror.

Next is Khajuraho's largest temple, Kandariya-Mahadev ③. Carvings to look for here include the famous handstand position (south side), but the most impressive thing about this temple is the scale of it, particularly its soaring rooftops.

Mahadeva ④ and Devi Jagadamba ⑤ share the same stone plinth as Kandariya-Mahadev, as do four beautifully carved sardula (part-lion, part-human mythical beasts), each caressing a stone lion – one is at the entrance to Mahadeva; the other three stand alone on the plinth.

Walk north from here to Chitragupta ⑥, with beautiful carvings hidden on the west side, as well as elephant friezes around the temple's base (north side). The interior here is particularly impressive.

Continue east to Vishvanath Temple ⑦ for more fabulous carvings before admiring the impressive statue of Vishnu's bull in the Nandi shrine ⑧ opposite.

DANIEL MCCORMAN ©

Sikharas

Despite its many fine statues, perhaps the most impressive thing about Kandariya-Mahadev is its soaring sikharas (temple rooftops), said to represent the Himalayan abode of the gods.

Handstand Position

Perhaps Khajuraho's most famous carving, this flexible flirtation is above you as you stand on the south side of the awesome Kandariya-Mahadev.

Sardula Statue

There are four lion-stroking sardula (part-lion, part-human mythical beasts) on this huge stone plinth, but this one, guarding the entrance to Mahadeva, is our favourite.

Kama Sutra Carvings

Although commonly referred to as Kama Sutra carvings, Khajuraho's erotic artwork does not properly illustrate Vatsyayana's famous sutra. Debate continues as to its significance: to appease evil spirits or imply rulers here were virile, thus powerful? Interestingly, the erotic carvings are never located close to the temple deity.

Surasundaris

Beautifully graceful depictions of nymphs are found on a number of Khajuraho temples. And despite all the depictions of gymnastic orgies, the wonderfully seductive surasundari draped in a wet sari is arguably the most erotic of all.

Vishnu's Boar

This 9th-century statue of Varaha, the boar incarnation of Vishnu, is carved all over with figures of Bramanical gods and goddesses. Under Varaha's foot notice the serpent Seshanaga in a devotional posture, and the feet of a goddess, now missing.

Nandi Statue

This massive 2.2m-long statue of Nandi, the bull-vehicle of Shiva, is enshrined in a pavilion facing Vishvanath Temple.

Ghantai Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

Located between the old village and the Jain Enclosure, the small Ghantai Temple, also Jain, is named after the ghanta (chain and bell) decorations on its pillars. It was once similar to nearby Parsvanath, but only its pillared shell remains, and it's normally locked.

Eastern Group – Jain Enclosure

Parsvanath Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

While not competing in size and erotica with the western-enclosure temples, Parsvanath Temple, the largest of the Jain temples in the walled enclosure, is notable for the exceptional precision of its construction as well as for its sculptural beauty. Some of the best preserved of Khajuraho's most famous images can be seen here, including the woman removing a thorn from her foot and another applying eye make-up, both on the southern side.

Although the temple was originally dedicated to Adinath, a jet-black image of Parsvanath was substituted about a century ago. Both an inscription on the mahamandapa doorway and its similarities with the slightly simpler Lakshmana Temple date it to AD 950–70.

Adinath

JAIN TEMPLE

Adjacent to Parsvanath Temple, the smaller Adinath has been partially restored over the centuries. With fine carvings on its three bands of sculptures, it's similar to Khajuraho's Hindu temples, particularly Vamana. Only the striking black image in the inner sanctum triggers a Jain reminder.

Shanti Nath

JAIN TEMPLE

Shanti Nath, built about a century ago, houses components from older temples, including a 4.5m-high Adinath statue with a plastered-over inscription on the pedestal dating to about 1027.

Southern Group

Duladeo Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

A dirt track runs to the isolated Duladeo Temple, about 1km south of the Jain enclosure. This is the youngest temple, dating to 1100–1150. Its relatively wooden, repetitious sculptures, such as those of Shiva, suggest that Khajuraho's temple builders had passed their artistic peak by this point, although they had certainly lost none of their zeal for eroticism.

Chaturbhuj Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Anticipating Duladeo and its flaws, the ruined Chaturbhuj Temple (c 1100) has a fine 2.7m-high, four-armed statue of Vishnu in the sanctum. It is Khajuraho's only developed temple without erotic sculptures.

Bijamandala Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Just before Chaturbhuj there's a signed track leading to Bijamandala Temple. This is the excavated mound of an 11th-century temple, dedicated to Shiva (judging by the white marble lingam at the apex of the mound). Although there are some exquisitely carved figures, unfinished carvings were also excavated, suggesting that what would have been Khajuraho's largest temple was abandoned as resources flagged.

Other Sights

Raneh Falls

WATERFALL

The 30m-high Raneh Falls is a worthwhile nature excursion, 18km from Khajuraho, if it has just rained.

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(Main Rd; admission free with same-day Western Group ticket; ☀ 9am–5pm Sat–Thu) FREE The Archaeological Museum, announced by a wonderful 11th-century statue of Ganesh dancing sensuously for an elephant-headed deity, has a small but well-presented collection of sculptures from around Khajuraho. There are plans to move this museum to a larger, seemingly ready-to-go site north of the Western Group, but they've been telling us that since 2006.

Old Village

AREA

If you can put up with the persistent requests from local children for pens and money, then a stroll or cycle around the dusty narrow streets of the old village can be very rewarding. Homes here are white-washed or painted in colourful pastels and the lanes are dotted with small shrines, old wells and water pumps.

Activities

Many budget hotels offer cheap ayurvedic massage treatments of varying levels of authenticity. Top-end hotels offer more luxurious versions.

Ayur Arogyam

Madras Coffee House

SOUTH INDIAN $

(cnr Main & Jain Temples Rds; mains ₹50-200; ☎) 8.30am-9.30pm) Three generations of great, honest South Indian fare – dosa, idli (spongy round fermented rice cakes), uttapam (thick savoury rice pancakes), thali – as well as coffee (Madras style with chicory) and chai, served in a narrow cafe. Ideal for breakfast. The unique house speciality is the tasty egg, cheese and veg dosa (₹200).

Lassi Corner

INDIAN $

(Jain Temples Rd; meals ₹15-60, lassis ₹15-45; ☺ 9am-9.30pm) This tarpaulin-covered bamboo shack is a great place for a quick chai break, lazy lassi, breakfast and simple Indian fare.

★ Raja's Café

MULTICUISINE $$

(www.rajacafe.com; Main Rd; mains ₹140-380; ☺ 8am-10pm; ☎) Raja's has been on top of its game for more than 35 years, with espresso coffee, English breakfasts, wood-fired pizzas, superb Indian, Italian and Chinese dishes, and an otherwise eclectic menu full of things you might miss, depending on your passport (rosti, fish and chips, lasagna).

The location, with a temple-view terrace, is great, as is the restaurant design, with a delightful courtyard shaded by a 170-year-old neem tree. But it's the food that steals the show. Wi-fi downstairs only.

Agrasen

MULTICUISINE $$

(Jain Temples Rd; thalis ₹130-380; ☺ 7am-10.30pm; ☎) While perhaps not India's best – as declared in French – the thalis at this otherwise unthrilling restaurant are extremely good and do come with perhaps one of the best dhal fry in the country. The fact that it tends to fill nightly with locals, not tourists, speaks volumes. A 1st-floor terrace is lit up nicely after dark.

Mediterraneo

ITALIAN $$

(Jain Temples Rd; mains ₹200-440, pizza ₹350-460; ☺ 7.30am-10pm; ☎) Far removed from its Italian roots, Mediterraneo manages acceptable Italian fare served on a lovely terrace overlooking the street. Dishes includes chicken, salads, organic wholewheat pasta and surprisingly good wood-fired pizzas. Beer and wine are also available.

Blue Sky Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Main Rd; mains ₹80-260, tree house per person ₹50; ☺ 7am-10.30pm) An ordinary restaurant with an extraordinary seating arrangement: a rickety wooden platform, three storeys up, leading out to the most unusual place to eat in Khajuraho – a one-table tree house with an unrivaled view of the western temples.

Shopping

Kandariya Art & Culture

HANDICRAFTS

(☎ 07686-274031; Jhansi Rd; ☺ 9am-9pm) Huge emporium where full-size replicas of some of Khajuraho's temple carvings can be bought – if you have a spare ₹10,000 to ₹1,000,000! Smaller, more affordable versions, along with textiles, wood carvings and marble inlay, can be found indoors.

Nightly one-hour folk-dancing performances (₹550) can be seen at the comfortable indoor theatre here, starting at 8pm and 9.45pm

i Information

Khajuraho is very wired, even at budget hotels. Internet cafes around town tend to charge ₹40 per hour. There are several ATMs across from the lake on Jhansi Rd.

Community Health Centre (☎ 07686-272498; Link Rd No 2; ☺ 24hr) Helpful staff but with limited English. Hours for nonemergency consultations are 8am to 1pm and 5pm to 6pm.

Post Office (☺ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat)

State Bank of India (Main Rd; ☺ 10.30am-2.30pm & 3-4.30pm Mon-Sat) Changes cash and travellers cheques.

Tourist Interpretation & Facilitation Centre (☎ 07686-274051; khajuraho@mptourism.com; Main Rd; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 3rd Sat of the month) Has leaflets on statewide tourist destinations. Also has a stand at the airport and train station.

Tourist Police (☎ 07686-272690; Main Rd; ☺ 24hr) Handy Tourist Police booth near the western temples.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Khajuraho has a new, wildly modern airport (for its surroundings) that's set to open by 2016.

Air India (www.airindia.in) Has cheaper 3.05pm flights to Delhi and Varanasi, but only on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday.

Jet Airways (www.jetairways.com) Has a daily 1.40pm flight to Delhi via Varanasi.

BUS

If the bus reservation office (☺ 8am & 4pm) is closed, the owner of the Madhur coffee stand, just opposite, is very helpful and trustworthy.

For Jhansi and Gwalior, you'll need to catch a bus to Chhatarpur (₹50, 1½ hours, hourly 7am to 5pm) and switch there. For Orchha, get a Jhansi bus in Chhatarpur, which can drop you at the junction to Orchha, from where you can wave down a shared autorickshaw (₹10) to go the rest of the way. Buses also run to Madla (for Panna National Park; ₹40, one hour, 7.30am, 8.45am, 10am, 12.30pm and 3pm).

There are two daily buses to Satna (₹150, four hours, 7.30am and 3pm), a much larger and more convenient rail hub. Coming the other way, buses depart for Khajuraho twice daily as well (₹120, four hours, 6.30am and 2.30pm).

Much more frequent buses can be caught at the Bamitha crossroads, 11km away on Hwy 75, where buses between Gwalior, Jhansi and Satna shuttle through all day. Catch a shared 4WD (₹20, 7am to 7pm) to Bamitha from the bus stand or as they drive down Jhansi Rd.

TAXI

Yashwaran Taxi Driver Union is opposite Gole Market, under a neem tree. Fares including all taxes and tolls: airport (₹300), train station (₹300), Raneh Falls (₹800), Panna National Park (in 4WD, ₹2000), Satna (₹2500), Orchha (₹3500), Chitrakut (₹3500), Bandhavgarh (₹4000, Varanasi (₹8000) and Agra (₹8000).

TRAIN

Four useful trains leave from Khajuraho train station:

Delhi (22447 Khajuraho–Nizamuddin Express) sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹365/935/1365, 11½ hours, 6.20pm daily, via Jhansi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹190/535/735, five hours) and Agra (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹280/715/1000, 8½ hours)

Jhansi (19655 Kurj Udz Express) sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹160/485/690, 4½ hours, 9.10am daily, from where you can catch an autorickshaw to Orchha

Jhansi (51822, unreserved passenger train) ₹40, four hours, 12.30pm daily, stopping at the tiny Orchha train station

Varanasi (21107 Khajuraho–Varanasi Express) sleeper/3AC ₹265/715, 11 hours, 11.40pm Tuesday, Friday and Sunday

Train tickets can be bought from the train reservation office (☎07686-274416; ☀8am–noon & 1-4pm Mon–Sat, to 2pm Sun) at the bus stand. You must book tickets at least four hours before departure.

Coming to Khajuraho, the 21108 Varanasi–Khajuraho Express leaves Varanasi on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday at 5.45pm and arrives in Khajuraho at 5.15am. The 12448 U P Sampark Kranti leaves Delhi's Hazrat Nizamuddin station daily at 8.10pm and passes Agra (11.15pm) before reaching Mahoba (5.08am) where part of the train continues to Khajuraho (6.35am) as Slip Route 22448. If you book a seat through from Nizamuddin to Khajuraho, you'll automatically be seated in the right carriages.

From Jhansi, the 19666 Udz Kurj Exp departs at 2.35pm and arrives in Khajuraho at 7.30pm.

Getting Around

Autorickshaws to the airport/train station charge ₹80/100, but if you don't have too much luggage, it's easy enough to wave down a bus or a shared 4WD (₹20) as they head along Jhansi Rd either into or out of town. b

Bicycle is a great way to get around. Mohamad at Best Bicycles (☎9893240074; Jain Temples Rd; per day ₹50-150; ☀8am-7pm) has been in the bike business since 1982. He rents bikes and mountain bikes in varying conditions.

Around Khajuraho

Panna National Park

Tigers are now making a comeback after being reintroduced to Panna National Park (☎07732-252135; www.pannatigerreserve.in; vehicle with up to 8 passengers Indian/foreigner ₹1250/2450, 6-person jeep hire ₹2000, guide ₹300; ☀16 Oct-31-Jun, closed Wed evenings) from Bandhavgarh, Pench and Kanha, and after some cubs have been born to these new settlers. At the time of research, there were an estimated 22 tigers in the park. This is also a good place to see crocodiles and, with the Ken River flowing through it, Panna is a peaceful, picturesque place to spend a day on your way to or from Khajuraho. In fact, it's easy enough to do an afternoon safari here as a day trip from Khajuraho, using public transport to get to and from Madla.

Even if you don't stay the night here, it's worth making Jungle Camp (☎07732-275275; jcmadla@mptourism.com; r incl breakfast ₹2924; ☒) your base. It's on the edge of Madla village, 200m past the large Ken River bridge (if you're coming from Khajuraho), and right by Madla Gate, the main entrance to the park. There's a restaurant (mains ₹90 to ₹280), you can arrange jeep safaris and there's a nicely kept garden dotted with children's play areas in which the very comfortable air-conditioned tents for guests are located.

Regular buses run between Madla and Khajuraho (₹40, one hour) and between Madla and Satna (₹120, three hours), although for Satna you sometimes have to change at the nearby town of Panna.

CENTRAL MADHYA PRADESH

Bhopal

Split by a pair of lakes, Bhopal offers two starkly contrasting cityscapes. In the north is the Muslim-dominated old city, a fascinating area of mosques and crowded bazaars. Bhopal's population is 40% Muslim – one of India's highest concentration of Muslims – and the women in black niqabs (veils) are reminders of the female Islamic rulers who built up Bhopal in the 19th century. North of here is a reminder of a more recent, tragic history – the Union Carbide chemical plant, site of the world's worst industrial disaster.

South of the two lakes, Bhopal is more modern, with wide roads, shopping complexes and upmarket hotels and restaurants nestled comfortably in the Arera and Shamlala Hills, which overlook the lakes and the old city beyond. The central district here is known as New Market.

The main train and bus stations are just off Hamidia Rd – the main budget hotel area – with the bustling chowk (market-place) slightly further southeast. Hamidia Rd is accessed via the Platform 5 end of the train station. The Platform 1 end is where you'll find left luggage (you need your own padlock), MP Tourism, the post office and an ATM.

👁 Sights & Activities

It should come as no surprise that Bhopal is rife with impressive mosques, one of the main attractions of the city.

★ Tribal Museum MUSEUM
(Shamla Hills; Indian/foreigner ₹10/100, camera ₹50; ☀noon-8pm Tue-Sun) Step through the tribal looking glass at this extremely well-done museum dedicated to the seven tribes and subtribes of Madhya Pradesh. Opened in 2013, the artistic space was built by 1500 tribespeople over 2½ years using no materials from outside their villages. The stunning results are divided into five surreal galleries featuring hyper-examples of tribal life. There's also a very interesting museum shop.

Afterwards, compliment your visit by popping over to Rashtriya Manav Sangrahalaya (Museum of Man; www.igrms.com; Shamla Hills; Indian/foreigner ₹10/500, video ₹50;

★ State Museum MUSEUM
(Shamla Hills; Indian/foreigner ₹10/100, camera/video ₹50/200; ☀10.30am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) This first-class archaeological museum spread over 17 galleries includes some wonderful temple sculptures as well as 87 Jain bronzes unearthed by a surprised farmer in western Madhya Pradesh. Keep an eye out for the tiny, but remarkably animated, metal carpet seller in the Royal Art Gallery.

★ Taj-ul-Masjid MOSQUE
(☹closed to non-Muslims noon-3pm Fri) Bhopal's third female ruler, Shah Jahan Begum wanted to create the largest mosque in the world, so in 1877 she set about building Taj-ul-Masjid. It was still incomplete at her death in 1901, after funds had been diverted to other projects, and construction did not resume until 1971. Fortress-like terracotta walls surround three gleaming white onion domes and a pair of towering pink minarets with white domes. Try to make the dawn azan (Muslim call to prayer). From Hamidia Rd to Taj-ul-Masjid, an autorickshaw costs ₹40.

Jama Masjid MOSQUE
The gold spikes crowning the squat minarets of the Jama Masjid Mosque, built in 1837 by Qudsia Begum, glint serenely above the skull caps and veils swirling through the bazaar below.

Dhai Seedi Ki Masjid MOSQUE
Bhopal's oldest and teeniest mosque inside the grounds of Hamidia Hospital.

MP Tourism Boat Club BOATS
(☎0775-3295043; Lake Drive Rd; ☀10.30am-6.30pm) Offers motorboat rides (₹210, five minutes, minimum three people), pedal boats (₹60 per boat, 30 minutes), jet skiing (₹400 per person) and even parasailing (₹500). Children might enjoy feeding the gaggle of geese that make their home by the boat club. An autorickshaw here from New Market costs ₹80.

👉 Tours

Bhopal-On-Wheels BUS TOUR
(☎0755-3295040; 3½hr tour ₹100; ☀11am-5pm Tue-Sun) A guided tour on a toy-train look-alike open bus, departing from Palash Residency and winding through the hills and the old city. Stops include Lakshmi Narayan

Hotel Sonali Regency

HOTEL $

(☎ 0755-2740880; www.hotelsonaliregency.com; Radha Talkies Rd; s/d from ₹650/750, with AC incl breakfast from ₹1350/1550; 🏠📞) Excellent service, right down to the errand boys, make this a great option near Hamidia Rd. Newly renovated AC rooms have new floors, funky-shaped beds and working hot showers. Skip the lowest category; executive non-AC rooms (from ₹900) are every bit as comfortable as those with air-con. Amenities include towels and toiletries hygienically wrapped in plastic and a morning Times of India.

The manager definitely showers foreigners with extra hospitality. From Hamidia Rd, turn left down the lane alongside Hotel Ranjeet and follow it around to the right.

Hotel Ranjeet

HOTEL $

(☎ 0755-2740500; www.ranjeethotels.com; 3 Hamidia Rd; s/d from ₹450/700, with AC incl breakfast from ₹750/1000; 🏠📞) They look after you in Ranjeet. Even in the cheapest rooms you get your own soap, towel, bottle of mineral water and a complimentary breakfast. On our pass through, rooms were under the knife, getting a contemporary facelift, so expect shiny new floors and woodwork, contemporary bathrooms and higher rates than those listed here.

THE BHOPAL DISASTER: 30 YEARS OF CONTINUING TRAGEDY

At five minutes past midnight on 3 December 1984, 40 tonnes of deadly methyl isocyanate (MIC) gas leaked out over Bhopal from the US-owned Union Carbide chemical plant. Blown by the wind, a 40-foot wall of toxic cloud hugged the ground and coursed through the city. In the ensuing panic, people were trampled trying to escape while others were so disorientated that they ran into the gas.

There were 5295 initial fatalities according to official figures, but the continuing death toll stands at over 25,000. More than 450,000 people suffer from a catalogue of illnesses ranging from hypertension, diabetes and paralysis to premature menopause and skin disorders, while their children experience growth disorders, such as shrunken rib cages. In 2013, according to a water study by the Indian Institute of Toxicology Research, ground water in 22 communities around the abandoned Union Carbide factory was contaminated with cancer- and birth-defect-causing chemicals as well as chemicals known to damage the lungs, liver, kidneys and brain.

The leak at the plant was the result of a saga of untested technology, negligent maintenance and cost-cutting measures. Damages of US$3 billion were demanded, and in 1989 Union Carbide paid the Indian government US$470 million. Winning compensation for the victims, however, has been a tortuous process slowed by the Indian government's wrangling over who was a victim and Dow Chemical's acquisition of Union Carbide in 2001. Both buyer and seller deny ongoing liability.

A multimillion-dollar hospital was funded by the sale of confiscated shares of Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary, while charity Sambhavna Trust Clinic (☎ 0755-2730904; www.bhopal.org; Berasia Rd, Bafna Colony; ☎ 8.30am-3pm), opened in 1996, treats more than 200 Union Carbide victims a day using yoga, ayurvedic treatments, conventional medicine and herbal remedies. Volunteers can work in a range of areas from water testing and medical research to gardening and internet communications; they are hugely appreciated and offered board and lodgings at the medical centre. Visitors are welcome and donations can be made.

Bafna Colony is off Berasia Rd. If walking from Hamidia Rd, turn right after about 500m and keep asking for Sambhavna.

To commemorate the 30th anniversary of the tragedy, the new and at times extremely sombre Remember Bhopal Museum (www.rememberbhopal.net; HIG 22, Housing Board Colony, Berasia Rd, near Triveni Heights; ☎ 10am-5pm Tue-Sun) opened in 2014 in New Housing Board Colony near the now-derelict Union Carbide factory site, preserving the belongings and pictures of victims as well as over 50 audio recording from survivors, doctors and forensic experts.

The restaurant here is good, there's a bar, and it's convenient to the bus and train stations.

Palash Residency

HOTEL $$

(☎0755-2553066; palash@mptourism.com; TT Nagar; s/d from ₹3860/4220; 🍷🍷🍷) This stately midrange MP Tourism hotel is walking distance from New Market. Breezy corridors lead to smart rooms with heavy wood furniture, wall-mounted flat-screen TVs, kettles and complimentary toiletries; bathrooms are less appealing. There's free wi-fi in the lobby, a spa, bar, three restaurants and a new pool. MP Tourism is based here.

★ Jehan Numa Palace Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎0755-2661100; www.hoteljehanumapalace.com; 157 Shamla Hill; patio s/d ₹5480/6700, s/d from ₹7920/9140, ste from ₹19,500, all incl breakfast; 🍷🍷🍷) This former 19th-century palace lost none of its colonial-era charm through its conversion into a top-class hotel. Arched walkways and immaculate lawns lead you to beautifully decorated rooms. The fact that you can sleep in a patio room – perfectly great – for under US$100 in a five-star hotel is ridiculous. Worth a splurge.

There's a palm-lined pool, an excellent health spa and three restaurants, two bars and a coffee shop.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

★ Zam Zam

STREET FOOD $

(Hamidia Rd; mains ₹50-100; ☀8am-midnight) A standing-room-only crowd swarms this fast-food hotspot day and night for some of Bhopal's best biryani, but it's the finger-lickin', outrageously good chicken tikka, grilled over hot coals before your eyes and dipped in house green-chilli yoghurt sauce, that's the true showstopper. It's so cheap, we ordered both!

★ Bapu Ki Kutia

INDIAN $

Indian Coffee House

SOUTH INDIAN $

(New Market Rd, New Market; mains ₹50-260; ☀7am-11pm) As always, Indian Coffee House is a top spot for breakfast, and this is one of the nicest outlets in India. Waiters in fan-tailed hats dish out filtered coffee plus South Indian favourites.

Manohar

INDIAN $

(6 Hamidia Rd; mains ₹30-150, thali ₹130-160; ☀8am-11pm) This bright, clean, canteen-style restaurant does a brisk business in South Indian breakfasts, thalis, snacks, shakes and a load of presumably more-hygienic versions of many Indian street-food favourites. In truth, it's a bit of a madhouse and rightfully so. Has an impressive range of cakes, cookies and sweets at a side counter, one of the best in town.

★ Under the Mango Tree

INDIAN $$$

(Jehan Numa Palace Hotel, 157 Shamla Hill; mains ₹380-750; ☀7.30-11pm) Jehan Numa Palace's best restaurant specialises in barbecue kebabs and tandoor. The pankhi chicken kebab (marinated chicken wings) is melt-off-the-bone astonishing, but drowning yourself in flavour with the sampler platter (from ₹830) is the way to go.

Good food, wine, draught beer (Woodpecker, a local swill) and cocktails all combine under a romantic white pavilion and the heavy boughs of a venerable centenarian mango tree.

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(www.cafecoffeeday.com; Lake Drive Rd; coffee ₹60-110; ☀10.30am-10.30pm) Quality fresh coffee. The lakeside location is vying for India's best espresso with a view. There's also a New Market (www.cafecoffeeday.com; 15/9B Rajbhavan Rd; coffee ₹60-110; ☀10.30am-10.30pm) branch.

📍 Information

Post Office (TT Nagar, New Market; ☀10am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 6pm Sun) Convenient postal services in New Market. Also a counter at the train station.

MP Tourism (☎0775-3295040; Palash Residency, TT Nagar; ☀8am-10pm) Also has desks at the airport and train station.

State Bank of India (Rang Mahal Rd; ☀10.30am-4.30pm Mon-Fri, to 1.30pm Sat) The International Division on the 1st floor changes travellers cheques and cash. Has an ATM, plus there are others at the train station and near the central bus stand.

For a more comfortable ride to Indore, Chartered Bus (☎ 0755-4288888; www.charteredbus.in; Palish Residency) departs from Palish Residency Hotel every hour or so from 1.30am to 11.30pm (₹325, 3½ hours) and can be booked online or at its ticket counter at Palish.

TRAIN

There are nearly 20 daily trains to Gwalior, Agra and Delhi and at least five to Ujjain.

i Getting Around

Minibuses and buses (both ₹10) shuttle between New Market and Hamidia Rd all day and all evening. Catch ones to New Market at the eastern end of Hamidia Rd. Returning from New Market, they leave from the Nehru Statue. Autorickshaws cost about ₹60 for the same journey. My Cab (☎ 0775-6666666; www.my-cabindia.com) has taxi services in Bhopal.

The airport is 16km northwest of central Bhopal. Expect to pay at least ₹250 for an autorickshaw and around ₹700 for a taxi.

Sanchi

Rising from the plains, 46km northeast of Bhopal, is a rounded hill topped with some of India's oldest Buddhist structures.

In 262 BC, repentant of the horrors he had inflicted on Kalinga, in present-day Odisha, the Mauryan emperor Ashoka embraced Buddhism. As a penance he built the Great Stupa at Sanchi, near the birthplace of his wife. A domed edifice used to house religious relics, it was the first Buddhist monument in the region, although many other religious structures followed. Today, the remarkably preserved Great Stupa is the centerpiece of Sanchi's Buddhist Monuments, a Unesco World Heritage Site. As Hinduism gradually reabsorbed Buddhism, the site decayed and was forgotten, until being rediscovered in 1818 by a British army officer.

Although Sanchi can be visited as a day trip from Bhopal, this crossroads village is a relaxing spot to spend the night, and a number of side trips can be taken from here.

i Sights

Buddhist Monuments

The hilltop Buddhist monuments (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25; ☎ dawn-dusk) are reached via a path and stone steps at the end of Monuments Rd (which is a continuation of the road that leaves the train station), where the ticket office (☀️ dawn-dusk) is located. If you don't want to walk up the hill, autorickshaws will deposit you at the top for ₹30. If you are interested in a guide, official central government guides mill about and charge ₹1035/1310 for half-/full day.

If you're going up to the stupas for sunrise, buy a ticket the day before. Remember, it's auspicious to walk clockwise around Buddhist monuments.

Stupas

Beautifully proportioned, Stupa 1 (Great Stupa) is the main structure on the hill, directly in front of you as you enter the complex from the north. Originally constructed by Ashoka, it was later enlarged and the original brick stupa enclosed within a stone one. Presently it stands 16m high and 37m in diameter. Encircling the stupa is a wall with four entrances through magnificently carved toranas (gateways) that are the finest Buddhist works of art in Sanchi, if not India.

Stupa 2 is halfway down the hill to the west (turn right at Stupa 1). If you come up from the village by the main route you can walk back down via Stupa 2, although be prepared for some fence-hopping at the bottom. Instead of gateways, 'medallions' decorate the surrounding wall – naive in design, but full of energy and imagination. Flowers, animals and people – some mythological – ring the stupa.

Stupa 3 is northeast of the Great Stupa (you pass it on your left as you approach the Great Stupa from the main entrance) and similar in design, though smaller, with a single, rather fine gateway. It once contained relics of two important disciples of Buddha:

Sari Puttha and Maha Moggallana. They were moved to London in 1853 but returned in 1953 and are now kept in the modern vihara (resting place).

Only the base is left of the 2nd-century-BC Stupa 4, which stands behind Stupa 3. Between Stupas 1 and 3 is the small Stupa 5, unusual in that it once contained a statue of Buddha, now displayed in the museum.

Toranas

The Great Stupa's four toranas (gateways) were erected around 35 BC, but had all fallen down by the time the site was rediscovered. They have since been repositioned. Scenes carved onto the pillars and their triple architraves are mainly tales from the Jatakas, episodes from Buddha's various lives.

At this stage in Buddhist art, Buddha himself was never represented directly – only his presence was alluded to through symbols. The lotus stands for his birth, the bodhi tree for his enlightenment, the wheel for his teachings, and the footprint and throne for his presence. The stupa itself also symbolises Buddha.

Northern Gateway

GATE

The Northern Gateway, topped by a broken wheel of law, is the best preserved of the toranas. Scenes include a monkey offering a bowl of honey to Buddha, who is represented by a bodhi tree.

Another panel depicts the Miracle of Sravasti – one of several miracles represented here – in which Buddha, again in the form of a bodhi tree, ascends a road into the air. Elephants support the architraves above the columns, while delicately carved

BEYOND BHOPAL

If you're interested in exploring further around Bhopal, check out the following attractions:

Islamnagar This now-ruined fortified city 11km north of Bhopal was the first capital of Bhopal state, founded as Jagdishpur by the Rajputs before Dost Mohammed Khan occupied and renamed it in the early 18th century. The still-standing walls enclose two villages as well as the remains of two palaces: Chaman Mahal and Rani Mahal.

Bhojpur Built by the founder of Bhopal, Raja Bhoj (1010–53), Bhojpur used to be home to a 400-sq-km manmade lake, which was destroyed in the 15th century by the dam-busting Mandu ruler Hoshang Shah. Thankfully, the magnificent Bhojeshwar Temple survived the attack.

Bhimbetka Secreted in a forest of teak and sal in craggy cliffs 46km south of Bhopal are more than 700 rock shelters. Around 500 of them contain some of the world's oldest prehistoric paintings.

Eastern Gateway

GATE

The breathtakingly carved figure of a yakshi, hanging from an architrave on the Eastern Gateway, is one of Sanchi's best-known images. One of the pillars, supported by elephants, features scenes from Buddha's entry to nirvana. Another shows Buddha's mother Maya's dream, which she had when he was conceived, of an elephant standing on the moon.

Across the front of the middle architrave is the Great Departure, when Buddha (a riderless horse) renounced the sensual life and set out to find enlightenment.

Southern Gateway

GATE

The back-to-back lions supporting the Southern Gateway, the oldest gateway, form the state emblem of India, which can be seen on every banknote. The gateway narrates Ashoka's life as a Buddhist, with scenes of Buddha's birth and another representation of the Great Departure.

Also featured is the Chhaddanta Jataka, a story in which Bodhisattva (Buddha before he had reached enlightenment) took on the form of an elephant king who had six tusks. The less favoured of the elephant king's two wives was so jealous of the other that she decided to starve herself to death, vowing to come back to life as the queen of Benares in order to have the power to avenge her husband's favouritism. Her wish came true, and as queen she ordered hunters to track down and kill the elephant king. A hunter found the great elephant but before he could kill it, the elephant handed over his tusks, an act so noble it led to the queen dying of remorse.

Western Gateway

GATE

Pot-bellied dwarves support the architraves of the Western Gateway, which has some of the site's most interesting scenes. The top architrave shows Buddha in seven different incarnations, manifested three times as a stupa and four times as a tree.

The rear of one pillar shows Buddha resisting the Temptation of Mara (the Buddhist personification of evil, often called the Buddhist devil), while demons flee and angels cheer.

Pillars

Of the scattered pillar remains, the most important is Pillar 10, erected by Ashoka but later broken. Two upper sections of this beautifully proportioned and executed shaft lie side by side behind Stupa 1; the capital (head of the pillar, usually sculpted) is in the museum. Pillar 25, east of Stupa 1, dating from the Sunga period (2nd century BC) and the 5th-century-AD Pillar 35, west of Stupa 1, are less impressive.

Temples

Temple 18, behind Stupa 1, is a chaitya (prayer room or assembly hall) remarkably similar in style to classical Greek columned buildings. It dates from around the 7th century AD, but traces of earlier wooden buildings have been discovered beneath it. To its left is the small, also Greek-like Temple 17. Beyond both of them, the large Temple 40 dates back to the Ashokan period, in part.

The rectangular Temple 31, beside Stupa 5, was built in the 6th or 7th century, but reconstructed during the 10th or 11th century. It contains a well-executed image of Buddha.

Monasteries

The earliest monasteries were made of wood and are long gone. The usual plan was of a central courtyard surrounded by monastic cells. These days only the courtyards and stone foundations remain. Monasteries 45 and Monastery 47, standing on the eastern ridge to the left of Stupa 1, date from the transition from Buddhism to Hinduism, with strong Hindu elements in their design. The former has two sitting Buddhas. The one housed inside is exceptional. Behind Monastery 51, partway down the hill towards Stupa 2, is the Great Bowl, carved from a boulder, into which food and offerings were placed for distribution to the monks.

Other Sights

Vihara

MUSEUM

(☉ 9am-5pm) The vihara, literally 'resting place', was built to house the returned relics from Stupa 3. They can be viewed on the last Sunday of the month. It's immediately on your left as you enter the complex.

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(admission incl with Stupa ticket; ☉ 9am-5pm Tue-Sun) This fine museum has a small collection of sculptures from the site. The centrepiece is the 3rd-century-BC lion capital from the Ashoka Pillar 10. Other highlights include a yakshi hanging from a mango tree, and beautifully serene Buddha figures in red sandstone. There are also some interesting photos showing the site, pre-restoration.

Next door is the preserved Gothic-style 'bungalow' of Sir John Marshall, former director of the Archaeological Survey of India. Marshall stayed here from 1912 to 1913 and was the instrumental figure in excavations.

New Jaiswal Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9981941274; nic_cool111@yahoo.co.in; Monuments Rd; s/d/tr ₹450/550/650) This friendly place has basic but colourful rooms and small private bathrooms with sit-down flush toilets. Does basic meals and air-coolers can be provided.

Krishna Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 07482-266610; Bhopal-Vidisha Rd; s/d from ₹200/450; @) Simple rooftop rooms, some with sit-down flush toilets, are slightly more expensive than the darker, noisier rooms at the front. It's above Sai Chemist Shop. Pancakes and a few traveller favourites are available from the kitchen.

★ Gateway Retreat

HOTEL $$

(☎ 07482-266723; www.mptourism.com; Bhopal-Vidisha Rd; s/d ₹990/1170, with AC from ₹2140/2690, incl breakfast; 📶 📶 📶) This family-friendly MP Tourism hotel is the most comfortable place to stay in Sanchi. AC bungalows are set among well-kept gardens, with a small children's play area and a rather big slide leading to a rather small kiddie pool. Note that non-AC rooms are not located here but rather nearby at Gateway Cafeteria.

The restaurant (mains ₹110 to ₹290) is Sanchi's best and there's a bar.

Gateway Cafeteria

INDIAN $

(Monuments Rd; mains ₹70-100; ☉ 8am-10am, noon-3pm & 7-10.30pm) This simple MP Tourism place has a very basic Indian menu and coffee in addition to housing the non-AC rooms of Gateway Retreat.

Information

A couple of places in the market have internet access (per hr ₹30; ☉ 8am-10.30pm).

Getting There & Around

BIKE

You can rent bicycles from Usmam (per hr/day ₹10/50) at the market.

BUS

Every half-hour buses connect Sanchi with Bhopal (₹45, 1½ hours, 6am to 10pm) and Vidisha (₹10, 20 minutes, 6am to 11pm). Catch them at the village crossroads.

TRAIN

Train is a decent option for getting to Sanchi from Bhopal. It takes less than an hour so there's no need to book a seat: just turn up with enough time to queue for a 'general' ticket (₹10 to ₹30) and then squeeze on. At least four daily trains leave from Bhopal (8am, 10am, 3.05pm, and 6.15pm) and four run in the other direction (8am, 10.30am, 4.30pm and 7.30pm) from Sanchi.

Around Sanchi

Vidisha

☎ 07592 / POP 155,959

This small but thriving market town, 8km northeast of Sanchi, was a commercial centre in the 5th and 6th centuries BC. These days it's an interesting place for a wander or a chai break en route to the Udaigiri Caves.

Many of the attractive whitewashed or painted buildings still have old wooden balconies that overlook the market streets where horse-drawn carts share space with scooters and rickshaws. There are also a number of brightly coloured temples dotted around the old town, which is located to the left of the main road from Sanchi.

Past the town, and over the railway line, is the dusty District Museum (Sagar-Vidisha Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/50, camera ₹50; ☀10am-5pm Tue-Sun), which houses some beautiful sculptures recovered from local sites. The most impressive is a 3m-high, 2nd-century-BC stone statue of Kuber Yaksha (treasurer of the gods), on display as you enter.

It's a straightforward 30-minute cycle from Sanchi or else there are frequent buses (₹10, 20 minutes).

Udaigiri Caves

Cut into a sandstone hill, about 5km north-west of Vidisha, are some 20 Gupta cave shrines (☀dawn-dusk), which date from the reign of Chandragupta II (AD 382-401). Most are Hindu but two, near the top of the hill, are Jain (Caves 1 and 20) – unfortunately both are closed due to unsafe roofs.

In Cave 4 is a lingam bearing Shiva's face complete with a third eye. Cave 5 contains the finest carving – a superb image of Vishnu in his boar incarnation topped with a frieze of gods, who also flank the entrance to Cave 6. Lotus-ceilinged Cave 7 was cut out for the personal use of Chandragupta II. On the top of the hill are ruins of a 6th-century Gupta temple dedicated to the sun god.

To get here by bike from Sanchi, head towards Vidisha, but turn left about 1km before the town, following a sign for Udaigiri. Follow the road to the Betwa River, cross the river then take the first left and keep going until you reach the caves. Alternatively, take a bus to Vidisha then a rickshaw (₹150 return). A return rickshaw from Sanchi is about ₹400.

If you want to cycle back via Vidisha, cross back over the river and keep going straight instead of bearing round to the right on the road you took from Sanchi.

Heliodorus Pillar

The Heliodorus Pillar (Khamb Baba), just beyond the Udaigiri Caves turn-off, was erected by a Greek ambassador, Heliodorus from Taxila (now in Pakistan), in about 140

BC, and dedicated to Vasudeva. The pillar is worshipped by local fishermen who chain themselves to the pillar on full-moon nights. It's said they then become possessed and are able to drive evil spirits from other locals. When someone has been exorcised, they drive a nail into the tamarind tree nearby, fixing to it a lime, a piece of coconut, a red thread and supposedly the spirit. The large tree is bristling with old nails.

The pillar is close to the Udaigiri Caves. Once you cross the Betwa River, carry straight on, rather than turning left for the caves, and you'll soon see a sign directing you up a small lane on your right, which leads to the pillar.

Pachmarhi

Madhya Pradesh's only hill station is surrounded by waterfalls, cave temples and the forested ranges of the Satpura Tiger Reserve and offers a refreshing escape from steamy central India.

Even if you don't go on an organised trek or 4WD safari, you can easily spend a couple of days here cycling or hiking to the numerous sights before taking a dip in one of the natural pools that dot the area.

Explorer Captain J Forsyth 'discovered' Pachmarhi as late as 1857 and set up India's first Forestry Department at Bison Lodge in 1862. Soon after, the British army set up regional headquarters here, starting an association with the military that remains today.

👁 Sights

Many of the sights in Pachmarhi fall within Satpura National Park; to visit, you'll need a ticket from the office outside Bison Lodge. This allows entry to Bison Lodge, Bee Falls, Duchess Falls, Reechgarh, Astachal, Ranykund and Rajat Prapat (including Panchuli Kund and Apsara Vihar). Other sights in the area are free with the exception of the Satpuri Tiger Reserve.

Satpura National Park

NATURE RESERVE

Satpura Tiger Reserve NATURE RESERVE

(www.satpura-national-park.com; Indian/foreigner per 4WD ₹2400/4400; ☀️ 6am-7pm mid-Oct–Jun) This reserve, entered from Madhai 93km northwest of Pachmarhi by road, counts an estimated 40-odd tigers and unknown number of leopards; chances of sighting the latter, along with Indian gaurs, sloth bears, monkeys, deer and birds of all type, are decent. Safaris can be arranged through agencies, online (www.mponline.gov.in) or at the gate itself.

On top of your 4WD entrance fee, you will need to pay for one guide per vehicle (₹300). The 4WDs hold up to six people in addition to the guide and driver. Boat safaris can also be arranged for up to 10 people (₹4000 per boat, 45 minutes). Accommodation in the reserve is limited and expensive, but there's an affordable Forest Rest House bookable from Madhai Gate itself.

To reach Madhai, shared 4WDs leave when full between 6am and 8pm from the Pachmarhi bus stand (₹150 per person, three hours).

Chauragarh VIEWPOINT

South of Jaistambha is the road that leads towards Chauragarh (1308m), Madhya Pradesh's third-highest peak. The Shiva shrine at the top attracts tens of thousands of pilgrims during Shivaratri Mela. On the way, stop at Handi Khoh, also known as Suicide Point, to gawk down the 100m canyon into the dense forest. You'll spy Chauragarh in the distance from here as well as Priyadarshini (Forsyth Point), further along the road.

About 3km beyond Priyadarshini the road ends at Mahadeo Cave, where a path 30m into the damp gloom reveals a lingam with attendant priest. This is the beginning of the 1365-step pilgrim trail to Chauragarh (five hours' return hike).

Jata Shankar HINDU TEMPLE

This cave temple is in a beautiful gorge about 2.5km along a good track that's signed just north of the town limits. The small Shiva shrine is hidden under a huge overhanging rock.

Rajat Prapat WATERFALL

(Big Fall) Steps up from the snack stall by Apsara Vihar lead to a point with magnificent views of the gorge and of Rajat Prapat, the tallest of Pachmarhi's waterfalls at 106m, and which tumbles down a gully over a sheer cliff.

Apsara Vihar POND

(Fairy Pool) On the other side of Jaistambha, about 1km past Pandav Caves, is the trailhead for Apsara Vihar, a pool underneath a small waterfall, which is the best of Pachmarhi's natural pools for swimming.

Bison Lodge MUSEUM

(☀️ 9am-5pm Thu-Tue, to 1pm Wed) Captain Forsyth named Bison Lodge after a herd of 'bison' (gaur) he spotted here. It's now an old-fashioned, dilapidated museum focusing on the history, flora and fauna of the Satpura region.

🚲 Activities

Pachmarhi sights can be reached by bicycle, although bikes have to be left at the trailheads from where the hiking begins. You can rent one from Baba Cycles (Subhash Rd; per hr/day ₹10/100; ☀️ 10.15am-7pm).

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Fills up and room rates rocket during high seasons (April to July and December to January). The same applies during national holidays and major festivals. A number of colonial-era buildings have been converted into delightful guesthouses and hotels – most of the latter are run by MP Tourism – which can be found in the Jaistambha area, 2km southwest of the small town.

Pachmarhi Town

There's a restaurant and bar, and a pool and gym were under construction at the time of writing.

Evelyn's Own

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 07578-252056; evelynsown@gmail.com; Sapture Retreat Rd; r ₹2000-4000; 🍷🍷🍷) This rustic colonial-era cottage, built by a British priest then converted into a charming guesthouse by the gruff-but-good-hearted Colonel Balwant Rao and his indomitable wife Pramilla has the right ethos. The main cottage, full of family portraits and period furniture, and the lush grounds, holding loads of hideaway nooks for a peaceful read or afternoon drink, are antiquated delights.

Despite being comfortable, some of the guest rooms themselves, in buildings dotted around pleasant gardens, lead to bathrooms that are a little too crusty for the price. Wi-fi is fussy.

Rock-End Manor

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 07578-252079; www.mptourism.com; r incl meals ₹5600; 🍷🍷) A gorgeous colonial-era building, whitewashed Rock-End is perched above the parched fairways of the army golf course. Six spacious rooms have wonderfully high ceilings, and furnishings are luxurious with quality upholstery, framed paintings and full-body massage showers. There are also great views to be had from seating areas around the covered walkway.

★ Rasoi

DHABA $

(near Company Garden; mains ₹90-500; ☺ 8am-11pm) Not your average roadside dhaba (snack bar). A scrumptious, long-winded nonveg, South Indian and Chinese menu is served here by uniformed waiters in several open-air seating areas covered by corrugated roofs. Our waiter's recommendation, Tawa Veg (₹180), was downright delicious. The slap-slap-slap of the tandoor bread man provides the soundtrack to the excellent food here. Credit cards are even accepted!

Nandavan Restaurant

INDIAN $

Getting There & Away

From the bus stand in Pachmarhi town, six daily buses go to Bhopal (₹200, six hours). The two evening ones (6.30pm and 8pm) are sleepers (seat/bed ₹250/300). There are three buses to Nagpur (₹260, seven hours, 8am, 10am and 9pm) and two to Indore (seat/sleeper ₹460/500, 12 hours, 6.30am and 8am). The friendly guys at the bus-ticket counter are around from 7.30am to 9pm.

All Bhopal buses, plus hourly local ones, go via Pipariya (₹60, 1½ hours), from where you can catch trains to onward destinations such as Jabalpur and Varanasi without having to go all the way to Bhopal. Train tickets can be bought from the train reservation office (☺ 10am-2pm) inside the town post office.

If you're coming from Pipariya, shared 4WDs (₹60 to ₹150 per person depending on season and the number of people) to Pachmarhi leave far more frequently than buses.

i Getting Around

Shared 4WDs cost ₹1000 to ₹2500 for a day depending on the season. Cycling or hiking will give you more freedom.

WESTERN MADHYA PRADESH

Ujjain

First impressions don't always impress. And that's the case with Ujjain. The area around the train and bus stations is chaotic and nothing special, but wander down towards the river ghats, via Ujjain's maze of alleyways, and you'll discover an older, more spiritual side to this city that has been attracting traders and pilgrims for hundreds of years. An undeniable energy pulses through the temples here – perhaps because this is one of Hinduism's seven sacred cities.

History

The Guptas, the Mandu sultans, Maharaja Jai Singh (of Jaipur fame), the Marathas and the Scindias have all had a controlling hand in Ujjain's long and chequered past, which stretches back to when the city, originally called Avantika, was an important trade stop. When the Scindias moved their capital to Gwalior in 1810, Ujjain's prominence declined rapidly.

👁 Sights

Mahakaleshwar Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

While this is not the most stunning temple, tagging along behind a conga-line through the underground chambers can be magical. At nonfestival times, the marble walkways are a peaceful preamble to the subterranean chamber containing one of India's 12 sacred Shiva shrines known as  jyoti linga  – naturally occurring linga believed to derive currents of  shakti  (creative energies perceived as female deities) from within themselves rather than being ritually invested with  mantra-shakti  by priests.

The temple was destroyed by Altamish in 1235 and restored by the Scindias in the 19th century. You may be asked to give a donation, but it's not compulsory.

Vedh Shala

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Observatory; Jantar Mantar; admission ₹10; ☀️8am-5pm) Ujjain has been India's Greenwich since the 4th century BC, and this simple but interesting observatory was built by Maharaja Jai Singh in about 1730. He also built observatories in Jaipur, Delhi, Varanasi and Mathura, but Ujjain's is the only one still in use.

Gopal Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

The Scindias built this marble-spired temple, a magnificent example of Maratha architecture, in the 19th century. Muslim pillagers originally stole the sanctum's silver-plated doors from Somnath Temple in Gujarat and installed them in Ghazni, Afghanistan. Mohammed Shah Abdati later took them to Lahore (in present-day Pakistan), before Mahadji Scindia brought them back here. The alleyways north, east and west of here are wonderful places to explore.

Harsiddhi Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

Built during the Maratha period, this temple enshrines a famous image of goddess Annapurna. At the entrance, two tall blackened stone towers bristling with lamps are a special feature of Maratha art. They add to the spectacle of Navratri in September/October, when filled with oil and ignited.

Ram Ghat

GHAT

The most central and popular of Ujjain's river ghats is best visited at dawn or dusk when the devout chime cymbals and light candles at the water's edge.

🌟 Festivals & Events

Magh Mela

RELIGIOUS

(☀️Apr/May) Huge annual religious fair held on the banks of the Shipra River at Ujjain; pilgrim numbers increase dramatically every 12th year for the massive Kumbh Mela.

Kumbh Mela

RELIGIOUS

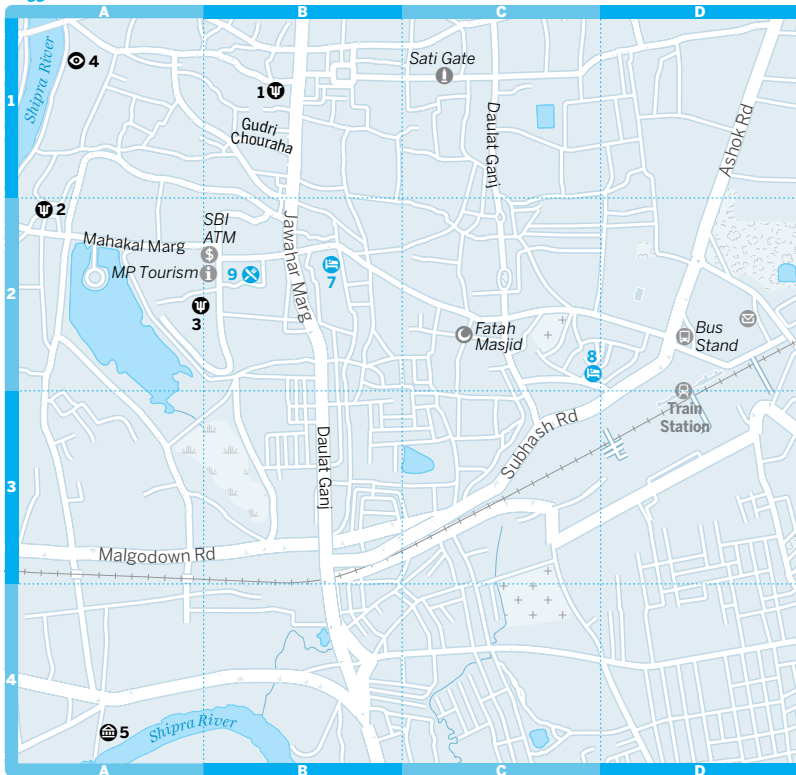

(☀️Apr/May) Ujjain is also one of four sites in India that hosts the incredible Kumbh Mela, during which millions bathe in the Shipra River. It takes place here every 12 years, normally during April and May. The next one is in 2016 (22 April to 21 May).

Navratri

CULTURAL

(Festival of Nine Nights; ☀️Sep/Oct) The Festival of Nine Nights, leading up to Dussehra, is celebrated with particular fervour in Ujjain. Lamps on the large pillars in Harsiddhi Mandir are lit.

Ujjain

Lal Bagh Palace

MUSEUM

Central Museum

MUSEUM

Omkareshwar

☎ 07280 / POP 10,062

This Om-shaped island attracts pilgrims in large numbers and has become a popular chill-out destination for a certain kind of spiritual traveller. The controversial dam has changed the look of Omkareshwar considerably, but the island has retained its spiritual vibe and remains a pleasant and authentic – if overly commercialised – pilgrimage point.

Much activity takes place off the island, at the market square called Getti Chowk

(from where the old bridge crosses to the island), and on Mamaleshwar Rd, which links Getti Chowk to the bus stand. If you continue straight along Mamaleshwar Rd from the bus stand, without turning left to Getti Chowk, you'll find steps leading down to the ghats (where you can cross the river on boats for ₹5). Beyond is the new bridge and the dam.

The path leading from the old bridge to Shri Omkar Mandhata temple is the hub of the island.

Sights & Activities

Tourists can rub shoulders with sadhus in the island's narrow lanes, browse the colourful stalls selling chillums (pipes) and souvenir linga, or join pilgrims attending the thrice daily puja (prayer) at Shri Omkar Mandhata. This cave-like temple, which houses the only shapeless jyothi lingam (12 important shrines dedicated to Shiva), is one of many Hindu and Jain monuments on the island.

From the old bridge, instead of turning right to Shri Omkar Mandhata, head left and walk up the 287 steps to the 11th-century Gaudi Somnath Temple, from where you can descend the hill to the northern tip of the island, where sadhus bathe in the confluence of the holy Narmada and Keveri Rivers. You can climb the narrow, inner staircase of the temple or just sit and watch the langur monkeys play. Nearby is a 30m-tall Shiva statue.

The path passing in front of the Shiva statue near Gaudi Somnath Temple can be followed back to the ghats (45 minutes), up and down hills and past a number of temple ruins. Don't miss the beautifully sculpted Siddhanatha Temple (left at the T-junction in the pathway) with marvellous elephant carvings around its base.

Sleeping & Eating

★ Manu Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 9826749004; omkar_bagh@yahoo.co.in; r with shared bathroom ₹350) A special experience awaits at this welcoming guesthouse, where Manu and family treat you like one of their own. Rooms are simple yet well looked after and bathrooms are shared only but kept clean. If you ask in advance, your hosts can whip up a delicious thali (₹100), served village-style on the open-air patio floor. The serene views are inspiring.

This is pretty much the only place to stay on the island itself that isn't a dharamsala (pilgrims' rest house). It's perched midway above the old bridge just to the left of the salmon-coloured temple. It's hard to find, though. Cross the bridge from Getti Chowk, come around and down the stairs and turn left. After 10m, turn left into a narrow alley with the painted blue wall saying, 'Kalyan Bhattacharya', and head around and up a very steep and trashy set of steps. Keep asking the way as you climb and be prepared for the odd territorial dog.

Ganesh Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎07280-271370; sumitbhoi1137@gmail.com; ₹250) Follow the signs as you zig-zag off the path leading down to the ghats from Mamaleshwar Rd to reach Ganesh, with its decidedly budget rooms with thin mattresses. Upstairs rooms are brighter and have air-coolers, while its shaded garden restaurant (mains ₹60 to ₹150), overlooking the ghats, has a multicuisine menu including Western breakfasts and a peaceful ambience.

Brahmin Bhojanalaya

It's on your left as you walk up from the bus stand, 50m before the road bears left towards Getti Chowk.

Maheshwar

The peaceful, riverside town of Maheshwar has long held spiritual significance – it's mentioned in the Mahabharata and Ramayana under its old name, Mahishmati, and still draws sadhus and yatris (pilgrims) to its ancient ghats and temples on the holy Narmada River. The town enjoyed a golden age in the late 18th century under Holkar queen Ahilyabai, who built the palace in the towering fort and many other monuments. Away from the ghats and historic buildings, Maheshwar's colourful streets display brightly painted wooden houses with overhanging balconies.

It's a mesmerising place that packs a lot of punch in a very small area around the ghats, palace and temples – a sort of refined, spit-shined Varanasi in miniature.

👁 Sights & Activities

The town is dominated by a 16th-century fort. The huge, imposing ramparts were built by Emperor Akbar, while the Maheshwar Palace and several temples within its grounds were added during the reign of Holkar queen Ahilyabai (r 1767–95). The palace is part public courtyard, part posh hotel. Nearby is a Shiva temple with a golden lingam – the starting point for palanquin processions on Ahilyabai's birthday and Dussehra.

From the ramparts of the fort you can see boats (return trip per person/boat ₹50/500) and incense smoke drifting across the water to Baneshwar Temple, located on a tiny island in the middle of the river. Descending to the dhobi-wallahs (clothes washers) at the ghats, you pass two impressive stone temples. The one on the right, guarded by stone Holkar sentries and a frieze of elephants, houses more images of Ahilyabai and two candle towers, lit during festivals.

Between the palace and the two stone temples a small doorway announces the NGO Rehwa Society (☎07283-273203; www.rehwasociety.org; ☎10am-6pm Wed-Mon, shop open daily), a craft cooperative where profits are ploughed back into the education, housing and welfare of the weavers. A local school, run by Rehwa, is behind the workshop. Maheshwar saris are famous for their unique weave and simple, geometric patterns.

You can watch the weavers at work and buy shawls (from ₹2100), saris (₹3000 to ₹11,000), scarves (₹800 to ₹2500) and fabrics made from silk, cotton and wool. Volunteers with some design background are always welcome, as are those interested in volunteering to teach at the school.

★ Festivals & Events

Ahilyabai Holkar Jayanti Mahotsav FESTIVAL (☺ Apr/May) The birthday celebrations for the revered Holkar queen, Ahilyabai Holkar, one of India's greatest female rulers, are celebrated with particular fervor in Maheshwar, with percussion-soundtracked palanquin (enclosed seats carried on poles on four men's shoulders) processions through the town.

Each room is different, being part of the fort gate and walls, but they are decorated with care and attention. The upper room features its own fort-wall verandah.

The cafe menu is snacks only (₹15 to ₹40), but staff whip up a delicious, unlimited thali (₹250), one of MP's best. It also organises river trips (₹150 to ₹200 per boat per hour). Another deal to consider: if you don't want to dish out to stay at Ahilya Fort itself, you can sleep at Laboo'z but take three meals at the fort for ₹7500 per person per night.

Ahilya Fort HERITAGE HOTEL $$$ (☎ 7771004811, reservations 9810306178; www.ahilyafort.com; r Indian/foreigner incl all meals from ₹11,750/18,050; 🍽🍷🍷) Demi Moore, Mick Jagger and Sting have all indulged in this heritage hotel owned by Prince Shivaji Rao Holka, a 14th-generation Indian-American direct descendent of Ahilyabai. Part of Maheshwar Palace, the best rooms are indeed palatial and some come with fabulous river views, while lush gardens house exotic fruit trees, organic vegetable patches and history at every turn. Rates include all meals as well as boat trips on the river. Booking ahead is essential. Nonguests who fancy a night to remember should not miss dining here. The sumptuous menu is set, as is the ₹1575 per person price (including alcohol), and all the food comes from the on-site, nearly 100% organic gardens. You'll need to book and pay in advance (subject to availability). Dinner begins at 7.30pm with candlelit cocktails courtesy of the Prince himself, who divides his time between here and Paris.

📍 Information

There's a State Bank of India ATM on the main road 400m before the fort entrance gate.

📍 Getting There & Away

There are buses to Omkareshwar (₹70, three hours, every 45 minutes, 9.15am to 7pm), Dhamnod (₹15, 30 minutes, frequent from 6am to 9.30pm) and Indore (₹90, two hours, hourly 6.15am to 5.15pm). For Mandu, first head to Dhamnod then take a Dhar-bound bus as far as a forked junction in the main road, known as Oonera (₹50, two hours). From there flag down a bus (₹15, 30 minutes) or hitch the final 14km to Mandu.

Mandu

☎ 07292 / POP 10,300 / ELEV 634M

Perched on top of a pleasantly green, thinly forested 20-sq-km plateau, picturesque Mandu is home to some of India's finest examples of Afghan architecture as well as impressive baobab trees, originally from Africa. The area is littered palaces, tombs, monuments and mosques, many with Unesco World Heritage status. Some cling to the edge of ravines, others are beside lakes, while Rupmati's Pavilion, the most romantic of them all, sits majestically at the far end of the plateau, overlooking the vast plains below.

Mandu

History

Raja Bhoj, of Bhopal fame, founded Mandu as a fortress retreat in the 10th century before it was conquered by the Muslim rulers of Delhi in 1304. When the Mughals captured Delhi in 1401, the Afghan Dilawar Khan, governor of Malwa, set up his own little kingdom and Mandu's golden age began.

Although Dilawar Khan established Mandu as an independent kingdom, it was his son, Hoshang Shah, who shifted the capital from Dhar to Mandu and raised it to its greatest splendour.

In 1526, Bahadur Shah of Gujarat conquered Mandu, only to be ousted in 1534 by the Mughal Humayun, who in turn lost the kingdom to Mallu Khan, an officer of the Khalji dynasty. Ten more years of feuds and invasions saw Baz Bahadur eventually emerge in the top spot, but in 1561 he fled Mandu to avoid facing Akbar's advancing troops.

After Akbar added Mandu to the Mughal empire, it kept a considerable degree of independence, until taken by the Marathas in 1732. The capital of Malwa was then shifted back to Dhar, and the slide in Mandu's fortunes that had begun with the absconding of Baz Bahadur became a plummet.

👁 Sights & Activities

There are three main groups of ruins: the Royal Enclave, the Village Group and the Rewa Kund Group. Each requires its own separate ticket. All other sights are free.

Royal Enclave

The Royal Enclave ruins (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; 🌅 dawn-dusk) are the only ones fenced off into one single complex. There's a Publication Sale Counter (🕒 9am-5pm) selling guidebooks and a shaded garden canteen selling tea, coffee and snacks just to the right of the main entrance.

Jahaz Mahal

ISLAMIC PALACE

(Ship Palace) Dating from the 15th century, this is the most famous building in Mandu. Built on a narrow strip of land between Munja and Kapur tanks, with a small upper storey like a ship's bridge (use your imagination), it's far longer (120m) than it is wide (15m). Ghiyas-ud-din, who is said to have had a harem of 15,000 maidens, constructed its lookouts, scalloped arches, airy rooms and beautiful pleasure pools.

Taveli Mahal

ISLAMIC HISTORIC SITE

These former stables now house a small Archaeological Museum (🕒 9am-5pm), which features a handful of artefacts found here, including 11th- and 12th-century sculptures and stone slabs with Quranic text dating back to the 15th century.

Hindola Mahal

ISLAMIC HISTORIC SITE

(Swing Palace) Just north of Ghiyas' stately pleasure dome is Hindola Mahal, so-called because the slope of the walls is supposed to create the impression that they are swaying. While it doesn't give that impression, it's an eye-catching design nonetheless.

Palace & Shop of Gada Shah

HISTORIC SITE

The house is within the enclave, but the shop is outside on the road to Delhi Gate. As the buildings' size and internal workmanship suggest, their owner was more than a shopkeeper. His name, which means 'beggar master', is thought to identify him as Rajput chief Medini Ray, a powerful minion of the sultans. The 'shop' was a warehouse for saffron and musk, imported and sold at a handsome profit when there were enough wealthy people to shop here.

Mosque of Dilawar Khan

MOSQUE

Built by Dilawar Khan in 1405, this mosque is Mandu's earliest Islamic building. There are many Hindu elements to the architecture, notably the pillars and ceilings inside, which was typical for this era.

Champa Baodi

HISTORIC SITE

So-called because its water supposedly smelled as sweet as the champak flower, Champa Baodi is a step-well surrounded by subterranean vaulted chambers, some of which you can explore.

Turkish Bath

HAMMAM

Stars and octagons perforate the domed roofs of this tiny hammam (Turkish bath), which had hot and cold water and a hypocaust (underfloor heated) sauna.

Village Group

The Village Group (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀️ dawn-dusk), located by the bus stand in the centre of the village, contains three monuments. The ticket office is at the entrance to Jama Masjid; one ticket covers all three sights.

Jama Masjid

MOSQUE

Entered by a flight of steps leading to a 17m-high domed porch, this disused red-stone mosque dominates the village of Mandu. Hoshang Shah began its construction around 1406, basing it on the great Omayyad Mosque in Damascus in Syria, and Mohammed Khalji completed it in 1454. Despite its plain design, it's reckoned to be the finest and largest example of Afghan architecture in India.

Hoshang's Tomb

ISLAMIC TOMB

Reputed to be India's oldest marble building, this imposing tomb is crowned with a crescent thought to have been imported from Persia or Mesopotamia. Inside, light filters into the echoing dome through stone jalis (carved lattice screens), intended to cast an appropriately subdued light on the tombs. An inscription records Shah Jahan sending his architects – including Ustad Hamid, who worked on the Taj Mahal – here in 1659 to pay their respects to the tomb's builders.

Ashrafi Mahal

ISLAMIC HISTORIC SITE

Mohammed Shah originally built his tomb as a madrasa (Islamic college), before converting and extending it. The overambitious design later collapsed – notably the seven-storey circular tower of victory. The building is an empty shell, but intricate Islamic pillarwork can be seen at the top of its great stairway.

Rewa Kund Group

A pleasant 4km-cycle south of the village Mandu, past Sagar Talao, brings you to two more ruins (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀️ dawn-dusk). Tickets for both should be bought from outside Baz Bahadur's Palace.

Baz Bahadur's Palace

PALACE

Baz Bahadur was the last independent ruler of Mandu. His palace, constructed around 1509, is beside the Rewa Kund tank where a water lift at the northern end supplied water to the palace. A curious mix of Rajasthani and Mughal styles, it was actually built decades before Baz Bahadur came to power.

Rupmati's Pavilion

HINDU MONUMENT

Standing at the top of a cliff plunging 366m to the plains, Rupmati's Pavilion has a beauty unmatched by the other monuments – and some of the dinkiest stone staircases you'll ever climb. According to Malwa legends, the music-loving Baz Bahadur built it to persuade a beautiful Hindu singer, Rupmati, to move here from her home on the plains. From its terrace and domed pavilions, Rupmati could gaze down at the distant glint of the sacred Narmada River.

In fact, the pavilion was built in two or three phases and the style of its arches and pillars suggests it was completed 100 years before Rupmati's time. Nonetheless, the love story is a subject of Malwa folk songs – not least because of its tragic ending. Lured by tales of Rupmati's beauty, Akbar marched on the fort and Baz Bahadur fled, leaving his lover to poison herself.

This place is simply gorgeous at sunset.

Other Sights

Nil Kanth Palace

HINDU HISTORIC SITE

If you're looking for a great reason to cycle out into the countryside, consider visiting this unusual former palace turned temple. It stands at the head of a ravine, on the site of an earlier Shiva shrine – its name means God with Blue Throat – and is now once again used as a place of worship. A stream built by one of Akbar's governors trickles through a delightful spiral channel and is usually filled with sweet-scented water.

To get here, cycle south along Main Rd for less than 1km until you see a large white water tower. Turn right here and follow the road as it twists and turns past villages all the way to Nil Kanth (about 2km). You can continue from here, past more remote villages, for about another kilometre to reach the still-standing gateway of the now ruined Songarh Fort, from where there are more great views.

Jain Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

Entered by a kaleidoscopic potpourri of colour, this complex is a splash of kitsch among the Islamic monuments. The richly decorated temples feature marble, silver and gold tirthankars with jade eyes, and behind them is a theme parklike museum with a walk-on replica of Shatrunjaya, the hilltop temple complex at Palitana in Gujarat. In the colourful murals, bears devour sinners' arms, crocodiles chew their heads, and demons saw one evil character in half-lengthways.

Saturday Haat

MARKET

(☉10am-dusk) This colourful weekly haat (market), behind Jama Masjid, is similar to ones held all over the Bastar region, a tribal stronghold of Chhattisgarh. Adivasis (tribespeople) walk kilometres to come here to buy and sell goods ranging from mountains of red chillis to dried mahua (a flower used to make a potent liquor of the same name).

Sleeping & Eating

You get noticeably less for your money in Mandu and wi-fi is hard to come by. Be sure to stop by and have chai with the friendly Rami, whose tea stand is under the shady ficus tree between Jama Masjid and Ashrafi Mahal.

Rama Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎263251; ₹300, without bathroom ₹200) Made up of a row of simple rooms off a courtyard that leads to the small Rama Temple, accommodation here is slightly more atmospheric than fellow budget choices. Some bathrooms have showers and sit-down flush toilets, but these are still very basic digs. Walk through an archway between two shops by the bus stand to get here.

Reception is beyond the rooms, inside the temple grounds, where you'll find a non-English speaking curmudgeon of a manager. Namaste!

Hotel Rupmati

HOTEL $$

(☎07292-263270; Main Rd; ₹ from ₹1750, with AC ₹2100; 🏠) Clean, colourful row of rooms with large bathrooms are perched on the edge of a cliff with great views of the valley below. Air-con itself (and a little less upkeep) is the only difference between the non-AC and AC rooms. There's a restaurant and delightful outdoor eating lawn with views.

Malwa Retreat

HOTEL $$

(☎07292-263221; www.mptourism.com; Main Rd; ₹/tents ₹2050/3650, with AC ₹3230; 🏠) This is MP Tourism's cheaper option, with air-cooled and air-con rooms and nicely appointed tents with valley views. The newish spick-and-span Malwa Retreat Cafeteria is a step up for Mandu's dining scene and reception doubles as the Tourist Interpretation Centre, where you can arrange local guides (half-day ₹375). It's in a location handy to the village.

Malwa Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎07292-263235; www.mptourism.com; Main Rd; ₹ with AC from ₹4070; 🏠🏠🏠) The best thing about this family-friendly MP Tourism property, 2km south of the village, is morning chai in the lakeside gazebo, watching local fishermen cast their nets over lake Sagar Talao. Otherwise, there are large gardens containing comfortable cottages, children's play areas, tree swings and a pool, restaurant and bar.

No compelling reason to consider upgrading categories here – you won't get anything noticeable over the standard rooms.

Shivani Restaurant

INDIAN $

(Main Rd; mains ₹60-180, thali ₹80-180; ☉9am-10pm) The subtle canteen-style interior of this no-nonsense diner with plastic tables and chairs is appreciatively understated compared with the gaudy exterior, but it's the good, honest and cheap food that overshadows both. The menu is extensive and includes solid thalis plus local specialities such as Mandu kofta (dumplings in a mild sauce).

South Indian breakfasts are also available, as are lassis and coffee. It also has open-air 'garden' seating across the street.

Yatrika

INDIAN $

(Main Rd; mains ₹90-280; ☉8-10am, noon-3pm & 7-10pm) This small cafe at Malwa Retreat dishes out veg and nonveg Indian meals in very flash (for Mandu) contemporary premises with an open kitchen. If you want a cold beer you'll need to head to the sister property, the Malwa Resort.

Shopping

Roopayan

HANDICRAFTS

(Main Rd; ☉9am-7pm) Next to Malwa Resort, this small shop sells good-quality scarves, shawls, bed spreads, and clothing made from material that has been block-printed in the nearby village of Bagh.

Information

Harsh Communication/Malima Medical

(Main Rd; per hr ₹40; ☉8am-9pm) This side-by-side family operation is the only internet game in town. Harsh has just one terminal while Malima, a pharmacy, can hook up your laptop.

Post Office (☎263222; www.indiapost.gov.in; Main Rd; ☉9am-5pm) Next to Jain Temple.

State Bank of India ATM The only ATM in the village.

Getting There & Away

There are four buses to Indore (₹100, 3½ hours, 8.30am, 9am, 2.30pm and 3.45pm), one to Ujjain (₹150, six hours, 6.30am) and regular services to Dhar (₹30, one hour, 6.30am to 7pm), where you can change for buses to Dhamnod (₹50, two hours), then, in turn, for Maheshwar (₹15, 30 minutes, last bus 6pm) or Omkareshwar (₹70, 3½ hours, last bus 6pm). If doing this, it's quicker to get off 14km before Dhar at a junction called Oonera (₹15, 30 minutes) from where you can flag down Dhamnod-bound buses (₹50, 1½ hours).

Getting Around

Cycling is the best way to get around, as the terrain is flat, the air clear and the countryside beautiful. We didn't see a single autorickshaw on our visit. Ritik Cycles (☎ 9000157920; Main Rd; per day ₹100) rents bicycles right in the village.

EASTERN MADHYA PRADESH

Jabalpur

☎ 0761 / POP 1.27 MILLION

Domestic tourists mostly come here to visit Marble Rocks, an attractive river gorge nearby, but for foreigners this industrial city of chowks and working men's taverns is used mainly as a launchpad for the famous tiger parks – Kanha, Bandhavgarh and Pench.

WORTH A TRIP

MARBLE ROCKS AT BHEDAGHAT

Known locally as Bhedaghat, the magnesium-limestone cliffs at this gorge on the holy Narmada River, 22km west of Jabalpur, change colours in different lights, from pink to black. They're particularly impressive by moonlight, and parts are floodlit at night.

More pleasant than awe-inspiring (during the day, anyway), the trip up the 2km-long gorge is made in a shared motorboat (per person 30/50min ₹50/70; ☀ 7am-7pm, full moon 8pm-midnight, closed during monsoon 15 Jun-15 Oct) from the jetty at Panchvati Ghat (private boats run ₹750/1500 for the same timeframes). Sticking around? The Dhuandhar (Smoke Cascade) waterfall is a worthwhile 1.5km walk uphill from the ghat. Along the way is the much-revered Chausath Yogini, a circular 10th-century temple dedicated to the Hindu goddess Durga and accessed via a steep flight of steps on the right-hand side of the road. Once at the falls, you can take a short cable-car ride (₹75 return) to the other side of the gorge.

Local city buses 203/203A leave regularly for Bhedaghat (₹15, 45 minutes, 8am to 10pm) from Model Rd opposite Jabalpur bus stand. They drop you at a crossroads 100m from Panchvati Ghat (right side of fork). To return, wait at the crossroads for a passing bus or squeeze into Jabalpur-bound shared autorickshaws (₹20).

Sights

Rani Durgavati Museum

MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner ₹10/100, camera/video ₹50/200; ☀ 10am-5pm Tue-Sun) Displays a collection of 10th-century sculptures from local sites, while upstairs are galleries for stone and copper inscriptions, ancient coins and a photograph exhibition of Bhedaghat's 64 Yogini Temple.

Tours

Tiger Safari

(☎ 8120445454; www.thetigersafari.com)

If you can't be bothered with a DIY safari, this agency – inherently involved in tiger conservation – can customise safari tours throughout Eastern MP. Photography wildlife tours are a speciality, but it handles birding and cultural itineraries as well. Five per cent of the profits go towards three tiger-saving NGOs.

Expect to pay from ₹13,500 (budget) to ₹66,000 (top end) per day for custom safaris for two people all-inclusive, depending on a variety of factors (type of vehicle, accommodation, number of 4WD tours, number of days etc). Prices come down for groups of six or more people.

Sleeping & Eating

Lodge Shivalaya

and come with TVs and small bathrooms. The cheapest 1st-floor rooms open onto a large shared balcony overlooking the bustling and noisy street below. Checkout is 24 hours.

Hotel Wardhman

HOTEL $$

(☎0761-4006002; www.hotelwardhman.com; Russel Crossing; s/d incl breakfast from ₹1440/1680; 🚻🚿) Down an alley off Russel Chowk, the Wardhman underwent a massive modernisation in 2013, catapulting itself into Russel Chowk's best deal. Rooms aren't massive, but everything is new and clean – save the odd musty bathroom – with all the modern fixings, most notably being the miraculous hot-water pressure and huge flat-screen TVs. Breakfast is great – ask Sussil for an idli demonstration! Free wi-fi throughout.

Kalchuri Residency

HOTEL $$

(☎0761-2678491; www.mptourism.com; South Civil Lines; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3860/4200; 🚻🚿) One of the nicest MP Tourism properties in the state, this government hotel is located in the quieter Civil Lines area just south of the train station. It has large, modern deluxe AC rooms in soothing earth tones with TVs, kettles and spacious renovated bathrooms. Standard AC rooms are nearly as good.

There's a nice restaurant (mains ₹130 to ₹310) and a spacious pub (beer from ₹225).

Indian Coffee House

SOUTH INDIAN $

(www.indiancoffeehousejabalpur.com; Hotel India; coffee from ₹10, mains from ₹60; ☀7am-10pm) Classic for filtered coffee and South Indian breakfasts.

★ Yellow Chili

NORTH INDIAN $$$

(www.theyellowchilli.com; Dixit Pride, Napier Town; mains ₹240-360; ☀noon-midnight) This higher-end Indian chain, the domain of celeb chef Sanjeev Kapoor, might not be top choice in Delhi, but it's a gastro-godsend in Jabalpur. Creative takes on gourmet Indian fare rule here and everything is a flavour bomb. The khurcha saag murh (chicken tikka in spinach, fenugreek, coloured peppercorns and mustard seeds) was our favourite dish in all of MP.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Air India (☎ 0761-2904090; 1455 Narmada Rd) flies to Delhi on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

SpiceJet (www.spicejet.com) flies to Delhi and Mumbai daily.

BUS

Services from the old bus stand include three daily buses to Kanha National Park (₹160, four hours, 7am, 11am and 12.30pm). Otherwise, catch a bus to Mandla (₹92, three hours, frequent 6am to 9pm) and switch.

For Pench Tiger Reserve, catch a bus to Khawasa (₹200, five hours, half-hourly 8.30am to 11.30pm), then take a shared 4WD (₹10) for the final 12km. For Bandhavgarh National Park, it's best to take a direct train to Umaria, but you can also take a bus to Katni (₹100, three hours, frequent 5am to 11pm), from where there are trains and buses to Umaria.

For more comfort on long-distance trips, Rohani Bus (☎ 8889186709; Model Rd) has daily services to Indore (seat/sleeper ₹500/600, 12 hours, 7pm) and Raipur (seat/sleeper ₹350/400, 10 hours, 7pm).

TRAIN

More than 10 daily trains leave for Satna, from where you can take a bus to Khajuraho. You may have to catch a bus from Satna to Panna and change again for Khajuraho. For Bandhavgarh National Park, take a train to Umaria.

i Getting Around

A cycle-rickshaw from the train station to Russel Chowk is ₹25. Autorickshaws are usually double the price.

Kanha National Park

Madhya Pradesh is the king of the jungle when it comes to tiger parks, and Kanha (www.kanhanationalpark.com; Indian/foreigner ₹1250/2450, premium zones ₹1850/3650, 4WD from ₹1800, guide ₹300; ☎ mid-Oct-mid-Jun, closed Wed evening) is the most famous. The forests are vast, and while your chances of seeing a tiger are probably slightly slimmer than at nearby Bandhavgarh, at the time of research sightings were on the rise. Add to that the fact that you can really go deep into the forest, and you have a complete safari experience, rather than the rush-and-grab outings some complain of at Bandhavgarh.

The sal forests and vast meadows contain tigers (89 at last count) and leopards and support huge populations of deer and antelope, including the rare barasingha (deer). You'll see plenty of langur monkeys, the odd gaur (Indian bison), maybe even a family or two of wild boar and the odd lonesome jackal or two. The park is also home to more than 300 bird species.

Khatiya Gate in Khatiya village is easily the most popular; other gates into the park include Mukki, 45km southeast of Khatiya, and Sarahi, 60km northeast.

Bookings for 4WD safaris are made online (www.mponline.gov.in) up to 120 days in advance, but foreign cards weren't being accepted at the time of writing. Save yourself immense hassle by allowing hotels/agencies to do this.

Ten percent of safari tickets (14 4WDs) are reserved for gate sales and are sold 30 minutes before opening – but this is a major hassle and lines form as early as midnight the evening prior. Vehicle fees may be higher if you need to drive further to enter from a more distant gate (depending on the zone you are visiting). New park formalities have also been implemented to fiscally discourage walk-ups: if you meet other folks with a reservation and extra space in their 4WD, you cannot just join in and share the costs. For anyone joining a booked reservation, you will pay an add-on fee, which is the park entrance fee per person (rather than per 4WD). So, two foreigners joining a booked group for the premium zone will pay ₹3650 each to join. Note, a 4WD containing Indian nationals and foreigners costs the foreign-tourist price.

There are two safari slots each day: morning (roughly 6am to 11am) and afternoon (roughly 3pm to 6pm). The morning safaris are longer and tend to produce more tiger sightings.

Sights & Activities

MP Tourism Center

4WD SAFARI

(Indian/foreigner ₹1200/3200) These two 12-seat canters operated by MP Tourism are a last-resort option for getting into the park.

They do not stray beyond the Kisli zone. Book through MP Tourism.

Nature Trails

WALKING

(guide ₹400; ☀ 6-11am & 3-6pm) A well-marked 7km trail leads from just inside Khatiya Gate and skirts along the edge of the park before looping back to the village. Mostly you'll see a lot of monkeys and birds, but tigers do venture into this area on occasions and an accompanying guide is essential.

Sleeping & Eating

Most hotels have restaurants. There's a row of small dhabas just before Khatiya Gate serving cheap thalis (₹80) and chai. If you're on a morning safari, you can grab breakfast (₹20), tea and coffee when you stop at the interpretation centre inside the park.

Inside the Buffer Zone

Note, while lodgings in the buffer zone enjoy a wonderfully natural forest location, there are none of the facilities that are available in the village outside the park. You'll need to have a room booked here in advance in order to get past security at Khatiya Gate. If you're walking up, book at the MP Tourism Tourist Information Booth next to Khatiya Gate.

Tourist Hostel

HOSTEL $$

(☎ 07649-277310; Kisli Village; American Plan dm ₹1300) This MP Tourism property, made up of a few huge, well-kept multibed dorms with clean shared bathrooms and lockers, is inside the buffer zone, right in Kisli village, which leads into the park's core zone. There are no facilities here apart from the dorms, the nearby canteen and the adjacent Baghira Log Huts (another MP Tourism property).

The attraction is that you're staying right in among the monkey-filled forest, and a stone's throw from meadows that attract deer and gaur throughout the day, though you are not allowed to wander far off.

Baghira Log Huts

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 07649-277227; www.mptourism.com; Kisli Village; American Plan s/d from ₹4800/6000; 📍) Apart from the nearby Tourist Hostel, this is the only place inside the buffer zone. Comfortable rather than luxurious log cabin-style rooms are set among the trees and overlook a beautiful meadow. There's a restaurant and bar. The single price is only available on a walk-up basis, not online.

In the Village by Khatiya Gate

Machan Complex

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9993672827; dm ₹100, r ₹500-700) Like staying in a tiny village, Machan has bucket hot-water rooms in different buildings, all a bit shabby, set around a huge banyan tree. There's a new dorm building, basic mud-hut doubles, and larger rooms with sit-down flush toilets. The owner, Anil, is a naturalist and extremely welcoming. About 1km before Khatiya Gate, on the right.

Pugmark Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 07649-277291; www.pugmarkresort.com; r without/with AC incl breakfast ₹2300/2800, s/d American Plan with AC ₹4000/4500; 🍷🍷) These spacious village-like cottages in Khatiya are just a step above basic but bright and airy and set around a pleasant, albeit slightly overgrown, garden. It's a well-oiled family-run operation, and Rahul, the owner/manager, is very knowledgeable and nails five-star service for three-star prices (in addition to being the resident painter).

From breakfast on down, the food is outstanding – they even use milk from their own two Holsteins. Wi-fi throughout.

Motel Chandan

HOTEL $$

(☎ 07649-277220, 9425855220; www.motelchandan.com; r ₹1000-1400, with AC ₹2100; 🍷🍷🍷) Great-value modern rooms, some with teak-wood accents, right in Khatiya village. The friendly owner is a smooth guy who organises safaris with four of his own 4WDs and two resident naturalists. American Plan (meals included) runs ₹500 extra per person.

★ Kipling Camp

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 011-65196377; www.kiplingcamp.com; Mocha Village; American Plan s/d ₹17,800/26,600; 🍷🍷🍷)

 A wonderful, laid-back wildlife lodge hosted by one of India's most formidable tiger proponents, former Nat Geo photographer Belinda Wright. It's as informative as it is relaxing to stay in this jungle setting where wildlife discussions follow excellent communal meals (Indian for lunch, continental for dinner) and guests retire to rustic-chic lodges slightly scented with essence of English colonialism.

Nature abounds in the fenceless grounds where langur monkeys and chitals make regular appearances, only to be outshined by an occasional tiger and leopard flyby. You can also swim in the river with Tara, the camp's memorable 55-year-old elephant, a truly extraordinary experience.

Information

A Central Bank of India ATM next to Motel Chandan accepts foreign cards.

Tourist Information Booth (☎ 07469-277242; www.mptourism.com; Khatiya Gate; ☀ 10am-8pm) In addition to tourist info and government hotel bookings, this MP tourism office books the 12-seat government center for safaris.

Getting There & Away

The nearest train station, 56km north in Mandla, is only a narrow gauge station and therefore only reachable by a general seating train from Nainpur (Maharashtra).

There are six daily buses from Khatiya Gate to Mandla (₹60, 2½ hours, 2.15am, 6.30am, 8am, 9am, 12.45pm, 5.45pm). The 6.30am, 9am and 12.45pm continue to Jabalpur (₹160, 5½ hours). For Raipur, there's one daily bus from Mocha (₹210, four hours, 8.30am).

If you catch a bus only as far as Mocha, you can arrange a pick-up with your hotel or you'll have to hitchhike the remaining 5km to Khatiya.

Services from Mandla bus stand:

Jabalpur ₹90, 2½ hours, half-hourly 5am to 11pm

Kanha ₹60, two hours, 6.20am (to Mocha), 8.30am (to Mocha), 11.30am and 12.40pm

Nagpur (buses go via Khawasa for transfer to Pench National Park) ₹230, eight hours, eight daily (6am, 8.30am, 7.45am, 1pm, 9pm, 9.30pm, 10.30pm and 11pm)

Raipur ₹230, eight hours, five daily (5am, 7.30am, 11.40am, 7.45pm and 9.30pm)

Bandhavgarh National Park

(☎ 07653)

If your sole reason for visiting a national park in India is to see a tiger, look no further. Though it's not as easy as it used to be, a couple of days at Bandhavgarh (www.bandhavgarhnationalpark.com; Indian/foreigner per jeep ₹1250/2450, premium zones ₹2450/4850, jeep ₹2000, guide ₹300; ☀ 16 Oct-30 Jun, closed Wed evenings) should net you a tiger sighting in this relatively small park, whose Tala Range boasts the highest density of Royal Bengal tigers in the world (68 as of 2013). Neck and neck with Rajasthan's Ranthambhore National Park for sightings, it is India's top tiger playground. There are also more than 40 rarely seen leopards and more commonly sighted animals such as deer, wild boar and langur.

The park is entered at the small, laid-back village of Tala, 32km from Umaria, the nearest train station. Like Kanha, Bandhavgarh has a lot of budget accommodation making this a good place for independent travellers to find others to share safari costs.

The park takes its name from an ancient fort perched on top of 800m-high cliffs. Its ramparts provide a home for vultures, blue rock thrushes and crag martins. You can visit on special 4WD trips during the day, but you'll have to pay all the usual park entry fees.

A 4WD safari (www.mponline.gov.in) can be booked online up to 120 days in advance, but foreign credit cards weren't being accepted at the time of writing. Save yourself immense hassle by allowing hotels/agencies to do this. Ten percent of safari tickets (11 4WDs) are reserved for gate sales and are sold 30 minutes before opening. Lines form as early as midnight the evening prior and it's a free-for-all, with you against the locals when the gates open (read: you aren't likely to win). New park formalities have also been implemented to fiscally discourage walk-ups: if you meet other folks with a reservation and extra space in their jeep, you cannot just join them and share the costs. For anyone joining a booked reservation, you will pay an add-on fee, which is the park entrance fee per person (rather than per 4WD). So two foreigners joining a booked group for Tala Gate will pay ₹4850 each to join.

Note that Magdhi (7km from the village) and Khitauli Gates (6km from the village) have cheaper 4WD charges. With safari numbers drastically reduced in the 2012 review, booking early is essential. February to June are the best months for sightings.

i Information

Most things in Tala are within one block of each other, including the post office, internet cafes (₹50 per hour), restaurants and a State Bank of India ATM.

i Getting There & Around

A cycle-rickshaw to Umaria's bus stand from the train station is ₹10 (10 minutes). There are frequent buses to Tala (₹35, 1½ hours, half-hourly 7am to 6pm). To reach Tala outside of those hours, you'll have to take an autorickshaw (₹500, one hour) or arrange a private taxi in advance (from ₹800).

The last bus from Tala Village back to Umaria bus stand is 7.30pm (₹40, 1½ hours).

TRAIN

Trains from Umaria include the 18477 Utkal Express to Delhi (Nizamuddin station; sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹425/1145/1655, 17 hours, 8.57pm) via Gwalior (₹320/860/1240, 11 hours), Agra (₹365/980/1410, 14 hours) and Mathura (₹380/1030/1480, 15 hours), and the 18234 Narmada Express, which goes to Jabalpur (₹100/485/690, 4½ hours, 4.17pm) before continuing to Bhopal (₹280/745/1070, 12 hours), Ujjain (₹360/970/1395, 16½ hours) and Indore (₹385/1045/1510, 18½ hours).

There are two daily trains to Varanasi: the 15160 Sarnath Express (₹275/735/1035, 12 hours, 4.19am) and the 15232 Gondia Bju Express (₹280/745/1070, 12½ hours, 7.15am), the latter being the best option to Satna (from where you can also catch buses to Khajuraho).

For Chhattisgarh, there are three daily trains to Raipur, the best being the 15159 Sarnath Express (₹230/610/870, eight hours, 10.16pm)

An alternative to Umaria is Katni, a busier railway junction from where there are direct trains to places like Jabalpur, Satna and Varanasi. You'll need to hop on a Manpur-bound bus in Tala village to Manpur Modh (₹10, 10 minutes, half-hourly 7am to 7.30pm), a crossroads 3km beyond Tala Village, where buses to Katni depart (₹100, four hours, hourly, 7am to 9am and noon to 4pm).

Pench Tiger Reserve

The third of Madhya Pradesh's trio of well-known tiger parks, Pench (www.penchnationalpark.com; Indian/foreigner ₹1250/2450, jeep ₹200, guide ₹300; ☺ 16 Oct-30 Jun, closed Wed evenings) is made up mostly of teak-tree forest rather than sal and so it has a different flavour from nearby Kanha or Bandhavgarh. It also sees fewer tourists (and fewer tigers; only 33 as of the 2014 census); as you're driving around the park, you'll often feel like you have the whole forest to yourself. Turia Gate is the only one of the park's three gates that is regularly used.

Bookings for 4WD safaris (www.mponline.gov.in) can be made online up to 120 days in advance, but foreign cards weren't being accepted at the time of writing. Allow hotels/agencies to do this and save yourself the hassle. Ten percent of safari tickets (five 4WDs) are reserved for gate sales and are sold 30 minutes before opening – expect lines to form as early as midnight the night before.

Note that if you meet other folks with a reservation and extra space in their 4WD, you cannot just join them and share the costs. For anyone joining a booked reservation, you will pay an add-on fee, which is the park entrance fee per person (rather than per 4WD). Two foreigners joining a booked group will pay ₹2450 each.

If you get shut out of a traditional 4WD safari, you can book a spot on the 12-seat MP Tourism Center (☎ 07695-232830; www.mptourism.com; Kipling's Court; Indian/foreigner ₹1200/2400) at Kipling's Court as a last resort. There's a six-person minimum.

JUNGLE CAT! (EAGLE). JUNGLE CAT! (EAGLE).

Once upon a time in Pench, another journalist and I spotted a jungle cat moments after entering the park. Notoriously shy, the cat waddled on down the road as we excitedly exclaimed, 'Jungle cat!' Our guide was nonplussed, however. 'Eagle,' he said. 'No no,' we protested. 'Who cares about an eagle? Jungle cat!' 'Eagle,' he insisted.

Then we got it. A crested hawk-eagle, a fierce bird of prey, was stalking the cat. A Discovery Channel—brutal moment was on the horizon. In a blink, the eagle went into a kamikaze dive, ambushing the cat mercilessly from above. As we pulled up alongside the kill, what we encountered still haunts me to this day. The eagle had a relentless grip on the cat's neck. Through binoculars, his menacing, otherworldly eyes – full of sheer, unadulterated yellow terror – stared right at us in a motionless trance.

The standoff – the eagle with the cat, us with the eagle – lasted 15 minutes. The eagle's stare never once strayed from us, as if sending a very serious warning through the most sinister set of eyes I had ever seen in my life. No horror movie could ever do the moment justice.

As at the other tiger parks, there are morning (sunrise to 10.30am) and afternoon (2.30pm to sunset) safaris.

(☎07695-232830; www.mptourism.com; dm/r American Plan ₹1090/3990, r with AC from ₹5690; 🍷@) This government-run property wins in both the budget category (considering prices include all meals, the two well-kept six-bed dorms here are good value) and family category (it boasts the best playground in Turia and 30-odd rabbits!). The private cottages aren't bad either and are dotted around dutifully manicured gardens. There's also a bar. It's 2km past Turia, about 1km before the park gate.

Tathastu HOTEL $$$

Set in American Southwest desert style, each enormous three-bedroom villa comes with a living room, kitchen, dining room, dip pool and a dedicated cook, waiter and housekeeper. Yes, you read that right.

The Flintstones-y cave rooms, the 10m-high treehouses and well-appointed tents are great as well, but are all more expensive than the unbelievably priced villas.

Baghvan Taj

LODGE $$$

Twelve massive bamboo and sal cottages are hidden away amid the forest and feature exquisite artwork and furniture (including gorgeous antique Rajasthani porch swings), indoor-outdoor showers and massive elevated machans (open-air patios).

The open-air common areas follow suit, only to be pleasantly offset by the occasional retro appliance, giving off a blast of whimsy to the place. Food is expectedly divine. A lush pool area and massage room (treatments from ₹2500) round out the luxury.

Information

There's a Bank of Maharashtra ATM in Khawasa that accepts foreign cards. Internet can only be found at places of accommodation.

Getting There & Away

Regular buses link Khawasa with Nagpur (₹90, two hours, half-hourly 8am to midnight) and Jabalpur (₹280, five hours, half-hourly 9am to 9pm). Shared 4WDs (₹20) run between Khawasa and Turia when full. The main gate to the park is about 3km beyond Turia. The nearest airport and major train station is in Nagpur.

You can go to Kanha National Park from Khawasa without going all the way to Jabalpur or Mandla. Flag down any north-bound bus to Seoni (₹50, one hour, frequent from 7am) then take a Mandla-bound bus to Chiraidongri (₹95, 3½ hours, frequent 5am to 8.30pm) where there are four daily buses to Khatiya Gate (₹35, one hour, 11am, 4pm, 5pm, 6.45pm) and many more to Mocha.

CHHATTISGARH

Chhattisgarh is remote, its public transport system is poor and its tourist infrastructure outside the main cities is almost nonexistent, but for the intrepid traveller, time spent here may well prove to be the highlight of your trip to this part of India. The country's most densely forested state is blessed with natural beauty – waterfalls and unspoilt nature reserves abound. More interestingly, though, it's home to 42 different tribes whose pointillist paintings and spindly sculptures are as vivid as the colourful haats (markets) that take place across the region, particularly around Jagdalpur in Bastar.

Chhattisgarh is one of the eastern states associated with the Naxalite guerrillas (an ultra-leftist political movement that began in Naxal Village, West Bengal), but they rarely stray from their remote hideouts on Chhattisgarh's northern and southern borders.

ANT-EDOTE

Red ants are more than just a painful nuisance to the Bastar tribes. Known as chapura, they also play an important role in food and medicine. They are often eaten live, served on a leaf with white ant eggs. Alternatively, villagers grind them into a paste and mix them with chilli to make chutney. The bodies of chapura contain formic acid believed to have useful medicinal qualities. If suffering from a fever, locals will sometimes put their hand into an ants nest, allowing it to be bitten hundreds of times so that the acid is administered into their bloodstream. Patients presumably soon forget their fever.

Tourism Board head office here is worth visiting though.

Some villages are extremely remote, and only really accessible with a guide. Others, though, are just a bus ride away and, particularly on market days, can be explored independently.

Sanjay Market, which hosts the Sunday haat, is the heartbeat of Jagdalpur.

BASTAR HAATS & ADIVASI VILLAGES

There are eight tribes in Bastar spread over more than 3500 villages, ranging from the Ghadwa (specialists in bell metal) to the Doria, the only tribe to make their homes from the branches and leaves of trees (instead of mud thatch) in the remote forests of the far south of Chhattisgarh. One of the most fascinating ways to get a closer look are the colourful haats (markets). These markets are the lifeblood of tribal Chhattisgarh, and visiting them is an excellent way to get a taste of Bastar's vibrant Adivasi culture. Tribes walk up to 20km to trade everything from their distinctive, almost fluorescent, saris to live red ants (p682).

You'll find all kinds of fascination here, including bell-metal craftwork, a skill passed down through generations for some 300 years in some cases. The large piles of what look like squashed dates are in fact dried mahuwa, a type of flower, either eaten fresh, or dried then boiled to create steam, which is fermented to produce a potent liquor, the favoured tippie of many Bastar Adivasis.

You can get to many local Adivasi villages by bus – this is certainly an option on market days – but some are quite inaccessible, and if you want to actually meet tribespeople, rather than just look at them, a guide is essential as a translator if nothing else. They can also help you arrange homestays. A day with Awesh Ali (☎9425244925; aweshali@gmail.com; per day ₹1500) is a truly enlightening experience. He speaks nine languages (four of which are tribal) and comes highly recommended. Contact him directly, or go through the Chhattisgarh Tourism Board. A car and driver will cost from ₹1200 per day plus fuel.

Most haats run from around noon to 5pm. There are many markets – these are just some of the more popular ones. Ask at the Chhattisgarh Tourism Board in Raipur for details. Shared 4WDs normally hang around markets to take people back to Jagdalpur.

Why Go?

Barely glimpsed by many travellers scurrying between Mumbai (Bombay) and Rajasthan, Gujarat is an easy side-step off the well-beaten tourist trail. While the capital, Ahmedabad (Amdavad), retains some charm amid its chaos, the countryside holds most of this state's many treasures. Traditional artisans in tribal villages weave, embroider, dye and print some of India's finest textiles, and pristine parks harbour unique wildlife, including migratory birds, wild asses and the last remaining prides of Asiatic lions. For the spiritually inclined, sacred Jain and Hindu pilgrimage sites sit atop mountains that rise dramatically from vast flatlands. And colourful festivals burst with a cornucopia of culture.

Gujarat also claims a special relationship to the life and work of Mahatma Gandhi: he was born here, he ignited the satyagraha movement from here, he made his Salt March here – and his legacy remains a vibrant part of public discourse and private lives.

History

It's said that Gujarat's Temple of Somnath witnessed the creation of the universe; sometime later, the state became Krishna's stomping ground. On a firmer historical footing, Lothal and Dholavira (Kachchh) were important sites of the Indus Valley civilisation more than 4000 years ago. Gujarat featured in the exploits of the mighty Buddhist emperor Ashoka, and Jainism first took root under a grandson of Ashoka who governed Saurashtra.

The rule of the Hindu Solanki dynasty from the 10th to 13th centuries, with its capital at Patan, is considered Gujarat's cultural golden age. Solanki rule was ended when Ala-ud-din Khilji brought Gujarat into the Delhi sultanate after several campaigns around 1300. A century later the Muslim Gujarat sultanate broke free of Delhi rule and established a new capital at Ahmedabad. The Mughal empire conquered Gujarat in the 1570s and held it until the Hindu Marathas from central India occupied eastern and central Gujarat in the 18th century. The British set up their first Indian trading base at Surat on Gujarat's coast in about 1614, and replaced Maratha power in the early 19th century.

It's from Gujarat that Gandhi launched his program of non-violent resistance against British rule, beginning with protests and fasting, and culminating with the 390km Salt March, which drew the attention of the world and galvanised anti-British sentiment across India. After Independence, eastern Gujarat became part of Bombay state. Saurashtra and Kachchh, initially separate states, were incorporated into Bombay state in 1956. In 1960 Bombay state was divided on linguistic lines into Gujarati-speaking Gujarat and Marathi-speaking Maharashtra.

The Congress Party of India largely controlled Gujarat until 1991 when the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) came to power. In 2002, communal violence erupted after a Muslim mob was blamed for an arson attack on a train at Godhra that killed 59 Hindu activists. Hindu gangs set upon Muslims in revenge. In three days, an estimated 2000 people were killed (official figures are lower) – most of them Muslims – and tens of thousands were left homeless. The BJP-led state government was widely accused of tacitly, and sometimes actively, supporting some of the worst attacks on Muslim neighbourhoods for political gain; later that year Gujarat's then chief minister, Nahendra Modi, won a landslide re-election victory. A decade later, in 2012, a former BJP minister was convicted of criminal conspiracy and murder in the Naroda Patiya massacre during the Godhra riots, but Modi has so far been cleared of all charges related to the violence. Since the 2002 riots, Gujarat has been peaceful, and enjoys a reputation as one of India's most prosperous and businesslike states. And Modi, of course, became India's prime minister in 2014.

EASTERN GUJARAT

Ahmedabad (Amdavad)

☑ 079 / POP 5.57 MILLION

Ahmedabad (also called Amdavad, Ahmadabad or Ahemdavad) is Gujarat's major city and a startling metropolis with a long history, many remarkable buildings, a fascinating maze of an old quarter, excellent museums, fine restaurants and fabulous night markets. Yet the old-world charm is all but swamped by 21st-century traffic, crowding, pollution and the usual extremes of wealth and poverty. Many travellers stop off briefly en route to Rajasthan or Mumbai, sneaking in a visit to Sabarmati Ashram (Gandhi's former headquarters). You need a little stamina to get to know the city better, as it's quite spread out and moving around can be a bit of a task.

The old city lies on the east side of the Sabarmati River and used to be surrounded by a 10km-long wall, of which little now remains except 15 formidable gates standing as forlorn islands amid swirling, cacophonous traffic. The new city on the west side of the river, nearly all built in the last 50 years, has wider streets, several major universities and many middle-class neighbourhoods.

$$$ more than ₹5000

History

Ahmedabad was founded in 1411 by Gujarati sultan Ahmed Shah at the spot where, legend tells, he saw a hare chasing a dog and was impressed by its bravery. The city quickly spread beyond his citadel on the east bank of the Sabarmati, and by the 17th century it was considered one of the finest cities in India, a prospering trade nexus adorned with an array of fine Islamic architecture. Its influence waned, but from the second half of the 19th century Ahmedabad rose again as a huge textile centre (the 'Manchester of the East'). By the late 20th century many of the mills had closed and the subsequent economic hardship may have been a contributing factor in the communal violence that split the city in 2002, when about 2000 people, mostly Muslims, were killed. Today Ahmedabad is booming again as a centre for IT, education and chemical production on top of its traditional textiles and commerce, and has been officially dubbed a 'megacity'.

👁 Sights

The most interesting part of Ahmedabad is the old city, east of the Sabarmati River – particularly the areas of Lal Darwaja, Bhadra Fort and Teen Darwaja, and the market streets that radiate from them.

★ Sabarmati Ashram

HISTORIC SITE

(www.gandhiashramsabarmati.org; Ashram Rd; ☉ 8.30am-6.30pm) FREE In peaceful, shady grounds on the Sabarmati River's west bank, this ashram was Gandhi's headquarters from 1917 to 1930 during the long struggle for Indian independence. It's said he chose this site because it lay between a jail and a cemetery, and any satyagrahi (nonviolent resister) was bound to end up in one or the other. Gandhi's poignant, spartan living quarters are preserved, and there's a museum that presents a moving and informative record of his life and teachings.

It was from here, on 12 March 1930, that Gandhi and 78 companions set out on the famous Salt March to Dandi, on the Gulf of Cambay, in a symbolic protest, with Gandhi vowing not to return to the ashram until India had gained independence. The ashram was disbanded in 1933, later becoming a centre for Dalit welfare activities and cottage industries. After Gandhi's death some of his ashes were immersed in the river in front of the ashram.

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Uttarayan (p692) Skies swarm with kites in Ahmedabad and other cities.

Modhera Dance Festival (p700) Indian classical dance jamboree in Modhera.

Bhavnath Mela (Bhavnath Fair; ☉ Jan/Feb) Hindu festival at the foot of sacred Girnar Hill in Junagadh.

Mahakali Festival (☉ Mar/Apr) Pilgrims pay tribute to Kali at Pavagadh hill.

Navratri (p694) Nine nights of dancing all around Gujarat.

Kartik Purnima (Somnath & Shatrunjaya; ☉ Nov/Dec) A multifaceted holy day for Hindus, Jains and Sikhs (who celebrate it as Guru Nanak Jayanti). There's a large fair at Somnath (p714) and Jain pilgrims flock to Shatrunjaya hill (p707).

It's about 5km north of Lal Darwaja; bus 83 (₹11) runs here from Lal Darwaja bus stand. An autorickshaw from the city centre is about ₹40.

(☎ 22868172; www.calicomuseum.org; Sarabhai Foundation; ☉ tours 10.30am & 3pm Thu-Tue)

FREE This museum contains one of the world's finest collections of antique and modern Indian textiles, all handmade and up to 500 years old. There are some astoundingly beautiful pieces, displaying incredible virtuosity and extravagance. You'll see Kashmiri shawls that took three years to make, and double-ikat cloths whose 100,000 threads were each individually dyed before weaving. Two tours are offered each day the museum is open; advance booking is required, either by phone or by email.

The main textile galleries can only be visited on the morning tour (maximum 20 people), which lasts two hours. The afternoon tour (maximum 10 people) is devoted to the Sarabhai Foundation's collection of religious art, which explores depictions of Indian deities, including textile galleries.

Kids under 10 are not welcome. Photography is not permitted and bags are not allowed inside. The museum is in the Shahibag area, 3.5km north of the old centre,

Ahmedabad (Amdavad)

GUJARATI AHMEDABAD (AMDADAV)

opposite the Shahibag Underbridge. An autorickshaw from Lal Darwaja should cost about ₹40.

Bhadra Fort

FORT

(Lal Darwaja; ☀️ dawn-dusk) Built immediately after the founding of Ahmedabad in 1411, Bhadra Fort now houses government offices and a Kali temple. Its gate formed the eastern entrance of the Ahmedabad citadel, which stretched west to the river. From the roof you can see the formidable structure and views of surrounding streets. Between the fort and the Teen Darwaja (Triple Gateway; Lal Darwaja) to its east was the Maidan Shahi (Royal Square), where royal processions and polo games took place. Today it's a seething marketplace.

Lokayatan Folk Museum

MUSEUM

(www.shreyasfoundation.in; Indian/foreigner ₹25/100; ☀️ 3-5.30pm Tue-Sat, 10.30am-1.30pm & 3-5.30pm Sun) This museum, 3km west of the river in Bhudarpura, displays an impressive range of Gujarati folk arts, including wood carvings, metalwork and some wonderful embroidered textiles and amazing tie-dyed quilts. Included in the ticket is the Kalpna Mangaldas Museum (☀️ 3-5.30pm Tue-Sat, 10am-1.30pm & 3-5.30pm Sun), with festival masks from around India and, just to round things off, an elephant skeleton. It's all set in the peaceful, peacock-dotted grounds of the Shreyas Foundation. Photos are not allowed.

An autorickshaw from the centre costs around ₹40; say you want to go to Shreyas Foundation.

Lalbai Dalpatbhai Museum

MUSEUM

(LD Museum; www.ldmuseum.co.in; University Rd; ☀️ 10.30am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) FREE Part of the LD Institute of Indology, this museum houses a gorgeous collection of ancient and medieval Indian art treasures, including stone, marble, bronze and wood carvings and 75,000 Jain manuscripts. A 6th-century-AD sandstone carving from Madhya Pradesh is the oldest-known carved image of the god Rama.

NC Mehta Gallery MUSEUM
(University Rd; ☎ 10.30am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) FREE
In the same building as the LD Museum, this gallery has an important collection of jewel-like illustrated manuscripts and miniature paintings. Best known is Chaurapanchasika (Fifty Love Lyrics of a Thief), written by Vilhana, an 11th-century Kashmiri poet sentenced to be hanged for loving the king's daughter. Before his execution he was granted one final wish: he chose to recite these 50 poems, which so impressed the king that he gave Vilhana his daughter in marriage.

Sarkhej Roza HISTORIC BUILDING
(☎ 9am-dusk) A mosque, tomb and palace complex dedicated to the memory of Ahmed Shah I's spiritual advisor, Ahmed Khattu Ganj Baksh. The elegant, dilapidated buildings cluster around a great (often dry) tank, constructed by Sultan Mahmud Begada in the mid-15th century. It's an atmospheric place once used as a retreat by Ahmedabad's rulers. The mausoleums of Mahmud Begada (by the entrance, with geometric jalis – carved lattice screens casting patterns of light on the floor – and Ganj Baksh (the largest in Gujarat) are both here.

It's located in the Sarkhej area, 8km southwest of the old centre; a return auto-rickshaw from the city centre will cost around ₹120. Sarkhej Roza could be combined with a visit to Vishala restaurant (p696) and its Vechaar Utensil Museum (p692), about 1km back towards the city.

Hutheesingh Temple JAIN TEMPLE
(Balvantrai Mehta Rd) Outside Delhi Gate, north of the old city, the Jain Hutheesingh Temple is constructed of delicately carved white marble. Built in 1848, it's dedicated to Dharamanath, the 15th Jain tirthankar (great teacher).

Swaminarayan Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(Kalupur) The glorious, multicoloured, wood-carved Swaminarayan Temple, in the old city, was built in 1822 as the first temple of the Swaminarayan Hindu sect. Followers believe the sect's founder, Swaminarayan (1781-1830), was the supreme being. The daily Heritage Walk (p693) starts here at 8am and usually coincides with worship at the temple, with believers' passion on full display.

Sabarmati Riverfront AREA
(www.sabarmatiriverfront.com) Replacing the slum camps that once lined the Sabarmati River, this new waterfront promenade will eventually stretch for 10km through the heart of Ahmedabad. It's a pleasant place to stroll, popular with families and young lovers, and boat rides (motor and pedal) are available. Still very much a work in progress, you can see the plans for the finished park on its website. The waterfront can currently be accessed from numerous points on the western bank of the river.

Kankaria Lake LAKE
(admission ₹10, 10-min hot-air-balloon ride ₹100; ☎ 8am-10pm, hot-air balloon 10am-10pm) Built in 1451 and recently dandified as a recreation space for the city, this large lake is a nice respite from the hectic streets. Attractions

Vechara Utensil Museum

MUSEUM

(www.vishalla.com; By-Pass Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/20; ☺ 2-4pm & 5-10.30pm Tue-Sun) At Vishalla restaurant (p696), opposite Vasna Tol Naka, this museum displays pots and utensils, with more than 4500 items from all over India, some 1000 years old.

City Museum

MUSEUM

(Bhagtacharya Rd, Sanskar Kendra; ☺ 10am-6pm Tue-Sun) FREE The City Museum covers Ahmedabad's history with simple but diverse displays, and explanatory material in English and Gujarati. It includes sections on the city's religious communities, Gandhi and the Independence struggle. The ground floor houses the disappointing Kite Museum, where flattened tissue-paper contraptions resemble trapped butterflies.

Dada Hari Ni Vav

NOTABLE BUILDING

(☺ dawn-dusk) This step-well, built in 1499 by the supervisor of Sultan Mahmud Begada's harem, descends through five levels of carved stone columns to two small wells, now often dry. The depths are cool, even on the hottest day, and it's a somewhat eerie place. Behind the step-well, the 16th-century Dai Halima Mosque contains the mausoleum of a royal midwife named Halima, with nice jalis.

(📞 9825626387; nirupanchal@yahoo.co.in) One of Gujarat's most knowledgeable guides, the charming Nirav Panchal leads customised tours that fit your interests, from single-day experiences in Ahmedabad to multiday trips across all parts of the state. He speaks perfect English, and his French isn't bad either. Call or email him for details and prices, based on your wants.

Heritage Walk

WALKING TOUR

(📞 9824032866; Swaminarayan Temple; Indian/foreigner ₹30/50; ☀ daily 8am) Ahmedabad's Municipal Corporation runs a fascinating daily walking tour through the old city. It starts at 8am at the Swaminarayan Temple in Kalupur and finishes at the Jama Masjid around 10.30am. Meandering through the narrow, confusing streets and past dilapidated, carved wooden houses, it is an excellent way to get a feel for old Ahmedabad with its 600 pols – nook-like neighbourhoods with

MOSQUES & MAUSOLEUMS

Under the Gujarat sultanate in the 15th and 16th centuries, and especially under Ahmed Shah I (1411–42) and Mahmud Begada (1459–1511), Ahmedabad was endowed with a remarkable collection of stone mosques in a unique style incorporating elements of Hindu and Jain design. Note that women are not allowed into the actual prayer halls and at some mosques are restricted to the periphery.

Jama Masjid (Friday Mosque; MG Rd) Built by Ahmed Shah in 1423, the Jama Masjid ranks as one of India's most beautiful mosques, enhanced by an enormous, peaceful courtyard. Demolished Hindu and Jain temples provided the building materials, and the mosque displays some architectural fusion with these religions, notably in the lotuslike carving of some domes, which are supported by the prayer hall's 260 columns. There were once two 'shaking' minarets, but they lost half their height in the great earthquake of 1819; their lower portions still flank the prayer hall's central portico.

Mausoleum of Ahmed Shah (Badshah-na-Hazira; MG Rd) This atmospheric mausoleum, outside the Jama Masjid's east gate, may have been constructed by Ahmed Shah himself before his death in 1442. His cenotaph is the central one under the main dome. An 11pm drumming session in the mausoleum's eastern gateway used to signal the closing of the city gates and still happens nightly, carrying on a nearly 600-year-old tradition.

Rani-na-Hazira The tomb of Ahmed Shah's queen sits on a raised platform that's engulfed by market stalls. Though it's not in great shape, the jali (carved lattice screens) are worth a look.

Siddi Sayid's Mosque (Lal Darwaja) One of Ahmedabad's most stunning buildings, this mosque is famed for its exquisite jali windows, spiderweb fine, depicting the intricate intertwining branches of the 'tree of life'. Built in the year the Mughals conquered Gujarat (1573), by an Abyssinian in the Gujarati army, it was once part of the old citadel wall.

Ahmed Shah's Mosque (Swami Vivekananda Rd) Southwest of Bhadra Fort and dating from 1414, this is one of the city's earliest mosques, built for the sultan and nobles within Ahmedabad's original citadel. The prayer hall is a forest of beautifully carved stone pillars and jali screens, and its elaborately carved ceiling has a circular symmetry reminiscent of Hindu and Jain temples.

Rani Sipri's Mosque This small mosque near the ST bus stand is also known as the Masjid-e-Nagira (Jewel of a Mosque) because of its graceful construction, with delicately carved minarets and domed tomb with fine jali screens. It was commissioned in 1514 by Rani Sipri, the Hindu wife of Sultan Mahmud Begada; after her death, she was buried there.

Sidi Bashir Mosque Between Ahmedabad train station and Sarangpur Gate, the Sidi Bashir Mosque, built in 1452, is famed for its 21.3m-high shaking minarets (jhulta minara), built to shake to protect against earthquake damage. This certainly worked in 2001!

NAVRATRI & DUSSEHRA

Navratri (Festival of Nine Nights; ☺ Sep/Oct) is celebrated India-wide, but Gujarat has made it its own. This nine-night festival celebrates the feminine divinity in the forms of the goddesses Durga, Lakshmi and Saraswati – particularly Durga's slaying of the demon Mahishasura. Celebrations centre on special shrines at junctions, marketplaces and, increasingly, large venues that can accommodate thousands.

People dress up in sparkling finery to whirl the night away in entrancing garba or dandiya rasa circle dances till the early hours. Celebrated in every town and village in Gujarat, Navratri is a festival where you may well find yourself joining in.

The night after Navratri is Dussehra, which celebrates the victory of Rama over Ravana, with more nocturnal dancing and fireworks, plus the burning of giant effigies of the defeated demon king.

common courtyards, wells and chabutaras (bird-feeding towers).

The tours are in English and there's a brief slide show beforehand. Wear slip-on footwear as you'll be visiting plenty of temples. Show up no later than 7.45am.

House of MG Walks

way to see a lot in one fell swoop. Buses depart from Law Garden; be there no later than 11.45am.

Sleeping

Budget hotels are mostly clustered in the noisy, traffic-infested Lal Darwaja area, close to the old city, while the majority of midrange and top-end places are found on Khanpur Rd (paralleling the eastern bank of the Sabarmati) or west of the river, which is a more congenial environment but further from most of the interesting sights. Ahmedabad has most of the top-end hotels in Gujarat.

Rooms are coordinated concepts of tile, stone and wood, softened with cushioned seating and even beanbag chairs. The bathrooms may be the coolest in the whole city, and the lobby-level restaurant is chic but not aloof. Steam rooms and saunas are in the basement. It's located opposite the Shree Krishna Centre.

Hotel Ambassador HOTEL $$
(☎ 25502490; www.ambassadorahmedabad.com; Khanpur Rd; s/d from ₹2400/2900; ✨@☎) With a bright white exterior and modern decor inside, the Ambassador greets you with a chilled lobby and friendly desk. It follows up with rooms that are quite stylish in browns and creams. With discounts often available, it's good value; ask to have breakfast included and it will be.

Hotel Royal Highness HOTEL $$
(☎ 25507450; www.hotelroyalhighness.com; Lal Darwaja; s/d incl breakfast from ₹4200/4800; ✨@☎) The lobby is a bit tacky, with wood panelling and glass chandeliers, but the rooms are tasteful, spacious and clean. Deluxe rooms feature zebra-print furnishings and sparkling bathrooms with big glassed-in showers. There is 24-hour room service, free airport shuttle service and helpful staff, all in a great location.

Ritz Inn HOTEL $$
(☎ 22123842; www.hotelritzinn.com; Station Rd; s ₹3450-3700, d ₹4300-4550; ✨@☎) Near the train station, this smart hotel has unusual class for the money. The art deco lobby, comfortable rooms with superb beds, and amiable service make it an outstanding option. Checkout is a civilised 24 hours, discounts are often available and it offers free airport and station transfers. The less expensive rooms are actually better (quieter) than the more expensive ones.

★ House of MG HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎ 25506946; www.houseofmg.com; Lal Darwaja; s/d from ₹7200/9000, ste from ₹15,000, all incl breakfast; ✨@☎) This 1920s building opposite Siddi Sayid's Mosque was once the home of textile magnate Sheth Mangaldas Girdhardas – it was converted into a beautiful heritage hotel in the 1990s by his great-grandson. All the rooms are vast, verandah-edged and masterfully decorated, with homey yet luxurious ambience. It's an icon of the upper classes, and hugely popular. Service is first-rate, there are two excellent restaurants, and the indoor swimming pool and gym are divine. If you know your dates, book in advance online to receive a discount.

Diwan's Bungalow HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎ 25355428; www.neemranahotels.com; r ₹5400-7800; ✨☎) Tucked away in a lively neighbourhood a 10-minute walk from Bhadra Fort, this restored 19th-century mansion has an air of casual elegance. The lobby and dining room are hung with period chandeliers and an interior terrace opens onto a garden courtyard. Every room is different, but each is large and tastefully appointed, blending modern amenities with historic touches.

Atrium HOTEL $$$
(☎ 25505505; www.lemontreehotels.com; Khanpur Rd; s/d from ₹7800/9000, ste ₹24,000; ✨@☎) Formerly Ahmedabad's Le Meridien, now owned by Lemon Tree, the Atrium is the most luxurious hotel around the old city. At the time of research, it was undergoing renovations to modernise an already plush property. The indoor swimming pool is a gem, and there's a spa and sauna too. Check the website for current prices and special offers.

✂ Eating

Ahmedabad has the best range of restaurants in Gujarat and is a great place to sample Gujarati thalis.

GUJARATI CUISINE

Gujarat is strong on vegetarian cuisine, partly thanks to the Jain influence here, and the quintessential Gujarati meal is the all-veg thali. It's sweeter, lighter and less spicy and oily than Punjabi thali and locals – who are famously particular about food – have no doubt it's the best thali in the world. It begins with a large stainless-steel dish, onto which teams of waiters will serve most or all of the following: curries, chutneys, pickles, dhal, kadhi (a yoghurt and gram-flour preparation), raita, rotis, rice, khichdi (a blend of lightly spiced rice and lentils), farsan (savoury nibbles), salad and one or two sweet items – to be eaten concurrently with the rest. Buttermilk is the traditional accompanying drink. Normally the rice and/or khichdi don't come till you've finished with the rotis. In most thali restaurants the waiters will keep coming back until you can only say 'No more'.

i ALCOHOL PERMITS

Gujarat is officially a dry state, but alcohol permits for foreign visitors are easy to get. They're free upon arrival at the airport, or can be picked up – usually for a small charge – at the 'wine shops' found in many large hotels. Just show your passport to receive a one-month permit. There are plans to issue permits over the internet in the near future. The permit allows you two units over the month, which equates to 20 bottles of standard beer or two 750mL bottles of liquor, which you must drink in private. Cheers!

The Law Garden Night Market and Manek Chowk are both good for street food after sunset. Halal grills are fired up nightly along Bhathiyar Gali, a small street parallel to MG Rd: you can get a good meaty feed for about ₹30 from the evening stalls.

★ New Lucky Restaurant SOUTH INDIAN $
(Lal Darwaja; mains ₹50-120; ☺ 8am-11pm) For the best breakfast for your buck in Ahmedabad, it's hard to beat the dosas (large South Indian savoury crepes) at New Lucky – though they're good at any time! There's booth-seating in a simple but clean dining hall, with friendly service and surprisingly drinkable black coffee.

Gandhi Cold-Drink House ICE CREAM $
(near Teen Darwaja; ice cream ₹20-40; ☺ 10am-11pm) Locals savour this shop between Bhadra Fort and Teen Darwaja for ice cream, lassis and, best of all, lassis with ice cream!

★ Gopi Dining Hall GUJARATI $$
(off Pritamraj Rd; thali ₹160-250; ☺ 10.30am-3.30pm & 6.30-10.30pm) Just off the western end of Ellis Bridge, this little restaurant is a much-loved thali institution, with a small garden and an air-con dining room. You can choose from 'fix', 'full' and 'with one sweet' options depending on how hungry you are.

Zen Cafe CAFE $$
(www.zencafe.co.in; University Rd; drinks ₹60-120, snacks ₹100-160; ☺ 4-8pm Tue-Sun) This peaceful spot in a tree-fringed garden is popular with students from Gujarat University and other colleges nearby. It's right next to the weird Amdavad ni Gufa (Amdavad Cave), an underground art gallery that looks like a heap of octopi with sawn-off tentacles.

Offerings include panini, chocolate walnut brownies, organic coffee and caprioch mocktails – perfect icy coolers of mint, lime and soda.

Green House GUJARATI $$
(House of MG, Lal Darwaja; snacks ₹150-310, mains ₹220-600; ☺ 7am-10.45pm) The casual front restaurant at the House of MG serves a selection of Gujarati veg dishes which are superb, as is the chaat (savoury snacks) and the house special sharbat (sherbet). The malpuva (a sweet, deep-fried pancake in saffron syrup, topped with rose petals) is divine. Don't forget the hand-churned ice cream!

Great anytime, there's nowhere in the city better for an afternoon break. Choose the fan-blasted outdoor courtyard or the air-con room with a 15% surcharge.

Hotel ZK INDIAN, CHINESE $$
(Relief Rd, Lal Darwaja; mains ₹140-300; ☺ 11am-11.30pm) This popular nonveg restaurant has air-con, tinted windows, low lighting and impeccable service. The boneless mutton kadhai is fantastic and (like a number of dishes here) comes served over a flame. The Afghani chicken curry is also recommended and locals love the chicken pesto Chinese. On weekends, there may be a wait.

Food Inn INDIAN $$
(Lal Darwaja; mains ₹130-280; ☺ 11.45am-4pm & 7-11pm) A clean, bright and bustling curry house in the Hotel Good Night building (opposite Siddi Sayid's Mosque) where carnivores can tuck into numerous chicken, mutton and fish dishes, including spicy Punjabi curries, lip-smackin' tandoori, biryani and sizzlers.

★ Vishalla INDIAN $$$
(☎ 26602422; www.vishalla.com; Bye-Pass Rd; lunch/dinner ₹340/550; ☺ 11am-3pm & 7.30-11pm) On the southwestern outskirts of town, just off the road to Sarkhej (opposite Vasna Tol Naka), Vishalla is a magical eating experience in an open-air setting that's something of a rural village fantasy. An endless thali of Gujarati dishes you won't find in other restaurants is served on plates of leaves, at low wood tables under open-air awnings. Dinner includes excellent performances of folk music, dance and puppet shows. The complex includes the fascinating Vechar Utensil Museum (p692). An auto-rickshaw from the city centre costs about ₹100 return.

Souq

MEDITERRANEAN $$$

(University Rd, below Vijay Char Rasta; mains ₹220-450; ☺11am-3pm & 7-11.30pm) This cute bistro, decorated in blue and white with a vaguely Egyptian theme, serves up specialities inspired by Mediterranean cuisine. Though there are a few nonveg options – like lamb shawarma – most dishes are vegetarian, from a long list of creatively spiced kebabs to Moroccan tagines to creative hummus blends. And much more.

Agashiye

GUJARATI $$$

(☎25506946; House of MG, Lal Darwaja; set meals regular/deluxe ₹770/1050; ☺noon-3.30pm & 7-10.30pm) On the rooftop terrace of the city's finest hotel, Agashiye features a daily-changing, all-veg menu, begins with a welcoming drink and is a cultural journey around the traditional thali, with a multitude of diverse dishes delivered to your plate. It finishes with hand-churned ice cream. For dinner, it is advisable to book ahead.

Shopping*★Manek Chowk

HANDICRAFTS, FOOD

(Old City) This busy space and surrounding narrow streets are the commercial heart of the old city. Weave your way through the crowds to soak up the atmosphere and browse the vegetable and sweet stalls.

Gamthiwala

TEXTILES

(Manek Chowk; ☺11am-7pm Mon-Sat) Gamthiwala, by the entrance to the Mausoleum of Ahmed Shah in the old city, sells quality block-printed textiles.

Law Garden*Night Market

HANDICRAFTS, CLOTHING

(Law Garden; ☺dusk-11pm) An evening market packed with stalls selling glittering wares from Kachchh and Saurashtra. It's chock-a-block with fantastically decorated cholis (sari blouses) and chaniyas (long, wide traditional skirts), as well as embroidered wall hangings, costume jewellery and more.

Garvi Gurjari

HANDICRAFTS, CLOTHING

(Ashram Rd; ☺11am-7pm Mon-Sat) This state-government-run outlet has three floors of Gujarat crafts including silk and handloomed-cotton saris, painted metal jewellery boxes and clothing in folksy designs. There are some good finds if you rummage around.

Hansiba

HANDICRAFTS

(8 Chandan Complex, CG Rd; ☺11am-9pm Mon-Sat, 11.30am-7.30pm Sun) The retail outlet of the Self-Employed Women's Association (SEWA), Hansiba sells colourful woven and embroidered shawls, saris, other clothes and wall hangings.

Art Book Center

BOOKS

(www.artbookcenter.net; off Mangaldas Rd; ☺10am-6pm) This specialist treasure trove is upstairs in a brightly painted building near Ellis Bridge. Indian architecture, miniature painting and textile design are the main topics stocked.

Crossword

BOOKS

(Shree Krishna Centre, Mithakali Six Rd; ☺10.30am-9pm) This is a large, bustling book, music and DVD shop also boasting the Chocolate Room cafe (with chocolate drinks and coffee).

i Information

The Uexplore (www.uexplore.in) website has some useful information, particularly for DIY walking tours. There are numerous ATMs in town.

Apollo City Center (☎66305800; www.apolloahd.com; 1 Tulsibaug Society) Small but recommended private hospital opposite Doctor House, near Parimal Garden.

Gujarat Tourism (☎26578044; www.gujarat.tourism.com; off Ashram Rd, HK House; ☺10.30am-6pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) The very helpful HK House office has all sorts of information at its fingertips and you can also hire cars with drivers here. There is also an office at the Ahmedabad train station.

HDFC Bank (Relief Rd, Lal Darwaja)

ICICI Bank (Ashram Rd, 2/1 Popular House; ☺9am-6pm Mon-Fri) Foreign currency and changing travellers cheques.

BUS

Private buses coming from the north may drop you on Naroda Rd, about 7km northeast of the city centre – an autorickshaw will complete the journey for ₹50 to ₹60.

From the main ST bus stand, also known as Geeta Mandir or Astodia, frequent Gujarat State Road Transport Corporation (GSRTC, ST) buses go to Vadodara (₹82, two hours), Bhavnagar (₹100, five hours), Junagadh (₹160, eight hours), Jamnagar (₹163, seven hours), Rajkot (₹131, 4½ hours) and Bhuj (₹170, nine hours). Volvo AC buses go to Vadodara (₹170) throughout the day. Eleven daily buses go to Udaipur (₹200, 5½ hours), five head to Jodhpur (₹348), and three to Jaipur (₹480). A Volvo AC bus departs at 7pm for Udaipur (₹440), Jaipur (₹1115) and Delhi (₹1843, 20 hours).

For long distances, private buses are generally quicker; most offices are close to Paldi Char Rasta.

Gujarat Travels (☎26575951; www.gujarat-travels.co.in; Paldi Char Rasta) Has buses to Mt Abu (seat/sleeper ₹535/745, seven hours, 7am and 11pm).

Patel Tours & Travels (☎26576807; www.pateitoursandtravels.com; Paldi Char Rasta) Runs Volvo AC buses to Rajkot (₹450, four hours, 20 daily), Jamnagar (₹550, six hours, nine daily) and Mumbai (sleeper ₹1500, 11 hours), plus non-AC buses to Mumbai (seat/sleeper ₹900/1200, 6pm and 10pm) and six daily buses to Bhuj (non-AC seat/sleeper ₹350/450, AC seat/sleeper ₹480/580, AC Volvo ₹700, eight hours).

Raj Express (☎26579667; www.rajexpressbus.com; Paldi Char Rasta) Runs Volvo AC buses to Udaipur (seat/sleeper ₹600/1000, five hours, hourly 5pm to midnight) and AC buses to Jaipur (seat/sleeper ₹1200/1800).

Shree Swaminarayan (☎26576544; www.sstbus.in; 22 Anilkunj Complex) Heads to Diu in non-AC buses (seat/sleeper ₹400/500, 10 hours, 10pm).

TRAIN

There's a computerised reservation office (☎8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) just outside Ahmedabad train station. Window 6 handles the foreign-tourist quota. Computerised reservation is also available at the relatively quiet Gandhi-gram station, although there is no window dedicated to foreigners.

i Getting Around

The airport is 8km north of the centre; a prepaid taxi should cost around ₹550, depending on your destination. An autorickshaw costs about ₹170 to the old city.

Autorickshaw drivers are supposed to turn their meter to zero at the start of a trip then calculate the fare using a conversion chart at the end. Some meters have been rigged, but most work properly. If a driver refuses to use the meter, negotiate the fare in advance.

Around Ahmedabad

Adalaj Vav

Adalaj Vav

NOTABLE BUILDING

(☀️dawn-dusk) The Adalaj Vav, 19km north of Ahmedabad, is among the finest of the Gujarati step-wells. Built by Queen Rudabai in 1499, it has three entrances leading to a huge platform that rests on 16 pillars, with corners marked by shrines. The octagonal well is five storeys deep and is decorated with exquisite stone carvings; subjects range from eroticism to buttermilk.

From Ahmedabad, an autorickshaw costs ₹450 return, or take bus 85 from Lal Darwaja to Chandkheda, transfer to bus 501 towards Sarkej, and ask the driver to let you off at the Adalaj Vav turn-off, from where you can walk or take an auto about 1km.

Gandhinagar

With broad avenues and greenery, Gandhinagar forms a striking contrast to Ahmedabad. This is where state politicians live in large, fortified houses. Although Ahmedabad became Gujarat's capital when the old state of Bombay was split, this new capital was planned 28km north on the west bank of the Sabarmati River. Named Gandhinagar after Mahatma Gandhi, it's India's second planned city after Chandigarh. The secretariat was moved here in 1970.

Gandhinagar's only real tourist attraction is the spectacular Akshardham (www.akshardham.com; J Rd, Sector 20; ☀️9.30am-6.30pm Tue-Sun), belonging to the wealthy Hindu Swaminarayan group. Ornatly carved and built by nearly 1000 artisans, the temple is constructed of 6000 tonnes of pink sandstone and surrounded by manicured gardens. Elaborate underground exhibition areas (admission ₹170; ☀️10am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) feature high- (and low-) tech multimedia dis-

i ADVANCE BUS RESERVATIONS

These days, it's becoming much more common for passengers using public intercity buses run by Gujarat State Road Transport Corporation (GSRTC, ST) to reserve seats in advance. Theoretically, you should be able to do this online by registering at www.gsrtc.in. None of our attempts to book tickets by computer were successful, but we had no problem connecting to their internet system via smartphone – using an Indian SIM card with a data plan. (The system is also very useful for checking most bus route timings.) Alternatively, if you don't have the technology, many bus stands have online reservation windows, where you can make advance bookings in person. Doing so is not absolutely necessary, but depending on the route, you just might get stuck standing for a few hours.

plays on the Swaminarayan movement and the Hindu epics. At sunset a 45-minute Water Show (adult/child ₹75/50; ☀️ Tue-Sun) presents the story of the Upanishads through fountains, music, fire and lasers. It promises to reveal the secret of life after death. There's also a small amusement park for kids. Note that cameras, mobile phones and bags are not allowed into the compound.

Buses from Ahmedabad to Gandhinagar (₹20, 45 minutes, every 15 to 30 minutes) depart from the back northwest corner of Lal Darwaja, from the ST bus stand and from numerous stops along Ashram Rd. From the Gandhinagar bus stand to Akshardham, take an autorickshaw for ₹50.

Nalsarovar Bird Sanctuary

Nalsarovar Bird Sanctuary WILDLIFE RESERVE (Indian/foreigner ₹20/300, car ₹20, camera/video ₹100/2500; ☀️6am-6pm) This 121-sq-km sanctuary, 60km southwest of Ahmedabad, protects Nalsarovar Lake, a flood of island-dotted blue dissolving into the sky and iron-flat plains, and its surrounding wetlands. Between November and February, the sanctuary sees flocks of indigenous and migratory birds, with as many as 250 species passing through. Ducks, geese, eagles, spoonbills, cranes, pelicans and flamingos are best seen at daybreak and dusk.

The sanctuary is busiest at weekends and on holidays. To see the birds it's best to hire a boat (around ₹150, negotiable, per hour). Gujarat Tourism offers luxury tent (☎9427725090; s/d ₹1100/1650; 🏠) accommodation 1.5km from the lake. A taxi from Ahmedabad costs around ₹4400 for a day trip, and gives you the option of combining Nalsarovar with Lothal (40km south).

Lothal

About 80km southwest of Ahmedabad, the city that stood at this archaeological site (🌅dawn-dusk) 4500 years ago was one of the most important of the Indus Valley civilisation, which extended into what is now Pakistan. Excavations have revealed the world's oldest known artificial dock, which was connected to an old course of the Sabarmati River. Artefacts suggest that trade may have been conducted with Mesopotamia, Egypt and Persia. The site museum displays intricate seals, weights and measures, games and jewellery, plus an artist's impression of how Lothal looked at its peak. Lacking dramatic buildings, the site is best appreciated by true archaeology buffs.

Palace Utelia (☎9825012611; www.thepalaceutelia.com; r from ₹6000; 🏠), a heritage hotel 7km from the site, by the Bhugavo River, is an imposing palace – complete with aged retainers – that dwarfs the village it oversees. The shabby rooms are overpriced, but it's an unusual place with some charm if not comfort.

Lothal is a long day trip from Ahmedabad, and a taxi (around ₹4400 return) is the easiest bet. Trains from Ahmedabad's Gandhinagar station depart at 7.15am and 9am run

WORTH A TRIP

VAUTHA FAIR

Vautha Fair (🌅Nov) Each year, Gujarat's largest livestock fair is held at Vautha, at the confluence of the Sabarmati and Vatrak Rivers, 50km south of Ahmedabad. Thousands of donkeys, camels and cows change hands here, and some 25,000 people – including many maldhari (herder) pastoralists – set up tents and stay for a few days of buying, selling, eating, dancing, and making sunset puja (prayers) in the river. Check with Gujarat Tourism for exact dates.

to Lothal-Bhurkhi station (2nd-class ₹45, two hours), 6km from the site, from where you can catch a bus. Take water and food.

Modhera

Built in 1026 and 1027 by King Bhimdev I, the Sun Temple (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; 🌅9am-5pm) in Modhera is one of the greatest monuments of the Solanki dynasty, whose rulers were believed to be descended from the sun. The exterior is intricately carved with demons and deities, and the main hall and shrine are reached through a pillared pavilion. Inside, 52 sculpted pillars depict scenes from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, and a hall with 12 niches represents the different monthly manifestations of Surya (the sun god). Erotic sculpture panels complete the sensual decoration.

Like the better-known Sun Temple at Konark in Odisha (Orissa), which it predates by 200 years, the Modhera temple was designed so that the dawn sun shone on the image of Surya during the equinox. Surya Kund, an extraordinary rectangular step-well inside the complex, contains over 100 shrines, resembling a sunken art gallery.

Each year, around 20 January, the temple is the scene for a three-day classical dance festival featuring dancers from all over India.

Modhera is 100km northwest of Ahmedabad. You can take a bus (₹65, two hours, half-hourly) from Ahmedabad's ST bus stand to Mahesana (Mehsana), and then another bus 26km west to Modhera (₹30, one hour). There are also trains from Ahmedabad to Mahesana. A taxi from Ahmedabad is much easier, and will cost about ₹3500 round trip, including a visit to nearby Patan.

Patan

About 130km northwest of Ahmedabad, Patan was Gujarat's capital for six centuries before Ahmedabad was founded in 1411. It was ruined by the armies of Ala-ud-Din Khilji around 1300, and today is a dusty, little town with narrow streets lined by elaborate wooden houses.

Patan is famed, far and wide, for its beautiful Patola silk textiles, produced by the torturously laborious double-ikat method.

Both the warp (lengthways) and weft (transverse) threads are painstakingly tie-dyed to create the pattern before the weaving process begins. It takes about six months to make one sari, which might cost ₹100,000.

Sights

Rani-ki-Vav HISTORIC SITE
(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀9am-5pm) The only real sign of Patan's former glory is this astoundingly beautiful step-well. Built in 1063 by Rani Udayamati to commemorate her husband, Bhimdev I, the step-well is the oldest and finest in Gujarat and is remarkably preserved. Steps lead down through multiple levels with lines of carved pillars and over 800 sculptures, mostly on Vishnu-avataar themes.

Patan Patola Heritage HANDICRAFTS WORKSHOP
(📍232274; www.patanpatola.com; Patolawala St, Salvavado; ☀10am-6pm) Run by the award-winning Salvi family, this is an excellent place to see Patola silk weaving in action.

Panchasara Parshvanath JAIN TEMPLE
Among more than 100 Jain temples around Patan, this is the largest, with all the domes and sacred carvings your eyes can absorb.

Sleeping & Eating

There's really nowhere worth staying in town.

Food Zone INDIAN $
(mains ₹80-120; ☀11am-3pm & 7-11pm) This place near the railway tracks has modern booth seating, air-con and great set meals.

Getting There & Away

Patan is 40km northwest of Mahesana. Buses leave Ahmedabad's ST bus stand about every hour (₹78, 3½ hours). There are also buses to/from Zainabad (₹65, 2½ hours, two daily), via Modhera. A day trip in a private taxi from Ahmedabad costs about ₹3500; combine with a visit to the Sun Temple in Modhera.

Vadodara (Baroda)

📍0265 / POP 1.66 MILLION
Vadodara (or Baroda as it's often known) lies 106km southeast of Ahmedabad, a little over an hour's drive along National Expressway 1. Vadodara has some interesting city sights, but the main reason for coming here is to visit the stunning Unesco World Heritage Site of Champaner and Pavagadh (p704) nearby. The city is way less hectic than Ahmedabad, and parts of the Sayajigunj area near the university have a college-town feel.

After the Marathas expelled the Mughals from Gujarat in the 18th century, their local lieutenants, the Gaekwad clan, made Vadodara their capital. Vadodara retained a high degree of autonomy even under the British, right up to Independence in 1947. Maharaja Sayajirao III (1875-1939) was a great moderniser and laid the foundations of Vadodara's modern reputation as Gujarat's cultural capital.

Sights

★Laxmi Vilas Palace PALACE
(Nehru Rd; admission ₹170; ☀10am-5pm Tue-Sun) Still the residence of Vadodara's royal family, Laxmi Vilas was built in full-throttle 19th-century Indo-Saracenic flourish at a cost of ₹6 million. The most impressive Raj-era palace in Gujarat, its elaborate interiors boast well-maintained mosaics, chandeliers and artworks. It's set in expansive parklike grounds, which include a golf course. A one-hour audio guide is included with admission.

Sayaji Bagh PARK
A welcome patch of shady green space in the heart of Vadodara, stroll the wide paved pathways for a bit of peace and relative quiet. If you have kids, hit the playgrounds!

Baroda Museum & Picture Gallery MUSEUM
(Indian/foreigner ₹10/200; ☀10.30am-5pm) Within Sayaji Bagh park, this museum houses a diverse collection, much of it gathered by Maharaja Sayajirao III, including statues and carvings from several Asian regions, an Egyptian room and some rather mangy zoology exhibits. The gallery has lovely Mughal miniatures and a motley crew of European masters.

Tambekar Wada HISTORIC BUILDING
(Pratap Rd, Raopura; ☀8am-6pm) This wooden multistoreyed townhouse is a typical Maratha mansion, once the residence of Bhau Tambekar, diwan of Baroda (1849-54). Inside are beautiful 19th-century murals featuring scenes from the Mahabharata, Krishna's life and the 19th-century Anglo-Maratha War. Many are worn and poorly lit by ambient light, but they're still impressive.

GUJARAT VADODARA (BARODA)

Sleeping

Most accommodation is in the conveniently central Sayajigunj area; there are a number of very cheap hotels (₹200 to ₹400) there, but they fill up early.

Hotel Valiant

HOTEL $

(☎ 2363480; www.hotelvaliant.com; 7th fl, BBC Tower, Sayajigunj; s/d ₹860/1070, with AC from ₹1180/1400; 🍷🍴) The Valiant offers surprisingly fresh digs on the upper floors of a high-rise building. Take the lift up from the street entrance to find reception in a spacious lobby on the 7th floor. The clean if bland rooms are the best value in town.

Hotel Ambassador

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2362727; www.hotelambassadorindia.com; Sayajigunj; s/d from ₹1460/1780; 🍷🍴) With stylish rooms and comfortable beds, the Ambassador offers very good value. The cheapest 'deluxe' rooms have a vaguely Japanese air, while the 'executive' quarters have a slick contemporary feel, all pinks, oranges, squares and rectangles. There's civilised 24-hour checkout and a very helpful front desk.

Oasis Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 22225054; www.theoasishotel.net; Sayajigunj; s ₹3000-4300, d ₹3700-4880, ste ₹8950; 🍷🍴) For a touch of comfort, the Oasis delivers.

Rooms are modern and pleasingly designed, and there's a swimming pool on the roof! The more expensive Club rooms are not worth the extra rupees, but suites are fittingly luxurious, with sunken living rooms and personal putting greens.

WelcomHotel Vadodra

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2330033; www.ithotels.in; RC Dutt Rd; r incl breakfast from ₹9550-13,150, ste ₹21,500; 🍷🍴📶🚰) A swish five-star complex with predictable, well-appointed rooms, an unusual outdoor pool, plenty of cool lounge areas, an expensive 24-hour multicuisine restaurant and a wine shop.

Eating

Dairy Den

ICE CREAM $

(scoops ₹70-130; ☀️ 10am-12.20am) Cool off with a few scoops, or a soft-serve, at Vadodra's best ice-cream parlour. Find it at Sardar Patel statue.

Kalyan

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Sayajigunj; dishes ₹60-200; ☀️ 7am-11pm) Kalyan is a breezy student hang-out serving healthy portions of South Indian food and less healthy attempts at Western fast food (though all dishes are vegetarian).

Bhavnagar express ₹137, five hours, about hourly from 6am

Diu ₹225, 12 hours, 6am and 9pm

Mumbai ₹350, nine hours, 6pm, 6.40pm and 7.30pm

Udaipur ₹232, eight hours, 3am and 6am

Across from the train station, Sweta Travels (☎ 2786917) sends AC Volvo buses to Mumbai (seat/sleeper ₹1500/1800, eight hours, three nightly). Many other companies have private buses to other destinations in Gujarat and Rajasthan from the plethora of offices at Pandya Bridge, 2km north of the train station.

TRAIN

About 30 trains a day run to Ahmedabad, including the 12009 Shatabdi (AC chair/exec ₹435/790, two hours, 11.20am Monday to Saturday). The 13 daily trains to Mumbai include the 12010 Shatabdi (AC chair/exec ₹815/1575, 5¼ hours, 4.17pm Monday to Saturday).

Around Vadodara

Champaner & Pavagadh

This spectacular Unesco World Heritage Site, 47km northeast of Vadodara, combines a sacred, 762m volcanic hill (Pavagadh) that rises dramatically from the plains and a ruined Gujarati capital with beautiful mosque architecture (Champaner). The whole area is referred to as Pavagadh.

Sights

Pavagadh

HISTORIC SITE

This strategic hilltop may have been fortified as early as the 8th century. It became the capital of the Chauhan Rajputs around 1300, but in 1484 was taken by the Gujarat sultan Mahmud Begada, after a 20-month siege; the Rajputs committed jauhar (ritual mass suicide) in the face of defeat. Today, throngs of pilgrims ascend Pavagadh to worship at the important Kalikamata Temple, dedicated to the evil-destroying goddess Kali, who sits atop the summit.

Near the top of the hill you'll also find Pavagadh's oldest surviving monument, the 10th- to 11th-century Hindu Lakulisha Temple, and several Jain temples. The views are fantastic and so are, if you're lucky, the cooling breezes. During the nine days of Navratri (p694) and the Mahakali Festival (p689), the usual flow of pilgrims becomes a flood.

To ascend Pavagadh, you can either walk up the pilgrim trail, which will take two to three hours, or take a shuttle (₹20) from the Champaner Citadel south wall. The shuttle deposits you about halfway up the hill, where you can either join the walking path (here lined by souvenir and drink stalls), or hop on the ropeway (cable car; return ₹98; ☀6am-6.45pm) which glides you up to within a 700m walk of the Kalikamata Temple.

Champaner

HISTORIC SITE

(Indian/foreigner ₹10/250; ☀8am-6pm) Following his capture of Pavagadh, Sultan Mahmud Begada turned Champaner, at the base of the hill, into a splendid new capital. But its glory was brief: when it was captured by Mughal emperor Humayun in 1535, the Gujarati capital reverted to Ahmedabad, and Champaner fell into ruin. The heart of this historic site is the Citadel, whose most impressive features are its monumental mosques (no longer used for worship), with their beautiful blending of Islamic and Hindu decoration styles.

The huge Jami Masjid, just outside the Citadel's east gate, boasts a wonderful carved entrance porch that leads into a lovely courtyard surrounded by a pillared corridor. The prayer hall has two tall central minarets, further superb stone carving, multiple domes, and seven mihrabs (prayer niches) along the back wall.

Other beautiful mosques include the Sa-her ki Masjid, behind the ticket office inside the Citadel, which was probably the private

SOUTH OF VADODARA

Gujarat stretches some 240km south from Vadodara to the border of Maharashtra, 150km short of Mumbai. Surat, 140km south of Vadodara, is where the British established their first Indian settlement in 1614. It's now Gujarat's hectic second-biggest city (population five million), and a busy commercial centre for textiles and diamonds. Around 40km south of Surat is Dandi, the destination of Gandhi's epic Salt March in 1930, with several Gandhi monuments by its strikingly empty beach. Just before the Maharashtra border is the ex-Portuguese enclave of Daman, an alcohol-infused resort town on a grey sea. Though it still retains a little of the piquancy of old Portugal, Daman is far less attractive than its counterpart, Diu in Saurashtra. In the southeast, the hilly Dangs district is the northern extremity of the Western Ghats, with a large tribal population and little tourist infrastructure. The main town is the minor hill resort of Saputara. The Dangs Darbar (☀Feb/Mar), in the week before Holi, is a spectacular, largely tourist-free tribal festival.

royal mosque, and the Kevda Masjid, 300m north of the Citadel and about 600m west of the Jami Masjid. Here you can climb narrow stairs to the roof, and higher up the minarets, to spot other mosques – Nagina Masjid, 500m north, with no minarets but exquisite geometric carving, and Lila Gumbaj ki Masjid, 800m east, with a fluted central dome. The twin minarets resembling factory chimneys, about 1km west, adorn the Brick Minar ki Masjid, a rare brick tomb.

Getting There & Away

Buses to Pavagadh run about every half-hour from Vadodara (₹41, 1½ hours); a return taxi costs around ₹1000. Some buses from Pavagadh travel via Vadodara to Ahmedabad (₹80, four hours).

SAURASHTRA

Before Independence, Saurashtra, also known as the Kathiawar Peninsula, was a jumble of over 200 princely states. Today it has a number of hectic industrial cities, but most of them retain a core of narrow old streets crowded with small-scale commerce. Outside the cities it's still villages, fields, forests and a timeless, almost feudal feel, with farmers and maldhari (herders) dressed head to toe in white, and rural women as colourful as their neighbours in Rajasthan.

Saurashtra is mainly flat and its rare hills are often sacred, including the spectacular, temple-topped Shatrunjaya and Girnar. The peninsula is liberally endowed with wildlife sanctuaries, notably Sasan Gir, where Asia's last wild lions roam. On the south coast lies the very quaint, laid-back ex-Portuguese island enclave of Diu. Saurashtra is also where Mahatma Gandhi was born and raised: you can visit several sites associated with his life.

Saurashtra has a reputation for being fond of its sleep, and siesta takes place from at least 1pm to 3pm.

Bhavnagar

Barton Museum

MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner ₹2/50; ☺ 9am-1pm & 3-6pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) Located beneath the Gandhi Smriti Museum, this dusty but interesting collection contains religious carvings, betel-nut cutters, and a skeleton in a cupboard.

Takhteshwar Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Perched atop a small hillock, this temple is high enough to provide splendid views over the city and out onto the Gulf of Cambay.

Old City

North of Ganga Jalia Tank, Bhavnagar's old city is well worth a wander, especially in the early evening – it's busy with shops and cluttered with dilapidated elaborate wooden buildings leaning over the colourful crowded bazaars. Don't miss the vegetable market!

Sleeping

The budget hotels, mostly in the old city and near the train station, are fairly grim, but midrange hotels are reasonable.

Hotel Sun 'n' Shine

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2516131; www.hotelsunshine.in; Panwadi Chowk, ST Rd; r incl breakfast from ₹2000, ste from ₹3800; 🍷🍷🍷) This well-run, three-star hotel is decent value. It has a Mediterranean vertigo-inducing atrium, a welcoming front desk, and the reliable RGB restaurant. The rooms are fresh and clean with comfortable beds and soft pillows: the more you pay, the more windows you get. Breakfast is substantial, and free airport transfers are offered.

Nilambag Palace Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2424241; www.nilambagpalace.com; cottage s/d ₹2900/4100, palace r ₹5250-7000; 🍷🍷🍷) In large gardens beside the Ahmedabad road, about 600m southwest of the bus station, this former maharaja's palace was built in 1859. The lobby looks like an understated regal living room, with a beautiful mosaic floor. The sizeable palace rooms retain a stately early 20th-century feel; the 'cottage' rooms are good-sized but rather ordinary.

Guests have use of a swimming pool (nonguests ₹100) in the Vijay Mahal, plus a gym and tennis facilities.

📍 Getting There &amp; Around

AIR

Jet Airways (☎2433371; www.jetairways.com; Surat House, Waghawadi Rd) has daily flights to and from Mumbai. The airport is about 3.5km from town. A taxi to/from the airport costs around ₹150.

BUS

From the ST bus stand there are frequent services to Rajkot (₹130, four hours), Ahmedabad (₹120, five hours), Vadodara (₹200, four hours) and Palitana (₹37, two hours). There are eight daily buses to Diu (₹125, seven hours).

Private bus companies include Tanna Travels (☎2425218; Waghawadi Rd), with AC buses to Ahmedabad (₹240, four hours, 15 daily) and Mumbai (₹850, 14 hours, 4pm).

TRAIN

The 12972 Bhavnagar-Bandra Express departs at 8.30pm and arrives in Ahmedabad (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹230/535/735) at 1.52am on its way to Mumbai.

Blackbuck National Park

★ Blackbuck National Park NATURE RESERVE (Velavadar NP; Indian/foreigner car ₹250/US$20, 4hr guide ₹100/US$10; ☀dawn-dusk 16 Oct-15 Jun) This beautiful, 34-sq-km park encompasses large areas of pale, custard-coloured grassland stretching between two seasonal rivers. Formerly called Velavadar National Park, it's famous for its blackbucks, beautiful, fast antelope that sport elegant spiralling horns – as long as 65cm in mature males. Some 1600 inhabit the park, which is also good for spotting birds such as wintering harriers from Siberia (about 2000 of them most years). If you're lucky, you may even spot wolves!

Pay your fees (convert the dollar rate into rupees) and pick up a mandatory guide (who is unlikely to speak English) at the reception centre about 65km from Bhavnagar, north of Valabhipur. The park has a good road network and is best explored by car. A taxi day trip from Bhavnagar costs about ₹2500.

Sleeping

Forest Department Guest House HOTEL $$ (Indian/foreigner d ₹500/US$50, with AC ₹1500/US$75) Near the reception centre, book one of the four rooms here through the Forest Office (p706) in Bhavnagar.

Palitana

☎02848 / POP 55,000

The hustling, dusty town of Palitana, 51km southwest of Bhavnagar, has grown rapidly to serve the pilgrim trade around Shatrunjaya. Your best bet for general information is the helpful manager at Hotel Shrivak.

Sights & Activities

★ Shatrunjaya

SACRED SITE

(Place of Victory; ☀temples 6.30am-6pm) One of Jainism's holiest pilgrimage sites, Shatrunjaya is an incredible hilltop sea of temples, built over 900 years. It is said that Adinath (also known as Rishabha), the founder of Jainism, meditated and gave his first sermon beneath the rayan tree at the summit. The temples are grouped into tunks (enclosures), each with a central temple and many minor ones. The 500m climb up 3300 steps to the temples adds to the extraordinary experience.

The steps start on the southwest edge of Palitana about 3.5km from the bus stand (₹20 by autorickshaw). Most days, hundreds of pilgrims make the 1½-hour climb; crowds swell into the thousands around Kartik Purnima (p689), which marks the end of Chaturmas, a four-month period of spiritual retreat and material self-denial that coincides with the monsoon season.

As you near the top of the hill, the track forks. The main entrance, Ram Pole, is reached by bearing left, though the best views are to the right, where on a clear day you can see the Gulf of Cambay. Inside the Nav Tonk Gate, one path leads left to the Muslim shrine of Angar Pir – a Muslim saint who protected the temples from a Mughal attack; women who want children

SHATRUNJAYA PRACTICALITIES

It's best to start the ascent around dawn, before it gets too hot. Dress respectfully (no shorts etc), leave behind leather items (including belts and bags), and don't eat or drink inside the temples. If you wish, you can be carried up and down the hill in a dholi (portable chair with two bearers), for about ₹1000 round trip. Photos may be taken on the trail and outside the temples, but not inside them.

come here and make offerings of miniature cradles. To the right, the second tunk you reach is the Chaumukhji Tunk, containing the Chaumukh (Four-Faced Shrine), built in 1618 by a wealthy Jain merchant. Images of Adinath, the first Jain tirthankar (great teacher; believed to have attained enlightenment here), face the four cardinal directions.

You can easily spend a couple of hours wandering among the hundreds of temples up here. The biggest and one of the most splendid and important, with a fantastic wealth of detailed carving, is the Adinath Temple, on the highest point on the far (south) side.

Shri Vishal Jain Museum MUSEUM
(admission ₹10; ☎ 8.30am-12.30pm & 3.30-8.30pm) This museum features some remarkable – if randomly displayed – exhibits of Jain artwork and artefacts up to 500 years old. In the basement is a surprising circular temple with mirror walls and centuries-old images of four tirthankars. It's 500m down the street from the foot of the Shatrunjaya steps.

Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Shrivak HOTEL $
(☎ 252428; s/d/tr ₹200/500/600, r with AC ₹900; 🍷) The ultrabasic rooms at the friendly and helpful Shrivak, opposite the bus stand, are the best bet in Palitana itself. They're shabby but clean, though bathrooms are hit or miss (mostly miss); doubles are much bigger than singles. Buckets of hot water are available from 5am to 10am.

★ Vijay Vilas Palace HERITAGE HOTEL $$
(☎ 282371, 9427182809; vishwa_adpur@yahoo.co.in; Adpur village; r incl breakfast ₹3750; 🍷) This small former palace built in 1906 sits surrounded by fields in the countryside beneath the western end of Shatrunjaya, 10km west of Palitana. There are six large, plain but nicely decorated rooms, with original furniture. Three have terraces/balconies looking towards Shatrunjaya – which can be climbed from here by a slightly shorter, steeper path than the one from Palitana.

Vijay Vilas is family-run, with delicious home-cooked food (a mix of Gujarati and Rajasthani, veg and nonveg). You can also just pop in for lunch (₹300) – call first.

Jagruti Restaurant INDIAN $
(thalis ₹35-70; ☎ 24hr) Across the laneway from Hotel Shrivak, Jagruti is a busy thali house.

Getting There & Away

Plenty of ST buses run to/from Bhavnagar (₹37, 1½ hours, hourly) and Ahmedabad (₹150, five hours, hourly). For Diu, take a bus to Talaja (₹21, one hour, hourly), where you can change for Diu (₹90, 5½ hours, around six daily).

Four passenger trains run daily to/from Bhavnagar (2nd class ₹15, 1½ hours).

Diu

Diu is different. This tiny island linked by a bridge to Gujarat's southern coast is infused with Portuguese history; its major architectural landmarks include three churches and a seafront fort; the streets of the main town are remarkably clean and quiet once you get off the tourist-packed waterfront strip; and alcohol is legal here. If you've been spending time immersed in the intensity of Gujarati cities, or just really need a beer, Diu offers a refreshing break.

Despite its draw as a seaside destination, Diu is not a great choice for a beach-centric vacation. Most of its sandy strips are littered with trash, and the throngs of families make them better for people-watching than sun-worshipping. Add in the random drunk-guy factor and any fantasies you have of a tropical paradise will surely be dashed. Diu, however, is one of the safest places in India to ride a scooter, with minimum traffic and excellent roads, and zipping along the coast with the wind in your hair is a joy.

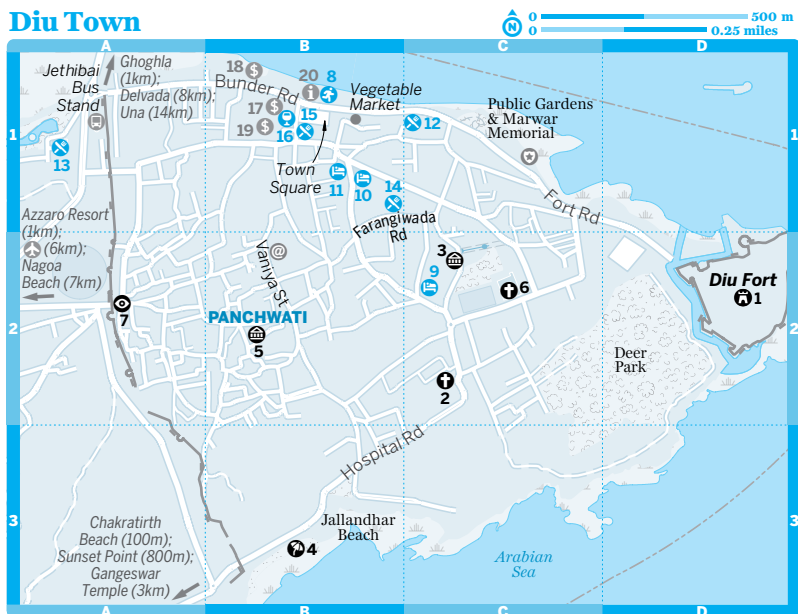

Like Daman and Goa, Diu was a Portuguese colony until taken over by India in 1961. With Daman, it is still governed from Delhi as part of the Union Territory of Daman & Diu and is not part of Gujarat. It includes Diu Island, about 11km by 3km, separated from the mainland by a narrow channel, and two tiny mainland enclaves. One of these, housing the village of Ghoghla, is the entry point to Diu from Una.

Diu town sits at the east end of the island. The northern side of the island, facing Gujarat, is tidal marsh and salt pans, while the southern coast alternates between limestone cliffs, rocky coves and sandy beaches.

The island's main industries are fishing, tourism, alcohol and salt. Kalpana Distillery at Malala produces rum from sugar cane.

One custom of the Portuguese still very much respected by local businesses is that of the siesta, meaning you shouldn't count on much being open mid-afternoon.

History

Diu was the first landing point for the Parsis when they fled from Persia in the 7th century AD, and it became a major port between the 14th and 16th centuries, when it was the trading post and naval base from which the Ottomans controlled the northern Arabian Sea shipping routes.

The Portuguese secured control of Diu in 1535 and kept it until India launched Operation Vijay in 1961. After the Indian Air Force unnecessarily bombed the airstrip and terminal near Nagoa Beach, it remained derelict until the late 1980s. Diu, Daman and Goa were administered as one union territory of India until 1987, when Goa became a state.

👁️ Diu Town

The town is sandwiched between the massive fort at its east end and a huge city wall on the west. The main Zampa Gateway, painted bright red, has carvings of lions, angels and a priest, while just inside it is a chapel with an image of the Virgin and Child dating from 1702.

Cavernous St Paul's Church (☉ 8am-6pm) is a wedding cake of a church, founded by Jesuits in 1600 and then rebuilt in 1807. Its neoclassical facade is the most elaborate of any Portuguese church in India. Inside, it's a great barn, with a small cloister next door, above which is a school. Daily mass is heard here. Nearby is white-walled St Thomas' Church, a lovely, simple building that is now the Diu Museum (☉ 9am-9pm) FREE, with a spooky, evocative collection of wooden Catholic saints going back to the 16th century. Once a year, on All Saints Day (1 November), this is used for a packed-out mass. The Portuguese-descended population mostly live in this area, still called Farangi-wada (Foreigners' Quarter). The Church of St Francis of Assisi (Hospital), founded in 1593, has been converted into a hospital, but is also sometimes used for services.

Many other Diu buildings show a lingering Portuguese influence. The western part of town is a maze of narrow, winding streets and many houses are brightly painted, with the most impressive being in the Panchwati area, notably Nagar Sheth Haveli, an old merchant's house laden with stucco scrolls and fulsome fruit.

👁️ Around the Island

★ Diu Fort

(☉ 8am-6pm) Built in 1535, with additions made in 1541, this massive, well-preserved Portuguese fort with its double moat (one tidal) must once have been impregnable, but sea erosion and neglect are leading to a slow collapse. Cannonballs litter the place, and the ramparts have a superb array of cannons. The lighthouse, which you can climb, is Diu's highest point, with a beam that reaches 32km. There are several small chapels, one holding engraved tombstone fragments.

Part of the fort also serves as the island's jail.

Gangeswar Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Gangeswar Temple, on the south coast 3km west of town, just past Fudam village, is a small coastal cave where five Shiva linga (phallic symbols) are washed by the waves.

Sea Shell Museum

MUSEUM

(adult/child ₹20/10; ☉ 9.30am-5pm) This museum, 6km from town on the Nagoa road, is a labour of love. Captain Devjibhai Vira Fulbaria, a merchant navy captain, collected thousands of shells from literally all over the world in 50 years of sailing, and has displayed and labelled them in English with great care.

Parsi Bungali

HISTORIC SITE

A stone-paved path leads 200m inland from Gangeswar Temple to two Parsi 'towers of silence' – squat, round stone towers where the Parsis laid their dead out to be consumed by vultures. Climb the ramp slowly and make some noise, so as not to startle the groups of dogs that hang out inside!

★ Vanakbara

VILLAGE

At the extreme west of the island, Vanakbara is a fascinating little fishing village and the highlight of Diu. It's great to wander around the port, packed with colourful fishing boats and bustling activity – best around 7am to 8am when the fishing fleet returns and sells off its catch.

Beaches

Nagoa Beach, on the south coast of the island 7km west of Diu town, is long, palm-fringed and safe for swimming – but trash-strewn and very busy, often with drunk men: foreign women receive a lot of unwanted attention. Two kilometres further west begins the sandy, 2.5km sweep of Gomptimata Beach. This is often empty, except on busy weekends, but it gets big waves – you need to be a strong swimmer here. Within walking distance of Diu town is the rocky Jallandhar Beach, on the town's southern shore; the longer, sandier Chakratirth Beach, west of Jallandhar; and pretty Sunset Point Beach, a small, gentle curve beyond Chakratirth that's popular for swimming and relatively hassle-free. Sunset Point itself is a small headland at the south end of the beach, topped by the INS Khukhri Memorial, commemorating an Indian Navy frigate sunk off Diu during the 1971 India–Pakistan War. Unfortunately the region around Sunset Point is also a dumping ground, and any early-morning excursion will reveal that the tidal zone here is a popular toilet venue.

The best beach is Ghoghla Beach, north of Diu. A long stretch of sand, it's got less trash and fewer people than the others, along with gentle waves and some decent restaurants behind it.

Tours

Boat Trips

BOATING

(per person ₹40, minimum ₹240; ☀️ 9.30am–1pm & 3–6.30pm) You can take 20-minute boat trips around the harbour. Get tickets at the kiosk in front of the tourist office.

Sleeping

Rates at most hotels are extremely flexible, with discounts of up to 60% available at the more expensive places when things are quiet. Some only charge the full rates at peak holiday times such as Diwali and Christmas/New Year. We've quoted the highest prices here.

Diu Town

★ Herança Goesa

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 253851; heranca_goesa@yahoo.com; Farangi-wada; r ₹400–800) Behind the Diu Museum, this friendly home of a Portuguese-descended family has eight absolutely spotless rooms that represent incredible value. Take one of the upstairs rooms that captures the sea breeze and just relax. Good breakfasts are served and delicious fish/seafood dinners may be available if you ask in advance.

Hotel Super Silver

HOTEL $

(☎️ 252020; Super Silver Complex; r ₹450, with AC ₹950; 🏠) Super Silver has a nice central location and is good value, with simple, very clean rooms – though the bathrooms could use some help. The affable manager raises and lowers prices according to demand on any given day, but likes foreign tourists and is willing to give them a break.

Hotel Samrat

HOTEL $$

(☎️ 252354; www.hotelsamratdiu.com; Old Collectorate Rd; r ₹1450, with AC from ₹2050; 🏠 🏠) Hotel Samrat is the best midrange choice downtown, with comfortable doubles, some with street-facing balconies. Credit cards are accepted, and there's a swimming pool, and a decent Indian-Chinese restaurant with plenty of grog available.

★ Azzaro Resort

HOTEL $$$

(☎️ 255421; www.azzarodiu.com; Fudam Rd; d ₹4950–11,900; 🏠 🏠 🏠) A kilometre outside the city gate, this is hands down Diu's most luxurious hotel. It features tastefully luxurious rooms with high-tech lighting controls and stylish glass walls between the bedroom and bath. All look out onto the garden surrounding the sapphire-blue pool, many with balconies. There's a spa, a gym, two restaurants and a 24-hour coffee shop. In all, worth the money.

Nagoa Beach

Hoka Island Villa

HOTEL $$

(☎️ 253036; www.resorthoka.com; r ₹2740–3170; 🏠 🏠 🏠) Hoka is a great place to stay, with colourful, clean and cool rooms in a small, palm-shaded complex with a swimming pool. Some rooms have terraces over the palm trees. Management is helpful, you can hire mopeds, and the food is excellent. On the main road, pass the turn into Nagoa Beach, and it's on the left after 150m.

Radhika Beach Resort

HOTEL $$$

(☎️ 252553; www.radhikaresort.com; d ₹5430–7580; 🏠 🏠 🏠) An immaculate, smart, modern place and Diu's best-located upmarket option, with comfortable, condo-like villas in grassy grounds. Rooms are spacious and clean, and there's a very good multicuisine restaurant. The classic and VIP rooms are set around a large pool.

Eating

There's a daily fish market opposite Jethibai bus stand, and another one across the bridge in Ghoghla, which is active around 6.30pm. The fresh fish and seafood are delicious; most guesthouses and hotels will cook anything you buy.

Ram Vijay

ICE CREAM $

(scoops ₹25–30; ☀️ 8.30am–1.30pm & 3.30–9.30pm) For a rare treat head to this small, squeaky-clean, old-fashioned ice-cream parlour near the town square for delicious handmade ice cream and milkshakes. Going since 1933, this family enterprise started with soft drinks, and still makes its own brand (Dew) in Fudam village – try a ginger lemon soda and then all the ice creams!

O'Coqueiro

MULTICUISINE $$

(Farangiwada Rd; breakfast ₹50-120, lunch & dinner ₹100-330; ☺ 8am-9pm) Here, the dedicated Kailash Pandey has developed a soul-infused garden restaurant celebrating freshness and quality. The menu offers uncomplicated but very tasty pasta, chicken and seafood, plus a handful of Portuguese dishes learnt from a local Diu matriarch. There's also good coffee, cold beer, groovy music and friendly service.

Cat's Eye View

MULTICUISINE $$

(Hoka Island Villa, Nagoa Beach; breakfast ₹50-150, lunch & dinner ₹90-290; ☺ 8-10am, 12-2.30pm & 7-9.30pm; ☺) The open-air restaurant at Hoka Island Villa has excellent food, with inviting breakfasts and delicious choices such as penne with tuna and tomato, fish and chips, and prawn coconut curry.

Sea View Restaurant

SEAFOOD $$

(Ghoghla Beach; meals ₹100-240; ☺ 8am-11pm) Just behind Ghoghla Beach, the open-air Sea View has a full menu of Indian and seafood, with the sand a stone's throw away. The prawn biryani (₹150) is big and spicy good.

Apana Foodland

MULTICUISINE $$

(Apana Hotel, Fort Rd; mains ₹80-300; ☺ 7am-10.30pm) This outdoor restaurant facing the town waterfront does everything: breakfasts, South Indian, Gujarati, Punjabi and Chinese, with plenty of chicken and mutton on the list. The fish dishes, including kingfish or prawns with rice, chips and salad, can be pre-ordered so you don't miss out. The Gujarati fruit salad is delicious.

Drinking & Nightlife

Apart from the restaurants (most of which serve beer), there are a number of bars around town, some on the seedy side. Drinks are blissfully cheap – around ₹50 for a Kingfisher or ₹150 for a bottle of port.

Casaluxo Bar

BAR

(☺ 9am-1pm & 4-9pm Tue-Sun) The almost public Casaluxo Bar has a more salubrious air. It opened in 1963 and, except for some sexy swimsuit posters in the back room, might not have updated its decor since.

Information

Many shops around town change money.

A to Z (Vaniya St, Panchwati; per hour ₹40; ☺ 9am-9pm) The best internet cafe is near Panchwati Rd.

Post Office (☺ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat) Upstairs, facing the town square.

State Bank of India (Main Bazaar; ☺ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri) Changes cash and travellers cheques and has an ATM.

Tourist Office (☎ 252653; www.diotourism.co.in; Bunder Rd; ☺ 9.30am-1.30pm & 2.30-6pm Mon-Sat) Has maps, bus schedules and hotel prices.

Getting There & Away*AIR

Jet Airways (☎ 255030; www.jetairways.com) flies to/from Mumbai via Porbandar. There are several ticketing agents in town. The airport is 6km west of town, just before Nagoa Beach.

BUS & CAR

Visitors arriving in Diu by road may be charged a border tax of ₹50 per person, though the practice seems to be erratic.

From Jethibai bus stand there are buses to:

Ahmedabad ₹250, 12 hours, 7am

Bhavnagar ₹175, seven hours, nine daily

Junagadh ₹140, five hours, seven daily

Rajkot ₹175, six hours, six daily

Veraval ₹90, three hours, 12 daily

More frequent departures go from Una, 14km north of Diu. Buses run between Una bus stand and Diu (₹17, 40 minutes, half-hourly) between 6.30am to 8pm. Outside these hours, shared autorickshaws go to Ghoghla or Diu from Tower Chowk in Una (1km from the bus stand), for about the same fare. An autorickshaw costs ₹250. Una rickshaw-wallahs are unable to proceed further than the bus station in Diu, so cannot take you all the way to Nagoa Beach (an additional ₹100).

Ekta Travels (☎ 9898618424) runs private buses from the Diu bus stand to Mumbai at 11.30am (sleeper ₹1000, 22 hours) and to Ahmedabad at 7.30pm (seat/sleeper ₹400/500, 10 hours).

TRAIN

Delvada is the nearest railhead, 8km from Diu on the Una road. The 52951 MG Passenger at 2.25pm runs to Sasan Gir (2nd class ₹25, 3½ hours) and Junagadh (₹35, 6¼ hours), while the 52950 Passenger at 8.05am heads to Veraval (₹25, 3¼ hours). Half-hourly Diu–Una buses stop at Delvada (₹15, 20 minutes).

Getting Around

Travelling by autorickshaw anywhere in Diu town should cost no more than ₹30. From the bus stand into town is ₹40. To Nagoa Beach and beyond pay ₹100 and to Sunset Point ₹50.

Scooters are a perfect option for exploring the island – the roads are deserted and in good condition. The going rate is ₹350 per day (not including fuel), and motorcycles can be had for ₹400. Most hotels can arrange rentals, although quality varies. You will normally have to show your driving licence and leave a deposit of ₹1500.

Local buses from Diu town to Nagoa and Vankabara (both ₹10) leave Jethibai bus stand at 7am, 11am and 4pm. From Nagoa, they depart for Diu town from near the police post at 1pm, 5.30pm and 7pm.

Veraval

📍 02876 / POP 153,696

Cluttered and chaotic, Veraval is one of India's major fishing ports; its busy harbour is full of bustle and boat building. It was also the major seaport for Mecca pilgrims before the rise of Surat. The main reason to come here now is to visit the Temple of Somnath, 6km southeast; while the town of Somnath is a nicer place to stay, Veraval is more convenient to public transport.

👁 Sights

Bhalka Tirth

HINDU TEMPLE

One kilometre from Veraval towards Somnath, Bhalka Tirth is where Krishna was mistaken for a deer (he was sleeping in a deerskin) and fatally wounded by an arrow. The temple here is an architecturally mundane affair, but it contains an image of Krishna reclining, a tulsi tree planted in his memory growing out through the roof, a relief of his footprint and two Shiva linga.

A sign outside tells us that this was where Krishna departed on his journey to Neejdhām (final rest) at 2.27 and 30 seconds am on 18 February, 3102 BC.

Fishing Harbour

About 2km from downtown Veraval towards Somnath, the harbour is a striking sight with hundreds of wooden dhows flying colourful flags.

📍 Getting There & Away

BUS

ST buses go to Ahmedabad (₹250, nine hours, 11 daily), including one AC Volvo service (₹733) at 9.15pm. Frequent buses go to Junagadh (₹83, 2½ hours), Rajkot (₹140, four hours) and Una (for Diu, ₹93, three hours), with buses direct to Diu (₹93, three hours) at 7.30am, 9.30am and 4.30pm. There's sporadic service throughout the day to Sasan Gir (₹35, 1½ hours, hourly).

Patel Tours & Travels (📍 222863), opposite the ST bus stand, offers a nightly non-AC jaunt to Ahmedabad (seat/sleeper ₹300/400) at 9.30pm.

TRAIN

The 11463 Jabalpur Express leaves at 9.50am for Junagadh (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹140/485/690, 1¾ hours), Rajkot (₹140/485/690, four hours) and Ahmedabad (₹260/690/990, nine hours). Second-class-only trains with unreserved seating head to Sasan Gir (₹10) at 9.45am (two hours) and 1.55pm (1¼ hours). There's a computerised reservation office (☺ 8am-10pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) at the station.

i Getting Around

The best way to get to Somnath is by autorickshaw, which costs ₹10/120 for shared/private.

Somnath

📞 02876

Somnath's famous, phoenix-like temple stands in neat gardens above the beach, 6km southeast of Veraval. The sea below gives it a wistful charm. The small town of Somnath is an agglomeration of narrow, interesting market streets with no car traffic, so it's easy to walk around and enjoy. There's a State Bank ATM on your right as you approach the temple. Somnath celebrates Kartik Purnima (p689), marking Shiva's killing of the demon Tripurasura, with a large colourful fair.

👁 Sights

Temple of Somnath

HINDU TEMPLE

(🕒 6am-9pm) It's said that Somraj (the moon god) first built a temple here, made of gold; this was rebuilt by Ravana in silver, by Krishna in wood and by Bhimdev in stone. The current serene, symmetrical structure was built to traditional designs on the original coastal site: it's painted a creamy colour and boasts a little fine sculpture. The large, black Shiva lingam at its heart is one of the 12 most sacred Shiva shrines, known as jyoti linga.

A description of the temple by Al-Biruni, an Arab traveller, was so glowing that it prompted a visit in 1024 by a most unwelcome tourist – the legendary looter Mahmud of Ghazni from Afghanistan. At that time, the temple was so wealthy that it had 300 musicians, 500 dancing girls and even 300 barbers. Mahmud of Ghazni took the town and temple after a two-day battle in which it's said 70,000 Hindu defenders died. Having stripped the temple of its fabulous wealth, Mahmud destroyed it. So began a pattern of Muslim destruction and Hindu rebuilding that continued for centuries. The temple was again razed in 1297, 1394 and finally in 1706 by Aurangzeb, the notorious Mughal ruler. After that, the temple wasn't rebuilt until 1950.

Cameras, mobile phones and bags must be left at the cloakroom before entering. Colourful dioramas of the Shiva story line the north side of the temple garden, though it's hard to see them through the hazy glass. A one-hour sound-and-light show highlights the temple nightly at 7.45pm.

Prabhas Patan Museum

MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/50; 🕒 10.30am-5.30pm Thu-Tue, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) This museum, 300m north of the Somnath temple, is laid out in courtyard-centred rooms and contains remains of the previous temples, some intricately carved, though many are very weathered.

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Kailash

HOTEL $

(📞 9228205381; r from ₹400, with AC from ₹800; 🗺) This hotel just north of Somnath Temple is the best option close to the temple and the markets. Rooms are in good shape, have modern air-con units and flat-screen TVs.

New Bhabha Restaurant

INDIAN, CHINESE $

(mains ₹80-120) The pick of a poor bunch of eateries, vegetarian New Bhabha sits 50m north of the ST bus stand. You can eat in a small air-con room or outside open to the street.

i Getting There & Away

Somnath has fewer departures than Veraval, but buses run to Diu (₹65, three hours, daily at 10am and 5.15pm), and to Junagadh (₹90, two hours) throughout the day. There are eight regular daily buses to Ahmedabad (₹255, nine hours), plus one AC Volvo (₹800, 9pm). Shyam Travels (📞 232670), just north of the ST bus stand, also runs several evening buses to Ahmedabad (seat/sleeper ₹350/450, nine hours), with one AC departure (₹500) at 9.45pm; it also serves other destinations including Bhuj and Dwarka.

Gir National Park & Wildlife Sanctuary

The last refuge of the Asiatic lion (Panthera leo persica) is this forested, hilly, 1412-sq-km sanctuary about halfway between Veraval and Junagadh. It feels beguilingly uncommercial, and simply driving through the thick, undisturbed forests would be a joy even if there wasn't the excitement of lions and other wildlife to spot.

The sanctuary was set up in 1965, and a 259-sq-km core area was declared a national park in 1975. Since the late 1960s, lion numbers have increased from under 200 to over 400. The sanctuary's 37 other mammal species, most of which have also increased in numbers, include dainty chital (spotted deer), sambar (large deer), nilgais (large antelopes), chousinghas (four-horned antelopes), chinkaras (gazelles), crocodiles and rarely seen leopards. Sasan Gir is a great destination for birders too, with over 300 species, most of them resident.

While the wildlife has been lucky, more than half the sanctuary's human community of distinctively dressed maldhari (herders) have been resettled elsewhere, ostensibly because their cattle and buffalo were competing for food resources with the antelopes, deer and gazelles, while also being preyed upon by the lions and leopards. Around 1000 people still live in the park, however, and their livestock accounts for about a quarter of the lions' diet.

Gir is no longer big enough for the number of lions that currently live here; some may be moved to Madhya Pradesh to protect genetic diversity, but the Gujarat government opposes this plan, vying to remain the sole home of India's lions.

The sanctuary access point is Sasan Gir village, on a minor road and railway between Veraval and Junagadh (about 40km from each). The best time to visit is from December to April; the sanctuary is closed from 16 June to 15 October and possibly longer if there has been a heavy monsoon.

Safaris

Safaris (www.girlion.in; permit vehicle with up to 6 passengers Indian/foreigner ₹400/US$40 Mon-Fri, ₹500/US$50 Sat & Sun, guide 3hr ₹250, camera Indian/foreigner ₹100/600) into the sanctuary are made in 4WD jeeps – called Gypsy – and entry is strictly managed. Visiting hours are split into three, three-hour time slots – 6am to 9am, 9am to noon, and 3pm to 6pm – and only 30 Gypsies are allowed in the park at any one time. Your best bet for seeing wildlife is early morning or a bit before sunset.

Most hotels and guesthouses in and around Sasan Gir have Gypsies and drivers or will arrange them for you, charging ₹1500 or more per vehicle for up to six passengers. Alternatively, you can hire an open 4WD and driver for around ₹1300 outside the sanctuary reception centre, in Sasan Gir village. Once you have a vehicle sorted, you must queue up at the reception centre to obtain a permit and a guide, and pay photography fees. Your driver will usually help with this.

Permit-issuing times are posted at the reception centre: at research time they were 5.30am, 8.30am and 2.30pm – but you'll want to be at the reception centre with your passport much earlier to ensure you get a permit. It's not unheard of for the early-morning queue to begin before midnight! If you can plan ahead, half of the permits issued each day can be booked online, from three months to 48 hours advance.

As a general rule, about one in every two safaris has a lion sighting. So if you're determined to see lions, allow for a couple of trips. You'll certainly see a variety of other wildlife, and the guides are adept spotters.

Sights & Activities

Gir Interpretation Zone WILDLIFE WATCHING
(Indian/foreigner ₹75/1200 Mon-Fri, ₹95/1500 Sat & Sun; ☀ 8-11am & 3-5pm) Twelve kilometres west of Sasan Gir village at Devalia, within the sanctuary precincts, is the Gir Interpretation Zone, better known as simply Devalia. The 4-sq-km fenced-off compound is home to a cross-section of Gir wildlife. Chances of seeing lions here are good but stage-managed, and you're only likely to

THE LAST WILD ASIATIC LIONS

The Asiatic lion (Panthera leo persica) once roared as far west as Syria and as far east as India's Bihar. Widespread hunting decimated the population, with the last sightings recorded near Delhi in 1834, in Bihar in 1840 and in Rajasthan in 1870. In Gujarat, too, they were almost hunted to extinction, with as few as 12 remaining in the 1870s. It was not until one of their erstwhile pursuers, the enlightened Nawab of Junagadh, decided to set up a protection zone at the beginning of the 20th century that the lions began slowly to recover. This zone now survives as the Sasan Gir Wildlife Sanctuary.

Separated from their African counterpart (Panthera leo leo) for centuries, Asiatic lions have developed unique characteristics. Their mane is less luxuriant and doesn't cover the top of the head or ears, while a prominent fold of skin runs the length of the abdomen. They are also purely predatory, unlike African lions which sometimes feed off carrion.

get 30 to 45 minutes looking for wildlife and only from a bus. An autorickshaw/taxi round trip to Devalia from Sasan Gir village costs around ₹120/200.

Gir Orientation Centre

EXHIBITION

(☎8am-6pm) FREE Next to the reception centre, this has an informative exhibition on the sanctuary and a small shop. It was being renovated at the time of research.

Sleeping & Eating

It's a good idea to make an advance booking. Sasan Gir has one main street and most accommodation is on it or nearby, with a few top-end options further away.

★ Nitin Ratanghayara

Family Rooms

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎9979024670; ratanghayaranitin@yahoo.com; r ₹700, with AC ₹1200; 🏠🚿🚰) At his family's courtyard-style home in Sasan, friendly, golden-toothed Nitin Ratanghayara has several very good rooms for travellers. They're well kept, and much better value than any of the budget joints on the main street. Plus, you get to eat his sister-in-law's home cooking, and can help her in the kitchen if you like. Look for his sign over his shop along Sasan's main drag.

(mains ₹90-150; ☎11am-4pm & 7-11pm) This vegetarian joint is the best of several simple restaurants along the village's main street. Gujarati thali is ₹120.

Getting There & Away

Buses run from Sasan Gir village to both Veraval (₹34, 1½ hours) and Junagadh (₹40, two hours) throughout the day.

Second-class unreserved-seating trains run to Junagadh (₹20, 5.58pm, 2¾ hours), Delvada (for Diu, ₹25, 9.58am, 3½ hours), and Veraval (₹10, 1½ hours, 11.58am and 4.27pm).

Junagadh

☎0285 / POP 320,250

Reached by few tourists, Junagadh is nestled against some of the most impressive topography in Gujarat. It's an ancient, fortified city (its name means 'old fort') with 2300 years of history, at the base of holy Girnar Hill. The Nawab of Junagadh opted to take his tiny state into Pakistan at the time of Partition - a wildly unpopular decision as the inhabitants were predominantly Hindu, so the nawab departed on his own. Junagadh makes a good jumping-off point for seeing the lions at Sasan Gir.

Sights & Activities

While parts of the centre are as traffic-infested and hot as any other city, the area up towards Uparkot Fort and around Circle and Diwan Chowks is highly atmospheric, dotted with markets and half-abandoned palaces in Euro-Mughal style with grass growing out of their upper storeys.

★ Girnar Hill

SACRED SITE

This sacred mountain, which rises dramatically from the plains, is covered with Jain and Hindu temples. Pilgrims from far and wide come to tackle the long climb up 10,000 stone steps to the summit, which is best begun at dawn. Be prepared to spend a full day if you want to reach the uppermost temples. Ascending in the early morning light is a magical experience, as pilgrims and porters begin to trudge up the well-maintained steps.

The Jain temples, a cluster of mosaic-decorated domes interspersed with elaborate stupas, are about two-thirds of the way up. The largest and oldest is the 12th-century Temple of Neminath, dedicated to the 22nd tirthankar: go through the first left-hand doorway after the first gate. Many temples are locked from around 11am to 3pm, but this one is open all day. The nearby triple Temple of Mallinath, dedicated to the ninth tirthankar, was erected in 1177 by two brothers. During festivals this temple is a sadhu magnet.

Further up are various Hindu temples. The first peak is topped by the Temple of Amba Mata, where newlyweds worship to ensure a happy marriage. Beyond here there is quite a lot of down as well as up to reach the other four peaks and further temples. The Temple of Gorakhnath is perched on Gujarat's highest peak at 1117m. The steep peak Dattatraya is topped by a shrine to a three-faced incarnation of Vishnu. Atop the final outcrop, Kalika, is a shrine to the goddess Kali.

The trail begins 4km east of the city at Girnar Taleti. A motorable road, which may or may not be open, leads to about the 3000th step, which leaves you only 7000 to go! Refreshment stalls on the ascent sell chalk, so you can graffiti your name on the rocks. If you can't face the walk, dholis carried by porters cost ₹3850 (round trip) if you weigh between 50kg and 70kg, and ₹4250 for heavier passengers. If your weight range isn't obvious, you suffer the indignity of being weighed on a huge beam scale before setting off. Note that while photography is permitted on the trail, it's not allowed inside the temples.

The Bhavnath Mela (p689), over five days in the month of Magha, brings folk music and dancing and throngs of nagas (naked sadhus or spiritual men) to Bhavnath Mahadev Temple at Girnar Taleti. It marks the time when Shiva is believed to have danced his cosmic dance of destruction.

An autorickshaw from town to Girnar Taleti costs about ₹70.

★ Uparkot Fort

FORT

(☉ dawn-dusk) This ancient fort is believed to have been built in 319 BC by the Mauryan emperor Chandragupta, though it has been extended many times. In places the ramparts reach 20m high. It's been besieged 16 times, and legend has it that the fort once withstood a 12-year siege. The views over the city and east to Girnar Hill are superb, and there are a number of interesting sights within its walls.

The Jumma Masjid, the mosque inside the fort, was converted from a palace in the 15th century by Gujarat sultan Mahmud Begada and has a rare roofed courtyard with three octagonal openings which may once have been covered by domes.

Close to the mosque is a set of Buddhist caves (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☉ 8am-6pm), not actually caves but monastic quarters carved out of the rock about 2000 years ago. The three-storey complex is quite eerie and the main hall contains pillars with weathered carvings.

The fort has two fine step-wells both cut from solid rock. Adi Kadi Vav, named after two slave girls who used to fetch water from it, is 41m deep and was cut in the 15th century. Navghan Kuvo, 52m deep and designed to help withstand sieges, is almost 1000 years old and its magnificent staircase spirals around the well shaft.

★ Mahabat Maqbara

MAUSOLEUM, MOSQUE

This stunning mausoleum of Nawab Mahabat Khan II of Junagadh (1851-82) seems to bubble up into the sky. One of Gujarat's most glorious examples of Euro-Indo-Islamic architecture, with French windows and Gothic columns, its lavish appeal is topped off by its silver inner doors.

★ Vazir's Mausoleum

MAUSOLEUM

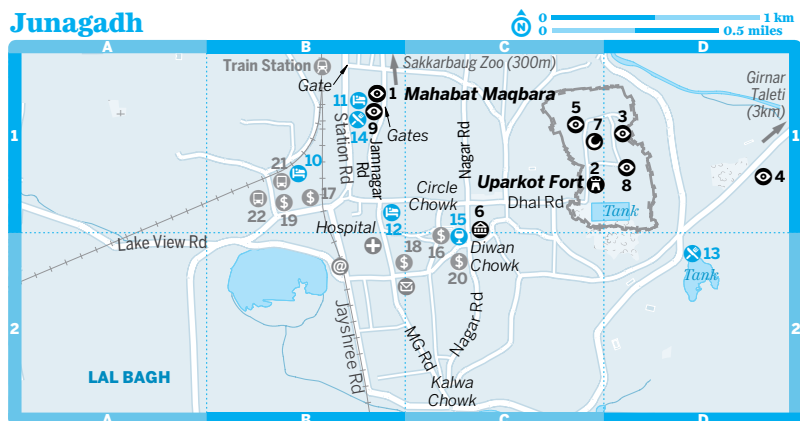

Boasting even more flourish than neighbouring Mahabat Maqbara, Vazir's Mausoleum sports four storybook minarets encircled by spiralling stairways.

★ Sakkarbaug Zoo

ZOO, MUSEUM

(admission ₹20, camera/video ₹20/100; ☉ 9am-6pm Thu-Tue) If you don't make it to Sasan Gir Wildlife Sanctuary, Junagadh's zoo, 2km

Most of the animal pens are rather depressing; in the 'safari' park (20min bus tour ₹25; 🚌 bus tour 9am-1pm & 2.30-5.45pm) at the back, the big cats you view from a bus are in larger, more humane enclosures. Still, it's not a bad place to go, as it's shady and quiet, and the beauty of some of the animals is mesmerising despite the cages.

The zoo also houses the Junagadh Museum, with paintings, manuscripts, archaeological finds and more. An autorickshaw from the centre costs around ₹25.

Darbar Hall Museum

MUSEUM

(Diwan Chowk; Indian/foreigner ₹5/50; 🕒 10am-1.15pm & 2.45-6pm Thu-Tue, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) This museum displays weapons, armour, palanquins, chandeliers, and howdahs from the days of the nawabs, as well as a huge carpet woven in Junagadh's jail. There's a royal portrait gallery, including photos of the last nawab with his numerous beloved dogs. At the time of research, the museum was closed due to an internal dispute; no one could say when it will reopen.

Ashokan Edicts

HISTORIC SITE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; 🕒 dawn-dusk) Just outside town on the road to Girnar Hill, a white building on the right encloses a large boulder on which the Buddhist emperor Ashoka had 14 edicts inscribed in Brahmi script in the Pali language about 250 BC. The spidery lettering instructs people to be kind to women and animals and give to beggars, among other things, and is one of several inscriptions that Ashoka placed all around his

Sleeping

There are several cheap hotels around Kalwa Chowk which, because of the clientele they attract, are best avoided by females – even when travelling with a male companion.

Relief Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 2620280; www.reliefhotel.com; Chitta Khana Chowk; r ₹600-800, with AC ₹1200; 📶📺) Mr Sorathia (Junagadh's unofficial tourist officer) presides over the pick of the town's budget accommodation, which was undergoing a major renovation at the time of research. Most rooms, including all air-con rooms and the once-excellent restaurant, were being completely rebuilt and should be open by the time you read this. Note: this hotel closes during the month of Ramadan.

Hotel Vishala

HOTEL $

(☎ 2631599; www.hotelvishala.com; r from ₹940, with AC from ₹2080; 📶📺) Almost opposite the bus station, Hotel Vishala has good-sized rooms that are comfortable and clean. Staff are friendly, and though there's some street noise during the day, it quiets down at night. There's room service and a rooftop veg restaurant.

Lotus Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2658500; www.thelotushotel.com; Station Rd; s/d from ₹1800/2280; 📶📺) This luxurious and comfortable option occupies the totally renovated top floor of a former dharamsala (pilgrim's rest house). Pilgrims never had it so good, with split-system air-con and LCD TVs. Rooms are beautifully bright, spacious and pristine, the beds are great, and everything works – incredible value for such quality. There isn't a restaurant, but there is room service and Geeta Lodge is in the same building.

Eating & Drinking

Junagadh is famous for its fruit, especially for kesar (mangoes) and chiku (sapodilla), which are popular in milkshakes in November and December.

Garden Cafe

INDIAN $

(mains ₹90-140; ☺ 6.30-10.30pm Thu-Tue) Something different: this restaurant has a lovely garden setting next to Jyoti Nursery on the eastern side of town, and serves reasonable Jain, Punjabi and South Indian food. It's popular with families and young people, and worth the short rickshaw ride.

★ Geeta Lodge

GUJARATI $$

(Station Rd; thali ₹110; ☺ 10am-3.30pm & 6.30-10pm) Geeta's army of waiters are constantly on the move serving up top-class, all-you-can-eat veg Gujarati thalis at a bargain price. Finish off with sweets, such as fruit salad or puréed mango, for ₹20.

Petals

MULTICUISINE $$

(Lotus Hotel, Station Rd; meals ₹140-290; ☺ 7-10am, 11am-3pm & 7-11pm) The restaurant at the Lotus Hotel delivers a sleek first impression, with a modern, and very white, design. The menu ranges from Punjabi to sizzlers to pastas, and is very popular with middle-class families. If you're tired of thali, come on in!

Jay Ambe Juice Centre

JUICE BAR

(Diwan Chowk; snacks & drinks ₹20-50; ☺ 10am-11.30pm) The perfect retreat for a fresh juice, milkshake or ice cream – try a custard-apple shake.

Second-class train 52952 heads to Sasan Gir (₹20, 2¾ hours) and Delvada (for Diu, ₹35, six hours) at 7.15am.

Gondal

☎ 02825 / POP 112,064

Gondal is a small, leafy town, 38km south of Rajkot, that sports a string of palaces and a gentle river. It was once capital of a 1000-sq-km princely state ruled by Jadeja Rajputs who believe they are descendants of Krishna.

👁 Sights & Activities

Naulakha Museum

MUSEUM

(Naulakha Palace; admission ₹20; ☎ 9am-noon & 3-6pm) This eclectic museum in the old part of town is housed in a beautiful, 260-year-old riverside royal palace that was built in a mixture of styles, with striking gargoyles. It shows royal artefacts, including scales used to weigh Maharaja Bhagwat Sinhji in 1934 (his weight in silver was distributed to the poor), a nine-volume Gujarati dictionary compiled by the same revered maharaja, and Dinky Toy collections. Two stables full of mint-condition horse carriages can be seen for an extra ₹20.

Bhuvaneshwari Ayurvedic

Pharmacy

HISTORIC BUILDING

(www.bhuvaneshwaripith.com; Ghanshyam Bhuvan; ☎ 9am-noon & 3-5pm Tue-Sat) Founded in 1910 by Gondal's royal physician, this pharmacy manufactures ayurvedic medicines and it's possible to see all the weird machinery involved, as well as buy medicines for treating hair loss, vertigo, insomnia etc. The founding physician, Brahmaleen Acharyashree, is said to have coined the title 'Mahatma' (Great Soul) for Gandhi. Also here is a temple to the goddess Bhuvaneshwari.

Udhog Bharti Khadi

Gramodyog

HANDICRAFTS WORKSHOP

(Udhog Bharti Chowk; ☎ 9am-noon & 3-5pm Mon-Sat) A large khadi (homespun cloth) workshop where women work spinning cotton upstairs, while downstairs embroidered salwar kameez (traditional dresslike tunic and trouser combinations for women) and saris are on sale.

Vintage & Classic Car Collection

MUSEUM

(Orchard Palace Hotel, Palace Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹120/250; ☎ 9am-noon & 3-6pm) This is the royal collection of cars - 32 impressive vehicles, from a 1907 car made by the New Engine Company Acton to racing cars raced by the present maharaja. All are still in working condition.

🍴 Sleeping & Eating

Orchard Palace

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 220002; www.heritagepalacesgondal.com; Palace Rd; s/d ₹5200/6600; 🍷) This small palace, once the royal guesthouse, has seven well-kept, though hardly luxurious, high-ceilinged rooms of different sizes, filled with 1930s and '40s furniture. The parlours and patios, with more of the same, have an inviting, relaxed kind of charm. Guests get free admission to all of Gondal's attractions. The restaurant uses vegetables from the on-site organic garden. Reservations recommended.

Riverside Palace

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 220002; www.heritagepalacesgondal.com; Ashapura Rd; s/d ₹5200/6600; 🍷) This is the erstwhile ruling family's other palace-hotel, built in the 1880s and formerly the crown prince's abode. Adorned with hunting trophies and four-poster beds, it's kind of like a royal time machine you can sleep in, and has river views. There's a restaurant (₹400 to ₹700) here; nonguests should call in advance. Reservations recommended.

📍 Getting There & Around

Buses run frequently to/from Rajkot (₹30, one hour) and Junagadh (₹65, two hours). Slow passenger trains between Rajkot (₹10, one hour) and Junagadh (₹15, 1½ hours) also stop at Gondal.

Hiring an autorickshaw to take you to all the sights and wait while you see them costs about ₹100 per hour.

Rajkot

☎ 0281 / POP 1.28 MILLION

Rajkot is a large, hectic commercial and industrial city that isn't easy to love with its heavy traffic, lack of open spaces and scant worthwhile sights. But the old city, east of the newer centre, still has plenty of character, with narrow streets, markets, and farmers still selling ghee on street corners.

Rajkot was founded in 1612 by Jadeja Rajputs, and in colonial times it became the headquarters of the Western India States Agency, Britain's administrative centre for some 400 princely states in Saurashtra, Kachchh and northern Gujarat. After Independence Rajkot was capital of the short-lived state of Saurashtra.

Sights

Watson Museum

MUSEUM

(Jubilee Gardens; Indian/foreigner ₹5/50; ☎ 9am-12.45pm & 3-6pm Thu-Tue, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) The Watson Museum is named after Colonel John Watson, a political agent (administrator) in the 1880s who gathered many historical artefacts and documents from around Saurashtra. It's a jumbled attic of a collection, featuring 3rd-century inscriptions, delicate ivory work, and taxidermy exhibits put together by someone with a bizarre sense of humour.

Kaba Gandhi No Delo

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Ghee Kanta Rd; ☎ 9am-6pm) This is the house where Gandhi lived from the age of six (while his father was diwan of Rajkot), and it contains lots of interesting information on his life. The Mahatma's passion for the handloom is preserved in the form of a small weaving school.

Handicrafts Workshops

The Patola-weaving skill comes from Patan, and is a torturous process that involves dyeing each thread before it is woven. In Patan, both the warp and weft threads are dyed (double ikat), in Rajkot only the weft is dyed (single ikat), so the product is more affordable. You can visit workshops in people's houses in the Sarvoday Society area about 1km southwest of Shastri Maidan, including Mayur Patola Art (☎ 2464519; Sarvoday Society; ☎ 10am-6pm), behind Virani High School. ## Jamnagar

Jamnagar is another little-touristed but interesting city, brimming with ornate, decaying buildings and colourful bazaars displaying the town's famous, brilliant-coloured bandhani (tie-dye) – produced through a laborious 500-year-old process involving thousands of tiny knots in a piece of folded fabric. Perhaps best of all, people here are exceedingly friendly.

Before Independence, Jamnagar was capital of the Nawanagar princely state. Today, Jamnagar is quite a boom town, with the world's biggest oil refinery, belonging to Reliance Petroleum, not far west of the city. The whole central area is one big commercial zone, with more brightly lit shops and stalls at night than you'll find in many a larger city.

★ Old City

The heart of the old city is known as Chandi Bazaar (Silver Market; which it is, among other things) and it contains heaving markets and three beautiful Jain temples. The larger two, Shantinath Mandir and Adinath Mandir, dedicated to the 16th and first tirthankars (great Jain teachers), explode with fine murals, mirrored domes and elaborate chandeliers. The Shantinath Mandir is particularly beautiful, with coloured columns and a gilt-edged dome of concentric circles.

Around the temples spreads the old city with its lovely buildings of wood and stone, peeling, pastel-coloured shutters and crumbling wooden balconies. Willingdon Crescent, a European-style arcaded crescent, was built by Jam Ranjitsinhji to replace Jamnagar's worst slum. It now houses an assortment of shops, and is commonly known as Darbargadh, after the now-empty royal residence across the street. Subhas market, the vegetable market, has lots of local colour.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Air India (☎1800-1801407; www.airindia.in) has daily flights to Mumbai.

BUS

ST buses run to Rajkot (₹54, two hours, half-hourly), Junagadh (₹108, four hours, about hourly) and Ahmedabad (₹140, seven hours, about hourly). There are also several morning and evening bus services to Bhuj (₹135, six hours)

There are numerous private companies, many based along Indira Gandhi Marg, including Patel Tours (☎2660243) which has 19 daily Volvo AC buses to Ahmedabad (₹550, seven hours) and four non-AC buses to Bhuj (seat/sleeper ₹300/400, six hours). Tickets can be booked at the convenient branch office, but buses leave from the main office on Indira Gandhi Marg.

TRAIN

One of the most useful train services is the 19006 Saurashtra Mail, which departs at 3.40pm for Rajkot (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹140/485/690/1150, 1¾ hours), Ahmedabad (₹215/575/820/1375, seven hours) and Mumbai (₹410/1105/1595/2705, 16 hours).

i Getting Around

An autorickshaw from the airport, 6km west, should be around ₹50, and a taxi ₹150. An autorickshaw from the ST bus stand to Bedi Gate costs ₹20.

Around Jamnagar

Khijadiya Bird Sanctuary

Khijadiya Bird Sanctuary WILDLIFE RESERVE (vehicle with up to 6 people ₹900, camera ₹450; ☀7am-6pm) This small, 6-sq-km sanctuary, about 12km northeast of Jamnagar, encompasses both salt- and freshwater marshlands and hosts over 200 bird species, including rarities such as the Dalmatian pelican and painted stork. It's best visited between October and March and in the early morning or at sunset. The evening arrival of cranes for roosting can be spectacular.

Hiring a car to take you to/from Jamnagar and drive you around the sanctuary costs around ₹1400. Entry is only possible between 7am and noon and 3pm and 6pm. You'll have to show your passport and fill out some paperwork at the interpretation centre before going in.

Marine National Park

Marine National Park NATIONAL PARK (up to 6 people ₹900, camera ₹450) This national park and the adjoining marine sanctuary encompass the intertidal zone and 42 small islands along some 120km of coast east and west of Jamnagar – an area rich in marine and bird life which faces growing challenges from industrialisation. Coral, octopus, anemones, puffer fish, sea horses, lobsters and crabs are among the marine life you may see in shallow water at low tide. The

WESTERN SAURASHTRA

Mahatma Gandhi was born in 1869 in the chaotic port town of Porbandar, 130km southwest of Jamnagar. You can visit Gandhi's birthplace (☀9am-noon & 3-6pm) – a 22-room, 220-year-old house – and a memorial next door, Kirti Mandir. Dwarka, 106km from Jamnagar at the western tip of the Kathiawar Peninsula, is one of the four holiest Hindu pilgrimage sites in India – Krishna is said to have set up his capital here after fleeing from Mathura. Its Dwarkadhish Temple is believed to have been founded over 2500 years ago, and has a fantastically carved, 78m-high spire. The town swells to breaking point for Janmastami (☀Aug/Sep) in celebration of Krishna's birthday.

There are some good beaches on the ocean coast, including the beautiful, long, clean Okhamadhi, 22km south of Dwarka, where waves can be strong, and the calmer Shivrajpur, a long lagoon beach 12km north of Dwarka. En route to Porbandar, the Barda Wildlife Sanctuary is a hilly, forested area with stone-built villages, old temples and good hiking. A good contact for more information on visiting these and other off-the-beaten-track places in western Saurashtra is Mustak Mepani (☎9824227786) at Jamnagar's Hotel President..

best time to visit is December to March, when wintering birds are plentiful.

The park has two sections of the park: Narada and Poshitra. Narada is more interesting – from the entry gate, you park and hike 2.3km over rock and reef to the Gulf of Kachchh, where you can spot a variety of sea life. (You'll want to wear footwear with decent soles, as the terrain is sharp.) Narada is best reached from Jamnagar, which is 65km away; hiring a car to get you there and back costs about ₹1800. Poshitra's main draw is the coral; you won't see many animate creatures there. Hiring a vehicle from Jamnagar costs ₹4000 whether you go one-way or round-trip; it's closer to Dwarka, which is a reasonable base to visit from.

Narada and Poshitra are only open during low tide, so the entry schedule shifts daily. To figure out what time to go, phone the Forest Office (☎0288-2679357; Indira Gandhi Marg, Forest Colony; ☀10.30am-6pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) in Jamnagar, or call Mustak Mepani (☎9824227786) at Jamnagar's Hotel President (p724), a terrific resource who specialises in arranging tours and cars and drivers to both Marine National Park and Khijadiya Bird Sanctuary. Before you enter, you'll have to show your passport and fill out some paperwork.

KACHCHH (KUTCH)

Kachchh, India's wild west, is a geographic phenomenon. The flat, tortoise-shaped land (kachho means tortoise in Gujarati), edged by the Gulf of Kachchh and Great and Little Ranns, is a seasonal island. During the dry season, the Ranns are vast expanses of hard, dried mud. Come the monsoon, they're flooded first by seawater, then by fresh river water. The salt in the soil makes the low-lying marsh area almost completely barren. Only on scattered 'islands' above the salt level is coarse grass which provides fodder for the region's wildlife.

The villages dotted across Kachchh's arid landscape are home to a jigsaw of tribal groups and sub-castes who produce some of India's finest handicrafts, above all their textiles which glitter with exquisite embroidery and mirrorwork.

A branch of the Indus River once entered the Great Rann until a massive earthquake in 1819 altered its course. Another mammoth earthquake in January 2001 again altered the landscape, killing nearly 30,000 people and completely destroying many villages. Although the effects of the tragedy will resonate for generations, the residents have determinedly rebuilt their lives and are welcoming to visitors. Tax breaks to encourage economic recovery have brought in new industrial plants, but by and large Kachchh still remains a refreshingly pristine, rural environment.

Bhuj

The capital of Kachchh is an interesting city, mostly resurrected following the massive 2001 earthquake that destroyed much of the place. It sells amazing Kachchh handicrafts, and historic buildings such as the Aina Mahal and Prag Mahal possess an eerie beauty. Bhuj is an ideal springboard for visits to the surrounding villages, and textile tourism is attracting visitors from around the world.

The Jadeja Rajputs who took control of Kachchh in 1510 made Bhuj their capital 29 years later, and it has remained Kachchh's most important town ever since.

👁 Sights

★ Darbargadh

PALACES

This walled complex houses three palaces from which Kachchh was once ruled. The largest is the 19th-century Prag Mahal (New Palace; admission ₹20; ☀9.30am-noon & 3-6pm). It's in a sad state and most sections are closed, but it's worth visiting for its ghostly Durbar Hall, a wonderful piece of decayed magnificence with broken chandeliers, rotting hunting trophies covered in bird droppings, and gold-skirted classical statues that wouldn't look out of place decorating a nightclub.

The beautiful Aina Mahal (Old Palace; admission ₹10, camera ₹30; ☀9am-noon & 3-6pm Fri-Wed), built in the 1750s, was badly damaged in the 2001 earthquake, but the 1st and 2nd floors are open again and contain a fascinating museum with excellent explanatory information in English. The palace was built for Maharao Lakhpatji by Ramsingh Malam, a sailor from Dwarka who had learned European arts and crafts on his travels. The elaborately mirrored interior is a demonstration of the maharao's fascination with all things European – an inverted mirror of European Orientalism – with blue-and-white Delft-style tiling, a candelabra with Venetian-glass shades and the Hogarth lithograph series, The Rake's Progress. In the bedroom is a bed with solid gold legs (the king apparently auctioned his bed annually). In the Fuvara Mahal room, fountains played around the ruler while he sat watching dancers or composing poems.

The 17th-century Rani Mahal, the former main royal residence, is completely closed up, though you can still admire the latticed windows of its zenana (women's quarters).

KACHCHH CREATIVITY

Kachchh is one of India's richest areas for handicrafts, particularly famed for its beautiful, colourful embroidery work (of which there are at least 14 distinct styles), but it also has many artisans specialising in weaving, tie-dyeing, block printing, wood carving, pottery and other crafts. The diversity of Kachchh crafts reflects the differing traditions of its many communities. Numerous local cooperatives invest in social projects and help artisans produce work that is marketable yet still preserves their artistic heritage.

The tourist office offers autorickshaw tours that stop at most of the local cooperatives (half-/full day ₹600/1200) and can include visits to Ajir and Rabari villages; ask former-tourism director Pramod Jethi (p730) what's on the menu, and specify what you want to see and what you don't.

Local Handicrafts Cooperatives

Kutch Mahila Vikas Sangathan (☎02832-222124; www.kmvs.org.in; Gymkhana Ghanshyam Rd, Bhuj) Kutch Mahila Vikas Sangathan is a grass-roots organisation, comprising 12,000 rural women (1200 artisans), that pays members a dividend of the profits and invests money to meet social needs. The embroidery and patchwork are exquisite, employing the distinctive styles of several communities. Products go under the brand name Qasab and range from bags and bedspreads to cushion covers and wall hangings. Visit the Qasab outlet at Hotel Prince in Bhuj, or in Khavda, a village about 80km north of Bhuj.

Kala Raksha (☎02832-277237; www.kala-raksha.org; ☎10am-2pm & 3-6pm Mon-Sat) Based at Sumrasar Sheikh, 25km north of Bhuj, Kala Raksha is a nonprofit trust working to preserve and promote Kachchh arts. It works with about 1000 embroiderers and patchwork and appliqué artisans from six communities in some 25 villages. The trust has a small museum and shop, and can help arrange visits to villages to meet artisans. Up to 80% of the sale price goes to the artisans, who also help design and price the goods.

Vankar Vishram Valji (☎02832-240723; Bhujodi; ☎8am-8pm) Vankar Vishram Valji is a family operation and one of the leading weavers in Bhujodi; it sells beautiful blankets, shawls, stoles and rugs.

★ Kachchh Museum

MUSEUM

(College Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/50; ☎10am-1pm & 2.30-5.30pm Thu-Tue, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) Opposite Hamirsar Tank, Gujarat's oldest museum has eclectic displays spanning textiles, weapons, silverware, sculpture, wildlife, geography and dioramas of Kachchh tribal costumes and artefacts, with labelling in English and Gujarati.

Folk Art Museum

MUSEUM

(Bhartiya Sanskriti Darshan; near College Rd; admission ₹50, camera ₹200; ☎11am-1.15pm & 3-6pm Tue-Sun) This museum has excellent displays on traditional Kachchh culture, including reconstructed Rabari bhungas (mud-and-mirrorwork huts), musical instruments, many wood and stone carvings and much more. It's a further 700m south of the Kachchh Museum, off Mandvi Rd.

Sharad Baug Palace

PALACE

(admission ₹10, camera/video ₹20/100; ☎9am-noon & 3-6pm Sat-Thu) This graceful 1867 Italianate palace, set among shade trees full of crowns and bats, was the abode of the last Maharao of Kachchh, Madansingh, until his death in 1991. It lost most of its 3rd floor in the 2001 earthquake, and the remaining lower floors are closed. However, the adjacent former dining hall now houses the palace's eclectic museum collection. Standout exhibits are two huge stuffed tigers that the erstwhile maharao shot, and his coffin.

The 14312 Ala Hazrat Express leaves at 12.25pm (Tuesday, Thursday, Sunday) and arrives at Ahmedabad (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹225/600/855) at 7.40pm, continuing to Abu Road, Jaipur and Delhi. The 19116 Sayaji Express leaves at 10.15pm daily and hits Ahmedabad (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹225/600/855/1430) at 5.05am and Mumbai/Bandra Station (₹415/1110/1605/2725) at 2.05pm.

EXPLORING KACHCHH

It is possible to get out to Kachchh's villages by public transport – for example, there are three buses a day to Khavda (₹50, two hours). You can also take autorickshaws to villages not too far from the city. But you'll have many more options and more flexibility if you hire a car and driver; most Bhuj hotels can organise this for you.

Thoughtfully themed and customised autorickshaw tours (half-/full day ₹600/1200) to villages outside Bhuj are organised by Pramod Jethi (☎ 9374235379; pramodjethi2013@gmail.com; ☎ 9am-noon & 3.30-6pm Mon-Sat), former curator of the Aina Mahal and expert on everything Kachchhi. Get specifics on your itinerary from Mr Jethi, so you can see what you want and skip what you don't. He can also arrange single and multiday tours around the region, and will accompany you as a personal guide for an extra ₹1500 per day – a bargain for such a friendly trove of knowledge! Find his small office 100m from the entry gate to the Darbar-gadh, or call, even on Sunday.

i Getting Around

The airport is 5km north of town – a taxi will cost around ₹200, an autorickshaw ₹100. Autorickshaws to the train station cost ₹30.

Around Bhuj

The local Jat, Ahir, Harijan, nomadic Rabari and other communities have distinct, colourful craft traditions that make their villages fascinating to visit.

Bhujodi, about 7km southeast of Bhuj, is a village of weavers, mostly using pit looms, operated by both feet and hands. You can look into many workshops, which produce attractive shawls, blankets and other products. The village is 1km off Hwy 42. You can take a bus towards Ahmedabad and ask the driver to drop you at the turn-off for Bhujodi (₹10). A return rickshaw from Bhuj is ₹300.

In the hills about 60km northwest of Bhuj is the eerie monastery at Than. The holy man Dhorammath, as penance for a curse he had made, stood on his head on top of Dhinodhar hill for 12 years. The gods pleaded with him to stop, and he agreed, provided the first place he looked at became barren – hence the Great Rann. He then established the monastic order of Kanphata (Split Ears, because of large piercings through the ear's concha), whose monastery (dating back to at least the 12th century) stands at the foot of the hill. This is a laid-back place to explore the surrounding hills, and the architecture ranges from crumbling mud brick to Portuguese-style stucco, blue and whitewash bell towers, with a hint of basil and marigold in the air. There's one bus daily to Than from Bhuj (₹50, two hours) at 5pm, returning early next morning. The monastery and the temple atop Dhinodhar have very basic guest rooms with mattresses on the floor and simple food (pay by donation) but no drinking water.

You need a permit to visit the villages of Lakhpat, Dhorodo, Khavda, and Ludia, but these are easy to obtain. For Lakhpat, take a copy of your passport and visa (and the originals) to the office of the District Superintendent of Police (☎10am-6pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month), 800m south of Kachchh Museum in Bhuj, and you should get the permit (free of charge; maximum 10 days) straight away. Your driver will need a permit if you plan to stay overnight. For the other villages, get your permit at the police post on the way, in Bhirandiyara. It's free, unless you plan on going into the White Rann north of Dhorodo – for that, pay ₹100. Drivers also need permits for the White Rann.

Shaam-e-Sarhad Village Resort (☎02803-296222; www.hodka.in; s/d tent ₹2800/3200, bhunga ₹3800/4800, incl meals; ☀Oct-Mar) 🌿, just outside Hodka, in the beautiful Banni grasslands 70km north of Bhuj, is a fascinating and successful project in 'endogenous tourism'. Owned and operated by the Halepotra Maldharis, its accommodation consists of three bhungas (mud huts) with sloping roofs and groovy interiors, and six comfortable earth-floored tents, all with private bathroom and electricity. Local (non-English speaking) guides cost ₹300 per day for birdwatching or visits to villages in the area such as Hodka, Khavda (known for its pottery and textiles) or Ludia (known for its intricately decorated homes); to Kalo Dungar (Black Hill, Kachchh's highest point at 462m above sea level); or to the Great Rann itself, with its snow-glare of salt (you may need to provide your own transport). You can also stop by for a superb thali lunch (₹200) – call in advance.

Centre for Desert & Ocean (CEDO; ☎02835-221284, 9825248135; www.cedobirding.com) 🌿, 53km northwest of Bhuj, is a wildlife conservation organisation run by passionate environmentalist Jugal Tiwari. It does birding and wildlife trips focusing on the wildlife-rich Banni grasslands (between Sumrasar Sheikh and Khavda). Accommodation is in plain but well-kept rooms with 24-hour solar-heated hot water; meals are Gujarati vegetarian. Staying costs ₹1750 to ₹2000 per person per day, including meals. Safaris cost ₹3600 per day for a car and driver; expert naturalist/birding guides cost an extra ₹1800 per day.

A long drive northeast from Bhuj is the fascinating and remote archaeological site of Dholavira, on a seasonal island in the Great Rann. Excavations have revealed a complex town of stone buildings 1 sq km in area, inhabited by the Harappan (Indus Valley) civilisation from around 2900 to 1500 BC. It's best to organise your own transport (₹4500 one-way or return): the only bus to Dholavira leaves Bhuj at 2pm (₹80, six hours) and starts back at 5am. The state-government-run Toran Tourist Complex (☎02837-277395; s/d ₹350/500, with AC ₹750/900; 🗺) at Dholavira offers basic accommodation and meals.

Mandvi

Mandvi is an hour down the road from Bhuj and is a busy little place with an amazing shipbuilding yard. Hundreds of men construct, by hand, these wooden beauties for faraway Arab merchants. The massive timbers apparently come from Malaysian rainforests. Mandvi suffered far less destruction than Bhuj in the 2001 earthquake, so the heart of town (around Mochi Bazaar) is lined with beautiful old buildings in faded pastel hues and temples with wildly sculpted, cartoonlike facades. There are also some sweeping beaches, including the glorious, long, clean private beach near Vijay Vilas Palace, and public Kashivishvanath Beach, with food stalls and camel rides, 2km from the centre just east of the Ruknavati River.

👁️ Sights

Vijay Vilas Palace

PALACE

(admission Mon-Sat ₹25, Sun ₹35, vehicle ₹40, camera/video ₹50/200; 🕒 7am-7pm) Vijay Vilas Palace is a 1920s palace reminiscent of a large English country house, 7km west of town amid extensive orchards, and set by a magnificent private beach. Originally a summer abode for the Kachchh rulers, its 1st floor (out of bounds to visitors) is now the erstwhile royal family's main residence. The view from the roof is worth the climb, and the gardens make a nice stroll.

Autorickshaws charge about ₹200/300 one-way/return from town. You can walk back to town along the beach if it's low tide.

Asher House

HISTORIC BUILDING

(📞 9825311061; dilipchessasher@yahoo.com; Lakshmi Talkies; by donation) For a taste of Mandvi's past glory, call Dilip Asher, a chess instructor who is a loveable character and descendant of the town's once-richest merchant family. If he's around, he will give you an informal tour of his family's home, where he still lives with his sister who is blind. The house has definitely seen better days, but the Portuguese tiles, ceiling murals and other artworks – along with a dilapidated 1932 Chevrolet – still have a touch of magic.

Donations help with the much needed upkeep of the house.

(📞 277700; www.vijayvilasheritageresort.com; Vijay Vilas Palace; r ₹9580, tent ₹8380) Part of the Vijay Vilas Palace property, this newly converted heritage hotel was once part of the residence of Kachchh's royal family. Rooms are spacious and maintain a period feeling, while being equipped with modern comforts. Luxury air-con tents surround the courtyard. From the hotel, walk 1.5km down a private road to the royal beach.

★ Osho Restaurant

GUJARATI $

(1st fl, Osho Hotel, Bhid Gate; thali ₹100; 🕒 11.45am-3pm & 7-9pm) In the heart of the town, Osho is a massively popular place that dishes out one of the best thalis in all of Gujarat. All you can eat! Look for the big 'Osho Hotel' sign.

📍 Getting There & Away

Regular buses to/from Bhuj (₹30) take 1½ to two hours. Or you can take faster shared 4WD taxis (₹35) which depart from the street south of Bhuj's main vegetable market. Several agencies near Hotel Sea View sell tickets for private buses to Ahmedabad, including Patel Tours & Travels (📞 9925244272; non-AC seat/sleeper ₹370/470, 11 hours, 7.30pm) and Royal Express (📞 232135; AC coach ₹650, 11 hours, 7.30pm).

Wild Ass Sanctuary

The barren, blindingly white land of the Little Rann is nature at its harshest and most compelling. It's best known as the home of the last remaining population of the chestnut-coloured Indian wild ass (also called khur), as well as bluebulls, blackbuck and chinkara. There's also a huge bird population from October to March (this is one of the few areas in India where flamingos breed in the wild).

The Little Rann is punctuated by desolate salt farms, where people eke out a living by pumping up groundwater and extracting the salt. Heat mirages disturb the vast horizon – bushes and trees seem to hover above the surface. Rain turns the desert into a sea of mud, and even during the dry season the solid-looking crust is often deceptive, so it's essential you take a local guide when exploring the area.

The 4953-sq-km Wild Ass Sanctuary (4WD safari with up to 6 passengers Indian/foreigner ₹350/1200 Mon-Fri, ₹435/1500 Sat-Sun, camera ₹100/600) covers a large part of the Little Rann. Easily accessible from Ahmedabad, it can be combined with trips to Nalsarovar Bird Sanctuary, Modhera and Patan. About 3000 khurs live in the sanctuary, surviving off the flat, grass-covered expanses or islands, known as bets, which rise up to around 3m. These remarkable, notoriously untamable creatures are capable of running at an average speed of 50km/h for long distances.

Desert Coursers (☎9426372113, 9427066070; www.desertcoursers.net), run by infectiously enthusiastic naturalist Dhanraj Malik, organises excellent Little Rann safaris and village tours from its Camp Zainabad (per person incl full board ₹1900-2800; ☺Oct-Mar; ☼), very close to the east edge of the Little Rann and just outside the small town of Zainabad, 105km northwest of Ahmedabad. The lodge has air-conditioned koobas (thatch-roofed huts) and excellent meals, in a peaceful, remote setting. The price includes a 4WD safari. Advance booking is advised.

To get to Zainabad from Ahmedabad, hiring a private car is easiest but you can also take a bus from Ahmedabad's ST bus stand to Dasada, 10km away (₹80, 2½ hours, about hourly), from where Desert Coursers does free pick-ups. There are direct buses between Zainabad and Patan (₹75, 2½ hours, two daily) via Modhera. Desert Coursers can arrange taxis around the area if desired.

Rann Riders (☎9925236014; www.rannriders.com; s/d incl all meals & safari ₹6000/7200; ☼☼☼), near Dasada, is also family-run and offers luxurious cottage accommodation in pretty gardens, plus highly recommended 4WD and camel safaris and its own stable of indigenous horses for riding.

The simplest of the camps is the Eco Tour Camp (☎9825548090; www.littlerann.com; near Kidi Village; per person incl full board ₹1000-2000; ☺Oct-Apr), run by the personable Devjibhai Dhamecha, where you can stay in basic cement huts or round koobas. Situated right on the sanctuary's edge, you can walk right into it and see wild asses, bluebulls and a bevy of birds – no guide is needed. 4WD safaris (₹2000/3000 per vehicle) are offered by Devjibhai's son, Ajay, an enthusiastic guide who will take you through some of the less touristed parts of the sanctuary.

The camp is near Kidi village – Devjibhai arranges pickups (autorickshaw/taxi ₹600/1000) from the town of Dhrangadra, 45km away, on the main road and rail routes between Ahmedabad (three hours) and Bhuj (5½ hours). The town of Halwad – also along the main highway – is much closer, but you have to arrange your own ride to the camp – a spot in the back of a chakda (half-motorcycle, half-pickup truck) should cost ₹20 from Halwad to Kidi. All buses between Ahmedabad and Bhuj stop at Dhrangadra; only some stop at the Halwad bus stand. The guides mentioned will arrange your permits for the reserve; the cost of these is normally additional to safari prices.

An hour south of Dhrangadhra on the Ahmedabad–Rajkot highway is Sayla, a peaceful, pastoral town that swells during the Tarnetar Fair (☺Aug/Sep). Bell Guest House (☎9724678145; www.bellguesthouse.com; s/d incl breakfast ₹3550/4700; ☼), presided over by the erstwhile ruling family of Sayla (and their yellow labs), is an ageing heritage hotel retreat down a lane off the Sayla roundabout on Hwy 8A. Rooms have modern ensuite bathrooms. You can look for bluebulls and peacocks in the surrounding countryside or take trips further afield to see wild asses, blackbuck, the birds of Nalsarovar or a variety of artisans in area villages.

Why Go?

Mumbai is big. It's full of dreamers and hard-labourers, starlets and gangsters, stray dogs and exotic birds, artists and servants, fisherfolk and crorepatris (millionaires) – and lots of people. It has India's most prolific film industry, some of Asia's biggest slums (as well as the world's most expensive home) and the largest tropical forest in an urban zone. Mumbai is India's financial powerhouse, fashion epicentre and a pulse point of religious tension. It's even evolved its own language, Bumbaiyya Hindi, which is a mix of...everything.

If Mumbai is your introduction to India, prepare yourself. The city isn't a threatening place but its furious energy, limited public transport and punishing pollution makes it challenging for visitors. The heart of the city contains some of the grandest colonial-era architecture on the planet but explore a little more and you'll uncover unique bazaars, hidden temples, hipster enclaves and India's premier restaurants and nightlife.

When to Go

Mumbai (Bombay)

Dec & Jan The very best, least sticky weather.

Aug & Sep Mumbai goes crazy for Ganesh during its most exciting festival, Ganesh Chaturthi.

Oct–Apr There's very little rain, post-monsoon; the best time of year for festivals.

Mumbai Highlights

- 1 Marvelling at the magnificence of Mumbai's colonial-era architecture: Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus (p739), High Court (p743) and Gateway of India (p738)
- 2 Investigating the labyrinthine lanes and stalls in Mumbai's ancient bazaar district (p769)
- 3 Dining like a maharaja at one of India's best restaurants such as Indigo (p759)
- 4 Feeling the love with the Krishna crowd at the unique Iskcon Temple (p749)
- 5 Exploring the self-sufficient world of Asia's largest shantytown, Dharavi Slum (p755)
- 6 Sleeping at the Taj Mahal Palace, Mumbai (p756), one of the world's iconic hotels, or having a drink at its bar, Mumbai's first
- 7 Ogling the gorgeous Renaissance revival interiors of the Dr Bhau Daji Lad Mumbai City Museum (p745)
- 8 Beholding the commanding triple-headed Shiva at Elephanta Island (p751)
- 9 Catching the city's sea breeze among playing kids, big balloons and a hot-pink sunset at Girgaum Chowpatty (p745)

History

Koli fisherfolk have inhabited the seven islands that form Mumbai from as far back as the 2nd century BC. Remnants of this culture remain huddled along the city shoreline today. A succession of Hindu dynasties held sway over the islands from the 6th century AD until the Muslim Sultans of Gujarat annexed the area in the 14th century, eventually ceding it to Portugal in 1534. The only memorable contribution the Portuguese made to the area was christening it Bom Bahai. They handed control to the English government in 1665, which leased the islands to the East India Company.

Bombay flourished as a trading port. The city's fort was completed in the 1720s, and a century later ambitious land reclamation projects joined the islands into today's single landmass. The city continued to grow, and in the 19th century the fort walls were dismantled and massive building works transformed the city in grand colonial style. When Bombay became the principal supplier of cotton to Britain during the American Civil War, the population soared and trade boomed as money flooded into the city.

Bombay was a major player in the Independence movement, and the Quit India campaign was launched here in 1942 by Mahatma Gandhi. The city became capital of the Bombay presidency after Independence, but in 1960 Maharashtra and Gujarat were divided along linguistic lines – and Bombay became the capital of Maharashtra.

The rise of the pro-Marathi, pro-Hindu regionalist movement in the 1980s, spearheaded by the Shiv Sena (literally 'Shivaji's Army'), shattered the city's multicultural mould by actively discriminating against Muslims and non-Maharashtrians. Communalist tensions increased, and the city's cosmopolitan self-image took a battering when 900 people, mostly Muslims, were killed in riots in late 1992 and 1993. The riots were followed by a dozen retaliatory bombings which killed 257 people and damaged the Bombay Stock Exchange.

Shiv Sena's influence saw the names of many streets and public buildings – as well as the city itself – changed from their colonial monikers. In 1996 the city officially became Mumbai (derived from the Hindu goddess Mumbai). The airport, Victoria Terminus and Prince of Wales Museum were all renamed after Chhatrapati Shivaji, the great Maratha leader.

Religious tensions deepened and became intertwined with national religious conflicts and India's relations with Pakistan. A series of bomb attacks on trains killed over 200 in July 2006. Then, in November 2008, a coordinated series of devastating attacks (by Pakistani militants) targeted landmark buildings across the city, as the Taj Mahal Palace hotel burned, passengers were gunned down inside the Chhatrapati Shivaji train station and 10 killed inside the Leopold Cafe backpacker haunt.

MUMBAI IN...

Two Days

Begin at one of the city's architectural masterpieces, the Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Vastu Sangrahalaya museum (p742), before grabbing a drink in Pantry (p760) and exploring the galleries and scene in the bohemian Kala Ghoda district. Lunch Gujarati-style at Samrat (p760).

In the afternoon continue admiring Mumbai's marvellous buildings around the Oval Maidan and Marine Drive before heading to Colaba, the heart of the city. Tour the city's iconic sights, the Gateway of India (p738) and Taj Mahal Palace hotel (p756) around sunset, and be sure to have a drink at the Harbour Bar (p764). In the evening either fine dine at Indigo (p759) or chow down at Bademiya (p759), followed by (for those with the stamina) a nightcap at sky bar Aer (p765).

The next day, head to the granddaddy of Mumbai's colonial-era giants, the old Victoria Terminus train station, Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus (p739). Then investigate Crawford Market (p769) and its maze of bazaars, hidden temples and unique street life. Lunch at Revival (p760). Make your way over to Mani Bhavan (p745), the museum dedicated to Gandhi, and finish the day wandering the tiny lanes of Khotachiwadi (p745) followed by a beach sunset and bhelpuri at Girgaum Chowpatty (p745). In the evening head to hip nightlife hub Bluefrog (p766) for dinner, and then hop to a band or DJ.

TOP FESTIVALS IN MUMBAI

Mumbai Sanskruti (☺ Jan) This free, two-day celebration of Hindustani classical music is held on the steps of the gorgeous Asiatic Society Library in the Fort area.

Kala Ghoda Festival (www.kalaghodaassociation.com; ☺ Feb) Getting bigger and more sophisticated each year, this two-week-long art fest held in Kala Ghoda and the Fort area sees tons of performances and exhibitions.

Elephanta Festival (www.maharashtratourism.gov.in; ☺ Mar) This classical music and dance festival takes place on the waterfront Apollo Bunder at the Gateway of India.

Nariyal Poornima (☺ Aug) This Koli celebration in Colaba marks the start of the fishing season and the retreat of monsoon winds.

Ganesh Chaturthi (☺ Aug/Sep) Mumbai gets totally swept up by this 10- to 12-day celebration of the Hindu god Ganesh. On the festival's first, third, fifth, seventh and 11th days, families and communities take their Ganesh statues to the seashore at Chowpatty and Juhu beaches and auspiciously submerge them.

Mumbai Film Festival (MFF; www.mumbaifilmfest.org; ☺ Oct) New films from the sub-continent and beyond are screened at the weeklong MFF at cinemas across Mumbai.

In late 2012, when the Sena's charismatic founder Bal Thackeray died (500,000 attended his funeral), the Shiv Sena mission began to falter, and in the 2014 assembly elections, President Modi's BJP became the largest party in Mumbai.

Despite recent troubles Mumbaikars are a resilient bunch. Increased security is very much part of everyday life today and the city's status as the engine room of the Indian economy remains unchallenged. However, the Mumbai politicians certainly have their work cut out, with the megacity's feeble public transport, gridlocked streets, pollution and housing crisis all in desperate need of attention.

👁️ Sights

Mumbai is an island connected by bridges to the mainland. The city's commercial and cultural centre is at the southern, claw-shaped end of the island known as South Mumbai. The southernmost peninsula is Colaba, traditionally the travellers' nerve centre, with many of the major attractions.

Directly north of Colaba is the busy commercial area known as Fort, where the British fort once stood. This part of the city is bordered on the west by a series of interconnected grassy areas known as maidans (pronounced may-dahns).

Continuing north you enter 'the suburbs' which contain the airport and many of Mumbai's best restaurants, shopping and nightspots. The upmarket districts of Bandra, Juhu and Lower Parel are key areas.

👁️ Colaba

Along the city's southernmost peninsula, Colaba is a bustling district packed with elegant art deco and colonial-era mansions, budget-to-midrange lodgings, bars and restaurants, street stalls and a fisherman's quarter. Colaba Causeway (Shahid Bhagat Singh Marg) dissects the district.

If you're here in August, look out for the Koli festival Nariyal Poornima, which is big in Colaba.

★ Taj Mahal Palace, Mumbai LANDMARK
(Map p738; Apollo Bunder) Mumbai's most famous landmark, this stunning hotel is a fairy-tale blend of Islamic and Renaissance styles, and India's second-most photographed monument. It was built in 1903 by the Parsi industrialist JN Tata, supposedly after he was refused entry to one of the European hotels on account of being 'a native'. Dozens were killed inside the hotel when it was targeted during the 2008 terrorist attacks, and images of its burning facade were beamed across the world. The fully restored hotel reopened on Independence Day 2010.

Much more than an iconic building, the Taj's history is intrinsically linked with the nation: it was the first hotel in India to employ women, the first to have electricity (and fans), and it also housed freedom-fighters (for no charge) during the struggle for independence.

Colaba

Today the Taj fronts the harbour and Gateway to India, but it was originally designed to face the city (the entrance has been changed).

Gateway of India

MONUMENT
(Map p738) This bold basalt arch of colonial-era triumph faces out to Mumbai Harbour from the tip of Apollo Bunder. Incorporating Islamic styles of 16th-century Gujarat, it was built to commemorate the 1911 royal visit of King George V, but wasn't completed until 1924. Ironically, the British builders of the gateway used it just 24 years later to parade the last British regiment as India marched towards independence. These days, the gateway is a favourite gathering spot for locals and a top place for people-watching. Giant-balloon sellers, photographers, vendors making bhelpuri (thin fried rounds of dough with rice, lentils, lemon juice, onion, herbs and chutney) and touts rub shoulders with locals and tourists, creating all the hubbub of a bazaar. In March, they are joined by classical dancers and musicians who perform during the Elephanta Festival (p737).

Boats depart from the gateway's wharfs for Elephanta Island.

Sassoon Dock

WATERFRONT

Sassoon Dock is a scene of intense and pungent activity at dawn (around 5am) when colourfully clad Koli fisher-folk sort the catch unloaded from fishing boats at the quay. The fish drying in the sun are bombil, used in the dish Bombay duck. Photography at the dock is prohibited.

📍 Fort Area & Churchgate

Lined up in a row and vying for your attention with aristocratic pomp, many of Mumbai's majestic Victorian buildings pose on the edge of Oval Maidan. This land, and the Cross and Azad Maidans immediately to the north, was on the oceanfront in those days, and this series of grandiose structures faced west directly to the Arabian Sea.

Kala Ghoda, or 'Black Horse', is a hip, atmospheric subneighbourhood of Fort just north of Colaba. It contains many of Mumbai's museums and galleries alongside a wealth of colonial-era buildings and some of the city's best restaurants and cafes.

★ Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Victoria Terminus; Map p740) Imposing, exuberant and overflowing with people, this monumental train station is the city's most extravagant Gothic building and an aphorism for colonial-era India. It's a meringue of Victorian, Hindu and Islamic styles whipped into an imposing Daliesque structure of buttresses, domes, turrets, spires and stained-glass. As historian Christopher London put it, 'the Victoria Terminus is to the British Raj what the Taj Mahal is to the Mughal empire'.

Some of the architectural detail is incredible, with dog-faced gargoyles adorning the magnificent central tower and peacock-filled windows above the central courtyard. Designed by Frederick Stevens, it was completed in 1887, 34 years after the first train in India left this site.

Officially renamed Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus (CST) in 1998, it's still better known locally as VT. Sadly, its interior is far less impressive, with ugly modern additions and a neglected air – stray dogs roam around the ticket offices – despite the structure's Unesco World Heritage Site status.

★ Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Vastu Sangrahalaya

MUSEUM

(Prince of Wales Museum; Map p740; <http://csm vs.in>; K Dubash Marg, Kala Ghoda; Indian/foreigner ₹50/300, camera/video ₹200/1000; ☎10.15am-6pm) Mumbai's biggest and best museum displays a mix of exhibits from across India. The domed behemoth, an intriguing hodgepodge of Islamic, Hindu and British architecture, is a flamboyant Indo-Saracenic design by George Wittet (who also designed the Gateway of India).

Its vast collection includes impressive Hindu and Buddhist sculpture, terracotta figurines from the Indus Valley, Indian miniature paintings, porcelain and some particularly vicious-looking weaponry. Good information is provided in English, and audio guides are available in seven languages.

Two of the upstairs galleries are air-conditioned, offering a welcome relief to

THE ART DISTRICT

India's contemporary art scene has exploded in recent years, and Mumbai, along with Delhi, is the centre of the action. A slew of galleries are showing incredible work in some gorgeous spaces across the city.

Kala Ghoda hosts a wonderful two-week festival (p377) each February, with some great exhibitions (as well as music, theatre, dance and literary events).

Year-round, the second Thursday of each month is 'Art Night Thursday', when galleries stay open late and the vibe is social. Gallery crawls are sometimes organised; check Mumbai Boss (www.mumbaiboss.com) for the latest or the free fold-up Mumbai Art Map, available at galleries and bookstores. To go more in depth, check out the magazine Art India, available at most English-language bookshops, which has news, background and criticism on work from across the country.

Or, just read nothing and go see pretty things on your own: many galleries are within walking distance of one another in Colaba and Fort. If street art is more your thing, don't miss the Great Wall of Mumbai (p749).

Chatterjee & Lal (Map p738; www.chatterjeeandlal.com; 1st fl, Kamal Mansion, Arthur Bunder Rd, Colaba; ☎ 11am-7pm Tue-Sat) Work by emerging artists and historical material.

Galerie Mirchandani + Steinruecke (Map p738; www.galeriems.com; 1st fl, Sunny House, 16/18 Mereweather Rd, Colaba; ☎ 11am-7pm Tue-Sat) Contemporary Indian art and sculpture; the gallery is just behind the Taj Mahal Palace hotel.

Gallery Maskara (Map p738; www.gallerymaskara.com; 6/7 3rd Pasta Lane, Colaba; ☎ 11am-7pm Tue-Sat) This Colaba gallery showcases exciting contemporary art.

Jhaveri Contemporary (www.jhavericontemporary.com; Krishna Niwas, 58A Walkeshwar Rd, Walkeshwar, Malabar Hill; ☎ 11am-6pm Tue-Sat) Cutting-edge photography and art from Indian and overseas artists.

Project 88 (Map p738; www.project88.in; BMP Building, NA Sawant Marg, Colaba; ☎ 11am-7pm Tue-Sat) Well established gallery which features leading Indian artists.

the summer heat. There's a fine cafeteria at the entrance and the museum shop is also excellent.

Marine Drive

PROMENADE

(Map p740; Netaji Subhashchandra Bose Rd) Built on reclaimed land in 1920, Marine Dr arcs along the shore of the Arabian Sea from Nariman Point past Girgaum Chowpatty and continues to the foot of Malabar Hill. Lined with flanking art deco apartments, it's one of Mumbai's most popular promenades and sunset-watching spots. Its twinkling nighttime lights earned it the nickname 'the Queen's Necklace'.

Hundreds gather on the promenade around Nariman Point in the early evening to snack and chat, when it's a good place to meet Mumbaikars.

University of Mumbai

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Bombay University; Map p740; Bhaurao Patil Marg) Looking like a 15th-century French-Gothic mansion plopped incongruously among Mumbai's palm trees, this structure was designed by Gilbert Scott of London's St Pancras train station fame. There's an exquisite University Library and Convocation Hall, as well as the 80m-high Rajabai Clock Tower (Map p740), decorated with detailed carvings. Since the 2008 terror attacks, there's no public access to the grounds but it's still well worth admiring from the street.

High Court

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Map p740; Eldon Rd; ☎ 10.45am-2pm & 2.45-5pm Mon-Fri) A hive of daily activity, packed with judges, barristers and other cogs in the Indian justice system, the High Court is an elegant 1848 neo-Gothic building. The design was inspired by a German castle and was obviously intended to dispel any doubts about the authority of the justice dispensed inside.

Visitors are permitted to explore the building and attend cases. Inside it's quite a spectacle, with court officials kitted out in starched white tunics offset with red cummerbunds and scarlet berets, while robed barristers strut about with their chests puffed out.

No photography is permitted; cameras have to be left with guards at the entrance.

Keneseth Eliyahu Synagogue SYNAGOGUE
(Map p740; www.jacobsassoon.org; Dr VB Gandhi Marg, Kala Ghoda; camera/video ₹100/500; ☺ 11am-6pm Mon-Sat, 1-6pm Sun) Built in 1884, this unmistakable sky-blue synagogue still functions and is tenderly maintained by the city's dwindling Jewish community. It's protected by very heavy security, but the caretaker is welcoming (and will point out a photo of Madonna, who dropped by in 2008).

St Thomas' Cathedral CHURCH
(Map p740; Veer Nariman Rd; ☺ 7am-6pm) This charming cathedral, begun in 1672 and finished in 1718, is the oldest British-era building standing in Mumbai: it was once the eastern gateway of the East India Company's fort (the 'Churchgate'). The cathedral is a marriage of Byzantine and colonial-era architecture, and its airy interior is full of grandiose colonial-era memorials.

Jehangir Art Gallery ART GALLERY
(Map p740; www.jehangirartgallery.com; 161B MG Rd, Kala Ghoda; ☺ 11am-7pm) FREE Recently renovated, this excellent gallery hosts shows by local artists and the occasional big name; it's also home to Samovar Café (p761).

DHARAVI SLUM

Mumbaikars were ambivalent about the stereotypes in 2008's Slumdog Millionaire, but slums are very much a part of – some would say the foundation of – Mumbai city life. An astonishing 60% of Mumbai's population lives in slums, and one of the city's largest slums is Dharavi. Originally inhabited by fisher-folk when the area was still creeks, swamps and islands, it became attractive to migrant workers from South Mumbai and beyond when the swamp began to fill in due to natural and artificial causes. It now incorporates 2.2 sq km of land sandwiched between Mumbai's two major railway lines, and is home to perhaps as many as a million people.

While it may look a bit shambolic from the outside, the maze of dusty alleys and sewer-lined streets of this city-within-a-city are actually a collection of abutting settlements. Some parts of Dharavi have mixed populations, but in other parts inhabitants from different parts of India, and with different trades, have set up homes and tiny factories. Potters from Saurashtra (Gujarati) live in one area, Muslim tanners in another; embroidery workers from Uttar Pradesh work alongside metalsmiths; while other workers recycle plastics as women dry pappadams in the searing sun. Some of these thriving industries, as many as 20,000 in all, export their wares, and the annual turnover of business from Dharavi is thought to exceed US$700 million.

Up close, life in the slums is fascinating to witness. Residents pay rent, most houses have kitchens and electricity, and building materials range from flimsy corrugated-iron shacks to permanent multistorey concrete structures. Perhaps the biggest issue facing Dharavi residents is sanitation, as water supply is irregular – every household has a 200L drum for water storage. Very few dwellings have a private toilet or bathroom, so some neighbourhoods have constructed their own (to which every resident must contribute financially) while other residents are forced to use rundown public facilities.

Many families have been here for generations, and education achievements are higher than in many rural areas: around 15% of children complete a higher education and find white-collar jobs. Many choose to stay, though, in the neighbourhood they grew up in.

Slum tourism is a polarising subject, so you'll have to decide for yourself. If you opt to visit, Reality Tours & Travel (p755) does a illuminating tour, and puts a percentage of profits back into Dharavi. Some tourists opt to visit on their own, which is OK as well – just don't take photos. Take the train from Churchgate station to Mahim, exit on the west side and cross the bridge into Dharavi.

To learn more about Mumbai's slums, check out Katherine Boo's 2012 book Behind the Beautiful Forevers, about life in Annawadi, a slum near the airport, and Rediscovering Dharavi, Kalpana Sharma's sensitive and engrossing history of Dharavi's people, culture and industry.

KHOTACHIWADI

The storied wadi (hamlet) of Khotachiwadi (Map p746) is a bastion clinging onto Mumbai life as it was before high-rises. A Christian enclave of elegant two-storey wooden mansions, it's 500m northeast of Girgaum Chowpatty, lying amid Mumbai's predominantly Hindu and Muslim neighbourhoods. These winding lanes allow a wonderful glimpse into a quiet(ish) life free of rickshaws and taxis. It's not large, but you can spend a little while wandering the alleyways and admiring the old homes and, around Christmas, their decorations.

To find Khotachiwadi, aim for St Teresa's Church (Map p746), on the corner of Jaganath Shankarsheth Marg (JSS Marg) and Rajarammohan Roy Marg (RR Rd/Charni Rd), then head directly opposite the church on JSS Marg and duck down the second and third lanes on your left.

Well-curated shows of Indian and international artists in a bright and spacious exhibition space.

Delhi Art Gallery

ART GALLERY

(Map p740; www.delhiartgallery.com; 58 VB Gandhi Marg, Kala Ghoda; ☎11am-7pm) FREE Spread over four floors of a beautifully restored cream colonial-era structure. Showcases important modern Indian art from its extensive collection and well-curated exhibitions.

👁️ Kalbadevi to Mahalaxmi

★ Dr Bhau Daji Lad Mumbai City Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p746; www.bdlmuseum.org; Dr Babasaheb Ambedkar Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/100; ☎10am-6pm Thu-Tue) This gorgeous museum, built in Renaissance revival style in 1872 as the Victoria & Albert Museum, contains 3500-plus objects relating to Mumbai's history – photography and maps, textiles, books and manuscripts, bidriware, laquerware, weaponry and exquisite pottery.

The landmark building was renovated in 2008, with its Minton tile floors, gilded ceiling mouldings, ornate columns, chandeliers and staircases all restored to their former glory. Contemporary music, dance and drama feature in the new Plaza area, where there's a cafe and shop.

The museum is located in the lush gardens of Jijamata Udyan; skip the zoo.

Mani Bhavan

MUSEUM

(Map p746; ☎23805864; www.gandhi-manibhavan.org; 19 Laburnum Rd, Gamdevi; donation appreciated; ☎9.30am-6pm) As poignant as it is tiny, this museum is in the building where Mahatma Gandhi stayed during visits to Bombay from 1917 to 1934. The leader formulated his philosophy of satyagraha (non-violent protest) and launched the 1932 Civil Disobedience campaign from here. Exhibitions include a photographic record of his life, along with dioramas and documents, such as letters he wrote to Adolf Hitler and Franklin D Roosevelt and tributes from Ho Chi Minh and Einstein.

Girgaum Chowpatty

BEACH

(Map p746) This city beach is a favourite evening spot for courting couples, families, political rallies and anyone out to enjoy what passes for fresh air. Evening bhelpuri at the throng of stalls at the beach's southern end is an essential part of the Mumbai experience. Forget about taking a dip: the water's toxic.

On the 10th day of the Ganesh Chaturthi festival (p737), in August or September, millions flock here to submerge huge Ganesh statues: it's joyful mayhem.

Mumba Devi Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

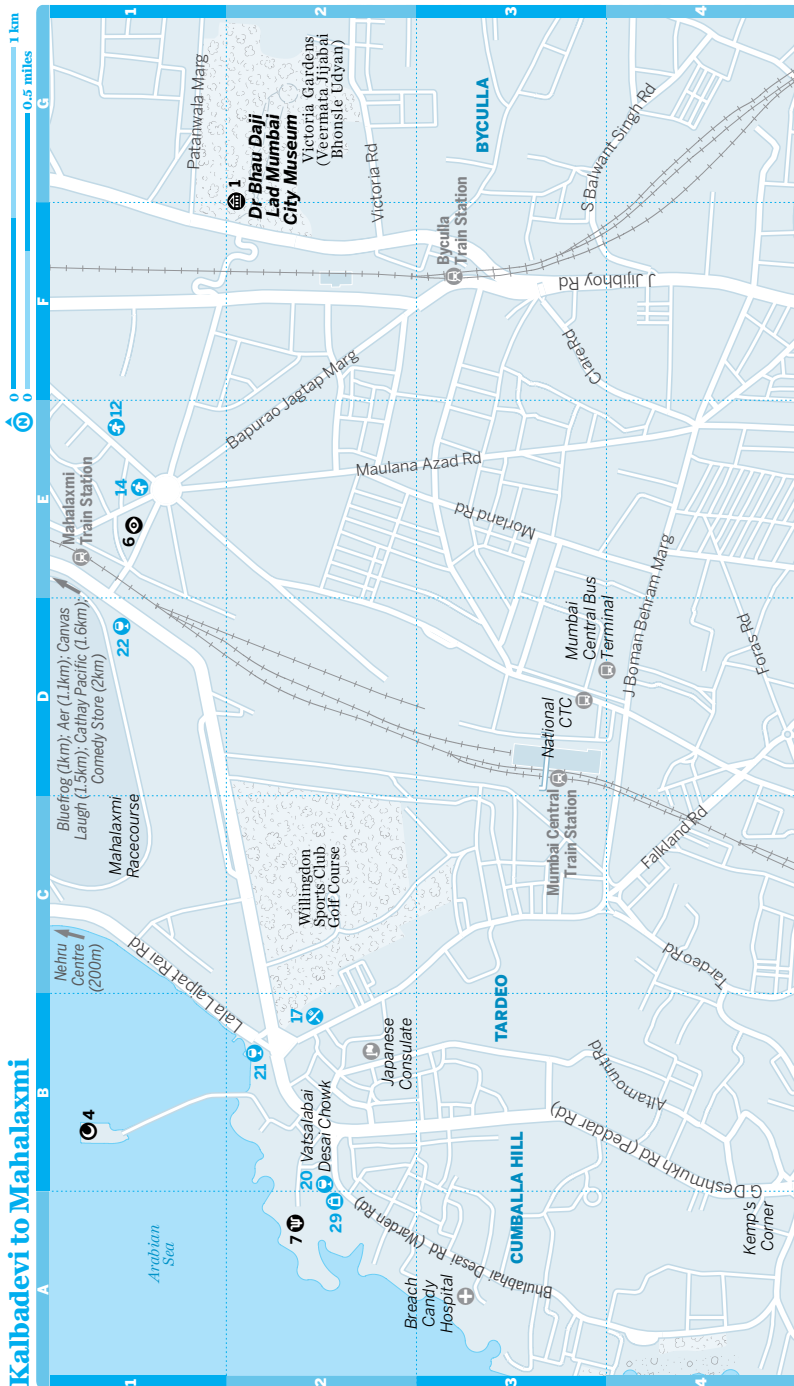

(Map p746; Bhuleshwar) Pay a visit to the city's patron goddess at this 18th-century temple, about 1km north of Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus. Among the deities in residence is Bahuchar Maa, goddess of the transgender hijras, and puja (prayer) is held here several times a day.

Haji Ali Dargah

MOSQUE

(Map p746; www.hajialidargah.in; off V Desai Chowk) Floating like a sacred mirage off the coast, this Indo-Islamic shrine located on an offshore inlet is a striking sight. Built in the 19th century, it contains the tomb of the Muslim saint Pir Haji Ali Shah Bukhari. Legend has it that Haji Ali died while on a pilgrimage to Mecca and his casket miraculously floated back to this spot.

It's only possible to visit the shrine at low tide, via a long causeway (check tide times locally). Thousands of pilgrims, especially on Thursday and Friday (when there may be qawwali, devotional singing), cross it daily, many donating to beggars who line the way.

Sadly parts of the shrine are in a poor state, damaged by storms and the saline air, though a renovation plan exists. It's visited by people of all faiths.

Mahalaxmi Dhobi Ghat

GHAT

(Map p746; Dr E Moses Rd, Mahalaxmi; ☎ 4.30am-dusk) This 140-year-old dhobi ghat (place where clothes are washed) is Mumbai's biggest human-powered washing machine: every day hundreds of people beat the dirt out of thousands of kilograms of soiled Mumbai clothes and linen in 1026 open-air troughs. The best view is from the bridge across the railway tracks near Mahalaxmi train station.

ANIMAL SHELTER

(Map p746; www.bombaypanjrapole.org.in; Panjrapole Marg, Bhuleshwar; ☎ 11am-6pm) In the middle of bustling Bhuleshwar market is, of all things, this shelter for 300 homeless cows. Donkeys, goats, birds, dogs and ducks are also looked after. You can wander around and pet the cows and calves and, for a small donation, feed them fresh greens. It's near Madhav Baug Post Office.

THE PARSIS

Mumbai is home to the world's largest surviving community of Parsis, people of the ancient Zoroastrian faith, who fled Iran in the 10th century to escape religious persecution from invading Muslims. 'Parsi' literally means Perisan. Zoroastrians believe in a single deity, Ahura Mazda, who is worshipped at agiaries (fire temples) across Mumbai, which non-Parsis are forbidden to enter. Parsi funeral rites are unique: the dead are laid out on open-air platforms to be picked over by vultures. The most renowned of these, the Tower of Silence, is located below the Hanging Gardens in Malabar Hill, yet screened by trees and hidden from public view.

The Mumbai Parsi community is extremely influential and successful, with a 98.6% literacy rate (the highest in the city). Famous Parsis include the Tata family (India's foremost industrialists), author Rohinton Mistry and Queen singer Freddie Mercury. If you want to try Parsi cuisine, head to Britannia restaurant (p761).

THE GREAT WALL OF MUMBAI

Starting as an initiative by artists to add colour to a suburban street in Bandra, the Wall Project (www.thewallproject.com) has introduced vibrant public art, murals and graffiti across the city. There's no official membership, and the art has been created by both amateurs and professionals.

The guidelines are that no advertising, political statements, religious content or obscene messaging should be used. Social messaging that's too preachy is not encouraged either.

Hundreds of individuals have joined the project, with most murals dealing with personal stories: their dreams, desire for change, criticisms and frustrations.

Perhaps the most spectacular stretch is a 2km canvas along Senapati Bapat Marg (Tulsi Pipe Rd), between the train stations of Mahim and Dadar on the Western Line, where the art parallels the tracks. It's a very thought-provoking and enriching experience to take in; allow an hour and a half to explore.

This particular wall had long been coveted by the Wall Project founders, but they expected firm opposition from the authorities. Instead they were actually approached by the city's Municipal Commissioner, who invited them to create something. Around 400 people contributed.

Many murals on Senapati Bapat Marg have a theme that's relevant to India and Mumbai such as the environment, pollution and pressures of metropolitan life. One mural of a Mumbai cityscape simply says 'Chaos is our Paradise'.

Bandra is another area rich in street art, where many walls and bridges have been customised: Chapel Lane is a good place to start investigating.

busiest and most colourful temples is dedicated to Mahalaxmi, the goddess of wealth. Perched on a headland, it is the focus for Mumbai's Navratri (Festival of Nine Nights) celebrations in September/October.

Babu Amichand Panalal Adishwarji Jain Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

(Walkeshwar Marg, Malabar Hill; ☎ 5am-9pm) This temple is renowned among Jains for its beauty – given how beautiful Jain temples are, that's saying a lot. Check out the paintings and especially the ecstatically colourful zodiac dome ceiling. It's a small, actively used temple; visitors should be sensitive and dress modestly.

Nehru Centre

CULTURAL COMPLEX

(☎ 24964676, 24964680; www.nehru-centre.org; Dr Annie Besant Rd, Worli; Discovery of India admission free, planetarium adult/child ₹50/25; ☎ 10am-6pm Tue-Sun, Discovery of India 11am-5pm, planetarium English show 3pm) The Nehru Centre is a cultural complex that includes a planetarium, theatre, gallery and an interesting history exhibition, Discovery of India. The architecture is striking: the tower looks like a giant cylindrical pineapple, the planetarium like a UFO. High-quality dance, drama and live music events are held here.

The complex is just inland from Lala Laipat Rai Rd.

Malabar Hill

(around BG Kher Marg) Mumbai's most exclusive neighbourhood, at the northern end of Back Bay, surprisingly contains one of Mumbai's most sacred oases. Concealed between apartment blocks is Banganga Tank, an enclave of serene temples, bathing pilgrims, meandering, traffic-free streets and picturesque old dharamsalas (pilgrims' rest houses). According to Hindu legend, Lord Ram created this tank by piercing the earth with his arrow. For some of the best views of Chowpatty, about 600m west, and the graceful arc of Marine Dr, visit Kamala Nehru Park.

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p750; www.iskconmumbai.com; Juhu Church Rd, Juhu; ☎ 4.30am-1pm & 4-9pm) A focus for intense, celebratory worship in the sedate suburbs, this temple is a compelling place to visit. Iskcon Juhu has a key part in the Hare Krishna story, as founder AC Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada spent extended periods here (you can visit his modest living quarters in the adjacent building). The temple compound comes alive during prayer time as the faithful whip themselves into a devotional frenzy of joy, with kirtan dancing accompanied by crashing hand symbols and drumbeats.

Murals that are dotted around the compound detail the Hare Krishna narrative. The Iskcon (p758) hotel that is located here is also recommended, as is the canteen (meals ₹70).

📍 Gorai Island

Global Pagoda

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

(www.globalpagoda.org; Gorai; ☀ 9am-7pm, meditation classes 10am-6pm) Rising up like a mirage from polluted Gorai Creek is this breathtaking, golden 96m-high stupa modelled on Myanmar's Shwedagon Pagoda. Its dome, which houses relics of Buddha, was built entirely without supports using an ancient technique of interlocking stones, and the meditation hall beneath it seats 8000.

There's a museum dedicated to the life of the Buddha and his teaching, and 20-minute meditation classes are offered daily; an on-site meditation centre also offers 10-day courses.

To get here, take a train from Churchgate to Borivali (exit the station at the 'West' side), then take bus 294 (₹5) or an autorickshaw (₹40) to the ferry landing, where Es-selworld ferries (return ₹50) depart every 30 minutes. The last ferry to the pagoda is at 5.30pm.

📍 Elephanta Island

★ Elephanta Island

of India in Mumbai Harbour, the rock-cut temples on Gharapuri, better known as Elephanta Island, are a Unesco World Heritage Site. Created between AD 450 and 750, the labyrinth of cave temples represent some of India's most impressive temple carving. The main Shiva-dedicated temple is an intriguing latticework of courtyards, halls, pillars and shrines; its magnum opus is a 6m-tall statue of Sadhashiva, depicting a three-faced Shiva as the destroyer, creator and preserver of the universe, his eyes closed in eternal contemplation.

It was the Portuguese who dubbed the island Elephanta because of a large stone elephant near the shore (this collapsed in 1814 and was moved by the British to Mumbai's Jijamata Udyan). There's a small museum on-site, with informative pictorial panels on the origin of the caves.

Pushy, expensive guides are available – but you don't really need one as Pramod Chandra's A Guide to the Elephanta Caves, widely for sale, is more than sufficient.

Launches (Map p738) head to Gharapuri from the Gateway of India every half-hour from 9am to 3.30pm. Buy tickets (economy/deluxe ₹130/160) at the booths lining Apollo Bunder. The voyage takes about an hour.

The ferries dock at the end of a concrete pier, from where you can walk or take the miniature train (₹10) to the stairway (admission ₹10) leading up to the caves. It's lined with souvenir stalls and patrolled by pesky monkeys. Wear good shoes.

Activities

Mumbai has surprisingly good butterfly- and birdwatching opportunities. Sanjay Gandhi National Park is popular for woodland birds, while the mangroves of Godrej (13km east of Bandra) are rich in waders. The Bombay Natural History Society (BNHS; Map p740; ☎22821811; www.bnhs.org; Hornbill House, Shahid Bhagat Singh Marg; ☀9am-5.30pm Mon-Fri) runs excellent trips every weekend.

Outbound Adventure OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

(☎26315019; www.outboundadventure.com) This outfit runs one-day rafting trips on the Ulhas River from July to early September (₹2000 per person). After a good rain, rapids can get up to Grade III+, though usually the rafting is calmer. Also organises camping (from ₹1500 per person per day) and canoeing trips.

MUMBAI FOR CHILDREN

Kidzania (www.kidzania.in; 3rd flr, R City, LBS Marg, Ghatkopar West; ☀child/adult Tue-Fri ₹950/500, Sat & Sun ₹950/700) is Mumbai's latest attraction, an educational activity centre where kids can learn all about piloting a plane, fighting fires, policing and get stuck into lots of art- and craft-making. It's on the outskirts on the city, 10km northeast of the Bandra Kurla Complex.

Little tykes with energy to burn will love the Gorai Island amusement parks, Esselworld (www.esselworld.in; adult/child ₹790/490; ☀11am-7pm, from 10am weekends) and Water Kingdom (www.waterkingdom.in; adult/child ₹690/490; ☀11am-7pm, from 10am weekends). Both have lots of rides, slides and shade. Combined tickets are ₹1190/990 (adult/child).

The free Hanging Gardens, in Malabar Hill, have animal topiaries, swings in the shade and coconut-wallahs. Kamala Nehru Park, across the street, has a two-storey 'boot house'. Bombay Natural History Society (p752) also conducts nature trips for kids.

SANJAY GANDHI NATIONAL PARK

It's hard to believe that within 1½ hours of the teeming metropolis you can be surrounded by a 104-sq-km protected tropical forest. At Sanjay Gandhi National Park (☎288866449; Borivali; adult/child ₹30/15, vehicle ₹100, safari admission ₹50; 🕒7.30am-6pm Tue-Sun, last entry 4pm) bright flora, birds, butterflies and elusive wild leopards replace pollution and concrete, all surrounded by forested hills on the city's northern edge. Urban development has muscled in on the fringes, but the heart of the park is still very peaceful.

A trekking ban is in force to protect wildlife, but you can still walk in the woods if you go with Bombay Natural History Society. On your own, you can cycle (hire bikes cost ₹20 per hour, ₹200 deposit) or take the shuttle to the Shilonda Waterfall, Vihar and Tulsi Lakes (where there's boating) and the most intriguing option, the Kanheri Caves (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100), a set of 109 dwellings and monastic structures for Buddhist monks 6km inside the park. The caves, not all of which are accessible, were developed over 1000 years, beginning in the 1st century BC, as part of a sprawling monastic university complex. Avoid the zoo-like lion and tiger 'safari' as the animals are in cages and enclosures.

Inside the park's main northern entrance is an information centre with a small exhibition on the park's wildlife. The best time to see birds is October to April and butterflies August to November.

The nearest station is Borivali, served by trains on the Western Railway line from Churchgate station (30 minutes, frequent).

Mumbai's street children. There are long- and short-term opportunities in teaching English, computer skills and sports activities.

Welfare of Stray Dogs

VOLUNTEERING

(Map p740; ☎64222838; www.wsindia.org; Yeshwant Chambers, B Bharucha Rd, Kala Ghoda) Operates sterilisation and antirabies programs. Volunteers can walk dogs, treat street dogs, manage stores, educate kids in school programs or fundraise.

Courses

★Yoga Institute

YOGA

(Map p750; ☎26122185; www.theyogainstitute.org; Shri Yogendra Marg, Prabhat Colony, Santa Cruz East; per 1st/2nd month ₹650/450) At its peaceful leafy campus near Santa Cruz, the respected Yoga Institute has daily classes as well as weekend and weeklong programs, and longer residential courses including teacher training (with the seven-day course a prerequisite).

Kaivalyadhama Ishwardas

Yogic Health Centre

YOGA

(Map p746; ☎22818417; www.kdhamumbai.org; 43 Marine Dr; 🕒6am-7pm Mon-Sat) Several daily yoga classes as well as workshops; fees include a ₹800 monthly membership fee and a ₹600 admission fee.

★Bharatiya Vidya Bhavan

LANGUAGE COURSE, MUSIC

(Map p746; ☎23871860; www.bhavans.info; 2nd fl, cnr KM Munshi Marg & Ramabai Rd, Girgaum; per hour ₹500; 🕒4-8pm) Excellent private Hindi, Marathi, Gujarati and Sanskrit language classes. Contact Professor Ghosh (a Grammy Award-winning composer and musician) for lessons in tabla, vocals, sitar or classical dance.

Sumeet Nagdev Dance Arts

DANCE

(SNDA; ☎24366777; www.sumeetnagdevdancearts.in; Silver Cascade Bldg, SB Marg, Dadar West; 1hr class ₹450) SNDA offers tons of dance classes, from samba and ballet to 'Indian Folk Bollywood'. Classes are also held at a Chowpatty location (Studio Balance, Krishna Kunj, 29/30 KM Munshi Marg).

Tours

Fiona Fernandez' Ten Heritage Walks of Mumbai (₹395) has walking tours of the city, with fascinating historical background. The Government of India tourist office can provide a list of approved multilingual guides; most charge ₹750/1000 per half-/full day.

City Walk Architectural Mumbai

START GATEWAY OF INDIA
END EROS CINEMA
LENGTH 2.5KM; 1½ HOURS

Mumbai's defining feature is its distinctive mix of colonial-era and art deco architecture. Starting from the 1 Gateway of India (p738), walk up Chhatrapati Shivaji Marg past the art deco residential and-commercial complex 2 Dhunraj Mahal, towards 3 Regal Circle. Walk the circle for views of the surrounding buildings – including the art deco 4 Regal cinema (p768) and the 5 Majestic Hotel, now the Sahakari Bhandar cooperative store. Continue up MG Rd, past the beautifully restored facade of the 6 National Gallery of Modern Art (p744). Opposite is the landmark 7 Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Vastu Sangrahalaya (p742) built in glorious Indo-Saracenic style. Back across the road is the 'Romanesque Transitional' 8 Elphinstone College and the 9 David Sassoon Library & Reading Room, where members escape the afternoon heat lazing on planters' chairs on the upper balcony. Continue north to admire the vertical art deco stylings of the 10 New India Assurance Company Building. On an island ahead lies 11 Flora Fountain, depicting the Roman goddess of flowers. Turn east down Veer Nariman Rd, walking towards 12 St Thomas' Cathedral (p744). Ahead lies the stately 13 Horniman Circle, an arcaded ring of buildings laid out in the 1860s around a beautifully kept botanical garden. It's overlooked from the east by the neoclassical 14 Town Hall, home to the Asiatic Society library. Backtrack to Flora Fountain, continuing west and turning south onto Bhaurao Patil Marg to see the august 15 High Court (p743) and the ornate 16 University of Mumbai (p743). The university's 80m-high 17 Rajabai Clock Tower (p743) is best observed from within the 18 Oval Maidan. Turn around to compare the colonial-era edifices with the row of art deco beauties lining Maharashtra Karve (MK) Rd, culminating in the wedding-cake tower of the classic 19 Eros Cinema (p768).

A cruise on Mumbai Harbour is a good way to see the Gateway of India and Colaba harbourfront from the sea. Half-hour ferry rides (₹80) depart from the Gateway of India; tickets are sold on-site.

★ Reality Tours & Travel

SLUM TOUR
(Map p740; ☎ 9820822253; www.realitytour sandtravel.com; 1/26, Unique Business Service Centre, Akher House, Nowroji Fardonji Rd; most tours ₹750-1500) 🍷 Compelling tours of the Dharavi slum, with 80% of post-tax profits going to the agency's own NGO, Reality Gives (www.realitygives.org). Street food, market, bicycle and Night Mumbai tours are also excellent.

Bombay Heritage Walks

WALKING TOUR
(☎ 23690992, 9821887321; www.bombayheritagewalks.com; per 2hr tour from ₹2500, for up to 5 people) Run by two enthusiastic architects, BHW has terrific tours of heritage neighbourhoods.

Mumbai Magic Tours

Buses depart from and can be booked at both the MTDC booth (Map p738) and the MTDC office (☎ 22841877; www.maharashtra tourism.gov.in; Madame Cama Rd, Nariman Point; ☎ 9.45am-5.30pm Mon-Sat).

🏠 Sleeping

Mumbai has the most expensive accommodation in India, and you'll never quite feel like you're getting your money's worth. Welcome to Mumbai real estate!

Colaba is compact, has the liveliest tourist scene and many budget and midrange options. The neighbouring Fort area is convenient for the main train stations (CST and Churchgate). Most of the top-end places are dotted along Marine Dr and out in the suburbs. Note that although there are very few hotels in the cosmopolitan areas of Juhu

🏠 Colaba

★ Sea Shore Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p738; ☎ 22874237; 4th fl, 1-49 Kamal Mansion, Arthur Bunder Rd; s/d without bathroom ₹700/1100; 🍷) This place is really making an effort, with small but immaculately clean and inviting rooms, all with flat-screen TVs, set off a railway-carriage-style corridor. Half the rooms even have harbour views (the others don't have a window). The modish communal bathrooms are well-scrubbed and have a little gleam and sparkle. Wi-fi in the reception area only.

Carlton Hotel

HOTEL $
(Map p738; ☎ 22020642; 1st fl, Florence House, Mereweather Rd; s/d/tr without bathroom from ₹1050/1550/2300, s/d with AC ₹2900/3200; 🍷) Rooms here are a fair deal for the location, with original floor tiles, high ceilings, a contemporary touch or two, and some boasting balconies with colonial-era Colaba views; however, many lack private bathrooms. The building itself is rundown and staff could be more eager to please.

Bentley's Hotel

HOTEL $
(Map p738; ☎ 22841474; www.bentleyshotel.com; 17 Oliver Rd; r incl breakfast ₹1740-2490; 🍷🍷) A welcoming Parsi-owned place in the heart of Colaba which travellers either love or hate, depending on which of the five apartment buildings they end up in. First choice are the spacious, colonial-style rooms in the main building; avoid Henry Rd and JA Allana Marg. Air-conditioning is ₹315 extra, wi-fi is reception-only.

India Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p738; ☎ 22833769; 3rd fl, 1/49 Kamal Mansion, Arthur Bunder Rd; s/d without bathroom from ₹400/500; 🏠) Run by the same people as the excellent Sea Shore Hotel, this overflow place is not as attractive but its boxrooms (some with partial sea views) are cheap as chapatis and enjoy a fine location. However, the design (partition walls, shared bathrooms at one end of the corridor) means that it feels more student house than hotel.

Salvation Army Red Shield Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p738; 📍22841824; red_shield@vsnl.net; 30 Mereweather Rd; dm incl breakfast ₹350, d with fan/AC incl breakfast ₹1100/1500; 🏠🍷) A Mumbai institution popular with rupee-pinching travellers. Accommodation is very spartan (and a little grubby) but doable for a night or so. Dorms cannot be reserved in advance: come just after the 9am kickout to ensure a spot. Curfew is midnight.

★YWCA

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p738; 📍22025053; www.ywcaic.info; 18 Madame Cama Rd; s/d/tr with AC incl breakfast & dinner ₹2400/3640/5450; 🏠🍷🍷) Efficiently managed, and within walking distance of all the sights in Colaba and Fort, the YMCA is a good deal and justifiably popular. The spacious, well-maintained rooms boast desks and wardrobes and multichannelled TVs (though wi-fi is restricted to the lobby). Tariffs include a buffet breakfast, dinner and a daily newspaper.

Hotel Suba Palace

HOTEL $$

(Map p738; 📍22020636, 22020639; www.hotelsubapalace.com; Battery St; s/d with AC incl breakfast ₹5520/6340; 🏠🍷) 'Palace' is pushing it a little but this modern, brilliantly located little place is certainly verging on boutique hotel territory with its contemporary decor: neutral tones are offset with zebra-print quilted headboards in the tasteful rooms. There's a good in-house restaurant and free wi-fi.

Regent Hotel

HOTEL $$

(Map p738; 📍22021518; 8 Best Marg; s/d with AC incl breakfast ₹3920-4910; 🏠🍷🍷) A dependable choice where staff go the extra mile to help out guests. Located just off Colaba's main drag and has well-furnished rooms with good-quality mattresses and modern marble-floored bathrooms.

Hotel Moti

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p738; 📍22025714; hotelmotiinternational@yahoo.co.in; 10 Best Marg; d/tr with AC ₹3300/4500; 🏠🍷🍷) A gracefully crumbling, colonial-era building in prime Colaba, where owner Raj is generous with advice about the city. Rooms are simply furnished (many have some period charm, like ornate stucco ceilings), but all could be better maintained.

★Taj Mahal Palace,

Mumbai

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(Map p738; 📍66653366; www.tajhotels.com; Apollo Bunder; s/d tower from ₹15,800/17,620, palace from ₹23,530, 25,990; 🏠🍷🍷) The grand dame of Mumbai is one of the world's most iconic hotels and has hosted a roster of presidents and royalty. Sweeping arches, staircases and domes and a glorious garden and pool ensure an unforgettable stay. Rooms in the adjacent tower lack the period details of the palace itself, but many have spectacular, full-frontal views of the Gateway to India.

With a myriad of excellent in-house eating and drinking options, plus spa and leisure facilities, it can be a wrench to leave the hotel premises. All guests are entitled to an exceptional guided tour, which provides illuminating context about the hotel's role in the city's history.

★Abode Bombay

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$

(Map p738; 📍8080234066; www.abodeboutiquehotels.com; 1st fl, Lansdowne House, MB Marg; r with AC incl breakfast ₹5850-14,400; 🏠🍷) Terrific new hip hotel, stylishly designed using colonial-era and art deco furniture, reclaimed teak flooring and original artwork; the luxury rooms have glorious free-standing bath tubs. Staff are very switched on to travellers' needs, and breakfast is excellent with fresh juice and delicious local and international choices. A little tricky to find, it's located behind the Regal Cinema.

Vivanta by Taj

HOTEL $$$

(📍022-66650808; www.vivantabytaj.com; 90 Cuffe Pde; s/d from ₹8050/9230; 🏠🍷🍷) In a quiet, leafy neighbourhood 1.5km south of the Gateway, this towering hotel has relatively modest rates (for Mumbai!), considering its excellent facilities which include a large pool, excellent gym, lounge bar and lots of good dining choices.

Gordon House Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(Map p738; 📍22894400; www.ghotel.com; 5 Battery St; r incl breakfast ₹7700; 🏠🍷) Light, airy, spacious and well-equipped rooms a stone's throw from the Gateway to India.

GROWING PAINS

Shoehorned into a narrow peninsula that juts into the Arabian Sea, Mumbai is one of the world's most congested and densely populated megacities. The numbers are startling: over 22 million live in the Mumbai conurbation and around 60% of these live in slums.

While the city is blessed with sea to the west and a large bay to the east, it's also cursed by the narrowness of the spit of land it calls home. Every day over six million commuters from the outer suburbs attempt to reach their workplaces in the south of the city via a network of antiquated suburban trains and buses. A desperately needed metro link to the heart of the city is planned (but not scheduled to be completed until at least 2020, if on time). For years the city planners invested in an ever-increasing number of flyovers, as car ownership has grown by 58% since 2000, while failing to build a single bus lane or cycle path. Gridlock is the norm and the pollution is punishing, with particulate and nitric oxide levels way above WHO danger levels.

The future of the city is in the balance. Mumbai is one of the least green cities on earth, with open spaces, parks and recreation grounds accounting for only 2.5% of its total area (Delhi has 20%, Chandigarh 35%). Yet on the eastern side of town, stretching north from the shoreline of Colaba, is a vast area of decaying docklands which has been long-slated for redevelopment. Will it be set aside for green space, parks and leisure facilities or luxury housing and concrete?

Design-wise each floor is themed: the decor ranges Mediterranean (think terracotta tiles, bold colours), Scandinavian (blond wood, clean lines) and Country (er...patchwork quilts?). There's a good Asian restaurant on the ground floor.

Fort Area & Churchgate

Traveller's Inn

HOTEL $

(Map p740; ☎22644685; 26 Adi Marzban Path; dm/d ₹630/1880, d with AC incl breakfast ₹2550; 📶📺) On a quiet, tree-lined street, this small hotel is a very sound choice with clean, if tiny, rooms with cable TV that represent good value. The three (fan-cooled) dorms can get Hades-hot in summer but are a steal for Mumbai – bring your own ice pack (and exorcist). The location's excellent, staff are helpful and there's free wi-fi in the lobby.

Hotel Lawrence

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p740; ☎22843618; 3rd fl, ITTS House, 33 Sai Baba Marg, Kala Ghoda; s/d/tr without bathroom incl breakfast ₹850/950/1500) Run by kindly folk, this venerable place has been hosting shoestring travellers for years. Rooms are certainly basic but kept pretty tidy, as are the communal bathrooms. Boasts an excellent Kala Ghoda location, on a quiet little lane accessed by a ramshackle old lift.

Hotel Oasis

HOTEL $

(Map p740; ☎30227886, 30227889; www.hotel-oasisindia.in; 276 Shahid Bhagat Singh Marg; ₹1620-3050; 📶📺) Hotel Oasis enjoys a convenient location near the CST and offers decent accommodation for the modest rates asked. Rooms are smallish, and some are low on natural light, but they have flat-screen TVs and in-room wi-fi.

★Residency Hotel

HOTEL $$

(Map p740; ☎22625525; www.residencyhotel.com; 26 Rustom Sidhwa Marg, Fort; s/d with AC incl breakfast from ₹4430/4670; 📶📺) The best-run midranger in Mumbai, the Residency is the kind of dependable place where you can breathe a sigh of relief after a long journey and be certain you'll be looked after well. It's fine value too, with contemporary rooms that boast mood lighting, fridges, flat-screens and hip en suite bathrooms. Its Fort location is excellent and you'll find some fascinating books to browse over breakfast in the pleasant cafe. For the best rates, always book via the hotel's own website.

Welcome Hotel

HOTEL $$

(Map p740; ☎6631488; welcomehotel@gmail.com; 257 Shahid Bhagat Singh Marg; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3280/3890, without bathroom from ₹1810/2020; 📶📺) Service is a little hit 'n' miss but rooms here are simple and comfortable, and shared bathrooms are well kept. Top-floor executive rooms are more boutique than midrange.

Trident

HOTEL $$$

(Oberoi Hotel; Map p740; ☎66324343; www.tridenthotels.com; Marine Dr; s/d from ₹15,300/17,000; 🍷🍷🍷) This Marine Dr landmark is part of the Oberoi Hotel complex, but offers better value and a pleasing contemporary look in its restaurants, bars and pool area. Upper-floor ocean-view rooms offer truly spectacular vistas of the Queen's Necklace. Wi-fi, surprisingly, costs extra.

Western & Northern Suburbs*★ Juhu Residency

BOULIQUE HOTEL $$

(Map p750; ☎67834949; www.juhuresidency.com; 148B Juhu Tara Rd, Juhu; s/d with AC incl breakfast & wi-fi from ₹5850; 🍷🍷🍷) Essential oil aromas greet you in the lobby at this excellent boutique hotel with an inviting, relaxing atmosphere (and a fine location, five minutes' walk from Juhu beach). The chocolate-and-coffee colour scheme in the modish rooms works well, each boasting marble floors, dark woods, artful bedspreads and flat-screen TVs. There are three restaurants – good ones – for just 18 rooms.

To top it all, free airport pick-ups are included.

Hotel Oriental Aster

HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎022-28232323; http://theorientalaster.com; 45 Tarun Bharat Society, Dr Karanjia Road; r with AC & breakfast from ₹4700; 🍷🍷) An efficiently run airport hotel with attractive modern rooms that have space and a splash of art on show; bathrooms are small but perfectly formed. There's 24-hour room service, and free wi-fi and airport transportation.

Anand Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎26203372; anandhote@yahoo.co.in; Gandhigram Rd, Juhu; s/d with AC from ₹2580/4230; 🍷🍷) Yes, the decor's in 50 shades of beige but the Anand's rooms are comfortable, spacious and represent decent value, considering the prime location on a quiet street next to Juhu beach. The excellent in-house Dakshinayan restaurant (p762) scores highly for authentic, inexpensive meals too. It's a particularly good deal for solo travellers.

Hotel Regal Enclave

HOTEL $$$

and close to all of Bandra's best eating, drinking and shopping. Rooms are spacious and comfortable, with pleasant if unoriginal decor. Rates include airport pick-up.

Iskcon

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p750; ☎26206860; www.iskconmumbai.com/guest-house; Juhu Church Rd, Juhu; s/d ₹3100/3500, with AC ₹3400/4000; 🍷🍷🍷) An intriguing place to stay inside Juhu's lively Iskcon complex. Though the hotel building is a slightly soulless concrete block, some rooms enjoy vistas over the Hare Krishna temple compound. Spartan decor is offset by the odd decorative flourish such as Gujarati sankheda (lacquered country wood) furniture, and staff are very welcoming.

Hotel Neelkanth

HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎26495566, 26495569; 354 Linking Rd, Khar West; s/d from ₹2460/3380; 🍷🍷) Rooms at the friendly Neelkanth are inadvertently retro, with lots of marble and chrome-trimmed wooden furniture; check out the sublimely mod logo too. Yes, it's old-fashioned, but it's also decent value for this neighbourhood with great shopping nearby.

Hotel Suba International

BOULIQUE HOTEL $$

(Map p750; ☎67076707; www.hotelsubainternational.com; Sahar Rd, Andheri East; r with AC incl breakfast from ₹6400; 🍷🍷) A 'boutique business' hotel that's very close to the airport (free transfers are included) and boasts modish rooms with clean lines and stylish touches.

Le Sutra

BOULIQUE HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎022-66420025; www.lesutra.in; 14 Union Park, Khar West; s/d incl breakfast from ₹7900/10,450; 🍷🍷) This hip hotel in the happening Khar area blends contemporary chic with traditional artefacts (textiles and hand-carved chairs) and some statement art in its lovely rooms. The in-house gallery, spa, cafe and restaurants (Out of the Blue and Olive) seal the deal. Check the website for special offers that include dinner or a spa treatment.

Sofitel Mumbai BKC

HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎022-61175000; www.sofitel-mumbai-bkc.com; C-57, Bandra Kurla Complex Rd; s/d from ₹7720/8500; 🍷🍷🍷) Located in Mumbai's BKC business district, which is handy for the airport and close enough to Bandra, the Sofitel offers commodious comfort levels. Rooms have a mod-Indian design and facilities are excellent, with great restaurants and one of the best breakfast buffets in the city.

ITC Maratha

HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎28303030; www.itchotels.in; Sahar Rd, Andheri East; s/d incl breakfast from ₹16,450/19,200; 🍷🍷🍷) The five-star hotel with the most luxurious Indian character; from the Rajasthani-style lattice windows around the atrium, to the rooms with their silk throw pillows and lush raspberry-and-grey colour schemes. Peshawari (p763), one of Mumbai's best restaurants, is located here.

Sun-n-Sand

HOTEL $$$

(Map p750; ☎66938888; www.sunnsandhotel.com; 39 Juhu Chowpatty; r with AC from ₹10,000; 🍷🍷🍷) A beachfront institution with well-maintained if slightly dated rooms that are big on browns and beiges. Rates (add ₹1000 or so for a sea view) are competitive given the location in exclusive Juhu and free airport transfers. Staff are eager to please.

Eating

Flavours from all over India collide with international trends and taste buds in Mumbai. Colaba is home to most of the cheap tourist haunts, while Fort and Churchgate are more upscale, a trend that continues as you head north to Mahalaxmi and the western suburbs, where you'll find Mumbai's most international and expensive restaurants.

Sample Gujarati or Kerala thalis (all-you-can-eat meals), Mughlai kebabs, Goan vindaloo and Mangalorean seafood. And don't forget, if you see Bombay duck on a menu, it's actually bombil (fish dried in the sun and deep-fried).

Colaba

Bademiya

MUGHLAI, FAST FOOD $

(Map p738; Tulloch Rd; light meals ₹60-150; ☎8pm-1.30am) Formerly a tiny, outrageously popular late-night street stall, Bademiya now encompasses a (dingy) seating area too. Yes, prices have risen, but it remains a key Colaba hang-out for its trademark buzz and bustle, plus its delicious meat-heavy menu. Expect spicy, fresh-grilled kebabs, mutton and chicken curries, and tikka rolls.

Olympia

INDIAN $

(Map p738; Rahim Mansion, 1 Shahid Bhagat Singh Marg; meals ₹80-140; ☎7am-midnight) While we didn't encounter any athletes at the Olympia, its masala kheema (spicy minced meat; ₹40) is certainly a breakfast of champions when munched with a couple of roti. A simple place renowned for its pocket-friendly meat dishes; the seekh kebab and chicken butter fry masala (₹80) are also great.

Hotel OCH

INDIAN $

(Map p738; Shahid Bhagat Singh Marg; mains ₹50-150; ☎7am-10.30pm) A good Colaba cheapie, with decent lunch thalis and lots of Punjabi dishes in a large, cafeteria-like setting. Popular with families and cops working next door.

Sufra

MIDDLE EASTERN $$

(Map p738; 16A Cusrow Baug, Shahid Bhagat Singh Rd; meals ₹120-250; ☎11am-11.45pm) Serves up excellent Arab dishes such as kibbeh (chicken, burgul and mint bites), falafel, shwarma, kebabs and fresh juices at very reasonable rates. It's a tiny place with just a few tables so best for a hit and run or takeaway.

Indigo

FUSION, CONTINENTAL $$$

(Map p738; ☎66368980; www.foodindigo.com; 4 Mandlik Marg; mains ₹780-1250; ☎noon-3pm & 6.30pm-midnight; 🍷) This incredibly classy

STREET FOOD

Mumbai's street cuisine is vaster than many Western culinary traditions.

Stalls tend to get started in late afternoon, when chai complements much of the fried deliciousness; items are ₹10 to ₹25.

Most street food is vegetarian.

Chowpatty Beach is a great place to try Mumbai's famous bhelpuri. Stalls offering samosas, pav bhaji (spiced vegetables and bread), vada pav (deep-fried spiced lentil-ball sandwich), bhurji pav (scrambled eggs and bread) and dabeli (a mixture of potatoes, spices, peanuts and pomegranate, also on bread) are spread through the city.

For a meaty meal, Mohammed Ali and Merchant Rds in Kalbadevi are famous for kebabs. In Colaba, Bademiya is a late-night Mumbai rite of passage, renowned for its chicken tikka rolls.

The office workers' district on the north side of Kala Ghoda is another good hunting ground for street snacks.

Colaba institution is a colonial-era property converted into a temple of fine dining. Serves inventive, expensive European and Asian cuisine and offers a long wine list, sleek ambience and a gorgeous rooftop deck. Favourites include the pulled duck tortellini, Kochi oysters, and pork belly with maple-glazed apple. Reserve ahead.

Indigo Delicatessen

CAFE $$$

(Map p738; www.indigodeli.com; Pheroze Bldg, Chhatrapati Shivaji Marg; snacks/mains from ₹320/470; ☎8.30am-midnight; 📍) Bustling and fashionable cafe-restaurant with cool tunes and massive wooden tables. The menu includes all-day breakfasts (₹155 to ₹385) and international classics such as pork ribs, thin-crust pizza and inventive sandwiches. It's busy so service can be stretched.

Self-Catering

Colaba Market

MARKET

(Map p738; Lala Nigam St; ☎7am-5pm) The Colaba market has fresh fruit and vegetables.

Saharkari Bhandar

Supermarket

SUPERMARKET

(Map p738; 📍22022248; cnr Colaba Causeway & Wodehouse Rd; ☎10am-8.30pm) Well-stocked for self-caterers.

Fort Area & Churchgate

Pradeep Gomantak

Bhojanalaya

MAHARASHTRIAN $

(Map p740; Sheri House, Rustom Sidhwa Marg; mains ₹60-150; ☎11am-4pm & 7.30-10pm) A simple but satisfying place that serves Malvani cuisine and gets very busy at lunchtime. Its bombil rice plate (₹70) and crab masala (₹65) are very flavoursome and prepared with real care and attention. Wash your meal down with sol kadhi (a soothing, spicy drink of coconut milk and kokum).

Badshah Snacks & Drinks

INDIAN $

(Map p746; Lokmanya Tilak Rd; snacks & drinks ₹40-120; ☎7am-12.30am) Opposite Crawford Market, Badshah's been serving snacks, fruit juices and its famous falooda (rose-flavoured drink made with milk, cream, nuts and vermicelli) to hungry bargain-hunters for more than 100 years.

★ La Folie

CAFE $$

(Map p740; Ropewalk Lane, Kala Ghoda; croissants/cakes from ₹110/220; ☎noon-11pm) Chocoholics and cake fetishists look no further; this minuscule Kala Ghoda place will satisfy your cravings, and then some. Owner Sanjana Patel spent seven years in France studying the art (addiction?) of pastry- and chocolate-making, which was obviously time well spent. Try the delectable Madagascar cake (chocolate with raspberry mousse) with a latte (₹130) or the 70% cocoa Venezuelan-sourced chocolates.

Frankly, wherever you are dining in South Mumbai skip the dessert menu and head here instead.

★ Revival

INDIAN $$

(Map p746; www.revivalindianthali.com; 361 Sheikh Memon St, Kalbadevi, opp Mangaldas market; mains ₹200-360, thali from ₹350; ☎noon-4pm & 7.30-10.30pm, lunch only Sun; 📍📍) Thali mecca near Crawford Market where waiters in silken dhoti come one after another to fill your plates with dozens of delectable (veg-only) curries, sides, chutneys, rotis and rice dishes in an all-you-can-eat gastro onslaught. The thali menu changes daily and the premises are air-conditioned.

Pantry

CAFE $$$

(Map p740; www.thepantry.in; B Bharucha Rd; snacks/meals from ₹200/270; ☎8.30am-11pm; 📍) Pantry is a bakery-cafe that offers a choice of fine pies and pastries, soups and sandwiches plus delicious mains (such as curry leaf chicken with burgul pilaf). Breakfasts are legendary: try the tomato scrambled eggs with parmesan and rosti, or some organic-flour waffles with fruit. The elegantly restored historic premises are also perfect for a coffee and slab of cake.

Samrat

GUJARATI $$$

(Map p740; 📍42135401; www.prashantcaterers.com; Prem Ct, J Tata Rd; thali ₹400, mains ₹160-290; ☎noon-11pm; 📍) Samrat has an à la carte menu but most rightly opt for the famous Gujarati thali – a cavalcade of taste and texture, sweetness and spice that includes four curries, three chutneys, curd, rotis and other bits and pieces. Beer is available.

Oye Kake

NORTH INDIAN $$

(Map p740; 13C Cawasji Patel St; mains ₹120-180; ☎11am-4pm & 7-11pm) Intimate all-veg Punjabi place where the daily thali (₹170) is widely popular with local office workers and renowned for its authenticity. Signature dishes include the panner tikka masala, sarson da saag (mustard leaf curry) and the parathas; lassis are excellent too. Prepare to have to wait for a table.

DABBA-WALLAHS

A small miracle of logistics, Mumbai's 5000 dabba-wallahs (literally 'food container person'; also called tiffin-wallahs) work tirelessly to deliver hot lunches to office workers throughout the city.

Lunch boxes are picked up each day from restaurants and homes and carried on heads, bicycles and trains to a centralised sorting station. A sophisticated system of numbers and colours (many wallahs don't read) identifies the destination of each lunch. More than 200,000 meals are delivered – always on time, come (monsoon) rain or (searing) shine. This system has been used for over a century and there's only about one mistake per six million deliveries. (In a 2002 analysis, Forbes Magazine found that the dabba-wallahs had a six-sigma, or 99.99966%, reliability rating.)

Look for these master messengers midmorning at Churchgate and CST stations.

A Taste of Kerala

KERALAN $$

(Map p740; Prospect Chambers Annex, Pitha St, Fort; mains ₹70-170, thali from ₹110; ☺6am-midnight) Inexpensive Keralan eatery with lots of coconut and southern goodness on the menu; try a thali (served on a banana leaf) or one of the seafood specials like the prawn pepper masala. It also serves Punjabi and meat dishes. Staff are very welcoming, and there's an air-conditioned dining room.

Café Moshe

CAFE $$

(Map p738; www.moshes.in; Chhatrapati Shivaji Marg; light meals ₹200-380; ☺9am-midnight; ☎) Moshe's menu has more than a nod to the Middle East, with excellent mezze, pita bread sandwiches and wraps, salads and outstanding hummus bowls (₹250 to ₹280) that have a choice of toppings. Desserts, juices and coffee also score highly.

Other outlets, all serving the same great food, include the flagship restaurant (7 Minoo Manor, Cuffe Pde; ☺9am-midnight), in a heritage building, and the bookstore cafe (Map p746; Crossword, NS Patkar Marg) at Kemp's Corner.

Bademiya Restaurant

NORTH INDIAN $$

(Map p740; ☎22655657; Botawala Bldg, Horniman Circle; mains ₹110-220; ☺11am-1am) The grown-up, sit-down version of Bademiya's legendary Colaba street-side stand (p759) has the classic rolls and rotis, plus biryanis, tikka masalas and dhals. Delivers.

Kala Ghoda Café

CAFE $$

(Map p740; www.kgcafe.in; 10 Ropewalk Lane, Kala Ghoda; light meal ₹100-280, dinner ₹380-530; ☺8.30am-11.45pm; ☎) ☹ Tiny boho cafe with a handful of tables that's a favourite with creative types. There's usually interesting art or photography. Serves organic coffee and tea, sandwiches, salads and breakfasts.

Suzette

FRENCH $$

(Map p740; www.suzette.in; Atlanta Bldg, Vinayak K Shah Marg, Nariman Point; meals ₹300-450; ☺9am-11pm Mon-Sat; ☎) This relaxed Parisian-style place with delectable crêpes, croques, salads, pasta and loungey music. On the crêpe front, sweet tooths should try the jaggery and butter; for a savoury flavour, order an italie (with pesto, mozzarella and mushrooms). The Bandra branch (Map p750; St John's St, Pali Naka; ☺9am-11pm) has outdoor seating and is open daily.

Brittania

PARSI $$

(Map p740; Wakefield House, Ballard Estate; mains ₹150-550; ☺noon-4pm Mon-Sat) This Parsi institution has been around since 1923 and retains a (faded) colonial-era feel. The signature dishes are the dhansak (meat with curried lentils and rice) and the berry pulao – spiced and boneless mutton or chicken, or veg or egg, buried in basmati rice and tart barberies that are imported from Iran. It's a little tricky to find. Cash only.

Samovar Café

CAFE $$

(Map p740; Jehangir Art Gallery, MG Rd, Kala Ghoda; snacks & meals ₹90-170; ☺11am-7pm Mon-Sat) Inside the art gallery, this cafe is perfect for a snack (try the rolls; ₹100 to ₹120) or meal (the pepper mutton chops are great). It overlooks the gardens of the Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj Vastu Sangrahalaya museum. Cappuccinos and beers are also on offer.

★Koh

THAI $$$

(Map p740; ☎39879999; InterContinental, Marine Dr; mains ₹850-1850; ☺12.30-3pm & 7.30-midnight) Destination Thai restaurant with a real wow factor, where celeb chef Ian Kittichai works his native cuisine into an international frenzy of flavour. The massamun curry (Thai Muslim-style spiced lamb shank with cucumber relish) is his signature (and most expensive) dish, but there are lots of sublime seafood and vegetarian choices too. Well worth a splurge.

★ Mamagoto

ASIAN $$$

(Map p740; ☎ 022-67495660; www.mamagoto.in; 5 Surya Mahal, B Bharucha Marg; meals ₹350-550; ☉ noon-11.30pm) Mamagoto means 'play with food' in Japanese and this zany little Kala Ghoda place is certainly fun, with a relaxed vibe, cool tunes and kooky decor (think pop and propaganda art). The menu really delivers, with punchy Pan-Asian flavours: combo meal deals (₹400 to ₹550) include a great juice, and the authentic Malay-style Penang curry is terrific.

There's also a branch in Bandra (☎ 022-26552600; www.mamagoto.in; 133 Gazebo House, Hill Rd, Bandra; ☉ noon-11.30pm).

Burma Burma

ASIAN $$$

(Map p740; ☎ 022-40036600; www.burmaburma.in; Oak Lane, off MG Road; meals ₹330-500; ☉ noon-3pm & 7-10.30pm) Sleek, stylish new restaurant that marries contemporary design with a few traditional artefacts (prayer wheels line one wall) and provides a beautiful setting for the cuisine of Myanmar. The menu is well priced, intricate and ambitious with inventive salads (try the tea leaf), curries and soups: oh no khow suey is a glorious coconut-enriched noodle broth. No alcohol is served.

Khyber

MUGHLAI, INDIAN $$$

(Map p740; ☎ 40396666; 145 MG Rd; mains ₹380-800; ☉ 12.30-4pm & 7.30-11.30pm) The much-acclaimed Khyber has a Northwest Frontier-themed design that incorporates murals featuring turbaned Mughal royalty, lots of exposed brickwork and oil lanterns – just the sort of place an Afghan warlord might feel at home. The meat-centric menu features gloriously tender kebabs, rich curries and lots of tandoori favourites roasted in Khyber's famous red masala sauce. Garlic or butter naan bread (₹95) is the perfect accompaniment.

Trishna

SEAFOOD $$$

(Map p740; ☎ 22703214; www.trishna.co.in; Rope-walk Lane, Kala Ghoda; mains ₹320-1110; ☉ noon-3pm & 6.30pm-12.15am) Behind a modest entrance on a quiet Kala Ghoda lane is this often-lauded, intimate South Indian seafood restaurant. It's not a trendy place – the decor is old school, seating a little cramped and menu perhaps too long – but the cooking is superb, witness the Hyderabad fish tikka, jumbo prawns with green pepper sauce, and outstanding crab dishes.

Mahesh Lunch Home

SEAFOOD $$$

(Map p740; ☎ 22023965; www.maheshlunchhome.com; Cowasji Patel St; mains ₹280-1300; ☉ 11.30am-4pm & 7pm-midnight) A great place to try Mangalorean or Chinese-style seafood in Mumbai. It's renowned for its ladyfish, pomfret, lobster, crab (try this with butter garlic pepper sauce) and salt-and-pepper squid (₹425). There's also a Juhu branch.

✂ Kalbadevi to Mahalaxmi

New Kulfi Centre

ICE CREAM $

(Map p746; cnr Chowpatty Seaface & Sardar V Patel Rd; kulfi per 100gm ₹40-70; ☉ 10am-1am) Serves the best kulfi (Indian firm-textured ice cream) you'll have anywhere. Killer flavours include pistachio, malai (cream) and mango.

Cafe Noorani

NORTH INDIAN $$

(Map p746; Tardeo Rd, Haji Ali Circle; mains ₹80-300; ☉ 8am-11.30pm) Inexpensive, old-school eatery that's a requisite stop before or after visiting the Haji Ali mosque. Mughlai and Punjabi staples dominate, with kebabs char-grilled to perfection and great biryanis; try the chicken kadai (₹200).

✂ Western Suburbs

North Mumbai is home to the city's trendiest dining, centered on Bandra West and Juhu.

Hotel Ram Ashray

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Bhandarkar Rd, King's Circle, Matunga East; light meals ₹40-70; ☉ 5am-9.30pm) In the Tamil enclave of King's Circle, 80-year-old Ram Ashray is beloved by southern families for its spectacular dosas, idli (spongy, round, fermented rice cake) and uttapa (savoury rice pancake with toppings). Filter coffee is strong and flavoursome. The menu, written on a chalkboard, changes daily. It's just outside Matunga Rd train station's east exit.

★ Dakshinayan

SOUTH INDIAN $$

(Map p750; Anand Hotel, Gandhigram Rd, Juhu; light meals ₹90-170; ☉ 11am-3pm & 6-11pm, from 8am Sun) With rangoli on the walls, servers in lungis and sari-clad women lurching (chappals off under the table), Dakshinayan channels Tamil Nadu. There are delicately textured dosas (₹110 to ₹165), idli and ut-tapam, village-fresh chutneys and perhaps the best rasam (tomato soup with spices and tamarind) in Mumbai. Finish off with a South Indian filter coffee – served in a stainless-steel set.

Chilli-heads should order molagapudi idli (₹110), a dozen idli coated in 'gunpowder' (potent spices).

★Yoga House

CAFE $$

(Map p750; www.yogahouse.in; 53 Chimbal Rd, Bandra West; light meals ₹140-250; ☺ 8am-10pm; ☺) This haven of pastel shades, scatter cushions and greenery in Yoga House's seaside bungalow is the perfect retreat from Mumbai's mean streets. The menu is very creative and healthy – much of it raw vegan and all of it wholesome. Signature items include its famous salads (₹195 to ₹350), soups, 10-grain bread (₹130) and hash browns (with spinach, mozzarella and peppers).

Soul Fry

GOAN, SEAFOOD $$

(Map p750; ☑ 022-26046892; Silver Croft, Pali Mala Rd, Pali Hill; mains ₹140-390; ☺ noon-3pm & 7.30pm-midnight; ☺) Rightly famous for its terrific seafood, this lively, scruffy-yet-atmospheric Goan place by Pali market is just the place to escape Bandra's Bollywood set. Crab curry, tamarind prawns and Goan meat dishes such as chicken xacuti are authentic and loaded with coastal flavour. There's an air-conditioned interior and bench seating on the terrace. Be warned: Monday night is karaoke night.

Raaj Bhog

GUJARATI $$

(Map p750; 3rd Rd, Cosmos Commercial Center, Khar West; meals ₹180-300; ☺ 11am-3.30pm & 7-11pm) Modestly priced restaurants are not easy to find in this part of town so this new Gujarati place by Khar station is a welcome addition. The (unlimited) deluxe thali (₹280) is filling and varied; it's served with basmati rice and rotis.

Prithvi Cafe

CAFE $$

(Map p750; Juhu Church Rd, Juhu; light meals ₹70-165; ☺ 9am-11pm) A bohemian cafe on a large, shady terrace attached to the Prithvi Theatre that's something of a cultural hub of intellectuals, artists and theatre types. The snacky food – croissants, sandwiches, chaat (savoury snacks) and Punjabi standards – is OK, but it's the setting that's special.

★Peshawri

NORTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p750; ☑ 28303030; ITC Maratha, Sahar Rd, Andheri East; meals ₹1100-2700; ☺ 12.45-2.45pm & 7-11.45pm) Make this Northwest Frontier restaurant, outside the international airport, your first or last stop in Mumbai. The buttery dhal bukhara (a thick black dhal cooked for a day; ₹700) is perhaps the signature dish, but its kebabs are sublime: try the peshawri (chargrilled lamb marinated in yoghurt and spices).

Despite the five-star surrounds (and prices) you're encouraged to eat with your hands and the seating is low.

Culture Curry

SOUTH INDIAN, SEAFOOD $$$

(www.culturecurry.com; Kataria Rd, Matunga West; mains ₹260-500; ☺ noon-3.45pm & 7pm-12.30am) Exquisite dishes from all over the south, from Andhra and Coorg to Kerala, are the speciality here. Best for veggie and seafood dishes; the prawn hirva rassa (with green mango and coconut; ₹379) is a symphony of South Indian flavour. From Matunga Rd train station, it's about 750m west along Kataria Rd.

Salt Water Café

CAFE, FUSION $$$

(Map p750; www.saltwatercafe.in; 87 Chapel Rd, Bandra West; breakfasts ₹180-290, mains ₹410-650; ☺ 12.30-3.30pm & 7.30-11.50pm; ☺) A Bandra institution where filmi producers and expats socialise in the stylish air-conditioned dining room or buzzing terrace. Stick to the classic breakfasts, omelettes and sandwiches (₹350 to ₹410) as some of the zany fusion flavour combinations are perhaps too much of a culinary clash.

Eat Around the Corner

CAFE $$$

(Map p750; www.eataroundthecorner.in; cnr 24th & 30th Rds; light meals ₹250-400, mains ₹280-600; ☺ 7am-1am; ☺) Visually it's quite a concept, its minimalist interior replete with banquette and bench seating and a long, long display counter of tempting treats (falafel, soups, salads, cakes, pastries). Prices are high, not that the young, wealthy clientele seem bothered.

Drinking & Nightlife

Forget the capital, Mumbai is a city that really knows how to enjoy itself. Whatever your tittle and whatever your taste, you'll find it here – from dive bar to sky bar. Colaba is rich in unpretentious public joints (but also has some very classy places), while Bandra and Juhu are home turf for the filmi and model set. Some of the most intriguing new places are opening in midtown areas such as Lower Parel.

Wednesday and Thursday are big nights at some clubs, as well as the traditional Friday and Saturday; there's usually a cover charge. Dress codes apply, so don't rock up in shorts and sandals. The trend in Mumbai is towards resto-lounges as opposed to full-on nightclubs. You're also technically supposed to have a license to drink in Maharashtra; some bars require you to buy a temporary one, for a nominal fee.

Colaba

★ Harbour Bar

BAR

(Map p738; Taj Mahal Palace, Mumbai, Apollo Bunder; ☎11am-11.45pm) With unmatched views of the Gateway of India and harbour, this timeless bar inside the Taj is an essential visit. Drinks aren't uber-expensive (₹395/800 for a beer/cocktail) given the surrounds and the fact they come with very generous portions of nibbles (including jumbo cashews).

★ Colaba Social

BAR

(Map p738; www.socialoffline.in; ground fl, Glen Rose Bldg, BK Boman Behram Marg, Apollo Bunder; ☎9am-1.30am; 📶) The Social opened with bang in late 2014, thanks to its stellar cocktail list (most are just ₹300 or so; try the Longest Island Ice Tea) and fab Colaba location. During the day it's a social-cum-workspace for laptop-toting, brunching creative types, but by 6pm the place is crammed with a raucous young crowd. Snacks (₹120 to ₹380) and espresso coffee are available.

Also hosts DJ and live-music events, art and photography exhibits and stand-up comedy acts.

Woodside Inn

PUB

(Map p738; Wodehouse Rd, Regal Circle; ☎10am-1am) As close as you'll get to a London pub in Mumbai, this cosy place has a gregarious vibe and serves Gateway craft beers on draught (₹300); try the wheat beer. There's comfort food (mains ₹300 to ₹450) and a great daily happy hour (4pm to 8pm).

Cafe Mondegar

PUB

(Map p738; Metro House, 5A Shahid Bhagat Singh Rd; ☎7.30pm-12.30am) Old-school bar that draws a mix of foreigners and locals who all cosy up together in the small space, bonding over the jukebox, which is cranked up to enliven the crowd.

Busaba

LOUNGE

QUEER MUMBAI

Mumbai's LGBTQ scene is still quite underground, especially for women, but it's gaining momentum. No dedicated LGBTQ bars/clubs have opened yet, but gay-friendly 'safe house' venues often host private gay parties (announced on Gay Bombay).

Humsafar Trust (Map p750; ☎022-26673800; www.humsafar.org; 3rd fl, Manthan Plaza Nehru Rd, Vakola, Santa Cruz East) Runs tons of programs and workshops; one of its support groups organises the monthly gathering 'Sunday High'. It's also closely connected to the erratically published but pioneering magazine Bombay Dost (www.bombaydost.co.in).

Galaxy (www.gaylaxymag.com) India's best gay e-zine; well worth consulting and has lots of Mumbai content.

Gay Bombay (www.gaybombay.org) A great place to start, with event listings including meet-ups in Bandra, GB-hosted bar and film nights, hiking trips and other info.

Kashish Mumbai International Queer Film Festival (www.mumbaiqueerfest.com) Excellent annual May event with a mix of Indian and foreign films; in 2014, 154 films from 31 countries were featured.

LABIA (Lesbian & Bisexuals in Action; labia_india@yahoo.com) Lesbian and bi support group based in Mumbai; provides a counselling service for women.

Queer Azaadi Mumbai (www.queerazaadi.wordpress.com) Organises Mumbai's Pride Parade, which is usually held in early February.

Queer Ink (www.queer-ink.com) Online publisher with excellent books, DVDs and merchandise. Also hosts a monthly arts event with speakers, workshops, poetry, comedy, music and a marketplace.

porary Buddha art give this restaurant-bar a loungey vibe. Cocktails are pricey (from ₹450) but potent and a DJ plays house on weekends. The upstairs restaurant (mains from ₹480) serves pan-Asian; its back room feels like a posh treehouse. Reserve ahead for dinner.

Leopold Cafe

BAR

(Map p738; www.leopoldcafe.com; cnr Colaba Causeway & Nawroji F Rd; ☎7.30am-12.30am) Love it or hate it, most tourists end up at this clichéd Mumbai travellers' institution at one time or another. Around since 1871, Leopold's has wobbly ceiling fans, crap service and a rambunctious atmosphere conducive to swapping tales with strangers. There's also food and a cheesy DJ upstairs on weekend nights.

Wink

NIGHTCLUB

(Vivanta by Taj, 90 Cuffe Pde; ☎6pm-1am) Saturday and Sunday are thumping here, but it's a classy place most nights with its sophisticated decor (low beige sofas, intricately carved screens), long whiskey list and famous Winkinis.

Fort Area & Churchgate

Dome

LOUNGE

(Map p740; Hotel InterContinental, 135 Marine Dr, Churchgate; ☎5.30pm-1.30am; ☎) This white-on-white rooftop lounge has awesome views of Mumbai's crescent beach from its 8th-floor vantage. Cocktails (₹850 to ₹1200) beckon the hip young things of Mumbai each night. Indulge yourself with a Ki Garden (vodka, elderberry and cloudy apple juice) or nurse a Kingfisher (₹375).

Liv

NIGHTCLUB

(Map p740; 1st fl, 145 MG Rd, Kala Ghoda; cover per couple ₹3000; ☎10pm-1.30am Wed-Sat) Exclusive new Kala Ghoda club that draws an up-for-it crowd of SoBo (South Bombay) pretty young things with its out-there LED lighting and intimate feel. Musically, Wednesday is hip hop, on Friday it's Bollywood Boogie, while on Saturday EDM DJs let rip.

Kalbadevi to Mahalaxmi

Haji Ali Juice Centre

JUICE BAR

trance to Haji Ali mosque, it's a great place to cool off after a visit.

Shiro

LOUNGE, NIGHTCLUB

(☎66511201; www.shiro.co.in; Bombay Dyeing Mills Compound, Worli; ☎7.30pm-1.30am) Visually this place is stunning, with water pouring from the hands of a towering Japanese goddess into lotus ponds, which reflect shimmering light on the walls. It's totally over the top, but the drinks (as well as the Asian-fusion dishes) are excellent. By 10.30pm or so it morphs into more of a club, with DJs spinning some mean salsa (Wednesday), disco (Friday) and house (Saturday). It's about 3km north of the Mahalaxmi Racecourse.

Ghetto

BAR

(Map p746; ☎23538418; 30 Bhulabhai Desai Marg, opp Tirupathi Apt; ☎7pm-1am) A grungy, graffiti-covered hang-out blaring classic and contemporary rock (Red Hot Chili Peppers, Rolling Stones) to a dedicated set of regulars. You can shoot pool here too.

Western Suburbs

★ Bonobo

BAR

(Map p750; www.facebook.com/BonoboBandra; Kenilworth Mall, 33rd Rd, Bandra West, off Linking Rd; ☎6pm-1am; ☎) The scenesters' first choice in Bandra, this bar champions underground and alternative music. DJs spin drum 'n' bass and electronica, big beats and funk tech-house, and musicians play folk and blues. There's a great rooftop terrace.

★ Aer

LOUNGE

(Four Seasons Hotel, 34th fl, 114 Dr E Moses Rd, Worli; cover Fri & Sat after 8pm ₹2500; ☎5.30pm-midnight; ☎) Boasting astounding sea, sunset and city views, Aer is Mumbai's premier sky bar. Drink prices are steep, but that's kind of the point: cocktails cost around ₹900, beers start at ₹350 and happy hour is 5.30pm to 8pm. A DJ spins house and lounge tunes nightly from 9pm.

Toto's Garage

BAR

(Map p750; ☎26005494; 30th Rd, Bandra West; ☎6pm-1am) Highly sociable, down-to-earth local dive done up in a car mechanic theme where you can go in your dirty clothes, drink draught beer (₹200 a glass) and listen to classic rock. Check out the upended VW Beetle above the bar. Always busy and has a good mix of guys and gals.

Daily BAR
(Map p750; SV Rd, Bandra; ☺6pm-1.30am; ☎) Hip and happening new Bandra bar that take its moniker from the good news stories the owners have collated (and suspended on pages from the ceiling). Attracts a lively crowd with decadent cocktails, sangria pitchers, snappy service and a cool indoor/outdoor design. Also hosts films and live music.

Trilogy NIGHTCLUB
(Map p750; www.trilogy.in; Hotel Sea Princess, Juhu Tara Rd, Juhu; cover per couple after 11pm ₹2000; ☺10.30pm-3am Wed-Sat) This glam, glitzy Juhu club, like its clientele, is gorgeous, with two dance floors spectacularly illuminated by LED cube lights that are synced with the epic sound system. It's hip hop on Wednesday, house on Friday and EDM on Saturday.

Hoppipola BAR
(Map p750; 757 Ramee Guestline, MD Ali Quereshi Chowk, off SV Rd; ☺noon-1am; ☎) With its wacky design (including squadrons of toy planes suspended from the roof) and abundant board games, Hoppipola doesn't take itself too seriously, with decor that's more playschool than lounge bar. Get stuck into some test-tube shots or a tower of beer and it's perfect for a session of Jenga drinking games. Bar grub (from ₹200) is tasty too.

Olive Bar & Kitchen BAR
(Map p750; ☎26058228; www.olivebarandkitchen.com; 14 Union Park, Khar West; ☺7.30pm-1am daily, plus noon-3.30pm Sat & Sun; ☎) The watering hole of choice for Bandra's filmi elite and aspiring starlets, Olive is a Mediterranean-style bar-restaurant whose whitewashed walls, candle-lit terraces and rooms evoke Ibiza and Mykonos. It's the perfect setting for inspired Greek and Italian food (mains ₹600 to ₹1100) and vibing DJ sounds. Thursdays and weekends are packed. There's a second branch (Map p746; ☎40859595; Gate No 8, Mahalaxmi Racecourse; ☺noon-3.30pm & 7.30pm-1.30am) in Mahalaxmi.

Big Nasty BAR
(Map p750; 1st fl, 12 Union Park, Khar West, above Shatranj Napoli; ☺7pm-12.30am) The decor may be industrial, but the Nasty is fun and unpretentious. It's best known for its cheap(ish) drinks – beers from ₹220, wine from ₹350 and cocktails starting at ₹400.

Elbo Room PUB
(Map p750; St Theresa Rd, Khar West, off 33rd Rd; ☺11am-1am) This publike place has a very social vibe and an Italian-Indian menu that's best enjoyed on the plant-filled terrace.

★ Entertainment

Mumbai has an exciting live music scene, some terrific theatres, an emerging network of comedy clubs and, of course, cinemas and sporting action.

Consult Mumbai Boss (www.mumbai-boss.com), Time Out Mumbai (www.timeoutmumbai.net) and www.nh7.in for live-music listings. Unfortunately, Hindi films aren't shown with English subtitles. The cinemas we've listed all show English-language movies, along with some Bollywood numbers.

Mumbai has some great arts festivals, the major ones include the excellent Mumbai Film Festival (p737) in October, May's Kashish-Mumbai International Queer Film Festival (www.mumbaiqueerfest.com), Prithvi Theatre's November festival for excellent drama and music, and Mumbai Sanskruti (p737), which sees two days of Hindustani classical music. The National Centre for the Performing Arts hosts numerous cultural festivals throughout the year.

★ Bluefrog LIVE MUSIC
(☎61586158; www.bluefrog.co.in; D/2 Mathuradas Mills Compound, Senapati Bapat Marg, Lower Parel; admission ₹300-1200; ☺6.30pm-1.30am Tue-Sat, from 11.30am Sun) Mumbai cultural mecca, a world-class venue for concerts (everything from indie to Mexican), stand-up comedy and lots of DJ-driven clubby nights (hip hop, house and techno). There's also a restaurant with space-age pod seating (book ahead for dinner) in the intimate main room. Happy hour is 6.30pm to 9pm.

National Centre for the Performing Arts THEATRE, LIVE MUSIC
(NCPA; Map p740; ☎66223737, box office 22824567; www.ncpamumbai.com; Marine Dr & Sri V Saha Rd, Nariman Point; tickets ₹200-800; ☺box office 9am-7pm) This vast cultural centre is the hub of Mumbai's high-brow music, theatre and dance scene. In any given week, it might host experimental plays, poetry readings, photography exhibitions, a jazz band from Chicago or Indian classical music. Many performances are free. The box office (Map p740) is at the end of NCPA Marg.

Prithvi Theatre THEATRE
(Map p750; ☎26149546; www.prithvitheatre.org; Juhu Church Rd, Juhu; tickets ₹80-300) A Juhu institution that's a great place to see both

BOLLYWOOD DREAMS

Mumbai is the glittering epicentre of India's gargantuan Hindi-language film industry. From silent beginnings, with a cast of all-male actors (some in drag) in the 1913 epic Raja Harishchandra, and the first talkie, Lama Ara (1931), it now churns out more than 1000 films a year – more than Hollywood. Not surprising considering it has a captive audience of one-sixth of the world's population.

Every part of India has its regional film industry, but Bollywood continues to entrance the nation with its escapist formula in which all-singing, all-dancing lovers fight and conquer the forces keeping them apart. These days, Hollywood-inspired thrillers and action extravaganzas vie for moviegoers' attention alongside the more family-oriented saccharine formulas.

Bollywood stars can attain near godlike status in India and star-spotting is a favourite pastime in Mumbai's posher establishments. You can also see the stars' homes as well as a film/TV studio with Bollywood Tours (www.bollywoodtours.in; 8hr tour per person ₹6000), but you're not guaranteed to see a dance number and you may spend much of it in traffic.

Extra, Extra!

Studios sometimes want Westerners as extras to add a whiff of international flair (or provocative dress, which locals often won't wear) to a film.

If you're game, just hang around Colaba (especially the Salvation Army hostel) where studio scouts, recruiting for the following day's shooting, will find you. A day's work, which can be up to 16 hours, pays ₹500. You'll get lunch, snacks and (usually) transport. The day can be long and hot with loads of standing around the set; not everyone has a positive experience. Complaints range from lack of food and water to dangerous situations and intimidation when extras don't comply with the director's orders. Others describe the behind-the-scenes peek as a fascinating experience. Before agreeing to anything, always ask for the scout's identification and go with your gut.

Hindi- and English-language theatre or an arthouse film, and there's a cafe (p763) for drinks. Its excellent international theatre festival in November showcases contemporary Indian theatre and includes international productions.

Canvas Laugh

☎ 022-43485000; www.canvaslaughclub.com; 3rd fl, Palladium Mall, Phoenix Mills, Lower Parel; tickets ₹200-750) Popular comedy club that hosts around 50 shows per month, with twice-nightly programs on weekends. ## 🛍 Shopping

Mumbai is India's great marketplace, with some of the best shopping in the country.

Be sure to spend a day at the markets north of CST for the classic Mumbai shopping experience. In Fort, booksellers, with surprisingly good wares (not all pirated), set up shop daily on the sidewalks around Flora Fountain. Snap up a bargain backpacking wardrobe at Fashion Street (MG Rd), the strip of stalls lining MG Rd between Cross and Azad Maidans. Hone your bargaining skills. Kemp's Corner has many good shops for designer threads.

🛍 Colaba

BAZAAR DISTRICT

Mumbai's main market district is one of Asia's most fascinating, an incredibly dense combination of humanity and commerce that's a total assault on the senses. If you've just got off a plane from the West, or a taxi from Bandra – hold on tight. This working-class district stretches north of Crawford Market up as far as Chor Bazaar, a 2.5km walk away. Such are the crowds (and narrowness of the lanes), allow yourself two to three hours to explore it thoroughly.

You can buy just about anything here, but as the stores and stalls are very much geared to local tastes, most of the fun is simply taking in the street life and investigating the souklike lanes rather than buying souvenirs. The markets merge into each other in an amoeba-like mass, but there are some key landmarks so you can orientate yourself.

Crawford Market (Mahatma Phule Market; Map p746; cnr DN & Lokmanya Tilak Rds) Crawford Market is the largest in Mumbai, and contains the last whiff of British Bombay before the tumult of the central bazaars begins. Bas-reliefs by Rudyard Kipling's father, Lockwood Kipling, adorn the Norman Gothic exterior. Fruit and vegetables, meat and fish are mainly traded, but it's also an excellent place to stock up on spices. If you're lucky to be here during alphonso mango season (May to June) be sure to indulge.

Mangaldas Market (Map p746) Mangaldas Market, traditionally home to traders from Gujarat, is a minitown, complete with lanes of fabrics. Even if you're not the type to have your clothes tailored, drop by DD Dupattawala (Map p746; Shop No 217, 4th Lane, Mangaldas Market; ☎9.30am-6.30pm) for pretty scarves and dupattas at fixed prices. Zaveri Bazaar (Map p746) for jewellery and Bhuleshwar Market (Map p746; cnr Sheikh Menon St & M Devi Marg) for fruit and veg are just north of here. Just a few metres further along Sheikh Menon Rd from Bhuleshwar is a Jain pigeon-feeding station, flower market and a religious market.

Chor Bazaar (Map p746) Chor Bazaar is known for its antiques, though nowadays much of it is reproductions; the main area of activity is Mutton St, where shops specialise in 'antiques' and miscellaneous junk. Dhabu St, to the east, is lined with fine leather goods.

Royal Music Collection MUSIC STORE
(Map p740; 192 Kitab Mahal, Dr Dadabhai Naoroji Rd, Fort; ☎11am-9pm Mon-Sat) Brilliant street stall selling vintage vinyl (from ₹250).

Fabindia CLOTHING, HOMEWEARS
(Map p740; www.fabindia.com; Jeroo Bldg, 137 MG Rd, Kala Ghoda; ☎10am-8pm) Ethically sourced cotton and silk fashions and homewares in a modern-meets-traditional Indian shop.

Chetana Book Centre BOOKS
(Map p740; www.chetana.com; K Dubash Marg, Kala Ghoda; ☎10.30am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) This great spirituality bookstore has lots of books on Hinduism and a whole section on 'Afterlife/Death/Psychic'.

Standard Supply Co PHOTOGRAPHY
(Map p740; ☎22612468; Walchand Hirachand Marg, Fort; ☎10am-7pm Mon-Sat) Everything for digital and film photography.

Oxford Bookstore BOOKS

☎8am-10pm) Spacious store with a good selection of travel books and a tea bar (teas ₹35-80; ☎10am-10pm).

Kalbadevi to Mahalaxmi

Shrujan HANDICRAFTS
(Map p746; www.shrujan.org; Sagar Villa, Bhulabhai Desai Marg, Breach Candy, opp Navroze Apts; ☎10am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) Nonprofit that sells the intricately-embroidered clothing, bags, cushions covers and shawls of 3500 women in 114 villages in Kutch, Gujarat. There's also a (hard-to-find) Juhu branch (Map p750; Hatkesh Society, 6th North South Rd, JVPD Scheme; ☎10am-7.30pm Mon-Sat).

Mini Market/Bollywood Bazaar ANTIQUES, SOUVENIRS
(Map p746; ☎23472427; 33/31 Mutton St; ☎11am-8pm Sat-Thu) Sells vintage Bollywood posters and other movie ephemera.

BX Furtado & Sons MUSIC STORE
(Map p746; www.furtadosonline.com; Jer Mahal, Dhobi Talao; ☎10.30am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) The place in town for musical instruments: sitars, tablas, accordions and local and imported guitars.

Western Suburbs

Indian Hippy

ART

(Map p750; ☎8080822022; www.hippy.in; 17/C Shery Rajan Rd, Bandra West, off Carter Rd; portraits from ₹10,000; ☺by appointment) Because you need to have your portrait hand-painted in the style of a vintage Bollywood poster. Bring (or email) a photo. Also sells LP clocks, vintage film posters and all manner of (frankly bizarre) Bollywood-themed products.

Play Clan

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Mumbai's Chhatrapati Shivaji International Airport (BOM; Map p750; ☎ 66851010; www.csia.in), about 30km from the city centre, was nearing the end of a $2 billion modernisation program at the time of research. The impressive international terminal is complete, while its new domestic terminal should be fully operational some time in 2015, creating a fully integrated airport.

At the time of writing, the airport still comprised of one international terminal and a separate domestic terminal (also known locally as Santa Cruz airport) 5km away. A free shuttle bus runs between the two terminals every half-hour (journey time 15 minutes) for ticket-holders. Both terminals have ATMs, foreign-exchange counters and tourist-information booths.

Travel agencies and airlines' websites are usually best for booking flights. The following airlines have offices in town and/or at the airport:

Air India (Map p740; ☎ 27580777, airport 28318666; www.airindia.com; Air India Bldg, cnr Marine Dr & Madame Cama Rd, Nariman Point; ☎ 9.30am-6.30pm Mon-Fri, to 5.15pm Sat & Sun) International and domestic routes.

Jet Airways (Map p740; ☎ 022-39893333; www.jetairways.com; B1, Amarchand Mansion, Madam Cama Rd, Colaba; ☎ 9am-6pm Mon-Sat) India's second-largest domestic carrier.

Major nonstop domestic flights from Mumbai include the following:

DESTINATION	FARE (₹)	DURATION (HR)
Bengaluru	3700	1½
Chennai	5800	2
Delhi	5900	2
Goa	3300	1
Hyderabad	4200	1½
Jaipur	4300	1¾
Kochi	5700	2
Kolkata	6100	2¾
Nagpur	4200	1½

BUS

Numerous private operators and state governments run long-distance buses to and from Mumbai.

Long-distance government-run buses depart from the Mumbai Central bus terminal (Map

i AIRPORT ARRIVAL

Many international flights arrive after midnight. Beat the daytime traffic by heading straight to your hotel, and carry detailed landmark directions: many airport taxi drivers don't speak English and may not use official street names.

p746; ☎ enquiry 23024075; Jehangir Boman Behram Rd) right by Mumbai Central train station. They're cheaper and more frequent than private services, but standards are usually lower. The MSRTC (Maharashtra State Road Transport Corporation; ☎ 1800221250; www.msrtc.gov.in) website theoretically has schedules and is supposed to permit online booking, though in practice it's next to useless.

Private buses are usually more comfortable and simpler to book (if a bit more costly). Most depart from Dr Anadrao Nair Rd near Mumbai Central train station, but many buses to southern destinations depart from Paltan Rd, near Crawford Market. Check departure times and prices with Citizen Travels (Map p746; ☎ 23459695; www.citizenbus.com; D Block, Sitaram Bldg, Paltan Rd) or National CTC (Map p746; ☎ 23015652; Dr Anadrao Nair Rd). Fares to popular destinations (such as Goa) are up to 75% higher during holiday periods.

Private buses to Goa vary in price from ₹350 (bad choice) to ₹2600. Many leave from way out in the suburbs but Chandni Travels (Map p740; ☎ 22713901, 22676840) has six daily from in front of Azad Maidan and Paolo Travel (Map p740; ☎ 0832-6637777; www.paulotravels.com), with an 8pm daily departure from Fashion St, are convenient to the centre.

TRAIN

Three train systems operate out of Mumbai, but the most important services for travellers are Central Railways and Western Railways. Tickets for either system can be bought from any station that has computerised ticketing.

Central Railways (☎ 139), handling services to the east, south, plus a few trains to the north, operates from CST (also known as 'VT'). Foreign-tourist-quota tickets and Indrail passes can be bought at Counter 52.

Some Central Railways trains depart from Dadar (D), a few stations north of CST, or Lokmanya Tilak (LTT), 16km north of CST.

Western Railways (☎ 139) has services to the north from Mumbai Central train station, usually called Bombay Central (BCT). The reservation centre (Map p740; ☎ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun), opposite Churchgate station, has foreign-tourist-quota tickets.

i Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORTS

International

Prepaid Taxi Taxis with set fares cost ₹700/800 (non-AC/AC) to Colaba and Fort and ₹450/550 to Bandra. The journey to Colaba takes about an hour at night (via the Sealink) and 1½ to two hours during the day.

Autorickshaws Available but they only go as far south as Bandra (daytime/night around ₹180/240).

Train If you arrive during the day (but not during 'rush hour' – 6am to 11am) and are not weighed down with luggage, consider the train: take an autorickshaw (around ₹60) to Andheri train station and then the Churchgate or CST train (₹9, 45 minutes).

Taxi From South Mumbai to the international airport should be around ₹500. Allow two hours for the trip if you travel between 4pm and 8pm.

Domestic

There's a prepaid taxi counter in the arrivals hall. A non-AC/AC taxi costs ₹600/700 to Colaba or Fort and ₹370/480 to Bandra.

Alternatively, if it's not rush hour, catch an autorickshaw (around ₹45) to Vile Parle station, where you can get a train to Churchgate (₹8, 45 minutes).

BOAT

PNP (☎ 22885220) and Maldar Catamarans (☎ 22829695) run regular ferries to Mandwa (one way ₹125 to ₹155), useful for access to Murud-Janjira and other parts of the Konkan Coast, avoiding the long bus trip out of Mumbai. Buy tickets (Map p738) near the Gateway of India.

BUS

Few travellers bother with city buses but BEST (www.bestundertaking.com) has a useful search facility for hardcore shoestringers and masochists – you'll also need to read the buses'

Devanagiri numerals and beware of pickpockets. Fares start at ₹5.

CAR

Cars with driver can be hired for moderate rates. Air-conditioned cars start at ₹1550/1800 for half/full-day rental of around 80km.

Clear Car Rental (☎ 0888-8855220; www.clearcarrental.com)

Metro

The first section of Line 1, Mumbai's new metro (www.mumbaimetroone.com) opened in 2014. Initially it only connected seven stations in the far northern suburbs, well away from anywhere of interest to visitors. However Line 1 is scheduled to be extended south as far as Jacob Circle (5km north of Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus) sometime in 2015, bringing it past Lower Parel.

Single fares cost between ₹10 and ₹20, with monthly Trip Passes (from ₹600) also available. Access to stations is by escalator, carriages are air-conditioned, and there are seats reserved for women and the disabled. Line 3 (a 33km underground line connecting Cuffe Pde south of Colaba, all the main railway terminals, Bandra and the airport) will be the next line to be constructed. It's been approved but won't open for many years.

MOTORCYCLE

Allibhai Premji Tyrewalla (Map p746; ☎ 23099313, 23099417; www.premjis.com; 205 Dr D Bhadkamkar (Lamington) Rd; ☎ 10am-7pm Mon-Sat) Sells new and used motorcycles with a guaranteed buy-back option. Long-term rental schemes (two months or more) start at around ₹25,000, with a buy-back price of around 60% after three months.

TAXI & AUTORICKSHAW

Mumbai's black-and-yellow taxis are inexpensive and the most convenient way to get around southern Mumbai; drivers almost always use the meter without prompting. The minimum fare is ₹21 (for up to 1.6km), a 5km trip costs about ₹50.

TRAIN

Mumbai's suburban train network is one of the world's busiest; forget travelling during rush hours. Trains run from 4am to 1am and there are three main lines:

Western Line The most useful; operates out of Churchgate north to Charni Rd (for Girgaum Chowpatty), Mumbai Central, Mahalaxmi (for the Dhobi Ghat), Bandra, Vile Parle (for the domestic airport), Andheri (for the international airport) and Borivali (for Sanjay Gandhi National Park), among others.

Central Line Runs from CST to Byculla (for Veermata Jijabai Bhonsle Udyan, formerly Victoria Gardens), Dadar and as far as Neral (for Matheran).

From Churchgate, 2nd-/1st-class fares are ₹5/48 to Mumbai Central, ₹8/85 to Vile Parle, and ₹9/116 to Borivali.

To avoid the queues, buy a coupon book (₹50), good for use on either train line, then 'validate' the coupons at the machines before boarding.

'Tourist tickets' permit unlimited travel in 2nd/1st class for one (₹75/225), three (₹115/415) or five (₹135/485) days.

Watch your valuables, and gals, stick to the ladies-only carriages except late at night, when it's more important to avoid empty cars.

Why Go?

India's third-largest state, Maharashtra showcases many of India's iconic attractions. There are lazy, palm-fringed beaches, lofty, cool-green mountains, World Heritage Sites and bustling cosmopolitan cities. In the far east of the state are some of the nation's most impressive national parks, including the Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve.

Inland lie the extraordinary cave temples of Ellora and Ajanta, undoubtedly Maharashtra's greatest monuments, hewn by hand from solid rock. Matheran, a colonial-era hill station served by a toy train, has a certain allure. Pilgrims and inquisitive souls are drawn to cosmopolitan Pune, a city famous for its 'sex guru' and alternative spiritualism. And westwards, the romantic Konkan Coast fringing the Arabian Sea is lined with spectacular, crumbling forts and sandy beaches, some of the best around the pretty resort of Malvan, which is fast becoming one of India's premier diving centres.

When to Go

Nasik

Jan It's party time at Nasik's wineries, marked by grape harvesting and crushing galas.

Sep The frenzied, energetic Ganesh Chaturthi celebrations reach fever pitch.

Dec Clear skies, mild temperatures; the secluded beaches of Murud, Ganpatipule and Tarkali are lovely.

History

Maharashtra was given its political and ethnic identity by Maratha leader Chhatrapati Shivaji (1627–80), who lorded over the Deccan plateau and much of western India from his stronghold at Raigad. Still highly respected today, Shivaji is credited for instilling a strong, independent spirit among the region's people, as well as establishing Maharashtra as a dominant player in the power relations of medieval India.

From the early 18th century, the state was under the administration of a succession of ministers called the Peshwas, who ruled until 1819, ceding thereafter to the British. After Independence in 1947, western Maharashtra and Gujarat were joined to form Bombay state. But it was back to the future in 1960, when modern Maharashtra was formed with the exclusion of Gujarati-speaking areas and with Mumbai (Bombay) as its capital.

Since then the state has forged ahead to become one of the nation's most prosperous, with one of India's largest industrial sectors, partly thanks to its technology parks and software exports.

National Parks & Reserves

Maharashtra has over 30 wildlife sanctuaries, including six tiger reserves: Tadoba-Andhari, Pench and Navagaon are all grouped around the inland city of Nagpur. In the far south of the state the Malvan National Marine Park protects coral reefs, islets and coastal mangroves.

Getting There & Away

Mumbai is Maharashtra's main transport hub, though Pune, Aurangabad and Nagpur also have busy airports. Jalgaon station is an important gateway for Ajanta. Goa airport is handily placed for the far southern resort of Malvan.

Getting Around

Because the state is so large, internal flights (eg Pune to Nagpur) will really speed up your explorations.

The Maharashtra State Road Transport Corporation (MSRTC; www.msrtc.gov.in) runs a comprehensive bus network spanning all major towns and many remote places. Private operators also have comfortable Volvo and Mercedes Benz services between major cities.

Renting a car and driver to explore the Konkan coastline is a good option as public transport is poor on this stretch: allow four or five days to travel between Mumbai and Goa.

NORTHERN MAHARASHTRA

Nasik

📍 0253 / POP 1.57 MILLION / ELEV 565M

Located on the banks of the holy Godavari River, Nasik (or Nashik) gets its name from the episode in the Ramayana where Lakshmana, Rama's brother, hacked off the nasika (nose) of Ravana's sister. Today this large provincial city's old quarter has some intriguing temples that reference the Hindu epic and some huge bathing ghats. Every 12 years, Nasik plays host to the grand Kumbh Mela, the largest religious gathering on Earth (the last one was in 2015, the next one in 2027).

As India's best wines are produced locally, an afternoon touring the vineyards (p779) is another good reason to drop by.

Sights

Ramkund

GHAT

This bathing ghat in the heart of Nasik's old quarter sees hundreds of Hindu pilgrims arriving daily to bathe, pray and – because the waters provide moksha (liberation of the soul) – to immerse the ashes of departed friends and family. It's a shame litter and a scruffy adjacent market taint the scene.

Kala Rama Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ 6am–10pm) The city's holiest shrine dates back to 1794 and contains unusual black-stone representations of Rama, Sita and Lakshmana. Legend has it that it occupies the site where Lakshmana sliced off Surpanakha's nose.

SLEEPING PRICE RANGES

In Maharashtra, hotel rooms above ₹1000 attract a 7.42% Service Tax, plus a 'Luxury Tax' of 4% (for tariffs of ₹750 to ₹1200) or 10% (tariffs over ₹1200). Many hotels will negotiate one or both of the taxes away in quiet times.

The following price ranges refer to a double room with bathroom and are inclusive of tax:

🇺🇸 less than ₹2000

🇺🇸🇺🇸🇺🇸 more than ₹5000

Gumpha Panchavati

There are four daily departures to Aurangabad; try the Tapovan Express (2nd class/chair ₹85/320, 3½ hours, 9.50am). An autorickshaw to the station costs about ₹125.

Around Nasik

Bhandardara

The picturesque village of Bhandardara is nestled deep in the folds of the Sahyadris, about 70km from Nasik. A little-visited place surrounded by craggy mountains, it is one of Maharashtra's best escapes from the bustle of urban India.

Most of Bhandardara's habitation is thrown around Arthur Lake, a horse-shoe-shaped reservoir fed by the waters of the Pravara River. The lake is barraged on one side by the imposing Wilson Dam, a colonial-era structure dating back to 1910. If you like walking, consider a hike to the summit of Mt Kalsubai, which at 1646m was once used as an observation point by the Marathas. Alternatively, you could hike to the ruins of the Ratangad Fort, another of Shivaji's erstwhile strongholds, which has wonderful views of the surrounding ranges.

The charming Anandvan Resort (☎9920311221; www.anandvanresorts.com; d from ₹7350; 🍷), a hilltop hotel with a choice of comfy cottages and villas overlooking Arthur Lake, allows you to sleep in style, while the MTDC Holiday Resort (☎0242-4257032; budget/deluxe r from ₹1100/4000; 🍷), further down the hill, has both renovated comfortable rooms and reasonable budget options.

Bhandardara can be accessed by taking a local bus from Nasik's Mahamarg bus stand

GRAPES OF NASIK

From wimpy raisins to full-bodied wines, the grapes of Nasik have come a long way. The surrounding region had been producing table grapes since ancient times. However, it was only in the early 1990s that a couple of entrepreneurs realised that Nasik, with its fertile soils and temperate climate, boasted good conditions for wine cultivation. In 1997 industry pioneer Sula Vineyards fearlessly invested in a crop of sauvignon blanc and chenin blanc, and the first batch of domestic wines hit the shelves in 2000. Nasik hasn't looked back.

These days, the wine list in most of Nasik's wineries has stretched to include shiraz, merlot, cabernet, semillon and zinfandel as well as a few sparkling wines, and most of these drops can be sampled first-hand by visiting one of the estates.

During harvest season (January to March), some wineries also organise grape-crushing festivals, marked by unbridled revelry. Events are usually advertised on the wineries' websites.

Sula Vineyards (☎09970090010; www.sulawines.com; Gangapur-Savargaon Rd, Govardhan; ☎11am-10pm) Sula Vineyards, 15km west of Nasik, offers a slick, professional tour (around 45 minutes) of its impressive estate and high-tech facilities. This is rounded off with a wine-tasting session (four/six wines ₹150/250) that features its best drops and offers excellent tasting tips. The cafe here has commanding views of the countryside (though only snacks are sold and it does get very busy); for meals the neighbouring French restaurant Soleil by La Plage is recommended.

York Winery (☎0253-2230700; www.yorkwinery.com; Gangapur-Savargaon Rd, Gangavarhe; ☎noon-10pm, tours 12.30-6pm) A further kilometre from Sula Vineyards, York Winery offers tours and wine-tasting sessions (₹100) in a top-floor room that has scenic views of the lake and surrounding hills. Five reds, a rosé and chenin blanc are produced. There's a large garden where continental snacks (olives, cheeses) are offered.

to Ghoti (₹38, one hour), from where an auto-rickshaw ride costs ₹90. A taxi from Nasik can also drop you at your resort for about ₹1500.

Igatpuri

Heard of vipassana, haven't you? Well head to Igatpuri to see where (and how) it all happens. Located about 44km south of Nasik, this village is home to the headquarters of the world's largest vipassana meditation institution, the Vipassana International Academy (☎ 02553-244076; www.dhamma.org; donations accepted), which institutionalises this strict form of meditation first taught by Gautama Buddha in the 6th century BC and reintroduced to India by teacher SN Goenka in the 1960s. Ten-day residential courses (advance bookings compulsory) are held throughout the year, though teachers warn that it requires rigorous discipline. Basic accommodation, food and meditation instruction are provided free of charge, but donations upon completion are accepted. Consult the academy website for detailed transport information; options from Nasik include share taxi and state bus links (both leave from the New Central bus stand).

Trimbak

Trimbakeshwar Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(entrance ₹200 to avoid queue; ☀ 5.30am-9pm) The moody Trimbakeshwar Temple stands in the centre of Trimbak, 33km west of Nasik. It's one of India's most sacred temples, containing a jiyoti linga, one of the 12 most important shrines to Shiva. Only Hindus are allowed in, but non-Hindus can peek into the courtyard. Nearby, the waters of the Godavari River flow into the Gangadwar bathing tank, where all are welcome to wash away their sins. Regular buses run from the Old Central bus stand in Nasik to Trimbak (₹30, 45 minutes).

Aurangabad

☎ 0240 / POP 1.28 MILLION / ELEV 515M

Aurangabad lay low through most of the tumultuous history of medieval India and only hit the spotlight when the last Mughal emperor, Aurangzeb, made the city his capital from 1653 to 1707. With the emperor's death came the city's rapid decline, but the brief period of glory saw the building of some fascinating monuments, including a Taj Mahal replica (Bibi-qa-Maqbara), and these continue to draw a steady trickle of visitors. Alongside other historic relics, such as a group of ancient Buddhist caves, these Mughal relics make Aurangabad a good choice for a weekend excursion from Mumbai. But the real reason for traipsing here is because the town is an excellent base for exploring the World Heritage Sites of Ellora and Ajanta.

Silk fabrics were once Aurangabad's chief revenue generator, and the town is still known across the world for its hand-woven Himroo and Paithani saris.

The train station, cheap hotels and restaurants are clumped together in the south of the town along Station Rd East and Station Rd West. The MSRTC bus stand is 1.5km to the north of the train station. Northeast of the bus stand is the buzzing old town, with its narrow streets and Muslim quarter.

★ Bibi-qa-Maqbara

MONUMENT

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ dawn-10pm) Built by Aurangzeb's son Azam Khan in 1679 as a mausoleum for his mother Rabia-ud-Daurani, Bibi-qa-Maqbara is widely known as the poor man's Taj. With its four minarets flanking a central onion-domed mausoleum, the white structure certainly does bear a striking resemblance to Agra's Taj Mahal. It is much less grand, however, and apart from having a few marble adornments, namely the plinth and dome, much of the structure is finished in lime mortar.

Apparently the prince conceived the entire mausoleum in white marble, but was

TOP YOGA & MEDITATION CENTRES

The Vipassana International Academy in Igatpuri has long been a destination for those wishing to put mind over matter through an austere form of Buddhist meditation. The boundaries of yoga, on the other hand, are constantly pushed at the Ramamani Iyengar Memorial Yoga Institute (p804) in Pune and the Kaivalyadhama Yoga Hospital (p799) in Lonavla. For a more lavish and indulgent form of spiritual engagement, there's the superluxurious Osho International Meditation Resort (p803) in Pune, where one can meditate in style, while flexing a few muscles in the unique game of zennis (Zen tennis).

thwarted by his frugal father who opposed his extravagant idea of draining state coffers for the purpose. However, despite the use of cheaper material and the obvious weathering, it's a sight far more impressive than the average gravestone.

The Bibi's formal gardens are a delight to explore, with the Deccan hills providing a scenic backdrop.

Aurangabad Caves

CAVES

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀️ dawn-dusk) Architecturally speaking, the Aurangabad Caves aren't a patch on Ellora or Ajanta, but they do throw some light on early Buddhist architecture and, above all, make for a quiet and peaceful outing. Carved out of the hillside in the 6th or 7th century AD, the 10 caves, comprising two groups 1km apart (retain your ticket for entry into both sets), are all Buddhist. Cave 7, with its sculptures of scantily clad lovers in suggestive positions, is a perennial favourite.

The caves are about 2km north of Bibi-qa-Maqbara. A return autorickshaw from the mausoleum shouldn't cost more than ₹180 including waiting time.

Panchakki

GARDENS

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/20; ☀️ 6.15am-9.15pm) The garden complex of Panchakki, literally meaning 'water wheel', takes its name from the ancient hydromill which, in its day, was considered a marvel of engineering. It's still in working condition but is today really only of minor interest (unless you're a hydro-engineer perhaps).

Baba Shah Muzaffar, a Sufi saint and spiritual guide to Aurangzeb, is buried here. His memorial garden, flanked by a series of fish-filled tanks, is at the rear of the complex.

Shivaji Museum

MUSEUM

(Dr Ambedkar Rd; admission ₹5; ☀️ 10.30am-6pm Fri-Wed) This simple museum is dedicated to the life of the Maratha hero Shivaji. Its collection includes a 500-year-old chain-mail suit and a copy of the Quran, handwritten by Aurangzeb.

👉 Tours

Classic Tours (☎️ 2337788; www.classictours.info; MTDC Holiday Resort, Station Rd East) and the Indian Tourism Development Corporation (ITDC; ☎️ 2331143; MTDC Holiday Resort, Station Rd East) both run daily bus tours to the Ajanta and Ellora Caves. Be aware that these are mass-market tours popular with domestic tourists and designed to cover as much ground as possible in a short period of time. The trip to Ajanta Caves costs ₹450 and the tour to Ellora Caves, ₹325; prices include a guide but don't cover admission fees. The Ellora tour also includes all the other major Aurangabad sites along with Daulatabad Fort and Aurangzeb's tomb in Khuldabad, which is a lot to swallow in a day. All tours start and end at the MTDC Holiday Resort.

Ashoka Tours & Travels

TOURS

(☎️ 2359102, 9890340816; www.touristaurangabad.com; Hotel Panchavati, Station Rd West; ☀️ 8am-8pm) The stand-out Aurangabad agency, with excellent city and regional tours and decent car hire at fair rates. Prices for an air-con car and up to four people are ₹2400 for Ellora and ₹1400 for Ajanta. Run by Ashok T Kadam, a knowledgeable former autorickshaw driver.

★ Hotel Panchavati

HOTEL $

(☎️ 2328755; www.hotelpanchavati.com; Station Rd West; s/d ₹1000/1130, with AC ₹1150/1250; 🍷🍷🍷) The best budget hotel in town, the Panchavati is run by ever-helpful, switched-on managers who understand travellers' needs. Rooms are compact but thoughtfully appointed, with comfortable beds that have paisley-style bedspreads and 24-hour hot water (and room service). There are two restaurants and a bar, and it's a great place to hook up with other traveller.

Also home to the ever-reliable Ashoka Tours & Travels, which offers trips to Ellora and Ajanta.

Hotel Oberoi

HOTEL $

(☎️ 2323841; www.hoteloberoi.in; Osmanpura Circle, Station Rd East; s/d ₹900/1000, with AC ₹1260/1380; 🍷🍷) Cheekily named, and nothing to do with the five-star chain, this renovated hotel is owned by the same people behind Hotel Panchavati so there's good service and helpful staff. The spacious rooms are modern with flat-screen TVs and comfy beds, and the attractive bathrooms are in good shape. Call for a free pick-up from the train or bus stations.

junkies with a 40m pool and one of the best gyms in the city. Its design is a little odd, with rooms around a covered courtyard but all are very spacious (the renovated ones are modern and worth the extra rupees). In-house dining is very tasty and good value. Service is a little chaotic but well-meaning.

Hotel Green Olive

HOTEL $$

(☎️ 0240-2329490; www.dasilvascoffee.com; 13/3 Bhagya Nagar, off Station Rd West; r from ₹3700; 🍷🍷) Impressive newcomer with a boutique-ish feel thanks to its stylish, well-equipped and well-maintained rooms. The staff here look after guests well and can organise transport and tours.

Hotel Amarpreet

HOTEL $$

(☎️ 6621133; www.amarpreethotel.com; Jalna Rd; s/d from ₹3880/5170; 🍷🍷🍷) Dated though spacious rooms, but the all-smiles management makes up for it with polite service, excellent housekeeping and a great selection of food and booze. Located on a busy road, so ask for a room away from the traffic.

VITS

HOTEL $$

Rooms are well-equipped and decent value, but the dining situation and complimentary breakfast is poor (a renovation of the cafe is planned, management says). There's a small gym.

★ Lemon Tree

HOTEL $$$

(☎️ 6603030; www.lemontreehotels.com; R7/2 Chikalathana, Airport Rd; r incl breakfast from ₹5590; 🍷🍷🍷) The Lemon Tree offers elegance and class, looking more like a billionaire's luxury whitewashed Mediterranean villa than an Indian hotel. It's well designed too: all rooms face inwards, overlooking perhaps the best pool on the Deccan plateau, all 50m of it. The standard rooms, though not large, are brightened by vivid tropical tones offset against snow-white walls. Located near the airport, 6km from the centre.

🍴 Eating

Swad Veg Restaurant

INDIAN $

(Kanchan Chamber, Station Rd East; mains ₹70-130) Swad offers a great range of Indian snacks and staples, such as dosas, plus a few pizzas, ice creams and shakes. Try the Gujarati thali (₹170), an endless train of dishes that diners gobble up under the benevolent gaze of patron saint swami Yogiraj Hanstirth.

Kailash

INDIAN $

(Station Rd East; mains ₹85-120; ☀️ 8am-11pm) This busy pure-veg restaurant looks and feels vaguely like an Indian take on an American diner, with big portions in familial surrounds. There's lots of Punjabi and South Indian food, as well as rice and noodle dishes, and an air-conditioned section.

★ Bhoj

INDIAN $$

(Station Rd West; thalis ₹180; ☀️ 11am-3pm & 7-11pm) Rightly famous for its delicious unlimited Rajasthani and Gujarati thalis, Bhoj is a wonderful place to refuel and relax after a hard day on the road (or rail). It's on the 1st floor of a somewhat scruffy little shopping arcade, but the decor, ambience, service and presentation are all first rate.

Hotel Panchavati

MULTICUISINE $$

(Station Rd West; mains ₹60-280; ☺7am-10pm; 🍴) This budget hotel's restaurant has Chinese and Korean food in addition to an extensive Indian menu and cold beer. Ambience isn't a selling point here, but it's air-conditioned and staff are friendly.

Tandoor

NORTH INDIAN $$

(Shyam Chambers, Station Rd East; mains ₹160-290) Offers fine tandoori dishes and flavour-some North Indian veg and nonveg options in a weirdly Pharaonic atmosphere. Try the wonderful sizzler kebabs. A few Chinese dishes are also on offer, but patrons clearly prefer the dishes coming out of the tandoor.

🛍 Shopping

Himroo material is a traditional Aurangabad speciality made from cotton, silk and silver threads. Most of today's Himroo shawls and saris are produced using power looms, but some showrooms still stock hand-loomed cloth.

Himroo saris start at around ₹1200, for a cotton and silk blend. Paithani saris, which are of a superior quality, range from ₹5000 to ₹300,000 – but some of them take more than a year to make. Make sure you get authentic Himroo, not 'Aurangabad silk'.

Paithani Silk Weaving Centre

TEXTILES

(www.paithanisilk.com; 54, P-1, Town Center, Lokmat Nagar; ☺11.30am-8pm) One of the best places to come and watch weavers at work is the Paithani Silk Weaving Centre where you'll find good-quality items for sale. It's about 6km east of Kranti Chowk (behind the Air India office), so take a taxi.

i Information

MTDC Office (📍2331513; MTDC Holiday Resort, Station Rd East; ☺10am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) Quite helpful and has a stock of brochures.

Post Office (Juna Bazaar; ☺10am-6pm Mon-Sat)

Sai Internet Café (Station Rd East; per hour ₹15; ☺8am-10pm) Has reliable connections; one of several on this block.

State Bank of India (Kranti Chowk; ☺11am-5pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) Handles foreign exchange.

i Getting There & Away*AIR

The airport is 10km east of town. Daily direct flights go to Delhi (around ₹8500) and Mumbai (around ₹4500) with both Air India and Jet Airways.

BUS

Buses leave about every half-hour from the MSRTC bus stand (Station Rd West) to Pune (semideluxe/deluxe ₹330/620, five hours) and roughly hourly to Nasik (semideluxe ₹290, 4½ hours) between 8am and 10pm. Private bus agents are clustered on Dr Rajendra Prasad Marg and Court Rd; a few sit closer to the bus stand. Deluxe overnight bus destinations include Mumbai (with/without AC from ₹550/350, sleeper ₹900 to ₹1500, 7½ to 9½ hours), Ahmedabad (seat ₹400, sleeper ₹800 to ₹1050, 13 to 15 hours) and Nagpur (sleeper with AC ₹600, without AC ₹700 to ₹1050, 8½ to 10 hours).

Ordinary buses head to Ellora from the MSRTC bus stand every half-hour (₹30, one hour) and hourly to Jalgaon (₹155, four hours) via Fardapur (₹95, 2½ hours), which is the drop-off point for Ajanta.

From the CIDCO bus stand (Airport Rd), by the Lemon Tree hotel junction, ordinary buses leave for the Lonar meteorite crater (every two hours, 4½ hours, ₹172).

TRAIN

Aurangabad's train station (Station Rd East) is not on a main line, but it has four daily direct trains to/from Mumbai. The Tapovan Express (2nd class/chair ₹140/500, 7½ hours) departs Aurangabad at 2.35pm; the Janshatabdi Express (2nd class/chair ₹172/575, 6½ hours) departs Aurangabad at 6am. For Hyderabad, trains include the Ajanta express (sleeper/2nd class/1st class ₹805/1150/1925, 10 hours, 10.45pm). To reach northern or eastern India, take a bus to Jalgaon and board a train there.

i Getting Around

Autorickshaws are common here. The taxi stand is next to the MSRTC bus stand; shared 4WDs also depart from here for Ellora and Daulatabad but are usually very packed. Renting a car and driver is a much better option.

Ashoka Tours & Travels (p781) rates for return trip with a car/driver to Ellora is ₹1250/1400 in a car/AC car; to Ajanta it's ₹2080/2400.

Around Aurangabad*Daulatabad

This one's straight out of a Tolkien fantasy. A most beguiling structure, the 12th-century hilltop fortress of Daulatabad is located about 15km north of Aurangabad, en route to Ellora. Now in ruins, the citadel was originally conceived as an impregnable fort by the Yadava kings. Its most infamous high point came in 1328, when it was named Daulatabad (City of Fortune) by eccentric Delhi sultan Mohammed Tughlaq and made the capital – he even marched the entire population of Delhi 1100km south to populate it. Ironically, Daulatabad – despite being better positioned strategically than Delhi – soon proved untenable as a capital due to an acute water crisis, and Tughlaq forced the weary inhabitants all the way back to Delhi, which had by then been reduced to a ghost town.

Daulatabad's central bastion sits atop a 200m-high craggy outcrop known as Devagiri (Hill of the Gods), surrounded by a 5km fort (Indian/foreigner ₹10/100; ☀6am-6pm). The climb to the summit takes about an hour, and leads past an ingenious series of defences, including multiple doorways designed with odd angles and spike-studded doors to prevent elephant charges. A tower of victory, known as the Chand Minar (Tower of the Moon), built in 1435, soars 60m above the ground to the right; it's closed to visitors. Higher up, you can walk into the Chini Mahal, where Abul Hasan Tana Shah, king of Golconda, was held captive for 12 years before his death in 1699. Nearby, there's a 6m cannon, cast from five different metals and engraved with Aurangzeb's name.

Part of the ascent goes through a pitch-black, bat-infested, water-seeping, spiralling tunnel. Guides (₹500) are available near the ticket counter to show you around, and their torch-bearing assistants will lead you through the dark passageway for a small tip. On the way down you'll be left to your own devices, so carry a torch.

As the fort is in ruins (with crumbling staircases and sheer drops) and involves a steep ascent, the elderly, children and those suffering from vertigo or claustrophobia will find it a tough challenge. Allow 2½ hours to explore the structure, and bring water.

Khuldabad

Time permitting, take a pit stop in the scruffy-walled settlement of Khuldabad (Heavenly Abode), a quaint little Muslim pilgrimage village just 3km from Ellora. Buried deep in the pages of history, Khuldabad is where a number of historic figures lie interred, including emperor Aurangzeb, the last of the Mughal greats. Despite matching the legendary King Solomon in terms of state riches, Aurangzeb was an ascetic in his personal life, and insisted that he be buried in a simple tomb, which you'll find in the courtyard of the Alamgir Dargah (☀7am-8pm).

Generally a calm place, Khuldabad is swamped with pilgrims every April when a robe said to have been worn by the Prophet Mohammed, and kept within the dargah (shrine), is shown to the public. Across the road from the Alamgir Dargah, another shrine is said to contain strands of the Prophet's beard.

Ellora

📍02437

Give a man a hammer and chisel, and he'll create art for posterity. Come to the World Heritage Ellora cave temples (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250; ☀dawn-dusk Wed-Mon), 30km northwest of Aurangabad, and you'll know exactly what we mean. The epitome of ancient Indian rock-cut architecture, these caves were chipped out laboriously over five centuries by generations of Buddhist, Hindu and Jain monks. Monasteries, chapels, temples – the caves served every purpose, and they were stylishly embellished with a profusion of remarkably detailed sculptures. Unlike the caves at Ajanta, which are carved into a sheer rock face, the Ellora caves line a 2km-long escarpment, the gentle slope of which allowed architects to build elaborate courtyards in front of the shrines, and render them with sculptures of a surreal quality.

Ellora has 34 caves in all: 12 Buddhist (AD 600–800), 17 Hindu (AD 600–900) and five Jain (AD 800–1000) – though the exact timescales of these caves' construction is the subject of academic debate. Undoubtedly the grandest is the awesome Kailasa Temple (Cave 16), the world's largest monolithic sculpture, hewn top to bottom against a rocky slope by 7000 labourers over a period of 150 years. Dedicated to Lord Shiva, it is clearly among the best that ancient Indian architecture has to offer.

The established academic theory is that the site represents the renaissance of Hinduism under the Chalukya and Rashtrakuta dynasties, the subsequent decline of Indian Buddhism and a brief resurgence of Jainism under official patronage. However, due to the absence of inscriptional evidence, it's been impossible to accurately date most of Ellora's monuments. Some scholars argue that some Hindu temples predate those in the Buddhist group. What is certain is that their coexistence at one site indicates a lengthy period of religious tolerance.

Official guides can be hired at the ticket office in front of the Kailasa Temple for ₹1070 (up to five people). Guides have an extensive knowledge of cave architecture so are worth the investment. If your tight itinerary forces you to choose between Ellora or Ajanta, Ellora wins hands down in terms of architecture (though Ajanta's setting is more beautiful and more of a pleasure to explore).

Ellora is very popular with domestic tourists; if you can visit on a weekday, it's far less crowded. The whole complex is in desperate need of reorganising: currently the car park is far too close to the temples so expect plenty of background honking and beeping as you tour the caves.

★ Kailasa Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

One of Incredible India's greatest monuments, this astonishing temple, carved from solid rock, was built by King Krishna I in AD 760 to represent Mt Kailasa (Kailash), Shiva's Himalayan abode. To say that the assignment was daring would be an understatement. Three huge trenches were bored into the sheer cliff face, a process that entailed removing 200,000 tonnes of rock by hammer and chisel, before the temple could begin to take shape, and its remarkable sculptural decoration added.

Covering twice the area of the Parthenon in Athens and being half as high again, Kailasa is an engineering marvel that was executed straight from the head with zero margin for error. Modern draughtsmen might have a lesson or two to learn here.

The temple houses several intricately carved panels, depicting scenes from the Ramayana, the Mahabharata and the adventures of Krishna. Also worth admiring are the immense monolithic pillars that stand in the courtyard, flanking the entrance on both sides, and the southeastern gallery that has 10 giant and fabulous panels depicting the different avatars of Lord Vishnu.

After you're done with the main enclosure, bypass the hordes of snack-munching day trippers to explore the temple's many dank, bat-urine-soaked corners with their numerous forgotten carvings. Afterwards, hike up a foot trail to the south of the complex that takes you to the top perimeter of the 'cave', from where you can get a bird's-eye view of the entire temple complex.

Buddhist Caves

CAVES

Calm and contemplation infuse the 12 Buddhist caves, which stretch to the south of Kailasa. All are Buddhist viharas (monasteries) used for study and worship, but the multi-storeyed structures also included cooking, living and sleeping areas.

The one exception is Cave 10, which is a chaitya (assembly hall). While the earliest caves are simple, Caves 11 and 12 are more ambitious; both have three stories and are on par with the more impressive Hindu temples.

Cave 1, the simplest vihara, may have been a granary. Cave 2 is notable for its ornate pillars and the imposing seated Buddha, which faces the setting sun. Cave 3 and Cave 4 are unfinished and not well preserved.

Cave 5 is the largest vihara in this group, at 18m wide and 36m long; the rows of stone benches hint that it may once have been an assembly hall.

Cave 6 is an ornate vihara with wonderful images of Tara, consort of the Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara, and of the Buddhist goddess of learning, Mahamayuri, looking remarkably similar to Saraswati, her Hindu equivalent. Cave 7 is an unadorned hall, but from here you can pass through a doorway to Cave 8, the first cave in which the sanctum is detached from the rear wall. Cave 9 is notable for its wonderfully carved fascia.

Cave 10 is the only chaitya in the Buddhist group and one of the finest in India. Its ceiling features ribs carved into the stonework; the grooves were once fitted with wooden panels. The balcony and upper gallery offer a closer view of the ceiling and a frieze depicting amorous couples. A decorative window gently illuminates an enormous figure of the teaching Buddha.

Cave 11, the Do Thal (Two Storey) Cave, is entered through its third basement level, not discovered until 1876. Like Cave 12, it possibly owes its size to competition with Hindu caves of the same period.

Cave 12, the huge Tin Thal (Three Storey) Cave, is entered through a courtyard. The locked shrine on the top floor contains a large Buddha figure flanked by his seven previous incarnations. The walls are carved with relief pictures.

Hindu Caves

CAVES

Drama and excitement characterise the Hindu group (Caves 13 to 29). In terms of scale, creative vision and skill of execution, these caves are in a league of their own.

All these temples were cut from the top down, so it was never necessary to use scaffolding – the builders began with the roof and moved down to the floor. Highlights include caves 14, 15, 16, 21 and 29.

Cave 13 is a simple cave, most likely a granary. Cave 14, the Ravana-ki-Khai, is a Buddhist vihara converted to a temple dedicated to Shiva sometime in the 7th century.

Cave 15, the Das Avatara (Ten Incarnations of Vishnu) Cave, is one of the finest at Ellora. The two-storey temple contains a mesmerising Shiva Nataraja, and Shiva emerging from a lingam (phallic image) while Vishnu and Brahma pay homage.

Caves 17 to 20 and caves 22 to 28 are simple monasteries.

Cave 21, known as the Ramesvara Cave, features interesting interpretations of familiar Shaivite scenes depicted in the earlier temples. The figure of the goddess Ganga, standing on her Makara (mythical sea creature), is particularly notable.

The large Cave 29, the Dumar Lena, is thought to be a transitional model between the simpler hollowed-out caves and the fully developed temples exemplified by the Kailasa. It has views over a nearby waterfall.

Jain Caves

CAVES

The five Jain caves, the last created at Ellora, may lack the ambitious size of the best Hindu temples, but they are exceptionally detailed, with some remarkable paintings and carvings.

The caves are 1km north of the last Hindu temple (Cave 29) at the end of the bitumen road; autorickshaws run here from the main car park.

Cave 30, the Chhota Kailasa (Little Kailasa), is a poor imitation of the great Kailasa Temple and stands by itself some distance from the other Jain temples.

In contrast, Cave 32, the Indra Sabha (Assembly Hall of Indra), is the finest of the Jain temples. Its ground-floor plan is similar to that of the Kailasa, but the upstairs area is as ornate and richly decorated as the downstairs is plain. There are images of the Jain tirthankars (great teachers) Parasnath and Gomateshvara, the latter surrounded by wildlife. Inside the shrine is a seated figure of Mahavira, the last tirthankar and founder of the Jain religion.

Cave 31 is really an extension of Cave 32. Cave 33, the Jagannath Sabha, is similar in plan to 32 and has some well-preserved sculptures. The final temple, the small Cave 34, also has interesting sculptures. On the hilltop over the Jain temples, a 5m-high image of Parasnath looks down on Ellora.

Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Kailas

HOTEL $$

(📍 244446; www.hotelkailas.com; r ₹2110, with AC from ₹3510; 🍷) The sole decent hotel near the site, with attractive cottages set in leafy grounds. The restaurant (mains ₹110 to ₹250) is excellent, with a menu chalked up on a blackboard that includes sandwiches, breakfasts, curries and tandoori favourites.

MTDC Ellora Restaurant & Beer Bar

INDIAN $

(mains/thalis from ₹90/110; ☀️ 8am-5pm) Located within the temple complex, this is a good place for lunch.

Information

Ellora Visitor Centre (☀️ 9am-5.30pm Wed-Mon) Ellora's impressive new visitor centre, 750m west of the site, is worth dropping by to put the caves in historical context. It features modern displays and information panels, a 15-minute video presentation, and two galleries: one on the Kailasa Temple (with a diorama of the temple) and other dedicated to the site itself. A cafe, craft centre and restaurant are planned.

Getting There & Away

Note that the temples are closed on Tuesday. Buses regularly ply the road between Aurangabad and Ellora (₹30, one hour); the last bus departs from Ellora at 8pm. Share 4WDs are also an option, but get packed; they leave when full and stop outside the bus stand in Aurangabad (₹70). A full-day tour to Ellora, with stops en route, costs ₹1400 in an AC car; try Ashoka Tours & Travels (p781). Autorickshaws ask for ₹700.

Ajanta

📍 02438

Superbly set in a remote river valley 105km northeast of Aurangabad, the remarkable cave temples of Ajanta are this region's second World Heritage Site. Much older than Ellora, these secluded caves date from around the 2nd century BC to the 6th century AD and were among the earliest monastic institutions to be constructed in the country. Ironically, it was Ellora's rise that brought about Ajanta's downfall, and historians believe the site was abandoned once the focus had shifted to Ellora.

Ajanta was deserted for about a millenium, as the Deccan forest claimed and shielded the caves, with roots and shoots choking the sculptures, until 1819, when a British hunting party led by officer John Smith stumbled upon them purely by chance.

One of the primary reasons to visit Ajanta is to admire its renowned 'frescoes', actually temperas, which adorn many of the caves' interiors. With few other examples from ancient times matching their artistic excellence and fine execution, these paintings are of unfathomable heritage value. It's believed that the natural pigments for these paintings were mixed with animal glue and vegetable gum, to bind them to the dry surface. Many caves have small, craterlike holes in their floors, which acted as palettes during paint jobs. Despite their age, the paintings in most caves remain finely preserved today, and many attribute it to their relative isolation from humanity for centuries. However, it would be a tad optimistic to say that decay hasn't set in.

★ Ajanta Caves

CAVE

(Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25, authorised guide ₹750; ☀️ 9am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) Ajanta's caves line a steep face of a horseshoe-shaped gorge bordering the Waghore River. Five of the caves are chaityas (prayer halls) while others are viharas (monasteries). Caves 8, 9, 10, 12, 13 and part of 15 are early Buddhist caves, while the others date from around the 5th century AD (Mahayana period). In the austere early Buddhist school, the Buddha was never represented directly but always alluded to by a symbol such as the footprint or wheel of law.

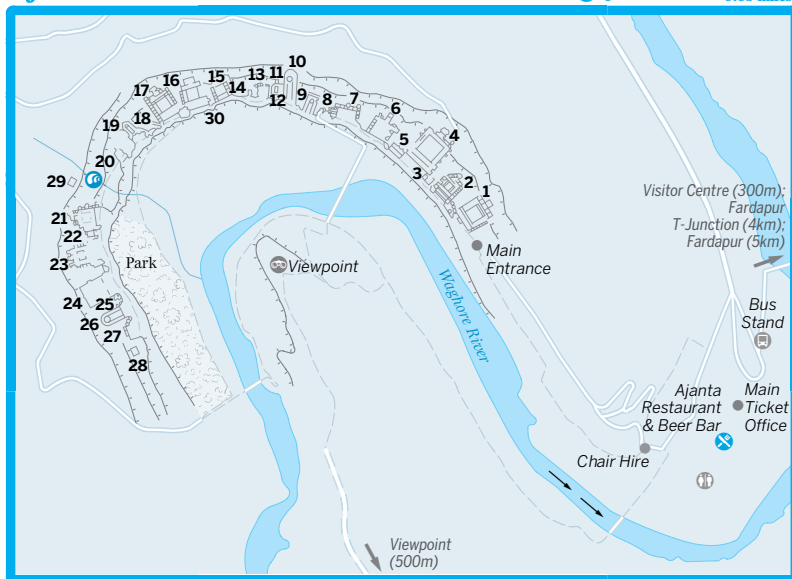

During busy periods, viewers are allotted 15 minutes within the caves, many of which have to be entered barefoot (socks or shoe covers allowed). Caves 3, 5, 8, 22, 28, 29 and 30 remain either closed or inaccessible.

Cave 1

CAVE

Cave 1, a Mahayana vihara, was one of the last to be excavated and is the most beautifully decorated. This is where you'll find a rendition of the Bodhisattva Padmapani, the most famous and iconic of the Ajanta artworks. A verandah in front leads to a large congregation hall, housing sculptures and narrative murals known for their splendid perspective and elaborate detailing of dress, daily life and facial expressions. The colours in the paintings were created from local minerals, with the exception of the vibrant blue made from Central Asian lapis lazuli. Look up to the ceiling to see the carving of four deer sharing a common head.

Ajanta Caves

CAVE

Cave 2 is a late Mahayana vihara with deliriously ornamented columns and capitals, and some fine paintings. The ceiling is decorated with geometric and floral patterns. The murals depict scenes from the Jataka tales, including Buddha's mother's dream of a six-tusked elephant, which heralded his conception.

CAVE

Cave 4 is the largest vihara at Ajanta and is supported by 28 pillars. Although never completed, the cave has some impressive sculptures: four statues surround a huge central Buddha, and there are scenes of people fleeing from the 'eight great dangers' to the protection of Avalokitesvara.

CAVE

Cave 6 is the only two-storey vihara at Ajanta, but parts of the lower storey have collapsed. Inside is a seated Buddha figure and an intricately carved door to the shrine.

Upstairs the hall is surrounded by cells with fine paintings on the doorways.

CAVE

Cave 7 has an atypical design, with porches before the verandah leading directly to the four cells and the elaborately sculptured shrine.

CAVE

Cave 9 is one of the earliest chaityas at Ajanta. Although it dates from the early Buddhist period, the two figures flanking the entrance door were probably later Mahayana additions. Columns run down both sides of the cave and around the 3m-high dagoba at the far end.

CAVE

Cave 10 is thought to be the oldest cave (200 BC) and was the first one to be spotted by the British hunting party. Similar in design to cave 9, it is the largest chaitya. The facade has collapsed and the paintings inside have been damaged, in some cases by graffiti dating from soon after their rediscovery. One of the pillars to the right bears the engraved name of Smith, who left his mark here for posterity.

i AJANTA ETIQUETTE

Flash photography is strictly prohibited within the caves, due to its adverse effect on natural dyes used in the paintings. Authorities have installed rows of tiny pigment-friendly lights, which cast a faint glow within the caves, but additional lighting is required for glimpsing minute details, and you'll have to rely on long exposures for photographs.

Most buses ferrying tour groups don't arrive until noon. To avoid the crowds stay locally in Fardapur or make an early start from Aurangabad.

Cave 16

CAVE

Cave 16, a vihara, contains some of Ajanta's finest paintings and is thought to have been the original entrance to the entire complex. The best known of these paintings is the 'dying princess' - Sundari, wife of the Buddha's half-brother Nanda, who is said to have fainted at the news that her husband was renouncing the material life (and her) in order to become a monk. Carved figures appear to support the ceiling, and there's a statue of the Buddha seated on a lion throne teaching the Noble Eightfold Path.

CAVE

With carved dwarfs supporting the pillars, cave 17 has Ajanta's best-preserved and most varied paintings. Famous images include a princess applying make-up, a seductive prince using the old trick of plying his lover with wine, and the Buddha returning home from his enlightenment to beg from his wife and astonished son. A detailed panel tells of Prince Simhala's expedition to Sri Lanka: with 500 companions he is shipwrecked on an island where ogresses appear as enchanting women, only to seize and devour their victims. Simhala escapes on a flying horse and returns to conquer the island.

CAVE

Cave 19, a magnificent chaitya, has a remarkably detailed facade; its dominant feature is an impressive horseshoe-shaped window. Two fine, standing Buddha figures flank the entrance. Inside is a three-tiered dagoba with a figure of the Buddha on the front. Outside the cave, to the west, sits a striking image of the Naga king with seven cobra hoods around his head. His wife, hooded by a single cobra, sits by his side.

Cave 24

CAVE

Had it been finished, cave 24 would be the largest vihara at Ajanta. Here you can see how the caves were constructed - long galleries were cut into the rock and then the rock between them was broken through.

Cave 26

CAVE

A largely ruined chaitya, cave 26 is now dramatically lit and contains some fine sculptures that shouldn't be missed. On the left wall is a huge figure of the reclining Buddha, lying back in preparation for nirvana. Other scenes include a lengthy depiction of the Buddha's temptation by Maya.

Cave 27

CAVE

Cave 27 is virtually a vihara connected to the cave 26 chaitya.

Viewpoints

Two lookouts offer picture-perfect views of the whole horseshoe-shaped gorge. The first is a short walk beyond the river, crossed via a bridge below cave 8. A further 40-minute uphill walk (not to be attempted during the monsoons) leads to the lookout from where the British party first spotted the caves.

Sleeping & Eating

Accommodation options close to the caves are quite limited. Aurangabad (or even Jalgaon) has far more choice, while Fardapur is the closest option and most convenient for arriving at the caves early morning.

MTDC Holiday Resort Fardapur HOTEL $$

(☎ 244230; Aurangabad-Jalgaon Rd, Fardapur; d ₹1480, with AC ₹1860; 🍷) Recently renovated, this government hotel is now a good option set amid lawns in a peaceful location off the main road in Fardapur, 5km from the caves. Rooms are in good shape and well-equipped; there's a bar garden and restaurant (order ahead for your meal).

MTDC Ajanta Tourist Complex HOTEL $$

(☎ 09422204325; Fardapur T-junction; cottage ₹2320; 🍷) Located just behind the shopping 'plaza' and the bus stand, these five cottages nestled amid grassy lawns have some charm, though maintenance could be better. There's no restaurant here.

Ajanta Restaurant & Beer Bar FAST FOOD $

(mains ₹90-150, thalis from ₹130; ☎ 9am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) This cafe-restaurant right by the main ticket office at the caves serves a decent vegetarian thali and cold drinks, including beer.

i Information

A cloakroom is available at the Fardapur T-junction (but not at the caves), where you can leave gear (₹10 per item for four hours).

Ajanta Visitor Centre (☺ 9am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) This state-of-the-art new facility is one of India's very best, with highly impressive replicas of four caves (1, 2, 16 and 17) in real scale, audio guides available in many languages, excellent painting and sculpture galleries, story of Buddhism in India, an audio-visual arena and large cafe.

i Getting There & Away

Note that the caves are closed on Monday. Buses from Aurangabad or Jalgaon will drop you at the Fardapur T-junction (where the highway meets the road to the caves), 4km from the site. From here, after paying an 'amenities' fee (₹10), walk to the departure point for the buses (with/without AC ₹20/15), which zoom up to the caves. Buses return half-hourly to the T-junction; the last bus is at 5pm.

All MSRTC buses passing through Fardapur stop at the T-junction. After the caves close you can board buses to either Aurangabad or Jalgaon outside the MTDC Holiday Resort in Fardapur, 1km down the main road towards Jalgaon. Taxis are available in Fardapur; ₹1300/1600 should get you to Jalgaon/Aurangabad.

Jalgaon

📍 0257 / POP 468,300 / ELEV 208M

Apart from being a handy base for exploring Ajanta 60km away, the industrial city of Jalgaon is really nothing more than a convenient transit town. It has rail connections to all major cities across India.

★ Hotel Plaza

HOTEL $

(☎ 9370027354, 2227354; hotelplaza_jal@yahoo.com; Station Rd; dm ₹250, s/d from ₹550/750, r with AC from ₹1300; 📶📶📶) Offering brilliant value, this extremely well-managed and presented hotel is only a short hop from the station. Rooms vary in size and layout, but with whitewashed walls, a minimalist feel and almost Swiss-clean bathrooms, they're a steal at this price. The effusive owner is a mine of useful information and can assist with train reservations, car hire and recommendations.

Hotel Royal Palace

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2233555; www.hotelroyalpalace.in; Mahabal Rd, Jai Nagar; s/d incl breakfast from ₹2520/2680; 📶📶) Rooms here don't quite reach the heights promised by the chintzy lobby but they're decent value and comfortable enough, particularly if you like beige-on-beige colour schemes. The in-house restaurant is a pure-veg affair with North Indian, coastal, Chinese and Continental food. Free pick-ups are offered from the train station.

Hotel Arya

INDIAN $

(Navi Peth; mains ₹50-100; ☺ 8.30am-10.50pm) Delicious vegetarian food, particularly Punjabi cuisine, though a few Chinese and South Indian dishes are also offered. It's a short walk south along Station Rd, left at MG Rd, and left at the clock tower. You may have to queue for a table at lunchtime.

i Information

Banks, ATMs and internet cafes are on Nehru Rd, which runs along the top of Station Rd.

i Getting There & Around

Several express trains connecting Mumbai (sleeper/2AC ₹280/1000, eight hours), Delhi (sleeper/2AC ₹530/1970, 18 hours), Ahmedabad (sleeper/2AC ₹345/1322, 14 hours) and Varanasi (sleeper/2AC ₹515/1950, 20 hours) stop at Jalgaon train station. Eight daily trains head for Nagpur (sleeper/2AC ₹290/1090, seven to nine hours).

Buses to Fardapur (₹60, 1½ hours) depart half-hourly from the bus stand starting at 6am, continuing to Aurangabad (₹155, four hours).

Jalgaon's train station and bus stand are about 2km apart (₹25 by autorickshaw). Private bus companies on Station Rd offer services to Aurangabad (₹170 to ₹200, 3½ hours) and Mumbai (₹450 to ₹650, 9½ hours).

Nagpur

📍 0712 / POP 2.43 MILLION / ELEV 305M

Way off the main tourist routes, the isolated city of Nagpur lacks must-see sites but is an important gateway to several reserves and parks including Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve and Pench National Park. It's also close to the temples of Ramtek and the ashrams of Sevagram. Summer is the best time to taste the city's famous oranges.

i Sleeping & Eating

Nagpur's hotels are not great value and cater primarily to business travellers. Central Ave is noisy but close to the train station.

Hotel Blue Moon

(☎ 0712 2726061; Central Ave; s/d from ₹650/850, with AC ₹1100/1350; 📶) Large, plain rooms that don't win any awards for imagination but are one of the better budget options in this pricey city. It's one of the closest hotels to the train station. Staff are helpful.

Legend Inn

i Getting There & Around

AIR

The airport is 7km southwest of the centre. Domestic airlines, including Air India, Indigo and Jet Airways, fly daily to Delhi (from ₹5500, 1½ hours), Mumbai (from ₹4400, 1½ hours) and Kolkata (from ₹7500, 1½ hours), as well as Ahmedabad, Bengaluru, Chennai, Jaipur and Pune. Taxis/autorickshaws from the airport to the city centre cost ₹380/200.

BUS

The main MSRTC bus stand is 2km south of the train station. Ordinary buses head for Wardha (₹88, three hours) and Ramtek (₹45, 1½ hours). There are two buses to Jalgaon (₹650, 10 hours) and four daily to Pune (₹1070, 16 hours).

TRAIN

From Mumbai's CST, the Duronto Express runs daily to Nagpur (sleeper/2AC ₹470/1830, 10 hours, 9.15pm). From Nagpur, it departs at 8.50pm and arrives at 7.50am the following morning. Heading north to Kolkata is the Gitanjali Express (sleeper/2AC ₹480/1920, 17½ hours, 7.05pm). Several expresses bound for Delhi and Mumbai stop at Jalgaon (sleeper/2AC ₹280/1020, eight hours), for Ajanta caves.

Around Nagpur

Ramtek

About 40km northeast of Nagpur, Ramtek is believed to be the place where Lord Rama, of the epic Ramayana, spent some time during his exile with his wife Sita and brother Lakshmana. The place is marked by a cluster of temples (☺ 6am-9pm) about 600 years old, which sit atop the Hill of Rama and have their own population of resident monkeys. Autorickshaws will cart you the 5km from the bus stand to the temple complex for ₹80. You can return to town via the 700 steps at the back of the complex. On the road to the temples you'll pass the delightful Ambala Tank, lined with small shrines. Boat rides around the lake are available.

Buses run half-hourly between Ramtek and the MSRTC bus stand in Nagpur (₹52, 1½ hours). The last bus to Nagpur is at 7pm.

Sevagram

☎ 07152

About 85km from Nagpur, Sevagram (Village of Service) was chosen by Mahatma Gandhi as his base during the Indian Independence Movement. Throughout the freedom struggle, the village played host to several nationalist leaders, who would regularly come to visit the Mahatma at his Sevagram Ashram (☎ 07152-284753; www.gandhiashramsevagram.org; ☺ 9am-noon & 2-6pm). The overseers of this peaceful ashram, built on 40 hectares of farmland, have carefully restored the original huts where Gandhi lived and worked, and which now house some of his personal effects.

LONAR METEORITE CRATER

If you like off-beat adventures, travel to Lonar to explore a prehistoric natural wonder. About 50,000 years ago, a meteorite slammed into the earth here, leaving behind a massive crater, 2km across and 170m deep. In scientific jargon, it's the only hypervelocity natural-impact crater in basaltic rock in the world. In lay terms, it's as tranquil and relaxing a spot as you could hope to find, with a shallow green lake at its base and wilderness all around. The lake water is supposedly alkaline and excellent for the skin. Scientists think that the meteorite is still embedded about 600m below the southeastern rim of the crater.

crater's edge is home to several Hindu temples as well as wildlife, including langurs, peacocks, deer and numerous birds.

The MTDC Tourist Complex (☎ 07260221602; d ₹1300, with AC ₹2590; ♿) has a prime location just across the road from the crater, and offers newly renovated deluxe rooms that are in excellent shape, with stylish ensuite bathrooms. There are regular buses between Lonar and the CIDCO bus stand in Aurangabad (p784).

Very basic lodging is available in the Yatri Nivas (☎ 284753; d ₹100), across the road from the entry gate; advance booking is recommended. Simple vegetarian meals can be served in the ashram's dining hall with prior notice.

Just 3km from Sevagram, Paunar village is home to the Brahmavidya Mandir Ashram (☎ 07152-288388; ☀ 6am-noon & 2-8pm). Founded by Vinoba Bhave, a nationalist and disciple of Gandhi, the ashram is run almost entirely by women. Modelled on swaraj (self-sufficiency), it's operated on a social system of consensus, with no central management.

Sevagram can be reached by taking a Wardha-bound bus from Nagpur (₹85, three hours).

Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve

One of the best places to see tigers in India, the seldom-visited Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve (☀ dawn-dusk Wed-Mon), 150km south of Nagpur, is now much more accessible thanks to the upgrading of state highways. Seeing fewer visitors than most other forest reserves in India, this is a place where you can get up close with wildlife without having to jostle past truckloads of shutter-happy tourists. Mammals in the reserve include gaurs, chitals, nilgais, sloth bears and leopards as well as very healthy tiger numbers (estimated at around 120, with 24 cubs born in 2014). Of the 280 bird species logged in the park, there's a raptor population that includes crested serpent eagles, oriental honey buzzards and rare species of owls. The park also remains open throughout the year, unlike many in India.

Walking safaris (₹850) in the buffer zone allow you to look for tracks, observe birds and insects at close quarters, and catch the scents and sounds of wild India. Guides from the Gond tribe accompany you through the forest.

Guided canoe trips (₹1200 per person) on the Irai and Tadoba lakes allow you the chance explore inlets, islands and bays, with a chance of seeing crocodiles and magnificent birdlife, including the grey-headed fish eagle, ospreys and storks. Electric pontoon boats (₹800 per person) also operate.

Four state buses ply the road between Nagpur and Chandrapur (₹138, 3½ hours).

The nearest train station of Wardha (connected by trains from Hyderabad and Nagpur) is 40km from the reserve.

Tiger Trails Jungle Lodge

LODGE $$$

(☎ 0712-6541327; www.tigertrails.in; Khutwanda Gate; s/d incl all meals ₹9500/15,000; ♿ ♿) The Tiger Trails Jungle Lodge is owned by passionate enthusiasts who have spent decades studying tigers inside the national park. A special lodge, it's located in the wildlife-rich buffer zone. Accommodation is spacious and divided between rooms in an older block (with big roof terrace) and more modern, better-appointed options. Camera traps around the property regularly 'catch' tigers. All safari tours (from ₹4500) are with expert guides, accommodation is spacious and comfortable, and meals generous and tasty.

THE LEGEND OF BABA AMTE

The legend of Murlidhar Devidas 'Baba' Amte (1914–2008) is oft-repeated in humanitarian circles around the world. Hailing from an upper-class Brahmin family in Wardha, Amte was snugly ensconced in material riches and on his way to becoming a successful lawyer when he witnessed a leper die unattended in the streets one night. It was an incident that changed him forever.

Soon after, Amte renounced worldly comforts, embracing an austere life through which he actively worked for the benefit of leprosy patients and those belonging to marginalised communities. In the primitive forested backyards of eastern Maharashtra, he set up his ashram called Anandwan (Forest of Joy; ☎ 07176-282034; www.anandwan.in). A true Gandhian, Amte believed in self-sufficiency, and his lifelong efforts saw several awards being conferred upon him, including the Ramon Magsaysay Award in 1985.

Amte's work has been continued by his sons Vikas and Prakash and their wives – the latter couple also won the Magsaysay Award in 2008. The family now runs many ashrams in these remote parts to care for the needy, both humans and animals. Over 2500 people are currently cared for, including 1500 leprosy patients. Animals in the 'orphanage' include otters, eagles, crocodiles, monkeys, wild boars, deer, hyenas, snakes, leopards and lions. There's also a school for tribal people.

Volunteering opportunities are available and donations welcome (via website).

SOUTHERN MAHARASHTRA

Konkan Coast

A little-developed shoreline running south from Mumbai all the way to Goa, this picturesque strip of coast is peppered with postcard beaches, fishing villages and magnificent ruined forts. Travelling through this tropical backwater can be sheer bliss. However, remember that accommodation is scant and transport limited and a little unreliable. The best option, if you've the funds, is to rent a car in Mumbai and drift slowly down the coast to Goa. What you'll get in return is an experience that money can't buy.

Murud

The sleepy fishing hamlet of Murud – 165km from Mumbai – should be on any itinerary of the Konkan Coast. The relaxed pace of life, fresh seafood, stupendous offshore Janjira fort (and the chance to feel the warm surf rush past your feet) makes the trip here well worthwhile.

Murud's beach is fun for a run or game of cricket with locals. Peer through the gates of the off-limits Ahmedganj Palace, estate of the Siddi Nawab of Murud, or scramble around the decaying mosque and tombs on the south side of town.

👁 Sights

★ Janjira

FORT

(☀ 7am-dusk) The commanding, brooding fortress of Janjira, built on an island 500m offshore, is the most magnificent of the string of forts which line the Konkan coastline. This citadel was completed in 1571 by the Siddis, descendants of slaves from the Horn of Africa, and was the capital of a princely state.

Over the centuries Siddi alignment with Mughals provoked conflict with local kings, including Shivaji and his son Sambhaji, who attempted to tunnel to it. However, no outsider (including British, French and Portuguese colonists) ever made it past the fort's 12m-high granite walls which, when seen during high tide, seem to rise straight from the sea. Unconquered through history, the fort is finally falling to forces of nature as its mighty walls slowly crumble and wilderness reclaims its innards.

Still, there's a lot to see today, including the remarkable close-fitting stonework that's protected the citadel against centuries of attack by storms, colonists and gunpowder. You approach the fort via a brooding grey-stone gateway, and then can explore its ramparts (complete with giant cannons) and 19 bastions, large parts of which are intact. Its inner keep, palaces and mosque are in ruins, though the fort's huge twin reservoirs remain. As many of the surviving walls and structures are in poor shape, tread carefully as you explore the site, which is unfortunately littered with trash.

The only way to reach Janjira is by boat (₹20 return, 20 minutes) from Rajpuri port. Boats depart from 7am to 4.45pm daily and allow you 45 minutes to explore the fort. To get to Rajpuri from Murud, take an autorickshaw (₹75) or hire a bicycle.

Sleeping & Eating

Devakinandan Lodge GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 9273524061; r ₹1000-1200) This simple little guesthouse has clean, basic rooms with TV and attached bathrooms with hot water. You'll find a few hammocks scattered in its beach-facing garden. The family owners are friendly but speak very little English.

Sea Shell Resort HOTEL $$
(☎ 274306; www.seashellmurud.com; Darbar Rd; r with/without AC from ₹2500/2000; 🏠🚿) Set back from the beachside road, this cheery place has neat, spacious breezy sea-facing rooms with hot-water bathrooms and a multi-cuisine restaurant. Staff can be a bit vacant on reception but dolphin safaris can be arranged. The pool is tiny.

Golden Swan Beach Resort HOTEL $$
(☎ 274078; www.goldenswan.com; Darbar Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3800; 🏠🚿) Rates are a little steep (particularly the cheaper options), but these seafront cottages and rooms occupy a fine spot on a great stretch of beach, with distant views of Ahmedganj Palace and Kasa Fort. There are also rooms in a charming old bungalow a short walk away. The in-house restaurant is superb, try the Szechwan chicken. Rates increase on weekends.

New Sea Rock Restaurant INDIAN $
(Rajpuri; mains ₹50-180; ☀ 7am-8pm) Perched on a cliff overlooking the beach at Rajpuri, this joint has an awesome view of Janjira. A perfect place to steal a million-dollar sunset for the price of a chai (₹10), though you will probably be tempted to try the Indian or Chinese mains.

Hotel Vinayak INDIAN $
(Darbar Rd; mains ₹70-150; ☀ 8am-10pm) Its sea-facing terrace is the perfect place to tuck into a delicious and fiery Malvani thali (₹80 to ₹180), served with pink kokam syrup to smother the spices. Fresh fish (₹100 to ₹250), prawn dishes and good breakfasts are also available.

Getting There & Around

Ferries and catamarans (₹95 to ₹160, one hour) from the Gateway of India in Mumbai cruise to Mandva pier between 6am and 7pm. The ticket includes a free shuttle bus to Alibag (30 minutes). Rickety local buses from Alibag head down the coast to Murud (₹52, two hours). Alternatively, hourly buses from Mumbai Central bus stand take almost six hours to Murud (ordinary/semideluxe ₹158/212).

The nearest railhead is at Roha, two hours away and poorly connected.

Bicycles (₹75 per hour) and cars (from ₹1500 per day) can be hired at the Golden Swan Beach Resort.

Around Murud RAIGAD FORT

Alone on a high and remote hilltop, 24km off Hwy 66, the enthralling Raigad Fort (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ 8am-5.30pm) served as Shivaji's capital from 1648 until his death in 1680. The fort was later sacked by the British, and some colonial structures added, but monuments such as the royal court, plinths of royal chambers, the main marketplace and Shivaji's tomb still remain, and it's worth an excursion.

You can hike a crazy 1475 steps to the top. But for a more 'levitating' experience, take the vertigo-inducing ropeway (www.raiga dropeway.com; return ₹200; ☀ 8.30am-5.30pm) – actually a cable car – which climbs up the cliff and offers a bird's-eye view of the deep gorges below. Be warned this is a very popular attraction with domestic tourists and you may have to wait up to an hour for a ride during holiday times. Guides (₹200) are available within the fort complex. Sarja Restaurant (snacks ₹30-100), adjoining the

THE ROAD TO RUINS

A scenic coastal road parallels the shoreline north of Murud, skirting headlands, beaches and rocky shores. Just a couple of kilometres from town, the clifftop Nawab's Palace is an extraordinary Victorian Gothic-Mughal structure that's been abandoned for years but would make a perfect heritage hotel. You can peek through its gates (complete with coat of arms) from the roadside for a glimpse of the palace.

Sixteen kilometres north of Murud, Kashid Beach is a beautiful sandy cove where you can take a dip and sip on tender coconuts. It's a peaceful spot, though expect a smattering of camel-ride-wallahs and banana boats on weekends. The road continues north, gripping the contours of the exposed shoreline, affording superb oceanic views until you reach the tiny traditional fishing village of Korlai, 31km from Murud. Perched on the rocky headland above the village are the ruined remains of Korlai Fort, which once guarded the giant Kundaliker river estuary and still affords panoramic vistas.

Share autorickshaws (₹100) run as far as Kashid Beach. Cars and bicycles can be hired at the Golden Swan Beach Resort in Murud.

ropeway's base terminal, is a good place for lunch or snacks.

Autorickshaws (₹180, 45 minutes) shuttle up to Raigad from the town of Mahad on Hwy 66 (look out for the 'Raigad Rope-way' sign). Mahad is located 158km south of Mumbai and 88km from Murud. The Mahad-Raigad road is paved and in good condition. Taxis charge ₹2000 for a day trip here from Murud.

Ganpatipule

The tiny beach resort of Ganpatipule has been luring a steady stream of sea-lovers over the years with its warm waters and wonderful stretches of sand. Located about 375km from Mumbai, it's a village that snoozes through much of the year, except during holidays such as Diwali or Ganesh Chaturthi. These are times when hordes of boisterous tourists turn up to visit the seaside Ganesha Temple (☉ 6am-9pm) housing a monolithic orange Ganesha.

Activities on and off the beach at Ganpatipule include camel and boat rides (dolphins are sometimes encountered in the morning). Away from a small crowded section near the temple, you'll find the beach is perfect for a long walk along the sand.

Sleeping & Eating

There are plenty of guesthouses in Ganpatipule but at the time of research we couldn't find one that would rent out rooms to foreigners. We were told this is because Mumbai bomb plotter David Healey spent time in the town.

MTDC Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 235248; d from ₹2250, with AC ₹2550; ♿ ♿) Spread over prime beachfront, this huge operation is something of a holiday camp for Mumbaiker families. Its concrete rooms and cottages would benefit from a little updating, but all boast magnificent full-frontal ocean views. It also packs in a decent restaurant that serves cold beer.

Bhau Joshi Bhojnalay

INDIAN $

(mains ₹50-80; ☀ 11am-10.30pm) A clean, orderly restaurant inland from the beach that offers delicious Maharashtrian food including baingan masala (eggplant curry; ₹80) and okra and tomato dishes.

Information

There are several ATMs in Ganpatipule including one about 400m inland from the MTDC Resort.

Getting There & Around

Ganpatipule has limited transport links. Ratnagiri, 40km to the south, is the nearest major town. Hourly buses (₹50, 1½ hours) connect the two places; autorickshaws/taxis cost ₹400/750.

Several buses leave Ganpatipule for Mumbai (₹400 to ₹650, 10 hours) between 6.30pm and 10pm; there are also three daily buses to both Pune (₹350) and Kolhapur (₹145).

Ratnagiri train station is on the Konkan Railway line. From Ratnagiri, the Mandovi Express goes daily to Mumbai (2nd class/1st class ₹160/1670, 7½ hours, 2.10pm). The return train heading for Goa (2nd class/1st class ₹120/1400, 5½ hours) is at 1.10pm. From Ratnagiri's old bus stand, buses leave for Goa (semi-deluxe ₹270, six hours) and Kolhapur (₹160, four hours).

Malvan

📞 02365

A government tourism promo parades the emerging Malvan region as comparable to Tahiti, which is a tad ambitious, but it does boast near-white sands, sparkling seas and jungle-fringed backwaters. Offshore there are coral reefs, sea caves and vibrant marine life – diving is becoming a huge draw with the opening of a new world-class diving school.

Malvan town is one of the prettiest on the Konkan Coast. It's a mellow place with a good stock of old wooden buildings and a busy little harbour and bazaar. Stretching directly south of the centre is lovely Tarkali beach, home to many hotels and guesthouses.

👁️ Sights & Activities

There are several dodgy dive shops operating in Malvan, which allow unqualified diving; if you want to dive, stick with a registered operator.

The southern end of Tarkali beach is bordered by the broad, beautiful Karli river. Several boat operators (you'll find them moored on the northern bank) offer multi-stop boat trips along this backwater; to Seagull Island, Golden Rock, Dolphin Point and cove beaches. A three-hour trip with a maximum of six people costs ₹1800 per boat.

Sindhudurg Fort

FORT

Built by Shivaji and dating from 1664, this monstrous fort lies on an offshore island and can be reached by frequent ferries (9am to 5.30pm, ₹50) from Malvan's harbour. It's not as impressive as Janjira up the coast, and today lies mostly in ruins, but it remains a powerful presence. You can explore its ramparts and the coastal views are impressive. Boatmen allow you one hour on the island.

Tarkali Beach

BEACH

A golden arc south of Marvan, this crescent-shaped sandy beach is a vision of tropical India, fringed by coconut palms and casuarina trees, plus the odd cow. At dusk (between October and February) fishermen work together to haul in huge, kilometre-long nets that are packed with sardines.

★ IISDA

(Indian Institute of Scuba Diving & Aquasports; 📞 02365-248790; www.iisda.gov.in; Tarkali Beach; per dive ₹3000, PADI Open Water ₹22,000) This state-of-the-art new PADI diving centre is India's finest, run by marine biologist and all-round diving pro Dr Sarang Kulkarni. It offers professional instruction, a 20m-long and 8m-deep pool for training, air-conditioned classrooms and comfortable sleeping quarters for students. IISDA is also a marine conservation centre and there's even a restaurant, bar and tennis court. Located 7km south of Malvan.

KONKAN SPECIALITIES

Often called Malvani cuisine, this coastal region has many special dishes and snacks you should try.

dhondas – cucumber cakes made from cucumber and palm sugar

kaju chi aamti – spicy cashew-nut curry

kombdi vade – spicy chicken prepared with lime and coconut mori masala – shark curry

sol kadhi – pink-coloured, slightly sour digestive made from coconut milk and kokum fruit; accompanies many meals

MALVAN NATIONAL MARINE PARK

The shoreline around Malvan is incredibly diverse, with rich wetlands, sandy and rocky beaches, mangroves and river estuaries. But underwater it's arguably even more compelling, with coral and caves that shelter abundant marine life and extensive forests of sargassum seaweed which acts as a nursery for juvenile fish. Rocky offshore islands attract schools of snapper and large grouper, butterfly fish, yellow-striped fusiliers and lobster. Pods of dolphins are regularly seen between November and February. And the world's largest fish, the whale shark, even puts in an appearance every now and then.

Presently only a small section is protected as the Malvan National Marine Park, which encompasses the Sindhudurg Fort, yet such is its rich diversity that marine biologists, including IISDA's director Dr Sarang Kulkarni, feel it's essential that the boundaries are extended. The reef extends for 16km offshore and has been described as India's Great Barrier Reef. A submerged plateau, the Angria Bank is 40km long and 20km wide, with healthy coral and an abundance of sealife: nurse sharks are seen on almost every dive. IISDA has plans to operate day trips and liveaboard excursions to Angria; consult its website for information.

Scorpion Cyber (Dr Vallabh Marg; ☎10am-10pm) Several terminals for internet access.

Getting There & Away

The closest train station is Kudal, 38km away. Frequent buses (₹30, one hour) cover the route from Malvan bus stand, or an autorickshaw is about ₹500. Malvan has ordinary buses to:

Kolhapur ₹170, five hours, seven daily

Mumbai ₹500, 12 hours, one daily

Panaji ₹110, 3½ hours, four daily

Ratnagiri ₹165, five hours, three daily

Malvan is only 80km from northern Goa; taxis charge ₹1200 for the two-hour trip.

Matheran

☎02148 / POP 5750 / ELEV 803M

Matheran, literally 'Jungle Above', is a tiny patch of peace and quiet capping a craggy Sahyadri summit within spitting distance of Mumbai's heat and grime. Endowed with shady forests criss-crossed with foot trails and breathtaking lookouts, it still retains an elegance and colonial-era ambience, though creeping commercialism and illegal construction are marring its appeal.

Getting to Matheran is really half the fun. While speedier options are available by road, nothing beats arriving in town on the narrow-gauge toy train that chugs up to the heart of the settlement. Motor vehicles are banned within Matheran, making it an ideal place to give your ears and lungs a rest and your feet some exercise.

Sights & Activities

You can walk along shady forest paths to most of Matheran's viewpoints in a matter of hours; it's a place well suited to stress-free ambling. To catch the sunrise, head to Panorama Point, while Porcupine Point (also known as Sunset Point) is the most popular (read: packed) as the sun drops. Louisa Point and Little Chouk Point also have stunning views of the Sahyadris.

If you're here on a weekend or public holiday you might want to avoid the most crowded section around Echo Point, Charlotte Lake and Honeymoon Point, which get rammed with day trippers.

You can reach the valley below One Tree Hill down the path known as Shivaji's Ladder, supposedly trod upon by the Maratha leader himself. Horse-wallahs will hustle you constantly for rides (about ₹300 per hour).

Sleeping & Eating

Hotels in Matheran are generally overpriced and many places have a minimum two-night stay. Checkout times vary wildly (as early as 7am), as do high- and low-season rates. Matheran shuts shop during the monsoons.

Hope Hall Hotel

HOTEL $

☎230253; www.hopehallmatheran.com; MG Rd; d Mon-Fri ₹1370, Sat & Sun ₹1710) Run by a very hospitable family, this long-running place has been hosting happy travellers for years; the house dates back to 1875. Spacious rooms with high ceilings and arty touches are in two blocks at the rear of the leafy garden. Good breakfasts and drinks are available. Ask Maria to show you her amazing mineral and crystal collection. Rates double during peak holiday periods.

MTDC Resort

(☎ 02148-230277; d ₹1580, with AC ₹5050; 🏠)

This government-run place offers functional, economy rooms, disappointing family rooms, and modern, very attractive air-conditioned rooms in the Shruti villa. The downside is it's located next to the Dasturi car park, so you're away from the midtown action. There's a good restaurant.

★ Verandah in the Forest

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 230296; www.neemranahotels.com; Barr House; d incl breakfast from ₹5880) This deliciously preserved 19th-century bungalow thrives on undiluted nostalgia, with quaintly luxurious rooms. Find yourself reminiscing about bygone times in the company of ornate candelabras, oriental rugs, antique teak furniture, Victorian canvases and grandfather clocks. The verandah has a lovely aspect over Matheran's wooded hillsides, and the in-house restaurant offers fine Indian food and a terrific four-course continental dinner (₹600).

Hotel Woodlands

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 230271; www.woodlandsmatheran.com; Chinoy Rd; r from ₹5540) A venerable old homestead with historic charm and enough modern comforts thrown in to keep the most fussy guest satisfied. The forested setting is very relaxing and the playground should keep the kids occupied. But it's the verandah that steals the show; a great place to kick back.

Shabbir Bhai

INDIAN $

(Merry Rd; mains ₹70-120; ☎ 10am-10pm) Known locally as the 'Byrianiwala', this funky joint has a full North Indian menu, but it's all about the spicy biryanis: chicken, mutton and veg. To find it, take the footpath uphill beside the Jama Masjid on MG Rd.

Information

Entry to Matheran costs ₹40 (₹20 for children), which you pay on arrival at the train station or the Dasturi car park.

Union Bank of India (MG Rd; ☎ 10am-2pm Mon-Fri, to noon Sat) Has an ATM.

Getting There & Away

TAXI

Buses (₹25) and shared taxis (₹75) run from Neral to Matheran's Dasturi car park (30 minutes). Horses (₹300) and hand-pulled rickshaws (₹400) wait here to whisk you (relatively speaking) to Matheran's main bazaar. You can also walk this stretch in a little under an hour (around 3.5km uphill) and your luggage can be hauled for around ₹220.

TRAIN

The toy train (2nd class/1st class ₹35/225) chugs between Matheran and Neral Junction five times daily. The service is suspended during monsoons.

From Mumbai's CST station there are two daily express trains to Neral Junction at 7am and 8.40am (2nd class/1st class ₹45/205, 1½ hours). Other expresses from Mumbai stop at Karjat, down the line from Neral, from where you can backtrack on a local train or catch a bus to Matheran (₹30). From Pune, there are at least 13 daily departures to Karjat. Note: trains from Pune don't stop at Neral Junction.

Getting Around

Apart from hand-pulled rickshaws and horses, walking is the only other transport option in Matheran.

Lonavla

(☎ 02114 / POP 57,400 / ELEV 625M)

Lonavla is an overdeveloped (and overpriced) resort town about 106km southeast of Mumbai. It's far from attractive, with its main drag consisting almost exclusively of garishly lit shops flogging chikki, the rock-hard, brittle sweet made in the area.

The main reason to come here is to visit the nearby Karla and Bhaja caves which, after those at Ellora and Ajanta, are the best in Maharashtra.

Hotels, restaurants and the main road to the caves lie north of the train station. Most of the Lonavla township and its markets are located south of the station.

Activities

Kaivalyadhama Yoga Hospital

YOGA

(☎ 273039; www.kdham.com; 2-week course incl full board US$800) This progressive yoga centre is located in neatly kept grounds about 2km from Lonavla, en route to the Karla and Bhaja Caves. Founded in 1924 by Swami Kavalayanandji, it combines yoga courses with naturopathic therapies. Courses cover full board, yoga classes, programs and lectures.

Nirvana Adventures

PARAGLIDING

(☎ 022-26053724; www.flynirvana.com) Mumbai-based Nirvana Adventures offers paragliding courses (two-day learner course ₹8500 per person including full board) and short tandem flights (from ₹2500) in a charming rural setting near the town of Kamshet, 25km from Lonavla.

Sleeping & Eating

Lonavla's hotels tend to have inflated prices, low standards and early checkouts.

★ Ferreira Resort

HOTEL $

(☎ 272689; www.ferreiraresortlonavla.blogspot.co.uk; DT Shahani Rd; s/d Sun-Thu ₹1350/1500, Fri & Sat ₹1600/1800; 🍷🍷) It's certainly not a resort, but it is something of a rarity in Lonavla: a family-run, well-priced place in a quiet residential location that's close to the train station. All the 16 clean, well presented air-con rooms have a balcony and there's a little lawned garden and small restaurant. The owners are helpful and informative about the region.

Citrus

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 398100; www.citrushotels.com; DT Shahani Rd; r from ₹6380; 🍷🍷🍷) The design and decor of the rooms here don't quite reach the hip hotel target market, but are spacious and well presented and have a modish feel. The garden area has a generously sized pool and loungers. It's a little overpriced, but that's Lonavla.

Biso

ITALIAN $$

(Citrus Hotel, DT Shahani Rd; mains ₹230-340; ☺ noon-3.30pm & 7-10.30pm; 🍷) This could be a delightfully redeeming feature of your Lonavla trip. A top-class alfresco restaurant with an excellent selection of pastas, wood-fired pizzas and desserts.

Information

There are numerous ATMs in town.

Balaji Cyber Café (1st fl, Khandelwal Bldg, New Bazaar; per hour ₹15; ☺ 12.30-10.30pm) Has internet access. Located immediately south of the train station.

Getting There & Away

Lonavla is serviced by MSRTC buses departing from the bus stand to Dadar in Mumbai (ordinary/semideluxe ₹76/118, two hours) and Pune (ordinary/semideluxe ₹66/105, two hours). Luxury AC buses (₹200 to ₹330) also travel to both cities.

All express trains from Mumbai's CST to Pune stop at Lonavla (2nd class ₹75 to ₹90, chair ₹255 to ₹305, 2½ to three hours).

Karla & Bhaja Caves

While they pale in comparison to Ajanta or Ellora, the Karla and Bhaja rock-cut caves, which date from around the 2nd century BC, are among the better examples of Buddhist cave architecture in India. They are also low on commercial tourism, making them ideal places for a quiet excursion. Karla has the most impressive single cave, but Bhaja is a quieter site to explore.

Sights

Karla Cave

CAVE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☺ 9am-5pm) Karla Cave, the largest early chaitya (Buddhist temple) in India, is reached by a 20-minute climb from a mini-bazaar at the base of a hill. Completed in 80 BC, the chaitya is around 40m long and 15m high, and sports a vaulted interior and intricately executed sculptures of Buddha, human and animal figures. Excluding Ellora's Kailasa Temple, this is probably the most impressive cave temple in the state.

A semicircular 'sun window' filters light in towards a dagoba or stupa (the cave's representation of the Buddha), protected by a carved wooden umbrella, the only remaining example of its kind. The cave's roof also retains ancient teak buttresses. The 37 pillars forming the aisles are topped by kneeling elephants. The carved elephant heads on the sides of the vestibule once had ivory tusks. There's a Hindu temple in front of the cave, thronged by pilgrims whose presence adds colour to the scene.

Bhaja Caves

CAVE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☺ 9am-6pm) It's a 3km jaunt from the main road, on the other side of the expressway, to the Bhaja Caves, where the setting is lush, greener and quieter than at Karla Cave. Thought to date from around 200 BC, 10 of the 18 caves here are viharas (Buddhist monasteries), while Cave 12 is an open chaitya (Buddhist temple), earlier than that at Karla, containing a simple dagoba. Beyond this is a strange huddle of 14 stupas, five inside and nine outside a smaller cave.

Sleeping & Eating

MTDC Karla Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 02114-282230; d ₹1740, with AC from ₹2090; 🗺) Set off the highway, close to the Karla-Bhaja access point, this large resort in a rural location attracts weekendening Mumbai families thanks to its water park (closed in winter) and play facilities. It's much more peaceful during the week. There's a wide choice of rooms and cottages, from economy to smart, and a restaurant.

Getting There & Around

Karla is 11km east of Lonavla, and Bhaja 9km. Both can be visited on a local bus (₹16, 30 minutes) to the access point, from where it's about a 6km return walk on each side to the two sites. But that would be exhausting and hot. Autorickshaws charge around ₹500 from Lonavla for the tour, including waiting time.

Pune

☎ 020 / POP 5.14 MILLION / ELEV 535M

A thriving, vibrant metropolis, Pune is a centre of academia and business that epitomises 'New India' with its baffling mix of capitalism, spiritualism, ancient and modern. It's also globally famous, or notorious, for an ashram, the Osho International Meditation Resort, founded by the late guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

Pune was initially given pride of place by Shivaji and the ruling Peshwas, who made it their capital. The British took the city in 1817 and, thanks to its cool and dry climate, soon made it the Bombay Presidency's monsoon capital. Globalisation knocked on Pune's doors in the 1990s, following which it went in for an image overhaul. However, some colonial-era charm was retained in a few old buildings and residential areas, bringing about a pleasant coexistence of the old and new, which (despite the pollution and traffic) makes Pune a worthwhile place to explore.

In August/September Ganesh Chaturthi (p777) brings on a tide of festivities across the city, and provides a fantastic window for exploring the city's cultural side. On a more sombre note, the fatal 2010 terrorist attack on the German Bakery, a once favourite haunt for travellers and ashramites, remains a painful memory in this peace-loving city.

The city sits at the confluence of the Mutha and Mula rivers. Mahatma Gandhi (MG) Rd, about 1km south of Pune train station, is the main commercial street. The leafy upmarket suburb of Koregaon Park, north-east of the train station, is home to numerous hotels, restaurants, coffee shops and, of course, the Osho ashram.

Sights & Activities

Aga Khan Palace

PALACE

(Ahmednagar Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ 9am-5.30pm) The grand Aga Khan Palace is set in a peaceful wooded 6.5-hectare plot north-east of the centre. Built in 1892 by Sultan Aga Khan III, this graceful building was where Mahatma Gandhi and other prominent nationalist leaders were interned by the British following Gandhi's Quit India campaign in 1942. The main palace now houses the Gandhi National Memorial where you can peek into the room where the Mahatma used to stay. Photos and paintings exhibit moments in his extraordinary life.

Both Kasturba Gandhi, the Mahatma's wife, and Mahadeobhai Desai, his secretary for 35 years, died here in confinement. You'll find their shrines (containing their ashes) in a quiet garden to the rear.

MUSEUM

(www.rajakelkarmuseum.com; Bajirao Rd, 1377-1378 Natu Baug; Indian/foreigner ₹50/200; ☀ 10am-5.30pm) An oddball of a museum that's one of Pune's true delights, housing only a fraction of the 20,000-odd objects of Indian daily life painstakingly collected by Dinkar Kelkar (who died in 1990). The quirky pan-Indian collection includes hundreds of hookah pipes, writing instruments, lamps, textiles, toys, entire doors and windows, kitchen utensils, furniture, puppets, jewellery, betel-nut cutters and an amazing gallery of musical instruments.

Tribal Cultural Museum

MUSEUM

(28 Queen's Garden; Indian/foreigner ₹10/200; ☀ 10.30am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) This small museum showcases artefacts (jewellery, utensils, musical instruments, even black-magic accessories) from remote tribal belts. Highlights include some demonic-looking papier-mâché festival masks and superb monochrome Warli paintings.

Shaniwar Wada

FORT

(Shivaji Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ 8am-6pm) The remains of this fortified palace of the Peshwa rulers are located in the old part of the city. ### Osho Teerth Gardens

GARDENS

(☀ 6-9am & 3-6pm) The 5-hectare Osho Teerth gardens are a verdant escape from urban living with giant bamboo, jogging trails, a gurgling brook and smooching couples. You don't have to be an Osho member as they're accessible to all.

Osho International Meditation Resort

MEDITATION

(☎ 66019999; www.osho.com; 17 Koregaon Park) Indelibly linked with Pune's identity, this iconic ashram-resort, located in a leafy, upscale northern suburb, has been drawing thousands of sanyasins (seekers) since the death of Osho in 1990. With its swimming pool, sauna and spa, 'zennis' and boutique guesthouse, it is, to some, the ultimate place to indulge in some luxe meditation. Alternately, detractors point fingers at the blatant commercialisation and high cost and accuse it of marketing a warped version of the mystic East to rich, gullible Westerners.

To make up your own mind you'll have to cough up the (steep) registration and daily meditation fees. Tours of the facilities are no longer permitted – the only way to access Osho is to pay an initial ₹1400, which covers registration (passport required) and a mandatory on-the-spot HIV test (sterile needles used). You'll also need two robes (one ma-room and one white, ₹500 to ₹700 per robe) and attend a welcome session (daily at 9am). Note that the rules and regulations are very strict, even pedantic: swimmers are only allowed to wear, and have to pay for, Osho maroon swimwear and there are mandatory (Osho maroon) clothes for the gym. Indian nationals are also lectured about behaviour (eg not hassling foreign women) in special etiquette classes.

Once you've got all this out the way, you can then pay for a meditation pass (₹760/1560 per day Indian/foreigner, with discounts for longer stays). Oh, that's apart from the fee to enter the Basho Spa (where the pool, Jacuzzi, gym, saunas and tennis courts are all located), which will be a further ₹280.

The main centre for meditation and the nightly white-robed spiritual dance in the Osho Auditorium (no coughing or sneezing, please). The Osho Samadhi, where the guru's ashes are kept, is also open for meditation. The commune's 'Multiversity' runs a plethora of courses in meditation and other esoteric techniques. In the evenings, as well as meditation sessions, there's a 'nightlife' program, with parties, cinema and theatre and 'creativity nights'. Photography is not permitted anywhere in the ashram.

proportioned, and though a little Spartan, they do have bathrooms with hot water, wi-fi and cable TV. It enjoys a good location on a quiet street in Koregaon Park, close to popular cafes.

★ Hotel Sunderban

HOTEL $$

(☎ 26124949; www.tghotels.com; 19 Koregaon Park; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3300/3850; 📶) Set around a manicured lawn right next to the Osho Resort, this renovated art deco bungalow effortlessly combines colonial-era class with boutique appeal. Deluxe rooms in the main building sport antique furniture, while even the cheapest options are beautifully presented (though lack a private bathroom). The priciest rooms are across the lawns, in a sleek, glass-fronted building.

An additional draw is the in-house fine-dining restaurant, Dario's.

Novotel Pune Nagar Road

HOTEL $$

(☎ 67056000; www.novotel.com; Weikfield IT City Infopark, Pune-Nagar Rd; s/d from ₹4330/4650; 📶) Around 5km northeast of the centre, handily placed for the airport and tech parks, this contemporary-chic hotel gets everything right, with an excellent restaurant-cafe, a rooftop pool big enough for laps, good gym, superb service and commodious rooms. It's fine value.

OSHO: GURU OF SEX

Ever tried mixing spirituality with primal instincts, and garnishing with oodles of expensive trinkets? Well, Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh (1931–90) certainly did. Osho, as he preferred to be called, was one of India's most flamboyant 'export gurus' to market the mystic East to the world, and undoubtedly the most controversial.

Initially based in Pune, he followed no particular religion or philosophy, and outraged many across the world with his advocacy of sex as a path to enlightenment. A darling of the international media, he quickly earned himself the epithet 'sex guru'. In 1981, Rajneesh took his curious blend of Californian pop psychology and Indian mysticism to the USA, where he set up an agricultural commune in Oregon. There, his ashram's notoriety, as well as its fleet of (material and thus valueless!) Rolls-Royces grew, until raging local opposition following a bizarre, infamous food poisoning incident (designed to manipulate local elections) moved the authorities to charge Osho with immigration fraud. He was fined US$400,000 and deported.

An epic journey then began, during which Osho and his followers, in their search for a new base, were either deported from or denied entry into 21 countries. By 1987, he was back at his Pune ashram, where thousands of foreigners soon flocked for his nightly discourses and meditation sessions.

They still come from across the globe. Such is the demand for the resort's facilities that prices are continually on the rise, with luxury being redefined every day. Interestingly, despite Osho's comments on how nobody should be poor, no money generated by the resort goes into helping the disadvantaged.

In recent years the Osho institute has embraced the digital age, with its iOsho portal offering iMeditate programs, Osho radio and Osho library; subscriptions are required.

Hotel Lotus

HOTEL $$

(☎ 26139701; www.hotelsuryavilla.com; Lane 5, Koregaon Park; s/d ₹1640/2230, with AC ₹2230/2820; 🍷🍴) Hotel Lotus is good value for the quiet, Koregaon Park location, and though the rooms are not that spacious, they are light and airy, most with balconies. There's no restaurant, though they offer room service and there are plenty of good eating options close by.

Samrat Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎ 26137964; thesamrathotel@vsnl.net; 17 Wilson Garden; s/d ₹2110/2530, with AC from ₹2930/3390; 🍷🍴) It's not quite as grand as its fancy lobby would indicate, but with a central location just a few steps from the train station and spacious, well-maintained rooms, the Samrat represents decent value. Complimentary airport pick-up.

Hotel Srimaan

HOTEL $$

(☎ 26136565; srimaan@vsnl.com; 361/5 Bund Garden Rd; s/d ₹3120/3600; 🍷🍴📶) With a good location opposite the Pune Central shopping mall, free wi-fi and a well-regarded Italian restaurant, this business hotel is a solid choice. Rooms are compact but quite luxurious for the price.

Osho Meditation Resort*Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(☎ 66019900; www.osho.com; Koregaon Park; s/d ₹6930/7510; 🍷🍴) This uberchic place will only allow you in if you come to meditate at the Osho International Meditation Resort. The rooms and common spaces are an exercise in modern minimalist aesthetics with several ultra-luxe features – including purified fresh air supplied in all rooms!

Eating*Kayani Bakery

BAKERY $

(6 East St; cakes & biscuits per kg from ₹200; ☎ 7.30am-1pm & 3.30-8pm) A Raj-era institution that seems to be stuck in a time warp, where those in the know queue (in the loose sense of the word) for Shrewsbury biscuits (₹320 per kilogram), bread, Madeira (₹100) and sponge cakes (₹40).

Juice World

CAFE $

(2436/B East St; snacks ₹60-80; ☎ 11am-11.30pm) This casual cafe with outdoor seating serves wholesome snacks such as pav bhaji (spiced vegetables and bread) and delicious fresh fruit juices and shakes. On a hot day it's impossible to walk past its fruit displays and not drop in for a drink.

Coffee House

CAFE $

(2A Moledina Rd; mains ₹60-140; ☎ 8am-11.30pm) A calm and clean, coffee-coloured, almost art deco retreat with a huge menu and satisfying filter coffee. Dishes include dosas and other excellent South Indian menu items, plus North Indian curries and Chinese.

German Bakery

BAKERY $$

(North Main Rd; cakes ₹40-170, mains ₹160-190; ☎ 6.30am-11.30pm; 🍷) A Pune institution famous for its traveller-gearred grub, including omelettes, breakfasts, Greek salad, cappuccinos and lots of sweet treats (try the mango cheesecake). Located on a very busy traffic-plagued corner, it's running again after the fatal terrorist attack here in 2010.

Prem's

MULTICUISINE $$

(North Main Rd, Koregaon Park; mains ₹140-340; ☎ 8am-11.30pm; 🍷) In a quiet, tree-canopied courtyard, Prem's is perfect for a lazy, beery daytime drinking session, with lots of imported beers to try, perhaps with one of its famous sizzlers. The morning after? Well, Prem's is the logical choice again, with the city's best breakfast selection: eggs Benedict with smoked salmon (₹160), cereals, pancakes and detox shots.

Mayur

INDIAN $$$

(www.mayurthali.com; 2434 East St; dishes/thalis from ₹60/300; ☎ 8am-11pm) Famous throughout Pune for its sweet, spicy and unlimited Gujarati-style thalis, which are lovingly prepared, as well as good lassis and juices!

★ Malaka Spice

ASIAN FUSION $$$

(www.malakaspice.com; Lane 5, Koregaon Park, North Main Rd; mains ₹280-730; ☎ 11.30am-11.30pm; 🍷) Mouth-watering Southeast Asian fare that's been given a creative tweak or two by star chefs. Choose from the classic or street menu, both strong on seafood, vegetarian, chicken, duck and mutton offerings. Eat alfresco or in the air-con room (which doubles as an art gallery).

★ Dario's

ITALIAN $$$

(www.darios.in; Hotel Sunderban, 19 Koregaon Park; mains ₹310-380; ☎ 11.30am-3pm & 7-11pm; 🍷) At the rear of Hotel Sunderban, this Italian place is perhaps the most elegant dining experience in Pune, with fine art in the stunning air-con dining room and a gorgeous courtyard for alfresco meals. Expensive but worth a splurge with homemade pasta, milanesas, fish and fine salads: try a Bosco (₹450) with milanesas and mushrooms.

The Place: Touche the Sizzler

MULTICUISINE $$$

(7 Moledina Rd; mains ₹330-480; ☎11.30am-3.30pm & 7-10.45pm) The perfect old-school eating option where the menu evokes the days of the Raj, Queen Victoria and all that old chap: shrimp cocktails, Russian salads, steak cordon bleu and a few options from the tandoor. The smoking sizzlers (veg, seafood, beef, chicken) can't be beat.

Drinking & Entertainment

1000 Oaks

NIGHTCLUB

(2417 East St; ☎7pm-late) An old favourite with a cosy pub-style bar, a compact dance floor and a charming terrace for those who prefer it quieter. Pitchers (₹700 to ₹750) of Long Island iced tea and sangria are very popular. There's live music on Sunday.

Hoppipola – All Day Bar & Bonhomie

BAR

(ITI Park, Aundh; ☎noon-11pm Tue-Sun, 5-11pm Mon; ☎) Hip new bar in the university zone that attracts a young arty, studenty crowd with its zany decor, chillout garden, wine and cocktail selection and good bar food: try the rasta chicken. There's a relaxed vibe during the week, but it gets rammed on weekends. It's around 6km west of the centre.

MAHABALESHWAR

Once a summer capital under the British, today the hill station of Mahabaleshwar (1327m) is an over-developed mess, tainted by an ugly building boom and traffic chaos as tourists attempt a mad dash to tick off its viewpoints. There's no massive reason to visit, though the town can be used as a base to visit the impressive Pratapgad fort (p808) an hour or so away. Don't even consider dropping by during the monsoon when the whole town virtually shuts down (and a staggering 6m of rain falls).

From Mahabaleshwar bus stand, state buses leave roughly hourly for Pune (semideluxe ₹240, 3½ hours). Luxury buses can be booked via agents in the bazaar for Goa (₹1300 to ₹1780, 12 hours, some with a changeover in Surur); Mumbai (₹525 to ₹800, 7½ hours) and Pune (₹630 to ₹790, 3½ hours).

For the Pratapgad fort, a state bus (₹130 return, one hour, 9.15am) does a daily round-trip, with a waiting time of around one hour; taxi drivers charge a fixed ₹1000 return.

BUS

Buses leave the Pune train station stand (☎020-26126218) for Mumbai, Goa, Belgaum, Kolhapur (₹350, five hours, hourly), Mahabaleshwar and Lonavla (₹170, 2½ hours, hourly). Deluxe buses shuttle from here to Dadar (Mumbai; ₹330, 3½ hours) every hour. From the Shivaji Nagar bus stand (☎020-25536970) buses go to Aurangabad (from ₹270, five to six hours, every 45 minutes), Ahmedabad and Nasik, while buses for Sinhadag, Bengaluru and Mangalore leave from the Swargate bus stand (☎020-24441591).

Private buses head to Panaji in Goa (ordinary from ₹300, AC sleeper ₹700 to ₹1200, 11 hours), Nasik (semideluxe/deluxe ₹270/550, 5½ hours) and Aurangabad (₹250/550, 5½ hours). Pune has three bus stands.

TAXI

Shared taxis (up to four passengers) link Pune with Mumbai airport around the clock. They leave from the taxi stand (☎02026121090) in front of Pune train station (₹475 per seat, 2½ hours). To rent a car and driver try Simran Travels (☎26153222; North Main Rd, Koregaon Park).

TRAIN

Pune train station (sometimes called Pune Junction) is in the heart of the city, on HH Prince Aga Khan Rd. There are very regular, roughly hourly, services to Mumbai, and good links to cities including Delhi, Chennai and Hyderabad.

i Getting Around

The modern airport is 8km northeast of the city. From the centre of town, an autorickshaw costs about ₹120 and a taxi ₹280.

Autorickshaws can be found everywhere; a trip from the train station to Koregaon Park costs about ₹40 (more at night).

Around Pune

Sinhadag

The ruined Sinhadag (Lion Fort; ☺dawn-dusk FREE), situated about 24km southwest of Pune, was wrested by Maratha leader Shivaji from the Bijapur kings in 1670. In the epic battle (where he lost his son Sambhaji), Shivaji is said to have used monitor lizards yoked with ropes to scale the fort's craggy walls. Today, it's in a poor state, but worth visiting for the sweeping views and opportunity to hike in the hills. From Sinhadag village, shared 4WDs (₹50) can cart you 10km to the base of the summit. Bus 50 runs frequently to Sinhadag village from Swargate (₹27, 45 minutes).

PRATAPGAD FORT

The spectacular Pratapgad Fort (Indian/foreigner ₹10/100; ☀9am-dusk), built by Shivaji in 1656 (and still owned by his descendants), straddles a high mountain ridge 24km northwest of the town of Mahabaleshwar. In 1659, Shivaji agreed to meet Bijapuri general Afzal Khan here, in an attempt to end a stalemate. Despite a no-arms agreement, Shivaji, upon greeting Khan, disembowelled his enemy with a set of iron baghnakh (tiger's claws). Khan's tomb marks the site of this painful encounter at the base of the fort. Pratapgad is reached by a 500-step climb that affords brilliant views. For ₹200 a guide will take you to 20 points of interest, taking nearly two hours.

From the bus stand in Mahabaleshwar, 120km south of Pune, a state bus (₹130 return, one hour, 9.15am) does a daily shuttle to the fort, with a waiting time of around one hour. Taxi drivers in Mahabaleshwar charge a fixed ₹1000 return.

Shivneri

Situated 90km northwest of Pune, above the village of Junnar, Shivneri Fort (☀dawn-dusk) FREE holds the distinction of being the birthplace of Shivaji. Within the ramparts of this ruined fort are the old royal stables, a mosque dating back to the Mughal era and several rock-cut reservoirs. The most important structure is Shivkunj, the pavilion in which Shivaji was born.

About 4km from Shivneri, on the other side of Junnar, is an interesting group of Hinayana Buddhist caves called Lenyadri (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀dawn-dusk). Of the 30-odd caves, cave 7 is the most impressive, and interestingly houses an image of the Hindu god Ganesh.

Hourly buses (₹85, two hours) connect Pune's Shivaji Nagar terminus with Junnar. A cab from Pune is about ₹2600.

Kolhapur

📍 0231 / POP 561,300 / ELEV 550M

A little-visited city, Kolhapur is the perfect place to get intimate with the flamboyant side of India. Only a few hours from Goa, this historic settlement boasts an intensely fascinating temple complex. In August, Kolhapur is at its vibrant best, when Naag Panchami (☀Jul/Aug), a snake-worshipping festival, is held in tandem with one at Pune. Gastronomes take note: the town is also the birthplace of the famed, spicy Kolhapuri cuisine, especially chicken and mutton dishes.

The old town around the Mahalaxmi Temple is 3km southwest of the bus and train stations, while the 'new' palace is a similar distance to the north. Rankala Lake, a popular spot for evening strolls, is 5km southwest of the stations.

👁 Sights

The atmospheric old town quarter around the Mahalaxmi Temple and Old Palace has a huge (traffic-free) plaza and is accessed by a monumental gateway.

★ Mahalaxmi Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀5am-10.30pm) One of Maharashtra's most important and vibrant places of worship, the Mahalaxmi Temple is dedicated to Amba Bai (Mother Goddess). The temple's origins date back to AD 10, but much of the present structure is from the 18th century. It draws an unceasing tide of humanity, as pilgrims press to enter the holy inner sanctuary and bands of musicians and worshippers chant devotions. Non-Hindus are welcome and it's a fantastic place for people-watching.

★ Shree Chhatrapati Shahu Museum

MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner incl coffee ₹20/75; ☀9.30am-5.30pm) 'Bizarre' takes on a whole new meaning at this 'new' palace, an Indo-Saracenic behemoth designed by British architect 'Mad' Charles Mant for the Kolhapur kings in 1884. The madcap museum features countless trophies from the kings' trigger-happy jungle safaris, including walking sticks made from leopard vertebrae and ashtrays fashioned out of tiger skulls and rhino feet. The armoury houses enough weapons to stage a mini-coup. The horror-house effect is brought full circle by the taxidermy section. Don't miss the highly ornate Durbar Hall, where the rulers held court sessions, and dotted around the palace you'll find dozens of portraits of the portly maharajas to admire. Photography is prohibited inside. There's a little cafe by the entrance for snacks (and where foreigners may claim their complimentary coffee). A rickshaw from the train station will cost ₹35.

Old Palace

HISTORIC BUILDING

In the heart of the old town this palace was once the ruling Chatrapati's main residence, and is still occupied by some in the family. You can enter the building's front courtyard but there's little to see today except a temple dedicated to the deity Bhavani Mata.

Motibag Thalim

COURTYARD

Kolhapur is famed for the calibre of its Kushti wrestlers, and at the Motibag Thalim, young athletes train in an earthen pit. The akhara (training ground) is reached through a low doorway and passage beside the entrance to Bhavani Mandap (ask for directions). You are free to walk in and watch, as long as you don't mind the sight of sweaty, semi-naked men and the stench of urine emanating from the loos.

Kasbagh Maidan

SPORTS ARENA

Professional wrestling bouts are held between June and December in this red-earth arena a short walk south of Motibag Thalim.

Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Pavillion

HOTEL $

(☎ 2652751; www.hotelpavillion.co.in; 392 Assembly Rd; s/d incl breakfast ₹1460/1730, with AC from ₹1920/2240; 🏠📞) Located at the far end of a leafy park-cum-office-area, this hotel guarantees a peaceful stay. Its large, well-equipped rooms are perhaps a little dated but many have windows that open out to delightful views of seasonal blossoms.

Hotel Panchshil

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2537517; www.hotelpanchshilkolhapur.com; 517 A2 Shivaji Park; s/d ₹3400/3740; 🏠📞) The ageing lobby and location on a busy road are a little off-putting but the rooms have been given the full makeover treatment and are very inviting, comfortable and stylish. The Little Italy restaurant downstairs is another excellent reason to check in.

Hotel K Tree

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0231-2526990; www.hotelktree.com; 65 E, Shivaji Park; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3230/3880; 🏠📞) With high service standards and very inviting modish rooms, this new hotel is fine value. It's located on a quiet side street, so there's little traffic noise and the multicuisine restaurant has an extensive menu.

Surabhi

INDIAN $

(Hotel Sahyadri Bldg; mains ₹70-100; ☎ 10am-10pm) A great place to savour Kolhapur's legendary snacks such as spicy misal (puffed rice tossed with fried rounds of dough, lentils, onions, herbs and chutneys), thalis and lassi. It's close to the bustling bus stand.

★ Little Italy

ITALIAN $$

(☎ 0231-2537133; www.littleitaly.in; 517 A2 Shivaji Park; mains ₹250-450) If you've been clocking up some hard yards on India's roads, this authentic, professionally run restaurant is just the place to head to sustain you for the next trip. All the flavours are to savour, with a delicious, veg-only menu of antipasta, thin-crust pizzas (from a wood-fired oven), al dente pasta and a great wine list (by the glass available).

Information

Axis Bank ATM Near the Mahalaxmi Temple.

Internet Zone (Kedar Complex, Station Rd; per hour ₹20; ☎ 8am-11pm)

MTDC Tourist Office (☎ 2652935; Assembly Rd; ☎ 10am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) Located opposite the Collector's Office.

State Bank of India (Udyamnagar; ☎ 10am-2pm Mon-Sat) A short autorickshaw ride south-west of the train station near Hutatma Park. Handles foreign exchange and has an ATM.

Getting There & Around

From the bus stand, services head regularly to Pune (semideluxe/deluxe ₹280/500, five hours), Ratnagiri (ordinary/semideluxe ₹120/154, four hours) and ordinary-only buses to Malvan (₹170, five hours). Most private bus agents are on the western side of the square at Mahalaxmi Chambers, across from the bus stand. There are over a dozen daily dozen services to Panaji (semideluxe ₹400, AC sleeper ₹800 to ₹1050, 5½ hours). Overnight AC services head to Mumbai (seat ₹450, sleeper ₹600 to ₹1250, nine hours).

The train station, known as Chatrapati Shahu Maharaj Terminus, is 10 minutes' walk west of the bus stand. Three daily expresses, including the 10.50pm Sahyadri Express, go to Mumbai (sleeper/2AC ₹305/1165, 13 hours) via Pune (₹210/805, eight hours). The Rani Chennama Express makes the long voyage to Bengaluru (sleeper/2AC ₹4000/1555, 17½ hours, 2.20pm). There are no direct trains to Goa.

Autorickshaws are abundant in Kolhapur and many drivers carry conversion charts to calculate fares from the outdated meters.

Kolhapur airport was not operational at the time of research.

Why Go?

Goa is like no other state in India. It could be the Portuguese colonial influence, the endless beaches, the glorious whitewashed churches or the relaxed culture of susegad – a uniquely Goan term that translates as 'laid-backness' and is evident in all aspects of daily life and in the Goan people themselves.

But Goa is far more than its old-school reputation as a hippie haven or its contemporary status as a beach getaway. Goa is as naturally and culturally rich as it is compact; you can go birdwatching in a butterfly-filled forest, marvel at centuries-old cathedrals, trek out to milky waterfalls and aromatic spice farms or meander the capital's charming alleyways. Add a dash of Portuguese-influenced food and architecture, infuse with a colourful blend of religious traditions, pepper with parties and beach shacks, and you've got a recipe that makes Goa easy to enjoy and extremely hard to leave.

When to Go

Goa (Panaji)

Sep–Nov

Post-monsoon, some shacks are up but crowds are still down

Dec–Feb

Festivals, Christmas and great weather; peak prices and crowds from mid-Dec to early Jan.

Mar–Apr

Carnival and Easter celebrations as the season winds down.

Feast of the Three Kings (p845; 6 Jan, Chandor & Reis Magos) Boys re-enact the story of the three kings bearing gifts for Christ.

Shigmotsav (Shigmo) of Holi (Feb/Mar; statewide) Goa's version of the Hindu festival Holi sees coloured powders thrown about and parades in most towns.

Sabado Gordo (Feb/Mar; Panaji) A procession of floats and street parties on the Saturday before Lent.

Carnival (p815; Mar; statewide) A four-day festival kicking off Lent; the party's particularly jubilant in Panaji.

Fama de Menino Jesus (2nd Mon in Oct; Colva) Statue of the baby Jesus is paraded through the streets of Colva.

Feast of St Francis Xavier (p821; 3 Dec; Old Goa) A 10-day celebration of Goa's patron saint Feast of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception (p815; 8 Dec; Margao, Panaji) Fairs and concerts around Panaji's famous church.

History

Goa went through a dizzying array of rulers from Ashoka's Mauryan empire in the 3rd century BC to the long-ruling Kadambas. Subsequent conflict saw the Muslim Delhi sultanate and then Bahmani sultanate fighting the Hindu Vijayanagar empire for control; these were violent times, and in addition to many deaths, lots of Hindu temples were razed. The Adil Shahs of Bijapur created the capital we now call Old Goa in the 15th century.

The Portuguese arrived in 1510, seeking control of the region's lucrative spice routes. They defeated the Bijapur kings and steadily pushed their power from their grand capital at Old Goa out into the provinces. Portuguese rule and religion spread throughout the state – sometimes by force – and the Goan Inquisition brought repression and brutality in the name of Christianity. The Portuguese resisted India's 1947 Independence from Britain but in 1961, after almost a decade in talks to encourage the Portuguese to withdraw, the Indian Army marched in and took Goa by force within three days – virtually without a fight – ending almost five centuries of Portuguese occupation.

Today Goa enjoys one of India's highest per-capita incomes and comparatively high health and literacy rates, with tourism, iron-ore mining (though this is mired in controversy and was suspended by the High Court during 2013–14), agriculture and fishing forming the basis of its economy. The legacy of the Portuguese can still be found almost everywhere, in the state's scores of old mansions, its cuisine, churches and even in its language.

Activities

In season Goa has a whole host of options for yoga and alternative therapies, water sports, paragliding, cooking classes and wildlife-watching.

Yoga & Alternative Therapies

Every imaginable form of yoga, meditation, reiki, ayurvedic massage and other spiritually orientated health regime is practised, taught and relished in Goa, though they usually operate only in the winter season (October or November to April). Palolem and Patnem, in the south, and Arambol, Mandrem, Anjuna, Assagao and Calangute in the north, all offer courses and have reputable yoga retreats.

Wildlife-Watching

Goa is a nature lover's paradise, with an abundance of brilliant birdlife and a fine (but well concealed) collection of fauna, including barking deer and the odd leopard in several inland sanctuaries. Day Tripper (p827) in Calangute offers various nature-related tours, while John's Boat Tours (p825) in Candolim runs birdwatching boat trips, along with crocodile- and dolphin-spotting rides.

Jungle Book (☎9822121431; www.goaeco-tourism.com; Bazar Wada, Colem; elephant rides/wash from ₹700), in Colem, is the place to commune with elephants.

Water Sports

Parasailing, jet-skiing and boat trips are readily available on main beaches. Palolem, with its relatively calm waters, is the best place for kayaking. Goa's tame surf is good for beginners: surfing outfits include Vaayu Waterman's Village (p839) at Aswem Beach, Surf Wala (p840) at Arambol and Banana Surf School (☎7057998120; com; Utorda Beach; lessons €45-250; ☀ 7.30am-12.30pm Oct-Mar) at Utorda.

Goa has four scuba diving outfits where you can gain PADI certification and go on dive trips to Grande Island and further afield. Goa Aquatics (p827), Barracuda Diving (p827) and Goa Diving (☎ 9049442647; www.goading.com; courses from ₹11,000, one-/two-tank dive ₹3000/5000) are recommended.

i Information

The Goa Tourism Development Corporation (p820) provides maps and information, operates hotels throughout the state and runs a host of one-day and multiday tours.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Goa's only airport, Dabolim, is served directly by domestic flights, a handful of international flights from the Middle East; and seasonal package-holiday charters, mostly from Russia, Europe and Britain.

Unless you're on a charter you'll generally have to fly in to a major Indian city and change to a domestic flight with Jet Airways, Air India, SpiceJet or IndiGo.

BUS

Plenty of long-distance interstate buses – both state-run and private – operate to and from Panaji, Margao, Mapusa and Chaudi, near Palolem. Fares for private operators are only slightly higher than for Kadamba government buses, and they fluctuate throughout the year. Long-distance buses may be standard, air-conditioned (AC), Volvo (the most comfortable seater buses) and sleeper. For fares, timetables and online booking see www.goakadamba.com.

TRAIN

The Konkan Railway, the main train line running through Goa, connects Mumbai and Mangalore, though the rail line continues all the way south to Trivandrum. The biggest station in Goa is Margao's Madgaon station. See the Margao section (p844) for useful trains. Other smaller stations on the line include Pernem for Arambol, Thivim for Mapusa and the northern beaches, Karmali (Old Goa) for Panaji, and Canacona for Palolem.

i Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

Dabolim's prepaid taxi counter in the arrivals hall makes arriving easy; buy your ticket here and you'll be ushered to a cab. Real budgeteers without much luggage can try walking out to the main road and waving down one of the frequent buses heading east from Vasco da Gama to Margao and catch onward transport from there.

BUS

Goa's extensive network of local buses run frequently and fares range from ₹5 to ₹40. Traveling between north, central and south Goa you'll need to change buses at either Panaji or Margao.

CAR & MOTORCYCLE

It's easy in Goa to organise a private car with a driver for long-distance day trips. Expect to pay from ₹2000 for a full day out on the road (usually defined as eight hours and 80km). It's also possible, if you have the nerves and the need to feel independent, to procure a self-drive car. A

SLEEPING PRICES IN GOA

Accommodation prices in Goa vary considerably depending on the season and demand. High-season prices run from November to late February, but prices climb higher to a peak rate during the crowded Christmas and New Year period (around 22 December to 3 January). Mid-season is October and March to April, and low season is the monsoon (May to September). These seasonal dates can vary a little depending on the monsoon and the granting of shack licences, which are renewed every couple of years. As well as hotels, seasonal beach huts and guesthouses, throughout Goa's coastal belt are private rooms and whole houses to let, generally for stays of a week or more.

All accommodation rates listed are for the high season – but not the peak Christmas period, when you'll almost certainly have to book ahead anyway. Always call ahead for rates and ask about discounts. Most accommodation places have an 11am or noon checkout. To compare or book beach huts in South Goa, check out www.beachhutbooking.com.

Accommodation price ranges used in this chapter are as follows:

small Maruti will cost from ₹900 to ₹1200 per day and a large jeep around ₹2000, excluding petrol and usually with a kilometre limit. Your best bet for rental is online at sites such as www.goa2u.com and www.mygoatour.com.

You'll rarely go far on a Goan road without seeing a tourist whizzing by on a scooter or motorbike, and renting one is a breeze. You'll likely pay from ₹200 to ₹300 per day for a scooter, ₹400 for a smaller Yamaha motorbike, and ₹500 for a Royal Enfield Bullet. These prices can drop considerably if you're renting for more than a few days or if it's an off-peak period – it's all supply and demand, so bargain if there are lots of machines around.

Bear in mind that Goan roads – while better than many Indian roads – can be tricky, filled with human, bovine, canine, feline, mechanical and avian obstacles, as well as potholes, speed-breakers and hairpin bends. Take it slowly, avoid riding at night (when black cows and drunk tourists can prove dangerous), don't attempt a north-south day trip on a 50cc scooter, and ask for a helmet – in theory, compulsory, though the law is still routinely ignored by Goans and tourists alike.

TAXI & AUTORICKSHAW

Taxis are widely available for town-hopping, but the local union cartel means prices are high, especially at night. A new initiative by Goa Tourism is the Women Taxi Service (☎ 0832-2437437), with female drivers, phone-only bookings and only females, couples or families accepted as passengers. The vehicles are fitted with GPS monitoring, martial-arts trained drivers and accurate meters. Fares can even be paid with a credit card.

Unlike elsewhere in India, autorickshaws are not much cheaper than taxis and are not as common, but they're still good for short trips if you can find one. Motorcycle taxis, known as 'pilots', are also a licensed form of taxi in Goa, identified by a yellow front mudguard. They're only really common around major taxi stands and beach resorts and cost half the price of a taxi.

DRUGS

Acid, ecstasy, cocaine, charas (hashish), marijuana and most other forms of drugs are illegal in India (though still available in Goa), and purchasing or carrying drugs is fraught with danger. Goa's Fort Aguada jail is filled with prisoners, including some foreigners, serving lengthy sentences for drug offences. Being caught in possession of even a small quantity of illegal substances can mean a 10-year stretch.

CENTRAL GOA

Panaji (Panjim)

POP 115,000

One of India's most relaxed state capitals, Panaji (Panjim) overlooks the mouth of the broad Mandovi River, where party boats and floating casinos cast neon reflections in the night. A glorious whitewashed church lords over the city centre, a broad tree-lined boulevard skirts the river and grand colonial-era buildings rub shoulders with arty boutiques, old-school bookshops and backstreet bars.

But it's the tangle of narrow streets in the old quarter of Fontainhas that really steal the show. Nowhere is the Portuguese influence felt more strongly than here, where the late afternoon sun lights up yellow houses with purple doors, and around each corner you'll find crumbling ochre-coloured mansions with wrought-iron balconies, terracotta-tiled roofs and oyster-shell windows. Panjim is a place for walking, enjoying the peace of the afternoon siesta, eating well and meeting real Goans. A day or two in the capital really is an essential part of your Goan experience.

👁 Sights & Activities

One of the great pleasures of Panaji is long, leisurely strolls through the sleepy Portuguese-era districts of Sao Tomé, Fontainhas and Altinho. Riverside Campal Gardens, west of the centre, and Miramar Beach, 2km further on, are also popular spots.

★ Church of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception

CHURCH

(cnr Emilio Gracia & Jose Falcao Rds; ☎ 10am-12.30pm & 3-5.30pm Mon-Sat, 11am-12.30pm & 3.30-5pm Sun, English Mass 8am) Panaji's spiritual, as well as geographical, centre is this elevated, pearly white church, built in 1619 over an older, smaller 1540 chapel and stacked like a fancy white wedding cake. When Panaji was little more than a sleepy fishing village, this church was the first port of call for sailors from Lisbon, who would give thanks for a safe crossing, before continuing to Ela (Old Goa) further east up the river. The church is beautifully illuminated at night.

Goa State Museum

MUSEUM

(☎ 0832-2438006; www.goamuseum.gov.in; EDC Complex, Patto; ☎ 9.30am-5.30pm Mon-Sat)

FREE This spacious museum east of town houses an eclectic, if not extensive, collection of items tracing aspects of Goan history. As well as some beautiful Hindu and Jain sculptures and bronzes, there are nice examples of Portuguese-era furniture, coins, an intricately carved chariot and a pair of quirky antique rotary lottery machines.

Goa State Central Library

LIBRARY

(Sanskriti Bhavan, Patto; ☎9am-7.30pm Mon-Fri, 9.30am-5.45pm Sat & Sun) FREE Panaji's ultra-modern new state library, near the state museum, has six floors of reading material, a bookshop and gallery. The 2nd floor features a children's book section and internet browsing (free, but technically only for academic research). The 4th floor has Goan history books and the 6th a large collection of Portuguese books.

Houses of Goa Museum

MUSEUM

(☎0832-2410711; www.archgoa.org; near Nisha's Play School, Torda; adult/child ₹100/25; ☎10am-7.30pm Tue-Sun) This multilevel museum was created by a well-known local architect, Gerard da Cunha, to illuminate the history of Goan architecture. Interesting displays on building practices and European and local design will change the way you see those old Goan homes. The triangular building is an architectural oddity in itself, and the museum traces Goan architectural traditions, building materials and styles in an in-depth but accessible style. From Panaji, a taxi or rickshaw will cost you about ₹400 one-way.

👉 Tours

Goa Tourism and several private companies offer cruises on the Mandovi River from Santa Monica Jetty. With bars and DJs playing loud music, these can get rowdy on weekends but are an entertaining perspective on the capital.

Heritage walking tours (☎9823025748; per person ₹500, per person for five or more ₹250), covering the old Portuguese quarter, are conducted by experienced local guides on demand.

Mandovi River Cruises

CRUISE

(sunset cruise ₹200, dinner cruise ₹650, backwater cruise ₹900; ☎sunset cruise 6pm, sundown cruise 7.15pm, dinner cruise 8.45pm Wed & Sat, backwater cruise 9.30am-4pm Tue & Fri) Goa Tourism operates a range of entertaining hour-long cruises along the Mandovi River aboard the Santa Monica or Shantadurga. All include a live band and usually performances of Goan folk songs and dances. There are also twice-weekly, two-hour dinner cruises and a twice-weekly, all-day backwater cruise, which takes you down the Mandovi to Old Goa, stopping for lunch at a spice plantation and then heading back past Divar and Chorao Islands. All cruises depart from the Santa Monica Jetty next to the Mandovi Bridge, where you can purchase tickets.

🌟 Festivals & Events

International Film Festival of India

FILM FESTIVAL

(www.iffi.nic.in; Panaji; ☎Nov) Film screenings and Bollywood glitterati everywhere.

Feast of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception

RELIGIOUS

(Margao, Panaji; ☎8 Dec) Fairs and concerts are held, as is a beautiful church service at Panaji's Church of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception.

Carnival

RELIGIOUS

(statewide; ☎Mar) A four-day festival kicking off Lent; the party's particularly jubilant in Panaji.

🛏 Sleeping

As in the rest of Goa, prices vary in Panaji depending on supply and demand.

★ Old Quarter Hostel

HOSTEL $

(☎0832-6517606; www.thehostelcrowd.com; 31st Jan Rd, Fontainhas; dm ₹450, d with AC from ₹2000; 📶📶) Backpackers rejoice! This cool new hostel in an old Portuguese-style house in historic Fontainhas offers slick four-bed dorms with lockers and two comfortable doubles upstairs, along with a cafe, arty murals, good wi-fi and bikes. Noon checkout.

Pousada Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎9850998213, 0832-2422618; sabrinatelles@yahoo.com; Luis de Menezes Rd; s/d from ₹800/1050, d with AC ₹1575; 📶📶) The five rooms in this bright-yellow place are simple but clean and come with comfy spring-mattress beds and TV. Owner Sabrina is friendly and no-nonsense, and it's one of Panaji's better budget guesthouses.

★ Panjim Inn

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎ 0832-2226523, 9823025748; www.panjiminn.com; 31st Jan Rd; s ₹3400-6000, d ₹3900-6500, ste ₹5950; 🍷🍷) One of the original heritage hotels in Fontainhas, the Panjim Inn has been a long-standing favourite for its character and charm, friendly owners and helpful staff. This beautiful 19th-century mansion has 12 charismatic rooms in the original house, along with 12 newer rooms with modern touches, but all have four-poster beds, colonial-era furniture and artworks. Buffet breakfast is included, and the restaurant serves excellent Goan food.

Panjim Pousada

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 0832-2226523; www.panjiminn.com; 31st Jan Rd; s ₹3400-4400, d ₹3900-4900; 🍷🍷) In an old Hindu mansion, the nine divine rooms at Panjim Pousada are set off by a stunning central courtyard, with antique furnishings and lovely art on the walls. Various doorways and staircases lead to the rooms; those on the upper level are the best.

Afonso Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9764300165, 0832-222359; www.afonsoguesthouse.com; St Sebastian Rd; d ₹1800-3000; 🍷🍷)

Run by the friendly Jeanette, this pretty Portuguese-style townhouse offers spacious, well-kept rooms with timber ceilings. The rooftop terrace makes for sunny breakfasting (extra) with Fontainhas views. Add ₹200 for air-con. It's a simple, serene stay in the heart of the most atmospheric part of town. Checkout is 9am and bookings are accepted online but not by phone.

Casa Paradiso

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0832-3290180; www.casaparadisogoa.com; Jose Falcao Rd; d/tr with AC ₹1911/2200; 🍷) A neat and welcoming little stay in the heart of the city. Up a small flight of stairs, the simple but clean rooms come with TV, hot water and noon checkout.

Mayfair Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0832-2223317; manishafernz@yahoo.com; Dr Dada Vaidya Rd; s/d from ₹1105/1330, d with AC ₹1690; 🍷🍷) The oyster-shell windows and mosaic tiling in the lobby of this popular corner hotel are promising but the rooms are not quite as bright. Ask to see a few as there are new and old wings with rooms of varying quality, some overlooking a potentially nice back garden. Friendly family owners have been sheltering travellers for many years. Noon checkout.

Casa Nova

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9423889181; www.goaholidayaccommodation.com; Gomes Pereira Rd; ste ₹4300; 📶📶) In a gorgeous Portuguese-style house (c 1831) in Fontainhas, Casa Nova comprises just one stylish, exceptionally comfy apartment, accessed via a little alley and complete with arched windows, wood-beam ceilings, and mod-cons such as a kitchenette and wi-fi.

Goa Marriott Resort

INTERNATIONAL $$$

(☎ 0832-2463333; www.marriott.com; Miramar Beach; d ₹7000-15,000; 📶📶📶) Miramar's plush Goa Marriot Resort is the best in the Panaji area. Five-star treatment begins in the lobby and extends to the rooms-with-a-view. The 24-hour Waterfront Terrace & Bar is a great place for a sundowner overlooking the pool, while its Simply Grills restaurant is a favourite with well-heeled Panjimites.

Eating

You'll never go hungry in Panaji, where food is enjoyed fully and frequently. A stroll down 18th June or 31st January Rds will turn up a number of cheap canteen-style options, as will a circuit of the Municipal Gardens.

★ Viva Panjim

GOAN $

(☎ 0832-2422405; 31st Jan Rd; mains ₹100-170; ☀ 11.30am-3.30pm & 7-11pm Mon-Sat, 7-11pm Sun) Well known to tourists, this little side-street eatery, in an old Portuguese-style house and with a few tables out on the laneway, still delivers tasty Goan classics at reasonable prices. There's a whole page devoted to pork dishes, along with tasty xacuti and cafrial-style dishes, seafood such as kingfish vindaloo and crab xec xec, and desserts such as bebinca (richly layered Goan dessert made from egg yolk and coconut).

Hotel Vihar

VEGAN $

(MG Rd; mains ₹40-100; ☀ 7.30am-10pm) A vast menu of 'pure veg' food, great big thalis and a plethora of fresh juices make this clean, simple canteen a popular place for locals and visitors alike.

Anandashram

INDIAN, GOAN $

(31st Jan Rd; thalis ₹80-130, seafood ₹200-350; ☀ noon-3.30pm & 7.30-10.30pm Mon-Sat) This little place is renowned locally for seafood, serving up simple but tasty fish curries, as well as veg and nonveg thalis for lunch and dinner.

Hotel Venite

GOAN $$

(31st Jan Rd; mains ₹210-260; ☀ 9am-10.30pm) With its cute rickety balconies overhanging the cobbled street, Venite has long been among the most atmospheric of Panaji's old-school Goan restaurants. The menu is traditional, with spicy sausages, fish curry rice, pepper steak and bebinca featuring, but Venite is popular with tourists and prices are consequently rather inflated. It's not to be missed though.

★ Cafe Bodega

CAFE $$

(☎ 0832-2421315; Altinho; mains ₹120-320; ☀ 10am-7pm Mon-Sat, to 4pm Sun; 📶) It's well worth a trip up to Altinho Hill for this serene cafe-gallery in a lavender-and-white Portuguese-style mansion in the grounds of Sunaparanta Centre for the Arts. Enjoy good coffee, juices and fresh-baked cakes around the inner courtyard or lunch on super pizzas and sandwiches.

Verandah

GOAN $$

(☎ 0832-2226523; 31st Jan Rd; mains ₹180-360; ☀ 11am-11pm) The breezy 1st-floor restaurant at Panjim Inn is indeed on the balcony, with just a handful of finely carved tables and fine Fontainhas street views. Goan cuisine is the speciality, but there's also a range of Indian and continental dishes and local wines.

GOAN CUISINE

Goan cuisine is a tantalising fusion of Portuguese and South Indian flavours. Goans tend to be hearty meat and fish eaters, and fresh seafood is a staple: the quintessential Goan lunch of 'fish-curry-rice' is fried mackerel steeped in coconut, tamarind and chilli sauce. Traditional dishes include vindaloo (a fiery dish in a marinade of vinegar and garlic), xacuti (a spicy chicken or meat dish cooked in red coconut sauce) and cafreal (dry-fried chicken marinated in a green masala paste and sprinkled with toddy vinegar). For dessert try the layered coconut cake, bebinca.

The traditional Goan alcoholic drink is feni, a double-distilled fiery liquor made from the cashew fruit or palm toddy.

Baba's Wood Cafe

ITALIAN $$$

(☎ 0832-3256213; 49 Mala, Fountainhas; pizza & pasta ₹300-500; ☀ noon-3pm & 7-11.30pm) Sharing an interesting premises with a wood-craft gallery, this upmarket Italian restaurant in a quiet street near the Maruti Temple has a lovely little alfresco dining area and a menu featuring more than 20 different pasta dishes from ravioli to carbonara. Pizzas are wood-fired and the pasta is homemade, while desserts include tiramisu and chocolate fondue. Good for a splurge.

Upper House

GOAN $$$

(☎ 0832-2426475; www.theupperhousegoa.com; Cunha-Rivara Rd; mains ₹220-440; ☀ 11am-10pm) Climbing the stairs to the Upper House is like stepping into a cool European restaurant, with a modern but elegant dining space overlooking the Municipal Gardens, a chic neon-lit cocktail bar and a more formal restaurant at the back. The food is very much Goan though, with regional specialties such as crab xec xec, fish curry rice and pork vindaloo prepared to a high standard at relatively high prices.

Drinking & Nightlife

Panaji's simple little bars with a few plastic tables and chairs are a great way to get chatting with locals over a glass of feni.

Cafe Mojo

BAR

(www.cafemojo.in; Menezes Braganza Rd; ☀ 10am-4am Mon-Thu, to 6am Fri-Sun) The decor is cosy English pub, the clientele young and up for a party, and the hook is the e-beer system. Each table has its own beer tap and LCD screen: you buy a card (₹1000), swipe it at your table and start pouring - it automatically deducts what you drink (you can also use the card for spirits, cocktails or food). Wednesday night is ladies night, Thursday karaoke and the weekends go till late.

Riverfront & Down the Road

BAR

(cnr MG & Ourem Rds; ☀ 11am-1am) This restaurant's balcony overlooking the creek and Old Patto Bridge makes for a cosy beer or cocktail spot with carved barrels for furniture. The ground-floor bar (from 6pm) is the only real nightspot on the Old Quarter side of town, with occasional live music.

★ Entertainment

Several casino boats sit moored on the Mandovi, offering a surprisingly entertaining night out.

Kala Academy

CULTURAL CENTRE

(☎ 0832-2420452; http://kalaacademygoa.org; Dayanand Bandodkar Marg) On the west side of the city, in Campal, is Goa's premier cultural centre, which features a program of dance, theatre, music and art exhibitions throughout the year. Many shows are in Konkani, but there are occasional English-language productions. The website has an up-to-date calendar of events.

INOX Cinema

CINEMA

(☎ 0832-2420900; www.inoxmovies.com; Old GMC Heritage Precinct; tickets ₹180-200) This comfortable, plush multiplex cinema shows Hollywood and Bollywood blockbusters. Book online to choose your seats in advance.

Deltin Royale

CASINO

(☎ 8698599999; www.deltingroup.com/deltin-royale; Noah's Ark, RND Jetty, Dayanand Bandodkar Marg; weekday/weekend ₹2500/3000, premium weekend ₹4000-4500; ☀ 24hr, entertainment 9pm-1am) Goa's biggest luxury floating casino, Deltin Royal has 123 tables, the Vegas Restaurant, a Whisky Bar and a creche. Entry includes gaming chips worth ₹1500/2000 weekday/weekend and to the full value of your ticket with the premium package. Unlimited food and drinks included.

Casino Pride

CASINO

(☎ 0832-6516666; www.bestgoacasino.com; Dayanand Bandodkar Marg; weekday/weekend ₹1500/2000; ☀ 24hr, entertainment 9-11pm) These two casino boats are loosely modelled on Mississippi-style paddle boats. Pride I has 40 gaming tables, kids' play room and an outdoor party deck. Admission includes ₹1000 coupon for gaming. Unlimited dinner buffet is included, as well as free drinks if you're playing a table. Pride II is the same deal but smaller.

Shopping

Panaji's covered municipal market (Heljogordo Salgado Rd; ☀ from 7.30am) is a great place for people-watching and buying necessities.

Caculo Mall

MALL

(☎ 0832-2222068; 16 Shanta, St Inez; ☀ 8am-11pm) Goa's biggest mall is four levels of air-conditioned family shopping heaven with brand-name stores, food court, kids' toys, Time Zone arcade games and a movie theatre.

Singbal's Book House

BOOKS

(Church Sq; ☀ 9.30am-1pm & 3.30-7.30pm Mon-Sat) On the corner opposite Panaji's main church, Singbal's has an excellent selection of international magazines and newspapers, and lots of books on Goa and travel.

Marcou Artifacts

CRAFTS

(☎ 0832-2220204; www.marcouartifacts.com; 31st Jan Rd; ☀ 9am-8pm) This small shop showcases one-off painted tiles, fish figurines and hand-crafted Portuguese and Goan ceramics at reasonable prices. Also showrooms at the Hotel Delmon and Margao's market.

Khadi Gramodyog Bhavan

HANDICRAFTS

(Dr Atmaram Borkar Rd; ☀ 9am-noon & 3-7pm Mon-Sat) ☀ Goa's only outpost of the government's Khadi & Village Industries Commission has an excellent range of hand-woven cottons, oils, soaps, spices and other handmade products that come straight from (and directly benefit) regional villages.

i Information*Goa Tourism Development Corporation

(Goa Tourism, GTDC; ☎ 0832-2437132; www.goa-tourism.com; Paryatan Bhavan, Dr Alvaro Costa Rd; ☀ 9.30am-5.45pm Mon-Sat) Better known as Goa Tourism, the GTDC office is in the slick new Paryatan Bhavan building across the Ourem Creek and near the bus stand. However, it's more corporate office than tourist office and is of little use to casual visitors, unless you want to book one of GTDC's host of tours.

Government of India Tourist Office

(☎ 0832-2223412; www.incredibleindia.com; Communidade Bldg, Church Sq; ☀ 9.30am-1.30pm & 2.30-6pm Mon-Fri, 10am-1pm Sat) The staff at this central tourist office can be helpful, especially for information outside Goa. This office is expected to move to the same building as Goa Tourism by the time you read this.

Main Post Office (MG Rd; ☀ 9.30am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) Offers swift parcel services and Western Union money transfers.

Vintage Hospitals (☎ 0832-6644401, ambulance 9764442220; www.vintagehospitals.com; Caculo Enclave, St Inez; ☀ 24hr) Central Panaji's best hospital in an emergency; it's just west of the centre near Caculo Mall.

i Getting There & Away

A taxi from Panaji to Dabolim Airport takes about an hour, and costs ₹670 (₹770 for AC).

BUS

All government buses depart from the huge and busy Kadamba bus stand (☎ interstate enquiries 0832-2438035, local enquiries 0832-2438034; www.goakadamba.com; ☀ reservations 8am-8pm), with local services heading out every few minutes. To get to south Goan beaches, take an express bus to Margao and change there; for far northern beaches, change at Mapusa. Kadamba station has an ATM, internet cafe, food outlets and even a Ganesh temple. Destinations include:

Calangute (₹20, 45 minutes)

Candolim (₹15, 35 minutes)

Mapusa (₹15, 30 minutes)

Margao (express shuttle; ₹30, 35 minutes)

Old Goa (₹10, 15 minutes)

Private operators have booths outside Kadamba, but the buses depart from the private interstate bus stand next to New Pattoo Bridge. One reliable company is Paulo Travels (☎ 0832-2438531; www.phmgoa.com; G1, Kardoze Bldg). Some high-season government and private long-distance fares include the following:

Bengaluru (₹600 to ₹1200, 14 to 15 hours, around 30 daily)

Hampi (private sleeper; ₹900 to ₹1100, 10 to 11 hours, 2-3 daily)

Mumbai (₹350 to ₹1100, 12 to 14 hours, frequent)

Pune (₹325 to ₹1000, 11 hours, frequent)

TRAIN

Panaji's closest train station is Karmali (Old Goa), 12km to the east, where many long-distance services stop (check timetables). A taxi there costs ₹350. Panaji's Konkan Railway reservation office (☎ 0832-2712940; www.konkanrailway.com; ☀ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat) is on the 1st floor of the Kadamba bus stand. See the Margao section (p844) for major trains.

i Getting Around

Panaji is generally a pleasure to explore on foot. Frequent buses run between Kadamba and the municipal market and on to Miramar and Dona Paula.

To Old Goa, an autorickshaw/taxi should cost around ₹300/350.

Scooters and motorbikes can easily be hired from around the post office from around ₹200/300 per day.

A useful shortcut across the river to the northern beaches is the free vehicle ferry (☀ every 20 min 6am-10pm) to Betim.

Old Goa

From the 16th to the 18th centuries, when Old Goa's population exceeded that of Lisbon or London, Goa's former capital was considered the 'Rome of the East'. You can still sense that grandeur as you wander what's left of the city, with its towering churches and cathedrals and majestic convents. Its rise under the Portuguese, from 1510, was meteoric, but cholera and malaria outbreaks forced the abandonment of the city in the 1600s. In 1843 the capital was officially shifted to Panaji.

Some of the most imposing churches and cathedrals are still in use and are remarkably well preserved, while other historical buildings have become museums or ruined sites. It's a fascinating day trip, but it can get crowded: consider visiting on a weekday morning, when you can take in Mass at Sé Cathedral or the Basilica of Bom Jesus (remember to cover shoulders and legs in the churches; no beachwear).

The major event of the year is the 10 day Novena leading up to the Feast of St

Francis Xavier on 3 December. Once every decade on this date, the Exposition sees the casket containing St Francis' body carried through Old Goa's streets; the next one is 2024.

Sights

★ Basilica of Bom Jesus CHURCH
(☉ 7.30am-6.30pm) Famous throughout the Roman Catholic world, the imposing Basilica of Bom Jesus contains the tomb and mortal remains of St Francis Xavier, the so-called Apostle of the Indies. St Francis Xavier's missionary voyages throughout the East became legendary. His 'incorrupt' body is in the mausoleum to the right, in a glass-sided coffin amid a shower of gilt stars.

Construction on the basilica began in 1594 and was completed in 1605, to create an elaborate late-Renaissance structure, fronted by a facade combining elements of Doric, Ionic and Corinthian design.

55m wide, the cavernous Sé Cathedral is the largest church in Asia. Building work commenced in 1562, on the orders of King Dom Sebastiao of Portugal, and the finishing touches were finally made some 90 years later. The exterior of the cathedral is notable for its plain style, in the Tuscan tradition. Also of note is its rather lopsided look resulting from the loss of one of its bell towers, which collapsed in 1776 after being struck by lightning. The remaining tower houses the famous Sino de Ouro (Golden Bell), the largest in Asia and renowned for its rich tone, which once tolled to accompany the Inquisition's notoriously cruel autos-da-fé (trials of faith), held out the front of the cathedral on what was then the market square.

Church of St Francis of Assisi CHURCH

West of the Sé Cathedral, the Church of St Francis of Assisi is no longer in use for worship, and consequently exudes a more mournful air than its neighbours.

The church started life as a small chapel, built on this site by eight Franciscan friars on their arrival in 1517. In 1521 it was replaced by a church consecrated to the Holy Ghost, which was then subsequently rebuilt in 1661, with only the doorway of the old building incorporated into the new structure. This original doorway, in ornate Manueline style, contrasts strongly with the rest of the facade, the plainness of which had become the fashion by the 17th century.

Museum of Christian Art MUSEUM

(www.museumofchristianart.com; admission ₹50, camera ₹100; ☀9am-6pm) This excellent museum, in a stunningly restored space within the 1627 Convent of St Monica, contains a collection of statues, paintings and sculptures, though the setting warrants a visit in its own right. Interestingly, many of the works of Goan Christian art made during the Portuguese era, including some of those on display here, were produced by local Hindu artists.

Church of St Cajetan CHURCH

(☀9am-5.30pm) Modelled on the original design of St Peter's in Rome, the Church of St Cajetan was built by Italian friars of the Order of Theatines, who were sent by Pope Urban III to preach Christianity in the kingdom of Golconda (near Hyderabad). The friars were not permitted to work in Golconda, so settled at Old Goa in 1640. The construction of the church began in 1655.

Church of Our Lady of the Mount CHURCH

This church is often overlooked due to its location on a wooded hilltop, some 2km east of the central area. A sealed road leads to an overgrown flight of steps (don't walk it solo) and the hill on which the church stands commands an excellent view of Old Goa, with the church spires seemingly rising out a sea of palms.

Monastery of St Augustine HISTORIC SITE

The melancholy, evocative ruins of this once vast and impressive Augustinian monastery are all that remain of a huge structure founded in 1572 and abandoned in 1835. The building's facade came tumbling down in 1942; all that remains, amid piles of rubble, is the towering skeletal belfry, though the bell itself was rescued and now hangs in Panaji's Church of Our Lady of the Immaculate Conception.

Other Sights

There are plenty of other monuments in Old Goa to explore, including the Viceroy's Arch, Adil Shah Palace Gateway, Chapel of St Anthony, Chapel of St Catherine, Albuquerque's Steps, the Convent & Church of St John, Sisters' Convent and the Church of Our Lady of the Rosary.

Getting There & Away

Frequent buses to Old Goa depart from Panaji's Kadamba bus stand (₹10, 25 minutes).

Ponda & Around

The workaday inland town of Ponda, 29km southeast of Panaji, has two big drawcards in the vicinity – Goa's best Hindu temple complexes and spice plantations – and is well worth a day away from the beach. Temple aficionados, however, might be a little disappointed; most were built or rebuilt after the originals were destroyed by the Portuguese, so they're not as ancient as those elsewhere in India.

The 18th-century hilltop Mangueshi Temple at Priol, 5km northwest of Ponda, is dedicated to Mangueshi, a god known only in Goa, while 1km away at Mardol is the Mahalsa Temple, also dedicated to a specifically Goan deity. The 1738 Shantadurga Temple, meanwhile, just west of Ponda, is dedicated to Shantadurga, the goddess of peace, and is one of the most famous shrines in Goa.

There are regular buses to Ponda from Panaji (₹20, 1½ hours) and Margao (₹18, one

WORTH A TRIP

SPICE UP YOUR LIFE

The Ponda region is the centre of commercial spice farms, producing vanilla, pepper, cardamom, nutmeg, chilli and tumeric, along with crops such as cashew, betel nut, coconut, pineapple and papaya. Farms offer a guided tour of the plantation, buffet thali-style lunch, and in some cases elephant rides and cultural shows.

Savoi Plantation (☎ 0832-2340272, 9822133309; adult/child ₹600/300; ☀ 9am-4.30pm)

This 200-year-old plantation is the least touristy farm, where you'll find a warm welcome from knowledgeable guides keen to walk you through the 40-hectare plantation at your own pace.

Sahakari Spice Farm (☎ 0832-2312394; www.sahakarifarms.com; admission incl lunch ₹400; ☀ 8am-4.30pm) Well-touristed farm 2km from Ponda; good place for elephant rides and bathing (₹700 each) in the small river.

Pascoal Organic Spice Village (☎ 0832-2344268; www.pascoalfarm.com; farm tour & lunch adult/child ₹400/200; ☀ 9am-4pm) About 7km from Ponda, Pascoal offers bamboo river-rafting, elephant rides and cultural shows, along with farm tours and lunch.

Tropical Spice Plantation (☎ 0832-2340329; www.tropicalspiceplantation.com; Keri; admission incl lunch ₹400; ☀ 9am-4pm) One of the busiest farms frequented by tour groups, 5km north of Ponda. Feed the elephants and enjoy a banana-leaf buffet lunch.

Butterfly Conservatory of Goa (☎ 0832-2985174; www.bcgoa.org; Priol; admission ₹100; ☀ 9am-4.30pm) Near the spice farms, this small butterfly sanctuary, 5km north of Ponda, houses more than 100 species of free-flying butterflies.

hour), after which you'll need to arrange a taxi to visit the temples or spice farms. Taxis from Panaji charge ₹1500 for a day trip to the area (up to eight hours and 80km).

NORTH GOA

Mapusa

POP 40,100

The pleasantly bustling market town of Mapusa (pronounced 'Mapsa') is the largest in northern Goa and a transport hub for local and interstate buses. The main reason for travellers to visit is for the busy Mapusa Market (☀ 8am-6.30pm Mon-Sat), which attracts scores of buyers and sellers from neighbouring towns and villages. It's a good place to pick up the usual embroidered bed-sheets and the like at prices lower than in the beach resorts. The market operates daily, but Friday is the biggest day.

Mapusa is also home to the rewarding little Other India Bookstore (☎ 0832-2263306; www.otherindiabookstore.com; Mapusa Clinic Rd; ☀ 9am-5pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat), specialising in 'dissenting wisdom' and alternative press – a small but spectacular selection of books on nature, environment, politics, education and natural health.

Volunteering

If you're interested in volunteering while in Goa, there are a couple of well-established charity organisations around Mapusa.

El Shaddai

VOLUNTEERING

(☎ 0832-2461068, 0832-6513286; www.childrescue.net; El Shaddai House, Socol Vaddo, Assagao) El Shaddai is a British-founded charity that aids impoverished and homeless children throughout Goa. Volunteers able to commit to more than four weeks' work with El Shaddai can apply through the website. There's a rigorous vetting process, so start well in advance. Volunteers are also welcome to visit one of the Assagao schools between 4.30pm and 6.30pm (call ahead). For more information, there's a stall at the Anjuna flea market.

Mango Tree Goa

VOLUNTEERING

(☎ 9881261886; www.mangotreegoa.org; 'The Mango House', near Vrundavan Hospital, Karaswada, Mapusa) Offers placements for volunteers providing support for disadvantaged children around Mapusa.

Sleeping &amp; Eating

There's little reason to stay the night in Mapusa when the beaches of the north coast are so close and most long-distance transport departs in the evening.

Hotel Vilena

HOTEL $

(☎ 0832-2263115; Feira Baixa Rd; d with/without bathroom ₹840/630, with AC ₹1575; ☎) Mapusa's best budget choice, with 14 plain double rooms, is not much to look at, but staff are welcoming.

Hotel Vrundavan

INDIAN $

(thalis from ₹75; ☎ 7am-10pm Wed-Mon) This all-veg place bordering the Municipal Gardens is a great place for a hot chai, pau bhaji (bread with spicy veg) or a quick breakfast.

Ruta's World Cafe

INTERNATIONAL $$

(☎ 0832-2250757; www.caferruta.com; St Xavier's College Rd, opp Ashirwad Bldg; mains ₹110-270; ☎ 10am-8pm Mon-Sat) The second branch of Ruta's excellent brand of fresh and tasty American-inspired cuisine has given travellers a good culinary reason to visit Mapusa. Sandwiches, salads and comfort foods such as jambalaya. It's north of the centre, in the same Portuguese-style house as Fabindia.

Pub

PUB

(near the market; mains from ₹100; ☎ 10am-4pm & 7-11pm Mon-Sat) Don't be put off by the dingy entrance or stairwell: once you're upstairs, this breezy place opposite the market is great for watching the milling crowds over a cold beer or feni. Eclectic daily specials make it a good spot for lunch.

Getting There & Away

If you're coming to Goa by bus from Mumbai, Mapusa's Kadamba bus stand (☎ 0832-2232161) is the jumping-off point for the northern beaches. Local services run every few minutes; for buses to the southern beaches, take a bus to Panaji, then Margao, and change there.

Local services include the following:

Anjuna (₹15, 20 minutes)

Arambol (₹27, 1½ hours)

Calangute/Candolim (₹10/12, 20/35 minutes)

Panjim (₹15, 20 minutes)

Thivim (₹15, 20 minutes)

Interstate services run out of the same lot, but private operators have their offices next to the bus stand. There's generally little difference in price between private services and the Kadamba buses, but shop around as there are various standards of bus. Long-distance services include the following:

Bengaluru (private; AC or sleeper ₹1400, 13-14hr)

Mumbai (private; non-AC ₹700, AC ₹1200, 12-15hr)

Pune (private; non-AC from ₹650, AC ₹1200, sleeper ₹1000, 11-13hr)

There's a prepaid taxi stand outside the bus terminal where you can catch taxis to Anjuna

GREEN GOA

Goa's environment has suffered from an onslaught of tourism over the last 40 years, but also from the effects of logging, mining and local customs (rare turtle eggs have traditionally been considered a delicacy). Construction proceeds regardless of what the local infrastructure or ecosystem can sustain, while plastic bottles pile up in vast mountains. There are, however, a few easy ways to minimise your impact on Goa's environment:

- ➔ Take a bag when shopping and refill water bottles with filtered water where possible.
- ➔ Rent a bicycle instead of a scooter, for short trips at least; bicycle rentals are declining as a result of our scooter infatuation and the bikes are poor quality, but they'll bounce back if the demand is there.
- ➔ Goa Tourism now employs cleaners to comb the beaches each morning picking up litter but do your part by disposing of cigarette butts, litter and plastic bottles.

Turtles are protected by the Forest Department (www.forest.goa.gov.in), which operates information huts on beaches such as Agonda, Galgibag and Morjim, where turtles arrive to lay eggs. Also doing good work over many years is the Goa Foundation (☎ 0832-2256479; www.goafoundation.org; St Britto's Apts, G-8 Feira Alta, Mapusa), the state's main environmental pressure group based in Mapusa. It has spearheaded a number of conservation projects since its inauguration in 1986, including pressure to stop illegal mining, and its website is a great place to learn more about Goan environmental issues. The group's excellent Fish Curry & Rice (₹600), a sourcebook on Goa's environment and lifestyle, is sold at Mapusa's Other India Bookstore. The Foundation occasionally runs volunteer projects.

(₹300), Calangute (₹300), Arambol (₹500) and Panaji (₹500); autorickshaws typically charge ₹50 less than taxis.

Thivim, about 12km northeast of town, is the nearest train station on the Konkan Railway. Local buses meet trains; an autorickshaw into Mapusa from Thivim costs around ₹200.

Candolim, Sinquerim & Fort Aguada

POP 8600

Candolim's long and languid beach, which curves round as far as smaller Sinquerim beach in the south, is largely the preserve of mature, slow-roasting tourists from the UK, Russia and Scandinavia (and elsewhere in India), and is fringed with seasonal beach shacks, all offering sun beds and shade in exchange for your custom.

Back from the beach, busy Fort Aguada Rd is among one of the best resort strips in Goa for shops and services, and is home to dozens of restaurants, bars and hotels, but it lacks the personality of many other beach towns and independent travellers might find it a bit soulless.

👁️ Sights & Activities

Fort Aguada

(🕒 8.30am-5.30pm) (FREE) Standing on the headland overlooking the mouth of the Mandovi River, Fort Aguada occupies a magnificent and successful position, confirmed by the fact it was never taken by force. A highly popular spot to watch the sunset, with uninterrupted views both north and south, the fort was built in 1612, following the increasing threat to Goa's Portuguese overlords by the Dutch, among others.

John's Boat Tours

(📞 0832-6520190, 9822182814; www.johnboat-tours.com; Fort Aguada Rd, Candolim; 🕒 9am-9pm) A respected and well-organised Candolim-based operator offering a wide variety of boat and jeep excursions, as well as overnight houseboat cruises (₹5500 per person including meals). Choose from dolphin-watching cruises (₹1000), a return boat trip to the Wednesday Anjuna flea market (₹800), or the renowned 'Crocodile Dundee' river trip, to catch a glimpse of the Mandovi's mugger crocodile.

Sinquerim Dolphin Trips

(per person ₹300; 🕒 8.30am-5pm) The boatmen on the Nerul River below Fort Agua-da have banded together, so trips are now fixed price. A one-hour dolphin-spotting and sightseeing trip costs ₹300 per person with a minimum of 10 passengers. Trips pass Nerul (Coco) Beach, Fort Aguada Jail, the fort, and 'Jimmy Millionaire's House.'

🛏️ Sleeping

Candolim has a good range of accommodation; the southern end is dominated by the five-star Taj hotels, while the best budget and midrange choices are in the lush laneways back from the northern beach.

Dona Florina

HOTEL $

(📞 9923049076, 0832-2489051; www.donaflorina.co.in; Monteiro's Rd, Escrivao Vaddo; r ₹1000-2000; 🍷🍷) Friendly Dona Florina is a good value, spotless guesthouse in a pleasant tangle of laneways and family-run hotels just back from the beach. Front-facing upper-floor rooms have sea views, there's daily yoga on the roof terrace, and the lack of vehicle access ensures a peaceful experience.

Zostel

HOTEL $

(📞 917726864942; www.zostel.com; Candolim; dm ₹450-550, d ₹1800; 🍷🍷) The first Goan addition to this funky Indian hostel chain has popped up on the Candolim-Calangute border, bringing budget dorm beds to package-tour central. There are six- and eight-bed dorms with air-con, a 10-bed dorm and a female-only dorm, all in a whitewashed two-storey house set back from Fort Aguada Rd. Facilities include a kitchen, free wi-fi, common room and lockers. There's just one double room.

★Bougainvillea

Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(📞 0832-2479842, 9822151969; www.bougainvilleagoa.com; Sinquerim; r ₹2500, penthouse ₹6000; 🍷🍷) A lush, plant-filled garden leads the way to this gorgeous family-run guesthouse, located off Fort Aguada Rd. The eight light-filled suite rooms are spacious and spotless, with fridge, flat-screen TV and either balcony or private sit-out; the top-floor penthouse has its own rooftop terrace. This is the kind of place guests come back to year after year. Book ahead.

D'Mello's Sea View Home

HOTEL $$

(📞 0832-2496650; www.dmellos.com; Monteiro's Rd, Escrivao Vaddo; d ₹1200-1700; 🍷🍷🍷) D'Mello's has grown up from small beginnings but is still family-run and occupies four buildings around a lovely garden. The front building has the sea view rooms so check out a few, but all are clean and well-maintained. Add ₹500 if you want air-con. Wi-fi is available in the central area.

★ Marbella Guest House BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$
(☎0832-2479551, 9822100811; www.marbella-go.com; Sinquerim; r ₹3400-4200, ste ₹4900-6400; 📶📶) This stunning Portuguese-era villa, filled with antiques and enveloped in a peaceful courtyard garden, is a romantic and sophisticated old-world remnant. Rooms are individually themed, including Moghul, Rajasthani and Bouganvillea. The penthouse suite is a dream of polished tiles, four-poster bed with separate living room, dining room and terrace. Its kitchen serves up some imaginative dishes. Located off Fort Aguada Rd. No kids under 12.

🔪 Eating & Drinking

Candolim's plentiful beach shacks are always popular places to eat or relax with a beer, and there are some excellent restaurants along Fort Aguada Rd.

Viva Goa! GOAN, SEAFOOD $
(Fort Aguada Rd; mains ₹90-180; ☎11am-midnight) This inexpensive, locals-oriented little place, also popular with in-the-know tourists, serves fresh fish and Goan seafood specialities such as a spicy mussel fry. Check market price of seafood before ordering.

Zappa's CAFE $
(☎9767019410; Candolim; mains ₹40-120; ☎8am-2pm) A tiny cafe sandwiched between the beach and busy Fort Aguada Rd, Zappa's serves up tasty breakfast and brunch dishes and some of the freshest pasta dishes in town. The owner has spent many years living and cooking in Europe. Zappa's beach shack is directly west.

★ Café Chocollati CAFE, BAKERY $$
(409A Fort Aguada Rd; sweets ₹50-200, mains ₹270-420; ☎9am-5.30pm) The lovely garden tearoom at Café Chocollati may be on the main Fort Aguada Rd but it's a divine and peaceful retreat where chocolate brownies, waffles and banoffee pie with a strong cup of coffee or organic green tea seem like heaven. Also a great range of salads, paninis, crepes and quiches for lunch. Take away a bag of chocolate truffles, homemade by the in-house chocolatier.

Stone House STEAKHOUSE, SEAFOOD $$
(Fort Aguada Rd; mains ₹150-500; ☎11am-3pm & 7pm-midnight) Surf 'n' turf's the thing at this venerable old Candolim venue, inhabiting a stone house and its leafy front courtyard, with the improbable-sounding 'Swedish Lobster' topping the list. It's also a popular blues bar with live music most nights of the week in season.

★ Bomra's BURMESE $$$
(☎9767591056; www.bomras.com; 247 Fort Aguada Rd; mains from ₹300; ☎noon-2pm & 7-11pm) Wonderfully unusual food is on offer at this sleek little place serving interesting modern Burmese cuisine with a fusion twist. Aromatic curries include straw mushroom, lychee, water-chestnut, spinach, and coconut curry and duck curry with sweet tamarind and groundnut shoot. Decor is palm-thatch style huts in a lovely courtyard garden.

Tuscany Gardens ITALIAN $$$
(☎0832-6454026; www.tuscanygardens.in; Fort Aguada Rd; mains ₹240-410; ☎1-11pm) You can easily be transported to Tuscany at Candolim's cosy, romantic Italian restaurant, where perfect antipasti, pasta, pizza and risotto are the order of the day. Try the chicken breast stuffed with gorgonzola and ham, the seafood pizza or buffalo mozzarella salad.

Bob's Inn BAR
(Fort Aguada Rd, Candolim; ☎noon-4pm & 7pm-midnight) The African wall hangings, palm-thatch, communal tables and terracotta sculptures are a nice backdrop to the rava (semolina) fried mussels or the prawns 'chilly fry' with potatoes, but this Candolim institution is really just a great place to drop in for a drink.

LPK Waterfront CLUB
(www.lpkwaterfront.com; couples ₹1500; ☎9.30pm-4am) The initials stand for Love, Peace and Karma: welcome to North Goa's biggest new club, the whimsical, sculpted waterfront LPK. It's actually across the Nerul River from Candolim (so technically in Nerul) but its club nights attract party-goers from all over with huge indoor and outdoor dance areas.

🛍 Shopping

Newton's SUPERMARKET
(Fort Aguada Rd; ☎9am-midnight) If you're desperately missing Edam cheese or Pot Noodles, or just want to do some self-catering, Newton's is Goa's biggest supermarket. There's a good line in toiletries, wines, children's toys and luxury food items. The downside is that it's usually packed and security guards won't allow bags inside.

i Getting There & Away

Buses run frequently to Panaji (₹15, 35 minutes) and Mapusa (₹12, 35 minutes) and stop at the turn-off near John's Boat Tours. Calangute buses (₹5, 15 minutes) start at the Fort Aguada bus stop and can be flagged down on Fort Aguada Rd.

Calangute & Baga

POP 15,800

Love it or loathe it, Calangute and Baga are Goa's most popular beaches – at least with the cashed-up domestic tour crowd and European package tourists. Once a refuge of wealthy Goans, and later a 1960s hot spot for naked, revelling hippies, Calangute has adapted its scant charms to extended Indian families, groups of Indian bachelors and partying foreigners. This is Goa's most crowded beach stretch – from the traffic-clogged streets to the Arabian Sea, which fills up with people, boats and jet skis – though the southern beach is more relaxed. Baga, to the north, is notorious for drinking and dancing, while Northern Baga, across the Baga River, is surprisingly tranquil, with a few budget guesthouses and some top-notch restaurants.

🏃 Activities

Water Sports

You'll find numerous jet-ski and parasailing operators on Calangute and Baga beaches. Parasailing costs around ₹800 per ride, jet-skiing costs ₹1500 per 15 minutes.

Two local scuba diving operators are recommended: Goa Aquatics (Map p828; ☎9822685025; www.goaaquatics.com; 136/1 Gaura Vaddo; dive trip from ₹5000, dive course ₹14,000-25,000) in Calangute and Barracuda Diving (Map p828; ☎9822182402, 0832-2279409; www.barracudadiving.com; Sun Village Resort; dive trip/course from ₹4500/6000) in Baga.

Day Tripper

TOUR

(Map p828; ☎0832-2276726; www.daytrippergoa.com; Gaura Vaddo, Calangute; 🕒9am-5.30pm Mon-Sat Nov-Apr) Calangute-based Day Tripper is one of Goa's biggest and most reliable tour agencies. It runs a wide variety of minibus and boat trips around Goa, including two-hour dolphin trips (₹500 per person), trips to Dudhsagar Falls (₹1530), a houseboat stay (₹5300 per person) and also interstate tours to Hampi and the Kali River (for rafting and birdwatching trips) in Karnataka.

GTDC Tours

TOUR

(Goa Tourism Development Corporation; Map p828; ☎0832-2276024; 🌐www.goa-tourism.com) Goa Tourism's tours can be booked online or at the refurbished GTDC Calangute Residency hotel beside the beach. The full-day North Goa tour (₹225, 9.30am to 6pm daily) departs from Calangute or Mapusa and takes in the Mandovi estuary, Candolim, Calangute, Anjuna and inland to Mayem Lake.

🛏 Sleeping

Calangute and Baga's sleeping options are plentiful, lining the main roads and laneways down to the beach for several kilometres. Generally, the quietest hotels are in south Calangute, and across the bridge north of Baga.

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p828; ☎7798100981, 0832-2279505; ospeys.shelter@gmail.com; d ₹800-900) Tucked away between the beach and St Anthony's Chapel, in a quiet, lush little area full of palms and sandy paths, Ospey's is a traveller favourite

BACKWOODS CAMP

In a forest near Bhagwan Mahaveer Sanctuary, full of butterflies and birds, Backwoods Camp (☎9822139859; www.backwoodsgoa.com; Matkan, Tambdi Surla; 1-/2-/3-day ₹4500/7500/11,000) is a magical, serene spot. The resort is about 1km from Tambdi Surla temple in the state's far east, and for birdwatching enthusiasts it offers one of Goa's richest sources birding, with everything from Ceylon frogmouths and Asian fairy bluebirds to puff-throated babblers and Indian pittas putting in a regular appearance. Accommodation is in comfortable tents on raised platforms, bungalows and farmhouse rooms. Rates include three guided birdwatching walks daily.

and only a two-minute walk from the beach. Spotless upstairs rooms have fridges and balconies and the whole place has a cosy family feel. Take the road directly west of the chapel – but it's tough to find, so call ahead.

Johnny's Hotel

HOTEL $

(Map p828; ☎ 0832-2277458; www.johnnyshotel.com; s ₹400-600, d ₹700-900, with AC ₹1000-1200; 🍷🍷) The 15 simple rooms at this backpacker-popular place make for a sociable stay, with a downstairs restaurant-bar and regular yoga and reiki classes. A range of apartments and houses are available for longer stays. It's down a lane lined with unremarkable midrange hotels and is just a short walk to the beach.

Coco Banana

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p828; ☎ 0832-2279068; www.cocobananagoa.com; d ₹950, with AC ₹1500; 🍷🍷) Among the palms south of the main entrance to Calangute Beach, colourful Coco Banana has been providing a soothing retreat for travellers for many years. Run by the friendly Walter, rooms are spacious and spotless and the vibe mellow. For families or groups, ask about the self-contained apartments at nearby Casa Leyla.

Hotel Golden Eye

HOTEL $$

(Map p828; ☎ 9822132850, 0832-2277308; www.hotelgoldeneye.com; Holiday St; d ₹2000, with AC ₹2500, sea-facing rooms from ₹4500, apt ₹5000-8000; 🍷🍷) This popular beachfront hotel at the end of 'Holiday St' has a fine range of rooms and apartments, from tidy ones at the back to the boutique sea-facing rooms with modern decor, air-con and cable TV. Unlike some midrangers it's welcoming to independent walk-in travellers, though you'll need to book ahead in season. The Flying Dolphin beach shack is out front.

Hotel Seagull

HOTEL $$

(Map p828; ☎ 0832-2179969; Holiday St; d with AC ₹2500; 🍷🍷🍷) Bright, friendly and welcoming, the Seagull's rooms, set in a cheerful blue-and-white house in south Calangute, are light and airy with air-con and a small pool out back. Downstairs is the fine Blue Mariposa bar-restaurant, serving Goan, Indian and continental dishes.

Baga

Indian Kitchen

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p828; ☎ 9822149615, 0832-2277555; www.indiankitchen-goa.com; s/d/chalet ₹770/990/1500; 🍷🍷🍷) If a colourful budget stay is what you're after, look no further than this family-run guesthouse, which offers a range of rooms from basic to more spacious, comfy apartments, but all with lots of effort at individual charm. There's a neat central courtyard and, surprisingly for a budget place, a sparkingly clean pool out the back. Each room has its own terrace or sit-out.

Melissa Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p828; ☎ 9822180095, 0832-2279583; Baga River Rd; d ₹800) Across the Baga River, Melissa Guest House has just four neat little rooms, all with attached bathrooms and hot-water showers, in a tatty garden. Good value for the location.

Divine Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p828; ☎ 0832-2279546, 9370273464; www.indivinehome.com; Baga River Rd; s ₹600, d ₹1200-1300, with AC ₹1650-3000; 🍷🍷🍷) Not the bargain it once was, Divine still sits pretty on the relatively quiet headland north of the Baga River. The 'Praise the Lord' gatepost offers a little gentle proselytising from the friendly family, while the rooms are homey and bright with the odd individual touches. Wi-fi is prepaid.

Alidia Beach Cottages GUESTHOUSE $$
(Map p828; ☎0832-2279014; Calungute-Baga Rd, Saunta Waddo; d ₹2000, with AC from ₹3300; 📶📶📶) Set back behind a whitewashed church off busy Baga Rd, this convivial but quiet place has well kept Mediterranean-style rooms orbiting a gorgeous pool. The cheaper, non-air-con rooms at the back are not as good, but all are in reasonably good condition, staff are eager to please, and there's a path leading directly to Baga Beach.

Cavala Seaside Resort HOTEL $$
(Map p828; ☎0832-2276090; www.cavala.com; Calungute-Baga Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹1500/3000, d & ste with AC ₹3500-5500; 📶📶📶) Idiosyncratic, ivy-clad Cavala has been harbouring Baga-bound travellers for over 25 years and is often full. Perhaps as a result service is indifferent, but there's a big range of rooms, pool and a bar-restaurant with frequent live music.

🔪 Eating

Calangute and Baga boast probably the greatest concentration of dining options anywhere in Goa, with everything from the simplest street food to the finest filet steak. The beach shacks are an obvious go-to, but there are some interesting gems along the 'Strip' and some excellent upmarket offerings on the north side of the Baga River.

🔪 Calangute

Plantain Leaf INDIAN $
(Map p828; ☎0832-2279860; veg thali ₹100, mains ₹90-270; ☀8am-11pm) In the heart of Calangute's busy market area, 1st-floor Plantain Leaf has consistently been the area's best veg restaurant for many years. It's gone through a change though, dumping the classic South Indian banana leaf thalis, adding nonveg (meat) to the menu and expanding its repertoire to more North Indian flavours. It's still a good place for a thali, along with seafood (fish thali ₹150), kebabs and biriyani, and just sneaks in to the budget category.

Cafe Sussegado Souza

GOAN $$

(Map p828; ☎8652839651; Calangute-Anjuna Rd; mains ₹160-280; ☀noon-midnight) In a little yellow Portuguese-style house just south of the Calangute market area, Cafe Sussegado is the place to come for Goan food such as fish curry rice, chicken xacuti and pork sorpotel (a vinegary stew made from liver, heart and kidneys), with a shot of feni to be going on with. Authentic, busy and good atmosphere.

Infantaria

BAKERY, ITALIAN $$

(Map p828; Calangute-Baga Rd; pastries ₹50-200, mains ₹160-440; ☀7.30am-midnight) Infantaria began life as Calangute's best bakery but has developed into an extremely popular Italian-cum-Indian restaurant. The bakery roots are still there, though, with homemade cakes, croissants, little flaky pastries and real coffee. Get in early for breakfast before the good stuff runs out. For lunch and dinner it's Goan and Italian specialities and a full bar. Regular live music in season.

A Reverie

INTERNATIONAL $$$

(Map p828; ☎9823505550; www.areverie.com; Holiday St; mains ₹475-700; ☀7pm-late) A gorgeous award-winning lounge bar, all arm-chairs, cool jazz and whimsical outdoor space, this is the place to spoil yourself, with the likes of Serrano ham, grilled asparagus, French wines and Italian cheeses. Although fine dining, A Reverie likes to style itself as 'fun dining' and doesn't take itself too seriously. On the snack list, check out the Indian taco truck (₹275), wasabi prawns or barbeque pulled-pork rolls.

🔪 Baga

Britto's

MULTICUISINE, BAR $$

(Map p828; ☎0832-2277331; Baga Beach; mains ₹180-460; ☀8.30am-midnight) Long-running Britto's is an arena-sized Baga institution at the north end of the beachfront, with a sandy floor if you've forgotten you're on the beach. It's a good spot for breakfast and gets busy for lunch and dinner. The drinks list is longer than the food menu and young Indian tourists are fond of ordering the iced Kingfisher mini-kegs. All good fun and live music most nights in season.

★ Go With the Flow

INTERNATIONAL, BRAZILIAN $$$

(Map p828; ☎7507771556; www.gowiththeflow.goa.com; Baga River Rd; mains ₹200-650; ☀from 6pm Mon-Sat) Stepping into the fantasy neon-lit garden of illuminated white-wicker furniture is wow factor enough, but the food is equally out of this world. With a global menu leaning towards European and South American flavours, Brazilian chef Guto brings a wealth of experience and culinary imagination to the table. Try some of the small bites (ask about a tasting plate) or go straight for the pork belly or duck ravioli.

★ Fiesta

CONTINENTAL $$$

(Map p828; ☎ 0832-2279894; www.fiestagoa.in; Tito's Lane; mains ₹250-600; ☀ 7pm-late) Follow the lamplights off happening Tito's Lane: there's something magical about stepping into Fiesta's candlelit split-level tropical garden. Soft music and exotic furnishings add to an upmarket Mediterranean-style dining experience that starts with homemade pizza and pasta and extends to French-influenced seafood dishes and some of the finest desserts around. Worth a splurge.

Drinking & Nightlife

Baga's boisterous club scene – centred on Tito's Lane – has long been well known among the tourist crowd looking for a late night out. Some find the scene a little sleazy here and the bar staff indifferent. Solo women are welcomed into clubs (usually free) but should exercise care and take taxis to and from venues.

Club Cuban

CLUB

(☎ 9823539000; www.clubcubanagoa.com; Arpora; ☀ 9.30pm-4am) Billing itself as the 'night-club in the sky,' this hilltop place in Arpora (a few kilometres north of Baga) has been providing a late-night pool party scene for more than a decade. As with most clubs it's couples or ladies only (though solo males can usually pay a premium to get in) and, depending on the night, it's open bar with a cover charge of ₹1000 to ₹2000. Wednesday is ladies night.

Café Mambo

CLUB

(Map p828; ☎ 7507333003; www.cafemambogoa.com; Tito's Lane, Baga; cover charge couples ₹500; ☀ 10.30pm-3am) Part of the Tito's empire, Mambo is one of Baga's most happening clubs with an indoor/outdoor beachfront location and nightly DJs pumping out house, hip-hop and Latino tunes. Couples or females only.

Shopping

Both Mackie's Saturday Nite Bazaar (Map p828; www.mackiesnitebazaar.com; ☀ from 6pm Sat Nov-Apr), in Baga, and the larger Saturday Nite Market (www.snmgoa.com; Arpora; ☀ from 6pm Sat Nov-Mar), in Arpora, about 2km northeast of Baga, set up in season and are fun alternatives to Anjuna's Wednesday market, with food stalls, entertainment and the usual souvenir stalls. They have been cancelled from time to time in recent years for reasons unclear. Ask around to see when they're on.

Karma Collection

SOUVENIRS

(Map p828; www.karmacollectiongoa.com; Calangute-Arpora Rd; ☀ 9.30am-10.30pm) Beautiful home furnishings, textiles, ornaments, bags and other enticing stuff – some of it antique – has been sourced from across India, Pakistan and Afghanistan and gathered at Karma Collection, which makes for a mouth-watering browse. Fixed prices, though it's not cheap.

Literati Bookshop & Cafe

BOOKS

(Map p828; ☎ 0832-2277740; www.literati-goa.com; Calangute; ☀ 10am-6.30pm Mon-Sat) A refreshingly different bookstore, in the owners' South Calangute home, and a very pleasant Italian-style garden cafe. Come for a fine espresso and browse the range of books by Goan and Indian authors as well as antiquarian literature. Check the website for readings and other events.

Information

Currency exchange offices, ATMs, pharmacies and internet cafes cluster around Calangute's main market and bus stand area, and along the Baga and Candolim roads.

Getting There & Around

Frequent buses to Panaji (₹20, 45 minutes) and Mapusa (₹10) depart from the Baga and Calangute bus stands, and a local bus (₹5) runs between the Baga and Calangute stands every few minutes; catch it anywhere along the way. Taxis charge an extortionate ₹100 between Calangute and Baga. A prepaid taxi from Dabolim Airport to Calangute costs ₹750.

Anjuna

Good old Anjuna. The stalwart of India's hippy scene still drags out the sarongs and sandalwood each Wednesday for its famous, and once infamous, flea market. With its raggedy beach, rice paddies and cheap guest-houses huddled in relatively peaceful pockets, it continues to pull in backpackers and long-term hippies, while midrange tourists are also increasingly making their way here. The village itself might be a bit frayed around the edges – if your only introduction is the tatty cliff-tops around the bus stand you may be unimpressed. But look further and you may come to appreciate Anjuna's haphazard charm, and see why it remains a favourite of both long-stayers and first-timers.

👁️ Sights & Activities

Anjuna's charismatic little beach runs for almost 2km from the northern village area to the flea market. The northern end is mostly cliffs lined with cheap cafes and basic guesthouses, but the beach proper is a nice stretch of sand (when the tide is out) with a bunch of multistorey beach bars at the southern end.

There's lots of yoga, reiki and ayurvedic massage offered around Anjuna and nearby Assagao; look for notices at Artjuna Cafe and the German Bakery. Drop-in classes are organised by Brahmani Yoga (📞9545620578; www.brahmaniyoga.com; Tito's White House, Aguada-Siolim Rd; classes ₹600, 10-class pass ₹4500), at Tito's White House.

Splashdown Water Park

SWIMMING

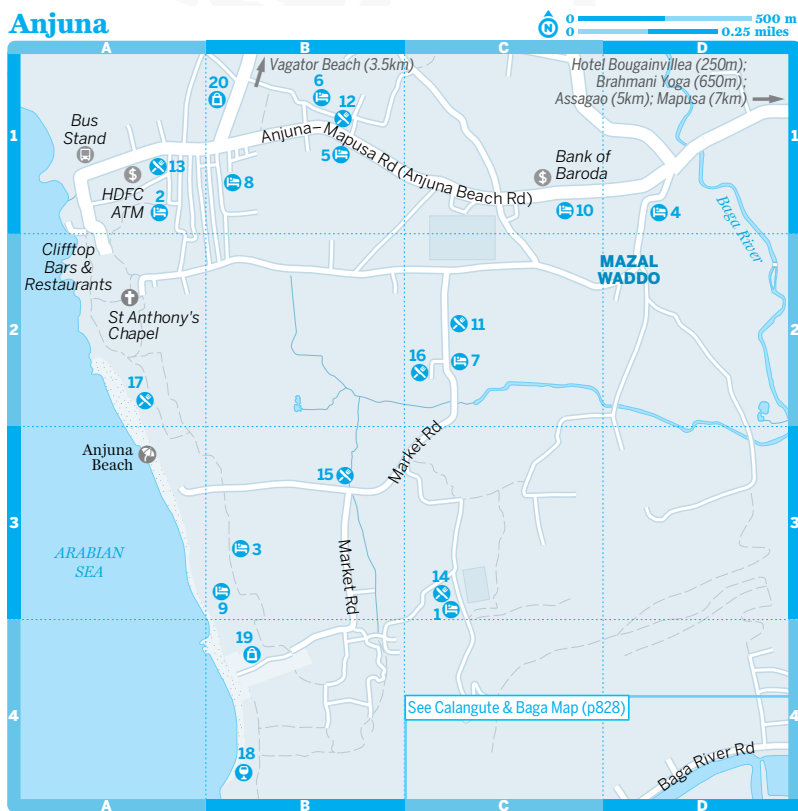

(📞0832-2273008; www.splashdowngoa.com; Anjuna-Baga Rd, Arpora; weekdays/weekends ₹380/420, spectators ₹260/300; 🕒10.30am-6pm) This fabulous collection of pools, fountains and waterslides will keep kids (and adults) happy all day long. A nice cafe and bar overlook over the action. It's in Arpora, roughly halfway between Anjuna and Baga.

Mukti Kitchen

COOKING

right up there with our favourite cafes in Anjuna. Along with all-day breakfast, outstanding espresso coffee, salads, sandwiches and Middle Eastern surprises such as baba ganoush, tahini and felafel, this sweet garden cafe has an excellent craft and lifestyle shop, yoga classes and one of Anjuna's best noticeboards. Great meeting place.

Burger Factory

(Anjuna-Mapusa Rd; burgers ₹250-450; ☎ noon-11pm) There's no mistaking what's on offer at this little alfresco diner/kitchen. The straightforward menu is chalked up on a blackboard at the side, and though the burgers aren't cheap, they are interesting and expertly crafted. Choose between beef or chicken burgers and toppings such as cheddar, wasabi and mayo or beetroot and aioli.

BURGERS $$

Om Made Cafe

(D'Mello Vaddo; dishes ₹120-250; ☎ 9am-sunset) A highlight on Anjuna's same-same cliff-top strip, this cheery little place offers striped deckchairs from which to enjoy the views and the super breakfasts, sandwiches and salads. The food is fresh and organic.

MEDITERRANEAN $$

Dhum Biryani & Kebabs

(Anjuna-Mapusa Rd; mains ₹180-350; ☎ 9am-1am) Loved by visitors and locals alike, Dhum Biryani serves up consistently good kebabs as well as biryani and other usual suspects.

INDIAN $$

Martha's Breakfast House

(meals ₹60-300; ☎ 7.30am-1.30pm) As the name suggests, welcoming Martha's speciality is breakfast, served up in a quiet garden on the way down to the flea-market site. Omelettes, fresh juice and cereal are de rigueur, but the stars of the show are the waffles with maple syrup and strawberries (in season). There are some nice rooms (₹700) here and a two-bedroom house to rent (₹10,000 per week). Located off Market Rd.

CAFE $$

ANJUNA'S FLEA MARKET EXPERIENCE

Anjuna's Wednesday flea market (☎ 8am-late Wed Nov-late Mar) is as much part of the Goan experience as a day on the beach. More than three decades ago it was the sole preserve of hippies smoking jumbo joints and convening to compare experiences on the heady Indian circuit. Nowadays, things are far more mainstream with stalls carrying crafts from Kashmir and Karnataka, mirrored textiles from Rajasthan, spices from Kerala and Tibetan trinkets. There are a couple of bars with live music and cold beer.

The market is still good fun and shows no sign of waning in popularity, so dive in and enjoy the ride. The best time to visit is early (from 8am) or late afternoon (around 4pm till close just after sunset).

YOGA RETREATS

The Anjuna/Vagator/Assagao area has a number of yoga retreats where you can immerse yourself in courses, classes and a zen vibe during the October-March season.

Purple Valley Yoga Retreat (📞0832-2268363; www.yogagoa.com; 142 Bairo Alto, Assagao; dm/s one week from ₹600/750, two weeks ₹980/1200; 🍷) Popular yoga resort in Assagao offering one- and two-week residential and nonresidential Ashtanga courses.

Swan Yoga Retreat (📞0832-2268024, 8007360677; www.swan-yoga-go.com; Assagao; per person one week from ₹17,500) In a peaceful jungle corner of Assagao, Swan Retreat is a very zen yoga experience. Minimum week-long yoga retreats start every Saturday and include eco-accommodation, ayurvedic veg meals, meditation, daily classes and an optional afternoon 'masterclass'.

Yoga Magic (📞0832-6523796; www.yogamagic.net; Anjuna; s/d lodge ₹6750/9000, ste ₹9000/12,000; 🍷) 🌿 Solar lighting, vegetable farming and compost toilets are just some of the worthy initiatives practised in this luxurious yoga resort. The lodge features dramatic Rajasthani tents under a thatched shelter.

German Bakery

MULTICUISINE $$

(www.german-bakery.in; bread & pastries ₹50-90, mains ₹100-450; ☀️8.30am-11pm; 🍷) Leafy and filled with prayer flags, occasional live music and garden lights, German Bakery is a long-standing favourite for hearty and healthy breakfast, fresh-baked bread and organic food, but these days the menu runs to pasta, burgers and pricey seafood. Prices are up and service is down though. Healthy juices (think wheatgrass) and espresso coffee.

Heidi's Beer Garden

GERMAN $$

(📞9886376922; Market Rd; mains ₹100-400; ☀️11am-11pm) It may well be Goa's first German-style beer garden and restaurant, which is reason enough to call into Heidi's. Another is the range of some 40 international beers from Germany, Belgium, Mexico, Japan, Portugal and more. The imported beers are relatively expensive, but you can still order local beers, including a Goan draught. The food is mostly German and European, including bratwurst sausages and the acclaimed German thali (₹400).

Curlies

BAR

(www.curliesgoa.com; ☀️9am-3am) At the southern end of Anjuna Beach, Curlies mixes laid-back beach-bar vibe with sophisticated night spot – the party nights here are notorious. There's a parachute silk-covered rooftop lounge bar and an enclosed late-night dance club, on Thursday and Saturday.

Information

Anjuna has three ATMs, clustered together on the main road to the beach, and another down near the bus stand. Free wi-fi is common in guesthouses and cafes.

Getting There & Away

Buses to Mapusa (₹15) depart every half-hour or so from the main bus stand near the beach; some from Mapusa continue on to Vagator and Chapora. Two daily buses to Calangute depart from the main crossroads. Taxis and autos gather at both stops, and you can hire scooters and motorcycles easily from the crossroads.

Vagator & Chapora

Vagator's twin beaches are small by Goan standards but the dramatic red-stone cliffs, rolling green hills, patches of forest and a crumbling 17th-century Portuguese fort provide Vagator and its diminutive neighbour Chapora with one of the prettiest settings on the north Goan coast. Once known for wild trance parties and heady, hippy lifestyle, Vagator has slowed down, but it's still the place of choice for many backpackers and partygoers, and tiny Chapora – reminiscent of Star Wars' Mos Eisley Cantina – remains a fave for longstayers and charas smokers.

₹900/1400; 📶📶📶) True backpacker hostels are on the rise in Goa, but this was one of the originals, bringing the dorm experience and an international vibe to Vagator. The six-bed dorms are clean and bright and things like lockers, wi-fi, breakfast, communal kitchen and travel advice are free.

Bean Me Up

GUESTHOUSE $
 (Enterprise Guest House; 📞7769095356; www.beanmeup.in; 1639/2 Deulvaddo; d ₹1200, without bathroom ₹900; 🍴) Set around a leafy, parachute-silky courtyard that's home to Vagator's best vegan restaurant (p837), rooms at the Enterprise Guest House look simple but are themed with individual exotic decor, earthy shades, mosquito nets and shared verandahs. The mellow yoga-friendly vibe matches the clientele.

Shalom

GUESTHOUSE $
(📍919881578459, 0832-2273166; www.shalomguesthousegoa.com; d ₹800-1400, with AC ₹1800; 🍴🍷) Arranged around a placid garden not far from the path down to Little Vagator Beach, this established place run by a friendly family (whose home is onsite) offers a variety of extremely well-kept rooms and a two-bedroom apartment for long-stayers.

Alcove Resort

HOTEL $$
(📍0832-2274491; www.alcovegoa.com; Little Vagator Beach; d ₹3300, with AC ₹3850, cottage ₹4400/4950; 🍴🍷🍺) The location overlooking Little Vagator Beach is hard to beat at this price. Attractively furnished rooms, slightly larger cottages and four suites surrounding a decent central pool, restaurant and bar, make this a good place for those who want a touch of affordable luxury.

Chapora

Head down the road to the harbour and you'll find lots of rooms – and whole homes – for rent.

Casa de Olga

GUESTHOUSE $
(📍0832-2274355, 9822157145; eadsouza@yahoo.co.in; r ₹600-1200, without bathroom from ₹300) This welcoming family-run homestay, set around a nice garden on the way to Chapora harbour, offers spotless rooms of varying sizes in a three-storey building. The best are the brand-new top-floor rooms with swanky bathrooms, TV and balcony. Budget travellers will be happy with the compact ground-floor rooms with shared bathroom.

Baba

GUESTHOUSE $
(📍0832-2273339; babavilla1@yahoo.in; d ₹500, without bathroom ₹250) At this price, and with its laid-back Chapora location, Baba is often full with long-stayers but you might be lucky as a walk-in. The 14 rooms are clean and simple but serviceable. Located behind the Baba Restaurant on the main street.

Baba Place

GUESTHOUSE $
(📍9822156511; babaplace1@yahoo.com; Chapora Fort Rd; d without/with AC ₹800/1200; 🍴🍷) Brand new at the time of research, Baba Place features a rooftop terrace with views of Chapora Fort, immaculate, decent-sized rooms with verandah, and a nice, quiet Chapora location.

Eating

Vagator

★ Bean Me Up Soya Station

VEGAN $$
(www.beanmeup.in; 1639/2 Deulvaddo; mains ₹180-350; ☀️8am-11pm; 🍴) Bean Me Up has gone all vegan, but even nonveg travellers will be blown away by the taste, variety and filling plates on offer in this relaxed garden restaurant. The extensive menu includes vegan pizzas, ice creams and innovative salads. Ingredients are as diverse as coconut, cashew milk and cashew cheese, quinoa, tofu and lentil dhal.

Bluebird

GOAN $$
(www.bluebirdgoa.com; Ozran Beach Rd; mains ₹250-370; ☀️8.30am-11pm) Bluebird specialises in Goan cuisine, with genuine vindaloes, chicken cafrial, fish curry rice and Goan sausages among the temptations, as well as some delicately spiced seafood dishes. Dine in the lovely open garden cafe. The attached guesthouse has some nice rooms.

Mango Tree Bar & Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$
(Vagator Beach Rd; mains ₹120-550; ☀️24hr) With loud reggae, crappy service, dark-wood furniture, a sometimes rambunctious bar scene, ancient expats leaning over the bar, draught beer and an overall great vibe, the Mango Tree is a classic Vagator meeting place. It's open late (24 hours if it's busy enough), the food is pretty good – from Goan to European, pizza, Thai and Mexican – and films or sports are sometimes shown on the big screen.

★ Thalassa

GREEK $$$
(📍9850033537; www.thalassagoa.com; mains ₹300-750; ☀️4pm-midnight) Authentic and ridiculously good Greek food is served alfresco on a breezy terrace to the sound of the sea just below. Kebabs, souvlaki and thoughtful seafood dishes are the speciality, but veggie dishes are also excellent; the spanakorizo

WHERE'S THE PARTY?

Goa was long legendary among Western visitors for its all-night, open-air trance parties, until a central government 'noise pollution' ban on loud music in open spaces between 10pm and 6am largely curbed its often notorious, drug-laden party scene (late nights are still allowed in sound-proof interior spaces). If you're looking for the remainder of the real party scene, though, you'll need to keep your ear close to the ground, and wait out for word in Vagator or Anjuna. Authorities tend to turn a blind eye to parties during the peak Christmas–New Year period.

(spinach and rice cooked with Greek olive oil and herbs and topped with feta) is outstanding. Wash it all down with a jug of sangria. It's very popular around sunset – book ahead for a beachside table.

Chapora

Tiny Chapora's eating scene is not as evolved as Vagator's. Scarlet Cold Drinks (juices & snacks ₹30-80; ☀8.30am-midnight) and Jai Ganesh Fruit Juice Centre (Chapora; juices ₹40-80; ☀8.30am-midnight) are both popular meeting places side by side in close proximity to the thickest gusts of charas (hasish) smoke. Scarlet has an exceptionally good noticeboard, while Jai Ganesh has cold coffee and avocado lassis.

Drinking & Entertainment

Vagator's party scene is hanging on, especially over the peak Christmas/New Year period. The Russians, having taken the party crown away from the Israelis, seem to create nightlife in various spots around town.

Paulo's Antique Bar BAR
(Chapora; ☀11.30am-11pm) In season this hole-in-the-wall bar on Chapora's main street overflows with good music and cold beer at night. Even during the afternoon the few tables on the verandah are a good spot to watch the world go by.

Nine Bar BAR
(☀6pm-4am) Once the hallowed epicentre of Goa's trance scene, the open-air Nine Bar, on the cliff-top overlooking Little Vagator Beach, has now moved into an indoor space so the parties can still go all night. Look out for flyers and local advice to see when the big party nights are on.

Hilltop CLUB
(☎0832-2273665; ☀sunset-late) Hilltop is a long-serving Vagator trance and party venue that's deserted by day but comes alive from sunset. Its edge-of-town neon-lit coconut grove location allows it, on occasion, to bypass the 10pm noise regulations to host concerts, parties and the occasional international DJ. Sunday sessions (5pm to 10pm) are legendary here, and in season there's usually an evening market and techno party on Friday night.

Shopping

Rainbow Bookshop BOOKS
(Vagator Beach Rd; ☀10am-2pm & 3-7pm) Long-running shop stocking a good range of secondhand and new books.

Information

Vagator's closest ATM is the HDFC at the petrol station on the back road to Anjuna and Mapusa. Plenty of internet places are scattered around town and lots of accommodation places offer wi-fi.

Getting There & Away

Frequent buses run from Chapora, through Vagator, to Mapusa (₹10) throughout the day, many via Anjuna. The buses start in Chapora village, but there are a couple of other stops in Chapora and Vagator. Scooters/motorbikes can easily be hired for around ₹200/300 per day in high season.

Morjim & Aswem

Morjim and Aswem, a peaceful strip of uncrowded sand stretching north from the Chapora river mouth, are two North Goan beaches where sunbathing doesn't attract hordes of hawkers, dogs and onlookers. The water, though, does suffer from a bit of river run-off pollution and the sand is more black than golden. Rare olive ridley turtles nest at Morjim's southern end from November to February, so this is a protected area, but it's developing rapidly due mainly to a heavy influx of Russian visitors.

Activities

Vaayu Waterman's Village

SURFING

(☎ 9850050403; www.vaayuvision.org; Aswem; surfboard hire per hr ₹500, lessons ₹2700) Goa's only surf shop is also an activity and art centre where you can arrange lessons and hire equipment for surfing, kiteboarding, stand up paddleboarding, kayaking and wakeboarding. Enthusiastic young owners also run an art gallery, cafe and funky accommodation across the road from Aswem beach.

Sleeping & Eating

★ Wanderers Hostel

HOSTEL $

(☎ 9619235302; www.wanderershostel.com; Morjim; dm incl breakfast ₹500, luxury tent d ₹2000; 🍷 🍷 🍷) This relatively new hostel about five minutes' walk back from Morjim Beach is a real find. The main building, decorated with original travellers murals, has 40 beds in spotless air-con dorms with lockers, bed lights and free wi-fi, full kitchen, clean bathrooms, cosy communal areas and a pool table. In the garden next door is a tent village with swimming pool and yoga retreat centre (classes free to guests).

Goan Café & Resort

RESORT $$

The Friends Corner restaurant is good; it's not licensed but you're welcome to BYO.

Meems' Beach Resort

RESORT $$

(☎ 0832-2247015; www.meemsbeachresort.com; r ₹2000, with AC ₹2500, f ₹4000; 🍷 🍷) A solid guesthouse with 11 very clean rooms, Meems' is just across the road from the beach. A feature here is the atmospheric garden restaurant with low tables and floor cushions, specialising in Kashmiri cuisine and Vietnamese barbecue.

Yab Yum

HUTS $$$

(☎ 0832-6510392; www.yabyumresorts.com; hut from ₹5800; 🍷 🍷) This top-notch choice has unusual, stylish, dome-shaped huts – some look like giant hairy coconuts – made of a combination of all-natural local materials, including mud, stone and mango wood. A whole host of yoga and massage options are available, and it's all set in one of the most secluded beachfront jungle gardens you'll find in Goa.

La Plage

MEDITERRANEAN $$

(mains ₹210-400; ☀ 9am-10pm Nov-Mar) Known in these parts, La Plage takes beach shack to the next level with its inspired gourmet French-Mediterranean food. Along with excellent salads, seafood and fabulous desserts (try the chocolate thali), La Plage stocks great wines. It's usually open from late November to April.

Getting There & Around

Although local buses run between Siolim and Morjim, unless you have your own transport it's easiest to take a taxi from Arambol, Mapusa or Anjuna.

Mandrem

Mellow Mandrem has developed in recent years from an in-the-know piece of beach heaven for those seeking a change from the traveller scenes of Arambol and Anjuna to a fairly mainstream but still incredibly lovely hangout. An unusual feature of Mandrem is the narrow river inlet separating the white-sand beach from most of the accommodation strip and road – rickety bamboo bridges connect you to the beach, where seasonal shack restaurants set up. Development here is still low-key compared to most resorts in Goa and the beaches are largely free of hawkers and tourist crowds. There's plenty of yoga, meditation and ayurveda on offer, good dining and space to lay down with a good book. Many travellers believe there's no better place in North Goa.

Activities

Himalaya Yoga Valley

YOGA

(☎ 9960657852; www.yogagoaindia.com; Mandrem Beach) The winter home of a popular Dharamsala outfit, HYV specialises in hatha and ashtanga residential teacher-training courses, but also has daily drop-in classes (₹400; 1½ hours; 8am, 10am and 3pm daily) and 10-day yoga refresher courses.

Oceanic Yoga

YOGA

(☎ 9049247422; www.oceanicyoga.com; Junas Waddo, Mandrem; drop-in class ₹300-400) Oceanic officers drop-in classes, seven-day yoga and meditation retreats, reiki and yoga teacher-training courses.

Sleeping & Eating

★ Dunes Holiday Village

BEACH HUT $

(☎ 0832-2247219; www.dunesgoa.com; r & hut ₹900-1100; @ 📶) The pretty huts here are peppered around a palm-filled lane leading to the beach; at night, globe lamps light up the place like a palm-tree dreamland. Huts range from basic to more sturdy 'treehouses' (huts on stilts). It's a friendly, good-value place with a decent beach restaurant, massage, yoga classes and a marked absence of trance.

★ Mandala

RESORT $$

(☎ 9158266093; www.themandalagoa.com; r & hut ₹1600-5500; 🍷 📶) Mandala is a very shanti and beautifully designed eco-village with a range of huts and a couple of quirky air-con rooms in the 'Art House.' Pride of place goes to the barn-sized two-storey villas inspired by the design of a Kerala houseboat. There are no beach views or even direct beach access but the location, overlooking the tidal lagoon, is serene with a large garden, daily yoga sessions and an organic restaurant.

Beach Street

RESORT $$

(Lazy Dog; ☎ 0832-3223911; Mandrem Beach; r & hut ₹3300-4400; 🍷 📶) This large and relatively new beachfront villa has neat and tidy rooms, while the seasonal beachfront huts are spacious and well designed. The pool is a nice touch but it's only a short walk over the bamboo bridge to the beach.

📍 Getting There & Around

It's a nightmare trying to get anywhere in a hurry on public transport. Most travellers taxi to their chosen accommodation, then either hire a scooter/motorbike or use taxis from there.

Arambol (Harmal)

With its craggy cliffs, sweeping beach and remote northerly location, Arambol first emerged in the 1960s as a mellow paradise for long-haired long-stayers, and ever since travellers have been drifting up to this blissed-out corner of Goa. As a result, in high season the beach and the road leading down to it (known as Glastonbury St) can get pretty crowded – with huts, people and nonstop stalls selling the usual tourist stuff.

Further north around the headland is the near-deserted Querim (Keri) beach where the Terekhol River meets the coast.

Activities

Follow the cliff path north of Arambol Beach to pretty Kalacha Beach, which meets the small 'sweetwater' lake, a great spot for swimming.

Arambol Paragliding

PARAGLIDING

(10min flight ₹1500; ☀️ noon-6pm) The headland above Kalacha Beach (Sweetwater Lake) is an ideal launching point for paragliding. There are a number of independent operators: ask around at the shack restaurants on the beach, arrange a pilot, then make the short hike to the top of the headland. Most flights are around 10 minutes, but if conditions are right you can stay up much longer.

Himalayan Iyengar Yoga Centre

YOGA

(www.hiyogacentre.com; Madhlo Vaddo; 5-day yoga course ₹4000; ☀️ 9am-6pm Tue-Sun Nov-Mar) Arambol's reputable Himalayan Iyengar Yoga Centre, which runs five-day courses in hatha yoga from mid-November to mid-March, is the winter centre of the iyengar yoga school in Dharamkot, near Dharamsala in north India. First-time students must take the introductory five-day course, then can continue with more advanced five-day courses at a reduced rate.

Surf Wala

SURFING

(www.surfwala.com; Surf Club; 1½hr lesson from ₹2000, 3-/5-day course ₹5000/8000) If you're a beginner looking to get up on a board, join the international team of surfers based at Arambol's Surf Club. Prices include board hire, wax and rashie. Check the website for instructor contact details – between them they speak English, Russian, Hindi, Konkani and Japanese! Board-only rental is ₹500.

Sleeping

Arambol is known for its sea-facing, cliff-hugging budget huts – trawl the cliffside to the north of Arambol's main beach for the best hut options. It's almost impossible to book in advance: simply turn up early in the day to check who's checking out. The beach stretch is also lined with shack restaurants with hut accommodation at the back, much like Palolem.

Chilli's

HOTEL $

(☎ 9921882424; d ₹600, apt with AC ₹1000; ☀️ year-round; 🍷) Near the beach entrance on Glastonbury St, this clean and friendly canary-yellow place is one of Arambol's better non-beachfront bargains. Chilli's offers 10 decent, no-frills rooms, all with attached bathroom, fan and a hot-water shower. The top-floor apartment with AC and TV is great value. Owner Derek hires out motorbikes and scooters and free advice.

Shree Sai Cottages

HUT $

(☎ 0832-3262823, 9420767358; shreesai_cottages@yahoo.com; hut without bathroom ₹400-600) A good example of what's on offer along the cliffs, Shree Sai has simple, cute, sea-facing huts on the cliffs overlooking Kalacha Beach.

Om Ganesh

BEACH HUT $

(☎ 9404436447; r & hut ₹400-800) Popular seasonal huts along the cliff path and a good restaurant, Om Ganesh has been around for a while and also has solid rooms in a building on the hillside.

Arambol Plaza Beach Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9545550731, 0832-2242052; Arambol Beach Rd; r & cottage ₹1800-2500; 🍷 🍷 🍷) On the road between the upper village and the beach, Arambol Plaza is a reasonable mid-range choice with cute timber cottages around a decent pool. All rooms are air-con but avoid the poorly maintained rooms in the building at the side.

Surf Club

GUESTHOUSE $$

(www.surfclubgoa.com; d ₹1200-1600; 🍷) In its own space at the end of a lane, on the very southern end of Arambol Beach, the Surf Club is one of those cool little hang-outs that offer a bit of everything: simple but clean rooms, a funky bar with live music, surf lessons and a seasonal kindergarten.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Beach shacks with chairs and tables on the sand and parachute-silk canopies line the beach at Arambol. There are more restaurants and cafes lining the main road from the village to the beach. For simpler fare, head up to Arambol village, by the bus stop, where small local joints will whip you up a thali and a chai for less than ₹50.

Shimon

MIDDLE EASTERN $

(meals ₹100-160; ☀ 9am-11pm) Just back from the beach, and understandably popular with Israeli backpackers, Shimon is the place to fill up on exceptional felafel. For something more unusual go for sabich, crisp slices of eggplant stuffed into pita bread along with boiled egg, boiled potato and salad. The East-meets-Middle-East thali (₹360) comprises a little bit of almost everything on the menu.

Dylan's Toasted & Roasted

CAFE $

(☎ 9604780316; www.dylanscoffee.com; coffee & desserts from ₹60; ☀ 9am-11pm late Nov-Apr) The Goa (winter) incarnation of a Manali institution, Dylan's is a fine place for an espresso, chocolate chip cookies and old-school dessert. A nice hang-out just back from the southern beach entrance.

Fellini

ITALIAN $$

(mains ₹180-350; ☀ from 6.30pm) On the left-hand side just before the beach, this un-signposted but long-standing Italian joint is perfect if you're craving a carbonara or calzone. More than 20 wood-fired, thin-crust pizza varieties are on the menu, but save space for a very decent rendition of tiramisù.

Double Dutch

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹110-390, steaks ₹420-470; ☀ 7am-10pm) In a peaceful garden set back from the main road to the Glastonbury St beach entrance, Double Dutch has long been popular for its steaks, salads, Thai and Indonesian dishes, and famous apple pies. It's a very relaxed meeting place with secondhand books, newspapers and a useful noticeboard for current Arambolic affairs.

📍 Information

The nearest ATM is in Arambol village near the bus stop.

📍 Getting There & Around

Buses to Mapusa (₹30, one hour) depart from Arambol village every half-hour. A taxi to Mapusa or Anjuna should cost around ₹600. If you're heading north to Mumbai, travel agents can book bus tickets and you can board at a stop on the highway in the main village.

Lots of places in Arambol rent scooters and motorbikes, for ₹250 and ₹350, respectively, per day.

👁 Sights

It's worth a walk around the Largo de Igreja district, home to lots of atmospherically crumbling and restored old Portuguese-era homes, and the richly decorated 17th-century Church of the Holy Spirit, particularly impressive when a Sunday morning service is taking place.

The city's business district orbits the rectangular Municipal Gardens, a mini-oasis of lawns, flowers and paths. At the southern end the Municipal Building is home to the Municipal Library (Abade Faria Rd; ☎ 8am-8pm Mon-Fri, 9am-noon & 4-7pm Sat & Sun), which has some great books on Goa and a retro reading room where locals gather to read the daily paper.

🛏 Sleeping

Hotel Tanish HOTEL $
(☎ 0832-2735858; www.hoteltanishgoa.com; Reliance Trade Centre, Valaulikar Rd; s/d ₹900/1200, s/d/ste with AC ₹1100/1500/2000; 📶) Oddly situated inside a modern mall, this top-floor hotel offers good views of the surrounding countryside, with stylish, well-equipped rooms. Suites come with a bathtub, a big TV and a view all the way to Colva; just make sure you get an outside-facing room, as some overlook the mall interior.

Om Shiv Hotel

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0832-2710294; www.omshivhotel.com; Cine Lata Rd; d ₹2750-3850, ste ₹5000; 📶📶📶) In a bright-yellow building tucked away behind the Bank of India, Om Shiv does a decent line in fading 'executive' rooms, all of which have air-con and balcony. The suites have good views, there's a gym and the 7th-floor Rockon Pub.

Nanutel Margao

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0832-6722222; Padre Miranda Rd; s/d incl breakfast ₹3780/4100, ste ₹4750-5300; 📶📶📶) Margao's best business class hotel by some margin, Nanutel is modern and slick with a lovely pool, good restaurant, bar and coffee shop, and clean air-con rooms. The location, between the Municipal Gardens and Largo de Igreja district, is convenient for everything.

🍴 Eating

Swad

INDIAN $
(New Market; ₹50-10; ☎ 7.30am-8pm) Some of Margao's best veg food is dished up at the family-friendly, lunch-break favourite Swad, across from Lotus Inn. The thalis, South Indian tiffins and other mains are all reliably tasty.

Café Tato

INDIAN $
(Valaulikar Rd; thalis ₹90; ☎ 7am-10pm Mon-Sat) A favourite local lunch spot: tasty vegetarian fare in a bustling backstreet canteen, and delicious all-you-can-eat thalis.

★ Ruta's World Café

AMERICAN, INTERNATIONAL $$
(☎ 0832-2710757; www.caferruta.com; Fr Miranda Rd; mains ₹150-350; ☎ 10am-7pm Mon-Sat) Ruta's is a quality addition to Margao's otherwise average dining scene and an excellent reason to get off the beach. After years working as an award-winning cook, teacher and recipe book author on the San Francisco scene, chef Ruta Kahate has brought some of her culinary magic to Goa (there's another restaurant in Mapusa; p824).

★ Longhuino's

GOAN, MULTICUISINE $$
(Luis Miranda Rd; mains ₹95-205; ☎ 8.30am-10pm) A local institution since 1950, quaint old Longhuino's has been serving up tasty Indian, Goan and Chinese dishes, popular with locals and tourists alike. Go for a Goan dish such as ambot tik, and leave room for the retro desserts like rum balls and tiramasu. Service is as languid as the slowly whirring ceiling fans but it's a great place to watch the world go by over a coffee or beer.

Shopping

MMC New Market

(☺ 8.30am-9pm Mon-Sat) Margao's crowded, covered canopy of colourful stalls is a fun place to wander around, sniffing spices, sampling soaps and browsing the household merchandise.

Golden Heart Emporium

(☺ 10am-1.30pm & 4-7pm Mon-Sat) One of Goa's best bookshops, Golden Heart is crammed from floor to ceiling with fiction, nonfiction, children's books, and illustrated volumes on the state's food, architecture and history. It also stocks otherwise hard-to-get titles by local Goan authors. It's situated down a little lane off

Abade Faria Rd, on the right-hand side as you're heading north.

Information

Banks offering currency exchange and 24-hour ATMs are all around town, especially near the municipal gardens and along Luis Miranda Rd. There's a handy HDFC ATM and an internet cafe in the Caro Centre near Louginhos.

Getting There & Around

BUS

Long-distance buses depart from Kadamba bus stand and a private stand, both about 2km north of the Municipal Gardens. Shuttle buses (₹30, 35 minutes) run to Panaji every few minutes. For North Goa destinations head to Panaji and change there. Local buses to Benaulim (₹10, 20 minutes), Colva (₹10, 20 minutes) and Palolem (₹40, one

TAXI

Taxis go to Palolem (₹900), Panaji (₹800), Dabolim airport (₹600), Calangute (₹1000) and Anjuna (₹1200). Except for the train station, where there's a prepaid booth, you'll have to negotiate the fare with the driver.

TRAIN

Margao's well-organised train station, about 2km south of town, serves the Konkan Railway and other routes. Its reservation hall (☎ PNR enquiry 0832-2700730, information 0832-2712790; ☎ 8am-2pm & 2.15-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun) is on the 1st floor. A taxi or autorickshaw to or from the town centre should cost around ₹100.

Chandor

The lush village of Chandor, 15km east of Margao, makes a perfect day away from the beaches, and it's here more than anywhere else in the state that the once opulent lifestyles of Goa's former landowners, who found favour with the Portuguese aristocracy, are still visible in its quietly decaying colonial-era mansions. Chandor hosts the colourful Feast of the Three Kings on the 6 January, during which local boys reenact the arrival of the three kings from the Christmas story.

Braganza House, built in the 17th century, is possibly the best example of what Goa's scores of once grand and glorious mansions have today become. Built on land granted by the King of Portugal, the house was divided from the outset into two wings, to house two sides of the same family. The West Wing (☎ 0832-2784201; donation ₹150; ☎ 9am-5pm) belongs to one set of the family's descendants, the Menezes-Bragança, and is filled with gorgeous chandeliers, Italian marble floors, rosewood furniture, and antique treasures from Macau, Portugal, China and Europe. Despite the passing of the elderly Mrs Aida Menezes-Bragança in 2012, the grand old home, which requires considerable upkeep, remains open to the public. Next door, the East Wing (☎ 0832-2784227;

WORTH A TRIP

HAMPI

The surreal ruins of the Vijayanagar empire at Hampi (p896), in Karanakata, are a popular detour or overnight trip from Goa. Hampi can be reached by train from Margao to Hospet on the VSG Howrah Express which departs at 7.10am Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹235/620/885, eight hours). More convenient are the overnight sleeper buses direct to Hampi from Margao and Panaji operated by Paulo Travel (₹900 to ₹1100, 10 to 11 hours, 2-3 daily).

donation ₹100; ☎ 10am-6pm) is owned by the Braganza-Pereiras, descendants of the other half of the family. It's nowhere near as grand, but it's beautiful in its own lived-in way, and has a small but striking family chapel that contains a carefully hidden fingernail of St Francis Xavier – a relic that's understandably a source of great pride. Both homes are open daily, and there's almost always someone around to let you in. Donations are requested and expected.

About 1km east of Chandor's church, the original building of the Fernandes House (☎ 0832-2784245; donation ₹200; ☎ 9am-6pm), also known as Casa Grande, dates back more than 500 years, while the Portuguese section was tacked on by the Fernandes family in 1821. The secret basement hideaway, full of gun holes and with an escape tunnel to the river, was used by the family to flee attackers.

Colva & Benaulim

POP 12,000

Colva and Benaulim boast broad, open beaches, but are no longer the first place backpackers head in south Goa – most tourists here are of the domestic or ageing European varieties. There's no party scene as in north Goa and they lack the beauty and traveller vibe of Palolem. Still, these are the closest beaches to the major transport hubs of Margao and Dabolim airport. Benaulim has the greater charm, with only a small strip of shops and a village vibe, though out of high season it sometimes has the melancholy feel of a deserted seaside town.

Sights & Activities

The beach entrance at Colva, and to a lesser extent Benaulim, throng with operators keen to sell you parasailing (per ride ₹800), jet-skiing (per 15 minutes s/d ₹300/500), and one-hour dolphin-watching trips (per person from ₹300).

★ Goa Chitra

MUSEUM

(☎ 0832-6570877; www.goachitra.com; St John the Baptist Rd, Mondo Vaddo, Benaulim; admission ₹200; ☀ 9am-6pm Tue-Sun) Artist and restorer Victor Hugo Gomes first noticed the slow extinction of traditional objects – from farming tools to kitchen utensils to altarpieces – as a child in Benaulim. He created this ethnographic museum from the more than 4000 cast-off objects that he collected from across the state over 20 years (he often had to find elderly people to explain their uses). Admission to this fascinating museum is via a one-hour guided tour, held on the hour. Goa Chitra is 3km east of Maria Hall – ask locally for directions.

Sleeping

Colva

Colva still has a few basic budget guesthouses among the palm groves back from the beach; ask around locally.

Sam's Guesthouse

HOTEL $

(☎ 0832-2788753; r ₹650; 🏠) Away from the fray, north of Colva's main drag on the road running parallel to the beach, Sam's is a big, cheerful place with friendly owners and spacious rooms that are a steal at this price. Rooms are around a pleasant garden courtyard and there's a good restaurant and a whacky bar.

Colmar Beach Resort

RESORT $

(☎ 022-67354666 in Mumbai; www.colmarbeachresort.net; d ₹700, with AC from ₹1100, poolside cottage ₹1500; 🏠🏠🏠) Colmar Beach Resort is the closest budget place to Colva's beach and, provided you're not expecting too much, it can make a reasonable stay. The cottages around the small pool are the pick, while the ageing rooms at the back are cheaper and a bit grimy. The beach is right in front and the restaurant-bar is quite good.

La Ben

HOTEL $

(☎ 0832-2788040; www.laben.net; Colva Beach Rd; r ₹1100, with AC ₹1400; 🏠🏠) Neat, clean and not entirely devoid of atmosphere. If you're not desperately seeking anything with character, La Ben has decent, good-value rooms and has been around for ages. A great addition is the Garden Restaurant.

Skylark Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0832-2788052; www.skylarkresortgoa.com; d ₹2885-3639, f ₹4270; 🏠🏠🏠) A serious step up from the budget places, Skylark's clean, fresh rooms are graced with bits and pieces of locally made teak furniture and block-print bedspreads, while the lovely pool makes a pleasant place to lounge. The best (and more expensive) rooms are those facing the pool.

Benaulim

There are lots of homes around town advertising simple rooms to let. This, combined with a couple of decent budget options, make Benaulim a better (and quieter) bet for backpackers than Colva.

Rosario's Inn

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0832-2770636; r ₹450, with AC ₹450 800; 🏠) Across a football field flitting with young players and dragonflies, family-run Rosario's

PUPPY LOVE

International Animal Rescue (Animal Tracks; ☎ 0832-2268272; www.internationalanimalrescuegoa.org.in; Madungo Vaddo, Assagao; ☀ 9am-4pm) runs the Animal Tracks rescue facility in Assagao, North Goa. At Colva's Goa Animal Welfare Trust Shop (☎ 0832-2653677; www.gawt.org; ☀ 9.30am-1pm & 4-7pm Mon-Sat), next to Skylark Resort, you can pick up some gifts, donate clothes and other stuff you don't want, and borrow books from the lending library. You can also learn more about the work of GAWT (☎ 0832-2653677; www.gawt.org; Old Police Station, Curcholem; ☀ 9am-5.30pm Mon-Sat, 10am-1pm Sun), which operates a shelter in Curcholem (near Margao). At Chapolim, a few kilometres northeast of Palolem, the Animal Rescue Centre (☎ 0832-2644171; Chapolim; ☀ 10am-1pm & 2.30-5pm Mon-Sat) also takes in sick, injured or stray animals. Volunteers are welcome at the shelters, even for a few hours, to walk or play with the dogs.

is a large establishment with very clean, simple rooms and a restaurant. Excellent value.

D'Souza Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎0832-277 0583; d ₹600) With just three rooms, this blue-painted house in the back lanes is run by a local Goan family and comes with bundles of homey atmosphere and a lovely garden. It's often full so book ahead.

Palm Grove Cottages HOTEL $$
(☎0832-2770059; www.palmgrovegoa.com; Vaswado; d incl breakfast ₹2020-3700; ♿) Old-fashioned, secluded charm and Benaulim's leafiest garden welcomes you at Palm Grove Cottages, a great midrange choice. The quiet AC rooms, some with a balcony, all have a nice feel but the best are the spacious deluxe rooms in a separate Portuguese-style building. The Palm Garden Restaurant here is exceptionally good.

Anthy's Guesthouse GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎0832-2771680; anthyguesthouse@rediffmail.com; Sernabatim Beach; d ₹1300, with AC ₹1700; ♿) One of a handful of places lining Sernabatim Beach itself, Anthy's is a firm favourite with travellers for its good restaurant, book exchange, and its well-kept chalet-style rooms, which stretch back from the beach surrounded by a garden.

Blue Corner BEACH HUTS $$
(☎9850455770; www.bluecornergoa.com; huts ₹1600) Behind the beach shack restaurant a short walk north of the main beach entrance is this group of sturdy cocohuts – not so common around here – with fan and verandah. The restaurant gets good reviews.

Eating & Drinking

Colva

Colva's beach has a string of shacks offering the standard fare and fresh seafood.

Sagar Kinara INDIAN $
(Colva Beach Rd; mains ₹60-180; ☎7am-10.30pm) A pure-veg restaurant upstairs (nonveg is separate, downstairs) with tastes to please even committed carnivores, this place is clean, efficient and offers cheap and delicious North and South Indian cuisine all day.

Leda Lounge & Restaurant BAR
(☎7.30am-midnight) Part sports bar, part music venue, part cocktail bar, Leda is Colva's best nightspot by a long shot. There's live music from Thursday to Sunday, fancy

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

DUDHSAGAR FALLS

On the eastern border with Karnataka, Dudhsagar Falls (603m) are Goa's most impressive waterfalls, and the second highest in India, best seen as soon as possible after the rains. The main access is the village of Colem, from where jeeps (₹400 per person for six passengers) make the bumpy but scenic 40-minute drive to the car park from where it's a short scramble to the falls

A nice way to get here is the 8.15am train to Kulem (Colem) from Margao (check return times), then pick up a jeep. An easier option (especially if coming from your beach resort rather than Margao) is to take a taxi, book with a travel agent, or take a full-day GTDC tour from Panaji, Mapusa or Calangute (₹1200, Wed & Sun).

drinks (Mojitos, Long Island iced teas) and good food (mains ₹270 to ₹600).

Benaulim

Pedro's Bar & Restaurant GOAN, MULTICUISINE $$
(Vasvaddo Beach Rd; mains ₹110-350; ☎7am-midnight) Set amid a large, shady garden on the beachfront and popular with local and international travellers, Pedro's offers standard Indian, Chinese and Italian dishes, as well as Goan choices and 'sizzlers.'

Johncy Restaurant GOAN, MULTICUISINE $$
(Vasvaddo Beach Rd; mains ₹110-350; ☎7am-midnight) Unlike most beach shacks, Johncy has been around forever, dispensing standard Goan, Indian and Western favourites from its location just back from the sand.

Club Zoya CLUB
(☎9822661388; www.clubzoya.com; ☎ from 8pm) The party scene has hit sleepy little Benaulim in the form of barn-sized Club Zoya, with international DJs, big light shows and a cocktail bar featuring speciality flavoured and infused vodka drinks. Something's on most nights here in season but check the website for upcoming events and DJs.

Information

Colva has several ATMs strung along the east-west Colva Beach Rd. Benaulim has a HDFC ATM on the back road to Colva.

i Getting There & Around

Scooters can be rented at Colva and Benaulim for around ₹250.

COLVA

Buses run from Colva to Margao every few minutes (₹10, 20 minutes) until around 7pm. An autorickshaw/taxi to Margao costs ₹200/250.

BENAULIM

Buses from Benaulim to Margao are also frequent (₹10, 20 minutes); they stop at the Maria Hall crossroads, 1.2km east of the beach. Some from Margao continue south to Varca and Cavellossim.

Benaulim to Agonda

Immediately south of Benaulim are the beach resorts of Varca and Cavellossim, with wide, pristine sands and a line of flashy five-star hotels set amid landscaped private grounds fronting the beach. About 3km south of Cavellossim, at the end of the peninsula, Mobor and its beach is one of the prettiest spots along this stretch of coast, with simple beach shacks serving good food. The pick here is Blue Whale (mains ₹100-350).

Cross the Sal River from Cavellossim to Assolna on the huge new bridge and continue south to the rustic but charming fishing village of Betul.

From Betul the road winds over gorgeous, undulating hills thick with palm groves. It's worth detouring to the bleak old Portuguese fort of Cabo da Rama, which has a small church within the fort walls, stupendous views and several old buildings rapidly becoming one with the trees.

Back on the main road to Agonda, look out for the turn-off to the right (west) to Cola Beach, one of south Goa's most gorgeous hidden beach gems complete with emerald-green lagoon. It's reached via a rough 2km dirt road from the highway, but it's not totally deserted – a couple of busy hut villages and a tent resort set up in season. About 500m north of the Cola turn-off is another jungle-strewn path to Khancola (or Kakolem) beach, with steep steps leading to a secluded beach and just a handful of huts.

Agonda is another 2.5km south of the Cola Beach turnoff.

Agonda

Agonda Beach is a fine 2km stretch of white sand framed between two forested headlands. Travellers have been drifting here for years and seasonal hut villages – some very luxurious – now occupy almost all available beachfront space, but it's still much more low-key than Palolem and a good choice if you're after some relaxation. Rare Olive Ridley turtles nest at the northern end, which is protected by the Forest Department.

There's lots of yoga and ayurveda in Agonda and a community feel among the shops and cafes in the street running parallel to the beach. There's a HDFC ATM near the church crossroads.

Sleeping & Eating

Some of Goa's most sophisticated and luxurious beach huts, along with beachfront restaurants and bars, set up along the foreshore from November to May, and there are a few more permanent places on the sideroad running parallel to the beach.

Fatima Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎) 0832-2647477; d ₹600-700, with AC ₹800; (☎) An ever-popular two-storey guesthouse with clean rooms, a good restaurant and highly obliging staff, on the southern stretch of Agonda's beach road. The rooftop yoga classes and extended courses (and the budget price) mean it's often full.

Abba's Gloryland

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎) 9404312232, 0832-2647822; www.abbasgloryland.com; hut/r ₹1000/1200; (☎) Set back from the road at the northern end of the beach, this friendly, family-run place offers cool, tiled rooms in a pink building, and neat bamboo huts with slate floors. A good budget option with no sea views but only a short walk from the beach.

Agonda White Sand

BEACH HUTS $$

(☎) 9823548277; www.agondawhitesand.com; Agonda Beach; hut from ₹3800; (☎) Beautifully designed and constructed cottages with open-air bathrooms and spring mattresses surround a central bar and restaurant at this stylish beachfront place. Less than 100m away the same owners have a pair of amazing five-star sea-facing villas (₹7000 to ₹9000) with enormous beds and cavernous bathrooms large enough to contain a garden and fish pond!

★ H2O Agonda

BEACH HUTS $$$

(☎) 9423836994; www.h2oagonda.com; d incl breakfast ₹4500-6500; (☎) With its purple and mauve muslin curtains and Arabian nights ambience, H2O is among the most impressive of Agonda's luxury cottage setups. From the hotel-style reception, walk through a leafy garden to the spacious cottages with air-con, TV and enormous open-air bathrooms. The more expensive sea-facing cottages, with zebra print spreads on king-size beds, are worth paying extra for.

Fatima Thali Shop

SOUTH INDIAN $

(veg/fish thali ₹80/100) Beloved by locals and visitors, tiny Fatima, with just four tables, is an Agonda institution, with filling South Indian thalis whipped up inside its improbably small kitchen. It's also a cosy spot for breakfast, salads and chai.

Palolem & Around

Palolem is undoubtedly one of Goa's most postcard-perfect beaches: a gentle curve of palm-fringed sand facing a calm bay. But in season it's bursting at the seams.

If you want to see what Palolem looked like 10 or 15 years ago, turn up in September or early October, before the beach huts start to go up. Once the hammering and sawing starts, the beachfront is transformed into a toy-town of colourful and increasingly sophisticated timber and bamboo huts fronted by palm-thatch restaurants. It's still a great place to be and is popular with backpackers, long-stayers and families. Aside from being one of the safest swimming and kayaking beaches in Goa, Palolem is a great place to learn to cook, drop in to yoga classes or hire a motorbike and cruise to surrounding beaches, waterfalls and wildlife parks. At night you can listen to live rock or reggae as the sun sets or dance in silence at a head-phone party.

Further south is the small rocky cove of Colomb Bay, with several basic places to stay, and then peaceful and pretty Patnem Beach, a more relaxed version of Palolem with just a dozen or so beach hut villages and shack restaurants.

Activities

Yoga

There are courses and classes on offer at numerous places in Palolem and Patnem. Bhakti Kutir (p851) and Space Goa (p852) offer daily drop-in yoga classes, while Butterfly Book Shop (p853) arranges daily yoga (₹300) and cooking classes (₹1200).

In Patnem, Bamboo Yoga Retreat (☎9765379887; www.bamboo-yoga-retreat.com; Patnam Beach; s/d from ₹5300/7400; 🏠) is recommended but exclusive to guests. About 4km further south Shamana Retreat is a new outfit with an attractively remote jungle location.

Beach Activities

Kayaks are available for rent on Palolem beaches (₹150 per hour), as well as a few stand-up paddleboards (₹500). Fishermen and other boat operators hanging around the beach offer dolphin-spotting trips or rides to tiny Butterfly Beach, north of Palolem, for around ₹1200 for two people.

Trekking

WORTH A TRIP

DAYTRIPPING DOWN SOUTH

Goa's far south is tailor-made for daytripping. Hire a motorbike or charter a taxi and try these road trips from Palolem, Patnem or Agonda.

➔ Tanshikar Spice Farm (☎0832-2608358, 9421184114; www.tanshikarspicefarm.com; Netravali; spice tour incl lunch ₹450; ecohuts inc meals ₹1500 per person; 🕒10am-4pm) About 35km inland from Palolem via forest and farms is this excellent spice plantation, along with jungle treks to waterfalls and the enigmatic 'bubble lake'.

➔ Talpona & Galgibag These two near-deserted beach gems are scenically framed (naturally) by the Talpona and Galgibag rivers. Olive Ridley turtles nest on Galgibag and there are a couple of excellent shack restaurants and huts. The winding country drive here is half the fun.

➔ Polem Beach Goa's most southerly beach, 25km south of Palolem, has just one set of beach huts and a real castaway feel. A trip here should be combined with the detour to Talpona and Galgibag.

Palolem

southeast of Palolem, and a good day trip, is the beautiful, remote-feeling Cotigao Wildlife Sanctuary, Goa's second-largest sanctuary and easily its most accessible, if you have your own transport. Don't expect to bump into its more exotic residents (including gaurs, sambars, leopards and spotted deer), but frogs, snakes, monkeys, insects and blazingly plumed birds are in no short supply.

Goa Jungle Adventure

(☎ 9850485641; www.goajungle.com; trekking & canyoning trips ₹1890-3590) This adventure company, run by an experienced French guide, will take you out for thrilling trekking and canyoning trips in the Netravali area at the base of the Western Ghats, where you climb, jump and abseil into remote water-filled plunges. Trips run from a half-day to several days, and extended rafting trips into Karnataka are also sometimes offered.

OUTDOORS

Sleeping

Palolem

Most of Palolem's accommodation is of the seasonal beach-hut variety, though there are plenty of old-fashioned guesthouses or family homes to be found back from the beach with decent rooms from ₹600. It's still possible to find a basic palm-thatch hut without bathroom somewhere near the beach for ₹700, but most of the huts these days are made of plywood or timber and come with attached bathrooms and multiple levels. The very best seafacing rooms feature air-con, flat-screen TVs and balconies and command more than ₹5000! Since the huts are dismantled and rebuilt each year, standards and ownership can vary – the places listed here are either permanent guesthouses or well-established hut operations.

pond are top-notch. The sea-view cottages are the more expensive and there are some air-con rooms – including a Jacuzzi room. There's a popular multicuisine restaurant, tapas restaurant and quality spa centre.

Art Resort

HUT $$

(☎) 9665982344; www.art-resort-goa.com; Ourem Rd; hut ₹1500-2500; (☎) The nicely designed cottages behind an excellent beachfront restaurant have a Bedouin camp feel with screened sit-outs and modern art works sprinkled around. The resort hosts art exhibitions and has regular live music.

Cozy Nook

HUT $$

(☎) 0832-2643550, 9822584760; www.cozynookgoa.com; hut ₹2500-3500) This long-running operation at the northern end of the beach has well-designed cottages, including some treehouses, and a funky bar.

Dreamcatcher

HUT $$

(☎) 0832-2644873; www.dreamcatcher.in; hut ₹1750-2500) Probably the largest resort in Palolem, Dreamcatcher's 60 sturdy huts are nevertheless secluded, set in a coconut grove just back from the far northern end of the beach. One of the highlights here is the riverside restaurant and cocktail bar, and the wide range of holistic treatments, massage and yoga on offer, with daily drop-in yoga and reiki courses available. Access it from the back road running parallel to the beach.

Kate's Cottages

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎) 9822165261; www.katescottagesgoa.com; Ourem Rd; d ₹3000-5000; (☎) The two stunning rooms above Fern's restaurant are beautifully designed with heavy timber finishes, huge four-poster beds, TV, modern bathrooms and views to the ocean from the balcony. There are also a couple of cheaper ground-floor cottages.

Village Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎) 9960487627, 0832-2645767; www.villageguesthousegoa.com; d incl breakfast ₹3400-4300; (☎) The Village is a lovely expat-run boutique hotel with eight spotless and spacious air-con rooms that are a cut above most Palolem hotels. Nicely furnished with sparkling bathrooms, four-poster beds, TV and homely touches, it makes a good base if you value peace more than being on the beach. Breakfast is served in the rear garden.

Bhakti Kutir

COTTAGE $$

(☎) 0832-2643469, 9823627258; www.bhaktikutir.com; Colomb Bay; cottage ₹2200-3300; (☎)

My Soulmate

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎) 9823785250; mysolmte@gmail.com; d ₹1000, with AC ₹1500; (☎) This friendly and spotless two-storey guesthouse in a good location just off the main Palolem Beach road is a good nonbeach bet. Neat rooms come with TV and hot water and the newer ones have sexy circular beds. Good cafe, nice staff.

Sevas

HUT $

(☎) 9422065437; www.sevaspalolemgoa.com; s/d hut ₹600/800, family cottage ₹1600; (☎) Hidden in the jungle on the Colomb Bay side of Palolem, Sevas has a range of simple palm-thatch huts with open-air bathrooms, larger family huts and rooms set in a lovely shaded garden area. Wi-fi is ₹100 per day.

★ Ciaran's

HUT $$

(☎) 0832-2643477; www.ciarans.com; hut incl breakfast ₹3000-4000, r with AC ₹4500; (☎) Ciaran's has some of the most impressive huts on the beachfront. Affable owner John has worked hard over the years to maintain a high standard and his beautifully designed cottages around a plant-filled garden and Ensnconed in a thick wooded grove in the Colomb Bay area south of Palolem, Bhakti's well-equipped rustic cottages are a little worn and you might find yourself sharing with local wildlife but this is still a popular eco and spiritual retreat with an ayurvedic massage centre and daily drop-in yoga classes.

Palolem Beach Resort

RESORT $$

(☎ 0832-2645775, 9764442778; www.cubagoa.com/palolem; r ₹3000, with AC ₹4000, cottages ₹3000; 🍷🍷) You can't beat the location, on the beachfront at the main road entrance to the beach, but Palolem Beach Resort has lifted its prices in keeping with most places in Palolem. It's good value in the fringe seasons when it's one of the only beachfront places open. There are average permanent rooms (air-con ones are better), seasonal huts at the front and a friendly beachfront restaurant.

Patnem

Long-stayers will love Patnem's choice of village homes and apartments available for rent. A very basic house can cost ₹10,000 per month, while a fully equipped apartment can run up to ₹40,000.

Mickys

HUT $

(☎ 9850484884; www.mickyhuts.com; Patnem Beach; r & hut ₹800-1500, without bathroom hut ₹400; 🍷) If you don't mind huts so basic they don't even have electricity, you can sleep cheap here. Fear not: there are also better huts with power and attached bath; rooms are available most of the year (closed only August and September). It's run by a friendly family at the northern end of the beach.

Mickys Naughty Corner is a cruisy beachfront cafe in front of the accommodation.

Papaya's

HUT $$

(☎ 9923079447; www.papayasgoa.com; hut ₹3000, with AC ₹4000; 🍷🍷) Solid huts constructed with natural materials head back into the palm grove from Papaya's popular restaurant, which does great versions of all the beachfront classics. Each hut is lovingly built, with lots of wood, four-poster beds and floating muslin.

✂ Eating

With limited beach space, restaurant shacks are banned from the sand at Palolem and Patnem, but there are plenty of beach-facing restaurants on the periphery, all offering all-day dining and fresh seafood. Palolem also has some interesting dining choices back along the main road to the beach.

Little World Cafe

CAFE $

(chai ₹10, snacks ₹70-120; ☺ 8am-6pm) This shanti little cafe serves up Palolem's best masala chai, along with healthy juices.

Shiv Sai

INDIAN $

(thalis ₹70-90, mains ₹60-150; ☺ 9am-11pm) A thoroughly local lunch joint on the parallel beach road, Shiv Sai serves tasty thalis of the vegie, fish and Gujarati kinds.

★ Space Goa

CAFE $$

(☎ 80063283333; www.thespacegoa.com; mains ₹90-250; ☺ 8.30am-5pm) On the Agonda road, Space Goa combines an excellent organic whole-food cafe with a gourmet deli, craft shop and a wellness centre offering reiki and reflexology. The food is fresh and delicious,

SILENT PARTIES

Considerately sidestepping the statewide ban on loud music after 10pm, Palolem is the home of popular silent rave parties where guests don a pair of headphones and dance the night away in inward bliss but outward quiet. You get the choice of two or three channels featuring inhouse Goan and international DJs playing hip hop, house, electro and funk. The concept came from British expats (now operating at Alpha Bar) but others jumped on the bandwagon and at last count there were four events, all operating on different nights:

Silent Noise @ Alpha Bar (www.silentnoise.in; cover charge ₹500; ☺ 9pm-4am Thu Nov-Apr) The original headphone party organisers.

Deafbeat (Cleopatra's, Palolem Beach Rd; ₹500, before 11pm free; ☺ from 9pm Wed)

Laughing Buddha (cover charge ₹400; ☺ from 10pm Tue)

Neptune Point (www.neptunepoint.com; Neptune's Point, Colomb Bay; cover charge ₹600; ☺ 9am-4am Sat Nov-Apr) South of Palolem at Colomb Bay with fabulous salads, paninis and meze, and the desserts – such as chocolate beetroot cake – are divine. Drop-in morning yoga classes are ₹500.

★ Café Inn CAFE $$
(Palolem Beach Rd; meals ₹150-550; ☎10am-11pm; ☎) If you're craving a cappuccino, semi-open-air Café Inn, which grinds its own blend of beans to perfection, is one of Palolem's favourite hang-outs – and it's not even on the beach. Its breakfasts are immense, and comfort-food burgers and panini sandwiches hit the spot. From 6pm there's an excellent barbecue. Free wi-fi.

German Bakery BAKERY, MULTICUISINE $$
(Ourem Rd; pastries ₹25-80, mains ₹80-210; ☎7am-10pm) Tasty baked treats are the stars at the Nepali-run German Bakery, but there is also an excellent range of set breakfasts and croissants with yak cheese. It's set in a peaceful garden festooned with flags.

Fern's By Kate's GOAN $$
(☎9822165261; mains ₹200-450; ☎8.30am-10.30pm; ☎) Back from the beach, this solid timber place with a vague nautical feel serves up excellent authentic Goan food such as local sausages, fish curry rice and shark amok tik.

★ Home CONTINENTAL $$
(☎0832-2643916; www.homeispatnem.com; Patnem Beach; mains ₹180-290; ☎8.30am-9.30pm; ☎) Standing out from the beach shacks like a beacon, this bright white, relaxed vegetarian restaurant is run by a British couple and serves up Patnem's best breakfasts, pastas, risotto and salads, continental-style. A highlight here is the dessert menu – awesome chocolate brownies, apple tart and cheesecake. Home also rents out eight nicely decorated, light rooms (from ₹1500).

Magic Italy ITALIAN $$
(☎88057 67705; Palolem Beach Rd; mains ₹180-460; ☎5pm-midnight) On the main beach road, Magic Italy has been around for a while and the quality of its pizza and pasta remains high, with imported Italian ingredients like ham, salami, cheese and olive oil, imaginative wood-fired pizzas and homemade pasta. Sit at tables, or Arabian-style on floor cushions. Busy but chilled.

★ Ourem 88 FUSION $$$
(☎8698827679; mains ₹440-650; ☎6-10pm Tue-Sat) Big things come in small packages at British-run Ourem 88, a gastro sensation with just a handful of tables and a small but masterful menu. Try tender calamari stuffed with Goan sausage, slow-roasted pork belly, fluffy soufflé or fillet steak with Béarnaise sauce. Worth a splurge.

Drinking & Nightlife

Leopard Valley CLUB
(www.leopardvalley.com; Palolem-Agonda Rd; admission from ₹600; ☎9pm-4.30am Fri) South Goa's biggest new outdoor dance club is a sight (and sound) to behold, with 3D laser light shows, pyrotechnics and state-of-the-art sound systems blasting local and international DJs. It's in an isolated but easily reached location between Palolem and Agonda, but given noise restrictions we don't know if it will endure. Friday night at time of research but possibly Sunday too.

Shopping

Butterfly Book Shop BOOKS
(☎9341738801; ☎9am-10.30pm) The best of several good bookshops in town, this cute and cosy place stocks best sellers, classics, and a good range of books on yoga, meditation and spirituality. This is also the base for yoga classes and cooking courses.

Information

Palolem's main road is lined with travel agencies, internet places and money changers. The nearest ATM is about 1.5km away, where the main highway meets Palolem Beach Rd, or head to nearby Chaudi.

Getting There & Around

Frequent buses run to nearby Chaudi (₹7) from the bus stop on the corner of the road down to the beach. There are hourly buses to Margao (₹40, one hour) from the same place. From Chaudi you can also pick up regular buses to Margao, from where you can change for Panaji, or south to Palem Beach and Karwar (Karnataka). Local buses run regularly to Agonda (₹10).

The closest train station is Canacona, 2km from Palolem's beach entrance, which is useful for trains south to Gokarna and Mangalore.

An autorickshaw from Palolem to Patnem should cost ₹80, to Chaudi ₹120 and to Agonda ₹250. A taxi to Dabolim Airport is around ₹1200.

Scooters and motorbikes can easily be hired along the main road leading to the beach from ₹200. Mountain bikes (₹100 per day) can be hired from Seema Bike Hire on Ourem Rd.

Why Go?

Blessed with a diverse makeup conforming to all the romance of quintessential India, Karnataka delivers with its winning blend of palaces, tiger reserves, megacities, ancient ruins, beaches and legendary hang-outs.

At its nerve centre is the silicon-capital Bengaluru (Bangalore), overfed with the good life. Scattered around the epicurean city are rolling hills dotted with spice and coffee plantations, the regal splendour of Mysuru (Mysore), and jungles teeming with monkeys, tigers and Asia's biggest population of elephants.

If that all sounds too mainstream, head to the countercultural enclave of tranquil Hampi with hammocks, psychedelic sunsets and boulder-strewn ruins. Or the blissful beaches of Gokarna, a beach haven minus the doof doof. Otherwise leave the tourist trail behind entirely, and take a journey to the stunning Islamic ruins of northern Karnataka.

When to Go

Bengaluru

Mar–May The best season to watch tigers and elephants in Karnataka's pristine national parks.

Oct Mysuru's Dussehra (Dasara) carnival brings night-long celebrations and a jumbo parade.

Dec & Jan The coolest time to explore the northern districts' forts, palaces, caves and temples.

Karnataka & Bengaluru Highlights

- 1 Marvelling at the gravity-defying boulders, and wandering among the melancholic ruins of Hampi (p896)
- 2 Hitting Gokarna (p893) for its beautiful beaches and legendary chilled-out atmosphere minus the resorts
- 3 Savouring aromatic coffee while recharging your soul in the cool highlands of the Kodagu Region (p883)
- 4 Drinking yourself under the table, or tucking into top-notch global cuisine in Bengaluru (p863)
- 5 Being bowled over by the grandiose royal palace (p871) in Mysuru
- 6 Spying on lazy tuskers in the forests bordering serene Kabini Lake at Nagarhole National Park (p883)
- 7 Strolling in the peaceful manicured grounds of exquisite 16th-century Islamic monuments in Bijapur (p906)

History

A rambling playing field of religions, cultures and kingdoms, Karnataka has been ruled by a string of charismatic rulers through history. India's first great emperor, Chandragupta Maurya, made the state his retreat when he embraced Jainism at Sravabelagola in the 3rd century BC. From the 6th to the 14th centuries AD, the land was under a series of dynasties such as the Chalukyas, Cholas, Gangas and Hoysalas, who left a lasting mark in the form of stunning cave shrines and temples across the state.

In 1327 Mohammed Tughlaq's army sacked Halebid. In 1347 Hasan Gangu, a Persian general in Tughlaq's army, led a rebellion to establish the Bahmani kingdom, which was later subdivided into five Deccan sultanates. Meanwhile, the Hindu kingdom of Vijayanagar, with its capital in Hampi, rose to prominence. Having peaked in the early 1550s, it fell in 1565 to a combined effort of the sultanates.

In subsequent years the Hindu Wodeyars of Mysore grew in stature and extended their rule over a large part of southern India. They remained largely unchallenged until 1761, when Hyder Ali (one of their generals) deposed them. Backed by the French, Hyder Ali and his son Tipu Sultan set up capital in Srirangapatnam and consolidated their rule. However, in 1799 the British defeated Tipu Sultan and reinstated the Wodeyars. Historically, this flagged off British territorial expansion in southern India.

Mysore remained under the Wodeyars until Independence – post-1947, the reigning maharaja became the first governor. The state boundaries were redrawn along linguistic lines in 1956 and the extended Kannada-speaking state of Mysore was born. It was renamed Karnataka in 1972, with Bangalore (now Bengaluru) as the capital.

SOUTHERN KARNATAKA

Bengaluru (Bangalore)

📍 080 / POP 10.2 MILLION / ELEV 920M

Cosmopolitan Bengaluru is the number one city in the Indian deep south, blessed with a benevolent climate and a burgeoning drinking, dining and shopping scene. It's not necessarily a place you come to be wowed by world-class sights (though it has some lovely parks and striking Victorian-era architecture), but instead to experience the new modern face of India.

As the hub of India's booming IT industry, it vies with Mumbai (Bombay) as the nation's most progressive city, and its creature comforts can be a godsend to the weary traveller who has done the hard yards. It's a big student town where you'll encounter hip locals chatting in English while drinking craft beer and wearing '80s metal band T-shirts.

The past decade has seen a mad surge of development, coupled with traffic congestion and rising pollution levels. However, it's a city that has also taken care to preserve its green space and its colonial-era heritage. So while urbanisation continually pushes its boundaries outward, the central district (dating back to the British Raj years) remains more or less unchanged.

History

Literally meaning 'Town of Boiled Beans', Bengaluru supposedly derived its name from an ancient incident involving an old village woman who served cooked pulses to a lost and hungry Hoysala king. Kempegowda, a feudal lord, was the first person to mark out Bengaluru's extents by building a mud fort in 1537. The town remained obscure until 1759, when it was gifted to Hyder Ali by the Mysore maharaja.

The British arrived in 1809 and made it their regional administrative base in 1831, renaming it Bangalore. During the Raj era the city played host to many a British officer, including Winston Churchill, who enjoyed life here during his greener years and famously left a debt (still on the books) of ₹13 at the Bangalore Club.

Now home to countless software, electronics and business-outsourcing firms, Bengaluru's knack for technology developed early. In 1905 it was the first Indian city to have electric street lighting. Since the 1940s it has been home to Hindustan Aeronautics

Ltd (HAL), India's largest aerospace company. And if you can't do without email, you owe it all to a Bangalorean – Sabeer Bhatia, the inventor of Hotmail, grew up here.

The city's name was changed back to Bengaluru in November 2006, though few care to use it in practice.

i Orientation

Finding your way around Bengaluru can be difficult at times. In certain areas, roads are named after their widths (eg 80ft Rd). The city also follows a system of mains and crosses: 3rd Cross, 5th Main, Residency Rd, for example, refers to the third lane on the fifth street branching off Residency Rd. New affluent pockets are springing up across the city, including the ritzy suburbs of Indirangar, JP Nagar, Koramangala and Whitefield – all with Western-style malls, nightlife and restaurants.

The Old Wing exhibits its works from pre-Independence, including paintings by Raja Ravi Varma and Abanindranath Tagore (nephew of Rabindranath Tagore, and founder of the avant-garde Bengal School art movement). Interconnected by a walk bridge, the sleek New Wing focuses on contemporary post-Independence works.

Lalbagh Botanical Gardens
GARDENS
(☎9888947670; www.horticulture.kar.nic.in/lalbagh.htm; Lalbagh Rd; admission ₹10; ☉6am-7pm) Spread over 97 hectares of landscaped terrain, the expansive Lalbagh Botanical Gardens were laid out in 1760 by the famous Mysore ruler Hyder Ali. As well as amazing centuries-old trees it claims to have the world's most diverse species of plants. Bangalore Walks (p861) has guided tours.

Cubbon Park
GARDENS
(www.horticulture.kar.nic.in/cubbon.htm; Kasturba Rd) In the heart of Bengaluru's business district is Cubbon Park, a sprawling 120-hectare garden where Bengaluru's residents converge to steal a moment from the rat race that rages outside.

It's surrounded by wonderful colonial-era architecture, including the red-painted Gothic-style State Central Library (Cubbon Park); the colossal neo-Dravidian-style Vidhana Soudha (Dr Ambedkar Rd), built in 1954 and which serves as the legislative chambers of the state government; and neoclassical Attara Kacheri (High Court; Cubbon Park) built in 1864 and housing the High Court. The latter two are closed to the public.

Karnataka Chitrakala Parishath
ART GALLERY
(www.karnatakachitrakalaparisath.com; Kumarakrupa Rd; admission ₹50; ☉10am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) A superb gallery with a wide range of Indian and international contemporary art on show, as well as permanent displays of Mysore-style paintings and folk and tribal art from across Asia. A section is devoted to Russian master Nicholas Roerich, known for his vivid paintings of the Himalaya.

Government Museum
MUSEUM
(Kasturba Rd; admission ₹4; ☉10am-5pm Tue-Sun, closed every 2nd Sat) In a beautiful red colonial-era building dating from 1877, you'll find a dusty collection of 12th-century stone carvings and artefacts excavated from Halebid, Hampi and Attriampakham. Your ticket also gets you into the Venkatappa Art Gallery (Kasturba Rd; ☉10am-5pm Tue-Sun) FREE next door, where you can see works and personal memorabilia of K Venkatappa (1887-1962), court painter to the Wodeyars.

Bangalore Palace
PALACE
(Palace Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹225/450, camera/video ₹675/1405; ☉10am-5.30pm) The private residence of the Wodeyars, erstwhile maharajas of the state, Bangalore Palace preserves a slice of bygone royal splendour. Still the residence of the current maharaja, an audio guide provides a detailed explanation of the building, vaguely designed to resemble Windsor Castle, and you can marvel at the lavish interiors and galleries featuring grisly hunting memorabilia, family photos and a collection of nude portraits.

Bangalore Fort

FORT

(KR Rd) The remnants of this 1761 fort is a peaceful escape from the chaotic city surrounds, with its manicured lawn and stone pink walls. The fort remained in use until its destruction by the British in 1791, and today the gate and bastions are the only structures remaining. There's a small dungeon here, and Ganesh temple with its Mooshak statue.

Bull Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Bull Temple Rd, Basavangudi; ☀7am-8.30pm)
 Built by Kempegowda in the 16th-century Dravidian style, the Bull Temple contains a huge granite monolith of Nandi (Shiva's bull) and is one of Bengaluru's most atmospheric. Nearby is the Swee Dodda Ganapathi Temple (Bull Temple Rd; ☀7am-8.30pm), with an equally enormous Ganesh idol. The temples are 1km south of Tipu Sultan's Palace.

Iskcon Temple

(www.iskconbangalore.org; Chord Rd, Hare Krishna Hill; ☎ 7.30am-1pm & 4.15-8.30pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat, to 2pm Sun) Built by the International Society of Krishna Consciousness (Iskcon), also referred to as the Hare Krishnas, this shiny temple, inaugurated in 1997, is lavishly decorated in a mix of ultracontemporary and traditional styles. There are many food stalls here so bring an appetite. It's around 10km northwest from the centre of town.

Head to the dining room upstairs, queue for a table, and then admire the dated images of southern beauties etched on smoky glass as waiters bring you savoury local fare, capped by frothing filter coffee served in silverware. It's a definitive Bengaluru experience.

Gramin

INDIAN $

(☎080-41104104; 20, 7th Block Raheja Arcade, Koramangala; mains ₹90-180; ☎12.30-3.30pm & 7-11pm) Translating to 'from the village', Gramin offers a wide choice of flavourful rural North Indian fare at this cosy, eclectic all-veg place popular with locals. Try the excellent range of lentils and curries best had with oven-fresh rotis, accompanied by sweet rose-flavoured lassi served in a copper vessel.

Windsor Pub

INDIAN $$$

(7 Kodava Samaja Bldg, 1st Main Vasanthnagar; mains ₹250-350; ☎11.30am-3pm & 6-11pm) Its dark pub interior may not inspire, but it has a fantastic menu of regional favourites such as flavoursome Mangalorean fish, or the tangy pandhi (pork) masala from Kodagu's hills. It also does draught beer and a soundtrack of blues, jazz and '70s rock. It's near Bangalore Palace.

★ Fatty Bao

ASIAN $$$

(www.facebook.com/thefattybao; 610 12th Main Rd, Indiranagar; mains ₹380-650; ☎11am-3.30pm & 7-11pm) This hip rooftop restaurant serves up Asian hawker food to a crowd of fashionable, young Bangalorean foodies in a vibrant setting with colourful chairs and wooden bench tables. There's ramen, Thai curries and Malaysian street food, as well as Asian-inspired cocktails such as lemongrass mojitos. There's a branch of Monkey Bar is downstairs..

Drinking & Nightlife

Bars & Lounges

Bengaluru's rock-steady reputation and wide choice of chic watering holes makes it the place to indulge in a spirited session of pub-hopping in what's the original beer town of India. Many microbreweries have sprung up in the past few years, producing quality locally made ales. All serve food too.

The trendiest nightclubs will typically charge a cover of around ₹1000 per couple, but it's often redeemable against drinks or food.

Monkey Bar

PUB

(www.monkeybarindia.com; 14/1 Wood St, Ashoknagar; ☎noon-11pm) From the owners of Olive Beach comes this vintage gastropub that draws a mixed, jovial crowd to knock back drinks around the bar or at wooden booth seating. Otherwise head down to the basement to join the 'party' crew shooting pool, playing foosball and rocking out to bangin' tunes. There's also a branch in Indiranagar (925 12th Main Rd, Indiranagar).

Plan B

PUB

(20 Castle St, Ashoknagar; ☎11am-11.30pm Sun-Thu, to 1am Fri & Sat) It may not have fancy craft beer on tap, but this popular student hang-out instead has 3.5L beer towers and 15 different burgers. It also runs the industrial chic Plan B Loaded (13 Rhenius St, Richmond Town) gastropub.

Pecos

BAR

(Rest House Rd; ☎10.30am-11pm) Hendrix, The Grateful Dead and Frank Zappa posters adorn the walls of this divey, narrow tri-level

KARNATAKA CUISINE

The diverse and delectable cuisine of Karnataka is perhaps reason enough for you to visit this state. The highest-flying of all local delicacies is the spicy pandhi (pork) masala, a flavourful Kodava signature dish. Mangaluru, out on the coast, tosses up a train of fiery dishes – mostly seafood. The crunchy prawn rava (semolina) fry and the sinful chicken ghee roast are two of Mangaluru's many dishes to have gathered an India-wide following. Vegetarians, meanwhile, can head to Udupi, where the masala dosa (curried vegetables in a crisp pancake) has its origins, to sample its legendary vegetarian fare. Oh, and did we mention the gastropubs and microbreweries of Bengaluru?

bar. It's a throwback to simpler times where cassettes line the shelves behind the bar, sport is on the TV and the only thing to quench your thirst is one choice of cheap beer on tap. No wonder it's an all-time favourite with students. There are now several branches in the immediate area.

Shiro

BAR

(www.shiro.co.in; UB City, 24 Vittal Mallya Rd; ☎12.30-11.30pm Sun-Thu, to 1am Fri & Sat) A sophisticated lounge for getting sloshed in style, Shiro has elegant interiors complemented by the monumental Buddha busts and Apsara figurines or outdoor seating.

13th Floor

BAR

(13th fl, Barton Centre, 84 MG Rd; ☎5-11pm Sun-Thu, to 1am Fri & Sat) Forget your superstitions and head up to 13th Floor's terrace, with all of Bengaluru glittering at your feet. Happy hour is 5pm to 7pm.

Getting There & Away

AIR

International flights arrive at Bengaluru's Kempegowda International Airport (www.bengaluruairport.com). Domestic flights also leave here with daily flights to major cities across India, including Chennai (₹2600, two hours), Mumbai (₹4000, two hours), Hyderabad (₹3000, one hour), Delhi (₹6100, 2½ hours) and Goa (₹2500, one hour).

AirAsia (☎ 1860-5008000; www.airasia.com)

Air India (☎ 22978427; www.airindia.com; Unity Bldg, JC Rd)

GoAir (☎ 47406091; www.goair.in)

IndiGo (☎ 9910383838; www.goindigo.in)

Jet Airways (☎ 39893333; www.jetairways.com; Unity Bldg, JC Rd)

SpiceJet (☎ 18001803333; www.spicejet.com)

BUS

Bengaluru's huge, well-organised Kempegowda bus stand (Gubbi Thotadappa Rd), also commonly known as either the Central or Majestic, is directly in front of the City train station.

Karnataka State Road Transport Corporation (KSRTC; ☎ 44554422; www.ksrtc.in) buses run from here throughout Karnataka.

The KSRTC website lists current schedules and fares. At the time of research booking online wasn't possible using an international credit card, but check if things have changed. Otherwise KSRTC has convenient booking counters around town, or computerised advance booking at the station. It's wise to book long-distance journeys in advance.

Private bus operators line the street facing Kempegowda bus stand, or you can book through a travel agency.

Interstate bus operators also run from Kempegowda bus stand.

TRAIN

Bengaluru's City train station (www.bangalorecityrailwaystation.in; Gubbi Thotadappa Rd) is the main train hub. There's also Cantonment train station (Station Rd), a sensible spot to disembark if you're arriving and headed for the MG Rd area, while Yeshvantpur train station (Rahman Khan Rd), 8km northwest of downtown, is the starting point for trains to Goa.

If you have a local phone number, tickets can be booked online at www.irctc.co.in. If a train is booked out, foreign travellers can use the foreign-tourist quota. The computerised reservation office (☎ 139; ☎ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun), on the left facing the station, has separate counters for credit-card purchase, women and foreigners. Luggage can be left at the 24-hour cloakroom on Platform 1 at the City train station.

Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

The swish Kempegowda International Airport is in Hebbal, about 40km north from the MG Rd area. Metered AC taxis from the airport to the city centre cost between ₹750 and ₹1000.

Flybus KSRTC runs the Flybus to Mysuru (₹750, four hours) departing the airport at 10.30am and 9pm.

Vayu Vajra (☎ 18004251663; www.mybmtc.com) Vayu Vajra's airport shuttle service has an AC bus to Kempegowda (Central Majestic) bus stand or MG Rd (₹210), departing hourly from 6.10am to 10.25pm.

AUTORICKSHAW

The city's autorickshaw drivers are legally required to use their meters; few comply. After 10pm, 50% is added to the metered rate. Flag fall is ₹25 for the first 2km and then ₹13 for each extra kilometre.

BUS

Bengaluru has a thorough local bus network, operated by the Bangalore Metropolitan Transport Corporation (BMTc; www.mybmtc.com), with a useful website for timetable and fares. Red AC Vajra buses criss-cross the city, while green Big10 deluxe buses connect the suburbs.

Ordinary buses run from the City bus stand, next to Kempegowda (Central Majestic) bus stand; a few operate from the City Market bus stand.

To get from the City train station to the MG Rd area, catch any bus from Platform 17 or 18 at the City bus stand. For the City Market bus stand, take bus 31, 31E, 35 or 49 from Platform 8.

TAXI

Standard rates for a long-haul Tata Indica cab are ₹8.5 per kilometre for a minimum of 250km, plus a daily allowance of ₹200 for the driver. An eight-hour day rental is around ₹2000.

Olacabs (☎ 33553355; www.olacabs.com) Professional, efficient company with modern air-con cars. Online and phone bookings.

Meru Cabs (☎ 44224422; www.merucabs.com)

METRO

Bengaluru's shiny new AC metro service, known as Namma Metro, is still very much a work in progress, but it does have a few lines up and running. The most relevant to tourists is Line 1 from MG Rd to Indiranagar (₹13), running every 15 minutes, 6am to 10pm. For the latest updates on the service, log on to www.bmrc.co.in.

Around Bengaluru

If Bengaluru's mayhem and traffic jams are doing your head in, then head to the hills for some fresh air, rural culture and lovely scenery.

Nandi Hills

Rising to 1455m, Nandi Hills (admission ₹10, car ₹150; ☀️6am-6pm), 60km north of Bengaluru, were once the summer retreat of Tipu Sultan (his palace is still here). Today it's the Bengaluru techie's favourite weekend getaway, and is predictably congested on Saturday and Sunday; aim to visit mid-week. Nonetheless, it's a good place for a leisurely hike, panoramic views of sweeping plains and two notable Chola temples. It's a 2km hike to the top from the entrance gate for those without a vehicle. Macaques run amok, so avoid carrying food.

At the top of Nandi Hills, Hotel Mayura Pine Top (☎️8970650019; mains ₹80-160; ☀️10.30am-8pm) does good Indian dishes which can be enjoyed with excellent views from its glassed-in restaurant. Its rooms (fan/AC ₹1500/3000) also feature stellar views.

Around Nandi Hills is one of India's premier wine-growing regions.

Buses head to Nandi Hills (₹65, two hours) from Bengaluru's Kempegowda (Central Majestic) bus stand.

KARNATAKA CITY NAME CHANGES

From 1 November 2014 the Karnataka government officially announced the name changes of 12 cities across the state, returning to their precolonial titles. The following are most relevant to tourists:

- ➔ Bangalore to Bengaluru
- ➔ Mysore to Mysuru
- ➔ Mangalore to Mangaluru
- ➔ Hospet to Hosapete
- ➔ Hubli to Hubballi
- ➔ Bijapur to Vijapura
- ➔ Gulbarga to Kalaburgi
- ➔ Shimoga to Shivamogga

Hessaraghatta

Located 30km northwest of Bengaluru, Hesaraghatta is home to Nrityagram (☎️080-28466313; www.nrityagram.org; self-guided tour ₹50; ☀️10am-2pm Tue-Sun), a leading dance academy established in 1990 to revive and popularise Indian classical dance. The brainchild and living legacy of celebrated dancer Protima Gauri Bedi (1948-98), the complex was designed like a village by Goa-based architect Gerard da Cunha. You can take a self-guided tour, or book a tour, lecture and demonstration and vegetarian meal (₹1500 to ₹2000, minimum 10 people). Note the early 2pm closure.

From Bengaluru's City Market, buses 266, 253, 253D and 253E run to Hesaraghatta (₹25, one hour), with bus 266 continuing on to Nrityagram. From Hesaraghatta an autorickshaw will cost ₹70.

Sleeping

Taj Kuteeram

HOTEL $$$

(☎️080-28466326; www.tajhotels.com; d from ₹4800; 📶📶📶) Opposite Nrityagram dance village, Kuteeram isn't as luxurious as other Taj Group hotel offerings, but it's still very nice with a balance of comfort and rustic charm, and designs by renowned architect Gerard da Cunha. It also offers ayurveda and yoga sessions.

Janapada Loka Folk Arts Museum

Janapada Loka Folk Arts Museum

MUSEUM

(Bangaluru-Mysuru Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹20/100; ☀️9am-5.30pm) A worthwhile stopover between Bengaluru and Mysuru, this museum is dedicated to the preservation of rural local culture. It has a wonderful collection of folk-art objects, including 500-year-old shadow puppets, festival costumes, musical instruments and a superb temple chariot and a replica of a traditional village. It's situated 53km south of Bengaluru, 3km from Ramnagar; any Mysuru-Bengaluru bus can drop you here.

Mysuru (Mysore)

WHISKEY &amp; WINE

In a country not known for being a big exponent of fine wines and liquors (anyone who has stepped foot into one of India's ubiquitous 'wine shops' can attest to this), Bengaluru (Bangalore) is very much an exception to the rule. It's a city that's not only gained a thirst for craft beer (p865), but has on its doorstep one of India's premier wine-growing regions in Nandi Hills. While an emerging industry, it's fast gaining a reputation internationally with some 18 wineries in the area. Also a few clicks out of town is India's first single-malt whiskey distillery, where you're also able to sample the goods.

Grover Wineries (☎9379627188; www.groverzampa.in; 1½hr tour Mon-Fri ₹850, Sat & Sun ₹1000) Highly recommended tours of Grover Wineries where you'll learn about India's wine industry that produces quality white and red varietals. Prices include tastings of five wines in the cellar rooms accompanied by cheese and crackers, followed by lunch. From February to May you'll also see grape crushing and visit its vineyards. It's located on the approach to Nandi Hills, around 40km north of Bengaluru; you'll need to hire a car to get here.

Amrut (☎080-23100402; www.amrutdistilleries.com; Mysuru Rd; tour free) Established in 1948, India's first producer of single malt whiskey, Amrut offers free distillery tours run by knowledgeable guides. You get taken through the entire process before tasting its world-class single malts and blends. It's 20km outside Bengaluru on the road to Mysuru; pre-bookings essential.

icent monuments and buildings. Its World Heritage-listed palace may be what brings most travellers here, but it's also a thriving centre for the production of premium silk, sandalwood and incense. These days ash-tanga yoga is another drawcard, attracting visitors worldwide with its reputation as one of India's best places to practise yoga.

History

Mysuru owes its name to the mythical Mahisuru, a place where the demon Mahisasura was slain by the goddess Chamundi. Its regal history began in 1399, when the Wodeyar dynasty of Mysuru was founded, though they remained in service of the Vijayanagar empire until the mid-16th century. With the fall of Vijayanagar in 1565, the Wodeyars declared their sovereignty, which – save a brief period of Hyder Ali and Tipu Sultan's supremacy in the late 18th century – remained unscathed until Independence in 1947.

👁️ Sights

Mysuru isn't known as the City of Palaces for nothing, being home to a total of seven and an abundance of majestic heritage architecture dating from the Wodeyars dynasty and British rule. The majority of grand buildings are owned by the state, and used as anything from hospitals, colleges and government buildings to heritage hotels. Visit www.karnatakaturism.org/Mysore/en for list of notable buildings.

★ Mysore Palace

PALACE

(Maharaja's Palace; www.mysorepalace.gov.in; Indian/foreigner incl audio guide ₹40/200, child under 10yr free; ☀10am-5.30pm) Among the grandest of India's royal buildings, this fantastic palace was the former seat of the Wodeyar maharajas. The old palace was gutted by fire in 1897; the one you see now was completed in 1912 by English architect Henry Irwin at a cost of ₹4.5 million. The interior of this Indo-Saracenic marvel – a kaleidoscope of stained glass, mirrors and gaudy colours – is lavish and undoubtedly over the top. The decor is further embellished by carved wooden doors, mosaic floors and a series of paintings depicting life in Mysore during the Edwardian Raj era.

The way into the palace takes you past a fine collection of sculptures and artefacts. Don't forget to check out the armoury, with an intriguing collection of 700-plus weapons.

Every Sunday and national holiday, from 7pm to 7.45pm, the palace is illuminated by nearly 100,000 light bulbs that accent its majestic profile against the night.

Entrance to the palace grounds is at the South Gate on Purandara Dasa Rd. While you are allowed to snap the palace's exterior, photography within is strictly prohibited.

Mysuru (Mysore)

Cameras must be deposited in lockers at the palace entrance. See illustrated highlight (p874) for more detail.

Devaraja Market

MARKET

(Sayyaji Rao Rd; ☀6am-8.30pm) Dating from Tipu Sultan's reign, this lively bazaar has local traders selling traditional items such as flower garlands, spices and conical piles of kumkum (coloured powder used for bindi dots), all of which makes for some great photo ops. Refresh your bargaining skills before shopping.

Chamundi Hill

VIEWPOINT

At a height of 1062m, on the summit of Chamundi Hill, stands the Sri Chamundeswari Temple (☀7am-2pm, 3.30-6pm & 7.30-9pm), dominated by a towering 40m-high gopuram (gateway tower). It's a fine half-day excursion, offering spectacular views of the city below. Queues are long at weekends, so visit during the week. From Central bus stand take bus 100 (₹17, 25 minutes) or 201 (₹28, AC) that rumbles up the narrow road to the summit. A return autorickshaw trip will cost about ₹400.

Alternatively, you can take the foot trail comprising 1000-plus steps that Hindu pilgrims use to visit the temple. One-third of the way down is a 5m-high statue of Nandi (Shiva's bull) that was carved out of solid rock in 1659.

Jaganmohan Palace

PALACE

(Jaganmohan Palace Rd; adult/child ₹120/60; ☀8.30am-5pm) Built in 1861 as the royal auditorium, this stunning palace just west of the Mysore Palace, houses the Jayachamarajendra Art Gallery. Set over three floors it has a huge collection of Indian paintings, including works by noted artist Raja Ravi Varma and traditional Japanese art. There's also regal memorabilia from the Mysore royal family, weapons and rare musical instruments.

Indira Gandhi Rashtriya Manav Sangrahalaya MUSEUM
(National Museum of Mankind; ☎ 2526531; www.igrms.com; Wellington Lodge, Irwin Rd; ☉ 10am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) FREE Lovely arts and cultural centre that presents rotating exhibitions showcasing arts from rural India.

Government House HISTORIC BUILDING
(Irwin Rd) Dating from 1805, Government House, formerly the British Residency, is a Tuscan Doric building set in 20 hectares of gardens.

Jayalakshmi Vilas Mansion Museum Complex MUSEUM
(Mysore University Campus; ☉ 10.15am-5pm Mon-Sat) FREE Housed in a grand mansion, on the university campus west of town, this museum specialises in folklore, with artefacts, stone tablets and sculptures, including rural costumes and a wooden puppet of the 10-headed demon king Ravana.

St Philomena's Cathedral CHURCH
(St Philomena St; ☉ 8am-5pm) The beauty of towering St Philomena's Cathedral, built between 1933 and 1941 in neo-Gothic style, is emphasised by lovely stained-glass windows. It's on the northern outskirts of town.

Rail Museum MUSEUM
(KRS Rd; adult/child ₹15/10, camera/video ₹20/30; ☉ 9.30am-6.30pm Tue-Sun) Behind the train station, this open-air museum's main exhibit is the Mysore maharani's saloon, a wood-panelled beauty dating from 1899 that provides an insight into the way in which the royals once rode the railways. A toy train (₹10) rides the track around the museum.

Mysore Zoo ZOO
(Indiranagar; adult/child ₹50/20, camera ₹20; ☉ 8.30am-5.30pm Wed-Mon) Unlike many other pitiful zoos in India, Mysore Zoo conforms to much higher standards, set in pretty gardens that date from 1892. Highlights include white tigers, lowland gorillas and rhinos. It's situated around 2km southeast of Mysore Palace.

Mysore Palace

The interior of Mysore Palace houses opulent halls, royal paintings, intricate decorative details, as well as sculptures and ceremonial objects. There is a lot of hidden detail and much to take in, so be sure to allow yourself at least a few hours for the experience. A guide can also be invaluable.

After entering the palace the first exhibit is the Doll's Pavilion 1, which showcases the maharaja's fine collection of traditional dolls and sculptures acquired from around the world. Opposite the Elephant Gate 2 you'll see the seven cannons that were used for special occasions, such as the birthdays of the maharajas. Today the cannons are still fired as part of Dasara festivities.

At the end of the Doll's Pavilion you'll find the Golden Howdah 3. Note the fly whisks on either side; the bristles are made from fine ivory.

Make sure you check out the paintings depicting the Dasara procession in the halls on your way to the Marriage Pavilion 4 and look into the courtyard to see what was once the wrestling arena. It's now used during Dasara only. In the Marriage Pavilion, take a few minutes to scan the entire space. You can see the influence of three religions in the design of the hall: the glass ceiling represents Christianity, stone carvings along the hallway ceilings are Hindu design and the top-floor balcony roof (the traditional ladies' gallery) has Islamic-style arches.

When you move through to the Private Durbar Hall 5, take note of the intricate ivory inlay motifs depicting Krishna in the rosewood doors. The Public Durbar Hall 6 is usually the last stop where you can admire the panoramic views of the gardens through the Islamic arches.

Private Durbar Hall

Rosewood doors lead into this hall, which is richly decorated with stained-glass ceilings, steel grill work and chandeliers. It houses the Golden Throne, only on display to the public during Dasara.

Entry to the Palace

Doll's Pavilion

The first exhibit, the Doll's Pavilion, displays the gift collection of 19th- and early-20th-century dolls, statues and Hindu idols that were given to the maharaja by dignitaries from around the world.

MYSORE PALACE BOARD ©

Public Durbar Hall

The open-air hall contains a priceless collection of paintings by Raja Ravi Varma and opens into an expansive balcony supported by massive pillars with an ornate painted ceiling of 10 incarnations of Vishnu.

Marriage Pavilion

This lavish hall used for royal weddings features themes of Christianity, Hindu and Islam in its design. The highlight is the octagonal painted glass ceiling featuring peacock motifs, the bronze chandelier and the colonnaded turquoise pillars.

Elephant Gate

Next to the Doll's Pavilion, this brass gate has four bronze elephants inlaid at the bottom, an intricate double-headed eagle up the top and a hybrid lion-elephant creature (the state emblem of Karnataka) in the centre.

Golden Howdah

At the far end of the Doll's Pavilion, a wooden elephant howdah decorated with 80kg of gold was used to carry the maharaja in the Dasara festival. It now carries the idol of goddess Chamundeswari.

Courses

Shruthi Musical Works MUSIC (☎️ 9845249518; 1189 3rd Cross, Irwin Rd; per hour ₹400; ☀️ 10.30am-9pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) Music teacher Jayashankar gets good reviews for his tabla instruction.

Tours

KSTDC Transport Office BUS TOUR (city tour ₹210) KSTDC runs a daily Mysuru city tour, taking in city sights (excluding the palace), Chamundi Hill, Srirangapatnam and Brindavan Gardens. It starts daily at 8.30am, ends at 8.30pm and is likely to leave you breathless! Other tours go to Belur, Halebid and Sravanabelagola (₹550) on Tuesday and Thursday from 7.30am to 9pm.

All tours leave from the KSTDC transport office (p879) next to Hotel Mayura Hoysala, from where bookings are made, or at travel agencies around town.

Royal Mysore Walks WALKING (☎️ 9632044188; www.royalmysorewalks.com; 2hr walk ₹600-1500) An excellent way to familiarise yourself with Mysuru's epic history and heritage, these weekend walks offer a range of themes from royal history to food walks.

Sleeping

Mysuru attracts tourists throughout the year and can fill up very quickly during Dussehra (p878). Booking early is recommended.

Hotel Maurya HOTEL $ (☎️ 2426677; 9/5 Hanumantha Rao St; s/d from ₹180/330; 🍷🍴🚰) Maurya is your classic cheap Indian hotel with large, unremarkable rooms but it's still a good budget choice. It offers TV and AC too.

Mysore Youth Hostel HOSTEL $ (☎️ 2544704; www.yhmysore.com; Gangothri Layout; dm ₹130) On a patch of green lawn 3km west of town, this hostel has clean, well-maintained male and female dorms. OK, there's a 10.30pm curfew, no alcohol allowed, bucket hot water and no towels, but you can't go past these prices. Discounts are available for students. Take a city bus to Maruthi Temple, from where it's a short walk; an autorickshaw costs ₹60.

★ Parklane Hotel HOTEL $$ (☎️ 4003500; www.parklanemysore.com; 2720 Harsha Rd; r from ₹2000; 🍷🍴🚰🚰) Travelers' central on Mysuru's tourist circuit, the Parklane is over-the-top kitsch but it's hard to dislike with its massive and immaculate rooms, ultracomfortable and thoughtfully outfitted with mobile-chargers and considerate toiletry kits. Its lively open-air restaurant is always buzzing, and it has a small rooftop pool too.

Hotel Mayura Hoysala HOTEL $$ (☎️ 2426160; www.karnatakaholidays.net; 2 Jhansi Lakshmi Bai Rd; s/d incl breakfast with fan ₹1350/1500, with AC ₹2480/2750; 🍷) The potential of this beautiful historic building remains unrealised as this government-owned hotel continues to offer its blend of moth-balled heritage. It's still worthy of consideration, especially at these rates. The bar here is popular with Mysuru's tippers.

★ Green Hotel HERITAGE GUESTHOUSE $$$ (☎️ 4255000; www.greenhotelindia.com; 2270 Vinoba Rd, Jayalakshmiapuram; s/d incl breakfast distributed to charity and environmental projects across India. It's 3km west of town.

★ Lalitha Mahal Palace HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
 (☎2526100; www.lalithamahalpalace.in; r incl breakfast ₹4830-12,080; 📍📞📧) A former maharaja's guesthouse built in 1921, this majestic heritage building has been operating as a hotel since 1974. Old-world charm comes in bucket loads from the 1920s birdcage elevator to mosaic tiled floors. The heritage classic rooms are where you'll feel the history. Spacious four-poster beds sit next to antique furniture, claw-foot baths sit on marble bathroom floors, and shuttered windows look out to stately landscaped gardens. It's around 5km from the centre of town.

Royal Orchid Metropole HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
 (☎4255566; www.royalorchidhotels.com; 5 Jhansi Lakshmi Bai Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹7170/8540; 📍📞📧) Originally built by the Wodeyars to serve as the residence of the maharaja's British guests, this is undoubtedly one of Mysuru's leading heritage hotels. The charming colonial-era structure has 30 rooms oozing historical character, and there are magic shows and snake-charming performances when tour groups pass through.

🔪 Eating & Drinking

Malgudi Café CAFE $
 (Green Hotel; 2270 Vinoba Rd, Jayalakshimpuram; cakes from ₹40, sandwiches ₹60; ☎10am-7pm; 📞) Set around an inner courtyard within the Green Hotel, this ambient cafe brews excellent coffees and Himalayan teas to be enjoyed with tasty cakes and sandwiches. Staff come from underprivileged backgrounds and are mostly women, and profits assist with disadvantaged communities, so you can do your bit by ordering a second cuppa.

Hotel RRR SOUTH INDIAN $
 (Gandhi Sq; mains ₹90-130; ☎11.30am-4.30pm & 7-11pm) Classic Andhra-style food is ladled out at this ever-busy eatery, and you may have to queue for a table during lunch. One item to try is the piping-hot veg thali (₹90) served on banana leaves.

Vinayaka Mylari SOUTH INDIAN $
 (769 Nazarbad Main Rd; mains ₹30-50; ☎6.30am-1.30pm & 4-8pm) Local foodies say this is one of the best eateries in town to try South Indian classics of masala dosa (curried vegetables in a crisp pancake) and idlis (South Indian spongy, round, fermented rice cakes). There's a similar branch up the road, Hotel Mylari, run by the owner's brother, and both are as good as each other.

Cafe Aramane SOUTH INDIAN $
 (Sayyaji Rao Rd; mains ₹90-110; ☎7am-10.30pm) In a character-filled heritage building, this typically busy South Indian eatery rolls out steaming breakfast platters for Mysuru's office-goers, and welcomes them back in the evenings with aromatic filter coffee and a convoy of delicious snacks, including speciality dosas each day of the week.

★ Sapphire INDIAN $$
 (Lalitha Mahal Palace; mains ₹250-1000; ☎12.30-7.45pm & 8-11pm) Dine in absolute royal Indian-style in the grand ballroom of the Lalitha Mahal Palace hotel. And grand it is, with high stained-glass ceilings, lace tablecloths and polished teak floors. Order the royal Mysore silver thali (₹485) which gets you an assortment of vegetables, breads and

DUSSEHRA JAMBOREE

Mysuru is at its carnivalesque best during the 10-day Dussehra (Dasara; ☎Sep/Oct) festival held September or October. During this time the Mysore Palace is dramatically lit up every evening, while the town is transformed into a gigantic fairground, with concerts, dance performances, sporting demonstrations and cultural events.

On the last day the celebrations are capped off in grand style. A dazzling procession of richly costumed elephants, garlanded idols, liveried retainers and cavalry, marches through the streets to the rhythms of clanging brass bands.

Mysuru is choc-a-bloc with tourists during the festival, especially on the final day. To bypass suffocating crowds, consider buying a Dasara VIP Gold Card (₹7500 for two adults). Though expensive, it assures you good seats at the final day gala and helps you beat the entry queues at other events and performances, while providing discounts on accommodation, dining and shopping. It's also possible to buy tickets (₹250 to ₹1000) just for entering the palace and Bannimantap for the final day's parades. Contact the the Dasara Information Centre (☎0821-2423800; www.mysoredasara.gov.in) for more details.

sweets served on lavish brassware. Week-ends are buffet menu only. The nonguest ₹1000 entrance fee is refundable if you're here to eat.

Parklane Hotel MULTICUISINE $$
(2720 Harsha Rd, Parklane Hotel; mains ₹100-140) Mysuru's most social restaurant with outdoor tables, lit up moodily by countless lanterns. The menu does delicious regional dishes from across India accompanied by live traditional music.

Tiger Trail INDIAN $$$
(Royal Orchid Metropole, 5 Jhansi Lakshmi Bai Rd; mains ₹250-750; ☺ 7.30am-11.30pm) This sophisticated restaurant works up delectable Indian dishes in a courtyard that twinkles with torches and fairy lights at night and a menu comprising jungle recipes collected from different tiger reserves across India. Also has a lunch buffet from ₹450.

Pelican Pub PUB
(Hunsur Rd; mains ₹100-190; ☺ 11am-11pm) A popular watering hole located on the fringes of upmarket Gokulam, this laid-back joint serves beer for ₹65 a mug in the indoor classic pub or alfresco-style garden setting out back. There's live music Wednesday.

Shopping

Mysuru is a great place to shop for its famed sandalwood products, silk saris and wooden toys. It is also one of India's major incense-manufacturing centres.

Look for the butterfly-esque 'Silk Mark'; it's an endorsement for quality silk.

Government Silk Weaving Factory CLOTHING
(☎ 8025586550; www.ksicsilk.com; Mananthody Rd, Ashokapuram; ☺ 8.30am-4pm Mon-Sat, outlet 10.30am-7pm daily) Given that Mysuru's prized silk is made under its very sheds, this government-run outlet is the best and cheapest place to shop for the exclusive textile. Behind the showroom is the factory, where you can drop by to see how the fabric is made. It's around 2km south of town.

Sandalwood Oil Factory SOUVENIRS (Mananthody Rd, Ashokapuram; ☺ outlet 9.30am-6.30pm, factory closed Sun) A quality-assured place for sandalwood products including incense, soap, cosmetics and the prohibitively expensive pure sandalwood oil (if in stock). Guided tours are available to show you around the factory.

Cauvery Arts & Crafts Emporium CRAFTS, SOUVENIRS
(Sayyaji Rao Rd; ☺ 10.30am-8pm) Not the cheapest place, but the selection at this government emporium is extensive and there's no pressure to buy.

Sumangali Silks CLOTHING
(off Gandhi Sq; ☺ 10.30am-8.30pm) Exceptionally popular with Indian ladies, this multi-level store stocks silk saris, with quality of varying degrees depending on how much you want to spend.

Sri Sharada Grand Musical Works MUSIC STORE
(2006 Seebaiah Rd) Sells a variety of traditional musical instruments including tabla sets and assorted percussion instruments.

Information

Most hotels have wi-fi access, otherwise internet cafes charge around ₹50 per hour.

The City bus stand's left-luggage cloakroom is open from 6am to 11pm and costs ₹10 per bag for 12 hours.

Government Hospital (☎ 4269806; Dhanvanthri Rd) Has a 24-hour pharmacy.

Karnataka Tourism (☎ 2422096; www.karnatakaturism.org; 1st fl, Hotel Mayura Hoysala, 2 Jhansi Lakshmi Bai Rd; ☺ 10am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) Extremely helpful and has plenty of brochures.

KSTDC Transport Office (☎ 2423652; www.karnatakaholidays.net; Yatri Navas Bldg, 2 Jhansi Lakshmi Bai Rd; ☺ 8.30am-8.30pm) Offers general tourist information and provides a useful map. Has counters at the train station and Central bus stand, as well as this main office.

The Central bus stand (Bengaluru-Nilgiri Rd) handles all KSRTC long-distance buses. The City bus stand (Sayyaji Rao Rd) is for city, Srirangapatnam and Chamundi Hill buses.

TRAIN

Train tickets can be bought from Mysuru's railway reservation office (☎ 131; ☺ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun).

i Getting Around

Agencies at hotels and around town rent cabs from ₹8 per kilometre, with a minimum of 250km per day, plus a daily allowance of ₹200 for the driver.

Count on around ₹800 for a day's sightseeing in an autorickshaw.

Around Mysuru (Mysore)

Consider one of KSTDC's tours (p876) for visiting sights around Mysuru.

Srirangapatnam

📍 08236

Steeped in bloody history, the fort town of Srirangapatnam, 16km from Mysuru, is built on an island straddling the Cauvery River. The seat of Hyder Ali and Tipu Sultan's power, this town was the de facto capital of much of southern India during the 18th century. Srirangapatnam's glory days ended when the British waged an epic war against Tipu Sultan in 1799, when he was defeated and killed. His sword and the ring he wore in battle are now displayed in the British Museum in London. The ramparts, battlements and some of the gates of the fort still stand, as do a clutch of monuments. The island is now linked to the mainland by bridge.

👁 Sights

Daria Daulat Bagh

PALACE

(Summer Palace; Indian/foreigner ₹20/100; ☀️ 9am-5pm) Set within lovely manicured grounds, Srirangapatnam's star attraction is Tipu's summer palace, 1km east of the fort. Built largely out of teak, the palace may not look like much from the outside, but the lavish decoration that covers every inch of its interiors is impressive. The ceilings are embellished with floral designs, while the walls bear murals depicting courtly life and Tipu's campaigns against the British. There's a small museum within displaying artefacts and interesting paintings.

Gumbaz

MAUSEOLEUM

(☀️ 8am-6.30pm) FREE Located within a serene garden, the historically significant Gumbaz is the resting place of the legendary Tipu Sultan, his equally famed father, Hyder Ali, and his wife. The interior of the onion-dome mausoleum is painted in tiger-like motif as a tribute to the sultan. Across from the tomb is the Masjid-E-Aska tomb.

Sri Ranganathaswamy Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ 7.30am-1pm & 4-8pm) Constructed in 894 AD, this attractive Vaishnavite temple has a mix of Hoysala and Vijayanagar design. Within are cavernous walkways, pillars and the centerpiece 4.5m-long reclining statue of Ranganatha, a manifestation of Vishnu.

Jamia Masjid

MOSQUE

This cream-coloured mosque with two minarets was built by the sultan in 1787 and features an interesting blend of Islamic and Hindu architecture. Climb the stairs at the back for panoramic views of the site.

Colonel Bailey's Dungeon

HISTORIC SITE

East along the river from here is Thomas Inman's Dungeon, hidden away beneath undulating terrain, with a more undiscovered feel that's fun to explore.

Sleeping & Eating

Mayura River View

 0823-6252114; d with fan/AC from ₹2000/2500;  There's not much atmosphere here, but these government bungalows have a nice location on a quiet patch of riverbank. Day-trippers can pop in for lunch (mains ₹150 to ₹120) to gaze at the river while guzzling beer.

HOTEL $$

Getting There & Away

Take buses 313 or 313A (₹25 to ₹30, 45 minutes) that depart every hour from Mysuru's City bus stand. Passenger trains travelling from Mysuru to Bengaluru (₹2, 20 minutes) also stop here. Bus 307 (₹18, 30 minutes) heading to Brindavan Gardens is just across from Srirangapatnam's main bus stand. A return autorickshaw will cost from Mysuru ₹700, and a taxi around ₹1000.

Getting Around

The sights are spread out, so hiring an autorickshaw (₹300 for three hours) is the best option for getting around.

Melkote

Life in the devout Hindu town of Melkote (also called Melukote), about 50km north of Mysuru, revolves around the atmospheric 12th-century Cheluvanarayana Temple (Raja St; ☀8am-1pm & 5-8pm), with its rose-coloured gopuram (gateway tower) and ornately carved pillars. Get a workout on the hike up to the hilltop Yoganarasimha Temple, which offers fine views of the surrounding hills.

Three KSRTC buses shuttle daily between Mysuru and Melkote (₹100, 1½ hours).

Somnathpur

The astonishingly beautiful Keshava Temple (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀8.30am-5.30pm) is one of the finest examples of Hoysala architecture, on par with the masterpieces of Belur and Halebid. Built in AD 1268, this star-shaped temple, 33km from Mysuru, is adorned with superb stone sculptures depicting various scenes from the Ramayana, Mahabharata and Bhagavad Gita, and the life and times of the Hoysala kings.

Somnathpur is 12km south of Bannur and 10km north of Tirumakudal Narsipur. Take one of the half-hourly buses from Mysuru to either village (₹40, 30 minutes) and change there.

Bandipur National Park

Part of the Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve, Bandipur National Park (Indian/foreigner ₹75/1000, video ₹1000; ☀6am-9.30am & 4-6pm) is one of South India's most famous wilderness areas. Covering 880 sq km, it was once the Mysore maharajas' private wildlife reserve, and is now a protected zone for over 100 species of mammals, including tigers, elephants, leopards, gaur (Indian bison), chital (spotted deer), sambar, sloth bears, dhole (wild dogs), mongoose and langurs. It's also home to an impressive 350 species of birds.

Only 80km south of Mysuru on the Ooty road, it's easily accessible from Bengaluru and Mysuru.

Activities

Only government vehicles are permitted to run safaris within the park.

Bandipur Safari Lodge

JEEP SAFARI

(📞 08229-236043; 2hr safari per person ₹2500; ☀️ 6.30am & 4.30pm) Easily the best option is with Bandipur Safari Lodge who have open-air 4WDs and minibuses, accompanied by knowledgeable guides.

Forest Department Safari

JEEP SAFARI

(📞 08229-236051; 1hr safari per person incl permit ₹1100; 🕒 hourly departures 6am-9.30am & 3.30-6.30pm) The forest department has rushed, impersonal bus drives arranged at the park headquarters. Avoid crowded weekends.

Sleeping & Eating

Forest Department

Bungalows

GUESTHOUSE $$

(📞 08229-236051; www.bandipurtigerreserve.in; 9-/20-bed dm ₹680/1000, bungalow foreigner from ₹3000; 🛏️) Basic lodging at the park HQ is convenient for location and atmosphere, but the downside is foreigners have to pay an additional ₹1000 per night for park entry fees. Dorms are rented out in the entirety, so you won't need to share with strangers. You can book online.

Tiger Ranch

LODGE $$

(📞 8095408505; www.tigerranch.net; Mangala Village; cottage incl full board ₹1510) The only place in Bandipur offering a genuine wilderness experience, Tiger Ranch has a reputation as somewhere you either love or hate (many find it a bit too rustic). Either way you're guaranteed a memorable stay in basic but attractive cottages that blend wonderfully into nature. It has an atmospheric thatched-roof dining hall, and evenings can be enjoyed around the bonfire. Animals visit occasionally, so you should be vigilant at night, and be warned monkeys and rodents can be serious a nuisance, so do not leave food (or any of your valuables!) lying around your room. There's no alcohol here, so bring your own. It's located 10km from the park; call ahead to arrange a pick-up (₹300).

MC Resort

HOTEL $$

(📞 9019954162; www.mcresort.in; Bangaluru-Ooty Rd, Melukamanahally; r incl full board ₹2500; 🛏️🚿) Slightly tacky but low-key resort with reasonable rooms, swimming pool, wi-fi and convenient location near the park. Rates are inclusive of meals making it a good deal.

Hotel Bandipur Plaza

HOTEL $$

(📞 08229-233200; Ooty-Mysuru Hwy; ₹1500) Its highway location may not be what you hope for when visiting a national park, but its rooms are functional and more affordable in an otherwise pricey destination. It's nearby Bandipur Safari Lodge, so convenient for safaris into the park.

★ Dhole's Den

LODGE $$$

(📞 08229-236062; www.dholesden.com; Kaniyanapura Village; camping/s/d incl full board from ₹3000/9000/10,000; 🛏️🚿) With a boutique design that's lifted straight from the pages of an architectural magazine, Dhole's effectively mixes comfort with lovely pastoral surrounds. Stylish rooms are decked out with art and colourful fabrics, plus couches and deck chairs. The bungalows are worth the upgrade for extra space and privacy. It's environmentally conscious with solar power, tank water and organic veges. Camping is available for those on a budget. It's a 20-minute drive from the park headquarters.

Serai

RESORT, LODGE $$$

(📞 08229-236075; www.theserai.in; Kaniyanapura Village; r incl full board from ₹20,000; 🛏️🚿🍷) Backing on to the park, this luxurious resort has Mediterrean-inspired villas spread over 15 hectares of landscaped property that's in harmony with the natural surrounds. Thatched-roof rooms feature elegant touches such as stone-wall showers and wildlife photography on the walls. Its glassed-in restaurant and infinity pool both maximise outlooks to Nilgiri Hills.

Bandipur Safari Lodge

COTTAGES $$$

(📞 08229-233001; www.junglelodges.com; Mysuru-Ooty Rd; r incl full board & safari Indian/foreigner ₹6420/8700; 🛏️) This sprawling government-owned camp has well-maintained, comfortable cottages, but it lacks character and 'safari' atmosphere.

Getting There & Away

Buses between Mysore and Ooty can drop you at Bandipur (₹78, 2½ hours), an 88km journey. Skyway (p868) can arrange a taxi from Mysuru for about ₹2000.

Nagarhole National Park & Around

Blessed with rich wildlife, attractive jungle and a scenic lake, Nagarhole National Park (Rajiv Gandhi National Park; Indian/foreigner ₹200/1000, video ₹1000; ☀6am-6pm), pronounced 'nag-ar-hole-eh', is one of Karnataka's best wildlife getaways. Adjoining Kabini Lake, it forms an important animal corridor that runs through neighbouring Bandipur National Park – making up a part of the Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve. Despite sharing the same wildlife, it sees much fewer visitors than Bandipur, making it all the more appealing. Set over 643 sq km, Nagarhole features a good blend of dense jungle and open sightlines along the river bank, which makes for fantastic wildlife-watching. Its lush forests are home to tigers, leopards, elephants, gaur, barking deer, dhole, bonnet macaques and common langurs, plus 270 species of birds. The park can remain closed for long stretches between July and October, when rains transform the forests into a slush-pit.

The traditional inhabitants of the land, the hunter-gatherer Jenu Kuruba people, still live in the park, despite government efforts to relocate them.

The best time to view wildlife is during summer (April to May), though winter (November to February) is more comfortable.

Government-run 4WD safaris (Kabini River Lodge; 2½hr 4WD safari ₹2000) and boat trips (Kabini River Lodge; per person ₹2000) are conducted from Kabini River Lodge between 6.30am and 9.30am and 3.15pm and 6.15pm, which are good ways to see animals.

Sleeping & Eating

Many places screen wildlife docs in the evening.

Karapur Hotel GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎9945904840; Karapura roundabout; r ₹1000)

Kodagu (Coorg) Region

Nestled amid ageless hills that line the southernmost edge of Karnataka is the luscious Kodagu (Coorg) region, gifted with emerald landscapes and acres of plantations. A major centre for coffee and spice production, this rural expanse is also home to the unique Kodava race, believed to have descended from migrating Persians and Kurds, or perhaps even Greeks left behind from Alexander the Great's armies. The uneven terrain and cool climate make it a fantastic area for trekking, birdwatching or lazily ambling down little-trodden paths winding around carpeted hills. All in all, Kodagu is rejuvenation guaranteed.

Kodagu was a state in its own right until 1956, when it merged with Karnataka. The region's chief town and transport hub is Madikeri, but for an authentic Kodagu experience, you have to venture into the plantations. Avoid weekends, when places can quickly get filled up.

Activities

Exploring the region by foot is a highlight for many visitors. Treks are part cultural experience, part nature encounter, involving hill climbs, plantation visits, forest walks and homestays.

The best season for trekking is October to March; there are no treks during monsoon. The most popular peaks are the seven-day trek to Tadiyendamol (1745m), and to Pushpagiri (1712m) and Kotebetta (1620m). As well as good walking shoes you'll need insect repellent. A trekking guide is essential for navigating the labyrinth of forest tracks.

DON'T MISS

BYLAKUPPE

Tiny Bylakuppe was among the first refugee camps set up in South India to house thousands of Tibetans who fled following the 1959 Chinese invasion. Over 10,000 Tibetans live here (including some 3300 monks), making it South India's largest Tibetan settlement.

The area's highlight is the atmospheric Namdroling Monastery (www.palyul.org), home to the spectacular Golden Temple (Padmasambhava Buddhist Vihara; ☎ 7am-8pm), presided over by three 18m-high gold-plated Buddha statues. The temple is at its dramatic best when prayers are in session and it rings out with gongs, drums and the drone of hundreds of young monks chanting. You're welcome to sit and meditate; look for the small blue guest cushions lying around. The Zangdogpalri Temple (☎ 7am-8pm), a similarly ornate affair, is next door.

Foreigners are not allowed to stay overnight in Bylakuppe without a Protected Area Permit (PAP) from the Ministry of Home Affairs in Delhi, which can take up to five months to process. Contact the Tibet Bureau Office (☎ 11-26479737; www.tibetbureau.in; New Delhi) for details. Day-trippers are welcome to visit, however.

If you have a permit, the simple Paljor Dhargey Ling Guest House (☎ 8223-258686; pdguesthouse@yahoo.com; d ₹500) is opposite the Golden Temple. For delicious momos (Tibetan dumplings) or thukpa (noodle soup), pop into the Tibetan-run Malaya Restaurant (opp Golden Temple; momos ₹60-90; ☎ 7am-9pm). Otherwise there are many hotels in nearby Kushalnagar, including Ice Berg (☎ 9880260544; Main Rd; s/d from ₹600/800), with clean functional rooms.

Autorickshaws (shared/solo ₹15/40) run to Bylakuppe from Kushalnagar, 6km away. Buses frequently run 34km to Kushalnagar from Madikeri (₹40, 45 minutes) and Hassan (₹78, 2½ hours). Most buses on the Mysuru-Madikeri route stop at Kushalnagar (₹85 to ₹180, two hours).

Chingaraa

GUESTHOUSE $$$

Attractive rooms are spacious, and most have good views – room 9 especially. It's 2.5km up a steep hill; call ahead to get Chingaraa's jeep to pick you up from Kabbinakad junction.

★ Tamara Resort

RESORT $$$

(☎0827-2238000; www.thetamara.com; Yavakapadi Village; r incl meals & activities from ₹21,500; ☎☎) Immersed within 70 hectares of coffee plantations, this romantic nature resort has stilted cottages that soar above the lush green surroundings. Luxurious rooms all have teak floorboards, balconies, king-sized beds, chessboard coffee tables and French-press plungers with Coorg coffee. Its memorable restaurant is raised above the plantations with a glass-bottom floor to look down upon.

Additional highlights are its spa, yoga classes and coffee cupping sessions. It's popular with honeymooners.

Belur & Halebid

(☎08177 / ELEV 968M

The Hoysala temples at Halebid (also known as Halebeedu) and Belur (also called Beluru) are the apex of one of the most artistically exuberant periods of ancient Hindu cultural development. Architecturally, they are South India's answer to Khajuraho in Madhya Pradesh and Konark near Puri in Odisha.

Only 16km lie between Belur and Halebid; they are connected by frequent buses from 6.30am to 7pm (₹25, 40 minutes).

To get here you'll need to pass through the busy transport hub of Hassan – easily accessible from Mysuru and Bengaluru, with buses departing regularly to Mysore (₹115, three hours), Bengaluru (semideluxe/deluxe ₹195/392, 3½ hours) and Mangaluru (₹166/380, 3½ hours). From Hassan's well-organised train station, several passenger trains head to Mysuru daily (2nd class ₹140, 2½ hours). For Bengaluru, there's the red-eye 2.50am 16518 Bangalore Express (sleeper ₹180, 5½ hours). It's also possible to visit on day trip from Bengaluru or Mysuru with a KSTDC tour (p861).

Belur

The Channakeshava Temple (Temple Rd; ☎7.30am-7.30pm) was commissioned in AD 1116 to commemorate the Hoysalas' victory over the neighbouring Cholas. It took more than a century to build, and is currently the only one among the three major Hoysala sites still in daily use – try to be there for the ritual puja (prayer) ceremonies at around 8.45am and 6.45pm. Some parts of the temple, such as the exterior lower friezes, were not sculpted to completion and are thus less elaborate than those of the other Hoysala temples. However, the work higher up is unsurpassed in detail and artistry, and is a glowing tribute to human skill. Particularly intriguing are the angled bracket figures depicting women in ritual dancing poses. While the front of the temple is reserved for images depicting erotic sections from the Kamasutra, the back is strictly for gods. The roof of the inner sanctum is held up by rows of exquisitely sculpted pillars, no two of which are identical in design.

Scattered around the temple complex are other smaller temples, a marriage hall which is still used, and the seven-storey gopuram, which has sensual sculptures explicitly portraying the activities of dancing girls. Guides can be hired for ₹250.

Hotel Mayura Velapuri (☎0817-7222209; Kempegowda Rd; d with fan/AC from ₹1000/1350; ☎), a state-run hotel gleaming with post-renovation glory, is located on the way to the temple. Its restaurant-bar serves a variety of Indian dishes (from ₹80) to go with beer. The cheaper Sumukha Residency (☎08177-222181; Temple Rd; s/d ₹350/730) is another option.

There's an Axis ATM on the road leading to the temple.

There are frequent buses to/from Hassan (₹40 to ₹90, 45 minutes), 38km away.

Halebid

Construction of the stunning Hoysaleswara Temple (☎dawn-dusk), Halebid's claim to fame, began around AD 1121 and went on for more than 190 years. It was never completed, but nonetheless stands today as a masterpiece of Hoysala architecture. The interior of its inner sanctum, chiselled out of black stone, is marvellous. On the outside, the temple's richly sculpted walls are covered with a flurry of Hindu deities, sages, stylised animals and friezes depicting the life of the Hoysala rulers. Two statues of Nandi (Shiva's bull) sit to the left of the main temple, facing the inner sanctum. Guides are available for ₹250.

The temple is in large gardens, adjacent to which is a small museum (admission ₹5; ☞ 9am-5pm Sat-Thu) with a collection of beautiful sculptures from around Halebid.

Take some time out to visit the nearby, smaller Kedareswara Temple, or a little-visited enclosure containing three Jain temples about 500m away.

Hotel Mayura Shanthala (☎ 0817-7273224; d incl breakfast with AC from ₹1500; 🏠🏠), set in a leafy garden opposite the temple complex, is the best sleeping option.

Regular buses depart for Hassan (₹35, one hour), 33km away, while buses to Belur are ₹25 for the 15km journey.

Sravanabelagola

☎ 08176

Atop the bald rock of Vindhyagiri Hill, the 17.5m-high statue of the Jain deity Gomateshvara (Bahubali) is visible long before you reach the pilgrimage town of Sravanabelagola. Viewing the statue close up is the main reason for heading to this sedate town, whose name means 'Monk of the White Pond'.

👁 Sights

Gomateshvara Statue

JAIN MONUMENT

(Bahubali; ☞ 6.30am-6.30pm) A steep climb up 614 steps takes you to the top of Vindhyagiri Hill, the summit of which is lorded over by the towering naked statue of the Jain deity Gomateshvara (Bahubali). Commissioned by a military commander in the service of the Ganga king Rachamalla and carved out of a single piece of granite by the sculptor Aristenemi in AD 98, it is said to be the world's tallest monolithic statue. Leave your shoes at the foot of the hill.

Bahubali was the son of emperor Vrishabhadeva, who later became the first Jain tirthankar (revered teacher) Adinath. Embroiled in fierce competition with his brother Bharatha to succeed his father, Bahubali realised the futility of material gains and renounced his kingdom. As a recluse, he meditated in complete stillness in the forest until he attained enlightenment. His lengthy meditative spell is denoted by vines curling around his legs and an ant hill at his feet.

Every 12 years, millions flock here to attend the Mastakabhisheka (☞ Feb; 2018) ceremony, when the statue is dowsed in holy waters, pastes, powders, precious metals and stones.

Jain Temples

Apart from the Bahubali statue, there are several interesting Jain temples in town. The Chandragupta Basti (Chandragupta Community; ☞ 6am-6pm), on Chandragiri Hill opposite Vindhyagiri, is believed to have been built by Emperor Ashoka. The Bhandari Basti (Bhandari Community; ☞ 6am-6pm), in the southeast corner of town, is Sravanabelagola's largest temple. Nearby, Chandranatha Basti (Chandranatha Community; ☞ 6am-6pm) has well-preserved paintings depicting Jain tales.

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

The local Jain organisation SDJMI (☎ 08176-257258) handles bookings for its 15 guest-houses (double/triple ₹250/310). The office is behind the Vidyananda Nilaya Dharamsala, past the post office.

Hotel Raghu

HOTEL $

Mangaluru (Mangalore)

☎ 0824 / POP 484,785

Alternating from relaxed coastal town to hectic nightmare, Mangaluru (more commonly known as Mangalore) has a Jekyll and Hyde thing going, but it's a pleasant enough place to break up your trip. While there's not a lot to do here, it has an appealing off-the-beaten-path feel, and the spicy seafood dishes are sensational.

It sits at the estuaries of the picturesque Netravathi and Gurupur Rivers on the Arabian Sea coast and has been a major pit stop on international trade routes since the 6th century AD. It was ruled by the Portuguese during the 16th and 17th centuries, before the British took over a century later.

Getting Around

To get to the airport, take buses 47B or 47C from the City bus stand, or catch a taxi (₹500).

An autorickshaw to Mangalore Junction (Kankanadi) train station costs around ₹80, or take bus 9 or 11B.

Dharmasthala

Inland from Mangaluru are a string of Jain temple towns, such as Venur, Mudabidri and Karkal. The most interesting among them is Dharmasthala, 75km east of Mangaluru by the Netravathi River. Some 10,000 pilgrims pass through this town every day. During holidays and major festivals such as the five-day pilgrim festival of Lakshadeepotsava (☺Nov), the footfall can go up tenfold.

The Manjunatha Temple (☺6.30am-2pm & 5-9pm) is Dharmasthala's main shrine, devoted to Shiva. Men have to enter bare-chested with legs covered. Simple free meals are available in the temple's kitchen (☺11.30am-2.15pm & 7.30-10pm), attached to a hall that can seat up to 3000.

Associated sights in town include the 12m-high statue of Bahubali at Ratnagiri

Hill, and the Manjusha Museum (admission ₹5; ☺9am-1pm & 4.30-9pm), which houses an eclectic collection of everything from artefacts to quirky collections of vintage cameras, telephones and typewriters. Don't forget to visit the fantastic Car Museum (admission ₹3; ☺8.30am-1pm & 2-7pm), home to 48 vintage autos, including a 1903 Renault and 1920s Studebaker President used by Mahatma Gandhi.

Should you wish to stay, contact the helpful temple office (☎0825-6277121; www.shridharmasthala.org) for accommodation in pilgrim lodges (per person ₹50).

There are frequent buses to Dharmasthala from Mangaluru (₹72, 2½ hours).

Udupi (Udipi)

☎0820

Udupi is a buzzing yet relaxed pilgrim town that's home to the atmospheric 13th-century Krishna Temple (Car St; ☺3.30am-10pm), which draws thousands of Hindu pilgrims throughout the year. Surrounded by eight maths (monasteries), it's a hive of ritual activity, with temple musicians playing at the entrance, elephants on hand for puja, and pilgrims constantly passing through. Non-Hindus are welcome inside the temple; men must enter bare-chested. Come late afternoon for the best atmosphere.

Udupi is famed for its vegetarian food, and recognised across India for its sumptuous thali and as the birthplace of the humble dosa.

ICICI (Car St) has an ATM near the temple.

Sleeping & Eating

Shri Vidyasamudra Choultry

HOTEL $

(☎2520820; Car St; ₹150-300) There are several pilgrim hotels near the temple, but this simple offering is the best with views looking over the ghat.

Hotel Sriram Residency

HOTEL $$

(☎2530761; www.hotelsriramresidency.com; ₹ with fan/AC from ₹940/1680; ☹) Udupi's most modern hotel is set over numerous floors, along with multiple restaurants and bars. It's a short walk from the temple complex.

Woodlands

INDIAN $

(Dr UR Rao Complex; dosas from ₹60, thalis from ₹90; ☺8am-3.15pm & 5.30-10.30pm) In the town that's famous for its vegetarian fare, Woodlands is regarded as one of the best places to sample the goods. It's a short walk south of Krishna Temple.

i Getting There & Away

Udupi is 58km north of Mangaluru along the coast; regular buses ply the route (₹56, 1½ hours). Buses also head to Gokarna (₹180, six hours) and Bengaluru (₹410 to ₹870, 10 hours). Regular buses head to Malpe (₹8, 30 minutes).

Malpe

📍0820

A fishing harbour on the west coast 4km from Udupi, Malpe has nice beaches ideal for flopping about in the surf. The Paradise Isle Beach Resort (📍0820-2538777; www.theparadiseisle.com; r with fan/AC from ₹2000/4750; 🍷@🍷🍷) has decent rooms; ask for one with a sea view. It can also organise houseboat cruises (per couple ₹4000; ☺Oct-Mar) on backwaters that are similarly scenic to Kerala's, yet all a bit undeveloped.

From Malpe pier you can take a government ferry (₹100 return, 45 minutes, departing when full from 9am to 5.30pm) or charter a private ferry from Malpe Beach to tiny St Mary's Island. It's known for where Portuguese explorer Vasco da Gama supposedly landed in 1498, and for curious hexagonal basalt formations. No boats run from June to mid-October. Buses to Udupi are ₹8, and an autorickshaw ₹80.

Jog Falls

📍08186

Nominally the highest waterfalls in India, Jog Falls only come to life during the monsoon. The tallest of the four falls is the Raja, which drops 293m. For a good view of the falls, bypass the area close to the bus stand and hike to the foot of the falls down a 1200-plus-step path. Watch out for leeches during the wet season.

Hotel Mayura Gerusoppa (📍08186-244732; d with fan/AC from ₹1800/2200; 🍷), near the car park, has a few enormous, musty double rooms. Stalls near the bus stand serve thalis and noodle dishes.

Jog Falls isn't the easiest place to reach without a car, so most people hire a taxi; a return trip from Gokarna costs around ₹2000. Otherwise you can get a string of buses which head via Kumta and turn off at Honavar (₹66); or Shimoga (Shivamogga) if coming via Bengaluru (₹468, nine hours).

Gokarna

📍08386

A regular nominee among travellers' favourite beaches in India, Gokarna is a more laid-back and less-commercialised version of Goa. It attracts a crowd for a low-key, chilled-out beach holiday and not for full-scale parties. Most accommodation is in thatched bamboo huts along its several stretches of blissful coast.

There are two Gokarnas; adjacent to the beaches is the sacred Hindu pilgrim town of Gokarna, full of ancient temples that come to life during festivals such as Shivaratri (☺Feb/Mar) and Ganesh Chaturthi (☺Sep). While its lively bazaar is an interesting place to visit, most foreign tourists don't hang

RANI ABBAKKA THE WARRIOR QUEEN

The legendary exploits of Rani Abbakka, one of India's first freedom fighters – who happened to be a female – is one that gets surprisingly little attention outside the Mangaluru region. An Indian Joan of Arc, her inspiring story is just waiting to be picked up by a Bollywood/Hollywood screenwriter.

As the Portuguese consolidated power along India's western coastline in the 16th century, seizing towns across Goa and down to Mangalore, their attempts to take Ullal proved more of a challenge. This was thanks to its 'fearless queen' who proved to be a major thorn in their grand plans to control the lucrative spice trade. Her efforts to continually repel their advances is the stuff of local legend.

Well trained in the art of war, both in strategy and combat, she knew how to brandish a sword. And while she was eventually defeated, it was a result of her treacherous ex-husband, who conspired against her in leaking intelligence to the enemy.

Her efforts to rally her people to defeat the powerful Portuguese is not forgotten by locals: she's immortalised in a bronze statue on horseback at the roundabout on the road to Ullal beach, and has an annual festival dedicated to her.

The shore temple that looks over the beautiful Someshwara beach a few kilometres south from Ullal was the former site of her fort, but only sections of its wall remains intact.

SURFING SWAMIS

While there has always been a spiritual bond between surfer and Mother ocean, the Surfing Ashram (Mantra Surf Club; ☎9880659130; www.surfingindia.net; 6-64 Kolachikambla, Mulki; s/d incl full board from ₹3000/4500; 📶) at Mulki, 30km north of Mangaluru, takes things to a whole new plane. At this Hare Krishna ashram, which was established by its American guru who's been surfing since 1963 (and living in India for four decades), devotees follow a daily ritual of puja (prayers), chanting, mediation and vegetarian diet in between catching barrels.

There's surf year-round, but the best waves are May to June and September to October. The swamis can also assist with information on surfing across India. Board hire is ₹700 per day (also bodyboards and stand-up paddleboards) and lessons are ₹2500 per day.

Accommodation is pricey, but it has a homely beach-house feel, and rates include meals.

All are welcome to visit, but it's important to be aware that it's strictly a place of worship and there are guidelines to abide by, including abstinence from meat, alcohol, tobacco and sex during your stay. See the website for more details.

around overnight, instead making a bee-line straight to the adjoining beaches.

Note that bag searches and passport checks by the police are common upon arrival.

👁 Sights & Activities

Temples

Foreigners and non-Hindus are not allowed inside Gokarna's temples. However, there are plenty of colourful rituals to be witnessed around town. At the western end of Car St is the Mahabaleshwara Temple, home to a revered lingam. Nearby is the Ganapati Temple, while at the other end of the street is the Venkataraman Temple. About 100m further south is Koorti Teertha, the large temple tank where locals, pilgrims and immaculately dressed Brahmins perform their ablutions.

Beaches & Surfing

The best beaches are due south of Gokarna town, with Om Beach and Kudle Beach being the most popular. Don't walk around the paths after dark, and not alone at any time – it's easy to slip or get lost, and muggings have occurred.

Om Beach

BEACH

Gokarna's most famous beach twists and turns over several kilometres in a way that's said to resemble the outline of an Om symbol. It's a great mix of lovely long beach and smaller shady patches of sand, perfect for sunbathing and swimming. It's a 20-minute walk to Kudle Beach; an autorickshaw to Gokarna town is about ₹150.

Kudle Beach

BEACH

Lined with rows of restaurants and guest-houses, Kudle Beach has emerged as a popular alternative to Om Beach. It's one of Gokarna's longest beaches, with plenty of room to stretch out on its attractive sands.

It's a 20-minute hike from both Gokarna town or Om Beach along a path that heads atop along the barren headland with expansive sea views. Otherwise it's a ₹60 autorickshaw ride to town.

Gokarna Beach

BEACH

While Gokarna's main town beach isn't meant for casual bathing, and is more popular with domestic tourists, walk up a bit and you'll find a long stretch of pristine sand that seems to go forever – perfect for those seeking isolation.

Cocopelli Surf School

SURFING

(☎8105764969; www.cocopelli.org; Gokarna Beach; lesson per person ₹2000, board rental per 2hr ₹750; ☀Oct-May) Offers lessons by internationally certified instructors and rents boards. Has accommodation along here too.

Half Moon & Paradise Beach

BEACH

Well hidden away south of Om Beach lie the small sandy coves of Half Moon Beach and Paradise Beach. Half Moon is the more attractive, with a lovely sweep of powdery sand and basic hut accommodation. Paradise Beach is a mix of sand and rocks, and a haven with the long-term 'turn-on-tune-in-drop-out' crowd; unfortunately the government routinely destroys all the huts out this way, leaving it in a ramshackle state – hence it's BYO everything here.

From Om Beach, these beaches are a 30-minute and one-hour walk, respectively. Watch out for snakes and don't walk it after dark. A fishing boat from Om Beach will cost around ₹700, which can fit 10 people. For Paradise Beach you can also grab a bus to Velikom from Gokarna (₹12, 20 minutes), from where it's a 15-minute walk.

Sleeping & Eating

With a few exceptions, the choice here is basic, but perfectly comfortable, beach shacks. Most close from May to August.

Om Beach

Om Shree Ganesh

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 8386-257310; www.omshreeganesh.com; hut ₹500, without bathroom ₹300) A winning combination of cheap bungalows, friendly management and beachside location makes this place justifiably popular. ## FORMULA BUFFALO

Call it an indigenous take on the Grand Prix, Kambla, or traditional buffalo racing, is a hugely popular pastime among villagers along the southern Karnataka coast. Popularised in the early 20th century and born out of local farmers habitually racing their buffaloes home after a day in the fields, the races have now hit the big time. Thousands of spectators attend each edition, and racing buffaloes are pampered and prepared like thoroughbreds.

Kambla events are held between November and March, usually on weekends. Parallel tracks are laid out in a paddy field, along which buffaloes hurtle towards the finish line. In most cases the man rides on a board fixed to a ploughshare, literally surfing his way down the track behind the beasts. The faster creatures can cover the 120m-odd distance through water and mud in around 14 seconds!

(☎ 9591978042; Kudle Beach; r from ₹250; 📶) At the end of Kudle, relaxed Ganga is a perennial favourite. Also has rooms up the hill with soaring views. Wi-fi costs ₹50 per hour.

Goutami Prasad

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9972382302; Kudle Beach; hut from ₹200, r from ₹500) Relaxed, family-run guesthouse with a prime spot in the centre of Kudle Beach. Choose between basic huts with sandy floors or more comfortable, spotless rooms.

Uma Garden

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9916720728; Kudle Beach; r without bathroom ₹250) Tucked around the corner at the beginning of Kudle, this bucolic guesthouse has a laid-back owner and sea-facing vegetarian restaurant.

Strawberry Farmhouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 7829367584; Kudle Beach; r from ₹700; 📶) A kitschy guesthouse at the northern section of Kudle with over-the-top bright cottages (some with AC) and prime position looking out to the water.

Half Moon Beach

Half Moon Garden Cafe

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 9743615820; Half Moon Beach; hut ₹200) A throwback to the hippie days, this hideaway has a blissful beach and bare-bones huts without electricity.

Gokarna Beach

This seemingly endless stretch of beach is the place for a more isolated relaxed beachside hang-out.

Hema Shree Garden

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 9845983223; Gokarna Beach; r from ₹250) A superchilled beach guesthouse that's a 20-minute walk along Gokarna Beach with a variety of rooms around its tropical garden, plus some bungalows looking directly to the ocean.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

MURUDESHWAR

A worthwhile stopover for those taking the coastal route from Gokarna to Mangaluru, is Murudeshwar, a beachside pilgrimage town. It's most notable for its colossal seashore statue of Lord Shiva (Murudeshwar), which sits directly on the shore overlooking the Arabian Sea, making for spectacular photo-ops. For the best views, take the lift 20 stories to the top of the skyscraper-like Shri Murudeshwar Temple (lift ₹10; 🕒 lift 7.45am-12.30pm & 3.15-6.45pm).

It's 3km off the main highway, accessed by train or bus passing up and down the coast. If you want to stay the night, Hotel Kawari's Palm Grove (☎ 08385-260178; r with fan/AC from ₹500/1000; 📶) has decent enough rooms 500m from the action.

Namaste Garden

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 9448906436; Gokarna Beach; r ₹500) Delightfully simple huts with hammocks, beachside tables and umbrellas. It's in the middle of Gokarna Beach, 10 minutes from town.

Gokarna Town

Shree Shakti Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 9036043088; Gokarna Beach Rd; s/d ₹300/600) On Gokarna's main strip, this friendly hotel is excellent value with immaculate lime-green rooms above a restaurant which does excellent food, including homemade ice cream.

Greenland Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9019651420; www.gokarnagreenland.in; Gokarna Town; r from ₹200) Hidden down a jungle path outside town, this mellow family-run guesthouse has clean rooms in vibrant colours. Will suit those not wanting a beach shack, but somewhere with character.

Hotel Gokarna International

HOTEL $

(☎ 9739629390; Main Rd; r with fan/AC from ₹450/1000; 📶) This typical institutional Indian hotel is worth a look if you want large AC rooms with TV and balcony.

i Getting There & Away

BUS

A mix of local and private buses depart daily to Bengaluru (₹509, 12 hours) and Mysuru (from ₹550, 12 hours), as well as Mangaluru (₹240, 6½ hours) and Hubli (₹190, four hours), mostly transferring at Kumta (₹34, one hour), or Honnavar (₹55, two hours) for Jog Falls.

For Hampi, Paolo Travels (☎0832-6637777; www.phmgoa.com) is a popular choice which heads via Hospet (fan/AC ₹1100/1600, seven hours). Note if you're coming from Hampi, you'll be dropped at Ankola from where there's a free transfer for the 26km journey to Gokarna.

There are also regular buses to Panaji (₹116, four hours) and Mumbai (₹900, 12 hours).

TRAIN

Many express trains stop at Gokarna Road station, 9km from town; however, double check your ticket as some stop at Ankola, 26km away. Many of the hotels and small travel agencies in Gokarna can book tickets.

The 3am 12619 Matsyagandha Express goes to Mangaluru (sleeper ₹235, 4½ hours); the return train leaves Kumta around 6.30pm for Margao (Madgaon; sleeper ₹170, 2½ hours) and Mumbai (sleeper/2AC, ₹465/1735, 12 hours).

Autorickshaws charge ₹200 to go to Gokarna Road station (or ₹500 to Ankola); a bus from Gokarna charges ₹40, every 30 minutes.

CENTRAL KARNATAKA

Hampi

☎08394

Unreal and bewitching, the forlorn ruins of Hampi dot an unearthly landscape that will leave you spellbound the moment you cast your eyes on it. Heaps of giant boulders perch precariously over miles of undulating terrain, their rusty hues offset by jade-green palm groves, banana plantations and paddy fields. While it's possible to see the ancient ruins and temples of this World Heritage Site in a day or two, this goes against Hampi's relaxed grain. Plan on lingering for a while.

The main travellers' ghetto has traditionally been Hampi Bazaar, a village crammed with budget lodges, shops and restaurants, and towered over by the majestic Virupaksha Temple. However, recent demolitions have seen tranquil Virupapur Gaddi across the river become the new hang-out. Both offer different experiences, and it's recommended to spend a few nights at each.

Hampi is generally a safe, peaceful place, but don't wander around the ruins after dark or alone, as it can be dangerous terrain to get lost in, especially at night.

History

Hampi and its neighbouring areas find mention in the Hindu epic Ramayana as Kishkinda, the realm of the monkey gods. In 1336 Telugu prince Harihararaya chose Hampi as the site for his new capital Vijayanagar, which – over the next couple of centuries – grew into one of the largest Hindu empires in Indian history. By the 16th century it was a thriving metropolis of about 500,000 people, its busy bazaars dabbling in international commerce, brimming with precious stones and merchants from faraway lands. All this, however, ended in a stroke in 1565, when a confederacy of Deccan sultanates razed Vijayanagar to the ground, striking it a death blow from which it never recovered.

i Sights

Set over 36 sq km, there are some 3700 monuments to explore in Hampi, and it would take months if you were to do it justice. The ruins are divided into two main areas: the Sacred Centre, around Hampi Bazaar with its temples, and the Royal Centre, towards Kamalapuram, where the Vijayanagara royalty lived and governed.

Sacred Centre

★ Virupaksha Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p901; admission ₹2, camera ₹50; ☀dawn-dusk)

The focal point of Hampi Bazaar is the Virupaksha Temple, one of the city's oldest structures, and Hampi's only remaining working temple. The main gopuram (gateway tower), almost 50m high, was built in 1442, with a smaller one added in 1510. The main shrine is dedicated to Virupaksha, an incarnation of Shiva.

If Lakshmi, the temple elephant, and her attendant are around, she'll smooch (bless) you for a coin; she gets her morning bath at 8am down by the river ghats.

To the south, overlooking Virupaksha Temple, Hemakuta Hill has a few early ruins, including monolithic sculptures of Narasimha (Vishnu in his man-lion incarnation) and Ganesha. At the east end of the recently abandoned Hampi Bazaar is a monolithic Nandi statue, around which stand colonnaded blocks of the ancient marketplace. Overlooking the site is Matanga Hill, whose summit affords dramatic views of the terrain at sunrise.

Within the now-derelict bazaar is the Hampi Heritage Gallery (Map p901; ☉10am-1pm & 3-6pm Tue-Sun) FREE, exhibiting interesting historical photos of the ruins.

★Vittala Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p898; Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, child under 15 free; ☉8.30am-5.30pm) The undisputed highlight of the Hampi ruins, the 16th-century Vittala Temple stands amid the boulders 2km from Hampi Bazaar. Work possibly started on the temple during the reign of Krishnadevaraya (r 1509–29). It was never finished or consecrated, yet the temple's incredible sculptural work remains the pinnacle of Vijayanagar art.

The ornate stone chariot that stands in the courtyard is the temple's showpiece and represents Vishnu's vehicle with an image of Garuda within. Its wheels were once capable of turning. The outer 'musical' pillars reverberate when tapped. They were supposedly designed to replicate 81 different Indian instruments, but authorities have placed them out of tourists' bounds for fear of further damage, so no more do-re-mi.

As well as the main temple, whose sanctum was illuminated using a design of reflective waters, you'll find the marriage hall and prayer hall, the structures to the left and right upon entry, respectively.

Lakshmi Narasmiha

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p898) An interesting stop off along the road to the Virupaksha Temple is the 6.7m monolithic statue of the bulging-eyed Lakshmi Narasmiha in a cross-legged lotus position and topped by a hood of seven snakes.

Krishna Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p898) Built in 1513, the Krishna Temple is fronted by a D-cupped apsara and 10 incarnations of Vishnu. It's on the road to the Virupaksha Temple.

Sule Bazaar

HISTORIC SITE

(Map p898) Halfway along the path from Hampi Bazaar to Vittala Temple, a track to the right leads over the rocks to deserted Sule Bazaar, one of ancient Hampi's principle centres of commerce and reputedly its red-light district. At the southern end of this area is the beautiful 16th-century Achyutaraya Temple (Map p898).

Royal Centre & Around

While it can be accessed by a 2km foot trail from the Achyutaraya Temple, the Royal Centre is best reached via the Hampi-Kamalapuram road. A number of Hampi's major sites stand here.

Mahanavami-diiba

RUIN

(Map p898) The Mahanavami-diiba is a 12m-high three-tired platform with intricate carvings and panoramic vistas of the walled complex of ruined temples, stepped tanks and the King's audience hall. The platform was used as a Royal viewing area for the Dasara festivities, religious ceremonies and processions.

Hazarama Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p898) Hazarama Temple features exquisite carvings that depict scenes from the Ramayana, and polished black granite pillars.

Zenana Enclosure

RUIN

(Map p898; Indian/foreigner ₹10/250; ☉8.30am-5.30pm) Northeast of the Royal Centre within the walled ladies' quarters is the Zenana Enclosure. Its peaceful grounds and manicured lawns feel like an oasis amid the arid surrounds. Here is the Lotus Mahal (Map p898), a delicately designed pavilion which was supposedly the queen's recreational mansion. It overlooks the 11 grand Elephant Stables (Map p898; ☉8.30am-5.30pm) with arched entrances and domed chambers. There's also a small museum and army barracks within the high-walled enclosure.

Queen's Bath

RUIN

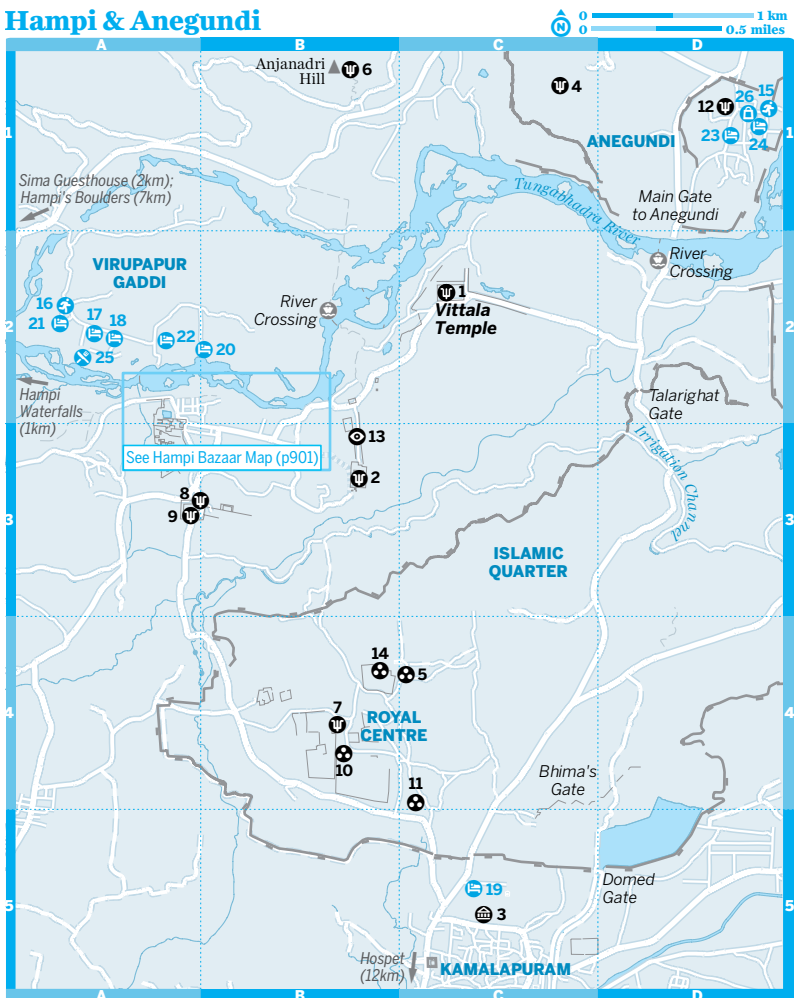

(Map p898; ☉8.30am-5.30pm) South of the Royal Centre you'll find various temples and elaborate waterworks, including the Queen's Bath, deceptively plain on the outside but amazing within, with its Indo-Islamic architecture.

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p898; Kamalapuram; ☉10am-5pm Sat-Thu) Worth popping in for its quality collection of sculptures from local ruins, plus neolithic tools, fascinating coins, 16th-century weaponry and a large floor model of the Vijayanagar ruins.

Activities

Hampi Waterfalls

WATERFALL

About a 2km walk west of Hampi Bazaar, past banana plantations, you can scramble over boulders to reach the attractive Hampi 'waterfalls,' a series of small whirlpools among the rocks amid superb scenery.

Bouldering & Rock Climbing

Hampi is the undisputed bouldering capital of India. The entire landscape is a climber's adventure playground made of granite crags and boulders, some bearing the marks of ancient stonemasons. Golden Boulders (2013)

Birdwatching

Get in touch with Kishkinda Trust (TKT; ☎ 08533-26777; www.thekishkindatrust.org) in Anegundi for info on birdwatching in the area, which has over 230 species, including the greater flamingo. The Birds of Hampi (2014) by Samad Kottur is the definitive guide.

🌟 Festivals & Events

Vijaya Utsav

RELIGIOUS

(Hampi Festival; ☺ Jan) Hampi's three-day extravaganza of culture, heritage and the arts in January.

Virupaksha Car Festival

RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL

(☺ Mar/Apr) The Virupaksha Car Festival in March/April is a big event, with a colourful procession characterised by a giant wooden chariot (the temple car from Virupaksha Temple) being pulled along the main strip of Hampi bazaar.

🏠 Sleeping

Most guesthouses are cosy family-run digs, perfect for the budget traveller. A handful of places also have larger, more-comfortable rooms with air-con and TV.

🏠 Hampi Bazaar

★ Padma Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p901; ☎ 08394-241331; padmaguesthouse@gmail.com; d from ₹800; 🍷 🍴) In a quiet corner of Hampi Bazaar, this amiable guesthouse feels more like a homestay, with basic, squeaky-clean rooms, many of which have views of Virupaksha Temple.

Archana Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p901; ☎ 08394-241547; addihampi@yahoo.com; d from ₹600; 🍷 🍴) On the riverfront, quiet and cheerful Archana is one of the few places in the bazaar with a view. It's set over two houses opposite each other, with rooms painted in vivid purple and green, and has an open-air restaurant overlooking the river.

Pushpa Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p901; ☎ 9448795120; pushpaguesthouse99@yahoo.in; d from ₹850, with AC from ₹1200; 🍷 🍴) The highly recommendable Pushpa is a top all-rounder that gets you a comfortable, attractive and spotless room.

📍 HAMPI RUINS TICKET

The ₹250 ticket for Vittala Temple entitles you to same-day admission into most of the paid sites across the ruins (including around the Royal Centre and the Archaeological Museum), so don't lose your ticket.

It has a lovely sit-out on the 1st floor, and reliable travel agency.

Vicky's

GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p901; ☎ 9480561010; vikkyhampi@yahoo.com.in; r ₹600; ☎) An old faithful done up in pop purple and green, with decent rooms and friendly owner.

Netra Guesthouse

DEMOLISHMENT OF HAMPI BAZAAR

While in 1865 it was the Deccan sultanates who levelled Vijayanagar, today a different battle rages in Hampi, between conservationists bent on protecting Hampi's architectural heritage and the locals who have settled there.

In mid-2012 the government's master plan that had been in the works since the mid-2000s, and which aims to classify all of Hampi's ruins as protected monuments, was dramatically and forcefully put into action. Overnight shops, hotels and homes in Hampi Bazaar were bulldozed, reducing the atmospheric main strip to rubble overnight, as villagers who'd made the site a living monument were evicted.

While villagers were compensated with a small plot of land in Kaddirampur, 4km from the bazaar (where there is talk of new guesthouses eventually opening up), many locals remain displaced years later as they await their pay out.

While at the time of research, rubble from the demolished buildings remained, iconic hang-outs had been destroyed (including riverside restaurants such as the Mango Tree) and the main temple road resembled a bombed-out town; guesthouses and restaurants on the fringes of the bazaar remain intact.

Sima Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 9481664504; r with shared bathroom ₹200-300) A quirky guesthouse that is situated away from the crowds, low-key Sima has very basic but memorable rooms incorporated into boulder faces. Unexpectedly has a tiny skate ramp, along with a couple of boards.

Hampi's Boulders

LODGE $$$

(☎️ 9448034202; www.hampisboulders.com; Narayanpet; r incl full board from ₹7000; 🍷🍷🍷) The only luxury option in these parts, this 'eco-wilderness' resort sits amid leafy gardens 7km west of Virupapur Gaddi. There's a choice of themed rooms, but by far the best are the chic cottages with elegant furnishing, river views and outdoor showers. Rates include guided walks and transfer from Hampi.

🚗 Kamalapuram

Hotel Mayura Bhuvaneshwari

HOTEL $$

(Map p898; ☎️ 08394-241574, 8970650025; s/d from ₹1620/1800; 🍷🍷) This tidy government operation, which is located about 3km south of the Royal Centre, has well-appointed but dated rooms, a lovely big garden, much-appreciated bar, and good multicuisine restaurant.

🍴 Eating

Due to Hampi's religious significance, meat is strictly off the menu in all restaurants, and alcohol is banned (though some restaurants can order it for you).

Ravi's Rose

MULTICUISINE $

(Map p901; mains from ₹100; ☀️ 8am-10pm) This slightly sketchy rooftop-restaurant is the bazaar's most social hang-out, with a good selection of dosas, but most are here for the, erm, tasty lassis (cough, cough). It also has a nearby guesthouse built into the rock face.

Mango Tree

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p901; mains ₹90-310; ☀️ 7.30am-9.30pm) Hampi's most famous restaurant may no longer sit beneath its iconic mango tree or boast river views, but its spirit lives on since relocating to the bazaar, inside an ambient tented restaurant.

Prince Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p901; mains from ₹80; ☀️ 7.30am-9.30pm) Food here takes ages to arrive, so thankfully this atmospheric shady hut is a good place to chill out with cushioned seating on the floor. Does momos (Tibetan dumplings), pizzas etc.

★ Laughing Buddha

MULTICUISINE $

(Map p898; mains from ₹80; ☀️ 8am-10pm; 🍷) Now that Hampi's famous riverside restaurants have closed on the other side, Laughing Buddha has taken over as the most atmospheric place to eat, with serene river views that span beyond to the temples and ruins. Its menu is curries, burgers, pizzas, you know the drill...

🛍 Shopping

📍 Information

There's no ATM in Hampi; the closest is 3km away in Kamalapuram – an autorickshaw costs ₹100 for a return trip.

Internet (per hour ₹40) is ubiquitous in Hampi Bazaar, though most guesthouses have free wi-fi these days. A good tourist resource for Hampi is www.hampi.in.

Tourist office (Map p901; 📍 241339; ☀️ 10am-5.30pm Sat-Thu) This dingy office inside Virupaksha Temple has brochures but is more useful for arranging cycling tours (per person ₹400 including bike and guide), walking guides (half-/full day ₹600/1000) and bus tours (₹350, seven hours), all of which head to the ruins.

📍 Getting There & Away

A semideluxe bus connects Hampi Bazaar to Bengaluru (₹550, eight hours) leaving at 8pm, but otherwise you'll have to head to Hospet for onward travel. Travel agents in Hampi Bazaar can book tickets.

The first bus from Hospet (₹22, 30 minutes, half-hourly) is at 5.45am; the last one back leaves Hampi Bazaar at 7.30pm. An autorickshaw costs ₹150 to ₹200.

Hospet is Hampi's nearest train station.

📍 Getting Around

Bicycles cost ₹30 per day in Hampi Bazaar, while mopeds can be hired for around ₹150. Petrol is ₹100 a litre.

A small boat (Map p901; person/bicycle/motorbike ₹10/10/20; ☀️ 7am-6pm) shuttles frequently across the river to Virupapur Gaddi. A large backpack will cost ₹10 extra, while a special trip after 6pm is ₹50 to ₹100 per person depending on how late you cross.

Walking the ruins is possible, but expect to cover at least 7km just to see the major sites. Autorickshaws and taxis are available for sightseeing. Hiring an autorickshaw for the day costs ₹750.

Around Hampi

Anegundi

Across the Tungabhadra River, about 5km northeast of Hampi Bazaar, sits Anegundi, an ancient fortified village that's part of the Hampi World Heritage Site but predates Hampi by way of human habitation. Gifted with a landscape similar to Hampi, Anegundi has been spared the blight of commercialisation, and thus continues to preserve the local atmosphere minus the touristy vibe.

👁 Sights & Activities

Mythically referred to as Kishkinda, the kingdom of the monkey gods, Anegundi retains many of its historic monuments, such as sections of its defensive wall and gates, and the Ranganatha Temple (Map p898; ☀️ dawn-dusk) devoted to Rama. Also worth visiting is the Durga Temple (Map p898; ☀️ dawn-dusk), an ancient shrine closer to the village.

Hanuman Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p898; ☀️ dawn-dusk) The whitewashed Hanuman Temple, accessible by a 570-step climb up the Anjanadri Hill, has fine views of the rugged terrain around. Many believe this is the birthplace of Hanuman, the Hindu monkey god who was Rama's devotee and helped him in his mission against Ravana. The hike up is pleasant, though you'll be courted by impish monkeys, and within the temple you'll find a large group of chillum-puffing sadhus.

🍷 Sleeping & Eating

A great place to escape the hippies in Hampi, Aneundi has fantastic homestays in restored heritage buildings. Most guesthouses in Aneundi are managed by Uramma Heritage Homes (☎ 9449972230; www.uramma-heritagehomes.com; Aneundi).

Peshagar Guest House GUESTHOUSE $ (Map p898; ☎ 09449972230; www.urammaheritagehomes.com; s/d ₹450/850) Six simple rooms done up in rural motifs open around a pleasant common area in this heritage house with courtyard garden and basic rooftop.

★ Uramma Cottage COTTAGE $$ (Map p898; ☎ 08533-267792; www.urammaheritagehomes.com; s/d from ₹2000/2500; 🍷🍷) Delightful thatched-roof cottages with rustic farmhouse charm that are both comfortable and attractive and set in a relaxed landscaped garden setting.

Uramma House GUESTHOUSE $$ (Map p898; ☎ 09449972230; www.urammaheritagehomes.com; s/d ₹2000/3500, house for 4 people ₹7000; 🍷) This 4th-century heritage house is a gem, with traditional-style rooms featuring boutique touches.

Hoova Craft Shop & Café CAFE $ (Map p898; mains ₹60-100; ☀ 8.30am-9.30pm) A lovely place for an unhurried local meal.

🛒 Shopping

Banana Fibre Craft Workshop HANDICRAFTS (Map p898; ☀ 10am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat) Watch on at this small workshop as workers ply their trade making a range of handicrafts and accessories using the bark of a banana tree, and recycled materials. Of course they sell it all too.

📍 Getting There & Away

Aneundi is 7km from Hampi, and reached by crossing the river on a coracle (₹10) from the pier east of the Vittala Temple. By far the most convenient way is to hire a moped or bicycle (if you're feeling energetic) from Virupapur Gaddi. An autorickshaw costs ₹200.

Hospet (Hosapete)

☎ 08394 / POP 164,200

A hectic, dusty regional centre, Hospet (renamed as Hosapete in 2014) is certainly nothing to write home about, and notable only as a transport hub for Hampi.

🍷 Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Malligi HOTEL $$ (☎ 08394-228101; www.malligihotels.com; Jabunatha Rd; r ₹990-5000; 🍷🍷🍷) Hotel Malligi has built a reputation around clean and well-serviced rooms, aquamarine swimming pool and a good multicuisine restaurant.

Udupi Sri Krishna Bhavan SOUTH INDIAN $ (Bus Stand; thali ₹45, mains ₹50-70; ☀ 6.30am-10.30pm) Opposite the bus stand, this clean spot dishes out Indian veggie fare, including thalis.

DAROJI SLOTH BEAR SANCTUARY

About 30km south of Hampi, amid a scrubby undulated terrain, lies the Daroji Sloth Bear Sanctuary (₹25; ☀ 9.30am-6pm), which nurses a population of around 150 free-ranging sloth bears in an area of 83 sq km. You have a very good chance of spotting them, as honey is slathered on the rocks to coincide with the arrival of visitors. However, you can only see them from afar at the viewing platform. Bring binoculars, or there's no point turning up. Generally 4pm to 6pm is the best time to visit.

The sanctuary is also home to leopards, wild boars, hyenas, jackals and others animals, but you're unlikely to see anything other than peacocks. You'll need to arrange transport to get here, which should cost around ₹600 for an autorickshaw and ₹1000 for a car.

i Information

You'll find ATMs along the main drag and Shanbagh Circle. Internet joints (₹40 per hour) are common.

i Getting There & Away

BUS

Hospet's bus stand has services to Hampi from Bay 10 every half-hour (₹22, 30 minutes). Overnight private sleeper buses ply to/from Goa (10 hours) and Gokarna (eight hours) for ₹850 to ₹1150, and to Bengaluru (₹340 to ₹700, 6½ hours) and Mysuru (₹380 to ₹605, 8½ hours).

TRAIN

Hospet's train station is a ₹20 autorickshaw ride from town. The 18047 Amaravathi Express and KCG YPR Express head to Margao (Magdaon), Goa (sleeper/2AC ₹225/855, 7½ hours) at 6.30am on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. The 16591 Hampi Express departs nightly at 9pm for Bengaluru (3AC/2AC/1AC ₹680/970/1635, nine hours) and Mysore (₹860/1240/2075, 12½ hours)

i Getting There & Away

NORTHERN KARNATAKA

Badami

📍 08357 / POP 26,000

Once the capital of the mighty Chalukya empire, today Badami is famous for its magnificent rock-cut cave temples, and red sandstone cliffs that resemble the Wild West. While the dusty main road is an eyesore that will have you wanting to get the hell out of there, its backstreets are a lovely area to explore with old houses, carved wooden doorways and the occasional Chalukyan ruin.

History

From about AD 540 to 757, Badami was the capital of an enormous kingdom stretching from Kanchipuram in Tamil Nadu to the Narmada River in Gujarat. It eventually fell to the Rashtrakutas, and changed hands several times thereafter, with each dynasty sculpturally embellishing Badami in their own way.

The sculptural legacy left by the Chalukyan artisans in Badami includes some of the earliest and finest examples of Dravidian temples and rock-cut caves.

Sights & Activities

The bluffs and horseshoe-shaped red sandstone cliff of Badami offer some great low-altitude climbing. For more information, visit www.indiaclimb.com.

Badami's caves overlook the 5th-century Agastyatirtha Tank and the waterside Bhutanatha temples. On the other side of the tank is an archaeological museum (admission ₹5; ☀9am-5pm Sat-Thu), which houses superb examples of local sculpture, including a remarkably explicit Lajja-Gauri image of a fertility cult that once flourished in the area. The stairway behind the museum climbs through a sandstone chasm and fortified gateways to reach the ruins of the North Fort.

Cave Temples

CAVE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video camera ₹25, tour guide ₹300; ☀6am-6pm) Badami's highlights are its beautiful cave temples. Cave One, just above the entrance to the complex, is dedicated to Shiva. It's the oldest of the four caves, probably carved in the latter half of the 6th century. On the wall to the right of the porch is a captivating image of Nataraja striking 81 dance moves in the one pose. On the right of the porch area is a huge figure of Ardhanarishvara. On the opposite wall is a large image of Harihara, half Shiva and half Vishnu.

Dedicated to Vishnu, Cave Two is simpler in design. As with caves one and three, the front edge of the platform is decorated with images of pot-bellied dwarfs in various poses. Four pillars support the verandah, their tops carved with a bracket in the shape of a yali (mythical lion creature). On the left wall of the porch is the bull-headed figure of Varaha, the emblem of the Chalukya empire. To his left is Naga, a snake with a human face. On the right wall is a large sculpture of Trivikrama, another incarnation of Vishnu.

Between the second and third caves are two sets of steps to the right. The first leads to a natural cave with a small image of Padmapani (an incarnation of the Buddha). The second set of steps – sadly, barred by a gate – leads to the hilltop South Fort.

Cave Three, carved in AD 578, is the largest and most impressive. On the left wall is a carving of Vishnu, to whom the cave is dedicated, sitting on a snake. Nearby is an image of Varaha with four hands. The pillars have carved brackets in the shape of yalis.

The ceiling panels contain images, including Indra riding an elephant, Shiva on a bull and Brahma on a swan. Keep an eye out for the image of drunken revellers, in particular one lady being propped up by her husband. There's also original colour on the ceiling; the divots on the floor at the cave's entrance were used as paint palettes.

Dedicated to Jainism, Cave Four is the smallest of the set and dates between the 7th and 8th centuries. The right wall has an image of Suparshvanatha (the seventh Jain tirthankar) surrounded by 24 Jain tirthankars. The inner sanctum contains an image of Adinath, the first Jain tirthankar.

Krishna Heritage

HOTEL $$$

(☎08357-221300; www.krishnaheritagebadami.com; Ramdurg Rd; r incl breakfast from ₹3500) An upmarket resort 2km from town set on sprawling grounds with a distinct African feel; including a roaming flock of guinea fowl. Rooms are massive with open-air showers and balconies.

Golden Caves Cuisine

MULTICUISINE $

(Station Rd; mains ₹60-120; ☀8.30am-11.30pm) Produces good North and South Indian fare, with a pleasant outdoor area that's perfect for beers on a balmy evening.

Information

There are ATMs on the main road.

Hotel Rajsangam (Station Rd; per hour ₹20) Internet is available at Hotel Rajsangam in the town centre.

KSTDC tourist office (☎220414; Ramdurg Rd; ☀10am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) The KSTDC tourist office, adjoining Hotel Mayura Chalukya, has brochures on Badami, but otherwise isn't useful.

i Getting There & Away

Buses regularly shuffle off from Badami's bus stand on Station Rd to Kerur (₹25, 45 minutes), which has connections to Bijapur and Hubli. Buses to Hospet (₹180, six hours) also leave from here.

Several trains run to Bijapur including the 11424 Solapur Express (₹70, 3½ hours, 5.30pm), while the Hubli Express goes to Hubli (2nd class ₹75, 3½ hours, 11am). For Bengaluru, take the 16536 Gol Gumbaz Express (2nd class ₹330, 13 hours, 7.15pm).

i Getting Around

Theoretically you can visit Aihole and Pattadakal in a day from Badami if you get moving early. It's much easier and less stressful to arrange an autorickshaw or taxi for the day; it costs around ₹900/1500 for a day trip to Pattadakal, Aihole and nearby Mahakuta.

Start with Aihole (₹40, one hour), then move to Pattadakal (₹23, 30 minutes), and finally return to Badami (₹23, one hour). The last bus from Pattadakal to Badami is at 4pm.

Around Badami

There's no accommodation or restaurants at either Pattadakal or Aihole.

Pattadakal

A secondary capital of the Badami Chalukyas, Pattadakal is known for its temples, which are collectively a World Heritage Site.

Pattadakal is 20km from Badami, with buses (₹23) departing every 30 minutes until about 5pm. There's a morning and afternoon bus to Aiole (₹20), 13km away.

Barring a few that date back to the 3rd century AD, most of Pattadakal's temples (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video camera ₹25; ☀6am-6pm) were built during the 7th and 8th centuries AD. Historians believe Pattadakal served as an important trial ground for the development of South Indian temple architecture. A guide here costs about ₹250.

The main Virupaksha Temple is a massive structure, its columns covered with intricate carvings depicting episodes from the Ramayana and Mahabharata. A giant stone sculpture of Nandi (Shiva's bull) sits to the temple's east. The Mallikarjuna Temple, next to the Virupaksha Temple, is almost identical in design. About 500m south of the main enclosure is the Jain Papanatha Temple, its entrance flanked by elephant sculptures.

Aihole

Some 100 temples, built between the 4th and 6th centuries AD, speck the ancient Chalukyan regional capital of Aihole (ay-ho-leh). Most, however, are either in ruins or engulfed by the modern village. Aihole documents the embryonic stage of South Indian Hindu architecture, from the earliest simple shrines, such as the most ancient Laddkhan Temple, to the later and more complex buildings, such as the Meguti Temple.

Aihole is about 40km from Badami and 13km from Pattadakal.

The most impressive of all the temples in Aihole is the 7th-century Durga Temple (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, camera ₹25; ☀8am-6pm), notable for its semicircular apse (inspired by Buddhist architecture) and the remains of the curvilinear sikhara (temple spire). The interiors house intricate stone carvings. The small museum (admission ₹5; ☀9am-5pm Sat-Thu) behind the temple contains further examples of Chalukyan sculpture.

To the south of the Durga Temple are several other temple clusters, including early examples. About 600m to the southeast, on a low hillock, is the Jain Meguti Temple. Watch out for snakes if you're venturing up.

Bijapur (Vijapura)

📍 08352 / POP 326,360 / ELEV 593M

A fascinating open-air museum dating back to the Deccan's Islamic era, dusty Bijapur (re-named Vijapura in 2014) tells a glorious tale dating back some 600 years. Blessed with a heap of mosques, mausoleums, palaces and fortifications, it was the capital of the Adil Shahi kings from 1489 to 1686, and one of the five splinter states formed after the Islamic Bahmani kingdom broke up in 1482. Despite its strong Islamic character, Bijapur is also a centre for the Lingayat brand of Shaivism, which emphasises a single personalised god. The Lingayat Siddeshwara Festival runs for eight days in January/February.

MONUMENT

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, camera ₹25; ☀6am-6pm) Set in tranquil gardens, the magnificent Golgumbaz mausoleum houses the tombs of emperor Mohammed Adil Shah (r 1627-56), his two wives, his mistress (Rambha), one of his daughters and a grandson.

Octagonal seven-storey towers stand at each corner of the monument, which is capped by an enormous dome. An astounding 38m in diameter, it's said to be the largest dome in the world after St Peter's Basilica in Rome.

Climb the steep, narrow stairs up one of the towers to reach the 'whispering gallery' within the dome. An engineering marvel, its acoustics are such that if you whisper into the wall, a person on the opposite side of the gallery can hear you clearly. Unfortunately people like to test this out by hollering (its unnerving acoustics have the nightmarish effect of a bad acid trip).

The archaeological museum (admission ₹5; ☺10am-5pm Sat-Thu) has an excellent collection of Persian carpets, weapons and scrolls dating back to Bijapur's heyday.

★ Ibrahim Rouza

MONUMENT

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☺6am-6pm) The beautiful Ibrahim Rouza is among the most elegant and finely proportioned Islamic monuments in India. Its 24m-high minarets are said to have inspired those of the Taj Mahal, and its tale is similarly poignant: built by emperor Ibrahim Adil Shah II (r 1580-1627) as a future mausoleum for his queen, Taj Sultana. Ironically, he died before her, and was thus the first person to be rested there. Also interred here with Ibrahim Adil Shah are his queen, children and mother.

For a tip (₹150 is fine), caretakers can show you around the monument, including the dark labyrinth around the catacomb where the actual graves are located.

Citadel

FORT

Surrounded by fortified walls and a wide moat, the citadel once contained the palaces, pleasure gardens and durbar (royal court) of the Adil Shahi kings. Now mainly in ruins, the most impressive of the remaining fragments is the colossal archway of Gagan Mahal, built by Ali Adil Shah I around 1561 as a dual-purpose royal residency and durbar hall. The gates here are locked, but someone will be on hand to let you in.

The ruins of Mohammed Adil Shah's seven-storey palace, the Sat Manzil, are nearby. Across the road stands the delicate Jala Manzil, once a water pavilion surrounded by secluded courts and gardens. On the other side of Station Rd (MG Rd) are the graceful arches of Bara Kaman, the ruined mausoleum of Ali Roza.

Central Market

MARKET

(Station Rd; ☺ 9am-9pm) A refreshing change in pace from historic ruins, this lively market is an explosion of colour and scents with flowers, spices and fresh produce on sale.

Jama Masjid

MOSQUE

(Jama Masjid Rd; ☺ 9am-5.30pm) Constructed by Ali Adil Shah I (r 1557-80), the finely proportioned Jama Masjid has graceful arches, a fine dome and a vast inner courtyard with room for more than 2200 worshippers. Women should cover their heads and not wear revealing clothing.

Asar Mahal

HISTORIC BUILDING

FREE Built by Mohammed Adil Shah in about 1646 to serve as a Hall of Justice, the Asar Mahal once housed two hairs from Prophet Mohammed's beard. The rooms on the upper storey are decorated with frescoes and a square tank graces the front. It's out of bounds for women.

Upli Buruj

HISTORIC SITE

Upli Buruj is a 16th-century, 24m-high watchtower near the western walls of the city. An external flight of stairs leads to the top, where you'll find two hefty cannons and good views of other monuments.

Malik-e-Maidan

HISTORIC SITE

(Monarch of the Plains) Perched upon a platform is this beast of a cannon – over 4m long, almost 1.5m in diameter and estimated to weigh 55 tonnes. Cast in 1549, it was supposedly brought to Bijapur as a war trophy thanks to the efforts of 10 elephants, 400 oxen and hundreds of men!

Jod Gumbad

HISTORIC SITE

In the southwest of the city, off Bagalkot Rd, stand the twin Jod Gumbad tombs with handsome bulbous domes. An Adil Shahi general and his spiritual adviser, Abdul Razzaq Qadiri, are buried here.

Given the amount to see and the distance to cover, ₹500 is a fair price to hire an autorickshaw for a day of sightseeing. Expect to pay ₹40 to get from the train station to the town centre, and ₹50 between Golgumbaz and Ibrahim Rouza.

Bidar

📞 08482 / POP 211,944 / ELEV 664M

Despite being home to amazing ruins and monuments, Bidar, hidden away in Karnataka's far northeastern corner, gets very little tourist traffic – which of course makes it all the more appealing. It's a city drenched in history, with the old-walled town being the first capital of Bahmani kingdom (1428–87) and later the capital of the Barid Shahi dynasty.

👁 Sights

Bidar Fort

FORT

(☀️ 9am–5pm) Keep aside a few hours for peacefully wandering around the remnants of this magnificent 15th-century fort, the largest in South India – and once the administrative capital of much of the region. Surrounded by a triple moat hewn out of solid red rock and 5.5km of defensive walls (the second longest in India), the fort has a fairy-tale entrance that twists in an elaborate chicanery through three gateways.

Guides from the archaeological office have the keys to unlock the most interesting ruins within the fort. These include the Rangin Mahal (Painted Palace), with elaborate tilework, teak pillars and panels with mother-of-pearl inlay, Solah Khamba Mosque (Sixteen-Pillared Mosque), and Tarkash Mahal with exquisite Islamic inscriptions and wonderful rooftop views. There's a small museum in the former royal bath with local artefacts.

Bahmani Tombs

HISTORIC SITE

(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE The huge domed tombs of the Bahmani kings in Ashtur, 3km east of Bidar, were built to house the remains of the sultans, of which the painted interior of Ahmad Shah Bahman's tomb is the most impressive.

Choukhandi

HISTORIC BUILDING

(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE Located 500m from the Badami Tombs is the serene mausoleum of Sufi saint Syed Kirmani Baba, who travelled here from Persia during the golden age of the Bahmani empire. An uncanny air of calm hangs within the monument, and its polygonal courtyard houses rows of medieval graves.

Khwaja Mahmud

Gawan Madrasa

RUIN, HISTORIC SITE

(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE Dominating the heart of the old town are the ruins of Khwaja Mahmud Gawan Madrasa, a college for advanced learning built in 1472. To get an idea of its former grandeur, check out the remnants of coloured tiles on the front gate and one of the minarets which still stands intact.

Why Go?

Hyderabad, the fascinating capital of Telangana, is reason enough on its own to visit this region. Its old quarter of colourful markets, teahouses, biryani restaurants and narrow lanes is studded with the monuments and palaces of bygone dynasties. On the city's fringes rise the fabled Golconda fort and magnificent tombs of departed royalty. Meanwhile Hyderabad's newer districts are lit up by the classy restaurants, hotels, boutiques and bars of IT-fuelled economic advance.

The other attractions of these two states (which were one state until they split in 2014) are less brazen, but dig around and you will unearth gems – like the wonderful medieval temple sculptures of Palampet, the beauty of ancient Buddhist sites such as Sankaram and Guntupalli hidden in deep countryside, the cheery coastal holiday vibe of Visakhapatnam, and the positive vibrations emanating from the vast pilgrim crowds at Tirumala Temple.

When to Go

Hyderabad

May–Jun Join locals digging into haleem, a Ramadan (Ramzan) favourite.

Nov–Feb Explore Hyderabad's sights in perfect 20–25°C weather.

Dec–Apr Best time to enjoy Vizag's coastal attractions – little rain, not too hot.

Telangana & Andhra Pradesh Highlights

1 Exploring the markets, feasting on the food and gazing on the architectural marvels of historical and contemporary Hyderabad (p912)

2 Absorbing the meditative vibrations of monks past at beautiful Sankaram (p935), Bavikonda (p935),

Thotlakonda (p935), and Guntupalli (p933), destinations on a 2300-year-old monastic trail

3 Enjoying the genius of Kakatiya sculptors at Palampet (p929) and Warangal (p928)

4 Finding devotion you didn't know you had alongside thousands of Hindu pilgrims at Tirumala (p936)

5 Enjoying the lush green forests and wide green valleys as your train chugs through the spectacular Eastern Ghats up to Araku (p935)

History

From the 3rd century BC to 3rd century AD the Satavahana empire, also known as the Andhras, ruled over much of the Deccan plateau from a base in this region. The Satavahanas helped Buddhism to flourish after it arrived with emperor Ashoka's missionary monks, and today Andhra Pradesh has more ancient Buddhist sites than almost any other Indian state.

The Hindu Kakatiyas, based at Warangal, ruled most of Telangana and Andhra Pradesh from the 12th to 14th centuries, a period that saw the rise of Telugu culture and language. Warangal eventually fell to the Muslim Delhi Sultanate and then passed to the Deccan-based Bahmani Sultanate. Then, in 1518, the Bahmanis' governor at Golconda, Sultan Quli Qutb Shah, claimed independence. His Qutb Shahi dynasty developed Golconda into the massive fortress we see today. But a water shortage there caused Sultan Mohammed Quli Qutb Shah to relocate a few kilometres east to the south bank of the Musi River, where he founded the new city of Hyderabad in 1591.

The Qutb Shahis were ousted by the Mughal emperor Aurangzeb in 1687. When the Mughal empire in turn started fraying at the edges, its local viceroy Nizam ul-Mulk Asaf Jah took control of much of the Deccan, launching Hyderabad's second great Muslim dynasty, the Asaf Jahis – the famously fabulously wealthy nizams of Hyderabad – in 1724. His capital was Aurangabad, but his son Asaf Jah II moved to Hyderabad in 1763. Hyderabad rose to become the centre of Islamic India and a focus for the arts, culture and learning. Its abundance of rare gems and minerals – the world-famous Kohinoor diamond is from here – furnished the nizams with enormous wealth.

The whole region was effectively under British control from around 1800, but while Andhra Pradesh was governed from Madras (now Chennai), the princely state of Hyderabad – which included large territories outside the city populated by Telugu-speaking Hindus – remained nominally independent. Come Indian Independence in 1947, Nizam Osman Ali Khan wanted to retain sovereignty, but Indian military intervention saw Hyderabad state join the Indian union in 1948.

When Indian states were reorganised along linguistic lines in 1956, Hyderabad was split three ways. What's now Telangana joined other Telugu-speaking areas to form Andhra Pradesh state; other districts became parts of Karnataka and Maharashtra. Telangana was never completely happy with this arrangement, and after prolonged campaigning, it was split off from Andhra Pradesh as a separate state in 2014. Hyderabad remains capital of both states until Andhra Pradesh gets its new capital at Vijayawada up and running, with a time limit of 10 years.

HYDERABAD

📍 040 / POP 6.81 MILLION

The Old City of Hyderabad is everything you might dream an Indian old city to be – narrow lanes thronged with markets, chai shops, wandering animals, autorickshaws, a whirl of noise, colour, languages and religions dotted with stately old architecture in varying states of repair. Two unbelievably wealthy Muslim royal houses, the Qutb Shahs and the Asaf Jahs, came and went from this city of pearls and diamonds, leaving a legacy of magnificent palaces, mosques and tombs and a majority population in poverty.

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Sankranti (p919; ☺ Jan) This important Telugu festival marks the end of harvest season. Kite-flying abounds, doorsteps are decorated with colourful kolams (rice-flour designs) and men adorn cattle with bells and fresh horn paint.

Brahmotsavam (Venkateshwara Temple, Tirumala; ☺ Sep/Oct) This nine-day festival sees the Venkateshwara temple at Tirumala (p936) awash in vast crowds of worshippers. Special pujas and chariot processions are held, and it's an auspicious time for darshan (deity-viewing).

Muharram (Hyderabad; ☺ Sep/Oct) Commemorates the martyrdom of Mohammed's grandson Hussain. A huge procession throngs the Old City in Hyderabad (p919).

Hyderabad's other pole is far younger – its Hi-Tech City, or 'Cyberabad', out west, which since the 1990s has propelled the city into the modern world with its accoutrements of glittery malls, multiplexes, clubs, pubs and sleek restaurants to sit alongside the traditional biryani joints and teahouses.

Between the old and the new lie, in both material and geographical terms, dense inner city areas like Abids, north of the Old City, and leafy middle-class areas like Banjara Hills and Jubilee Hills. In the northeast, site of one of Hyderabad's three main train stations, is Secunderabad, the former British military cantonment still referred to as Hyderabad's 'twin city', though they are effectively one now.

One thing you have to accept wherever you are in Hyderabad: the traffic is appalling. Happily a new Metro Rail rapid transit system, coming on stream as we speak, should ease things.

Hyderabad's Muslim population (Urdu-speaking) is concentrated mostly in the Old City and nearby areas north of the Musi River. The majority of the population are Telugu-speaking Hindus and there's also a growing number of migrants from other parts of India attracted by the IT boom.

Sights

Old City

Charminar

MONUMENT

(Map p920; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀9am-5.30pm) Hyderabad's principal landmark and city symbol was built by Mohammed Quli Qutb Shah in 1591 to commemorate the founding of Hyderabad and the end of epidemics caused by Golconda's water shortage. The beautiful four-column, 56m-high structure has four arches facing the cardinal points, with minarets atop each column (hence the name Charminar, 'four minarets'). It stands at the heart of Hyderabad's most atmospheric area (also known as Charminar), a labyrinth of lanes crowded with shops, stalls, markets and shoppers.

The Charminar's second floor, home to Hyderabad's oldest mosque, and the upper columns, are not open to the public. The structure is illuminated from 7pm to 9pm.

This opulent 18th- and 19th-century palace, the main residence of several nizams, comprises four garden courtyards in a line from north to south. Most dazzling is the Khilwat Mubarak at the end of the first courtyard, a magnificent durbar hall where nizams held ceremonies under 19 enormous chandeliers of Belgian crystal. Its side rooms today house photos and historical exhibits extolling the nizams' virtues. Its balcony once served as seating for the royal women, who attended durbars in purdah.

Several other halls contain interesting exhibits of nizams' personal possessions, arts, crafts and costumes, and in the southernmost courtyard you'll find a 1911 yellow Rolls-Royce which was preserved for very special occasions and has travelled only 356 miles in more than a century.

Salar Jung Museum

MUSEUM

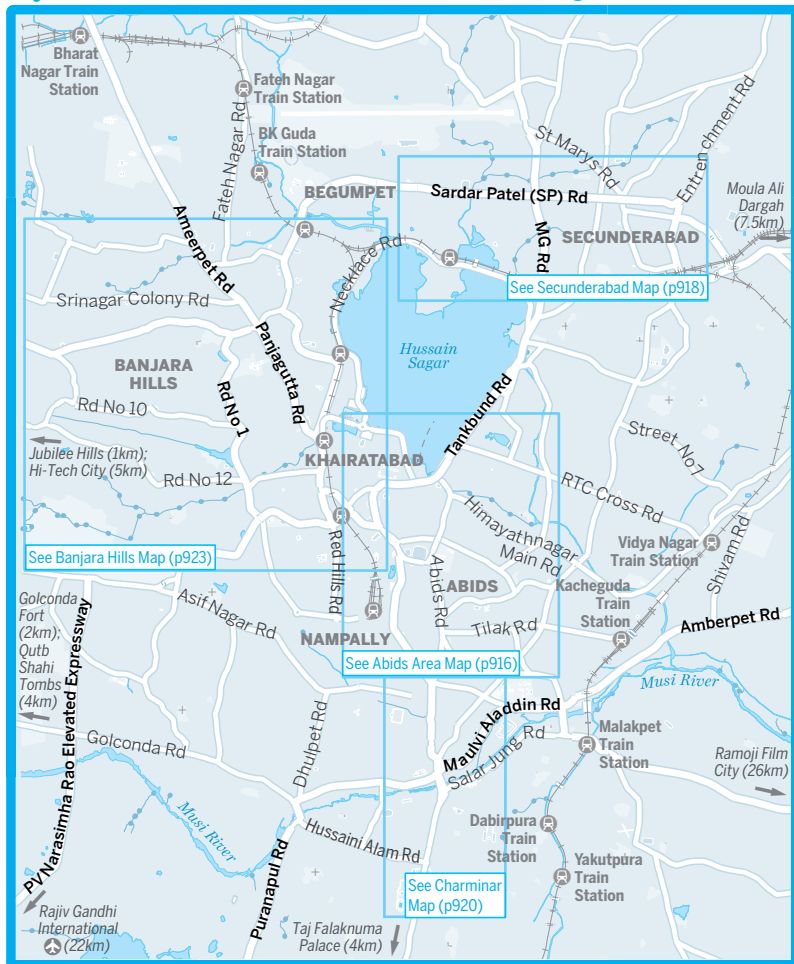

(Map p920; www.salarjungmuseum.in; Salar Jung Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/150, camera ₹50; ☀10am-5pm Sat-Thu) This vast and varied collection was put together by Mir Yousuf Ali Khan (Salar Jung III), who was briefly grand vizier to the seventh nizam, Osman Ali Khan (r 1911–48), before devoting his large fortune to amassing Asian and European art and craftworks. The 40-plus galleries include early South Indian bronzes and wood and stone sculptures, Indian miniature paintings, European fine art, historic manuscripts, a room of jade and another room of very fancy walking sticks.

A special highlight is the remarkable Veiled Rebecca by 19th-century Italian sculptor Benzoni. The museum is very popular, and can be bedlam on Sundays.

HEH The Nizam's Museum

MUSEUM

(Purani Haveli; Map p920; off Dur-e-Sharwah Hospital Rd; adult/child ₹80/15, camera ₹150; ☀10am-5pm Sat-Thu) The Purani Haveli was a home of the sixth nizam, Mahbub Ali Khan (r 1869–1911). He was rumoured to have never worn the same thing twice: hence the 54m-long, two-storey Burmese teak wardrobe. Much of the museum, occupying just one wing of the long palace compound, is devoted to personal effects of the seventh nizam, Osman Ali Khan, including his silver cradle, gold-burnished throne and lavish Silver Jubilee gifts.

Mecca Masjid

MOSQUE

(Map p920; Shah Ali Banda Rd, Charminar; ☉ 4.30am-9pm) This mosque is one of the world's largest, with 10,000 men praying here at major Muslim festivals, and also one of Hyderabad's oldest buildings, begun in 1617 by the city's founder Mohammed Quli

Qutb Shah. Women are not allowed inside the main prayer hall, and male tourists are unlikely to be let in either (they can look through the railings). Female tourists, even with headscarves, may not even be allowed into the vast courtyard if their clothing is judged too skimpy or tight.

Several bricks embedded above the prayer hall's central arch are made with soil from Mecca, hence the mosque's name. An enclosure alongside the courtyard contains the tombs of several Hyderabad nizams.

Badshahi Ashurkhana

MUSLIM SACRED SITE

(Map p920; High Court Rd) The 1594 Badshahi Ashurkhana (literally 'royal house of mourning') was one of the first structures built by the Qutb Shahs in their new city of Hyderabad. In a courtyard set back from the road, its walls are practically glowing with intricate, brightly coloured tile mosaics. The Ashurkhana is packed during Muharram, as well as on Thursdays, when local Shiites gather to commemorate the martyrdom of Hussain Ibn Ali. Visitors should remove shoes and dress modestly (including a headscarf for women).

Abids Area*State Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p916; Public Gardens Rd, Nampally; admission ₹10, camera/video ₹100/500; ☉10.30am-4.30pm Sat-Thu, closed 2nd Sat of month) This sprawling museum, in a fanciful 1920 building constructed by the seventh nizam as a playhouse for one of his daughters, hosts a collection of important archaeological finds as well as an exhibit on the region's Buddhist history, with relics of the Buddha himself. There's also an interesting decorative-arts gallery, where you can learn about Bidriware inlaid metalwork and kalamkari textile painting, plus a bronze sculpture gallery and a 4500-year-old Egyptian mummy

British Residency

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Koti Women's College; Koti) This palatial Palladian residence, built in 1803-06 by James Achilles Kirkpatrick, the British Resident (official East India Company representative) in Hyderabad, features in William Dalrymple's brilliant historical love story White Mughals. It's sadly dilapidated today, though long-mooted restoration plans may at last be coming to fruition. If you enter the grounds a caretaker will probably offer to open up the grand original building (tip ₹50 to ₹100 when you've finished).

Kirkpatrick became enchanted by Hyderabad courtly culture, converted to Islam and married Khair-un-Nissa, a teenage relative of the Hyderabad prime minister. The Residency and its extensive gardens became the Osmania University College for Women, known as Koti Women's College, in 1949. Inside the grand classical portico, you can admire the Durbar Hall, with Islamic geometric designs on its high ceiling above the chandeliers and classical columns, and the elaborate curving staircase behind. In the overgrown gardens to the southwest you'll find a British cemetery and, if you're lucky, the surviving entrance to the Residency's zenana (women's quarters) and a model of the Residency building made by Kirkpatrick for Khair-un-Nissa – though our guide refused to venture beyond the cemetery for fear of snakes! Detours (p918) does fascinating White Mughals tours which include the Residency.

Birla Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p916; ☉7am-noon & 2-9pm) The ethereal Birla Mandir, constructed of white Rajasthan marble in 1976, graces Kalabhad (Black Mountain), one of two rocky hills overlooking Hussain Sagar. Dedicated to Venkateshwara, it's a popular Hindu worship centre, with a relaxed atmosphere, and affords magnificent views over the city, especially at sunset.

Birla Modern Art Gallery

MUSEUM

(Map p916; www.birlasciencecentre.org; Naubat Pahad Lane, Adarsh Nagar; admission ₹50; ☉10.30am-6pm) This skilfully curated collection of modern and contemporary art is the best of its kind in South India. Look for paintings by superstars Jogen Chowdhury, Tyeb Mehta and Arpita Singh. FORT

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, sound-and-light show adult ₹70-130; ☉9am-5pm, English-language sound-and-light show 6.30pm Nov-Feb, 7pm Mar-Oct) It was the Qutb Shahs in the 16th century who made Golconda into the massive fortress whose substantial ruins we see today. The mighty citadel is built on a 120m-high granite hill, surrounded by crenellated ramparts of large masonry blocks, with another ring of crenellated ramparts, 11km in perimeter, outside it. Morning visits are best for relative peace and quiet.

By the time of the Qutb Shahs, Golconda fort had already existed for at least three centuries under the Kakatiyas and Bahmani sultanate, and was already famed for its diamonds, which were mostly mined in the Krishna River valley, but cut and traded here. The Qutb Shahs moved to their new city of Hyderabad in 1591, but maintained Golconda as a citadel until the Mughal emperor Aurangzeb took it in 1687 after a year-long siege, ending Qutb Shahi rule.

Golconda's massive gates were studded with iron spikes to obstruct war elephants. Within the fort, a series of concealed glazed earthenware pipes ensured a reliable water supply, while the ingenious acoustics guaranteed that even the smallest sound from the entrance would echo across the fort complex.

Guides charge at least ₹600 per 90-minute tour. Small ₹20 guide booklets are also available. Inside the citadel gate, an anticlockwise circuit leads through gardens and up past mostly minor buildings to the top of the hill, where you'll find the functioning Hindu Jagadamba Mahakali Temple and the three-storey durbar hall, with fine panoramas. You then descend to the old palace buildings in the southeastern part of the fort and return to the entrance passing the elegant three-arched Taramati Mosque.

Golconda is about 10km west from Abids or the Charminar: autorickshaws charge

★ Qutb Shahi Tombs

HISTORIC SITE

(Tolichowki; adult/child ₹10/5, camera/video ₹20/100; ☀ 9.30am-5.30pm Sat-Thu) These 21 magnificent domed granite tombs, with almost as many mosques, sit serenely in landscaped gardens about 2km northwest of Golconda Fort, where many of their occupants spent large parts of their lives. Seven of the eight Qutb Shahi rulers were buried here, as well as family members and a few physicians, courtesans and other favourites. An exhibition near the entrance provides helpful explanatory information.

The tombs' great domes are mounted on cubical bases, many of which have beautiful colonnades and delicate lime stucco ornamentation. You could easily spend half a day taking photos and wandering in and out of the mausoleums. Among the finest is that of Mohammed Quli, the founder of Hyderabad, standing 42m tall on a platform near the edge of the complex, with views back towards Golconda.

The tombs are an easy walk from Golconda, or about ₹30 by autorickshaw. Infrequent buses 80S and 142K also link the two places.

Paigah Tombs

HISTORIC SITE

(Santoshnagar; ☀ 9.30am-5pm) FREE The aristocratic Paigah family, purportedly descendants of the second Caliph of Islam, were fierce loyalists of the nizams, serving as statespeople, philanthropists and generals under and alongside them. The Paigahs' necropolis, in a quiet neighbourhood 4km southeast of Charminar, is a small compound of exquisite mausoleums made of marble and lime stucco. It's signposted down a small lane opposite Owaisi Hospital on the Inner Ring Rd.

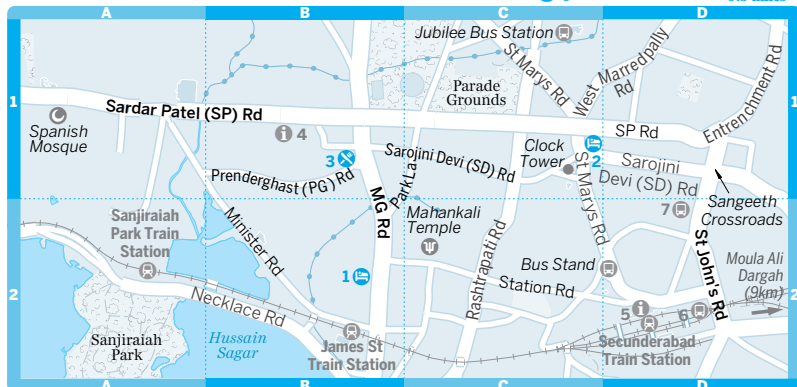

The complex contains 27 carved-marble tombs in enclosures with delicately carved walls and pillars, stunning geometrically patterned filigree screens and, overhead, tall, graceful turrets. At the western end a handsome mosque is reflected in its large ablutions pool.

Moula Ali Dargah

MUSLIM SACRED SITE

Out on the city's northeastern fringes, the dramatic rock mound of Moula Ali hill is a wonderful change of pace, with distant views, cool breezes and at the top, up 500 steps, a dargah (shrine to a Sufi saint) containing what's believed to be a handprint of Ali, the son-in-law of the Prophet Mohammed. The dargah's reputed healing properties make it a pilgrimage site for the sick.

Moulā Ali hill is 9km northeast of Secunderabad – around ₹110 one-way by autorickshaw, or take bus 16A or 16C from Rathfile bus stand to ECIL bus stand, and an autorickshaw 2km from there.

Buddha Statue & Hussain Sagar MONUMENT (Map p916; boats adult/child ₹55/35) Set picturesquely on a plinth in the Hussain Sagar, a lake created by the Qutb Shahs, is one of the world's largest free-standing stone Buddha statues (18m tall). It's an especially magnificent sight when illuminated at night.

Frequent boats make the 30-minute return trip to the statue from both Eat Street (Map p923; 🚢 launches 3-8pm) and popular Lumbini Park (Map p916; admission ₹10; 🕒 9am-9pm). The Tankbund Rd promenade, on the eastern shore of Hussain Sagar, has great views of the statue.

Muharram

MUSLIM

(☀Sep/Oct) Muharram is the first month of the Islamic year and commemorates the martyrdom of Mohammed's grandson Hussain with mass mourning and all-night sermons. Black-clad Shiite throngs gather at Badshahi Ashurkhana, and a massive Old City procession on the 10th day draws crowds from around the region.

Sleeping

The inner-city Abids area is convenient for Nampally station and the Old City. For more space and greenery head to middle-class Banjara Hills, about 4km northwest of Abids. At top-end hotels good discounts are often available from the rack rates quoted here.

It adds up to good value, with helpful reception, free wi-fi and air-con in all rooms.

KITSCHABAD

Along with Hyderabad's world-class sights are some attractions that err on the quirky side.

Ramoji Film City (www.ramojifilmcity.com; adult/child from ₹800/700; ☀8.30am-10pm)

The Telangana/Andhra Pradesh film industry, 'Tollywood', is massive, and so is the 6.7-sq-km Film City, where films and TV shows in Telugu, Tamil and Hindi, among others, are made. The day-visit ticket includes a bus tour, funfair rides and shows. Take bus 206 or 209 from Koti Women's College (1½ hours, 30km) or a Telangana Tourism (p918) tour.

Sudha Cars Museum (www.sudhacars.com; Bahadurpura; Indian/foreigner ₹50/200, camera ₹50; ☀9.30am-6.30pm) The eccentric creations of auto-enthusiast K Sudhakar include cars in the shape of a cricket bat, hamburger and snooker table, among other wacky designs. And they all work. The museum is 3km west of Charminar.

The GreenPark (Map p923; ☎040-66515151; www.hotelgreenpark.com; Ameerpet Rd, Greenlands; s/d incl breakfast from ₹5630/6750; 🍷🍷🍷), under the same ownership next door, is a notch lower in style and comfort but still a worthy alternative.

🍴 Eating

In the early evenings, look out for mirchi bhajji (chilli fritters), served at street stalls with tea. The Hyderabad style is famous: chillis are stripped of their seeds, stuffed with tamarind, sesame and spices, dipped in chickpea batter and fried.

Per local usage, we use the term 'meal' instead of 'thali'.

🍴 Old City & Abids Area

Govind Dosa

STREET FOOD $

(Map p920; Charkaman; snacks ₹30-60; ☀6am-noon) Probably the city's most famous breakfast cook, cheery Govind's street-corner stand is permanently surrounded by happy Hyderabadis savouring his delicious dosas and idlis (spongy fermented rice cakes), including unusual dosas with upma (a seasoned semolina porridge) and tawa idlis topped with chilli powder and spices.

Kamat Andhra Meals

ANDHRA $

(Map p916; Troop Bazar; meals ₹90; ☀11am-4pm & 7-11pm) This small, simple restaurant does authentic and delicious veg Andhra meals on banana leaves, topped up till your tongue falls off from the heat. In the same compound, the Maharashtrian Kamat Jwar Bhakri (Map p916; meals ₹130-180; ☀noon-4pm & 7-11pm) and the South and North Indian Kamat Restaurant (Map p916; meals & mains ₹75-180; ☀7am-10.30pm) are also good. No relation to Kamat Hotel.

Nimrah

CAFE $

(Map p920; Charminar; baked goods ₹2-10; ☀5.30am-11pm) Irani cafes – old-fashioned teahouses founded by 19th-century Persian immigrants and serving super-thick, super-sweet Irani chai – are an endangered breed in India these days, but Hyderabad still has a goodly number. Nimrah, almost underneath the Charminar's arches, has a particularly tasty range of Irani baked goods to accompany your chai pick-me-up.

The classic dunk is Osmania biscuits (melt-in-the-mouth shortbreads). Nimrah also offers dil khush ('happy heart') and dil pasand, types of pie/pastry with sweet coconut-y fillings, and more.

HYDERABAD CUISINE

Hyderabad has a food culture all its own and Hyderabadis take great pride and pleasure in it. It was the Mughals who brought the tasty biryanis, skewer kebabs and haleem (a thick Ramadan soup of pounded, spiced wheat with goat, chicken or beef, and lentils). Mutton (goat or lamb) is the classic biryani base, though chicken, egg and vegetable biryanis are plentiful too. Biryanis come in vast quantity and one serve may satisfy two people.

If you're in Hyderabad during Ramadan (known locally as Ramzan), look out for the clay ovens called bhattis. You'll probably hear them before you see them. Men gather around, taking turns to vigorously pound haleem inside purpose-built structures. Come nightfall, the serious business of eating begins. The taste is worth the wait.

Andhra cuisine, found in Telangana as well as Andhra Pradesh, is more curry- and pilau-based, often with coconut and/or cashew flavours, and famous across India for its delicious spicy hotness. Vegetarians are well catered for, but you'll find plenty of fish, seafood and meat dishes too.

★ Hotel Shadab

HYDERABADI $$

(Map p920; High Court Rd, Charminar; mains ₹140-300; ☺noon-11.30pm) This hopping restaurant, packed with Old City families and good vibes, is the capital of biryani, kebabs and mutton and, during Ramadan, haleem (thick soup of spiced wheat with goat, chicken or beef). Head upstairs to the air-con room.

★ Shah Ghouse Cafe

HYDERABADI $$

(Shah Ali Banda Rd; mains ₹100-190; ☺noon-2am) During Ramadan, Hyderabadis line up for Shah Ghouse's famous haleem, and at any time of year the biryani is near-perfect. Don't expect ambience: just good, hard-working, traditional food, in a no-frills upstairs dining hall.

Dakshina Mandapa

SOUTH INDIAN $$

(Map p916; Taj Mahal Hotel, Abids Rd; mains & meals ₹160-195; ☺7am-10.30pm) A beloved spot for South Indian vegetarian meals. You may have to wait for a lunch table, but order the South Indian thali and you'll be brought heap after heap of rice and refills of exquisite, burn-your-tongue-off veg dishes. The air-con room upstairs does a very good ₹300 lunch buffet (noon to 3pm).

Kamat Hotel

SOUTH INDIAN $$

(Map p916; Secretariat Rd, Saifabad; meals ₹95-170, mains ₹150-200; ☺8am-10pm) Each Kamat is slightly different, but they're all good for South Indian fare. There's another branch (Map p916; Nampally Station Rd; meals & mains ₹70-165; ☺7am-10pm) near Nampally station.

Gufaa

NORTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p916; Ohri's Cuisine Court, Bashirbagh Rd; mains ₹250-600; ☺11am-3.30pm & 7-11.30pm) Gufaa ('Cave') has faux-rock walls, zebra-striped furniture and a Bollywood oldies soundtrack. And it serves Peshawari food (good veg and nonveg kebabs and curries). Somehow it all works, and even the dhal here is special. A good drinks menu too.

✂ Banjara Hills & Jubilee Hills★ Southern Spice

SOUTH INDIAN $$

(Map p923; Rd No 3; mains ₹170-500, thalis ₹210-320; ☺noon-3.30pm & 7-10.30pm) Southern Spice does a fine Andhra meal as well as specialities from all over the south, in several cosy, warm-toned rooms. It's a good place to sample typical Andhra dishes such as natu kodi iguru ('country chicken') or chapa pulusu, a tasty, spicy fish dish.

Chutneys

SOUTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p923; Shilpa Arcade, Rd No 3; mains & meals ₹240-300; ☺7am-11pm) Chutneys is famous for its South Indian meals and all-day dosas, idlis and uttapams. Its dishes are low on chilli, so you can get the full 'Andhra meals' experience without the pain. It's a bustling place with teams of purple-shirted waiters.

★ SO

ASIAN, MEDITERRANEAN $$$

(☎040-23558004; www.notjustso.com; Aryan's, Rd No 92, near Apollo Hospital, Jubilee Hills; mains ₹375-625; ☺noon-11pm; 📶) On a quiet Jubilee Hills rooftop, with candles, loungy play-ists and sugarcane and banana plants, SO is one of the most atmospheric eating spots in town. And the pan-Asian and Mediterranean dishes are exquisite. Downstairs are the highly popular Little Italy (☎23558001; www.littleitaly.in; mains ₹350-600; ☺noon-3pm & 7-11pm) and MOB (p924). Fusion 9

CONTINENTAL $$$

(Map p923; ☎040-65577722; www.fusion9.in; Rd No 1; mains ₹550-975; ☺12.30-3.30pm & 7-11.30pm) Soft lighting and cosy decor set off oven-roasted seabass or Moroccan veg tagine with lemon couscous. One of the best international menus in town. Downstairs, Deli 9 (Map p923; snacks ₹40-230; ☺9.30am-10.30pm; 📶) has quiches, cakes, crepes and free wi-fi.

Firdaus

INDIAN $$$

(Map p923; ☎040-66662323; Taj Krishna, Rd No 1; mains ₹500-1100; ☺12.30-3pm & 7.30-11.45pm) For a refined evening of top-class Hyderabad and other dishes to the strains of live ghazals (classical Urdu love songs, accompanied by harmonium and tabla), book a table at elegant Firdaus. It even serves haleem outside Ramadan.

Barbeque Nation

INDIAN $$$

(Map p923; ☎040-64566692; www.barbeque-nation.com; ANR Centre, Rd No 1; veg/nonveg lunch ₹620/745, dinner ₹940/1060; ☺noon-3.30pm & 6.30-10.30pm) All-you-can-eat kebabs, curries, salads and desserts in unpretentious surroundings, with many veg and nonveg options. A great-value place to come when you're hungry! Prices go up ₹150 for Sunday lunch, and down ₹240 for Monday and Tuesday dinner and before 7pm any night.

Paradise

HYDERABADI $$

(Persis; Map p918; www.paradisefoodcourt.com; cnr SD & MG Rds; biryani ₹220-285; ☎11.30am-11pm) Paradise is synonymous with biryani in these parts. The main, Secunderabad location has five different dining areas. No need to pay the 20% surcharge for the air-con rooms: the 1st-floor 'roof garden' is bright, airy and attractive, with whirring fans.

There's a large, modern branch (Map p916; ☎040-66661188; NTR Gardens; mains ₹240-500; ☎11am-11pm) closer to Abids and Banjara Hills, though we found the biryani there a bit less flavoursome.

Drinking & Entertainment

Where nightspots charge admission, a percentage is usually redeemable against drinks or food. The Deccan Chronicle, Times of India and the entertaining www.fulllhyderabad.com have 'what's on' information.

★ Lamakaan

CAFE, THEATRE

(Map p923; ☎9642731329; www.lamakaan.com; next to JVR Park, Banjara Hills; ☎10am-10.30pm Tue-Sun; ☎) This non-commercial 'inclusive cultural space' is an open centre where artists put on plays, films, music, exhibitions, organic markets and whatever else inspires. It also has a great Irani cafe, with cheap tea and snacks, free wi-fi, artsy types collaborating on the leafy patio and a bulletin board of Hyderabad's most interesting possibilities.

★ MOB

BAR

(www.facebook.com/itismob; Aryan's, Rd No 92, near Apollo Hospital, Jubilee Hills; ☎noon-11.30pm; ☎) A refreshingly mixed-gender, mixed-age crowd flocks to this pub-like space for the simple pleasures of conversation, terrific Belgian beer (tap or bottled) and tasty finger food. You can dine at SO (p922) or Little Italy (p922) in the same building. Packed on Friday and Saturday evenings. It's on a side-road off the south side of KBR National Park, 4km west of Banjara Hills' Rd No 1.

Kismet

CLUB

(Map p923; ☎040-23456789; www.theparkhotels.com/hyderabad; The Park, Somajiguda; admission per couple ₹500-2000; ☎9pm-midnight or later Wed-Sun) The happening nightclub, glamorous Kismet is all curves, with loungey booth seating and a big dance floor. Men won't get past the three ranks of bouncers without female companions. Wednesday and Saturday are electronic dance nights; Friday and Sunday are Bollywood.

Coco's

BAR

(Map p923; ☎040-23540600; 217 Rd No 2, Jubilee Hills; ☎11am-11pm) The rooftop setting, with rustic bamboo couches and thatch roofs, makes Coco's perfect for a cold drink on a balmy evening. There's live blues and soft rock nightly, and decent Indian and Continental food. Enter down a lane beside Café Coffee Day.

Hard Rock Cafe

BAR

(Map p923; GVK One Mall, Rd No 1, Banjara Hills; beer/cocktails from ₹210/370; ☎noon-11.30pm) With the standard Hard Rock recipe of stars' guitars and pub grub, this is a warm and relaxed place for a drink and bite. There's usually a live band at 9pm Thursdays.

10 Downing Street

BAR

(Map p923; www.10downingstreetindia.com; Greenlands Rd, My Home Tycoon department store rear yard; admission after 9pm men/women ₹1200/free; ☎11.30am-midnight) Lively and perennially popular, IODS has 'typical English pub' decor of wood panelling and leather sofas, plus a small space for dancing to different music nightly – retro Friday, club Saturday, Bollywood Sunday, and so on. The bar is well stocked and does satisfactory pub and Continental food.

Ravindra Bharathi Theatre

THEATRE

CHARMINAR MARKETS

Hyderabadis and visitors of every stripe flock to the Charminar area's labyrinthine lanes to browse, buy and wander. Patthargatti, the broad avenue leading in from the Musi River, is lined with shops selling clothes (especially wedding outfits), perfumes and Hyderabad's famous pearls. Laad Bazar (Map p920), running west from the Charminar, is famed for its sparkling bangle shops: lac bangles, made from a resinous insect secretion and encrusted with colourful beads or stones, are a Hyderabad speciality. In Laad Bazar you'll also find perfumers, wedding goods and fabrics.

Laad Bazar opens into Mehboob Chowk (Map p920), a square with a 19th-century clock tower and mosque, shops selling antiquarian books and antiques, a livestock market on its south side, and a market in exotic birds. Chiddi Bazar (Map p920), just southwest.

A short distance north, the Patel Market (Map p920), selling cloth fabrics, cranks into action from around 11am in the back lanes between Patthargatti and Ribak Gunj. Further north again and on the other side of Patthargatti, the wholesale vegetable market Mir Alam Mandi (Map p920) trades in all kinds of fresh stuff from 6.30am to 6.30pm daily.

📍 Getting There & Away

AIR

Hyderabad's massive, modern, efficient Rajiv Gandhi International Airport (📞 040-66546370; www.hyderabad.aero; Shamshabad) is 25km southwest of the city centre. It has direct daily flights to 19 Indian cities (on Air Costa, Air India, IndiGo, Jet Airways or Spice-Jet), Chicago, London and several Southeast Asian and Gulf destinations. Only two domestic airlines have city airline offices:

Air India (Map p916; 📞 040-23389711; HACA Bhavan, Saifabad; 🕒 9.45am-1.15pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat)

Jet Airways (Map p916; 📞 040-39893333; Summit Apts, Hill Fort Rd)

BUS

The main terminal is the 74-platform Mahatma Gandhi bus station (MGBS, Imlibun Bus Station; Map p920; 📞 040-24614406; 🕒 advance booking offices 8am-10.30pm) near Abids. Air-con services by the TSRTC (www.tsrtcbus.in) are quite good; for Karnataka, go with KSRTC near platform 30. Many long-distance services depart in the evening. When booking ahead, women should request seats up front as these are reserved for women.

Secunderabad's Jubilee bus station (Map p918; 📞 040-27802203) is smaller; frequent city buses run here from St Mary's Rd near Secunderabad station. Useful routes from here include:

Bengaluru (ordinary/Volvo AC/sleeper ₹610/1000/1600, 10 to 12 hours, seven daily)

Vijayawada (non-AC/AC ₹310/450, five to seven hours, 11 daily)

Mumbai ('express' ₹600, 14 hours, 2pm)

TRAIN

Secunderabad, Nampally (officially called Hyderabad Deccan), and Kacheguda are Hyderabad's three major train stations. Most through trains stop at Kacheguda.

The reservation complexes at Nampally (Map p916; 📞 040-27829999; 🕒 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun) and Secunderabad (Rathifile; Map p918; St John's Rd; 🕒 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun), both in separate buildings away from the stations, have foreign-tourist-quota counters (bring passport and visa photocopies, along with originals). For inquiries and PNR status, phone 📞 139.

There are around 20 trains a day each to Warangal (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹170/535/735, 2½ hours) and Vijayawada (₹190/495/720, six hours), mostly from Secunderabad.

📍 Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

Bus

The TSRTC's Pushpak air-conditioned bus service runs between about 4am and 11pm to and from various stops in the city, including AC Guards (Map p923; ₹200, two or three buses hourly) and Secretariat (Map p916; ₹200, about hourly), both about 1.5km from Abids, Paryatak Bhavan (Map p923) on Greenlands Rd (₹250, about hourly), and Secunderabad (Map p918; ₹250, twice hourly). The trip takes about one hour. Contact TSRTC (Telangana State Road

Taxi

The prepaid taxi booth is on the lowest level of the terminal; ignore touts on the way down. Fares to Abids or Banjara Hills are ₹600 to ₹700.

Meru Cabs (☎ 040-44224422) and Sky Cabs (☎ 040-49494949) 'radio taxis', with counters in the arrivals area, charge ₹21 per kilometre (₹26 at night), which works out much the same. Meru and Sky also provide reliable service for trips within the city.

AUTORICKSHAW

Official fares are ₹20 for the first 1.6km, then ₹11 for each additional kilometre, with a 50% surcharge between 11pm and 5am. But most drivers won't use their meters so you must negotiate and will probably end up paying ₹20 to ₹25 per kilometre (more after dark).

BUS

City buses (₹6 to ₹12 for most rides) run everywhere but you'll usually need local help in finding the right stop and right bus; www.hyderabad-busroutes.com gives routes with some stops mapped, but can be inaccurate.

CAR

Arrange car hire through your hotel. The going rate for a small AC car such as an Indica, with a driver, is ₹1000 to ₹1200 per day for city sightseeing (eight hours/80km maximum), and ₹2800 to ₹3200 per day for out-of-town trips (up to 300km).

METRO RAIL

Hyderabad Metro Rail (www.hmr.gov.in), a 72km rapid transit network being phased into operation between 2015 and 2017, will make getting around the city a whole lot easier! Trains will run on elevated tracks above Hyderabad's streets, with 66 stations on three lines.

SELECTED HYDERABAD CITY BUS ROUTES

127K	Koti Bus Stop–Jubilee Hills via GPO Abids, Public Gardens, Rd Nos 1 & 12 (Banjara Hills); frequent

TRAIN

MMTS suburban trains (www.mmtstraintimings.in; fares ₹5-11) are convenient for the three main stations, but infrequent (every 30 to 45 minutes). There are two routes: Hyderabad (Nampally) to Lingampalli (northwest of Banjara Hills) stops at Necklace Rd, Begumpet and Hi-Tech City; Falaknuma (south of Old City) to Lingampalli stops at Kacheguda and Secunderabad stations and joins the Hyderabad–Lingampalli line at Begumpet.

TELANGANA

The most interesting spots to visit in the newly created state of Telangana, outside its capital Hyderabad, lie in and around the state's second city, Warangal.

Bhongir

Most Hyderabad–Warangal buses and trains stop at Bhongir, 60km from Hyderabad. It's worth stopping to climb the fantastical-looking 12th-century Chalukyan hill fort (admission ₹3, camera ₹10; ☀️ 10am-5pm), sitting on what resembles a gargantuan stone egg right above the bus station. You can leave backpacks at the ticket office.

Warangal

📞 0870 / POP 620,000

Warangal was the capital of the Kakatiya kingdom, which ruled most of present-day Telangana and Andhra Pradesh from the 12th to early 14th centuries. Telangana Tourism (📞 0870-2571339; opposite Indian Oil, Nakkalgutta, Hanumakonda; ☀️ 10.30am-5pm Mon-Sat) is helpful.

👁️ Sights

Fort

FORT

Warangal's fort, on the southern edge of town, was a massive construction with three circles of walls (the outermost 7km around). Most of it is now either fields or buildings, but at the centre is a huge, reassembled Shaivite Svayambhu Temple (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀️ 9am-6pm), with handsome, large torana gateways at its cardinal points. An autorickshaw from Warangal station costs around ₹300 return.

The ticket also covers the Kush Mahal (Shitab Khan Mahal), a 16th-century royal hall 400m west. Almost opposite the Svayambhu entrance is a park (admission ₹10; ☀️ 7am-7pm) containing the high rock Ekashila Gutta, topped by another Kakatiya temple overlooking a small lake.

1000-Pillared Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ 6am-6pm) Six kilometres northwest of Warangal station in the adjoining town of Hanumakonda (Hanamkonda), the 1000-Pillared Temple, constructed in 1163, is a fine example of Kakatiya architecture and sculpture, in a leafy setting. Unusually, the cross-shaped building has shrines to the sun god Surya (to the right as you enter), Vishnu (centre) and Shiva (left). Despite the name, it certainly does not have 1000 pillars. Behind rises Hanumakonda Hill, site of the original Kakatiya capital.

Other ancient temples in Hanumakonda include the lakeside Bhadrakali Temple, 2km southeast of the 1000-Pillared Temple, whose idol of the mother goddess Kali sits with a weapon in each of her eight hands, and the small Siddeshwara Temple on the south side of Hanumakonda Hill.

🛏️ Sleeping & Eating

Vijaya Lodge

HOTEL $

(📞 0870-2501222; Station Rd; s ₹260, d ₹450-700) About 350m from Warangal's train and bus stations, the Vijaya is well organised, with helpful staff. Rooms are borderline dreary, with showers by bucket, but workable. The upper floors are better.

Hotel Ashoka

Getting There & Around

Buses to Hyderabad (₹130 to ₹195, four hours) leave about three times hourly from Hanumakonda bus stand (☎ 9959226056; New Bus Stand Rd) and hourly from Warangal bus stand (☎ 2565595; Station Rd), opposite the train station.

From Warangal several trains daily run to the Hyderabad (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹170/535/735, three hours), Vijayawada (₹190/535/735, three hours) and Chennai (₹375/980/1385, 1½ hours).

Shared autorickshaws (₹15) ply fixed routes around Warangal and Hanumakonda.

Palampet

In lovely green countryside 65km northeast of Warangal, the stunning Ramappa Temple (camera ₹25; ☀ 6am-6pm) FREE, built in 1213, is the outstanding gem of Kakatiya architecture, covered in wonderfully detailed carvings of animals, lovers, wrestlers, musicians, dancers, deities and Hindu legends. Brackets on its external pillars support superb black-basalt carvings of mythical creatures and sinuous women twined with snakes. The large temple tank, Ramappa Cheruvu, 1km south, is popular with migrating birds.

The easiest way to get here is by taxi (around ₹1800 return from Warangal), but buses also run half-hourly from Hanumakonda to Mulugu (₹50, one hour), then a further 13km to Palampet (₹20).

ANDHRA PRADESH

The recently reduced state of Andhra Pradesh stretches 850km along the Bay of Bengal between Tamil Nadu and Odisha, and inland up into the picturesque Eastern Ghats. It's the proud standard-bearer of a long tradition of Telugu language and culture, and is one of India's wealthier states.

Explorers will discover one of India's most visited temples (at Tirumala), some fascinating and remote ancient sites from the earliest days of South Indian Buddhism, and one of the nicest stretches of India's east coast, north of Visakhapatnam – and you'll be able to enjoy the spicily delicious Andhra cuisine everywhere. Andhra's tourism websites are www.aptourism.gov.in and www.aptdc.gov.in.

Vijayawada

☎ 0866 / POP 1.05 MILLION

Centrally located in the new Andhra Pradesh, the commercial and industrial city of Vijayawada, on the north bank of the Krishna River, is to be Andhra's new capital. The state government has ambitious plans to construct a showpiece capital complex encompassing 17 existing villages on the south side of the river, at a cost of over 1 trillion rupees (US$16 billion).

Vijayawada is a good base for visiting some fascinating old Buddhist sites in the lush and green surrounding area. The city is considered by many to be the heart of Andhra culture and language, and its 12th-century Kanaka Durga Temple (Durga Temple Ghat Rd, Indrakeeladri Hill) draws many pilgrims. The 1.3km-long Prakasam Barrage across the Krishna here feeds three irrigation canals which run through the city.

Sights

★ Undavalli Cave Temples HINDU TEMPLE (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ 9am-5pm) Just 6km southwest of downtown Vijayawada, on the south side of the Krishna River, this stunning four-storey cave temple was probably originally carved out of the hillside for Buddhist monks in the 2nd century AD, then converted to Hindu use in the 7th century. The shrines are now empty except those on the third level, one of which houses a huge reclining Vishnu. Three gnome-like stone Vasiṣṭhite gurus or preachers gaze out over the rice paddies from the terrace. Bus 301 (₹20, 20 minutes) runs here every 20 minutes from Vijayawada bus station; autorickshaws ask ₹250 return.

STATE OF GOOD KARMA

Lying at a nexus of major Indian land routes and sea routes across the Bay of Bengal, Andhra Pradesh played an important role in the early history of Buddhism. Andhra and Telangana have about 150 known Buddhist stupas, monasteries, caves and other sites. They speak of a time when Andhra Pradesh, or 'Andhradesa', was a hotbed of Buddhist activity, when Indian monks set off for Sri Lanka and Southeast Asia to spread the Buddha's teachings, and monks came from far and wide to learn from renowned Buddhist teachers.

Andhradesa's Buddhist culture lasted around 1500 years from the Buddha's own lifetime in the 6th century BC. The dharma really took off in the 3rd century BC under the Mauryan emperor Ashoka, who dispatched monks across his empire to teach and construct stupas enshrining relics of the Buddha. (Being near these was thought to help progress on the path to enlightenment.)

After Ashoka's death in 232 BC, succeeding rulers of central Andhra Pradesh, the Satavahanas and then the Ikshvakus, continued to support Buddhism. At their capital Amaravathi, the Satavahanas adorned Ashoka's stupa with elegant decoration. They built monasteries across the Krishna Valley and exported the dharma through their sophisticated maritime network. It was under Satavahana rule that Nagarjuna, considered the progenitor of Mahayana Buddhism, is believed to have lived, in the 2nd or 3rd centuries AD. The monk, equal parts logician, philosopher and meditator, wrote several ground-breaking works that shaped Buddhist thought.

Today, even in ruins, you can get a sense of how large some of the stupas were, how expansive the monastic complexes, and of how the monks lived, sleeping in caves and fetching rainwater from stone-cut cisterns. Many of the sites have stunning views across seascapes or countryside. The complexes at Nagarjunakonda (p931) and Amaravathi (p931) have good infrastructure and helpful museums on-site. For a bit more adventure, head out from Vijayawada to Guntupalli (p933) or Bhattiprolu, or from Visakhapatnam to Thotlakonda (p935), Bavikonda (p935) and Sankaram (p935).

Around Vijayawada

Amaravathi

Amaravathi, 43km west of Vijayawada, was the earliest centre of Buddhism in the southern half of India. India's biggest stupa (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀7am–7pm), 27m high and 49m across, was constructed here in the 3rd century BC. Amaravathi flourished as a capital of the Satavahana kingdom which ruled from Andhra across the Deccan for four or five centuries, becoming the fountainhead of Buddhist art in South India. All that remains of the stupa now are its circular base and a few parts of the surrounding stone railing. The great hemispherical dome is gone – but the next-door museum (admission ₹5; ☀9am–5pm Sat–Thu) has a model of the stupa and some of the intricate marble carvings depicting the Buddha's life with which the Satavahanas covered and surrounded it. A section of reconstructed stone railing gives you an idea of the stupa's massive scale.

About 1km away, on the edge of town, is the 20m-high Dhyana Buddha statue, erected on the site where the Dalai Lama spoke in 2006.

Bus 301 from Vijayawada bus station runs to Amaravathi (₹60, two hours) every 20 minutes, via Unduvalli, through some lovely countryside.

Eluru

The city of Eluru, 60km east of Vijayawada on the road and railway to Visakhapatnam, is the jumping-off point for the remote old Buddhist site of Guntupalli (p933) and the Dhamma Vijaya meditation centre at Vijayarai. Buses depart Eluru for Vijayarai (₹15, 20 minutes) half-hourly.

Dhamma Vijaya

MEDITATION

(☎9441449044; www.dhamma.org; Eluru-Chintalapudi Rd, Vijayarai) Monthly intensive 10-day vipassana silent meditation courses are offered in lush palm- and cocoa-forested grounds; apply in advance. Payment is by donation.

Nagarjunakonda

A road trip of about 180km west from Vijayawada or 170km southeast from Hyderabad, followed by a 45-minute boat trip over Nagarjuna Sagar reservoir, brings you to the unique island of Nagarjunakonda, peppered with ancient Buddhist structures. Until 1960, when the big Nagarjunasagar Dam was built on the Krishna River, the island was the top of a hill in the Krishna valley. The Ikshvaku Dynasty had its capital here in the 3rd and 4th centuries AD, when the area was probably the most important Buddhist centre in South India, with some 30 monasteries nearby. Excavations in the 1950s, in anticipation of the dam, unearthed stupas, viharas (monasteries), chaitya-grihas (prayer halls with stupas), mandapas (pillared pavilions) and many outstanding white-marble sculptures. The finds were reassembled on Nagarjunakonda.

👁 Sights & Activities

Nagarjunakonda Museum

MUSEUM

(incl monuments Indian/foreigner ₹10/105; ☀9am–4pm Sat–Thu) The thoughtfully laid-out Nagarjunakonda Museum has Buddha statues and some superbly detailed carvings depicting the Buddha's lives and local contemporary life. The reassembled remains of several buildings, including stupa bases, walls of monastery complexes and pits for horse sacrifice, are arranged along a 1km path running along the island. The largest stupa, in the Chantasri Chaitya Griha group, contained a bone fragment thought to be from the Buddha himself.

Sri Parvata Arama

MUSEUM

(Buddhavanam) 8km north of the dam is this Buddhism theme park, featuring a recreation of the huge Amaravathi stupa. It has been under construction by the state tourism authorities for several years and was scheduled to open in late 2015. Coming by bus from Hyderabad, alight at Buddha Park.

Dhamma Nagajjuna

MEDITATION

(☎ 9440139329, 9348456780; www.nagajjuna.dhamma.org; Hill Colony) Keeping the Buddha's teachings alive in the region, Dhamma Nagajjuna, 8km north of the dam, offers 10-day vipassana silent meditation courses in charming flower-filled grounds overlooking Nagarjuna Sagar. Apply in advance; payment is by donation. Coming by bus from Hyderabad, alight at Buddha Park.

Hotel Siddhartha

INDIAN $$

(Buddhavanam, Hill Colony; mains ₹110-210; ☀ 6am-11pm) The best food in the Nagarjuna area is at Hotel Siddhartha, where curries, biryanis, fish dishes and lots of snacks are served in an airy pavilion.

📍 Getting There & Away

The easiest way to visit Nagarjunakonda, other than with a private vehicle, is a bus tour from Hyderabad with Telangana Tourism (p918) (₹550), running on weekends only.

Public buses from Hyderabad's Mahatma Gandhi Bus Station run hourly to Hill Colony/Nagarjuna Sagar (₹200, four hours); alight at Pylon and catch an autorickshaw (₹15/100 shared/private) 8km to Vijayapuri South.

Boats (₹100 return) depart for the island from Vijayapuri South, 7km south of the dam, theoretically at 9.30am, 11.30am and 1.30pm, and stay for one or two hours. The first two boats may not go if not enough people turn up, but the 1.30pm boat goes every day and starts back from the island at 4.30pm.

Visakhapatnam

☎ 0891 / POP 1.73 MILLION

Visit Visakhapatnam – also called Vizag (vie-zag) – during the December-to-February holiday season and you'll see domestic tourism in rare form: balloons, fairy floss (cotton candy) and, of course, weddings! This is where Andhra Pradesh comes to have fun by the sea, and the crowds only enhance the area's kitschy atmosphere. The pedestrian promenade along Ramakrishna Beach has appeal, nearby Rushikonda beach is Andhra's best, and the surrounding area contains one of Andhra's most important Hindu temples, several ancient Buddhist sites, and the rural Araku Valley.

The beach-resort vibe exists despite the fact that Vizag is Andhra Pradesh's largest city, famous for steel and its big port.

If you visit in mid-January you may coincide with Visakha Utsav, an annual festival with food stalls on Ramakrishna Beach, exhibitions and cultural events.

GUNTUPALLI

Getting here is a very scenic adventure. The former Buddhist monastic compound (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀️ 10am-5pm), high on a hilltop overlooking a vast expanse of forest and paddy fields, is specially noteworthy for its circular rock-cut chaitya-griha shrine. The cave's domed ceiling is carved with 'wooden beams' designed to look like those in a hut. The chaitya-griha has a well-preserved stupa and, like the monks' dwellings lining the same cliff, a gorgeous arched facade also designed to look like wood. Check out the stone 'beds' in the monks' cells, and the compound's 60-plus votive stupas. The monastery was active from the 2nd century BC to 3rd century AD.

From Eluru, on the Vijayawada-Visakhapatnam road and railway, take a bus 35km north to Kamavarapukota (₹35, one hour, half-hourly), then a local bus or autorickshaw 10km west to Guntupalli. A taxi from Eluru costs around ₹1500 return.

You can reach Rushikonda by bus 900K from the train station or RTC Complex, or a shared autorickshaw up Beach Rd.

Simhachalam Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ 7-11.30am, 12.30-2.30pm, 3.30-7pm) Andhra's second most visited temple (after Tirumala) is a 16km drive northwest of town. Large but tranquil and orderly, it's dedicated to Varahalakshmi Narasimha, a combination of Vishnu's boar and lion-man avatars. A ₹100 ticket will get you to the deity (and a sip of holy water) much quicker than a ₹20 one. Buses 6A and 28 go here from the RTC Complex and train station.

The temple's architecture bears much Odishan influence, including the 13th-century main shrine with its carved stone panels (the lion-man can be seen disembowelling a demon on the rear wall).

Sleeping

Beach Rd is the place to stay, but it's low on inexpensive hotels.

SKML Beach Guest House

TRAIN

Visakhapatnam station, on the western edge of town, is on the main Kolkata-Chennai line. The 12841/12842 Coromandel Express is fastest in both directions – 12½ hours to Chennai (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹425/1115/1590) and 14 hours to Kolkata (₹460/1200/1715). Over 20 daily trains run to Vijayawada (₹255/645/900, seven hours) and about 10 to Bhubaneswar (₹290/750/1050, seven hours). The daily 58538 Visakhapatnam-Koraput Passenger and the 18512 Visakhapatnam-Koraput Intercity Express (Monday and Friday only) head near Chatikona, Onkadelli and Chandoori Sai in Odisha. The reservation centre (☀ 8am-10pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) is 300m south of the main building.

Getting Around

To Visakhapatnam airport, 12km west of downtown, take an autorickshaw (₹250), taxi (₹400), or bus 38 from the RTC Complex (₹15, 30 minutes). The arrivals hall has a prepaid taxi booth.

The train station has a prepaid autorickshaw booth but otherwise you have to negotiate fares. Rides to Ramakrishna Beach should cost ₹60 from the train station and ₹50 from the RTC Complex. Shared autorickshaws run right along Beach Rd from the port at the south end of town to Rushikonda, 10km north of Vizag, and Bheemunipatnam, 25km north, charging between ₹5 (for a 1km hop) and ₹40 (Vizag to Bheemunipatnam): flag down any autorickshaw.

Around Visakhapatnam

Sankaram

Forty kilometres southwest of Vizag, this stunning Buddhist complex (☉8am-5pm) FREE, also known by the names of its two parts, Bojjannakonda and Lingalakonda, occupies a rocky outcrop about 300m long. Used by monks from the 2nd to 9th centuries AD, the outcrop is covered with rock-cut caves, stupas, ruins of monastery structures and reliefs of the Buddha. Bojjannakonda, the eastern part, has a pair of rock-cut shrines with several gorgeous carvings of the Buddha inside and outside. Above sit the ruins of a huge stupa and a monastery. Lingalakonda, at the western end, is piled with tiers of rock-cut stupas, some of them enormous. Both parts afford fabulous views over the surrounding rice paddies.

A car from Vizag costs ₹1400. Or take a bus (₹42, 1½ hours, every half-hour from the RTC Complex) or train (₹35, one hour) to Anakapalle, 3km away, and then an autorickshaw (₹120 return including waiting).

Bavikonda & Thotlakonda

Bavikonda (☉9am-5pm) FREE and Thotlakonda (pedestrian/car ₹5/30; ☉8am-5.30pm) were Buddhist monasteries on scenic hilltop sites north of Vizag that each hosted up to 150 monks, with the help of massive rain-water tanks. The site was excavated in the 1980s and 90s.

The monasteries flourished from around the 3rd century BC to the 3rd century AD, and had votive stupas, congregation halls, chaitya-grihas, viharas and refectories. Thotlakonda has sea views, and Bavikonda has special importance because a relic vessel found in its Mahachaitya stupa contained a piece of bone believed to be from the Buddha himself.

Bavikonda and Thotlakonda are reached from turnoffs 14km and 15km, respectively, from Vizag on Bheemunipatnam road: Bavikonda is 3km off the main road and Thotlakonda 1.25km. Vizag autorickshaw drivers charge around ₹600 return to see both: you can also reach the turnoffs by shared autorickshaw or bus 900K. An autorickshaw from the main road to Bavikonda and back costs ₹100 to ₹150.

Bheemunipatnam

This former Dutch settlement, 25km north of Vizag, is the oldest municipality in mainland India, with bizarre sculptures on the beach, an 1861 lighthouse, an interesting Dutch cemetery, and Bheemli Beach, where local grommets surf not-very-clean waters on crude homemade boards. From Vizag, catch bus 900K or a shared autorickshaw.

Araku Valley

Andhra's best train ride is through the beautiful, lushly forested Eastern Ghats to the Araku Valley, centred on Araku town, 115km north of Vizag. The area is home to isolated tribal communities and known for its tasty organic coffee and lovely green countryside. The 58501 Visakhapatnam Kirandul Passenger train (₹30, four hours) leaves Vizag at 6.50am; train 58502 returns from Araku at 2.50pm. Hourly buses from Vizag (₹70 to ₹105) take 4½ hours, and a taxi day trip costs between ₹3000 to ₹4000. The APTDC runs a variety of tours that all include a tribal dance performance and a visit to the million-year-old limestone Borra Caves (adult/child ₹60/45, camera ₹100; ☉10am-1pm & 2-5pm), 38km before Araku.

At Araku town, the Museum of Habitat (admission ₹10; ☉8am-1.30pm & 2.30-8pm), next to the bus station and 2km east of the train station, has extensive exhibits on eastern Andhra Pradesh's tribal peoples, including mock-ups of hunting, ceremonial and other scenes. Next door, you can sample and buy local coffee and chocolate-covered coffee beans at Araku Valley Coffee House (coffee ₹25-95; ☉8.30am-9pm), and browse tribal crafts at Araku Aadiwasi Arts & Crafts (☉8am-8pm). On Fridays villagers crowd into Araku for the weekly market.

The oddly unfriendly Hotel Rajadhani (☎08936-249580; www.hotelrajadhani.com; ₹₹800, with AC ₹1200; ☎), halfway between the train and bus stations, has clean, reasonably-sized rooms and the Vasundhara Restaurant (☉6am-11pm), serving good Indian meals. The APTDC has two decent hotels: Hill Resort Mayuri (Mayuri; ☎08936-249204; incl breakfast cottage ₹893, ₹1349-2361; ☎) just behind the museum, and Valley Resort (☎08936-249202; ₹ incl breakfast ₹1130-2030, with AC ₹2250; ☎), 1km east, which is favoured by Bollywood film crews.

Tirumala & Tirupati

POP 287,000 (TIRUPATI), 7700 (TIRUMALA)

The holy hill of Tirumala is, on any given day, thronged with tens of thousands of blissed-out devotees, many of whom have made long journeys to see the powerful Lord Venkateshwara here, at his home. Around 60,000 pilgrims come each day, and darshan runs 24/7. The efficient Tirumala Tirupati Devasthanams (TTD; ☎0877-2277777, 0877-2233333; www.tirumala.org) (TTD) brilliantly administers the multitudes, employing 20,000 people to do so. Despite the crowds, a sense of order, serenity and ease mostly prevails, and a trip to the Holy Hill can be fulfilling, even if you're not a pilgrim.

'It is believed that Lord Sri Venkateshwara enjoys festivals', according to the TTD. And so do his devotees: darshan queues during the annual nine-day Brahmotsavam festival (☺ late Sep/early Oct) can run up to several kilometres.

Tirupati, the town at the bottom of the hill, has many hotels and restaurants and is the main transport nexus for Tirumala. You'll find most of your worldly needs around the Tirupati bus station (TP Area) and, 700m west, the train station.

👁 Sights

Venkateshwara Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Devotees flock to Tirumala to see Venkateshwara, an avatar of Vishnu. 'Ordinary darshan' requires a wait of anywhere from two to eight hours in claustrophobic metal cages ringing the temple. Special-entry darshan tickets (₹300) will get you through the queue faster, though you'll still have to brave the cages, which is part of the fun, kind of... Head to the Seeghra Darshan counters at Vaikuntam Queue Complex 1 for these.

There are different hours for special-entry darshan each day: check the website. Upon entry, you'll have to sign a form declaring your faith in Lord Venkateshwara.

Among the many powers attributed to Venkateshwara is the granting of any wish made before the idol at Tirumala. Legends about the hill itself and the surrounding area appear in the Puranas, and the temple's history may date back 2000 years. The main temple is an atmospheric place, though you'll be pressed between hundreds of devotees when you see it. Venkateshwara inspires bliss and love among his visitors from the back of the dark and magical inner sanctum; it smells of incense, resonates with chanting and may make you religious. You'll have a moment to say a prayer and then you'll be shoved out again. Don't forget to collect your delicious ladoo from the counter: Tirumala lados (sweet balls made with chickpea flour, cardamom and dried fruits) are famous across India.

Many pilgrims donate their hair to the deity – in gratitude for a wish fulfilled, or to renounce ego – so hundreds of barbers attend to devotees. Tirumala and Tirupati are filled with tonsured men, women and children.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

The TTD runs vast dormitories (beds free) and guesthouses (₹ ₹50-3000) near the temple in Tirumala, intended for pilgrims. To stay, check in at the Central Reception Office. ## Getting There & Away

It's possible to visit Tirumala on a (very) long day trip from Chennai. The APSRTC runs 51 daily buses direct to Tirumala (₹165 to ₹219, five hours) from Chennai's CMBT bus station.

AIR

Tirupati Airport (www.tirupatiairport.com) is at Renigunta, 14km east of town. Air India (☎ 0877-2283981, airport 0877-2283992; www.airindia.in; Srinivasam Pilgrim Amenities Complex, Tirumala By-Pass Road, Tirumala Bypass Rd; ☎ 9.30am-5.30pm), SpiceJet (☎ 9871803333; www.spicejet.com) and Air Costa (☎ 9949852229; www.aircosta.in) all fly to Hyderabad daily.

BUS

Tirupati's bus station (☎ 0877-2289900) is a wonder of logistics. Useful services, all once or twice hourly, include the following:

Bengaluru (express/Volvo/night Volvo ₹230/400/450, four to six hours)

Chennai (express/Volvo ₹121/222, four hours)

Hyderabad (superluxury/Volvo ₹610/950, 10 to 12 hours)

Vijayawada (express/superluxury ₹350/460, nine hours)

TRAIN

There are numerous daily departures to main destinations; the reservation office (☎ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun) is opposite the station's east end. Typical journey times and fares for sleeper/3AC/2AC:

Bengaluru (₹250/635/885, seven hours)

Chennai (₹140/485/690, three to four hours)

Hyderabad (₹380/1030/1480, 13 hours)

Vijayawada (₹235/635/905, seven hours)

Getting Around

There's a prepaid taxi booth outside the east end of the train station.

BUS

There's a stand for buses to Tirumala opposite the train station, with departures every few minutes. The scenic one-hour trip costs ₹45/82 one-way/return.

WALKING

The TTD has constructed probably the best foot-path in India for pilgrims to walk up to Tirumala. It's about 12km from the start of the path at Alipiri on the north side of Tirupati (₹50 by autorickshaw), and takes three to six hours. You can leave your luggage at Alipiri and it will be transported free to the reception centre. There are rest points along the way, and a few canteens.

Around Tirumala & Tirupati

Chandragiri Fort

This fort 15km west of Tirupati dates back 1000 years, but its heyday came in the late 16th century when the rulers of the declining Vijayanagar Empire, having fled from Hampi, made it their capital. At the heart of a 1.5km-long stout-walled enclosure beneath a rocky hill, the palace area (Indian/foreigner ₹10/100; ☎ 9am-5pm Sat-Thu) contains nice gardens and the Raja Mahal, a heavily restored Vijayanagar palace reminiscent of Hampi buildings, with an interesting museum of bronze and stone sculptures. The upper fort on the hillside is frustratingly out of bounds. Buses for Chandragiri (₹10) leave Tirupati hourly. Prepaid taxis are ₹500 return.

Sri Kalahasti

Sri Kalahasti, 37km east of Tirupati, is known for its important Sri Kalahasteswara Temple and for being, along with Machilipatnam near Vijayawada, a centre for the ancient textile-painting art of kalamkari. Cotton cloth is primed with myrabalam (resin) and cow's milk; figures are drawn with a pointed bamboo stick dipped in fermented jaggery and water; and the dyes are made from cow dung, ground seeds, plants and flowers. You can see artists at work, and buy some of their products, in the Agraharam neighbourhood, 2.5km from the bus stand. Sri Vijayalakshmi Fine Kalamkari Arts (☎ 9441138380; Door No 15-890; ☎ daily) is a 40-year-old family business employing over 60 artists. Dupatta scarves start around ₹1500.

Buses leave Tirupati for Sri Kalahasti every 10 minutes (₹35, one hour); a prepaid taxi is ₹900 return.

Why Go?

A sliver of a coastal state in India's deep south, Kerala is shaped by its layered landscape: almost 600km of glorious Arabian Sea coast and beaches; a languid network of glistening backwaters; and the spice- and tea-covered hills of the Western Ghats. Just setting foot on this swathe of soul-quenching, palm-shaded green will slow your sub-continental stride to a blissed-out amble. Kerala is a world away from the frenzy of elsewhere, as if India had passed through the Looking Glass and become an altogether more laid-back place.

Besides its famous backwaters, elegant houseboats, ayurvedic treatments and delicately spiced, taste-bud-tingling cuisine, Kerala is home to wild elephants, exotic birds and the odd tiger, while vibrant traditions such as Kathakali plays, temple festivals and snake-boat races frequently bring even the smallest villages to life. It's hard to deny Kerala's liberal use of the slogan 'God's Own Country'.

When to Go

Thiruvananthapuram

Dec–Feb Perfect beach and back-water weather. Ernakulathappan Utsavam festival in Kochi.

Apr Kathakali at Kottayam and Kollam festivals, and the elephant procession in Thrissur.

Aug–Oct End of the monsoon period: Onam festival, snake-boat races.

Kerala Highlights

- 1 Cruising in a houseboat or punted canoe through slippery backwaters (p964) from Alappuzha, Kollam or Kottayam
- 2 Spotting wild elephants at Wayanad (p993) amid mountain scenery and epic forest treks
- 3 Watching days slip away at the cliff-top beach resort of Varkala (p950) or having some laid-back beach fun in Kovalam (p946)
- 4 Bedding down in a remote resort and trekking through emerald tea plantations around Munnar (p970)
- 5 Feeling the history and relaxing in a homestay in calm Fort Cochin (p974)
- 6 Experience a performance of Kathakali (p985) or the martial arts kalaripayatt (p985) in Kochi
- 7 Calling in for a cuddle at the ashram (p957) of 'The Hugging Mother' in Amrithapuri
- 8 Exploring unspoilt beaches and theyyam rituals at Kannur (p996) and Bekal (p998)

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

As well as the major state festivals, Kerala has hundreds of temple festivals, theyyams (trance-induced rituals), snake-boat regattas and street parades. A Hundred Festivals for You, a free publication produced by Kochi's Tourist Desk (p986), lists many of them.

Ernakulathappan Utsavam (p979) Eight days of festivities culminating in a parade of elephants, music and fireworks.

Thrissur Pooram (p990) The elephant procession to end all elephant processions.

Nehru Trophy Boat Race (p958) The most popular of Kerala's boat races.

Onam (☺ Aug/Sep) Kerala's biggest cultural celebration, when the entire state celebrates the golden age of mythical King Mahabali for 10 days.

History

Traders have been drawn to the scent of Kerala's spices for more than 3000 years. The coast was known to the Phoenicians, the Romans, the Arabs and the Chinese, and was a transit point for spices from the Moluccas (eastern Indonesia).

The kingdom of Cheras ruled much of Kerala until the early Middle Ages, competing with kingdoms and small fiefdoms for territory and trade. Vasco da Gama's arrival in 1498 opened the floodgates to European colonialism as Portuguese, Dutch and English interests fought Arab traders, and then each other, for control of the lucrative spice trade.

The present-day state of Kerala was created in 1956 from the former states of Travancore, Kochi and Malabar. A tradition of valuing the arts and education resulted in a post-Independence state that is one of the most progressive in India, with the nation's highest literacy rate.

In 1957 Kerala had the first freely elected communist government in the world, which has gone on to hold power regularly since – though the Congress-led United Democratic Front (UDF) has been in power since 2011. Many Malayalis (speakers of Malayalam, the state's official language) work in the Middle East and their remittances play a significant part in the economy. A big hope for the state's future is the relatively recent boom in tourism, with Kerala emerging in the past decade as one of India's most popular new tourist hot spots. According to Kerala Tourism almost 12 million visitors arrived in 2013 – more than double the number of a decade ago – though less than a million of these were foreign tourists.

SOUTHERN KERALA

Thiruvananthapuram (Trivandrum)

📍 0471 / POP 958,000

Kerala's capital – still usually referred to by its colonial name, Trivandrum – is a relatively compact but energetic city and an easy-going introduction to urban life down south. Most travellers merely springboard from here to the nearby beach resorts of Kovalam and Varkala, but Trivandrum has enough sights – including a zoo and cluster of Victorian museums in glorious neo-Keralan buildings – to justify a stay.

👁 Sights & Activities

Zoological Gardens

📍 0471-2115122; adult/child ₹20/5, camera/video ₹50/100; ☀ 9am-5.15pm Tue-Sun) Yann Martel famously based the animals in his Life of Pi on those he observed in Trivandrum's zoological gardens. Shaded paths meander through woodland, lakes and native forest, where tigers, macaques and hippos gather in reasonably large open enclosures.

★ Napier Museum

MUSEUM

(adult/child ₹10/5; ☀ 10am-5pm Tue & Thu-Sun, 1-5pm Wed) Housed in an 1880 wooden building designed by Robert Chisholm, a British architect whose Fair Isle-style version of the Keralan vernacular shows his enthusiasm for local craft, this museum has an eclectic display of bronzes, Buddhist sculptures, temple carts and ivory carvings. The carnivalesque interior is stunning and worth a look in its own right.

🇺🇺🇺 more than ₹5000

Natural History Museum

MUSEUM

(adult/child ₹20/5; ☎10am-4.45pm Tue & Thu-Sun, 1-4.45pm Wed) In the zoological park complex, the Natural History Museum has hundreds of stuffed animals and birds, and a fine skeleton collection.

Shri Chitra Art Gallery

ART GALLERY

(adult/child ₹20/5; ☎10am-4.45pm Tue-Sun) Inside the grounds of the zoo itself, this gallery has paintings by the Rajput, Mughal and Tanjore schools, and portraits by renowned artist Ravi Varma (1848-1906).

★Museum of History & Heritage

MUSEUM

(☎9567019037; www.museumkeralam.org; Park View; adult/child Indian ₹20/10, foreigner ₹200/50, camera ₹25; ☎10am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) In a lovely heritage building within the Kerala Tourism complex, this beautifully presented museum traces Kerala history and culture through superb static displays and interactive audio-visual presentations. Exhibits range from Iron Age implements to bronze and terracotta sculptures, murals, dhulichitra (floor paintings) to recreations of traditional Kerala homes.

Shri Padmanabhaswamy

Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☎inner sanctum 3.30am-7.30pm; Hindus only) Trivandrum's spiritual heart is this 260-year-old temple in the Fort area. The main entrance is the 30m-tall, seven-tier eastern gopuram (gateway tower). In the inner sanctum (Hindus only), the deity Padmanabha reclines on the sacred serpent and is made from over 10,000 salagramam (sacred stones) that were purportedly transported from Nepal by elephant.

The path around to the right of the gate offers good views of the gopuram.

Puthe Maliga Palace Museum

MUSEUM

(Fort; Indian/foreigner ₹15/50, camera/video ₹30/250; ☎9.30am-12.45pm & 3-4.45pm Tue-Sun) The 200-year-old palace of the Travancore maharajas has carved wooden ceilings, marble sculptures and imported Belgian glass. Inside you'll find Kathakali images, an armoury, portraits of maharajas, ornate thrones and other artefacts. Admission includes an informative one-hour guided tour; though you can just visit the outside of the palace grounds (free), where you'll also find the Chitrali Museum (admission ₹50) containing loads of historical memorabilia, photographs and portraits from the Travancore dynasty.

🎓 Courses

Ayushmanbhava Ayurvedic Centre

AYURVEDA, YOGA

(☎0471-2556060; www.ayushmanbhava.com; Pothujanam; massage from ₹800; ☎yoga classes 6.30am) This centre, 5km west of MG Rd, offers massage, daily therapeutic-yoga classes, as well as longer ayurvedic treatments. Also accommodation and a herbal garden.

Margi Kathakali School

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(☎0471-2478806; www.margitheatre.org; Fort) Conducts courses in Kathakali and Kootiattam (traditional Sanskrit drama) for beginner and advanced students. Fees average ₹300 per two-hour class. Visitors can peek at uncostumed practice sessions held from 10am to noon Monday to Friday. It's in an unmarked building behind the Fort School, 200m west of the fort.

CVN Kalari Sangham

MARTIAL ARTS

(☎0471-2474182; www.cvnkalari.in; South Rd; 15-day/1-month course ₹1000/2000) Long-term courses in kalaripayat for serious students (aged under 30) with some experience in martial arts. Training sessions are held Monday to Saturday from 7am to 8.30am.

THE INDIAN COFFEE HOUSE STORY

The Indian Coffee House is a place stuck in time. Its India-wide branches feature old-India prices and waiters dressed in starched white with peacock-style headdresses. It was started by the Coffee Board in the early 1940s, during British rule. In the 1950s the Board began to close down cafes across India, making employees redundant. At this point, the Kerala-born communist leader Ayillyath Kuttari Gopalan Nambiar began to support the workers and founded with them the India Coffee Board Worker's Co-operative Society. The Coffee House has remained ever since, always atmospheric, and always offering bargain snacks and drinks such as Indian filter coffee, rose milk and idlis. It's still run by its employees, all of whom share ownership.

🛏️ Sleeping

There are several decent budget and mid-range hotels along Manjalikulam Rd, north of Central Station Rd.

Princess Inn

HOTEL $

(☎️) 0471-2339150; princess_inn@yahoo.com; Manjalikulam Rd; s/d from ₹450/550, with AC from ₹950/1130; 🏠📺) In a glass-fronted building, the Princess Inn promises a relatively quiet sleep in a central side-street location. It's comfortable, with satellite TV and immaculate bathrooms; it's worth paying a little more for the spacious 'deluxe' rooms.

YMCA International Guesthouse

HOSTEL $

(☎️) 0471-2330059; www.ymcatvm.org; YMCA Rd; s/d ₹790/1130, with AC ₹1270/1690; 🏠) Centrally located, this is a good budget deal, although prices have crept up and it's often full with groups. Rooms are spacious and clean with tiled bathrooms and TV. Both men and women accepted.

Hotel Regency

HOTEL $

(☎️) 0471-2330377; www.hotelregency.com; Manjalikulam Cross Rd; s/d ₹620/1000, with AC ₹1180/1500; 🏠📺) This tidy, welcoming place offers small but spotless rooms with satellite TVs; the deluxe rooms are larger and there's wi-fi available in the lobby.

Greenland Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎️) 0471-2328114; Thampanoor Junction; s/d ₹430/680, with AC ₹900/1130; 🏠) Close to the muted mayhem of the train station and bus stand, pastel-coloured Greenland is an acceptable budget option for the location. Rooms are cleanish but variable so ask to see a few. Official staff demand a hefty two-night advance deposit.

★ Graceful Homestay

HOMESTAY $$

(☎️) 9847249556, 0417-2444358; www.graceful-homestay.com; Pothujanam Rd, Philip's Hill; incl breakfast downstairs s/d ₹1450/1650, upstairs & ste s/d ₹2200/2750; 🏠📺) In Trivandrum's leafy western suburbs, this lovely, serene house set in a couple of hectares of garden is owned by Sylvia and run by her brother Giles. The four rooms are all neatly furnished with individual character and access to kitchen, living areas and balconies. The pick of the rooms has an amazing covered terrace with views overlooking a sea of palms. It's around 6km from the train station and 5km from the airport; call ahead for directions.

★ Varikatt Heritage

HOMESTAY $$

(☎️) 9895239055, 0417-2336057; www.varikatt-heritage.com; Punnen Rd; r/ste incl breakfast ₹4000/5000; 🏠) Trivandrum's most charismatic place to stay is the 250-year-old home of Colonel Roy Kuncheria. It's a wonderful Indo-Saracenic bungalow with four rooms flanked by verandahs facing a pretty garden. Every antique – and the home itself – has a family story attached. Lunch and dinner available (₹500).

Vivanta by Taj

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0417-6612345; www.vivantabytaj.com; Thycaud Hospital Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹9000/11,800; 🍷🍷🍷) The lobby here is bigger than most hotels in town, so the Taj doesn't disappoint with the wow factor. Rooms are sufficiently plush, the lawn and pool area is well-maintained, and there's a spa, 24-hour gym and several good restaurants, including Smoke on the Water poolside grill.

Hyacinth by Sparsa

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0471-2552999; Manorama Rd; d incl breakfast ₹4800-7200, ste ₹10,800; 🍷🍷) A white, modern luxury hotel close to the city centre, Hyacinth is more boutique chic than five-star flash. It features functional, well-appointed rooms, a rooftop pool, a fitness centre and several good restaurants.

Eating

★ Indian Coffee House

INDIAN $

(Maveli Cafe; Central Station Rd; snacks ₹10-60; ☺ 7am-10.30pm) This branch of Indian Coffee House serves its strong coffee and snacks in a crazy red-brick tower that looks like a cross between a lighthouse and a pigeon coop, and has a spiralling interior lined with concrete benches and tables. You have to admire the hard-working waiters.

Ariya Nivaas

INDIAN $

(Manorama Rd; mains ₹30-140, thalis ₹100; ☺ 6.45am-10pm, lunch 11.30am-3pm) Trivandrum's best all-you-can-eat South Indian veg thalis mean Ariya Nivaas is always busy at lunch-time, but service is snappy and the food fresh.

Ananda Bhavan

SOUTH INDIAN $

(☎ 0417-2477646; MG Rd; dishes ₹12-40; ☺ lunch & dinner) Classic cheap veg place specialising in tiffin snacks and dosas.

Azad Restaurant

INDIAN $

(MG Rd; dishes ₹50-200; ☺ 11am-11.30pm) Busy family favourite serving up authentic Kerala fish dishes, like fish molee, and excellent biryanis and tandoori. There's another branch in Press Rd.

Cherries & Berries

CAFE $$

(☎ 0471-2735433; www.cherriesandberries.in; Carmel Towers, Cotton Hill; dishes ₹100-200; ☺ 10am-10pm; 🍷) For serious comfort food, icy air-con and free wi-fi that really works, take a trip east of the centre to Cherries & Berries. The menu includes waffles, mini-pizzas, hot dogs, toasties, good coffee and indulgent chocolate-bar milkshakes – try the Kit Kat shake (₹150).

★ Villa Maya

KERALAN $$$

(☎ 0471-2578901; www.villamaya.in; 120 Airport Rd, Injakkal; starters ₹350-600, mains ₹450-1050; ☺ 11am-11pm) Villa Maya is more an experience than a restaurant. Dining is either in the magnificent 18th-century Dutch mansion or in private curtained niches in the tranquil courtyard garden, where you'll be lulled by lily ponds and trickling fountains. The Kerala cuisine itself is expertly crafted, delicately spiced and beautifully presented. Seafood is a speciality, with dishes like stuffed crab with lobster butter, but there

Buses leave for Kovalam beach (₹15, 30 minutes, every 20 minutes) between 6am and 9pm from the southern end of the East Fort bus stand on MG Rd.

TRAIN

Trains are often heavily booked, so it's worth visiting the reservation office (☎ 139; ☀ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) at the main train station or booking online. While most major trains arrive at Trivandrum Central Station close to the city centre, some express services terminate at Vikram Sarabhai Station (Kochuveli), about 7km north of the city – check in advance.

Within Kerala there are frequent express trains to Varkala (2nd/sleeper/3AC ₹45/140/485, one hour), Kollam (₹55/170/535, 1¼ hour) and Ernakulam (₹95/195/535, 4½ hours), with trains passing through either Alleppey (₹80/170/535, three hours) or Kottayam (₹80/140/485, 3½ hours). There are also numerous daily services to Kanyakumari (2nd/sleeper/3AC ₹80/140/485, three hours).

i Getting Around

The airport (☎ 2501424) is 10km from the city and 15km from Kovalam; take local bus 14 from the East Fort and City Bus stand (₹9). Prepaid taxi vouchers from the airport cost ₹350 to the city and ₹500 to Kovalam.

Autorickshaws are the easiest way to get around, with short hops costing ₹30 to ₹50.

Around Trivandrum

Neyyar Wildlife Sanctuary

Surrounding an idyllic lake created by the 1964 Neyyar Dam 35km north of Trivandrum, the main attraction at this sanctuary is the Lion Safari Park (☎ 0471-2272182, 9744347582; Indian/foreigner ₹200/300; ☀ 9am-4pm Tue-Sun). Admission includes a boat ride across the lake, a lion safari and a visit to a deer park and Crocodile Production Centre (named for Australian legend Steve Irwin). The fertile forest lining the shore is home to gaurs, sambar deer, sloth, elephants, lion-tailed macaques and the odd tiger.

Get here from Trivandrum's KSRTC bus stand by frequent bus (₹34, 1½ hours). A taxi is about ₹1000 return (with two hours' waiting time) from Trivandrum, or ₹1400 from Kovalam. The KTDC office in Trivandrum also runs tours to Neyyar Dam (₹400).

Sivananda Yoga Vedanta Dhanwantari Ashram

Just before Neyyar Dam, the superbly located Sivananda Yoga Vedanta Dhanwantari Ashram (☎ 0471-2273093; www.sivananda.org.in/neyyardam; dm & tent ₹750, tw ₹950-1200, with AC ₹1700), established in 1978, is renowned for its hatha yoga courses. Courses start on the 1st and 16th of each month, run for a minimum of two weeks and include various levels of accommodation and vegetarian meals. Low season (May to September) rates are ₹100 less. There's an exacting schedule (5.30am to 10pm) of yoga practice, meditation and chanting. Bookings essential. Month-long yoga-teacher training and ayurvedic massage courses are also available.

Kovalam

☎ 0471

Once a calm fishing village clustered around its crescent beaches, Kovalam today is Kerala's most developed resort. The main stretch, Lighthouse Beach, is touristy with hotels and restaurants built up along the shore, while Hawah Beach to the north is usually crowded with day trippers heading straight from the taxi stand to the sand. Neither beach is particularly clean, but at less than 15km from the capital it's a convenient place to have some fun by the sea, there's some promising surf, and it makes a good base for ayurvedic treatments and yoga courses.

About 2km further north, Samudra Beach has several upmarket resorts, restaurants and a peaceful but steep beach.

i Dangers & Annoyances

There are strong rips at both ends of Lighthouse Beach that carry away several swimmers every year. Swim only between the flags in the area patrolled by lifeguards and avoid swimming during the monsoon.

👁 Sights & Activities

Vizhinjam Lighthouse

LIGHTHOUSE

(Indian/foreigner ₹10/25, camera/video ₹20/25; ☀ 10am-5pm) Kovalam's most distinguishing feature is the working candy-striped lighthouse at the southern end of the beach. Climb the spiral staircase for vertigo-inducing views up and down the coast.

Kovalam Surf Club

SURFING

(☎ 9847347367; www.kovalamsurfclub.com; Lighthouse Beach; ½ hr lessons ₹1000, board rental half-/full day ₹500/1000) This surf shop and club on Lighthouse Beach offers lessons (from introductory to performance), board rental and a community focus.

Santhigiri

AYURVEDA

(☎ 0471-2482800; www.santhigiriashram.org; Lighthouse Beach Rd; from ₹1100; ☀ 9am-8pm) Recommended massages and ayurvedic treatments.

🛏 Sleeping

Kovalam is packed with hotels and guesthouses, though true budget places are becoming a dying breed in high season. Beachfront properties are the most expensive and sought-after, but look out for smaller places tucked away in the labyrinth of sandy paths behind the beach among the palm groves and rice paddies; they're usually much better value. All places offer big discounts outside the December-January high season; book ahead in peak times.

Green Valley Cottages

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0471-2480636; indira_ravi@hotmail.com; r ₹700-1000) Back amongst the palm trees and overlooking a lily pond, this serene complex feels a little faded but it's quiet and good value. The 22 rooms are simple, but the upper rooms have good views from the front terraces.

Hotel Greenland

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0471-2486442; hotelgreenlandin@yahoo.com; r ₹500-1400) This friendly family-run place has refurbished rooms in a multilevel complex just back from the beach. It's not flash but rooms have lots of natural light and the larger upstairs rooms have balconies.

Dwaraka Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0471-2480411; d ₹500) With regular licks of paint helping to cover up the war wounds of this tired old-timer attached to Rock Cafe, friendly Dwaraka is the cheapest oceanside property.

Paradesh Inn

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9995362952; inn.paradesh@yahoo.com; Avaduthura; d incl breakfast from ₹1800; @ ) Back from the beach high above the palms, tranquil Italian-run Paradesh Inn resembles a white-washed Greek island hideaway. Each of the six fan-cooled rooms has a hanging chair, views from the rooftop, nice breakfasts and satya cooking ('yoga food') for guests.

Treetops

GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 9847912398, 0471-2481363; treetopsofkovalam@yahoo.in; d ₹1500; 📶) Indeed in the treetops high above the beach, this friendly expat-owned place is a peaceful retreat from the action below. The three bright, clean rooms have hanging chairs on the terraces, TVs, hot water, free wi-fi and rooftop views; yoga classes are available. Open year-round; call ahead to book and get directions.

Beach Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 0471-2481937; www.thebeachhotel-kovalam.com; d ₹2850; 📶) Location alert! Below Waves Restaurant & German Bakery, the eight beach-facing rooms here are designed with minimalist flair, ochre tones and finished with smart, arty touches.

Maharaju Palace

GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 9946854270; www.maharajupalace.com; s/d incl breakfast ₹2600/3300, cottage ₹4200/5300; 📶) More of a peaceful retreat than a palace, this quirky Dutch-owned place in a lane just back from the beach has more character than most, with timber furnishings, including the odd four-poster bed, and a separate cottage in the garden. The lovely breakfast terrace is hung with chintzy chandeliers.

Jeevan Ayurvedic Beach Resort

RESORT $$
(☎ 9846898498, 0471-2480662; www.jeevanresort.net; d ₹1800-4200, with AC ₹2400-12,000; 📶) Beachfront Jeevan is an inviting sort of place with one of the only seafront pools on this strip. Expect decent-sized rooms with bathtubs. All but the cheapest ground-floor rooms have sea views and balconies.

Wilson Ayurvedic Resort

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0471-2480051; Lighthouse Beach; d ₹750-1250, with AC ₹2000-3500; 📶) Wilson has clean and reasonably well-maintained rooms orbiting a pool just back from Lighthouse Beach. It has a leafy holiday-resort vibe and offers ayurvedic treatments.

Sea Flower

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0471-2480554; www.seaflowerkovalam.com; d ₹2300; 📶) At the southern end of Lighthouse Beach, this friendly little place is handy for Lighthouse Rd and is reasonably priced for the beachfront location. Rooms are simple but fresh, with balconies and sea views.

★ Beach Hotel II

(☎ 9400031243, 0471-2481937; www.thebeachhotel-kovalam.com; d ₹4500, with AC ₹5600; 📶) Tucked into the southern end of Lighthouse Beach, this stylish pad has 10 sea-facing rooms, all with balcony and large sliding windows. Decor is simple chic. It's also home to the excellent Fusion terrace restaurant.

Leela

HOTEL $$$
(☎ 0471-2480101; www.theleela.com; d from ₹16,200, ste from ₹40,000; 📶) The sumptuous Leela is set in extensive grounds on the headland north of Hawah Beach. You'll find three swimming pools, an ayurvedic centre, a gym, two 'private beaches', several restaurants and more. Spacious rooms have period touches, colourful textiles and Keralan artwork.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Lighthouse Beach is the main restaurant hub and each evening dozens of places lining the beach promenade display the catch of the day - just pick a fish or lobster, settle on a price and decide how you want it prepared. Market price varies enormously depending on the day's catch, but at the time of research it was around ₹350 per fish fillet, ₹900 per half kilo of tiger prawns, and ₹3500 per kilo of lobster. Unlicensed places might serve alcohol in mugs, or with the bottles hidden discreetly out of sight (or not, depending on current government rules).

Samudra Beach, to the north, is quieter but also has some restaurants worth seeking out. For a romantic dining splurge, the restaurants at Leela and Vivanta by Taj are pricey but top class.

Suprabhatham

KERALAN $
(meals ₹80-230; ☀ 7am-10pm) This little veg place hidden back from the beach doesn't look like much, but it dishes up excellent, inexpensive Keralan cooking, vegetarian thalis and fresh fruit juices in a rustic setting.

Varsha Restaurant

SOUTH INDIAN $
(mains ₹100-175; ☀ 8am-10pm) This little restaurant just back from Lighthouse Beach serves some of Kovalam's best vegetarian food at budget prices. Dishes are fresh and carefully prepared. A great spot for breakfast and lunch in particular.

Waves Restaurant &

KERALA GOING DRY?

In an effort to curb high per capita alcohol consumption and perceived associated social problems (including India's highest suicide rate), the Keralan government is going dry. In 2014, the government announced a 10-year plan to move towards full prohibition by gradually closing down bars (except those in five-star hotels) and state-run liquor outlets. At the time of writing, almost 700 bars had been closed, mostly in three- and four-star hotels, though many government-run liquor outlets were still dispensing bottles of IMFL rum and brandy to long queues. The plan is to close 10% of these outlets each year over 10 years.

It remains to be seen how this ban might affect the tourism industry or how far the government will take it. The general consensus is that while hard liquor bars will remain closed, 'beer parlours' would open in their place and that a Kingfisher will still be available at tourist places. It's also likely that the black market will boom.

orange balcony, ambient soundtrack and wide-roaming menu, Waves is usually busy with foreigners. It morphs into the German Bakery, a great spot for breakfast with fresh bread, croissants, pastries and decent coffee, while dinner turns up Thai curries, German sausages, pizza and seafood. There's a small bookshop attached. Wi-fi is ₹40.

Swiss Cafe

CAFE $$

(mains ₹110-490; ☺ 7.15am-10pm) Swiss Cafe stands out for tasty Euro dishes like rosti, schnitzel, pasta and pizza, unusual dishes like roast lamb in whisky sauce as well as the usual fresh seafood and Indian staples. The balcony, with its wicker chairs, is a good place to take in the action.

Malabar Cafe

INDIAN $$

(mains ₹110-450; ☺ 8am-11pm) The busy tables tell a story: with candlelight at night and views through pot plants to the crashing waves, Malabar offers tasty food and good service.

Fusion

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹150-450; ☺ 7.30am-10.30pm; 📶) The terrace restaurant at Beach Hotel II is one of the best dining experiences on Lighthouse Beach with an inventive East-meets-West menu – a range of Continental dishes, Asian fusion, and interesting seafood numbers like lobster steamed in vodka. Also serves French press coffee and herbal teas.

Curry Leaf

MULTICUISINE $$

(Samudra Beach; mains ₹100-350; ☺ 8am-8.30pm) On a small hilltop overlooking Samudra Beach, this new two-storey restaurant boasts enviable ocean and sunset views, eager staff and good food ranging from fresh seafood and tandoori to continental dishes. It requires a bit of a walk along paths or uphill from the beach, but the uncrowded location is part of the charm.

Bait

SEAFOOD $$$

(Vivanta by Taj; mains ₹300-750; ☺ 12.30-3pm & 6-10.30pm) The seafood restaurant at the Taj off Samudra Beach is designed as an upmarket alfresco beach shack. Watch the chefs at work in the open kitchen; the seafood and spicy preparations are top-notch.

i Information

About 500m uphill from Lighthouse Beach are HDFC and Axis ATMs, and there are Federal Bank and ICICI ATMs at Kovalam Junction. There are several small internet cafes charging around ₹30 per hour.

Global Internet (Leo Restaurant; internet/wi-fi per hour ₹40/30; ☺ 9am-9pm; 📶) Check your email on the terminals or hook up to the wi-fi in the restaurant.

i Getting There & Around

BUS

Buses start and finish at an unofficial stand on the main road outside the entrance to Leela resort and all buses pass through Kovalam Junction, about 1.5km north of Lighthouse Beach. Buses connect Kovalam and Trivandrum every 20 minutes between 5.30am and 10pm (₹15, 30 minutes). For northbound onward travel it's easiest to take any bus to Trivandrum and change there, but there are two buses daily to Ernakulam (₹210, 5½ hours), stopping at Kallambalam (for Varkala, ₹750, 1½ hours), Kollam (₹85, 2½ hours) and Alleppey (₹125, four hours). There are also a couple of buses for Kanyakumari (₹80, two hours).

TAXI

A taxi between Trivandrum and Kovalam beach is around ₹400; an autorickshaw should cost ₹300. From the bus stand to the north end of Lighthouse Beach costs around ₹50.

MOTORCYCLE

K Tours & Travel (☎ 8089493376, 0471-2127003; scooters/Enfields per day from ₹400/600) next door to Devi Garden Restaurant just above Hawa Beach, rents out scooters and Enfields.

Around Kovalam

Poovar

About 16km southeast of Kovalam, almost at the Tamil Nadu border, Poovar is the gateway to a region of beaches, estuaries, villages and upmarket resorts that comprise the 'mini backwaters' of Kerala's far south.

Boat operators along the Neyyar River will take you on 1½- to two-hour cruises through the waterways visiting the beach, bird-filled mangrove swamps and forested Poovar Island for around ₹2500 for two people. Travel agents in Kovalam can also arrange these trips.

Poovar Island Resort

RESORT $$$

(☎ 0471-2212068, 9895799044; www.poovarilandresorts.com; s/d cottage from ₹9600/10,800, floating cottage from ₹15,000/16,200; 🏠🏠🏠) Accessible only by boat, this resort is popular for its romantic 'floating' cottages moored on the water's edge – though most of the rooms are on land and designed in Keralan architectural style. It's a soothing, peaceful and very well-appointed place to retreat from the mainland or beach resorts.

Varkala

AYURVEDIC RESORTS

Between Kovalam and Poovar, amid seemingly endless swaying palms, laid-back village life and some empty golden-sand beaches, are a string of upmarket ayurvedic resorts that are worth a look if you're serious about immersing yourself in ayurvedic treatments. They're all between 6km and 10km southeast of Kovalam.

Dr Franklin's Panchakarma Institute (☎ 0471-2480870; www.dr-franklin.com; Chowara; s/d hut €23/30, r from €28/37, with AC €41/60; 🏠🏠🏠) For those serious about ayurvedic treatment, this is a reputable and less expensive alternative to the flashier resorts. Daily treatment with full meal plan costs €70. Accommodation is comfortable but not resort style.

Niraamaya Surya Samudra (☎ 0471-2480413; www.niraamaya.in; Pulinkudi; r incl breakfast ₹18,000-32,000; 🏠🏠🏠) The latest incarnation of Surya Samudra offers A-list-style seclusion. The 22 transplanted traditional Keralan homes come with four-poster beds and open-air bathrooms, set in a palm grove above sparkling seas. There's an infinity pool carved out of a single block of granite, renowned Niraamaya Spa, ayurvedic treatments, gym and spectacular outdoor yoga platforms.

Bethsaida Hermitage (☎ 0471-2267554; www.bethsaidahermitage.com; Pulinkudi; s €90-150, d €150-165; 🏠🏠🏠) This charitable organisation helps support two nearby orphanages and several other worthy causes. As a bonus, it's also a luxurious and remote beachside escape, with sculpted gardens, seductively slung hammocks, putting-green-perfect lawns, palms galore and professional ayurvedic treatments and yoga classes.

Thapovan Heritage Home (☎ 0471-2480453; www.thapovan.com; s/d hillside from ₹3200/4000, cottages ₹5300/6700, beachfront s/d cottage ₹5600/7000; 🏠🏠) Two properties only 100m apart – one consists of beachfront cottages in Keralan style, and the other is the gorgeous hilltop location where Keralan teak cottages are filled with hand-crafted furniture and set among perfectly manicured grounds with wonderful views to the ocean and swaying palm groves. Ayurvedic treatments range from one-hour massages to 28-day treatment marathons, as well as yoga and meditation sessions.

Kerala's most popular backpacker hang-out. A small strand of beach nuzzles Varkala's cliff edge, where restaurants play innocuous trance music and stalls sell T-shirts, baggy trousers and silver jewellery. It's touristy and the sales pitch can be tiring, but Varkala is still a great place to watch the days slowly turn into weeks, and it's not hard to escape the crowds further north or south where the beaches are cleaner and quieter.

Despite its backpacker vibe, Varkala is essentially a temple town, and the main Papanasham beach is a holy place where Hindus come to make offerings for passed loved ones, assisted by priests who set up shop beneath the Hindustan Hotel.

Dangers & Annoyances

The beaches at Varkala have strong currents; even experienced swimmers have been swept away. During the monsoon the beach all but disappears and the cliffs themselves are slowly being eroded. Take care walking on the cliff path, especially at night – much of it is unfenced and it can be slippery in parts.

If women wear bikinis or even swimsuits on the beach at Varkala, they are likely to feel uncomfortably exposed to stares. Wearing a sarong when out of the water will help avoid offending local sensibilities. Dress conservatively if going into Varkala town.

Sights

Janardhana Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Varkala is a temple town and Janardhana Temple is the main event – its technicolour Hindu spectacle sits hovering above Beach Rd. It's closed to non-Hindus, but you may be invited into the temple grounds where there is a huge banyan tree and shrines to Ayyappan, Hanuman and other deities.

Sivagiri Mutt

ASHRAM

( 0470-2602807; www.sivagirimutt.org) Sivagiri Mutt is the headquarters of the Shri Narayana Dharma Sanghom Trust, the ashram devoted to Shri Narayana Guru (1855–1928), Kerala's most prominent guru. This is a popular pilgrimage site and the resident swami is happy to talk to visitors.

Ponnumthuruthu Island

ISLAND

(boat ride ₹250 per person) About 10km south of Varkala, this island in the middle of a backwater lake is home to the Shiva-Parvati Hindu Temple, also known as the Golden Temple. The main reason to venture down here is the scenic punt-powered boat ride to and around the island.

Kappil Beach

BEACH

About 9km north of Varkala by road, Kappil Beach is a pretty and, as yet, undeveloped stretch of sand. It's also the start of a mini network of backwaters. The Kappil Lake Boat Club, near the bridge, hires out boats for short trips on the lake.

Activities

The gently undulating path from the northern clifftop continues for a photogenic 7km to Kappil Beach, passing a subtly changing beach landscape, including Odayam Beach and the fishing village of Edava. The walk is best done early in the morning.

Yoga (per session ₹300 to ₹400) is offered at several guesthouses, and boogie boards (₹100) can be hired from places along the beach; be wary of strong currents. Many of the resorts and hotels along the north cliff offer ayurvedic treatments and massage.

Janardhanapuram

HOTEL $$$

(☎) 0470-6673300; www.thegatewayhotels.com; d incl breakfast from ₹9000, ste ₹12,500; (☎) Varkala's flashiest hotel, the rebadged Gateway, is looking hot with gleaming linen and mocha cushions in rooms overlooking the garden, while the more expensive rooms have sea views and balconies. There's a fantastic pool with bar (nonguests ₹500), tennis court and the well-regarded GAD restaurant.

✂ Eating & Drinking

Most restaurants in Varkala offer the same traveller menu of Indian, Asian and continental fare to a soundtrack of easy-listening trance and Bob Marley, but the quality of the cliffside 'shacks' has improved out of sight over the years and most offer free wi-fi. Join in the nightly Varkala saunter till you find a place that suits.

Sreepadman

SOUTH INDIAN $

(thalis ₹75; ☎) 5am-10pm) For cheap and authentic Kerala fare – think dosas and thalis – where you can rub shoulders with rickshaw drivers and pilgrims rather than tourists, pull up a seat at hole-in-the-wall Sreepadman, opposite the Janardhana Temple and overlooking the large bathing tank.

Oottupura Vegetarian Restaurant INDIAN $ (mains ₹45-100) Near the taxi stand, this budget eatery has a respectable range of cheap veg dishes, including breakfast puttu (flour with milk, bananas and honey).

Coffee Temple CAFE $ (coffee ₹70-100, mains ₹80-250; ☺ 6am-7pm; ☺) For your early-morning coffee fix it's hard to beat this English-run place, where the beans are freshly ground, there's fresh bread and a daily paper. The menu has also expanded into crêpes and Mexican burritos, fajitas and tacos – and it's no worse for that.

Juice Shack CAFE $ (juices from ₹70, snacks ₹80-250; ☺ 6am-8.30pm; ☺) It certainly looks a bit 'shack-like' next to the fancy neighbours, but this funky little health-juice bar still turns out great juices, smoothies and snacks such as Mexican wraps.

Cafe Italiano ITALIAN $$ (mains ₹200-400; ☺ 7am-11pm; ☺) As well as good pizza, pasta and crêpes, two-storey Italiano is worth a visit for its library and book exchange and for the tree growing through the upper deck.

Café del Mar MULTICUISINE $$ (dishes ₹120-450; ☺ 9am-10pm; ☺) It doesn't have the big balcony of some of its neighbours, but Café del Mar is usually busy thanks to efficient service, good coffee and consistently good food.

God's Own Country Kitchen MULTICUISINE $$ (North Cliff; mains ₹80-400; ☺ 8.30am-10pm; ☺) This fun place doesn't really need to play on Kerala Tourism's tagline – the food is good, there's a great little upper-floor deck and there's live music some nights in season.

Trattorias MULTICUISINE $$ (meals ₹100-400; ☺ 8.30am-11pm) Trattorias aims to specialise in Italian with a decent range of pasta and pizza but also offers Japanese – including sushi – and Thai dishes. This was one of the original places with an Italian coffee machine, and the wicker chairs and sea-facing terrace are cosy.

Wait n Watch INDIAN $$ (Hindustan Beach Retreat; mains ₹120-280; ☺ 11am-10pm; ☺) The top-floor restaurant and cocktail bar at this ugly beachfront hotel block offers tasty-enough Indian fare and seafood, but the main reason to take the elevator is for the view from the balcony (with just a couple of tables) over the action of the beach. There's another alfresco restaurant by the pool.

AYURVEDA

With its roots in Sanskrit, the word ayurveda comes from ayu (life) and veda (knowledge); the knowledge or science of life. Principles of ayurvedic medicine were first documented in the Vedas some 2000 years ago, but may have been practised centuries earlier.

Ayurveda sees the world as having an intrinsic order and balance. It argues that we possess three doshas (humours): vata (wind or air); pitta (fire); and kapha (water/earth), known together as the tridoshas. Deficiency or excess in any of them can result in disease: an excess of vata may result in dizziness and debility; an increase in pitta may lead to fever, inflammation and infection. Kapha is essential for hydration.

Ayurvedic treatment aims to restore the balance, and hence good health, principally through two methods: panchakarma (internal purification), and herbal massage. Panchakarma is used to treat serious ailments, and is an intense detox regime, a combination of five types of therapies to rid the body of built-up endotoxins. These include: vaman (therapeutic vomiting); virechan (purgation); vasti (enemas); nasya (elimination of toxins through the nose); and raktamoksha (detoxification of the blood). Before panchakarma begins, the body is first prepared over several days with a special diet, oil massages (snehana) and herbal steam baths (swedana). Although it may sound pretty grim, panchakarma purification might only use a few of these treatments at a time, with therapies like bloodletting and leeches only used in rare cases. Still, this is no spa holiday. The herbs used in ayurveda grow in abundance in Kerala's humid climate – the monsoon is thought to be the best time of year for treatment, when there is less dust in the air, the pores are open and the body is most receptive to treatment – and every village has its own ayurvedic pharmacy.

★ Entertainment

Kathakali performances are organised during high season – look out for notices locally.

Rock n Roll Cafe

LIVE MUSIC

(☎8136858684; ☀24hr) Music is the thing at this otherwise unremarkable restaurant-bar. There's live music, DJs or movies on most nights in season, as well as tabla lessons. There's also cold beer, a good cocktail list and food is available from 6pm.

i Information

A 24-hour ATM at Temple Junction takes Visa cards, and there are several more ATMs in Varkala town. Many of the travel agents lining the cliff do cash advances on credit cards and change travellers cheques. Most restaurants and cafes offer free wi-fi.

i Getting There & Away

There are frequent local and express trains to Trivandrum (2nd/sleeper/3AC ₹45/140/485, one hour) and Kollam (2nd/sleeper/3AC ₹45/140/485, 40 minutes), as well as seven daily services to Alleppey (2nd/sleeper/3AC ₹95/140/485, two hours). From Temple Junction, three daily buses pass by on their way to Trivandrum (₹60, 1½ to two hours), with one heading to Kollam (₹40, one hour).

i Getting Around

It's about 2.5km from the train station to Varkala Beach, with autorickshaws going to Temple Junction for ₹80 and North Cliff for ₹100. Local buses also travel regularly between the train station and Temple Junction (₹5).

A few places along the cliff hire out scooters/motorbikes for ₹350/450 per day.

Kollam (Quilon)

☎0474 / POP 349,000

Kollam (Quilon) is the southern approach to Kerala's backwaters and one end of the popular backwater ferry trip to Alleppey. One of the oldest ports in the Arabian Sea, it was once a major commercial hub that saw Roman, Arab, Chinese and later Portuguese, Dutch and British traders jostle into port – eager to get their hands on spices and the region's cashew crops. The centre of town is reasonably hectic, but surrounding it are the calm waterways of Ashtamudi Lake, fringed with coconut palms, cashew plantations and traditional villages – a great place to get a feel for the backwaters without the crowds.

👁 Sights & Activities

The best thing to do from Kollam is explore the backwaters around Munroe Island by canoe, via a network of canals off Ashtamudi Lake about 15km north of Kollam.

There's a rowdy fishing harbour at Kollam Beach where customers and fisherfolk alike pontificate on the value of the day's catch; there's also an evening fish market from 5pm to 9pm. There's an average beach 2km south of town, marked at the northern end by the Thangassery Lighthouse.

★ Canal Cruise

BOATING

(www.dtpckollam.com; tours per person ₹500; ☀9am-1.30pm & 2-6.30pm) Excellent tours through the canals of Munroe Island are organised by the DTPC and a few private operators. After a 25km drive to the starting point, you take a three-hour trip via punted canoe to observe daily village life, see ket-tuvallam (rice barge) construction, toddy (palm beer) tapping, coir-making (coconut fibre), prawn and fish farming, and do some birdwatching on spice-garden visits.

Houseboat Cruises

BOATING

(www.dtpckollam.com; overnight cruise ₹5000-9200, Kollam to Alappuzha cruise ₹14,000) Kollam has far fewer houseboats than Alleppey, which can mean a less touristy experience. The DTPC organises houseboat cruise packages, both locally and to Alleppey and Kochi.

Santhigiri Ayurveda Centre

AYURVEDA

(☎9287242407, 0474-2763014; www.santhigiri-ashram.com; Asramam Rd, Kadappakada; massage from ₹1200) An ayurvedic centre with more of an institutional than a spa vibe, popular for its seven- to 21-day treatment packages.

★ Festivals & Events

The Kollam region hosts many festivals and boat regattas – in November and December there are temple festivals somewhere in the region virtually every day.

Kollam Poomam

RELIGIOUS

(Apr) Colourful annual temple festival featuring elephants and mock sword fights.

President's Trophy Boat Race

Getting There & Away

BOAT

Many travellers take the canal boat to or from Alleppey (₹400; eight hours; 10.30am) as part of the classic backwaters tour (p964). From the main boat jetty there are frequent public ferry services across Ashtamudi Lake to Guhanandapuram (one hour). Fares are around ₹10 return, or ₹3 for a short hop.

BUS

Kollam is on the Trivandrum–Kollam–Alleppey–Ernakulam bus route, with buses departing every 10 or 20 minutes to Trivandrum (₹70, two hours), Alleppey (₹80, 2½ hours), Kumily (₹125, five hours, 7.50am) and Ernakulam (Kochi, ₹150, 3½ hours). Buses depart from the KSRTC bus stand (☎ 0474-2752008), conveniently near the boat jetty.

TRAIN

There are frequent trains to Ernakulam (sleeper/3AC ₹140/485, 3½ hours, six daily), Trivandrum (₹140/485, one hour) via Varkala (₹36/165, 30 minutes), and Alappuzha (Alleppey; ₹170/535, 1½ hours).

MATHA AMRITHANANDAMAYI MISSION

The incongruously pink Matha Amrithanandamayi Mission (☎ 04762897578; www.amritapuri.org; Amrithapuri) is the famous ashram of one of India's few female gurus. Amrithanandamayi, also known as Amma (Mother) or 'The Hugging Mother' because of the darshan (audience) she offers, often hugging thousands of people in marathon all-night sessions.

The ashram runs official tours at 4pm and 5pm daily. It's a huge complex, with about 3000 people living there permanently – monks, nuns, students and families, both Indian and foreign. It offers food, ayurvedic treatments, yoga and meditation. Amma travels around for much of the year, so you might be out of luck if in need of a cuddle. A busy time of year at the ashram is around Amma's birthday on 27 September.

Visitors should dress conservatively and there is a strict code of behaviour. With prior arrangement – register online – you can stay at the ashram in a triple room for ₹250 per person, or ₹500 for a single (including simple vegetarian meals).

Since the ashram is on the main canal between Kollam and Alleppey, many travellers break the ferry ride by getting off here, staying a day or two, then picking up another cruise. Alternatively, cross to the other side of the canal and grab a rickshaw 10km south to Karunagappally or 12km north to Kayankulam (around ₹200), from where you can catch onward buses or trains.

If you're not taking the cruise, catch a train to either Karunagappally or Kayankulam and take an autorickshaw (around ₹200) to Vallicavu and cross the pedestrian bridge from there. If you intend to stay a while, you can book online for an ashram taxi – they pick up from as far away as Kochi or Trivandrum.

Kollam and Alleppey), this restored palace is a fine example of grand Keralan architecture. Inside are paintings, antique furniture, sculptures and a renowned 3m-high mural depicting the Gajendra Moksha (liberation of Gajendra, chief of the elephants) as told in the Mahabharata.

Buses (₹26, one hour) leave Kollam every few minutes for Kayamkulam. Get off at the bus stand near the temple gate, 2km before the palace.

Alappuzha (Alleppey)

☎ 0477 / POP 74.200

Alappuzha – still better known as Alleppey – is the hub of Kerala's backwaters, home to a vast network of waterways and more than a thousand houseboats. Wandering around the small but chaotic city centre, with its modest grid of canals, you'd be hard-pressed to agree with the 'Venice of the East' tag. But step out of this mini-mayhem – west to the beach or in practically any other direction towards the backwaters – and Alleppey is graceful and greenery-fringed, disappearing into a watery world of villages, punted canoes, toddy shops and, of course, houseboats. Float along and gaze over paddy fields of succulent green, curvaceous rice barges and village life along the banks. This is one of Kerala's most mesmerisingly beautiful and relaxing experiences.

👁 Sights & Activities

Alleppey Beach

BEACH

Alleppey's main beach is about 2km west of the city centre; there's no shelter at the beach itself and swimming is fraught due to strong currents, but the sunsets are good and there are a few places to stop for a drink or snack, including a good coffee shop. The beach stretches up and down the coast.

Elephant Camp

ELEPHANTS

☎ 9249905525; 30/60min program ₹400/1000; ☀ 8am-5.30pm) This small elephant camp near the north end of Punnamada Lake offers elephant experiences from 30 minutes to two hours. Longer sessions include feeding, bathing and a trunk shower.

👉 Tours

Any guesthouse, hotel, travel agent or the DTPC can arrange canoe or houseboat tours of the backwaters (see p964).

Kashmiri-style shikaras (covered boats) gather along the North Canal on the road to the houseboat dock. They charge ₹300 to ₹400 per hour for motorised canal and backwater trips. Punt-powered dugout canoes are slower but more ecofriendly. They charge from ₹250 per hour and most tours require four to five hours with village visits, walks and a visit to a toddy bar.

★ Festivals & Events

Nehru Trophy Boat Race

BOAT RACE

www.nehrutrophy.nic.in; tickets ₹50-2000; ☀ 2nd Sat in Aug) This is the most popular and fiercely contested of Kerala's boat race regattas. Thousands of people, many aboard houseboats, gather around the starting and finishing points on Alleppey's Punnamada Lake to watch snakeboats with up to 100 rowers battle it out.

Sleeping

Even if you're not planning on boarding a houseboat, Alleppey has some of the most charming and best-value accommodation in Kerala, from heritage homes and resorts to family-run homestays with backwater views.

The rickshaw-commission racketeers are at work here, particularly at the train and bus stations; ask to be dropped off at a landmark close to your destination, or if you're booked in, call ahead to say you're on the way.

★ Raheem Residency

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0477-2239767; www.raheemresidency.com; Beach Rd; d €120-150; 🍷🍷) This thoughtfully renovated 1860s heritage home is a joy to visit, let alone stay in. The 10 rooms have been restored to their former glory and have bathtubs, antique furniture and period fixtures. The common areas are airy and comfortable, and there are pretty indoor courtyards, a well-stocked library, a great little pool and an excellent restaurant. Creative types should enquire about Raheem's writers' retreats.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

★ Mushroom

ARABIAN, INDIAN $

(mains ₹70-140; ☀ noon-midnight) Breezy open-air restaurant with wrought-iron chairs specialising in cheap, tasty and spicy halal meals like chicken kali mirch, fish tandoori and chilli mushrooms. Lots of locals and travellers give it a good vibe. It's near the South Police Station.

Kream Korner Art Cafe

MULTICUISINE $

(☎ 0477-2252781; www.kreamkornerartcafe.com; Mullaackal Rd; dishes ₹40-250; ☀ 9am-10pm) The most colourful dining space in town, this food-meets-art restaurant greets you with brightly painted tables and contemporary local art on the walls. It's a relaxed, airy place popular with Indian and foreign families for its inexpensive and tasty menu of Indian and Chinese dishes.

Thaff

INDIAN $

(YMCA Rd; meals ₹45-120; ☀ 9am-9pm Sun-Thu, 9am-10pm Sat & Sun) This popular restaurant serves tasty South Indian bites, with some North Indian and Chinese flavours mixed in. It does succulent spit-roasted-chicken, biryani and brain-freezing ice-cream shakes.

There's another busy hole-in-wall location on Punnamada Rd.

Le Coffee Time

CAFE
(Alleppey Beach; coffee & snacks ₹70-150; ☎ 8.30am-5pm; ☺) Friendly beachfront place with a genuine Italian espresso machine, some shady tables and free wi-fi.

Dreamers

MULTICUISINE $$
(☎ 8086752586; www.dreamersrestaurant.com; Alleppey Beach; mains ₹130-450; ☎ 11am-10.30pm) Designed to vaguely resemble a kettuwallam (rice barge), Dreamers, across from Alleppey Beach, is a rustic but cool little restaurant with an upper deck, serving a wide variety of dishes from Tibetan momos and Thai curries to seafood and pizzas.

Harbour Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$
(☎ 0484-2230767; Beach Rd; meals ₹120-300; ☎ 10am-10pm) This enjoyable beachside place is run by the nearby Raheem Residency. It's more casual and budget-conscious than the hotel's restaurant, but promises a range of well-prepared Indian, Chinese and continental dishes, and some of the coldest beer in town.

Royale Park Hotel

INDIAN $$
(YMCA Rd; meals ₹120-250; ☎ 7am-10.30pm, bar from 10.30am; ☺) There's an extensive menu at this air-con hotel restaurant, and the food, including veg and fish thalis, is consistently good. You can order from the same menu in the surprisingly nice upstairs bar and wash down your meal with a cold Kingfisher.

Chakara Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$$
(☎ 0477-2230767; Beach Rd; mini Kerala meal ₹500, mains from ₹450; ☎ 12.30-3pm & 7-10pm) The restaurant at Raheem Residency is Alleppey's finest, with seating on a bijou open rooftop, reached via a spiral staircase, with views over to the beach. The menu creatively combines traditional Kerala and European cuisine, specialising in locally caught fish.

i Getting There & Away

BOAT

Ferries run to Kottayam (₹10) from the boat jetty on VCSB (Boat Jetty) Rd.

BUS

From the KSRTC bus stand, frequent buses head to Trivandrum (₹122, 3½ hours, every 20 minutes), Kollam (₹70, 2½ hours) and Ernakulam (Kochi, ₹52, 1½ hours). Buses to Kottayam (₹43, 1¼ hours, every 30 minutes) are much faster than the ferry. One bus daily leaves for Kumily at 6.40am (₹120, 5½ hours). The Varkala bus (₹89, 3½ hours) leaves at 9am and 10.40am daily.

TRAIN

There are numerous daily trains to Ernakulam (2nd-class/sleeper/3AC ₹50/170/535, 1½ hours) and Trivandrum (₹80/140/485, three hours) via Kollam (₹66/140/485, 1½ hours). Six trains a day stop at Varkala (2nd-class/AC chair ₹65/255, two hours). The train station is 4km west of town.

i Getting Around

An autorickshaw from the train station to the boat jetty and KSRTC bus stand is around ₹60. Several guesthouses around town hire out scooters for ₹300 per day.

Around Alleppey

Kattoor & Marari Beaches

The beaches at Kattoor and Marari, 10km and 14km north of Alleppey respectively, are a popular beachside alternative to the backwaters. Marari is the flashier of the two, with some exclusive five-star beachfront accommodation, while Kattoor, sometimes known as 'Secret Beach', is more of a fishing village, where development is at a minimum and sandy back lanes lead down to near-deserted sands.

🛏 Sleeping

★ Secret Beach Inn

HOMESTAY $
(☎ 9447786931; www.secretbeach.in; Kattoor Beach; r ₹350-1000; ☺) It almost seems a shame to mention this special little homestay, but with just two rooms it will never feel crowded. Green Palm Homes is a series of homestays that seem a universe away, set in a picturesque village, where you sleep in simple rooms in villagers' homes among rice paddies (though 'premium' rooms with attached bathroom and air-con are available). It's splendidly quiet, there are no roads in sight and you can take a guided walk, hire bicycles (₹50 per hour) and canoes (₹100 per hour), or take cooking classes with your hosts (₹150).

To get here, call ahead and catch one of the hourly ferries from Alleppey to Chennamkary (₹10, 1¼ hours).

The Keralan-style cottages are plush and private – Violin Cottage even has its own plunge pool in a private garden.

Kottayam

☎ 0481 / POP 335,000

Conveniently placed between the Western Ghats and the backwaters, Kottayam is renowned for being the centre of Kerala's spice and rubber trade, rather than for its aesthetic appeal. For most travellers it's a hub town, well connected to both the mountains and the backwaters, with many travellers taking the public canal cruise to or from Alleppey before heading east to Kumily or north to Kochi. The city itself has a crazy, traffic-clogged centre, but you don't have to go far to be in the villages and waterways.

The Thirunakkara Utsavam festival is held in March at the Thirunakkara Shiva Temple.

Sleeping

There's enough accommodation in Kottayam to justify a stay if you're coming off the Alleppey ferry but there are better lakeside stays (at a price) at Kumarakom.

Homestead Hotel HOTEL $

(☎ 0481-2560467; KK Rd; s/d from ₹500/860, d with AC ₹1690; 🏠) In a little compound back from busy KK Rd, Homestead has reasonably well-maintained budget rooms – though some are a little musty and come with eye-watering green decor.

Ambassador Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 0481-2563293; ambassadorhotelktm@yahoo.in; KK Rd; s/d from ₹400/560, with AC from ₹950; 🏠) This old-school place is one of the better budget hotels in the town centre. Rooms with TV are spartan but fairly clean, spacious and quiet for this price. It has a bar, an adequate restaurant, a pastry counter and a boat-shaped fish tank in the lobby.

Windsor Castle & Lake Village Resort

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0481-2363637; www.thewindsorcastle.net; MC Rd; s/d from ₹3600/5200, Lake Village cottages ₹7200; 🏠🏠🏠) This grandiose white box has some of Kottayam's best hotel rooms, but the more interesting accommodation is in the Lake Village behind the hotel. Deluxe cottages, strewn around the private backwaters and manicured gardens, are top-notch. There's a pleasant restaurant overlooking landscaped waterways.

Eating

Thali

SOUTH INDIAN $

(1st fl, KK Rd; meals ₹40-140; ☀ 8am-8pm) A lovely, spotlessly kept 1st-floor dining room with slatted blinds, Thali is a swankier version of the typical Keralan set-meal place. The food here is great, including Malabar fish curry and thalis.

Meenachi

MULTICUISINE $

(2nd fl, KK Rd; dishes ₹60-170; ☀ noon-3pm & 6-9.30pm) A favourite place in Kottayam to fill up on Indian and Chinese fare. The family atmosphere is friendly, the dining room modern and tidy, and the menu expansive.

KERALA'S BACKWATERS

The undisputed highlight of a trip to Kerala is travelling through the 900km network of waterways that fringe the coast and trickle inland. Long before the advent of roads, these waters were the slippery highways of Kerala, and many villagers still use paddle-power as their main form of transport. Trips through the backwaters traverse palm-fringed lakes studded with cantilevered Chinese fishing nets, and wind their way along narrow, shady canals where coir (coconut fibre), copra (dried coconut kernels) and cashews are loaded onto boats. Along the way are isolated villages where farming life continues as it has for eons.

Tourist Cruises

The popular tourist cruise between Kollam and Alleppey (₹400) departs from either end at 10.30am, arriving at 6.30pm, daily from July to March and every second day at other times. Generally, there's a 1pm lunch stop and a brief afternoon chai stop. Bring drinks, snacks, sunscreen and a hat. It's a scenic and leisurely way – the journey takes eight hours – to get between the two towns, but the boat travels along only the major canals – you won't have many close-up views of the village life that makes the backwaters so magical. Another option is to take the trip halfway (₹200) and get off at the Matha Amrithanandamayi Mission (p957).

Houseboats

If the stars align, renting a houseboat designed like a kettuvallam (rice barge) could well be one of the highlights of your trip to India. It can be an expensive experience (depending on your budget) but for a couple on a romantic overnight jaunt or split between a group of travellers, it's usually worth every rupee. Drifting through quiet canals lined with coconut palms, eating delicious Keralan food, meeting local villagers and sleeping on the water – it's a world away from the usual clamour of India.

Houseboats cater for couples (one or two double bedrooms) and groups (up to seven bedrooms!). Food (and an onboard chef to cook it) is generally included in the quoted cost, as is a driver/captain. Houseboats can be chartered through a multitude of private operators in Alleppey, Kollam and Kottayam. This is the biggest business in Kerala and the quality of boats varies widely, from rust buckets to floating palaces of varying cleanliness – try to inspect the boat before agreeing on a price. Travel-agency reps will be pushing you to book a boat as soon as you set foot in Kerala, but it's better to wait till you reach a backwater hub: choice is greater in Alleppey (an extraordinary 1000-plus boats), and you're much more likely to be able to bargain down a price if you turn up and see what's on offer. Most guesthouses and homestays can also book you on a houseboat.

some picturesque backwaters and serves tasty Keralan specialities like chemeen (prawn curry).

i Information

DTPC Office (☎ 0481-2560479; www.dtpckottayam.com; ☎ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) At the boat jetty. Offers daily backwater trips to Alleppey and Kumarakom for ₹350. Private operators nearby offer similar trips.

i Getting There & Away

BOAT

Daily ferries run to Alleppey from the jetty (₹10).

BUS

The KSRTC bus stand has buses to Trivandrum (₹120, four hours, every 20 minutes), Alleppey (₹43, 1½ hours, hourly) and Ernakulam (Kochi, ₹56, two hours, every 20 minutes). There are also frequent buses to nearby Kumarakom (₹15, 30 minutes, every 15 minutes), to Thrissur (₹105, four hours, hourly), Calicut (₹190, seven hours, 13 daily), Kumily for Periyar Wildlife Sanctuary (₹93, four hours, every 30 minutes) and Munnar (₹119, five hours, five daily). There are also buses to Kollam (₹75, three hours, four daily), where you can change for Varkala.

TRAIN

Kottayam is well served by frequent trains running between Trivandrum (2nd-class/sleeper/3AC ₹80/140/485, 3½ hours) and Ernakulam (₹55/140/485, 1½ hours).

i Getting Around

The KSRTC bus stand is 1km south of the centre; the boat jetty is a further 2km (at Kodimatha). An autorickshaw from the jetty to the KSRTC bus stand is around ₹50, and from the bus stand to the train station about ₹40.

In the busy high season, when prices peak, you're likely to get caught in backwater-gridlock – some travellers are disappointed by the number of boats on the water. It's possible to travel by houseboat between Alleppey and Kollam and part way to Kochi – though these trips spend more time on open lakes and large canals than true backwaters and take longer than most travellers expect. Expect a boat for two people for 24 hours to cost about ₹6000 to ₹8000 at the budget level; for four people, ₹10,000 to ₹12,000; for larger boats or for air-conditioning expect to pay from ₹15,000 to ₹30,000. Shop around to negotiate a bargain – though this will be harder in the peak season. Prices triple from around 20 December to 5 January.

Village Tours & Canoe Boats

More and more travellers are opting for village tours or canal-boat trips. Village tours usually involve small groups of five to six people, a knowledgeable guide and an open canoe or covered kettuvallam. The tours (from Kochi, Kollam or Alleppey) last from 2½ to six hours and cost from around ₹400 to ₹800 per person. They include visits to villages to watch coir-making, boat building, toddy (palm beer) tapping and fish farming. The Munroe Island trip from Kollam (p955) is an excellent tour of this type; the Tourist Desk in Ernakulam also organises recommended tours.

Public Ferries

If you want the local backwater transport experience for just a few rupees, there are State Water Transport (www.swtd.gov.in) boats between Alleppey and Kottayam (₹19, 2½ hours) five times daily starting from Alleppey at 7.30am. The trip crosses Vembanad Lake and has a more varied landscape than the Kollam–Alleppey cruise.

Environmental Issues

Pollution from houseboat motors is becoming a major problem as boat numbers increase. The Keralan authorities have introduced an ecofriendly accreditation system for houseboat operators. Among the criteria an operator must meet before being issued with the 'Green Palm Certificate' are the installation of solar panels and sanitary tanks for the disposal of waste – ask operators whether they have the requisite certification. Consider choosing one of the few remaining punting, rather than motorised, boats if possible, though these can only operate in shallow water.

Around Kottayam

Kumarakom

📍 0481

Kumarakom, 16km west of Kottayam and on the shore of vast Vembanad Lake – Kerala's largest lake – is an unhurried backwater village with a smattering of dazzling top-end sleeping options and a renowned bird sanctuary. You can arrange houseboats on Kumarakom's less-crowded canals, but expect to pay considerably more than in Alleppey.

👁 Sights

Kumarakom Bird Sanctuary NATURE RESERVE (Indian/foreigner ₹50/150; 🕒 6am–5pm) This reserve on the 5-hectare site of a former rubber plantation is the haunt of a variety of domestic and migratory birds. October to February is the time for travelling birds like the garganey teal, osprey, marsh harrier and steppey eagle; May to July is the breeding season for local species such as the Indian shag, pond herons, egrets and darters. Early morning is the best viewing time. A guide costs ₹300 for a two-hour tour (₹400 from 6am to 8am).

Devotees make offerings at this temple, 2km from Tiruvilla, in the form of traditional, regular all-night Kathakali performances that are open to all. Around 10km east of here, the Aranmula Boat Race, one of Kerala's biggest snake-boat races, is held during Onam in August/September.

THE WESTERN GHATS

Periyar Wildlife Sanctuary

(☎ 04869

South India's most popular wildlife sanctuary, Periyar (☎ 04869-224571; www.periyar-tigerreserve.org; Indian/foreigner ₹25/450; ☀ 6am-6pm; last entry 5pm) encompasses 777 sq km and a 26-sq-km artificial lake created by the British in 1895. The vast region is home to bison, sambar, wild boar, langur, 900 to 1000 elephants and 35 to 40 hard-to-spot tigers. Firmly established on both the Indian and foreigner tourist trails, the place can sometimes feel a bit like Disneyland-in-the-Ghats, but its mountain scenery and jungle walks make for an enjoyable visit.

Kumily is the closest town and home to a growing strip of hotels, homestays, spice shops, chocolate shops and Kashmiri emporiums. Thekkady, 4km from Kumily, is the sanctuary centre with the KTDC hotels and boat jetty. Confusingly, when people refer to the sanctuary they tend to use Thekkady, Kumily and Periyar interchangeably.

👁 Sights & Activities

Various tours and trips access Periyar Wildlife Sanctuary, all arranged through the Ecotourism Centre. Most hotels and agencies around town can arrange all-day jeep jungle safaris (per person ₹1600-2000; ☀ 5am-6.30pm) which cover over 40km of trails in jungle bordering the park, though many travellers complain that at least 30km of the trip is on sealed roads.

Cooking classes (₹300-450) are offered by local homestays. There are recommended four-hour classes at Bar-B-Que (☎ 04869-320705; KK Rd; ₹500), about 1km from the bazaar on the road to Kottayam.

Several spice plantations are open to visitors and most hotels can arrange tours (₹450/750 by autorickshaw/taxi).

Periyar Lake Cruise

BOATING

(adult/child ₹150/50; ☀ departures 7.30am, 9.30am, 11.15am, 1.45pm & 3.30pm) These 1½-hour boat trips around the lake are the main way to tour the sanctuary without taking a guided walk. You might see deer, boar and birdlife but it's generally more of a cruise – often a rowdy one – than a wildlife-spotting experience. Boats are operated by the forest department and the KTDC – the ticket counters are together in the main building above the boat jetty, and you must buy a ticket before boarding the boat. In high season get to the ticket office 1½ hours before each trip to buy tickets. The first and last departures offer the best prospects for wildlife spotting, and October to March are generally the best time to see animals.

Ecotourism Centre

These include border hikes (₹1500), 2½-hour nature walks (₹300), half/full day bamboo rafting (₹1500/200) and 'jungle patrols' (₹1000), which cover 4km to 5km and are the best way to experience the park close up, accompanied by a trained tribal guide. Rates are per person and trips usually require a minimum of four. There are also overnight 'tiger trail' treks (₹5000 per person) run by former poachers retrained as guides, covering 20km to 30km.

Hotels can help organise similar jeep trips.

Connemara Tea Factory

TEA FACTORY

(Vandiperiyar; tours ₹100; ☀ tours hourly 9am-4pm) About 13km from Kumily, this 75-year-old working tea factory and plantation offers interesting guided tours of the tea-making process and tea garden and ends with some tea-tastings. Regular buses from Kumily pass by the entrance.

Abraham's Spice Garden

SPICE GARDEN

(☎ 04869-222919; www.abrahamspice.com; Spring Valley; tours ₹100; ☀ 7am-6.30pm) Abraham's Spice Garden is a family-run farm operating for more than 50 years. It's 3km from Kumily on the Kottayam Rd.

Highrange Spices

(☎ 04869-223887; www.lakepalacethekkady.com; r incl all meals ₹24,000-30,000) There's a faint whiff of royalty at this restored old summer palace, located on an island in the middle of Periyar Lake. The six charismatic rooms are decorated with flair using antique furnishings. Staying in the midst of the sanctuary gives you a good chance of seeing wildlife from your private terrace, and rates include meals, boat trip and trekking.

Kumily

Mickey Homestay

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9447284160, 04869-223196; www.mickey-homestay.com; Bypass Rd; r & cottages ₹700-1000; 📶) Mickey is a genuine homestay with just a handful of intimate rooms in a family house and a rear cottage, all with homely touches that make them some of the cosiest in town. Balconies have rattan furniture and hanging bamboo seats, and the whole place is surrounded by greenery.

Green View Homestay

HOMESTAY $$$

(☎ 9447432008, 04869-224617; www.suresh-greenview.com; Bypass Rd; r incl breakfast ₹500-1750; 📶) It has grown from its humble homestay origins but Green View is a lovely place that manages to retain its personal and friendly family welcome from owners Suresh and Sulekha. The two buildings house several classes of well-maintained rooms with private balconies – the best are the upper-floor rooms overlooking a lovely rear spice garden. Excellent vegetarian meals and cooking lessons (veg/nonveg ₹350/450) are available.

EI-Paradiso

HOMESTAY $$$

(☎ 9447431950, 04869-222350; www.goelparadiso.com; Bypass Rd; d ₹950-1850, q ₹2500; 📶) This immaculate family homestay has fresh rooms with balconies and hanging chairs, or opening onto a terrace overlooking greenery at the back. Cooking classes (₹400) are a speciality here.

Tranquilou

HOMESTAY $$$

(☎ 04869-223269; www.tranquilouhomestay.com; off Bypass Rd; r incl breakfast ₹1200-2800; 📶) Another of Kumily's friendly family homestays in a peaceful location. Neatly furnished rooms surround a pleasant garden; the two doubles that adjoin a shared sitting room are a good family option.

Claus Garden

HOMESTAY $$$

(☎ 9567862421, 04869-222320; www.homestay.in; Thekkumkadu; d/tr/f ₹1600/1800/2000; 📶) Set well away from the hustle and bustle and up a steep hill with good views, this German-run place has gently curving balconies, spotless rooms and a rooftop overlooking a lush green garden. The family option is two rooms sharing a bathroom. Organic breakfast with fresh-baked bread is available for ₹250.

Chrissie's Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(☎ 9447601304, 04869-224155; www.chrissies.in; Bypass Rd; r ₹1920-2400, f ₹3840; 📶) This four-storey building behind the popular expat-run restaurant of the same name somehow manages to blend in with the forest-green surrounds. The chic rooms are spacious and bright, with cheery furnishings, lamps and colourful pillows. Yoga, shiatsu and reiki classes can be arranged. Wi-fi in lobby only.

Spice Village

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0484-301171; www.cghearth.com; Thekkady Rd; villas ₹18,700-24,000; 📶) This CGH Earth place takes its green credentials very seriously and has captivating, spacious cottages that are smart yet cosily rustic, in pristinely kept grounds. Its restaurant does lavish lunch and dinner buffets (₹1400 to ₹1800), there's a colonial-style bar and you can find the Wildlife Interpretation Centre (☎ 04869-222028; ☀ 6am-6pm) here, which has a resident naturalist showing slides and answering questions about the park. Good value out of high season when rates halve.

Eating

There are a few good cheap veg restaurants in Kumily's busy bazaar area, and some decent traveller-oriented restaurants on the road to the wildlife sanctuary. Most homestays will offer home-cooked meals on request.

Shri Krishna INDIAN $
(KK Rd; meals ₹70-130; ☺ lunch & dinner) A local favourite in the bazaar, serving up spicy pure veg meals including several takes on the lunchtime thali.

Chrissie's Cafe MULTICUISINE $$
(www.chrissies.in; Bypass Rd; meals ₹150-350; ☺ 8am-10pm) A perennially popular traveller haunt, this clean, airy 1st-floor and rooftop cafe satisfies with cakes and snacks, excellent coffee, well-prepared Western faves like pizza and pasta, and even a Middle Eastern platter (₹275).

Ebony's Cafe MULTICUISINE $$
(Bypass Rd; meals ₹90-200; ☺ 8.30am-9.30pm) This fading rooftop joint with lots of pot plants, check tablecloths and traveller-friendly tunes serves up a simple assortment of Indian and continental food from mashed potato to basic pasta.

French Restaurant & Bakery CAFE, BAKERY $$
(meals ₹90-200; ☺ 8am-9.30pm) This family-run shack set back from the main road is a good spot for breakfast or lunch, mainly for the fluffy tuna or cheese baguettes baked on site, but also pasta and noodle dishes.

Ambadi Restaurant INDIAN $$
(dishes ₹100-250; ☺ 7.30am-9.30pm) At the English manor-style hotel of the same name, Ambadi has a more formal feel than most with an almost church-like decor, but the broad menu of North and South Indian dishes is very reasonably priced and the food is good.

★ Entertainment

Mudra Cultural Centre CULTURAL SHOWS
(☎ 9446072901; www.mudraculturalcentre.com; Lake Rd; admission ₹200, video ₹200; ☺ Kathakali 5pm & 7pm; kalari 6pm & 7.15pm) Kathakali shows at this cultural centre are highly entertaining. Make-up and costume starts 30 minutes before each show; use of still cameras is free and welcome. Arrive early for a good seat. There also two kalarippayat (martial arts) performances nightly.

Kadathanadan Kalari Centre

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(www.kalaripayattu.co.in; Thekkady Rd; tickets ₹200; ☺ shows 6-7pm) Hour-long demonstrations of the exciting Kerala martial art of kalarippayat are staged here every evening. Tickets are available from the box office throughout the day.

Information

There's a Federal Bank ATM accepting international cards at the junction with the road to Kottayam, and several internet cafes in the bazaar area.

DTPC Office (☎ 04869-222620; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) Uphill behind the bus stand; you can pick up a map but that's about it.

Ecotourism Centre (☎ 8547603066, 04869-224571; www.periyartigerreserve.org; ☺ 9am-1pm & 2-5pm) For park tours, information and guided walks.

Mt Sinai Cyber Cafe (☎ 04869-222170; Thekkady Junction; per hour ₹20; ☺ 9am-10pm) Reliable internet cafe upstairs in Kumily's main bazaar.

Getting There & Away

Kumily's KSRTC bus stand is at the eastern edge of town.

Eleven buses daily operate between Ernakulam (Kochi) and Kumily (₹145, five hours). Buses leave every 30 minutes for Kottayam (₹84, four hours), with two direct buses to Trivandrum at 8.45am and 11am (₹210, eight hours) and one daily bus to Alleppey at 1.10pm (₹120, 5½ hours). Private buses to Munnar (₹80, four to five hours) also leave from the bus stand at 6am, 9.45am and noon.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

SABARIMALA

Deep in the Western Ghats, about 20km west of Gavi and some 50km from the town of Erumeli, is a place called Sabarimala, home to the Ayyappan temple. It's said to be one of the world's most visited pilgrimage centres, with anywhere between 40 and 60 million Hindu devotees trekking here each year. Followers believe the god Ayyappan meditated at this spot. Non-Hindus can join the pilgrimage but strict rules apply, and women aged 12 to 50 are only allowed as far as the Pampa checkpoint. For information see www.sabarimala.kerala.gov.in or www.sabarimala.org.

Tamil Nadu buses leave every 30 minutes to Madurai (₹90, four hours) from the Tamil Nadu bus stand just over the border.

Getting Around

It's only about 1.5km from Kumily bus stand to the main park entrance, but it's another 3km from there to Periyar Lake; you might catch a bus (almost as rare as the tigers), but will more likely take an autorickshaw from the entry post (₹70) or set off on foot – but bear in mind there's no walking path so you'll have to dodge traffic on the road. Autorickshaws will take you on short hops around town for ₹30.

Kumily town is small enough to explore on foot but some guesthouses hire bicycles (₹200) and most can arrange scooter hire (₹500) if you want to explore further afield.

Munnar

 04865 / POP 68,200 / ELEV 1524M

The rolling hills around Munnar, South India's largest tea-growing region, are carpeted in emerald-green tea plantations, contoured, clipped and sculpted like ornamental hedges. The low mountain scenery is magnificent – you're often up above the clouds watching veils of mist clinging to the mountaintops. Munnar town itself is a scruffy administration centre, not unlike a North Indian hill station, but wander just a few kilometres out of town and you'll be engulfed in a sea of a thousand shades of green.

Once known as the High Range of Travancore, today Munnar is the commercial centre of some of the world's highest tea-growing estates. The majority of the plantations are operated by corporate giant Tata, with some in the hands of local co-operative Kannan Devan Hills Plantation Company (KDHP).

Sights & Activities

The main reason to visit Munnar is to explore the lush, tea-filled hillocks that surround it. Hotels, homestays, travel agencies, autorickshaw drivers and practically every passerby will want to organise a day of sightseeing for you: shop around, though rates are fairly standard. The best way to experience the hills is on a guided trek, which can range from a half-day 'soft trekking' around tea plantations (from ₹600 per person) to more arduous full-day mountain treks (from ₹800), which open up some stupendous views. Trekking guides can easily be organised through hotels and guesthouses or the DTPC.

Bear in mind that the tea plantations are private property and trekking around without a licensed guide is trespassing.

Tea Museum

MUSEUM

 04865-230561; adult/child ₹80/35, camera ₹20;  9am-4pm Tue-Sun) About 1.5km north-west of town, this museum is as close as you'll get to a working tea factory around Munnar. It's a demo model of the real thing, but it still shows the basic process. A collection of old bits and pieces from the colonial era, including photographs and a 1905 tea-roller, are also kept here. A 30-minute video explaining the history of Munnar, its tea estates and the programs put in place for its workers screens hourly. The walk to or from town follows the busy road with views of tea plantations; an autorickshaw charges ₹25 from the bazaar.

Nimi's Lip Smacking Classes

COOKING

 9745513373, 9447330773; www.nimisrecipes.com; classes ₹1500;  5pm Mon-Fri, 2pm Sat & Sun) Nimi Sunilkumar has earned a solid reputation for Kerala cooking, publishing her own cookbook, website and blog, and now offers daily cooking classes in Munnar. You'll learn traditional Kerala recipes and the cost includes a copy of her book Lip Smacking Dishes of Kerala. She's based in an unassuming building next to the DTPC.

Tours

The DTPC (p973) runs three fairly rushed but inexpensive full-day tours to points around Munnar. The Sandal Valley Tour (per person ₹400;  9am-6pm) visits Chinnar Wildlife Sanctuary, several viewpoints, waterfalls, plantations, a sandalwood forest and villages. The Tea Valley tour (per person ₹400;  10am-6pm) visits Echo Point, Top Station and Rajamalai (for Eravikulam National Park), among other places. The Village Sightseeing Tour (per person ₹400;  9.30am-6pm) covers Devikulam, Anayirankal Dam, Ponnudy and a farm tour among others. You can hire a taxi to visit the main local sights for around ₹1300.

Sleeping

Munnar has plenty of accommodation but it seems a shame to stay in Munnar town when the views and peace are out in the hills and valleys. There are some good budget options just south of the town centre; if you really want to feel the serenity and are willing to pay a bit more, head for the hills.

Around Town

★ JJ Cottage

HOSTESTAY $

(☎ 9447228599, 04865-230104; jjcottagemunnar@gmail.com; d ₹350-800; @ ☎) The sweet family at this little purple place 2km south of town (but easy walking distance from the main bus stand) will go out of its way to make sure your stay is comfortable. The varied and uncomplicated rooms are ruthlessly clean, bright and good value, and have TV and hot water. The one deluxe room on the top floor has a separate sitting room and sweeping views.

Green View

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9447825447, 04865-230940; www.greenviewmunnar.com; d ₹500-800; @ ☎) This tidy guesthouse has 10 fresh budget rooms, a friendly welcome and reliable tours and treks. The best rooms are on the upper floor and there's a super rooftop garden where you can sample 15 kinds of tea. The young owner organises trekking trips (www.munnartrekking.com) and also runs Green Woods Anachal (☎ 04865-230189; Anachal; d incl breakfast ₹750), a four-room budget house out in the spice plantations, 10km outside of Munnar.

Zina Cottages

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 04865-230349; r ₹700-1000) On the outskirts of town but immersed in lush tea plantations and with some fine views, this fading 50-year-old house offers an interesting location with good walks from your doorstep but slightly run-down rooms. They offer pickup from town.

Kaippallil Inn

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9495029259; kaippallilinn@gmail.com; r ₹350-800) A stiff walk uphill from the bazaar, Kaippallil is a reasonable budget bet in the town centre, thanks mainly to the serene Benoy, who offers free yoga, reiki and meditation sessions and plenty of tea. It looks a little tatty from the outside but the rooms are clean enough and the top ones have little corner balconies with city views.

Royal Retreat

HOTEL $$

(☎ 8281611100, 04865-230240; www.royalretreat.co.in; d ₹3000-3600, ste ₹4400; @ ☎) Away from the bustle just south of the main bus stand, Royal Retreat is an average but reliable midranger with neat ground-level rooms facing a pretty garden and others with tea plantation views.

★ Green Valley Vista

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9447432008, 04865-263261; www.greenvalleyvista.com; Chithirapuram; d incl breakfast ₹1500-2000; ☎) The valley views are superb, facilities top-notch and the welcome warm at this new guesthouse. There are three levels but all rooms face the valley and have private balconies with dreamy greenery views, as well as flat-screen TVs and modern bathrooms with hot water. Staff can organise trekking, jeep safaris and village tours. It's about 11km south of Munnar.

★ Rose Gardens

HOSTESTAY $$

(☎ 9447378524, 04864-278243; www.munnar-homestays.com; NH49 Rd, Karadipara; r incl breakfast ₹4500; @ ☎) Despite its handy location on the main road to Kochi, around 10km south of Munnar and with good bus connections, this is a peaceful spot overlooking the owner Tomy's idyllic plant nursery and mini spice and fruit plantation. The five rooms are large and comfortable with balconies overlooking the valley, and the family is charming. Cooking lessons are free, including fresh coconut pancakes for breakfast and delicately spiced Kerala dishes for dinner.

Aranyaka

RESORT $$

(☎ 9443133722, 04865-230023; www.aranyakaresorts.com; Pallivasal Tea Estate; cottages ₹4800-6000; 📶) These neat modern cottages set in a landscaped garden have fine views over the Pallivasal Tea Estate. The valley setting, with views of waterfalls and the Muthirapuzhayar River, feels remote but is only 8km from Munnar town.

Dew Drops

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 04842-216455; wilsonhomes2003@yahoo.co.in; Kallar; r incl breakfast ₹2800-3150) Set in thick forest around 20km south of Munnar, this remote-feeling place lies on 97 hectares of spice plantation and farmland (not tea plantations). There are eight bright, simple rooms each with a verandah. The peace here is zen but some find it a little isolated

Bracknell Forest

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(☎ 9446951963; www.bracknellforestmunnar.com; Bison Valley Rd, Ottamaram; r incl breakfast ₹5000-6000; 📶) A remote-feeling 9.5km southeast of Munnar, this place houses 11 neat rooms with balconies and views of a lush valley and cardamom plantation. It's surrounded by deep forest on all sides. The small restaurant has wraparound views. A transfer from Munnar costs around ₹400 but call ahead for directions.

Windermere Estate

RESORT $$$

(☎ 0484-2425237; www.windermereunnar.com; Pothamedu; s/d incl breakfast from ₹8300/9600, villa ₹18,300/21,600; 📶) Windermere is a charming boutique-meets-country-retreat 4km southeast of Munnar. There are supremely spacious garden and valley view rooms, but the best are the suite-like 'Plantation Villas' with spectacular views, surrounded by 26 hectares of cardamom and coffee plantations. There's a cosy library above the country-style restaurant.

Eating

Early-morning food stalls in the bazaar serve breakfast snacks and cheap meals, but some of the best food is served up at the homestays and resorts.

Rapsy Restaurant

INDIAN $

(Bazaar; dishes ₹50-140; ☎ 8am-9pm) This spotless glass-fronted sanctuary from the bazaar is packed at lunchtime, with locals lining up for Rapsy's famous paratha (flaky fried bread) or biryani. It also makes a decent stab at fancy international dishes like Spanish omelette, Israeli shakshuka (eggs with tomatoes and spices) and Mexican salsa.

SN Restaurant

INDIAN $

(AM Rd; meals ₹50-110; ☎ 7.30am-10pm) Just south of the DTPC office, SN is a cheery place with a warm orange interior; it appears to be perpetually packed with people digging into thalis, masala dosas (thin pancake stuffed with curried vegetables) and other Indian veg and nonveg dishes.

Sree Mahaveer Bhojanalaya

NORTH INDIAN $$

(Mattupetty Rd; meals ₹100-250; ☎ 8.30am-10.30pm) This pure veg restaurant attached to SN Annex Hotel has a nice deep-orange look with slatted blinds at the windows. It's madly popular with families for its great range of thalis: take your pick from Rajasthani, Gujarati, Punjabi and more, plus a dazzling array of veg dishes.

Eastend

INDIAN $$

(Temple Rd; dishes ₹110-250; ☎ 7.30am-10.30am, noon-3.30pm & 6.30-10.30pm) In the slightly fancy hotel of the same name, this brightly lit, smartish place serves Chinese, North and South Indian and Kerala specialities, including occasional lunch and dinner buffets.

Entertainment

Punarjani Traditional Village

CULTURAL SHOWS

(☎ 04865-216161; www.punarjanimunnar.org; 2nd Mile, Pallivasal; tickets ₹200-300; ☎ shows 5pm & 6pm) Touristy but entertaining daily performances of Kathakali (5pm) and kalari (6pm). Arrive at 4pm if you want to see the ritual Kathakali make-up session. Tickets are available on the day but for the best seats consider booking a day in advance. It's about 8km south of Munnar town.

Thirumeny Cultural Centre

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(☎ 9447827696; Temple Rd; shows ₹200; ☎ Kathakali shows 5-6pm & 7-8pm; kalari 6-7pm & 8-9pm) On the road behind the East End Hotel, this small theatre stages one-hour Kathakali shows and kalari (martial arts) demonstrations twice nightly.

i Information

There are ATMs near the bridge, south of the bazaar.

DTPC Tourist Information Office (☎ 04865-231516; keralatourismmunnardtpc@gmail.com; Alway-Munnar Rd; ☎ 8.30am-6.30pm) Marginally helpful; operates a number of tours and can arrange trekking guides.

Forest Information Centre (☎ 04865-231587; enpmunnar@gmail.com; ☎ 10am-5pm) Wildlife Warden's Office, for accommodation bookings in Chinnar Wildlife Sanctuary.

Olivia Communications (per hour ₹35; ☎ 9am-9pm) Cramped but surprisingly fast internet cafe in the bazaar.

i Getting There & Away

Roads around Munnar are in poor condition and can be affected by monsoon rains. The main KSRTC bus station (AM Rd) is south of town, but it's best to catch buses from stands in Munnar town (where more frequent private buses also depart). The main stand is in the bazaar.

There are around 13 daily buses to Ernakulam (Kochi, ₹114, 5½ hours), two direct buses to Alleppey (₹158, five hours) at 6.20am and 1.10pm, and four to Trivandrum (₹231, nine hours). Private buses go to Kumily (₹80, four hours) at 11.25am, 12.20pm and 2.25pm.

A taxi to Ernakulam costs around ₹3000, and to Kumily ₹2500.

i Getting Around

Gokulam Bike Hire (☎ 9447237165; per day ₹300-350; ☎ 7.30am-7.30pm), in the former bus stand south of town, has motorbikes and scooters for hire. Call ahead.

Autorickshaws ply the hills around Munnar with bone-shuddering efficiency; they charge up to ₹800 for a day's sightseeing.

Around Munnar

Top Station

High above Kerala's border with Tamil Nadu, Top Station is popular for its spectacular views over the Western Ghats. From Munnar, four daily buses (₹40, from 7.30am, 1½ hours) make the steep 32km climb in around an hour, or book a return taxi (₹1000).

Eravikulam National Park

Eravikulam National Park NATIONAL PARK (☎ 04865-231587; www.eravikulam.org; Indian/foreigner ₹75/250, camera/video ₹25/2000; ☎ 8am-5pm Mar-Dec) Eravikulam National Park, 16km from Munnar, is home to the endangered, but almost tame, Nilgiri tahr (a type of mountain goat). From Munnar, an autorickshaw/taxi costs around ₹300/400 return; a government bus takes you the final 4km from the checkpoint (₹40).

Chinnar Wildlife Sanctuary

Chinnar Wildlife Sanctuary NATURE RESERVE (www.chinnar.org; Indian/foreigner ₹100/150, camera/video ₹25/150; ☎ 7am-6pm) About 60km northeast of Munnar, this wildlife sanctuary hosts deer, leopards, elephants and the endangered grizzled giant squirrel. Trekking and tree house or hut accommodation within the sanctuary are available, as well as ecotour programs like river-trekking, cultural visits (two tribal groups inhabit the sanctuary) and waterfall treks (around ₹600 per person). For details contact the Forest Information Centre in Munnar. Buses from Munnar can drop you off at Chinnar (₹40, 1½ hours), or taxi hire for the day will cost around ₹1500.

Thattekkad Bird Sanctuary

Thattekkad Bird Sanctuary NATURE RESERVE (☎ 04852588302; Indian/foreigner ₹25/165, camera/video ₹25/150; ☎ 6.30am-6pm), cut through by two rivers and two streams, Thattekkad Bird Sanctuary is home to over 320 fluttering species – unusual in that they are mostly forest, rather than water birds – including Malabar grey hornbills, Ripley owls, jungle nightjars, grey drongos, darters and rarer species like the Sri Lankan frogmouth. There are kingfishers, flycatchers, warblers, sunbirds and flower peckers.

Thattekkad is on the Ernakulam-Munnar road. Take a direct bus from either Ernakulam (₹35, two hours) or Munnar (₹60, three hours) to Kothamangalam, from where a Thattekkad bus travels the final 12km (₹8, 25 minutes), or catch an autorickshaw for around ₹250.

PARAMBIKULAM WILDLIFE SANCTUARY

Parambikulam Wildlife Sanctuary (📞 04253-245025, 9442201690; www.parambikulam.org; Indian/foreigner ₹10/150, camera/video ₹25/150; 🕒 7am-6pm; last entry 4pm) Possibly the most protected environment in South India – nestled behind three dams in a valley surrounded by Kerala and Tamil Nadu sanctuaries – Parambikulam Wildlife Sanctuary constitutes 285 sq km of Kipling-storybook scenery and wildlife-spotting goodness. Far less touristed than Periyar, it's home to elephants, bison, gaur, sloths, sambar, crocodiles, tigers, panthers and some of the largest teak trees in Asia. The sanctuary is best avoided during monsoon (June to August) and it sometimes closes in March and April.

Contact the Information Centre in Anappady to arrange tours of the park, hikes (one-/two-day trek from ₹3000/6000, shorter treks from ₹600) and accommodation in tree-top huts (₹3000 to ₹5000) or niche tents (₹6000).

You have to enter the park from Pollachi (40km from Coimbatore and 49km from Palakkad) in Tamil Nadu. There are two buses in either direction between Pollachi and Parambikulam via Annamalai daily (₹19, 1½ hours).

will meet guests at the gate. They also offer expert guided birdwatching trips (₹750 for three hours).

Soma Birds Lagoon

RESORT $$$

(📞 0471-2268101; www.somabirdslagoon.com; Palamattom, Thattekkad; s/d incl breakfast €75/85, with AC from €97/113; 🚰 🚿) For accommodation with a little more style, the lovely Soma Birds Lagoon, set deep in the villages near Thattekkad, is a low-key resort on a seasonal lake among spacious and manicured grounds. The basic rooms and cottages here are roomy, with lots of wood trim and lamp lighting. Popular with visiting ornithologists, it's 16km from Kothamangalam.

Hornbill Camp

TENTED CAMP $$$

(📞 0484-2092280; www.thehornbillcamp.com; d full board US$100) About 8km by road from Thattekkad Bird Sanctuary, the tented Hornbill Camp has accommodation in large permanent tents, in a sublimely peaceful location facing the Periyar River. Kayaking, cycling and a spice-garden tour, as well as all meals, are included in the price. Birdwatching guides cost ₹1500.

CENTRAL KERALA

Kochi (Cochin)

(📞 0484 / POP 601.600)

Serene Kochi has been drawing traders and explorers to its shores for over 600 years. Nowhere else in India could you find such an intriguing mix: giant fishing nets from China, a 400-year-old synagogue, ancient mosques, Portuguese houses and the crumbling remains of the British Raj. The result is an unlikely blend of medieval Portugal, Holland and an English village grafted onto the tropical Malabar Coast. It's a delightful place to spend some time and nap in some of India's finest homestays and heritage accommodation. Kochi is also a centre for Kerala arts and one of the best places to see Kathakali and kalarippayat (p985).

Mainland Ernakulam is the hectic transport and cosmopolitan hub of Kochi, while the historical towns of Fort Cochin and Mattancherry, though well-touristed, remain wonderfully atmospheric – thick with the smell of the past. Other islands, including Willingdon and Vypeen, are linked by a network of ferries and bridges.

Sights*Fort Cochin

Fort Cochin has a couple of small, sandy beaches which are only really good for people-watching in the evening and gazing out at the incoming tankers. A popular promenade winds around from Mahatma Gandhi Beach to the Chinese fishing nets and fish market. This part of Fort Cochin's foreshore is rubbish-strewn and grubby but locals are working towards cleaning it up.

Look out along the shore for the scant remains of Fort Immanuel, the 16th-century Portuguese fort from which the area takes its name.

Kochi (Cochin)

Chinese Fishing Nets

LANDMARK
(Map p976) The unofficial emblems of Kerala's backwaters, and perhaps the most photographed, are the half-dozen or so giant cantilevered Chinese fishing nets on Fort Cochin's northeastern shore. A legacy of traders from the AD 1400 court of Kublai Khan, these enormous, spiderlike contraptions require at least four people to operate their counterweights at high tide. Modern fishing techniques are making these labour-intensive methods less and less profitable, but they still supply the fresh seafood you'll see for sale. Smaller fishing nets are dotted around the shores of Vembanad Lake.

Indo-Portuguese Museum

MUSEUM
(Map p976; ☎0484-2215400; Indian/foreigner ₹10/25; ☀9am-1pm & 2-6pm Tue-Sun) This museum in the garden of the Bishop's House preserves the heritage of one of India's earliest Catholic communities, including vestments, silver processional crosses and altarpieces from the Cochin diocese. The basement contains remnants of the Portuguese Fort Immanuel.

Maritime Museum

MUSEUM
(Beach Rd; adult/child ₹40/20, camera/video ₹100/150; ☀9.30am-12.30pm & 2.30-5.30pm Tue-Sun) In a pair of former bomb shelters, this museum traces the history of the Indian navy, as well as maritime trade dating back to the Portuguese and Dutch, through a series of rather dry relief murals and information panels. There's plenty of naval memorabilia, including a couple of model battleships outside in the garden.

St Francis Church

CHURCH
(Map p976; Church Rd; ☀8.30am-5pm) Constructed in 1503 by Portuguese Franciscan friars, this is believed to be India's oldest European-built church. The edifice that stands here today was built in the mid-16th century to replace the original wooden structure. Explorer Vasco da Gama, who died in Cochin in 1524, was buried in this spot for 14 years before his remains were taken to Lisbon - you can still visit his tombstone in the church.

Santa Cruz Basilica

CHURCH
(Map p976; cnr Bastion St & KB Jacob Rd; ☀7am-8.30pm) The imposing Catholic basilica was originally built on this site in 1506, though the current building dates to 1902. Inside are artefacts from the different eras in Kochi and a striking pastel-coloured interior.

Kashi Art Gallery

ART GALLERY

(Map p976; ☎ 0484-2215769; www.kashiartgallery.com; Burgher St; ☎ 8.30am-7.30pm) The pioneer of Fort Cochin's art revival, Kashi displays changing exhibitions of local artists; most travellers come for the good cafe.

📍 Mattancherry & Jew Town

About 3km southeast of Fort Cochin, Mattancherry is the old bazaar district and centre of the spice trade. These days it's packed with spice shops and pricey Kashmiri-run emporiums that autorickshaw drivers will fall over backwards to take you to for a healthy commission – any offer of a cheap tour of the district will inevitably lead to a few shops. In the midst of this, Jew Town is a bustling port area with a fine synagogue. Scores of small firms huddle together in dilapidated old buildings and the air is filled with the biting aromas of ginger, cardamom, cumin, turmeric and cloves, though the lanes around the Dutch Palace and synagogue are packed with antique and tourist-curio shops rather than spices.

★ Mattancherry Palace

MUSEUM

(Dutch Palace; Map p978; ☎ 0484-2226085; Palace Rd; adult/child ₹5/free; ☎ 9am-5pm Sat-Thu) Mattancherry Palace was a generous gift presented to the Raja of Kochi, Veera Kerala Varma (1537–61), as a gesture of goodwill by the Portuguese in 1555. The Dutch renovated the palace in 1663, hence its alternative name, the Dutch Palace. The star attractions here are the astonishingly preserved Hindu murals, depicting scenes from the Ramayana, Mahabharata and Puranic legends in intricate detail.

★ Pardesi Synagogue

SYNAGOGUE

(Map p978; admission ₹5; ☎ 10am-1pm & 3-5pm Sun-Thu, closed Jewish holidays) Originally built in 1568, this synagogue was partially destroyed by the Portuguese in 1662, and rebuilt two years later when the Dutch took Kochi. It features an ornate gold pulpit and elaborate hand-painted, willow-pattern floor tiles from Canton, China, which were added in 1762. It's magnificently illuminated by Belgian chandeliers and coloured-glass lamps. The graceful clock tower was built in 1760.

Cochin Carnival

FESTIVAL

(www.cochincarnival.org; ☀ 21 Dec) The Cochin Carnival is Fort Cochin's biggest bash, a 10-day festival culminating on New Year's Eve. Street parades, colourful costumes, embellished elephants, music, folk dancing and lots of fun.

Sleeping

Fort Cochin can feel a bit touristy and crowded in season but, with some of Kerala's finest accommodation, it's a great place to escape the noise and chaos of the mainland. This is India's homestay capital, with dozens of family houses offering clean budget rooms, home-cooked meals and a hearty welcome.

Ernakulam is cheaper and more convenient for onward travel, but the ambience and accommodation choices are less inspiring. Regardless of where you stay, book ahead during December and January. At other times you may be able to bargain for a discount. Go on line at www.fortcochinhomestays.com to check out a few places.

Every room has air-con but you can choose not to use it at the cheaper rate.

★ Malabar House

HOTEL $$$

(Map p976; ☎ 0484-2216666; www.malabarhouse.com; Parade Ground Rd; r €240, ste incl breakfast €330-380; 🍷🍷🍷) What may just be one of the fanciest boutique hotels in Kerala, Malabar flaunts its uber-hip blend of modern colours and period fittings like it's not even trying. While the suites are huge and lavishly appointed, the standard rooms are more snug. The award-winning restaurant and wine bar are top-notch.

★ Brunton Boatyard

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0484-2215461; bruntonboatyard@cghearth.com; River Rd; r/ste ₹26,000/34,000; 🍷🍷🍷🍷) This imposing hotel faithfully reproduces 16th- and 17th-century Dutch and Portuguese architecture in its grand complex. All of the rooms look out over the harbour, and have bathtubs and balconies with a refreshing sea breeze that beats air-con any day. The hotel is also home to the excellent History Restaurant and Armoury Bar, along with a couple of open-air cafes.

Spice Fort

BOUQUETTE HOTEL $$$

(Map p976; ☎ 9364455440; www.dunecogroup.com; Princess St; r ₹8500-11,000; 🍷🍷🍷) The chic red-and-white spice-themed rooms here have TVs built into the bed heads, cool tones and immaculate bathrooms. They all orbit an inviting pool in a heritage courtyard shielded from busy Princess St. Great location, excellent restaurant, friendly staff.

Tea Bungalow

HOTEL $$$
(Map p976; ☎ 0484-3019200; www.teabungalow.in; 1/1901 Kunumpuram; r ₹15,000-18,000; 🍷🍷🍷) This mustard-coloured colonial building was built in 1912 as headquarters of a UK spice trading company before being taken over by Brooke Bond tea. The 10 graceful boutique rooms – all named after sea ports – are decorated with flashes of strong colour and carved colonial-era wooden furniture, and have Bassetta-tiled bathrooms. Off-season rates drop by 60%.

Old Harbour Hotel

The elegant mix of period and modern styles lend it a more intimate feel than some of the more grandiose competition. There are 13 rooms and suites, some facing directly onto the garden, and some with open-air bathrooms.

Fort House Hotel

HOTEL $$$
(Map p976; ☎ 0484-2217103; www.hotelforthouse.com; 2/6A Calvathy Rd; r incl breakfast ₹5500; 🍷🍷) Close to the ferry point, this is one of the few truly waterfront hotels, though the 16 smart air-con rooms are set back in a lush garden, with the restaurant taking prime waterside position.

Mattancherry & Jew Town

Caza Maria

HOMESTAY $$$
(Map p978; ☎ 9846050901; cazamaria@rediffmail.com; Jew Town Rd; r incl breakfast ₹4500; 🍷) Right in the heart of Jew Town, this unique place has just two large heritage rooms overlooking the bazaar. Fit for a maharaja, the rooms feature an idiosyncratic style, with each high-ceilinged room painted in bright colours, filled to the brim with antiques.

Ernakulam

John's Residency

HOTEL $$$
(Map p980; ☎ 0484-2355395; TD Rd; s/d from ₹550/650, with AC ₹1600; 🍷) John's is a genuine backpacker place with helpful staff, local information and a quiet location that's still a short walk from the boat jetty. Rooms are small (deluxe rooms are bigger) but decorated with flashes of colour that give them a welcoming funky feel in this price bracket.

Boat Jetty Bungalow

HOTEL $
(Map p980; ☎ 0484-2373211; www.boatjettybungalow.com; Cannon Shed Rd; s/d ₹430/735, with AC ₹960/1465; 🍷) This 140-year-old former jetty manager's house has been refurbished and opened in 2014 as a very good value hotel with 22 compact and clean rooms with TV. It's a short walk to the boat jetty to Fort Cochin.

Saas Tower

HOTEL $$
(Map p980; ☎ 0484-2365319; www.saastower.com; Cannon Shed Rd; s/d ₹1200/1800, with AC from ₹2100/2400, ste from ₹3600; 🍷🍷) The flashy lobby is more promising than the rooms in this midrange business hotel but if you're after a step up from the budget hotels near the jetty, it isn't a bad option. Clean rooms filled with wooden furniture, a restaurant, business centre and a day spa with ayurvedic treatments.

Grand Hotel

HOTEL $$
(Map p980; ☎ 9895721014, 0484-2382061; www.grandhotellerakala.com; MG Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3250/4000, ste ₹6000; 🍷🍷🍷) This 1960s hotel, with its polished original art deco fittings, exudes the sort of retro cool that modern hotels would love to recreate. The spacious rooms have gleaming parquet floors and large modern bathrooms, and there's a good restaurant and Ernakulam's most sophisticated bar.

Rooms are either in the family home or in a sublime lakefront cottage. Offers Chinese fishing nets on your doorstep, boat trips, village tours and home-cooked meals.

★ Olavipe

HOMESTAY $$$
(☎ 0478-2522255; www.olavipe.com; Olavipe; s/d incl meals ₹5100/8500) This gorgeous 1890s traditional Syrian-Christian home is on a 16-hectare farm surrounded by backwaters, 28km south of Kochi. A restored mansion of rosewood and glistening teak, it has several large and breezy rooms beautifully decorated in original period decor.

Eating & Drinking

Some of Fort Cochin's best dining can be found in the homestays, but there are lots of good restaurants and cafes.

Fort Cochin

Behind the Chinese fishing nets are fish-mongers (Map p976; seafood per kilo ₹200-1000) from whom you can buy the day's catch – fresh fish, prawns, crab and lobster – then take your selection to one of the row of simple but popular restaurants on nearby Tower Rd where they will cook it and serve it to you for an additional charge. Market price varies but you'll easily get a feel for prices if you wander along and bargain.

Teapot

CAFE $

(Map p976; Peter Celli St; mains ₹70-140; ☺ 8.30am-8.30pm) This atmospheric cafe is the perfect venue for 'high tea', with 16 types of tea, sandwiches, cakes and a few meals served in chic, airy rooms. Witty tea-themed accents include loads of antique teapots, tea chests for tables and a tea-tree-based table.

Solar Cafe

CAFE $

(Map p976; Bazaar Rd; meals ₹80-130; ☺ 8am-8pm) This arty upstairs cafe serves organic breakfasts and lunches, cinnamon coffee and fresh juice, in a lime-bright, book-lined setting opposite the Customs Jetty.

(Map p976; 📞9746459244; 1/293 Lily St; meals ₹100-230; ☺ noon-3.30pm & 6.30-10.30pm Wed-Mon) There's a lot to like about busy Dal Roti. Friendly and knowledgeable owner Ramesh will hold your hand through his expansive North Indian menu, which even sports its own glossary, and help you dive into his delicious range of vegetarian, egg-vegetarian and nonvegetarian options. From kati rolls (flatbread rolled with stuffing) to seven types of thali, you won't go hungry. No alcohol.

Kashi Art Cafe

CAFE $$

(Map p976; Burgher St; breakfast & snacks ₹90-250; ☺ 8.30am-10pm) An institution in Fort Cochin, this natural-light-filled place has a zen-but-casual vibe and solid wood tables that spread out into a semi-courtyard space. The coffee is as strong as it should be and the daily continental breakfast and lunch specials are excellent. A small gallery shows off local artists.

Arca Nova

SEAFOOD $$

(Map p976; 2/6A Calvathy Rd; mains ₹190-650; ☺ 7.30am-10.30pm) The waterside restaurant at the Fort House Hotel is a prime choice for a leisurely lunch. It specialises in fish dishes and you can sit out at tables overlooking the water or in the serenely spacious covered garden area.

Upstairs Italian

ITALIAN $$$

(Map p976; 📞9745682608; Bastion St; mains ₹250-600; ☺ 10am-11pm) For authentic Italian fare – Gorgonzola, prosciutto, olive oil, Parmesan cheese – head upstairs to this cosy little place serving Kochi's best pizza, pasta and antipasto. Pricey but worth a splurge.

★ Malabar Junction

INTERNATIONAL $$$

(Map p976; 📞0484-2216666; Parade Ground Rd; mains ₹360-680, 5-course degustation ₹2000; ☺ lunch & dinner) Set in an open-sided pavilion, the restaurant at Malabar House is movie-star cool, with white-tableclothed tables in a courtyard close to the small pool. There's a seafood-based, European-style menu – the signature dish is the impressive seafood platter with grilled vegetables. Upstairs, the wine bar serves upmarket tapas-style snacks and fine wine by the glass.

Mattancherry & Jew Town

Ramathula Hotel

INDIAN $

(Kayikka's; Map p978; Kayees Junction, Mattancherry; biryani ₹40-60; ☺ lunch & dinner) This place is legendary for its chicken and mutton biryanis – get here early or miss out. It's better known by the chef's name, Kayikka's.

Caza Maria

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p978; Bazaar Rd; mains ₹210-700; ☺ 9am-8pm) This enchanting 1st-floor place is a bright-blue, antique-filled heritage space with soft music and a changing daily menu of North Indian, South Indian and French dishes.

Café Jew Town

CAFE $$

(Map p978; Bazaar Rd; snacks ₹120-200; ☺ 9am-6pm) Walk through chic antique shops and galleries to reach this sweet Swiss-owned cafe; the few tables proffer good cakes, snacks and Italian coffee.

Cafe Crafters

CAFE $$

(Map p978; Jew Town Rd; mains ₹100-280; ☺ 9.30am-6.30pm) In the heart of Mattancherry's Jewish Quarter, this charming little 1st-floor restaurant cooks up Kerala seafood and continental efforts like sandwiches and burgers. Prime position is the small balcony overlooking the street.

★ Ginger House

INDIAN $$$

(Map p978; Bazaar Rd; mains ₹190-700; ☺ 8.30am-6pm) Hidden behind a massive antique-filled godown (warehouse) is this fantastic waterfront restaurant, where you can feast on Indian dishes and snacks – ginger prawns, ginger ice cream, ginger lassi ... you get the picture. To get to the restaurant, walk through the astonishing Heritage Arts showroom with amazing sculptures and antiques – check out the giant snake-boat canoe. If you ask, the owner might show you the rest of the collection upstairs.

🔪 Ernakulam

Ernakulam's mega shopping malls provide food-court dining. Another interesting development is the leafy Panampilly Ave, in a residential area south of the main train station, which is lined with modern fine-dining and fast-food restaurants.

Frys Village Restaurant

KERALAN $

(Map p980; Chittoor Rd; mains ₹80-150; ☺ noon-3.30pm & 7-10.30pm) This brightly decorated and breezy place with an arched ceiling is a great family restaurant with authentic Kerala food, especially seafood like pollichathu or crab roast. Fish and veg thalis are available for lunch.

Chillies

INDIAN $$

(Map p980; Layam Rd; meals ₹130-280, thali ₹140; ☺ 11.30am-3.30pm & 7.30-11pm) A dark, buzzing 1st-floor place, serving Kochi's best spicy Andhra cuisine on banana leaves. Try a thali, for all-you-can-eat joy.

Grand Pavilion

INDIAN $$$

(Map p980; MG Rd; meals ₹250-370) The restaurant at the Grand Hotel is as elegant and retro-stylish as the hotel itself, with cream-coloured furniture and stiff tablecloths. It serves a tome of a menu that covers dishes from most of the Asian continent.

★ Entertainment

There are several places in Kochi where you can view Kathakali. The performances are designed for tourists, but they're a good introduction to this intriguing art form. The standard program starts with the intricate make-up application and costume-fitting, followed by a demonstration and commentary on the dance and then the performance – usually two hours in all. The fast-paced traditional martial art of kalarippayat can also be easily seen, often at the same theatres.

★ Fort Cochin*Kerala Kathakali Centre

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(Map p976; ☎ 0484-2217552; www.kathakalicentre.com; KB Jacob Rd; shows ₹250-300; ☺ make-up from 5pm, show 6-7.30pm) In an intimate, wood-lined theatre, this recommended place provides a useful introduction to Kathakali, complete with handy translations of the night's story. The centre also hosts performances of kalarippayat at 4pm to 5pm daily, traditional music at 8pm to 9pm Sunday to Friday and classical dance at 8pm to 9pm Saturday.

Greenix Village

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(Map p976; ☎ 9349372050, 0484-2217000; www.greenix.in; Kalvathy Rd; shows ₹300-500; ☺ 10am-6pm, shows from 5pm) This touristy 'cultural village' seeks to put the full gamut of Kerala music and arts under one roof with a small cultural museum, yoga classes (₹450), performances of Kathakali and kalarippayat (₹300) and other cultural shows in an impressive complex.

★ Ernakulam*See India Foundation

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(Map p980; ☎ 0484-2376471; devankathakali@yahoo.com; Kalathiparambil Lane; admission ₹300; ☺ make-up 6pm, show 7-8pm) One of the oldest Kathakali theatres in Kerala, it has small-scale shows with an emphasis on the religious and philosophical roots of Kathakali.

Ens Kalari

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(☎ 0484-2700810; www.enskalari.org.in; Nettoor; admission by donation; ☺ demonstrations 7.15-8.15pm) If you want to see real professionals have a go at kalarippayat, it's best to travel out to this renowned kalarippayat learning centre, 8km southeast of Ernakulam. There are one-hour demonstrations daily (one day's notice required).

Shopping

Broadway in Ernakulam is good for local shopping, spice shops and clothing. On Jew Town Rd in Mattancherry you'll find a plethora of Gujarati-run shops selling genuine antiques mingled with knock-offs and copies. Most of the shops in Fort Cochin are identikit Kashmiri-run shops selling a mixed bag of North Indian crafts. Many shops around Fort Cochin and Mattancherry operate lucrative commission rackets, with autorickshaw drivers getting huge kickbacks for dropping tourists at their door.

Lulu Mall MALL
(☎0484-2727777; www.lulu.in; NH47, Edapally; ☀9am-11pm; ♿) India's largest shopping mall, Lulu is an attraction in its own right with people coming from all over to shop here, hang out in the food courts or cinema, and go ice-skating or ten-pin bowling. Sprawling over seven hectares, the state-of-the-art air-con mall has more than 215 brand outlets from Calvin Klein to KFC. It's in Edapally, about 9km from the boat jetty.

Niraamaya CLOTHING
(Map p976; Quiros St, Fort Cochin; ☀10am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) Popular throughout Kerala, Niraamaya sells 'ayurvedic' clothing and fabrics – all made of organic cotton, coloured with natural herb dyes or infused with ayurvedic oils. There's another branch in Mattancherry.

Centre Square Mall MALL
(Map p980; ☎0484-4041888; MG Rd, Ernakulam; ☀10am-11pm) In central Ernakulam, this flashy new mall is smaller than Lulu but still has five floors of shopping, including a top-floor food court and bowling alley, as well as a cinema.

Idiom Bookshop BOOKS
(Map p976; Bastion St; ☀10.30am-9pm Mon-Sat) Huge range of quality new and used books in Fort Cochin.

TRADITIONAL KERALAN ARTS

Kathakali

The art form of Kathakali crystallised at around the same time as Shakespeare was scribbling his plays. The Kathakali performance is the dramatised presentation of a play, usually based on the Hindu epics the Ramayana, the Mahabharata and the Puranas. All the great themes are covered – righteousness and evil, frailty and courage, poverty and prosperity, war and peace.

Drummers and singers accompany the actors, who tell the story through their precise movements, particularly mudras (hand gestures) and facial expressions.

Preparation for the performance is lengthy and disciplined. Paint, fantastic costumes, ornamental headpieces and meditation transform the actors both physically and mentally into the gods, heroes and demons they are about to play. Dancers even stain their eyes red with seeds from the chundanga plant to maximise the drama.

Traditional performances can last for many hours, but you can see cut-down performances in tourist hot spots all over the state, and there are Kathakali schools in Trivandrum (p941) and near Thrissur that encourage visitors.

Kalarippayat

Kalarippayat (or kalari) is an ancient tradition of martial arts training and discipline, still taught throughout Kerala. Some believe it is the forerunner of all martial arts, with roots tracing back to the 12th-century skirmishes among Kerala's feudal principalities.

Masters of kalarippayat, called Gurukkal, teach their craft inside a special arena called a kalari. You can see often kalarippayat performances at the same venues as Kathakali.

The three main schools of kalarippayat can be divided into northern and central, both practised in northern Kerala and Malabar region, and southern kalarippayat. As well as open hand combat and grappling, demonstrations of the martial art are often associated with the use of weapons, including sword and shield (valum parichayum), short stick (kurunthadi) and long stick (neduvadi).

📍 Getting There & Away

AIR

Kochi International Airport is a popular hub, with international flights to/from the Gulf States, Sri Lanka, the Maldives, Malaysia and Singapore.

On domestic routes, Jet Airways, Air India, Indigo and Spicejet fly direct daily to Chennai, Mumbai, Bengaluru, Hyderabad, Delhi and Trivandrum (but not Goa). Air India flies to Delhi daily and to Agatti in the Lakshadweep islands six times a week.

BUS

All long-distance services operate from Ernakulam. The KSRTC bus stand (Map p980; 📞 2372033; 🕒 reservations 6am-10pm) still has a few services but most state-run and private buses pull into the massive new Vyttila Mobility Hub (📞 2306611; www.vyttilamobilityhub.com; 🕒 24hr), a state-of-the-art transport terminal about 2km east of Ernakulam Junction train station. Numerous private bus companies have super-deluxe, air-con, video and Volvo buses to long-distance destinations such as Bengaluru, Chennai, Mangalore, Trivandrum and Coimbatore; prices vary depending on the standard but the best buses are about 50% higher than government buses. Agents in Ernakulam and Fort Cochin sell tickets. Private buses also use the Kaloor bus stand, 1km north of the city.

A prepaid autorickshaw from Vyttila costs ₹73 to the boat jetty, ₹190 to Fort Cochin and ₹370 to the airport.

TRAIN

Ernakulam has two train stations, Ernakulam Town and Ernakulam Junction. Reservations for both are made at the Ernakulam Junction reservations office (📞 132; 🕒 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun).

There are local and express trains to Trivandrum (2nd-class/sleeper/3AC ₹95/195/535, 4½ hours), via either Alleppey (₹50/170/535, 1½ hours) or Kottayam (₹55/140/485, 1½ hours). Trains also run to Thrissur (2nd/AC chair ₹60/255, 1½ hours), Calicut (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹140/485/690, 4½ hours) and Kannur (₹220/535/735, 6½ hours).

📍 Getting Around

An above-ground metro (www.kochmetro.org) is under construction in Ernakulam, which will connect the airport with the city when completed. The first phase is due in 2016.

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

Kochi International Airport (📞 2610125; www.cochinairport.com) is at Nedumbassery, 30km northeast of Ernakulam. Air-con buses run between the airport and Fort Cochin (₹80, one hour, eight daily), some going via Ernakulam. Taxis to/from Ernakulam cost around ₹850, and to/from Fort Cochin around ₹1200, depending on the time of night.

BOAT

Ferries are the fastest and most enjoyable form of transport between Fort Cochin and the mainland. The jetty on the eastern side of Willingdon Island is called Embarkation; the west one, opposite Mattancherry, is Terminus; and the main stop at Fort Cochin is Customs, with another stop at the Mattancherry Jetty near the synagogue. One-way fares are ₹4 (₹6 between Ernakulam and Mattancherry).

Ernakulam

There are services to both Fort Cochin jetties (Customs and Mattancherry) every 25 to 50 minutes from Ernakulam's main jetty between 4.40am and 9.10pm.

Ferries also run every 20 minutes or so to Willingdon and Vypeen Islands.

Fort Cochin

Ferries run from Customs Jetty to Ernakulam regularly between 5am and 9.50pm. Ferries also hop between Customs Jetty and Willingdon Island 18 times a day.

Car and passenger ferries cross to Vypeen Island from Fort Cochin virtually nonstop.

LOCAL TRANSPORT

There are no regular bus services between Fort Cochin and Mattancherry Palace, but it's an enjoyable 30-minute walk through the busy warehouse area along Bazaar Rd. Autorickshaws should cost around ₹70, much less if you promise to look in a shop. Most short autorickshaw trips around Ernakulam shouldn't cost more than ₹50.

To get to Fort Cochin after ferries (and buses) stop running you'll need to catch a taxi or autorickshaw – Ernakulam Town train station to Fort Cochin should cost around ₹400; prepaid autorickshaws during the day cost ₹250.

Scooters (₹300 per day) and Enfields (₹400 to ₹600) can be hired from agents in Fort Cochin.

Around Kochi

Cherai Beach

On Vypeen Island and 25km from Fort Cochin, Cherai Beach makes a nice day trip or getaway from Kochi, especially if you hire a scooter or motorbike in Fort Cochin. The main beach entrance can get busy at times but with miles of lazy backwaters just a few hundred metres from the seafront, it's a pleasant place to explore.

To get here from Fort Cochin, catch the vehicle-ferry to Vypeen Island (₹3) and either hire an autorickshaw from the jetty (around ₹400) or catch one of the frequent buses (₹15, one hour) and get off at Cherai village, 1km from the beach. Buses also go here direct from Ernakulam via the Vallarpadam bridge.

Sleeping & Eating

Brighton Beach House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9946565555; www.brightonbeachhouse.org; ₹2000-2500) Brighton Beach House has five basic rooms in a small building right near the shore. The beach is rocky here, but the place is filled with hammocks to loll in, and has a neat, elevated stilt-restaurant that serves perfect sunset views with dinner.

Cherai Beach Resort

RESORT $$

(☎ 0484-2416949; www.cheraibeachresorts.com; villas from ₹3500, with AC from ₹4500; 🏠📞) This collection of distinctive cottages scattered around a meandering lagoon has the beach on one side and backwaters on the other. Bungalows are individually designed using natural materials, with either curving walls or split-levels or lookouts onto the backwaters. There's even a tree growing inside one room.

Les 3 Elephants

RESORT $$$

(☎ 0484-2480005, 9349174341; www.3elephants.in; Convent St; cottages ₹5000-10,000; 🏠📞) Hidden back from the beach but with the backwaters on your doorstep, Les 3 Elephants is a superb French-run ecoresort. The 11 beautifully designed boutique cottages are all different but have private sit-outs, thoughtful personal touches and lovely backwater views out to Chinese fishing nets. The restaurant serves home-cooked French-Indian fare. Worth the trip.

Chillout Cafe

CAFE $$

(mains ₹160-320; ☺ 9am-late Oct-May) For continental-style comfort food by the beach (think burgers, pizzas and barbecue) Chillout Cafe is a cool hang-out with sea breezes and a relaxed vibe.

Tripunithura

At Tripunithura, 16km southeast of Ernakulam, Hill Palace Museum (☎ 0484-2781113; admission ₹20; ☺ 9am-12.30pm & 2-4.30pm Tue-Sun) was formerly the residence of the Kochi royal family and is an impressive 49-building palace complex. It now houses the collections of the royal families, as well as 19th-century oil paintings, old coins, sculptures and paintings, and temple models. From Ernakulam catch the bus to Tripunithura from MG Rd or Shanmugham Rd, behind the Tourist Reception Centre (₹5 to ₹10, 45 minutes); an autorickshaw should cost around ₹300 return with one-hour waiting time.

Parur & Chennamangalam

Nowhere is the tightly woven religious cloth that is India more apparent than in Parur, 35km north of Kochi. Here, one of the oldest synagogues (admission ₹5; ☎ 9am-5pm Tue-Sun) in Kerala, at Chennamangalam, 8km from Parur, has been fastidiously renovated. Inside you can see door and ceiling wood reliefs in dazzling colours, while just outside lies one of the oldest tombstones in India, inscribed with the Hebrew date corresponding to 1269. The Jesuits first arrived in Chennamangalam in 1577 and there's a Jesuit church and the ruins of a Jesuit college nearby. Also here is a Hindu temple on a hill overlooking the Periyar River, a 16th-century mosque, and Muslim and Jewish burial grounds.

In Parur town, you'll find the agraharam (place of Brahmins) – a small street of closely packed and brightly coloured houses originally settled by Tamil Brahmins.

Parur is compact, but Chennamangalam is best visited with a guide. Travel agencies in Fort Cochin can organise tours.

Thrissur (Trichur)

📍 0487 / POP 315,600

While the rest of Kerala has its fair share of celebrations, untouristy, slightly chaotic Thrissur is the cultural cherry on the festival cake. With a list of energetic festivals as long as a temple elephant's trunk, the region supports several institutions that nurse the dying classical Keralan performing arts back to health. Centred on a large park (known as the 'Round') and temple complex, Thrissur is home to a Nestorian Christian community whose denomination dates to the 3rd century AD.

👁 Sights & Activities

Thrissur is renowned for its central temple, as well as for its numerous impressive churches, including the massive Our Lady of Lourdes Cathedral, towering, white-washed Puttanpalli (New) Church and the Chaldian (Nestorian) Church.

(adult/child ₹20/5, camera/video ₹50/250; ☺ 9.30am-1pm & 2-4.30pm Tue-Sun) The refurbished Archaeology Museum is housed in the wonderful 200-year-old Sakthan Thampuran Palace. Its mix of artefacts include 12th-century Kerala bronze sculptures, giant earthenware pots, weaponry, coins and a lovely carved chessboard. To the side is a shady heritage garden.

🌟 Festivals & Events

In a state where festivals are a way of life, Thrissur stands out for temple revelry.

Thypooya Maholsavam FESTIVAL
(☺ Jan/Feb) The festival stars a kavadiyatam (a form of ritualistic dance) procession in which dancers carry tall, ornate structures called kavadis.

Uthralikavu Pooram FESTIVAL
(☺ Mar/Apr) The climactic day of this event sees 20 elephants circling the shrine.

Thrissur Pooram FESTIVAL
(☺ Apr/May) At Vadakkumnathan Kshetram Temple, this is the largest and most colourful and biggest of Kerala's temple festivals with wonderful processions of caparisoned elephants.

(Palace Rd; dishes ₹80-130; ☺ 8am-10pm) In the Kalliyath Royal Square building, this bright, pure-veg place has a vintage feel and an extraordinary range of dosas, including jam, cheese and cashew versions. In the same complex is a Chinese restaurant (China Gate) and a fast-food joint (Celebrations).

Pathans Restaurant INDIAN $
(1st fl, Round South; dishes ₹30-80; ☺ 6.30am-9.30pm) On the 1st floor of the Pathans Hotel building, this easy-going place opens early for a cheap breakfast and is popular with families for lunch (thalis ₹50).

Navaratna Restaurant MULTICUISINE $$
(Round West; dishes ₹100-180; ☺ noon-9.30pm) Cool, dark and intimate, this is one of the classiest dining experiences in town, with seating on raised platforms. Downstairs is veg and upstairs is nonveg, with lots of North Indian specialities, Chinese and a few Kerala dishes.

📍 Information

There are several ATMs and internet cafes around town.

DTPC Office (☎ 0487-2320800; Palace Rd; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) You might be able to pick up some local brochures from this tourist office.

🚌 Getting There & Away

BUS

State buses leave around every 30 minutes from the KSRTC bus stand bound for Trivandrum (₹214, 7½ hours), Ernakulam (Kochi, ₹65, two hours), Calicut (₹102, 3½ hours), Palakkad (₹57, 1½ hours) and Kottayam (₹105, four hours). Hourly buses go to Coimbatore (₹94, three hours).

Regular services also chug along to Guruvayur (₹26, one hour), Irinjalakuda (₹25, one hour) and Cherthuruthy (₹28, 1½ hours). Two private bus stands (Sakthan Thampuran and Priyadarshini) have more frequent buses to these destinations, though the chaos involved in navigating each station hardly makes using them worthwhile.

TRAIN

Services run regularly to Ernakulam (2nd-class/AC chair ₹60/255, 1½ hours), Calicut (₹70/255, three hours) and Coimbatore (₹90/305, three hours).

Along with ayurvedic treatments, facilities include a pool, gym and business centre. It's about 30km north of Thrissur.

NORTHERN KERALA

Kozhikode (Calicut)

☎ 0495 / POP 432,100

Northern Kerala's largest city, Calicut was always a prosperous trading town and was once the capital of the formidable Zamorin dynasty. Vasco da Gama first landed near here in 1498, on his way to snatch a share of the subcontinent for king and country (Portugal that is). These days, trade depends mostly on exporting Indian labour to the Middle East, while agriculture and the timber industry are economic mainstays. For travellers it's mainly a jumping-off point for Wayanad or for the long trip over the ghats to Mysuru (Mysore) or Bengaluru (Bangalore.)

👁 Sights

Mananchira Square, a large central park, was the former courtyard of the Zamorins and preserves the original spring-fed tank. South of the centre, the 650-year-old Kuttichira Mosque is in an attractive wooden four-storey building that is supported by impressive wooden pillars and painted brilliant aquamarine, blue and white. The central Church of South India was established by Swiss missionaries in 1842 and has unique Euro-Keralan architecture.

About 1km west of Mananchira Square is Kozhikode Beach – not much for swimming but good enough for a sunset promenade.

🛏 Sleeping

Alakapuri HOTEL $
(☎ 0495-2723451; MM Ali Rd; s/d from ₹700/1300, with AC from ₹1600; 🍷) Built motel-style around a green lawn (complete with fountain!) this place is set back from a busy market area. Various rooms are a little scuffed and dingy, but reasonable value.

Beach Hotel HOTEL $$
(☎ 9745062055, 0495-2762055; www.beachheritage.com; Beach Rd; r with seaview or AC inc breakfast ₹3500; 🍷🍷) Built in 1890 to house the Malabar British Club, this is a slightly worn but charming 10-room hotel. Some have bathtubs and secluded sea-facing verandahs; others have original polished wooden floors and private balconies. All are tastefully furnished and drip with character.

Hyson Heritage HOTEL $$
(☎ 0495-4081000; www.hysonheritage.com; Bank Rd; s/d inc breakfast from ₹2700/3600; 🍷🍷) You get a bit of swank for your rupee at this central business hotel. Rooms are spick and span and shielded from the main road. There's a good restaurant and a gym.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Paragon Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Kannur Rd; dishes ₹125-340; ☎8am-midnight, lunch from noon) You might struggle to find a seat at this always-packed restaurant, founded in 1939. The overwhelming menu is famous for fish dishes such as fish in tamarind sauce, and its legendary chicken biryani.

Salkaram & Hut

INDIAN $$

(Beach Rd; mains ₹110-290; ☎7am-10.30pm) At the back of the Beach Hotel are two restaurants with the same menu: the air-con Salkaram, and the cool open-sided bamboo 'hut' restaurant-bar serving a big range of fish and chicken dishes and Malabari cuisine. It's a breezy place for a cold beer..

📍 Getting There & Away

AIR

Calicut airport is about 25km south of the city in Karipur. It serves major domestic routes as well as international flights to the Gulf.

Spicejet has the best domestic connections with direct flights to Mumbai, Bangalore and Chennai. Air India (☎2771974; 5/2521 Bank Rd, Eroth Centre) flies to Kochi and Coimbatore. Jet Airways (☎2712375; Calicut Airport) has one daily flight to Mumbai. Flights to Goa go via Bangalore or Mumbai.

BUS

The new KSRTC bus stand (Mavoor Rd) has government buses to Bengaluru (Bangalore, via Mysore, ₹335-500, eight hours, 10 daily), Mangalore (₹300, seven hours, three daily) and to Ooty (₹130, 5½ hours, 5am & 6.45am). There are frequent buses to Thrissur (₹100, 3½ hours) and Kochi (₹180, four hours, eight daily). For Wayanad district, buses leave every 15 minutes heading to Sultanbatheri (₹75, three hours) via Kalpetta (₹60, two hours). Private buses for various long-distance locations also use this stand.

TRAIN

The train station is 1km south of Mananchira Sq. There are frequent trains to Kannur (2nd-class/sleeper/3AC ₹60/140/485, two hours), Mangalore (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹195/535/735, five hours), Ernakulam (₹165/485/690, 4½ hours) via Thrissur (₹200/535/735, three hours), and all the way to Trivandrum (₹275/705/985, 11 hours).

Heading southeast, trains go to Coimbatore (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹170/535/735, 4½ hours), via Palakkad (₹140/485/690, 3½ hours).

i Getting Around

Calicut has a glut of autorickshaws and most are happy to use the meter. It costs about ₹40 from the station to the KSRTC bus stand or most hotels. An autorickshaw/taxi to the airport costs around ₹400/600.

Wayanad Wildlife Sanctuary

Many Keralans rate the Wayanad region as the most beautiful part of their state. Encompassing part of a remote forest reserve that spills into Tamil Nadu and Karnataka, Wayanad's landscape combines epic mountain scenery, rice paddies of ludicrous green, skinny betel nut trees, bamboo, red earth, spiky ginger fields, and rubber, cardamom and coffee plantations. Foreign travellers are making it here in increasing numbers, partly because it provides easy access between Mysuru (Mysore) or Bengaluru (Bangalore) and Kerala, but it's still fantastically unspoilt and satisfyingly remote. It's also an excellent place to spot wild elephants.

The 345-sq-km sanctuary has two separate pockets – Muthanga in the east bordering Tamil Nadu, and Tholpetty in the north bordering Karnataka. Three main towns in Wayanad district make good bases and transport hubs for exploring the sanctuary – Kalpetta in the south, Sultanbathery (Sultan Battery) in the east and Mananthavadi in the northwest – though the best of the accommodation is scattered throughout the region. Most hotels and homestays can arrange guided jeep tours to various parts of Wayanad.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Wayanad Wildlife Sanctuary

NATURE RESERVE

(www.wayanadsanctuary.org; admission to each part Indian/foreigner ₹115/300, camera/video ₹40/225; ☀️ 7-10am & 3-5pm) Entry to both parts of the sanctuary is only permitted as part of a jeep safari, which can be arranged at the sanctuary entrances. At the time of research there was no trekking in the park for safety reasons. Both Tholpetty and Muthanga close during the June to August monsoon period.

At Tholpetty (📍 04935-250853; jeep tours ₹500; ☀️ 7-10am & 3-5pm), the two-hour jeep tours can be rough going but are a great way to spot wildlife. Similar tours are available at Muthanga (📍 0493-6271010; jeep tours ₹500). At both locations arrive at least an hour before the morning or afternoon openings to register and secure a vehicle, as there are a limited number of guides and jeeps permitted in the park at one time.

Thirunelly Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ dawn-dusk) Thought to be one of the oldest on the subcontinent, Thirunelly Temple is 10km from Tholpetty. Non-Hindus cannot enter, but it's worth visiting for the otherworldly cocktail of ancient and intricate pillars. Follow the path behind the temple to the stream known as Papanasini, where Hindus believe you can wash away all your sins.

Edakal Caves

CAVES

(adult/child ₹20/10, camera ₹30; ☀️ 9am-4pm Tue-Sun) The highlight of these remote hilltop 'caves' – more accurately a small series of caverns – is the ancient collection of petroglyphs in the top cave, thought to date back over 3000 years. From the car park near Ambalavayal it's a steep 20-minute walk up a winding road to the ticket window, then another steep climb up to the light-filled top chamber. On a clear day there are exceptional views out over the Wayanad district. The caves get crowded on weekends and are closed Monday.

Wayanad Heritage Museum

MUSEUM

(Ambalavayal; admission ₹20; ☀️ 9am-5pm) In the small village of Ambalavayal, about 5km from Edva Caves, this museum exhibits headgear, weapons, pottery, carved stone and other artefacts dating back to the 15th century that shed light on Wayanad's significant Adivasi population.

Uravu

HANDICRAFTS CENTRE

(📍 0493-6231400; www.uravu.net; Thrikkaipetta; ☀️ 8.30am-5pm Mon-Sat) 🍃 Around 6km southeast of Kalpetta a collective of workers create all sorts of artefacts from bamboo. You can visit the artists' workshops, where they work on looms, paintings and carvings, and support their work by buying vases, lampshades, bangles and baskets.

Kannur Ayurvedic Centre

AYURVEDA

(☎ 0436203001; www.ayurvedawayanad.com; Kalpetta; massage from ₹1200, yoga & meditation ₹1200; ☺ yoga classes 6-7am) For rejuvenation and curative ayurvedic treatments, visit this small, government-certified and family-run clinic, in the backstreets of Kalpetta. Accommodation and yoga classes available.

Trekking

There are some top opportunities for independent trekking around the district (though not in the wildlife sanctuary itself). Top treks include Chembra Peak (2100m), the area's tallest summit; Vellarimala, with great views and lots of wildlife-spotting opportunities; and Pakshipathalam, a seven-hour return mountain trek in the northern Brahmagiri Hills that takes you to a formation of large boulders high in the forest. Permits and guides are mandatory and can be arranged at forest offices in South or North Wayanad or through your accommodation. The standard cost for permit and guide is ₹2500 for up to five people – try to arrange a group in advance. The DTPC office in Kalpetta also organises trekking guides and transport.

Sleeping & Eating

There's plenty of accommodation in Wayanad's towns, but the isolated homestays or resort accommodation scattered throughout the region are better choices.

Kalpetta

PPS Residency

The elegant house has sweeping verandahs filled with plants and handsome furniture, and there are two tree houses that may be the finest in the state. A network of marked walking trails meander around the plantation.

Information

The DTPC office (☎ 04936202134; www.dtpc-wayanad.com; Kalpetta; 🕒 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) at Kalpetta can help organise tours, permits and trekking. There are UAE Exchange offices in Kalpetta and Sultanbatheri, and ATMs can be found in each of the three main towns.

Getting There & Away

Although remote, Wayanad is easily accessible by bus from Calicut and Kannur in Kerala, and from Mysore (Karnataka) and Ooty (Tamil Nadu). Buses brave the winding roads – including nine spectacular hairpin bends – between Calicut and Kalpetta (₹60 to ₹76, two hours) every 15 minutes, with some continuing on to Sultanbatheri (₹80, three hours) and others to Mananthavadi (₹87, three hours). Hourly buses run between Kannur and Mananthavadi (₹70, 2½ hours).

From Sultanbatheri, an 8am bus heads out for Ooty (₹100, four hours), with a second one passing through town at around 12.45pm. Buses run from Kalpetta to Mysore (₹130 to ₹160, four hours, hourly), via Sultanbatheri, but note that the border gate is closed between 7pm and 6am. There are four daily buses to Mysore (₹144, three hours) on the northern route from Mananthavadi, where the border is open 24 hours.

i Getting Around

The Wayanad district is quite spread out but plenty of private buses connect the main towns of Mananthavadi, Kalpetta and Sultanbatheri every 10 to 20 minutes during daylight hours (₹15 to ₹25, 45 minutes to one hour). From Mananthavadi, regular buses also head to Tholpetty (₹15, one hour). You can hire jeeps or taxis to get between towns for ₹600 to ₹800 each way, or hire a vehicle to tour the region for around ₹2000 per day.

There are plenty of autorickshaws and taxis for short hops within the towns.

Kannur & Around

📍 0497 / POP 1.2 MILLION

Kerala's northern coast is far less touristied than the south, which for many is an attraction in its own right. The main draw in this part of coastal Kerala are the beautiful, undeveloped beaches and the enthralling theyyam possession rituals.

Under the Kolathiri rajas, Kannur (Cannanore) was a major port bristling with international trade – explorer Marco Polo christened it a 'great emporium of spice trade'. Since then, the usual colonial suspects, including the Portuguese, Dutch and British, have had a go at exerting their influence on the region. Today it is an unexciting, though agreeable, town known mostly for its weaving industry and cashew trade.

This is a predominantly Muslim area, so local sensibilities should be kept in mind: wear a sarong over your bikini on the beach.

👁 Sights & Activities

Kannur's main town beach is the 4km-long Payyambalam Beach (beach park ₹5, camera ₹25), which starts about 1.5km east of the train station, just past the military cantonment. The beach park gets busy in the evening when families and couples come down to watch the sunset and picnic.

Loknath Weavers' Co-operative

HANDICRAFTS WORKSHOP

📍 0497-2726330; 🕒 8.30am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) FREE Established in 1955, this is one of the oldest cooperatives in Kannur and occupies a large building busily clicking with the sound of looms. You can stop by for a quick (free) tour; the shop here displays the fruits of the workers' labours (with the obligatory sales pitch). It's 4km south of Kannur town.

Kerala Dinesh

Beedi Co-Operative HANDICRAFTS WORKSHOP

📍 0497-2835280; www.keraladinesh.com; 🕒 8am-6pm Tue-Sat) FREE The Kannur region is known for the manufacture of beedis, those tiny Indian cigarettes deftly rolled inside green leaves. This is one of the largest and purportedly best manufacturers, with a factory at Thottada, 7km south of Kannur and about 4km from Thottada Beach. A skilled individual can roll up to 1000 a day! Visitors are welcome to look around; an autorickshaw should cost around ₹120 return from Kannur town.

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

Although there are plenty of hotels in Kannur town, the best places to stay are homestays near the beach at Thottada (8km south) and towards Thalassery.

Getting There & Away

BUS

Kannur has several bus stands: the enormous central bus stand – is the place to catch private and some government buses, but most long-distance buses still use the KSRTC bus stand near the Caltex junction, 1km northeast of the train station.

There are daily buses to Mysore (₹200, eight hours, six daily), Madikeri (₹80, 2½ hours, 11am) and Ooty (via Wayanad, ₹225, nine hours, 7.30am & 10pm). For the Wayanad region, buses leave every hour from the central bus stand to Mananthavadi (₹80, 2½ hours).

For Thottada Beach, take bus No 29 (₹8) from Plaza Junction opposite the train station and get off at Adikalalayi village.

THEYYAM

Kerala's most popular ritualistic art form, theyyam is believed to pre-date Hinduism, originating from folk dances performed during harvest celebrations. An intensely local ritual, it's often performed in kavus (sacred groves) throughout northern Kerala.

Theyyam refers both to the shape of the deity/hero portrayed, and to the actual ritual. There are around 450 different theyyams, each with a distinct costume, made up of face paint, bracelets, breastplates, skirts, garlands and exuberant, intricately crafted headdresses that can be up to 6m or 7m tall. During performances, each protagonist loses his physical identity and speaks, moves and blesses the devotees as if he were that deity. Frenzied dancing and wild drumming create an atmosphere in which a deity indeed might, if it so desired, manifest itself in human form.

During October to May there are annual rituals at each of the hundreds of kavus. Theyyams are often held to bring good fortune to important events such as marriages and housewarmings. The best place for visitors to see theyyam is in village temples in the Kannur region of northern Kerala (most frequently between late November and mid-April). In peak times (December to February) there should be a theyyam ritual happening somewhere almost every night.

Although tourists are welcome to attend, this is not a dance performance but a religious ritual, and the usual rules of temple behaviour apply: dress appropriately, avoid disturbing participants and villagers; refrain from displays of public affection. Photography is permitted, but avoid using a flash. For details on where and when, ask at your guesthouse or contact Kurien at Costa Malabari in Thottada Beach..

TRAIN

There are frequent daily trains to Calicut (2nd-class/AC chair ₹60/255, 1½ hours), Ernakulam (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹220/535/735, 6½ hours) and Alleppey (₹245/625/870). Heading north there are express trains to Mangalore (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹140/485/690, three hours) and up to Goa (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹350/910/1285, eight hours).

Bekal & Around

Bekal and nearby Palakunnu and Udma, in Kerala's far north, have some long white-sand beaches begging for DIY exploration. The area is gradually being colonised by glitzy five-star resorts catering to fresh-from-the-Gulf millionaires, but it's still worth the trip for off-the-beaten-track adventurers.

The laterite-brick Bekal Fort (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀️8am-5pm), built between 1645 and 1660, sits on Bekal's rocky headland and houses a small Hindu temple and plenty of goats. Next door, Bekal Beach (admission ₹5) encompasses a grassy park and a long, beautiful stretch of sand that turns into a circus on weekends and holidays when local families descend here for rambunctious leisure time. Isolated Kappil Beach, 6km north of Bekal, is a beautiful, lonely stretch of fine sand and calm water, but beware of shifting sandbars.

Apart from the five-star Vivanta by Taj and Lalit hotels in Bekal, there are lots of cheap, poor-quality hotels scattered between Kanhangad (12km south) and Kasaragod (10km north), with a few notable exceptions.

Built according to the principles of Kerala Vastu, the resort has an infinity pool, nearly 5 hectares of lush gardens fragrant with frangipani, superb organic food and yoga programs.

i Getting There & Around

A couple of local trains stop at Fort Bekal station, right on Bekal Beach. Kanhangad, 12km south, and Kasaragod, 10km to the north, are major train stops. Frequent buses run from Bekal to both Kanhangad and Kasaragod (around ₹12, 20 minutes), from where you can pick up major trains to Mangalore, Goa or south to Kochi. An autorickshaw from Bekal Junction to Kappil Beach is around ₹60.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

VALIYAPARAMBA BACKWATERS

Kerala's 'northern backwaters' offer an intriguing alternative to better-known waterways down south. This large body of water is fed by five rivers and fringed by ludicrously green groves of nodding palms. One of the nearest towns is Payyanur, 50km north of Kannur. It's possible to catch the ferry from Kotti, from where KSWTD operates local ferries to the surrounding islands. The 2½-hour trip (₹10) from Kotti takes you to the Ayitti Jetty, 8km from Payyanur, from where you can also catch the return ferry.

You can stay at the peaceful Valiyaparamba Retreat (📍0484-2371761; www.touristdesk.in/valiyaparambarettreat.htm; d incl meals ₹3000), a secluded place 15km north of Payyanur and 3km from Ayitti Jetty. It has two simple rooms and two stilted bungalows, fronted by an empty golden-sand beach. Kochi's Tourist Desk (p986) also runs day trips on a traditional houseboat around the Valiyaparamba Backwaters.

Around 22km south of Bekal, Bekal Boat Stay (📍0467-2282633, 9447469747; www.bekalboatstay.com; Kottappuram, Nileshtar) offers overnight houseboat trips (₹6000 to ₹8000) around the Valiyaparamba backwaters. Day cruises (₹4000 for up to six people) are also available. It's about 2km from Nileshtar – get off any bus between Kannur and Bekal and take an autorickshaw from there (₹30).

LAKSHADWEEP

POP 64,500

Comprising a string of 36 palm-covered, white-sand-skirted coral islands 300km off the coast of Kerala, Lakshadweep is as stunning as it is isolated. Only 10 of these islands are inhabited, mostly by Sunni Muslim fishermen, and foreigners are only allowed to stay on a few of these. With fishing and coir production the main sources of income, local life on the islands remains highly traditional, and a caste system divides the islanders between Koya (land owners), Malmi (sailors) and Melachery (farmers).

The real attraction of the islands lies under the water: the 4200 sq km of pristine archipelago lagoons, unspoiled coral reefs and warm tropical waters.

Lakshadweep can only be visited on a prearranged package trip. At the time of research, resorts on Kadmat, Minicoy, Kavaratti, Agatti and Bangaram islands were open to tourists – though most visits to the islands are boat-based packages which include a cruise from Kochi, island visits, watersports, and nights spent on board. Packages include permits and meals, and can be arranged through SPORTS.

PERMITS

At the time of writing, foreigners were allowed to stay at the government resorts on Kadmat and Minicoy islands, Agatti (which has a private resort and the only airport), Kavaratti and Bangaram (tent resort); enquire at SPORTS. Visits require a special permit (one month's notice) which can be organised by tour operators or SPORTS in Kochi.

Getting There & Away

Air India flies between Kochi and Agatti Island (from ₹7000 return) daily except Sunday. Boat transport between Agatti and Kadmat or Kavaratti is included in the package tours available.

Six passenger ships – MV Kavaratti, MV Arabian Sea, MV Lakshadweep Sea, MV Bharat Seema, MV Amindivi and MV Minicoy operate between Kochi and Lakshadweep, taking 14 to 20 hours.

Cruise packages start from a weekend package (adult/child ₹6185/7216) to a five-day three-island cruise from ₹17,000/24,000.

Why Go?

Tamil Nadu is the homeland of one of humanity's living classical civilisations, stretching back uninterrupted for two millennia and very much alive today in the Tamils' language, dance, poetry and Hindu religion.

But this state, with its age-old trading vocation, is as dynamic as it is immersed in tradition. Fire-worshipping devotees who smear tikka on their brows in the famously spectacular Tamil temples might rush off to IT offices to develop new software applications – and then unwind at a swanky night-time haunt in rapidly modernising Chennai (Madras). When the heat and noise of Tamil Nadu's temple towns overwhelm, escape to the very end of India where three seas mingle, or up to the cool, forest-clad, wild-life-prowled Western Ghats. It's all packed into a state that remains proudly distinct from the rest of India, while at the same time being among the most welcoming.

When to Go

Chennai

Jan Pongal (harvest) celebrations spill into the streets and the weather is at its (relative) coolest.

Jul–Sep Hit the hill stations after the crowded 'season' but while the weather is still good.

Nov–Dec The full-moon festival of lights.

Tamil Nadu Highlights

- 2 Climbing into the cool, misty forests of the Western Ghats at Kodaikanal (p1066) or Ooty (p1076)
- 3 Admiring the magnificence of Chola architecture at Thanjavur's Brihadishwara Temple (p1047)
- 4 Spending the night in an opulent mansion in Chettinadu (p1054)
- 5 Exploring the countless faces of the traditional but cosmopolitan capital Chennai (Madras; p1003)
- 6 Getting lost in the colour of Madurai's Meenakshi Amman Temple (p1057)
- 7 Relaxing at tranquil Tranquebar (p1043), a quirky old Danish colony
- 8 Tracking down rare, exotic wildlife at Mudumalai Tiger Reserve (p1082)

History

The Tamils consider themselves the standard bearers of Dravidian – pre-Aryan Indian – civilisation. Dravidians are defined as speakers of languages of the Dravidian family, the four most important of which are all rooted in South India – Tamil, Malayalam (Kerala), Telugu (Telangana and Andhra Pradesh) and Kannada (Karnataka). South Indian cultures and history are distinct from Aryan North India, and Tamils' ability to trace their identity back in an unbroken line to classical antiquity is a source of considerable pride.

Despite the Dravidians' long-standing southern location, elements of Dravidian culture – including a meditating god seated in the lotus position, possibly the world's first depiction of the yogi archetype – existed in the early Indus civilisations of northwest India some 4000 years ago. Whether Dravidian culture was widespread around India before Aryan cultures appeared in the north in the 2nd millennium BC, or whether the Dravidians only reached the south because the Aryans drove them from the north, is a matter of debate. But there is no question that the cushion of distance has allowed South Indian cultures to develop with little interruption from northern influences or invasions for over 2000 years.

The Tamil language was well established in Tamil Nadu by the 3rd century BC, the approximate start of the Sangam Age, when Tamil poets produced the body of classical literature known as Sangam literature. Romantic versions of the era have the region ruled by feuding poet-kings; one visitor described the Tamils as favouring rose petals over gold.

The Sangam period lasted until about AD 300, with three main Tamil dynasties arising in different parts of Tamil Nadu (Tamil Country): the early Cholas in the centre, the Cheras in the west and the Pandyas in the south.

By the 7th century the Pallavas, also Tamil, established an empire based at Kanchi-puram extending from Tamil Nadu north into Andhra Pradesh. They take credit for the great stone carvings of Mamallapuram (Mahabalipuram) and also constructed the region's first free-standing temples.

Next up were the medieval Cholas (whose connection with the early Cholas is hazy). Based in the Cauvery valley of central Tamil Nadu, at their peak the Cholas ruled Sri Lanka and the Maldives plus much of South India, and extended their influence to Southeast Asia, spreading Tamil ideas of reincarnation, karma and yogic practice.

The Cholas raised Dravidian architecture to new levels with the magnificent towered temples of Thanjavur and Gangaikondacholapuram, and carried the art of bronze image casting to its peak, especially in their images of Shiva as Nataraja, the cosmic dancer. Gopurams, the tall temple gate towers characteristic of Tamil Nadu today, make their appearance in late Chola times.

By the late 14th century much of Tamil Nadu was under the sway of the Vijayanagar empire based at Hampi in Karnataka. As the Vijayanagar state weakened in the 16th century, some of their local governors, the Nayaks, set up strong independent kingdoms, notably at Madurai and Thanjavur. Vijayanagar and Nayak sculptors carved wonderfully detailed statues and reliefs at many Tamil temples.

Europeans first landed on Tamil shores in the 16th century, when the Portuguese settled at San Thome. The Dutch, British, French and Danes followed in the 17th century, striking deals with local rulers to set up coastal trading colonies. Eventually it came down to the British, based at Chennai (then called Madras), against the French, based at Puducherry (then called Pondicherry), for supremacy among the colonial rivals. The British won out in the three Carnatic Wars, fought between 1744 and 1763. By the end of the 18th century British dominance over the majority of Tamil lands was assured.

The area governed by the British from Madras, the Madras Presidency, included parts of Andhra Pradesh, Kerala and Karnataka, an arrangement that continued after Indian independence in 1947, until Kerala, Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh and present-day Tamil Nadu (130,058 sq km) were created on linguistic lines in the 1950s. It wasn't until 1968 that the current state (population 72.1 million) was officially named Tamil Nadu.

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Pongal (statewide; ☀️ mid-Jan) marks the end of the harvest season and is one of Tamil Nadu's most important festivals, named after a rice-and-lentil dish cooked at this time in new clay pots. Animals, especially cows, are honoured for their contributions.

Other important festivals include:

International Yoga Festival (p1038; ☀️ 4–7 Jan) Shows, workshops and competitions in Puducherry.

Thyagaraja Aradhana (p1049; ☀️ Jan) Carnatic music in Thiruvaiyaru.

Teppam (Float) Festival (p1058; ☀️ Jan/Feb) Meenakshi temple deities are paraded around Madurai.

Natyanjali Dance Festival (p1044; ☀️ Feb/Mar) Five days of professional classical dance in Chidambaram.

Chithirai Festival (p1059; ☀️ Apr/May) Two-week event in Madurai celebrating the marriage of Meenakshi to Sundaeswarar (Shiva).

Karthikai Deepam Festival (p1033; statewide; ☀️ Nov/Dec) Festival of lights.

Chennai Festival of Music & Dance (p1009; ☀️ mid-Dec–mid-Jan) A huge celebration of South Indian music and dance in the state capital.

Mamallapuram Dance Festival (p1025; ☀️ Dec–Jan) Four weekends of classical and folk dance from across India on open-air stages in Mamallapuram.

CHENNAI (MADRAS)

📍 044 / POP 8.7 MILLION

With its withering southern heat, roaring traffic and scarcity of outstanding sights, the 'capital of the south' has always been the rather dowdy sibling among India's four biggest cities. But if you have time to explore Chennai's diverse neighbourhoods and role as keeper of South Indian artistic and religious traditions, the odds are this 400-sq-km conglomerate of urban villages will sneak its way into your heart.

Among Chennai's greatest assets are its people, who are infectiously enthusiastic about their hometown; they won't hit you with a lot of hustle and hassle. Recent years have added a new layer of cosmopolitan glamour, in the shape of luxury hotels, sparkling boutiques, classy contemporary restaurants and a sprinkling of swanky bars and clubs open well into the night.

Even if you're just caught here between connections, it's well worth poking around the museums, exploring the temples or taking a sunset saunter along Marina Beach.

The old British Fort St George and the jumble of narrow streets and bazaars that is George Town constitute the historic hub of the city. The two main train stations, Egmore and Central, sit inland from the fort. Much of the best eating, drinking, shopping and accommodation lies in the leafier southern and southwestern suburbs such as Nungambakkam, T Nagar (Thyagaraya Nagar), Alwarpet and, increasingly, Velachery and Guindy. The major thoroughfare linking northern with southern Chennai is Anna Salai (Mount Rd).

History

The southern neighbourhood of Mylapore existed long before the rest of Chennai and there is evidence that it traded with Roman and even Chinese and Greek merchants. The Portuguese established their San Thome settlement on the coast nearby in 1523. Another century passed before Francis Day and the British East India Company rocked up in 1639, searching for a good southeast Indian trading base, and struck a deal with the local Vijayanagar ruler to build a fort-cum-trading-post at Madraspatnam fishing village. This was Fort St George, erected between 1640 and 1653.

The three Carnatic Wars between 1744 and 1763 saw Britain and its colonialist rival France allying with competing South Indian princes in their efforts to get the upper hand over the locals – and each other. The French occupied Fort St George from 1746 to 1749 but the British eventually won out, and the French withdrew to Pondicherry.

As capital of the Madras Presidency, one of the four major divisions of British India, Madras grew into an important naval and commercial centre. After Independence, it became capital of Madras state and its successor Tamil Nadu. The city itself was renamed Chennai in 1996. Today, it's often called 'the Detroit of India' for its boom vehicle industry, and it is a major IT hub.

📍 Central Chennai

★ Government Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p1010; www.chennaiuseum.org; Pantheon Rd, Egmore; Indian/foreigner ₹15/250, camera/video ₹200/500; 🕒9.30am-5pm Sat-Thu)

Housed across the British-built Pantheon Complex, this excellent museum is Chennai's best. The big highlight is building 3, the Bronze Gallery, with a superb collection of South Indian bronzes from the 7th-century Pallava era through to modern times, and English-language explanatory material.

It was from the 9th to 11th centuries, in the Chola period, that bronze sculpture peaked. Among the Bronze Gallery's impressive pieces are many of Shiva as Nataraja, the cosmic dancer, and a superb Chola bronze of Ardhanarishvara, the androgynous incarnation of Shiva and Parvati.

The main building (No 1) has a good archaeological section representing all the major South Indian periods from 2nd-century-BC Buddhist sculptures to 16th-century- Vijayanagar work, with special rooms devoted to Hindu, Buddhist and Jain sculpture. Building 2, the Anthropology Galleries, traces South Indian human history back to prehistoric times, displaying tribal artefacts from across the region.

The museum also includes the National Art Gallery, Contemporary Art Gallery and Children's Museum, on the same ticket. You may find some sections temporarily closed for renovation.

High Court

NOTABLE BUILDING

(Map p1004; Parry's Corner) Completed in 1892, this imposing red Indo-Saracenic structure is said to be the largest judicial building in the world after the Courts of London. Depending on current regulations, you may or may not be allowed to wander the grounds on Sundays until 1pm. If you fancy trying, take your passport.

★Fort St George

FORT

(Map p1004; Rajaji Salai; ☉9am-5pm) Finished in 1653 by the British East India Company, the fort has undergone many facelifts over the years. Inside the vast perimeter walls is now a precinct housing Tamil Nadu's Legislative Assembly & Secretariat, and a smattering of older buildings. One of these, the Fort Museum (Map p1004; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☉9am-5pm Sat-Thu), has displays on Chennai's origins and the fort itself, and interesting military memorabilia and artwork from colonial times. The 1st-floor portrait gallery of colonial-era VIPs includes a very assured-looking Robert Clive (Clive of India).

Also within the fort is St Mary's Church (Map p1004; ☉10am-5pm Mon-Sat), completed in 1680, and India's oldest surviving British church. To its right is the former Admiralty House (Clive's House). Clive's Corner (Map p1004; ☉9am-6pm) FREE, at the end of the building, houses a quirky memorial museum to Robert Clive.

Marina Beach

BEACH

(Map p1004) Take an early-morning or evening stroll (you really don't want to roast here at any other time) along the 3km-long main stretch of Marina Beach and you'll pass cricket matches, flying kites, fortune-tellers, fish markets, corn-roasters and families enjoying the sea breeze. Don't swim: strong rips make it dangerous. At its southern end, the newly reopened, ridiculously popular Madras Lighthouse (Map p1004; Marina Beach; Indian/foreigner ₹20/50, camera ₹25; ☉10am-1pm & 3-5pm Tue-Sun) is India's only lighthouse with a lift; the panoramic city and beach views are fabulous.

Parthasarathy Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p1004; Singarachari St, Triplicane; ☉6am-noon & 4-9pm) Built under the 8th-century Pallavas and unusually dedicated to Krishna (a form of Vishnu) as the charioteer Parthasarathy, this is one of Chennai's oldest temples. Most of its elaborate carvings, however, date from its 16th-century Vijayanagar expansion, including the fine colonnade fronting the main entrance. It's special for its shrines dedicated to five of the incarnations of Vishnu.

Vivekananda House

MUSEUM

(Vivekanandar Illam, Ice House; Map p1004; www.vivekanandahouse.org; Kamarajar Salai; adult/child ₹10/5; ☉10am-12.15pm & 3-7.15pm Thu-Tue) The marshmallow-pink Vivekananda House is

DRAVIDIAN PRIDE

Since before Indian Independence in 1947, Tamil politicians have railed against caste (which they see as favouring light-skinned Brahmins) and the Hindi language (seen as North Indian cultural imperialism). The pre-Independence 'Self Respect' movement and Justice Party, influenced by Marxism, mixed South Indian communal values with class-war rhetoric, and spawned Tamil political parties that remain the major powers in Tamil Nadu today. In the early post-Independence decades there was even a movement for an independent Dravida Nadu nation comprising the four main South Indian peoples, but there was little solidarity between different groups. Today Dravidian politics is largely restricted to Tamil Nadu, where parties are often led by former film stars.

During the conflict in nearby Sri Lanka, many Indian Tamil politicians loudly defended the Tamil Tigers, the organisation that assassinated Rajiv Gandhi in a village near Chennai (Madras) in 1991. There is still considerable prejudice among the generally tolerant Tamils towards anything Sinhalese. The most obvious sign of Tamil pride that you'll see today is the white shirt and white mundu (sarong), worn by any Tamil public figure worth their salt.

interesting not only for its displays on the famous 'wandering monk', Swami Vivekananda, but also for its semicircular form, built in 1842 to store ice imported from the USA. Vivekananda stayed here briefly in 1897 and preached his ascetic Hindu philosophy to adoring crowds. The displays include a photo exhibition on the swami's life and the room where Vivekananda stayed, now used for meditation. Free weekly one-hour meditation classes may be available.

🕉 Southern Chennai

★ Kapaleeshwarar Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(Map p1004; Ponnambala Vathiar St, Mylapore; ☎ 5.30am-12.15pm & 4-9.30pm) The Mylapore neighbourhood is one of Chennai's most characterful and traditional; it predated colonial Madras by several centuries. The Kapaleeshwarar Temple is Chennai's most active and impressive temple, believed to have been built after the Portuguese destroyed the seaside original in 1566. It displays the main architectural elements of many a Tamil Nadu temple – a rainbow-coloured gopuram (gateway tower), pillared mandapas (pillared pavilions), and a huge tank – and is dedicated to the state's most popular deity, Shiva.

Legend tells that in an angry fit Shiva turned his consort Parvati into a peacock, and commanded her to worship him here to regain her normal form. Parvati supposedly did so at a spot just outside the northeast corner of the temple's central block, where a shrine commemorates the event. Hence the name Mylapore, or 'town of peacocks'.

The temple's colourful Brahmsavam festival (in March/April) sees the deities paraded around Mylapore's streets.

★ San Thome Cathedral CHURCH
(Map p1004; www.santhomechurch.com; Santhome High Rd; ☎ 6am-7.30pm) This soaring Roman Catholic cathedral, a stone's throw from the beach, was founded by the Portuguese in the 16th century, then rebuilt in neo-Gothic style in 1896, and is said to mark the final resting place of St Thomas the Apostle. It's believed 'Doubting Thomas' brought Christianity to the subcontinent in AD 52 and was killed at St Thomas Mount, Chennai, in AD 72. Behind the cathedral is the entrance to the tomb of St Thomas (Map p1004; admission free; ☎ 6am-8pm).

Although most of St Thomas' mortal remains are presently now in Italy, a small cross on the tomb wall contains a tiny bone fragment marked 'Relic of St Thomas'. The museum above displays Thomas-related artefacts including the lancehead believed to have killed him.

St Thomas' Pole, at the beach end of the street on the cathedral's south side, is said to have miraculously saved the cathedral from the 2004 tsunami.

Sri Ramakrishna Math RELIGIOUS COMPLEX
(Map p1004; www.chennai.math.org; 31 RK Mutt Rd; ☎ Universal Temple 4.30-11.45am & 3-9pm, evening prayers 6.30-7.30pm) The tranquil, flowery grounds of the Ramakrishna Math are a world away from the chaos outside. Orange-robed monks glide around and there's a reverential feel. The Math is a monastic order following the teachings of the 19th-century sage Sri Ramakrishna, who preached the essential unity of all religions. The Universal Temple here is a handsome modern building incorporating architectural elements from several different religions. It's open to all, to worship, pray or meditate.

Theosophical Society GARDEN
(www.ts-adyar.org; south end of Thiru Vi Ka Bridge, Adyar; ☎ grounds 8.30-10am & 2-4pm Mon-Sat) FREE Between the Adyar River and the coast, the 100-hectare grounds of the Theosophical Society provide a peaceful, green, vehicle-free retreat from the city. A lovely spot just to wander, they contain a church, mosque, Buddhist shrine, Zoroastrian temple and Hindu temple as well as a huge variety of native and introduced flora, including the offshoots of a 400-year-old banyan tree torn down by a storm in the 1980s.

The Adyar Library (1yr reader's card ₹50, deposit ₹250; ☎ 9am-5pm Tue-Sun) here has a huge collection of religion and philosophy books (some on display), from 1000-year-old Buddhist scrolls to handmade 19th-century Bibles.

During morning class times visitors can (quietly) wander the grounds, and visit the Rukmini

Devi Museum. Across the road is the Kalashetra Craft Centre where you can see Kanchipuram-style hand-loom weaving, textile block-printing and the fascinating, rare art of kalamkari (hand-painting on textiles with vegetable dyes).

The Thiruvanniyur bus stand, terminus of many city bus routes, is 500m west of the Kalakshetra entrance.

While here it's also worth visiting the Book Building (☎ 044-24426696; www.tara books.com; Plot 9, CGE Colony, Kuppam Beach Rd, Thiruvanniyur; ☉ 10am-7.30pm Mon-Sat), 700m south of Kalakshetra, where Tara Books stages free exhibitions, talks and workshops, as well as displaying its own highly original handmade books. With prior notice, you can visit the book-making workshop (10 minutes' drive away).

St Thomas Mount

SACRED SITE

(Parangi Malai; off Lawrence Rd; camera ₹10; ☉ 6am-8pm) The reputed site of St Thomas' martyrdom in AD 72 rises in the southwest of the city, 2.5km north of St Thomas Mount train station. The Church of Our Lady of Expectation, built atop the 'mount' by the Portuguese in 1523, contains what are supposedly a fragment of Thomas' finger bone and a cross he carved; the city views are wonderful.

TRADITIONAL TRADERS

Even as Chennai expands relentlessly to the south, west and north, George Town, the local settlement that grew up near the British Fort St George, remains the city's wholesale centre. Many of its narrow streets are entirely devoted to selling one particular product, as they have for hundreds of years – flowers in Badrian St, paper goods in Anderson St, jewellery on NSC Bose Rd. Even if you aren't buying, wander the mazelike streets to see Indian life flowing seamlessly from the past into the present.

Sleeping

Hotels in Chennai are pricier than in the rest of Tamil Nadu and don't, as a rule, offer much bang for your buck. The Triplicane High Rd area is best for budget accommodation. There are some cheapies in Egmore, along with a few good midrange options. The number of top-end hotels has risen dramatically over the past couple of years, mostly in the more middle-class southern areas.

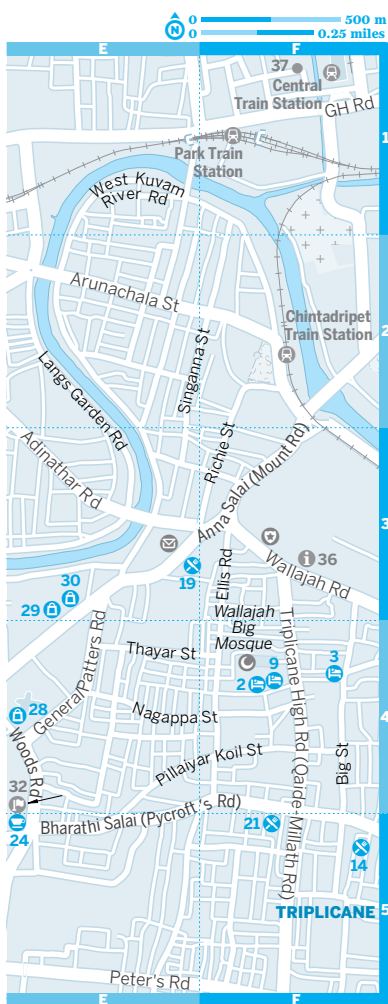

Many hotels in Chennai fill up by noon, so call ahead. The most expensive hotels have good discounts online.

But this laid-back colonial-era mansion, with leafy courtyards and rooms up rambling staircases, still has its devotees, who don't seem to mind the bare-bone, idiosyncratic rooms, dank bathrooms, or high-volume muezzins of Wallajah Big Mosque. Reception-only wi-fi (a 21st-century concession) is free.

Cristal Guest House

The sleek, minimalist rooms are comfy and stylish, with free wi-fi; freshly revamped rooms should be ready for 2015. The rooftop supports a sea-view infinity pool (doubling as insulation) along with a restaurant.

Eating

Chennai is packed with inexpensive 'meals' joints ('messes'), serving thalis for lunch and dinner, and tiffin (snacks) such as idlis (spongy, round fermented rice cakes), vadas (deep-fried lentil-flour doughnuts) and dosas. It's perfectly possible to eat every meal at Chennai's 24 Saravana Bhavan restaurants, where you can count on quality vegetarian food. In the Muslim area around

TYPICALLY TAMIL FOOD

Tamil Nadu's favourite foods are overwhelmingly vegetarian, full of coconut and chilli. You'll find dosas, idlis (spongy, round fermented rice cakes) and vadas (deep-fried lentil-flour doughnuts), all served with coconut chutney and sambar (lentil broth). Almost as ubiquitous is the uttapam, a thick, savoury rice pancake with finely chopped onions, green chillies and coriander. South Indian 'meals' – thalis based around rice, lentil dishes, rasam (hot and sour tamarind soup) and chutneys, often served on banana leaves – are also good. The main local exception to the all-veg diet is Chettinadu food, from the Chettinadu region south of Trichy. For a tea-growing state, Tamil Nadu adores its filter coffee, with milk, sugar, and a dash of chicory.

Triplicane High Rd you'll find great biryani spots every few steps.

Classier Indian restaurants are on the rise, and international cuisines have really taken off in Chennai, so there's plenty of up-market dining, especially at top-end hotels.

2.45pm & 7.30-11.45pm) This 25-year-old wood-ceilinged restaurant is probably the best place in Chennai to savour the delicious flavours of Tamil Nadu's Chettinadu region. Chettinad cuisine is famously meat-heavy and superbly spicy without being chilli-laden, but veg dishes are good too. When the weather behaves, you can dine outside in the leafy garden with water lilies.

✂ Southern Chennai

Murugan Idli Shop SOUTH INDIAN $
(Map p1004; 77 GN Chetty Rd, T Nagar; dishes ₹50-85; ☺ 7am-11.30pm) Those in the know generally agree this particular branch of the small Madurai-born chain serves some of the best idlis and South Indian meals in town. We heartily agree.

Chamiers MULTICUISINE, CAFE $$
(Map p1004; 106 Chamiers Rd, RA Puram; mains ₹295-380, breakfasts ₹195-335; ☺ 8am-11.30pm; ☎) This 1st-floor cafe feels a continent away from Chennai, except that Chennaiites love it too. Flowery wallpaper, leaves through the windows, wicker chairs, wi-fi (per hour ₹100), wonderful carrot cake and cappuccino, English breakfasts, American pancakes, pasta, quiches, quesadillas, salads...

Junior Kuppanna SOUTH INDIAN $$
(Map p1004; 4 Kannaiya St, North Usman Rd, T Nagar; mains ₹130-190, thalis veg/nonveg ₹160/190; ☺ noon-4pm & 7-11pm) From an impeccably clean kitchen (which you can tour if you like), come limitless, flavour-packed lunch-time thalis, dished up traditional-style on banana leaves. This typical, frenzied Chen-nai 'mess' also has a full menu, and carnivores tiring of the pure-veg lifestyle can seek solace in specialities like mutton brains and pan-fried seer fish. Arrive early: it's popular.

Enté Keralam KERALAN $$
(Map p1004; ☎ 044-32216591; <http://entekeralam.in>; 1 Kasturi Estate 1st St, Poes Garden; mains ₹215-450; ☺ noon-3pm & 7-11pm) A calm ambience seeps through the four orange-toned rooms of this Keralan restaurant, holding just three or four tables each. Try the lightly spiced pachakkari vegetable stew with light, fluffy appam (rice pancake) or kozhi porichatu (deep-fried marinated chicken) and wind up with tender coconut ice cream or paal ada payasam, a kind of sweet rice pudding.

★ Dakshin SOUTH INDIAN $$$
(Map p1004; ☎ 044-24994101; Sheraton Park Hotel, 132 TTK Rd, Alwarpet; mains ₹690-1670; ☺ 12.30-2.45pm & 7-11.15pm) Widely considered Chennai's finest South Indian restaurant, Dakshin specialises in the cuisines of Kerala, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh and Karnataka. Traditional sculptures and mirrored pillars set the temple-inspired scene, and flute and tabla musicians play nightly except Monday. Food suggestion: the Andhra Pradesh fish curry - and perhaps a little something from the impressive whiskey and wine list.

★ Copper Chimney NORTH INDIAN $$$
(Map p1004; ☎ 044-28115770; 74 Cathedral Rd, Gopalapuram; mains ₹290-700; ☺ noon-3pm & 7-11pm) Meat-eaters will drool over the yummy North Indian tandoori dishes served here in stylishly minimalist surroundings, but the veg food is fantastic too (even some Jain specialties). The machchi tikka – skewers of tandoori-baked fish – is superb, as is the spiced paneer kebab.

Drinking & Nightlife

Chennai nightlife is on the up, but you'll need a full wallet for a night out here. Chennai has possibly the most liberal licensing laws in India – for five-star hotels. Bars and clubs in these hotels serve alcohol 24 hours a day, seven days a week, so that's where most of the after-dark fun happens. Solo guys ('stags') can be turned away. Dress codes are strict: no shorts and sandals.

Other hotel bars, mostly male-dominated, generally close at midnight. If you're buying your own alcohol, look for 'premium' TASM government liquor stores inside malls. For listings see www.timescity.com/chennai.

Zara the Tapas Bar

BAR

(Map p1004; ☎044-2811462; zaratapasbar.in; 71 Cathedral Rd; cocktails ₹430-550, tapas ₹230-380; ☺12.30pm-midnight) Where else in the world can you find DJs playing club music beneath bullfighting posters next to TVs showing cricket? Zara is packed with a young, fashionable crowd most nights, and it's a good idea to book a table. And the tapas? The jamón serrano is sacrilegiously minced into a paste, but the tortilla española is authentically good. Live bands on Tuesdays.

Pasha

NIGHTCLUB

(Map p1010; Park Hotel, 601 Anna Salai; per couple ₹2000 incl ₹1500 drink voucher, women free; ☺8.30pm-2.30am) A stylish, early-20s bunch packs into this glitzy, two-level, Persian-themed club, where popular Bollywood night takes over on Wednesdays and Saturdays. See big-name international DJs take to the decks. Dress code: smart casual.

Flying Elephant

BAR, RESTAURANT

(☎044-71771234; Park Hyatt, 39 Velachery Rd, Guindy; per couple ₹3000 incl ₹2000 drink voucher, women free; ☺11pm-3am Sat, restaurant 7-11pm daily) Slickly contemporary and favoured by the elite, the Park Hyatt's high-energy, restaurant morphs into Chennai's hottest new party pad from 11pm on Saturday. Drinks are pricey (by any standards) but it's all very glam, with a sunken bar. The world fusion food (mains ₹650 to ₹1670), whipped up in five live kitchens, is good too. Head to the Guindy area, towards the airport.

Brew Room

CAFE

(Map p1004; Savera Hotel, Dr Radhakrishnan Salai; coffees ₹100-175, dishes ₹250-350; ☺8am-10pm; ☎) The trendy home-brew cafe has hit Chennai, and Chennai loves it. Decked out in neorustic style, Brew Room does coffee like you've never had here, from double espresso and Italian cappuccino to French press and Americano. The contemporary Continental menu includes great vegetarian and vegan choices – even tofu!

Leather Bar

BAR

(Map p1010; Park Hotel, 601 Anna Salai; ☺24hr) 'Leather' refers to furniture, floor and wall coverings rather than anything kinky. This tiny, chic pad has mixologists dishing up fancy drinks and DJs spinning dance tunes from around 9pm.

Dublin

PUB, NIGHTCLUB

(Map p1004; Sheraton Park Hotel, 132 TTK Rd, Alwarpet; per couple ₹2000 incl ₹1000 drink voucher; ☺from 8pm Wed-Sat) Belting out beats from hip-hop to Bollywood, this long-running, three-floor party place is an Irish pub until 10pm, then it becomes a packed-out club that goes to 3am on Friday and Saturday. No unaccompanied men (stags).

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(Map p1010; www.cafecoffeeday.com; lspahani Centre, 123 Nungambakkam High Rd; ☺10am-10.30pm; ☎) Reliably good hot and cold coffees and teas for ₹60 to ₹120. Also at Egmore (Map p1010; Alsa Mall, Montieth Rd; ☺11am-9pm), Nungambakkam (Map p1010; Khader Nawaz Khan Rd, Nungambakkam; ☺9am-11pm) and Express Avenue Mall (Map p1010; 3rd fl, Express Avenue Mall, White's Rd; ☺9.30am-10pm).

ATMS

Citibank ATMs are best for withdrawing large amounts of cash with foreign cards in Tamil Nadu. Axis Bank, Canara Bank, HDFC Bank, ICICI Bank and State Bank of India ATMs are other options.

Entertainment

There's bharatanatyam (Tamil classical dance) and/or a Carnatic music concert going on somewhere in Chennai almost every evening. Check listings in the Hindu or Times of India, or on www.timescity.com/chennai. The Music Academy (Map p1004; ☎044-28112231; www.musicacademymadras.in; 168 (old 306) TTK Rd, Royapettah) is the most popular venue; the Kalakshetra Foundation (p1008) and Bharatiya Vidya Bhavan (Map p1004; ☎044-24643420; www.bhavanchennai.org; East Mada St, Mylapore) also stage many events.

Shopping

T Nagar has great shopping, especially at Pondy Bazaar and in the Panagal Park area. Many of the finest Kanchipuram silks turn up in Chennai, and the streets around Panagal Park are filled with silk shops; if you're lucky enough to be attending an Indian wedding, this is where you buy your sari.

Nungambakkam's Khader Nawaz Khan Rd is a lovely lane of increasingly upmarket designer boutiques, cafes and galleries.

Chennai's shopping malls are full of major international and Indian apparel chains. The best include Express Avenue (White's Rd, Royapettah; ☎10am-9pm), Chennai Citi Centre (Map p1004; 10 Dr Radhakrishnan Salai, Mylapore; ☎10am-11.30pm), Spencer Plaza (Map p1010; Anna Salai; ☎10.30am-9pm), and the new Phoenix Market City (142 Velachery Main Rd, Velachery; ☎11am-10pm). Spencer Plaza is a bit downmarket from the others, with smaller craft and souvenir shops.

Central Chennai

★ Higginbothams BOOKS
(Map p1010; higginbothams@vsnl.com; 116 Anna Salai; ☎9am-8pm) Open since 1844, this grand white building is reckoned to be India's oldest bookshop. It has a brilliant English-language selection, including Lonely Planet books, and a good range of maps.

Naturally Auroville HANDICRAFTS
(Map p1010; 8 Khader Nawaz Khan Rd, Nungambakkam; ☎10.30am-9pm) Colourful handicrafts and home-decor trinkets, including bedspreads, incense, scented candles, and hand-made-paper notebooks, all from Auroville, near Puducherry.

Starmark BOOKS
(www.starmark.in; 2nd fl, Express Avenue, White's Rd; ☎10.30am-9.30pm) Smart new bookshop with an excellent collection of English, Indian and Tamil fiction and nonfiction, India travel books and Lonely Planet guides.

Evoluzione CLOTHING
(Map p1010; www.evoluzionestyle.com; 3 Khader Nawaz Khan Rd, Nungambakkam; ☎10.30-7.30pm)

HOLIDAY TRANSPORT

All kinds of transport in, to and from Tamil Nadu get booked up weeks in advance for periods around major celebrations, including Pongal, Karthikai Deepam, Gandhi Jayanti and Diwali. Plan ahead.

Mon-Sat, noon-6pm Sun) This high-end boutique showcases neotraditional creations by cutting-edge Indian designers. Great for browsing, even if your budget won't allow the fabulously glittery wedding gowns!

Poompuhar HANDICRAFTS
(Map p1010; 108 Anna Salai; ☎10am-8pm Mon-Sat, 11am-7pm Sun) This large branch of the fixed-price state-government handicrafts chain is good for everything from cheap technicolour plaster deities to a ₹200,000, metre-high bronze Nataraja.

Southern Chennai

★ Nalli Silks TEXTILES
(Map p1004; www.nallisilks.com; 9 Nageswaran Rd, T Nagar; ☎9am-9pm) Set up in 1928, the huge supercolourful granddaddy of Chennai silk shops sparkles with wedding saris and all kinds of Kanchipuram silks, as well as silk dhotis (long loincloths) for the boys. There's a jewellery branch next door.

Fabindia CLOTHING, HANDICRAFTS
(www.fabindia.com; 35 TTK Rd, Mylapore; ☎10.30am-8.30pm) This fair-trade, nationwide chain sells stylishly contemporary village-made clothes and crafts. Perfect for picking up a kurta (long shirt with short/no collar) to throw over leggings. This branch also has incense, ceramics, table and bed linen, and natural beauty products. Also at Woods Rd (Map p1010; 3 Woods Rd; ☎10.30am-8.30pm), Express Avenue (Map p1010; 1st fl, Express Avenue Mall, White's Rd; ☎11am-9pm) and T Nagar (Map p1004; 44 GN Chetty Rd, T Nagar; ☎10.30am-8.30pm).

Chamiers CLOTHING, HANDICRAFTS
(Map p1004; 106 Chamiers Rd, RA Puram; ☎10am-8pm) On the ground floor of this popular cafe-cum-boutique-complex, Anokhi has wonderful, East-meets-West block-printed clothes, bedding and accessories in light fabrics, at decent prices. Elegant Amethyst Room next door takes things upmarket with beautiful Indian-design couture.

Getting There & Away

AIR

Chennai International Airport is situated at Tirusulam in the far southwest of the city. The international terminal is about 500m west of the domestic terminal; the two are linked by a raised walkway.

There are direct flights to cities all over India, including Trichy (Tiruchirappalli), Madurai, Coimbatore and Thoothikudi (Tuticorin) within Tamil Nadu. Internationally, Chennai has plenty of direct flights to/from Colombo, Singapore, Kuala Lumpur and the Gulf states. The best fares from Europe are often on Jet Airways (via Mumbai or Delhi), Qatar Airways (via Doha) or Emirates (via Dubai). Cathay Pacific flies to Hong Kong, and Maldivian to Male.

Airline Offices

Air Asia (Map p1010; ☎ 044-33008000; www.airasia.com; Isphani Centre, 123 Nungambakam High Rd; ☀ 9.30am-6pm Mon-Sat)

Air India Express (Map p1010; ☎ 044-23453375; www.airindiaexpress.in; 19 Rukmani Lakshmiapathy Rd, Egmore; ☀ 9.45am-1pm & 1.45-5.15pm Mon-Sat)

Jet Airways (Map p1010; ☎ 044-39893333; www.jetairways.com; 43/44 Montieth Rd, Egmore; ☀ 10am-6pm Mon-Fri)

BOAT

Passenger ships sail from George Town harbour direct to Port Blair in the Andaman Islands (p1084) once weekly. The Andaman Shipping Office Ticketing Counter (☎ 044-25226873; www.and.nic.in; 2nd fl, Shipping Corporation of India, Jawahar Bldg, 17 Rajaji Salai, George Town; ☀ 10am-1pm & 2-4pm Mon-Fri, 10am-12.30pm Sat) sells tickets (₹2270 to ₹8850) for the 60-hour trip. Book several days ahead, and take three copies each of your passport data page and Indian visa along with the original. It can be a long process.

BUS

Most government buses operate from the large but surprisingly orderly CMBT (Chennai Mofussil Bus Terminus; Jawaharlal Nehru Rd, Koyambedu), 6km west of the centre. The most comfortable and expensive are the AC buses (and best of these are the Volvo AC services), followed by the UD (Ultra Deluxe), and these can generally be reserved in advance. There's a computerised reservation centre at the left end of the main hall, where you can book up to 60 days ahead.

The T Nagar Bus Terminus (Map p1004; South Usman Rd) is handy for bus 599 to Mamallapuram (₹27, 1½ hours, every 30 minutes).

Private buses generally offer greater comfort than non-AC government buses to many destinations, at up to double the price. Service information is available at www.redbus.in, and tickets can be booked through many travel agencies. Their main terminal is the Omni bus stand (off Kalliamman Koil St, Koyambedu), 500m west of the CMBT, but some companies also pick up and drop off elsewhere in the city. Parveen Travels, for example, runs services to Bengaluru, Ernakulam (Kochi), Kodaikanal, Madurai, Ooty, Puducherry, Trichy and Thiruvananthapuram (Trivandrum) departing from its Egmore office (Map p1010; ☎ 044-28192577; www.parveentravels.com; 11/5 Kennet Lane, Egmore).

CAR

Renting a car with a driver is the easiest way of getting anywhere and is easily arranged through most travel agents, midrange or top-end hotels, or the airport's prepaid taxi desks. Sample rates for non-AC/AC cars are ₹700/800 for up to five hours and 50km, and ₹1400/1600 for up to 10 hours and 100km.

TRAIN

Interstate trains and those heading west generally depart from Central station, while trains heading south mostly leave from Egmore. The advance reservations office (Map p1010; 1st fl, Chennai Central local station; ☎ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun), with its incredibly helpful Foreign Tourist Cell, is on the 1st floor in a separate 11-storey building just west of the main Central station building. Egmore station has its own Passenger Reservation Office (Map p1010; Chennai Egmore station; ☎ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun).

i Getting Around*TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

The Chennai Metro Rail system, expected to open in late 2015, will provide a cheap, easy link between the airport and city. Meanwhile, the cheapest option is a suburban train to/from Tirusulam station opposite the parking areas of the domestic terminal, accessed by a pedestrian subway under the highway. Trains run every 10 to 20 minutes from 4am to midnight to/from Chennai Beach station (₹5, 42 minutes) with stops including Kodambakkam, Egmore, Chennai Park and Chennai Fort.

Prepaid taxi kiosks outside the airport's international terminal charge ₹480/580 for a non-AC/AC cab to Egmore, and ₹400/500 to T Nagar. Rates are slightly lower at prepaid taxi kiosks outside the domestic terminal.

From the CMBT, city buses 70 and 170 to Tambaram stop on the highway across from the airport.

AUTORICKSHAW

Fixed autorickshaw fares are ₹25 for the first 1.8km (minimum charge), then ₹12 per kilometre. Some drivers still refuse to use their meters and quote astronomical fares, while others take unnecessarily long routes or ask for 'meter plus extra', but most will go by the meter if you insist. Avoid paying upfront, and always establish the meter is on before getting into a rickshaw. Rates rise by up to 50% from 11pm to 5am.

There are prepaid autorickshaw booths outside the CMBT (₹125 to Egmore) and Central station, and 24-hour prepaid stands with fare charts outside the north and south exits of Egmore station.

Tempting offers of ₹50 'city tours' by autorickshaw drivers sound too good to be true. They are. You'll spend the day being dragged from one shop or emporium to another.

BUS

Chennai's city bus system is worth getting to know, although buses get packed to overflowing at busy times. Fares are between ₹3 and ₹14 (up to double for express and deluxe services, and multiplied by five for Volvo AC services). Route information is online at <http://busroutes.in/chennai>.

METRO RAIL

Chennai Metro Rail, a new, part-underground rapid transit system, is expected to open in late 2015 and should make moving around the city much easier. Line 1 goes from the airport to Teynampet, Thousand Lights, Central train station, the High Court and Washermanpet in northern Chennai, running beneath Anna Salai for several kilometres. Line 2 goes from Central train station west to Egmore and the CMBT then south to St Thomas Mount.

TAXI

Both airport terminals have prepaid taxi kiosks. There's a prepaid taxi stand (Map p1010; Egmore Station; ☎ 4am-1pm) outside the south side of Egmore station; a ride of 7km, such as to Alwarpet, costs about ₹240.

Relatively reliable Fast Track (☎ 6000 6000) taxis charge ₹100 for up to 4km, then ₹18 per kilometre (with a 25% hike in rates between 11pm and 5am); bookings are taken by phone.

TRAIN

Efficient, cheap suburban trains run from Beach station to Fort, Park (near Central station), Egmore. Chetpet, Nungambakkam, Kodambakkam, Mambalam, Saidapet, Guindy, St Thomas Mount, Tirusulam (for the airport), and on down to Tambaram. At Egmore station, the suburban platforms (10 and 11) and ticket office are on the north side of the station. A second line branches south after Fort to Park Town, Chepauk, Tiruvalikeni (for Marina Beach), Light House and Thirumailai (near Kapaleeshwarar Temple). Trains run from 4am to midnight, several times hourly; rides cost ₹5 to ₹10.

NORTHERN TAMIL NADU

Chennai to Mamallapuram

Chennai's sprawl peters out after an hour or so heading south on the East Coast Road (ECR), at which point Tamil Nadu becomes red dirt, blue skies, palm trees, and green fields, sprinkled with towns and villages (or, if you take the 'IT Expressway' inland, huge new buildings).

Swimming along the coast is dangerous due to strong currents.

Sights & Activities

Cholamandal Artists' Village

ARTIST COLONY, MUSEUM

(☎044-24490092; www.cholamandalartistsvillage.in; Injambakkam; museum ₹20; ☀museum 9.30am-6.30pm) There's a tropical bohemian groove floating around Injambakkam village, site of the Cholamandal Artists' Village, 10km south of the Adyar River. This 3-hectare artists' cooperative – founded in 1966 by artists of the Madras Movement, pioneers of modern art in South India – is a serene muse away from the world, and the art in its museum is very much worth lingering over. Look especially for work by KCS Paniker, SG Vasudev, M Senathipathi and S Nandagopal.

DakshinaChitra Museum

ARTS & CRAFTS CENTRE

(☎044-27427603; www.dakshinachitra.net; East Coast Rd, Muttukadu; Indian adult/student ₹100/50, foreign ₹250/70; ☀10am-6pm Wed-Mon) DakshinaChitra, 22km south of the Adyar River, offers a fantastic insight into South India's traditional arts and crafts. Like a treasure chest of local art and architecture, this jumble of open-air museum, preserved village, artisan workshops (pottery, silk weaving, basket making), and a new tribal art gallery is set among an exquisite collection of traditional South Indian homes.

Covelong Point

SURFING

(☎9840975916; www.covelongpoint.com) The fishing village of Kovalam, 20km north of Mamallapuram, has recently sprung into the spotlight for having probably the best surfing waves on the Tamil Nadu coast. For classes or surf companionship, head to 'social surfing school' Covelong Point, run by Kovalam's original local surf pioneer Murthy. Kovalam also hosts the hugely popular Covelong Point Surf & Music Festival

(www.covelongpoint.com; ☀Sep), now into its second year.

Madras Crocodile Bank

ZOO

(☎044-27472447; www.madrascrocodilebank.org; Vadanemmeli; adult/child ₹35/10, camera/video ₹20/100; ☀8.30am-5.30pm Tue-Sun)  Madras Crocodile Bank, 6km south down the ECR from Kovalam, is a fascinating peek into the reptile world, and an incredible conservation and research trust. Founded by croc/snake-man Romulus Whitaker, the Bank has thousands of reptiles, including 18 of the world's 23 species of crocodilian (crocodiles and similar creatures), and does crucial work in maintaining genetic reserves of these animals, several of which are endangered.

Tiger Cave

SACRED HINDU SITE

(Saluvankuppam; admission free; ☀6am-6pm) Just 5km north of Mamallapuram, the Tiger Cave is an unfinished but impressive rock-cut shrine, probably dating from the 7th century and dedicated to Durga (a form of Devi, Shiva's wife). What's special is the 'necklace' of 11 monstrous tigerlike heads framing its central shrine-cavity. At the north end of the parklike complex is a rock-cut Shiva shrine from the same era. Beyond the fence lies the more recently excavated Subrahmanya Temple, comprising an 8th-century granite shrine built over a Sangam-era brick temple dedicated to Murugan, which is one of the oldest known temples in Tamil Nadu.

Getting There & Away

To reach these places, take any bus heading south from Chennai to Mamallapuram and ask to be let off at the appropriate point(s). The TTDC's Chennai–Mamallapuram round-trip bus tour (₹450 to ₹550, 10 hours) visits several of the sites and Mamallapuram itself. A full-day taxi tour from Chennai costs around ₹3000.

Mamallapuram (Mahabalipuram)

(☎044 / POP 15,172)

Mamallapuram was the major seaport of the ancient Pallava kingdom based at Kanchipuram, and a wander round the town's magnificent, World Heritage-listed temples and carvings inflames the imagination, especially at sunset.

And then, in addition to ancient archaeological wonders and coastal beauty, there's the traveller ghetto of Othavada and Othavada Cross Sts. Restaurants serve pasta, pizza and pancakes, shops sell hand sanitiser and things from Tibet, and you know you have landed, once again, in the great Kingdom of Backpackistan.

'Mahabs', as most call it, is under two hours by bus from Chennai, and many travellers make a beeline straight here. The town is small and laid-back, and its sights can be explored on foot or by bicycle.

👁 Sights

You can easily spend a full day exploring Mamallapuram's marvellous temples and rock carvings. Most of them were carved from the rock during the 7th-century reign of Pallava king Narasimhavarman I, whose nickname Mamalla (Great Wrestler) gave the town its name. Apart from the Shore Temple and the Five Rathas, admission is free. Official Archaeological Survey of India guides can be hired at sites for around ₹100.

★ Shore Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(combined 1-day ticket with Five Rathas Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25; ☀6am-6pm) Standing like a magnificent fist of rock-cut elegance overlooking the sea, the two-towered Shore Temple symbolises the heights of Pallava architecture and the maritime ambitions of the Pallava kings. Its small size belies its excellent proportion and the supreme quality of the carvings, many of which have been eroded into vaguely Impressionist embellishments. Built under Narasimhavarman II in the 8th century, it's the earliest significant free-standing stone temple in Tamil Nadu.

The two towers rise above shrines to Shiva and their original linga (phallic symbols of Shiva) captured the sunrise and sunset. Between the Shiva shrines is one to Vishnu, shown sleeping. Rows of Nandi (Shiva's vehicle) statues frame the temple courtyard.

★ Five Rathas

HINDU TEMPLE

(Pancha Ratha; Five Rathas Rd; combined 1-day ticket with Shore Temple Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25; ☀6am-6pm) Huddled together at the southern end of Mamallapuram, the Five Rathas look like buildings, but they were, astonishingly, all carved from single large rocks. Each of these 7th-century temples was dedicated to a Hindu god and is now named after one or more of the Pandavas, the five hero-brothers of the epic Mahabharata, or their common wife, Draupadi. The rathas were hidden in the sand until excavated by the British 200 years ago.

Ratha is Sanskrit for chariot, and may refer to the temples' form or to their function as vehicles for the gods. It's thought they didn't originally serve as places of worship, but were created as architectural models.

The first ratha on the left after you enter the gate is the Draupadi Ratha, in the form of a stylised South Indian hut. It's dedicated to the demon-fighting goddess Durga, who looks out from inside, standing on a lotus. A huge sculpted lion, Durga's mount, stands guard outside.

Next, on the same plinth, is the 'chariot' of the most important Pandava, the Arjuna Ratha, dedicated to Shiva. Its pilasters, miniature roof shrines, and small octagonal dome make it a precursor of many later temples in South India. A huge Nandi, Shiva's vehicle, stands behind. Shiva and other gods are depicted on the temple's outer walls.

The barrel-roofed Bhima Ratha was never completed, as is evidenced by the missing colonnade on its north side. Inside is a shrine to Vishnu. The Dharmaraja Ratha, tallest of the temples, is similar in form to the Arjuna Ratha but one storey higher. The carvings on its outer walls mostly represent gods, including the androgynous Ardhanarishvara (half Shiva, half Parvati) on the east side. King Narasimhavarman I appears at the west end of the south side.

The Nakula-Sahadeva Ratha (named after two twin Pandavas) stands aside from the other four and is dedicated to Indra. The life-size stone elephant beside it is one of the most perfectly sculpted elephants in India. Approaching from the gate to the north you see its back end first, hence its nickname Gajaprishthakara (elephant's backside).

★ Arjuna's Penance

HINDU MONUMENT

Mamallapuram (Mahabalipuram)

TAMIL NADU & CHENNAI MAMALLAPURAM (MAHABALIPURAM)

Some scholars believe the carving shows not Arjuna but the sage Bagiratha, who did severe penance to obtain Shiva's help in bringing the Ganges to earth. Shiva is attended by dwarves, and celestial beings fly across the upper parts of the carving. Below Arjuna/Bagiratha is a temple to Vishnu, mythical ancestor of the Pallava kings. The many wonderfully carved animals include a herd of elephants and – humour amid the holy – a cat mimicking Arjuna's penance to a crowd of mice.

South along the road from Arjuna's Penance are the unfinished Panch Pandava Mandapa (☉ 6.30am-6pm) cave temple; the Krishna Mandapa (☉ 6.30am-6pm), which famously depicts Krishna lifting Govardhana Hill to protect cows and villagers from a storm sent by Indra; an unfinished relief carving of similar size to Arjuna's Penance; and the Dharmaraja Cave Temple (☉ 6.30am-6pm).

Activities

Beaches

The beach fronting the village isn't exactly pristine, but south of the Shore Temple it clears into finer sand. You'll also be further away from the leers of men who spend their days gawking at tourists. Like most of Tamil Nadu's coast, these beaches aren't great for swimming, due to dangerous rips.

Surfing

Mumu Surf School

SURFING
(☎ 9789844191; <http://mumusurfer.wix.com>;
42 Fishermen's Colony; 90min group/private class ₹750/1000; ☉ 7.30am-6pm) Popular, well-organised school for all levels and board rental (per hour ₹150 to ₹300).

Therapies

Numerous places in town offer massage, reiki, yoga and ayurveda, at similar rates. Ask fellow travellers, question the therapist care-

★ Festivals & Events

Mamallapuram Dance Festival

DANCE

(🕒 late Dec-late Jan) A four-week, weekend-only dance festival showcasing classical and folk dances from all over India, with many performances on an open-air stage against the imposing backdrop of Arjuna's Penance.

Dances include bharatanatyam (from Tamil Nadu), Kuchipudi (Andhra Pradesh) tribal dance, and Kathakali (Kerala).

🛏 Sleeping

Hotel Daphne

HOTEL $

(☎ 9894282876; www.moonrakersrestaurants.com; 24 Othavadai Cross St; r ₹500-1500; 🚻🚿) Most rooms here are perfectly acceptable if nothing fancy, but the top-floor AC rooms 13 and 14 are great value, with four-poster beds, balconies and cane swing chairs. The courtyard and free wi-fi are other drawcards.

Tina Blue View Lodge & Restaurant

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9840727270, 044-27442319; 48 Othavadai St; s/d/tr ₹500/600/900) Frayed and faded Tina is one of Mamallapuram's originals and kind of looks it, but remains deservedly popular for its whitewashed walls, blue flourishes and tropical garden, as well as tireless original owner Xavier.

Sri Harul Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Sea View Guest House; ☎ 9384620173; sriharul@gmail.com; 181 Bajanaï Koil St, Fishermen's Colony; r ₹800-900) Surf crashes onto the rocks right below your balcony if you land one of the half-dozen sea-view rooms at Sri Harul, one of the better seafront budget deals. Rooms are basic, medium-sized and quite clean, and you can hang out at the rooftop cafe.

Greenwoods Beach Resort GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 044-27442212; greenwoods_resort@yahoo.com; 7 Othavadai Cross St; ₹500-800, with AC ₹1200; 🏠🍷) Perhaps the most characterful of the Othavadai Cross St cheapies and definitely not on the beach, Greenwoods is run by an enthusiastic family who put up backpackers in plain, clean-ish rooms up staircases around a pretty leafy courtyard.

Butterball Bed 'n Breakfast B&B $$
(☎ 9094792525; 9/26 East Raja St; s/d incl breakfast ₹1700/2000; 🏠🍷) There's a great view of the eponymous giant rock from the roof terrace, and a lovely lawn. The smallish but clean, pleasant rooms have old English prints, writing desks and blue-tiled bathrooms, and breakfast is served in its Burger Shack (9/26 East Raja St; mains ₹120-300; ☺ 10am-10pm) restaurant out the front.

Hotel Mahabs HOTEL $$
(☎ 044-27442645; www.hotelmahabs.com; 68 East Raja St; ₹2140-2930; 🏠🍷🍷🍷) Friendly Mahabs is centred on a pretty mural-lined pool

(₹300 for nonguests) surrounded by tropical greenery. Boring brown is the room theme, but they're very clean and comfy. There's a decent in-house restaurant.

Hotel Mamalla Heritage HOTEL $$
(☎ 044-27442060; www.hotelmamallaheritage.com; 104 East Raja St; incl breakfast ₹2400-2640, d ₹2640-2880; 🏠🍷🍷) King of tour group packages, the Mamalla has big, comfortable, forgettable rooms rising around a nice pool, and a quality rooftop veg restaurant.

★ Radisson Blu Resort Temple Bay RESORT $$$
(☎ 044-27443636; www.radissonblu.com/hotelmamallapuram; 57 Kovalam Rd; r incl breakfast from ₹9880; 🏠🍷🍷🍷) The Radisson's 144 luxurious chalets, villas and bungalows are strewn across manicured gardens stretching 500m to the beach. Somewhere in the midst is India's longest swimming pool, all 220m of it. Rooms range from large to enormous; the most expensive have private pools. The Radisson also offers Mamallapuram's finest (and priciest) dining and a top-notch ayurvedic spa. Best rates online.

MAMALLAPURAM HILL

Many interesting monuments are scattered across the rock-strewn hill on the west side of town. It takes about an hour to walk round the main ones. The hill area is open from 6am to 6pm and has two entrances: a northern one on West Raja St, and a southern one just off Five Rathas Rd.

Straight ahead inside the northern entrance you can't miss the huge boulder with the inspired name of Krishna's Butterball, immovable but apparently balancing precariously. Pass between the rocks north of here to the Trimurti Cave Temple, honouring the Hindu 'trinity': Brahma (left), Shiva (centre) and Vishnu (right). On the back of the same rock is a beautiful group of carved elephants.

Back south of Krishna's Butterball you reach the Ganesh Ratha, carved from a single rock with lion-shaped pillar bases. Once a Shiva temple, it became a shrine to Ganesh (Shiva's elephant-headed son) after the original lingam was removed. Southwest of here, the Varaha Mandapa houses some of Mamallapuram's finest carvings. The left panel shows Vishnu's boar avatar, Varaha, lifting the earth out of the oceans. The outward-facing panels show Vishnu's consort Lakshmi (washed by elephants) and Durga, while the right-hand panel has Vishnu in his eight-armed giant form, Trivikrama, overcoming the demon king Bali.

A little further south, then up to the left, is the 16th-century Raya Gopura (Olakkanatha Temple), probably an unfinished gopuram (gateway tower). West just up the hill is the finely carved Lion Throne. The main path continues south to the Ramanuja Mandapa and up to Mamallapuram's lighthouse (Indian/foreigner ₹10/25, camera ₹20; ☺ 10am-1pm & 2-5.30pm). Just southwest of the lighthouse is the Mahishamardini Mandapa, carved from the rock with excellent scenes from the Puranas (Sanskrit stories from the 5th century AD). The left-side panel shows Vishnu sleeping on the coils of a snake; on the right, Durga bestrides her lion vehicle while killing the demon-buffalo Mahisha. Inside the central shrine, Murugan is depicted sitting between his parents Shiva and Parvati.

Ideal Beach Resort

RESORT $$$

(☎044-27442240; www.idealresort.com; East Coast Rd; s/d from ₹6000/6600; 🍷🍷🍷🍷) With a landscaped garden setting and its own stretch of (pretty nice) beach, this laid-back resort, 3km north of town, is popular with weekendening families and couples. It's quiet and secluded, there's a lovely pool-side restaurant, and some rooms come with open-air showers. Nonguests can get pool/beach day passes for ₹400.

Eating

Eateries on Othavadai and Othavadai Cross Sts provide semi-open-air settings, decent Western mains and bland Indian curries. Most will serve you a beer. For Indian food, there are cheap veg places near the bus stand.

Le Yogi

MULTICUISINE $$$

(19 Othavadai St; mains ₹100-200; ☺7.30am-11pm) This is some of the best Western food in town; the pasta, pizza, sizzlers and crepes are genuine and tasty (if small), service is good, and the chilled-out setting, with bamboo posts and pretty lamps dangling from a thatched roof, has a touch of the romantic.

Gecko Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$$

(www.gecko-web.com; 37 Othavadai St; mains ₹150-270; ☺9am-10pm; 🍷) Two friendly brothers run this cute blue-and-yellow-walled spot sprinkled with colourful artwork and wood carvings. The offerings and prices aren't that different from other tourist-oriented spots, but there's more love put into the cooking here and it's tastier.

Freshly 'n Hot

CAFE $$

(Othavadai Cross St; mains ₹70-200; ☺7am-9pm) Yes, the name makes no sense, but this tiny place is relaxed, fresh and friendly. A comparatively small menu of perfectly OK pizza, pasta, sandwiches and crepes accompanies a long list of coffees. The iced coffees are great.

Moonrakers

MULTICUISINE $$

(34 Othavadai St; mains ₹100-180; ☺10am-10pm; 🍷) You'll probably end up here at some point; it's the kind of place that's dominated the backpacker-ghetto streetscape forever. The food won't win any prizes but it's fine, and the three floors of tables keep busy (probably partly thanks to the free wi-fi).

Water's Edge Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Radisson Blu Resort Temple Bay, 57 Kovalam Rd; mains ₹480-900; ☺24hr) The Radisson's pool-side 'cafe' offers everything from American pancakes to grilled tofu, Indian veg dishes, and a fantastic breakfast buffet (₹970). Also here is The Wharf (mains ₹550-1600; ☺noon-3pm & 7-11pm), which looks like a beach shack but is actually a gourmet seaside restaurant.

Shopping

The roar of electric stone-grinders has just about replaced the tink-tink of chisels in Mamallapuram's stone-carving workshops, enabling them to turn out ever more granite sculptures of varying quality, from ₹100 pendants to a ₹400,000 Ganesha that needs to be lifted with a crane. There are also some decent art galleries, tailors and antique shops.

Southern Arts & Crafts ANTIQUES, HANDICRAFTS

(☎044-27443675; www.southernarts.in; 72 East Raja St; ☺9am-7.30pm) Expensive but beautiful curios acquired from local homes, along with quality new sculptures.

Apollo Books

BOOKS

(15 Fishermen's Colony; ☺9am-9.30pm) Good collection of books in several languages, to sell and swap.

Information

Head to East Raja St for ATMs.

AM Communications (East Raja St; per hour ₹30; ☺11am-9pm)

Ruby Forex (East Raja St; ☺9.30am-7pm Mon-Sat) Currency exchange.

Suradeep Hospital (☎044-27442448; 15 Thirukula St; ☺24hr) Recommended by travellers.

Tourist office (☎044-27442232; Kovalam Rd; ☺10am-5.45pm Mon-Fri)

Getting There & Away

From the bus stand (East Raja St), bus 599 heads to Chennai's T Nagar Bus Terminus (₹27, 1½ hours) every 30 minutes from 7am to 8.30pm, and AC bus 568C (588C on weekends) runs to Chennai's CMBT (₹85, two hours) every two hours, 6am to 8pm. For Chennai airport take bus 515 to Tambaram (₹40, 1½ hours, every 30 minutes), then a taxi, autorickshaw or suburban train. There are also nine daily buses to Kanchipuram (₹40, two hours). Buses to Puducherry (₹60, two hours) stop about every 30 minutes at the junction of Kovalam Rd and the Mamallapuram bypass, 1km north of the town centre.

Taxis are available from the bus stand, travel agents and hotels. It's about ₹1500 to Chennai or the airport, or ₹2000 to Puducherry.

You can make train reservations at the Southern Railway Reservation Centre (1st fl, 32 East Raja St; ☺10am-1pm & 2.30-5pm Mon-Sat, 8am-1pm Sun).

i Getting Around

The easiest way to get around is by walking, though on a hot day it's a hike to see all the monuments. You can hire bicycles at some guesthouses and rental stalls for about ₹80 per day.

Kanchipuram

📍 044 / POP 164,384

Kanchipuram, 80km southwest of Chennai, was capital of the Pallava dynasty during the 6th to 8th centuries, when the Pallavas created the great stone monuments of Mamallapuram. Today a typically hectic modern Indian town, it's famed for its numerous important and vibrant temples, some dating from Pallava, Chola or Vijayanagar times, and also for its high-quality silk saris, woven on hand looms by thousands of families in the city and nearby villages. Silk and sari shops are strung along Gandhi Rd, southeast of the centre, though their wares are generally no cheaper than at Chennai silk shops. Kanchi is easily visited in a day trip from Mamallapuram or Chennai.

👁 Sights

All temples have free admission, though you may have to pay small amounts for shoe-keeping and/or cameras. Ignore claims that there's an entrance fee for non-Hindus.

Kailasanatha Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(🕒 6am-noon & 4-8pm) Kanchi's oldest temple is its most impressive, not for its size but for its weight of historical presence and the intricacy of its stonework. As much monument as living temple, Kailasanatha is quieter than other temples in town, and has seen a lot of restoration. Dedicated to Shiva, it was built in the 8th century by the Pallava king Narasimhavarman II, who also gave us Mamallapuram's Shore Temple.

The low-slung sandstone compound has fascinating carvings, including many of the half-animal deities in vogue in early Dravidian architecture. Note the rearing lions on the outer walls. The inner sanctum is centred on a large 16-sided lingam, which non-Hindus can view from about 8m away. The tower rising above it is a precursor of the great vimanas of later Chola temples. An autorickshaw from the centre costs ₹40, but walking is nice.

Ekambareshwara Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Ekambaranathar Temple; phone-camera/camera/video ₹10/20/100; 🕒 6am-12.30pm & 4-8.30pm) Of the five South Indian Shiva temples associated with the five elements, this 12-hectare precinct is the shrine of earth. You enter beneath the 59m-high, unpainted south gopuram, whose lively carvings were chiselled in 1509 under Vijayanagar rule. Inside, a columned hall leads left into the central compound, which Nandi faces from the right. The inner sanctum (Hindus only) contains a lingam made of earth and a mirror chamber whose central Shiva image is reflected in endless repetition.

According to legend, the goddess Kamakshi (She Whose Eyes Awaken Desire; a form of Parvati, Shiva's consort) worshipped

WORTH A TRIP

VEDANTHANGAL BIRD SANCTUARY

Vedanthangal Bird Sanctuary (admission ₹10, camera/video ₹100/250; 🕒 6am-6pm), 55km southwest of Mamallapuram, is a spectacular 30-hectare breeding ground for many kinds of water birds, which migrate here from November to February. Some years as many as 100,000 birds mass at Vedanthangal Lake and its marshy surrounds. The top viewing times are dawn and late afternoon.

The lushly shaded, 4.5-hectare lodge of Karadi Malai Camp (📞 8012033087; www.draco-india.com; Pambukudivanam, Chengalpattu; r incl breakfast ₹5000; ♿) borders the Valam Reserve Forest, 30km northeast of Vedanthangal on the Chengalpattu-Tirupporur road, and makes the perfect Vedanthangal base. Owned by snake-man Rom Whitaker and writer Janaki Lenin, it's packed with wildlife (you can help track the local leopard), and has three simple, comfy bamboo huts on stilts.

Some visitors make a taxi day trip to Vedanthangal from Mamallapuram, for around ₹2200. On public transport, first go to Chengalpattu, an hour's bus ride from Mamallapuram en route to Kanchipuram, then take a bus to Vedanthangal via Padalam (possibly changing buses again). Most Vedanthangal buses go to the sanctuary entrance, but some stop at the village bus station, 1km away.

Shiva under a mango tree here. In a courtyard behind the inner sanctum you can see a mango tree said to be 2500 years old, with four branches representing the four Vedas (sacred Hindu texts).

Tamil Nadu is home to three more of South India's five elemental Shiva temples: Arunachaleswar Temple in Tiruvannamalai (fire), Nataraja Temple in Chidambaram (space) and Sri Jambukeshwara Temple in Trichy (water). The fifth is Sri Kalahasteeswara Temple (air), in Andhra Pradesh.

Kamakshi Amman Temple HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ 5.30am-noon & 4-8pm) This imposing temple, dedicated to Kamakshi/Parvati, is one of India's most important places of shakti (female energy/deities) worship, said to mark the spot where Parvati's midriff fell to earth. It's thought to have been founded by the Pallavas. The entire main building inside is off-limits to non-Hindus, but the small, square marriage hall, to the right inside the temple's southeast entrance, has wonderfully ornate pillars. You might catch the temple elephant giving blessings just inside this entrance.

Each February/March carriages bearing the temple deities are hauled around Kanchipuram.

Varadaraja Perumal Temple HINDU TEMPLE

(Devarajaswami Temple; 100-pillared hall ₹1, camera/video ₹5/100; ☀️ 7.30am-noon & 3.30-8pm) The enormous 11th-century Chola-built Varadaraja Perumal Temple in southeast Kanchi is dedicated to Vishnu. Non-Hindus cannot enter the central compound, but the artistic highlight is the 16th-century '100-pillared' marriage hall, just inside the western entrance. Its pillars (actually 96) are superbly carved with animals and monsters; at its corners hang four stone chains, each carved from a single rock.

Every 40 years the waters of the temple tank are drained, revealing a huge wooden statue of Vishnu that is worshipped for 48 days. Next viewing: 2019.

Vellore

☎ 0416 / POP 185,803

For a dusty bazaar town, Vellore feels a bit cosmopolitan, thanks to a couple of tertiary institutions and the American-founded Christian Medical College (CMC), one of India's finest hospitals, attracting both medical students and patients from across the country. On the main Chennai-Bengaluru road, Vellore is worth a stop mainly for its massive Vijayanagar fort. Many Indians come to visit the golden Sripuram Temple 10km south of town.

Central Vellore is bounded on the north by Ida Scudder Rd (Arcot Rd), home to the hospital and cheap hotels and eateries; and on the west by Officer's Line (Anna Salai), with Vellore Fort on its west side.

Sights

Vellore Fort

FORT

A circuit of the moat-surrounded ramparts (nearly 2km) of Vellore's splendid fort is the most peaceful experience in town. The fort was built in the 16th century and passed through Maratha and Mughal hands before the British occupied it in 1760. These days it houses, among other things, the magnificent Vijayanagar-era Jalakantesvara Temple, two museums, two parade grounds, a church, government offices, and a police recruiting school.

Inside, the Jalakantesvara Temple (☎ 6.30am-1pm & 3-8.30pm), a gem of late Vijayanagar architecture, dates from around 1566, and was once occupied as a garrison. Check out the small, detailed sculptures – especially the yali (mythical lion creatures) – on the walls and columns of the marriage hall in the southwest corner. The dusty exhibits in the Government Museum (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☎ 9.30am-5pm Sat-Thu) have seen better days, but the Archaeological Survey Museum (☎ 9am-5pm Sat-Thu) FREE has a good collection of Pallava, Chola and Nayak stone sculptures, plus displays on the 1806 Vellore Mutiny, the earliest anti-British uprising by Indian troops. Next door, pretty St John's Church (1846) opens only for Sunday services.

TAMIL NADU TEMPLES

Tamil Nadu is a gold mine for anyone wanting to explore Indian temple culture. Not only does it have some of the country's most spectacular temple architecture and sculpture, but few parts of India are as fervent in their worship of the Hindu gods as Tamil Nadu. Its 5000-odd temples are constantly abuzz with worshippers flocking in for puja (offering or prayer), and colourful temple festivals abound. Among the plethora of Hindu deities, Shiva probably has most Tamil temples dedicated to him, in a multitude of forms including Nataraja, the cosmic dancer, who dances in a ring of fire with two of his four hands holding the flame of destruction and the drum of creation, while the third makes the abhaya mudra (fear not) gesture and the fourth points to the dwarf of ignorance being trampled beneath Shiva's foot. Tamils also have a soft spot for Shiva's peacock-riding son Murugan (also Kartikeya or Skanda), who is intricately associated with their cultural identity.

The special significance of many Tamil temples makes them goals of countless Hindu pilgrims from all over India. The Pancha Sabhai Sthalangal are the five temples where Shiva is believed to have performed his cosmic dance (chief among them Chidambaram). Then there's the Pancha Bootha Sthalangal, the five temples where Shiva is worshipped as one of the five elements – land, water, sky/space, fire and air (this last in Andhra Pradesh). Each of the nine Navagraha temples in the Kumbakonam area is the abode of one of the nine celestial bodies of Hindu astronomy – key sites given the importance of astrology in Hindu faith.

Typical Tamil temple design features tall layered entrance towers called gopurams, encrusted with often colourfully painted sculptures of gods and demons; halls of richly carved columns called mandapas; a sacred water tank; and a series of compounds (prakarams), one within the next, with the innermost containing the central sanctum where the temple's main deity resides. The earliest Tamil temples were small rock-cut shrines; the first free-standing temples were built in the 8th century AD; gopurams first appeared around the 12th century.

Admission to most temples is free, but non-Hindus are often not allowed inside inner sanctums, which can be disappointing for travellers. At other temples priests may invite you in and in no time you are doing puja, having an auspicious tilak mark daubed on your forehead and being asked for a donation.

Temple touts can be a nuisance, but there are also many excellent guides who deserve both your time and rupees; use your judgement, talk to other travellers and be on the lookout for badge-wearing official guides.

A South Indian Journey by Michael Wood is a great read if you're interested in Tamil culture. TempleNet (www.templenet.com) is one of the best online resources.

rooms are clean and comfortable if forgettable (those at the back are quieter), reception is friendly and the hotel's four restaurants include the cool, breezy Aaranya Roof Garden Restaurant (mains ₹150-250; ☺ 11.30am-11pm). It's 1.5km south of Vellore Fort entrance.

Buses 1 and 2 shuttle between the station and town.

Tiruvannamalai

☎ 04175 / POP 145,278

There are temple towns, there are mountain towns, and then there are temple-mountain towns where God appears as a phallus of fire. Welcome to Tiruvannamalai, one of Tamil Nadu's holiest destinations. Set below boulder-strewn Mt Arunachala, this is one of South India's five 'elemental' cities of Shiva; here the god is worshipped in his fire incarnation as Arunachaleshwar. At every full moon 'Tiru' swells with thousands of pilgrims who come to circumnavigate the base of Arunachala in a purifying ritual known as Girivalam, but at any time you'll see Shaivite priests, sadhus (spiritual men) and devotees gathered around the Arunachaleshwar Temple. Tiru's reputation for strong spiritual energies has produced numerous ashrams, and it now attracts ever-growing numbers of spiritual-minded travellers. Around the main cluster of ashrams, on and near Chengam Rd about 2km southwest of the centre, you'll find a few chilled-out cafes and the better sleeping options.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Arunachaleshwar Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Annamalaiyar Temple; www.arunachaleswarar.com; ☺ 5.30am-12.30pm & 4-9pm) This 10-hectare temple is one of the largest in India. Its oldest parts date back to the 9th century and the site was a place of worship long before that. Four huge, unpainted white gopurams mark the entrances, with the main, eastern one rising 13 storeys and an astonishing 66m. During festivals the Arunachaleshwar is awash in golden flames and the roasting scent of burning ghee, as befits the fire incarnation of the Destroyer of the Universe.

Inside the complex are five more gopurams, a 1000-pillared hall with impressive carvings, two tanks and a profusion of sub-temples and shrines. There's a helpful temple model inside the second gopuram from the east, where the temple elephant gives blessings. To reach the innermost sanctum, with its huge lingam, worshippers must pass through five surrounding prakarams (compounds).

Mt Arunachala

MOUNTAIN

This 800m-high extinct volcano dominates Tiruvannamalai and local conceptions of the element of fire, which supposedly finds its sacred abode in Arunachala's heart. Devout barefoot pilgrims, especially on full-moon and festival days, make the 14km circumambulation of the mountain, stopping at eight famous linga along the route. The inner path was closed at research time, but it's still possible to circle around on the main road, or climb the hill past two caves where Sri Ramana Maharshi lived and meditated from 1899 to 1922.

The hot ascent to the top opens up superb views of Tiruvannamalai, and takes five or six hours round-trip: start early and take water. An unsigned path across the road from the northwest corner of Arunachaleshwar Temple leads the way up past homes and the two caves, Virupaksha (about 20 minutes up) and Skandasramam (30 minutes). Women are advised not to do the hike alone.

If you aren't that devoted, buy a Giripradakshina map (₹15) from the bookshop at Sri Ramana Ashram (p1033), hire a bicycle on the roadside nearby (per day ₹40), and ride your way around. Or make an autorickshaw circuit for about ₹250 (up to double at busy times).

Sri Ramana Ashram

ASHRAM

(Sri Ramanasramam; ☎9244937292; www.sriramanamaharshi.org; Chengam Rd; ☺office 7.30am-12.30pm & 2-6.30pm) This tranquil ashram, 2km southwest of the centre in green grounds filled with peacocks, draws devotees of Sri Ramana Maharshi, one of the first Hindu gurus to gain an international following, who died here in 1950 after half a century in contemplation. Visitors can meditate or attend daily pujas (prayers) and chantings, mostly in the samadhi hall where the guru's body is enshrined.

A limited amount of free accommodation (donations accepted; three to four weeks) is available for devotees only: write or email a month ahead.

Sri Seshadri Swamigal Ashram

ASHRAM

(☎04175-236999; www.tiruvarunaimahan.org; Chengam Rd; ☺office 9am-1pm & 4-8.30pm) Dedicated to a contemporary and helper of Sri Ramana, with meditation platforms and some accommodation. It's in the southwest of town next to Sri Ramana Ashram.

Sri Anantha Niketan

ASHRAM

(☎09003480013; www.sriananthaniketan.com; Periya Paliyapattu Village; admission by donation) A place for organised retreats rather than a permanent community, Sri Anantha Niketan has tree-shaded grounds, wonderful Arunachala views, homey rooms and week-end chanting in an attractive meditation hall. It's just off the Krishnagiri road, 7km west of town. Book well ahead for November to February.

Sleeping & Eating

Most visitors stay in the less hectic Chengam Rd area, but there are also typical temple-town options near the Arunachaleshwar Temple. During Karthikai Deepam (November/December) prices can multiply several times. Hotels get heavily booked at full moon.

Hill View Residency

HOTEL $

(☎9442712441; hillviewresidency@gmail.com; 120 Seshatri Mada St; r from ₹400, with AC from ₹800) Extremely good value, Hill View has large, clean, cool, marble-floored rooms around two small garden patios, up a lane off Chengam Rd, but limited English is spoken (so booking ahead is tricky). Upstairs under a big palm roof, Tasty Café (dishes ₹70-170; ☺8am-10pm) does well-prepared Indian and Continental food.

Arunachala Ramana Home

HOTEL $

(☎9486722892; www.arunachalaramanahome.co.in; 70 Ramana Nagar; s/d ₹500/600, with AC d ₹1200; ☹) Basic, clean and friendly, this popular place is down a lane off Chengam Rd.

Sunshine Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎04175-235335; http://sunshineguesthouseindia.com; 5 Annamalai Nagar, Perumbakkam Rd; s/d ₹500/700, with AC ₹1400/1970; ☹☺) In a blissfully quiet spot 1km southwest of the main ashram area, this colourful new-build fronted by pretty gardens offers excellent value. Simple but tasteful, spotless rooms, each done up after a different Hindu god, feel like walking into an Indian trinkets shop: print-design sheets, sequined fabrics,

THE LINGAM OF FIRE

Legend has it Shiva appeared as the original lingam of fire on Mt Arunachala to restore light to the world after his consort Parvati playfully plunged everything into darkness by closing his eyes. The Karthikai Deepam Festival (statewide; ☺Nov/Dec) celebrates this legend throughout India but becomes particularly significant at Tiruvannamalai. The lighting of a huge fire atop Mt Arunachala on the full moon night, from a 30m wick immersed in 3 tonnes of ghee, culminates a 10-day festival for which hundreds of thousands of people converge on Tiruvannamalai. Huge crowds scale the mountain or circumnavigate its base, chanting Shiva's name. The sun is relentless, the rocks are jagged and the journey is barefoot – none of which deters the thousands of pilgrims who joyfully make their way to the top and the abode of their deity.

dangling cane chairs, and in-room water filters. Fresh breakfasts cost ₹150.

Hotel Arunachala

(Arunachala Inn; ☎04175-228300; www.hotelarunachala.in; 5 Vada Sannathi St; s/d ₹500/990, with AC ₹1125/1690, deluxe d ₹2250; 🍷) This place right next to the Arunachaleswar Temple's east entrance is clean and fine with pretensions to luxury in the marblesque floors, ugly furniture, and keen management. Best are the recently revamped 'deluxe' rooms. Pure-veg Hotel Sri Arul Jothi (dishes ₹40-80; ☎5.30am-10.30pm) downstairs has good South Indian dishes, including thalis (₹80 to ₹100).

★ Dreaming Tree

CAFE, ORGANIC $$ (☎8270057753; www.dreamingtree.in; Ramana Nagar; mains ₹150-250; ☎9am-4.30pm Mon-Sat) Superchilled Dreaming Tree dishes out huge portions of exquisite, health-focused veg fare, prepped with mostly organic ingredients, on a breezy hut-like rooftop with hammocks. Fabulous 'hippie salads' and grilled paneer-veg baguettes, good breakfasts, and all kinds of cakes, juices, lassis and organic coffees. Signs lead the way (about 500m) across the road from Sri Ramana Ashram.

Shanti Café

CAFE $$ (www.shanticafe.com; 115A Chengam Rd; dishes ₹60-200, drinks ₹30-70; ☎8.30am-8.30pm) This popular and relaxed cafe with floor-cushion seating, up a lane off Chengam Rd, serves wonderful croissants, cakes, baguettes, pan-cakes, juices, coffees and breakfasts. There's an internet cafe (per hour ₹25; ☎8.30am-1.30pm & 3-7pm Mon-Sat) downstairs.

🛍 Shopping

Shantimalai Handicrafts

Development Society (www.smhds.org; 83/1 Chengam Rd; ☎9am-7pm Mon-Sat) Beautiful bedspreads, incense, oils, bangles, scarves and cards, all made by local village women.

📍 Getting There & Around

A taxi to Puducherry with a two- to three-hour stop at Gingee costs around ₹2800.

The bus stand is 800m north of the Arunachaleswar Temple, and a ₹50 to ₹60 autorickshaw ride from the main ashram area.

Chennai (₹110, four hours, every 15 minutes)

Puducherry (₹63, three hours, about hourly)

Trichy (₹125, six hours, about hourly)

Vellore (₹50, two hours, every 15 minutes)

Gingee (Senji)

With three separate hilltop citadels and a 6km perimeter of cliffs and thick walls, the ruins of enormous Gingee Fort (☎04145-222072; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☎8am-5pm) rise out of the Tamil plain, 37km east of Tiruvannamalai, like something misplaced from The Lord of the Rings. The fort was constructed mainly in the 16th century by the Vijayanagars and later occupied by the Marathas, Mughals, French and the British before being abandoned in the 19th century.

Today, few foreigners make it here, but Gingee is popular with domestic tourists for its starring role in various films. The main road from Tiruvannamalai towards Puducherry slices through the fort, just before Gingee town. The easiest citadel to reach, Krishnagiri, lies north of the road. To the south are the highest of the three, Rajagiri, and the most distant and least interesting, Chakkidurg. Ticket offices are at the foot of Krishnagiri and Rajagiri.

Remains of numerous buildings stand in the site's lower parts, especially at the bottom of Rajagiri, where the main landmark of the old palace area is the white, restored, seven-storey Kalyana Mahal (Marriage Hall). Just east of the palace area is an 18th-century mosque; southeast of that is the abandoned 16th-century Venkataramana Temple.

It's a good hike to the top of Krishnagiri and even more so to the top of more popular Rajagiri (over 150m above the plain), and you need at least half a day to cover both hills. Start early and bring water; hill-climbing entry ends at 2.30pm.

Gingee is on the Tiruvannamalai-Puducherry bus route, with buses from Tiruvannamalai (₹23, one hour) about every 15 minutes. Get off at the fort to save a trip back out from Gingee town.

Puducherry (Pondicherry)

☎0413 / POP 244,377

Puducherry (formerly called Pondicherry and generally referred to as 'Pondy') was under French rule until 1954 and some people here still speak French (and English with French accents). Hotels, restaurants and 'lifestyle' shops sell a seductive vision of the French-subcontinental aesthetic, enhanced by Gallic creative types whose presence has in turn attracted Indian artists and designers. Thus Pondy's vibe: less faded colonial-era ville, more a bohemian-chic, New Age-cum-Old World hang-out on the international travel trail.

If you've come from Chennai or some of Tamil Nadu's inland cities, Pondy may well seem a sea of tranquility. The older part of this former French colony (where you'll probably spend most of your time) is full of quiet, clean, shady cobbled streets, lined with bougainvillea-draped colonial-era townhouses numbered in an almost logical manner. The newer side of town is typically, hectically South Indian.

Part of the vibe stems from the presence of the internationally famous Sri Aurobindo Ashram and its offshoot just out of town, Auroville, which draw large numbers of spiritually minded visitors.

Enjoy the shopping, the French food (hello steak!), the beer (au revoir Tamil Nadu alcohol taxes – Pondy is a Union Territory), the sea air and plenty of yoga and meditation.

Puducherry is split from north to south by a partially covered canal. The 'French' part of town is on the east side (towards the sea). Nehru (JN) St and Lal Bahadur Shastri St (Rue Bussy) are the main east-west streets; Mahatma Gandhi (MG) Rd and Mission St (Cathedral St) are the chief north-south thoroughfares. Many streets change names as they go along and often have English, French and Tamil names simultaneously.

Sights

★ French Quarter

NEIGHBOURHOOD

Pocketed away just behind the seafront is a series of cobbled streets, white-and-mustard buildings in various states of romantic dishevelment, and a slight sense of Gallic glory gone by, otherwise known as the French Quarter. A do-it-yourself heritage walk could start at the French Consulate (☎0413-2231000; 2 Marine St) near the north end of seafront Goubert Ave, then gradually head south.

Turn inland south of the French Consulate to shady Bharathi Park, with the neo-classical governor's residence, Raj Nivas, facing its north side. Return to the seafront at the Gandhi Memorial, pass the Hôtel de Ville (City Hall) and then potter south through the 'white town' – Dumas, Romain Rolland, Suffren and Labourdonnais Sts. Towards the southern end of Dumas St, wander into the beautiful École Française D'Extrême-Orient. A lot of restoration has been going on in this area: if you're interested in Pondy's architectural heritage check out Intach Pondicherry (www.intachpondicherry.org).

Seafront

PROMENADE

(Goubert Ave) Pondy is a seaside town, but that doesn't make it a beach destination; the city's sand is a thin strip of dirty brown that slurps into a seawall of jagged rocks. But Goubert Ave (Beach Rd) is a killer stroll, especially at dawn and dusk when half the town takes a romantic wander there. In a stroke of genius the city council has banned traffic here from 6pm to 7.30am.

There are a few sandy beaches north and south of town, but they aren't good for sunbathing due to crowds of men, and possible undertow or rip tides make swimming risky.

Sri Aurobindo Ashram

ASHRAM

(www.sriurobindoashram.org; Marine St; ☎general visits 8am-noon & 2-6pm) Founded in 1926 by Sri Aurobindo and a French-born woman known as 'the Mother', this spiritual community now has about 1200 members working in its many departments. Aurobindo's teachings focus on an 'integral yoga' as the path towards a 'supramental consciousness which will divinise human nature'; devotees work in the world, rather than retreating from it. General visits to the main ashram building are cursory – you just see the flower-festooned samadhi of Aurobindo and the Mother, then the bookshop, then you leave.

Ashram accommodation guests can access other areas and activities. Evening meditation around the samadhi is open to people with passes – which you can only get if you're staying at an ashram guesthouse or from the ashram's Bureau Central (☎0413-2233604; bureaucentral@sriurobindoashram.org; Ambour Salai; ☎6-7.30am, 9am-noon & 3-7pm), where there are also interesting exhibitions on Sri Aurobindo and the Mother.

Sri Manakula Vinayagar Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Manakula Vinayagar Koil St; ☎5.45am-12.30pm & 4-9pm) Pondy may have more churches than most towns, but this is still India, and the Hindu faith reigns supreme. Don't miss the chance to watch tourists, pilgrims and the curious get a head pat from the temple elephant at this temple dedicated to Ganesh, which also contains over 40 painted friezes.

SURFING

(☎ 9442992874; www.surfschoolindia.com; Serenity Beach, Tandriankuppam; 1hr private class ₹1400, board rental per 90min ₹400-600) Surfing is soaring in popularity along Tamil Nadu's coast, and this long-standing, well-equipped, Spanish-run school, 5km north of Puducherry, offers everything from beginner sessions to intensive 'surf camps'.

Yoga & Ayurveda

You can practise (and study) yoga at Sri Aurobindo Ashram (p1035) and Auroville. Sita offers yoga, ayurvedic massages, and courses in practising ayurveda.

👉 Tours

A wonderful way to see Pondy is with Sita's popular early-morning guided bicycle tours (per person from ₹1200), which include breakfast.

Shanti Travel (p1041) offers recommended two-hour walking tours (per person ₹500) of Puducherry that are available with either English- or French-speaking guides.

PUDUCHERRY'S CATHEDRALS

Pondy has one of the best collections of over-the-top cathedrals in India. Merci, French missionaries. Our Lady of Immaculate Conception Cathedral (Mission St; ☎ 7-11am & 4-8.30pm), completed in 1791, is a robin's-egg-blue-and-cloud-white typically Jesuit edifice in a Goa-like Portuguese style, while the brown-and-white grandiosity of the Sacred Heart Basilica (Subbayah Salai; ☎ 7-11am & 4-8.30pm) is set off by stained glass and a Gothic sense of proportion. The twin towers and dome of the mellow-pink-and-cream Notre Dame des Anges (Dumas St; ☎ 6-10am & 4-7pm), built in the 1850s, look sublime in the late-afternoon light. The smooth limestone interior was made using eggshell plaster.

★ Festivals & Events

International Yoga Festival

YOGA

(☎ 4-7 Jan) Puducherry's ashrams and yoga culture are put on show with workshops, demonstrations and competitions, attracting experts from all over India and beyond.

Bastille Day

PARADE

(☎ 14 Jul) Street parades and a bit of French pomp and ceremony are part of the fun at this celebration.

🛏 Sleeping

If you've been saving for a splurge, this is the place for it: Puducherry's lodgings are as good as South India gets. Local heritage houses combine colonial-era romanticism with comfort and, dare we say, French playfulness. Most of these rooms would cost five times as much back in Europe. Book ahead for weekends.

Sri Aurobindo Ashram (p1035) runs several simple but clean guesthouses. They're primarily intended for ashram guests, but many accept other travellers willing to follow their rules: 10.30pm curfew and no smoking, alcohol or drugs. The ashram's Bureau Central (p1035) has a list.

Kailash Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0413-2224485; <http://kailashguesthouse.in>; 43 Vysial St; s/d ₹800/1000, with AC d ₹1250; ☎) The best value for money in this price range, Kailash has simple, superclean rooms with well mosquito-proofed windows, friendly management, and superb city views from the top floors. It's geared to traveller needs, with loungey communal areas, clothes-drying facilities, and a bar on the way.

Park Guest House

ASHRAM GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0413-2233644; parkgh@sriarobindoashram.org; 1 Goubert Ave; r ₹800, with AC ₹900; ☎) The most sought-after ashram guesthouse in town thanks to its wonderful seafront position. All front rooms face the sea and have a porch or balcony, and there's a garden for yoga or meditation. The best-value AC rooms around, but no advance bookings.

International

Guest House

ASHRAM GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0413-2336699; ingh@aurosociety.org; 47 NSC Bose St; s/d ₹500/650, with AC ₹700/1050; ☎) The sparse, clean rooms here, adorned with a single photo of the Mother, make for good-value ashram lodgings. Predictably it's very popular: book three weeks ahead.

★ Les Hibiscus

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9442066763, 0413-2227480; www.leshibiscus.in; 49 Suffren St; s/d incl breakfast ₹2400/2700; ☎@☎) A strong contender for our favourite Tamil Nadu hotel, Hibiscus has just four pristine, high-ceilinged rooms with gorgeous antique beds, coffee-makers and a mix of quaint Indian art and old-Pondy photos, at incredibly reasonable prices. The whole place is immaculately tasteful, breakfast is fabulous, internet is free and management is genuinely friendly and helpful. Make sure you book ahead.

Gratitude

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 0413-2225029; www.gratitudeheritage.in; 52 Romain Rolland St; s ₹3375-5510, d ₹4240-6470, all incl breakfast; ☎☎) A wonderfully tranquil 19th-century house (no TVs, no children) with welcoming staff, sun-yellow Gratitude has been painstakingly restored to a state probably even more charming than the original. The nine spotless, individually styled rooms are spread over two floors around a tropically shaded courtyard. There's a lovely roof terrace for yoga and massages.

Maison Tamoule

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎ 0413-2223738; www.neemanahotels.com; 44 Vysial St; r incl breakfast ₹3220-5370; ☎☎) The old Tamil Quarter has almost as many mansions as the French Quarter but is off most tourists' radars. Reincarnated under efficient new management, this excellent heritage choice, on a quiet, tree-shaded street, mixes a soaring sense of space with a sunken teak-columned atrium, gorgeous Chettinad-tiled floors, and 10 elegantly styled rooms featuring big bath tubs (though single beds are a tad small).

Hotel de Pondichéry

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎) 0413-2227409; www.hoteldepondicherry.com; 38 Dumas St; incl breakfast s ₹2000, d ₹3000-5000; (☎) A colourful heritage spot with 14 comfy, quiet, high-ceilinged, colonial-style rooms and a dash of original modern art. Their excellent restaurant, Le Club, takes up the pretty front courtyard. Staff are lovely and there's free wi-fi in the lobby.

Coloniale Heritage Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎) 0413-2224720; www.colonialeheritage.com; 54 Romain Rolland St; r incl breakfast ₹2000-3300; (☎) This colonial-era home with six comfy rooms (some up steep stairs) is chock-full of character thanks to the owner's amazing collection of gem-studded Tanjore paintings, Ravi Varma lithographs and other 19th- and 20th-century South Indian art. One room even has a swing. Breakfast is served in a sunken patio beside the leafy garden.

Nilla Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎) 9994653006; www.nillaguesthouse.com; 18 Labourdonnais St; r ₹1500-2100; (☎) A simple but brilliantly characterful and well-kept home run by a welcoming host, with just five fresh, colourful, heritage-style rooms, handy communal kitchens, and free wi-fi in the loungey terrace area.

★ Villa Shanti

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎) 0413-4200028; www.lavillashanti.com; 14 Suffren St; r incl breakfast ₹7870-10,117; (☎) Set in a 100-year-old building revamped by two French architects, Villa Shanti puts an exquisitely contemporary twist on the traditional Pondy heritage hotel. Beautiful fresh rooms combine super-chic design with typically Tamil materials and colonial-style elegance: four-poster beds, Chettinadu tiles, Tamil murals. The courtyard houses a popular restaurant and cocktail bar, so book up-per-floor beds for early snoozing.

Maison Perumal

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎) 0413-2227519; www.cghearth.com; 44 Perumal Koil St; r incl breakfast ₹8360-10,450; (☎) Cool peaceful rooms with colourful flourishes sit above two pillared patios in this renovated 130-year-old building lined with photos of old Chettiar families and pocketed away in Pondy's less touristic Tamil Quarter. The excellent Tamil/French restaurant (dinner ₹990, lunch mains ₹275-400; ☎12.30-2pm & 7.30-10.30pm) cooks everything from market-fresh ingredients, and staff are delightful. From March to October rates dip by 30%.

Hotel De L'Orient

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎) 0413-2343067; www.neemranahotels.com; 17 Romain Rolland St; r incl breakfast ₹3760-8060; (☎) This grand restored 18th-century mansion has breezy verandahs, keen staff, and charming rooms in all shapes and sizes, kitted out with antique furniture; some are cosy attics, others palatial. A place to get that old Pondy feel while enjoying polished service and French, Italian or creole (French-Indian) food in the courtyard Carte Blanche Restaurant (mains ₹300-580; ☎7.30-10.30am, noon-3pm & 7-9.30pm).

Eating

Puducherry is a culinary highlight of Tamil Nadu; you get great South Indian cooking plus well-prepped French and Italian cuisine. If you've been missing cheese or have a craving for pâté, you're in luck, and everyone in the French Quarter does good brewed coffee and crepes.

Baker Street

CAFE $

(123 Rue Bussy; items ₹40-130; ☎7am-9pm; ☎) A popular upmarket, French-style bakery with delectable cakes, croissants and biscuits. Baguettes, brownies and quiches aren't bad either. Eat in or take away.

Indian Coffee House

SOUTH INDIAN $

(125 Nehru St; dishes ₹30-60; ☎6.30am-10pm) Snack to your heart's content on cheap, South Indian favourites – dosas, vadas, uttapams and ₹15 filter coffee – at this Pondy institution. It's also, incidentally, where Yann Martel's novel Life of Pi begins.

Surguru

SOUTH INDIAN $

(235 (old 99) Mission St; mains ₹70-120; ☎7am-10.30pm) Simple South Indian in a relatively posh setting. Surguru is the fix for thali (lunchtime only) and dosa addicts who like their veg with good strong AC.

★ La Pasta

ITALIAN $$$

(☎) 9994670282; http://lapastapondy.blogspot.com; 55 Vysial St; mains ₹230-350; ☎noon-2pm & 5-9pm Tue-Sat) Pasta lovers should make a pilgrimage to this little spot with just four check-cloth tables, where an Italian whips up her own authentically yummy sauces and concocts her own perfect pasta in an open-plan kitchen as big as the dining area. No alcohol: it's all about the food.

Café des Arts

CAFE $$

(10 Suffren St; dishes ₹130-230; ☎ 8.30am-7pm Wed-Mon; 📶) This bohemian, vintage-style cafe would look perfectly at home in Europe, but this is Pondy, so there's a cycle-rickshaw in the garden. Refreshingly light dishes range from crisp salads, baguettes and toasties to crepes, and the coffees and fresh juices are great. The old-townhouse setting is lovely, with low tables and lounge chairs spilling out in front of a quirky boutique.

Kasha Ki Aasha

CAFE $$

(23 Rue Surcouf; mains ₹150-250; ☎ 10am-8pm Mon-Sat) You'll get a great pancake breakfast, good lunches and delicious cakes on the low-key rooftop of this colonial-era-house-cum-craft-shop-cum-cafe run by an all-female team. Fusion food includes chips with chutney, 'European-style thali' and 'Indian enchilada', and the pretty fabrics and leather sandals downstairs come direct from their makers.

Le Café

CAFE $$

(Goubert Ave; dishes ₹50-225; ☎ 24hr) This sea-front spot is good for baguettes, croissants, salads, cakes and organic South Indian coffee (hot or iced), plus welcome fresh breezes from the Bay of Bengal. It's popular, so you often have to wait for, or share, a table. But hey, it's all about the location.

Le Club

CONTINENTAL, INDIAN $$$

(☎ 0413-2339745; 38 Dumas St; mains ₹300-500; ☎ noon-3.30pm & 7-11pm Tue-Sun) The steaks (with sauces like blue cheese or Béarnaise), pizzas and crepes are all top-class at this popular romantically lit garden restaurant. Tempting local options include creole prawn curry, veg-paneer kebabs, and Malabar-style fish, and there are plenty of wines, mojitos and margaritas to wash it all down.

Villa Shanti

CONTINENTAL, INDIAN $$$

(☎ 0413-4200028; 14 Suffren St; mains ₹225-495; ☎ 12.30-2.30pm & 7-10.30pm) Smart candle-lit tables in a palm-dotted pillared courtyard attached to a colourful bar create a casually fancy vibe at this stylish, packed-out hotel restaurant. The building's contemporary Franco-Indian flair runs right through the North Indian/European menu and, while portions are small, flavours are superb and there are some deliciously creative veg dishes. Good cocktails too. Reserve for weekends.

Self-Catering

Nilgiri's

SUPERMARKET

(23 Rangapillai St; ☎ 9.30am-9pm) Well-stocked AC shop for groceries and toiletries.

Drinking & Nightlife

Although Pondy is one of the better places in Tamil Nadu to knock back a beer, closing time is a strictly enforced 11pm. Despite low taxes on alcohol, you'll really only find cheap beer in 'liquor shops' and their attached darkened bars. Hotel restaurants and bars make good drinking spots.

L'e-Space

BAR, CAFE

(2 Labourdonnais St; cocktails ₹200; ☎ 5-11pm) A quirky little semi-open-air upstairs bar-cafe-lounge that's friendly and sociable, and does good cocktails (assuming that the barman hasn't disappeared).

Shopping

With all the yoga yuppies congregating here, Pondy specialises in the boutique-chic-meets-Indian-bazaar school of fashion and souvenirs, and there's some beautiful and original stuff, a lot of it produced by Sri Aurobindo Ashram or Auroville. Nehru St and MG Rd are the shopping hotspots.

★ Kalki

CLOTHING, ACCESSORIES

(134 Mission St; ☎ 9.30am-8.30pm) Gorgeous, jewel-coloured silk and cotton fashions, as well as accessories, incense, essential oils, handmade-paper trinkets and more, mostly made at Auroville, where there's another branch (Visitors Centre; ☎ 9.30am-6pm).

Fabindia

CLOTHING, TEXTILES

(www.fabindia.com; 223 Mission St; ☎ 10.30am-8.30pm) Going strong since 1960, the Fabindia chain stocks stunning handmade products predominantly made by villagers using traditional craft techniques, and promotes rural employment. This branch has a wonderful collection of cotton and silk garments in contemporary Indian style, along with quality fabrics, tablecloths, oils, beauty products, and even furniture.

La Maison Rose

CLOTHING, HOMEWARES

(www.lamaisonrosepondicherry.com; 8 Romain Rolland St; ☎ 10am-7.30pm) This restored baby-pink mansion houses three luxurious boutiques packed with exquisite East-meets-West fashion, fabrics, jewellery, homewares and furniture. Flop over fresh juices and French-inspired dishes under the mango tree in the fairy-light-flooded courtyard cafe-restaurant (8 Romain Rolland St; mains ₹300-470; ☀ noon-3pm, 7-10pm).

Auroshikha

(38 Nehru St; ☀ 9.30am-8pm) It's fun browsing through the crafts here, including jewellery, clothes, shawls, handmade cards and pretty wooden trays.

Hidesign

LEATHER GOODS

(www.hidesign.com; 69 Nehru St; ☀ 9am-10pm) Established in Pondy in the 1970s, Hidesign sells beautifully made designer leather bags, briefcases, purses and belts in all kinds of colours, at very reasonable prices, and now has outlets across the world. The top-floor cafe, Le Hidesign (69 Nehru St; mains ₹120-180; ☀ 9am-9.30pm; ☎), serves delicious tapas and excellent coffee.

Geethanjali

ANTIQUES

(www.geethanjaliartifacts.com; 20 Rue Bussy; ☀ 10.30am-8.30pm) The kind of place where Indiana Jones gets the sweats, this antique and curio shop sells sculptures, carved doors, wooden chests, paintings and furniture culled from Puducherry's colonial and even precolonial history. It ships to Europe for ₹20,000 per cubic metre – make sure to check that your purchases aren't subject to export restrictions.

Focus

BOOKS

(204 Mission St; ☀ 9.30am-1.30pm & 3.30-9pm Mon-Sat) A great collection of India-related and other English-language books (including Lonely Planet guides).

Librairie Kailash

BOOKS

(169 Rue Bussy; ☀ 9am-1pm & 3-7.30pm Mon-Sat) Good selection of India and Asia titles in French.

i Getting There & Away

BUS

The bus stand (Maraimalai Adigal Salai) is in the west of town, 2km from the French Quarter. For Kumbakonam, change at Chidambaram. Further services run from Villupuram (₹18, one hour, every 10 minutes), 38km west of Puducherry. Private bus companies, operating mostly overnight to various destinations, have offices along Maraimalai Adigal Salai west of the bus stand. Parveen Travels (☎ 0413-2201919; www.parveentravels.com; 288 Maraimalai Adigal Salai) runs an 11pm semisleeper service to Kodaikanal (₹610, eight hours).

BUSES FROM PUDUCHERRY (PONDICHERRY) BUS STAND

DESTINATION	FARE (₹)	DURATION (HR)	FREQUENCY (DAILY)
Bengaluru	310	7	8pm & 10pm
Chennai	97 (Volvo AC 190)	4	every 30min (6 Volvo AC 6.30am-6pm)
Chidambaram	60	2	48
Mamallapuram	80	2	36
Tiruvannamalai	47-62	3	11
Trichy	112	5	4.40am, 10am, 8pm, 10pm

TRAIN

Puducherry station has just a few services. Two daily trains go to Chennai Egmore, with unreserved seating only (₹45 to ₹75, four to five hours). You can connect at Villupuram for many more services north and south. The station has a computerised booking office for trains throughout India.

i Getting Around

Pondy's flat streets are great for getting around on foot. Autorickshaws are plentiful. Official metered fares are ₹40 for up to 2km and then ₹15 per kilometre, but most drivers refuse to use their meters. A trip from the bus stand to the French Quarter costs around ₹60.

A good way to explore Pondy and around is by rented bicycle or motorbike from various outlets (per day bicycle/scooter/motorbike ₹50/200/250) on northern Mission St, between Nehru and Chetty Sts.

Auroville

☎0413 / POP 2345

Auroville, 'the City of Dawn', is one of those ideas that anyone with idealistic leanings will love: an international community dedicated to peace, harmony, sustainable living, and 'divine consciousness', where people from across the globe, ignoring creed, colour and nationality, work together to build a universal, cash-free, nonreligious township and realise good old human unity.

Outside opinions of Auroville's inhabitants range from admiration to accusations of self-indulgent escapism. Imagine over 100 small settlements scattered across the Tamil countryside, with 2300-odd residents of 43 nationalities. Nearly 60% of Aurovillians are foreign, and most new members require more funds than most Indians are ever likely to have. But the vibe you'll receive on a visit will probably be positive, and the energy driving the place is palpable.

Some 12km northwest of Puducherry, Auroville was founded in 1968 on the inspiration of 'the Mother', co-founder of Puducherry's Sri Aurobindo Ashram, and her philosophy still guides it. Aurovillians run a huge variety of projects ranging from schools and IT to organic farming, renewable energy and handicrafts production, employing 4000 to 5000 people from nearby villages.

The Auroville website (www.auroville.org) is an encyclopedic resource.

👁 Sights & Activities

Auroville isn't really geared for tourism – most inhabitants are just busy getting on with their lives – but it does have a good visitors centre (☎0413-2622239; ☀9am-1pm & 1.30-5pm) with information services, exhibitions and Auroville products. You can buy a handbook and map (₹20), and watch a 10-minute video. Free passes for external viewing of the Matrimandir (☀passes issued 9.30am-4.45pm Mon-Sat, 9.30am-12.45pm Sun), Auroville's 'soul', a 1km walk away through the woodlands, are also handed out here.

The large, golden, almost spherical Matrimandir is often said to resemble a golf ball, on a bed of lotus petals. You might equally feel that its grand simplicity, surrounded by pristine green parkland, does indeed evoke the divine consciousness it's supposed to represent. The orb's main inner chamber, lined with white marble, houses a large glass crystal that suffuses a beam of sunlight around the chamber. It's a place for individual silent concentration and if, after viewing the Matrimandir from the gardens, you want to meditate inside, you must book in person at least one day ahead at the Matrimandir access office (☎0413-2622204; Visitors Centre; ☀10-11am & 2-3pm Wed-Mon).

Visitors are perfectly free to wander round Auroville's 10-sq-km network of roads and tracks. With two million trees planted since Auroville's foundation, it's a lovely shaded area.

If you're interested in getting to know Auroville, residents recommend you stay at least 10 days and join one of their introduction and orientation programs. To get seriously involved, you normally need to come as a volunteer for two to 12 months. Contact the Auroville Guest Service (☎0413-2622675; www.aurovilleguestservice.org; Solar Kitchen Bldg, 2km east of Visitors Centre; ☀9.30am-1pm Mon-Sat) for advice on active participation.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Auroville has over 50 guesthouses (per person ₹250-4500) of hugely varied comfort levels, offering from two to 50 beds. ### Chidambaram

☎ 04144 / POP 62,153

There's basically one reason to visit Chidambaram: the great temple complex of Nataraja, Shiva as the Dancer of the Universe. One of the holiest of all Shiva sites, this also happens to be a Dravidian architectural highlight.

Most accommodation is close to the temple or the bus stand (500m southeast of the temple). The train station is about 1km further southeast.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

TRANQUIL TRANQUEBAR (THARANGAMBADI)

South of Chidambaram the many-armed delta of the Cauvery River stretches 180km along the coast and deep into the hinterland. The Cauvery is the beating heart of Tamil agriculture and its valley was the heartland of the Chola empire. Today the delta is one of the prettiest, poorest and most traditional parts of Tamil Nadu.

The tiny coastal town of Tharangambadi, still mostly known by its old name Tranquebar, is easily the most appealing base. A great place to recharge from the hot, crowded towns inland, this former Danish colony is quiet, neat, and set right on a long sandy beach with a few fishing boats and delicious sea breezes. It's said the air here is especially ozone-rich. The old part of town inside the 1791 Landporten gate makes a brilliantly peaceful stroll, and has been significantly restored since the 2004 tsunami, which killed about 800 people here. Intach Pondicherry (www.intachpondicherry.org) has a good downloadable map. The old Danish fort, Dansborg (Indian/foreigner ₹5/50, camera/video ₹30/100; ☀ 10am-1pm & 2-5.30pm Sat-Thu), dates from 1624 and contains an interesting little museum. Other notable buildings include New Jerusalem Church (Tamil Evangelical Lutheran Church; King's St), an intriguing mix of Indian and European styles built in 1718, and the 14th-century seafront Masilamani Nathar Temple, now in kaleidoscopic colours.

All accommodation is run by the Bungalow on the Beach (☎ 04364-288065; www.neemranahotels.com; 24 King's St; r incl breakfast ₹5400-8990, budget r ₹990; 🏠 🍷 🍷), in the former residence of the British administrator (Denmark sold Tranquebar to the British East India Company in 1845). There are 17 beautiful old-world rooms spread across the main building and two other heritage locations in town, plus five simple, clean budget rooms in the Hotel Tamil Nadu, opposite the main building; you get wonderful temple views from budget room 5, and all rooms are AC. The main building has a fantastic swimming pool and a good multicuisine restaurant (mains ₹150-300; ☀ 7.30-9.30am, 12.30-2.30pm & 7-9.30pm). Booking ahead is strongly recommended.

Buses in this region get incredibly crowded, but Tranquebar has regular connections with Chidambaram (₹30, two hours, hourly) and Karaikal (₹11, 30 minutes, half-hourly). From Karaikal buses go to Kumbakonam (₹36, 2¼ hours, half-hourly 4.15am to 10.15pm), Thanjavur (₹64, 3½ hours, hourly 4.15am to 10.15pm) and Puducherry (₹85, four hours, half-hourly 4.15am to midnight).

an earring and picked it up with his foot, a move that Kali could not duplicate, so Shiva won the title Nataraja (Lord of the Dance). It is in this form that he is worshipped at this great temple, which draws an endless stream of worshippers. It was built during Chola times (Chidambaram was a Chola capital), but the main shrines date back to at least the 6th century.

The high-walled 22-hectare complex has four towering gopurams decked out in Dravidian stone and stucco work. The main entrance is through the east (oldest) gopuram, off East Car St. The 108 sacred positions of classical Tamil dance are carved in its passageway. To your right through the gopuram are the 1000-pillared Raja Sabha (King's Hall; ☺ festival days), and the large Sivaganga tank.

You enter the central compound (no cameras) from the east. In its southern part (left from the entrance) is the 13th-century Nritta Sabha (Dance Hall), shaped like a chariot with 56 finely carved pillars. Some say this is the very spot where Shiva out-danced Kali.

North of the Nritta Sabha, through a door, you enter the inner courtyard. Right in front is the Kanaka Sabha pavilion, where many temple rituals are performed. At puja times devotees crowd into and around the pavilion to witness the rites performed by the temple's hereditary Brahmin priests, the Dikshithars, who shave off some of their hair but grow the rest of it long (thus representing both Shiva and Parvati) and tie it into topknots.

Behind (north of) the Kanaka Sabha is the innermost sanctum, the golden-roofed Chit Sabha (Wisdom Hall), which holds the temple's central bronze image of Nataraja – Shiva the cosmic dancer, ending one cycle of creation, beginning another and uniting all opposites.

Priests may offer to guide you around the temple complex. Since they work as a kind of cooperative to fund the temple, you may wish to support this magnificent building by hiring one (for anything between ₹30 and ₹300, depending on language skills and knowledge). Unusually for Tamil Nadu, the temple is privately funded and managed.

Most of the temples are dedicated to Shiva or Vishnu.

Nageshwara Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉ 6.30am-noon & 4.30-8.30pm) Founded by the Cholas in 886, this is Kumbakonam's oldest temple, and is dedicated to Shiva in the guise of Nagaraja, the serpent king. On three days of the year (in April or May) the sun's rays fall on the lingam. The Nataraja shrine just to the right in front of the inner sanctum is fashioned like a horse-drawn chariot.

Sarangapani Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉ 6.30am-noon & 4.30-8.30pm) Sarangapani is the largest Vishnu temple, with a 45m-high eastern gopuram as its main entrance (photography is not permitted inside). Past the temple cowshed (Krishna the cowherd is one of Vishnu's forms), another gopuram and a pillared hall, you reach the inner sanctuary, a 12th-century Chola creation styled like a chariot with big carved elephants, horses and wheels.

Kumbeshwara Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉ 6.30am-noon & 4.30-8.30pm) Kumbeshwara Temple, entered via a nine-storey gopuram and with a long porticoed mandapa, is Kumbakonam's biggest Shiva temple. It dates from the 17th and 18th centuries and contains a lingam said to have been made by Shiva himself when he mixed the nectar of immortality with sand.

DON'T MISS

CHOLA TEMPLES NEAR KUMBAKONAM

Two of the three great monuments of Chola civilisation stand in villages near Kumbakonam: the Airavatesvara Temple in Darasuram and the Gangaikondacholapuram temple. Unlike the also World Heritage-listed Brihadishwara Temple at Thanjavur, today these temples receive relatively few worshippers (and visitors). They are wonderful both for their overall form (with pyramidal towers rising at the heart of rectangular walled compounds) and for the exquisite detail of their carved stone.

From Kumbakonam, frequent buses heading to nearby villages will drop you at Darasuram; buses to Gangaikondacholapuram (₹21, 1½ hours) run every half-hour. A return autorickshaw to Darasuram costs about ₹150. A half-day car trip to both temples, with Hotel Raya's is ₹1100 (₹1250 with AC).

Airavatesvara Temple (☀ 6am-8pm) Only 3km west of Kumbakonam in Darasuram, this temple dedicated to Shiva was constructed by Rajaraja II (1146-63). The steps of the Rajagambhira Hall are carved with vivid elephants and horses pulling chariots. This pavilion's 108 all-different pillars have detailed carvings including dancers, acrobats and the five-in-one beast Yali (elephant's head, lion's body, goat's horns, pig's ears and a cow's backside). Inside the main shrine (☀ 6am-noon & 4-8pm), you can honour the central lingam and get a tilak (forehead) mark for ₹10.

On the outside of the shrine are several fine carved images of Shiva. Four mandapas frame the corners of the courtyard complex.

Gangaikondacholapuram Temple (☀ 6am-noon & 4-8pm) The temple at Gangaikondacholapuram ('City of the Chola who Conquered the Ganges'), 35km north of Kumbakonam, is dedicated to Shiva. It was built by Rajendra I in the 11th century when he moved the Chola capital here from Thanjavur, and has many similarities to the earlier Brihadishwara at Thanjavur. Its beautiful 49m-tall tower, however, has a slightly concave curve, making it the 'feminine' counterpart to the mildly convex Thanjavur one. The complex's artistic highlights are the wonderfully graceful sculptures around the tower's exterior.

A massive Nandi (Shiva's vehicle) faces the temple from the surrounding gardens. The main shrine, beneath the tower, contains a huge lingam and is approached through a long, gloomy 17th-century hall. The fine carvings on the tower's exterior include Shiva as the beggar Bhikshatana, immediately left of the southern steps; Ardhanarishvara (Shiva as half-man, half-woman) and Shiva as Nataraja, on the south side; and Shiva with Ganga, Shiva emerging from the lingam, and Vishnu with Lakshmi and Bhudevi (the first three images on the west side). Most famous of all is the striking panel of Shiva garland-ing the head of his follower, Chandesvara, beside the northern steps.

Hotel Raya's

It runs a convenient car service for out-of-town trips, and Sathars Restaurant (mains ₹110-195; ☀ 11.30am-11.30pm) here does good veg and nonveg fare in clean surroundings.

Thanjavur (Tanjore)

📍04362 / POP 222,943

Here are the ochre foundation blocks of perhaps the most remarkable civilisation of Dravidian history, one of the few kingdoms to expand Hinduism beyond India, a bedrock for aesthetic styles that spread from Madurai to the Mekong. A dizzying historical legacy was forged from Thanjavur, capital of the great Chola empire during its heyday. Today, this is a crowded, hectic, modern Indian town but the past is still very much present. Every day thousands of people worship at the Cholas' grand Brihadishwara Temple, and Thanjavur's labyrinthine royal palace preserves memories of other powerful dynasties from later centuries.

i Sights

★Brihadishwara Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(☎6am-8.30pm) Come here twice: in the morning, when the tawny granite begins to assert its dominance over the white dawn sunshine, and in the evening, when the rocks capture a hot palette of reds, oranges, yellows and pinks on the crowning glory of Chola temple architecture. The World Heritage-listed Brihadishwara Temple was built between 1003 and 1010 by Rajaraja I (king of kings). The outer fortifications were put up by Thanjavur's later Nayak and British regimes.

You enter through a Nayak gate, followed by two original gopurams with elaborate stucco sculptures. You might find the temple elephant under one of the gopurams, dispensing good luck with a dab of his trunk to anyone who puts a rupee in it. Several shrines are dotted around the extensive grassy areas of the walled temple compound, including one of India's largest statues of Nandi (Shiva's sacred bull) facing the main temple building. Cut from a single rock, this 16th-century Nayak creation is 6m long.

A long, columned assembly hall leads to the central shrine (☎8.30am-12.30pm & 4-8.30pm) with its 4m-high Shiva lingam, beneath the superb 61m-high vimana (tower). The assembly hall's southern steps are flanked by two huge dvarapalas (temple guardians). Many lovely, graceful deity images stand in niches around the vimana's lower levels, including Shiva emerging from the lingam (beside the southern steps); Shiva as the beggar Bhikshatana (first image, south side); Harihara (half Shiva, half Vishnu) on the west wall; and Ardhanarishvara (Shiva as half-man, half-woman), leaning on Nandi, on the north side. Between the deity images are panels showing classical dance poses.

The compound also contains a helpful interpretation centre along the south wall and, in the colonnade along the west and north walls, hundreds more linga. Both west and north walls are lined with exquisite lime-plaster Chola frescoes, for years buried under later Nayak-era murals. North of the temple compound, but still within the outer fortifications, are a park (admission ₹5) containing the Sivaganga tank, and 18th-century Schwartz's Church.

★Royal Palace

PALACE

(Indian/foreigner ₹30/150, camera ₹50/100; ☎9am-6pm) Thanjavur's royal palace is a mixed bag of ruin and renovation, superb art and random royal paraphernalia. The mazelike complex was constructed partly by the Nayaks who took over Thanjavur in 1535, and partly by a local Maratha dynasty that ruled from 1676 to 1855. The two don't-miss sections are the Saraswati Mahal Library Museum and the Art Gallery.

Seven different sections of the palace can be visited – and you'll need three different tickets to see them all! The Art Gallery and Saraswati Mahal Library Museum are included in the 'full' ticket, along with the Mahratta Dharbar Hall, the bell tower, and the Saarjah Madi. The main entrance is from the north, via a lane off East Main St. On the way in you'll come to the main ticket office, followed by the Maratha Palace complex.

Past the ticket office, a passage to the left leads to, first, the Royal Palace Museum, a small miscellany of sculptures, weaponry, elephant bells and rajas' headgears; second, the Maharaja Serfoji Memorial Hall, commemorating the enlightened Maratha scholar-king Serfoji II (1798–1832), with a better collection overlooking a once-splendid, now crumbling courtyard; and third, the Mahratta Dharbar Hall, where Maratha rulers gave audience in a grand but faded pavilion adorned with colourful murals, including their own portraits behind the dais.

As you exit the passage, the fabulous little Sarawasti Mahal Library Museum is on your left. Perhaps Serfoji II's greatest contribution to posterity, this is testimony both to the 19th-century obsession with knowledge accumulation and to an eclectic mind that collected prints of Chinese torture methods, Audubon-style paintings of Indian flora and fauna, world atlases and rare medieval books. Serfoji amassed more than 65,000 books and 50,000 palm-leaf paper manuscripts in Indian and European languages, though most aren't displayed.

Leaving the library, turn left for the Art Gallery, set around the Nayak Palace courtyard. This contains a collection of superb, mainly Chola, bronzes and stone carvings, and one of its rooms, the 1600 Nayak Durbar Hall, has a statue of Serfoji II. From the courtyard, steps lead part of the way up a large gopuram-like tower to a whale skeleton said to have been washed up in Tran-

Trichy (Tiruchirappalli)

☎ 0431 / POP 847.387

Welcome to (more or less) the geographic centre of Tamil Nadu. Tiruchirappalli, universally known as Trichy or Tiruchi, isn't just a travel junction; it also mixes up a heaving bazaar with some major must-see temples.

It's a huge, crowded, busy city, and the fact that most hotels are clumped together around the big bus station isn't exactly a plus point. But Trichy has a strong character and long history, and a sneaky way of overturning first impressions.

Trichy may have been a capital of the early Cholas in the 3rd century BC. It passed through the hands of the Pallavas, medieval Cholas, Pandyas, Delhi Sultanate and Vijayanagars before the Madurai Nayaks brought it to prominence, making it a capital in the 17th century and building its famous Rock Fort Temple.

Trichy stretches a long way from north to south, and most of what's interesting to travellers is split into three distinct areas. The Trichy Junction, or Cantonment, area in the south has most of the hotels and restaurants and the main bus and train stations. The Rock Fort Temple and main bazaar are 4km north of here; the other important temples are in Srirangam, a further 4km north, across the Cauvery River. Luckily, the whole lot is connected by a good bus service.

★ Rock Fort Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p1051; admission ₹3, camera/video ₹20/100; ☺ 6am-8pm) The Rock Fort Temple, perched 83m high on a massive outcrop, lords over Trichy with stony arrogance. The ancient rock was first hewn by the Pallavas and Pandyas, who cut small cave temples on its south side, but it was the war-savvy Nayaks who later made strategic use of the naturally fortified position. There are over 400 stone-cut steps to climb to the top.

From NSB Rd on the south side, you pass between small shops and cross a street before entering the temple precinct itself. Then it's 180 steps up to the Thayumanaswamy Temple, the rock's biggest temple, on the left (closed to non-Hindus). A gold-topped tower rises over its sanctum, which houses a 2m-high Shiva lingam. Further up, you pass the 6th-century Pallava cave temple on the left – it's usually railed off but if you get inside, note the famous Gangadhara panel on the left, showing Shiva restraining the waters of the Ganges with a single strand of his hair. From here it's just another 183 steps to the small Uchipillaiyar Temple at the summit, dedicated to Ganesh. The view is wonderful, with eagles wheeling beneath and Trichy sprawling all around. Back at the bottom, check out the lower rock-cut cave temple, with particularly fine pillars (right past five or six houses as you exit the temple precinct, then right again down a small lane).

The stone steps get scorchingly hot in the midday sun and it's a barefoot climb, so time your visit carefully.

★ Sri Ranganathaswamy Temple

HINDU TEMPLE
(Map p1051; camera/video ₹50/100; ☀ 6am-9pm)
All right temple-phailes, here's the one you've been waiting for: quite possibly the biggest temple in India – so large, it feels like a self-enclosed city. It has 49 separate shrines, all dedicated to Vishnu, and reaching the inner sanctum from the south, as most worshippers do, requires passing through seven gopurams. The first, the Rajagopuram (Map p1051), was added in 1987, and is one of Asia's tallest temple towers at 73m high.

You pass through streets with shops, restaurants, motorbikes and cars until you reach the temple proper at the fourth gopuram. Inside is the ticket desk for the nearby roof viewpoint (ticket ₹10; ☀ 6am-5pm), which gives semipanoramic views of the complex. Take no notice of would-be guides who spin all kinds of stories to get you to hire them. Non-Hindus cannot pass the sixth gopuram so won't see the innermost sanctum whose image shows Vishnu as Lord Ranganatha, reclining on a five-headed snake.

Turn right just before the fifth gopuram to the small but intriguing Art Museum (admission ₹5; ☀ 9am-1pm & 2-6pm), with good bronzes, tusks of bygone temple elephants, and a collection of superb 17th-century Nayak ivory figurines depicting gods, demons, and kings and queens (some erotically engaged). Continue round to the left past the museum to the Sesha Mandapa, a 16th-century pillared hall with magnificently detailed Vijayanagar carvings of rearing horses in battle. Inside the fifth gopuram is the Garuda Mandapa, with a shrine to Vishnu's man-eagle vehicle.

The temple's most important festival is the 21-day Vaikunta Ekadasi (Paradise Festival) in December/January, when the celebrated Vaishnavite text, Tiruvaimozhi, is recited before an image of Vishnu.

Bus 1 from the Central Bus Station or the Rock Fort stops south of the Rajagopuram.

Sri Jambukeshwara Temple HINDU TEMPLE (Tiruvanakoil; camera/video ₹30/200; ☀️5am-9pm) If you're visiting Tamil Nadu's five elemental temples of Shiva, you need to see Sri Jambukeshwara, dedicated to Shiva, Parvati and the medium of water. The liquid theme is realised in the central shrine (closed to non-Hindus), whose Shiva lingam reputedly issues a nonstop trickle of water. If you're taking bus 1, ask for 'Tiruvanakoil'; the temple is 350m east of the main road.

Lourdes Church CHURCH (Map p1051; College Rd; ☀️8am-8.30pm) The hush of this 19th-century neo-Gothic church makes an interesting contrast to the frenetic activity of Trichy's Hindu temples. In the cool, green campus of Jesuit St Joseph's College next door, the dusty St Joseph's College Museum (Map p1051; ☀️9am-noon & 2-4pm Mon-Sat) FREE contains the creepy natural history collections of the Jesuit priests' Western Ghats excursions in the 1870s. Ask at reception as you approach the museum and someone will probably let you in.

Sleeping & Eating

Most hotels are near the Central Bus Station, a short walk north from Trichy Junction train station.

The top eateries are usually in the better hotels, but there are some decent cheaper places too.

Hotel Abbirami HOTEL $ (Map p1053; ☎️0431-2415001; 10 McDonald's Rd; r ₹770-990, with AC ₹1439-1919; 🏠) Most appealing are the 1st- and 4th-floor renovated rooms, with light wood and colourful glass panels. Older rooms have darker wood and are a bit worn, but still well-kept. It's a busy place with friendly staff.

Hotel Mathura HOTEL $ (Map p1053; ☎️0431-2414737; www.hotelmathura.com; 1 Rockins Rd; r ₹700, with AC ₹1100; 🏠) Rooms are very basic but tolerably clean. Many of the non-ACs are in better shape than those with AC. The 2nd floor, at least, has had a decent coat of paint.

Hotel Ramyas HOTEL $$ (Map p1053; ☎️0431-2414646; www.ramyas.com; 13-D/2 Williams Rd; s/d ₹990/1680, with AC s ₹2100-2700, d ₹2400-3300, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶🚰) Excellent rooms, service and facilities make this business-oriented hotel great value. 'Business' singles are small but it's only another ₹200-odd for a good 'executive'. Turquoise-clad Meridian (Map p1053; mains ₹100-215; ☀️11.30am-3pm & 6.30-11pm) does tasty multicuisine fare, breakfast is a nice buffet, and the Chola Bar (Map p1053; ☀️11am-3.30pm & 6.30-11pm) is less dingy than most hotel bars (though still male-dominated). Best is the lovely Thendral (Map p1053; mains ₹100-230; ☀️7-9.30am & 6.30-11pm) roof-garden restaurant.

Grand Gardenia HOTEL $$ (☎️0431-4045000; www.grandgardenia.com; 22-25 Mannarpuram Junction; s ₹3000, d ₹3600-4800, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶) Elegant modern rooms come with free wi-fi, comfy beds, and glassed-in showers at this sparkly corporate-style hotel, currently your smartest option in Trichy. Kannappa (mains ₹95-180; ☀️11.30am-11.30pm) serves up excellent Chettinadu food and the rooftop terrace hosts a good multicuisine restaurant (mains ₹115-220; ☀️7.30-10am, noon-3pm & 7-10.45pm) and a gym. Comfort and amenities outweigh the uninspiring location, near the highway 1km south of Trichy Junction station.

Femina Hotel HOTEL $$ (Map p1053; ☎️0431-2414501; www.feminahotel.net; 109 Williams Rd; s ₹1600-3600, d ₹2040-4200, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶🚰) It's hard to tell where the enormous Femina begins and ends. From outside it looks 1950s, but renovations have turned the interior quite contemporary. Facilities are good and staff helpful. Renovated deluxe rooms are cosy and modern, while standard rooms are a tad worn but very spacious. There's a nice outdoor pool and eateries include the Round the Clock (Map p1053; mains ₹80-120; ☀️24hr) coffee-shop-cum-veg-restaurant.

Breeze Residency HOTEL $$ (Map p1053; ☎️0431-2414414; www.breeze.residency.com; 3/14 McDonald's Rd; s/d ₹3000/3480, ste ₹4200-6000, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶🚰) The Breeze is huge, semiluxurious and in a quiet leafy location. The best rooms are on the top floors but all are well appointed. Facilities include a gym, the Madras Restaurant (Map p1053; lunch/dinner buffet ₹400/450; ☀ noon-3.30pm & 7-11pm), a 24-hour coffee shop, and a bizarre Wild West theme bar.

Hotel Royal Sathyam

HOTEL $$

(Map p1051; ☎ 0431-4011414; <http://sathyamgroup-hotels.in>; 42A Singarathope; s ₹1440-1920, d ₹1680-3000, all incl breakfast; 🏠 📞) The classiest option if you want to be close to the temple and market action. Rooms are small but smart, with extra-comfy mattresses and a fresh wood-and-whitewash theme, and it's a friendly place.

Vasanta Bhavan

INDIAN $

(Map p1051; 3 NSB Rd; mains ₹60-85, thalis ₹60-120; ☀ 7am-10.30pm) A great spot for a meal with a view and, if you're lucky, a breeze near the Rock Fort. Tables on the outer gallery overlook the Teppakulam Tank. It's good for North Indian veg food – of the paneer and naan genre – as well as South Indian. People crowd in for the lunchtime thalis. There's another branch (Map p1053; Rockins Rd; mains ₹40-85, thalis ₹80; ☀ 6am-11pm) in the Cantonment.

DiMora

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p1051; ☎ 0431-2762656; 4th fl, Ambigai City Center, Shastri Rd; mains ₹150-440; ☀ noon-4pm & 7-11.30pm) Waiters in all-black take your order on mobile phones to a soundtrack of trancey lounge music that makes this smart, popular top-floor restaurant feel more Chennai than Trichy. The menu roams all over the world, but it's great for pastas, wood-fired pizzas and fresh juices, as well tandoori and other Indian dishes.

Shopping

The main bazaar, immediately south of the Rock Fort, is as chaotic and crowded as you could want.

Saratha's

CLOTHING

(Map p1051; 45 NSB Rd; ☀ 9am-9.30pm) Bursting with clothing of every conceivable kind and colour, Saratha's claims to be (and might well be) the 'largest textile showroom in India'.

Information

Indian Panorama (☎ 0431-4226122; www.indianpanorama.in; 5 Annai Ave, Srirangam) Trichy-based and covering all of India, this professional, reliable travel agency/tour operator is run by an Indian–New Zealander couple.

KMC Speciality Hospital (Kauvery Hospital; Map p1053; ☎ 0431-4077777; www.kmcspecialityhospital.in; 6 Royal Rd) Large, well-equipped, private hospital.

BUS

Government buses use the busy but orderly Central Bus Station (Map p1053; Rockins Rd). The best services for longer trips are the UD (Ultra Deluxe), with the softest seats. There's a booking office for these in the southwest corner of the station. For Kodaikanal, a good option is to take one of the frequent buses to Dindigul (₹48, two hours) and change there.

Private bus companies have offices near the Central Bus Station, including Parveen Travels (Map p1053; ☎ 0431-2419811; www.parveen-travels.com; 12 Ashby Complex; ☀ 24hr) which offers AC services to Chennai (₹560 to ₹680, six hours, seven daily) and Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram; ₹1100 to ₹1200, seven hours, 12.30am and 1am), plus non-AC semisleeper services to Puducherry (₹500, four hours, midnight) and Kodaikanal (₹500, 4½ hours, 2.30am).

TAXI

Travel agencies and hotels provide cars with drivers. Efficient, reasonably priced Femina

Travels (Map p1053; ☎ 0431-2418532; 109 Williams Rd; ☀ 6am-10pm) charges ₹1900 for up to 10 hours and 100km (AC).

TRAIN

Trichy Junction station is on the main Chennai-Madurai line. Of 16 daily express services to Chennai, the best daytime option is the Vaigai Express (2nd/chair class ₹145/510, 5¾ hours) departing at 9am. The overnight Pandyan Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹245/625/870/1450, 6½ hours) leaves at 11.10pm. Thirteen daily trains to Madurai include the 7.15am Tirunelveli Express (2nd/chair class ₹95/340, 2¼ hours) and the 1.15pm Guruvaya Express (2nd-class/sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹80/140/485/690, three hours). Eighteen trains head to Thanjavur (2nd-class/sleeper/3AC ₹45/140/485, 40 minutes to 1½ hours).

i Getting Around

The 5km ride between the airport and Central Bus Station area costs about ₹300 by taxi and ₹150 by autorickshaw; there's a prepaid taxi stand at the airport. Or take bus K1.

Bus 1 from Rockins Rd outside the Central Bus Station goes every few minutes to Sri Ranganathaswamy Temple (₹6) and back, stopping near the Rock Fort Temple and Sri Jambukeshwara Temple en route.

SOUTHERN TAMIL NADU

Chettinadu

The Chettiars, a community of traders based in and around Karaikkudi, 95km south of Trichy, hit the big time back in the 19th century as financiers and entrepreneurs in colonial-era Sri Lanka and Southeast Asia.

They lavished their fortunes on building at least 10,000, maybe even 30,000 opulent mansions in the 75 towns and villages of their arid rural homeland, Chettinadu. No expense was spared on finding the finest materials for these palatial homes – Burmese teak, Italian marble, Indian rosewood, English steel, and art and sculpture from everywhere. In the aftermath of WWII, the Chettiars' business networks came crashing down and many families left Chettinadu. Disused mansions fell into decay and were demolished or sold off piecemeal. Awareness of their value started to revive around the turn of the 21st century, with Chettinadu making it onto Unesco's tentative World Heritage list in 2014. Several mansions have now been turned into gorgeous heritage hotels where you can enjoy authentic Chettinad cuisine, known throughout India for its brilliant use of spices.

👁 Sights & Activities

Hotels give cooking demos or classes, and provide bicycles or bullock carts for rural rambles. They can also arrange visits to sari-weavers, temples, private mansions, the Athangudi tileworkers (producing the colourful handmade tiles in most Chettiar mansions), and shrines of the popular pre-Hindu deity Ayyanar (identifiable by their large terracotta horses, Ayyanar's vehicle). The antique shops in Karaikkudi's Muneeswaran Koil St give you an idea of how much of the Chettiar heritage is still being flogged.

The nondescript town of Pudukkottai, 51km south of Trichy and 44km north of Karaikkudi, has historical significance in inverse proportion to its current obscurity: it was the capital of the only princely state in Tamil Nadu to remain officially independent throughout British rule.

Vijayalaya Cholisvaram HINDU TEMPLE
(Narthamalai) This small but stunning 8th-century temple stands on a dramatically deserted rock slope 1km southwest of Narthamalai village, about 16km north of Pudukkottai. Reminiscent of the Shore Temple at Mamallapuram, without the crowds, it was probably built in late Pallava times. The caretaker, if present, will open two rock-cut Shiva shrines in the rock face behind, one with 12 impressively large reliefs of Vishnu.

The Narthamalai turn-off is 7km south of Keeranur on the Trichy–Pudukkottai road; it's 2km west to the village.

Pudukkottai Museum MUSEUM
(Thirukokarnam, Pudukkottai; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, camera/video ₹20/100; ☀9.30am–5pm Sat–Thu) The relics of bygone days are on display in this wonderful museum, 4km north of Pudukkottai train station. Its eclectic collection includes musical instruments, megalithic burial artefacts, and some remarkable paintings, sculptures and miniatures.

Thirumayam Fort FORT
(Thirumayam; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀10am–5.30pm) Simple and imposing, the renovated Thirumayam Fort, about 20km south of Pudukkottai, is worth a climb for the 360-degree views from the battlements over the surrounding countryside. There's a rock-cut Shiva shrine up some metal steps on the west side of the small hill.

Mansions
Lakshmi House HISTORIC BUILDING
(Athangudi Periya Veedu; Athangudi Rd, Athangudi; admission ₹100; ☀9am–5pm) With perhaps the most exquisitely painted wood-carved ceilings in Chettinadu, Lakshmi House is a popular film set. Take in the especially fine materials (Belgian marble, English iron), Chettiar history panels, and curious statues of British rulers and Hindu gods above the front entrance. Athangudi is 15km northwest of Karaikkudi.

CVCT House HISTORIC BUILDING
(CVCT St, Kanadukathan; admission ₹100, camera ₹50; ☀9am–5pm) Backed by the typical succession of pillar-lined courtyards, the impressive reception hall of this 'twin house' is shared by two branches of the same family. Don't miss the fabulous views over neighbouring mansions from the rooftop terrace. On the same street, VVRM House (CVCT St, Kanadukathan) is one of Chettinadu's oldest mansions, built in 1870 with distinctive egg-plaster walls, teak columns and intricate wood carvings; a ₹100 group 'donation' is expected. Kanadukathan is 9km south of Thirumayam.

PKACT House HISTORIC BUILDING
(Trichy Main Rd, Kottaiyur, opp. ICICI Bank ATM; admission ₹50; ☀10am–5pm) Run by the Chennai-based M.Rm.Rm. Cultural Foundation (Map p1004; mrmrmculturalfoundation.moonfruit.com), this particularly well-preserved early-1900s mansion mixes modern and traditional architecture. Unusually, you can tour the whole house; upstairs, there's a superb collection of Ravi Varma prints. Kottaiyur is 6km north of Karaikkudi.

Sleeping & Eating

To get a feel for the palatial life, book into one of Chettinadu's top-end hotels; they're pricey but the experience is fantastic.

★ Visalam HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎04565-273301; www.cghearth.com; Local Fund Rd, Kanadukathan; r incl breakfast ₹6500-13,000; 🍷🍷🍷) Stunningly restored and professionally run by a Malayali hotel chain, Visalam is a relatively young Chettiar mansion, done in the fashionable art-deco style of the 1930s. It's still decorated with the original owners' photos, furniture and paintings. The garden is lovely, the rooms large and full of character, and the pool setting is magical, overflowing with bougainvillea and with a low-key cafe alongside it. Kanadukathan is 9km south of Thirumayam.

★ Saratha Vilas BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$
(☎9884203175; 9884936158; www.sarathavilas.com; 832 Main Rd, Kothamangalam; r incl breakfast ₹8000-11,000; 🍷🍷🍷) A different type of Chettiar charm inhabits this stylishly renovated, French-run mansion from 1910, 6km east of Kanadukathan. Rooms combine traditional and contemporary with distinct French panache, and the food is an exquisite mix of Chettinad and French. Most of the furnishings were personally designed by the knowledgeable architect owners, who are very active players in the preservation and promotion of Chettinadu heritage.

They're also the founders of local conservation NGO ArcHeS.

Bangala BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$
(☎04565-220221; www.thebangala.com; Devakottai Rd, Karaikkudi; r ₹6500-7000; 🍷🍷🍷) This lovingly restored whitewashed 'bungalow' isn't a typical mansion but has all the requisite charm, with colourful rooms, quirky decorations, antique furniture, old family photos, and a beautiful pool. It's famous for its food: the ₹1000 set meals are actually Chettiar wedding feasts worth every paisa (available to nonguests from 12.30pm to 2.30pm and 8pm to 10pm; call two hours ahead).

Chettinadu Mansion HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎04565-273080; www.chettinadmansion.com; 11 AR St, SARM House, Kanadukathan; s/d incl breakfast ₹5000/6400, half-board ₹5700/7800; 🍷🍷🍷) Slightly shabbier than other Chettiar joints, but friendly and well managed, this colourful century-old house is still owned (and lived in) by the original family. Of its 126 rooms, just 12 are open to guests – all sizeable with free wi-fi, wacky colour schemes and private balconies looking over other mansions.

The owners also run Chettinadu Court (☎9443495598; www.deshadan.com; Raja's St, Kanadukathan; s/d incl breakfast ₹3400/4500; 🍷🍷🍷) a few blocks away, which has eight pleasant rooms sporting a few heritage touches. The two share an off-site pool.

Getting There & Away

Car is by far the best way to get to and around Chettinadu. Renting one with a driver from Trichy, Thanjavur or Madurai for two days costs around ₹5000. Otherwise there are buses about every five minutes from Trichy to Pudukkottai (₹25, 1½ hours) and Karaikkudi (₹85, 2½ hours); you can hop off and on along the way. From Madurai, buses run to Karaikkudi (₹37, two hours) and Pudukkottai (₹57, 2½ hours) every 10 minutes. There are also buses from Thanjavur and Rameswaram.

Madurai

☎0452 / POP 1.02 MILLION

Chennai may be the capital of Tamil Nadu, but Madurai claims its soul. Madurai is Tamil-born and Tamil-rooted, one of the oldest cities in India, a metropolis that traded with ancient Rome and was a great capital long before Chennai was even dreamt of.

Tourists, Indian and foreign, usually come here to see the Meenakshi Amman Temple, a labyrinthine structure ranking among the greatest temples of India. Otherwise, Madurai, perhaps appropriately given her age, captures many of India's glaring dichotomies, with a centre dominated by a medieval temple and an economy increasingly driven by IT, all overlaid with the energy and excitement of a big Indian city and slotted into a much more manageable package than Chennai's sprawl.

History

Legend has it that Shiva showered drops of nectar (madhuram) from his locks onto the city, giving rise to the name Madurai – 'the City of Nectar'.

Ancient documents record the existence of Madurai from the 3rd century BC. It was a trading town, especially in spices, and according to legend was the home of the third sangam (gathering of Tamil scholars and poets). Over the centuries Madurai came under the sway of the Cholas, Pandyas, local Muslim sultans, Hindu Vijayanagar kings, and the Nayaks, who ruled until 1736 and set out the old city in a lotus shape. Under Tirumalai Nayak (1623–59) the bulk of the Meenakshi Amman Temple was built, and Madurai became the hub of Tamil culture, playing an important role in the development of the Tamil language.

In 1840 the British East India Company razed Madurai's fort and filled in its moat. The four broad Veli streets were constructed on top and to this day define the old city's limits.

Sights

★ Meenakshi Amman Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(Indian/foreigner ₹5/50, phone camera ₹50; ☀️ 4am-12.30pm & 4-9.30pm) The abode of the triple-breasted warrior goddess Meenakshi ('fish-eyed' – an epithet for perfect eyes in classical Tamil poetry) is considered by many to be the height of South Indian temple architecture, as vital to the aesthetic heritage of this region as the Taj Mahal is to North India. It's not so much a 17th-century temple as a 6-hectare complex with 12 tall gopurams, encrusted with a staggering array of gods, goddesses, demons and heroes (1511 of them on the south gopuram alone).

According to legend, the beautiful Meenakshi (a version of Parvati) was born with three breasts and this prophecy: her superfluous breast would melt away when she met her husband. The event came to pass when she met Shiva and took her place as his consort. The existing temple was built during the 17th-century reign of Tirumalai Nayak, but its origins go back 2000 years to when Madurai was a Pandyan capital.

The four streets surrounding the temple are pedestrian-only. Dress codes and security are strict for the temple itself: no women's shoulders, or legs of either gender, may be exposed, and no cameras are allowed inside (but you can use phone cameras). Despite this the temple has a happier, more joyful atmosphere than some of Tamil Nadu's more solemn shrines, and is adorned with especially colourful ceiling and wall paintings. Every evening at 9pm, a frenetic, incense-clouded procession carries an icon of Sundareswarar (Shiva) to Meenakshi's shrine to spend the night; visitors are welcome to follow along.

Before entering the temple, have a look around the Pudhu Mandapa. The main temple entrance is through the eastern (oldest) gopuram. First, on the right, you'll come to the Thousand Pillared Hall, now housing an Art Museum. Moving on into the temple, you'll reach a Nandi shrine surrounded by more beautifully carved columns. Ahead is the main Shiva shrine, flanked on each side by massive dvarapalas, and further ahead to the left in a separate enclosure is the main Meenakshi shrine, both open only to Hindus. However, anyone wander round the Golden Lotus Tank, then leave the temple via a hall of flower sellers and the arch-ceilinged Ashta Shakti Mandapa – this is actually used as the temple entrance by most worshippers and is lined with relief carvings of the goddess's eight attributes, with perhaps the loveliest of all the temple's vibrantly painted ceilings.

➔ Pudhu Mandapa

(East Chitrai St) This 16th-century pillared hall stands outside the temple, opposite the eastern gopuram. It's filled with colourful textile and crafts stalls and tailors at sewing machines, partly hiding some of the lovely pillar sculptures, but it's easy to find the triple-breasted Meenakshi near the southeast corner, facing Sundareswarar (opposite), and their marriage, accompanied by Vishnu, just inside the western entrance. A particularly handsome light-blue Nandi (Shiva's vehicle) sits outside the mandapa's eastern entrance.

➔ Art Museum

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/50, phone camera ₹50; ☀️ 6.30am-1pm & 4-9pm) Inside the temple's eastern gopuram, is the Nayak-period Thousand Pillar Hall (with 985 columns) on the right. This is now the Art Museum, where you can admire at your leisure a Shiva shrine with a large bronze Nataraja at the end of a corridor of superbly carved pillars, plus many other fine bronzes and colourfully painted panels. Some of the best carvings, including Krishna with his flute and Ganesh dancing with a woman on his knee, are immediately inside the museum entrance.

Gandhi Memorial Museum MUSEUM

(Gandhi Museum Rd; camera ₹50; ☀️ 10am-1pm & 2-5.45pm Sat-Thu) FREE Housed in a 17th-century Nayak queen's palace, this excellent museum contains an impressively moving and comprehensive account of India's struggle for independence from 1757 to

Madurai

1947, and the English-language text spares no detail about British rule. Included in the exhibition is the blood-stained dhoti that Gandhi was wearing when he was assassinated in Delhi in 1948; it was here in Madurai, in 1921, that he first took up wearing the dhoti as a sign of native pride.

The small Madurai Government Museum (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, camera ₹20; ☉9.30am-5pm Sat-Thu) is next door, and the Gandhian Literary Society Bookshop (☉10am-1pm & 2.30-6.30pm Mon-Sat) behind. Yoga (one-month unlimited membership ₹100; ☉6am, 10.30am & 5pm Mon-Fri) takes place within the museum's grounds; no bookings needed.

Bus 75 from Periyar Bus Stand (West Veli St) goes to the Tamukkam bus stop on Al-garukoil Rd, 600m from the museum.

Tirumalai Nayak Palace

PALACE

(Palace Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/50, camera/video ₹30/100; ☉9am-1.30pm & 2-5pm) What the Meenakshi Amman Temple is to Nayak religious architecture, Tirumalai Nayak's crumbling palace is to the secular. Although it's said to be only a quarter of its original size, its massive scale and hybrid Dravidian-Islamic style still testify to the lofty aspirations of its creator. You enter from the east – a large courtyard surrounded by tall columns topped with fancy stucco work leads through to the grand throne chamber with its 25m-high dome; two stone-carved horses frame the steps up.

The evening culminates in Shiva's seduction of his wife, whereupon the icons are brought back to the temple to make love and, in so doing, regenerate the universe. Meenakshi's diamond nose stud is removed so it doesn't irritate her lover. Due to low rainfall, the 2013 and 2014 celebrations were 'dry' floats.

Chithirai Festival

RELIGIOUS

(☺️ Apr/May) The highlight of Madurai's busy festival calendar is this two-week event celebrating the marriage of Meenakshi to Sundareswarar (Shiva). The deities are wheeled around the Meenakshi Amman Temple in massive chariots forming part of long, colourful processions.

🏨 Sleeping

Budget hotels in central Madurai are mostly dreary and unloved, but there is a big choice of perfectly fine, near-identical midrange places along West Perumal Maistry St, near the train station. Most have rooftop restaurants with temple and sunset views.

Hotel West Tower

HOTEL $

(☎️) 0452-2349600; 42/60 West Tower St; s/d ₹500/800, with AC ₹1200/1800; 🏠) The West Tower's best asset is that it's very near the temple, but it's also acceptably clean and friendly.

TM Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎️) 0452-2341651; www.tmlodge.in; 50 West Perumal Maistry St; s/d ₹440/660, r with AC ₹1300; 🏠) The walls are a bit grubby, but the sheets are clean. TM is efficiently run, even with a lift operator!

Madurai Residency

HOTEL $$

(☎️) 0452-4380000; www.madurairesidency.com; 15 West Marret St; s ₹2380-2860, d ₹2760-3220, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶) The service is stellar and the rooms are comfy and fresh at this winner, which has one of the highest rooftop restaurants in town. It's very popular, so book at least a day ahead.

Royal Court

HOTEL $$

(☎️) 0452-4356666; www.royalcourtindia.com; 4 West Veli St; s ₹3960-4910, d ₹4800-5640, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶) The Royal Court blends a bit of white-stucco, hardwood-floored colonial elegance with comfort, good eating options, free wi-fi and friendly yet professional service. Rooms come with tea/coffee sets. It's an excellent, central choice for someone in need of a treat.

Hotel Park Plaza

HOTEL $$

(☎️) 0452-3011111; www.hotelparkplaza.net; 114 West Perumal Maistry St; s/d incl half-board ₹2880/3480; 🏠📶) The Plaza's rooms are comfortable and simply but smartly done up, with free wi-fi. Four have temple views. It also boasts a good multicuisine rooftop Temple View (☺️ 5pm-midnight) restaurant and the (inappropriately named) Sky High Bar – on the 1st floor.

Hotel Supreme

HOTEL $$

(☎️) 0452-2343151; www.hotelsupreme.in; 110 West Perumal Maistry St; s ₹2390-3270, d ₹2710-3470, all incl breakfast; 🏠📶) The Supreme is a well-presented, slightly faded hotel with friendly service, that's very popular with domestic tourists. There's good food at the rooftop Surya restaurant and free in-room wi-fi, and the spaceship-themed basement bar will make you wonder if someone laced your lassi last night.

Gateway Hotel Pasumalai

HOTEL $$$

(☎0452-6633000; www.thegatewayhotels.com; 40 TPK Rd, Pasumalai; s ₹6000-8390, d ₹7200-9600; @☎☎) A stunning escape from the city scramble, the Gateway sprawls across hilltop gardens 5km southwest of the centre. The views, outdoor pool and 45 resident peacocks are wonderful, and rooms are luxuriously comfy and equipped with glassed-in showers and do-it-yourself yoga kits. The Garden All Day restaurant is excellent.

Heritage Madurai

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎0452-3244187; www.heritagemadurai.com; 11 Melakkal Main Rd, Kochadai; s ₹5880-8820, d ₹6470-9410; @☎☎) This leafy haven, 4km west of central Madurai, originally housed the old Madurai Club. It's been impeccably tarted up, with intricate woodwork, a lovely sunken pool and airy, terracotta-floored 'deluxe' rooms. Best are the comfy 'villas' featuring private mini-swimming-pools. There's a good Chettinad restaurant, along with a spa, bar and 24-hour cafe.

Eating

The hotel-rooftop restaurants along West Perumal Maistry St offer breezy night-time dining and temple views (don't forget the mosquito repellent); most of the hotels also have AC restaurants open for breakfast and lunch. Look out for Madurai's famous summer drink jigarthanda (boiled milk, almond essence, rose syrup and vanilla ice cream).

Murugan Idli Shop

SOUTH INDIAN $

(196 West Masi St; dishes ₹11-40; ☺7am-midnight) Though it now has Chennai branches, Murugan is Madurai born and bred. Here you can put the fluffy signature idlis to the test, and feast on South Indian favourites such as dosas and uttapams.

Sri Sabareesh

INDIAN $

(49A West Perumal Maistry St; mains ₹57-85; ☺6.30am-11.30pm) Decked with old-Madurai photos, Sri Sabareesh is a popular pure-veg spot that does decent South Indian thalis for ₹80. It's quite characterful and contemporary for a cheapie on this street.

Surya

MULTICUISINE $$

(110 West Perumal Maistry St; mains ₹80-190; ☺4-11.30pm) The Hotel Supreme's rooftop restaurant offers excellent service, good pure-veg food and superb city and temple views, but the winner here has got to be the iced coffee, which might have been brewed by a god when you sip it on a hot, dusty day.

Garden All Day

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Gateway Hotel, 40 TPK Rd, Pasumalai; mains ₹300-525; ☺7am-10.30pm) If you fancy splashing out, the panoramic all-day restaurant at the Gateway Hotel (5km southwest of central Madurai) does a fantastic multicuisine dinner buffet (₹800 to ₹1000). Outside in the gardens or inside in AC comfort.

Shopping

Madurai teems with cloth stalls and tailors' shops, as you might notice upon being approached by tailor touts. A great place for getting clothes made up is the Pudhu Mandapa. Here you'll find rows of tailors busily treading away and capable of whipping up a good replica of whatever you're wearing in an hour or two. A cotton top or shirt can cost ₹350. Drivers, guides and touts will also be keen to lead you to the Kashmiri craft shops in North Chitrai St, offering to show you the temple view from the rooftop – the views are good, and so is the inevitable sales pitch.

Information

Getting There & Away

AIR

SpiceJet (www.spicejet.com) flies at least once daily to Bengaluru, Chennai, Colombo, Delhi, Dubai, Hyderabad and Mumbai (Bombay). Further Chennai flights are operated by Jet Airways (www.jetairways.com) three or four times daily, and Air India (☎0452-2690333; www.airindia.com) once daily.

BUS

Most government buses arrive and depart from the New bus stand (Melur Rd), 4km northeast of the old city. Services to Coimbatore, Kodai-kanal and Ooty go from the Arapalayam bus stand (Puttuthoppu Main Rd), 2km northwest of the old city. Tickets for more expensive (and more comfortable) private buses are sold by agencies on the south side of the Shopping Complex bus stand (btwn West Veli St & TPK Rd). Most travel overnight.

TRAIN

From Madurai Junction station, 13 daily trains head north to Trichy and 10 to Chennai, the fastest being the 7am Vaigai Express (Trichy 2nd/chair class ₹93/340, two hours; Chennai ₹180/655, 7¾ hours). A good overnight train for Chennai is the 8.35pm Pandyan Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹315/805/1135/1915, nine hours). To Kanyakumari the only daily train departs at 1.55am (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹210/535/735/1230, five hours), though there's a later train some days (at varying times). Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram; three trains daily), Coimbatore (three daily), Bengaluru (two daily) and Mumbai (Bombay; one daily) are other destinations.

Getting Around

The airport is 12km south of town; taxis cost ₹300 to the centre. Alternatively, bus 10A runs to/from the Shopping Complex bus stand. From the New Bus Stand, bus 75 (₹11) shuttles into the city; an autorickshaw is ₹100.

Fixed-rate railway permit taxis congregate out the front of the train station. There's also a Fast Track taxi booking counter (☎0452-2888999; Madurai Junction; ☎24hr) here; fares start at ₹75 for the first 3km, then ₹15 per kilometre.

Rameswaram

☎04573 / POP 44,856

Rameswaram was once the southernmost point of sacred India; to leave its boundaries was to abandon caste and fall below the status of the lowliest skinner of sacred cows. Then Rama, incarnation of Vishnu and hero of the Ramayana, led an army of monkeys and bears across a monkey-built bridge to the island of (Sri) Lanka, where he defeated the demon Ravana and rescued his wife, Sita. Afterwards, prince and princess came to this spot to offer thanks to Shiva.

If all this seems like so much folklore, it's absolute truth for millions of Hindus, who flock to the Ramanathaswamy Temple to worship where a god worshipped a god.

Apart from these pilgrims, Rameswaram is a small fishing town on a conch-shaped island, Pamban, connected to the mainland by 2km-long road and rail bridges. The town smells of drying fish and, if you aren't a pilgrim, the temple alone barely merits the journey here. But the eastern point of the island, Dhanushkodi, only 30km from Sri Lanka, has a natural magic and beauty that add considerably to Rameswaram's appeal.

Most hotels and eateries are clustered around the Ramanathaswamy Temple, which is surrounded by North, East, South and West Car Sts. Middle St heads west towards the bus stand (around 2km). The train station is 1.5km southwest of the temple.

Sights

Ramanathaswamy Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(☎5am-1pm & 3-8pm) Housing the world's most sacred sand mound (a lingam said to have been created by Rama's wife Sita, so that he could worship Shiva), this temple is one of India's holiest shrines. Dating mainly from the 16th to 18th centuries, it's notable for its long, exquisite 1000-pillar halls and 22 theerthams (temple tanks), in which pilgrims bathe before visiting the deity. Attendants tip pails of water over the (often fully dressed) faithful, who then rush on to the next theertham.

The legend goes that, when Rama decided to worship Shiva, he figured he'd need a lingam to do the thing properly. Being a god, he sent Hanuman to find the biggest lingam around – a Himalayan mountain. But the monkey took too long, so Sita made the simple lingam of sand now enshrined in the temple's inner sanctum.

Cameras and phones are forbidden inside the temple. Only Hindus may enter the inner shrine.

Sleeping & Eating

Most hotels are geared towards pilgrims, and some cheapies (which are mostly pretty grim) refuse to take single travellers, but there's a string of reasonable midrange hotels. Book ahead before festivals. Budget travellers can try the rooms booking office (East Car St; ☎ 24hr), opposite the main, eastern temple entrance, which often scores doubles for as low as ₹300 a night.

Inexpensive vegetarian restaurants such as Vasantha Bhavan (East Car St; dishes ₹30-50; ☎ 7am-10pm) and Ananda Bhavan (West Car St; ☎ 6.30am-10.30pm) serve thali lunches for ₹50 to ₹70, and evening dosas and uttapams for about ₹40. You might find fish in some restaurants, but no real meats.

Hotel Venkatesh

HOTEL $

(☎ 04573-221296; r ₹495-660, with AC ₹880; 🗺) Open to single travellers, the lemon-walled rooms here are tolerably clean and not bad value. It's on the westward continuation of South Car St.

Daiwik Hotels

HOTEL $$

(☎ 04573-223222; www.daiwikhotels.com; Madurai-Rameswaram Hwy; r ₹4330-5570; 🗺 @ 📞) Fresh, comfy and gleaming, 'India's first four-star pilgrim hotel', 200m west of the bus station, is your swankiest choice in Rameswaram. Bright, airy rooms come smartly decked out with huge mirrors and local-life photos, and the vegetarian Ahaan (mains ₹140-270; ☎ 7am-10pm) restaurant is very good.

Hotel Sri Saravana

HOTEL $$

(☎ 04573-223367; www.srisaravanahotel.com; 1/9A South Car St; r ₹1400-2810; 🗺) The best of the town-centre hotels, Sri Saravana is friendly and clean with decent service and spacious, colourful rooms. Those towards the top have sea views (and higher rates).

Getting There & Around

Buses run to Madurai (₹110, four hours) every 10 minutes, and to Trichy (₹180, 6½ hours) hourly. 'Ultra Deluxe' (UD) services are scheduled three times daily to Chennai (₹450, 13 hours) and once daily to Kanyakumari (₹250, eight hours), but don't always run.

WORTH A TRIP

DHANUSHKODI

The promontory stretches 22km southeast from Rameswaram, narrowing to a thin strip of sand dunes about halfway along. Near the end stands the ghost town of Dhanushkodi. Once a thriving port, Dhanushkodi was washed away by the tidal waves of a monster cyclone in 1964. The shells of its train station, church, post office and other ruins still stand among a scattering of fishers' shacks, and Adam's Bridge (or Rama's Bridge), the chain of reefs, sandbanks and islets that almost connects India with Sri Lanka, stretches away to the east. For many, this is the final stop of a long pilgrimage. Go for sunrise, when the atmosphere is at its most magical, with pilgrims performing pujas (prayers).

Authorickshaws charge about ₹400 round trip (including waiting time) to Moonram Chattram, a collection of fishers' huts about 14km from town. From there to Dhanushkodi it's a hot 4km beach walk, or a ₹100 two-hour round trip in a truck or minibus which goes when it fills up with 12 to 20 customers (6am to 6pm). Many hotels organise private jeeps to whizz you along to Danushkodi (around ₹1500 return). It's tempting to swim, but beware of strong rips.

The three daily trains to/from Madurai (₹35, four hours) have unreserved seating only. The Rameswaram–Chennai Express departs daily at 8pm (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹330/890/1280, 12½ hours) via Trichy. The Rameswaram–Kanyakumari Express leaves at 8.45pm Monday, Thursday and Saturday, reaching Kanyakumari (sleeper/3AC ₹275/705) at 4.05am.

Bus 1 (₹4) shuttles between the bus stand and East Car St. Autorickshaws to the centre from the bus stand or train station cost ₹40.

Kanyakumari (Cape Comorin)

📍 04652 / POP 22,453

This is it, the end of India. There's a sense of accomplishment on making it to the tip of the subcontinent's 'V', past the final dramatic flourish of the Western Ghats and the green fields, glinting rice paddies and slow-looping wind turbines of India's deep south. Like all edges, there's a sense of the surreal here. At certain times of year you can see the sun set and the moon rise over three seas simultaneously. The Temple of the Virgin Sea Goddess, Swami Vivekananda's legacy and the 'Land's End' symbolism draw crowds of pilgrims and tourists to Kanyakumari, but it remains a small-scale, refreshing respite from the hectic Indian road.

👁 Sights & Activities

Kumari Amman Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀ 4.30am–12.15pm & 4–8.15pm) The legends say the kanya (virgin) goddess Kumari, a manifestation of the Great Goddess Devi, single-handedly conquered demons and secured freedom for the world. At this temple at the tip of the subcontinent, pilgrims give her thanks in an intimately spaced, beautifully decorated temple, where the crash of waves from three seas can be heard behind the twilight glow of oil fires clutched in vulva-shaped votive candles (referencing the sacred femininity of the goddess).

It's believed that the sea-facing door of the temple stays locked to prevent the shimmer of the goddess's diamond nose-stud leading ships astray. You'll probably be asked for a ₹10 donation to enter the inner precinct, where men must remove their shirts, and cameras are forbidden.

The shoreline around the temple has a couple of tiny beaches, and bathing ghats where some worshippers immerse themselves before visiting the temple. The mandapa south of the temple is popular for sunset-watching and daytime shade. A small souvenir-shop bazaar leads back from here to the main road.

Vivekananda Memorial

MONUMENT

(admission ₹10; ☀ 8am–4pm) Four hundred metres offshore is the rock where the famous Hindu apostle Swami Vivekananda meditated from 25 to 27 December 1892, and decided to take his moral message beyond India's shores. A two-mandapa memorial to Vivekananda, built in 1970, reflects temple architectural styles from across India. With all the tourist crowds this brings, Vivekananda would no doubt choose somewhere else to meditate today. Ferries shuttle out to the Vivekananda island (₹34 return) between 7.45am and 4pm.

Thiruvalluvar Statue

MONUMENT

(☀ 7.45am–4pm) FREE Looking like an Indian Colossus of Rhodes, the towering statue on the smaller island next to the Vivekananda Memorial is of the ancient Tamil poet Thiruvalluvar. The work of more than 5000 sculptors, it was erected in 2000 and honours the poet's 133-chapter work Thirukural – hence its height of exactly 133ft (40.5m). Vivekananda rock ferries (₹34 return) usually continue to Thiruvalluvar between 2pm and 4pm.

Swami Vivekananda

Wandering Monk Exhibition

MUSEUM

(Main Rd; admission ₹10; ☀ 9am–12.30pm & 4–8.30pm) This excellent exhibition details Swami Vivekananda's wisdom, sayings and encounters with the mighty and the lowly during his five years as a wandering monk around India from 1888 to 1893.

Your ticket also covers the 'Awake! Awake!' Vivekananda-inspired exhibition (Vivekanandapuram; ☀ 9am–1pm & 4–8pm Wed–Mon, 9am–1pm Tue) in Vivekanandapuram, a peaceful ashram 1km north of town, with various yoga retreats. The spiritual organisation Vivekananda Kendra (www.vivekanandakendra.org), devoted to carrying out Vivekananda's teachings, has its headquarters here.

Gandhi Memorial

MONUMENT

(☀ 7am–7pm) FREE Appropriately placed at the end of the nation that Gandhi fathered, this cream-and-blue memorial is designed in the form of an Odishan temple embellished by Hindu, Christian and Muslim architects. The central plinth was used to store some of the Mahatma's ashes before they were immersed in the sea, and each year, on Gandhi's birthday (2 October), the sun's rays fall on the stone. Exhibits are limited to a few photos; the tower is a popular sunset-gazing spot.

Kamaraj Memorial

MONUMENT

(☀️ 7am-6.45pm) FREE This memorial near the shoreline commemorates K Kamaraj, known as the 'Gandhi of the South'. One of the most powerful and respected politicians of post-Independence India, Kamaraj held the chief ministership of both Madras state and its successor, Tamil Nadu. The dusty photos inside have captions.

Sleeping

As befits a holiday destination, many Kanyakumari hoteliers have gone for bright, playful decor; after the bland statewide sameness of midrange hotels, it's exciting to find a huge neon-coloured tiger painted on your bedhead.

Hotel Narmadha

HOTEL $

Lakshmi Tourist Home

HOTEL $

(☎) 04652-246333; East Car St; r ₹750-1000, with AC ₹1350) Basic but well-kept, this relatively helpful family hotel is a decent town-centre deal. The better (and pricier) rooms come with sea views and hot water, but most are neat and clean.

Hotel Tri Sea

HOTEL $$

(☎) 04652-246586; www.hoteltrisea.in; Kovalam Rd; d ₹1180-2590; (☎) (☎) (☎) You can't miss the high-rise Tri Sea, whose sea-view rooms are huge, spotless and airy, with particularly hectic colour schemes. The top-floor triples are even grander. Reception is super-efficient and the rooftop pool, sunrise and sunset viewing platforms and free in-room wifi are welcome bonuses, though the restaurant is a sad afterthought.

Hotel Sivamurugan

HOTEL $$

(☎) 04652-246862; www.hotelsivamurugan.com; 2/93 North Car St; r ₹1375, with AC ₹2250-2700; (☎) (☎) A welcoming, well-appointed hotel, with spacious, spotless, marble-floored rooms and free wi-fi (lobby only). The 'super-deluxes' have sea glimpses past a couple of buildings. Rates stay fixed year-round (a novelty for Kanyakumari) and there's 24-hour hot water, which not all competitors can claim.

Santhi Residency

HOTEL $$$

(Kovalam Rd; r ₹1000, with AC ₹1500; (☎)) A smaller, older restored house with leafy courtyards, Santhi has an unusually restrained style for Kanyakumari (the only decoration in each room is a picture of Jesus). It's quiet and clean with tight-fit rooms and bathrooms.

Sparsa Resort

HOTEL $$$

(☎) 04652-247041; www.sparsaresorts.com; 6/112B Beach Rd; r incl breakfast ₹5400-7200; (☎) (☎) Located away from the temple frenzy, elegant Sparsa is a good few notches above your average Kanyakumari hotel. Fresh, orange-walled rooms with low, dark-wood beds, lounge chairs and mood-lighting make for a contemporary oriental vibe and there's a lovely pool that is surrounded by palms, as well as good Indian cooking at Auroma (mains ₹150-380; ☎) 7-10am, noon-3pm, 7-10.30pm).

Seashore Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(☎) 04652-246704; http://theseashorehotel.com; East Car St; r ₹4140-7800; (☎) (☎) The fanciest hotel in town centre has shiny, spacious rooms with gold curtains and cushions, glassed-in showers, free wi-fi and useful equipment including kettles and hair-dryers. It's lost some of its original sparkle, but all rooms except the cheapest have panoramic sea views, and the 7th-floor restaurant is one of Kanyakumari's best.

Eating

Hotel Saravana

INDIAN $

(Sannathi St; mains ₹89-120; ☎) 6.30am-10pm) A clean, popular spot with plenty of North and South Indian vegetarian dishes, lunchtime thalis and crispy dosas.

Seashore Hotel

MULTICUISINE $$$

(East Car St; mains ₹190-380; ☎) 7am-10.30pm) Amazingly, the classy 7th-floor restaurant at the Seashore Hotel is the only one in Kanyakumari with a proper sea view. There's grilled fish and plenty of pan-Indian veg and nonveg choices, plus the odd Continental creation; try the veg or seafood sizzlers. Service is spot-on and it's great for brekkie (buffet or à la carte).

Sangam Restaurant

INDIAN $$$

(Main Rd; mains ₹90-280; ☎) 7am-11pm) It's as if the Sangam started in Kashmir, trekked the length of India, and stopped off here to offer top veg and nonveg picks from every province along the way. The food is good, the seats are soft and the joint is bustling.

Getting There & Away

BUS

The sedate bus stand (Kovalam Rd) is a 10-minute walk west of the centre. Ordinary buses run 11 times daily to Madurai (₹165, six hours) and at least seven times daily to Trivandrum (₹71, 2½ hours). Two daily buses, 6am and 2pm, go to Kovalam (₹80, three hours). The most comfortable buses are the 'Ultra Deluxe' (UD), which include the following:

Chennai (₹540, 12 to 14 hours, eight daily)

Kodaikanal (₹310, 10 hours, 8.15pm)

Madurai (₹220, four hours, eight daily)

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

PADMANABHAPURAM PALACE

With a forest's worth of intricately carved rosewood ceilings and polished-teak beams, the Padmanabhapuram Palace (☎04651-250255; Padmanabhapuram; Indian/foreigner ₹35/300, camera/video ₹50/2000; ☀9am-1pm & 2-4.30pm Tue-Sun), 35km northwest of Kanyakumari near the Kerala border, is considered the finest example of traditional Kerala architecture today. Asia's largest wooden palace complex, it was once the capital of Travancore, an unstable princely state taking in parts of both Tamil Nadu and Kerala. As the egos of successive rulers left their mark, it expanded into the magnificent conglomeration of 14 palaces it is today; the oldest sections date back to 1550.

Direct buses leave from Kanyakumari bus stand at 7.15am, 11am, 1pm, 1.30pm and 4.45pm (₹21, two hours); buses also run every 10 minutes between 4.30am and 10pm to Thuckalay, from where it's a short autorickshaw ride or 15-minute walk. Taxis between Kanyakumari and Kovalam (Kerala), stopping at Padmanabhapuram, cost ₹3000.

From Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram) take any bus towards Kanyakumari and get off at Thuckalay (₹50, 1½ hours, eight daily). The Kerala Tourist Development Corporation (KTDC; p942) runs full-day Kanyakumari tours from Trivandrum (₹700) covering Padmanabhapuram.

TAXI

Drivers ask ₹2000 to Kovalam.

TRAIN

The train station is a walkable distance north of the centre. The one daily northbound train, the Kanyakumari Express, departs at 5.20pm for Chennai (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹415/1085/1545/2610, 13½ hours) via Madurai (₹210/535/735/1230, 4½ hours) and Trichy (₹275/705/985/1655, 7¼ hours). Two daily express trains depart at 6.50am and 10.30am for Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram; 2nd-class/sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹60/140/485/690, 2¼ hours), both continuing to Kollam (Quilon) and Ernakulam (Kochi). More trains go from Nagercoil Junction, 15km northwest of Kanyakumari.

For real train buffs, the Vivek Express runs all the way to Dibrugarh in Assam, 4236km and 80 hours – the longest single train ride in India. It departs from Kanyakumari at 11pm Thursday (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹1085/2810/4235).

THE WESTERN GHATS

Welcome to the lush Western Ghats, some of the most welcome heat relief in India. Rising like an impassable bulwark of evergreen and deciduous tangle from north of Mumbai to the tip of Tamil Nadu, the World Heritage-listed Ghats (with an average elevation of 915m) contain 27% of India's flowering plants and an incredible array of endemic wildlife. In Tamil Nadu they rise to 2000m and more in the Palani Hills around Kodaikanal and the Nilgiris around Ooty. British influence lingers a little stronger up in these hills, where the colonists built their 'hill stations' to escape the sweltering plains and covered slopes in neatly trimmed tea bushes. It's not just the air and (relative) lack of pollution that's refreshing – there's a certain acceptance of quirkiness and eccentricity here that is rarer in the lowlands. Think organic farms, handlebar-moustached trekking guides and leopard-print earmuffs.

Kodaikanal (Kodai)

There are few more refreshing Tamil Nadu moments than boarding a bus in the heat-soaked plains and disembarking in the sharp pinch of a Kodaikanal night or morning. This misty hill station, 120km northwest of Madurai in the Palani Hills, is more relaxed and intimate than its big sister Ooty (Kodai is the 'Princess of Hill Stations', while Ooty is the 'Queen'). It's not all cold either; during the day the weather can be more like deep spring than early winter. The renowned Kodaikanal International School provides a bit of cosmopolitan flair, with students from around the globe.

Centred on a beautiful lake, Kodai rambles up and down hillsides with patches of shola (virgin) forest, unique to the Western Ghats in South India, and evergreen broadleaf trees such as magnolia, mahogany, myrtle and rhododendron. Another of its plant specialities is the kurinji shrub, whose lilac-blue blossoms appear only every 12 years: next due 2018.

Kodai is popular with honeymooners and groups, who flock to the spectacular viewpoints and waterfalls in and around town.

Sights & Activities

Sacred Heart Natural Science Museum

MUSEUM

(Sacred Heart College, Law's Ghat Rd; adult/child ₹15/10, camera ₹20; ☀9am-6pm) In the grounds of a former Jesuit seminary 4km downhill east of town, this museum has a ghoulishly intriguing miscellany of flora and fauna put together over more than 100 years by priests and trainees. Displays range over bottled snakes, human embryos (!), giant moths and stuffed animal carcasses. You can also see pressed kurinji flowers (Strobilanthes kunthiana) in case you aren't around for their flowering.

Parks & Waterfalls

Bryant Park (adult/child ₹30/15, camera/video ₹50/100; ☀9am-6pm), landscaped and stocked by the British officer after whom it's named, is pretty, and usually busy with both tourists and canoodling couples.

Several natural beauty spots around Kodai (crowded with souvenir and snack stalls) are very popular with Indian tourists. They're best visited by taxi unless you like strolling along busy roads. Taxi drivers offer three-hour 12-stop tours for around ₹1200. On clear days, Green Valley View (6km from the centre), Pillar Rocks (7km) and less visited Moir's Point (13km), all along the same road west of town, have spectacular views to the plains far below.

To go beyond Moir's Point to forest-fringed Berijam Lake (☾closed Tues) requires a ₹150 Forest Department permit. Taxi drivers can organise this, often the same day, and do four-hour 'forest tours' to Berijam for ₹1800.

The river that empties Kodaikanal Lake tumbles dramatically down Silver Cascade, on the Madurai road 7km from town. Compact Bear Shola Falls are in a pocket of forest on the northwest edge of town.

Walking

Assuming it's not cloaked in opaque mist, the views from paved Coaker's Walk (admission ₹10; ☀7.30am-7pm) are beautiful, all the way down to the plains 2000m below. The stroll takes five minutes.

The 5km Kodaikanal Lake circuit is lovely in the early morning before the crowds roll in. A walk along Lower Shola Rd takes you through the Bombay Shola, the nearest surviving patch of shola to central Kodai.

Most serious trekking routes around Kodai require Forest Department permits which can only be obtained with time, patience and luck. Contact Kodai's District Forest Office (☎04542-240287; Muthaliapuram; ☀8am-5.45pm Mon-Fri, permits issued 8-10am Mon, Wed, Thu & Fri). The tourist office and guesthouses like Greenlands Youth Hostel will put you in touch with local guides, including the very experienced Vijay Kumar (☎9965524279; thenaturetrails@gmail.com), who can help with permits and offer interesting off-road routes (₹500 to ₹800 per half-day).

A good trek, if you can organise it, is the two-day Kodai-Munnar route into Kerala via Bodi and Top Station (though it involves some bus/rickshaw transport). Guides charge ₹4000 to ₹5000 per person.

Boating, Cycling & Horse Riding

If you're sappy in love like a bad Bollywood song, the thing to do in Kodai is rent a pedal boat (₹60 per half-hour for two people), row-boat (₹90 including boatman) or Kashmiri shikara ('honeymoon boat'; ₹350 including boatman) from the Kodaikanal Boat & Rowing Club (☀9am-5.30pm) or Tamil Nadu Tourist Development Corporation (☀9am-5.30pm).

Bicycle-rental (per hour/day ₹20/300) and horse-riding (per 500m/2 hours ₹50/1000) stands are dotted around the lake.

Sleeping

Some hotels hike prices by up to 100% during the 'season' (April to June). There are some lovely heritage places, and good-value midrange options if you can live without colonial-era ambience. Most hotels have a 9am or 10am checkout from April to June.

Sri Vignesh Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎9094972524; umaarkrishnan@gmail.com; Lake Rd; r ₹700-800) Up a steep driveway and surrounded by colourful, neat gardens, this simple but characterful Raj-era home is run by a friendly local couple, who welcome 'peaceful' guests (no packs of boys!). Rooms are clean and very basic, and there's hot water until noon.

Kodaikanal (Kodai)

Snooze Inn

HOTEL $

(☎ 04542-240837; www.jayarajgroup.com; Anna Salai; ₹ 770-970; 🏠) Rooms don't have quite as much character as the outside suggests, but this is a decent-value budget choice with clean bathrooms, free wi-fi and plenty of blankets.

Greenlands Youth Hostel

HOSTEL $

(☎ 04542-240899; www.greenlandskodaikanal.com; St Mary's Rd; dm ₹300, d ₹600-2025; 🏠) This long-running and sociable budget favourite has a pretty garden and wonderful views, but the accommodation is very bare and basic, hot water only runs from 8am to 10am, and washing in the dorms (minimum 10 people for a booking) is by buckets.

Villa Retreat

HOTEL $$

(☎ 04542-240940; www.villaretreat.com; Club Rd; r incl breakfast ₹3480-5280; 🏠) You can take in the fantastic Coaker's Walk views from your garden breakfast table at this lovely old stone-built family hotel, right next to the walk's northern end. It's a friendly place with comfy, good-sized rooms and free wi-fi in the dining room, where there's often a roaring fire on cold nights. Prices feel a tad steep, but service is incredibly attentive.

Hilltop Towers

HOTEL $$

(☎ 04542-240413; www.hilltopgroup.in; Club Rd; r incl breakfast ₹2220-2760; 🏠) Although it's bland on the outside, rustic flourishes like polished teak floors, plus keen staff, in-room tea/coffee sets and free wi-fi make the Hilltop a good midrange choice.

Mount Pleasant

BOULIQUE HOTEL $$

(☎ 04542-242023, 9655126023; www.kodaikanal-heritage.com; 19/12-20 Observatory Rd; r incl breakfast ₹1900-3100; 🏠) Despite being out on the fringe of Kodai's spaghetti-like street map, 2km west of the centre, Mount Pleasant is worth finding for its quiet setting, tasty buffet dinners, homey rooms and the welcoming Keralan owner's quirky taste – colourful wall weavings, coconut-wood beds, coir matting. Book ahead.

★ Carlton Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 04542-240056; www.krahejahospitality.com; Lake Rd; s/d/cottage incl half-board ₹9560/10,570/16,290; 🏠) The cream of Kodai's hotels is a magnificent five-star colonial-era mansion overlooking the lake. Rooms are spacious with extra comfy beds and, for some, huge private balconies. The grounds and common areas get the old hill-station ambience spot on: open stone walls, billiards, evening bingoo by the fireplace, and a bar that

HOTEL $$$

(www.leposhehotel.com; 25 Sivanadi Rd; s ₹5040-7440, d ₹5400-7790, all incl breakfast; 📶) This stylish new addition to Kodai's hotel scene feels like you've stumbled into a flashy furniture showroom. Warm woods and whites give a fresh alpine-chalet-chic theme to the cosy, minimalist rooms sporting glassed-in showers and tea/coffee makers. Staff are charming, views are lovely, and perks include a good restaurant, a spa and a gym. It's 2km north of town.

🏠 Vattakanal

Little Vattakanal village ('Vatta'), about 4.5km southwest of Kodai centre, is a great rural retreat for budget travellers. It's very popular, particularly with groups of Israeli travellers, and there's a laid-back party vibe when things gets busy. Altaf's Cafe has a few sizeable three-bed rooms for six people (sometimes more!) with private bathroom for ₹1200.

Kodai Heaven

GUESTHOUSE $

WORTH A TRIP

VATTAKANAL WALK

This is a lovely walk of about 4.5km (each way) from central Kodai, on which you might spot gaur (bison) or giant squirrels in the forested bits. From the south end of Coaker's Walk, follow St Mary's Rd west then southwest, passing La Saeth Church after 1.2km. At a fork 400m after the church, go left downhill on what quickly becomes an unpaved track passing through the Pambar Shola forest. After 450m you emerge on a bridge above some falls. Across the bridge you'll find snack stalls selling fruit, tea, coffee, bread omelettes and roasted corn with lime and masala. Follow the road 1km downhill, with panoramas opening up as you go, to Vattakanal village. Take the steep path down past Altaf's Cafe and in about 15 minutes you'll reach the Dolphin's Nose, a narrow rock lookout overhanging a precipitous drop, and a couple more snack stalls.

huge variety of excellent Indian and Continental dishes in limitless quantity.

Cloud Street

MULTICUISINE $$$

(PT Rd; mains ₹250-500; ☺ 9am-9pm) Why yes, that is a real Italian-style wood-fire pizza oven. And yes, that's hummus and falafel on the menu, along with oven-baked pasta and nachos. It's all great food in a simple, relaxed setting, but it's a bit pricier than you'd expect.

Cafe Cariappa

CAFE

(PT Rd; coffees ₹70-110; ☺ 6am-11pm Mon-Sat) A caffeine addict's dream, this cute, wood-panelled cafe does fantastic cappuccino, espresso, mocha, and macchiato, all infused with locally grown organic Palani Hills coffee.

Self-Catering*Pastry Corner

BAKERY $

(Anna Salai; ☺ 10am-2pm & 3-6pm) Pick up yummy muffins, croissants and sandwiches at this hugely popular bakery, or squeeze onto the benches with a cuppa.

Eco Nut

ORGANIC $

Getting There & Away

The nearest train station is Kodai Road, down in the plains about 80km east of Kodaikanal. There are eight daily trains to/from Chennai Egmore including the overnight Pandyan Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC/1AC ₹295/760/1065/1800, eight hours), departing Chennai at 9.20pm and departing Kodai Road northbound at 9.10pm. For most closer destinations, it's quicker and easier to get a bus. Taxis to/from the station cost ₹1200. Direct buses from Kodaikanal to Kodai Road leave daily at 3pm and 4pm (₹55, three hours); there are also plenty of buses between the station and Batlagundu, on the Kodai-Madurai bus route. Kodai's post office has a train booking desk (Head Post Office, Post Office Rd; ☺ 9am-2pm & 3-4pm Mon-Sat).

Government buses from Kodai's bus stand (Anna Salai) include:

Bengaluru (₹600 to ₹750, 12 hours, 5.30pm and 6pm)

Chennai (₹480, 12 hours, 6.30pm)

Coimbatore (₹120, six hours, 8.30am and 4.30pm)

Madurai (₹62, four hours, 15 daily)

Trichy (₹111, six hours, four daily)

Raja's Tours & Travels (☎ 04542-242422; Anna Salai) runs 20-seat minibuses with push-back seats to Ooty (₹400, eight hours, 7pm) and Kochi (Cochin; ₹800, 11 hours, 6pm), along with overnight AC sleeper buses to Chennai (₹1100, 12 hours) and Bengaluru (₹950, 12 hours) at 6pm.

i Getting Around

Central Kodaikanal is compact and easy to get around on foot. There are no autorickshaws (believe it or not), but plenty of taxis. Trips within town generally cost ₹150.

Around Kodaikanal

There are some fabulous country escapes in the Palani Hills below Kodaikanal.

Elephant Valley

AIR

The airport is 10km east of town, with daily direct flights to domestic destinations including Bengaluru, Chennai, Delhi, Hyderabad and Mumbai on Air India (☎ 0422-2303933; www.airindia.com), IndiGo (www.goindigo.in), Jet Airways (www.jetairways.com) or SpiceJet (www.spicejet.com).

SilkAir (☎ 0422-4370271; www.silkair.com) flies four times weekly to/from Singapore.

BUS

From the SETC bus stand (Thiruvalluvar Bus Stand; Bharathiyar Rd), express or superfast government buses head to Bengaluru (₹375 to ₹750, nine hours, seven daily), Chennai (₹400, 11 hours, 10 buses 5.30pm to 10pm), Ernakulam (Kochi; ₹152 to ₹174, 5½ hours, six daily), Mysore (₹160 to ₹381, six hours, 21 daily) and Trivandrum (₹312 to ₹344, 10½ hours, six daily).

The Ooty bus stand (New bus stand: Mettupalayam (MTP) Rd), northwest of the centre, has services to Ooty (₹53, four hours) via Mettupalayam (₹17, one hour) and Coonoor (₹40, three hours) every 20 minutes, plus hourly buses to Kotagiri (₹32, three hours, 5.20am to 7.20pm), 16 buses daily to Mysuru (₹160 to ₹381, six hours) and six to Bengaluru (₹375 to ₹750, nine hours).

From the Singanallur bus stand (Kamaraj Rd), 6km east of the centre, buses go to Trichy (₹130, six hours) and Madurai (₹130, six hours) every 10 minutes. City bus 140 (₹11) shuttles between here and the Town bus stand (cnr Dr Nanjappa & Bharathiyar Rds).

Ukkadam bus station (NH Rd), southwest of the centre, has buses to southern destinations including Pollachi (₹23, 1¼ hours, every 5 minutes), Kodaikanal (₹120, six hours, 10am) and Munnar (₹140, 6½ hours, 8.15am), plus some services to Madurai.

Private buses to Bengaluru, Chennai, Ernakulam, Puducherry, Trichy and Trivandrum start from the Omni bus stand (Sathy Rd), 500m north of the Town bus stand. Agencies on Sathy Rd sell tickets.

TAXI

A taxi up the hill to Ooty (three hours) costs about ₹2100; Ooty buses often get so crowded that it's worth considering.

TRAIN

Coimbatore Junction is on the main line between Chennai and Ernakulam (Kochi, Kerala), with at least 13 daily trains in each direction. The 5.15am Nilgiri Express to Mettupalayam connects with the miniature railway departure from Mettupalayam to Ooty at 7.10am. The whole trip to Ooty takes about seven hours.

i Getting Around

For the airport take bus 20 (₹11) from the Town bus stand. Many buses run between the train station and the Town bus stand. Autorickshaws charge ₹60 from the train station to the Ukkadam bus station, ₹80 to the SETC or Town Bus Stands, and ₹150 out to the Ooty bus stand.

Around Coimbatore

The Isha Yoga Center (☎0422-2515345; www.ishafoundation.org), an ashram in Poon-di, 30km west of Coimbatore, is also a yoga and rejuvenation retreat and place of pilgrimage. The centrepiece is a multi-religious temple housing the Dhyanalinga, believed to be unique in embodying all seven chakras of spiritual energy. Visitors are welcome to meditate or for yoga courses, which you should book in advance.

The commercial town of Mettupalayam, 40km north of Coimbatore, is the starting point for the miniature train to Ooty. If you need to stay the night before catching the 7.10am train, there's plenty of accommodation. Hotel EMS Mayura (☎04254-227936; hotelemsmayura@gmail.com; 212 Coimbatore Rd; ₹1200, with AC ₹1800; 🍷), a fine, bland mid-range hotel with a decent restaurant, is just 300m from the bus station and 1km from the train station.

Coonor

☎0423 / POP 45,494 / ELEV 1720M

Coonor is one of the three Nilgiri hill stations – Ooty, Kotagiri and Coonor – that are situated high above the southern plains. Smaller and quieter than Ooty, it has some fantastic heritage hotels and guesthouses, from which you can do exactly the same kind of things as you would do from bigger, busier Ooty. From upper Coonor, 1km to 2km above the town centre, you can look down over the sea of red-tile rooftops to the slopes beyond and soak up the peace, cool climate and beautiful scenery. But you get none of the above in central Coonor, which is a bustling, honking mess.

Kotagiri-bound buses will drop you here.

Highfield Tea Estate

TEA ESTATE

(Walker's Hill Rd; ☀8am-9pm) FREE This 50-year-old estate (2km northeast of upper Coonor) is one of few Nilgiri working tea factories open to visitors. Self-appointed guides jump in quickly, but you're perfectly welcome to watch the full tea-making process independently.

ANAMALAI TIGER RESERVE

A pristine 850-sq-km reserve of tropical jungle, shola forest and grassland rising to 2400m and spilling over into Kerala in the Western Ghats between Kodaikanal and Coimbatore. Anamalai Tiger Reserve (Indira Gandhi Wildlife Sanctuary & National Park; admission ₹20, camera/video ₹50/200; ☺ Jun-Feb) is well off most tourists' radar. Declared a tiger reserve in 2007, it's home to all kinds of exotic endemic wildlife, much of it rare and endangered – including leopards and a few elusive tigers, though you'll probably mostly spot lion-tailed macaques, peacocks, langurs, spotted deer, elephants – or crocodiles at Amaravathi Crocodile Farm.

The reserve's Reception and Interpretation Centre (☎ 04253-245002; Topslip; ☺ 6.30am-3.30pm) is at Topslip, 35km southwest of Pollachi. From here you can head off on elephant rides (per hour ₹800-1500), official one-hour minibus jungle 'safaris' (per person from ₹120) or guided treks (per 2 h ₹2000). Most people visit on day trips, but for those staying the night Topslip has Forest Department accommodation (r ₹500-2500) of varying comfort levels. Book several days ahead through the District Forest Office (☎ 04259-225356, 04259-238360; 365/1 Meenkarai Rd, Pollachi; ☺ 10am-5.45pm Mon-Fri) in Pollachi; phone reservations are accepted.

The tiny tea-plantation town of Valparai, on the fringes of the reserve 65km south from Pollachi and reached via a spectacular 40-hairpin-bend road, makes a beautifully peaceful Anamalai base where you're just as likely to see wildlife. Our pick of the accommodation is Sinna Dorai's Bungalow (☎ 9443077516; www.sinnadorai.com; Valparai; r incl full-board ₹7500; 📶). Exquisitely located on a rambling tea estate, Sinna Dorai has just six huge rooms bursting with local early-20th-century history. A cosy library, wonderful homemade meals, and charming service make you feel right at home. After-dark wildlife-spotting drives, on which you may well find elephants, bison, lion-tailed macaques, and leopards, run regularly, and experienced trekkers will lead you along local paths. It's well signposted from central Valparai.

Several daily buses connect Pollachi with Topslip (₹40, 1½ hours) and Valparai (₹42, three hours). Buses to Pollachi run from Coimbatore's Ukkadam bus station (p1072), which also has four daily services to Valparai (₹65, four hours). From Kodaikanal, buses head to Pollachi (₹100, six hours) at 8.30am and 4.30pm.

Dolphin's Nose

VIEWPOINT

About 10km from town, this viewpoint exposes a vast panorama encompassing Catherine Falls across the valley. On the same road, Lamb's Rock, a favourite picnic spot in a pretty patch of forest, has amazing views past tea and coffee plantations to the hazy plains. The easiest way to see these sights is a rickshaw tour for around ₹600, or walk the 6km or so back into town from Lamb's Rock (mostly downhill).

Sleeping & Eating

You'll need a rickshaw, car or great legs to reach these places.

Getting There & Away

Coonoor is on the miniature train line between Mettupalayam (27km) and Ooty (19km), with three daily trains just to/from Ooty as well as the daily Mettupalayam-Ooty-Mettupalayam service. Buses to and from Ooty (₹10, one hour) run every 10 minutes; buses to Kotagiri (₹11, one hour) and Coimbatore (₹45, 2½ hours) go every 20 minutes.

Kotagiri

☎04266 / POP 28,200 / ELEV 1800M

The oldest and smallest of the three Nilgiri hill stations, Kotagiri is a quiet, unassuming place with a forgettable town centre – its appeal is the escape to red dirt tracks in the pines, blue skies and the high green walls of the Nilgiris.

Sights & Activities

You can visit Catherine Falls, 8km south, off the Mettupalayam road (the last 3km is on foot; the falls only flow after rain), Elk Falls (6km) and Kodanad Viewpoint (19km north), where there's a view over both the Coimbatore Plains and the Mysore Plateau. A half-day taxi tour to all three costs around ₹1000.

Sullivan Memorial

MUSEUM

(☎9488771571; www.sullivanmemorial.org; Kan-nerimukku; adult/child ₹20/10; ☎10am-5pm) If you're interested in the history of the Nilgiris, check out this wonderful little museum, 2km north of Kotagiri centre. The house built in 1819 by John Sullivan, founder of Ooty, has been refurbished and filled with fascinating photos, newspaper cuttings and artefacts about local tribal groups, European settlement and icons like the toy train. It also contains the Nilgiri Documentation Centre (www.nilgirdocumentation.org), dedicated to preserving the region's heritage.

Keystone Foundation

VOLUNTEERING

(☎04266-272277; www.keystone-foundation.org; Groves Hill Rd) 🌿 This Kotagiri-based NGO works to improve environmental conditions in the Nilgiris while involving, and improving living standards for, indigenous communities.

Sleeping & Eating

The Kotagiri-based Keystone Foundation's Green Shop (Johnstone Sq; ☎9.30am-7pm Mon-Sat) has picnic goodies (organic chocolates, wild honey).

La Maison

HERITAGE GUESTHOUSE $$$

(☎9585857732; www.lamaison.in; Hadatharai; s/d ₹7760/8890; 🍴) Flower-draped, French-owned La Maison is a beautifully renovated 1890s Scottish bungalow superbly located on a hilltop surrounded by tea plantations, 5km southwest of Kotagiri. The design is quirky French-chic all the way: antique furniture, tribal handicrafts, old-Ooty paintings. Hike to waterfalls, visit tribal villages, tuck into excellent homecooked meals (₹750), or laze in the valley-facing jacuzzi.

Getting There & Away

Buses run half-hourly to/from Ooty (₹15, 1½ hours), crossing one of Tamil Nadu's highest passes, and to Mettupalayam (₹16 to ₹22, 1½ hours). Buses to Coimbatore (₹30, 2½ hours) leave hourly.

Ooty (Udhagamandalam)

📍 0423 / POP 88,430 / ELEV 2240M

Ooty may be a bit hectic for some tastes, and the town centre is an ugly mess, but it doesn't take long to get up into the quieter, greener areas where tall pines rise above what could almost be English country lanes. Ooty, 'the Queen of Hill Stations', mixes up Indian bustle and Hindu temples with lovely parks and gardens and charming Raj-era bungalows, the latter providing its most atmospheric (and most expensive) places to stay.

The town was established by the British in the early 19th century as the summer headquarters of the Madras government, and memorably nicknamed 'Snooty Ooty'. Development ploughed through a few decades ago, but somehow old Ooty survives. You just have to walk a bit further out to find it.

The journey up here on the celebrated miniature train is romantic and the scenery stunning. Even the road up from the plains is impressive. From April to June (the very busy 'season') Ooty is a welcome relief from the hot plains, and in the colder months (October to March) you'll need warm clothing, which you can buy cheap here, as overnight temperatures occasionally drop to 0°C.

The train and bus stations are at the west end of Ooty's racecourse, in almost the lowest part of town. To their west is the lake, while the streets of the town snake upwards all around. From the bus station it's a 20-minute walk to Ooty's commercial centre, Charing Cross. Like Kodaikanal, Ooty has an international school whose students can be seen around town.

Sights

Botanical Gardens

GARDEN

(adult/child ₹30/15, camera/video ₹50/100; ☀️ 7am-6.30pm) Established in 1848, these pretty gardens are a living gallery of the natural flora of the Nilgiris. Look out for a fossilised tree trunk believed to be 20 million years old, and on busy days, around 20 million Indian tourists.

St Stephen's Church

CHURCH

(☀️ 10.30am-5pm, services 8am & 11am Sun) Perched above the town centre, the immaculate St Stephen's, built in 1829, is the oldest church in the Nilgiris. It has lovely stained glass, huge wooden beams hauled by elephant from the palace of Tipu Sultan 120km away, and the sometimes kitschy, sometimes touching slabs and plaques donated by colonial-era churchgoers. In the quiet, overgrown cemetery you'll find headstones commemorating many an Ooty Brit.

Nilgiri Library

LIBRARY

(📞 0423-2441699; Hospital Rd; ☀️ 10am-1pm & 2.30-6pm) This quaint little haven in a crumbling 1867 building has more than 30,000 books, including rare titles on the Nilgiris and hill tribes and 19th-century British journals. Visitors can consult books in the reading room with a temporary one-month membership (₹500). Upstairs is a portrait of Queen Victoria presented to Ooty on her 1887 Golden Jubilee.

Rose Garden

GARDEN

(Selbourne Rd; adult/child ₹30/15, camera/video ₹50/100; ☀️ 7.30am-6.30pm) With terraced lawns and over 20,000 rose bushes of more than 2000 varieties – best between May and July – the Rose Garden is a lovely place for a stroll, and has good Ooty views from its hillside location.

Doddabetta Lookout

VIEWPOINT

(admission ₹5, camera/video ₹10/50; ☀️ 8am-5.30pm) This is it: the highest point (2633m) of the Nilgiris and one of the best viewpoints around, assuming it's a clear day (go early for better chances of mist-free views). It's about 7km from the town centre. Kotagiri buses will drop you at the Doddabetta junction, then you have a steep-ish 3km walk or a quick jeep ride. Taxis do the round trip from Charing Cross for ₹500.

Activities

Hiking & Trekking

The best of Ooty is in the beautiful Nilgiris. Ooty's tourist office and many accommodation places can put you in touch with local guides who do day hikes for ₹400 to ₹600 per person. You'll normally drive out of town and walk around hills, tribal villages and tea plantations.

More serious trekking in the best forest areas with plenty of wildlife – such as beyond Avalanche to the south or Parsons Valley to the west, in Mukurthi National Park, or down to Walakkad and Sairandhri in Kerala's Silent Valley National Park – requires Tamil Nadu Forest Department permits. At the time of research, the Office of the Field Director (📞 0423-2444098, Mudumalai accom-

Boating

Rowboats can be rented from the Boat-house (admission ₹10, camera/video ₹20/125; ☀️ 9am-6pm) by Ooty's lake. Prices start from ₹120 (plus a ₹120 deposit) for a two-seater pedal boat (30 minutes).

Horse Racing

Ooty's racecourse dominates the valley between Charing Cross and the lake. Racing season runs from mid-April to mid-June, and on the two or three race days (₹10 per person) each week the town is a hive of activity. Racing happens between about 10.30am and 2.30pm.

Tours

Fixed taxi tour rates are ₹800 for four hours tootling around Ooty, ₹1200 to Coonoor (four hours), or ₹1800 to Mudumalai Tiger Reserve (full-day).

Sleeping

Ooty has some gorgeous colonial-era homes at the high end and some decent backpacker crashpads, but there isn't much in the lower midrange. Be warned: it's a sellers' market during the 'season' (1 April to 15 June), when hotels hike rates and checkout time is often 9am. Book well ahead for public holidays.

wi-fi, and an excellent multicuisine dining room (p1081). Half-board arrangements are compulsory from April to June.

Fernhills Palace HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
 (☎ 0423-2443911; www.fernhillspalace.co.in; Fern Hill; r incl breakfast ₹13,190-32,380; 📶) The Maharaja of Mysore's exquisite Anglo-Indian summer palace has been lovingly restored in gorgeous, completely over-the-top princely colonial style. If you can afford it, it's worth the splurge. All 19 rooms are big suites, with antique furnishings, teak flourishes, fireplaces and jacuzzis. Play billiards, walk in the huge, forest-fringed grounds and dine on regal fare beneath Raj-inspired murals.

King's Cliff

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0423-2452888; www.littlearth.in; Havelock Rd; r incl breakfast ₹2600-6930; 🍽️) High above Ooty on Strawberry Hill is this classic colonial-era house with wood panelling, antique furnishings, a snug lounge, and good Indian/Continental cooking at the Earl's Secret (mains ₹340-600; ☀️ 8-10am, noon-3pm & 7-10pm) restaurant. The cheaper rooms don't have quite the same old-world charm as the most expensive ones.

Fortune Sullivan Court

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0423-2441415; www.fortunehotels.in; 123 Selbourne Rd; s ₹6000-7200, d ₹6600-7800, all incl breakfast; 🍽️) In a quiet spot on the fringe of town, the Fortune is no Raj-era mansion, but twirling staircases around a grand lobby lead to comfy, colourful rooms with big beds, light woods and writing desks. The hotel has its own bar, spa and small gym, the multi-cuisine restaurant does decent meals, and service is perfectly polished. Check online for discounts.

Eating & Drinking

Top-end hotels are your best bet for a classy meal.

Garden Restaurant

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Commercial Rd; mains ₹70-150; ☀️ 7am-9.30pm) Very good South Indian food in a clean setting behind the Nahar Nilgiris Hotel, along with juices, milkshakes, snacks and OK pizza.

THE NILGIRIS & THEIR TRIBES

The forest-clothed, waterfall-threaded walls of the Nilgiris (Blue Mountains) rise abruptly from the surrounding plains between the lowland towns of Mettupalayam (to the southeast) and Gudalur (to the northwest), ascended only by winding ghat roads and the famous Nilgiri Mountain Railway. The upland territory, a jumble of valleys and hills with over 20 peaks above 2000m, is a botanist's dream, with over 2300 flowering plant species, although a lot of the native shola forest and grasslands have been displaced by tea, eucalyptus and cattle.

The Unesco-designated Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve is a larger, 5520-sq-km area that also includes parts of Kerala and Karnataka. One of the world's biodiversity hotspots, it contains several important tiger reserves, national parks and wildlife sanctuaries.

The Nilgiris' tribal inhabitants were left pretty much to themselves in their isolated homeland until the British arrived two centuries ago. Today, the effects of colonialism and migration have reduced many tribal cultures to the point of collapse, and some have assimilated to the point of invisibility. Others, however, continue at least a semi-traditional lifestyle. Organisations such as the Keystone Foundation (p1075) work to promote traditional crafts and activities.

Best known of the tribes, thanks to anthropologists' interest and their proximity to Ooty, are the Toda, who number just over 1000. Some still inhabit tiny villages (munds) of their traditional barrel-shaped huts made of bamboo, cane and grass. Toda women style their hair in long, shoulder-length ringlets, and are skilled embroiderers; both sexes wear distinctive black-and-red-embroidered shawls. Central to Toda life is the water buffalo, which provides milk and ghee for consumption and bartering. Traditionally, it is only at funerals that the strictly vegetarian Toda kill a buffalo, to accompany the deceased.

The 350,000-strong Badaga are thought to have migrated into the Nilgiris from Karnataka around AD 1600, and are thus not usually considered truly indigenous. Their traditional dress is of white cloth with a border of narrow coloured stripes. They worship the mother goddess Hetti Amman, to whom their December/January Hettai Habba festival is dedicated.

The Kota, traditionally cultivators, live in seven settlements in the Kotagiri area. They have adapted relatively well to modernity, with a significant number holding government jobs.

The Kurumba inhabit the thick forests of the south and are gatherers of forest products such as bamboo and wild honey, though many of them now work in agriculture.

Kabab Corner

NORTH INDIAN $$

(Commercial Rd; mains ₹140-360; ☎1-10pm) This is the place for meat-eaters who are tiring of South Indian pure-veg food. It doesn't look much from outside, but here you can tear apart perfectly grilled and spiced chunks of lamb, chicken and, if you like, paneer, sopping up the juices with pillowy triangles of naan. Also on Club Rd (Club Rd; mains ₹140-360; ☎12.30-10pm).

Shinkow's Chinese Restaurant

CHINESE $$

(38/83 Commissioner's Rd; mains ₹120-250; ☎noon-3.45pm & 6.30-9.45pm) Shinkow's is an Ooty institution and the simple menu of chicken, pork, beef, fish, noodles and rice dishes is reliably good and quick to arrive at your check-print table.

Savoy

MULTICUISINE $$$

(☎0423-2225500; 77 Sylks Rd; mains ₹325-675; ☎12.30-3pm & 7.30-10pm) All wood walls, intimate lighting and smart red velvets, the Savoy's dining room dishes up excellent contemporary Continental, Indian and pan-Asian cuisine – including all-day breakfasts, yummy salads, pastas and kebabs, and wonderfully chocolatey desserts.

Willy's Coffee Pub

CAFE

(KCR Arcade, Walsham Rd; dishes ₹40-90; ☎10am-9.30pm; ☎) Climb the stairs and join the international students for board games, wi-fi, a lending library and reasonably priced pizzas, chips, toasties, cakes and cookies.

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(Church Hill Rd; coffee ₹60-110; ☎9am-11pm) Dependably good coffee, tea and cakes. There's another branch (Garden Rd; ☎9am-10.45pm) on Garden Rd.

Virtue Bakes

BAKERY

(Garden Rd; ☎10.30am-8.30pm) Great cakes, pastries, croissants and bread to go.

Shopping

The main shopping street is Commercial Rd, where you'll find Kashmiri shops as well as outlets for Keralan crafts and khadi (hand-spun cloth). Near the botanical gardens entrance, Tibetan refugees sell jumpers and shawls, which you'll appreciate on a chilly Ooty evening.

K Mahaveer Chand

JEWELLERY

(291 Main Bazaar Rd; ☎10am-8pm) K Mahaveer Chand has been selling particularly beautiful Toda tribal and silver jewellery for around 40 years.

Green Shop

HANDICRAFTS, FOOD

(www.lastforest.in; Sargan Villa, off Club Rd; ☎10am-7pm Mon-Sat) ☎ Run by Kotagiri's Keystone Foundation (p1075), this fair-trade and organic-oriented shop sells gorgeous tribal crafts and clothes, and wild honey and other produce harvested by local indigenous farmers.

Higginbothams

BOOKS

i Getting There & Away

The fun way to arrive in Ooty is on the miniature train from Mettupalayam. Buses also run regularly up and down the mountain from other parts of Tamil Nadu, from Kerala and from Mysuru and Bengaluru in Karnataka. Taxis cluster at several stands around town and there are fixed one-way fares to many destinations, including Coonoor (₹750), Kotagiri (₹850), Coimbatore (₹1700) and Mudumalai Tiger Reserve (₹1250).

BUS

For Kochi (Cochin, Kerala) take the 7am or 8am bus to Palakkad (₹95, six hours) and change there. Royal Tours (☎0423-2446150), opposite the train station, runs a 9am minibus to Kodaikanal (₹600, eight hours).

The Tamil Nadu and Karnataka state bus companies have reservation offices at the busy bus station. Departures include:

Bengaluru (₹391 to ₹650, eight hours, nine daily)

Chennai (₹462, 14 hours, 4.30pm & 5.45pm)

Coimbatore (₹56, four hours, every 30 minutes, 5.30am to 8.40pm)

Mysuru (₹136, five hours, about every 45 minutes, 6.30am to 5.45pm)

TRAIN

The miniature (or 'toy') train from Mettupalayam to Ooty – one of the Mountain Railways of India given World Heritage status by Unesco – is the best way to get here. Called the Nilgiri Mountain Railway, it requires special cog wheels on the locomotive, meshing with a third, 'toothed' rail on the ground, to manage the exceptionally steep gradients. There are wonderful forest, waterfall, mountainside and tea plantation views along the way. The section between Mettupalayam and Coonoor uses steam engines, which push, rather than pull, the train up the hill.

For the high season (April to June), book the train several weeks ahead; at other times a few days ahead is advisable (though not always essential). The train departs Mettupalayam for Ooty at 7.10am daily (1st/2nd class ₹205/30, five hours). From Ooty to Mettupalayam the train leaves at 2pm and takes 3½ hours. Departures and arrivals at Mettupalayam connect with the Nilgiri Express to/from Chennai Central. There are also three daily passenger trains each way just between Ooty and Coonoor (₹25, 1¼ hours).

Ooty is usually listed as Udthagamandalam in train timetables.

i Getting Around

There are autorickshaws and taxis everywhere. Autorickshaw fare charts are posted outside the bus station and botanical gardens and elsewhere. An autorickshaw from the train or bus station to Charing Cross costs about ₹60.

There are jeep taxi stands near the bus station and municipal market: expect to pay about 1.5 times local taxi fares.

Mudumalai Tiger Reserve

📍0423

In the foothills of the Nilgiris, this 321-sq-km reserve is like a classical Indian landscape painting given life: thin, spindly trees and light-slotted leaves concealing spotted chital deer and grunting wild boar. Also here are around 50 tigers, giving Mudumalai the highest tiger population density in India – though you'll be very lucky to see one. Overall the reserve is Tamil Nadu's best wildlife-spotting place. The creatures you're most likely to see include deer, peacocks, wild boar, langurs and Malabar giant squirrels. There's also a good chance of sighting wild elephants (the park has several hundred) and gaur (Indian bison).

Along with Karnataka's Bandipur and Nagarhole, Kerala's Wayanad and Tamil Nadu's newly created Sathyamangalam Tiger Reserve, Mudumalai forms part of an unbroken chain of protected areas comprising an important wildlife refuge.

Mudumalai sometimes closes for fire risk in April, May or June. Rainy July and August are the least favourable months for visiting.

The reserve's reception centre (📍0423-2526235; 🕒6-10am & 2-5.30pm), and some reserve-run accommodation, is at Theppakadu, on the main road between Ooty and Mysuru. The closest village to Theppakadu is Masinagudi, 7km east.

👁 Sights & Activities

Hiking in the reserve is not allowed and private vehicles are only permitted on the main Ooty–Gudalur–Theppakadu–Mysuru road and the Theppakadu–Masinagudi and Masinagudi–Moyar River roads. Some wildlife can be spotted from these roads, but the best way to see the reserve is on the official 45-minute minibus tours (per person ₹135; 🕒hourly 7-10am & 2-6pm), which make a 15km loop in camouflage-stripped 15- or 26-seat buses. Book at the reception centre a couple of hours ahead.

Half-hour elephant rides (up to four people ₹860; 🕒7-8am & 4-5pm Sep-Jun) are also available from the reception centre; reserve 30 minutes ahead. From 8.30am to 9am and 5.30pm to 6pm you can watch the reserve's working elephants being fed at the nearby elephant camp (minibus-tour customers free, others ₹15).

Some operators may offer treks in the buffer zone around the reserve, but these are potentially dangerous and the reserve authorities advise very strongly against them; tourists have died from getting too close to wild elephants on illegal treks. Jeep safaris organised through the better resorts, with expert guides, are a safer option.

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

The reserve runs simple lodgings along a track just above the Moyar River at Theppakadu. Better accommodation is provided by numerous lodges and forest resorts outside the park's fringes, many of them welcoming family-run businesses offering high standards and breathtaking views. Most of the best cluster in Bokkapuram village, 5km from Masinagudi at the foot of the mountains.

Theppakadu

For this reserve-run accommodation you should book in advance (by phone or in person) with the Office of the Field Director (p1076) in Ooty, though the reception centre accepts walk-ins if there are vacancies.

Sylvan Lodge LODGE $$
(d ₹780) Plain, well-scrubbed rooms, and ₹70 meals.

Theppakadu Log House LODGE $$
(r ₹1360-2200) The best of the reserve-owned accommodation, with comfortable well-maintained rooms that have private bathrooms. Meals cost around ₹70.

Bakkapuram & Around

Don't wander outside your resort at night – leopards, among other wild animals, are around.

Wilds at Northernhay LODGE $$
(☎ 9843149490; www.serendipityo.com; Singara; r incl breakfast ₹4800-5400) A wonderful lodge 8km southwest of Masinagudi, in a converted coffee warehouse on a coffee plantation filled with tall trees that give it a deep-in-the-forest feel. Cosy rooms (some up in the trees) and excellent meals complement the morning and evening jeep safaris (per hour ₹3000), on which you should see a good variety of wildlife.

Jungle Retreat RESORT $$
(☎ 0423-2526469; www.jungleretreat.com; Bakkapuram; dm ₹1000, r ₹4000-5400; 🏠🍷) One of the most stylish resorts around, with accommodation in lovingly built stone cottages or a high treehouse, all spread out for maximum seclusion. The bar, restaurant and common area is great for meeting travellers, and staff are knowledgeable and friendly. The pool has a stunning setting – leopards and elephants often drop by for a drink. Three daily meals cost ₹1700.

Bamboo Banks Farm LODGE $$
(☎ 0423-2526211; www.bamboobanks.com; Masinagudi; full-board d ₹6140; 🏠🍷) This friendly family-owned operation has seven simple, comfy cottages tucked into its own patch of unkempt jungle, 2km south of Masinagudi. Geese waddle around, there's a peaceful grassy pool area with hammocks, meals are good South Indian buffets, and the efficient owners can organise horse riding and private safaris.

Jungle Hut RESORT $$$
(☎ 0423-2526463; www.junglehut.in; Bokkapuram; full-board s ₹4400-6900, d ₹6600-9000; 🏠🍷🍷) Along with ecofriendly touches and a sociable lounge, this welcoming 28-year-old resort has probably the best food in Bakkapuram (if you're visiting from another resort after dark, don't walk home alone!). Spacious rooms in cottages are scattered around large grounds, where a herd of 200-odd chital deer grazes morning and evening. Jeep safaris, treks and birdwatching can be organised.

Getting There & Around

A taxi day trip to Mudumalai from Ooty costs around ₹1800. Do go at least one way by the alternative Sighur Ghat road with its spectacular 36-hairpin-bend hill. A one-way taxi from Ooty to Theppakadu should be ₹1250.

Buses between Ooty and Mysuru go via Gudalur and stop at Theppakadu (₹37, three hours from Ooty). Smaller buses that can handle the Sighur Ghat road run from Ooty to Masinagudi (₹17, 1½ hours, 10 daily). Local buses run several times daily between Masinagudi and Theppakadu (₹5); shared jeeps also ply this route for ₹10 per person if there are enough passengers, or you can have one to yourself for about ₹120. Costs are similar for jeeps between Masinagudi and Bakkapuram.

Why Go?

Long fabled among travellers for its legendary beaches, world-class diving and far-flung location in the middle of nowhere, the Andaman Islands are still the ideal place to get away from it all.

Lovely opaque emerald waters are surrounded by primeval jungle and mangrove forest, and snow-white beaches that melt under flame-and-purple sunsets. The population is a friendly masala of South and Southeast Asian settlers, as well as Negrito ethnic groups whose arrival here still has anthropologists baffled. Adding to the intrigue is its remote location, some 1370km from the mainland, meaning the islands are geographically more Southeast Asia – 150km from Indonesia and 190km from Myanmar.

While the archipelago comprises some 300 islands, only a dozen or so are open to tourists, Havelock by far being the most popular for its beaches and diving. The Nicobars are strictly off limits to tourists, as are the tribal areas.

When to Go

Port Blair

Dec–Mar Perfect sunny days, optimal diving conditions and turtle nesting.

Oct–Dec & Mar–mid-May Weather is a mixed bag, but fewer tourists and lower costs.

Feb–Aug Pumping waves on Little Andaman for experienced surfers.

Andaman Islands Highlights

- 1 Disconnecting from the mainland and easing into the blissfully mellow pace of life on Neil Island (p1096)
- 2 Diving, snorkelling and socialising on Havelock Island (p1093)
- 3 Glimpsing Port Blair's colonial history at Ross Island (p1090)
- 4 Experiencing the true wilds of Northern Andaman in Kalipur (p1100), while island-hopping to pristine beaches and coral reefs
- 5 Finding Butler Bay and paradise on Little Andaman (p1101)

History

The date of initial human settlement on the Andamans and Nicobars is lost to history. Anthropologists say stone-tool crafters have lived here for 2000 years, and scholars of human migration believe local indigenous tribes have roots in Negrito and Malay ethnic groups in Southeast Asia. Otherwise, these specks in the sea have been a constant source of legend to outside visitors.

The 10th-century Persian adventurer Buzurg Ibn Shahriyar described an island chain inhabited by cannibals, Marco Polo added that the natives had dogs' heads, and tablets in Thanjavur (Tanjore) in Tamil Nadu named the archipelago Timaittivu: the Impure Islands.

None of the above was exactly tourism-brochure stuff, but visitors kept coming: the Marathas in the late 17th century and, 200 years later, the British, who used the Andamans as a penal colony for political dissidents. In WWII some islanders greeted the invading Japanese as liberators, but despite installing Indian politicians as (puppet) administrators, the Japanese military proved to be harsh occupiers.

Following Independence in 1947, the Andaman and Nicobar Islands were incorporated into the Indian Union. With migration from the mainland (including Bengali refugees fleeing the chaos of partition), the population has grown from a few thousand to more than 350,000. During this influx, tribal land rights and environmental protection were often disregarded; while some conditions are improving today, indigenous tribes remain largely in decline.

The islands were devastated by the 2004 Indian Ocean earthquake, offshore aftershocks and the resulting tsunami. The Nicobars were especially hard hit; some estimate a fifth of the population was killed, others were relocated to Port Blair and many have yet to return. Normalcy has largely returned.

Climate

Sea breezes keep temperatures within the 23°C to 31°C range and the humidity at around 80% all year. It's very wet during the southwest (wet) monsoon between roughly mid-May and early October, while the north-east (dry) monsoons between November and December also bring rainy days.

Geography & Environment

Incredibly the islands form the peaks of the Arakan Yoma, a mountain range that begins in Western Myanmar (Burma) and extends into the ocean, running all the way to Sumatra in Indonesia.

The isolation of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands has led to the evolution of many endemic plant and animal species. Of 62 identified mammals, 32 are unique to the islands, including the Andaman wild pig, crab-eating macaque, masked palm civet, and species of tree shrews and bats. Of the 250 bird species, 18 are endemic, including ground-dwelling megapodes, hawabills (swiftlets) and the emerald Nicobar pigeon.

Dangers & Annoyances

Crocodiles are a way of life in many parts of the Andamans, particularly Little Andaman, Wandoor, Corbyn's Cove, Baratang and North Andamans. The death of an American tourist who was attacked by a saltwater crocodile while snorkelling in Havelock in 2010 (at Neils Cove near Beach 7) was considered extremely unusual, and remains an isolated incident. There have been no sightings since, but a high level of vigilance remains in place. It's important you keep informed, heed any warnings by authorities and avoid being in the water at dawn or dusk.

Sandflies are another hindrance, with these small biting insects sometimes causing havoc on the beach. To avoid infection, it's imperative not to scratch what is an incredibly itchy bite. Bring along hydrocortisone cream and calamine lotion for the bite. Seek medical assistance if it gets infected. To prevent bites, repellent containing DEET is your best bet, and avoid the beach at dawn and dusk.

Information

Even though they are 1000km east of the mainland, the Andamans still run on Indian time. This means that it can be dark by 5pm and light by 4am; people here tend to be very early risers.

All telephone numbers must include the 03192 area code, even when dialling locally.

SLEEPING PRICE RANGES

Tariffs can rise dramatically during peak season of mid-December to January – reservations are a very good idea. Camping is not permitted on the islands. The following price ranges refer to a double room with bathroom during the high season (December to March) and are inclusive of tax:

$ less than ₹800

$$ ₹800 to ₹2500

PERMITS

All foreigners need a permit to visit the Andaman Islands; it's issued free on arrival from Port Blair's airport or Haddo Jetty. The 30-day permit allows foreigners to stay in Port Blair, South and Middle Andaman (excluding tribal areas), North Andaman (Diglipur), Long Island, North Passage, Little Andaman (excluding tribal areas), and Havelock and Neil Islands. It's possible to get a 15-day extension from the Immigration Office (☎ 03192-237793; ☎ 8.30am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) in Port Blair, or at police stations elsewhere.

Keep your permit on you at all times – you won't be able to travel without it. Police frequently ask to see it, especially when you're disembarking on other islands, and hotels will need permit details. You'll also need it to pass immigration when departing the Andamans.

The permit also allows day trips to Jolly Buoy, South Cinque, Red Skin, Ross, Narcondam, Interview and Rutland Islands, as well as the Brothers and the Sisters. For most day permits it's not the hassle but the cost. For areas such as Mahatma Gandhi Marine National Park, and Ross and Smith Islands near Diglipur, the permits cost ₹50/500 for Indians/foreigners. Students with valid ID pay minimal entry fees, so don't forget to bring your card.

The Nicobar Islands are off-limits to all except Indian nationals engaged in research, government business or trade.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

There are daily flights to Port Blair from Delhi, Kolkata and Chennai, though flights from Delhi and Kolkata are often routed through Chennai. Round-trip fares are between US$250 and US$600, depending on how early you book; some airlines offer one-way flights for as low as US$80, but these need to be booked months in advance.

Air India (☎ 03192-233108; www.airindia.com)

GoAir (☎ 03192-231540, reservations 092-2322211; www.goair.in)

Jet Airways (☎ 1800-225522, 03192-230545; www.jetairways.com)

SpiceJet (☎ 0987-1803333; www.spicejet.com)

BOAT

Depending on who you ask, the infamous boat to Port Blair is either the only real way to get to the Andamans or a hassle and a half. The truth lies somewhere in between. There are usually three to four sailings a month between Port Blair and Chennai (three days) and Kolkata (four to five days), plus a monthly ferry to Visakhapatnam (four days). All ferries arrive at Haddo Jetty.

Take sailing times with a large grain of salt – travellers have reported sitting on the boat at Kolkata harbour for up to 12 hours, or waiting to

i PERMIT COPIES

At the time of research it was a requirement to produce a photocopy of your permit when booking ferry tickets. While you're not always asked to provide it, it's worth taking five or so copies before arriving at Port Blair's ferry office: you'll likely need them later in your trip.

dock near Port Blair for several hours. With hold-ups and variable weather and sea conditions, the trip can take a day or two extra.

Assistant Director of Shipping Services

(☎ 044-25226873; 17 Rajaji Salai, Jawahar Bldg, Chennai Port; ☎ 10am-1pm & 2-4pm Mon-Fri, to 12.30pm Sat) has boats from Chennai, Shipping Corporation of India (☎ 033-22543505/7, in Kolkata 033-22543400; www.shipindia.com; 13 Strand Rd, Kolkata; ☎ 9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Fri, to noon Sat) departs from Kolkata, and Pattabhiramaya & Co (☎ 0891-2565597; ops@avbgr.com; Harbour Approach Rd, next to NMDC, Port Area; ☎ 9am-5pm) from Visakhapatnam.

You can organise your return ticket at the ferry booking office (p1091) at Phoenix Bay. Bring two passport photos and a photocopy of your permit. Schedules and fares can be found at www.andamans.gov.in or www.shipindia.com. Otherwise enquire at Phoenix Bay's info office.

Classes vary slightly between boats, but the cheapest is bunk (₹2270), followed by 2nd-class (six beds, ₹5817), 1st class (four beds, ₹7319) and deluxe cabins (two beds, ₹8841). Higher-end tickets cost as much as, if not more than, a plane ticket. If you go bunk, prepare for waking up to a chorus of men 'hwaaaaaaching' and spitting, little privacy and toilets that tend to get...unpleasant after three days at sea. That said, it's a good way to meet locals, and one for proponents of slow, adventure travel.

Food (tiffin for breakfast, thalis for lunch and dinner) costs around ₹150/200 per day for bunk/cabin class, though bring something (fruit in particular) to supplement your diet. Some bedding is supplied, but if you're travelling bunk class bring a sleeping sheet. Many travellers take a hammock to string up on deck.

There is no ferry between Port Blair and Thailand, but private yachts can get clearance. You can't legally get from the Andamans to Myanmar by sea. Be aware you risk imprisonment or worse from the Indian and Burmese navies if you try it.

i Getting Around

AIR

Two modes of air transport link Port Blair with the other islands. If your budget allows it, it's worth it for the views.

FERRY CANCELLATIONS

Bad weather can play havoc with your itinerary, with ferry services often cancelled if the sea is rough. Build in a few days' buffer to avoid being marooned..

Interisland Helicopter While the interisland helicopter service isn't for tourists, you can chance your luck by applying one day before at the Directorate of Civil Aviation office (☎ 03192-233601; VIP Rd Port Blair Helipad) at the helipad near the airport. It runs to/from Port Blair to Little Andaman (₹2625, 35 minutes), Havelock (₹1500, 20 minutes), Diglipur (₹4125, one hour) and Mayabunder (₹3375, 45 minutes). The 5kg baggage limit precludes most tourists from using this service.

Sea Plane (☎ 09531828222; andamanseaplane@gmail.com; ☺ Mon-Sat) The amphibious Sea Plane links Port Blair with Havelock (₹4100), Little Andaman (₹7170) and Diglipur (₹10,500), landing and taking off on the water, and the runway in Port Blair. It operates January to April. Note the 5kg baggage limit.

BOAT

Most islands can only be reached by water. While this sounds romantic, ferry ticket offices can be hell: expect hot waits, slow service, queue-jumping and a rugby scrum to the ticket window. To hold your spot and advance in line, you need to be a little aggressive (but not a jerk) or be a woman; ladies' queues are a godsend for women travellers, but they really only apply in Port Blair. You can buy tickets the day you travel by arriving at the appropriate jetty an hour beforehand, but this is risky, and normally one or two days in advance is recommended. You can't pre-book ferry tickets until you've been issued your island permit (p1087) upon arrival in the Andamans.

There are regular boat services to Havelock and Neil Islands (three to four per day), as well as Rangat, Mayabunder, Diglipur and Little Andaman. A schedule of interisland sailing times can be found at www.andamans.gov.in.

Two private ferry companies also run to Havelock and Neil Islands from Port Blair.

Makruzz Ferry (☎ 03192-212355; www.makruzz.com)

Coastal Cruise (☎ 03192-241333; www.coastal-cruise.in; 13 RP Rd, Aberdeen Bazaar)

CAR & MOTORCYCLE

A car with driver costs ₹550 per 35km, or around ₹10,000 for a return trip to Diglipur from Port Blair (including stopovers along the way). Motorbikes and scooters are available for hire from Port Blair and all the islands from around ₹300 to ₹400 per day. Due to restrictions in travel within tribal areas, it's not permitted for foreigners to drive their own vehicles to North and Middle Andaman.

BUS

All roads – and ferries – lead to Port Blair, and you'll inevitably spend a night or two here booking onward travel. The main island group – South, Middle and North Andaman – is connected by road, with ferry crossings and bridges. Buses run south from Port Blair to Wandoor, and north to Baratang, Rangat, Maya-bunder and Diglipur, 325km north of the capital.

Port Blair

POP 100,600

Though surrounded by attractive lush forest and rugged coastline, Port Blair is more or less your typical Indian town that serves as the provincial capital of the Andamans. It's a vibrant mix of Indian Ocean inhabitants – Bengalis, Tamils, Telugus, Nicobarese and Burmese. Most travellers don't hang around any longer than necessary (usually one or two days while waiting to book onward travel in the islands, or returning for departure), but PB's fascinating history makes for some worthwhile sightseeing.

Sights

★ Cellular Jail National Memorial

HISTORIC BUILDING

(GB Pant Rd; admission ₹10, camera/video ₹25/100, sound-and-light show adult/child ₹50/25; ☺ 8.45am-12.30pm & 1.30-5pm) A former British prison, the evocative Cellular Jail National Memorial now serves as a shrine to the political dissidents it once jailed. Construction of the jail began in 1896 and it was completed in 1906 – the original seven wings (several of which were destroyed by the Japanese during WWII) contained 698 cells radiating from a central tower. Like many political prisons, Cellular Jail became something of a university for freedom fighters, who exchanged books, ideas and debates despite walls and wardens. Guides (₹200) are available to show you around.

There's a fairly cheesy sound-and-light show detailing the jail's history in English at 7.15pm on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Anthropological Museum

MUSEUM

(MG Rd; admission ₹10, camera ₹20; ☺ 9am-1pm & 1.30-4.30pm Tue-Sun) This museum provides a thorough and sympathetic portrait of the islands' indigenous tribal communities. ### Samudrika Marine Museum

MUSEUM

(Haddo Rd; adult/child ₹20/10, camera/video ₹20/50; ☀️9am-1pm & 2-5pm Tue-Sun) Run by the Indian Navy, this museum has a diverse range of exhibits with informative coverage of the islands' ecosystem, tribal communities, plants, animals and marine life. Outside is a skeleton of a young blue whale washed ashore on the Nicobars.

Chatham Saw Mill

HISTORIC SITE

(admission ₹10; ☎ 8.30am-2.30pm) Located on Chatham Island (reached by a road bridge), the saw mill was set up by the British in 1883 and was one of the largest wood processors in Asia. The mill is still operational, and while it may not be to everyone's taste, especially conservationists, it's an interesting insight to the island's history and economy. Look out for the bomb crater, left by Japanese ordnance in WWII.

Corbyn's Cove

BEACH

No one comes to Port Blair for the beach, but if you need a break from town, Corbyn's Cove has a small curve of sand backed by palms. The coastal road here is a scenic journey, and passes several Japanese WWII bunkers along the way. Located 7km south of town, an autorickshaw costs ₹200, or rent a scooter. Crocodiles are occasionally spotted.

Sleeping

★ Aashiaanaa Rest Home

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 09474217008; shads_maria@hotmail.com; Marine Hill; r without bathroom ₹300, with AC from ₹900; 🚽🚿) Port Blair's most comfortable budget choice has homely rooms decked out in aquamarine and mauve, and a convenient location uphill from Phoenix Bay jetty. Most have cable TV and reliable hot water, while pricier rooms get you a balcony and air-con. Staff can help with booking ferry tickets. Wi-fi is ₹60 per hour.

Hotel Lalaji Bay View

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9476005820, 03192-236333; www.lalajibay-view.com; RP Rd; s/d ₹300/400, r with AC from ₹1200; 🚽🚿) Backpacker HQ in Port Blair, this popular budget hotel is run by the friendly young entrepreneur Nirman (grandson of Lalaji from Long Island) who knows exactly what makes tourists tick. Rooms are cosy, spotless and have comfy beds, but it's the sociable rooftop restaurant-bar that brings people in, with (paid) wi-fi. It's just up from the mosque.

Amina Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9933258703; aminalodge@gmail.com; MA Rd, Aberdeen Bazaar; s/d ₹450/600) Run by an entertaining couple, Amina has spotless rooms with TV and a handy, though noisy, location in the bazaar. Prices are fixed.

Azad Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 03192-242646; MA Rd, Aberdeen Bazaar; s/d without bathroom ₹200/300, d ₹500, r with AC ₹850) An old budget favourite with basic and clean rooms.

DON'T MISS

ROSS ISLAND

Just a 20-minute boat ride from Port Blair, visiting Ross Island (not to be confused with its namesake island in North Andaman) feels like discovering a jungle-clad Lost City, à la Angkor Wat, except here the ruins are Victorian English rather than ancient Khmer. The former administrative headquarters for the British in the Andamans, Ross Island in its day was fondly called the 'Paris of the East' (along with Pondicherry, Saigon etc etc...), but the cute title, vibrant social scene and tropical gardens were all wiped out by the double whammy of a 1941 earthquake and invasion by the Japanese.

Today the old English architecture is still standing, despite an invading wave of fast-growing jungle vegetation. Landscaped paths cross the island and most of the buildings are labelled. There's a small museum with historical displays and resident spotted deer. A sound-and-light show was also on the cards at the time of research.

Ferries to Ross Island (₹100, 20 minutes) depart hourly from Aberdeen Jetty behind the aquarium in Port Blair, between 8.30am and 2pm every day except Wednesday.

₹8100/8600; 🍷🍷🍷) Located on the road to Corbyn's Cove, 2km outside town, Sinclairs' large modern rooms open right out to the water. It has a nice seaside garden with hammocks to lounge in, and a Japanese WWII bunker onsite. Free airport transfer.

Fortune Resort – Bay Island HOTEL $$$
(📞 03192-234101; www.fortunehotels.in; Marine Hill; s/d incl breakfast from ₹7090/7630; 🍷🍷🍷) One of PB's finest, with lovely bay views, tropical garden, and modern rooms with polished floors; ask for one that's sea-facing.

J Hotel HOTEL $$$
(📞 03192-246000; www.jhotel.in; Aberdeen Bazaar; r incl breakfast from ₹4300; 🍷🍷) A slick designer hotel in the heart of the bazaar, with modern rooms and chic rooftop restaurant. Lack of natural light is a downside until you remember the 5am sunrise!

🍴 Eating & Drinking

★ Excel Restaurant INTERNATIONAL, INDIAN $
(Hotel Lalaji Bay View, RP Rd; mains from ₹100; ☺ 7am-11pm; 🍷) This alluring bamboo rooftop restaurant above Hotel Lalaji Bay View (not to be confused with the seedy downstairs bar), brings a 'Havelock' menu to the city, with grilled fish, burgers, Israeli dishes etc. Wi-fi access (₹60 per hour) and a fully stocked bar makes it the place to hang out.

Gagan Restaurant INDIAN $
(Clock Tower, Aberdeen Bazaar; mains from ₹90-200; ☺ 7am-10pm) Popular with locals, this hole-in-the-wall Bengali restaurant serves up great food at good prices, including Nicobar fish, crab curries, coconut chicken, and dosas for breakfast.

Annapurna INDIAN $
(MG Rd; mains ₹100-150; ☺ 6.30am-10.30pm) An excellent veg option that looks like a high-school cafeteria and serves delicious dosas and rich North Indian-style curries.

Lighthouse Residency SEAFOOD $$
(MA Rd; mains ₹80-800; ☺ 11am-11pm) Select your meal from the display of red snapper, crab or tiger prawns to barbecue (served with rice and chips), and head to its rooftop for a cold Kingfisher beer. There's a cheaper second branch (Marina Park; mains ₹80-400) in an outdoor shack near the water.

Bayview MULTICUISINE $$$
(Hotel Sinclairs Bayview; mains ₹110-500; ☺ 11am-11pm) Right on the water with a lovely cool sea breeze, the Bayview is a top spot to grab lunch out of town.

Nico Bar BAR
(Marine Hill; ☺ 11am-11pm) The closest you'll get to the Nicobars, Fortune Bay Hotel's bar is the spot for sea breezes and scenic views (the picture on the ₹20 note is based on this spot). A great place to while away an afternoon or balmy evening with a drink.

📍 Information

There are several ATMs around town. You can find internet cafes, with wi-fi and computer terminals (₹40 per hour), in Aberdeen Bazaar near the clock tower.

Aberdeen Police Station (📞 03192-232400; MG Rd)

Andaman & Nicobar Tourism (📞 03192-232694; www.andamans.gov.in; Kamaraj Rd; ☺ 8.30am-1pm & 2-5pm) The main island tourist office has brochures and is the place to book permits for areas around Port Blair. Its website has useful info such as ferry schedules.

GB Pant Hospital (📞 emergency 03192-232102, 03192-233473; GB Pant Rd)

Island Travels (📞 03192-233358; islandtravels@yahoo.com; Aberdeen Bazaar; ☺ 9am-1pm & 2-6pm Mon-Sat) Reliable travel agency for booking flights. Also has foreign-exchange facilities.

Main Post Office (MG Rd; ☺ 9am-7pm Mon-Sat)

State Bank of India (MA Rd; ☺ 9am-noon & 1-3pm Mon-Fri, 10am-noon Sat) Foreign currency can be changed here.

📍 Getting There & Away

BOAT

Most interisland ferries depart from Phoenix Bay Jetty. Tickets can be purchased from its ferry booking office (☺ 9am-1pm & 2-4pm Mon-Fri, to noon Sat). Ferries can be pre-booked one to three days in advance; if they are sold out you can chance your luck with a same-day ticket issued an hour before departure from outside the ticket office at the end door. There's a ferry information office (📞 03192-245555; Phoenix Bay Jetty; ☺ 5.30am-6.30pm) outside the ticket office for enquiries.

Ferries to Havelock (₹195, 2½ hours) depart daily at 6.20am, 11am, 1pm and 2pm; with several heading via Neil Island; all book out fast.

Otherwise there are private, pricier ferries. Makruzz (p1088) has daily departures to Havelock (₹975 to ₹1700, 1½ hours) at 8.15am and 2pm, which continue to Neil Island (₹1315 to ₹2224, 2½ hours). Tickets are available for the airport or travel agents in town. Coastal Cruise (p1088) heads to Neil Island (₹875 to ₹1200) via Havelock (₹875 to ₹1200) at 7.30am.

There are also daily boats to Little Andaman, which also regularly sell out, and several boats a week to Diglipur and Long Island.

New arrivals should make the jetty their first port of call to book tickets.

BUS

Government buses run all day from the bus stand at Aberdeen Bazaar to Wandoor (₹20, one hour) and Chiriya Tapu (₹20, one hour). Buses to Diglipur run at 4am (to Aerial Bay) and 7am (₹265, 12 hours), and 9.45am for Mayabunder (₹200, 10 hours) all via Rangat (₹160, six hours) and Baratang (₹190, three hours). More comfortable, but pricier, private buses have 'offices' (a guy with a ticket book) across from the main bus stand.

Getting Around

TO & FROM THE AIRPORT

A taxi or autorickshaw from the airport to Aberdeen Bazaar costs around ₹100 for the 4km trip. There are also hourly buses (₹10) between the airport and main bus stand.

AUTORICKSHAW

Aberdeen Bazaar to Phoenix Bay Jetty is about ₹30, and to Haddo Jetty it's around ₹50.

MOTORBIKE

You can hire a scooter from various spots in Port Blair for around ₹400 per day. Try Saro Tours (☎ 9933291466; www.rentabikeandaman.com; Marine Rd).

Around Port Blair

There are eco-related volunteering opportunities around Port Blair. See the Volunteering chapter (p46).

Wandoor

Wandoor, a tiny speck of a village 29km southwest of Port Blair, is a good spot to see the interior of the island. It's best known as a jumping-off point for snorkelling at Mahatma Gandhi Marine National Park. Buses run from Port Blair to Wandoor (₹20, one hour).

Activities

Wandoor has a nice beach, though at the time of research, swimming was prohibited due to crocodiles.

Mahatma Gandhi Marine National Park

SNORKELLING

(permit Indian/foreigner ₹50/500; ☺ Tue-Sun) Popular with Indian tourists, the half-day snorkelling trips to Mahatma Gandhi Marine National Park are a good option for those wanting to get underwater while in Port Blair. The park comprises 15 islands of mangrove creeks, tropical rainforest and reefs supporting 50 types of coral and plenty of colourful fish. Boats depart 9am from Wandoor Jetty, costing ₹750 in addition to the ₹500 permit which you need to arrange at the tourist office (p1091) in Port Blair.

Depending upon the time of year, the marine park's snorkelling sites alternate between Jolly Buoy and Red Skin, allowing the other to regenerate.

Sleeping

Anugama Resort

RESORT $$$

(☎ 03192-280068; www.anugamaresort.com; Wandoor; r with fan/AC incl breakfast ₹3000/3500; 🏠 🚿) Run by an enthusiastic Singaporean diver, Anugama has basic but comfortable cottages in a bucolic setting among forest and mud flats. It's a good spot for outdoor lovers with activities such as snorkelling, bike hire and nature walks exploring mangrove and intertidal zones.

Chiriya Tapu

Chiriya Tapu, 30km south of Port Blair, is a tiny village fringed by beaches and mangroves, and famous for celestial sunsets. It also has Munda Pahar Beach, popular with Indian day-trippers. Hourly buses head from Port Blair (₹20, one hour); the last bus back is at 6pm.

Sights & Activities

Chiriya Tapu Biological Park

ZOO

(Indian/foreigner ₹20/50; ☺ 9am-4pm Tue-Sun) A pleasant place to stroll in a forested setting with natural enclosures for indigenous species such as crab-eating macaques, Andaman wild pigs and salt-water crocs.

Diving

Dive companies based in Chiriya Tapu can arrange trips to Cinque and Rutland Islands, both known for their abundance of fish, colourful soft corals and excellent visibility. Cinque also has a blinding white sandbar beach. There's a WWII British minesweeper wreck dive too.

Lacadives

DIVING

(☎ 03192-281013; www.lacadives.com; per dive Rutland Island ₹2000, Cinque Island ₹8000; ☺ Oct-May) Long-established Indian dive company, which can arrange budget diver accommodation. Boats carry up to 10 people.

Infinity Scuba

(☎ 9474204508; www.wildgrassresorts.com; r incl breakfast ₹4000; 🍷) Run by the Infinity Scuba team, Wildgrass offers romantic cottages with an island ambience and lush jungle backdrop. It also has an atmospheric bamboo restaurant that's good for day-trippers.

RESORT $$$

Havelock Island

POP 5500

With snow-white beaches, teal shallows, a coast crammed with beach huts and some of the best diving in South Asia, Havelock has a well-deserved reputation as a backpacker paradise. For many, Havelock is the Andamans, and it's what lures most tourists across the Bay of Bengal, many of whom are content to stay here for the whole trip.

👁 Sights & Activities*Beaches*Radhanagar

BEACH

(Beach 7) One of India's prettiest and most famous stretches of sand is the critically acclaimed Radhanagar. It's a beautiful curve of sugar fronted by perfectly spiraled waves, all backed by native forest. It's on the north-western side of the island, about 12km from the jetty. Late afternoon is the best time to visit to avoid the heat and crowds, as well as for its sunset.

Neils Cove

BEACH

Northwest of Radhanagar is the gorgeous 'lagoon' at Neils Cove, another gem of sheltered sand and crystalline water. Swimming is prohibited at dusk and dawn; take heed of any warnings regarding crocodiles.

Beach 5

BEACH

On the north-eastern coast of the island, the palm-ringed Beach 5 has your more classic tropical vibe, with the bonus of shady patches and fewer sandflies. Swimming is difficult at low tide when the water becomes shallow. Most accommodation is out this way.

Kalapatthar

BEACH

Hidden away 5km south of Beach 5, you'll find the low-key Kalapatthar, a pristine beach. You'll have to walk a bit to get away from package tourists.

Diving & Snorkelling

Havelock is the premier spot for diving in the Andamans. It's world renowned for its crystal-clear waters, corals, schools of fish, turtles and kaleidoscope of colourful marine life. Diving here is suitable for all levels.

The main dive season is roughly November to April, but trips run year-round.

All companies offer fully equipped boat dives, and prices vary depending on the location, number of participants and duration of the course. Diving starts from around ₹5000 for a two-tank dive, with options of Discover Scuba (one hour ₹4500), PADI open-water (four dives ₹21,700) and advanced (three dives ₹13,500) courses.

While coral bleaching has been a major issue since 2010 (mainly due to El Niño weather patterns), diving remains world-class. The shallows may not have bright corals, but all the colourful fish are still here, and for depths beyond 16m, corals remain as vivid as ever. The Andamans recovered from a similar bleaching in 1998, and today things are likewise slowly repairing themselves.

Popular sites are Dixon's Pinnacle and Pilot Reef with colourful soft coral, South Button for macro dives (to see small critters) and rock formations, Jackson Bar or Johnny's Gorge for deeper dives with schools of snapper, sharks, rays and turtles, and Minerva's Delight for a bit of everything. There's also a wreck dive to SS Incheket, a 1950s cargo carrier. Keep an eye out for trips further afield such as Barren Island, home to India's only active volcano, whose ash produces an eerie underwater spectacle for divers.

Dive companies can arrange snorkelling trips, but it's cheaper to organise a boat through your guesthouse. Snorkelling gear is widely available on Havelock but is generally low quality.

Most boats head to Elephant Beach for snorkelling, which can also be reached by a 40-minute walk through a muddy elephant logging trail; it's well marked (off the cross-island road), but turns to bog if it's been raining. At high tide it's also impossible to reach – ask locally for more info. Lots of snorkelling charters, and even jet skis, come out this way, so be prepared as it can be a bit of a circus. If you head here around 6am, you'll have the place to yourself.

Prices are standardised, so find a dive operator you feel comfortable with.

Other Activities

Most come to Havelock for lazing on the beach, diving or snorkelling.

Some resorts can organise guided jungle treks for keen walkers or birdwatchers, but be warned the forest floor turns to glug after rain. The inside rainforest is a spectacular, emerald-coloured hinterland cavern, and the birdwatching – especially on the forest fringes – is rewarding; look out for the blue-black racket-tailed drongo or golden oriole.

Yoga (per 1½ hours, ₹500) is available during season at Flying Elephant (p1095).

Captain Hook's

(☎9434280543; www.andamansportsfishing.com; Beach 3; half-/full day for 2 people incl lunch from ₹6000/20,000) Sport fishing is growing in popularity, with Captain Hook's running catch-and-release fishing trips where you can reel in giant trevally, and kayaking trips.

Pellicon Beach Resort

BUNGALOW $

(☎9932081673; www.pelliconbeachresort.com; Beach 5; hut from ₹500) Attractive beachside bungalows as well as Nicobari huts with private porches on a peaceful plot of land close to the beach.

Sunrise Beach Resort

BUNGALOW $

(☎9474206183; Beach 6; r ₹600-1000, with AC ₹4000) Offers the same thatched goodness as every other resort on Havelock - what sets it apart is its budget A-frame huts with water views. Has a bar too.

★ Emerald Gecko

BUNGALOW $$

(☎9474250821; www.emerald-gecko.com; Beach 5; hut ₹1600-3200) On an island where very little thought goes into design, Emerald Gecko stands miles ahead. Double-storey bungalows look to the water, while pricier rooms have ambient lighting and outdoor bathrooms all lovingly constructed from bamboo rafts drifted ashore from Myanmar. It has one of Havelock's best restaurants (BYO alcohol), friendly staff and free filtered water.

Wild Orchid

RESORT $$$

(☎03192-282472; www.wildorchidandaman.com; Beach 5; r incl breakfast from ₹5600; ☎☎) One of the Andamans' premier resorts, with modern and thoughtfully furnished Andamanese-style cottages, all set around a fabulous tropical garden.

Symphony Palms Beach Resort RESORT $$$
(☎ 03192-214315; www.symphonypalms.havelock.com; Beach 5; r incl breakfast from ₹10,000; ☎) Only recommended for its seaside luxury rooms (not the resort across the road), Symphony Palms is like an upmarket version of Havelock's bungalow resorts. It has a private beach with sun lounges.

Eating & Drinking

There are dhabas (snack bars) near the jetty or head to the main bazaar (No 3 Village) for local meals. Alcohol is available from a store (Beach 3; ☎ 8am-noon & 3-8pm) next to the ATM at No 3 Village.

Welcome Restaurant INDIAN, SEAFOOD $
(No 3 Village; mains from ₹150; ☎ 7.30am-9pm) In the market, this eatery does delicious seafood curries and prawn rolls with parathas.

Rony's INDIAN $
(Beach 5; mains ₹110-250; ☎ 7am-11pm) Popular family-run place serving up seafood curries, pizzas and other backpacker favs.

Fat Martin's SOUTH INDIAN $
(Beach 5; mains ₹60-120; ☎ 7.30am-10pm) Squeaky-clean open-air cafe with a good selection of chapati rolls and dosas, including paneer tikka and nutella dosas.

★ Red Snapper SEAFOOD, MULTICUISINE $$$
(Wild Orchid; mains ₹250-900; ☎ 7.30-10am, noon-2.30pm & 6-9.30pm) Easily Havelock's best restaurant and bar, with its atmospheric polished-bamboo decor and thatched-roof exuding a romantic island ambience. Pick from lavish seafood platters, BBQ fish and handmade pastas, accompanied by delicious cheese-and-olive naan. The breezy outdoor deck seating is a good spot for a beer.

Anju-coco Resto INDIAN, CONTINENTAL $$ (Beach 5; mains ₹200-900; ☎ 8am-10.30pm) One of Havelock's best, Anju-coco offers a varied menu, with standouts being its big breakfasts and BBQ fish.

Full Moon Cafe MULTICUISINE $$
(Dive India, Beach 5; mains ₹200-450) ☎ Run by an Irish-Indian couple, this busy thatched-roof restaurant shares a site with Dive India on Beach 5. It does excellent seafood, healthy salads and refreshing cardamom lime fizzes. Free water refills.

B3 – Barefoot Bar & Restaurant PIZZERIA $$ (Village No 1; mains ₹200-900; ☎ 11am-3.30pm & 6-9pm) Modern decor with cult movie posters on the walls, B3 has a Western-heavy menu, with the best pizzas in Havelock. Its outside decking makes it a good place to wait for your ferry. There's no alcohol. Downstairs has the sophisticated Dakshin (Village No 1; mains ₹80-150; ☎ 6-10am & 11.30-3pm), specialising in South Indian cuisine.

Cicada LIVE MUSIC
(Beach 5) Run by the team from Emerald Gecko, this live music venue has an appealing jungle location accessed down a path off the main road across from Beach 5.

Information

There are two ATMs side by side in No 3 Village. Satellite internet is insanely slow and pricey at around ₹300 per hour.

Havelock Tourist Service (Beach 3; ☎ 9.30am-8pm) A private operator which can arrange air tickets, info for government and private ferries, and sundries for tourists.

Getting There & Away

Government ferries run from Havelock to Port Blair three times a day (₹378, 2½ hours) at 9am, 2pm and 4pm. You're best to book tickets from the jetty (☎ 9.15am-noon & 2-4pm Mon-Fri, to noon Sat) at least two days in advance (most hotels can arrange this for a fee). One to two ferries a day link Havelock with Neil Island (₹378, one hour 10 minutes), while four boats a week head to Long Island (₹378, two hours) en route to Rangat.

Makruzz (p1088) and Coastal Cruise (p1088) have daily services to Port Blair via Neil Island.

Getting Around

A local bus (₹10, 40 minutes) connects the jetty, villages and Radhanagar on a roughly hourly circuit until 6pm. You can rent a scooter (per 24 hours from ₹250) or bicycle (per day ₹60).

An autorickshaw from the jetty to No 3 Village is ₹50, to No 5 ₹80 and to No 7 ₹500.

Neil Island

Happy to laze in the shadows of its more famous island neighbour, tranquil Neil is still the place for that added bit of relaxation. Its beaches may not be as luxurious as Havelock's, but they have ample character and are a perfect distance apart to explore by bicycle; cycling through picturesque villages you'll get many friendly hellos. The main bazaar has a mellow vibe and is a popular gathering spot in the early evening. In Neil Island you're about 40km from Port Blair, a short ferry ride from Havelock and several universes away from life at home.

Sights & Activities

Neil Island's five beaches (numbered one to five) all have their unique charms, though they aren't necessarily great for swimming.

Beach 1

BEACH

(Laxmanpur) Beach 1 is a long sweep of sandy beach and mangrove, a 40-minute walk west of the jetty and village. There's a good sunset viewpoint out this way accessed via Pearl Park Beach Resort (p1097). Dugongs are sometime spotted here.

Beach 2

BEACH

On the north side of the island, Beach 2 has the Natural Bridge rock formation, accessible only at low tide by walking around the rocky cove. To get here by bicycle, take the side road that runs through the bazaar, then take a left where the road forks.

Beach 3

BEACH

(RamNagar) Beach 3 is a secluded powdery sand and rocky cove, which is best accessed via Blue Sea restaurant (p1098). There's also good snorkelling here.

Beach 4

BEACH

(Bharatpur) The best swimming beach, though its proximity to the jetty is a turn-off, as are rowdy day-trippers who descend upon the beach in motorised boats.

Beach 5

BEACH

(Sitapur) The more rugged Beach 5, 5km from the village on the eastern side of Neil, is a nice place to walk along the sand, with small limestone caves accessible at low tide.

Diving & Snorkelling

Neil Island offers some excellent dive sites, with colourful fish, large schools of Jack, turtles, sharks, rays, and soft and hard corals.

The island's best snorkelling is around the coral reef at the far (western) end of Beach 1 at high tide; if you're extremely lucky you may spot a dugong feeding in the shallows at high tide. Beach 3 also has good snorkelling. Gear costs around ₹150 to hire and available from many guesthouses.

There are two dive operators on Neil Island. Those interested in free diving can contact Sanjay at Gayan Garden (p1097).

India Scuba Explorers

DIVING

(☎ 9474238646; www.indiascubaexplorers.com; Beach 1; per 1/2 dives ₹3000/5000) Neil's first dive shop set up by a young husband-wife team is popular for its personalised service.

Dive India

DIVING

(☎ 8001222206; www.diveindia.com/neil.html; per 1/2 dives ₹3000/5000) Established in Havelock, this professional company has recently opened here.

Sleeping

These days Beach 3 and 5 are the most popular with backpackers. Beach 1 attracts package tourists, but still has excellent choices.

Beach 1

Sunset Garden Guesthouse

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 9933294573; Beach 1; hut ₹250-400) Ideal for those wanting to get away from it all, these bamboo huts are in a secluded spot accessed via a 15-minute walk through rice fields.

Gayan Garden

BUNGALOW $

(Beach 1; r ₹300) Bamboo cottages halfway between the bazaar and Beach 1 with a relaxed garden, seafood restaurant and filtered coffee. Offers cooking classes too.

Tango Beach Resort

HOTEL $

(☎ 9474212842; www.tangobeachandaman.com; Beach 1; hut ₹500, cottage with fan/AC from ₹1200/4000; ☎) Famous for its sea breeze, this Beach 1 classic is pricier than most, but its sea-facing rooms are still a fine choice.

Pearl Park Beach Resort

BUNGALOW $$

(☎ 9434260132; www.andamanpearlpark.com; Beach 1; s/d incl breakfast with fan from ₹1500/1800, with AC from ₹2500/3200; ☎☎) Neil's original bamboo-bungalow 'resort' now caters more for domestic tourists and is grossly overpriced, but it still has pleasant huts arranged around a flower-filled garden.

Seashell

RESORT $$$

(☎ 9933239625; www.seashellneil.com; Beach 1; cottage incl breakfast ₹8590) Upmarket tented cottages leading down to the beach.

Beach 3

★ Kalapani

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 9474274991; Beach 3; hut ₹400, without bathroom ₹200) Run by the delightful Prakash and Bina, laid-back Kalapani has blissfully simple and clean bungalows with quality mattresses. Motorbikes, bicycles and snorkelling gear are available for hire.

Breakwater Beach Resort

BUNGALOW $

(☎ 9933292654; www.neilislandaccommodation.in; Beach 3; hut ₹500-1000, without bathroom ₹300) Wins rave reviews for its chilled-out ambience and delicious food.

Beach 5

Sunrise Beach Resort

BUNGALOW $

(☎9933266900; Beach 5; r without bathroom ₹200-400) Thatched and concrete bungalows a one-minute walk from the beach.

Emerald Gecko

BUNGALOW $$

(Beach 5; r ₹1000-3000) Still under construction when we visited, but if it's anything close to its sister guesthouse in Havelock (p1095), it'll be a wonderful addition to Neil.

Eating

Moonshine

INTERNATIONAL, INDIAN $

(Beach 1; mains ₹90-250) On the road to Beach 1, this backpacker favourite has excellent homemade pastas, fish thalis and cold beer.

Blue Sea

SEAFOOD, INDIAN $

(Beach 3; mains from ₹100; ☺6am-11pm) Old-school beach shack with sandy floor, dangling beach curios and a blue whale skull centrepiece, serving all the usual dishes. The path here leads to arguably Neil's best beach.

Chand Restaurant

INDIAN, CONTINENTAL $

(Bazaar; mains ₹70-200; ☺6am-10.30pm) The best place in the market with a good mix of international and Indian dishes, strong filtered coffee and delicious seafood.

Information

There's no ATM or moneychanging facilities on Neil, so bring plenty of cash. There's wi-fi access at Pearl Park Beach Resort (p1097) on Beach 1 for ₹200 per 24 hours.

Getting There & Around

A ferry heads to Port Blair two or three times a day (₹378, two hours). There are also one or two daily ferries to Havelock (₹378, one hour), and three ferries a week to Long Island (₹378, five hours). Makruzz (p1088) and Coastal Cruise (p1088) also have ferries to/from Port Blair (from ₹875, one hour) and Havelock (from ₹710)

Hiring a bicycle (per day from ₹80) is the best way to get about; roads are flat and distances short. You'll be able to find one in the bazaar or at a guesthouse. An autorickshaw will take you from the jetty to Beach 1 or 3 for ₹70 to ₹100.

Middle & North Andaman

The Andamans aren't just sun and sand. They are also jungle that feels as primeval as the Jurassic, a green tangle of ancient forest that could have been birthed in Mother Nature's subconscious. This wild, antediluvian side of the islands can be seen on a long bus ride up the Andaman Trunk Rd (ATR), crossing tannin-red rivers prowled by salt-water crocodiles on roll-on, roll-off ferries.

But there's a negative side to riding the ATR: the road cuts through the homeland of the Jarawa (p1099) and has brought the tribe into incessant contact with the outside world. Modern India and tribal life do not seem able to coexist – every time Jarawa and settlers interact, misunderstandings have led to friction, confusion and, at worst, violent attacks and death. Indian anthropologists and indigenous rights groups such as Survival International have called for the ATR to be closed; its status continues to be under review. At present, vehicles are permitted to travel only in convoys at set times from 6am to 3pm. Photography is strictly prohibited, as is stopping or any other interaction with the Jarawa people who are becoming increasingly reliant on handouts from passing traffic.

The first place of interest north of Port Blair are the limestone caves (☺Tue-Sun) at Baratang. It's a 45-minute boat trip (₹450) from the jetty, a scenic trip through mangrove forest. A permit is required, organised at the jetty.

Rangat & Around

Rangat is the next main town, a transport hub with not much else going for it. If you do get stuck here, UK Nest has clean budget rooms, while Priya International is a more upmarket choice with handy tourist information on things to do in the area. There's an ATM nearby. The turtle breeding grounds at Dhaninallah Mangrove is the most popular sight, viewed early evening (mid-December to April) from the 1km-long boardwalk, a 45-minute drive from Rangat.

Ferries depart Long Island (₹11) from Yerratta Jetty, 8km from Rangat, at 9am and 3.30pm. Rangat Bay, 5km outside town, has ferries to/from Port Blair (₹378, six hours) and Havelock (₹378, two hours). A daily bus goes to Port Blair (₹145, seven hours) and Diglipur (₹65, four hours).

Long Island

With its friendly island community and lovely slow pace of life, Long Island is perfect for those wanting to take the pace down a few more notches. Other than the odd

ISLAND INDIGENES

The Andaman and Nicobar Islands' indigenous peoples constitute 12% of the population and, in most cases, their numbers are decreasing. The Onge, Sentinelese, Andamanese and Jarawa are all of Negrito ethnicity, and share a strong resemblance to people from Africa. Tragically, numerous groups have become extinct over the past century. In February 2010 the last speaker of the Bo language passed away, bringing an end to a culture and language that originated 65,000 years ago.

The Land of the Naked People (2003) by Madhusree Mukerjee provides an interesting anthropological account. It's important to note that these ethnic groups live in areas strictly off limits to foreigners, and people have been arrested for trying to visit these areas.

Jarawa

The 250 remaining Jarawa occupy the 639-sq-km reserve on South and Middle Andaman Islands (p1098). In 1953 the chief commissioner requested that an armed sea plane bomb Jarawa settlements, and their territory has been consistently disrupted by the Andaman Trunk Rd, forest clearance and settler and tourist encroachment. In 2012, a video went viral showing an exchange between Jarawa and tourists, whereby a policeman orders them to dance in exchange for food. This resulted in a government inquest that saw to the end of the so-called 'human safari' tours.

Nicobarese

The 30,000 Nicobarese are the only indigenous people whose numbers are not decreasing. The majority have converted to Christianity and been partly assimilated into contemporary Indian society. Living in village units led by a head man, they farm pigs and cultivate coconuts, yams and bananas. The Nicobarese, who probably descended from people of Malaysia and Myanmar, inhabit a number of islands in the Nicobar group, centred on Car Nicobar, the region worst affected by the 2004 tsunami.

Onge

Two-thirds of Little Andaman's Onge Island was taken over by the Forest Department and 'settled' in 1977. The 100 or so remaining members of the Onge tribe live in a 25-sq-km reserve covering Dugong Creek and South Bay. Anthropologists say the Onge population has declined due to demoralisation through loss of territory.

Sentinelese

The Sentinelese, unlike the other tribes on these islands, have consistently repelled outside contact. For years, contact parties arrived on the beaches of North Sentinel Island with gifts of coconuts, bananas, pigs and red plastic buckets, only to be showered with arrows, though some encounters have been a little less hostile. About 150 Sentinelese remain.

Andamanese

As they now number only about 50, it seems impossible the Andamanese can escape extinction. There were around 7000 Andamanese in the mid-19th century, but friendliness to colonisers was their undoing, and by 1971 all but 19 of the population had been swept away by measles, syphilis and influenza epidemics. They have been resettled on Strait Island.

Shompen

Only about 250 Shompen remain in the forests on Great Nicobar. Seminomadic hunter-gatherers who live along the riverbanks, they have resisted integration.

motorcycle, there's no motorised vehicles on the island, and at certain times you may be the only tourist here.

Sights & Activities

Beaches

There's a nice beach close to Blue Planet (p1100), reached via the yellow arrows.

Lalaji Bay

BEACH

A 1½-hour trek in the jungle will lead you to the secluded Lalaji Bay, a beautiful white-sand beach with good swimming and snorkelling; follow the red arrows to get here. Hiring a dunghi (motorised boat; ₹2500 return for two persons) is also an option. Inconveniently, you need a permit (free) from the Forest Office near the jetty to visit.

Diving & Snorkelling

Blue Planet (p1100) has a dive shop (December to March), charging ₹4000 for two dives, and visits Campbell Shoal for its schools of trevally and barracuda.

You can also get a dunghi to North Passage Island for snorkelling at the stunning Merk Bay (₹3500 for two people) with blinding white sand and translucent waters.

There's excellent offshore snorkelling at Lalaji Bay with colourful corals out front from the rest huts. There's also good snorkelling at the 'Blue Planet' beach, directly out from the blue Hindu temple; swim beyond the sea grass to get to the coral. Blue Planet hires snorkelling gear for ₹100.

Sleeping

★ Blue Planet

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9474212180; www.blueplanetandamans.com; r from ₹1500, without bathroom ₹500; @) The only place to stay on the island, so fortunately it's a gem, with thatched-bamboo rooms and hammocks set around a lovely Padauk tree. Food is delicious and there's free filtered water. It's a 15-minute walk from the jetty; follow the blue arrow markers. It also has wonderful double-storey bamboo cottages (from ₹3000) at a nearby location.

Getting There & Away

There are four ferries a week to Havelock, Neil and Port Blair (₹195). From Yeratta, there are two daily boats to Long Island (₹11, one hour) at 9am and 3.30pm, returning at 7am and 2pm. A bus meets ferries at Yeratta. If you can't get a ferry here from Port Blair, jump on a bus to Rangat to get the ferry from Yeratta.

Diglipur & Around

Those who make it this far north are rewarded with some impressive attractions in the area. It's a giant outdoor adventure playground designed for nature lovers: home to a world-famous turtle nesting site, Andaman's highest peak and a network of caves to go with white-sand beaches and some of the best snorkelling in the Andamans.

However, don't expect much of Diglipur (population 70,000), the second largest town in the Andamans, a sprawling, gritty bazaar town with an ATM and internet access (per hour ₹40). Instead head straight for the tranquil coastal village of Kalipur.

Ferries and some buses arrive at Aerial Bay, from where it's 11km to Diglipur, and 8km to Kalipur in the other direction.

Activities

Diglipur has huge tourist potential, and those who hang around will have plenty to discover. In season most come to see the turtles (p1101). Get in touch with Pristine Beach Resort (p1101), who are involved with the DARTED grassroots tourist initiative to promote Alfred Caves, mud volcanoes and crocodile habitats.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

MAYABUNDER & AROUND

In 'upper' Middle Andaman, Mayabunder is most famous for its villages inhabited by Karen, members of a Burmese hill tribe who were relocated here during the British colonial period. It's a low-key destination for travellers looking for an experience away from the crowds.

You can go on a range of day tours, with the highlight being jungle trekking at creepy Interview Island (boat hire ₹3000, up to six people), inhabited by a population of 36 wild elephants, descendants of working elephants released after a logging company closed in the 1950s. You'll feel very isolated here. Armed guards accompany you in case of elephant encounters. A permit (₹500) is required, which is best organised by emailing a copy of your arrival permit to Sea'n'Sand guesthouse. Other trips include turtle nesting at Dhaninallah Mangrove; Forty One Caves, where hawabills (swiftlets) make their highly prized edible nests; and snorkelling off Avis Island (boat hire ₹1500).

Sea'n'Sand (☎ 03192-273454; titusinseansand@yahoo.com; r from ₹750; ☎) is easily the best place to stay with comfortable rooms. Hosts Titus and Elizabeth (and their extended Karen family) are an excellent source for everything Mayabunder. Go the top level for water views. The food here is sensational.

Mayabunder, 71km north of Rangat (₹70, two hours), is linked by daily buses from Port Blair (₹200, 10 hours) and Diglipur (₹55, two hours) and by thrice-weekly ferries. There's an ATM here.

Ross & Smith Islands

BEACH, SNORKELLING

(☺closed Tue) Like lovely tropical counterweights, the twin islands of Smith and Ross are connected by a narrow sandbar of dazzling white sand, and are up there with the best in the Andamans for both swimming and snorkelling. No permits are required for Smith Island, which is accessed by boat (₹2500, fits five people) from Aerial Bay. While theoretically you need a permit for Ross Island (₹500), as it's walkable from Smith permits generally aren't checked. Enquire with Pristine Resort for more info.

Ross and Smith are closed Tuesday for beach cleaning; volunteers are welcome (₹250, covering permit, transport and food).

Saddle Peak

TREKKING

(Indian/foreigner ₹25/250) At 732m Saddle Peak is the highest point in the Andamans. You can trek through subtropical forest to the top and back from Kalipur in about six to seven hours; the views from the peaks onto the archipelago are incredible. It's a demanding trek, so bring plenty of water (around 4L). A permit (₹250) is required from the Forest Office at the trailhead, open 6am to 2pm. A local guide (300₹) will make sure you don't get lost, but otherwise follow the red arrows marked on the trees.

Craggy Island

SNORKELLING

A small island off Kalipur, Craggy is a good spot for snorkelling. Strong swimmers can make it across (flippers recommended), otherwise a dunghi is available (₹2500 return).

Excelsior Island

SNORKELLING

Recently opened for tourism, Excelsior has beautiful beaches, snorkelling plus resident spotted deer. Permits are required (₹500); boats cost ₹4500 and fit seven people.

Sleeping & Eating

★ Pristine Beach Resort

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎9474286787; www.andamanpristineresorts.com; hut ₹600-1000, r ₹3000-4500; 📍📞) Huddled among the palms between paddy fields and the beach, this relaxing resort has simple bamboo huts, more romantic bamboo 'tree houses' and upmarket rooms. Its attractive restaurant-bar serves up delicious fish Nicobari and cold beer. Alex, the superfriendly owner, is a top source of information. It also rents bicycles/motorcycles (per day ₹100/250) and snorkelling gear (₹100).

DON'T MISS

TURTLE NESTING IN KALIPUR

Reputedly the only beach in the world where leatherback, hawksbill, olive ridley marine and green turtles all nest along the same coastline, Kalipur is a fantastic place to observe this evening show from mid-December and April.

Turtles can be witnessed most nights, and you can assist with collecting eggs, or with the release of hatchlings. Contact Pristine Beach Resort (p1101).

The Dhaninallah Mangrove boardwalk north of Rangat is another good spot to see turtles.

Sion

INDIAN $

(Diglipur; mains ₹60-150; ☺10am-10pm) If you have time to kill in Diglipur, this rooftop restaurant serving excellent seafood dishes is the place to head.

Getting There & Around

Diglipur, located about 80km north of Mayabunder, is served by daily buses to Port Blair (₹255, 12 hours) at 5am, 7am and a 10.40pm night bus. There are also buses to Mayabunder (₹55, 2½ hours) and Rangat (₹100, 4½ hours).

Ferries to Port Blair (seat/bunk ₹110/350, nine hours) depart three times a week.

Buses run the 18km journey from Diglipur to Kalipur (₹15, 30 minutes) every 45 minutes; an autorickshaw costs ₹200.

Little Andaman

As far south as you can go in the islands, Little Andaman has an appealing end-of-the-world feel. It's a gorgeous fist of mangroves, jungle and teal, ringed by beaches as fresh as bread out of the oven. It rates as many traveller's favourite spot in the Andamans.

Badly hit by the 2004 tsunami, Little Andaman has slowly rebuilt itself. Located about 120km south of Port Blair, the main settlement here is Hut Bay, a pleasant small town with smiling Bengalis and Tamils.

Sights & Activities

Little Andaman Lighthouse

LIGHTHOUSE

Located 14km east of Hut Bay, Little Andaman lighthouse makes for a worthwhile excursion. Exactly 200 steps spiral up to magnificent views over the coastline and forest. The easiest way to get here is by motorcycle. Otherwise take a sweaty bicycle journey or autorickshaw until the road becomes unpassable; from there, walk for an hour along the blissful stretch of deserted beach.

Beaches

Come prepared for sandflies (p1086); crocodiles are also about.

Butler Bay

BEACH

(entry ₹20) Little Andaman's best beach is Butler Bay, a spectacular curve with life-guards and good surf at the 14km mark.

Netaji Nagar

BEACH

The sprawling and rugged Netaji Nagar, stretching 8km to 12km north of Hut Bay, is where most accommodation is located. The downside is the occasional rubbish that washes ashore from Thailand and Myanmar.

Kalapathar

BEACH

Located before Butler Bay is Kalapathar lagoon, a popular enclosed swimming area with shady patches of sand. Look for the cave in the cliff face that you can scramble through for stunning ocean views. It's accessed via a side road that runs past modern housing constructed after the 2004 tsunami.

Surfing

Intrepid surfing travellers have been whispering about Little Andaman since it first opened to foreigners several years ago. The reef breaks are legendary, but best suited for more experienced surfers. The most accessible is Jarawa Point, a left reef break on Butler Bay. Beginners should stick to beach breaks along Km8 to Km11. February to April brings the best waves.

Surfing Little Andaman

SURFING

(☎9933269762; www.surfinglittleandaman.com; Hut Bay; board rental half-/full day ₹500/900, 2hr lesson ₹1000) Run by Basque surfer Varuna, here you can hire boards, arrange lessons and get the lowdown on everything about surfing in Little Andaman.

Waterfalls

Inland, the White Surf and Whisper Wave waterfalls offer a jungle experience for when you're done lazing on the beach. The latter involves a 4km forest trek and a guide is highly recommended. They are pleasant falls and you may be tempted to swim in the rock pools, but beware of crocodiles.

Getting There & Around

Ferries land at Hut Bay Jetty. Buses (₹10, depart hourly) to Netaji Nagar usually coincide with ferry arrivals, but often leaves before you clear immigration, leaving pricey jeeps (per person ₹100) as the other option. An autorickshaw from the jetty to Netaji Nagar is ₹250, or ₹70 to town. Motorbikes and bicycles are popular for getting around, and are available from most lodges; otherwise, shared jeeps (₹20) and buses are handy.

Boats sail to Port Blair daily, alternating between afternoon and evening departures on vessels ranging from big ferries with four-/two-bed rooms (₹230/320, six to 8½ hours) to faster 5½-hour government boats (₹35); all have air-con. The ferry office is closed Sunday. You can get here by helicopter and seaplane (p1087).

India Today

With so many states, languages, religions, traditions, opinions and people – so many people! – India always has lots going on. The political, economic and social systems of the world's largest democracy are complex and, while mostly functional, there are hitches. Ongoing conflicts with neighbouring Pakistan have been constant challenges, as have bouts of unrest on the domestic front, from communal discord to violence against women. But Indians are eager for change – and travelling ever closer towards it.

The Political Landscape

When the Congress Party regained power in 2004, it was under the leadership of Sonia Gandhi – the Italian-born wife of the late Rajiv Gandhi, who served as prime minister from 1984 to 1989. A planned national agitation campaign against Sonia Gandhi's foreign origins by the opposition Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) was subverted when she stepped aside to allow Manmohan Singh to be sworn in as prime minister. However, despite Singh's formidable fiscal reputation (in 1991, Singh, then finance minister, floated the rupee against a basket of 'hard' currencies; state subsidies were phased out and the economy was opened up to foreign investment) many deemed his decision-making power, as prime minister, to be stymied under Sonia Gandhi.

In January 2013, Rahul Gandhi, Sonia's son, assumed the post of vice president of the Congress Party. The move didn't surprise anyone: the Nehru-Gandhi name has become synonymous with the party. But he wasn't widely seen as a strong or strategic figure, and in 2014 the Congress-led United Progressive Alliance (UPA) suffered a huge defeat with the BJP-led National Democratic Alliance (NDA) winning by a landslide under the charismatic leadership of its prime ministerial candidate, Narendra Modi. The election went down in history as the world's biggest, with approximately 814.5 million people eligible to vote (a rise of around 100 million voters since the 2009 election), according to the Election Commission of India.

With the BJP securing 282 seats (in the 543-seat Parliament) on its very own, this was the first time since the 1984 election that a party held enough seats to govern outright. Reasons for Modi's success at the federal elections include his former economic reputation as chief minister of the state of Gujarat, his appeal to 'ordinary' Indians due to his working class origins, and his masterful political campaigning which involved savvy use of digital technology, including social media.

Since coming to power, Modi has set about to not only resurrect India's ailing economy but to also address social issues such as sanitation, gender equality, poverty and health. Apart from vowing to build millions of toilets, largely in rural areas, he launched the Swachh Bharat Abhiyan (Clean India Mission) in 2014, a national cleanliness awareness drive that has seen politicians (including the PM himself) along with revered celebrities – from Bollywood stars to cricket icons – publicly sweeping streets and clearing rubbish in a bid to encourage all citizens to do so.

On the fiscal front, both the World Bank and International Monetary Fund forecast that India's economy was on track to become the world's fastest-growing (expected to overtake China in 2016/17) citing renewed investment confidence – under the business-friendly BJP government – as being one of the reasons. Another economic achievement under the new government has been India breaking a Guinness World Record for the most bank accounts opened in one week – 18,096,130 – a scheme (known as the Pradhan Mantri Jan-Dhan Yojana) aimed to proffer socio-economic opportunities for the poor, who were often denied banking access in the past.

The Kashmir Impasse

Decades of border skirmishes between India and Pakistan, over the disputed territory of Kashmir, have resulted in many casualties and diplomatic stalemates. The impasse over Kashmir has plagued bilateral relations between the two South Asian neighbours ever since Partition in 1947. The predominantly Muslim Kashmir Valley is claimed by both countries (as well as a section of less powerful Kashmiris themselves).

Three India-Pakistan wars – in 1947, 1965 and 1971 – resolved little, and by 1989 Kashmir had its own Pakistan-backed armed insurgency. Tens of thousands were killed in the conflicts, and India has maintained hundreds of thousands of troops in Indian-administered Kashmir ever since. India-Pakistan relations sunk even lower in 1998 when both governments tested nuclear devices in a muscle-flexing show: nukes were now in the picture.

Talks that might have created an autonomous region were derailed in 2008, when terrorists killed at least 163 people at 10 sites around Mumbai (Bombay) during three days of coordinated bombings and shootings. The one sniper caught alive, a Pakistani, had ties to Lashkar-e-Taiba, a militant group that formed to assist the Pakistani army in Kashmir in the 1990s. Pakistan denied involvement. In late 2012, India executed the Pakistani sniper, and in early 2013, a Kashmiri man convicted for involvement in a 2001 terrorist attack on India's Parliament was also hanged.

When India's BJP won the federal elections, in 2014, Pakistan's Prime Minister, Nawaz Sharif, was invited to attend Narendra Modi's Prime Ministerial oath-taking ceremony. But it wasn't long before relations between the two nations soured, after Islamabad faltered on certain diplomatic matters and violated cross-border cease-fires. At the time of writing, there had been no formal resumption of dialogue.

Violence Against Women

In December 2012, a 23-year-old paramedic and her male friend boarded a bus on their way home from the movies in Delhi only to find that it was a fake city bus, with blackened windows, where six men awaited them. The men beat the two friends, and raped the woman so brutally that she died 12 days later. The woman became known in India as Nirbhaya, or 'fearless one', and the event set off massive protests and soul-searching nationwide. Within weeks, India passed a package of new but controversial laws to deter violence against women: rape now carries a seven-year minimum sentence, with the death penalty in cases where the victim dies.

But in the months following the murder, more crimes took place, including violent rapes of girls as young as three. And while some Indian politicians condemned the rapists, others made comments that downplayed rape or blamed the victim. Many in India are also now reflecting on other abuses of women (tens of thousands die over dowry disputes alone each year), widespread police and justice-system mishandling of cases, and the greater issue of gender inequality. Although the violence situation has a long way to go, many are hopeful that change will follow now that the issues are out in the open.

Since becoming prime minister, Narendra Modi has been actively trying to change the national psyche regarding gender equality. On his first Independence Day address to the nation, in 2014, Modi spoke out about rape. In this speech he said: "I want to ask parents when your daughter turns 10 or 12 years old, you ask, 'Where are you going? When will you return?' Do the parents dare to ask their sons, 'Where are you going? Why are you going? Who are your friends?' After all, the rapist is also someone's son." Then, in 2015, Modi launched the Beti Bachao Beti Padhao (Save the Daughter, Teach the Daughter) campaign which aims to work towards gender equality by discouraging female infanticide and encouraging education, among other things. With programs, such as this one, it's hoped the way in which society views gender issues will improve. Time, as ever, shall tell.

History

Throughout thousands of years of great civilisations, invasions, the birth of religions and countless cataclysms, India has proved itself to be, in the words of its first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, 'a bundle of contradictions held together by strong but invisible threads'. Indian history has always been a work-in-progress, an evolution that can prove elusive for those seeking to grasp its essence. India's history is also not solely that of a nation, but of a collection of many different countries contained within the subcontinent, seldom dominated by a single power. And yet, a vibrant, diverse country has emerged out of this many-faceted past, as enduring and grounded as it is dynamic.

Indus Valley Civilisation

The Indus Valley, straddling the modern India–Pakistan border, is the cradle of civilisation on the Indian subcontinent. The first inhabitants of this region were nomadic tribes who cultivated land and kept domestic animals. Over thousands of years, an urban culture began to emerge from these tribes, particularly from 3500 BC. By 2500 BC large cities were well established, the focal points of what became known as the Harappan culture, which would flourish for more than 1000 years.

The great cities of the Mature Harappan period were Moenjodaro and Harappa in present-day Pakistan, and Lothal near Ahmedabad. Lothal can be visited (p700), and from the precise, carefully laid-out street plan, some sense of this sophisticated 4500-year-old civilisation is still evident. Harappan cities were astoundingly uniform, despite being spread across an enormous area. Even their brickwork and streets had a standard size. They often had a separate acropolis, suggesting a religious function, and the great tank at Moenjodaro may have been used for ritual bathing purposes. The major Harappan cities were also notable for their size – estimates put the population of Moenjodaro at as high as 50,000.

By the middle of the 3rd millennium BC, the Indus Valley culture was arguably the equal of other great civilisations emerging at the time. The Harappans traded with Mesopotamia, and developed a system of weights and measures, along with highly developed art in the form of terracotta and bronze figurines. Recovered relics, including models of bullock carts

1500 BC

The Indo-Aryan civilisation takes root in the fertile plains of the Indo-Gangetic basin. Settlers speak an early form of Sanskrit, from which several Indian vernaculars, including Hindi, later evolve.

and jewellery, offer the earliest evidence of a distinctive Indian culture. Indeed, many elements of Harappan culture would later become assimilated into Hinduism: clay figurines found at these sites suggest worship of a Mother goddess (later personified as Kali) and a male three-faced god sitting in the pose of a yogi (believed to be the historic Shiva) attended by four animals. Black stone pillars (associated with phallic worship of Shiva) and animal figures (the most prominent being the humped bull; later Shiva's mount, Nandi) have also been discovered. The 'dancing girl', a small bronze statuette of a young girl, whose insouciant gaze has endured over 4500 years, may be seen in the National Museum (p71) in Delhi, and is the most famous Harappan work of art to have been discovered. It indicates a well-developed society, both in its skillful sculpture and the indication of the opportunity for leisure pursuits.

Early Invasions & the Rise of Religions

The Harappan civilisation fell into decline from the beginning of the 2nd millennium BC. Some historians attribute the end of the empire to floods or decreased rainfall, which threatened the Harappans' agricultural base. Despite a lack of archaeological proof or written reports in the ancient Indian texts, an enduring, if contentious, theory is that an Aryan invasion put paid to the Harappans. A rival theory claims that it was the Aryans (from a Sanskrit word for 'noble') who were the original inhabitants of India. There's no clear evidence that the Aryans came from elsewhere, and it's even questionable whether the Aryans were a distinct race, so the 'invasion' could simply have been an invasion of new ideas from neighbouring cultures.

Those who defend the traditional invasion theory believe that from around 1500 BC Aryan tribes from Afghanistan and Central Asia began to filter into northwest India. Despite their military superiority, their progress was gradual, with successive tribes fighting over territory and new arrivals pushing further east into the Ganges plain. Eventually these tribes controlled northern India as far as the Vindhya Hills. Many of the original inhabitants of northern India, the Dravidians, the theory goes, were pushed south.

What is certain is that the Aryans were responsible for the great Sanskrit literary tradition. The Hindu sacred scriptures, the Vedas, were written during this period of transition (1500–1200 BC), and the caste system became formalised. These compositions are of seminal importance in terms of India's spirituality and history.

As Aryan culture spread across the Ganges plain in the late 7th century BC, its followers were absorbed into 16 major kingdoms, which were, in turn, amalgamated into four large states. Out of these states arose the Nanda dynasty, which came to power in 364 BC, ruling over huge swathes of North India.

During this period, the Indian heartland narrowly avoided two invasions from the west which, if successful, could have significantly altered the path of Indian history. The first was by the Persian king Darius (521–486 BC), who annexed Punjab and Sindh (on either side of the modern India–Pakistan border). Alexander the Great advanced to India from Greece in 326 BC, an achievement in itself, but he turned back in the Punjab, without ever extending his power deeper into India.

The period is also distinguished by the rise of two of India's most significant religions, Buddhism and Jainism, which arose around 500 BC in the northern plains. Both the Buddha and Jainism's Mahavir questioned the Vedas and were critical of the caste system, attracting followers from the lower castes.

The Mauryan Empire & its Aftermath

If the Harappan culture was the cradle of Indian civilisation, Chandragupta Maurya was the founder of the first great Indian empire, probably the most extensive ever forged, stretching from Bengal to Afghanistan and Gujarat. He came to power in 321 BC, having seized the throne from the Nandas, and he soon expanded the empire to include the Indus Valley previously conquered by Alexander the Great.

From its capital at Pataliputra (modern-day Patna), with its many-pillared palace, the Mauryan empire encompassed much of North India and reached as far south as modern-day Karnataka. There is much documentation of this period in contemporary Jain and Buddhist texts, plus the intensely detailed depiction of Indian statecraft in the ancient text known as the Arthashastra. The empire reached its peak under emperor Ashoka (c. 272–232 BC). Such was Ashoka's power to lead and unite that after his death in 232 BC, no one could be found to hold the disparate elements of the Mauryan empire together. The empire rapidly disintegrated, collapsing altogether in 184 BC.

None of the empires that immediately followed could match the stability or enduring historical legacy of the Mauryans, although the post-Ashokan era did produce at least one line of royalty whose patronage of the arts and ability to maintain a relatively high degree of social cohesion were substantial. The Satavahanas eventually controlled all of Maharashtra, Madhya Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh. Under their rule, between 230 BC and AD 200, the arts, especially literature and philosophy, blossomed; the Buddha's teaching thrived; and the subcontinent enjoyed a period of considerable prosperity. South India may have lacked vast and fertile agricultural plains on the scale of North India, but it compensated by building strategic trade links via the Indian Ocean. Trade across the subcontinent grew during this time – with the Roman Empire (overland, and by sea through the southern ports) and with China (overland).

The Golden Age of the Guptas

The empires that followed the Mauryans may have claimed large areas of Indian territory as their own, but many secured only nominal power over

AN ENLIGHTENED EMPEROR

Apart from the Mughals and then the British many centuries later, no other power controlled more Indian territory than the Mauryan empire. It's therefore fitting that it provided India with one of its most important historical figures.

Emperor Ashoka's rule was characterised by flourishing art and sculpture, while his reputation as a philosopher-king was enhanced by the notably expressive rock-hewn edicts he used to both instruct his people, express remorse at the human suffering resulting from his battles, and delineate the enormous span of his territory. Some of these moral teachings can still be seen, particularly the Ashokan Edicts (p718) at Junagadh in Gujarat. Most of them mention and define the concept of dhamma, variously as good behaviour, obedience, generosity and goodness.

Ashoka's reign also represented an undoubted historical high point for Buddhism: he embraced the Buddha's teaching in 262 BC, declaring it the state religion and cutting a radical swathe through the spiritual and social body of Hinduism. The emperor also built thousands of stupas and monasteries across the region, the extant highlights of which are visible at Sarnath (p403) in Uttar Pradesh – on the spot where Buddha delivered his first sermon expounding the Noble Eightfold Path, or Middle Way to Enlightenment – and Sanchi (p652) in Madhya Pradesh. Ashoka also sent missions abroad, and he is revered in Sri Lanka because he sent his son and daughter to carry the Buddha's teaching to the island.

After his death and the empire's disintegration, his vision endured as an aspiration, if not a reality. One of this emperor's many legacies is the Indian national flag: its central design is the Ashoka Chakra, a wheel with 24 spokes.

their realms. Throughout the subcontinent, small tribes and kingdoms effectively controlled territory and dominated local affairs.

In AD 319, Chandragupta I, the third king of one of these tribes, the little-known Guptas, came to prominence by a fortuitous marriage to the daughter of one of the most powerful tribes in the north, the Liccavis. The Gupta empire grew rapidly and under Chandragupta II (r 375–413) achieved its greatest extent. The Chinese pilgrim Fa-hsien, visiting India at the time, described a people 'rich and contented', ruled over by enlightened and just kings.

Poetry, literature, astronomy, medicine and the arts flourished, with some of the finest work done at Ajanta, Ellora, Sanchi and Sarnath. The Guptas were tolerant of, and even supported, Buddhist practice and art. Towards the end of the Gupta period, Hinduism became the dominant religious force, however, and its revival eclipsed Jainism and Buddhism; the latter in particular went into decline in India with the Hun invasion and would never again be India's dominant tradition.

The invasions of the Huns at the beginning of the 6th century signalled the end of this era, and in 510 the Gupta army was defeated by the Hun leader Toramana. Power in North India again devolved to a number of separate Hindu kingdoms.

The Hindu South

Southern India has always laid claim to its own unique history. Insulated by distance from the political developments in the north, a separate set of powerful kingdoms emerged, among them the Satavahanas – who, though predominantly Hindu, probably practiced Buddhist meditation and patronised Buddhist art at Amaravathi and Sanchi – as well as the Kalingas and Vakatakas. But it was from the tribal territories on the fertile coastal plains that the greatest southern empires – the Cholas, Pandyas, Chalukyas, Cheras and Pallavas – came into their own.

The Chalukyas ruled mainly over the Deccan region of south-central India, although their power occasionally extended further north. In the far south, the Pallavas ruled from the 4th to 9th centuries and pioneered Dravidian architecture, with its exuberant, almost baroque, style. The surviving architectural high points of Pallava rule can be found across Tamil Nadu, including in the erstwhile Pallava capital at Kanchipuram (p1028).

The south's prosperity was based on long-established trading links with other civilisations, among them the Egyptians and Romans. In return for spices, pearls, ivory and silk, the Indians received Roman gold. Indian merchants also extended their influence to Southeast Asia. In 850, the Cholas rose to power and superseded the Pallavas. They soon set about turning the south's far-reaching trade influence into territorial conquest. Under the reign of Rajaraja Chola I (985–1014) they controlled almost the whole of South India, the Deccan plateau, Sri Lanka, parts of the Malay peninsula and the Sumatran-based Srivijaya kingdom.

Not all of their attention was focused overseas, however, and the Cholas left behind some of the finest examples of Dravidian architecture, most notably the sublime Brihadishwara Temple (p1047) in Thanjavur and Chidambaram's stunning Nataraja Temple (p1043).

Throughout, Hinduism remained the bedrock of South Indian culture.

The Muslim North

The first Muslims to reach India were some newly converted merchants crossing the Arabian sea in the early 7th century who established communities in some southern ports, and some small, pioneering Arabian forces in 663 from the north. Sporadic skirmishes took place over the ensuing centuries, but no major confrontations took place until the late 10th century. But at this point wave after wave of land assaults had begun convulsing the north.

At the vanguard of Islamic expansion was Mahmud of Ghazni. In the early 11th century, Mahmud turned Ghazni (in today's Afghanistan) into one of the world's most glorious capital cities, which he largely funded by plundering his neighbours' territories. From 1001 to 1025, Mahmud conducted 17 raids into India, most infamously on the famous Shiva Temple of Somnath (p714) in Gujarat. The Hindu force of 70,000 died trying to defend the temple, which eventually fell in early 1026. In the aftermath of his victory, Mahmud transported a massive haul of gold and other booty back to his capital. These raids effectively shattered the balance of power in North India, allowing subsequent invaders to claim the territory for themselves.

Following Mahmud's death in 1033, Ghazni was seized by the Seljuqs and then fell to the Ghurs of western Afghanistan, who similarly had their eyes on the great Indian prize. The Ghur style of warfare was brutal.

In 1191 Mohammed of Ghur advanced into India. Although defeated in a major battle against a confederacy of Hindu rulers, he returned the following year and routed his enemies. One of his generals, Qutb ud-din Aibak, captured Delhi and was appointed governor; it was during his reign that the great Delhi landmark, the Qutb Minar Complex (p102), containing India's first mosque, was built. A separate Islamic empire was established in Bengal, and within a short time almost the whole of North India was under Muslim control.

Following Mohammed's death in 1206, Qutb ud-din Aibak became the first sultan of Delhi. His successor, Iltutmish, brought Bengal back under central control and defended the empire from an attempted Mongol invasion. Ala-ud-din Khilji came to power in 1296 and pushed the borders of the empire inexorably south, while simultaneously fending off further attacks by the Mongols.

North Meets South

Ala-ud-din died in 1320, and Mohammed Tughlaq ascended the throne in 1324. In 1328, Tughlaq took the southern strongholds of the Hoysala empire, which had centres at Belur, Halebid and Somnathpur. However, while the empire of the pre-Mughal Muslims would achieve its greatest extent under Tughlaq's rule, his overreaching ambition also sowed the seeds of its disintegration. Unlike his forebears, Tughlaq dreamed not only of extending his indirect influence over South India, but of controlling it directly as part of his empire.

After a series of successful campaigns Tughlaq decided to move the capital from Delhi to a more central location. The new capital was called Daulatabad and was near Aurangabad in Maharashtra. Tughlaq sought to populate the new capital by forcefully marching the entire population of Delhi 1100km south, resulting in great loss of life. However, he soon realised that this left the north undefended, and so the entire capital was moved north again. The superb hilltop fortress of Daulatabad (p784) stands as the last surviving monument to his megalomaniac vision.

The days of the Ghur empire were numbered. The last of the great sultans of Delhi, Firoz Shah, died in 1388, and the fate of the sultanate was sealed when Timur (Tamerlane) made a devastating raid from Samarkand (in Central Asia) into India in 1398. Timur's sacking of Delhi was truly merciless; some accounts say his soldiers slaughtered every Hindu inhabitant.

After Tughlaq's withdrawal from the south, several splinter kingdoms arose. The two most significant were the Islamic Bahmani sultanate, which emerged in 1345 with its capital at Gulbarga, and later Bidar, and the Hindu Vijayanagar empire, founded in 1336 with its capital at Hampi. The battles between the two were among the bloodiest communal violence in Indian history and ultimately resolved nothing in the two centuries before the Mughals ushered in a more enlightened age.

The Mughals

Even as Vijayanagar was experiencing its last days, the next great Indian empire was being founded. The Mughal empire was massive, at its height covering almost the entire subcontinent. Its significance, however, lay not only in its size. Mughal emperors presided over a golden age of arts and literature and had a passion for building that resulted in some of the finest architecture in India, including Shah Jahan's sublime Taj Mahal (p352).

The founder of the Mughal line, Babur (r 1526–30), was a descendant of both Genghis Khan and Timur (Tamerlane). In 1525, he marched into Punjab from his capital at Kabul. With technological superiority brought by firearms, and consummate skill in simultaneously employing artillery and cavalry, Babur defeated the larger armies of the sultan of Delhi at the Battle of Panipat in 1526.

Despite this initial success, Babur's son, Humayun (r 1530–56) was defeated by a powerful ruler of eastern India, Sher Shah, in 1539 and forced to withdraw to Iran. Humayun spent much time outside India, a fact reflected in the design of his tomb in Delhi, which was designed by Persian architects and influenced by Iranian style. Following Sher Shah's death in 1545, Humayun returned to claim his kingdom, eventually conquering Delhi in 1555. He died the following year and was succeeded by his young son Akbar (r 1556–1605) who, during his 49-year reign, managed to extend and consolidate the empire until he ruled over a mammoth area.

True to his name, Akbar (which means 'great' in Arabic) was probably the greatest of the Mughals: he not only had the military ability required of a ruler at that time, but was also a wise leader and a man of culture. He saw, as previous Muslim rulers had not, that the number of Hindus in India was too great to subjugate. Although Akbar's tolerance of other cultures was relative – vast massacres of Hindus at Panipat and Chitrod tarnish his legacy – he remains known for integrating Hindus into his empire and skillfully using them as advisers, generals and administrators. Akbar also had a deep interest in religious matters, and spent many hours in discussion with religious experts of all persuasions, including Christians and Parsis.

THE STRUGGLE FOR THE SOUL OF INDIA

Founded as an alliance of Hindu kingdoms banding together to counter the threat from the Muslims, the Vijayanagar empire rapidly grew into one of India's wealthiest and greatest Hindu empires. Under the rule of Bukka I (c 1343–79), the majority of South India was brought under its control.

The Vijayanagars and the Bahmani sultanate, which was also based in South India, were evenly matched. The Vijayanagar armies occasionally got the upper hand, but generally the Bahmanis inflicted the worst defeats. The atrocities committed by both sides almost defy belief. In 1366, Bukka I responded to a perceived slight by capturing the Muslim stronghold of Mudkal and slaughtering every inhabitant bar one, who managed to escape and carry news of the attack to Mohammad Shah, the sultan. Mohammad swore that he would not rest until he had killed 100,000 Hindus. Instead, according to the Muslim historian Firishtah, 500,000 'infidels' were killed in the ensuing campaign.

Somehow, Vijayanagar survived. In 1484, the Bahmani sultanate began to disintegrate, and five separate kingdoms, based on the major cities – Berar, Ahmadnagar, Bidar, Bijapur and Golconda – were formed. Bijapur and Bidar still bear exceptional traces of this period of Islamic rule. With little opposition from the north, the Hindu empire enjoyed a golden age of almost supreme power in the south. In 1520, the Vijayanagar king Krishnadevaraya even took Bijapur.

Like Bahmani, however, Vijayanagar's fault lines were soon laid bare. A series of uprisings divided the kingdom fatally, just at a time when the Muslim sultanates were beginning to form a new alliance. In 1565, Hampi was destroyed at the Battle of Talikota. Although the last of the Vijayanagar line escaped and the dynasty limped on for several years, real power passed to local Muslim rulers or Hindu chiefs once loyal to the Vijayanagar kings. One of India's grisliest periods came to an end when the Bahmani kingdoms fell to the Mughals.

Jehangir (r 1605–27) ascended to the throne following Akbar's death. Despite several challenges to Jehangir's authority, the empire remained more or less intact. In periods of stability Jehangir spent time in his beloved Kashmir, eventually dying en route there in 1627. He was succeeded by his son, Shah Jahan (r 1627–58), who secured his position by executing all male relatives who stood in his way. During his reign, some of the most vivid and permanent reminders of the Mughals' glory were constructed; in addition to the Taj Mahal, he oversaw the construction of the mighty Red Fort (p60) (Lal Qila) in Delhi and converted the Agra Fort (p353) into a palace that would later become his prison.

The last of the great Mughals, Aurangzeb (r 1658–1707), imprisoned his father (Shah Jahan) and succeeded to the throne after a two-year struggle against his brothers. Aurangzeb devoted his resources to extending the empire's boundaries, and thus fell into much the same trap as that of Mohammed Tughlaq some 300 years earlier. A combination of decaying court life and dissatisfaction among the Hindu population at inflated taxes and religious intolerance weakened the Mughal grip.

The empire was also facing serious challenges from the Marathas in central India and, more significantly, the British in Bengal. With Aurangzeb's death in 1707, the empire's fortunes rapidly declined, and Delhi was sacked by Persia's Nadir Shah in 1739. Mughal 'emperors' continued to rule right up until the First War of Independence (Indian Uprising) in 1857, but they were emperors without an empire.

The Rajputs & the Marathas

Throughout the Mughal period, there remained strong Hindu powers, most notably the Rajputs. Centred in Rajasthan, the Rajputs were a proud warrior caste with a passionate belief in the dictates of chivalry, both in battle and state affairs. The Rajputs opposed every foreign incursion into their territory, but they were never united. When they weren't battling foreign oppression, they squandered their energies fighting one another. This eventually led to their territories becoming vassal states of the Mughal empire. Their prowess in battle, however, was acknowledged, and some of the best military men in the Mughal armies were Rajputs.

The Marathas were less picaresque but ultimately more effective. They first rose to prominence under their great leader Shivaji, also known as Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj, who gathered popular support by championing the Hindu cause against the Muslim rulers. Between 1646 and 1680 Shivaji performed heroic acts in confronting the Mughals across most of central India. Shivaji was captured by the Mughals and taken to Agra, but, naturally, he managed to escape and continue his adventures. Tales of his larger-than-life exploits are still popular with wandering storytellers. He is a particular hero in Maharashtra, where many of his wildest adventures took place. (Today, you'll see Shivaji's name all over Mumbai.) He's also revered for the fact that, as a lower-caste Shudra, he showed that great leaders don't have to be of the Kshatriya (soldier) caste.

Shivaji's son was captured, blinded and executed by Aurangzeb, and his grandson wasn't made of the same sturdy stuff, so the Maratha empire continued under the Peshwas, hereditary government ministers who became the real rulers. They gradually took over more of the weakening Mughal empire's powers.

The expansion of Maratha power came to an abrupt halt in 1761 at Panipat. In the town where Babur had won the battle that established the Mughal empire more than 200 years earlier, the Marathas were defeated by Ahmad Shah Durrani from Afghanistan. Maratha expansion to the west was halted, and although they consolidated their control over central India, they were to fall to India's final imperial power – the British.

The Rise of European Power

The Portuguese sought a sea route to the East so they could trade directly in spices. They also hoped to find the kingdom of legendary Christian ruler Prester John, thought to contain the fountain of youth. In India they found spices and the Syrian Orthodox community, but not Prester John.

In 1498, Vasco da Gama arrived on the coast of modern-day Kerala, having sailed around the Cape of Good Hope. Pioneering this route gave the Portuguese a century-long monopoly over Indian and far-Eastern trade with Europe. In 1510, they captured Goa, followed by Diu in 1531; Goa was last colony in India to be returned to the Indian people, following an Indian Army invasion in 1961. In its heyday, the trade flowing through 'Golden Goa' was said to rival that passing through Lisbon. However, the Portuguese didn't have the resources to maintain a worldwide empire and they were quickly eclipsed and isolated after the arrival of the British and French.

In 1600, Queen Elizabeth I granted a charter to a London trading company that gave it a monopoly on British trade with India. In 1613, representatives of the East India Company established their first trading post at Surat in Gujarat. Further British trading posts, administered and governed by representatives of the company, were established at Madras (Chennai) in 1639, Bombay (Mumbai) in 1661 and Calcutta (Kolkata) in 1690. For nearly 250 years a commercial trading company and not the British government 'ruled' over British India.

By 1672, the French had established themselves at Pondicherry (Puducherry), an enclave they held even after the British departed and where architectural traces of the French era remain. The stage was set for more than a century of rivalry between the British and French for control of Indian trade. At one stage, the French appeared to hold the upper hand, even taking Madras in 1746. But they were outmaneuvered by the British, and by the 1750s were no longer a serious influence on the subcontinent. Serious French aspirations effectively ended in 1750 when the directors of the French East India Company decided that their representatives were playing too much politics and doing too little trading. Key representatives were sacked, and a settlement designed to end all ongoing political disputes was made with the British. The decision effectively removed France as a serious influence on the subcontinent.

Britain's Surge to Power

in 1690, business began to expand rapidly. Under the apprehensive gaze of the nawab (local ruler), British trading activities became extensive and the 'factories' took on an increasingly permanent (and fortified) appearance.

Eventually the nawab decided that British power had grown large enough. In June 1756, he attacked Calcutta and, having taken the city, locked his British prisoners in a tiny cell. The space was so cramped and airless that many were dead by the following morning.

Six months later, Robert Clive, an employee in the military service of the East India Company, led an expedition to retake Calcutta and entered into an agreement with one of the nawab's generals to overthrow the nawab himself. He did this in June 1757, at the Battle of Plassey (now called Palashi), and the general who had assisted him was placed on the throne. With the British effectively in control of Bengal, the company's agents engaged in a period of unbridled profiteering. When a subsequent nawab finally took up arms to protect his own interests, he was defeated at the Battle of Baksar in 1764, a victory that confirmed the British as the paramount power in east India.

In 1771, Warren Hastings was made governor in Bengal. During his tenure, the company greatly expanded its control. He was aided by the fact that India was experiencing a power vacuum created by the disintegration of the Mughal empire. The Marathas, the only real Indian power to step into this gap, were divided among themselves. Hastings concluded a series of treaties with local rulers, including one with the main Maratha leader. From 1784 onwards, the British government in London began to take a more direct role in supervising affairs in India, although the territory was still notionally administered by the East India Company until 1858.

In the south, the picture was confused by the strong British–French rivalry, and one ruler was played off against another. This was never clearer than in the series of Mysore wars in which Hyder Ali and his son, Tipu Sultan, waged a brave and determined campaign against the British. In the Fourth Mysore War (1789–99), Tipu Sultan was killed at Srirangapatnam, and British power took another step forward. The long-running struggle with the Marathas was concluded a few years later, leaving only Punjab (held by the Sikhs) outside British control. Punjab finally fell in 1849 after the two Sikh Wars.

By the early 19th century, India was effectively under British control, although there remained a patchwork of states, many nominally independent and governed by their own rulers, the maharajas (or similarly titled princes) and nawabs. While these 'princely states' administered their own territories, a system of central government was developed. British bureaucratic models were replicated in the Indian government and civil service – a legacy that still exists today. Trade and profit continued to be the main focus of British rule in India, with far-reaching effects. Iron and coal mining were developed, and tea, coffee and cotton became key crops. A start was made on the vast rail network that's still in use today, irrigation projects were undertaken, and the Mughal-era zamindar (land-owner) system was encouraged, further contributing to the development of an impoverished and landless peasantry.

The British also imposed English as the language of administration. For them, this was critical in a country with so many different languages, but it also kept the new rulers at arm's length from the Indian populace.

The Road to Independence

Opposition to the British increased at the turn of the 20th century, spearheaded by the Indian National Congress, the country's oldest political party, also known as the Congress Party and Congress.

It met for the first time in 1885 and soon began to push for participation in the government of India. A highly unpopular attempt by the British to partition Bengal in 1905 resulted in mass demonstrations and brought to light Hindu opposition to the division; the Muslim community formed its own league and campaigned for protected rights in any future political settlement. As pressure rose, a split emerged in Hindu circles between moderates and radicals, the latter resorting to violence to publicise their aims.

With the outbreak of WWI, the political situation eased. India contributed hugely to the war: more than one million Indian volunteers were enlisted and sent overseas, suffering more than 100,000 casualties. The contribution was sanctioned by Congress leaders, largely with the expectation that it would be rewarded after the war. No such rewards transpired and disillusion followed. Disturbances were particularly persistent in Punjab, and in April 1919, following riots in Amritsar, a British army contingent was sent to quell the unrest. Under direct orders of the officer in charge, they ruthlessly fired into a crowd of unarmed protesters at Jallianwala Bagh (p214). News of the massacre spread rapidly throughout India, turning huge numbers of otherwise apolitical Indians into Congress supporters.

At this time, the Congress movement found a new leader in Mohandas Gandhi. Not everyone involved in the struggle agreed with or followed Gandhi's policy of nonviolence, yet the Congress Party and Gandhi remained at the forefront of the push for independence.

As political power-sharing began to look more likely, and the mass movement led by Gandhi gained momentum, the Muslim reaction was to consider its own immediate future. The large Muslim minority realised that an independent India would be dominated by Hindus and that, while Gandhi's approach was fair-minded, others in the Congress Party might not be so willing to share power. By the 1930s Muslims were raising the possibility of a separate Islamic state.

Political events were partially disrupted by WWII, when large numbers of Congress supporters were jailed to prevent disruption to the war effort.

THE FIRST WAR OF INDEPENDENCE: THE INDIAN UPRISING

In 1857, half a century after having established firm control of India, the British suffered a setback. To this day, the causes of the Indian Uprising are the subject of debate. The key factors included the influx of cheap goods, such as textiles, from Britain that destroyed many livelihoods; the dispossession of territories from many rulers; and taxes imposed on landowners.

The incident that's popularly held to have sparked the Indian Uprising, however, took place at an army barracks in Meerut in Uttar Pradesh on 10 May 1857. A rumour leaked out that a new type of bullet was greased with what Hindus claimed was cow fat, while Muslims maintained that it came from pigs; pigs are considered unclean to Muslims, and cows are sacred to Hindus. Since loading a rifle involved biting the end off the waxed cartridge, these rumours provoked considerable unrest.

In Meerut, the situation was handled with a singular lack of judgment. The commanding officer lined up his soldiers and ordered them to bite off the ends of their issued bullets. Those who refused were immediately marched off to prison. The following morning, the soldiers of the garrison rebelled, shot their officers and marched to Delhi. Of the 74 Indian battalions of the Bengal army, seven (one of them Gurkhas) remained loyal, 20 were disarmed and the other 47 mutinied. The soldiers and peasants rallied around the ageing Mughal emperor in Delhi. They held Delhi for some months and besieged the British residency in Lucknow for five months before they were finally suppressed.

Almost immediately the East India Company was wound up and direct control of the country was assumed by the British government, which announced its support for the existing rulers of the princely states, claiming they would not interfere in local matters as long as the states remained loyal to the British.

Mahatma Gandhi

One of the great figures of the 20th century, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi was born on 2 October 1869 in Porbandar, Gujarat. After studying in London (1888–91), he worked as a barrister in South Africa. Here, the young Gandhi became politicised, railing against the discrimination he encountered. He soon became the spokesperson for the Indian community and championed equality for all.

Gandhi returned to India in 1915 with the doctrine of ahimsa (non-violence) central to his political plans, and committed to a simple and disciplined lifestyle. He set up the Sabarmati Ashram in Ahmedabad, which was innovative for its admission of Untouchables.

Within a year, Gandhi had won his first victory, defending farmers in Bihar from exploitation. This was when it's said he first received the title 'Mahatma' (Great Soul) from an admirer (often said to be Bengali poet Rabindranath Tagore). The passage of the discriminatory Rowlatt Acts, which allowed certain political cases to be tried without juries, in 1919 spurred him to further action, and he organised a national protest. In the days that followed this hartal (strike), feelings ran high throughout the country. After the massacre of unarmed protesters in Amritsar, Gandhi, deeply shocked, began to organise his program of civil (nonviolent) disobedience against the British.

By 1920 Gandhi was a key figure in the Indian National Congress, and he coordinated a national campaign of noncooperation or satyagraha (non-violent protest) to British rule, with the effect of raising nationalist feeling while earning the lasting enmity of the British. In early 1930, Gandhi captured the imagination of the country, and the world, when he led a march of several thousand followers from Ahmedabad to Dandi on the coast of Gujarat. On arrival, Gandhi ceremoniously made salt by evaporating sea water, thus publicly defying the much-hated salt tax; not for the first time, he was imprisoned. Released in 1931 to represent the Indian National Congress at the second Round Table Conference in London, he won the hearts of many British people but failed to gain any real concessions from the government.

Disillusioned with politics, he resigned his parliamentary seat in 1934. He returned spectacularly to the fray in 1942 with the Quit India campaign, in which he urged the British to leave India immediately. His actions were deemed subversive, and he and most of the Congress leadership were imprisoned.

In the frantic independence bargaining that followed the end of WWII, Gandhi was largely excluded and watched helplessly as plans were made to partition the country – a dire tragedy in his eyes. Gandhi stood almost alone in urging tolerance and the preservation of a single India, and his work on behalf of members of all communities drew resentment from some Hindu hardliners. On his way to a prayer meeting in Delhi on 30 January 1948, he was assassinated by a Hindu zealot, Nathuram Godse.

Independence & the Partition of India

The Labour Party victory in the British elections in July 1945 dramatically altered the political landscape. For the first time, Indian independence was accepted as a legitimate goal. This new goodwill did not, however, translate into any new wisdom as to how to reconcile the divergent wishes of the two major Indian parties. Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the leader of the Muslim League, championed a separate Islamic state, while the Congress Party, led by Jawaharlal Nehru, campaigned for an independent greater India.

In early 1946, a British mission failed to bring the two sides together – indeed, there was evidence that the British deliberately fostered resentment on both sides to discourage a unified resistance – and the country slid closer towards civil war. A 'Direct Action Day', called by the Muslim League in August 1946, led to the slaughter of Hindus in Calcutta, which prompted reprisals against Muslims. In February 1947, the nervous British government made the momentous decision that Independence would come by June 1948. In the meantime, the viceroy, Lord Archibald Wavell, was replaced by Lord Louis Mountbatten.

The new viceroy encouraged the rival factions to agree upon a united India, but to no avail. A decision was made to divide the country, with Gandhi the only staunch opponent. Faced with increasing civil violence, Mountbatten made the precipitous decision to bring forward Independence to 15 August 1947.

Dividing the country into separate Hindu and Muslim territories was immensely tricky; the dividing line proved almost impossible to draw. Some areas were clearly Hindu or Muslim, but others had evenly mixed populations, and there were 'islands' of communities in areas predominantly settled by other religions. Moreover, the two overwhelmingly Muslim regions were on opposite sides of the country and, therefore, Pakistan would inevitably have an eastern and western half divided by a hostile India. The instability of this arrangement was self-evident, but it was 25 years before the split finally came and East Pakistan became Bangladesh.

An independent British referee was given the odious task of drawing the borders, well aware that the effects would be catastrophic for countless people. The decisions were fraught with impossible dilemmas. Calcutta, with its Hindu majority, port facilities and jute mills, was divided from East Bengal, which had a Muslim majority, large-scale jute production, no mills and no port facilities. One million Bengalis became refugees in the mass movement across the new border.

The problem was worse in Punjab, where intercommunity antagonisms were already running at fever pitch. Punjab, one of the most fertile and affluent regions of the country, had large Muslim, Hindu and Sikh communities. The Sikhs had already campaigned unsuccessfully for their own state and now saw their homeland divided down the middle. The new border ran straight between Punjab's two major cities, Lahore and Amritsar. Prior to Independence, Lahore's population of 1.2 million included approximately 500,000 Hindus and 100,000 Sikhs. When the dust had finally settled, roughly 1000 Hindus and Sikhs remained.

Punjab contained all the ingredients for an epic disaster, but the resulting bloodshed was far worse than anticipated. Huge population exchanges took place. Trains full of Muslims, fleeing westward, were held up and slaughtered by Hindu and Sikh mobs. Hindus and Sikhs fleeing to the east suffered the same fate at Muslim hands. The army that was sent to maintain order proved totally inadequate and, at times, all too ready to join the sectarian carnage. By the time the Punjab chaos had run its course, more than 10 million people had changed sides and at least 500,000 had been killed.

India and Pakistan became sovereign nations under the British Commonwealth in August 1947, but the violence, migrations and the integration of a few states, especially Kashmir, continued. The Constitution of India was at

THE KASHMIR CONFLICT

Kashmir is the most enduring symbol of the turbulent partition of India. In the lead up to Independence, the delicate task of drawing the India–Pakistan border was complicated by the fact that India's 'princely states' were nominally independent. As part of the settlement process, local rulers were asked which country they wished to belong to. Kashmir was a predominantly Muslim state with a Hindu maharaja, Hari Singh, who tried to delay his decision. A ragtag Pashtun (Pakistani) army crossed the border, intent on racing to Srinagar and annexing Kashmir for Pakistan. In the face of this advance, the maharaja panicked and requested armed assistance from India. The Indian army arrived only just in time to prevent the fall of Srinagar, and the maharaja signed the Instrument of Accession, tying Kashmir to India, in October 1947. The legality of the document was immediately disputed by Pakistan, and the two nations went to war, just two months after Independence.

In 1948, the fledgling UN Security Council called for a referendum (which remains a central plank of Pakistani policy) to decide the status of Kashmir. A UN-brokered ceasefire in 1949 kept the countries on either side of a demarcation line, called the Cease-Fire Line (later to become the Line of Control, or LOC), with little else resolved. Two-thirds of Kashmir fell on the Indian side of the LOC, which remains the frontier, but neither side accepts this as the official border. The Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir, as it has stood since that time, incorporates Ladakh (divided between Muslims and Buddhists), Jammu (with a Hindu majority) and the 130km-long, 55km-wide Kashmir Valley (with a Muslim majority and most of the state's inhabitants). On the Pakistani side, over three million Kashmiris live in Azad (Free) Kashmir, known to Indians as Pakistan Occupied Kashmir (POK). Since the frontier was drawn, incursions across the LOC have occurred with dangerous regularity.

In 1989–90, the majority of Kashmiri Pandits (pandit means scholar, usually referring to a particular Hindu community of Brahmins), fled their homes following persecution and murder by extremists among the Muslim majority. Up to 170,000 left, many settling in refugee camps around Jammu. In 2014, President Mukherjee, when outlining the Modi government's five-year programme, pledged the Pandits would be helped to return 'to the land of their ancestors with full dignity, security and assured livelihood'.

last adopted in November 1949 and went into effect on 26 January, 1950, and, after untold struggles, independent India officially became a Republic.

After Independence

Jawaharlal Nehru tried to steer India towards a policy of nonalignment, balancing cordial relations with Britain and Commonwealth membership with moves towards the former USSR. The latter was due partly to conflicts with China, and US support for its arch-enemy Pakistan.

The 1960s and 1970s were tumultuous times for India. A border war with China in what was then known as the North-East Frontier Area (NEFA; now the Northeast States) and Ladakh, resulted in the loss of Aksai Chin (Ladakh) and smaller NEFA areas. Wars with Pakistan in 1965 (over Kashmir) and 1971 (over Bangladesh) also contributed to a sense among many Indians of having enemies on all sides.

In the midst of it all, the hugely popular Nehru died in 1964 and his daughter Indira Gandhi (no relation to Mahatma Gandhi) was elected as prime minister in 1966. Indira Gandhi, like Nehru before her, loomed large over the country she governed. Unlike Nehru, however, she was always a profoundly controversial figure whose historical legacy remains hotly disputed.

In 1975, facing serious opposition and unrest, she declared a state of emergency (which later became known as the Emergency). Freed of parliamentary constraints, Gandhi was able to boost the economy, control inflation remarkably well and decisively increase efficiency. On the negative side, political opponents often found themselves in prison, India's judicial system was turned into a puppet theatre and the press was fettered.

Gandhi's government was bundled out of office in the 1977 elections, but the 1980 election brought Indira Gandhi back to power with a larger majority than ever before, firmly laying the foundation for the Nehru-Gandhi family dynasty that would continue to dominate Indian politics for decades. Indira Gandhi was assassinated in 1984 by one of her Sikh bodyguards after her decision to attack the Golden Temple which was being occupied by fundamentalist Sikh preacher, Sant Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale. Her son Rajiv took over and was subsequently killed in a suicide bomb attack in 1991. His widow, Sonia, later became president, with Manmohan Singh as Prime Minister. However, the Congress party lost popularity as the economy slowed, and have been accused of cronyism and corruption.

The 2014 Federal elections saw the unpopular Congress party suffer a humiliating defeat under the shaky leadership of Rahul Gandhi, Indira's grandson. The BJP, headed by Narendra Modi, swept to power in a landslide victory (for more on this see India Today, p1104). Modi, former chief minister of Gujarat, who oversaw the state's transformation into an economic powerhouse, is a forceful, charismatic premier, hugely popular with business leaders and the BJP's Hindu-nationalist traditionalists, as well as with the ordinary man on the street.

However, some continue to ask questions about Modi's role in the deadly riots in Gujarat in 2002, which killed nearly 1000 people, most of them Muslims. Despite an official inquiry in 2014 which cleared the prime minister of any wrong-doing, allegations still circulate that the Gujarat government was complicit in the violence, which was triggered by a deadly arson attack on a train carrying Hindu pilgrims from Ayodhya. Nevertheless, as prime minister, Modi has thus far offered vision and hope, and a secular approach, which has inspired the country and provided new impetus both at home and abroad.

The Way of Life

Spirituality is the common thread in the richly diverse tapestry that is India. It, along with family, lies at the heart of society, and these two tenets intertwine in ceremonies to celebrate life's milestones. Despite the rising number of nuclear families – primarily in the more cosmopolitan cities such as Mumbai, Bengaluru and Delhi – the extended family remains a cornerstone in both urban and rural India, with males – usually the breadwinners – considered the head of the household.

Marriage, Birth & Death

Different religions practice different traditions, but for all communities, marriage, birth and death are important and marked with traditional ceremonies according to the faith. Hindus are in the majority in India. Barely 15% of the population are Muslim (though, at 180 million, Indian Muslims roughly equal the population of Pakistan).

Marriage is an exceptionally auspicious event for Indians – for most Indians, the idea of being unmarried by their mid-30s is unpalatable. Although 'love marriages' have spiralled upwards in recent times (mainly in urban hubs), most Indian marriages are still arranged, be the family Hindu, Muslim, Sikh or Buddhist. Discreet enquiries are made within the community. If a suitable match is not found, the help of professional matchmakers may be sought, or advertisements may be placed in newspapers and/or on the internet. In Hindu families, the horoscopes of both potential partners are checked and, if propitious, there's a meeting between the two families.

Dowry, although illegal, is still a key issue in more than a few arranged marriages (mostly in conservative communities), with some families plunging into debt to raise the required cash and merchandise (from cars and computers to refrigerators and televisions). Health workers claim that India's high rate of abortion of female foetuses (sex identification medical tests are banned in India, but they still clandestinely occur in some clinics) is predominantly due to the financial burden of providing a daughter's dowry. Muslim grooms have to pay what is called a mehr to the bride.

The Hindu wedding ceremony is officiated over by a priest and the marriage is formalised when the couple walk around a sacred fire seven times. Muslim ceremonies involve the reading of the Qu'ran, and traditionally the husband and wife view each other via mirrors. Despite the existence of nuclear families, it's still the norm for a wife to live with her husband's family once married and assume the household duties outlined by her mother-in-law. Not surprisingly, the mother-daughter-in-law relationship can be a tricky one, as portrayed in various Indian TV soap operas.

Divorce and remarriage is becoming more common (primarily in bigger cities), but divorce is still not granted by courts as a matter of routine and is not looked upon very favourably by society. Among the higher castes, in more traditional areas, widows are traditionally expected not to remarry and are expected to wear white and live pious, celibate lives. It is still legal for Muslim males in India to obtain oral divorce according to sharia law (by uttering the word talaq meaning 'divorce' three times).

The Wonder That Was India by AL Basham gives descriptions of Indian civilisations, major religions and social customs – a good thematic approach to weave the disparate strands together.

The birth of a child is another momentous occasion, with its own set of special ceremonies which take place at various auspicious times during the early years of childhood. For Hindus these include the casting of the child's first horoscope, name-giving, feeding the first solid food, and the first hair cutting.

Hindus cremate their dead, and funeral ceremonies are designed to purify and console both the living and the deceased. An important aspect of the proceedings is the sharadda, paying respect to one's ancestors by offering water and rice cakes. It's an observance that's repeated at each anniversary of the death. After the cremation, the ashes are collected and, 13 days after the death (when blood relatives are deemed ritually pure), a member of the family usually scatters them in a holy river such as the Ganges or in the ocean. Sikhs similarly wash then cremate their dead. Muslims also prepare their dead carefully, but bury them, while the minority Zoroastrian Parsi community place their dead in 'Towers of Silence' (stone towers) to be devoured by birds.

Matchmaking has, inevitably, gone online, with popular sites including www.shaaadi.com, www.bharatmatrimony.com and, in a sign of the times, www.second-shaadi.com – for those seeking a partner again.

The Caste System

Although the Indian constitution does not recognise the caste system, caste still wields powerful influence, especially in rural India, where the caste you are born into largely determines your social standing in the community. It can also influence your vocational and marriage prospects. Castes are further divided into thousands of jati, groups of 'families' or social communities, which are sometimes but not always linked to occupation. Conservative Hindus will only marry someone of the same jati, and you'll often see caste as a criteria in matrimonial adverts, 'Mahar seeks Mahar', etc. In some traditional areas, young men and women who fall in love outside their caste have been murdered.

According to tradition, caste is the basic social structure of Hindu society. Living a righteous life and fulfilling your dharma (moral duty) raises your chances of being reborn into a higher caste and thus into better circumstances. Hindus are born into one of four varnas (castes): Brahmin (priests and scholars), Kshatriya (soldiers and administrators), Vaishya (merchants) and Shudra (labourers). The Brahmins were said to have emerged from the mouth of Lord Brahma at the moment of creation, Kshatriyas were said to have come from his arms, Vaishyas from his thighs and Shudras from his feet. Beneath the four main castes are the

INDIAN ATTIRE

Widely worn by Indian women, the elegant sari comes in a single piece (between 5m and 9m long and 1m wide) and is ingeniously tucked and pleated into place without the need for pins or buttons. Worn with the sari is the choli (tight-fitting blouse) and a drawstring petticoat. The palloo is the part of the sari draped over the shoulder. Also commonly worn is the salwar kameez, a traditional dresslike tunic and trouser combination accompanied by a dupatta (long scarf). Saris and salwar kameez come in a fantastic range of fabrics, colours and designs.

Traditional attire for men includes the dhoti, and in the south, the lungi and the mundu. The dhoti is a loose, long loincloth pulled up between the legs. The lungi is more like a sarong, with its end usually sewn up like a tube. The mundu is like a lungi but is always white. A kurta (shirt) is a long tunic or shirt worn mainly by men, usually with no collar. Kurta pyjama are a cotton shirt and trousers set worn for relaxing or sleeping. Churidar are close-fitting trousers often worn under a kurta. A sherwani is a long coat-like men's garment, which originated as a fusion of the salwar kameez with the British frock coat.

There are regional and religious variations in costume – for example, you may see Muslim women wearing the all-enveloping burka.

RANGOLIS

Rangolis, the striking and breathtakingly intricate chalk, rice-paste or coloured powder designs (also called kolams) that adorn thresholds, especially in South India, are both auspicious and symbolic. Rangolis are traditionally drawn at sunrise and are sometimes made of rice-flour paste, which may be eaten by little creatures – symbolising a reverence for even the smallest living things. Deities are deemed to be attracted to a beautiful rangoli, which may also signal to sadhus (ascetics) that they will be offered food at a particular house. Some people believe that rangolis protect against the evil eye.

Based on Rabindranath Tagore's novel, Chokher Bali (directed by Rituparno Ghosh) is a poignant film about a young widow living in early-20th-century Bengal who challenges the 'rules of widowhood' – something unthinkable in that era.

Dalits (formerly known as Untouchables), who hold menial jobs such as sweepers and latrine cleaners. Many of India's complex codes of ritual purity were devised to prevent physical contact between people of higher castes and Dalits. A less rigid system exists in Islamic communities in India, with society divided into ashraf (high born), ajlaf (low born) and arzal (equivalent to the Dalits).

The word 'pariah' is derived from the name of a Tamil Dalit group, the Paraiyars. Some Dalit leaders, such as the renowned Dr BR Ambedkar (1891–1956), sought to change their status by adopting another faith; in his case it was Buddhism. At the bottom of the social heap are the Denotified Tribes. They were known as the Criminal Tribes until 1952, when a reforming law officially recognised 198 tribes and castes. Many are nomadic or seminomadic tribes, forced by the wider community to eke out a living on society's fringes.

To improve the Dalits' position, the government reserves considerable numbers of public-sector jobs, parliamentary seats and university places for them. Today these quotas account for almost 25% of government jobs and university (student) positions. The situation varies regionally, as different political leaders chase caste vote-banks by promising to include them in reservations. The reservation system, while generally regarded in a favourable light, has also been criticised for unfairly blocking tertiary and employment opportunities for those who would have otherwise got positions on merit. On the other hand, there are still regular examples of discrimination against Dalits in daily life, for example, higher castes denying them entry into certain temples.

Pilgrimage

Devout Hindus are expected to go on a yatra (pilgrimage) at least once a year. Pilgrimages are undertaken to implore the gods or goddesses to grant a wish, to take the ashes of a cremated relative to a holy river, or to gain spiritual merit. India has thousands of holy sites to which pilgrims travel; the elderly often make Varanasi their final one, as it's believed that dying in this sacred city releases a person from the cycle of rebirth. Sufi shrines in India attract thousands of Muslims to commemorate holy days, such as the birthday of a sufi saint, and many Muslims also make the hajj to Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

Most festivals in India have religious roots and are thus a magnet for throngs of pilgrims. Remember that most festivals are spiritual occasions, even those that have a carnivalesque sheen. Also be aware that there are deaths at festivals every year because of stampedes, so be cautious in crowds.

Women in India

According to the most recent census, in 2011, India's population is comprised of 586 million women, with an estimated 68% of those working (mostly as labourers) in the agricultural sector.

Sati: A Study of Widow Burning in India by Sakuntala Narasimhan explores the history of sati (a widow's suicide on her husband's funeral pyre; now banned) on the subcontinent.

Women in India are entitled to vote and own property. While the percentage of women in politics has risen over the past decade, they're still notably underrepresented in the national parliament, accounting for 11% of parliamentary members.

Although the professions are male dominated, women are steadily making inroads, especially in urban centres. Kerala was India's first state to break societal norms by recruiting female police officers in 1938. It was also the first state to establish an all-female police station (1973). For village women it's much more difficult to get ahead, but groups such as the Self-Employed Women's Association (SEWA) in Gujarat have shown what's possible, organising socially disadvantaged women into unions and offering microfinance loans.

In low-income families, especially, girls can be regarded as a serious financial liability because at marriage a dowry must often be supplied.

For the urban middle-class woman, life is much more comfortable, but pressures still exist. Broadly speaking, she is far more likely to receive a tertiary education, but once married is still usually expected to 'fit in' with her in-laws and be a homemaker above all else. Like her village counterpart, if she fails to live up to expectations – even if it's just not being able to produce a grandson – the consequences can sometimes be dire, as demonstrated by the extreme practice of 'bride burning', wherein a wife is doused with flammable liquid and set alight. In 2013, the National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB) figures reported 8083 incidences, almost one every hour.

Although the constitution allows for divorcees (and widows) to remarry, relatively few reportedly do so, simply because divorcees are traditionally considered outcasts from society, most evidently so beyond big cities. Divorce rates in India are among the world's lowest, though they are steadily rising. Most divorces take place in urban centres and are deemed less socially unacceptable among those occupying the upper echelons of society.

In October 2006, following women's civil rights campaigns, the Indian parliament passed a landmark bill (on top of existing legislation) which gives women who are suffering domestic violence increased protection and rights. Prior to this legislation, although women could lodge police complaints against abusive spouses, they weren't automatically entitled to a share of the marital property or to ongoing financial support. Critics

ADIVASIS

India's Adivasis (tribal communities; Adivasi translates to 'original inhabitant' in Sanskrit) have origins that precede the Vedic Aryans and the Dravidians of the south. These groups range from the Gondi of the central plains to the animist tribes of the Northeast States. Today, they constitute less than 10% of the population and are comprised of more than 400 different tribal groups. The literacy rate for Adivasis is significantly below the national average.

Historically, contact between Adivasis and Hindu villagers on the plains rarely led to friction as there was little or no competition for resources and land. However, in recent decades an increasing number of Adivasis have been dispossessed of their ancestral land and turned into impoverished labourers. Although they still have political representation thanks to a parliamentary quota system, the dispossession and exploitation of Adivasis have reportedly sometimes been with the connivance of officialdom – an accusation the government denies. Whatever the arguments, unless more is done, the Adivasis' future is an uncertain one.

claim that many women, especially those outside India's larger cities, are still reluctant to seek legal protection because of the social stigma involved. And despite legal reforms, conviction rates remain low enough for perpetrators to feel a sense of impunity.

India remains an extremely prudish and conservative society, and despite the highly sexualised images of women churned out in Bollywood movies (although kissing is still rarely seen on screen), it's considered by many traditionally minded people that a woman is somehow wanton if she so much as goes out after dark.

According to India's National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB), reported incidences of rape have gone up over 50% in the last 10 years, but it's believed that only a small percentage of sexual assaults are reported, largely due to family pressure and/or shame, especially if the perpetrator is known to the family (which is true in many cases).

Following the highly publicised gang-rape and murder of a 23-year-old Indian physiotherapy student in Delhi in December 2012, tens of thousands of people protested in the capital, and beyond, demanding swift government action to address the country's escalating gender-based violence. It took a further year before legal amendments were made to existing laws to address the problem of sexual violence, including stiffer punishments such as life imprisonment and the death penalty (but there is still limited recognition of marital rape, and government permission is necessary before security forces can be prosecuted for criminal offences). Despite the action taken, more shocking cases are horrifyingly regular occurrences. The NCRB reported that in 2013, 309,546 crimes were against women. Of these, 33,707 were rape and 70,739 were molestation. The conviction rate for rape was 27.1% in 2013. It's doubtless that sexual violence is a pervasive social problem in India. ## Sport

Cricket has long been engraved on the nation's heart, with the first recorded match in 1721, and India's first test match victory in 1952 in Chennai against England. It's not only a national sporting obsession, but a matter of enormous patriotism, especially evident whenever India plays against Pakistan. Matches between these South Asian neighbours – which have had rocky relations since Independence – attract especially passionate support, and the players of both sides are under immense pressure to do their respective countries proud. The most celebrated Indian cricketer of recent years is Sachin Tendulkar – fondly dubbed the 'Little Master' – who, in 2012, became the world's only player to score 100 international centuries, retiring on a high the following year. Cricket – especially the

HIJRAS

India's most visible nonheterosexual group is the hijras, a caste of transvestites and eunuchs who dress in women's clothing. Some are gay, some are hermaphrodites and some were unfortunate enough to be kidnapped and castrated. Hijras have long had a place in Indian culture, and in 2014 the Indian Supreme Court recognised hijras as a third gender and as a class entitled to reservation in education and jobs. Conversely, in 2013, homosexuality was ruled to be unlawful (having been legal since 2009).

Hijras work mainly as uninvited entertainers at weddings and celebrations of the birth of male children, and possibly as prostitutes. In 2014, Padmini Prakash became India's first transgender daily television news show anchor, indicating a new level of acceptance.

Twenty20 format (www.cricket20.com) – is big business in India, attracting lucrative sponsorship deals and celebrity status for its players. The sport has not been without its murky side though, with Indian cricketers among those embroiled in match-fixing scandals over past years. The launch of the Indian Super League (ISL; www.indiansuperleague.com) in 2013 has achieved its aim of promoting football as a big-time, big-money sport. With games attracting huge crowds and international players, such as the legendary Juventus footballer Alessandro del Piero (who was signed for the Delhi Dynamos in 2014) or Marco Materazzi (of World Cup headbut fame) as trainer of Chennai, the ISL has become an international talking point. The first week of the ISL in 2014 had 170.6m viewers in the first week – the figures for the first phase of the Indian Premier League cricket was 184m, which gives a sense of football's growth in popularity. The I-League is the longer-running domestic league, but it has never attracted such media attention or funding.

The country is also known for its historical links to horse polo, which intermittently thrived on the subcontinent (especially among nobility) until Independence, after which patronage steeply declined due to dwindling funds. Today there's a renewed interest in polo thanks to beefed-up sponsorship and, although it still remains an elite sport, it's attracting more attention from the country's burgeoning upper middle class. The origins of polo are not completely clear. Believed to have its roots in Persia and China around 2000 years ago, on the subcontinent it's thought to have first been played in Baltistan (in present-day Pakistan). Some say that Emperor Akbar (who reigned in India from 1556 to 1605) first introduced rules to the game, but that polo, as it's played today, was largely influenced by a British cavalry regiment stationed in India during the 1870s. A set of international rules was implemented after WWI. The world's oldest surviving polo club, established in 1862, is in Kolkata (Calcutta Polo Club; www.calcuttapolo.com). Polo takes place during the cooler winter months in major cities, including Delhi, Jaipur, Mumbai and Kolkata. It is also occasionally played in Ladakh and Manipur.

Although officially the national sport, field hockey no longer enjoys the same fervent following it once did, though currently India's national men's/women's hockey world rankings are 9/13 respectively. During its golden era, between 1928 and 1956, India won six consecutive Olympic gold medals in hockey; it later bagged two further Olympic gold medals, one in 1964 and the other in 1980. Recent initiatives to ignite renewed interest in the game have had mixed results. Tap into India's hockey scene at Indian Hockey (www.indianhockey.com) and Indian Field Hockey (www.bharatiyahockey.org).

Kabaddi is another popular competitive sport in the region. Two teams occupy two sides of a court. A raider runs into the opposing side, taking a breath and try to tag one or more members of the opposite team. The raider chants 'kabaddi' repeatedly to show that they have not taken a breath, returning to the home half before exhaling.

Other sports gaining ground in India include tennis (the country's star performers are Sania Mirza, Leander Paes and Mahesh Bhupathi – to delve deeper, click www.aitatennis.com) and horse racing, which is reasonably popular in the larger cities such as Mumbai, Delhi, Kolkata and Bengaluru.

If you're interested in catching a sports match during your time in India, consult local newspapers (or ask at a tourist office) for current details about dates and venues.

Several of the Indian Super League teams are co-owned by Bollywood superstars, for example, Pune by Hrithik Roshan, and Chennai by Abhishek Bachchan.

Spiritual India

From elaborate city shrines to simple village temples, spirituality suffuses almost every facet of life in India. The nation's major faith, Hinduism, is practised by around 80% of the population and it is one of the world's oldest extant religions, with roots extending beyond 1000 BC. Buddhism, Jainism and Zoroastrianism have a similarly historic pedigree in India. The mind-stirring sight of sacred architecture, and the soul-warming sound of bhajans (devotional songs) and qawwali (Islamic devotional singing) are bound to burn bright in your memory long after you've left India.

Hinduism

Hinduism has no founder or central authority and it isn't a proselytising religion. Essentially, Hindus believe in Brahman, who is eternal, uncreated and infinite. Everything that exists emanates from Brahman and will ultimately return to it. The multitude of gods and goddesses are merely manifestations – knowable aspects of this formless phenomenon.

Hindus believe that earthly life is cyclical: you are born again and again (a process known as samsara), the quality of these rebirths being dependent upon your karma (conduct or action) in previous lives. Living a righteous life and fulfilling your dharma (moral code of behaviour; social duty) will enhance your chances of being born into a higher caste and better circumstances. Alternatively, if enough bad karma has accumulated, rebirth may take animal form. But it's only as a human that you can gain sufficient self-knowledge to escape the cycle of reincarnation and achieve moksha (liberation).

Gods & Goddesses

All Hindu deities are regarded as a manifestation of Brahman, who is often described as having three main representations, the Trimurti: Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva.

Brahman

The One; the ultimate reality. Brahman is formless, eternal and the source of all existence. Brahman is nirguna (without attributes), as opposed to all the other gods and goddesses, which are manifestations of Brahman and therefore saguna (with attributes).

Brahma

Only during the creation of the universe does Brahma play an active role. At other times he is in meditation. His consort is Saraswati, the goddess of learning, and his vehicle is a swan. He is sometimes shown sitting on a lotus that rises from Vishnu's navel, symbolising the interdependence of the gods. Brahma is generally depicted with four (crowned and bearded) heads, each turned towards a point of the compass. Worship of Brahma was eclipsed by the rise of cults devoted to Shiva and Vishnu. Today, India has few Brahma temples.

The Hindu pantheon is said to have a staggering 330 million deities; those worshipped are a matter of personal choice or tradition.

Vishnu

The preserver or sustainer, Vishnu is associated with 'right action'. He protects and sustains all that is good in the world. He is usually depicted with four arms, holding a lotus, a conch shell (it can be blown like a trumpet so symbolises the cosmic vibration from which existence emanates), a discus and a mace. His consort is Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth, and his vehicle is Garuda, the man-bird creature. The Ganges is said to flow from his feet.

Shiva

Shiva is the destroyer – to deliver salvation – without whom creation couldn't occur. Shiva's creative role is phallically symbolised by his representation as the frequently worshipped lingam. With 1008 names, Shiva takes many forms, including Nataraja, lord of the tandava (cosmic victory dance), who paces out the creation and destruction of the cosmos.

Sometimes Shiva has snakes draped around his neck and is shown holding a trident (representative of the Trimurti) as a weapon while riding Nandi, his bull. Nandi symbolises power and potency, justice and moral order. Shiva's consort, Parvati, is capable of taking many forms, including blood-thirsty Durga and Kali.

Shiva is sometimes characterised as the lord of yoga, a Himalaya-dwelling ascetic with matted hair, an ash-smearing body, a penchant for chillum (hash pipe) smoking, and a third eye symbolising wisdom.

Other Prominent Deities

Elephant-headed Ganesh is the god of good fortune, remover of obstacles, and patron of scribes (the broken tusk he holds was used to write sections of the Mahabharata). His animal vehicle is Mooshak (a ratlike creature). How Ganesh came to have an elephant's head is a story with several variations. One legend says that Ganesh was born to Parvati in the absence of his father Shiva, and so grew up not knowing him. One day, as Ganesh stood guard while his mother bathed, Shiva returned and asked to be let into Parvati's presence. Ganesh, who didn't recognise Shiva, refused. Enraged, Shiva lopped off Ganesh's head, only to later discover, much to his horror, that he had slaughtered his own son. He vowed to replace Ganesh's head with that of the first creature he came across, which happened to be an elephant.

Another prominent deity, Krishna is an incarnation of Vishnu sent to earth to fight for good and combat evil. His dalliances with the gopis (milkmaids) and his love for Radha have inspired countless paintings and songs. Depicted with blue-hued skin, Krishna is often seen playing the flute.

Hanuman is the hero of the Ramayana and loyal ally of Rama. He embodies the concept of bhakti (devotion). He's the king of the monkeys, but is capable of taking on other forms.

Among Shaivites (followers of the Shiva movement), shakti, the divine creative power of women, is worshipped as a force in its own right. The concept of shakti is embodied in the ancient goddess Devi (divine

THE SACRED SEVEN

The number seven has special significance in Hinduism. There are seven sacred Indian cities, which are all major pilgrimage centres: Varanasi, associated with Shiva; Haridwar, where the Ganges enters the plains from the Himalaya; Ayodhya, birthplace of Rama; Dwarka, with the legendary capital of Krishna thought to be off the Gujarat coast; Mathura, birthplace of Krishna; Kanchipuram, site of the historic Shiva temples; and Ujjain, venue of the Kumbh Mela every 12 years.

There are also seven sacred rivers: the Ganges (Ganga), Saraswati (thought to be underground), Yamuna, Indus, Narmada, Godavari and Cauvery.

OM

The word 'Om' has significance for several religions, and is one of Hinduism's most venerated symbols. Pronounced 'aum', it's a highly propitious mantra (sacred word or syllable). The 'three' shape symbolises the creation, maintenance and destruction of the universe (and thus the holy Trimurti). The inverted chandra (crescent or half moon) represents the discursive mind and the bindu (dot) within it, Brahman.

Buddhists believe that, if intoned often enough with complete concentration, it will lead to a state of blissful emptiness.

mother), who is also manifested as Durga and, in a fiercer evil-destroying incarnation, Kali. Other widely worshipped goddesses include Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth, and Saraswati, the goddess of learning.

Sacred Texts

Hindu sacred texts fall into two categories: those believed to be the word of god (shruti, meaning 'heard') and those produced by people (smriti, meaning 'remembered'). The Vedas are regarded as shruti knowledge and are considered the authoritative basis for Hinduism. The oldest of the Vedic texts, the Rig-Veda, was compiled over 3000 years ago. Within its 1028 verses are prayers for prosperity and longevity, as well as an explanation of the universe's origins. The Upanishads, the last parts of the Vedas, reflect on the mystery of death and emphasise the oneness of the universe. The oldest of the Vedic texts were written in Vedic Sanskrit (related to Old Persian). Later texts were composed in classical Sanskrit, but many have been translated into the vernacular.

The smriti texts comprise a collection of literature spanning centuries and include expositions on the proper performance of domestic ceremonies as well as the proper pursuit of government, economics and religious law. Among its well-known works are the Ramayana and Mahabharata, as well as the Puranas, which expand on the epics and promote the notion of the Trimurti. Unlike the Vedas, reading the Puranas is not restricted to initiated higher-caste males.

The Mahabharata

Thought to have been composed around 1000 BC, the Mahabharata focuses on the exploits of Krishna. By about 500 BC, the Mahabharata had evolved into a far more complex creation with substantial additions, including the Bhagavad Gita (where Krishna proffers advice to Arjuna before a battle).

The story centres on conflict between the heroic gods (Pandavas) and the demons (Kauravas). Overseeing events is Krishna, who has taken on human form. Krishna acts as charioteer for the Pandava hero Arjuna, who eventually triumphs in a great battle against the Kauravas.

The Ramayana

Composed around the 3rd or 2nd century BC, the Ramayana is believed to be largely the work of one person, the poet Valmiki. Like the Mahabharata, it centres on conflict between the gods and the demons.

The story goes that Dasharatha, the childless king of Ayodhya, called upon the gods to provide him with a son. His wife duly gave birth to a boy. But this child, named Rama, was in fact an incarnation of Vishnu, who had assumed human form to overthrow the demon king of Lanka (now Sri Lanka), Ravana.

As an adult, Rama, who won the hand of the princess Sita in a competition, was chosen by his father to inherit his kingdom. At the last minute

Two recommended publications containing English translations of holy Hindu texts are The Bhagavad Gita by S Radhakrishnan and The Valmiki Ramayana by Romesh Dutt.

Rama's stepmother intervened and demanded her son, Barathan, take Rama's place. Rama, Sita and Rama's brother, Lakshmana, were exiled and went off to the forests, where Rama and Lakshmana battled demons and dark forces. Ravana's sister attempted to seduce Rama but she was rejected and, in revenge, Ravana captured Sita and spirited her away to his palace in Lanka.

Rama, assisted by an army of monkeys led by the loyal monkey god Hanuman, eventually found the palace, killed Ravana and rescued Sita. All returned victorious to Ayodhya, where Rama was welcomed by Barathan and crowned king.

Naturally Sacred

Animals, particularly snakes and cows, have long been worshipped on the subcontinent. For Hindus, the cow represents fertility and nurturing, while snakes (especially cobras) are associated with fertility and welfare. Naga stones (snake stones) serve the dual purpose of protecting humans from snakes and appeasing snake gods.

Plants can also have sacred associations, such as the banyan tree, which symbolises the Trimurti, while mango trees are symbolic of love – Shiva is believed to have married Parvati under one. Meanwhile, the lotus flower is said to have emerged from the primeval waters and is connected to the mythical centre of the earth through its stem. Often found in the most polluted of waters, the lotus has the remarkable ability to blossom above murky depths. The centre of the lotus corresponds to the centre of the universe, the navel of the earth: all is held together by the stem and the eternal waters. The fragile yet resolute lotus is an embodiment of beauty and strength and a reminder to Hindus of how their own lives should be. So revered has the lotus become that today it's India's national flower. The Rudraksha (meaning 'Shiva's eye') tree is said to have sprung from Shiva's tears, and its seeds are used as prayer beads.

Worship

Worship and ritual play a paramount role in Hinduism. In Hindu homes you'll often find a dedicated worship area, where members of the family

Did you know that blood-drinking Kali is another form of milk-giving Gauri? Myth = Mithya: A Handbook of Hindu Mythology by Devdutt Pattanaik sheds light on this and other fascinating Hindu folklore.

ANATOMY OF A GOMPA

Parts of India, such as Sikkim and Ladakh, are known for their ornate, colourful gompas (Tibetan-style Buddhist monasteries). The focal point of a gompa is the dukhang (prayer hall), where monks assemble to chant passages from the sacred scriptures (morning prayers are a particularly atmospheric time to visit gompas). The walls may be covered in vivid murals or thangkas (cloth paintings) of bodhisattvas (enlightened beings) and dharma (protector deities). By the entrance to the dukhang, you'll usually find a mural depicting the Wheel of Life, a graphical representation of the core elements of Buddhist philosophy (see www.buddhanet.net/wheel1.htm for an interactive description of the Wheel of Life).

Most gompas hold chaam dances (ritual masked dances to celebrate the victory of good over evil) during major festivals. Dances to ward off evil feature masks of Mahakala, the Great Protector, usually dramatically adorned with a headdress of human skulls. The Durdag dance features skull masks depicting the Lords of the Cremation Grounds, while Shawa dancers wear masks of wild-eyed stags. These characters are often depicted with a third eye in the centre of their foreheads, signifying the need for inner reflection.

Another interesting activity at Buddhist monasteries is the production of butter sculptures, elaborate models made from coloured butter and dough. The sculptures are deliberately designed to decay, symbolising the impermanence of human existence. Many gompas also produce exquisite sand mandalas – geometric patterns made from sprinkled coloured sand, then destroyed to symbolise the futility of the physical plane.

Unravelling the basic tenets of Hinduism are two books, both called Hinduism: An Introduction – one is by Shakunthala Jagannathan, the other by Dharam Vir Singh.

pray to the deities of their choice. Beyond the home, Hindus worship at temples. Puja is a focal point of worship and ranges from silent prayer to elaborate ceremonies. Devotees leave the temple with a handful of prasada (temple-blessed food used in religious ceremonies) which is shared among others. Other forms of worship include aarti (the auspicious lighting of lamps or candles) and the playing of bhajans (devotional songs).

Islam

Islam is India's largest minority religion, followed by approximately 13.4% of the population. It's believed that Islam was introduced to northern India by Muslim conquerors (in the 16th and 17th centuries the Mughal empire controlled much of North India) and to the south by Arab traders.

Islam was founded in Arabia by the Prophet Mohammed in the 7th century AD. The Arabic term islam means to surrender, and believers (Muslims) undertake to surrender to the will of Allah (God), which is revealed in the scriptures, the Quran. In this monotheistic religion, God's word is conveyed through prophets (messengers), of whom Mohammed was the most recent.

Following Mohammed's death, a succession dispute split the movement, and the legacy today is the Sunnis and the Shiites. Most Muslims in India are Sunnis. The Sunnis emphasise the 'well-trodden' path or the orthodox way. Shiites believe that only imams (exemplary leaders) can reveal the true meaning of the Quran. India also has a long tradition of Sufism, a mystical interpretation of Islam that dates back to the earliest days of the religion.

All Muslims, however, share a belief in the Five Pillars of Islam: the shahada (declaration of faith: 'There is no God but Allah; Mohammed is his prophet'); prayer (ideally five times a day); the zakat (tax), in the form of a charitable donation; fasting (during Ramadan) for all except the sick, young children, pregnant women, the elderly and those undertaking arduous journeys; and the hajj (pilgrimage) to Mecca, which every Muslim aspires to do at least once.

Sikhism

Sikhism, founded in Punjab by Guru Nanak in the 15th century, began as a reaction against the caste system and Brahmin domination of ritual, but evolved into a militarised religion resisting the Islamic domination of the Punjab. Sikhs believe in one god and although they reject the worship of idols, some keep pictures of the 10 gurus as a point of focus. The Sikhs' holy book, the Guru Granth Sahib, contains the teachings of the 10 Sikh gurus, several of whom were executed by the Mughals. Like Hindus and Buddhists, Sikhs believe in rebirth and karma. In Sikhism, there's no ascetic or monastic tradition ending the cycles of rebirth. Almost 2% of India's citizens are Sikhs, with most living in Punjab.

Born in present-day Pakistan, Guru Nanak (1469–1539) was largely dissatisfied with both Muslim and Hindu religious practices. He believed in family life and the value of hard work – he married, had two sons and worked as a farmer when not travelling around, preaching and singing self-composed kirtan (Sikh devotional songs) with his Muslim musician, Mardana. He is said to have performed miracles and he encouraged meditation on God's name as a prime path to enlightenment.

Nanak believed in equality centuries before it became socially fashionable and campaigned against the caste system. He was a practical guru – 'a person who makes an honest living and shares earnings with others recognises the way to God'. He appointed his most talented disciple to be his successor, not one of his sons. His kirtan are still sung in gurdwaras (Sikh temples) today, and his picture is kept in millions of homes on and beyond the subcontinent.

To grasp the intricacies of Sikhism, read Volume One (1469–1839) or Volume Two (1839–2004) of A History of the Sikhs by Khushwant Singh.

Sikhs strive to follow the spiritual lead of the Khalsa, the five Sikh warriors anointed by Guru Gobind Singh as perfectly embodying the principles of the Sikh faith. Wearing a dastar, or turban, is mandatory for baptised Sikh men, and devout Sikhs uphold the 'Five Ks' - kesh (leaving hair uncut), kanga (carrying a wooden comb), kara (wearing an iron bracelet), kacchera (wearing cotton shorts) and kirpan (carrying a dagger or sword).

Buddhism

Less than 1% of the country's population is Buddhist. Bodhgaya, in the state of Bihar, where the Buddha achieved enlightenment, is one of Buddhism's most sacred sites, drawing pilgrims from across the world.

Buddhism arose in the 6th century BC as a reaction against the strictures of Brahminical Hinduism. Buddha (Awakened One) is believed to have lived from about 563 to 483 BC. Formerly a prince (Siddhartha Gautama) from the Nepali plains, the Buddha, at the age of 29, embarked on a quest for emancipation from the world of suffering. He achieved nirvana (the state of full awareness) at Bodhgaya (Bihar), aged 35. Critical of the caste system and the unthinking worship of gods, the Buddha urged his disciples to seek truth within their own experiences.

The Buddha taught that existence is based on Four Noble Truths: that life is rooted in suffering, that suffering is caused by craving, that one can find release from suffering by eliminating craving, and that the way to eliminate craving is by following the Noble Eightfold Path. This path consists of right understanding, right intention, right speech, right action, right livelihood, right effort, right awareness and right concentration. By successfully complying with these one can attain nirvana.

Buddhism had somewhat waned in parts of India by the turn of the 20th century. However, it saw a revival in the 1950s among intellectuals and Dalits who were disillusioned with the caste system. The number of Tribal religions have so merged with Hinduism and other mainstream religions that very few are now clearly identifiable, though animist traditions persist in the Northeast. Some basic tenets of Hinduism are believed to have originated in tribal culture.

RELIGIOUS ETIQUETTE

Whenever visiting a sacred site, dress and behave respectfully – don't wear shorts or sleeveless tops (this applies to men and women) – and refrain from smoking. Loud and intrusive behaviour isn't appreciated, and neither are public displays of affection or kidding around.

Before entering a holy place, remove your shoes (tip the shoe-minder a few rupees when retrieving them) and check if photography is allowed. You're permitted to wear socks in most places of worship – often necessary during warmer months, when floors can be uncomfortably hot.

Religious etiquette advises against touching locals on the head, or directing the soles of your feet at a person, religious shrine or image of a deity. Protocol also advises against touching someone with your feet or touching a carving of a deity.

Head cover (for women and sometimes men) is required at some places of worship – especially gurdwaras (Sikh temples) and mosques – so carry a scarf just to be on the safe side. There are some sites that don't admit women and some that deny entry to non-adherents of their faith – enquire in advance. Women may be required to sit apart from men. Jain temples request the removal of leather items you may be wearing or carrying and may also request that menstruating women not enter. When walking around any Buddhist sacred site (chortens, stupas, temples, gompas) go clockwise. Don't touch them with your left hand. Turn prayer wheels clockwise, with your right hand.

Taking photos inside a shrine, at a funeral, at a religious ceremony or of people taking a holy dip can be offensive – ask first. Flash photography may be prohibited in certain areas of a shrine, or may not be permitted at all.

A sadhu is someone who has surrendered all material possessions in pursuit of spirituality through meditation, the study of sacred texts, self-mortification and pilgrimage. Explore further in Sadhus: India's Mystic Holy Men by Dolf Hartsuiker.

followers has been further increased with the influx of Tibetan refugees. Both the current Dalai Lama and the 17th Karmapa reside in India.

Jainism

Jainism arose in the 6th century BC as a reaction against the caste restraints and rituals of Hinduism. It was founded by Mahavira, a contemporary of the Buddha.

Jains believe that liberation can be attained by achieving complete purity of the soul. Purity means shedding all karman, matter generated by one's actions that binds itself to the soul. By following various austerities (eg fasting and meditation), one can shed karman and purify the soul. Right conduct is essential, and fundamental to this is ahimsa (nonviolence) in thought and deed towards any living thing.

The religious disciplines of followers are less severe than for monks (some Jain monks go naked). The slightly less ascetic maintain a bare minimum of possessions which include a broom to sweep the path before them to avoid stepping on any living creature, and a piece of cloth tied over their mouth to prevent the accidental inhalation of insects.

Today, around 0.4% of India's population is Jain, with the majority living in Gujarat and Mumbai. Some notable Jain holy sites include Sravabelagola, Palitana, Ranakpur and the temples of Mt Abu.

Christianity

There are various theories circulating about Christ's link to the Indian subcontinent. Some, for instance, believe that Jesus spent his 'lost years' in India, while others say that Christianity came to South India with St Thomas the Apostle, who allegedly died in Chennai in the first century AD. However, many scholars attest it's more likely Christianity is traced to around the 4th century with a Syrian merchant, Thomas Cana, who set out for Kerala with around 400 families. India's Christian community today stands at about 2.3% of the population, with the bulk residing in South India.

Catholicism established a strong presence in South India in the wake of Vasco da Gama's visit in 1498, and orders that have been active – not always welcomed – in the region include the Dominicans, Franciscans and Jesuits. Protestant missionaries are believed to have begun arriving – with a conversion agenda – from around the 18th century, particularly in India's tribal regions.

Zoroastrianism

Zoroastrianism, founded by Zoroaster (Zarathustra), had its inception in Persia in the 6th century BC and is based on the concept of dualism, whereby good and evil are locked in a continuous battle. Zoroastrianism isn't quite monotheistic: good and evil entities coexist, although believers are urged to honour only the good. Both body and soul are united in this struggle of good versus evil. Although humanity is mortal, it has components that are timeless, such as the soul. On the day of judgement the errant soul is not called to account for every misdemeanour – but a pleasant afterlife does depend on one's deeds, words and thoughts during earthly existence.

Zoroastrianism was eclipsed in Persia by the rise of Islam in the 7th century and its followers, many of whom openly resisted this, suffered persecution. Over the following centuries some immigrated to India, where they became known as Parsis. Historically, Parsis settled in Gujarat and became farmers; however, during British rule they moved into commerce, forming a prosperous community in Mumbai.

In recent decades the Parsi population has been spiralling downward; there are now believed to be only between 40,000 and 45,000 Parsis left in India, with most residing in Mumbai.

The Zoroastrian funerary ritual involves the 'Towers of Silence' where the corpse is laid out and exposed to vultures that pick the bones clean.

Delicious India

India's culinary terrain – with its especially impressive vegetarian cuisine – is a feast for all the senses, not just the sense of taste. Local cooks make full use of the fresh local ingredients available, be they fragrant spices or desert vegetables, and you can delight in everything from sensational street food to work-of-art thalis, from creative contemporary masterpieces to family-run stalls that have served up one speciality for over 50 years. Indeed, it's the sheer diversity of what's on offer that makes eating your way through India so deliciously rewarding.

A Culinary Carnival

India's culinary story is an ancient one, and the food you'll find here today reflects millennia of regional and global influences.

Land of Spices

Christopher Columbus was actually searching for the black pepper of Kerala's Malabar Coast when he stumbled upon America. The region still grows the finest quality of the world's favourite spice, and it's integral to most savoury Indian dishes.

Turmeric is the essence of the majority of Indian curries, but coriander seeds are the most widely used spice and lend flavour and body to just about every dish. Indian 'wet' dishes – commonly known as curries in the West – usually begin with the crackle of cumin seeds in hot oil. Tamarind is sometimes known as the 'Indian date' and is a popular souring agent in the south. The green cardamom of Kerala's Western Ghats is regarded as the world's best, and you'll find it in curries, desserts and warming chai (tea). Saffron, the dried stigmas of crocus flowers grown in Kashmir, is so light it takes more than 1500 hand-plucked flowers to yield just one gram.

Rice Paradise

Rice is a staple, especially in South India. Long-grain white rice varieties are the most popular, served hot with just about any 'wet' cooked dish. From Assam's sticky rice in the far northeast to Kerala's red grains in the extreme south, you'll find countless regional varieties that locals will claim to be the best in India, though this honour is usually conceded to basmati, a fragrant long-grain variety which is widely exported around the world. Rice is usually served after you have finished with the rotis (breads), usually accompanied by curd to enrich the mix.

Flippin' Fantastic Bread

While rice is paramount in the south, wheat is the mainstay in the north. Roti, the generic term for Indian-style bread, is a name used interchangeably with chapati to describe the most common variety, an irresistible unleavened round bread made with whole-wheat flour and cooked on a tawa (hotplate). It may be smothered with ghee (clarified butter) or oil. In some places, rotis are bigger and thicker than chapatis and sometimes cooked in a tandoor. Paratha is a layered pan-fried flat bread, Spotlighting rice, Finest Rice Recipes by Sabina Sehgal Saikia shows just how versatile this humble grain is, with classy creations such as rice-crust crab cakes.

Ghee is the Hindi word for 'fat'. It's made by melting butter and removing the water and milk solids – ghee is the clear butter fat that remains.

It's better for high-heat cooking than butter and keeps for longer.

Thali means 'plate' in Hindi, and is the name of a complete meal, a selection of dishes in small metal bowls served on a larger metal dish, plus bread, rice, chutneys and dessert. Unlimited thali means you get refills.

The Penguin Food Guide to India by Charmaine O'Brien is an engrossing and evocative read.

that may also be stuffed, and makes for a hearty and popular breakfast. Puri – puffy fried bread pillows – are another popular sauce soaker-upper. Naan is a larger, thicker bread, baked in a tandoor and usually eaten with meaty sauces or kebabs. In Punjab, look out for naan-like kulcha, flavoured with herbs and spices.

Dhal-icious!

The whole of India is united in its love for dhal (curried lentils or pulses). You may encounter up to 60 different pulses: the most common are channa (chickpeas); tiny yellow or green ovals called moong (mung beans); salmon-coloured masoor (red lentils); the ochre-coloured southern favourite, tuvar (yellow lentils; also known as arhar); rajma (kidney beans); urad (black gram or lentils); and lobhia (black-eyed peas).

Meaty Matters

Although India probably has more vegetarians than the rest of the world combined, it still has an extensive repertoire of carnivorous fare. Chicken, lamb and mutton (sometimes actually goat) are the mainstays; religious taboos make beef forbidden to devout Hindus and pork to Muslims.

In northern India, you'll come across meat-dominated Mughlai cuisine, which includes rich curries, kebabs, koftas (meatballs) and biryani. This spicy cuisine traces its history back to the (Islamic) Mughal empire that once reigned supreme. In the south, you'll find the meaty Chettinadu cuisine of Tamil Nadu, which is beautifully spiced without being too fiery.

Tandoori meat dishes are another North Indian favourite. The name is derived from the clay oven, or tandoor, in which the marinated meat is cooked.

Deep-Sea Delights

India has around 7500km of coastline, so it's no surprise that seafood is an important ingredient, especially on the west coast, from Mumbai down to Kerala. Kerala is the biggest fishing state, while Goa boasts particularly succulent prawns and fiery fish curries, and the fishing communities of the Konkan Coast – sandwiched between Goa and Mumbai – are renowned for their seafood recipes. Few main meals in Odisha (Orissa) exclude fish, and in West Bengal, puddled with ponds and lakes, fish is king. The far-flung Andaman Islands also won't disappoint seafood lovers with the day's catch featuring on most menus.

The Fruits (& Vegetables) of Mother Nature

Vegetables are usually served at each main meal across India, and sabzi (vegetables) is a word recognised in every Indian vernacular.

PAAN

Meals are often rounded off with paan, a fragrant mixture of betel nut (also called areca nut), lime paste, spices and condiments wrapped in an edible, silky paan leaf. Peddled by paan-wallahs, who are usually strategically positioned outside busy restaurants, paan is eaten as a digestive and mouth-freshener. The betel nut is mildly narcotic and some aficionados eat paan the same way heavy smokers consume cigarettes – over the years these people's teeth can become rotted red and black. Usually the gloopy red juice is spat out, which is not always particularly sightly.

There are two basic types of paan: mitha (sweet) and saadha (with tobacco, which has similar health risks to other forms of tobacco use). A parcel of mitha paan is a splendid way to finish a meal. Pop the whole parcel in your mouth and chew slowly, allowing the juices to ooooooze.

Thali, Mumbai

They're generally cooked sukhi (dry) or tari (in a sauce), and within these two categories they can be fried, roasted, curried, stuffed, baked, mashed and combined (made into koftas) or dipped in chickpea-flour batter to make a deep-fried pakora (fritter).

Potatoes are ubiquitous and popularly cooked with various masalas (spice mixes), with other vegetables, or mashed and fried for the street snack aloo tikki (mashed-potato patties). Onions are fried with other vegetables, ground into a paste for cooking with meats, and served raw as relishes, but are avoided by Jains. Heads of cauliflower are usually cooked dry on their own, with potatoes to make aloo gobi (potato-and-cauliflower curry), or with other vegetables such as carrots and beans. Fresh green peas turn up stir-fried with other vegetables in pilaus and biryanis and in one of North India's signature dishes, the magnificent matar paneer (unfermented cheese and pea curry). Baigan (eggplant/aundergine) can be curried or sliced and deep-fried. Also popular is saag (a generic term for leafy greens), which can include mustard, spinach and fenugreek. Something a little more unusual is the bumpy-skinned karela (bitter gourd) which, like the delectable bhindi (okra), is commonly prepared dry with spices.

India's fruit basket is also bountiful. Along the southern coast are super-luscious tropical fruits such as pineapples and papayas. Mangoes abound during summer (especially April and May), with India offering more than 500 varieties – the pick of the juicy bunch is the sweet Alphonso. Citrus fruit, such as oranges (often yellow-green in India), tangerines, pink and white grapefruits, kumquats and sweet limes are widely grown. Himachal Pradesh produces crisp apples in autumn, while plump strawberries are especially good in Kashmir during summer. You'll find

DOSA

Savoury dosas (also spelt dosai), a family of large, crispy, papery rice-flour crêpes, usually served with a bowl of hot sambar (soupy lentil dish) and another bowl of cooling coconut chatni (chutney), are a South Indian breakfast speciality that can be eaten at any time of day. The most popular is the masala dosa (stuffed with spiced potatoes), but there are also other fantastic dosa varieties – the rava dosa (batter made with semolina), the Mysore dosa (like masala dosa but with more vegetables and chilli in the filling), and the pessarettu dosa (batter made with mung-bean dhal) from Andhra Pradesh. Nowadays, dosas are readily found in almost every corner of South India, from Tamil Nadu to the Himalaya.

fruit inventively fashioned into a chatni (chutney) or pickle, and also flavouring lassi, kulfi and other sweet treats.

Vegetarians & Vegans

India is king when it comes to vegetarian fare. There's little understanding of veganism (the term 'pure vegetarian' means without eggs), and animal products such as milk, butter, ghee and curd are included in most Indian dishes. If you are vegan, your first problem is likely to be getting the cook to understand your requirements, though big hotels and larger cities are getting better at catering to vegans.

Pickles, Chutneys & Relishes

Pickles, chutneys and relishes are accompaniments that add zing to meals. A relish can be anything from a tiny pickled onion to a delicately crafted fusion of fruit, nuts and spices. One of the most popular side dishes is yoghurt-based raita, which makes a tongue-cooling counter to spicy food. Chatnis can come in any number of varieties (sweet or savoury) and can be made from many different vegetables, fruits, herbs and spices.

Sweet at Heart

India has a colourful kaleidoscope of, often sticky and squishy, mithai (Indian sweets), most of them sinfully sugary. The main categories are barfi (a fudgelike milk-based sweet), soft halwa (sweet made with vegetables, cereals, lentils, nuts or fruit), ladoos (sweet balls made with gram flour and semolina), and those made from chhana (unpressed paneer), such as rasgullas. There are also simpler – but equally scrumptious – offerings such as crunchy jalebis (coils of deep-fried batter dunked in sugar syrup; served hot) that you'll see all over the country.

Kheer (called payasam in the south) is one of the most popular after-meal desserts. It's a creamy rice pudding with a light, delicate flavour, enhanced with cardamom, saffron, pistachios, flaked almonds, chopped cashews or slivered dried fruit. Other favourites include hot gulab jamuns and refreshing kulfi.

Each year, an estimated 14 tonnes of pure silver is converted into the edible foil that decorates many Indian sweets, especially during the Diwali festival.

Where to Fill Up?

You can eat well in India everywhere from ramshackle street dhabas (snack bars) to otherworldly five-star hotels. Most midrange restaurants serve a few basic genres: South Indian (which usually means the vegetarian food of Tamil Nadu and Karnataka) and North Indian (which largely comprises Punjabi/Mughlai fare), and often Indian interpretations of Chinese dishes. You'll also find the cuisines of neighbouring regions and states. Indians frequently migrate in search of work and these restaurants cater to the large communities seeking the familiar tastes of home.

Technically speaking, there's no such thing as an Indian 'curry' – the word, an Anglicised derivative of the Tamil word kari (sauce), was used by the British as a term for any spiced dish.

Not to be confused with burger joints and pizzerias, restaurants in the south advertising 'fast food' are some of India's best. They serve the whole gamut of tiffin (snack) items and often have separate sweet counters. Many upmarket hotels have outstanding restaurants, usually with pan-Indian menus so you can explore various regional cuisines. Meanwhile, the independent restaurant dining scene keeps mushrooming in India's larger cities, with every kind of cuisine available, from Mexican and Mediterranean to Japanese and Italian.

Dhabas are oases to millions of truck drivers, bus passengers and sundry travellers going anywhere by road. The original dhabas dot the North Indian landscape, but you'll find versions of them throughout the country. The rough-and-ready but satisfying food served in these happy-go-lucky shacks has become a genre of its own, known as 'dhaba food'.

Street Food

Whatever the time of day, street food vendors are frying, boiling, roasting, peeling, simmering, mixing, juicing or baking different types of food and drink to lure peckish passers-by. Small operations usually have one special that they serve all day, while other vendors have different dishes for breakfast, lunch and dinner. The fare varies as you venture between neighbourhoods, towns and regions; it can be as simple as puffed rice or peanuts roasted in hot sand, or as complex as the riot of different flavours known as chaat (savoury snack). Fabulous calvalcades of taste include chole bhature (puffed bread served with spicy chickpeas and dipped in fragrant sauce) in north India, aloo tikki, which are renowned in Lucknow, gol gappa/Panipuri/gup chup (puffed spheres of bread with a spicy filling), all over India, and idli sambar (rice patties served with delectable sauce and chutney) in Chennai and the south.

STREET FOOD: TIPS

Tucking into street eats is a highlight of travelling in India, but to avoid tummy troubles:

- Give yourself a few days to adjust to the local cuisine, especially if you're unaccustomed to spicy food.
- If locals are avoiding a particular vendor, you should too. Also note the profile of the customers – any place popular with families will probably be your safest bet.
- Check how and where the vendor is cleaning the utensils, and how and where the food is covered. If the vendor is cooking in oil, have a peek to check it's clean. If the pots or surfaces are dirty, there are food scraps about or too many buzzing flies, don't be shy to make a hasty retreat.
- Don't be put off when you order some deep-fried snack and the cook throws it back into the wok. It's common practice to partly cook the snacks first and then finish them off once they've been ordered. Frying them hot again kills germs.
- Unless a place is reputable (and busy), it's best to avoid eating meat from the street.
- The hygiene standard at juice stalls varies, so exercise caution. Have the vendor press the juice in front of you and steer clear of anything stored in a jug or served in a glass (unless you're confident with the washing standards).
- Don't be tempted by glistening pre-sliced melon and other fruit, which keeps its luscious veneer with regular dousing of (often dubious) water.

Railway Snack Attack

One of the thrills of travelling by rail in India is the culinary circus that greets you at almost every station. Roving vendors accost arriving trains, yelling and scampering up and down the carriages; fruit, namkin (savory nibbles), omelettes, nuts and sweets are offered through the grills on the windows; and platform cooks try to lure you from the train with the sizzle of spicy goodies such as samosas. Frequent rail travellers know which station is famous for which food item: Lonavla station in Maharashtra is known for chikki (rock-hard toffee-like confectionery), Agra for peitha (square sweet made from pumpkin and glucose, usually flavoured with rose water, coconut or saffron) and Dhaund near Delhi for biryani.

Daily Dining Habits

Three main meals a day is the norm in India. Breakfast is usually fairly light, maybe idlis (South Indian spongy fermented rice cake) and sambar in the south, and parathas in the north. Lunch can be substantial (perhaps a thali) or light, especially for time-strapped office workers. Dinner is usually the main meal of the day. It's generally comprised of a few different preparations – several curried vegetables (maybe also meat) dishes and dhal, accompanied by rice and/or chapatis. Dishes are served all at once rather than as courses. Desserts are optional and most prevalent during festivals or other special occasions. Fruit may wrap up a meal. In many Indian homes dinner can be a rather late affair (post-9pm) depending on personal preference and the season (eg late dinners during the warmer months). Restaurants usually spring to life after 9pm in the cities, but in smaller towns they're busy earlier.

Spiritual Sustenance

For many in India, food is considered just as critical for fine-tuning the spirit as it is for sustaining the body. Broadly speaking, Hindus traditionally avoid foods that are thought to inhibit physical and spiritual development, although there are few hard-and-fast rules. The taboo on eating beef (the cow is holy to Hindus) is the most rigid restriction. Jains avoid foods such as garlic and onions, which, apart from harming insects in their extraction from the ground, are thought to heat the blood and arouse sexual desire. You may come across vegetarian restaurants that make it a point to advertise the absence of onion and garlic in their dishes for this reason. Devout Hindus may also avoid garlic and onions. These items are also banned from many ashrams.

Some foods, such as dairy products, are considered innately pure and are eaten to cleanse the body, mind and spirit. Ayurveda, the ancient science of life, health and longevity, also influences food customs.

Pork is taboo for Muslims and stimulants such as alcohol are avoided by the most devout. Halal is the term for all permitted foods, and haram for those prohibited. Fasting is considered an opportunity to earn the approval of Allah, to wipe the sin-slate clean and to understand the suffering of the poor.

Buddhists subscribe to the philosophy of ahimsa (nonviolence) and are mostly vegetarian. Jainism's central tenet is strict vegetarianism, and rigid restrictions are in place to avoid injury to any living creature – Jains abstain from eating vegetables that grow underground because of the potential to harm insects during cultivation and harvesting.

India's Sikh, Christian and Parsi communities have few restrictions on what they can eat.

Food which is first offered to the gods at temples then shared among devotees is known as prasad.

Cooking Courses

You might find yourself so inspired by Indian food that you want to take home a little Indian kitchen know-how, via a cooking course, such as those offered in Delhi, Udaipur, and McLeod Ganj. Courses are popular in Goa and Kerala, with the best in Palolem, Anjuna and Siolim in Goa, and at homestays in Kumily (Periyar) and Kochi in Kerala. Some courses are professionally run, others are informal. Most require at least a few days' advance notice.

Drinks, Anyone?

Gujarat, Nagaland and Mizoram are India's only dry states but there are drinking laws in place all over the country, and each state may have regular dry days when the sale of alcohol from liquor shops is banned. Kerala, where alcohol consumption was twice the national average, is moving towards complete prohibition by 2024, with hundreds of bars being

FEASTING INDIAN-STYLE

Most people in India eat with their right hand. In the south, they use as much of the hand as is necessary, while elsewhere they use the tips of the fingers. The left hand is reserved for unsanitary actions such as removing shoes. You can use your left hand for holding drinks and serving yourself from a communal bowl, but it shouldn't be used for bringing food to your mouth. Before and after a meal, it's good manners to wash your hands.

Once your meal is served, mix the food with your fingers. If you are having dhal and sabzi (vegetables), only mix the dhal into your rice and have the sabzi in small scoops with each mouthful. If you are having fish or meat curry, mix the gravy into your rice. Scoop up lumps of the mix and, with your knuckles facing the dish, use your thumb to shovel the food into your mouth.

closed down. In Goa, because of the Portuguese influence, alcohol taxes are lower and the drinking culture less restricted. On Gandhi's birthday (2 October), you'll find it hard to get an alcoholic drink anywhere.

You'll find excellent watering holes in most big cities, especially Mumbai, Bengaluru (the craft beer capital of India), Kolkata and Delhi, which are usually at their liveliest on weekends. The more upmarket bars serve an impressive selection of domestic and imported drinks as well as draught beer. Many bars turn into music-thumping nightclubs anytime after 8pm, although there are quiet lounge-bars to be found in most large cities. In smaller towns, the bar scene can be a seedy, male-dominated affair – not the kind of place thirsty female travellers should venture into alone.

Wine-drinking is steadily on the rise, despite the domestic wine-producing industry still being relatively new. The favourable climate and soil conditions in certain areas – such as parts of Maharashtra and Karnataka – have spawned some commendable Indian wineries, such as those of the Grover and Sula Vineyards.

Stringent licensing laws and religious restrictions mean some restaurants won't serve alcohol, but places that depend on the tourist rupee may covertly serve you beer in teapots and disguised glasses – however, don't assume anything, at the risk of causing offence.

Very few vegetarian restaurants serve alcohol.

Nonalcoholic Beverages

Chai (tea), the much-loved drink of the masses, is made with copious amounts of milk and sugar. A glass of steaming, frothy chai is the perfect antidote to the vicissitudes of life on the Indian road; the disembodied voice droning 'garam chai, garam chai' (hot tea, hot tea) is likely to become one of the most familiar and welcome sounds of your trip. Masala chai adds cardamom, ginger and other spices.

The subcontinent's wine industry is an ever evolving one – take a cyber-sip of Indian wine at www.indianwine.com.

While chai is the traditional choice of most of the nation, South Indians have long shared their loyalty with coffee. In recent years, though, the number of coffee-drinking North Indians has skyrocketed, with ever-multiplying branches of slick coffee chains, such as Barista and Café Coffee Day.

Masala soda is the quintessentially Indian soft drink. It's a freshly opened bottle of fizzy soda, pepped up with lime, spices, salt and sugar. You can also plump for a plainer lime soda, which is soda with fresh lime, served sweet (with sugar) or salted as you prefer. Also refreshing is jal jeera, made of lime juice, cumin, mint and rock salt. Sweet and savoury lassi, a yoghurt-based drink, is especially popular nationwide and is another wonderfully cooling beverage.

Falooda is a rose-flavoured drink made with milk, cream, nuts and strands of vermicelli, while badam milk (served hot or cold) is flavoured with almonds and saffron.

Homegrown Brews

An estimated three-quarters of India's drinking population quaffs 'country liquor', such as the notorious arak (liquor distilled from coconut-palm sap, potatoes or rice) of the south. This is widely known as the poor-man's drink and millions are addicted to the stuff. Each year, many people are blinded or even killed by the methyl alcohol in illegal arak.

An interesting local drink is a clear spirit with a heady pungent flavour called mahua, distilled from the flower of the mahua tree. It's brewed in makeshift village stalls all over central India during March and April, when the trees bloom. Mahua is safe to drink as long as it comes from a trustworthy source. There have been cases of people being blinded after drinking mahua adulterated with methyl alcohol.

Rice beer is brewed all over east and northeast India, while in the Himalayas you'll find a grain alcohol called raksi, which is strong, has a mild charcoal flavour and tastes vaguely like Scotch whisky.

Toddy, the sap from the palm tree, is drunk in coastal areas, especially Kerala, while feni is the primo Indian spirit, and the preserve of laid-back Goa. Coconut feni is light and rather unexceptional but the more popular cashew feni – made from the fruit of the cashew tree – is worth a try.

If you fancy sipping booze of the blue-blood ilk, traditional royal liqueurs of Rajasthan (once reserved for private consumption among nobility) are sold at some liquor shops, especially in Delhi and Jaipur. Ingredients range from aniseed, cardamom and saffron to rose, dates and mint.

The Great Indian Bazaar

India's bazaars and shops sell a staggering range of goodies: from woodwork to silks, chunky tribal jewellery to finely embroidered shawls, sparkling gemstones to rustic village handicrafts. The array of arts and handicrafts is vast, with every region – sometimes every village – having its own traditions, some of them ancient. Be prepared to encounter – and bring home – some spectacular items. India's shopping opportunities are as inspiring and multifarious as the country itself.

Bronze Figures, Pottery, Stone Carving & Terracotta

In southern India and parts of the Himalaya, small images of deities are created by the age-old lost-wax process. A wax figure is made, a mould is formed around it, and the wax is melted, poured out and replaced with molten metal; the mould is then broken open to reveal the figure inside. Figures of Shiva as dancing Nataraja are the most popular, but you can also find images of Buddha and numerous deities from the Hindu pantheon.

The West Bengalese also employ the lost-wax process to make Dokra tribal bell sculptures, while in Chhattisgarh's Bastar region, the Ghadwa Tribe has an interesting twist on the lost-wax process: a fine wax thread covers the metal mould, leaving a lattice-like design on the final product.

In Buddhist areas, you'll find striking bronze statues of Buddha and the Tantric deities, finished off with finely polished and painted faces.

In Mamallapuram in Tamil Nadu, craftsmen using local granite and soapstone have revived the ancient artistry of the Pallava sculptors; souvenirs range from tiny stone elephants to enormous deity statues weighing half a tonne. Tamil Nadu is also known for bronze ware from Thanjavur and Trichy (Tiruchirappalli).

A number of places produce attractive terracotta items, ranging from vases and decorative flowerpots to images of deities, and children's toys.

Outside temples you can buy small clay effigies of Hindu deities.

Carpets, Carpets, Carpets!

Carpet-making is a living craft in India, with workshops throughout producing fine wool and silkwork. The finest carpets are produced in Kashmir, Ladakh, Himachal Pradesh, Sikkim and West Bengal. Carpet-making is also a major revenue earner for Tibetan refugees; most refugee settlements have cooperative carpet workshops. You can also find reproductions of tribal Turkmen and Afghan designs in states such as Uttar Pradesh. Antique carpets usually aren't antique – unless you buy from an internationally reputable dealer; stick to 'new' carpets.

In both Kashmir and Rajasthan, you'll find coarsely woven woollen numdas (or namdas), which are cheaper than knotted carpets. Various regions manufacture flat-weave dhurries (kilim-like cotton rugs), including Kashmir, Himachal Pradesh, Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh. Kashmiris also produce gabbas (rugs with appliqué), made from chain-stitched wool or silk.

Rajasthan is a treasure trove of handicrafts. Its capital, Jaipur, is known for its blockprinting and its blue-glazed pottery with pretty floral and geometric motifs.

Children have been employed as carpet weavers in the subcontinent for centuries. Child labour maintains a cycle of poverty, by driving down adult wages, reducing adult work opportunities, and depriving children of their education. The carpets produced by Tibetan refugee cooperatives are almost always made by adults; government emporiums and charitable cooperatives are usually the best places to buy.

Costs & Postage

The price of a carpet is determined by the number and the size of the hand-tied knots, the range of dyes and colours, the intricacy of the design and the material. Silk carpets cost more and look more luxurious, but wool carpets usually last longer. Expect to pay upwards of US$250 for a good quality 90cm by 1.5m (or 90cm by 1.8m, depending on the region) wool carpet, and around US$2000 for a similar-sized carpet in silk. Tibetan carpets are cheaper, reflecting the relative simplicity of the designs; many refugee cooperatives sell the same size for around US$100.

Some people buy carpets thinking that they can be sold for a profit back home, but unless you really know your carpets, you're better off just buying a carpet because you love it. Many places can ship carpets home for a fee – although it may be safest to send things independently to avoid scams – or you can carry them in the plane's hold (allow 5kg to 10kg of your baggage allowance for a 90cm by 1.5m carpet, and check that your airline allows oversized baggage). Shipping to Europe for a carpet of this size would cost around ₹4000.

Be cautious when buying items that include international delivery, and avoid being led to shops by smooth-talking touts, but don't worry about too much else – except your luggage space!

Jewellery

Virtually every town in India has at least one bangle shop selling an extraordinary variety, ranging from colourful plastic and glass to brass and silver.

Heavy folk-art silver jewellery can be bought in various parts of the country, particularly in Rajasthan; Jaipur, Udaipur and Pushkar are good places to find silver jewellery pitched at foreign tastes. Jaipur is also renowned for its precious and semiprecious gems (and its gem scams). Chunky Tibetan jewellery made from silver (or white metal) and semiprecious stones is sold all over India. Many pieces feature Buddhist motifs and text in Tibetan script, including the famous mantra Om Mani Padme Hum (Hail to the Jewel in the Lotus). Some of the pieces sold in Tibetan centres, such as McLeod Ganj and Leh, are genuine antiques, but there's a huge industry in India, Nepal and China making artificially aged souvenirs. For creative types, loose beads of agate, turquoise, carnelian and silver are widely available. Buddhist meditation beaded strings made of gems or wood also make good souvenirs.

Pearls are produced by most Indian seaside states, but they're a particular speciality of Hyderabad. You'll find them at most state emporiums across the country. Prices vary depending on the colour and shape: you pay more for pure white pearls or rare colours such as black, and perfectly round pearls are generally more expensive than misshapen or elongated pearls. A single strand of seeded pearls can cost as little as ₹500, but better-quality pearls start at around ₹1000.

Throughout India you can find finely crafted gold and silver rings, anklets, earrings, toe rings, necklaces and bangles, and pieces can often be made to order.

Leatherwork

As cows are sacred in India, leatherwork is made from buffalos, camels, goats or some other animal skin. Kanpur in Uttar Pradesh is the country's major leatherwork centre.

Most large cities offer a smart range of modern leather footwear at very reasonable prices, some stitched with zillions of sparkly sequins – marvellous partywear!

Cuttack in Odisha (Orissa) is famed for its lacelike silver-filigree ornaments known as tarakasi. A silver framework is made and then filled in with delicate curls and ribbons of silver.

The states of Punjab and Rajasthan (especially Jaipur) are famed for jootis (traditional, often pointy-toed slip-on shoes).

Chappals, those wonderful (often curly-toed) leather sandals, are sold throughout India but are particularly good in the Maharashtrian cities of Kolhapur, Pune and Matheran.

In Bikaner in Rajasthan, artisans decorate camel hide with gold to produce beautiful mirror frames, boxes and bottles, while in Indore in Madhya Pradesh, craftspeople stretch leather over wire-and-cloth frameworks to make cute toy animals.

Metal & Marble

You'll find copper and brassware throughout India. Candleholders, trays, bowls, tankards and ashtrays are particularly popular buys. In Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh, the brass is inlaid with exquisite designs in red, green and blue enamel.

Many Tibetan religious objects are created by inlaying silver in copper; prayer wheels, ceremonial horns and traditional document cases are all inexpensive buys. Resist the urge to buy kangling (Tibetan horns) and kapala (ceremonial bowls) made from inlaid human leg bones and skulls – they are illegal!

In all Indian towns you can find kadhai (Indian woks, also known as balti) and other cookware for incredibly low prices. Beaten-brass pots are particularly attractive, while steel storage vessels, copper-bottomed cooking pans and steel thali trays are also popular souvenirs. Be sure to have your name engraved on them (free of charge).

The people of Bastar in Chhattisgarh use an iron-smelting technique similar to the one discovered 35,000 years ago to create abstract sculptures of spindly animal and human figures. These are often also made into functional items such as lamp stands and coat racks.

A sizeable cottage industry has sprung up in Agra reproducing the ancient Mughal art form of pietra dura (inlaying marble with semiprecious stones).

THE ART OF HAGGLING

Government emporiums, fair-trade cooperatives, department stores and modern shopping centres almost always charge fixed prices. Anywhere else you need to bargain. Shopkeepers in tourist hubs are accustomed to travellers who have lots of money and little time to spend it, so you can often expect to be charged double or triple the going rate. Souvenir shops are generally the most notorious.

The first 'rule' to haggling is to never show too much interest in the item you've got your heart set upon. Second, resist purchasing the first thing that takes your fancy. Wander around several shops and price items, but don't make it too obvious: if you return to the first shop, the vendor will know it's because they are the cheapest (resulting in less haggling leeway).

Decide how much you would be happy paying, and then express a casual interest in buying. If you have absolutely no idea of the going rate, a common approach is to start by slashing the price by half. The vendor will, most likely, look aghast, but you can now work up and down respectively in small increments until you reach a mutually agreeable price. You'll find that many shopkeepers lower their so-called 'final price' if you head out of the store saying you'll 'think about it'.

Haggling is a way of life in India and is usually taken in good spirit. It should never turn ugly. Always keep in mind how much a rupee is worth in your home currency, and how much you'd pay for the item back home, to put things in perspective. If you're not sure of the 'right' price for an item, think about how much it is worth to you. If a vendor seems to be charging an unreasonably high price, look elsewhere.

Musical Instruments

Quality Indian musical instruments are mostly available in the larger cities, especially Kolkata (Calcutta), Varanasi and Delhi. Prices vary according to the quality and sound of the instrument.

Decent tabla sets (pair of drums) with a wooden tabla (tuned treble drum) and metal dugi or bayan (bass tone drums) cost upwards of ₹5000. Cheaper sets are generally heavier and often sound inferior.

Sitars range anywhere from ₹5000 to ₹20,000 (sometimes even more). The sound of each sitar will vary with the wood used and the shape of the gourd, so try a few. Note that some cheaper sitars can warp in colder or hotter climates. On any sitar, make sure the strings ring clearly and check the gourd carefully for damage. Spare string sets, sitar plectrums and a screw-in 'amplifier' gourd are sensible additions.

Other popular instruments include the shehnai (Indian flute), the sarod (like an Indian lute), the harmonium and the esraj (similar to an upright violin). Conventional violins are great value – prices start at ₹3500, while Kolkata is known for its quality acoustic guitars (from ₹2500).

Paintings

Miniatures

Reproductions of Indian miniature paintings are widely available, but the quality varies: the cheaper ones have less detail and are made with inferior materials. Udaipur and Bikaner in Rajasthan have a particularly good range of shops specialising in modern reproductions on paper and silk, or you can browse Delhi's numerous state emporiums.

In regions such as Kerala and Tamil Nadu, you'll find miniature paintings on leaf skeletons that portray domestic life, rural scenes and deities.

Folk Art

In Andhra Pradesh, cheriyal paintings, in bright, primary colours, were originally made as scrolls for travelling storytellers.

The artists' community of Raghurajpur near Puri (Odisha) preserves the age-old art of patachitra (cloth) painting. Cotton or tassar (silk cloth) is covered with a mixture of gum and chalk; it's then polished, and images of deities and scenes from Hindu legends are painted on with exceedingly fine brushes. Odisha also produces chitra pothi, where images are etched onto dried palm-leaf sections with a fine stylus.

Bihar's unique folk art is Mithila (or Madhubani) painting, an ancient art form preserved by the women of Madhubani. These captivating paintings are most easily found in Patna, but are also sold in big city emporiums.

Thangkas

Exquisite thangkas (rectangular Tibetan paintings on cloth) of Tantric Buddhist deities and ceremonial mandalas are sold in Tibetan Buddhist areas, including Sikkim, parts of Himachal Pradesh and Ladakh. Some perfectly reproduce the glory of the murals in India's medieval gompas (Tibetan Buddhist monasteries); others are simpler. Prices vary, but bank on at least ₹4000 for a decent-quality thangka of A3 size, and a lot more (up to around ₹30,000) for large intricate thangkas. The selling of antique thangkas is illegal, and you would be unlikely to find the real thing anyway.

Contemporary Art

India is a major centre of contemporary art, and its larger cities are well stocked with independent galleries. Delhi, Mumbai and Kolkata are the best places to look for shops and galleries selling contemporary paintings by local artists.

Bidri, a method of damascening where silver wire is inlaid in gunmetal (a zinc alloy) and rubbed with soil from Bidar, Karnataka, is used to make jewellery, boxes and ornaments.

In towns with Buddhist communities, such as McLeod Ganj, Leh, Manali, Gangtok, Kalimpong, Darjeeling, and Delhi, keep an eye out for 'Buddha shops' selling prayer flags, singing prayer bowls and prayer wheels.

Textiles

Shawls

Indian shawls are famously warm and lightweight – they're often better than the best down jackets. It's worth buying one to use as a blanket on cold night journeys. Shawls are made from all sorts of wool, and many are embroidered with intricate designs.

The undisputed capital of the Indian shawl is the Kullu Valley in Himachal Pradesh, with dozens of women's cooperatives producing fine woollen pieces. These may be made from wool (from ₹700), angora (mohair) or pashmina (the downy hair of the pashmina goat).

Ladakh and Kashmir are major centres for pashmina production – you'll pay at least ₹6000 for the authentic article. Be aware that many so-called pashminas are actually made from a mixture of wool and silk, however, these 'fake' pashminas are often very beautiful even so, and a lot less expensive, costing around ₹1200. Shawls from the Northeast States are famously warm, with bold geometric designs. In Sikkim and West Bengal, you may also find embroidered Bhutanese shawls. Gujarat's Kutch region produces some particularly distinctive woollen shawls, patterned with subtle embroidery and mirrorwork. Handmade shawls and tweeds can also be found in Ranikhet and Almora in Uttarakhand.

Saris

Saris are a very popular souvenir, especially given that they can be easily adapted to other purposes (from cushion covers to skirts). Real silk saris are the most expensive, and the silk usually needs to be washed before it becomes soft. The 'silk capital' of India is Kanchipuram in Tamil Nadu (Kanchipuram silk is also widely available in Chennai), but you can also find fine silk saris (and cheaper scarves) in centres including Varanasi, Mysore and Kolkata. Assam is renowned for its muga, endi and pat silks (produced by different species of silkworms), which are widely available in Guwahati. You'll pay upwards of ₹3000 for a quality embroidered silk sari.

Patan in Gujarat is the centre for the ancient and laborious craft of patola-making. Every thread in these fine silk saris is individually hand-dyed before weaving, and patterned borders are woven with real gold. Slightly less involved versions are produced in Rajkot. Gold thread is also used in the famous kota doria saris of Kota in Rajasthan.

Aurangabad, in Maharashtra, is the traditional centre for the production of himroo shawls, sheets and saris, made from a blend of cotton, silk and silver thread. Silk and gold-thread saris produced at Paithan (near Aurangabad) are some of India's finest – prices range from around ₹7000 to a mind-blowing ₹300,000. Other regions famous for sari production include Madhya Pradesh for its cotton Maheshwari saris (from Maheshwar) and silk Chanderi saris (from Chanderi), and West Bengal, for its baluchari saris from Bishnupur, which employ a traditional form of weaving with untwisted silk thread.

Khadi & Embroidery

Textile production is India's major industry and around 40% takes place at the village level, where it's known as khadi (homespun cloth) – hence the government-backed khadi emporiums around the country. These superstores sell all sorts of items made from khadi, including the popular Nehru jackets and kurta pyjamas (long shirt and loose-fitting trousers), with sales benefiting rural communities. Khadi has recently become increasingly chic, with India's designers referencing the fabrics in their collections.

You'll find a truly amazing variety of weaving and embroidery techniques around India. In tourist centres such as Goa, Rajasthan and Himachal Pradesh, textiles are stitched into popular items such as shoulder

In Andhra Pradesh, intricately drawn, graphic cloth paintings called kalamkari depict deities and historic events.

Be aware that it's illegal to buy shahtoosh shawls, as rare Tibetan antelopes are slaughtered to provide the wool. If you come across anyone selling these shawls, inform local authorities.

PUTTING YOUR MONEY WHERE IT COUNTS

Overall, a small proportion of the money brought to India by tourism reaches people in rural areas. Travellers can make a greater contribution by shopping at community cooperatives set up to protect and promote traditional cottage industries and provide education, training and a sustainable livelihood at the grassroots level. Many of these projects focus on refugees, low-caste women, tribal people and others living on society's fringes.

The quality of products sold at cooperatives is high and the prices are usually fixed, which means you won't have to haggle. A share of the sales money is channelled directly into social projects such as schools, healthcare, training and other advocacy programs for socially disadvantaged groups. Shopping at the national network of Khadi and Village Industries Commission emporiums will also contribute to rural communities.

Wherever you travel, keep your eyes peeled for fair-trade cooperatives.

bags, cushion covers, clothes and much more. In Adivasi (tribal) areas of Gujarat and Rajasthan, small pieces of mirrored glass are embroidered onto fabric, creating eye-catching bags, cushion covers and wall hangings. The region of Kutch is particularly renowned for its embroidery.

Appliqué, Tie-dye & Blockprint

Appliqué is an ancient art in India, with most states producing their own version, often featuring abstract or anthropomorphic patterns. The traditional lampshades and pandals (tents) used in weddings and festivals are usually produced using the same technique.

Gujarat has a diversity of textile traditions: Jamnagar is famous for its vibrant bandhani (tie-dye work) used for saris and scarves, among other things, and Vadodara is renowned for block-printed fabrics, used for bedspreads and clothing. Ahmedabad is a good place to buy Gujarati textiles.

Block-printed and woven textiles are sold by fabric shops all over India: each region has its own speciality. The India-wide retail chain-stores Fabindia (www.fabindia.com) and Anokhi (www.anokhi.com) strive to preserve traditional patterns and fabrics, transforming them into home-decor items and Indian- and Western-style fashions. The latter has the Anokhi Museum of Hand Printing (p125), which demonstrates the crafts.

Odisha has a reputation for bright appliqué and ikat (a Southeast Asian technique where thread is tie-dyed before weaving). The town of Pipli, between Bhubaneswar and Puri, produces striking appliqué work. The techniques used to create kalamkari cloth paintings in Andhra Pradesh (a centre for this ancient art is Sri Kalahasti) and Gujarat are also used to make lovely wall hangings and lampshades.

Indian Textiles, by John Gillow and Nicholas Barnard, explores India's beautiful regional textiles and includes sections on tie-dye, weaving, beadwork, brocades and even camel girths.

Woodcarving

Woodcarving is an ancient art form throughout India. In Kashmir, walnut wood is used to make finely carved wooden screens, tables, jewellery boxes and trays, inspired by the decorative trim of houseboats. Willow cricket bats are another Kashmiri speciality.

Wood inlay is one of Bihar's oldest crafts – you'll find lovely wooden wall hangings, tabletops, trays and boxes inlaid with metals and bone.

Sandalwood carvings of Hindu deities are one of Karnataka's specialities, but you'll pay a king's ransom for the real thing – a 10cm-high Ganesha costs around ₹3000 in sandalwood, compared to roughly ₹300 in kadamb wood. However, the sandalwood will release fragrance for years.

In Udaipur in Rajasthan, you can buy brightly painted figures of Hindu deities carved from mango wood. In many parts of Rajasthan you can also find fabric printing blocks carved from teak wood.

Crafts aren't necessarily confined to their region of origin; artists migrate and are sometimes influenced by regional aesthetics, resulting in some interesting stylistic combinations. For example, you can visit a community of Rajasthani potters on the outskirts of Delhi.

Buddhist woodcarvings are a speciality of Sikkim, Ladakh, Arunachal Pradesh and all Tibetan refugee areas. You'll find wall plaques of the eight lucky signs, dragons and chaam masks, used for ritual dances. Most of the masks are cheap reproductions, but you can sometimes find genuine chaam masks made from lightweight whitewood or papier mâché from ₹3000 upwards.

Other Great Finds

It's little surprise that Indian spices are snapped up by tourists. Virtually all towns have shops and bazaars selling locally made spices at great prices. Karnataka, Kerala, Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan and Tamil Nadu produce most of the spices that go into garam masala (the 'hot mix' used to flavour Indian dishes), while the Northeast States and Sikkim are known for black cardamom and cinnamon bark. Note that some countries, such as Australia, have stringent rules regarding the import of animal and plant products. Check with your country's embassy for details.

Attar (essential oil, mostly made from flowers) shops can be found around the country. Mysore in Karnataka is famous for its sandalwood oil, while Mumbai is a major centre for the trade of traditional fragrances, including valuable oud, made from a rare mould that grows on the bark of the agarwood tree. In Tamil Nadu, Ooty and Kodaikanal produce aromatic and medicinal oils from herbs, flowers and eucalyptus.

Indian incense is exported worldwide, with Bengaluru and Mysore, both in Karnataka, being major producers. Incense from Auroville in Tamil Nadu is also well regarded.

A speciality of Goa is feni (liquor distilled from coconut milk or cashews): a head-spinning spirit that often comes in decorative bottles.

Quality Indian tea is sold in Darjeeling and Kalimpong (both in West Bengal), Assam and Sikkim, as well as parts of South India, such as Munnar in Kerala and the Ooty area in Tamil Nadu's Western Ghats. There are also top tea retailers in Delhi and other urban hubs.

In Bhopal in Madhya Pradesh, colourful jari shoulder bags, embroidered with beads, are a speciality. Also on the portables front, the Northeast States are noted for their beautiful hand-woven baskets and wickerwork – each tribe has its own unique basket shape.

Jodhpur in Rajasthan, among other places, is famed for its antiques (though be aware that exporting antiques is prohibited).

Artisans in Jammu and Kashmir have been producing lacquered papier mâché for centuries, and papier-mâché bowls, boxes, letter holders, coasters, trays and Christmas decorations are now sold across India, and make extremely inexpensive yet beautiful gifts (those with more intricate work command higher prices). In Rajasthan, look for colourful papier-mâché puppets, typically sold as a pair and often depicting a husband and wife, as well as beautiful little temples carved from mango wood, brightly painted with religious stories.

Fine-quality handmade paper – often fashioned into cards, boxes and notebooks – is worth seeking out. Puducherry in Tamil Nadu, Delhi, Jaipur and Mumbai are good places to start.

Hats are also popular: the Assamese make decorated reed-pith sun hats, and Tibetan refugees produce woollen hats, gloves and scarves, sold nationwide. Traditional caps worn by men and women of Himalayan tribes are available in many Himachal Pradesh towns.

India has a phenomenal range of books at very competitive prices, including leather-bound titles. Asian Educational Services publishes old (from the 17th century) and out-of-stock titles, in original typeface. Delhi's Sunday Book Market is a particularly good place to discover unexpected treasures.

The Arts

Over the millennia India's many ethnic groups have spawned a rich artistic heritage, and today, you'll experience art, both lofty and humble, around every corner: from intricately painted trucks on dusty roads to harmonic chanting from an ancient temple to wedding-season hands adorned with mehndi (henna). The wealth of creative expression is a highlight of travelling here, and today's artists fuse ancient and modern influences to create art, dance, literature and music that are as evocative as they are beautiful.

Dance

The ancient Indian art of dance is traditionally linked to mythology and classical literature. Dance can be divided into two main forms: classical and folk. Classical dance is essentially based on well-defined traditional disciplines. Some classical dance styles:

- ➔ Bharatanatyam (also spelt Bharata Natyam) Originated in Tamil Nadu, and has been embraced throughout India.
- ➔ Kathak Has Hindu and Islamic influences and was particularly popular with the Mughals. Kathak suffered a period of notoriety when it moved from the courts into houses where nautch (dancing) girls tantalised audiences with renditions of the Krishna-and-Radha love story. It was restored as a serious art form in the early 20th century.
- ➔ Kathakali Has its roots in Kerala; sometimes referred to as 'dance' but essentially is a kind of drama based on mythological subjects.
- ➔ Kuchipudi A 17th-century dance-drama that originated in the Andhra Pradesh village from which it takes its name. The story centres on the envious wife of Krishna.
- ➔ Odissi From Odisha (Orissa); thought to be India's oldest classical dance form. It was originally a temple art, and was later also performed at royal courts.
- ➔ Manipuri Has a delicate, lyrical flavour; hails from Manipur. It attracted a wider audience in the 1920s when acclaimed Bengali writer Rabindranath Tagore invited one of its most revered exponents to teach at Shantiniketan (West Bengal).

India's second major dance form, folk, is widespread and varied. It ranges from the high-spirited bhangra dance of Punjab to the theatrical dummy-horse dances of Karnataka and Tamil Nadu, and the graceful fishers' dance of Odisha. In Gujarat, the colourful group dance known as garba is performed during Navratri (Hindu festival held in September or October).

Pioneers of modern dance forms in India include Uday Shankar (older brother of the late sitar master Ravi), who once partnered with Russian ballerina Anna Pavlova. Rabindranath Tagore was another innovator; in 1901 he set up a school at Shantiniketan in West Bengal that promoted the arts, including dance.

The dance you'll most commonly see, though, is in films. Dance has featured in Indian movies since the dawn of 'talkies' and often combines traditional, folk, modern and contemporary choreography.

Indian Classical Dance by Leela Venkataraman and Avinash Pasricha is a lavishly illustrated book covering various Indian dance forms, including Bharata Natyam, Odissi, Kuchipudi and Kathakali.

Music

Indian classical music traces its roots back to Vedic times, when religious poems chanted by priests were first collated in an anthology called the Rig-Veda. Over the millennia classical music has been shaped by many influences, and the legacy today is Carnatic (characteristic of South India) and Hindustani (the classical style of North India) music. With common origins, they share a number of features. Both use the raga (the melodic shape of the music) and tala (the rhythmic meter characterised by the number of beats); tintal, for example, has a tala of 16 beats. The audience follows the tala by clapping at the appropriate beat, which in tintal is at beats one, five and 13. There's no clap at the beat of nine; that's the khali (empty section), which is indicated by a wave of the hand. Both the raga and the tala are used as a basis for composition and improvisation.

Both Carnatic and Hindustani music are performed by small ensembles, generally comprising three to six musicians, and both have many instruments in common. There's no fixed pitch, but there are differences between the two styles. Hindustani has been more heavily influenced by Persian musical conventions (a result of Mughal rule); Carnatic music, as it developed in South India, cleaves more closely to theory. The most striking difference, at least for those unfamiliar with India's classical forms, is Carnatic's greater use of voice.

One of the best-known Indian instruments is the sitar (large stringed instrument), with which the soloist plays the raga. Other stringed instruments include the sarod (which is plucked) and the sarangi (which is played with a bow). Also popular is the tabla (twin drums), which provides the tala. The drone, which runs on two basic notes, is provided by the oboe-like shehnai or the stringed tampura (also spelt tamboura). The hand-pumped keyboard harmonium is used as a secondary melody instrument for vocal music.

Indian regional folk music is widespread and varied. Wandering musicians, magicians, snake charmers and storytellers often use song to entertain their audiences; the storyteller usually sings the tales from the great epics.

In North India you may come across qawwali (Sufi devotional singing), performed in mosques or at musical concerts. Qawwali concerts usually take the form of a mehfil (gathering) with a lead singer, a second singer, harmonium and tabla players, and a thunderous chorus of junior singers and clappers, all sitting cross-legged on the floor. The singers whip up the audience with lines of poetry, dramatic hand gestures and religious phrases as the two voices weave in and out, bouncing off each other to create an improvised, surging sound. On command the chorus dives in with a hypnotic and rhythmic refrain. Members of the audience often sway and shout out in ecstatic appreciation.

A completely different genre altogether, filmi (music from films) includes modern, slower-paced love serenades, along with hyperactive dance songs. To ascertain the latest filmi favourites, as well as in-vogue Indian pop singers, enquire at music stores, or invest in a portable radio.

Painting

Around 1500 years ago artists covered the walls and ceilings of the Ajanta caves in Maharashtra, western India, with scenes from the Buddha's past lives. The figures are endowed with an unusual freedom and grace, and contrast with the next major style that emerged from this part of India in the 11th century.

India's Jain community created some particularly lavish temple art. However, after the conquest of Gujarat by the Delhi Sultanate in 1299, the Jains turned their attention to illustrated manuscripts, which could

MAGICAL MEHNDI

Mehndi is the traditional art of painting a woman's hands (and sometimes feet) with intricate henna designs for auspicious ceremonies, such as marriage. If quality henna is used, the design, which is orange-brown, can last up to one month.

In touristy areas, mehndi-wallahs are adept at applying henna tattoo 'bands' on the arms, legs and lower back. If you get mehndi applied, allow at least a few hours for the design process and required drying time (during drying you can't use your hennaed hands).

It's always wise to request the artist to do a 'test' spot on your arm before proceeding: nowadays some dyes contain chemicals that can cause allergies. (Avoid 'black henna', which is mixed with some chemicals that may be harmful.) If good-quality henna is used, you should not feel any pain during or after the application.

be hidden away. These manuscripts are the only known form of Indian painting that survived the Islamic conquest of North India.

The Indo-Persian style – characterised by geometric design coupled with flowing form – developed from Islamic royal courts, although the depiction of the elongated eye is one convention that seems to have been retained from indigenous sources. The Persian influence blossomed when artisans fled to India following the 1507 Uzbek attack on Herat (in present-day Afghanistan), and with trade and gift-swapping between the Persian city of Shiraz, an established centre for miniature production, and Indian provincial sultans.

The 1526 victory by Babur at the Battle of Panipat ushered in the era of the Mughals in India. Although Babur and his son Humayun were both patrons of the arts, it's Humayun's son Akbar who is generally credited with developing the characteristic Mughal style. This painting style, often in colourful miniature form, largely depicts court life, architecture, battle and hunting scenes, as well as detailed portraits. Akbar recruited artists from far and wide, and artistic endeavour first centred on the production of illustrated manuscripts (topics varied from history to mythology), but later broadened into portraiture and the glorification of everyday events. European painting styles influenced some artists, and this influence occasionally reveals itself in experiments with motifs and perspective.

Akbar's son Jehangir also patronised painting, but he preferred portraiture, and his fascination with natural science resulted in a vibrant legacy of paintings of flowers and animals. Under Jehangir's son Shah Jahan, the Mughal style became less fluid and, although the bright colouring was eye-catching, the paintings lacked the vigour of before.

Miniature painting flowered first at the Mughal court in the 16th century, as well as the Deccan sultanates (Golconda, Bijapur, Bidar etc). As Mughal power and wealth declined, many artists moved to Rajasthan where the Rajasthani school developed from the late 17th century. Later, artists from Rajasthan moved into the Himalayan foothills of Punjab, Himachal Pradesh and Uttarakhand, where the Pahari (Hill Country) school flourished in the 18th and early 19th centuries. The subject matter ranged from royal processions to shikhar (hunting expeditions), with many artists influenced by Mughal styles. The intense colours, still evident today in miniatures and frescoes in some Indian palaces, were often derived from crushed semiprecious stones, while the gold and silver colouring is finely pounded pure gold and silver leaf.

By the 19th century, painting in North India was notably influenced by Western styles (especially English watercolours), giving rise to what has been dubbed the Company School, which had its centre in Delhi. Meanwhile, in the south, painter Ravi Varma painted schmaltzy mythological

The Madras Movement pioneered modern art in South India in the 1960s, and in 21st-century India, paintings by modern and contemporary Indian artists have been selling at record numbers (and prices) around the world. ## Cinema

India's film industry was born in the late 19th century – the first major Indian-made motion picture, Panorama of Calcutta, was screened in 1899. India's first real feature film, Raja Harishchandra, was made during the silent era in 1913 and it's ultimately from this film that Indian cinema traces its vibrant lineage.

Today, India's film industry is the biggest in the world – twice as big as Hollywood. Mumbai (Bombay), the Hindi-language film capital, aka 'Bollywood', is the biggest producer (p767), but India's other major film-producing cities – Chennai (Kollywood), Hyderabad (Tollywood) and Bengaluru (Sandalwood) – also have a huge output. A number of other centres produce films in their own regional vernaculars too. Big-budget films are often partly or entirely shot abroad, with some countries vigorously wooing Indian production companies because of the potential spin-off tourism revenue these films generate.

An average of 2000 feature films are produced annually in India. Apart from hundreds of millions of local Bolly-, Tolly- and Kollywood buffs, there are also millions of Non-Resident Indian (NRI) fans, who have played a significant role in catapulting Indian cinema onto the international stage.

Broadly speaking, there are two categories of Indian films. Most prominent is the mainstream 'masala' movie – named for its 'spice mix' of elements. Designed to have something for every member of the family, the films tend to have a mix of romance, action, slapstick humour and moral themes. Three hours and still running, these blockbusters are often tear-jerkers and are packed with dramatic twists interspersed with numerous song-and-dance performances. There is no explicit sex, and not even much kissing (although smooching is creeping into some Bollywood movies) in Indian films made for the local market; however, lack of nudity is often compensated for by heroines dressed in skimpy or body-hugging attire, and the lack of overt eroticism is more than made up for with heaps of intense flirting and loaded innuendos.

The second Indian film genre is art house, which adopts Indian 'reality' as its base. Generally speaking they are, or at least are supposed to be, socially and politically relevant. Usually made on infinitely smaller budgets than their commercial cousins, these films are the ones that win kudos at global film festivals and award ceremonies, such as the Lunchbox (Critics' Week Viewers Choice Award, Cannes 2013). The late Bengali director Satyajit Ray, most famous for his 1950s work, is the father of Indian art films, winning many awards for movies such as Pather Panchali, which portrays the poverty of a Bengal family.

Literature

India has a long tradition of Sanskrit literature, although works in the vernacular have contributed to a particularly rich legacy. In fact, it's claimed there are as many literary traditions as there are written languages.

Bengalis are traditionally credited with producing some of India's most celebrated literature, a movement often referred to as the Indian or Bengal Renaissance, which flourished from the 19th century with works by Bankim Chandra Chatterjee. But the man who to this day is mostly credited with first propelling India's cultural richness onto the world stage is the Bengali Rabindranath Tagore, with works such as Gitanjali (Song Offerings), Gora (Fair-Faced) and Ghare-Baire (The Home and the World).

One of the earliest Indian authors writing in English to receive an international audience, in the 1930s, is RK Narayan, whose deceptively simple writing about small-town life is subtly hilarious. Kerala Kamala Das (aka Kamala Suraiyya) wrote poetry, such as Summer in Calcutta, in English, and her memoir, My Story, in Malayalam, which she later translated to English; her frank approach to love and sexuality, especially in the 1960s and '70s, broke ground for women writers.

India has an ever-growing list of internationally acclaimed contemporary authors. Particularly prominent writers include Vikram Seth, best known for his epic novel A Suitable Boy, and Amitav Ghosh, who has won a number of accolades; his Sea of Poppies was shortlisted for the 2008 Man Booker Prize. Indeed, recent years have seen a number of Indian-born authors win the prestigious Man Booker Prize, the most recent being Aravind Adiga, who won in 2008 for his debut novel, The White Tiger. The prize went to Kiran Desai in 2006 for The Inheritance of Loss; Kiran Desai is the daughter of the award-winning Indian novelist Anita Desai, who has thrice been a Booker Prize nominee. In 1997 Arundhati Roy won the Booker Prize for her novel The God of Small Things, while Mumbai-born Salman Rushdie took this coveted award in 1981 for Midnight's Children.

The brilliant and prolific writer and artist Rabindranath Tagore won the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1913 for Gitanjali. For a taste of Tagore's work, read Selected Short Stories.

Sacred Architecture

India has a remarkable assortment of historic and contemporary sacred architecture that draws inspiration from a variety of religious denominations. Although few of the wooden and occasionally brick temples built in early times have weathered the vagaries of nature, by the advent of the Guptas (4th to 6th centuries AD) of North India, sacred structures of a new type – better engineered to withstand the elements – were being constructed, and these largely set the standard for temples for several hundred years.

For Hindus, the square is a perfect shape, and complex rules govern the location, design and building of each temple, based on numerology, astrology, astronomy and religious principles. Essentially, a temple represents a map of the universe. At the centre is an unadorned space, the garbhagriha (inner sanctum), which is symbolic of the 'womb-cave' from which the universe is believed to have emerged. This provides a residence for the deity to which the temple is dedicated.

Above a Hindu temple's shrine rises a tower superstructure known as a vimana in South India, and a sikhara in North India. The sikhara is curvilinear and topped with a grooved disk, on which sits a pot-shaped finial, while the vimana is stepped, with the grooved disk being replaced by a solid dome. Some temples have a mandapa (forechamber) connected to the sanctum by vestibules. The mandapa may also contain vimanas or sikharas.

A gopuram is a soaring pyramidal gateway tower of a Dravidian temple. The towering gopurams of various South Indian temple complexes, such as the nine-storey gopurams of Madurai's Sri Meenakshi Temple, took ornamentation and monumentalism to new levels.

Commonly used for ritual bathing and religious ceremonies, as well as adding aesthetic appeal, temple tanks have long been a focal point of temple activity. These often-vast, angular, engineered reservoirs of water, sometimes fed by rain, sometimes fed – via a complicated drainage system – by rivers, serve both sacred and secular purposes. The waters of some temple tanks are believed to have healing properties, while others are said to have the power to wash away sins. Devotees (as well as travellers) may be required to wash their feet in a temple tank before entering a place of worship.

Masterpieces of Traditional Indian Architecture by Satish Grover and The History of Architecture in India by Christopher Tadgell proffer interesting insights into temple architecture.

From the outside, Jain temples can resemble Hindu ones, but inside they're often a riot of sculptural ornamentation, the very opposite of ascetic austerity.

Buddhist shrines have their own unique features. Stupas, composed of a solid hemisphere topped by a spire, characterise Buddhist places of worship and essentially evolved from burial mounds. They served as repositories for relics of the Buddha and, later, other venerated souls. A further innovation is the addition of a chaitya (assembly hall) leading up to the stupa itself. Bodhgaya, where Siddhartha Gautama attained enlightenment and became the Buddha, has a collection of notable Buddhist monasteries and temples. The gompas (Tibetan Buddhist monasteries) found in places such as Ladakh and Sikkim are characterised by distinctly Tibetan motifs.

In 262 BC, the Mauryan emperor Ashoka embraced Buddhism, and as a penance built the Great Stupa at Sanchi, in the central Indian state of Madhya Pradesh. It is among the oldest surviving Buddhist structures in the subcontinent.

India also has a rich collection of Islamic sacred sites, as its Muslim rulers contributed their own architectural conventions, including arched cloisters and domes. The Mughals uniquely melded Persian, Indian and provincial styles. Renowned examples include Humayun's Tomb in Delhi, Agra Fort, and the ancient fortified city of Fatehpur Sikri. Emperor Islamic art eschews any hint of idolatry or portrayal of God, and it has evolved a vibrant heritage of calligraphic and decorative designs. In terms of mosque architecture, the basic design elements are similar worldwide. A large hall is dedicated to communal prayer and within the hall is a mihrab (niche) indicating the direction of Mecca. The faithful are called to prayer from minarets, placed at cardinal points. Delhi's formidable 17th-century Jama Masjid is India's biggest mosque, its courtyard able to hold 25,000 people.

The Sikh faith was founded by Guru Nanak, the first of 10 gurus, in the 15th century. Sikh temples, called gurdwaras, can usually be identified by their bud-like gumbads (domes) and nishan sahib (a flagpole flying a triangular flag with the Sikh insignia). Amritsar's stunning Golden Temple is Sikhism's holiest shrine.

India's Wildlife & Parks

The wildlife of India comprises a fascinating melting pot of animals from Europe, Asia and ancient Gondwanaland, all swirled together in a bewildering mix of habitats ranging from steamy mangrove forests and jungles to sandy deserts and icy alpine mountains.

India is celebrated for its big, bold, exalted species – tigers, elephants, rhinos, leopards, bears and monkeys. But there is much much more, including a mesmerising collection of colourful birds and some of the world's most endangered and intriguing wildlife, such as the Ganges river dolphin and the Asiatic lion.

India's Iconic Species

If you had to pick India's most charismatic species, the list would inevitably include tigers, elephants and rhinos, all of which are scarce and in need of stringent protection.

Asian elephants – a thoroughly different species to the larger African elephant – are revered in Hindu custom and were able to be domesticated and put to work in India, and many still survive in the wild. Because they migrate long distances in search of food, these 3000kg animals require huge parks; inter-species conflicts often erupt when herds of elephants attempt to follow ancestral paths that are now occupied by villages and farms. Some of the best parks for elephant viewing are Corbett Tiger Reserve (p441) in Uttarakhnad and Nagarhole National Park (p883) in Karnataka.

There are far fewer one-horned rhinos left and two-thirds (just shy of 2000) of the world's total population can be found in Kaziranga National Park (p572), where they serenely wander lush alluvial grasslands at the base of the Himalaya. They may look sedate but rhinos are unpredictably dangerous, built like battering rams, covered in plates of armour-like skin and use their sharp teeth to tear off chunks of flesh when they attack – so let's just say that it's safest to watch them from the back of an elephant.

And the tiger – fixed in the subcontinent's subconscious as the mythological mount of Durga, the powerful, demon-slaying goddess, while prowling the west's image of India as Mowgli's jungle nemesis. This awesome, iconic animal is critically endangered but can be seen, if you're lucky, at tiger reserves around the country. Your best chance of spotting one is in Madhya Pradesh.

Tourism & Conservation

Wildlife-watching has become one of the country's prime tourist activities, and there are hundreds of national parks and wildlife sanctuaries offering opportunities to spot rare and unusual creatures. Your visit helps notify the government and local people that protecting endangered species and fragile ecosystems is important, and of economic value. So take some time to track down a rhino or spot a tiger on safari.

PROJECT TIGER

When naturalist Jim Corbett first raised the alarm in the 1930s, no one believed that tigers would ever be threatened. At the time, it was believed there were 40,000 tigers in India, although no one had ever conducted a census. Then came Independence, which put guns into the hands of villagers who pushed into formerly off-limits hunting reserves seeking highly profitable tiger skins. By the time an official count was made in 1972, there were only 1800 tigers left, and the international outcry prompted Indira Gandhi to make the tiger the national symbol of India and set up Project Tiger (<http://projecttiger.nic.in>). It has since established 47 tiger reserves totaling over 68,676 sq km that protect not only this top predator but all animals that share its habitat. After an initial round of successes, relentless poaching over the past decade has caused tiger numbers to plummet, from 3600 in 2002 to around 1700 in 2011. Despite countless rupees and high-tech equipment devoted to saving this majestic animal, out of 63 wild tiger deaths in 2013, only one was from old age, while 48 were from poaching. Fortunately, the most recent tiger census results, from January 2015, show an encouraging rise in India's tiger population, to at least 2220 – a gain of over 500 in just four years.

Cats & Dogs

India is justifiably famous for its tigers, but is also home to 14 other species of cats, so don't miss any opportunities to see one of the other gorgeous felines.

Protection efforts have been successfully made on behalf of the Asiatic lion, a close relative of the more familiar African lion. A hundred years ago there were only 20 of these lions left in the world, but their population of 400-plus now seems to be doing fairly well in Gujarat's Sasan Gir National Park. Some 300 of India's 1150 leopards also roam in Gir.

An estimated 400 to 700 snow leopards survive in the alpine altitudes of Ladakh, Sikkim, Uttarakhand, Arunachal Pradesh, and Himachal Pradesh – where it is the official state animal. This much-celebrated big cat is so elusive that many locals claim it can appear and disappear at will. Your chances of seeing one are small, but if you want to seek this ghost-like feline, try the Spiti region for starters.

Other wild cats include the clouded leopard and its smaller cousin, the marbled cat, both of which lurk in the jungles of northeast India. They are strikingly marked with rosettes and rings for camouflage in the dappled light of their forest homes.

India is also home to about 1000 Indian wolves, which can best be seen in Gujarat's Blackbuck National Park. Jackals, foxes, and dholes (wild dogs) can be spotted in enclaves around the country. The rare, and most ancient, breed of wolf – the Spitian – howls over Spiti Valley.

Adaptation the Key to Success

By far the most abundant forms of wildlife you'll see in India are deer (nine species), antelope (six species), goats and sheep (10 species), and primates (15 species). In the open grasslands of many parks look for the stocky nilgai, India's largest antelope, or elegantly horned blackbucks. If you're heading for the mountains, keep your eyes open in the Himalaya for blue sheep – with partially curled horns – or the rare argali, with fully curled horns, found in Ladakh. The deserts of Rajasthan and Gujarat are home to arid land species such as chinkaras (Indian gazelles); while the mangrove swamps of the Sundarban Delta have chitals (spotted deer), who cope with their brackish environment by excreting salt from their nasal glands. Chitals are also the most abundant deer in central India's high-profile tiger reserves.

India's national animal is the tiger, its national bird is the peacock and its national flower is the lotus. The national emblem of India is a column topped by three Asiatic lions.

For memorable wildlife shots, a camera with a long lens – at least 300mm – is essential.

India's primates range from the extremely rare hoolock gibbon and golden langur of the northeast to species that are so common as to be pests – most notably the stocky and aggressive rhesus macaque and the elegant grey (Hanuman) langur. In the south, the pesky monkeys that loiter around temples and tourist sites are bonnet macaques.

Endangered Species

Despite having amazing biodiversity, India faces a growing challenge from its exploding human population. Wildlife is severely threatened by poaching and habitat loss. A recent count suggested India had over 500 threatened species, including 247 species of plants, 53 species of mammals, 78 species of birds, 22 species of reptiles, 68 species of amphibians, 35 species of fish and 22 species of invertebrates. In 2012, the International Union for Conservation of Nature released a list of the 100 most threatened species in the world. It included four Indian species; a spider, a turtle and two birds – the great Indian bustard and white-bellied heron.

Although much touted as a success, even the well-resourced Project Tiger faces an uphill battle every day. Every good news story seems to be followed by yet another story of poaching gangs or tiger or leopard attacks on villagers. All of India's wild cats, from leopards to snow leopards, panthers and jungle cats are facing extinction from habitat loss and poaching for the lucrative trade in skins and body parts for Chinese medicine (a whole tiger carcass can fetch upwards of UK£32,000). Government estimates suggest that India is losing 1% of its tigers every year to poachers. Still, conservation efforts are seeing some notable successes, with a nearly 30% increase in the country's tiger population over the past four years alone.

Even highly protected rhinos are poached for the illegal medicine trade – rhino horn is highly valued as an aphrodisiac in China and as a material for making handles for daggers in the Gulf. Elephants are regularly poached for ivory. From 2000 to 2008, some 320 elephants were poached; do not support this illegal trade by buying ivory souvenirs. Various species of deer are threatened by hunting for food and trophies, and the chiru, or Tibetan antelope, is nearly extinct because its hair is woven into wool for expensive shahtoosh shawls.

India's bear species remain under threat, although sloth bears are experiencing a reprieve with the recent demise of the dancing bear industry. In the rivers, India's famous freshwater dolphins are in dire straits from pollution, habitat alteration and direct human competition. The sea-turtle populations that nest on the Orissa coast also face environmental challenges.

Threatened primate species clinging on in rainforests in the south include lion-tailed macaques, glossy black Nilgiri langurs and the slender loris, an adept insect-catcher with huge eyes for nocturnal hunting.

Birds

With well over 1000 species of birds, India is a birdwatcher's dream. Many birds are thinly spread over this vast country, but wherever critical habitat has been preserved in the midst of dense human activity, you might see phenomenal numbers of birds in one location. Winter can be

India has some of the richest biodiversity in the world. There are 397 species of mammals, 1250 bird species, 460 types of reptiles, 240 amphibian species and 2546 fish species – among the highest species count for any country.

India has 238 species of snake, of which about 50 are poisonous. Of the various species of cobra, the king cobra is the world's largest venomous snake, attaining a length of 5m.

ANIMAL ATTACKS

Human/animal conflict is on the rise in India, as wildlife habitat shrinks and human settlement expands. In recent years, about 80 people are killed or injured annually by tigers, and its not unusual to hear of leopard attacks in villages and cities across northern India – even in Mumbai! While such attacks get lots of press coverage and cause great panic, around 46,000 Indians die each year from snakebite, and 20,000 die from rabid dog bites. It's rare for tigers to turn into true maneaters; those that do are generally old, injured, or both.

a particularly good time, as wetlands throughout the country host northern migrants arriving to kick back in the lush subtropical warmth of the Indian peninsula. Throughout the year, wherever you may be travelling, look for colourful kingfishers, barbets, sunbirds, parakeets and magpies, or the blue flash of an Indian roller. Keen types will take a special trip into the Himalaya in search of one of India's (and the world's) mostly highly sought-after birds, the enigmatic ibisbill.

Once considered the premier duck-hunting destination in the British Empire when royal hunting parties would shoot 4000 ducks in a single day, the seasonal wetlands of Rajasthan's Keoladeo Ghana were elevated to national park status in 1982, and the park is rightly famous for its migratory avian visitors. Now whittled down to a relatively small pocket of habitat amid a sea of villages and agricultural fields, this is still one of the finest birdwatching destinations in the world. Even better, Keoladeo Ghana and its abundant birdlife are ridiculously easy to explore: just hop on a bike at the gate and tootle around the flat tracks that weave among the park's clearly defined ponds and marshes. In the winter there are so many ducks, herons, storks, cranes, egrets and raptors packing themselves into the park that your foremost problem will be trying to identify individual animals amid the chaos.

Plants

Once upon a time India was almost entirely covered in forest; now its total forest cover is estimated to be around 20%. Despite widespread clearing of native habitats, the country still boasts 49,219 plant species, of which some 5200 are endemic. Species on the southern peninsula show Malaysian ancestry, while desert plants in Rajasthan are more clearly allied with the Middle East, and the conifer forests of the Himalaya derive from European and Siberian origins. The Forest Survey of India has set an optimistic target of returning to 33% cover.

Outside of the mountain forests found in the Himalaya, nearly all the lowland forests of India are subtypes of tropical forest, with native sal forests forming the mainstay of the timber industry. Some of these tropical forests are true rainforest, staying green year-round – such as in the Western Ghats and in the northeast states – but most forests are deciduous; during the hot, dry months of April and May, many forests lose their canopies, as leaves wither and fall from the trees. This is often the best time to view wildlife, as the cover is thinner, and animals seek out scarce waterholes.

High-value trees such as Indian rosewood, Malabar kino and teak have been virtually cleared from the Western Ghats, and sandalwood is endangered across India due to illegal logging for the incense and wood-carving industries. A bigger threat to forested lands is firewood harvesting, often carried out by landless peasants who squat on gazetted government land.

Several trees have significant religious value in India, including the silk-cotton tree, a huge tree with spiny bark and large red flowers under which Pitamaha (Brahma), the god of creation, sat after his labours. Two well-known figs, the banyan and peepal, grow to immense size by dangling roots from their branches and fusing into massive multi-trunked jungles of trunks and stems – one giant is nearly 200m across. It is said

BIG & SMALL

India's largest contiguous protected area is the Nanda Devi Biosphere Reserve, in Uttarakhand; covering 2237 sq.km. It includes India's second-highest peak (Nanda Devi – 7817m) and the famous Valley of Flowers. India's smallest national park is South Button Island, in the Andamans, at less than 5 sq.km.

PARKS & PEOPLE

While national parks and wildlife sanctuaries have been crucial to protecting the habitats of India's endangered species, their creation has had some tragic consequences. As a result of the Wildlife Protection Act of 1972, which banned people from living in parks, about 1.6 million Adivasis and other forest-dwellers have been evicted from their traditional lands. Many were resettled into villages and forced to abandon their age-old ways of life, resulting in profound personal suffering and irreplaceable cultural losses. Today, the Forest Rights Act of 2006 forbids the displacement of forest-dwellers from national parks (except in so-called "critical wildlife habitat"), and should protect the four-million-or-so people who still live in them. It's still too early to tell how successful the law will be at helping tribes remain in parks – and how their continued presence will impact fragile wildlife habitat.

For more on the Forest Rights Act and issues surrounding 'people in parks', visit www.forestrightsact.com; also see the Van Gujjar Project at www.traditionalculturesproject.org.

that Buddha achieved enlightenment while sitting under a peepal (also known as the Bodhi tree).

The foothills and slopes of the Himalaya preserve classic montane species, including blue pine and deodar (Himalayan cedar), and deciduous forests of apple, chestnut, birch, plum and cinnamon. Above the snowline, hardy plants such as anemones, edelweiss and gentians can be prolific, and one fabulous place to see such flowers is at the Valley of Flowers National Park.

India's hot deserts have their own unique species – the khejri tree and various strains of scrub acacia. The hardy sea-buckthorn bush is the main fruiting shrub in the high-altitude deserts of the Himalaya.

Around 2000 plant species are described in Ayurveda (traditional Indian herbal medicine) texts.

National Parks & Wildlife Sanctuaries

Prior to 1972 India only had five national parks. The Wildlife Protection Act was introduced that year to set aside land for parks and stem the abuse of wildlife. The act was followed by a string of similar pieces of legislation with bold ambitions but few teeth with which to enforce them.

India now has about 100 national parks and 500 wildlife sanctuaries, which constitute around 5% of India's territory. An additional 70 parks have been authorised on paper but not yet implemented on the ground or only implemented to varying degrees. There are also 14 biosphere reserves, overlapping many of the national parks and sanctuaries, providing safe migration channels for wildlife and allowing scientists to monitor biodiversity.

We strongly recommend visiting at least one national park or sanctuary on your travels – the experience of coming face-to-face with a wild elephant, rhino or tiger will stay with you for a lifetime, while your visit adds momentum to efforts to protect India's natural resources. Wildlife reserves tend to be off the beaten track and infrastructure can be limited – book transport and accommodation in advance, and check opening times, permit requirements and entry fees before you visit. Many parks close to conduct a census of wildlife in the low season, and monsoon rains can make wildlife-viewing tracks inaccessible.

Located almost perfectly in the centre of the country, Bandhavgarh National Park is one dynamic example of what the original Indian landscape might have been like. Here you can explore meadows, forests and rocky ridges in a thrilling search for tigers, leopards and other big fauna.

Almost all parks offer jeep/van tours, but you can also search for wildlife on guided treks, boat trips and elephant safaris. New rules introduced in 2012 put an end to 'tiger shows', whereby resting tigers became sitting ducks for tourists that were radioed in, taken off their jeep and put on elephants to get close to the, presumably peeved, resting tiger. Also, in many reserves, safari vehicle visits have been reduced and some tiger sanctuaries may be closed to safaris one day a week. These new rules still are in flux, so do find out the latest situation before booking your safari.

The Landscape

India is an incredibly diverse country with everything from steamy jungles and tropical beaches to arid deserts and the soaring icy peaks of the Himalaya. At 3,287,263 sq km, it is the second-largest Asian country after China, and forms the vast bulk of the South Asian subcontinent – an ancient block of earth crust that carried a wealth of unique plants and animals like a lifeboat across a prehistoric ocean before slamming into Asia about 40 million years ago.

India is home to 18% of the world's population crowded together on 2.5% of the world's landmass – making it the second-most densely populated among the 10 most populous countries on earth (after Bangladesh).

The Lie of The Land

Look for the three major geographic features that define modern-day India: Himalayan peaks and hills along the northern borders, the flood-plains of the Indus and Ganges Rivers in the north, and the elevated Deccan Plateau that forms the core of India's triangular southern peninsula.

The Himalaya

As the world's highest mountains – with the highest peak in India (Khangchendzonga) reaching 8598m – the Himalaya create an almost impregnable boundary separating India from its neighbours to the north. These mountains formed when the Indian subcontinent broke away from Gondwanaland, a supercontinent in the Southern Hemisphere that included Africa, Antarctica, Australia and South America. All by itself, India drifted north and finally slammed slowly, but with immense force, into the Eurasian continent about 40 million years ago, buckling the ancient seafloor upward to form the Himalaya and many lesser ranges that stretch 2500km from Afghanistan to Myanmar (Burma).

When the Himalaya reached its great heights during the Pleistocene (less than 150,000 years ago), it blocked and altered weather systems, creating the monsoon climate that dominates India today, as well as forming a dry rainshadow to the north.

Although it looks like a continuous range on a map, the Himalaya is actually a series of interlocking ridges, separated by countless valleys. Until technology enabled roadbuilding into the Himalaya, many of these valleys were virtually isolated, creating a diverse array of mountain cultures.

The Indo-Gangetic Plains

Covering most of northern India, the vast alluvial plains of the sacred Ganges River are so flat that they drop a mere 200m between Delhi and the waterlogged wetlands of West Bengal, where the river joins forces with the Brahmaputra River from India's northeast, before dumping into the sea in Bangladesh. Vast quantities of eroded sediments from the neighbouring highlands accumulate on the plains to a depth of nearly 2km, creating fertile, well-watered agricultural land. This densely populated region was once extensively forested and rich in wildlife.

Gujarat in the far west of India is separated from Sindh (Pakistan) by the Rann of Kutch, a brackish marshland that becomes a huge inland sea during the wet season; the waters recede in the dry season, leaving isolated islands perched on an expansive plain.

It is estimated that India's population will reach 1.3 billion people by 2016.

The Deccan Plateau

South of the Indo-Gangetic (northern) plain, the land rises to the Deccan Plateau, marking the divide between the Mughal heartlands of North India and the Dravidian civilisations of the south. The Deccan is bound on either side by the Western and Eastern Ghats, which come together in their southern reaches to form the Nilgiri Hills in Tamil Nadu.

On the Deccan's western border, the Western Ghats drop sharply down to a narrow coastal lowland, forming a luxuriant slope of rainforest.

The Islands

Offshore from India are a series of island groups, politically part of India but geographically linked to the landmasses of Southeast Asia and islands of the Indian Ocean. The Andaman and Nicobar Islands sit far out in the Bay of Bengal, while the coral atolls of Lakshadweep (300km west of Kerala) are a northerly extension of the Maldives islands, with a land area of just 32 sq km.

Environmental Issues

With well over a billion people, ever-expanding industrial and urban centres, and growth in chemical-intensive farming, India's environment is under tremendous pressure. An estimated 65% of the land is degraded in some way, most of it seriously, and the government has been consistently falling short of the majority of its environmental protection goals. Many current problems are a direct result of the Green Revolution of the 1960s, when chemical fertilisers and pesticides enabled huge growth in agricultural output but at enormous cost to the environment.

Despite numerous environmental laws, corruption continues to exacerbate environmental degradation – exemplified by the flagrant flouting of laws by companies involved in hydroelectricity and mining. Usually, the people most affected are low-caste rural farmers and Adivasis (tribal people) who have limited political representation and few resources to fight big businesses.

Agricultural production has been reduced by soil degradation from over-farming, rising soil salinity, loss of tree cover and poor irrigation. The human cost is heart-rending, and lurking behind all these problems is a basic Malthusian truth: there are far too many people for India to support.

As anywhere, tourists tread a fine line between providing an incentive for change and making the problem worse. For example, many of the environmental problems in Goa are a direct result of irresponsible

Get the inside track on Indian environmental issues at Down to Earth (www.downtoearth.org.in), an online magazine that delves into stories overlooked by mainstream media.

STRADDLING THE FUTURE

India is grappling with a major dilemma: how to develop, modernise and grow economically, without destroying what's left of its environment, or adding to the global climate problem. The current government, led by Narendra Modi, offers mixed signals as to its priorities. On one hand, Modi has made it his personal mission to clean the Ganges River by 2019, has launched the much-publicised Swachh Bharat campaign to reduce trash pollution nationwide, and supports large-scale solar power generation. But his government has also pledged to increase domestic coal mining and double its use, adding significantly to India's greenhouse gas emissions. Meanwhile, the committee that's rewriting India's environmental regulations has proposed abandoning government inspections, saying, according to the New York Times, that "India should rely on business owners to voluntarily disclose the pollution that their projects will generate and then monitor their own compliance". Also according to the New York Times, Modi's environment minister defended decisions to cut regulations, saying that the government was "not phasing out important environmental protections, just 'those which, in the name of caring for nature, were stopping progress'".

The Andaman and Nicobar Islands comprise 572 islands and are the peaks of a vast submerged mountain range extending almost 1000km between Myanmar (Burma) and Sumatra.

Noise pollution in major cities has been measured at over 90 decibels – more than one and a half times the recognised 'safe' limit. Bring earplugs!

Downstream of Varanasi, the Ganges River is a black, septic mess with 3000 times the acceptable limit of faecal coliform bacteria.

development for tourism. Always consider your environmental impact while travelling in India.

Climate Change

Changing climate patterns – linked to global carbon emissions – have been creating dangerous extremes of weather in India. While India's per capita carbon emissions still rank far behind that of the USA, Australia and Europe, the sheer size of its population makes it a major polluter.

It has been estimated that by 2030, India will see a 30% increase in the severity of its floods and droughts. In the mountain deserts of Ladakh, increased rainfall is changing time-honoured farming patterns, while glaciers on nearby peaks are melting at alarming rates. In 2013, devastating flooding hit Uttarakhand – with unconfirmed estimates of between 6000 and 50,000 people killed over the course of a couple of days. In 2014, massive floods struck the Kashmir Valley, inundating Srinagar, wreaking widespread damage and loss of life. Conversely, other areas are experiencing reduced rainfall, causing drought and riots over access to water. Islands in the Lakshadweep group as well as the low-lying plains of the Ganges delta are being inundated by rising sea levels.

Deforestation

Since Independence, over 50,000 sq km of India's forests have been cleared for logging and farming, or destroyed by urban expansion, mining, industrialisation and river dams. Even in the well-funded, highly protected Project Tiger parks, the amount of forest cover classified as 'degraded' has tripled due to illegal logging. The number of mangrove forests has halved since the early 1990s, reducing the nursery grounds for the fish that stock the Indian Ocean and Bay of Bengal.

India's first Five Year Plan in 1951 recognised the importance of forests for soil conservation, and various policies have been introduced to increase forest cover. Almost all have been flouted by officials or criminals and by ordinary people clearing forests for firewood and grazing in forest areas. What can you do? Try to minimise the use of wood-burning stoves while you travel. Further, you could support the numerous charities working with rural communities to encourage tree planting.

Water Resources

Arguably the biggest threat to public health in India is inadequate access to clean drinking water and proper sanitation. With the population set to double by 2050, agricultural, industrial and domestic water usage are all expected to spiral, despite government policies designed to control water use. The World Health Organisation estimates that, out of more than 3000 cities and towns in India, only eight have adequate waste-water treatment facilities. Many cities dump untreated sewage and partially cremated bodies directly into rivers, while open defecation is a simple fact of life in most rural (and many urban) areas.

Rivers are also affected by run-off, industrial pollution and sewage contamination – the Sabarmati, Yamuna and Ganges are among the most polluted rivers on earth. At least 70% of the freshwater sources in India are now polluted in some way. In recent years, drought has devastated parts of the subcontinent (particularly Rajasthan and Gujarat) and has been a driving force for rural-to-urban migration.

Water distribution is another volatile issue. Since 1947 an estimated 35 million people in India have been displaced by major dams, mostly built to provide hydroelectricity for this increasingly power-hungry nation. While hydroelectricity is one of the greener power sources, valleys across India are being sacrificed to create new power plants, and displaced people rarely receive adequate compensation.

Scams

India has a deserved reputation for scams. Of course, most can be easily avoided with a little common sense and an appropriate amount of caution. Scams tend to be more of a problem in the big cities of arrival (such as Delhi or Mumbai), or very touristy spots (such as Rajasthan), though in Goa and Kerala they are rare. Chat with fellow travellers to keep abreast of the latest cons. Look at the India branch of Lonely Planet's Thorn Tree Travel Forum (www.lonelyplanet.com/thorntree), where travellers post warnings about problems they have encountered on the road.

Contaminated Food & Drink

➤ The late 1990s saw a scam in North India where travellers died after consuming food laced with dangerous bacteria from restaurants linked to dodgy medical clinics; we've heard no recent reports but the scam could resurface. In unrelated incidents, some clinics have also given more treatment than necessary to procure larger payments.

➤ Most bottled water is legit, but ensure the seal is intact and the bottom of the bottle hasn't been tampered with. While in transit, try to carry packed food. If you eat at bus or train stations, buy cooked food only from fast-moving places.

Credit-Card Con

Be careful when paying for souvenirs with a credit card. While government shops are usually legitimate, private souvenir shops have been known to run off extra copies of the credit-card imprint and use them for phoney transactions later. Ask the trader to process the transaction in front of you. Memorising the CVV/CVC2 number and scratching it off the card is also a good idea, to avoid misuse. In some restaurants, waiters will ask you for your PIN with the intention of taking your credit card to the machine – never give your PIN to anyone, and ask to use the machine in person.

Druggings

Occasionally, tourists (especially solo travellers) are drugged and robbed during train or bus journeys. A spiked drink is the most commonly used method for sending them off to sleep – chocolates, chai from a co-conspiring vendor and 'homemade' Indian food are also known to be used. Use your instincts, and if you're unsure, politely decline drinks or food offered by strangers.

Gem Scams

This classic scam involves charming con artists who promise foolproof 'get rich quick' schemes. Travellers are asked to carry or mail gems home and then sell them to the trader's (nonexistent) overseas representatives at a profit. Without exception, the goods – if they arrive at all – are worth a fraction of what you paid, and the 'representatives' never materialise.

KEEPING SAFE

- A good travel-insurance policy is essential.
- Email copies of your passport identity page, visa and airline tickets to yourself, and keep copies on you.
- Keep your money and passport in a concealed money belt or a secure place under your shirt.
- Store at least US$100 separately from your main stash.
- Don't publicly display large wads of cash when paying for services or checking into hotels.
- If you can't lock your hotel room securely from the inside, stay somewhere else.

Don't believe hard-luck stories about an inability to obtain an export licence, or the testimonials they show you from other travellers – they are fake. Travellers have reported this con happening in Agra, Delhi, and Jaipur among other places, but it's particularly prevalent in Jaipur. Carpets, curios and pashminas are other favourites for this con.

Overpricing

Always agree on prices beforehand while availing services that don't have regulated tariffs. This particularly applies to friendly neighbourhood guides, snack bars at places of tourist interest, and autorickshaws and taxis without meters.

Photography

Use your instincts (better still, ask for permission) while photographing people. The common argument – sometimes voiced after you've snapped your photos – is you're going to sell them to glossy international magazines, so it's only fair that you pay a fee.

Theft

Theft is a risk in India, as anywhere else. Keep luggage locked and chained on buses and trains. Remember that snatchings often occur when a train is pulling out of the station, as it's too late for you to give chase.

Touts & Commission Agents

➔ Touts come in many avatars and operate in mysterious ways. Cabbies and autorickshaw drivers will often try to coerce you to stay at a budget hotel of their choice, only to collect a commission (included within your room tariff) from the receptionists afterward.

➔ Wherever possible, arrange hotel bookings (if only for

OTHER TOP SCAMS

- ➔ Gunk (dirt, paint, poo) suddenly appears on your shoes, only for a shoe cleaner to magically appear and offer to clean it off – for a price.
- ➔ Some shops are selling overpriced SIM cards and not activating them; it's best to buy your SIM from an official shop (Airtel, Vodafone etc) and check it works before leaving the area (activation can take 24 hours).
- ➔ Shops and restaurants 'borrow' the name of their more successful and popular competitor.
- ➔ Touts claim to be 'government-approved' guides or agents, and sting you for large sums of cash. Enquire at the local tourist office about licensed guides and ask to see identification from guides themselves.
- ➔ Artificial 'tourist offices' that are actually dodgy travel agencies whose aim is to sell you overpriced tours, tickets and tourist services.

the first night), and request a hotel pick-up. You'll often hear stories about hotels of your choice being 'full' or 'closed' – check things out yourself. Reconfirm and double-check your booking the day before you arrive.

- ➔ Be very sceptical of phrases like 'my brother's shop' and 'special deal at my friend's place'. Many fraudsters operate in collusion with souvenir stalls, so be careful while making expensive purchases in private stores.
- ➔ Avoid friendly people and 'officials' in train and bus stations who offer unsolicited help, then guide you to a commission-paying travel agent. Look confident, and if anyone asks if this is your first trip to India, say you've been here several times, even if you haven't. Telling touts that you have already prepaid your transfer/tour/onward journey may help dissuade them.

Transport Scams

- ➔ Upon arriving at train stations and airports, if you haven't prearranged pick-up, book transport from government-approved booths. All major airports now have radio cab, prepaid taxi and airport shuttle bus counters in the arrival lounge. Never go with a loitering cabbie who offers you a cheap ride into town, especially at night.

- ➔ While booking multiday sightseeing tours, stick to itineraries offered by tourism departments, or those that come recommended either in this guidebook or by friends who've personally used them. Be extremely wary of anyone in Delhi offering houseboat tours to Kashmir – we've received many complaints over the years about dodgy deals.
- ➔ When buying a bus, train or plane ticket anywhere other than the registered office of the transport company, make sure you're getting the ticket class you paid for. Use official online booking facilities where possible.
- ➔ Some tricksters pose as Indian Railways officials and insist you pay to have your e-ticket validated on the platform; ignore them.
- ➔ Train station touts (even in uniform or with 'official' badges) may tell you that your intended train is cancelled/flooded/broken down or that your ticket is invalid. Do not respond to any 'official' approaches at train stations.

Women & Solo Travellers

There are extra considerations for women and solo travellers when visiting India – from cost to safety. As with anywhere else in the world, it pays to be prepared.

Women Travellers

Although Bollywood might suggest otherwise, India remains a conservative society. Female travellers should be aware that their behaviour and attire choice are likely to be under constant scrutiny.

Unwanted Attention

Unwanted attention from men is a common problem.

- Be prepared to be stared at; it's something you'll simply have to live with, so don't allow it to get the better of you.
- Refrain from returning male stares; this can be considered encouragement.
- Dark glasses, phones, books or electronic tablets are useful props for averting unwanted conversations.

Clothing

Avoiding culturally inappropriate clothing will help avert undesirable attention.

- Steer clear of sleeveless tops, shorts, short skirts (ankle-length skirts are recommended) and anything else that's skimpy, see-through or tight-fitting.
- Wearing Indian-style clothes is viewed favourably.

➤ Draping a dupatta (long scarf) over T-shirts is another good way to avoid stares – it's shorthand for modesty, and also handy if you visit a shrine that requires your head to be covered.

➤ Wearing a salwar kameez (traditional dresslike tunic and trousers) will help you blend in; a smart alternative is a kurta (long shirt) worn over jeans or trousers.

➤ Avoid going out in public wearing a choli (sari blouse) or a sari petticoat (which some foreign women mistake for a skirt); it's like strutting around half-dressed.

➤ Aside from at pools, many Indian women wear long shorts and a T-shirt when swimming in public view; it's wise to wear a sarong from the beach to your hotel.

Health & Hygiene

➤ Sanitary pads are widely available but tampons are usually restricted to pharmacies in big cities and tourist towns (even then, the choice may be limited). Carry additional stocks for travel off the beaten track.

Sexual Harassment

Many female travellers have reported some form of sexual harassment while in India, such as lewd comments, invasion of privacy and even groping. Serious sexual assaults do happen but are rare; follow similar safety precautions as you would at home.

➤ Women travellers have experienced provocative gestures, jeering, getting 'accidentally' bumped into on the street and being followed.

➤ Incidents are common at exuberant (and crowded) public events such as the Holi festival. If a crowd is gathering, make yourself scarce or find a safer place overlooking the event so that you're away from wandering hands.

➤ Women travelling with a male partner will receive far less hassle.

Staying Safe

The following tips will help you avoid uncomfortable or dangerous situations during your journey:

- Always be aware of your surroundings. If it feels wrong, trust your instincts. Tread with care. Don't be scared, but don't be reckless either.
- If travelling after 9pm, use a recommended, registered taxi service.
- Don't organise your travel in such a way that means you're hanging out at bus/train stations or arriving late at night. Arrive in towns before dark.
- Keep conversations with unknown men short – getting involved in an inane conversation with someone you barely know can be misinterpreted as a sign of sexual interest.

- ➔ Some women wear a pseudo wedding ring, or announce early on in the conversation that they're married or engaged (regardless of the reality).
- ➔ If you feel that a guy is encroaching on your space, he probably is. A firm request to keep away usually does the trick, especially if your tone is loud and curt enough to draw the attention of passers-by.
- ➔ The silent treatment can also be very effective.
- ➔ Follow local women's cues and instead of shaking hands say namaste – the traditional, respectful Hindu greeting.
- ➔ Avoid wearing expensive-looking jewellery and carrying flashy accessories.
- ➔ Check the reputation of any teacher or therapist before going to a solo session (get recommendations from travellers). Some women have reported being molested by masseurs and other therapists. If you feel uneasy at any time, leave.
- ➔ Female filmgoers may attract less attention and lessen the chances of harassment by going to the cinema with a companion.
- ➔ Lone women may want to invest in a good-quality hotel in a better neighbourhood.
- ➔ At hotels keep your door locked, as staff (particularly at budget and midrange places) can knock and walk in without waiting for your permission.
- ➔ Avoid wandering alone in isolated areas even during daylight. Steer clear of gullies (narrow lanes) and deserted roads.
- ➔ When on rickshaws alone, call/text someone, or pretend to, to indicate someone knows where you are.
- ➔ Act confidently in public; to avoid looking lost (and thus more vulnerable) consult maps at your hotel (or at a restaurant) rather than on the street.

Taxis & Public Transport

Being female has some advantages; women can usually queue-jump for buses and trains without consequence and on trains there are special ladies-only carriages. There are also women-only waiting rooms at some stations.

- ➔ Solo women should prearrange an airport pick-up from their hotel, especially if their flight is scheduled to arrive after dark.
- ➔ Delhi and some other cities have licensed prepaid radio cab services such as Easycabs – they're more expensive than the regular prepaid taxis, but promote themselves as being safe, with drivers who have been vetted as part of their recruitment.
- ➔ If you do catch a regular prepaid taxi, make a point of writing down the registration and driver's name – in front of the driver – and giving it to one of the airport police.
- ➔ Avoid taking taxis alone late at night and never agree to have more than one man (the driver) in the car – ignore claims that this is 'just my brother' etc.
- ➔ Solo women have reported less hassle by choosing more expensive classes on trains.
- ➔ If you're travelling overnight in a three-tier carriage, try to get the uppermost berth, which will give you more privacy (and distance from potential gropers).
- ➔ On public transport, don't hesitate to return any errant limbs, put an item of luggage between you and others, be vocal (attracting public attention, thus shaming the pest), or simply find a new spot.

Solo Travellers

One of the joys of travelling solo in India is that you're more likely to be 'adopted' by families, especially if you're commuting together on a long rail journey. It's a great opportunity to make friends and get a deeper understanding of local culture. If you're keen to hook up with fellow travellers, tourist hubs such as Goa, Rajasthan, Kerala, Manali, McLeod Ganj, Leh, Agra and Varanasi are some popular places to do so. You may also be able to find travel companions on Lonely Planet's Thorn Tree Travel Forum (www.lonelyplanet.com/thorntree).

Cost

The most significant issue facing solo travellers is cost.

- ➔ Single-room accommodation rates are sometimes not much lower than double rates.
- ➔ Some midrange and top-end places don't even offer a single tariff.
- ➔ It's always worth trying to negotiate a lower rate for single occupancy.

Safety

Most solo travellers experience no major problems in India but, like anywhere else, it's wise to stay on your toes in unfamiliar surroundings.

- ➔ Some less honourable souls (locals and travellers alike) view lone tourists as an easy target for theft and sexual assault.
- ➔ Single men wandering around isolated areas have been mugged, even during the day.

Transport

- ➔ You'll save money if you find others to share taxis and autorickshaws, as well as when hiring a car for longer trips.
- ➔ Solo bus travellers may be able to get the 'co-pilot' (near the driver) seat on buses, which not only has a good view out front, but is also handy if you've got a big bag.

Directory A-Z

Accommodation

Accommodation in India ranges from backpacker dives with bucket showers to opulent palaces with plunge pools. We've listed reviews first by price range and then by author preference.

Categories

Budget (₹) covers everything from hostels, hotels and guesthouses in urban areas to traditional homestays in villages. Midrange hotels (₹₹) tend to offer extras such as cable/satellite TV and air-conditioning. Top-end places (₹₹₹) stretch from luxury five-star chains to gorgeous heritage palaces.

Costs

Given that the cost of budget, midrange and top-end hotels varies so much across India, it would be misleading for us to provide a 'national' price strategy. Most establishments raise tariffs annually, so prices may have risen by the time you read this. Prices are highest in large cities (eg Delhi, Mumbai) and lowest in rural areas (eg Bihar, Andhra Pradesh). Costs are also seasonal – hotel prices can drop by 20% to 50% outside of peak season.

Price Icons

Lonely Planet price indicators refer to the cost of a double room, including private bathroom, unless otherwise noted.

Reservations

- ➔ It's a good idea to book ahead, online or by phone, especially when travelling to more popular destinations. Some hotels require a credit-card deposit at the time of booking.
- ➔ Some budget options won't take reservations as they don't know when people are going to check-out; call ahead or just turn up around check-out time.
- ➔ Other places may want a deposit at check-in – ask for a receipt and be wary of any request to sign a blank impression of your credit card. If the hotel insists, pay cash.
- ➔ Verify the check-out time when you check-in – some hotels have a fixed check-out time (usually 10am or noon), while others offer 24-hour check-out. In some places, check-out can be as early as 9am. Sometimes you can request to check in early and the hotel will oblige if the room is empty.

Seasons

- ➔ Rates given are full price in high season. High season usually coincides with the best weather for the area's sights and activities – normally spring and autumn in the mountains (March to May and September to November), and the cooler months in the plains (around November to mid-February).
- ➔ In areas popular with foreign tourists, there's an additional peak period over Christmas and New Year; make reservations well in advance.
- ➔ At other times you may find significant discounts; if the hotel seems quiet, ask for one.
- ➔ Some hotels in places such as Goa close during the monsoon period, or in hill stations such as Manali during winter.
- ➔ Many temple towns have additional peak seasons around major festivals and pilgrimages.

BOOK YOUR STAY ONLINE

For more accommodation reviews by Lonely Planet authors, check out <http://lonelyplanet.com/hotels/>. You'll find independent reviews, as well as recommendations on the best places to stay. Best of all, you can book online.

Taxes & Service Charges

- ➔ State governments slap a variety of taxes on hotel accommodation (except at the cheaper hotels), and these are added to the cost of your room.

- ➔ Taxes vary from state to state. Even within a state prices can vary, with more expensive hotels levying higher taxes.
- ➔ Many upmarket hotels also add an additional 'service charge' (usually around 10%).
- ➔ Rates quoted in this book include taxes.
- ➔ Some upscale restaurants may add a service charge (between 10% and 13%) on meals.

Budget & Midrange Hotels

- ➔ Sometimes you'll luck out and find these in atmospheric old houses or heritage buildings, but the majority of budget and midrange hotels are modern-style concrete blocks with varying degrees of comfort. Some are charming, clean and good value; others less so. Room quality can vary considerably within a hotel so try to inspect a few rooms first.
- ➔ Shared bathrooms (often with squat toilets) are usually only found at the cheapest lodgings. Most rooms have ceiling fans and better rooms have electric mosquito killers and/or window nets, though cheaper rooms may lack windows altogether.
- ➔ If you're mostly staying in budget places, bring your own sheet or sleeping-bag liner, towel and soap. Sheets and bedclothes at cheap hotels can be stained, worn and in need of a wash, and towels and toiletries are often not supplied.
- ➔ An insect repellent and a torch (flashlight) are essential accessories in many budget hotels. Sound pollution can be irksome (especially in urban hubs);

SAMPLE ACCOMMODATION COSTS

CATEGORY	MUMBAI	RAJASTHAN	SIKKIM
₹ budget	<₹2500	<₹1000	<₹1500
₹₹ midrange	₹2500-6000	₹1000-5000	₹1500-4000
₹₹₹ top end	<₹6000	<₹5000	<₹4000 pack earplugs and request a room that doesn't face a busy road.

- ➔ It's wise to keep your door locked at all times, as some staff (particularly in budget hotels) may knock and walk in without awaiting your permission. Blackouts are common (especially during summer and the monsoon) so double-check that the hotel has a back-up generator if you're paying for electric 'extras' such as air-conditioners, TVs and wi-fi.
- ➔ A room with a TV generally guarantees a working power socket for charging your phone, ipad etc.
- ➔ Note that some hotels lock their doors at night. Members of staff might sleep in the lobby but waking them up can be a challenge. Let the hotel know in advance if you'll be arriving late at night or leaving early in the morning.
- ➔ Away from tourist areas, cheaper hotels may not take foreigners because they don't have the necessary foreigner-registration forms.

Camping

There are few official camping sites in India. On the other hand, wild camping is often the only accommodation option on trekking routes.

In some mountain or desert areas you'll also find summer-only tented camps, with accommodation in semipermanent 'Swiss tents' with attached bathrooms.

Dormitory Accommodation

There's a burgeoning number of great backpacker hostels across India, notably in Delhi, Varanasi and Goa.

A number of hotels have cheap dormitories, though these may be mixed gender and, in less touristy places, full of drunken males – not ideal conditions for women. The handful of hostels run by the YMCA, YWCA and Salvation Army or associated with HI or YHA! (Youth Hostels Association of India) are more traveller-friendly.

Government Accommodation & Tourist Bungalows

The Indian government maintains a network of guest-houses for travelling officials and public workers, known variously as rest houses, dak bungalows, circuit houses, PWD (Public Works Department) bungalows and forest rest houses. These places may accept travellers if no government employees need the rooms, but permission is sometimes required from local officials.

'Tourist bungalows' are run by state governments – rooms are usually mid-priced (some with cheap dorms) and have varying standards of cleanliness and service.

Some state governments also run chains of more expensive hotels, including some lovely heritage properties. Check with the local state tourism office.

Homestays & B&Bs

These family-run guest-houses will appeal to those seeking a small-scale, more homey setting with home-cooked meals.

Standards range from mud-and-stone village huts with hole-in-the-floor toilets to comfortable middle-class homes in cities.

In places like Ladakh, homestays are increasingly the way to go but standards are fairly simple.

Be aware that some hotels market themselves as 'homestays' but are run like hotels with little (or no) interaction with the family.

Contact the local tourist office for a full list of participating families.

Railway Retiring Rooms

Most large train stations have basic rooms for travellers holding an ongoing train ticket or Indrail Pass. Some are grim, others are surprisingly pleasant but suffer from the noise of passengers and trains.

They're useful for early-morning train departures and there's usually a choice of dormitories or private rooms (24-hour check-out) depending on the class you're travelling in.

Some smaller stations may have only waiting rooms (again divided by class).

Temples & Pilgrims' Rest Houses

Accommodation is available at some ashrams (spiritual retreats), gurdwaras (Sikh temples) and dharamsalas (pilgrims' guesthouses) for a donation or a nominal fee. Vegetarian meals are usually available at the refectories.

These places have been established for genuine pilgrims so please exercise judgement about the appropriateness of staying.

Always abide by any protocols. Smoking and drinking within the premises are a complete no-no.

Top-End & Heritage Hotels

India has plenty of top-end properties, from modern five-star chain hotels to glorious palaces, and luxury eco- and forest resorts.

You can browse members of the Indian Heritage Hotels Association on the tourist board website Incredible India (www.incredibleindia.org).

Customs Regulations

Technically you're supposed to declare any amount of cash over US$5000, or total amount of currency over US$10,000 on arrival.

Indian rupees shouldn't be taken out of India; however, this is rarely policed.

Officials very occasionally ask tourists to enter expensive items such as video cameras and laptop computers on a 'Tourist Baggage Re-export' form to ensure they're taken out of India at the time of departure.

Electricity

230V/50Hz. Plugs have two round pins or, less commonly, three pins.

Gay & Lesbian Travellers

Homosexuality was made illegal in India in 2013, after having only been decriminalised since 2009. Gay and lesbian visitors should be discreet in this conservative country. Public displays of affection are frowned upon for both homosexual and heterosexual couples.

Despite the ban, there are gay scenes (and Gay Pride marches) in a number of cities including Mumbai, Delhi, Kolkata, Chennai and Bengaluru (Bangalore), as well as a holiday gay scene in Goa.

Insurance

- ➔ Comprehensive travel insurance to cover theft, loss and medical problems (as well as air evacuation) is strongly recommended.
- ➔ Some policies exclude potentially dangerous activities such as scuba diving, skiing, motorcycling, paragliding and even trekking: read the fine print.
- ➔ Some trekking agents may only accept customers who have cover for emergency helicopter evacuation.
- ➔ If you plan to hire a motorcycle in India, make sure the rental policy includes at least third-party insurance.
- ➔ Check in advance whether your insurance policy will pay doctors and hospitals directly or reimburse you later (keep all documentation for your claim).
- ➔ It's crucial to get a police report in India if you've had anything stolen; insurance companies may refuse to reimburse you without one.
- ➔ Worldwide travel insurance is available at www.lonelyplanet.com/bookings. You can buy, extend and claim online anytime – even if you're already on the road.

Internet Access

Internet cafes are widespread and connections are usually reasonably fast, except in more remote areas. Wi-fi access is widely available; it's usually free but some places charge.

Practicalities

- ➔ Internet charges vary regionally; charges range from ₹15 to ₹100 per hour;

often with a 15- to 30-minute minimum.

- ➔ Bandwidth load tends to be lowest in the early morning and early afternoon.
- ➔ Some internet cafes may ask to see your passport.

Security

Using online banking on any nonsecure system is unwise. If you have no choice but to do this, it's wise to change all passwords (email, netbanking, credit card 3-D Secure code etc) when you get back home.

Laptops

The simplest way to connect to the internet, when away from a wi-fi connection, is to use your smartphone as a personal wi-fi hotspot (use a local SIM to avoid roaming charges). However, if this isn't an option, companies that offer prepaid wireless 2G/3G modem sticks (called dongles) include Reliance, Airtel, Tata Docomo and Vodafone. To organise a connection you have to submit your identity proof and address in India, and activation can take up to 24 hours. A nonrefundable activation fee (around ₹2000) has to be paid, which includes the price of the dongle and around 10GB of data. A 20GB recharge costs around ₹1000.

- ➔ Make sure the areas you will be travelling to are covered by your service provider.
- ➔ Consider purchasing a fuse-protected universal AC adaptor to protect your circuit board from power surges.
- ➔ Plug adaptors are widely available throughout India, but bring spare plug fuses from home.

Language Courses

The following places offer language courses, some requiring a minimum time commitment.

➔ Himachal Pradesh Three-month courses in Tibetan at the Library of Tibetan Works & Archives (Map p319; ☎9218422467; www.ltwa.net; Gangchen Kyishong; ☀9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of month), in McLeod Ganj. Several other places in McLeod Ganj offer courses in Tibetan and Hindi.

➔ Mumbai (Bombay) Beginners' courses in Hindi, Marathi and Sanskrit at Bharatiya Vidya Bhavan (Map p746; ☎23871860; www.bhavans.info; 2nd fl, cnr KM Munshi Marg & Ramabai Rd, Girgaum; per hour ₹500; ☀4-8pm).

➔ Tamil Nadu Tamil courses at International Institute of Tamil Studies (☎044-22542781; www.ulakaththamizh.org; CIT Campus, 2nd Main Rd, Tharamani), in Chennai.

➔ Uttar Pradesh Hindi courses at Pragati Hindi (Map p394; ☎9335376488; www.pragatihindi.com; B-7/176 Harar Bagh), in Varanasi.

➔ Uttarakhand Hindi courses at the Landour Language School (☎0135-2631487; www.

landourlanguageschool.com; Landour; group per hour ₹285, private per hour ₹460; ☀Feb-Dec), in Mussoorie.

➔ West Bengal Tibetan courses at the Manjushree Centre of Tibetan Culture (Map p502; ☎0354-2252977; www.manjushree-culture.org; 12 Gandhi Rd; 3-/6-/9-month courses US$230/340/450, plus registration US$30; ☀mid-Mar-mid-Dec), in Darjeeling.

Legal Matters

If you're in a sticky legal situation, contact your embassy immediately. However, be aware that all your embassy may be able to do is monitor your treatment in custody and arrange a lawyer. In the Indian justice system, the burden of proof can often be on the accused and stints in prison before trial are not unheard of.

Antisocial Behaviour

- ➔ Smoking in public places is illegal but this is rarely enforced; if caught you'll be fined ₹200, which could rise to ₹20,000 if proposed changes go ahead.
- ➔ People can smoke inside their homes and in most open spaces such as streets (heed any signs stating otherwise).
- ➔ Some Indian cities have banned spitting and littering, but this is also enforced irregularly.

WARNING: BHANG LASSI

Although it's rarely printed in menus, some restaurants in popular tourist centres will clandestinely whip up bhang lassi, a yoghurt and iced-water beverage laced with cannabis (and occasionally other narcotics). Commonly dubbed 'special lassi', this often potent concoction can cause varying degrees of ecstasy, drawn-out delirium, hallucination, nausea and paranoia. Some travellers have been ill for several days, robbed or hurt in accidents after drinking this fickle brew. A few towns have legal (controlled) bhang outlets such as the Bhang Shop in Jaisalmer.

Drugs

➔ Indian law does not distinguish between 'hard' and 'soft' drugs; possession of any illegal drug is regarded as a criminal offence, which will result in a custodial sentence. This may be up to a year for possession of a small amount for personal use, to a minimum of 10 years if it's deemed the purpose was for sale or distribution. There's also usually a hefty fine on top of any sentence.

➔ Cases can take months, even years, to appear before a court while the accused may have to wait in prison.

➔ Be aware that travellers have been targeted in sting operations in Manali, Goa and other backpacker enclaves.

➔ Marijuana grows wild in various parts of India, but consuming it is still an offence, except in towns where bhang is legally sold for religious rituals.

➔ Police are getting particularly tough on foreigners who use drugs, so you should take this risk very seriously.

➔ Pharmaceutical drugs that are restricted in other countries may be available over the counter or via prescription. Be aware that to take these without professional guidance can be dangerous.

Police

You should always carry your passport; police are entitled to ask you for identification at any time.

If you're arrested for an alleged offence and asked for a bribe, be aware that it is illegal to pay a bribe in India. Many people deal with an on-the-spot fine by just paying it to avoid trumped up charges. Corruption is rife so the less you have to do with local police the better; try to avoid all potentially risky situations.

Maps

Maps available inside India are of variable quality. Throughout India, most state-government tourist offices stock basic local maps. These are some of the better map series, which should be available at good bookshops:

Eicher (<http://maps.eicher-world.com/>)

Leomann Maps Useful trekking maps for Jammu & Kashmir, Himachal Pradesh and Uttarakhand.

Nelles (www.nelles-verlag.de)

Nest & Wings (www.nest-wings.in)

Survey of India (www.surveyofindia.gov.in)

TTK (www.ttkmaps.com)

Money

The Indian rupee (₹) is divided into 100 paise, but only 50 paise coins are legal tender and these are rarely seen. Coins come in denominations of ₹1, ₹2, ₹5 and ₹10 (the 1s and 2s look almost identical); notes come in ₹5, ₹10, ₹20, ₹50, ₹100, ₹500 and ₹1000 (this last is handy for paying large bills but can pose problems when getting change for small services). The Indian rupee is linked to a basket of currencies and has been subject to fluctuations in recent years.

ATMs

➔ ATMs are found in most urban centres.

➔ Visa, MasterCard, Cirrus, Maestro and Plus are the most commonly accepted cards.

➔ ATMs at Axis Bank, Citibank, HDFC, HSBC, ICICI and State Bank of India recognise foreign cards. Other banks may accept major cards (Visa, Mastercard etc).

➔ Citibank ATMs generally allow you to withdraw up to ₹40,000 in one transaction (most others have a limit of ₹10,000 to ₹15,000), which reduces transaction charges.

➔ Before your trip, check whether your card can access banking networks in India and ask for details of charges.

PROHIBITED EXPORTS

To protect India's cultural heritage, the export of certain antiques is prohibited, especially those which are verifiably more than 100 years old. Reputable antique dealers know the laws and can make arrangements for an export-clearance certificate for old items that are OK to export. Detailed information on prohibited items can be found on the government webpage www.asi.nic.in/pdf\_data/8.pdf. The rules may seem stringent but the loss of ancient artworks in places such as Ladakh, Himachal Pradesh, Gujarat and Rajasthan, due to the international trade in antiques, has been alarming. Look for quality reproductions instead.

The Indian Wildlife Protection Act bans any form of wildlife trade. Don't buy any product that endangers threatened species and habitats – doing so can result in heavy fines and even imprisonment. This includes ivory, shahtoosh shawls (made from the down of chirus or rare Tibetan antelopes) and anything made from the fur, skin, horns or shell of any endangered species. Products made from certain rare plants are also banned.

➔ Notify your bank that you'll be using your card in India to avoid having it blocked; take along your bank's phone number in case.

➔ Always keep the emergency lost-and-stolen numbers for your credit cards in a safe place, separate from your cards, and report any loss or theft immediately.

➔ Away from major towns, always carry cash (including a stock of rupees).

Black Market

Black-market moneychangers exist but legal moneychangers are so common that there's no reason to use illegal services, except perhaps to change small amounts of cash at land border crossings. If someone approaches you on the street and offers to change money, you're probably being set up for a scam.

Cash

➔ Major currencies such as US dollars, pounds sterling and euros are easy to change throughout India, although some bank branches insist on travellers cheques only.

➔ Some banks also accept other currencies such as Australian and Canadian dollars, and Swiss francs.

➔ Private moneychangers deal with a wider range of currencies, but Pakistani, Nepali and Bangladeshi currency can be harder to change away from the border.

➔ When travelling off the beaten track, always carry an adequate stock of rupees.

➔ Whenever changing money, check every note. Don't accept any filthy, ripped or disintegrating notes, as these may be difficult to use.

➔ It can be tough getting change in India so keep a stock of smaller currency; ₹10, ₹20 and ₹50 notes are helpful.

➔ Officially you cannot take rupees out of India, but this is laxly enforced. You can change any leftover rupees back into foreign currency most easily at the airport (some banks have a ₹1000 minimum). You may have to present encashment certificates or credit-card/ATM receipts, and show your passport and airline ticket.

Credit Cards

➔ Credit cards are accepted at a growing number of shops, upmarket restaurants, and midrange and top-end hotels, and they can usually be used to pay for flights and train tickets.

➔ Cash advances on major credit cards are also possible at some banks.

➔ MasterCard and Visa are the most widely accepted cards.

Encashment Certificates

➔ Indian law states that all foreign currency must be changed at official moneychangers or banks.

➔ For every (official) foreign-exchange transaction, you'll receive an encashment certificate (receipt), which will allow you to change rupees back into foreign currency when departing India.

➔ Encashment certificates should cover the amount of rupees you intend to change back to foreign currency.

➔ Printed receipts from ATMs are also accepted as evidence of an international transaction at most banks.

International Transfers

If you run out of money, someone back home can wire you cash via moneychangers affiliated with Moneygram (www.moneygram.com) or Western Union (www.westernunion.com). A fee is added to the transaction.

To collect the cash, bring your passport and the name and reference number of the person who sent the funds.

Moneychangers

Private moneychangers are usually open for longer hours than banks and are found almost everywhere (many also double as internet cafes and travel agents).

Upmarket hotels may also change money, but their rates are usually not as competitive.

Tipping, Baksheesh & Bargaining

➔ In tourist restaurants or hotels, a service fee is usually added to your bill and tipping is optional. Elsewhere, a tip is appreciated.

➔ Hotel bellboys and train/airport porters appreciate anything around ₹50; hotel staff should be given similar gratuities for services above and beyond the call of duty.

➔ It's not mandatory to tip taxi or rickshaw drivers, but it's good to tip drivers who are honest about the fare.

➔ If you hire a car with driver for more than a couple of days, a tip is recommended for good service.

➔ Baksheesh can loosely be defined as a 'tip'; it covers everything from alms for beggars to bribes.

➔ Many Indians implore tourists not to hand out sweets, pens or money to children, as it encourages them to beg. To make a lasting difference, consider donating to a reputable school or charitable organisation.

➔ Except in fixed-price shops (such as government emporia and fair-trade cooperatives), bargaining is the norm.

Travellers Cheques

➔ Travellers cheques are becoming harder and harder to change, as credit cards become more widely accepted. They are often more hassle than they are worth.

- All major brands are accepted, but some banks may only accept cheques from American Express (Amex) and Thomas Cook.
- Euros, pounds sterling and US dollars are the safest currencies, especially in smaller towns.
- Keep a record of the cheques' serial numbers separate from your cheques, along with the proof-of-purchase slips, encashment certificates and photocopied passport details. If you lose your cheques, contact the Amex or Thomas Cook office in Delhi.
- To replace lost travellers cheques, you need the proof-of-purchase slip and the numbers of the missing cheques (some places require a photocopy of the police report and a passport photo). If you don't have the numbers of your missing cheques, the issuing company (eg Amex) will contact the place where you bought them.

Opening Hours

- Official business hours are from 10am to 5pm Monday to Friday but many offices open later and close earlier.
- Most offices have an official lunch hour from around 1pm.
- Bank opening hours vary from town to town, so check locally; foreign-exchange offices may open longer and operate daily.
- Some larger post offices are open a full day on Saturday and a half-day on Sunday.
- In some places with six-day weeks, establishments may be closed on the second and fourth Saturdays of the month.
- Due to sporadic bouts of volatility, curfews can sometimes apply in certain areas, notably parts of Kashmir and the Northeast Region.
- Business hours vary wildly from state to state. Also, in remote areas such as the Northeast Region, shops may open and close depending on the weather, local political situation or the proprietor's mood.

Permits

Access to certain parts of India – particularly disputed border areas – is controlled by an often-complicated permit system.

A permit known as an Inner-Line Permit (ILP) or a Restricted Area Permit (RAP) is required to visit Arunachal Pradesh, Sikkim and certain parts of Himachal Pradesh, Ladakh and Uttarakhand that lie close to the disputed border with China/Tibet. Nagaland and Mizoram have reintroduced Restricted Area Permits (RAP) for foreign travellers (and Meghalaya and Manipur are considering doing so). Permits are also necessary for travel to the Andaman and Lakshadweep Islands, and some parts of Kutch in Gujarat.

Obtaining the ILP/RAP is usually a formality, but travel agents must apply on your behalf for certain areas, including many trekking routes passing close to the border.

Permits are issued by regional magistrates and district commissioners, either directly to travellers (for free) or through travel agents (for a fee). You also need to pay an Environmental Tax of ₹300; ensure you keep the receipt.

In Odisha (Orissa), foreign tourists require permission to visit some tribal regions. You can obtain this from the district collector, which may take a couple of days. Government-approved tourist agencies can speed up the process but you'll be tied to them throughout your visit.

Double-check with tourism officials to see if permit requirements have undergone any changes before you head out to these areas.

STANDARD HOURS

We've only listed business hours where they differ from the following standards. Minor post offices tend to open shorter hours than major ones Monday to Saturday, and not at all on Sunday.

BUSINESS	OPENING HOURS
Airline offices	9.30am-5.30pm Mon-Sat
Nationalised banks	10am-2pm or 4pm Mon-Fri, to noon or 1pm Sat
Government offices	9.30am-1pm & 2-5.30pm Mon-Fri
Post offices	9am-8pm Mon-Sat, 10am-4pm Sun
Museums	10am-5pm Tue-Sun
Restaurants	lunch noon-3pm, dinner 7-10pm or 11pm
Sights	10am-5pm or dawn-dusk
Shops	10am-7pm or 8pm, some closed Sun

Photography

For useful tips and techniques on travel photography, check out Lonely Planet's guide to Travel Photography.

Digital

Memory cards for digital cameras are available from photographic shops in most large cities and towns. However, the quality of memory cards is variable – some don't carry the advertised amount of data. Expect to pay upwards of ₹200 for a 4GB card.

To be safe, regularly back up your memory card. If your camera isn't wi-fi-enabled, take a memory card reader with you. Alternatively some internet cafes will write your pictures to CD. Some photographic shops make prints from digital photographs for roughly the standard print-and-processing charge.

Restrictions

- ➔ India is touchy about anyone taking photographs of military installations – this can include train stations, bridges, airports, military sites and sensitive border regions.
- ➔ Photography from the air is mostly OK, unless you're taking off from (or landing in) airports actively shared by defence forces.
- ➔ Many places of worship – such as monasteries, temples and mosques – also prohibit photography. Taking photos inside a shrine, at a funeral, at a religious ceremony or of people publicly bathing (including rivers) can also be offensive – ask first.
- ➔ Flash photography may be prohibited in certain areas of a shrine or historical monument, or may not be permitted at all.
- ➔ Exercise sensitivity when taking photos of people, especially women, who may find it offensive – obtain permission in advance.

➔ It is not uncommon these days for people in touristy areas to demand a posing fee in return for being photographed. Exercise your discretion in these situations. In any case, ask first to avoid misunderstandings later.

Post

India has the biggest postal network on earth, with over 155,015 post offices. Mail and poste-restante services are generally good, although the speed of delivery will depend on the efficiency of any given office. Airmail is faster and more reliable than sea mail, although it's best to use courier services (such as DHL and TNT) to send and receive items of value – expect to pay around ₹3000 per kilogram to Europe, Australia or the USA. Smaller private couriers are often cheaper, but goods may be repacked into large packages to cut costs and things sometimes go missing.

Receiving Mail

- ➔ To claim mail you'll need to show your passport.
- ➔ Ask senders to address letters to you with your surname in capital letters and underlined, followed by poste restante, GPO (main post office), and the city or town in question.
- ➔ Many 'lost' letters are simply misfiled under given/first names, so check under both your names and ask senders to provide a return address.
- ➔ Letters sent via poste restante are generally held for one to two months before being returned.
- ➔ It's best to have any parcels sent to you by registered post.

Sending Mail

LETTERS

- ➔ Posting airmail letters/aerogrammes to anywhere overseas costs ₹25/15.

- ➔ International airmail postcards cost around ₹12.
- ➔ For postcards, stick on the stamps before writing on them, as post offices can give you as many as four stamps per card.
- ➔ Sending a letter overseas by registered post costs an extra ₹50.

PARCELS

- ➔ Posting parcels can either be relatively straightforward or involve multiple counters and lots of queuing; get to the post office in the morning.
- ➔ Prices depend on weight (including packing material). Packing the article safely is your responsibility, but you can usually find someone near the post office providing this service.
- ➔ An airmail package (unregistered) costs around ₹400 TO ₹850 (up to 250g) to any country and ₹50 to ₹150 per additional 250g (up to a maximum of 2kg; different charges apply for higher weights).
- ➔ Parcel post has a maximum of 20kg to 30kg depending on the destination.
- ➔ Airmail takes one to three weeks, sea mail two to four months and Surface Air-Lifted (SAL) – a curious hybrid where parcels travel by both air and sea – around one month.
- ➔ Express mail service (EMS; delivery within three days) costs around 30% more than the normal airmail price.
- ➔ All parcels sent through the government postal service must be packed up in white linen and the seams sealed with wax – agents outside the post office usually offer this service for a small fee.
- ➔ Customs declaration forms, available from the post office, must be stitched or pasted to the parcel. No duty is payable by the recipient for gifts under the value of ₹1000.

- ➔ Carry a permanent marker to write on the parcel any information requested by the desk.
- ➔ You can send printed matter via surface mail 'Bulk Bag' for ₹350 (maximum 5kg, plus ₹100 for each additional kilo). The parcel has to be packed with an opening so it may be checked by the customs.
- ➔ India Post (www.indiapost.gov.in) has an online calculator for domestic and international postal tariffs.

Public Holidays

There are three official national public holidays – Republic and Independence Days and Gandhi's birthday (Gandhi Jayanti) – plus a lot of other holidays celebrated nationally or locally, many of them marking important days in various religions and falling on variable dates. The most important are the 18 'gazetted holidays' (listed) which are observed by central-government offices throughout India. On these days most businesses (offices, shops etc), banks and tourist sites close, but transport is usually unaffected. It's wise to make transport and hotel reservations well in advance if you intend visiting during major festivals.

- Republic Day 26 January
- Holi March
- Ram Navami March/April
- Mahavir Jayanti March/April
- Good Friday March/April
- Dr BL Ambedkar's Birthday 14 April
- Buddha Jayanti May
- Eid al-Fitr June/July
- Independence Day 15 August
- Janmastami Aug/Sep
- Eid al-Adha September
- Dussehra September/October
- Gandhi Jayanti 2 October
- Muharram October
- Diwali October/November
- Guru Nanak Jayanti November
- Eid-Milad-un-Nabi December
- Christmas Day 25 December

Safe Travel

Travellers to India's major cities may fall prey to petty and opportunistic crime, but most problems can be avoided with a bit of common sense and an appropriate amount of caution. Also have a look at the India branch of Lonely Planet's Thorn Tree forum (www.lonelyplanet.com/thorntree), where travellers often post timely warnings about problems they've encountered on the road. Always check your government's travel advisory warnings.

Rebel Violence

India has a number of (sometimes armed) dissident groups championing various causes, who have employed the same tried and tested techniques of rebel groups everywhere: assassinations and bomb attacks on government infrastructure, public transport, religious centres, tourist sites and markets.

Certain areas are prone to insurgent violence – specifically Kashmir, states in the Northeast Region such as Assam, Manipur and Nagaland, remote tribal regions in Bihar, Jharkhand, Chhattisgarh and, less frequently, parts of West Bengal. However, while troubles in Kashmir may prove little more than an inconvenience to travellers, travelling in rural Bihar might put you at risk. Read the latest government travel advisory for up-to-the-minute reports on where is considered unsafe.

Curfews and strikes can close the roads (as well as banks, shops etc) for days on end in sensitive regions like Kashmir or Assam.

International terrorism is as much of a risk in Europe or the US, so this is no reason not to go to India, but it makes sense to check the local security situation carefully before travelling (especially in high-risk areas).

Telephone

- ➔ There are few payphones in India (apart from in airports), but private STD/ISD/PCO call booths do the same job, offering inexpensive local, interstate and international calls at lower prices than calls made from hotel rooms.
- ➔ These booths are found around the country. A digital meter displays how much the call is costing and usually provides a printed receipt when the call is finished.

→ Costs vary depending on the operator and destination but can be from ₹1 per minute for local calls and between ₹5 and ₹10 for international calls.

→ Some booths also offer a 'call-back' service – you ring home, provide the phone number of the booth and wait for people at home to call you back, for a fee of around ₹20 on top of the cost of the preliminary call.

→ Getting a line can be difficult in remote country and mountain areas – an engaged signal may just mean that the exchange is overloaded or broken, so keep trying.

→ Useful online resources include the Yellow Pages (www.yellowpages.co.in) and Justdial (www.justdial.com).

Mobile Phones

→ Indian mobile phone numbers usually have 10 digits, mostly beginning with 9 (but sometimes also with 7 or 8).

→ There's roaming coverage for international GSM phones in most cities and large towns.

→ To avoid expensive roaming costs (often highest for incoming calls), get hooked up to the local mobile-phone network by applying for a local prepaid SIM card.

→ Mobiles bought in some countries may be locked to a particular network; you'll have to get the phone unlocked or buy a local phone (available from ₹2000) to use an Indian SIM card.

GETTING CONNECTED

→ Getting connected is inexpensive and fairly straightforward in many areas. It's easiest to obtain a local SIM card when you arrive if you're flying into a large city.

→ Foreigners must supply between one and five passport photos, and photocopies of their passport identity and visa pages. Often mobile shops can arrange all this for you, or you can ask your hotel to help you. It's best to try to do this in tourist centres and cities, as in many regions – for example, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana and most of Himachal Pradesh – it's a great deal more difficult.

→ You must also supply a residential address, which can be the address of your hotel. Usually the phone company will call your hotel (warn the hotel a call will come through) any time up to 24 hours after your application to verify that you are staying there. It's a good idea to obtain the SIM card somewhere where you're staying for a day or two so that you can return to the vendor if there's any problem. Obtain your SIM card from a reputable branded phone store to avoid scams.

→ Another option is to get a friendly local to obtain a connection in their name.

→ Prepaid mobile phone kits (SIM card and phone number, plus an allocation of calls) are available in most towns for about ₹200 from a phone shop, local STD/ISD/PCO booth or grocery store.

→ SIMs are sold as regular size, but most places have machines to cut them down to the required size if necessary.

→ You must then purchase more credit, sold as direct credit. You pay the vendor and the credit is deposited straight into your account, minus some taxes and a service charge.

CHARGES

→ Calls made within the state or city where you bought the SIM card are less than ₹1 a minute. You can call internationally for less than ₹10 a minute.

→ SMS messaging is even cheaper. International outgoing messages cost ₹5. Incoming calls and messages are free.

→ Unreliable signals and problems with international texting (messages or replies not coming through or being delayed) are not uncommon.

→ The leading service providers are Airtel, Vodafone, Reliance, Idea and BSNL. Coverage varies from region to region – Airtel has wide coverage, for example, but BSNL is the only network that works in remote Himachal areas.

JAMMU & KASHMIR AND ASSAM

→ Due to ongoing terrorist threats, mobile phone use in Jammu & Kashmir, as well as Assam, is more strictly controlled.

→ Roaming on foreign mobiles won't work in Jammu & Kashmir, nor will pay-as-you-go SIM cards purchased elsewhere in India.

→ Airtel and AirCell both offer prepaid SIM cards; you'll need four or five photos, your passport, address (your hotel) and to wait at least 48 hours.

→ You may be able to tip a local to apply for a SIM in their name and sell it on to you.

→ Foreign mobile roaming won't work and domestic SIM cards are difficult to procure in Assam (except in Guwahati), but you can use a SIM card purchased elsewhere. Airtel and BSNL work best here, Vodafone is not recommended.

Phone Codes

→ Calling India from abroad: dial your country's international access code, then 91 (India's country code), then the area code

(without the initial zero), then the local number. For mobile phones, the area code and initial zero are not required.

➔ Calling internationally from India: dial 00 (the international access code), then the country code of the country you're calling, then the area code (without the initial zero) and the local number.

➔ Land-phone numbers have an area code followed by up to eight digits.

➔ Toll-free numbers begin with 1800.

➔ To make interstate calls to a mobile phone, add 0 before the 10-digit number.

➔ To call a land phone from a mobile phone, you always have to add the area code (with the initial zero).

➔ Some call-centre numbers might require the initial zero (eg calling an airline ticketing service based in Delhi from Karnataka).

➔ A Home Country Direct service, which gives you access to the international operator in your home country, exists for the US (000 117) and the UK (000 4417).

➔ To access an international operator elsewhere, dial 000 127. The operator can place an international call and allow you to make collect calls.

Time

India uses the 12-hour clock and the local standard time, known as Indian Standard Time (IST), is 5½ hours ahead of GMT/UTC. The half-hour was added to maximise daylight hours over such a vast country.

Toilets

Public toilets are most easily found in major cities and tourist sites; the cleanest (usually with sit-down and squat choices) are often at modern restaurants, shopping complexes and cinemas.

Beyond urban centres, toilets are of the squat variety and locals may use the 'hand-and-water' technique, which involves carrying out ablutions with a small jug of water and the left hand. It's always a good idea to carry your own toilet paper and hand sanitiser, just in case.

Tourist Information

In addition to Government of India tourist offices (also known as 'India Tourism'), each state maintains its own network of tourist offices. These vary in their efficiency and usefulness – some are run by enthusiastic souls who go out of their way to help, others are little more than a means of drumming up business for State Tourism Development Corporation tours.

The first stop for information should be the tourism website of the Government of India, Incredible India (www.incredibleindia.org); for details of its regional offices around India, click on the 'Help Desk' tab at the top of the homepage.

Travellers with Disabilities

India's crowded public transport, crush of humanity and variable infrastructure can test even the hardest able-bodied traveller. If you have a physical disability or are vision impaired, these can pose even more of a challenge. If your mobility is considerably restricted, you may like to ease the stress by travelling with an able-bodied companion.

Accessibility Some restaurants and offices have ramps but most tend to have at least one step. Staircases are often steep; lifts frequently stop at mezzanines between floors.

Accommodation Wheelchair-friendly hotels are almost exclusively top-end. Make enquiries before travelling and book ground-floor rooms at hotels that lack adequate facilities.

Footpaths Where pavements exist, they can be riddled with holes, littered with debris and packed with pedestrians. If using crutches, bring along spare rubber caps.

Transport Hiring a car with driver will make moving around a lot easier; if you use a wheelchair, make sure the car-hire company can provide an appropriate vehicle.

For further advice pertaining to your specific requirements, consult your doctor before heading to India.

Visas

Visa on Arrival

Citizens of Australia, Brazil, Cambodia, Cook Islands, Djibouti, Fiji, Finland, Germany, Guyana, Indonesia, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kiribati, Laos, Luxembourg, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Myanmar, Nauru, New Zealand, Niue Island, Norway, Oman, Palau, Palestine, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Republic of Korea, Russia, Samoa, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Thailand, Tonga, Tuvalu, UAE, Ukraine, USA, Vanuatu, and Vietnam are currently granted a 30-day single-entry visa on arrival (VOA) at Bengaluru, Chennai, Kochi (Cochin), Delhi, Goa, Hyderabad, Kolkata, Mumbai and Trivandrum airports.

However, to participate in the scheme, you need to apply online at <https://indianvisaonline.gov.in> for an Electronic Travel Authority (ETA), a minimum of four and a maximum of 30 days before you are due to travel. The fee is US$60, and you have to upload a photograph as well as a copy of your passport. Travellers have reported being asked for documentation showing their hotel confirmation at the airport, though this is not specified on the VOA website. The VOA is valid from the date of arrival.

It's intended that the scheme will be rolled out to 180 nations, including the UK and China, so check online for any updates.

Other Visas

If you want to stay longer than 30 days, or are not covered by the VOA scheme, you must get a visa before arriving in India (apart from Nepali or Bhutanese citizens). Visas are available at Indian missions worldwide, though in many countries, applications are processed by a separate private company. In some countries, including the UK, you must apply in person at the designated office as well as filing an application online.

Note that your passport needs to be valid for at least six months beyond your intended stay in India, with at least two blank pages. Most people are issued with a standard six-month tourist visa, which for most nationalities permits multiple entry.

- ➔ Student and business visas have strict conditions (consult the Indian embassy for details).
- ➔ Tourist visas are valid from the date of issue, not the date you arrive in India.

- ➔ Five- and 10-year tourist visas are available to US citizens only under a bilateral arrangement; however, you can still only stay in the country for up to 180 days continuously.

- ➔ Currently you are required to submit two passport photographs with your visa application; these must be in colour and must be 5.08cm by 5.08 cm (2in by 2in; larger than regular passport photos).

- ➔ An onward travel ticket is a requirement for some visas, but this isn't always enforced (check in advance).

- ➔ Additional restrictions apply to travellers from Bangladesh and Pakistan, as well as certain Eastern European, African and central Asian countries. Check any special conditions for your nationality with the Indian embassy in your country.

- ➔ Visas are priced in the local currency and may have an added service fee.

- ➔ Extended visas are possible for people of Indian origin (excluding those in Pakistan and Bangladesh) who hold a non-Indian passport and live abroad.

- ➔ For visas lasting more than six months, you're supposed to register at the Foreigners' Regional Registration Office (FRRO); Map p76; ☎011-26711443; frrodil@nic.in; Level 2, East Block 8, Sector 1, Rama Krishna (RK) Puram, Delhi; 🕒9.30am-3pm Mon-Fri) in Delhi within 14 days of arriving in India; enquire about these special conditions when you apply for your visa.

Re-Entry Requirements

Most tourists are permitted to transit freely between India and its neighbouring countries. However, citizens of China, Pakistan, Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan, Bangladesh and Sudan are barred from re-entering India within two months of the date of their previous exit.

Visa Extensions

India has traditionally been stringent with visa extensions. At the time of writing, the government was granting extensions only in circumstances such as medical emergencies or theft of passport just before the applicant planned to leave the country (at the end of their visa).

If you do need to extend your visa due to any such exigency, you should contact the Foreigners' Regional Registration Office in Delhi. This is also the place to come for a replacement visa, and if you need your lost/stolen passport replaced (required before you can leave the country). Regional FRROs are even less likely to grant an extension.

Assuming you meet the stringent criteria, the FRRO is permitted to issue an extension of 14 days (free for nationals of most countries; enquire on application). You must bring your confirmed air ticket, one passport photo (take two, just in case) and a photocopy of your passport identity and visa pages. Note that this system is designed to get you out of the country promptly with the correct official stamps, not to give you two extra weeks of travel and leisure.

Transport

GETTING THERE & AWAY

Plenty of international airlines service India, and overland routes to and from Nepal, Bangladesh, Bhutan and Pakistan are all currently open. Flights, tours and other tickets can be booked online at www.lonelyplanet.com/bookings.

Entering India

Entering India by air or land is relatively straightforward, with standard immigration and customs procedures. A frustrating law barring re-entry into India within two months of the previous date of departure has now been done away with (except for citizens of some Asian countries), thus allowing most travellers to combine their India tour with side trips to neighbouring countries.

Passport

To enter India you need a valid passport and an onward/return ticket. You'll also need a visa, which some nationalities can now obtain on arrival. Other nationalities or those wishing to stay more than 30 days need to get their visa beforehand. See the Visa section (p1190) for details. Your passport should be valid for at least six months beyond your intended stay in India. If your passport is lost or stolen, immediately contact your country's representative. Keep photocopies of your airline ticket and the identity and visa pages of your passport in case of emergency. Better yet, scan and email copies to yourself. Check with the Indian embassy in your home country for any special conditions that may exist for your nationality.

Air

Airports & Airlines

India has six main gateways for international flights; however, a number of other cities such as Goa, Kochi (Cochin), Lucknow and Trivandrum also service international carriers. For detailed information, see www.aai.aero.

India's national carrier is Air India (☎1800-1801407; www.airindia.com), which operates international and domestic flights. Air travel in India has had a relatively decent safety record in recent years.

International airports include the following:

Bengaluru (Bangalore; BLR; ☎1800 4254425; www.bengaluruairport.com; Kempegowda International Airport)

Chennai (Madras; MAA; ☎044-22560551; www.aai.aero/chennai; Chennai International Airport)

CLIMATE CHANGE & TRAVEL

Every form of transport that relies on carbon-based fuel generates CO<sub>2</sub>, the main cause of human-induced climate change. Modern travel is dependent on aeroplanes, which might use less fuel per kilometre per person than most cars but travel much greater distances. The altitude at which aircraft emit gases (including CO<sub>2</sub>) and particles also contributes to their climate change impact. Many websites offer 'carbon calculators' that allow people to estimate the carbon emissions generated by their journey and, for those who wish to do so, to offset the impact of the greenhouse gases emitted with contributions to portfolios of climate-friendly initiatives throughout the world. Lonely Planet offsets the carbon footprint of all staff and author travel.

Mumbai (Bombay; BOM; ☎022-66851010; www.csaia.in; Chhatrapati Shivaji International Airport)

Tickets

Departure tax and other charges are included in airline tickets. You are required to show a copy of your ticket and your passport in order to enter the airport, whether flying internationally or within India.

Land

Border Crossings

Although most visitors fly into India, it is possible to travel overland between India and Bangladesh, Bhutan, Nepal, Pakistan and Myanmar (though the border is only open occasionally and this route is not recommended). The overland route from Nepal is the most popular. For more on these routes, check for up-to-date information on Lonely Planet's Thorntree forum (www.lonelyplanet.com/thorntree) or see the 'Europe to India overland' section on www.seat61.com/India.htm.

If you enter India by bus or train, you'll be required to disembark at the border for standard immigration and customs checks.

You must have a valid Indian visa in advance, as no visas are available at the border crossings.

Drivers of cars and motorbikes will need the vehicle's registration papers, a liability insurance and an international drivers' permit in addition to their domestic licence. You'll also need a Carnet de Passage en Douane, which acts as a temporary waiver of import duty on the vehicle.

For travellers wishing to visit Tibet from India, the only way to do so is to exit to Nepal and then enter Tibet through the border crossing at Kodari as part of an organised tour. Alternately, you could fly to Lhasa from Kathmandu.

To find out the latest requirements for the paperwork and other important driving information, contact your local automobile association.

BANGLADESH

Foreigners can use four land crossings between Bangladesh and India, all in West Bengal or the Northeast States.

Heading from Bangladesh to India, you have to prepay the exit tax, which can be done at a Sonali Bank branch (either in Dhaka, another big city or at the closest branch to the border).

Exiting Bangladesh overland is complicated by red tape – if you enter the country by air, you require a road permit (or 'change of route' permit) to leave by land.

To apply for visa extensions and change of route permits you will need to visit the Immigration and Passport Office (☎00-88-2-8159525; www.dip.gov.bd; Agar-gaon Rd; ☺Sat–Thu) in Dhaka.

Note that some travellers have reported problems exiting Bangladesh overland with the visa issued on arrival at Dhaka airport.

BHUTAN

Phuentsholing is the main entry and exit point between India and Bhutan, although the eastern checkpoint at Samdrup Jongkhar is also used.

As entry requirements need advance planning and are subject to change, we recommend you consult a travel agent or Bhutanese embassy for up-to-the-minute details. Also see www.tourism.gov.bt and Lonely Planet's Bhutan.

NEPAL

Political and weather conditions permitting, there are five land border crossings between India and Nepal. Check the current security status before crossing into Nepal: local newspapers and websites are good sources of information.

Multiple-entry visas (15-/30-/90-days US$25/40/100 – US dollars cash, not rupees) are available at the Nepal immigration post (you need two passport photos). You can now save time by applying online at <http://online.nepalimmigration.gov.np/tourist-visa>. Your receipt, which you must produce at the border within 15 days of your application, outlines the border procedures.

Travellers have reported being harassed crossing into India at the Sunauli border and having to pay inflated prices for bus and train tickets. Consider taking a taxi to Gorakhpur and getting a train or bus from there.

OVERLAND TO/FROM BHUTAN

ROUTE/BORDER TOWNS	TRANSPORT	VISAS	MORE INFORMATION

PAKISTAN

Given the rocky relationship between India and Pakistan, crossing by land depends on the current state of relations between the two countries – check locally.

If the crossings are open, you can reach Pakistan from Delhi, Amritsar (Punjab) and Rajasthan by bus or train. The bus route from Srinagar to Pakistan-administered Kashmir is currently only open to Indian citizens.

You must have a visa in order to enter Pakistan. It is easiest to obtain this before you travel from the Pakistan mission that is located in your home country. At the time of writing, the Pakistan Embassy (☎011-26110601; www.mofa.gov.pk; 2/50G Shantipath, Chanakyapuri) in Delhi was not issuing tourist visas for most nationalities, but this could change.

Sea

There are several sea routes between India and surrounding islands but none leave Indian sovereign territory. After a 28-year hiatus, a ferry service between southern India and Sri Lanka restarted in 2011, linking Thoothikudi (Tuticorin) in Tamil Nadu with Colombo, but was suspended after five months. A new service between the same ports, or on the old route between Rameswaram and Talaimannar, may start; check for updates before you leave.

GETTING AROUND

Air

Airlines in India

Transporting vast numbers of passengers annually, India has a very competitive domestic airline industry. In a crowded marketplace, many players have suffered huge financial losses and run into trouble. Major carriers are Air India, IndiGo, Spice Jet and Jet Airways.

Airline seats can be booked cheaply over the internet or through travel agencies. Apart from airline sites, bookings can be made through reliable ticketing portals such as Cleartrip (www.cleartrip.com), Make My Trip (www.makemytrip.com) and Yatra (www.yatra.com). Domestic airlines set rupee fares for Indian citizens, while foreigners may be charged US dollar fares (usually payable in rupees).

Security norms require you to produce your ticket and your passport at the time of entering an airport.

Keep in mind, however, that fares fluctuate dramatically, affected by holidays, festivals and seasons.

OVERLAND TO/FROM PAKISTAN

There is usually a direct bus or train from Delhi to Lahore, but at the time of writing, the Lahore Bus Service, which departs from Delhi (6am daily), terminates at Wagah due to security concerns. When it goes on to Lahore, the entire journey takes 12 hours. Advance bookings are essential. There are twice weekly trains between Lahore and Attari (on the Indian side of the border), where there is a customs and immigration stop. There are buses from Amritsar to Attari. Check the border is open before you leave; usual hours are 10am to 3.30pm daily, but arrive at least an hour before closure. From Wagah there are buses and taxis on to Lahore. Security on this route has been tightened but it is still a concern.

A Jodhpur–Karachi train leaves every Saturday (Friday in the opposite direction). Advance booking only. Customs/immigration is at Munabao (Indian border), where you physically change trains. Expect extremely tight security.

Security at airports is stringent. In smaller airports, all hold baggage must be X-rayed prior to check-in (major airports now have in-line baggage screening facilities). Every item of cabin baggage needs a label, which must be stamped as part of the security check (don't forget to collect tags at the check-in counter). Flights to sensitive destinations, such as Srinagar and Ladakh, have extra security restrictions. You may also have to allow for a spot-check of your cabin baggage on the tarmac before you board.

Keeping peak-hour congestion in mind, the recommended check-in time for domestic flights is two hours before departure – the deadline is 45 minutes. The usual baggage allowance is 20kg (10kg for smaller aircraft) in economy class.

At the time of writing, the following airlines were operating across various destinations in India:

Air India (☎1800-1801407; www.airindia.com) India's national carrier operates many domestic and international flights.

GoAir (☎020-2566-2111; www.goair.in) Reliable low-cost carrier servicing Goa, Kochi (Cochin), Jaipur, Delhi and Bagdogra, among other destinations.

IndiGo (☎099-10383838; www.goindigo.in) Reliable and popular, with myriad flights across India and to select overseas destinations.

Jet Airways (☎1800-225522; www.jetairways.com) Operates flights across India and to select overseas destinations.

Spice Jet (☎098-71803333; www.spicejet.com) Domestic and some regional flights.

Bicycle

There are no restrictions on bringing a bicycle into the country. However, bicycles sent by sea can take a few weeks to clear customs in India, so it's better to fly them in. It may be cheaper – and less hassle – to hire or buy a bicycle locally. Read up on bicycle touring before you travel: Rob Van Der Plas' Bicycle Touring Manual, Stephen Lord's Adventure Cycle-Touring Handbook and Laura Stone's Himalaya by Bike are good places to start. The Cycling Federation of India (☎011-23753528; www.cyclingfederationofindia.org) can provide local information.

Hire

➔ Tourist centres and traveller hang-outs are the easiest spots to find bicycles for hire – enquire locally.

➔ Prices vary: between ₹40 and ₹100 per day for a roadworthy, Indian-made bicycle; mountain bikes, where available, are usually upwards of ₹400 per day.

➔ Hire places may require a cash security deposit (avoid leaving your airline ticket or passport).

Practicalities

➔ Mountain bikes with off-road tyres give the best protection against India's puncture-inducing roads.

➔ Roadside cycle mechanics abound but you should still bring spare tyres, brake cables, lubricating oil, chain repair kit and plenty of puncture-repair patches.

➔ Bikes can often be carried for free, or for a small luggage fee, on the roof of public buses – handy for uphill stretches.

➔ Contact your airline for information about transporting your bike and customs formalities in your home country.

Purchase

➔ Delhi's Jhandewalan Cycle Market (Map p64) has imported and domestic, new and second-hand bikes, and spare parts.

➔ Mountain bikes with reputable brands that include Hero and Atlas generally start at around ₹7000.

➔ Reselling is usually fairly easy – ask at local cycle shops or put up an advert on travel noticeboards. If you purchased a new bike and it's still in reasonable condition, you should be able to recoup around 50% of what you originally paid.

Road Rules

➔ Vehicles drive on the left in India but otherwise road rules are virtually nonexistent.

➔ Cities and national highways can be hazardous

RIDING THE RAILS WITH YOUR WHEELS

For long hauls, transporting your bike or motorbike by train can be a convenient option. Buy a standard train ticket for the journey, then take your bike to the station parcel office with your passport, registration papers, driver's licence and insurance documents. Packing-wallahs will wrap your bike in protective sacking for around ₹200 to ₹500 and you must fill out various forms and pay the shipping fee, which varies according to the route and train type – plus an insurance fee of 1% of the declared value of the bike. Bring the same paperwork to collect your bike from the goods office at the other end. If the bike is left waiting at the destination for more than 24 hours, you'll pay a storage fee of around ₹100 per day.

places to cycle so, where possible, stick to back roads.

→ Be conservative about the distance you expect to cover – an experienced cyclist can manage around 60km to 100km a day on the plains, 40km to 60km on all-weather mountain roads and 40km or less on dirt roads.

Boat

Scheduled ferries connect mainland India to the Andaman Islands, with departures to Port Blair from Chennai, Kolkata and Visakhapatnam; see www.andamans.gov.in.

Between October and May, there are cruise packages from Kochi (Kerala) to the Lakshadweep islands; see the Kerala chapter (p999) for details. There's also a popular day-long canal ferry between Kollam and Alleppey.

There are also numerous shorter ferry services across rivers, from chain pontoons to coracles and various boat cruises.

Bus

Buses go almost everywhere in India and are the only way to get around many mountainous areas. They tend to be the cheapest way to travel. Services are fast and frequent.

Roads in mountainous or curvy terrain can be perilous; buses are often driven with wilful abandon, and accidents are always a risk.

Avoid night buses unless there's no alternative: driving conditions are more hazardous and drivers may be inebriated or overtired.

All buses make snack and toilet stops (some more frequently than others), providing a break but possibly adding hours to journey times.

Shared jeeps complement the bus service in many mountain areas.

Classes

State-owned and private bus companies both offer several types of buses, graded loosely as 'ordinary', 'semideluxe', 'deluxe' or 'superdeluxe'.

These are usually open to interpretation, and the exact grade of luxury offered in a particular class varies.

In general, ordinary buses tend to be ageing rattletraps while the deluxe grades range from less decrepit versions of ordinary buses to flashy Volvo buses with air-con and reclining (locally called 'push-back') two-by-two seating.

Buses run by the state government are usually more reliable (if there's a breakdown, another bus will be sent to pick up passengers), and seats can usually be booked up to a month in advance. Many state governments now operate superdeluxe buses.

Private buses are either more expensive (but more comfortable), or cheaper but with kamikaze drivers and intense overcrowding.

Travel agencies in many tourist towns offer relatively expensive private two-by-two buses, which tend to leave and terminate at convenient central stops.

Take earplugs on long-distance buses, to muffle the often deafening music or movies played in some buses.

On any bus, try to sit up front to minimise the bumpy effect of potholes. Never sit directly above the wheels.

Costs

The cheapest buses are 'ordinary' government buses, but prices vary from state to state.

Add around 50% to the ordinary fare for deluxe services, double the fare for air-conditioning, and triple or quadruple the fare for a two-by-two superdeluxe service.

Rajasthan Roadways offer discounts for female travellers.

Luggage

Luggage is stored in compartments underneath the bus (sometimes for a small fee) or carried on the roof.

Arrive at least an hour before departure time – some buses cover roof-stored bags with a canvas sheet, making last-minute additions inconvenient/impossible.

If your bags go on the roof, make sure they're securely locked, and tied to the metal baggage rack – unsecured bags can fall off on rough roads.

Theft is a (minor) risk: watch your bags at snack and toilet stops. Never leave day-packs or valuables unattended inside the bus.

Reservations

Most deluxe buses can be booked in advance – government buses up to a month ahead – at the bus station or local travel agencies.

Online bookings are now possible in many states including the Punjab, Karnataka and Rajasthan, or at the excellent portals Cleartrip (www.cleartrip.com), MakeMytrip (www.makemytrip.com), and Redbus (www.redbus.in).

Reservations are rarely possible on 'ordinary' buses; travellers can be left behind in the mad rush for a seat.

To secure a seat, send a travelling companion ahead to claim some space, or pass a book or article of clothing through an open window and place it on an empty seat. This 'reservation' method rarely fails.

If you board a bus midway through its journey, you may have to stand until a seat becomes free.

Many buses only depart when full – passengers might suddenly leave yours to join one that looks nearer to departing.

Many bus stations have a separate women's queue (not always obvious when signs are in Hindi and men join the melee).

Women have an unspoken right to elbow their way to the front of any bus queue in India, so don't be shy, ladies!

Car

Few people bother with self-drive car hire – not only because of the hair-raising driving conditions, but also because hiring a car with driver is potentially affordable in India, particularly if several people share the cost. Hertz (www.hertz.com) is one of the few international companies with representatives in India.

Hiring a Car & Driver

Most towns have taxi stands or car-hire companies where you can arrange short or long tours.

Not all hire cars are licensed to travel beyond their home state. Those that are will pay extra state taxes, which are added to the hire charge.

Ask for a driver who speaks some English and knows the region you intend visiting. Try to see the car and meet the driver before paying anything.

A wide range of cars now ply as taxis. From a proletarian Tata Indica hatchback to a comfy Toyota Innova SUV, there's a model to suit every pocket.

Hire charges for multiday trips cover the driver's meals and accommodation, and drivers should make their own sleeping and eating arrangements.

It's essential to set the ground rules from day one; politely but firmly let the driver know that you're boss to avoid difficulties later.

Costs

Car hire costs depend on the distance and the terrain (driving on mountain roads uses more petrol, hence the higher cost).

One-way trips usually cost the same as return ones (to cover the petrol and driver charges for getting back).

Hire charges vary from state to state. Some taxi unions set a maximum time limit or a maximum kilometre distance for day trips – if you go over, you'll have to pay extra. Prices also vary according to the make and model of the taxi.

To avoid misunderstandings, get in writing what you've been promised (quotes should include petrol, sightseeing stops, all your chosen destinations, and meals and accommodation for the driver). If a driver asks you for money for petrol en route because he is short of cash, get receipts for reimbursement later. If you're travelling by the kilometre, check the odometer reading before you set out so as to avoid confusions later.

For sightseeing day trips around a single city, expect to pay upwards of ₹1000/1200 for a non-aircon/air-con car with an eight-hour, 80km limit per day (extra charges apply for longer trips). For multiday trips, operators usually peg a 250km minimum running distance per day and charge around ₹8/10 per km for a non-air-con/air-con car, for anything over this.

A tip is customary at the end of your journey; at least ₹150-200 per day is fair.

Hitching

Hitching is never entirely safe, and we don't recommend it. Travellers who hitch should understand that they are taking a small but potentially serious risk. However, for a negotiable fee, truck drivers supplement the bus service in some remote areas. As drivers rarely speak English, you may have difficulty explaining where you wish to go, and working out a fair price to pay. Be aware that truck drivers have a reputation for driving under the influence of alcohol. Women are strongly advised against hitching. Always use your instincts.

Local Transport

Buses, cycle-rickshaws, autorickshaws, taxis, boats and urban trains provide transport around India's cities.

Costs for public transport vary from town to town.

For any transport without a fixed fare, agree on the price before you start your journey and make sure that it covers your luggage and every passenger.

Even where meters exist, drivers may refuse to use them, demanding an elevated 'fixed' fare. Insist on the meter; if that fails, find another vehicle. Or just bargain hard.

Fares usually increase at night (by up to 100%) and some drivers charge a few rupees extra for luggage.

WARNINGS WITH ATTITUDE

In Ladakh, Himachal Pradesh, Arunachal Pradesh and Sikkim, the Border Roads Organisation (BRO) builds 'roads in the sky', including some of the world's highest passes accessible by car. Risking life and limb to keep the roads open, the BRO has a wicked sense of humour when it comes to driver warnings, including:

- ➔ Overtaker beware of Undertaker
- ➔ Better to be Mister Late than a late Mister
- ➔ Go easy on my curves
- ➔ Love thy neighbour, but not while driving

Carry plenty of small bills for taxi and rickshaw fares as drivers rarely have change.

In some places, taxi/autorickshaw drivers are involved in the commission racket.

Authorickshaw, Tempo & Vikram

Similar to the tuk-tuks of Southeast Asia, the Indian autorickshaw is a three-wheeled motorised contraption with a tin or canvas roof and sides, with room for two passengers (although you'll often see many more squeezed in) and limited luggage.

They are also referred to as autos, scooters and riks.

Authorickshaws are mostly cheaper than taxis and usually have a meter, although getting it turned on can be a challenge.

Travelling by auto is great fun but, thanks to the open windows, can be noisy and hot (or severely cold!).

Tempos and vikrams (large tempos) are outsized autorickshaws with room for more passengers, shuttling on fixed routes for a fixed fare.

In country areas, you may also see the fearsome-looking 'three-wheeler' – a crude tractor-like tempo with a front wheel on an articulated arm – or the Magic, a cute minivan that can take in up to a dozen passengers.

Boat

Various kinds of local boats offer transport across and down rivers in India, from big car ferries to wooden canoes and wicker coracles. Most of the larger boats carry bicycles and motorcycles for a fee.

Bus

Urban buses range from fume-belching, human-stuffed mechanical monsters that travel at breakneck speed to sanitised air-conditioned vehicles with comfortable seating and

MANNING THE METER

Getting a metered ride is only half the battle. Meters are almost always outdated, so fares are calculated using a combination of the meter reading and a complicated 'fare adjustment card'. Predictably, this system is open to abuse. To get a rough estimate of fares in advance, try the portal www.taxiautofare.com.

smoother ride quality. In any case, it's usually far more convenient to opt for an autorickshaw or taxi, as they are quicker and more frequent.

Cycle-Rickshaw

A cycle-rickshaw is a pedal cycle with two rear wheels, supporting a bench seat for passengers. Most have a canopy that can be raised in wet weather or lowered to provide extra space for luggage.

Fares must be agreed upon in advance – speak to locals to get an idea of what is a fair price for the distance you intend to travel.

Kolkata is the last bastion of the hand-pulled rickshaw, known as the tana rickshaw. This is a hand-cart on two wheels pulled directly by the rickshaw-wallah.

Metro

New metro systems are starting to transform urban transport in the biggest cities. Kolkata was the first, opening in 1984. Delhi's metro opened in 2002, and increases its reach year on year. Bengaluru's metro opened in 2011, Mumbai's in 2014, and the Chennai and Hyderabad metros were expected to start operating in 2015. They will become increasingly useful to visitors as their networks expand over the coming years. Mumbai, Hyderabad and Chennai, among other cities, also have useful suburban trains leaving from ordinary train stations.

Taxi

Most towns have taxis, and these are usually metered, however, getting drivers to use the meter can be a hassle. To avoid fare-setting shenanigans, use prepaid taxis where possible. Radio cabs are the most efficient option in larger cities.

Prepaid Taxis & Radio Cabs

Most major Indian airports and train stations now incorporate prepaid-taxi and radio-cab booths. Here, you can book a taxi for a fixed price (which will include baggage) and thus avoid commission scams. Hold onto your receipt until you reach your destination, as proof of payment.

Radio cabs cost marginally more than prepaid taxis, but are air-conditioned and manned by the company's chauffeurs. Cabs have electronic, receipt-generating fare meters and are fitted with GPS units, so the company can monitor the vehicle's movement around town. These minimise chances of errant driving or unreasonable demands for extra cash by the driver afterward.

Smaller airports and stations may have prepaid autorickshaw booths instead.

Other Local Transport

In some towns, tongas (horse-drawn two-wheelers) and victorias (horse-drawn carriages) still operate. Kolkata has a tram network, and Mumbai, Delhi, Kolkata and Chennai, among other centres, have suburban trains that leave from ordinary train stations.

Motorcycle

Despite traffic challenges, India is an amazing country for long-distance motorcycle touring. However, it can be quite an undertaking; there are some popular motorcycle tours for those who don't want the rigmarole of going it alone.

The most preferred starting point for motorcycle tours is Delhi, as well as Manali, and popular destinations include Rajasthan, South India and Ladakh. Weather is an important factor and you should check for the best times to visit different areas. To cross from neighbouring countries, check the latest regulations and paperwork requirements from the relevant diplomatic mission.

Driving Licence

To hire a motorcycle in India, technically you're required to have a valid international drivers' permit in addition to your domestic licence. In tourist areas, some places may rent out a motorcycle without asking for a driving permit/licence, but you won't be covered by insurance in the event of an accident, and may also face a fine.

Hire

The classic way to motorcycle around India is on a Royal Enfield, built to both vintage and modern specs. As well as making a satisfying chugging sound, these bikes are fully manual, making them easy to repair (parts can be found almost everywhere in India). On the other hand, Enfields are often less reliable than many of the newer, Japanese-designed bikes.

Plenty of places rent out motorcycles for local trips and longer tours. Japanese and Indian-made bikes in the 100cc to 150cc range are cheaper than the big 350cc to 500cc Enfields.

As security, you'll need to leave a large cash deposit (ensure you get a receipt that stipulates the refundable amount) or your passport/air ticket. We strongly advise not leaving these documents, in particular your passport, which you need for hotel check-ins and if stopped by the police.

For three weeks' hire, a 500cc Enfield costs from ₹22,000; a 350cc costs ₹15,000. The price includes excellent advice and an invaluable crash course in Enfield mechanics and repairs.

As for accessories, helmets are available for ₹500 to ₹2000; extras (panniers, luggage racks, protection bars, rear-view mirrors, lockable fuel caps, petrol filters, extra tools) are also easy to come by.

A useful website for Enfield models is www.royal-enfield.com.

The following dealers come recommended:

Lalli Motorbike Exports (Map p64; ☎28750869; www.lallisingh.com; 1740-A/55 Hari Singh Nalwa St, Abdul Aziz Rd; Delhi; 📍Karol Bagh) Run by the knowledgeable Lalli Singh, this outfit sells and rents out Enfields and parts, and buyers get a crash course in running and maintaining these lovable but temperamental machines. He can also recommend other reputable dealers in the area.

Anu Auto Works (Royal Moto Touring; Map p310; ☎9816163378; www.royal-mototouring.com; Vashisht Rd; Manali) Rents Enfields and takes tours over high Himalayan passes to Ladakh and Spiti from mid-May to mid-September. Typical Enfield rental rates are ₹1500 per day for a 500cc, ₹1200 to ₹1300 per day for 350cc. Discounts usually available for rentals of about 18 days or more.

Allibhai Premji Tyrewalla (☎22-23099313; www.premjis.com; 205 Dr D Bhadkamkar (Lamington) Rd, Mumbai) Sells new and second-hand motorcycles with a buy-back option.

Rajasthan Auto Centre (☎9829188064; Sanjay Bazaar, Sangneri Gate, Jaipur) Comes recommended as a place for hiring, fixing or purchasing a motorcycle. To hire a 350cc Bullet costs ₹500 to ₹600 per day (including helmet).

Purchase

For longer tours, purchasing a new motorcycle may sound like a great idea. However, selling motor vehicles to foreigners comes with reams of complicated paperwork, and in many situations, procuring a motorcycle might not be possible or feasible at all.

Second-hand bikes are widely available, though, and paperwork is simpler than for a new machine. The Delhi government is in the process of creating a new rule to ban all 15-year-old privately owned vehicles from the Delhi roads. There are strong objections to this from the public, so it's debatable whether the rule will be passed.

To find a second-hand motorcycle, check travellers' noticeboards and ask motorcycle mechanics and other bikers. A well looked-after second-hand 350cc Enfield costs ₹50,000-105,000. The 500cc model ranges between ₹85,000-135,000. You will also have to pay for insurance.

OWNERSHIP PAPERS

There's plenty of paperwork associated with owning a motorcycle. The process is complicated and time-consuming, so it's wise to seek advice from the agent selling the bike.

Registration papers are signed by the local registration authority when the bike is first sold; you need these when you buy a second-hand bike.

Foreign nationals cannot change the name on the registration but you must fill out forms for change of ownership and transfer of insurance.

Registration must be renewed every 15 years (for around ₹5000); make absolutely sure that it states the 'road-worthiness' of the vehicle, and that there are no outstanding debts or criminal proceedings associated with the bike.

Insurance

Only hire a bike that has third-party insurance – if you hit someone without insurance the consequences can be very costly. Reputable companies will include third-party cover in their policies; those that don't probably aren't trustworthy.

You must also arrange insurance if you buy a motorcycle (usually you can organise this through the person selling the bike).

The minimum level of cover is third-party insurance – available for around ₹800 to ₹1500 per year. This will cover repair and medical costs for any other vehicles, people or property you might hit, but no cover for your own machine. Comprehensive insurance (recommended) costs ₹1200 to ₹3500 per year.

Fuel, Spare Parts & Extras

Petrol and engine oil are widely available in the plains, but petrol stations are rarer in the mountains. If travelling to remote regions, carry enough extra fuel (seek local advice about fuel availability before setting off). At the time of writing, petrol cost around ₹55 per litre in different states.

If you're going to remote regions it's also important to carry basic spares (valves, fuel lines, piston rings etc). Parts for Indian and Japanese machines are widely available in cities and larger towns; Delhi's Karol Bagh is a good place to find parts for all Indian and imported bikes.

Get your machine serviced regularly (particularly older ones). Indian roads and engine vibration work things loose quite quickly.

Check the engine and gearbox oil level regularly (at least every 500km) and clean the oil filter every few thousand kilometres.

Given the road conditions, the chances are you'll make at least a couple of visits to a puncture-wallah – start your trip with new tyres and carry spanners to remove your own wheels.

It's a good idea to bring your own protective equipment (jackets, gloves etc).

Road Conditions

Given the varied road conditions, India can be challenging for novice riders. Hazards range from cows and chickens crossing the carriageway to broken-down trucks, unruly traffic, pedestrians on the road, and ubiquitous potholes and unmarked speed humps. Rural roads sometimes have grain crops strewn across them to be threshed by passing vehicles – a serious sliding hazard for bikers.

Try not to cover too much territory in one day and never ride in the dark – many vehicles drive without lights, and dynamo-powered motorcycle headlamps are useless at low revs while negotiating around potholes.

On busy national highways, expect to average 40km/h to 50km/h without stops; on winding back roads and dirt tracks this can drop to 10km/h.

Organised Motorcycle Tours

Dozens of companies offer organised motorcycle tours around India with a support vehicle, mechanic and guide. Below are some reputable outfits (see websites for contact details, itineraries and prices):

Blazing Trails (www.blazingtrailstours.com)

Classic Bike Adventure (www.classic-bike-india.com; Assago) This well-established Goan company organises motorbike tours on Enfields through the Himalaya, Nepal, South India and Goa.

Ferris Wheels (www.ferriswheels.com.au)

H-C Travel (www.hctravel.com)

Himalayan Roadrunners (www.ridehigh.com)

Kerala Bike Tours

(☎04842356652, 9388476817; www.keralabiketours.com; Kirushupaly Rd, Ravipuram) Organises motorcycle tours around Kerala and the Western Ghats and hires out touring-quality Enfield Bullets (from US$155 per week) with unlimited mileage, full insurance and free recovery/maintenance options.

Lalli Singh Tours (www.lallisingh.com)

Moto Discovery (www.motodiscovery.com)

Wheel of India (www.wheelofindia.com)

Shared Jeeps

In mountain areas shared jeeps supplement the bus services, charging similar fixed fares.

Although nominally designed for five to six passengers, most shared jeeps squeeze in more. The seats beside and immediately behind the driver are more expensive than the cramped bench seats at the rear.

Jeeps only leave when full; people often bail out of a half-full jeep and pile into one with more passengers that's ready to depart. Drivers will leave immediately if you pay for all the empty seats and 'reserve' a vehicle for yourself.

Jeeps run from jeep stands and 'passenger stations' at the junctions of major roads; ask locals to point you in the right direction.

In some states, jeeps are known as 'sumos' after the Tata Sumo, a popular vehicle.

Travel sickness, particularly on winding mountain roads, may mean you are asked to give up your window seat to queasy fellow passengers.

Tours

Tours are available all over India, run by tourist offices, local transport companies and travel agencies. Organised tours can be an inexpensive way to see several places on one trip, although you rarely get much time at each place. If you arrange a tailor-made tour, you'll have more freedom about where you go and how long you stay.

Drivers may double as guides, or you can hire a qualified local guide for a fee. In tourist towns, be wary of touts claiming to be professional guides.

International Tour Agencies

Many international companies offer tours to India, from straightforward sightseeing trips to adventure tours and activity-based holidays. To find current tours that match your interests, quiz travel agents and surf the web. Some good places to start your tour hunt:

Dragoman (www.dragoman.com) One of several reputable overland tour companies offering trips on customised vehicles.

Exodus (www.exodus.co.uk) A wide array of specialist trips, including tours with a holistic, wildlife and adventure focus.

India Wildlife Tours (www.india-wildlife-tours.com) All sorts of wildlife tours, plus jeep/horse/camel safaris and birdwatching.

Indian Encounter (www.indianencounters.com) Special-interest tours that include wildlife spotting, river-rafting and ayurvedic treatments.

Intrepid Travel (www.intrepidtravel.com) Endless possibilities from wildlife tours to sacred rambles.

Peregrine Adventures (www.peregrineadventures.com) Popular cultural and trekking tours.

Sacred India Tours (www.sacredindiatours.com) Includes tours with a holistic focus such as yoga and ayurveda, as well as architectural and cultural tours.

Shanti Travel (www.shantitravel.com/en) A range of tours including family and adventure tours, run by a Franco-Indian team.

World Expeditions (www.worldexpeditions.com) An array of options that includes trekking and cycling tours.

Train

Travelling by train is a quintessential Indian experience. Trains offer a smoother ride than buses and are especially recommended for long journeys that include overnight travel. India's rail network is one of the largest and busiest in the world and Indian Railways is the largest utility employer on earth, with roughly 1.5 million workers. There are around 6900 train stations scattered across the country.

We've listed useful trains but there are hundreds more. The best way of sourcing updated railway information is to use relevant internet sites such as Indian Railways (www.indianrail.gov.in) and the excellent India Rail Info (<http://indiarailinfo.com>), with added offline browsing support, as well as the user-friendly Erail (www.erail.in). There's also Trains at a Glance (₹45), available at many train station bookstands and better bookshops/newsstands, however it's published annually so it's not as up to date as websites. Nevertheless, it offers comprehensive timetables covering all the main lines. For more information see p34.

Booking Tickets in India

You can either book tickets through a travel agency or hotel (for a commission), or in person at the train station. You can also book online through IRCTC (www.irctc.co.in), the e-ticketing division of Indian Railways, or portals such as Cleartrip (www.cleartrip.com), Make My Trip (www.makemytrip.com) and Yatra (www.yatra.com). Remember, however, that online booking of train tickets has its share of glitches: travellers have reported problems with registering themselves on some portals and using certain overseas credit cards. Big stations often have English-speaking staff who can help with reserventions. At smaller stations, the stationmaster and his deputy usually speak English. It's also worth approaching tourist-office staff if you need advice.

AT THE STATION

Get a reservation slip from the information window, fill in the name of the departure station, destination station, the class you want to travel and the name and number of the train. Join the long queue for the ticket window where your ticket will be printed. Women should take advantage of the separate women's queue – if there isn't one, go to the front of the regular queue.

TOURIST RESERVATION BUREAU

Larger cities and major tourist centres have an International Tourist Bureau, which allows you to book tickets in relative peace – check www.indianrail.gov.in for a list of these stations.

Reservations

Bookings open up to 60 days before departure and you must make a reservation for chair-car, sleeper, 1AC, 2AC and 3AC carriages. No reservations are required for general (2nd class) compartments; you have to grab seats here the moment the train pulls in.

Trains are always busy so it's wise to book as far in advance as possible, especially for overnight journeys. There may be additional services to certain destinations during major festivals but it's still worth booking well in advance.

Reserved tickets show your seat/berth and carriage number. Carriage numbers are written on the side of the train (station staff and porters can point you in the right direction). A list of names and berths is posted on the side of each reserved carriage.

FARE FINDER

Go to www.indiarailinfo.com or erail.in and type in the name of the two destinations. You'll promptly get a list of every train (with the name, number, arrival/departure times and journey details) plying the route, as well as fares for each available class.

Refunds are available on any ticket, even after departure, with a penalty – rules are complicated, check when you book.

Trains can be delayed at any stage of the journey; to avoid stress, factor some leeway into your plans.

Be mindful of potential drugging and theft; a padlock and chain are useful for securing your baggage to luggage racks for longer journeys.

If the train you want to travel on is sold out, enquire about other options.

TOURIST QUOTA

A special (albeit small) tourist quota is set aside for foreign tourists travelling between popular stations. These seats can only be booked at dedicated reservation offices in major cities, and you need to show your passport and visa as ID. Tickets can be paid for in rupees (some offices may ask to see foreign exchange certificates – ATM receipts will suffice).

TATKAL TICKETS

Indian Railways holds back a small number of tickets on key trains and releases them at 10am one day before the train is due to depart. A charge of ₹10 to ₹400 is added to each ticket price. First AC tickets are excluded from the scheme.

RESERVATION AGAINST CANCELLATION (RAC)

Even when a train is fully booked, Indian Railways sells a handful of seats in each class as 'Reservation Against Cancellation' (RAC).

This means that if you have an RAC ticket and someone cancels before the departure date, you will get his or her seat (or berth). You'll have to check the reservation list at the station on the day of travel to see if you've been allocated a confirmed seat/berth. Even if no one cancels, you can still board the train as an RAC ticket holder and travel without a seat.

WAITLIST (WL)

If the RAC quota is maxed out as well, you will be handed a waitlisted ticket (marked WL). This means that if there are enough cancellations, you may eventually move up the order to land a confirmed berth, or at least an RAC seat. Check your booking status at www.indianrail.gov.in/pnr\_Enq.html by entering your ticket's PNR number. You can't board the train on a waitlisted ticket, but a refund is available – ask the ticket office about your chances.

Costs

Fares are calculated by distance and class of travel; Rajdhani and Shatabdi trains are slightly more expensive, but the price includes meals. Most air-conditioned carriages have a catering service (meals are brought to your seat). In unreserved classes it's a good idea to carry portable snacks. Male/female seniors (those over 60/58) get 40/50% off all fares in all classes on all types of train. Children below the age of six travel free, those aged between six and 12 are charged half price, up to 300km.

Health

Hygiene is generally poor in most regions so food and water-borne illnesses are fairly common. A number of insect-borne diseases are present, particularly in tropical areas. Medical care is basic in various areas (especially beyond the larger cities) so it's essential to be well prepared.

Pre-existing medical conditions and accidental injury (especially traffic accidents) account for most that are life-threatening. Becoming ill in some way, however, is common. Fortunately, most travellers' illnesses can be prevented with some common-sense behaviour or treated with a well-stocked travellers' medical kit – however, never hesitate to consult a doctor while on the road, as self-diagnosis can be hazardous.

The following information is a general guide only and certainly does not replace the advice of a doctor trained in travel medicine.

BEFORE YOU GO

You can buy many medications over the counter in India without a doctor's prescription, but it can be difficult to find some of the newer drugs, particularly the latest antidepressant drugs, blood-pressure medications and contraceptive pills. Bring the following:

- ➔ medications in their original, labelled containers
- ➔ a signed, dated letter from your doctor describing your medical conditions and medications, including generic names

- ➔ a doctor's letter documenting the necessity of any syringes you bring
- ➔ if you have a heart condition, a copy of your ECG taken just prior to travelling
- ➔ any regular medication (double your ordinary needs)

Insurance

Don't travel without health insurance. Emergency evacuation is expensive. Consider the following when buying insurance:

- ➔ You may require extra cover for adventure activities such as rock climbing.
- ➔ In India, doctors usually require immediate payment in cash. Your insurance plan may make payments directly to providers or it will reimburse you later for overseas health expenditures. If you do have to claim later, make sure you keep all relevant documentation.
- ➔ Some policies ask that you telephone back (reverse charges) to a centre in your home country where an immediate assessment of your problem will be made.

Vaccinations

Specialised travel-medicine clinics are your best source of up-to-date information; they stock all available vaccines and can give specific recommendations for your trip. Most vaccines don't give immunity until at least two weeks after they're given, so visit a doctor well before departure. Ask your doctor for an International Certificate of Vaccination (sometimes known as the 'yellow booklet'), which will list all the vaccinations you've received.

Medical checklist

Recommended items for a personal medical kit:

- ➔ Antifungal cream, eg clotrimazole
- ➔ Antibacterial cream, eg mupirocin
- ➔ Antibiotic for skin infections, eg amoxicillin/clavulanate or cephalexin
- ➔ Antihistamine – there are many options, eg cetirizine for daytime and promethazine for night
- ➔ Antiseptic, eg Betadine
- ➔ Antispasmodic for stomach cramps, eg Buscopam
- ➔ Contraceptive
- ➔ Decongestant, eg pseudoephedrine
- ➔ DEET-based insect repellent
- ➔ Diarrhoea medication – consider an oral rehydration solution (eg Gastrolyte), diarrhoea 'stopper' (eg loperamide) and antinausea medication (eg prochlorperazine). Antibiotics for diarrhoea include ciprofloxacin; for bacterial diarrhoea azithromycin; for giardia or amoebic dysentery tinidazole
- ➔ First-aid items such as elastoplasts, bandages, gauze, thermometer (but not mercury), sterile needles and syringes, and tweezers

- ➔ Ibuprofen or another anti-inflammatory
- ➔ Iodine tablets (unless you're pregnant or have a thyroid problem) to purify water
- ➔ Migraine medication if you suffer from migraines
- ➔ Paracetamol
- ➔ Pyrethrin to impregnate clothing and mosquito nets
- ➔ Steroid cream for allergic or itchy rashes, eg 1% to 2% hydrocortisone
- ➔ High-factor sunscreen
- ➔ Throat lozenges

- ➔ Thrush (vaginal yeast infection) treatment, eg clotrimazole pessaries or Diflucan tablet
- ➔ Ural or equivalent if prone to urine infections

REQUIRED & RECOMMENDED VACCINATIONS

The only vaccine required by international regulations is yellow fever. Proof of vaccination will only be required if you have visited a country in the yellow-fever zone within the six days prior to entering India. If you are travelling to India from Africa or South America, you should check to see if you require proof of vaccination.

The World Health Organization (WHO) recommends the following vaccinations for travellers to India (as well as being up to date with measles, mumps and rubella vaccinations):

Adult diphtheria & tetanus Single booster recommended if none in the previous 10 years. Side effects include sore arm and fever.

Hepatitis A Provides almost 100% protection for up to a year; a booster after 12 months provides at least another 20 years' protection. Mild side effects such as headache and sore arm occur in 5% to 10% of people.

Hepatitis B Now considered routine for most travellers. Given as three shots over six months. A rapid schedule is also available, as is a combined vaccination with Hepatitis A. Side effects are mild and uncommon, usually headache and sore arm. In 95% of people lifetime protection results.

Polio Only one booster is required as an adult for lifetime protection. Inactivated polio vaccine is safe during pregnancy.

Typhoid Recommended for all travellers to India, even those only visiting urban areas. The vaccine offers around 70% protection, lasts for two to three years and comes as a single shot. Tablets are also available, but the injection is usually recommended as it has fewer side effects. Sore arm and fever may occur.

Varicella If you haven't had chickenpox, discuss this vaccination with your doctor.

These immunisations are recommended for long-term travellers (more than one month) or those at special risk (seek further advice from your doctor):

Japanese B Encephalitis Three injections in all. Booster recommended after two years. Sore arm and headache are the most common side effects. In rare cases, an allergic reaction comprising hives and swelling can occur up to 10 days after any of the three doses.

Meningitis Single injection. There are two types of vaccination: the quadrivalent vaccine gives two to three years' protection; meningitis group C vaccine gives around 10 years' protection. Recommended for long-term backpackers aged under 25.

Rabies Three injections in all. A booster after one year will then provide 10 years' protection. Side effects are rare – occasionally headache and sore arm.

Tuberculosis (TB) Adult long-term travellers are usually recommended to have a TB skin test before and after travel, rather than vaccination. Only one vaccine given in a lifetime.

IN INDIA

Availability of Health Care

Medical care is hugely variable in India. Some cities now have clinics catering specifically to travellers and expatriates; these clinics are usually more expensive than local medical facilities, and offer a higher standard of care. Additionally, they know the local system, including reputable local hospitals and specialists. They may also liaise with insurance companies should you require evacuation. It is usually difficult to find reliable medical care in rural areas.

Self-treatment may be appropriate if your problem is minor (eg traveller's diarrhoea), you are carrying the relevant medication, and you cannot attend a recommended clinic. If you suspect a serious disease, especially malaria, travel to the nearest quality facility.

Before buying medication over the counter, check the use-by date, and ensure the packet is sealed and properly stored (eg not exposed to the sunshine).

Infectious Diseases

Malaria

This is a potentially deadly disease. Before you travel, seek expert advice according to your itinerary (rural areas are especially risky) and on medication and side effects.

Malaria is caused by a parasite transmitted by the bite of an infected mosquito. The most important symptom of malaria is fever, but general symptoms, such as headache, diarrhoea, cough or chills, may also occur. Diagnosis can only be properly made by taking a blood sample.

Two strategies should be combined to prevent malaria: mosquito avoidance and antimalarial medications. Most people who catch malaria are taking inadequate or no antimalarial medication.

Travellers are advised to prevent mosquito bites by taking these steps:

- ➔ Use a DEET-based insect repellent on exposed skin. Wash this off at night – as long as you are sleeping under a mosquito net. Natural repellents such as citronella can be effective, but must be applied more frequently than products containing DEET.
- ➔ Sleep under a mosquito net impregnated with pyrethrin.
- ➔ Choose accommodation with proper screens and fans (if not air-conditioned).
- ➔ Impregnate clothing with pyrethrin in high-risk areas.

- ➔ Wear long sleeves and trousers in light colours.
- ➔ Use mosquito coils.
- ➔ Spray your room with insect repellent before going out for your evening meal.

There are a variety of medications available:

Chloroquine & Paludrine combination Limited effectiveness in many parts of South Asia. Common side effects include nausea (40% of people) and mouth ulcers.

Doxycycline (daily tablet) A broad-spectrum antibiotic that helps prevent a variety of tropical diseases, including leptospirosis, tick-borne disease and typhus. Potential side effects include photosensitivity (a tendency to sunburn), thrush (in women), indigestion, heartburn, nausea and interference with the contraceptive pill. More serious side effects include ulceration of the oesophagus – take your tablet with a meal and a large glass of water, and never lie down within half an hour of taking it. It must be taken for four weeks after leaving the risk area.

Lariam (mefloquine) This weekly tablet suits many people. Serious side effects are rare but include depression, anxiety, psychosis and seizures. Anyone with a history of depression, anxiety, other psychological disorders or epilepsy should not take Lariam. It is considered safe in the second and third trimesters of pregnancy. Tablets must be taken for four weeks after leaving the risk area.

Malarone A combination of atovaquone and proguanil. Side effects are uncommon and mild, most commonly nausea and headache. It is the best tablet for scuba divers and for those on short trips to high-risk areas. It must be taken for one week after leaving the risk area.

Other diseases

Avian Flu 'Bird flu' or Influenza A (H5N1) is a subtype of the type A influenza virus. Contact with dead or sick birds is the principal source of infection and bird-to-human transmission does not

HEALTH ADVISORIES

It's a good idea to consult your government's travel-health website before departure, if one is available:

- ➔ Australia (www.smarttraveller.gov.au)
- ➔ Canada (www.travelhealth.gc.ca)
- ➔ New Zealand (www.mfat.govt.nz/travel)
- ➔ UK (www.fco.gov.uk/en/travelling-and-living-overseas)
- ➔ US (www.cdc.gov/travel)

easily occur. Symptoms include high fever and flu-like symptoms with rapid deterioration, leading to respiratory failure and death in many cases. Immediate medical care should be sought if bird flu is suspected. Check [www.who.int/en/or www.avianinfluenza.com.au](http://www.who.int/en/or www.avianinfluenza.com.au).

Dengue Fever This mosquito-borne disease is becoming increasingly problematic, especially in the cities. As there is no vaccine available it can only be prevented by avoiding mosquito bites at all times. Symptoms include high fever, severe headache and body ache and sometimes a rash and diarrhoea. Treatment is rest and paracetamol – do not take aspirin or ibuprofen as it increases the likelihood of haemorrhaging. Make sure you see a doctor to be diagnosed and monitored.

Hepatitis A This food- and water-borne virus infects the liver, causing jaundice (yellow skin and eyes), nausea and lethargy. There is no specific treatment for hepatitis A; just allow time for the liver to heal. All travellers to India should be vaccinated against hepatitis A.

Hepatitis B This sexually transmitted disease is spread by body fluids and can be prevented by vaccination. The long-term consequences can include liver cancer and cirrhosis.

Hepatitis E Transmitted through contaminated food and water, hepatitis E has similar symptoms to hepatitis A, but is far less common. It is a severe problem in pregnant women and can result in the death of both mother and baby. There is no commercially available vaccine, and prevention is by following safe eating and drinking guidelines.

HIV Spread via contaminated body fluids. Avoid unsafe sex, unsterile needles (including in medical facilities) and procedures such as tattoos. The growth rate of HIV in India is one of the highest in the world.

Influenza Present year-round in the tropics, influenza (flu) symptoms include fever, muscle aches, a runny nose, cough and sore throat. It can be severe in people over the age of 65 or in those with medical conditions such as heart disease or diabetes – vaccination is recommended for these individuals. There is no specific treatment, just rest and paracetamol.

Japanese B Encephalitis This viral disease is transmitted by mosquitoes and is rare in travellers. Most cases occur in rural areas and vaccination is recommended for travellers spending more than one month outside of cities. There is no treatment, and it may result in permanent brain damage or death. Ask your doctor for further details.

Rabies This fatal disease is spread by the bite or possibly even the lick of an infected animal – most commonly a dog or monkey. You should seek medical advice immediately after any animal bite and commence postexposure treatment. Having pretravel vaccination means the postbite treatment is greatly simplified. If an animal bites you, gently wash the wound with soap and water, and apply iodine-based antiseptic. If you are not prevaccinated you will need to receive rabies immunoglobulin as soon as possible, and this is very difficult to obtain in much of India.

Tuberculosis While TB is rare in travellers, those who have significant contact with the local population (such as medical and aid workers and long-term travellers) should take precautions. Vaccination is usually only given to children under the age of five, but adults at risk are recommended to have pre- and post-travel TB testing. The main symptoms are fever, cough, weight loss, night sweats and fatigue.

Typhoid This bacterial infection is also spread via food and water. It gives a high and progressive fever and headache, and may be accompanied by a dry cough and stomach pain. It is diagnosed by blood tests and treated with antibiotics. Vaccination is recommended for all travellers who are spending more than a week in India. Be aware that vaccination is not 100% effective, so you must still be careful with what you eat and drink.

Travellers' Diarrhoea

This is by far the most common problem affecting travellers in India – between 30% and 70% of people will suffer from it within two weeks of starting their trip. It's usually caused by a bacteria, and thus responds promptly to treatment with antibiotics.

Travellers' diarrhoea is defined as the passage of more than three watery bowel actions within 24 hours, plus at least one other symptom, such as fever, cramps, nausea, vomiting or feeling generally unwell.

Treatment consists of staying well hydrated; rehydration solutions like Gastrolyte are the best for this. Antibiotics such as ciprofloxacin or azithromycin should kill the bacteria quickly. Seek medical attention quickly if you do not respond to an appropriate antibiotic.

Loperamide is just a 'stopper' and doesn't get to the cause of the problem. It can be helpful, though (eg if you have to go on a long bus ride). Don't take loperamide if you have a fever or blood in your stools.

Amoebic Dysentery Amoebic dysentery is very rare in travellers but is quite often misdiagnosed by poor-quality labs. Symptoms are similar to bacterial diarrhoea: fever, bloody diarrhoea and generally feeling unwell. You should always seek reliable medical care if you have blood in your diarrhoea. Treatment involves two drugs: tinidazole or metronidazole to kill the parasite in your gut and then a second drug to kill the cysts. If left untreated complications such as liver or gut abscesses can occur.

Giardiasis Giardia is a parasite that is relatively common in travellers. Symptoms include nausea, bloating, excess gas, fatigue and intermittent diarrhoea. The parasite will eventually go away if left untreated but this can take months; the best advice is to seek medical treatment. The treatment of choice is tinidazole, with metronidazole being a second-line option.

Environmental Hazards

Air Pollution

Air pollution, particularly vehicle pollution, is an increasing problem in most of India's urban hubs. If you have severe respiratory problems, speak with your doctor before travelling to India.

Diving & Surfing

Divers and surfers should seek specialised advice before they travel to ensure their medical kit contains treatment for coral cuts and tropical ear infections. Divers should ensure their insurance covers them for decompression illness – get specialised dive insurance through an organisation such as Divers Alert Network (www.danasiapacific.org). Certain medical conditions are incompatible with diving; check with your doctor.

Food

Dining out brings with it the possibility of contracting diarrhoea. Ways to help avoid food-related illness:

- ➔ eat only freshly cooked food
- ➔ avoid shellfish and buffets
- ➔ peel fruit

- ➔ cook vegetables
- ➔ soak salads in iodine water for at least 20 minutes
- ➔ eat in busy restaurants with a high turnover of customers

Heat

Many parts of India, especially down south, are hot and humid throughout the year. For most visitors it takes around two weeks to comfortably adapt to the hot climate. Swelling of the feet and ankles is common, as are muscle cramps caused by excessive sweating. Prevent these by avoiding dehydration and excessive activity in the heat. Don't eat salt tablets (they aggravate the gut); drinking rehydration solution or eating salty food helps. Treat cramps by resting, rehydrating with double-strength rehydration solution and gently stretching.

Dehydration is the main contributor to heat exhaustion. Recovery is usually rapid and it is common to feel weak for some days afterwards. Symptoms include:

- ➔ feeling weak
- ➔ headache
- ➔ irritability
- ➔ nausea or vomiting
- ➔ sweaty skin
- ➔ a fast, weak pulse

- ➔ normal or slightly elevated body temperature.

Treatment:

- ➔ get out of the heat
- ➔ fan the sufferer
- ➔ apply cool, wet cloths to the skin
- ➔ lay the sufferer flat with their legs raised
- ➔ rehydrate with water containing one-quarter teaspoon of salt per litre.

Heat stroke is a serious medical emergency. Symptoms include:

- ➔ weakness
- ➔ nausea
- ➔ a hot dry body
- ➔ temperature of over 41°C
- ➔ dizziness
- ➔ confusion
- ➔ loss of coordination
- ➔ seizures
- ➔ eventual collapse.

Treatment:

- ➔ get out of the heat
- ➔ fan the sufferer
- ➔ apply wet cloths to the skin or ice to the body, especially to the groin and armpits.

Prickly heat is a common skin rash in the tropics, caused by sweat trapped under the skin. Treat it by moving out of the heat for a few hours and by having cool showers. Creams and ointments clog the skin so they should be avoided. Locally bought prickly-heat powder can be helpful.

Altitude Sickness

If you are going to altitudes above 3000m, Acute Mountain Sickness (AMS) is an issue. The biggest risk factor is going too high too quickly – follow a conservative acclimatisation schedule found in good trekking guides, and never go to a higher altitude when you have any symptoms that could be altitude related. There is no way to

DRINKING WATER

- ➔ Never drink tap water.
- ➔ Bottled water is generally safe – check the seal is intact at purchase.
- ➔ Avoid ice unless you know it has been made hygienically.
- ➔ Be careful of fresh juices served at street stalls in particular – they may have been watered down or may be served in unhygienic jugs/glasses.
- ➔ Boiling water is the most efficient method of purifying it.
- ➔ The best chemical purifier is iodine. It should not be used by pregnant women or those with thyroid problems.
- ➔ Water filters should also filter out most viruses. Ensure your filter has a chemical barrier such as iodine and a small pore size (less than four microns).

predict who will get altitude sickness and it is quite often the younger, fitter members of a group who succumb.

Symptoms usually develop during the first 24 hours at altitude but may be delayed up to three weeks. Mild symptoms include:

- ➔ headache
- ➔ lethargy
- ➔ dizziness
- ➔ difficulty sleeping
- ➔ loss of appetite.

AMS may become more severe without warning and can be fatal. Severe symptoms include:

- ➔ breathlessness
- ➔ a dry, irritative cough (which may progress to the production of pink, frothy sputum)
- ➔ severe headache
- ➔ lack of coordination and balance
- ➔ confusion
- ➔ irrational behaviour
- ➔ vomiting
- ➔ drowsiness
- ➔ unconsciousness.

Treat mild symptoms by resting at the same altitude until recovery, which usually takes a day or two. Paracetamol or aspirin can be taken for headaches. If symptoms persist or become worse, immediate descent is necessary; even 500m can help. Drug treatments should never be used to avoid descent or to enable further ascent.

The drugs acetazolamide and dexamethasone are recommended by some doctors for the prevention of AMS; however, their use is controversial. They can reduce the symptoms, but they may also mask warning signs; severe and fatal AMS has occurred in people taking these drugs.

To prevent acute mountain sickness:

- ➔ ascend slowly – have frequent rest days, spending

CARBON-MONOXIDE POISONING

Some mountain areas rely on charcoal burners for warmth, but these should be avoided due to the risk of fatal carbon-monoxide poisoning. The thick, mattress-like blankets used in many mountain areas are amazingly warm once you get beneath the covers. If you're still cold, improvise a hot-water bottle by filling your drinking-water bottle with boiled water and covering it with a sock.

two to three nights at each rise of 1000m

- ➔ sleep at a lower altitude than the greatest height reached during the day, if possible. Above 3000m, don't increase sleeping altitude by more than 300m daily
- ➔ drink extra fluids
- ➔ eat light, high-carbohydrate meals
- ➔ avoid alcohol and sedatives

Insect Bites & Stings

Bedbugs Don't carry disease but their bites can be very itchy. They usually live in furniture and walls and then migrate to the bed at night. You can treat the itch with an antihistamine.

Lice Most commonly appear on the head and pubic areas. You may need numerous applications of an antilice shampoo such as pyrethrin. Pubic lice are usually contracted from sexual contact.

Ticks Contracted walking in rural areas. Ticks are commonly found behind the ears, on the belly and in armpits. If you have had a tick bite and have a rash at the site of the bite or elsewhere, fever or muscle aches, you should see a doctor. Doxycycline prevents tick-borne diseases.

Leeches Found in humid rainforest areas. They do not transmit any disease but their bites are often intensely itchy for weeks and can easily become infected. Apply an iodine-based antiseptic to any leech bite to help prevent infection.

Bee and wasp stings Anyone with a serious bee or wasp allergy should carry an injection of adrenalin (eg an EpiPen). For others pain is the main problem – apply ice to the sting and take painkillers.

Skin Problems

Fungal rashes There are two common fungal rashes that affect travellers. The first occurs in moist areas, such as the groin, armpits and between the toes. It starts as a red patch that slowly spreads and is usually itchy. Treatment involves keeping the skin dry, avoiding chafing and using an antifungal cream such as clotrimazole or Lamisil. The second, Tinea versicolor, causes light-coloured patches, most commonly on the back, chest and shoulders. Consult a doctor.

Cuts and scratches These become easily infected in humid climates. Immediately wash all wounds in clean water and apply antiseptic. If you develop signs of infection (increasing pain and redness), see a doctor.

Women's Health

For gynaecological health issues, seek out a female doctor.

Birth control Bring adequate supplies of your own form of contraception.

Sanitary products Pads, rarely tampons, are readily available.

Thrush Heat, humidity and antibiotics can all contribute to thrush. Treatment is with antifungal creams and pessaries such as clotrimazole. A practical alternative is a single tablet of fluconazole (Diflucan).

Urinary-tract infections These can be precipitated by dehydration or long bus journeys without toilet stops; bring suitable antibiotics.

Language

The number of languages spoken in India helps explain why English is still widely spoken here, and why it's still in official use. Another 22 languages are recognised in the constitution, and more than 1600 minor languages are spoken throughout the country.

Major efforts have been made to promote Hindi as the national language of India and to gradually phase out English. However, English remains popular, and while Hindi is the predominant language in the north, it bears little relation to the Dravidian languages of the south such as Tamil. Consequently, very few people in the south speak Hindi.

Many educated Indians speak English as virtually their first language and for a large number of Indians it's their second tongue. Although you'll find it easy to get around India with English, it's always good to know a little of the local language.

HINDI

Hindi has about 600 million speakers worldwide, of which 180 million are in India. It developed from Classical Sanskrit, and is written in the Devanagari script. In 1947 it was granted official status along with English.

Most Hindi sounds are similar to their English counterparts. The main difference is that Hindi has both 'aspirated' consonants (pronounced with a puff of air, like saying 'h' after the sound) and unaspirated ones, as well as 'retroflex' (pronounced with the tongue bent backwards) and nonretroflex consonants. Our simplified pronunciation guides don't include these distinctions – read them as if they were English and you'll be understood.

Pronouncing the vowels correctly is important, especially their length (eg a and aa). The consonant combination ng after a vowel indicates nasalisation (ie the vowel is pronounced 'through the nose'). Note also that au is pronounced as the 'ow' in 'how'. Word stress is very light – we've indicated the stressed syllables with italics.

Basics

Hindi verbs change form depending on the gender of the speaker (or the subject of the sentence in general), so it's the verbs, not the pronouns 'he' or 'she' (as is the case in English) which show whether the subject of the sentence is masculine or feminine. In these phrases we include the options for male and female speakers, marked 'm' and 'f' respectively.

TAMIL

Tamil is the official language in the South Indian state of Tamil Nadu. It's one of the major Dravidian languages of South India, with records of its existence going back more than 2000 years. Tamil has about 62 million speakers in India.

Like Hindi, the Tamil sound system includes a number of 'retroflex' consonants (pronounced with the tongue bent backwards). Unlike Hindi, however, Tamil has no 'aspirated' sounds (pronounced with a puff of air). Our simplified pronunciation guides don't distinguish the retroflex consonants from their nonretroflex counterparts – just read the guides as if they were English and you'll be understood. Note that aw is pronounced as in 'law' and ow as in 'how'. The stressed syllables are indicated with italics.

AUTHOR THANKS

Sarina Singh

Coordinating a book of this scale was a delight thanks to a dedicated team of accomplished writers and editorial staff – massive thanks to you all. Gratitude, also, to our many readers who took the time to send in their feedback and share travel experiences. Finally, warm thanks to my parents for being so incredibly awesome.

Michael Benanav

Huge thanks to Lalji, Neeta, Sonal, Ashwin and their families, for their hospitality and ever-deeper insights into all things Gujarati. In Uttarakhand, thanks go to Manto and Debopam for help getting beneath the surface of the state. A special thanks to Adina, for running down a few details for me, for picking up that book about Rajula Malushahi, and for entertaining musings on the terrace in Kasar Devi. And thanks to Kelly and Luke, for keeping everything cool back home.

Abigail Blasi

Thank you Joe Bindloss and Sarina Singh, CE and CA supreme, and to my wonderful co-authors. Thanks in Delhi to Sarah Fotheringham, to Nicolas Thompson and Danish Abbas, to Dilliwalla Mayank Austen Soofi, to Rajinder and Surinder Budhraj, to Nirinjan and Jyoti Desai, my Delhi family, and to Luca for holding the fort.

Paul Clammer

Thanks – and apologies – to everyone I met on the road who helped with research, without realising that Rajasthan is a place best covered anonymously for Lonely Planet. I wish I could have told you what I was doing! It would have been immeasurably harder however if I hadn't had a confidante along the way, so my biggest thanks and love go to Robyn – sidekick and constant companion, in India as she is everywhere else I go. In Fatehpur and Bikaner, thank you Jean for the limericks and the gin, and in Pushkar, Anna Voss for the fairy lights and being a lovely neighbour. Thank you also to fellow authors Sarina Singh, and Daniel McCrohan for the kebabs, Karim's and Kingfishers in Delhi.

Mark Elliott

Many thanks to Rouf and family in Srinagar, Najum, Hamza and Muzamil in Kargil, Rajesh, Mowgli, Jai and Bunny in Kolkata, high-flying Simone, Aadil in Anantnag, Selim and Chamba in Leh, Stenzin Motup, Jaweed Ahmad, Zalina and Nabila, Lal Kumar, Sumit, Tony and Inge, Sophie, Tim and the crazy Nimaling yoga gang. Bless you Kate for joining the Himalayan adventures and making the treks so much more memorable. Eternal thanks as ever to my beloved parents.

Paul Harding

Thanks to Hannah and Layla for accompanying me to Goa and putting up with my absence while in Kerala. Cheers to Joe for entrusting me with such a great part of India. In India, thanks to all who offered advice and company but especially to all the friends in Goa and Kerala that I met up with again – you all know who you are!

Trent Holden

Thanks first up to Joe Bindloss for giving me the opportunity again to work again on India – a seriously dream gig. As well as to my co-authors, especially Sarina for all the help and tips along the way. A shout out to all the good folk I met along the road and shared a beer with. But as always my biggest thanks goes to my beautiful girlfriend Kate, and my family and friends who I all miss back home in Melbourne.

Anirban Mahapatra

My thanks, as always, to the entire editorial and production team at Lonely Planet, and to my awesome fellow authors for making this colossal project a reality. On the ground (in no particular order), my sincerest thanks to Sangey, Oken, Aaron, Audrey, Babul, Monjit,

Cartography, Wayne Murphy, Ellie Simpson

Jyoti, Anit, Nino, Kanno, Bambang, Hoihnu, Yishey, Hemanta, Rahul, Norden, Hemlata, Rintu, Binod, Ajay and Boomoni for all their help in fields as diverse as spirited long-distance driving, logistical troubleshooting, local knowledge, culinary prowess and, above all, for being great hosts, co-travellers and friends in general. Finally, hats off to Castleton Tea Estate, for their awesome teas that kept me awake through the wee writing hours.

Daniel McCrohan

My biggest thanks goes to my uncle, David Campos, who had to put up with me dragging him round half of India, just so that I could have some company on my trip! All my love, too, to the rest of my family back home, especially my darling wife and our two amazing children. In Punjab, thank you to Bimla Lyall MBE for a fascinating introduction to Sikhism (and for being the first person I've met who's got an MBE!). In Odisha, thanks to John Duncan and the rest of the Southampton University research team. And many thanks to my colleagues Kevin Raub, Mark Elliott and Trent Holden for tips and advice.

Isabella Noble

Cheers to everyone who helped out in Tamil Nadu, Ashish and Rucha Gupta for endless hospitality, Bernard Dragon and Rom Whitaker, and Junaid Sait for saving the day when I forgot to book Ooty accommodation. Special thanks to fellow authors Abi and Sarina for girl support, and to Andrew for Pondy fun and keeping me sane in Trichy. At home, huge thanks to Jacky and Paps for the laughs and advice. Mostly, to Susan Forsyth, for being there always.

John Noble

Thanks to everybody in India who answered my questions, pointed me in the right direction and helped with the logistics of a fabulous trip, especially Sumit Raj Vashisht, Jakamur Chauhan, Jonty Rajagopalan, Ashish and Rucha Gupta, Praveen Sood, the Dhami family of Chamba, Karanbir Singh Bedi, Ankit Sood and Vaneet Rana. Thanks also to Alice McGuigan and Sarina Singh and the fantastic author team, especially Isabella Noble with whom it was wonderful to share so much of this project!

Kevin Raub

Thanks to my wife, Adriana Schmidt Raub, who gladly ships me off to India without her! Joe Bindloss; at LP On the road, Anil Whadwa, Mini-Google, Shiron Haider, Shibab Haider, Naghma Haider, Aisha Khan, Mukal Kumar, Guatam Singh, Megha Singh, Naheed Varma, Harish Rijhwani, Malika Rijhwani, Rochikant Mishra, Nicole Seregni, Fernanda Polacow, Marta Delellis, Rashi Rajoria, R.K. Rai, Saptarishi Saigal, Awesh Ali, Eli Rasaero and Ivan and Pixie Lamech.

Iain Stewart

It was great to hang with Laksh in Bandra and have a virtual beer with Paul Harding by the sea. Thanks to the good folk at the MTDC all over the state, particularly Mr Shaker and Mrs Singh in Mumbai. I'm also very grateful to Aditya in Nagpur and Tadoba, Maria in Ma-theran and the merry musicians of Kolhapur.

Isabella Noble

Tamil Nadu & Chennai Isabella's first experience of South India was a masala dosa at Shimla's Indian Coffee House. She has been travelling to India for over five years, but loves the ever-so-slightly more laid-back pace of the friendly South. This time she got lost in Valparai's tea plantations, checked out Chennai's countless bars, then got stuck in the Nilgiris thanks to landslide. Between trips, Isabella lives in London with a wardrobe of Indian shawls. She tweets @isabellamnoble.

John Noble

Himachal Pradesh, Telangana & Andhra Pradesh John, from England, has written about 20-odd countries for Lonely Planet, including covering six very different Indian states for editions of this book. He loves returning to the subcontinent because, in a nutshell, there's never a dull moment there! Biggest thrills of this trip: getting back into the Himalaya (the world's most wonderful landscapes) and travelling the unbelievable Kinnaur-Spiti loop, and, as a long-time fan of William Dalrymple's White Mughals, exploring fascinating Hyderabad. He tweets @john_a_noble and Instagrams as johnnoble11.

Kevin Raub

Agra & the Taj Mahal, Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh & Chhattisgarh Kevin Raub grew up in Atlanta and started his career as a music journalist in New York, working for Men's Journal and Rolling Stone magazines. He ditched the rock 'n' roll lifestyle for travel writing and moved to Brazil. On his 8th epic Indian journey, Kevin was only out-spiced by an Indian chef once and never outsmarted by a rickshaw driver. This is Kevin's 30th Lonely Planet guide. Follow him on Twitter (@RaubOnTheRoad).

Iain Stewart

Mumbai (Bombay), Maharashtra Iain grew up in Leicester, a very Indian town transplanted to the Midlands, UK (complete with its own curry mile). He first visited India in 1991 and explored the sights at totally the wrong time of year with temperatures approaching 50°C in parts. For this trip he wised up and travelled post-monsoon: bar-hopping in Mumbai, meandering down the Konkan coast and having several near-misses with tigers in Tadoba.

Paul Clammer

Rajasthan Paul Clammer has contributed to over 25 Lonely Planet guidebooks, and worked as a tour guide in countries from Turkey to Morocco. In a previous life he may even have been a molecular biologist. He first covered India for LP back in 2004, up in the Himalayas, so jumped at the chance to explore Rajasthan in more depth this time around, staying on to write the chapter in a converted temple in Pushkar, where it was necessary to lock the doors to stop monkeys stealing his notes. Follow @paulclammer on Twitter.

Mark Elliott

Jammu & Kashmir, Kolkata (Calcutta) Mark has been making forays to the subcontinent since a 1984 ultra-budget adventure that lined his stomach for all eventualities. In various trips to J&K he has been stuck in two Kashmiri curfews, luckily sidestepped the 2010 Leh flash-floods and narrowly dodged the Srinagar deluge of 2014. He remains passionately enamoured of the region's people and landscapes while considering Kolkata India's most inspiring mega-city.

Paul Harding

Goa, Kerala Paul first landed in India in the mid-90s and has returned regularly over the years, usually writing about it. He still has a soft spot for the south, where the pace of life is slower, the food tastier and the beer (usually) colder. For this edition he was fortunate enough to return to Goa and Kerala where he researched beaches and backwaters, homestays and bamboo huts, seafood curries and chicken xacutis. This was Paul's 9th assignment on India and the second with his intrepid young daughter.

Trent Holden

Karnataka & Bengaluru, Andaman Islands On his third time co-authoring the India book, Trent was assigned with the not-so-shabby task of testing out Bengaluru's microbreweries, searching for tigers in Bandipur NP and checking out Hampi's ruins before hitting the beaches in Gokarna. He then returned to the Andaman Islands for more sun, surf and sand. A freelance travel writer based in London, Trent also covers destinations such as Nepal, Zimbabwe and Japan. In between travels he writes about food and music. You can catch him on Twitter @hombreholden.

Anirban Mahapatra

West Bengal & Darjeeling, Sikkim, Northeast States Anirban started his career as a newspaper reporter in 2004, but transitioned into travel journalism some years later after realising that all the good things in life awaited him on the open road.

A Lonely Planet author since 2007, he specialises on India and the Subcontinent, and loves to trundle routinely through the hinterlands of East and Northeast India, sampling the awesome culture and cuisine of the region. A closet Buddhist

(and probably a reborn lama), he takes special interest in Himalayan traditions. Apart from writing, Anirban currently also works on photographic and video projects. He lives in Kolkata.

Daniel McCrohan

Haryana & Punjab, Bihar & Jharkhand, Odisha Daniel has been writing for Lonely Planet about India and China for almost a decade now. Originally from the UK, he's based in Beijing these days, but has been travelling to India, on and off, since the early 1990s. This is his 23rd Lonely Planet book, and his fourth successive stint on India. Daniel is also the creator of the smartphone app Beijing on a Budget, a host on the travel show Best in China and a 'travel ninja' for planmy.

travel. You can contact him through his website, danielmccrohan.com.

OUR STORY

A beat-up old car, a few dollars in the pocket and a sense of adventure. In 1972 that's all Tony and Maureen Wheeler needed for the trip of a lifetime – across Europe and Asia overland to Australia. It took several months, and at the end – broke but inspired – they sat at their kitchen table writing and stapling together their first travel guide, Across Asia on the Cheap. Within a week they'd sold 1500 copies. Lonely Planet was born.

Today, Lonely Planet has offices in Franklin, London, Melbourne, Oakland, Beijing and Delhi, with more than 600 staff and writers. We share Tony's belief that 'a great guidebook should do three things: inform, educate and amuse'.

OUR WRITERS

Sarina Singh

Coordinating Author After finishing a business degree in Melbourne, Sarina travelled to India where she pursued a hotel corporate traineeship before becoming a journalist. After five years she returned to Australia and completed postgraduate journalism qualifications before authoring Lonely Planet's first edition of Rajasthan. Apart from numerous Lonely Planet books she has written for a raft of newspapers and magazines, and has been a scriptwriter and travel columnist.

Sarina is also the author of two prestigious publications – Polo in India and India: Essential Encounters. Her award-nominated documentary film premiered at the Melbourne International Film Festival before being screened internationally. Sarina wrote the Welcome to India, India's Top 17 and the India Today chapters.

Michael Benanav

Uttarakhand, Gujarat As a writer and photojournalist who covers issues affecting traditional cultures, Michael knew he hit the motherlode when he first visited Gujarat, criss-crossing the state on his way to remote tribal villages. In Uttarakhand, he's migrated with nomadic water buffalo herders in the Himalaya and joined religious worshippers on mountainous pilgrimage trails. The abundance of fascinating stories in these states – and the friendships he's formed in them – keep drawing him back. You can see his work at www.michaelbenanav.com. Michael also wrote the Trekking, India's Wildlife & Parks and The Landscape chapters.

Abigail Blasi

Delhi This is Abigail's sixth India title for Lonely Planet, and she was delighted to return to explore Delhi again, learning to love Paharganj, exploring the city's enclaves, and cycling through the mayhem of Old Delhi. She fell in love with the country on her first visit in 1994, and since then she's explored and written on India from north to south and back again. She's covered plenty of other places for Lonely Planet too, from Mauritania and Mali to Rome and Lisbon. Abigail also wrote the Need to Know, If You Like, Month by Month, Itineraries, Booking Trains, Yoga, Spas & Spiritual Pursuits, Volunteering, Travel with Children, Regions at a Glance, History, The Way of Life, Spiritual India, Delicious India, The Great Indian Bazaar, The Arts, Sacred Architecture, Scams, Women & Solo Travellers, Directory, Transport and Health chapters.
