Welcome to India

India pulsates with a spectacular mix of people, traditions and landscapes. Your journey through this mind-stirring country will blaze in your memory long after you've left its shores.

The Great Outdoors

From the soaring snow-dusted peaks of the northern mountains to the sultry sun-washed beaches of the southern coast, India's dramatic terrain is breathtaking. Along with abundant natural beauties, exquisitely carved temples rise majestically out of pancake-flat deserts and crumbling old fortresses peer over plunging ravines. Aficionados of the great outdoors can scout for big jungle cats on wildlife safaris, paddle in the shimmering waters of one of many beautiful beaches, take blood-pumping treks high in the Himalaya, or simply inhale pine-scented air on meditative forest walks.

Food, Glorious Food

Brace yourself – you're about to take one of the wildest culinary trips of your travelling life. Here you'll fry, simmer, sizzle, knead, roast and flip across a deliciously diverse repertoire of dishes. The hungry traveller can look forward to a tasty smorgasbord of regionally distinct creations, each with their own traditional preparation techniques and presentation styles – from the competing flavours of masterfully marinated meats and thalis to the simple splendour of vegetarian curries and deep-sea delights.

Expect the Unexpected

India tosses up the unexpected. This can be challenging, particularly for the first-time visitor: the poverty is confronting, Indian bureaucracy can be exasperating and the crush of humanity may turn the simplest task into a frazzling epic. Even veteran travellers find their nerves frayed at some point; yet this is all part of the India ride. With an ability to inspire, frustrate, thrill and confound all at once, adopting a 'go with the flow' attitude is wise if you wish to retain your sanity. Love it or loathe it – and most travellers see-saw between the two – to embrace India's unpredictability is to embrace her soul.

Simply Soul Stirring

Spirituality is the common characteristic painted across the vast and varied canvas that is contemporary India. The multitude of sacred sites and rituals are testament to the country's long, colourful, and sometimes tumultuous, religious history. And then there are the festivals! India hosts some of the world's most dazzling devotional celebrations – from formidable city parades celebrating auspicious events on the religious calendar to simple harvest fairs that pay homage to a locally worshipped deity.

Why I Love India

By Sarina Singh, Writer

The moment I start to think I'm right on the precipice of unravelling one of India's deep mysteries, she has an uncanny way of reminding me that it would take more than just a few lifetimes to do so. Indeed, demystifying India is a perpetual work in progress. And that is precisely what makes the country so deeply addictive for me. The constant exploration. The playful unpredictability. And knowing that, just when it's least expected, you can find yourself up close and personal with moments that have the power to alter the way you view the world and your place in it.

India's Top 17

Taj Mahal

1 The poignant beauty of the Taj Mahal (p352) has long inspired writers and artists in and beyond India. Rabindranath Tagore described it as 'a teardrop on the cheek of eternity', while Rudyard Kipling referred to it as 'the embodiment of all things pure'. Built by Emperor Shah Jahan in adoration of his third wife, Mumtaz Mahal, this milky white marble mausoleum – inlaid with calligraphy, precious and semiprecious stones and intricate floral designs representing eternal paradise – is one of the world's most poetic parting tributes to love.

Enigmatic Hampi

2 The surreal boulderscape of Hampi (p896) was once the cosmopolitan Vijayanagar, capital of a powerful Hindu empire. Still magnificent in ruins, its temples and royal structures combine sublimely with the terrain: giant rocks balance on slender pedestals near an ancient elephant garage; temples tuck into crevices between boulders; and wicker coracles float by rice paddies and bathing buffalo near a gargantuan bathtub for a former queen. As the sunset casts a rosy glow over the dreamy landscape, you might just forget what planet you're on.

Himalayan Mountains & Monasteries

3 Up north, hill stations give way to snow-capped peaks. From Ladakh (p223) to Sikkim, the cultural influences came not from the coasts but via mountain passes. Tibetan Buddhism thrives, and monasteries emerge from the forest or steep cliffs as poetically as the sun rises over Khangchendzonga. Prayer flags flutter in the wind, the soothing sound of monks chanting reverberates in meditation halls, and locals abound with holy offerings, all in the shadow of the mighty Himalaya. Yumthang Valley (p553)

Caves of Ajanta

4 They may have been ascetics, but the 2nd-century-BC monks who created the Ajanta caves (p788) certainly had an eye for the dramatic. The 30 rock-cut forest grottoes punctuate the side of a cliff, and originally had individual staircases leading down to the river. The architecture and towering stupas made these caves inspiring places to meditate and live, but the real bling came centuries later, in the form of exquisite carvings and paintings depicting the Buddha's former lives. Renunciation of the worldly life was never so serenely sophisticated.

Tropical Kerala

5 It's a luscious experience exploring the tropically radiant backwaters of Kerala (p964): 900km of interconnected rivers, lakes, canals and lagoons lined with the swaying palms of thick coconut groves. One of the most popular and scenic ways to peruse these parts is by cruising on a teak-and-palm-thatch houseboat. Drift along the waterways as the sun sinks behind the trees, snack on succulent Kerala seafood and later fall asleep under a twinkling night sky – and forget all about life on land for a while. Alappuzha (Alleppey; p958)

Architectural Mumbai

6 Mumbai (p734) has long embraced everything in her midst and inventively made them her own. The result is an architectural melange of buildings with a raft of design influences. The art deco and modern towers lend the city its cool, but it's the eclectic Victorian-era structures – the neo-Gothic, Indo-Saracenic and other old flourishes – that have added to Mumbai's magic. All those spires, gables, arches and onion domes, set off by lofty palms and leafy banyans, are apt embellishments for this movie-star city. Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus (Victoria Terminus; p739)

Wild Safaris

7 You have to be quite lucky to spot a tiger or leopard in India, but thousands do. Even if you don't see a big cat, it's a pleasure to simply wander through one of India's many forest reserves (p1169) on the back of an elephant, observing spotted deer, peacocks and langur monkeys, while colourful birds and butterflies flit overhead. Or just forget jungle cats and elephants and get camel happy instead! Desert safaris around places such as Jaisalmer involve riding atop these lovably goofy beasts, stopping at night to camp among a rippled ocean of sand dunes. Tiger, Bandhavgarh National Park (p678)

Breezy Hill Stations

8 The valleys, deserts and palm-lined beaches are all well and good, but it can get darn hot down there. India's erstwhile princes and British colonials long used cool mountain towns, such as Darjeeling (p500), as refuges from the heat, and the hill stations still serve up lush forests and crisp mountain air. So, curl up under a blanket with a steaming cup of local tea and watch birds swooping across misty hillsides, broody clouds drifting over bulbous tea trees and village kids running through mountain fog and meadow wildflowers. Darjeeling (p500)

Streets Alive

9 At first it can be overwhelming – dust in your eyes, incessant vehicle honking, the ever-jostling crowds – but you'll learn to adjust. And when that happens, you'll increasingly relish the jewels of Indian street life: scrumptious snacks sizzling in mobile carts, the fragrance of flowers being sold on footpaths, cars, rickshaws, motorbikes and bicycles dancing to a curious rhythm only they seem to hear, and, of course, the cows – those sweet, stubborn creatures that plod along, seemingly unperturbed, among the urban tumult. Old Delhi (p60)

Glorious Bazaars

10 Shopaholics: prepare to be dazzled! Those allergic to shopping, India will cure you! The bubbly bazaars have everything you want, guaranteed (though you may not have known you wanted it), usually with a side-servicing of friendly haggling. The variety will astonish you: tremendous textiles from chiffon saris to cotton shirts, glittering gold and silver bling, mounds of colourful spices, beautifully carved woodwork, jangly glass bangles, belly-button bindis, hand-woven shawls, bargain leather-bound books and a treasure trove of cute little trinkets. Fabrics for sale at street bazaar in Rajasthan (p104)

Sacred Varanasi

11 Welcome to Varanasi (p390). This is arguably India's most revered sacred city, with pilgrims flocking here to worship, take a holy dip in the Ganges River, or cremate loved ones. Hindus believe the waters of the Ganges cleanse away sins, while dying here is deemed particularly propitious as it offers emancipation from the arduous life-and-death cycle. Varanasi will swiftly sweep you into its dizzying spiritual whirlwind – just take a deep breath and immerse yourself in pondering the meaning of life, death...and beyond.

Beaches of Goa

12 One of the most easygoing places in India to chill out is along Goa's sun-kissed tropical coast (p810). With palm groves on one side of the white sands and gently lapping waves on the other, the best of the beaches are, indeed, postcard-perfect. But it's not an undiscovered paradise: this cool coastal strip bustles with fellow travellers, vendors and beach-shack eateries. It's a slice of paradise that appeals to social creatures and fans of creature comforts who like their seafood fresh and their holidays easy. Palolem (p849)

Mystical Jaisalmer

13 Rising like a giant sandcastle from the vast desert of Rajasthan, the 'Land of Kings', Jaisalmer's 12th-century citadel (p182) is romantically picturesque. This mystical sandstone fort, with its crenellated ramparts and undulating towers, is a truly fantastical structure, elegantly blending in with the toffee-gold hues of its desert environs. Inside, a royal palace, atmospheric old havelis (traditional residences), delicately chiselled Jain temples and skinny lanes all conspire to create one of the country's best places to get lost.

Dilly-dallying in Delhi

14 India's capital (p56) has had several incarnations over the last few thousand years, which may explain why there's so much going on here. Ancient lures include captivating ruins on almost every corner, such as the crumbling splendour of Old Delhi – with the Jama Masjid, Red Fort and other architectural gems. Add to this the city's diverse dining choices, superb museums and marvellous shopping options, and it's easy to see why dilly-dallying in Delhi is so easy to do. Jama Masjid (p66)

Sexy Khajuraho

15 Some say the sensuous carvings on Khajuraho's temples (p640) depict the Kamasutra, or Tantric practices for initiates; others, that they're educational models for children or allegories for the faithful. But pretty much everyone agrees that they're delightfully mischievous. Care to see a nine-person orgy? Couples imaginatively intertwined? Hot nymphs? Khajuraho is the place! Once the initial titillation wanes, you'll notice that the carving and architecture of these historic temples are breathtakingly exquisite and multifariously mind stirring.

Riding the Rails

16 India's quintessential journey is the long train ride (p34). Domestic flights are increasingly popular, but as the estimated 25 million daily train passengers can attest, you can't adequately soak up India's dramatically diverse landscape – from its parched sun-baked plains to its lush lime-green rice paddies – on a plane. Train travel also offers a splendid chance to leisurely chit-chat with Indian families and other fellow travellers, swapping stories the old-fashioned way – over a hot cup of chai, to the click-clacking soundtrack of the rattling rails. Mountain railway line to Ooty (Udhagamandalam; p1076)

Temple of Gold

17 The Sikhs' holiest of shrines, the Golden Temple (p213) in Amritsar, is divine in so many ways. Seeming to float atop a glistening pool named for the 'nectar of immortality', the temple is a stunning structure, made even more so by its intense goldness (the lotus-shaped dome is gilded in the real thing). Even when crowded with pilgrims it has a graceful tranquility, with the sounds of kirtan (Sikh devotional singing) and birds chirping outside, and the sacred waters gently lapping against the godly abode.

Currency

Indian rupees (₹)

Languages

Hindi, English

Visas

Some nationalities can obtain a 30-day visa on arrival. For longer trips, most people obtain a six-month tourist visa, valid from the date of issue, not the date you arrive in India.

Money

ATMs in most large towns; carry cash or travellers cheques as back up. MasterCard and Visa are the most widely accepted credit cards.

Mobile Phones

Roaming connections are excellent in urban areas, poor in the countryside and the Himalaya. Local prepaid SIMs are widely available; they involve some straight-forward paperwork and a wait of up to 24 hours for activation.

When to Go

High Season

(Dec–Mar)

- ➔ Pleasant weather with warm days and cool nights. Peak tourists. Peak prices.
- ➔ December and January bring chilly nights in the north.
- ➔ Temperatures climb steadily from February.

Shoulder Season

(Jul–Nov)

- ➔ Passes to Ladakh and the high Himalaya open from July to September.
- ➔ Monsoon rain-showers persist through to September.
- ➔ The southeast coast and southern Kerala see heavy rain from October to early December.

Low Season

(Apr–Jun)

- ➔ April is hot; May and June are scorching. Competitive hotel prices.
- ➔ From June, the monsoon sweeps from south to north, bringing draining humidity.
- ➔ Beat the heat (but not the crowds) in the cool hills.

Opening Hours

Opening hours are year-round for banks, offices and restaurants; many sights keep summer and winter opening hours.

Banks (nationalised) 10am–2pm/4pm Mon–Fri, to noon or 1pm Sat

Restaurants lunch noon–3pm, dinner 7pm–10pm or 11pm

Bars & Clubs noon–1am or later

Shops 10am–7pm or 8pm, some closed Sunday

Markets 10am–7pm in big cities, usually with one closed day; rural markets may be once weekly, from early morning to lunch

Arriving in India

Indira Gandhi International

Airport (Delhi; p97) Prepaid taxis cost from ₹450 to the centre; express buses every 20 minutes (₹75); airport express metro trains (₹60/100 Sunday/Monday to Saturday) link up with the metro system. If you're transferring from terminal 1 to 3 allow at least three hours; the shuttle bus can take an hour.

Chhatrapati Shivaji International Airport

(Mumbai; p771) Prepaid taxis to Colaba, Fort and Marine Dr cost ₹700/800 (non-AC/AC); ₹450 to ₹550 to Juhu or Bandra.

Chennai International Airport

(pChennai) Suburban trains to central Chennai run every 10 to 20 minutes from 4am to midnight from Tirusulam station at the airport. Prepaid taxis cost ₹320 to ₹580.

Kempegowda International Airport

(Bengaluru) (p868) Metered AC taxis to the centre cost ₹750 to ₹1000. Vayu Vajra's airport shuttle bus service runs to Kempegowda (Majestic) bus stand or MG Rd (₹210, hourly).

Getting Around

Transport in India is frequent and inexpensive, though not always fast. Consider domestic flights or sleeper trains as an alternative to long, uncomfortable bus rides.

Air Flights to major centres and state capitals; cheap flights with budget airlines.

Train Frequent services to most destinations; inexpensive tickets available even on sleeper trains.

Bus Buses go everywhere; some destinations are served 24 hours but longer routes may

Forts & Palaces

India's architecture tells a tale of conquest, domination and inordinate riches.

Rajasthan Jaisalmer, Jodhpur and Amber are magnificent; Udaipur palace is surreally romantic. (p104)

Maharashtra The land of Shivaji has defensive masterpieces like Daulatabad (p784), and Janjira (p794), an island fortress.

Hyderabad The rugged Golconda Fort complements the many ethereal palaces of the City of Pearls. (p915)

Delhi This historically strategic city has several millennia worth of imperial forts. (p56)

Ladakh – Leh (p226) & Stok (p241) Palaces resemble mini versions of Tibet's Potala Palace.

Mysore Palace This majestic palace is the former residence of Mysore's maharajas. (p871)

Grand Temples & Monasteries

No one does temples like India – from psychedelic Technicolor Hindu towers to silently grand Buddhist cave temples and Amritsar's gold-plated fairy-tale Sikh shrine.

Tamil Nadu A temple wonderland, with towering, fantastical structures that climb to the sky in busy rainbows of sculpted deities. (p1000)

Golden Temple The queen of Sikh temples rises like a shining gem over a pool in Amritsar. (p213)

Rajasthan Jain temples at Jaisalmer, Ranakpur and Mt Abu are the stone-architecture equivalent of princesses draped in piles of jewellery. (p104)

Khajuraho Exquisite carvings of deities, spirits, musicians, regular people, mythological beasts – and lots of sex. (p638)

Tawang Gompa The world's second-largest Buddhist monastery, in Arunachal Pradesh, is set against snowy peaks. (p583)

Ajanta (p788) & Ellora (p785) Ancient, vast sculpted caves. Because monks like beautiful sculpture, too.

Delhi The almost-psychedelic structure of Akshardham (p78) versus the simplicity of the all-faith Bahai House of Worship (p77).

Ancient Ruins

You don't get to be a 5000-year-old civilisation without having lots of atmospheric ruins around. So many cultures and empires have left their marks here, making for easy time travel.

Hampi Rosy-hued temples and palaces of the capital of Vijayanagar are scattered among otherworldly looking boulders and hilltops. (p896)

Mandu Many of the tombs, palaces, monuments and mosques on Mandu's green plateau are among India's finest Afghan architecture. (p669)

Nalanda This 1600-year-old university once enrolled 10,000 monks and students. Its monasteries, temples and stupas are still elegant in ruins. (p535)

Delhi Conquered and built up repeatedly over the past 3000 years, Delhi resembles a subcontinental Rome, with ruins all over the place. (p56)

Fatehpur Sikri A ghostly abandoned Mughal city, close to Agra and the Taj Mahal. (p369)

Ellora (p785) & Ajanta (p788) Magnificent rock-cut Buddhist temple caves in Maharashtra.

City Sophistication

City people here had attained high planes of sophistication when culture was just a glimmer in the West's eye. India's cities have great arts scenes, excellent restaurants and heaps of style.

Bottom: Vittala Temple (p897), Hampi

Mumbai (Bombay) Fashion, film stars, incredible restaurants, glamorous lounges and (along with Delhi) the country's best art galleries. (p734)

Delhi Urban sophisticate Delhi has historic attractions to go with its exceedingly good shopping, museums, street food and fine dining. (p56)

Kolkata (Calcutta) Long known for its poetic and political tendencies, Kolkata also has fabulous colonial-era architecture and a lively arts scene. (p454)

Bengaluru (Bangalore) This IT hub has a boozy nightlife with microbreweries, gastropubs and rock bars full of locals looking to party. (p856)

Chennai (Madras) Increasingly sophisticated, with towering temples, elegant bars, swish hotels, fabulous shopping and a booming fine-dining scene. (p1003)

Bazaars

Indian megamalls may be popping up like monsoon frogs, but the age-old bazaar – with its crowds and spices, garbage and flowers, altars and underwear – is still where it's at.

Old Delhi The Mughal-era bazaars sell pretty much everything, while Chandni Chowk has some of India's best street food. (p94)

Goa Tourist flea markets are huge on the north coast, while Panaji (Panjim) and Margao bazaars make for excellent wandering. (p834)

Mumbai The megalopolis's old, characterful markets are handily themed: Mangaldas (fabric), Zaveri (jewellery), Crawford

(produce) and Chor (random antique bits). (p769)

Hyderabad The colourful, swarming streets around the Charminar sell bangles, birds, vegetables, wedding saris, antiques and much more. (p925)

Mysuru (Mysore) Devaraja Market is about 125 years old and filled with about 125 million flowers, fruits and vegetables. (p872)

Beaches

India's coastlines are diverse and gorgeous, with lots of personality. Several Goan and Kerala beaches are downright paradisiacal, while elsewhere, the shoreline is more tinselled, with strolling and snack carts.

Varkala & Thottada In Kerala, Varkala (p950) is backed by dramatic cliffs and with a busy backpacker scene, while more deserted Thottada (p996), shaded by nodding palms, is a vision.

Goa Even when overrun with travellers, the beaches are still lovely. Mandrem and Palolem are two of the prettiest. (p810)

Havelock Island In the Andaman Islands, one of the world's most gorgeous beaches has clear, aquamarine water lapping against white powder. (p1093)

East Coast Gopalpur-on-Sea (p618), Puri (p610) and Visakhapatnam (p932) are more fun than precious: think esplanades, balloon-wallahs and extended families eating candy floss.

Gokarna Originally for Goa overflow, Gokarna's beaches are laid-back, beautiful and part of a sacred ancient village. (p892)

Hill Stations

India is blessed with a hot, tropical climate, and lots of hills where you can escape from it. Royalty and colonials of old laid the foundations for today's hill-station resort culture.

Tamil Nadu Kodaikanal (p1066) and Ooty (p1076) in the Western Ghats have lush, misty pine forests, tea plantations, gorgeous vistas and colonial-era bungalows.

Munnar Kerala's lofty, untouristy hill station is all rolling tea and spice plantations, unusual birds and dreamy mist. (p970)

Matheran This weekend retreat for Mumbaikars is not only scenic and car-free; it's also reached by narrow-gauge toy train. (p798)

Shimla With fascinating relics of the Raj, this is a great appetite-whetter for the magnificent Himalayan mountain tracts beyond. (p281)

Darjeeling Quintessential hot-season escape, surrounded by emerald-green tea plantations, with a backdrop of Himalayan splendour. (p500)

Boat Rides

India has such a diverse collection of waterways that the cruising possibilities are endless. From canoes to steamships to houseboats, there are lots of ways to experience India's aquatic side.

Kerala Languorous drifting on the backwaters around Alappuzha (Alleppey; p958), canoe tours from Kollam (Quilon; p955) and bamboo-raft tours in Periyar Wildlife Sanctuary (p966).

Goa Dolphin- and croc-spotting tours on the Mandovi River; cruise to a secluded beach by outrigger fishing boat. (p825)

Andaman Islands See mangroves, rainforest and reefs with 50 types of coral at Mahatma Gandhi Marine National Park. (p1092)

Uttar Pradesh Navigate UP's chaotic holiness with dawn tours of Varanasi's ghats (p391) and sacred river cruises in Chitrakut (p390), Mathura (p409) and Allahabad (p385).

Assam Four- to 10-night steamboat cruises are offered along the mighty Brahmaputra River as it meanders through the Northeast. (p571)

Odisha Spot rare Irrawaddy dolphin as you tour Chilika Lake, Asia's largest brackish lagoon. (p615)

Traveller Enclaves

Sometimes you just want to find travel partners, exchange stories, discuss strange bowel events. There are places for that.

Hampi The stunning beauty of Hampi's landscape and architecture makes everyone want to stay for a while. (p896)

Palelem & Arambol Goa is one big traveller enclave, but Palelem (p849) and cheaper Arambol (p840) are its current epicentres.

Yoga Centres Rishikesh (p414), Mysuru (p870), Pune (p801) and Goa (p810) all have major international yoga centres – and concomitant hang outs.

Sudder Street, Kolkata The accommodation on Kolkata's tourist lane is grungy but great for meeting fellow Mother Teresa volunteers. (p471)

Dharamsala Because who doesn't want to be near the Dalai Lama? (p318)

Pushkar Travellers, pilgrims, camels: everyone converges on this Rajasthan town for the Camel Fair, but it's a hang-out all year round. (p135)

Delhi Love it or hate it, almost every India traveller passes through Paharganj in Delhi at some point. (p81)

Arts & Crafts

Practically every town, village and neighbourhood here has its own tradition of devotional painting, silk weaving, camel-hide decorating, mirrored embroidering, or other art you won't find anywhere else.

Odisha Indians like bling – always have – and silver's an old favourite. Odisha's tarakasi, a kind of filigree work, is stunning. (p598)

Gujarat & Rajasthan India's textile traditions are legion. Villages in Gujarat and Rajasthan specialise in embroidery with tiny mirrors: such as jewellery for your clothes. (p686)

Bihar Folk paintings known as Mithila (or Madhubani) colourfully depict village scenes. The style is ancient but looks surprisingly contemporary. (p526)

Tamil Nadu The Tamil tradition of sculpting bronze figures of Nataraja, the cosmic dancer, is about 1000 years old. (p1002)

Kashmir Renowned for its hand-woven carpets and jewel-bright papier mâché. (p222)

Mountains & Trekking

India has several beautiful mountain ranges that would be knock outs anywhere else. But here, there's only one range that matters: the Himalaya. The only question is how to approach it.

Ladakh Trek across 5000m passes between spiky crags and sleep in timeless villages whose barley fields create emerald-green oases in the arid moon-scape. (p223)

Lahaul & Spiti Green Lahaul and drier, more rugged Spiti are separated from the rest of Himachal Pradesh by panoramic mountain passes. (p340)

Arunachal Pradesh This off-the-beaten-track 'land of dawn-lit mountains' is all forest, hills and peaks on the Tibetan border. (p577)

Darjeeling Take the Singalila Ridge Trek for incredible views of the mighty Himalaya. (p512)

Sikkim See Khangchendzonga, the world's third-highest mountain, in the early morning from Pelling or on treks to Goecha La and Dzongri. (p556)

Wildlife Safaris

You'll spot India's tigers and leopards if you're lucky, but its elephants, antelope, bison, one-horned rhino and deer are much more extroverted.

Madhya Pradesh & Chhattisgarh

This is tiger country, and tiger-spotting safaris are offered in several national parks. (p626)

Assam Kaziranga National Park is the world's rhinoceros capital. Seeing them involves an hour's ride on a lumbering elephant. (p572)

Kerala Wayanad Wildlife Sanctuary is one of the few places where you have a good chance of spotting wild elephants. (p993)

Gujarat The only wild Asiatic lions, along with over 300 species of birds, live in the Sasan Gir Wildlife Sanctuary. (p715)

Karnataka Bandipur National Park is one of South India's best spots to see wild elephants, tigers and leopards. (p881)

Rajasthan Spot tigers and other wildlife amid the jungle and ruined temples of Ranthambhore. (p104)

Spiti The Kaza ecosphere in Kaza claims a 90% chance of snow leopard sightings if you spend a week or more in winter. (p347)

Maharashtra The Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve is home to around 120 tigers. (p793)

TOP EVENTS

Carnival. February or March

Holi. February or March

Ganesh Chaturthi. August or September

Navratri & Dussehra. September or October

Diwali. October or November

January

Postmonsoon cool lingers throughout the country, with downright cold in the mountains. Pleasant weather and several festivals make it a popular time to travel (book ahead!), while Delhi hosts big Republic Day celebrations.

Free India

Republic Day commemorates the founding of the Republic of India on 26

January 1950; the biggest celebrations are in Delhi, which holds a huge military parade along Rajpath, and the Beating of the Retreat ceremony three days later.

Kite Festival

Sankranti, the Hindu festival marking the sun's passage into Capricorn, is celebrated in many ways across India – from banana-giving to holy dips in the Ganges to cockfights. But it's the mass kite-flying in Gujarat, Andhra Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh and Maharashtra that steals the show.

Southern Harvest

The Tamil festival of Pongal, equivalent to Sankranti, marks the end of the harvest season. Families prepare pots of pongal (a mixture of rice, sugar, dhal and milk), symbolic of prosperity and abundance, then feed them to decorated and adorned cows.

Celebrating Saraswati

On Vasant Panchami, Hindus dress in yellow and place books, musical instruments and other educational objects in front of idols of Saraswati, the goddess of learning, to receive her blessing. The holiday may fall in February.

February

The weather is comfortable in most nonmountainous areas, with summer heat starting to percolate in the south (up to Maharashtra and West Bengal). It's still peak travel season; sunbathing and skiing are still on.

Tibetan New Year

Losar is celebrated by Tantric Buddhists all over India – particularly in Himachal Pradesh, Sikkim, Ladakh and Zaskar – for 15 days. Losar is usually in February or March, though dates can vary between regions.

Shivaratri

This day of Hindu fasting recalls the tandava (cosmic victory dance) of Lord Shiva. Temple processions are followed by the chanting

LUNAR CALENDAR

Many festivals follow the Indian lunar calendar (a complex system based on astrology) or the Islamic calendar (which falls about 11 days earlier each year), and therefore change annually relative to the Gregorian calendar. Contact local tourist offices for exact festival dates.

of mantras and anointing of linga (phallic images of Shiva). Shivaratri can also fall in March.

Carnival in Goa

The four-day party kicking off Lent is particularly big in Goa. Sabado Gordo (Fat Saturday) starts it off with elaborate parades, and the revelry continues with street parties, concerts and general merrymaking. May also fall in March.

March

The last month of the travel season, March is full-on hot in most of the country, with rains starting in the Northeast. Wildlife is easier to spot as animals come out to find water.

Holi

One of North India's most ecstatic festivals; Hindus celebrate the beginning of spring according to the lunar calendar, in February or March, by throwing coloured water and gula (powder) at anyone within range. Bonfires the night before symbolise the demise of demoness Holika. (Dates: 23 March 2016, 13 March 2017 and 2 March 2018.)

Wildlife-Watching

When the weather warms up, water sources dry out and animals venture into the open to find refreshment: your chance to spot elephants, deer and, if you're lucky, tigers and leopards. Visit www.sanctuaryasia.com for detailed info.

Rama's Birthday

During Ramanavami, which lasts anywhere from one to nine days, Hindus celebrate Rama's birth with processions, music, fasting and feasting, enactments of scenes from the Ramayana and, at some temples, ceremonial weddings of Rama and Sita idols.

April

The heat has officially arrived in most places, which means you can get deals and avoid tourist crowds. The Northeast, meanwhile, is wet, but it's peak time for visiting Sikkim and upland West Bengal.

Mahavir's Birthday

In April or March, Mahavir Jayanti commemorates the birth of Jainism's 24th and most important tirthankar (teacher and enlightened being). Temples are decorated and visited, Mahavir statues are given ritual baths, processions are held and offerings are given to the poor.

Kumbh Mela

There are several versions of the huge Hindu pilgrimage, Kumbh Mela, held every few years, but all involve mass devotion – mass as in tens of millions of people. The next ritual group bathings are in Ujjain (April/May 2016) and Prayag (2019).

May

In most of the country it's hot. Really hot. Festivals slow down as humidity builds up in anticipation of the rain. Hill stations are hopping, though, and in the mountains it's pre-monsoon trekking season.

Buddha's Birthday

Commemorating the Buddha's birth, nirvana (enlightenment) and parinirvana (total liberation from the cycle of existence, or passing away), Buddha Jayanti is quiet but moving: devotees dress simply, eat vegetarian food, listen to dharma talks and visit monasteries or temples. Sometimes falls in April. (Dates: 14 May 2016, 3 May 2017 and 22 May 2018.)

Northern Trekking

May and June, the months preceding the rains in the northern mountains, are good times for trekking, with sunshine and temperate weather. Consider Himachal Pradesh, Kashmir (but not Ladakh) and Uttarakhand.

June

June's not a popular travel month in India, unless you're trekking up north. The rainy season, or pre-monsoon extreme heat, has started just about everywhere else.

Ramadan (Ramazan)

Thirty days of dawn-to-dusk fasting mark the ninth month of the Islamic calendar. Muslims traditionally turn their attention to God, with a focus on prayer and purification. Ramadan begins around 7 June 2016, 27 May 2017 and 16 May 2018.

July

It's really raining almost everywhere, with many remote roads being washed out. Consider visiting Ladakh, where the weather's surprisingly fine, or do a rainy-season meditation retreat, an ancient Indian tradition.

Odisha's Festival of Chariots

During Rath Yatra (Car Festival), effigies of Lord Jagannath (Vishnu incarnated as lord of the world) and his siblings are carried through towns on massive chariots, most famously in Puri, Odisha (Orissa; p600). Millions come to see them. (Dates: 6 July 2016, 25 June 2017 and 14 July 2018.)

Brothers & Sisters

On Raksha Bandhan (Narial Purnima), girls fix amulets known as rakhis to the wrists of brothers and close male friends to protect them in the coming year. Brothers reciprocate with gifts and promises to take care of their sisters.

Eid al-Fitr

Muslims celebrate the end of Ramadan with three days of festivities. Prayers, shopping, gift-giving and, for women and girls, mehndi (henna designs) may all be part of the celebrations.

August

It's still high monsoon season, but it's prime time in Ladakh. Some travellers love tropical areas, like Kerala or Goa, this time of year: the jungles are lush, green and glistening in the rain.

Snake Festival

The Hindu festival Naag Panchami is dedicated to Ananta, the serpent upon whose coils Vishnu rested between universes. Women return to their family homes and fast, while serpents are venerated as totems against flooding and other evils. Falls in July or August (7 August 2016, 27 July 2017 and 15 August 2018).

Independence Day

This public holiday on 15 August marks the anniversary of India's independence from Britain in 1947. Celebrations include flag-hoisting ceremonies (the biggest one is in Delhi), parades and patriotic cultural programs.

Celebrating the Buddha's Teaching

Drupka Teshi commemorates Siddhartha Gautama's first teaching, in which he explained the Four Noble Truths to disciples in Sarnath. Celebrations are big in Sikkim. The festival may also fall in July.

Krishna's Birthday

Janmastami celebrations can last a week in Krishna's birthplace, Mathura; elsewhere the festivities range from fasting to puja (prayers) and offering sweets, to drawing elaborate rangoli (rice-paste designs) outside the home. Janmastami is held August/September. (Dates: 25 August 2016, 15 August 2017 and 2 September 2018.) (p725)

Parsi New Year

Parsis celebrate Pateti, the Zoroastrian new year, especially in Mumbai (Bombay). Houses are cleaned and decorated with flowers and rangoli, the family dresses up and eats special fish dishes and sweets, and offerings are made at the Fire Temple.

Onam

In August or September, Onam is Kerala's biggest cultural celebration, when the entire state celebrates the golden age of mythical King Mahabali for 10 days.

Nehru Trophy Boat Race

In Alappuzha (Alleppey); the most popular of Kerala's boat races. (p958)

September

The rain begins to ease up (with temperatures still relatively high), with places such as Rajasthan all but finished with the monsoon. The second trekking season begins midmonth in the Himalaya and runs through October.

Ganesh Chaturthi

In August or September Hindus celebrate Ganesh Chaturthi, the birth of the elephant-headed god, with verve, particularly in Mumbai, Hyderabad and Chennai (Madras). Clay idols of Ganesha are paraded through the streets before being ceremonially immersed in rivers, tanks (reservoirs) or the sea. (Dates: 5–15 September 2016, 25 August–5 September 2017 and 13–23 September 2018.)

★ Eid al-Adha

Muslims commemorate Ibrahim's readiness to sacrifice his son to God by slaughtering a goat or sheep and sharing it with family, the community and the poor. (Dates: around 11 September 2016, 1 September 2017 and 20 August 2018.)

October

Some showers aside, this is when India starts to get its travel mojo on. October, aka shoulder season, brings festivals, mostly good weather with reasonably comfy temperatures, and lots of post-rain greenery and lushness.

★ Muharram

Shiite Muslims commemorate the martyrdom of the Prophet Mohammed's grandson Imam Hussain, an event known as Ashura, with fasting, beautiful processions and a month of grieving and remembrance. Sunni Muslims also mark this, but with fasting and celebrations marking when Moses (Moosa) fasted because Allah saved the Israelites from their enemy in Egypt. Approximate start dates: 1 October 2016, 20 September 2017 and 10 September 2018.

Top: Street decorations for Southern Harvest (Pongal) festival (p24), Karnataka

Bottom: Holi festival (p25)

Gandhi's Birthday

The national holiday of Gandhi Jayanti is a solemn celebration of Mohandas Gandhi's birth, on 2 October, with prayer meetings at his cremation site in Delhi, Raj Ghat. (p67)

Water, Water Everywhere

Water bodies are full after the rains, making for spectacularly white-water falls. This is also the season for rafting in some areas; visit www.indiarafting.com.

Navratri

The Hindu 'Festival of Nine Nights' leading up to Dussehra celebrates the goddess Durga in all her incarnations. Festivities are particularly vibrant in West Bengal, Maharashtra and Gujarat; in Kolkata, Durga images are immersed in rivers and tanks. (p694)

Dussehra

Colourful Dussehra celebrates the victory of the Hindu god Rama over the demon-king Ravana and the triumph of good over evil. Dussehra is big in Kullu (p304), where over 200 village deities are carried into the town on palanquins and festivities go on for a week. (Dates: 11 October 2016 and 30 September 2017.) (p304)

Diwali

In the lunar month of Kartika, in October or November, Hindus celebrate Diwali (Festival of Lights) for five days, with gifts, fireworks, and burning butter and oil lamps (or hanging lanterns) to lead Lord Rama home from exile. One of India's prettiest and noisiest festivals. (Dates: 30 October 2016, 18 October 2017 and 7 November 2018.)

November

The climate is blissful in most places, but the southern monsoon hits Tamil Nadu and Kerala.

International Film Festival of India

Held in Panaji (Panjim) in Goa, India's largest film festival draws Bollywood's finest for premieres, parties and screenings. (p815)

Guru Nanak's Birthday

Nanak Jayanti, birthday of Guru Nanak, founder of Sikhism, is celebrated with prayer, kirtan (devotional singing) and processions for three days, especially in Punjab and Haryana. The festival may also be held on 14 April, possibly Nanak's actual 1469 birth date.

Pushkar Camel Fair

Held during Kartika (the eighth Lunar month, usually October or November), this fair attracts around 200,000 people, bringing some 50,000 camels, horses and cattle. It's a swirl of colour, magic and mayhem, thronged with musicians, mystics, tourists, camera crews, traders, devotees and animals. (p138)

December

December is peak tourist season for a reason: the weather's glorious (except for the chilly mountains), the humidity's low, the mood is festive and the beach is sublime.

Weddings

Marriage season peaks in December, and you may see a baraat (bridegroom's procession), replete with white horse and fireworks, on your travels. Across the country, loud music and spectacular parties are the way they roll, with brides in mehndi and pure gold.

Birding

Many of India's 1000-plus bird species have their winter migration from November to January or February, and excellent birdwatching spots are peppered across the country; www.birding.in is an excellent resource.

Camel Treks in Rajasthan

The cool winter (November to February) is the time to mount a camel and ride through Rajasthan's sands. See the Thar Desert from a new perspective: observe gazelles, cook dinner over an open fire and camp out in the dunes. (p188)

Christmas

Christian Goa comes alive at Christmas time, midnight masses are held on 24 December, and Christmas Day sees feasting and fireworks.

The Prophet Mohammed's Birthday

The Islamic festival of Eid-Milad-un-Nabi celebrates the birth of the Prophet Mohammed with prayers and processions, especially in Jammu and Kashmir. It falls around 24 December 2015, 12 December 2016 and 1 December 2017.

Itineraries

Golden Triangle & Rajasthan

A tourist trail with genuine highlights to make up for the crowds, the Golden Triangle of Delhi, Agra and Jaipur combines some of India's top sights.

Kick off in Delhi, touring the must-sees – the Mughal-era Red Fort and Jama Masjid, and the magnificent Qutb Minar. Next, catch a train to Agra and gaze on the glory of the Taj Mahal, the world's most extravagant monument to love. Explore Agra Fort and devote a day to nearby Fatehpur Sikri, a mesmerising Mughal city. Continue on to Jaipur, and devote several days to the dusty bazaars and myriad monuments of the Pink City. Essential stops include the City Palace and Amber Fort.

Loop back to Delhi, or travel on to Pushkar for a few days of roaming around lake-side temples, then devote several days to graceful Udaipur and a lavish dinner at the hotel on the lake. Next visit magnificent hilltop Kumbhalgarh and the temple at Ranakpur, en route to Jodhpur. Soak up the colours of the Blue City from the battlements of magnificent Mehrangarh Fort. Spend the last few days in fortified Jaisalmer and indulge your Arabian Nights fantasies on a camel safari through the dunes. Finally, loop back to Delhi, with one last detour to the Qutb Minar, for a final dose of imperial splendour.

Grand Tour

With six months on your tourist visa, you can fit in a lot of India.

Kick off in Delhi and ride the rails north to Amritsar, to admire the gleaming Golden Temple. Connect through Chandigarh to Shimla, the Queen of the Hills. From this classic hill station you can roam northwest to Buddhist Dharamsala, home of the Dalai Lama, or Manali, starting point for the beautiful but gruelling overland journey to rugged Ladakh (July to September), gateway to the high Himalaya. When you've had your fill of mountain air, head south for some yoga training in Rishikesh, and descend to Agra, for a peek at the Taj Mahal. Amble south to Khajuraho, with its risqué temples, and scan the jungle for tigers in Bandhavgarh National Park. Continue to the holy city of Varanasi for a boat trip along the sacred Ganges.

Take time for detours as you wander east to Kolkata (Calcutta), bustling capital of West Bengal. Swing north as far as Darjeeling or Sikkim for sweeping Himalayan views, then drift down the coast to the temple towns of Konark and Puri in Odisha (Orissa). Consider a flight to transport you south to Chennai (Madras) for a dose of southern spice.

As you loop around the bottom of India, essential stops include Mamallapuram (Mahabalipuram), for temple carvings; Puducherry (Pondicherry), for colonial quaintness; and Madurai, for deity-encrusted temple towers. Allow a few days to kick back on Kerala's beaches, then swing inland to nostalgic Mysore to see how maharajas lived.

Continuing north, head to Hampi, where temples and ruined cities are strewn among the boulders, then get a second dose of beach life on the coast of Goa. Onward to Mumbai (Bombay), fast-paced capital of the west coast; take in a Bollywood movie, then admire the glory of the cave paintings and carvings at Ajanta and Ellora.

To finish, head to Rajasthan and complete the coloured-city triple – Jaipur (pink), Jodhpur (blue) and Udaipur (white). There might just be time to detour to the temples and nature reserves of Gujarat, before closing the circle with a last train ride to Delhi.

Sikkim & the Northeast States

Surprisingly few people explore mountainous Sikkim and the Northeast States. Kept from prying eyes by insurgencies and permit restrictions, India's last frontier is slowly opening up to the outside world. From Kolkata, you can swing north to Darjeeling, get a full dose of Himalayan vistas in Sikkim then enter the fascinating world of India's hill tribes. Advance planning is essential – permits are mandatory and there are security risks to consider.

Starting in Kolkata, make your first stop Darjeeling – here you can sample India's finest teas and pick up a permit for Sikkim, one of India's most serene quarters. Gangtok, the Sikkimese capital, is the starting point for jeep rides to a string of historic, dramatic Buddhist temples. Veer to Namchi to see the giant statues of Shiva and Padmasambhava, and to Pelling for inspiring views of the white-peaked Khangchendzonga and the beautiful Pemayangtse Gompa, ringed by gardens and monks' cottages. Take the week-long trek from Yuksom to Gocha La, a 4940m pass with incredible views, then exit Sikkim via Tashiding, with more wonderful views and another stunning gompa, before travelling to Siliguri for the journey east.

In Guwahati, the Assamese capital, arrange tours and permits for the Northeast States: the remote areas of Arunachal Pradesh, Nagaland, Mizoram and Manipur. If you can't get a permit, try this loop: from Guwahati, head to Kaziranga National Park to spot rare rhinos. Detour to sleepy Shillong, and the waterfalls and incredible living root bridges of Cherrapunjee. From Agartala, capital of Tripura, return to Kolkata by air or overland through Bangladesh.

With the right permits, head from Guwahati to Arunachal Pradesh to pay your respects at the Buddhist monastery at Tawang, or the tribal villages near Ziro, where the elders have dramatic facial tattoos and piercings. A Nagaland permit opens up tribal villages around Mon, countryside dotted by traditional longhouses and remote settlements, and the capital Kohima, with its WWII relics. Manipur permits are rarely granted, but there's a fair chance of encountering Mizo culture in Mizoram, before you fly back to Kolkata.

3 WEEKS Central Shrines

Visit some of India's most spiritual places on this temple-hopping trip around the central plains.

Start in the chaotic but cultured city of Kolkata, then swap the big-city bustle for the peace of Bodhgaya, where the Buddha attained enlightenment. Roll across the plains to Sarnath, where the Buddha first taught the dharma.

Hinduism replaces Buddhism as you approach the sacred city of Varanasi. Meditate on the banks of the River Ganges, then ramble to Khajuraho, where Hindu temples drip with erotic carvings. Head southwest to Sanchi, where Emperor Ashoka first embraced Buddhism, then zip through Bhopal to Jalgaon, jumping-off point for the carving-filled caves of Ajanta.

Next, detour into Rajasthan; stop off in whimsical Udaipur, with its lakes and palaces, then explore the extraordinary Jain temples of Ranakpur or Mt Abu. Continue to pilgrim-crammed Pushkar, then make a trip to nearby Ajmer, one of India's most holy Islamic sites. Take a final stop in atmospheric Jaipur, then end the trip in Delhi, with its magnificent Islamic ruins.

4 WEEKS Northern Mountains

This mountainous loop takes in some of India's most spectacular views.

Start by riding the rails from Delhi to Kalka, to board the narrow-gauge train to colonial-era Shimla. Spend a day or two rambling around the hills, then join the traveller pilgrimage north to the Kullu Valley for adventurous mountain activities.

From the hill resort of Manali, embark on the epic, two-day journey to Leh in Ladakh (July to September), to hike to dramatic Buddhist monasteries and trekking peaks. For a short loop, continue from Leh to Kargil and on to Kashmir (checking first that it's safe to travel). Stay on a Srinagar houseboat, then loop through Jammu to elegant Dalhousie, and soak up Buddhist culture in nearby Dharamsala, before returning to Delhi.

With more time to spare, head southeast from Leh into the dramatic Spiti Valley, where ancient monasteries blend into the arid landscape. Ride the rattletrap bus to rugged Kinnaur, with its plunging landscapes, and make stops in Dehra Dun and Rishikesh to soak up some Hindu culture, before finishing in Delhi.

2 WEEKS Southern Coastal

This trip gambols to some of India's finest beaches and charismatic coastal towns.

Start in Mumbai and sample bhel-puri (crisp noodle salad) on the sand at Girgaum Chowpatty beach. Cruise to the stunning rock-cut temples on Elephanta Island, then travel south by train to beach-blessed Goa.

Enjoy the best of the sand at Arambol, Vagator and Palolem, then continue along the coast to the sacred town of Gokarna. Now change the pace entirely; head inland to Hampi, with its serene Vijayanagar ruins, and witness the zenith of medieval stone-carving in the Hoysala temples of Belur and Halebid. Return by train to Mangalore to sample spectacular seafood, then chug south to melting-pot Kochi (Cochin), which draws influences from as far afield as China and the Middle East.

Cruise Kerala's backwaters from Alappuzha (Alleppey), before dipping your toes in the waters around beach resorts Varkala or Kovalam. Make your last stop Thiruvananthapuram (Trivandrum), home to often-overlooked museums, before closing the loop with a flight back to Mumbai.

3 WEEKS The Southern Tip

Chennai is the capital of the south, and the easiest starting point for exploring India's steamy southern tip. Time your trip to avoid the monsoon – the sunniest skies are from October to February.

Kick off sampling incendiary thalis in Chennai, then surround yourself with intricate temple carvings in Mamallapuram, one-time home of the Pallava kings.

Next, head for the decadent grace of French-flavoured Puducherry, then leave the coast behind and head inland to the temple-towns of Tamil Nadu: essential stops include boulder-covered Trichy (Tiruchirappalli), and Madurai, with its soaring, deity-covered gopurams (temple towers). From here, it's easy to zip down to Kanyakumari, the southernmost point of India.

Kick back on the coast at Kovalam or Varkala, then head to Periyar Wildlife Sanctuary, home to tigers and elephants, or take a trip up to Munnar, Kerala's centre of tea plantations, to enjoy rambles in the hills. En route back to Chennai visit Mysore, with its maharaja's palace and giant stone Nandi (bull statue). Bingo – a neat circuit, stringing together the jewels of the south.

Booking Trains

In India, riding the rails is a reason to travel all by itself. The Indian rail network goes almost everywhere, almost all the time, and trains have seats to suit every size of wallet. However, booking can be quite an undertaking – book online to take the hassle out of train travel.

Train Classes

Air-Conditioned 1st Class (1AC)

The most expensive class, with two- or four-berth compartments with locking doors and meals included.

Air-Conditioned 2-Tier (2AC)

Two-tier berths arranged in groups of four and two in an open-plan carriage. Bunks convert to seats by day and there are curtains, offering some privacy.

Air-Conditioned 3-Tier (3AC)

Three-tier berths arranged in groups of six in an open-plan carriage with no curtains; popular with Indian families.

AC Executive Chair

Comfortable, reclining chairs and plenty of space; usually on Shatabdi express trains.

AC Chair

Similar to the Executive Chair carriage but with less-fancy seating.

Sleeper Class

Open-plan carriages with three-tier bunks and no AC; the open windows afford great views.

Unreserved/reserved 2nd Class (II/SS or 2S)

Wooden or plastic seats and a lot of people – but cheap!

Booking Online

Bookings open 60 days before departure for long-distance trains, sometimes earlier for short-haul trips. Seats fill up quickly – reserve at least a week ahead where possible, though shorter journeys are usually easier to obtain.

Express and mail trains form the mainstay of Indian rail travel. Not all classes are available on every train service, but most long-distance services have general (2nd-class) compartments with unreserved seating and more comfortable reserved compartments, usually with the option of sleeper berths for overnight journeys. Sleeper trains offer the chance to travel huge distances for not much more cost than the price of a midrange hotel room.

Shatabdi express trains are same-day services with seating only; Rajdhani express trains are long-distance overnight services between Delhi and state capitals with a choice of 1AC, 2AC, 3AC and 2nd class. More expensive sleeper categories provide bedding. In all classes, a padlock and a length of chain are useful for securing your luggage to the baggage racks provided.

These websites are useful for online international bookings.

Cleartrip (www.cleartrip.com) A reliable private agency and the easiest way to book; accepts international MasterCard and Visa credit cards. Can only book direct journeys.

RAILWAY RAZZLE DAZZLE

You can live like a maharaja on one of India's luxury train tours, with accommodation on board, tours, admission fees and meals included in the ticket price. A new Mumbai–Goa train is also on the cards; check online to see if this is up and running.

Palace on Wheels (www.palaceonwheels.net) Eight- to 10-day luxury tours of Rajasthan, departing from Delhi. Trains run on fixed dates from September to April; the fare per person per night starts at US$615/451/411 (in a single/double/triple cabin). Try to book 10 months in advance.

Royal Rajasthan on Wheels (www.royalrajasthanonwheels.co.in) Runs lavish one-week trips from October to March, starting and finishing in Delhi. The fare per person per night starts from US$875/625 for single/twin occupancy in deluxe suites.

Deccan Odyssey (www.coxandkings.co.uk) Nine nights covering the main tourist spots of Maharashtra and Goa. Fares per person start at a decidedly upmarket UK£6090/3495 for single/double occupancy (includes flights). There are also several other shorter luxurious trips on offer.

Golden Chariot (www.coxandkings.co.uk) Tours the south in sumptuous style from October to March, starting in Bengaluru (Bangalore); 10-night trips visit Mysuru (Mysore), Hampi and Goa. Rates per person start at UK£4445 (includes flights).

Mahaparinirvan Express (Buddhist Circuit Special; www.railtourismindia.com) Running September to March to Buddhist sites over eight days, starting in Delhi, with overnight stays in hotels. Rates start from US$160/120/115 per person per night in 1st class/2AC/3AC. Additional charges apply for single occupancy of hotel rooms. The trip includes Nepal (the visa fee is not included in the price).

If booking from outside India before you have a local mobile number, a work-around is to enter a random number, and use email only to communicate.

IRCTC (www.irctc.co.in) Government site offering bookings for regular trains and luxury tourist trains; only American Express cards issued in UK and Australia for international ticketing, but accepts these erratically.

Make My Trip (www.makemytrip.com) Reputable private agency; accepts international cards. Again, you'll need an Indian mobile number. You'll then need to create an IRCTC User ID: choose a User ID (username), put in your name, birth date and address. For the 'Pincode' (postcode) '123456' will work. For the State choose 'Other'.

Yatra (www.yatra.com) Books flights and trains; accepts international cards.

Reservations

You must make a reservation for all chair-car, sleeper, 1AC, 2AC and 3AC carriages. No reservations are required for general (2nd-class) compartments. Book well ahead for overnight journeys or travel during holidays and festivals. Waiting until the day of travel to book is not recommended.

Train Passes

IndRail passes permit unlimited rail travel for a fixed period, ranging from one day to 90 days, but offers limited savings and you must still make reservations. Prices start at US$19/43/95 (sleeper/2AC, 3AC & chair car/1AC) for 24 hours. The easiest way to book these is through the IndRail pass agency in your home country – click on the Passenger Info/Tourist Information link on www.indianrailways.gov.in/railwayboard for details.

Plan Your Trip

Trekking

India has world-class trekking opportunities, particularly in the Himalaya, where staggering snow-clad peaks, traditional tribal villages, sacred Hindu sites, ancient Buddhist monasteries and blazing fields of wildflowers are just some of the features that create extraordinary mountain experiences. Hit the trails for easy half-day jaunts or strenuous multiweek expeditions.

Best Treks

The Himalaya

Jammu & Kashmir The high, dry and rugged ranges rising in Ladakh boast unforgettable treks, including routes through the popular Markha Valley and wildly beautiful Zaskar region (p246).

Himachal Pradesh Alpine bliss is easily accessible, including on treks from McLeod Ganj to Bharmour (p328), between the Parvati and Pin Valleys (p304), and on the Buddhist-infused Homestay Trail in the Spiti region (p347).

Uttarakhand Immerse yourself in pristine scenery on the Kauri Pass, Milam Glacier and Har-ki-Dun treks (p440) or join pilgrims en route to sacred religious sites such as Kedarnath Temple (p435) or Hem Kund (p439).

Sikkim Gape at Khangchendzonga (8598m), the world's third-highest mountain, on the Goecha La trek (p561).

South India

Karnataka Explore the serene hills and forests of Kodagu (p883).

Kerala Check out tigers, elephants and boar in Periyar Wildlife Sanctuary (p966).

Tamil Nadu The hill station Ooty (Udhagamandalam; p1076) is popular for forest hikes, but may be closed to trekking due to tiger activity.

Trail Tips

With a commercial trekking industry that's far less developed than in neighbouring Nepal, many places still feel wild and relatively unspoilt. Still, on most routes, you can hire porters or pack animals to haul your gear. If you go with a trekking company, some gear may be supplied. Specify everything that's included beforehand, and get it in writing if possible.

Wherever you go, make sure you have any permits you may need.

Monitor your health – Acute Mountain Sickness (p1208) is a serious risk on trails over 3000m.

And beware of herding dogs!

Route Planning

Detailed maps of the Indian Himalaya are difficult to buy in-country. Some maps found online are good enough for planning, and even navigating if you're experienced at reading them. For Ladakh, pricey 1:300,000 scale maps can be bought in Leh; some maps from the 1:200,000 Leomann series are often available in Manali and McLeod Ganj.

On popular pilgrims' trails, it's virtually impossible to get lost, but less-travelled tracks can fork or vanish altogether, so hiring a local guide can be wise.

Lonely Planet's Trekking in the Indian Himalaya is a great resource for planning and executing treks.

For information on climbing Himalayan summits over 6000m, check the website of the Indian Mountaineering Foundation (www.indmount.org).

Packing

- ➔ Bring gear and clothing that are appropriate for the conditions you expect to encounter.
- ➔ On well-established trails, heavy hiking boots are overkill, but on remote mountain tracks they can be lifesavers.
- ➔ First-aid and water-purification supplies are often essential.
- ➔ Rain gear is a must, and warm layers are crucial for comfort at altitude.
- ➔ Remember sunscreen!

Trekking Ethics

- ➔ Follow low-impact trekking practices (you know the mantra – take only photographs, leave only footprints).
- ➔ Cook over stoves, since local people rely on limited fuel-wood sources.
- ➔ Respect local cultural sensibilities by dressing modestly; ask permission before snapping photos; remember that while locals' hospitality may be endless, their food supply might not be; and refrain from giving gifts to children.

When to Go

With India's diverse variety of terrain and altitudes, there's no single time throughout the country that's best for trekking; seasonal conditions vary greatly depending on what region you're in. Here's an overview of what you can expect, when:

May–June Before the monsoon hits, this is a good time for mountain trekking. Trails to holy Hindu sites can be packed with pilgrims.

MOST ADVENTUROUS TREKS

Only an intrepid few hike the tough terrain in the isolated, northeast mountain state of Arunachal Pradesh. One of the top spots to check out is Namdapha National Park (p581), which is mind-bogglingly rich in biodiversity.

Mid-July–mid-September This is monsoon season, so trekking in the wrong place can range from uncomfortable to deadly. Jungle trails can be forbiddingly muddy, while in many parts of the Himalaya cloudbursts cause massive landslides. Meanwhile, peaks are obscured by thick clouds, greatly diminishing the rewards trekkers seek for their efforts. The best places to trek during this time are Ladakh and Spiti, which generally stay pretty dry. The one place worth braving the rain is Uttarakhand's famous Valley of Flowers National Park (p439), which draws most of its visitors during the rainy season, when its dazzling botanical carpet spreads most vibrantly across the valley floor.

Mid-September–late October Once the monsoons clear out, searing blue skies usually bless the Himalaya. While nights at high altitude may dip below freezing, days are usually sunny and warm. Facilities and services (and some roads) in many mountain regions close for winter in October or November, so if you hope to trek then, check in advance to see what will be open.

December–March The most comfortable season to trek in South India. February is prime time to tackle the frozen Chadar Trek (p261) in the Zaskar region of Ladakh.

April Head for the hill stations (at middle altitudes), as it's ripping hot down low and usually still snow packed up high.

Yoga, Spas & Spiritual Pursuits

Birthplace of at least three religions, India offers a profound spiritual journey for those so inclined. Even sceptical travellers can enjoy the benefits of trips to spas and yoga centres.

What to Choose

Ashrams

India has hundreds of ashrams – places of communal living established around the philosophies of a guru (a spiritual guide or teacher).

Ayurveda

Ayurveda is the ancient science of Indian herbal medicine and holistic healing, based on natural plant extracts, massage and therapies to treat body and mind.

Meditation

Many centres in Buddhist areas offer training in vipassana (mindfulness meditation) and Buddhist philosophy; many require a vow of silence and abstinence from tobacco, alcohol and sex.

Spa Treatments

India's spas offer an enticing mix of international therapies and local techniques based on ancient ayurvedic traditions.

Yoga

Yoga's roots lie firmly in India and you'll find hundreds of schools to suit all levels.

Ayurveda

Ayurveda – Indian herbal medicine – aims to restore balance in the body. For more, see the boxed text on p954.

Goa

Ayurvedic Massage Centre

(☎9420896843; 1/1½hr massage from ₹1000/1500; ☀9am-8pm) Two centres in Mandrem.

Gujarat

International Center for Ayurvedic Studies (p724; Jamnagar) Ayurveda, yoga and naturopathy.

Himachal Pradesh

Amchi (Tibetan traditional medicine) is closely linked to ayurveda. The Men-Tsee-Khang (Tibetan Medical & Astrological Institute; p321) is the primary authority on Tibetan medicine and has its HQ and two centres in McLeod Ganj, plus 46 other clinics across India.

Karnataka

Ayurvedagram (p861; Bengaluru) In a garden setting.

Soukya (p861; Bengaluru) Ayurveda and yoga.

Indus Valley Ayurvedic Centre (p876) (Mysore) Therapies from ancient scriptures.

Swaasthya (p885; Coorg) & Swaasthya (p876; Mysuru) Retreats and therapies.

SwaSwara (p894; Gokarna) Therapies and artistic pursuits.

Kerala

Dr Franklin's Panchakarma Institute (p950; Chowara) South of Kovalam.

Eden Garden (p951; Varkala) Treatments and packages.

Santhigiri Ayurveda Centre (p955; Kollam) Seven-to-21-day packages and day treatments. Branches at Kovalam (p946) and Periyar (p967).

Ayur Dar (p978; Kochi) Treatments of one to three weeks.

Madhya Pradesh

Orchha Resort (Map p634; ☎07680-252222; www.orchharesort.com; ☀8.30am-9pm) Ayurveda in Orchha.

Mumbai (Bombay)

Yoga Cara (p752) Ayurveda and massage.

Tamil Nadu

Sita (p1036; Puducherry) Ayurveda and yoga.

Uttar Pradesh

Swasthya Vardhak (p397; Varanasi) Ayurveda.

Yoga

You can practise yoga almost everywhere, from beach resorts to mountain retreats. In 2014, at India's initiative, the UN adopted a resolution declaring 21 June International Yoga Day.

Andaman Islands

Flying Elephant (p1095; Havelock Island) Yoga and meditation set in tropical surroundings.

Goa

Himalaya Yoga Valley (p839; Mandrem) Popular training school.

Yoga House (p752) Hatha yoga in a lovely setting.

Yoga Cara (p752) More hatha yoga.

Tamil Nadu

International Centre for Yoga Education & Research (p1037; Puducherry) Has 10-day introductory courses as well as advanced training.

Krishnamacharya Yoga Mandiram (p1009; Chennai) Runs yoga courses, therapy and training.

Uttarkhand

Rishikesh has yoga centres and ashrams offering yoga for all levels (p415).

Meditation

Whether for an introduction or more advanced study, there are India-wide courses and retreats. McLeod Ganj is the main centre for the study of Tibetan Buddhism; public teachings are given by both the Dalai Lama (see p324) and the 17th Karmapa.

Bihar

Root Institute for Wisdom Culture (p531; Bodhgaya) Courses from two to 21 days.

International Meditation Centre (p531; Bodhgaya) Informal 10-day courses.

Himachal Pradesh

Library of Tibetan Works & Archives (p326; McLeod Ganj) Serious Buddhist philosophy courses.

Himachal Vipassana Centre (p332; Dharamkot, near McLeod Ganj) Strict 10-day retreats.

Tushita Meditation Centre (p332; Dharamkot) Basic and advanced courses on Buddhist philosophy and meditation.

Uttarakhand

Haveli Hari Ganga (p424; Haridwar) Overlooking the Ganges.

Ashrams

Many ashrams ('places of striving') are headed by charismatic gurus. Some tread a fine line between spiritual community and personality cult. Many gurus have amassed fortunes collected from devotees, and others have been accused of sexually exploiting their followers. Always check the reputation of any ashram you wish to join. Most ashrams offer philosophy, yoga or meditation courses, and visitors are usually required to adhere to strict rules. A donation is appropriate to cover your expenses.

Kerala

Volunteering

For all India's beauty, rich culture and history, poverty and hardship are unavoidable facts of life. Many travellers feel motivated to help, and charities and aid organisations across the country welcome committed volunteers. Here's a guide to help you start making a difference.

Aid Programs in India

India faces considerable challenges and there are numerous opportunities for volunteers. It may be possible to find a placement after you arrive, but charities and nongovernment organisations (NGOs) generally prefer volunteers who have applied in advance and been approved for the kind of work involved. Reputable organisations may insist on a criminal background check for working with children. Ethical Volunteering (www.ethicalvolunteering.org) provides useful guidelines for choosing an ethical sending agency.

As well as international organisations, local charities and NGOs often have opportunities, though it can be harder to assess the work that these organisations are doing. For listings of local agencies, check www.ngosindia.com or contact the Delhi-based Concern India Foundation (p79).

The following programs are just some of many that may have opportunities for volunteers; contact them in advance to arrange a placement. Note that Lonely Planet does not endorse any organisations that we do not work with directly, so it is essential that you do your own thorough research before agreeing to volunteer with any organisation.

How to Volunteer

Choosing an Organisation

Consider how your skills will benefit the people you are trying to help, and choose an organisation that can specifically benefit from your abilities.

Time Required

Think realistically about how much time you can devote to a project. You're more likely to be of help if you commit for at least a month, ideally more.

Money

Giving your time for free is only part of the story; most organisations expect volunteers to cover their accommodation, food and transport.

Working 9 to 5

Make sure you understand what you are signing up for; many organisations expect volunteers to work full time, five days a week.

Transparency

Ensure that the organisation you choose is reputable and transparent about how it spends its money. Where possible, get feedback from former volunteers.

Caregiving

If you have medical experience, there are numerous opportunities to provide health care and support for the most vulnerable in Indian society.

Delhi

➔ Missionaries of Charity (☎011-33237839; www.motherteresa.org; 1 Magazine Rd) This Kolkata-based organisation also offers volunteer opportunities in Delhi.

Kolkata (Calcutta)

➔ Missionaries of Charity (p464) Mother's Teresa's charity (Mother Theresa's Motherhouse) places volunteers in hospitals and homes for impoverished children and adults.

➔ Calcutta Rescue (p470) Placements for medical and health professionals in Kolkata and other parts of West Bengal.

Community

Many community volunteer projects work to provide health care and education to villages.

Bihar & Jharkhand

➔ Root Institute for Wisdom Culture (p531; Bodhgaya) Occasional placements to train local health workers.

Delhi

➔ Hope Project (p80) A broad-based community project, welcoming short- or long-term volunteers who can offer childcare, medical, English Language Teaching, IT or other skills.

Karnataka

➔ Kishkinda Trust (p903; Hampi) Volunteers needed to assist with sustainable community development.

Madhya Pradesh & Chhattisgarh

➔ Friends of Orchha (p636; Orchha) Offers volunteer placements to help improve the livelihoods of rural villagers.

Mumbai (Bombay)

➔ Slum Aid (<http://www.slumaid.org>) Working in Mumbai slums to improve lives; placements from two weeks to six months.

West Bengal

➔ Human Wave (☎033-26854904; www.humanwaveindia.org; Mankundu) Short-term placements on community development and health schemes around West Bengal.

➔ Makaibari Tea Estate (p500; Kurseong) Volunteers assist with primary school teaching, health work and organic farming.

AGENCIES OVERSEAS

There are so many international volunteering agencies, it can be bewildering trying to assess which ones are reputable. Agencies offering the chance to do whatever you want, wherever you want, are almost always tailoring projects to the volunteer rather than finding the right volunteer for the work that needs to be done. Look for projects that will derive real benefits from your skills. To find sending agencies in your area, read Lonely Planet's Volunteer: A Traveller's Guide, or try one of the following:

Himalayan Education Lifeline Programme (HELP; www.help-education.org) British-based charity organising placements for volunteer teachers at schools in Sikkim.

Indicorps (www.indicorps.org) Matches volunteers to projects across India, particularly in social development.

Jamyang Foundation (www.jamyang.org) Arranges volunteer placements for experienced teachers in Zaskar and Himachal Pradesh.

Voluntary Service Overseas (VSO; www.vso.org.uk) British organisation offering long-term professional placements in India and worldwide.

Workaway (www.workaway.info) Connects people with hotels, guesthouses, organic farms, restaurants and more, where they will get free accommodation and food in return for working five days a week.

Teaching

Many Buddhist schools need teachers of English for long-term placements; enquire locally in Sikkim, Himachal Pradesh, West Bengal and Ladakh. Teaching experience is preferred.

Himachal Pradesh

➔ Himalayan Buddhist Cultural School (☎9418103512; palkithakur@yahoo.com; Manali) Placements of six months or more for experienced teachers at this boarding school for children from remote villages.

➔ Jamyang Foundation (www.jamyang.org; Kaza) Arranges placements teaching Buddhist women and girls in the Spiti Valley.

➔ Learning & Ideas for Tibet (p325; McLeod Ganj) Current needs are for teachers of English, French, German and computer skills, to work with Tibetan refugees.

➔ Tibet Hope Center (p325; McLeod Ganj) English teaching and conversation with the Tibetan community.

Jammu & Kashmir

➔ Druk White Lotus School (p243; Shey) Buddhist monastery school in Ladakh with long-term placements (May to September only) for English teachers.

➔ We For Kargil (www.weforkargil.in; Kargil) Places volunteers in rural villages around the region.

➔ Phuktal Monastery (http://phuktalmonastery.com/can-you-help; Zanskar) Accepts short-term EFL teaching volunteers.

➔ Csoma's Room (http://csomasroom.kibu.hu) This Hungarian outfit takes teachers (as well as restorers) in Zangla.

Rajasthan

➔ Sambhali Trust (p179) (Jodhpur) Volunteers needed to teach and help organise workshops for disadvantaged women.

West Bengal & Darjeeling

➔ Hayden Hall (p509; Darjeeling) Offers minimum two-month opportunities for volunteers with medical, teaching and business experience.

Working with Children

The following charities provide support for disadvantaged children.

Delhi

➔ Salaam Baalak Trust (p80) Volunteer English teachers, doctors, counsellors and computer experts provide education and support for street children.

➔ Torch (www.torchdelhi.org; 30D Nizamuddin Basti, Nizamuddin West) Works with homeless children, and looks for volunteers who can help with art activities, music and writing.

Goa

➔ Mango Tree Goa (p823; Mapusa) Opportunities for volunteer nurses and teaching assistants to help impoverished children.

➔ El Shaddai (p823; Assagao) Placements helping impoverished and homeless children; one-month minimum commitment.

Himachal Pradesh

➔ Kullu Project (☎9418102083; www.kulluproject.org; Kullu) Puts would-be long-term volunteers in contact with schools, orphanages and other organisations working with disadvantaged kids in the Kullu Valley.

➔ Rogpa (p325; McLeod Ganj) Volunteers provide childcare for Tibetan families.

Mumbai

➔ Child Rights & You (p752) Volunteers can assist with campaigns to raise funds for projects around India; four-week minimum commitment.

➔ Vatsalya Foundation (p752) Long- and short-term opportunities teaching and running sports activities for street children.

Tamil Nadu

Uttar Pradesh

➔ Learn for Life Society (p397; Varanasi) Volunteer opportunities at a small school for disadvantaged children.

Environment & Conservation

The following charities focus on environmental education and sustainable development:

Andaman Islands

- ➔ ANET (Andaman & Nicobar Environmental Team; ☎03192-280081; www.anetindia.org; North Wandoor) Volunteers assist with environmental activities from field projects to general maintenance.
- ➔ Reef Watch (☎9930678367; www.reefwatchindia.org; Lacadives, Chiriya Tapu) Marine conservation NGO accepts volunteers for anything from beach clean ups and fish surveys to teaching; three-week minimum.

Himachal Pradesh

- ➔ Ecosphere (p347; Kaza) This multifaceted sustainable-development NGO has openings for short- and long-term volunteers including in cafe work, translating, agriculture and palliative care.

Jammu & Kashmir

- ➔ International Society for Ecology & Culture (www.isec.org.uk; Leh) One-month placements on rural farms to promote sustainable agriculture; relaunched in 2015.

Karnataka

- ➔ Rainforest Retreat (p885; Coorg) Organic farming, sustainable agriculture and waste management are catchphrases at this lush hideway amid spice plantations; check the website for volunteering options.

Tamil Nadu

- ➔ Keystone Foundation (p1075; Kotagiri) Offers occasional opportunities to help improve environmental conditions, working with indigenous communities.

Working with Animals

From stray dogs to rescued reptiles, opportunities for animal lovers are plentiful.

Andhra Pradesh

- ➔ Blue Cross of Hyderabad (☎23544355; www.bluecrosshyd.in; Rd No 35, Jubilee Hills) A shelter with over 1300 animals; volunteers help care for animals or work in the office.

Goa

- ➔ Animal Rescue Centre (p846; Chapolim) Animal welfare group that also has volunteer opportunities.

Mumbai

- ➔ Welfare of Stray Dogs (p753; Mumbai) Volunteers can work with the animals, manage stores or educate kids in school programs.

Rajasthan

- ➔ Animal Aid Unlimited (p154; Udaipur) Accepts volunteers to help injured, abandoned or stray animals.

Tamil Nadu

- ➔ Madras Crocodile Bank (p1022; Vadanemmeli) A reptile conservation centre with openings for volunteers (minimum two weeks).

Heritage & Restoration

Those with architectural and building skills should look at the following.

Jammu & Kashmir

- ➔ Tibet Heritage Fund (www.tibetheritagefund.org; Leh) Openings for highly skilled volunteers to help preserve traditional buildings.
- ➔ Csoma's Room (p45) Volunteers restore and preserve traditional architecture in Zanskar.

Rajasthan

- ➔ Haveli Nadine Le Prince (p171; Shekhawati) Has opportunities to assist the running of this historic haveli (traditional, ornately decorated residence).

Tamil Nadu

- ➔ ArcHeS (www.arche-s.com; Karaikkudi) Aims to preserve the architectural and cultural heritage of Chettinadu; openings for historians, geographers and architects.

Plan Your Trip

Travel with Children

Fascinating and thrilling; India can be every bit as exciting for children as it is for their wide-eyed parents. The scents, sights and sounds of India will inspire and challenge young enquiring minds, and with careful preparation and vigilance, a lifetime of vivid memories can be sown.

India for Kids

In many respects, travel with children in India can be a delight, and warm welcomes are frequent. Locals will thrill at taking a photograph or two beside your bouncing baby. But while all this is fabulous for outgoing children it may prove tiring or even disconcerting to younger kids and those with more retiring dispositions.

As a parent on the road in India, the key is to stay alert to your children's needs and to remain firm in fulfilling them, even if you feel you may offend a well-meaning local by doing so. The attention your children will inevitably receive is almost always good-natured; kids are the centre of life in many Indian households, and your own will be treated just the same. Hotels will almost always come up with an extra bed or two, and restaurants with a familiar meal.

Children's Highlights

Best Story-book Splendours

➔ Jaisalmer Revel in Arabian Nights grandeur in Jaisalmer's centuries-old fort (p183) on the edge of the Thar Desert.

Best Regions for Kids

Rajasthan

Vibrant festivals, medieval forts, fairy-tale palaces, camel rides across desert dunes and a well-oiled tourist infrastructure for hassle-free travel. For older kids there's the thrill of the incredible Flying Fox (zip wires) at Jodhpur.

Goa

Palm-fringed, white-sand beaches and inexpensive exotic food; an ideal choice for family holidays, whatever the budget.

Uttar Pradesh

The picture-perfect Taj Mahal and the nearby abandoned city of Fatehpur Sikri will set young imaginations ablaze.

Kerala

Canoe and houseboat adventures, surf beaches, Arabian Sea sunsets, snake boat races, wildlife-spotting and elephant festivals.

Himachal Pradesh

Pony and yak rides around colonial-era hill stations, rafting, horse riding, tandem paragliding (kids can do it), walks, canyoning and zorbing around Manali.

➔ Delhi See the famous Red Fort (p60) and imagine epic battles, or ride in a toy train at the National Rail Museum (p75).

➔ Ranthambhore National Park Step into a Jungle Book world, home to a monkey kingdom and hop aboard a jeep to scout for Shere Khan (p140).

➔ Udaipur Explore palaces, take a horse-riding excursion, and spoil your children rotten with a stay at the glorious Taj Lake Palace.

➔ Orchha Wander the crumbling palaces and battlements of little-known Orchha (p633).

Best Natural Encounters

➔ Tiger parks, Madhya Pradesh Delve deep into the jungle or roam the plains at the tiger parks of Kanha (p676), Pench (p680) or Bandhavgarh (p678). You might not see a tiger, but there's plenty of other wildlife worth spotting.

➔ Elephants At Elefantastic (Amber, near Jaipur) in Rajasthan, you can spend a brilliant day caring for elephants, washing them, feeding them etc. At parks in Kerala (Periyar; p966) and Goa (Colem p812 and Ponda p823) kids can ride, feed and bathe (and get sprayed by) elephants.

➔ Dolphins, Goa Splash out on a dolphin-spotting boat trip from almost any Goan beach to see them cavorting among the waves (p825).

➔ Hill-station monkeys Head up to Shimla (p286; Himachal Pradesh) or Matheran (p798; Maharashtra) for close encounters with cheeky monkeys.

Fun Forms of Transport

➔ Authorickshaw, anywhere Hurtle at top speed in these child-scale vehicles (p1199).

➔ Bike, Delhi Take a DelhiByCycle tour (p80) (for older children who are competent riders, or toddlers who can fit in a child seat).

➔ Hand-pulled rickshaw, Matheran A narrow-gauge diesel toy train takes visitors most of the way up to this cute, monkey-infested hill station, after which your children can choose to continue to the village on horseback or in a hand-pulled rickshaw (p798).

➔ Houseboat, Alappuzha (Alleppey) Hop on a houseboat to luxuriously cruise Kerala's beautiful backwaters (p958). If you happen to hit town on the second Saturday in August, take the kids along to see the spectacular Nehru Trophy boat race.

Best Beaches

➔ Palolem & Patnem, Goa Hole up in a beachfront palm-thatched hut and watch your kids cavort at beautiful Palolem and neighbouring Patnem beaches, featuring the shallowest, safest waters in Goa (p849).

➔ Mandrem, Goa A broad, relaxed and child-friendly beach in North Goa, Mandrem (p839) also offers easy access to Arambol and Calangute, making it a great base.

➔ Havelock Island Splash about in the shallows at languid Havelock Island (p1093), part of the Andaman Island chain, where, for older children, there's spectacular diving on offer.

Planning

Before You Go

➔ Look at climate charts; choose your dates to avoid the extremes of temperature that may put younger children at risk.

➔ Visit your doctor to discuss vaccinations, health advisories and other health-related issues involving your children well in advance of travel.

➔ For more tips on travel in India, and first-hand accounts of travels in the country, pick up Lonely Planet's Travel with Children or visit the Thorn Tree Forum at lonelyplanet.com.

What to Pack

You can get some of these items in many parts of India too, but often prices are at a premium and brands may not be those you recognise:

➔ For babies or toddlers: disposable or washable nappies, nappy rash cream (Calendula cream works well against heat rash too), extra bottles, a good stock of wet wipes, infant formula and canned, bottled or rehydratable food.

➔ A fold-up baby bed or the lightest possible travel cot you can find (companies such as KidCo make excellent pop-up tent-style beds), since hotel cots may prove precarious. Don't take a stroller/pushchair, as this will be impractical to use as pavements are often scarce. A much better option is a backpack, for smaller kids, so they're lifted up and out of the daunting throng, plus with a superb view.

- ➔ A few less-precious toys that won't be mourned if lost or damaged.
- ➔ A swimming jacket, life jacket or water wings for the sea or pool.
- ➔ Good sturdy footwear.
- ➔ Audiobooks are great for whiling away long journeys.
- ➔ Child-friendly insect repellent, mosquito nets, hats and sun lotion are a must.

Eating

- ➔ You may have to work hard to find something to satisfy sensitive childhood palates, but if you're travelling in the more family-friendly regions of India, such as Rajasthan, Himachal Pradesh, Goa, Kerala or the big cities, you'll find it easier to feed your brood. Here you will find familiar Western dishes in abundance.
- ➔ While on the road, easy portable snacks such as bananas, samosas, puri (puffy dough pockets) and packaged biscuits (Parle G brand are a perennial hit) are available.
- ➔ Adventurous eaters and vegetarian children will delight in paneer (unfermented cheese) dishes, simple dhal (mild lentil curries), creamy kormas, buttered naans (tandoori breads), pilau (rice dishes) and Tibetan momos (steamed or fried dumplings).
- ➔ Few children, no matter how culinarily unadventurous, can resist the finger food fun of a vast South Indian dosa (paper-thin lentil-flour pancake) served up for breakfast.

Accommodation

- ➔ India offers such an array of accommodation options – from beach huts to heritage boutiques to five-star fantasies – that you're bound to be able to find something that will appeal to the whole family.
- ➔ The swish upmarket hotels are almost always child-friendly, but so are many upper midrange hotels, whose staff will usually rustle up an extra mattress or two; some places won't mind cramming several children into a regular-sized double room along with their parents.
- ➔ The very best five-stars come equipped with children's pools, games rooms and even children's clubs, while an occasional night with a warm bubble bath, room service, macaroni cheese and the Disney channel will revive even the most disgruntled young traveller's spirits.

On the Road

- ➔ Travel in India, be it by taxi, local bus, train or air, can be arduous for the whole family. Concepts such as clean public toilets, changing rooms and safe playgrounds are rare in much of the country. Public transport is often extremely overcrowded so plan fun, easy days to follow longer bus or train rides.
- ➔ Pack plenty of diversions (iPads or laptops with a stock of movies downloaded make invaluable travel companions, as do audiobooks, plus the good old-fashioned story books, cheap toys and games available widely across India).
- ➔ If you are hiring a car and driver – a sensible and flexible option – and you require safety capsules, child restraints or booster seats, you will need to make this absolutely clear to the hiring company as early as possible. Don't expect to find these items readily available. And finally, don't be afraid to tell your driver to slow down and drive responsibly.

Health

- ➔ The availability of a decent standard of health care varies widely in India. Talk to your doctor at home about where you will be travelling to get advice on vaccinations and what to include in your first-aid kit.
- ➔ Access to health care is certainly better in traveller-frequented parts of the country where it's almost always easy to track down a doctor at short notice (most hotels will be able to recommend a reliable one).
- ➔ Prescriptions are quickly and cheaply filled over the counter at numerous pharmacies, often congregating near hospitals.
- ➔ Diarrhoea can be very serious in young children. Seek medical help if it is persistent or accompanied by fever; rehydration is essential. Heat rash, skin complaints such as impetigo, insect bites or stings can be treated with the help of a well-equipped first-aid kit.

Regions at a Glance

From high-tech cities to palm-fringed backwaters, from dizzying knife-edge mountain ranges to remote tribal villages, and from ancient temples to towering fortresses, India's regions are packed with an astounding mass of contrasts, colour and experiences.

Delhi

Ruins
Cuisine
Shopping

Not only does Delhi harbour the ruins of seven imperial cities, but also here you can feast on everything from creative cuisine to fresh-from-the-fire street food. It's shopping heaven too: all of India's riches sparkle in Delhi's bazaars and emporia.

p56

Rajasthan

Palaces & Forts
Wildlife
Arts & Crafts

Rajasthan's forts and palaces are a legacy of the region's maharajas, while their royal hunting reservations are now national parks, ripe for spotting tigers and other wildlife. You'll also find princely riches in Rajasthan's bazaars, from miniature paintings to traditional puppets.

p104

Haryana & Punjab

Architecture
Cuisine
Borders

Besides the stunning Golden Temple, the Punjab has palaces and follies, and the region is also home of butter chicken, basmati rice, and the tandoor (clay oven). The Attari-Wagah border crossing is worth a trip for its fabulous transborder pomp.

p198

Jammu & Kashmir (including Ladakh)

Landscapes
Trekking
Religion

From alpine Kashmir to the moonscapes of Ladakh and Zaskar, be humbled by the scale of nature and take hikes through Buddhist villages. Such beauty inspires spirituality; mantras fill Ladakh's gompas, pilgrims visit Amarnath's ice lingam and Sufi spirituality suffuses Srinagar.

p222

Himachal Pradesh

Adventure
Scenery
Cultures

High Himalayan passes and plunging valleys make for great trekking, climbing, mountain biking, paragliding and skiing. The scenery is consistently awe-inspiring, and the cultural variety huge, from colourful Hindu festivals to ancient Buddhist monasteries.

p280

Agra & the Taj Mahal

Architecture
Tombs
Forts

Agra's astounding Mughal architecture dates from the pinnacle of imperial virtuosity. The Taj Mahal is one of the wonders of the world, but don't miss out on other local masterpieces, such as Akbar's Mausoleum or the mighty Agra Fort.

p350

Uttar Pradesh

Architecture
Religion
Ghats

Uttar Pradesh contains ancient Islamic cities, two of Buddhism's most sacred pilgrimage centres, and two of the seven sacred cities of Hinduism. The river Ganges and its tributaries flow across UP, lined with holy ghats (ceremonial steps).

p374

Uttarakhand

Trekking
Yoga
Wildlife

Trekkers can take their pick from temples, sacred lakes, remote glaciers and rolling alpine meadows. Head to Rishikesh for a spiritual tune-up, and seek snow leopards, Asiatic black bears, brown bears and blue sheep in the national parks.

p412

Kolkata (Calcutta)

Culture
Architecture
Cuisine

Once the British Indian capital, Kolkata is full of colonial-era architecture, but the modern city mingles chaos and culture in an enticing and very Indian mix. Cuisine here is renowned across the subcontinent, with the focus on fresh fish and prawns.

p454

West Bengal & Darjeeling

Hill Stations
Hotels
Tigers

Darjeeling is the quintessential Indian hill station, offering spectacular Himalayan views. Stay in faded Raj-era cottages and elegant tea estates; and where better to spot an awesome Royal Bengal tiger?

p488

Bihar & Jharkhand

Religion
Ruins
Wildlife

Buddhist pilgrims flock to Bodhgaya, where Buddha attained enlightenment. The Unesco-listed ruins of the ancient Nalanda university are just one of many early Buddhist relics, and Jharkhand's serene Betla (Palamu) National Park is famous for its pachyderms.

p520

Sikkim

Views
Treks

Why Go?

Mystery, magic, mayhem. Welcome to Delhi, City of Djinns, and 25 million people. Like an eastern Rome, India's capital is littered with the relics of lost empires. A succession of armies stormed across the Indo-Gangetic plain and imprinted their identity onto the vanquished city, before vanishing into rubble and ruin. Modern Delhi is a chaotic tapestry of medieval fortifications, Mughal mausoleums, dusty bazaars, colonial-era town planning, and mega malls.

Travellers sometimes leave Delhi underwhelmed, after ticking off the sights and tussling with the touts. But give the city a chance and you might fall in love. It's often the lesser-known corners that are most rewarding, such as Lodi Gardens at dusk, the qawwali (Islamic devotional singing) at Nizamuddin or the great fort of Purana Qila. A recommended way to glimpse beneath the surface is to take one of the city's tours, from a former street child's view of Old Delhi to a cycle tour along the Yamuna.

When to Go

Delhi

Oct–Mar Delhi at its best: warm with clear skies. Morning fog can play havoc with flight schedules.

May–Aug The months to avoid – hot, humid and uncomfortable.

Jun–Sep Monsoon season sees high temperatures and regular rain – a sticky combination.

History

Hindus claim Delhi as the site of ancient Indraprastha, home of the Pandavas in the Mahabharata, and excavations near the Purana Qila have revealed evidence of human habitation dating back 3000 years. The name Delhi is linked to the Maurya king Dhili, who ruled the region in the 1st century BC, but for most of its existence, the city has been known by the names given to it by its conquerors.

The first city for which clear archaeological evidence remains was Lal Kot, or Qila Rai Pithora, founded by the Hindu king Prithvi Raj Chauhan in the 12th century. The city fell to Afghan invaders in 1191, and for the next 600 years, Delhi was ruled by a succession of Muslim sultans and emperors. The first, Qutub-ud-din Aibak, razed the Hindu city and used its stones to construct Mehrauli and the towering Qutb Minar.

Qutub-ud-din Aibak's Mamluk (Slave) dynasty was quickly replaced by the Khilji dynasty, following a coup. The Khiljis constructed a new capital at Siri, northeast of Mehrauli, supplied with water from the royal tank at Hauz Khas. Following another coup, the Tughlaq sultans seized the reins, creating a new fortified capital at Tughlaqabad, and two more cities – Jahanpanah and Ferozabad – for good measure.

The Tughlaq dynasty fell after Tamerlane stormed through town in 1398, opening the door for the Sayyid and Lodi dynasties, the last of the Delhi sultanates, whose tombs are scattered around the Lodi Gardens. The scene was set for the arrival of the Mughals. Babur, the first Mughal emperor, seized Delhi in 1526, and a new capital rose at Shergarh (the present-day Purana Qila), presided over by his son, Humayun.

Frantic city building continued throughout the Mughal period. Shah Jahan gained the Peacock Throne in 1627 and raised a new city, Shahjahanabad, centred on the Red Fort. The Mughal city fell in 1739, to the Persian Nadir Shah, and the dynasty went into steep decline. The last Mughal emperor, Bahadur Shah Zafar, was exiled to Burma (Myanmar) by the British for his role in the 1857 First War of Independence (Indian Uprising); there were some new rulers in town.

When the British shifted their capital to Delhi from increasingly rebellious Calcutta in 1911, it was time for another bout of construction. The architect Edwin Lutyens drew up plans for a new city of wide boulevards and stately administrative buildings to accommodate the colonial government – New Delhi was born.

Delhi has faced numerous challenges since Independence, from the violence of Partition to the deepening gulf between rich and poor, but the city on the Yamuna continues to flourish, with its new satellite cities adding ever increasing skyscrapers to the city's outskirts.

Sights

Most sights in Delhi are easily accessible via metro. Note that many places are closed on Monday.

Old Delhi

Sprawling around the Red Fort, medieval-era Old Delhi is a barrage of noise, colour and smells that bombard the senses and make your head whirl.

Red Fort

(Map p64; Indian/foreigner/child ₹10/250/free, video ₹25, combined museum ticket ₹5, audio guide in Hindi ₹68, English or Korean ₹113; ☀️ dawn-dusk Tue-Sun, museums 9am-5pm; 🚶 Chandni Chowk) Converted into a barracks by the British, this massive fort is a sandstone carcass of its former self, but it still conjures a picture of the splendour of Mughal Delhi. Protected by a dramatic 18m-high wall, the marble and sandstone monuments here were constructed at the peak of the dynasty's power, when the empire was flush with gold and precious stones. Shah Jahan founded the fortress between 1638 and 1648 to protect his new capital city of Shahjahanabad, but he never took up full residence, after his disloyal son, Aurangzeb, imprisoned him in Agra Fort.

The last Mughal emperor of Delhi, Bahadur Shah Zafar, was flushed from the Red Fort in 1857 and exiled to Burma for his role in the First War of Independence. The new conquerors cleared out most of the buildings inside the fortress walls and replaced them with ugly barrack blocks for the colonial army.

Every evening, except Monday, the fort is the setting for a bombastic sound-and-light show (Tue-Fri ₹60, Sat & Sun ₹80; 🕒 in English 8.30pm & 9pm May-Aug, 7.30pm Nov-Jan), with coloured spotlights and a portentous voice-over, highlighting key events in the history of the Red Fort.

The ticket for foreigners covers the museums inside the fort. The audio tour is worthwhile to bring the site to life.

➔ Lahore Gate

The main gate to the fort looks towards Lahore in Pakistan, the second most important city in the Mughal empire. During the struggle for Independence, nationalists promised to raise the Indian flag over the gate, an ambition that became a reality on 15 August 1947.

Immediately beyond the gate is the regal Chatta Chowk (Covered Bazaar), which once sold silk and jewels, but now mainly sells souvenirs. At the eastern end of the bazaar, the arched Naubat Khana (Drum House) once accommodated royal musicians and served as a parking lot for royal horses and elephants. Upstairs is the Indian War Memorial Museum (🕒 8am-5pm Tue-Sun), with a fearsome-looking collection of historic weaponry.

A short stroll north, housed in a colonial-era block, the Museum on India's Struggle for Freedom (🕒 9am-5pm Tue-Sun) tells the story of the Independence struggle. If you walk on through the dilapidated barracks, you'll reach a deserted baoli (stepwell), which the British used as a prison, and a causeway leading to the Salimgarh (🕒 10am-5pm Tue-Sun), a fortress built by Salim Shah Suri in 1546. It was likewise used as a prison, first by Aurangzeb, and later by the British; it's still occupied by the Indian army, but you can visit the ruined mosque and a small museum.

➔ Diwan-i-Am

Beyond the Naubat Khana, a monumental arcade of sandstone columns marks the entrance to the Diwan-i-Am (Hall of Public Audience), where the emperor greeted guests and dignitaries from a pietra-dura covered balcony.

➔ Diwan-i-Khas

Those in favour with the emperor, or conquered rivals begging for peace, were admitted to the white marble Diwan-i-Khas (Hall of Private Audience). This delicate, wedding cake-like pavilion features some outstanding carving and inlay work. The legendary gold and jewel-studded Peacock Throne was looted from the pavilion by Nadir Shah in 1739.

South of the Diwan-i-Khas is the dainty Khas Mahal, containing the emperor's private apartments, shielded from prying eyes by lace-like carved marble screens. An artificial stream, the nahr-i-bihisht (river of paradise), once flowed through the apartments to the adjacent Rang Mahal (Palace of Colour), home to the emperor's chief wife. The exterior of the palace was once lavishly painted; inside is an elegant lotus-shaped fountain.

➔ Mumtaz Mahal

South of the Rang Mahal, this pavilion once contained the quarters for other women of the royal household. Today it houses the Museum of Archaeology (☉ 9am-5pm Tue-Sun), with royal vestments, miniature paintings, astrolabes, Mughal scrolls and a shirt inscribed with verses from the Quran to protect the emperor from assassins.

➔ Royal Baths & Moti Masjid

North of the Diwan-i-Khas are the royal baths, which once contained a sauna and hot baths for the royal family, and the Moti Masjid (Pearl Mosque), an elegant private place of worship for the emperor. The outer walls align with the fort walls, while the inner walls are slightly askew to correctly align with Mecca. Both are closed to visitors, but you can peer through the screen windows.

➔ Shahi Burj

North of the royal baths is the Shahi Burj, a three-storey octagonal tower, where Shah Jahan planned the running of his empire. In front of the tower is what remains of an elegant formal garden, centred on the Zafar Mahal, a sandstone pavilion surrounded by a deep, empty water tank.

Chandni Chowk

AREA

(Map p64; 🚶 Chandni Chowk) Old Delhi's main thoroughfare is a chaotic shopping street, mobbed by hawkers, motorcycles, stray dogs and porters and with narrow lanes running off it offering the full medieval bazaar experience. In the time of Shah Jahan, a tree-lined canal ran down its centre, reflecting the moon, hence the name Chandni Chowk, or 'moonlight place'.

Digambara Jain Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

(Map p64; Chandni Chowk; ☉ 6am-noon & 6-9pm; 🚶 Chandni Chowk) In the cluster of temples at the Red Fort end of Chandni Chowk, the scarlet Digambara Jain Temple houses a fascinating bird hospital (by donation; ☉ 10am-5pm) established to further the Jain principle of preserving all life, with a capacity of 10,000. Only vegetarian birds are admitted (up to 60 per day), though predators are treated as outpatients. Remove shoes and leather items before entering the temple.

Nearby, the 18th-century Sisganj Gurdwara marks the the martyrdom site of the ninth Sikh guru, Tegh Bahadur, executed by Aurangzeb in 1675 for resisting conversion to Islam.

Fatehpuri Masjid

MOSQUE

(Map p64; Chandni Chowk) The western end of Chandni Chowk is book-ended by the mid-17th-century Fatehpuri Masjid, built by one of Shah Jahan's wives; it was sold to a Hindu nobleman by the British for ₹19,000 and returned to Muslim worship in exchange for four villages in 1877.

Small green buses shuttle between Digambara Jain Temple and Fatehpuri Masjid (₹5).

DELHI'S MIGHTY MEN

Wander the districts north of Kashmere Gate in Old Delhi and you may notice a disproportionately high number of muscular men. No, it's not your imagination. This dusty quarter is the favoured stomping ground for Delhi's traditional mud wrestlers. Kushti, or pehlwani, is a full-contact martial art, fusing elements of yoga and philosophy with combat and intense physical training.

Young men enrol at akharas (training centres) in their early teens, and follow a strict regimen of daily exercise, climbing ropes, lifting weights and hauling logs to build up the necessary muscle bulk for this intensely physical sport. Even diet and lifestyle is strictly controlled; sex, tobacco and alcohol are forbidden, and wrestlers live together in rustic accommodation under the supervision of a coach who doubles as spiritual guide.

Bouts take place on freshly tilled earth, adding an extra element of grit to proceedings. As with other types of wrestling, the aim is to pin your opponent to the ground, but fights often continue until one wrestler submits or collapses from exhaustion. At regional championships, wrestlers compete for golden gadas (ceremonial clubs), a tribute to the favoured weapon of Hanuman, patron deity of wrestling.

Most akharas welcome spectators at the daily dawn and dusk training sessions, so long as this doesn't interfere with training. Seek permission first to avoid offending these muscle-bound gents – the blog www.kushtiwrestling.blogspot.com is a good introduction to the sport and the main akharas. Indomania Cultural Tours (p80) has Yamaya tours that also take in an akhara.

Red Fort

HIGHLIGHTS

The main entrance to the Red Fort is through Lahore Gate 1 – the bastion in front of it was built by Aurangzeb for increased security. You can still see bullet marks from 1857 on the gate.

Walk through the Chatta Chowk (Covered Bazaar), which once sold silks and jewelry to the nobility; beyond it lies Naubat Khana 2, a russet-red building, which houses Hathi Pol (Elephant Gate), so called because visitors used to dismount from their elephants or horses here as a sign of respect. From here it's straight on to the Diwan-i-Am 3, the Hall of Public Audiences. Behind this are the private palaces, the Khas Mahal 4 and the Diwan-i-Khas 5. Entry to this Hall of Private Audiences, the fort's most expensive building, was only permitted to the officials of state. Nearby is the Moti Masjid (Pearl Mosque) 6 and south is the Mumtaz Mahal 7, housing the Museum of Archaeology, or you can head north, where the Red Fort gardens are dotted by palatial pavilions and old British barracks. Here you'll find the baoli 8, a spookily deserted water tank. Another five minutes' walk – across a road, then a railway bridge – brings you to the island fortress of Salimgarh 9.

TOP TIPS

» To avoid crowds, get here early or late in the day; avoid weekends and public holidays.

» An atmospheric way to see the Red Fort is by night; you can visit after dark if you attend the nightly Sound-&Light Show.

Salimgarh

Salimgarh is the 16th-century fort built by Salim Shah Sur. It was constructed on an island of the Yamuna River and only recently opened to the public. It is still partly used by the Indian army.

Lahore Gate

Lahore Gate is particularly significant, as it was here that Jawaharlal Nehru raised the first tricolour flag of independent India in 1947.

Naubat Khana

The Naubat Khana (Drum House) is carved in floral designs and once featured musicians playing in the upper gallery. It housed Hathi Pol (Elephant Gate), where visitors dismounted from their horse or elephant.

Baoli

The Red Fort step well is seldom visited and is a hauntingly deserted place, even more so when you consider its chambers were used as cells by the British from August 1942.

DORLING KINDERSLEY/GETTY IMAGES ©

Moti Masjid

The Moti Masjid (Pearl Mosque) was built by Aurangzeb in 1662 for his personal use. The domes were originally covered in copper, but the copper was removed and sold by the British.

KIMBERLEY COOLE/GETTY IMAGES ©

Diwan-i-Khas

This was the most expensive building in the fort, consisting of white marble decorated with inlay work of cornelian and other stones. The screens overlooking what was once the river (now the ring road) were filled with coloured glass.

PIT STOP

To refuel, head to Paratha Gali Wali, a foodstall-lined lane off Chandni Chowk noted for its many varieties of freshly made paratha (traditional flat bread).

Diwan-i-Am

These red sandstone columns were once covered in shell plaster, as polished and smooth as ivory, and in hot weather heavy red curtains were hung around the columns to block out the sun. It's believed the panels behind the marble throne were created by Florentine jeweller Austin de Bordeaux.

ARIBOAL HOLE ©

Khas Mahal

Most spectacular in the Emperor's private apartments is a beautiful marble screen at the northern end of the rooms; the 'Scales of Justice' are carved above it, suspended over a crescent, surrounded by stars and clouds.

★ Jama Masjid

MOSQUE

(Map p64; camera & video each ₹300, tower ₹100; ☺ non-Muslims 8am-dusk, minaret 9am-5.30pm; 🚶 Chawri Bazaar) A calm respite from the surrounding mayhem, India's largest mosque can hold 25,000 people. Towering over Old Delhi, the 'Friday Mosque' was Shah Jahan's final architectural opus, built between 1644 and 1658. It has three gateways, four angle towers and two minarets standing 40m high, and is constructed of alternating vertical strips of red sandstone and white marble. You can enter from gate 1 or 3. The only prayer session where non-Muslims may be present is at 7.45am.

Buy a ticket at the entrance to climb 121 steps up the narrow southern minaret (notices say that unaccompanied women are not permitted, but they may be allowed up with a 'guide' who'll expect a tip). From the top of the minaret, you can see one of the features that architect Edwin Lutyens incorporated into his design of New Delhi – the Jama Masjid, Connaught Place and Sansad Bhavan (Parliament House) are in a direct line.

Visitors should remove their shoes at the top of the stairs. There's no charge to enter the mosque, but you'll have to pay the camera charge whether you want to use your camera or not. Once you buy a camera ticket, you should be allowed to go out and re-enter later that day if you choose.

Raj Ghat

MONUMENT

(Map p64; ☉6am-6pm) South of the Red Fort, situated on the banks of the Yamuna River, a simple black-marble platform marks the spot where Mahatma Gandhi was cremated following his assassination in 1948. It's a thought-provoking spot, inscribed with what are said to have been Gandhi's final words, Hai Ram (Oh, God). Across Kisan Ghat Rd is the Gandhi Darshan (☉10am-5pm Mon-Sat) FREE, a huge pavilion displaying photos relating to the Mahatma.

Shanti Vana

MONUMENT

(Forest of Peace; Map p64) Jawaharlal Nehru, the first Indian prime minister, was cremated just to the north of Raj Ghat, at Shanti Vana, in 1964. The cremation sites of Nehru's daughter, Indira Gandhi, and grandsons Sanjay and Rajiv are lined up along the riverbank in their own memorial parks.

National Gandhi Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p64; ☎23311793; Raj Ghat; ☉9.30am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) FREE A small but moving museum displaying historic photos and items such as Gandhi's spinning wheels and the dhoti (long loincloth) he was wearing at the time of his murder.

Feroz Shah Kotla

HISTORIC SITE

(Map p64; Bahadur Shah Zafar Marg; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☉dawn-dusk; 🚶 Pragati Maidan) Ferozabad, the fifth city of Delhi, was built by Feroz Shah in 1354 as a replacement for Tughlaqabad. Ringed by crumbling fortifications are a huge mosque, a baoli (step-well), and the pyramid-like Hawa Mahal, topped by a 13m-high sandstone Ashoka Pillar inscribed with Ashoka's edicts. There's an otherworldly atmosphere to the ruins, which are still a place of worship – on Thursday afternoon, crowds gather to light candles and incense and leave bowls of milk to appease Delhi's *djinn*s (invisible spirits). Shoes should be removed when entering the mosque and Hawa Mahal.

Shankar's International Dolls Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p64; ☎23316970; www.childrensbooktrust.com; Nehru House, Bahadur Shah Zafar Marg; adult/child ₹17/6; ☉10am-6pm Tue-Sun) From tacky Spanish bullfighting figurines to graceful Japanese geisha dolls, this cutesy but engaging museum has a collection of 6500 dolls from 85 countries, from Brazil to Japan.

National Bal Bhavan

MUSEUM

(Map p64; www.nationalbalbhavan.nic.in; Kotla Marg; adult/child ₹5/free; ☉9am-5.30pm Tue-Sat) Delhi's museum for children is a disorderly affair, with a toy train, animal enclosures, an exhibition on astrology and astronomy, and some delightful mini-dioramas showing key events in Indian history.

Nicholson Cemetery

CEMETERY

(Map p64; Lala Hardev Sahai Marg; ☉8am-6pm summer, 9am-5pm winter; 🚶 Kashmere Gate) Close to Kashmere Gate, this forgotten cemetery is the last resting place for hundreds of Delhi's colonial-era residents, many of whom perished in childhood. One famous (ex-)resident is Brigadier General John Nicholson, who died from injuries sustained while storming Delhi during the 1857 First War of Independence (Indian Uprising). At the time he was hailed as the 'Hero of Delhi,' but author William Dalrymple has described him as an 'imperial psychopath'.

Take the metro to nearby Pulbangash station to see the British-erected Mutiny Memorial (Rani Jhansi Rd) and an Ashoka Pillar (Rani Jhansi Rd), transported here by Feroz Shah.

Coronation Durbar Site

MONUMENT

(Shanti Swaroop Tyagi Marg; 🚶 Model Town) In a desolate field, around 10km north of Old Delhi, a lone obelisk marks the site where King George V was declared emperor of India in 1911, and where the great darbars (fairs) were held to honour India's British overlords in 1877 and 1903. Take an autorickshaw from Model Town metro station.

Lakshmi Narayan Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Birla Mandir; Map p64; Mandir Marg; ☉6am-9pm; 🚶 Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) West of Connaught Place, the busy-looking, Orissan-style Lakshmi Narayan Temple was erected by the wealthy industrialist BD Birla. Gandhi inaugurated the complex in 1938 as a temple for all castes; a sign on the gate says, 'Everyone is Welcome'.

Connaught Place

📍 Connaught Place Area

Connaught Place

(Map p68; 🚇 Rajiv Chowk) New Delhi's colonial heart is Connaught Place, named after George V's paternal uncle, and fashioned after the colonnades of Cheltenham and Bath to assuage British homesickness. Its whitewashed, grey-tinged streets radiate out from the central circle of Rajiv Chowk, lined with shops and restaurants. The outer circle (divided into blocks G to N) is technically called Connaught Circus, and the inner circle (divided into blocks A to F) is Connaught Place, but locals call the whole area 'CP'.

Almost every visitor to Delhi comes here, which partly explains the rampant touts.

Jantar Mantar

HISTORIC SITE

(Map p68; Sansad Marg; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀️9am-dusk; 🚇 Patel Chowk) The most eccentric-seeming of Delhi's historic sites, Jantar Mantar (derived from the Sanskrit word for 'instrument') is an odd collection of curving geometric buildings that are carefully calibrated to monitor the movement of the stars and planets. Maharaja Jai Singh II constructed the observatory in 1725.

Agrasen ki Baoli

MONUMENT

(Map p68; Hailey Lane; ☀dawn-dusk; 🚶Barakhamba Road) A remarkable thing to discover among the office towers southeast of Connaught Place, this atmospheric 14th-century step-well was once set in rural land, till the city grew up around it; 103 steps descend to the bottom, flanked by arched niches.

New Delhi & Around

★Humayun's Tomb

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Map p72; Mathura Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25; ☀dawn-dusk; 🚶JLN Stadium) The most perfectly proportioned and captivating of Delhi's mausoleums, Humayun's tomb seems to float above the gardens that surround it. Built in the mid-16th century by Haji Begum, the Persian-born senior wife of the Mughal emperor Humayun, the tomb brings together Persian and Mughal elements, creating a template that strongly influenced the Taj Mahal.

Following six years of restoration, completed in 2013, the tomb, other monuments and gardens are looking bright and beautiful. The arched facade is inlaid with bands of white marble and red sandstone, and the building follows strict rules of Islamic geometry, with an emphasis on the number eight. The surrounding gardens are alive with green parakeets and contain the tombs of the emperor's favourite barber and Haji Begum. This was where the last Mughal emperor, Bahadur Shah Zafar, took refuge before being captured and exiled by the British in 1857.

To the right as you enter the complex, Isa Khan's tomb is a fine example of Lodi-era architecture, constructed in the 16th century. Further south is the monumental Khan-i-Khanan's tomb (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀dawn-dusk), plundered in Mughal times to build Safdarjang's tomb.

A new visitor centre is due to be added to the site.

★Hazrat Nizam-ud-din Dargah

SHRINE

(Map p72; off Lodi Rd; ☀24hr; 🚶JLN Stadium) Hidden away in a tangle of bazaars selling rose petals, attars (perfumes) and offerings, the marble shrine of the Muslim Sufi saint Nizam-ud-din Auliya offers a window through the centuries, full of music and crowded with devotees. The ascetic Nizam-ud-din died in 1325 at the ripe old age of 92, and his mausoleum became a point of pilgrimage for Muslims from across the empire. Later kings and nobles wanted to be buried as close to Nizam-ud-din as possible, hence the number of nearby Mughal tombs.

Other tombs in the compound include the graves of Jahanara (daughter of Shah Jahan) and the renowned Urdu poet Amir Khuyru. It's one of Delhi's most extraordinary pleasures to take a seat on the marble floor and listen to Sufis singing rousing qawwali (Islamic devotional singing) at sunset. These are most spectacular on Thursday, but it's worth visiting on other evenings for a more intimate experience. Scattered around the surrounding alleyways are more tombs and a huge baoli. Entry is free, but visitors may be asked to make a donation.

A tour with the Hope Project (p80), which ends at the shrine, is recommended for some background.

Lodi Gardens

PARK

(Map p72; Lodi Rd; ☀ 6am-8pm Oct-Mar, 5am-8pm Apr-Sep; 🚶 Khan Market or Jor Bagh) This peaceful park is Delhi's favourite escape, popular with everyone from power-walking politicians to amorous teens. The gardens are dotted with the crumbling tombs of Sayyid and Lodi rulers, including the impressive 15th-century Bara Gumbad tomb (Map p72) and mosque, and the strikingly different tombs of Mohammed Shah and Sikander Lodi. There's a lake crossed by the Athpula (eight-piered) bridge, which dates from Emperor Akbar's reign.

Rajpath

AREA

(🚶 Khan Market) The focal point of Edwin Lutyens' plan for New Delhi was Rajpath (Kingsway), a grand parade linking India Gate to the offices of the Indian government. Constructed between 1914 and 1931, these grand civic buildings, reminiscent of Imperial Rome, were intended to spell out in stone the might of the British empire – yet just 16 years later, the British were out on their ear and Indian politicians were pacing the corridors of power.

Shielded by a wrought-iron fence at the western end of Rajpath, the official residence of the president of India, Rashtrapati Bhavan (p71), is flanked by the mirror-image, dome-crowned North Secretariat (Map p72) and South Secretariat (Map p72), housing government ministries. The Indian parliament meets nearby at the Sansad

Bhavan (Parliament House; Map p72), a circular, colonnaded edifice at the end of Sansad Marg.

At Rajpath's eastern end, and constantly thronged by tourists, is India Gate (Map p72). This 42m-high stone memorial arch, designed by Lutyens, pays tribute to around 90,000 Indian army soldiers who died in WWI, the Northwest Frontier operations, and the 1919 Anglo-Afghan War.

Rashtrapati Bhavan HISTORIC BUILDING
(President's House; Map p72; ☎23012960; www.presidentofindia.nic.in; 1hr tour ₹50; ☀9am-4pm Fri-Sun; 🚗Central Secretariat) You have to book ahead online, but it's worth it to peek inside the grandiose President's House. Formerly home to the British Viceroy, it has 340 rooms, with 2.5km of corridors. However, visits are limited to the domed Durbar Hall, the presidential library and the gilded Ashoka Hall.

You'll have to leave cameras and phones at the entrance, but there's a chance to take pictures close up of the outside before/after your visit.

Rashtrapati Bhavan Museum MUSEUM
(Map p72; ☎23013287; www.presidentofindia.nic.in; gate No 30, Mother Teresa Crescent Rd; tours ₹25; ☀9am-4pm Fri-Sun; 🚗Central Secretariat) Housed in the palace's former stables (opposite Talkotara Stadium), this museum houses an array of the extravagant gifts received by the president, some of architect Lutyens' plans for the palace, and a few touch-screen exhibits about its history. Visits are by tour only and advance online bookings are required.

Mughal Gardens GARDENS
(Map p72; ☀Tue-Sun Feb-Mar; 🚗Central Secretariat) FREE Rashtrapati Bhavan's incredible, manicured gardens are open to the public for only two months a year, when they are in flower. If you're in town then, go see them. Lord Louis Mountbatten, India's last viceroy, was said to have employed 418 gardeners to care for the fabulous Mughal-style arrangements.

National Museum MUSEUM
(Map p72; ☎23019272; www.nationalmuseumindia.gov.in; Janpath; Indian/foreigner ₹10/300, audio guide English, French or German ₹400, Hindi ₹150, camera Indian/foreigner ₹20/300; ☀10am-5pm Tue-Sun; 🚗Central Secretariat) Offering a compelling if not always coherent snapshot of India's last 5000 years, this museum is not overwhelmingly large, but full of splendours. Exhibits include rare relics from the Harappan Civilisation, Buddha's 4th to 5th century BC effects, antiquities from the Silk Route, exquisite miniature paintings (look out for the hand-painted playing cards), woodcarvings, textiles, statues, musical instruments, and an armoury with gruesomely practical weapons and a suit of armour for an elephant.

Allow at least two hours, preferably half a day. Bring identification to obtain an audio guide (worthwhile as labelling is minimal).

Next door is the Archaeological Survey of India (☎011-23010822; www.asi.nic.in; Janpath; ☀9.30am-1pm & 2-6pm Mon-Fri), which stocks publications about India's main archaeological sites.

National Gallery of Modern Art ART GALLERY
(Map p72; ☎23382835; www.ngmaindia.gov.in; Jai-pur House, Dr Zakir Hussain Marg; Indian/foreigner ₹10/150; ☀10am-5pm Tue-Sun; 🚗Khan Market) Delhi's flagship art gallery displays a remarkable collection of paintings, from colonial-era landscapes and 'Company Paintings', created by Indian artists to suit their new British rulers, to the primitive-inspired artworks of Nobel Prize-winner Rabindranath Tagore. Photography prohibited.

Gandhi Smriti MUSEUM
(Map p72; ☎23012843; 5 Tees Jan Marg; ☀10am-5pm Tue-Sun, closed 2nd Sat of month; 🚗Racecourse) FREE This poignant memorial is where Mahatma Gandhi was shot dead by a Hindu zealot on 30 January 1948, after campaigning against intercommunal violence. Concrete footsteps lead to the spot where Gandhi died, marked by a small pavilion. Video prohibited.

The adjacent house, where the Mahatma spent his last 144 days, contains rooms preserved as Gandhi left them, a detailed account of his last 24 hours, and vivid dioramas depicting scenes from Gandhi's life, set in boxes like 1950s TVs. Upstairs is the interpretative exhibition Eternal Gandhi.

In the room where Gandhi lodged, you can see his meagre possessions – not much more than a walking stick, spectacles, a spinning wheel and a pair of chappals (sandals).

Indira Gandhi Memorial Museum MUSEUM
(Map p72; ☎23010094; 1 Safdarjang Rd; ☀9.30am-4.45pm Tue-Sun; 🚗Racecourse) FREE The former residence of Indira Gandhi is now a museum dedicated to the former prime minister's life and family, India's Kennedys. It displays her personal effects, including the blood-stained sari she was wearing when she was assassinated in 1984. Many rooms are preserved in state, offering a window onto the elegant lives of Delhi's political elite. An exhibit at the rear charts the similarly truncated life of Indira's son, Rajiv, assassinated in 1991. In the garden, an enclosed crystal pathway marks Indira Gandhi's final footsteps.

Nehru Memorial Museum MUSEUM
 (Map p72; ☎ 23016734; www.nehrumemorial.nic.in; Teen Murti Rd; ☎ 8am-5.15pm Tue-Sun; 🚇 Udyog Bhawan) FREE The stately Teen Murti Bhawan was the official residence of Jawaharlal Nehru (India's first prime minister), and before that, the official residence of the British commander-in-chief. As well as documents and photos relating to Nehru's life and work, there are several of his rooms preserved as if he's just popped out.

(Old Fort; Map p72; ☎ 24353178; Mathura Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25, sound & light show ₹80; 🌅 dawn-dusk; 🚶 Pragati Maidan) With its towering walls and dramatic gateways, Purana Qila was constructed by Afghan ruler Sher Shah (1538–45), who briefly seized control of Delhi from the emperor Humayun, and the monumental gatehouse opens onto a peaceful garden studded with ancient monuments. The graceful octagonal, red-sandstone Sher Mandal was used by Humayun as a library; it was a fall down its stairs that ended his reign, and life, in 1556. Beyond is the intricately patterned Qila-i-Kuhran Mosque (Mosque of Sher Shah). Across busy Mathura Road are more relics from the city of Shergarh, including the Khairul Manazil mosque, still used by local Muslims. A popular boating lake has been created from the former moat, with pedalos for hire. There's a sound & light show (🎧 in English 8.30pm Feb-Apr, Sep & Oct; 9pm May-Aug & 7.30pm Nov-Jan) at the fort.

MUSEUM

(Map p72; ☎ 26881816; Service Rd, Chanakyapuri; adult/child ₹20/10, video ₹100; ☀ 9.30am-5.30pm Tue-Sun) Trainspotters and kids will adore this recently renovated museum, with its collection of steam locos and carriages spread across 4.5 hectares. Among the venerable bogies are the former Viceregal Dining Car, the Maharaja of Mysore's rolling saloon, and the Fairy Queen locomotive, dating from 1855. The indoor gallery displays Indian Railways memorabilia, including the skull of an elephant that charged the UP Mail in 1894. A miniature train (adult/child ₹20/10) chuffs around the grounds.

In fact, the grounds are so extensive you may have trouble finding the animals. Kept in reasonably considerate conditions are lions, tigers, elephants, hippos, rhinos, spectacular birds and monkeys who periodically take leave of their enclosures.

Safdarjang's Tomb

TOMB

(Map p72; Aurobindo Marg; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀ dawn-dusk; 🚶 Jor Bagh) Built by the Nawab of Avadh for his father, Safdarjang, this grandiose mid-18th-century tomb was erected during the twilight of the Mughal empire. With not enough funds to pay for all-over marble, that which is on the dome was taken from the nearby mausoleum of Khan-i-Khana, and it was finished in red sandstone.

Tibet House

Gurdwara Bangla Sahib

SIKH TEMPLE
(Map p72; Ashoka Rd; ☀ 4am-9pm; 🚗 Patel Chowk) Topped by golden domes, this handsome white-marble gurdwara was constructed at the site where the eighth Sikh guru, Harkrishan Dev, stayed before his death in 1664. Despite his tender years, the six-year-old guru tended to victims of Delhi's cholera and smallpox epidemic, and the waters of the gurdwara tank are said to have healing powers. Sikh pilgrims flock here at all hours, and devotional songs waft over the compound, adding to the contemplative mood.

To reach the lake shore, cut through the adjacent Deer Park (daylight hours), which has more ruined tombs, a well-stocked deer enclosure and a popular drumming circle. There are numerous Lodi-era tombs scattered along the access road to Hauz Khas Village, and in nearby Green Park.

Chhatarpur Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(Shri Adya Katyayani Shakti Peeth Mandir; ☎26802360; www.chhatarpurmandir.org; Main Chhatarpur Rd; 🕒4am-midnight; 🚶Chhatarpur) India's second-largest temple (after Akshardham), the Shri Adya Katyayani Shakti Peeth Mandir is dedicated to the goddess Katyayani (one of the nine forms of Parvati). There are dozens of shrines with towering South Indian gopurams (gateway towers), and an enormous statue of Hanuman stands guard over the compound. Weekdays tend to be fairly sedate, but the complex gets crowded at weekends and during the Navratri celebrations in September/October.

Kiran Nadar Museum of Art

MUSEUM

(☎49160000; www.knma.in; 145 DLF, South Court Mall, Saket; 🕒10.30am-6.30pm Tue-Sun; 🚶Saket)

A fine private museum devoted to contemporary art, this is a drop of culture amid Saket's malls. There are excellent temporary exhibitions, but the permanent collection will be displayed to full effect once the 80,000-sq-ft gallery is completed.

📍 Other Areas

★ Akshardham Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☎22016688; www.akshardham.com; National Hwy 24, Noida turning; temple admission free, exhibitions ₹170, fountains ₹30; 🕒9.30am-6.30pm Tue-Sun; 🚶Akshardham) Rising dramatically over the eastern suburbs, the Hindu Swaminarayan group's controversially ostentatious Akshardham Temple draws elements from traditional Orissan, Gujarati, Mughal and Rajasthani architecture.

Surrounding this spiritual showpiece is a series of Disneyesque exhibitions, including a boat ride through 10,000 years of Indian history, animatronics telling stories from the life of Swaminarayan, and musical fountains.

The interior offers an almost psychedelic journey through Hindu mythology, with 20,000 carved deities, saints and mythical beings. Allow at least half a day to do the temple justice (weekdays are less crowded).

Sulabh International Museum of Toilets

MUSEUM

(📍 25031518; www.sulabhtoiletmuseum.org;
Sulabh Complex, Mahavir Enclave, Palam Dabri Rd; 🕒 10am-5pm summer, 10.30am-5pm winter)
🆓 FREE Run by a pioneering charity that has done extraordinary work bringing sanitation to the poor of India, this quirky museum displays toilet-related paraphernalia dating from 2500 BC to modern times. It's around 20km west of Connaught Place. Take the metro to Janakpuri West, then take a rickshaw.

Tours

Tours are an excellent way to explore Delhi. Admission fees and camera/video charges aren't included, and rates are per person. Book several days ahead.

★ DelhiByCycle

BICYCLE TOUR

(☎ 9811723720; www.delhibycle.com; per person ₹1850; ☀ 6.30-10am) Run by a Dutch journalist, these tours are a fantastic way to explore Delhi. Tours focus on specific neighbourhoods – Old Delhi, New Delhi, Nizamuddin, and the banks of the Yamuna – and start early to miss the worst of the traffic. The price includes chai and a Mughal breakfast. Child seats are available.

Salaam Baalak Trust

WALKING TOUR

(SBT; Map p82; ☎ 23584164; www.salaambaalaktrust.com; Gali Chandiwali, Paharganj; suggested donation ₹200; 🚶 Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) 🌿 This charitable organisation offers two-hour 'street walks' guided by former street children, who will show you first-hand what life is like for Delhi's homeless youngsters. The fees help the Trust assist children on the streets.

Street Connections

WALKING TOUR

(www.walk.streetconnections.co.uk; 3hr walk ₹500) 🌿 This fascinating walk through Old Delhi is guided by former street children who have been helped by the Salaam Baalak Trust. It explores the hidden corners of Old Delhi, starting at the Jama Masjid and concluding at one of the SBT shelters.

Hope Project

WALKING TOUR

(Map p72; ☎ 24353006; www.hopeprojectindia.org; 127 Hazrat Nizamuddin; 1½hr walk suggested donation ₹200; 🚶 JLN Stadium) 🌿 This charity runs fascinating walks around the Muslim basti (slum) of Nizamuddin. Take the walk in mid-afternoon to end at the qawwali at the Hazrat Nizam-ud-din Dargah, or at the more intimate session at the shrine of Hazrat Inayat Khan on Friday. Wear modest clothing.

Indomania Cultural Tours

TOUR

(☎ 8860223456; www.indomaniatours.com; half-day tours per person ₹2000) 🌿 Excellent tours by the knowledgeable Priyush, exploring the parts of Delhi others don't reach. Visit a Rajasthani pottery village on Delhi's outskirts, cultural groups along the Yamuna River, or Delhi's Tibetan enclave, in tours that operate in association with local NGOs.

Delhi Tourism & Transport*Development Corporation

BUS TOUR

(DTTDC; Map p68; www.delhitourism.nic.in; Baba Kharak Singh Marg; AC tours half/full day ₹350/200; ☀ 7am-9pm; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) Offers bus tours of New Delhi (9am to 1.30pm) and Old Delhi (2.15pm to 5.45pm) visiting all the big sights (avoid Monday, when most are shut). It also runs the air-conditioned Ho Ho (Hop-on, Hop-off) Dilli Dekho bus service, which circuits the major sights every 45 minutes or so from 8.30am to 6.30pm (Indian/foreigner ₹350/700, two-day ticket ₹600/1200) – buy tickets from the booth near the office.

Also runs rushed tours to Agra, Jaipur and Haridwar.

Intach

WALKING TOUR

(☎ 24641304; www.intachdelhichapter.org; tour ₹100) Intach runs walking tours with expert guides, exploring different areas, such as Chandhi Chowk, Nizamuddin, Hauz Khas and Mehrauli. Custom walks can also be arranged.

Delhi Transport*Corporation Tours

🛏 Sleeping

Delhi has plenty of choice, but it's wise to book ahead, as popular places can fill up in a flash. Reconfirm your booking 24 hours before you arrive. Most hotels offer pick-up from the airport with advance notice. Homestays are becoming an attractive alternative to hotels, and there's also an array of options on airbnb.com. For details of government-approved places contact India Tourism Delhi (p97), or check www.incredibleindianhomes.com and www.mahindrahomestays.com.

Hotels with a minimum tariff of ₹1000 charge luxury tax (10% at the time of research) and service tax (7.42% at the time of research), and some also add a service charge (up to 10%). Most hotels have a noon checkout and luggage storage is usually possible.

Old Delhi

Most hotels in the old town see few foreign visitors.

Hotel New City Palace HOTEL $
(Map p64; ☎ 23279548; www.hotelnewcitypalace.in; 726 Jama Masjid; r ₹700; 🏠; 🚗 Chawri Bazaar) A palace it's not, but this mazelike hotel has an amazing location overlooking the Jama Masjid. Rooms are small, but some have windows and views; the bathrooms could do with a good scrub, but staff are friendly.

Hotel Broadway HOTEL $$
(Map p64; ☎ 43663600; www.hotelbroadwaydelhi.com; 4/15 Asaf Ali Rd; s/d incl breakfast ₹2300/4000; 🏠 @; 🚗 New Delhi) A surprising find in the old city, Broadway was Delhi's first high-rise when it opened in 1956. Today it combines comfort with charm and eccentricity and has a great restaurant and bar. Some rooms have old-fashioned wood panelling, while others have been quirkily kitted out by French designer Catherine Lévy. Ask for one with views over Old Delhi.

Maidens Hotel HOTEL $$$
(Map p64; ☎ 23975464; www.maidenshotel.com; 7 Sham Nath Marg; r from ₹12,000; 🏠 @ 🍷 🍷; 🚗 Civil Lines) Set in immaculate gardens, Oberoi-owned Maidens is a graceful wedding cake of a hotel, built in 1903. Lutyens stayed here while supervising the building of New Delhi, and the enormous high-ceilinged rooms have a colonial-era charm that is combined with contemporary comforts. There are two restaurants, a pool and a bar.

SLEEPING PRICE RANGES

The following price ranges refer to a double room with private bathroom and are inclusive of tax:

$ less than ₹1000

$$ ₹1000 to ₹5000

$$$ more than ₹5000

Paharganj & Around

With bumper-to-bumper budget hotels and a deserved reputation for hassle and dodgy characters, Paharganj isn't everyone's cup of chai. However, it's convenient for New Delhi train station, a great place to plug into the traveller grapevine, and the mayhem can grow on you. Note that if you're paying peanuts, you're in for a sun-starved, grimy cell. Splash a bit extra and you'll get more cleanliness and comfort. There are also better, more midrange rooms for not much more on nearby Arakashan Rd. Be warned that street noise can be diabolical – keep ear plugs handy.

Because of the pedestrian congestion, taxi-wallahs may be reluctant to take you right to the doorstep of your hotel, but if it's on the Main Bazaar or Arakashan Rd, they can make it. You can walk to everywhere from New Delhi train station or metro (for Arakashan Rd) or the Ramakrishna Ashram Marg metro stop. However tired you are when you get off the Airport metro or bus, don't believe rickshaw drivers or anyone who tells you differently. To avoid commission scams when you first arrive, ask rickshaws to drop you at Chhe Tooti Chowk and complete your journey on foot.

★ Hotel Amax Inn HOTEL $
(Map p64; ☎ 23543813; www.hotelamax.com; 8145/6 Arakashan Rd; s/d from ₹750/850; 🏠 @ 🍷) Set back from chaotic Arakashan Rd, the Amax offers fairly standard, good-value budget rooms, with bullet-hard pillows, but the friendly staff run the place with the globetrotting traveller in mind. The rooftop terrace is a great spot to swap travel stories and there's wi-fi in reception.

Hotel Namaskar HOTEL $
(Map p82; ☎ 23583456; www.namaskarhotel.com; 917 Chandiwalan, Main Bazaar; r ₹400-650, with AC

₹650; (☎) Up the alleyway opposite Dayal Boot House, this old favourite is run by two amiable brothers. It's not the Ritz (it's humid and noisy), but the simple rooms are usually freshly painted, the colour scheme will tickle you pink, and wi-fi works in the rooms.

Hotel Rak International

HOTEL $

(Map p82; ☎ 23562478; www.hotelrakinternational.com; off Main Bazaar; s/d ₹550/650, with AC ₹800/900; (☎)) Tucked off the Main Bazaar and overlooking a scruffy courtyard, the modest rooms at this popular hotel have marble floors and bathrooms, chintzy built-in beds, including, unusually, twin rooms and...windows!

Cottage Yes Please

HOTEL $

(Map p82; ☎ 23562300; www.cottageeyesplease.com; 1843 Laxmi Narayan St; d from ₹950; (☎)) One street north of Main Bazaar, this calm, comfortable place offers a selection of agreeable, if tired-looking, rooms. Rooms have TVs and fridges, and the decor runs to wood panelling and stained glass.

★ Bloom Rooms

HOTEL $$

(Map p82; ☎40174017; www.bloomrooms.com; 8591 Arakashan Road; s/d from ₹2200/2800; ☎) Sunny lemon-yellow and gleaming white, designer Bloom Rooms is sparkingly and clean, with soft pillows, white linen, great wi-fi and nice outdoor seating areas. This New Delhi branch is in a busy area but a haven inside. There's another balmy branch in Jangpura (Map p72; ☎41261400; 7 Link Rd) in South Delhi. Both have Amici restaurants (good pizza).

Hotel Grand Godwin

HOTEL $$

(Map p82; ☎23546891; www.godwinhotels.com; 8502/41 Arakashan Rd; d incl breakfast from ₹2500; ☎☎☎) Located north of Main Bazaar, on the hotel strip of Arakashan Rd, the Grand Godwin is firmly midrange, and the glitzy feel of the lobby extends to the smart rooms. Run by the same owners, the nearby Godwin Deluxe offers similar facilities for similar prices.

Hotel All iz Well

HOTEL $$

(Map p82; ☎23580014; www.hotelallizwell.com; 4781 Main Bazaar; s/d ₹1300/1500; ☎☎) All iz Well offers clean, good-value, reasonably smart rooms, with room service, efficient wi-fi and reasonably helpful, unhassly staff. A calm and laid-back deal in Paharganj.

Jyoti Mahal Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p82; ☎23580523; www.jyotimahal.net; 2488-2490 Nalwa St; s/d ₹2200/2500; ☎☎☎) Full of Rajasthani carvings and antiques, Jyoti is a cut above other places in Paharganj, with some genuine character: it feels like a traditional haveli home. Arranged around a central atrium, rooms have hand-made furniture, marble floors and some have four-poster beds.

Hotel Ajanta

HOTEL $$

(Map p82; ☎42350000; www.ajantahotel.com; 8647 Arakashan Rd; d/ste ₹2640/4650; ☎☎☎) Some rooms are better than others at Ajanta; pay the higher rates and you'll be in for a more spacious room with a grand, polished-wood look. Some have private balconies. The downstairs Vagabond restaurant serves quality Mughlai food.

Metropolis Tourist Home

HOTEL $$

(Map p82; ☎23561794; www.metropolistourist-home.com; 16345 Main Bazaar; r from ₹2000; ☎☎☎) A slightly haphazard but charac-

terful lobby gives way to rooms with mood lighting, shiny bedspreads and slightly tired decor. The rooftop restaurant (mains ₹300 to ₹1000), hung with plants, is a tranquil retreat.

☞ Connaught Place & Around

Sunny Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p68; ☎23312909; sunnyguesthouse1234@hotmail.com; 152 Scindia House, Connaught Lane; r ₹800, without bathroom ₹400-600; ☎Rajiv Chowk) Sunny Guest House is light on the pocket for the location, but this comes at a price - tiny, dingy rooms.

Prem Sagar Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p68; ☎23345263; www.prem sagarguesthouse.com; 1st fl, 11 P-Block, Connaught Place; s/d from ₹3520/4110; ☎☎; ☎Rajiv Chowk) A reliable, long-standing choice, with 12 snug rooms that aren't flash but are clean and relatively cheap for the location. There's a pot-plant-filled rear terrace, and internet in reception.

★ Imperial

HOTEL $$$

(Map p68; ☎23341234; www.theimperialindia.com; Janpath; r from ₹17,000; ☎☎☎☎; ☎Rajiv Chowk) The inimitable, Raj-era Imperial marries colonial classicism with gilded art deco. Rooms have high ceilings, flowing curtains, French linen and marble baths, and the hallways and atriums are lined with 18th- and 19th-century paintings and prints. The 1911 bar (p92) is highly recommended, and the Atrium cafe (p91) serves the perfect high tea.

Hotel Palace Heights

HOTEL $$$

(Map p68; ☎43582610; www.hotelpalaceheights.com; 26-28 D-Block; s/d ₹7150/8250; ☎☎☎; ☎Rajiv Chowk) This boutique hotel is cool enough to wear shades, offering Connaught Place's nicest rooms with gleaming white linen, black lampshades and caramel and amber tones. There's an excellent restaurant, Zāffrān (p89).

Hotel Alka

HOTEL $$$

(Map p68; ☎23344328; www.hotelalka.com; P-Block, Connaught Place; s/d from ₹3500/5500; ☎☎☎; ☎Rajiv Chowk) Hotel Alka has an old-fashioned charm, with lots of wooden furnishings. Rooms are small, but the pricier ones have some unique decor, including cheetah murals. There's a good pure veg (no onion or garlic) restaurant.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

DELHI'S LITTLE LHASA

Home to Delhi's refugee Tibetan population, Majnu-ka-Tila takes a little effort to get to, but it's good for the little Lhasa vibe, and a good alternative traveller hub if the hustle of Paharganj is not your scene. This mellow enclave is packed with travel agents, restaurants and glittering trinket vendors and centres on a square with two colourful temples. You'll rub shoulders with maroon-clad Buddhist monks, local Tibetans and rather a lot of beggars; however, the streets have a peaceful, safe, small-town vibe.

Friendly Wongdhen House (☎ 23816689; 2wongdhenhouse@gmail.com; 15-A New Tibetan Colony; r ₹700-750, without bathroom ₹450; 🏠) has simple, shabby, slightly overpriced rooms, and a good restaurant; next door Lhasa House (☎ 2393 9888, 2393 9777; lhasahouse@rediffmail.com; 16 New Aruna Nagar; r ₹350-550) is better value. Ama (H 40, New Aruna Nagar; snacks ₹20-95; ☀ 7am-9.30pm; 🍷) is a splendid cafe hang-out, and there's the gorgeous, fantastic-value Amala (☀ 9am-8.30pm) boutique downstairs, selling everything from prayer flags to felt toys. Two good restaurants are Tea Dee (32 New Aruna Nagar; dishes ₹60-200; ☀ 8.30am-10.30pm) and Dolma House (Block 10, New Tibetan Colony; dishes ₹40-100; ☀ 8.30am-10.30pm).

To get here, take the metro to Vidhan Sabha, then one of the plentiful cycle-/autorickshaws (₹20/40) to the enclave on KB Hedgewar Marg.

West Delhi

Master Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 28741089; www.master-guesthouse.com; R-500 New Rajendra Nagar; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3250/4250; 🏠 @ 🍷; 🚶 Rajendra Place) Around 5km west of Connaught Place, but a few minutes from Rajendra Place metro station, this smart and polished suburban home has three tastefully furnished rooms with spotless bathrooms. There's a leafy rooftop terrace.

Shanti Home

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 41573366; www.shantihome.com; A-1/300 Janakpuri; s/d incl breakfast from ₹5500/6500; 🏠 @ 🍷; 🚶 Uttam Nagar East) Deep in West Delhi, around 17km from Connaught Place, this delightful small hotel is close to the metro and offers beautifully decorated rooms that get gradually swisher the more you spend. There are spacious lounge areas, an excellent rooftop restaurant, a gym and a reasonably priced steam and ayurvedic massage service (₹1500/1800 for a 60-/90-minute facial).

New Delhi

Youth Hostel

HOSTEL $

(Map p72; ☎ 26116285; www.yhaindia.org; 5 Nyaya Marg, Chanakyapuri; dm/d ₹300/900, with AC ₹600/1612; 🏠 @ 🍷; 🚶 Udyog Bhawan) The dormitory here is a great deal if you're looking for somewhere quiet and cheap, but you'll get better rooms elsewhere at these prices.

The obligatory one-month temporary YHA membership costs ₹150.

★ Lodhi

HOTEL $$$

(Map p72; ☎ 43633333; www.thelodhi.com; Lodi Rd; r from ₹27,000; 🏠 @ 🍷; 🚶 JNL Stadium) Formerly the Aman, the Lodhi is one of Delhi's finest luxury hotels, with only 40 huge, lovely rooms and suites and acres of space. Each room has a balcony with private plunge pool, and those on the upper floors have great views, some over to Humayun's Tomb. Attention to detail is superb and the general managers greet everyone personally. There's also a top-notch spa.

Lutyens Bungalow

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(Map p72; ☎ 24611341; www.lutyensbungalow.co.in; 39 Prithviraj Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹5500/7000; 🏠 @ 🍷; 🚶 Racecourse) This great rambling house is an atmospheric green oasis, ideal if you're travelling with kids and perfectly located for exploring New Delhi. The garden is great – lawns, flowers and fluttering parrots – but rooms are a little stuffy and overpriced, though looking much better since recent renovations.

South Delhi

Moustache Hostel

HOSTEL $

(Map p76; www.facebook.com/moustachehostel; S25, GK1, M-Block Market Main Rd; dm ₹600, d ₹2500, incl breakfast; 🏠 @ 🍷; 🚶 Kailash Colony) This cheerful hostel has appealing, nicely kept small dorms, a few doubles decorated with bright prints, and a funky, welcoming vibe. It's a 15- to 20-minute walk from the metro. There's a book-lined common room and lots of local info. It's a great place to chat to other 20-something travellers.

Bed & Chai

HOSTEL $$$

(Map p76; www.bedandchai.com; R55 Hans Raj Gupta Marg; dm ₹850, d with/without bathroom from ₹3000/2200) This French-owned guesthouse has simple, stylish rooms, decorated with flashes of colour and lamps made out of teapots. There's a sparkling clean dorm as well, a roof terrace and, of course, excellent chai. The owners also run Bed & Chai Masala, which has cheaper dorm beds.

Treetops

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p76; ☎9899555704; baig.murad@gmail.com; R-8b Hauz Khas Enclave; s/d incl breakfast ₹3500/4000; ☎@☎; 🏠Hauz Khas) Cookery writer Tannie and journalist Murad have a gracious home and to stay here feels rather like visiting distant, upper-crust relatives. Treetops offers two large rooms opening onto a leafy rooftop terrace overlooking the park. Evening meals are available.

★Devna

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(Map p72; ☎41507176; www.tensundernagar.com; 10 Sunder Nagar; s/d ₹5700/6000; ☎@☎) Fronted by a pretty courtyard garden, and run with panache by the charming Atul and Devna, this is one of Delhi's prettiest guesthouses. The walls are lined with photos of maharajas and works of art (yes, those are original Jamini Roys) and the rooms are decked out with quirky antiques. The upstairs rooms front onto tiny terraces.

Manor

HOTEL $$$

(Map p76; ☎26925151; www.themanor-delhi.com; 77 Friends Colony West; d incl breakfast from ₹12,000; ☎@) A more intimate alternative to Delhi's five-star chains, this 16-room boutique hotel oozes privacy and elegance. Set amid lush lawns off Mathura Rd, the Manor offers the kind of designer touches normally found in the homes of Bollywood stars. There's a colonial air to the opulent rooms and the restaurant, Indian Accent (p91), is one of Delhi's finest.

Bnineteen

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(Map p72; ☎41825500; www.bnineteen.com; B-19 Nizamuddin East; s/d incl breakfast from ₹7500/9000; ☎@; 🏠JNL Stadium) Located in posh and peaceful Nizamuddin East, with views over Humayun's tomb from the rooftop, this gorgeous place is owned by architecs, and it shows. Rooms are modern and refined, and there is a state-of-the-art shared kitchen on each floor.

Scarlette

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(Map p76; ☎8826010278; www.scarlettenewdelhi.com; B2/139 Safdarjung Enclave; d ₹8000; ☎☎; 🏠Green Park) In a serene residential area, close to the Deer Park and Hauz Khas, Scarlette is a lovely boutique maison d'hotes (guesthouse) with just four rooms and a large sitting room filled with books and interesting objets. It's French-owned and popular with French speakers. A set menu dinner (rather pricey at ₹900 to ₹1200) is served nightly.

Rose

HOTEL $$$

(Map p76; ☎65680444; www.therosenedelhi.com; T40 Hauz Khas Village; s ₹3750-8000, d ₹4250-8750; ☎☎; 🏠Green Park) This is a stylish guesthouse set in one of Delhi's most bohemian districts (packed with bars and boutiques, and good for live music), which sits alongside monument-scattered parkland. It's worthwhile paying for the more expensive rooms, as the cheaper ones have windows opening only onto the walkway.

🚗 Airport Area & Beyond

Delhi's brand-new Aerocity area is a bland but convenient conglomeration of hotels, only 4km from the airport. It's served by the Delhi Aerocity metro stop. Take your pick from brands such as JW Marriott, Red Fox and Lemon Tree; the cheapest option is the Ibis, which also offers a free 24-hour shuttle

ESCAPE FROM DELHI

Tikli Bottom (www.tiklibottom.com; Manender Farm, Gairatpur Bas, Gurgaon; s/d full board ₹10,900/18,500) Less than 50km south of central Delhi, this peachy Lutyens-style bungalow surrounded by wooded hills is run by a British couple. The house and the owners seem to come from another era, one of toasted teacakes, lawns and chintz. There are four high-ceilinged guest rooms and spacious lounges, plus a beautiful pool overlooked by a pagoda and with hill views.

pick-up from either terminal. There are also a few choices in nearby Vasant Kunj.

There are also several options for sleeping at the airport, including Eaton Smart and SAMS sleeping pods; see www.newdelhiairport.in for details.

New Delhi Bed & Breakfast HOMESTAY $$
(Map p64; ☎ 26894812; www.newdelhibedandbreakfast.com; C8/8225 Vasant Kunj; s/d ₹3000/3500; 📍📞) A proper homestay: Renu Dayal is warm and welcoming and has two double rooms (one en suite) in her elegant house in a leafy enclave, only 10 minutes' drive from the airport.

Chhoti Haveli HOMESTAY $$
(Map p76; ☎ 26124880; www.chhotihaveli.com; A1006, Pocket A, Vasant Kunj; s/d ₹3500/4000; 📍📞📺; 🏠 Chhatarpur) Set in a block of low-rise apartments, in a quiet, leafy area near the airport, this well-kept place offers tastefully decorated rooms. Potted plants and scattered petals on the doorstep show a personal touch.

Eating

Delhi is a foodie paradise, and locals graze throughout the day, from the city's famous Dilli-ka-chaat (street-food snacks and salads) to indulgent feasts at Delhi's fine-dining restaurants.

Midrange and upmarket restaurants charge a service tax of around 10%; drinks taxes can suck a further 20% (alcoholic) or 12.5% (nonalcoholic) from your money belt. Many restaurants also levy a 10% service charge, in lieu of a tip. Taxes haven't been included here unless indicated.

Reservations may be required for popular and high-end restaurants.

Old Delhi

★ Karim's MUGHLAI $
(Map p64; Gali Kababyan; mains ₹45-460; ☎ 9am-12.30am; 🏠 Chawri Bazaar) Just off the lane leading south from the Jama Masjid, Karim's has been delighting carnivores since 1913. Expect meaty Mughlai treats such as mutton burrah (marinated chops), delicious mutton mughlai, and the breakfast mutton and bread combo nahari (₹125 half portion). There's a second branch in Nizamuddin West (Map p72; 168/2 Jha House Basti).

Gali Paratha Wali STREET FOOD $
(Map p64; Gali Paratha Wali; parathas ₹15-35; ☎ 7am-11pm; 🏠 Chandni Chowk) Head to this food-stall-lined lane off Chandni Chowk for delectable parathas (traditional flatbread) fresh off the tawa (hotplate). Choose from a spectacular array of stuffings, from green chilli and paneer to lemon and banana.

★ Jalebiwala SWEETS $
(Map p64; Dariba Corner, Chandni Chowk; jalebis per 100g ₹30; ☎ 8.30am-9.45pm; 🏠 Chandni Chowk) Century-old Jalebiwala does Delhi's – if not India's – finest jalebis (deep-fried, syrupy fried dough), so pig out and worry about the calories tomorrow.

Natraj Dahi Balle Wala STREET FOOD $
(Map p64; 1396 Chandni Chowk; plate ₹50; ☎ 10.30am-11pm; 🏠 Chandni Chowk) This hole-in-the-wall with the big red sign and the big crowds is famous for its dahi balle (fried lentil balls served with yoghurt and garnished with chutney) and deliciously crispy aloo tikki (spiced potato patties).

Jain Coffee House STREET FOOD $

Kake di Hatti INDIAN $
(Map p64; 654-655 Church Mission Rd; mains ₹40-130; ☎ 10am-11pm; 🏠 Chawri Bazaar) This long-standing dhaba (snack bar) has been open since 1942 and is famous for its huge, delicious, stuffed (with peas and cheese, chili, cheese and onions, and many other combos) naans and parathas, which you can eat with various types of fragrant dhal. Look out for the hordes of people and the Hindi sign in red.

Haldiram's FAST FOOD $
(Map p64; 1454/2 Chandni Chowk; mains ₹68-178; ☎ 10am-10.30pm; 🏠 Chandni Chowk) This clean, bright cafeteria cum sweet shop is a popular stop for its top-notch dosas (large South Indian savoury crepe), idli (South Indian spongy, round, fermented rice cake) and thalis, and it also sells delectable namkin (savories) and mithai (sweets) to eat on the hoof. There's a popular branch on Connaught Place (Map p68; 6 L-Block Connaught Place; ☎ 10am-10.30pm; 🏠 Rajiv Chowk).

Bikanervala FAST FOOD $
(Map p64; 382 Chandni Chowk; snacks ₹42-170; ☎ 8am-10.30pm; 🏠 Chandni Chowk) This bright little canteen offers tasty snacks such as paratha and channa bhatura (fried bread with chickpeas). There's a handy branch among the state emporiums on Baba Kharak Singh Marg (Map p68; ☐ Rajiv Chowk).

Ghantewala

SWEETS $

(Map p64; 1862A Chandni Chowk; mithai per 100g from ₹25; ☉ 8am-10pm; ☑ Chandni Chowk) Delhi's most famous sweetery, 'the bell ringer' has been churning out mithai (Indian sweets) since 1790. Try some sohan halwa (ghee-dipped gram flour biscuits).

Moti Mahal

MUGHLAI $$

(Map p64; ☑ 23273661; 3704 Netaji Subhash Marg; mains ₹170-540; ☉ 11am-midnight) The original, much-copied Moti Mahal has been open for six generations – the food is much more impressive than the faded surroundings. Delhiites rate the place for its superior butter chicken and dhal makhani. There's live qawwali (Islamic devotional singing) Wednesday to Monday (8pm to 11.30pm).

Al-Jawahar

MUGHLAI $$$

(Map p64; Matya Mahal; mains ₹100-275; ☉ 7am-midnight; ☑ Chawri Bazaar) South of the Jama Masjid, Al-Jawahar serves up tasty Mughlai cuisine at laminate tables in an orderly dining room, and you can watch breads being freshly made at the front. Kebabs and mutton curries dominate the menu, but it also does good butter chicken and korma.

Chor Bizarre

KASHMIRI $$$

(Map p64; ☑ 23273821; Hotel Broadway, 4/15 Asaf Ali Rd; mains ₹305-675; ☉ 7.30-10.30am, noon-3.30pm & 7.30-11.30pm; ☑ New Delhi) A dimly lit cavern filled with bric-a-brac, including a vintage car, Chor Bizarre (meaning 'thieves market') offers delicious and authentic Kashmiri cuisine, including wazwan (preparations of mutton and chicken), the traditional Kashmiri feast. It offers an old-town walking tour combined with lunch for ₹2500.

Paharganj & West Delhi

Paharganj's restaurants are a reflection of the globetrotting backpackers who eat here. As well as Indian staples, you'll find everything from banana pancakes to Israeli falafel...executed with varying degrees of success. There are more cheap eats in the bazaars at Karol Bagh.

★ Sita Ram Dewan Chand

INDIAN $

(Map p82; 2243 Chuna Mandi; half/full plate ₹25/45; ☉ 8am-6pm; ☑ Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) A family-run hole-in-the-wall, serving inexpensive portions of just one dish – chole bhature (spicy chickpeas), accompanied by delicious, freshly made, puffy, fried bread. It's a traditional breakfast but you can feast on it any time of day.

Brown Bread Bakery

ORGANIC $

(Map p82; Ajay Guesthouse, 5084-A, Main Bazaar; snacks ₹65-150; ☉ 7am-11pm; ☑; ☑ Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) With a rustic, wicker-heavy interior and a long menu of largely organic breads, cheeses, jams, soups, teas and more, the Brown Bread is a nice relaxing place to hang out among other travellers from all over the place. You can also buy ayurvedic products here.

Sonu Chat House

INDIAN $

(Map p82; 5045, 46 Main Bazaar; dishes ₹60-160; ☉ 8am-1am; ☑ Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) Perhaps Paharganj's most palatable dhaba (snack bar), this sunken small hive of activity is popular with foreign tourists and locals and serves up tasty thalis (from ₹70) and masala dosa (₹70).

Bikanervala Angan

FAST FOOD $

(82 Arya Samaj Rd, Karol Bagh; mains ₹80-170; ☉ 8am-midnight; ☑ Karol Bagh) From the Bikanervala stable, this small but buzzing Karol Bagh canteen is a useful pit stop for South Indian treats, fast food and snacks. Thalis start at ₹135.

Roshan di Kulfi

ICE CREAM $

(Ajmal Khan Rd, Karol Bagh; kulfi ₹70-80; ☉ 8.30am-9.30pm; ☑ Karol Bagh) A Karol Bagh institution for its scrumptious special pista badam kulfi (frozen milk dessert with pistachio, almond and cardamom). It's around 500m northeast of Karol Bagh metro.

★ Shimtur

KOREAN $$

(Map p82; 3rd fl, Navrang Guest House, Tooti Galli; meals ₹240-500; ☉ 10am-11pm; ☑ Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) It's a mini-adventure to find this place, off the main drag and on top of the Navrang Guest House. Follow the stairs up several floors and you'll find a neat little bamboo-lined rooftop. The Korean food is fresh, authentic and delicious. Try the bibimbap (rice bowl with a mix of vegetables, egg and pickles; ₹240).

Tadka

INDIAN $$

(Map p82; 4986 Ramdwara Rd; mains ₹140-160; ☺ 9am-10.30pm; 🍴 Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) Named for everyone's favourite dhal, Tadka serves up tasty paneer dishes and other veg treats (thalis ₹170) under whirring fans, to an appreciative clientele of vegetarians and meat-avoiders.

Malhotra

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p82; 1833 Laxmi Narayan St; mains ₹100-600; ☺ 7am-11pm; 🍴 Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) One street back from the Main Bazaar, Malhotra is smarter than most, with a good menu of set breakfasts, burgers, Indian and spirited attempts at continental dishes.

Cafe Fresh

CAFE $$

(Map p82; Laxmi Narayan St; dishes ₹100-200; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍴) This vegetarian cafe has reasonably good food and is an appealingly calm place to retreat (down a few steps) from the busy streets. Free wi-fi.

Metropolis Restaurant & Bar

MULTICUISINE $$

Connaught Place★ Hotel Saravana Bhavan

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Map p68; 15 P-Block, Connaught Place; mains ₹65-165; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) Delhi's best thali is served up in unassuming surroundings – a simple Tamil canteen on the edge of Connaught Place. There are queues every meal time to sample the splendid array of richly spiced veg curries, dips, breads and condiments that make it onto every thali plate. There's a second branch on Janpath (Map p68; 46 Janpath; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk).

Nizam's Kathi Kabab

FAST FOOD $

(Map p68; 5 H-Block, Connaught Place; kebabs ₹75-265; ☺ 11.30am-11pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) This takeaway eatery creates masterful kebabs, biryani and kati rolls (kebabs wrapped in a hot paratha). It's always busy with meat-loving hordes, but there are also paneer, mushroom and egg options available so vegetarians don't have to miss out.

Coffee Home

INDIAN $

(Map p68; Baba Kharak Singh Marg; meals ₹35-70; ☺ 11am-8pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) Popular with local workers, this has a lovely shady garden eating area, under the boughs of a peepal tree. It's always busy with locals feasting on South Indian snacks such as masala dosa (₹70), and is handily located next to the government emporiums.

Wenger's

BAKERY $

(Map p68; 16 A-Block, Connaught Place; snacks ₹30-90; ☺ 10.45am-7.45pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) Legendary Wenger's has a wonderfully stuck-in-time feel having been baking since 1926. Come for cakes, sandwiches, biscuits and savoury patties. Around the corner you can eat in at Wenger's Deli (Map p68), which has the most delicious milkshakes, including mango (₹90).

Sagar Ratna

SOUTH INDIAN $$

(The Ashok, 50 B, Diplomatic Enclave; dishes ₹240-345; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) Considered best of all the Sagar Ratna's around town, this venerable South Indian restaurant is always buzzing with families, couples and kitty parties, and does a great line in dosas, idlis, uttapams (savoury rice pancakes) and thalis. There are other branches in Connaught Place (Map p68; 15-K Block; dishes ₹100-250; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) and Defence Colony Market (Map p76; Defence Colony Market; 🍴 Lajpat Nagar).

Take-da-Hotel

MUGHLAI $$$

(Map p68; 📍 9136666820; 67 Municipal Market; mains ₹140-530; ☺ noon-11.30pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) This simple dhaba (snack bar) is a basic hole in the wall that's popular with local workers for its famous butter chicken (₹180) and other Mughlai Punjabi dishes.

★ Rajdhani

INDIAN $$$

(Map p68; 📍 43501200; 1/90 P-Block, Connaught Place; thalis ₹395, dinner & weekends ₹445; ☺ noon-4pm & 7-11pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) This pristine, nicely decorated two-level place serves up excellent-value food-of-the-gods vegetarian thalis with a fantastic array of Gujarati and Rajasthani dishes. It's the same, sumptuous thali daily.

Véda

INDIAN $$$

(Map p68; 📍 41513535; 27 H-Block, Connaught Place; mains ₹400-1300; ☺ 12.30-11.30pm; 🍴 Rajiv Chowk) Fashion designer Rohit Baal created Véda's sumptuous interior, making for Connaught Place's most dimly lit eatery, a dark boudoir with swirling neo-Murano chandeliers and shimmering mirror mosaics. The menu proffers tasty classic Mughlai dishes

(butter chicken, dhal makhani and the like) and they mix a mean Martini.

Swagath

SOUTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p72; ☎ 23366761; Janpath Hotel, Janpath; mains ₹195-1395; ☀ noon-11.45pm; 📶; 🚗 Patel Chowk) Serving supremely scrumptious Indian seafood (especially crab, prawns, lobster and fish), Swagath will take you on a culinary tour through the fishing villages of South India. There are several branches, including at Defence Colony Market (Map p76; ☀ noon-11.45pm; 🚗 Lajpat Nagar) and M Block Market (Map p76; ☀ noon-11.45pm).

Zäffrän

MUGHLAI $$$

(Map p68; ☎ 43582610; Hotel Palace Heights, 26-28 D-Block; mains ₹435-800; ☀ noon-3.30pm & 7pm-midnight) An excellent restaurant serving Mughlai cuisine, with a lovely, calm bamboo-shuttered, glass-covered terrace and plenty of light.

United Coffee House

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Map p68; ☎ 23416075; 15 E-Block, Connaught Place; mains ₹345-1000; ☀ noon-midnight; 🚗 Rajiv Chowk) Not a coffee shop, but an upscale, high-ceilinged, chandeliered restaurant, with an old-world dining room full of characters who look as elderly as the fixtures and fittings. The menu covers everything from butter chicken to English high tea. Serves alcohol (a pint of Kingfisher costs ₹225).

Zen

CHINESE $$$

(Map p68; ☎ 23357444; 25 B-Block, Connaught Place; mains ₹189-635; ☀ 11am-11pm; 🚗 Rajiv Chowk) A high-ceilinged place with walls quilted like a Chanel handbag, Zen offers a more authentic take on Chinese cuisine than most Delhi eateries. Look out for dishes such as claypot tofu and spicy shredded lamb among the familiar standards.

🍴 New Delhi & Around

To dine in style, head to Delhi's upmarket hotels or the posh enclaves around Khan Market, Lodi Rd and Mathura Rd. Shoppers at Khan Market, in particular, will be spoiled for choice.

Lodi Colony Kebab Stands

STREET FOOD $

(Map p72; Hazrat Nizam-ud-din Dargah; kebabs from ₹30; ☀ noon-11pm; 🚗 JLN Stadium) The alley in front of Hazrat Nizam-ud-din Dargah becomes a hive of activity every evening as devotees leave the shrine in search of sustenance. Canteen-style kebab houses cook up lip-smacking beef, mutton and chicken kebabs at bargain prices, with biryani and roti as filling side orders.

Andhra Pradesh Bhawan Canteen

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Map p72; 1 Ashoka Rd; breakfast ₹60, thalis ₹110; ☀ 7.30-10.30am, noon-3pm & 7.30-10pm; 🚗 Patel Chowk) A hallowed bargain, the canteen at the Andhra Pradesh state house serves cheap and delicious unlimited South Indian thalis to a seemingly unlimited stream of patrons. Come on Sunday for the Hyderabad biryani (₹180).

Nathu's

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Map p72; Sunder Nagar Market; dishes & snacks ₹60-100; ☀ 7am-11pm) A much-loved sweeterie serving up yummy chaat (Indian snacks), such as golgappas (crispy spheres with spicy filling, like eating a delicious water bomb), and filling 'mini meals'. Upstairs is Navvada's, with a broad menu of veg and nonveg Indian and Chinese treats.

Comesum

FAST FOOD $

(Map p72; Nizamuddin Train Station; dishes ₹180-300; ☀ 24hr) Fast food, from dosas to kadhai (metal pot) curries, served in double-quick time at all hours. There are branches at all the main train stations, but the biggest and best is at Nizamuddin.

★ Alkauser

STREET FOOD $$$

(Map p72; www.alkausermughlaifood.com; Kautilya Marg; kebabs from ₹130, biryani from ₹250; ☀ 6-10.30pm) The family behind this hole-in-the-wall takeaway earned their stripes cooking kebabs for the Nawabs of Lucknow in the 1890s. The house speciality is the kakori kebab, a pâté-smooth combination of lamb and spices, but other treats include biryani (cooked dum puhkt style in a handi pot sealed with pastry) and perfectly prepared lamb burra (marinated chops) and murg malai tikka (chicken marinated with spices and paneer). There are several branches, including one in the Safdarjand Enclave market (Map p76; ☀ 6-10.30pm; 🚗 AIIMS).

★ Sodabottleopenerwala

PARSI $$

(Map p72; Khan Market; dishes ₹125-500; ☀ 11am-11.15pm; 🚗 Khan Market) Suggesting a typical Parsi surname (taken from a trade), this place emulates the Iranian cafes of Mumbai and the food is authentic Persian. The upstairs terrace has a good deal more charm. The menu includes Iranian cakes and

'Bombay specials' including delicious kanda bhaji (crispy onion fritters).

Kitchen Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p72; ☎ 41757960; Khan Market; mains ₹400-600; ☀ 11am-11pm; 📍 Khan Market) A buzzing small cafe offering an informal alternative to the glam eateries. The menu trots from Italy (pasta) to Thailand (pad thai) to England (fish and chips).

Khan Chacha

FAST FOOD $$

(Map p72; Khan Market; snacks ₹170-240; ☀ noon-11pm; 📍 Khan Market) A simple eatery serving lip-smacking roti-wrapped mutton, chicken and paneer kebabs to a youthful crowd who appreciate the moderate prices and no-fuss attitude.

Mamagoto

ASIAN FUSION $$

(Map p72; ☎ 45166060; Middle Lane, Khan Market; mains ₹300-500; ☀ 12.30-11.30pm; 📍 Khan Market) The name means 'to play with food' in Japanese, and the kidult theme extends to the funky manga art on the walls. The eclectic menu spans Japan, China and Southeast Asia – including some authentically spicy hawker-style Thai food.

Amici

ITALIAN $$

(Map p72; ☎ 43587191; 47 Khan Market; pizzas ₹300-400; ☀ 11am-11pm; 📍 Khan Market) Calm and unpretentious, Amici actually pays some attention to the way they make pizzas in Italy. The pulled pork sandwich is also recommended.

★ Bukhara

INDIAN $$$

(Map p72; ☎ 26112233; ITC Maurya, Sadar Patel Marg; mains ₹750-2400; ☀ 12.30-2.45pm & 7-11.45pm) Widely considered Delhi's best restaurant, this glam hotel eatery serves Northwest Frontier-style cuisine at low tables, with delectable melt-in-the-mouth kebabs and its famous Bukhara dhal. Reservations are essential.

Dhaba

PUNJABI $$$

(Map p72; ☎ 39555000; The Claridges, 12 Aurangzeb Rd; dishes ₹425-1295; ☀ 12.30-2.30pm & 7-11.30pm; 📍 Racecourse) Set in the ritzy Claridges hotel, Dhaba is a fun and tasty choice, offering a posh take on Punjabi highway cuisine, including delicious dhal, bhajti (curry cooked in a small dish called a kadhai) and kulfi (frozen milk dessert with pistachio, almond and cardamom), in a room that looks like a Punjabi highway, with half a Tata truck on the wall and Bollywood hits on the stereo.

Lodi Garden Restaurant

MEDITERRANEAN $$$

(Map p72; ☎ 24652808; Lodi Rd; mains ₹400-1700; ☀ 12.30pm-12.45am; 📍 Jor Bagh) Set in a funky garden with lanterns dangling from the trees and tables in curtained pavilions and wooden carts, this is the most romantic dinner spot in New Delhi. Although not quite as impressive as the surroundings, the menu traverses Europe and the Middle East, and there's a popular Sunday brunch.

Pandara Market

INDIAN $$$

(Map p72; Pandara Rd; mains ₹365-700; ☀ noon-1am; 📍 Khan Market) Less a market than a strip of upmarket restaurants, this is a good option for night owls – some eateries here are open to 1am or later. Prices, standards and atmosphere are very similar along the strip. For quality Mughlai and North Indian food, try Gulati (mains ₹150-500; ☀ noon-1am), Havemore (mains ₹160-390; ☀ noon-2am), nicely made-over Pindi (mains ₹150-500; ☀ noon-midnight), or the surprisingly glitzy Chicken Inn (mains ₹150-500; ☀ noon-1am). For Indian-style Chinese and Thai food, head to Ichiban (mains ₹150-500; ☀ noon-12.30am).

South Delhi

South Delhi's best eateries are tucked away in the southern suburbs of Hauz Khas, Greater Kailash II, Saket, Vasant Vihar and further afield.

★ Coast

SOUTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p76; above Ogaan, Hauz Khas; set meals ₹340-440; ☀ noon-midnight; 📍 Green Park) A beautifully light, bright restaurant on several levels, with wonderful views over the parklands of Hauz Khas, Coast serves delicious, elegant cuisine, with light southern Indian dishes, such as avial (vegetable curry) with pumpkin erisheri (with black lentils) or European cuisine, such as salad with orange and walnuts.

Potbelly

BIHARI $$$

(Map p76; 116C Shahpur Jat Village; mains ₹190-350; ☀ 12.30-11pm; 📍 Hauz Khas) In the hip, boutique-filled urban village of Shahpur Jat: climb several flights of higgledy piggledy stairs to reach Potbelly, a rooftop cafe with good views and a lovely artsy mix of painted watering cans and cane furniture. The food is delicious – try the Bihari burger or keema goli (mutton meatballs).

Not Just Parathas

INDIAN $$$

(Map p76; 84 M-Block, Great Kailash II; dishes ₹90-625; ☺ noon-midnight) They don't just serve parathas (stuffed flatbread), they serve 120 types of parathas! Try them stuffed with kebabs, veg curries, shredded chicken and untold other fillings.

★ Indian Accent

INDIAN $$$

(Map p76; ☎ 26925151; Manor, 77 Friends Colony; tasting menu veg/nonveg ₹2595/2695) Overlooking lush lawns at the Manor hotel (p85), this exclusive restaurant serves inspired modern Indian cuisine. Familiar and unfamiliar ingredients are thrown together in surprising and beautifully creative combinations. The tasting menu is recommended, though its portions are remarkably small. But the food is delicious: sample delights such as cheeni ki roti (a hard bread stuffed with jaggery), and bacon-stuffed kulcha (soft-leavened Indian-style bread).

Olive

MEDITERRANEAN $$$

(Map p76; ☎ 29574443; One Style Mile, Mehrauli; dishes ₹450-1350; ☺ noon-midnight; 📍 Qutab Minar) Uberchic Olive with its uberchic clientele creates a little piece of the Mediterranean in the suburbs. The haveli setting, combined with beach-house colours, is unlike anywhere else in Delhi. Come for inventive Mediterranean dishes, such as scallops with mascarpone, quinoa, amaranth, pumpkin seeds and apricot-orange purée, and astoundingly good pizza.

Punjab Grill

MUGHLAI $$$

(Map p76; ☎ 41572977; Select Citywalk, Saket; mains ₹420-1200; ☺ 11am-11.30pm; 📍 Malviya Nagar) Don't be put off by the shopping-mall setting. This sleek eatery offers superior Mughlai food – kebabs, kadhai (metal pot) curries and unleavened breads – in classy surroundings. Take your pick from the gleaming dining room or the open-air terrace.

Drinking & Nightlife

Whether it's cappuccino and pastries for breakfast or beer and bites in the evening, Delhi has plenty of places to wet your whistle. For the latest places to go at night, check the hip and informative Little Black Book (www.littleblackbookdelhi.com) or Brown Paper Bag (<http://bpweekend.com/delhi>). For gigs, check Wild City (www.thewildcity.com).

Cafes

Chain coffee shops abound – Café Coffee Day is the most prolific, but there are also numerous branches of Costa and Barista.

★ Imperial

CAFE

Raise your pinkie finger! High tea at the Imperial (p83) is perhaps the most refined way to while away an afternoon in Delhi. Sip tea from bone-china cups and pluck dainty sandwiches and cakes from tiered stands, while discussing the latest goings-on in Shimla and Dalhousie. High tea is served in the Atrium from 3pm to 6pm daily (week-day/weekend ₹1100/1400 plus tax).

Café Turtle

CAFE

(Map p72; Full Circle Bookstore, Khan Market; ☺ 9.30am-9.30pm; 📍 Khan Market) Allied to the Full Circle Bookstore, this boho cafe ticks all the boxes when you're in the mood for coffee, cake and a calm reading space. There are branches in N-Block Market (Map p76; Greater Kailash Part I) and Nizamuddin East (Map p72).

Cha Bar

CAFE

(Map p68; Oxford Bookstore, N81 Connaught Place; ☺ 10am-9.30pm Mon-Sat, 11am-9.30pm Sun; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) Connaught Place's smart Oxford Bookstore contains the swish cafe Cha Bar, with more than 75 types of tea to choose from, as well as cakes and snacks, including a respectable fish and chips.

Kunzum Travel Cafe

CAFE

(Map p76; www.kunzum.com; T49 Hauz Khas Village; ☺ 11am-7.30pm Tue-Sun; 📍 Green Park) Run by the team of travel writers behind the informative Delhi 101 guidebook, Kunzum has a pay-what-you-like policy for the self-service French-press coffee and tea. There's free wi-fi and books and magazines to browse. They also run heritage walks.

Indian Coffee House

CAFE

(Map p68; 2nd fl, Mohan Singh Place, Baba Kharak Singh Marg; ☺ 9am-9pm; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) Stuck-in-time Indian Coffee House has lots of faded (to the point of dilapidation) charm. The roof terrace is a popular hang-out thanks to the staggeringly cheap menu of snacks (₹20 to ₹50) and it serves up South Indian coffee; there is a 'ladies and families' section.

Big Chill

CAFE

(Map p72; Khan Market; ☺ noon-11.30pm; 📍 Khan Market) There are two branches of this film-poster-lined cafe at Khan Market, packed with chattering Delhi-ites. The menu is a directory of continental and Indian dishes. There's a branch at the DLF Place mall (Map p76; M Malviya Nagar) in Saket.

Keventer's Milkshakes

CAFE

(Map p68; 17 A-Block, Connaught Place; milkshakes ₹50-80; ☺9am-11pm; MRajiv Chowk) If you want to find the best cheap treats, follow the teenagers. Keventer's has a cult following for its legendary milkshakes, slurped out of milk bottles on the pavement in front of the stand.

Bars

The nightlife scene in Delhi is fairly low-key, but a party mood prevails from Wednesday to Saturday, particularly in the bar-rammed enclave of Hauz Khas. There are also increasing numbers of bars in Paharganj.

A smart-casual dress code (no shorts, vests or flip-flops) applies at many places. Taxes can pack a nasty punch (alcoholic 20%, nonalcoholic 12.5%); they are not included here unless indicated. Most bars have two-for-one happy hours from around noon till 8pm.

★ Monkey Bar

BAR

(Map p68; P3 Connaught Circus; ☺noon-12.30pm; MRajiv Chowk) With exposed brick walls and piping, Monkey Bar is CP's coolest choice, with a friendly, buzzy vibe, and a '90s neo-industrial look. It's the kind of place the cast of Friends might have hung out, if they lived in Delhi. Try the excellent buffalo burgers with Gruyère, Gouda, whisky glaze, Bloody Mary tomatoes and umami ketchup and sample out-there cocktails (goat cheese as an ingredient?).

Hauz Khas Social

BAR

(Map p76; 9A & 12 Hauz Khas Village; MGreen Park) Enter down a muralled passageway and through an unsigned door, which opens onto several large rooms with plate-glass windows, overlooking Hauz Khas' lush park. There's a space for the local hipster clientele to work or have laid-back meetings, lots of room for cocktails (served in measuring jugs) and snacks, and a busy smokers' terrace. There's also regular live music and DJs.

★ 1911

BAR

(Map p68; Imperial Hotel, Janpath; cocktails ₹750-1200, beer from ₹400; ☺noon-12.45am; MRajiv Chowk) The elegant bar at the Imperial is the ultimate neocolonial extravagance. Sip perfectly prepared cocktails in front of murals of cavorting maharajas.

Barsoom

BAR

(Map p76; 3rd fl, 26 Hauz Khas Village; MGreen Park) Barsoom was the dying Mars created by American pulp fiction author Edgar Rice Burroughs, and this bar has a cool, extra-terrestrial vibe, with mid-century-modern-style furniture upholstered in funky Aztec prints, and delectable snacks on the menu. It's a good place to catch live music, with eclectic sounds such as psychedelic sitar from Al Cometo.

Aqua

BAR

(Map p68; Park Hotel, 15 Sansad Marg; ☺11am-midnight; MRajiv Chowk) If you feel the need for some five-star style after visiting Jantar Mantar or shopping in Connaught Place, Aqua is a good place to flop, forget the world outside, and sip cocktails by the pool.

My Bar

BAR

(Map p82; Main Bazaar, Paharganj; ☺10am-12.30pm; MRamakrishna Ashram Marg) A dark and dingy bar, this is lively, loud and fun, with a cheery, mixed crowd of backpackers and locals, who'll even come here from outside Paharganj. There are several other branches, in CP and Hauz Khas, but this is the one to go for.

Sam's Bar

BAR

(Map p82; Main Bazaar, Paharganj; ☺noon-midnight; MRamakrishna Ashram Marg) This sophisticated (for Paharganj) addition to the Vivek Hotel empire on the Main Bazaar is a good choice for a drink and a chat, with a mixed crowd of men and women, locals and foreigners. On the menu you'll find plentiful snacks and a choice of local (Kingfisher ₹100) or international beers or spirits. The best seats are by the plate-glass windows overlooking the street.

Gem

BAR

(Map p82; 1050 Main Bazaar, Paharganj; ☺9am-midnight; MRamakrishna Ashram Marg) This dark, wood-panelled dive is a good, if seedy place to hang out with locals and other travellers; bottles of local beer cost from ₹100. The upstairs area has more atmosphere.

★ Entertainment

To access Delhi's dynamic arts scene, check local listings. October and March is the 'season', with shows and concerts (often free) happening nightly.

Music & Cultural Performances

Blues

LIVE MUSIC

(Map p68; 18 N-Block, Connaught Place; ☀ noon-1am; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) A dark den with reasonably priced beers and random photos of rock stars on its brick walls. It's a lively, snob-free zone with a live band daily from 6.30pm.

Attic

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(Map p68; ☎ 23746050; www.theatticdelhi.org; 36 Regal Bldg, Sansad Marg; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) Small arts organisation set up to promote textiles and arts and crafts, with regular free or inexpensive exhibitions, music and dance lectures and workshops.

Habitat World

India International Centre

(Map p72; ☎ 24619431; www.iicdelhi.nic.in; 40 Max Mueller Marg; 📍 Khan Market) This cultural centre holds regular free exhibitions, talks and cultural performances.

Cinemas

Delite Cinema

CINEMA

(Map p64; ☎ 23272903; 4/1, Asaf Ali Rd; 📍 New Delhi) Founded in 1955, the Delite was renovated in 2006 but still has a resolutely old-school, grandiose feel. It's a great place to see a masala picture (full-throttle Bollywood, a mix of action, comedy, romance and drama), with famous extra-large samosas available in the interval.

Big Cinemas Odeon

CINEMA

PVR Plaza Cinema

CINEMA

(Map p68; www.pvrcinemas.com; H-Block, Connaught Place; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) Glossy chain cinema, screening the latest Bollywood releases as well as high-profile Hollywood imports. There are branches on Baba Kharak Singh

Shopping

Delhi is a fabulous place to shop, from its glittering, frenetic bazaars to its gleaming boutiques and amazing regional craft outlets. Away from government-run emporiums and other fixed-price shops, haggle like you mean it. Many taxi and autorickshaw drivers earn commissions (via your inflated purchase price) by taking travellers to dubious, overpriced places – don't fall for it.

Old Delhi

As well as the many shops and markets to explore, it's worth browsing the myriad music shops (Map p64; Netaji Subhash Marg; ☀ Mon-Sat) along Netaji Subhash Marg for sitars, tabla sets and other beautifully crafted Indian instruments.

Main Bazaar

HANDICRAFTS, CLOTHING

(Paharganj; ☀ 10am-9pm Tue-Sun; 📍 Ramakrishna Ashram Marg) The backpacker-oriented bazaar that runs through Paharganj is lined with shops and stalls selling everything from incense and hippy kaftans to religious stickers and cloth printing blocks. Haggle with purpose. The market is officially closed on Monday, but most stores stay open.

Aap Ki Pasand (San Cha)

(Map p64; www.sanchatea.com; 15 Netaji Subhash Marg; ☀ 9.30am-7pm Mon-Sat) An elegant tea shop selling a full range of Indian teas, from Darjeeling and Assam to Nilgiri and Kangra. You can try before you buy, and teas come lovingly packaged in drawstring bags. There's another branch Santushti Shopping Complex (Chanakyapuri, Racecourse Rd; ☀ 10am-6.30pm Mon-Sat; 📍 Racecourse).

Karol Bagh Market

MARKET

(Map p64; ☀ around 10am-7pm Tue-Sun; 📍 Karol Bagh) This brash middle-class market shimmers with all things sparkly, from dressy lehanga choli (skirt-and-blouse sets) to princess-style shoes, spices, fruit and nuts packed in shiny paper, and chrome motorcycle parts.

OLD DELHI'S BAZAARS

Old Delhi's bazaars are a head-spinning assault on the senses: an aromatic barrage of incense, spices, rickshaw fumes, body odour and worse, with a constant soundtrack of shouts, barks, music and car horns. This is less retail therapy, more heightened reality. The best time to come is midmorning, when you actually move through the streets.

Whole districts here are devoted to individual items. Chandni Chowk (Map p68; Old Delhi; ☀️10am-7pm Mon-Sat; 🚶 Chandni Chowk) is all clothing, electronics and break-as-soon-as-you-buy-them novelties. For silver jewellery, head for Dariba Kalan (Map p64), the alley near the Sisganj Gurdwara. Off this lane, the Kinari Bazaar (Map p64), literally 'trimmings market', is famous for zardozi (gold embroidery), temple trim and wedding turbans. Running south from the old Town Hall, Nai Sarak (Map p64) is lined with stalls selling saris, shawls, chiffon and lehanga (long skins with waist cords), while nearby Ballimaran (Map p64) has sequined slippers and fancy, curly-toed jootis.

Beside the Fatehpuri Masjid, on Khari Baoli, is the nose-numbing Spice Market (Gadodia Market; Map p64; Khari Baoli), ablaze with piles of scarlet-red chillies, ginger and turmeric roots, peppercorns, cumin, coriander seeds, cardamom, dried fruit and nuts. For gorgeous wrapping paper and wedding cards, head to Chawri Bazaar (Map p64), leading west from the Jama Masjid. For steel cooking pots and cheap-as-chapattis paper kites, continue northwest to Lal Kuan Main Bazaar (Map p64).

🛒 Connaught Place

★ State Emporiums HANDICRAFTS, CLOTHING
(Map p68; Baba Kharak Singh Marg; ☀️11am-7pm Mon-Sat; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) Nestling side by side are the treasure-filled official emporiums of the different Indian states. Shopping here is like taking a tour around India – top stops include Kashmir, for papier mâché and carpets; Rajasthan, for miniature paintings and puppets; Uttar Pradesh, for marble inlaywork; Karnataka, for sandalwood sculptures; Tamil Nadu, for metal statues; and Odisha (Orissa), for stone carvings.

★ Kamala HANDICRAFTS
(Map p68; Baba Kharak Singh Marg; ☀️10am-6.45pm Mon-Sat; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) Upscale crafts and curios, designed with real panache, from the Crafts Council of India.

Central Cottage Industries Emporium

HANDICRAFTS
(Map p68; 📞23326790; Janpath; ☀️10am-7pm; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) This government-run, fixed-price multilevel Aladdin's cave of India-wide handicrafts is a great place to browse. Prices are higher than in the state emporiums, but the selection of woodcarvings, jewellery, pottery, papier mâché, jootis (traditional slip-on shoes), brassware, textiles, beauty products and miniature paintings is superb.

Khadi Gramodyog Bhawan CLOTHING
(Map p68; Baba Kharak Singh Marg; ☀️10am-7.45pm Mon-Sat; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) 🍃 Known for its excellent khadi (homespun cloth), including good-value shawls, plus handmade paper, incense, spices, henna and lovely natural soaps.

Oxford Bookstore BOOKS
(Map p68; N81 Connaught Place; ☀️10am-9.30pm Mon-Sat, 11am-9.30pm Sun; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) The newly located CP Oxford Bookstore is a beautifully designed, swish bookshop where you could browse for hours, though staff are not as knowledgeable as at other Delhi bookshops. It also sells good gifts, such as handmade paper notebooks. The attached Cha Bar (p91) is a great meeting spot.

Janpath & Tibetan Markets HANDICRAFTS
(Map p68; Janpath; ☀️10.30am-7.30pm Mon-Sat; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) These twin markets sell the usual trinkets: shimmering mirrorwork embroidery, colourful shawls, Tibetan bric-a-brac, brass ornaments and dangly earrings. There are some good finds if you rummage through the junk. Haggle hard.

The Shop CLOTHING, HOMEWARES
(Map p68; 10 Regal Bldg, Sansad Marg; ☀️10am-7.30pm Mon-Sat; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk) Lovely homewares and clothes (including children's clothes) from all over India in a chic boutique with fixed prices.

People Tree

HANDICRAFTS, CLOTHING

(Map p68; Regal Bldg, Sansad Marg; ☀️ 10.30am-7pm Mon-Sat; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) 🌿 Teeny tiny fair-trade vendors People Tree sells cool T-shirts with funky Indian designs and urban attitude, as well as bags, jewellery and books. There's a branch in Hauz Khas village (Map p76; 📍 Hauz Khas).

Fabindia

CLOTHING, HOMEWARES

Godin Music

MUSIC

(Map p68; Regal Bldg, Sansad Marg; ☀️ 11am-8pm; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) Fine musical instruments, from guitars to sitars, displayed in a modern showroom, though Godin has been going since 1940 and was once the tuner for Mountbatten's pianos.

M Ram & Sons

CLOTHING

(Map p68; 📞 23416558; 21 E-Block, Connaught Place; ☀️ 10.30am-8pm; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) A popular Delhi tailor, offering suits from ₹8000 (including material).

Marques & Co

MUSIC

(Map p68; 14 G-Block, Connaught Place; ☀️ noon-5pm Mon-Sat; 📍 Rajiv Chowk) This vintage music shop (since 1918) sells guitars, tabla sets, harmonicas and sheet music, in stuck-in-time glass cabinets.

New Delhi*★Khan Market

MARKET

(Map p72; ☀️ around 10.30am-8pm Mon-Sat; 📍 Khan Market) 🌿 Favoured by expats and Delhi's elite, Khan Market's boutiques focus on fashion, books and homewares. For handmade paper, check out Anand Stationers, or try Mehra Bros for cool papier-mâché ornaments and Christmas decorations. Literature lovers should head to Full Circle Bookstore and Bahrison (www.booksatbahri.com). For ethnic-inspired fashions and homeware, hit Fabindia, Anokhi and Good Earth, and for elegantly packaged ayurvedic remedies, browse Kama.

Good Earth

HOMEWARES

(Map p72; www.goodearth.in; 9 ABC Khan Market; ☀️ 11.30am-8.30pm; 📍 Khan Market) Stuck for ideas for how to fill your designer apartment? Look no further than Good Earth, Delhi's most chichi homewares store. The see-and-be-seen Latitude 28° cafe is upstairs. There are branches at the Santushti Shopping Complex (Map p72; 📍 Racecourse) and Select Citywalk (Map p76; Saket; 📍 Malviya Nagar).

Full Circle Bookstore

BOOKS

(Map p72; www.fullcirclebooks.in; 23 Khan Market; ☀️ 9.30am-9.30pm; 📍 Khan Market) Delhi's most welcoming bookstore, with racks of specialist books on the city, plus novels and kids' books. Relaxing Café Turtle is upstairs. There are branches at N-Block Market (p96; 📍 Kailash Colony) and Nizamuddin East (Map p72; 📍 JLN Stadium).

Meher Chand Market

BOUTIQUES

(Map p72; Lodhi Colony; 📍 JLN Stadium) This enclave has recently emerged as a hot place to shop, with independent shops selling homewares and clothes; it's a particularly good place to pick up beautifully designed childrenswear. To eat, try chic Chez Nini (79-80, Meher Chand Market).

Anokhi

CLOTHING

(Map p72; www.anokhi.com; 32 Khan Market; ☀️ 10am-8pm; 📍 Khan Market) Anokhi specialises in blockprint clothes and homewares, showcasing traditional designs that have a modern design sensibility. There are branches at the Santushti Shopping Complex (Map p72; ☀️ 10am-7pm Mon-Sat; 📍 Racecourse), N Block Market (Map p76; Greater Kailash I; ☀️ 10am-8pm; 📍 Kailash Colony) and a discount store in Nizamuddin East (Map p72; ☀️ 10am-8pm Mon-Sat; 📍 JLN Stadium).

DARYAGANJ SUNDAY BOOK MARKET

Daryaganj Kitab Bazaar (Book Market; Map p64; ☀️ 8am-6pm Sun) It's wonderful rummaging for gems here, from first editions to Mills and Boon, many at rock-bottom prices. It takes place for around 2km from Delhi Gate, northwards to the Red Fort, and a short distance west along Jawaharlal Nehru Marg.

i Information

DANGERS & ANNOYANCES

Shop & Hotel Touts Taxi-wallahs at the international airport and around tourist areas frequently act as touts for hotels, claiming that your chosen hotel is full, poor value, over-booked, dangerous, burned down or closed, or that there are riots in Delhi, as part of a ruse to steer you to a hotel where they will get a commission. Insist on being taken to where you want to go – making a show of writing down the registration plate number and phoning the autorickshaw/taxi helpline may help. Drivers and men who approach you at Connaught Place run a similar scam for private souvenir emporiums and tourist agents.

Travel Agent Touts Many travel agencies in Delhi claim to be tourist offices, even branding themselves with official tourist agency logos. There is only one tourist office – at 88 Janpath – and any other 'tourist office' is just a travel agency. Should you legitimately need the services of a travel agent, ask for a list of recommended agents from the bona-fide tourist office. Be wary of booking a multistop trip out of Delhi, particularly to Kashmir. Travellers are often hit for extra charges, or find out the class of travel and accommodation is less than they paid for.

Train Station Touts Touts (often dressed in official-looking uniform) at New Delhi train station endeavour to steer travellers away from the legitimate International Tourist Bureau (p100) and into private travel agencies where they earn a commission. An increasing problem is touts telling people that their tickets are invalid or that there's a problem with the trains, then helpfully assisting them in booking expensive alternative taxis or 3rd-class tickets passed off as something else. As a rule of thumb: don't believe anyone who approaches you trying to tell you anything at the train station.

INTERNET ACCESS

Most hotels offer free wi-fi access these days. At cafes offering free access, you'll probably have to show ID.

MEDIA

To check out what's on, see Little Black Book (www.littleblackbookdelhi.com) or Brown Paper Bag (www.bpbweekend.com/delhi). For printed listings see the weekly calendar pamphlet Delhi Diary (₹30), which is available at local bookshops.

MEDICAL SERVICES

Pharmacies are found on most shopping streets and in most suburban markets.

Getting There & Away

AIR

Indira Gandhi International Airport is about 14km southwest of the centre. International and domestic flights use the gleaming new Terminal 3. Ageing Terminal 1 is reserved for low-cost carriers. Free shuttle buses (present your boarding pass and onward ticket) run between the two terminals every 20 minutes, but can take an hour or more. Leave at least three hours between transfers to be safe.

The arrivals hall at Terminal 3 has 24-hour forex, ATMs, prepaid taxi and car-hire counters, tourist information, bookshops, cafes and a Premium Lounge (☎ 61233922; 3hr s/d ₹2350/3520) with short-stay rooms.

You'll need to show your boarding pass to enter the terminal. At check-in, be sure to collect tags for all your carry-on bags and ensure these are stamped as you go through security.

Delhi's airport can be prone to thick fog in December and January (often disrupting airline schedules) – it's wise to allow a day between connecting flights during this period.

BUS

Most travellers enter and leave Delhi by train, but buses are a useful option to some destinations and if the trains are booked up.

Most state-run services leave from the Kashmere Gate Inter State Bus Terminal (ISBT; Map p64; ☎23860290) in Old Delhi, accessible by metro. The ISBT has undergone major renovations over the last few years, which makes travelling from here an altogether more pleasant experience, with sales and information offices for the bus companies as you enter the terminal building. The Anand Vihar Inter State Bus Terminal (ISBT) has some services to Nainital and Kumaun in Uttarakhand. Some cheaper buses to destinations in Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh and Rajasthan leave from the Sarai Kale Khan ISBT on the ring road near Nizamuddin train station.

Arrive at least 30 minutes ahead of your departure time. You can avoid the hassle by paying a little more for private deluxe buses that leave from locations in central Delhi – enquire at travel agencies or your hotel for details. You can also book tickets or check information on Cleartrip (www.cleartrip.com), Make My Trip (www.makemytrip.com) or Goibibo (www.goibibo.com).

There are buses to Agra, but considering the traffic at either end, you're better off taking the train. Himachal Pradesh Tourism Development Corporation (HPTDC; Map p72) runs a bus from Himachal Bhawan on Sikandra Rd (near Mandi House) to Dharamsala (deluxe non-AC, ₹700, 12 hours) at 5.30pm, Shimla (Volvo AC; ₹900, nine hours) at 8.30pm and Manali (Volvo AC, ₹1300, 10 hours) at 6.30pm. Tickets are sold at Himachal Bhawan and Chanderlok House (Map p68; 36 Janpath; 🚶 Rajiv Chowk).

HRTC (Himachal Road Transport Corporation) also has buses starting from Himachal Bhawan: Shimla (Volvo, ₹847, five daily) and one to Manali at 7pm (Volvo; ₹1305). These stop at the ISBT Kashmiri Gate 30 to 90 minutes later, from where it's ₹20 less.

Rajasthan Tourism (Map p72; ☎23381884; www.rtdc.com; Bikaner House, Pandara Rd) runs deluxe buses from Bikaner House, near India Gate, to the following destinations. (Women receive a discount of 30%):

Ajmer Volvo, ₹1092, nine hours, three daily
Jaipur super deluxe/Volvo ₹590/815, six hours, every one to two hours

Jodhpur super deluxe/Volvo ₹815/1490, 11 hours, two daily

Udaipur Volvo, ₹1625, 15 hours, one daily

State bus companies operating out of Delhi include the following:

Delhi Transport Corporation (Map p68; ☎23370210; www.dtc.nic.in)

Haryana Roadways (☎23868271; www.hartrans.gov.in) 10 or more computer terminals – don't be fooled by other 'official' offices.

When making reservations here, you can pay in cash (rupees) only. Bring your passport.

When you arrive, take a ticket from the machine that gives you a place in the queue. Then complete a reservation form – ask at the information counter to check availability. You can then wait to complete and pay for your booking at the relevant counter. This is the best place to get last-minute bookings for quota seats to popular destinations, but come prepared to queue.

If you prefer to brave the standard reservation office, check the details for your journey (including the train number) in advance on the Indian Railways (www.indianrail.gov.in) website or Erail (www.erail.in), or in the publication Trains at a Glance (₹45), available at newsstands. You'll need to fill out a reservation form and queue – after 7pm is the quietest time to book.

i Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

International flights often arrive at ghastly hours, so it pays to book a hotel in advance and notify staff of your arrival time. Organised city transport runs to/from Terminal 3; a free shuttle bus runs every 20 minutes between Terminal 3 and Terminal 1.

Pre-arranged pick-ups Hotels offer pre-arranged airport pick-up, but you'll pay extra to cover the airport parking fee (up to ₹140) and ₹80 charge to enter the arrivals hall. To avoid the entry fee, drivers may wait outside Gates 4 to 6.

Metro The Airport Express line (www.delhi-metrorail.com) runs every 10 to 15 minutes from 4.45am to 11.30pm, completing the journey from Terminal 3 to New Delhi train station in around 40 minutes (₹80 to ₹60); there are plans to reduce this journey time. It's usually empty because it's a separate line from the rest of the metro. You can buy a token for the other lines at the Airport station; check with customer services.

Bus Air-conditioned buses run from outside Terminal 3 to Kashmere Gate ISBT every 20 minutes, via the Red Fort, LNJP Hospital, New Delhi Station Gate 2, Connaught Place, Parliament St and Ashoka Rd (₹75).

Taxi In front of the arrivals buildings at Terminal 3 and Terminal 1 are Delhi Traffic Police Prepaid Taxi Counters (☎ 23010101; www.delhitrafficpolice.nic.in) offering fixed-price taxi services. You'll pay about ₹350 to New or Old Delhi, and ₹450 to the southern suburbs, plus a 25% surcharge between 11pm and 5am. Travellers have reported difficulty in persuading drivers to go to their intended destination. Insist that the driver takes you to your chosen destination and only surrender your voucher when you arrive.

You can also book a prepaid taxi at the Megacabs (p102) counter outside the arrivals building at both the international and domestic terminals. It costs ₹600 to ₹700 to the centre, but you get a cleaner car with air-con.

AUTORICKSHAW & TAXI

Local taxis (recognisable by their black and yellow livery) and autorickshaws have meters but these are effectively ornamental as most drivers refuse to use them. Delhi Traffic Police runs a network of prepaid autorickshaw booths, where you can pay a fixed fare, including 24-hour stands at the New Delhi, Old Delhi and Nizamuddin train stations; elsewhere, you'll need to negotiate a fare before you set off.

Fares are invariably elevated for foreigners so haggle hard, and if the fare sounds too outrageous, find another cab. For an autorickshaw ride from Connaught Place, fares should be around ₹40 to Paharganj, ₹60 to the Red Fort, ₹70 to Humayun's Tomb and ₹100 to Hauz Khas. However, it may be a struggle to get these prices. Visit www.taxiautofare.com for suggested fares for these and other journeys. To report overcharging, harassment or other problems take the license number and call the Auto Complaint Line on ☎ 42400400/25844444.

Taxis typically charge twice the autorickshaw fare. Note that fares vary as fuel prices go up and down. From 11pm to 5am there's a 25% surcharge for autorickshaws and taxis. The government has proposed to install microchips to track local taxis to make them safer.

CAR

Numerous operators will rent a car with driver, or you can negotiate directly with taxi drivers at taxi stands around the city. Note that some taxis can only operate inside the city limits, or in certain surrounding states. For a day of local sightseeing, there is normally an eight-hour, 80km limit – anything over this costs extra.

Kumar Tourist Taxi Service (Map p68; ☎ 23415930; www.kumarindiatours.com; 14/1 K-Block, Connaught Place; ☀ 9am-9pm; 🚗 Rajiv Chowk) Rates are among Delhi's lowest – a day of Delhi sightseeing costs from ₹1200 (the eight hours and 80km limit applies).

Metropole Tourist Service (Map p72; ☎ 24310313; www.metrovista.co.in; 224 Defence Colony Flyover Market; ☀ 7am-7pm; 🚗 Jangpura) Under the Defence Flyover Bridge (on the Jangpura side).

BICYCLE

DelhiByCycle (p80) offers cycle tours but bike hire has never taken off in traffic-snarled Delhi.

Jhandewalan Cycle Market (Map p64) To buy your own bike, head to the Jhandewalan Cycle Market, near Videocon Tower at Jhandewalan.

BUS

With the arrival of the metro, travellers rarely use Delhi's public buses, but the red air-con buses are comfortable and there are several useful routes, including the Airport Express bus (₹75) and bus GL-23, which connects the Kashmere Gate and Anand Vihar bus stations. Fares usually range from ₹15 to ₹25.

CYCLE-RICKSHAW

Cycle-rickshaws are useful for navigating Old Delhi and the suburbs, but are banned from many parts of New Delhi, including Connaught Place. Negotiate a fare before you set off – expect to pay around ₹5 to ₹10 per kilometre.

METRO

Delhi's magnificent metro (☎ 23417910; www.delhimetrorail.com) is fast and efficient, with signs and arrival/departure announcements in Hindi and English. Trains run from around 6am to 11pm and the first carriage in the direction of travel is reserved for women only. Note that trains can get insanely busy at peak commuting times (around 9am to 10am and 5pm to 6pm) – avoid travelling with luggage during rush hour if at all possible (however, the Airport Express is always empty, as it's not directly connected to the other lines).

Tokens (₹8 to ₹39) are sold at metro stations. There are also one-/three-day (₹150/300; ₹50 refundable when you return it) 'tourist cards' for unlimited short-distance travel, and a Smart Card (₹100; ₹50 refundable), which can be recharged for amounts from ₹200 to ₹1000 – making fares 10% cheaper than paying by token.

Because of security concerns, all bags are X-rayed and passengers must pass through an airport-style scanner.

MOTORCYCLE

Karol Bagh market is the place to go to buy or rent a motorcycle.

Lalli Motorbike Exports (Map p64; ☎ 28750869; www.lallisinhg.com; 1740-A/55 Hari Singh Nalwa St, Abdul Aziz Rd; 📍 Karol Bagh) Run by the knowledgeable Lalli Singh, this place sells and rents out Enfields and parts, and buyers get a crash course in running and maintaining these lovable but temperamental machines.

RADIOCAB

You'll need a local mobile number to order a radiocab, or ask a shop or hotel to assist. These air-conditioned cars are clean, efficient and use reliable meters, charging ₹20 at flagfall then ₹20 per kilometre.

Other telephone taxi services exist, such as car-sharing service Uber, which was banned in 2014 following an assault by one of its drivers but subsequently restarted.

Easycabs (☎ 43434343; www.easycabs.com)

Megacabs (☎ 41414141; www.megacabs.com)

You can book a prepaid taxi at the Megacabs counter outside the arrivals building at both the international and domestic airport terminals. It costs ₹600 to ₹700 to the centre, but you get a cleaner car with air-con.

Quickcabs (☎ 45333333; www.quickcabs.in)

Greater Delhi*★ Qutb Minar Complex

HISTORIC SITE

(Map p76; ☎ 26643856; Indian/foreigner ₹10/250, video ₹25, Decorative Light Show Indian/foreigner ₹20/250, audio guide ₹100; 🌅 dawn-dusk; 📍 Qutab Minar) In a city awash with ancient ruins, the Qutb Minar complex is something special. The first monuments here were erected by the sultans of Mehrauli, and subsequent rulers expanded on their work, hiring the finest craftsmen and artisans to create an exclamation mark in stone to record the triumph of Muslim rule. The Qutb Festival of Indian classical music and dance takes place here every November/December. To reach the complex, take the metro to Qutab Minar station, then take an autorickshaw for the 1km to the ruins.

The complex is studded with ruined tombs and monuments. Ala-ud-din's sprawling madrasa (Islamic school) and tomb stand in ruins at the rear of the complex, while Altamish is entombed in a magnificent sandstone and marble mausoleum almost completely covered in Islamic calligraphy.

Bags should be left in the cloakroom. For the most atmosphere, try to visit in the morning before the crowds arrive.

➔ Qutb Minar

The Qutb Minar complex is dominated by the spectacular Qutb Minar, a soaring Afghan-style victory tower and minaret, erected by sultan Qutb-ud-din in 1193 to proclaim his supremacy over the vanquished Hindu rulers of Qila Rai Pithora. Ringed by intricately carved standstone bands bearing verses from the Quran, the tower stands nearly 73m high and tapers from a 15m-diameter base to a mere 2.5m at the top. You can no longer climb the tower for safety reasons, but a webcam allows a view from the top (₹10).

The tower has five distinct storeys with projecting balconies, but Qutb-ud-din only completed the first level before being unfortunately impaled on his saddle while playing polo. His successors completed the job, and kept up the work of restoration and maintenance through the centuries.

➔ Quwwat-ul-Islam Masjid

(Might of Islam Mosque) At the foot of the Qutb Minar stands the first mosque to be built in India, intended to be a physical symbol of the triumph of Islam. An inscription over the east gate states that it was built with materials obtained from demolishing '27 idolatrous temples'. As well as intricate carvings that show a clear fusion of Islamic and pre-Islamic styles, the walls of the mosque are studded with sun disks, shikharas and other recognisable pieces of Hindu and Jain masonry, defaced as far as possible.

Altamish, Qutb-ud-din's son-in-law, expanded the original mosque with a cloistered court between 1210 and 1220, and Ala-ud-din added the exquisite marble and sandstone Alai Darwaza gatehouse in 1310. Nearby is the dainty tomb of the Turkic saint Imam Zamin, erected in the Lodi era.

➔ Iron Pillar

Standing in the courtyard of the Quwwat-ul-Islam mosque is a 7m-high iron pillar that is of such purity that it hasn't rusted in over 1600 years. This extraordinary pillar vastly predates the surrounding monuments. A six-line Sanskrit inscription indicates that it was initially erected outside a Vishnu temple, possibly in Bihar, in memory of Chandragupta II, who ruled from AD 375 to 413. What the inscription does not tell is how it was made – scientists have never discovered how the iron could be cast using the technology of the time.

➔ Alai Minar

When the Sultan Ala-ud-din made additions to the Qutb Minar complex in the 14th century, he also conceived an ambitious plan to erect a second tower of victory, exactly like the Qutb Minar – but twice as high. Construction got as far as the first level before the sultan died; none of his successors saw fit to bankroll this extravagant piece of showboating. The 27m-high plinth can be seen just north of the Qutb Minar.

★ Mehrauli Archaeological Park PARK
(Map p76; ☀ dawn-dusk; 🚶 Qutab Minar) Bordering the Qutb Minar complex, but overlooked by most of the tourist hordes, the Mehrauli

Archaeological Park preserves some of the most atmospheric relics of the second city of Delhi.

Scattered around a forest park are the ruins of dozens of tombs, palace buildings and colonial-era follies. You can reach the park by turning right from the metro station onto Anuvrat Marg and walking around 500m; the entrance is via a small lane on your left, marked by a board showing the park regulations.

Entering the park from here, the first monuments you'll see are the time-ravaged tombs of Balban and Quli Khan, his son, which formerly incorporated a mosque. A short walk away is Mehrauli's most impressive structure, the Jamali Khamali mosque, attached to the tomb of the Sufi poet Jamali. Ask the caretaker to open the doors so you can see the intricate incised plaster ceiling decorated with Jamali's verses. To the west is the Rajon ki Baoli, a majestic 16th-century step-well with a monumental flight of steps. If you walk from here towards Mehrauli village, on the edge of the street is Adham Khan's mausoleum, which was once used as a British residence, then later as a police station and post office.

Southwest of the archaeological park is a complex of ruined tombs and summer palaces, constructed in the late Mughal period around the Haus i Shamsi tank (off Mehrauli-Gurgaon Rd). An empty space between two of the tombs was intended for the last king of Delhi, Bahadur Shah Zafar, who died in exile in Burma (Myanmar) in 1862.

Tughlaqabad

FORT
(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀ 8.30am-5.30pm; 🚶 Tughlaqabad) This mammoth stronghold, the third city of Delhi, was built by sultan Ghiyus-ud-din Tughlaq in the 14th century. For its construction, the king poached workers from the Sufi saint Nizam-ud-din, who issued a curse that Tughlaqabad would be inhabited only by shepherds. This was indeed the case – today goats are as common as human visitors among the crumbling, vegetation-choked, but still magnificent ruins. To reach the fort, take an autorickshaw from the Tughlaqabad metro station (₹80).

The sultan's well-preserved sandstone mausoleum, which once stood in the middle of a lake, is separated from his fallen city by a busy highway.

Why Go?

It is said there is more history in Rajasthan than in the rest of India put together. Welcome to the Land of the Kings – a fabled realm of maharajas, majestic forts and lavish palaces. India is littered with splendid ruined bastions, but nowhere will you find fortresses quite as magnificent as those in Rajasthan, rising up imperiously from the desert landscape like fairy-tale mirages from a bygone era.

As enchanting as they are, though, there is more to this most royal of regions than its architectural wonders. This is also a land of sand dunes and jungle, of camel trains and wild tigers, of glittering jewels, vivid colours and vibrant culture. There are enough festivals here to fill a calendar (and an artist's palette), while the shopping and cuisine are nothing short of spectacular. In truth, Rajasthan just about has it all – it is the must-see state of this must-see country, brimming with startling, thought-provoking and, ultimately, unforgettable attractions.

When to Go

Jaipur

Oct Ranthambhore and Sariska National Parks reopen for tiger safaris.

Oct & Nov Don't miss the frenzy of Pushkar's famous Camel Festival.

Mar Jaipur's famous Elephant Festival precedes the typically boisterous Holi celebrations

History

Rajasthan is home to the Rajputs, warrior clans who claim to originate from the sun, moon and fire, and who have controlled this part of India for more than 1000 years. While they forged marriages of convenience and temporary alliances, pride and independence were always paramount; consequently, much of their energy was spent squabbling among themselves. The resultant weakness eventually led to the Rajputs becoming vassals of the Mughal empire.

Nevertheless, the Rajputs' bravery and sense of honour were unparalleled. Rajput warriors would fight against all odds and, when no hope was left, chivalry demanded jauhar (ritual mass suicide). The men donned saffron robes and rode out to face the enemy (and certain death), while the women and children perished in the flames of a funeral pyre. It's not surprising that Mughal emperors had such difficulty controlling this part of their empire.

With the Mughal empire declining, the Rajputs gradually clawed back independence – at least until the British arrived. As the British Raj inexorably expanded, most Rajput states allied with the British, which allowed them to continue as independent states, subject to certain political and economic constraints.

These alliances proved to be the beginning of the end for the Rajput rulers. Consumption took over from chivalry so that, by the early 20th century, many of the maharajas spent much of their time travelling the world with scores of retainers, playing polo and occupying entire floors of expensive hotels. While it suited the British to indulge them, the maharajas' profligacy was economically and socially detrimental. When India gained its independence, Rajasthan had one of the subcontinent's lowest rates of life expectancy and literacy.

At Independence, India's ruling Congress Party was forced to make a deal with the nominally independent Rajput states to secure their agreement to join the new India. The rulers were allowed to keep their titles and their property holdings, and they were paid an annual stipend commensurate with their status. It couldn't last forever, though, and in the early 1970s Indira Gandhi abolished the titles and the stipends, and severely sequestered rulers' property rights.

In their absence Rajasthan has made some headway, but the state remains poor. The strength of tradition means that women have a particularly tough time in rural areas. Literacy stood at 67% in 2011 (males 81%, females 53% – a massive rise from 18% in 1961 and 39% in 1991), the third-lowest in India, while the gender gap remains India's widest.

EASTERN RAJASTHAN

Jaipur

☑ 0141 / POP 3.07 MILLION / AREA 65 SQ KM

Jaipur, Rajasthan's capital, is an enthralling historical city and the gateway to India's most flamboyant state.

The city's colourful, chaotic streets ebb and flow with a heady brew of old and new. Careering buses dodge dawdling camels, leisurely cycle-rickshaws frustrate swarms of motorbikes, and everywhere buzzing autorickshaws watch for easy prey. In the midst of this mayhem, the splendours of Jaipur's majestic past are islands of relative calm, evoking a different pace and another world. At the city's heart, the City Palace continues to house the former royal family; the Jantar Mantar (the royal observatory) maintains a heavenly aspect; and the honeycomb Hawa Mahal gazes on the bazaar below. And just out of sight, in the arid hill country surrounding the city, is the fairy-tale grandeur of Amber Fort, Jaipur's star attraction.

History

Jaipur is named after its founder, the great warrior-astronomer Jai Singh II (1688–1744), who came to power at age 11 after the death of his father, Maharaja Bishan Singh. Jai Singh could trace his lineage back to the Rajput clan of Kachhwahas, who consolidated their power in the 12th century. Their capital was at Amber (pronounced 'am-er'), about 11km northeast of present-day Jaipur, where they built the impressive Amber Fort.

Rajasthan Highlights

- 4 Take in the views of the Blue City from the imposing ramparts of Mehrangarh (p173), Jodhpur's mighty fortress
- 5 Look for royalty in the grand City Palace in Udaipur (p150), before enjoying a romantic sunset over gorgeous Lake Pichola
- 6 Shop till you drop in the bazaars of Jaipur, the Pink City (p109), and explore its marvellous Amber Fort
- 7 Get away from the tourist hustle in the ancient fort-town of Bundi (p142)
- 8 Uncover the architectural gems of Shekhawati (p167), with its many brightly-frescoed havelis (ornate traditional buildings)

Jaipur

RAJASTHAN
JAIPUR

The kingdom grew wealthier and wealthier, and this, plus the need to accommodate the burgeoning population and a paucity of water at the old capital at Amber, prompted the maharaja to commence work on a new city in 1727 – Jaipur.

Northern India's first planned city, it was a collaborative effort combining Jai Singh's vision and the impressive expertise of his chief architect, Vidyadhar Bhattacharya. Jai Singh's grounding in the sciences is reflected in the precise symmetry of the new city.

In 1876 Maharaja Ram Singh had the entire Old City painted pink (traditionally the colour of hospitality) to welcome the Prince of Wales (later King Edward VII). Today all residents of the Old City are compelled by law to preserve the pink facade.

Sights

Consider buying a composite ticket (Indian/foreigner ₹100/400), which allows you entry into Amber Fort, Central Museum, Jantar Mantar, Hawa Mahal and Nahargarh, and is valid for two days from the time of purchase. It's available for purchase at all of the sights listed.

Old City (Pink City)

The Old City (often referred to as the Pink City) is partially encircled by a crenellated wall punctuated at intervals by grand gateways. The major gates are Chandpol (pol means 'gate'), Ajaigarh Gate and Sangneri Gate.

Avenues divide the Pink City into neat rectangles, each specialising in certain crafts, as ordained in the Shilpa Shastra (ancient Hindu texts). The main bazaars in the Old City include Johari Bazaar, Tripolia Bazaar, Babu Bazaar and Chandpol Bazaar.

City Palace

(Indian/foreigner incl camera ₹100/400, video camera ₹200, audio guide free, guide from ₹300, Royal Grandeur tour ₹2500; ☺ 9.30am-5pm) A complex of courtyards, gardens and buildings, the impressive City Palace is right in the centre of the Old City. The outer wall was built by Jai Singh, but within it the palace has been enlarged and adapted over the centuries. There are palace buildings from different eras, some dating from the early 20th century. Despite the gradual development, the whole is a striking blend of Rajasthani and Mughal architecture.

The price of admission includes entry to Jaigarh, a long climb above Amber Fort. This is valid for two days.

➔ Mubarak Mahal

Entering through Virendra Pol, you'll see the Mubarak Mahal (Welcome Palace), built in the late 19th century for Maharaja Madho Singh II as a reception centre for visiting dignitaries. Its multi-arched and colonnaded construction was cooked up in an Islamic, Rajput and European stylistic stew by the architect Sir Swinton Jacob. It now forms part of the Maharaja Sawai Mansingh II Museum containing a collection of royal costumes and superb shawls, including Kashmiri pashmina. One remarkable exhibit is Sa wai Madho Singh I's capacious clothing. It's said he was a cuddly 2m tall, 1.2m wide and 250kg.

➔ Diwan-i-Khas (Sarvatobhadra)

Set between the Armoury and the Diwan-i-Am art gallery is an open courtyard known in Sanskrit as Sarvatobhadra. At its centre is a pink-and-white, marble-paved gallery that was used as the Diwan-i-Khas (Hall of Private Audience), where the maharajas would consult their ministers. Here you can see two enormous silver vessels, 1.6m tall and reputedly the largest silver objects in the world; Maharaja Madho Singh II, as a devout Hindu, used these vessels to take holy Ganges water to England for Edward VII's coronation in 1902.

➔ Diwan-i-Am

Within the lavish Diwan-i-Am (Hall of Public Audience) is this art gallery. Exhibits include a copy of the entire Bhagavad Gita (scripture) handwritten in tiny script, and miniature copies of other holy Hindu scriptures, which were small enough to be easily hidden in the event that zealot Mughal armies tried to destroy the sacred texts.

➔ The Armoury

The Anand Mahal Sileg Khana – the Maharani's Palace – houses the Armoury, which has one of the best collections of weapons in the country. Many of the ceremonial weapons are elegantly engraved and inlaid belying their grisly purpose.

➔ Pitam Niwas Chowk & Chandra Mahal

Located towards the palace's inner courtyard is Pitam Niwas Chowk. Here four glorious gates represent the seasons – the Peacock Gate depicts autumn, the Lotus Gate, signifying summer, the Green Gate, representing spring, and finally winter embodied by the Rose Gate.

Beyond this chowk (square) is the private Chandra Mahal, which is still the residence of the descendants of the royal family and where you can take a 45-minute Royal Grandeur guided tour of select areas.

Jantar Mantar

HISTORIC SITE

(Indian/foreigner ₹40/200, guide ₹200, audio guide ₹150; ☀9am-4.30pm) Adjacent to the City Palace is Jantar Mantar, an observatory begun by Jai Singh in 1728 that resembles a collection of giant bizarre sculptures. Built for measuring the heavens, the name is derived from the Sanskrit yanta mantr; meaning 'instrument of calculation,' and in 2010 it was added to India's list of Unesco World Heritage Sites. Paying for a local guide is highly recommended if you wish to learn how each fascinating instrument works.

Jai Singh liked astronomy even more than he liked war and town planning. Before constructing the observatory he sent scholars abroad to study foreign constructs. He built five observatories in total, and this is the largest and best preserved (it was restored in 1901). Others are in Delhi, Varanasi and Ujjain. No traces of the fifth, the Mathura observatory, remain.

Hawa Mahal

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Johari Bazaar; Indian/foreigner incl camera ₹10/50, guide ₹200, audio guide Hindi/English ₹80/110; ☀9am-5pm) Jaipur's most distinctive landmark, the Hawa Mahal is an extraordinary, fairy-tale, pink sandstone, delicately honey-combed hive that rises a dizzying five storeys. It was constructed in 1799 by Maharaja Sawai Pratap Singh to enable ladies of the royal household to watch the life and processions of the city. The top offers stunning views over Jantar Mantar and the City Palace one way, and over Siredeori Bazaar the other.

There's a small museum (Saturday to Thursday), with miniature paintings and some rich relics, such as ceremonial armour, which help evoke the royal past.

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

- ➔ Desert Festival (p182; Feb; Jaisalmer) A chance for moustache twirlers to compete in the Mr Desert contest.
- ➔ Elephant Festival (Mar; Jaipur) Parades, polo and human-versus-elephant tugs of war.
- ➔ Gangaur (Mar/Apr; statewide) A festival honouring Shiva and Parvati's love, celebrated with fervour in Jaipur.
- ➔ Mewar Festival (p155; Mar/Apr; Udaipur) Udaipur's version of Gangaur, with free cultural events and a colourful procession down to the lake.
- ➔ Teej (Aug; Jaipur and Bundi) Honours the arrival of the monsoon, and Shiva and Parvati's marriage.
- ➔ Dussehra Mela (p146; Oct; Kota) Commemorates Rama's victory over Ravana (the demon king of Lanka). It's a spectacular time to visit Kota – the huge fair features 22m-tall firecracker-stuffed effigies.
- ➔ Marwar Festival (p175; Oct; Jodhpur and Osian) Celebrates Rajasthani heroes through music and dance; one day is held in Jodhpur, the other in Osian.
- ➔ Pushkar Camel Fair (p138; Oct/Nov; Pushkar) The most famous festival in the state; a massive congregation of camels, horses and cattle, pilgrims and tourists.

Walking Tour Pink City

START NEW GATE

FINISH AJMER GATE

DISTANCE 4.5KM

DURATION THREE TO FIVE HOURS

Entering the old city from 1 New Gate, turn into 2 Bapu Bazaar, inside the city wall. Brightly coloured bolts of fabric, jootis (traditional shoes) and aromatic perfumes make the street a favourite destination for Jaipur's women. At the end of Bapu Bazaar you'll come to 3 Sanganeri Gate. Turn left into 4 Johari Bazaar, the jewellery market, where you will find jewellers, goldsmiths and artisans doing highly glazed meenakari (enamelling).

Continuing north you'll pass the famous 5 LMB Hotel, and the 6 Jama Masjid, with its tall minarets, and the bustling 7 Badi Chaupar. Be very careful crossing the road here. To the north is 8 Siredeori Bazaar, also known as Hawa Mahal Bazaar. The name is derived from the spectacular 9 Hawa Mahal (p111), a short distance to the north. Turning left on 10 Tripolia Bazaar, you will see a lane leading to the entrance of Hawa Mahal. A few hundred metres west is the 11 Tripolia Gate (p151). This is the main entrance to the 12 Jantar Mantar and 13 City Palace, but only the maharaja's family may enter here. The public entrance is via the less ostentatious Atishpol (Stable Gate), a little further along.

After visiting the City Palace complex, head back to Tripolia Bazaar and resume your walk west past 14 Iswari Minar Swarga Sal (p114), which is well worth the climb for the view. Cross the bazaar at the minaret and head west. The next lane on the left is 15 Maniharon ka Rasta, the best place to buy colourful lac (resin) bangles.

Back on Tripolia Bazaar, continue west to cross Choti Chaupar to Chandpol Bazaar until you reach a traffic light. Turn left into 16 Khajane Walon ka Rasta, where you'll find marble and stoneware carvers at work. Continue south until you reach a broad road, 17 Indra Bazaar, just inside the city wall. Follow the road east towards 18 Ajmer Gate, which marks the end of this tour.

Claustrophobics should be aware that the narrow corridors can get extremely cramped and crowded inside the Hawa Mahal.

Entry is from the back of the complex. To get here, return to the intersection on your left as you face the Hawa Mahal, turn right and then take the first right again through an archway.

◉ New City

By the mid-19th century it became obvious that the well-planned city was bursting at the seams. During the reign of Maharaja Ram Singh (1835–80) the seams ruptured and the city burst out beyond its walls. Civic facilities, such as a postal system and piped water, were introduced. This period gave rise to a part of town very different from the bazaars of the Old City, with wide boulevards, landscaped grounds and grand European-influenced buildings.

Central Museum MUSEUM
(Albert Hall; J Nehru Marg; Indian/foreigner ₹20/150, audio guide Hindi/English ₹90/124; ☺9.30am–5pm) This museum is housed in the spectacularly florid Albert Hall, south of the Old City. It was designed by Sir Swinton Jacob, and combines elements of English and North Indian architecture, as well as huge friezes celebrating the world's great cultures. It was known as the pride of the new Jaipur when it opened in 1887. The grand old building hosts an eclectic array of tribal dress, dioramas, sculptures, miniature paintings, carpets, musical instruments and even an Egyptian mummy.

SRC Museum of Indology MUSEUM
(24 Gangwell Park, Prachyavidya Path; Indian/foreigner incl guide ₹40/100; ☺8am–6pm) This ramshackle, dusty treasure trove is an extraordinary private collection. It contains folk-art objects and other pieces – there's everything from a manuscript written by Aurangzeb and a 200-year-old mirrorwork swing from Bikaner to a glass bed. The museum is signposted off J Nehru Rd.

◉ City Edge

Nahargarh FORT
(Tiger Fort; Indian/foreigner ₹10/30; ☺10am–5pm) Built in 1734 and extended in 1868, this sturdy fort overlooks the city from a sheer ridge to the north. The story goes that the fort was named after Nahar Singh, a dead prince whose restless spirit was disrupting construction. Whatever was built in the day crumbled in the night. The prince agreed to leave on condition that the fort was named for him. The views are glorious here and it's a great sunset spot; there's a restaurant that's perfect for a beer.

Royal Gaitor HISTORIC SITE
(Gatore ki Chhatryan; Indian/foreigner ₹20/30; ☺9am–5pm) The royal cenotaphs, just outside the city walls, beneath Nahargarh, are an appropriately restful place to visit and feel remarkably undiscovered. The stone monuments are beautifully and intricately carved. Maharajas Pratap Singh, Madho Singh II and Jai Singh II, among others, are honoured here. Jai Singh II has the most impressive marble cenotaph, with a dome supported by 20 carved pillars.

Jal Mahal HISTORIC BUILDING
(Water Palace; ☺closed to public) Near the cenotaphs of the maharanis of Jaipur, and beautifully situated in the watery expanse of Man Sagar, is the beautiful Jal Mahal. It was built in 1799 by Madho Singh as a summer resort for the royal family, which they used to base duck-hunting parties. It's accessed via a causeway at the rear, and is currently undergoing restoration for tourism under the auspices of the Jal Tarang (www.jal-tarang.in) project.

🚶 Activities

Several hotels will let you use their pool for a daily fee. Try the pools at the Raj Mahal Palace (Sadar Patel Marg; admission ₹270), the Mansing Hotel (Sansar Chandra Marg; admission ₹225) and the Narain Niwas Palace Hotel (nonguests ₹200).

Yog Sadhna Ashram YOGA
(☎9314011884; <http://yogsadhnaindia.org>; Bapu Nagar; ☺Wed–Mon) Classes take place among trees off University Rd (near Rajasthan University) and incorporate breathing exercises, yoga asanas (postures) and exercise. Most of the classes are in Hindi, but some English is spoken in the 7.30am to 9.30am class. You can visit for individual classes, or register for longer courses (free).

Kerala Ayurveda Kendra AYURVEDA
(☎5106743; www.keralayurvedakendra.com; F-34, Jamnalal Bajaj Marg, Azad Marg; ☺8am–noon & 4–8pm) Is Jaipur making your nerves jangle? Get help through ayurvedic massage and therapy. Treatments include sirodhara (₹1500), where medicated oil is steadily streamed over your forehead for 1½ hours to reduce stress, tone the brain and help with sleep disorders. Massages (male masseur for male clients and female for female clients) cost from ₹500 for 55 minutes. It offers free transport to/from your hotel.

Courses

Jaipur Cooking Classes

COOKING

(☎9928097288; www.jaipurcookingclasses.com; 33 Gyan Vihar, Nirman Nagar, near Ajmer Rd; class ₹1800-3700) Popular cooking classes with chef Lokesh Mathur, who boasts over 25 years experience working in the restaurant and hotel business. Classes cover both classic dishes and Rajasthani menus and can be veg or nonveg. After a three-hour lesson, you sit down for a lunch or dinner of what you've prepared. Lokesh's kitchen is outside the western outskirts of Jaipur.

Sakshi

BLOCK PRINTING

(☎2731862; www.handblockprintedproducts.com; Laxmi Colony, Sanganer Village; half-/full-day course per person ₹1500/2500) Basic block-printing or blue-pottery courses (eight hours per day) are available in Sanganer village, around 16km south of Jaipur. You can also do two- to three-month courses. Costs depend on the number of students; contact Sakshi for more details.

Tours

RTDC

SIGHTSEEING

(☎2200778; tours@rtdc.in; RTDC Tourist Office, Platform 1, Jaipur Train Station; half-/full-day tour ₹300/350; ☀8am-6.30pm Mon-Sat) Full-day tours (9am to 6pm) take in all the major sights of Jaipur (including Amber Fort), with a lunch break at Nahargarh. The lunch break can be as late as 3pm, so have a big breakfast. Rushed half-day tours still squeeze in Amber (8am to 1pm, 11.30am to 4.30pm, and 1.30pm to 6.30pm) – some travellers recommend these, as you avoid the long lunch break. The tour price doesn't include admission charges.

Departing at 6.30pm, the Pink City by Night tour (₹450) explores several well-known sights, and dinner at Nahargarh.

Tours depart from Jaipur train station; the company also picks up and takes bookings from the RTDC Hotel Teej, RTDC Hotel Gangaur and the tourist office at the main bus station.

Cyclin' Jaipur

CYCLING

(☎28060965; www.cyclinjaipur.com; 4hr tour ₹1800; ☀tour 6.30am) Get up early to beat the traffic for a tour of the Pink City by bike, exploring the hidden lanes, temples, markets and food stalls of Jaipur. It's a unique and fun way to learn about the workings and culture of the city. Breakfast and refreshments during the tour are included, and helmets are provided on demand. Tours start at Karnot Mahal, on Ramganj Chaupar in the Old City.

Sleeping

Prepare yourself to be besieged by autorickshaw and taxi drivers when you arrive by train or bus. If you refuse to go to their choice of hotel, many will either snub you or double the fare. To avoid this annoyance, go straight to the prepaid autorickshaw and taxi stands at the bus and train stations. Even better, many hotels will pick you up if you ring ahead.

From May to September, most midrange and top-end hotels offer bargain rates, dropping prices by 25% to 50%.

DON'T MISS

HEAVEN-PIERCING MINARET

Piercing the skyline near the City Palace is the unusual Iswari Minar Swarga Sal (Heaven-Piercing Minaret; admission ₹20; ☀9am-4.30pm), just west of Tripolia Gate. The minaret was erected by Jai Singh's son Iswari, who later ignominiously killed himself by snakebite (in the Chandra Mahal) rather than face the advancing Maratha army – 21 wives and concubines then did the necessary noble thing and committed jauhar (ritual mass suicide by immolation) on his funeral pyre. You can spiral to the top of the minaret for excellent views over the Old City. The entrance is around the back of the row of shops fronting Chandpol Bazaar – take the alley 50m west of the minaret along Chandpol Bazaar or go via the Atishpol entrance to the City Palace compound, 150m east of the minaret.

📍 Around MI Road

★ Hotel Pearl Palace

HOTEL $

Rooms are extremely basic, some with plywood partition walls, and only one has a private bathroom, although it's with a cold-water shower. The common shower is hot.

Jwala Niketan

GUESTHOUSE $

(📍 5108303; jwalaniketan@live.com; C6, Lal ji Ka Bag, Motilal Atal Marg; s ₹200-500, d ₹400-580, s/d with AC ₹1000/1200; 🍷) This quiet yet centrally located guesthouse has a range of good-value, clean but very basic pastel-toned rooms. The host family lives on the premises and the atmosphere is decidedly noncommercial – almost monastic – though rooms do have TVs. There is no restaurant, but meals can be delivered to your room from the nearby cheap and multicuisine Mohan restaurant (p119) or you can sample the family's vegetarian fare.

★ Atithi Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(📍 2378679; www.atithijaipur.com; 1 Park House Scheme Rd; s/d ₹1000/1400; 🍷@🍷) This nicely presented modern guesthouse, well situated between MI and Station Rds, offers strikingly clean, simple rooms dotted around a quiet courtyard. It's central but peaceful, and the service is friendly and helpful. Meals are available (the thali is particularly recommended) and you can have a drink on the very pleasant rooftop terrace.

Hotel Arya Niwas

HOTEL $$

(📍 4073456; www.aryaniwas.com; Sansar Chandra Marg; r from ₹1200, s/d with AC from ₹1500/1650; 🍷@🍷) Just off Sansar Chandra Marg, behind a high-rise tower, this very popular travellers' haunt has a travel desk, bookshop and yoga lessons. For a hotel of 92 rooms it is very well run, though its size means it's not as personal as smaller guesthouses. The spotless rooms vary in layout and size so check out a few.

For relaxing, there's an extensive terrace facing a soothing expanse of lawn. The self-service vegetarian restaurant doesn't serve beer (so BYO).

Pearl Palace Heritage

HOTEL $$

(📍 9414066311, 2375242; www.pearlpalaceheritage.com; Lane 2, 54 Gopal Bari; s/d ₹2400/2800; 🍷@🍷) The second hotel for the successful Pearl Palace team is a midrange hotel with several special characteristics and great attention to detail. Stone carvings adorn the halls and each room re-creates an individual cultural theme such as a village hut, a sandstone fort, or a mirror-lined palace boudoir. Modern luxuries and facilities have been carefully integrated into the traditional designs.

Karni Niwas

GUESTHOUSE $$

(📍 2365433; www.hotelkarniniwas.com; C5, Motilal Atal Marg; r ₹1000, with AC ₹1500; 🍷@🍷) This friendly hotel has clean, cool and comfortable rooms, often with balconies. There's no restaurant, but there are relaxing plant-decked terraces to enjoy room service on. And being so central, restaurants aren't far away. The owner shuns commissions for rickshaw drivers; free pick-up from the train or bus station is available.

All Seasons Homestay

HOMESTAY $$

(📍 9460387055; www.allseasonshomestayjaipur.com; 63 Hathroi Fort; s ₹1300-1900, d ₹1400-2000; 🍷@🍷) Ranjana and her husband Dinesh run this welcoming homestay in their lovely bungalow on a quiet back street behind deserted Hathroi Fort. There are only four guest rooms, but each is lovingly cared for and two have small kitchens. There's a pleasant lawn and home-cooked meals. Advance booking is recommended.

RTDC Hotel Swagatam

HOTEL $$

(📍 2200595; Station Rd; s/d incl breakfast ₹900/1300, with AC ₹1400/1700; 🍷) One of the closest digs to the train station (100m down a quite inauspicious lane), this government-run hotel has helpful, friendly management and a neatly clipped lawn. Rooms are well worn, but spacious, clean and acceptable.

Karan's Guest House GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 9828284433; www.karans.info; D-76 Shiv Heera Path; s/d ₹1300/1500; 🍷🍷) A sweet family-run guesthouse in a quiet residential part of town, but not too far from all the restaurants on MI Rd. Rooms are very spacious and homely and come with AC, TV and hot-water showers. There's a handy rickshaw stand at the end of the road.

Alsisar Haveli HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎ 2368290; www.alsisar.com; Sansar Chandra Marg; r from ₹7700; 🍷🍷🍷) A genuine heritage hotel that has emerged from a gracious 19th-century mansion. Alsisar Haveli is set in beautiful green gardens, and boasts a lovely swimming pool and grand dining room. Its bedrooms don't disappoint either, with elegant Rajput arches and antique furnishings. This is a winning choice, though a little impersonal, perhaps because it hosts many tour groups.

🏡 Bani Park

The Bani Park area is relatively peaceful (away from the main roads), about 2km west of the old city (northwest of MI Rd).

Hotel Anuraag Villa HOTEL $$
(☎ 2201679; www.anuraagvilla.com; D249 Devi Marg; r ₹790-990, with AC ₹1650-2050; 🍷🍷) This quiet and comfortable option has no-fuss, spacious rooms and an extensive lawn where you can find some quiet respite from the hassles of sightseeing. It has a recommended restaurant with its kitchen on view, and efficient, helpful staff.

Tara Niwas GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 2203762; www.aryaniwas.com; B-22-B Shiv Marg, Bani Park; s/d from ₹1150/1600, per month from ₹22,000/28,000; 🍷🍷) Run by the people behind Hotel Arya Niwas, Tara Niwas offers well-furnished apartments suitable for longer stays. Some rooms have attached kitchenettes, and there's also a cafe and dining room and a business centre.

Shahpura House HERITAGE HOTEL $$
(☎ 2203069; www.shahpura.com; D257 Devi Marg; s/d from ₹4000/5000, ste from ₹5000; 🍷🍷🍷) Elaborately built and decorated in traditional style, this heritage hotel offers immaculate rooms, some with balconies, featuring murals, coloured-glass lamps, flat-screen TVs, and even ceilings covered in small mirrors (in the suites). This rambling palace boasts a durbar hall (royal reception hall) with huge chandelier and a cosy cocktail bar.

There's an inviting swimming pool and an elegant rooftop terrace that stages cultural shows.

Madhuban HOTEL $$
(☎ 2200033; www.madhuban.net; D237 Behari Marg; r ₹2400/2900; 🍷🍷🍷) Madhuban has cute and cosy rooms with attractive wood furniture, and although they are small for the price, this is a comfortable stay. The pool is tiny (OK for a quick plunge), but the restaurant is good, and you can sometimes eat out on the lawn.

Jas Vilas GUESTHOUSE $$$
(☎ 2204638; www.jasvilas.com; C9 Sawai Jai Singh Hwy; s/d ₹4440/5080; 🍷🍷🍷) This small but impressive hotel was built in 1950 and is still run by the same charming family. It offers 11 spacious rooms, most of which face the large sparkling pool set in a romantic courtyard. Three garden-facing rooms are wheelchair accessible. In addition to the relaxing courtyard and lawn, there is a cosy dining room and helpful management.

Hotel Meghniwas GUESTHOUSE $$$
(☎ 4060100; www.meghniwas.com; C9 Sawai Jai Singh Hwy; s/d ₹4000/4500; 🍷🍷🍷) In a building erected by Brigadier Singh in 1950 and run by his gracious descendants, this very welcoming hotel has comfortable and spotless rooms, with traditional carved-wood furniture and leafy outlooks. The standard rooms are good, but the suite does not measure up to expectations. There's a first-rate restaurant and an inviting pool set in a pleasant lawn area.

🏡 Old City

Hotel Kailash HOTEL $
(☎ 2577372; Johari Bazaar; r without/with bathroom ₹300/500) One of the few budget digs within the Old City, Kailash is right in the thick of it. But it's nothing fancy. Enter through a narrow stairway to the under-sized rooms, which are basic and stuffy despite the central air-cooling. The cheapest rooms are windowless cells and the shared bathrooms can be challenging, while the bigger doubles with attached bath are adequate. Rooms at the back are quieter.

Hotel Sweet Dreams

HOTEL $

(📍 2314409; www.hotelsweetdreamjaipur.in; Nehru Bazaar; s/d ₹800/1000, with AC from ₹1400/1600; 🍷) A decent but basic budget choice in the Old City, if you ignore the rickety elevator that takes you upstairs. The rooms are pretty much identical (with balconies), with increasing amenities the higher up the price scale you go: adding air-cooling, hot water and finally AC. There's a bar and rooftop terrace restaurant.

LMB Hotel

HOTEL $$

(📍 2565844; www.hotellmb.com; Johari Bazaar; s/d from ₹2325/2525; 🍷) Situated above the renowned vegetarian restaurant (p119) of the same name, this hotel offers a prime vantage point from where you can check out the mayhem of the Old City bazaars. Rooms are generally large, bright and clean, though possibly overpriced. Check out a few (including the plumbing) before settling in.

Rambagh Environs*Hotel Diggi Palace

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(📍 2373091; www.hoteldiggipalace.com; off Sawai Ram Singh Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹4000/5000; 🍷@) About 1km south of Ajmer Gate, this former splendid residence of the thakur (nobleman) of Diggi is surrounded by vast shaded lawns. The more expensive rooms at this former budget hotel are substantially better than the cheaper options. There's free pick-up from the bus and train stations.

Management prides itself on using organic produce from the hotel's own gardens and farms in the restaurant.

Nana-ki-Haveli

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(📍 2615502; www.nanakhaveli.com; Fateh Tiba; r ₹1800-3000; 🍷@) Tucked away off Moti Dungri Marg is this tranquil place with attractive, comfortable rooms decorated with traditional flourishes (discreet wall paintings, wooden furniture). It's hosted by a lovely family and is a good choice for solo female travellers. It's fronted by a relaxing lawn and offers home-style cooking and discounted rooms in summer.

Rambagh Palace

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(📍 2211919; www.tajhotels.com; Bhawan Singh Marg; r from ₹38,500; 🍷@🍷) This splendid palace was once the Jaipur pad of Maharaja Man Singh II and, until recently, his glamorous wife Gayatri Devi. Veiled in 19 hectares of gardens, the hotel – now run by the luxury Taj Group brand – has fantastic views across the immaculate lawns. More expensive rooms are naturally the most sumptuous.

Nonguests can join in the magnificence by dining in the lavish restaurants or drinking tea on the gracious verandah. At least treat yourself to a drink at the spiffing Polo Bar (p119).

Narain Niwas Palace Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(📍 2561291; www.hotelnarainniwas.com; Narain Singh Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹5610/7670; 🍷@🍷) In Kanota Bagh, just south of the city, this genuine heritage hotel has wonderful ramshackle splendour. There's a lavish dining room with liveried staff, an old-fashioned verandah on which to drink tea, and antiques galore. The high-ceilinged rooms vary in atmosphere and the bathrooms also vary greatly – inspect before committing.

Out back you'll find a large secluded pool (nonguests ₹150), heavenly spa and sprawling gardens complete with peacocks.

Eating*Around MI Road*Old Takeaway The Kebab Shop

KEBABS $

(151 MI Rd; kebabs ₹90-180; ☺ 6-11pm) One of a few similarly named roadside kebab shops on this stretch of MI Road, this one (next to the mosque) is the original (so we're told) and the best (we agree). It knocks up outstanding tandoori kebabs, including paneer sheesh, mutton sheesh and tandoori chicken. Like the sign says: a house of delicious nonveg corner.

Indian Coffee House

CAFE $

(MI Rd; coffee ₹11-15, snacks from ₹40; ☺ 8am-9.30pm) Set back from the street, down an easily missed alley, this traditional coffee house (a venerable co-op owned institution) offers a very pleasant cup of filtered coffee in very relaxed surroundings. Aficionados of Indian Coffee Houses will not be disappointed by the fan-cooled ambience. Inexpensive samosas, pakoras (deep-fried battered vegetables) and dosas grace the snack menu.

Rawat Kachori

SWEETS $

(Station Rd; kachori ₹20, lassi ₹25; ☺ 6am-10pm) For great Indian sweets (₹10 each or ₹120 to ₹300 per kg) and famous kachori (potato masala in fried pastry case), head to this exceedingly popular place. A delicious milk crown (fluffy dough with cream) should fill you up for the afternoon.

Sankalp/Sam's Pizza SOUTH INDIAN, PIZZA $$
(MI Rd; pizzas ₹130-385, mains from ₹170; ☎ 11am-11pm) This clean and modern Western-style fast-food restaurant has a bit of a split personality. Waiters are dressed the part to serve up good vegetarian pizzas and offerings from the salad bar, but can also hand you a menu full of South Indian treats. Dosas or deep-pan pizzas? You decide, it's good both ways, and the service is quick.

Anokhi Café ORGANIC $$
(2nd fl, KK Square, C-11, Prithviraj Marg; mains from ₹230; ☎ 10am-7:30pm; ♿ ♿) A relaxing cafe with a quietly fashionable coffee-shop vibe about it, Anokhi is the perfect place if you're craving a crunchy, well-dressed salad, quiche, or thickly filled sandwich – or just a respite from the hustle with a latte or an iced tea. The delicious organic loaves are made to order and can be purchased separately.

Moti Mahal Delux NORTH INDIAN $$
(☎ 4017733; MI Rd; mains ₹170-430; ☎ 11am-11pm) The famous Delhi restaurant now has franchises all over India delivering its world-famous butter chicken to the masses. The tantalising menu features a vast range of veg and nonveg, including some succulent tandoori dishes. Snuggle into a booth and enjoy the ambience, spicy food and a delicious pista kulfi (pistachio-flavoured sweet similar to ice cream) for dessert. Beer and wine available.

Peacock Rooftop Restaurant MULTICUISINE $$
(☎ 2373700; Hotel Pearl Palace, Hari Kishan Somani Marg; mains ₹80-260; ☎ 7am-11pm) This multilevel rooftop restaurant at the Hotel Pearl Palace gets rave reviews for its excellent, inexpensive cuisine (Indian, Chinese and continental) and relaxed ambience. The mouth-watering food, attentive service, whimsical furnishings and romantic view towards Hathroi Fort make it a first-rate restaurant. There are great value thalis, and alcohol is served.

Surya Mahal SOUTH INDIAN $$
(☎ 2362811; MI Rd; mains ₹90-170; ☎ 8am-11pm) This popular option near Panch Batti specialises in South Indian vegetarian food; try the delicious masala dosa and the tasty dhal makhani (black lentils and red kidney beans). There are also Chinese and Italian dishes, and good ice creams, sundaes and cool drinks.

Handi Restaurant NORTH INDIAN $$
(MI Rd; mains ₹140-300; ☎ noon-3:30pm & 6-11pm) Handi has been satisfying customers for years, with scrumptious tandoori and barbecued dishes and rich Mughlai curries. In the evenings it sets up a smoky kebab stall at the entrance to the restaurant. Good vegetarian items are also available. No beer.
It's opposite the main post office, tucked at the back of the Maya Mansions.

Natraj VEGETARIAN $$
(☎ 2375804; MI Rd; mains ₹150-250; ☎ 9am-11pm) Not far from Panch Batti is this classy vegetarian place, which has an extensive menu featuring North Indian, continental and Chinese cuisine. Diners are blown away by the potato-encased 'vegetable bomb' curry. There's a good selection of thalis and South Indian food – the paper masala dosa is delicious – as well as Indian sweets.

Four Seasons VEGETARIAN $$
(☎ 2373700; D43A Subhas Marg; mains ₹100-210; ☎ noon-3:30pm & 6:30-11pm) Four Seasons is one of Jaipur's best vegetarian restaurants. It's a vastly popular place on two levels, with a glass wall to the kitchens. There's a great range of dishes on offer, including tasty Rajasthani specialities, dosas and a selection of pizzas. No alcohol.

Copper Chimney INDIAN $$
(☎ 2372275; Maya Mansions, MI Rd; mains ₹150-400; ☎ noon-3:30pm & 6:30-11pm) Copper Chimney is casual, almost elegant and definitely welcoming, with the requisite waiter army and a fridge of cold beer. It offers excellent veg and nonveg Indian cuisine, including aromatic Rajasthani specials. Continental and Chinese food is also on offer, as is a small selection of Indian wine, but the curry-and-beer combos are hard to beat.

Niro's INDIAN $$$
(☎ 2374493; MI Rd; mains ₹200-500; ☎ 10am-11pm) Established in 1949, Niro's is a long-standing favourite on MI Rd that continues to shine. Escape the chaos of the street by ducking into its cool, clean, mirror-ceiling sanctum to savour veg and nonveg Indian cuisine. Classic Chinese and Continental food are available but the Indian menu is definitely the pick. Alcohol served.

Little Italy ITALIAN $$$
(☎ 4022444; 3rd fl, KK Square, Prithviraj Marg; mains ₹300-500; ☎ noon-11pm) Easily the best Italian restaurant in town, Little Italy is part of a small national chain that offers excellent vegetarian pasta, risotto and wood-fired pizzas in cool, contemporary surroundings. The menu is extensive and includes some Mexican items and first-rate Italian desserts. There's a lounge bar attached so you can accompany your vegetarian dining with wine or beer.

Old City

Mohan

VEGETARIAN $

(144-5 Nehru Bazaar; mains ₹25-90; ☺9am-10pm) Tiny Mohan is easy to miss: it's a few steps down from the footpath on the corner of the street. It's basic, cheap and a bit grubby, but the thalis, curries (half and full plate) and snacks are freshly cooked and very popular.

Ganesh Restaurant

VEGETARIAN $

(Nehru Bazaar; mains ₹60-120; ☺9am-11.30pm) This pocket-sized outdoor restaurant is in a fantastic location on the top of the Old City wall near New Gate. The cook is in a pit on one side of the wall, so you can check out your pure vegetarian food being cooked. If you're looking for a local eatery with fresh tasty food such as paneer butter masala, you'll love it.

There's an easy-to-miss signpost, but no doubt a stallholder will show you the narrow stairway.

LMB

VEGETARIAN $$

(☎2560845; Johari Bazaar; mains ₹180-340; ☺8am-11pm; ☎) Laxmi Misthan Bhandar, LMB to you and me, is a sattvik (pure vegetarian) restaurant in the Old City that's been going strong since 1954. A welcoming AC refuge from frenzied Johari Bazaar, LMB is also an institution with its singular decor, attentive waiters and extensive sweet counter.

Popular with both local and international tourists, try the Rajasthan thali (₹450 and big enough to share) followed by the signature kulfa (a fusion of kulfi and falooda with dry fruits and saffron).

Drinking

Many bars around town tend to be oppressive, all-male affairs; most upper-end hotel bars are good for casual drinking.

★Lassiwala

CAFE

(MI Rd; small/jumbo lassi ₹18/36; ☺7.30am till sold out) This famous, much-imitated institution is a simple place that whips up fabulous, creamy lassis in clay cups. Get here early to avoid disappointment! Will the real Lassiwala please stand up? It's the one that says 'Shop 312' and 'Since 1944', directly next to the alleyway. Imitators spread to the right as you face it.

Henry's the Pub

BAR

(Park Prime Hotel, C-59, Prithviraj Marg; ☺noon-11.45pm) With coloured glass, dark wood and studded leather, this English pub wannabe has local Golden Peacock on tap and a small selection of international beer. You will also find Australian wine and a full array of Indian spirits. Food is also available.

Polo Bar

BAR

(Rambagh Palace Hotel, Bhawan Singh Marg; ☺noon-midnight) A spiffing watering hole adorned with polo memorabilia and arched, scalloped windows framing the neatly clipped lawns. A bottle of beer costs from ₹300 according to the label, with cocktails around ₹450.

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(Country Inn Hotel, MI Rd; coffee ₹60-90; ☺10am-10pm) The franchise that successfully delivers espresso to coffee addicts, as well as the occasional iced concoction and muffin, has several branches in Jaipur. In addition to this one, sniff out the brews at Paris Point on Sawai Jai Singh Hwy (aka Collectorate Rd), and near the exit point at Amber Fort.

Brewberry's

CAFE

(G-2, Fortune Heights; coffee from ₹40; ☺8am-midnight; ☎) Modern wi-fi-enabled cafe with fresh coffee and a good mix of Indian and Western food and snacks. Has some patio seating. It's located opposite HDFC Bank.

100% Rock

BAR

(Hotel Shikha, Yudhishtir Marg, C-Scheme; beer from ₹160; ☺10am-11.30pm) Attached to, but separate from, Hotel Shikha, this is the closest thing there is to a beer garden in Jaipur, with plenty of outdoor seating as well as AC-cooled side rooms and a clubby main room with a small dance floor. Two-for-one beer offers are common, making this popular with local youngsters.

★ Entertainment

Jaipur isn't a big late-night party town, although many of its hotels put on some sort of evening music, dance or puppet show. English-language films are occasionally screened at some cinemas in Jaipur – check the cinemas and local press for details.

Raj Mandir Cinema

CINEMA

(☎ 2379372; www.theramandir.com; Baghwandas Marg; tickets ₹60-150; 🕒 reservations 10am-6pm, screenings 12.30pm, 3.30pm, 6.30pm & 9.30pm) Just off MI Rd, Raj Mandir is the place to go to see a Hindi film in India. This opulent cinema looks like a huge pink cream cake, with a meringue auditorium and a foyer somewhere between a temple and Disneyland. Bookings can be made one hour to seven days in advance at windows 9 and 10 – this is your best chance of securing a seat, but forget it in the early days of a new release.

Alternatively, sharpen your elbows and join the queue when the current booking office opens 45 minutes before curtain up. Avoid the cheapest tickets, which seat you very close to the screen.

Chokhi Dhani

THEME PARK

(☎ 2225001; Tonk Rd; adult/child ₹450/350, incl Rajasthani thali ₹650/400; 🕒 6-11pm) Chokhi Dhani, meaning 'special village', is a mock Rajasthani village 20km south of Jaipur, and is a fun place to take the kids. There are open-air restaurants, where you can enjoy a tasty Rajasthani thali, and there's a bevy of traditional entertainment – dancers, acrobats, snack stalls – as well as adventure park-like activities for kids to swing on, slide down and hide in. A return taxi from Jaipur, including waiting time, will cost about ₹700.

Polo Ground

SPORTS

(☎ ticket info 2385380; Ambedkar Circle, Bhawan Singh Marg) Maharaja Man Singh II indulged his passion for polo by building an enormous polo ground next to Rambagh Palace, which is still a polo-match hub today. A ticket to a match also gets you into the lounge, which is adorned with historic photos and memorabilia. The polo season extends over winter, with the most important matches played during January and March. Contact the Rajasthan Polo Club for info about tickets.

During Jaipur's Elephant Festival in March you can watch elephant polo matches at the Chaughan Stadium in the Old City. Contact the RTDC tourist office for details.

Shopping

Jaipur is a shopper's paradise. Commercial buyers come here from all over the world to stock up on the amazing range of jewellery, gems, artefacts and crafts that come from all over Rajasthan. You'll have to bargain hard – shops have seen too many cash-rich, time-poor tourists, particularly around major tourist centres, such as the City Palace and Hawa Mahal.

Most of the larger shops can pack and send your parcels home for you – although it may be slightly cheaper if you do it yourself.

The city is still loosely divided into traditional artisans' quarters. Bapu Bazaar is lined with saris and fabrics, and is a good place to buy trinkets. Johari Bazaar and Siredeori Bazaar are where many jewellery shops are concentrated, selling gold, silver and meenakari (highly glazed enamel), a Jaipur speciality. You may also find better deals for fabrics with the cotton merchants of Johari Bazaar.

Kishanpol Bazaar is famous for textiles, particularly bandhani (tie-dye). Nehru Bazaar also sells fabric, as well as jootis, trinkets and perfume. MI Rd is another good place to buy jootis. The best place for bangles is Maniharon ka Rasta, near the Shree Sanjay Sharma Museum.

Plenty of factories and showrooms are strung along the length of Amber Rd, between Zorawar Singh Gate and the Holiday Inn, to catch the tourist traffic. Here you'll find huge emporiums selling block prints, blue pottery, carpets and antiques; but these shops are used to busloads swinging in to blow their cash, so you'll need to wear your bargaining hat.

Rickshaw-wallahs, hotels and travel agents will be getting a hefty cut from any shop they steer you towards. Many unwary visitors get talked into buying things for resale at inflated prices, especially gems. Beware of these get-rich-quick scams.

Kripal Kumbh

HANDICRAFTS

(☎ 2201127; http://kripalkumbh.com; B18A Shiv Marg, Bani Park; 🕒 9.30am-6pm Mon-Sat) This tiny showroom in a private home is a great place to buy Jaipur's famous blue pottery produced by the late Mr Kripal Singh, his family and his students. Most pieces cost between ₹250 and ₹500. Free courses (☎ 2201127; B18A Shiv Marg, Bani Park) are also available.

Khadi Ghar

CLOTHING, HANDICRAFTS

(MI Rd; 🕒 10am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) The best of a handful of khadi (homespun cloth) shops in Jaipur, this branch sells good quality ready-made clothing from the homespun khadi fabric, famously endorsed by Gandhi, as well

SHOPPING FOR GEMS

Jaipur is famous for precious and semiprecious stones. There are many shops offering bargain prices, but you do need to know your gems. The main gem-dealing area is around the Muslim area of Pahar Ganj, in the southeast of the old city. Here you can see stones being cut and polished in workshops tucked off narrow backstreets.

There is a gem-testing laboratory (☎ 0141-2568221; www.gtljaipur.info; Rajasthan Chamber Bhawan, MI Rd; ☎ 10am-4pm Mon-Sat) in the Rajasthan Chamber Bhawan on MI Rd. Deposit your gems between 10am and 4pm, then return the following day between 4pm and 5pm to pick up an authenticity certificate. The service costs ₹1000 per stone, ₹1600 for same-day service, if deposited before 1pm.

A warning: one of the oldest scams in India is the gem scam, where tourists are fooled into thinking they can buy gems to sell at a profit elsewhere. Don't be taken in – the gems you buy will be worth only a fraction of what you pay. Often the scams involve showing you real stones and then packing up worthless glass beads to give you in their place. These scams can be elaborate productions and can begin when touts strike up conversations in excellent English while you're waiting for a bus or eating in a restaurant, until you develop a friendly relationship with them. It might be several hours (or even days if they know where you hang out and can arrange to see you again) before any mention is made of reselling items. Be wary, and never let greed cloud your judgment.

as a small selection of handicrafts. Prices are fixed and pressure to buy is minimal.

Rajasthali

HANDICRAFTS

(MI Rd; ☎ 11am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) This state emporium, opposite Ajmer Gate, is packed with quality Rajasthani artefacts and crafts, including enamelwork, embroidery, pottery, woodwork, jewellery, puppets, block-printed sheets, miniatures, brassware, mirrorwork and more. The best reason to visit is to scout out prices before launching into the bazaar. Items can be cheaper at the markets, after haggling, and you'll find more choice.

★ Mojari

CLOTHING

(Shiv Heera Marg; ☎ 10am-6.30pm Mon-Sat) Named after the traditional decorated shoes of Rajasthan, Mojari is a UN-supported project that helps rural leatherworkers, traditionally among the poorest members of society. A wide variety of footwear is available (₹500 to ₹750), including embroidered, appliquéd and open-toed shoes, mules and sandals. There's a particularly good choice for women, plus a small selection of hand-made leather bags and purses.

Silver Shop

JEWELLERY

(Hotel Pearl Palace, Hari Kishan Somani Marg; ☎ 6-10pm) A trusted jewellery shop backed by the hotel management that hosts the store. A money-back guarantee is offered on all items. Find it under the peacock canopy in the hotel's Peacock Rooftop Restaurant.

Anokhi

CLOTHING, TEXTILES

(www.anokhi.com; 2nd fl, KK Square, C-11, Prithviraj Marg; ☎ 9.30am-8pm Mon-Sat, 11am-7pm Sun) Anokhi is a classy, upmarket boutique that's well worth visiting – there's a wonderful little cafe on the premises and an excellent bookshop in the same building. Anokhi sells stunning high-quality textiles, such as block-printed fabrics, tablecloths, bed covers, cosmetic bags and scarves, as well as a range of well-designed, beautifully made clothing that combines Indian and Western influences.

Fabindia

CLOTHING

(☎ 0141 5115991; www.fabindia.com; Sarojini Marg; ☎ 11am-9pm) A great place to coordinate colours with reams of rich fabrics plus furniture and home accessories. You can also find certified-organic garments, beauty products and condiments. Located opposite Central Park, gate number 4.

i Information

INTERNET ACCESS

Internet cafes are thin on the ground, but almost all hotels and guesthouses provide wi-fi and/or internet access.

Dhoom Cyber Café (MI Rd; per hr ₹30;

☎ 8.30am-8.30pm) Enter through an arch into a quiet courtyard just off the main drag.

Mewar Cyber Café (Station Rd; per hr ₹25; ☎ 7am-11pm) Near the main bus station.

MEDIA

Jaipur Vision and Jaipur City Guide are two useful, inexpensive booklets available at bookshops and in some hotel lobbies (where they are free). They feature up-to-date listings, maps, local adverts and features.

MEDICAL SERVICES

Most hotels can arrange a doctor on site.

Santokba Durlabhji Memorial Hospital

(SDMH; ☎ 2566251; www.sdmh.in; Bhawan Singh Marg) Private hospital, with 24-hour emergency department, helpful staff and clear bilingual signage. Consultancy fee ₹400.

Sawai Mansingh Hospital (SMS Hospital; ☎ 2518222, 2518597; Sawai Ram Singh Rd) State-run but part of Soni Hospitals group (www.soni-hospitals.com). Before 3pm, outpatients go to the CT & MRI Centre. After 3pm, go to the adjacent Emergency Department.

MONEY

There are plenty of places to change money, including numerous hotels and masses of ATMs, most of which accept foreign cards.

Thomas Cook (☎ 2360940; Jaipur Towers, MI Rd; ☎ 9.30am-6pm)

POST

DHL Express (☎ 2361159; www.dhl.co.in; G8, Geeta Enclave, Vinobha Marg; ☎ 10am-8pm)

Look for the sub-branch on MI Rd then walk down the lane beside it to find DHL Express. For parcels, the first kilo is expensive, but each 500g thereafter is cheap. All packaging is included in the price. Credit cards and cash are accepted.

Main Post Office (☎ 2368740; MI Rd; ☎ 8am-7.45pm Mon-Fri, 10am-5.45pm Sat) A cost-effective and efficient institution, though the back-and-forth can infuriate. Parcel-packing-wallahs in the foyer must first pack, stitch and wax seal your parcel for a fee (₹50 to ₹100 per small package) before sending.

TOURIST INFORMATION

The Tourism Assistance Force (police) are stationed at the railway and bus stations, the airport and at Jaipur's major tourist sights.

RTDC Tourist Office (www.rajasthan-tourism.gov.in) Main branch (☎ 5155137; www.rajasthan-tourism.gov.in; Room 21, former RTDC Tourist Hotel, MI Rd; ☎ 9.30am-6pm Mon-Fri); Airport (☎ 2722647; Airport); Amber Fort (☎ 2530264; Amber Fort); Jaipur train station (☎ 2200778; Jaipur Train Station, Platform 1; ☎ 24hr); main bus station (☎ 5064102; Main Bus Station, Platform 3; ☎ 10am-5pm Mon-Fri) Has maps and brochures on Jaipur and Rajasthan.

Getting There & Away*AIR

It's possible to arrange flights to Europe, the USA and other places, such as Dubai, all via Delhi. It's best to compare ticket prices from travel agencies with what the airlines supply directly and through their websites – the latter is where you will usually find the best price.

Offices of domestic airlines:

Air India (☎ 2743500, airport 2721333; www.airindia.com; Tonk Rd, Nehru Place) Daily flights to Delhi and Mumbai.

BUS

Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation (RSRTC aka Rajasthan Roadways) buses all leave from the main bus station (Station Rd), picking up passengers at Narain Singh Circle (you can also buy tickets here). There is a left-luggage office at the main bus station (₹10 per bag for 24 hours), as well as a prepaid autorickshaw stand.

Ordinary buses are known as 'express' buses, but there are also 'deluxe' buses (coaches really, but still called buses; usually with air-con but not always); these vary a lot but are generally much more expensive and comfortable than ordinary express buses. Deluxe buses leave from Platform 3, tucked away in the right-hand corner of the bus station. Unlike ordinary express buses seats on them can be booked in advance from the reservation office (📍 5116032) here.

With the exception of those going to Delhi (half-hourly), deluxe buses are much less frequent than ordinary buses.

CAR

Most hotels and the RTDC tourist office can arrange car and driver hire. Depending on the vehicle, costs are ₹8 to ₹12 per kilometre, with a minimum rental rate equivalent to 250km per day. Expect to pay a ₹150 overnight charge, and note, you will have to pay for the driver to return to Jaipur even if you aren't.

MOTORCYCLE

You can hire, buy or fix a Royal Enfield Bullet (and lesser motorbikes) at Rajasthan Auto Centre (📍 2568074, 9829188064; www.royalensfield-salim.com; Sanganeri Gate, Sanjay Bazaar; ☎ 10am-8pm, to 2pm Sun), the cleanest little motorcycle workshop in India. To hire a 350cc Bullet costs ₹500 per day within Jaipur.

TRAIN

For same-day travel, buy your ticket at the northern end of the train station on Platform 1, window 10 (closed 6am to 6.30am, 2pm to 2.30pm, and 10pm to 10.30pm). The railway inquiries number is 📞 131.

Station facilities on Platform 1 include an RTDC tourist information bureau, Tourism Assistance Force (police), a cloakroom for left luggage (₹10 per bag per 24 hours), retiring rooms, restaurants and air-conditioned waiting rooms for those with 1st class and 2AC train tickets.

There's a prepaid autorickshaw stand and local taxis at the road entrance to the train station.

- Nine daily trains go to Delhi (sleeper ₹285; departs 1am, 2.50am, 4.40am, 5am, 6am, 2.35pm, 4.25pm, 5.50pm and 11.15pm), plus more on selected days. The 6am double-decker does the trip in 4½ hours, others take five to six.
- Two daily trains leave for Agra (sleeper ₹175; 4½ hours, 6.15am and 3.20pm).
- Three go to Bikaner (sleeper ₹265; 6½ to 7½ hours; 12.50am, 3.25am and 9.15pm).
- Seven go to Jodhpur (sleeper ₹240; five to six hours; 12.45am, 2.45am, 6am, 9.25am, 11.10am, 10.15pm and 11.45pm).
- Three go to Udaipur (2nd class ₹165; seven to eight hours; 6.45am, 2pm and 11pm).
- Six go to Ahmedabad (sleeper ₹370; 2.30am, 4.25am, 5.35am, 8.45am, 8.35pm and 12.25am). The 12.25am is the quickest (nine hours), while the others take 11 to 13 hours.
- For Pushkar, 11 daily trains make the trip to Ajmer (2nd class ₹90; two hours), plus many more on selected days so you rarely wait more than an hour.
- For Ranthambhore, six daily trains go to Sawai Madhopur (2nd class ₹90; two to three hours; 5.40am, 11.05am, 2pm, 4.50pm, 5.35pm and 11.55pm), plus plenty more on selected days.
- Two trains make the daily run to Jaisalmer (sleeper ₹360; 12 hours, 11.10am and 11.45pm).

i Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

There are no bus services from the airport, which is 12km southeast of the city. An autorickshaw costs at least ₹250; a taxi upwards of ₹450. There's a prepaid taxi booth inside the terminal.

AUTORICKSHAW

Autorickshaw drivers at the bus and train stations might just be the pushiest in Rajasthan. Use the fixed-rate prepaid autorickshaw stands instead. Keep hold of your docket to give to the driver at the end of the journey. In other cases be prepared to bargain hard – expect to pay at least ₹80 from either station to the Old City.

CYCLE-RICKSHAW

You can do your bit for the environment by flagging down a lean-limbed cycle-rickshaw rider. Though it can be uncomfortable watching someone pedalling hard to transport you, this is how they make a living. A short trip costs about ₹40.

TAXI

There are unmetered taxis available, which will require negotiating a fare, or you can try Mericar (☎ 4188888; www.mericar.in; flagfall incl 2km ₹50, afterwards per km ₹13, 25% night surcharge 10pm-5am). It's a 24-hour service and taxis can be hired for sightseeing for four-/six-/eight-hour blocks costing ₹600/1000/1500.

Around Jaipur

Amber

The formidable, magnificent, honey-hued fort of Amber (pronounced am-er), an ethereal example of Rajput architecture, rises from a rocky mountainside about 11km northeast of Jaipur, and is the city's must-see sight.

Amber, the former capital of Jaipur state, was built by the Kachhwaha Rajputs who hailed from Gwalior, in present day Madhya Pradesh, where they reigned for over 800 years. Construction of the fort, which was begun in 1592 by Maharaja Man Singh, the Rajput commander of Akbar's army, was financed with war booty. It was later extended and completed by the Jai Singhs before they moved to Jaipur on the plains below.

Sights

Amber Fort

FORT

(Indian/foreigner ₹25/200, guide ₹200, audio guide Hindi/other ₹100/150; ☀ 8am-6pm, last entry 5.30pm) This magnificent fort is largely made up of a royal palace, built from pale yellow and pink sandstone and white marble, and divided into four main sections, each with its own courtyard. You can trudge up to the fort from the road in about 10 minutes, but riding up on elephant back (one-way per 2 passengers ₹900; ☀ 7.30am-noon & 3.30-5.30pm) is very popular. A return 4WD to the top and back costs ₹300 for five passengers, including one-hour waiting time.

Animal welfare groups have criticised the keeping of elephants at Amber, as recent government inspections have revealed inadequate housing conditions and abuse of the animals, so you may want to think twice before taking a ride.

Whether you walk or ride an elephant, you will enter Amber Fort through Suraj Pol (Sun Gate), which leads to the Jaleb Chowk (Main Courtyard), where returning armies would display their war booty to the populace – women could view this area from the veiled windows of the palace. The ticket office is directly across the courtyard from Suraj Pol. If you arrive by car you will enter through Chand Pol (Moon Gate) on the opposite side of Jaleb Chowk. Hiring a guide or grabbing an audio guide is highly recommended as there are very few signs and many blind alleys.

From Jaleb Chowk, an imposing stairway leads up to the main palace, but first it's worth taking the steps just to the right, which lead to the small Siladevi Temple, with its gorgeous silver doors featuring rousé (raised relief) work.

Heading back to the main stairway will take you up to the second courtyard and the Diwan-i-Am (Hall of Public Audience), which has a double row of columns, each topped by a capital in the shape of an elephant, and latticed galleries above.

The maharaja's apartments are located around the third courtyard – you enter through the fabulous Ganesh Pol, decorated with beautiful frescoed arches. The Jai Mandir (Hall of Victory) is noted for its inlaid panels and multimirrored ceiling. Carved marble relief panels around the hall are fascinatingly delicate and quirky, depicting cartoonlike insects and sinuous flowers. Opposite the Jai Mandir is the Sukh Niwas (Hall of Pleasure), with an ivory-inlaid sandalwood door and a channel that once carried cooling water right through the room. From the Jai Mandir you can enjoy fine views from the palace ramparts over picturesque Maota Lake below.

The zenana (secluded women's quarters) surrounds the fourth courtyard. The rooms were designed so that the maharaja could embark on his nocturnal visits to his wives' and concubines' respective chambers without the others knowing, as the chambers are independent but open onto a common corridor.

Jaigarh

FORT

(Indian/foreigner ₹35/85, camera/video ₹50/200, car ₹50, Hindi/English guide ₹100/150; ☀9am–5pm) A scrubby green hill rises above Amber and is topped by the imposing Jaigarh, built in 1726 by Jai Singh. The stern fort, punctuated by whimsical-hatted lookout towers, was never captured and has survived intact through the centuries. It's an uphill walk (about 1km) from Amber and offers great views from the Diwa Burj watchtower. The fort has reservoirs, residential areas, a puppet theatre and the world's largest wheeled cannon, Jaya Vana.

Anokhi Museum of Hand Printing

MUSEUM

(Anokhi Haveli, Kheri Gate; child/adult ₹15/30, camera/video ₹50/150; ☀10.30am–4.30pm Tue–Sat, 11am–4.30pm Sun, closed 1 May–15 Jul) This interesting museum, in a restored Haveli, documents the art of hand-block printing, from old traditions to contemporary design. You can watch masters carve unbelievably intricate wooden printing blocks and even have a go at printing your own scarf or T-shirt. There's a cafe and gift shop too. From the museum you can walk around the ancient town to the restored Panna Meena Baori (step-well) and Jagat Siromani Temple (known locally as the Meera Temple).

Sleeping

The decidedly untouristy village of Amber, with its colourful food market and scattering of temples and palace ruins, makes a low-key alternative to hectic Jaipur as a possible place to stay.

★ Mosaics Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎8875430000, 2530031; www.mosaicsguesthouse.com; Siyaram Ki Doongri, Amber; s/d incl breakfast ₹3200/3500; ☎@☎) Get away from it all at this gorgeous arty place (the French owner is a mosaic artist and will show off his workshop) with four lovely rooms and a rooftop terrace with beautiful fort views. Set-price Franco-Indian meals cost ₹500. It's about 1km past the fort near Kunda Village – head for Siyaram Ki Doongri, where you'll find signs.

Getting There & Away

There are frequent buses to Amber from near the Hawa Mahal in Jaipur (non-AC/AC ₹14/25, 15 minutes). They drop you opposite where you start your climb up to the entrance of Amber Fort.

The elephant rides and 4WDs start 100m further down the hill from the bus drop-off.

An autorickshaw/taxi will cost at least ₹400/700 for the return trip from Jaipur. RTDC city tours (p114) include Amber Fort.

Sanganer

The village of Sanganer is 12km south of Jaipur and has a ruined palace, a group of Jain temples with fine carvings (to which entry is restricted) and two ruined tripolias (triple gateways). The main reason to visit, however, is to see its handmade paper- and block-printing shops, workshops and factories (mostly found around the main drag, Stadium Rd), where you can see the products being made. You can also walk down towards the riverbank to see the enormous, brightly coloured fabrics drying in the sun as they hang on huge racks.

Salim's Paper (☎ 2730222; www.handmade-paper.com; Gramodyog Rd, Sanganer; ☀ 9am-5pm) is the largest handmade paper factory in India, and offers tours. The paper is made from fabric scraps, and often decorated with petals or leaves. The 200 or so employees produce 40,000 sheets a day, which are exported all over the world. There's also a beautiful range of paper products for sale in the showroom.

For block-printed fabrics and blue pottery, there are a number of shops, including Sakshi (☎ 2731862; Laxmi Colony; ☀ shop 8.30am-8.30pm, factory 9am-6pm). You can see the block-printing workshop here, and even try your hand at block printing; it runs courses in block printing and blue pottery. There's a tremendous range of blue pottery and block-printed fabrics for sale.

i Getting There & Away

Local buses leave from the Ajmeri Gate in Jaipur for Sanganer every few minutes (₹12, one hour).

Bharatpur & Keoladeo Ghana National Park

☎ 05644 / POP 205,200

Bharatpur is famous for its wonderful Unesco-listed Keoladeo Ghana National Park, a wetland and significant bird sanctuary. Apart from the park, Bharatpur has a few historical vestiges, though it wouldn't be worth making the journey for these alone. The town is dusty, noisy and not particularly visitor friendly. Bharatpur hosts the boisterous and colourful Brij Festival just prior to Holi celebrations.

The entrance to Keoladeo Ghana National Park lies 2km to the south of Bharatpur's centre.

o Sights

Lohagarh

FORT

The still-inhabited, 18th-century Lohagarh, Iron Fort, was so named because of its sturdy defences. Despite being somewhat forlorn and derelict it is still impressive, and sits at the centre of town, surrounded by a moat. There's a north entrance, at Aust-dhatu (Eight-Metal) Gate – apparently the spikes on the gate are made of eight different metals – and a southern entrance, at Lohiya Gate.

Maharaja Suraj Mahl, constructor of the fort and founder of Bharatpur, built two towers, the Jawahar Burj and the Fateh Burj, within the ramparts to commemorate his victories over the Mughals and the British. The fort also contains three much decayed palaces within its precincts.

One of the palaces, which is centred on a tranquil courtyard, houses a seemingly forgotten museum. Upstairs you will find a rather ragtag display of royal artefacts, including weaponry. More impressive is the Jain sculpture gallery, which includes some beautiful 7th- to 10th-century pieces. The most spectacular feature of the museum, however, is the palace's original hammam (bathhouse), which retains some fine carvings and frescoes.

o Keoladeo Ghana National Park

This tremendous bird sanctuary and national park (Indian/foreigner ₹55/400, video ₹400, guide ₹150, bike/mountain-bike rental ₹25/50, binoculars rental ₹100; ☀ 6am-6pm Apr-Sep, 6.30am-5pm Oct-Mar) has long been recognised as one of the world's most important bird breeding and feeding grounds. In a good monsoon season, over one-third of the park can be submerged, hosting over 360 species within its 29 sq km. The marshland patchwork is a wintering area for aquatic birds, including visitors from Afghanistan, Turkmenistan, China and Siberia. The park is also home to deer, nilgai and boar, which can be readily spotted.

Keoladeo originated as a royal hunting reserve in the 1850s. It continued to supply the maharajas' tables with fresh game until as late as 1965. In 1982 Keoladeo was declared a national park and it was listed as a World Heritage Site in 1985.

Local campaigners have voiced concern in recent years at the increase in forest clearing to make way for small, tourism-related developments, such as the car park to your right as you enter the park. You'll notice that much of the park is no longer tree-shaded. They are also calling for a 2km 'no-construction zone' outside the park boundary. The current limit is 500m.

Visiting the Park

The best time to visit is from October to February, when you'll see many migratory birds.

Admission (₹400; sunrise to sunset) entitles you to one entrance per day. Guides cost ₹150 per hour. One narrow road (no motor-ised vehicles are permitted past checkpoint 2) runs through the park, but a number of tracks and pathways fan out from it and thread their way between the shallow wetlands. Generally speaking, the further away from the main gate you go, the more interesting the scenery, and the more varied the wildlife becomes.

Only the government-authorised cycle-rickshaws (recognisable by the yellow license plate) are allowed beyond checkpoint 2. You don't pay an admission fee for the drivers, but they charge ₹70 per hour. Some are very knowledgeable. However, these cycle-rickshaws can only travel along the park's larger tracks.

An excellent way to see the park is by hiring a bicycle at the park entrance. Having a bike is a wonderfully quiet way to travel, and allows you to avoid bottlenecks and take in the serenity on your own. However, we recommend that lone female travellers who wish to cycle do so with a guide (who will cycle alongside you), as we've had more than one report of lone women being harassed by young men inside the park in recent years.

You get a small map with your entrance ticket, although the park isn't big so it's difficult to get lost.

Almost all guesthouses have restaurants and even those without a proper bar can sort you out with a cold beer if you ask.

Shagun Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎) 9828687488; rajeevshagun@hotmail.com; d ₹150, s/d without bathroom ₹150/90) This unusual tree-shaded courtyard guesthouse, in a quiet corner of the old town, is extremely basic, and has only four rooms, but it comes with bags of character. It's run by the affable

Rajeev, a keen environmental campaigner who is knowledgeable about the bird sanctuary and the old fort. If you're entering the old town from the direction of the park, turn right after walking through Mathurara Gate then look out for the guesthouse name written on a wall in green paint and directing you down an alley to your left.

Alwar

📞0144 / POP 266,200

Alwar is perhaps the oldest of the Rajasthani kingdoms, forming part of the Matsya territories of Viratnagar in 1500 BC. It became known again in the 18th century under Pratap Singh, who pushed back the rulers of Jaipur to the south and the Jats of Bharatpur to the east, and who successfully resisted the Marathas. It was one of the first Rajput states to ally itself with the fledgling British empire, although British interference in Alwar's internal affairs meant that this partnership was not always amicable.

Alwar is the nearest town to Sariska Tiger Reserve (p130), and has a ruined fort and a rambling palace with an above-average museum hidden inside it. The town has relatively few tourists so there's a refreshing lack of hassle here.

👁 Sights

Bala Qila

FORT

This imposing fort stands 300m above Alwar, its fortifications hugging the steep hills that line the eastern edge of the city. Predating the time of Pratap Singh, it's one of the few forts in Rajasthan built before the rise of the Mughals, who used it as a base for attacking Ranthambhore. Mughal emperors Babur and Akbar have stayed overnight here, and Prince Salim (later Emperor Jehangir) was exiled in Salim Mahal for three years.

Now in ruins, the fort houses a radio transmitter station and parts can only be visited with permission from the superintendent of police. However, this is easy to get: just ask at the superintendent's office in the City Palace complex. You can walk the very steep couple of kilometres up to the fort entrance or take a 7km rickshaw ride.

City Palace

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Vinay Vilas Mahal) Below Bala Qila sprawls the colourful and convoluted City Palace complex, with massive gates and a tank reflecting a symmetrical series of ghats and pavilions. Today most of the complex is occupied by government offices, overflowing with piles of dusty papers and soiled by pigeons and splatters of paan (a mixture of betel nut and leaves for chewing).

Hidden within the City Palace is the excellent Alwar Museum (Indian/foreigner ₹5/50; ☎10am-5pm Tue-Sun).

Alwar Museum's eclectic exhibits evoke the extravagance of the maharajas' lifestyle: stunning weapons, stuffed Scottish pheasants, royal ivory slippers, erotic miniatures, royal vestments, a solid silver table, and stone sculptures, such as an 11th-century sculpture of Vishnu. Somewhat difficult to find in the Kafkaesque tangle of government offices, the museum is on the top floor of the palace, up a ramp from the main courtyard. However, there are plenty of people around to point you in the right direction and from there you can follow the signs.

Cenotaph of Maharaja Bakhtawar Singh

HISTORIC BUILDING

This double-storey edifice, resting on a platform of sandstone, was built in 1815 by Maharaja Vinay Singh, in memory of his father. To gain access to the cenotaph, take the steps to the far left when facing the palace. The cenotaph is also known as the Chhatra of Moosi Rani, after one of the mistresses of Bakhtawar Singh who performed sati (self-immolation) on his funeral pyre – after this act she was promoted to wifely status.

🍴 Sleeping & Eating

As not many tourists stop here, Alwar's hotels are mostly aimed at budget business travellers and aren't particularly great value.

Alwar Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $$

(📞2700012; 25-26 Manu Rd; s/d incl breakfast ₹1900/2700; 📞@📞) Set back from the road in a neatly manicured garden, this well-run hotel has spacious, comfortable rooms. It's easily the best option in town, and staff can be helpful with general information and sightseeing advice. Tours to Sariska Tiger

Reserve can be arranged. The Alwar Hotel also boasts a great multicuisine restaurant, Angeethi.

Hotel Aravali

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2332316; reservation.aravali@gmail.com; Nehru Rd; s/d ₹1800/2000, with AC from ₹2100/2400; 🍷🍴🍷) One of the town's better choices, this hotel has large, well-furnished rooms and big bathrooms. It has a decent restaurant (mains ₹120 to ₹270) and bar. The pool is open in summer only, and breakfast is only included with the AC rooms. Turn left out of the train station and it's 300m down the road.

RTDC Hotel Meenal

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2347352; Topsingh Circle; s/d ₹1400/1400; 🍷) A respectable option with bland and tidy rooms typical of the chain. It's located about 1km south of town on the way to Sariska, so it's quiet and leafy, though a long way from the action.

Prem Pavitra Bhojnalaya

INDIAN $

(near Hope Circle; mains ₹50-110; ☺10.30am-4pm & 6.30-10pm; 🍷) Alwar's renowned restaurant has been going since 1957. In the heart of the old town, it serves fresh, tasty pure veg food – try the delicious aloo parathas (bread stuffed with spicy potato) and palak paneer (unfermented cheese cubes in spinach purée). Servings are big; half-serves available.

You have to pay 10% extra to eat in the air-conditioned section – but it is worth it. Turn right out of the bus station, take the first left (towards Hope Circle) and it's on your left after 100m.

Angeethi

MULTICUISINE $$

(Alwar Hotel, Manu Rd; mains ₹75-200; ☺Tue-Sun; 🍷) Alwar Hotel's restaurant serves first-rate Indian, Continental and Chinese food; the South Indian selection is particularly good. It's slightly gloomy in the restaurant but you can eat in the pleasant gardens.

ICICI ATM Near the bus stand.

Merharwal's Internet Cyber Zoné (1 Company Bagh Rd; per hr ₹40; ☺7am-10pm) Opposite Inderlok restaurant.

State Bank of Bikaner & Jaipur (Company Bagh Rd) Changes travellers cheques and major currencies and has an ATM. Near the bus stand.

Tourist Office (☎ 2347348; Nehru Rd; ☺10am-5pm Mon-Sat) Helpful centre offering a map of Alwar and information on Sariska. Near the train station.

i Getting There & Around

A cycle-rickshaw between the bus and train stations costs ₹30. Look out for the shared taxis that ply fixed routes around town (₹10). They come in the form of white minivans and have the word 'Vahini' printed on their side doors. One handy route goes past Hotel Aravali, the tourist office and the train station before continuing on to the bus station and terminating a short walk from Vinay Vilas Mahal (the palace complex).

A return taxi to Sariska Tiger Reserve will cost you around ₹1200.

BUS

Services from Alwar bus station:

Bharatpur (₹113, four hours, every hour from 5am to 8.30pm)

Deeg (₹60, 2½ hours, every hour from 5am to 8.30pm)

Delhi (₹129, four hours, every 20 minutes from 5am to 9pm)

Jaipur (₹120, four hours, half-hourly from 6am to 10.30pm)

Sariska (₹30, one hour, half-hourly from 6am to 10.30pm)

TRAIN

There are around a dozen daily trains to Delhi (3AC/sleeper ₹170/585, three to four hours), leaving throughout the day. Most services go to Old Delhi.

There are 16 daily trains to Jaipur (three to four hours). Prices are almost identical to those for Delhi.

Sariska Tiger Reserve

Enclosed within the dramatic, shadowy folds of the Aravallis, the Sariska Tiger Reserve (Indian/foreigner ₹60/450, vehicle ₹250; ☺ticket sales 7am-3.30pm Oct-Mar, 6.30am-4pm Apr-Sep, park closes at sunset) is a tangle of remnant semi-deciduous jungle and craggy canyons sheltering streams and lush greenery. It covers 866 sq km (including a core area of 498 sq km), and is home to peacocks, monkeys, majestic sambars, nilgai, chital, wild boars and jackals.

Although Project Tiger has been in charge of the sanctuary since 1979, there has been a dramatic failure in tiger protection. In 2004 there were an estimated 18 tigers in Sariska; however, this was called into question after an investigation by the WWF. That report prompted the federal government to investigate what has happened to the tigers of this reserve.

Sariska is in any case a fascinating sanctuary. Unlike most national parks, it opens year-round, although the best time to spot wildlife is from November to March, and you'll see most wildlife in the evening. During July and August your chances of spotting wildlife are minimal, as the animals move to higher ground, and the park is open primarily for temple pilgrimage rather than wildlife viewing.

Proposals to stop private-car access and to end the free access to pilgrims visiting the Hanuman temple often get press coverage, but to date there has been no further action taken.

Sights

Besides wildlife, Sariska has some fantastic sights within the reserve and around its peripheries, which are well worth seeking out. If you take a longer tour, you can ask to visit one or more of these. A couple of them are also accessible by public bus.

Kankwari Fort

FORT

Deep inside the sanctuary, this imposing small jungle fort, 22km from Sariska, offers amazing views over the plains of the national park, dotted with red mud-brick villages. This is the inaccessible place that Aurangzeb chose to imprison his brother,

Dara Shikoh, Shah Jahan's chosen heir to the Mughal throne, for several years before he was beheaded.

A four- to five-hour 4WD safari (one to five passengers plus guide) to Kankwari Fort from the Forest Reception Office near the reserve entrance costs ₹1600, plus guide fee (₹150).

Bhangarh

HISTORIC SITE

Around 55km from Sariska, beyond the inner park sanctuary and out in open countryside, is this deserted, well-preserved and notoriously haunted city. Founded in 1631 by Madho Singh, it had 10,000 dwellings, but was suddenly deserted about 300 years ago for reasons that remain mysterious. Bhangarh can be reached by a bus that runs twice daily through the sanctuary (₹35) to nearby Golaka village. Check what time the bus returns, otherwise you risk getting stranded.

Tours

Private cars, including taxis, are limited to sealed roads. The best way to visit the park is by 4WD gypsy (open-topped, six-passenger 4WDs), which can explore off the main tracks. Gypsy safaris start at the park entrance and you'll be quoted ₹1050 for three

SARISKA'S TIGER TALE

Sariska Tiger Reserve took centre stage in one of India's most publicised wildlife dramas. In 2005 an Indian journalist broke the news that the tiger population here had been eliminated, a report that was later confirmed officially after an emergency census was carried out.

An inquiry into the crisis recommended fundamental management changes before tigers be reintroduced to the reserve. Extra funding was proposed to cover the relocation of villages within the park as well as increasing the protection force. But action on the recommendations has been slow and incomplete despite extensive media coverage and a high level of concern in India.

Nevertheless, a pair of tigers from Ranthambhore National Park were moved by helicopter to Sariska in 2008. By 2010, five tigers had been transferred. However, in November 2010 the male of the original pair was found dead, having been poisoned by local villagers, who are not supportive of the reintroduction. The underlying problem – the inevitable battle between India's poorest and ever-expanding village populace with the rare and phenomenally valuable wildlife on their doorstep. Plans to relocate and reimburse villagers inside the park have largely failed to come to fruition, and illegal marble mining and clashes between cattle farmers and park staff have remained a problem.

In early 2012 the first cubs were sighted. In recent years Sariska's tiger population was thought to be 13 – made up of seven females, two males and four cubs all born in the park.

Only time will tell if this reintroduction is successful – inbreeding in the small population is an understandably high concern. As things stand, Sariska remains a sad indictment of tiger conservation in India, from the top government officials down to the underpaid forest guards.

hours, or ₹3200 for a full day. Guides are available (₹150 for three hours).

Bookings can be made at the Forest Reception Office (☎2841333; Jaipur Rd), directly opposite the Hotel Sariska Palace, which is where buses will drop you off.

Sleeping & Eating

RTDC Hotel Tiger Den HOTEL $$
(☎2841342; s/d incl breakfast ₹1900/2500, with AC ₹2400/3000; 🏠) Hotel Tiger Den isn't a pretty place – it's an unattractive bloc backed by a rambling garden and the accommodation and meals are drab. On the plus side the rooms have balconies and occupy a pleasant setting close to the reserve entrance. Bring a mosquito net or repellent.

Alwar Bagh HOTEL $$$
(☎2945151412; www.alwarbagh.com; r from ₹4000; 🏠🍷) This is a very peaceful option located in the village of Dhawala, between Alwar (14km) and Sariska (19km). The bright heritage-style hotel boasts traditional styling, spotless rooms and romantic tents, an organic orchard, a garden restaurant and a gorgeous swimming pool. Pick-up and drop-off from Alwar can be arranged as well as safaris of Sariska.

Sariska Tiger Heaven HOTEL $$$
(☎9828225163; www.sariskatigerheaven.com; s/d with full board ₹6000/7500; 🏠🍷🍷) This isolated place about 3km west of the bus stop at Thanagazi village has free pick-up on offer. Rooms are set in stone-and-tile cottages and have big beds and windowed alcoves. It's a tranquil, if overpriced, place to stay. Staff can arrange 4WDs and guides to the reserve.

Getting There & Away

Sariska is 35km from Alwar, a convenient town from which to approach the reserve. There are frequent (and crowded) buses from Alwar (₹30, one to 1½ hours, at least hourly) and on to Jaipur (₹85). Buses stop in front of the Forest Reception Office.

Ajmer

Ajmer is a bustling, chaotic city, 13km from the traveller haven of Pushkar. It surrounds the tranquil lake of Ana Sagar, and is itself ringed by the rugged Aravalli hills. Ajmer is Rajasthan's most important site in terms of Islamic history and heritage. It contains one of India's most important Muslim pilgrimage centres – the shrine of Khwaja Muin-ud-din Chishti, who founded India's most important Sufi order. As well as some superb examples of early Muslim architecture, Ajmer is also a significant centre for the Jain religion, possessing an amazing golden Jain temple. However, with Ajmer's combination of high-voltage crowds and traffic, most travellers choose to stay in laid-back Pushkar, and visit on a day trip.

Sight

Dargah of Khwaja Muin-ud-din Chishti ISLAMIC SHRINE
(www.dargahajmer.com; ☀4am-9pm summer, 5am-9pm winter) This is the tomb of Sufi saint Khwaja Muin-ud-din Chishti, who came to Ajmer from Persia in 1192 and died here in 1236. The tomb gained its significance during the time of the Mughals – many emperors added to the buildings here. Construction of the shrine was completed by Humayun, and the gate was added by the Nizam of Hyderabad. Mughal emperor Akbar used to make the pilgrimage to the dargah from Agra every year.

You have to cover your head in certain parts of the shrine, so remember to take a scarf or cap – there are plenty for sale at the bazaar leading to the dargah, along with floral offerings and delicious toffees.

The main entrance is through Nizam Gate (1915). Inside, the green and white mosque, Akbari Masjid, was constructed in 1571 and is now an Arabic and Persian school for religious education. The next gate is called the Nakkarkhana because it has two large nakkharas (drums) fixed above it.

A third gate, Buland Darwaza (16th century), leads into the dargah courtyard. Flanking the entrance of the courtyard are the degs (large iron cauldrons), one donated by Akbar in 1567, the other by Jehangir in 1631, for offerings for the poor.

Inside this courtyard, the saint's domed tomb is surrounded by a silver platform. Pilgrims believe that the saint's spirit will intercede on their behalf in matters of illness, business or personal problems, so the notes and holy string attached to the railings around are thanks or requests.

Pilgrims and Sufis come from all over the world on the anniversary of the saint's death, the Urs, in the seventh month of the lunar calendar, Jyaistha. Crowds can be suffocating. Bags must be left in the cloakroom (₹10 each, with camera ₹20) outside the main entrance.

Adhai-din-ka-Jhonpra

HISTORIC SITE

(Two-and-a-Half-Day Building) Beyond the Dargah of Khwaja Muin-ud-din Chishti, on the town outskirts, are the extraordinary ruins of the Adhai-din-ka-Jhonpra mosque. According to legend, construction in 1153 took only two-and-a-half days. Others say it was named after a festival lasting two-and-a-half days. It was originally built as a Sanskrit college, but in 1198 Mohammed of Ghori seized Ajmer and converted the building into a mosque by adding a seven-arched wall covered with Islamic calligraphy in front of the pillared hall.

Nasiyan (Red) Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

(Prithviraj Marg; admission ₹10; ⌚ 8.30am-5.30pm) This marvellous Jain temple, built in 1865, is also known as the Golden Temple, due to its amazing display in the double-storey temple hall. ### Haveli Heritage Inn

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2621607; www.haveliheritageinn.com; Kutchery Rd; r ₹900-2875; 🏠) Set in a 140-year-old haveli, this is a welcoming city-centre oasis and arguably Ajmer's best midrange choice. The high-ceilinged rooms are spacious (some are almost suites), simply decorated, air-cooled and set well back from the busy road. There's a pleasant, grassy courtyard and the hotel is infused with a family atmosphere, complete with home-cooked meals.

Badnor House

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(☎ 2627579; www.badnorhouse.com; d incl breakfast ₹3000; 🏠🍷) This guesthouse provides an excellent opportunity to stay with a delightful family and receive down-to-earth hospitality. There are three heritage-style doubles and an older-style, spacious and comfortable self-contained suite.

Eating

Honeydew

MULTICUISINE $$

(☎ 2622498; Station Rd; mains ₹120-300; ☺ 9am-11pm) The Honeydew offers a great selection of veg and nonveg Indian, Chinese and Continental food in a pleasant, clean, relaxed, but overly dim, atmosphere. It has long been one of Ajmer's best, and is the restaurant of choice for Mayo College students having a midterm treat. The ice cream, milkshakes and floats will keep you cool.

Mango Curry/Mango Masala

INDIAN, VEGETARIAN $$

(☎ 01452422100; Sadar Patel Marg; mains ₹100-280; ☺ 9am-11pm) With dim, barlike lighting and nursery school decor, this is a popular Ajmer hang out. It's divided in two: Mango Curry is no alcohol and vegetarian, while Mango Masala has plenty of good nonveg options. Pizzas, Chinese, and North and South Indian are available throughout, plus cakes, ice cream and a bakery-deli.

Pushkar

Pushkar has a magnetism all of its own, and is quite unlike anywhere else in Rajasthan. It's a prominent Hindu pilgrimage town and devout Hindus should visit at least once in their lifetime. The town curls around a holy lake, said to have appeared when Brahma dropped a lotus flower. It also has one of the world's few Brahma temples. With 52 bathing ghats and 400 milky-blue temples, the town often hums with pujas (prayers) generating an episodic soundtrack of chanting, drums and gongs, and devotional songs.

The result is a muddle of religious and tourist scenes. The main street is one long bazaar, selling everything to tickle a traveller's fancy, from hippy-chic tie-dye to didgeridoos. Despite the commercialism and banana pancakes, the town remains enchantingly small and authentically mystic.

Pushkar is only 11km from Ajmer, separated by Nag Pahar, the Snake Mountain.

👁 Sights

Shiva Temples

HINDU TEMPLE

About 8km southwest of the town (past the turn-off to Saraswati Temple) is a collection of Shiva temples near Ajaypal, which make a great trip by motorbike (or bike if you're fit and start early in the day), through barren hills and quiet villages. Be warned: the track is hilly and rocky.

Another Shiva temple is about 8km north of Pushkar, tucked down inside a cave, which would make for a good excursion.

Ghats

Fifty-two bathing ghats surround the lake, where pilgrims bathe in the sacred waters. If you wish to join them, do so with respect. Remember, this is a holy place: remove your shoes and don't smoke or take photographs.

Some ghats have particular importance: Vishnu appeared at Varah Ghat in the form of a boar, Brahma bathed at Brahma Ghat, and Gandhi's ashes were sprinkled at Gandhi Ghat, formerly Gau Ghat.

Activities

Shannu's Riding School

HORSE RIDING

(📍 2772043; www.shannus.weebly.com; Panch Kund Marg; ride/lesson per hr ₹400) French-Canadian and long-time Pushkar resident Marc Dansereau can organise riding lessons and horse safaris on his graceful Marwari steeds. You can stay here too (p138). The ranch is on the southeastern fringes of Pushkar, off the Ajmer Road.

For music, contact Birju, who's been playing for around 20 years, and charges from ₹350 for two hours. He often conducts evening performances (7pm to 8pm), and also sells instruments. For dance, contact Hemant.

Cooking Bahar

COOKING

Tours

Plenty of people in Pushkar offer short camel rides (around ₹200 per hour), which are a good way to explore the starkly beautiful landscape – a mixture of desert and rocky hills – around town. Sunset rides are the most popular. Ask for recommendations at your hotel. For longer camel treks, prices start at around ₹500 per person per day for a group of four. You can head out to Jodhpur (five to six days) or even Jaisalmer (10 to 12 days). Numerous operators line Ajmer Rd, but note, these places are less professional than the operators in Jaisalmer and Bikaner.

Sleeping

Owing to Pushkar's star status among backpackers, there are more budget than mid-range options, though many have a selection of midrange-priced rooms. At the time of the camel fair, prices are up to threefold or more, and it's essential to book several weeks ahead.

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 2773452; vinodmilkman@hotmail.com; off Heloj Rd; dm/r without bathroom ₹150/300, r ₹500-700; 🍽️ @ 🍷) Milkman is a cosy guesthouse in a backstreet location with relaxing rooftop retreat featuring the Ooh-la-la Café and a lawn with high-altitude tortoises. The rooms are all brightly decorated with paintings. Some of the cheaper rooms are small and doorways are low, though the bright colours, cleanliness and friendly family atmosphere keep this place cheerful.

Hotel White House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 2772147; www.pushkarwhitehouse.com; off Heloj Rd; r ₹250-850, with AC ₹1000-1300; 🍽️ @) This place is indeed white, with spotless rooms. Some are decidedly on the small side, but the nicest are generous and have balconies to boot. There is good traveller fare and green views from the plant-filled rooftop restaurant. It's efficiently run by a tenacious businesslike mother-and-son team. Yoga is offered.

Hotel Akash HOTEL $
(☎ 2772498; filterboy21@yahoo.com; d ₹600, s/d without bathroom ₹300/500) A simple budget place with keen young management and a large tree sprouting up from the courtyard to shade the rooftop terrace. Rooms are basic fan-cooled affairs that open out to a balcony restaurant.

★ Inn Seventh Heaven HERITAGE HOTEL $$
(☎ 5105455; www.inn-seventh-heaven.com; Chotti Basti; r ₹1100-3000; ☎ @ ☎) You enter this lovingly converted haveli through heavy wooden doors and into an incense-perfumed courtyard, centred with a marble fountain and surrounded by tumbling vines. There are just a dozen individually decorated rooms situated on three levels, all with traditionally crafted furniture and comfortable beds. Rooms vary in size, from the downstairs budget rooms to the spacious Asana suite. On the roof you'll find the excellent Sixth Sense restaurant as well as sofas and swing chairs for relaxing with a book. Early booking (two-night minimum, no credit cards) is recommended.

Hotel Shannu's Ranch Inn GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 2772043; www.shannu.weebly.com; Panch Kund Marg; s/d ₹1000/1500, ste ₹2000) Especially for horse lovers but not exclusively so, this relaxed, family-run hotel is just a short walk from the lake. There is a large garden compound featuring the family home, separate guest accommodation and, of course, the stables housing Marc's beloved Marwari horses (p135). There are usually a couple of friendly dogs wandering around. The large suites easily accommodate a family of five.

Hotel Navaratan Palace HOTEL $$

PUSHKAR CAMEL FAIR

Come the month of Kartika, the eighth lunar month of the Hindu calendar and one of the holiest, Thar camel drivers spruce up their ships of the desert and start the long walk to Pushkar in time for Kartik Purnima (Full Moon). Each year around 200,000 people converge here, bringing with them some 50,000 camels, horses and cattle. The place becomes an extraordinary swirl of colour, sound and movement, thronged with musicians, mystics, tourists, traders, animals, devotees and camera crews.

Trading begins a week before the official fair (a good time to arrive to see the serious business), but by the time the RTDC mela (fair) starts, business takes a back seat and the bizarre sidelines (snake charmers, children balancing on poles etc) jostle onto centre stage. Even the cultural program seems peculiar, with events such as a contest for the best moustache, and most beautifully decorated camel. Visitors are encouraged to take part: pick up a program from the RTDC office and see if you fancy taking part in the costumed wedding parade, or join a 'Visitors versus Locals' sports contest such as traditional Rajasthani wrestling.

It's hard to believe, but this seething mass is all just a sideshow. Kartik Purnima is when Hindu pilgrims come to bathe in Pushkar's sacred waters. The religious event builds in tandem with the camel fair in a wild, magical crescendo of incense, chanting and processions to dousing day, the last night of the fair, when thousands of devotees wash away their sins and set candles afloat on the holy lake.

Although fantastical, mystical and a one-off, it must be said that it's also crowded, touristy, noisy (light sleepers should bring earplugs) and occasionally tacky. Those affected by dust and/or animal hair should bring appropriate medication. However, it's a grand epic and is not to be missed if you're anywhere within camel-spitting distance.

It usually takes place in November but dates change according to the lunar calendar.

rooftop terrace is very communal, with guests mingling, munching and watching the satellite TV.

Hotel Pushkar Palace HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2772001; www.hotelpushkarpalace.com; r incl breakfast ₹7000; 🍷🍷) Once belonging to the maharaja of Kishangarh, the top-end Hotel Pushkar Palace boasts a romantic lakeside setting. The rooms have carved wooden furniture and beds, and the suites look directly out onto the lake: no hotel in Pushkar has better views. A pleasant outdoor dining area overlooks the lake.

Eating

Pushkar has plenty of atmospheric eateries with lake views and menus reflecting backpacker tastes and preferences. Strict vegetarianism, forbidding even eggs, is the order of the day.

Shri Vokatesh INDIAN $

(Chooti Basti; mains ₹40-90; ☺ 9am-10pm) Head to this no-nonsense locals favourite and tuck into some dhal, paneer or kofta, before mopping up the sauce with some freshly baked chapatis and washing it all down with some good old-fashioned chai. The thalis (₹70 to ₹130) are excellent value too. There's some upstairs seating overlooking the street.

Falafel Wrap Stalls MIDDLE EASTERN $

(Sadar Bazaar; wraps ₹60-120; ☺ 7.30am-10.30pm) Perfect for quelling a sudden attack of the munchies, and a big hit with Israeli travellers, these two adjacent roadside joints knock up a choice selection of filling falafel-and-hummus wraps.

Om Shiva Garden Restaurant MULTICUISINE $

(☎ 5105045; mains ₹70-170; ☺ 7.30am-late) A traveller stalwart, Om Shiva continues to satisfy with its ₹80 buffet. Wood-fired pizzas and espresso coffee feature on the menu.

Sixth Sense MULTICUISINE $$

(Inn Seventh Heaven, Chotti Basti; mains ₹80-200; ☺ 8.30am-4pm & 6-10pm; 🍷) This chilled rooftop restaurant is a great place to head to even if you didn't score a room in its popular hotel. The pizza and Indian seasonal vegetables and rice are all serviceable, as are the filter coffee and fresh juice. Its ambience is immediately relaxing and the pulley apparatus that delivers food from the ground-floor kitchen is very cunning.

Save room for the desserts, such as the excellent homemade tarts.

Naryan Café CAFE $$

(Mahadev Chowk, Sadar Bazaar; juices from ₹80, breakfast from ₹90) Busy any time of day, this is particular popular as a breakfast stop: watch the world go by with a fresh coffee or juice and an enormous bowl of homemade muesli, topped with a mountain of fruit.

Sunset Café MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹75-200; ☺ 7.30am-midnight; 🍷) Right on the eastern ghats, this cafe has sublime lake views. It offers the usual traveller menu, including curries, pizza and pasta, plus there's a German bakery serving reasonable cakes. The lakeside setting is perfect at sunset and gathers a crowd.

Out of the Blue ITALIAN $$

(Sadar Bazaar; mains ₹100-200; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍷) Distinctly a deeper shade of blue in this sky-blue town, Out of the Blue is a reliable restaurant. The menu ranges from noodles and momos (Tibetan dumplings) to pizza, pasta (those momos occasionally masquerade as ravioli) and pancakes. A nice touch is the street-level espresso coffee bar and German bakery.

Honey & Spice MULTICUISINE $$

(Laxmi Market, off Sadar Bazaar; mains ₹90-340; ☺ 7.30am-6.45pm) 🍷 Run by a friendly family, this tiny wholefood breakfast and lunch place has delicious South Indian coffee and homemade cakes. Even better are the salads and hearty vegetable stews served with brown rice – delicious, wholesome and a welcome change from frequently oil-rich Indian food.

Shopping

Pushkar's Sadar Bazaar is lined with enchanting little shops and is a good place to pick up gifts. Many of the vibrant textiles come from the Barmer district south of Jaisalmer. There's plenty of silver and beaded jewellery catering to foreign tastes, and some old tribal pieces, too. As Pushkar is touristy, you'll have to haggle.

Lala International CLOTHING

(Sadar Bazaar; ☺ 9.30am-8pm) Brilliantly colourful women's clothing, with modern designs but Indian in theme. Dresses and skirts start from around ₹500. Prices are clearly labelled and fixed.

Khadi Gramodhyog CLOTHING

(Sadar Bazaar; ☺ 10am-6pm Mon-Sat) Khadi Gramodhyog, almost hidden on the main drag, is a fixed-price shop selling traditional hand-woven shirts, scarves and shawls.

i Information

Foreign-card-friendly ATMs and unofficial money-changers are dotted around Sadar Bazaar. Internet cafes are sprinkled around the lanes, and tend to charge ₹40 per hour, but most guesthouses and many restaurants and cafes have free wi-fi.

Post Office (off Heloj Rd; ☎ 9.30am-5pm) Near the Marwar bus stand.

State Bank of Bikaner & Jaipur (SBBJ; Sadar Bazaar; ☎ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 12.30pm Sat) Changes travellers cheques and cash. The SBBJ ATM accepts international cards.

Thomas Cook (Sadar Bazaar; ☎ 9.30am-6.30pm Mon-Sat) Changes cash and travellers cheques and also provides train and flight ticketing.

Tourist Office (☑ 01452772040; Hotel Sarovar; ☎ 10am-5pm) Free maps and camel fair programs. Located in the grounds of RTDC Hotel Sarovar.

DANGERS & ANNOYANCES

Beware of anyone peddling flowers to offer as a puja (prayer): before you know it you'll be whisked to the ghats in a well-oiled hustle and asked for a personal donation of up to ₹1000. Some priests do genuinely live off the donations of others and this is a tradition that goes back centuries – but walk away if you feel bullied and always agree on a price before taking a red ribbon (a 'Pushkar passport') or flowers.

During the camel fair, Pushkar is besieged by pickpockets working the crowded bazaars. You can avoid the razor gang by not using thin-walled daypacks and by carrying your daypack in front of you. At any time of year, watch out for stray motorbikes in the bazaar.

i Getting There & Away

Frequent buses to/from Ajmer (₹14, 30 minutes) stop on the road heading eastwards out of town; other buses leave from the Marwar bus stand to the north. A private taxi to Ajmer costs around ₹300 (note that it's almost always more expensive in the opposite direction). When entering Pushkar by car there is a toll of ₹20 per person.

Local travel agencies sell tickets for private buses – you should shop around. These buses generally leave from Ajmer, but the agencies should provide you with free connecting transport. Check whether your bus is direct as many services from Pushkar aren't. And note, even if they are direct buses they may well stop for some time in Ajmer, meaning it's often quicker to go to Ajmer first and then catch another bus from there.

i Getting Around

There are no autorickshaws, but it's a breeze to get around on foot. If you want to explore the surrounding countryside, you could try hiring a scooter (₹250 per day) from one of the many places around town. For something more substantial, try Shreeram Enfield Gairej (Ajmer Rd; Enfield hire per day ₹500, deposit ₹50,000). They hire Enfield Bullets for ₹500 per day and sell them from ₹60,000.

Ranthambhore National Park

This famous national park, open from 1 October to 30 June, is the best place to spot wild tigers in Rajasthan. Comprising 1334 sq km of wild jungle scrub hemmed in by rocky ridges, at its centre is the 10th-century Ranthambhore Fort. Scattered around the fort are ancient temples and mosques, hunting pavilions, crocodile-filled lakes and vine-covered chhatris (burial tombs). The park was a maharajas' hunting ground until 1970, a curious 15 years after it had become a sanctuary. Tiger numbers are reasonably healthy for a park of Ranthambhore's size (around 48 when surveyed in 2014), but the threat of poaching remains, requiring constant vigilance to protect the big cats.

Seeing a tiger is partly a matter of luck; leave time for two or three safaris to improve your chances. But remember there's plenty of other wildlife to see, including more than 300 species of birds.

It's 10km from Sawai Madhopur (the gateway town for Ranthambhore) to the first gate of the park, and another 3km to the main gate and Ranthambhore Fort. There's a bunch of cheap (and rather grotty) hotels near Sawai Madhopur train station, but the nicest accommodation is stretched out along Ranthambhore Rd, which eventually leads to the park. It's ₹50 to ₹100 for an auto from the train station to Ranthambhore Rd, depending on where you get off. Many hotels, though, will pick you up from the train station for free if you call ahead.

Activities

Safaris take place in the early morning and late afternoon, starting between 6am and 7am, and between 2pm and 3pm, depending on the time of year. Each safari lasts for around three hours. The mornings can be exceptionally chilly in the open vehicles, so bring warm clothes.

The best option is to travel by gypsy (six-person open-topped 4WD; Indian/foreigner ₹528/927 per person). You have a chance of seeing a tiger from a canter (20-seat open-topped truck; Indian/foreigner ₹400/800), but other passengers can be rowdy. Be aware that the rules for booking safaris (and prices) are prone to change. At present, you have to book online through the park's official website (<http://rajasthanwildlife.in>), which we highly recommend you do, or go in person to the Safari Booking Office, which is inconveniently located 1.5km from Hammir Circle, in the opposite direction to the park from the accommodation on Ranthambhore Rd. You cannot book safaris in person in advance of the day you want to do the safari (you can only do that online). To be sure of getting a seat in a vehicle, start queuing at least an hour (if not two) before the safaris are due to begin – a very early start for morning safaris!

To visit the magical 10th-century Ranthambhore Fort (☉ 6am-6pm) FREE on the cheap, join the locals who go there to visit the temple dedicated to Ganesh. Shared 4WDs (₹30 to ₹40 per person) leave from the train station for the park entrance – say 'national park' and they'll know what you want. From there, other shared 4WDs (₹20 per person) shuttle to and from the fort, which is inside the park.

Sleeping

Budget travellers may find the cheapest lodgings in Sawai Madhopur itself, but it isn't a particularly inspiring place to stay. All of the places on Ranthambhore Rd can help with safari bookings, though some are better at this than others. Some hotels may close when the park is closed.

Hotel Aditya Resort

HOTEL $

(☎ 9414728468; www.adityaresort.com; Ranthambhore Rd; r ₹400-700; 🍷@🍷) This friendly place represents good value for money and is one of the better of the ultra-cheapies in town. There are just six simple, unadorned rooms (get one with an outside window; only a couple have air-conditioning), and a basic rooftop restaurant. The keen young staff will help with safari bookings.

Hotel Tiger Safari Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 221137; www.tigersafariresort.com; Ranthambhore Rd; r ₹1600-2200; 🍷@🍷) A reasonable budget option, with spacious doubles and so-called cottages (larger rooms with bigger bathrooms) facing a garden and small pool. The management is adept at organising safaris, wake-up calls and early breakfasts before the morning safari, although like the other hotels they throw in a chunky commission. There's an expensive restaurant.

Hotel Ankur Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 220792; www.hotelankurresort.com; r incl breakfast ₹2000, cottages ₹2500; 🍷@🍷) Ankur Resort is good at organising safaris, wake-up calls and early breakfasts for tiger spotters. Standard rooms are fairly unadorned but clean and comfortable with TVs. The cottages boast better beds, fridge and settee overlooking the surrounding gardens and pool.

Vatika Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 222457; www.ranthambhorevatikaresort.com; Ranthambhore Rd; r ₹1800, incl breakfast/all meals ₹2250/3000; 🍷@🍷) A lovely little guest-house with simple but immaculate rooms, each with terrace seating overlooking a beautifully tended, flower-filled garden. It's about 1km beyond the main strip of accommodation on Ranthambhore Rd (although still 5km before the park's main gate) so much quieter than elsewhere. It's 3km from Hammir Circle.

Information

There's an ATM just by Hammir Circle, as well as others by the train station.

Post Office (Sawai Madhoper) Located 400m northeast of the train station.

Safari Booking Office (www.rajasthanwildlife.com) Seats in gypsies and canters can be reserved on the website, though a single gypsy and five canters are also kept for direct booking at the Forest Office. Located 500m from the train station.

Tiger Track Internet (☎ 222790; Ranthambhore Rd; per hr ₹60; ☉ 7am-10.30pm) Near Ankur Resort Hotel, 1.5km from Hammir Circle.

Tourist office (☎220808; Train Station; ☉9.30am-6pm Mon-Fri) Has maps of Sawai Madhopur, and can offer suggestions on safaris.

i Getting There & Away

BUS

There are very few direct buses to anywhere of interest so it's always preferable to take the train. Three direct buses leave for Bundi (6am, 6.45am and 2pm; ₹93; five hours) from the Tonk bus stand (take the second left out of the train station and the bus stand is on your right after the petrol station).

TRAIN

- Trains run almost hourly to Kota (sleeper ₹100, less than two hours), from where you can catch buses to Bundi.
- There are six daily trains to Jaipur (2nd-class seats/sleeper ₹90/170; two hours; 2.05am, 5.55am, 9.40am, 10.40am, 2.35pm and 7.15pm), although plenty of others run on selected days so you rarely have to wait more than an hour.
- Ten trains run daily around the clock to Delhi (sleeper/3AC ₹250/635, 5½ to eight hours).
- A daily train goes to Agra (Agra Fort station; sleeper ₹200, six hours, 11.15pm).
- For Keoladeo Ghana National Park, nine daily trains go to Bharatpur (sleeper/3AC ₹170/535, 2½ hours).

UDAIPUR & SOUTHERN RAJASTHAN

Bundi

☎0747 / POP 88,900

A captivating town with narrow lanes of Brahmin-blue houses, lakes, hills, bazaars and a temple at every turn, Bundi is dominated by a fantastical palace of faded parchment cupolas and loggias rising from the hillside above the town. Though an increasingly popular traveller hang-out, Bundi attracts nothing like the tourist crowds of Jaipur or Udaipur, nor are its streets choked with noisy, polluting vehicles or dense throngs of people. Few places in Rajasthan retain so much of the magical atmosphere of centuries past.

Bundi came into its own in the 12th century when a group of Chauhan nobles from Ajmer were pushed south by Mohammed of Ghori. They wrested the Bundi area from the Mina and Bhil tribes, and made Bundi the capital of their kingdom, known as Hadoti.

Bundi was loyal to the Mughals from the late 16th century onwards, but it maintained its independent status until incorporated into the state of Rajasthan after 1947.

o Sights

Bundi has around 60 beautiful baoris (step-wells), some right in the town centre. The majesty of many of them is unfortunately diminished by their lack of water today – a result of declining groundwater levels – and by the rubbish that collects in them which noone bothers to clean up. The most impressive, Raniji-ki-Baori (Queen's Step-Well), is 46m deep and decorated with sinuous carvings, including the avatars of Lord Vishnu. The Nagar Sagar Kund is a pair of matching step-wells just outside the old city's Chogan Gate.

Bundi Palace

PALACE

(Garh Palace; Indian/foreigner ₹20/200, camera/video ₹50/100; ☉8am-5pm) This extraordinary, partly decaying edifice – described by Rudyard Kipling as 'the work of goblins rather than of men' – almost seems to grow out of the rock of the hillside it stands on. Though large sections are still closed up and left to the bats, the rooms that are open hold a series of fabulous, fading turquoise-and-gold murals that are the palace's chief treasure. The palace was constructed during the reign of Rao Raja Ratan Ji Heruled (Ratan Singh; 1607–31) and added to by his successors.

If you are going up to Taragarh as well as the palace, get tickets for both at the palace entrance. Once inside the palace's Hathi Pol (Elephant Gate), climb the stairs to the Ratan Daulat or Diwan-e-Aam (Hall of Public Audience), with a white marble coronation throne. You then pass into the Chhatra Mahal, added by Rao Raja Chhatra Shabji in 1644, with some fine but rather weathered murals. Stairs lead up to the Phool Mahal (1607), whose murals include an immense royal procession, and then the Badal Mahal (Cloud Palace; also 1607), with Bundi's very best murals, including a wonderful Chinese-inspired ceiling, divided into petal shapes and decorated with peacocks and Krishnas.

Taragarh

FORT

(Star Fort; Indian/foreigner ₹20/200, camera/video ₹50/100; ☉8am-5pm) This ramshackle, partly overgrown 14th-century fort, on the hilltop above Bundi Palace, is a wonderful place to ramble around – but take a stick to battle

Jait Sagar

LAKE

Round the far side of the Taragarh hill, about 2km north from the centre of town, this picturesque, 1.5km-long lake is flanked by hills and strewn with pretty lotus flowers during the monsoon and winter months. At its near end, the Sukh Mahal (☀️ 10am-5pm) is a small summer palace surrounded by terraced gardens where Rudyard Kipling once stayed and wrote part of Kim.

Just past the eastern end of the lake is the atmospheric, partly overgrown Kshar Bag (Indian/foreigner ₹20/50, camera ₹50; ☀️ 9am-5pm), with the cenotaphs of 66 Bundi rulers and queens. Some have terrific, intricate carvings, especially of elephants and horses. The caretaker will probably show you round and detail the rulers' names, dates and number of wives – 17th-century ruler Maharaja Satru Sele apparently had 64 queens but even more are carved on his cenotaph. Fork right just after Kshar Bag to reach Shikar Burj, a small former royal hunting lodge (once there were tigers, deer and boars here) next to a water tank.

It's nice to visit Jait Sagar by bicycle; with a bike or autorickshaw you could combine it with other sights further out of town.

Tours

Kukki's World

TOUR

(☎️ 9828404527; www.kukkisworld.com; 43 New Colony; half-/full-day tour ₹1000/1600) OP 'Kukki' Sharma is a passionate amateur archaeologist who has discovered around 70 prehistoric rock painting sites in a lifetime's exploring around Bundi. His trips get you out into the villages and countryside, which he knows like the back of his hand. You can visit his collection of finds and select sites from his laptop at his house (about 300m south of the tourist office) beforehand. Vehicle hire is not included in the tour price.

Sleeping

Most accommodation clusters in the Balchand Para area beneath the palace. Most places will pick you up from the train station or bus stand if you call ahead. Mosquitoes can be a nuisance in places near Nawal Sagar: keep repellent handy.

RN Haveli

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 2443278, 9784486854; rnhavelibundi@yahoo.co.in; Rawle ka Chowk; s/d ₹500/700, without bathroom ₹250/350, with AC ₹800/1000; 🍷) This old, slightly rundown house has reasonably well-decorated rooms and a cute garden where you can eat the delicious home cooking. A sound budget choice.

Haveli Elephant Stable

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 9928154064; rajnandini1979@gmail.com; Surang Gate; dm ₹250, r ₹300-600) Once used to house 15 royal elephants, this basic guest-house is now a shanty home-from-home for backpackers with a sense of history. The six rooms are extremely simple affairs (some with 20ft-high ceilings!) and only one has hot water in its attached bathroom. The huge garden – dotted with elephant tether stones – is a fine place to hang out.

Lake View Paying

Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 2442326; lakeviewbundi@yahoo.com; r ₹300-600) Overseen by a kindly family, this guest-house has some rooms with lake views and stained-glass windows. The side rooms by the restaurant are a little gloomy, but with the lake on your doorsteps you're likely to hang out on the terrace instead. The nice little garden restaurant does multicuisine dishes for ₹70 to ₹150.

★ Haveli Braj Bhushanjee HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎️ 2442322; www.kiplingsbundi.com; r ₹1200-5000; 🍷🍷) This rambling, authentic, 200-year-old haveli is run by the very helpful and knowledgeable Braj Bhushanjee family, descendants of the former prime ministers of Bundi. It's an enchanting place with original stone interiors (plenty of low doorways), splendid rooftop views, beautiful, well-preserved murals, and all sorts of other historic and valuable artefacts.

The terrific range of accommodation includes some lovely, recently modernised rooms that are still in traditional style. It's a fascinating living museum where you can really get a feel for Bundi's heritage.

Haveli Katkoun

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎️ 2444311; www.katkounhavelibundi.com; s from ₹700, d ₹1200-3200; 🍷🍷) Just outside the town's western gate, Katkoun is a completely revamped haveli with friendly management. It boasts large, spotless rooms offering superb views to either the lake or palace, and has a good rooftop restaurant (mains ₹65 to ₹200).

Kasera Heritage View

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎️ 2444679; www.kaseraheritageview.com; s/d from ₹600/800; 🍷🍷🍷) A revamped haveli, Kasera has an incongruously modern lobby, but offers a range of slightly more authentic rooms. The welcome is friendly, it's all cheerfully decorated, the rooftop restaurant has great views, and discounts of 40% to 50% are frequently offered.

Bundi Vilas

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎️ 5120694; www.bundivilas.com; r incl breakfast ₹4500-5500; 🍷🍷) This 300-year-old haveli

up a side alley has been tastefully renovated with Jaisalmer sandstone, earth-toned walls and deft interior design. Sat in the lee of the palace walls, this guesthouse has commanding views of the town from the rooftop terrace (though furniture is kept inside due to the preponderance of visiting monkey).

Hotel Bundi Haveli

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2447861; www.hotelbundihaveli.com; r ₹2500-4500; 🍷🍷) The exquisitely renovated Bundi Haveli certainly leads the pack in terms of up-to-date style and sophistication. White walls, stone floors, colour highlights and framed artefacts are coupled with modern plumbing and electricity. Yes, it is very comfortable and relaxed and there's a lovely rooftop dining area boasting palace views and an extensive, mainly Indian menu (mains ₹90 to ₹250).

Nawal Sagar Palace

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2447050; www.nawalsagarpalace.com; r ₹2000-3000; 🍷) This 300-year-old former royal residence, once home to the ladies of the court, has a beautiful location, with buildings overlooking a grassy lawn (with restaurant seating), which in turn overlooks the lake. Rooms are huge, with some interesting old furniture and artwork; some have balconies with lake views.

Eating

Guesthouses and hotels provide the main eating options and many of them happily serve nonguests as well as guests. Bundi was once a dry town, so it's not a place for evening revelry; however, a cold beer can usually be arranged.

Out of the Blue

ITALIAN $$

(mains ₹130-220; ☺ 8am-10.30pm; 🍷) Bundi's Out of the Blue was set up by the owners of its namesake in Pushkar (p139), but has since outgrown and outpaced the original. It serves up some of the best Italian pizza and pasta we've had in Rajasthan (the presence of pork products on the nonveg menu adds to the authenticity) as well as the best coffee in town (₹50 to ₹100).

Rainbow Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹100-260; ☺ 7am-11pm; 🍷) Bohemian ambience with chillout tunes, floor-cushion seating and two types of bhang lassi (a blend of lassi and bhang, a derivative of marijuana). Located on the rooftop of the town's western gate and caged off from marauding macaques with a bamboo trellis.

Shopping

Yug Art

ART

(http://yugartbundi.com; near Surang Gate; ☺ 10am-7.30pm) Many art shops will offer you Rajsthani miniatures, but Yug Art is the first place that's offered to turn us into one. Provide a photo and you can be pictured on elephant back or in any number of classical scenes. Alternatively, Yug will record your India trip in a unique travel comic – you help with the script and he'll provide the artwork.

Information

There's an Axis Bank ATM on Sadar Bazaar and State Bank ATM west of Azad Park.

Front Page Cyber Cafe (Balchand Para; per hr ₹40; ☺ 8am-10pm)

Roshan Tour & Travel (☺ 8am-10pm) Internet cafe that also exchanges currency and books train tickets. Located about 300m south of the palace.

Tourist Office (☎ 2443697; Kota Rd; ☺ 9.30am-6pm Mon-Fri) Offers bus and train schedules, free maps and helpful advice.

Getting There & Away

BUS

For Ranthambhore, it's usually quicker to catch a bus to Kota, then hop on a train to Sawai Madhopur.

Direct services from Bundi bus stand:

Ajmer (₹135, four hours, hourly)

Jaipur (₹161, five hours, hourly)

Kota (₹30, 40 minutes, every 15 minutes)

Pushkar (₹146, 4½ hours, three daily)

Sawai Madhopur (₹104, four to five hours, three daily)

Udaipur (₹215, six hours, three daily)

TRAIN

There are no daily trains to Jaipur, Ajmer or Jodhpur. It's better to take a bus, or to catch a train from Kota or Chittorgarh.

♦ Two trains travel daily to Chittorgarh (sleeper ₹170). The 7.12am takes 3½ hours; the 9.16am takes 2½ hours.

♦ There are three daily trains to Sawai Madhopur (sleeper ₹100; 2½ to five hours; 5.35pm, 5.48pm and 10.35pm); the last train is the fastest.

♦ Two daily trains go to Delhi (Hazrat Nizamuddin). The 5.48pm (sleeper ₹260) takes nearly 12 hours; the 10.35pm (sleeper ₹315) takes just eight.

♦ There's one daily train to Agra (Agra Fort; sleeper ₹150, 12½ hours, 5.35pm).

★ Only one train goes daily to Udaipur, the 12963 Mewar Express (sleeper ₹210, five hours, 2.08am).

i Getting Around

An autorickshaw to the train station costs ₹50 to ₹70 by day and ₹100 to ₹120 by night.

Kota

☎0744 / POP 703.150

An easy day trip from Bundi, Kota is a gritty industrial, commercial town on the Chambal, Rajasthan's only permanent river. You can take boat trips along the river for some good bird- and crocodile-watching, or explore the city's old palace. It's best experienced as a day trip from Bundi.

👁 Sights & Activities

A lovely hiatus from the city is a Chambal River boat trip (10min per person ₹60, 1hr ₹1000, max 6 people; ☀10.30am-dusk). The river upstream of Kota is part of the Darrah National Park and once you escape the city it's beautiful, with lush vegetation and craggy cliffs on either side. It's an opportunity to spot a host of birds, as well as gharials (thin-snouted, fish-eating crocodiles) and muggers (keep-your-limbs-inside-the-boat crocodiles). Boats start from Chambal Gardens (Indian/foreigner ₹2/5), 1.5km south of the fort on the river's east bank.

City Palace & Fort

PALACE, FORT

(Indian/foreigner ₹30/200; ☀10am-4.30pm Sat-Thu) The fort and the palace within it make up one of the largest such complexes in Rajasthan. This was the royal residence and centre of power, housing the Kota principality's treasury, courts, arsenal, armed forces and state offices. Some of its buildings are now used as schools. The City Palace, entered through a gateway topped by rampant elephants, contains the offbeat Rao Madho Singh Museum (Indian/foreigner ₹10/100, camera ₹50; ☀10am-4.30pm), where you'll find everything for a respectable Raj existence, from silver furniture to weaponry, as well as perhaps India's most depressingly moth-eaten stuffed trophy animals.

The oldest part of the palace dates from 1624. Downstairs is a durbar (royal audience) hall with beautiful mirrorwork, while the elegant, small-scale apartments upstairs contain exquisite, beautifully preserved paintings, particularly the hunting scenes for which Kota is renowned.

To get here, it's around ₹30 to ₹40 in an autorickshaw from the bus stand, and at least ₹60 from the train station.

★ Festivals & Events

If you happen to hit Kota in October or November, check whether your visit coincides with the city's huge Dussehra Mela, during which massive effigies are built then spectacularly set aflame. Thousands of pilgrims descend on the city in the month of Kartika (October/November) for Kashavrai Patan. See the tourist office for festival programs.

i Information

Tourist Office (☎2327695; RTDC Hotel Chamber; ☀9.30am-6pm Mon-Sat) Has free maps of Kota. Turn left out of the bus stand, right at the second roundabout and it's on your right.

i Getting There & Away

BUS

Services from the main bus stand:

Ajmer (₹165, four to five hours, at least 10 daily)

Bundi (₹30, 40 minutes, every 15 minutes throughout the day)

Chittorgarh (₹135, four hours, half-hourly from 6am)

Jaipur (₹191, five hours, hourly from 5am)

Udaipur (₹241, six to seven hours, at least 10 daily)

TRAIN

Kota is on the main Mumbai-Delhi train route via Sawai Madhopur, so there are plenty of trains to choose from, though departure times aren't always convenient.

★ For Ranthambhore, there are more than two dozen daily trains to Sawai Madhopur (2nd-class seat/sleeper ₹65/140; one to two hours), so you rarely have to wait more than an hour.

★ Trains run almost hourly to Delhi (sleeper ₹270; five to eight hours), mostly to New Delhi or Hazrat Nizamuddin.

★ Six trains run daily to Jaipur (sleeper ₹205; four hours; 2.55am, 7.40am, 8.55am, 12.35pm, 5.20pm and 11.50pm), but there are many others on selected days so you'll rarely have to wait long.

★ Three daily trains go to Chittorgarh (sleeper ₹170; three to four hours; 1.25am, 6.10am and 8.45am).

★ Five fast trains go daily to Mumbai (sleepers ₹465; 14 hours; 7.50am, 2.25pm, 5.30pm, 11.20pm and 11.45pm).

Chittorgarh (Chittor)

📍 01472 / POP 96,200

Chittorgarh, the fort (garh) at Chittor, is the largest fort complex in India, and a fascinating place to explore. It rises from the plains like a huge rock island, nearly 6km long and surrounded on all sides by 150m-plus cliffs.

Its history epitomises Rajput romanticism, chivalry and tragedy, and it holds a special place in the hearts of many Rajputs. Three times (in 1303, 1535 and 1568) Chittorgarh was under attack from a more powerful enemy; each time, its people chose death before dishonour, performing jauhar. The men donned saffron martyrs' robes and rode out from the fort to certain death, while the women and children immolated themselves on huge funeral pyres. After the last of the three sackings, Rana Udai Singh II fled to Udaipur, where he established a new capital for Mewar. In 1616, Jehangir returned Chittor to the Rajputs. There was no attempt at resettlement, though it was restored in 1905.

👁 Sights

Chittorgarh

FORT

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, Sound & Light Show ₹75/200; ☀️ dawn-dusk, Sound & Light Show dusk) A zigzag ascent of more than 1km starts at Padal Pol and leads through six outer gateways to the main gate on the western side, the Ram Pol (the former back entrance). Inside Ram Pol is a still-occupied village that takes up a small northwestern part of the fort – turn right here for the ticket office. The rest of the plateau is deserted except for the wonderful palaces, towers and temples that remain from its heyday, with the addition of a few more recent temples. A loop road runs around the plateau, which has a deer park at the southern end.

➔ Meera & Kumbha Shyam Temples

Both of these temples southeast of the Rana Kumbha Palace (Fort) were built by Rana Kumbha in the ornate Indo-Aryan style, with classic, tall sikharas (spires). The Meera Temple, the smaller of the two, is now associated with the mystic-poetess Meerabai, a 16th-century Mewar royal who was poisoned by her brother-in-law, but survived due to the blessings of Krishna. The Kumbha Shyam Temple is dedicated to Vishnu and its carved panels illustrate 15th-century Mewar life.

➔ Tower of Victory

The glorious Tower of Victory (Jaya Stambha; Fort), symbol of Chittorgarh, was erected by Rana Kumbha in the 1440s, probably to commemorate a victory over Mahmud Khilji of Malwa. Dedicated to Vishnu, it rises 37m in nine exquisitely carved storeys, and you can climb the 157 narrow stairs (the interior is also carved) to the 8th floor, from where there's a good view of the area.

Below the tower, to the southwest, is the Mahasati (Fort) area where there are many sati stones – this was the royal cremation ground and was also where 13,000 women committed jauhar in 1535. The Samidheshwar Temple (Fort), built in the 6th century and restored in 1427, is nearby. Notable among its intricate carving is a Trimurti (three-faced) figure of Shiva.

➔ Gaumukh Reservoir

Walk down beyond the Samidheshwar Temple and at the edge of the cliff is a deep tank, the Gaumukh Reservoir, where you can feed the fish. The reservoir takes its name from a spring that feeds the tank from a gaumukh (cow's mouth) carved into the cliffside.

➔ Padmini's Palace

Continuing south, you reach the Kalika Mata Temple, an 8th-century sun temple damaged during the first sacking of Chittorgarh and then converted to a temple for the goddess Kali in the 14th century. Padmini's Palace stands about 250m further south, beside a small lake with a central pavilion. The bronze gates to this pavilion were carried off by Akbar and can now be seen in Agra Fort.

➔ Surajpol & Tower of Fame

Surajpol, on the fort's east side, was the main gate and offers fantastic views across the empty plains. A little further north, the 24m-high Tower of Fame (Kirtti Stambha; Fort), dating from 1301, is smaller than the Tower of Victory. Built by a Jain merchant, the tower is dedicated to Adinath, the first Jain tirthankar (one of the 24 revered Jain teachers) and is decorated with naked figures of various other tirthankars, indicating that it is a monument of the Digambara (sky-clad) order. A narrow stairway leads up the seven storeys to the top. Next door is a 14th-century Jain temple.

Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Amber Plaza

HOTEL $

(📍 248862; 32 Kidwai Nagar; r with/without AC ₹900/500; 🍷) Down a quietish street near the bus stand, this hotel has quite comfy, medium-sized rooms with bright decorations and a restaurant.

Udaipur

☎ 0294 / POP 389,400

Beside shimmering Lake Pichola, with the ochre and purple ridges of the wooded Aravalli Hills stretching away in every direction, Udaipur has a romantic setting unmatched in Rajasthan and arguably in all of India. Fantastical palaces, temples, havelis and countless narrow, crooked, colourful streets add the human counterpoint to the city's natural charms.

Udaipur's tag of 'the most romantic spot on the continent of India' was first applied in 1829 by Colonel James Tod, the East India Company's first Political Agent in the region. Today the romance is wearing ever so slightly thin as Udaipur strains to exploit it for tourist rupees. In the parts of the city nearest the lake, almost every building is a hotel, shop, restaurant, travel agent, or all four rolled into one. Ever-taller hotels compete for the best view, too many mediocre restaurants serve up near-identical menus, and noisy, dirty traffic clogs some of the streets that were made for people and donkeys.

Take a step back from the hustle, however, and Udaipur still has its magic, not just in its marvellous palaces and monuments, but in its matchless setting, the tranquility of boat rides on the lake, the bustle of its ancient bazaars, its lively arts scene, the quaint old-world feel of its better hotels, its endless tempting shops and some lovely countryside to explore on wheels, feet or horseback.

Udaipur was founded in 1568 by Maharana Uday Singh II following the final sacking of Chittorgarh by the Mughal emperor Akbar. Though this new capital of Mewar had a much less vulnerable location than Chittorgarh. Mewar still had to contend with repeated invasions by the Mughals and, later, the Marathas, until British intervention in the early 19th century. This resulted in a treaty that protected Udaipur from invaders while allowing Mewar's rulers to remain effectively all-powerful in internal affairs. The ex-royal family remains influential and in recent decades has been the driving force behind the rise of Udaipur as a tourist destination.

Sights

Lake Pichola

LAKE

Limpid and large, Lake Pichola reflects the cool grey-blue mountains on its rippling mirror-like surface. It was enlarged by Maharana Udai Singh II, following his foundation of the city, by flooding Picholi village, which gave the lake its name. The lake is now 4km long and 3km wide, but remains shallow and dries up completely during severe droughts. The City Palace complex, including the gardens at its southern end, extends nearly 1km along the lake's eastern shore.

Boat trips (adult/child 10am-2pm ₹400/200, 3-5pm ₹650/350; ☀️ 10am-5pm) leave roughly hourly from Rameshwar Ghat, within the City Palace complex (note, you have to pay ₹30 to enter). The trips make a stop at Jagmandir Island, where you can stay for as long as you like before taking any boat back. Take your own drinks and snacks, though, as those sold on the island are extortionately expensive. You can also take 30-minute boat rides (₹250 per person) from Lal Ghat, throughout the day without the need to enter the City Palace complex: it's worth checking in advance what time the popular sunset departure casts off.

City Palace

PALACE

(www.eternalmewar.in; adult/child ₹30/15, free if visiting City Palace Museum; ☀️ 7am-11pm) Surmounted by balconies, towers and cupolas towering over the lake, the imposing City

Palace is Rajasthan's largest palace, with a facade 244m long and 30.4m high. Construction was begun in 1599 by Maharana Udai Singh II, the city's founder, and it later became a conglomeration of structures (including 11 separate smaller palaces) built and extended by various maharanas, though it still manages to retain a surprising uniformity of design.

You can enter the complex through Badi Pol (Great Gate; 1615) at the northern end, or the Sheetla Mata Gate to the south. Tickets for the City Palace Museum are sold at both entrances. Note: you must pay the ₹30 City Palace entrance ticket in order to pass south through Chandra Chowk Gate, en route to the Crystal Gallery or Rameshwar Ghat for the Lake Pichola boat rides, even if you have a City Palace Museum ticket.

Inside Badi Pol, eight arches on the left commemorate the eight times maharanas were weighed here and their weight in gold or silver distributed to the lucky locals. You then pass through the three-arched Tripolia Gate (1711) into a large courtyard, Manek Chowk. Spot the large tiger-catching cage, which worked rather like an oversized mousetrap, and the smaller one for leopards.

DON'T MISS

DURBAR GLITZ

Many palaces in India have a durbar hall (royal reception hall). Usually the grandest room in the place, with a respectable number of chandeliers and gilt overlay, the durbar hall was dressed to impress – it was used by Indian rulers for official occasions, such as state banquets, and to hold meetings.

The restored Durbar Hall (p153) in the City Palace complex is one of India's most impressive, vast and lavish, with some of the country's biggest chandeliers. The walls display royal weapons and striking portraits of former maharanas of Mewar – a most distinguished-looking lot, who come from what is believed to be the oldest ruling dynasty in the world, spanning 76 generations.

The foundation stone of the hall was laid in 1909 by Lord Minto, the viceroy of India, during the reign of Maharana Fateh Singh, and it was originally named Minto Hall. The upper level of this high-ceilinged hall is surrounded by viewing galleries, where ladies of the palace could watch, in veiled seclusion, what was happening below. Nowadays, these are the Crystal Gallery (p152).

The Durbar Hall is included in visits to the Crystal Gallery and you will also see it if you go to the Gallery Restaurant (Durbar Hall; Durbar tea ₹325; ☀️ 9am-6pm). The hall still has the capacity to hold hundreds of people and can even be hired for conferences or social gatherings.

Udaipur

decorated with mirrors, tiles and paintings, and housing a large, varied collection of artefacts. It's entered from Ganesh Chowk, which you reach from Manek Chowk.

The City Palace Museum begins with the Rai Angan (Royal Courtyard), the very spot where Udai Singh met the sage who told him to build a city here. Rooms along one side contain historical paintings, including several of the Battle of Haldighati (1576), in which Mewar forces under Maharana Pratap, one of the great Rajput heroes, gallantly fought the army of Mughal emperor Akbar to a stalemate.

As you move through the palace, highlights include the Baadi Mahal (1699), where a pretty, central garden gives fine views over the city. Kishan (Krishna) Vilas has a remarkable collection of miniatures from the time of Maharana Bhim Singh (1778-1828). The story goes that Bhim Singh's daughter Krishna Kumari drank a fatal cup of poison here to solve the dilemma of rival princely suitors from Jaipur and Jodhpur, who were both threatening to invade Mewar if she didn't marry them. The Surya Choupad boasts a huge, ornamental sun (the symbol of the sun-descended Mewar dynasty) and opens into Mor Chowk (Peacock Courtyard) with its lovely mosaics of peacocks, the favourite Rajasthani bird.

The southern end of the museum comprises the Zenana Mahal, the royal ladies' quarters built in the 17th century. It now contains a long picture gallery with lots of royal hunting scenes (note the comic strip-like progression of the action in each painting). The Zenana Mahal's central courtyard, Laxmi Chowk, contains a beautiful white pavilion and a stable of howdahs, palanquins and other people carriers.

that Maharana Sajjan Singh ordered from F&C Osler & Co in England in 1877. The maharana died before it arrived, and all the items stayed forgotten and packed up in boxes for 110 years. The extraordinary, extravagant collection includes crystal chairs, sofas, tables and even beds. The rather hefty admission fee also includes entry to the grand Durbar Hall (City Palace Complex). Tickets are available at the City Palace gates or the Crystal Gallery.

Government Museum

MUSEUM

(☉10am-5pm Tue-Sun) FREE Entered from Ganesh Chowk, this has a splendid collection of jewel-like miniature paintings of the Mewar school and a turban that belonged to Shah Jahan, creator of the Taj Mahal. Stranger exhibits include a stuffed monkey holding a lamp. There are also regal maharana portraits in profile, documenting Mewar's rulers along with the changing fashions of the moustache.

Jagdish Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉5.30am-2pm & 4-10pm) Reached by a steep, elephant-flanked flight of steps, 150m north of the City Palace's Badi Pol entrance, this busy Indo-Aryan temple was built by Maharana Jagat Singh in 1651. The wonderfully carved main structure enshrines a black stone image of Vishnu as Jagannath, Lord of the Universe. There's also a brass image of the Garuda (Vishnu's man-bird vehicle) in a shrine facing the main structure.

Bagore-ki-Haveli

HISTORIC BUILDING

(admission ₹30; ☉10am-5pm) This gracious 18th-century haveli, set on the water's edge in the Gangaur Ghat area, was built by a Mewar prime minister and has since been carefully restored. There are 138 rooms set around courtyards, some arranged to evoke the period during which the house was inhabited, while others house cultural displays, including – intriguingly enough – the world's biggest turban.

The haveli also houses a gallery featuring a fascinating collection of period photos of Udaipur and a surreal collection of famous monuments carved out of polystyrene.

Sajjan Garh

PALACE

(Monsoon Palace) Perched on top of a distant mountain like a fairy-tale castle, this melancholy, neglected late 19th-century palace was constructed by Maharana Sajjan Singh. Originally an astronomical centre, it became a monsoon palace and hunting lodge. Now government owned, it's in a sadly dilapidated state but visitors stream up here for the marvellous views, particularly at sunset. It's 5km west of the old city as the crow flies, about 9km by the winding road.

At the foot of the hill you enter the 5-sq-km Sajjan Garh Wildlife Sanctuary (Indian/foreigner ₹20/160, car ₹60, camera/video free/₹200). A good way to visit is with the daily sunset excursion in a minivan driven by an enterprising taxi driver who picks up tourists at the entrance to Bagore-ki-Haveli at Gangaur Ghat every day at 5pm. The round trip costs ₹200 per person, including waiting time (but not the sanctuary fees). His minivan has 'Monsoon Palace-Sajjangarh Fort' written across the front of it. Alternatively, autorickshaws charge ₹200 including waiting time for a round trip to the sanctuary gate, which they are not allowed to pass. Taxis ferry people the final 4km up to the palace for ₹100 per person.

Vintage & Classic Car Collection

MUSEUM

(Garden Hotel, Lake Palace Rd; adult/child ₹250/150, incl lunch or dinner ₹400/300; ☎9am-9pm) The maharanas' car collection makes a fascinating diversion, for what it tells about their elite lifestyle and for the vintage vehicles themselves. Housed within the former state garage are 22 splendid vehicles, including a seven-seat 1938 Cadillac, complete with purdah system, the beautiful 1934 Rolls-Royce Phantom used in the Bond film Octopussy, and the Cadillac convertible that whisked Queen Elizabeth II to the airport in 1961. The museum is a 10-minute walk east along Lake Palace Rd (bear to the right at the staggered junction).

If you enjoy a vegetarian thali, the combined museum-and-meal ticket is a very good option (lunch 11.30am to 3pm, dinner 7.30pm to 10pm).

Activities

Bike Tours

Art of Bicycle

CYCLING

(☎8105289167; www.artofbicycletrips.com; 27 Gadiya Devra, inside Chandpol; half-day per person ₹1950) This well-run outfit offers a great way to get out of the city. The Lakecity Loop is a 30km half-day tour that quickly leaves Udaipur behind to have you wheeling through villages, farmland and along the shores of Fateh Sagar and Badi Lakes. Other options include a vehicle-supported trip further afield to Kumbhgarh and Ranakpur. Bikes are well-maintained and come with helmets.

Horse Riding

The wooded hills, villages and lakes around Udaipur are lovely riding country. You'll saddle up on Rajasthan's celebrated Marwari horses, known for their intelligence, stamina and cute inward-curving ears.

Pratap Country Inn

HORSE RIDING

(☎2583138; www.horseridingindia.in; Jaisamand Rd, Titaradi Village; 2hr rides ₹900, full day ₹2000) Run by the pioneer of horse safaris in Rajasthan, Maharaja Narendra Singh, this inn about 7km south of town organises day or part-day rides and long-distance safaris.

Krishna Ranch

HORSE RIDING

(☎9828059505; www.krishnaranch.com; full-day rides incl lunch ₹1200) Situated in beautiful countryside near Badi village, 7km northwest of Udaipur, and run by the owners of Kumbha Palace guesthouse (p157). Experienced owner-guide Dinesh Jain leads most trips himself, riding local Marwari horses through the surrounding hills. There are also attractive cottages (p154) at the ranch.

HELPING UDAIPUR'S STREET ANIMALS

The spacious Animal Aid Unlimited (☎9950531639, 9352511435; www.animalaidunlimited.com; Badi Village) refuge treats around 200 street animals a day (mainly dogs, donkeys and cows) and answers more than 3000 emergency rescue calls a year. The refuge welcomes volunteers and visitors: make contact in advance to fix a time between 9am and 5pm any day. It's in Badi village, 7km northwest of Udaipur. A round trip by autorickshaw, including waiting time, costs around ₹400.

Call Animal Aid Unlimited if you see an injured or ill street animal in Udaipur.

Massage

Ayurvedic Body Care

AYURVEDA, MASSAGE

(☎ 2413816; www.ayurvedicbodycare.com; 38 Lal Ghat; ☀ 10am-8pm) A small and popular old city operation offering ayurvedic massage at reasonable prices, including a 15-minute head or back massage (₹250) and a 45-minute full-body massage (₹750). It also sells ayurvedic products such as oils, moisturisers, shampoos and soaps.

Walking

The horse-riding specialists at Krishna Ranch also offer guided hikes through the same beautiful countryside, passing through small tribal villages en route. Multiday hikes can be arranged too.

Milletts of Mewar

WALKING

(☎ 8890419048; www.milletsofmewar.com; Hanuman Ghat; ₹1000 per person, min 2 people) Health-food specialists Milletts of Mewar (p158) organises 2½-hour city tours on which you can meet local artisans who live and work in Udaipur. Tours should be booked a day in advance; they leave from the restaurant at 10am.

Courses

Cooking

Shashi Cooking Classes

COOKING

(☎ 9929303511; www.shashicookingclasses.blogspot.com; Sunrise Restaurant, 18 Gangaur Ghat Rd; 4hr class ₹1500, max 4 students) Readers rave about Shashi's high-spirited classes, teaching many fundamental Indian dishes.

Sushma's Cooking Classes

COOKING

(☎ 7665852163; www.cookingclassesinudaipur.com; Hotel Krishna Niwas, 35 Lal Ghat; 2hr class ₹1000) A highly recommended cooking class run by the enthusiastic Sushma. Classes offer up anything from traditional Rajasthani dishes and spice mixes, through bread-making to the all-important method of making the perfect cup of chai.

Music

Prem Musical Instruments

MUSIC

(☎ 2430599; 28 Gadiya Devra; lessons per hr ₹400; ☀ 10.30am-6pm) Rajesh Prajapati (Bablu) is a local musician who gives sitar, tabla and flute lessons. He also sells and repairs instruments and can arrange performances.

Painting

Ashoka Arts

PAINTING

(Hotel Gangaur Palace, Gadiya Devra; lessons per hr ₹200) Learn the basics of classic miniature painting from a local master.

Yoga

Prakash Yoga

YOGA

(☎ 2524872; inside Chandpol; class by donation; ☀ classes 8am & 7pm) A friendly hatha yoga centre with hour-long classes. The teacher has over 20 years' experience. It's tucked inside Chandpol, near the footbridge, but well-signed.

Tours

Heritage Walks

WALKING

(☎ 9414164680; www.heritagerojalrajasthan.com; City Palace Rd; tours per person ₹200; ☀ tours 8am & 5pm) If you want to really drill into Udaipur's history, architecture and religious sites, you could do a lot worse than joining one of the twice-daily expert-led tours from Heritage Walks, which will show you the Lal Ghat area that exists beyond the souvenir shops. Tours last two hours.

Festivals & Events

If you're in Udaipur in February or March, you can experience the festival of Holi Udaipur-style, when the town comes alive in a riot of colour. Holi is followed in March/April by the procession-heavy Mewar Festival – Udaipur's own version of the springtime Gangaur festival.

Sleeping

Accommodation clusters where most people want to stay – close to the lake, especially on its eastern side, in and near the narrow Lal Ghat. This area is a tangle of streets and lanes (some quiet, some busy and noisy), close to the City Palace and Jagdish Temple. It's Udaipur's tourist epicentre and the streets are strung not just with lodgings but also with tourist-oriented eateries and shops whose owners will be doing their best to tempt you in.

Directly across the water from Lal Ghat, Hanuman Ghat has a slightly more local vibe and often better views, though you're certainly not out of the tourist zone.

Lal Ghat Area

Many budget and midrange lodgings cluster here, with a particular concentration along the relatively peaceful Lal Ghat.

Nukkad Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 2411403; nukkad\_raju@yahoo.com; 56 Ganesh Ghati; s/d without bathroom ₹100/200, r ₹300-500; @ ☎) Nukkad has simple, fan-cooled, very clean, good-value rooms, plus a sociable, breezy, upstairs restaurant with very good Indian and international dishes. You can join afternoon cooking classes and morning yoga sessions (by donation) without stepping outside the door – just don't stay out past curfew or get caught washing your clothes in your bathroom.

Lal Ghat Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 2525301; www.lalghat.com; 33 Lal Ghat; dm ₹150, r from ₹750, without bathroom ₹250; 🍷🍷🍷) This mellow guesthouse by the lake was one of the first to open in Udaipur, and it's still a sound choice, with an amazing variety of older and newer rooms. Accommodation ranges from a spruce, nonsmoking dorm (with curtained-off beds and lockers under the mattresses) to the best room, which sports a stone wall, big bed, big mirror and AC. Most rooms have lake views and those in the older part of the building generally have more character. There's a small kitchen for self-caterers.

Pratap Bhawan Paying Guest House GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 2560566; 12 Lal Ghat; s ₹1000-1200, d ₹1450-1950; 🍷🍷) A curving marble staircase leads up from the wide lobby to large, sparkling-clean rooms with good, big bathrooms and, in many cases, cushioned window seats. A deservedly popular place, even if recent price hikes have spun the place slightly out of the budget category. The rooftop terrace is nice for sitting out at night.

Poonam Haveli HOTEL $$
(☎ 2410303; www.hotelpoonamhaveli.com; 39 Lal Ghat; r ₹1800-2500; 🍷🍷🍷) A fairly modern place decked out in traditional style, friendly Poonam has 16 spacious, spotlessly clean rooms with big beds and spare but tasteful decor, plus pleasant sitting areas. None of the rooms enjoy lake views, but the rooftop restaurant does, and boasts 'real Italian' pizzas among the usual Indian and traveller fare.

Jheel Palace Guest House GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 2421352; www.jheelguesthouse.com; 56 Gangaur Ghat; r ₹1000-3000; 🍷🍷) Right on the lake edge (when the lake is full), Jheel Palace has three nice rooms with little balconies and four-poster beds, and three more ordinary ones. All are AC. Staff are accommodating and hands-off, and there's a good Brahmin pure-veg rooftop restaurant (no beer). Tight budgets will appreciate the basic ₹300 room.

Hotel Gangaur Palace HERITAGE HOTEL $$
(☎ 2422303; www.ashokahaveli.com; Gadiya Devra; s ₹400-2000, d ₹500-2500; 🍷🍷🍷) This elaborate, faded haveli is set around a stone-pillared courtyard, with a wide assortment of rooms on several floors. It's gradually moving upmarket and rooms range from windowless with flaking paint to bright and recently decorated with lake views. Many have wall paintings and window seats.

The hotel also boasts an in-house palm reader, art shop, art school (p155), the good Cafe Namaste (p158) and a rooftop restaurant serving the same fare as the cafe as well as multicuisine dishes.

★ Jagat Niwas Palace Hotel HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎ 2420133; www.jagatniwaspalace.com; 23-25 Lal Ghat; r ₹3250-4250, without lake view ₹1850-2950; 🍷🍷🍷) This leading top-end hotel set in two converted lakeside havelis takes the location cake. The lake-view rooms are charming, with carved wooden furniture, cushioned window seats and pretty prints. Rooms without a lake view are almost as comfortable and attractive, and considerably cheaper.

The building is full of character with lots of attractive sitting areas, terraces and courtyards, and it makes the most of its position with a picture-perfect rooftop restaurant

🏰 Hanuman Ghat Area

Dream Heaven GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 2431038; www.dreamheaven.co.in; Hanuman Ghat; r ₹300-1000; 🍷🍷🍷) This popular place to come to a halt is in a higgledy-piggledy building with clean rooms with wall hangings and paintings. Bathrooms are smallish, though some rooms have a decent balcony and/or views. The food at the rooftop restaurant (dishes ₹40 to ₹110), which overlooks the lake and shows Udaipur at its best, is fresh and tasty – the perfect place to chill out on a pile of cushions.

Hibiscus Guest house GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 9782222299; www.hibiscusudaipur.in; 190 Naga Nagri; r ₹1800-2200; 🍷) A friendly, family-run house in a quiet setting back from Hanuman Ghat. The well-sized rooms have pretty Rajasthani decor, and the roof provides nice lake views. The flowers in the charming walled garden might equally have dubbed this place the Frangipani Guest House. Meals are available.

Amet Haveli

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(📍 2431085; www.amethaveliudaipur.com; Hanuman Ghat; s/d ₹5400/6600; 🍷🍷🍷) A 350-year-old heritage building on the lake shore with delightful rooms featuring cushioned window seats and coloured glass with little shutters. They're set around a pretty little courtyard and pond. Splurge on one with a balcony or giant bathtub. One of Udaipur's most romantic restaurants, Ambrai (p158), is part of the hotel.

Udai Kothi

HOTEL $$$

(📍 2423810; www.udaikothi.com; Hanuman Ghat; r ₹5500-7000; 🍷🍷🍷🍷) A bit like a five-storey wedding cake, Udai Kothi is a glittery, modern building with lots of traditional touches – cupolas, interesting art and fabrics, window seats in some rooms, marble bathrooms and carved-wood doors in others, and thoughtful touches such as bowls of floating flowers. Rooms are pretty, individually designed and well equipped.

The apex is the rooftop terrace, where you can dine well at the restaurant (Udai Kothi Hotel; mains ₹125-250) and swim in Udaipur's only rooftop pool (nonguests ₹300).

City Palace*Kumbha Palace

GUESTHOUSE $$

(📍 9828059506, 2422702; www.hotelkumbhapalace.com; 104 Bhattiyani Chotta; r ₹550-600, with AC ₹1000; 🍷🍷🍷) This excellent place, run by a Dutch-Indian couple, is tucked up a quiet lane off busy Bhattiyani Chotta and backed by a lovely lush lawn. The 10 rooms are simple but comfortable (just one has AC), and the restaurant knows how to satisfy homesick travellers. The owners also run Krishna Ranch, where horse riding and cottage accommodation are available.

Shiv Niwas Palace Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(📍 2528016; www.eternalmewar.in; City Palace Complex; r ₹15,000-42,000; 🍷🍷🍷🍷) This hotel, in the former palace guest quarters, has opulent common areas like its pool courtyard, bar and lawn garden. Some of the suites are truly palatial, filled with fountains and silver, but the standard rooms are poorer value. Go for a suite, or just for a drink (p159), meal (mains ₹500-1000; noon to 3pm and 7pm to 10.30pm), massage or swim in the gorgeous marble pool (nonguests ₹300).

Rates drop dramatically from April to September.

Fateh Prakash*Palace Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(📍 2528016; www.hrhhotels.com; City Palace Complex; r ₹15,000, premier ste ₹31,500; 🍷🍷🍷) Built in the early 20th century for royal functions (the Durbar Hall is part of it), the Fateh Prakash has luxurious rooms and gorgeous suites, all comprehensively equipped and almost all looking straight out onto Lake Pichola. Views aside, the general ambience is a little less regal than at Shiv Niwas Palace Hotel – although the Sunset Terrace (p159) bar is a great place for an evening drink.

Other Areas*★ Krishna Ranch

COTTAGE $$

(📍 9602192902, 3291478; www.krishnaranch.com; s/d incl meals ₹2000/2500) 🌿 This delightful countryside retreat has five cottages set around the grounds of a small farm. Each comes with attached bathroom (with solar heated shower), tasteful decor and farm views. All meals are included and are prepared using organic produce grown on the farm. The ranch is 7km from town, near Badi village, but there's free pick-up from Udaipur.

It's an ideal base for the hikes and horse treks that the management – a Dutch-Indian couple – organises from here, though you don't have to sign up for the treks to stay here.

Eating

Udaipur has scores of sun-kissed rooftop cafes, many with mesmerising lake views but often with uninspired multicuisine fare. Fortunately there's also a healthy number of places putting a bit more thought into their food.

Lal Ghat Area*Cafe Edelweiss

CAFE $

(73 Gangaur Ghat Rd; coffee from ₹50, sandwiches from ₹180; ☀️ 8.30am-8pm; 🍷) The Savage Garden restaurant folks run this itchy piece of Europe that appeals to homesick and discerning travellers with superb baked goods and good coffee. Offerings included sticky cinnamon rolls, squidgy blueberry chocolate cake, spinach-and-mushroom quiche or apple strudel, good muesli or eggs for breakfast, and great sandwiches (the unexpected appearance of ham and bacon feels deliciously transgressive).

Lotus Cafe

(15 Bhattiyani Chotta; dishes ₹50-210; ☺ 9am-10.30pm) This funky little restaurant serves up fabulous chicken dishes (predominantly Indian), plus salads, baked potatoes and plenty of vegetarian fare. It's ideal for meeting other travellers, with a mezzanine to loll about on, and cool background sounds.

Cafe Namaste

(Hotel Gangaur Palace; coffee ₹40-70, breakfasts ₹50-100; ☺ 7am-10pm) A European-themed street-side cafe that delivers the goods with scrumptious muffins, apple pies, cinnamon rolls, brownies etc. And to wash it down there's coffee from a shiny silver espresso machine taking pride of place. The noisy street is a minus.

Jagat Niwas Palace Hotel

(☎ 2420133; 23-25 Lal Ghat; mains ₹150-375; ☺ 7am-10am, noon-3pm & 6-10pm) A wonderful, classy, rooftop restaurant with superb lake views, delicious Indian cuisine and good service. Choose from an extensive selection of rich curries (tempered for Western tastes) – mutton, chicken, fish and veg – as well as the tandoori classics. There's a cocktail menu and the beer is icy. Book ahead for dinner.

O'Zen Restaurant

(City Palace Rd; coffee ₹50-70, mains ₹100-300; ☺ 8.30am-11pm; ☎) A swish location on City Palace Rd, this stylish 1st-floor restaurant-cafe does a range of Indian curries plus Italian pizza and pasta. It's bright and modern, does good coffee and beer (₹180), and has views of the street below.

★ Savage Garden

(☎ 2425440; 22 inside Chandpol; mains ₹220-520; ☺ 11am-11pm) Tucked away in the backstreets near Chandpol, Savage Garden does a winning line in soups, chicken and homemade pasta dishes. We loved the ravioli with lamb ragu, and the sweet-savoury stuffed chicken breast with nuts, cheese and carrot rice. The setting is a 250-year-old haveli with indigo walls and bowls of flowers, and tables in alcoves or a pleasant courtyard. The bar is slick, with red, white and sparkling Indian wines from Nasik, Maharashtra.

✂ Hanuman Ghat Area*Milletts of Mewar

(www.milletsofmewar.com; Hanuman Ghat; mains ₹80-140; ☺ 8.30am-10.30pm; ☎) This place does the healthiest food in town. Local millets are used where possible instead of less environmentally sound wheat and rice. There are vegan options, gluten-free dishes, fresh salads and juices and herbal teas. Also on the menu are multigrain sandwiches and millet pizzas, plus regular curries, Indian street-food snacks, pasta and even pancakes.

The sweet Indian coffee is delicious, and there's ice cream and chocolate pudding to go with the millet cookies on the dessert menu.

Jasmin

(mains ₹60-90; ☺ 8.30am-11pm) Very tasty vegetarian dishes are cooked up in a lovely, quiet, open-air spot looking out on the quaint Daiji Footbridge. There are plenty of Indian options, and some original variations on the usual multicuisine theme including Korean and Israeli dishes. The ambience is super-relaxed and service friendly.

Queen Cafe

(14 Bajrang Marg; mains ₹60-75; ☺ 8am-10pm) This tiny restaurant-cum-family-front-room serves up good home-style Indian vegetarian dishes. Try the pumpkin curry with mint and coconut, and the Kashmir pulao (rice dish) with fruit, vegies and coconut. Host Meenu also offers cooking classes and slightly overpriced walking tours, but some diners may find that the hard sell she serves up with the food leaves a slightly bitter taste.

Ambrai

(☎ 2431085; www.amethaveliudaipur.com; Amet Haveli; mains ₹250-400; ☺ 12.30-3pm & 7.30-10.30pm) The cuisine at this scenic restaurant – set at lake-shore level, looking across to Lal Ghat and the City Palace – does justice to its fabulous position. Highly atmospheric at night, Ambrai feels like a French park, with its wrought-iron furniture, dusty ground and large shady trees, and there's a terrific bar to complement the dining, which is strong on Rajshani dishes.

✂ Other Areas*1559 AD

(☎ 2433559; PP Singhal Marg; mains ₹200-650; ☺ 11am-11pm) Waiters in embroidered-silk waistcoats serve up lovely Indian, Thai and Continental dishes in elegant surroundings at this secluded restaurant near the north-western side of Fateh Sagar. There are garden tables as well as several different rooms with just a few candlelit tables in each, and Indian classical music in the evenings. Includes a coffee shop with the best coffee we tasted in Udaipur.

Drinking

Most guesthouses have a roof terrace serving up cold Kingfishers with views over the lazy waters of Lake Pichola, but for a real treat try the top-end hotels. Note that you have to pay ₹25 to enter the City Palace complex (p151) if you're not staying in one of its hotels.

Paps Juice

JUICE BAR

(inside Chandpol; juices ₹40-100; ☀️ 9am-8pm) This bright-red spot is tiny but very welcoming, and a great place to refuel during the day with a shot of Vitamin C from a wide range of delicious juice mixes. If you want something more substantial, the muesli mix is pretty good too.

Jheel's Ginger Coffee Bar

CAFE

(Jheel Palace Guest House, 56 Gangaur Ghat; coffee ₹50-100; ☀️ 8am-8pm; ☕) This small but slick air-con-cooled cafe by the water's edge is on the ground floor of Jheel Palace Guest House. Large windows afford good lake views, and the coffee is excellent. Also does a range of cakes and snacks. Note, you can take your coffee up to the open-air rooftop restaurant if you like, but there's no alcohol served here.

Panera Bar

BAR

(Shiv Niwas Palace Hotel; beer from ₹475, shots from ₹250; ☀️ 11.30am-10pm) Sink into plush sofas surrounded by huge mirrors, royal portraits and beautiful paintwork, or sit out by the pool and be served like a maharaja.

Sunset Terrace

BAR

(Fateh Prakash Palace Hotel; ☀️ 7am-10.30pm) On a terrace overlooking Lake Pichola, this is perfect for a sunset gin and tonic. It's also a restaurant, with live music performed nightly.

Entertainment

Dharohar

DANCE, PUPPETRY

(☎️ 2523858; Bagore-ki-Haveli; Indian/foreigner ₹60/100, camera ₹100; ☀️ 7-8pm) The beautiful Bagore-ki-Haveli (p153) hosts the best (and most convenient) opportunity to see Rajasthani folk dancing, with nightly shows of colourful, energetic Marwari, Bhil and western Rajasthani dances, as well as traditional Rajasthani puppetry.

Mewar Sound & Light Show

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(Manek Chowk, City Palace; adult/child ₹100/200; ☀️ shows 7pm Sep-Feb, 7.30pm Mar-Apr, 8pm May-Aug) Fifteen centuries of intriguing Mewar history are squeezed into one atmospheric hour of commentary and light switching – in English from September to April.

Shopping

Tourist-oriented shops, selling miniature paintings; wood carvings; silver and other jewellery; bangles; traditional shoes; spices; leather-bound, handmade-paper notebooks; ornate knives; camel-bone boxes; and a large variety of textiles, line the streets radiating from Jagdish Chowk. Udaipur is known for its local crafts, particularly its miniature paintings in the Rajput-Mughal style, as well as some interesting contemporary art.

The local market area extends east from the old clock tower at the north end of Jagdish Temple Rd, and buzzes loudest in the evening. It's fascinating as much for browsing and soaking up local atmosphere as for buying. Bara Bazar, immediately east of the old clock tower, sells silver and gold, while its narrow side street, Maldas St, specialises in saris and fabrics. A little further east, traditional shoes are sold on Mochiwada. Food-stuffs and spices are mainly found around the new clock tower at the east end of the bazaar area, and at Mandi Market, about 200m north of the tower.

Sadhna

CLOTHING

(☎️ 2454655; www.sadhna.org; Jagdish Temple Rd; ☀️ 10am-7pm) This is the crafts outlet for Seva Mandir, a long-established NGO working with rural and tribal people. The small shop sells attractive fixed-price textiles; profits go to the artisans and towards community development work.

Information

EMERGENCY

Police (☎️ 2414600, 100) There are police posts at Surajpol, Hatipol and Delhi Gate, three of the gates in the old-city wall.

INTERNET ACCESS

You can surf the internet at plenty of places, particularly around Lal Ghat, for ₹30 per hour. Many places double as travel agencies, bookshops, art shops etc.

MEDICAL SERVICES

GBH American Hospital (☎️ 24hr enquiries 2426000, emergency 9352304050; www.gbhamericanhospital.com; Meera Girls College Rd, 101 Kothi Bagh, Bhatt Ji Ki Bari) Modern, reader-recommended private hospital with 24-hour emergency service, about 2km northeast of the old city.

MONEY

There are lots of ATMs, including Axis Bank and State Bank ATMs on City Palace Rd near Jagdish Temple; HDFC, ICICI and State Bank ATMs near the bus stand; and two ATMs outside the train station. Places to change currency and travellers cheques include Thomas Cook (Lake Palace Rd; ☎9.30am-6.30pm Mon-Sat).

POST

Main Post Office (Chetak Circle; ☎10am-1pm & 1.30-6pm Mon-Sat) North of the old city.

Post Office (City Palace Rd; ☎10am-4pm Mon-Sat) Tiny post office that sends parcels (including packaging them up) and there are virtually no queues. Beside the City Palace's Badi Pol ticket office.

Small tourist information counters operate erratically at the train station and airport.

Tourist Office (☎2411535; Fateh Memorial Bldg; ☎10am-5pm Mon-Sat) Not situated in the most convenient position, 1.5km east of the Jagdish Temple (though only about 500m from the bus stand), this place dishes out a limited amount of brochures and information.

i Getting There & Away*AIR

✦ Air India (☎2410999, airport office 2655453; www.airindia.com; 222/16 Mumal Towers, Saheli Rd) flies to Mumbai daily as well as to Delhi (via Jodhpur) daily.

✦ Jet Airways (☎5134000; www.jetairways.com; Airport) flies direct to Delhi twice daily, and Mumbai daily.

✦ SpiceJet (p123) has one direct daily flight to Delhi.

BUS

Private bus tickets can be bought at any one of the many travel agencies lining the road leading from Jagdish Temple to Daiji Footbridge.

The main bus stand is 1.5km east of the City Palace. Turn left at the end of Lake Palace Rd, take the first right then cross the main road at the end, just after passing through the crumbling old Surajpol Gate. It's around ₹40 in an autorickshaw.

TRAIN

The train station is about 2.5km southeast of the City Palace, and 1km directly south of the main bus stand. An autorickshaw between the train station and Jagdish Chowk should cost around ₹50. There's a prepaid autorickshaw stand at the station, though, so use that when you arrive.

There are no direct trains to Abu Road, Jodhpur or Jaisalmer.

✦ For Pushkar, four daily trains make the journey to Ajmer (sleeper/2nd class ₹480/135, five hours; 6am, 2.15pm, 5.15pm and 10.20pm). The same departures also make the trip to Chittorgarh (2nd class ₹85, two hours).

✦ Trains run daily to Jaipur (sleeper/2nd class ₹260/165, seven hours, 2.15pm and 10.20pm).

✦ Two daily trains run to Delhi (sleeper ₹385, 12 hours, 5.15pm and 6.15pm).

✦ Only one train runs daily to Bundi (sleeper ₹210, 4½ hours, 6.15pm).

✦ Only one daily train runs to Agra (sleeper ₹360, 12½ hours; 10.20pm).

i Getting Around*TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

The airport is 25km east of town. A prepaid taxi to the Lal Ghat area costs ₹400.

BICYCLE & MOTORCYCLE

A cheap and environmentally friendly way to buzz around is by bike; many guesthouses can arrange bicycles to rent, costing around ₹50 per day. Scooters and motorbikes, meanwhile, are great for exploring the surrounding countryside.

TAXI

Most hotels, guesthouses and travel agencies (many of which are on the road leading down to the lake from Jagdish Temple) can organise a car and driver to just about anywhere you want. As an example, a return day trip to Ranakpur and Kumbhalgarh will cost you around ₹1800 per vehicle.

Around Udaipur

Kumbhalgarh

📍 02954

About 80km north of Udaipur, Kumbhalgarh (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, Light & Sound Show ₹200; ☀9am-6pm, Light & Sound Show 6.30pm) is a fantastic, remote fort, fulfilling romantic expectations and vividly summoning up the chivalrous, warlike Rajput era. One of the many forts built by Rana Kumbha (r 1433-68), under whom Mewar reached its greatest extents, the isolated fort is perched 1100m above sea level, with endless views melting into the blue distance. The journey to the fort, along twisting roads through the Aravalli Hills, is a highlight in itself.

Kumbhalgarh was the most important Mewar fort after Chittorgarh, and the rulers, sensibly, used to retreat here in times of danger. Not surprisingly, Kumbhalgarh was only taken once in its entire history. Even then, it took the combined armies of Amber, Marwar and Mughal emperor Akbar to breach its strong defences, and they only managed to hang on to it for two days.

The fort's thick walls stretch about 36km; they're wide enough in some places for eight horses to ride abreast and it's possible to walk right around the circuit (allow two days). They enclose around 360 intact and ruined temples, some of which date back to the Mauryan period in the 2nd century BC, as well as palaces, gardens, step-wells and 700 cannon bunkers. If you are staying here and want to make an early start on your hike around the wall, you can get into the fort before 9am, although no one will be around to sell you a ticket.

There's a Light & Sound Show (₹200) at the fort every evening at 6.30pm. The large and rugged Kumbhalgarh Wildlife Sanctuary (p162) can be visited from Kumbhalgarh. Ask at the Aodhi hotel about organising 4WD, horse or walking trips in the sanctuary.

KUMBHALGARH WILDLIFE SANCTUARY

Ranakpur is a great base for exploring the hilly, densely forested Kumbhalgarh Wildlife Sanctuary (Indian/foreigner ₹20/180, 4WD or car ₹150, camera/video free/₹400, guide per day ₹200; ☀ dawn-dusk), which extends over some 600 sq km to the northeast and southwest. It's known for its leopards and wolves, although the chances of spotting antelopes, gazelles, deer and possibly sloth bears are higher, especially from March to June. You will certainly see some of the sanctuary's 200-plus bird species.

There are several safari outfits on the road leading up to Kumbhalgarh Fort (don't believe posters suggesting tiger sightings), but some of the best safaris and treks are offered (to guests and nonguests) by Shivika Lake Hotel: options include three-hour 4WD safaris (₹850 per person), a three-hour forest and lake walk (₹350), a six-to-seven-hour round-trip walk leading to Parshuram Shiva Temple (₹650), and a one-way hike to Kumbhalgarh (about five hours; ₹850), with a two-person minimum and park fees included.

Note, there is a ticket office for the sanctuary right beside where the bus drops you off for the Jain temples, but the nearest of the sanctuary's four entrances is 2km beyond here, near Shivika Lake Hotel.

buildings, all boast their own palm-thatched terraces, balconies or pavilions, and assorted wildlife and botanical art and photos.

Nonguests can dine in the restaurant, where good standard Indian fare is the pick of the options on offer, or have a drink in the cosy Chowpal Bar. Room rates plummet from April to September.

i Getting There & Away

From Udaipur's main bus stand, catch an hourly Ranakpur-bound bus as far as Saira (₹57, 2¼ hours), a tiny crossroads town where you can change for a bus to Kumbhalgarh (₹30, one hour, hourly). That bus, which will be bound for Kelwara, will drop you at the start of the approach road to the fort, leaving you with a pleasant 1.5km walk to the entrance gate.

The last bus back to Saira swings by at 5.30pm (and is always absolutely jam-packed with villagers). The last bus from Saira back to Udaipur leaves at around 8pm.

To get to Ranakpur from Kumbhalgarh, head first to Saira then change for Ranakpur (₹14, 40 minutes, at least hourly).

A day-long round trip in a private car from Udaipur to Kumbhalgarh and Ranakpur will cost around ₹1800 per car.

Ranakpur

JAIN TEMPLE

Jain temple complexes. It's 75km northwest of Udaipur, and 12km west of Kumbhalgarh as the crow flies (but 50km by road, via Saira). Chaumukha Mandir (Four-Faced Temple), the main temple, is dedicated to Adinath, the first Jain tirthankar (depicted in the many Buddha-like images in the temple), and was built in the 15th century in milk-white marble.

An incredible feat of Jain devotion, the Chaumukha Mandir is a complicated series of 29 halls, 80 domes and 1444 individually engraved pillars. The interior is completely covered in knotted, lovingly wrought carving, and has a marvellously calming sense of space and harmony. Shoes, cigarettes, food and all leather articles must be left at the entrance; women who are menstruating are asked not to enter.

Also exquisitely carved and well worth inspecting are two other Jain temples, dedicated to Neminath (22nd tirthankar) and Parasnath (23rd tirthankar), both within the complex, and a nearby Sun Temple. About 1km from the main complex is the Amba Mata Temple.

Buses from Udaipur and Saira will drop you by the entrance to the temple complex, before continuing past Shivika Lake Hotel (2km), and then going on to Jodhpur.

Shivika Lake Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 285078, 9799118573; r ₹600-1200, tent ₹1200; ☹ ☹ ☹) Two kilometres north of the temple, Shivika is a welcoming, rustic and family-run hotel that provides free pick-ups and drop-offs at the bus stop near the temple. You can stay in small, cosy rooms amid leafy gardens, or safari-style tents. Two of the tents have prime positions beside beautiful Nalwania Lake, on the edge of the property.

Due to the presence of a few crocodiles, the lake isn't safe for swimming, but there's a swimming pool right beside it and some meals (mains ₹70 to ₹160, thali ₹170, buffet lunch ₹300) are served here too.

i Getting There & Away

There are direct buses to Ranakpur from the main bus stands in both Udaipur (₹68, three hours, hourly) and Jodhpur (₹139, four to five hours). You'll be dropped outside the temple complex unless you state otherwise. Return services start drying up at around 7pm.

A day-long round trip in a private car from Udaipur to Ranakpur and Kumbhalgarh costs around ₹1800.

Mt Abu

📍 02974 / POP 22,200 / ELEV 1200M

Rajasthan's only hill station sits among green forests on the state's highest mountain at the southwestern end of the Aravalli Range, close to the Gujarat border. Quite unlike anywhere else in Rajasthan, Mt Abu provides Rajasthanis, Gujaratis and a steady flow of foreign tourists with respite from the scorching temperatures and arid, beige terrain found elsewhere. It's a particular hit with honeymooners and middle-class families from Gujarat.

Mt Abu town sits towards the southwest end of the plateau-like upper part of the mountain, which stretches about 19km from end to end and 6km from east to west. The town is surrounded by the flora- and fauna-rich, 289-sq-km Mt Abu Wildlife Sanctuary, which extends over most of the mountain from an altitude of 300m upwards.

The mountain is of great spiritual importance for both Hindus and Jains and has over 80 temples and shrines, most notably the exquisite Jain temples at Delwara, built between 400 and 1000 years ago.

Try to avoid arriving in Diwali (October or November) or the following two weeks, when prices soar and the place is packed. Mt Abu also gets pretty busy from mid-May to mid-June, before the monsoon. This is when the Summer Festival hits town, with music, fireworks and boat races. In the cooler months, you'll find everyone wrapped up in shawls and hats; pack something woolly to avoid winter chills in poorly heated hotel rooms.

👁 Sights & Activities

Nakki Lake

LAKE

Scenic Nakki Lake, the town's focus, is one of Mt Abu's biggest attractions. It's so named because, according to legend, it was scooped out by a god using his nakh (nails). Some Hindus thus consider it a holy lake. Another version of its origins is that it was constructed by the British in the 19th century.

It's a pleasant 45-minute stroll around the perimeter – the lake is surrounded by hills, parks and strange rock formations. The best known, Toad Rock, looks like a toad about to hop into the lake.

Sunset Point

VIEWPOINT

Sunset Point is a popular place to watch the brilliant setting sun. Hordes stroll out here every evening to catch the end of the day, the food stalls and all the usual jolly hill-station entertainment. To get there, follow Sunset Point road west of the Polo Ground out of town.

Brahma Kumaris

Peace Hall & Museum

MUSEUM

The white-clad people you'll see around town are members of the Brahma Kumaris World Spiritual University (www.bkwsu.com), a worldwide organisation whose headquarters are here in Mt Abu. The university's Universal Peace Hall (Om Shanti Bhawan; ☀8am-6pm), just north of Nakki Lake, where free 30-minute tours are available, includes an introduction to the Brahma Kumaris philosophy (be prepared for a bit of proselytising). The organisation also runs the World Renewal Spiritual Museum (☀8am-8pm) FREE in the town centre.

👉 Tours

The RSRTC runs full-day (₹100) and half-day (₹45) bus tours of Mt Abu's main sights, leaving from the bus stand at 9.30am and 1pm respectively. Both tours visit Achalgarh, Guru Shikhar and the Delwara Temples and end at Sunset Point. The full-day tour also includes Adhar Devi, the Brahma Kumaris Peace Hall and Honeymoon Point. Admission and camera fees and the ₹20 guide fee are extra. Make reservations at the main bus stand.

DELWARA TEMPLES

Delwara Temples (donations welcome; ☎ Jains 6am-6pm, non-Jains noon-6pm) These Jain temples are Mt Abu's most remarkable attraction and feature some of India's finest temple decoration. They predate the town of Mt Abu by many centuries and were built when this site was just a remote mountain vastness. It's said that the artisans were paid according to the amount of dust they collected, encouraging them to carve ever more intricately. Whatever their inducement, there are two temples here in which the marble work is dizzyingly intense.

The older of the two is the Vimal Vasahi, on which work began in 1031 and was financed by a Gujarati chief minister named Vimal. Dedicated to the first tirthankar, Adinath, it took 1500 masons and 1200 labourers 14 years to build, and allegedly cost ₹185.3 million. Outside the entrance is the House of Elephants, featuring a procession of stone elephants marching to the temple, some of which were damaged long ago by marauding Mughals. Inside, a forest of beautifully carved pillars surrounds the central shrine, which holds an image of Adinath himself.

The Luna Vasahi Temple is dedicated to Neminath, the 22nd tirthankar, and was built in 1230 by the brothers Tejpal and Vastupal for a mere ₹125.3 million. Like Vimal, the brothers were both Gujarati government ministers. The marble carving here took 2500 workers 15 years to create, and its most notable feature is its intricacy and delicacy, which is so fine that, in places, the marble becomes almost transparent. The many-layered lotus flower that dangles from the centre of the dome is a particularly astonishing piece of work.

As at other Jain temples, leather articles (including belts and shoes) cameras and phones must be left at the entrance, and menstruating women are asked not to enter.

Delwara is about 3km north of Mt Abu town centre: you can walk there in less than an hour, or hop aboard a shared taxi (₹10 per person) from up the street opposite Chacha Cafe. A taxi all to yourself should be ₹100, or ₹200 round-trip with one hour's waiting.

in the busy dining hall or outside under a canopy. It's near the bus stand for the lunch break during the all-day RSRTC tour.

Sankalp

SOUTH INDIAN $$

(Hotel Maharaja, Lake Rd; mains ₹90-220; ☺ 9am-11pm) A branch of a quality Gujarat-based chain serving up excellent South Indian vegetarian fare. Unusual fillings like pineapple or spinach, cheese and garlic are available for its renowned dosas and uttapams (savory South Indian rice pancake), which come with multiple sauces and condiments. Order masala papad (wafer with spicy topping) for a tasty starter.

Mulberry Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Hilltone Hotel, Main St; mains ₹250-320) Mt Abu's Gujarati tourists make veg thalis the order of the day in the town, so if you're craving a bit of nonveg, the smart Mulberry Restaurant at the Hilltone Hotel is the place to go. There are plenty of meaty Indian options on the menu (although the biryanis are a bit bland) and alcohol is often served to wash it down.

Arbuda

INDIAN $$

(Arbuda Circle; mains ₹100-150; ☺ 7am-10.30pm) This big restaurant is set on a sweeping open terrace filled with chrome chairs. It's very popular for its Gujarati, Punjabi and South Indian food, and does fine Continental breakfasts and fresh juices.

Drinking

Most of the more upmarket hotels have bars; the prices are predictably high, but the heritage hotels can justify this with their quaint atmospheres.

Polo Bar

Cafe Coffee Day

CAFE

(Rotary Circle; coffee from ₹60; ☺ 9am-11pm) A branch of the popular caffeine-supply chain. The tea and cakes aren't bad either.

Shopping

The street leading down to Nakki Lake is lined with bright little shops mostly flogging all sorts of kitsch curios, and there's more of the same around the market area. Chacha Museum (☺ 10am-8pm), a larger, fixed-price shop with some crafts and souvenirs, is worth a browse.

Information

There are State Bank ATMs on Raj Bhavan Rd, opposite Hotel Samrat International and outside the tourist office. There's a Bank of Baroda ATM on Lake Rd.

Main Post Office (Raj Bhavan Rd; ☺ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat)

Union Bank of India (Main Market; ☺ 10am-3pm Mon-Fri, to 12.30pm Sat) The only bank changing travellers cheques and currency.

Getting There & Away

Access to Mt Abu town is by a dramatic 28km-long road that winds its way up thickly forested hillsides from the town of Abu Road, where the nearest train station is. Some buses from other cities go all the way up to Mt Abu, others only go as far as Abu Road. Buses (₹30, one hour) run between Abu Road and Mt Abu town half-hourly from about 6am to 7pm. A taxi from Abu Road to Mt Abu is ₹300/400 by day/night.

TREKKING AROUND MT ABU

Getting off the tourist trail and out into the forests and hills of Mt Abu is a revelation. This is a world of isolated shrines and lakes, weird rock formations, fantastic panoramas, nomadic villagers, orchids, wild fruits, plants used in ayurvedic medicine, sloth bears (which are fairly common), wild boars, langurs, 150 bird species and even the occasional leopard.

Mahendra 'Charles' Dan of Mt Abu Treks (☎ 9414154854; www.mount-abu-treks.blogspot.com; Hotel Lake Palace; 3-4hr trek per person ₹500, full-day incl lunch ₹1000) arranges tailor-made treks ranging from gentle village visits to longer, wilder expeditions into Mt Abu Wildlife Sanctuary. He's passionate and knowledgeable about the local flora and fauna. Treks include a three- to four-hour trek, a full day including lunch, and an overnight village trek including all meals (₹2000). The sanctuary entrance fee (Indian/foreigner ₹20/160) is not included.

The Shri Ganesh Hotel (p164) also organises good one- or four-hour hikes (₹100/500) hikes starting at 7am or 4pm.

A warning from the locals: it's very unsafe to wander unguided in these hills. Travellers have been mauled by bears, or mugged (and worse) by other people.

BUS

Services from Mt Abu bus stand include:

Ahmedabad (₹138, seven hours, hourly from 6am to 9pm)

Jaipur (seat/sleeper ₹386/411, 11 hours, one daily)

Jodhpur (₹203, six hours, roughly hourly)

Udaipur (₹120, 4½ hours, four daily)

TRAIN

Abu Road station is on the line between Delhi and Mumbai via Ahmedabad. An autorickshaw from Abu Road train station to Abu Road bus stand costs ₹10. Mt Abu has a railway reservation centre (☎ 8am-2pm Mon-Sat), above the tourist office, with quotas on most of the express trains.

Around Mt Abu

Guru Shikhar

At the northeast end of the Mt Abu plateau, 17km from the town, rises 1722m-high Guru Shikhar, Rajasthan's highest point. A winding road goes almost all the way to the summit where you'll find the Atri Rishi Temple, complete with a priest and fantastic, huge views. A popular spot, it's a highlight of the RSRTC tour (p163); if you decide to go it alone, a 4WD will cost ₹500 return.

NORTHERN RAJASTHAN (SHEKHAWATI)

Far less visited than other parts of Rajasthan, the Shekhawati region is most famous for its extraordinary painted havelis (traditional, ornately decorated residences that enclose one or more courtyards), highlighted with dazzling, often whimsical, murals. Part of the region's appeal and mystique is due to these works of art being found in tiny towns, connected to each other by single-track roads that run through lonely, arid countryside. Today it seems curious that such care, attention and money was lavished on these out-of-the-way houses, but from the 14th century onwards Shekhawati's towns were important trading posts on the caravan routes from Gujarati ports.

What makes the artwork on Shekhawati's havelis so fascinating is the manner in which their artists combined traditional subjects, such as mythology, religious scenes and images of the family, with contemporary concerns, including brand-new inventions and accounts of current events, many of which these isolated painters rendered straight from their imaginations.

Nawalgarh

Nawalgarh is a small, nontouristy town almost at the very centre of the Shekhawati region, and makes a great base for exploring. It boasts several fine havelis, a colourful, mostly pedestrianised bazaar and some excellent accommodation options.

👁 Sights

Dr Ramnath A Podar Haveli Museum

MUSEUM

(www.podarhavelimuseum.org; admission ₹100, camera ₹30; ☎ 8.30am-6.30pm) Built in 1902 on the eastern side of town, and known locally as 'Podar Haveli', this is one of the region's few buildings to have been thoroughly restored. The paintings of this haveli are defined in strong colours, and are the most vivid murals in town, although purists point to the fact that they have been simply repainted rather than restored. On the ground floor are several galleries on Rajasthani culture, including costume, turbans, musical instruments and models of Rajasthan's forts.

Morarka Haveli Museum

MUSEUM

(admission ₹50; ☺ 8am-7pm) This museum has well-presented original paintings, preserved for decades behind doorways blocked with cement. The inner courtyard hosts some gorgeous Ramayana scenes; look out for the slightly incongruous image of Jesus on the top storey, beneath the eaves in the courtyard's southeast corner. Turn left out of Dr Ramnath A Podar Haveli Museum, then take the first right and it's on your right.

Bhagton ki Choti Haveli

To get here, turn left out of Morarka Haveli, take the first right, then left, then first right again and it's on your left.

Activities & Tours

Ramesh Jangid at Apani Dhani and his son Rajesh at Ramesh Jangid's Tourist Pension (☎ 224060; www.touristpension.com) are keen to promote sustainable rural tourism. They organise guided hiking trips (two to three days from ₹1900 per person), guided camel-cart rides (half-day ₹1500) to outlying villages, and guided tours by car (full day from ₹800 per person) to other towns in the region. They can also arrange lessons in Hindi, tabla drumming, cooking and local crafts such as bandhani.

Roop Niwas Kothi (☎ 222008; www.royalridingholidays.com; 1hr/half-day/full day ₹1000/3000/6000) specialises in high-end horse excursions. Elaborate excursions are available, ranging from one night to a week, including accommodation in luxury tents.

Sleeping & Eating

DS Bungalow

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9983168916; s ₹350-450, d ₹400-500) Run by a friendly, down-to-earth couple, this simple place with boxy air-cooled rooms is a little out of town on the way to Roop Niwas Kothi. It's backed by a garden with a pleasant outdoor mud-walled restaurant serving decent home cooking. The more energetic can arrange camel tours here.

★ Apani Dhani

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 222239; www.apanidhani.com; r/cottages with AC ₹1800/2400, with fan ₹1600/2200; 🍷🍴)

☞ This award-winning ecotourism venture is a delightfully relaxing place. Rooms with comfortable beds are in cosy mud-hut, thatched-roof bungalows set around a bougainvillea-shaded courtyard. The adjoining organic farm supplies food and there are solar lights, water heaters and compost toilets. It's on the western side of the Jaipur road. Five per cent of the room tariff goes to community projects. Tours around the area, via bicycle, car, camel cart or foot, are available.

Shekhawati Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 224658; www.shekhawatiguesthouse.com; r ₹600/800, cottage ₹1000-1400; 🍷🍴🍷) This corner of rural loveliness is more like a homestay run by a very friendly couple. There are six rooms in the main building plus five lovely, mud-walled thatched cottages in the garden. The organic garden supplies most of the hotel's produce needs, which can be enjoyed in the lovely outdoor restaurant. It's 4km east of the bus stand (₹60 by taxi). Pick-up from the bus or train station can be arranged, as can cooking lessons.

Ramesh Jangid's

Tourist Pension

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 224060; www.touristpension.com; s/d/tr from ₹800/1050/1350; 🍷🍴) ☞ Near the Maur Hospital, on the western edge of town, this pension is well known, so if you get lost, just ask a local to point you in the right direction. The guesthouse, run by genial Rajesh, Ramesh's son, offers homely, clean accommodation in spacious rooms with big beds. Some rooms have furniture carved by Rajesh's grandfather, and the more expensive rooms also have murals created by visiting artists. Pure veg meals, made with organic ingredients, are available, including a delectable vegetable thali for ₹180. The family also arranges all sorts of tours around Shekhawati.

Shekhawati

i Getting There & Away

The main bus stand is little more than a dusty car park accessed through a large, yellow double-arched gateway. Services run roughly every hour to Jaipur (₹105, 3½ hours), Jhunjhunu (₹30, one hour) and Mandawa (₹25, 45 minutes). Nawalgarh is on a narrow-gauge train line with slow daily trains running between Jhunjhunu to Jaipur (2nd-class seats only).

Jhunjhunu

01592 / POP 100,500

Shekhawati's most important commercial centre has a different atmosphere to that of the smaller towns, with lots of traffic, concrete, and hustle and bustle befitting the district capital. It does, though, have some appealing havelis and a colourful bazaar.

👁 Sights

Rani Sati Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Ram Niwas Bagh; ☀ 4am-10pm) The enormous, multistorey Rani Sati Temple is notorious for commemorating an act of sati by a merchant's wife (after whom the temple is named) in 1595. It's fronted by two courtyards, around which 300 rooms offer shelter to pilgrims. The main hall, in the far courtyard, is made of marble with elaborate silver repoussé work before the inner sanctum. There's a tile-and-mirror mosaic on the ceiling and a relief frieze on one wall depicts the story of Rani Sati.

It's a 10-minute walk north of the private bus stand. Turn left out of the bus stand, take the first left, then keep asking for Rani Sati Mandir.

Modi Havelis

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Nehru Bazaar; admission ₹50) The Modi Havelis face each other and house some of Jhunjhunu's best murals and woodcarving. The haveli on the eastern side has a painting of a woman in a blue sari sitting before a gramophone; a frieze depicts a train, alongside which soldiers race on horses. The spaces between the brackets above show the Krishna legends. The haveli on the western side has some comical pictures, featuring some remarkable facial expressions and moustaches.

Around the archway, between the inner and outer courtyards, there are some glass-covered portrait miniatures, along with some fine mirror-and-glass tilework. In the second half of the antechamber, Krishna dances with the gopis while angels fly overhead. The inner courtyard shows the hierarchy of the universe, with deities in the upper frieze, humans in the middle band, and animal and floral motifs below.

Hotel Jamuna Resort

HOTEL $$

(☎ 512696; www.hoteljamunaresort.com; near Nath Ka Tilla; r ₹1500-3500; 📍 📞 📺 📺) Hotel Jamuna Resort has everything that you need. The rooms in the older wing are either vibrantly painted with murals or decorated with traditional mirrorwork (but beware rooms with vanishingly tiny windows), while the rooms in the newer wing are modern and airy. There's an inviting pool (₹50 for nonguests) set in the serene garden and purpose-built kitchens set up for cooking courses.

Hotel Shiv Shekhawati

HOTEL $$

(☎ 232651; www.shivshekhawati.com; Khemi Shakti Rd; s/d from ₹800/1000; 📍 📞 📺 📺) Shiv Shekhawati is the best budget option with plain but squeaky-clean rooms. It's 600m from the private bus stand on the eastern edge of town. The affable owner, Laxmi Kant Jangid, is a wealth of knowledge on the villages of Shekhawati and tours can be organised here.

Getting There & Away

There are two bus stands: the main bus stand and the private bus stand. Both have similar services and prices, but the government-run buses from the main bus stand run much more frequently. Shared autorickshaws run between the two (₹8 per person). Services from the main bus stand:

Bikaner (₹174, five to six hours, hourly)

Delhi (₹183, five to six hours, hourly)

Fatehpur (₹42, one hour, half-hourly)

Jaipur (₹135, four hours, half-hourly)

SHEKHAWATI'S OUTDOOR GALLERIES

In the 18th and 19th centuries, shrewd Marwari merchants lived frugally and far from home while earning money in India's new commercial centres. They sent the bulk of their vast fortunes back to their families in Shekhawati to construct grand havelis to show their neighbours how well they were doing and to compensate their families for their long absences. Merchants competed with one another to build ever more grand edifices – homes, temples, step-wells – which were richly decorated, both inside and out, with painted murals.

The artists responsible for these acres of decoration largely belonged to the caste of kumhars (potters) and were both the builders and painters of the havelis. Known as chajeras (masons), many were commissioned from beyond Shekhawati – particularly from Jaipur, where they had been employed decorating the new capital's palaces – and others flooded in from further afield to offer their skills. Soon, there was a cross-pollination of ideas and techniques, with local artists learning from the new arrivals.

The early paintings are strongly influenced by Mughal decoration, with floral arabesques and geometric designs. The Rajput royal courts were the next major influence; scenes from Hindu mythology are prevalent – Krishna is particularly popular.

With the arrival of Europeans, walls were embellished with paintings of the new technological marvels to which the Shekhawati merchants had been exposed to in centres such as Calcutta. Pictures of trains, planes, telephones, gramophones and bicycles featured, often painted directly from the artist's imagination. The British are invariably depicted as soldiers, with dogs or holding bottles of booze.

Haveli walls were frequently painted by the chajeras from the ground to the eaves. Often the paintings mix depictions of the gods and their lives with everyday scenes featuring modern inventions, such as trains and aeroplanes, even though these artists themselves had never seen them. Hence, Krishna and Radha are seen in flying motorcars and Europeans can be observed inflating hot-air balloons by blowing into them.

These days most of the havelis are still owned by descendants of the original families, but not inhabited by their owners, for whom small-town Rajasthan has lost its charm. Many are occupied by a single chowkidar (caretaker), while others may be home to a local family. Though they are pale reflections of the time when they accommodated the large households of the Marwari merchant families, they remain a fascinating testament to the changing times in which they were created. Only a few havelis have been restored; many more lie derelict, crumbling slowly away.

For a full rundown on the history, people, towns and buildings of the area, track down a copy of The Painted Towns of Shekhawati, by Ilay Cooper, an excellent book which can be picked up at bookshops in the region or Jaipur.

Mandawa (₹20, one hour, half-hourly)
Nawalgarh (₹35, one hour, half-hourly)

The train line to Jaipur via Nawalgarh is narrow gauge, and is not connected to the rest of the rail network. There are slow daily services, but generally it's quicker and more convenient to travel by bus.

Fatehpur

📍 01571 / POP 78,400

Established in 1451 as a capital for nawabs (Muslim ruling princes), Fatehpur was their stronghold for centuries before it was taken over by the Shekhawati Rajputs in the 18th century. It's a busy little town, with plenty of havelis, many in a sad state of disrepair, but with a few notable exceptions.

👁 Sights

Apart from the magnificent Haveli Nadine Le Prince, other sights include the nearby Jagannath Singhania Haveli; the Mahavir Prasad Goenka Haveli (often locked, but with superb paintings); Geori Shankar Haveli, with mirrored mosaics on the antechamber ceiling; and Harikrishnan Das Saraogi Haveli, with a colourful facade and iron lacework.

Haveli Nadine Le Prince HISTORIC BUILDING
 (📍 233024; www.cultural-centre.com; admission incl guided tour ₹200; 🕒 9am-6pm) This 1802 haveli has been stunningly restored by French artist Nadine Le Prince and is now one of the most exquisite in Shekhawati. Nadine is only here for part of the year, but enlists foreign volunteers to manage the building and conduct the detailed guided tours. There's a cafe of sorts secreted away in a garden courtyard, plus a small gallery. Some of the rooms have been converted into small but beautifully decorated guest rooms (p171).

The haveli is around 2km north of the two main bus stands, down a lane off the main road. Turn right out of the bus stands, and the turning will eventually be on your right, or hop into an autorickshaw.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Haveli Cultural Centre Guest House & Art Café BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$ (📍 233024; www.cultural-centre.com; Haveli Nadine Le Prince; r from ₹1300; 🍷) The beautifully restored Haveli Nadine Le Prince has opened its artist residence rooms to travellers. Several traditional-style rooms overlook the central courtyard. To just visit the Art Café you'll have to pay to get into the haveli, but this is a good option for a light lunch (meals ₹100 to ₹400). It's a cosy place with low tables, next to the garden, as well as Indian snacks.

📍 Getting There & Around

From the private bus stand on the Churu-Sikar road, buses leave for Jhunjhunu (₹28, one hour), Mandawa (₹22, one hour), Churu (₹25, one hour) and Ramgarh (₹16, 45 minutes). From the RSRTC bus stand, which is further south down the same road, buses leave for Jaipur (₹88, 3½ hours, hourly), Delhi (₹184, seven hours, six daily) and Bikaner (₹125, 3½ hours, hourly).

Mandawa

Of all the towns in the Shekhawati region, Mandawa is the one best set up for tourists, with plenty of places to stay and some decent restaurants. It's a little touristy (although this is a relative term compared with other parts of Rajasthan), but this small 18th-century settlement is still a pleasant base for your haveli explorations.

There is only one main drag, with narrow lanes fanning off it. The easy-to-find Hotel Mandawa Haveli is halfway along this street and makes a handy point of reference. Most buses drop passengers off on the main drag as well as by the bus stand.

👁 Sights

Binsidhar Newatia Haveli HISTORIC BUILDING
 This 1920s haveli on the northern side of the Fatehpur-Jhunjhunu road houses the State Bank of Bikaner & Jaipur. There are fantastically entertaining paintings on the external eastern wall, including a European woman in a chauffeur-driven car, the Wright brothers in flight watched by women in saris, a strongman hauling along a car, and a bird-man flying in a winged device.

Murmuria Haveli HISTORIC BUILDING
 The Murmuria Haveli dates back to the 1930s. From the sandy courtyard out front, you can get a good view of the southern external wall of the adjacent double haveli: it features a long frieze depicting a train and a railway crossing. Nehru is depicted on horseback holding the Indian flag. Above the arches on the southern side of the courtyard are two paintings of gondolas on the canals of Venice.

Sleeping & Eating

There are at least half a dozen haveli hotels here, either on or near the main drag. Rooms in them range from ₹1200 to ₹4000. Mandawa is small so wandering around town to find a room is relatively easy.

Hotel Shekhawati

HOTEL $

(☎ 9314698079; www.hotelshekwati.com; r ₹400-1800; ㊟@㊟) Near Mukundgarh Rd, the only real budget choice in town is run by a retired bank manager and his son (who's also a registered tourist guide). Bright, comically bawdy murals painted by artistic former guests give the rooms a splash of colour. Tasty meals are served on the peaceful rooftop, and competitively priced camel, horse and 4WD tours can also be arranged.

Hotel Mandawa Haveli

HERITAGE HOTEL $$

(☎ 223088; www.hotelmandawa.com; s/d from ₹2200/3700; ㊟) Close to Sonathia Gate, on the main road, this retreat is set in a glorious, restored 1890s haveli with rooms surrounding a painted courtyard. The cheapest rooms are small, so it's worth splashing out on a suite, filled with arches, window seats and countless small windows. There's a rooftop restaurant serving good food; it's especially romantic at dinner time, when the lights of the town twinkle below. A set dinner costs ₹450.

Hotel Castle Mandawa

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 223124; www.castlemandawa.com; s/d from ₹4500/6000; ㊟@㊟) Mandawa's large upmarket hotel in the town's converted fort is a swish and generally comfortable choice. Some rooms are far better appointed than others (the best are the suites in the tower, with four-poster and swing beds), so check a few before you settle in. The gardens and grounds boast restaurants, a coffee shop and cocktail bar, pool and ayurvedic spa.

Monica Rooftop Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(mains ₹100-300; ☀ 8am-9pm) This delightful rooftop restaurant, in between the fort gate and main bazaar, serves tasty meals. It's in a converted haveli, but sadly only the facade, rather than the restaurant itself, has frescoes.

Bungli Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Goenka Chowk; mains ₹130-300; ☀ 5am-10pm) A popular outdoor travellers' eatery near the Bikaner bus stand, Bungli serves piping-hot tandoori and cold beer from a down-at-heel setting. The food is cooked fresh by a chef who hails from Hotel Castle Mandawa. Early risers can have an Indian breakfast and yoga class for a total of ₹375.

Getting There & Away

The main bus stand, sometimes called Bikaner bus stand, has frequent services (roughly half-hourly). The main bus stand is at one end of the main drag, on your left as the road bears right. It's a few hundred metres walk left from Hotel Mandawa Haveli.

There is also a separate Nawalgarh bus stand, just off the main drag, with services to Nawalgarh only. Both bus stands are so small they are unrecognisable as bus stands unless a bus is waiting at them. Look for the chai stalls that cluster beside them and you should have the right spot.

Bikaner (₹154, four hours)

Fatehpur (₹22, 30 minutes)

Jhunjhunu (₹20, one hour)

Nawalgarh (₹25, 45 minutes)

WESTERN RAJASTHAN

Jodhpur

☎ 0291 / POP 1,033,900

Mighty Mehrangarh, the muscular fort that towers over the Blue City of Jodhpur, is a magnificent spectacle and an architectural masterpiece. Around Mehrangarh's base, the old city, a jumble of Brahmin-blue cubes, stretches out to the 10km-long, 16th-century city wall. Inside is a tangle of winding, glittering, medieval streets, which never seem to lead where you expect them to, scented by incense, roses and sewers, with shops and bazaars selling everything from trumpets and temple decorations to snuff and saris.

Traditionally, blue signified the home of a Brahmin, but non-Brahmins have got in on the act too. Glowing with a mysterious light, the blue tint is thought to repel insects.

Modern Jodhpur stretches well beyond the city walls, but it's the immediacy and buzz of the old Blue City and the larger-than-life fort that capture travellers' imaginations. This crowded, hectic zone is Jodhpur's main tourist area, and it often seems you can't speak to anyone without them trying to sell you something. Areas of the old city further west, such as Navchokiya, are just as atmospheric, with far less hustling.

History

Driven from their homeland of Kannauj, east of Agra, by Afghans serving Mohammed of Ghorī, the Rathore Rajputs fled west around AD 1200 to the region around Pali, 70km southeast of Jodhpur. They prospered to such a degree that in 1381 they managed to oust the Pratiharas of Mandore, 9km north of present-day Jodhpur. In 1459 the Rathore leader Rao Jodha chose a nearby rocky ridge as the site for a new fortress of staggering proportions, Mehrangarh, around which grew Jodha's city: Jodhpur.

Jodhpur lay on the vital trade route between Delhi and Gujarat. The Rathore kingdom grew on the profits of sandalwood, opium, dates and copper, and controlled a large area that became cheerily known as Marwar (the Land of Death), due to its harsh topography and climate. It stretched as far west as what's now the India-Pakistan border area, and bordered with Mewar (Udaipur) in the south, Jaisalmer in the northwest, Bikaner in the north, and Jaipur and Ajmer in the east.

Sights & Activities

Mehrangarh

FORT

It's about a 300m walk up from the old city to the entrance, or you can take a winding 5km autorickshaw ride (around ₹100). The superb audio guide (available in 11 languages) is included with the museum ticket, but bring ID or a credit card as deposit.

Jai Pol was built by Maharaja Man Singh in 1808 following his defeat of invading forces from Jaipur. Past the museum ticket office and a small cafe, the 16th-century Dodh Kangra Pol was an external gate before Jai Pol was built, and still bears the scars of 1808 cannonball hits. Through here, the main route heads up to the left through the 16th-century Imritia Pol and then Loha Pol, the fort's original entrance, with iron spikes to deter enemy elephants. Just inside the gate are two sets of small hand prints, the sati (self-immolation) marks of royal widows who threw themselves on their maharajas' funeral pyres – the last to do so were Maharaja Man Singh's widows in 1843.

Past Loha Pol you'll find a restaurant and Suraj Pol, which gives access to the museum. Once you've visited the museum, continue on from here to the panoramic ramparts, which are lined with impressive antique artillery.

Also worth exploring is the right turn from Jai Pol, where a path winds down to the Chokelao Bagh, a restored and gorgeously planted 18th-century Rajput garden (you could lose an afternoon here lolling under shady trees reading a book), and the Fateh Pol (Victory Gate). You can exit here into the old city quarter of Navchokiya.

➔ Museum

This beautiful network of stone-latticed courtyards and halls, formerly the fort's palace, is a superb example of Rajput architecture, so finely carved that it often looks more like sandalwood than sandstone. The galleries around Shringar Chowk (Anointment Courtyard) display India's best collection of elephant howdahs and Jodhpur's royal palanquin collection.

One of the two galleries off Daulat Khana Chowk displays textiles, paintings, manuscripts, headgear and the curved sword of the Mughal emperor Akbar; the other gallery is the armoury. Upstairs is a fabulous gallery of miniature paintings from the sophisticated Marwar school and the beautiful 18th-century Phul Mahal (Flower Palace), with 19th-century wall paintings depicting the 36 moods of classical ragas as well as royal portraits; the artist took 10 years to create them using a curious concoction of gold leaf, glue and cow's urine.

Takhat Vilas was the bedchamber of Maharaja Takhat Singh (r 1843-73), who had just 30 maharanis and numerous concubines. Its beautiful ceiling is covered with Christmas baubles. You then enter the extensive zenana, whose lovely latticed windows (from which the women could watch the goings-on in the courtyards) are said to feature over 250 different designs. Here you'll find the Cradle Gallery, exhibiting the elaborate cradles of infant princes, and the 17th-century Moti Mahal (Pearl Palace), which was the palace's main durbar hall (royal reception hall) for official meetings and receptions, with gorgeously colourful stained glass.

 park – and model of intelligent ecotourism – sits in the lee of Mehrangarh. It has been lovingly restored and planted with native species to show the natural diversity of the region. The park is criss-crossed with walk-around Devkund Lake, spotting local birds, butterflies and reptiles. For an extra insight into the area's native flora and fauna, take along one of the excellent local guides.

Walks here are the perfect restorative if the Indian hustle has left you in need of breathing space. Visit early in the mornpleasant temperatures. The visitors centre is thoughtfully put together, and there's a small cafe too.

Jaswant Thada HISTORIC BUILDING

 memorial to Maharaja Jaswant Singh II, sitting above a small lake 1km northeast of Mehrangarh, is an array of whimsical domes. It's a welcome, peaceful spot after the hubbub of the city, and the views across to the fort and over the city are superb. Built in 1899, the cenotaph has some beautiful jalis (carved marble lattice screens) and is hung with portraits of Rathore rulers going back to the 13th century. Look out for the memorial to a peacock that flew into a funeral pyre.

Clock Tower

MONUMENT

The century-old clock tower is an old city landmark surrounded by the vibrant sounds, sights and smells of Sardar Market, which is marked by triple gateways at its northern and southern ends. The narrow, winding lanes of the old city spread out in all directions from here. Westward, you plunge into the old city's commercial heart, with crowded alleys and bazaars selling vegetables, spices, sweets, silver and handicrafts.

Um Maid Bhawan Palace

PALACE

(museum Indian/foreigner ₹25/60; ☺ museum 9am-5pm) Take an autorickshaw to this hill-top palace, 3km southeast of the old city. The current royal incumbent, Gaj Singh II, still lives in part of the building. Built in 1929, the 365-room edifice was designed by the British architect Henry Lanchester for Maharaja Um Maid Singh. It took more than 3000 workers 15 years to complete, at a cost of around ₹11 million. The building is mortarless, and incorporates 100 wagon-loads of Makrana marble and Burmese teak in the interior. Apparently its construction began as a royal job-creation program during a time of severe drought. Much of the building has been turned into a suitably grand hotel.

Casual visitors are not welcome at either the royal residence or the hotel, but you can visit the museum, housed in one side of the building. It includes photos showing the elegant art deco design of the palace interior, plus an eccentric collection of elaborate clocks. Don't miss the maharaja's highly polished classic cars, displayed in front of the museum, by the entrance gate.

Flying Fox

ADVENTURE

(www.flyingfox.asia; tour ₹1800; ☺ 9am-5pm) This circuit of six zip-lines flies back and forth over walls, bastions and lakes on the northern side of Mehrangarh. A brief training session is given before you start and safety standards are good: awesome is the verdict of most who dare. Flying Fox has a desk near the main ticket office and its starting point is in the Chokelao Bagh. Tours last up to 1½ hours, depending on the group size. Book online for a discount on the walk-up price.

★ Festivals & Events

In September or October Jodhpur hosts the colourful Marwar Festival, which includes polo and a camel tattoo. It coincides with the excellent Rajasthan International Folk Festival (www.jodhpurriff.org), five days of music concerts by Indian and international artists held at Mehrangarh. This most spectacular of music venues also hosts April's Jodhpur Flamenco and Gypsy Festival (<http://jgffestival.com>).

🛏 Sleeping

The old city has something like 100 guest-houses, most of which scramble for your custom as soon as you get within breathing distance of Sardar Market.

If a rickshaw rider or friendly local is clamouring to take you to a guesthouse or hotel, it's probably because he is aiming to receive a commission from them. There's a growing anti-commission movement among hoteliers here, but many still pay touts, or your rickshaw/taxi driver an absurd 50% of what you pay for your room. Don't believe drivers or strangers on the street who tell you the place you want has closed, is full, is under repair, is far from the centre etc.

Many lodgings can organise a pick-up from the train station or bus stops, even at night, if you call ahead. Otherwise, for most places in the old city you can avoid nonsense by getting dropped at the clock tower and walking from there.

🏠 Old City (Sardar Market)

Mangal Haveli Guest House GUESTHOUSE $ (☎ 2611001; www.mangalhaveli.com; Killi Khana, Fort Rd; r ₹500-700; 📶) A good budget option between the fort and the clock tower. Rooms are simple but good value for the price; those facing inside are darker but quieter, compared to the airier rooms facing the busy thoroughfare. It has the obligatory rooftop terrace restaurant.

Hill View Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 2441763; Makrana Mohalla; r ₹250-600) Perched just below the fort walls, this is run by a friendly, enthusiastic, no-hassle, Muslim family, who'll make you feel right at home. Rooms are basic, clean and simple, all with bathrooms (but not all with decent windows), and the terrace has a great view over the city. Good, home-cooked veg and nonveg food is on offer.

Kesar Heritage Hotel GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 09983216625; www.kesarheritage.com; Makrana Mohalla; r ₹700-1200) A popular recent addition to Jodhpur's budget accommodation scene, Kesar plays a good hand with large airy rooms (a few have balconies) and friendly, helpful management, plus a side-street location that puts noisily sputtering rickshaws out of earshot of light sleepers. The rooftop restaurant looks up to Mehrangarh.

Nirvana Hotel HOTEL $
(☎ 5106280; nirvanahome.jod@gmail.com; 1st fl, Tija Mata ka Mandir, Tambaku Bazar; r ₹800-1200; 📶📶) It's not often you get to lay your head down in a converted Hindu temple, but Nirvan Hotel gives you the chance. Rooms run off a lovely courtyard thick with pot plants, and although windows face inside, your views are instead of original 150-year-old temple frescoes (fixtures and fittings are thankfully newer). Room 11 is the highlight – it's under an original temple dome, and looks straight over the rooftops to Mehrangarh.

Hare Krishna Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(📍) 2635307; www.harekrishnaguesthouse.net; Makrana Mohalla; ₹ 600-1200; (📶) An old house that has been extended upwards and squeezes in rooms and stairs wherever possible. The range of rooms is impressive, from the cavelike cheapie to the spacious fort-view rooms. Friendly staff, free wi-fi and, of course, a rooftop restaurant.

Pushy Paying Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(📍) 2648494; sonukash2003@yahoo.co.in; Pipliki-Gali, Naya Bass, Manak Chowk; ₹ 500-800; (📶) This small family-home-cum-guesthouse has five clean, colourful rooms with windows. It's tucked down the narrowest of alleys, but you get an up-close view of Mehrangarh from the rooftop restaurant, where owner Nikhil rustles up great vegetarian fare (dishes ₹30 to ₹80).

Haveli Inn Pal HERITAGE HOTEL $$
(📍) 2612519; www.haveliinnpal.com; Gulab Sagar; ₹ incl breakfast ₹2050-2550; (📶) The smaller, 12-room sibling of Pal Haveli is accessed through the same grand entrance, but is located around to the right in one wing of the grand haveli. It's a simpler heritage experience, with comfortable rooms and lake or fort views from the more expensive ones. It also has its own good rooftop restaurant, a mere chapati toss from Indique at Pal Haveli. Free pick-ups from Jodhpur transport terminals are offered, and discounts are often available for single occupancy.

Raas BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$
(📍) 2636455; www.raasjodhpur.com; Tunvarji-ka-Jhalra; ₹ incl breakfast ₹21,000-40,000; (📶) Developed from a 19th-century city mansion, Jodhpur's first contemporary-style boutique hotel is a splendid retreat of clean, uncluttered style, hidden behind a big castlelike gateway. The red-sandstone-and-terrazzo rooms come with plenty of luxury touches. Most have balconies with great Mehrangarh views – also to be enjoyed from the lovely pool in the neat garden-courtyard.

Pal Haveli HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(📍) 3293328; www.palhaveli.com; Gulab Sagar; ₹ incl breakfast ₹5500-8500; (📶) This stunning haveli, the best and most attractive in the old city, was built by the Thakur of Pal in 1847. There are 21 charming, spacious rooms, mostly large and elaborately decorated in traditional heritage style, surrounding a cool central courtyard. The family still live here and can show you their small museum. Three restaurants serve excellent food and the rooftop Indique (p178) boasts views.

🏠 Old City (Navchokiya)

Cosy Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(📍) 9829023390, 2612066; www.cosyguesthouse.com; Chuna Ki Choki, Navchokiya; ₹ 400-1550, without bathroom ₹250; (📶) A friendly place in an enchanting location, this 500-year-old glowing blue house has several levels of higgledy-piggledy rooftops and a mix of rooms, some monastic, others comfortable. Ask the rickshaw driver for Navchokiya Rd, from where the guesthouse is signposted, or call the genial owner, Mr Joshi.

★ Singhvi's Haveli GUESTHOUSE $$
(📍) 2624293; www.singhviaveli.com; Ramdevji-ka-Chowk, Navchokiya; ₹ 900-2600; (📶) This red-sandstone, family-run, 500-odd-year-old haveli is an understated gem. Run by two friendly brothers, Singhvi's has 13 individual rooms, ranging from the simple to the magnificent Maharani Suite with 10 windows and a fort view. The relaxing vegetarian restaurant is decorated with sari curtains and floor cushions.

🚉 Train Station Area

Govind Hotel HOTEL $$
(📍) 2622758; www.govindhotel.com; Station Rd; ₹ 600-2000; (📶) Well set up for travellers, with helpful management, an internet cafe, and a location convenient to the Jodhpur train station. All rooms are clean and tiled, with fairly smart bathrooms. There's a rooftop restaurant and coffee shop (p178) with excellent espresso and cakes.

🍴 Eating

It's convenient to eat in your guesthouse or hotel restaurant (which is usually on the roof, with a fort view), but there are also a number of places well worth going out to.

Jharokha MULTICUISINE $ (Hotel Haveli; mains ₹70-170; ☺ until 11pm) The rooftop terraces of the Hotel Haveli host one of the best veg restaurants in Jodhpur. As well as the excellent food and views there's nightly entertainment in the form of traditional music and dance. The dishes include Rajasthani specialities and traditional North Indian favourites, as well as pizza, pasta and pancakes for the homesick.

Jhankar Choti Haveli

MULTICUISINE $

(Makrana Mohalla; mains ₹90-150; ☺ 8am-10pm; ☹) Stone walls and big cane chairs in a leafy courtyard, prettily painted woodwork and whirring fans set the scene at this semi-open-air travellers' favourite. It serves up good Indian vegetarian dishes plus pizzas, burgers and baked cheese dishes.

Omelette Shops

STREET FOOD $

(omelettes from ₹25; ☺ 10am-10pm) On your right and left as you leave Sadar Market through its northern gate, these two omelette stalls compete for the attentions of passing travellers by knocking up seemingly endless numbers and varieties of cheap, delicious omelettes. Both do a decent job, and are run by characters worth spending a few minutes with.

Three tasty, spicy boiled eggs cost ₹15, and a two-egg masala and cheese omelette with four pieces of bread is ₹30.

Nirvana

INDIAN $$

(1st fl, Tija Mata ka Mandir, Tambaku Bazar; mains ₹120-160, regular/special thali ₹160/250; ☺ 10.30am-10pm) Sharing premises with a Rama temple, Nirvana has both an indoor cafe, covered in 150-year-old Ramayana wall paintings, and a rooftop eating area with panoramic views. The Indian vegetarian food is among the most delicious you'll find in Rajasthan. The special thali is enormous and easily enough for two. Continental and Indian breakfasts are served in the cafe.

Kalinga Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(off Station Rd; mains ₹130-300; ☺ 8am-11pm; ☹) This restaurant near Jodhpur train station is smart and popular. It's in a dimly lit setting and has AC, a well-stocked bar, and tasty veg and nonveg North Indian tandooris and curries. Try the lal maans, a mouthwatering Rajasthani mutton curry.

On the Rocks

INDIAN $$

(☎ 5102701; Circuit House Rd; mains ₹115-325; ☺ 12.30-3.30pm & 7.30-11pm) This leafy garden restaurant, 2km southeast of the old city, is very popular with locals and tour groups. It has tasty Indian cuisine, including lots of barbecue options and rich and creamy curries, plus a small playground and a cavelike bar (open 11am to 11pm) with a dance floor (for couples only).

Mid Town

INDIAN $$

(off Station Rd; mains ₹100-150; ☺ 7am-10.30pm; ☹) This clean restaurant does great veg food, including some Rajasthani specialities, some particular to Jodhpur, such as chakki-ka-sagh (wheat dumpling cooked in rich gravy), bajara-ki-roti pachkuta (bajara wheat roti with local vegetables) and kabuli (vegetables with rice, milk, bread and fruit).

★ Indique

INDIAN $$$

(☎ 3293328; Pal Haveli Hotel; mains ₹250-350; ☺ 11am-11pm) This candle-lit rooftop restaurant at the Pal Haveli hotel is the perfect place for a romantic dinner, with superb views to the fort, clock tower and Umaid Bhawan. The food covers traditional tandoori, bryanis and North Indian curries, but the Rajasthani laal maas (mutton curry) is a delight. Ask the barman to knock you up a gin and tonic before dinner.

Drinking

Try a glass of makhania lassi, a thick and filling saffron-flavoured version of that most refreshing of drinks.

Coffee drinkers will enjoy the precious beans and espresso machines at the deliciously air-conditioned Cafe Sheesh Mahal (Pal Haveli Hotel; coffee from ₹80; ☺ 9am-9pm); the rooftop coffee shop at the Govind Hotel (Govind Hotel, Station Rd; ☺ 10am-10pm); and, for those who need their dose of double-shot espresso, a branch of Cafe Coffee Day (Jal-jog Circle, High Court Rd; ☺ 10am-11pm).

For other forms of liquid refreshment, pull up a stool at the Trophy Bar (Umaid Bhawan Palace, Umaid Bhawan Rd; ☺ 11am-3pm & 6-11pm).

Shri Mishrilal Hotel

CAFE

(Sardar Market; lassi ₹30; ☺ 8.30am-10pm) Just inside the southern gate of Sardar Market, this place is nothing fancy but whips up the most superb creamy makhania lassis. These are the best in town, probably in all of Rajasthan, possibly in all of India.

Shopping

Plenty of Rajasthani handicrafts are available, with shops selling textiles and other wares clustered around Sardar Market and along Nai Sarak (bargain hard).

Jodhpur is famous for antiques, with a concentration of showrooms along Palace

JODHPUR'S JODHPURS

A fashion staple for self-respecting horsey people all around the world, jodhpurs are riding breeches – usually of a pale cream colour – that are loose above the knee and tapered from knee to ankle. It's said that Sir Pratap Singh, a legendary Jodhpur statesman, soldier and horseman, originally designed the breeches for the Jodhpur Lancers. When he led the Jodhpur polo team on a tour to England in 1897, the design caught on in London and then spread around the world.

If you fancy taking home an authentic pair from the city they originated in, head to Monarch Garments, (☎ 9352353768; www.monarch-garments.com; A-13 Umaid Bhavan Palace Rd; ☎ 10.30am-8.45pm) opposite the approach road leading up to Umaid Bhawan Palace, where you can buy ready-made jodhpurs or have a pair tailored for you within two days. Prices are polo-club-worthy, starting at around ₹7000.

Rd, 2km southeast of the centre. These warehouse-sized shops are fascinating to wander around, but they're well known to Western antiques dealers, so you'll be hard-pressed to find any bargains. Also remember that the trade in antique architectural fixtures may be contributing to the desecration of India's cultural heritage (beautiful old havelis are often ripped apart for their doors and window frames), and restrictions apply to the export of items over 100 years old. However, most showrooms deal in antique reproductions, and can make a piece of antique-style furniture and ship it home for you. The best bets for quality replica antiques are Ajay Art Emporium (Palace Rd; ☎ 10am-7pm) or Rani Handicrafts (Palace Rd; ☎ 10am-7pm). These shops also have more portable (often less expensive) items than furniture, such as textiles, carvings and silverware.

MV Spices

FOOD & DRINK

(www.mvspices.com; Nai Sarak; ☎ 9am-9pm) The most famous spice shop in Jodhpur (and believe us, there are lots of pretenders!), MV Spices has several small branches around town that are run by the seven daughters of the founder of the original stall. It will cost around ₹80 to ₹100 for 100g bags of spices, and the owners will email you recipes so you can use your spices correctly when you get home.

Sambhali Boutique

CLOTHING, ACCESSORIES

(Makrana Mohalla; ☎ 10am-8pm Mon-Sat, noon-8pm Sun) This small but interesting shop sells goods made by women who have learned craft skills with the Sambhali Trust (☎ 0291-2512385; www.sambhali-trust.org; c/o Durag Niwas Guest House, 1st Old Public Park, Raika Bagh, Jodhpur), which works to empower disadvantaged women and girls. Items include attractive sakwar trousers, cute stuffed silk or cloth elephants and horses, bracelets made from pottery beads, silk bags, and block-printed muslin curtains and scarves.

Krishna Book Depot

BOOKS

(Sardar Market; ☎ 10.30am-7.30pm) Upstairs is an Aladdin's Den of new and used books, piled high in no apparent order – great for browsing. Downstairs is handicrafts.

Information

There are foreign-card-friendly ATMs dotted around the city, though there are few in the old city, one exception being near Shahi Guest House. Internet cafes, found all around town, especially in the old city, charge around ₹40 per hour.

Main Post Office (Station Rd; ☎ 9am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 3pm Sat, stamp sales only 10am-3pm Sun)

Om Forex (Sardar Market; internet per hr ₹30; ☎ 9am-10pm) Also exchanges currency and travellers cheques.

Police (Sardar Market; ☎ 24hr) Small police post inside the market's northern gate.

Tourist Office (☎ 2545083; High Court Rd; ☎ 9am-6pm Mon-Fri) Offers a free map and willingly answers questions.

Getting There & Away

AIR

Jet Airways (☎ 5102222; www.jetairways.com; Residency Rd) and Indian Airlines (☎ 2510758; www.indian-airlines.nic.in; Circuit House Rd) fly daily to Delhi and Mumbai.

BUS

Government-Run Buses

Government-run buses leave from Central Bus Stand (Raika Bagh), directly opposite Raika Bagh train station. Walk east along High Court

Private Buses

You can book private buses through your hotel, although it's cheaper to deal directly with the bus operators on the road in front of Jodhpur train station. Jain Travels (☎2633831; www.jaintravels.com; ☀7am-11pm) and Mahadev Travels (☎2633927; MG Hospital Rd; ☀7am-10pm) are both reliable. Buses leave from bus stands out of town, but the operator should provide you with free transport (usually a shared autorickshaw) from their ticket office. Example services are as follows:

- Ajmer (₹220, six hours, at least six daily)
- Bikaner (₹200, five hours, at least five daily)
- Delhi (seat/sleeper ₹578/788, 12 hours, daily)

- Mt Abu direct (seat/sleeper ₹250/430, 7½ hours, daily)
- Mumbai (seat only ₹1600, 18 hours, at least four daily)

TAXI

You can organise taxis for intercity trips (or longer) through most accommodation places or deal directly with drivers. There's a taxi stand outside Jodhpur train station. A reasonable price is ₹7 to ₹8 per kilometre (for a non-AC car), with a minimum of 250km per day. The driver will charge at least ₹100 for overnight stops and will charge for his return journey.

TRAIN

The computerised booking office (Station Rd; ☀8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 1.45pm Sun) is 300m northeast of Jodhpur train station. Window 786 sells the tourist quota.

- Four daily trains make the trip to Jaisalmer (5½ hours; 5.30am, 7.35am, 5.45pm and 11.45pm).
- Four daily trains go to Bikaner (5½ hours; 10am, 10.45am, 1.50pm and 8.15pm). The 1.50pm takes more than seven hours.
- Eleven daily trains go to Jaipur (five to six hours), departing between 6.10am and midnight.
- Four daily trains go to Delhi (11 to 14 hours; 6.25am, 7pm, 8pm and 11pm); the early evening departures are fastest.
- Six go to Mumbai (16 to 19 hours; 5.35am, 2.45pm, 6.20pm, 6.45pm, 7.20pm and 11.55pm). Each of these goes via Abu Road, for Mt Abu (4½ hours).
- For Pushkar, there are two daily trains to Ajmer (5½ hours, 6.25am and 7am).

There are no direct trains to Udaipur; change at Marwar Junction.

i Getting Around

Despite the absurd claims of some autorickshaw drivers, the fare between the clock tower area and the train stations or Central Bus Stand should be about ₹50. Suncity Cab (☎6888888) and Rajasthan Cab (☎6222222) have reliable fixed-price taxis that can be pre-booked.

The airport is 5km south of the city centre; a taxi/autorickshaw will cost about ₹300/150.

Around Jodhpur

The mainly arid countryside around Jodhpur is dotted with surprising lakes, isolated forts and palaces, and intriguing villages. It's home to a clutch of fine heritage hotels where you can enjoy the slower pace of rural life.

Southern Villages

A number of traditional villages are strung along and off the Pali road southeast of Jodhpur. Most hotels and guesthouses in Jodhpur offer tours to these villages, often called Bishnoi village safaris. The Bishnoi are a Hindu sect who follow the 500-year-old teachings of Guru Jambheshwar, who emphasised the importance of protecting the environment long before it was popular to do so. Many visitors are surprised by the density – and fearlessness – of wildlife such as blackbuck, bluebills (nilgai), chinkara gazelles and desert fox around the Bishnoi villages. The Bishnoi hold all animal life sacred. The 1730 sacrifice of 363 villagers to protect khejri trees is commemorated in September at Khejadali village, where there is a memorial to the victims fronted by a small grove of khejri trees.

At Guda Bishnoi, the locals are traditionally engaged in animal husbandry. There's a small lake (full only after a good monsoon) where migratory birds such as demoiselle cranes, and mammals such as blackbucks and chinkaras, can be seen, particularly at dusk when they come to drink.

The village of Salawas is a centre for weaving beautiful dhurries (rugs), a craft also practised in many other villages. A co-operative of 42 families runs the Roopraj Dhurry Udyog (☎0291-2896658; rooprajdhurry@sify.com), through which all profits go to the artisans. A 3ft by 5ft dhurrie costs a minimum of ₹2800, a price based on two weavers working several hours a day for a month at ₹50 per day each. Other families are involved in block-printing.

Bishnoi village tours from Jodhpur tend to last four hours and cost around ₹800 per person. Those run by Deepak Dhanraj of Bishnoi Village Safari (☎9829126398; www.bishnoivillagesafari.com) receive good feedback, but many other places offer them.

Rohet

Rohet Garh (☎02936-268231; www.rohetgarh.com; Rohet Village; s/d ₹8500/9500, ste ₹12,000; 🍷🍷🍷), in Rohet village, 40km south of Jodhpur on the Pali road, is one of the area's most appealing heritage hotels. This 350-year-old, lovingly tended manor has masses of character and a tranquil atmosphere, which obviously helped Bruce Chatwin when he wrote The Songlines here, and William Dalrymple when he began City of

i BORDER CROSSING – JODHPUR TO KARACHI, PAKISTAN

The 14889 Thar Express (alias the Jodhpur–Munabao Link Express) leaves Bhagat Ki Kothi station, 4km south of the Jodhpur Train Station, at 1am on Saturdays for Karachi (Pakistan).

You need to arrive at the station six hours before departure – the same amount of time it takes to reach the sole stop of Munabao on the border. There you undergo lengthy border procedures before continuing on to Karachi (assuming you have a Pakistan visa) in a Pakistani train, arriving about 2am on Sunday. Accommodation is sleeper only, with a total sleeper fare of around ₹450 from Jodhpur to Karachi.

In the other direction the Pakistani train leaves Karachi at about 11pm on Friday, and Indian train 14890 leaves Munabao at 7pm on Saturday, reaching Jodhpur at 11.50pm.

Djinns in the same room, No 15. Rohet Garh has a gorgeous colonnaded pool, charming green gardens, great food (lunch/dinner ₹750/900) and lovely, individual rooms. It also possesses a stable of fine Marwari horses and organises rides ranging from two-hour evening trots (₹2000) to six-day countryside treks, sleeping in luxury tents. The quirky Om Bana Temple (p182) is a short bus ride from here.

A taxi from Jodhpur will cost around ₹800. There are also frequent buses; once here, turn right out of Rohet's tiny bus stand, take the first right and keep walking for about 1km.

Osian

The ancient Thar Desert town of Osian, 65km north of Jodhpur, was an important trading centre between the 8th and 12th centuries. Known as Upkeshpur, it was dominated by the Jains, whose wealth left a legacy of exquisitely sculpted, well-preserved temples.

The Mahavira Temple (Indian/foreigner free/₹10, camera/video ₹50/100; ☀6am-8.30pm) surrounds an image of the 24th tirthankar, formed from sand and milk. Sachiya Mata Temple (☀6am-7.15pm) is an impressive

THE MOTORBIKE TEMPLE

Om Bana Temple (Motorbike Temple) One of the strangest temples in all India stands 8km south of Rohet beside the Pali road, near Chotila village. The deity at Om Bana Temple is a garland-decked Enfield Bullet motorcycle, known as Bullet Baba. The story goes that local villager Om Bana died at this spot in the 1980s when his motorbike skidded into a tree. The bike was taken to the local police station, but then mysteriously twice made its own way back to the tree, and travellers along the road started seeing visions of Om Bana – inevitably leading to the machine's deification.

Any time of day or night people can be seen at the open-air shrine here, simultaneously praying for safe journeys and making offerings of liquor.

Buses from Jodhpur to Rohet should continue on to Om Bana, but check with the driver. Otherwise, you can hop on almost any passing bus from Rohet (₹10).

The cost is around ₹1400 per person per day (minimum two people). Pick up from Osian bus station, or from Jodhpur, can be arranged.

There are frequent buses from Jodhpur to Osian (₹45, 90 minutes). Trains between Jodhpur and Jaisalmer also stop here. A return taxi from Jodhpur costs about ₹1200.

narrow streets of the old city conceal magnificent havelis, all carved from the same golden-honey sandstone as the fort – hence Jaisalmer's designation as the Golden City.

A city that has come back almost from the dead in the past half-century, Jaisalmer may be remote but it's certainly not forgotten – indeed it's one of Rajasthan's most popular tourist destinations, and few people come here without climbing onto a camel in the surrounding Thar Desert. Competition to get your bum into a camel saddle can be fierce, with some operators adopting unpleasant hard-sell tactics. Generally speaking, though, this is a much more laid-back, hassle-free place to stay than the likes of Jaipur or Jodhpur.

Jaisalmer celebrates its desert culture in January or February each year with the action-packed Desert Festival featuring camel races, camel polo, folk music, snake charmers, turban-tying contests and the famous Mr Desert competition. Many events take place at the Sam Sand Dunes.

History

Jaisalmer was founded way back in 1156 by a leader of the Bhati Rajput clan named Jaisal. The Bhatias, who trace their lineage back to Krishna, ruled right through to Independence in 1947.

The city's early centuries were tempestuous, partly because its rulers relied on looting for want of other income, but by the 16th century Jaisalmer was prospering from its strategic position on the camel-train routes between India and Central Asia. It eventually established cordial relations with the Mughal empire. In the mid-17th century Maharawal Sabal Singh expanded the Jaisalmer principedom to its greatest extents by annex-

The fort of Jaisalmer is a breathtaking sight: a massive sandcastle rising from the sandy plains like a mirage from a bygone era. No place better evokes exotic camel-train trade routes and desert mystery. Ninety-nine bastions encircle the fort's still-inhabited twisting lanes. Inside are shops swaddled in bright embroideries, a royal palace and numerous businesses looking for your tourist rupee.

Despite the commercialism it's hard not to be enchanted by this desert citadel. Beneath the ramparts, particularly to the north, the ing areas that now fall within the administrative districts of Bikaner and Jodhpur.

Under British rule the rise of sea trade (especially through Mumbai) and railways saw Jaisalmer's importance and population decline. Partition in 1947, with the cutting of trade routes to Pakistan, seemingly sealed the city's fate. But the 1965 and 1971 wars between India and Pakistan gave Jaisalmer new strategic importance, and since the 1960s the Indira Gandhi Canal to the north has brought revitalising water to the desert.

Today tourism and the area's many military installations are the pillars of the city's economy.

Jaisalmer Fort

FORT

Jaisalmer's unique fort is a living urban centre, with about 3000 people residing within its walls. It's honeycombed with narrow, winding lanes, lined with houses and temples – along with a large number of handicraft shops, guesthouses and restaurants. You enter the fort from the east, near Gopa Chowk, and pass through four massive gates on the zigzagging route to the upper part. The final gate opens onto the square that forms the fort's centre, Dashera Chowk.

Founded in 1156 by the Rajput ruler Jaisal and reinforced by subsequent rulers, Jaisalmer Fort was the focus of a number of battles between the Bhatias, the Mughals of Delhi and the Rathores of Jodhpur. In recent years, the fabric of the fort has faced increasing conservation problems due to unrestricted water use caused by high tourist numbers.

Fort Palace

PALACE

(Indian/foreigner incl compulsory audio guide ₹50/300, camera/video ₹100/200; ☀️8am-6pm Apr-Oct, 9am-6pm Nov-Mar) Towering over the fort's main square, and partly built on top of the Hawa Pol (the fourth fort gate), is the former rulers' elegant seven-storey palace.

Much of the palace is open to the public – floor upon floor of small rooms provide a fascinating sense of how such buildings were designed for spying on the outside world. The doorways connecting the rooms of the palace are quite low. This isn't a reflection on the stature of the Rajputs, but was a means of forcing people to adopt a humble, stooped position in case the room they were entering contained the maharawal.

The 1½-hour audio-guide tour, available in six languages, is worthwhile, but you must deposit ₹2000 or your passport, driver's licence or credit card.

Highlights of the tour include the mirrored and painted Rang Mahal (the bedroom of the 18th-century ruler Mulraj II), a gallery of finely wrought 15th-century sculptures donated to the rulers by the builders of the fort's temples, and the spectacular 360-degree views from the rooftop. One room contains an intriguing display of stamps from the former Rajput states. On the eastern wall of the palace is a sculpted pavilion-style balcony. Here drummers raised the alarm when the fort was under siege. You can also see numerous round rocks piled on top of the battlements, ready to be rolled onto advancing enemies.

The last part of the tour moves from the king's palace (Raja-ka-Mahal) into the queen's palace (Rani-ka-Mahal), which contains an interesting section on Jaisalmer's annual Gangaur processions in spring.

Jain Temples

JAIN TEMPLE

(Indian/foreigner ₹30/200, camera ₹50; ☀️Chandraprabhu 7am-1pm, other temples 11am-1pm) Within the fort walls is a mazelike, interconnecting treasure trove of seven beautiful yellow sandstone Jain temples, dating from the 15th and 16th centuries. Opening times have a habit of changing, so check with the caretakers. The intricate carving rivals that of the marble Jain temples in Ranakpur and Mt Abu, and has an extraordinary quality because of the soft, warm stone. Shoes and all leather items must be removed before entering the temples.

Chandraprabhu is the first temple you come to, and you'll find the ticket stand here. Dedicated to the eighth tirthankar, whose symbol is the moon, it was built in 1509 and features fine sculpture in the mandapa, whose intensely sculpted pillars form a series of toranas. To the right of Chandraprabhu is the tranquil Rikhabdev temple, with fine sculptures around the walls, protected by glass cabinets, and pillars beautifully sculpted with apsaras and gods.

Behind Chandraprabhu is Parasnath, which you enter through a beautifully carved torana culminating in an image of the Jain tirthankar at its apex. A door to the south leads to small Shitalnath, dedicated to the 10th tirthankar, whose image is composed of eight precious metals. A door in the northern wall leads to the enchanting, dim chamber of Sambhavanth – in the front courtyard, Jain priests grind sandalwood in mortars for devotional use. Steps lead down to the Gyan Bhandar, a fascinating, tiny, underground library founded in 1500, which houses priceless ancient illustrated manuscripts. The remaining two temples, Shantinath and Kunthunath, were built in 1536 and feature plenty of sensual carving. Note, the restrictive visiting times are for non-Jains. The temples are open all day for worshippers.

Laxminarayan Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

The Hindu Laxminarayan Temple, in the centre of the fort, is simpler than the Jain temples here and has a brightly decorated dome. Devotees offer grain, which is distributed before the temple. The inner sanctum has a repoussé silver architrave around its entrance, and a heavily garlanded image enshrined within. There's also a small 16th-century Hindu temple devoted to Surya, the sun god, inside the fort.

Havelis

Inside the fort but outside it, too (especially in the streets to the north), Jaisalmer is replete with the fairy-tale architecture of havelis – gorgeously carved stone doorways, jali screens, balconies and turrets. There are some outstanding examples of incredibly fine sandstone havelis built by wealthy merchants and local notables in the 18th to 20th centuries.

Patwa-ki-Haveli

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Indian/foreigner ₹20/50; ☀️ 10am-5pm) The biggest fish in the haveli pond is Patwa-ki-Haveli, which towers over a narrow lane, its intricate stonework like honey-coloured lace. Divided into five sections, it was built between 1800 and 1860 by five Jain brothers who made their fortunes in brocade and jewellery. It's most impressive from the outside. The first of the five sections is open as the privately owned Kothari's Patwa-ki-Haveli Museum (Indian/foreigner ₹50/150, camera/video ₹50/70), which richly evokes 19th-century life.

Nathmal-ki-Haveli

HISTORIC BUILDING

(donation requested; ☀️ 8am-7pm) This late-19th-century haveli, once used as the prime minister's house, is still partly inhabited. It has an extraordinary exterior, dripping with carvings, and the 1st floor has some beautiful paintings using 1.5kg of gold leaf. The left and right wings were the work of two brothers, whose competitive spirits apparently produced this virtuoso work – the two sides are similar, but not identical. Sandstone elephants guard the entrance.

Museums

Desert Cultural Centre & Museum

MUSEUM

(Gadi Sagar Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹20/50, puppet show ₹30/50, camera/video ₹20/50, combined museum-show ticket ₹70; ☀️ 9am-8pm, puppet shows 6.30pm & 7.30pm) This interesting museum tells the history of Rajasthan's princely states and has exhibits on traditional Rajasthan culture. Features include Rajasthani music (with video), textiles, a kaavad mobile temple, and a phad scroll painting depicting the story of the Rajasthani folk hero Pabuji, used by travelling singers as they recite Pabuji's epic exploits. It also hosts nightly half-hour puppet shows with English commentary. The ticket includes admission to the Jaisalmer Folklore Museum.

Thar Heritage Museum

MUSEUM

(off Court Rd; admission ₹40, camera ₹20) This private museum has an intriguing assortment of Jaisalmer artefacts, from turbans, musical instruments, fossils and kitchen equipment to displays on birth, marriage, death and opium customs. It's brought alive by the guided tour you'll get from its founder, local historian and folklorist LN Khatri. We enjoyed the snakes and ladders game that acts as a teaching guide to Hinduism's spiritual journey. If the door is locked, you'll find Mr Khatri at his shop, Desert Handicrafts Emporium, nearby on Court Rd.

👉 Tours

The tourist office runs sunset tours to the Sam Sand Dunes (₹200 per person, minimum four people). Add ₹100 if you'd like a short camel ride too.

🛏 Sleeping

While staying in the fort might appear to be Jaisalmer's most atmospheric choice, tourism has helped exert massive pressure on the fort's infrastructure. As a result, we don't recommend staying inside the fort. Fortunately, there's a wide choice of good places to stay outside the fort.

You'll get massive discounts between April and August, when Jaisalmer is hellishly hot. Some budget hotels are heavily into high-pressure selling of camel safaris and things can turn sour if you don't take up their offers: room rates that sound too good to be true almost always are.

Dylan Cafe & Guesthouse GUESTHOUSE $
 (☎ 9828561818; dylancafe.guesthouse@yahoo.in; Gandhi Chowk Rd; r ₹200-500, with AC ₹700; @☎) Dirt cheap digs for young backpackers who like to chillout or party or both. Rooms are acceptable, but most of your time will be spent drinking with the young owners on the rooftop. Free wi-fi, fresh coffee and good company.

Hotel Swastika HOTEL $
 (☎ 252483; swastikahotel@yahoo.com; Chainpura St; dm ₹100, s/d/tr ₹200/300/400, r with AC ₹600; ☎) In this well-run place the only thing you'll be hassled about is to relax. Rooms are plain, quiet, clean and very good for the price; some have little balconies. There are plenty of restaurants nearby.

Hotel Fort View HOTEL $
 (☎ 252214; Gopa Chowk; s/d from ₹300/400) A friendly stalwart of the budget scene located close to the fort gate. The cheapest rooms are small and in the back, but clean; those at the front squeak in fort views. There's a popular fort-facing multicuisine restaurant. Watch for the 9am checkout.

Hotel Renuka HOTEL $
 (☎ 252757; hotelrenuka@rediffmail.com; Chainpura St; r ₹250-650, with AC ₹800; ☎@) Spread over three floors, Renuka has squeaky clean rooms – the best have balconies, bathrooms and AC. It's been warmly accommodating guests since 1988, so management knows its stuff. The roof terrace has great fort views and a good restaurant, and the hotel offers free pick-up from the bus and train stations.

Hotel Tokyo Palace HOTEL $
 (☎ 255483; www.tokyopalace.net; Dhibba Para; dm ₹200, s ₹400-1500, d ₹600-2000; ☎@☎) Well-run by honest, traveller-friendly management, this new place has clean midrange rooms as well as plenty of budget options, including separate basement dorms for men and women (bathrooms are the next level up). Wi-fi only extends to some rooms, and although it does have a pool, it's tiny.

Hotel Jaisal Palace

HOTEL $

(☎ 252717; www.hoteljaisalpalace.com; s ₹600-1050, d ₹750-1250; 🏠) This is a well-run, good-value hotel, though the rooms tend to be on the small side and characterless. It's near Gandhi Chowk.

Arya Haveli

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9782585337; www.aryahaveli.com; Chainpura St; r ₹900-1800; 🏠🏠) Helpful staff at this spruced-up guesthouse add to a stay at Arya Haveli. Rooms are well-appointed and looked after; the cheaper ones face an internal courtyard, the best have their own balcony. The top-floor Blues Cafe is a nice place to relax to some good music and tasty food.

Desert Moon

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 250116, 9414149350; www.desertmoonguesthouse.com; Achalvansi Colony; s ₹600-1000, d ₹1000-1600; 🏠@🏠) On the northwestern edge of town, 1km from Gandhi Chowk, Desert Moon is in a remote-feeling location beneath the Vyas Chhatari sunset point. The guesthouse is run by a friendly Indian-Kiwi couple who offer free pick-up from the train and bus stations. The 11 rooms are cool, clean and comfortable, with polished stone floors, tasteful decorations and sparkling bathrooms. The rooftop vegetarian restaurant has fort and chhatari views.

Hotel Pleasant Haveli

HOTEL $$

(☎ 253253; www.pleasanthaveli.com; Chainpura St; r ₹2400, ste ₹2950; 🏠🏠) This welcoming place has lots of lovely carved stone, a beautiful rooftop (with restaurant) and just a handful of spacious, attractive, colour-themed rooms, all with modern, well-equipped bathrooms and AC. Free pick-ups from transport terminals are available.

Hotel Gorakh Haveli

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9982657525; www.hotelgorakhhaveli.com; Dhibba; s/d ₹1000/1500, with AC ₹1500/2500; 🏠) A pleasantly low-key spot south of the fort, Gorakh Haveli is a modern place built with traditional sandstone and some attractive carving. Rooms are comfy and spacious, staff are amiable, and there's a reasonable multicuisine rooftop restaurant (mains ₹60 to ₹120), with fort views, of course.

Shahi Palace

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 255920; www.shahipalacehotel.com; off Shiv Rd; r ₹600-2500; 🏠@🏠) Shahi Palace is a deservedly popular option. It's a modern building in the traditional style with carved sandstone. It has attractive rooms with raw sandstone walls, colourful embroidery, and carved stone or wooden beds. The cheaper rooms are mostly in two annexes along the street, Star Haveli and Oasis Haveli. The rooftop restaurant (mains ₹80 to ₹200) is excellent. Indian veg and nonveg dishes are available plus some European fare, cold beer and a superb evening fort view.

Killa Bhawan Lodge

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 253833; www.killabhawan.com; r incl breakfast without/with AC ₹3000/3500; 🏠🏠) Near Patwa-ki-Haveli, this small hotel is a delight. There are five big and beautifully decorated rooms, a pleasant rooftop restaurant that looks up to the fort, and free tea and coffee all day.

i ARRIVAL IN JAISALMER

Touts work the buses heading to Jaisalmer from Jodhpur, hoping to steer travellers to guesthouses or hotels in Jaisalmer where they will get a commission. Some may even approach you before the bus leaves Jodhpur; others ride part or all of the way from Jodhpur, or board about an hour before Jaisalmer. On arrival in Jaisalmer, buses can be surrounded by touts baying for your attention. Don't believe anyone who offers to take you 'anywhere you like' for just a few rupees, and do take with a fistful of salt any claims that the hotel you want is 'full', 'closed' or 'no good any more.' Many hotels will offer pick-ups from the bus or train station.

Be very wary of offers of rooms for ₹100 or similar absurd rates. Places offering such prices are almost certainly in the camel-safari hard-sell game and their objective is to get you out of the room and onto a camel as fast as possible. If you don't take up their safari offers, the room price may suddenly increase or you might be told there isn't a room available any more.

Touts are less prevalent on the trains, but the same clamour for your custom ensues outside the station once you have arrived.

JAISALMER CAMEL SAFARIS

Trekking around by camel is the most evocative and fun way to sample Thar Desert life. However, don't expect dune seas – the Thar is mostly arid scrubland sprinkled with villages and wind turbines, with occasional dune areas popping out here and there. You will often come across fields of millet, and children herding flocks of sheep or goats whose neckbells tinkle in the desert silence – a welcome change after the sound of belching camels.

Most trips now include 4WD rides to get you to less frequented areas. The camel riding is then done in two-hour segments: one before lunch, one after. It's hardly camel trekking, but it is a lot of fun. A cheaper alternative to arranging things in Jaisalmer is to base yourself in the small village of Khuri, 48km southwest, where similar camel rides are available, but you're already in the desert when you start.

Before You Go

Competition between safari organisers is cut-throat and standards vary. Most hotels and guesthouses are very happy to organise a camel safari for you. While many provide a good service, some may cut corners and take you for the kind of ride you didn't have in mind. A few low-budget hotels in particular exert considerable pressure on guests to take 'their' safari. Others specifically claim 'no safari hassle'.

You can also organise a safari directly with one of the several reputable specialist agencies in Jaisalmer. Since these agencies depend exclusively on safari business it's particularly in their interest to satisfy their clients. It's a good idea to talk to other travellers and ask two or three operators what they're offering.

A one-night safari leaving Jaisalmer in the afternoon and returning the next morning, with a night on some dunes, is the minimum you'll need to get a feel for the experience: you'll probably get 1½ to two hours of riding each day. You can trek for several days or weeks if you wish. The longer you ride, the more you'll gain an understanding of the desert's villages, oases, wildlife and people.

The best-known dunes, at Sam (40km west of Jaisalmer), are always crowded in the evening and visiting them is more of a carnival than a back-to-nature experience. The dunes near Khuri are also quite busy at sunset, but quiet the rest of the time. Operators all sell trips now to 'nontouristy' and 'off the beaten track' areas. Ironically, this has made Khuri quieter again, although Sam still hums with day-tripper activity.

With 4WD transfers included, typical rates are between ₹1100 and ₹1700 per person for an overnight trip (leaving one morning, and returning the next). This should include meals, mineral water and blankets, and sometimes a thin mattress. Check that there will be one camel for each rider. You can pay for greater levels of comfort (eg tents, better food), but always get it all down in writing.

You should get a cheaper rate (₹900 to ₹1500 per person) if you leave Jaisalmer in the afternoon and return the following morning. A quick sunset ride in the dunes at Sam costs around ₹550 per person, including 4WD transfer. At the other end of the scale, you can ar-

1st Gate

(☎ 9462554462; www.1stgate.in; First Fort Gate; r incl breakfast ₹8500; 🍷@🍷) Italian-designed and super slick, this is Jaisalmer's most sophisticated modern hotel and it is beautiful throughout with a desert-meets-contemporary boutique vibe. The location lends it one of the finest fort views in town, especially from its split-level open-air restaurant-cafe (p190) area. Rooms are immaculate and the food (Italian and Indian) and coffee are both top-notch.

HOTEL $$$

Eating

As well as the many hotel-rooftop eateries, there's a good number of other places to enjoy a tasty meal, often with a view.

Free Tibet

TIBETAN $

range a 20-day trek to Bikaner. Expect to pay between ₹1000 and ₹2000 per person per day for long, multiday trips, depending on the level of support facilities (4WDs, camel carts, etc).

What to Take

A wide-brimmed hat, long trousers, long-sleeved shirt, insect repellent, toilet paper, torch, sunscreen, water bottle (with a strap) and some cash (to tip the camel men, if nothing else) are recommended. It can get cold at night, so if you have a sleeping bag, bring it, even if you're told that blankets will be supplied. Women should consider wearing a sports bra, as a trotting camel is a bumpy ride. During summer, rain is not unheard of, so come prepared.

Which Safari?

There are several options, and recommendations here shouldn't be a substitute for your own research. Whichever agency you go for, insist that all rubbish is carried back to Jaisalmer.

Sahara Travels (☎ 252609; www.saharatravelsjaisalmer.com; Gopa Chowk; ☀ 6am-8pm) Run by the son of the late LN Bissa (aka Mr Desert), this place is very professional and transparent. Trips are to 'nontouristy' areas only. Prices for an overnight trip (9am to 11am the next day): ₹1500 per person, all inclusive.

Trotters (☎ 9828929974; www.trotterscamelsafarijaisalmer.com; Gopa Chowk; ☀ 5.30am-7.30pm) This company is transparently run by Del Boy – who else? – with a clear price list showing everything on offer. Does trips to 'nontouristy' areas as well as cheaper jaunts to Sam or Khuri. Overnight trip (8am to 10am the next day): cost ₹1150 to ₹1300 per person, all inclusive.

Thar Desert Tours (☎ 255656; www.tharcamelsafarijaisalmer.com; Gandhi Chowk; ☀ 8.30am-7.30pm) This well-run operator charges ₹1100 per person per day, adjusting prices depending on trip times. They are slightly pricier than some of the other outfits, but we also receive good feedback about them. Customers pay 80% up front.

In the Desert

Camping out at night, huddling around a tiny fire beneath the stars and listening to the camel drivers' songs is magical.

There's always a long lunch stop during the hottest part of the day. At resting points the camels are unsaddled and hobbled; they'll often have a roll in the sand before limping away to graze on nearby shrubs, while the camel drivers brew chai or prepare food. The whole crew rests in the shade of thorn trees.

Take care of your possessions, particularly on the return journey. Any complaints you do have should be reported in Jaisalmer, either to the Superintendent of Police (☎ 252233), the tourist office (p191), or the intermittently staffed Tourist Assistance Force (Gadi Sagar Rd) posts inside the First Fort Gate and on the Gadi Sagar access road.

Camel drivers will expect a tip or gift at the end of the trip; don't neglect to give them one.

Chandan Shree Restaurant

PUNJABI $
(near Hanuman Circle; mains ₹70-190; ☀ 7am-11pm) An always busy (and rightfully so) dining hall serving up a huge range of tasty, spicy South Indian, Gujarati, Rajasthani, Punjabi and Bengali dishes.

Bhang Shop

CAFE $
(Gopa Chowk; lassi from ₹100) Jaisalmer's infamous lassi shop is a simple, pocket-sized place. The added ingredient is bhang: cannabis buds and leaves mixed into a paste with milk, ghee and spices. It also does a range of bhang-laced cookies. Bhang is legal here, but it doesn't agree with everyone so if you're not used to this sort of thing, go easy or avoid it altogether.

Desert Boy's Dhani

INDIAN $$
(Dhibba; mains ₹100-135; ☀ 11am-4pm & 7-11pm) A walled-garden restaurant where tables are spread around a large, stone-paved courtyard with a big tree. There's also traditional cushion seating under cover. Rajasthani music and dance is performed from 8pm to 10pm nightly, and it's a very pleasant place to eat excellent, good-value Rajasthani and other Indian veg dishes.

A CASTLE BUILT ON SAND

A decade ago the whole structure of Jaisalmer Fort was in danger of being undermined by water leakage from its antique drainage system. The main problem was material progress in the form of piped water for the fort's inhabitants. Three of the ancient bastions had collapsed and parts of the fort palace were leaning at an alarming rate.

Since then, British-based Jaisalmer in Jeopardy (www.jaisalmer-in-jeopardy.org) and several Indian organisations, including the Indian National Trust for Art & Cultural Heritage (INTACH; www.intach.org), have raised funds and carried out much-needed conservation works to save the fort. Most important has been the renewal of the fort's drainage system and repaving of the streets, as well as repair works inside the fort palace.

Things have improved, although some conservationists still believe the fort's structure is in danger, and calls remain for the fort's inhabitants, and those who work in the fort, to be forced to leave. The fort's current population has been established since the 1960s; before then, the fort's inhabitants numbered in the few hundreds, made up mostly of royal family and their workers, plus monks and priests connected to the fort's temples. Visitors should be aware of the fort's fragile nature and conserve resources, especially water, as much as possible. Given that the most recent section of wall collapse took place in 2011, we recommend staying in accommodation outside the fort.

Natraj Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹70-270; ☀️ 10am-10pm) This is a brilliant place to eat, and the rooftop has a satisfying view of the upper part of the Salim Singh-ki-Haveli next door. The pure veg food is consistently excellent and the service is great. The delicious South India dosas (large savoury crepe) are fantastic value.

Monica Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Amar Sagar Pol; mains ₹100-280) The airy open-air dining room at Monica just about squeezes in a fort view, but if you end up at a non-view table, console yourself with the excellent veg and nonveg options. Meat from the tandoor is particularly well-flavoured and succulent, the thalis well-varied, and the salads fresh and clean.

1st Gate

ITALIAN $$$

(☎️ 9462554462; First Fort Gate; mains ₹300-650; ☀️ 7am-11pm; 🍷) A small but good menu of authentic vegetarian Italian dishes as well as some delicious Indian food served on a split-level, open-air terrace with dramatic fort views. Also does good strong Italian coffee (₹100 to ₹150). A wood-fired oven was being built when we visited.

Saffron

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Hotel Nachana Haveli, Gandhi Chowk; mains ₹250-370) On the spacious roof terrace of Hotel Nachana Haveli, the veg and nonveg food here is excellent. The Indian food is hard to beat, though the Italian isn't too bad either. It's a particularly atmospheric place in the evening. Alcohol is served.

🛒 Shopping

Jaisalmer is famous for its stunning embroidery, bedspreads, mirror-word wall hangings, oil lamps, stonework and antiques. Watch out when purchasing silver items: the metal is sometimes adulterated with bronze.

There are several good khadi shops where you can find fixed-price tablecloths, rugs, clothes, cushion covers and shawls, with a variety of patterning techniques including tie-dye, block-printing and embroidery. Try Zila Khadi Gramodan Parishad (Malka Prol Rd; ☀️ 10am-6pm Mon-Sat), Khadi Gramodyog Bhavan (Dhibba; ☀️ 10am-6pm Mon-Sat) or Gandhi Darshan Emporium (near Hanuman Circle; ☀️ 11am-7pm Fri-Wed).

Jaisalmer Handloom

HANDICRAFTS

(www.jaisalmerhandloom.com; Court Rd; ☀️ 9am-10pm) This place has a big array of bedspreads, tapestries, clothing (ready-made and custom-made) and other textiles, made by its own workers and others. Staff don't hassle you with too much of a hard sell.

Desert Handicrafts Emporium

HANDICRAFTS

(Court Rd; ☀️ 9.30am-9.30pm) With some unusual jewellery, paintings and all sorts of textiles, this is one of the most original of numerous craft shops around town.

Dharan Book Store

BOOKS

(Vyas Para, Fort) Bookshops are 10 to the rupee in Jaisalmer, but this one wins us over with the cubbyhole cafe at the back, where you can browse through your latest purchase or get online while sipping a decent espresso. It's opposite Surya Temple.

Bellissima

(Dashera Chowk, Fort; ☀️ 8am-9pm) This small shop near the fort's main square sells beautiful patchworks, embroidery, paintings, bags, rugs, cushion covers and all types of Rajasthani art. Proceeds assist underprivileged women from surrounding villages, including those who have divorced or been widowed.

HANDICRAFTS

(☎️ 252557) are typical. The buses themselves leave from the private bus stand. Typical services include the following:

Ajmer (₹370, nine hours, two or three daily)

Bikaner (₹210, six hours, three to four daily)

Jaipur (seat/sleeper ₹220/500, 11 hours, two or three daily)

Jodhpur (₹400 to ₹500, five hours, half-hourly from 6am to 10pm)

Udaipur (sleeper ₹650, 12 hours, one or two daily)

i Information*INTERNET ACCESS

There are several internet cafes in the fort, but not so many outside it. Typical cost is ₹40 per hour.

MONEY

ATMs include State Bank and SBBJ near Hanuman Circle, SBBJ and ICIC Bank on Shiv Rd, and State Bank outside the train station. There are lots of official money changers in and around Gandhi Chowk.

POST

Main Post Office (Hanuman Circle Rd; ☀️ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) West of the fort.

Post Office (Gopa Chowk; ☀️ 10am-5pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) Just outside the fort gate; sells stamps and you can send postcards.

TOURIST INFORMATION

Tourist Office (☎️ 252406; Gadi Sagar Rd; ☀️ 9.30am-6pm) Friendly office with a free town map.

i Getting There & Away*BUS

RSRTC buses leave from the main bus stand. One daily air-conditioned coach goes to Delhi (₹2001, 15 to 17 hours, 5pm) via Jodhpur, Ajmer (₹366) and Jaipur (₹467), but it has reclining seats only. There are daily services to Jodhpur (₹208, 5½ hours) throughout the day.

A number of private bus companies have ticket offices at Hanuman Circle. Hanuman Travels (☎️ 9413362367) and Swagat Travels

TAXI

One-way taxis should cost about ₹1800 to Jodhpur, ₹4000 to Bikaner and ₹6500 to Udaipur. There's a stand on Hanuman Circle Rd.

TRAIN

The station (☀️ ticket office 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 1.45pm Sun) is on the eastern edge of town, just off the Jodhpur road. There's a reserved ticket booth for foreigners.

➤ Three daily trains go to Jodhpur (2nd class ₹205; five to six hours; 1.20am, 6.15am and 5pm).

➤ One train a day runs to Bikaner (six hours, 11.20pm)

➤ One daily train goes to Delhi (18 hours, 5pm) via Jaipur (12 hours).

i Getting Around*AUTORICKSHAW

It costs around ₹40 from the train station to Gandhi Chowk.

CAR & MOTORCYCLE

It's possible to hire taxis or 4WDs from the stand on Hanuman Circle Rd. To Khuri, the Sam Sand Dunes or Lodhruva, expect to pay ₹800 to ₹1000 return, including a wait of about an hour.

Shiva Bikes (First Fort Gate; motorbike per day ₹500-2000; ☀️ 8am-9pm) is licensed to hire motorbikes (including Royal Enfield Bullets) and scooters for exploring town and nearby sights. Helmets and area maps are included.

Around Jaisalmer

Sam Sand Dunes

The silky Sam Sand Dunes (admission vehicle/camel ₹50/80), 41km west of Jaisalmer along a good sealed road (maintained by the Indian army), are one of the most popular excursions from the city. The band of dunes is about 2km long and is undeniably one of the most picturesque in the region. Some camel safaris camp here, but many more people just roll in for sunset, to be chased across the sands by dressed-up dancing children and tenacious camel owners offering short rides. Plenty more people stay overnight in one of the couple of dozen tent resorts near the dunes.

All in all the place acquires something of a carnival atmosphere from late afternoon till the next morning, making it somewhere to avoid if you're after a solitary desert sunset experience.

If you're organising your own camel ride on the spot, expect to pay ₹200 to ₹300 for a one-hour sunset ride, but beware the tricks of some camel men such as demanding more money en route.

Khuri

☎ 03014

The village of Khuri, 48km southwest of Jaisalmer, has quite extensive dune areas attracting their share of sunset visitors, and a lot of mostly smallish 'resorts' offering the same sort of overnight packages as those at Sam. It also has a number of low-key guest-houses where you can stay in tranquility in a traditional-style hut with clay-and-dung walls and thatched roof, and venture out on interesting camel trips in the relatively remote and empty surrounding area. Khuri is within the Desert National Park, which stretches over 3162 sq km southwest of Jaisalmer to protect part of the Thar ecosystem, including wildlife such as the desert fox, desert cat, chinkara gazelle, nilgai or bluebull (a large antelope), and some unusual bird life including the endangered great Indian bustard.

Be aware that the commission system is entrenched in Khuri's larger accommodation options. If you just want a quick camel ride on the sand dunes, expect to pay around ₹150 per person.

Sleeping

★ Badal House

HOMESTAY $

(☎ 8107339097; r or hut per person incl full board ₹450) Here you can stay in a family compound in the centre of the village with a few spotlessly clean, mud-walled, thatch-roofed huts and equally spotless rooms (one with its own squat toilet), and enjoy good home cooking. Former camel driver Badal Singh is a charming, gentle man who charges ₹500 for a camel safari with a night on the dunes. He doesn't pay commission so don't let touts warn you away.

Getting There & Away

You can catch local buses from Jaisalmer to Khuri (₹32, one hour) from a road just off Gadi Sagar Rd. Walking from Jaisalmer Fort towards the train station, take the second right after the tourist office, then wait by the tree on the left, with the small shrine beside it. Buses pass here at around 10am, 11.30am, 3.30pm and 4pm.

Return buses from Khuri to Jaisalmer leave at 8am, 9am, 10.30am, 11.30am and 2.30pm.

Bikaner

Bikaner is a vibrant, dust-swirling desert town with a fabulous fort and an energising outpost feel. It's less dominated by tourism than many other Rajasthan cities, though it has plenty of hotels and a busy camel-safari scene, which attracts travellers looking to avoid the Jaisalmer hustle.

Around the full moon in January or very late December, Bikaner celebrates its three day Camel Festival, with one day of events at the Karni Singh Stadium and two days out at Ladera, 45km northeast of the city.

History

The city was founded in 1488 by Rao Bika, a son of Rao Jodha, Jodhpur's founder, though the two Rathore ruling houses later had a falling out over who had the right to keep the family heirlooms. Bikaner grew quickly as a staging post on the great caravan trade routes from the late 16th century onwards, and flourished under a friendly relationship with the Mughals, but declined as the Mughals did in the 18th century. By the 19th century the area was backward, but managed to turn its fortunes around by hiring out camels to the British during the First Anglo-Afghan War. In 1886 it was the first desert princely state to install electricity.

Sights

Junagarh

FORT

(Indian/foreigner ₹50/300, video ₹100, audio guide ₹50; ☀️ 10am-5.30pm, last entry 4.30pm) This most impressive fort was constructed between 1589 and 1593 by Raja Rai Singh, ruler of Bikaner and a general in the army of the Mughal emperor Akbar. You enter through the Karan Prole gate on the east side and pass through three more gates before the ticket office for the palace museum. An informative audio guide (requiring an identity document as a deposit), is available in English, French, German and Hindi.

Old City

AREA

The old city still has a medieval feel despite the motorbikes and autorickshaws. This labyrinth of narrow, winding streets conceals a number of fine old havelis, and a couple of notable Jain temples just inside the southern wall, 1.5km southwest of Bikaner Junction train station. It makes for an interesting wander – we guarantee you'll get lost at least once. The old city is encircled by a 7km-long, 18th-century wall with five entrance gates, the main entrance being the triple-arched Kothé Gate.

Bhandasar Temple

JAIN TEMPLE

(☀️ 5am-1pm & 5.30-11.30pm) Of Bikaner's two Jain temples, Bhandasar is particularly beautiful, with yellow-stone carving and dizzily vibrant paintings. The interior of the temple is stunning. The pillars bear floral arabesques and depictions of the lives of the 24 tirthankars. It's said that 40,000kg of ghee was used instead of water in the mortar, which locals insist seeps through the floor on hot days. The priest may ask for a donation for entry, although a trust pays for the temple upkeep.

On the 1st floor of the three-storey temple are beautiful miniatures of the sentries of the gods. There are fine views over the city from the 3rd floor, with the desert stretching to the west. The temple is dedicated to the fifth tirthankar, Sumtinath, and was commissioned in 1468 by a wealthy Jain merchant, Bhandasa Oswal. It was completed after his death in 1514.

BIKANER SAFARIS

Bikaner offers an excellent alternative to the Jaisalmer camel safari scene. There are fewer people running safaris here, so the hassle factor is quite low. Camel trips tend to be in the areas east and south of the city and focus on the isolated desert villages of the Jat, Bishnoi, Meghwal and Rajput peoples. Interesting wildlife can be spotted here, such as bluebull antelopes (nilgai), chinkara gazelles, desert foxes, spiny-tailed lizards and plenty of birds including (from September to March) the demoiselle crane.

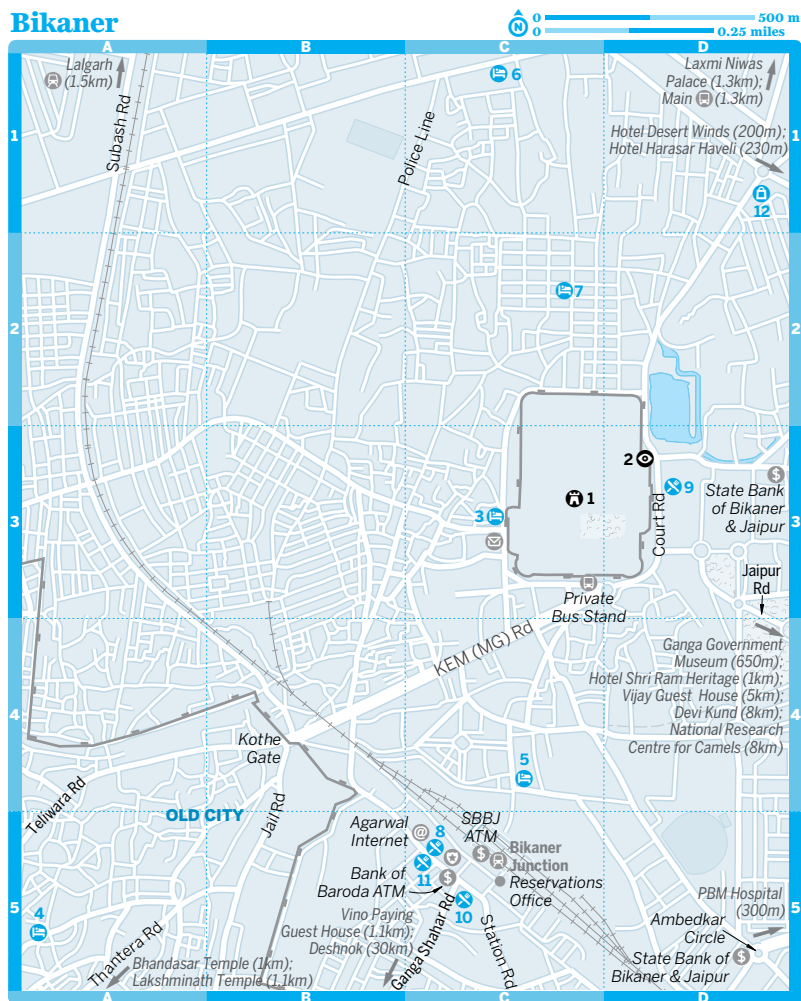

Three days and two nights is a common camel-safari duration, but half-day, one-day and short overnight trips are all also possible. If you're after a serious trip, Jaisalmer is a two-week trek away. The best months to head into the desert are October to February. Avoid mid-April to mid-July, when it's searingly hot.

Typical costs are ₹1400 to ₹2000 per person per day including overnight camping, with tents, mattresses, blankets, meals, mineral water, one camel per person, a camel cart to carry gear (and sometimes tired riders), and a guide, in addition to the camel men.

Many trips start at Raisalr, about 8km east of Bikaner, or Deshnok, 30km south. Traveling to the starting point by bus rather than 4WD is one way of cutting costs.

The standout operator in terms of quality, reliability and transparency is Vijay Singh Rathore, aka Camel Man (☎️ 2231244, 9829217331; www.camelman.com; Vijay Guest House, Jaipur Rd; half-/full-/multiday trip per person per day from ₹700/1000/1200, 1-day, 1-night per person ₹1600), who operates from Vijay Guest House. Also popular and long-established is Vino Desert Safari (☎️ 2270445, 9414139245; www.vinodesertsafari.com; Vino Paying Guest House; 1-day, 1-night per person ₹1800, multiday trek per person ₹1500-2000) run by Vinod Bhojak, of Vino Paying Guest House. Vinayak Desert Safari (☎️ 2202634, 9414430948; www.vinayakdesertsafari.com; Vinayak Guest House; half-day 4WD safari per person ₹500, full- or multiday 4WD safari per person ₹900-2000) runs appealing 4WD safaris with zoologist Jitu Solanki. This safari focuses on desert animals and birds including the enormous cinereous vulture, with its 3m wingspan, which visits the area in numbers from November to March.

Lakshminath Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉ 5am-1pm & 7.30-11.30pm) The splendid Hindu Lakshminath Temple, behind Bhandasar Temple, was built during the reign of Rao Lunkaran between 1505 and 1526. Lakshminath was the patron god of the rulers of Bikaner, and during major religious festivals a royal procession headed by the maharaja pays homage here. The elaborate edifice was maintained with tributes received from five villages and several shops, which were granted to the temple by Maharaja Ganga Singh. Photography is prohibited here.

DON'T MISS

THE TEMPLE OF RATS

The extraordinary Karni Mata Temple (camera/video ₹20/50; ☀️ 4am-10pm) at Deshnok, 30km south of Bikaner, is one of India's weirder attractions. Its resident mass of holy rodents is not for the squeamish, but most visitors to Bikaner brave the potential for ankle-nipping and put a half-day trip here on their itinerary. Frequent buses leave from Bikaner's main bus stand. A return autorickshaw from Bikaner with a one-hour wait costs ₹400.

Karni Mata lived in the 14th century and performed many miracles during her lifetime. When her youngest son, Lakhan, drowned, she ordered Yama (the god of death) to bring him back to life. Yama said he was unable to do so, but that Karni Mata, as an incarnation of Durga, could restore Lakhan's life. This she did, decreeing that members of her family would no longer die but would be reincarnated as kabas (rats). Around 600 families in Deshnok claim to be descendants of Karni Mata and that they will be reincarnated as kabas.

The temple isn't swarming with rats, but there are a lot of them here, especially in nooks and crannies and in areas where priests and pilgrims leave food for them. And yes, you do have to take your shoes off to enter the temple: it's considered highly auspicious to have a kaba run across your feet – you may be graced in this manner whether you want it or not.

You can find food and drinks for yourself at the numerous snack stalls outside.

TRAIN

The main train station is Bikaner Junction, which has a computerised reservations office (☺ 8am-10pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) in a separate building just east of the main station building. The foreigner's window is 2931. A couple of other useful services depart from Lalgarh station in the north of the city (₹50 in an autorickshaw).

• For Jaisalmer, an evening train with reserved ticketing runs only on Tuesday (sleeper/3AC ₹240/600, five hours, 6.30pm) from Bikaner Junction. On all other days there is the 22480 Bikaner-Jaisalmer Express (2nd class ₹135, five hours, 10.55pm), with unreservable seats. Turn up no less than 30 minutes before departure.

• Five daily trains go to Jodhpur (five hours; 12.45am, 6.30am, 9.30am, 11am and 4pm).

• Four daily trains go to Delhi (Delhi Sarai Rohilla; 9.15am, 5pm, 7.45pm and 10.20pm). The trip takes eight to 14 hours depending on the departure: the 9.15am and 10.20pm services are the fastest.

• Five daily trains go to Jaipur (6½ hours; 5.20am, 6am, 5.15pm 6.45pm and 11.05pm).

There are no direct trains to Ajmer for Pushkar.

Getting Around

An autorickshaw from the train station to Junagarh palace should cost ₹40, but you'll probably be asked for more.

Around Bikaner

National Research Centre on Camels

The National Research Centre on Camels (☎ 01512230183; www.nrccamel.res.in; Indian/foreigner ₹20/50, camera ₹30, rides ₹30; ☺ 2-6pm) is 8km southeast of central Bikaner, beside the Jodhpur-Jaipur Bypass. While here you can visit baby camels, go for a short ride and look around the small museum. There are about 400 camels, of three different breeds. The British Army had a camel corps drawn from Bikaner during WWI. Guides are available for ₹50-plus. The on-site Camel Milk Parlour offers samples to try, as well as lassis. Camel grazing time is 3pm to 6pm and is the best time to come. The round trip, including a half-hour wait at the camel farm, is around ₹150/₹300 for an autorickshaw/taxi.

Why Go?

The neighbouring states of Haryana and Punjab were carved from the Indian half of Punjab in the aftermath of Partition. Since then, Punjab has gone from strength to strength as the homeland of India's welcoming Sikh community, while Haryana has emerged as a dynamic hub for business and industry.

Studded with gleaming gurdwaras (Sikh temples) – including the unmissable Golden Temple in Amritsar – Punjab has become a popular stop on the traveller circuit. Haryana is more of a touristic mystery, best known for its modernist capital, Chandigarh. The hinterland around these two hubs is dotted with historic towns that tell a story of battling empires and playboy maharajas, and some of India's most alluring abandoned forts hide among their dusty bazaars.

Punjab and Haryana are united by their love of food. This is the region that gave the world tandoori chicken, tadka dhal (fried yellow lentils) and butter chicken; the prototype for chicken tikka masala. Enjoy the feast.

When to Go

Chandigarh

Mar Three days of Sikh celebrations for Holla Mohalla at Anandpur Sahib.

Apr Punjab's largest festival, Baisakhi, marks the Sikh New Year and the founding of the Khalsa.

Oct Diwali means lights, candles and fireworks; it's particularly magical at the Golden Temple.

Haryana & Punjab Highlights

- 1 Feeling the energy of absolute belief at Amritsar's spectacular Golden Temple (p213), Sikhism's holiest site
- 2 Climbing the towering walls of the little-known but magnificent 12th-century fort in Bathinda (p211)
- 3 Getting off the beaten track by diving into the old

- town of Patiala (p210) before sizing up its impossibly charming 18th-century fort
- 4 Watching the theatrical battle for supremacy between Indian and Pakistani border guards at Wagah's border-closing ceremony (p220)
  - 5 Tumbling into an alternative reality in

- Chandigarh's unique Nek Chand Rock Garden (p200)
- 6 Visiting the Khalsa Heritage Complex (p209) at Anandpur Sahib, an enormous, lotus-flower-shaped museum of Sikh history, and one of India's most striking modern structures

CHANDIGARH

☎ 0172 / POP 1.1 MILLION

Chandigarh is a place to see India as it would like to be seen – prosperous, comfortable and cosmopolitan. Officially a Union Territory controlled by the central government, Chandigarh is the joint capital of Punjab and Haryana. It is also the first planned city of independent India.

When the Swiss architect Le Corbusier was commissioned in 1950, he conceived a people-oriented city of sweeping boulevards, lakes and gardens and grand civic buildings, executed in his favourite material, reinforced concrete. So Chandigarh came into being; turn the clocks forward 60 years and the parks, monuments and civic squares are still here, albeit aged somewhat.

Each sector of the city is self-contained and pedestrian-friendly. Most visitors concentrate their attention on Sector 17 (for shops and restaurants) and Sector 22 (for hotels).

👁 Sights

A ₹10-ticket covers entrance to the Government Museum & Art Gallery, Chandigarh Architecture Museum and Natural History Museum.

★ Nek Chand Rock Garden GARDENS
(www.nekchand.com; adult/child ₹20/5; ☀ 9am-6pm Oct-Mar, to 7pm Apr-Sep) Nek Chand Rock Garden is unique: the surreal fantasy of a local transport official who, starting in 1957, spent almost 20 years personally creating more than 2000 sculptures using stones, debris and other discarded junk that was left over from the 50-odd villages that were destroyed in order to build the city of Chandigarh. Now, entering this fantastical, 10-hectare sculpture garden is like falling down a rabbit hole into the labyrinthine interior of one man's imagination.

Materials used in the construction of the garden range from concrete and steel drums to light switches, broken bathroom sinks and bicycle frames. Highlights include a legion of dancing girls made from broken glass bangles and a graceful arcade of towering arches with dangling rope swings. Ned Chand worked at night to begin with, to keep his eccentric masterpiece from the prying eyes of the city authorities, before eventually they realised the worth of his project and came on board, helping him to expand the site to its current proportions. Visit the website for more on the Nek Chand story, as well as for information on how you can volunteer and even help create new sculptures.

★ Capital Complex NOTABLE BUILDING
(☀ 9am-5pm Mon-Fri) At the epicentre of Le Corbusier's planned city are the imposing concrete High Court, Secretariat and Vidhan Sabha (Legislative Assembly), which are shared by the states of Punjab and Haryana. All three are classic pieces of 1950s architecture from the proto-brutalist school, with bold geometric lines and vast sweeps of moulded concrete. To visit the complex, you must first register, with your passport, at the High Court Tourist Office. You will then be

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Kila Raipur Sports Festival (Rural Olympics; ☀ Feb) Three days of bullock-cart races, kabaddi, strongman contests, folk dancing and more, in Kila Raipur, near Ludhiana.

Surajkund Crafts Mela (☀ 1-15 Feb) Visiting artisans demonstrate and sell colourful handicrafts, with accompanying cultural performances in Surajkund.

Holla Mohalla (☀ Mar; p209) Sikhs celebrate the foundation of the Khalsa (Sikh brotherhood) with martial-arts and battle re-enactments in Anandpur Sahib.

Baisakhi (☀ 13-14 Apr) State-wide, Sikhs head to gurdwaras (temples) to celebrate the Punjabi New Year.

Gita Jayanti (☀ Nov/Dec; p208) One week of cultural events in Kurukshetra for the anniversary of the Bhagavad Gita.

Pinjore Heritage Festival (☀ Dec) Three-day cultural festival with music and dance performances, handicrafts and food stalls at Pinjore Gardens, near Chandigarh.

Harballabh Sangeet Sammelan (www.harballabh.org; ☀ late Dec) The 130-year-old music festival in Jalandhar showcases Indian classical music over four days.

given a free accompanied tour, which lasts for around 1½ hours.

The tour includes a visit to Le Corbusier's unmistakably mid-century Open Hand sculpture, the city's official emblem, signifying that the people of Chandigarh are always 'open to give, open to receive'.

On the approach road to the High Court, the small High Court Museum (☎10am-5pm Mon-Sat) FREE displays assorted judicial memorabilia including original Le Corbusier sketches, a signed copy of the Indian constitution, and the handcuffs worn by Nathuram Godse, Mahatma Gandhi's assassin. Like the sculpture, this can be visited unaccompanied.

Government Museum & Art Gallery

ART GALLERY

(Sector 10-C; admission ₹10, camera ₹5; ☎10am-4.40pm Tue-Sun) You'll find a fine collection of artworks and treasures at this impressive state museum, including trippy paintings of the Himalaya by Russian artist Nicholas Roerich, elegant carvings from the Buddhist Gandhara civilisation, phulkari (embroidery work) and Sobha Singh's much-reproduced portrait of Guru Gobind Singh. At one end, through a separate entrance, is the Child Art Gallery, with colourful artworks from local schoolchildren.

Chandigarh Architecture Museum

MUSEUM

(City Museum; Jan Marg, Sector 10-C; admission ₹10, camera ₹5; ☎10am-4.40pm Tue-Sun) Using photos, letters, models, newspaper reports and architectural drawings, this museum tells the story of Chandigarh's planning and development, including the abandoned first plan for Chandigarh by Albert Mayer and Matthew Nowicki.

Natural History Museum

MUSEUM

(Jan Marg, Sector 10-C; admission ₹10, camera ₹5; ☎10am-4.40pm Tue-Sun) This museum features fossils, model dinosaurs, exquisite hand-embroidered pictures of birds, and a diorama with a caveman using an electric torch to illuminate his cave art!

Le Corbusier Centre

MUSEUM

(☎2777071; www.lecorbusiercentrechd.org; Madhya Marg, Sector 19-B; ☎10am-6pm Tue-Sun) FREE One for fans of architecture and design, this fascinating museum displays documents, sketches and photos of Le Corbusier, along with fascinating letters revealing the politics behind the project, including one from Jawaharlal Nehru to the Chief Minis-

National Gallery of Portraits

ART GALLERY

(Sector 17-B; ☎10am-5pm Tue-Sun, free guided tours 11am & 3pm) FREE Located behind the State Library, with photos and paintings illustrating key players and events in the struggle for independence.

Sukhna Lake

LAKE

(☎8am-10pm) Fulfilling the leisure objective of Le Corbusier's masterplan, this landmark artificial lake is a popular rest and recreation stop for Chandigarh families. It has ornamental gardens, a children's fairground, places to eat and drink, and pedalos (pedal boats; 2-/4-seaters per 30min ₹100/200; ☎8.30am-5.30pm) for rent. Electric carts (₹10 per person) shuttle passengers between here and Nek Chand Rock Garden.

Rose Garden

GARDENS

(Sector 16; ☎5am-9pm Apr-Sep, 6am-8pm Oct-Mar) In line with Le Corbusier's vision of a garden city, Chandigarh is dotted with pleasant public parks. Perhaps most pleasant is this garden, which contains over 1500 rose varieties.

Bougainvillea Garden

GARDENS

(Sector 3; ☎8am-5pm) The Bougainvillea Garden has a thought-provoking memorial to Indian soldiers killed in cross-border conflicts since Independence.

Activities

Chandigarh Ayurved Centre

MASSAGE

(☎09876 466178; 1701, Sector 22-B; treatments from ₹450; ☎8.30am-1.30pm & 4-8pm) Small, welcoming ayurvedic treatment centre that also does relaxation therapies for visitors. A 40-minute, full-body massage costs ₹800. The 20-minute takra dhara, where butter-milk is poured continuously over your forehead, costs ₹450.

Tours

Tourist Bus

BUS TOUR

(☎ 2703839, 4644484; 1 stop ₹10, half-/full-day tour ₹50/75; ⌚ 10am-1pm & 2.30-5.30pm) Chandigarh Tourism runs an open-top, double-decker tourist bus leaving from outside Hotel Shivalikview (Sector 17-E); buy a ticket when you get on. There are two half-day trips daily, visiting the Rose Garden, Government Museum & Art Gallery, Nek Chand Rock Garden and Sukhna Lake.

Sleeping

Chandigarh hotels are pricier than elsewhere. Apart from the bus station's Transit Lodge, which readily accepts foreigners, there are two genuine budget options that are clean (for the price) and well run, but they are sometimes reluctant to take foreign guests.

Kisan Bhavan

(☎ 5039153, 5002668; Dakshin Marg, Sector 35-A; r ₹550-850) Large, easy-to-spot Kisan Bhavan is a sound choice if you can get in. It's supposed to be a subsidised rest house for those employed in the agricultural industry, but it's open to the general public too.

Sood Dharamshala

PILGRIMS' REST HOUSE $

(☎ 2703711; off Dakshin Marg, Sector 22-D; dm ₹100, d ₹400-600, q ₹800-950) Opposite Kisan Bhavan, down an alley beside Hotel Samrat, is Sood Dharamshala, a rest house which has dormitories as well as a selection of private rooms. It's sometimes reluctant to accept foreign guests, but it won't hurt to try.

Transit Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 4644485; 1st fl, ISBT-17, Udyog Path; dm ₹230, tw ₹750, tw/tr with AC ₹980/1000) Located beside the train reservation office, on the 1st floor of the ISBT-17 bus station, this surprisingly well-run place has rooms which are basic and a bit run-down, but clean enough and very spacious. All rooms, except the huge, 20-bed dorm, have private bathrooms, and rates include one meal (a vegetable thali).

Don't confuse this place with the bus station 'Guesthouse', which is in another part of the bus station and more expensive and thoroughly grotty.

Hotel Satyadeep

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2703103; hddeepsdeep@yahoo.com; SCO 1102-3, Sector 22-B; s/d from ₹1200/1400; * @) Run by courteous Sai Baba devotees, Satyadeep has wood-panelled corridors leading to simple, well-kept, bright and breezy rooms which open out onto shared balconies. It's upstairs from Sai Sweets.

Hotel Divyadeep

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2705191; hddeepsdeep@yahoo.com; SCO 1090-1, Sector 22-B; s/d from ₹1200/1400; 🍷) In the same building as Satyadeep (but with a separate entrance), and run by the same group of Sai Baba devotees, Divyadeep also has smart yet austere rooms, though staff here tend to be more welcoming. It's above Bhoj Vegetarian Restaurant.

Hotel Aquamarine

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 5014000; www.hotelaquamarine.com; Himayala Marg, Sector 22-C; s/d from ₹4460/5010, ste ₹10,600; 🍷@🍷) A proper boutique hotel, shielded from the road by a leafy terrace and full of luscious fabrics and framed artworks. There's a good restaurant and coffee shop, but no pool or gym.

Taj Chandigarh

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 6613000; www.tajhotels.com; Sector 17-A; r from ₹14,000; 🍷@🍷) Not as grand as some Taj Group properties, but still luxurious, with flawless service and rooms with floor-to-ceiling windows, minibars, flat-screen TVs, electronic safes and all the other mod-cons you'd expect at this price. There are several restaurants, the Lava Bar (☎ 11am-11.30pm), a spa and a 24-hour business centre.

Hotel Shivalikview

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 4672222; www.citicochandigarh.com/shivalikview; Sector 17-E; s/d incl breakfast & dinner ₹3320/3790; 🍷@🍷) This hulk of a building is much more pleasant inside than it looks from the outside. Rooms are unexciting but large, clean and comfortable. The hotel has friendly staff, an outdoor pool, a gym, an Indian restaurant and a rooftop Chinese restaurant.

Eating*Indian Coffee House

SOUTH INDIAN $

(SCO 12, Sector 17; mains ₹20-50; ☎ 9am-10pm) Always busy with locals, this 40-year-old branch of the wonderful institution that is the Indian Coffee House is a great place for breakfast or lunch, with egg, toast and fabulously affordable filter coffee (₹20) sharing a menu of South Indian favourites such as idli (spongy, fermented rice cake), vada (doughnut-shaped, deep-fried lentil savoury) and dosa (large savoury crepe).

Punjabi Restaurant

PUNJABI $

(Shashtri Market Rd, SCF 15, Sector 22-D; mains ₹100-200; ☎ noon-5pm & 7-11pm) This small, friendly, no-frills restaurant whips up a choice of tasty Indian staples plus some Punjabi specialities. The makki di roti sarson da saag (a mustard-flavoured spinach dish served with corn chapati) and dhal makhani (black lentils and red kidney beans with cream and butter) is known as the Punjabi thali and is rich in flavour. The dhal Punjabi is for spice fiends, while the karahi chicken, with a thick sauce, is another delicious house special – the half portion is plenty for two to share.

Bhoj Vegetarian Restaurant

INDIAN $

(SCO 1090-1, Sector 22-B; thali ₹170-200; ☎ 7.30am-10.30pm) This cosy haven run by Sai Baba devotees serves a house thali with artfully spiced curries that change throughout the day. Thalis come large or choti (small). It also has a selection of Indian desserts.

Shree Rathnam

SOUTH INDIAN $

(SCO 47, Sector 17-E; mains ₹100-200, thalis ₹225; ☎ 9.30am-11pm) A swankier-than-average branch of this reliable all-veg chain, serving first-rate dosas and satiating thalis.

Stop 'N Stare Food Point

CAFE

(Sector 10; snacks ₹20-50; ☎ 10am-6pm) Perfect for a pit stop after a tour of the museums, this simple cafe with shaded garden seating serves lassi, tea and instant coffee as well as Indian snacks such as patties, paratha (flaky flatbread) and kulcha (soft-leavened bread eaten with a chickpea masala). It's behind the Government Museum & Art Gallery.

Sai Sweets

SWEETS $

(SCO 1102-3, Sector 22-B; sweets per kg ₹300-400, snacks ₹20-60; ☎ 7.30am-8.30pm) A clean and wholesome sweet shop below Hotel Satyadeep, serving tasty mithai (Indian sweets) and more substantial veg snacks, such as tikki chaat (potato cutlets), golgap-pa (also known as panipuri – round, hollow puri, fried crisp and filled with a mixture of chutney, chilli, potato, onion and chickpeas) and pav bhaji (tomato-based vegetable dish served with bread rolls).

★ Ghazal

MUGHLAI $$

(☎ 2704448; SCO 189-91, Sector 17-C; mains ₹200-400; ☎ 11.30am-11.30pm) A Chandigarh stalwart and still going strong, Ghazal has a dignified air and a fine menu of Mughlai classics, including chicken and mutton, plus some Continental and Chinese dishes. The veg jalfrezi is a fiery sensation. At the back of the restaurant, a suited bartender guards a long line of imported single malts.

Pomodoro

ITALIAN $$$

(☎ 2707571; Piccadily Hotel, Sector 22-B; mains ₹300-500; ☎ 11.30am-3.30pm & 7-11pm) This inviting restaurant located in the basement of the Piccadily Hotel serves hearty Italian food for grown-ups. Wine is available by the glass (from ₹300).

Drinking & Nightlife

Barista Crème

CAFE

(1st fl, SCO 63-4, Sector 17; coffee ₹90, snacks ₹90-200; ☎ 9am-9pm) This Western-style chain coffee shop is a handy retreat from the orgy of consumerism in Sector 17. As well as good strong coffee, it does a few sandwiches and muffins.

Piccadily Blue Ice

BAR

(☎ 2703338; SCO 7, Sector 17-E; mains ₹300-500; ☎ 11am-midnight) A slick, sleek, split-level resto-bar that appeals to smartly dressed drinkers. Beers from ₹200.

Entertainment

Tagore Theatre

(☎ 2724278, 4347714; Sector 18-B) For a cultured night out, Tagore Theatre hosts music, dance and theatrical performances. See www.timescity.com for a schedule.

Shopping

The spacious, pedestrianised centre of Sector 17 is a cathedral to consumerism.

★1469

SOUVENIRS, CLOTHING

(www.1469workshop.com; SCO 81, Sector 17-D; ☎ 10.30am-9pm) Named after the birth date of Guru Nanak (the founder of the Sikh faith), this funky independent clothing store sells fabulously colourful scarves, shawls and traditional Punjabi clothing, as well as modern T-shirts with a Punjabi twist. Also stocks some lovely jewellery, including the steel kara bracelets worn by Sikhs.

Fabindia

CLOTHING

BUS

Chandigarh has two main Inter State Bus Terminals (ISBT) – one in Sector 17 and one in Sector 43. Numerous red air-con buses run between the two terminals (₹20). ISBT Panchkulla is further from the centre and has buses to Morni. Local buses 2F and 30B link ISBT-17 and ISBT Panchkulla (₹30).

From ISBT-17, frequent buses run throughout the day to:

Delhi non-AC/AC ₹220/520

Delhi airport AC ₹600, six hours

Haridwar ₹210, five hours

Jaipur ordinary/Volvo ₹400/1200, 12 hours

Pipli (for Kurukshetra) ₹90, two hours

Rishikesh ₹240, eight hours, two direct buses (10.30am and 8pm)

From ISBT-43, non-AC buses run frequently to the following destinations (some destinations also have AC buses for roughly twice the price):

Amritsar ₹230, five hours

Anandpur Sahib ₹90, two hours

Dehra Dun ₹210, five hours

Dharamsala ₹295, eight hours

Jammu ₹320, eight hours

Kalka (for Shimla) 'toy train', ₹30, one hour

Manali ₹350, eleven hours

Pathankot ₹250, five hours

Patiala ₹65, two hours

Shimla ₹330, four hours

Sirhind ₹45, two hours

TRAIN

The train station is 7km southeast of the city centre, but there's a handy reservation office (📍 2720242; 🕒 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) on the 1st floor of ISBT-17. There's no prepaid autorickshaw fee from the centre to the train station, but expect to pay around ₹100.

Several fast trains go to New Delhi daily: the quickest and slickest is the twice-daily Kalka Shatabdi (AC chair/1AC ₹595/1190, 3½ hours), which leaves at 6.53am and 6.23pm. To get to Delhi more cheaply, buy an unreserved 'general' ticket (₹110 to ₹145) when you turn up at the station and then just pile into the 2nd-class carriage of the next available train.

More than half a dozen trains go to Kalka (2nd-class seat/sleeper ₹45/140, 35 minutes), from where narrow-gauge trains rattle up through the hills to Shimla.

Two daily trains go to Amritsar (2nd class/AC chair ₹120/430, 4½ hours), at 7am and 5.10pm.

Getting Around

Bicycles (₹100 per eight hours, ₹500 refundable deposit) are available at Sukhna Lake.

Expect to pay ₹30 for a short hop on a cycle-rickshaw. Hiring one for half a day (up to four hours), to take in sights such as Nek Chand Rock Garden and Sukhna Lake, will cost around ₹300.

Numerous local buses, including 203 and 22, link ISBT 17 with the train station (₹10).

There's a prepaid autorickshaw stand opposite ISBT 17, but it only does fares within the city centre, such as to ISBT-43 (₹54). For places further afield, such as the train station (about ₹80) or the airport (about ₹150), you'll have to negotiate with the driver.

RK Taxi Stand (📞 09815832555) is behind ISBT-17 and charges ₹500 for the airport, ₹1600 return for Morni and ₹900/1200 for a half/full-day city tour.

AROUND CHANDIGARH

Yadavindra Gardens

These beautifully restored 17th-century Mughal-era walled gardens (Pinjore Gardens; 📍 01733-230759; admission ₹20; 🕒 7am-10pm), on the edge of the small town of Pinjore, are built on seven levels with water features and serene views of the Shivalik Hills.

Within the grounds there's a restaurant (mains ₹70-200; 🕒 10am-7pm) in the Rang Mahal pavilion, which also has a bar. Visit in December for regional delicacies and cultural performances as part of the Pinjore festival.

Should you fancy an overnight stay, there are pleasant rooms with Mughal-style flourishes and views of the gardens at the Budgerigar Motel (☎01733-231877; pinjore@hry.nic.in; d ₹2150-3000; 🏠). The main entrance is just outside the walls, to the right as you face the entrance to the gardens, but it can also be accessed from inside the gardens, through the restaurant.

Nearby is the Bhima Devi Museum (🕒10am-5pm) FREE, made up of a collection of small buildings in the grounds of the scattered ruins of the ornate, 10th-century Bhima Devi Temple, which was torn down when the gardens were originally constructed. To get here, turn left as you exit the gardens and walk past the new water park.

Frequent buses leave from Chandigarh's ISBT-43 to Pinjore (₹30, one hour). The gardens are on your left as you drive into the town. Less frequent services depart from ISBT-17.

Morni Hills

Perched at 1220m, Haryana's only hill station is set amid monkey-filled forests on a spur running west from the Shivalik Hills. Here you'll find a handful of rustic resorts, the village of Morni and, 7km downhill from the village, Tikka Tal, a pair of two pretty lakes with boats for rent (from ₹200).

With a pleasant location on the shore of the second lake, Tikka Tal Complex (☎01733-250166; dm non-AC/AC ₹220/430, d ₹1610) has clean, comfortable dormitories and rooms with private bathrooms and views of the lake. There's a restaurant with terraced seating and gardens leading down to the lake. There's nothing much to do here, but it's a wonderfully peaceful place to stay if you want to escape the freneticism for a day or two.

There are daily buses to Morni (₹30, two hours) from Chandigarh's ISBT Panchkula bus station. From Morni Village, there are three minibuses to Tikka Tal (₹10), at 6.30am, 7.30am and 3.30pm. They return from outside Tikka Tal Complex at 7.30am, 8.30am and 4.15pm. The 4.15pm connects with the last bus back to Chandigarh, which leaves Morni Village at 5pm.

Private cars from Morni Village to Tikka Tal cost a whopping ₹700 return. Alternatively, it's a lovely two-hour, 7km downhill walk: walk back up the road towards Chandigarh, then turn left as the road bears sharp right (after less than 1km). Hitching is also possible.

HARYANA

Bordering India's burgeoning capital, Haryana was the setting for pivotal events in the conquest of northern India, but its sights see few foreign visitors.

Kurukshetra (Thanesar)

☎01744 / POP 964,200

According to Hindu legend, Kurukshetra (Thanesar in ancient times) was where Brahma created the universe, and where Krishna delivered his Bhagavad Gita sermon before the 18-day Mahabharata battle, an event commemorated by the Gita Jayanti (☺Nov/Dec) festival. Accordingly, the town is mobbed by pilgrims and sadhus, who vastly outnumber the few foreign visitors.

For an English map of the area, turn right out of the main entrance to Bhramasarovar and you'll see one on the wall of a building on your right.

👁 Sights

Bhramasarovar

HISTORIC SITE

The focus of attention at Kurukshetra is the sacred Bhramasarovar, India's largest ceremonial tank. According to Hindu holy texts, the ghat-flanked tank was created by Lord Brahma. Sadhus crowd the ghats and the ashrams beside the tank display dioramas of scenes from the Hindu epics and walk-through models of sacred sites.

Kurukshetra Panorama & Science Centre

MUSEUM

(Pehowa Rd; admission ₹30, camera ₹20; 🕒10am-5.30pm) The circular-shaped Kurukshetra Panorama & Science Centre contains a gory diorama of the Mahabharata battle; vultures pick at severed heads below a fiery, air-brushed sky. The less disturbing ground floor has interactive science exhibits for kids. It's a few hundred metres from Bhramasarovar; turn right out of the main entrance to Bhramasarovar then left at the roundabout.

Sri Krishna Museum

MUSEUM

(Pehowa Rd; admission ₹30; ☀️10am-5pm) Next to the Panorama & Science Centre is the Sri Krishna Museum, with an impressive collection of sculptures, carvings and paintings, and a low-tech multimedia exhibition with dioramas, giant statues, surreal sounds and a walk-through maze. There's a simple canteen (thali ₹70, chai ₹10) with terraced seating in the museum gardens.

Sheikh Chaheli's Tomb

TOMB

Behind the brick and sandstone tomb, and predating it by more than a thousand years, is a raised mound known as Harsh Ka Tilla, where you can view excavated 7th-century ruins from historical Thanesar. The ruins stretch for about 1km.

🛏 Sleeping

Hotel Welcome

HOTEL $

(☎️9416408078; r ₹400-700) In a laneway opposite the main entrance to Bhramasarovar is the brightly painted Hotel Welcome, which has large but basic rooms and a small restaurant.

📍 Getting There & Around

Buses between Chandigarh (₹90, two hours) and Delhi (₹130, three hours) stop at Pipli on the national highway, about 5km outside Kurukshetra; shared autos (₹15) shuttle passengers between the bus stand and Bhramasarovar.

PUNJAB

Forged from the Indian half of Punjab province after Partition, Punjab is the homeland of India's Sikh population.

Anandpur Sahib

☎️01887 / POP 17,000

The second most important pilgrimage site for Sikhs after the Golden Temple, Anandpur Sahib was founded in 1664 by the ninth Sikh guru, Tegh Bahadur, shortly before he was beheaded by the Mughal emperor Aurangzeb. To resist the persecution of the Sikhs, his son, Guru Gobind Singh, founded the Khalsa (Sikh brotherhood) here in 1699, an event celebrated during the Holla Mohalla (☀️Mar) festival.

👁 Sights

Kesgarh Sahib

SIKH TEMPLE

The largest and most dramatic gurdwara is the Kesgarh Sahib, set back from the main highway on the edge of the old town. It marks the spot where the Khalsa was inaugurated, and enshrines an armoury of sacred Sikh weapons.

Anandpur Sahib Fort

FORT

Behind the Kesgarh Sahib, a broad paved path climbs the hillside to the small Anandpur Sahib fort, which affords glorious views over a sea of gurdwara domes.

Khalsa Heritage Complex

MUSEUM

(Virasat-e-Khalsa; ☀️8am-8pm Tue-Sun) FREE Over the other side of the fort is the striking five-petal form (inspired by the five warrior-saints in the Khalsa) of the Khalsa Heritage Complex, which opened in 2011. One of India's most impressive modern buildings, this fascinating museum complex uses elaborate murals and friezes to bring Sikh history to life.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

The many gurdwaras in Anandpur Sahib provide accommodation and meals (donations are appropriate), though they are often full with pilgrims. Anandpur Sahib is strangely short on restaurants.

Hotel Paramount Residency

HOTEL $

(☎️01887-233619; Academy Rd; r from ₹800) Above the road linking Kesgarh Sahib to the fort, Hotel Paramount Residency has austere, spartan rooms but a friendly welcome and a good location close to the Khalsa Heritage Complex.

Pal Restaurant

i Information

Mata Nanki Charitable Hospital (☑ 01887-233500) About 2km from the centre, Mata Nanki Charitable Hospital is a small but reputable general hospital run by a British-based charity.

i Getting There & Away

The bus and train stations are 300m apart on the main road outside town. Buses leave frequently for Chandigarh (₹90, two hours), Amritsar (₹178, 4½ hours) and Patiala (₹120, three hours).

Three daily trains go to Chandigarh (2nd class/AC chair ₹95/310), at 5.46am, 7.43am and 3pm. The 5.46am takes 1¾ hours. The other two take three hours.

The overnight Himachal Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹215/575/820, 7½ hours, 10.05pm) goes to New Delhi train station.

Patiala

☑ 0175 / POP 405,200

Punjab's best-kept secret, Patiala was once the capital of an independent Sikh state, ruled by an extravagant family of maharajas. As the Mughal empire declined, the rulers of Patiala curried favour with the British and filled their city with lavish palaces and follies. Family fortunes have declined and the grand monuments are crumbling, but the old city, ringed by 10 historic gates, is swooningly atmospheric. In January/February, the skies above Patiala burst into life for the Basant kite festival.

👁 Sights

Patiala's sights are dotted around the maze-like streets of the old town, south of the bus stand.

★ Qila Mubarak

FORT

The ancestral home of the maharajas of Patiala, this richly ornamented but fading 18th-century fort is an Arabian Nights fantasy of soaring buttresses and latticed balconies. You can't enter the interior of the fort, but you are allowed to walk between the hugely impressive inner and outer walls, surrounded by crumbling masonry and flocks of emerald-green parakeets.

Just inside the main entrance, to your right, the 1859 Durbar Hall (admission ₹10) has a wonderful collection of royal weaponry, outrageous chandeliers and other treasures rescued from the decaying palaces. It's open from 10.15am to 4.45pm, every day except Monday. The grounds of the fort itself are always open.

Other Sights

A self-guided walking tour will take you from the fort to various other historic sights. Turn right out of the fort, then right again, and follow the road south to the monumental gateway by the Shahi Samadhan, the three-storey tomb of Maharaja Ala Singh Samad (d 1822). You can climb to the top.

Continue along the same road and bear left by the Samania Gate to reach Mohindra College Rd and the twin towers of the Mohindra College, a former palace converted into a private school.

A short stroll further south, the Netaji Subhas National Institute of Sports (Old Moti Bagh; ☎ 9.30am-5pm Tue-Sun) FREE occupies a wing of the vast Moti Bagh palace, constructed by Maharaja Narendra Singh in 1847. The museum contains exhibits on Indian sporting heroes, including Punjabi sprinter Milkha Singh, 'the Flying Sikh'.

Bordering the palace compound is yet another palace, the totally over-the-top Sheesh Mahal (Sheesh Mahal Rd; admission ₹10; ☎ 10.30am-5pm Tue-Sun), graced by two wedding-cake towers and an ornamental suspension bridge. Inside the lavishly decorated interior is a gallery displaying royal treasures.

A short walk north of the bus stand, away from the old town, and over the flyover, the Dukh Niwaran Gurdwara is credited with healing powers thanks to a miraculous cure carried out by the ninth Sikh guru, Tegh Bahadur, in 1672.

Govindgarh

FORT

Of all the ruined forts in Punjab, Bathinda's Govindgarh is the mightiest and most impressive. It's also one of the oldest, dating way back to the 7th century, although rebuilt in its current red-brick form during the 12th century. It's an enormous structure, located smack bang in the middle of the city, and an unexpected highlight of a visit to this region. The fort's 36m-tall, 6m-thick walls tower over the old city bazaars and, best of all, it can be explored.

The fort contains two gurdwaras so, unlike other ancient forts in the region, it is

KAPURTHALA

Once the capital of a wealthy independent state, Kapurthala is an unusual place to explore. The resident maharaja, Jagatjit Singh, was a travel junkie; he married Spanish flamenco dancer Anita Delgado and constructed numerous buildings inspired by his travels. The Jagatjit Palace (now the exclusive Sainik School) was modelled on Versailles, while the Moorish Mosque copies the Grand Mosque in Marrakesh (Morocco). Other sights of note include the British-style Jagatjit Club and Jubilee Hall, the Shalimar Gardens (containing the cenotaphs of the Kapurthala dynasty), and the handsome Indo-Saracenic court house.

Pick up a street map of Kapurthala in the tourist office in Amritsar. Otherwise, follow this leisurely one- to two-hour walking tour: Turn left out of the bus station, then take the first right after Hotel Royal. Turn left at the end to see Jagatjit Club (on your left) and Jagatjit Palace (at the end on your right). Just before Jagatjit Palace, turn right down a tree-shaded lane and bear right past a 150-year-old royal guesthouse, then left past the derelict Gol Kothi (a former residence of the maharaja) and continue straight on to the striking Jubilee Hall. Turn right here, then left at the end of the road (passing the beautiful whitewashed state gurdwara on your right en route), then take a diagonal left turn to reach the Moorish Mosque, a still-active mosque and one of the few historic buildings you can actually enter. Walk back the way you came; up the diagonal road, and right at the end, to pass the court house on your left. Turn left at the end, then first right to take you back to the town's main road. Turn left here for Shalimar Gardens, or right to get back to the bus stand.

Decent rooms and very tasty meals are available at Hotel Royal (☎ 01822-505110; Jallandhar Rd; r ₹850-1350; ♿), 200m from the bus stand.

To get to Amritsar, you need to take a bus to Subhanpur (₹10, 30 minutes) then change for Amritsar (₹50, 1½ hours). There are four morning buses to Faridkot (₹100) at 6am, 7am, 8.40am and 10.20am.

open to the public; as well as visiting the gurdwaras themselves, you can wander the lawned gardens within the walls and even climb up on top in one spot for magnificent views of the city. Don't miss walking around the outside of the fort to the western face, where the immense walls are at their most impressive, towering above dhobi-wallahs (clothes washers) and cotton-loomers working on the dusty streets below.

Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Appreciate

HOTEL $

(☎ 0164 3201875; r from ₹500; 🏠📶) Hotel Appreciate is the best value of a bunch of hotels behind the bus station; you can see its sign from the station.

Roadways Coffee

PUNJABI $

(mains ₹50-100; ☎ 8.30am-9pm) Roadways Coffee is an airy, fan-cooled restaurant with a charming art deco interior, 200m from the bus station (turn right as you exit the station). It does decent Punjabi food, but the coffee is instant only.

Getting There & Around

To get to the fort, turn left out of the bus station, left at the roundabout, and keep walking straight (about 1km).

Five daily trains leave for New Delhi (2nd class/sleeper/AC chair ₹130/200/475, 5½ to seven hours) between 5am and 8am, plus another at 2.20pm. Five daytime trains go to Patiala (2nd class/AC chair ₹80/255, three hours), leaving at 6.30am, 7.30am, 2.10pm, 4.20pm and 5.25pm.

Frequent buses go to:

Amritsar ₹165, four hours

Chandigarh non-AC/AC ₹220/460, five hours

Faridkot ₹55, 1½ hours

Patiala ₹155, three hours

Faridkot

Faridkot was the capital of another vanished Sikh state. Today peacocks stalk the faded battlements of the once mighty Qila Mubarak, a fort protected by 15m-high walls, which was the ancestral home of the maharajas of Faridkot. Nearby the Tilla Baba Farid Ji is a recent rebuild of an age-old gurdwara, dedicated to the 13th-century Sufi poet Baba Sheikh Farid, whose poems were an inspiration for Guru Nanak, founder of Sikhism. Also in town is the Raj Mahal, the current residence of the former royal family, who moved here from the fort in the 1880s, and the beautiful, 30m-tall, French-designed Victoria Memorial Clock Tower (c 1902), as well as the attractive, pastel-green Memorial Library.

The main sights can all be seen on an easy one-hour walking tour: To get the fort, turn left out of the bus station, then right at the roundabout, and keep walking, past the Memorial Library, and on through an old green archway. Turn left at the end, then bear right and the fort will be in front of you. You can't enter the fort, but you can complete a circuit around the outside of its formidable walls. To the left of the fort as you face it is a small bazaar, along which, on your left, you'll soon reach Tilla Baba Farid Ji, which you can enter, along with the visiting devotees. Returning from the fort, walk back through the green archway, then turn left to pass the Raj Mahal, which you can't enter, before reaching the splendid Victoria Memorial Clock Tower.

The only hotels in town are about a 750m-walk from the bus station. Turn left out of the bus station, left at the roundabout, then first right and you'll soon reach them all. Best value is Sangam Hotel & Restaurant (☎ 01639-252144; Kotkapura Rd; r from ₹700). A few doors further on, Hotel Trump Plaza (☎ 9216800789; Kotkapura Rd; r ₹1200-1500; 🏠) has the best restaurant of the lot, and a bar.

Frequent buses run to Amritsar (₹110, three hours), Bathinda (₹55, 1½ hours), Chandigarh (₹200, four hours) and Patiala (₹160, two hours).

Amritsar

(☎ 0183 / POP 1.13 MILLION)

Founded in 1577 by the fourth Sikh guru, Ram Das, Amritsar is home to Sikhism's holiest shrine, the spectacular Golden Temple, one of India's most serene and humbling sights. The same cannot be said for the hyperactive streets surrounding the temple.

Amritsar is divided in two by a tangle of railway lines. The old city, containing the Golden Temple and other historic sights and bound by 12 medieval gates, is southeast of the railway lines. This is a fascinating area to explore, with a capillary network of narrow bazaars that seems to float between the centuries.

To the north of the railway lines, 'modern' Amritsar has grown up in haphazard fashion around a scattering of colonial-era boulevards. Gleaming malls and upmarket hotels stand testament to the prosperity of the city, but the hectic traffic makes this area hard to love at street level. Crossing between the old and new cities is best done by cycle-rickshaw, but once you're in the old city, walking is often the quickest way to get around.

Taxis taking you to the Golden Temple area will often drop you at Furwara Chowk from where you can walk the last few hundred metres.

👁️ Sights & Activities

★ Golden Temple

SIKH TEMPLE

(📍 information office 2553954; 🕒 24hr, information office 8am-7pm) The legendary Golden Temple is actually just a small part of this huge gurdwara complex, known to Sikhs as Harmandir Sahib (or Darbar Sahib).

Spiritually, the focus of attention is the tank that surrounds the gleaming central shrine – the Amrit Sarovar (Pool of Nectar), from which Amritsar takes its name, excavated by the fourth guru Ram Das in 1577. Ringed by a marble walkway, the tank is said to have healing powers, and pilgrims come from across the world to bathe in the sacred waters.

Floating at the end of a long causeway, the Golden Temple itself is a mesmerising blend of Hindu and Islamic architectural styles, with an elegant marble lower level adorned with flower and animal motifs in pietra dura work (as seen on the Taj Mahal). Above this rises a shimmering second level, encased in intricately engraved gold panels, and topped by a dome gilded with 750kg of gold. In the gleaming inner sanctum (photography prohibited), priests and musicians keep up a continuous chant from the Guru Granth Sahib (the Sikh holy book), adding to the already intense atmosphere. After paying their respects, pilgrims retreat to the intricately painted gallery on the second level to contemplate.

The Guru Granth Sahib is installed in the temple every morning and returned at night to the Akal Takhat (Timeless Throne), the temporal seat of the Khalsa brotherhood. The ceremony takes place at 5am and 9.40pm in winter, and 4am and 10.30pm in summer. Inside the Akal Takhat, you can view a collection of sacred Sikh weapons.

The building was heavily damaged when it was stormed by the Indian army during Operation Blue Star in 1984; it was repaired by the government but Sikhs refused to use the tainted building and rebuilt the tower from scratch.

More shrines and monuments are dotted around the edge of the compound. Inside the main entrance clock tower, the Sikh Museum (🕒 7am-7pm summer, 8am-6pm winter) FREE shows the persecution suffered by the Sikhs at the hands of Mughals, the British and Indira Gandhi. At the southeast end of the tank is the Ramgarhia Bunga, a protective fortress topped by two Islamic-style minarets; inside is a stone slab once used for Mughal coronations, seized from Delhi by Ranjit Singh in 1783.

➔ Baba Atal Tower

Just outside the compound is the octagonal Baba Atal Tower, constructed in 1784 to commemorate Atal Rai, the son of sixth Sikh guru Har Gobind, who according to legend revived a playmate from the dead, then gave his own life as penance for interfering in god's designs. The nine storeys each represent one year of Atal's short life.

➔ Guru-Ka-Langar

At the southeast end of the compound is the Guru-Ka-Langar, an enormous dining room where an estimated 60,000 to 80,000 pilgrims a day come to eat after praying at the Golden Temple. There's no charge to eat here, but a donation is appropriate and help with the staggering pile of washing up is always appreciated. Catering to everyone from paupers to millionaires, it's a

i GOLDEN TEMPLE ETIQUETTE

Before entering the compound, remove your shoes and socks – there are chappal (sandal) stands at the entrances – wash your feet in the shallow foot baths and cover your head; scarves can be borrowed (no charge) or hawkers sell souvenir scarves for ₹10. Tobacco and alcohol are strictly prohibited. If you want to sit beside the tank, sit cross-legged and do not dangle your feet in the water. Photography is permitted from the walkway surrounding the pool, but not inside the Golden Temple itself.

which hundreds desperately leapt to avoid the bullets. There's an eternal (24-hour) flame of remembrance, an exhibition telling the stories of victims, and a Martyrs' Gallery, with portraits of Independence heroes.

Sri Durgiana Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Gobindgarh Rd; 🌅dawn-dusk) Dedicated to the goddess Durga, this 16th-century temple is a Hindu version of the Golden Temple. Surrounded by a holy water tank, it's often called the Silver Temple because of its exquisitely engraved silver doors. Soothing bhajans (devotional songs) are sung here just after the temple opens and just before it closes.

Mata Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Mata Lal Devi Ji; Rani-ka-Bagh, Model Town; 🌅dawn-dusk) Credited with strong fertility-improving powers, this fascinating, labyrinthine Hindu temple commemorates the bespectacled 20th-century female saint Lal Devi. From the main hall, a narrow series of stairways and passages winds past mirrored mosaics, fairground-style carvings and untold deity statues to a semi-submerged mock-up of the Vashino Devi cave temple.

Walking west along GT Rd, turn right after the train station, up Albert Rd, then take the first left and the temple will be to your left at the end of the lane.

Maharaja Ranjit Singh Panorama

MUSEUM

(Ram Bagh; admission ₹10; 🕒9am-5pm Tue-Sun) Located in the northwest corner of Ram Bagh, this museum is dedicated to Maharaja Ranjit Singh (1780-1839), the 'Lion of Punjab', who founded the Sikh empire, wresting large areas of northwest India from the Mughals. A vast diorama depicts the maharaja's greatest battles, complete with booming battle cries and other sound effects. Cameras and shoes are not permitted inside.

Khalsa College

HISTORIC BUILDING

(www.khalsacollegeamritsar.org; GT Rd; 🌅dawn-dusk) This vast, sprawling castle of a college, on your right as you head west along GT Rd, was founded in 1890 to educate the cream of Punjabi society; it's a glorious example of the Indo-Saracenic style.

👉 Tours

The Grand Hotel (p216) runs day tours of the main sights (₹350 per hour) and evening tours (₹650 per person, starting at 3pm) to the Attari-Wagah border-closing ceremony, Mata Temple and Golden Temple.

THE JALLIANWALA BAGH MASSACRE

Following the introduction of the Rowlatt Act 1919, which gave British authorities the power to imprison Indians suspected of sedition without trial, Amritsar became a focal point for the Independence movement. After a series of hartals (general strikes) in which many protesters and three British bank managers were killed, Brigadier-General Reginald Dyer was called upon to return order to the city.

On 13 April 1919 (Baisakhi Day), over 5000 Indian protesters gathered in Jallianwala Bagh, an open courtyard surrounded by high walls. Under orders to make an example of the protesters, Dyer arrived with 150 troops and ordered his soldiers to open fire. When the barrage of bullets ceased, nearly 400 protesters were dead, according to the British authorities (although Indian National Congress placed the figure at more than 1000), and around 1500 were wounded, including many women and children.

Dyer's action was supported by the British establishment but described as 'monstrous' by Winston Churchill, and as 'a savage and inappropriate folly' by Sir Edwin Montagu, the Secretary of State for India, while the Nobel Prize-winning poet Rabindranath Tagore renounced his knighthood in protest of the massacre. The incident galvanised Indian nationalism – Gandhi responded with a program of civil disobedience, announcing that 'cooperation in any shape or form with this satanic government is sinful'.

Reginald Dyer died in retirement in England in 1927; Sir Michael O'Dwyer, governor of the Punjab at the time of the massacre, was assassinated by the Sikh revolutionary Udham Singh in London in 1940. Richard Attenborough's acclaimed film Gandhi (1982) dramatically re-enacts the events at Jallianwala Bagh.

The tourist office (p219) runs an interesting two-hour Heritage Walk (Indian/foreigner ₹25/75), covering the old-city bazaars. It starts from the Town Hall at 8am and 5pm daily (9am and 4pm December to February) and finishes outside the Golden Temple. Just turn up at the Town Hall 10 minutes before the start.

Sleeping

Sri Guru

Ram Das Niwas

PILGRIMS' REST HOUSE $

(dm free but donations appropriate, r ₹300, with AC ₹500;  ) Inexpensive rooms are available in the niwas (pilgrim hostels) at the south-east end of the Golden Temple compound. Foreigners are generally accommodated in the dorm at Sri Guru Ram Das Niwas, or at rooms in other buildings – check in at the Guru Arjan Dev Niwas to see what is available. Staying here is a fascinating experience but rooms and dorms are basic, with shared bathrooms, and there's a three-day maximum stay. Each person gets use of a locker in the dorms, but you need your own padlock.

Tourist Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 2553830; bubblesgoolry@yahoo.com; 1355 GT Rd; dm/s/d ₹180/250/450; ) This good-value backpacker stalwart offers pocket-friendly prices and humble rooms with high ceilings and fans. There's a garden restaurant, rooftop seating and traveller-oriented vibe. On the downside, this is one of the few places in town that charges for wi-fi (₹100 per day) and the location, between a flyover and the railway line, is hardly the quietest.

Lucky Guest House

HOTEL $

(☎ 2542175; Mahna Singh Rd; r from ₹500; ) This solid, old-city budget option has basic rooms that are a bit pokey, but the location is good. Not all rooms have an outside window, so ask to see a few.

Hotel Grace

HOTEL $

(☎ 2559355; www.hotelgrace.net; No 35, Bharam Bhutta Bazaar; r with/without AC from ₹1000/800;  ) This modest hotel opposite the Golden Temple has a real mix of rooms – the best are at the front, with plenty of natural light.

★ Grand Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2562424; www.hotelgrand.in; Queen's Rd; r from ₹1430;  ) Across the road from the train station, but far from grungy, the Grand is an oasis of calm amid an otherwise chaotic location. Rooms are spacious – if not exactly grand – and surround a wonderfully charming courtyard garden. The restaurant, with seating overlooking the garden, is also recommended.

Even if you don't stay here, drop into the genuinely inviting bar – the cheerfully named Bottoms Up. The owner also runs recommended tours (p215).

★ Mrs Bhandari's Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 2228509; www.facebook.com/bhandariguesthouse; 10 Cantonment; camping per person ₹200, s/d from ₹1840/2300; 🍷@🍷) Founded by the much-missed Mrs Bhandari (1906–2007), this friendly guesthouse is set in spacious grounds in the Amritsar cantonment, about 2km from the centre. The large rooms have a hint of colonial-era bungalow about them, and the welcome is warm. The well-kept gardens are vast, and include swings, see-saws, plenty of seating and a small swimming pool, making this an excellent choice for families, while budget travellers can camp here if they bring their own camping equipment.

Pick-up is free from the train station and meals are available (breakfast/lunch/dinner ₹450/575/575). It's ₹50 to ₹60 in a cycle-rickshaw from the centre. Tell the rickshaw driver you want to take Gawal Mandi Chowk to Cantonment, and the guesthouse should be right opposite you.

MK Sood Guesthouse

HOTEL $$

(☎ 5093376; Bharam Bhutta Bazaar; r ₹1000; 🍷@🍷) Small, quaint and clean, this place benefits from a quieter location than most old-city hotels. Rooms all have air-con but some are better than others so ask to see a few before deciding. Wi-fi in lobby only.

Hotel Indus

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2535900; www.hotelindus.com; 211-13 Sri Hamandir Sahib Marg; r from ₹2140, with temple view ₹2880; 🍷@🍷) The dramatic million-dollar view of the Golden Temple from the rooftop is reason enough to stay at this modern-style hotel. Rooms are compact but comfy. Book well ahead to secure one of the two rooms with temple vistas.

Hotel CJ International

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2543478; www.hotelcj.in; Sri Hamandir Sahib Marg; r from ₹2250, with temple view ₹3700; 🍷@🍷) The rooms are blandly comfortable and overpriced, but the draw is its proximity to the Golden Temple. Pre-book one of the five temple-facing rooms on level three.

Hotel Golden Tower

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2534446; www.hotelgoldentower.com; off Golden Temple Rd, Furwara Chowk; r from ₹1550; 🍷@🍷) More glam outside than in, this is a reasonable choice in a good location. Sparsely decorated but large, clean rooms come with TV and fridge. Wi-fi in the lobby.

Ramada Amritsar

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0183-5025555; www.ramadaamritsar.com; Hall Bazaar; s/d from ₹3000/4000; 🍷@🍷) New in 2013, this grand-looking hotel is the best top-end option in the old city. The lobby is somewhat chintzy, but rooms are smart and modern, and the service is excellent. Rates include breakfast, wi-fi, and use of the pool and gym.

✂ Eating

Amritsar is famous for its dhabas (snack bars) serving such Punjabi treats as kulcha (filled parathas) and 'Amritsari' fish (deep-fried fish with lemon, chilli, garlic and ginger). Hotels and restaurants in the Golden Temple area don't serve alcohol.

★ Kesar Da Dhaba

PUNJABI $

(Chowk Passian; mains ₹70-200; ☀ 11am-6pm & 7-11pm) Hard to find (ask for directions in the old city), this takeaway and no-nonsense dhaba has delicious paratha thalis (₹200 to ₹250) and silver-leaf-topped firmi (ground rice pudding; ₹20) served in small clay bowls, as well as arguably the best lassi (₹50) in town.

★ Bharawan da Dhaba

PUNJABI $

(Golden Temple Out Rd, Town Hall Chowk; mains ₹100-180; ☀ 8am-midnight) This down-to-earth Amritsar institution has been serving up tasty kulcha and other Punjabi treats since 1912. Does handy half portions.

Neelam's

PUNJABI $

(Golden Temple Rd, Jallianwala Bagh; mains ₹70-200; ☀ 9am-11pm) Not far from the Golden Temple, this tiny two-tone eatery is a convenient spot to recharge your batteries. It does some multicuisine dishes, including a backpacker breakfast, but don't miss the great-value kulcha (₹50), served with a chickpea side dish and a spicy chutney.

Gurdas Ram

(Jalabiwala Chowk; jalebi per serving ₹10; ☀ 9.30am-10.30pm) Get your fingers sticky

EXPLORING AMRITSAR'S BAZAARS

The Golden Temple sits on the edge of a mesmerising maze of market streets, where anything and everything can be found, from ceremonial swords to wedding gowns. Start your explorations at the main entrance to the Golden Temple. From here stroll northwest (so, to your left if you have your back to the Golden Temple) to the end of the temple compound and duck into the Kathian Bazaar, for blankets, stationery, tin pots and red-and-silver coloured wedding bangles. At the end, turn right onto Guru Bazaar Rd, past shops full of glittery ladies-wear, then take the first left into Shashtri Bazaar, where dupattas (long scarves for women) give way to fancy woollen shawls. At the end of the bazaar, turn right and continue past a string of food and fruit stalls to frenetic Katra Jaimal Singh Bazaar, crammed with tailors and fashion stores. At the T-junction, turn left into Tahali Sahib Bazaar, piled high with glittering satin dupattas, at the end of which Brothers' Dhaba (p218) and Bharawan da Dhaba (p217) offer well-earned sustenance.

at this 60-year-old jalebi (orange-coloured coils of deep-fried batter dunked in sugar syrup) joint, so famous they named the junction after it (Jalabiwala Chowk). The ₹10 single serving is perfect for a taster.

★ Brothers' Dhaba

PUNJABI $$

(Bade Bhai Ka; Town Hall Chowk; mains ₹100-200; ☎ 7.30am-12.30pm) This fast and friendly upmarket dhaba serves some of Amritsar's tastiest kulcha (Punjabi-style parathas with herbs, potato and pomegranate seeds that burst in the mouth as tiny explosions of sweetness).

Shudh Veg Food Court

MULTICUISINE $$

(Golden Temple Rd, Furwara Chowk; mains ₹100-200; ☎ 8am-11.30pm) Clean, modern food court where counters selling thali (₹115 to ₹210) and kulcha (from ₹50) stand beside others serving pasta, pizza and Chinese.

Crystal Restaurant

MUGHLAI $$$

(☎ 2225555; Crystal Chowk; mains ₹300-600; ☎ 11am-11.30pm) Worth the splurge, this classy, ground-floor restaurant has a fin de siècle air, with mirror-lined walls and ornate stucco trim. The multicuisine menu is dominated by Mughlai favourites – the house speciality is delicious mugh tawa frontier (morsels of chicken in a dense onion gravy). It also has a decent wine list.

Upstairs is the Crystal Restaurant Plaza, run by a rival branch of the same family and serving the same menu in more modern surroundings. Outside is a no-nonsense takeaway joint where you can enjoy some of the same dishes while standing up at high, roadside tables.

Drinking & Nightlife

Bottoms Up Pub

BAR

(Grand Hotel, Queen's Rd; ☎ 11am-11pm) The congenial bar serves icy cold, glycerine-free, draught Kingfisher beer (₹100) and good meals from the hotel kitchen.

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(Golden Temple Rd; coffee from ₹100; ☎ 9-11pm) Air-con-cooled old-city oasis with fresh coffee, a few cakes and street-view seating.

Shopping

Wandering around the winding alleys of the old-city bazaars is a head-spinning assault on the senses. Things to look out for include jootis (north Indian leather slippers), dupattas (women's scarves), woollen shawls and bangles (including the steel kara bangles worn by Sikhs).

Booklovers Retreat

BOOKS

(Hall Bazaar; ☎ 9am-8pm Mon-Sat) Old-school bookstore full of interesting tomes.

Information

INTERNET ACCESS

Free wi-fi is widely available at Amritsar hotels.

Guru Arjun Dev Niwas Net Cafe (Guru Arjun Dev Niwas; per hour ₹25; ☎ 6am-1am) Handy internet cafe in the Golden Temple complex.

MEDICAL SERVICES

Fortis Escorts Hospital (☎ 0183-3012222, 9915133330; www.fortishealthcare.com; Majitha Verka Bypass) International-standard hospital in the city suburbs, 7km northeast of the old city.

MONEY

Amritsar has an ever-mushrooming supply of ATMs, including one at the train station and at the airport, though there are no moneychangers at the airport. Manat Travels is a trustworthy moneychanger in the old city.

HDFC (ground fl, RS Towers, Hall Bazaar; ☎ 9.30am-3.30pm Mon-Fri, to 12.30pm Sat) Foreign exchange and 24hr ATM.

ICICI Bank (ground fl, RS Towers, Hall Bazaar; ☎ 9am-6pm Mon-Fri, to 2pm Sat) Foreign exchange and 24hr ATM.

POST

Main post office (☎ 2566032; Court Rd; ☎ 9am-3pm Mon-Fri, to 2pm Sat) On the left, at the junction with Albert Rd.

Post office (Golden Temple Rd, Furwara Chowk; ☎ 9am-5pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat)

TOURIST INFORMATION

Tourist office (☎ 2402452; www.punjab-tourism.gov.in; Train Station exit, Queen's Rd; ☎ 9am-5pm Tue-Sun) By the entrance to the train station, this tourist office has brochures and free maps covering Punjab, including detailed street maps of Amritsar, Patiala and Kapurthala.

Manat Travels (☎ 0183-5006006, 9815641310; www.mannattravels.com; 5 Dharam Singh Market, Furwara Chowk; ☎ Mon-Sat) Trustworthy travel agent who can book air and train tickets for ₹150 and ₹50 commission respectively. Also changes money.

Getting There & Away

AIR

About 11km northwest of the centre, Amritsar's Sri Guru Ram Dass Jee International Airport services domestic and international flights (to the Middle East and Central Asia mostly, but Air India also flies to London). Direct flights to Delhi cost around ₹3200 and to Mumbai around ₹7000.

Air India (☎ 2213392; www.airindia.in; 39A Court Rd; ☎ 9.30am-1.15pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat)

Jet Airways (☎ 3209847; www.jetairways.com; Airport)

SpiceJet (☎ 1800-1803333; www.spicejet.com)

BUS

Private bus companies operate from near Gandhi Gate, and from Cooper Rd, near the train station. Evening air-con buses run to Delhi (₹800, 10 hours), Chandigarh (₹600, four hours) and Jaipur (seat/sleeper ₹700/900, 16 hours), while non-AC ones run to Jammu (₹250, six hours).

The main Inter State Bus Terminal (ISBT; GT Rd) is about 2km north of the Golden Temple, near Mahan Singh Gate. There's at least one daily bus to Chamba (₹270, six hours), Dharamsala (₹225, seven hours) and Manali (₹550, 12 hours). Frequent buses serve:

Attari ₹30, one hour

Chandigarh non-AC/AC ₹230/460, five hours

Delhi non-AC/AC ₹420/850, 10 hours

Faridkot ₹110, three hours

Jammu ₹185, six hours

Pathankot ₹100, three hours

Patiala ₹230, five hours

BORDER CROSSING – ATTARI-WAGAH (PAKISTAN)

Because of the tense relations between India and Pakistan, few foreigners actually cross the border between Attari and Wagah. However, plenty of people come to watch the curious border-closing ceremony (p220) every evening.

The border is 30km west of Amritsar; buses run from Amritsar to Attari (₹30), from where it's a 2km walk to the customs post (or ₹10 in a shared auto). The border ceremony is held a few hundred metres beyond the customs post.

Border Hours

Officially, the border is open from 10am to 3.30pm daily, but confirm that the border is open at all before you leave Amritsar, and arrive at least an hour before the border closes.

Foreign Exchange

There are banks with moneychanging facilities and ATMs at both sides of the border, but it's wise to also change some money in Amritsar first.

Onward Transport

From Wagah (Pakistan) there are buses and taxis to Lahore, 30km away.

Visas

Visas are theoretically available at the Pakistan embassy in Delhi; however, it is almost always easier to obtain a Pakistan visa in your home country.

BATTLE OF POMP & CEREMONY

Every afternoon, just before sunset, members of the Indian and Pakistani military meet at the border post between Attari and Wagah to engage in a 30-minute display of military showmanship that verges on pure theatre. Officially, the purpose of the ceremony is to lower the national flag and formally close the border for the night, but what actually occurs is a bizarre mix of formal marching, flag-folding, chest beating, forceful stomping and almost comical high-stepping, as the two sides try to out-do each other in pomp and circumstance. The oiled moustaches and over-the-top dress uniforms (with fan-like flourishes atop each turban) only add to the theatrical mood.

While the participants treat the ceremony with absolute seriousness, the crowds who gather to watch from the grandstands on either side of the border come for the carnival mood. During the build-up to the ceremony, spontaneous anthem chanting, rapturous rounds of applause and Bollywood-style dancing in the street are de rigueur. Then a roar goes up from the crowd as the first soldier from each side marches furiously towards the border, to begin the first round of who-can-high-step-the-highest. It's all highly nationalistic, but considering the tense relations between the two countries, remarkably good-natured.

The ceremony starts at around 4.15pm in winter and about 5.15pm in summer. Not everyone gets in, though, so arrive at least one hour before the ceremony begins. It's a mad scrum at the main entrance gate (women must queue on the right; men on the left) as people are let through in sudden bursts, but once you're through, things calm down, and you are channelled into the appropriate stands (foreign tourists are allowed to sit in the second-best seats, just behind the VIPs) – bring your passport.

Taxis and private buses from Amritsar drop you off by the customs post, a few hundred metres before the entrance gate to the ceremony area. Cameras are permitted but bags, large and small, are banned; lockers (₹50) are available beside the entrance gate.

Most people arrange a taxi with their hotel in Amritsar (around ₹600), but you can also charter a taxi (₹1200), or take a shared taxi from the southeast gate of the Golden Temple (₹120 per person; just hang out around the prepaid taxi booth sometime before 3pm and drivers will find you). Buses to Attari (₹30, one hour) are the cheapest option but leave you with a ₹10 shared auto ride to the customs post – although some local buses (₹35) return to Amritsar afterwards, departing directly from the customs post.

It should be noted that the tragic suicide bombing in November 2014, which claimed the lives of 60 people just outside the entrance to the ceremony on the Pakistan side of the border, is thought to have nothing to do with relations between India and Pakistan. Instead, it is believed to be a response from militant groups to Pakistan's military operations in northwest Pakistan.

TRAIN

Apart from the train station, there's a less busy train reservation office (☎ 8am–8pm, to 2pm Sun) at the Golden Temple.

The fastest train to Delhi is the Amritsar Shatabdi (AC chair/1AC ₹865/1690, six hours, two daily). Trains leave Amritsar at 5am and 4.50pm; from New Delhi train station, they leave at 7.20am and 4.30pm. There are around a dozen other daily trains to Delhi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹300/800/1200), taking eight to nine hours.

Two daily trains go to Chandigarh (2nd class/AC chair ₹120/430, four hours) at 5.15am and 5.30pm.

The daily 6.45pm Amritsar–Howrah Mail links Amritsar with Varanasi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹500/1340/1950, 22 hours) and Kolkata's Howrah train station (₹695/1850/2720, 37 hours).

Ten daily trains go to Pathankot (2nd class/AC chair ₹65/255, three hours), leaving between 4.40am and 8.30pm.

i Getting Around

Free yellow buses run between the train station and the Golden Temple from 4am to 9pm. Otherwise, from the train station to the Golden Temple, a rickshaw/autorickshaw will cost around ₹50/70 but you'll have to haggle like fury for a fair price. Taxis loiter around the station, or there's a prepaid taxi booth (☎9888561615) at the southeast entrance to the Golden Temple. To the airport, an autorickshaw costs around ₹250 and a taxi about double.

Pathankot

☎0186 / POP148,500

The dusty frontier town of Pathankot is a transport hub for the neighbouring states of Himachal Pradesh and Jammu & Kashmir, but there's little to make you linger. There's a Himachal Tourism (☎0186-2220316; ☎10am-5pm Mon-Sat) booth at Pathankot Junction train station. The bus station has a simple restaurant and a guesthouse (☎9814131093; r ₹400) with very basic rooms and a common shower room. Just outside the bus station, Hotel Comfort (☎0186-2226403; Gurdaspur Rd; d with/without AC ₹1580/1200) has modern rooms and room-service meals.

i Getting There & Away

From Pathankot Junction station, on Gurdaspur Rd, there are 10 daily trains to Amritsar (2nd class/AC Chair ₹65/255, two to three hours) from 4.15am to 11.15pm; just buy a second-class 'general' ticket and hop on the next one.

Eight daily trains leave for New Delhi (sleep-er/3AC/2AC ₹300/780/1100, eight hours) at 10.40am, 4.45pm and then frequently between 7pm and midnight.

For Dharamsala and McLeod Ganj, four day-time trains run along the narrow-gauge line to Kangra Mandir (seat ₹35, five hours), leaving at 6.45am, 10am, 1.20pm and 3.50pm.

From the bus station, also on Gurdaspur Rd, there are three or four direct buses for McLeod Ganj (₹150, 4½ hours) each morning; otherwise, go via Dharamsala. There are frequent bus services throughout the day to:

Amritsar ₹100, three hours

Chamba ₹170, 4½ hours

Chandigarh ₹260, six hours

Dalhousie ₹100, 3½ hours

Delhi ordinary/Volvo AC ₹465/1000, 11 hours

Dharamsala ₹135, four hours

Jammu ₹90, three hours

Manali ₹370, 11 hours

Why Go?

J&K combines three incredibly different worlds into one state. Hindu Jammu, the state's major railhead, is a busy hub for domestic pilgrims. Muslim Kashmir is India's Switzerland, attracting hordes of local tourists seeking cool summer air, alpine scenery and Srinagar's romantic houseboat accommodation. For most foreigners, J&K's greatest attraction is the Himalayan land of Ladakh, whose disarmingly friendly, ethno-linguistically Tibetan people are predominantly Buddhist. Their timeless monasteries are set between arid canyons and soaring peaks with emerald-green villages nestled photogenically in highland deserts.

Although Kashmir has been relatively calm of late, be aware that it is politically volatile and arguments over its status caused three 20th-century wars. Ladakh is different, a meditatively calm world, where the main concern is giving yourself ample time for high-altitude acclimatisation. Note that Ladakh is inaccessible by road outside the summer season.

When to Go

Leh

Apr–Jun Kashmir is in full bloom but overloaded with domestic tourists. Prices peak.

Jul–Aug Perfect for Ladakh; rain drenches Jammu. Countless pilgrims flood to Amarnath.

Winter Ski season at Gulmarg. Ladakh has festivals but no road access for tourists.

LADAKH

Spectacularly jagged, arid mountains enclose this magical, Buddhist ex-kingdom. Picture-perfect gompas (Tibetan Buddhist monasteries) dramatically crown rocky outcrops amid whitewashed stupas and meditational mani walls topped with countless mantra-inscribed pebbles. Colourful fluttering prayer flags spread their spiritual messages metaphorically with the mountain breeze. Prayer wheels spun clockwise release more merit-making mantras. Gompa interiors are colourfully awash with murals and statuary of numerous bodhisattvas.

Ladakh's remarkably well-balanced traditional society has much to teach the West in terms of ecological awareness. While most Ladakhis are cash poor, traditional mud-brick homesteads are large, comfortable and self-sufficient in fuel and dairy products, organic vegetables and barley used to make tsampa (roast barley flour) and chhang (barley booze). Such self-sufficiency is an incredible achievement given the short growing season and very limited arable land in this upland desert, where precious water supplies must be laboriously channelled from glacier-melt mountain streams.

Ladakh is hemmed in by walls of dramatic mountains. This makes for unforgettable landscapes, but be aware that road access requires crossing tortuous high passes that close altogether from around October to May (or longer when snows are heavy).

History

Ladakh's (now-deposed) royal family traces its dynasty back 39 generations to AD 975. They took the name Namgyal (Victorious) in 1470 when their progenitor Lhachen Bhagan, ruling from Basgo, conquered a competing Ladakhi kingdom based at Leh/Shey. Although Ladakh had been culturally 'Tibetanised' in the 9th century, Buddhism originally arrived in an Indian form that's visible in ancient temple artisanship at Alchi. Over time, however, different Buddhist sects struggled for prominence, with the Tibetan Gelukpa order eventually becoming the majority philosophy after its introduction in the 14th century by Tibetan pilgrim Tsongkhapa (who left a curious relic at Spituk).

Ladakh's greatest king, Sengge Namgyal (r 1616–42) gained riches by plundering gold reserves from western Tibet and re-established a capital at Leh. Ladakh remained an independent kingdom until the 1840s when the region was annexed by the Jammu maharajas. The Namgyals eventually passed Leh Palace to the Indian Archaeological Survey and retired to their summer palace at Stok.

Ladakh is now a pair of subdistricts within J&K. That's a culturally odd situation for this 'little Tibet', which is one of the last relatively undisturbed Tantric Buddhist societies on Earth. When tourism was first permitted in 1974 commentators feared that the area would lose its identity, but the traditional lifestyle of the Ladakhis has proved unexpectedly robust to outside influences. Meanwhile locally relevant technologies, such as solar energy and Trombe thermal-storage walls, have helped to improve rural living standards.

LADAKHI FESTIVALS

Buddhist temple festivals abound in Ladakh and Zaskar. Most follow a relatively similar formula with masked dances in a square or monastery precinct watched by a fair proportion of locals dressed in traditional percha-robe costumes. Men might sport tall gonda hats with some women wearing perak 'crowns' encrusted with turquoise. The most genuine festivals are usually in December at Losar (Ladakhi New Year) and February/March during Dosmoche (Buddhist New Year) notably in Leh, Diskit and Likir where effigies representing the evil spirits of the old year are burnt or cast into the desert. Around the same time at Matho's monastery, oracles perform blindfolded acrobatics and ritual mutilations. Several other monastery festivals are now held in the summer, but tourists often form a large proportion of the crowd. For a detailed online festival calendar, see www.reachladakh.com/festival\_dates.htm.

Leh's tourist-friendly Ladakh Festival (Leh), held in late September, is a fun celebration including several days of Buddhist dances, polo, music and archery.

Silk Route Festival (p251) is a new, vibrant celebration of Nubra Valley culture including archery contests, camel riding and dances.

Jammu & Kashmir Highlights

1 Murmuring meditative mantras in the mural-decked gompas (Tibetan Buddhist monasteries) of the Indus Valley, such as at Chemrey (p245) or Thiksey (p244)

2 Escaping India's humid summer heat in entrancing Leh (p226), a traveller hub with dusty medieval backstreets, a Potala-style palace and a deep sense of ecological awareness

3 Experiencing the stark magnificence of Ladakh with a hassle-free homestay trek in the glorious traffic-free Markha Valley (p246)

4 Enjoying an amusingly caricatured Raj-type experience relaxing on a deluxe Dal Lake houseboat in Srinagar (p264)

5 Gawping at the mountain-valley scenery backing surreally blue Pangong Tso (p251) or the splendid Nubra Valley (p248)

Climate

Ladakh's short tourist season (July to early September) typically sees mild-to-hot T-shirt weather by day, but pleasant, occasionally chilly nights. Early July is great for flowers and peaks still dusted with snow, but August is better for high passes, which can still be snowbound into July. On higher treks nighttime temperatures can dip below 0°C even in midsummer. By September snow is likely on higher ground although major passes usually stay open until October. Access roads close entirely in winter when temperatures can fall below -20°C and most tourist infrastructure shuts down.

Ladakh enjoys sunshine an average of 300 days a year, but storms can brew suddenly. Although rare, heavy rain can cause devastating mud slides, as happened in August 2010 when such cloudbursts killed around 200 people.

Language

Though they use the same script, the Tibetan and Ladakhi languages are significantly different. The wonderfully all-purpose word jule (pronounced 'joo-lay') means 'hello', 'goodbye', 'please' and 'thanks'. To the greeting khamzang, simply reply khamzang. Zhimpo-rak means 'it's delicious'. Rebecca Norman's excellent Getting Started in Ladakhi (₹200) has more phrases and useful cultural tips.

Activities

In summer Ladakh is an adventure playground for outdoor types. Leh's vast range of agents can quickly arrange climbing, rafting, high-altitude trekking and jeep tours.

Leh

Few places in India are at once so traveller-friendly and yet so enchanting and hassle-free as mountain-framed Leh. Dotted with stupas and crumbling mudbrick houses, the Old Town is dominated by a dagger of steep rocky ridge topped by an imposing Tibetan-style palace and fort. Beneath, the bustling bazaar area is draped in a thick veneer of tour agencies, souvenir shops and tandoori-pizza restaurants, but a web of lanes quickly fans out into a green suburban patchwork of irrigated barley fields. Here, gushing streams and narrow footpaths link traditionally styled Ladakhi homes and hotels with flat roofs, sturdy walls and ornate wooden window frames. Leh's a place that's all too easy to fall in love with, but take things easy on arrival. The altitude means that most visitors initially suffer mild headaches and breathlessness. To prevent this becoming full-blown acute mountain sickness (AMS), drink plenty of fluids (ginger tea is considered especially helpful) and avoid strenuous exertion at first. It's wise to wait several days before trekking or taking jeep excursions to Tso Moriri or Pangong.

Sights

Central Leh

★ Leh Palace

PALACE

(Map p232; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ sunrise-sunset) Bearing a passing similarity to the Potala Palace in Lhasa (Tibet), this nine-storey dun-coloured palace is Leh's dominant structure and architectural icon. It took shape under 17th-century king Sengge Namgyal but has been essentially unoccupied since the Ladakhi royals were stripped of power and shuffled off to Stok in 1846. Today the sturdy walls enclose some exhibition spaces and a small prayer room, but the most enjoyable part of a visit is venturing up to the uppermost rooftops for the view.

Interesting structures ranged around the palace's base include the prominent Namgyal Stupa (Map p232), the colourfully muralled Chandazik Gompa (Chenrezi Lhakhang; Map p232; admission ₹20; ☀ hours vary) and the 1430 Chamba Lhakhang (Map p232) with medieval mural fragments between the inner and outer walls. Don't count on any of these being open.

Tsemo Fort

CASTLE, RUIN

(Map p232; admission ₹20; ☀ 10am-7pm) Visible from virtually everywhere in Leh, 16th-century Tsemo (Victory) Fort is a defining landmark that crowns the top of Palace Ridge, though there's little to see inside apart from a tiny Buddhist shrine. Directly beneath, Tsemo Gompa (Map p232; admission ₹30; ☀ 7.30am-6pm) consists of two little 15th-century temple buildings, one enshrining an 8m-tall gold-faced Maitreya, the other an atmospheric Gonkhang of protector deities.

Central Asian Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p232; www.tibetheritagefund.org/pages/projects/ladakh/central-asian-museum.php; suggested donation ₹50; ☺ open on request) This tapered four-storey stone tower is new but has a design based on an historic Lhasa mansion with the added flourish of a fortress-style drawbridge. Exhibits are relatively limited but the top floor 'Faces of Ladakh' mini photo-essays are thought provoking.

The museum hides in a courtyard that also contains Leh's oldest mosque and a traditionally styled Ladakhi show-kitchen (nearing completion).

Leh Old Town

AREA

Behind Leh's fanciful Jamia Masjid (Map p232), a Sunni men's mosque, winding alleys and stairways burrow between and beneath a series of old mudbrick Ladakhi houses and eroded old chortens (stupas). The alleys themselves are a large part of the attraction, but some individual buildings have been particularly well restored, notably the 17th-century Munshi Mansion, once the residence of the Ladakhi royal secretary and now housing the LAMO Arts Centre (Ladakh Arts & Media Organisation; Map p232; ☎ 01982-251554; www.lamo.org.in).

Greater Leh

Sankar

AREA

For a charming wander, follow canal streams in the captivating yet relatively accessible area around little Sankar Gompa (Map p228; admission ₹30) and its one-room geological museum (LRMPS Museum; Map p228; www.ladakhrocksminerals.com; Sankar; Indian/foreigner ₹30/50; ☺ 9am-1pm & 2-7pm). For memorable views, continue around 1km uphill to the laudable Donkey Sanctuary (☎ 9419658777; www.donkeysanctuary.in; Korean Temple Rd) or the nearby 11th-century Tisuru Stupa (Tisuru Rd), a bulky, partly restored mudbrick ruin that looks like a half-built ziggurat (stepped pyramid).

Shanti Stupa

BUDDHIST, VIEWPOINT

(Map p228; ☺ dawn-9pm) Dominating Leh from a high, rocky ridge, this gigantic white spired pudding of a stupa was built in 1991 by Japanese monks to promote world peace.

You can circumambulate to canned mantras and meditate in the Buddha Hall, but the greatest attraction is the stunning view over Leh. Ideally, make the breathless 15-minute climb when golden afternoon light still illuminates the city but the steps up from Changspa are already bathed in cooling shadow. There's a small simple cafe.

Gomang Stupa

BUDDHIST MONUMENT

(Map p228) This 9th-century stupa rises in concentric serrated layers flanked by numerous chortens. Recent restoration masks its aura of great antiquity, but its peaceful, shady setting remains a refreshingly spiritual escape from the tourist-centric developments of surrounding Changspa.

Nezer Latho

VIEWPOINT, SACRED SITE

(Map p228) This mysterious whitewashed cube is the shrine of Leh's guardian deity. While not much to see in itself, its rocky outcrop setting offers superb 360-degree views over the city through colourful strings of prayer flags.

Out of Town

3D Mandala

BUDDHIST SCULPTURE

(Nubra Highway, Km6) A truly vast Wheel-of-Life mandala, the size of a football pitch, is under construction at the northern edge of town.

Spituk Gompa

BUDDHIST MONASTERY

(admission ₹30) Founded in the late 14th century as See-Thub ('Exemplary') Monastery, impressive Spituk Gompa is incongruously perched overlooking Leh's airport runway around 5km from town. Multiple mudbrick buildings tumble merrily down a steep hillock towards Spituk village on the Indus riverbank. The courtyard below the gilt-roofed Skudung Lhakang leads to a colourful dukhang (prayer hall) containing a yellow-hatted statue of Tsongkhapa (1357-1419), who spread Gelukpa Buddhism. A Buddha statue across the same room supposedly incorporates a very odd relic: Tsongkhapa's nose-bleed.

On the very top of the gompa hill is a three-tiered latho (spirit shrine) and the small Palden Lamo temple hiding veiled

Hall of Fame

MUSEUM

(Leh-Spituk Hwy Km428; Indian/foreigner/camera ₹25/50/50, adventure park adult/child ₹30/20; ☀ 9am-7pm Wed-Mon, to 5pm Nov-Mar) This well-presented museum mostly commemorates the army's role in Ladakh from helping with cloudburst relief in 2010 to the high-altitude battles fought with Pakistan during the 20th century and includes a 30-minute film introducing the 1999 'Kargil War'. Room 15 displays clothing worn by soldiers at  $-50^{\circ}\text{C}$ .

An attached 'Adventure Park' combines assault course and archery range.

Activities

Cycling

For an exhilarating yet almost effortless excursion take a jeep ride up to Khardung La (the 'world's highest road-pass') and let gravity bring you back down. The potholes of the uppermost 14km (above South Pullu army camp) mean that initially you won't whizz down too fast, but the last 25km to Leh is well paved. Packages cost around ₹1300 per person and include bike hire, support vehicle and permits assuming at least four riders. Book one day ahead through Summer Holidays (Map p232; ☎9906985822; www.mtb.ladakh.com; Zangsti Rd) or Himalayan Bikers (Map p228; ☎9469049270; www.himalayan-bikers.com; Changspa). Both also rent mountain bikes (per day ₹500 to ₹700).

Meditation & Yoga

Various yoga, reiki and meditation places pop up each summer. The following have been established for longer.

Mahabodhi Centre

YOGA, MEDITATION

(Map p228; ☎01982-251162, 9622995460; www.mahabodhi-ladakh.org; Changspa Rd; ☀ Jun-mid-Sep) Daily, except Sundays, there are drop-in meditation sessions (by donation) at 7.30am and 6pm, pranayama-breathing exercises at 8.30am, and yoga classes (₹250) at 9am (intermediate), 2.30pm (beginners) and 4.30pm (all-level hatha). Three-day residential courses in vipassana meditation (₹4000) are held roughly weekly at their Choglamsar Centre (approximately 1km north of Km464.2), as are Sunday 'introduction-to-meditation' sessions (₹500 including Leh bus transfer).

Open Ladakh

(Map p232; ☎9622978828, 9906981026; www.openladakh.com; Hemis Complex, 23-24, Upper Tukcha Rd) Weekend vipassana residential retreats and lay-Buddhist teachings at the private little Dhamma House in Stok, along with occasional meditation-centred treks and activities.

Mountaineering

Ladakh has over 100 climbable peaks above 6000m, many rarely, if ever, scaled. A popular destination is 6121m Stok Kangri (Kanglha-jhal), the triangular snow-capped 'trekking peak' usually visible straight across the valley from Leh. Although accessible to those with minimal climbing experience, scaling its uppermost slopes requires ice axes, ropes, crampons, considerable fitness and an experienced guide. Pre-climb acclimatisation is essential as AMS can be a serious worry. Five-day agency packages from Stok or Zingchen, cost around ₹15,000 per person in a large group (permits and gear extra).

A good place to meet fellow climbers or to exercise your grips is the small bouldering-cave GraviT (Map p232; www.facebook.com/GraviT.Leh; Raku Complex 2nd fl, Fort Rd; inside climbing wall per hr ₹80, excursions per day ₹1800; ☎11am-10pm Mon-Sat, 6-10pm Sun), which also organises Sunday expeditions to local climbing spots.

Climbing Permits

IMF (www.indmount.org) peak fees apply for climbing mountains over 6000m, starting from US$50 per person (Stok Kangri) but varying according to summit altitude. Peaks over 7000m require special permission from Delhi and can take months of preparation. However, most others are issued in minutes through the IMF's jovial Leh representative, Sri Sonam Wangyal, who was the youngest man to scale Mt Everest back in 1965. His house-office (IMF; Map p232; ☎01982-252992; Changspa Rd; ☎10am-2pm & 5-8pm Mon-Sat) is tucked incongruously into the Mentokling Restaurant yard. You'll need photocopies of your passport/visa plus details of your guide. Agencies can apply on your behalf.

Rafting & Kayaking

In summer, numerous agencies offer daily rafting excursions through glorious canyon scenery. Experienced paddlers can follow in a kayak for around 50% extra. Prepare to get very wet. Relatively easy Phey-Nimmu (grade II, beginners, mid-July to late August) typically costs ₹1200; while tougher and more picturesque Chiling-Nimmu (grade III, late June to early September) generally costs around ₹1600 including equipment and lunch (bring extra drinking water). Reliable specialist companies include Rimo (Map p232; ☎01982-253348; www.rimoriverexpeditions.com; Zangsti Rd), Wet'n'Wild (Map p232; ☎9419819721, 01982-255122; www.wetnwildexplorations.com; Fort Rd, 1st fl) and Splash Adventures (Map p232; ☎9622965941; www.splashladakh.com; Zangsti Rd), while Luna Ladakh (Map p232; ☎941997732; www.lunaladakh.com; Zangsti Rd) adds rafting as the finale to a package including mountain biking (Spituk-Zingchen) and trekking (Zingchen-Chiling with homestays) costing ₹16,000/20,000 for two people, on a three-/four-day package. Cheaper for groups.

Once or twice a year given enough interest, group expeditions descend the Zaskar River from Zangla to Nimmu (three days rafting, three days travel; see www.rimoriverexpeditions.com for more details).

Trekking & Jeep Safaris

Countless agencies offer trekking packages, jeep tours, rafting, biking and permit procurement. Few seem systematically bad but many are very inconsistent. A deciding factor is often simply which agent happens to have a group leaving on the day you need. We have found small operators Higher Himalayas (Map p232; ☎9419333393; www.higherhimalayas.com; Zangsti Rd), Snowfield (Map p232; ☎9469723819; Hemis Complex, Upper Tukcha Rd) and especially Shayok (Map p232; ☎9419342346, 9419888902; shayoktravels@rediffmail.com; Changspa Rd) to be honest, competitive and helpful with trekking information and as jeep-tour fixers. Ask fellow travellers for recent recommendations.

Ladakhi Women's Travel Company TREKKING (Map p232; ☎9469158137, 01982-257973; www.ladakhiwomenstravel.com; Hemis Complex, unit 22, Upper Tukcha Rd; ☀10am-6pm) Small highly reputable female-run operation specialising in Markha and Sham homestay trek packages. Male customers accepted if their group includes women.

Hidden North

TREKKING

Wild East Adventure

TREKKING

Tours

Old City Heritage Walk

WALKING TOUR

(Map p232; ☎9419952794; per person ₹450; ☀2.30pm Mon-Sat) Informative small-group walking tours peek into some 'secret' corners and get you inside a couple of usually closed ancient houses/temples. Start from Lala's Art Cafe (p238), where you should book ahead. Tours last around two hours.

Sleeping

Choice is phenomenal and almost nowhere is really dire, so don't panic if our suggestions are full. Room standards can vary significantly within each property so, when possible, look before you book. For ultra-budget places, try the back alleys of Upper

LADAKH PERMITS

To visit Nubra Valley, Pangong Tso, Dha-Hanu, Tso Moriri and the Upper Indus (beyond Upshi) you'll need an inner line permit (valid seven days, nonextendable). Indian citizens can go direct to the DCO (Deputy Commissioner's Office; Map p232; Polo Ground; ☀10am-3pm Mon-Sat). Foreigners' permit applications must be made through travel agencies. Apply by 2pm the day before travel or on Saturday for Monday departures. Foreigners typically pay around ₹500. That's ₹20 per day of validity plus ₹70 Red Cross fee, agency fee and ₹300 environmental fee. You only need to pay the latter charge once and might have already done so on arrival in Ladakh (most commonly at Upshi), so make sure you keep the receipt voucher.

Technically at least two people must apply together, but agencies can usually fudge this for individual travellers. Making extra copies of your inner line permit is wise.

Central Leh

Changspa. For garden homestay-guesthouses around the ₹800 mark look in Upper Karzoo. For slightly plusher family guesthouses Upper Tukcha is a good bet. Staying out at Sankar or Yurthung can be idyllically peaceful but there'll be a fairly long, dark walk home from town (₹150 by taxi by day).

Many guesthouses will provide towels on request, but you'll usually have to buy your own toilet paper which should generally not be flushed: when there's a plastic bin, use that. In winter most accommodation closes; guesthouses that stay open often charge a ₹100 heating supplement and may only offer bucket water because pipes freeze.

Central Leh

Palace View Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p232; ☎ 9622964542; palace.view@hotmail.com; d ₹600-1000) This fine-value family place keeps its promises with stupendous views across the old city from rooftop sitting areas and from some of the neat ensuite rooms, mostly rebuilt since 2011. Showers run very hot.

Zik-Zik GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p232; ☎ 9622990273, 01982-255812; Upper Karzoo Lane; old/new d ₹600/1200; 📶) One of the most central guesthouses to have an extensive vegetable garden and orchard-shaded seating, Zik-Zik's rooms are mostly light and airy. Newer ones have slightly smarter bathrooms.

Travellers' House GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p232; ☎ 01982-252048; thetravellershouse@gmail.com; Karzoo Lane; d ₹700-900) Striking a good quality-for-price balance, the eight well-kept, no-nonsense guest rooms come with geyser-equipped bathrooms and face the home of friendly, English-speaking family owners and Lukhee, their pet poodle.

Kang-Lha-Chen

HOTEL $$
 (Map p232; ☎ 01982-252144, 01982-202289; www.hotelkanglhachen.com; Zangsti; s/d ₹3330/3390; ☺ closed Oct-Apr; 📶) Central yet set around a peaceful garden-courtyard, this long-standing favourite has older but well-maintained rooms with excellent box-spring mattresses, wood-effect hard floors and simple but clean bathrooms (hot water morning and evening). Tasteful Tibetan touches add interest and there's a delightful sitting room designed like an antique Ladakhi kitchen.

Almighty Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$
 (Map p232; ☎ 9419179501; Chulung Lane; ₹1000-2000) This relatively luxurious new family guesthouse has six capacious rooms with standards better than most hotels. Bright, airy room 5 has a balcony. There's free wi-fi and glimpses of Stok Kangri from the rooftop.

Cozy Corner

HOTEL $$
 (Map p232; ☎ 01982-251587; hotelcozycorner@gmail.com; Fort Rd; d ₹2500; 📶) Nine good-sized, professionally appointed rooms are accessed by art-adorned lime-green stairways from beside the well-known Summer Harvest restaurant. Palace views from room

106 are impressive. There's no reception (ask at Singge Tours office, upstairs).

Greater Leh*Chow Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $
 (Map p228; ☎ 01982-252399; small/large d ₹600/800, without bathroom ₹400; 📶) This excellent-value, family-run guesthouse has sparkling clean, airy budget rooms with good mattresses and log ceilings. Housed in two new but unobtrusive buildings set in a flower-filled walled garden, you'll find it down a narrow path off Changspa Rd. Free wi-fi.

Gyalson

GUESTHOUSE $
 (Map p228; ☎ 9622951748; gyalsean@yahoo.com; Changspa Rd; d with/without bathroom ₹600/1000) Spick-and-span rooms in a new but traditionally styled family house with a prime location just behind Wonderland restaurant. Bathrooms have geysers and there are two parasol-tables in the vegetable garden.

Haldupa Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $
 (Map p228; ☎ 01982-251374; Upper Tukcha Rd; r with/without TV ₹1200/900, r without bathroom ₹300-700) A handful of cheaper rooms are inside the enchanting owners' wonderfully authentic original house. The rest are new, with decent bathrooms, hot showers and poplar-willow ceilings in a separate, continuously cleaned block facing the peaceful vegetable garden.

Nurboo Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $
 (Map p228; ☎ 9419340947, 9906988963; Upper Changspa; r without bathroom ₹400-500) Simple family place serenaded by the sound of rushing water. Great mountain views from the rooftop and from upper corner rooms.

LEH – WATER & ECO-AWARENESS

Water is precious – those streams you see cascading beside virtually every lane aren't a sign of plenty but an elaborate network of irrigation channels that keep Leh from reverting to a dusty mountain desert. Anything you can do to save water is a positive step. Bucket baths save a lot of water over showers, and some guesthouses offer traditional water-free Ladakhi long-drop toilets that recycle human waste into compost. But don't put anything nonbiodegradable down the hole: whatever goes in will end up on the farmer's field in a year or two.

To save Leh from vanishing under a sea of plastic bottles, refills of purified, pressure-boiled water are provided by environmental organisations Dzomsa (p239) and LEDeG (p238). Both provide recycling and disposal services. Dzomsa has an ecofriendly laundry (₹95 per kg) and serves locally sourced tsestalulu (sea buckthorn) and apricot juices that avoid packaging.

Norzin Holiday Home

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-252022, 9419178751; Upper Tukcha Rd; r with/without bathroom ₹1000/800; 🍷) Well-kept mod-trad family home with views from the roof terrace, an enclosed garden and, unusually, a grape-vine dominating the glassed-in verandah. Free drinking water refills; wi-fi costs ₹2 per minute.

Gangs-Shun

HOMESTAY $

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-252603, 9858060706; http://tiny.cc/GangsShun; Upper Tukcha Rd; d ₹1000; 📍) Seven very well-appointed guest rooms of significantly variable sizes in a plush, friendly family home. Room 1 is family-sized. Lovely lawn-seating and vegetable garden.

Lak Rook Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-252987, 9419177870; Khaksal Tisuru Rd, Sankar; r without bathroom ₹300-600) 🌿 This cult traveller favourite is a large, ramshackle Ladakhi farmhouse almost lost amid the flowers and fruit trees of its organic vegetable garden. Rooms are attractively designed but seriously let down by thin straw mattresses. The solar shower room is outside.

Goba

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-253670; Goba Alley; r ₹1000, s/d without bathroom from ₹200/300; 🍷) There's a great spirit to the traditional main house, topped with prayer room and lovely rooftop panoramas. A more neutral hotel-style block has functional ensuite rooms. The garden is a veritable field from which homegrown organic vegetables form the mainstay of family-cooked dinners (book ahead).

Tsetan Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 9622249125, 9469049131; tsetan_n@yahoo.com; Upper Changspa; d ₹800, r without bathroom ₹300-600) Eponymous owner Tsetan has a polite but unquenchable enthusiasm that transforms this simple, quiet back-lane guesthouse into a community brimming with traveller camaraderie.

Shared bathrooms have geysers.

Lardakh Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-250780; off Changspa Rd; s/d without bathroom ₹250/300) The big, old house is an absolute Ladakhi classic with extensive garden, rooftop and rooms that, while simple, are as cheap as you'll find. Outdoor toilet and bucket-shower. Note that by day there's rarely anyone at home.

Zaltak Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; Changspa; d ₹1000, r without bathroom ₹300-600) The old block is a standard Ladakhi house set in a pleasant garden. The brand new back building has excellent-value ensuite rooms with sitting areas, large beds and hotel-standard bathrooms.

All View

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 9419178854, 01982-252761; Chubi; s/d ₹350/500) This family guesthouse is arranged around a lawn and apple tree at the end of a quiet, dead-end footpath. It's such great value that many guests (predominantly Koreans) stay all season.

Gomang Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-252657; Old Karzoo; small/large r without bathroom ₹400/600; 🍷) Wobbly stairways in a genuine Ladakhi home link simple rooms sharing bathrooms with geysers and solar-heated water. Some rooms and two small communal sitting areas overlook peaceful Gomang Stupa through trees. Free wi-fi.

Chamtse Guesthouse

HOMESTAY $

(Map p228; ☎ 9419372430; Upper Karzoo Lane; r lower/upper ₹700/800) Perched above the barley-field garden of the similarly priced Skitsal Guesthouse, Chamtsé feels very 'lived in' and the new carpets aren't properly fitted, but luminous rooms sparkle and the family is friendly.

Solpon

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-253067, 9906994466; www.ghoomleh.com; Upper Changspa; d ₹1000-1500, without bathroom ₹500) The simplest rooms have geyser-heated water in shared bathrooms while the plush new section is almost hotel standard, adorned with beautiful landscape photography.

★ Deskit Villa

BOUTIQUE HOTEL, GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-253498, 9419178998; www.skywalkertravel.com; Sankar; r guesthouse/hotel ₹1500/3600; 🍷) Hidden behind a family garden guesthouse that's delightful in itself, this 'secret' eight-room boutique hotel offers some of the best pampering in Leh with super-comfortable beds, a stupendous rooftop panorama and lots of air-conditioned (!!) public space in which to unwind. The dining room is designed like a traditional Ladakhi kitchen.

Royal Ladakh

₹3670/3800; 🏠) Numerous imitators are springing up along Sankar Lane and around Upper Karzoo, but Royal Ladakh remains one of the best choices in its price range if you want a more 'hotel-style' experience yet also feel away from it all. Rooms are spacious and well maintained and there's a majestic lawn panorama.

Grand Willow

HOTEL $$

(Map p228; 📍01982-251835, 9419178242; www.grandwillowladakh.com; Fort Rd; standard s/d ₹2540/3600, deluxe ₹3030/3680) Round a small floral yard right off Fort Rd, the 'standard' block is fronted with wooden-balconies, and rooms have colour-wash walls that might have been painted by Matisse. The more formal deluxe rooms occupy a new, three-storey block with pink marble floors and monogrammed bed-boards.

There's a walk-in discount of 30%.

Lha-Ri-Mo

HOTEL $$

(Map p228; 📍9419178233, 01982-252101; lharimo@yahoo.com; Fort Rd; s/d ₹2420/3350) Magenta window frames stacked upon whitewashed walls create a magical monastery-like impression enclosing a lawn garden. There's also an impressive neo-Tibetan lounge. Guest rooms don't have quite the same delight but they've been recently refitted with repainted walls, brass lamps and the odd wrought-iron mirror. Beds have somewhat spongy mattresses and service can be a little offhand.

Poplar Eco-Resort

RESORT $$

(Map p228; 📍01982-253518; www.eprleh.com; Shenam Rd; s/d ₹2250/3050) Lost in the bird-song of an overgrown orchard of apple, apricot and poplar trees is this series of well-spaced two-room bungalows each sharing a verandah with wicker chairs.

The setting is better than the slightly dated decor, but the attached bathrooms are clean and offer all-day hot water. Most food and juice served is sourced from the organic garden.

Hotel Gomang

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$

(Map p228; 📍01982-253536; hotelgomang@gmail.com; Upper Changspa; s/d/ste ₹6550/8360/9350) Leh abounds with new hotels, but Gomang stands out for the loving care of its management and the careful attention to detail. Boutique features include Gomang-branded toiletries, tab-folded loo rolls and fine bed sashes, but what really impresses are the swish yet homely public spaces with heaped colourful cushions on black leather sofas.

Ladakh Residency

HOTEL $$$

(Map p228; 📍01982-254111, 9419233499; www.ladakhresidency.com; Changspa; s/d/ste ₹5124/6590/8785, walk-in ₹3500/4500/6000; 🏠) Decorated with thangka (Tibetan cloth paintings) and Roerich prints, this layered collage of wooden balconies and marble floors has proper king-size beds, bathrooms with toiletries and shower booths and Stok Kangri views from many rooms. It's professionally managed and one of very few wheelchair-friendly buildings in Ladakh. Pleasant raised lawn-garden.

Out of Town

For something special in the villages around Leh, there's a heritage hotel at Nimmu (p253), a delightful getaway guesthouse at Phyang (p253), a monastery hotel at Thiksey (p244), and five mural-adorned guest rooms within Stok's Royal Palace (p241).

Eating

From June to September, traveller cafes abound, Israeli and Chinese options supplementing curries, banana pancakes, tandoori pizzas and Tibetan favourites. Competition keeps standards generally high especially in the garden and rooftop restaurants of Changspa. Food around Main Bazaar tends to get more mixed reviews.

Central Leh

Bakery Shacks

BAKERY $

(Map p232; bread small/large ₹5/10; ☺ about 6-10am & 5-7pm) Fresh-baked shirmal (bread rounds) are sold hot from photogenically traditional wood-fired tandoori bakeries on the Old Town alley behind the Central Asian Museum.

Norlakh

TIBETAN $

(Map p232; Main Bazaar; mains ₹60-110, rice ₹40; ☺ about 10am-10.30pm) This loveable family restaurant is great for pure-veg Tibetan food such as cheese-and-spinach whole-wheat momos (Tibetan dumplings) or special gyathuk (a rich noodle soup). It's upstairs, hidden behind a willow tree almost opposite Ladakh Bookshop.

★ Chopsticks

ASIAN $$

(Map p232; 📍9622378764; Raku Complex, Fort Rd; mains ₹160-310, rice ₹60; ☺ noon-10.30pm)

This effortlessly stylish pan-Asian restaurant, with a solid reputation for quality wok dishes and Thai curries, now even offers trad-Ladakhi skyu (flat barley 'gnocci' in vegetable stew). The outdoor terrace is raised above the meele of Fort Rd.

Penguin Garden

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p232; Chulung Lane; mains ₹100-200, half/full tandoori chicken ₹250/490, rice/beer ₹60/150; ☺ about 10am-11pm; ☺) Sit beneath the apricot trees and listen to the gushing stream at this slightly hidden but constantly popular garden restaurant. If the fresh-cooked tandoori chicken has run out (typical by early evening) there is still a world of cuisines to explore. Snappy, if casual, service.

Sunbeam Café

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p228; Fort Rd; mains ₹110-290, rice/beer ₹70/170; ☺ about 10am-10.30pm; ☺) Convivial shaded rooftop with Chinese lamps and a well-cooked international menu.

Il Forno

ITALIAN, INDIAN $$

(Map p232; Zangsti Rd; mains ₹170-290, rice/beer ₹80/150; ☺ about 11am-11pm) Il Forno is a partly unshaded rooftop with views of both town and fortress. There's a fairly reliable supply of (sometimes cold) beer and the wood-oven pizzas (₹220 to ₹290) are thin-crust with apple cheese.

Gesmo

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p232; Fort Rd; mains ₹120-250; ☺ about 9am-10.30pm) This age-old traveller haunt has been unchanged so long that its vinyl floors and chequerboard ceilings now seem almost like novel retro-design features. Good-value meals range from curries to moist lemon-iced sponge cake (₹50) to yak-cheese pizza.

Changspa

G-Kitchen

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p228; Changspa Rd; mains ₹90-300, rice ₹60; ☺ about 11am-11pm; ☺) Changspa has several old-faithful rooftop restaurants but G-Kitchen is a notch above the competition thanks to its pleasantly appointed indoor section (for colder nights) and its imaginative gourmet specials. We tried seared lamb strips topped with Italian sauce and mozzarella served with balsamic-drizzled rocket. Delicious.

Nirvana Garden

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p228; Changspa Rd; mains ₹100-200, rice/beer ₹60/160; ☺ about 10am-11pm) Lehi's most New Age chill-out has open-air ground-

LADAKHI FOOD

Ladakh's Tibetan favourites include salt-tea, momos (dumplings wrapped ravioli-style in thin pasta) and thukpa (noodle soup), though a more genuinely Ladakhi dish is skyu, pieces of flat barley 'gnocci' in a vegetable stew. Hard-to-find paba is a pea-and-barley meal that you dunk in tangtur (boiled vegetables in curd). Ladakh's barley-beer, chhang, is available at rural homestays but not for general sale.

seating ringed by low adobe-style walls, an open fire pit and a little pool. Music ranges from informal acoustic jams through trippy-trance to nature-mantra mixes. Excellent curries.

Café Jeevan

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Booklovers Retreat; Map p228; Changspa Rd; mains ₹120-230, rice ₹80; ☺ about 9.30am-10.30pm; ☺) Good for all-veg Italian food and individual-size pizzas, and especially for interesting, locally grown salads (like mint, cucumber and yak cheese). Do pay the ₹30 extra for a scrumptious side of hummus. Glass-walled kitchen, cosy yet gently suave interior and covered roof terrace for catching sunset rays.

★ Bon Appetit

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Map p228; ☎ 01982-251533; mains ₹220-460; ☺ 11am-late) Hidden down unlikely footpaths south of Changspa Rd, Lehi's top restaurant is a stylish exercise in Ladakhi minimalist architecture. The menu is short but well chosen, offering artistically prepared fried aubergine-stacks, sublime cashew chicken and succulent tandoori grills.

Not to be confused with the Fort Road 'Bon Appetit' beside Dolphin Bakery.

Drinking

Bon Appetit is applying for a cocktail licence. Virtually no other restaurant has alcoholic drinks on the menu, but many rooftop and Changspa-garden places unofficially serve beer on request; Nirvana Garden, La Piazzetta (Map p232; Changspa Rd; mains ₹170-350, rice ₹90, pizzas ₹260-370; ☺ about 11am-11.30pm; ☺) and Il Forno are good bets. For takeaway booze, the handy Indus Wine Shop (Map p232; lbex Rd; beer/wine ₹85/850; ☺ 10am-1pm & 3-9.30pm) opens daily except on the 8th, 15th and last days of the Tibetan calendar.

Contenders for Leh's best baristas include small but tastefully stylish CoffeeSutra (Map p232; Main Bazaar, 1st fl; coffee ₹60-90; ☺10am-9pm), informal handicraft-shop Open Hand (Map p232; www.openhand.in; Chulong Lane; coffee ₹44-110, meals ₹160-250; ☺7.30am-9.30pm; ☎), snazzy Cafe de Leh (Map p228; Changspa Rd; coffee ₹60-250, mains ₹150-300; ☺7am-10pm; ☎), homely Desert Rain (Map p232; New Shar Market; tea/coffee from ₹20/40; ☺9.30am-noon & 2-8.30pm Mon-Sat) and unique Lala's. But for us, Yama Coffee House (Map p228; Changspa Rd; coffee ₹70-100; ☺7.30am-10pm; ☎) has the caffeine edge. They do great fruit salads too.

For great masala chai, join the locals at basic tea stalls (Map p232; Chandu Market; masala chai ₹10; ☺6.30am-7.30pm) in dusty Chandu Market alley.

★ Lala's Art Cafe

CAFE

(Leh Heritage House; Map p232; www.tibetheritagefund.org/pages/projects/ladakh/lala-s-cafe.php; Old Town; ☺9.30am-7pm Mon-Sat) Idea for old-town ambience, this tiny, mudbrick house was saved from demolition and brilliantly restored in 2006. It has trip-you-up stone steps and an open roof terrace serving French-press coffee (₹50) and original cakes-of-the-day. Check out art and photography exhibitions, plus the ancient carved steles downstairs.

★ Nati Cafe

CAFE

(Map p232; Zangsti Parking; tea/coffee ₹10/35; ☺10am-7pm) Inexpensive beverages, cake-of-the-day and local snacks served in an authentically styled old-Ladakhi kitchen.

★ Old Town Cafe

CAFE

(Map p232; www.heritagehimalaya.org; drinks from ₹15; ☺about 10am-6pm) Hidden in the shadows of Leh Palace, the historic Lonpo House has a 17th-century kitchen room that's a quiet getaway, ideal if you want to read and unwind. Currently only teas, coffee and juices are served, but on Friday night there's a Ladakhi supper club (sign up at Himalayan Shop on Main Bazaar near Chokhang Vilhara gate, opposite SBI).

🛒 Shopping

Leh is a paradise for souvenir shopping. Dozens of colourful little shops, street vendors and Tibetan Refugee Markets (Map p232) sell wide selections of thangkas, Ladakhi hats, 'antiques' and heavy turquoise jewellery (from ₹80 per gram), as well as Kashmiri shawls and various Nepali, Tibetan and Chinese knock-knacks. Compare prices in fascinating, very local-focused Moti Market (Map p228), the little family shops of Nowshera (New Shar Market; Map p232) (New Shar) Market or the suavely up-market Norbulingka Boutique (Map p232; www.norbulingka.org; Rizong Complex).

Bookshops are well stocked with postcards, novels, spiritual works and books on Ladakh, Kashmir and Tibet. Old Fort Rd, Main Bazaar and Changspa Rd have several outdoors equipment stores. Some, including Venture Ladakh (Map p232; ☎9858323091; www.ventureladakh.com; Changspa Rd), rent climbing and trekking gear.

LEDeG

HANDICRAFTS

(Ladakh Ecological Development Group; Map p232; www.ledeg.org; Karzoo Pond; ☺9.30am-6pm Mon-Sat) Locally produced crafts and clothes.

Ladakh Bookshop

BOOKS

(Map p232; ☎9868111112; hanishbooks@yahoo.co.in; Main Bazaar; ☺9am-9pm) Hidden upstairs near the SBI ATM, this wonderfully well-stocked bookshop publishes locally relevant works and stocks Olizane's indispensable Ladakh Trekking Maps (₹1500 per sheet).

Book Worm

BOOKS

(Map p232; Old Fort Rd; ☺about 10am-9.30pm) Buys and sells secondhand books.

📍 Information

INTERNET ACCESS

There are many internet cafes on Fort Rd, Changspa Rd and around Main Bazaar (₹60 per hour) with slow, unreliable connections; wi-fi is often worse. Don't plan on downloading or streaming.

Peace Internet (Map p232; Music School Rd) Comparatively good internet connection by Leh standards.

MEDICAL SERVICES

Het Ram Vinay Kumar Pharmacy (Map p232; ☎01982-252160; Main Bazaar; ☺10am-9pm) Dispenses Diamox (₹40 for 10) and numerous other essential medicines without prescription.

KLR Oxygen Bar (Map p228; KC Garden Restaurant; per minute ₹20; ☺11am-11pm) Breathe pure oxygen to relieve altitude sickness, or just for the buzz.

Men-Tsee-Khang (☎01982-253566; www.men-tsee-khang.org; consultation/museum ₹100/20; ☀9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Fri, plus 1st & 3rd Sat) Amchi (Tibetan herbal medicine) centre, dispensary and one-room museum, 800m south of the bus station. Consultations with no appointment required, but for astrological readings (₹2000, 45 minutes) call two days ahead.

MONEY

There are numerous moneychangers on Changspa Rd and around Main Bazaar, plus at least five ATMs, notably SBI (Map p232; Main Bazaar).

J&K Forex (Map p232; 1st fl, Himalaya Complex, Main Bazaar; ☀10.30am-2pm & 2.30-4pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) Good exchange rates, better still for travellers cheques. Might move facilities to J&K Bank Main Branch (Map p232; lbex Rd) during 2015.

POST

Tourist Post Office (Map p232; Main Bazaar; ☀10am-1pm & 2-5.30pm Mon-Fri, 10am-noon Sat)

TELEPHONE

Inexpensive sim cards are available from Air-Cell (Map p232; Main Bazaar) and AirTel (Map p232; Girls' School Lane; ☀10am-6pm) for use within 20km of Leh. Requires four photographs plus photocopies of passport and visa. Connection approval can take several days.

TOURIST INFORMATION

On noticeboards outside Dzomsa (Map p232; Zangsti; ☀8.30am-9.30pm), in agencies and pasted all over town are adverts for tours, treks and activities. Indiamike's online forum (www.indiamike.com/india/ladakh-and-zanskar-f31) is very active with Ladakh travellers.

LEDeG Film Screenings (Map p232; Karzoo Pond; by donation; ☀2pm Mon-Sat, Jul-early Sep) The excellent 1993 documentary Ancient Futures: Learning from Ladakh and other thought-provoking films are screened to give background to the ecological and economic position of Ladakh. A discussion follows.

Mini Tourist Information Office (Map p232; ☐01982-253462, 01982-252297; lbex Rd; ☀10am-4pm Mon-Sat) Listings, basic maps and minimal English.

Getting There & Away

AIR

Flights are dramatically scenic, but can be cancelled at short notice. Although flying into Leh means you're likely to suffer mild altitude problems on arrival, the Delhi-Manali-Leh drive is arguably worse, as you'll cross passes over 5000m. Flying to Leh is the only way to reach Ladakh once roads close in winter. Jet

Airways (Map p232; ☐01982-255444; Main Bazaar; ☀10am-1.30pm & 2-4pm), GoAir (Map p232; ☐01982-253940; Airport) and Air India (☐01982-252076; Airport; ☀6am-noon) fly to Delhi. Air India also serves Srinagar (Wednesday) and Jammu (Monday and Friday). Fly to Jammu for Dharamsala.

BUS

The main bus station (Map p228) is 700m south of the town centre via the Kigu-Tak stepped bazaar from Friendship Gate (Map p228).

MOTORCYCLE

Numerous companies along Music School Rd and Changspa Rd hire Enfield Bullet motorcycles (₹1000 to ₹1500 per day) and scooters (₹700). Double-check insurance, fittings and brakes. Carry spare fuel for longer trips: Ladakh's only petrol stations are at Leh, Choglamsar, Serthi near Karu (NH1 Km440.5), Diskit (opening unreliable), Spituk, Phyang junction, Khalsi (NH1 Km338.7), Wakha and Kargil (two).

SHARED JEEP

Services from the bus station (arranging one day ahead):

Kargil (₹900 to ₹1000 per seat, seven hours) Runs throughout the morning.

Srinagar (front/back seats ₹2500/2000, 15 hours) Departures around 4.30pm.

From the parking lot near the zabakhana, just southeast of the Polo Ground (without booking):

Diskit (₹400) and possibly Sumur (₹500) or other Nubra jeeps. Departures are before 8am.

From the southern end of Moti Market:

Choglamsar & Spituk (₹20) Shared taxis depart relatively frequently to Choglamsar, but only sporadically to Spituk.

REACHING LADAKH

Only two road routes, both beautiful but seasonal, link Ladakh to the rest of India. The route to Manali is spectacular but long and arduous; to Srinagar, crossing the perilous Zoji La scares the mosos out of many first-time travellers. Both roads close altogether from October or November until May, leaving flying as the only option for reaching Leh. Allow at least a couple of spare days in case of delays.

On entering Ladakh, if you are asked to pay an 'environmental fee' (Indian/foreigner ₹200/300), keep the receipt and present it when applying for permits.

TAXI & CHARTER JEEPS

Given irregular buses and many fellow travellers, chartering a vehicle makes eminent sense for visiting rural Ladakh. Fares are set by the drivers' union and published in an annually updated booklet so there's no haggling, though sometimes booking via a small local agency can get you a minor discount (and a reliable driver). We quote the lowest standard rates, ie for taxi-vans or Sumo charter-jeeeps. Prices are 5% to 10% higher for Scorpio/Innova jeeps. Rates include reasonable photo- and visit-stops but longer waits are officially chargeable (₹256/1033/2065 per hour/half-day/full day) and for extra overnight stops add ₹350. Requesting unplanned diversions from the agreed route once en route can cause unexpected difficulties.

TRAIN

There's no railway. Some agencies, plus a cash-only train booking room (☎8am-6pm) at Trishul Army Camp near the airport, sell all India train tickets. Check the train number required before going.

i Getting Around

TO & FROM AIRPORT

The airport (Km430, Leh–Spituk Hwy) is 4km south of the centre. Taxi transfers cost ₹230/300 to central Leh/Changspa.

TAXI

Leh's little micro-van taxis charge from ₹100 per hop. Flaggering down rides rarely works; go to a taxi stand to make arrangements.

Around Leh – South & East

☎01982

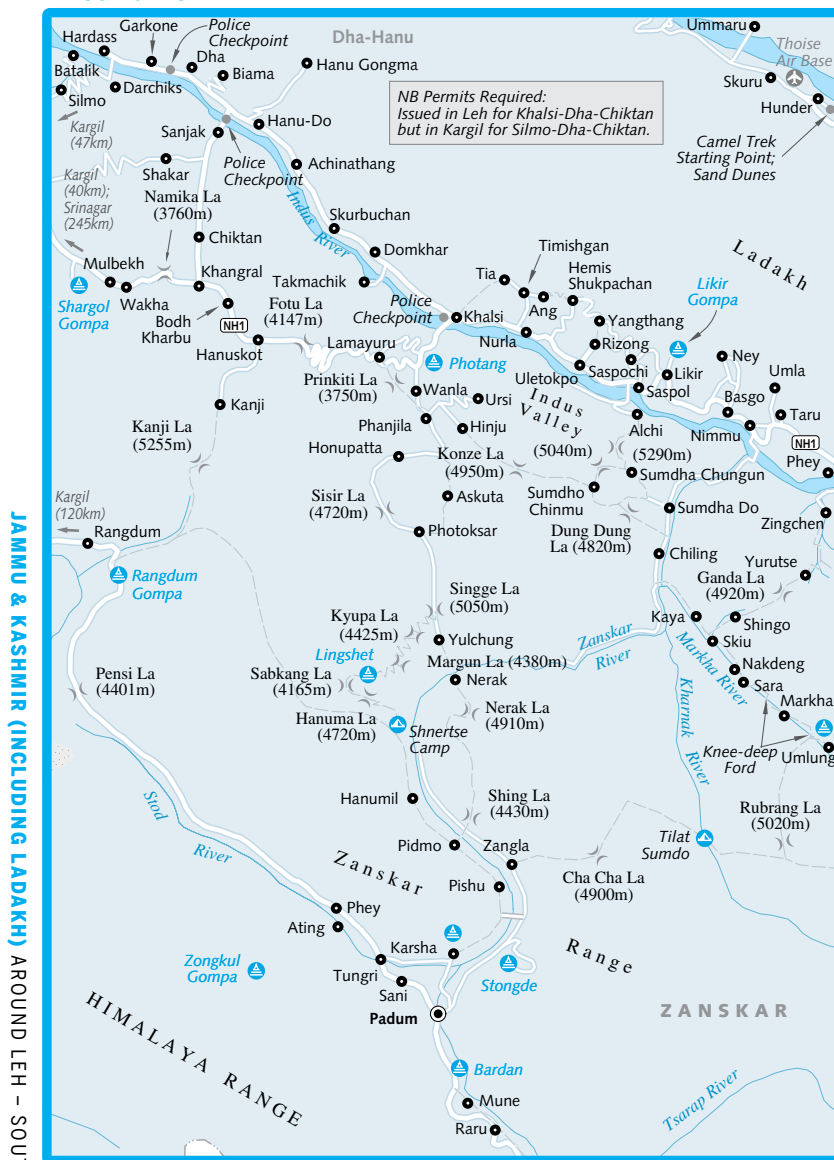

Combine several of the following destinations to make a full-day taxi-trip, or visit one or two as part of a jeep excursion to Pangong, Tso Moriri or Nubra via Wari La.

Stok

Stately three-storey Stok Palace (admission ₹50; ☎8am-1pm & 2-7pm May-Oct) is a smaller and more intimate version of Leh's. And, as the summer home to Ladakh's former royal family, it feels much more 'lived-in', though the overall scene is marred by a giant telecommunication tower. A handful of 'museum' rooms display family treasures, including the queen's ancient turquoise-and-gold yub-jhur (crown) and a sword that the king's oracle managed to bend into a knot, Uri Geller style. The palace's cafe (tea ₹20, sandwiches ₹80-100) is well appointed with open terrace seating and splendid views. But for a really unique experience, rent one of five 'secret' guest rooms (☎01982-254976, 9797559799; nirlac@vsnl.net; r ₹15,000-30,000), lavished with brooding original murals (plus excellent new bathrooms). There's no reception so you'll need to make advance arrangements.

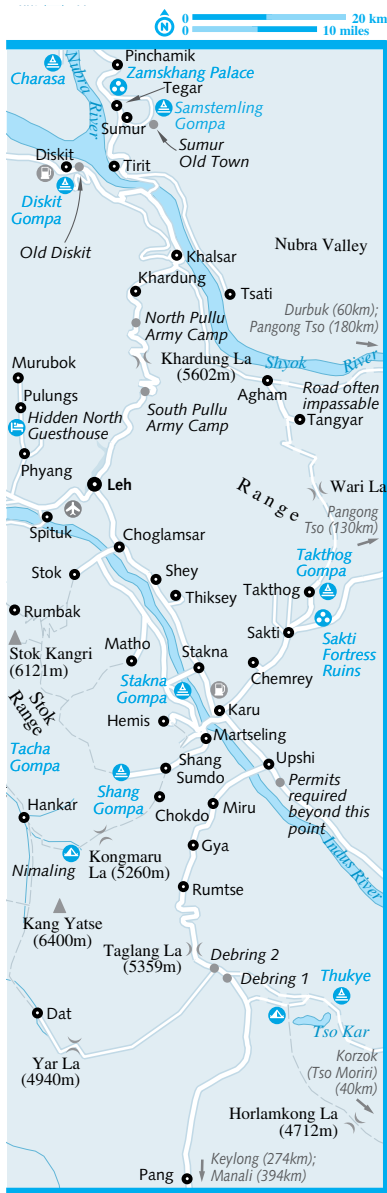

Across from the palace's base, 350-year-old Stok Abagon (☎9906988325; suggested donation ₹20), is the decrepit former home of the royal physician. Calling it's unlit old kitchen and storeroom a 'museum' is a serious overstatement, but the fun of a visit is simply getting in and meeting the wizened old lady key-keeper. Bring a torch.

Around Leh

Stok's peaceful main lane winds up past whitewashed farmhouses, crumbling old stupas and a new seated Buddha statue. After 1.4km it bypasses the modest Stok Gompa, where royal oracles make predictions about the future during Stok's important

Guru Tse-Chu festival (☺ Feb/Mar). Another kilometre south, buses from Leh terminate at a pair of simple food shacks known as the trekking point. Three homestays near here cater to late-arriving hikers. Ten minutes' walk upstream from here on the path towards Rumbak, the village's last riverside house is Gyalpo Homestay (☎9797456379; ₹ per person incl full-board ₹800), simple but very authentic with wall murals and a full-blown Ladakhi kitchen.

Matho

Matho Gumpa (☎01982-246085; admission ₹50; ☀9am-6pm) is a large Sakya-Buddhist monastery perched on a colourfully stratified ridge above Matho village. Incomparable views from here encompass a vast swathe of the mountain-backed Indus Valley, from emerald-green field patchworks to areas of sandy desert. The monastery itself is attractive, but most of the early-15th-century structure has been replaced and the top-floor museum is only one room. A thangka restoration workshop opens sporadically. During the monastery's famous Matho Nagrang festival (Matho; ☀Feb-Mar), a pair of monk-oracles performs daring physical challenges while effectively blindfolded by mop-wigs, 'seeing' only through the fearsome 'eyes' painted on their chests. They also engage in ritual acts of self-mutilation and make predictions for the coming year.

Stakna

Small but visually impressive, Stakna Gumpa (admission ₹30; ☀8am-7pm) rises like an apparition out of the Indus Valley floor. Off the gumpa's small central courtyard, four rooms have vivid new Tantric murals. Behind the main prayer hall, sub-shrines retain 400-year-old sandalwood statues, original frescoes and statuettes of the Bhutanese lamas who founded the monastery in 1618. From the Leh-Thiksey road (Km449), the complex is a 1.7km drive, half that on foot), crossing the Indus on a narrow suspension bridge decked with prayer flags.

Shey

Once one of Ladakh's royal capitals, Shey is an attractive, pond-dappled oasis from which rises a central dry rocky ridge, inscribed with roadside Buddha carvings (Km459). Along the rising ridge-top, a series of fortress ruins bracket the three-storey, 17th-century Naropa Royal Palace, whose wholesale reconstruction is nearing completion. The palace temple contains a highly revered 7.5m-tall gilded-copper Buddha, originally installed in 1645. The upper door opens to his inscrutably smirking face.

Experienced teachers are in demand for volunteer work at Druk White Lotus School (www.dwls.org).

LEH–MANALI

Utterly beautiful but exhaustingly spine-jangling, this is a ride you won't forget. The Upshi–Keylong section crosses four passes over 4900m, and then there's the infamously unpredictable Rohtang La Pass before Manali. Although the road is 'normally' open from June to late September, unseasonable snow or major landslides can close it for days (or weeks). BCM (www.bcmtouring.com), LAHDC (<http://leh.nic.in>) and High Road (<http://vistet.wordpress.com/>) report the road's current status.

Transport Options

Bus & Minibus The cheapest option is taking the 5am HRTC bus to Keylong (₹525, 12 hours) then changing there. Buy tickets from the driver the afternoon before. To identify the bus, spot its HP42 number plate.

Marginally more comfortable HPTDC (Map p232; ☎9622374300; Fort Rd; ☀10am–1.30pm & 2.30–7pm) buses (₹2500, two days) leave every second day at 5am from outside J&K Bank (Ibex Rd). Prebook upstairs opposite Iceland Travel. The fare includes overnight accommodation at Keylong in rather cold tents.

Nonstop 11-seater Tempo minibuses depart from Zangsti Parking at around 1am (15 to 21 hours). Tickets cost ₹2000 through agencies, ₹1800 direct from Ladakh Maxicab Union (Map p228; ☎01982-253192). Book two days ahead for a decent seat.

Rental Jeeps Officially, charter jeeps making one or more overnight stops want at least ₹17,700. Asking around the Manali drivers' area of the bus station, many vehicles demanded ₹20,000 but with persistence we found a ₹12,000 deal.

Driving There's no petrol station for 365km between Karu and Tandi (8km south of Keylong). Driving northbound, the Rohtang Pass requires permits. On Tuesdays the pass is closed northbound for all private vehicles, including taxis.

Route Highlights

The Manali road heads south at Upshi (Km425) via Miru (Km410), a pretty village with a shattered fortress and numerous stupas. Beyond is a beautiful, narrow valley edged with serrated vertical mineral strata in alternating layers of vivid red purple and ferrous green. A millennium ago, Gya (Km398) was the capital of King Gyapacho's upper Ladakhi

Thiksey

Glorious Thiksey Gompa (☎01982-267011; www.thiksey-monastery.org; admission ₹30, video ₹100; ☀6am–1pm & 1.30–6pm, festival Oct/Nov) is one of Ladakh's biggest and most recognisable monasteries. Covering a large rocky outcrop with layered Tibetan-style buildings, it's a veritable monastic village incorporating shops, a school, a restaurant and a hotel. The main gompa starts with a prayer chamber containing a 14m-high Buddha whose expression is simultaneously peaceful, smirking and vaguely menacing. Smaller but much more obviously ancient is the Gonkhang and little rooftop library. A museum (Thiksey Gompa) hidden away beneath the monastery restaurant displays well-labelled Tantric artefacts including a wine-vessel made from a human skull. Notice the 10 weapons symbolically used to combat evil spirits.

Over 40 monks gather for morning chanted-prayers at 6am, lasting around two hours. It's a fascinating ceremony and visitors are welcome, but it's so popular that tourists often outnumber worshippers.

Pedestrian access is a steep climb from near Km455. By car it's a 1.5km loop starting from Km454.2 where monastery-run Chamba Hotel (☎9418178481, 01982-267385; www.thiksay.org; NH1 Km454.2, Thiksey; s/d ₹2750/3630, old d ₹700) has an appealing restaurant with Ladakhi-style decor that makes a popular breakfast stop for group tours. The majority of rooms are new and unexpectedly plush with geyser-heated water. For great monastery views request rooms 401 or 402. A few simple, older rooms have ensuite squat toilets.

Hemis

The 1672 Hemis gompa (www.drukpa-hemis.org; admission ₹100; ☀8am–1pm & 2–6pm) is the monarchy before he joined forces with Tibetan Prince Skiddeyimagon (who shifted the power centre to Shey). Today it's a small, picturesque village across the river from which a steep 15-minute hike leads up to the 1000-year-old castle ruin now partly occupied by a lovable little gumpa. Rumtse (Km394), with its handful of homestays and camping spots, is the last green oasis and there are no further villages for 250km, just tiny seasonal camp-settlements. Numerous hairpins climb to Taglang La (Km364), which at 5328m is claimed to be the world's second-highest road pass (after Khardung La). Further south, the wide Moray Plains are edged with smooth peaks. At Km287, 10km beyond Pang, the road rises through a memorable, spiky-edged canyon before crossing Lachlung La (5060m) and Nakila La (4915m), descending the 21 switchbacks of the Gata Loops and trundling through two very photogenic valleys featuring Cappadocia-style erosion formations.

Southbound Advantages

If doing the trip southbound, you'll be better acclimatised for high-altitude sleeps (Pang or Sarchu); you could visit Tso Moriri en route; and, if there's a major landslide on the Rohtang Pass, you could 'escape' by walking two hours down to Marhi, a group of cafes jammed with day-trip tourist traffic from Manali.

Which Overnight Stop?

Overnighting in Sarchu handily breaks the Leh–Manali journey into two roughly equal sections, but the altitude (around 4000m) can cause problems. Note that there are essentially two Sarchus: cheap parachute tent-cafes at Km222, and upper-market tent camps on an attractive plateau at Km216–214. Keylong, Jispa (Km138–139) and Gemur (Km134) offer more comfortable accommodation at significantly lower altitudes, but Leh–Keylong is a very long day's ride.

To make Leh–Manali a three-day ride you might stop in Keylong and Pang (4634m), but Pang's parachute cafes are very basic and the unacclimatised might need Pang army camp's free oxygen if altitude sickness hits.

Other parachute cafes are available at Debring (Km343 & Km340), Km270, Bharat-pur (Km197), Zingzingbar (Km174), Km159.5 and Darcha Bridge (Km143).

spiritual centre of Ladakh's Drukpa Buddhists. The vibrant, wealthy complex is hidden in a high sharp valley behind curtains of craggy red rocks that look especially dramatic when the mountains behind are misty with low cloud. The main monastery's rectilinear exterior lacks the vertically stacked perfection of Chemrey or Thiksey, but inside, the fine central courtyard is full of colourfully detailed timbers. The monastery's extensive museum mixes precious religious treasures with spurious tiger skins, swords, a bra-shaped wooden cup-case and a stuffed 'vulture pup'. The main prayer hall has wobbly four-storey pillars, a garish 8m-high statue of Padmasambhava with hypnotic boggle eyes and there is plenty more to explore amid the atmospheric upper, rear shrines. There are great views from the lovely stream path beyond the school construction site.

The annual Tse-Chu festival (☺ Jul) sees three days of masked dances, and every 12th year (next in 2016) the festival culminates in the unfurling of Hemis' famous three-storey-high, pearl-encrusted thangka.

The nearest bus service is from Karu, 7km away by a road that partly follows two astonishingly long mani walls.

Chemrey & Takthog

Spectacularly viewed across barley fields and buckthorn bushes, Chemrey village is dominated by the beautifully proportioned Thekchhok Gumpa (admission ₹50; ☺ museum 8.30am–1pm & 2–6pm, festival Nov) covering a steep hillock with a maze of pathways and Tibetan buildings. Above the appealingly wobbly 17th-century prayer hall, the Lama Lhakhang has murals blackened to semi-invisibility by butter-lamp smoke. On the penultimate floor the Guru Lhakhang has contrastingly vivid colours and a

TREKKING IN LADAKH & ZANSKAR

Bargain value, thrillingly scenic treks can take you into magical roadless villages, through craggy gorges and across stark breathless mountain passes flapping with prayer flags.

Seasons

Trekking season is almost exclusively July and August, but in the Markha and Sham areas routes can be feasible from May to early October. Late August is usually preferable for trails with significant river crossings due to lower water levels. In February you could attempt the challenging Chadar ice-trek.

Preparation

Most trekking routes start around 3500m, often climbing above 5000m, so proper acclimatisation is essential to avoid Acute Mountain Sickness (AMS). You could acclimatise with 'baby' treks or by adding extra (if less interesting) days to the core treks, for instance starting from Lamayuru, Spituk or Martselang rather than Hinju/Photoksar, Zingchen or Shang Sumdo.

- ✦ Consider pre-booking a jeep transfer back from your finishing point.
- ✦ Carry a walking stick and backed sandals for wading rivers.
- ✦ Water-filtering bottles are very helpful.

Horses Treks

At these altitudes, carrying heavy packs is much more exhausting than many anticipate. For wilder routes, engaging packhorses reduces the load and the accompanying horseman can often double as a guide. Agencies will very happily arrange all-inclusive packages with horses, guides, food and (often old) camping gear. If you're self-sufficient and patient it's often possible to find your own horseman from ₹400 to ₹700 per horse per day. Note that you'll generally need to engage a minimum of four horses, and pay for any extra days needed for them to return to their next starting point. During harvest season (August) availability drops and prices rise.

Homestay Treks

Almost all rural villages along well-trodden trekking routes offer very simple but wonderfully authentic homestays. In Zanskar/Markha Valley the cost is fixed at ₹500/800 per head including simple meals that are often taken in the traditional family kitchen where pots and pans are proudly displayed above the Aga-style winter stove. Mudbrick rooms generally have rugs, blankets and solar-battery electric lamps.

Smaller villages do occasionally run out of homestay beds, but even then you can usually find floor space in the kitchen or dining room. Bigger villages such as Rumbak, Hinju and 3m-high golden Padmasambhava statue encrusted with turquoise ornamentation.

The monastery access lane starts from near Km7.3 on the Karu-Pangong road. At Km10.4, a paved side-lane leads through Sakti, a spread-out village of gently terraced fields, waterlogged meadows and dry-stone walls. The lane skirts Sakti's shattered stone fortress ruins, and after nearly 5km, passes beside Takthog (Dakthok) Gompa (donation appropriate; ☺ festival Jul), the region's only Nyingmapa monastery. The name Takthog ('stone roof') refers to a pair of small but highly revered and smoke-blackened cave-shrines in which the great 8th-century sage Padmasambhava reputedly meditated.

Markha Valley & Rumbak

Ladakh's most celebrated trekking routes follow a comparatively straight-forward yet scenically glorious route through the Markha Valley then over the breathless but walk-up Kongmaru La (5260m). Starting from Chiling/Kaya, as far as Hankar you'll find villages in barley-field oases every two or three hours, contrasting very photogenically with the stark, dry, spikily up-

Skiu/Kaya can generally handle all comers, but they work on a rota system so sometimes you'll find one homestay jammed full while others remain entirely empty.

You might also find seasonal parachute cafes, so named because they are tents made from old army parachutes, these provide tea and simple snacks and sometimes offer very basic lodging.

Having an experienced local guide is not just useful for route finding but also for making social interactions more meaningful at homestays. With a couple of days' notice you can engage a guide through Hemis National Park Guide Service (Map p232; ☎9906975427; hemis_npark@yahoo.co.in; Hemis Complex, 1st fl, Unit 11, Leh; ☀10am-6pm). Pay ₹1200 per day including food, plus necessary travel expenses.

turned strata all around them. Highlights include tiny Tacha Gompa, 25 minutes before Umlung (Umblung) and the shattered fortress ruin at Upper Hankar. Both are perched improbably atop razor-sharp ridges.

For now, there is no road in the valley, so absolutely zero traffic, but you'd better hurry. A new Zanskar River bridge 4km south of Chiling was completed in late 2014...so before long 'progress' will likely be bulldozed to the timeless Markha hamlets.

Doing the whole three-to-seven-day route is perfectly feasible without carrying sleeping bags, tents or significant provisions. That's thanks to homestays (₹800 per person including dinner, breakfast and an egg-potato-chapati packed lunch) in virtually every settlement plus a ₹1000 tent-stay camp (similar deal) at Nimaling, the freezing-nights 'base camp' for the Kongmaru La. In season and good weather, finding the route is usually easy without a guide – just follow the donkey droppings. Unless water levels are very high, there are only two unbridged river crossings (four if starting from Zingchen), but those can be calf deep so carry a spare pair of backed sandals for wading. If there's even a hint of cloud on the high passes, crossing them without a guide is very unwise.

Assuming you drive to the trailhead from Leh, visiting fascinating Chiling en route, and have a car waiting for you at Shang Sumdo, reasonably fit hikers should budget on four days of roughly seven-hour walks, sleeping at Sara/Nakdeng, Hankar and Nimaling. For shorter sections take five or six days and stop at Ski, Markha, Um-lung/Hankar and Nimaling plus, perhaps, Chokdo to break up the long last-day descent. Incoming jeeps sometimes wait for passengers at Shang Sumdo but otherwise the only public transport is an 8am bus on Mondays and Thursdays (nearest alternative Karu).

As the first two days have only gentle inclines, the Markha Trek helps you acclimatise as you go. Still, don't start too soon after arrival in Ladakh! If you're well acclimatised, you could add two or three beautiful extra days by driving from Leh to Zingchen, sleeping at the single lonely (often packed) homestay at Yurutse (three to four hours' walk from Zingchen), then crossing the Ganda La (4920m) to Shingo (six to seven hours), from which Ski is around another three hours.

Yurutse and the entire Markha Valley falls within the Hemis National Park (camping per person per day ₹20), for which the modest park fees are usually collected at Shang Sumdo or Stok trekking point. Also within the park is Rumbak, a magical village with an unusually close-packed concentration of traditional Ladakhi houses. You might stay in Rumbak before scaling 6121m Stok Kangri. Rumbak to Stok village is a long day's trek across a 4900m pass, but Rumbak-Zingchen is a contrastingly easy stroll taking less than three hours (two river fords en route).

Nubra Valley

The deep cut Shyok and Nubra River Valleys (permit required) offer tremendous yet accessible scenery with green oasis villages surrounded by thrillingly stark scree slopes, boulder fields and harsh arid mountains. There are sand dunes, monasteries, a ruined palace and – at Turtuk – a whole different culture (Balti) to discover.

i Getting There & Around

By public transport start out with a shared jeep to Diskit then change. However, for photo stops and to add side excursions, it's well worth visiting from Leh by chartered jeep, at least one way. Leh-Diskit-Hunder one-way/two-day/three-day return costs from ₹4873/7279/9700 per vehicle. Leh-Turtuk one-way/three-day/four-day return costs ₹7880/12,515/14,930. Add Tegar/Sumur for around ₹1500.

While most visitors go out and back via Khardung, a narrow road across the remote Wari La is now partly asphalted and allows a loop returning via pretty Tangyar to Takthog. Check conditions before departing: fords can prove tough to cross when water levels are high. A second possibility, the Khalsar-Durbuk route to Pangong Tso proved impassable due to an unbridged river when we attempted it.

Leh to Diskit

The Nubra road zigzags up stark bare-rock mountains for around 1½ hours to Khardung La (Km39), which at 5602m is claimed, albeit disputably, to be the world's highest motorable pass. Descending again, look for marmot and dzo (yak-cow mix-breeds) around the pretty pond known rather misleadingly as Tsolding Buddha Park (Km50.5). Permits and passports are checked at both South and North Pallu Army Camps (Km24 and Km53) and there are several basic shop-cafes and homestays in Khardung village (Km71), where the scenery starts to take on a certain Grand Canyon grandeur. There are splendid Shyok Valley views at Km86 with the green fields of Tsati village far below fading at their peripheries into the grey white river sands. There are more snack shacks at Khalsar (Km95).

Diskit

ELEV 3144M

Diskit is centred on a brash bazaar street that leads down from the area's only bus/taxi station, perpendicular to the Leh-Turtuk road. From the bottom of the bazaar, swing right past the Spangla Guesthouse to find an altogether softer Diskit along a lane that leads 1.5km to an area of stupas, a big mani wall, and a crumbling old Ladakhi mansion, rejoining the main road just beyond Sunrise Guest House. Above this latter junction, a 2km spaghetti of hairpins winds up to the 17th-century Diskit Gompa (Ganden Tashi Chosling Gompa; admission ₹30; ☉7am-noon & 1-7pm), a brilliant jumble of Tibetan-style box buildings piled higgledy-piggledy up a steep rocky peak that ends in a toe-curlingly vertical chasm. At the back, right-hand corner of the monastery's gonkhang (guardian spirits' temple), a white six-armed deity statue clasps a withered forearm and human scalp, supposedly body-parts of a Mongol warrior who mysteriously dropped dead when attempting to seize the monastery. The gompa entry fee includes access to a gigantic (32m) full-colour Statue of Chamba (Maitreya-Buddha) on an intermediate hill, formally inaugurated by the Dalai Lama in July 2010.

Sleeping & Eating

Of six accommodation options in the bazaar area, Sand Dune Hotel (☎ 01980-220022, 9419568208; r ₹400-900) has the loveliest garden – including apricot trees and hop vines – but rooms are slightly fresher in the Spangla Guesthouse (☎ 01980-220058; r with cold/hot shower ₹700/1200, d/tr without bathroom ₹500/600). Near the base of the gompa access lane, facing the more conspicuous Olthang Hotel is the excellent-value stream-serenaded Kharyok Guesthouse (☎ 9469176131, 01980-220050; r with/without TV ₹900/700). Very nearby, the old faithful Sunrise Guesthouse (☎ 9469261853; r with/without bathroom ₹500/300; ☺ year-round) has Diskit's cheapest rooms – musty but OK – along with ensuite options sharing a rough balcony with good gompa views.

Getting There & Away

Shared jeeps to/from Leh's zabakhana (₹400, 4½ hours) leave when full. Departures from Diskit bus station are mostly 6.45am to around 9am. Overloaded minibuses also depart early afternoon to virtually every main Nubra village (including Turtuk 2.30pm and Panamik 3pm) returning early morning. By charter jeep Turtuk costs ₹3159/4107 one-way/return if the Kafkaesque Nubra Taxi Union (☎ 9469727786, 220339) can be bothered to assign you a driver. A return taxi to Diskit Gompa/Tegar costs ₹300/1800.

Hunder (Hundur)

Lost in greenery and closely backed by soaring valley cliffs, Hunder village is a popular overnight stop 10km from Diskit. Hunder's big draw, especially for domestic visitors, is the chance to ride Bactrian camels (per 15min/hr ₹200/600) through a series of photogenic sand dunes. Host camels are reputedly offspring of animals that plied the Ladakh–Xinjiang caravans up until the closure of the India–China border in the 1940s. Hunder's dunes aren't exactly Sahara-sized, but the landscape can prove disorientating so, if attempting to walk through them back to Diskit, bring plenty of water, stick relatively near to the road and beware following dead-end camel tracks into impenetrable thorn thickets.

NUBRA NAMES

The camel-mounting point is around 600m southeast of the army camp. That's nearly 3km from old Hunder where a precarious little ridgetop fort ruin rises high above the main road near the modest gompa.

With advance planning there are some interesting trekking routes, including a week-long hike to Phyang near Leh.

Sleeping & Eating

Hunder has nearly 20 garden guesthouses plus nearly a dozen 'luxury' camps charging around ₹4000 full-board in bedded tents.

Arrange meals with your accommodation or eat at the somewhat hidden Himalayan Guest House (mains ₹80-200, thali/rice ₹150/40), which also attempts pasta and sandwiches.

Goba Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9469534590, 01980-200021; d with/without bathroom ₹700/800) Surveying a garden of dahlias and apple trees, four new rooms are relatively smart. Four more in the older house are dated, but rooms 8 (₹800) and 9 (₹700) have wraparound windows and share a coveted view terrace.

Nepali chefs prepare above-average food served up in a bland dining room. Obliging staff, soothing setting.

Mehreen Guesthouse

HOMESTAY $

(☎ 9469172690; beds ₹150) One of Hunder's last un-reconstructed genuine family homestays, Mehreen is great value with a lovely host family and just two rooms (a double and a quad). Find it by following the mani wall behind Karma Inn.

Nubra Organic Retreat BEDDED TENTS $$
(☎ 9469176076, 01980-200118; www.nubraorganicretreat.com; s/d/tr ₹3000/3200/4000, with meals ₹3900/4600/6500) The prettiest of Hunder's dozen tent camps, the grounds here are a web of trickling streams and labelled vegetable plots with hammocks and wicker chairs dangling from contorted old apricot trees. Ensuite tents have hot showers and pebble toilet surrounds.

Karma Inn HOTEL $$
(☎ 9419612342, 01980-221042; www.hotelkarmainn.com; s/d/tr ₹2820/2916/3985; ☺ Apr–mid-Oct; ☺) This is the closest Hunder comes to a 'real' hotel; the attraction here is more the balcony or bay-window views and pleasant lawn than the large, adequate if unadorned rooms. Basic toiletries provided. Lobby wi-fi works occasionally.

Turtuk

The turbulent Shyok valley between Hunder and Turtuk is 80km of scenic magnificence, marred only very occasionally by military installations. The grand raw-rock valley briefly narrows near tiny Changmar, the western limit of Ladakhi-Buddhist culture. Thereafter, the rare green splashes of village are culturally and linguistically Muslim-Balti. The main centres of both Turtuk and less visited Bogdang villages are raised patchworks of fields and houses on terrace ledges above the main road. Summer sees locals carting huge bundles of barley on their backs between the apricot trees. Upper Turtuk has unforgettable views towards serrated high peaks in Pakistan: the front line is only 7km away. Indeed Turtuk itself was in Pakistan until the 1971 war.

Although there are other shortcuts, on arrival by minibus you'd be advised to get off at the 'bus stop' and follow the side river for a five-minute walk upstream to a suspension bridge. Turtuk Youl, a section of town to the right past the Apolee Guesthouse (☎ 9469771666, 01980-248105; Turtuk Youl; s/d incl half board ₹500/600), has the oldest knot of houses, including a small palace (khar) building beside friendly Balti Residency (☎ 9797330141, 01980-248024; khaliq.khan777@gmail.com; Turtuk Youl; d/tr ₹400/550). However, the main area, Turtuk Farol, is back across the suspension bridge. Turtuk Farol has the better views and most of the best accommodation, including travellers' favourite Kharmang Guest House (☎ Salim 01980-248104; s/d full board ₹1500/2400, without bathroom ₹500/600), with convivial communal sitting area and a 360-degree panoramic rooftop view. It is building a few ensuite rooms too. Other good, simple options include K2 (☎ 01980-248126; Turtuk Farol; r per person ₹200, breakfast/dinner ₹100/150) at the base of the central pond-pool, and fresh, clean Issu Homestay (☎ 01980-248039; Turtuk Farol; per person incl 2 meals ₹350) at Turtuk Farol's eastern edge. Tent-beds at Kashmiri Homestay (☎ Heydar 01980-248117; Turtuk Farol; house/tent dm incl half board ₹350/250) are Turtuk's cheapest option.

i Getting There & Away

Shared jeeps (₹200, three hours) and overloaded minibuses (₹100, four hours) leave Turtuk at 6am for Diskit (returning 2.30pm) on a mostly well-paved lane. Bring spare permit photocopies.

Sumur, Tegar & Panamik

The Nubra River proper descends towards the Shyok from the heavily disputed Siachen Glacier, the world's highest battleground (between India and Pakistan). The upper section follows what is reputedly one of Ladakh's most spectacular mountain valleys. However, foreigners can't visit this area as standard Nubra permits only allow travel as far as Hargam Bridge. That's just after diffuse Panamik (Km44) with its pitifully underwhelming hot spring.

Much more interesting is Tegar (Tiger) village, where the unguarded three-storey shell of Zamskhang Palace (Km25) sits above the eerie rubble of Nubra's former royal citadel (Km25). Hidden within Tegar village Zimskang Museum (donation ₹50; ☺ 4-9pm by request) is an historic house, found by descending a path alongside chortens and a mani wall from the ancient little Manekhang Gompa/Angchuk Restaurant to the last unmarked wooden door on the left. Some 1.5km above the palace, where Tegar and Sumur back lanes merge, there are lovely panoramas from the parking area at colourful, extensively rebuilt Samstemling Gompa (donation appropriate; ☺ 6am-6pm).

Sumur has some charming back lanes and, around 2km southwest, its very own sand dunes with camel rides (per 15min ₹150) undercut the Hunder competition. It's home to the Silk Route Festival (www.heritagehimalaya.org; Sumur; ☀️ 23rd-25th Jun), celebrating Nubra's archery, food and camel-culture.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Tegar has two midrange hotels, Panamik and Sumur have half a dozen guesthouses each. Sumur also has several tent camps and a trio of very basic cafes at the main junction.

K,Sar Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

Excellent value at walk-in rates.

Yarab Tso

Inside, the lurid pink-trim and somewhat institutional corridors are less appealing and room standards vary significantly.

There's a traditional Ladakhi kitchen and four luxury tent-rooms really are luxurious.

📍 Getting There & Away

Buses to Diskit depart between 8am and 8.30am. A shared taxi direct to Leh leaves 7.30am most mornings.

Pangong Tso

Stretching around 150km (with the eastern third in China), this mesmerising lake plays artist with a surreal palette of vivid blues. These contrast magically with the colourful mineral swirls of the starkly arid, snow-brushed surrounding mountains. The scene is striking for the almost total lack of habitation along shores that can look almost Caribbean. Visitor activities don't stretch much beyond oggling the ever changing lake-scapes, but one 'sight' is a sand spit nicknamed 'Shooting Point' as it was used as a film set for the 2009 Bollywood hit The Three Idiots.

The jeep safari from Leh is a joy in itself – scenically magnificent and constantly varied with serrated peaks, trickling streams, horse meadows, reflective ponds, drifting sands and a 5369m pass. However, it's a tiring drive and doing the return in one day is masochism. Ideally stay at least one night in Spangmik or Man, then drive on unpaved lakeside trails to end-of-the-world Merak (10km beyond Man). It's a beautiful ride but get back early as the route can become impassable by mid-afternoon when water levels rise dramatically in the river-fords.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Note that the area has no phone or internet connection so where contacts are given they're for Leh agencies. Few guests stay more than one night so there's almost always a vacancy if you arrive by early afternoon, but don't leave it too late.

🛏 Lukung

Lukung isn't a village but a series of parachute cafes. Most are there to feed day trippers but some offer ₹200 bed spaces. There's also one very overpriced 'Inn' and two fair-value bedded tent camps. Around 2km further are a few more lunch shacks and Highland Camp (walk-in s/d from ₹800/1500), where ensuite tents with metal camp-beds look straight out across the lake (and road).

Spangmik

Pretty Spangmik is Pangong's most popular accommodation spot. A victim of its own success, there are now some 20 summer tent camps (incl full board ₹3000-4000) marling the once-picturesque, dry-stone-walled meadows. Although it's crowded, the setting is still idyllic. Each of the dozen homesteads doubles as a basic homestay, charging around ₹200 per person for crammed bed spaces. Only two hotel-like options have full ensuite-bathrooms. Ser Bhum Tso Resort (☎9419176660; serbhumsotso@gmail.com; d rack-rate/walk-in ₹5400/3500), with its good mattresses and picture windows, is right in central Spangmik. The somewhat more indulgent pine-fresh bungalows of Changla Queen (☎99419818253; bungalow incl half-board ₹3500) are well appointed, but suffer from an isolated, arid location 2km west, set way back from the Shooting Point.

Man

Man is quieter but more diffuse than Spangmik, and set slightly further back from the lake. There are two pleasant luxury tent camps (around ₹4000) and five basic homestays, of which our favourite is Yokma (bed/breakfast/dinner ₹250/100/150) with views from a parachute sitting area.

Getting There & Away

Permits are required. One-/two-day jeep tours from Leh cost ₹6811/8108 to Spangmik, or ₹7867/9636 to Man and Merak. For a little more money add side trips to Chemrey and Takthog and request a stop around halfway at the colourful rock-cleft Tangtse Gumpa, which is a 10-minute walk on a footpath that starts 200m beyond the booth outside Tangtse, where you'll stop anyway to pay the ₹10 Pangong 'ticket'. Consider making these stops on the way back towards Leh so that outbound you get a wider choice of accommodation.

Foreigners may not continue to Chushul nor to fabled Hanle.

Tso Moriri Loop

ELEV 4595M (LAKE)

The following two- or three-day jeep-loop from Leh can also be made as a scenic diversion en route to Manali, but for permit reasons it's only possible southbound. The highlights are two huge upland lakes, possible nomad-encounters and bird-watching opportunities. You'll find far fewer visitors here than at Pangong, but the journey from Leh is considerably longer yet less scenically varied than the glorious Leh-Pangong trip.

On the first day out of Leh you'll pass a handful of attractive villages, including Likche (Km69) and Himya (Km80). Neither have any facilities and most jeep-tours whizz straight past, stopping instead to eat at one of the ramshackle eateries above Chumathang's unappetising, garbage-strewn hot-springs area. Far nicer Chumathang village is hidden from the road but worth the 2km detour to admire panoramic views from its gompa.

At Mahe Bridge, foreigners must show their permits. Indian nationals have to pay a nature reserve charge here (₹20 per day's intended stay) but for foreigners that's already included in their permits' environmental fee. Apart from Sumdo hamlet, with its basic roadside cafe-guesthouse, there's no further habitation till Tso Moriri. However, in late July you're likely to encounter Chang Pa nomads shearing sheep after smaller Tso Kiagar.

Tso Moriri is a giant high-altitude lake whose main attraction is the magical ever-changing series of reflections in its crystal-clear waters. The cloudscapes, snow-topped bald peaks and geological swirls are hypnotic. The scene is best before sunset from a viewpoint knoll around 2km south of tatty little Korzok, Tso Moriri's only settlement.

Korzok has half a dozen very simple mat-on-floor homestay-guesthouses, most named for local birds. Our current favourite is the super-friendly Goose (Korzok; r per person without/with food ₹200/350), which has the luxury of an indoor toilet.

Korzok also has two small hotels. Though still partly unfinished, the new Hotel Lake View (☎9419345362, 9469457025; tso-moririhotellakeview@gmail.com; Korzok; rack rate s/d ₹2720/3500, walk-in r without/with view ₹1500/2000; ☀May-mid-Oct) is marginally the more comfortable. The other, with its dingy corridor but wide lake-view common verandah, is run by Nomadic Life (☎9419178984; www.nomadiclifecamp.com; Korzok; d ₹1500-2000, half board ₹2500-3000), which also has one of the settlement's four summer camps of bedded tents. Prices are highly dependent upon demand.

Tso Moriri is sometimes touted to ornithologists as a place for spotting super-rare black-necked cranes, though you're probably more likely to see those around the salt-whitened marshes that front Tso Kar. Three mating pairs have been spotted within binocular range of the Tsokar Resort (☎9622925002, 9906060654; tsokarresort@yahoo.com; s/d ₹2000/2600) where the newest six ensuite rooms face the birds' early-July breeding ground. Its little restaurant, along with the next-door Lotus Camp (☎9419819078; chotsering100@yahoo.com; Thukye; d half board ₹3000; ☀May-early Sep), represent virtually all the commercial activity in the tiny settlement of Thukye, which is less village than a small gompa and a labyrinth of stone-walled sheep-pens, used as a winter retreat for Chang Pa nomads.

From Thukye, 18km of bouncy, partly asphalted lane lead to South Debring parachute cafe on the Manali-Leh highway. Some groups trek between Korzok and Tso Kar in around five days by a somewhat different route. Before you join such an expedition be aware that you'll cross several very high passes, be subjected to very cold nights, even midsummer, and that there are essentially no villages en route to add interest or shelter to the trip.

i Getting There & Away

A two-day jeep charter looping Leh-Korzok-Thukye then returning to Leh across Taglang La costs ₹11,719/12,985 by Sumo/Innova. A three-day, one-way excursion doing the same but then continuing south to Keylong/Manali costs from ₹22,347/26,223. The only public bus runs to Korzok (₹310), leaving Leh at 6.30am on the 10th, 20th and 30th of each month, returning next morning, but there are no buses to Thukye.

Leh to Kargil

There are many fascinating sights close to the Leh-Srinagar road, but hopping by very limited public transport is slow going: other than Leh-Kargil and Leh-Srinagar through buses, the only options west from Khalsi are Leh-Dha buses (daily) and four other weekly services to Chiktan or Fokha. Lamayuru and Khalsi both have a couple of taxis but tracking them down is hit-and-miss. It makes great sense to get a group together in Leh and arrange a shared jeep with side trips at least as far as Mulbekh/Shargol, from where there are morning/afternoon buses to Kargil.

If you're driving, don't miss short diversions to Basgo and Alchi and consider canyonland side trips to Chiling (30km) and/or Wanla-Honupatta.

The widest selection of accommodation is in Likir, Alchi and Lamayuru, but you'll also find homestays in all trekking villages. For something special there are boutique hotels at Nimmu and Nurla. The bigger village of Khalsi has shops and the Samyas Garden Restaurant (Khalsi; mains ₹80-150, rice/thali/tea ₹60/100/15; ☀7.30am-10pm), an unexpectedly pleasant oasis handily placed right beside its bazaar and bus stand.

Phyang

Pretty Phyang village is an emerald expanse of layered, tree-hemmed barley fields, 40 minutes' drive from Leh in the next parallel valley west. Follow the idyllic lane north from Phyang's large, recently restored gompa to find Hidden North Guest House (☎01982-226007; www.hiddennorth.com; Phyang Tsakma; ₹1000, without bathroom ₹600-800) where a young Ladakhi-Italian family have created a delightfully relaxing getaway. Panoramic views encompass a spiky mountain horizon, meals are available and guided treks get you into accessible yet little-known corners of Ladakh. From Leh the 9am 'teachers' bus' or 5pm J&K SRTC Pulungs-bound bus get you very close.

Nimmu & Chiling

If you just drive through on the main Leh highway, Nimmu seems a scrappy place. But away from the road it's very pretty. Take the lane signed Chamba Gompa for around 300m to find an (unmarked) former palace-mansion that belonged to cousins of the Ladakhi royals. Left decrepit for decades, it's now being converted into Nimmu House (☎8447757518; http://ladakh.nimmu-house.com; Nimmu; s/d incl full board ₹8880/9600), a super-stylish 12-room heritage boutique hotel and massage-spa incorporating many remnants of the atmospheric original interior. There are also five design-book safari-size tent-rooms set in the idyllic orchard garden.

A couple of kilometres south of Nimmu are the arrival points for rafting groups who come splashing down the beautiful River Zanskar through a feast of stark, colourful geology. The same photogenic canyons can be enjoyed by road too if you drive towards Chiling, some 30km south.

At first glance tiny Chiling seems little more than a teahouse (Km28.6). But hidden above, the village proper is a fascinating place, set on a fertile green plateau, more easily accessed from a low-profile path starting at Km27.9. Chiling village was founded by the families of Nepali copper craftsmen. They originally arrived in Ladakh to build Shey Palace's classic Buddha statue and never went home. The handicraft continues, with roughly turned-out heart-shaped spoons (around ₹250) made at photogenically antiquated little forges in a timeless area of old mudbrick buildings and giant trees. Several families here offer homestays.

If you're trekking into the Markha Valley, note that the bridge is 4km further south along a dusty sun-blasted road.

Basgo & Ney

Rising above Basgo village on a surreal collection of eroded earthen pinnacles are remnant stubs of once-great citadel walls, along with a largely derelict mud-walled palace, dating from when Basgo was a capital of lower Ladakh. It's worth coming just for the unusual views, but you can also visit two splendid one-room temples (admission per temple ₹30), each containing a two-storey seated Maitreya statue.

Driving 6km north into the verdant oasis village of Ney, you'll spy the gleaming golden form of a new giant Buddha Statue. It's claimed to be nearly 26m tall, though that includes the three-storey building that forms his 'stool'.

Sham (Likir, Yangthang, Hemis Shukpachan & Timishgan)

📞01982

The three-to-four day 'Sham baby trek' between Likir and Timishgan (Tingmosgan, Temisgam) is popularly used as a warm-up hike. With ample homestays along the way, you don't need to carry any camping equipment. Scenery is stark and arid with some grand Nevada-style crescendos but there's minimal shade, and much of the route follows a paved lane. The only roadless section is the short section from Hemis Shukpachan over two minor 3830m passes to Ang.

Starting-point Likir has seven guesthouses in the lower village plus the appealing Hotel Lhukhil (📞9419892278, 9419892237; www.hotelhukhil.com; dm/d ₹500/1500; ☀️May-Sep), styled like a Chinese temple and offering a range of yoga and meditation retreats and well-maintained ensuite rooms. There are three further atmospheric, inexpensive homestays 4km further north behind Likir's memorable mostly-15th-century gompa complex (☀️8am-1pm & 2-6pm), whose trademark is the large gilded 20th-century Maitreya-Buddha statue.

Plenty more homestays are available in the timeless intermediate villages of Yangthang and Hemis Shukpachan, beyond which Timishgan, a former co-capital of 14th-century lower Ladakh, has a dozen widely spread homestays supplemented by the comfortable, colourfully neo-traditional Namra Hotel (📞01982-229033, 9419178324; www.namrahotel.com; s/d/ste ₹2915/3465/4785, with half-board ₹4015/4565/5885) set in beautiful rustic gardens.

Timishgan, Likir Gompa and Hemis Shukpachan all have bus services from Leh.

Alchi

This rural village has become a regional tourism magnet thanks to the world famous Choskhor Temple Complex (foreigner/Indian ₹50/20; ☀️8am-1pm & 2-6pm), founded in the 11th century by 'Great Translator' Lotsava Ringchen Zangpo. The four main temple buildings are small and unobtrusive but they contain original interior murals that are considered the crowning glory of Ladakh's Indo-Tibetan art. Visits (no photography allowed) start with Sumrtsek Temple fronted by a wooden porch whose carving style is very much Indian rather than Tibetan. Inside, murals cover all three levels with hundreds of little Buddhas. Oversized wooden statues of Maitreya, Manjushri and Avalokitesvara burst their heads through into the inaccessible upper storey. Next along, Vairocana Temple is impressive for its mandalas - as antique murals in the rear chamber, as contemporary exercises in coloured sand at the front. In the Lotsa Temple, Lotsava Ringchen Zangpo himself appears as the slightly reptilian figure to the left behind the central Buddha cabinet. Beneath him, a row of comical-faced figures underline the importance of taking nothing too seriously. The attached Manjushri Temple enshrines a joyfully colourful four-sided statue of Manjushri (Buddha of Wisdom). The temple complex is reached by an obvious pedestrian lane lined by guesthouses, souvenir peddlers and the Golden Oriole (mains ₹90-200, pizza ₹200-400, rice ₹50; ☀ 7am-8pm Jul-Sep), combining 'German' bakery, multi-cuisine restaurant and (rarely functioning) internet cafe.

There are a dozen accommodation options. Beside the temple complex, Heritage Home (☎ 9419811535, 01982-227125; www.hotelheritagealchi.com; s/d ₹1500/1750, half board ₹2150/2550) is a pleasant midrange choice though it's not as comfortable as the idyllic garden frontage might suggest. Hidden in the apricot orchard behind, the ultra-simple Dragung Homestay (☎ 9491838309; dm/s/d ₹200/350/700) is a bargain if you don't mind an outdoor walk to the bathroom.

Alchi Resort (☎ 9419218636; www.alchiresort.tripod.com; s/d ₹1600/2468, walk-in r from ₹1000) is a collection of comfortable white-washed duplex cottages ranged around apple trees and the gazebo of an enclosed garden area. Set amid flowers, 800m back towards Leh, friendly Choskor Guest House (☎ 9419826363; r ₹1800-2000, walk-in r ₹600-1000) comes complete with shrine room and sits beside the once-grand Lonpo House, formerly home to the Ladakhi King's local tax collector.

Central Alchi is 4km down a dead-end spur lane that leaves the Leh-Kargil road at Km370, immediately crossing a bridge over the Indus.

Uletokpo, Rizong & Nurla

An erosion-prone 6km side lane from Uletokpo village dead-ends at the photogenic 19th-century Rizong Gompa (admission by donation; ☀ 7am-1pm & 1.30-6pm), stepped handsomely up an amphitheatre of rocky cliff. A steep, sometimes treacherous footpath continues from there up to Yangthang.

Uletokpo has two 'luxury camps'. Uley Adventure Resort (☎ 01982-252453; http://uleresort.com; huts/cottages/ste incl full board ₹5500/8500/11,000) is a major accommodation and activities centre for Indian family tourists, but seems overpriced and if you just want to sleep, the super-stylish, hacienda-style Apricot Tree (☎ 9419866688, 01982-229525; www.theapricottreehotel.com; NH1 Km350, Nurla; s/d ₹4950/5500, incl half-board ₹6435/7150) at Nurla is far better value despite offering one of the most luxurious hotel experiences along the whole Leh-Srinagar route.

Dha, Chiktan & Batalik

Driving up the Indus Valley northwest from Khalsi, the scenery becomes increasingly impressive with stark rocky valley-walls contrasting with apricot- and walnut-orchard villages. Picturesque Skurbuchan village is topped by a rickety gompa-fort overlooking the Indus canyon. Scattered ancient petroglyphs are inscribed on brown, time-polished roadside rocks, helpfully signposted at the Domkhar Rock Art Sanctuary but also unmarked along the roadside such as at Km54.8.

The villages of Hanu Gongma, Biama (Beema), Dha, Garkone, Hardass and beautiful Darchiks are culturally notable for their Brokpa people (aka Drokpa or Dard), a unique 'Red Aryan' community sometimes speculated to have been descended from Alexander the Great's invasion force. Though Buddhism (and in places Islam) has partially overlaid their traditional Bon-based religion, a few older Brokpa people still wear pearly button ear decorations, floral headwear and traditional hats, with older women tying their hair in long multistranded braids reminiscent of knotted dreadlocks. Biama is developing a Brokpa interpretation centre.

Across the Indus from Biama, a well-paved road back to the NH1 crosses the Indus at Sanjak and passes beside the shattered yet impressive ruins of Razi Khar, a dramatic 16th-century palace-fortress 2km south of Chiktan.

The alternative route to Kargil runs through Darchiks, swinging south just before Batalik then climbing through a seemingly impossible mountain gully through photogenic Silmo village, crossing a pass above Lalung mudbrick village then descending past the small Muslim fertility shrine of Astana. The road winds down passing within 2km of Apati, in which hides a 5m Buddha rock-face carving. It's at the back of the village, reached by a newly stone-paved footpath that burrows 'through' a couple of older houses.

Sleeping & Eating

Dha's old traveller hangout is the pretty but very basic Skyabapa Guesthouse (☎ 9469535269; Dha; d ₹500) with outside dining beneath a giant grape vine. The friendly English-speaking manager makes jams and wine, and international volunteers sometimes stay to help. There are also homestays in Biama, while the region's only ensuite guest rooms are at a new hotel nearing completion in Darchhik. There is a selection of shops and very basic tea-stands in Sanjak.

i Getting There & Away

In principle, a good way to visit would be while driving the 'alternative' route between Khalsi and Kargil via Batalik. However, infuriating bureaucracy means that foreigners require two permits. You must apply in Leh for the Khalsi–Dha section but in Kargil for Batalik–Darchhik–Garkone. Agencies can organise the combination but it is often just easier to do one side or the other then exit via the road through Sanjak.

Leh–Kargil charter taxis via Dha and Batalik/Chiktan cost ₹9428/7586. The daily bus from Leh to 'Dha' actually drops passengers at a dislocated gateway from which Dha is still a 20-minute walk away through the apricot trees. The bus starts daily at 9am except Fridays, when it heads to Hanu Gongma instead. From Sanjak and Darchhik, shared taxis to Kargil run sporadically. Linking any of the settlements you'll essentially have to walk if you don't have your own vehicle.

Yapola Valley

Running south from Lamayuru is a recently improved road that will eventually lead to Zanskar. It links several relatively unspoilt villages that were 'trek-only' until the early 21st century. The biggest, Wanla, is worth a brief diversion if you're driving slowly along the Leh–Kargil road, to see its tiny medieval gompa (www.achiassociation.org; admission ₹20; ☀ dawn-dusk) perched on a knife-edge ridge above town. Flanked by tower remnants of a now-destroyed 14th-century fortress, the monastery has a carved porch reminiscent of Alchi's and its spookily dark prayer-chamber contains three large statues backed by ancient smoke-blackened murals and naive statuettes. Monks in a hut-chamber nearby keep the key.

At minuscule Phanjila a spur road diverges to appealing Hinju where homestays can arrange horses for the two-/three-day trek to Sumdha Do/Chiling, crossing the 4950m Konze La (strenuous). South of Phanjila, a newly improved road is being widened to and through the spectacular Yapola Gorge with its soaring rocky sides, spikey mountain vistas and colourful geological pyrotechnics. Beyond is the traditional, closely clumped village of Honupatta. The scenery remains glorious as you traverse the 4720m

Sisir La and descend to Photoksar. It's likely that jeeps will soon be able to drive as far as Nerak, but reaching Zanskar is still a multi-day trek.

Lamayuru

☎ 01982 / POP 700 / ELEV 3390M

Set among mountain-backed badlands, low-paced Lamayuru is one of Ladakh's most memorable villages and an ideal place to break the Kargil–Leh journey. Picturesque homes huddle around a crumbling central hilltop that's pitted with caves and topped by the ultra-photogenic Yungdrung Gompa (Lamayuru Monastery; admission ₹100). Behind glass within the gompa's main prayer hall is a tiny cave in which 11th-century mystic Naropa (AD 1016–1100) meditated. Before that, legend claims, this whole area had been the bottom of a deep lake whose waters receded miraculously thanks to the powerful prayers of Buddhist saint Arahāt Nimagung. Sculpted by time into curiously draped erosion patterns, the sands of that former lake bed now form 'moonland' landscapes at the roadside around 1km east of town.

New roads to Wanla, Hinju and Photoksar challenge Lamayuru's traditional role as a trekking trailhead, but if you're reliant on public transport, Lamayuru still makes a possible starting point for classic hiking routes to Chiling or Zanskar with packhorses sporadically available for hire.

i Getting There & Away

Buses stop only briefly in passing, and times can be plus or minus an hour:

Chiktan Departs around 2pm Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday.

Fokha via Shargol and Mulbekh Departs around 1.30pm Saturday.

Kargil Departs between 9am and 10am.

Leh Departs between 8.30am and 9.30am daily, plus around 11am four days a week.

Srinagar Early evening. Hopefully.

Lamayuru to Mulbekh

From Lamayuru, the NH1 road zigzags up towards Iguanodon-back spires that tower impressively over Fotu La (4147m). At Km281, a 12km spur road leads through memorable canyons to the very authentic village of Kanji (population 280). Little visited, except by occasional trekking groups, the village has a photogenic mini-citadel and three small gompas, including the minuscule one-room Chuchik-Zhal Temple (www.achiassociation.org; donation appropriate) containing three superb Alchi-style statues and two mandala murals. Konchok Trinley keeps the key.

All that most people usually see of Hansukot is the roadside tourist bungalow, but a rough side lane leads high up to the village passing the crumbling ruins of its shattered ancient fortress.

A comparatively wide, fertile valley extends as far as Khangral, where passports are checked beside the Chiktan-Sanjak-Dha turn-off. The NH1 then crosses the 3760m Namika La (Sky-Pillar Pass), named for the distinctive rocky outcrop that looks like an erupting tooth emerging through undulating elephant skin. A 15km descent brings you into the glorious Wakha Valley.

Wakha, Mulbekh & Shargol

The Wakha-Mulbekh Valley looks like a calm grass-green sea over which a vast tsunami of frothing red mountains is about to crash. It's breathtaking at sunset.

Mulbekh is best known for an 8m-high Maitreya-Buddha relief (NH1 Km243.3). That was carved over 1000 years ago into a fang of rock that's now right beside the road, its lower half shielded from view by the minuscule Chamba Gompa. Soaring above Mulbekh is the impregnable site of King Tashi Namgyal's 18th-century castle. Burnt during an 1835 raid, only two tower stubs remain but the site sports a small gompa and the valley views are symphonic. The 2.8km spaghetti of narrow access lane starts 100m west of Chamba Gompa opposite a red-roofed new refreshment-souvenir place.

The valley has plenty of old Ladakhi architecture including Rgyal Gompa, where tiny troglodyte hermit cells are built improbably into eroded pillars of composite rock, located 2km east of Wakha Police Station (NH1 Km245.8). Around 10km further west, Shargol has a tiny one-monk gompa built into a cliff-face, 2km off the NH1 (turn at Km235.5).

The area's best accommodation is Horizon Camp (☎ 9469045459; horizonladakhcamp@gmail.com; NH1 Km245, Wakha; s/d ₹2400/2650, walk-in d ₹1500-2000), an unusually fair-value bedded tent camp in a beautiful roadside flower garden, 150m from Wakha's petrol station. Central Mulbekh has several inexpensive guesthouses, including the photogenically traditional Karzoo (☎ 9419827683, 01985-270027; NH1 Km242.2, Mulbekh; d/tr ₹400/550) and the friendly Othsngang (☎ 01985-270028, 9469280822; NH1 Km242.4, Mulbekh; r per person ₹150). On the NH1, just east of Wakha (Km246), are several cheap tea-house restaurants.

i Getting There & Away

Several overloaded Kargil-bound buses (from Chiktan, Shakar etc) pass through between 7am and 8.30am, returning from Kargil around 3pm. In the afternoon, a J&K SRTC bus leaves Shargol for Kargil at 3pm (returning 7am). Walking Mulbekh-Shargol makes an interesting 2½ hour trek following the south side of the river (one very small pass). Towards Lamayuru you're essentially limited to hitch-hiking or flagging down Leh-bound buses at around 6am.

KARGIL & ZANSKAR

Ladakh's less visited 'second half' comprises remote, sparsely populated Buddhist Zaskar and the slightly greener Suru Valley, where villagers predominantly follow Shia-Islam, as they do in the regional capital, Kargil (Km204). Scenery reaches some truly majestic mountain climaxes.

Kargil

☎01985 / POP 10,655 / ELEV 2704M

Love it or loathe it, you'll almost inevitably need to stop in proudly Muslim Kargil between Zaskar and Srinagar or Leh. If you're arriving from Srinagar, Ladakh's second city seems quaintly backward with workshops, old merchant stores and wild-eyed beggars cramming the packed, ramshackle central area. Coming from Leh, however, Kargil feels grimy and mildly hassled.

The landscape looks more attractive if you climb to the little Central Asian Museum (Munshi Aziz Bhat Museum; ☎9469730109; www.kargilmuseum.org; admission ₹50; 🚗 by arrangement), which celebrates Kargil's former glory as a trading post on major pre-1947 caravan routes. It's around 10 minutes' walk off the central street Main Bazaar (aka Imam Khomeini Chowk, or Khumani Chowk), which has two ATMs, a few internet cafes and several ho-hum restaurants. The tourist office (☎01985-232721; 🕒 10.30am-5pm Mon-Sat) is upstairs in a vine-draped building between Main Bazaar and the well-marked Hotel Greenland, though 500m further north, tour agency Sewak Travel (We For Kargil; www.sewak.org.in) is a more useful contact. Their tours cover much of the district and they can arrange permits for the Batalik area via the DC Office in Baroo.

Sleeping & Eating

Cheap, central but miserable options around the bus station include the ramshackle old Hotel Crown (☎9419845108; muntazir98@yahoo.com; d with/without bathroom ₹500/400) and dreary, green-concrete box rooms at Ever Green (☎9419570515; tw ₹400) beside Hotel Greenland. Four marginally better cheapies stretch up Hospital Rd from the jeep stand, notably Kacho Guesthouse (☎9419889045; kacholikhan@yahoo.com; Hospital Rd; d with/without TV ₹1000/700) with its cheery little patch of garden.

Tourist Facilitation

Centre

HOTEL $
(TFC; ☎01985-232137, 9419219492; d/VIP ₹820/1500) Organisationally awkward as befits a government institution, TFC rooms are nonetheless great value. Doubles are hotel standard with fan, geyser and carved wooden bedsteads – many with river views. VIP rooms come with ludicrously oversized lounges with upward of 12 sofas in each. It's 2km south of the centre towards Baroo.

There's a terraced restaurant (mains ₹120 to ₹240, rice ₹45) at the riverside and a sweep of spiral staircase that seems designed for a musical performance.

Hotel Jan Palace

HOTEL $$
(☎01985-234135, 9419176277; www.janpalacekargil.com; Bus Station Approach; r ₹1500-2500, mains ₹165-430, rice ₹120) Elsewhere the Jan Palace might seem unremarkable, but in central Kargil its functional combination of cleanliness, big new ensuite rooms, rooftop views and friendly staff make it stand above the competition. Reliable food and beer available (₹320). As you leave the government bus station's main exit, it's in an alley to your right.

Hotel Greenland

HOTEL $$
(☎01985-232324, 9419979905; www.greenlandkargil.in; old/new r ₹2000/2800) Very central, this long-term traveller favourite remains helpful and acceptably clean, but you can do better for the money.

Zojila Residency

HOTEL $$
(☎01985-232281; www.zojilaresidency.com; Bemathang, Baroo; s/d/ste ₹2420/3260/5860; 🚗) A professional hotel-style lobby leads through to fresh new rooms with good bathrooms and a mild fashion consciousness, slightly undermined by the use of pale custard-yellow wall-paint. It's the best of the four upper midrange options that lie south of centre beyond Bardo Bridge, around half way to Baroo. Wi-fi costs ₹100 per day.

Getting There & Away

The jeep stand (Hospital Rd) and main Leh/Srinagar bus station ('Public Park') are central, one block apart, linked via a narrow alley of butchers' and barbers' shops. Both are a short distance off Main Bazaar towards the river. A station for Omni minivans is 400m further west and the local bus station another 400m on, towards Bardo Bridge.

Leh Buses (private/government ₹400/470, 10 hours) depart at around 4.30am, driving via Mulbekh (two hours) and Lamayuru (around five hours). You might still find a shared jeep (₹900 to ₹1000) as late as 7am. Charters cost ₹7100.

Mulbekh Minibuses (₹60) leave at 2pm and 3pm from the local bus station, returning next morning.

Srinagar Buses (₹550, 10 hours) depart at 10.30pm driving overnight to reach the hair-raising Zoji La Pass before the one-way system for large vehicles reverses. That doesn't apply to share taxis (₹900, seven hours), which can leave any time. Road conditions permitting, it's worth hiring your own taxi (₹6350) to experience the scenery, which is especially memorable between Drass and Kangan.

Suru Valley For Sanku and nearer villages, red-and-white minibuses depart sporadically from the local bus station. For Panikhar (₹87) the 7am bus loads up on Main Bazaar at the Hospital Rd corner. For the noon bus and for Parkachik (11.30am, alternate days) pre-purchase tickets from the green J&K SRTC stand hidden behind the back wall of the main bus station. Around midday you might find shared Omni micro-vans to Panikhar; chartering to Panikhar/Parkachik costs ₹2100/2800.

Zanskar Kargil-Padum buses are sporadic. Shared seven-seater jeeps (₹2000, 10 to 14 hours) park in the main bus station departing before dawn if at all. Chartering costs ₹13,400, with an extra ₹2275 to overnight en route at Rangdum or Parkachik (well worth considering) through the central Jeep Drivers' Cooperative (☎ 01985-232079). Non-Kargil or non-union drivers aren't allowed to take tourists to Zanskar and checkpoints en route might turn back unofficial rides.

Getting Around

By day, micro-vans (per seat ₹10) shuttle down the riverside to Baroo from the riverside corner of Hospital Rd.

Suru Valley

Potentially a bigger attraction than better-known Zanskar, to which it is the main access route, Suru Valley's green, semi-alpine Muslim villages are dotted among wide valleys with fabulous snow-topped mountainscapes. These are most apparent around Damsna and are spectacularly surveyed from Parkachik and from the steep but satisfying day trek to get there across the 3900m Lago La from Pursa on the Panikhar bypass road (four to six hours' hike). If driving from Sanku, consider a 5km detour east to the Khartse Khar Buddha off Barsoo Rd.

Sleeping & Eating

Options are sparse. Assuming you can find the chowkidar (caretaker) to open the doors, there are unpretentious but decently maintained J&K Tourist Bungalows (d/dm ₹500/200) at five Suru locations, the best choices being lonely Purtickchay (with distant but well-framed Nun-Kun views), Tangole (a possible mountaineering base) and especially Parkachik, with its stunning mountain views. Very basic guest meals are available at each.

Kamal Guesthouse (☎ Sajad Hussein 9469109034; sleeping/meal ₹200/100) at

TREKKING TO ZANSKAR

From Photoksar or Singge La base camp, the trek to Padum, Zanskar is most often undertaken in around a week as a group expedition with packhorses and full camping gear. If you're fit, well acclimatised and a little lucky it is just about possible to walk from Singge La to Padum sleeping entirely in homestays and tent-stays. To achieve this, hiking stages from Singge La base camp (tea tent in mid-season only) would be as follows:

Day 1 Seven hours' walk to Skyunpata campsite where there's a single 'dormitory tent'.

Day 2 Four hours to Lingshet – plenty of homestay options. If you have a tent you'd be advised to continue to Lamak base camp (no facilities) to reduce the next day's tough hike, but there are no non-camping options.

Day 3 Ten hours' hike from Lingshet including three hard, steep hours up the Hanuma La to Shnerlse (two tea tents).

Days 4 & 5 Seven hours' hike including the Panfila Pass to Hanumil village (three homestays). Thence to Pidmo Bridge for a (pre-booked) car to Padum or walk on to Zangla.

Note that setting off on this trek without supplies and your own tent is risky, given very limited bed-space availability.

WORTH A TRIP

KARGIL DISTRICT – LADAKH'S BAMIYAN?

Hidden away across Kargil region are several ancient rock-cut Buddha statues. While nowhere near as huge as Afghanistan's now-destroyed Bamiyan site, the impressive 7th-century figure at Mulbekh is 8m tall and easy to visit en route to Leh. Around 2km off the Batalik–Kargil Rd, the smaller, more eroded Yurbaltak figure lies at the back of Apanti village, a short but picturesque walk from the end of the access road following a stone-paved path through the village's most traditional knot of homes. Arguably the most impressive Buddha is 5km east of Sanku in the Suru Valley, close to the tiny school on the north side of the river facing the historic settlement of Khartse Khar. The spot is five minutes' walk off the Barsoo Rd.

JAMMU &amp; KASHMIR (INCLUDING LADAKH) ZANSKAR

Damsna has just two empty carpeted rooms for homestay guests to bed down on the floor. No English spoken. The main draw is a nearby picnic spot and the perfectly framed view of Nun and Kun – albeit only from the toilet.

Near the hospital in Panikhar, Hotel Khayoul (☎9469192810, 9419864611; saki_muna@yahoo.com; Prantee district, Panikhar; d/tr ₹400/500) is the four-room homestay of Hulam Ali, a friendly, English-speaking travel fixer with years of experience to help you make the most of any Suru exploration, including treks to Pahalgam. As business is thin, he spends much of his week working in Kargil (at the teashop beside Kacho Guesthouse), so it's worth making contact before turning up in Panikhar.

There are very simple tea-stall shops at Sanku and a summer parachute cafe in Parkachik, but you'd be well advised to bring your own food supplies if planning much Suru exploration.

i Getting There & Away

Government buses to Kargil leave Panikhar around 6.30am and 11am, and Parkachik on alternate days at 7am. Taxis aren't easily available, and, for Zanskar, onward transport is generally limited to highly uncertain hitch-hiking. Panikhar's Hotel Khayoul can organise vehicles given advanced notice.

Zanskar

Majestically rugged, the greatest attraction of this mountain-hemmed Ladakhi-Buddhist valley is simply getting there, preferably on a trek. While days can be scorching hot, come prepared for cold nights even in summer. Until the Wanla–Photoksar road is extended to Zangla, the only motorable road in is from Kargil into the glorious Suru Valley, then a rough track to isolated Buddhist Rangdum and across the 4401m Pensi La.

Rangdum

POP 280 / ELEV 3670M

Wind-scoured Rangdum makes a handy overnight break on the 12-hour Kargil–Padum jeep ride. The 20 or so low-rise buildings look as though they were dropped randomly onto the remarkably wild, big-sky valley, whose meandering streams are backed to the west by a breathtaking horizon of Patagonian-style jagged peaks. There are several tea-stalls, a homestay and a J&K Tourism Bungalow (d ₹500) with four ensuite rooms but not necessarily any water or electricity. Isolated Rangdum Gompa (admission ₹50), 5km further east, looks like a tiny floating island backed by a pastiche of oddly contorted strata. Above a stream at the foot of the gompa, summer-only Nun-Kun Delux Camp (☎982252153; lakpale@yahoo.co.in; Rangdum Gompa; s/d ₹1980/3036, full board ₹3980/4620) has clean but cramped, overpriced bedded tents sharing outside bathrooms.

Padum

Zanskar's dusty little capital has an impressive mountain backdrop but lacks much architectural character. Within a block of the central crossroads you'll find the bus/share-taxi stand, phone offices, shops, an unreliable internet cafe, the majority of Padum's dozen hotel-guesthouses and restaurants plus the helipad on which the carcass of an Indian Army chopper adds interesting foreground to landscape photos.

From the centre, the main road straggles 700m south past a sizeable 1991 mosque to the crumbling little 'old town' and a hillock of stupas and water-eroded boulders. Just before, if you fork left you'll find the road towards Annu (trekking trailhead). Around 300m further another left turn doubles back past the police station and a few carved Buddha stones. There are more Buddha figures carved into rocks beneath (towards the river – follow the new pathway from the small cemetery).

Around 2km north of Padum is more traditional Pibiting village whose small gumpa is dwarfed by a large hilltop stupa topped with a beacon lamp.

Activities

Zanskar's top activity is trekking. Although road-building is steadily proceeding, walking remains a popular way to reach the Yapola Valley (north) or Ramjak (south) for connections to Lamayuru/Keylong. Tents and provisions are needed for some sections and guides and horses can sometimes be organised on the spot. Ask around, at your guesthouse or at a couple of agencies along the road to the mosque.

Sleeping & Eating

Most hotels close from late October to June, except when booked for winter trekking groups.

Getting There & Away

Until the Wanla–Padum–Darcha road is finished, transport options will remain very limited, and available in summer only. Every few days a Kargil-bound bus departs Padum at around 3.30am, often continuing to Leh. Afternoon buses run to Karsha and Zangla, returning the next morning.

By jeep. Padum to Kargil costs ₹13,400/2000 per vehicle/seat, but bargaining might be possible with returning Kargil drivers. Alternatively head to Parkachik by jeep (₹11,000), then continue by bus. Other one-way/return rates from Padum:

Karsha ₹1200/1500

Pidmo Bridge ₹3500/4500

Rangdum ₹10,500/12,700

ZANSKAR IN WINTER

In winter, snow cuts Zanskar's tenuous road links altogether. Yet in late February, Zanskar's teachers and school kids returning from their winter break manage to walk in from Chiling following an ancient seasonal trade trail that essentially follows the frozen Zanskar River – often on the ice, crossing side streams on precarious snow bridges and camping in caves en route. This hazardous 'Chadar Trek' is likely to die out altogether once the Wanla–Zangla road is connected, but till then it attracts a handful of hardy winter hiking-groups every year. Never attempt this alone. While there are no high-altitude stages, you'll need serious winter kit and an experienced local guide who can 'read' the ice. Allow around six days each way.

North of Padum

SANI

At Sani, beside the Kargil road, Zanskar's oldest gompa (Turtot Gyal) is a small, two-storey prayer hall ringed by a tunnelled cloister and a whitewashed stone wall studded with stupas.

KARSHA

At the far side of a wide, sun-blasted plain around two hours' walk from Padum, Karsha Gompa is Zanskar's largest Buddhist monastery. Dating back to at least the 10th century, it's a jumble of whitewashed blocks rising almost vertically up a red rock mountain cliff. Concrete steps lead to the monastery's upper cloister and prayer hall with its cracked old murals and wobbly wooden columns. It's a great vantage point from which to survey Karsha's old-fashioned homes, barley fields and threshing circles worked by dzo. Homestay-guesthouses available.

ZANGLA

For a fine half-day excursion from Padum, drive to Zangla admiring the curled, contorted geological strata that are especially striking above Rinam and Shilingskit villages. A trip highlight is Stongde Gompa crowning a bird's-eye perch some 300m above the valley, 12km from Padum. The entrance to Zangla is guarded by a small hilltop fortress-palace in which the Hungarian scholar Alexander (Sándor) Csoma de Kőrös took a room while compiling the first Western dictionary of the Tibetan language. At the far end of the village there's a small, friendly Buddhist nnery.

South of Padum

The road south from Padum passes Bardan Gompa, spectacularly set on a rocky outcrop high above the river. Ichar (Khor) has a looming monastery of its own and, on slightly higher ground, a small reflective pond and a small knot of very evocative old-town. As of 2014 the road ends just beyond Anmu where a small Amchi-medicine dispensary doubles as a teahouse. From that building a path descends to a very wobbly pedestrian suspension bridge though this might soon be superseded by a road bridge under construction at nearby Tsetang for the new link lane to Surley.

PHUKTAL

Hanging on a cliff face, Phuktal Gompa (<http://phuktalmonastery.com>; ☎prayers at 4.30am, noon & 7pm in summer) appears to be tumbling out of the mouth of a gaping cave. The main hall contains fragments of some 700-year-old murals in the Alchi style, though the tiny upper prayer room feels far more ancient. A road is slowly being built, but for now access is only by a scenically impressive five-hour trek from the trailhead at Anmu. Allow around 2½ attractive-yet-unchallenging hours to reach the large village of Cha (with homestays), then around two hours more to climb gently up and over a shoulder of upland plateau and make the long, steady descent to the river eventually passing (but not crossing) a bridge. Just two minutes later a last short climb brings you to Phuktal's monastery guesthouse (r per person ₹200, dinner ₹100). The gompa, visible ahead, is 15 minutes stroll away. If the guesthouse's four basic (yet ensuite) rooms are full, the nearest alternative accommodation involves crossing the bridge and walking 1½ hours to the village of Purney. Each of the three farmsteads offers rooms and camping places and they run two basic shop-teahouses. Directly below lower Purney, where two rivers meet, cross another bridge. Turning left here would take you eventually to Darcha (requires pre-planning – four days, a guide and gear for the 5090m Shingo La). Or turn right to return to Anmu in around three hours via the pretty one-homestead village of Gyalbok (1¼ hours) and the suspension footbridge. Neither Anmu-Phuktal route currently needs a guide if you have hiking experience, but beware that path details may change rapidly due to ongoing road-crew blasting.

THE KASHMIR VALLEY

Rimmed by layers of alpine peaks, the 140km-long Kashmir Valley opens up as a giant, flat upland bowl of lakes and orchards. Tin-roofed villages guard terraced paddy fields delineated by apple groves and pin-straight poplars. Proudly independent-minded Kashmiris mostly follow a Sufi-based Islamic faith, worshipping in distinctive box-shaped mosques with central spires. Some Kashmiris have startlingly green eyes and in winter, Kashmiri men traditionally keep warm by clutching a kangri (wicker fire-pot holder) beneath their flowing grey-brown pheran (woollen capes).

SAFETY IN KASHMIR

Kashmir's difficult 20th-century history and the delicate relationship between nationalist Muslims and Jammu Hindus creates a cauldron of intercommunal tensions contained or exacerbated (according to one's viewpoint) by a very visible Indian army presence. When things are calm, Kashmir is probably safer than most places in India. But cycles of unrest, stone-throwing and curfews can erupt remarkably rapidly. At such times the Old City is worth avoiding but Dal Lake generally remains trouble-free even during fairly significant disturbances: foreign tourists have never been targets. Use common sense, avoid public demonstrations and military installations and consult a wide range of resources to get a feel of the situation before arriving. Useful starting points include the forum of India Mike (www.indiamike.com/india/jammu-and-kashmir-f30) and local news feeds including Kashmir Times (www.kashmirtimes.com), Greater Kashmir (www.greaterkashmir.com), Kashmir Monitor (www.kashmirmonitor.in) and Daily Excelsior (www.dailyexcelsior.com). Travellers should avoid the India–Pakistan Line of Control in Kashmir as it is an active combat zone and there is no entry into the Pakistan-administered area from India

History

Geologists and Hindu mystics agree that the Kashmir Valley was once a vast lake. Where they disagree is whether it was drained by a post-ice age earthquake or by Lord Vishnu and friends as a ploy to kill a water demon.

In the 3rd century BC the Hindu kingdom of Kashmir became a major centre of Buddhist learning under Emperor Ashoka. In the 13th and 14th centuries, Islam arrived through the inspiration of peaceable Sufi mystics. Later some Muslim rulers, such as Sultan Sikandar 'Butshikan' (r 1389–1413), set about the destruction of Hindu temples and Buddhist monasteries. However, others such as the great Zain-ul-Abidin (r 1423–74) encouraged such religious and cultural tolerance that medieval visitors reported finding it hard to tell Hindus and Muslims apart. Mughal emperors, including Akbar (1556–1605), whose troops took Kashmir in 1586, saw Kashmir as their Xanadu and developed a series of extravagant gardens around Srinagar.

When the British arrived in India, Jammu and Kashmir were a loose affiliation of independent kingdoms, nominally controlled by the Sikh rulers of Jammu. In 1846, after the British had defeated the Sikhs, they handed Kashmir to Maharaja Gulab Singh in return for a yearly tribute of six shawls, 12 goats and a horse. Singh's autocratic Hindu-Dogra dynasty ruled until Independence, showing an infamous disregard for the welfare of the Muslim majority.

Partition & Conflict

As Partition approached in 1947, Maharaja Hari Singh favoured Kashmiri independence rather than joining either India or Pakistan, but he failed to make a definitive decision. Finally, to force the issue, Pashtun tribesmen, backed by the new government in Pakistan, attempted to grab the state by force, setting off the first India–Pakistan war. The invaders were pushed out of the Kashmir Valley but Pakistan retained control of Baltistan, Muzaffarabad and the valley's main access routes. Kashmir has remained divided ever since along a tenuous UN-demarcated border, known as the Line of Control. A proposed referendum to let Kashmir's people decide (for Pakistan or India) never materialised and Pakistan invaded again in 1965, triggering another protracted conflict.

In the 1970s, a generation of visitors rediscovered Indian Kashmir as an idyllic summer getaway. But armed rebellion became intense during the later 1980s and Kashmir was placed under direct rule from Delhi in 1990. For several bloody years massacres and bomb attacks were countered by brutal counter-insurgency tactics from the Indian armed forces. Significant human-rights abuses were reported on both sides.

After the brief India–Pakistan 'Kargil War' of 1999, a ceasefire and increasing autonomy for Kashmir was matched by a significant reduction in tensions. Coordinating relief after a tragic 2005 earthquake also helped bring the Indian and Pakistani governments a little closer. Militant attacks dwindled and domestic tourism blossomed anew despite disturbances in 2008 (over an arcane land dispute at Amarnath) and 2010 (after the shooting of juvenile stone-throwers). In 2014, a uniquely wet summer caused unprecedented flooding in Srinagar.

Srinagar

☑ 0194 / POP 1,192,000 / ELEV 1730M

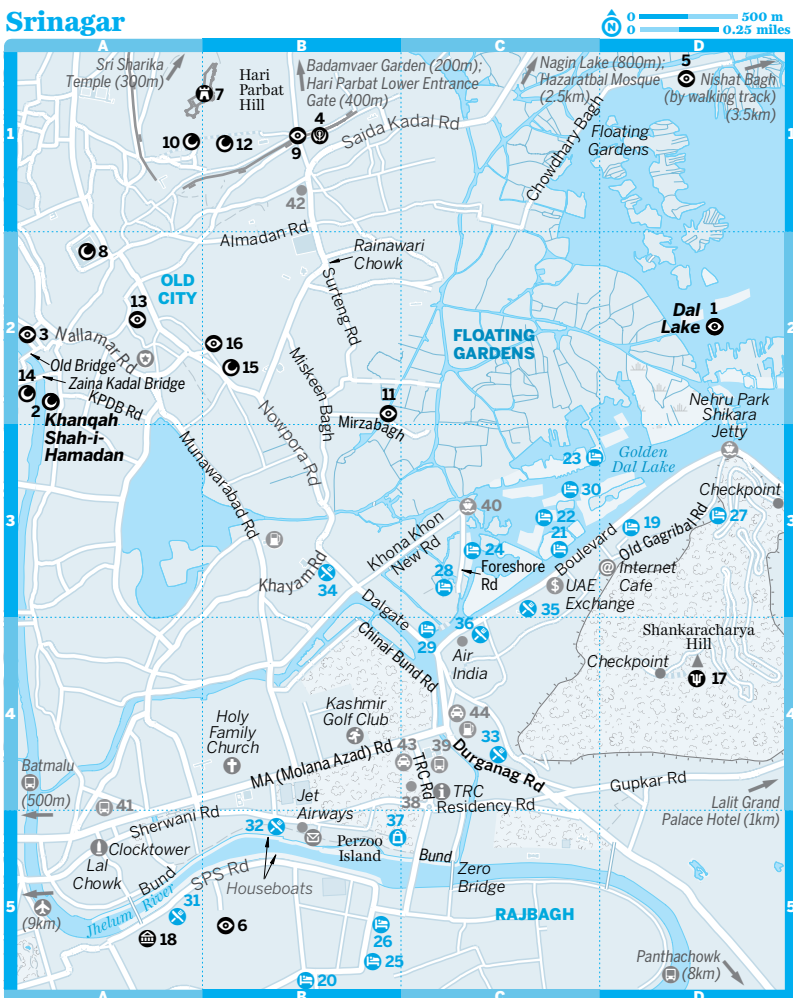

Indulgent houseboats, historic gardens, distinctive Kashmiri wooden mosques and a mild summer climate combine to make Srinagar one of India's top domestic tourist attractions. Except, that is, when intercommunal tensions paralyse the city with strikes and shut-downs. Srinagar's three main areas converge around Dalgate, where the southwestern nose of Dal Lake passes through a lock gate. Northwest lies the fascinatingly chaotic Old City. The busy commercial centre is southwest around Lal Chowk. The city's greatest drawcard is mesmerisingly placid Dal Lake, which stretches a southwestern channel-spur towards the city centre, paralleled by the hotel-lined Boulevard. A bright array of houseboats here form a particularly colourful scene. The famous Mughal gardens are strung out over several kilometres around the lake.

In 2014, the city was hit by devastating floods as the Jhelum River surged over its banks; repairs are ongoing but more floods were reported in 2015 so check the latest situation before you visit.

Dal Lake & Around

Whether you sleep on one of its wonderful time-warp houseboats or just stroll along the Boulevard savouring the sunset, beautifully serene Dal Lake is likely to be your main memory of Srinagar. Mirror-flat waters beautifully reflect the misty peaks of the Pir Panjal mountains while gaily painted shikaras (colourful gondolas) glide by. These are gondola-like boats, hand-powered with heart-shaped paddles used to transport goods to market, children to school, and visitors on explorative tours of the lake's floating communities. Canal-like passages link all the way to Nagin Lake. The gardens supplying the lake's floating vegetable market (☀5-6.30am) were affected by flooding in 2014; if the market resumes, expect approaches from shikara operators offering dawn tours. Alternatively, just watch veg-boats unloading by day at Mirzabagh.

For a visual portrait of Dal Lake life, watch the prize-winning 2012 movie Valley of Saints.

Floating Gardens & Lake Villages

GARDENS, VILLAGES

Much of Dal Lake is thick with foliage, lotus patches and large areas of cultivated vegetable gardens linked by channels and served by villages of stilted walkways. Assuming that 2014 flood damage is repaired, a great way to see these areas is by walking along Chowdary Bagh. Eventually you'll reach a footbridge and causeway leading to the pumping station near Nishat Bagh Mughal Garden, though the last 3km (after Nandpora) can be muddy and is uncomfortably rough for bicycles.

Shankaracharya Hill

VIEWPOINT, SACRED SITE

(☀7am-5.30pm) Thickly forested Shankaracharya Hill is topped by a small Shiva temple, Shankaracharya Mandir, built from hefty blocks of visibly ancient grey stone. Previously known as Takht-i-Sulaiman (Throne of Solomon), it's now named for a sage who reached enlightenment here in AD 750, but signs date the octagonal structure as 5th century and the site is even older.

Some claim, controversially, that a previous temple here was once renovated by Jesus and St Thomas. Access is by a winding 5.5km road from Nehru Park (₹300 return by autorickshaw). From road's end the temple is five minutes up a stairway from a police checkpoint where you must leave phones and cameras before reaching the panoramic views of Srinagar and Dal Lake.

Mughal Gardens

GARDENS

Srinagar's famous gardens date back to the Mughal era. Most have a fundamentally similar design with terraced lawns, fountain pools and carefully manicured flowerbeds interspersed with mighty chinar trees, pavilions and mock fortress facades. The most famous garden is Shalimar Bagh (adult/child ₹10/5; ☀10am-7pm), 10km beyond Nehru Park, built for Nur Jahan by her husband Jahangir. However, Nishat Bagh (adult/child ₹10/5; ☀9am-dusk) is more immediately impressive, with steeper terracing and a lake-facing panorama (7.5km from Nehru Park).

Pari Mahal (adult/child ₹10/5; ☀9am-7.30pm) is set amid palace ruins high above the lakeshore (about 9km from Nehru Park). The ensemble looks most intriguing viewed from afar when floodlit at night. By day, the long, steep autorickshaw ride is worthwhile more for the lake views than for the gardens themselves. Bring ID for police checks. En route you'll pass the petite Cheshmashahi Garden (adult/child ₹10/5; ☀8.30am-7.30pm) and the extensive, less formal Botanical Garden (adult/child ₹10/5; ☀8.30am-dusk), behind which, from March to April, a 12-hectare Tulip Garden (☀Mar-Apr) blooms colourfully.

Hazratbal Mosque

MOSQUE

(☀5am-9.30pm) Backing onto Dal Lake several kilometres north of the Old City, this large, white-domed 20th-century mosque enshrines Kashmir's holiest Islamic relic, the Moi-e-Muqqadas, supposedly a beard hair of the Prophet Mohammed. The hair's brief disappearance in December 1963 nearly sparked a civil war. Visitors are admitted outside of prayer times.

Old City

When visiting mosques, follow normal Islamic formalities (dress modestly, remove shoes) and ask permission before entering or taking interior photos. Women will usually be expected to cover their hair and use a separate entrance.

★ Khanqah Shah-i-Hamadan

MOSQUE

(Khanqah-e-Muala; Khawaja Bazaar area; ☀5.30am-9.30pm; ☑13) This distinctively spired 1730s Muslim meeting hall is one of Srinagar's most beautiful. It was constructed without using any nails and both frontage and interiors are covered in papier-mâché reliefs and elaborately coloured khatamband (faceted wood panelling). Non-Muslim visitors can peek through the door but may not enter.

The building stands on the site of one of Kashmir's first mosques, founded by Persian saint Mir Sayed Ali Hamadani, who arrived in 1372, one of 700 refugees fleeing Timur's conquest of Iran. He is said to have converted 37,000 people to Sufi-based Islam, and it's likely that his retinue introduced Kashmiris to the Persian art of fine carpet-making.

Pather Masjid

MOSQUE

Unlike most typical Kashmiri spired mosques, Pather Masjid is a heavy Mughal structure built by Nur Jahan in 1623. The road-facing side is partly hidden by shop-units, but behind, a triple-rank of nine arches opens onto a walled, four-tree chinar garden.

It's worth following the lane directly south, walking beneath the razor-wired guard post to the riverside for views across to Khanqah Shah-i-Hamadan.

Badshah Tomb

ARCHITECTURE

(☀9am-6pm; ☑25) Looking more Bulgarian than Kashmiri, the multi-domed 15th-century brick tomb of King Zeinalabdin's mum was built on the plinth of a much older former Buddhist temple. It's within an ancient graveyard hidden in Gadu Bazaar's maze of copperware, spice and cloth vendors' shops. A number of graves were washed away during the 2014 floods but work is underway to restore the compound. To view the interior, you will need to find the caretaker; ask at the shops in front of the cemetery.

The tomb's domes form part of the classic view of Old Town Srinagar as viewed looking north from the new Zaina Kadal (bridge), with the city's oldest wooden bridge as foreground.

Jama Masjid

(Nowhatta; ☉ 8am-9pm) Looking like the movie set for an imagined Central Asian castle, this mighty 1672 mosque forms a quadrangle around a large fountain garden courtyard with monumental spired gatehouses marking each of the four cardinal directions. There's room for thousands of devotees between 378 roof-support columns, each fashioned from the trunk of a single deodar tree.

Naqshband Sahib

(Khanyar Chowk area; ☉ 6.30am-8.30pm) This beautifully proportioned but uncoloured 17th-century shrine was built in Himachal Pradesh style with alternating layers of wood and brick to dissipate the force of earthquakes.

SACRED SITE

Rozabal

(Ziyarat Hazrati Youza Asouph) At the north end of the triangular patch of grass in front of the Sufi shrine of Pir Dastgir Sahib (☉ 5.30am-7.30pm) is a small, green shrine known as Rozabal. A highly controversial theory claims that the shrine's crypt holds the grave of Jesus Christ. Tourists are actively discouraged from approaching, but the mere existence of this little place poses some intriguing questions.

SACRED SITE

☉ Hari Parbat Hill

North of centre but visible from virtually anywhere in Srinagar, this prominent hilltop was once an island in a giant lake where, Hindus believe, Vishnu and Shri-ka (Durga) defeated Jalodbhava, Kashmir's mythical demon. The imposing Hari Parbat Fort (Koh-e-Maran Fort; permission note ₹100; ☉ 10am-3pm Sat-Thur) that now crowns the hill, mostly dates from 1808, built by Pathan governor Atta Mohammad Khan, though remnants of 6th-century fortifications have been found. The fort remains a minor military base but reopened to tourists in July 2014. Before going you'll need a stamped permissive note from the TRC (passport copy and ₹100 required for application). Entrance is from the northeast side, via a traffic-free lane starting north of Badamvaer (Badanwari; adult/child ₹10/5; ☉ 8am-8.30pm), orchard gardens whose most interesting feature is the antique well-house. The fort access lane starts with a checkpoint, then a sweaty 10-minute walk using fairly obvious short cuts brings you to a second sign-in, 15 minutes' walk to the fort's uppermost tower.

More easily accessible on the hill's southern mid-slopes, but also offering fine views, are the extensive ruins of the 1649 Akhund Mulla Shah Mosque along with the large, very active Makhdoom Sahib Shrine. Both can be reached by a three-minute cablecar ride (single/return ₹50/100; ☉ 10am-5pm) – though this operates erratically – or by climbing one of three beggar-lined step routes. The most easterly starts near Kathi Darwaza, an historical gateway through a remnant section of Srinagar's Old City walls, originally built by Akbar in the 1590s. Multiple Mughal-style domes on the large, white Chetipacha Gurdwara (Chattipatshahi Gurdwara), add to the scene.

Beside the lower cable car station, the brand new, museum-like Naagar-Nagar Interpretation Centre (tips requested; ☉ 10am-5pm) gives some interesting historical context

JESUS IN KASHMIR?

To many, the theory sounds crackpot or even blasphemous, but several authors have claimed that Jesus spent his 'lost years' (between his youth and the start of his ministry aged 30) in India where Buddhism moulded his ideas. This theory gained a lot of publicity in the 1890s when Russian traveller/spy Nicolas Notovitch 'discovered' supposedly corroborating documents at Hemis Gompa (Ladakh), described in his book Unknown Life of Jesus Christ. These Hemis documents have since gone missing.

The Koran (surah 4, verses 156–157) states that Jesus' death on the cross was a 'grievous calumny' and that 'they slew him not'. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad's Jesus in Heaven & Earth further postulates that Jesus (as Isa, Yuz Asaf or Youza Asouph) retired to Kashmir post-crucifixion and was buried in Srinagar. Holger Kersten's Jesus Lived in India, widely sold in Indian traveller bookshops, argues the case carefully and even gives a floor plan of Rozabal (p267). The roughly four-million-strong Ahmadiyya sect (who consider themselves Muslim but are not recognised by other branches of the faith) also subscribe to the idea of Jesus dying in Kashmir. See www.alislam.org/topics/jesus.

HOUSEBOATS

Srinagar's signature houseboats first appeared in colonial times because the British were prohibited from owning land. The best deluxe boats are palatial, with chandeliers, carved walnut panels, ceilings of khatamband (faceted wood panelling) and chintzy sitting rooms redolent of the 1930s Raj era. Category A boats are comfy but less grand. Lower categories (C, D) might lack interior sitting areas.

Be aware that the Srinagar houseboat experience is like staying in a small, romantic guesthouse complete with cook and waiter. Unlike in Kerala, these boats never move, and most are moored in sizeable groups. A colourful attraction is watching comings and goings, but don't expect quiet seclusion.

Better houseboats typically have three or four ensuite double bedrooms. When things are busy, the best rooms (usually at the back of deluxe boats) may be booked out well in advance. But off season, or when the political climate drives tourists away, you're likely to get the whole boat to yourself, chef and all.

Choosing from 1400 boats is challenging. Some owners are super-friendly families, others are crooks – ask fellow travellers for recent first-hand recommendations. Outside peak season (April to June), it's best to check out a selection and pick one that suits rather than prebooking.

Houseboat Tips

For most visitors, staying on a houseboat is a relaxing Srinagar highlight. But a few have reported feeling cheated, being held virtual hostage or suffering inappropriate advances from houseboat staff. Some tips:

- ➔ Beware of houseboat packages and never book in Delhi.
- ➔ Check out houseboats in person or via trusted websites before agreeing to anything.
- ➔ Get a clear, possibly written, agreement stating what the fees cover (tea, drinking water, shikara transfer, canoe usage, second helpings at dinner?).
- ➔ Check whether the boat really is the category that the owner claims (certificates should be posted) or risk paying deluxe prices for a B-grade boat!
- ➔ Don't be pressured into giving 'charity' donations or signing up for overpriced treks.
- ➔ Don't leave valuables unattended: boat-borne thieves can be fast.
- ➔ Don't leave your passport with the boat owner.
- ➔ Tell a friend or trusted hotelier where you're staying.
- ➔ Trust your instincts.

Choosing the Area

Major choices:

- ➔ Dal First Row Facing the Boulevard, easy to-and-fro by shikara but busy and noisy in season.

to the sites mentioned above and plays two 15-minute films. Entrance is currently free, but opening hours can be erratic.

On the western flank of Hari Parbat is Sri Sharika (Chakreshwar; www.hariparbat.org), the 'abode' of the city's 18-armed guardian goddess, represented here by a vermilion-orange painted Shila rock beneath a rather gaudy temple-pavilion.

Sri Pratap Singh Museum

MUSEUM

(☎0194-2312859; <http://spsmuseum.org>; SPS Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/50; 🕒10.30am-4pm Tue-Sun) It's worth visiting this richly endowed historical museum for Mughal papier-mâché work, 4th-century tiles, 8th-century gods, stuffed birds, mammoth bones, weaponry and traditional Kashmiri

→ Dal Second Row (Golden Dal Lake) Though only slightly further back, boats here are invisible from the Boulevard and generally better placed for sunset views. Plenty of colourful bustle, and it costs less than ₹100 to reach by shikara from ghats 9 or 12. Our favourite is Young Beauty Star (☎ 9419060790; www.dallakehouseboat.ragu.com; Dal Lake 2nd Row; d incl half-board ₹2800; 🚶 Ghat 9) with a junction location that's particularly ideal for watching life go by.

→ Dal Lake Garden-Village Many more boats lie in village-like clusters further back: peaceful except during prayers but somewhat trickier to 'escape' from should you go stir crazy. Low-key Moon of Kashmir (☎ 9906686454; www.moonofkashmir.com; Dal Lake; B-/A-cat d incl half-board ₹2000/3500; 🚶 Ghat 7) is very welcoming and has been recommended for fair-value trekking.

→ Foreshore Rd Easy access. Boats often basic but very inexpensive, perhaps under ₹1000.

→ Hazaratbal Butts Clermont (☎ 9419056761, 0194-2415325; www.buttsclermonthouseboat.com; Naseem Bagh; d from ₹6000) Lonely houseboats are moored beside their own private Mughal Garden. This is where Ravi Shankar taught George Harrison sitar and many ambassadors and statesmen have stayed, yet the pricey boats aren't particularly luxurious and thick, smelly water-weeds breed lots of midges.

→ Nagin East Bank Boats are easily accessible by road and have views of Hari Parbat. Houseboat group Majestic & Ritz (☎ 9999990232, 9906874747; www.majesticgroupofhouseboats.com; Nagin Lake, east bank, directly south of Nagin Club; s/d from ₹3100/3500) are friendly and reliable, Butterfly (☎ 0194-2429889, 0194-2420212; Nagin Lake, east bank; r ₹3000-5000) is funky if ever-busy. Drop in bargains are possible at several boat-groups.

→ Nagin West Bank Boats have glorious sunset views with wooded mountain scarps reflected in the lake. They are usually approached by shikara from the east bank but most also have laneway access into a wealthy, if visibly religious, residential area. Getting into town is a pain so if you pick this area plan to spend your days relaxing aboard. New Jacqueline (☎ 0194-2421425, 9419001785; www.newjacquilinehouseboats.com; Nagin Lake west shore; d ₹3400-8000) is a particularly comfortable choice here.

→ Jhelum River Easy access, little charm.

In almost any location, visits from shikara-borne souvenir sellers are an unavoidable irritation.

Prices

Officially, prices are 'set' by the Houseboat Owners Association (☎ 0194-2450326; www.houseboatowners.org; TRC Rd; ☀ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) ranging from ₹600/900 (category D) to ₹3150/4800 (deluxe) for a double room including half-board. In reality, however, that's merely a guide. Some places openly ask for more, others will ask only a fraction of that when occupancy is low.

costumes. The collection is housed in the touchingly unkempt 1872 Lalmandi Palace of Maharajah Pratap Singh, but the museum was damaged badly by flooding in 2014 and some exhibits may move once restoration is complete.

Government Silk Weaving Factory

ic factory still churns out bolts of silk on old-fashioned weaving machines, much as it has done since 1938. Ask permission at the 'time gate' or, at the government emporium in front.

Activities

The alpine lakes, meadows and uplands of Kashmir offer some stunning hiking opportunities, but unlike in Ladakh, it can be hard to find fellow walkers to join a group. Virtually every houseboat owner will have a 'brother' who can take you, and there are ever more online sites offering trek packages, but you may be able to get a better deal simply by heading to Naranag and organising things for yourself. If you are planning to do that, you might be advised to rent camping equipment from the Mountaineering Information Office, beside Srinagar TRC (p271), as supplies in Naranag are in short supply.

Sleeping

Staying on a houseboat is one of the city's main attractions, but when first arriving you might prefer to sleep at least the first night or two in a hotel while carefully selecting a suitable boat. Budget options are relatively limited (try Dalgate or Old Gagribal Rd). There are midrange hotels in profusion, but many are unkempt and rely primarily on noisy, self-catering groups of domestic tourists, especially from April to June and in October. Note that many hotels were affected by the 2014 floods – ask to see a few rooms before making a decision.

Eating

Inexpensive dhaba (snack bars) are dotted along the Boulevard.

New Krishna Vaishno Bhojnalay

VEGETARIAN $

(Durganag Rd; mains ₹50-90, small/large rice ₹25/50; ☺8am-4pm & 7-10.30pm) Crowds clammer for the tasty, inexpensive pre-cooked vegetarian meals, dosas and South Indian breakfasts at Srinagar's small, 'original' dhaba. Pre-pay at counter.

Shahi Darbar

BARBECUE $

(Khayam Chowk; half/whole chicken ₹180/340, shish/kashmiri kebab ₹150/130; ☺9am-10pm) One of at least four barbecue takeaways for inexpensive tikka and tandoori snacks around the Khayam Chowk street corner, two blocks northwest of Dalgate.

Mughal Darbar

KASHMIRI, INDIAN $$

(☎0194-2476998; 1st fl, Residency Rd; mains ₹105-340, 1-/4-person wazwan ₹640/2875; ☺10.30am-10.30pm) This upstairs restaurant is a great place to try a full spread of Kashmir's mutton-based cuisine, though good Indian veggie dishes are also served. A special sit-on-carpet room with copper-work serving dishes is available if booking ahead for a full wazwan (Kashmiri feast). The main dining-room features an excellent 'Where is heaven?' oriental mural.

Shamiana

KASHMIRI $$

(Boulevard; meals ₹500-750; ☺11.30am-10pm) Next to the Heemal Hotel Complex, Shamiana is a popular stop for authentic Kashmiri food. You can hop off the first row houseboats or a shikara on the edge of the Dal lake and walk across the street for local delicacies like mutton seekh kebabs, wazwan and pulao.

14th Avenue Cafe & Grill

INTERNATIONAL $$

(SPS Rd; snacks ₹125-200, mains ₹200-415, coffee/cake from ₹60/90; ☺10.30am-9.30pm) This fashion-conscious, five-table coffee-cube overlooking the Jhelum River serves hummus, nachos, falafel-wraps, piri-piri chicken and thin-crust pizzas, but you might just drop in for coffee and cakes.

Stream

MULTICUISINE $$

(Boulevard; mains ₹170-320, rice ₹80; ☺11am-10pm) This reliable, semi-smart eatery is set back from the Boulevard with a particularly decent range of pan-Indian options, plus pizza, coffee and ice cream. Comfortably air-conditioned and with water-cascade down the front windows.

Drinking

Srinagar's Muslim mores mean that alcohol isn't served in restaurants, the few wine shops (Heemal Hotel Shopping Complex, Boulevard; ☺10am-8pm Sat-Thu, closed during Ramadan) are not obvious to find and the tiny handful of bars are mostly in upmarket hotels.

Dar Bar

BAR

(cocktails/beer ₹715/490; ☺11am-11pm) Even if you can't afford to stay at the Lalit Grand Palace Hotel, consider sipping a drink at its little bar or, better still, on the hotel's glorious lawns with indulgent views towards Dal Lake. Add 30% tax to menu prices.

Shopping

The Boulevard has several emporia flogging Kashmiri souvenirs, including elegantly painted papier-mâché boxes and carved walnut woodwork, plus cashmere and pashmina shawls, originally popularised in Europe by Napoleon's wife Josephine. Chain-stitched gabbas (Kashmiri rugs with appliqué), crewel embroidery work or floral namdas (felted wool carpets) also make good souvenirs. Saffron, cricket bats and dried fruits are widely sold around Lal Chowk.

Kashmir Government Arts Emporium

HANDICRAFTS

KASHMIRI FOOD

Kashmir has a distinct cuisine all of its own. A full traditional wazwan (feast) can have dozens of courses, notably goshtaba (pounded mutton balls in saffron-yoghurt curry), tabak maaz (fried lamb's ribs) and rogan josh (rich, vividly red-coloured mutton curry). Kashmiri chefs also serve deliciously aromatic cheese-based curries and seasonal nadir (lotus stems), typically served in yakhni (a curd-based sauce made mildly minty with fennel). Kashmiri kahwa is a luxurious golden tea, flavoured with saffron, cinnamon and crushed almonds.

marked, fixed prices in the century-old half-timbered former British Residency Building (gutted by fire 1998, restored 2004, damaged again in the 2014 floods). There's a splendid park opposite.

i Information

ATMs are widespread, especially on Residency Rd. Beware of freelance moneychangers offering improbably good rates – you're likely to get forged banknotes.

Abdul Zandari (☎0194-2451370, 9469111596; www.riversongskashmir.webs.com) Fluent, knowledgeable if a little full-on, Abdul is an enthusiastic city guide who is likely to find you as you wander around Srinagar. Recommended by several readers. Pay him 'what you feel'.

Internet Cafe (Old Gagribal Rd; per hr ₹30; ☎9am-11pm)

TRC (Tourism Reception Centre; ☎0194-2456291, toll-free 1800-1031060; www.jktourism.org; ☎24hr) With perseverance you might actually find answers to your questions. Apply here for Hari Parbat permits. Next door the mountaineering centre rents camping and hiking equipment.

UAE Exchange (Boulevard; ☎9.30am-1.30pm & 2-6pm Mon-Fri, to 4pm Sat) Hidden down the driveway directly east of Hotel Sunshine, this moneychanger offers good cash rates and exchanges travellers cheques with commission.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

Arrival Foreigners must fill a J&K arrival form, which demands you give the name of your hotel. If you don't know, write TRC (Tourist Reception Centre).

Departure Srinagar's airport is 1.2km behind a security barrier where there can be long queues for baggage and body screening. You'll need to show an air ticket (or e-ticket confirmation print-out) to get through so don't come to the airport hoping to buy a ticket on departure. Allow at least two hours' leeway.

BUS & SHARED JEEP

Anantnag Shared sumo (₹80, 90 minutes) from Tourist Taxi Stand 7 (Dalgate). Change in Anantnag for Pahalgam and Vailoo. For Kishtwar you'll have to stay overnight in Vailoo or nearby Kokernag as Kishtwar shared jeeps (₹300/3500 per person/vehicle, six hours) all depart from Vailoo between 6am and 10am.

Jammu Private buses (mostly overnight) start from Panthachowk bus station, 8km south of centre. There are also rickety J&KSRTC buses (class B/A/18-seater bus ₹300/420/510, 10 to 13 hours) at 6.30am, 7.30am and (some evenings) 7.30pm from the far more convenient J&KSRTC bus station (☎0194-2455107). Or take a shared jeep (₹700/4950 per person/vehicle) from across the road with departures all morning but easiest from 6.30am to 9am. The well-paved Srinagar–Jammu road has many scenic points and snow is cleared year-round, but jams are common following landslides and hartals (strikes). Be prepared to fly at such times.

Kargil Shared jeeps (₹900/6400 per person/car) depart before 9am from Tourist Taxi Stand 1 (Residency Rd) and from Kaksarai near SMHS hospital in Karan Nagar (western Srinagar) from which there are also two private buses around 5am (₹400).

Leh J&KSRTC has a 7am bus (class B/A ₹1060/1600, two days, book one day ahead) that stops the night en route in Kargil. From Tourist Taxi Stand 1 shared jeeps (₹2100 per person, 14 hours) mostly leave before 7am. Book at least a day ahead to score good seats.

Delhi J&KSRTC 7.30am (seat/sleeper ₹1490/1670, around 24 hours).

J&KSRTC also advertises excursion buses to Sonamarg (one-way/return ₹180/289), Gulmarg (₹179/271) and Pahalgam (₹180/289) and other tourist destinations, all departing between 7.30am and 9am, but lack of customers means that few actually run outside the peak May to June period. Before paying the ticket, ask fellow passengers whether they might prefer to share a sumo from the taxi stand opposite.

The giant Batmalu bus station, west of centre, has services thrice daily to Sonamarg and frequent sumos to Tangmarg for Gulmarg.

JEEP HIRE

Dozens of stands offer jeep rental. Return prices include Pahalgam (₹2950), Sonamarg (₹2850) and Gulmarg (₹2050). Your hotel might offer better deals.

TRAIN

The nearest train station is at Nowgam, and around 10km south of the Old City. Trains currently run Banihal–Qazigund–Anantnag–Nowgam–Baramulla but by 2018 the whole Jammu–Katra–Nowgam–Baramulla line should be complete. Well maybe.

i Getting Around

Autorickshaws cost ₹50 for short hops, and around ₹200 per hour for tours.

Shikaras are colourful gondolas propelled by a heart-shaped paddles. Officially they charge ₹50 for the shortest houseboat-to-shore hops or ₹500 per hour. In reality some shikara-wallahs accept as little as ₹200 per hour (notably from Khona Khon New Rd) but expect some sales pressure.

Overcrowded minibuses ply the main routes including Lal Chowk–Hazratbal and Lal Chowk–Shalimar Bagh via Dal Lake's south bank.

If you can handle the manic traffic, a bicycle offers a liberating way to go sightseeing in the sprawling but relatively flat old city and lake-shore areas. Bike-rental opportunities are limited but a few are available (usually for guests only) from Hotel Swiss, Comrade Inn and Noor Guest House (₹250 per day).

AIRPORT TRANSPORT

A J&KSRTC bus (₹70) supposedly meets most flights then runs to Lal Chowk, with tickets sold in the terminal. Last service before 4pm. Pre-paid taxis are listed as costing ₹445/525 to central Srinagar/Nehru Park but 'with extras' you'll actually pay ₹600. From the outside taxi counter, locals share rides paying ₹100 per seat to Lal Chowk in central Srinagar, but drivers seem extremely reluctant to take foreigners.

Around Srinagar

Sonamarg, set amid spectacular mountains, can be visited between Leh and Srinagar and in mid-summer is linked to tiny but historic Naranag by a multiday trek through some spectacular lake-dappled alpine highlands. Gulmarg is great for extreme skiing in winter but in summer its cable car is often over-loaded by queues of Indian tourists waiting for hours on end. Overcrowding is also a curse in once-lovely Pahalgam but canny foreigners zip on from there up to tiny Aru with its tremendous alpine backdrop and instant hiking appeal. While it's not a destination in itself, Anantnag (aka Islamabad), along with twin-town Khanabal, 4km away on the main Jammu–Srinagar highway, makes a useful transit point if diverting to Pahalgam or to Kishtwar via the lovely Kokernag Botanical Gardens and the countless hairpins of Sinthan Top. If you're driving Srinagar–Anantnag, you'll pass saffron-producers at Pampore, cricket-bat makers at Sangam and two ancient temple ruins at the roadside in Awantipora. If those appeal, then consider an 8km diversion from Khanabal to Mattan, 2.5km above which ruins of an 8th-century sun temple (☉dawn-dusk) FREE are set in splendidly tended grounds (follow signs to Kehrbal).

Naranag & Lake Gangabal

Home to seminomadic Gujar people, and a pair of remarkable (unfenced) 8th-century Shiva temple ruins (Naranag), little Naranag sits in a deep-cut river valley thick with mature conifer forests. It is mostly used by visitors as a trailhead for multiday treks in Kashmir's 'Great Lakes' uplands.

A major highlight is beautiful Lake Gangabal, which could be accessed in around seven strenuous hours' hike from Naranag village steeply following the last cascading side stream before the temple ruins. You'll gain around 1200m elevation so take things slowly! It's possible to continue in around five days to Sonamarg (or vice versa) but certain passes can be impassably snowy till late July and permits are required on certain routes (apply through Srinagar TRC or Manigal camp near Kangan). Prospective guides will likely find you on arrival in Naranag and will happily arrange pack-horses, but standards of English aren't great and pricing can be very sketchy. Most local guides have tents and sleeping bags but bringing your own would be very wise (rentable from Srinagar TRC). The advertised J&KSRTC tourist bus Srinagar–Naranag is essentially fictional due to lack of customers.

Naranag has at least eight scruffy homestay-guesthouses, most in a deplorable state of disarray. Upstairs rooms at Khan Guesthouse (☎9697559256; d without bath-room ₹500) are cleaner than most. Ashraf Jagil's Homestay (r ₹500), directly above the temple ruins, has ultra-basic floor-space accommodation sleeping up to eight people per bare room for ₹500 total (bring a sleeping bag). Scarlet-and-mustard New Pine Palace (☎7296309503, 9797121636; d ₹700-1000) has an attractive restaurant section but ensuite rooms are unkempt. At the start of town, four-room Gulshan Lodge (☎9858375734; r ₹500-1000) has balconies on two of its functional ensuite rooms.

A charter jeep from Srinagar costs ₹2400. The one daily bus service leaves at 8am for Kangan (₹20, 80 minutes) returning at 3pm. Kangan–Srinagar shared sumos (₹70, one hour) run to Lal Chowk, plus there are buses to Batmalu bus station.

Sonomarg

📍 0194 / POP 800 (SUMMER ONLY) / ELEV 2800M

Surrounded by soaring sharpened peaks and Sound of Music scenery, Sonomarg (Km85) is a strip-town marring an otherwise gorgeous alpine valley. Sitting astride the Kargil-Srinagar road, it makes a possible trekking base or a meal-stop before/after crossing the nerve-jangling 3529m Zoji La (☺ often closed for maintenance 11am-3pm Mon-Sat) pass. It's also a staging point for yatra-hike pilgrims en route to Amarnath's holy ice lingam via Balthal Camp, a summer-only mayhem of tents around 15km east.

An easy way to savour the spectacular scenery is by walking up the parallel valley to the fingertips of Thajiwās Glacier. Walking takes around an hour starting along the track between the Hotel Glacier Heights and the Army camp through a zone of newly developing buildings then curling left around the forest ridge. A more obvious (and far busier) route starts from around Km83, where you could alternatively engage small horses (₹500, only slightly faster) or take a taxi roughly half-way (₹800 return, private cars not permitted).

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

In central Sonomarg, facing the sumo stand and tourist office, is a scrappy strip of mostly jerry-built box restaurants and souvenir shops above which small, poorly maintained guest rooms typically cost ₹2000 to ₹4000 in high season (May to June) but only ₹1000 or so by September. Hotel Sonomarg (📞 9419448827; r ₹1200-2500) is currently the best of this dreary lot.

Stretching west to Km83, a building frenzy is filling once-pristine upland sheep-meadows with cheek-by-jowl new hotels. We counted 17 construction sites. At the far end of this strip, longer-established Hotel Snowland (📞 0194-2417262; Srinagar-Kargil Rd Km83; rack-rate r ₹6000-12,000, off-peak from ₹4000; ☺ May-Oct; 🏠) has grown into a veritable estate of nine comfortable sub-hotels.

Around 20 minutes' walk from Km83 towards Thajiwās Glacier, an aging green wooden building is home to Sonomarg's cheapest and most peaceful option, the misnamed J&K Tourist Dormitories (📞 Mr Hidayat 9469413011; dm/cottages ₹200/7000), with its basic old twin rooms around a central courtyard that you can pre-book at the J&KTRC office in central Sonomarg.

Sitting alone between the river and main road, 2km east of Sonomarg, the half-timbered International Youth Hostel (📞 9419707307; iyhssonmarg@gmail.com; Srinagar-Kargil Rd Km86.3; dm/q ₹550/2400) has giant, super-airy dorms are often mostly empty even in season. Facilities include snooker, table-tennis and a well-equipped weight-training gym. There's a campsite 600m further upstream and beyond near Km87 you'll find a boating pond with zorbing cylinders and a rafting point.

There are a dozen more hotels in Gagan-gir (Km74), which has a cramped feel but a spectacular setting.

📍 Getting There & Away

Srinagar Buses (₹120, over five hours) depart 7am, 9am, 11am, 2pm and 4pm. Locals prefer a shared sumo to Kangan (₹80, 90 minutes) and another from there to Srinagar (₹70, one hour).

Kargil Chartered jeeps want ₹5000. Kargil/Leh-bound buses pass through at around 8am/10.30am respectively, but are often full on arrival. So too are most shared jeeps ex-Srinagar but it's worth looking for 07 number plates stopped at the restaurant strip or bus stand. If you find a seat the charge should be ₹600 per person to Kargil. An alternative is to have a friendly hotelier phone-reserve a seat in a jeep ex-Srinagar. Give him the fare (₹1000 per seat) as a deposit as reassurance that you won't make alternative arrangements.

Gulmarg

For Indian tourists, Gulmarg's double-shot Gondola (www.gulmarggondola.com; cable car 1/2 stages in summer ₹600/1400, 1-day ski pass 1/2 stages for foreigners ₹1000/1600, locals ₹600/1000; ☺ 9am-3pm, last return around 5pm) is a great summer attraction. Foreigners who have seen mountaintops and snow before might think otherwise due to gruelling queues at the cable car and the somewhat half-hearted nature of local donkey treks once you reach the top. Mid-December to mid-March everything changes. In winter Gulmarg comes into its own as a ski centre, famed for its perfect high-altitude powder. Although a chairlift partially paralleling the gondola's second stage does offer easier alternatives, this is really a venue for extreme skiers. The basin enfolding the gondola is patrolled and blasted for avalanche prevention, but the vast majority of other couloirs and forest tracks are unsecured so it's essential to be snow-savvy and to check conditions carefully. Gulmarg Avalanche

(<http://gulmargavalanche.org>) gives detailed updates throughout the season. GM Ahanger (☎ 9596295371, 9697767268; ahangergm@gmail.com) has been recommended as a ski-guide and several outlets rent decent gear. Swiss FSH (Free Ski Himalaya; www.freeskihimalaya.com) and Australia-based Bills Trips (www.billstrips.com) offer complete ski packages.

Gulmarg is only 1½ hour's drive from Srinagar, but stay overnight to get a head start onto the pistes. Modest but switched-on Raja's Hut (☎ 9797297908; dadakhan53@yahoo.com; d/half-board ₹2500/2800) is run by a genial snowboarder and is favoured by many budget-minded international adventure folk. Other decent choices include the cheery if slightly worn, pine-decor Heeven Retreat (☎ 01954-254455; www.ahadhotelsandresorts.com; s/d/ste ₹7500/8500/11,000, breakfast/dinner buffet ₹500/850; ☎), plain family-style Shaw Inn (☎ 01954-254532, 9596972200; www.shawinn.in; s/d ₹7000/7500) or the dauntingly suave palace-hotel Khyber Himalayan (☎ 01954-254666; <http://www.khyberhotels.com>; d ₹12,500-23,000, cottages ₹50,000-75,000; ☎).

① Getting There & Away

A day-return jeep hire from Srinagar costs ₹2085 per vehicle. Alternatively, from Srinagar's Batmalu bus station take shared jeeps to Tangmarg (₹70) then change for the last 13km of hairpins to Gulmarg (₹30).

In summer a barrier is closed beside the jeep-stand forcing you to walk the last 15 minutes to the gondola, or to fall prey to cheeky horsemen who exaggeratedly claim it's 3km and want ₹150 for the trot.

Pahalgam & Aru

☎ 01936 / POP 6000 / ELEV 2400-2750M

Surrounded by alpine peaks, the Lidder and Seshnag rivers tumble down picturesque, deep-cut mountain valleys covered with giant conifers. The surrounding mountains contain many beauty spots and over 20 lakes to which countless guides and horsemen are more than keen to take you for a ride.

Not quite spoiling the great natural beauty is Pahalgam, a major resort town and staging point for the Amarnath pilgrimage. Sprawling 4km around the river junction, it offers golf, rafting and over 230 hotels ranging from vaguely Scandinavian-styled Himalaya House (☎ 01936-243072; www.himalayahouse.in; standard/deluxe ₹3000/4900; ☎) and fashion-conscious Pine Spring (☎ 01936-243386; www.hotelpinespring.com; Laripora Rd; s/d/ste ₹7000/9000/11,000) to old-fashioned chocolate-box cottage-style Alpine Inn (☎ 9906756030, 01936-243065; www.alpineinnpahalgam.com; Heeven Link Rd; d ₹3200-4500) and the basic but peacefully secluded Ramba Palace (Bentes Lodge; ☎ 01936-243296, 9419745142, 9419727379; rambapalace@yahoo.com; Mamal; d ₹500-1000, without bathroom ₹400-600), an aging budget place with breathtaking views (ask at the co-owned Palestine Hotel facing the main sumo station and you'll probably be given a free transfer as it's somewhat hard to find).

Almost any hotel is likely to urge you to try a donkey hike or full-blown trek. The best hiking often starts 12km away in Aru, a tiny village set beautifully amid the foothill peaks. In the last couple of years, foreign budget travellers have started blowing straight through over-crowded Pahalgam to stay in one of Aru's half-dozen basic accommodation options including welcoming Friends Guesthouse (☎ 01936-210928; www.friendsguesthousepahalgam.com; Aru; d ₹300-500) and Rohella Guesthouse (☎ 01936-211339, 9622761355; www.rohella.brinkster.net; Aru; s/d ₹500/600; ☎ Apr-Oct), a firm favourite with the dreadlock crowd. Milky Way Hotel (☎ 01936-210899, 9419435832; www.milkywaykashmir.com; Aru; r ₹2500-3200, without bathroom ₹800) is a slight cut above with ensuite bathrooms and an OK restaurant. Though Aru hibernates from November to March, in summer it's an easy place to find guides and horses or to simply wander off by yourself into magical upland landscapes.

① Getting There & Away

Sometimes-cancelled J&KSRTC buses run to Srinagar (₹180 to ₹260, 4.30pm) and Jammu (₹270, 7.30am). A better idea is heading first to Anantnag by shared jeep (₹80, one hour) or by rare local buses (₹42, 1½ hours). The only vehicles permitted to go to Aru (from ₹600) and Chandawari (₹700, 19km) start from the Tourist Taxi Stand (☎ 01936-243126; www.taxistand-pahalgam.com), 10 minutes' walk up the main road from the sumo station.

SOUTHERN JAMMU & KASHMIR

The state's predominantly Hindu southern region swelters at the edge of the plains. Floods of yatri (pilgrims) arrive en route to Katra (April to June and October to December) and Amarnath (July), but foreign visitors are rare.

Jammu

☑ 0191 / POP 504,000 / ELEV 327M

Jammu is the state's winter capital and pre-Independence was once the seat of J&K's Dogra dynasty. Religiously Hindu, Jammu dubs itself as the 'city of temples'. Few of these temples are historically compulsive, and for foreign tourists there's little pressing need to hang around longer than necessary to make transport connections to Amritsar, Srinagar or Dharamsala.

But if you've time to kill, consider one of the set three- to four-hour sightseeing circuits offered by certain autorickshaw drivers (₹350 to ₹500). These usually include the tall towered Ranbireswar Mandir (Shalimar Road), the glitteringly colourful Krishna and Shiva caves of Gupawala Mandir (Pinkho Rd), the large but squat 19th-century Bahu Fort and the Disney-esque concrete gods of river-side Har-ki-Paori Mandir.

Mubarak Mandi

PALACE RUINS

Started in 1710 by the Dev dynasty and vastly expanded under the 19th-century Dogras, this extensive complex of palace buildings is fascinating for both its scale and its startling state of semi-collapse. The only part that's currently accessible contains the Dogra Art Gallery (foreigner/Indian ₹50/10; ☀ 10am-5pm Tue-Sun), a museum featuring bronzes, armaments, instruments, 9th-century carvings and Kushan coins.

Renovation of the raja's impressive former 'foreign office' and Army Headquarters is nearing completion and that of the decrepit Royal Courts is due next, but restoring the gigantic shattered Gol Ghar section, hidden at the rear, could take decades.

ridge to this very European brick mansion complete with token castle-style tower. An interesting museum-like interior introduces the characters who once lived here and with the 'special' ticket you'll be escorted upstairs to peruse the Maharani's chambers with Queen Victoria portrait and bathroom complete with perfume collection. Before leaving, peep through the front curved verandah window to see the raja's canopied throne made from 101kg of gold.

Then, perhaps, retire for a cocktail at the refreshingly air-conditioned Polo Lounge bar of the Hari Niwas Palace Hotel that shares the same manicured cliff-top lawns.

Raghnath Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(Raghnath Bazaar; admission by donation; ☉ 6am-9.30pm) The large, 19th-century Raghnath Mandir marks the heart of older Jammu and features several pavilions containing thousands of what look like grey pebbles set in concrete. In fact, these are saligrams (ammonite fossils) symbolically representing the myriad deities of the Hindu pantheon.

Requests for donations are almost as plentiful. You'll be asked to deposit bags, cameras, phones and even pens before entering.

Chand Kaur Gurdwara

SIKH TEMPLE

Still unfinished, this vast complex dominates the lower city centre area with distinctive domes reminiscent of the Royal Pavilion in Brighton, England.

Sleeping

Basic budget options are plentiful, especially around Vinaik Bazaar (a block southeast of the bus station), but very few can be recommended. Near the Jammu Tawi station, pilgrim lodges like Vishnavi Dahm might have dorm-space free outside yatra season. For midrange bargains look in lanes off Residency Road for the most recently built mini-hotels. Currently these include Upkar Plaza Lodge (☎ 0191-2543321, 9419197065; upkarplaza@gmail.com; 5 Panj Bakhtar Rd; r ₹1300-1750; 🏠📶) and Hotel Natraj (☎ 0191-2547450, Anil 9419165708; www.natrajhoteljammu.com; Residency Road; d ₹1500-2000; 🏠📶). If booking online, beware that many 'Jammu' hotels listed are actually 45km away in Katra.

The mini box singles share OK bathrooms and are about the cheapest foreigner-permitted rooms in Jammu. Wi-fi in the lobby-yard.

Park Inn

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0191-2560430; Residency Rd; s/d/tr ₹1760/1980/2750, walk-in rates from ₹1230; 🏠📶) A bargain at their discount rates, this super-central pad has reliable wi-fi, good air-con and friendly management. The 11 rooms are newly redecorated with ceiling mouldings and strong colours, but bathrooms are older with rattling fans and the odd cracked loo seat. Soap and toilet paper provided. Enjoy the welcome pot of tea.

Fortune Riviera

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0191-2561415; www.fortunehotels.in; Gulab Singh Marg; s/d from ₹5280/5720; ♿ ♿) Central Jammu's most stylish and attentively businesslike hotel includes a glass elevator in the four-storey atrium, three restaurants, a coffee shop and a gym, all for just 29 soothingly cream-beige rooms with artistically conceived bedposts.

Wi-fi is free for one hour then ₹200 per day.

Eating & Drinking

Between Jewel Chowk and Vinaik Bazaar are several inexpensive dhabas, a fast-food place, wine shops and two bars. City Square Mall has Domino's Pizza, Barista Coffee and three other air-conditioned restaurants. Residency Rd has a wide range of options from cheap barbecues (near Raghunath Mandir) to vegetarian restaurants, fast food and a Café Coffee Day opposite KC Plaza.

Falak

Although views are best before sunset, the floor only starts spinning around 7pm.

Shopping

Just near the J&K Tourism office is a well-presented government arts emporium (Residency Rd; ☎ 10am-8.30pm Mon-Sat) and English-language bookshop Jay Kay Bookhouse (Residency Rd; ☎ 10am-8pm Mon-Sat).

BUS & JEEP

Private buses and shared jeeps depart from a chaotic strip in the shadow of the BC Rd (NH44 Hwy) overpass. Public buses use the big, rotting concrete bus station complex immediately east. Destinations:

Amritsar Up to 30 buses daily (₹175, six hours) via Pathankot in Punjab (₹90, 2½ hours).

Chandigarh Various private buses (seat/sleeper ₹450/600, eight hours) mostly at 9pm and 10pm.

AMARNATH

Amarnath's unique attraction is a natural stone lingam that becomes opalescent when encrusted with ice and is believed to wax and wane with the phases of the moon. Seen as symbolising Lord Shiva, it's hidden in an isolated mountain cave at 3888m, 14km from the nearest road. Joining the summer-only yatra (Hindu pilgrimage) is an unforgettable experience and the two possible routes are both very beautiful, but it's certainly not a meditative country hike. After all there are around 20,000 fellow pilgrims on the trail every day. Both blizzards and Kashmiri militants have killed pilgrims in the past so prospective yatri (pilgrim-hikers) need to be suitably equipped and must apply for a special permit that requires five photos, a medical check (at Srinagar public hospital), approved insurance, passport copy and ₹150, which should all be presented at the TRC Office in Nowgam, 12km outside Srinagar. See www.shriamarnathjishrine.com for more detail.

From the vast Bafal Camp 15km east of Sonamarg, Amarnath is just 14km away. Wealthier pilgrims complete that journey by pony, helicopter or dandy (palanquin). The longer approach starts with a 16km taxi ride from Pahalgam to Chandanwari (₹700) then a 36km, three-day hike. Either way, camps en route provide all essentials so essentially you don't need to carry much more than spare warm clothes.

Delhi Public buses 13 times daily (₹550, 13 hours) plus many private services leaving between 5pm and 10.30pm (luxury seat/sleeper/recliner ₹850/1200/1500).

Dharamsala Direct bus at 8.30am (₹260, six hours) or take an Amritsar service and change at Pathankot.

Katra Buses, minibuses and taxis depart very regularly from both bus and train stations.

Kishtwar Nine buses (₹260, seven hours) depart between 2am and 9.10am.

Manali Private bus at 8.30pm (₹750, 11 hours) from Krishna & Ashish Travel (bus station unit 13A).

Srinagar Ever-changing situation. Target journey time is 12 hours but traffic jams can extend that considerably. J&KSRTC buses should leave at 5am, 6.30am and 7am; there's a KMD basic bus at 8pm (₹400); and several private agencies have 10pm overnight departures including Sahiba and Luxmi (seat/sleeper ₹500/700). Chartered Indica/Qualis vehicles holding three/six passengers charge ₹5500/6500 one way. Drivers offering shared rides (from ₹600 to ₹800 depending on occupancy) gather along the bus station ramp and near Jewel Chowk, but while quicker than buses, departure times are highly uncertain.

TRAIN

Jammu Tawi, Jammu's main train station, is well south of the river, 5km from the bus station.

Amritsar Tata Mouri Express (18110) leaves at 2.25pm (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹184/485/690, five hours). Returning from Amritsar it departs at 8.20am.

Delhi Uttar Sampark Kranti Express (12446) departs at 9.05pm arriving 6.50am (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹355/920/1300). Slower but somewhat cheaper, the Jhelum Express (11078, departing 9.45pm) gives two hours more sleep and continues to Agra (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹395/1060/1535) arriving 1.50pm.

The new northbound railway now extends to Katra and should reach Srinagar around 2018, crossing the Chenab River on the world's tallest rail bridge.

i Getting Around

To the airport from Jewel Chowk, autorickshaws/taxis cost around ₹175/300, or use 'Satwari'-bound minibuses. From the airport, turn left on exiting the grounds to find local taxis waiting at Durga Filling Station.

Around town, overloaded minibuses and curiously stretched 'Matadors' charge ₹10 per hop: route 117 links bus and train stations, 108 goes to the fort.

Around Jammu

Accessed by foot, palanquin or helicopter from nearby Katra, the latter-day Vaishno Devi Shrine (www.maavaiashnodevi.org) is one of India's busiest pilgrim sites. It attracts millions of domestic visitors but its appeal is hard to understand for most non-Hindus.

Southwest of Udhampur, the restored historic palace Ramnagar is attractive but hardly justifies the long journey. Be aware that Ramnagar's train station is around 30km from Ramnagar itself.

Between Udhampur and Srinagar, the road winds up a vertical kilometre into mature coniferous woodlands where, between Kud and Patnitop, there lies a sprinkling of resort hotels.

Why Go?

With spectacular snowy peaks and plunging river valleys, Himachal is India's outdoor adventure playground. From trekking and climbing to rafting, paragliding and skiing, if it can be done in the mountains, it can be done here. A convoluted topography of interlocking mountain chains also makes Himachal a spectacular place simply to explore, by bus, car, motorbike or jeep safari. Every pass crossing into a new valley brings you into a different world, with its own customs, gods and even language. Villages perched on staggering slopes enchant with fairy-tale architecture and their people's easygoing warmth. Hill stations appeal with holiday atmosphere and colonial echoes, while backpacker magnets lure with their blissed-out vibe and mountain beauty. Such is the variety of the Himachali jigsaw that in McLeod Ganj, the Dalai Lama's home-away-from-home, and in Lahaul and Spiti, with their centuries-old Buddhist cultures, you might even think you've stumbled into Tibet.

When to Go

Manali

May–Jun & mid-Sep–Oct Outside the monsoon season; perfect for trekking and other activities.

Mid-Jul–mid-Sep In the monsoon season visit Lahaul and Spiti, which stay dry.

Nov–Apr Great for skiers, but snow blocks the high passes to Lahaul and Spiti.

History

Ancient trade routes dominate the history of Himachal Pradesh. Large parts of northern Himachal came under Tibetan control in the 10th century, and Buddhist culture still dominates the mountain deserts of Lahaul and Spiti. The more accessible areas in the south and west were ruled by a host of rajas, ranas and thakurs (noblemen), creating a patchwork of tiny states, with Kangra, Kullu and Chamba the most important. Sikh rajas conquered large areas in the early 19th century, but lost them with the Anglo-Sikh Wars of the 1840s, which brought most of Himachal under British control.

The British started creating little bits of England in the hills of Shimla, Dalhousie and Dharamsala. In 1864 Shimla became the British Raj's summer capital, and narrow-gauge railways were later pushed through to Shimla and the Kangra Valley. The areas under direct British rule were administered as part of the Punjab, while Chamba and the southern princedoms remained nominally independent, known as the Punjab hill states. Himachal Pradesh was formed from these princely states after Independence, liberating many villages from the feudal system. In 1966 the districts administered from Punjab – principally Kangra, Kullu, Lahaul and Spiti – were added, and full statehood was achieved in 1971. Initially neglected by central government, Himachal has been reinvented as the powerhouse of India, with huge hydroelectric plants providing power for half the country.

SOUTHERN HIMACHAL PRADESH

As soon as you cross the state line from Hariana the landscape starts to crinkle and fold in steep, forest-covered ridges – the foothills that herald the grand Himalayan ranges further north. The main travel destination in the south is Shimla, the former summer capital of British-ruled India. The official district website is <http://hpshimla.gov.in>.

Strung out along a 12km ridge, with steep forested hillsides falling away in all directions, the Himachal capital is a good appetite-whetter for the awe-inspiring mountain tracts of the state's interior. Shimla is one of India's most popular hill resorts, buzzing with a happy flow of Indian vacationers and full of echoes of its past role as the summer capital of British India. The long, winding main street, the Mall, runs east and west just below the spine of the

Losar (Tibetan New Year; ☀ late Jan, Feb or early March) Tibetans across Himachal, including in McLeod Ganj and Spiti, celebrate their New Year with processions, music, dancing and chaams (ritual masked dances by monks).

Minjar Festival (☀ Jul/Aug) A week of processions, music, dance and markets at Chamba.

Manimahesh Yatra (☀ Aug/Sep) Shaivites trek for three days to bathe in Manimahesh Lake near Bharmour, one of Shiva's mythical abodes.

Phulech Festival (☀ Sep/Oct) Villagers in Kalpa and throughout Kinnaur fill temple courtyards with flowers; oracles perform sacrifices and make predictions for the coming year.

Dussehra (☀ Oct) Intense and spectacular week-long celebration of the defeat of the demon Ravana, at Kullu.

International Himalayan Festival (☀ 10-11 Dec) Celebrating the Dalai Lama's Nobel Peace Prize, this McLeod Ganj festival features cultural performances by groups from all around the Himalaya.

hill. South of it, the maze-like alleys of the bustling bazaar cascade steeply down to traffic-busy Cart Rd, which has the train station, Old Bus Station and taxi stands. Traffic is banned from the central part of town, so walking anywhere is pleasant – even when huffing and puffing uphill. A passenger lift provides a quick route between the eastern Mall and Cart Rd. Porters will carry your luggage uphill (about ₹100 from Cart Rd to the Mall) but many double as hotel touts.

The official centre of town is the junction called Scandal Point. From here, the flat open area known as the Ridge stretches east to Christ Church. A jagged line of distant snowy peaks is clearly visible for about half the year. From mid-July to mid-September Shimla is frequently wreathed in cloud, and in winter it often gets a carpeting of snow.

History

Until the British arrived, there was nothing at Shimla but a sleepy forest glade known as Shyamala (a local name for Kali – the Hindu destroyer-of-evil goddess). Then a Scottish civil servant named Charles Kennedy built a summer home here in 1822 and nothing was ever the same again. In 1864 Simla (its colonial-era name) became the official summer capital of the Raj, and from then until 1939 the entire government of India fled here for half of every year from the sweltering heat of the plains, bringing with them hundreds of muleloads of files, forms and other paraphernalia of government.

When the Kalka–Shimla railway was opened in 1906, Shimla's status as India's premier hill station was assured. The town became a centre not only of government but also of social frolics for the elite of the Raj. Maharajas as well as colonial grandees built mansions here, and the season was filled with grand balls at the Viceroy's lodge, picnics in the woods, amateur dramatics at the Gaiety Theatre and much flirtation and frivolity. Rudyard Kipling, who spent many years here, used Shimla as the setting for parts of Kim and his short-story collection Plain Tales from the Hills.

lovely Victorian theatre, opened in 1877 and now splendidly restored, has long been a focus of Shimla social life. Rudyard Kipling, Shashi Kapoor and various viceroys are among those who have trodden its Burmese teak boards. Today it hosts visiting theatre companies as well as 15 local dramatic societies. of Advanced Study: you can take a half-hour tour of a few rooms with interesting photo exhibits, but the old ballroom and dining hall are now a library and closed to visitors.

The handsome gardens still make an enjoyable stroll. The Lodge is 3.5km west of Scandal Point: fork left 100m after the Oberoi Cecil hotel, go 700m to the lodge gate, then 400m more to the lodge itself. Opposite the lodge gate is the glum Himalayan Bird Park (admission ₹15; ☀️10am-5pm Wed-Mon), where you can see the iridescent monal pheasant, Himachal's state bird.

Jakhu Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

Shimla's most famous temple, a steep 30-minute hike up from the east end of the Ridge, is dedicated to the monkey god Hanuman, so it's quite appropriate that hundreds of rhesus macaques loiter around, harassing devotees for prasad (temple-blessed food offerings). Nearby a 33m-high pink statue of Hanuman looms above the treetops and is visible from most of Shimla.

The hilltop is awash in devotional music and the temple houses a small shrine surrounded by funky relief murals of Hanuman performing feats from the Ramayana.

On the way up to the temple, have a peep through the gates of Rothney Castle, built for colonial reformer and naturalist Allan Octavian Hume, who amassed the world's largest collection of stuffed Asiatic birds here before donating it to the British Museum.

Primate alert: the monkeys on this route can be a menace, so bring a walking stick to discourage them.

Himachal State Museum

MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner ₹20/50, camera ₹50/100; ☀️10am-5pm Tue-Sun) About 2.5km west of Scandal Point, up near the telecommunications mast, the state museum occupies an 1860s mansion and houses an impressive collection of Himachali, Rajasthani and Punjabi miniatures, as well as colourful traditional costumes and jewellery, delicate stone and wood carvings, and interesting photos of Himachal temples.

Christ Church

CHURCH

(☎️2652953; the Ridge; ☀️10.30am-1pm & 2.15-5.30pm, services in English 9am Sun) This very English church, opened in 1846, dominates the Ridge and is the oldest surviving church in northern India. Its creamy-lemon paint job is uninspiring but it contains some moving Raj-era memorials and typical Victorian stained glass.

Kali Bari Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

The Bengali-hut-style Kali Bari Mandir, on the hillside above the Mall, 500m west of Scandal Point, enshrines an image of Kali as Shyamala. There are good views over Shimla.

Walking

WALKING

Apart from the 'Heritage Walk' from Scandal Point to the Viceregal Lodge and walks to and around Jakhu Temple, there are several routes around Shimla's periphery using minor roads and forest paths. The Scandal Point tourist office (p289) can help with routes and the current condition of tracks.

A down-and-up circuit of around 9km leads down through the suburb/village of Kaithu to the green meadow of Annandale, once the site of colonial polo games and now home to a golf course and the Himachal chief minister's helipad. It then goes up a road through lovely cedar woods and down trails to The Glen, a forested valley that was once a playground of British colonialists, then back up to the Mall, about 2km west of Scandal Point.

The road northwest from the Viceregal Lodge gate leads 2km to Summer Hill village (on the Shimla-Kalka railway and site of Himachal Pradesh University). The road southwest from the lodge gate leads in about 2km, via Boileauganj village, to the interesting Kamna Devi Temple at Prospect Hill, with good views.

Shimla Walks

WALKING

(☎9817141099, 2841858; www.shimlawalks.com) A professional operation run by local writer Sumit Vashisht, Shimla Walks offers excellent guided walks on and off the beaten track. Day or half-day trips (₹2000 to ₹3500 for up to four people) provide rare insights along the popular route to the Viceregal Lodge, or take you to writers' and artists' houses or Shimla's hidden Raj-era cemeteries. Also on offer are trips up the area's highest peak, Shali Tibba (2872m), hiking trips among remote mountain villages in the Inner Seraj region, and tours combining walking with stays in the homes of former local royal families.

Great Escape Routes

OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

(☎9418012500, 6533037; www.greatescaperroutes.com; 6 Andi Bhavan; ☀10am-9pm; 📞) Specialises in trekking and adventure tours around the state, including some local hikes over-nighting in homestays, and can put you in touch with local mountain-bike guides. Ask for Nitin or Raman.

YMCA Tours & Treks

OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

(Captivate Adventure Travels; ☎9857102657; www.himalayansites.com; YMCA, The Ridge; ☀9am-6pm) The affable Anil Kumar runs day trips around Shimla and arranges reasonably priced treks, jeep safaris and mountain biking throughout Himachal and beyond. He can help travellers get together to cut costs.

Sleeping

You're paying for the location when staying in Shimla and hotels don't generally offer great value by Himachal standards, especially during the peak seasons (late April to June, Christmas/New Year and major holidays). But outside peak seasons, discounts of up to 40% are available at many places.

YMCA

HOSTEL $

(☎2650021; ymcashimla@yahoo.co.in; the Ridge; s/d without bathroom incl breakfast ₹600/800) Up steps beside the Ritz Cineplex, the bright-red YMCA takes all comers, regardless of age, gender or religion. Rooms are neat and pleasant, the shared bathrooms are immaculate, and there's a nice sunset terrace. The atmosphere can be dreary in slow periods, but it's a reliable, clean, budget choice.

THE MALL

Traffic-free for a good part of its winding 7km length, the Mall is the heartbeat of Shimla life, strung with hotels, shops, and colonial-era buildings; both decaying and refurbished, and busy with people everywhere. It runs up from Chotta Shimla, southeast of the centre, to Scandal Point, then west along to the Viceregal Lodge. The Town Hall, beside Scandal Point, dates from 1910 and is oddly reminiscent of the mansion in Hammer Horror films.

West of Scandal Point, just above the Mall, a pretty quasi-Tudor folly houses the post office (1883). A further 700m west the turreted Railway Board Building (1897), built with fire-resistant cast iron and steel, now houses government and police offices. Just past here is the grand neo-Gothic Gorton Castle (1904), formerly the colonial government secretariat and now Himachal's State Accountant-General's Office.

Hotel City View

HOTEL $

(☎ 2811666; jagdishthakur80@gmail.com; US Club Rd; r ₹700-1500) This friendly place has a variety of reasonably well-kept rooms, the best of which are at the front and have bright views. The top floor has a small shared terrace and there are discounts for singles, making this solid value for Shimla.

★ Spars Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 2657908; www.sparslodge.com; Museum Rd; s/d ₹990/1410, ste ₹2000-2590; 📶) Though it's 2km west of Scandal Point, on the road up to the State Museum, Spars is worth the trip for its inviting, homey feel, welcoming owners, bright, clean, airy rooms, and lovely sunny dining-cum-sitting area upstairs. The restaurant (mains ₹175 to ₹400) serves great food, including local trout and all-day English breakfasts, and has wi-fi. Room rates are fixed throughout the year.

Hotel Le Royale

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2651002; hotel-le-royale-shimla.hotelsgds.com; Jakhu Rd; r ₹2590-4520; 📶) The front rooms at this hotel on the road to Jakhu Temple, a steep 500m up from the Ridge, are large, bright and comfy and enjoy great views. The cheaper 'deluxe' quarters face to the rear and are smaller but still adequately comfortable. It's friendly, efficiently run and the in-house Green Leaf restaurant is handy. Wi-fi reaches the lobby, the two rooms beside it, and the restaurant.

Hotel White

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2656136; www.hotelwhitesimla.com; Lakkur Bazar; d ₹1760-2350) Northeast of the Ridge, through a bustling bazaar, the White is well run and rates are fixed all year. Rooms are clean and well kept and the better ones have terraces or balconies. The huge suites are perfect for families, and there are discounts for singles. Light sleepers might be disturbed by traffic noise from Circular Rd.

Hotel Amber

HOTEL $$

(☎ 2654994; hotellambershimla@gmail.com; Ram Bazar; s ₹780-1350, d ₹980-1680) In the thick of the bazaar, Amber provides cosy, carpeted (if smallish) rooms, with good, clean bathrooms, at moderate prices. It overlooks the Ram Mandir, a couple of minutes' walk up from the Old Bus Station, and has a decent, inexpensive little restaurant.

★ Oberoi Cecil

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2804848; www.oberoiocecil.com; the Mall, Chaura Maidan; s/d/ste incl breakfast from ₹16,440/17,620/31,710; 📶📶📶) This grand high-rise, 2km west of Scandal Point, is Shimla's glitziest hotel. Discreet colonial-era charm outside gives way to modern, wood-clad luxury within. Rooms are luxurious, with tastefully trad furnishings, and the hotel has a lovely indoor pool and fine restaurant. Discounts are available for bookings 21 days or more in advance.

The Cecil is where Mohan Singh Oberoi got his first hotel job, as a clerk, in 1922. He went on to found the luxury hotel chain that bears his name, buying the Cecil along the way in 1944. It was radically modernised in the 1990s.

Hotel Springfields

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2621297; www.hotelspringfields.com; opposite Tibetan School, Chotta Shimla; r/ste ₹4670/7640; 📶) The erstwhile summer retreat of the Raja of Sheikhpura, now run by his charming descendants, Springfields features neatly trimmed lawns and bright, spacious rooms with appealing heritage-style furnishings, parquet floors, tea- and-coffee makers and large, marble-floored bathrooms. Best of all is the huge family suite with balcony, upstairs. It's a 30-minute walk or ₹200 taxi ride from Shimla centre.

Chapslee

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 2658663; www.chapslee.com; r half-board ₹17,500-26,775; 📶) For the full Raj treatment, you can't beat the outrageously ostentatious former home of Raja Charanjit Singh of Kapurthala. This exclusive hilltop retreat is crammed with chandeliers, tapestries, Persian carpets, Mughal ceramics and baroque furniture. There are just five sumptuous bedrooms, all with completely original fittings, plus a library, card room, sun lounge, tennis court and, of course, a croquet lawn.

Chapslee is perched atop Elysium Hill, on the northern outskirts of Shimla, within walking distance of the Ridge and Mall.

Marina

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 6629999; www.marinashimla.com; the Mall; r ₹9280-11,630; 📶📶) An adventurous departure from Shimla's touristic obsession with the past, the Marina provides immaculate contemporary-style rooms in blue and purple tones with flock wallpaper and black leather sofas. Service is polished and all rooms have balconies, views and tea- and coffee-makers. The hotel is also equipped with a good multicuisine restaurant, a spa, gym, and DJ music in the lounge-bar till 10.30pm.

Eating & Drinking

As well as the formal restaurants, there are dozens of Indian snack places in the bazaar area serving samosas, potato cakes, channa bhatura (spiced chickpeas with a puffed, light, deep-fried bread) and other tidbits.

Indian Coffee House CAFE $
(the Mall; dishes ₹20-60; ☀8am-9pm) This Shimla institution is like an old boys' club with its ageing leather seats, uniformed waiters and blackboard menu. Packed with chattering locals for much of the day, it's the most atmospheric place in town for breakfast, cheap dosas and coffee (don't even ask for tea!).

Wake & Bake MULTICUISINE $$
(34/1 the Mall; dishes ₹100-300; ☀9.30am-10.30pm; ☎) This upstairs cafe is about the hippest eatery in Shimla (which isn't saying too much), serving up organic South Indian coffee, pizza by the slice, hummus, toasties and excellent crêpes. Wi-fi is ₹60 per hour.

Ashiana INDIAN $$
(the Ridge; mains ₹100-250; ☀9am-11pm) In a fanciful circular building, Ashiana is an almost-elegant restaurant and good people-watching spot, with a delightful sunny terrace. As well as tasty Indian dishes there are Chinese and a few Thai favourites. In Ashiana's basement, Goofa (the Ridge; dishes ₹80-230; ☀9am-9.30pm) serves most of the same dishes for about ₹20 less.

Baljee's INDIAN $$
(26 the Mall; mains ₹130-240; ☀9am-10.30pm) Clean, cosy and air-conditioned, with bow-tied waiters, Baljee's gets packed with Indian families, many of whom come for the snacks and South Indian specialities. Breakfasts of omelettes, toast and dosas are good, too.

Cecil Restaurant MULTICUISINE $$$
(☎2804848; Oberoi Cecil, the Mall, Chaura Maidan; mains ₹940-1600; ☀dinner 7.30-10.30pm) For a formal night out, look no further than the colonial-era elegance of the Cecil Restaurant at the Oberoi. The menu is strong on Indian and Thai curries and there are Continental options as well. Book ahead.

Himani's BAR
(the Mall; beer from ₹110; ☀6am-10pm) The neon and marble decor is straight out of the 1980s, but Himani's is a decent place for a casual drink or meals like chicken tikka (mains ₹125 to ₹215). The inside can be smoky and male-dominated, but the top-floor terrace overlooking the Mall is perfect on a sunny afternoon.

Shopping

Local holidaymakers head to the fashionable shops along the Mall for Himachali and Kashmiri shawls and other apparel. For a slice of more traditional Indian commerce, wander the labyrinthine bazaar area sprawling below the Mall. You can buy anything here from peacock feathers and henna kits to bangles and bicycles. It's fascinating to explore the different zones devoted to fruit and veg (Sabzi Mandi), spices, fabrics and more.

Himachal Emporium HANDICRAFTS
(☎2011234; www.himcrafts.com; the Mall; ☀10am-1pm & 2.30-7.30pm Mon-Sat) Kullu and Kinnauri shawls, thick Lahauli wool socks and other appealing Himachal crafts are sold at reasonable prices at this state-government crafts enterprise.

Asia Book House BOOKS
(the Mall; ☀10am-8.30pm Mon-Sat, 10am-1pm Sun) Novels, guides and other books on India.

Minerva Book House BOOKS
(☎2803078; the Mall; ☀10.30am-1.30pm & 2.30-8pm Mon-Sat, noon-8pm Sun) Good for novels and books on Himachal Pradesh.

Maria Brothers BOOKS
(78 the Mall; ☀10.30am-1pm & 3.30-7.30pm Mon-Sat) One of India's great antiquarian booksellers: the dusty shelves are packed with Himalayan travelogues, maps and engravings, at prices aimed firmly at collectors.

Information

Numerous ATMs are dotted around Scandal Point and the Mall. Laws exist banning plastic bags, littering, smoking and spitting in public places; police can hit offenders with a ₹200 fine.

HPTDC Tourist Office (Himachal Pradesh Tourist Development Corporation, Himachal Tourism; ☎2652561; www.hptdc.gov.in; Scandal Point; ☀9am-8pm, to 7pm mid-Jul-mid-Sep & Dec-Mar) Very helpful for local information and advice; also books HPTDC buses, hotels and tours.

Indira Gandhi Medical College (☎2803073; IGMC Rd) Large public hospital with 24-hour outpatient department.

Photo Palace (the Mall; internet per hour ₹40; ☀10am-8pm) Decent internet facilities in the town centre.

Post Office (Scandal Point; ☀9.30am-5.30pm) There are several suboffices along the Mall.

Punjab National Bank (the Mall; ☎10am-2pm & 3-4pm Mon-Fri, 10am-1pm Sat) Changes cash for major currencies, and American Express travellers cheques.

i Getting There & Away

AIR

At the time of research there were no flights to Jubbarhatti airport, 23km west of Shimla. Seasonal services from Delhi may resume at some point. The nearest other airport is at Chandigarh, a four-hour drive from Shimla.

BUS

The Himachal Road Transport Corporation (HRTC) runs five comfortable Volvo AC buses to Delhi (₹842, 10 hours) each day, as well as 12 cheaper deluxe and ordinary services (₹384 to ₹592). Other HRTC AC buses head to Manali (₹550, nine hours) at 9.30am and Dharamsala (₹926, nine hours) at 5.30pm. All HRTC buses leave from the New Bus Station, a 5km trip west from the town centre: make reservations at the HRTC booth (☎11am-2pm & 3-6.30pm) at Scandal Point.

The HPTDC runs a Volvo AC bus to Delhi (₹900, 10 hours) at 8.30pm, and a non-AC deluxe bus to Manali (₹550, nine hours) at 8.30am, both starting from near the tourist information booth on Cart Rd west of Victory Tunnel: get tickets at the HPTDC Tourist Office (p289).

TAXI

The Kalka-Shimla Taxi Union (☎2658225) has its stand near the Old Bus Station, while Vishal Himachal Taxi Operators Union (☎2805164) operates from the bottom of the passenger lift. Most hotels and travel agencies can organise car transfers to other towns, or a car and driver for an extended tour. A cab for up to four people to Manali costs around ₹5000, to Chandigarh ₹2500 and to Delhi around ₹6000. You pay around ₹500 more for AC. Vishal charges ₹1550 for day trips up to 80km, plus ₹12 for each extra kilometre.

TRAIN

One of the little joys of Shimla is getting to or from it by the narrow-gauge toy train from Kalka, just north of Chandigarh, along the Kalka-Shimla Railway, which has been operating since 1906 and is one of the World Heritage-listed Mountain Railways of India. Although the steam trains are long gone, it's a scenic five-to-six-hour trip, with 102 tunnels and 988 bridges on its winding 96km route. Shimla station is 1.5km west of Scandal Point on Cart Rd – a 20-to-30-minute uphill walk to town.

Trains leave Kalka for Shimla at 4am, 5.10am, 5.30am, 6am and 12.10pm, and start the return trip at 10.35am, 2.25pm, 4.25pm, 5.40pm and 6.15pm. The most comfortable option is the Shivalik Express (train 52451 from Kalka at 5.30am, train 52452 from Shimla at 5.40pm) with AC chair cars only, costing ₹415/500 uphill/downhill including food. All other trains have 2nd-class coaches (₹25 unreserved, ₹40 to ₹65 reserved) and fairly spartan 1st-class coaches (₹255 to ₹315).

The Himalayan Queen service runs from/to Delhi Sarai Rohilla, with comfortable connection times at Kalka and fares of ₹435/120 (chair car/2nd class) for the Delhi-Kalka (or vice-versa) leg:

A quicker alternative (4¼ hours) for the Delhi-Kalka (or vice-versa) leg is the Kalka Shatabdi: train 12011 departs New Delhi station for Kalka (chair car ₹635) at 7.40am and train 12012 leaves Kalka for New Delhi (₹720) at 5.45pm.

There's a rail booking office (☎9am-1pm & 2-4pm Mon-Sat) on the Ridge.

i Getting Around

The only way to get around central Shimla is on foot. Taxis are banned from the Ridge and much of the Mall. Fortunately a two-part lift (per person ₹10; ☀ 8am-10pm, to 9pm Dec-Mar & mid-Jul-mid-Sep) connects Cart Rd with the Mall about 600m east of Scandal Point. Taxis from the train station/New Bus Station to the bottom of the lift cost ₹150/250. Green local buses (₹7) run every few minutes between the New Bus Station and the Old Bus Station on Cart Rd.

Around Shimla

Several villages and small towns outside Shimla attract crowds of day-trippers: the HPTDC Tourist Office (p289) organises bus tours (₹270 to ₹310) to places including Naldehra, Narkanda and Chail, if you have time on your hands. Naldehra, 25km northeast of Shimla, is famous chiefly for Naldehra Golf Club (☎ 0177-2747656; <http://naldehragolfclub.in>; green fees Indian/foreigner ₹393/562, club hire ₹281; ☀ 7am-7pm Apr-Sep, 8am-5pm Oct-Mar), established in 1905 by British viceroy Lord Curzon. Set among tall cedars, it's a challenging course with the added quirk that many holes share the same fairway, simply criss-crossing it at different angles. Hire a caddy (₹150 per nine holes) or you won't know where you're going. You can have a drink or snack in the clubhouse whether you're playing or not.

Kalka-Shimla Taxi Union (p290) charges ₹1400 for a tour to Naldehra and nearby Mashobra. Five daily buses to Naldehra (₹33, one hour, 6.30am to 12.45pm) leave from Shimla's small Rivoli bus stand (Circular Rd).

Châteaux Naldehra

The restaurant (mains ₹1100-2650; ☀ 12-30-3pm & 7-10.30pm), with a lovely panoramic terrace, serves a daily-changing menu of Indian, Continental and Asian fare and is open to non-guests by reservation.

KINNAUR

The district of Kinnaur, stretching up to the Tibetan border in southeastern Himachal, is blessed with magnificent mountain and valley scenery and a cultural and ethnic mix that changes gradually from Aryan Hindu to Tibetan Buddhist as you progress eastward. Hwy 05 (formerly Hwy 22 and still so marked in places) threads a spectacular route up the Sutlej valley, following, for long sections, the course of the historic Hindustan-Tibet Road, a track constructed by the British in the 19th century in the hope of providing access to Tibet.

This is a land of mountain villages with slate-roofed temples, vast apple orchards, plunging gorges between towering snow-capped peaks, and hair-raising roads. Beyond it lies Spiti, the two combining into a loop from Shimla to Manali or Keylong in an unending sequence of breathtaking scenery. Check road conditions beforehand, as monsoon landslides, floods in the Sutlej valley or heavy winter snows can block the roads for days or even weeks. To travel between Rekong Peo in Kinnaur and Sumdo in Spiti, foreigners need an inner line permit, easily obtained in Rekong Peo.

The Kinnauris are proud but friendly people who mainly survive from farming and apple growing. You can recognise them all over India by their green felt basheri hats. To truly appreciate their land, you need to leave the main road, much of which is scarred by the multiple dam projects that

PABBAR VALLEY

This mellow, little-visited valley runs northeast from tiny Hatkoti, set in rolling fields about 105km east of Shimla. Hatkoti's 8th-century Kinnauri-style Hatkeshwari Mata Temple, dedicated to Durga as Mahishasurmardini (slayer of the buffalo demon Mahishasur), and the neighbouring Shiva temple, are well worth a trip, especially when Shaivite pilgrims convene during the Chaitra Navratra and Asvin Navratra festivals in April and October. Pilgrims' quarters are available at the temple or you can stay in large rooms at the HPTDC's Hotel Chanshal (☎01781-240661; www.hptdc.gov.in; s ₹1060-1410, d ₹1410-1880; 🏠), 14km up the valley in Rohru. Beyond Rohru, the scenic valley runs up between 4000m-plus peaks to meet the range forming the west side of Kinnaur's Sangla Valley; there is some excellent hiking. En route from Shimla, 12km before Hatkoti, Jubbal is home to a fanciful 1930 palace built in a mix of Chinese, Indian and European styles for the Rana of Jubbal.

are turning the powerful Sutlej into a massive generator.

Lower Kinnaur gets monsoon rains in July and August, but east of Rekong Peo the landscape quickly becomes much more arid as you enter the rain shadow of the Great Himalaya Range. During the peak tourist seasons here – May, June and October – it's worth booking ahead for rooms in popular spots like Sarahan, the Sangla Valley and Kalpa.

A good source of information on Kinnaur, is the local government website www.hpkinnaur.gov.in.

Rampur

☎01782 / POP 5700 / ELEV 1005M

The gateway to Kinnaur, this bustling bazaar town was the winter capital of the Bushahr rajahs who ruled Kinnaur. Today, Rampur is mainly a place to change buses, but if you have time check out the delightful, terraced and turreted Padam Palace, built for the Maharaja of Bushahr in the early 20th century; only the garden is open to visitors. It's just beside the Old Bus Stand in the centre. The Lavi Fair, a huge commercial and cultural get-together in the second week of November, attracts traders and pilgrims from all over northwest India.

If you need to stay, Hotel Satluj View (☎233924; r ₹550-2350; 🏠), just past the temple opposite the Old Bus Stand and down some steps, has rooms ranging from dingy but clean to large and air-conditioned, with big windows and balconies overlooking the rushing Sutlej River. Its restaurant (mains ₹125-295; ☀7am-10.30pm) is the best place to eat in the town centre.

Rampur's bus station is 2km east of the centre but many people jump on through buses at the chaotic Old Bus Stand in the centre. From the bus station there are services to Rekong Peo (₹165, five hours) at least hourly till 4.30pm, to Shimla (₹200, five hours) every half-hour till 9.30pm, to Sarahan (₹65, two hours) about every 20 minutes till 6.15pm, and to Sangla (₹170, five hours) at 4.30am and 12.30pm.

Sarahan

☎01782 / POP 1700 / ELEV 1920M

The former summer capital of the Bushahr kingdom, Sarahan is dominated by the fabulous Bhimakali Temple (☀7.30am-7pm), built in the traditional Kinnauri manner from layers of stone and timber to absorb the force of earthquakes. There are two towers here, one recently rebuilt after the 12th-century original collapsed, and one from the 1920s (on the left) containing a highly revered shrine to Bhimakali (the local version of Kali) beneath a beautiful silver-fligree canopy on its top floor. The curved, peaked roofs suggest the Tibetan influence on Kinnauri architecture, which becomes more marked as you move up the valley.

For entry to the innermost courtyard with the towers, male visitors must wear a cap (available on the spot) and cameras and leather items must be left in lockers. To the right of the two towers is the squat Lankra Vir Temple, where human sacrifices were carried out right up to the 18th century.

Sleeping & Eating

Most lodgings will provide meals, or you can choose from a handful of dhabas (small eateries serving snacks and simple local meals) in the bazaar area below the temple.

Temple Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 274248; dm ₹70, r ₹350-550) Rooms here, within the ancient temple precinct itself, are plain and simple but, unlike most temple accommodation, far from gloomy. The upper-storey rooms in particular are bright, spacious and airy, with hot water.

Hotel Sagarika

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9805694216; www.deblokgrouphotels.in; r ₹1200-1800) Rooms here are clean, carpeted and well maintained, and the welcome is friendly. It has great views of the temple from the upper front rooms, and vistas of snow-capped mountains from the back. Discounts of up to 50% are available outside peak seasons.

Hotel Srikhand

MULTICUISINE $$

(☎ 274234; www.hptdc.gov.in; mains ₹110-290; ☎ 7.30am-9.30pm) The classiest place for a civilised dinner, or to savour a beer (they serve full-bodied Zingaro) while enjoying panoramic views over the valley. Rooms (s ₹1410-2380, d ₹1880-3170) are carpeted and have mountain views, and in most cases balconies, but are nothing fancy.

i Information

There's a State Bank ATM (Main Bazar) opposite the Civil Hospital.

i Getting There & Away

There are three daily buses to Shimla (₹260, seven hours) but you can also get one of the frequent services to Rampur (₹65, two hours) and change there. To head on eastward into Kinnaur, take any bus as far as Jeori (₹30, 45 minutes), on the highway below Sarahan, and catch an eastbound bus there. The last bus from Jeori up to Sarahan leaves around 7pm. Taxis are about ₹350.

Sangla Valley

☎ 01786

The Sangla (aka Baspa) Valley is a deeply carved cleft between burly mountain slopes, where evergreen forests rise to alpine meadows crowned by snowy summits. Villages here feature houses and temples built in traditional Kinnauri timber-and-stone-style. The hair-raising road to the valley leaves Hwy 05 at Karcham, passing the gushing outflow pipes from a big hydroelectric plant.

Sangla

POP 2250 / ELEV 2680M

The largest settlement in the valley, Sangla is a place where you might find yourself staying overnight if you can't find onward transport. It has a couple of cybercafes and a State Bank ATM on the main street. Clinging to a rocky spur 2km north (about 30 minutes' walk), Kamru village was the original capital of the Bushahr kingdom and its impressive tower-style Kamru Fort contains an important shrine to the goddess Kamakhya Devi (shoes and leather items must be removed, heads covered and a waist sash worn).

One of the most appealing places to stay is Sangla Resort Guesthouse (☎ 242401; dm ₹330, d ₹900-1000; ☎ closed Dec-Mar), 200m down the road from the bridge below the bus stand, then 150m up a track to the right. The nine double rooms and one four-bed dorm are spotless, and there are nice views over the surrounding orchards. Breakfast is available and there are discounts outside May, June and October. Sangla centre has several near-identical 'Tibetan restaurants' centred on the Tibetan Cafeteria (dishes ₹50-60; ☎ 8am-8pm).

i Getting There & Away

Buses run to Rampur (₹170, five hours) at 6.30am, 11.30am, 12.30pm and 5.30pm, to Rekong Peo (₹65, 2½ hours) at 7am, 8am, 9am and 2.45pm, and up the valley to Chitkul (₹35, one hour) at 8am, 11.30am, 4.30pm and 5.30pm. There's a 7am bus to Shimla (₹350, 11 hours). Taxis ask ₹1500 to Chitkul and ₹800 to Karcham.

Sangla to Chitkul

The valley's best accommodation is upstream from Sangla. There are some lovely day and half-day walks from these places – in the valley or up to glaciers or mountain meadows – and you can day-trip up to Chitkul.

Rupin River View Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9816686789; www.hotelinsangla.com; r ₹1000-2400; ☎ closed Dec-Feb) Lovely river and mountain views from clean, medium-sized rooms with balconies, plus a bright Indian restaurant, are the successful recipe at this friendly, good-value hotel in Rakchham village, 13km up the valley from Sangla.

Banjara Camps

TENT RESORT $$$

(☎9816881936; www.banjaracamps.com; full-board s ₹6300-12,075, d ₹7350-13,125; ☺closed Nov-mid-Mar) Banjara's comfortable, large tents, with beds, furniture and proper bathrooms, are spaced around a flower-strewn apple orchard on a beautiful river bend 6km up the valley from Sangla. There are also two riverbank cottages and 14 rooms in a handsome stone building called the Retreat. It's excellent accommodation, with good food, in a near-idyllic setting.

Pretty Batseri village, across the river, has won awards for cleanliness. Its Badrinarayan Temple burnt down in 1998, but has been rebuilt in full traditional style, even down to the band of erotic carvings on its outside wall.

Chitkul

POP 600 / ELEV 3450M

Chitkul, 25km from Sangla, is easily the most scenic settlement in the valley and sees a steady flow of international and domestic tourists.

👁 Sights & Activities

A good number of traditional Kinnauri-style wooden houses topped with slate roofs survive despite the encroachment of concrete and tin. The Mohatmin Mandir temple in the middle of the village, dedicated to the local god Mathi, has some excellent carving in wood and stone.

Walks & Treks

A short walk up the hillside above the village opens up some great views, and even better is the 3km track up the beautiful valley to the Indo-Tibet Border Post at Nagasti. Civilians are not allowed past the border post even though Tibet is still about 40km away. For longer day walks you can head up the Baspa's side valleys. Chitkul is also where the three-day trekking trail circumambulating Kinner Kailash descends into the Sangla Valley, and trekking routes to Uttarakhand's Garhwal region head over passes on the south side of the valley (it's eight to 10 days to Harsil near Gangotri).

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

The best of the guesthouses is Kinner Heights (☎9805628801; r ₹550-850; ☺closed Jan-Mar), with good clean rooms. Owner Baabe makes good meals and can give tips on walks and arrange guides and porters for treks. Other decent options, also at the bottom of the village, include the simple Thakur Guest House (☎8988209604; r ₹300-600), and the more upmarket Shahensha Resort (☎9805649505; www.geetanjaligroupofhotels.com; r ₹1100-2200; ☺closed Nov-Mar), with multicuisine food (mains ₹80 to ₹200).

📍 Getting There & Away

Buses leave Chitkul for Rekong Peo (₹104, four hours) at 6am and 1.30pm, and for Shimla (₹375, 12 hours) at 3.30pm, all going through Sangla.

Rekong Peo

☎01786 / POP 2400 / ELEV 2290M

Rekong Peo is the main administrative and commercial centre for Kinnaur and a transport hub; the main reason for travellers to visit is as a stepping stone to the pretty village of Kalpa, or to obtain an inner line permit for onward travel to upper Kinnaur and Spiti. Known locally as 'Peo', the town spreads along a looping road about 10km above Hwy 05. Most hotels, and an SBI ATM, are in the main bazaar below the bus stand.

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

Ridang Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎8627968336; d ₹400-1000) The best of a grotty bunch of hotels lining the main bazaar, Ridang has a range of acceptable rooms and a reasonable ground-floor restaurant.

Little Chef's Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Main Bazar; mains ₹100-200; ☺8am-10pm) The sunny rooftop here is the nicest place to eat, with a good range of breakfasts, thalis, snacks and Indian dishes, including Kinnauri-style rajma (spiced kidney beans).

📍 Information

The government Tourist Information Centre

(☎222897; ☺10am-1.30pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd Sat of month) below the bazaar has a rail reservation office. Several agencies in the same building are good for arranging inner line permits. Monk Travels (☎9805530056; www.themonktravels.com; internet per hr ₹60) will obtain your permit for ₹350 within about an hour if you bring your passport between 10am and 3pm (best in the morning), except on Sundays and the second Saturday of each month, when the permit-issuing office is closed. The agency helps solo travellers hook up with others for paperwork purposes only, since the powers-that-be prefer groups of two or more. All travellers need to come in person to be photographed. The permits are valid for 14 days.

i Getting There & Away

The bus stand is 2km uphill from the main bazaar by road, or 500m by the steps starting next to the police compound at the top of ITBP Rd.

Buses run roughly hourly until 6.30pm for Shimla (₹375, 10 hours), with deluxe services (₹460) at 5.30am and 1.30pm. For Sarahan, change at Jeori (₹140, four hours). Buses to Sangla (₹65, 2½ hours) and Chitkul (₹104, four hours) leave at 9.30am and noon, and there's a 4pm bus just to Sangla.

For Spiti, there's a 7am bus to Kaza (₹335, 11 hours) via Nako (₹165, five hours) and Tabo (₹263, eight hours). A second bus heads to Nako at 11.30am.

Taxis charge ₹3500 to Chitkul, ₹5500 or ₹6000 to Shimla, and ₹7000 to Kaza.

Kalpa

Reached by a winding 7km road up through pine woods and apple orchards from Rekong Peo, Kalpa is a little gem of a village. Majestic views of the Kinner Kailash massif grab your eyeballs and don't let go. There are several guesthouses in Chini, the main part of the village, plus a number of modern hotels on Roghi Rd, a 500m walk or longer drive above the centre. For an ambitious full-day hike, ask locals about the trail up to the meadows and ponds of Chakha, starting from Hotel Kinner Kailash on Roghi Rd.

Kalpa's central temple group encompasses the colourful Buddhist Hu-Bu-Lan-Khar Gompa (Samdub Choeling), the ornately carved Hindu Narayan-Nagini temple complex just below it, and a recently rebuilt, tower-style Durga temple just above it. In September/October, villagers pile wildflowers in the stone courtyard in the centre of the village during the Phulech (Flaich) Festival.

i Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Blue Lotus

HOTEL $

(📍 226001; r ₹600-1000) Only 100m from the bus stand, this friendly, concrete place is hard to beat for sheer convenience. Rooms are a touch shabby but not bad value, and the wide, sunny terraces face directly across to the mountains – ideal for meals with a view (mains ₹80 to ₹200).

Hotel Rollingrang

HOTEL $$

(📍 9816686789; www.hotelinkalpa.com; Roghi Rd; r ₹1320-1650; ☺ closed Dec-Feb) Up in a peaceful spot next to the HPTDC's Hotel Kinner Kailash, rooms here are spacious and sparkling clean, with geyser-heated showers, and the best have balconies with perfect mountain views. Rates drop 20% outside peak seasons.

Grand Shangri-La

HOTEL $$$

(📍 9805695423, 226134; www.thegrandshangri-la.com; Roghi Rd; r ₹3300-4950; 📶) The very comfortable rooms here are beautifully pine-panelled and decked with Tibetan-design fabrics, and the best enjoy stupendous views from picture windows. Beds are soft, the bathrooms have great hot showers and the food – Indian, Tibetan and Chinese (mains ₹120 to ₹270) – is excellent. There's also a good library with books on India and Tibet and, a rarity hereabouts, wi-fi (free).

i Getting There & Away

Buses run at least hourly from about 6.30am to 6pm between the roundabout in Rekong Peo's main bazaar and Kalpa (₹12, 30 minutes), or you can take a taxi (₹300/500 to lower/upper Kalpa). For walkers, a well-worn stepped path short-cuts the winding road.

Buses depart for Shimla (₹385, 11 hours) at 6.30am and 2.30pm, and for Sangla (₹75, three hours) and Chitkul (₹115, 4½ hours) at around 8.30am. More buses run from Rekong Peo.

Rekong Peo to Sumdo

The road into Spiti is a continuous procession of awe-inspiring vistas, with the road often clinging precariously to cliffsides and the river flashing hundreds of metres below. Foreigners must show their inner line permits at the Akpa checkpoint, 17km past the Rekong Peo turn-off. About 7km beyond, look for the fort-like temples across the river at Moorang. The Moorang road continues to Lambar, the start of the parikrama (ritual circumnavigation) trek around 6050m Kinner Kailash via the Charawang La. High above the road near Spillow, Khanum is well worth a detour for its several important Buddhist monasteries and temples, including the Kangyur Gompa, founded by Ringchen Zangpo, the 'Great Translator', in the 10th or 11th century.

Near Khab, Hwy 05 heads up to the Chinese border at the Shipki La (off-limits to foreigners). The road continues to the confluence of the Sulej and Spiti Rivers, 2km on, then threads the Spiti gorge upstream.

i INNER LINE PERMITS IN SHIMLA

The permits required for foreigners to travel between Rekong Peo in Kinnaur and Sumdo in Spiti are easily obtained in an hour or two, any day except Sunday or the second Saturday of the month, in Rekong Peo itself or in Kaza (Spiti). You can also try getting the permit at the office of Shimla's Additional District Magistrate (☎ 2657005; Room 207/208, Collectorate Building; ☀ 10am-1.30pm & 2-4pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd Sat each month). Take copies of your passport identity and visa pages. You may be told that only a minimum of four people together may apply, but if you get the go-ahead, you'll be sent to the Sugam Centre in the Collectorate to fill out a form and have your photo taken; you then return to the ADM office, where permits (₹300) are usually issued within 30 minutes.

Nako

POP 570 / ELEV 3660M

High above the Hangrang Valley, this quaint medieval village of stone and mud-brick houses is a great place to break the journey for a day or two. Nako is centred on a small sacred lake, behind which rise towering rock-strewn mountains dotted by stupas. A remote hiking trail leads up over a pass to Tashigang village and monastery (about four hours), from where hardcore hikers can continue about two hours to caves and a shrine at Tsomang; take a guide at the Youth Club Office in Nako centre. On the western edge of Nako you'll find the four 11th-century chapels of Nako Gompa, containing some fine murals and sculptures in similar styles to those of Spiti's famous Tabo Gompa.

Nako has several simple homestays and guesthouses such as Amar Home Stay (☎9418629453; s/d ₹400/500), signposted down steps 20m from the bus stop, where clean rooms with hot-water bathrooms open onto a pretty flower and vegetable garden. Better, but sometimes full with groups, are the bright Lake View Hotel (☎9418759493; ranjeetnako@gmail.com; r ₹700-1500; ☀late Apr-late Oct) overlooking the lake, with a pretty garden and meals available, and Knaygoh Kinner Camps (☎9418440767; www.knaygohkinnercamps.com; s/d incl breakfast ₹3150/3900, mains ₹130-230; ☀late Apr-late Oct), a short walk above the lake, with cosy ensuite tents and a dining room serving good Indian and Chinese food.

Buses start from Nako at 7am to Tabo (₹100, three hours) and Kaza (₹170, 5½ hours), and at 7.30am to Rekong Peo (₹165, five hours); the Rekong Peo-Kaza and Kaza-Rekong Peo buses stop here at about noon.

North of Nako the road descends to the Spiti River at Chango Sumdo, 14km further on, marks the border between Kinnaur and Spiti: foreigners must show their inner line permits here.

CENTRAL HIMACHAL PRADESH

Central Himachal is essentially the Kullu and Parvati Valleys – famous for the production of woollen shawls and charas (hashish), and for their wonderful mountain and valley scenery. The area attracts all types of Indian and foreign travellers – hippies, honey-mooners, trekkers and adrenaline junkies. At the heart of the scene is Manali, one of northern India's main travel centres, a base for all types of energetic activity from skiing to rafting to paragliding, and also a stepping stone to Lahaul, Spiti and Ladakh via the Rohtang La (3978m). In the hundreds of mountain villages life still goes on in a pretty traditional way, and the chance to get away from the towns and main roads amid the spectacular landscape shouldn't be missed.

For more information on Kullu district, see www.kullu.net, <http://hpkullu.gov.in> and www.kullutourism.com.

Mandi

☎01905 / POP 26,500 / ELEV 800M

The rambunctious bazaar town of Mandi (its name means 'market'), at the junction of main roads from Kullu, Shimla and Dharamsala, is no tourist town, and it has a sticky air reminiscent of the plains. But it's dotted with (according to official figures) 81 temples, many of them ancient Shaivite shrines, and it's fun tracking these down in the bazaars and along the banks of the Beas River.

Mandi is centred on a sunken-garden-cum-shopping-complex called Indira Market, with steps on the north side up to the Raj Mahal Palace. The bus stand is 500m east across the Suketi Khad stream, a ₹30 autorickshaw ride.

Sights

As well as the following, you'll find many more ancient temples just by wandering the streets.

Bhootnath Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

At the entrance to Bhootnath Bazar, 100m northwest of Indira Market, this 16th-century temple recently had its garish paint-work removed, showing off its fine stone carving to much better effect. It's the focal point for the animated Shivaratri Festival honouring Lord Shiva in February/March.

River Temples

If you follow Bhootnath Bazar to the Beas River you'll find the very colourful Ekar-dash Rudra Mandir, the British-built Victoria Bridge, some cremation ghats and several carved stone sikhara (corn-cob- or beehive-shaped) temples. Most impressive of these are the intricately sculpted, centuries-old Panchvaktra Mandir and Triloknath Mandir, facing each other across the Beas, 150m east of the ghats.

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 222401; www.rajmahalpalace.com; r ₹1590-4230; Ⓢ) Mandi's most romantic hotel occupies part of the palace of its ex-royal family. 'Standard' rooms are nothing fancy, but the large deluxes and super-deluxes have that aristocratic touch – some with the air of a colonial hunting lodge, others with a modern chalet design. Book in advance as they can fill up with groups.

The Copacabana Bar & Restaurant (mains ₹120-280; ☎ 7am-10pm) here, with tables on a large, tree-shaded lawn, is part of the appeal – peaceful for breakfast, animated for dinner.

Information

There are international ATMs at the State Bank of Patiala and HDFC around the market square.

Kapoor Cyber Cafe (internet per hour ₹30; ☎ 10am-8.30pm Mon-Sat) is on the ground floor of the Indira Market.

Getting There & Away

For Dharamsala, if there are no immediate buses, head to Palampur and change there. Taxis outside the bus station and on the north side of the Indira Market charge ₹2500 to Manali and ₹3500 to McLeod Ganj.

Rewalsar Lake

☎ 01905 / ELEV 1350M

Hidden in the hills 24km southwest of Mandi, the sacred lake of Rewalsar is revered by Buddhists, Hindus and Sikhs. Tibetan Buddhists know it as Tso-Pema (Lotus Lake) and believe it was created when the king of Mandi tried to burn alive the revered Buddhist sage Padmasambhava (Guru Rinpoche), to prevent his daughter Mandarava running off with the long-haired Tantric master. Today the lake's 800m perimeter is surrounded by a collection of mostly modern temples, monasteries and monuments, in which all three faiths are represented. Despite the untidy architectural hodgepodge, the lake retains a spiritual atmosphere.

The ochre-red Tibetan-style Drikung Kagyu Gumpa (www.dk-petsek.org), with its academy of Buddhist studies, stands immediately inside the entrance arch to the lake. Its temple features a large, central Sakyamuni statue, with Padmasambhava to the left. Moving clockwise around the lake, you pass a lakeshore shrine to Padmasambhava and then the Tso-Pema Ogyen Heruka Nyimgampa Gumpa, with artful murals and atmospheric afternoon and morning pujas (prayer sessions). A few minutes' detour uphill from the lake, passing the Zigar Drukpa Kagyu Institute, with outsized statues of Tantric protectors in its temple, takes you to a dramatic 12m-high statue of Padmasambhava, with grand views over the lake.

Continuing clockwise around the lake you pass a group of smallish Hindu temples before arriving at lakeshore ghats, where hundreds of fish practically jump out of the water to get at the puffed rice thrown by pilgrims. On the far side of the lake is the gold-domed Guru Gobind Singh Gurdwara, a Sikh temple built in the 1930s. Rewalsar is of special significance to Sikhs as the place where, in 1701, Guru Gobind Singh, the 10th Sikh guru, issued an (unsuccessful) call to the Hindu rajas of the Punjab hills for joint resistance to the Mughals.

The other main pilgrim site is the Padmasambhava Cave, high above the lake on the ridge, where Padmasambhava allegedly meditated. Take a taxi (one-way/return ₹500/600) or jump on one of the five daily buses to Naina Devi Temple (₹30) and get off 1km before the temple.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

TIRTHAN VALLEY

East of Mandi the main Hwy 3 (formerly Hwy 21) threads a dramatic gorge along the Beas River before turning north towards Kullu at Larji. A side-road southeast from here leads up the Tirthan (or Banjar) Valley into the remote, beautiful Inner Seraj region, ripe for walks in the hills and valleys between isolated traditional villages. There is a scattering of budget and midrange accommodation in and around such villages as Banjar, Sairopa, Gushaini, Jibhi and Shoja. You can hike a steep 6km up from Banjar to Chehni village to see one of the tallest temple-towers in Himachal – six, seven or 11 storeys high (depending how you count them). Gushaini is one access point to the Great Himalayan National Park (www.greathimalayannationalpark.com; per day Indian/foreigner ₹50/200), which gained World Heritage status in 2014. The pristine 754-sq-km national park stretches east up to the 6000m-plus peaks of the Great Himalaya Range, with a variety of wildlife including snow leopards, brown and black bears and over 250 bird species such as the rare western tragopan. Lush forests lower down give way to alpine meadows and high-altitude glaciers. There are plenty of hiking and trekking opportunities here, from easy day walks in the buffer zone (called the Ecozone) to demanding treks in the spectacular upper reaches. The park has an information centre at Larji and a visitors centre at Sai Ropa on the Banjar–Gushaini road. For guided tours and treks and other activities contact Sunshine Himalayan Adventures (☎ 9418102083; http://ankitsood.wix.com/sunshinehimalayanadventures; Akhara Bazar, Kullu) , which works closely with the NGO representing local residents. For groups of four or more Sunshine typically charges US$50 per person per day for treks and US$65 for birdwatching tours, including food, permits, local transport, camping equipment and staff. It also offers wildlife tours and mountaineering expeditions.

South from Shoja the road climbs to the panoramic 3223m Jalori Pass (normally closed for two or three winter months), from where you can walk 6km east (mostly level) to the sacred Saryolsar Lake, or 3km west (uphill) to the faint ruins of Raghuapur Fort.

MANDI TO BAJAURA

Hidden away in the high pastures between Mandi and Bajaura, a 23km zig-zag drive up from the back road between the two towns, is scenic Prashar Lake (2730m), home to the striking, pagoda-style Prashara Temple, built in the 14th century in honour of the sage Prashar Rishi. The lake is also home to a curious floating island, which moves around of its own accord. A bus to Prashar (₹70, three hours) leaves Mandi bus station at 7.30am. A return taxi from Mandi costs around ₹2000.

At Bajaura, 5km south of Bhuntar on Hwy 3, the 9th-century Bisheshwar Mahadev Temple is well worth a stop. A rare and outstandingly handsome Kullu Valley example of the classic stone sikhara temples of the North Indian plains, it's dedicated to Shiva as Lord of the Universe. The temple is covered all over with ornate carving, and niches on the outside contain superb reliefs of Vishnu (west side), Ganesh (south) and Durga (north).

i Getting There & Away

Buses from Mandi to Rewalsar (₹35, 1¼ hours) leave frequently until late afternoon from the street between Indira Market and the Suketi Khad bridge. The last one back leaves about 6pm. A taxi is ₹700.

Bhuntar

📍 01902

This market town is the location of the Kullu Manali airport, and the main junction for transport to the beautiful Parvati Valley. There's an SBI ATM on the main street about 100m north of Hotel Malabar.

🍴 Sleeping & Eating

The best hotel in town is Hotel Malabar (📍 266199; www.hotelmalabarkullu.com; r ₹1880-2350; 🍷), 500m north of the airport, with a good Indian restaurant (mains ₹120 to ₹300). There's a collection of acceptable cheaper places about 700m further up the main street, centred on Hotel Amit (📍 265123; www.hotelamitkullu.com; r ₹660-2400; 🍷), with its decent restaurant.

i Getting There & Away

The airport is at the south end of town, 600m from the bus stand. Air India flies to/from Delhi five times weekly, though flights are sometimes cancelled in bad weather.

Frequent buses head to Manali (₹70, 2½ hours, last bus 10pm), Kullu (₹20, 30 minutes) and Mandi (₹90, two hours). For the Parvati Valley, there are buses every half-hour until 6pm to Manikaran (₹50, 1½ hours) via Jari (₹30, one hour) and Kasol (₹40, 1¼ hours). Buses to Dharamsala, Shimla and Delhi pass through 2½ hours after leaving Manali. The taxi stand is opposite the bus stand; fares are ₹950 to Kasol and ₹1350 to Manali.

Parvati Valley

📍 01902

The Parvati River enters the Beas just above Bhuntar and its ethereally beautiful valley stretches back up to the hot springs at Manikaran and beyond. The valley has a well-deserved reputation for its wild and cultivated crops of charas, and a couple of villages along the river have been transformed into hippie/backpacker hang-outs, offering cheap accommodation, international food and nonstop music to crowds of dreadlocked and pierced travellers. Like Manali, the Parvati is an established stop on the 'hummus trail' followed by post-military-service Israeli travellers. Police sometimes set up checkpoints along the roads to search for charas.

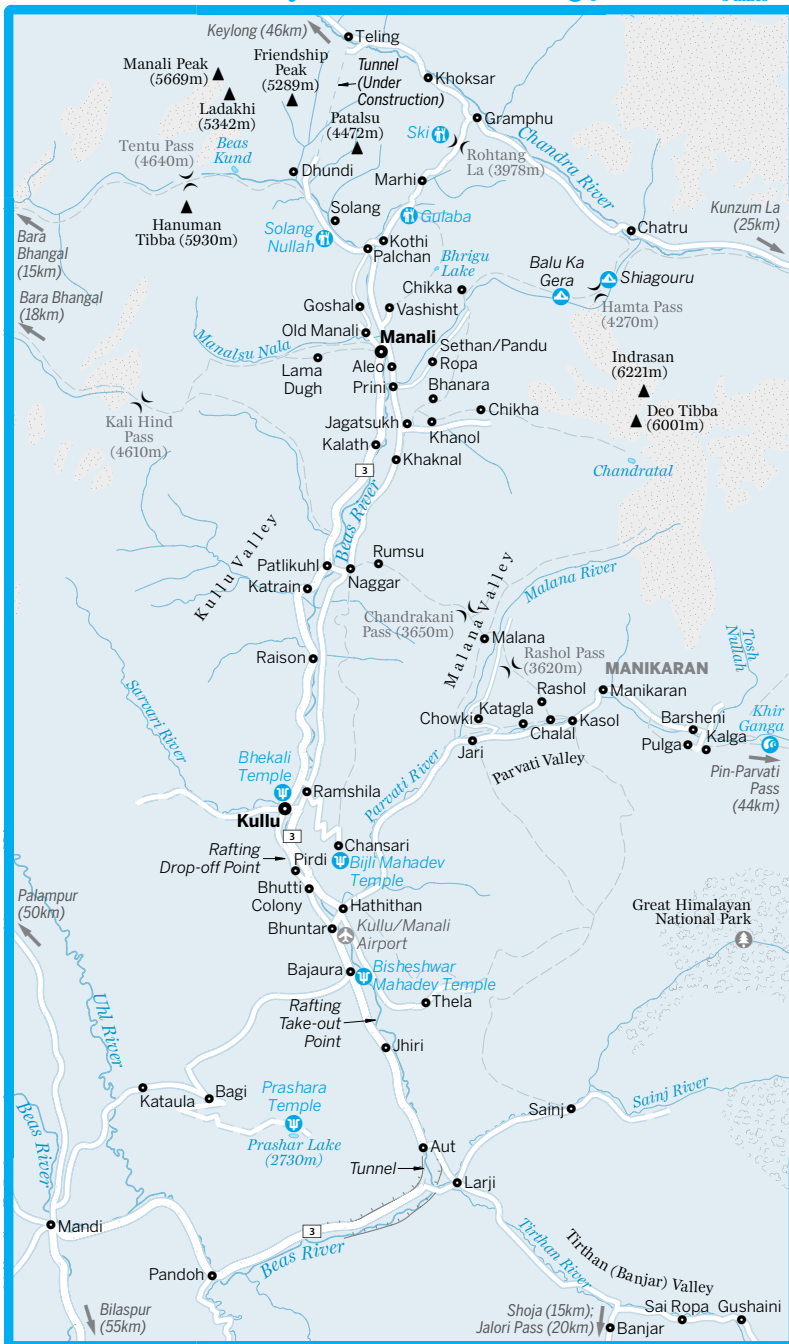

There are some excellent treks in the area, including over the Chandrakani Pass to/from Naggar, or the Pin-Parvati Pass to/from Spiti. For safety reasons, solo trekking is not recommended.

Jari

Jari is a ramshackle roadside bazaar village 20km up the Parvati Valley from its mouth. Travellers head for the peaceful hillside hamlet of Mateura Jari, a 700m uphill hike from Jari bus stop (follow the 'Village Guest House' signs).

For guide services to Malana or trekking anywhere in the Parvati Valley, contact Negi's Himalayan Adventure (📍 9805105800, 9816081894; www.negis-himalayan-adventure.com; Hotel Negi's Nest, Chowki) at Hotel Negi's Nest (📍 9816081894; r ₹1500-3000; 🍷), across the river from Jari (a ₹150 taxi ride). Owner Chhabe Negi is head of the area's mountain rescue team, so he's as reliable as it gets. A guide for a day costs ₹1500 to ₹2000, and trekking is around ₹2750 per person per day, plus transport. The rooms here are good, comfortable and pine-panelled with clean bathrooms, and there's a restaurant and kitchen for guests' use.

Malana

Remote Malana, high on a hillside 20km up a side valley north of Jari, is one of the strangest villages in India. Its people – descended, according to legend, from deserters from Alexander the Great's army – speak their own unique language, operate what's called the world's oldest democracy, and consider outsiders unclean. Malana's famous charas, known as 'cream', is the backbone of its economy, and is what many visitors mainly come for. A rough road now reaches within striking distance of Malana, but for centuries it was one of the most isolated spots in the region. Be ready for random police checkpoints on the road, and bring your passport because security at the hydroelectric station en route may want to see it.

Once in the village, you must obey a litany of esoteric rules or face fines of ₹2500. Don't step off the main path, don't touch the temples or photograph them without permission, don't stray onto any sacred spots (even though there's nothing obvious to identify them), and don't touch any villagers or their belongings. To get the most out of the cultural experience and avoid breaking any rules, it's worthwhile visiting with a knowledgeable guide.

Over half of Malana's traditional wood and stone houses were burned in a fire in 2008 and some have been replaced by cinderblock boxes, but the temples were rebuilt in traditional wood and stone, with intricately carved balconies. They are dedicated to the local deity Jamdagni (Jamlu) Rishi, and attract pilgrims from around the region, especially during Malana's main festival around 20 August. One of the two main temples stands on the village's central open space, facing a stone platform and stepped seating for village assemblies (Malana's 'parliament').

Malana has a half-dozen guesthouses, mostly at the top of the village and run by outsiders, with rooms for ₹200 to ₹300. Friendly Chand View Guest House (☎9805261446; r ₹250-500) has some attached bathrooms and decent Indian and traveller food (mains ₹100 to ₹180).

The easy way to reach Malana is by taxi from Jari to Nerang (₹800 one-way, ₹1300 return with a three-hour wait), a collection

WARNING – DEADLY VACATIONS

Since the mid-1990s more than two dozen foreign tourists have disappeared from the Kullu and Parvati Valleys. While some got too deep into the local drug trade and crossed the wrong people, others became lost or fatally injured while trekking alone through the confusing and rugged mountain terrain.

If you plan to head into the hills, we recommend going with a guide who can steer you away from natural – and human – hazards. It's a good idea to let your guesthouse know where you are going and when you plan to return. Avoid walking alone, and be cautious about befriending sadhus (holy people) or others wandering in the woods. So go, hike, and enjoy this incredible area – just be smart about it, for your family's sake!

of shacks from which it's a 30-to-45-minute walk up to the village. There are good walks in the area, and Parvati Valley taxi unions promote 'Magic Valley' day trips on which they'll take you to Nerang (for Malana) and then another 2km up to the road's end, where you continue a kilometre or two on foot. The Chandrakani Pass, a steep two-hour hike up from Malana, leads to Naggar in two or three days, and adventurers can head southeast over the Rashol Pass to Kasol (17km), staying in a homestay in Rashol en route.

Kasol

Stretched along the lovely Parvati River and with mountain views to the northeast, Kasol is the main traveller hang-out in the valley. It's a small village, but almost overrun with reggae bars, bakeries and cheap guesthouses catering to a largely hippie/Israeli crowd. It's also a summertime venue for trance parties transplanted from Goa, and at any time an easy base for exploring the forested valley or just chilling out. The village is divided into Old Kasol on the Bhuntar side of its bridge, and New Kasol on the Manikaran side.

For an easy 3.5km stroll, cross the foot-bridge over the Parvati River and walk downstream to Chalal and Katagla villages. Several rustic guesthouses and cafes along here, mostly foreign-run, are perfect for those who want to really 'turn on, tune in and drop out'. Recross the river at Katagla to catch a passing bus back to Kasol (₹8). More remote paths continue from Katagla to Chowki.

Sleeping

There's plenty of budget accommodation. Some guesthouses close down for winter from November to March.

Taji Place

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9816461684; d with/without bathroom ₹700/350, cottage ₹1500; 📶) A big green-and-yellow house on a sweet and spacious riverside property, Taji has a range of tidy rooms and a couple of well-equipped cottages, plus a private hot spring (₹2 per minute). It's down an unsigned lane 80m past Evergreen restaurant in New Kasol.

Panchali Holiday Home

HOTEL $

(☎ 273195; www.panchaliholidayhome.com; r ₹500-1500; 📶) Just west of the bridge, this friendly hotel doesn't have a ton of character but the rooms are clean and comfortable, and the front rooms have nice balconies. Rates double in June and July.

Alpine Guest House

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9882892924; alpinehimachal@gmail.com; r ₹800-2000) Rooms at this helpful place among pines in Old Kasol are spacious and pretty well kept, but the great plus is the expansive terrace and open-air restaurant right on the bank of the rushing, tumbling, beautiful river.

WORTH A TRIP

KHIR GANGA

This sloping alpine meadow is a beautiful three-to-four-hour walk up the Parvati Valley from Barsheni, which is 13km up from Manikaran. The meadow is home to delectable hot springs and a rundown collection of shack guesthouses (rooms ₹200 to ₹400) and cafe-restaurants, open from about April to October – it's a popular spot to drop out for a few days. A day trip to Khir Ganga and back is also well worthwhile. The walk from Barsheni, in which you ascend about 800m, is also the first stage of the Pin-Parvati trek. Paths run along both sides of the valley, through Nakthan village on the north side, and Kalga village on the south side, meeting just below Flower Cafe, about 45 minutes before Khir Ganga. The Nakthan route is prettier, sunnier and more frequented.

The hot springs (☺ dawn-dusk) FREE, at the top of the meadow, are the perfect temperature – hot but not too hot – and feature a large men's pool with fantastic views and a smaller, enclosed women's pool from which you can at least see the sky. The pools are part of a temple, so decorum is required – no mixed bathing, nudity or smoking!

Buses to Barsheni (₹25, one hour) leave roughly hourly from about 7.30am to 5.30pm, from the road above Manikaran bus station. Some of them come from Bhuntar and pass through Jari and Kasol en route. The last bus back down leaves Barsheni at 5pm. Taxis from Manikaran cost ₹500.

Hotel Devlok International

HOTEL $$

(📍 273720; www.devlokinternational.com; r ₹1000-2500; 📞) Devlok's rooms are a cut above most other places with their comfy beds, pine panelling and hot-spring water piped into the showers. It's along the southern side-street just east of the bridge.

Eating★ Evergreen

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹100-240; 🕒 9am-11pm) Our favourite for its excellent chicken sipoodim (barbecue) served with chips and hummus, plus sizzlers, pizza, lasagne, homemade tofu dishes and good Israeli specials. You can eat at tables or settle back in the indoor or outdoor cushioned lounge areas. It's on the main road in New Kasol, 150m from the bridge.

Moon Dance Café & German Bakery

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹100-300; 🕒 9am-10pm) Moon Dance, just west of the bridge, stands tall among the many traveller restaurants serving similar 'three Is' menus (Italian-Israeli-Indian) for its great baked goods, strong coffee and excellent-value breakfasts served in the sunny courtyard.

Information

Kasol has plenty of internet cafes, charging ₹40 per hour. The Central Bank of India ATM, in a side-street just east of the bridge, accepts international cards.

Getting There & Away

Buses between Bhuntar and Manikaran pass through Kasol. Taxi fares from the stand near the bridge include ₹150 to Manikaran, ₹700 to Barsheni, ₹900 to Bhuntar and ₹1950 to Manali.

Manikaran

POP 6100 / ELEV 1737M

With steam continually issuing from the river bank beneath its large temple, the busy little pilgrim town of Manikaran, 4km east of Kasol, is famous for its hot springs and is sacred for both Sikhs and Hindus. According to legend, a giant snake stole the goddess Parvati's earrings while she was bathing (during an 11,000-year meditation session with Shiva), then snorted them out from underground, along with various other jewels, which released the hot springs. The water emerging from the ground is hot enough to boil rice and has to be cooled with river water for bathing. Locals say it can cure everything from rheumatism to bronchitis.

CHARAS

Over the years, many tourists have been lured to the Parvati Valley and the Manali area by the famous local charas (hashish), which is seriously potent stuff. Though it's smoked fairly openly in the Parvati Valley, Old Manali and Vashisht, it's still illegal and local police do arrest people for possession (or hit them for hefty bribes).

Sights & Activities

The multistorey Sri Guru Nanak Ji Gurdwara, on the north bank of the river, was built in 1940. The main prayer hall, with its carpets and glittering glass columns, is on the top floor (shoes off, head-coverings on, for men and women). One level down is the eating hall where free rice, dahl, curry, chapatis and tea are served round the clock to all comers (and these meals are as good as any in town). Below that are men's and women's indoor bathing pools and, to one side, a sauna-like 'hot cave'. Across the footbridge are a more inviting open-air men's pool and another enclosed women's pool. Bring a swimming costume, towel and flip-flops if you want to bathe.

Next to the gurdwara is a Shiva temple where the rice for the gurdwara cooks in big pots in pools of boiling hot-spring water. A happy, quite light-hearted atmosphere prevails in both temples.

Along the main street of the traffic-free north side of town you'll find the ornate wooden Naina Bhagwati Temple, dedicated to the goddess, born from Shiva's third eye, who located Parvati's missing earrings.

Sleeping & Eating

Manikaran is an easy half-day trip from Kasol, but there are several guesthouses if you want to stay, mostly in the traffic-free main village on the north side of the river. Note that alcohol is banned this side of the river.

Fateh Paying Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(📍 9816894968; r ₹300; 📞) Signposted up an alley in the old part of town, this big blue house has just five simple but pleasant rooms, with welcoming owners, a sunny rooftop terrace and a tiny hot-spring pool. Unlike most places here, Fateh keeps the same rates all year. Local meals are available.

Sharma Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9418422343; r ₹200-400) In the kitschy bazaar area near the gurdwara, Sharma has adequate rooms in its main building, but the top-floor rooms in its new building nearby are the best budget lodgings in town – comfy and clean, with good mattresses and views across the valley from the shared balcony. Rates can triple or more in the June–July peak season.

i Getting There & Away

Buses run at least hourly until 6.30pm from Manikaran to Bhuntar (₹50, 1½ hours), via Kasol (₹5, 10 minutes). There are also several daily to Kullu (₹70, 2½ hours) and Manali – or you can change in Bhuntar. Taxis from Manikaran bus station charge ₹500 to Barsheni, ₹1000 to Bhuntar and ₹2200 to Manali.

Kullu

The bustling administrative capital of the Kullu Valley makes a gritty change from the hippie holiday resorts elsewhere in the valley, and in October it stages the area's most colourful and fascinating festival, the Kullu Dussehra.

The Beas River runs down the east side of Kullu, and its tributary the Sarvari River runs across the middle of town, dividing Kullu into southern and northern halves. The southern part has the taxi stand, tourist office, Dussehra grounds (two large, adjoining, open spaces) and most restaurants and hotels. The bus station and Raghunath Temple are north of the Sarvari. A footbridge near the bus station crosses to a bazaar street which brings you out near the Hotel Shobla International.

PIN-PARVATI TREK

Only accessible from late June to late September/early October (with September the best month), this strenuous but rewarding six-to-nine-day wilderness trek crosses the snow-bound Pin-Parvati Pass (5319m) from the Parvati Valley to the Pin Valley in Spiti. There is accommodation at Khir Ganga and Mudh, but none in between, so you'll have to be self-sufficient or go with a trekking agency. Organised treks are relatively pricey because your crew (often Nepali) needs to be transported back to their starting point. Sometimes two sets of porters are required, handing over loads near the pass.

From Barsheni, the route ascends through forest and pasture, past Khir Ganga hot springs to Thakur Khan. Two more days through an arid alpine zone takes you to High Cam (also called Plateau Camp). A challenging tramp over snow and scree will take you up to the pass, then down into the Pin Valley. A day or two for acclimatisation and/or rest on the way up will probably be beneficial, and the final stage could easily be broken into two days of hiking through the Pin Valley National Park to Mudh.

The trek can also be done in the east-to-west direction.

STAGE	ROUTE	DURATION (HR)	DISTANCE (KM)
1	Barsheni to Khir Ganga	3-4	12
2	Khir Ganga to Thakur Khan	6	15
3	Thakur Khan to Mantalai Lake	7	16
4	Mantalai Lake to High Camp	4	12
5	High Camp to Pin Valley Camp via Pin-Parvati Pass	5-6	12
6	Pin Valley Camp to Mudh	8	20

SHOPPING FOR SHAWLS

The Kullu Valley is famous for its traditional wool shawls – lightweight but wonderfully warm and attractively patterned – and the highway between Bhuntar and Manali is lined with scores of shops and showrooms. Kullu shawls are woven on wooden hand-loom using wool from sheep or hair from pashmina goats or angora rabbits. This industry provides an income for thousands of local women, many of whom have organised themselves into shawl-weaving cooperatives.

For high quality without the hard sell, head to the nearest branch of Bhuttico (www.bhutticoshawls.com), the Bhutti Weavers' Cooperative, which was established in 1944 and has showrooms in every town in the valley and several beyond, plus a factory showroom (☺9am-7pm) at Bhutti Colony, 8km south of Kullu. Bhuttico charges fixed prices, so it's a good place to gauge price and quality. Expect to pay upwards of ₹700 for a lambswool shawl, ₹1200 to ₹1600 for an angora-lambswool blend, ₹3500 for pashmina-lambswool and ₹6000 for pure pashmina. Bhuttico also makes scarves, tops, jackets, bags, gloves, pullas (slippers made from cannabis stalks) and pattus, the wonderfully patterned wraparound wool garments that are Kullu women's traditional clothing.

👁 Sights & Activities

Raghunath Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☺6.30am-9pm mid-Apr-mid-Sep, 7.30am-7.30pm mid-Sep-mid-Apr) Kullu's pre-eminent temple enshrines the Kullu Valley's most important idol, a tiny bronze image of Raghunath Ji (Rama) that lords it over the Dussehra celebrations. The 17th-century temple is on the hill above the bus station and near the Raja Rup, the former Kullu rajas' palace; it's not particularly spectacular, and the main shrine is closed from 11.30am to 5.30pm (12.30pm to 4pm from mid-September to mid-April), but you will probably still be able to peer in through its barred window.

Bijli Mahadev Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

There are several important temples in Kullu's surrounding hills. Reached by a 3km hike up from Chansari, a 22km drive southeast from Kullu, the hilltop Bijli Mahadev is surmounted by a 20m wooden pole that attracts occasional divine blessings in the form of lightning. The surge of power shatters the stone Shiva lingam inside the temple, which is then glued back together with butter. There are spectacular panoramas over both the Kullu and Parvati Valleys from here.

Bijli Mahadev attracts crowds of pilgrims during the Shaivite Sawan Kamaina festival from mid-July to mid-August. A return taxi from Kullu costs ₹1100, or look for a shared taxi at Ramshila, 2km north-east on the main road, where the road to Bijli Mahadev starts.

👉 Tours

Situated by the Dussehra grounds in the southern part of town, the Kullu Taxi Operators' Union (☎222332; www.kullutaxiunion.com) offers sightseeing day tours to four local temples (not including Bijli Mahadev) for ₹1100, or to Prashar Lake for ₹2400.

🏠 Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Vikrant

HOTEL $

(☎9816438299; vikramrashpa@gmail.com; d₹450-1000) Up a tiny path behind the HPTDC office, Vikrant is a backpacker-friendly place with a welcoming vibe. Wood panelling and shared balconies give the rooms a simple charm: those upstairs are bigger and brighter, but all have fans and hot showers.

Hotel Aaditya

HOTEL $

(☎9418001244; <http://hotelaadityakullu.com>; d ₹660-2640; 📶) Just across the footbridge from the bus station, Aaditya tries harder than most in this price range, with friendly service, comfy beds, and a range of rooms, many with balconies overlooking the Sarvari River. Rates drop 20% or 30% from mid-July to mid-April, except for Dussehra when they double.

Hotel Shobla International

HOTEL $$

(☎222800; www.shoblainternational.com; r ₹1780-2370; 📶) The best of Kullu's business hotels, this modern place near the Dussehra grounds has clean rooms, a good restaurant (mains ₹160 to ₹300) and a bar. The cheapest ('standard') rooms are good value since they come with balconies and a view. Expect discounts of 20% from about July to April (except during Dussehra).

Hot Spice

MULTICUISINE $$

(mains ₹100-200; ☺ 9am-10pm) For good-value thalis and breakfasts, head for this pleasant open-air cafe up the lane behind the tourist office.

i Information

The HPTDC tourist office (☎ 222349; ☺ 10am-5pm), near the Dussehra grounds, is helpful with local information and can book seats on the comfortable HPTDC buses from Manali to Delhi and Shimla. The SBI has ATMs nearby.

i Getting There & Away

BUS

A mixture HRTC and private buses runs about every 15 minutes to Bhuntar (₹20, 30 minutes), Manali (₹50, 90 minutes) and Mandi (₹90, two hours). There are several buses to Manikaran (₹70, 2½ hours) via Jari and Kasol, or you can go to Bhuntar and change. Buses from Manali to destinations beyond the Kullu Valley stop in Kullu about 1½ hours after departure.

TAXI

Sample one-way fares include ₹700 to Naggar, ₹900 to Kasol and ₹1050 to Manali.

Naggar

☎ 01902 / POP 550 / ELEV 1760M

High on the east side of the Kullu Valley, sleepy Naggar was once capital of the Kullu kingdom and is perhaps the most charming village in the valley today. Russian painter and explorer Nicholas Roerich (Nikolai Rerikh) liked it so much he settled here in the early 20th century. It's an easy day trip from Manali, but with interesting sights and some good guesthouses and restaurants, it's a fine place for a few days' relaxing stay.

👁 Sights

Naggar Castle

FORT

(admission ₹30; ☺ 9am-6pm) Built by the rajahs of Kullu around 1500, this fort-cum-mansion is a fine example of the earthquake-resistant alternating-stone-and-timber style of Himachali architecture. Sold to the British assistant commissioner in 1846, it later became a courthouse and then, in 1976, a hotel. The Jagti Patt Temple, inside, houses a 2.4m-long sacred stone slab said to have been carried here by a swarm of deities in the form of honey bees.

KULLU DUSSEHRA

Raghunath Ji, the most important god in Kullu town and valley, is a version of Rama, the hero god of the Ramayana, so you might expect Kullu Dussehra, the October festival that celebrates Rama's victory over the demon-king Ravana, to be something special here. Unlike the one-day celebrations elsewhere, Kullu Dussehra goes on for a week. The opening day is the most exciting, with 200 or more village deities (devtas), including Hadimba from Manali, arriving in Kullu on palanquins, having been carried here on foot (for several days from the remotest villages). They pay homage at Raghunath Ji's temple in the early afternoon, before moving down to the Dussehra grounds in a wonderful cavalcade, with drums beating and giant trumpets blaring, decked in gorgeous garlands and draperies studded with silver masks. Here the tiny Raghunath Ji idol is placed in a large wooden chariot and pulled to its allotted place by teams of rope-hauling devotees amid excited crowds. The village devtas 'dance' – tilting from side to side and charging backwards and forwards – before settling down in their own allotted positions around the grounds, where they and their attendants camp for the week of the festival.

The rest of the week is focused mainly on a huge retail fair spread over the Dussehra grounds, outbreaks of music and dancing around the devta tents, plus evening dance, music and other performances in the adjacent auditorium. On the seventh day everyone goes home. The end of the festivities no longer sees the traditional sacrifice of a buffalo, goat, cock, fish and freshwater crab on the banks of the Beas, as animal sacrifices at religious festivals were banned in Himachal Pradesh in 2014.

Accommodation in Kullu is scarce and expensive during Dussehra, but it's an easy day trip from Manali or even Kasol.

★ International Roerich Memorial Trust

MUSEUM

(☎ 248290; www.roerichtrust.org; admission/camera/video ₹50/30/60; ☀ 10am-1pm & 1.30-6pm Tue-Sun, to 5pm Nov-Mar) This fascinating memorial and museum complex 1km above the castle focuses on the former home of Russian painter, writer and Inner Asian explorer Nicholas Roerich and his wife Elena. They settled here in 1928 and stayed until his death in 1947. The couple's semimystical aesthetic-orientalist philosophising had an international following in their lifetimes but it is Nicholas' art that has had the more enduring appeal.

The house's lower floor displays some of his landscape paintings (many depicting Himalayan mountains), while the upper floor preserves some of the private rooms. Also on the property are Nicholas' samadhi (tomb) and an exhibit on the Roerichs' artist son Svyatoslav and his wife, the Indian film star Devika Rani.

Down the road there's a good little book and souvenir shop, while a five-minute uphill walk takes you to the Urusvati Himalayan Research Institute, with further exhibits on the work of the Roerichs and their associates.

Temples

Naggar is home to several intriguing and beautiful small temples. Down the street beside the castle, the 11th-century sikhara-style Vishnu Mandir is covered in ornate carvings. Turn left just past this, then left at the next fork, to the lovely little Gauri Shankar Temple, of similar style and date. It's dedicated to Shiva and the exterior wall recesses contain carvings of dancers, musicians and birds.

About 400m up the road from the castle, the pagoda-style Tripura Sundari Temple is sacred to the local earth-mother goddess. The existing building is only about 35 years old, but the site has probably been sacred since pre-Hindu times. The track leading uphill off the road here leads 1km to a junction where a right turn takes you 150m to the Murlidhar Krishna Temple, dating from about the 11th century, on the site of the ancient town of Thawa, which pre-dated Naggar by around 1000 years.

👤 Activities

Naggar is the starting point for the excellent three-day trek to Malana village via the 3650m Chandrakani Pass, accessible between May and October (though rainy July is better avoided). Himalayan Mountain Treks (☎ 9418149827; www.poonammountain.in; Poonam Mountain Lodge), down the small street beside Naggar Castle, and Ragini Treks & Tours (☎ 9817076890; ragnitours@hotmail.com; Hotel Ragini), just above the castle, are experienced operators who can organise this and other regional treks, and guided day walks.

It's feasible to reach Malana in two days and, depending on the season, there are teashops en route where you can sleep if you have a sleeping bag, but a slower pace gives more time to enjoy the mountains. Once over the pass, detours to Nagruni village (one extra day) or the Malana glacier (three or four extra days) are worthwhile. Himalayan Mountain Treks charges US$50 to US$60 per person per day for guided and equipped treks with porters.

For a straightforward half-day walk you could do just the first few kilometres of the trek, as far up as traditional Rumsu village, with its impressive wooden temple.

i Getting There & Away

Buses run about half-hourly between Manali and Naggar between 8am and 6pm (₹30, one hour) and there are several buses to and from Kullu (₹30, one hour). In either case, if there's no bus to Naggar itself, you can always get one to Patlikuhl, on the Kullu-Manali main road, and then a shared taxi (₹20) or autorickshaw (₹70) from there. A taxi from Manali to Naggar costs ₹800. Autorickshaws up to the castle from the bus stop are ₹50.

Manali

Surrounded by high peaks in the beautiful green valley of the Beas River, with mountain adventures beckoning from all directions, Manali is a year-round magnet. Backpackers come to hang out in the hippie villages around the main town; adventurers come for trekking, climbing, mountain biking, canyoning, paragliding, rafting and skiing; and Indian families and honeymooners come for the cool mountain air and a taste of snow on a day trip to the Rohtang La. Manali is also the main jumping-off point (from June to October) for Ladakh and Spiti. It makes sense to unwind and feed up here for a few days while organising your trip into the mountains.

So popular has Manali become among Indian tourists that this once bucolic retreat now has an estimated 800 to 1000 hotels and guesthouses in the town and outskirts, and from mid-April to mid-July, mid-September to mid-October, and over Christmas-New Year it gets pretty well overrun, with dire traffic jams along its narrow lanes and the main roads approaching town. Most travellers stay in the villages of Vashisht or Old Manali, which have a laid-back vibe and plenty of services, but partially close for winter from about November to April.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Hadimba Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p310) This much-revered wood-and-stone mandir, constructed in 1553, stands in a clearing in the cedar forest about 2km west of central Manali. Pilgrims come from across India to honour Hadimba, the demon wife of the Pandava Bhima from the Mahabharata. The temple's wooden doorway, under a three-tier pagoda-style roof, is richly carved with figures of gods, animals and dancers; antlers and ibex horns adorn the outside walls.

Inside is a large sacrificial stone where grisly animal slaughterings have traditionally taken place during the three-day Dhungri Mela in May. Gatotkach, the warrior son of Hadimba and Bhima, is worshipped in the form of a sacred tree (Map p310) near the temple.

Old Manali

AREA

About 2km northwest of the Mall on the far side of the Manalsu Nala stream, Old Manali still has some of the feel of an Indian mountain village once you get past the core backpacker zone. There are some remarkable old houses of wood and stone, and the towered Manu Maharishi Temple (Map p310) is built on the site where, legend says, the ark of the Noah-like Manu, the creator of civilisation, landed after the great flood.

Nature Park

PARK

(Map p310; admission ₹5; ☺ 9am-7pm, to 5pm approx Nov-Mar) This woodland of magnificent towering deodars (cedars) is easily the nicest route between the centre and Old Manali, though it is not recommended for a woman walking alone. South of the centre is the similar Van Vihar Park (admission ₹10; ☺ 9am-7pm, to 5pm approx Nov-Mar).

Buddhist Monasteries

There's a small Tibetan community south of the town centre. The much-visited Himalayan Nyinmapa Buddhist Temple (☺ 6am-6pm) contains a two-storey statue of Sakyamuni, the historical Buddha. Just west is the more traditional Von Ngari Monastery (☺ 6am-7pm), with an atmospheric juniper-scented prayer room crammed with statues of bodhisattvas (enlightened beings) and revered lamas.

Tours

In high season, the HPTDC (p315) offers bus day tours to the Rohtang La (₹310), Manikaran and the Parvati Valley (₹350) and Naggar, Jagatsukh and Solang Nullah (₹260), if there are enough takers. Private travel agencies offer similar tours.

The Him-Aanchal Taxi Operators Union (p316) has fixed-price tours, including to Rohtang La (₹1800), Solang Nullah (₹900) and Naggar (₹1100).

The following places can all arrange treks, tours and adventure activities:

Antrek Tours & Travels OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

Sleeping

Many midrange and top-end hotels slash prices dramatically outside the peak seasons. The best budget places, by far, are a short distance north of Manali town in the villages of Old Manali and Vashisht, where prices are often negotiable. The best upmarket hotels are found along Circuit House and Club House Rds, heading towards Old Manali.

★ Sunshine Guest House

HERITAGE GUESTHOUSE $$$

(Map p310; ☎ 252320; www.sunshineguesthouse.co.in; Club House Rd; d/tr/q ₹3000/4500/5500; ☎) Full of colonial character, the Sunshine has large triples and quads in its original 1920s building, where rooms have beautiful polished walnut and pine floors and old-fashioned bathrooms (pending renovation). There are also four modern doubles in a new building next door. All rooms have tea- and coffee-makers and 24-hour solar hot water, and meals can be enjoyed on the wide verandahs or in the lovely flowery garden with views down the valley.

Pushpak Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 253656; r ₹2000-3000) Along an alley opposite the bus station (and accessed through a restaurant), this is the best budget place on the Mall outside the high season, when rates can drop by 75%. Rooms overlooking the Mall have balconies and great light, but are noisier than those towards the back.

The streets behind have dozens of further options in similar price ranges.

★ Johnson Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 253764; johnsonhotel.in; Circuit House Rd; r/ apt ₹3760/8220; ☎ ☎) One of a few places belonging to descendants of a prominent Raj-era landowner, the Johnson is a classy wood-and-stone hotel with 12 snug rooms, four two-bedroom apartments in the original century-old lodge, and lovely gardens, as well as an excellent restaurant (p313). It's well run and everything's in immaculate shape, making it well worth the price.

It's also very popular, so book well ahead.

★ Banon Resorts

HOTEL $$$

OUTDOOR ACTIVITIES AROUND MANALI

Manali is the adventure sports capital of Himachal Pradesh, and all sorts of activities can be organised through operators here.

Canyoning

You can do this in several places around Manali with agencies including Himalayan Extreme Centre (p309), which charges ₹2500 to ₹2800 per person for day outings.

Mountain Biking

Agencies offer bike hire for ₹350 to ₹850 per day (and can give current info on routes) or will take you on guided tours – ranging from the exciting 51km descent from the Rohtang La (best in late September and October after the monsoon and summer traffic have died down) to two-week trips to Ladakh or Kinnaur and Spiti costing around ₹3000 per person per day with vehicle support.

Mountaineering

Agencies such as Himalayan Caravan (p309), Himalayan Trails (p309) and Himalayan Adventurers (p309) can arrange expeditions of 10 to 14 days to peaks around the head of the Solang valley, including Friendship Peak (5289m) and Ladakhi (5342m), which are suitable for those with limited experience (training is available), and the more difficult Hanuman Tibba (5930m) and Manali Peak (5669m). Typical prices are around ₹5000 per person per day including instructor/guides, equipment, transport, food and camping.

Paragliding

Paragliding is popular at Solang Nullah and at Gulaba and Marhi (below the Rohtang La) from April to October (except during the monsoon). Tandem flights at Solang Nullah cost ₹1000 (a two-minute flight) or ₹3000 (10 minutes). Adventure-tour operators can organise 20-or-30-minute tandem flights for ₹3500 to ₹4000 – and also solo-flight training courses, as can Hotel Iceland (p318).

Rafting

There is 14km of Grade II and III white water between Pirdi, on the Beas River 3km south of Kullu, and the take-out point at Jhiri; trips with adventure agencies from Manali cost around extend into the rooms, but it's a spotless place with outdoor terraces on every floor. Wi-fi reaches all rooms, and they get their apostrophes right.

Dragon Guest House

HOTEL $$

(Map p310; ☎252290; www.dragontreks.com; r ₹600-1500, ste ₹4000; 🍷) Dragon has good, comfortable rooms opening out onto long verandahs on four floors – the higher the better, and the best are in the Swiss-chalet-style top floors. There's a little orchard out front, plus a restaurant and a reliable travel agency for treks and tours.

Eating

Manali has some fine Indian and international restaurants, and there are lots of inexpensive travellers' cafes in Old Manali. Many restaurants serve trout from local farms.

Manali

★ Mayur

MULTICUISINE $$

(Mission Rd; mains ₹100-300; ☎9am-10pm) Locals and visitors alike rate Mayur highly for its well-prepared North and South Indian specialities. The decor downstairs is solidly old-school and classy, with uniformed waiters, while the upstairs is bright and more contemporary. The Indian dishes are excellent and there are some refreshingly unusual continental options including ratatouille, fish in coconut milk, and lamb goulash.

Chopsticks

ASIAN $$

₹1000 per person, plus transport. May, June, late September and October are the best times (it's banned from mid-July to mid-September because of the monsoon).

Rock-Climbing

Cliffs at Solang, Aleo and Vashisht have a good range of bolted and traditional routes ranging from French 5a to 7b (British 4a to 6b). A day's climbing for beginners or experienced climbers costs ₹1500 to ₹2000 with Manali agencies, including transport. Longer courses are also offered. Solang and the Chatru area in Lahaul are tops for bouldering.

Skiing & Snowboarding

From around mid-January to mid-March, Solang Nullah transforms into Himachal's main ski and snowboarding resort. Equipment can be hired from Manali agencies or Solang Nullah hotels for ₹1000 per day. The piste offers limited options for experienced skiers, but there is off-piste powder and backcountry skiing from the top of the cable car. In April and May Gulaba becomes the off-piste centre with snowshoe-trekking up nearby peaks. Agencies such as Himalayan Adventurers (p309) and Himalayan Extreme Centre (p309) offer one-to-two-week ski touring packages. Heli-skiing packages to high-altitude powder can be arranged through Himalayan Heli Adventures (☎251593; www.himachal.com).

Walking & Trekking

Manali is a popular starting point for organised mountain treks. Most agencies offer multi-day treks for between ₹2000 and ₹3000 per person per day including guides, transport, porters or pack animals, food and camping equipment. June, September and October are overall the best months. Popular options include Beas Kund (three days), the 4250m-high Bhriagu Lake (three days), the Hamta Pass to Lahaul (four days), the Chandrakani Pass from Naggar to Malana (three days) and, more demanding, the Pin-Parvati Trek (six to nine days) or routes west to the isolated village of Bara Bhangal and on to the Chamba or Kangra valleys (11 days or more).

Plenty of shorter walks are possible from Manali. The usual rules on safe trekking apply – tell someone where you are going and never walk alone. Guides for day hikes typically cost ₹1500. One recommended day-hike is up to Lama Dugh meadow west of town (about four hours up, three hours down). A good short walk goes from Vashisht to Jogini waterfall (p317) and back.

equivalent), thenthuk (a Tibetan soup with short, flat noodles) and Sichuan chicken and lamb. Cold beers and fruit wines too.

Khyber

MULTICUISINE $$

(the Mall; mains ₹160-420; ☎8am-11pm) Upstairs by the roundabout at the top of the Mall, Khyber is central Manali's best place for a cold beer, fruit wine or even a majito. The food is also good – the speciality is meat-heavy Punjabi and Afghani cuisine but there's also Chinese, Continental, and tandoori trout.

Drinks are reasonably priced, and the window booths are a good place to watch the Mall.

Johnson's Cafe

CONTINENTAL $$$

(Circuit House Rd; mains ₹300-530; ☎8am-10.30pm; ☎) The restaurant at Johnson Hotel is tops for European food, with specialities such as lamb and mint gravy, wood-oven-baked trout with almond sauce, and apple crumble with custard. The restaurant-bar is cosy but the garden terrace is the place to be, especially during happy hours.

Old Manali

Numerous half-open-air restaurants serve all the usual backpacker-town suspects – momos, omelettes, banana pancakes, apple pie and the three I's (Italian/Israeli/Indian dishes). Nearly all these places close by November. The best include friendly and efficient Shiva Garden Cafe (Map p310; mains ₹90-280; ☎7.30am-10.30pm; ☎) and River Music (Map p310; mains ₹130-300; ☎8am-10pm), which is especially good for breakfasts and baked goods.

Casa Bella Vista

ITALIAN $$$

(Map p310; Log Huts Rd; mains ₹300-520; ☀️ noon-11pm May-Sep) Not the cheapest, but the best pizzas in the Old Manali area – thin crust, log-oven pies with tasty topping combinations – and the salads and pasta are pretty good too. It's all vegetarian, in a bright, indoor-outdoor setting.

Drinking & Nightlife

Restaurants double as bars to provide Manali's nightlife, and most serve alcohol. Himachal's bounteous orchards produce huge quantities of apples, pears, plums and apricots, some of which are made into cider, perry (pear cider) or a wide range of strong fruit wines. In Manali town, the best places for a beer or fruit wine are Khyber (p313) and Chopsticks (p312). The upmarket Johnson's Cafe (p313), Johnson Lodge (p309) and Banon Resorts (p309) also have good bars.

In Old Manali, The Hangout (Map p310; ☀️ noon-midnight, from 5pm Fri) is popular for its outdoor firepits, frequent live music including jam sessions, and decent food.

Shopping

Manali is crammed with shops selling souvenirs from Himachal, Tibet and Ladakh, including turquoise jewellery and lots of brass Buddhas. The local speciality is Kullu shawls (p305), for which a good place to start is Bhuttico (☎️ 252196; the Mall; ☀️ 9am-7pm Mon-Sat), which charges fair, fixed prices and has several shops around town.

Bookworm

BOOKS

(☎️ 252920; Shop No 5, near Post Office; ☀️ 11am-7pm Mon-Sat) Excellent selection of books, including many about the Himalaya, and maps including Leomann trekking maps.

📍 Information

Banks in Manali don't offer foreign exchange but there are private moneychangers, and SBI has three central ATMs – the one at the bank branch south of the pedestrian mall has shorter queues. It's easy to buy SIM cards for foreign phones at phone shops on and around the Mall. Shashni Communications (the Mall; ☀️ 9am-7pm), for example, only needs to see your passport. HPTDC (☎️ 252116; the Mall; ☀️ 8am-8pm, 9am-7pm approx Nov-Mar) Can book HPTDC buses and hotels.

Lady Willingdon Hospital (☎️ 252379; www.manalihospital.com; School Rd) Church-run hospital with 24-hour emergency service.

Post Office (Model Town; ☀️ 9.30am-5.30pm Mon-Sat) Come before 2pm if posting parcels.

Transcorp (the Mall; ☀️ 9.30am-6.30pm Mon-Sat) Changes cash and travellers cheques.

📍 Getting There & Away

There's a Railway Reservation Office (the Mall; ☀️ 8am-1.30pm Mon-Fri, 8am-12.30pm Sat) at the top of the Mall.

AIR

Manali's closest airport is 50km south at Bhuntar.

BUS

Government-run HRTC buses go from the bus station. HPTDC buses also go from the bus station but tickets are sold at their office. Private buses start from a large bus park 1.2km south of the bus station; tickets are sold at travel agencies along the Mall.

Delhi The most comfortable options are the HPTDC's AC Volvo coaches at 5.30pm and 6.30pm (₹1300, 15 hours). Private travel agencies run similar overnight services for ₹800 to ₹1600, depending on season. HRTC also has AC Volvos (₹1285/798 to Delhi/Chandigarh) at 4pm, 5pm and 6.30pm, plus an AC deluxe (₹1005/640) at 5.50pm, and 12 ordinary services daily (₹655/442).

Kullu & Parvati Valleys Buses go to Kullu (₹50, 1½ hours) every few minutes, many continuing to Bhuntar (₹70, 2½ hours) and Mandi (₹163, four hours). Buses to Naggar (₹30, one hour) go about half-hourly from about 7am to 6pm. For the Parvati Valley, change at Bhuntar.

Lahaul & Spiti The Rohtang La, between Manali and Lahaul, is normally open from mid-May to early November, and the Kunzum La, between Lahaul and Spiti, from mid-June to mid-October (exact dates depend on snow conditions). A new tunnel bypassing the Rohtang La is due to open in 2017, opening up Lahaul to year-round visits. In season, HRTC runs up to seven daily buses to Keylong, Lahaul (₹170, seven hours), and one at 5.30am to Kaza, Spiti (₹300, 11 hours).

Leh The bone-shaking, exhausting and spectacular road to Leh is normally open from early June to some time in October (exact dates depend on road conditions). From July to mid-September, an HPTDC bus (₹2500, 33 hours) departs at 9am every second day, with an overnight stop at Keylong, where tent accommodation, dinner and breakfast are included in the fare. Throughout the season the Him-aanchal Taxi Operators Union runs minibuses to Leh departing at 2.30am without an overnight halt (₹1000 to ₹1500, about 18 hours), or departing at 6am with an overnight halt (₹1500 to ₹2200, or ₹2200 to ₹3200 with accommodation, dinner and breakfast included); book a day in advance. Travel agencies run similar minibuses in July and August. On all journeys to Leh, bring snacks and warm clothing and be alert to the symptoms of Acute Mountain Sickness (AMS).

Other Destinations For Shimla, the HPTDC runs a daily bus at 8am (₹550, nine hours) and there are also six HRTC buses (ordinary/AC ₹390/550). For Dharamsala, HRTC buses (₹355, 10 hours) go at 8am and 6.30pm, and there's usually a private bus (₹550) at 7.30pm.

MOTORCYCLE

Many people tackle the mountain passes to Ladakh or Spiti on bought or rented bikes. You can book into a group tour with accommodation, food and backup vehicles included at around ₹5000 per day, or just rent a bike and head off on your own.

For rentals, expect to pay ₹1200/1500 per day for a 350/500cc Enfield, down to ₹800 for a 150cc Pulsar. Make sure the deal includes spares, tools and at least third-party insurance. Reliable rental places include the following:

Anu Auto Works (Royal Moto Touring; Map p310; ☎9816163378; www.royalmototouring.com; Vashisht Rd) Offers Enfield motorbike tours, and rents Enfields too.

Bike Rentals Manali (Map p310; ☎9459673440; www.bikerentalsmanali.com; Vashisht) Enfield rentals and tours.

Enfield Club (Map p310; ☎9805206004; chootutheenfieldclub@gmail.com; Vashisht Rd) Enfield rentals, repairs and tours; also sells secondhand machines.

Himalayan Inder Motors (☎9816113973; Gompa Rd) Rents Enfields and other makes.

TAXI

The Him-aanchal Taxi Operators Union (☎252120; the Mall) charges around ₹17,000 for a comfortable Sumo, Innova or Tavera jeep, carrying six people in comfort or up to 10 in less comfort, to Leh in high season (July and August). Early or late in the season you might get one for as little as ₹10,000. Private travel agencies generally charge a bit more. Antrek Tours & Travels (p309) offers seats in similar vehicles for ₹2400 to ₹4000, including a night at their comfortable Sarchu tent camp.

For Kaza, a Sumo/Innova/Tavera is ₹8000 to ₹8500 with Him-aanchal. For 6am share jeeps to Kaza (₹800 per seat), enquire the day before at Hotel Kiran (☎253066) in the south of Manali, where drivers from Spiti hang out.

Other one-way taxi fares:

DESTINATION	FARE (₹)
Bhuntar airport	1500
Dharamsala	5000
Keylong	5000
Kullu	1000
Manikaran	1800
Naggar	800
Solang Nullah	800

Getting Around

Hadimba Autorickshaw Operators Union

(☎253366; the Mall) has an office at the south end of the Mall with a large sign listing fares to various destinations, but drivers here often refuse to go for the posted prices. Drivers waiting at the top of the Mall tend to be a little more logical and with luck will go to Old Manali bridge for ₹50, Hadimba Temple for ₹60 or Vashisht for ₹70. But they'll get more out of you if they can, especially after dark (if you can get one at all).

Around Manali

Vashisht

📍 01902 / POP 1600

About 2km north of Manali on the slopes above the Beas River, Vashisht village is a slightly quieter and more compact version of Old Manali and a popular travellers' hang-out. Indian tourists mostly come to bathe in the hot springs and tour the temples, while foreign travellers largely come for the cheap accommodation, chilled atmosphere and charas. Many guesthouses and restaurants close down from about November to April.

👁 Sights & Activities

Vashisht Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p310; ☀ 5am-9pm) Vashisht's sulphur-laden hot springs are channelled into small public baths (Map p310; ☀ 5am-9pm) FREE, with separate areas for men and women, inside the ancient stone Vashisht Mandir, which is dedicated to the sage Vashisht. There's another open-air public pool (Map p310) just uphill, past a set of hot-water spouts where locals wash clothes and dishes. Nearby are similar temples to Shiva (Map p310) and Rama (Map p310).

Jogini Waterfall

WALKING

For a pretty walk of about an hour each way, head to the school built over a stream at the north end of Vashisht, and take the path up to the right along its far wall. This leads through woods and across a second stream to a small temple beside a third stream.

From here it's 30 minutes uphill to the pretty and quite powerful waterfall.

🛏 Sleeping

Many small, inexpensive guesthouses and homestays are tucked away along the village lanes and up paths towards the hills.

HOTEL $

(Map p310; 📍 252354; www.hotel dharmamanali.com; r ₹400-1200; 🌙 closed Jan & Feb; 📶) A short, steep walk above the Rama Temple is rewarded with some of the best views from any hotel on either side of the Beas River. The older wing, with a big terrace out front, has basic but clean rooms that get more expensive as you get higher, while the pricier new section has nicer, carpeted rooms with balconies. All have hot showers.

The top-floor duplexes fit four people for ₹1500.

HAMTA PASS TREK

Easily accessible from Manali, this camping trek crosses from the Kullu Valley to Lahaul's Chandra Valley via the 4270m Hamta Pass. Most people now drive up the Hamta valley from Prini village to the recently constructed dam just below Jabri Nullah. Two easy days to start off, with a combined ascent of around 500m, are good for acclimatisation. The climb to the pass from the campsite at Balu Ka Gera (3540m) is steep and tiring, but there are sublime snow-peak views from the top. Best times for this trek are the second half of September and October, after the monsoon. Chatru is on the road between Gramphu (on the north side of the Rohtang La) and Spiti.

STAGE	ROUTE	DURATION (HR)	DISTANCE (KM)
1	Dam to Chikka	3	5
2	Chikka to Balu Ka Gera	4	9
3	Balu Ka Gera to Shiangouru via Hamta Pass	8	15
4	Shiangouru to Chatru	4	10

pine-floored rooms with good, big bathrooms and fine balconies overlooking the valley. The rooftop restaurant, internet cafe, in-room wi-fi and on-site trekking-and-travel agency provide a pretty good package of services. Off-season discounts can slash rates by more than half.

Eating

Vashisht's main street has plenty of semi-open-air cafes serving similar menus of Indian, Italian, Tibetan, Chinese and Israeli dishes at reasonable prices, with free erratic wi-fi.

German Bakery

BAKERY $

(Map p310; baked goods ₹20-70; ☺8am-10.30pm; ☎) Come here for all your carrot cake, apple pie and cinnamon roll requirements. The couple of tables and benches out front are an evening gathering spot for the local semi-resident backpacker crowd.

World Peace Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p310; mains ₹100-280; ☺8am-10pm; ☎) On Hotel Surabhi's rooftop, this popular choice has great valley views from its expansive patio, plus an inside room with low tables and floor cushions. The kitchen does a decent job on a wide-ranging international menu, and they sometimes hold music jams in summer.

Freedom Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p310; mains ₹100-200; ☺7.30am-11pm; ☎) Freedom, a little away from the main pack and standing on stilts to bring it up to road level, has the best views of all the traveller cafes, plus decently prepared fare and friendly service. Good for an early breakfast, too.

Getting There & Away

The regular autorickshaw fare to or from Manali is ₹70; don't rely on being able to get one in either direction after 7pm. On foot it's about 30 minutes; a footpath down beside Bike Rentals Manali comes out on the main road about 250m north of the Vashisht turn-off.

Solang Nullah

☎01902

From January to March, skiers and snowboarders can enjoy 1.5km of alpine-style runs here, 13km north of Manali, taking the recently installed cable car (Ropeway, Gondola; ₹500 one-way or return; ☺10am-6.30pm) up to 3200m (the cable car operates in all seasons).

Solang is also a year-round 'beauty spot', with paragliding, zorbing, quad bikes and a general carnival-like atmosphere in summer. The surrounding hills are good for walking – Patsalu peak (4472m) to the north is an excellent if quite strenuous one- or two-day hike.

If you want to stay, go for Hotel Iceland (☎256008; www.icelandsolang.com; r ₹2120-4110), a genuine ski lodge with great rooms, equipment rental and a restaurant, and off-season discounts of 20% to 40%.

Buses to Solang Nullah (₹20, one hour) leave Manali's bus station at 8am, 9.30am, 2pm and 4pm, heading back immediately on arrival. Snow may make the road impassable in January and February, which usually means taking a jeep or walking the 3km up from Palchan village on the highway.

WESTERN HIMACHAL PRADESH

Western Himachal Pradesh is most famous as the home of the Tibetan government-in-exile and residence of the Dalai Lama, near Dharamsala, but consider travelling further afield to the fascinating Chamba Valley. Information can be found online for the Kangra Valley (www.hpkanagra.gov.in) and Chamba Valley (www.hpchamba.gov.in).

Dharamsala

Dharamsala is known as the home of the Dalai Lama, but the untidy market town where the buses pull in is actually Lower Dharamsala. The Tibetan government-in-exile is based just uphill in Gangchen Kyishong, and travellers make a beeline further uphill to the busy little traveller town of McLeod Ganj, also known as Upper Dharamsala.

The Museum of Kangra Art (Indian/foreigner ₹50/100; ☺10am-1.30pm & 2-5pm Tue-Sun), just off the main street, displays some fine miniature paintings from the Kangra school, and Chamba rumal embroideries, along with traditional costumes and photos from the devastating 1905 Kangra earthquake.

Dharamsala airport is at Gaggal, 13km south-west. Air India and SpiceJet both fly daily to/from Delhi, though flights are sometimes cancelled in bad weather.

Buses run from Dharamsala bus station to McLeod Ganj (₹14, 35 minutes) about every half-hour from 8am to 7pm. Services to Delhi include Volvo AC buses (₹1120) at 6.30pm and 8pm, and an AC deluxe bus (₹840) at 8.30pm.

Dharamsala Taxi Union (☎ 222105) is up a steep flight of steps from the bus stand. Cabs to McLeod Ganj cost ₹200. Irregular minibuses to McLeod Ganj (₹14, 35 minutes) wait nearby on the main street.

McLeod Ganj

☎ 01892 / ELEV 1770M

When travellers talk of heading up to Dharamsala (to see the Dalai Lama...), this is where they mean. Around 4km north of Dharamsala town – or 10km via the looping bus route – McLeod Ganj is the residence of His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama and the site of the Tibetan exile community's main temple. The Tibetan government-in-exile is based just downhill at Gangchen Kyishong, and McLeod is home to a large Tibetan population, including many monks and nuns. It's also, along with Manali, one of the two big traveller hang-outs in Himachal Pradesh, where thousands of people come each year to volunteer with the Tibetan community, take courses in Buddhism, meditation or yoga, trek in the lofty and beautiful Dhauladhar mountains, or just hang out and enjoy the low-budget spiritual/alternative vibe. McLeod has many budget hotels and guesthouses, cafes and restaurants offering Indo-Italo-Israeli-Tibetan food (with free, erratic wi-fi), travel agencies and shops selling Tibetan souvenirs, all crammed into just a couple of blocks, like a mini-Kathmandu.

Named after Donald McLeod, Lieutenant-Governor of Punjab, McLeod began life in the 1850s as a civilian settlement outside the British garrison of Dharamsala. It was devastated by the 1905 Kangra earthquake and sank into obscurity after Independence – until the Dalai Lama arrived to establish his base here in 1960. Since then, McLeod has become a vibrant centre of Tibetan culture and Buddhism. With an interesting mix of travellers, volunteers, maroon-robed monks and nuns, the international dharma crowd and an increasing flow of Indian tourists, you are never far from an interesting conversation here.

The monsoon (late June to early September) is particularly wet here, and warm clothes are useful between November and March. Many shops and businesses close on Monday.

i Sights & Activities

★ Tsuglagkhang Complex BUDDHIST TEMPLE (Temple Rd; ☎ 5am-8pm Apr-Oct, 6am-6pm Nov-Mar) The main focus of visiting pilgrims, monks and many tourists, the Tsuglagkhang complex includes the Tsuglagkhang itself (the main Tibetan temple), the Namgyal Gumpa and the excellent Tibet Museum.

Tsuglagkhang

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

The revered Tsuglagkhang is the exiles' concrete equivalent of the Jokhang temple in Lhasa and was built in 1969. The central image is a gilded statue of the Sakyamuni Buddha (the name refers to the Buddha's birthplace Sakyā). To its left are statues of Avalokitesvara (Chenrezig in Tibetan; the bodhisattva of compassion and Tibet's patron deity), and Padmasambhava, the Indian sage believed to have spread Buddhism in Tibet in the 8th century.

The silver Avalokitesvara is a replica of the 7th-century Avalokitesvara image in the Jokhang temple that was destroyed in 1966 during the Cultural Revolution. It contains relics rescued from the destruction and smuggled out of Tibet. The central Sakyamuni is flanked by collections of sacred texts, and on the right-hand wall are paintings of the three early kings credited with bringing Buddhism to Tibet.

Cameras and phones must be left at a counter before the temple entrance.

➔ Kalachakra Temple

Before visiting the Tsuglagkhang itself, pilgrims first visit the Kalachakra Temple on its west side, which contains mesmerising murals of the Kalachakra (Wheel of Time) mandala, specifically linked to Avalokitesvara, of whom the Dalai Lama is a manifestation. Coloured sand mandalas are created here annually on the fifteenth day of the third Tibetan month.

➔ Namgyal Gompa

Namgyal Gompa is the monastery in the Tsuglagkhang Complex. You can watch the monks in lively debate in the courtyard from 2pm to 3pm daily except Sunday, sealing points of argument with a foot stamp and theatrical clap of the hands. The Dalai Lama's residence, not open to the public, is on the south side of the courtyard.

➔ Tibet Museum

(www.tibetmuseum.org; ☺9am-1pm & 2-6pm Sun & Tue-Fri & 1st Sat of month, to 5pm Oct-Mar)

FREE The museum tells the story of Tibetan history, the Chinese occupation and the subsequent Tibetan resistance and exodus, through photographs, video and clear English-language display panels. A visit here is a must. Documentaries (₹10) are screened at 11am and 3pm.

➔ Kora Circuit

Most Tibetan pilgrims make a clockwise kora (ritual circuit) around the outside of the Tsuglagkhang Complex. Take the downhill road to the left at the complex's entrance then follow the prayer-flag-draped path off to the right after 150m. About half way round the 1.5km circuit you pass a collection of chortens, prayer wheels and photos of more than 100 Tibetans who have self-immolated since 2009.

Central Tibetan Secretariat

MUSEUM

Inside the government-in-exile compound, nearly 2km downhill from the Tsuglagkhang Complex, the Library of Tibetan Works & Archives (☎9218422467; www.ltwa.net; Gangchen Kyishong; ☺9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of month) began life as a collection of sacred manuscripts saved from the Cultural Revolution. Today it has over 100,000 manuscripts, books and documents in Tibetan, and over 13,000 volumes on Tibet, Buddhism and the Himalayan region in English and other languages.

There's a fascinating cultural museum (admission ₹20) upstairs, with statues, old Tibetan artefacts and books, and some astonishing three-dimensional mandalas in wood and sand.

Regular library visitors can become temporary members (for ₹100 per month for reading; ₹300 per month plus ₹1000 deposit for borrowing; passport photocopy needed for ID) to access the foreign-language collection.

Also worth a visit is the colourful Nechung Gompa below the library building, home to the Tibetan state oracle. Nearby, Nechung Cafe (p328) is an excellent spot for lunch.

Taxis from the Secretariat entrance charge ₹100 to McLeod or Dharamsala.

Men-Tsee-Khang

TIBETAN MEDICINE

(Tibetan Medical & Astrological Institute; ☎223113; www.men-tsee-khang.org; Gangchen Kyishong; ☺9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat of the month) Established to preserve the traditional arts of Tibetan medicine and astrology, Men-Tsee-Khang is a college, clinic, museum, research centre and an astrological institute rolled into one. The astrological folk can do you a 45-minute oral consultation (₹2000; arrange at least two hours ahead), or a detailed life-horoscope based on your birth time and place, which you'll receive by email and hard copy seven or eight months later (₹5015).

The Men-Tsee-Khang Museum (admission ₹10) has interesting displays on Tibetan ask at the Gu-Chu-Sum office next to Lung Ta Restaurant.

It's open on request;

Chorten BUDDHIST TEMPLE

The colourful, recently-built temple between Temple and Jogiwara Rds is generally known as the 'Chorten' (Tibetan for 'Stupa'), since it indeed encases an old chorten. You can climb steps inside to inspect the chorten's upper levels.

Clean Upper Dharamsala Programme EXHIBITION

(www.cudp.in; Bhagsu Rd; ☎ 9am-5pm Mon-Fri & 1st Sat of month) 🍃 This centre has exhibits on its admirable work keeping McLeod clean, and offers interesting free tours at 3pm on Wednesdays.

MEETING THE DALAI LAMA

Meeting the Dalai Lama is a lifelong dream for many travellers and certainly for Buddhists, but private audiences are rarely granted. Put simply, the Dalai Lama is too busy with spiritual duties to meet everyone who comes to Dharamsala. Tibetan refugees are automatically guaranteed an audience, but travellers must make do with the occasional public teachings held at the Tsuglagkhang, normally in September or October and after Losar (Tibetan New Year) in February or March, and on other occasions depending on his schedule. For schedules and just about everything you need to know about His Holiness, check out www.dalailama.com. To attend a teaching, you must register with your passport and two photos at the Branch Security Office (☎221560; Bhagsu Rd, McLeod Ganj; ☀9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Fri & 1st Sat each month). It's advisable to do this three or four days before the teaching for the best chance of getting in. To get the most out of the teachings bring a cushion and rent a radio and headset for simultaneous translation.

St John in the Wilderness

CHURCH

Just 1.5km west of McLeod on the road to Forsyth Ganj, this brooding Gothic church (dating from 1852) is one of the few remaining traces of McLeod's days as a British hill station. It's open on Sunday mornings for a weekly 10am service. The cemetery contains the graves of many victims of the 1905 earthquake, as well as the rocket-like tomb of the Earl of Elgin, the second Viceroy of India.

Yoga, Ayurveda & Massage

McLeod Ganj has dozens of practitioners of holistic and alternative therapies, some reputable and some making a fast buck at the expense of gullible travellers. Adverts for courses and sessions are posted all over McLeod Ganj and in Contact magazine, but talking to other travellers is a better way to find good practitioners. Lha (offers reliable Swedish massages with Tibetan herbal oils for ₹1000. The Men-Tsee-Khang Therapy Centre (p326) is good for Tibetan massages.

Several of the most reputable and longest-established yoga and meditation centres are in Dharamkot and Bhagsu (p332), just outside McLeod.

Holistic Centre of Ayurveda

MESSAGE

(☎9418493871; Ladies Venture Hotel, Jogiwara Rd; 30/60min ₹400/700; ☀10.30am-6pm) Resident masseur Shami is very popular, so book a day or two ahead.

Universal Yoga Centre

YOGA

Om Yoga Centre

YOGA, MEDITATION

(☎9805693514; www.omyogaindia.com; Ketan Lodge, Jogiwara Rd) This centre, run by a husband-and-wife team, holds daily drop-in classes in yoga (₹200), meditation (₹150) and Indian classical dance (₹500).

Walks

Short walks around McLeod include the 1.5km strolls east to Bhagsu or west to St John in the Wilderness, and the uphill walk to Dharamkot (2km by TIPA Rd, 1km by the steeper Dharamkot Rd). All these follow roads but pass through lovely pine and cedar forests. Some good off-road walks start from Bhagsu and Dharamkot (p331).

Trekking

It's possible to trek to the Chamba or Kullu Valleys and even Lahaul, and several agencies in town can make the necessary arrangements for camping, guides and porters or pack animals. Apart from the demanding Indrahur La trek to the Chamba Valley, the most popular option is the easy four-to-six-day loop to Kareri Lake. All-inclusive treks cost between ₹1500 and ₹2500 per person per day.

High Point Adventure

TREKKING

(☎9816120145; www.trek.123himachal.com; Kareri Lodge, Hotel Bhagsu Rd) An experienced, knowledgeable team offering some of the best prices in town. They also have an office (Temple Rd; ☀9am-6pm) on Temple Rd.

Regional Mountaineering Centre

TREKKING

(☎9418020822; Dharamkot (Tushita) Rd; ☀10am-5pm Mon-Sat) This government-run organisation can arrange treks, hikes, rock-climbing and rappelling.

Volunteering

McLeod Ganj has more volunteering opportunities than almost anywhere else in India. Some English conversation classes welcome drop-in participants. For other opportunities it's ideal to make contact a couple of weeks in advance; always check out volunteer organisations carefully before agreeing to participate. Volunteers generally arrange their own accommodation and meals, though Lha offers homestays with Tibetan families (US$20 per day including breakfast and dinner, minimum one week).

Many organisations seeking volunteers advertise in the free magazine Contact (www.contactmagazine.net); the magazine itself looks for volunteers to help with writing and proofreading. For more on volunteering, see p46.

Lha (☎220992; www.lhasocialwork.org; Temple Rd; ☎office 9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat each month) is a good place to start. This NGO arranges placements at a host of community projects, including for teachers of English and other languages, fundraisers, cooks and healthcare or IT professionals. Minimum periods range from one week to two months. Come to the office by 4pm Monday to Friday to join an English conversation class with local refugees.

Tibet Hope Center (☎9882162770; www.facebook.com/tibethopecenter; Jogiwara Rd) is a well-organised NGO aiding Tibetan refugees; it needs English teachers for a month or more and volunteers for English conversation classes (11am Monday to Friday). It welcomes ideas for new projects.

Rogpa (☎9857973026; www.tibetrogpa.org; Mithanala Rd, off Bhagsu Rd; ☎9am-5pm Mon-Sat) places volunteers with childcare experience to help at its baby care centre, freeing up refugee parents to earn an income. At least three weeks' commitment is requested, for half-days or full days.

Learning & Ideas for Tibet (LIT; ☎9418794218; <http://lit-dharamsala.org>; Jogiwara Rd; ☎9am-5pm Mon-Fri) has positions teaching English, French or German, and in computing for beginners. Volunteers can drop in for the 2pm English conversation classes.

Tibet World (☎9816999928; <http://tibetworld.org>; Jogiwara Rd; ☎office 9am-5pm Mon-Fri), with over 300 refugee students, needs volunteers for teaching English, German, French and Mandarin for two weeks minimum, and for its 4pm conversation classes. They're open to ideas for workshops or classes in fields such as music, web design or film-making.

Active Nonviolence Education Center (ANEC; www.facebook.com/anec2007; Jogiwara Rd) promotes and provides training in nonviolent conflict resolution. It seeks volunteers with good English for editing, research, fundraising, website design and outreach activities. ## TIBETAN EXILES

In October 1950, about a year after Mao Zedong declared the founding of the People's Republic of China, Chinese troops invaded Tibet. At the time, Tibet was a de facto independent state led by the Dalai Lama, with a hazy, complicated relationship with China. A year later, in October 1951, Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, fell. After resistance simmered for years in the countryside, protests against the Chinese occupation broke out in Lhasa in 1959. As the Chinese army moved against the uprising, it fired upon the Norbulingka, the Dalai Lama's summer palace. Believing his life or his freedom was at risk, the Dalai Lama secretly fled across the Himalayas to India, where he received asylum.

China says its army was sent to Tibet as liberators, to free Tibetans from feudal serfdom and improve life on the vast high plateau. It hasn't worked out that way. While the sometimes-quoted figure of 1.2 million Tibetans killed since 1950 is seriously disputed, no independent observers question the suffering and human-rights abuses, as well as huge losses to Tibet's cultural legacy, that have occurred under Chinese occupation. Many Tibetans still risk the dangerous crossing into India. Today there are an estimated 130,000 Tibetans in India, including those born here. Many new arrivals come first to the Dharamsala area, where they find support from their community (over 10,000 strong), their government-in-exile and a legion of NGOs. There are also large Tibetan communities in Karnataka state, where several settlements have been set up since the 1960s.

Khajanchi Mohalla, Khanyara Rd; ☎10.30am-1pm & 2-4.30pm Mon-Fri) in Lower Dharamsala, but they'll pay bus fares from McLeod.

Gu-Chu-Sum (p323) places volunteers for English conversation with Tibetan former political prisoners and activists and their families, from 5pm to 6pm daily except Sunday.

Courses

The most reputable schools of yoga and meditation are mainly found in Dharamkot and Bhagsu (p332). The Library of Tibetan Works & Archives (☎9218422467; www.ltwa.net; Central Tibetan Secretariat; per month ₹300, registration ₹50; ☎classes 9am & 11am Mon-Sat) conducts serious Buddhist philosophy courses in English (one hour daily) at the Gangchen Kyishong complex.

Cooking

There are several places where you can learn to cook your own momos and thukpa, and get to eat your work afterwards. Book the following classes at least a couple of hours ahead.

Lhamo's Kitchen COOKING COURSE
(☎9816468719; lhamokitchen@gmail.com; Bhagsu Rd; 2hr class ₹300; ☎10am-noon, 5-7pm Mon-Sat) Runs recommended courses in vegetarian Tibetan cooking. Each day focuses on momos, soups or breads, with two or three types of each.

Sangye's Kitchen COOKING COURSE (☎9816464540; Jogiwara Rd; classes ₹250; ☎10am-noon, 4-6pm Thu-Tue) Tibetan treats, focusing on momos (including chocolate momos!) every Sunday and Thursday, and noodles on Tuesday and Saturday.

Language

The Library of Tibetan Works & Archives (☎9218422467; www.ltwa.net; Central Tibetan Secretariat; per month ₹500, registration ₹50) runs three-month Tibetan-language courses (five hours a week) for beginner, intermediate and experienced students, starting around 20 March, 20 June and 20 September. Tibet Hope Center (p325) has one-hour basic Tibetan speaking classes at 3pm Monday to Friday. Om Yoga Centre (p324) offers daily two-hour Hindi classes (₹300).

There are several independent Tibetan teachers – ask around and check Contact magazine.

Festivals & Events

In late January, February or early March McLeod celebrates Losar (Tibetan New Year) with processions and masked dances at local monasteries. The Dalai Lama often gives public teachings at this time.

In December, the International Himalayan Festival commemorates the Dalai Lama's Nobel Peace Prize, featuring cultural troupes from all around the Himalaya.

Several film festivals live up McLeod in different seasons. The Dharamsala Film Festival (www.dharamsalafilm.festival.com; ☎May or Jun), Free Spirit Film Festival (www.freespiritfilmfestival.com; ☎late Oct) and Dharamsala International Film Festival (www.diff.co.in; ☎late Oct/early Nov) screen eclectic selections of independent features, documentaries and shorts. ## TIBETAN MEDICINE

Traditional Tibetan medicine is a centuries-old holistic healing practice and a popular treatment for all kinds of minor and persistent ailments. Its methods include massages, compresses, bath and steam therapies, pills made from plants and minerals, and diet and lifestyle advice. There are several clinics around town, including the Men-Tsee-Khang Therapy Centre (☎221484; www.men-tsee-khang.org; TIPA Rd; ☎9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat each month), run by the Tibetan Medical & Astrological Institute.

The most popular amchi (Tibetan doctor) in town is the former physician to the Dalai Lama, Dr Yeshe Dhonden (☎221461; Ashoka Niwas; ☎9am-1pm Sun-Fri), whose tiny clinic is squirrelled away in a passage off Jogiwara Rd. To get a consultation you have to queue up early at the nearby Ashoka Guest House, where the first 45 people in line at 10am receive a token for an appointment three days later. For your appointment, bring a sample of urine, which, along with a quick examination, is all the doctor needs to prescribe the appropriate herbal pills. Many locals and expats swear by his treatments.

Sleeping

Popular places fill up quickly; advance bookings are advised, especially from April to June and in October.

Kareri Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎ 221132; karerilodge@gmail.com; Hotel Bhagsu Rd; r ₹660-990, ste ₹1540; 📶) Kareri, squeezed in among a string of more upmarket hotels, has five spotless and comfy rooms with soft beds, some enjoying prime views from huge windows. There's a good vibe here, helped by the friendly manager who offers a reliable trekking service.

Kunga Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 221180; www.kungaguesthouse.com; Bhagsu Rd; r ₹350-1500; 📶) Above (and below) Nick's Italian Kitchen (p328; which is its greatest asset), Kunga offers a huge range of dull but clean rooms in several buildings, and has a helpful travel-booking service. The cheapest rooms share bathrooms.

Om Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 9816329985; Nowrojee Rd; r ₹500-550, without bathroom ₹300-350; 📶) Friendly, family-run Om, just down a lane from the main square, has simple but pleasing rooms with good views. The popular Namgyal Cafe (Om Hotel, Nowrojee Rd; mains ₹80-300; ☀ 7.30am-9pm) serves well-laden but chewy pizzas, plus decently prepared tofu and potato dishes, soups and more, and its terrace catches the sunset over the valley.

Tibet World

HOSTEL $

(☎ 9816999928; http://tibetworld.org; Jogiwara Rd; r ₹400-700) Tibet World is an energetic NGO that also has 13 plain, clean accommodation rooms with attached bathroom in its large building, available to its volunteers and others. Best are the top-floor pair with a large panoramic terrace outside. A Tibetan cafe should be open by the time you get there.

Hotel Tibet

HOTEL $

(☎ 221587; www.hoteltibetdhasa.com; Bhagsu Rd; r ₹880-1770) Bang in the centre of town, this place has a faintly upmarket feel, but very reasonable prices. Rooms have parquet floors and there's a cosy multicuisine restaurant. Profits go to Tibetan settlements in India.

Loseling Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9218923305; d ₹300-400; 📶) Just off Jogiwara Rd, Loseling is run by a Tibetan monastery in Karnataka. It's a good cheapie and all rooms have a hot shower; the three rooftop rooms are easily the best.

Tibetan Ashoka Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 221763; r with/without bathroom ₹770/220) This 40-room guesthouse, down an alley off Jogiwara Rd, looks out on the valley and catches plenty of sunlight on its ample upper terrace. It's extremely bare and functional, but very clean, and fills up in season. The shared bathrooms have cold water only. Advance reservations aren't accepted.

Hotel Dream Land

HOTEL $

(☎ 9816672708; r ₹500-2000; 📶) Down a tiny alley off Jogiwara Rd, Dream Land is surprisingly large, with surprisingly good valley views. The clean, sizeable rooms have comfy beds and tile floors, and the lower-priced ones are pretty decent value.

Green Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎ 221200; www.greenhotel.in; Bhagsu Rd; r ₹800-2800; 📶) A favourite with midrange travellers and small groups, the Green has a diverse range of sunny, super-clean rooms in three buildings, most with balconies and valley and mountain views. It's well run and has an excellent cafe.

★Chonor House

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 221006; www.norbulingkahotels.com; r ₹5290-7750; 📶) Up a lane near the Tsuglagkhang, Chonor House is a real gem. It's run by the Norbulingka Institute, and is decked out with wonderful handmade Norbulingka furnishings and fabrics. Each of the 13 bright and sunny rooms has a Tibetan theme that runs from the carpets to the bedspreads to the murals. Even the cheapest rooms are spacious.

There's also a lovely garden, with a reasonably priced terrace restaurant.

★Serkong House

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 9857957131; www.norbulingkahotels.com; Nowrojee Rd; s ₹2350-3530, d ₹2940-4110, ste s/d ₹4700/5290; 📶) Belonging to the Norbulingka Institute, the recently opened Serkong is tasteful, comfortable and well run. Spacious rooms boast Tibetan rugs, Norbulingka-made tables and tea- and coffee-makers, and the more expensive ones have fine views. Staff are polite and efficient, and there's an excellent Tibetan-Indian restaurant (mains ₹130 to ₹250).

Eating & Drinking

McLeod Ganj is crammed with traveller restaurants serving near-identical menus – omelettes, pancakes, Indian, Tibetan and Chinese staples, pizzas, pasta and assorted other European food. Happily, many of them do a pretty good job. McLeod also has some of North India's best cafes, with good coffee and English-style tea. For a quick snack, local women sell veg momos on the upper part of Jogiwara Rd and at the entrance to the Tsuglagkhang. Takeaway beer and spirits are available from several small 'wine shops'.

Snow Lion Restaurant MULTICUISINE $
(Jogiwara Rd; mains ₹70-130, breakfasts ₹145-175; ☺7am-9pm; ☎) Especially popular for its good-value set breakfasts and decent coffee, the Snow Lion does good momos and thukpa too, and has shelves full of books.

Café Budan CAFE $
(Jogiwara Rd; items ₹60-120; ☺7.30am-7.30pm) A cool and cosy wicker-chaired hang-out that serves up tasty all-day breakfast dishes like spinach-and-cheese omelettes or French toast, plus cakes, tarts, coffees and teas.

Peace Cafe TIBETAN $
(Jogiwara Rd; mains ₹70-100; ☺7am-8pm) This cosy little cafe is popular with Tibetans, including monks and nuns, as well as travellers, for dining on tasty momos, thukpa and thenthuk (veggies, cheese, egg and tofu).

Nechung Cafe MULTICUISINE $
(mains ₹75-125; ☺7.30am-8.30pm Mon-Sat) Nechung Cafe, in the Central Tibetan Secretariat area, is an excellent spot for lunch, with tasty Tibetan, Thai and other dishes.

★ Indique MULTICUISINE $$
(Temple Rd; mains ₹190-290; ☺8am-11pm) With a romantic open rooftop and plenty more tables and a loungey bar indoors, Indique is McLeod's most stylish eating venue and has live music some nights. Breakfasts and tortilla wraps are good, but the Indian lunch and dinner dishes are probably the best in town, with the chicken mint tikka a standout.

Nick's Italian Kitchen ITALIAN $$
(Bhagsu Rd; mains ₹75-175; ☺7.30am-9pm; ☎) Unpretentious, well-run Nick's has been serving up tasty vegetarian pizzas, lasagne and gnocchi for years. Follow up a ground coffee with a heavenly slice of lemon cheesecake – apparently Richard Gere's favourite when he stayed here. Eat inside or out on the large terrace.

MCLEOD GANJ TO BHARMOUR TREK

This popular five-day route crosses the Indrahara La (4420m) to the Chamba Valley, and can be done in either direction. The pass is normally open from June to early November, but the best months are September and October.

The first day climbs three or four hours to Triund, where there are a couple of simple rest houses and camping spots. The next stage climbs to the alpine meadow of Laka Got (3350m) and then the rocky shelter known as Lahesh Cave (3600m). With an early start the next day, you can cross the Indrahara La – and be rewarded for the tough climb with astounding views – before descending steeply to the meadow campground at Chata Parao.

The track on down to Kuarsi, crossing summer meadows, can be tricky to find in places. On the final day you reach an unpaved road 3km before Lamu. It's 5km down from Lamu to Holi-Chamba road, plied by several buses a day. To continue to Bharmour, take a bus down to Kharamukh and change there.

STAGE	ROUTE	DURATION (HR)	DISTANCE (KM)
1	McLeod Ganj to Triund	3-4	9
2	Triund to Lahesh Cave	3-4	8
3	Lahesh Cave to Chata Parao over Indrahara La	6	10
4	Chata Parao to Kuarsi	5-6	15
5	Kuarsi to Lamu	4	10

Green Hotel Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Bhagsu Rd; mains ₹100-180; ☺ 6.30am-9pm; ☎) This traveller-oriented hotel restaurant, with a sunny terrace and comfy couches inside, serves very good vegetarian food and the earliest breakfasts in town.

Common Ground Cafe

ASIAN $$

(www.facebook.com/commongroundcafe09; Dharamkot Rd; mains ₹70-190; ☺ 11am-9pm; ☎) The menu is a sizzling variety of Chinese and Tibetan speciality dishes, from Taiwan-style tofu to sha tag (a rich meat-and-veg stir fry), available without MSG if you like, plus all-day Western-type breakfasts. The coffee's good, too. The atmosphere is pleasingly laid-back but sociable, with communal tables, floor cushions and a small library.

Moonpeak

MULTICUISINE $$

(www.moonpeak.org; Temple Rd; mains ₹120-250; ☺ 7.30am-8.30pm; ☎) A little chunk of Seattle, transported to India. Come for excellent coffee, cakes, imaginative brown-bread open sandwiches (like poached chicken with mango, lime and coriander sauce), plus plenty of well-prepared main dishes – and the Himachali thali (₹200), a sampler of regional dishes.

Tibet Kitchen

TIBETAN $$

(Jogiwara Rd; mains ₹110-200; ☺ noon-9.30pm) It's worth queuing here to try the spicy Bhutanese food including kewa datse (potatoes, beans and chilli in cheese sauce) and unusual Tibetan dishes like shapta (roasted lamb slices with capsicum and onion). The momos are good too, and there are also plenty of Indian, Thai and Chinese flavours. Its three floors of tables are often full with travellers, monks and locals.

McLeo Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Main Square; mains ₹190-370; ☺ 9.30am-11pm) Crowded nightly and justifiably popular, this large, three-floor place serves a mind-boggling menu of Indian, Chinese and international fare, including pizzas and pasta. The semi-open-air top floor is one of McLeod's best places to enjoy a cold beer (₹180).

Jimmy's Italian Kitchen

ITALIAN $$

(Jogiwara Rd; mains ₹150-250; ☺ 8am-10pm; ☎) Jimmy's is a dependable Italian place with pleasant seating and a sunny rooftop. The baked potatoes, Greek salads and dishes like chicken Florentine are a nice change, and the pasta includes ravioli and lasagne.

Lung Ta

JAPANESE $$

(Jogiwara Rd; set meals ₹170; ☺ noon-8.30pm Mon-Sat) The daily set menus are the best choice at this vegetarian Japanese restaurant, especially on Tuesdays and Fridays when they include sushi rolls and miso soup. The food and ambience are authentic enough to attract Japanese travellers looking for a taste of home. Profits go to the NGO Gu-Chu-Sum.

Four Seasons Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$

(Jogiwara Rd; mains ₹70-300; ☺ 8.30am-9pm) This bustling little place serves up excellent pasta and Tibetan dishes at very fair prices. There are only seven tables so be prepared to share.

★ Entertainment

Irregular live music nights or jam sessions at cafes and restaurants are advertised around town. Free documentary films are shown at 6.30pm Wednesdays at Tibet Hope Center (p325), and at 6.30pm or 7pm Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at Learning & Ideas for Tibet (p325). Tibet World (p325) puts on a Tibetan folk show of songs, dances and stories at 6.30pm on Thursdays (₹150).

Tibetan Institute of Performing Arts

THEATRE

(TIPA; ☎ 221478; tibetanarts2012@gmail.com; TIPA Rd) Stages occasional Tibetan cultural performances including colourful lhamo (folk opera).

Tibetan Song & Dance Show

CULTURAL PROGRAM

(www.facebook.com/lion.man.show; Youngling School, Jogiwara Rd; admission ₹200) A mix of music, song, dance and circus theatrics, Tsering Dorjee's one-man show is both entertaining and moving. Well worth an hour of your time if he's performing when you're in town. He publicises his show through posters and normally does shows at 6pm Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

🏠 Shopping

Dozens of shops and stalls sell Tibetan artefacts, including thangkas, bronze statues, metal prayer wheels and 'singing' bowls. Some are Tibetan-run, but many are run by Kashmiri traders who apply a degree of sales pressure. Several local cooperatives offer the same goods without the hassle. And – book lovers rejoice! – McLeod undoubtedly has the highest bookshop-to-population ratio in India.

Tibetan Handicraft Center HANDICRAFTS
(☎ 221415; www.tibetan-handicrafts.com; Jogiwara Rd; ☀ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat) 🍃 This cooperative employs refugees in the weaving of Tibetan carpets. You'll pay around ₹11,500 for a 0.9m-by-1.8m traditional wool carpet, and they'll ship it if you like (around ₹3500 to Europe). Visitors are welcome to watch the weavers in action. There's also a shop with a wide variety of attractive other goods.

The tailoring section across the street can make a Tibetan dress in four or five days for around ₹800 (cotton) or ₹2500 (silk).

Bookworm BOOKS
(☎ 221465; Hotel Bhagsu Rd; ☀ 9.30am-6pm Tue-Sun) The best all-round bookshop.

Green Shop ORGANIC PRODUCTS
(Bhagsu Rd; ☀ 9am-6pm Tue-Sun) 🍃 Sells hand-made recycled paper products, plus other Tibetan-made products including organic peanut butter and tahini.

Lha Tibet Fair Trade HANDICRAFTS
(www.tibetfairtrade.com; Temple Rd; ☀ 9am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd & 4th Sat) Sells attractive crafts made by Tibetans in India.

Around McLeod Ganj

Bhagsu & Dharamkot

📍 01892

Through pine trees north and east of McLeod lie the neighbouring villages of Bhagsu (officially Bhagsunag) and Dharamkot, more rural and laid-back than McLeod itself, and the abode of choice for many budget travellers and long-stayers – places where you can lounge in cafes, take drumming lessons and yoga classes, and forget there's any trouble in the world. Some of the area's best and most serious yoga and meditation schools are here too.

Dharamkot retains a quiet village vibe, with the scattered houses of upper Dharamkot stretching almost to the little Gallu Devi Temple on the ridge above. Lower Bhagsu, in contrast, is busy with concrete hotels, shops and discos aimed squarely at domestic visitors. Its small, 16th-century Shiva temple has a cold, clean, spring-fed swimming pool in front of it, and from there it's a 1km walk to Bhagsu waterfall, most impressive during the monsoon. Two minutes up from the main road in Bhagsu you're back in Backpackerland: upper Bhagsu is very similar to upper Dharamkot, with which it effectively merges. En route, drop into the awesomely kitsch Vashnu Mata Temple, 200m up from the main road, where you access the inner grotto through a concrete lion's mouth and emerge via the jaws of a crocodile.

LET'S DRINK TO A PLASTIC-FREE PLANET

Plastic bags are banned in Himachal Pradesh, but bottles are not. Do your bit for the environment by refilling your drinking water bottle for ₹10 a litre at one of a dozen filtered-water stations around McLeod Ganj, including at Lha, the Green Shop, Green Hotel Restaurant, Common Ground Cafe and Nick's and Jimmy's Italian Kitchens. A map of all the locations is available at <http://cudp.in>.

Activities

There are many good walks in the hills around Dharamkot and Bhagsu.

To reach the little Gallu Devi Temple, you can either walk straight up the path from the top of Dharamkot, or take the track along the left side of the water tank opposite Dharamkot's Himalayan Tea Shop, then turn up a path to the right after 50m. A lovely stone path winds 1km up through the forest to emerge on a jeep track. Head 500m to the right to Gallu Devi, with a couple of cafes and guesthouses nearby and panoramas both north and south.

From Gallu Devi one track leads gently west downhill to Naddi village (2.5km) and the underwhelming Dal Lake (3km); another heads about 2km north down to a waterfall; and the main track climbs east through rhododendron woods up to the panoramic mountain meadow of Triund (2900m), a walk of about 6km that gains 800m altitude in a strenuous 2½ to three hours. Triund has a couple of simple rest houses and shops, which rent out sleeping bags and places to sleep or camp, and can provide basic meals. An overnight stop gives you the best chance of clear weather, and time to hike one hour up to the teashop and viewpoint at Laka Got (3350m), sometimes called 'Snowline', before heading back down. If you're starting from McLeod Ganj, you have the option of taking an autorickshaw to the Himalayan Tea Shop (₹70), or even a taxi by a rough road to Gallu Devi (₹400).

If you do go down to Dal Lake, it's just a short hop onward to the Tibetan Children's Village (📍 221348; www.tcv.org.in; ☎ office 9am-12.30pm & 1.30-5pm Mon-Fri), which provides free education for nearly 2000 refugee children and lodging for most of them. Visitors are welcome. You can also get there by autorickshaw (₹100) or taxi direct from McLeod Ganj.

Courses

Dharamkot and Bhagsu have many of the area's best options for learning yoga, meditation, Buddhist philosophy and ayurveda. Some places have strict rules on silence, alcohol and smoking.

Himalayan Iyengar Yoga Centre YOGA
(www.hiyogacentre.com; TIPA Rd, Dharamkot; 5-day course ₹4000, advance booking fee ₹1000; ☺Mar-Oct) Five-day courses start every Thursday. Intensive and teacher-training courses are held at their ashram west of McLeod.

Tushita Meditation Centre MEDITATION, PHILOSOPHY
(http://tushita.info; Dharamkot; 10-day course incl accommodation & meals from ₹5000; ☺Feb-Nov) Tushita offers 10-day residential retreats in Tibetan Buddhist philosophy and drop-in meditation at 9.30am daily except Sunday.

Himachal Vipassana Centre MEDITATION
(☎9218414051; www.sikhara.dhamma.org; Dharamkot; ☺Apr-Nov) This centre runs strict 10-day silent vipassana (mindfulness meditation) courses starting on the 1st and 15th of the month. Payment is by donation.

Ayuskama Ayurvedic Clinic AYURVEDA
(☎9736211210; www.ayuskama.com; Hotel Anand Palace Bldg, Bhagsu; ☺9am-6pm) Dr Arun Sharma's ayurvedic treatments and courses get rave reviews. Courses range from a week on massage or nutrition (₹6500 to ₹7500) to three-month diploma courses (₹65,000) and two-year practitioner courses.

Sleeping & Eating

Both villages have plenty of inexpensive guesthouses (many unsigned) and backpacker restaurants serving Indo-Italo-Israeli-Tibetan food. Long-stayers can get rooms in small family-run guesthouses for around ₹6000 a month, often with kitchen use included.

Cool Talk Corner GUESTHOUSE $
(☎9418712171; Dharamkot; ₹350-500) A friendly and relaxed little guesthouse up a lane above Dharamkot's main street. The two bright top-floor rooms with their own sunny balconies are the real deal. There's good food too (restaurant 9am to 9pm; mains ₹80 to ₹200), including a ₹90 veg thali.

DK House GUESTHOUSE $ (☎9418797494; Upper Bhagsu; d ₹250-400; ☺) A relatively large place in upper Bhagsu, with clean ensuite rooms, panoramic balconies and the good, cosy Evergreen Cafe (mains ₹90 to ₹190). Turn right up steps, 100m up from Vashnu Mata Temple, and head uphill for 300m.

Sky Pie Guesthouse GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎9418605966; www.skypieguesthouse.in; Bhagsu; d ₹400-1800; ☺☎) Across the street from Vashnu Mata Temple, Sky Pie has decent budget rooms, with hot showers and wi-fi, and sparkling, comfy abodes in its new building at the side. It also has a yoga hall and a good little multicuisine restaurant.

Norbulingka Institute

The wonderful Norbulingka Institute (☎9418436410; www.norbulingka.org; local & Tibetan ₹20, tourist ₹50; ☺9am-5.30pm), 6km southeast of Dharamsala, was established in 1988 to teach and preserve traditional Tibetan art forms. You can watch artisans at work on woodcarving, metal-statue-making, thangka painting and embroidery on free tours. The shop (www.norbulingkashop.com) sells the centre's expensive but beautiful craftworks, including jewellery, painted boxes and embroidered clothes and cushions, and sales benefit refugee artists. Also set among the institute's delightful Japanese-influenced gardens are the Deden Tsluglkhang temple, with a 4m-high gilded Sakyamuni statue, and the Losel Doll Museum (local & Tibetan/tourist ₹5/20), which uses charming puppet dioramas to illustrate aspects of traditional Tibetan culture. A short walk outside the complex is the Dolmaling Buddhist nunnery, also open to visitors. On Sundays and the second Saturday of each month, the workshops and shop are closed but the rest of the complex is open.

Peaceful and stylish Norling House (☎9816646423; www.norbulingkahotels.com; ₹3640, ste ₹5360; ☺☎) offers comfortable rooms decked out with Buddhist murals and Norbulingka handicrafts, arranged around a sunny atrium. Vegetarian meals and snacks are available at the Hummingbird Cafe (mains ₹150-200; ☺7am-9pm; ☺).

To get here, catch a Palampur-bound bus from Dharamsala and get off at Sacred Heart School, Sidhpur (₹7, 15 minutes), from where it's a 1km gentle uphill walk (or ₹80 taxi ride). A taxi from McLeod Ganj costs ₹400/600 one-way/return.

Sidhbari

The Gyuto Tantric Gompa (☎ 01892-235307; www.kagyuoffice.org; ☀ 9am-6pm) at Sidhbari, just north of the Palampur road 7km from Dharamsala, is the adopted home of Ogyen Trinley Dorje, who is widely accepted as the 17th Karmapa (leader of the Karma Kagyu school of Tibetan Buddhism), who fled from Tibet in 2000. Although the Karmapa's official seat is Rumtek Monastery in Sikkim (p549), he does not reside there owing to a rival claim to the Karmapa title.

When in residence, Ogyen Trinley Dorje gives half-hour public audiences on Wednesday and Saturday at 2.30pm; foreign visitors are welcome but security is tight: bring your passport and be ready to leave bags, phones and cameras outside the auditorium. Gyuto monks are famous for their deep-throated chanting and have performed at Glastonbury Festival, the Sydney Opera House and elsewhere.

Frequent Dharamsala-Palampur buses pass through Sidhbari (₹8, 20 minutes), or you can take a taxi from McLeod Ganj for ₹650 return.

Southwest of Dharamsala

Kangra

☎ 01892 / POP 9500 / ELEV 734M

Once capital of the princely state of Kangra, this bustling town 18km from Dharamsala is a good day trip from McLeod Ganj. Hindus visit to pay homage at the Brajeshwari Devi Temple, one of the 51 Shakti peeths, temples on the sites where body parts from Shiva's first wife, Sati, fell after the goddess was consumed by flames (this temple marks the final resting place of her left breast). It's reached through an atmospheric bazaar winding 10 minutes up from the main road, 1km south of the bus stand.

At the south end of town, around a ₹100 autorickshaw ride from the bus stand, the impregnable-looking Kangra Fort (www.royalkangra.com; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, audio guide ₹150; ☀ dawn-dusk) soars on a high outcrop between the Manjhi and Banganga Rivers. At least 1000 years old, the fort was occupied by Hindu rajahs, Mughal and Sikh conquerors and even the British (from 1846), before it was finally toppled by the 1905 Kangra earthquake. Head up to the palace

KANGRA VALLEY TOY TRAIN

Lumbering narrow-gauge trains run east from Pathankot, providing a scenic if slow route to Kangra (2½ hours), Palampur (four hours), Baijnath (seven hours) and Jogindernagar (nine hours). There are six trains a day – two as far as Jogindernagar and four as far as Baijnath. Ordinary trains cost ₹35 or less to any destination, but carriages are generally packed and seats cannot be booked in advance. Board early to grab a window seat and enjoy the views.

area at the top for views north to the mountains and south to the plains.

About 200m up the road from the fort is the Maharaja Sansar Chand Museum (☎ 265866; Indian/foreigner ₹30/100, audio guide ₹150; ☀ 9am-5pm), whose peacock-feather fans, pashmina fly whisks and pretty Kangra School miniatures give a fine insight into the lifestyle of the erstwhile Kangra royal family, the Katochs – a dynasty so ancient that early members supposedly fought against the Pandavas of the Mahabharata.

Kangra hotels are dreary. Best is Hotel Grand Raj (☎ 260901; www.hotelthegrandraj.com; Dharamshala Rd; r ₹1870-5390; ☹), opposite the bus station, with a good restaurant, though the cheapest rooms are small and can be stuffy and noisy. Hotel Abhi Residency (☎ 261208; Hoshiarpur Rd; r ₹1200-2800; ☹), 600m south along the main road from the temple bazaar street, has sizeable, acceptably comfortable rooms with grubby walls.

i Getting There & Away

Buses run about every 30 minutes to Dharamsala (₹25, one hour), Palampur (₹50, 1½ hours) and Pathankot (₹125, three hours). Six trains a day in each direction pull into Kangra Mandir station, 2km east of the Brajeshwari Temple.

A return taxi from McLeod Ganj to Kangra Fort costs ₹1400, including waiting time.

Masrur

Winding roads through pleasant green hills lead 31km southwest from Gaggal to the impressive 10th-century temples (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ dawn-dusk) at Masrur. Though badly damaged by the 1905 earthquake, the elaborately carved sandstone sikharas – very rare examples of rock-cut temples in northern India – bear more than a passing resemblance to the Hindu temples at Angkor Wat in Cambodia or to Ellora in Maharashtra. The tank in front provides photogenic reflections.

The easiest way to get here is a taxi day-trip (₹1600 return from McLeod Ganj, or ₹2000 combined with Kangra). Alternatively you can reach Lunj (₹65, 1½ hours) from Dharamsala by bus, then take a Nagrota Surian-bound bus 4km southwest to the junction at Pir Bindli, then either walk the last 2.5km or wait for one of the hourly buses to the temples.

Dharamsala to Mandi

The scenery along the Kangra Valley is dramatic, with the Dhauladhar Range rising to the north, and the wide valley sweeping away southward towards the plains. There are a few interesting places to stop, and a couple of good top-end hotels where car travellers might break a journey.

Palampur

☎01894

About 35km southeast of Dharamsala, Palampur is a bustling little market town surrounded by tea plantations and rice fields. You can take a free 20-minute tour to observe the tea-making process at the Palampur Tea Cooperative Factory (☎239034; ☀10am–5pm), 1.5km south of the bus station on the Kangra road. Norwood Green (☎9736031300; www.norwoodgreen.in; Bundla Tea Estate, Lohna village; half-board ₹8000–9000; ☎), in the north of town, comprises four bright, contemporary and tasteful cottages, each with four comfy, sparkling clean rooms, and a nice sitting/dining area opening out onto a garden terrace – but in busy seasons they'll only take bookings for two rooms or more. From Palampur's bus station, 1km south of the centre, buses leave all day for Dharamsala (₹50, two hours) and Mandi (₹150, 3½ hours). Palampur is also a stop on the Pathankot–Jogindernagar railway.

Taragarh & Tashijong

About 12km past Palampur towards Mandi is Taragarh Palace (☎01894-242034, in Delhi 011-24692317; www.taragarh.com; ₹5880–8220; ☎☎), the summer palace of the last maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir. It's now a luxury hotel on an estate full of camphor trees and equipped with tennis court, an open-air pool, spa and even a small polo ground. The Heritage Wing is the more atmospheric, but rooms in the modern Palace Wing are more comfortable and also stylish.

A side-road 1km past Taragarh leads 1km north to the impressive Tashijong Gompa, founded by lamas from Tibet's important Khampagar Monastery. Visitors can see several mural-filled prayer halls and a carpet-making, thangka-painting and wood-carving cooperative.

Bajjnath

High above the Binwa River at Bajjnath, 51km southeast of Dharamsala, the exquisitely carved 13th-century Vaidyanath Temple is sacred to Shiva in his incarnation as Vaidyanath, Lord of the Physicians. Thousands of pilgrims make their way here for the Shivaratri Festival (☀late Feb–early Mar). Plenty of buses between Mandi and Palampur or Dharamsala stop at Bajjnath bus station, almost opposite the temple. Bajjnath Paprola station on the Pathankot–Jogindernagar railway is 2km west.

Bir & Billing

From Ahju, 8km southeast of Bajjnath, a road winds 3km uphill to the village of Bir (1500m). Bir has three peaceful gompas that welcome passing visitors, and a handful of guesthouses catering mainly to people who come for the paragliding and hang-gliding from Billing (2600m), an internationally renowned take-off point 14km up a winding road from Bir. Experienced paragliders may fly as far as Dharamsala or Manali from Billing, and international competitions take place here every autumn. In 2015 Billing is hosting its first Paragliding World Cup (24 to 31 October).

Several agencies in Bir offer tandem flights of around 30 minutes for ₹2500 to ₹3000, including transport up to Billing. McLeod Ganj travel agencies will also bring you here for flying. October and November have the best conditions. The monsoon prevents flying from mid-July to mid-September.

Most buses between Palampur and Mandi will drop you in Ahju. Alternatively, head to Jogindernagar, 12km further east, and get a taxi there.

Chamba Valley

The scenic Chamba Valley is a splendidly isolated valley system, cut off from the Kangra Valley by the Dhauladhar Range and from Lahaul and Kashmir by the Pir Panjal. This area was ruled for centuries as the princely state of Chamba, one of the most ancient states in North India. It's great for temple buffs and trekkers, but well off most tourists' radars.

Dalhousie

☎ 01899 / POP 10,500 / ELEV 2036M

With its plunging pine-clad valleys and distant mountain views, Dalhousie is another of those cool hill retreats left behind by the British. Founded in the 1850s by the viceroy whose name it bears, its heyday came in the 1920s, '30s and '40s when Lahore society flocked here for its hols. Come Partition, Lahore found itself in Pakistan and Dalhousie has never been quite the same again. Still, it carries on as a relatively staid escape for honeymooners and families from the plains.

There's not a lot to see or do except stroll the tree-shaded lanes. Unusually for a hill station there are few truly steep roads. The market areas at Subhash Chowk and Gandhi Chowk are linked by lanes - Thandi Sarak (Cold Rd), and Garam Sarak (Hot Rd). The latter lane receives more sunshine. There's a nice 2.5km road walk northeast from Gandhi Chowk to Jandrighat, a summer home of the former Chamba rulers (not open to visitors). You can also visit the British-era churches of St John (1863) and St Francis (1894), set among the pines at opposite ends of the ridge.

Sleeping

Dalhousie has more than 100 hotels spread across various ridges and lanes, but outside the May-June high season many of them wear a sadly unloved look.

Hotel Craggs

(☎242124; hotelcraggs@hotmail.com; Garam Sarak; r ₹600-900, cottage ₹1200) It's shabby, but the beds and bathrooms are clean. The rickety old house has huge rooms and a large terrace offering spectacular valley views; the best option is the self-contained cottage above.

Silverton Estate Guest House

HERITAGE GUESTHOUSE $$$ (☎9418010674; www.heritagehotels.com/silverton; Above Circuit House, Moti Tibba; r ₹3300-5500; ☀Apr-Nov; 📶) Silverton is secluded among trees above Thandi Sarak and is the choice pick for colonial character and an old-fashioned kind of comfort. If it feels like staying in a cosy and beloved family home, it is - the welcoming owners also live here. Have a bash at croquet in the large gardens.

Grand View Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$ (☎240760; www.grandviewdalhousie.in; r incl breakfast ₹3640-4940, ste from ₹5880; 📶) The Grand has some rooms in its modern deluxe block and others with more colonial-era character, including some with four-poster beds. The 1920s building is fronted by a lovely terrace gazing across to the Pir Panjal peaks.

Eating

The restaurants at the Grand View Hotel and neighbouring Hotel Mount View (☎242120; www.hotelmountview.net; Club Rd; meals ₹500-600) offer charming settings and good multicuisine fare (buffet breakfast ₹250 to ₹300, lunch or dinner ₹500 to ₹600). Cheap Punjabi dhabas are around Subhash Chowk.

★ Kwality Restaurant

INDIAN $$ (Gandhi Chowk; mains ₹140-320; ☀9am-10pm) The extensive menu at this almost-stylish place stretches to Chinese dishes and burgers, though Indian is easily the best choice, and the combo meals (₹220 to ₹250) are a very good option.

i Information

i Getting There & Away*BUS

For long-distance services, there are more options from Banikhet, a junction town 7km west (bus/taxi ₹8/220), though you aren't guaranteed a seat there. Four buses run from Dalhousie's bus stand to Chamba (₹80, 2½ hours) between 9am and 10.30am, two going via Khajjiar (₹40, one hour). Buses head to Dharamsala (₹250, six hours) at 7.15am, 11am and 1.45pm, and to Pathankot (₹100, three hours) eight times daily.

TAXI

There are taxi stands at the bus stand, Subhash Chowk and Gandhi Chowk. From the bus stand, you'll pay ₹100 to Subhash Chowk and ₹150 to Gandhi Chowk. Out-of-town fares may differ from one stand to another and the bus station stand was quoting the lowest rates at research time, including ₹520/720 (one-way/return) to Lakkar Mandi, ₹1130 to Chamba, ₹2500 to Dharamsala and ₹1550 for a day trip to Kalatop, Dhainkund and Khajjiar (₹2050 with a drop at Chamba).

Around Dalhousie*KALATOP KHAJJIAR WILDLIFE SANCTUARY

This sanctuary covers 31 sq km of forested hills east of Dalhousie. From the impoverished settlement of Lakkar Mandi, 12km from Dalhousie, a flat 3km unpaved road leads to the forest rest house (built in 1925) and tea shops at Kalatop, making for a nice forest walk. You have a chance of spotting langurs and musk deer. There's a ₹200 charge for vehicles to drive this track.

About 10km further down the road towards Chamba, the large, pine-ringed meadow at Khajjiar might be serene when it's not thronged by day-trippers and horse-ride hawkers. Half a kilometre on down the road, an enormous, recently erected 25m-high statue of Shiva towers over the little Jagdamba Mata Temple.

Buses from Dalhousie to Chamba via Khajjiar stop at Lakkar Mandi (₹15, 30 minutes). Chamba-Dalhousie buses pass through Khajjiar at about 8.30am, 2.30pm and 3.30pm, and Lakkar Mandi about 20 minutes later.

DHAINKUND

More uplifting than Kalatop or Khajjiar is the upland area Dhainkund (2745m), reached by a 4km side-road (and more direct shortcut paths) looping up from Lakkar Mandi. Taxis have to park at a military barrier, from which a scenic 1.5km ridgeline walk leads to the Jai Pohiani Mata Temple, with a teahouse and great views of the Pir Pinjal range. The scenic trail continues 5km along the ridge to tiny Jot, with a couple of dhabas, at the Chuari Pass (2772m) on the Chamba-Chuari Khas road. A taxi from Dalhousie to Dhainkund costs around ₹800 return.

Chamba

☎ 01899 / POP 20,000 / ELEV 996M

Ensnconed in the valley of the fast-flowing Ravi River, the capital of Chamba district is a beguiling old town with some beautiful temples, a good museum and bustling markets. Chamba was founded in AD 920 when Raja Sahil Varman moved his capital here from Bharmour, and it remained capital of the Chamba kingdom until merged with India in 1947, though under British control from 1846.

Chamba's de facto centre is the fine, open grassy field known as the Chowgan, a focus for festivals, cricket games, picnics and general hanging out. Every year since 935, Chamba has celebrated the harvest with the Minjar Festival in honour of Raghuvira (an incarnation of Rama) – nowadays a week of processions, folk dance and music, and a vast flea market on the Chowgan.

👁 Sights

★ Lakshmi Narayan Temple Complex

HINDU TEMPLE

(☉ dusk-dawn) Standing on a rise at the top of the Dogra Bazar, this superb line of six beautiful stone sikharas, covered in carvings, dates from the 10th to the 19th centuries. The largest (and oldest), is dedicated to Lakshmi Narayan (Vishnu). The others, in north-to-south order, are sacred to Radha Krishna, Chandergupta, Shiva, Trimukeshwara and Lakshmi Damodar. All are topped by protective wooden canopy roofs.

Just outside the complex entrance is a distinctive Nepali-style pillar topped by a statue of Vishnu's Garuda.

Blhuri Singh Museum

MUSEUM

(☎ 222590; Museum Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹20/100, camera ₹50/100; ☉ 10am-5pm Tue-Sun) This well-displayed museum includes a wonderful collection of Pahari (Hill Country) miniature paintings from the Chamba, Basholi, Kangra and Guler schools, plus intriguing copper-plate inscriptions (formerly a way of preserving important documents) and ornately carved centuries-old fountain slabs – a unique Chamba Valley tradition. There's comprehensive labelling in English and it's one of Himachal's best museums.

Akhand Chandi Palace

HISTORIC BUILDING

Lording it over the town is the unmissable stately white Akhand Chandi Palace, the former home of the Chamba raja, built in the mid-18th century. It now houses a postgraduate college; you can peep inside from the north-side entrance during school hours.

Rang Mahal

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Old Palace) Up on the hillside above the Chowgan, the fortresslike, rusty-coloured Rang Mahal, built in the 18th century and formerly the royal granary and treasury, now houses the State Handicraft & Handloom Centre, making local crafts, and the fairly modest Himachal Emporium (☎ 222333; ☉ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat), which sells them.

Other Temples

It's fascinating to seek out some of Chamba's beautiful smaller temples, many of them built during the town's earliest centuries.

A steep 378 steps up from near the bus stand (or take a taxi), the Chamunda Devi Temple, dating from 1762, affords wonderful views over the town and valley. It's dedicated to a wrathful aspect of the mother goddess Devi and its front mandapa (pavilion) features a forest of bells and rich ceiling carving. About 500m north along the road is the small, modern Sui Mata Shrine, with colourful paintings telling the tale of the Chamba queen Sui, who gave her life to appease a water spirit that was causing a terrible drought. The queen-goddess is highly venerated by local women, and the four-day Sui Mata Mela is celebrated on the Chowgan in her honour each March or April.

About 600m further along the same road, a small red-and-white roadside arch leads to the exquisite 12th-century sikhara-style Bajreshwari Devi Temple, dedicated to Bajreshwari, an incarnation of Durga. The very rich carving includes, on the rear wall, an image of Durga slaying the (minus-cule-looking) giant Mahisasur and trampling on his buffalo.

By the Chowgan is the 11th-century Harirai Mandir, sacred to Vishnu. Three further finely-carved sikhara temples are dotted around the narrow lanes above the Chowgan. The 10th-century Champavati Temple was built by Raja Sahil Varman in honour of his daughter Champavati, who is worshipped locally as an incarnation of Durga; the 16th-century Bansi Gopal Temple is dedicated to Krishna; and the 17th-century Sitaram Temple is dedicated to Rama.

Mani Mahesh Travels

TREKKING

(☎ 9816620401; www.himalayanlap.com; outside Lakshmi Narayan Temple Complex; ☉ 9am-9pm

Chamba

Mon-Sat) Professional and experienced Mani Mahesh can arrange treks with guides and porters in and across the surrounding Pir Panjal and Dhauladhar ranges, as well as informative tours of Chamba's temples (from ₹550). Treks cost ₹2000 to ₹2800 per person per day within the Chamba Valley, or ₹3500 to ₹4500 across the Pir Panjal or Dhauladhar passes, plus any transport costs.

Ask about stays in their isolated Ridgemoor Cottage, three or four hours' walk (with an elevation gain of 1000m) above the Orchard Hut; it's also run by this same family firm. Mani Mahesh also organises far-ranging jeep safaris and motorbike tours.

Sleeping

Chamba House GUESTHOUSE $
 (☎ 222564; Gopal Nivas; d ₹550-880, ste ₹1100) This creaky building, with fine views over the Ravi River from its balcony, is Chamba's best budget bolthole. The six rooms are small and have hard beds, but are quaint and clean, with wood floors, giving it a homey cottage feel.

★ Orchard Hut GUESTHOUSE $$
 (☎ 9816620401; www.himalayanlap.com; r ₹400-2350; ☎) About 10km northeast of Chamba in the lovely Saal valley, this welcoming country guesthouse and organic farm is a wonderfully peaceful place to unwind amid the plum and apricot orchards. There's a range of super-clean, thoughtfully designed rooms for all budgets, the home-cooked meals (₹550 half-board per person) are superb, and staff can lead you on walks.

Sister company Mani Mahesh Travels in Chamba will arrange transfers, either by taxi (₹350) or public bus (₹20), to Chaminu village, from where it's a 20-minute uphill walk to the house. You'll thank yourself if you schedule an extra day or two here.

Hotel City Heart HOTEL $$
 (☎ 222032; www.hotelcityheartchamba.com; r ₹1620-2920, ste ₹3270-4790; ☎) The cheapest ("business class") rooms are dingy holes, but the others (from ₹2090) are spacious, clean and recently decorated. The suites have expansive Chowgan views. Discounts of up to 30% are often available.

Hotel Iravati HOTEL $$
 (☎ 222671; www.hptdc.gov.in; Court Rd; s ₹1320-2120, d ₹1770-2820) Though it has that outdated, ascetic feel of most HPTDC hotels, the Iravati provides sizeable rooms in decent condition, nearly all with Chowgan-view balconies. Its Chowgan Restaurant is one of the town's best.

🔪 Eating

Chamba cuisine is known for its chukh – a chilli sauce with capsicum, lemon juice and mustard oil, served as a condiment almost everywhere.

Chowgan Restaurant INDIAN $$
 (mains ₹100-250; ☺ 7.30am-9.30pm) Hotel Iravati's restaurant is one of Chamba's better eateries; it offers a few interesting Chamba specialties, including chasnidar (sweet-and-sour dried fruit).

Cafe Ravi View INDIAN $$
 (Chowgan; mains ₹90-190; ☺ 9am-9pm) This HPTDC-run snack house is worth a visit for its icy-cold beers (₹130) and excellent river views as well as for its Indian and Chinese veg food – including dosas and bargain veg thalis (₹100). It has a sunny terrace as well as indoor air-con.

Desa Chicken Corner STREET FOOD $$
 (Museum Rd; mains ₹100-130; ☺ 10am-9.30pm) Tasty chicken tandoori or chicken curry, cooked in front of your nose, go down very well with chapatis and chutney at this friendly street-food stand on the back side of the Museum Rd shops.

Jagan Restaurant INDIAN $$ (Museum Rd; mains ₹90-200; ☺ 11.30am-10.30pm) It's nothing flash but the uniformed waiters at this upstairs restaurant serve up the tasty chamba madhra (kidney beans with curd and ghee) for ₹110, plus a good selection of veg curries and chicken dishes.

📍 Information

There's an international ATM (but no currency exchange) at SBI, near the courthouse.

HPTDC Tourist Office (☎ 224002; Court Rd; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) In the courtyard of Hotel Iravati.

📍 Getting There & Away

A mix of government-run HRTC and private buses runs to most destinations from the bus stand. For the spectacular trip to Bharmour (₹90, 3½ hours) buses leave about hourly till about 5pm; sit on the left for the best views and be prepared for delays during monsoon landslides. Eight buses daily head to Dalhousie (₹80, 2½ hours), with three going via Khajjair (₹40, 1½ hours). At least 12 buses run to Pathankot (₹160, six to seven hours). For Dharamsala (₹200, eight hours) there are three government buses; alternatively catch a government or private bus to Gaggal (₹180, seven hours) where buses leave every few minutes to Dharamsala (₹15, 40 minutes). For the best scenery, try to get one going via Jot, over the 2772m Chuari Pass.

Taxis at the Court Rd stand charge around ₹1800 to Bharmour or Dalhousie and ₹3500 to Dharamsala. You can negotiate.

Bharmour

☎ 01895 / POP 2000 / ELEV 2195M

Hovering on the edge of the seemingly bottomless Budil Valley, Bharmour is reached by a mountain road as scenic as it is perilous, winding 60km east of Chamba (it gets really interesting once you leave the Ravi Valley at Kharamukh). This ancient settlement was the area capital until replaced by Chamba in AD 920, and there are some beautiful old temples, though the main reason to come here is for treks to the surrounding valleys and passes. The villages around Bharmour are home to communities of seminomadic Gaddis, pastoralists who move their flocks to alpine pastures during the summer, and return here in winter.

Sights & Activities

Chaurasi Temples

HINDU TEMPLE

The Chaurasi temples, 500m up the street from the bus stand, occupy a wide flagstone courtyard that doubles as an outdoor classroom and cricket ground. There are three main Shaivite temples, plus a couple of dozen smaller temples and shrines. The central Manimahesh Temple is a classic stone sikhara, built in the 7th century AD. The squat Lakshna Devi Temple is of a similar date and features a weathered but wildly carved wooden doorway.

For the best valley views, hike 3km up from the Chaurasi entrance to the Brahmani Mata Temple above town. The route passes through the upper village, still full of traditional slate-roofed, wooden houses.

Trekking

The trekking season lasts from May to late October, though July and August see some monsoon rain. The many possible treks include: from Kugti to Jhalma in Lahaul over the 5040m Kugti Pass (five days); from Lamu in the Ravi Valley to McLeod Ganj over the 4420m Indrahara La (five days); and demanding longer treks via the isolated village of Bara Bhangal to Manali or Bir.

A popular shorter trek is to the sacred lake at Manimahesh, a three-day, 35km return hike starting at Hadsar, 13km east of Bharmour. It can be done without a tent thanks to the many dhabas en route. In August/September, thousands of pilgrims take a freezing dip in Manimahesh Lake as part of the Manimahesh Yatra in honour of Lord Shiva (leaving a sad trail of litter behind them).

Hotel Bharmour View

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 225090; bharmourview.com; r ₹800-1600; 📶) About 100m ahead from the bus stand, this is the most appealing of Bharmour's mediocre accommodation. Staff are friendly and the rooms are clean and sizeable, and even boast wi-fi. A few have views.

Chaurasi Hotel & Restaurant

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 9418025004; Main Bazar; r ₹500-2000) You can't miss this red multistorey building up the street towards the Chaurasi temples. Rooms are generous-sized and many have soaring views, but TLC is lacking. The ground-floor restaurant (mains ₹80 to ₹180) is Bharmour's best, which isn't saying much.

Information

There's an SBI ATM (Temple Rd) on the street below the Chaurasi temples.

Getting There & Away

Buses leave about hourly from 6am to 5pm for the rugged trip to Chamba (₹90, 3½ hours). Taxis charge between ₹1200 and ₹1800.

A bus to Dharamsala (₹300, 12 hours) departs at 5.30pm. At least five daily buses head to Hadsar (₹35, one hour); the 10.30am and 2pm departures continue to Dhanoul, halfway from Hadsar to Kugti. For buses up the Ravi Valley as far as Holi, take a Chamba-bound bus to Kharamukh and change there.

LAHAUL & SPITI

The vast, desolate northern and eastern tracts of Himachal Pradesh are among the most spectacular and sparsely populated regions on earth. Crossing the Rohtang La from Manali, you arrive first in Lahaul's relatively green Chandra Valley, but if you then travel east into Spiti you pass into the rain shadow of the Great Himalaya Range. Spiti is 7000 sq km of snow-topped mountains and high-altitude desert, punctuated by tiny patches of greenery and villages of whitewashed houses clinging to the sides of rivers and melt-water streams. As in Zaskar and Ladakh, Buddhism is the dominant religion.

From Manali, a seasonal highway runs north to Keylong, the capital of Lahaul, over the Rohtang La (3978m), which is normally open from about mid-May to early November. From Keylong the road to Ladakh continues over the mighty Baralacha La (4950m) and Taglang La (5328m) and is normally open from about early June to some time in October, though government buses stop running in mid-September (private buses, minibuses and jeeps continue longer). From Lahaul other roads branch west to the Pattan Valley and east to Spiti over the Kunzum La (4551m), which is open from about mid-June to mid-October. When the passes are closed, Lahaul is virtually cut off from the outside world, and Spiti is connected only by the rugged road from the south through Kinnaur. Check the status of the passes before visiting late in the season – once the snows arrive, you might be stuck for the winter! The website www.bcmtouring.com has updates.

A new tunnel being constructed between the Solang Valley, just north of Manali, and Teling in Lahaul, will bypass the Rohtang La and open Lahaul to year-round traffic. The hoped-for completion date is 2017.

For more information on Lahaul and Spiti, visit the local government website at www.hplahaulspiti.gov.in.

History

Buddhism is believed to have arrived in Spiti and Lahaul during the 8th century AD with the legendary Indian sorcerer, sage and missionary Padmasambhava (Guru Rinpoche in Tibetan) who spread Buddhism in Tibet. In the 10th century, upper Lahaul, Spiti, Zaskar and Ladakh were incorporated into the vast Guge kingdom of western Tibet, with Lahaul and Spiti eventually being ruled from Ladakh. The Great Translator, Ringchen Zangpo, founded a series of centres of Buddhist learning in Spiti, including Tabo, one of the most remarkable Buddhist monasteries in the Indian Himalaya.

The Kullu rajas took control of Lahaul in the 16th century and established a loose hold over Spiti in the 17th. The region came under British control following the 1846 Anglo-Sikh War, yet it maintained strong links with Tibet right up until the Chinese invasion there in 1950.

Recent decades have seen a resurgence in the region's cultural and religious life, aided by the work of the Tibetan government-in-exile in Dharamsala. Many gompas in Lahaul and Spiti have been restored, and money from tourism and hydroelectricity is improving conditions for the farming communities who get snowed in here each winter.

Climate

Rainfall is minimal, especially in Spiti, and the high altitude ensures low temperatures.

Winter temperatures can plummet below -30°C, but on the plus side, summer daytime temperatures often rise into the 20s, and when monsoons are soaking the rest of the state (mid-July to mid-September), it's usually dry and sunny here. Whenever you travel, bring some clothing for cold weather.

Lahaul

Lahaul is greener and a touch more developed than Ladakh or Spiti, but many travellers whistle straight through on the road between Manali and Leh, missing most of what Lahaul has to offer. The capital, Keylong, is an easy stop and you can detour to mountain villages and medieval monasteries that remain blissfully untouched by mass tourism.

Manali to Keylong

From Manali the road strikes north along the Beas River and climbs slowly through pine forests and endless switchbacks to the bare rocky slopes below the spectacular Rohtang La. The name literally translates as 'pile of dead bodies' – hundreds of travellers have frozen to death here over the centuries. In the height of summer, the pass is chock-a-block with Indian tourists riding horses and enjoying the novelty of a snowball fight. Look out for the small, dome-shaped temple that marks the source of the Beas River.

Once over the pass, the road deteriorates rapidly as it plunges down into Lahaul's awe-inspiring Chandra Valley, a rugged landscape of soaring crags, alpine meadows and mesmerising waterfalls plunging from glacial heights. After a zigzagging 14km, Gramphu (three or four stone buildings and a tiny dhaba) marks the turn-off to Spiti. Khoksar, in the valley bottom 5km past Gramphu, has more dhabas. The road passes along the sheer-sided valley, hemmed in by skyscraping rocky peaks. The planned tunnel bypassing the Rohtang La will join this road about 5km west of Khoksar.

About 18km before Keylong, Gondhla is famous for its seven-storey tower fort, built from alternating layers of stone and timber. The fort is no longer occupied, but it's still an impressive sight. Try to visit during the lively Gondla Fair in July. A strenuous but marvellous day hike leads from Keylong to Gondla over the 4405m Rangcha La; a guide

ROHTANG RULES

Northbound vehicles, including motorbikes, require a permit to go beyond Gulaba on the way up to the Rohtang La. Drivers can obtain the permit (₹50) at either of two checkpoints – one just north of Manali (Map p310) on the Rohtang road and the other at Gulaba itself – on production of their driver's licence, the vehicle registration document and the vehicle's pollution control certificate. Some Manali travel agencies, including Himalayan Extreme Centre (p309), will obtain the permit for you in advance for a small fee. The pass is closed on Tuesdays to all private northbound traffic, including taxis, to facilitate maintenance work. Southbound vehicles are exempt from both of these rules.

is not essential, but Brokpa Adventure Tours (p342) can supply one for ₹1000.

At Tandi, 7km before Keylong, the Chandra River is joined by the Bhaga River (together they become the Chandra-Bhaga). Tandi's petrol station is the last for 365km on the Ladakh road. You can walk 15 minutes up to Tupchiling Gompa and ask there for the keys to Guru Ghantal Gompa, a further hour's walk, which is the oldest monastery in Lahaul, allegedly founded by Padmasambhava. Although crumbling, the gompa contains ancient murals and unusual wooden statues of bodhisattvas.

Keylong

Keylong stretches along the north side of the green Bhaga Valley just below the Manali–Leh road, and it's an overnight stop for many buses plying that route. Many travellers only see Keylong briefly and in the dark, but a longer stay reveals grand mountain views, and some scenic walks.

The main street, optimistically named the Mall, winds for 1km below and roughly parallel to the highway, with the bus station (New Bus Stand) just above its east end. For tips on day hikes or to arrange longer treks to Zaskar, talk to Amar at Brokpa Adventure Tours (☎9418165176; www.brokpatreks.com; Hotel Dupchen Bldg, the Mall; internet or wi-fi per hr ₹60; ☉9am–8pm May, Jun & Sep, 7am–10pm Jul & Aug; 📶), which also has internet.

At the west end of the Mall is the sort-of-interesting Lahaul & Spiti Tribal Museum (☉10am–1.30pm & 2–5pm Tue–Sun) FREE, with examples of a thod-pa (part of a skull formerly used by amchis or lamas to store healing or sacred liquids), old dance masks, historical photos and prints, and contemporary shots of local monasteries.

Hotel Nordaling

HOTEL $

(☎222294; www.nordalingkeylong.in; r ₹800–1000, ste ₹1500; ☉approx mid-May–Oct) Just 100m above the bus station is this pleasant place with large, spotless rooms, and a relaxing restaurant (mains ₹80 to ₹150) in the apple orchard outside. It's an excellent choice and rates can drop to ₹500 when quiet.

Hotel New Gyespa

HOTEL $

(☎9418136055; www.gyespahotels.webs.com; r ₹700–1500) Only 20m up from the bus station, most of the clean, carpeted rooms here have views across the valley. The hotel also possesses an attractive pine-panelled restaurant (mains ₹100 to ₹300). Slightly cheaper rooms are available at the affiliated Hotel Gyespa (the Mall; r ₹800–1200), and both places offer discounts early and late in the season.

Hotel Tashi Deleg

HOTEL $$

(☎222450; hoteltashideleg@yahoo.in; the Mall; r ₹1380–2800; ☉approx May–Oct) This big white hotel, towards the western end of the Mall, is Keylong's nicest. Rooms in the new wing are large, with soft chairs, pretty bedding and good showers. The old wing is also fine, and mostly cheaper. The restaurant is Keylong's best, serving Indian, Chinese and continental food (mains ₹90 to ₹175), plus cold beers.

Information

There's an SBI ATM at the east end of the Mall.

Getting There & Away

From mid-June to mid-September, an HRTC bus departs for Leh (₹600, about 14 hours) at 4.30am – book tickets at the bus station the day before. Private minibuses and shared jeeps run until October, depending on snow conditions: one place you can book seats is Brokpa Adventure Tours. Seats can cost as much as ₹2000 in the peak season (June to August), and as little as ₹800 at the end of the season.

The HRTC also runs seven daily buses to Manali (₹170, seven hours) from mid-May to mid-November, seven to Udaipur (₹80, three hours) in the Pattan Valley from April/May to November, and three to Chika (₹50, two hours) in the Darcha Valley, jumping-off point for the Shingo La trek into Zaskar, from May to mid-November – road conditions permitting in all cases. For Kaza, take an early Manali bus and change at Gramphu (₹70, 2½ hours); the bus from Manali to Kaza pulls in around 8am.

Around Keylong

Shashur Gompa

BUDDHIST MONASTERY

About 3km (one hour of uphill walking) above Keylong, Shashur Gompa was founded in the 17th century by the Zanskari lama Deva Gyatsho. The original gompa, featuring 5m-high thangkas, is now enshrined inside a modern concrete one, with fine views over the valley. During the Tsheshu Festival in June or July, monks here perform frenetic ritual masked dances known as chaams.

The path to the gompa cuts uphill almost opposite the Yarkid Guesthouse on the main highway – follow it upwards until you see the white chortens visible on the ridge.

Kardang Gompa

BUDDHIST MONASTERY

Propped on concrete stilts facing Keylong across the valley, Kardang Gompa has existed for 900 years, but the current building dates from 1912. Maintained by an order of Drukpa Kagyu (Red Hat) monks and nuns, the monastery enshrines a mighty prayer wheel said to contain a million strips of paper bearing the mantra Om mani padme hum ('hail to the jewel in the lotus'). There are excellent frescoes, but you may have to track down a monk or nun to open it.

To get here, head for the hospital at the bottom of the west end of Keylong and take a path down to the left 30m before the hospital. This crosses the Bhaga on a footbridge, then climbs 1km to a road where you turn right into Kardang village. Ask directions to the gompa, 800m further uphill. For a different route back, return to Kardang village then head to the right along the road for 3km to Lapchang village, where a path descends 1km to another footbridge over the Bhaga, then climbs 1.25km to the main road. Keylong is 1.5km to the left (west).

JISPA

About 22km northeast of Keylong, pretty Jispa village is a popular overnight stop for mountain bikers and motorcyclists; 4km back towards Keylong is the 16th-century Gemur Gompa. For accommodation, there's the inviting Hotel Ibx Jispa (☎01900-233203; www.hotelibxjispa.com; d ₹2120) on the main road. There are several overnight halts further up the road towards Leh (p244).

PATTAN VALLEY

At Tandi, 8km southwest of Keylong, a road branches northwest along the beautiful, green Pattan Valley, Lahaul's lowest-lying, most fertile area, carved by the Chandra-Bhaga River. Snowy peaks rise above its many side valleys, and passes over the Pir Panjal range to the south lead across to the Chamba Valley.

Around 36km from Tandi, a side road leads 5km to the hilltop village of Triloknath, whose squat stone temple is a remarkable example of Hindu-Buddhist syncretism: the white-marble main idol is revered by Buddhists as Avalokitesvara, the bodhisattva of compassion, while Hindus worship it as Shiva. It's a major pilgrimage site for both religions, especially during the Pauri Festival (☀3rd week of Aug).

Pattan's largest settlement is the little town of Udaipur, 46km from Tandi, with a few basic lodgings including Youngpha Guesthouse (r without bath ₹300-400), with four clean, carpeted rooms. Udaipur's Markula Devi Temple looks plain on the outside, but the inside is covered with fabulous, detailed wood carvings from the 11th to 16th centuries, including scenes from the Mahabharata and Ramayana around the top of the walls.

From Udaipur the road continues down the valley to Killar, beyond which unpaved roads head over the Sach Pass (open roughly mid-June to mid-October) to Chamba and on down to Kishtwar in Jammu and Kashmir.

Spiti

Separated from fertile Lahaul by the soaring 4551m Kunzum La, Spiti is another chunk of Tibet marooned in India. The scattered villages in this serrated moonscape arrive like mirages, clusters of whitewashed mud-brick homes huddled amid green barley fields below monasteries perched on crags a thousand feet above. The turquoise-grey ribbon of the Spiti River is your near-constant companion, running along a fairly broad valley before turning south at Sumdo into the precipitous gorges of the Hangrang Valley.

In many ways Spiti is even more rugged and remote than Ladakh, but buses do run over the Kunzum La from Manali from mid-June to mid-October, and the road from Kinnaur is open all year (except for temporary closures for winter snowfall and monsoon landslides and floods). The Spiti-Kinnaur loop is one of Asia's great road trips, and a steady stream of motorcyclists, mountain bikers and drivers of all kinds of four-wheelers pit themselves against some of the most challenging roads in India.

In either direction, an inner line permit (p346) is required for the stretch between Sumdo, east of Tabo, and the Akpa checkpoint east of Rekong Peo.

Gramphu to Kaza

From Gramphu, the road to Spiti runs up the dramatic, glacier-carved Chandra Valley. The tiny settlements of Chatru and Batal have popular dhabas. One kilometre past Batal, a rough track runs north to lovely Chandratal (Moon Lake), a tranquil glacial lake among snow peaks at 4270m. The track ends after 12km and a footpath runs the final 1km to the lake. From June to mid-October you can stay in tent camps 3km before the end of the track, among them Jamaica's Camp (☎9418200183; <http://travelspiti.com>; tents per person incl meals ₹1000), offering cosy two-person tents and a friendly welcome. From Chandratal, trekkers can reach the Baralacha La on the Manali-Leh road in three strenuous but heavenly days. Batal is also the starting point for treks to Bara Shigri (Big Glacier), one of the longest glaciers in the Himalaya, but the route is treacherous and it's essential to travel with an experienced guide.

The main road switchbacks precariously up to the Kunzum La, where vehicles perform a respectful circuit of the stupas strewn with fluttering prayer flags before continuing down into Spiti. An alternative 10.5km footpath to Chandratal starts at the pass.

The first Spitian village of any size is Losar, a cluster of concrete and mud-brick houses, where there's a passport check and a handful of guesthouses and dhabas. Friendly Samsong Guesthouse (r with/without bathroom ₹700/500) has simple but clean rooms and hot meals (rates can drop to between ₹200 and ₹300 outside peak season).

The final stretch to Kaza follows the Spiti River, passing the large Yangchen Choling nunnery at Pangmo, and the Sherab Choling monastery school at Morang. Volunteer teaching placements at these schools can be organised through the US-based Jamyang Foundation (www.jamyang.org).

Kaza

☑01906 / POP1700 / ELEV 3640M

The capital of Spiti, Kaza sits on the eroded flood plain of the Spiti River and is the biggest settlement you'll encounter in this empty corner of the planet. It feels a bit like a small frontier town with an easygoing pace. Jagged mountains rise on either side, while the river coils across the valley floor like twisted locks of Medusa's hair. The colourful Sakya Gompa stands just above the main road in New Kaza, while the ramshackle bazaar and whitewashed buildings of Old Kaza spread out on the north side of the stream. The bus and taxi stands are at the bottom of the bazaar in Old Kaza.

Most people stay at least one night to arrange the inner line permit for travel beyond Tabo. Kaza is also the starting point for trips to Ki Gompa and the villages of Kibber, Langza, Hikkim and Komic, high on the east side of the valley. Spiti Holiday Adventure (☎9418439247, 222711; www.spitiholidayadventure.com; Main Bazar; ☀8.30am-8pm or later, Mar-Nov) organises all-inclusive treks in the region, plus jeep safaris and cultural tours, and is a good place for travel information.

In the third week of August, villagers from across Spiti descend on Kaza for the Ladarcha Fair. All sorts of goods are bought and sold, and traders wear their finest clothes.

Sleeping & Eating

There are plenty of places to stay in both halves of town. Most close for several months in winter.

i Information

There's an internet cafe (per hr ₹80; ☺ 8am-8pm) opposite Shambhala Homestay in the bazaar, and an SBI ATM nearby.

i Getting There & Away

The bus to Manali (₹300, 11 hours) leaves at 4.30am, mid-June to mid-October; buy tickets when it arrives about 4.30pm the day before. For Keylong, change at Gramphu (₹200, nine hours). A bus leaves for Rekong Peo (₹335, 11 hours) at 7.30am, via Tabo (₹71, 2½ hours) and Nako (₹170, 5½ hours). There's a second Tabo bus at 3pm.

Shramjeevi Taxi Operators Union

(☎) 988054698, opposite the bus station, has fixed rates everywhere including to Dhankar (₹1450, 1½ hours), Tabo (₹1800, 1½ hours), Keylong (₹8000, eight hours) and Manali (₹8600, eight hours). For return trips with a one-hour wait, add 20%; for each extra hour, add ₹100 more. They also run a shared jeep to Manali (₹800) at 6am most days in season. For shared taxis to Spiti villages, try around lunchtime when villagers are returning home from town.

Around Kaza

The small, high-altitude villages on the east side of the Spiti valley (all well above 4000m) have a pristine, desolate beauty all their own - clusters of whitewashed, flat-roofed houses against a stark mountain backdrop with minimal vegetation except their carefully tended fields of barley and other crops. This is the abode of the Himalayan wolf, snow leopard, blue sheep, golden eagle and griffon vulture. Some of the villages have seasonal guesthouses or homestays and interesting old temples. They make good day trips from Kaza, and equally good places to stay over, take walks or trek between, and get a sense of the lifestyle of their amazingly resilient people.

KI

About 12km northwest of Kaza, on the road to Kibber, tiny Ki is dominated by the whitewashed buildings of Ki Gompa (☺ 6am-7pm). Set picturesquely atop a conical hillock, this is the largest gompa in Spiti, with around 300 senior and student

i INNER LINE PERMITS IN KAZA

To travel between Sumdo in eastern Spiti and Rekong Peo in Kinnaur, foreign travellers need an inner line permit.

These are issued for free in around 20 minutes at the Assistant Deputy Commissioner's Office (☎222202; ☎10am-1.30pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd Sat each month) in New Kaza – the large green-roofed building diagonally opposite the Community Health Centre (hospital). Bring two passport photos and a photocopy of your passport's identity and visa pages, plus an application form (available at Ashoka stationers across the road). Solo travellers have no problems getting permits here.

monks. An atmospheric puja is held in the new prayer hall every morning around 8am. On request, the monks will open up the medieval prayer rooms, including the Zimshung Lhakhang, which houses a bed slept in by the Dalai Lama in 1960 and 2000. Dance masks are brought out for the annual Ki Chaam Festival (Tsheshu Festival; ☎Jun/Jul) and for Losar.

KIBBER

About 8km beyond Ki, this relatively large village (4200m) is the trailhead for the demanding nine-to-11-day trek over the 5578m Parang La to Tso Moriri lake in Ladakh (mid-July to mid-September), and also a good base for day hikes. You can walk to the even higher hamlets of Gete (about two hours, with small lakes nearby) or Tashigang (about three hours) or up to panoramic Lama Tsong Tsong peak (4750m high; six to seven hours round-trip). Chhetan Lama of Norling Adventure Tours (☎8988356455; lamachhetankibber@gmail.com) charges around ₹3500 per person per day for fully equipped treks, or ₹1000 to ₹1500 to guide day hikes. Kibber has one new and two old temples: the 14th-century one in the main village contains three prayer rooms with ancient wall paintings and sculptures.

Several guesthouses offer rooms and meals. Most close from some time in October to March or April. Easily the best rooms are at solar-powered Norling Home Stay (☎9418556107; r with/without bathroom ₹500/400) ☎, a traditional whitewashed home overlooking most of the village, which also dishes up excellent organic food. One daily bus to Kibber (₹32, 50 minutes) via Ki (₹23, 30 minutes) leaves Kaza at 5pm, starting back from Kibber at 8.30am. Taxis are ₹900 one-way.

LANGZA

Langza, a switchback 16km drive north of Kaza, sits at 4325m below the pointed 6300m peak of Chau Chau. A large modern Buddha statue stares across the valley from the top of the village; the temple behind it is around 500 years old. About a half-hour walk away is an area rich in ammonite fossils around 100 million years old. Village men participate in a drunken horse race to Komic and back on a variable date in the first half of August, imbibing homebrews before, during and after the race.

A bus leaving Kaza at 2pm on Tuesday and Saturday runs to Langza (₹23, one hour) and on to Komic (₹39, 1½ hours), starting back from Komic about 4pm. Taxis from Kaza cost ₹750 to Langza.

Norkhyil Home Stay

HOSTESTAY $

This excellent homestay has three rooms with comfy beds, carpets, mud floors, filtered drinking water and solar hot water. Anjaan, the owner, is an experienced, English-speaking guide who can show you local points of interest and take you to look for wildlife.

HIKKIM

About 6km south of Langza on a route to Komic, little Hikkim is home to the world's highest post office (☎9-10am & 5-6pm Mon-Sat), 4440m above sea level. It's actually a house, and all customers are offered a cup of tea. If the owners are around outside official opening hours, they'll probably still sell you some stamps. It's possible to hike direct from Kaza to Hikkim up the Kaza Nullah in three to four hours – steeper and harder, but shorter, than the 15km road route.

KOMIC

At 4513m, Komic is claimed to be the highest motorable village in Asia. It comprises about 10 houses and, above them, the important Tangyud Gompa, probably founded in the 14th century and with around 50 monks today. Pujas are offered at 8am to Mahakala, a wrathful emanation of Avalokitesvara. Above the fortlike main building, a smaller, older building has a stuffed snow leopard hanging inside the entrance: women are not permitted in its inner prayer rooms. Komic has at least one homestay – ask locally or at Ecosphere.

Taxis from Kaza cost ₹1400 via Langza, or ₹1050 by a shorter but rougher road avoiding Langza. From Komic it's about a 16km walk south to Demul, the next village on the 'Homestay Trail'.

Pin Valley

Southeast of Kaza, the snaking Spiti River is joined by the Pin River, flowing out of a wind-scoured but beautiful valley from the heights of the Great Himalaya Range. The road into the Pin Valley branches off the Tabo road 15km from Kaza. Mud slides at Kirgarang Nullah, 8km along, can block the road, sometimes for weeks, from some time in June, so take soundings before heading into the valley in early summer. Gulling village has a couple of simple guesthouses. At Kungri, 3km above Gulling, the 680-year-old Ugyen Sangnak Choling Gompa has a huge new monastery building and three much more interesting medieval shrines, featuring blackened murals, festival masks and carved wooden snow lions. Women are not allowed inside two of them. Tringon

Guest House (r without bathroom ₹450) at the monastery has tolerably clean rooms and a small food shop, but for meals you'll have to go down to Gulling.

The pretty, traditional village of Sagnam marks the turn-off to Mudh (3770m), the trailhead for the spectacular but logistically complicated six-to-nine-day trek to the Parvati Valley over the 5319m Pin-Parvati Pass (p304), and also for the easier four-day trek over the 4850m Bhaba Pass (Tari Khango) to Kaphnu in Kinnaur. Mudh is a beautiful spot to stay for a couple of days, even if you're not trekking. The excellent Tara Homestay (☎8988062293; www.spititaraadventure.com; s/d ₹500/600, r without bathroom ₹400, mains ₹80-130; ☀May-Oct or Nov; @) is the pick of several guesthouses, and its owner Sonam Gialson can arrange full treks with porters.

A short distance from Mudh on either trek, you enter the 675-sq-km Pin Valley National Park, reputed as the 'land of ibex and snow leopards'. You may well see ibex (and blue sheep), but you'll be extremely lucky to spot a snow leopard.

Buses to Mudh (₹80, two hours) leave Kaza daily at 4pm, starting back at 6am. Some days there's a shared jeep (₹100 per person) from Mudh at about 6am, returning around 3pm. Kaza taxis charge ₹1800.

SUSTAINABLE SPITI

While tourism brings money and development to remote areas like Spiti, it can also do unintentional damage to fragile cultures and ecosystems, and local communities may receive few of its benefits. Recognising this, a number of villages have partnered with Ecosphere (☎9418860099; www.spiticosphere.com; Main Bazar, Kaza; ☎office & shop 9am-7pm Mon-Sat May-mid-Oct, 10am-5pm Mon-Sat Apr & mid-Oct-mid-Dec) ☂, a Spiti conservation and development NGO, to create a successful home-grown sustainable tourism program.

Homestays (₹600 per night, including meals) have been set up in six villages, five of which (Langza, Komic, Demul, Lhalung and Dhankar) can be linked into a 'Homestay Trail' trekking route. Visitors get a taste of authentic Spitian life, sleeping in traditional whitewashed houses and eating home-cooked food in the family kitchen. From the villages, wildlife-watching hikes offer a chance of spotting ibex, blue sheep (bharal) and possibly the shanku (Himalayan wolf), the world's oldest wolf species. Trained guides (per day ₹1000 to ₹1800), which are recommended but not required, explain about the culture and the land. Part of the homestay fee helps support the host family, and part goes into a village fund for activities to benefit the community as a whole, such as restoring the local Buddhist monastery, which is the heart of their cultural life.

Ecosphere also offers travellers numerous other activities including mountain-bike tours, culture or wildlife tours, and a 'day with the nuns' in Spiti's Buddhist convents. If you can get here in deep winter (February is best) and stay in high-altitude villages above Kaza for seven to 10 days, Ecosphere even offers a 90% chance of seeing snow leopards (₹2500 to ₹4000 per person per day for these trips).

Travellers can contribute to Ecosphere's work by volunteering on a range of projects from working in the Sol Cafe to building year-round greenhouses or working with shepherds, potters or herbal doctors.

Dhankar

High above the confluence of the Spiti and Pin Rivers, a steep 8km walk or drive up from Sichling on the Kaza-Tabo road, Dhankar village is the former capital of the Nono kings who ruled Spiti. The spectacular 1200-year-old Dhankar Gompa (admission ₹25; ☀8am-7pm) perches precariously between eroded pinnacles on the edge of a cliff. Its top-floor courtyard has a stuffed blue sheep hanging above the stairwell, a room where the Dalai Lama slept, a meditation cave, and a shrine containing ceremonial masks. Another prayer hall stands on the hilltop above, accessed by separate concrete steps. The views from these buildings are phenomenal. Dhankar's lamas no longer inhabit the old gompa, having moved to the large, sparkling New Monastery, 800m away, in 2009. In November they celebrate the Guktor Festival (☀Nov) with energetic masked dances.

On the hilltop above the gompa are the ruins of the mud-brick fort that sheltered the valley's population during times of war and gave the village its name (khar means 'citadel' and dhak means 'cliff'). An hour's walk up from the village, the small lake Dhankar Tso offers views over the valley and south-east to the twin peaks of Manirang (6593m).

Dhankar Monastery Guesthouse (☎9418817761; dm ₹150, r ₹350-800; ☀Apr-mid-Oct), beside the New Monastery, has a relaxed traveller vibe, a wide choice of good food (mains ₹80 to ₹280) and rooms with picture-postcard views. There are also several homestays, charging ₹500 per person, including two or three meals. Manirang Home Stay (☎8988053409; r per person incl breakfast ₹400, inc 3 meals ₹500), below the road between the old and new monasteries, offers three pleasant rooms, a nice roof terrace and more views, and owner Anil Kumar can organise guides, treks and transport.

Buses between Kaza and Tabo pass through Sichling (₹38, one hour from Kaza); a taxi from Kaza is ₹1450/1740 one-way/return. You might find a taxi from Sichling to Dhankar for around ₹400.

Lhalung

Hidden up the Lingti Valley, 12km northeast of Dhankar along a fairly level dirt road, the charming traditional village of Lhalung is worth a detour for its fantastic medieval monastery (admission ₹50). The atmospheric main chapel contains superb old murals and an incredibly ornate carved wooden back frieze. The separate Langkharpo chapel holds a unique four-sided statue of the white deity atop a plinth of snow lions. Don't miss the skin prayer wheel in a side chapel. The village has several homestays charging around ₹500 per person, including meals, which you can arrange privately or through Ecosphere (p347).

Tabo

☎01906 / POP 600

Little Tabo, in a dramatic valley setting hemmed in by scree slopes, 48km southeast of Kaza, is the only other town in Spiti. The dull mud-brick walls of Tabo Gompa hide some of the finest of all Indo-Tibetan art, and Tabo makes a fine place to kick back for a couple of days.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Tabo Gompa

BUDDHIST MONASTERY

(www.tabomonastery.com; donations accepted; ☀6am-10pm, shrines 9am-5pm) The gompa was founded in AD 996 by Ringchen Zangpo, the Great Translator, as Tibet's Guge kingdom expanded into these outlying territories, and is reckoned to be the oldest continuously functioning Buddhist monastery in India. Bring a torch as lighting inside its shrines is dim at best. Five of the nine shrines date from the 10th and 11th centuries, when they were painted by some of the best Buddhist muralists of their era, blending Tibetan, Indian and Kashmiri styles.

The other shrines mostly date from the 15th to 17th centuries.

The main assembly hall, the Tsuglkang, is straight ahead from the temple entrance. Inside, near-life-size clay sculptures of 32 bodhisattvas line the walls around a statue of a four-bodied Vairochana Buddha turning the wheel of law – a 3D representation of the Vajradhatu mandala, which has the Vairochana at its centre. Murals below the bodhisattvas depict 10th-century life.

You'll probably have to ask a lama to open up other temples in the compound. The other highlight early temples are the Ser-Khang (Golden Temple), second to the left from the Tsuglkang, with outstanding murals of the green Tara and the goddess Ushnishavijaya; the Kyil-Khang (Mystic Mandala Temple), behind the Ser-Khang, with a huge Vairochana mural surrounded by eight bodhisattvas; and the Byams-Pa Chen-po

Lha-Khang, immediately right of the Tsugl-khang, with a 3m-high statue of the Bodhisattva Maitreya (future Buddha).

The modern gompa outside the ancient compound has a sparkling gilded chorten and holds a well-attended puja at 6.30am.

Caves CAVE

A number of caves on the hillside above the main road were part of the monastery complex: you can reach them by steps opposite the Vijay Kumar shop.

Sleeping & Eating

★Tashi Khangsar Hotel HOTEL $

(☎9418817761; vaneetruna23@gmail.com; s/d ₹400/600, tent ₹200; ☺Apr-Oct) The four bright, inviting rooms here are set beside a lawn where table and chairs sit beneath a large parachute canopy. Tashi Khangsar has a good restaurant (mains ₹80-280; ☺7am-10pm) serving international fare, a grassy area for camping, and a relaxed, friendly vibe, adding up to excellent value. From the new monastery gate, head towards the river and turn right at the helipad.

Tiger Den GUESTHOUSE $

(☎9459349711; naveen.chauhan82@gmail.com; r ₹700-800; ☺late Mar-late Oct) Clean, pink, medium-sized rooms with hot showers, almost next to the new monastery's entrance, and an attractive restaurant (mains ₹80 to ₹280; open 7.30am to 9pm) with floor cushions at low tables, offering Indian, Tibetan and traveller food.

Kesang Homestay GUESTHOUSE $

Guest House (☎9418504451, 223451; sherabtabo@gmail.com; s/d ₹600/800, without bathroom ₹300/400; ☺mid-Apr-late Oct; 📶📶) Opposite the hospital 100m from the new monastery gates, Kesang is run by a super-friendly family and has clean, spacious rooms, plus wi-fi (₹80 per hour). Simple local meals are available. Rates drop by about one-third in April, May, September and October.

Sonam Homestay GUESTHOUSE $
(☎9418503966; sonam@yahoo.co.in; r ₹600-800, r without bathroom ₹400) 🍃 Rooms here are some of the best value in Tabo, and the hot water is solar-heated.

Millennium Monastic GUESTHOUSE $

Guesthouse (☎223315; dm ₹100, r with/without bathroom from ₹300/200, ste ₹700-1000) This ageing place has average rooms, but it does have piped hot water and is great for tight budgets. Guests are asked to refrain from smoking, drinking alcohol and other activities that might offend monastic sensibilities.

Dewachen Retreat HOTEL $$

(☎9459566689; www.dewachenretreats.com; s/d ₹2000/2800; ☺approx mid-Apr-mid-Nov) The impressiveness of the carved wooden doorway doesn't quite extend inside, but the pine-panelled rooms, with good tiled bathrooms and temple and mountain views, are Tabo's nearest thing to luxury. It's on the main road at the back of town, and is sometimes full with groups. The good restaurant is open to all.

Cafe Kunzum Top TIBETAN $

(mains ₹70-100; ☺7am-9.30pm) Kunzum Top serves tasty Tibetan and Spiti dishes in its sunny garden and cosy interior, and has decent coffee. Sonam Homestay is attached.

Information

Tabo has an SBI ATM, and internet is available at Tabo Cyber Cafe (Kesang Homestay Guest House; per hour ₹80; ☺9am-8pm Apr, May, Sep & Oct, 7am-9pm Jun-Aug).

Getting There & Away

Buses to Kaza (₹71, 2½ hours) pass through Tabo around 9am and 3pm, give or take an hour. There's a daily bus to Rekong Peo (₹270, nine hours) at 9am, via Nako (₹100, three hours), but this originates in Kaza so it can be packed, especially in May and October when seasonal workers are on the move. Taxis charge around ₹1600 to Kaza, ₹1300 to Dhankar, ₹1700 to Nako and ₹6000 to Rekong Peo.

Tabo to Sumdo

East of Tabo the highway continues to Sumdo, 27km east, where it turns south and enters Kinnaur. Foreigners must show their inner line permits at Sumdo. The southward stretch from here to Rekong Peo is one of India's most dramatic mountain roads.

If you've got your own transport, 3km before Sumdo look for the turn-off to Giu, 8km up a side valley, where you can see the mummified remains of a Buddhist monk who died over 500 years ago. The remains still have hair and fingernails and, according to local lore, spurted blood when unearthed by the shovels of a construction crew in 2004.

Why Go?

Agra's Taj Mahal rises from the dust-beaten earth of Uttar Pradesh as it does in dreams, but even the wildest imaginations leave travellers underprepared for that breath-stealing moment its gates are traversed and this magnificent world wonder comes into focus. Skipping it would be a bit like drinking chai without spoonfuls of sugar: absurd. Simply put, it's the most beautiful building in the world and it's almost impossible to see it without feeling awestruck.

But Agra, with its long and rich history, boasts plenty more besides. For 130 years this was the centre of India's great Mughal empire, and its legacy lives on in beautiful artwork, mouth-watering cuisine and magnificent architecture. The Taj is one of three places here that have been awarded Unesco World Heritage status, with the immense Agra Fort and the eerie ruined city of Fatehpur Sikri making up a superb trio of top-draw sights.

When to Go

Agra

Sep–Oct The best time to visit. Most of the monsoon rains are over and summer temperatures have cooled.

Nov–Feb Daytime temperatures are comfortable but big sights are overcrowded. Evenings are nippy.

Mar–Apr Evening chill is gone but raging-hot mid-summer temperatures have yet to materialise.

Agra & the Taj Mahal Highlights

- 1 Rising before dawn to take in the Taj Mahal (p352) minus the crowds, returning later for the cinematic sunset view
- 2 Exploring the fascinating abandoned city of Fatehpur Sikri (p369)
- 3 Gawking at the immensity of the red-sandstone walls that surround Agra Fort (p353)
- 4 Hiring a rickshaw for the day, taking in a tour of Agra's Mughal gardens, ending at sunset with Mehtab Bagh (p358)
- 5 Crossing the Yamuna River to Itimad-ud-Daulah (p355), an exquisite marble tomb nicknamed the Baby Taj
- 6 Hitting the suburbs for Akbar's Mausoleum (p355), the beautiful resting place of the Mughals' greatest emperor
- 7 Strolling deeper into ancient Agra on a captivating jaunt with Agra Walks (p358)
- 8 Battling the throngs at hectic Kinari Bazaar (p366), one of India's most mesmerising markets

History

In 1501 Sultan Sikandar Lodi established his capital here, but the city fell into Mughal hands in 1526, when Emperor Babur defeated the last Lodi sultan at Panipat. Agra reached the peak of its magnificence between the mid-16th and mid-17th centuries during the reigns of Akbar, Jahangir and Shah Jahan. During this period the fort, the Taj Mahal and other major mausoleums were built. In 1638 Shah Jahan built a new city in Delhi, and his son Aurangzeb moved the capital there 10 years later.

In 1761 Agra fell to the Jats, a warrior class who looted its monuments, including the Taj Mahal. The Marathas took over in 1770, but were replaced by the British in 1803. Following the First War of Independence of 1857, the British shifted the administration of the province to Allahabad. Deprived of its administrative role, Agra developed as a centre for heavy industry, quickly becoming famous for its chemicals industry and air pollution, before the Taj and tourism became a major source of income.

👁 Sights

The entrance fee for Agra's five main sights – the Taj, Agra Fort, Fatehpur Sikri, Akbar's Mausoleum and Itimad-ud-Daulah – is made up of charges from two different bodies, the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI) and the Agra Development Association (ADA). Of the ₹750 ticket for the Taj Mahal, ₹500 is a special ADA ticket, which gives you small savings on the other four sights if visited in the same day. You'll save ₹50 at Agra Fort and ₹10 each at Fatehpur Sikri, Akbar's Tomb and Itimad-ud-Daulah. You can buy this ₹500 ADA ticket at any of the five sights. Just say you intend to visit the Taj later that day.

All the other sights in Agra are either free or have ASI tickets only, which aren't included in the ADA one-day offer.

Admission to all sights is free for children under 15. On Fridays, many sights offer a tax-free discount of ₹10.

★ Taj Mahal

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Map p360; Indian/foreigner ₹20/750, video ₹25; ☀️ dawn-dusk Sat-Thu) Poet Rabindranath Tagore described it as 'a teardrop on the cheek of eternity', Rudyard Kipling as 'the embodiment of all things pure', while its creator, Emperor Shah Jahan, said it made 'the sun and the moon shed tears from their eyes'. Every year, tourists numbering more than twice the population of Agra pass through its gates to catch a once-in-a-lifetime glimpse of what is widely considered the most beautiful building in the world. Few leave disappointed.

The Taj was built by Shah Jahan as a memorial for his third wife, Mumtaz Mahal, who died giving birth to their 14th child in 1631. The death of Mumtaz left the emperor so heartbroken that his hair is said to have turned grey virtually overnight. Construction of the Taj began the following year and, although the main building is thought to have been built in eight years, the whole complex was not completed until 1653. Not long after it was finished Shah Jahan was overthrown by his son Aurangzeb and imprisoned in Agra Fort where, for the rest of his days, he could only gaze out at his creation through a window. Following his death in 1666, Shah Jahan was buried here alongside Mumtaz.

In total, some 20,000 people from India and Central Asia worked on the building. Specialists were brought in from as far away as Europe to produce the exquisite marble screens and pietra dura (marble inlay work) made with thousands of semiprecious stones.

The Taj was designated a World Heritage Site in 1983 and looks as immaculate today as when it was first constructed – though it underwent a huge restoration project in the early 20th century.

➔ Entry & Information

Note: the Taj is closed every Friday to anyone not attending prayers at the mosque.

The Taj can be accessed through the west, south and east gates. Tour groups tend to enter through the east and west gates. Independent travellers tend to use the south gate, which is nearest to Taj Ganj, the main area for budget accommodation, and generally has shorter queues than the west gate. The east gate has the shortest queues of the lot, but this is because the ticket office is inconveniently located a 1km walk away at Shilpgram, a dire government-run tourist centre. There are separate queues for men and women at all three gates.

Cameras and videos are permitted but you cannot take photographs inside the mausoleum itself, and the areas in which you can take videos are quite limited.

Do not forget to retrieve your free 500mL bottle of water and shoe covers (included in Taj ticket price). If you keep your ticket you get small entry-fee reductions when visiting Agra Fort, Fatehpur Sikri, Akbar's Mausoleum or the Itimad-ud-Daulah on the same day. You can also store your luggage for free beside the ticket offices and pick up an audio guide (₹118).

From the south gate, entry to the inner compound is through a very impressive, 30m red-sandstone gateway on the south side of the forecourt, which is inscribed with verses from the Quran.

➔ Inside the Grounds

Once inside, the ornamental gardens are set out along classical Mughal charbagh

i BEST TIMES TO SEE THE TAJ

The Taj is arguably at its most atmospheric at sunrise. This is certainly the most comfortable time to visit, with far fewer crowds. Sunset is another magical viewing time. You can also view the Taj for five nights around full moon. Entry numbers are limited, though, and tickets must be bought a day in advance from the Archaeological Survey of India office (Map p358; ☎️ 2227261; www.asi.nic.in; 22 The Mall; Indian/foreigner ₹510/750; ☀️ 9.30am-6pm Mon-Fri). See its website for details. Note, this office is known as the Taj Mahal Office by some rickshaw riders.

(formal Persian garden) lines – a square quartered by watercourses, with an ornamental marble plinth at its centre. When the fountains are not flowing, the Taj is beautifully reflected in the water.

The Taj Mahal itself stands on a raised marble platform at the northern end of the ornamental gardens, with its back to the Yamuna River. Its raised position means that the backdrop is only sky – a masterstroke of design. Purely decorative 40m-high white minarets grace each corner of the platform. After more than three centuries they are not quite perpendicular, but they may have been designed to lean slightly outwards so that in the event of an earthquake they would fall away from the precious Taj. The red-sandstone mosque to the west is an important gathering place for Agra's Muslims. The identical building to the east, the jawab, was built for symmetry.

The central Taj structure is made of semitranslucent white marble, carved with flowers and inlaid with thousands of semiprecious stones in beautiful patterns. A perfect exercise in symmetry, the four identical faces of the Taj feature impressive vaulted arches embellished with pietra dura scrollwork and quotations from the Quran in a style of calligraphy using inlaid jasper. The whole structure is topped off by four small domes surrounding the famous bulbous central dome.

Directly below the main dome is the Cenotaph of Mumtaz Mahal, an elaborate false tomb surrounded by an exquisite perforated marble screen inlaid with dozens of different types of semiprecious stones. Beside it, offsetting the symmetry of the Taj, is the Cenotaph of Shah Jahan, who was interred here with little ceremony by his usurping son Aurangzeb in 1666. Light is admitted into the central chamber by finely cut marble screens. The real tombs of Mumtaz Mahal and Shah Jahan are in a locked basement room below the main chamber and cannot be viewed.

★ Agra Fort

FORT

(Map p358; Indian/foreigner ₹20/300, video ₹25; ☀️ dawn-dusk) With the Taj Mahal overshadowing it, one can easily forget that Agra has one of the finest Mughal forts in India. Construction of the massive red-sandstone fort, on the bank of the Yamuna River, was begun by Emperor Akbar in 1565.

TAJ MUSEUM

Within the Taj complex, on the western side of the gardens, is the small but excellent Taj Museum (Map p360; ☀️ 9am-5pm, closed Fri) FREE, housing a number of original Mughal miniature paintings, including a pair of 17th-century ivory portraits of Emperor Shah Jahan and his beloved wife Mumtaz Mahal. It also has some very well preserved gold and silver coins dating from the same period, plus architectural drawings of the Taj and some nifty celadon plates, said to split into pieces or change colour if the food served on them contains poison.

Further additions were made, particularly by his grandson Shah Jahan, using his favourite building material – white marble. The fort was built primarily as a military structure, but Shah Jahan transformed it into a palace, and later it became his gilded prison for eight years after his son Aurangzeb seized power in 1658.

The ear-shaped fort's colossal double walls rise over 20m in height and measure 2.5km in circumference. The Yamuna River originally flowed along the straight eastern edge of the fort, and the emperors had their own bathing ghats here. It contains a maze of buildings, forming a city within a city, including vast underground sections, though many of the structures were destroyed over the years by Nadir Shah, the Marathas, the Jats and finally the British, who used the fort as a garrison. Even today, much of the fort is used by the military and so is off-limits to the general public.

The Amar Singh Gate to the south is the sole entry point to the fort these days and where you buy your entrance ticket. Its dog-leg design was meant to confuse attackers who made it past the first line of defence – the crocodile-infested moat.

A path leads straight from here up to the large Moti Masjid (Pearl Mosque), which is always closed. To your right, just before you reach Moti Masjid, is the large open Diwan-i-Am (Hall of Public Audiences), which was used by Shah Jahan for domestic government business, and features a throne room where the emperor listened to petitioners. In front of it is the small and rather incongruous grave of John Colvin,

TOP TAJ VIEWS

Inside the Taj Grounds

You may have to pay ₹750 for the privilege, but it's only when you're inside the grounds themselves that you can really get up close and personal with the world's most beautiful building. Don't miss inspecting the marble inlay work (pietra dura) inside the pishtaqs (large arched recesses) on the four outer walls. And don't forget to bring a small torch with you so that you can shine it on similar pietra dura work inside the dark central chamber of the mausoleum. Note the translucency of both the white marble and the semiprecious stones inlaid into it.

From Mehtab Bagh

Tourists are no longer allowed to wander freely along the riverbank on the opposite side of the Yamuna River, but you can still enjoy a view of the back of the Taj from the 16th-century Mughal park Mehtab Bagh (p358), with the river flowing between you and the mausoleum. A path leading down to the river beside the park offers the same view for free, albeit from a more restricted angle.

Looking Up from the South Bank of the River

This is a great place to be for sunset. Take the path that hugs the outside of the Taj's eastern wall and walk all the way down to the small temple beside the river. You should be able to find boat hands down here willing to row you out onto the water for an even more romantic view. Expect to pay around ₹100 per boat. For safety reasons, it's best not to wander down here on your own for sunset.

From a Rooftop Cafe in Taj Ganj

Perfect for sunrise shots, there are some wonderful photos to be had from the numerous rooftop cafes in Taj Ganj. We think the cafe on Saniya Palace Hotel (p359) is the pick of the bunch, with its plant-filled design and great position, but many of them are good. And all offer the bonus of being able to view the Taj with the added comfort of an early-morning cup of coffee.

From Agra Fort

With a decent zoom lens you can capture some fabulous images of the Taj from Agra Fort, especially if you're willing to get up at the crack of dawn to see the sun rising up from behind it. The best places to shoot it from are probably Musamman Burj and Khas Mahal, the octagonal tower and palace where Shah Jahan was imprisoned for eight years until his death.

a lieutenant-governor of the northwest provinces who died of an illness in the fort during the 1857 First War of Independence (Indian Uprising).

A tiny staircase just to the left of the Diwan-i-Am throne leads up to a large courtyard. To your left, is the tiny but exquisite Nagina Masjid (Gem Mosque), built in 1635 by Shah Jahan for the ladies of the court. Down below was the Ladies' bazaar, where the court ladies bought goods.

On the far side of the large courtyard, along the eastern wall of the fort, is Diwan-i-Khas (Hall of Private Audiences), which was reserved for important dignitaries or foreign representatives. The hall once housed Shah Jahan's legendary Peacock Throne, which was inset with precious stones including the famous Koh-i-noor diamond. The throne was taken to Delhi by Aurangzeb, then to Iran in 1739 by Nadir Shah and dismantled after his assassination in 1747. Overlooking the river and the distant Taj Mahal is Takhti-i-Jehangir, a huge slab of black rock with an inscription around the edge. The throne that stood here was made for Jehangir when he was Prince Salim.

Off to your right from here (as you face the river) is Shish Mahal (Mirror Palace), with walls inlaid with tiny mirrors. At the time of research it had been closed for some time due to restoration, although you could peek through cracks in the doors at the sparkling mirrors inside.

Further along the eastern edge of the fort you'll find Musamman Burj and Khas

Mahal, the wonderful white-marble octagonal tower and palace where Shah Jahan was imprisoned for eight years until his death in 1666, and from where he could gaze out at the Taj Mahal, the tomb of his wife. When he died, Shah Jahan's body was taken from here by boat to the Taj. The now closed Mina Masjid, set back slightly from the eastern edge, was his private mosque.

The large courtyard here is Anguri Bagh, a garden that has been brought back to life in recent years. In the courtyard is an innocuous-looking entrance – now locked – that leads down a flight of stairs into a two-storey labyrinth of underground rooms and passageways where Akbar used to keep his 500-strong harem.

Continuing south, the huge red-sandstone Jehangir's Palace was probably built by Akbar for his son Jehangir. It blends Indian and Central Asian architectural styles, a reminder of the Mughals' Afghan cultural roots. In front of the palace is Hauz-i-Jehangir, a huge bowl carved out of a single block of stone, which was used for bathing. Walking past this brings you back to the main path to Amar Singh Gate.

You can walk here from Taj Ganj, or it's ₹40 in a cycle-rickshaw.

Akbar's Mausoleum HISTORIC BUILDING
(Indian/foreigner ₹10/110, video ₹25; ☀️ dawn-dusk) This outstanding sandstone and marble tomb commemorates the greatest of the Mughal emperors. The huge courtyard is entered through a stunning gateway. It has three-storey minarets at each corner and is built of red sandstone strikingly inlaid with white-marble geometric patterns.

The mausoleum is at Sikandra, 10km northwest of Agra Fort. Catch a bus (₹22, 45 minutes) headed to Mathura from Bijli Ghar bus stand; they go past the mausoleum.

Itimad-ud-Daulah HISTORIC BUILDING
(Indian/foreigner ₹10/110, video ₹25; ☀️ dawn-dusk) Nicknamed the Baby Taj, the exquisite tomb of Mizra Ghiyas Beg should not be missed. This Persian nobleman was Mumtaz Mahal's grandfather and Emperor Jehangir's wazir (chief minister). His daughter Nur Jahan, who married Jehangir, built the tomb between 1622 and 1628 in a style similar to the tomb she built for Jehangir near Lahore in Pakistan.

It doesn't have the same awesome beauty as the Taj, but it's arguably more delicate in appearance thanks to its particularly finely carved jali (marble lattice screens). This was the first Mughal structure built completely from marble, the first to make extensive use of pietra dura and the first tomb to be built on the banks of the Yamuna, which until then had been a sequence of beautiful pleasure gardens.

You can combine a trip here with Chini-ka-Rauza, Mehtab Bagh and Ram Bagh, all on the east bank. A cycle-rickshaw covering all four should cost about ₹300 return from the Taj, including waiting time. An autorickshaw should be ₹450.

Chini-ka-Rauza HISTORIC BUILDING
(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE This Persian-style riverside tomb of Afzal Khan, a poet who served as Shah Jahan's chief minister, was built between 1628 and 1639. Rarely visited, it is hidden away down a shady avenue of trees on the east bank of the Yamuna.

TOP AGRA FESTIVALS

Taj Mahotsav (www.tajmahotsav.org; ☀️ Feb) This 10-day carnival of culture, cuisine and crafts is Agra's biggest and best party. Held at Shilpgram, the festival features over 400 artisan craft-makers from all over India, as well as a pot-pourri of folk and classical music, dances from various regions and enough regional food to induce a curry coma.

Kailash Fair (☀️ Aug/Sep) Held at the Kailash temple, 12km from Agra, this cultural and religious fair honours Lord Shiva, who legendarily appeared here in the form of a stone lingam. It attracts devotees from all over North India.

Ram Barat (☀️ Sep) Celebrated before the Hindu festival of Dussehra, Ram Barat is a dramatic recreation of the royal wedding procession of Shri Rama. Expect three days of colourful lights and pounding Hindu rhythms, highlighted by the 12-hour parade itself, featuring caparisoned elephants, horses, more than 125 mobile floats depicting mythological events and 30 marching bands.

Taj Mahal

TIMELINE

1631 Emperor Shah Jahan's beloved third wife, Mumtaz Mahal, dies in Buhanpur while giving birth to their 14th child. Her body is initially interred in Buhanpur itself, where Shah Jahan is fighting a military campaign, but is later moved, in a golden casket, to a small building on the banks of the Yamuna River in Agra.

1632 Construction of a permanent mausoleum for Mumtaz Mahal begins.

1633 Mumtaz Mahal is interred in her final resting place, an underground tomb beneath a marble plinth, on top of which the Taj Mahal will be built.

1640 The white-marble mausoleum is completed.

1653 The rest of the Taj Mahal complex is completed.

1658 Emperor Shah Jahan is overthrown by his son Aurangzeb and imprisoned in Agra Fort.

1666 Shah Jahan dies. His body is transported along the Yamuna River and buried underneath the Taj, alongside the tomb of his wife.

1908 Repeatedly damaged and looted after the fall of the Mughal empire, the Taj receives some long-overdue attention as part of a major restoration project ordered by British viceroy Lord Curzon.

1983 The Taj is awarded Unesco World Heritage Site status.

2002 Having been discoloured by pollution in more recent years, the Taj is spruced up with an ancient recipe known as multani mitti – a blend of soil, cereal, milk and lime once used by Indian women to beautify their skin.

Today More than three million tourists visit the Taj Mahal each year. That's more than twice the current population of Agra.

GO BAREFOOT

Help the environment by entering the mausoleum barefoot instead of using the free disposable shoe covers.

Pishtaqs

These huge arched recesses are set into each side of the Taj. They provide depth to the building while their central, latticed marble screens allow patterned light to illuminate the inside of the mausoleum.

Marble Relief Work

Flowering plants, thought to be representations of paradise, are a common theme among the beautifully decorative panels carved onto the white marble.

DANIEL MCCORMAN ©

BE ENLIGHTENED

Bring a small torch into the mausoleum to fully appreciate the translucency of the white marble and semiprecious stones.

Filigree Screen

This stunning screen was carved out of a single piece of marble. It surrounds both cenotaphs, allowing patterned light to fall onto them through its intricately carved jali (latticework).

Central Dome

The Taj's famous central dome, topped by a brass finial, represents the vault of heaven, a stark contrast to the material world, which is represented by the square shape of the main structure.

Yamuna River

NORTH →

Cenotaphs

The cenotaphs of Mumtaz Mahal and Shah Jahan, decorated with pietra dura inlay work, are actually fake tombs. The real ones are located in an underground vault closed to the public.

Pietra Dura

It's believed that 35 different precious and semi-precious stones were used to create the exquisite pietra dura (marble inlay work) found on the inside and outside of the mausoleum walls. Again, floral designs are common.

★ Mehtab Bagh

PARK

(Map p358; Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀️dawn-dusk) This park, originally built by Emperor Babur as the last in a series of 11 parks on the Yamuna's east bank, long before the Taj was conceived, fell into disrepair until it was little more than a huge mound of sand. To protect the Taj from the erosive effects of the sand blown across the river, the park was reconstructed and is now one of the best places from which to view the great mausoleum.

The gardens in the Taj are perfectly aligned with the ones here, and the view of the Taj from the fountain directly in front of the entrance gate is a special one.

Jama Masjid

MOSQUE

(Map p358; Jama Masjid Rd) This fine mosque, built in the Kinari Bazaar by Shah Jahan's daughter in 1648, and once connected to Agra Fort, features striking marble patterning on its domes.

WALKING TOUR

(☎️9027711144; www.agrawalks.com; tours ₹1500) Many folks spend but a day in Agra, taking in the Taj and Agra Fort and sailing off into the sunset. If you're interested in digging a little deeper, this excellent walking/cycle-rickshaw combo tour will show you sides of the city most tourists don't see.

The guides are darling and Old Agra highlights include going deeper into Kinari Bazaar and a few off-the-beaten-path temples

CULTURAL TOURS

(☎9837411144; www.daytourtajmahal.com) If you can't be bothered handling the logistics, look no further than this recommended agency for all-inclusive private Agra day trips from Delhi by car (₹6000) or train (₹6500). One caveat: if they try to take you shopping and you're not interested, politely decline.

UP Tourism

The tour includes the Taj Mahal, Agra Fort and Fatehpur Sikri, with a 1¼-hour stop in each place.

Tours return to the station so that day trippers can catch the Taj Express back to Delhi at 6.55pm. Contact either of the UP Tourism offices to book a seat, or just turn up at the train station tourist office at 9.45am to sign up for that day. Tours only depart with 10 people or more.

Sleeping

The main place for budget accommodation is the bustling area of Taj Ganj, immediately south of the Taj, while there's a high concentration of midrange hotels further south, along Fatehabad Rd. Sadar Bazaar, an area boasting good-quality restaurants, offers another option. Be forewarned: free wi-fi hasn't really caught on in Agra's nicer hotels; expect to pay upwards of ₹500 for 12 hours.

Taj Ganj Area

Saniya Palace Hotel

HOTEL $

(Map p360; ☎0562-3270199; www.saniyapalace.com; Chowk Kagziyan, Taj South Gate; d ₹400-600, without bathroom ₹200, with AC ₹800-1000; 📶@📶) Set back from the main strip down an undesirable alleyway, this isn't the sleekest Taj Ganj option, but it tries to imbue character (marble floors and Mughal-style framed carpet wall hangings). The rooms (apart from the bathroomless cheapies) are clean and big enough, although the bathrooms in the non-AC rooms are minuscule.

The real coup is the very pleasant, plant-filled (and recently expanded) rooftop, which trumps its rivals for optimum Taj views.

Taj Ganj

Hotel Kamal

HOTEL $

(Map p360; ☎0562-2330126; hotelkamal@hotmail.com; Taj South Gate; d ₹600-900, with AC ₹1800; 🏠🚰) The smartest hotel in Taj Ganj proper, Kamal has clean, comfortable rooms with nice touches such as framed photos of the Taj on the walls and rugs on the tiled floors (five in the newer annex are a definitive step-up with welcoming woodwork, extra space and stone-walled showers).

There's a cosy, bamboo-enclosed ground-floor restaurant and an underused rooftop restaurant with a somewhat obscured Taj view.

Hotel Sidhartha

Upper-floor rooms are smaller and not as exciting.

Either way, all 21 surround or overlook a small, leafy courtyard overrun by a shade-providing tameshwari plant.

Rooms are no-frills but are set around a landscaped garden. There are singing birds, plenty of shade and a restaurant area (better for atmosphere than food). Book ahead.

Taj Plaza

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0562-2232515; www.hoteltajplaza.com; Shilpgram VIP Rd; d ₹1500, with AC ₹2500, Taj-facing ₹3200; 🏠🚿📺) Depending on demand, this well-positioned hotel fluctuates between budget and midrange. You won't be disappointed if you stay here. It has professional reception and clean rooms with TV, six of which eye the Taj, and there's a pleasant rooftop with decent Taj and sunset views.

It's a whole lot closer to the Taj than most hotels in the same price range.

The Retreat

BOULIQUE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0562-3022222; www.theretreat.co.in; Shilpgram Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹5000/6000; 🏠🚿📺) Everything in this sleek 52-room hotel is done up boutique-style with Indian sensibilities (lots of soothing mauve and turquoise throughout) and modern fixtures abound. There's a small pool and multicuisine restaurant offering countrywide specialities such as Goan fish curries and Lahori kebabs. Free wi-fi.

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0562-2231515; www.oberoihotels.com; Taj East Gate Rd; d with/without balcony ₹62,960/53,960; 🏠🚿📺) Following Oberoi's iron-clad MO of Maharaja-level service, exquisite dining and properties that pack some serious wow, Agra's best hotel by far oozes style and luxury. Elegant interior design is suffused with Mughal themes, a composition carried over into the exterior fountain courtyard and swimming pool, both of which are set in a delightful water garden.

All rooms (and even some bathtubs) have wonderful Taj views.

The five large rooms boast huge bathrooms with pressurised solar-powered rain-style showers and flank pleasant common areas with bespoke furniture and Krishna paintings.

The immensely pleasurable 2nd-floor garden is a fabulous retreat to watch the world go by; and the food – notably the homemade pickles and aloo paratha (potato-stuffed flatbread) – excels along with the hospitality in general.

New deluxe rooms boast soothing aqua colour schemes – the results of recent renovations that squared away a new sleek marble lobby and coffee shop/restaurant.

The pool is starting to show its age, but there's a small but well-equipped gym and a very pleasant spa offering a whole range of ayurvedic treatments (massages from ₹1799). ## TAJ MAHAL MYTHS

The Taj is a Hindu Temple

The well-publicised theory that the Taj was in fact a Shiva temple built in the 12th century and only later converted into Mumtaz Mahal's famous mausoleum was developed by Purushottam Nagesh Oak. The Mughals had form in this regard, at Somnath and the Qutb Minar in Delhi among other places, but in 2000 India's Supreme Court dismissed his petition to have the sealed basement rooms of the Taj opened to prove his theory. Oak also claims that the Kaaba, Stonehenge and the Papacy all have Hindu origins.

The Black Taj Mahal

The story goes that Shah Jahan planned to build a negative image of the Taj Mahal in black marble on the opposite side of the river as his own mausoleum, and that work began before he was imprisoned by his son Aurangzeb in Agra Fort. Extensive excavations at Mehtab Bagh have found no trace of any such construction.

Craftsmen Mutilations

Legend has it that on completion of the Taj, Shah Jahan ordered that the hands of the project's craftsmen be chopped off, to prevent them from ever building anything as beautiful again. Some even say he went so far as to have their eyes gouged out. Thankfully, no historical evidence supports either story.

Sinking Taj

Some experts believe there is evidence to show that the Taj is slowly tilting towards and sinking into the riverbed due to the changing nature of the soil beside an increasingly dry Yamuna River. The Archaeological Survey of India has dismissed any marginal change in the elevation of the building as statistically insignificant, adding that it has not detected any structural damage at its base in the seven decades since its first scientific study of the Taj was carried out, in 1941.

THE SPA MAHAL

If India's most glorious monument looks particularly glowing on your visit, it could come down to a day at the spa. After years of research, Indian and American scientists have identified the culprit that has caused an ongoing discolouration of the mausoleum – marble-white by birth, but now brownish-yellow due to ageing – and it's the same pollutants responsible for global warming. Dubbed the Atmospheric Brown Cloud, black carbon, light-absorbing brown carbon and dust (the latter no surprise to anyone who has visited Agra) have slowly tarnished the surface of the Taj with years of open-stove cooking with wood and dung, vehicle exhaust, brick-making and trash burning in the vicinity.

In addition to an ongoing project to alleviate the larger issue, the Taj has received a mud-pack facial cleanse for the fourth time in its history. Based on a traditional recipe used by Indian women to restore their own facial radiance, a lime-rich clay mixture is added to pollution-affected areas of the monument overnight and is scrubbed off with nylon brushes the next day. And a massive clean-up to prepare for US president Barack Obama's scheduled visit in 2015 (he skipped the visit due to the death of Saudi Arabian King Abdullah), resulted in two tonnes of trash being removed from the Yamuna River. Voila! The Taj looks brand new.

Sadar Bazaar Area

Tourists Rest House

HOTEL $

(Map p358; ☎ 0562-2463961; www.dontworrychickencurry.com; 4/62 Kutchery Rd; s/d ₹350/450, with AC from ₹850/1000; 🍷 @ 📶) If you aren't set on sleeping under the nose of the Taj, this centrally located travellers' hub offers better value than most Agra spots and has been under the watchful eye of the same family since 1965 (though you can't tell it is pushing 50 years).

If you can forgo aircon, the newly renovated cheapies are great value – and things only get better from there. All rooms come with free wi-fi, TV, hot water and large windows, and are set around a peaceful plant-filled, palm-shaded courtyard (a real highlight) and a North Indian pure veg restaurant. The bend-over-backwards owners speak English and French. They couldn't be more helpful, right down to occasionally rickshaw you off somewhere in their hotel rickshaw. Phone ahead for a free station pick-up; otherwise, it's ₹40 in a cycle-rickshaw from the train station. Damn fine masala chai, too.

Clarks Shiraz Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(Map p358; ☎ 0562-2226121; www.hotelclarksshiraz.com; 54 Taj Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹8430/8990; 🍷 @ 📶 🍷) Agra's original five-star hotel, opened in 1961, has done well to keep up with the hotel Jones's. The standard doubles are nothing special for this price range, but marble-floored deluxe versions are a pleasant step up and all bathrooms are retiled and spotless.

There are three very good restaurants, two bars (three in season), a gym, a shaded garden and pool area (one of Agra's best) and ayurvedic massages. Some rooms have distant Taj views.

Hotel Yamuna View

HOTEL $$$

(Map p358; ☎ 0562-3293777; www.hotelyamunaviewagra.com; 6B The Mall; s/d from ₹6183/6745; 🍷 @ 📶 🍷) A veteran Marriott manager runs a tight ship in this good-value spot in a quiet part of Sadar Bazaar, where spacious rooms with gleaming bathrooms and marble art tables are worth shelling out a few extra rupees for. There's hardly a need to upgrade to deluxe – they're not noticeably better than standard rooms.

There's a great garden pool, a sleek cocktail bar, a plush Chinese restaurant (with a real Chinese chef – good for an Indian food sabbatical) and free wi-fi (lobby only).

Eating

Dalmoth is Agra's famous version of nam-kin (spicy nibbles). Peitha is a square sweet made from pumpkin and glucose that is flavoured with rosewater, coconut or saffron. You can buy it in shops all over Agra. From October to March look out for gajak, a slightly spicy sesame-seed biscuit strip.

✂ Taj Ganj Area

This lively area directly south of the Taj has plenty of budget rooftop restaurants, where menus appear to be carbon copies of one another. None are licensed but most will find you a beer if you are discreet.

Shankar Ji Restaurant

DHABA $

(Map p360; mains ₹35-100; ☺ 7am-10pm) Shankar Ji is a dhaba (snack bar) perfect for when you're bored of the multicuisine foreigner-friendly tourist restaurants, and want something more down to earth and authentic. As basic as any dhaba, but it's all smiles (the cook is a real character), has an English menu and dishes out the dhaba experience without taking a toll on your gut.

It's near the autorickshaw stand.

Shankara Vegis

INDIAN $

(Map p360; Chowk Kaghzi; meals ₹60-120; ☺ 8am-10.30pm; ☺) Most restaurants in Taj Ganj ooze a distinctly average air of mediocrity. Shankara Vegis is different. This cosy old-timer, with its red tablecloths and straw-lined walls, stands out not only for its decor, but for great vegetarian thalis (₹110 to ₹150) and, most pleasantly, the genuinely friendly, nonpushy ethos of its hands-on owners.

Joney's Place

MULTICUISINE $

(Map p360; Kutta Park, Taj Ganj; mains ₹30-110; ☺ 5am-10.30pm) This pocket-sized institution whipped up its first creamy lassi in 1978 and continues to please despite cooking its meals in what must be Agra's smallest kitchen. The cheese and tomato 'jayfelles' (toasted sandwich), the banana lassi and the malai kofta all come recommended, but it's more about crack-of-dawn sustenance than culinary dazzle.

Yash Cafe

MULTICUISINE $

(Map p360; 3/137 Chowk Kagziyan; mains ₹60-300; ☺ 7am-11pm; ☺) This chilled-out 1st-floor cafe has wicker chairs, sports channels on TV, DVDs shown in the evening and a good range of meals, from good-value set breakfasts to thali (₹90), pizza (₹90 to ₹300) and Indian-style French toast (with coconut; we think they made that up). It also offers a shower and storage space (₹50 for both) to day visitors.

Saniya Palace Hotel

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Map p360; mains ₹50-200; ☺ 6am-11pm; ☺) With cute tablecloths, dozens of potted plants and a bamboo pergola for shade, this is the most pleasant rooftop restaurant in Taj Ganj. It also has the best rooftop view of the Taj bar none. The kitchen isn't the cleanest in town, but its usual mix of Western dishes and foreigner-friendly Indian dishes usually go down without complaints.

★ Esphahan

NORTH INDIAN $$$

(☎ 2231515; Oberoi Amarvilas Hotel; Taj East Gate Rd; mains ₹1125-2250; ☺ dinner 6.30pm & 9pm) There are only two sittings each evening at Agra's finest restaurant (☺ 6.30pm and 9.30pm) so booking a table is essential. The exquisite menu is chock-full of unique delicacies and rarely seen regional heritage dishes. Anything that comes out of the succulent North Indian tandoor is a showstopper (especially the bharwan aloo, a potato kebab stuffed with nuts, spices, mint and coriander). Melt-in-your-mouth dishes such as aloobukhara maaz (a Mughlai lamb kebab stuffed with prunes) and safri gosht (braised lamb with pickled onions, dried tomatoes and spiced pickle) redefine lamb as most know it. It's all set to a romantic background soundtrack of a live santoor player.

✂ Fatehabad Road

Dasaprakash

INDIAN $$$

(Map p358; www.dasaprakashgroup.com; 18/163A /6 Shamshabad Rd; thali ₹190-270, mains ₹170-350; ☺ 7am-11pm) The Vibhav Nagar branch of this perennial South Indian upper-scale staple ups the ante with a North Indian tandoor. You get the pure veg love of other Dasaprakash branches plus North Indian options such as veg tandoori kebabs, available from noon (that tandoor needs a few hours to heat up). It's inside the hotel of the same name.

Vedic

NORTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p358; www.vedicrestaurant.com; 1 Gwalior Rd; meals ₹150-275; ☺ 10am-11pm) Modern decor meets traditional ambience at this North Indian veg hot-spot, with paneer (unfermented cheese) dishes featuring highly. The paneer tikka masala and Navaratan korma are particularly good. There's also a range of delicious vegetarian kebabs.

★ Pinch of Spice

NORTH INDIAN $$$

(Map p358; www.pinchofspice.in; Opp ITC Mughal Hotel, Fatehabad Rd; mains ₹280-410; ☺ noon-11.30pm) This modern North Indian superstar at the beginning of Fatehabad Rd is the best spot outside five-star hotels to indulge yourself in rich curries and succulent tandoori kebabs. The murg boti masala (chicken tikka swimming in a rich and spicy country gravy) and the paneer lababdar (fresh cheese cubes in a spicy red gravy with sauteed onions) are outstanding.

Sadar Bazaar Area

This area offers better-quality restaurants and makes a nice change from the please-all, multicuisine offerings in Taj Ganj.

★Time2Eat – Mama Chicken DHABA $
(Map p358; ☎8899199999; Stall No 2, Sadar Bazaar; items ₹30-200; ☎2-10pm) This superstar dhaba is a must: duelling veg and nonveg glorified street stalls employing 24 cooks during the rush, each of whom is manning outdoor tandoors or other traditional cookware. They whip up outrageously good kati rolls (flatbread wrap; try chicken tikka or paneer tikka), whole chickens numerous ways, curries and chow meins for a standing-room-only crowd hell bent on sustenance. Bright lights, obnoxious signage and funky Indian tunes round out the festive atmosphere – a sure-fire Agra must.

Lakshmi Vilas SOUTH INDIAN $
(Map p358; 50A Taj Rd; meals ₹50-110; ☎8.30am-10.30pm) This no-nonsense, plainly decorated, nonsmoking restaurant is the place in Agra to come for affordable South Indian fare. The thali (₹135), served noon to 3.30pm and 7pm to 10.30pm, is good though it comes across as relatively expensive.

Brijwasi SWEETS $
(Map p358; www.brijwasisweethouse.com; Sadar Bazaar; sweets from ₹320 per kg, meals ₹80-150; ☎7am-11pm) Sugar-coma-inducing selection of traditional Indian sweets, nuts and biscuits on the ground floor, with a decent-value Indian restaurant upstairs. It's most famous for its peda milk sweets.

★Dasaprakash SOUTH INDIAN $$
(Map p358; www.dasaprakashgroup.com; Meher Theater Complex, Gwailor Rd; meals ₹100-300; ☎noon-10.45pm) Fabulously tasty and religiously clean, Dasaprakash whips up consistently great South Indian vegetarian food, including spectacular thalis (₹190 to ₹270), dosas (large savoury crepes) and a few token Continental dishes. The ice-cream deserts (₹80 to ₹210) are another speciality.

Comfortable booth seating and wood-lattice screens make for intimate dining.

Drinking & Nightlife

A night out in Agra tends to revolve around sitting at a rooftop restaurant with a couple of bottles of beer. None of the restaurants in Taj Ganj are licensed, but they can find alcohol for you if you ask nicely, and don't mind if you bring your own drinks, as long as you're discreet. You can catch live Indian classical music and ghazals (Urdu love songs) at restaurants in several of Agra's top-end hotels, most of which also have bars, albeit of the rather soulless variety.

Café Coffee Day CAFE
(Map p360; www.cafecoffeeday.com; 21/101 Taj East Gate; coffee ₹65-140; ☎6.30am-8pm) This AC-cooled branch of the popular cafe chain is the closest place to the Taj selling proper coffee. There's another branch at Sadar Bazaar (Map p358; coffee ₹65-140; ☎9am-11pm).

Costa Coffee CAFE
(Map p358; www.costacoffee.com; 8 Handicraft Nagar, Fatehabad Rd; coffee ₹90-240; ☎8am-11pm; ☎) Agra's only outlet of this UK coffee chain offers a cool and clean caffeine fix off Fatehabad Rd – and wi-fi.

Amarvilas Bar BAR
(Oberoi Amar Vilas Hotel; Taj East Gate Rd; ☎noon-midnight) For a beer (₹375) or cocktail (₹575) in sheer opulence, look no further than the bar at Agra's best hotel. A terrace opens out to views of the Taj. Nonguests can wander onto the terrace, but staff can be funny about it.

Shopping

Agra is well known for its marble items inlaid with coloured stones, similar to the pietra dura work on the Taj. Sadar Bazaar, the old town and the area around the Taj are full of emporiums. Taj Mahal models are all made of alabaster rather than marble. Very cheap ones are made of soapstone, which scratches easily.

Other popular buys include rugs, leather and gemstones, though the latter are imported from Rajasthan and are cheaper in Jaipur.

Be sure to wander the narrow streets behind the Jama Masjid where the crazy maze of overcrowded lanes bursting with colourful

i STAYING AHEAD OF THE SCAMS

As well as the usual commission rackets and ever-present gem-import scam, some specific methods to relieve Agra tourists of their hard-earned cash include the following.

Rickshaws

When taking an auto- or cycle-rickshaw to the Taj, make sure you are clear which gate you want to go to when negotiating the price. Otherwise, almost without fail, riders will take you to the roundabout at the south end of Shahjahan Gardens Rd – where expensive tongas (horse-drawn carriages) or camels wait to take tour groups to the west gate – and claim that's where they thought you meant. Only nonpolluting autos can go within a 500m radius of the Taj because of pollution rules, but they can get a lot closer than this.

Fake Marble

Lots of 'marble' souvenirs are actually alabaster, or even just soapstone. So you may be paying marble prices for lower quality stones. The mini Taj Mahals are always alabaster because they are too intricate to carve quickly in marble.

markets is known collectively as Kinari Bazaar (Map p358; ☉11am-9pm, closed Tue).

Subhash Emporium

HANDICRAFTS

(Map p358; www.subhashemporium.com; 18/1 Gwalior Rd; ☉9am-7pm) This expensive but honest marble-carving shop has been knocking up quality pieces for more than 35 years. Its prices are fairer than others in town, considering their experience.

Subhash Bazaar

MARKET

(Map p358; ☉8am-8pm summer, 9am-8pm winter) Skirts the northern edge of Agra's Jama Masjid and is particularly good for silks and saris.

Khadi Gramodyog

CLOTHING

(Map p358; MG Rd; ☉11am-7pm, closed Tue) Stocks simple, good-quality men's Indian clothing made from the homespun khadi fabric famously recommended by Mahatma Gandhi. No English sign: on Mahatma Gandhi (MG) Rd, look for the khadi logo of hands clasped around a mud hut.

Modern Book Depot

BOOKS

(Map p358; Sadar Bazaar; ☉10.30am-9.30pm, closed Tue) Great selection of novels, plus Lonely Planet guides, at this friendly 60-year-old establishment.

i Information

Agra is more wired than most places, even in restaurants. Taj Ganj is riddled with internet cafes, most charging from ₹40 per hour.

EMERGENCY

Tourist Police (☎0562-2421204; Agra Cantonment Train Station; ☉6.30am-9.30pm) The guys in sky-blue uniforms are based on Fate-habad Rd, but have an office here in the Tourist Facilitation Centre. Officers also hang around the East Gate ticket office and the UP Tourism office on Taj Rd, as well as at major sites.

MEDICAL SERVICES

Amit Jaggi Memorial Hospital (Map p358; ☎9690107860; www.ajmh.in; Vibhav Nagar, off Minto Rd) If you're sick, Dr Jaggi, who runs this private clinic, is the man to see. He accepts most health-insurance plans from abroad; otherwise a visit runs ₹1000 (day) or ₹2000 (night). He'll even do house calls.

SR Hospital (Map p358; ☎0562-4025200; Laurie's Complex, Namner Rd) Agra's best private hospital.

MONEY

ATMs are everywhere. There are four close to the Taj, one near each gate (though the East Gate Axis Bank ATM is often on the fritz) and another next to the East Gate ticket office complex. If you need to change money and are worried about being swindled in Taj Ganj, there is a government-sanctioned money-changer at the East Gate ticket office complex as well.

POST

India Post (Map p358; www.indiapost.gov.in; The Mall; ☉10am-5pm Mon-Fri, to 4pm Sat) Agra's historic GPO (General Post Office) dates to 1913 and includes a handy 'facilitation office' for foreigners.

TOURIST INFORMATION

India Tourism (Map p358; ☎0562-2226378; www.incredibleindia.org; 191 The Mall; ☉9am-5.30pm Mon-Fri, to 2pm Sat) Very helpful branch; has brochures on local and India-wide attractions and can arrange guides (half-/full day ₹1035/1311).

Tourist Facilitation Centre (Taj East Gate; ☎ 9.30am-5pm, closed Fri) This helpful tourist office is part of the East Gate ticket office complex at Shilpgram.

UP Tourism (www.up-tourism.com; ☎ 6.30am-9.30pm) The friendly train-station branch inside the Tourist Facilitation Centre offers helpful advice most hours of important train arrivals. This branch, which doubles as the Tourism Police, and the one on Taj Rd (Map p358; ☎ 0562-2226431; 64 Taj Rd; ☎ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) can arrange guides (half-/full day ₹1035/1310).

TRAVEL AGENCIES

Bag Packer Travel (Map p358; ☎ 9997113228; www.bagpackertravels.com; 4/62 Kutcheri Rd; ☎ 9am-9pm) An honest agency for all your travel and transport needs, run by the friendly Anil at Tourists Rest House (p363). English and French spoken.

Getting There & Away

AIR

Commercial flights to Agra's Kheria Airport began again in late 2012 after a long absence.

Air India (www.airindia.com) now flies to Varanasi (2.05pm, from ₹4000) via Khajuraho (from ₹3000) Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, and to Mumbai (12.30pm, from ₹1500) via Gwalior (from ₹3200) on Monday and Wednesday. At time of research there was no return flight via Khajuraho.

To access the airport, part of Indian Air Force territory, your name must be on the list of those with booked flights that day. Tickets must be purchased online or by phone.

BUS

The opening of the tolled 165km Yamuna Expressway in 2012 cut drive time from Agra to Noida, a southeastern suburb of Delhi, by 30%. Some luxury coaches now use this route and reach central Delhi faster.

Some services from Idgah Bus Stand (☎ 0562-2420324; off National Hwy 2, near Sikandra):

Bharatpur ₹62, 1½ hours, every 30 minutes, 6am to 6.30pm

Delhi non-AC (₹171, 4½ hours, every 30 minutes, 5am to 11.30pm)

Fatehpur Sikri ₹40, one hour, every 30 minutes, 6am to 6.30pm

Gwalior ₹115, three hours, hourly, 5.30am to 6.30pm

Jaipur ₹228, six hours, hourly, 6am to 6.30pm

Jhansi ₹200, six hours, noon, 2.15pm, 8.30pm

A block east of Idgah near Hotel Sakura, the Rajasthan State Road Transport Corp (RTDC; ☎ 0562-2420228; www.rsrc.rajasthan.gov.in) runs more comfortable coaches to Jaipur throughout the day. Services include non-AC (₹256, 5½ hours, 7.30am, 10am, 1pm and 11.59pm), AC (₹440, five hours, 6.30am and 8.30am) and luxury Volvo (₹530, 4½ hours, 11.30am and 2.30pm).

From ISBT Bus Stand (☎ 0562-2603536), luxury Volvo coaches leave for Delhi (₹557, four hours, 7am, 9.30am, 1pm, 2.30pm, 6.30pm and 7.30pm) and Lucknow (₹906, 7½ hours, 10am and 10pm); as well as standard non-AC services to Allahabad (₹450, nine hours, 4pm) which continue on to Varanasi (₹550, 13 hours, 4pm) and Gorakhpur (₹625, 16 hours, 11.30am, 1.30pm, 2.30pm, 5pm and 10pm). Dehra Dun buses also depart from here (Volvo/AC/non-AC ₹1130/750/375, 2.30pm, 3.30pm, 4.30pm, 5.30pm, 6pm, 8pm, 8.30pm and 9.30pm). If you're shut out of the train to Rishikesh, you'll need to catch the bus to Haridwar (AC/non-AC ₹950/350, 10 hours, 6.30pm, 7.30pm, 8.30pm and 10pm) and switch there.

Bijli Ghar Bus Stand (Map p358; ☎ 0562-2464557) serves Mathura (₹64, 90 minutes, every 30 minutes, 5am to 11.30pm), Tundla (₹35, one hour, every 30 minutes, 7am to 8pm), from where you can catch the 12382 Poorva Express at 8.15pm to Varanasi if the trains from Agra are sold out.

Shared autos (₹10) run between Idgah and Bijli Ghar bus stands. To get to the ISBT, take the aircon public bus from Agra Cantt train station to Dayalbagh (₹22) but get off at Baghwan Talkies (₹16), from where shared autos (₹8) can take you to the ISBT; or catch an autorickshaw from Taj Ganz (₹150).

TRAIN

Most trains leave from Agra Cantonment (Cantt) train station, although some go from Agra Fort station. A few trains, such as Kota PNBE Express, run as slightly different numbers on different days than those listed, but timings remain the same. If you are heading to Jaipur on Thursday, the best option is the 12403/12404 ALD JP Express, departing Agra at 7.15am.

Express trains are well set up for day trippers to/from Delhi but trains run to Delhi all day. If you can't reserve a seat, just buy a 'general ticket' for the next train (about ₹90), find a seat in sleeper class then upgrade when the ticket collector comes along. Most of the time, he won't even make you pay any more. A new semi-express train between Delhi and Agra, the Gatimaan Express, should be up and running by the time you read this. It travels 160km per hour (India's fastest) and a full 30km per hour faster than the Shatabdi Express.

For Orchha, catch one of the many daily trains to Jhansi (sleeper from ₹110, three hours), then take a shared auto to the bus stand (₹10) from where shared autos run all day to Orchha (₹20). An autorickshaw costs ₹200 for same route.

i Getting Around

AUTORICKSHAW

Agra's green-and-yellow autorickshaws run on CNG (compressed natural gas) and are less environmentally destructive. Just outside Agra Cantt station is the prepaid autorickshaw booth, which gives you a good guide for haggling elsewhere. Usually, trips under three kilometres should not cost more than ₹50. Note, autos aren't allowed to go to Fatehpur Sikri.

Sample prices from Agra Cantt station: Fatehabad Rd ₹150; ISBT bus stand ₹200; Sadar Bazaar ₹70; Sikandra ₹200; Taj Mahal ₹100 (Taj West Gate) and ₹130 (Taj South Gate), Shilpgram (Taj East Gate) ₹150; half-day (four-hour) tour ₹400; full-day (eight-hour) tour ₹600. If you just want to shoot to the Taj and back with waiting time, they will charge ₹250. Prices listed here do not include the ₹5 booking fee, which is extra.

CYCLE-RICKSHAW

Prices from the Taj Mahal's South Gate include: Agra Cantt train station ₹80; Agra Fort ₹40; Bijli Ghar bus stand ₹50; Fatehabad Rd ₹30; Kinari Bazaar ₹100; Sadar Bazaar ₹50; half-day tour ₹400. Tack on another ₹10 to ₹20 if two people are riding.

TAXI

Outside Agra Cantt the prepaid taxi booth gives a good idea of what taxis should cost. Non-AC prices include: Delhi ₹3500; Fatehabad Rd ₹200; Sadar Bazaar ₹100; Taj Mahal ₹200; half-day (four-hour) tour ₹750; full-day (eight-hour) tour ₹1000. Prices do not include the ₹10 booking fee and tolls or parking charges (if applicable).

Around Agra

Fatehpur Sikri

This magnificent fortified ancient city, 40km west of Agra, was the short-lived capital of the Mughal empire between 1571 and 1585, during the reign of Emperor Akbar. Akbar visited the village of Sikri to consult the Sufi saint Shaikh Salim Chishti, who predicted the birth of an heir to the Mughal throne. When the prophecy came true, Akbar built his new capital here, including a stunning mosque – still in use today – and three palaces for each of his favourite wives, one a Hindu, one a Muslim and one a Christian (though Hindu villagers in Sikri dispute these claims). The city was an Indo-Islamic masterpiece, but erected in an area that supposedly suffered from water shortages and so was abandoned shortly after Akbar's death.

It's easy to visit this World Heritage Site as a day trip from Agra, but there are some decent places to stay, and the colourful bazaar in the village of Fatehpur, just below the ruins, as well as the small village of Sikri, a few kilometres north, are worth exploring. The red-sandstone palace walls are at their most atmospheric and photogenic at sunset.

The bus stand is at the eastern end of the bazaar. Walking another 1km northeast will bring you to Agra Gate and the junction with the main Agra–Jaipur road, from where you can catch buses.

👁️ Sights

The palace buildings lie beside the Jama Masjid. Both sit on top of a ridge that runs between the small villages of Fatehpur and Sikri. For more detail, see the illustrated highlight (p370).

Jama Masjid

MOSQUE

This beautiful, immense mosque was completed in 1571 and contains elements of Persian and Indian design. The main entrance, at the top of a flight of stone steps, is through the spectacular 54m-high Buland Darwaza (Victory Gate), built to commemorate Akbar's military victory in Gujarat.

Inside the courtyard of the mosque is the stunning white-marble tomb of Sufi saint Shaikh Salim Chishti, which was completed in 1581 and is entered through an original door made of ebony. Inside it are brightly coloured flower murals, while the sandalwood canopy is decorated with mother-of-pearl shell. Just as Akbar came to the saint four centuries ago hoping for a son, childless women visit his tomb today and tie a thread to the jali (carved lattice screens), which are among the finest in India. To the right of the tomb lie the gravestones of family members of Shaikh Salim Chishti and nearby is the entrance to an underground tunnel (barred by a locked gate) that reputedly goes all the way to Agra Fort. Behind the entrance to the tunnel, on the far wall, are three holes, part of the ancient ventilation system. You can still feel the rush of cool air forcing its way through them. Just east of Shaikh Salim Chishti's tomb is the red-sandstone tomb of Islam Khan, the final resting place of Shaikh Salim Chishti's grandson and one-time governor of Bengal.

On the east wall of the courtyard is a smaller entrance to the mosque – the Shahi Darwaza (King's Gate), which leads to the palace complex.

Palaces & Pavilions

PALACES

(Indian/foreigner ₹20/260, video ₹25; 🌅 dawn-dusk) The main sight at Fatehpur Sikri is the stunning imperial complex of pavilions and palaces spread among a large abandoned 'city' peppered with Mughal masterpieces: courtyards, intricate carvings, servants quarters, vast gateways and ornamental pools.

A large courtyard dominates the northeast entrance at Diwan-i-Am (Hall of Public Audiences). Now a pristinely manicured garden, this is where Akbar presided over the courts from the middle seat of the five equal seatings along the western wall, flanked by his advisors. It was built to utilise an echo sound system, so Akbar could hear anything at any time from anywhere in the open space. Justice was dealt with swiftly if legends are to be believed, with public executions said to have been carried out here by elephants trampling to death convicted criminals.

The Diwan-i-Khas (Hall of Private Audiences), found at the northern end of the Pachisi Courtyard, looks nothing special from the outside, but the interior is dominated by a magnificently carved stone central column. This pillar flares to create a flat-topped plinth linked to the four corners of the room by narrow stone bridges. From this plinth Akbar is believed to have debated with scholars and ministers who stood at the ends of the four bridges.

Fatehpur Sikri

A WALKING TOUR OF FATEHPUR SIKRI

You can enter this fortified ancient city from two entrances, but the northeast entrance at Diwan-i-Am (Hall of Public Audiences) offers the most logical approach to this remarkable Unesco World Heritage site. This large courtyard (now a garden) is where Emperor Akbar presided over the trials of accused criminals. Once through the ticket gate, you are in the northern end of the Pachisi Courtyard 1. The first building you see is Diwan-i-Khas 2 (Hall of Private Audiences), the interior of which is dominated by a magnificently carved central stone column. Pitch south and enter Rumi Sultana 3, a small but elegant palace built for Akbar's Turkish Muslim wife. It's hard to miss the Ornamental Pool 4 nearby – its southwest corner provides Fatehpur Sikri's most photogenic angle, perfectly framing its most striking building, the five-storey Panch Mahal, one of the gateways to the Imperial Harem Complex, where the Lower Haramsara 5 once housed more than 200 female servants. Wander around the Palace of Jodh Bai and take notice of the towering ode to an elephant, the 21m-high Hiran Minar 6, in the distance to the northwest. Leave the palaces and pavilions area via Shahi Darwaza (King's Gate), which spills into India's second-largest mosque courtyard at Jama Masjid 7. Inside this immense and gorgeous mosque is the sacred Tomb of Shaikh Salim Chishti 8. Exit through the spectacular Buland Darwaza 9 (Victory Gate), one of the world's most magnificent gateways.

Buland Darwaza

Most tours end with an exit through Jama Masjid's Victory Gate. Walk out and take a look behind you: Behold! The magnificent 15-storey sandstone gate, 54m high, is a menacing monolith to Akbar's reign.

Tomb of Shaikh Salim Chishti

Each knot in the strings tied to the 56 carved white marble designs of the interior walls of Shaikh Salim Chishti's tomb represents one wish of a maximum three.

KEVIN RAUB ©

Jama Masjid

The elaborate marble inlay work at the Badshahi Gate and throughout the Jama Masjid complex is said to have inspired similar work 82 years later at the Taj Mahal in Agra.

Hiran Minar

This bizarre, seldom-visited tower off the north-west corner of Fatehpur Sikri is decorated with hundreds of stone representations of elephant tusks. It is said to be the place where Minar, Akbar's favourite execution elephant, died.

Pachisi Courtyard

Under your feet just past Rumi Sultana is the Pachisi Courtyard where Akbar is said to have played the game pachisi (an ancient version of ludo) using slave girls in colourful dress as pieces.

Diwan-i-Khas

Emperor Akbar modified the central stone column inside Diwan-i-Khas to call attention to a new religion he called Din-i-Ilahi (God is One). The intricately carved column features a fusion of Hindu, Muslim, Christian and Buddhist imagery.

Lower Haramsara

Akbar reportedly kept more than 5000 concubines, but the 200 or so female servants housed in the Lower Haramsara were strictly business. Knots were tied to these sandstone rings to support partitions between their individual quarters.

Ornamental Pool

Tansen, said to be the most gifted Indian vocalist of all time and one of Akbar's treasured nine Navaratnas (Gems), would be showered with coins during performances from the central platform of the Ornamental Pool.

Rumi Sultana

Don't miss the headless creatures carved into Rumi Sultana's palace interiors: a lion, deer, an eagle and a few peacocks were beheaded by jewel thieves who swiped the precious jewels that originally formed their heads.

Next to Diwan-i-Khas is the Treasury, which houses secret stone safes in some corners (one has been left with its stone lid open for visitors to see). Sea monsters carved on the ceiling struts were there to protect the fabulous wealth once stored here. The so-called Astrologer's Kiosk in front has roof supports carved in a serpentine Jain style.

Just south of the Astrologer's Kiosk is Pachisi Courtyard, named after the ancient game known in India today as ludo. The large, plus-shaped game board is visible surrounding the block in the middle of the courtyard. In the southeast corner is the most intricately carved structure in the whole complex, the tiny but elegant Rumi Sultana, which was said to be the palace built for Akbar's Turkish Muslim wife. Other theories say it was used by Akbar himself as a palace powder room or R&R room during court sessions. On one corner of the Ladies Garden just west of Pachisi is the impressive Panch Mahal, a pavilion whose five storeys decrease in size until the top consists of only a tiny kiosk. The lower floor has 84 different columns; in total there are 176 columns.

Continuing anticlockwise will bring you to the Ornamental Pool. Here, singers and musicians would perform on the platform above the water while Akbar watched from the pavilion in his private quarters, known as Daulat Khana (Abode of Fortune). Behind the pavilion is the Khwabgah (Dream House), a sleeping area with a huge stone bunk bed. Nowadays the only ones sleeping here are bats, hanging from the ceiling. The small room in the far corner is full of them.

Heading west from the Ornamental Pool beholds the Palace of Jodh Bai, and the one-time home of Akbar's Hindu wife, said to be his favourite. Set around an enormous courtyard, it blends traditional Indian columns, Islamic cupolas and turquoise-blue Persian roof tiles. Just outside, to the left of Jodh Bai's former kitchen, is the Palace of the Christian Wife. This was used by Akbar's Goan wife Mariam, who gave birth to Jehangir here in 1569. Some believe Akbar never had a Christian wife and that Mariam was short for Mariam-Ut-Zamani, a title he gave to Jodh Bai meaning 'Beautiful like a Rose', or 'Most Beautiful Woman on Earth'. Like many of the buildings in the palace complex, it contains elements of different religions, as befitted Akbar's tolerant religious beliefs. The domed ceiling is Islamic in style, while remnants of a wall painting of the Hindu god Shiva can also be found.

Walking past the Palace of the Christian Wife once more will take you west to Birbal Bhavan, ornately carved inside and out, and thought to have been the living quarters of one of Akbar's most senior ministers. The Lower Haramsara, just to the south, housed Akbar's large inventory of live-in female servants.

Plenty of ruins are scattered behind the whole complex, including the Caravanserai, a vast courtyard surrounded by rooms where visiting merchants stayed. Badly defaced carvings of elephants still guard Hathi Pol (Elephant Gate), while the remains of the small Stonecutters' Mosque and a hammam (bath) are also a short stroll away. Other unnamed ruins can be explored north of what is known as the Mint but is thought to have in fact been stables, including some in the interesting village of Sikri to the north.

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(☉9am-5pm, closed Fri) FREE Inaugurated in 2014 inside Akbar's former Treasury house, this museum about 100m from Diwan-i-Am showcases pre-Mughal artefacts excavated over many years at Fatehpur Sikri. Well-presented highlights include a few remarkably preserved sandstone Jain tirthankars (the 24 holy Jain supreme beings) dating between 982 and 1034.

Tours

Official Archaeological Society of India guides can be hired from the ticket office for ₹250 (English), but they aren't always the most knowledgeable (some are guides thanks to birthright rather than qualifications). Official UP Tourism guides have gone through more rigorous training and can be hired for ₹750. Our favourite is Pankaj Bhatnagar (☎8126995552; www.tajinvitation.com).

Sleeping & Eating

Fatehpur Sikri's culinary speciality is khataie, the biscuits you can see piled high in the bazaar.

Hotel Goverdhan

HOTEL $

(☎05613-282643; www.hotelfatehpursikriviews.com; Agra Rd; s/d/tr ₹500/800/900, with AC ₹1000/1250/1400; *@☎) There are a variety of rooms at this old-time favourite (check them out before you book), all of which surround a very well-kept garden. There's a communal balcony and terrace seating, free wi-fi, new beds in every room, air-coolers in the non-AC rooms and CCTV. The restaurant does decent work as well (meals ₹50 to ₹180).

Hotel Ajay Palace

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎9548801213; Agra Rd; s/d ₹200/300, d with air-cooler ₹400) This friendly family guesthouse isn't pretty but offers a few very simple and cheap double rooms with marble floors and sit-down flush toilets. It's also a very popular lunch stop (mains ₹50 to ₹140). Sit on the rooftop at the large, elongated marble table and enjoy a view of the village streets with the Jama Masjid towering above.

Note it is not 'Ajay Restaurant By Near Palace' at the bus stand – it's 50m further along the road.

i Information

DANGERS & ANNOYANCES

Take no notice of anyone who gets on the Fatehpur Sikri–Agra bus before the final stop at Idgah Bus Stand, telling you that you have arrived at the city centre or the Taj Mahal. You haven't. You're still a long autorickshaw ride away, and the man trying to tease you off the bus is, surprise surprise, an autorickshaw driver.

i Getting There & Around

Tours and taxis all arrive at the Gulistan Tourist Complex parking lot, from which shuttle buses (₹10) depart for Fatehpur Sikri's Diwan-i-Am entrance (right side of the street) and Jodh Bai entrance (left side of the street). Note that if you have hired an unauthorised guide, you will not be allowed to enter at Diwan-i-Am.

Buses run to Agra's Idgah Bus Stand every half-hour (₹40) from 5.30am to 6.30pm. If you miss those, walk out through Agra Gate and another 350m to Bypass Crossing Stop on the main road and wave down a Jaipur–Agra bus. They run every 30 minutes or so, day and night.

For Bharatpur (₹25, 40 minutes) or Jaipur (₹190, 4½ hours), wave down a westbound bus from Bypass Crossing Stop.

Regular trains for Agra Fort Station leave Fatehpur Sikri at 4.49am (59811 Haldighati Pass) and 8.16pm (19037 Avadh Express), but there are simpler passenger trains at 10.17am and 3.55pm as well as four other trains that fly through at various times. Just buy a 'general' ticket at the station and pile in (₹20, one to two hours).

Why Go?

The enormous state of Uttar Pradesh is one of India's mystical cradles and, as a result, is justifiably one of India's roads most taken. Its unmistakable spirituality and religious fervour leaves long-lasting impressions: being wow-ed along atmospheric riverside ghats such as Manikarnika and Dashashwamedh in India's holiest city, Varanasi; the contemplative aura that emanates from ancient Buddhist stupas in Kushinagar and Sarnath; the serenity of waking up before dawn to watch locals perform puja (offerings or prayers) in sacred Chitrakut; or the intense power of piety in Allahabad, where throngs of feverish devotees bow to the chaotic confluence of two of India's holiest rivers, the Ganges and Yamuna.

Along the way, a groundswell of Mughal and Nawab architectural and gastronomic highpoints – notably in Lucknow, Allahabad and of course Agra – ensure all-sensory satisfaction in India's imperial heartland.

When to Go

Varanasi

Sep & Oct Monsoon rains are mostly over and temperatures have cooled...just enough.

Nov–Feb Comfortable winter days and nippy nights means it's cool but over-crowded.

Mar & Apr With evening chills subsided and raging midsummer heat still at bay, some say it's perfect.

History

Over 2000 years ago this region was part of Ashoka's great Buddhist empire, remnants of which can be found in the ruins at the pilgrimage centre of Sarnath near Varanasi. Muslim raids from the northwest began in the 11th century, and by the 16th century the region was part of the Mughal empire, with its capital in Agra, then Delhi and, for a brief time, Fatehpur Sikri.

Following the decline of the Mughal empire, Persians stepped in briefly before the Nawabs of Avadh rose to prominence in the central part of the region, notably around the current capital of Lucknow. The Nawabs were responsible for turning Lucknow into a flourishing centre for the arts, culture and culinary delights, which continues to this day. But their empire came to a dramatic end when the British East India Company deposed the last nawab, triggering the First War of Independence (Indian Uprising) of 1857. During the 147-day Siege of Lucknow, British Chief Commissioner Sir Henry Lawrence was killed defending the British Residency, which remains in remarkable preservation in Lucknow.

Agra was later merged with Avadh and the state became known as United Province. It was renamed Uttar Pradesh after Independence and has since been the most dominant state in Indian politics, producing half of the country's prime ministers, most of them from Allahabad. The local population doesn't seem to have benefited much from this, though, as poor governance, a high birth rate, a low literacy rate and an erratic electricity supply have held back economic progress in UP in the past 60 years.

In 2000, the mountainous northwestern part of the state was carved off to create the new state of Uttaranchal.

LUCKNOW

📞 0522 / POP 2.9 MILLION

Liberally sprinkled with British Raj-era buildings – including the famous Residency – and boasting two superb mausoleums, the capital of Uttar Pradesh plays a somewhat unwarranted third fiddle to Agra and Varanasi, but caters well to history buffs, without attracting the hordes of tourists that sometimes make sightseeing tiresome. By contrast, Lucknow's modern side boasts a unique Iron Curtain-esque feel, with grandiose monuments and overstated parks and gardens, many boasting marble sidewalks and pink sandstone a plenty (we imagine they were going for a Washington, DC aesthetic but ended up more Pyongyang). It's nothing if not interesting.

The city rose to prominence as the home of the Nawabs of Avadh (Oudh) who were great patrons of the culinary and other arts, particularly dance and music. Lucknow's reputation as a city of culture, gracious living and rich cuisine has continued to this day (it conveniently rhymes in Hindi: 'Nawab, Aadaab [Respect], Kebab and Shabab [Beauty]').

★ Residency

HISTORIC SITE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; 🌅 dawn-dusk) The large collection of gardens and ruins that makes up the Residency offers a fascinating historical glimpse of the beginning of the end for the British Raj. Built in 1800, the Residency became the stage for the most dramatic events of the 1857 First War of Independence (Indian Uprising), the Siege of Lucknow, a 147-day siege that claimed the lives of thousands.

The compound has been left as it was at the time of the final relief and the walls are pockmarked from bullets and cannon balls.

The focus is the well-designed museum (open 8am to 4.30pm) in the main Residency building, which includes a scale model of the original buildings. Downstairs are the huge basement rooms where many of the British women and children lived throughout the siege.

The cemetery around the ruined St Mary's church is where 2000 of the defenders were buried, including their leader, Sir Henry Lawrence, 'who tried to do his duty' according to the famous inscription on his weathered gravestone.

Lucknow

(tomb dedicated to a Shiite holy man) is worth seeing in its own right, but the highly unusual labyrinth of corridors inside its upper floors make a visit here particularly special. The ticket price includes entrance to Chota Imambara (p379), the clock tower (p379) and the baradari (p379) (summer palace), all walking distance from here.

The complex is accessed through two enormous gateways which lead into a huge courtyard. On one side is an attractive mosque, on the other a large baori (step-well) which can be explored. Bring a torch (flashlight). At the far end of the courtyard is the huge central hall, one of the world's largest vaulted galleries. Tazias (small replicas of Imam Hussain's tomb in Karbala, Iraq) are stored inside and are paraded around during the Shiite mourning ceremony of Muharram.

But it's what is beyond the small entrance – intriguingly marked 'labyrinth' – to the left of the central hall, that steals the show. It leads to the Bhulbhulaiya, an enticing network of narrow passageways that winds its way inside the upper floors of the tomb's structure, eventually leading out to rooftop balconies. As with the step-well, it's handy to have a torch.

Just beyond the Bara Imambara is the unusual but imposing gateway Rumi Darwaza (Hussainabad Trust Rd), said to be a copy of an entrance gate in Istanbul. 'Rumi' (relating to Rome) is the term Muslims applied to Istanbul when it was still Byzantium, the capital of the Eastern Roman empire. Over the road is the beautiful white mosque Tila Wali Masjid, a deceptively shallow building built in 1680. The interior is repainted periodicaly over the original designs.

If you are a heterosexual couple, you will be required to pay for a guide (₹100) to prevent any hanky panky in the labyrinth (yes, we're serious).

Chota Imambara

ISLAMIC TOMB

(Hussainabad Imambara; Hussainabad Trust Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹20/200, admission free with Bara Imambara ticket; ☀6.30am-8pm) This elaborate tomb was constructed by Mohammed Ali Shah (who is buried here, alongside his mother) in 1832. Adorned with calligraphy, it has a serene and intimate atmosphere. Mohammed's silver throne and red crown can be seen here, as well as countless chandeliers and some brightly decorated tazias.

In the garden is a water tank and two replicas of the Taj Mahal that are the tombs of Mohammed Ali Shah's daughter and her husband. A traditional hammam is off to one side.

Outside the complex, the decaying watchtower on the other side of the road is known as Satkhanda (Seven Storey Tower; Hussainabad Trust Rd). It has only four storeys because construction was abandoned in 1840 when Mohammed Ali Shah died.

The 67m red-brick clock tower (admission free with Bara Imambara ticket; ☀dawn-dusk), the tallest in India, was built in the 1880s. Nearby is the Hussainabad Picture Gallery (Baradari; summer palace Indian/foreigner ₹20/200, admission free with Bara Imambara ticket; ☀7am-6.30pm), a striking red-brick baradari (pavilion) built in 1842 that was once a royal summer house. It overlooks an artificial lake and houses portraits of the nawabs.

Walking Tour

WALKING

(☎9415013047; Hotel Gomti, 6 Sapru Marg; 3hr tour ₹150; ☀tours 7am Aug-Sep, 8am Oct-Mar) This fabulous two-hour Heritage Walking Tour run by UP Tourism could well turn out to be the best ₹150 you ever spend. Meet your English-speaking guide outside Tila Wali Masjid then follow them first around the mosque, then the Bara Imambara, before delving in to the architectural delights of the crazy maze of alleyways in the incredibly fascinating Chowk district.

You'll sample interesting nibbles such as refreshing thandai (made from milk, cardamom, almonds, fennel, saffron etc and – in this case – with or without marijuana!) and getting an insider glimpse into various traditions, from indigo block printing to traditional unani medicine or vark making (edible silver foil). This is an eye-popping way to get your bearings among Lucknow's oldest neighbourhoods. Note: tours are best booked directly or most easily via Naheed at Lucknow Homestay.

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Magh Mela (p387; ☺ Jan/Feb, Allahabad) A huge annual religious fair that transforms into the world's largest human gathering, the Purna Kumbh Mela, every 12th year (next in 2025).

Holi (Feb/Mar; Mathura and Vrindavan) This national festival is celebrated with particular fervour around Mathura and Vrindavan, spiritual home of Krishna.

Purnima (Sarnath; ☺ Apr/May) Also known as Vesak, Buddha Jayanti or, informally, Buddha's birthday, Purnima actually celebrates the birth, enlightenment and death of Buddha. Sarnath, just outside Varanasi, takes on a particularly festive air on this day, when Buddhists from many countries take part in a procession and a fair is held.

Janmastami (p410; ☺ Aug/Sep, Mathura) You can barely move here during Krishna's birthday, when temples are swathed in decorations and musical dramas about Krishna are performed.

Ram Lila (p391; ☺ Sep/Oct, Varanasi) Every year since the early 1800s the Ram Lila, a lengthy version of the Ramayana, has been performed beside Ramnagar Fort in Varanasi. The epic saga of Rama's marriage to Sita and his battle against the demon king Ravana is performed mainly by Brahmin youths aided by masks, music, dancing and giant papier-mâché figures.

budget option is in the leafy neighbourhood home of Naheed and her family, who keep their distance but offer six rustic rooms – four with private bathrooms. The house number isn't marked, but a sign reading 'Munni's Dream' is above the front door.

Rickshaw drivers know Mall Ave, which is actually a neighbourhood (not merely an avenue), but you'll need to orient yourself upon arrival if you want to find your way back home, as the address is amid the maze if you enter the neighbourhood from anywhere other than the Mahatma Gandhi (MG) Rd side. Better yet, get to know Naheed's favourite rickshaw driver, the honest, reliable and English-speaking Guatam, and keep him close. Best part? He doesn't touch his horn. Book ahead – it's popular for long-stays (₹10,000 per month all in).

Hotel Mayur HOTEL $
(☎ 0522-4048129; 215/478 Charbagh; s/d ₹700/800, without bathroom ₹400/500, with AC ₹900/980; ☹) Good-value rooms in this well-run establishment with limited English are basic but come with cable TV and some have huge bathrooms. Definitely one of the better cheapies near the train station. It's hard to spot – look up for a small sign on Subhash Marg, just around the corner from Kanpor Rd/Charbagh bus stand.

Hotel Gombi HOTEL $$ (☎ 0522-2611463; hotelgombi@up-tourism.com; 6 Sapru Marg; s/d ₹900/1125, with AC from ₹2480/2590, incl breakfast & bed tea; ☹) A better government-run hotel than most, though bottom of the barrel rooms with air coolers are a bit musty. From there, the two categories of air-con rooms won't knock you out, but all come reasonably well equipped, with TV, desks, tables and chairs.

A restaurant; Tashna Bar (Hotel Gombi 6 Sapru Marg; ☺ noon-11pm), a bar with garden; and a UP Tourism office are all here, too.

Vivanta by Taj HOTEL $$$
(☎ 0522-6771000; www.vivantabytaj.com; Vipan Khand, Gombi Nagar; s/d from ₹13,490/15,177; ☹@☹☹) Lucknow's top hotel resides in an enormous stately building built as a domed homage to Taj's famous Taj Mahal Hotel in Mumbai and instills of sense of head-of-state in those alighting here. Rooms are modest but well-honed at the 110-room property, with newer rooms offering whimsical refinement without stuffiness, with fun cubicle showers and hardwood headboards.

The excellent Nawab restaurant, Oudhyana (p382), is special.

Eating

Lucknow is the undisputed king of UP cuisine. The refined palates of the Nawabs left the city with a reputation for rich, meaty and impossibly tasty Mughlai cuisine, and the city's dinner tables are heavily influenced by the Arab world. Lucknow's excellent Mughlai kitchens are famous for a wide range of mouth-watering kebabs and their biryani dishes as well. It's also known for dum pukht – the 'art' of steam-pressure cooking, in which meat and vegetables are cooked in a sealed clay pot. In winter, look out for namash (a surprisingly light and tasty concoction made from milk, cream and morning dew).

★ Tunday Kababi

NORTH INDIAN $

(Naaz Cinema Rd, just off Aminabad Rd; dishes ₹90-110; ☺ 11am-11.30am) This is the cleaner, more hospitable outlet of Lucknow's renowned, 100-year-old impossible-to-find kebab shop in Chowk (near Akbari Gate, Chowk; kebabs ₹2; ☺ 10am-11pm), where buffalo beef kebabs go for ₹2. Here the prices are higher, but the boys put on a quite a show streetside for to-go orders, while the proper restaurant behind dishes up scrumptious plates of mutton biryani, kebabs and tandoori chicken for throngs of carnivores.

The minced mutton kebab (₹90 for four, eat them with paratha) here is impossibly delicious and a spicy punch in the gut. Rickshaw riders know how to find this place. It's tucked away down a narrow street in the bustling Aminabad district. You'll find other Tunday kebab restaurants around the city, most of which are copies.

Sakhawat

NORTH INDIAN $

(www.sakhawatrestaurant.com; 2 Kaiserbagh Ave, behind Awadh Gymkhana Club; kebabs ₹100-120; ☺ 4.30m-10.30pm, closed Tue) This highly recommended hole-in-the-wall doesn't look like much, but the daily-changing kebabs (galawat et al) at this locals' haunt are the best we had – the smoky, perfectly crispy char makes the difference – and, despite appearances, it has won international accolades and doubles as an Awadh cooking institute. Also serves biryanis and several curries.

The present owner's great-grandfather was a brigadier in the British Army and a Nawab chef.

★ Moti Mahal Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(75 MG Rd; mains ₹115-200; ☺ 11am-11pm) If Mughlai meat country has got you down, seek refuge in this popular veg hideaway on MG Rd. It's perfect for a late breakfast (best poori sabji – deep fried bread rounds served with potato curry – we had in UP) or lunch. Come evening, head upstairs for more-refined dining in the good-quality, low-lit air-con restaurant.

You could do worse here than try the Lucknow dum aloo (potatoes stuffed with nuts and paneer in a tomato-based sauce) and the kadhai paneer (paneer in a gravy made of capsicum, tomato, onion and traditional Indian spices) makes a stunning case for vegetarianism. It's all excellent.

Royal Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$

(51 MG Rd; chaat ₹20-90, mains ₹160-330; ☺ noon-11pm) Even if you don't step inside this excellent restaurant, don't miss its exceedingly popular chaat (spicy snack) stand at the front where mixed chaats are served in an aloo (potato) basket or in mini puris.

Inside, you'll find it does a mouth-watering job of Mughlai cuisine and everything else, including Chinese, Continental, pizza and

LUCKNOW'S KEBABS DECONSTRUCTED

Kakori Kebab

Originates from Kakori, a small town outside Lucknow. Legend has it that the old and toothless Nawab of Kakori asked his royal bawarchi (chef) to make kebabs that would simply melt in the mouth. So these kebabs are made adding papaya as a tenderiser to raw mince-meat and a mix of spices. They are then applied to skewers and barbecued over charcoals.

Galawat Kebab

This is the mouth-watering creation that is served up in Lucknow's most famous kebab restaurant, Tunday Kababi (p381). There it is simply referred to as a mutton kebab, and in other restaurants it is often called Tunday. Galawat is the name of the tenderiser that's used for these kebabs. Essentially, they are the same as Kakori kebabs except that rather than being barbecued they are made into patties and shallow fried in oil or ghee.

Shami Kebab

Raw mincemeat is boiled with spices and black gram lentil. It is then ground on stone before being mixed with finely chopped onions, coriander leaves and green chillies, and shaped into patties and then shallow fried.

shakes and sundaes, which are whipped out along with classy service to a wildly mixed crowd that runs the gamut: Sikhs and Muslims over there, Hindus and hipsters over here. Our boneless murg mirch masala (chicken cooked with chilli peppers and ground spices with onion and tomatoes) was perfect.

★ Oudhyana

MUGHLAI, NORTH INDIAN $$$

(www.vivantabytaj.com; Vivanta by Taj Hotel, Vipin Khand, Gomti Nagar; mains ₹575-995) If you want to savor the flavours of the Nawabs performing at their culinary best, look no further than Oudhyana, where Chef Nagendra Singh gives Lucknow's famous Awadh cuisine its royal due at this signature restaurant inside the city's top hotel.

The flavours of everything Singh does, from the famous galawat and kakori kebabs to an entire menu of long-lost heritage dishes, unravel like an intricate gastronomic spy novel in your mouth. The intimate room is impossibly striking as well, dressed up in soothing baby blues with chandelier accoutrements. A special night out.

Falaknuma

MUGHLAI, NORTH INDIAN $$$

(Hotel Clarks Avadh, 8 MG Rd; mains ₹330-520; ☺1-3.30pm & 8-11.30pm) The stylish rooftop dining room at Clarks Avadh Hotel has fabulous bird's-eye views and serves up sumptuous Nawab cuisine, including the famous kebabs and an outstanding list of rich, vibrant curries. There's a small bar to enjoy brews and views as well.

Drinking & Nightlife

Cafe Coffee Day

CAFE

(www.cafecoffeeday.com; 31/82 MG Rd; coffee ₹64-140; ☺8am-11pm) Our favourite Indian coffee chain – known as CCD by locals – sits in prime position at the beginning of MG Rd's upscale shopping district.

Strokes Sports Bar

BAR

(Capoor's Hotel, MG Rd; ☺11am-11pm, to midnight Sat) With metallic decor, zebra-print chairs, ultraviolet lights and a backlit bar, this must be one of the strangest places in India to come to watch the latest cricket match on TV. Set it all to an international, pop-heavy soundtrack and the results are surreal. Even the middle-modern Indian ladies can be found here, albeit in smaller numbers.

Good times – though under renovation and battling rumoured licensing problems when we came through. Check ahead.

EOS

BAR

(72 MG Rd; ☺noon-11:45pm Mon-Fri, to 1am Sat) This chic bar on the rooftop of the Best Western Levana is Lucknow's attempt at a genuinely trendy bar. It draws the young and restless, especially for Saturday night DJ sets. Otherwise, the breezy, plant- and bamboo-filled spot is pleasant enough for a cocktail (₹350 to ₹450), either in the open air or within the smart air-con lounge.

Shopping

Lucknow is famous for chikan, an embroidered cloth worn by men and women. It is sold in a number of shops in the bazaars near Tunday Kebab, in the maze of streets in Chowk and in the small, traffic-free Janpath Market, just south of MG Rd in Hazratganj.

Sugandhco

PERFUME

(www.sugandhco.com; D-4 Janpath Market; ☺noon-7.30pm Mon-Sat) A family business since 1850, the sweet-scented Sugandhco sells attar (pure essence oil extracted from flowers by a traditional method) in the form of women's perfume, men's cologne, household fragrances and incense sticks. Sweet-smelling stuff.

Ram Advani Bookshop

BOOKS

(Mayfair Bldg, MG Rd; ☺10am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) This Lucknow institution is worth visiting just to meet the fantastically friendly and exceedingly knowledgeable owner, Mr Advani (in his 90s!). Be aware, though, that he takes his sestas very seriously and is rarely seen between noon and 4pm. There's a strong collection of books on Lucknow history here as well as some popular India-based contemporary literature.

Information

Foreign-friendly ATMs are dotted around Hazratganj. There's also one at the train station and the airport.

ICICI Bank (Shalimar Tower, 31/54 MG Rd, Hazratganj; ☺8am-8pm Mon-Fri, 9am-2pm Sat) Changes travellers cheques (Monday to Friday only, 10am to 5pm) and cash, and has an ATM.

Main Post Office (www.indiapost.gov.in; MG Rd; ☺10am-4pm Mon-Sat) Grand Raj-era architecture.

Sahara Hospital (☎0522-6780001; www.saharahospitals.com; Gomti Nagar) The best private hospital in Lucknow.

UP Tourism (☎0522-2615005; www.up-tourism.com; 6 Sapru Marg; ☺9am-7pm Mon-Sat)

Not a particularly helpful or well-informed government tourist office, but it happens to run Lucknow's excellent Heritage Walking Tour (though they couldn't tell us one single detail about it!). It operates a smaller kiosk (MG Rd; ☎ 8am-9pm Mon-Sat) on MG Rd's main drag as well as a Tourist Helpline (☎ 0522-3303030).

Agra Non-AC (₹350, seven hours, 8.30am, 10.30am, 5.30pm and 10.30pm), Volvo AC (₹906, six hours, 10am and 10pm)

Allahabad Non-AC (₹148, five hours, every 30 minutes), Volvo AC (₹479, 4½ hours, 6am, 7am, 8am, 10am, 11.30am, noon, 1pm, 2pm, 4.45pm, 6pm and 9pm)

Ayodhya Non-AC (₹176, six hours, every 30 minutes)

Faizabad Non-AC (₹145, three to four hours, every 30 minutes), Volvo AC (₹336, three hours, 10am and 10pm)

Gorakhpur Non-AC (₹283, 7½ hours, every 30 minutes), Volvo AC (₹718, six hours, 10am, 10pm and 11pm)

Jhansi Non-AC (₹320, eight hours, 7am, 9.30am, 6pm, 7pm, 8pm and 8.30pm)

Varanasi Non-AC (₹270, eight hours, every 30 minutes), Volvo AC (₹720, six hours, 3pm and 10pm)

Regular local buses (₹10) run to Alambagh bus station from the road in front of Charbagh Bus Stand (Kanpor Rd, at Subhash Marg), near the train station.

Kaiserbagh Bus Stand (☎ 0522-2622503; J Narain Rd) also has services to Faizabad (₹121, four hours) and Gorakhpur (₹260, eight hours, every 30 minutes, 6am to 10pm); as well as buses to Rupaitha (₹170, seven hours, 9.30am, 11am, 7.30pm, 8.30pm, 9.30pm and 11pm), where there is a rarely used Nepal border crossing.

TRAIN

The two main stations, Charbagh and Lucknow Junction, are side by side about 4.5km or so south of the main sites. Services for most major destinations leave from Charbagh, including several daily to Agra, Varanasi, Faizabad, Gorakhpur and New Delhi. Lucknow Junction handles the one daily train to Mumbai. Foreign Tourist Help (Rail Reservation & Booking Center, Charbagh Station; ☎ 8am-1.50pm & 2-8pm) is at window 601 inside the Rail Reservation and Booking Center complex 150m to your right as you exit Charbagh.

AYODHYA & AROUND

With monkeys galore, the usual smattering of cows and even the odd working elephant, the relatively traffic-free streets of Ayodhya would be an intriguing place to spend some time even if it wasn't for the religious significance of the place. This is not only the birthplace of Rama, and as such one of Hinduism's seven holy cities, nor just the birthplace of four of Jainism's 24 tirthankars (religious teachers), this is also the site of one of modern India's most controversial religious disputes.

Ayodhya became tragically synonymous with Hindu extremism in 1992, when rioting Hindus tore down the Babri Masjid, a mosque built by the Mughals in the 15th century, which Hindus claimed stood on the site of an earlier Rama temple, marking Lord Rama's birthplace. Hindus built Ram Janam Bhumi in its place. Tit-for-tat reprisals soon followed, including reactionary riots across the country that led to more than 2000 deaths, and the problem eventually reached the High Court. Archaeological investigations were carried out at the site and, in September 2010, the Allahabad High Court ruled that the site should be split equally between three religious groups; two Hindu, one Muslim. The Muslim group, Sunni Waqf Board, appealed parts of the ruling but the Supreme Court of India ruled in favour of the Allahabad ruling in 2011. Since the verdict, things have remained relatively calm. Meanwhile, security around the Ram Janam Bhumi remains incredibly tight.

The slightly larger town of Faizabad, 7km away, is the jumping-off point for Ayodhya and where you'll find more accommodation. From the Faizabad bus stand, turn left onto the main road where you'll find shared rickshaws (₹10 to ₹20, 20 minutes) to Ayodhya, where you can make a walking tour of the temples.

👁 Sights

Hanumangarhi

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ dawn-dusk) This is one of the town's most popular temples, and is the closest of the major temples here to the main road. Walk up the 76 steps to the ornate carved gateway and the fortresslike outer walls, and join the throng inside offering prasad (temple-blessed food).

Dashrath Bhavan

HINDU TEMPLE

(☀️ dawn-dusk) A further 200m up the side road from Hanumangarhi, this temple is approached through a colourful entranceway. The atmosphere inside is peaceful, with musicians playing and orange-clad sadhus reading scriptures.

Kanak Bhavan

HINDU TEMPLE

(Palace of Gold; ☀️ 8.30-noon & 4.30-8pm) A few minutes' walk straight on from Dashrath Bhavan is this impressive, ancient but often rebuilt palace-cum-temple.

i JHANSI: TRANSIT HUB

This nondescript town near the Madhya Pradesh border is famous for its link to the Rani of Jhansi, a key player in the 1857 First War of Independence (Indian Uprising), and it is commonly used as a gateway to Orchha, Khajuraho and Gwalior.

Buses leave from the bus stand for Chhatarpur (₹130, three hours, hourly, 5am to 10pm), where you can switch for Khajuraho (₹50, 1½ hours); to Chitrakut (₹250, six hours, 8.30am); and Gwalior (₹100, three hours, hourly). Tempos (₹20) go between Jhansi bus stand and Orchha all day. Private autorickshaws charge ₹200. Coming from Khajuraho/Chhatarpur, you can ask the bus driver to drop you off at the Orchha turn-off on the National Hwy, where you should be able to wave down a vehicle to take you to Orchha.

Handy trains include 12137 Punjab Mail to Gwalior (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹170/535/735, 1½ hours, 2.30pm) and Agra (₹195/535/735, 3½ hours, 2.30pm); 12138 Punjab Mail to Mumbai ₹530/1385/1995, 19 hours, 12.35pm); 12615 Grand Trunk Exp to Delhi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹275/705/985, 6½ hours, 11.42pm); 11107 Bundelkhand Exp to Varanasi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹305/825/1180, 12½ hours, 10.30pm) and 19666 Udz Kurj Express to Khajuraho (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹160/485/690, five hours, 2.35pm).

Ram Janam Bhumi

HINDU TEMPLE

(🕒 7-11am & 3-6pm) If you turn left at Dashrath Bhavan, when coming from Hanumanghari, you soon reach the highly contentious temple that marks the birthplace of Rama. Security here is staggering (think crossing from West Bank into Israel). You must first show your passport, then leave all belongings apart from your passport and money (even your belt) in nearby lockers.

You are then searched several times before being accompanied through a caged corridor that leads to a spot 20m away from a makeshift tent of a shrine, which marks Rama's birthplace.

Ramkatha Museum

MUSEUM

(📞 9415328511; 🕒 10.30am-5pm Tue-Sun, performances 6-9pm) FREE A 10-minute walk on the other side of the main road from the temples in this area brings you to Ramkatha Museum, a large, unsigned in English yellow-and-red building with paintings and ancient sculptures. Every evening except Monday, the museum hosts free performances of the Ram Lila (a dramatic re-enactment of the battle between Lord Ram and Ravan, as described in the Hindu epic, the Ramayana).

Walk about 500m or so along the main road deeper into Ayodhya, turn right at the police station across from Akash Cycle Company, and it's another 500m or so on your right.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Shane Avadh

HOTEL $

(📞 05278-222075; www.hotelshaveavadh.com; Civil Lines, Faizabad; s/d from ₹400/500, with AC from ₹1236/1574; 🍷) There's a huge range of rooms at this well-run establishment in Faizabad (though only a few recently renovated ones are as smart as their website would have you believe). Even the cheapest ones are neat and spacious, though, if a little basic. Beds are rock hard (if you're into that). There's also a decent restaurant (mains ₹90 to ₹325). Book ahead.

★ Awantika

MULTICUISINE $

(Civil Lines, Faizabad; mains ₹95-210; 🕒 11am-10.30pm) Clean and hip, this out-of-place restaurant does a seriously good all-veg menu that runs the gamut from Chinese to Italian to Indian. The special thali (₹180) is a real treat and it's all set to trendy tunes in a funky lounge atmosphere. It's across the street from Bharat Petroleum.

📍 Information

There's an HDFC Bank ATM next to Bharat Petroleum, between Hotel Shan-e-Avadh and the bus stand.

Cyber Zone (Civil Lines, Faizabad; per hour ₹20; 🕒 10am-8.30pm) A rudimentary internet cafe at the first intersection 50m on the right after Hotel Shan-e-Avadh on the road heading towards Ayodhya.

📍 Getting There & Away

From Faizabad bus stand, buses run to Lucknow (₹135, three hours), Gorakhpur (₹144, 3½ hours, every 30 minutes, 5am and 8pm). Buses to Allahabad (₹147, five hours) depart on the same schedule between 7am and 10pm.

Daily trains include Lucknow (13307 Gangasutlej Express, sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹140/485/690, four hours, 11.08am), Varanasi (13010 Doon Express, sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹140/485/690, five hours, 11.10am) and Delhi (14205 Faizabad-Delhi Express, sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹340/910/1310, 12 hours, 9.45pm).

A cycle-rickshaw from the bus stand to the train station is ₹30.

ALLAHABAD

📍 0532 / POP 1.2 MILLION

For all its importance in Hindu mythology, Indian history and modern politics, Allahabad is a surprisingly relaxed city that offers plenty in terms of sights, but little in the way of in-yer-face hassle.

Brahma, the Hindu god of creation, is believed to have landed on earth in Allahabad, or Prayag as it was originally known, and to have called it the king of all pilgrimage centres. Indeed, Sangam, a river confluence on the outskirts of the city, is the most celebrated of India's four Kumbh Mela locations. The vast riverbanks here attract tens of millions of pilgrims every six years for either the Kumbh Mela or the Ardh (Half) Mela, but every year there is a smaller Magh Mela.

Of more immediate interest to casual visitors are Allahabad's grand Raj-era buildings, its Mughal fort and tombs, and the historic legacy of the Nehru family.

round, pilgrims row boats out to this holy spot, but their numbers increase dramatically during the annual Magh Mela (Allahabad; ☺Jan/Feb), a six-week festival held between January and March, which culminates in six communal 'holy dips'.

Every 12 years the massive Kumbh Mela takes place here, attracting millions of people, while the Ardh Mela (Half Mela) is held here every six years.

In the early 1950s, 350 pilgrims were killed in a stampede to the soul-cleansing water (an incident re-created vividly in Vikram Seth's immense novel A Suitable Boy). The last Ardh Mela, in 2007, attracted more than 70 million people – considered to be the largest-ever human gathering until the 2013 Kumbh Mela, which attracted a guesstimated 32 million on Mauni Amavasya, the main bathing day, and 100 million across the 55-day festival; expect equally astonishing numbers at the next Allahabad Kumbh Mela in 2025. Old boat hands will row you out to the sacred confluence for ₹50 per person (hard-bargaining Indian) or ₹100 (hard-bargaining foreigner), or ₹600 to ₹800 per boat.

Around the corner from Sangam (skirt the riverbank around the front of Akbar's Fort) are the Saraswati and Nehru Ghats, home to a nightly aarti (an auspicious lighting of lamps/candles).

★ Khusru Bagh

PARK

(Mughal tombs admission free; ☺Mughal tombs dawn-dusk) This intriguing park, surrounded by huge walls, contains four highly impressive Mughal tombs. One is that of Prince Khusru, the eldest son of Emperor Jahangir, who tried to assassinate his father but was blinded and imprisoned, finally dying in 1622. If Khusru's coup had succeeded, his brother, Shah Jahan, would not have become emperor and the Taj Mahal would not exist.

A second tomb belongs to Shah Begum, Khusru's mother (Jehangir's first wife), who committed suicide in 1603 with an opium overdose because of the ongoing feud between her son and his father. Between these two, a third, particularly attractive tomb was constructed by Nesa Begum, Khusru's sister, although was never actually used as a tomb. A smaller structure, called Tamolon's Tomb, stands to the west of the others, but its origin is unknown.

★ Anand Bhavan

MUSEUM

(Indian/foreigner ₹10/100; ☺9.30am-1pm & 1.30-5pm Tue-Sun) This picturesque two-storey building is a shrine to the Nehru family, which has produced five generations of leading politicians from Motilal Nehru to the latest political figure, Rahul Gandhi. This stately home is where Mahatma Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru and others successfully planned the overthrow of the British Raj. It is full of books, personal effects and photos from those stirring times. Indira Gandhi was married here in 1942. The run-down Swaraj Bhavan next door is where former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was born.

Akbar's Fort & Patalpuri Temple

FORT

(Patalpuri temple admission by donation; ☺Patalpuri temple 6am-5.30pm) Built by the Mughal Emperor Akbar, this 16th-century fort on the northern bank of the Yamuna has massive walls with three gateways flanked by towers. Most of it is occupied by the Indian army and cannot be visited, but a small door in the eastern wall by Sangam leads to one part you can enter; the underground Patalpuri Temple.

DIP DATES

The following are the auspicious bathing dates for upcoming mela to be held at Sangam in Allahabad.

BATHING DAY	2016	2017	2018	2019
Makar Sankranti	4 Jan	14 Jan	14 Jan	14 Jan
Mauni Amavasya	8 Feb	27 Jan	16 Jan	4 Feb
Vasant Panchami	12 Feb	1 Feb	22 Jan	10 Feb
Magh Purnima	22 Feb	10 Feb	31 Jan	19 Feb
Mahashivatri	8 Mar	25 Feb	14 Feb	5 Mar

This unique temple is crowded with all sorts of idols – pick up some coins from the change dealers outside so you can leave small offerings as you go. You may be pressured into giving ₹10 to ₹100 at some shrines. A few coins are perfectly acceptable.

Outside the temple – though its roots can be seen beneath ground – is the Undying Banyan Tree from which pilgrims used to leap to their deaths, believing it would liberate them from the cycle of rebirth.

Allahabad Museum

MUSEUM

There's a wide variety of old-fashioned, basic rooms in various states of dilapidation, but staff are friendly and will even help negotiate autorickshaws.

Royal Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎0532-2427201; royalhotel.666@rediffmail.com; Nawab Yusef Rd; s/d from ₹300/450; 🍷) This decrepit old building near the train station used to be royal stables but was converted into a hotel by the king of Kalakankar, a former princely state, after he was refused entry into a British-run hotel nearby. It's dire and run down, but offers dirt cheap antiquated character and is foreign-traveller ready. The rooms (with 6m-high ceilings) and their bathrooms are absolutely enormous.

★ Kanchan Villa

HOSTEL $$

(☎9838631111; www.allahabadbnb.com; 64 Lukerganj; s/d from ₹2850/3550, apt ₹5300, all incl breakfast; 🍷🍷🍷) Ivan, a guitar-wielding Indian rum enthusiast, and his wife, Purnima, are your South Indian/Bengali hosts at this fabulous homestay offering a window into a rarely seen side of Christian Indian culture. In a historic home nearing its centennial milestone, six rooms are decked out with period furnishings (our fave: Bengali); breakfast can be taken on the lush, 2nd-floor patio. The lovely staff will cook for you as well, serving up fresh kebabs from the outdoor tandoor, for example, and you'll feel right at home in the living room/bar. Pick-up and drops-offs included; otherwise it's a short ₹20 cycle-rickshaw ride from the train station.

Hotel U.R.

HOTEL $$

(☎0532-2427334; mj1874@gmail.com; 7/3, A/1MG Marg; r ₹1569-2243; 🍷🍷) This professionally-run 20-room midranger is in a good location along MG Marg and offers a slight step-up from similarly-priced competition. A glass elevator leads to somewhat cramped (due to big beds) but clean rooms, the cheapest of which have renovated bathrooms, and small desks and seating areas. Staff is palpably better trained than elsewhere in this price range.

Eating

★ Eat On

MUGHLAI $

(MG Marg; mains ₹40-200; ☉11.30am-10pm Wed-Mon) This standing-room only food shack does four things – and does them astonishingly cheap and well. Mouth-watering shami kebabs (minced mutton with black gram lentil and spices), perfectly spiced chicken biryani, roasted chicken (evenings only) and a lovely thin paratha to accompany it all. Prepare to wait – this is one of Allahabad's best.

Indian Coffee House

CAFE $

(15 MG Marg; coffee from ₹17.50, mains ₹25-55; ☺8am-9pm) Rickshaw drivers call this large, airy 50-year-old coffee hall simply 'Coffee House' (like the French call them fries). It's a classic South Indian choice for a budget breakfast (including Continental choices like eggs, omelettes and toast) and good filtered coffee.

The annex closest to the road is often closed, but the main building set back from the street should be open.

Kamdhenu Sweets

SWEETS $

(37, Palace Cinema Compound, MG Marg; snacks ₹20-80; ☺8am-10pm) Very popular snack shop selling absolutely delicious homebaked sweets, as well as cakes, samosas, sandwiches and ice cream.

★ El Chico

MULTICUISINE $$

(26/28 MG Marg; mains ₹185-430; ☺9am-10.30pm) This refined restaurant serves up absolutely wonderful Indian (the chicken chilli garlic kebab is every bit as delicious as it sounds), tasty-looking Chinese, popular sizzlers and Continental cuisine, along with coffee in pewter carafes.

El Chico Cafe

FUSION/BAKERY $$

(24/28 MG Marg; mains ₹150-450; ☺10am-11pm) Cure your homesick hungries in a heartbeat among a forward-thinking Indian crowd. Big breakfasts all day (cinnamon pancakes, waffles, espresso); and sandwiches, wood-fired pizzas and more sophisticated fusion fare throughout the day. Try the sizzlin' brownie! It's next door to El Chico.

Drinking & Nightlife

Patiyala Peg Bar

BAR

(Grand Continental Hotel, Sardar Patel Marg; ☺7-11pm) The most interesting bar for tourists has live ghazal (Urdu songs) music nightly from 7.30pm to 10.30pm. Mostly beers (from ₹300) and whisky.

CHITRAKUT: VARANASI IN MINIATURE

Known as a mini Varanasi because of its many temples and ghats, this small, peaceful town on the banks of the River Mandakini is the stuff of Hindu legends. It is here that Hinduism's principal trinity – Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva – took on their incarnations. It is also the place where Lord Rama is believed to have spent 11½ years of his 14-year exile after being banished from his birthplace in Ayodhya at the behest of a jealous stepmother.

Today Chitrakut attracts throngs of pilgrims, giving the area a strong religious quality, particularly by Ram Ghat, the town's centre of activity, and at the holy hill of Kamadgiri, 2km away.

Dozens, sometimes hundreds, of devotees descend onto Ram Ghat to take holy dips at dawn before returning at the end of the day for the evening aarti (an auspicious lighting of lamps/candles). Colourful rowboats (with rabbits!) wait here to take you across to the opposite bank, which is actually in Madhya Pradesh, or to scenic spots along the river. The 2km-trip to the Glass Temple, a building covered in religious mosaics made with thousands of pieces of coloured glass, is popular. During the day, many people make their way to Kamadgiri, a hill revered as the holy embodiment of Lord Rama. A 5km-circuit (90 minutes) around the base of the hill takes you past prostrating pilgrims, innumerable monkeys and temples galore.

30 minutes, 4am to midnight) and Lucknow (₹176, five hours, hourly, noon to 8pm). There are two more comfortable AC buses running to Lucknow (₹459, five hours, 6am to 8pm) daily. To get to Delhi or Agra, change in Lucknow, or take a train.

There are two direct buses to Chitrakut (₹110, three hours, 12.30 and 1.30pm) from Zero Road Bus Stand (Zero Rd). Otherwise, head instead to Karwi (₹110, three hours, every 30 minutes, 7am to 8.30) where you can do the final 10km by shared autorickshaw (₹10).

TRAIN

Allahabad Junction is the main station. A few daily trains run to Lucknow, Varanasi, Delhi, Agra and Kolkata. Frequent trains also run to Satna, from where you can catch buses to Khajuraho.

i Getting Around

Cycle-rickshaws (₹10 for a short trip of 1km to 2km but be prepared to go to war for it) are plentiful. The train station is your best bet for autorickshaws. Consider hiring one for half a day (₹500, four hours) to take in more of the sights. Vikrams (large shared autos) hang about on the south side of the train station. Destinations include Zero Road Bus Stand (₹10), Civil Lines Bus Stand (₹10) and Sangam (₹15).

VARANASI

☎ 0542 / POP 1.4 MILLION

Brace yourself. You're about to enter one of the most blindingly colourful, unrelentingly chaotic and unapologetically indiscreet places on earth. Varanasi takes no prisoners. But if you're ready for it, this may just turn out to be your favourite stop of all.

Also known at various times in history as Kashi (City of Life) and Benares, this is one of the world's oldest continually inhabited cities and is regarded as one of Hinduism's seven holy cities. Pilgrims come to the ghats lining the River Ganges here to wash away a lifetime of sins in the sacred waters or to cremate their loved ones. It's a particularly auspicious place to die, since expiring here offers moksha (liberation from the cycle of birth and death), making Varanasi the beating heart of the Hindu universe. Most visitors agree it's a magical place, but it's not for the faint-hearted. Here the most intimate rituals of life and death take place in public, and the sights, sounds and smells in and around the ghats – not to mention the almost constant attention from touts – can be overwhelming. Persevere. Varanasi is unique, and a walk along the ghats or a boat ride on the river will live long in the memory.

The old city of Varanasi is situated along the western bank of the Ganges and extends back from the riverbank ghats in a labyrinth of alleys called galis that are too narrow for traffic. They can be disorienting, but the popular hotels and restaurants are usually signposted and, however lost you become, you will eventually end up at a ghat and get your bearings. You can walk all the way along the ghats, apart from during and immediately after the monsoon, when the river level is too high.

India's current prime minister, Narendra Modi, is a Varanasi Member of Parliament, so it has been getting some extra attention of late, with new projects, roadworks and a general (much needed) sprucing up.

History

Thought to date back to around 1200 BC, Varanasi really rose to prominence in the 8th century AD, when Shankaracharya, a reformer of Hinduism, established Shiva worship as the principal sect. The Afghans destroyed Varanasi around AD 1300, after laying waste to nearby Sarnath, but the fanatical Mughal emperor Aurangzeb was the most destructive, looting and destroying almost all of the temples. The old city of Varanasi may look antique, but few buildings are more than a couple of hundred years old.

Sights

★ Vishwanath Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(Golden Temple; Map p394; ☀️ 3am-11am, 12.30-8pm & 9-11pm) There are temples at almost every turn in Varanasi, but this is the most famous of the lot. It is dedicated to Vishveswara – Shiva as lord of the universe. The current temple was built in 1776 by Ahalya Bai of Indore; the 800kg of gold plating on the tower and dome was supplied by Maharaja Ranjit Singh of Lahore 50 years later.

The area is full of soldiers because of security issues and communal tensions. Bags, cameras, mobile phones, pens or any other electronic device must be deposited in lockers (₹20) before you enter the alleyway it's in. Accounts vary as to whether or not foreigners can go in the temple itself. Officially, non-Hindus, which counts most foreigners, cannot enter the temple, but many expats living in Varanasi as well as travelers have reported they were allowed in. We get the impression it's up to the whim of the security guards that day. For what's it's worth, they would not let us in until we returned with a local handler to sort things out. Declaring an interested or curiosity in Hindu beliefs may help you gain access (and it helps if you have an offering in hand, which can be purchased inside or outside the temple). Either way, bring your original passport (not a copy) if you want to enter. Once inside, it's quite a show, with people pushing, tripping over and sometimes violently asserting themselves for a chance to give an offering and touch the lingam, which resolves one of all sins. Hindus routinely wait in lines for 48 hours to enter on particularly holy days.

On the northern side of Vishwanath Temple is the Gyan Kupor Well (Well of Knowledge; Map p394). The faithful believe drinking its water leads to a higher spiritual plane, though they are prevented from doing so by a strong security screen. Non-Hindus are also not allowed to enter here, and here the rule is enforced more strictly.

Benares Hindu University HISTORIC SITE
(BHU; Map p392; www.bhu.ac.in) Long regarded as a centre of learning, Varanasi's tradition of top-quality education continues today at Benares Hindu University, established in 1916. The wide tree-lined streets and parkland of the 5-sq-km campus offer a peaceful atmosphere a world away from the city outside. On campus is Bharat Kala Bhavan (Map p392; Indian/foreigner ₹10/150; ☀️ 10am-5.30pm Mon-Fri), a roomy museum with a wonderful collection of miniature paintings, as well as 12th-century palm-leaf manuscripts, sculptures and local history displays.

Ramnagar Fort & Museum MUSEUM
(Map p392; Indian/foreigner ₹20/150; ☀️ 10-5.30pm) This crumbling 17th-century fort and palace, on the eastern bank of the Ganges, isn't worth coming out to if you only have a few days in Varanasi, but it is a beautiful place to watch the sun set over the river. It also houses an eccentric museum. There are vintage American cars, jewel-encrusted sedan chairs, a superb weaponry section and an extremely unusual astrological clock.

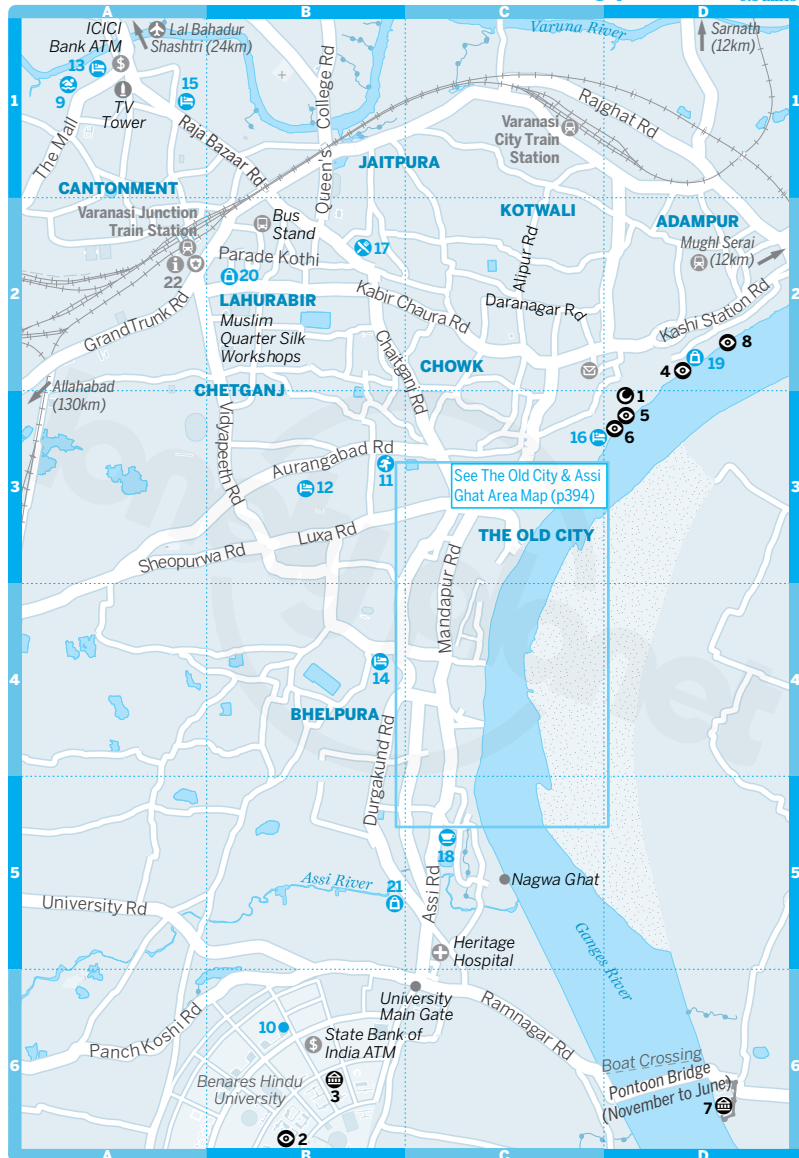

The current maharaja, Anant Narayan Singh – still known in these parts as the Maharaja of Benares despite such royal titles being officially abolished in 1971 – continues his family tradition of attending the annual month-long Ram Lila drama festival (Varanasi; ☀️ Sep/Oct) held in the streets behind the fort.

Boats operate a shuttle service across the river (₹20 return, 10 minutes) between 5am and 8pm, but from October to mid-June, you can also cross on a somewhat steady pontoon bridge or take the long way round on a rickshaw (₹200). A new bridge, under construction now for years, means most folks will just drive across – if it's ever finished. A boat all the way back to Dashashwamedh Ghat is ₹200.

Ghats

Spiritually enlightening and fantastically photogenic, Varanasi is at its brilliant best by the ghats, the long stretch of steps leading down to the water on the western bank of the Ganges. Most are used for bathing but there are also several 'burning ghats' where bodies are cremated in public. The main one is Manikarnika: you'll often see funeral processions threading their way through the backstreets to this ghat.

The best time to visit the ghats is at dawn when the river is bathed in a mellow light as pilgrims come to perform puja to the rising sun, and at sunset when the main ganga aarti (river worship ceremony) takes place at Dashashwamedh Ghat.

About 80 ghats border the river, but the main group extends from Assi Ghat, near the university, northwards to Raj Ghat, near the road and rail bridge.

A boat trip along the river provides the perfect introduction, although for most of the year the water level is low enough for you to walk freely along the whole length of the ghats. It's a world-class 'people-watching' stroll as you mingle with the fascinating mixture of people who come to the Ganges not only for a ritual bath but also to wash clothes, do yoga, offer blessings, sell flowers, get a massage, play cricket, wash their buffaloes, improve their karma by giving to beggars or simply hang around.

Southern Stretch

★ Assi Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Assi Ghat, the furthest south of the main ghats and one of the biggest, is particularly important as the River Assi meets the Ganges near here and pilgrims come to worship a Shiva lingam (phallic image of Shiva) beneath a peepul tree. Evenings are particularly lively, as the ghat's vast concreted area fills up with hawkers and entertainers. It's a popular starting point for boat trips and there are some excellent hotels.

Tulsi Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Named after a 16th-century Hindu poet, Tulsi Ghat has fallen down towards the river but in the month of Kartika (October/November) a festival devoted to Krishna is celebrated here.

Bachraj Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) This small ghat is marked by three Jain temples.

Shivala Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) A Shiva temple and a 19th-century mansion built by Nepali royalty sit back from Shivalaya Ghat.

Dandi Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) The Dandi Ghat is used by austere ascetics known as Dandi Panths

Hanuman Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Popular with Rama devotees (Hanuman was Rama's monkey servant).

Harishchandra Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Harishchandra Ghat is a cremation ghat – smaller and secondary in importance to Manikarnika, but one of the oldest ghats in Varanasi.

Kedar Ghat

(Map p394) Above Harishchandra Ghat, with a shrine popular with Bengalis and South Indians.

Old City Stretch

★ Dashashwamedh Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Varanasi's liveliest and most colourful ghat is Dashashwamedh Ghat, easily reached at the end of the main road from Godaulia Crossing. The name indicates that Brahma sacrificed (medh) 10 (das) horses (aswa) here. In spite of the oppressive boat owners, flower sellers and touts trying to drag you off to a silk shop, it's a wonderful place to linger and people-watch while soaking up the atmosphere. Every evening at 7pm an elaborate ganga aarti ceremony with puja, fire and dance is staged here.

Man Mandir Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Just north of Dashashwamedh Ghat, Man Mandir Ghat was built in 1600 by Raja Man Singh, but was poorly restored in the 19th century. The northern corner of the ghat has a fine stone balcony.

★ Manikarnika Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Manikarnika Ghat, the main burning ghat, is the most auspicious place for a Hindu to be cremated. Dead bodies are handled by outcasts known as doms, and are carried through the alleyways of the old city to the holy Ganges on a bamboo stretcher swathed in cloth. The corpse is doused with water from the Ganges prior to cremation.

Huge piles of firewood are stacked along the top of the ghat; every log is carefully weighed on giant scales so that the price of cremation can be calculated. Each type of wood has its own price, sandalwood being the most expensive. There is an art to using just enough wood to completely incinerate a corpse. You can watch cremations but always show reverence by behaving respectfully. Photography is strictly prohibited. You're almost guaranteed to be led by a priest, or more likely a guide, to the upper floor of a nearby building from where you can watch cremations taking place, and then asked for a donation (in dollars) towards the cost of wood. If you don't want to make a donation, don't follow them.

Above the steps here is a tank known as the Manikarnika Well. Parvati is said to have dropped her earring here and Shiva dug the tank to recover it, filling the depression with his sweat. The Charanpaduka, a slab of stone between the well and the ghat, bears footprints made by Vishnu. Privileged VIPs are cremated at the Charanpaduka, which also has a temple dedicated to Ganesh.

Dattatreya Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Dattatreya takes its name from a Brahmin saint, whose footprint is preserved in a small temple nearby.

Scindhia Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p394) Scindhia Ghat was originally built in 1830, but was so huge and magnificent that it collapsed into the river and had to be rebuilt.

Northern Stretch

Ram Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p392) North from Scindhia Ghat, Ram Ghat was built by a maharaja of Jaipur.

Panchganga Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p392) This marks where five holy rivers are supposed to meet.

Alamgir Mosque

MOSQUE

(Map p392) Dominating Panchganga Ghat, this small mosque was built by Aurangzeb on the site of a large Vishnu temple.

Gai Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p392) A painted stone Nandi statue and lingam mark this ghat north of the mosque.

Trilochan Ghat

SACRED SITE

(Map p392) At Trilochan, two turrets emerge from the river, and the water between them is especially holy.

Activities

It's worth an early rise two of your mornings in Varanasi, one to take in the action on a river boat trip and another to experience the hubbub of activity on the ghats themselves. Nonguests can use the outdoor swimming pools (₹300) at Hotel Surya and Hotel Clarks Varanasi (Map p392; The Mall; nonguests ₹500; 📶).

★ River Trips

BOATING

A dawn rowing boat ride along the Ganges is a quintessential Varanasi experience. The early-morning light is particularly inspiring, and all the colour and clamour of pilgrims bathing and performing puja unfolds before you. An hour-long trip south from Dashashwamedh Ghat to Harishchandra Ghat and back is popular, but be prepared to see a burning corpse at Harishchandra.

Early evening is also a good time to be on the river, when you can light a lotus flower candle (₹10) and set it adrift on the water before watching the nightly ganga aarti ceremony (7pm) at Dashashwamedh Ghat directly from the boat.

The official government price of boats is ₹250 per hour for two to four people, but it is not enforced. Count yourself lucky if you manage ₹300 per person per hour and be prepared for some hard bargaining. And be warned: it's best to arrange a boat the day before. If you show up as the sun is about to rise, you'll find yourself in a Varanasi Standoff: a battle of wills between yourself, a boatsman and the unforgiving rising sun – to the tune of ₹1000 per person.

THE VARANASI SHAKEDOWN

If you thought the touts and rickshaw-wallahs were annoying in Agra, wait till you get to Varanasi. The attention here, particularly around the ghats and the Old City, is incredible: you will have to put up with persistent offers from touts and drivers of 'cheapest and best' boat trips, guides, tour operators, travel agents, silk shops and money changers (to name a few). Take it in good humour but politely refuse.

Words to live by in Varanasi:

- ➔ Don't take photos at the 'burning' ghats and resist offers to 'follow me for a better view', where you'll be pressured for money and may be placed in an uncomfortable situation.
- ➔ Do not go to any shop with a guide or autorickshaw driver. Be firm and don't do it. Ever. You will pay 40% to 60% more for your item due to insane commissions and you will be passively encouraging this practice. Do yourself a favour and walk there; or have your ride drop you a block away.
- ➔ Imposter stores are rampant in Varanasi, usually spelled one letter off or sometimes exactly the same. The shops we have recommended are the real deal. Ask for a visiting card (ie business card) – if the info doesn't match, you have been had.
- ➔ When negotiating with boatmen, confirm the price and currency before setting out. They just love to say '100!' and then at the end claim they meant dollars or euros.
- ➔ Do not book unofficial guides, which most guesthouses hire. If you want a guide, go through UP Tourism (p402) to avoid most of the hassles above. If not, have fun shopping!
- ➔ Be wary of bhong lassis – these are made with hash (degraded cannabis) and can be very strong (robberies of intoxicated people have been reported).

Many guesthouses offer boat trips, although they're more expensive than dealing with the boatmen directly. Brown Bread Bakery (p400) can arrange a hassle-free ride in their own boats for less than riverside (₹150 per hour for one person, ₹50 per hour per additional person) with some à la carte coffee and cakes to boot.

Aarna Spa

MASSAGE

(Map p392; ☎0542-2508465; www.hotelsuryavns.com; Hotel Surya, S-20/51A-5 The Mall Rd; massage from ₹1400; ☀8am-8pm) Hotel Surya's spa is a nice choice for soothing Ayurvedic massages.

Swasthya Vardhak

AYURVEDA

(Map p394; ☎0543-2312504; www.swasthyavardhak.com; Assi Crossing; ☀8am-8pm) Varanasi is full of Ayurvedic imposters. Serious seekers should come here, the city's real deal Ayurvedic pharmacy. Consultations with a doctor are free; prescriptions from the 500 stocked medicines run from ₹20 to ₹2000. Additionally, it works with a government initiative that encourages struggling local farmers to turn over a new leaf planting Ayurvedic herbs.

Volunteering

Learn for Life Society

VOLUNTEERING

(Map p392; ☎2390040; www.learn-for-life.net; D55/147 Aurangabad) This small charity, run by two foreigners and contacted through Brown Bread Bakery (p400), has established a small school for disadvantaged children and a women's empowerment group, offering fairly paid work to local women, some of whom are mothers of the school's students.

The women make produce such as jams and muesli, which are available at the bakery. Pop into Brown Bread's Infocentre nightly at 7pm when representatives meet interested travellers. No cash donations.

Courses

Yoga Training Centre

YOGA

(Map p394; ☎9919857895; www.yogatraincentre.com; 5/15 Sakarkand Gali; 2hr class ₹300, reiki from ₹800; ☀8am, 10am & 4pm) Former Army clerk and yoga master Sunil Kumar and partners run set classes three times a day on the 2nd and 3rd floors of this small backstreet building near Meer Ghat (but you can drop-in anytime for a session). He teaches an integrated blend of hatha, shivananda, satyananda, pranayama and Iyengar, and serious students can continue on certificate and diploma courses in both yoga and reiki.

Pragati Hindi

LANGUAGE

(Map p394; ☎9335376488; www.pragatihindi.com; B-7/176 Harar Bagh) Readers recommend the flexibility of the one-to-one classes taught here by the amiable Rajeswar Mukherjee (Raju). Private classes start from ₹300 per hour. Call ahead, or just drop in, to meet Raju and arrange a schedule. Walk up the stairs opposite Chowki Ghat and take the first left, following the "Hindi" signs.

International Music Centre Ashram

INDIAN MUSIC

(Map p394; ☎0542-2452302; keshavaraoanayak@hotmail.com; D33/81 Khalishpura; per hour ₹300-400) This family-run centre is hidden in the tangle of backstreets off Bengali Tola. It offers sitar, tabla, flute and classical-dance tuition, and performances are held every Saturday and Wednesday evening at 8pm (₹150). There's a small, easy-to-miss sign on Bengali Tola directing you here.

If you can't find it, there are loads of musical instrument shops (Map p394) on Bengali Tola, many of which offer tuition.

International Centre

VARIOUS

(Map p392; ☎0542-2368130; www.bhu.ac.in; C/3/3 Tagore House; ☀10am-5pm Mon-Sat) If you're interested in studying at Benares Hindu University, contact this centre. Courses on offer include Hindi, Sanskrit, and yoga, among others.

Tours

If time is short, UP Tourism (p402) can arrange guided tours by taxi of the major sites, including a 5.30am boat ride and an afternoon trip to Sarnath.

★Varanasi Walks

WALKING

(☎8795576225; www.varanasiwalks.com; tours ₹1600-2000) The cultural walks on offer from this foreigner-run agency specialising in themed walks explore beyond the most popular ghats and temples. Walks are usually available on a reservation basis and can be booked online. Five of the eight guides were born and raised in Varanasi. It's a truly fascinating way to explore beyond the Old City.

Sleeping

The majority of Varanasi's budget hotels – and some midrange gems – are concentrated in the tangle of narrow streets back from the ghats along the River Ganges. There's a concentration around Assi Ghat, while others are in the crazy, bustling northern stretch of alleys between Scindhia and Meer Ghat, part of an area we refer to as the Old City, though at time of writing, city officials had marked numerous unlicensed ghat-side options, including some of our favourites, for demolition (whether it's carried out is another matter but 73 structures had been knocked down at time of writing). Check ahead for the current situation.

For those that prefer five-star luxury or aren't fussed about sleeping next to the river, there are some great choices in the neighbourhoods west of the river, such as Bhelpura, Aurangabad Rd and Cantonment.

Varanasi has an active paying-guesthouse scheme with more than 150 family homes available for accommodation from ₹150 to ₹900 a night (most are under ₹400). UP Tourism has a full list.

Old City Area

★ Ganpati Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p394; ☎ 0542-2390057; www.ganpatiguesthouse.com; 3/24 Meer Ghat; r/tr with AC ₹1350/1686, with view ₹3935-5510; 🍷@☎) This old red-brick favourite has a pleasant, shaded courtyard as well as plenty of balcony space dotted around offering fine river views. Newly madeover rooms, even in the cheapest category, are clean, brightly painted on the ceilings down and feature tasteful framed wall hangings and modern bathrooms.

Six new rooms replacing space once occupied by reception are exquisite with silent split air-con – topped by Nos 12 and 13, the best of the bunch. Another seven new rooms are in an annexed building down the alley – best avoided as you're detached from the ambiance. Be very wary of the aggressive monkeys – one ran off with a chunk of someone's skin in its mouth during our visit!

Hotel Aika

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p394; ☎ 0542-2401681; www.hotelaikavns.com; 3/23 Meer Ghat; r ₹650-1349, with AC ₹1574-5733, s/d without bathroom ₹600/700; 🍷@☎) This excellent ghat-side option could use an attentive eye on its exteriors, but the pretty much spotless rooms, either opening onto, or overlooking, a large, plant-filled courtyard or the Ganges, draw the lion's share of care here. In the far corner, a terrace juts out over Meer Ghat for one of the best views in all of Varanasi, a view shared from the balconies of eight of the pricier rooms.

Teerth Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p394; ☎ 0542-2400741; www.teerthguesthouse.com; 8/9 Kalika Gali; r ₹800, without bathroom ₹350, with AC ₹950; 🍷☎) This inner core guesthouse is a pleasant diversion from the undesirable maze of alleyways that lead to it. For the price, it's considerably clean and the 27 rooms, on the smaller size, are quiet and confined from surrounding chaos. The marble-laced lobby hogs a load of sunlight through the open atrium and there's Old City views from the underused rooftop.

Vishnu Rest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p394; ☎ 0542-2450206; D24/17 Pandhey Ghat; dm ₹90-100, s/d from ₹250/40, r with view ₹1200; @☎) Accessed through a small courtyard with family homes coming off it, or directly from Pandhey Ghat itself, this simple Vishnu-blue guesthouse offers poky rooms that aren't the cleanest, but the atmosphere is friendly and the stone terrace overlooking the ghat is a winner. Free wi-fi and 24-hour hot water in winter.

Eden Halt

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p394; ☎ 0542-2454612; dtrpathi23@yahoo.co.in; D25/21-22 Ganga Mahal, Raja Ghat; s/d from ₹250/400; @☎) We are not as bowled over by this dead-simple, pocket-sized guesthouse as many travellers, but the four rooms (two have private bathrooms, two have river views) here are spacious, some with interesting alcoves and built-in shelving. A roof terrace overlooks peaceful Raja Ghat, but be prepared to fight monkeys for space on it.

★ Homestay

HOMESTAY $$

(Map p392; ☎ 9415449348; www.homestayvaranasi.in; 61/16 Sidhgiri Bagh; s ₹2300-2800, d ₹2500-3000; 🍷@☎) This homestay in a 1936 colonial-era home in a residential neighbourhood 1.5km from the Old City back alleys is a true catch. Good-hearted host Harish, a 30-year veteran of the textile industry (well-regarded, fixed-price shop on premises) has six exquisitely maintained deluxe and enormous super deluxe rooms that are shielded from light, noise and mosquitoes. You'll truly appreciate the rest. His wife, Malika, whips up exquisite home-cooked meals and has been known to give impromptu cooking classes.

Kedareswar

HOTEL $$

(Map p394; ☎ 0542-2455568; www.kedareswarguesthouse.com; B14/1 Chowki Ghat; r ₹1400, with AC ₹2800, all incl breakfast; 🍷@☎) Housed in a brightly painted, aquamarine green building, this friendly six-room place has cramped but immaculate rooms with sparkling bathrooms. Breakfast is served on the rooftop when it's not too hot or rainy. There's only two cheaper non-AC rooms, so it might be worth phoning ahead. Chowki Ghat is right beside Kedar Ghat.

Rashmi Guest House HOTEL $$$
(Map p394; ☎0542-2402778; www.rashmiguesthouse.com; 16/28A Man Mandir Ghat; r incl breakfast ₹2810-6700; 🍷🍷🍷) Fragrant white-tiled corridors and marble staircases lead to a variety of cramped but smart rooms boasting high marks for cleanliness and modernity (many have views of Man Mandir Ghat). Dolphin (p400), the hotel's rooftop restaurant, is a fine place for a beer-chased evening meal (emphasis on Kingfisher, not culinary catharsis) and one of the Old City's few nonveg options.

Assi Ghat Area

★ Stops Hostel HOSTEL $
(Map p392; ☎9506118025; www.stopshostels.com; B20/47A2, Vijaya Nagaram Colony; tent Nov-Feb ₹250, dm from ₹350, d with AC ₹950, incl breakfast; 🍷🍷🍷) A true hostel has landed in Varanasi in a four-story residential mansion 2km or so from Assi Ghat. Dorms in six-, eight- and 12-bed variations are lived in up by colourful lockers, and there's ample hang spaces on various floors that cultivate the right vibe – a previously scarce atmosphere in much of India. The few privates are basic; the real coup here are the dorms, common areas and the rooftop showers, each uniquely painted by various artistic volunteers. The hostel plans all sorts of activities (from cooking classes to city tours), many of which are free save gratuities. It's a solid choice for the socially inclined – required training for staff includes legging it around India for a few weeks to gain traveller perspective.

Sahi River View Guesthouse GUESTHOUSE $
(Map p394; ☎0542-2366730; www.sahiriverview.co.in; B1/158 Assi Ghat; s/d ₹400/650, r with AC from ₹1250, all incl breakfast; 🍷🍷🍷) There's a huge variety of rooms at this friendly place, which is better than it looks from the entrance down a side alley. Most rooms are good quality and clean, and some have interesting private balconies. Each floor has a pleasant communal seating area with river view, creating a great feeling of space throughout.

★ Hotel Ganges View HOTEL $$$
(Map p394; ☎0542-2313218; www.hotelgangesview.com; Assi Ghat; r with AC ₹4500-6500; 🍷🍷🍷) Simply gorgeous, this beautifully restored and maintained colonial-style house overlooking Assi Ghat is crammed with books, artwork and antiques. Rooms are spacious and immaculate and there are some charming communal areas in which to sit and relax, including a lovely 1st-floor garden terrace. Book ahead.

Palace on Ganges HOTEL $$$
(Map p394; ☎0542-2315050; www.palaceonganges.com; B1/158 Assi Ghat; r ₹8993; 🍷🍷🍷) Each of the 24 rooms (the four river views are first-come, first-served) in this immaculate heritage accommodation is individually themed on a regional Indian style, using antique furnishings and colourful design themes. The colonial, Rajasthan and Jodhpur rooms are the best, though the lingering waff of insecticide indicates you might encounter some unwanted roommates.

WelcomHeritage
Jukaso Ganges HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(Map p392; www.welcomheritagehotels.in; CK/14, Patni Tola Chowk; s/d incl breakfast ₹11,242/13,490; 🍷🍷🍷) This exclusive 15 room retreat is the Old City's first truly luxury option, a 700-year-old renovated haveli (traditional, ornately decorated residence) sitting dominion over Guleria Ghat with choice river views. Rooms of various sizes are spread among several floors (only a few on each), so it never feels crowded.

But the common spaces – various courtyards and patios that wrangle in those postcard river views – are the real coup, highlighted by a breezy ghatside cafe and a 2nd floor Vishnu temple.

Cantonment Area

Hotel Surya HOTEL $$
(Map p392; ☎0542-2508465; www.hotelsuryavns.com; S-20/51A-5 The Mall Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹2473/3035; 🍷🍷🍷) Varanasi's cheapest hotel with a swimming pool, Surya has standard three-star Indian rooms, but a modern makeover in the superior and premium rooms means stylish new furnishings, upholsteries and the like.

Value here is palpable, as all is built around a huge lawn area that includes a colourful lounge-style bar and cafe flanked by a gorgeous, nearly 200-year-old heritage building (the former stumping grounds of a Nepali king), where the excellent-value Canton Royale (p401) is housed. There's also the good (but smoky) Sol Bar and the recommended Aarna Spa (p397).

Taj Gateway Hotel Ganges

HOTEL $$$

(Map p392; ☎0542-6660001; www.thegatewayhotels.com; Raja Bazaar Rd; r from ₹14,062; 📶📶📶) Varanasi's best hotel is on nearly 2 hectares of beautiful gardens with fruit trees, a tennis court, a pool, an outdoor yoga centre and the old maharaja's guesthouse. All the rooms were made over between 2010 and 2013. There's little size difference between standard and deluxe categories, but the latter are far classier with refined art on the walls and more soothing colour schemes (a rich turquoise, for example). Service is expectedly top class and there are two fine restaurants, two bars and two spa treatment rooms (massages from ₹3000).

🍴 Eating

Look out for locally grown langda aam (mangoes) in summer or sitafal (custard apples) in autumn. Singharas are water chestnuts that are sold raw (green) or cooked (black) – be wary of the risk of intestinal parasites with the latter. Many places in the Old City shut during summer months due to unbearable humidity and water levels that often flood the ghats and around.

🍴 Old City Area

Keshari Restaurant

INDIAN $

(Map p394; 14/8 Godaulia; mains ₹35-170; ☎9.30am-11pm) Known as much for excellent cuisine as surly service, this atmospheric spot (carved wood panelling dons the walls and ceilings) has been famously at it for nearly a half-century. Indians pack in here for high-quality veg from all over India – a dizzying array of dishes are on offer (over 40 paneer curries alone).

Those who like to dance with the devil should spring for the paneer Kadahi (spicy tomato-based gravy), sure to make your nose run. Do not confuse it with the less-desirable Keshari Ruchiker Bynjan around the corner on Dashashwamedh Rd.

Ayyar's Cafe

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Map p394; Dashashwamedh Rd; mains ₹2-100; ☎9.30am-7pm) Excellent, no-nonsense choice off the tourist beaten path for South Indian masala dosa (₹40), and its spicier cousin, the Mysore dosa (₹90); and one of the few cheapies to serve filtered coffee. It's tucked away at the end of a very short alley signed 'New Keshari Readymade'.

Dosa Cafe

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Map p394; 15/49 Man Mandir; dosas ₹20-150; ☎9am-9pm) This easy-to-miss three-table cafe woos travelers with Chef Ranjana's out-of-the-box South Indian preparations (chocolate idli, dosa with ratatouille, spinach or fruit) and won us over with their choice of oil: pick from refined soybean oil (no), butter (maybe), ghee (maybe) or olive oil (yes!). Creative, progressive and tasty.

★ Brown Bread Bakery

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p394; ☎9838888823; www.brownbreadbakery.com; 5/127 Tripura Bhairavi; mains ₹110-445; ☎7am-10pm; 📶) This restaurant and organic shop's fabulous menu includes more than 40 varieties of European-quality cheese and more than 30 types of bread, cookies and cakes. The ambience – with seating on cushions around low tables on the nonsmoking bottom floor, expansive views from the rooftop patio and live classical-music performances in the evenings – is spot on.

Pop in for the European breakfast buffet (7am to noon; ₹400), a hearty burger or just for a chai and respite from the heat and hassle. Part of the profits go to the charity Learn for Life (p397). Warning: not to be confused with the location across the street, abandoned by Micha, the 5th-generation German baker. If there are not four floors and a rooftop and the phone number doesn't match, you're in the wrong place.

Dolphin Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Rashmi Guest House; Map p394; 16/28A Man Mandir Ghat; mains ₹110-325; ☎7am-10pm) The atmosphere trumps the food at Dolphin – the rooftop restaurant at Rashmi Guest House (p399) – which is perched high above Man Mandir Ghat, but it's still a fine place for an evening meal. The breezy balcony is the most refined table in the Old City and one of the few that serves nonveg as well.

Lotus Lounge

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p394; D14/27 Mansarowar Ghat; mains ₹50-260; ☎8.30am-10pm; 📶) The food doesn't move mountains, but Lotus is a supremely great place to chill while walking the ghats. Its terrace, full of lounge cushions and tatami mats, juts right over Mansarowar Ghat. Free wi-fi.

✂ Assi Ghat Area

Aum Cafe

CAFE $

(Map p394; www.touchoflight.us; B1/201 Assi Ghat; mains ₹60-180; ☀7am-3.30pm Tue-Sun; ☎) ☹ Run by a hippie dippie American woman who has been coming to India for more than 20 years, this colourful cafe has breakfast all day (good lemon pancakes!), astounding lemon and organic green tea lassis and a handful of light sandwiches and mains that offer a curry respite.

★ Open Hand

CAFE $$

(Map p392; www.openhand.in; 1/128-3 Dumraab Bagh; breakfasts ₹105-210; ☀8am-8pm Mon-Sat; ☎) ☹ This shoes-off cafe-cum-gift shop serves the best espresso and French Press we had in India, as well as a range of excellent muffins, pancakes, muesli and juices that will delight you to no end. Take breakfast on the narrow balcony or lounge around the former home all day on the free wi-fi. There's also a large selection of gorgeous hand-crafts (jewellery, toys, clothing) made in the local community. Couldn't be more pleasant.

✂ Cantonment Area

Canton Royale

INDIAN $$

(Map p392; www.hotelsuryavns.com; S-20/51A-5 The Mall Rd; mains ₹190-380; ☀11am-11pm) Housed in a nearly 200-year-old heritage building, Hotel Surya's excellent main restaurant has a colonial elegance, and on warm evenings you can eat out on the large lawn. Value for money, it's one of the best of Varanasi's top-end choices, offering a global hodgepodge that extends from Mexican and Thai to Chinese and Continental.

But really, it's the Indian that's excellent, including a wonderful thali (₹300 to ₹350).

Eden Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(Map p392; www.hotelpradeep.com; Jagatganj, Hotel Pradeep; mains ₹175-325; ☀6am-11pm) Hotel Pradeep's rooftop dining space, complete with garden, manicured lawns and wrought-iron furniture, is a very pleasant place for a candle-lit evening meal. The good-quality Indian menu comes from the lobby-level Poonam restaurant.

Drinking & Nightlife

Wine and beer shops are dotted discreetly around the city, usually away from the river. Note that it is frowned upon to drink alcohol on or near the holy Ganges, and liquor laws regarding proximity of temples insure nobody is licensed, but rooftops here can usually discreetly fashion up a beer. For bars, head to midrange and top-end hotels away from the ghats.

There's nightly live Indian classical music at Brown Bread Bakery (p400).

The International Music Centre Ashram (p397) has small performances (₹150) on Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

Prinsep Bar

BAR

(Map p392; www.tajhotels.com; Gateway Hotel Ganges, Raja Bazaar Rd; ☀noon-11pm Mon-Sat, to midnight Sun) For a quiet drink with a dash of history, try this tiny bar named after James Prinsep who drew wonderful illustrations of Varanasi's ghats and temples.

Mangi Ferra

CAFE

(Map p392; www.hotelsuryavns.com; S-20/51A-5 The Mall Rd; ☀11am-11pm) This colourful, laid-back lounge in the garden at Hotel Surya (p399) is a relaxing place where you can sip on espresso (₹50) or cocktail (₹150 to ₹480).

NO 1 LASSI IN ALL VARANASI

Your long, thirsty search for the best lassi in India is over. Look no further than Blue Lassi (Map p394; lassis ₹25-85; ☀9am-10.30pm; ☎), a tiny, hole-in-the-wall yoghurt shop that has been churning out the freshest, creamiest, fruit-filled lassis since 1925. The grandson of the original owner still works here, sitting by his lassi-mixing cauldron in front of a small room with wooden benches for customers and walls plastered with messages from happy drinkers. There are over 80 delicious flavour combos, divided by section – plain, banana, apple, pomegranate, mango, papaya, strawberry, blueberry, coconut and saffron – we think banana and apple, the latter flecked with fresh apple shreds, just about top the long list (what the hell, make it banana-apple!). The whole scene here is surreal: the lassi takes ages to arrive while club-like tunes burrow into the eardrums of a UN-rivaling group of thirsty nationalities; when it does, it's handed off to you with the care of a priceless work of art as the deceased are carried by the front of the shop on the way to Burning Ghat (Manikarnika). Namaste!

Shopping

Varanasi is justifiably famous for silk brocades and beautiful Benares saris, but don't believe much of what the silk salesmen tell you about the relative quality of products, even in government emporiums. Instead, shop around and judge for yourself.

Varanasi is also a good place to shop for sitars (ranging from ₹6000 to ₹60,000) and tablas (from ₹5000 to ₹15,000). The cost depends primarily on the type of wood used. Mango is cheapest (and cracks or warps correspondingly), while black shisham or mahogany are of the highest quality. Serious buyers should be sure to double-check their chosen wood isn't banned for export.

★ Baba Blacksheep

(Map p394; www.babablacksheep.co; B12/120A9, Bhelpura; ☎9am-8pm) If the deluge of traveller enthusiasm is anything to go by, this is the most trustworthy, non-pushy shop in India. Indeed it is one of the best places you'll find for silks (scarves/saris from ₹400/3500) and pashminas (shawls from ₹1500).

Prices are fixed (though unmarked) and the friendly owner refuses to play the commission game, so autorickshaws and taxis don't like to come here (ignore anyone who says you cannot drive here). It's located at Bhelpura crossing under the mosque. It's not the cheapest (Indians find better deals elsewhere), but it's a pleasant experience.

★ Mehrotra Silk Factory

(Map p392; www.mehrotrasilk.in; 21/72 Englishia Line; ☎10am-8pm) Tucked away down a tiny alleyway near the main train station, this pocket-sized, fixed-priced shop is a fun place to buy silk scarves (from ₹400), saris (from ₹3000) and bedspread sets (from ₹9000). The Lal Ghat location (Map p392; www.mehrotrasilk.in; 4/8A Lal Ghat; ☎10am-8pm) is more convenient for Old City shoppers.

★ Organic by Brown Bread Bakery

(Map p394; www.brownbreadbakery.com; 2/225 Shivali; ☎7am-8pm; 🍷) This small shop sells natural and natural cosmetics from the government-sponsored Khadi program and select foodstuffs to go, as well as baked goods, fresh juices and coffee from Brown Bread Bakery's lengthier Old City menu.

★ Shri Gandhi Ashram Khadi

(Map p392; Sankat Mochan Rd; ☎10am-7.30pm) Stocks shirts, kurta pyjamas, saris and head scarves, all made from the famous home-spun khadi fabric.

Information

Varanasi is pretty wired – even Blue Lassi (p401) has wi-fi! Some charge. Many don't. Internet cafes are everywhere, charging around ₹20 per hour. There are several ATMs scattered around town, including State Bank of India in the lobby as you exit the train station.

Heritage Hospital (Map p392; ☎0562-2369996; www.heritagehospitals.in; Lanka) English-speaking staff; 24-hour pharmacy.

Main Post Office (GPO; Map p392; www.indiapost.gov.in; Visheshwarganj; ☎10am-6pm Mon-Sat) Best PO for sending parcels abroad.

Point (Map p394; B1/156 Assi Ghat Rd; per hour ₹30; ☎7am-10pm) Friendly internet.

Tourist Police (Map p392; UP Tourism office, Varanasi Junction train station; ☎5am-9pm) Tourist police wear sky-blue uniforms.

UP Tourism (Map p392; ☎0543-2506670; www.up-tourism.com; Varanasi Junction Train Station; ☎9am-7pm) The patient Mr Umashankar at the office inside the train station has been dishing out reasonably impartial information to arriving travellers for years; he's a mine of knowledge, so this is a requisite first stop if you arrive here by train. Get the head's up on autorickshaw prices, the best trains for your travels, details on Varanasi's paying-guesthouse scheme or arrange a guided tour.

TRAIN

Luggage theft has been reported on trains to and from Varanasi so you should take extra care. Reports of drugged food and drink aren't uncommon, so it's probably still best to politely decline any offers from strangers.

Varanasi Junction, also known as Varanasi Cantonment (Cantt), is the main station.

There are several daily trains to Allahabad, Gorakhpur and Lucknow. A few daily trains leave for New Delhi and Kolkata, but only two daily trains go to Agra. The direct train to Khajuraho only runs on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. On other days, go via Satna, a much larger rail transit hub from where you can catch buses to Khajuraho (₹120, 4 hours, 6.30am and 2.20pm).

Foreign Tourist Centre (Map p392; ☎ 8am-1.50pm & 2-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun) Foreign tourist quota tickets must be purchased at the Foreign Tourist Centre, a ticket counter just past the UP Tourism office, on your right as you exit the Varanasi Junction train station.

i Getting Around

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

An autorickshaw to the airport in Babatpur, 22km northwest of the city, costs ₹350. A taxi is about ₹840.

BICYCLE

You can hire bikes (per day ₹20) from a small cycle repair shop (Map p394; ☎ 7860154166; 1/105 Assi-Dham; ☎ 8am-7pm) near Assi Ghat.

CYCLE-RICKSHAW

A small ride – up to 2km – costs ₹50. Rough prices from Godaulia Crossing include: Assi Ghat ₹50, Benares Hindu University ₹60 and Varanasi Junction train station ₹60.

TAXI & AUTORICKSHAW

Prepaid booths for autorickshaws and taxis are directly outside Varanasi Junction train station and give you a good benchmark for prices around town, though it doesn't work as well as some other cities as there are usually no officials policing it.

First pay an administration charge (₹5 for autorickshaws, ₹10 for taxis) at the booth then take a ticket which you give to your driver, along with the fare, once you've reached your destination. Note that taxis and autorickshaws cannot access the Dashashwamedh Ghat area between the hours of 9am and 9pm due to high pedestrian traffic. You'll be dropped at Godaulia Crossing and will need to walk the remaining 400m or so to the entrance to the Old City; or 700m or so all the way to Dashashwamedh Ghat. During banned hours, autorickshaws line-up near Godaulia Crossing at a stand on Luxa Rd.

Sample fares:

Airport auto/taxi ₹225/650

Assi Ghat auto/taxi ₹90/300

Godaulia Crossing auto/taxi ₹95/250

Sarnath auto/taxi ₹120/400

Half-day tour (four hours) taxi ₹500

Full-day tour (eight hours) taxi ₹900

Autorickshaws do not have a half/full day tour scheme. Shared autos to Assi Ghat (₹15) and Benares University (₹15) leave from Mandapur Rd and Durgakund Rd, respectively.

SARNATH

Buddha came to Sarnath to preach his message of the middle way to nirvana after he achieved enlightenment at Bodhgaya and gave his famous first sermon here. In the 3rd century BC, emperor Ashoka had magnificent stupas and monasteries erected here as well as an engraved pillar. When Chinese traveller Xuan Zang dropped by in AD 640, Sarnath boasted a 100m-high stupa and 1500 monks living in large monasteries. However, soon after, Buddhism went into decline and, when Muslim invaders sacked the city in the late 12th century, Sarnath disappeared altogether. It was 'rediscovered' by British archaeologists in 1835.

Today it's one of the four key sites on the Buddhist circuit (along with Bodhgaya, Kushinagar and Lumbini in Nepal) and attracts followers from around the world, especially on Purnima (Buddha's birthday), when Buddha's life, death and enlightenment are celebrated, usually in April or May.

👁 Sights

Purnima, Buddha's birthday, is celebrated with particular zeal in Sarnath, with a large fair and procession of Buddha relics.

Dhamekh Stupa &amp; Monastery Ruins

BUDDHIST SACRED SITE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video ₹25; ☀ dawn-dusk) Set in a peaceful park of monastery ruins is the impressive 34m Dhamekh Stupa, which marks the spot where the Buddha preached his first sermon. The floral and geometric carvings are 5th century AD, but some of the brickwork dates back as far as 200 BC.

Nearby is the 3rd-century BC Ashoka Pillar, with an edict engraved on it. It once stood 15m tall and had the famous four-lion capital (now in the museum), but all that remains now are five fragments of its base.

Chaukhandi Stupa

BUDDHIST SACRED SITE

(☀ dawn-dusk) This large ruined stupa dates back to the 5th century AD, and marks the spot where Buddha met his first disciples. The incongruous tower on top of the stupa is Mughal and was constructed in the 16th century for the visit of Emperor Humayun.

Mulgandha Kuti Vihar

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

(camera/video ₹20/100; ☀ 4-11.30am & 1.30-8pm) This modern temple was completed in 1931 by the Mahabodhi Society. Buddha's first sermon is chanted daily, starting between 6pm and 7pm depending on the season. A bodhi tree growing outside was transplanted in 1931 from the tree in Anuradhapura, Sri Lanka, which in turn is said to be the offspring of the original tree in Bodhgaya.

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(admission ₹5; ☀ 9am-5pm) This modernised, 100-year-old sandstone museum houses wonderfully displayed ancient treasures such as the very well preserved 3rd-century BC lion capital from the Ashoka Pillar, which has been adopted as India's national emblem, and a huge 2000-year-old stone umbrella, ornately carved with Buddhist symbols.

i Getting There & Away

Local buses to Sarnath (₹15, 40 minutes) pass in front of Varanasi Junction train station, but you may wait a long time for one. A prepaid autorickshaw costs ₹120 from Varanasi Junction train station (use that as your bargaining base if you catch one from the Old City). On the way back, you can snag a lift in a shared auto or vikram (₹15) to Pandeypur, where you'll need to switch to another shared auto to Benia Bagh (₹15), which is just a ₹20 cycle rickshaw ride from Godaulia. Some trains running between Varanasi and Gorakhpur also stop here. Trains for Sarnath leave Varanasi Junction at 7am, 11.30am and 1.20pm. Returning to Varanasi, trains leave Sarnath at 9am, 7.30pm and 9.50pm.

GORAKHPUR

☎ 0551 / POP 623,000

There's little to see in Gorakhpur itself, but this well-connected transport hub is a short hop from the pilgrimage centre of Kushinagar – the place where Buddha died – making it a possible stopover on the road between Varanasi and Nepal.

Mirch Masala

DHABA $
(mains ₹30-200; ☺ 8am-1am) One of the better, cleaner dhabas opposite the railway station. It does good thalis (₹45 to ₹130), can pack food to go and is open late. The friendly owner tends to dote on foreigners.

i Information

There are State Bank of India ATMs in the train station parking lot and across from Adarsh Palace.

For the main bus stand, come out of the train station and keep walking straight for about 400m. For Varanasi buses you need the Katchari bus stand, about 3km further south.

Varden Cyber Hut (per hour ₹20; ☺ 9am-11pm) Internet cafe opposite the train station, below Hotel Varden.

i Getting There & Away

Frequent bus services run from the main bus stand to Faizabad (₹145, 3½ hours, every 30 minutes), Kushinagar (₹53, two hours, every 30 minutes) and Sunauli (₹90, three hours, hourly), along with Volvo AC buses to Lucknow (₹718, six hours, 9am, 11am and 10pm). Faster collective cars and jeeps leave for Sunauli when full between 5am and 6pm, directly across from the train station (per person ₹150 to ₹300, two hours).

Buses to Varanasi (₹185, seven hours, express at 7.30am then hourly 10am to 10pm) leave from the Katchari bus stand, as do buses to Allahabad (₹243, 10 hours, express at 7am, then hourly 10am to 10pm).

There are four daily trains (five on Tuesday and Thursday, and six on Saturday) from big and bustling Gorakhpur Junction to Varanasi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹170/485/610, 5½ hours), including one slower, cheaper night train (55149 Gkp Muv Pass, seven hours, 11.10pm). A number of daily trains also leave for Lucknow (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹220/535/735, five hours) and Delhi (₹430/1125/1605, 14 to 17 hours) and one for Agra Fort (19038 Avadh Express, ₹335/905/1295, 1.20pm, 14½ hours).

The train ticket reservation office is 500m from the train station; to the right of the station as you exit.

JetKconnect (www.jetkconnect.com) operates one daily flight from Delhi Monday to Saturday, but it is comparatively expensive.

KUSHINAGAR

☎05564 / POP 18,000

One of the four main pilgrimage sites marking Buddha's life – the others being Lumbini (Nepal), Bodhgaya and Sarnath – Kushinagar is where Buddha died. There are several peaceful, modern temples where you can stay, chat with monks or simply contemplate your place in the world, and there are three main historical sights, including the simple but wonderfully serene stupa where Buddha is said to have been cremated.

👁 Sights

In addition to the main principle ruins, Kusinagar's one road is lined with elaborate temples run by various Buddhist nations, many of which offer accommodations, sometimes to the public at large, sometimes only to pilgrims of their respective nations.

★ Mahaparinirvana Temple

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

(Buddha Marg; ☀6am-6pm) FREE The highlight of this modest temple, rebuilt in 1927 and set among extensive lawns and ancient excavated ruins with a circumambulatory path, is its serene 5th-century reclining Buddha, unearthed in 1876. Six metres long, it depicts Buddha on his ancient death-bed and is one of the world's most moving Buddhist icons. Behind the temple is an ancient 19m-tall stupa, and in the surrounding park is a large bell erected by the Dalai Lama.

★ Ramabhar Stupa

BUDDHIST SACRED SITE

Architecturally, this half-ruined, 15m-high stupa is little more than a large, dome-shaped clump of red bricks, but there is an unmistakable aura about this place which is hard to ignore. This is where Buddha's body is said to have been cremated and monks and pilgrims can often be seen meditating by the path that leads around the stupa.

★ Wat Thai Complex

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

(☎9005007063; www.watthaikusunara-th.org; Buddha Marg; ☀8am-9pm) Features an elaborate temple, beautifully maintained gardens with bonsai-style trees, a monastery and a temple containing a gilded Buddha. There's also a Sunday school and health clinic (across the street), each of which welcomes visitors. Unfortunately for the rest of us, rooms are reserved for Thai citizens only.

Buddha Museum

MUSEUM

(Buddha Marg; Indian/foreigner ₹3/10, photography ₹20; ☀10.30am-4.30pm Tue-Sun) Exhibits Buddhist relics, sculptures and terracottas unearthed from the Kushinagar region, as well as some Tibetan thangkas (rectangular cloth paintings) and Mughal miniature paintings.

Mathakuar Temple

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

(Buddha Marg; ☀dawn-dusk) This small shrine, set among monastery ruins, marks the spot where Buddha is said to have made his final sermon and now houses a 3m-tall blue-stone Buddha statue, thought to date from the 10th century AD.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Some of the temples, which have basic accommodation for pilgrims, also welcome tourists. Wat Thai is the most serene and beautiful, but only accepts Thai citizens.

Tibetan Temple

PILGRIMS' REST HOUSE $

(☎8795569357; Buddha Marg; d/tr ₹600/800) By far the nicest of the pilgrim accommodation offerings make this a great temple choice – some rooms are nicer than neighbouring hotels. There is also a dormitory offering beds by donation. Tibetan monks from Dharamsala do a one- to two-year managerial stint here and usually speak decent English.

hotel is the flashpacker pilgrim's choice. With its breezy lobby, gleaming floors and modern rooms with flat-screen TVs, tubs and minibars, it's the nicest in the village.

★ Yama Cafe

MULTICUISINE $
 (📞9956112749; Buddha Marg; mains ₹50-130; ☎️8am-8pm) Run by the welcoming Mr and Mrs Roy, this Kushinagar institution has a traveller-friendly menu which includes toast, omelettes, fried rice and thukpa (Tibetan noodle soup) and is the best place to come for information about the area. Ask about the so-called Holy Hike, a 13km-walk in the surrounding farmland, or give him a ring about other local information as well.

i Information

There are two ATMs in town and a couple of private money changers. A new international airport is approved and could open by 2016.

Smart Solutions (per hr ₹30; ☀9am-8pm) The most reliable internet connection in the village.

i Getting There & Away

Frequent buses to Gorakhpur (₹53, two hours, 24 hours though less frequently after dark) can be flagged down along the main road across from the yellow archway.

SUNAULI

☎05522 / POP 696

Sunauli is a dusty town that offers little more than a bus stop, a couple of hotels, a few shops and a border post. The border is open 24 hours and the crossing is straightforward, so most travellers carry on into Nepal without stopping. The Nepali side of Sunauli has a few cheap hotels, restaurants and a more upbeat atmosphere, but most travellers prefer to stay in Bhairawa, or get straight on a bus to Kathmandu or Pokhara.

Buses drop you just a few hundred metres from the Indian immigration office, so you can ignore the cycle-rickshaws.

i Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Indo-Nepal

HOTEL $

☎05522-238142; ht.indonepal@gmail.com; near Government Bus Stand; r ₹500-850) Hotel Indo-Nepal has underwhelming rooms set around a leafy cement courtyard. Its simple, dhaba-style Paradise Restaurant (mains ₹45-200, thali from ₹90; ☀6.30am-10pm) doesn't instill confidence but makes a nice lunch stop even if you don't stay. The owner, Mr Singh, is a good source for local information.

i CROSSING TO NEPAL: SUNAULI TO BHAIRAWA

Border Hours

The border is open 24 hours but closes to vehicles from 10pm to 6am, and if you arrive in the middle of the night you may have to wake someone to get stamped out of India. For further information, head to shop.lonelyplanet.com to purchase a downloadable PDF of the Kathmandu chapter from Lonely Planet's Nepal guide.

Foreign Exchange

There's no official moneychanger in Sunauli, but you can change Indian to Nepali (only) at Hotel Indo-Nepal. On the Nepal side, there are three ATMs in Belahiya: State Bank of India adjacent to Hotel Akash; Nabil Bank and Siddhartha Bank at the Mamta Hotel. Small denominations of Indian currency are accepted for bus fares on the Nepal side.

Onward Transport

The most comfortable option to Kathmandu is the Golden Travels (☎071-520194) AC bus (US$15, six to seven hours); it leaves from 100m beyond Nepali Immigration at 7am. AC Micros (mini-vans) depart from the same spot every 30 minutes from 6am to 10am (NRs 800, six hours).

Local buses (NRs20) and autorickshaws (NRs100) can take you from the border to Bhairawa, 4km away, where you can also catch non-AC buses to Kathmandu (NRs550, eight hours) via Narayangarh (NRs 350, three hours); and Pokhara (NRs 550, nine hours) via Tansen (NRs 250, five hours) along the Siddhartha Hwy or via the Mugling Hwy (NRs 650, eight hours). Local buses for Lumbini (NRs 80, one hour) leave from the junction of the Siddhartha Hwy and the road to Lumbini, about 1km north of Bank Rd.

Buddha Air (www.buddhair.com) and Yeti Airlines (www.yetiairlines.com) offer flights to Kathmandu from Bhairawa (from US$135).

Visas

Multiple-entry visas (15-/30-/90-days US$25/40/100 – cash, not rupees) are available at the Nepal immigration post. You can now save time by applying online at <http://online.nepalimmigration.gov.np/tourist-visa>. Your receipt, which you must produce at the border within 15 days of your application, outlines the border procedures. Always check with Nepal Department of Immigration (☎0977 1 4429659; www.nepalimmigration.gov.np; Kalikasthan, Kathmandu) for the latest information.

Getting There & Around

Regular buses run from Sunauli to Gorakhpur (₹94, three hours, every 15 minutes, 4am to 7pm) from where you can catch trains to Varanasi. A few morning (4.30am, 5.30am, 6.30am and 7.30am) and afternoon (4.30pm, 5.30pm and 6.30pm) buses run direct to Varanasi (₹271, 11 hours), but it's a long, bumpy ride. Faster collective cars and jeeps to Gorakhpur hang out alongside the road after Indian immigration and leave when full (₹150 to ₹300, two hours).

WESTERN UTTAR PRADESH

On the road from Delhi to Agra in the west of the state is a pair of sacred towns that played a pivotal role in India's religious history.

Mathura

☎0565 / POP 395,000

Famed for being the birthplace of the much-loved Hindu god Krishna, Mathura is one of Hinduism's seven sacred cities and attracts floods of pilgrims, particularly during Janmastami (Krishna's birthday) in August/September; and Holi in February/March. The town is dotted with temples from various ages and the stretch of the sacred Yamuna River which flows past here is lined with 25 ghats, best seen at dawn, when many people take their holy dip, and just after sunset, when hundreds of candles are sent floating out on the river during the aarti ceremony.

Mathura was once a Buddhist centre with 20 monasteries that housed 3000 monks but, after the rise of Hinduism, and later sackings by Afghan and Mughal rulers, today all that's left of the oldest sights are the beautiful sculptures recovered from ruins, now on display in the Archaeological Museum.

The mosque is now guarded round the clock by soldiers to prevent a repeat of the tragic events at Ayodhya (p384) in 1992. Cameras and mobiles must be checked here.

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(Museum Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹5/25, camera ₹20; ☎10.30am-4.30pm Tue-Sun) This large museum houses superb collections of religious sculptures by the Mathura school, which flourished from the 3rd century BC to the 12th century AD.

i BUYER BEWARE

Be wary of buying 'through' tickets from Kathmandu or Pokhara to Varanasi. Some travellers report being intimidated into buying another ticket once over the border. Travelling in either direction, it's better to take a local bus to the border, walk across and take another onward bus (pay the conductor on board). Travellers have also complained about being pressured into paying extra luggage charges for buses out of Sunauli. You shouldn't have to, so politely decline.

Vishram Ghat & Around

AREA

A string of ghats and temples lines the Yamuna River north of the main road bridge. The most central and most popular is Vishram Ghat, where Krishna is said to have rested after killing the tyrannical King Kansa. Boats gather along the banks here to take tourists along the Yamuna (₹150 per hour for two people). Beside the ghat is the 17m Sati Burj, a four-storey tower built by the son of Behari Mal of Jaipur in 1570 to commemorate his mother's sati (self-immolation on her husband's funeral pyre).

Gita Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(☺ dawn-dusk) This serene marble temple, on the road to Vrindavan, has the entire Bhagavad Gita (Hindu Song of the Divine One) written on a red pillar in the garden.

★ Festivals & Events

Mathura's most important festival, Janmastami (August/September), celebrates the birth of Lord Krishna and attracts huge crowds of devotees from all over the world for re-enactments of Krishna's life, musical programs and fervent offerings and puja throughout Mathura and Vrindavan.

India's colourful national Holi festival (February/March) is a 16-day affair around Mathura and Vrindavan, where it takes on particular importance due to being the birthplace of Lord Krishna.

The restaurant (meals ₹130-205) does good quality Indian veg dishes and is deservedly popular. There's also a smoky, male-dominated bar (beer from ₹180). Wi-fi is temperamental but free.

i Information

There is a State Bank of India (Station Rd) ATM at SBI Crossing, next door to Brijwasi Royal and not far from the New Bus Stand. There is a second one at Sri Krishna Janmbhoomi.

i Getting There & Around

BUS

The so-called New Bus Stand (Vrindavan Rd) has regular buses to Delhi (₹133, four hours, every 30 minutes, 5am to 10pm) and Agra (₹64, 90 minutes, every 15 minutes, 4am to 9pm). Shared autos and tempos plying Station and Mathura-Vrindavan Roads charge ₹15 for the 13km Mathura-Vrindavan run.

TRAIN

Regular trains go to Delhi (sleeper/AC chair ₹191/206, two to three hours), Agra (sleeper/AC chair ₹161/305, one hour), and Bharatpur (sleeper/AC chair ₹161/257, 45 minutes). The Bharatpur trains continue to Sawai Madhopur (for Ranthambore National Park, two hours) and Kota (5½ hours).

Vrindavan

☎ 0565 / POP 65,000

The village of Vrindavan is where the young Krishna is said to have grown up. Pilgrims flock here from all over India and, in the case of the Hare Krishna community, from all over the world. Dozens of temples, old and modern, dot the area. They come in all shapes and sizes and many have their own unique peculiarities, making a visit here more than just your average temple hop.

Sights

In addition to what's listed below, the Rangaji Temple, dating from 1851, Radha Balabh Temple, built in 1626, Madan Mohan Temple and Nidhivan Temple, are also worth a visit.

★ Krishna Balaram Temple Complex

HINDU TEMPLE

The International Society for Krishna Consciousness (Iskcon; ☎0565-2540343; www.iskcon.org), also known as the Hare Krishnas, is based at the Krishna Balaram temple complex (Ishkon Temple), accessed through a beautiful white-marble gate, which houses the tomb of Swami Prabhupada (1896–1977), the founder of the Hare Krishna organisation. Several hundred foreigners attend courses and seminars here annually. The temple is closed to the public at various times of the day, most significantly from 12:45pm to 4pm (4.30pm in summer).

Govind Dev Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

This cavernous, red sandstone temple, built in 1590 by Raja Man Singh of Amber, has cute bells carved on its pillars. Resident monkeys here are as cheeky as any in India.

Pagal Baba Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(admission ₹5) This 10-storey temple, a fairy-tale-castle lookalike, has an amusing succession of animated puppets and dioramas behind glass cases on the ground floor, which depict scenes from the lives of Rama and Krishna.

Sleeping & Eating

It's possible to stay at the guesthouse (☎0565-2540022; www.iskconvrindavan.com; d ₹700, d/tr with AC ₹950/1600; 🏠) at the back of the Hare Krishna temple complex (though devotees are prioritised). Here you'll also find the clean, cool and healthy Sri Govinda Restaurant (mains ₹90-220; 🕒8am-2.30pm & 6-9.30pm), which does Indian veg dishes, pasta, cakes, shakes, salads and soups. There's a small bakery beside it.

Why Go?

Soaring Himalayan peaks and steamy lowland jungles. Revered temples and renowned ashrams. Peaceful hill stations and busy cities. Uttarakhand is an enticingly diverse state, with some of India's best trekking, yoga schools, holiday towns and wildlife-watching all tucked into one little corner of the country.

Hindus think of Uttarakhand as Dev Bhoomi – the Land of Gods – and the dramatic terrain is covered with holy mountains, lakes and rivers. Twisting roads and high-altitude hiking trails lead to spectacular pilgrimage sites where tales from the Hindu epics are set. And something of these ancient stories seems to have been absorbed by the land, which exudes a subtle sense of actually being sacred – even to ultra-orthodox agnostics.

Many travellers flock here for this vibe, finding it a powerful place to pursue a spiritual practice. Others come here to spot tigers.

When to Go

History

Uttarakhand consists of two culturally distinct districts: Garhwal (in the west) and Kumaon (to the east). Over the centuries various dynasties have dominated the region, including the Guptas, Kuturyi and Chand rajas. In the 18th century the Nepalese Gurkhas attacked first the kingdom of Kumaon, then Garhwal, prompting the British to step in and take most of the region as part of the Sugauli Treaty in 1816.

After Independence, the region was merged with Uttar Pradesh, but a vocal separatist movement followed, and the present-day state of Uttaranchal was formed in 2000. In 2007 it was officially renamed Uttarakhand, a traditional name meaning 'northern country'.

Climate

Temperatures are determined by altitude in this state of elevation extremes. Trekking the Himalayas is possible from May to October, but can be dangerous between July and mid-September, during the monsoon, when violent cloudbursts cause landslides. Hill stations offer a welcome escape from summertime heat, while low-lying Rishikesh is most comfortable from October to March.

Information

Most towns in the region have an Uttarakhand Tourism office; however the main responsibility for the region's tourism rests with the Garhwal Mandal Vikas Nigam (GMVN; www.gmvl.com), in the Garhwal district and Kumaon Mandal Vikas Nigam (KMVN; www.kmvn.org), in the Kumaon district.

Getting Around

Tough old government buses are the main means of travelling around Uttarakhand. In addition, crowded shared jeeps criss-cross the state, linking remote towns and villages to important road junctions. Pay 10 times the share-taxi rate to hire the whole vehicle and travel in comfort. Roads that snake through the hills can be nerve-racking and stomach-churning, and are sometimes blocked by monsoon-season landslides.

RISHIKESH

☑ 0135 / POP 102,160 / ELEV 356M

Ever since the Beatles rocked up at the ashram of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi in the late 1960s, Rishikesh has been a magnet for spiritual seekers. Today it styles itself as the 'Yoga Capital of the World', with masses of ashrams and all kinds of yoga and meditation classes. Most of this action is north of the main town, where the exquisite setting on the fast-flowing Ganges, surrounded by forested hills, is conducive to meditation and mind expansion. In the evening, an almost supernatural breeze blows down the valley, setting temple bells ringing as sadhus (spiritual men), pilgrims and tourists prepare for the nightly ganga aarti (a fire offering or ritual performed on the Ganges). You can learn to play the sitar or tabla; try Hasya yoga (laughter therapy), practise humming or gong meditation, or even take a punt on crystal healing.

But Rishikesh is not all spirituality and contorted limbs; it's now a popular white-water rafting centre, backpacker hang-out, and gateway to treks in the Himalaya.

Rishikesh is divided into two main areas: the crowded, unattractive downtown area (Rishikesh town), where you'll find the bus and train stations as well as the Triveni Ghat (a popular and auspicious bathing ghat and place of prayer on the Ganges); and the riverside communities 2km upstream around Ram Jhula and Lakshman Jhula, where most of the accommodation, ashrams, restaurants and travellers are ensconced. The two jhula (suspension bridges) that cross the river are pedestrian-only – though scooters and motorcycles freely use them. Swarg Ashram, located on the eastern bank, is the traffic-free 'spiritual centre' of Rishikesh, while High Bank, west of Lakshman Jhula, is a small enclave popular with backpackers.

TOP STATE FESTIVALS

Magh Mela (Haridwar; ☀ Jan & Feb) Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims come to bathe in the soul-cleansing Ganges during this huge annual religious fair. The Ardh Kumbh Mela is held every six years; and millions of pilgrims attend the mega Kumbh Mela every 12 years.

International Yoga Festival (p418; hMar) Rishikesh hosts the International Yoga Festival, attracting swamis and yoga masters from around the world for discourses and lectures. Most of the action is centred on the Parmarth Niketan Ashram (p417) in Swarg Ashram. Check the festival website for dates.

Shivaratri (Tapkeshwar Temple; ☀ usually Mar) A festival celebrated in style with carnival rides and stalls at a picturesque riverside cave temple on the outskirts of Dehra Dun.

Nanda Devi Fair (p449; ☀ Sep) During this five-day fair, devotees parade the image of the goddess in towns around Kumaon. There's also dancing and cultural shows.

lashanand, it resembles a fairyland castle and has dozens of shrines to Hindu deities on each level, interspersed with jewellery and textile shops. Sunset is an especially good time to photograph the temple from the bridge itself, and you'll hear the bell-clanging and chanting of devotees in the morning and evening. Shops selling devotional CDs add to the cacophony of noise on this side of the river. Markets, restaurants, ashrams and guesthouses sprawl on both sides of the river; in recent years the area has grown into the busiest and liveliest part of upper Rishikesh.

Swarg Ashram

A pleasant 2km walk south of Lakshman Jhula, along the path skirting the east bank of the Ganges, leads to the spiritual community of Swarg Ashram, made up of temples, ashrams, a crowded bazaar, sadhus and the bathing ghats (steps or landing on a river) where religious ceremonies are performed at sunrise and sunset. The colourful, though rather touristy, ganga aarti is held at the riverside temple of the Parmarth Niketan Ashram (p417) every evening around sunset, with singing, chanting, musicians and the lighting of candles.

Other Sights

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi Ashram

HISTORIC BUILDING

(entry ₹100; ☀ 8am-6pm) Just south of Swarg Ashram, slowly being consumed by the forest undergrowth, is what's left of the original Maharishi Mahesh Yogi Ashram. It was abandoned in 1997 and is now back under the control of the forest department. However, the shells of many buildings, meditation cells and lecture halls can still be seen, including Maharishi's own house and the guesthouse where the Beatles stayed and apparently wrote much of the White Album.

The once-striking art installation called The Beatles Cathedral Gallery has become a graffiti free-for-all, but it's still worth a look.

Activities

Yoga & Meditation

Yoga and meditation are ubiquitous in India's yoga capital. Teaching and yoga styles vary tremendously, so check out a few classes and ask others about their experiences before committing yourself to a course. Many places also offer ayurvedic massage, and some residential ashrams have strict rules forbidding students from consuming drugs, alcohol, tobacco and meat during their stay.

Sri Sant Seva Ashram

YOGA

(☎ 0135-2430465; santsewa@hotmail.com; Lakshman Jhula; d ₹200-500, with AC ₹1000; ☎) The yoga classes are mixed styles and open to all. Beginner (₹100), and intermediate and advanced (₹200) sessions run daily. There are also courses in reiki, ayurvedic massage and cooking. Overlooking the Ganges in Lakshman Jhula, the large rooms here are popular, so book ahead. The more expensive rooms have balconies with superb river views.

specialises in highly recommended Iyengar yoga classes at the Patanjala Yoga Kendra centre. There are intensive seven- to 10-day courses (₹1200) on offer from October to May, advance reservations recommended. In the gaps between the intensives, day classes are offered (6pm to 7.30pm, Monday to Saturday, ₹250). The ashram has its own ghat and evening ganga aarti.

Parmarth Niketan Ashram

YOGA

(☎ 0135-2434301; www.parmarth.com; Swarg Ashram; s/d ₹400/500) Dominating the centre of Swarg Ashram and drawing visitors to its evening ganga aarti on the riverbank, Parmarth has a wonderfully ornate and serene garden courtyard. The price includes a room with a private bathroom and basic hatha yoga sessions.

Anand Prakash Yoga Ashram

Food is excellent and rooms are simple but comfortable and clean. Silence is the rule from 9pm to 9am. If you're not staying, drop in for classes for ₹150 to ₹200.

Rishikesh Yog Peeth

YOGA

(☎ 0135-2440193; www.rishikeshyogpeeth.com; Swarg Ashram; 40-day course US$1400) With its excellent reputation, this popular yoga-teacher-training school has become something of a local industry.

Rafting, Kayaking & Trekking

More than 100 operators offer full- and half-day rafting trips, launching upstream and paddling down to Rishikesh. Some also offer multiday rafting trips, with camping along the river. The official rafting season runs from 15 September to 30 June. A half-day trip starts at about ₹1000 per person, while a full day costs from ₹1800. Most companies also offer all-inclusive Himalayan treks to places such as Kuari Pass, Har-ki Dun and Gangotri/Tapovan from around ₹3500 per day.

Red Chilli Adventure

TREKKING, RAFTING

(☎ 0135-2434021; www.redchilliadventure.com; Lakshman Jhula Rd; ☀ 9am-8pm) Reliable outfit offering Himalayan trekking and rafting trips throughout Uttarakhand and to Himachal Pradesh and Ladakh.

De-N-Ascent Expeditions KAYAKING, TREKKING
(☎ 0135-2442354; www.kayakhimalaya.com; Lakshman Jhula, Tapovan Sarai) Specialist in kayaking lessons and expeditions. Learn to paddle and eskimo roll with an experienced instructor, or go on multiday kayaking or rafting adventures. Also organises trekking trips.

GMVN Trekking & Mountaineering Division TREKKING
(☎ 0135-2430799; www.gmvl.com; Lakshman Jhula Rd, Muni-ki-Reti; ☀ 10am-5pm) Can arrange high-altitude treks in the Garhwal Himalaya, and hires out trekking equipment, guides and porters.

Walks & Beaches

An easy, 15-minute walk to two small waterfalls starts 3km north of Lakshman Jhula bridge on the south side of the river. The start is marked by drink stalls and a road-side shrine, and the path is easy to find. 4WD taxis cost ₹100 from Lakshman Jhula.

On the other side of the river, it's about 2km north to the signposted walk to lovely Neer Garh Waterfall (admission ₹30), from where it's a 20-minute uphill walk.

For a longer hike, follow the dedicated pilgrims who take water from the Ganges to offer at Neelkantha Mahadev Temple, a 7km, approximately three-hour walk along a forest path from Swarg Ashram. You can also reach the temple by road (20km) from Lakshman Jhula.

★ Festivals & Events

International Yoga Festival YOGA
(www.internationalyogafestival.com; ☀ Mar) In the first week of March, swamis and yoga masters from around the world flock to Rishikesh for lectures and training. Most of the action is centred on the Parmarth Niketan Ashram (p417) in Swarg Ashram. Check the festival website for dates.

🛏 Sleeping

Most of the accommodation is spread on both sides of the river around Lakshman Jhula; there are a handful of hotels among the ashrams at Swarg Ashram and directly across the river around Ram Jhula, and some good budget places at High Bank.

Midrange and top-end hotels are in relatively short supply in budget-minded Rishikesh.

🏠 High Bank

This small, leafy travellers' enclave is a 20-minute walk up the hill from Lakshman Jhula and has some of the best backpacker accommodation in Rishikesh.

Bhandari Swiss Cottage HOTEL $
(☎ 0135-2432939; www.bhandariswisscottagerishikesh.com; r from ₹200, with AC from ₹1000; 🍷 @ ☺) The first place you come to, this is a well-run backpacker favourite with rooms in several budgets – the higher up you stay, the higher the price. Rooms with big balconies have expansive views of the river backed by green mountains. It has an excellent little restaurant, internet cafe and yoga classes.

New Bhandari Swiss Cottage HOTEL $
(☎ 0135-2435322; www.newbhandariswisscottage.com; r ₹400-800, with AC ₹1000-1500; 🍷 @ ☺) One of the last places on the High Bank lane, this is a large, popular place with rooms ranging from clean and simple to simply impressive. There's a massage centre, a good restaurant and a helpful travel desk in its internet cafe.

THE MAHARISHI & THE BEATLES

In February 1968, Rishikesh hit world headlines when the Beatles and their partners stayed at Maharishi Mahesh Yogi's ashram in Swarg Ashram, following an earlier visit by George Harrison. Ringo Starr and his wife didn't like the vegetarian food, missed their children and left after a couple of weeks, but the others stayed for a month or two. They relaxed and wrote tons of songs, many of which ended up on their double album White Album. But rumours of the Maharishi's demands for money and his behaviour towards some female disciples eventually disillusioned all of them. 'You made a fool of everyone', John Lennon sang about the Maharishi. In later years, Harrison and Paul McCartney said, on record, that the rumours were unfounded. The original ashram is now abandoned, but nearly 40 years on, idealistic foreigners still swarm into Rishikesh seeking spiritual enlightenment from teachers and healers in their tranquil ashrams scattered along the Ganges River.

Lakshman Jhula

There are several good budget options on both sides of the river here, which is the liveliest part of Rishikesh. Some of the best-value places are at the paying guest-houses along the lane that leads to Divine Ganga Cottage.

Hotel Ishan HOTEL $
(☎ 0135-2431534; ₹ 400-1200; 🍷🍷🍷) This long-running riverfront place near Lakshman Jhula has a wide range of rooms at a wide range of prices. Here, you get what you pay for: the best are large and clean with terraces overlooking the river, the cheapest are unpleasantly musty. The top-floor room with TV and balcony has great views.

Hotel Surya HOTEL $
(☎ 0135-2440211; www.hotelsuryalaxmanjhula.com; ₹ 400-950; 🍷🍷🍷) Above Café Coffee Day, the Surya is in a good location by the bridge. The midrange rooms are the best value, as they're quieter and in better condition than the pricey front-balcony rooms.

Divine Ganga Cottage HOTEL $$
(☎ 0135-2442175; www.divinegangacottage.com; ₹ 1500, with AC ₹ 2500; 🍷🍷🍷) This is tucked away from the hubbub, and surrounded by small rice paddies and local homes with gardens. The huge upstairs terrace has supreme river views. Downstairs rooms are small and overpriced but the larger, stylish upstairs air-con rooms are some of the best in town, with writing tables and modern bathrooms. There's an ayurvedic spa and yoga instruction on some days.

Dewa Retreat HOTEL $$$
(☎ 0135-2442382; www.dewaretreat.com; ₹ 4825; 🍷🍷🍷) Lakshman Jhula's newest top-end hotel features immaculate rooms that blend simplicity with luxury. The best rooms have balconies with Ganges valley views, and the outdoor swimming pool takes the edge off of a sultry day.

Divine Resort HOTEL $$$
(☎ 0135-2442128; www.divineresort.com; ₹ 3750-7500; 🍷🍷) Some rooms in this top-end hotel have stunning river views – but none is as impressive as the view from the glass elevator, which could be a tourist attraction all its own. There's a glassed-in restaurant facing the Ganges River and an excellent pastry shop-café in front.

Swarg Ashram

If you're serious about yoga and introspection, stay at one of Swarg's numerous ashrams. Otherwise, there's a knot of hotels a block back from the river towards the southern end of Swarg.

★ Vashishth Guest House BOUTIQUE HOTEL $
(☎ 0135-2440029; www.vashishthgroup.com; ₹ 550, with kitchen from ₹ 1000; 🍷🍷) This sweet little boutique hotel has colourfully painted walls, comfortable mattresses and a small lending library. A couple of the rooms boast good-sized kitchens with cooking utensils, table and chairs. For what you get, this is one of the best deals in Rishikesh.

Hotel Narayana Kunj HOTEL $
(☎ 0135-2440822; www.narayanakunj.com; Swarg Ashram; ₹ 600) Tucked down a quiet lane, you'll find rooms with balconies overlooking a grassy courtyard, along with a spa offering massage and ayurvedic treatments.

Eating

Virtually every restaurant in Rishikesh serves only vegetarian food, but there are lots of travellers' restaurants whipping up various interpretations of Continental and Israeli food, as well as Indian and Chinese.

Lakshman Jhula

★ Devraj Coffee Corner CAFE $
(snacks & mains ₹ 40-190; ☺ 8am-9pm) Perched above the bridge and looking across the river to Shri Trayanbakhshwar temple, this German bakery is a sublime spot for a break at any time of the day. The coffee is the best in town and the menu ranges from specialities such as brown bread with yak cheese to soups and sizzlers, along with croissants, apple strudel and more.

There's a good new and used bookshop next door.

Prem's Namaste Cafe MULTICUISINE $
(mains ₹ 55-150; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍷) With a menu and atmosphere similar to most of the other restaurants on this strip, what sets Prem's apart are the superfriendly staff and the frequent jam sessions in the cushioned top-floor eating lounge.

Pyramid Cafe MULTICUISINE $ (mains ₹ 60-95; ☺ 8.30am-10pm; 🍷) Sit on cushions inside pyramid-shaped tents and choose from a menu of home-cooked Indian food, plus a few Tibetan and Western dishes including pancakes. The family that runs it is superfriendly and they also rent out a couple of peaceful, well-kept pyramid tents with double bed and attached bath (₹250 and ₹500).

★ Little Buddha Cafe MULTICUISINE $$
(mains ₹100-200; ☺ 8am-11pm; 🍷) This funky treehouse-style restaurant has an ultraloungey top floor, tables overlooking the Ganges River and really good international food. Pizzas are big and the mixed vegetable platter is a serious feast. It's one of the busiest places in Lakshman Jhula, for good reason.

Ganga Beach Restaurant MULTICUISINE $$
(mains ₹100-160; ☺ 7.30am-10.30pm; 🍷) Great riverside location with a spacious terrace and big menu including crepes and ice-cold lassis.

🔪 Swarg Ashram & Ram Jhula

Madras Cafe INDIAN $
(Ram Jhula; mains ₹100-150; ☺ 7.30am-9.30pm; 🍷) This local institution recently underwent a modern facelift but still dishes up tasty South and North Indian vegetarian food, thalis, a mean mushroom curry, wholewheat pancakes and the intriguing Himalayan 'health pilau', as well as superthick lassis.

Tip Top Restaurant MULTICUISINE $
(Swarg Ashram; mains ₹70-160; ☺ 9am-9.30pm) The friendly little joint is perched up high, catching river views and breezes. Customise your own sandwich, or dig into Indian, Italian or Israeli dishes.

🔪 High Bank

Backpackers gather at the popular restaurants on High Bank. This is the only area in town where you'll find meat on the menu.

Bistro Nirvana INTERNATIONAL $$
(mains ₹80-250; ☺ 8am-10.30pm) This new joint hits the right groove, with a shaded patio and elevated tables with cushioned bench seating. The theme is bamboo, the multiregional food is tasty.

Oasis Restaurant MULTICUISINE $$
(mains ₹90-170; ☺ 8am-10pm) At New Bhandari Swiss Cottage, this place has some character, with candlelit tables in the garden and hanging lanterns inside. The menu covers oodles of world cuisines, from Mexican and Thai to Israeli and Tibetan, and features a number of chicken dishes. Great desserts include apple crumble.

🔒 Shopping

Swarg Ashram is the place to go for bookshops, ayurvedic herbal medicines, clothing, handicrafts and tourist trinkets such as jewellery and Tibetan singing bowls, though there are also plenty of stalls around Lakshman Jhula. Many stalls sell rudraksh mala, the strings of beads used in puja (literally 'respect'; offering or prayers). They are made from the nuts of the rudraksh tree, which originally grew where Shiva shed a single tear following a particularly long and satisfying period of meditation. Beads with mukhi (different faces) confer various blessings on the wearer.

If you need outdoor gear, your best bet is Adventure Axis (Badrinath Rd, Lakshman Jhula; ☺ 10am-8pm), which stocks everything from sleeping bags and carabiners to drysuits and trekking boots.

📍 Information

DANGERS & ANNOYANCES

Be cautious of befriending sadhus – while some are on genuine spiritual journeys, the orange robes have been used as a disguise by fugitives from the law since medieval times, and people have been robbed and worse.

The current in some parts of the Ganges is very strong and people occasionally drown here. Don't swim beyond your depth.

INTERNET ACCESS

Internet access is available all over town, usually for ₹20 or ₹30 per hour.

Blue Hills Travels (Swarg Ashram; per hour ₹30; ☺ 8am-10pm) Skype is available.

Lucky Internet (Lakshman Jhula; per hour ₹30; ☺ 8.30am-9.30pm; 📶) Wi-fi access.

MEDICAL SERVICES

Himalayan Institute Hospital (☎ 0135-2471200, Emergency 0135-2471225; ☺ 24hr) The nearest large hospital, 17km along the road to Dehra Dun and 1km beyond Jolly Grant airport.

Shivananda Ashram (☎ 0135-2430040; www.sivanandaonline.org; Lakshman Jhula Rd) Provides free medical services and has a pharmacy.

MONEY

Several travel agents around Lakshman Jhula and Swarg Ashram will exchange travellers cheques and cash.

POST

Main Post Office (Ghat Rd; ☎ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) Near Triveni Ghat.

Post Office (Swarg Ashram; ☎ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat)

TOURIST INFORMATION

Uttarakhand Tourism Office (📞 0135-2430209; main bus stand; ☎ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) A building behind the bus stand, with eager staff.

Getting There & Away

BUS

There are regular buses to Haridwar and Dehra Dun; for Mussoorie change at Dehra Dun. Buses run north to pilgrimage centres during the yatra (pilgrimage) season (April to November), and to Joshimath and Uttarkashi year-round. Buses to Gangotri were infrequent at the time of research.

Private AC and Volvo buses run to Delhi (₹600 to ₹830, seven hours) several times a day. There's also one direct overnight bus daily from Rishikesh to Dharamsala (₹950) at 4pm.

Private night buses to Jaipur (seat/sleeper/AC sleeper ₹500/600/1100, 13 hours) and Pushkar (₹500/600, 16 hours) can be booked at travel agents in Lakshman Jhula, Swarg Ashram and High Bank, but they leave from Haridwar. You can also book a bus to Agra (₹840, 12 hours) that departs from Dehradun.

SHARE JEEPS & TAXI

Share jeeps leave, when overfull, from the corner of Dehra Dun Rd and Dhalwala Bypass Rd, to Uttarkashi (₹300, five hours) and Joshimath (₹400, eight hours), mostly early in the morning, starting from 4am.

Private taxis can be hired from Lakshman Jhula, Ram Jhula, and in between the main and yatra (pilgrimage) bus stands. Rates to destinations include: Haridwar (₹810, one hour), Dehra Dun (₹1220, 1½ hours), Jolly Grant Airport (₹710, one hour), Uttarkashi (for Gangotri; ₹3570, seven hours), Joshimath (₹5610, nine hours) and Almora (₹7200, 10 hours). For long-distance trips you may find a cheaper rate by asking around at travel agents and guesthouses. Vikrams (large autorick-shaws) charge ₹400 to make the trip to Haridwar.

TRAIN

Very few trains run from Rishikesh itself, so your best bet is to take a bus or taxi to the railway station in Haridwar and hop on board there. Bookings, even for trains from Haridwar, can be made at the railway station in Rishikesh, or at travel agents around Lakshman Jhula and Swarg Ashram (for a fee).

Getting Around

Shared vikrams run from the downtown Ghat Rd junction up past Ram Jhula (₹10 per person) and the High Bank turn-off to Lakshman Jhula. To hire the entire vikram from downtown to Lakshman Jhula should cost ₹80 to 'upside' – the top of the hill on which the Lakshman Jhula area sits – and ₹100 to 'downside' – closer to the bridge. From Ram Jhula to High Bank or Lakshman Jhula is ₹40.

To get to the eastern bank of the Ganges you either need to walk across one of the suspension bridges or take the ferry (one way/return ₹10/15; ☎ 7.30am-6.15pm) from Ram Jhula.

On the eastern bank of the Ganges, taxis and share jeeps wait to take passengers to waterfalls and Neelkantha temple (shared/private ₹120/1000), but it's a 16km trip by road to get from one side of the river to the other. Lakshman Jhula to Swarg Ashram costs ₹10 in a shared jeep, or ₹80 if you don't wish to share.

Bicycles (per day ₹100), scooters (per day ₹300) and motorcycles (per day ₹400 to ₹700) can be hired around the Lakshman Jhula area. There are no actual shops – rent from guys on the street or ask at guesthouses.

BUSES FROM RISHIKESH

The following buses depart from the main bus stand (A) or the GMOU (yatra) bus stand (B). The latter leave when full.

DESTINATION	FARE (₹)	DURATION (HOUR)	FREQUENCY
Badrinath	420	12	5am
Dehra Dun (A)	51	1½	half-hourly

HARIDWAR

☎ 01334 / POP 225,235 / ELEV 249M

Propitiously located at the point where the Ganges emerges from the Himalaya, Haridwar (also called Hardwar) is Uttarakhand's holiest Hindu city, and pilgrims arrive here in droves to bathe in the fast-flowing Ganges. The sheer number of people gathering around Har-ki-Pairi Ghat give Haridwar a chaotic but reverent feel. Within the religious hierarchy of India, Haridwar is much more significant than Rishikesh, an hour further north, and every evening the river comes alive with flickering flames as floating offerings are released onto the Ganges. It's especially busy during the yatra season from May to October, and is the site of the annual Magh Mela religious festival.

Haridwar's main street is Railway Rd, becoming Upper Rd, which runs parallel to the Ganges canal (the river proper runs further to the east). Generally only cycle-rickshaws are allowed between Laltarao Bridge and Bhingoda Jhula (Bhingoda Bridge), so vehicles travel around the opposite bank of the river. The alleyways of Bara Bazaar run south of Har-ki-Pairi Ghat.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Har-ki-Pairi Ghat

GHAT

Har-ki-Pairi (The Footstep of God) is where Vishnu is said to have dropped some divine nectar and left behind a footprint. Every evening hundreds of worshippers gather for the ganga aarti. Officials in blue uniforms collect donations and, as the sun sets, bells ring out a rhythm, torches are lit, and leaf baskets with flower petals inside and a candle on top (₹10) are lit and placed on the river to drift away downstream.

Tourists can mingle with the crowd to experience the rituals of an ancient religion that still retains its power in the modern age. Someone may claim to be a priest and help you with your puja before asking for ₹200 or more. If you want to make a donation, it's best to give to a uniformed collector.

The best times to visit the ghat are early morning or just before dusk.

Mansa Devi & Chandi Devi Temples

HINDU TEMPLE

Take the cable car (return ₹58; ☀ 7am-7pm Apr-Oct, 8am-6.30pm Nov-Mar) to the crowded hill-top temple of Mansa Devi, a wish-fulfilling goddess. The path to the cable car is lined with stalls selling packages of prasad (a food offering used in religious ceremonies) to bring to the goddess on the hill. You can walk up (1.5km) but beware of prasad-stealing monkeys.

Many visitors and pilgrims combine this with another cable car (return ₹102; ☀ 8am-6pm) up Neel Hill, 4km southeast of Haridwar, to Chandi Devi Temple. The temple was built by Raja Suchet Singh of Kashmir in 1929.

Pay ₹210 at Mansa Devi and you can ride both cable cars and take an AC coach between the two temples. Photography is forbidden inside the shrines.

Mohan's Adventure Tours

ADVENTURE TOUR

☎ 9412022966, 9837100215; www.mohansadventure.in; Railway Rd; ☀ 8am-10.30pm) Sanjeev Mehta of Mohan's Adventure Tours can organise any kind of tour, including trekking, fishing, birdwatching, cycling, motorcycling and rafting. An accomplished wildlife photographer, he specialises in five-hour safaris (₹2350 per person with two or more, singles pay ₹2950) within Rajaji National Park. Sanjeev also runs overnight trips to Corbett Tiger Reserve (from ₹9950). Tours operate year-round.

🛏 Sleeping

Haridwar has loads of hotels catering to Hindu pilgrims. The busiest time of year is the yatra season from April to November – outside this you should have no problem finding a room at discounts of 20% to 50%.

Jassa Ram Rd and the other alleys running off Railway Rd have plenty of budget hotels, and although some of the fancy foyers and neon signs may raise your hopes, none are great. Rishikesh has far superior budget accommodation.

Down by the ghats are a number of high-rise hotels that have good views but worse-than-average rooms.

Hotel Arjun

HOTEL $

☎ 01334-220409; www.hotelarjun.com; Jassa Ram Rd; r with/without AC from ₹700/500; 📶 📶) Currently the best of the budget choices, the Arjun beats its neighbours for cleanliness and comfort. Some rooms have balconies. Most have their quirks, though – one a broken TV, another a dead overhead light – so take a look at a few if you can. It's walking distance from the train and bus stations.

Hotel La Casa

HOTEL $$

(☎ 01334-221197; www.lacasa-hotels.in; Bilkeshwar Rd, opposite Gurdwara; r from ₹2000; 🏠) One of Haridwar's few solid midrange choices, La Casa boasts some of the least scuffed rooms in town. It strives for character, with splashes of colour, tasteful furnishings and modern bathrooms. In all, good value (though not quite as nice as it looks on the hotel website).

Bhaj-Govindam

HOTEL $$

(☎ 01334-261682; www.bhajgovindam.com; Upper Rd; r from ₹1200; 🏠) About 100m north of Bhimgoda Jhula, Bhaj-Govindam is the most peaceful hotel in town, set around a grassy garden, with river frontage on the banks of the Ganges. Rooms are comfortable, suites are huge and some have new bathroom fixtures. Cleanliness can be variable. Fortunately, prices are negotiable.

★ Haveli Hari Ganga

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 01334-226443; www.havelihariganga.com; 21 Ram Ghat; r ₹6450-8600; ㊦ ㊧) Hidden away in Bara Bazaar, but right on the Ganges, this superb 1918 haveli (traditional, ornately decorated residence) is Haridwar's finest hotel. Interior courtyards and marble floors give it a regal charm. It's worth shelling out extra for a Ganges View room, with an airy balcony overlooking the river.

Room rates include breakfast, steam bath, yoga and the hotel's own ganga aarti on its private ghat. A rooftop ayurvedic health spa offers treatments. It's hard to find, so call ahead for a pick-up.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Being a holy city, only vegetarian food and nonalcoholic drinks are available.

★ Prakash Lok

LASSI

(Bara Bazaar; lassis ₹40; ☀ 10am-12am) Don't miss a creamy lassi at this Haridwar institution, famed for its ice-cold, best-you'll-ever-taste lassis served in tin cups. Anyone in the Bara Bazaar can point you to it.

Hoshiyar Puri

INDIAN $

(Upper Rd; mains ₹65-150; ☀ 11am-4pm & 7pm-4am) Established in 1937, this place still has a loyal (and well-deserved) local following. The dhal makhani (black lentils and red kidney beans with cream and butter), la-cha paratha (layered fried bread), aloo gobi (potato-and-cauliflower curry) and kheer (creamy rice pudding) are lip-smackingly good.

Big Ben Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(Railway Rd, Hotel Ganga Azure; mains ₹85-200; ☎8am-10.30pm) Watch the passing parade through the big windows and enjoy some of Haridwar's best food in this restaurant of mirrors, soft music and polite staff. It's a solid choice for breakfast, with good coffee. There's wi-fi in the adjoining lobby.

Haveli Hari Ganga Restaurant

INDIAN $$$

(☎01334-226443; www.havelihariganga.com; 21 Ram Ghat; lunch thali ₹350, dinner buffet ₹450; ☎1-3pm & 7.30-10pm) The restaurant at this lovely heritage hotel is the classiest in Haridwar. Come for thali lunch or buffet dinner.

i Information

There are a number of internet places on Railway Rd near the train station and down the side lanes, but most have only one or two terminals.

GMVN Tourist Office (Garhwal Mandal Vikas Nigam; ☎01334-224240; Railway Rd; ☎10am-5pm Mon-Sat)

Main Post Office (Upper Rd; ☎10am-6pm Mon-Sat)

Rishikul Ayurvedic Hospital (☎01334-221003; Railway Rd) A long-established medical college and hospital with a good reputation.

Sai Forex (Upper Rd; ☎10am-2pm & 4-9pm) Changes cash and travellers cheques for a commission of 1%. Also has internet for ₹40 per hour.

Uttarakhand Tourism Office (☎01334-265304; Railway Rd, Rahi Motel; ☎10am-5pm Mon-Sat)

i Getting There & Away

Haridwar is well connected by bus and train, but book ahead for trains during the pilgrimage season (May to October).

BUS

Private deluxe buses run to Delhi (₹400), Agra (seat/sleeper ₹450/550), Jaipur (₹450/550) and Pushkar (₹550/650). Some leave from a bus stand around the corner from the GMVN tourist office by the gurdwara (Sikh temple). It's best to ask the travel agent who makes your booking where to find your bus.

TAXI

The main taxi stand (Railway Rd) is outside the train station. Destinations include Chilla (for Rajaji National Park, ₹570), Rishikesh (₹820, one hour) and Dehra Dun (₹1320), but it's usually possible to arrange a taxi for less than these official rates. You can hire private jeep Sumos to go to one or all of the pilgrimage sites on the Char Dham between April and October. One-way rates to single temples range from ₹6550 to ₹7550; a nine-day tour of all four is ₹22,600. Taxis to Jolly Grant Airport cost ₹1120.

i Getting Around

Cycle-rickshaws cost ₹10 for a short distance and ₹30 for longer hauls, such as from the Haridwar train station to Har-ki-Pairi. Shared vikrams run up and down Railway Rd (₹10) and all the way to Rishikesh (₹40, one hour) from Upper Rd at Laitarao Bridge, but for that trip buses are more comfortable. Hiring a taxi for three hours to tour the local temples and ashrams costs around ₹800; an autorickshaw costs ₹350.

RAJAJI NATIONAL PARK

ELEV 300-1000M

Unspoilt Rajaji National Park (www.rajajinationalpark.in; Indian/foreigner per day ₹150/600, vehicle fee ₹250/500; ☺ 15 Nov–15 Jun), covering 820 sq km in the forested foothills near Haridwar, is best known for its wild elephants, numbering around 600 at last count.

As well as elephants, the park contains some 250 leopards and 11 tigers, and at the time of writing, Rajaji was under consideration for being declared an official tiger reserve. These big cats, which are not easily seen, have thousands of chital (spotted deer) and hundreds of sambars (India's largest species of deer) to feed on. The park is also home to a handful of rarely seen sloth bears and some 300 species of birds.

Rajaji's forests include the traditional winter territory of more than 1000 families of nomadic Van Gujjar buffalo herders – most of whom have been evicted from the park against their will. For more on this and other issues affecting the unique Van Gujjar tribe, visit www.sophiaindia.org.

The village of Chilla, 13km northeast of Haridwar, is the base for visiting the park. At the Forest Ranger's office, close to the tourist guesthouse at Chilla, you can pick up a brochure, pay entry fees and organise a jeep. These take up to eight people and cost ₹1100 for the standard safari (plus a ₹500 entry fee for the vehicle). Elephant rides are no longer offered at Rajaji.

Before visiting, contact the GMVN tourist office (p425) in Haridwar and Mohan's Adventure Tours (p422), which offers abridged safaris even when the park is officially closed. These five-hour trips (₹2350 per person) include a short safari, during which you'll hopefully see a parade of wild elephants, and maybe visit a Van Gujjar forest camp.

i Sleeping & Eating

Chilla Guesthouse (☎ 0138-266678; www.gmvl.com; r from ₹2090; 🍷) is the GMVN rest house and the most comfortable place to stay in Chilla. The guesthouse has a good restaurant and a pleasant garden.

You can stay inside the park at one of the rest houses run by the Forest Department. For information and reservations, contact the director at the Rajaji National Park Office (☎ 0135-2621669; Dehra Dun). Mohan's Adventure Tours can also make bookings.

Also within the park, the Camp King Elephant (☎ 9871604712; cottage incl full board, Indian/foreigner from ₹8500/US$240) resort has solar electricity, private bathrooms, full meal service and optional jeep tours.

i Getting There & Away

Buses to Chilla (₹30, one hour) leave the GMOU bus stand in Haridwar every hour from 7am to 2pm. The last return trip leaves Chilla at 5.30pm. Taxis charge ₹650 one way for the 13km journey.

DEHRA DUN

☎ 0135 / POP 578,420 / ELEV 640M

Perhaps best known for the institutions the British left behind – the huge Forest Research Institute Museum, the Indian Military Academy, the Wildlife Institute of India and the Survey of India – the capital of Uttarakhand is a hectic, congested city sprawling in the Doon Valley between the Himalayan foothills and the Siwalik Range. Most travellers merely pass through on their way to nearby Rishikesh, Haridwar, Mussoorie or Himachal Pradesh, but if you have time, there's enough to do here to make Dehra Dun worth a stop.

i Sights & Activities

Mindrolling Monastery

MONASTERY

(☎ 0135-2640556; www.mindrolling.org) The region around Dehra Dun is home to a thriving Tibetan Buddhist community, mainly focused on this monastery, about 10km south of the centre in Clement Town. Everything here is on a grand scale: at over 60m tall its Great Stupa (☺ 5am-9pm) FREE is believed to be the world's tallest stupa and contains a series of shrine rooms displaying relics, murals and Tibetan art. Presiding over the monastery is the impressive 35m-high gold Sakyamuni Buddha Statue, dedicated to the Dalai Lama.

The streets around the monastery are lined with Tibetan cafes. Unfortunately, due to new government regulations, foreigners are no longer allowed to stay overnight in Clement Town – but the manager of the Devaloka House hotel on the monastery grounds is willing to bend the rules. Simple rooms cost ₹350; the bed sheets have seen better days. Take vikram 5 from the city centre (₹10). An autorickshaw costs about ₹150.

Forest Research Institute Museum

NOTABLE BUILDING

(☎0135-2759382; www.icfre.org; admission ₹10, guide ₹50; ☀9.30am-4.30pm Mon-Fri) The prime attraction of this museum is the building itself. Set in a 5-sq-km park, this grand remnant of the Raj era – where most of India's forest officers are trained – is larger than Buckingham Palace. Built between 1924 and 1929, this red-brick colossus has Mughal towers, perfectly formed arches and Roman columns in a series of quadrangles edged by elegant cloisters. Six huge halls have displays on Indian forestry that look like leftovers from a middle-school science fair.

Highlights include beautiful animal, bird and plant paintings by Afshan Zaidi, exhibits on the medicinal uses of trees, and a cross-section of a 700-year-old deodar tree. A return autorickshaw from the city centre, including waiting time, costs around ₹300. Or take vikram 6 from Connaught Place and get out at the institute's entry gate.

Ram Rai Darbar

MAUSOLEUM

(Paltan Bazaar; ☀dawn-dusk) FREE The unique mausoleum of Ram Rai, the errant son of the seventh Sikh guru, Har Rai, is made of white marble, with paintings covering the walls, archways, and ceilings. Four smaller tombs in the garden courtyard are those of Ram Rai's four wives. A communal lunch of dhal, rice and chapatis is offered to anyone who wants it, for a donation.

Survey of India Museum

MUSEUM

(Survey Chowk; ☀10.30am-5pm Mon-Fri) FREE Instruments used to accomplish the monumental task of mapping India in the 19th century are displayed here, including some designed especially for the mission by its leader, George Everest. See beautiful brass transits and scopes, plus a bar partly of iron, partly of brass, which allowed surveyors to compensate for inaccuracies in measurements caused by the expansion and contraction of their instruments in heat and cold. The museum is not officially opened to the public – you'll need permission to visit.

To get permission, go to the Surveyor General's office at the Survey of India Compound in Harthibarkala. There, you'll have to write a brief letter explaining why you want to view the collection. Permits are given only to those with an academic or professional interest in the subject – like a geography student or a historian – but proof of your vocation or college major isn't demanded.

Tapkeshwar Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

The temple is about 5km north of the centre. Take a rickshaw for ₹300 (round trip).

Sleeping

There are plenty of grungy cheapies along the Haridwar road outside the train station, some charging as little as ₹350 a double, but the better places can be found along Gandhi Rd and Rajpur Rd.

Samar Niwas Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎0135-2740299; www.sarniwas.com; M-16 Chanderlok Colony; d ₹1200-1800; ☹☹) This charming four-room guesthouse, in a peaceful residential area just off Rajpur Rd, is as welcoming as it gets. The owners are descendants of the Tehri royal family, but the rulers of the house seem to be the friendly pugs that roam the comfortable lounge-cum-lobby. Rooms are well appointed, but cleanliness is less than meticulous.

Moti Mahal Hotel

HOTEL $$

(☎0135-2651277; www.motimahal.net; 7 Rajpur Rd; s/d from ₹995/1495, with AC from ₹1595/1895; ☹☹) Centrally located, Moti Mahal offers spotless rooms, most with air-con, and upholstered furnishings add a touch of class. Those facing Rajpur Road suffer from a bit of street noise, but not badly. Wi-fi is only in the lobby and the excellent restaurant (p429).

Hotel President

HOTEL $$$

(☎0135-2657082; www.hotelpresidentdehradun.com; Rajpur Rd, 6 Astley Hall; s from ₹3600, d from ₹3975; ☹) This Dehra Dun institution is one of the classiest hotels in town, despite being sandwiched within the complex of shops, restaurants and fast-food spots called Astley Hall. Rooms are thoroughly modern and even the least expensive have fridges, safes and complimentary slippers. There's a good restaurant, a coffee shop and the Polo Bar.

Eating & Drinking

Dehra Dun has an eclectic range of restaurants, but by far the best hunting ground is along Rajpur Rd, northeast of the clock tower. The Astley Hall precinct is popular for fast food and has a couple of upmarket bars.

★ Chetan Puriwallah INDIAN $
(near Hanuman Chowk, Paltan Bazaar; ₹15 per puri; ☺9am-4pm) If you're looking for that authentic (and delicious) local dining experience, you've found it. Unlimited thalis are served on plates made of leaves in this no-frills joint, and you just pay for the puri (deep-fried dough). The sweet gulab jamun (deep-fried dough in rose-flavoured syrup) is said to be some of the best in town.

Kumar Vegetarian & South Indian Restaurant INDIAN $$
(15B Rajpur Rd; mains ₹150-220; ☺11am-4pm, 7-10.30pm) This popular, sparkling clean restaurant serves what surely comes close to the Platonic Form of a masala dosa (curried vegetables inside a crisp pancake), which is the main reason locals flock here. Other Indian dishes are also cooked to near perfection and even the Chinese food is quite good. The waitstaff are very attentive.

Moti Mahal SOUTH INDIAN $$
(7 Rajpur Rd; mains ₹160-425; ☺9am-10.45pm; 📞) Locals consistently rate Moti Mahal as one of the best midrange diners along Rajpur Rd. An interesting range of vegetarian and nonvegetarian includes Goan fish curry and Afghani murg (chicken), along with traditional South Indian fare and Chinese food.

Polo Bar BAR
(Rajpur Rd, 6 Astley Hall; ☺11am-3pm & 7-11pm) One of the more salubrious of Dehra Dun's many hotel bars, this one is at Hotel President and is newly renovated.

Barista CAFE
(15A Rajpur Rd; drinks & snacks ₹70-190; ☺9am-11pm) A popular modern cafe with an excellent bookshop in back.

Shopping

Among the best bookshops in town are Natraj Booksellers (17 Rajpur Rd; ☺10am-8pm Mon-Sat), which gives plenty of shelf to local author Ruskin Bond, and English Book Depot (☎0135-2655192; www.englishbookdepot.com; 15 Rajpur Rd; ☺10am-1.30pm & 2.30-8pm), attached to the Barista coffee shop.

★ Paltan Bazaar MARKET
The congested but relatively traffic-free area through Paltan Bazaar, running south from the clock tower, is a popular spot for an evening stroll. Here you can pick up everything from cheap clothing and souvenirs to camping and trekking gear.

Survey of India Map Counter MAPS
(off New Cantonment Rd; maps ₹20-70; ☺9am-5.30pm Mon-Fri) The Survey of India Map Counter in Harthibarkala is mostly good at telling you which topographical maps you're not allowed to buy. However, you can pick up trekking maps that aren't bad for getting from village to village, but are worthless for backcountry navigation.

Information

The banks located on Rajpur Rd exchange travellers cheques and currency, and there are numerous ATMs that accept foreign credit cards.

3G Cybercafe (Meedo Arcade, Rajpur Rd; ₹20/hr; ☺8am-10pm) Has air conditioning.

Ambulance (☎0135-6673666) Affiliated with Max Super Specialty Hospital

GMVN Office (74/1 Rajpur Rd; ☺10am-5pm Mon-Sat) For some of the most helpful information on trekking in Garwhal, whether booking a GMVN trip or going independently, talk to Satish Khanduri on the ground floor of the tourism office (☎9568006696).

Main Post Office (Rajpur Rd; ☺10am-5pm Mon-Sat)

Max Super Specialty Hospital (☎0135-6673000; Mussoorie Diversion Rd) North of centre.

Netzone (per hour ₹25; ☺10am-8pm) One block southeast of the clock tower; also changes cash and travellers cheques.

Police (☎0135-2653333; Gandhi Rd)

Uttarakhand Tourism Office (☎0135-2653217; 45 Gandhi Rd; ☺10am-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd Sat of month) Located at the Hotel Drona – call for info about the airport shuttle.

For any other info, the Tourism Office is barely more helpful than the attached office of KMVN, which should offer information about Kumaon, but is utterly useless.

Getting There & Away

AIR

A few airlines (Jet Airways, SpiceJet and Air India) fly daily between Delhi and Dehra Dun's Jolly Grant Airport – about 20km east of the city on the Haridwar road – with fares starting at around ₹3200 each way. A taxi to/from the airport costs ₹600, or take the AC coach for ₹100 (call the Uttarakhand Tourism office (p429) for times).

BUSES FROM DEHRA DUN

The following buses depart from the Interstate Bus Terminal (ISBT).

DESTINATION	FARE (₹)	DURATION (HOUR)	FREQUENCY
Chandigarh	230	6	hourly btwn 4am & 10pm
Delhi (AC-Volvo)	240/470 ordinary/AC	7	11 daily
Delhi (standard/deluxe)	257/400	7	hourly btwn 4am & 10pm
Dharamsala	750	14	5pm
Haridwar	60	2	half-hourly
Haldwani (for Nainital & Almora)	300	10	hourly
Manali	500	14	6.45am, 3pm, 10.15pm
Ramnagar	289	7	7 daily
Rishikesh	47	1½	half-hourly
Shimla	440	10	5 daily

BUS

Nearly all long-distance buses arrive and depart from the huge Interstate Bus Terminal (ISBT), 5km south of the city centre. To get there take a local bus (₹5), vikram 5 (₹10) or an autorickshaw (₹100). A few buses to Mussoorie leave from here but most depart from the Mussoorie bus stand (₹56, 1½ hours, half-hourly between 6am and 8pm) next to the train station. Some head to Mussoorie's Picture Palace bus stand while others go to the Library bus stand across town. There are also buses from the Mussoorie bus stand to Barkot – for Yamnotri – (₹218, five hours, 5.30am, 7.30am and 12pm); Purola – for Har-Ki-Dun – (₹227, seven hours, 6.30am and 1.30pm); Uttarkashi (₹250, seven hours, 5.30am) and Joshimath (₹480, 12 hours, 5.30am).

Private buses to Joshimath (₹370, 12 hours, 7am) and Uttarkashi (via Mussoorie ₹200, seven hours, 7am and 1.30pm; or via Chamba ₹280, eight hours, 8am and 12.30pm) leave from the Parade Ground bus stand.

TAXI

A taxi to Mussoorie costs ₹710, while a share taxi should cost ₹140 per person; both can be found in front of the train station. Taxis charge ₹1200 to Haridwar or Lakshman Jhula in Rishikesh.

TRAIN

Dehra Dun is well connected by train to Delhi, and there are a handful of services to Lucknow, Varanasi, Chennai (Madras) and Kolkata (Calcutta). Of the multiple daily trains from Dehra Dun to Delhi, the best are the expresses: Shatabdi (chair/executive ₹730/1390, six hours, train 12018, 5pm); Janshabadi (2nd class/chair ₹160/515, six hours, train 12056, 5.10am) and Nanda Devi Express (3AC/2AC/1st Class ₹590/280/1365, six hours, train 12206, 11.30pm).

The overnight Dehradun–Amritsar Express (sleeper/3A/1st Class ₹270/725/850, 12 hours) to Amritsar departs nightly at 7.40pm.

Getting Around

Hundreds of eight-seater vikrams (₹5 to ₹10 per trip) race along five fixed routes (look at the front for the number). Most useful is vikram 5, which runs between the ISBT stand, the train station and Rajpur Rd, and as far south as the Tibetan colony at Clement Town. Vikram 1 runs up and down Rajpur Rd above Gandhi Park, and also to Harhibarkala (check with the driver to see which route he's on). Autorickshaws cost ₹30 for a short distance, ₹120 from ISBT to the city centre or ₹160 per hour for touring around the city.

MUSSOORIE

☑ 0135 / POP 29,500 / ELEV 2000M

Perched on a ridge 2km high, the 'Queen of Hill Stations' vies with Nainital as Uttarakhand's favourite holiday destination. When the mist clears, views of the green Doon Valley and the distant white-capped Himalayan peaks are superb, and in the hot months the cooler temperatures and fresh mountain air make a welcome break from the plains below.

Established by the British in 1823, Mussoorie became hugely popular with the Raj set. The ghosts of that era linger on in the architecture of the churches, libraries, hotels and summer palaces. The town is swamped with visitors between May and July, when it can seem like a tacky holiday camp for families and honeymooners, but at other times many of the 300 hotels have vacancies and their prices drop dramatically. During monsoon, the town is often shrouded in clouds.

Central Mussoorie consists of two developed areas: Gandhi Chowk (also called Library Bazaar) at the western end, and the livelier Kulri Bazaar and Picture Palace at the eastern end, linked by the 2km Mall, which is still dominated by pedestrians but has sadly seen a notable increase in vehicle traffic and noise. Beyond Kulri Bazaar a narrow road leads 1.5km to Landour Bazaar.

Gun Hill

VIEWPOINT

From midway along the Mall, a cable car (return ₹75; ☀ 8am-10pm May-Jul & Oct, 10am-7pm Aug-Sep & late Nov-Apr) runs up to Gun Hill (2530m), which, on a clear day, has views of several big peaks. A steep path also winds up to the viewpoint. The most popular time to go up is an hour or so before sunset. There's a minicarnival atmosphere in high season, with kids' rides, food stalls, magic shops and honeymooners having their photos taken in Garhwali costumes.

Activities

Walks

When the clouds don't get in the way, the walks around Mussoorie offer great views. Camel's Back Rd is a popular 3km promenade from Kulri Bazaar to Gandhi Chowk, and passes a rock formation that looks like a camel. There are a couple of good mountain viewpoints along the way, and you can ride a rickshaw (one way/return ₹150/300) along the trail if you start from the Gandhi Chowk end. An enjoyable, longer walk (5km one way) starts at the Picture Palace Cinema, goes past Union Church and the clock tower to Landour and the Sisters' Bazaar area.

West of Gandhi Chowk, a more demanding walk is to the Jwalaji Temple on Benog Hill (about 20km return) via Cloud's End Hotel. The route passes through thick forest and offers some fine views. Taking a taxi to Cloud's End (₹550) cuts the walk by more than half. A slightly shorter walk is to the abandoned Everest House (16km return), former residence of Sir George Everest, first surveyor-general of India and namesake of the world's highest mountain. You can also take a cycle rickshaw (₹130) to Park Toll, cutting 5km off the distance.

Courses

Landour Language School

LANGUAGE

(☎0135-2631487; www.landourlanguageschool.com; Landour; per hour group/private ₹285/460; ☀Feb-Dec) One of India's leading schools for teaching conversational Hindi at beginner, intermediate and advanced levels. There's an enrolment fee of ₹500, and course books are an extra ₹2000.

Tours

A full day of sightseeing around Mussoorie by taxi costs around ₹3000, including visits to the popular and overdeveloped Kempton Falls, 15km west, and to Dhanolti, a serene spot 25km east, set in deodar forests with Himalayan views.

The GMVN Booth (p433) can organise a number of local bus tours, including to Kempton Falls (three-hour tour ₹125), as well as further reaching full-day tours (from ₹250). Tours can also be booked at the Uttarakhand Tourism Office (p433) on the Lower Mall.

Sleeping

Peak season is summer (May to July) when hotel prices shoot to ridiculous heights. There's a midseason during the honeymoon period around October and November, and over Christmas and New Year, and these are the prices we list unless specified. At other times you should be able to get a bargain.

Budget places are scarce – you'll find some dives near Picture Palace. But many hotels offer budget rates out of season.

Hotel Broadway

HOTEL $

(☎0135-2632243; Camel's Back Rd, Kulri Bazaar; d ₹650-1500) The best of the budget places by a country mile, this historic 1880s wooden hotel with colourful flowerboxes in the windows oozes character. It's in a quiet location but close to the Mall. Cheaper downstairs rooms could use a refresh, but upstairs rooms are nice; the best has sunlit bay windows.

The white Romanesque castle was built in 1836 for a British officer and was bought by the Maharaja of Kasmanda in 1915. The red-carpeted hall has a superb staircase flanked by moth-eaten hunting trophies. All the rooms have charm but the wood-panelled and antique-filled Mahara-ja Room is the royal best.

There's also a separate cottage with six renovated contemporary-style rooms. An excellent restaurant and pretty garden area – open to nonguests – complete the picture.

Hotel Padmini Nivas

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0135-2631093; www.hotel-padmininivas.com; The Mall; d ₹3000-3750, ste ₹4500-5250; @) Built in 1840 by a British colonel, this heritage hotel has real old-fashioned charm.

Large rooms with quaint sun rooms are beautifully furnished; those in the main house are significantly nicer than those in the side building. The dining room, with its antique furniture, is an outstanding feature. The whole place is set on 2 hectares of landscaped gardens.

The Savoy

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0135-2637000; www.fortunehotels/savoy.in; behind Gandhi Chowk; r from ₹11,700) This famous Mussoorie hotel, built in 1902, has recently reopened after undergoing a seven-year renovation. Inside and out, the public spaces are magnificent, imparting a regal aesthetic with none of the run-down air that often infuses historic properties. Bedrooms, however, feel strangely generic and, at the time of research, the reputation of the service wasn't stellar.

Eating & Drinking

Most of Mussoorie's best eating places are at the Kulri Bazaar and Picture Palace end of town. True to the holiday feel there are lots of fast-food places, and most hotels have their own restaurants. There is a Café Coffee Day (Kulri Bazaar; ☎9am-11pm) in Kulri Bazaar and another branch (near Gandhi Chowk; ☎9am-11pm) near Gandhi Chowk.

★Lovely Omelette Centre FAST FOOD $
(The Mall, Kulri Bazaar; mains ₹40-90; ☎9am-9.30pm Wed-Mon) Mussoorie's most famous eatery is also its smallest – a cubbyhole along the Mall that serves what many say are the best omelettes in India. The speciality is the cheese omelette, with chillies, onions and spices, served over toast, but the maestro at the frying pan will whip up a chocolate omelette on request. Opening hours can be unpredictable.

Neelam PUNJABI $$
(Kulri Bazaar; ₹130-280; ☎9am-11pm) Around in one form or another since 1949, Neelam specialises in paneer dishes, and boasts a long list of chicken and lamb. In high season it breaks out the tawa – a heated metal plate, which slow-cooks meat to perfection. The affable manager, Sam, is exceptionally welcoming.

Imperial Square CONTINENTAL $$$
(☎0135-2632632; Gandhi Chowk; mains ₹225-600; ☎7am-11pm; 📺) With huge windows overlooking Gandhi Chowk, Imperial Square scores highly on everything – decor, service and food. The menu emphasises Continental dishes, with long lists of platters and sizzlers, plus big toasted sandwiches. For breakfast you can even have waffles. Upstairs features a tea room-cum-hookah lounge, and the attached hotel (rooms from ₹4500) has excellent rooms with valley views.

Shopping

Mussoorie has a wonderful collection of magic shops, where you can buy cheap but baffling magic tricks and wacky toys – great gifts for kids. The most interesting store is the antiques and miscellany shop run by Vinod Kumar (Clock Tower, Landour Bazaar; ☎10am-7pm), near the clock tower at the bottom of Landour Bazaar – a 10- to 15-minute walk from Picture Palace.

Information

GMVN Booth (☎0135-2631281; library bus stand; ☎9am-6pm) Can book local tours, treks and far-flung rest houses.

Main Post Office (☎0135-2632206; Upper Mall, Kulri Bazaar; ☎9am-5pm Mon-Sat)

Om Cybercafe (off The Mall, Kulri Bazaar; per hour ₹60; ☎10am-9pm) Behind Lovely Omelette Centre (p433).

Trek Himalaya (☎0135-2630491; Upper Mall; ☎11am-9pm) Exchanges major currencies at a fair rate.

Uttarakhand Tourism Office (☎0135-2632863; Lower Mall; ☎10am-5pm Mon-Sat) Near the cable-car station.

BUS

Frequent buses head to Mussoorie (₹56, 1½ hours) from Dehra Dun's Mussoorie bus stand. Some go to the Picture Palace bus stand (☎0135-2632259) while others go to the Library bus stand (☎0135-2632258) at the other end of town – if you know where you're staying, it helps to be on the right bus. There's no direct transport from Mussoorie to Rishikesh or Haridwar – change at Dehra Dun.

To reach the mountain villages of western Garhwal, grab one of the buses passing through Gandhi Chowk. For Yamunotri, hop on a bus to Barkot (₹140, 3½ hours, departs around 6.30am, 8.30am and 1pm), then transfer to another to Janki Chatti (₹60, three hours). A couple of buses go to Puroala (₹200, five hours, departs around 7.30am and 2.30pm). For Uttarkashi, leave from the Tehri bus stand at Landour and change at Chamba, or go to Barkot and transfer there.

TAXI

From taxi stands at both bus stands you can hire taxis to Dehra Dun (₹710) and Rishikesh (₹2200), or Uttarkashi (₹4500). A shared taxi to Dehra Dun should cost ₹140 per person.

TRAIN

The Northern Railway booking agency

(☎ 0135-2632846; Lower Mall, Kulri Bazaar; 🕒 8am-2pm Mon-Sat) books tickets for trains from Dehra Dun and Haridwar.

Getting Around

Central Mussoorie is very walkable – for a hill station, the Mall and Camel's Back Rd are surprisingly flat. Cycle-rickshaws along the Mall cost ₹30, but can only go between Gandhi Chowk and the cable-car station.

THE CHAR DHAM

High in the Garhwali Himalayas sit some of the holiest sites in the Hindu religion – Yamunotri, Gangotri, Kedarnath, and Badrinath – where temples mark the spiritual sources of four sacred rivers: the Yamuna, the Ganges, the Mandakini and the Alaknanda. Together, they make up one of the most important yatra circuits in all of India, known as the char dham (four seats). Every year between April and November, hundreds of thousands of worshippers brave hair-raising mountain roads and high-altitude trails to reach them. Or they did, anyway...

In June 2013, a torrential cloudburst produced an epic flood that swept away entire villages – and thousands of local people and pilgrims. The official death toll was around 6000, but locals insist the real number was closer to 50,000. Since then, many would-be pilgrims have stayed home, afraid that tragedy might repeat itself. The people and government of Uttarakhand are desperately hoping to rebuild confidence in the area's safety, to revive the region's main economic engine. We expect the yatra's popularity will begin to rebound after a few seasons without a major catastrophe.

Even now, travelling to one or more of these temples is a great way to get a feel for the religious pulse of the subcontinent, amid incredible alpine scenery. Numerous buses, share jeeps, porters, ponies and palanquins are on hand for transport, and there's a well-established network of guesthouses, ashrams and government rest houses. As a result, getting to these temples is easy enough without hiring guides or carrying supplies, as long as the roads leading to them aren't blocked by monsoon-inspired landslides. And Gangotri and Badrinath temples can be visited without even having to hike.

Yamunotri

ELEV 3185M

Yamunotri Temple is tucked in a tight gorge close to the source of the Yamuna, Hinduism's second-most sacred river after the Ganges. Yamunotri is the least visited and therefore least developed of the char dham sites, but once you get to the trailhead it's an easy trek in.

The 5km, 1½-hour hike begins at the tiny village of Janki Chatti. At Yamunotri Temple there are several hot-spring pools where you can take a dip, and others where pilgrims cook potatoes and rice as prasad. You'll find plenty of priests to help you make puja for a price. One kilometre beyond the temple, the Yamuna River spills from a frozen lake of ice and glaciers on the Kalinda Parvat mountain at an altitude of 4421m, but this is a very tough climb that requires mountaineering skills.

Across the river from Janki Chatti is the friendly village of Kharsali, which is worth a stroll if you have the time.

Accommodation is available at basic guesthouses or the GMVN tourist lodges in Janki Chatti and Hanuman Chatti.

During peak yatra season (May to June), buses run from Dehra Dun, Mussoorie and Rishikesh to Janki Chatti, but the most frequent transport services originate in Barkot. Buses (three hours, ₹60) depart Barkot for Janki Chatti at 9am, 1pm and 3pm; they make return runs to Barkot at 6am, 8.30am and 2pm. You can find sporadic share jeeps making the same runs (₹80, 2½ hours). A private taxi costs about ₹2000 each way.

Gangotri & Gaumukh Glacier Trek

☎ 01377 / ELEV 3042M

In a remote setting at an altitude of 3042m, Gangotri Temple is one of the holiest places in India. Near the source of the Ganges (known as the Bhagirathi until it reaches Devprayag), the shrine is dedicated to the origin of Hinduism's most sacred river. Nearby is the rock on which Shiva is said to have cushioned the impact of the water in his matted locks as it poured from the heavens, saving the earth from the destructive force of this great gift.

Erected by Gorkha commander Amar Singh Thapa in the 18th century, the temple – for a site of such significance – is surprisingly underwhelming. Unless you're a devout Hindu, to get a real sense of awe you'll probably have to trek from Gangotri to the true source of the river, at Gaumukh, 18km upstream. There, the water flows out of Gangotri Glacier beneath the soaring west face of Bhagirathi Parvat (6856m), with the peak of Shivling (the 6543m 'Indian Matterhorn') towering to the south.

Don't be daunted by the trek – the trail rises gradually and is completely solid. 14km (four to six hours) up the trail, at Bhojbasa (3790m), there's a GMVN Tourist Bungalow (☎01377-222221; Bhojbasa; dm ₹350) and other basic lodging; Gaumukh is 4km (1½ hours) past that. On clear days, the best time to visit the source is early to midafternoon, when it's out of the shadows. Porters (₹500 each way) and horses (one way/return ₹850/1250) can be hired in Gangotri. More ambitious hikers with camping gear often continue to the gorgeous meadow at Tapovan, 6km beyond Gaumukh.

Before trekking to Gaumukh, you must first get a permit, since access is limited to 150 people per day. This can be obtained from the District Forest Office (☎01377-225693; ☀10am-5pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd Sat of month), 3km north of the Uttarkashi bus stand, or from the satellite office above the bus stand at Gangotri, which is open every day from 8am to 10am and 5pm to 7pm. At both places, you'll need to bring a copy of your passport ID page and visa. The permit is valid for two days and costs ₹150/600 per Indian/foreigner (then ₹50/250 for each extra day). Gangotri village has plenty of guesthouses, ashrams and dharamsalas (pilgrims' rest home) charging ₹300 or less per room. When hungry, follow the Indian families to the Hotel Gangaputra Restaurant (mains ₹60-150; ☀7am-11pm), which is busy for a good reason.

At the time of research, buses to and from Gangotri were sporadic and unpredictable. Service may become more regular once road improvements are complete. For now, the best way to get back and forth is by shared jeep (₹200) or private taxi (one way/return ₹3000/4000). To Rishikesh, shared jeeps/private taxis cost ₹400/5000.

Kedarnath

☎01364 / ELEV 3584M

In the epic Mahabharata, after the Pandavas defeated the Dhartarashtras, they sought forgiveness for killing their own family members, as their enemies also happened to be their cousins. Shiva refused, but the Pandavas were relentless in their quest for absolution, so Shiva, in the form of a bull, dove into the ground to elude them. He left his hump behind at Kedarnath, below the source of the sacred Mandakini River, where a magnificent stone temple – built in the 8th century by Guru Shankara – marks the spot. (Other portions of Shiva's bull-form body are worshipped at the other four Panch Kedar shrines, which take some effort to reach but can be visited: the arms at Tungnath, the face at Rudranath, the navel at Madmaheshwar and the hair at Kalpeshwar.)

Tucked at the base of 6970m peaks, 22km from the nearest road, Kedarnath is in the most dramatic location of any of the char dham temples. The puja offered inside, especially around the stone 'hump', is fervent and can be quite intense. The site is so auspicious that pilgrims used to throw themselves from one of the cliffs behind the temple in the hope of instantly attaining moksha (liberation).

Kedarnath was at the epicentre of the devastating flood of 2013. Thousands of people – pilgrims and locals, porters and horse guides, among others – perished here. Much of the village around the temple was destroyed by the raging waters and the huge rocks that washed down from the surrounding slopes. Today, nearly as much reverence is paid to a massive boulder that sits behind the temple – which, incredibly, shielded it from the worst of the onslaught and saved it from collapse – as to the temple itself.

The disaster has significantly altered the experience of visiting Kedarnath, as long swaths of the original trail slid off the mountainside, the base village of Gaurikund was ravaged and the road to it was heavily damaged. At the time of research, the pilgrims' route begins at Sonprayag, from where it is a 22km uphill hike to the temple; six to eight hours by foot or five hours if you hire a pony (₹1800). In Sonprayag, before heading up the trail, you must get a free 'biometric' ID card, then go next door to get your blood pressure tested (we're not sure why...). You then must go a couple doors down to register with the police.

The new route first follows the old road to Gaurikund. Beyond that, the government has set up canteens about every 5km along the trail, where free food and chai are served. If you stay overnight at Kedarnath, the best – and virtually only – place is the GMVN camp, set up about a kilometre before the temple; food and lodging (in a group tent with thin foam pads covering the floor) are free, and GMVN has sleeping bags so there's no imperative to carry your own (though we have no idea how often theirs are cleaned...). If you want to take photos of the sadhus at the temple, bring a pocketful of ₹10 notes.

Reaching Kedarnath by helicopter (₹7200) is becoming an increasingly popular option for Indians, though it doesn't offer the same experience as trekking. Passengers are only able to stay at Kedarnath for about an hour. Advance reservations are recommended. Contact Himalayan Heli Services (☎7895479452; www.himalayanheli.com; Guptkashi-Sonprayag Rd), or go to their office at the heli pad in Sersi, 20km from Guptkashi.

In Sonprayag, basic accommodation is available for ₹200 to ₹400. A handful of better places can be found about 2km before the trailhead, at Sitapur. If you prefer to stay at Guptkashi, the main transit hub, the New Viswanath (☎9720895992; Guptkashi Bus Stand; r from ₹500), at the bus stand, is a good choice; rooms on the 'back side' are quiet and share a terrace with valley views.

To get to Sonprayag, take a shared/private jeep (₹80/1000) from Guptkashi, or a GMOU bus from Rishikesh or Haridwar. From Sonprayag, morning buses run to Rishikesh (₹340, seven hours), Haridwar (₹340, eight hours), Dehradun (₹340, nine hours) and Badrinath (₹340) or take a share/private jeep back to Guptkashi and travel onwards from there.

Badrinath & Mana Village

☎01381 / ELEV 3133M

Basking in a superb setting in the shadow of snow-topped Nilkantha, Badrinath Temple appears almost lost in the tatty village that surrounds it. Sacred to Lord Vishnu, this vividly painted temple is the most easily accessible and popular of the char dham temples. It was founded by Guru Shankara in the 8th century, but the current structure is much more recent. Below the temple are hot springs that reach a scalding 40°C and serve as a laundry for locals.

A scenic 3km walk beyond Badrinath along the Alaknanda River (cross over to the temple side to pick up the path), past fields divided by dry-stone walls, leads to tiny but charismatic Mana Village (you can also take a taxi there for ₹200). The village is crammed with narrow stone laneways and traditional houses of varying designs – some have slate walls and roofs while others are wooden with cute balconies. You can wander around and watch the village ladies knitting colourful jerseys or hauling loads of fodder while the men tend goats or play cards or carom billiards. Carpets, blankets, jerseys, hats and gloves are all on sale.

Just outside the village in a small cave is the tiny, 5000-year-old Vyas Temple. Nearby is Bhima's Rock, a natural rock arch over a river that is said to have been made by Bhima, strongest of the Pandava brothers, whose tale is told in the Mahabharata. The 5km hike along the Alaknanda to the 145m Vasudhara Waterfall has a great reward-to-effort ratio, with views up the valley of the Badrinath massif jutting skywards like a giant fang. The villagers migrate to somewhere warmer – usually Joshimath – between November and April.

Badrinath can easily be visited in a day from Joshimath if you get an early start, but it's worth staying if you also want to see Mana Village and do any hiking. There is a slew of mediocre budget guesthouses lining the main road into town, charging ₹400 to ₹600 per room; they can be loud with pilgrims. Offering among the best value in town are Himgiri Guest House (☎7579257765; Badrinath Village; r ₹500), Narayan Palace Hotel (☎9426358998; www.narayanpalace.com; Badrinath Village; r ₹3600-4500), and Hotel Snow Crest (☎9412082465; www.snowcrest.co.in; Badrinath Village; r ₹4850-6450) – which is Badrinath's most expensive, but has heaters in the rooms. Even in summer, it can be quite cold here.

From the large bus station at the entrance to Badrinath, GMOU buses run to Haridwar (₹350) via Rishikesh (₹320) at 5.30am and Gaurikund (for Kedarnath, ₹255) at 7am, but check scheduled departure times or you may end up stranded. Private buses to Joshimath and beyond leave sporadically throughout the morning. For Joshimath or Govindghat (for Valley of Flowers) try to take a shared jeep around 7am.

UTTARKASHI

📍 01374 / POP 17,120 / ELEV 1158M

Uttarkashi, 155km from Rishikesh and the largest town in northern Garhwal, is a major stop on the road to Gangotri Temple and the Gaumukh Glacier trek. The main bazaar is worth a wander and has all the supplies you might need. A number of outfitters can arrange treks in the region, including to Tapovan (beyond Gangotri/Gaumukh).

There's a State Bank of India ATM in the market.

The town is probably best known for the Nehru Institute of Mountaineering (📍 01374-222123; www.nimindia.net; 🕒 10am-5pm), which trains many of the guides running trekking and mountaineering outfits in India. The centre is across the river from the main market and has a museum and outdoor climbing wall. Basic and advanced mountaineering and adventure courses are open to all – check the website for details and admission information.

Uttarkashi also hosts the annual Makar Sankranti (🌞 Jan) festival in January.

🍴 Sleeping & Eating

There are plenty of hotels and dhabas (snack bars) around the bus stand and in the nearby market.

Monal Guest House

HOTEL $

(📍 01374-222270; www.monaluttarkashi.com; Kot Bungalow Rd; r ₹600-1800; 📍) This hillside hotel feels like a large comfortable house with clean, airy rooms, a big-windowed restaurant and peaceful garden setting. Wing A has a more homely feel than Wing B. It's off the Gangotri road 3km north of town, about 100m from the office that issues permits to Gamukh.

Hotel Govind Palace

HOTEL $

(📍 01374-223815, 9411522058; near bus stand; r from ₹400) One of the best value choices if you have to catch an early morning bus. It has good beds, hot showers and TVs, and the manager GS Bhandari is superhelpful. It also has one of the better restaurants in town.

🚗 Getting There & Away

At the time of research, regular bus services to Gangotri had ceased, but may begin again after road improvements are made. To get there, take a shared/private taxi (₹200/3000, five hours). Buses head to Rishikesh (₹230, seven hours) every half-hour between 6.30am and 2pm. Five daily buses go to Haridwar (₹260, eight hours) and three go to Dehradun (₹260, nine hours). Buses to Srinagar (₹190, eight hours) leave at 5.30am and 8am, and those to Barkot (₹110, five hours) leave regularly until 3pm. In summer, two morning buses run directly to Janki Chatti (₹170, nine hours) for Yamunotri temple. Seats may sell out on some routes, so it's a good idea to buy tickets a day in advance.

JOSHIMATH

📍 01389 / POP 13,860 / ELEV 1875M

As the gateway to Badrinath Temple and Hem Kund, Joshimath sees a steady stream of Hindu and Sikh pilgrims from May to October. And as the base for the Valley of Flowers and Kuari Pass treks, and Auli ski resort, it attracts adventure travellers year-round.

Reached from Rishikesh by a serpentine mountain road, Joshimath is a ramshackle two-street town with erratic power supply and limited places to eat. Although the mountain views are lost from the town itself, it's only a short cab (return ₹500; 🕒 every 20min 8am-6.50pm) ride from here to Auli, which has magnificent vistas of Nanda Devi.

🚶 Activities

To trek the Kuari Pass and other routes in Nanda Devi Sanctuary, you need a permit and a registered guide. There are three excellent operators in town who can organise everything.

Himalayan Snow Runner

OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

(📍 9756813236, 9412082247; www.himalayansnowrunner.com) Highly recommended outfit for trekking (from around ₹3000 per person per day), skiing and adventure activities, with camping gear provided. The owner, Ajay, also takes cultural tours to Bhotia and Garhwali villages, and runs a guesthouse in his home in Mawari village, 5km from Joshimath (rooms ₹1250 to ₹3850).

Adventure Trekking

OUTDOOR ADVENTURE

(📍 9837937948; www.thehimalayanadventures.com; Main Bazaar) Treks of anything from two to 10 days can be arranged here for around US$50 per person per day (with more than one person), as well as white-water rafting, skiing and peak ascents. The owner, Santosh, is helpful and runs a guesthouse on the way up to Auli (rooms ₹1000 to ₹2000).

i GRAB A WINDOW!

If travelling through the hills or mountains, get to buses early to claim a window seat. The landscape, much of which you'll never stop to explore, is gorgeous.

Eskimo Adventures OUTDOOR ADVENTURE
(☎ 9756835647; www.eskimoadventure.com) Offers treks and rock-climbing expeditions from about ₹3000 per day, equipment rental (for trekking and skiing), and white-water rafting trips on the Ganges.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

There are lots of cheap lodgings and a few pricier hotels scattered around town. Joshimath's trekking outfits also operate upmarket homestay-style guesthouses that are worth considering. Several dhabas in the main bazaar serve similar vegetarian thalis and dosas from ₹30 to ₹100.

Hotel New Kamal HOTEL $
(☎ 01389-221891; Main Market; r ₹400) Small and clean with bucket hot water and TVs; one of the better cheapies in the town centre.

Hotel Kamet HOTEL $
(☎ 01389-222155; Main Market; r ₹500, annex ₹800-1600) Aim for the annex in the back, with newer rooms that are worth a few more rupees – but look at a few if you can, as each has unique flaws.

Malari Inn HOTEL $$
(☎ 01389-222257; www.hotel-malari-inn.weebly.com; Main Market; r ₹1800-3500) This is the best place in Joshimath. Standard rooms are basic but spacious and clean; you pay more for more amenities, a fatter mattress and a balcony with valley views. All rooms have geysers. Discounts are offered outside peak season (May through to September).

Auli D's Food Plaza MULTICUISINE $$
(Main Market; mains ₹70-450; ☎ 7am-10pm) Featuring a full menu of Indian, Chinese and Continental food, including veg and nonveg choices, this 1st-floor restaurant has plastic tablecloths and covered seats, and feels like a banquet hall.

i Information

There's a GMVN Tourist Office (☎ 01389-222181; ☎ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) located just north of the town (follow the Tourist Rest House sign off Upper Bazaar Rd), and there's a State Bank of India ATM. Tour companies have internet services.

i Getting There & Away

Although the main road up to Joshimath is maintained by the Indian army, and a hydroelectric plant on the way to Badrinath has improved that road, the area around Joshimath is inevitably prone to landslides, particularly in the rainy season from mid-June to mid-September.

The best way to get to Badrinath/Govindghat (for Valley of Flowers and Hem Kund) is by shared jeep (₹100/50), leaving from the Badrinath taxi stand at the far end of Upper Bazaar Rd. Hiring the whole jeep costs ₹1400. A few buses (₹65) leave throughout the day from the same place.

Buses run from Joshimath to Rishikesh (₹360, 10 hours) and Haridwar (₹395, 11½ hours), at 4am, 4.30am, 6am and 7am, departing from the tiny GMOU booth (Upper Bazaar Rd; ☎ 4am-8pm), where you can also book tickets. From the main jeep stand, private buses leave occasionally for Chamoli (₹75, two hours) and Karanprayag (₹130, four hours), with some continuing to Rishikesh.

To get to the eastern Kumaon region, take any bus or shared taxi to Chamoli then transfer onward to Karanprayag, from where a series of local buses and share jeeps can take you along the beautiful road towards Kausani, Bageshwar and Almora. You may have to change several times along the way. Transport winds down in late afternoon, so get an early start.

AROUND JOSHIMATH

Auli

(☎ 01389 / ELEV 3048M)

Rising above Joshimath, 14km by road – and only 4km by the gondola-style cable car – Auli is India's premier ski resort. But you don't have to visit in winter to enjoy the awesome views of Nanda Devi (India's second-highest peak) from the top of the cable-car station.

As a ski resort, Auli is hardly spectacular, with gentle 5km-long slopes, one 500m rope tow (₹100 per trip) that runs beside the main slope, and an 800m chairlift (₹200) that connects the upper and lower slopes. The snow is consistently good, though, and the setting is superb. The season runs from January to March, and equipment hire and instruction can be arranged here or in Joshimath.

The state-of-the-art cable car (p437), India's longest, links Joshimath to the upper slopes above Auli. There's a cafe, of sorts, at the top, serving hot chai and tomato soup.

The Clifftop Club (☎7417936606; www.clifftopclubauli.com; Auli; studio ₹11,600, ste ₹16,250) wouldn't look out of place in the Swiss Alps, with its solid timber interior finish, cosy atmosphere and spacious rooms, some with views of Nanda Devi. Meals and all-inclusive ski packages, including equipment, are available.

If on a tighter budget, stay at the surprisingly good GMVN Tourist Rest House (☎01389-223208; www.gmvl.com; dm ₹280, r ₹1650-4400, incl breakfast) at the start of the chairlift. There's also the unique Devi Darshan (☎9719316777; www.mountainshepherds.com; r from ₹3650 incl meals), which has a restaurant and common room with full-on Nanda Devi views, though bedrooms are dark.

VALLEY OF FLOWERS & HEM KUND

British mountaineer Frank Smythe stumbled upon the Valley of Flowers in 1931. 'In all my mountain wandering,' he wrote, 'I have not seen a more beautiful valley where the human spirit may find repose'. The bug-yals (high-altitude meadows) of tall wild-flowers are a glorious sight on a sunny day, rippling in the breeze, and framed by mighty 6000m mountains that have glaciers and snow decorating their peaks all year.

The 300 species of flowers make this World Heritage Site a unique and valuable pharmaceutical resource. Unfortunately, most flowers bloom during the monsoon season in July and August, when the rains make access difficult and hazardous. There's a widespread misconception that the valley isn't worth visiting outside peak flower season, but even without its technicolour carpet it's still ridiculously beautiful. And it's more likely to be sunny.

To reach the 87-sq-km Valley of Flowers National Park (Indian/foreigner up to 3 days ₹40/600, subsequent days ₹20/175; ☀7am-5pm Jun-Oct, last entry 2pm) first requires a full-day hike from Govindghat to the village of Ghangaria (also called Govinddham), less than 1km from the park. The fabled valley begins 2km uphill from the ticket office and continues for another 5km. Tracks are easy to follow.

A tougher hike from Ghangaria involves joining the hundreds of Sikh pilgrims toiling up to the 4300m Hem Kund, the sacred lake surrounded by seven peaks where Sikh guru Gobind Singh is believed to have meditated in a previous life. Ponies (₹400) are available if you prefer to ride up the 6km zigzag trail.

The trek to Ghangaria is a scenic but strenuous 14km uphill from Govindghat, which takes five to seven hours. You can

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

TUNGNATH & CHANDRISILLA

One of the best day hikes in Uttarakhand, the trail to Tungnath Mandir (3680m) and Chandrisilla Peak (4000m) features a sacred Panch Kedar temple and a stunning Himalayan panorama.

The trail starts at Chopta, a small village with no electricity, which is found on the winding road between Chamoli (south of Joshimath) and Kund (south of Gaurikund). A well-paved path switchbacks 3.5km uphill, gaining 750m in elevation, to Tungnath, the highest Shiva temple in the world. A dirt trail continues 1.5km further to the top of Chandrisilla. From the summit, the Garhwali and Kumaoni Himalayas stretch out before you, with awesome vistas of major mountains including Nanda Devi, Trishul and the Kedarnath group. Start early before the clouds move in, or head up in the afternoon, stay at one of the spartan guesthouses around Tungnath and hit Chandrisilla for sunrise. There's basic accommodation in Chopta: Hotel Neelkanth (☎7500139051, 7351442200; r from ₹400) has the best rooms, but Hotel Rajkamal (r ₹200) is the friendliest.

The drive from Chamoli to Chopta is a worthwhile diversion in itself, as it traverses steeply terraced hillsides dotted with rural villages before entering a lushly forested musk-deer sanctuary pierced by dramatic cliffs.

TREKKING THE HIMALAYA

There are many sublime trekking routes in Uttarakhand. Here are details on a few, listed from west to east. For more information or more options, pick up Lonely Planet's Trekking in the Indian Himalaya or contact GMVN in Dehradun or local trekking outfitters.

Har-ki-Dun Valley Trek

The wonderfully remote Har-ki-Dun Valley (3510m), within Govind Wildlife Sanctuary & National Park (Indian/foreigner up to 3 days ₹150/600, subsequent days ₹50/250), is a botanical paradise criss-crossed by glacial streams, surrounded by pristine forests and snowy peaks. You might be lucky enough to glimpse the elusive snow leopard above 3500m.

The three-day, 38km trail to Har-Ki-Dun begins at Sankri (also called Saur), where the best place to stay is the new Wild Orchid Inn (☎9411500044; www.wildorchidin@gmail.com; Sankri; s/d ₹600/800). There are very basic GMVN Tourist Bungalows at Sankri and along the way in the villages of Taluka and Osla, but at the valley itself you have to stay in the Forest Department rest house or bring a tent. You can cut a day off the hike by taking a share jeep to Taluka and starting from there. A side trip to Jamdar Glacier takes another day. The trek can be busy during June and October.

A couple of reputable guides work out of Sankri – Chain Singh and Bhagat Singh – who run the Har Ki Dun Protection & Mountaineering Association (☎9458909022, 9410134589; www.harkidun.org). In addition to outfitting trips to Har-ki-dun, they can take you to the unique villages of the Rupin and Supin Valleys. They also lead treks from Sankri to the Baspa Valley in Himachal Pradesh and along other beautiful routes. Make arrangements in advance by email if possible – these guys are busy!

To get to Sankri, take a direct bus from Gandhi Chowk in Mussoorie or from Dehra Dun's Mussoorie Bus Stand – or hop onto a series of buses and shared or private jeeps until you get there.

Kuari Pass Trek

Also known as the Curzon Trail (though Lord Curzon's party abandoned its attempt on the pass following an attack of wild bees), the trek over the Kuari Pass (3640m) was popular in the Raj era. It's still one of Uttarakhand's finest and most accessible treks, affording breathtaking views of the snow-clad peaks around Nanda Devi – India's highest mountain – while passing through the outer sanctuary of Nanda Devi Sanctuary. The trailhead is at Auli and the 75km trek to Ghat past lakes, waterfalls, forests, meadows and small villages takes five days, though it's possible to do a shorter version that finishes in Tapovan in three days. A tent, guide, permit and your own food supplies are necessary, all of which can be organised easily in Joshimath.

quicken the trip and help the local economy by hiring a pony (₹610) through the Eco Development Committee office at the bridge over the Alaknanda River. The return trip takes four to five hours. You don't need to carry food because there are dhabas and drink stalls along the way serving the army of pilgrims heading to Hem Kund. Top tip: if you have the time, sleep at Badrinath the night before you trek to Ghangaria to acclimatise your body to the altitude; it'll make the hike easier.

Overnight stays are not permitted in the Valley of Flowers or at Hem Kund so you must stay in Ghangaria, a one-street village in a wonderful deodar forest with a busy market, a handful of budget hotels and mediocre restaurants, hundreds of ponies, a pharmacy and a doctor. Water and electricity supplies are erratic. It can get cold, so bring warm layers. The village shuts down outside the pilgrimage season, which lasts from 1 June to 1 October (or thereabouts).

Hotel Pritam (Ghangaria; s/d ₹300/400) is one of the better budget places to stay. Hotel Priya (Ghangaria; r from ₹250) is good, too. No hotels have heat, but they do have heaps of blankets.

Despite the distances and grades of the trails, treks to Ghangaria, the Valley of Flowers and Hem Kund are often undertaken by small children and people with weak legs or lungs – they ride up in a wicker chair hauled on the back of a kandi (porter; from ₹500)

Pindari Glacier Trek

This six-day, 94km trek passes through truly virgin country that's inhabited by only a few shepherds. It offers wonderful views of Nanda Kot (6860m) and Nanda Khat (6611m) on the southern rim of Nanda Devi Sanctuary. The 3km-long, 365m-wide Pindari Glacier is at 3353m, so take it easy to avoid altitude sickness. Permits aren't needed but bring your passport.

The trek begins and finishes at Loharket (1700m), a village 36km north of Bageshwar. Guides and porters can be organised easily there, or in the preceding village of Song (1400m), or you can organise package treks through companies in Almora. KMVN operates all-inclusive eight-day treks out of Loharket for ₹5100 per person, staying at government rest houses. KMVN dorms (mattresses on the floor for ₹200), basic guesthouses or dhaba huts (₹100 to ₹300) are dotted along the route, and food is available. KMVN tours are best arranged through KVMN Parvat Tours (p445) in Nainital.

Buses (₹50, two hours) or share jeeps (₹60, 1½ hours) run between Song and Bageshwar. Private taxis between Bageshwar and Song/Loharket cost ₹1500/2000.

Milam Glacier Trek

This challenging eight-day, 118km trek to the massive Milam Glacier (3450m) is reached along an ancient trade route to Tibet that was closed in 1962 following the war between India and China. It passes through magnificent rugged country to the east of Nanda Devi (7816m) and along the sometimes spectacular gorges of the river, Gori Ganga. You can also take a popular but tough side trip to Nanda Devi East base camp, adding another 32km or three days.

Free permits (passport required) are available from the District Magistrate in Munsyari. You will also need a tent and your own food supplies, as villages on the route may be deserted. KMVN organises all-inclusive eight-day treks (from ₹6325). These are best arranged at KMVN Parvat Tours (p445) in Nainital but the KMVN Rest House (☎05961-222339; Munsyari) in Munsyari should be able to set you up too.

The base for this excursion is the spectacularly located village of Munsyari, where a guide, cook and porters can be hired and package treks can be arranged through Nanda Devi Tour N Trek (☎05961-222324; trek_beeru@rediffmail.com) or Johar Tour & Treks (☎05961-222752).

Less travelled but equally (or more) stunning treks include the Begini/Dunagiri route north of Joshimath and the Panchachuli East/Chota Kailash route, north of Dharchula.

or reclining in a dandi (litter; from ₹5500), carried on the shoulders of four men like the royalty of old. It's also possible to fly by Deccan Air (☎9412051036; www.deccanair.com) helicopter from Govindghat to Gangharia (one way/return ₹3500/7000); the booking office is at the top of the road leading down to the village.

At Govindghat, there are lots of lodging options for around ₹200, as well as the huge gurdwara (payment by donation), where VIP rooms are basic. The Hotel Bhagat (☎9412936360; www.hotelbhagat.com; Badrinath Rd; r ₹1625-3000), up on the main road between Joshimath and Badrinath, has very clean rooms with river views, geysers and meals.

All buses and share jeeps between Joshimath and Badrinath stop in Govindghat, so you can easily find transport travelling in either direction, though this trickles off later in the day and stops dead at night.

CORBETT TIGER RESERVE

☎05947 / ELEV 400-1210M

The famous Corbett Tiger Reserve was established in 1936 as India's first national park, and now includes surrounding forest lands. It's named for legendary British hunter Jim Corbett (1875-1955), who put Kumaon on the map with his book The Man-Eaters of Kumaon. Greatly revered by local people for killing tigers that preyed on people, Corbett eventually shot more wildlife with his camera than with his gun and became a prominent voice for conservation.

Tiger sightings take some luck, as the 220 or so tigers in the reserve are neither baited nor tracked. Your best chance of spotting one is late in the season (April to mid-June), when the forest cover is low and animals come out in search of water.

Notwithstanding tiger sightings, few serious wildlife enthusiasts will leave disappointed, as the 1318-sq-km park has a variety of wildlife and birdlife in grassland, sal forest and river habitats, and a beautiful location in the foothills of the Himalaya on the river, Ramganga. Commonly seen wildlife include wild elephants (200 to 300 live in the reserve), sloth bears, langur monkeys, rhesus macaques, peacocks, romps of otters and several types of deer including chital (spotted deer), sambars, hog deer and barking deer. You might also see leopards, mugger crocodiles, gharials, monitor lizards, wild boars and jackals. The Ramganga Reservoir attracts large numbers of migrating birds, especially from mid-December to the end of March, and more than 600 species have been spotted here.

Of Corbett's six zones - Bijrani, Dhikala, Dhela, Durga Devi, Jhirna and Sonanadi - Dhikala is the highlight of the park, 49km northwest of Ramnagar and deep inside the reserve. This is the designated core area, where the highest concentration of the animals you probably hope to see are found. It's open from 15 November to 15 June and only to overnight guests, or as part of a one-day tour available through the park's reception centre (☎05947-251489; Ranikhet Rd; 🕒6am-4pm), opposite Ramnagar's bus stand.

Jhirna and Dhela, in the southern part of the reserve, are the only zones that remains open all year, but your chances of seeing serious megafauna in those areas are iffy - at least for now. Dhela, which opened to the public in December 2014, may eventually include a large fenced section meant to house rescued tigers, which should be fairly easy to spot. There are also plans to create two nature trails in Dhela; we're told that these will mainly be for birdwatching, and that the trails will be protected by fences, so you don't have to worry about becoming tiger prey. At the time of writing, Dhela safaris could only be booked in Ramnagar, not online, but this may change in the future. Note that in some years, depending on conditions, the other four zones may open in October, but the only way to find out is to contact the reception centre.

Be sure to bring binoculars (you can hire them at park gates) and plenty of mosquito repellent and bottled water. If you're inter-

i PERMITS

Corbett Tiger Reserve controls tourist impact by limiting the number of vehicles into each zone each day. It's highly recommended that you make advance reservations. You can book via the park's website (www.corbettonline.uk.gov.in) or by signing up for a trip with a safari outfit. If you book online (fee ₹50), give your reservation confirmation to your driver, whether you hire one from the reservation centre or use a tour operator. Day trips can be booked three months in advance; if you can't plan ahead, go to the reception centre and try to pick up a leftover vehicle permit. If they are all gone, you still might be able to visit the park; safari operators will ask each other if anyone is running a jeep with open seats that you can fill. Overnight trips to Dhikala are best booked by calling the reception centre or a safari company.

For a day trip, the vehicle fee (not including passengers) costs ₹200/500 for Indians/foreigners; for an overnight jaunt, it's ₹500/1500. Then there's the visitor entry fee, which is about the craziest system we've seen in a while. Officially, the single-day fee (valid for four hours, available for every zone except Dhikala) is ₹100/450 per Indian/foreigner; three-day permits cost ₹200/900. But the park makes you pay visitor fees for every seat in the jeep, even if they are empty. Kindly, they imagine that unoccupied seats are filled by Indians, so two passengers in a jeep will pay their own entry fees, plus ₹100 for the driver's entry, plus an extra ₹400 for their invisible Indian companions!

How much does this all cost? Add up your jeep-hire fee, vehicle entry fee, visitor entry fees, driver's entry fee and empty seat fees, and that's your total. Arranging everything yourself is marginally cheaper than taking a safari or hotel tour, but they provide expert guides fluent in English, which can be well worth the few extra rupees.

ested in the life of Jim Corbett, his former house at Kaladhungi, 26km southeast of Ramnagar, is now a museum (Kaladhungi; admission ₹50; ☎ 8am-5pm).

Tours

The reception centre in Ramnagar runs daily bus tours (☎ 05947-251489; Ranikhet Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹1125/2250) to Dhikala – called Canter Safaris – at 6am and noon.

Jeeps can be hired at the reception centre in Ramnagar, or through your accommodation or a tour agency. Jeep owners have formed a union, so in theory rates are fixed (on a per-jeep basis, carrying up to six people). Half-day safaris (leaving in the morning and afternoon) should cost ₹1500 to Bijrani, ₹1800 to Jhirna, ₹1800 to Dhela, ₹2200 to Durga Devi, and ₹2200 to Sonanadi – not including the entry fees for you and your guide. Full-day safaris cost double. Overnight excursions to Dhikala cost ₹5200. Check current prices at the reception centre and at your hotel before hiring a jeep. Safaris offered by Karan Singh, who runs Karan's Corbett Motel (p443), are highly recommended.

Two-hour elephant rides (Indian/foreigner ₹300/1000) are available only at Dhikala and Bijrani, at 6am and 4pm on a first-come, first-served basis.

Sleeping & Eating

For serious wildlife viewing, Dhikala – deep inside the reserve – is the prime place to stay, though prices for foreigners are exorbitant. Book through the park's website (www.corbettonline.uk.gov.in) at least one month in advance. The town of Ramnagar has budget accommodation, while upmarket resorts are strung out along the road skirting the eastern side of the park between Dhikuli and Dhargarhi Gate.

Dhikala

Easily the cheapest beds in the park are at Log Huts (☎ 9212777223, 05947-251489; dm Indian/foreigner ₹200/400), resembling 3AC train sleepers, with 24 basic beds (no bedding supplied). Tourist Hutments (☎ 9212777223, 05947-251489; Indian/foreigner ₹1250/2500) offer the best value accommodation in Dhikala and sleep up to six people. Book via www.dhikalaforestlodge.in or www.corbettonline.uk.gov.in. Dhikala has a couple of restaurants serving vegetarian food. No alcohol is allowed in the park.

Accommodation at the New Forest Rest House (☎ 9212777223, 05947-251489; r Indian/foreigner ₹1250/2500), Annexe (☎ 05947-251489, 9212777223; r Indian/foreigner ₹1000/2000), three cabins (Indian/foreigner ₹1250/2500) and the VIP Old Forest Rest House (r Indian/foreigner ₹1500/3000 or ₹2500/5000) can all be booked at the reception centre in Ramnagar.

Elsewhere in the Reserve

Most rest houses outside of Dhikala offer kitchen facilities but not restaurants, so check with your guide to see if you should bring your own food.

Bijrani Rest House HOTEL $$$
(☎ 05947-251489; s/d Indian ₹500/1250, foreigner ₹1000/2500) The first place in from Amandanda Gate; meals and elephant rides are available.

Khinnauli Rest House HOTEL $$$
(☎ 05947-251489; r Indian/foreigner ₹5000/12,000) VIP lodging near Dhikala, deep in the reserve.

Sarapduli Rest House HOTEL $$$
(☎ 05947-251489; r Indian/foreigner ₹2000/4000) In a good location in the reserve's core area.

Gairal Rest House HOTEL $$$
(☎ 05947-251489; r Indian/foreigner from ₹1250/2500) On the Ramnagar River, accessed from Dhargarhi Gate; meals are available.

Ramnagar

A busy, unappealing town, Ramnagar has plenty of facilities, including internet cafes (₹30 per hour), ATMs (State Bank of India ATM at the train station and a Bank of Baroda ATM on Ranikhet Rd) and transport connections – mostly along Ranikhet Rd.

★ Karan's Corbett Motel HOTEL $
(☎ 9837468933; www.karanscorbettmotel.com; Manglar Rd; r ₹600-800; ☎) This longtime favourite has changed its name and moved to a new location. It's still surrounded by gardens and mango trees and still has the same terrific owner, Karan Singh – but the rooms and the restaurant are all brand new.

Hands-down, the best place to stay in Ramnagar. Karan runs highly recommended jeep safaris in Corbett.

Hotel Corbett Kingdom

HOTEL $$

(☎7500668883; www.corbettkingdom.com; Bhaghat Singh St; r from ₹1500; 🏠🚿) This straightforward hotel is a comfortable, well-kept option right in Ramnagar. Marble floors add a touch of class.

Delhi Darbar Restaurant

INDIAN $

(Ranikhet Rd; mains ₹60-160; ☀9am-11pm) The cleanest and quietest place to eat near the bus stand, with a typical Indian menu, plus pizza.

North of Ramnagar

A growing number of upmarket African-style safari resorts are strung along the Ramnagar-Ranikhet road that runs along the reserve's eastern boundary. Most are around a settlement called Dhikuli – not to be confused with Dhikala. When most of the reserve is closed (15 June to 15 November), discounts of up to 50% are offered. Most rates are for a room only, but most have packages that include meals and safaris. All places have resident naturalists, recreational facilities, restaurants and bars.

Infinity Resorts

HOTEL $$$

(☎05947-251279; www.infinityresorts.com; Dhikuli; s/d incl breakfast from US$118/135; 🏠🚿🛏) The most impressive of the Corbett Park resorts, Infinity has luxurious rooms, a roundhouse with restaurant and bar, and a swimming pool in a lovely garden backing onto the Kosi River (where you can see hordes of golden mahseer fish). The rooms in the 'old block' are better located and have more character than those in the 'new block'. Big discounts are offered if booking online.

Corbett Hideaway

HOTEL $$$

(☎05947-284132; www.corbetheideaway.com; Dhikuli; cottages ₹15,000-20,000; 🏠🚿🛏) The already-upscale resort was purchased by the Taj Group and is getting a makeover. We're told they're incorporating many of the green technologies that they've used around other national parks. Rooms are luxury cottages, spread among a lush garden. There's a poolside bar and a relaxing riverside terrace. Prices will probably rise before you read this.

Tiger Camp

RESORT $$$

(☎9411321606; www.habitathotels.com/tiger-camp; Dhikuli; cottages from ₹5275; 🏠🚿) This intimate, excellent-value resort is nestled in a shady jungle-style garden by the Kosi River, 8km from Ramnagar. Cosy cottages and bungalows have modern facilities, and nature walks and village tours are offered.

Getting There & Away

Buses run almost hourly from Ramnagar to Delhi (₹241, seven hours), Haridwar (₹190, six hours) and Dehra Dun (₹254, seven hours). For Nainital (₹80, 3½ hours) there are three direct morning buses, or take one to Haldwani and change there. Frequent buses run to Haldwani (₹61, two hours).

Ramnagar train station is 1.5km south of the main reception centre. The nightly Ranikhet Express Slip 15013-Slip (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹175/485/690) leaves Old Delhi at 10.30pm, arriving in Ramnagar at 4.55am. The return trip on train 25014 leaves Ramnagar at 10pm, arriving in Old Delhi at 3.55am. A daytime run from Old Delhi on train 15035-Slip (2nd class/chair ₹100/370) departs at 4pm, reaching Ramnagar at 8.40pm; the return on train 25036 departs Ramnagar at 9.50am, hitting Delhi at 3.20pm.

NAINITAL

☎05942 / POP 40,000 / ELEV 2084M

Crowded around a deep, green volcanic lake, Nainital is Kumaon's largest town and favourite hill resort. It occupies a steep forested valley around the namesake lake Naini and was founded by homesick Brits reminded of the Cumbrian Lake District.

Plenty of hotels are set in the forested hills around the lake. There's a busy bazaar and a spider's web of walking tracks covers the forested hillsides to viewpoints overlooking the distant Himalayan peaks. For travellers, it's an easy place to kick back and relax, eat well, and go horse riding or paddling on the lake. In peak seasons – roughly May to mid-July and October – Nainital is packed to the gills with holidaying families and honeymooners, and hotel prices skyrocket.

Tallital (Lake's Foot) is at the south-eastern end of the lake where you'll find the bus stand and the main road heading east towards Bhowali. The 1.5km promenade known as the Mall leads to Mallital (Lake's Head) at the northwestern end of the lake. Most hotels, guest houses and restaurants are strung out along the Mall between Mallital and Tallital. You'll most find shops, including pharmacies, in Bara Bazaar.

Sights & Activities

★ Naini Lake

LAKE

This pretty lake is Nainital's centrepiece and is said to be one of the emerald green eyes of Shiva's wife, Sati (naina is Sanskrit for eye) that fell to earth after her act of self-immolation. Boatmen will row you around the lake for ₹210 in the brightly painted gondola-like boats, or the Nainital Boat Club (☎05942-235318; www.boathouse-club.in; Mallital; ☀10am-4pm) will sail you round for ₹350. Pedal boats can also be hired for ₹150 per hour.

Naina Devi Temple is on the precise spot where the eye is believed to have fallen. Nearby is the Jama Masjid and a gurdwara. You can walk around the lake in about an hour – the southern side is more peaceful and has good views of the town.

Snow View

VIEWPOINT

A cable car (adult/child return ₹150/100; ☀8am-8pm May & Jun, 10.30am-4.30pm Jul-Apr) runs up to the popular Snow View at 2270m, which (on clear days) has panoramic Himalayan views, including of Nanda Devi. The ticket office is at the bottom. At the top you'll find the usual food, souvenir and carnival stalls, as well as Mountain Magic (rides ₹30-100), an amusement park with kids' entertainment including bumper cars, trampolines and a flying fox.

A highlight of the trip to Snow View is hiking to viewpoints such as Cheena/Naina Peak, 4km away. Local guides may offer to lead you there.

If you want to get up to Snow View for sunrise, taxis charge ₹200.

Tiffin Top & Land's End

HORSE RIDING, WALKING

A 4km walk west of the lake brings you to Tiffin Top (2292m), also called Dorothy's Seat. From there, it's a lovely 30-minute walk to Land's End (2118m) through a forest of oak, deodar and pine. Mangy horses gather 3km west of town on the road to Ramnagar to take you on rides to these spots.

A two-hour ride costs about ₹900, but you can take shorter rides (eg Tiffin Top for ₹500); you can always negotiate. Touts for these rides will no doubt accost you in Mallital near the ropeway.

★ Tranquility Treks

TREKKING

(☎941196837; www.tranquilitytreks.in) Experienced guide Sunil Kumar leads hikes and focuses on bird- and wildlife-watching. He can take you on day walks (₹1500), overnight hikes where you stay in local villages (₹2000) and two-week all-inclusive nature trips (from ₹75,000).

Nainital Mountaineering

Club

MOUNTAINEERING

(☎9412905949; www.ntmcindia.org; Mallital; per day ₹600) Offers rock-climbing courses at the rock-climbing area, a 15m-high rocky outcrop to the west of the town.

Snout Adventures

OUTDOOR ADVENTURES

(☎9411374560; www.snoutadventure.com; Ashok Cinema Bldg, Mallital) A recommended outfit offering treks in the Kumaon and Garhwal mountains (from ₹2200 per day, all inclusive). It also conducts rock-climbing courses (₹500 per day) and organises adventure camps.

KMVN Parvat Tours

TREKKING

(☎05942-231436; www.kmvn.org; Tallital; ☀8am-7pm) A helpful office for information and booking KMVN's rest houses and trekking packages.

Tours

Travel agencies along the Mall such as Hina Tours & Travel (☎05942-235860; www.hina-tour.com) and Anamika Travels (☎05942-235186; www.anamikatravelsnainital.com) offer bus tours of the local lakes and trips to Corbett National Park. KMVN offers the full-day Jim Corbett Legacy Trail tour (₹950), visiting sites important in the life of the legendary hunter/author/conservationist.

Sleeping

Nainital is packed with hotels but they fill up fast in peak seasons, making it hard to find a bargain at those times. Virtually all hotels offer around 50% discounts in the low season. The main peak season is generally 1 May to 30 June, and some hotels have a semipeak in October, at Diwali (October/November) and at Christmas.

Hotel City Heart

HOTEL $$

(☎05942-235228; www.cityhearthotelnainital.com; Mallital; d ₹3200-5500) Located off the Mall, the rooftop terrace restaurant has fine lake views. Rooms range from small but cute to fabulous deluxe rooms with a view.

Nainital

This place discounts more than most and is one of Nainital's best off-season bargains, with rooms from ₹800. The effusive owner will gladly play the CD of his band covering tunes by Pink Floyd and Dire Straits.

Traveller's Paradise

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9411107877; www.travellersinparadise.com; Mallital; r ₹2700-4500; 📶) A bit north of the Mall, this exceptionally friendly hotel has been recently renovated. Rooms feature flat-screen TVs, couches, faux-wood panelling, wi-fi and quality beds. It's run by the amiable Anu Consul, who spent 10 years living in Mexico, and his wonderful father. Off-season prices start at ₹1500.

Evelyn Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 05942-235457; www.hotelevlynainital.com; the Mall, Tallital; d ₹2000-3500, ste ₹5500-6000) This large Victorian-looking hotel overlooking the lake is quintessential Nainital – charming and slightly eccentric. It's big, with stairways and terraces cascading down the hillside. It's a bit old-fashioned, but the well-tended rooms with retro furniture have a nice, cosy feel.

Palace Belvedere

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 05942-237434; www.palacebelvedere.com; Mallital; s/d/ste from ₹6500/7500/10,000; 📶) Built in 1897, this was the summer palace of the rajas of Awagarh. Animal skins and old prints adorn the walls and lend a faded Raj-era charm. Rooms are spacious, high-ceilinged, and have an aged, if worn, soul. Upstairs gets much more light. Downstairs has an elegant dining room, lounge and verandah. It can be cold in winter. Discounts are offered during off-season.

Eating & Drinking

Nainital has a host of restaurants, mostly along the Mall on the north side of the lake. For cheap eats, head to the food stalls around the Tibetan Market or to the dhabas in Bara Bazaar.

Sonam Chowmein Corner FAST FOOD $

(The Flats, Mallital; mains ₹30-60; ☺ 11am-7.30pm) In the covered alley of the Tibetan Market, this authentic Tibetan dhaba whips up fabulous chow mein and momos (dumplings) for the best cheap eats in town.

Embassy INDIAN $$

(The Mall, Mallital; meals ₹100-350; ☺ 9.30am-10.30pm) With a wood-lined chalet interior and snappily dressed staff, Embassy has been serving up five pages of menu items for more than 40 years. For drinks try 'dancing coffee' or a rosewater lassi. There's a good terrace for people-watching.

Sakley's Restaurant MULTICUISINE $$

(Mallital; mains ₹150-650; ☺ 9am-10pm) A spotless restaurant found off the Mall, serving up a range of unusual global items such

Nainital Boat Club BAR

(The Mall, Mallital; temporary membership men/women/couples ₹850/425/850; ☺ 10am-10pm) This club is a classic remnant of the Raj-era. Temporary membership is ridiculously steep, but the atmospheric bar – with timber beams, buttoned-up barmen with handlebar moustaches, and an outdoor deck overlooking the lake, is perfect for an afternoon drink. The dress code specifies no shorts or slippers, and signs warn that 'decorum should be maintained'.

BUSES FROM NAINITAL

The following buses leave from the Tallital bus stand. For Kathgodam, take the Haldwani bus.

Getting There & Away

BUS

Most buses leave from the Tallital bus stand.

Although there are direct buses from Nainital, many more services leave from the transport hubs of Haldwani and Bhowali. From Haldwani, regular buses head to Ramnagar, Delhi, Haridwar and the Nepal border at Banbassa. Haldwani is also a major train terminus. For points north, take a bus or share jeep from Nainital to Bhowali (₹20, 20 minutes) and catch one of the regular onward buses to Almora, Kausani and Ranikhet.

Seven private buses direct to Ramnagar (₹80, 3½ hours) leave from the Sukhatal bus stand, northwest of Mallital, between 8am and 3.30pm.

Travel agencies sell tickets for private overnight deluxe coaches (with reclining seats) to Delhi (₹350 to ₹800, nine hours), which leave from Tallital around 11am and 10pm.

TAXI & SHARE JEEP

From the Kumaon Taxi Union stand in Tallital, taxis cost ₹400 to Bhowali, ₹100/500 (shared/private) to Kathgodam or Haldwani (1½ hours), ₹1800 to Ramnagar (three hours) and ₹1800 to Almora (three hours) or Ranikhet (three hours).

Share jeeps leave when full. They go to Bhowali (₹20, 20 minutes), where you can get share taxis to Almora and beyond.

TRAIN

Kathgodam (35km south of Nainital) is the nearest train station, but Haldwani, one stop further south, is the regional transport hub. The train booking agency (☀️ 9am-noon & 2-5pm Mon-Fri, 9am-2pm Sat), next to the Tallital bus stand, has a quota for trains to Dehra Dun, Delhi, Moradabad, Lucknow, Gorakhpur and Kolkata. The daily 15036 Uttarakhand Sampark Express (2nd-class seat/AC chair ₹110/410) departs Kathgodam at 8.50am, stops at Haldwani at 9.08am, and arrives Old Delhi station at 3.20pm. In the other direction, train 15035 departs Delhi at 4pm, arriving Haldwani 8.10pm and Kathgodam at 8.40pm.

Getting Around

Cycle-rickshaws charge a fixed ₹10 along the Mall, but can only pick up and drop off at the ticket booths at either end. Taxi rides within town cost ₹50 to ₹250.

ALMORA

📞 05962 / POP 33,000 / ELEV 1650M

Clinging to a steep-sided valley, Almora is the regional capital of Kumaon, first established as a summer capital by the Chand rajas of Kumaon in 1560. These days you'll find some colonial-era buildings, reliable trekking outfits and a couple of community-based weaving enterprises. Don't be put off by the ugly, shambolic main street when you're first deposited at the bus stand – head one block south to the pedestrian-only cobbled Lalal Bazaar, lined with intricately carved and painted traditional wooden shop facades. It's a fascinating place to stroll, people-watch and shop.

Sights & Activities

Nanda Devi Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Lalal Bazaar) The stone Nanda Devi Temple dates back to the Chand raja era, and is covered in folk-art carvings, some erotic. Every September, the temple hosts the five-day Nanda Devi Fair (Almora; ☺ Sep).

Panchachuli Weavers Factory

HANDICRAFTS

(☎ 05962-232310; www.panchachuli.com; off Bageshwar Rd; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) FREE The Panchachuli Weavers Factory employs some 700 women to weave, market and sell woolen shawls. The shop here has a wider range of products than at the small shop in the Mall. Taxis charge ₹150 return to the factory, or you can walk the 3km – follow the continuation of Mall Rd to the northeast and ask for directions.

High Adventure

TREKKING

(☎ 9412044610; www.trekkinghimalayas.in; The Mall) Organises treks around Uttarakhand, and mountain-bike trips near Almora and Nainital. Prices vary depending on route and group size, so call for details.

Sleeping

Unlike most hill stations, prices here are not seasonal.

Savoy Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 05962-262601; www.ashoknainital.com; The Mall; r ₹800-1700) At the southern end of the Mall, just past the tourist office, the Savoy is in a quiet location. Cheaper downstairs rooms are simple, musty affairs, but the pricier upstairs rooms strive for comfort and style; best of all, they have tables and chairs on a shared terrace that overlooks the valley below Almora.

Bansal Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 05962-230864; Lalal Bazaar; d ₹300-400) Above Bansal Cafe in the bustling bazaar, but easily reached from the Mall, this is a fine budget choice with small, tidy rooms (some with TV) and a rooftop terrace.

Hotel Shikhar

HOTEL $$

(☎ 05962-230253; www.hotelshikhar.com; The Mall; r ₹600-1800, ste ₹2500-3500; 🚶) Dominating the centre of town and built to take in the views, this large, boxlike hotel offers a maze of rooms covering all budgets. In the original building, higher-end rooms aren't much better than cheaper ones; all are a bit worn, but not too awful. The top-tier rooms in the new building are among Almora's nicest.

Eating

Almora's speciality sweet is ball mithai (fudge coated in sugar balls), available for ₹10 in sweet shops all along the Mall and bazaar.

Glory Restaurant

INDIAN $

(LR Sah Rd; mains ₹65-190; ☺ 8.30am-9.30pm) This long-running family eatery features popular South and North Indian veg and nonveg dishes, including biryanis and lemon chicken. Pizzas are extra cheesy.

Saraswati Sweet & Restaurant

TIBETAN $

(Pithoragarh Rd; dishes ₹30-60; ☺ 7am-8pm) This busy place with upstairs tables quickly dishes up veg and nonveg momos and other Tibetan food, along with Chinese. The thukpa (Tibetan noodle soup) is spicy enough to clear your sinuses. It also has mutton burgers and a full list of cold drinks.

Information

Internet access is available at several places in Lalal Bazaar and the Mall, usually from ₹25 per hour.

HDFC (The Mall; ☺ 9.30am-3.30pm Mon-Fri, to 12.30pm Sat)

Sify iWay (The Mall; per hour ₹25; ☺ 9am-8pm) One of several places with internet.

State Bank of India (The Mall; ☺ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat)

Uttarakhand Tourism Office (☎ 05962-230180; Upper Mall; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat)

Getting There & Away

The vomit-splattered sides of the buses and jeeps pulling into Almora tell you all you need to know about what the roads are like around here.

KMOU buses operate from the Mall – starting early morning until 2.30pm or 3pm – to Ranikhet (₹65, two hours), Kausani (₹85, 2½ hours), Bageshwar (₹120, two hours) and Haldwani (₹125, three hours) via Bhowali (₹80, two hours) near Nainital. Buses to those places – except Ranikhet – also leave from the adjacent Roadways stand, where you'll find buses to Delhi (₹440, 12 hours) at 7am, 4pm, 5pm and 6pm. For Pithoragarh, head to the Dharanaula bus stand east of the bazaar on Bypass Rd, where several buses (₹165, five hours) depart between about 8.30am and 11am. For Banbassa on the Nepal border, take a bus to Haldwani and change there.

You can get a taxi or jeep to Ranikhet (shared/private ₹100/1000, two hours), Kausani (₹120/1200, 2½ hours), Bageshwar (₹250/1500, two hours), Bhowali (₹200/1000, three hours), Kasar Devi (₹35/250), Pithoragarh (₹350/2500, five hours) and Munsyari (private only ₹5000, 10 hours). All leave from the Mall, except the shared taxis to Pithoragarh, which leave from Dharanaula bus stand.

The nearest railway stations are at Kathgodam and Haldwani. There's a Railway Reservation Centre (☎ 05962-230250; KMVN Holiday Home, The Mall; ☉ 9am-noon & 2-5pm Mon-Sat) at the southern end of town.

AROUND ALMORA

Kasar Devi

This peaceful spot about 8km north of Almora has been luring alternative types for close to 100 years – as a result, it's also known as Crank's Ridge. The list of luminaries who've visited, some for extended stays, includes Bob Dylan, Cat Stevens, Timothy Leary, Allen Ginsburg and Swami Vivekananda, who meditated at the hilltop Kasar Devi Temple. Today, the village is a low-key backpacker destination, with a mellow vibe and clear-day Himalayan views. There's not a lot to do here, but it's a great place to chill. And Mohan's Binsar Retreat (p450) can arrange multiday fishing, rafting, or trekking trips. Get there from Almora by share jeep (₹20) or private taxi (₹250).

Sleeping & Eating

There are some great budget to midrange guesthouses here, along with a few restaurants and shops.

Freedom Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 7830355686; Binsar Rd; r ₹800-1200) Big, immaculately clean rooms open onto shared terraces with west-facing valley views, catching the afternoon and sunset light. New rooms on the upper floors have a bit more luxury. If you ask nicely and pay for gas, Gita, the owner, may set you up with your own little kitchen.

Manu Guest House GUESTHOUSE $
(☎ 9410920696; below Binsar Rd; r ₹400-600) Set amid an orchard with a couple of cows, this place feels like a rural homestay. The largest stone or brick cottages include kitchenettes, making it a great choice for long stays.

Kripal House HOTEL $
(☎ 9690452939; off Binsar Rd; r from ₹600, without bathroom from ₹300) This basic guesthouse, down a dirt lane off the main road, boasts mindblowing views of the Himalayas from its unfurnished rooftop terrace.

★ Mohan's Binsar Retreat GUESTHOUSE $$$
(☎ 9412162816; www.mohansbinsarretreat.com; Binsar Rd; r incl breakfast from ₹4400; @ ☎) Arguably the nicest place in Kasar Devi, Mohan's has huge, beautiful rooms with luxurious beds and wooden ceilings and floors. The real draw is the indoor-outdoor terrace restaurant, with great views of the valley below and a shot of distant Himalayan peaks. There's an internet cafe and a library.

Rainbow Restaurant INTERNATIONAL $$ (☎ 9720320664; www.kasarrainbowresort.com; Binsar Rd; ₹100-200; ☉ 9am-9.30pm) Currently Kasar Devi's main backpacker hang-out, sit at tables or cushions on the floor while ordering Indian, Asian, Western or Middle Eastern food. Everything we tried was delicious – especially dessert! The owners also run a top-notch guesthouse with rooms from ₹2100 to ₹5000.

Binsar Wildlife Sanctuary

Beyond Kasar Devi, picturesque Binsar, 26km from Almora, was once the hilltop summer capital of the Chand rajas. Now it's a sanctuary protecting 45 sq km. You may spot a leopard or some barking deer, but many people come here for the 200-plus species of birds. On clear days, the Himalayan panorama is breathtaking – from the tower at 'Zero Point,' Binsar's summit (2420m), you can see Kedarnath, Nanda Devi, Panchachuli and more. Hiking trails wend throughout the lush forest; their main nexus is the KMVN Rest House. There is one good map of Binsar put out by the Forest Department, with trails and topo lines, but this is very hard to find; it's not offered at the entry gate.

It's possible to trek between the villages that are in the sanctuary, sleeping in rural homestays (which vary in quality and price). For details, call guides Pooja at 📍 9759749283 or Nandan at 📍 9411516469 (be sure to compare details and prices).

The fee to enter the sanctuary is ₹150/600 per Indian/foreigner, plus a ₹250 to ₹500 vehicle fee depending on what you're driving. Guides, who can be hired at the sanctuary gate or the Rest House, charge ₹250 for a 1½-hour hike. A return taxi from Almora costs about ₹1100.

Jageshwar

An impressive and active temple complex is set along a creek in a forest of deodars at the village of Jageshwar, 38km northeast of Almora. The 124 temples and shrines date to the 7th century AD and vary from linga shrines to large sikhara (Hindu temples) dedicated to different gods and goddesses. Down the street is the Jageshwar Archaeological Museum (www.asi.nic.in; Jageshwar; 🕒 10am-5pm Sat-Thu) FREE, which houses a small collection of exquisite religious carvings taken from the temples for preservation. It is well worth a look; among the highlights are the 'Dancing Ganesha' and the highly detailed version of 'Uma/Maheshwar Sitting on Nandi' with the intense snake action.

A 3km trail that starts below the centre of the village leads to the top of the ridge behind it. The ridge has dizzying views of the sculpted valley on the other side and the big peaks in the distance.

There are a number of dhabas in Jageshwar, plus a handful of hotels. The best of the bunch is Tara Guest House (📍 9411544736; www.jageshwar.co.uk; Jageshwar; r from ₹200; 🍽️), surrounded by gardens, with views of the forest and the temple. It has basic but decent rooms. The easiest way to get from Almora to Jageshwar is by taxi (₹1200 return) or shared taxi (₹75). There's one direct bus daily around noon. It returns to Almora at 8am the following day. You can also take any bus going through Artola, get off there, and either walk 4km to Jageshwar or take a taxi for ₹80.

KAUSANI

📍 05962 / POP 4100 / ELEV 1890M

Perched high on a forest-covered ridge, this tiny village has lovely panoramic views of distant snowcapped peaks, fresh air and a relaxed atmosphere. Mahatma Gandhi found Kausani an inspirational place to write his Bhagavad Gita treatise Anasakti Yoga in 1929, and there is still an ashram devoted to him here. Baijnath village, 19km north, has an intriguing complex of 12th-century sikhara-style temples in a lovely location shaded by trees, with other shrines in the nearby old village.

MUNSYARI

Perched on a mountainside surrounded by plunging terraced fields, where the 6000m Panchachuli peaks scrape the sky across the Johar Valley, Munsyari (2290m) is one of the most scenic villages in Uttarakhand. Visited mostly by trekkers heading to the Milam Glacier, the surrounding landscape makes this a worthwhile destination even if you don't plan on lacing up your boots and hitting the trail.

There are some nice day hikes in the area. Two kilometres downhill from the bazaar, the small Tribal Heritage Museum (📍 9411337094; admission ₹10), run by the charming scholar SS Pangtey, has artefacts from the days when Munsyari was an important nexus of trade with Tibet. This is also a unique place to experience the Nanda Devi Festival in September.

The Hotel Pandey Lodge (📍 9411130316; www.munsyarihotel.com; near the bus stand; r ₹200-1850), by the bus stand, has a wide range of good-value rooms, some with amazing views, and an extremely helpful owner. Munsyari's dining situation is sparse. If you want to eat until you're stuffed (plates refilled free), try the hole-in-the-wall dhaba (₹40) just to the left of the big 'Nanda Devi Trek n Tour' sign, at the main chowk.

Buses run to and from Bageshwar (₹150, six hours) and Almora (₹200, 11 hours). Share jeeps run to Pithoragarh (₹180, eight hours) and Thal (₹120, three hours), where you can change for onward transport. If travelling to Munsyari via Thal, get a right-side window seat for the best views along the road. If you came from Thal and are heading to Pithoragarh, consider taking the longer route via Jauljibi for a change of scenery, including some amazing vistas of the Kumaon and Nepali Himalayas.

Sights & Activities

Kausani Tea Estate

TEA ESTATE

(☎ 05962-258330; ☀ 9am-6pm mid-Mar-mid-Nov) FREE At Kausani Tea Estate – a tea plantation that involves private enterprise, the government and local farmers – you can look around and sample and buy products that are exported around the world. It's 3.5km north of the village on the road to Baijnath, an easy and scenic walk.

Anasakti Ashram

HISTORIC SITE

(☎ 05962-258028; Anasakti Ashram Rd) About 1km uphill from the bus stand, Anasakti Ashram is where Mahatma Gandhi spent two weeks pondering and writing Anasakti Yoga. It has a small museum (Anasakti Ashram Rd; ☀ 6am-noon & 4-7pm) FREE that tells the story of Gandhi's life through photographs and words. Visit at 6pm to attend nightly prayers in his memory.

Sleeping & Eating

Outside the two short peak seasons (May to June and October to November), accommodation is often discounted by 50%.

There are lots of cheap dhabas around the main bazaar and the road leading uphill from the bus stand.

Hotel Uttarakhand

HOTEL $$

(☎ 05962-258012; www.uttarakhandkausani.com; north of bus stand; d ₹1050-2550; @) Near the bus stand, but in a quiet location with a panoramic view of the Himalaya from your verandah, this is Kausani's best-value accommodation. The cheaper rooms are small, with bucket hot water, but upper-floor rooms are spacious and have hot showers and TVs. The manager is helpful and friendly.

Krishna Mountview

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 05962-258008; www.krishnamountview.com; Anasakti Ashram Rd; d ₹3400-5900, ste ₹8000-9650; ☎) Just past Anasakti Ashram, this is one of Kausani's smartest hotels, with clipped formal gardens (perfect for mountain views). Try to get a spacious upstairs room; they have balconies, bay windows and rocking chairs.

BORDER CROSSING – INTO NEPAL FROM BANBASSA

Banbassa is the closest Indian village to the Nepal border post of Mahendranagar, 5km away. Check the current situation in western Nepal before crossing here, as roads during monsoon or immediate postmonsoon season may be impassable due to landslides and washed-out bridges. Buses run between Banbassa and Delhi, Haldwani, Haridwar and Pithoragarh.

Border Hours

The border is open 24 hours, but before 6am and after 6pm you're unlikely to find anyone to stamp you in and out of the respective countries. While officially open to vehicles only from 6am to 8am, 10am to noon, 2pm to 4pm and 6pm to 7pm, rickshaws and motorcycles are usually allowed to make the 1km trip across the bridge between the border posts at any time. Otherwise, you have to walk it.

Foreign Exchange

Hotels in Banbassa exchange Indian and Nepali rupees, as will a small office near the Nepal border post. Nabil Bank in Mahendranagar has an ATM and foreign currency exchange.

Onward Transport

From the border, take an autorickshaw (₹100) or shared taxi to Mahendranagar. The bus station is about 1km from the centre on the Mahendra Hwy, from where eight daily buses depart for Kathmandu between 5.30am and 4.30pm. There's also a single Pokhara service at 2.20pm (16 hours).

Visas

Single-entry visas valid for 15/30/90 days cost US$25/40/100 and are available at the Nepali side of the border between 9am and 5pm.

Garden Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $$

(north of bus stand, Hotel Uttarakhand; mains ₹70-250; ☺ 7am-10pm) In front of Hotel Uttarakhand and enjoying fine Himalayan views, this bamboo and thatch-roofed restaurant is Kausani's coolest. The food comprises first-class dishes from Swiss rösti to chicken tikka and imported pasta, as well as some Kumaon specialities, using fresh ingredients.

i Information

Kausani has a State Bank of India ATM in the main bazaar, but no foreign currency exchange.

Sanchar Dhaba Cyber Cafe (Anasakti Ashram Rd; per hour ₹40; ☺ 6am-8.30pm) At Hill Queen Restaurant.

i Getting There & Away

Buses and share jeeps stop in the village centre. Several buses run to Almora (₹120, 2½ hours), but in the afternoon they generally stop at Karbala on the bypass road, from where you need to take a share jeep (₹10). Heading north, buses run every hour or so to Bageshwar via Baijnath (₹55, 1½ hours). Share jeeps (₹25, 30 minutes) run to Garur, 16km north of Kausani, which is a much more active transport hub, and where you can find share jeeps to Gwaldam for onward buses and jeeps to Garhwal (via Karanprayag). A taxi to Almora costs around ₹1200; to Nainital or Karanprayag it costs ₹3000.

BAGESHWAR

☎ 05963 / POP 8000 / ELEV 975M

Hindu pilgrims visit Bageshwar, at the confluence of the Gomti and Sarju Rivers, for its ancient stone Bagnath Temple. For travellers, it's more important as a transit town to or from the Milam or Pindari Glacier trailheads. There are a couple of internet cafes around, and there's a State Bank of India ATM in the main bazaar.

The OK Hotel Annapurna (☎ 05963-220109; r ₹200-400, s/d without bathroom ₹70/150) is conveniently located next to the bus stand, but for something much better, head for Hotel Narendra Palace (☎ 9319083181; www.hotelnarendrapalace.in; Pindari Rd; ₹350-1500; ☹), about 1km from the bus stand on Pindari Rd.

Several daily buses go to Almora (₹115, three hours), and Ranikhet (₹115, three hours) via Kausani (₹45, 1½ hours). Frequent buses run to Bhowali (₹175, six hours) and Haldwani (₹225, 7½ hours). For connections to Garhwal, take a bus to Gwaldam (₹60, two hours) and change there. There are several morning buses to Pithoragarh (₹160, seven hours) and one at 9am to Munsyari (₹150, six hours). There's a jeep stand near the bus stand, along with a few other spots around town. Share jeeps go to Garur (₹35, 45 minutes), Kausani (₹55, 1½ hours) and Gwaldam (₹85, two hours). A shared/private jeep costs ₹90/1500 to Song (two hours), ₹110/2000 to Loharket (2½ hours), ₹400/5000 to Munsyari (five hours), ₹350/4000 to Pithoragarh (six hours) and ₹150/1500 to Almora (two hours).

PITHORAGARH

☎ 05964 / POP 42,000 / ELEV 1514M

Spread across the hillsides above a scenic valley that's been dubbed 'Little Kashmir', Pithoragarh is the main town of a little-visited region that borders Tibet and Nepal. Its sights include several Chand-era temples and an old fort, but the real reason to come here is to get off the tourist trail. The busy main bazaar is good for a stroll, and townspeople are exceptionally friendly. Picturesque hikes in the area include the rewarding climb up to Chandak (7km) for views of the Panchachuli (Five Chimneys) massif.

The tourist office (☎ 05964-225527), 50m uphill from the jeep stand, can help with trekking guides and information; a State Bank of India ATM and a few internet cafes (₹30 per hour) are in the bazaar. Cheap hotels can be found around the bus stand (rooms from ₹300), but for something much better head 200m uphill to Hotel Yash Yatharth (☎ 05964-225005; www.punethahotels.com; Naya Bazaar; dm ₹200, r ₹1000-3400); rates can be halved if business is slow. For a good meal at a good price, locals swear by Jyonar Restaurant (Gandhi Chowk; mains ₹80-250; ☺ 8am-10pm) in the bazaar.

Several buses leave in the morning for Almora (₹160, five hours). Frequent buses go to Delhi; there are hourly services from 5am to 2pm to Banbassa (₹255, six hours), the border crossing into Nepal; and buses to Haldwani (10 hours) depart at 5am, 6.30am and 9.30am. To get to Munsyari, take a share jeep (₹250, seven hours).

Why Go?

India's second-biggest city is a festival of human existence, simultaneously noble and squalid, cultured and desperate. By its old spelling, Calcutta conjures up images of human suffering to most Westerners. But locally, Kolkata is regarded as India's intellectual and cultural capital. While poverty is certainly in your face, the dapper Bengali gentry continue to frequent old gentlemen's clubs, back horses at the Calcutta Racetrack and tee off at some of India's finest golf courses.

As the former capital of British India, Kolkata retains a feast of colonial-era architecture contrasting starkly with urban slums and new-town suburbs with their air-con shopping malls. Kolkata is the ideal place to experience the mild, fruity tang of Bengali cuisine. Friendlier than India's other metropolises, this is a city you 'feel' more than simply visit. Walk the chaotic back alleys, ride the Hooghly ferries and, if you've got more time, take an excursion to the Sundarbans.

When to Go

Kolkata (Calcutta)

Sep & Oct The city dresses up magnificently for the colourful mayhem of Durga Puja.

Nov-Jan Cool and dry; there's a big film-fest in November and a music festival in January.

May-Sep Best avoided unless you're prepared for a very serious drenching.

Kolkata Highlights

- 1 Watch goddesses coming to life in the curious lanes of Kumartuli (p464) or on Kalighat Rd, near the famous Kalighat Temple (p465)
- 2 Ponder the contradictions of the magnificent Victoria Memorial (p457)
- 3 Sample lip-smackingly authentic Bengali cuisine at Bhojohari Manna (p481)
- 4 Discover the enlightened universalist idealism of Ramakrishna in Belur Math (p464) and Rabindranath Tagore at Tagore's House (p463)
- 5 Volunteer to help the destitute with the organisation founded by Mother Teresa (p459)

Central Kolkata

History

Although for centuries Kalikata (now Kalighat) had been home to a much-revered temple, the Kolkata area was very much a rural backwater when British merchant Job Charnock showed up in 1686. He considered the site appropriate for a new, defensible colonial settlement and within a few decades a miniature version of London was sprouting stately buildings and English churches amid wide boulevards and grand formal gardens. But the grand illusion vanished abruptly at Calcutta's frayed edges where Indians servicing the Raj mostly lived in cramped, overcrowded slums.

The most notable hiccup in the city's meteoric rise came in 1756, when Siraj-uddaula, the nawab of nearby Murshidabad, recaptured the city. Dozens of members of the colonial aristocracy were imprisoned in a cramped room beneath Fort William. By morning, around 40 of them were dead from suffocation. The British press exaggerated numbers, drumming up moral outrage back home: the legend of the 'Black Hole of Calcutta' was born. The following year, Clive of India retook Calcutta for Britain. The nawab sought aid from the French but was soundly defeated at the Battle of Plassey (now Palashi), thanks mainly to the treachery of former allies. A stronger moated 'second' Fort William was constructed in 1758 in octagonal, Vaubanesque form. The whole village of Gobindapur was flattened to give the new fort's cannons a clear line of fire. Though sad for then-residents, this created the Maidan (moi-dan), a 3km-long park that is today as fundamental to Kolkata as Central Park is to New York City.

Calcutta became British India's official capital, though well into the late 18th century one could still hunt tigers in the bamboo forests around where Sunder St lies today.

The late-19th-century Bengali Renaissance movement saw a great cultural reawakening among middle-class Calcuttans. This was further galvanised by the massively unpopular 1905 division of Bengal, sowing the seeds of the Indian Independence movement. Bengal was reunited in 1911, but the British promptly transferred their colonial capital to less troublesome Delhi.

Initially, loss of political power had little effect on Calcutta's economic status. However, the impact of 1947's partition was devastating. While West Pakistan and Punjab saw a fairly equal (if bloody) exchange of populations, migration in Bengal was almost entirely one way. Around four million Hindu refugees from East Bengal arrived, choking Calcutta's already overpopulated bastis (slums). For a period, people really were dying of hunger in the streets, creating Calcutta's abiding image of abject poverty. No sooner had these refugees been absorbed than a second wave arrived during the 1971 India–Pakistan War.

After India's partition, the port of Calcutta was hit very hard by the loss of its main natural hinterland, now behind the closed Pakistan (later Bangladesh) border. Labour unrest spiralled out of control while the city's dominant party (Communist Party of India) spent most of its efforts attacking the feudal system of land ownership. Well-intentioned attempts to set strict rent controls backfired: where tenants pay only a few rupees in monthly rent, landlords have no interest in maintaining or upgrading properties, so many fine old buildings spent years crumbling.

In 2001, Calcutta officially adopted the more phonetic spelling, Kolkata. Around the same time the city administration implemented a new, relatively business-friendly attitude that has encouraged a noticeable economic resurgence. The most visible results are numerous suburban shopping malls and apartment towers plus the rapid emergence of Salt Lake City's Sector 5 as Kolkata's alternative corporate and entertainment centre, albeit well off most tourists' radar.

HISTORIC BUILDING

(VM; Map p456; ☎ 033-22235142; www.victoriame-morial-cal.org; Indian/foreigner incl park ₹10/150; ☀ 10am–5pm Tue–Sun, last tickets 4.30pm) The incredible Victoria Memorial is a vast, beautifully proportioned festival of white marble: think US Capitol meets Taj Mahal. Had it been built for a beautiful Indian princess rather than a dead colonial queen, this would surely be considered one of India's greatest buildings. It was designed to commemorate Queen Victoria's 1901 diamond jubilee, but construction wasn't completed until nearly 20 years after her death.

Inside, highlights are the soaring central chamber and the Calcutta Gallery, an excellent, even-handed exhibition tracing the city's colonial-era history. But even if you don't want to go in, the building is still worth admiring from afar: there's a magnificently photogenic view across reflecting ponds from the northeast. Or you can get closer by paying your way into the large, well-tended park. Entrance is from the north or south gates (with ticket booths at both). The east gate is exit-only by day, but on dry season evenings, enter here for the 45-minute English-language sound & light show (Map p456; Indian/foreigner ₹10/20; 🕒7.15pm Tue-Sun mid-Oct-Feb, 7.45pm Tue-Sun Mar-Jun). Tickets available from 5pm. Show seating is outside and uncovered. No shows in summer.

St Paul's Cathedral

CHURCH

(Map p456; Cathedral Rd; 🕒9am-noon & 3-6pm) With its central crenellated tower, St Paul's would look quite at home in Cambridgeshire. Built between 1839 and 1847, it has a remarkably wide nave and features a stained-glass west window by pre-Raphaelite maestro, Sir Edward Burne-Jones.

Indian Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p460; ☎033-22861702; www.indianmuseumkolkata.org; 27 Chowringhee Rd; Indian/foreigner ₹10/150, camera ₹50; 🕒10am-4.30pm Tue-Sun, last entry 4pm) India's biggest and oldest major museum celebrated its bicentenary in February 2014. It's mostly a lovably old-fashioned place that fills a large colonnaded palace ranged around a central lawn. Extensive exhibits include fabulous sculptures dating back two millennia, notably the lavishly carved 2nd-century-BC Barhut Gateway. But there's so much more. Gag at the pickled human embryos beneath a dangling whale skeleton. Seek out an ancient Egyptian mummy. Peruse 37 types of opium in the library-like commercial-botany gallery. Notice over 7kg of rings and bangles found in the tummy of a gigantic man-eating crocodile. Woman-eating too, one supposes.

No bags are allowed inside: handbags can be stored at the entrance but don't arrive with a big backpack.

New Market

MARKET

(Hogg Bazaar; Lindsay St) Marked by a distinctive red-brick clocktower, this enormous warren of market halls dates originally from 1874 but was substantially rebuilt after a 1980s fire. By day, handicraft touts can be a minor annoyance. It's more interesting just after dawn when there's a harrowing fascination in watching the arrival of animals at the Hogg Meat Market, with its grizzly chopping blocks, gruesomely blood-splattered floors and grimly pillared high ceilings. Another curiosity to seek out is Nahoum Bakery (Stall F-20, New Market; ☎ 9.30am-8pm Mon-Sat, 9.30am-1pm Sun), little changed since 1902 when the Jewish owners arrived from Baghdad. The little teak cash-desk is 80 years old.

St Thomas Church

CHURCH

(7 Middleton Row) Opened in 1842, this Catholic church has a Doric columned portico topped by a short octagonal spire. It was here that the body of Mother Teresa lay 'in state' after her death in 1997.

Academy of Fine Arts

ART GALLERY

(2 Cathedral Rd; ☎ 3-8pm) FREE Several bright, ground-floor gallery rooms in this 1933 building feature changing exhibitions by local living artists.

Ahuja Museum for Arts

ART GALLERY

(www.sdahujaart.com/; Elgin Rd; ☎ noon-6pm) FREE Changing exhibitions feature mostly excellent 21st-century works by Bengali artists. Free, even the coffee (when we visited)!

Harrington Street Arts Centre

ART GALLERY

(Map p456; www.hstreetartscentre.com; 2nd fl, 8 Ho Chi Minh Sarani; ☎ 2-8pm Mon-Sat) Imaginative exhibitions, normally photographic, are spread through four spacious rooms of a classic Kolkata colonial building.

Birla Planetarium

PLANETARIUM

(Map p456; Chowringhee Rd; admission ₹30; ☎ in English 1.30pm & 6.30pm) Loosely styled on Sarnath's classic Buddhist stupa, this 1962 dome presents slow-moving, half-hour star shows.

Aurobindo Bhawan

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Map p456; 8 Shakespeare Sarani; ☎ 8am-8pm) Revolutionary turned guru Sri Aurobindo was born in Calcutta in 1872. His childhood mansion-home has been preserved and its garden creates a small oasis of peace in the city centre.

Mother Teresa's Motherhouse

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22497115, 033-22172277; www.motherteresa.org; 54A AJC Bose Rd; ☎ 8am-noon & 3-6pm Fri-Wed) A regular flow of mostly Christian pilgrims visit the Missionaries of Charity's 'Motherhouse' to pay homage at Mother Teresa's large, sober tomb. A small adjacent museum room displays Teresa's worn sandals and battered enamel dinner bowl. Located upstairs is the room where she worked and slept from 1953 to 1997, preserved in all its simplicity.

KOLKATA IN...*Three Days

On the first day, admire the Victoria Memorial (p457) and surrounding attractions, then visit India Tourism to grab a Marble Palace permit (to be used two days hence), before dining and dancing on Park St. On day two wander through the colonial-era wonderland of BBD Bagh (Map p466; Dalhousie Sq), experience the fascinating/disturbing alley-life of Old Chinatown and Barabazar, and observe Howrah Bridge (p463) from colourful Mullik Ghat flower market (p463). Day three visit Marble Palace (p463) and surrounding attractions, continuing to Kumartuli (p464) directly or by a vastly longer loop via Dakshineswar (p465) and Belur Math (p464).

One Week

In addition to the three-day itinerary, experience the contrasts of Southern Kolkata, its art galleries, golf clubs, dawn laughing clubs, the great Bengali food and the goat sacrifices at Kalighat (p465). Ponder the moral dilemmas of taking/not taking a hand-drawn rickshaw. Then take a multiday tour to the Sundarbans in West Bengal or consider volunteering for a few days having visited Mother Teresa's Motherhouse (p459).

south. It's in the second alley to the right (after Hotel Heaven).

South Park Street Cemetery CEMETERY
(Map p456; donation ₹20, guide booklet ₹100; ☀8am-4.45pm) Active 1757 to 1840, this historic cemetery remains a wonderful oasis of calm featuring mossy Raj-era graves from rotundas to soaring pyramids, all jostling for space in a lightly manicured jungle.

Netaji Bhawan MUSEUM
(Map p456; ☎033-24756139; www.netaji.org; 38/2 Elgin Rd; adult/child ₹5/2; ☀11am-4pm Tue-Sun)

Celebrating the life and vision of controversial independence radical Subhas Chandra Bose, this house museum was Bose's brother's residence from which Subhas made his famous 'Great Escape' from British-imposed house arrest in January 1941. Some rooms retain a 1940s feel and the original getaway car is parked in the drive.

🗨 BBD Bagh

One of Raj-era Calcutta's foremost squares, BBD Bagh is centred on a palm-lined central reservoir-lake ('tank') that once supplied the young city's water. Although concrete intrusions detract from the overall spectacle, many a splendid colonial-era edifice remains. Foremost is the 1780 Writers' Building (Map p466), whose glorious south facade looks something like a French provincial city hall. It was originally built for clerks ('writers') of the East India Company. Behind, past the joyously re-painted Eastern Railway Building (Map p466; NS Rd), the former Chartered Bank Building (Map p466; India Exchange Pl) has a vaguely Moorish feel and shrubs sprouting from the unintended upper turrets. The 1860s GPO (Map p466) has a soaring rotunda and the Standard

Life Building (Map p466; 32 BBD Bagh) sports cherubic details that are coming back to life with a new restoration project. Although half collapsed, the ruins of the once-grand Currency Building (Map p466; BBD Bagh East; ☉10am-5pm Mon-Fri) have been stabilised, making an interesting venue for an exhibition-bookshop of the Archaeological Survey of India. Standing proud to the north is St Andrews Church (Map p466; 14-15 BBD Bagh) with a fine Wren-style spire.

St John's Church

CHURCH

(Map p466; ☎033-22436098; KS Roy Rd; admission on foot/with car ₹10/25; ☉8am-5pm) This stone-spined 1787 church is ringed by columns and contains a small, portrait-draped room once used as an office by Warren Hastings, India's first British governor-general (on the right as you enter). The tree-shaded grounds have several interesting monuments including the mausoleum of Job Charnock (Map p466) celebrating Kolkata's disputed 'founder'. The 1902 Black Hole Memorial (Map p466) was moved here in 1940.

High Court

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Map p466; <http://calcuttahighcourt.nic.in>; Esplanade Row West; ☉10am-5pm Mon-Fri) One of Kolkata's greatest architectural triumphs, the High Court building was built between 1864 and 1872, loosely modelled on the medieval Cloth Hall in Ypres (Flanders). The grand Gothic exterior is best viewed from the south. Sometimes foreigners can simply wander in but more likely you'll be asked to go around to the eastern entrance security desk and apply for an entry pass (free).

Once inside it's fun to simply explore the endless arches following brigades of lawyers shuffling around in twin-tailed white collar-pieces and tuxedos overlaid with flapping university-style gowns. Sadly photography isn't allowed.

Banking Museum

MUSEUM

(Map p466; ☎033-22318164; 11th fl, SBI Bldg, Strand Rd; ☉2.30-5pm Tue-Fri, or by request) FREE This professionally presented little museum brings alive the history of Indian banking using paintings, models, seals, weapons and archive materials. A star exhibit is the 'forgotten' chest in which some of Mahatma Gandhi's ashes were left for 46 years in the State Bank vault in Cuttack.

👁️ Barabazar & Howrah

The following walk links several minor religious sights but much of the fun comes from exploring the vibrantly chaotic alleys en route that teem with traders, rickshaw couriers and baggage wallahs hauling impossibly huge packages balanced on their heads. Hidden away amid the paper-merchants of Old China Bazaar St, the Armenian Church of Nazareth (Map p466; Armenian St; ☺️ 9am-4pm Mon-Sat) was founded in 1707 and is claimed to be Kolkata's oldest place of Christian worship. The larger 1797 Portuguese-Catholic

Holy Rosary Cathedral (Map p466; Brabourne Rd; ☺️ 6am-11am & 5-6pm) has eye-catching crown-topped side towers and an interior whose font is festively kitsch.

Kolkata's Jewish community once numbered around 30,000 but these days barely 40 ageing co-religionists turn up at Maghen David Synagogue (Map p466; Canning St). Around the corner, the Neveh Shalome Synagogue (Map p466; Brabourne Rd) is almost invisible behind shop stalls. Once you've fought your way across Brabourne St, descend Pollock St between very colourful stalls selling balloons, tinsel and plastic plants to the decrepit Pollock St Post Office (Map p466), once a grand Jewish school building. Opposite, Bethel Synagogue (Map p466; Pollock St) has a facade that looks passingly similar to a 1930s cinema. The synagogue has a fine colonnaded interior but to get into this or the other synagogues you'll generally need to have contacted the Community Affairs office at 63 Park St, ☎ 9831054669, in advance.

Parallel to Pollock St, wider Ezra St has a brilliant old perfumerie (Map p466; 55 Ezra St), just before the Shree Cutchi Jain Temple (Map p466; Ezra St). From there follow Parsee Church St east to reach Old Chinatown or swing back up ever-fascinating Rabindra Sarani to find the shop-clad 1926 Nakhoda Mosque (Map p466; 1 Zakaria St) that was loosely modelled on Akbar's Mausoleum at Sikandra.

Howrah Bridge

LANDMARK

(Rabindra Setu; Map p466) Howrah Bridge is a 705m-long abstraction of steel cantilevers, sweat and traffic fumes. Built during WWII, it's one of the world's busiest bridges and a Kokatan architectural icon. Photography of the bridge is technically prohibited but you might sneak a discreet shot from one of the various ferries that ply the Hooghly River to the vast 1906 Howrah train station.

Mullick Ghat Flower Market

FLOWER MARKET

(Map p466) Near the southeast end of Howrah Bridge, the flower market is fascinating and colourful virtually 24 hours a day. Many workers live in makeshift shacks, bathing in the river behind from a ghat with sunset views of Howrah Bridge. At around 7am local wrestlers practise their art on a small caged area of sand set back from the river.

Old Chinatown

For nearly two centuries the area around Phears Lane was Kolkata's Chinatown. A fit of anti-Chinese fervour during the 1962 war drove many ethnic Chinese away and these days 'old' Chinatown is predominantly Muslim. However, just after dawn, there's a lively market scene on Tiretta's Bazaar. It's all closed by 10am, as is the archetypal old shop, Hap Hing (Map p466; 10 Sun Yat Sen St; ☉6am-10am) whose owner Stella Chen can tell you lots more about the Chinese community.

Other historic shops nearby, albeit non-Chinese, include musical instrument makers Mondal (p483) and the fascinating 1948 gun shop ML Bhunja (Map p466; ☎033-22374144; 301 Bipin Behari Ganguli St; ☉12.30-6.30pm Mon-Fri), with its misty old cases of rifles, sabres, a flintlock and many an old bayonet laced with snake venom.

Around the once-grand 1924 Toong On Temple (Map p466; Blackburn Lane) destitute scavengers sift through rubbish heaps, sleeping in tent-and-box shacks on neighbouring pavements. Very humbling.

Rabindra Sarani & Around

This ever fascinating street of close-packed shops and workshops is threaded through by tram 8 (Esplanade-Galiff St, every 20 minutes) which terminates at the site of Kolkata's curious Sunday morning pet and bird market. There are more interesting sights around the Kolkata University on College St, east of Rabindra Sarani.

★ Tagore's House

MUSEUM

(Jorasanko Thaurbari; ☎033-22695242; www.rbu.ac.in/museum; 246D Rabindra Sarani; Indian/foreigner adult ₹10/50, student ₹5/25; ☉10.30am-5pm Tue-Sun, last entry 4.30pm) The comfortable 1784 family mansion of Rabindranath Tagore has become a shrine-like museum to India's greatest modern poet. Even if his personal effects don't inspire you, some of the well-chosen quotations might spark an interest in Tagore's deeply universalist philosophy. There's also a decent gallery of paintings by his family and contemporaries, and an exhibition on his links with Japan. The 1930 photo of Tagore taken with Einstein could win a 'World's Wildest Hair' competition. You'd need an hour to see everything, but for many casual visitors a brief glimpse is enough.

★ Marble Palace

MUSEUM

(☎033-22393310; 46 Muktagam Babu St; ☉10am-3pm, closed Mon & Thu) This resplendent 1835 rajah's mansion is overstuffed with dusty statues of thinkers and dancing girls, much Victoriana, ample Belgian glassware and fine if bedraggled paintings, including supposedly original works by Murillo, Joshua Reynolds and Rubens.

Napoleons beat Wellingtons three to one in the music room, which is lavishly floored with marble inlay. The ballroom retains its vast array of candle chandeliers with globes of silvered glass to spread illumination: original 19th-century disco balls!

Admission is free, but before arriving you need to get a permission note from West Bengal Tourism (p484) or India Tourism (p484). To find Marble Palace from MG Rd metro, walk north and turn left at the first traffic light (171 Chittaranjan Ave). Coming from the east, it's on the lane that leaves Rabindra Sarani between Nos 198 and 200.

Ashutosh Museum of Indian Art MUSEUM
(☎033-22410071; www.caluniv.ac.in/museum/museum.html; Centenary Bldg, 87/1 College St; admission ₹10; ☎11am-4pm Mon-Fri) Priceless antique Indian sculptures, brasswork and Bengali terracotta are displayed with very little fanfare in this dry, but brilliantly endowed museum tucked behind Kolkata University's Central Library. Entrance is off College St down the first lane to the left as you walk north from Colootola Rd.

Indian Coffee House HISTORIC SITE
(1st fl, 15 Bankim Chatterjee St; coffee ₹12; ☎9am-9pm Mon-Sat, to 12.30pm & 5-9pm Sun) If you're walking down College St to the Ashutosh Museum from intriguing MG Rd, after one block turn left, take the fourth doorway on the left and climb the stairs to this mythic cafe. The cheap, dishwasher coffee can hardly be recommended, but it's perversely fascinating to look inside this unpretentious high-ceilinged place that was once a meeting place of freedom fighters, bohemians and revolutionaries.

👁 Northern Kolkata

This area's long distances and tedious traffic are somewhat mitigated if you take the boat downstream from Dakshineswar to Belur Math.

★ Kumartuli Idol-makers AREA
Countless effigies of deities are immersed in the holy Hooghly during Kolkata's colourful pujas (offering or prayers). Most have been created in specialist kumar (sculptor) workshops in this enthralling district, notably along Banamali Sakar St, the lane running west from 499 Rabindra Sarani. Craftsmen are busiest from August to October, creating straw frames, adding clay coatings and painting the divine features for the Durga and Kali festivals. In November, old figures wash up on river banks and are refurbished.

Sheetalnathji Mandir JAIN TEMPLE
(www.jaindharmaonline.com/pilgri/shitala.htm; Badridas Temple St; ☎6am-noon & 3-7pm) The best known of a closely grouped trio of Jain temples, this 1867 complex is a dazzling if unrefined pastiche of colourful mosaics, spires, columns and slivered figurines. The effect is Gaudi-esque. It's 1.6km from Shyambazar metro. The temple relies on donations.

★ Belur Math SACRED SITE
(☎033-26545892; www.sriramakrishna.org/belur.htm; Grand Trunk Rd; ☎6.30am-noon & 3.30-

MOTHER TERESA

For many people, Mother Teresa (1910–97) was the living image of human sacrifice. Born Agnes Gonxha Bojaxhiu to Albanian parents in then-Ottoman Üsküp (now Skopje in Macedonia), she joined the Irish Order of Loreto nuns and worked for over a decade teaching in Calcutta's St Mary's High School. Horrified by the city's spiralling poverty, she established a new order, the Missionaries of Charity (www.motherteresa.org) and founded refuges for the destitute and dying. The first of these, Nirmal Hriday (p465), opened in 1952. Although the order swiftly expanded into an international charity, Mother Teresa herself continued to live in absolute simplicity. She was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 and beatified by the Vatican in October 2003, the first official step towards being made a saint.

But this 'Saint of the Gutters' is not universally beloved. For some Kolkatans it's slightly galling to find their cultured, predominantly Hindu city popularly linked in the world's mind with a Catholic heroine whose work underlined the city's least appealing facet. Germaine Greer has accused Mother Teresa of religious imperialism, while Christopher Hitchens' book, The Missionary Position, decried the donations from dictators and corrupt tycoons. Many have questioned the Missionaries of Charity's minimal medical background and Teresa's staunchly Catholic position against contraception. However, the organisation was never primarily focused on saving lives, simply offering a little love and dignity to the dying. Before Mother Teresa, even that was an unknown luxury for the truly destitute.

8.30pm) Set very attractively amid palms and manicured lawns, this large religious centre is the headquarters of the Ramakrishna Mission, inspired by 19th-century Indian sage Ramakrishna Paramahansa, who preached the unity of all religions. Its centrepiece is the 1938 Ramakrishna Mandir (☺ closes 8pm) which somehow manages to look like a cathedral, Indian palace and Istanbul's Aya Sofya all at the same time. Several smaller shrines near the Hooghly riverbank include the Sri Sarada Devi Temple (☺ 6.30-11.30am & 3.30-5.15pm), entombing the guru's wife.

Accessed from the car park, a beautifully presented museum (☺ 8.30-11.30am & 3.30-5.30pm Tue-Sun) charts Ramakrishna's life and the travels of his great disciple Swami Vivekananda.

From the main road outside, six daily suburban trains run Belur Math-Howrah (25 minutes) most usefully at 10.45am and 4.45pm. Picking up next door to Belur Math train station, minibus 11 and buses 54/56 run to Esplanade/Howrah in miserable stop-start traffic. Southbound they pass almost beside Bandaghat from which you might prefer to take the thrice hourly ferry across to Ahiritola, then switch to the Bagbazar boat for Kumartuli. From Belur Jetty, ferries (hourly) and open boats (when full) operate to Dakshineswar. Southbound ferries to Howrah via Bagbazar depart at 6.30pm and 8pm (plus 9.15am/1.30pm weekdays/Sunday).

Dakshineswar

HINDU TEMPLE

(www.dakshineswarkalitemple.org; ☺ 6am-12.30pm & 3.30-8.30pm) The heart of this vibrant riverside complex is a cream-and-red 1847 Kali Temple shaped like an Indian Sacré-Coeur. The site is where Ramakrishna started his remarkable spiritual journey, and his small room in the outer northwest corner of the temple precinct is now a place of special meditative reverence. No photos, deposit shoes outside complex.

Several daily suburban trains from Sealdah run to Dakshineswar station (₹5, 20 minutes), 400m south of the temple. A metro extension is due to reach the same point by 2017, but for now you can either take painfully slow DN9/1 from Dum Dum metro. Or from the southwest side of Noapara metro, take an auto to Dunlop (₹10, a convoluted 15 minutes) then cross under the curling overpass and take bus 79 for five minutes. Hourly ferries from almost under the old Dakshineswar Bridge run to Belur Math (₹10). From around 200m further north, uncovered small boats do the same route much more frequently, but you'll have to sit cross legged in the sun (or rain), squashed with two dozen others for nearly half an hour. Bring a hat or umbrella.

☉ Kalighat

Surrounding Kalighat temple is a fascinating maze of alleys jammed with market stalls selling votive flowers, brassware and religious artefacts.

★ Kalighat Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p468; ☺ 5am-10pm, central shrine closed 2-4pm) This ancient Kali temple is Kolkata's holiest spot for Hindus and possibly the source of the city's name. Today's version is a 1809 rebuild with floral- and peacock-motif tiles that look more Victorian than Indian. More interesting than the architecture are the jostling pilgrim queues that snake into the main hall to fling hibiscus flowers at a crowned, three-eyed Kali image. There's no need to join them to feel the atmosphere.

Behind the bell pavilion but still within the mandir complex, goats are ritually beheaded (generally mornings) to honour the ever-demanding goddess. To the direct east is a pea-green 'holy pond' and by the sanctuary's north perimeter, a 'tree of fertility'.

Unless using their services to queue-jump into the central shrine hall, a token donation of ₹20 is sufficient for any impromptu temple guide. Donating ₹21 is even better – giving a sum ending in one is considered lucky and implies that you are familiar with local customs.

Nirmal Hriday

ARCHITECTURE

(Map p468; 251 Kalighat Rd; ☺ closed to visitors) Mother Teresa's world famous, if surprisingly small, home for the dying, was originally a Kalighat pilgrim hostel. Its roof-corners are pimped with neo-Mughal mini-domes.

Kalighat Idol-makers

WORKSHOPS

(Map p468; Kalighat Rd) Though less famous than Kumartuli, there's a fascinating group of idol-makers' workshops where Kalighat Rd curves north from Hazra Rd.

📍 Ballyunge, Gariahat & Lansdowne

East of Kalighat, these areas are a fascinating mixture of new, old and slowly gentrifying, with a scattering of restaurants, shopping areas and galleries.

Birla Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(Map p468; Gariahat Rd; ☎ 6-11am & 4.30-9pm) The 20th-century Birla Mandir is a large Lakshmi Narayan temple complex in cream-coloured sandstone whose three corn-cob shaped towers are more impressive for their size than their carvings.

CIMA

ART GALLERY

(Map p468; ☎ 033-24858509; www.cimaartindia.com; Sunny Towers, 2nd fl, 43 Ashutosh Chowdhury Rd; ☎ 11am-7pm Tue-Sat, 3-7pm Mon) CIMA is a cutting-edge contemporary Bengali art gallery with an eclectic giftshop.

Experimenter

ART GALLERY

(Map p468; www.experimenter.in; 2/1 Hindustan Rd; ☎ 11am-7pm Mon-Sat) Experimenter is a relatively small contemporary art gallery but its exhibitions are about as cutting edge as anything you'll find in Kolkata. It's tucked behind Kanishka's on Hindustan Rd just off Gariahat Rd.

Birla Academy of Art & Culture

GALLERY

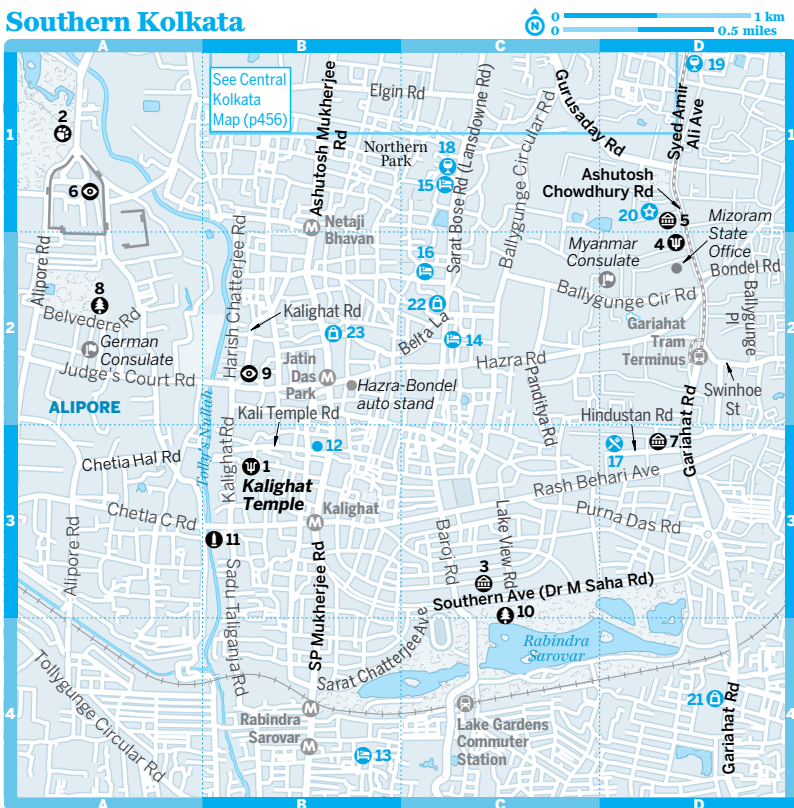

(Map p468; ☎ 033-24666802; www.birlaart.com; 109 Southern Ave; exhibition/museum free/₹5; ☎ 3-8pm Tue-Sun) This multi-storey gallery displays frequently changing exhibitions both from contemporary artists and from its vast collection encompassing all Indian styles back to some classic medieval work.

Rabindra Sarovar

(Map p468) The lake here prettily reflects hazy sunrises, while middle-class Kolkatans jog, row and meditate around the parklands.

Southern Kolkata

Some form circles to do group-yoga routines culminating in ho-ho ha-ha-ha laugh-ins, engagingly described by Tony Hawks as Laughing Clubs in The Weekenders: Adventures in Calcutta. Even if forced, a good giggle can be refreshingly therapeutic.

Alipore & Around

Wealthy Alipore extends west from Tolly's Nullah stream. This affluent area was once the home of the British viceroy, and several colonial relics remain amidst the high-rise condos.

Alipore Zoo ZOO
(Map p468; www.kolkatazoo.in; Alipore Rd; admission ₹20; ☀9am-5pm Fri-Wed) Kolkata's 16-hectare zoo first opened in 1875. The spacious lawns and lakeside promenades are very popular with weekend picnickers (hence all the rubbish). Bus 230 from Rabindra Sadan passes outside.

Grass is so high in the moated Bengal Tiger enclosure that it's hard to spot the animals but it's better than several more confining cages and the aviaries whose thick rusty-black wire-mesh rather obscures viewing.

Curzon Mansion ARCHITECTURE
(Map p468; south of the Zoo) Directly south of the zoo's entrance, the access road to the National Library loops around the very regal Curzon Mansion, once the colonial Viceroy's residence. It's not (yet) a museum.

Horticultural Gardens PARK
(Map p468; Belvedere Rd; admission ₹10; ☀6-10am & 2-7pm) The lawn, tropical trees and flowering shrubs of the delightful Horticultural Gardens offer some respite from the traffic rumble.

Botanical Gardens

PARK

(📞 033-26685357; Indian/foreigner ₹10/100; 🕒 5.30am-5pm Tue-Sun; 🗺 6, 55, 55A) If it weren't such an awkward trek by public transport, Kolkata's lovely 109-hectare Botanical Gardens would make a great place to escape from the city's sounds and smells. Founded in 1786, the gardens played an important role in cultivating tea long before the drink became a household commodity. Today there's a cactus house, palm collection, river-overlook and a boating-lake with splendid Giant Amazon Lily pads.

The most touted attraction is the 250-year-old 'world's largest banyan tree'. That's a little misleading: the central trunk rotted away in the 1920s, leaving an array of cross-branches and linked aerial roots so it looks more like a copse than a single tree. The banyan is five minutes' walk from the park's Bicentenary Gate on bus route 55A, or 25 minutes' walk from the gardens' main gate where bus 55 and minibus 6 terminate after a painfully slow drive from Esplanade via Howrah. Taxis from Shakespeare Sarani charge around ₹180 via the elegant Vidyasagar Setu (aka the Hooghly Suspension Bridge).

Activities

Cooking

Kali Travel Home (📞 033-25550581; www.traveleastindia.com; courses ₹600-800; 🕒 closed summer) arranges personal three-hour Bengali cooking courses led by local women in their homes. Costs include food. Several days' advance notice required.

Golf

Volunteering

Several organisations welcome foreign volunteers. A good place to meet other volunteers informally is at Raj's Spanish Cafe (p478).

Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity (p464) welcome all comers. There's no minimum service period and no specific skills are required other than a warm heart and patience to empathise with those whose language you might not understand. Start by attending a briefing at Sishu Bhavan (Map p460; 78 AJC Bose Rd; ☺3pm Mon, Wed & Fri), two blocks north of the Motherhouse (p459).

US-based humanist Responsible Charity (www.responsiblecharity.org) looks for qualified medics or those with educational experience to volunteer for a month or more in the Jadavpur slums. Or simply donate old (decent) clothes to its collection bank at JoJo's Cafe (p477).

Calcutta Rescue (Map p460; ☎22491520, 40648277; www.calcuttarescue.org; 4th fl, 85 Collin St) provides medical care and health education for the disadvantaged of Kolkata and other parts of West Bengal. Volunteer postings are usually for six- to 12-months and limited to experienced professionals.

A similar, if adapted, tour by car costs ₹4000/4500 without/with AC for up to three people. Longer car tours to Belur Math, Dakshineswar and the Hooghly river-town sites as far as Bansberia's Kremlin-styled palace temple costs ₹5000 per car. Ask about early morning bazaar tours.

Bus Tours

Full-day sightseeing bus tours (tour ₹450; ☀ 8.30am Tue-Sun) operated by West Bengal Tourism (p484) seem a relative bargain, but feel very rushed apart from the lengthy lunch stop. Cancelled if less than eight customers sign up.

Sleeping

Decent accommodation is expensive in Kolkata and budget places are often dismal. Even in many midrange hotels, peeling paint, loose wires, battered furniture and damp patches come as standard. Many cheaper hotels lock their gates by midnight, so if you're planning a night on the tiles, check if there's a late-entry procedure.

Top-end hotels can be very significantly discounted on websites such as www.yatra.com and www.booking.com, but midrange hotels are usually better value as walk-ins, while budget places rarely take bookings at all. The Salt Lake area has many business hotels but painfully slow transportation to most points of touristic interest means that travellers might regret staying there, at least until the metro Line 2 extension arrives.

Accommodation fills to bursting before and during Durga Puja (p472). Occupancy drops noticeably afterwards (late October), but picks up again from mid-November to February.

Around Sudder Street

The nearest Kolkata gets to a traveller ghetto is the area around helpfully located Sudder St. There's a range of backpacker-oriented services, and a big advantage of arriving here is that virtually every second building is a guesthouse or hotel, ranging from Kolkata's top five-star heritage palace to ultra-budget dives that represent a whole new league of nastiness. When we list Sudder St area accommodation under ₹800, we're usually identifying the least objectionable options rather than making a recommendation. For under ₹500 expect coffin-sized rooms where the main decor is the graffiti of previous inmates; long-standing ultra-cheapies in this gloomy bracket include Maria (Map p460; ☎ 033-22520860; 5/1 Sudder St; s/d ₹400/500, without bathroom ₹250/300) and Paragon (Map p460; ☎ 033-22522445; 2 Stuart Lane; without bathroom s/d ₹300/450; ☀ check-out 11am). Pioneer (Map p460; ☎ 033-22520557; 1st fl, 1 Marquis St; d without/with bathroom & AC ₹750/1100; ☹) is slightly more survivable despite its crumbling facade, while Shams (Map p460; ☎ 9331007721, 033-30222722; 3 Tottee Lane; r ₹500, with AC ₹1200; ☹ ☹) has ceilings so low that only the shortest guests can stand upright in the cheapest rooms.

Afridi International

HOTEL $

(Map p460; ☎ 033-66077525; afridiinhotel@goldenapplehotel.in; 3 Cowie Lane; r ₹995) Possibly the most professionally managed budget hotel in Sudder St, the furniture and fittings here are top notch and the entrance is floored in crystalline Italian marble. Some rooms are small and suffer a little from damp but maintenance is regular and the 35-room 'old building' should be totally renovated by the time you read this.

SLEEPING PRICE RANGES

Accommodation price ranges for this chapter are:

$ below ₹2000

$$ ₹2000 to ₹10,000

$$$ above ₹10,000

Prices quoted are for double rooms including tax (5% on rooms over ₹1000, 17.42% on those over ₹3000). When bargaining, double-check whether the quote is 'plus plus'.

DURGA PUJA

Much as Carnival transforms Rio or New Orleans, Durga Puja brings Kolkata to a fever pitch of colourfully chaotic mayhem as the city's biggest festival celebrates the maternal essence of the divine. For five days in the Bengali month of Aswin, people venerate gaudily painted idols of the 10-armed goddess Durga and her entourage displayed in pandals (temporary shrines) that dominate yards and block roads. Pandals grow ever more ornate and complex each year, some carrying topical or political messages. West Bengal Tourism (p484) tours try to take tourists around a selection of the best pandals, but getting anywhere within the city can take hours given the general festive pandemonium. At the festival's climax, myriad Durga idols are thrown into the sacred Hooghly River amid singing, water throwing, fireworks and indescribable traffic congestion. If you just want pandal photos and not the festival aspect, consider visiting just after Durga Puja when the idols have gone but pandals have yet to be deconstructed. Or come back for Kali Puja three weeks later when the city does the whole thing all over again, this time with statues of blue-faced, red-tongued Kali.

Hotel Aafreen

HOTEL $

Temperamental lift.

Hotel Galaxy

BACKPACKER GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22524565; hotelgalaxy.kol@gmail.com; 3 Stuart Lane; d/tr ₹850/1100, r without bathroom ₹500; 🍷🍷) This quiet, ever-popular guesthouse looks dowdy from outside but several rooms have been unexpectedly well upgraded. Several others are large and good value despite being older with some peeling paint. Reliable hot water in ensuite bathrooms and free wi-fi; add ₹150 for air-conditioning. There's a very small front porch/sitting area, with mini library.

Aafreen Tower

HOTEL $

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22293280; www.aafreentower.co.in; 9A Kyd St; d ₹1000, with AC ₹1500; 🍷🍷) The glass elevator plays music as it rises to mustard yellow corridors where good-sized rooms have a Disneyesque caricature of old-world style. There are obvious signs of wear but it's relatively good value in this price range. Wi-fi only in the small lobby.

Modern Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22524960; Stuart Lane; r from ₹350) High-ceilinged main-house rooms are ropey and rooftop ones are like caged cells, but a vague feeling of bygone history haunts the dustily atmospheric 1st-floor sitting room, and there's a peaceful if ragged roof terrace.

Timestar Hotel

HOTEL $

(Map p460; ☎ 033-30222959, 033-22523817; timestarhotel@yahoo.co.in; 2 Tottie Lane; s/d from ₹475/700, r with AC ₹1000) This chunky-walled colonial-era mansion house has some tatty walls but newly tiled floors and high enough ceilings in the upstairs rooms that they don't overheat too badly.

Golden Apple Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p460; ☎ 66077500; www.goldenapplehotel.in; 9 Sudder St; cubicle ₹500, r ₹1800-2500) The Golden Apple has accommodation that's mostly fresh and stylishly appointed for the price. Even the cramped cheapest rooms somehow jam in a small desk. A handy backpacker feature is the set of 15 top-floor budget 'cubicles': like a dorm deluxe, each is a lockable bedspace partitioned off by smoked-glass walls and with a storage area beneath the mattress.

Hotel Kempton

HOTEL $$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-40177888; www.hotelkempton.in; 3 Marquis St; s/d from ₹375/4461; 🍷🍷) The Kempton welcomes guests with a light-suffused feast of white marble and artificial orchids. Landings have attractive water-colours and rooms are sturdily-built with Springwel mattresses and walk-in showers. Prices include a buffet breakfast.

Fairlawn Hotel

HOTEL $$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22521510; www.fairlawnhotel.com; 13A Sudder St; s/d incl breakfast & afternoon tea ₹3550/4545; 🍷🍷) Taking guests since 1936, the Fairlawn is a characterful 1783

Raj-era home fronted by tropical greenery. The stairs and sitting room are smothered with photos, family mementos and articles celebrating the hotel's long-term owner who passed away aged 94 in September 2014. Rooms are mostly spacious but less polished than you might anticipate. Indeed some are downright plain with little charm and old bathtubs over-painted rather than re-enamelled.

Astoria Hotel

HOTEL $$$

(Map p460; www.astoria.in; 6/2 Sudder St; new block s/d ₹2500/3400, old block d ₹2000; ㊟㊟) In an alley off Sudder St, the pleasant new block is dotted with square-framed artworks and has a boutiquey modern feel with lots of little extras (kettle, safe, fridge etc), though some walls suffer from damp-stains.

Beware that there's also a contrasting-ly unappealing old block. Rooms there, while large and partially refurbished, are approached via very dowdy stairs and unlike new-block rooms, walls are stark, wi-fi doesn't work and air-con is older.

DK International

HOTEL $$$

(Map p460; ㊟033-40019283, 033-22522540; www.dkintohotel.com; 11/1A Marquis St; r from ₹2473; ㊟) This relatively new five-storey glass tower has a certain neo-art-deco feel in its corridors, soap-stone 'jade' ornamentation and rooms with golden curtains.

Hotel VIP Intercontinental

HOTEL $$$

(Map p460; ㊟033-22520150; vipintercontinental@rediffmail.com; 44 Mirza Ghalib St; s/d from ₹1520/2130; ㊟㊟) Behind the very narrow, one-desk reception hall, the cramped but friendly VIP InterContinental has good air-conditioned little rooms in varying styles, all with stone floors, and hot water in presentable little bathrooms.

Hotel Lindsay

HOTEL $$$

(Map p460; ㊟033-30218866; www.hotellindsay.com; 8 Lindsay St; s/d ₹5870/7045) A thorough redecoration gives an attractive old-Kolkata 'heritage' ambience to the Lindsay's guest-rooms and corridors, belying the 1970s architecture of the tower in which they lie. Rooms numbered xx01 overlook New Market. When the hotel is full, the elevator struggles to cope with demand. Walk-in rates from ₹4100.

Sapphire Suites

HOTEL $$$

(Map p460; ㊟033-22523052; www.sapphire.suites.in; 15 Lindsay St; s/d from ₹5870/6460, ste ₹8220-10,570) Overlooking New Market, this new hotel gives itself a smart feel with sparkling white walls set off by deep brown floors and B&W prints. However much feels cramped, the 'gymnasium' is a two-machine fitness cubicle and the 'steam room' little more than a high-tech shower. Walk-in rates from ₹4700.

★ Oberoi Grand

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(Map p460; ㊟033-22492323; www.oberoi-hotels.com; 15 Chowringhee Rd; s/d/ste from ₹23,484/25,245/46,968; ㊟㊟㊟㊟) Saluting guards usher you out of the chaos of Chowringhee Rd into a regal oasis of genteel calm that deserves every point on its five stars. Immaculate accommodation exudes timeless class, the swimming pool is ringed with 5-storey palms, and proactive staff anticipate your every need. Remarkably comfortable beds come with a five-choice pillow menu. Online bargains from ₹8454 can be picked up.

🏠 Around Park Street

Sunflower Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$$

(Map p460; ㊟033-22299401; www.sunflower-guesthouse.com; 5th fl, 7 Royd St; d ₹1000-1290, with AC ₹1380-1913; ㊟㊟㊟) The Sunflower is slowly taking over and restoring a grand 1865 residential six-storey building with layered atrium and 1940s lift. Take it to the top then climb stairs one floor higher to check-in. Rooms can be slightly spartan but they're assiduously cleaned, with high ceilings.

Pleasant communal spaces are available on the first and third floors (the latter with wi-fi, which is not available in-room). The most delightful feature is sitting in the rooftop garden at dusk as the fairy lights start to twinkle.

YWCA

HOSTEL $

(Map p460; ㊟033-22292494; www.ywcalcutta.org; 1 Middleton Row; s/d ₹670/1000, without bathroom ₹410/770, with AC ₹1000/1350; ㊟) No, you don't have to be female to get a room in this well kept, imposing but basic 1925 building. Old high-ceilinged rooms have slatted green doors opening onto a wide arched corridor whose other open side faces a central tennis court. Large, sparse sitting rooms have a sense of times gone by, without the slightest hint of luxury. Rates are a remarkable bargain for such a perfect location and a very basic breakfast is included.

Corporate

HOTEL $$
(Map p460; ☎ 033-22267551; www.thecorporate-kolkata.com; 4 Royd St; s/d/ste ₹5284/5871/7632; 🍷🍷) In the suave little designer lobby, the receptionist seems to float in luminous marble. Compact well-maintained rooms in beige and brown tones, have comfy thick mattresses with satin sashes and pale polished stone bathrooms.

Mini-kettle, safe and hair-dryer are provided. Suites have small balconies and there's a four-table 'garden' behind the kitchen windows. When all 24 rooms are full, the lift and staff can get overstretched.

Casa Fortuna

HOTEL $$
(Map p456; ☎ 033-40218000; www.casafortuna-hotel.com; 234/1 AJC Bose Rd; s/d ₹5871/7045; 🍷@🍷) Five-storey city-centre modern cube where 26 attractively fresh rooms have burlap style wallpaper and oversized windows, albeit some facing the expressway outside. Pleasant first floor bar-restaurant, obliging staff.

Park Hotel

HOTEL $$$
(Map p460; ☎ 033-22499000; www.thepark-hotels.com; 17 Park St; s/d from ₹9400/10,570; 🍷@🍷🍷) The Park is a top central choice for hip, upmarket accommodation, though reverberating music might disturb light sleepers on the lower floors. Hidden on the rear 1st floor is a trio of well reputed restaurants and a passage past waterfall foliage to Aqua, one of India's coolest poolside bars.

Bizarrely the hotel's under-sized reception area is accessed from Park St through The Street, a cafe-deli.

🏠 Southern Chowringhee

Central B&B

B&B $$
(Map p456; ☎ 9836465400; www.kolkatabnb.com; Flat 28, 7th fl, Lansdowne Court, 5B Sarat Bose Rd; s/d/tr ₹2599/2799/3699; 🍷) Probably the best Kolkata apartment-guesthouse to have made its name through AirBnB, Central lives up to all its promises. Rooms are huge and comfortable with large shared lounge and communal kitchen. There's fast wi-fi, a basic breakfast, a basket of snacks and an ever obliging (if usually invisible) host.

Pre-paying a deposit (paypal/credit-card) is required. No drop in guests.

Diamond Suites

GUESTHOUSE $$
(Map p456; ☎ 033-64582564; 17A Karaya Rd; s/d ₹1500/1800; 🍷🍷) This friendly 12-room family hotel has clean, compact rooms, some oddly shaped, others with hotplates and tiny kitchen sink units. There's a rooftop view of sorts.

Astor

HOTEL $$
(Map p456; ☎ 033-22829950; www.astorkolkata.com; 15 Shakespeare Sarani; s/d/ste ₹5871/6458/8220) Artful evening floodlighting brings out the best of the Astor's solid 1905 architecture, while inside, walls are lavished with B&W photos of old Kolkata. A creative palate of chocolate, beige and iridescent butterfly blue brings to life beautifully furnished rooms, fully refurbished in 2012. Some suites include a four-poster bed. Sizes and shapes vary. There's no lift.

Park Prime

HOTEL $$$
(Map p456; ☎ 033-30963096; www.chocolate-hotels.in; 226 AJC Bose Rd; s/d ₹11,742/12,330; 🍷@🍷🍷) Sleep in an artistic statement whose exterior looks like a seven-storey computer punch-card and whose rooms have optical-illusion decor. Bedboards carry up across the ceiling and sweep down the wall to emerge as a dagger of desk. It's all done without compromising comfort, the foyer is spaciouly inviting and the rooftop swimming pool nestles beside hip Henry's Lounge Bar. Walk-in rates drop to single/double ₹7045/7632.

Kenilworth

HOTEL $$$
(Map p456; ☎ 033-22823939; www.kenilworth-hotels.com/kolkata; 1 Little Russell St; s/d ₹12,330/13,500; 🍷🍷) The deep lobby of marble, dark wood and chandeliers contrasts successfully with a more contemporary cafe that spills out onto an attractive quadrangle of lawn. Pleasingly bright, fully equipped rooms have some of Kolkata's most comfortable beds.

Gym but no pool. Online rates drop to as little as single/double ₹7000/7500.

🏠 Motherhouse Area

The following options are handier than Sudder St for Mother Teresa volunteers, but they're rather scattered without backpacker facilities or any sense of 'traveller community'.

Georgian Inn

BACKPACKER GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p460; ☎ 9830156625, 9830068355; www.georgianin.com; 1A Doctor Lane; s/d ₹750/1000, with AC ₹1200/1350) Very functional but friendly and cheap, a bonus is the fascinating melee of Talitala Market that surrounds the property. Street-scapes of Doctor Lane to the direct east have architectural hints of old Penang.

Shaw Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22650841, 033-65650096; shawguesthouse@rediffmail.com; 1C Abdul Halim Lane; dm/d/tr ₹600/1200/1500) Very handy for Mother Teresa volunteers, this pleasant, clean if plainly furnished colonial-era house run by Christian owners retains original wrought iron beams and bannisters.

Enclave Guest House

HOMESTAY $$

(Map p460; ☎ 9339750040; www.enclaveguesthouse.co; 2nd & 3rd fl, 34A McLeod St; s/d ₹1400/1500) If you value space, hygiene and value over style, this unsophisticated trio of completely unmarked apartments is worth considering. All three have three decent-sized double-bedded guestrooms and a shared sitting room. There's no guest kitchen and no reception so phone before arriving.

Monovilla Inn

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-40076752; www.monovilla.inn.com; Doctor Lane; s/d ₹1200/1500, with AC ₹1500/1800) Fresh 21st-century rooms back a 1940s three-storey building with just two guest-rooms per floor (two more under construction on the roof). Upstairs is better for light. Minimal communal space.

BBD Bagh

While accommodation choices are limited, this area has plenty to see and Chandni Chowk metro is handily close.

Broadway Hotel

HOTEL $

(Map p466; ☎ 033-22363930; www.broadway-hotel.in; 27A Ganesh Chandra Ave; s/d/tr/ste ₹825/925/1585/1940, s/d without bathroom ₹765/850) The Broadway is a simple colonial era hotel that's kept all its character without going even slightly upmarket. An antiquated lift accesses plain but well maintained rooms with high ceilings and re-upholstered 1950s-style furniture. Good value, free newspaper under the door, but hot water's by bucket in the cheaper rooms.

Bengal Buddhist Association

GUESTHOUSE $

(Buddha Dharmankur Sabha; Map p466; ☎ 033-22117138; bds1892@yahoo.com; Buddhist Temple St; d/tr without bathroom ₹300/400) Primarily intended for Buddhist students, these simple rooms are unadorned except for the window bars shaped into lama form. Most share basic common bathrooms (with geysers), though a couple are ensuite with air-con (₹750). There's no way in once gates are locked (10pm to 6am), so forget nightlife.

Hotel Neeranand

GUESTHOUSE $$

(Map p466; ☎ 9903957848, 033-22254660; www.hotelneeranand.com; 5th fl, Shah House, Radha Bazar St; s/d ₹2250/2800, deluxe ₹2800/3372; ☎☎) Rooms are 1980s style and some fittings a tad aged, but floors are very clean and you get air-con, wi-fi and a fascinating location handy for BBD Bagh, Barabazar and Old China Town. Rooms are on four floors; reception on the 5th.

Lalit Great Eastern

HOTEL $$$

(Map p466; ☎ 033-44447777; www.thelalit.com/the-lalit-great-eastern-kolkata; Old Court House St; r from ₹11,000; ☎) The 1840 Great Eastern Hotel was once one of India's finest hotels. It lay derelict for years and the original west-facing facade remains a work in progress. Behind that, however, is an entirely new, sleek business hotel. Rooms are spacious and modernist with very comfortable super-king beds and stylish black-pebble surround showers (albeit leaky). Enter via Waterloo St.

Rooms are even bigger in the Legacy Block, whose atrium features what appear to be Childcatcher cages dangling from old steel beams above two Tiffany-roofed pergolas. Service is fawning if sometimes flawed. The little-used swimming pool is hemmed in without poolside bar. Online rates can go as low as ₹6600.

Howrah*Howrah Hotel

HOSTEL $

(☎ 033-26413878; www.thehowrahhotel.com; 1 Mukhran Kanoria Rd; s/d/q from ₹300/500/1260, d with AC ₹1890, s without bathroom ₹225; ☎reception 24hrs) This characterful 1890 mansion has seen far better days but retains elements of original tile-work and Italian chequer-board marble flooring. The inner courtyard is an unexpected oasis of birdsong and the brilliantly antiquated reception has featured in several movies. The best value rooms are the ₹900 upstairs doubles and the tiny, ultra-cheap ₹225 box singles. Many ₹550 rooms are claustrophobic.

From Howrah train station's northern (commuter-area) underpass, emerge at exit 1, cross the bus station and walk one block west, turning right after Hotel Bhimsain.

Southern Kolkata

Kolkata Backpackers

HOSTEL **₹

(Map p468; ☎ 9836059791; <http://kolkatabackpackershomestay.weebly.com>; 108/1D Bakul Bagan; dm ₹450; 📶) Tiny, cramped but characterful travellers' homestay in an interesting part of Southern Kolkata near the Lansdowne Vegetable Market (Map p468). BOULIQUE HOTEL **₹₹

(Map p468; ☎ 033-40610145; www.thecornercourtyard.com; 92B Sarat Bose Rd; r ₹4000) Eight perfectly pitched rooms are named for colours but also take subthemes, Bengali movies in 'Charcoal', Kumartuli goddesses in 'Vermilion'. They're on two storeys above a superb little restaurant in a recently restored 1904 town house that includes a charming little roof garden drooping with bougainvillea.

Hotel Aston

HOTEL **₹₹

Bodhi Tree

BOULIQUE GUESTHOUSE **₹₹

(Map p468; ☎ 033-24243871, 033-24246534; www.bodhitreekolkata.com; 48/44 Swiss Park; s/ste ₹2500/9000, d ₹3500-4500, incl breakfast; 📶 📶) A handful of very characterful, stone-walled Buddha-themed guestrooms are attached to this intriguing little 'monastery of art' gallery cafe. Access is from behind Rabindra Sarovar metro's southeast exit, walking east for around 10 suburban minutes.

Airport Area

Airport area hotels fall into two main clumps. Cheaper options are on or near Jessore Rd which approximately parallels the runway to the west. Bigger, flashier but rarely luxurious hotels are spread out along VIP Rd between 1.5km and 3km south of the terminal and can be accessed for ₹6 by 'Bagiati' autos from Airport Gate 1.

Hotel Sai Baba

HOTEL **₹

(☎ 9883031486; 10/1 Jessore Rd; r ₹800, with AC ₹1500; 📶) This funky, colourful little 10-room guesthouse has naive murals in the foyer and hearts, butterflies and stencil designs in the comparatively cute rooms, which are far less miserable than most of the other airport-area cheapies. Around half way between Airport Gates 1 and 2, it's down a short side lane accessed via the gateway arch of the Jessore Rd gurdwara.

Hotels Tirupati & Balaji

HOTEL **₹₹

(☎ 033-25120065; www.hotelbalajiinternational.in; 32 Jessore Rd; r Tirupati/Balaji from ₹2000/2350) Set back off Jessore Rd between Airport Gates 1 and 2, this new block has heavy timber doors, plants on the stairs and decent bathrooms, though the mattresses are thin and there's a Donald Duck painted incongruously on some mirrors. Along with the slightly cheaper co-owned Balaji next door, prices include a ride to the airport.

Tirupati is the god who stands in the foyer with his eyes masked.

Atithi Inn

HOTEL **₹₹

(www.atithiinn.com; VIP Rd, Raghunathapur; s/d ₹1800/2500; 📶) Strengths of this family-oriented place are the hallway seating areas and the striking use of wooden door surrounds to create M-shape designs. Rooms don't quite live up to the promise, with rather basic bathrooms and there's no wi-fi. Noisy during weddings.

Celesta

BOULIQUE HOTEL **₹₹

(☎ 033-71000131; www.celesta.in; VIP Rd, Raghunathpur; s/d ₹5500/6000) Celesta is the suavest of over a dozen hotels in the Raghunathpur area, with big plate-glass lobby walls and an upper exterior looking like a Mondrian painting. Luxurious beds are piled with pillows in retro-art-deco rooms with rainforest showers.

It's beside the well-signed KFC on the east side of VIP Rd, 3km south of the airport.

Eating

Don't miss sampling Bengali cuisine, a wonderful discovery once you've mastered a whole new culinary vocabulary. Cheaper Bengali places often serve tapas-sized portions, so order two or three dishes per person along with either rice or luchi (Bengali flatbread), plus some sweet khejur (chutney).

A Kolkata delight is making streetside tea stops for ₹5 mini-cuppas served in disposable bhaar (environmentally friendly earthenware cups).

Plentiful branches of Starbuck-style chains Barista, Aqua Java and Café Coffee Day make air-conditioned oases in which to sip a decent macchiato. And some offer wi-fi.

Most restaurants add 19.4% tax to food bills (included in prices quoted here). Posh-er places add service fees too. Tips are welcome at cheaper places and expected at most expensive restaurants. Times Food Guide (www.timescity.com/kolkata; book ₹199) and Zomato (www.zomato.com/kolkata) offer hundreds of restaurant reviews.

Around Sudder Street

A few relatively basic traveller cafes around Sudder St serve backpacker favourites including banana pancakes, muesli and toasted sandwiches complemented by fresh fruit juices and a range of good-value Indian dishes. Eateries across Mirza Ghalib St cater predominantly to Bangladeshi tastes. Cheap places for Indian-regional food lie around New Market (notably Hogg St), with grungy classics like the 1937 UP Bihar (Map p460; H12 Hogg St; mains ₹40-120, kati rolls ₹20-80, dhal/ rice ₹5/6; ☺ 6.30am-11pm) beef-curry specialist or the cacophonous 1940s-retro Aminia (Map p460; Hogg St; mains ₹75-155; ☺ 10.30am-10.30pm). Many more food stalls line Madge Lane, Bertram St, and Humayan Pl. At food stalls near the Indian Museum you can fill up for ₹16 on dhal and chapati, freshly baked in oil-barrel tandoors.

Bhoj Company

BENGALI $

(Map p460; Sudder St; veg dishes ₹40-90, fish mains ₹100-330, small/large rice ₹20/30; ☺ 8.30am-11.30pm) Excellent, inexpensive Bengali food served in a bijou little restaurant, where colourful naive art sets off white walls inset with little terracotta-statuettes niches. If you're not familiar with Bengali menu names, a deliciously safe bet is ruhi kalia (ginger-based curry) with doi begun (eggplant in curd; ₹190 with rice). Or giant prawn malaikari (coconut milk; ₹220 with rice plus jhuri alu bhaja - crispy potato whisps to add crunch).

JoJo's Cafe

CAFE $

(Map p460; Facebook jojoskolkata; Stuart Lane; snacks ₹50-70, mains ₹80-120, rice ₹20; ☺ 8am-11pm; ☺) Pleasant, well-run backpacker cafe

BENGALI FOOD

Fruity and mildly spiced, Bengali food favours the sweet, rich notes of jaggery (palm-sugar), daab (young coconut), malaikari (coconut milk) and posto (poppy seed). Typical Bengali curry types include the light, coriander-scented jhol, drier spicier jhal and richer, ginger-based kalia. Strong mustard notes feature in shorshe curries and paturi dishes that come steamed in a banana leaf. Gobindobhog bhaat (steamed rice) or luchi (small puris) are the usual accompaniment. More characteristic than meat or murgir (chicken) are chingri (river prawns) and excellent fish, particularly rohu (white rui), fatty chital and cod-like bhekti. If you can handle the bones, ilish (hilsa) is considered the tastiest fish, kachki are very small and lau ghonto - an acquired taste - is fish head pounded with pumpkin. Excellent vegetarian choices include mochar ghonto (mashed banana-flower, sometimes with potato and coconut), doi begun (eggplant in curd) and shukto, a favourite lunchtime starter combining at least five different vegetables in a milk-based sauce.

For a colourful and very affectionate portrait of Kolkata's ever-vibrant street food scene, see www.streetfoodkolkata.com, which includes recipes, films and sells a brilliantly evocative book.

Bengal's trademark fast food is the kati roll: a paratha roti, fried with a coating of egg then filled with sliced onions, chilli and your choice of stuffing (curried chicken, grilled meat or paneer). Generally eaten as a takeaway from hole-in-the-wall serveries. Famed are Kusum (Map p460; 21 Park St; rolls from Rs25; ☺ noon-11.30pm) and Hot Kati Rolls (Map p460; 1/1 Park St; rolls from ₹23; ☺ 11am-10.30pm), though some travellers prefer the substantially cheaper versions from Baba (Map p460; Mirza Ghalib St; rolls/chow mein from ₹17/23; ☺ noon-11pm).

Bengali desserts and sweets are legendary. Most characteristic are mishti dhoi (curd deliciously sweetened with jaggery), rasgulla (syrupy sponge balls) and cham-cham (double-textured curd-based fingers).

with some original fresh fruit-veg juices and smoothies with evocative names ('Liquid Breakfast', 'Kung Flu Fighter' etc). Free wi-fi.

Raj's Spanish Cafe

CAFE $

(Map p460; off Sudder St; mains ₹80-150; ☉ 8.30am-10pm; ☎) Popular as a hang-out for medium-term charity volunteers, this unpretentious place serves good coffee (₹40 to ₹70), lassis, pancakes and a range of Italian, Mexican and Spanish dishes.

Vermillion walls are unadorned except for a traveller noticeboard. There's a small outdoor area with some cursory foliage. It's hidden behind Room Shringar fabric shop.

Sidheshwari Ashram

BENGALI $

(Map p460; 19 Rani Rashmoni Rd; mains ₹16-65, fish mains ₹100-140, rice ₹6-18; ☉ 9.30am-4pm & 7-11pm) For a really local experience, venture into this archetypal old-fashioned eating house serving excellent Bengali food eaten with the (right) hand at old stone-topped tables. Women are rare, some waiters shoeless and the blackboard menu offers no explanations, so ideally bring a local friend. No AC. The entrance is easily missed between shops, then up an unlikely stairway.

Kathleen Confectioners

BAKERY $

(Map p460; 12 Mirza Ghalib St; snacks ₹20-50; ☉ 10am-9pm) Stand-n-snack chain bakery best known for its flakey pastry savouries like the ₹25 paneer patties. Walls ice creams (Cornetto ₹35) available.

Delish

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p460; www.delishrestaurant.in; 9 Chowringhee Lane; mains ₹100-180) Hanging lanterns echoed in the cartoon-style Calcutta-scene mural give this small place the visual edge over other Sudder St backpacker restaurants, but it really needs better air-con. Or at least to turn it on.

Blue & Beyond

MULTICUISINE $$

(Map p460; 9th fl, Lindsay Hotel, Lindsay St; mains ₹225-680, beer/cocktails from ₹203/286; ☉ noon-10.45pm) The drawcard here is an open-air rooftop terrace with wide views over New Market plus a small glass-walled cocktail bar that falls somewhere between 70s-retro and space-station acid-trip. The globe-trotting menu swerves from khawsuey (Burmese-style curried noodles) to Roquefort-prawn sizzler, Greek chicken to Mexican 'veg-steak'.

Blue Sky Cafe

CAFE $$$

(Map p460; Chowringhee Lane; mains ₹70-270, curries ₹70-150, rice ₹35; ☉ 8am-11pm) Wise-cracking staff serve up a vast selection of reliable traveller standbys including great old-style banana pancakes at long glass tables set close enough to make conversation between strangers a little more likely.

★ 1658

EUROPEAN, FUSION $$$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-40611658; 26 Chowringhee Rd; most mains ₹350-450, lobster ₹1500, beer/wine/cocktails from ₹175/320/700; ☉ noon-3pm Wed-Mon & 7.30-11.30pm daily, kitchen closes 10.30pm; ☎) Although offering inventive gourmet-standard cuisine, prices are sensible and the atmosphere relaxed yet very special. The name references the start of Italy's Baroque period, but the decor prefers an early 20th-century sense of retro with low-wattage filament lamps and Charlie Chaplin era movies playing on designer-stark walls beside the six-stooled cocktail bar that takes centre stage.

PARK ST DINING CLASSICS

Several classic multicuisine restaurants huddle within a block of the attractive art-deco teashop-restaurant Flurrys (Map p460; Park St; mains ₹374-650, coffee/tea/cake from ₹130/142/72; ☉ 7.30am-9.45pm), harking back to the 1970s, when Park St was the place to be seen after hours in Kolkata. Contrasting conspicuously with 21st-century decor trends so beloved of most upmarket Kolkata restaurants, Mocambo (Map p460; Mirza Ghalib St; curry/rice from ₹195/186, other mains ₹290-430; ☉ 11.30am-11.15pm) and Peter Cat (Map p460; Middleton Row; mains ₹160-360, beer ₹183; ☉ 11am-11.15pm) seem almost self-conscious parodies of vintage British steak-house design. The latter serves beers in pewter tankards and dresses its waiters in Khan-Afghani costumes. The draw at all is both a reputation among middle-class Kolkatans for ever-reliable food, and snappy service that can prove quietly witty. None of these eateries take reservations. Indeed meeting fellow diners in the queue for a late dinner spot is an integral part of the experience.

Creative skewer snacks arrive in lab beakers, flavour packed 'skinny pizza' starters perch on long thin slabs of slate, and scrumptious herb-seared cottage cheese is served on lemon potatoes with a pepper coulis so good you'll want to lick the plate.

Reservations accepted on weekdays but at weekends it's first come, first served.

Around Park Street

On or near Park St (between Russel St and Middleton Row) you'll find dozens of good restaurants, including many age-old Kolkata family classics (p478) facing off with Pizza Hut, KFC and a beef-free McDonald's.

Au Bon Pain

BAKERY, SALADS $

(Map p460; Park St; snacks ₹65-350, coffee from ₹70; ☺ 7.30am-10.30pm; ☎) This large, central bakery-cafe could have made more of its large, heritage building but there's lots of well-lit space to sit and read over egg and pesto croissants (₹70) and very acceptable espressos. The free wi-fi only works if you have a locally accessible phone number for registration.

Arsalan

MUGHLAI $$$

(Map p460; www.arsalanrestaurant.in; 119A Ripon St; mains ₹110-260; ☺ 11.30am-11.30pm) Consistently popular with locals, this branch is high ceilinged and attractively modern without being fashion-conscious. The main attractions are melt-in-mouth chicken tika and celebrated biryanis that you season from a palate of fresh lime, mixed pickles and green chilli.

Bistro by the Park

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22296494; www.bistrobythepark.com; 2A Middleton Row; mains ₹390-600, rice ₹117, beers/cocktails from ₹160/230; ☺ noon-11pm; ☎) This enticing cafe has multi-textured walls and lamps like airborne Thai spirit lanterns, albeit in colours that are tastefully muted. Menus (on iPads) cover many international bases, with a reduced selection (pizza, pasta, bijou fish-n-chips) from 3.30pm to 6.30pm.

Teej

RAJASTHANI $$$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22170730; www.teej.in; 1st fl, 2 Russell St; mains ₹230-350, rice ₹175, thalis ₹360, beer ₹180; ☺ noon-3.30pm & 7-10.30pm) Superbly painted with Mughal-style murals, the interior feels like an ornate Rajasthani haveli (traditional residence) and the excellent, 100% vegetarian food is predominantly Rajasthani, too.

Marco Polo

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Map p460; ☎ 033-22273939; 24 Park St; mains ₹430-700, rice ₹320; ☺ noon-11pm) Stylish deep brown panels incised with flower patterns are back-lit to create a moody yet contemporary atmosphere in this split-level restaurant which takes a world tour of cuisines.

Southern Chowringhee

Beware that the most upmarket places listed below typically add almost 30% tax/service to menu prices and their bottled water can cost over ₹100.

Drive Inn

VEGETARIAN MULTICUISINE $

(Mission Cafe; Map p456; ☎ 033-32000025; 10 Middleton St; mains ₹90-180; ☺ noon-10.30pm) Good value vegetarian fare served in a modest little part-covered urban 'garden' area that twinkles with fairy lights at night.

Chocolate Room

BAKERY CAFE $

(Map p456; <http://thechocolateroomindia.com>; Rawdon St; cake slices from ₹60; ☺ 8am-10pm) Chocolate everything! Waffles, fondue, choco-pizza, varieties of hot chocolate and hot, moist cake slices that are rich yet light and eggless.

Haldiram

FAST FOOD $

(Map p456; 58 Chowringhee Rd; thalis from ₹100; ☺ 7.30am-10pm) Chain cafeteria with inexpensive pay-then-queue vegetarian thalis.

Picadilly Square

CAFE $$$

(Map p456; 15B Sarat Bose Rd; coffee ₹60-120, snack mains ₹130-190, pasta ₹270; ☺ 11am-10.30pm Mon-Fri, 8am-11.30pm Sat & Sun) Cute six-table cafe with two Victorian-style lamp-posts, a serving counter fashioned like a street cart, and floors designed to feel like a Parisian sidewalk. Serves imaginative savoury crepes (try the Ratatouille Blintz), pitas, ice creams, waffles and good espressos to a seemingly endless Bruno Mars soundtrack.

Shiraz

MUGHLAI $$$

(Map p456; 135 Park St; mains ₹165-300; ☺ 5am-11.30pm) Synonymous with Kolkata biryani, Shiraz also offers a range of curries including a superb ₹100 mutton keema (minced-meat curry) breakfast (until noon). The much smarter, more comfortable co-owned AC branch two doors away only opens from lunchtime.

★ Oh! Calcutta

BENGALI $$$

(Map p456; ☎033-22837161; 4th fl, Forum Mall, Elgin Rd; mains ₹390-1000, rice ₹196, cocktails from ₹350; ☉12.30-3.15pm & 7.30-10.45pm) Although it's situated within a shopping mall, shutter-edged mirror 'windows', bookshelves, large paintings and B&W photography create a casually upmarket feel for enjoying what remains some of the city's best Bengali-fusion food. Mild, subtle and creamy Daab Chingri (₹780) is served in a green coconut, the subtleties brought out particularly well by a side dish of fragrant lime salad (₹86).

★ Fire and Ice

ITALIAN $$$

(Map p456; ☎033-22884073; www.fireandicepizzeria.com; Kanak Bldg, Middleton St; mains ₹530-730, water/beer/cocktails from ₹130/210/480; ☉11.30am-11.30pm) Founded and directed by an Italian from Naples, Fire and Ice's waiters sport black shirts, red aprons and bandanas, and bring forth real Italian-style pastas and Kolkata's best thin-crust pizzas. Old film posters give character to the spacious dining room set behind foliage in a huge heritage building. Few other Kolkata restaurants keep serving as late.

★ Kewpies

BENGALI $$

(Map p456; ☎033-24861600; 2 Elgin Lane; thalis ₹450-1050, minimum spend ₹580 per person; ☉12.30-3pm & 7.30-10.30pm Tue-Sun) Kewpies is a Kolkata institution and dining here feels like a dinner party in a gently old-fashioned home. However, you might find the Bengali cuisine at some cheaper competitors to be every bit as good.

★ Bikers' Cafe

MULTICUISINE $$$

(Map p456; www.bikerscafe.co.in; 1st fl, 31 Elgin Rd; mains ₹466-880; ☉7.30am-11pm) A gold-plated Enfield low-rider motorbike in the window, helmet lampshades and a Clapton and Led Zep sound track set the tone in this youthful cafe-diner. Mains include tajines, salmon teriyaki and Spanish prawns, while a great snack is the toasted veg-patty with cottage cheese mash and Thai curry sauce.

Alcohol license awaiting approval.

★ Amigos

MEXICAN $$$

(Map p456; ☎033-40602507; www.facebook.com/Amigos.calcutta; 11/1A Ho Chi Minh Sarani; mains ₹350-700; ☉12.30-3.30pm & 7.30-10.30pm) The excellent Tex-Mex spread is sometimes missing the guacamole (avocados are apparently awkward imports) but makes amends with exquisite mango salsa. The atmosphere has a warm buzz, partly stone-clad walls are picked out with a band of colourful patterned tiles, softly illuminated by swallows-nest lamps and tickled with low-volume salsa music.

There's no alcohol but the bill arrives in a sombrero.

★ Little Italy

ITALIAN $$$

(Map p456; ☎033-22825152; 8th fl, Fort Knox Bldg, 6 Camac St; mains ₹470-720; ☉noon-2.45pm & 7-10.45pm) While the pastas and pizzas at elsewhere might have more pizzazz, those wanting a pure veg kitchen and an artily upmarket environment might prefer Little Italy. What appear to be rhino horns protrude from the walls, there are seven waving ceramic monoliths, a wall-of-water fountain and some city views. Lounge bar attached.

★ BBD Bagh

For great variety of ₹20 street meals, Dacres Lane (James Hickey Sarani; Map p466; mains from ₹16; ☉8am-9pm) is a classic address with stalls serving as late as 9pm interspersed by dodgy air-con 'bar-restaurants' whose fairy lights add a festive atmosphere to the grunge. Daytime (except Sundays) there's another good street-food area on Koilaghat St where some stalls have makeshift seating.

★ Anand

SOUTH INDIAN $

(Map p466; ☎033-22128344; 19 CR Ave; dosas ₹67-133, fresh juice ₹70; ☉9am-9.30pm, closed Wed) Prize-winning pure-veg dosas served in a well-kept if stylistically dated family restaurant with octagonal mirror-panels and timber strips on the somewhat low upper ceiling. Good air-conditioning.

★ KC Das

BENGALI SWEETS $

(Map p466; Lenin Sarani; mishti doi ₹18; ☉7.30am-9.30pm) This bustling Bengali sweet shop claims to have invented rasgulla (rosewater-scented cheese balls) in 1868. Try the mishti doi (a sweet-yoghurt desert). Seating available.

★ Bakery

BAKERY $

(Waterloo St; pastries/croissants/cakes from ₹40/58/58; ☉7.30am-10.30pm) A bakery opened on this site in 1830, and the comfortably climate-controlled 21st-century incarnation has used original archaic oven shells to create bizarre room dividers. Pastries are good value but tea or coffee costs more than beer (tea/beer ₹285/250).

Amber/Essence

INDIAN $$

(Map p466; ☎033-22486520; 2nd fl, 11 Waterloo St; mains ₹200-450, rice ₹220, beer ₹220; ☀noon-11pm) This two-hall middle-class restaurant serves reliable Indian food though the signature brain curry isn't to everyone's taste. Amber (1st floor) is more family oriented, Essence (2nd floor) lower lit and predominantly businessman types. Menus are essentially the same.

Bhojohori Manna (takeaway)

BENGALI $$

(Map p466; www.bhojohorimanna.com; Lenin Sarani; dishes ₹50-270; ☀noon-10pm) The same sublime Bengali food that you'd expect from Bhojohori Manna is available as takeaway here; avoid the claustrophobic dining room.

Manthan/Songhai

CHINESE $$

(Map p466; ☎033-22105065; 3 Waterloo St; mains/beer from ₹140/160; ☀11am-11pm) This trio of restaurants in a single location has three different decors, two different names and a single kitchen turning out good if not really gourmet Chinese food. The cheapest option, upstairs at Manthan, could use a few artworks to give more character to the blank, chandelier-lit white walls. Manthan's downstairs rooms are comfortable upper middle-class, while Songhai goes for a dark, modern oriental feel.

Southern Kolkata*★Bhojohori Manna 6

BENGALI $$

(Map p468; ☎033-24663941; www.bhojohorimanna.com; 18/1 Hindustan Rd; dishes ₹50-270, small/large thali ₹220/265, rice ₹55; ☀12.30-10.30pm) Each Bhojohori Manna branch feels very different, but all feature top-quality Bengali food at sensible prices. Branch 6 on Hindustan Rd is comparatively spacious, decorated with tribal implements and offers live traditional music some Saturdays. The menu allows you to pair a wide selection of fish types with the sauce of your choice. Some dishes are rather small so order a spread, not missing the echorer dalna (green jackfruit curry).

Corner Courtyard

FUSION $$$

(Map p468; ☎9903990567; www.facebook.com/TheCornerCourtyard; 92B Sarat Bose Rd; mains ₹400-700, lobster ₹1950; ☀noon-11pm, reduced menu 3-7pm) This reincarnated 1904 mansion has had its walls artistically splattered with doorknobs, locks and old books. The wide ranging menu flits from Thai risotto to Brazilian salmon to Finnish fondue, with many a daring flavour combination.

Drinking & Nightlife

Cheaper bars are mostly dingy and overwhelmingly male-dominated with a penchant for over-loud music, often sung by scantily clad females.

Most better bars and clubs are in hotels. Clubs open till 2am or later on party nights (Wednesday, Friday and Saturday) but other evenings they're typically half empty and closed by midnight. Note the difference between entry charge and cover charge: the latter can be recouped in drinks or food to the same value. Either is charged per couple. Women can often enter free but single men (known as 'stags') are generally excluded altogether and certainly aren't expected to dance without a female partner; heaven forbid.

Central Kolkata & Chowringhee

Park St has several bars ranging from mysteriously popular long-term student steak-and-beer favourite Oly Pub (Map p460; 21 Park St; beer/steak ₹182/220; ☀11am-11pm) to upper-market alternatives in and around Park Hotel.

Fairlawn Hotel Beer-Garden

BAR

(Map p460; 13A Sudder St; beers ₹185; ☀10am-10pm) The small tropical garden of the historic Fairlawn Hotel is the most appealing place on Sudder St to down a cold brew.

Arabian Delight

SHISHA BAR

(Map p460; 21A Mirza Galib St; shisha ₹220-250, soft drinks ₹50-100; ☀11am-10pm) Pleasantly low lit, one-room hubble-bubble bar.

Myx

NIGHTCLUB

(Map p460; Facebook The Myx Kolkata; Middleton Row; cover ₹2000; ☀9pm-midnight daily, to 2.30am Wed, Fri & Sat) Central Kolkata's best looking nightclub has a second bar upstairs and a shisha terrace on the rooftop. It's atop a tower above three upmarket restaurants, hidden behind KFC.

Tantra

NIGHTCLUB

(Map p460; Park Hotel, 17 Park St; entry ₹500-1000; ☀7pm-midnight Tue, Thu & Sun, 7pm-3am Wed, Fri & Sat) Kolkata's best-established nightclub features contemporary sounds throbbing through the single small dance floor and not-so-chilled chill-out zone around a central-island bar with an overhead observation bridge. On Wednesdays women drink for free until 11.30pm.

The entrance is guarded not only by bouncers but by mannequin-style boxed statues. The one to your left is not a green bearded drag queen but a god of love.

New Cathay

BAR

(Map p460; 17 Chowringhee Rd; shots/beer from ₹55/135; ☺11am-11.30pm) Classic old-style bar with double-height ceilings and long whirling fans.

Irish House

PUB

(Map p468; www.facebook.com/IrishHouseKolkata; Quest Mall, Syed Amir Ali Ave; ☺noon-11.30pm) While not really Irish at all, this is the nearest Kolkata gets to a fully fledged non-hotel pub/sports bar. Lots of weekend ambience and a showman at the bar.

Plush

LOUNGE BAR

(Map p456; Astor Hotel, 15 Shakespeare Sarani; ☺3pm-close) This stylish yet unthreateningly casual, low-lit bar is most appealing on Thursday evenings when young local musicians perform at the open mic (7pm to 11.30pm). Wednesdays there's a ₹1200 all-you-can-drink deal till 2am. Friday/Saturdays there's a cover charge (₹1500/2000 per couple). No 'stags'.

Urban Desi

SHISHA BAR

(Map p456; 9th fl, 6 Camac St; shisha ₹450-850, beer/wine/cocktails from ₹200/400/550; ☺12.30pm-11.30pm) Pumping music energises this highly-rated shisha (waterpipe) lounge-bar. Moroccan lamps spangle the lighting and big windows offer extensive (if none too beautiful) views. Small open-terrace, table football available.

Soho

NIGHTCLUB

(Map p456; ☎030-40036605; Ideal Plaza, 11/1 Sarat Bose Rd; beer ₹500; ☺6pm-close Mon-Sat) Upper-market party address with thunderous music and a sweep of bar behind reverse conical columns. Weekend cover charges apply.

Fusion

PUB

(Map p456; www.goldenparkk.com; Hotel Golden Park, 13 Ho Chi Minh Sarani; ☺8pm-midnight) Unusually large hotel basement bar with dancefloor and DJ. No stags.

Underground

BAR, NIGHTCLUB

(Map p456; HHI Hotel, AJC Bose Rd) Small dance floor in a pub-bar with Hard Rock Café-style design feel.

BBD Bagh

If you want ear-shattering 'live' (ie karaoke quality) music, there are several choices along eastern Waterloo St and Dacres Lane.

Broadway Bar

BAR

(Map p466; Broadway Hotel, 27A Ganesh Chandra Ave; small/standard beer ₹75/135, shots ₹41-120; ☺11am-10.30pm) Back-street Paris? Chicago 1930s? Prague 1980s? This cavernous, unpretentious old-men's pub defies easy parallels but has a compulsive left-bank fascination with cheap booze, 20 ceiling fans, bare walls, marble floors and, thankfully, no music.

Southern Kolkata

Basement

NIGHTCLUB

(Map p468; Samilton Hotel, Sarat Bose Rd; ☺live music Thu 7pm) Relaxed and inexpensive club with live music Thursday evenings.

★ Entertainment

Cultural Programs

Nandan Complex

CULTURAL CENTRE

ICCR

Calcutta School of Music

Cinema

Inox (www.inoxmovies.com) has modern multiplex cinemas in several shopping centres, including the Forum (Map p456) and Quest Malls (Map p468).

Spectator Sports

Even if you don't know Ganguly from a googly, the electric atmosphere of a Knight Riders (www.kkr.in) cricket match at Ranji Stadium (Eden Gardens; Map p466; Eden Gardens) is an unforgettable experience.

If it's football (soccer) you're into, Atlético de Kolkata (www.facebook.com/atleticodekolkata; tickets from ₹125) plays Indian Superleague matches at Salt Lake Stadium. Buy tickets through www.ticketgenie.in or from a kiosk outside Flury's cafe on Park St.

Maidan racecourse (☎ 033-22291104; www.rctconline.com; Acharya Jagdish Rd; admission from ₹15; 🏠 36) hosts some of India's best horse racing. Viewed from the 19th-century grandstands, the Victoria Memorial provides a beautiful backdrop. Over 40 annual meets.

Shopping

Several small traveller-oriented bookstalls huddle around the junction of Sunder St and Mirza Ghalib St. Small, family publisher Earthcare Bookstore (Map p456; ☎ 033-22296551; www.earthcarebooks.com; 10 Middleton St; ☉ 11am-7pm Mon-Sat) has an eclectic stock. Seagull (Map p468; www.seagullindia.com; 31A SP Mukherjee Rd; ☉ 10.30am-7.30pm; 🏠 Jatin Das) has arts, humanities and politics specialities. Big air-conditioned cafe-bookstores Oxford (Map p460; ☎ 033-22297662; www.oxfordbookstore.com; 17 Park St; ☉ 10am-10pm) and Story (Map p456; ☎ 9830470000; www.storystory.com; 8 Elgin Rd; ☉ 10.30am-8.30pm) have very extensive selections, including travel guides and plenty of Kolkata-relevant texts.

State-government emporia sells quality souvenirs at decent fixed prices, while several charity cooperatives allow you to feel good about your purchases.

Shops and workshops along Rabindra Sarani sell a great range of musical instruments. For tablas (drums; from ₹1200), rayas (from ₹500) and other percussion, try numbers 248 and 268B near Tagore's House (p463). For sitars (from ₹4000) or violins (from ₹2000) visit Mondal & Sons (Map p466; ☎ 033-22349658; 8 Rabindra Sarani; ☉ 10am-6pm Mon-Fri, to 2.30pm Sat) who have counted Yehudi Menuhin among their satisfied customers.

Dakshinapan Shopping Centre

SHOPPING CENTRE

(Map p468; Gariahat Rd; ☉ 10.30am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) It's worth facing the soul-crushing 1970s architecture for Dakshinapan's wide range of government emporia. There's plenty of tack but many shops offer excellent-value souvenirs, crafts and fabrics. Several shops close by 7pm.

Try Tribes India (Map p468; Dakshinapan, F48) for brass figures and greetings cards, Aranya (Map p468; ☎ 9831039822; www.aranyakolkata.com; Dakshinapan, F56; ☉ 10am-7.30pm) for charming gifts made from recycled materials, Purbasha Tripura (Map p468; Dakshinapan F4) for bargain caneware and Kashmir Emporium (Map p468; Dakshinapan F38) for colourful papier mâché work (boxes from ₹90).

Pragjyotika

HANDICRAFTS

(Map p456; Assam House, 8 Russell St; ☉ 10.30am-6pm Mon-Fri, 11am-1pm Sat) This Assam State emporium is a great place to look for fixed-price cane vases, jute handbags, pearls, fabrics and Assam tea.

Nagaland Emporium

SOUVENIRS

(Map p456; 11 Shakespeare Sarani; ☉ 10am-5.30pm Mon-Fri, to 2pm Sat) Naga crafts including shawls and 'face' necklaces for wannabe head-hunters are available from this state-government store.

Doel's Choice

HANDICRAFTS

(Map p460; 1 Kyd St; ☉ 11am-7pm Mon-Sat) Hand-carved wooden products.

FabIndia

FABRICS, HANDICRAFTS

(Map p456; www.fabindia.com; 11A Allenby Rd; ☉ 11am-8.30pm) Western-style boutique with clearly labeled/priced Indian textiles and some handicrafts.

Ankur Kala

SOUVENIRS

(Map p456; ☎ 033-22878476; www.ankurkala.org; 3 Meher Ali Rd; ☉ 10am-1pm & 2-5pm Mon-Sat) This cooperative training centre empowers women from the slums. The small shop sells batik, embroidered goods, greeting cards and leather goods. It's hidden beneath a domestic residence in a non-commercial road. Entrance from the side.

Ashalayam

HANDICRAFTS

(Map p460; www.ashalayamfrance.org; 1st fl, 44 Mirza Ghalib St; ☉ 10.30am-6pm Mon-Fri, to 4pm

Sat) Buying cards, handmade paper and fabrics here funds the (ex)street kids who made them. The shop doubles as a simple cafe serving instant coffee (₹20).

i Information

DANGERS & ANNOYANCES

Kolkata feels remarkably unthreatening. Predictable beggar-hassle is a minor irritant around Sudder St. Bandhs (strikes) occasionally stop all land transport (including taxis to the airport). Monsoon-season flooding can be severe.

INTERNET ACCESS

Inexpensive widespread 3G means that internet cafes are becoming rarer. A central survivor is Cyber Zoom (Map p460; 27B Park St; per hr ₹15; ☺10am-9.30pm) which also does passport photos. Around Sudder St, some back alley cubby-hole places charge ₹20, but its worth paying a little more for fast connection and more comfortable seating at travel agency web-cafe R-Internet Travels (Map p460; ☎9830135365; rinternettravels.weebly.com; Tottee Lane; per ½/full hour ₹20/30; ☺9am-10pm).

MEDICAL SERVICES

Medical contacts are widely listed on www.calcuttaweb.com/directory/doctors-in-kolkata.

Apollo Gleneagles (☎033-23203040, emergency 033-60601066; www.apollogleneagles.in) Hospital group with 24-hour ambulance service.

Eastern Diagnostics (Map p460; ☎033-22178080; www.easterndiagnostics.com; 13C Mirza Ghalib St; ☺9am-2pm Mon-Sat, longer some days) Polyclinic for doctors' consultations; handy for Sudder St.

MONEY

Many private moneychangers around Sudder St offer commission-free exchange rates significantly better than banks. Some will exchange travellers cheques. Shop around and double-check the maths. In the city centre, Mishra Forex (Map p456; 11 Shakespeare Sarani; ☺10am-8.30pm Mon-Sat, to 6pm Sun) gives reasonable rates and opens daily.

Airport moneychangers give predictably poor rates and charge up to 5% tax/commission. There's an ATM in arrivals (booth 22) between exit doors 3B and 4.

POST

General Post Office (Map p466; ☺7.30am-8.30pm Mon-Sat, 10am-4pm Sun, parcel service 10am-2.30pm, philatelic office 10am-6pm Mon-Fri) While the iconic old GPO building still sells basic stamps, the new postal centre is 100m further along Koilaghat St. Coin dealers, envelope sellers and parcel-wallahs wait outside. The philatelic bureau sells commemorative issues, or can turn your own photos into a sheet of ₹5 stamps (₹300).

TELEPHONE

Sudder St agency-shops sell SIM cards (₹200) given ID copy, a passport photo and details of your address/hotel.

TOURIST INFORMATION

India Tourism (Map p456; ☎033-22825813; www.incredibleindia.org; 4 Shakespeare Sarani; ☺9am-30pm Mon-Fri, to 1pm Sat) Free maps of greater Kolkata.

i Getting There & Away

The tourist quota on train tickets can be a saviour around Durga Puja (September/October) when local travel is at a peak.

AIR

Rebuilt in 2013, Netaji Subhash Bose International Airport (NSBIA; ☎033-25118787; www.aai.aero/kolkata/index.jsp) has an impressive departures area but screening bottlenecks persist, so arrive in ample time.

Kolkata has a vast selection of domestic connections. It's a useful hub for regional flights including to Bhutan (Druk Air and Bhutan Airlines), Bangladesh (Regent, United Airways Bangladesh, Biman and Jet Airways), Myanmar (Air India) and Nepal (Air India). East Asian destinations include Bangkok (Air Asia, Bhutan Airlines, Thai, IndiGo and Jet Airways), Hong Kong (Dragonair), Kuala Lumpur (Air Asia), Singapore (Singapore Airlines and Druk Air) and various Chinese destinations via Kunming on China Eastern. Many long-haul connections to Europe go via the Gulf (Emirates, Etihad and Qatar Airways).

Air India (Map p466; ☎033-22114433; 39 Chittaranjan Ave; ☺10am-6pm Mon-Sat)

Jet Airways (Map p460; ☎033-39893333; www.jetairways.com; Park St; ☺9am-7pm Mon-Sat)

BOAT

A few ferries each month ferries to Port Blair (Andaman Islands) depart from Kidderpore Docks (www.kolkataporttrust.gov.in; Karl Marx Sarani), entered from Gate 3 opposite Kidderpore commuter train station. Tickets (bunk/cabin/deluxe ₹2268/5817/8841) go on sale around 10 days before at the Passage Department on the first floor of the Shipping Corporation of India (Map p466; ☎033-22482354; calcps.dept@sci.co.in; Hare St; ☀10am-1pm & 2-4pm Mon-Fri).

BUS

International

Bangladesh Buses advertised to Bangladesh actually run to Benapol (border), where you walk across and take a separate vehicle on to Dhaka. Shohagh Paribahan (Map p460; ☎033-22520757; shohagh12@sify.com; 21A Marquis St; ☀5am-10.30pm) have five morning 'Dhaka' services (13 hours, fan/AC ₹830/1430). GreenLine (Map p460; ☎033-22520571; 12B Marquis St; ☀4am-10.30pm) has three AC buses to Benapol (₹380), all leaving by 7am. Connecting tickets to Dhaka cost 1200TK (just under ₹1000).

Bhutan The 'Gross National Happiness Express' postbus to Phuentsholing (₹505, 18 hours) leaves at 7pm daily, except Sunday, from the walled northeast yard of Esplanade bus station where there are two special ticket booths (Map p466; ☎033-22627735, 033-22487737; ☀9.30am-1pm & 2-6pm Mon-Sat). It's faster and more comfortable to take the Kanchankanya Express train (13149) from Sealdah station to Hasimara (depart 8.30pm, arrive 10.18am, sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹370/1000/1440) then travel the last 18km by bus or taxi to Phuentsholing, where Indian citizens can get Bhutanese permits in a couple of hours.

Domestic

For Darjeeling or Sikkim, start by taking a bus to Siliguri (12 to 14 hours). All drive overnight departing Esplanade bus station (Map p460) between 5pm and 8pm (seat/sleeper from ₹400/500, with AC ₹1000/1200). An NBSTC bus for Cooch Behar leaves at 8pm (₹489, 18 hours)

Buses to Bihar and Odisha line up along the roadside directly south of Babaghat/Eden

STREET NAMES

Since independence, street names with Raj-era connotations have been officially changed, but while street signs and business cards use the new variant, citizens and taxis often still refer to the British-era names. This chapter uses what we found, quite unscientifically, to be the most commonly employed variant, italicised in the list below:

OLD NAME	NEW NAME
Allenby Rd	Dr Sisir Kumar Bose Sarani
Ballygunge Rd	Ashutosh Chowdhury Ave (AC Rd)

Gardens commuter train station. Most run overnight, departing between 5pm and 8.30pm. Arrive very early if you have baggage. Destinations include:

Bhubaneswar (fan/AC ₹350/400, 9½ hours)

Gaya (seat/sleeper ₹260/640, 13 hours) Leaves at 7pm with Maharani Express.

Puri (seat/sleeper ₹400/450, 12 hours) On Dolphin (www.odishabusservice.com).

Ranchi (seat/sleeper from ₹220/270, 10 hours)

TRAIN

Stations

Long-distance trains depart from three major stations. Gigantic Howrah (Haora; HWH) is across the river, often best reached by ferry; Sealdah (SDAH) is at the eastern end of MG Road; and 'Kolkata' (Chitpore; KOAA) Station is around 5km further north (nearest metro Belgachia).

Tickets

To buy international tickets or long-distance-train tickets with 'tourist quota', foreigners should use the Eastern Railways' Foreign Tourist Bureau (Map p466; ☎033-2224206; 6 Fairlie Pl; ☀10am-5pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun). Bring a book to read as waits can be very long but there are seats. On arrival, take and fill in a booking form (forms are numbered and double as queuing chits). Lines form well before opening. It's sometimes quicker to use the nearby standard computerised booking office (Map p466; Koilaghat St; ☀8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) but that has no tourist quota.

For Dhaka, Bangladesh, the Maitree Express (2nd class/AC chair/1AC ₹485/755/1250, 12½ hours) departs Kolkata (Chitpore) Station at 7.10am Saturday and Tuesday, returning from Dhaka Cantt at 7am Wednesday and Sunday. If you need a Bangladeshi visa, it should have Darsana marked as the entry point. Buy tickets up to 10 days ahead.

For a certain commission, Sudder St travel agencies can save you the trek to the ticket office and can sometimes manage to find tickets on 'full' trains.

i Getting Around

Tickets for buses, trams and the metro on most city transport routes cost from ₹4 to ₹15. Men shouldn't sit in assigned 'Ladies' seats'.

Beware: around 1pm much of the city's one-way road system reverses direction, so bus routes invert and taxis can prove reluctant to make journeys around this time.

TO/FROM THE AIRPORT

NSBIA Airport (p484) is around 16km northeast of central Kolkata. A feeder loop road accesses the new combined terminal from the south (VIP Rd) via Airport Gate 1. Busy Jessore Rd approximately parallels the runway to a second, smaller access through Airport Gate 2, around 400m west of the largely disused old terminals.

AC Bus

Airport buses start from a stand that's a minute's walk north from arrivals door 1A (between the new and old terminals). Pay on board. Bus VS1 (Map p466; one-way ₹50; ☀ 8am-7.30pm) runs every half hour to Esplanade, returning from a the walled government-bus compound in Esplanade Bus Station (around one hour). Bus VS2 runs to Howrah.

City Bus

Cheap but very slow minibus 151 to BBD Bagh (₹10) and relatively infrequent bus 46 to Esplanade via VIP Rd start from the VIP Rd/Jessore Rd junction near Airport Gate 1. Bus 30B from Jessore Rd runs to Babughat.

Metro

The airport metro-spur line from Noapara should be operational by 2017. For now the closest station is Dum Dum, 5km southwest by buses 30B and DN9/1 from Airport Gate 2/Jessore Rd.

Taxi

Fixed-price taxis cost ₹345/455 to Sudder St/Howrah taking around 50 minutes/one hour when traffic is kind. Pre-pay at booth 12 in the new arrivals area between exits 3B and 4.

AUTORICKSHAW

Tuk-tuk-style autorickshaws ('autos') operate as fixed-route hop-on share-taxis with three passengers in the back and one beside the driver. Fares are typically ₹6 to ₹10, depending on distance.

Key routes include the following:

Dharamtala–Loha Pool Starts from Park Circus using Park St (or after 1pm looping via Nasreddin and Karaya roads), goes up AJC Bose Rd, (near Mother Teresa's Motherhouse), along Elliot/Royd then up Mirza Ghalib/RAK Rd (mornings/afternoons) near Sudder St. Loops reverse after 1pm.

Hazra–Bondel (Map p468) Along Hazra Rd, starting a block east of Jatin Das Park Metro.

Hazra–Khiddapur West from Jatin Das Park Metro, past the Kalighat idolmakers and on through Alipore.

BUS & TRAM

Buses and minibuses are more frequent but photogenic battered old trams follow somewhat more predictable routes and are immune to one-way traffic.

FERRY

Crossing the Hoogly is generally faster and more agreeable by boat than by using the clogged road bridges. Ferries (tickets ₹5-10; ☀ 8am-8pm) depart every 15 to 20 minutes from Howrah to jetties in central Kolkata; other useful routes are Howrah–Ahritava–Sovabazar–Bagbazar (for Kumartuli), Ahritava–Bandaghat and Belur–Dakshineswar.

METRO

Kolkata's busy metro (www.mtp.indianrailways.gov.in; ☀ 7am-9.45pm Mon-Sat, 2-9.45pm Sun) has trains every five to 15 minutes. For Sudder St, use Esplanade or Park St.

Only one line is operational so far but several extensions are planned. Line 2 (<http://kmrc.in>) linking Howrah, Sealdah and Salt Lake is due by late 2015.

Theoretically you may not carry bags over 10kg.

RICKSHAW

Human-powered 'tana rickshaws' work within limited areas, notably around New Market. Although rickshaw pullers sometimes charge foreigners disproportionate fares, many are virtually destitute, sleeping on the pavements beneath their rented chariots at night, so tips are heartily appreciated.

SUBURBAN TRAINS

Sealdah–Dum Dum–Dakshineswar trains run roughly hourly. The Kidderpore–BBD Bagh–Bagbazar–Chitpore–Dum Dum route is rush hour only. Biman Bandar is the airport station but only a couple of daily services stop there.

TAXI

Kolkata's yellow Ambassador cabs charge ₹25 for up to 1.9km. Most have 'new' digital meters that simply show the fare due. However, a few have old mechanical meters for which there's a conversion chart: expect to pay around 240% of that reading. Taxis are generally easy to flag down except during the 5pm to 6pm rush hour and after 10pm when some cabs refuse to use the meter. After 9pm, drivers might reasonably ask double fare if they can't expect to find a return ride.

There are prepaid taxi booths at Howrah Station, Sealdah Station and at the airport.

Why Go?

A sliver of fertile land running from the tea-draped Himalayan foothills to the sultry mangroves of the Bay of Bengal, West Bengal offers a remarkable range of destinations and experiences to find within a single state. In the tropical southern areas, the sea-washed hamlet of Mandarmani vies for attention with Bishnupur's ornate terracotta-tiled Hindu temples and palaces. The striped Bengal tiger stealthily swims through muddy rivulets in the Sunderbans, while a bunch of European-style ghost towns line the banks of the Hooghly (Ganges) further upstream as reminders of the state's maritime heyday. In the cool northern hills, the toy train chugs its way up to the charming British-era hill station of Darjeeling, revered for its ringside views of massive Khangchendzonga. There's also a vibrant art scene, delectable cuisine and a genuinely hospitable population where friends are easy to make and hard to lose.

When to Go

Darjeeling

Best Places to Stay

- ➔ Elgin (p507)
- ➔ Holumba Haven (p517)
- ➔ Vedic Village (p493)

Best Places for a Cuppa

- ➔ Windamere Hotel (p507)
- ➔ Glenary's (p509)
- ➔ Cochrane Place (p500)

Oct–Dec & Mar–May Best for hill views, trekking and spring blooms up north.

Oct–Mar Best time for avoiding the heat on the lower southern plains.

Jan Ideal for navigating the dense mangrove forests of the Sunderbans Tiger Reserve.

West Bengal Highlights

- 1 Enjoying 360-degree mountain views over breakfast at hilltop lodges on the Singalila Ridge Trek (p513)
- 2 Riding the steam-driven toy train (p511) as it puffs and pants its way between the tea towns of Kurseong and Darjeeling
- 3 Exploring rural wonders and getting arty on a visit to the university town of Shantiniketan (p493)
- 4 Visiting a tea estate, sipping a delicate local brew and enjoying fantastic mountain views from the historic hill station of Darjeeling (p500)
- 5 Watching dawn break over Khangchendzonga, the world's third-highest peak, from Tiger Hill (p501)
- 6 Admiring intricate scenes from the Hindu epics carved on the medieval terracotta temples of Bishnupur (p493)
- 7 Cruising the river channels of the Sunderbans (p491) through the world's most extensive mangrove forest, to spot darting kingfishers, spotted deer and the elusive Royal Bengal tiger

History

Referred to as Bongo in the Mahabharata, Bengal was part of the Mauryan empire in the 3rd century BC, and was successively controlled by the Guptas, the Buddhist Palas and the Muslim sultans of Delhi over time. Following the death of Aurangzeb in 1707, Bengal became an independent Islamic state.

The British East India Company established a trading post in Kolkata (Calcutta) in 1698, which quickly prospered and outshone other European outposts along the Hooghly River belonging to Portuguese, Dutch and Danish merchants. Annoyed by rapid British expansion, Siraj-ud-daula, the nawab of Bengal, marched out of his capital at Murshidabad and easily took Kolkata in 1756. Robert Clive defeated him the following year at the Battle of Plassey, helped by the treachery of Siraj-ud-daula's uncle, Mir Jafar, a commander in the nawab's army. Jafar succeeded his nephew as nawab, but after the Battle of Buxar in 1764 the British took full control of Bengal.

West Bengal was the cradle of the Indian Renaissance and national freedom movement, and has long been considered the country's cultural and intellectual heartland – Calcutta was the political capital of India until the British shifted office to Delhi in 1931. In 1947, Indian Independence from Britain – and the subsequent partition of the country – saw the state of Bengal (which had already been split for administrative purposes in 1905) divided into Hindu-predominant West Bengal and Muslim-oriented Bangladesh, causing the upheaval and migration of millions of Bengalis.

Since the late 1980s, Darjeeling's demand for political autonomy has seen phases of unrest in the state's northern mountains, eventually leading to the establishment of the Gorkhaland Territorial Administration in 2012, which has stabilised the situation.

Activities

Trekking

There are enjoyable walks along pine-scented trails in all of West Bengal's hill stations, but the most popular place for a multiday trek is Singalila Ridge, near Darjeeling, where teahouse-style trekking is possible. Camping treks are available elsewhere, including around Kalimpong.

Wildlife Watching

The Sunderbans remains the state's prime forest area for spying on species such as crocs, Gangetic dolphins, deer, water monitors, myriad bird species and the Royal Bengal tiger. In the jungles of Jaldhapa, you can get up close with elephants and grumpy rhinos.

Getting There & Around

Most tourists enter West Bengal through Kolkata, which is connected by air to Delhi, Mumbai, Bangkok, Dubai, Doha, Kuala Lumpur, Singapore, Hong Kong and Kathmandu. Siliguri's Bagdogra airport has services to Kolkata, Delhi and Guwahati, as well as daily helicopter flights to Gangtok.

Most land arrivals are by train: main lines run south to Bhubaneswar and Chennai, and west

TOP FESTIVALS

Ganga Sagar Mela (Sagar Island; ☀ mid-Jan) Hundreds of thousands of Hindu pilgrims converge where the Ganges meets the sea, to bathe en masse in a riotous festival.

Bengali New Year (Naba Barsha; Statewide; ☀ mid-Apr) A holiday celebrating the first day of the Bengali calendar, also called Nabo Barsho.

Rath Yatra (Chariot Festival; Statewide; ☀ Jul/Aug) Celebrated by pulling the juggernaut of Lord Jagannath's chariot.

Dussehra (Durga Puja; ☀ Sep/Oct) Across the state, especially in Kolkata, temporary pandals (pavilions) are raised and intense celebrations take place to worship the Hindu goddess Durga. After four colourful days, beautiful clay idols of the 10-armed deity are immersed in the rivers.

Jagaddhatri Puja (Chandarnagar; ☀ Nov) Honours the Hindu goddess Jagaddhatri, an incarnation of Durga.

Poush Mela (p494; 23 to 26 December, Shantiniketan) Folk music, dance, theatre and Baul songs radiate across the university town.

to Gaya, Varanasi and Delhi. Other lines connect Assam in Northeast India and Jharkhand in the west. Numerous long-distance buses also connect surrounding states.

Overcrowded 'share jeeps' with cramped back seats ply the winding roads of the West Bengal hills.

SOUTH OF KOLKATA

Sunderbans Tiger Reserve

Home to one of the largest concentrations of Royal Bengal tigers on the planet, the 2585-sq-km Sunderbans Tiger Reserve (admission/video ₹50/200; ☀️ dawn-dusk) is a network of channels and semisubmerged mangroves that forms the world's largest river delta. The ecosystem here is contiguous with the Sunderbans delta in Bangladesh, which lies eastward across the international border along the same shoreline. Tigers (officially estimated to number close to 300) lurk in the impenetrable depths of the mangrove forests, and also swim the delta's innumerable channels. Although they do sometimes kill villagers and their livestock, tigers are typically shy and sightings are rare. Nevertheless, cruising the broad waterways through the world's biggest mangrove sanctuary (now a Unesco World Heritage Site) and watching wildlife, whether it be a spotted deer, 2m-long water monitor or luminescent kingfisher, is a world away from Kolkata's chaos.

The best time to visit the reserve is between November and March – entry is restricted through the late summer and monsoon months. Organised tours are the best way to navigate this tricky and harsh landscape, not least because all your permits, paperwork, guiding duties and logistical problems are taken care of. In fact, travelling alone is not recommended.

At Sajnekhali, the official gateway into the reserve, you'll find the Mangrove Interpretation Centre (Sajnekhali; ☀️ 8.30am-5pm) FREE with a small turtle and crocodile hatchery, a collection of pickled wildlife and a blackboard with the date of the last tiger-spotting chalked up. Motorboats (₹600) and guides (₹600) are available for hire near the site.

Mandarmani

☎ 03220

About 180km south of Kolkata, the sleepy fishing village of Mandarmani sports a heavenly beach stretching nearly 15km. It remains one of the more unpolluted beaches in the country, and supports countless colonies of sand bubbler crabs. The beaches see some additional action at dawn, when fishing boats drop anchor and disgorge their catches of marine goodies.

Adventure Zone (☎9830033896; www.aboutadventure.org; Mandarmani) conducts parasailing (₹600) on the beaches, and offers an adventure-sports package (₹1200) that includes kayaking, zip-lining, rock climbing and rappelling.

Sana Beach (☎9330633111; www.mandarmanihotels.com; d incl breakfast from ₹2850; 🍷🍷), at the far end of the beach, is by far the best among all the resorts lining Mandarmani's sands. It has a mix of comfy rooms done up in cheerful hues, ethno-chic cottages and tents, a lovely swimming pool and a good bar-cum-restaurant.

SAGAR FESTIVAL

According to Hindu legend, Sagar Island – at the confluence of the Ganges – was where King Sagar's 60,000 sons were brought back to life by the flowing river after they had been reduced to ashes by a sage named Kapil Muni. Each year in January, the Ganga Sagar Mela is held here, near the Kapil Muni Temple, honouring the legend. The best way to see the festival is the two-day, one-night boat tour operated from Kolkata by West Bengal Tourism (www.wbtcd.gov.in), with accommodation on board (per person all-inclusive from ₹8000). The island hibernates for the rest of the year.

Buses (₹60, two hours) run frequently from Kolkata's Esplanade bus stand to Namkhana pier, from where ferries ply to the island. Buses and share taxis shuttle within the island between points of tourist interest.

To get there, take the 6.40am 12857 Tamarila Express (2nd class/chair ₹100/365, 3½ hours) from Kolkata's Howrah Station to Digha. A one-way taxi ride from there costs about ₹500.

NORTH OF KOLKATA

Up the Hooghly

Serampore, on the Hooghly River, about 25km north of Kolkata, was a Danish trading centre until Denmark's holdings in India were transferred to the British East India Company in 1845. Serampore College was founded in 1818 by the first Baptist missionary to India, William Carey, and houses a library that was once one of the largest in the country.

Further upstream is the former French outpost of Chandarnagar. Here you can visit the Eglise du Sacre Coeur (Sacred Heart Church) and the nearby 18th-century mansion now housing the Cultural Institut de Chandarnagar (☎11am-5.30pm, closed Thu & Sat) FREE, with collections documenting this colonial-era outpost. In November, there are gorgeous public lighting displays for Jagaddhatri Puja, a festival devoted to the worship of an incarnation of the Hindu mother goddess. Enthusiastic locals through festive arenas to pay their respects to gigantic clay idols of the four-armed deity, housed in temporary pavilions called pandals.

In 1571 the Portuguese set up a factory in Bandel, 41km north of Kolkata and close to Saptagram, which was an important Portuguese trading port long before Kolkata rose to prominence. Here, you can climb the lofty clock tower of the romantically crumbling Imambara (admission ₹5; ☎8am-6pm Apr-Jul, to 5.30pm Aug-Nov, to 5pm Dec-Mar), which has breathtaking views of the river. The building was constructed in 1861 as a centre for learning and worship. Only 1km south of Bandel, Chinsurah was ceded by the Dutch to the British in exchange for Sumatra in 1825. There are dilapidated ruins of a fort and a cemetery, about 1km to the west.

About 6km north of Hooghly, Bansberia has two interesting temples. The 13 sikharas (spires) of the Hanseswari Temple look like something you'd expect to see in St Petersburg, while the ornate terracotta tiles cov-

SPA TREATS

Looking to experience the best of rural Bengal while treating yourself to a spot of wellness and luxury? Head to one of these two recommended spa resorts, set amid scenic landscapes, and indulge in some of the best comforts and therapies, while soaking up the bucolic charms of the region.

Hemmed by blooming vegetable gardens and centred on a tree-lined lake only an hour's drive north of Kolkata is Vedic Village (☎9830025900; www.thevedicvillage.com; Shikharpur village; r from ₹8500; 🍷@🍷), a luxury resort known as much for its fine hospitality as its showcase facility – a speciality spa-cum-naturopathy clinic that's touted to be the first (and best) medical spa in the country. Long-stay treatment packages, built around several sessions of consultation with in-house doctors, can be customised upon prior notice. Casual holidaymakers can simply kick back in one of the luxury villas, de-stress to the chirping of myriad bird species, tuck into mouth-watering cuisine, or float in the ultramarine waters of the swimming pool.

En route to Diamond Harbour, about two hours south of Kolkata, stands Ganga Kutir (☎033-40404040; www.gangakutir.com; Sarisa village, Raichak; r incl breakfast from ₹15,299; 🍷@🍷), another popular destination for those wanting some solitude. Located on the banks of the Hooghly, this swish resort offers a range of wellness packages which – paired with yoga and meditation – are a great nourisher for tired sinews. Accommodation is in chic suites appointed with snazzy mural-covered walls and great river views.

ering the Vasudev Temple resemble those seen in Bishnupur.

To visit these settlements on a day tour from Kolkata, take any Bandel-bound local train (₹14, one hour, hourly) from Howrah Station, or hire a taxi for the day (₹2600). There aren't too many restaurants in the area, so carry a packed lunch.

Bishnupur

☎03244 / POP 61,900

Known for its beautiful terracotta temples, Bishnupur flourished as the capital of the Malla kings from the 16th to the early 19th centuries. The architecture of these intriguing temples (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250; 🌅dawn-dusk) is a bold mix of Bengali, Islamic and Oriya (Odishan) styles. Intricately detailed facades of numerous temples play out scenes of the Hindu epics, the Ramayana and Mahabharata. The most striking structures include the Jor Bangla, Madan Mohan Temple, the multiarched Ras Mancha and the elaborate Shyam Rai Temple. You need to pay for your ticket at Ras Mancha and show it at the other temples. Cycle-rickshaw-wallahs offer tours (the best way to negotiate the labyrinth of lanes) for ₹300.

There's a small museum (admission ₹10; 🕒11am-7pm Tue-Sun) that's worth a look for its painted manuscript covers, stone friezes, musical instruments and folk-art gallery.

Bishnupur is in Bankura district, famous for its Baluchari silk saris and its pottery, particularly the stylised terracotta Bankura horse. Reproductions of detailed terracotta tiles from the temples are sold everywhere.

Bishnupur Tourist Lodge (☎03244-252013; www.wbtourism.gov.in; College Rd; d from ₹800; 🍷), flaunting a red-and-white exterior, is perhaps the best place to sleep in town, with clean pastel-shaded rooms and a good bar-cum-restaurant. It's close to the museum and a ₹50 rickshaw ride from the train station. It's often full, so book ahead.

Regular buses run from Bishnupur to Kolkata (₹140, five hours). For Shantiniketan (₹100, four hours) you have to change in Durgapur. Two fast trains run daily to Howrah station (2nd class/chair ₹140/505, four hours): the 6.25am 12883 Rupashi Bangla Express and the 4.50pm 12827 Howrah Purulia Express.

Shantiniketan

☎03463

In addition to epitomising its Bengali name – meaning 'abode of peace' – Shantiniketan is a veritable nerve centre of Bengal's art and culture. Nobel laureate, poet and artist Rabindranath Tagore (1861–1941) founded a school here amid pastoral settings in 1901. It later developed into the Visva Bharati University, with an emphasis on the study

PALACES GALORE

Thrown around the vicinity of Kolkata's city limits are a handful of rajbaris or palaces belonging to families of erstwhile zamindars (landowners). While most of them stand delapidated and forlorn, a few have recently made a promising turnaround and joined the top-end tourism bandwagon. Among the few palaces offering a luxury experience woven around the bygone regal life is the palace of Itachuna (☎ 9830142389; www.itachunarajbari.com; Halusai village; d from ₹2700; 🏠), 110km from Kolkata. It packs a punch with its renovated stately interiors, fine Bengali food and an overall bucolic ambience. The palace of Bawali (☎ 9830383008; www.therajbari.com; Bawali village; d incl breakfast from ₹13,500; 🏠), a one-hour drive south of Kolkata, also makes for a lovely getaway, with a striking doric-pillared facade, carefully preserved distressed decor and excellent overall hospitality.

of liberal arts as well as humanity's relationship with nature. A relaxed place, it attracts students from all over India and overseas.

Spread throughout the leafy university grounds are eclectic statues, the celebrated Shantiniketan murals and the Belgian glass-panelled university prayer hall. The Museum & Art Gallery (adult/student ₹10/5; ☎ 10.30am-1pm & 2-4.30pm Thu-Mon, to 1pm Tue) within the Uttarayan complex (Tagore's former home) are worth a peek if you are a Tagore aficionado. Reproductions of his sketches and paintings are sold here.

Subarnarekha bookshop near the post office has plenty of Tagore's titles (₹100 to ₹250) in English. Around Shantiniketan, several practitioners of classical dance, music, pottery and painting offer casual short-term courses to visiting students. Ask the helpful staff at Subarnarekha.

🌟 Festivals & Events

Poush Mela CULTURAL
(Shantiniketan; ☎ 23-26 Dec) The highpoint of Shantiniketan's festive calendar, this four-day winter gala brings together artists, musicians, artisans and poets from places as diverse as nearby villages to far-flung continents. There's food, fun, frolic, song, dance and poetry round the clock, with sessions of vigorous souvenir shopping in between.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Park Guest House GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 9434012420; www.parkguesthouse.in; Deer Park; d incl breakfast ₹1450; 🏠🍴) Bordering a quaint tribal village, this peaceful and pretty place is clearly the best deal in town. The rooms are beautifully embellished with tribal decor, and the elaborate thali meals (prepared upon advance notice) are simply awesome. There's a lovely lawn where you can nurse a quiet beer in the evening.

Shantiniketan Tourist Lodge HOTEL $$
(☎ 03463-252699; www.wbtourism.gov.in; Bhubandanga; d from ₹950; 🏠) Industrial but friendly, this large-scale government operation is worth considering if you go for one of its deluxe air-conditioned rooms (₹2650), located in cottages standing around a pretty lawn. There's a decent restaurant (mains ₹120) which works up delicious local Bengali fare.

Ghare Baire BENGALI $$
(Geetanjali Cinema complex; meals ₹150; ☎ 11am-9.30pm) A restaurant specialising in traditional Bengali fare, this cafeteria-style eatery churns out sumptuous and utterly delectable platters for lunch and dinner. There are a few generic snacks and Chinese preparations on offer as well. There's a souvenir store on site, selling exquisite pottery that you might want to browse in between morsels.

📍 Information

Post office (Shantiniketan Rd; ☎ 10am-4pm Mon-Sat) On the main road, opposite the turn-off to the university entrance.

State Bank of India (Shantiniketan Rd; ☎ 10am-2pm Mon-Fri, to noon Sat) Has an ATM and changes foreign currency.

🚆 Getting There & Away

Several trains ply the route between Bolpur station, 2km south of the university, and Kolkata daily. The best is 12337 Shantiniketan Express (2nd class/chair ₹95/305, 2½ hours) departing at 10.10am from Howrah station. For New Jalpaiguri, take the 9.20am 15657 Kanchenjunga Express (sleeper/3AC ₹250/665, nine hours).

Bolpur's Jambuni bus stand has connections to Berhampore/Murshidabad (₹110, four hours) and Bishnupur (₹100, four hours). Change in Suri and Durgapur respectively.

Train booking office (Santiniketan Rd; ☎ 8am-noon & 12.30-2pm Thu-Tue) Near the post office, with information on trains to and from Kolkata or Darjeeling, and reservations.

Nabadwip & Mayapur

📍 03472 / POP 125,300

Nabadwip, 114km north of Kolkata, is an important Krishna pilgrimage centre, attracting throngs of devotees, and is also an ancient centre of Sanskrit culture. The last Hindu king of Bengal, Lakshman Sen, moved his capital here from Gaur.

Across the river from Nabadwip, Mayapur is the headquarters of the Iskcon (Hare Krishna) movement. There's a large, colourful temple and the basic but clean Iskcon Guest House (📍 03472-245620; mghb@pam ho.net; Main Complex; d/tr/q from ₹500/600/800; 🕒). Iskcon runs a package tour in a private bus from Kolkata, leaving early on Friday, Saturday and Sunday mornings, returning the subsequent evening. For details or to make a booking call Iskcon Kolkata (📍 9830955124).

Murshidabad & Berhampore

📍 03482 / POP 170,300

In Murshidabad, rural Bengali life and 18th-century architecture meld on the verdant shores of the Bhagirathi River. When Siraj-ud-daula was nawab of Bengal, Murshidabad was his capital, and he was assassinated here after the defeat at Plassey (now Palashi).

The main draw here is the palace of Hazarduari (Indian/foreigner ₹10/250; ☎ 10am-4.30pm Sat-Thu), a palace famous for its 1000 doors (real and false), built here for the nawabs in 1837. It houses an astonishing collection of antiquities from the 18th and 19th centuries. Other beautiful structures in the complex include the Nizammat Imambara, the clock tower, the Wasef Manzil, a former regal residence, and the elegant Madina Mosque.

Murshid Quli Khan, who moved the capital here in 1700, is buried beneath the stairs at the impressive ruins of the Katra Mosque. Siraj-ud-daula was assassinated at the Nimak Haram Deori (Traitor's Gate). Within the Kathgola Gardens (admission ₹10; ☎ 6.30am-5.30pm) is an interesting family mansion of a Jain trading family, dating back to 1873.

Berhampore is 15km south of Murshidabad and acts as its bus and railway hub.

🍽️ Sleeping & Eating

Hotel Sagnik

HOTEL $

(📍 09434021911; Omrahaganj; d from ₹850; 🕒) Conveniently located between Murshidabad and Berhampore, this friendly place has good-value rooms and a decent restaurant, but scores mostly on service, which is prompt and personalised. It's a 10-minute cycle-rickshaw ride from Murshidabad train station.

Hotel Samrat

HOTEL $

(📍 03482-251147; NH34 Panchanantala; d from ₹850; 🕒) This is one of Berhampore's longest-running operations. It offers spacious and clean rooms opening along corridors painted in orange and cream. The Mahal restaurant (mains ₹80 -150) downstairs is a good place for meals. It's located on the main highway, though, so expect some vehicle noise at night.

📍 Getting There & Around

The 13103 Bhagirathi Express (2nd class/ chair ₹68/241, four hours) departs Kolkata's Sealdah station at 6.20pm. Regular buses leave for Kolkata (₹130, six hours) and Malda (₹90, four hours). To Santiniketan/Bolpur (₹95, four hours) there are occasional direct buses but you may need to change in Suri.

Shared autorickshaws (₹30) whiz between Murshidabad and Berhampore. Cycle-rickshaws/taxis offer guided half-day tours to see the spread-out sites for ₹300/800.

WEST BENGAL HILLS

Siliguri & New Jalpaiguri

📍 0353 / POP 701,000 / ELEV 120M

The crowded and noisy transport hub encompassing the twin towns of Siliguri and New Jalpaiguri (NJP) is the jumping-off point for Darjeeling, Kalimpong, Sikkim, the Northeast States, eastern Nepal and Bhutan. Despite this being one of the largest cities in the state, there's little to see or do here, apart from staying the night in transit.

GAUR & PANDUA

Rising from the flooded paddy fields of Gaur (355km from Kolkata) are mosques and other crumbling ruins of the 13th- to 16th-century capital of the Muslim nawabs of Bengal. Little remains from the 7th- to 12th-century pre-Muslim period, when Gaur was the capital of the successive Buddhist Pala and Hindu Sena dynasties.

Hiding behind lush mango orchards, the most graceful monuments in this area are the impressive Baradwari Mosque (1526) – the arcaded aisle of its corridor still intact – and the fortresslike gateway of Dakhil Darwaza (1425). The Qadam Rasul Mosque enshrines the flat footprint of the Prophet Mohammed. Remnants of colourful enamel cling to the Chamkan Mosque and the Gumti Gate nearby.

In Pandua (about 25km from Gaur) are the vast ruins of the 14th-century Adina Masjid, once India's largest mosque. About 2km away is the Eklakhi Mausoleum, so called because it cost one lakh (₹100,000) to build back in 1431.

To visit these forgotten relics, board the 3.25pm 13011 Howrah–Malda Intercity Express (2nd class/chaire ₹130/465, 7½ hours) from Kolkata. Accommodation is available in Malda (15km from Gaur and 30km from Pandua) at Hotel Kalinga (☎ 03512-283567; hotelkalinga@gmail.com; NH34, Ram Krishna Pally; d ₹1000; ☹), which has basic rooms, friendly service and palatable in-house food. For touring the monuments, it's best to hire a taxi from Malda for the day (₹2200).

Most of Siliguri's hotels, restaurants and services are spread along Tenzing Norgay Rd, better known as Hill Cart Rd. NJP Station Rd leads southward 6km to NJP station. Branching northeastward off Hill Cart Rd are Siliguri's other main streets, Sevoke and Bidhan roads.

If you have time in the evening, you might want to visit the colourful Salugara gumpa, about 5km out of town, adorned with an imposing chortenlike spire. Alternatively, shop for Chinese knock-offs in the bustling Hong Kong Market off Sevoke Rd in the heart of town.

Sleeping

Evergreen Inn HOTEL $
(☎ 0353-2510426; innevergreen@yahoo.in; Pradhan Nagar, Ashana Purna Sarani; d from ₹990; ☹) Located just 100m from the bus terminal, this hotel down a side street is surprisingly peaceful. Each room is different, but they all are clean and fresh with flat-screen TVs and stylish bathrooms. The staff are friendly, though English isn't their forte. You'll find it down a lane on the opposite side of the bus terminal.

Hotel Conclave HOTEL $
(☎ 0353-2516155; www.hotelconclave.in; Hill Cart Rd; s/d from ₹770/880; ☹) Located conveniently close to the bus stand, it has quality beds and prim cedar-themed decor. The glass elevator adds a touch of class. The cheaper rooms are quieter, while the pricier ones come with complimentary breakfast.

Hotel Himalayan Regency HOTEL $
(☎ 0353-6502955; Hill Cart Rd, Pradhan Nagar; d from ₹800; ☹) Don't judge this place by its vivacious sense of aesthetics. The rooms are clean and comfortable, and the bathrooms are a definite winner for this price range. You'll find it on a narrow lane near Pradhan Nagar police station.

Hotel Rajdarbar HOTEL $$
(☎ 0353-2511189; www.hotelrajdarbarsiliguri.com; Hill Cart Rd; s/d incl breakfast ₹1900/2100; ☹☹) A fresher and better-run option than its popular neighbour, the Hotel Conclave, this place has tidy and well-maintained rooms, a good restaurant and lobby wi-fi. It offers excellent value for money overall, and the free breakfast is quite sumptuous.

Hotel Sinclairs HOTEL $$$
(☎ 0353-2512675; www.sinclairshotels.com; off NH31; s/d incl breakfast from ₹5300/5600; ☹☹☹) This comfortable three-star hotel, 1km north of the bus terminal, offers an escape from the noise of Hill Cart Rd. It's one of Siliguri's longest-standing luxury addresses, and offers comfortable and spacious carpeted rooms with good bathrooms and dedicated room service. There's an excellent patio restaurant-bar and a cool clean pool.

Eating

★ Khana Khazana MULTICUISINE $$
(Hill Cart Rd; mains ₹120-180; ☀ noon-10pm) On a side alley off the busy main highway, the secluded outdoor garden here offers merciful relief from the chaos outside. The extensive menu ranges from Chinese and South Indian specials to Mumbai street snacks. There are plenty of hearty vegetarian options.

Amber INDIAN $$
(Hill Cart Rd; mains ₹120-250; ☀ noon-10pm) This trusted eating address attached to Hotel Saluja Residency serves mouth-watering dishes including fluffy naans, lip-smacking curries, tender meat dishes and subtly flavoured biryanis that go down extremely well with the city's food lovers. Evenings are an especially buzzy time to be here.

Sartaj INDIAN $$
(Hill Cart Rd; mains ₹120-220; ☀ noon-10pm) In a cluster of similar bar-cum-restaurant operations, this sophisticated eatery boasts a huge range of first-rate North Indian tandooris and curries, some decent Continental options and top-notch service, including a fantastic uniformed doorman. It's also a good place for a cold beer.

Getting There & Away

AIR

Bagdogra Airport is 12km west of Siliguri. There are daily flights to Delhi, Kolkata and Guwahati. Fares vary widely; online deals are often the best.

Five-seater helicopters (₹3500, 30 minutes, 10kg luggage limit) travel daily from Bagdogra to Gangtok at 2.30pm in good weather. You need to book in advance through Sikkim Tourism Development Corporation (p546) in Gangtok; there's also a booking counter at the airport for spot bookings.

BUS

Most North Bengal State Transport Corporation (NBSTC) buses leave from Tenzing Norgay Central Bus Terminal (Hill Cart Rd), as do many private buses plying the same routes. Private long-distance bus companies line the entrance.

NBSTC buses include frequent buses to Malda (₹150, 6½ hours), plus six daily services to Kolkata (₹390 to ₹430, AC ₹770). Assam State Transportation Corporation runs a daily 4pm bus to Guwahati (₹490, 15 hours).

For a 6pm Patna departure (₹260, 12 hours) try Gupta Travels (☎ 0353-2513451; Hill Cart Rd), just outside the bus station. Deluxe Volvo buses for Kolkata (₹1320, 11 hours) leave around 7pm from this and many other agencies.

Sikkim Nationalised Transport (SNT) buses to Gangtok (₹160, 4½ hours) leave at 7.30am, 11.30am, 12.30pm and 1.30pm from the SNT terminal (Hill Cart Rd), 250m southeast of the bus terminal. Arrange your permit in advance at the Sikkim Tourist Office next door.

JEEP

An efficient and relatively comfortable way of getting around the hills is by share jeep. There are a number of jeep stands lining Hill Cart Rd: for Darjeeling (₹150, three hours) and Kurseong (₹80, 1½ hours) look around opposite the bus terminal or outside the Conclave Hotel until late afternoon; for Kalimpong (₹120, 2½ hours) head to the Panitanki Mall stand on Sevoke Rd (take an autorickshaw for ₹20); and for Gangtok (₹200, four hours) jeeps leave from next to the SNT terminal until around 4pm. Share and charter jeeps for all these destinations also leave from NJP train station. Mirik-bound jeeps (₹100, 2½ hours) leave most frequently from Siliguri train station, 200m southwest from the central bus terminal.

The toy train continues to remain suspended from Siliguri, due to damaged tracks near Tindharia. For the next few years, the only option will be to drive to Kurseong and then catch the toy train on to Darjeeling.

Chartering a jeep privately costs roughly 15 times that of a shared ticket. An option for XL-sized travellers is to pay for and occupy the front two or three seats next to the driver.

A prepaid taxi stand at Bagdogra Airport offers fixed fares to Darjeeling (₹2200), Gangtok (₹2400), Kakarbhitta (₹600) and even Bhadrapur in Nepal (₹1200), allowing you to bypass Siliguri completely. It's not difficult to hook up with other airline passengers to share the cost.

TRAIN

Buy tickets at Siliguri Junction station or at the train booking office (☎ 0353-2537333; cnr Hospital & Bidhan Rds; ☀ 8-11am, 11.30am-2pm & 2.15-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun), 1.5km south-east of the Hotel Conclave.

The 8pm 12344 Darjeeling Mail is the fastest of the many daily services to Kolkata (sleeper/3AC ₹350/910, 10 hours), via Malda. For Delhi, the 1.15pm 12435 Rajdhani Express is your best and quickest bet (3AC/2AC ₹2155/2960, 21 hours). Alternatively, board the 5.15pm 12505 North East Express (sleeper/3AC ₹610/1600, 26 hours), via Patna (sleeper/3AC ₹305/780, 10 hours). For Guwahati, board the 8.35am 12506 North East Express going in the other direction (sleeper/3AC ₹275/705, eight hours).

i Getting Around

From the bus terminal to NJP train station a taxi/autorickshaw costs ₹200/100. Taxis/autorickshaws between Bagdogra Airport and Siliguri cost ₹400/250.

Jaldhaphara Wildlife Sanctuary

☎ 03563 / ELEV 60M

The little-visited Jaldhaphara Wildlife Sanctuary (☎ 03563-262239; www.jaldhaphara.in; Indian/foreigner ₹50/200, camera/video ₹50/500; ☀ mid-Sep–mid-Jun) protects 114 sq km of lush forests and grasslands along the Torsa River and is a refuge for 150 Indian one-horned rhinoceros (Rhinoceros unicornis).

The best time to visit is mid-November to April, with March and April being the best months for wildlife spotting. Your best chance of spotting a rhino is on an elephant ride (☎ 03563-262230; Indian/foreigner per hour ₹200/600; ☀ 5-8am), though these lumbering safaris are often booked out by the tourist lodges. Even if you are staying at Jaldhaphara Tourist Lodge for a night you are not guaranteed a ride, as full occupancy is double that of their daily elephant quota. Weekdays offer the best chance, since local tourist footfall is almost nil.

Jeep safaris (☎ 03563-262230; 4/8 passengers ₹2000/2400) operate in the early morning and afternoon and stop at viewing platforms, but these can be hard to arrange unless you are on a tour.

The West Bengal tourist offices in Kolkata and Siliguri organise weekend tours (☎ 033-22488271; www.wbtdc.gov.in; Indian/foreigner ₹4300/5225; ☀ departs 10am Sat, returns 5pm Sun) from Siliguri to Jaldhaphara, which include an elephant ride, transport, accommodation at the Hollong Tourist Lodge and all meals.

Mithun of Wild Planet Travel Desk (☎ 9735028733; easthimalayan3@yahoo.com) and Hotel Relax can often book accommodation and elephant rides when no one else can and is probably your best option for a DIY trip. Budget travellers should bear in mind that an hour-long elephant ride will cost at least US$50 per person, after all costs are added in.

Bring mosquito repellent.

Sleeping & Eating

The two lodges should be booked well in advance through the West Bengal Tourist Office in Siliguri (p497). Darjeeling (☎ 0354-2254102; www.wbtdc.gov.in; Chowrasta; ☀ 10am-5pm Mon-Fri) or Kolkata (p484), or online at www.westbengaltourism.gov.in.

Hotel Relax

HOTEL $

(☎ 9641796512; Madarihat; d ₹600) The Relax is the best private budget option, opposite the Jaldhaphara Tourist Lodge, with simple yet well-kept doubles that lack air-conditioning but come with hot-water bathrooms. Tasty and wholesome meals are available in-house (veg/fish/chicken ₹50/90/130).

Hollong Tourist Lodge

LODGE $$

(☎ 03563-262228; d ₹2200) This charming, green-coloured wooden lodge right in the heart of the park is easily the best place to stay, though booking one of the six rooms can be a real challenge. You can spot animals right from the verandah and you are guaranteed a morning elephant ride. Book up to three months in advance.

The lodge doesn't take direct bookings, bookings are made via West Bengal Tourist Office (p484).

Jaldhaphara Tourist Lodge

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9733008795; Madarihat; d from ₹1800; ☎) This functional but spiffy WBTD (West Bengal Tourism Development Corporation) hotel is just outside the park in Madarihat town. It has rooms in wooden and concrete blocks or in new cottages. Weekends can be a bad time to check in, as the place is swamped with noisy local families and youth groups.

The lodge doesn't take direct bookings, bookings are made via West Bengal Tourist Office (p484).

Getting There & Away

Jaldhaphara is 124km east of Siliguri. Local buses run frequently from Siliguri to Madarihat (₹80, four hours) between 11.40am and 4.30pm. There are also slow but scenic mail trains (unreserved seat ₹40 to ₹65, three to four hours), leaving Siliguri Junction at 8.20am, 5.10pm and 6pm, returning from Madarihat at 6.05am, 7.50am and 1.30pm.

From Madarihat, it's a 7km trip to the park headquarters. A return taxi costs ₹600, including waiting time, plus you'll also have to pay the ₹200 vehicle entry fee.

Kurseong

☎ 0354 / POP 40,100 / ELEV 1460M

Kurseong, 32km south of Darjeeling, is a tiny and bustling hill town best known for its formidable league of tea estates and a rush of Raj-era boarding schools that dot its extents. Its name derives from the Lepcha

BORDER CROSSING – BANGLADESH, BHUTAN & NEPAL*To/From Bangladesh

A number of private agencies in Siliguri, including Shyamoli (☎ 9932628243; Hill Cart Rd, 1km northwest of the central bus station, Hotel Central Plaza complex, Mallagauri More), run daily AC buses direct to Dhaka (₹1200, 18 hours), departing at 1.30pm. You'll need to complete border formalities at Chengrabandha. Book a day or two in advance.

Buses also run every 45 minutes from the Tenzing Norgay Central Bus Terminal to Chengrabandha (₹80, 2½ hours) between 7am and 6pm. The border post is open from 8am to 6pm daily. From near the border post you can catch buses on to Rangpur, Bogra and Dhaka. Visas for Bangladesh can be obtained in Kolkata and New Delhi.

To/From Bhutan

Bhutan Transport Services runs two daily buses from Sevoke Rd, Siliguri to Phuentsholing (₹90, departs 7.15am and noon), and there are many more local buses to Jaigon on the Indian side of the border, where you clear Indian immigration. Non-Indian nationals need visa clearance from a Bhutanese tour operator to enter Bhutan.

To/From Nepal

For Nepal, local buses pass the Tenzing Norgay Central Bus Terminal on Hill Cart Rd in Siliguri every 30 minutes for the border town of Panitanki (₹30, one hour). Nearby shared jeeps to Kakarbhitta (₹80 to ₹100) are faster but only leave when full. The Indian border post in Panitanki is officially open 24 hours but the Nepali post in Kakarbhitta is open from 7am to 7pm. Onward from Kakarbhitta there are numerous buses to Kathmandu (17 hours) and other destinations. Bhadrapur Airport, 23km southwest of Kakarbhitta, has regular flights to Kathmandu on Buddha Air (www.buddhaair.com). Visas for Nepal can be obtained at the border (bring two passport photos).

word khorsang, a reference to the small white orchid prolific in this area. Flanked by hilly slopes draped with manicured tea estates, it is also currently the southern terminus for the charming toy trains of the Darjeeling Himalayan Railway.

Hill Cart Rd (Tenzing Norgay Rd) – the noisy, traffic-choked main thoroughfare from Siliguri to Darjeeling – and its remarkably close shadow, the railway line, wind through town.

There are numerous good walks in the area. Eagle's Crag (2km return) affords splendid views down the Teesta Valley and the steamy plains to the south. St Mary's Hill (4km) takes you past atmospheric grottos and churches into charming pine forests that lead all the way up to a spectacular mountain ridge.

Sights & Activities

Makaibari

TEA ESTATE

(☎9733004577; www.makaibari.com; Pankhabari Rd; ☺Tue-Sat) FREE If you like tea you should visit this organic and biodynamic tea estate; the factory is open to visitors. In-between the huge sorting and drying machines, and the fields of green bushes you may run into the owner, tea guru and local character Rajah Banerjee. Mornings are the best time to see the production process. Visits are free, or you can opt for a program of tea plucking, tasting and lunch in a local homestay for ₹300.

The estate is 3km below Kurseong along Pankhabari Rd, and 1km below Cochrane Pl. A taxi here costs ₹200, or it's a pleasant downhill walk (it's much steeper coming back so take a ₹20 shared taxi from Cochrane Pl). En route, the lush, overgrown old graveyard at St Andrew's has poignant reminders of the tea-planter era.

Makaibari runs a pioneering homestay and volunteer program from a separate office 50m below the main entrance. Volunteers can find placements in teaching, health and community projects.

Makaibari Homestays

HOSTMAY $$$

(☎033-22878560; Makaibari Tea Estate; per person incl full board US$25) This pioneering program aims to harness tourism to empower local women tea pickers. There are 21 family houses currently involved in the project, and more are planned in a new environmentally sustainable village below. Houses are simple but comfortable and families speak basic English. Activities on offer include tea picking and birdwatching trips.

Kurseong Tourist Lodge

HOTEL $$$

(☎0354-2345608; Hill Cart Rd; d from ₹1700) This old-fashioned, government-run lodge has inviting wood-lined rooms with valley views. The toy train whistles past the popular cafe, where you can snack on momos (Tibetan dumplings). The restaurant (mains ₹80 to ₹140), on the other hand, serves up good Indian treats for lunch and dinner. It's a 10-minute walk out of town along the main road towards Darjeeling.

★ Cochrane Place

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$

(☎9932035660, 0354-2330703; www.imperialchai.com; 132 Pankhabari Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹2700/3400; @) With 360-degree plantation views and the twinkling lights of Siliguri below, this charming getaway offers oodles of quaintness in the form of period furniture and antique artefacts in its bright and airy pastel-shaded rooms. There's a delicious mix of Anglo-Indian, Continental and Indian food on offer, and a fine selection of Darjeeling teas at Chai Country, the in-house cafe.

The hotel is wheelchair-friendly and can provide Bagdogra Airport and NJP train station pick-ups. It's worth taking an extra day to enjoy an excellent guided village and tea-estate walk, topped off by a local-style stick massage (working on pressure points with a set of sticks) or an expert tea-tasting session.

Getting There & Away

Numerous share jeeps run to Darjeeling (₹60, 1½ hours) and Siliguri (₹60, 1½ hours), with 8am departures for Kalimpong (₹130, 3½ to four hours) and Mirik (₹70, 2½ hours).

The Darjeeling Himalayan Railway's toy train to Darjeeling (1st/2nd class ₹160/27, three hours) leaves at 7am and 3pm and takes twice as long as a shared jeep.

Darjeeling

Spread in ribbons over a steep mountain ridge, surrounded by emerald-green tea plantations and towered over by the majestic Khangchendzonga (8598m), Darjeeling is the definitive Indian hill station. Dating back to the Raj era, it's arguably West Bengal's premier attraction, and promises some interesting exploration for the curious traveller. When you aren't gazing open-mouthed at Khangchendzonga, you can explore colonial-era architecture, visit Buddhist monasteries, and spot snow leopards and red pandas at the nearby zoo. On the steep and bustling streets winding through town, you can lose yourself amid an array of Himalayan faces from Sikkim, Bhutan, Nepal and Tibet. And finally, when energies start to flag, a good, steaming Darjeeling brew is never far away.

Most tourists visit Darjeeling in autumn (October and November) and spring (mid-March to mid-May) when skies are dry, panoramas are clear and temperatures are pleasant. Winters can be cold here, so bring an extra jumper if visiting from December to February. The rainy months (June to September) can be extremely wet and are best avoided.

Darjeeling sprawls over a west-facing slope in a confusing web of interconnecting roads and steep flights of steps. Expect an uphill hike to your hotel if arriving at the train station or jeep stand. The two main squares – Chowrasta, near the top of town, and Clubside junction – are linked by pedestrianised Nehru Rd (aka the Mall), which doubles as the main shopping street. Hill Cart Rd (aka Tenzing Norgay Rd) runs the length of the bustling lower bazaar and is Darjeeling's major vehicle thoroughfare.

History

Darjeeling originally belonged to the Buddhist chogyals (kings) of Sikkim until 1780, when it was annexed by invading Gurkhas from Nepal. The East India Company gained control of the region in 1816, but soon returned most of the lands to Sikkim in exchange for British control over any future border disputes.

During one such dispute in 1828, two British officers stumbled across the Dorje Ling monastery, on a tranquil forested ridge, and passed word to Kolkata (Calcutta) that it would be a perfect site for a sanatorium (they were sure to have also mentioned its strategic military importance in the region). The chogyal of Sikkim (still grateful for the return of his kingdom) agreed to lease the uninhabited land to the East India Company for the annual fee of £3000. In 1835, the hill station of Darjeeling was born and the first tea bushes were planted. By 1857, the population of Darjeeling had reached 10,000, mainly because of a massive influx of Gurkha tea labourers from Nepal.

Since Independence, the Gurkhas have become the main political force in Darjeeling. Friction with the state government led to calls for a separate state of Gorkhaland in the 1980s. In 1986, violence and riots orchestrated by the Gorkha National Liberation Front (GNLF) brought Darjeeling to a standstill. As a result, the Darjeeling Gorkha Hill Council (DGHC) was given a large measure of autonomy from the state government. Calls for full secession have resurfaced in recent years, leading to the replacement in 2012 of the DGHC by the Gorkhaland Territorial Administration (GTA). The political situation is now calm.

Sights

Tiger Hill

VIEWPOINT

To watch the dawn light break over a spectacular 250km stretch of Himalayan horizon, including Everest (8848m), Lhotse (8501m) and Makalu (8475m) to the far west, rise early and jeep out to Tiger Hill (2590m), 11km south of Darjeeling, above Ghum. The skyline is dominated by Khangchendzonga (great five-peaked snow fortress), India's highest peak and the world's third-highest. On either side of the main massif are Kabru (7338m), Jannu (7710m) and Pandim (6691m), all serious peaks in their own right.

This daily morning spectacle (views are best in autumn and spring) is a major tourist attraction, and you'll find hundreds of jeeps leaving Darjeeling for Tiger Hill every morning at 4am – traffic snarls en route are quite common. At the summit you can either pay ₹10 to stand in the pavilion grounds or warm up in one of the heated lounges in the pavilion (₹20 to ₹40). It can be a real bunfight here, so we suggest you simply find yourself a ringside spot in the open courtyard in front of the pavilion, from where the views are equally grand.

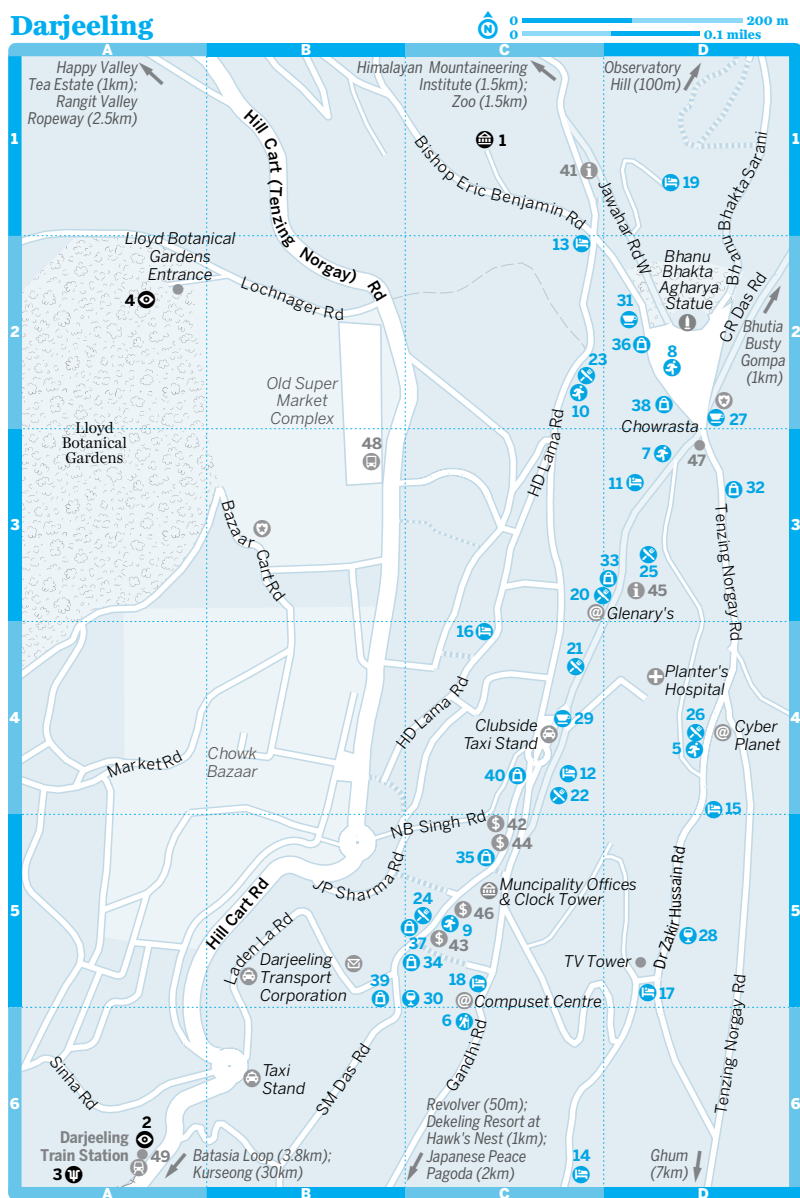

Organised sunrise trips (usually with a detour to Batasia Loop on the way back) can be booked through a travel agency or directly with jeep drivers at the Clubside taxi stand. Return trips cost ₹1200 per vehicle.

Observatory Hill

a wrathful avatar of Shiva the destroyer. The summit is marked by several shrines, a flurry of colourful prayer flags and the ringing notes from numerous devotional bells.

A path leading up to the hill through giant Japanese cedars starts about 300m along Bhanu Bhakta Sarani from Chowrasta; watch out for marauding monkeys. Disappointingly, there are no mountain views, but the still, pine-scented ambience is worth taking in.

Bhutia Busty Gompa

MONASTERY

This temple originally stood on Observatory Hill, but was rebuilt in its present location by the chogyals of Sikkim in the 19th century. It houses fine murals depicting the life of Buddha, with Khangchendzonga providing a spectacular backdrop. To get here, follow CR Das Rd downhill for five minutes from Chowrasta Sq, past a trinity of Buddhist rock carvings.

Japanese Peace Pagoda

BUDDHIST TEMPLE

(☺️ puja 4.30-6am & 4.30-6.30pm) Perched on a hillside at the end of AJC Bose Rd, this gleaming white pagoda is one of more than 70 pagodas built around the world by the Japanese Buddhist Nipponzan Myohoji organisation. During the drumming puja (prayer) sessions, visitors are offered a hand drum and encouraged to join in the rituals. Getting here involves a pleasant, gentle 30-minute walk from Clubside junction along Gandhi and AJC Bose Rds, past the curiously named Institute of Astroparticle Physics and Space Science.

Padmaja Naidu Himalayan Zoological Park

ZOO

(📍 0354-2254250; www.pnhzp.gov.in; admission incl Himalayan Mountaineering Institute Indian/foreigner ₹40/100, camera/video ₹10/25; ☺️ 8.30am-4.30pm Fri-Wed, ticket counter closes 4pm) This zoo, one of India's best, was established in 1958 to study, conserve and preserve Himalayan fauna. Housed within its rocky and forested environment are species such as Himalayan bears, clouded leopards, red pandas and Tibetan wolves. The zoo, and its attached snow leopard-breeding centre (closed to the public), are home to the world's largest single captive population of snow leopards. The zoo is a pleasant 20-minute downhill walk from Chowrasta along Jawahar Rd West.

Alternatively, take a share jeep (₹20, about 10 minutes) from Chowk Bazaar bus/jeep station, or hire a taxi (₹250).

Himalayan Mountaineering Institute

MUSEUM

(HMI; ☎ 0354-2254087; www.hmi-darjeeling.com; admission incl zoo Indian/foreigner ₹40/100, museum Indian/foreigner ₹20/50; ☀ 8.30am-4.30pm Fri-Wed) Tucked away within the grounds of the zoo, this prestigious mountaineering institute was founded in 1954 and has provided training for some of India's leading mountaineers. Within the complex is the fascinating Mountaineering Museum. It houses sundry details and memorabilia from the 1922 and 1924 Everest expeditions, which set off from Darjeeling, as well as more recent summit attempts. While browsing the displays, look for the Carl Zeiss telescope presented by Adolf Hitler to the head of the Nepali Army.

Just beside the museum, near the spot where Tenzing Norgay was cremated, stands the Tenzing Statue. The intrepid Everest summiteer lived in Darjeeling for most of his life and was the director of the institute for many years.

The HMI runs 28-day basic and advanced mountaineering courses (HMI; ☎ 0354-2254087; www.hmi-darjeeling.com; Indian/foreigner ₹4000/US$650) from March to May and September to December. These courses are oriented to teach candidates a broad range of skills required for high-altitude climbing. Foreigners should apply at least three months in advance. There are also a number of 15-day adventure courses for those aged between 14 and 40. These courses combine a range of adventure activities such as trekking, camping, rock climbing and water sports.

Rangit Valley Ropeway

CABLE CAR

(return-ticket adult/child ₹150/75; ☀ 10am-2pm, closed 19th of every month) This scenic ropeway reopened in 2012, after a fatal accident halted operations in 2003. The 40-minute ride takes you from North Point down to the Takvra Valley tea estate, gliding over manicured tea bushes that look like giant broccoli growing on mountain slopes. Get here early if you want to explore the village and tea plantation.

Tibetan Refugee Self-Help Centre

CRAFT WORKSHOP

(Lebong Cart Rd; ☀ 9am-4.30pm Mon-Sat) Established in 1959, this refugee centre comprises a home for the aged, a school, an orphanage, a clinic, a gompa (Tibetan Buddhist monastery) and craft workshops that produce carpets, woodcarvings, leather work and woollen items. There's also an interesting, politically charged photographic exhibition portraying the early years of the Tibetan refugees in Darjeeling. Visitors are welcome to wander through the workshops. The handicrafts are for sale in the show-room and proceeds go straight back into the Tibetan community.

The quickest way to reach the centre is to walk steeply downhill from the north side of Bhanu Bhakta Sarani; take the alley down beside Hotel Dolphin. To return to Chowrasta Sq, take a side path 10 minutes to the Bhutia Busty Gompa and climb back uphill from there. A chartered taxi via North Point costs around ₹400/600 one way/return.

Happy Valley Tea Estate

TEA ESTATE

(Pamphawati Gurgunri Rd; ☀ 8am-4pm Tue-Sun) FREE This 1854 tea estate below Hill Cart Rd is worth visiting, especially when the plucking and processing are in progress (March to November). An employee will guide you through the aromatic factory and its withering, rolling, fermenting and drying processes, explaining how green, black and white teas all come from the same leaf. Take the marked turn-off about 1km northwest of town on Hill Cart Rd.

Lloyd Botanical Gardens

GARDENS

(☎ 0354-2252358; ☀ 8am-4.30pm) FREE These pleasant gardens contain an impressive collection of Himalayan plants, most famously orchids and rhododendrons. Follow the signs along Lochnager Rd from the Chowk Bazaar bus and jeep station, until the hum of cicadas replaces the honking of jeeps at the main entrance. A map is posted at the office at the top of the park.

Batasia Loop

MONUMENT

(admission ₹10) If you're travelling on the toy train, or walking back from Tiger Hill, look out for this famous railway loop that goes around the open-air Gorkha War Memorial, erected in honour of the brave soldiers from the region who laid down their lives in WWI

i SEEING THE SIGHTS IN DARJEELING

Darjeeling's sights are quite spread out and road transport is a bit of a hassle. You'll make things easier by visiting certain sights together as clusters.

One excellent idea is to jump out of bed at 4am and take a jeep up to Tiger Hill in time for the spectacular sunrise over Khangchendzonga. After a regulation photo op with the mountain in the backdrop, continue down to Ghum and spend the morning/day visiting Batasia Loop and the monasteries there. Next drive, walk or take a toy train (p511) back to Darjeeling along the quiet Tenzing Norgay Rd, via the monastery of Alu Bari (1½ hours). Despite the lack of mountain views, this also makes a nice cycling route.

If you can't face a dawn trip to Tiger Hill, an early-morning stroll around Bhanu Bhakta Sarani, which runs from Chowrasta around the north side of Observatory Hill, offers several stunning viewpoints. Combine the stroll with a visit down to Bhutia Busty Monastery or up to Observatory Hill.

A good half-day itinerary is to walk out to the zoo and Himalayan Mountaineering Institute, then continue around the hill on the road above busy Hill Cart Rd to the Rangit Valley Ropeway. From here take a shared minivan from North Point back to Darjeeling, getting off at Happy Valley Tea Estate. Then walk the short-cut footpath to Chowk Bazaar jeep stand via Lloyd's Botanical Garden. Alternatively, walk 30 minutes from the ropeway along Lebung Cart Rd to the Tibetan Refugee Self-Help Centre and hike back steeply uphill to Chowrasta via Bhutia Busty Monastery.

and WWII. Some tours stop here after the sunrise trip to Tiger Hill. The views are almost as good and the atmosphere much more serene.

Ghum

MONASTERIES

The junction of Ghum, 7km southwest from Darjeeling, is home to a number of colourful Buddhist monasteries. Yiga Choling Gompa, the region's most famous monastery, has wonderful old murals and is home to some 30 monks of the Gelugpa school. Built in 1850, it enshrines a 5m-high statue of Jampa (Maitreya or 'Future Buddha') and 300 beautifully bound Tibetan texts. It's just west of Ghum, about a 10-minute walk off Hill Cart Rd.

Other gompas of interest nearby include the fortress-style Guru Sakya Gompa, which conducts prayer sessions between 5.30am and 7.30am (useful if returning from a dawn visit to Tiger Hill). The active Samten Choling Gompa, just downhill, has the largest Buddha statue in West Bengal, a memorial chorten dedicated to German mystic Lama Govinda and a small cafe selling piping hot veg momos (₹20). All three gompas are within 10 minutes' walk of each other on Hill Cart Rd.

About halfway between Ghum and Darjeeling is the huge Druk Sangak Choling Gompa, also known as Dali Gompa, inaugurated by the Dalai Lama in 1993. Known for its vibrant frescoes, it is home to 300 Himalayan monks who study philosophy, literature, astronomy, meditation, dance and music. Come for prayers between 4pm and 6pm.

You can get to Ghum from Darjeeling by toy train (₹30), shared taxi (₹30) or chartered taxi (₹300 one way).

Bengal Natural History Museum

MUSEUM

(Bishop Eric Benjamin Rd; adult ₹10; ☀9am-4.30pm) Established in 1903, this minor sight houses a moth-eaten collection of Himalayan and Bengali species, hidden away in a compound just off Bishop Eric Benjamin Rd. The giant leeches and horrific baby animals pickled in jars are guaranteed to provoke a shudder.

Dhirdham Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

Darjeeling's most conspicuous Hindu temple is a replica of the famous Pashupatinath Temple in Kathmandu. It's easy to find - just below the Darjeeling train station. There's a good view over Darjeeling from its grounds.

Activities

Pony Rides

HORSE RIDING

From Chowrasta, children can take a ride around Observatory Hill for ₹200, or through tea estates to visit a monastery for ₹500 per hour. A horseman accompanies the horse at all times, and the activity is fairly safe. No riding helmets are provided though.

Courses

Manjushree Centre of Tibetan Culture

LANGUAGE
(☎ 0354-2252977; www.manjushree-culture.org; 12 Gandhi Rd; 3-/6-/9-month courses US$230/340/450, plus registration US$30; ☺ mid-Mar-mid-Dec) Beginner and advanced lessons in written and spoken Tibetan are offered at this Tibetan cultural centre, with beginner courses starting every two months. Students can lodge with local Tibetan families.

Tours

The GTA Tourist Reception Centre (p510), taxi stands and travel agencies offer a variety of tours around Darjeeling, usually including the zoo, Himalayan Mountaineering Institute, Tibetan Refugee Self-Help Centre and several scenic viewpoints. Taxis can be hired for custom tours for ₹1000 per half-day.

Sleeping

Darjeeling has a large selection of hotels. The main backpacker enclave is Dr Zakir Hussain Rd, which follows the highest ridge in Darjeeling, so be prepared for a hike to the best budget places.

Prices given are for the high season (October to early December and mid-March to mid-May), when it's wise to book ahead. In the low season prices can drop by 50%. A recently introduced rule requires foreigners to sometimes present a passport photo when checking in to a hotel, so carry some with you until this rule is withdrawn.

Hotel Tranquillity

HOTEL $
(☎ 0354-2257678; hoteltranquillity@yahoo.co.in; Dr Zakir Hussain Rd; d/tr ₹700/800; ☺) This good-value place is sparkling clean, with 24-hour hot water, nice lobby seating and small but neat baby-blue rooms. The helpful owner is a local schoolteacher, and can provide all kinds of info about the area. Wi-fi costs ₹100 per day.

Hotel New Galaxy

HOTEL $
(☎ 7583995457; Dr Zakir Hussain Rd; d from ₹800) This is a simple budget option, with wood-panelled walls, smallish rooms and hot-water buckets in the cheaper rooms. Try for room 104 – it has the best views across to the mountains. The property could do with a facelift, though, considering its innards currently feel a bit musty.

★ Dekeling Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $$
(☎ 0354-2254159; www.dekeling.com; Gandhi Rd; d from ₹1650; @☺) Spotless Dekeling is full of charming touches such as coloured diamond-pane windows, a traditional bukhari (enclosed cylindrical wood-fired oven) in the cosy and sociable lounge-library, wood panelling and sloping-attic ceilings, plus superb views. Tibetan owners Sangay and Norbu play perfect hosts, and the whole place is a combination of clean and homey, right down to the adorable dog, Drolma.

★ Revolver

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$
(☎ 0354-2253711; www.revolver.in; 110 Gandhi Rd; d ₹1400; ☺) This Beatles-themed hotel is a must for fans. The five small but stylish rooms are each named after one of the Fab Four (plus Brian Epstein), so you can choose your favourite Moptop (John fills up first; Ringo brings up the rear). The hotel is chock-a-block with Beatles memorabilia, including Beatles movies on the in-house TV channel.

The downstairs restaurant serves good fresh-ground coffee (₹120) and interesting Naga set meals (₹180). It's certainly well thought-out, but there's a certain coldness to the hospitality that's dispensed by the proprietors. The entrance is easily missed behind the Union Church.

Hotel Aliment

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0354-2255068; alimentweb98@gmail.com; 40 Dr Zakir Hussain Rd; s/d from ₹800/1600; @) A budget travellers' favourite, with a good top-floor restaurant (and cold beer), lending library, helpful owners and wood-lined rooms. The upstairs rooms (₹1800) have a TV and valley views. All the double rooms have geysers, but they only operate between 6pm and 8pm. The overall hostel-like ambience is a throwback to the classic backpacker era.

Hotel Seven Seventeen

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0354-2255099; www.hotel717.com; 26 HD Lama Rd; s/d from ₹2200/2500; ☺) This friendly Tibetan-themed place on the edge of the bazaar has pleasant wood-skirted rooms with clean toilets. Some of the rooms have great views overlooking the valley. There's a good restaurant specialising in Tibetan, Chinese and Indian staples. The reception is a flight of steps below road level.

Bellevue Hotel

HOTEL $$
(☎ 0354-2254075; www.bellevuehotel-darjeeling.com; d from ₹2000; @) This spacious gompa-style Tibetan complex has a variety of renovated wood-panelled rooms, most of which come with grass-mat floors and a bukhari. The affable staff, communal breakfast and lounge area, and location (not to mention the outlook over Chowrasta towards Khangchendzonga) all make this a popular choice. Don't confuse it with the Olde (Main) Bellevue Hotel up the road.

Tibet Home

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 0354-2252977; 12 Gandhi Rd; r ₹1900) Clean, bright and modern rooms make this a solid, central option, with profits going to the attached Manjushree Centre of Tibetan Culture. There are great views from the rooftop. It is often booked out by visiting Buddhist delegates and monks, so ask in advance.

★ Windamere Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0354-2254041; www.windamerehotel.com; Jawahar Rd West; s/d incl full board from ₹10,500/13,500; @) This quaint, rambling relic of the Raj on Observatory Hill offers one of Darjeeling's most atmospheric digs. The charming colonial-era Ada Villa was once a boarding house for British tea planters, and the well-tended grounds are spacious with lots of pleasant seating areas. The comfortable rooms, fireplaces and hot-water bottles offer just the right measures of comfort and mothballed charm.

It's a particularly great place to spend Christmas. At any time of the year, feel free to drop by for evening high tea (per person ₹450) and to sample the vintage charm of the place. Keep your eyes peeled for the Jan Morris poem in the tea room.

Elgin

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0354-2257226; www.elginhotels.com; HD Lama Rd; s/d incl half board ₹8800/9200; @☎) Grand yet friendly and full of classy ambience, the Elgin is a modern and formal hotel. The restaurant is elegant, as is the great bar and small library. The cute garden terrace is the perfect place to nurse a beer (₹200) or high tea (₹400, 4pm to 6pm). The 'attic room' underneath the dripping eaves is charming.

Dekeling Resort

at Hawk's Nest

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0354-2253298; www.dekeling.com; 2 AJC Bose Rd; d from ₹3800; ☎) Run by the good people at Dekeling Hotel, this is a quiet, exclusive place, 1km outside of Darjeeling en route to the Japanese Pagoda. The four 130-year-old, colonial-style, two-room suites have antique

TEA TOURISM

Darjeeling's most famous export is its aromatic muscatel tea, known for its amber colour, tannic astringence and a musky and spicy flavour. These days, however, sundry other teas including green, oolong and premium white varieties are produced alongside the traditional black tea. Most of the produce is now organic, and the best grades fetch several hundred dollars per kilo at auctions.

While in Darjeeling, a pot of this fine brew is best enjoyed at Sunset Lounge (p509) and House of Tea (p509). The true-blue afternoon-tea experience at Windamere Hotel (₹450; ☎ 4-6pm) is a joy for aficionados of all things colonial era, with shortcake, scones, cheese and pickle sandwiches, and brews from the reputed Castleton Tea Estate.

For a more absorbing and enlightening experience, we recommend a day visit to one of the tea estates that currently welcomes visitors. The easiest places to learn about tea production are Makaibari Estate (p500) in Kurseong and Happy Valley (p504) outside Darjeeling. Spring, monsoon and autumn are the busiest times, when the three respective 'flushes' are harvested. There's no plucking on Sunday, which means most of the machinery isn't working on Monday.

If you wish to spend a night amid the plantations, try a tea pickers' family at a homestay (☎ 033-22878560; Makaibari Tea Estate; per person incl full board US$25) at Makaibari Estate, where you'll get to join your hosts for a morning's work in the tea bushes. Pick your own leaves, watch them being processed and then return home with a batch of your very own hand-plucked Darjeeling tea. If you're in the mood for splurging, accommodation doesn't get any more exclusive than top-end Glenburn (☎ 9830070213; www.glenburnteestate.com; Darjeeling; s/d incl full board ₹19,900/31,500), between Darjeeling and Kalimpong, a working tea estate/resort that boasts five members of staff for every guest. A stay at Glenburn is rumoured to have given director Wes Anderson inspiration for his film The Darjeeling Limited.

touches and fireplaces, and there's a nice sunny terrace. Five new mountain-facing superdeluxe rooms were recently added. It's a great escape from Darjeeling's increasingly noisy centre.

Mayfair Darjeeling

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0354-2256376; www.mayfairhotels.com; Jawahar Rd West; d incl half board from ₹12,100; 📶) Originally a maharaja's summer palace but renovated within an inch of its life, this plush choice sits among manicured gardens and a bizarre collection of kitschy sculptures. The outside and common areas don't have quite the charm of the Elgin, but the plush rooms are well decorated and many have balconies.

Soft carpets and coal fires add to the warm welcome, the bar has fine sunset views and the cosy library has a choice of DVDs for a rainy day. The children's playroom makes it good for families.

Eating

Most restaurants close by 8pm or 9pm. Tax will add on 13.5% to most bills.

Sonam's Kitchen

CONTINENTAL $

(142 Dr Zakir Hussain Rd; mains ₹80-120; ☎ 8am-2.30pm & 5.30-8pm Mon-Sat, 8am-2pm Sun) Sonam's serves up real brewed coffee, authentic French toasts, fluffy pancakes, fresh soups (nettle in season) and yummy pasta, all within its tiny ration-store-like interior that seats barely a dozen people. The deliciously chunky wholemeal sandwiches can be packed to go for picnics.

Kunga

TIBETAN $

(51 Gandhi Rd; mains ₹100-140) Kunga is a cosy wood-panelled place run by a friendly Tibetan family, which goes strong on noodles and momos, with excellent juice, fruit muesli curd and shabhaley (Tibetan pies). The clientele includes locals, which is a mark of its culinary authenticity. You'll find it next to Hotel Dekeling.

Dekeva's

TIBETAN $

(51 Gandhi Rd; mains ₹80-120; ☎ 11am-9pm) Next door to Kunga, this small place offers good servings of Tibetan butter tea, tsampa (roast barley flour), good Chinese dishes and a range of noodles for connoisseurs who can tell their thanthuk (Tibetan noodles) from their sogthug (also Tibetan noodles).

Hasty Tasty

INDIAN $

(Nehru Rd; mains ₹60-140) There's nothing fancy at this vegetarian self-service canteen, but the open kitchen churns out great paneer masala dosas (curried vegetables inside a crisp pancake) and several types of veg set-meal options. It's a hit with domestic tourists, so expect some rush during mealtimes.

★ Glenary's

MULTICUISINE $$

(Nehru Rd; mains ₹150-250; ☎ noon-9pm; 📶) This elegant restaurant sits atop the famous bakery and cafe of the same name. It receives rave reviews and it caters to diners round the clock. Of note are the yummy Continental sizzlers, Chinese dishes, tandoori specials and veg gratin. The wooden floors and linen tablecloths add to the classy atmosphere. Oh, and there's booze to go with it all. Also has wi-fi (per hour ₹30; ☎ 10am-8pm).

Foodsteps

MULTICUISINE $$

(19 Nehru Rd; mains ₹160-240; ☎ 8.30am-9.30pm) There's a refreshing focus on healthy options at this upstairs place, with gluten-free baked goods and brown breads on the menu. The best options are the all-day breakfasts, particularly the waffles and pancakes, but there are also good grilled sandwiches and dinner thalis. Cookies and muffins are served with a Darjeeling brew as afternoon set teas.

Shangri-La

CHINESE $$

(Nehru Rd; mains ₹120-180; ☎ noon-8pm) This classy and modern bar-restaurant near the top of the Mall specialises in local Chinese offerings, but the menu is fringed with a few Indian and Continental entries. The surrounds are stylish, with sleek wooden floors, clean tablecloths and roaring fires in winter. There are also a couple of stylish hotel rooms (d ₹3500) upstairs.

Lunar Restaurant

INDIAN $$

(51 Gandhi Rd; mains ₹120-160; ☎ 11am-9pm) This bright and clean space just below Hotel Dekeling is perhaps the best vegetarian Indian restaurant in town, with good service and great views from the large windows. The masala dosas come with yummy dried fruit and nuts. Access to this 1st-floor joint is via the same staircase as Hotel Dekeling.

Mamta Pizza Place

ITALIAN $$

(HD Lama Rd; pizza ₹150-220; ☎ 9am-8pm) An unlikely address (or name) for a pizzeria, this cramped but sociable one-table place tosses up excellent European-accented pizza, pasta, panini and salads. Come at breakfast for such rarities as bacon, beef merguez sausage and Nepali cheese. Expect to wait about 20 minutes for a pizza.

Park Restaurant

INDIAN, THAI $$

(☎ 0354-2255270; 41 Laden La Rd; mains ₹120-180; ☀ noon-9pm) The intimate Park is deservedly very popular for its tasty North Indian dhal preparations and curries (great chicken tikka masala) and surprisingly authentic Thai dishes, including the tasty tom kha gai (coconut chicken soup) and spicy green papaya salad. Grab a table early or make a reservation during lunch and dinner hours.

Drinking & Nightlife

Glenary's

TEAHOUSE

(Nehru Rd; small pot ₹65, pastries ₹20-50; ☀ 8am-8pm; ☎) This teahouse and bakery has massive windows and good views. Order your tea, select a cake, grab your book and sink into a cosy wicker. It's a good place to grab breakfast.

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(Chowrasta Sq; coffee from ₹60; ☀ 10am-9pm) This reliable chain has locations at the Rink Mall and Chowrasta, the latter recommended for its fine sunny terrace that promises gorgeous mountain views.

House of Tea

TEAHOUSE

(Nehru Rd; tea ₹50-80; ☀ 10am-7pm) Sit and sip a range of brewed teas from several local Goodricke estates before purchasing a package of your favourite leaves.

Sunset Lounge

TEAHOUSE

(Chowrasta Sq; cup of tea ₹50-150; ☀ 9am-8pm; ☎) This tearoom run by Nathmull's Tea offers aficionados a range of white, green and black teas by the cup, with baked treats, fine valley views and free wi-fi.

Bars

The top-end hotels all have classy bars; the Windamere (p507) is the most atmospheric place to kick back with an early-evening G&T (₹300).

Joey's Pub

PUB

(SM Das Rd; beer ₹150; ☀ 6-10pm) If your preferred beverage comes in a pint not a pot, this long-standing British-style pub near the post office is a great place to strike conversations with other travellers. It has sports on TV, cold beer and hot toddys in the winter.

Gatty's Cafe

BAR

(Dr Zakir Hussain Rd; ☀ 11am-11pm; ☎) The backpacker-friendly Gatty's is the only place in town that has a pulse after 9pm, with live music on the weekend and open mic and movie nights during the week. The food includes housemade ravioli and decent breakfasts (mains ₹150 to ₹200), with Lavazza coffee and free wi-fi on the side.

Shopping

Nathmull's Tea Room

TEA

(www.nathmullstea.com; Laden La Rd; ☀ 10am-8pm Mon-Sat, daily Mar-May & Oct-Nov) Darjeeling produces some of the world's finest teas and Nathmull's is the best place to pick up some, with more than 50 varieties. Expect to pay ₹100 to ₹400 per 100g for a decent tea, and up to ₹2000 per 100g for the finest flushes. You can ask for a free tasting, and buy attractive teapots, strainers and cosies as souvenirs.

Tibetan Refugee Self-Help Centre

CARPETS

(☎ 0354-2252552; www.tibetandarb.yolasite.com; carpet incl shipping from US$220) ☎ This centre makes gorgeous Tibetan carpets to order; if you don't mind waiting six months for one to be made. Choose from the catalogue and they will ship the finished carpet to your home address. Good quality thangkas (Tibetan cloth paintings) are also available, but production was on hold in late 2014 due to the health of the only artist.

Hayden Hall

HANDICRAFTS

(www.haydenhall.org; Laden La Rd; ☀ 10am-6pm) ☎ Sells Tibetan-style yak wool carpets as part of its charitable work (₹6000 for a 1m by 1.8m carpet) and offers shipping. There are also good knitwear items (jumpers, caps, gloves, shirugs etc) and bags made by local women.

Bhutan Tibet Arts

HANDICRAFTS

(Chowrasta Sq; ☀ 11am-7pm) Has an impressive thangka collection, sourced from Bhutan and Nepal. Expect to pay around US$100 for a decent thangka, and up to US$600 for a rare vintage piece.

Dorjee Himalayan Artefacts

HANDICRAFTS

(Laden La Rd; ☀ 11am-7pm Mon-Sat) This tiny Aladdin's cave is crammed full of Himalayan knick-knacks, from Tibetan gau (amulets) to cast Buddhas and silver prayer wheels. A good collection of masks and thangkas are also on offer.

i BORDER CROSSING – NEPAL FROM DARJEELING

Foreigners can only cross the border into Nepal at Kakarbhitta/Panitanki (not at Pasupati, en route to Mirik).

Samsara Tours, Travels & Treks (can book day and night buses from Kakarbhitta to Kathmandu (₹1000 to ₹1200, departure 4am and 4pm), leaving you to hire a jeep to Kakarbhitta or catch a shared jeep to Siliguri and then Karkarbhitha. Samsara can also book Nepali domestic flights from Bhadrapur to Kathmandu (US$130), which will save you the overnight bus trip.

Any tickets you see advertised from Darjeeling to Kathmandu are not direct buses and involve transfers in Siliguri and at the border – leaving plenty of room for problems – it's just as easy to do it yourself.

Life & Leaf Fair Trade Shop HANDICRAFTS
(www.lifeandleaf.org; Chowrasta Sq; ☎10am-7pm Mon-Sat) Supports local artisans and environmental projects through the sale of organic honey and tea sourced from local small farmers, plus jute bags and Assamese silk shrugs and scarves.

THE TOY TRAIN

The Darjeeling Himalayan Railway, known affectionately as the toy train, is one of the few hill railways still operating in India. The panting train made its first journey along its precipice-topping, 60cm-wide tracks in September 1881. These days, it passes within feet of local storefronts as it weaves in and out of the main road, bringing traffic to a standstill and tooting its whistle incessantly for almost the entire trip. The train has been a Unesco World Heritage Site since 1999.

Services on the line have been in flux since 2009, when landslides destroyed a section of the track near Tindharia village. Services to and from NJP station are not expected to resume at least until 2016, which leaves only two daily diesel services to/from Kurseong via Ghum:

TRAIN NO	DARJEELING	GHUM	KURSEONG
52544	10.15am	10.45am	1.10pm
52588	4.10pm	4.40pm	6.50pm
TRAIN NO	KURSEONG	GHUM	DARJEELING
52587	7am	9.10am	9.40am
52545	3pm	5.20pm	5.50pm

During high season (March to May and October to November) there are also joy rides (₹400) that leave Darjeeling at 8am, 10.40am, 1.20pm and 4.05pm for a two-hour steam-powered return trip. The service pauses for 10 minutes at the scenic Batasia Loop and then stops for 20 minutes in Ghum, India's highest railway station, to visit the small railway museum (admission ₹20; ☎10am-1pm & 2-4pm). Enthusiasts can see the locomotives up close in the shed across the road from Darjeeling station.

Book at least a day or two ahead at the train station (p512) or online.

Guwahati (₹600, 10 hours) and Patna (₹550, 10 hours). These tickets don't include transfers to Siliguri.

JEEP & TAXI

Numerous share jeeps leave the crowded Chowk Bazaar Bus & Jeep Station (Old Super Market Complex) for Siliguri (₹150, three hours) and Kurseong (₹80, 1½ hours). Jeeps for Mirik (₹90, 2½ hours) leave from the northern end about every 1½ hours. A ticket office inside the ground floor of the Old Super Market Complex sells advance tickets for the frequent jeeps to Kalimpong (₹100, 2½ hours), while two roadside stands sell advance tickets for Gangtok (₹200, four hours). All jeeps depart between 7am and 3.30pm.

At the northern end of the station, three to four jeeps a day leave before noon for Jorethang (₹140, two hours) in Sikkim. You must already have a permit to enter Sikkim via this route.

To New Jalpaiguri or Bagdogra, get a connection in Siliguri, or charter a jeep or taxi from Darjeeling.

Darjeeling Transport Corporation (Laden La Rd) offers chartered jeeps to Gangtok (₹2200), Kalimpong (₹2200), Kurseong (₹1400), Kakarbhitta (₹2800) and Siliguri/Bagdogra Airport (₹2200/2400).

TRAIN

The nearest major train station is at New Jalpaiguri (NJP), near Siliguri. Tickets can be bought for major services out of NJP at the Darjeeling Train Station (☎ 0354-2252555; www.irctc.co.in; Hill Cart Rd; ☀ 8am-5pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun). Fares from Darjeeling include Ghum (1st/2nd class ₹140/20, 30 minutes) and Kurseong (1st/2nd class ₹30/210, three hours).

Getting Around

There are several taxi stands around town, but rates are absurdly high for short hops. Darjeeling's streets can be steep and hard to navigate. You can hire a porter to carry your bags up to Chowrasta Sq from Chowk Bazaar for around ₹100.

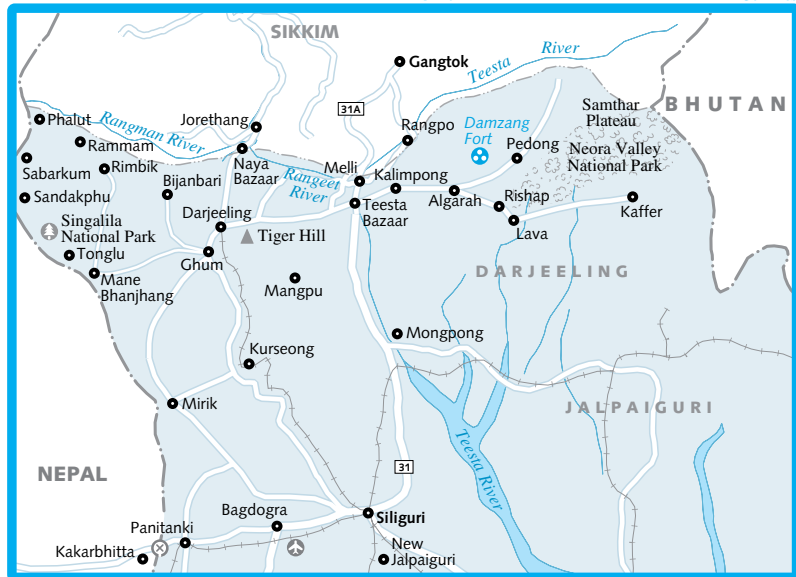

Share minivans to anywhere north of the town centre (eg to North Point) leave from the northern end of the Chowk Bazaar Bus & Jeep Station. For Ghum, get a share jeep (₹20) from along Hill Cart Rd.

Singalila Ridge Trek

The most popular multiday walk from Darjeeling is the five-day Singalila Ridge Trek from Mane Bhanjhang to Phalut, through the scenic Singalila National Park (Indian/foreigner ₹100/200, camera/video ₹100/500). The highlights are the great views of the Himalayan chain stretching from Nepal to Sikkim and Bhutan. Sandakphu in particular offers a superb panorama that includes Lhotse, Everest and Khangchendzonga peaks. October and November's clear skies and warm daytime temperatures make it an ideal time to trek, as do the long days and incredible rhododendron blooms of late April and May.

Local guides (₹800 per day) are mandatory within the park and must be arranged at the office of the Highlander Trekking Guides Association (☎9734056944; www.highlanderguidesandporters.com; Mane Bhanjhang) at Mane Bhanjhang, along with porters (₹400) if required.

Mane Bhanjhang is 26km from Darjeeling and is served by frequent shared jeeps (₹90, 1½ hours) as well as a 7am bus from Darjeeling's Chowk Bazaar bus & jeep station. A chartered jeep costs ₹1200. From Rimbik, there are shared jeeps back to Darjeeling (₹120, five hours) at 7am and noon, and a bus at 6.30am (₹90). Book seats in advance.

If you have to overnight in Rimbik the best lodges are Hotel Sherpa (d ₹900), with pleasant lawns and Alpine-style huts, and Green Hill (dm ₹200, r ₹500), with quieter wooden rooms out back.

The usual trekking itinerary is 83km over five days. A shorter four-day option is possible by descending from Sandakphu to Sri Khola on day three. A rough jeep road follows the trek from Mane Bhanjhang to Phalut but traffic is very light and the walking trail partly avoids the road.

Private lodges, some with attached bathrooms, are available along the route for around ₹200 for a dorm bed or ₹400 to ₹700 per room. All offer food, normally a filling combo of rice, dhal and vegetables (₹200). Rooms have clean bedding and blankets so sleeping bags are not strictly necessary, though they are nice to have. At a minimum, bring a sleeping bag liner and warm clothes for dawn peak viewing. Bottled and boiled water is available along the route. Trekkers' huts can be booked at the GTA Tourist Reception Centre but even staff here will tell you that you are better off at one of the private lodges. The main lodges for each overnight stop are listed below in ascending order of price and quality:

Day 1: Trekkers' Hut, Mountain Lodge, Siddharta Lodge and Shikhar Lodge in Tumling; Trekkers' Hut in Tonglu

Day 2: Chewang Lodge in Kalipokhari

Day 3: Trekkers' Hut, Namobuddha, Sunrise and Sherpa Chalet Lodge in Sandakphu

Day 4: Trekkers' Hut and Forest Rest House in Phalut

Day 5: Trekkers' Hut, Namobuddha Lodge and Sherpa Lodge in Rammam

All-inclusive guided treks on this route are offered by Darjeeling agencies for about ₹3000 per person per day, though it's easy enough to arrange a DIY trek for less. Lodges can get booked out in the busy month of October, so consider a November itinerary if you're planning the trek in autumn.

Remember to bring your passport, as you'll have to register at half a dozen army checkpoints. The ridge forms the India-Nepal border and the trail actually enters Nepal in several places.

For a relaxing end to a trek, consider a stay at Karmi Farm (www.karmifarm.com; per person incl full board ₹2000), a two-hour drive from Rimbik near Bijanbari. It's managed by Andrew Pulger-Frame, whose Sikkimese grandparents once ran an estate from the main house here. The simple but comfortable rooms are attractively decorated with colourful local fabrics, and bathrooms have 24-hour hot water. A small clinic for villagers is run from the farm, providing a volunteer opportunity for medical students and doctors. Singalila treks and other activities can be organised, but it is just as easy to sit here for a week with a book and a pot of tea, overlooking the bird- and flower-filled gardens in the foreground and towering peaks in the distance. The adventurous could walk here in a day from Darjeeling, via North Point, Singtom Tea Estate and Pul Bazaar.

Kalimpong

This bustling bazaar town sprawls along a saddle-shaped mountain ridge overlooking the roaring Teesta River and lorded over by the summit of Khangchendzonga. It's not a must-see, but it does boast Himalayan views, Buddhist monasteries, colonial architecture and a fascinating nursery industry, all linked by some fine hikes.

Kalimpong

Kalimpong's early development as a major Himalayan trading centre focused on the tea trade with Tibet, across the Jelep La. Like Darjeeling, Kalimpong once belonged to the chogyals of Sikkim, but it fell into the hands of the Bhutanese in the 18th century and later passed to the British, before becoming part of India at Independence. Scottish missionaries, particularly the Jesuits, made great efforts to win over the local Buddhists in the late 19th century and the town remains an important educational centre for the entire eastern Himalaya.

Kalimpong is centred on its chaotic central market and Motor Stand. Most sights and quality accommodation are a kilometre or two from town, along DB Giri and Rink-imping Rds.

Sights

Durpin Gompa

MONASTERY

FREE Kalimpong's largest monastery, formally known as Zangtok Pelri Phodang, sits atop panoramic Durpin Hill (1372m) and was consecrated by the Dalai Lama in 1976. There are impressive religious murals in the main prayer room downstairs (photography is permitted), interesting 3D mandalas (visual meditational aids) on the 2nd floor, and stunning Khangchendzonga views from the terrace. Prayers are held at 4pm.

The monastery is located about 5km south of the town centre, and is most easily reached by taxi (₹250 one way). It's a pleasant downhill walk back to town, passing the army golf course. Stop for a drink at charming Morgan House, now a WBTC hotel. A viewpoint about 300m below the gompa looks north towards the Jelep La and south over the Relli and Teesta rivers.

Tharpa Choling Gompa

MONASTERY

(off KD Pradhan Rd) FREE Built in 1922, this ambient Gelugpa-school Tibetan monastery contains statues of the past, present and future Buddhas. A Garuda protects each Buddha from above, his mouth devouring hatred and anger (in the form of a snake). It's a 30-minute walk (uphill) from town, 50m past Tripai Rd.

Dr Graham's Home

HISTORIC BUILDING

(☺ museum 9am-noon & 1.15-3.30pm Mon-Fri) FREE This orphanage and school was built in 1900 by Dr JA Graham, a Scottish missionary, to educate children of tea-estate workers, and now has 1300-odd students. There's a museum that commemorates Graham and his wife, Katherine. The 1925 chapel above the school seems lifted straight out of a Scottish parish, with its grey slate, spire and fine stained-glass windows.

The gate is 4km up the steep KD Pradhan Rd. Many people charter a taxi to get here (₹200) and then do the downhill walk back to town via Tharpa Choling Gompa and the Himalayan Handmade Paper Industry workshop.

On a clear day the sunrise views of Khangchendzonga from this hilltop park are simply superb. After savouring the views you can have breakfast at the attached Tourist Lodge and then walk down to Kalimpong via Dr Graham's Home. A taxi here costs around ₹300. Casual horse rides (₹200) are sometimes offered by local horse owners on the greens.

Himalayan Handmade Paper Industry

HANDICRAFTS WORKSHOP

(☎ 03552-255418; KD Pradhan Rd; ☀ 9am-noon & 1-4pm Mon-Sat) FREE Visitors are welcome to drop into this small workshop to see traditional papermaking processes, from boiling and pulping of the local argayli (daphne) bush to sifting, pressing and drying. The resulting insect-resistant paper is used to block-print monastic scriptures. Morning is the best time to see production. It's a 10-minute walk from town, on the right side of the road.

MacFarlane Church

CHURCH

FREE One of Kalimpong's most imposing churches, this 1870 church was severely damaged by a 2011 earthquake, when one of its steeples came crashing to the ground. After much renovation work, the church is now open to visitors and believers alike, and its wood-buttressed Gothic interiors are a wonderful place to spend a few moments in quiet contemplation.

Nurseries

NURSERIES

Kalimpong is a major flower exporter and produces about 80% of India's gladioli and sundry orchid varieties. Visit Nurseryman's Haven (☎ 03552-256936; 9th Mile) at Holumba Haven to see some 200-odd species of orchids; Santi Kunj (BL Dixit Rd; ☀ 8.30am-noon & 1.30-4pm Sun-Fri) to see anthuriums and the bird of paradise; and Pineview Nursery (☎ 03552-255843; Atisha Rd; admission ₹10; ☀ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat) to gaze at its eminently photographable cactus collection.

Lepcha Heritage Museum

MUSEUM

(☎ 9933780295; ☀ 10.30am-4.30pm Mon-Fri) FREE This offbeat collection of Lepcha treasures could be likened to rummaging through the attic of your grandfather's house (if he were a Lepcha elder). A guide explains Lepcha creation myths, while pointing out religious texts, sacred porcupine quill hats and old pangolin skins. It's a 10-minute walk downhill below the Sports Ground. Times vary so call ahead.

St Teresa's Church

CHURCH

A fascinating missionary church built in 1929 by Swiss Jesuits, St Teresa was constructed to incorporate designs from a Bhutanese gumpa. The wooden apostles resemble Buddhist monks, and carvings on the doors resemble the tashi tagye, eight auspicious symbols of Himalayan Buddhism. The church is off 9th Mile, about 2km from town. If it's locked, ask the next-door neighbours.

Activities

Gurudongma Tours & Travels

TOURS

(☎ 03552-255204; www.gurudongma.com; Rinkipong Rd, Hilltop) This local operator organises interesting trekking, mountain-biking and birdwatching tours, based around its luxury farmhouse on the Samthar Plateau. Pricey homestays (s/d including full board US$45/65) are also available.

Himalayan Eagle

PARAGLIDING

(☎ 9635156911; www.himalayaneagle.com) Kalimpong-based Swedish pilot Roger Lenngren offers paragliding flights from Deolo Hill. Tandem flights cost ₹3000/4500 for a 15-/30-minute flight, and transport to and from town is included in the price. Weather conditions have to be perfect for flights though.

Sleeping

Manokamana Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 03552-257047; manokamanalodge@gmail.com; DB Giri Rd; s/d ₹550/800; @) This family-run place exudes the air of a classic backpackers' dive. Its central location, combined with an internet cafe (per hour ₹30) and an excellent-value restaurant add to its appeal, even though accommodation is fairly basic, characterised by linoleum-floored rooms and bucket hot water in clean toilets. Ask for one of the quieter rear rooms.

Sherpa Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎ 8972029913; Ongden Rd; s/d ₹300/700) This simple but decent cheapie is slap bang in the centre of town, offering bright, clean rooms and buckets of hot water for the attached bathrooms. Service can be a little slack at times, however, and there's a fair bit of traffic noise coming from the busy road below.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

KALIMPONG WALKS

There's plenty of scope for some great walking around Kalimpong, so allow an extra day or two to stretch the legs. Helpdesk (p519) at Sherpa Lodge and Holumba Haven Hotel offer information on all these walks and can arrange guides and transport if needed.

In Kalimpong itself, Helpdesk can arrange a guided crafts walk, taking in a traditional incense workshop, working silversmiths, noodle makers and a thangka (Tibetan cloth painting) studio, all hidden in the backstreet bazaars.

One good half-day walk close to town leads from near Holumba Haven to the villages of Challisey and Chibo Busty to a grand viewpoint over the Teesta River. En route, you can drop by the LK Pradhan Cactus Nursery and a small curd production centre at Tharker Farm, with the option of descending to see two fascinating traditional Lepcha houses at Ngassey village.

Heading further afield, one potential DIY hike starts at a wide track 2km past Algarah on the road to Pelling. The track climbs gently along a forested ridge to the faint 17th-century ruins of Damsang Dzong, site of the last stand of the Lepcha kings against the Bhutanese. Continue along the ridge and then descend to views of Khangchendzonga at Tinchuli Hill, before following the dirt road back to the main Algarah–Pedong road. From here you can walk back 4km to Algarah to catch a shared jeep to Kalimpong, or continue 3km to Pedong via the Shangchen Dorje Gompa in Sakyong Busty. You can get a shared jeep from Kalimpong to Pedong (₹50) or Algarah (₹30). If you want to stay overnight, try the Silk Route Retreat (☎ 9932828753; www.thesilkrouteretreat.com; 21st Mile, Pedong; r/cottage ₹900/1700) in Pedong.

For the ultimate dawn and dusk views of Khangchendzonga, head to the Tiffin Dara viewpoint, just above the village of Rishap, about 30km from Kalimpong. A rough road climbs from the main Kalimpong–Lava road for 3km to a signed footpath 1km before Rishap. The path detours left after 20 minutes to the viewpoint and then continues through forest for 45 minutes to rejoin the main Lava–Kalimpong road. Just before this junction, by some prayer flags, a shortcut footpath drops down to Lava village via the Forest Lodge. For transport take the 7am shared jeep to Lava or the slower 8am bus. A chartered one-way jeep costs ₹1600 to Rishap or ₹2000 for a day's return hire, taking in Lava.

Lava (2353m) is a worthy destination in itself, especially if you time your walk with the bustling Tuesday market, or the 10am debating or 3.30pm prayers at the modern Kagyupa Thekchenling Gompa. Adjoining Lava is Neora Valley National Park (Indian/foreigner ₹100/200, vehicle entry ₹100, guide ₹600; ☀ 15 Sep–15 Jun), whose lush forests are home to red pandas, clouded leopards and myriad bird species. Travel agents can arrange a four-day camping trek to Roche La (3155m), at the high junction of West Bengal, Sikkim and Bhutan. The cottages of the Lava Forest Lodge (☎ 033-23350064; www.wbfdc.com; Lava; d from ₹800) just above town offer the nicest accommodation but can be hard to book; try through WBTD (☎ 03552-255654; www.wbtdc.gov.in) in Siliguri or Holumba Haven in Kalimpong. The private Hotel Orchid (☎ 03552-282213; Lava; d from ₹1100) is another decent choice. Avoid October, when Bengali tourists flood the town. Shared jeeps (₹100) run back to Kalimpong when full, until around 3.30pm.

Tibetan place is set around a peaceful flower-hemmed family mansion, and boasts some superb Tibetan eats in its airy terrace cafe. The rooms are plain and a tad overpriced for what's on offer, but the pricier upper-floor rooms have some quaintness and ambience to them. It's a 10-minute walk out of the town centre.

★ Holumba Haven

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$

(☎ 03552-256936; www.holumba.com; 9th Mile; s/d from ₹1500/1700; ☎) A curious yet utterly charming property combining a nursery and a family-run guesthouse, Holumba is located amid sylvan settings about 1km below town. The spotless, comfy rooms are arranged in cosy cottages spread around the lush gardens, and good homestyle meals (₹350, preorders only) are available in the sociable dining room.

Kalimpong Park Hotel HERITAGE HOTEL $$
(☎03552-255304; www.kalimpongparkhotel.com; Rinkingsong Rd; d from ₹2600; @☎) This former summer home of the maharajas of Dinajpur is perched on a mountain shelf overlooking the Relli valley, and packs in oodles of Raj-era charm. Wicker chairs and scarlet blossoms line the verandah and there's a charming lounge bar, along with a restaurant offering British boarding-school staples such as jelly custard. Rooms in the main building have more ambience than their annex counterparts.

Cloud 9 HOTEL $$
(☎9832039634; cloudnine.kpg@gmail.com; Rinkingsong Rd; s/d ₹1500/2200) The five wood-panelled rooms on the 1st floor of this cheerful property are irreverently homey, and the restaurant below serves interesting Bhutanese and Sikkimese dishes and chilled beer. Binod the owner is a Beatles junkie and loves to bond over music late evenings – he might even buy you a beer if you're good with the guitar or vox!

Himalayan Hotel HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎03552-255248; www.himalayanhotel.com; Upper Cart Rd; s/d ₹2400/3600; @☎) Opened by David MacDonald, an interpreter from Francis Younghusband's 1904 Lhasa mission, this fascinating property has vintage rooms with fireplaces and sloping Himalayan-oak ceilings. There's also a clutch of suites that mesh old-world charm with modern comfort and private balconies. You're in fine company here; the former guest list includes Himalayan legends such as Alexandra David-Neel, Heinrich Harrer and Charles Bell.

Elgin Silver Oaks HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎03552-255296; www.elginhotels.com; Rinkingsong Rd; s/d incl full board ₹7700/8200; @☎)

This centrally located Raj-era home-stead-turned-heritage hotel is clearly Kalimpong's most luxurious option. The rooms are plushly furnished and offer grand views down the valley towards the Relli River (ask for a garden-view room). The tariff includes all meals in the classy restaurant and the sociable bar packs bags of atmosphere.

Eating & Drinking

Gompu's Bar & Restaurant TIBETAN $$
(Gompu's Hotel, off DB Giri Rd; mains ₹80-140, beer ₹150; ☎7am-9pm) Gompu's starts its day with its signature oversized pork momos (₹110), which have been drawing locals and travellers alike for as long as anyone can remember. It's also a good place for a cold beer chased by a plate of garlic chilli potatoes or roast pork glazed in soy sauce.

Lee's CHINESE $$
(☎9593305812; DB Giri Rd; mains ₹80-140; ☎11am-7.30pm Mon-Sat) In true Chinese fashion, Mr Lee and his daughter serve up fantastic and unique Yunnan-style dishes at this eatery with a red interior. Stand-out dishes include the mun wontons (dumplings fried in egg), red pork, homemade rice noodles, a delectable golden chicken in garlic gravy and a refreshing pot of good-quality green tea. It's just above One Cup cafe.

3C's BAKERY $
(DB Giri Rd; cakes & snacks ₹20-40; ☎8.30am-7.30pm) If you need a quick break, this popular bakery and fast-food restaurant offers a variety of pastries and cakes, both sweet and savoury. There's mediocre coffee on tap, and seating to the rear overlooking the sports ground.

King Thai CHINESE $$
(3rd fl supermarket; DB Giri Rd, mains ₹80-140; ☎11am-9.30pm) A multicultural hang-out with a Thai name, Chinese food and Bob Marley posters on the walls, this place draws in monks, businessmen and Tibetan cool kids. The generously portioned food is mainly Chinese with some Thai and Indian accents, and there's a bar with comfy chairs and loud music in the evenings.

One Cup CAFE
(DB Giri Rd; coffee ₹60; ☎11am-6.30pm Mon-Sun) Kalimpong's first coffee house serves a decent espresso hit, alongside some quality

BORDER CROSSING – TO BHUTAN & NEPAL

A West Bengal government bus travels to the Bhutan border at Jaigon (₹150, 5½ hours) at 8.15am, and there are also early-morning jeeps (₹150, five hours). There is one early-morning bus (₹100, 5.45am) and jeep (₹120, 6.30am) to the Nepal border at Kakarbhitta. The journey takes about three hours.

cakes and ice-cream specials. It's frequented by young people, and gets noisy in the evenings.

Shopping

Lark's Provisions

FOOD & DRINK

(DB Giri Rd; ☎10am-6pm) This is the best place to pick up local cheese (₹350 per kilogram), produced in Kalimpong since the Jesuits established a dairy here in the 19th century. It also sells locally made stickjaws and milky lollipops (₹40) and yummy homemade pickles.

Haat Bazaar

MARKET

Why Go?

Glistening paddy-fields to the north and wild forested hills to the south provide a striking backdrop for a visit to this remote rural region. This is also one of the country's religious melting pots, and getting caught up in the spiritual atmosphere is the real draw for travellers.

Bihar is the birthplace of Buddhism and plays host to thousands of pilgrims from around the world who throng its many places of religious significance; the most extraordinary of which is traveller-friendly Bodhgaya, where Buddha achieved enlightenment. In tribal Jharkhand, holy Parasnath Hill is a revered Jain pilgrimage site, and joining devotees on the hike to the top is a surreal highlight for those who like to get off the beaten track.

Truth be told, the whole of this region is off the beaten track. Outside Bodhgaya, foreign tourists are almost nonexistent, so if you're looking to sidestep mainstream travel, this unfashionable pocket could be an unexpected highlight.

When to Go

Patna

Jan & Feb Temperatures hover between a chilly-to-pleasant 12°C and 25°C.

Jun–Sep Monsoon season. Steer clear – Bihar is India's most flood-prone state.

Oct & Nov Comfortably cool again; the region's forests assume a moody autumn look.

Bihar & Jharkhand Highlights

- 1 Witnessing Buddhists from around the world converging on the powerfully serene Mahabodhi Temple in the traveller haven of Bodhgaya (p529)

2 Getting up at 3am for the surreal Jain pilgrimage to the top of Parasnath Hill (p537)
- 3 Visiting the peaceful ruins of the once-huge ancient university at Nalanda (p535)

History

Bihar's ancient history kicks off with the arrival of Prince Siddhartha during the 6th century BC, who spent many years here before leaving, enlightened, as the Buddha. Mahavira, a contemporary of Buddha and the founder of Jainism, was born in Bihar and attained nirvana near Nalanda at the age of 72. In the 4th century BC, after Chandragupta Maurya conquered the Magadha kingdom and its capital Pataliputra (now Patna), he expanded into the Indus Valley and created the first great Indian empire. His grandson and successor, Ashoka, ruled the Mauryan empire from Pataliputra, which was one of the largest cities in the world at that time. Emperor Ashoka embraced Buddhism, erecting stupas, monuments and his famous Ashokan pillars throughout northern India, notably at Sarnath (Uttar Pradesh) and Sanchi (Madhya Pradesh). In Bihar, Ashoka built the original shrine on the site of today's Mahabodhi Temple in Bodhgaya and the lion-topped pillar at Vaishali.

Bihar continued to be coveted by a succession of major empires until the Magadha dynasty rose to glory again during the reign of the Guptas (7th and 8th centuries AD). With the decline of the Mughal empire in the 17th century AD, Bihar came under the control of Bengal until 1912, when a separate state was formed. Part of this state later became Orissa (Odisha) and, more recently in 2000, Jharkhand.

TOP FESTIVALS

Pataliputra Mahotsava (Patna;

☀Mar) A celebration of Patna's historic past with parades, sports, dancing and music.

Rajgir Mahotsava (p534) A performing-arts gala with dances, devotional songs and instrumental music.

Chhath Festival (p536) People perform spectacular rituals on the banks of rivers and water bodies to honour Surya, the Sun God.

Sonepur Mela (Sonepur; ☀Nov/Dec) With 700,000 attendees and countless thousands of animals taking part, this three-week festival is four times the size of Pushkar's Camel Fair.

i Information

Bihar and Jharkhand have a reputation for lawlessness. Conditions have improved in recent times, but bandit activity – such as holding up cars, buses and trains – is still a possibility, albeit a remote one. Although tourists are not specific targets, it's a good idea to keep up to date with the latest info; check the newspapers Bihar Times (www.bihartimes.in) or Patna Daily (www.patnadaily.com), or the English portal of Ranchi Express (www.ranchiexpress.com) before arrival.

BIHAR

Most people travel to Bihar to visit the hallowed Buddhist circuit of Bodhgaya, Rajgir, Nalanda and Vaishali, with Patna as a transport hub, but there are also a few quirky destinations to get your adventure juices flowing.

Patna

☑0612 / POP 1.7 MILLION

Bihar's busy capital sprawls out over the south bank of the Ganges, just east of the river's confluence with three major tributaries. There's nothing for the traveller along the river itself, and Patna only has a handful of worthwhile sights. Otherwise, it's a chaotic, congested city that's used mostly as a transport hub, or as a base for day trips to sights in northern Bihar.

Patna was once a powerful city. Early in the 5th century BC, Ajatasatru shifted the capital of his Magadha kingdom from Rajgir to Pataliputra (Patna), fulfilling Buddha's prophecy that a great city would arise here. Emperors Chandragupta Maurya and Ashoka also called Pataliputra home, and it remained one of India's most important cities for almost 1000 years.

Patna stretches along the southern bank of the Ganges for about 15km. The 5.7km-long Mahatma Gandhi Setu, one of the longest river bridges in the world, connects Patna with northern Bihar.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Patna Museum

MUSEUM

(BuddhaMarg; Indian/foreigner ₹15/250; ☀10.30am-4.30pm Tue-Sun) Housed in a majestic heritage building, this museum contains a splendid collection of Mauryan and Gupta stone sculptures, some beautiful bronze Buddhist statuary, 2000-year-old terracotta figurines and a gallery of wonderful Rajasthani miniatures. Don't miss the fabulous collection of thangkas (Tibetan cloth paintings) brought to India by the scholar and traveller Rahul Sankrityayan in the early 20th century.

Upstairs in a locked gallery (an extra ₹500) you can glimpse a tiny casket believed to contain some of Buddha's ashes that were retrieved from Vaishali.

★ Golghar

HISTORIC BUILDING

(Danapure Rd; admission ₹2; ☀️ 6am-6pm) For a dome with a view, climb this massive, bulbous granary, built by the British army in 1786. The idea behind its construction was to avoid a repeat of the 1770 famine – look for the old carved sign on one side, reading: 'For the perpetual prevention of famine in these provinces' – although fortunately it was never required.

Its dual spiralling staircases (142 steps each) were designed so that workers could climb up one side and down the other. The viewing gallery on top of the monument affords unparalleled vistas of the city and the Ganges.

Buddha Smriti Park

PARK

(Fraser Rd; admission ₹10; ☀️ dawn-dusk Tue-Sun) This 9-hectare park, inaugurated by the Dalai Lama in 2010, is notable for its massive sandblasted charcoal stupa (admission ₹50), which houses a unique bulletproof chamber inside; and sapling plantings from both the Bodhi Tree in Bodhgaya and Anuradhapura in Sri Lanka. There is also a strikingly modern Buddhist museum (₹40), a library (₹50) and a meditation centre (free).

Khuda Bakhsh Oriental Library

MUSEUM

(Ashok Raj Path; ☀️ 9.30am-5pm Sat-Thu) FREE This tiny, but fascinating library-cum-museum, founded in 1900, contains a renowned collection of Arabic and Persian manuscripts, Mughal and Rajput paintings, and even the Quran inscribed in a book just 25mm wide. A significant exhibit is Nadir Shah's sword – perhaps the very weapon he raised at Delhi's Sunehri Mosque in 1739 to order the massacre of the city's residents.

Gandhi Museum

MUSEUM

(Danapure Rd; ☀️ 10am-6pm Sun-Fri) FREE This museum contains a pictorial history of Mahatma Gandhi's life, plus some of his meagre belongings. On your way in, don't miss the Patna's Jaiprakash Narayan International Airport is 8km from the city centre. Between them, Air India (☎2223199; www.airindia.in; Patna airport), IndiGo (☎1800 1803838; www.goindigo.in; Patna airport) and JetConnect (☎2223045; www.jetconnect.com; Patna airport) fly daily to Delhi, Mumbai, Chennai and Kolkata. The IndiGo flight to Mumbai goes via Lucknow.

MITHILA (MADHUBANI) PAINTINGS

Bihar's unique and most famous folk art is its Mithila (Madhubani) paintings, produced by women from the Maithili tribe. Traditionally, women from Madhubani and surrounding villages started to create line drawings on the walls of their homes from the first day of their marriage. Using pigments from spices, minerals, charcoal and vegetable matter, they painted local deities and scenes from mythology, often intermingled with special events and aspects of everyday life.

These paintings, in both black-and-white and strong primary colours, are now professionally produced on paper, canvas and silk, and marketed for sale. Original wall paintings can still be seen in homes around Madhubani, 160km northeast of Patna.

BUS

The main bus stand occupies a large, dusty space about 1.5km from the train station (₹5 shared autos run here from the back of the train station). It's a hugely hectic place, but if you walk into the chaos telling people where you want to go, you'll soon get shown to the right bus; buy tickets on board.

There are frequent services throughout the day, and some sleeper buses to Ranchi and Raxaul. Destinations include:

Gaya ₹100, three hours

Kesariya ₹100, three hours

Motihari ₹145, 4½ hours

Ranchi AC/non-AC ₹350/280, eight hours

Raxaul AC/non-AC ₹230/180, eight hours

Vaishali ₹60, two hours

CAR

Hiring a car and driver can be done through Thomas Cook (p525), starting from ₹10 per kilometre (minimum 200km) plus a driver allowance of ₹300 per overnight stay.

TRAIN

Patna Junction has a foreign-tourist ticket counter (window 3, Patna Junction; ☺ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) at the 1st-floor reservation office, in the right-hand wing of the station.

Trains leave roughly hourly for Gaya (2nd class/AC chair ₹25/290, two to three hours) between 5am and 11.30pm. Just buy a 2nd-class

'general' ticket and hop on the next available service.

More than a dozen daily trains leave for New Delhi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹500/1260/1825, 12 to 18 hours); the quickest and most convenient time-wise, is the RJPB Rajdhani (3AC/2AC/1AC ₹1610/2235/3730) which leaves at 7.25pm and arrives in Delhi at 7.40am.

Ten daily trains go to Kolkata (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹340/880/1240, eight to 14 hours). The best time-wise is probably the Vibhuti Express (10.35pm, nine hours).

At least 20 daily trains go to Varanasi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹160/485/690, four to six hours) between 5am and 11pm.

Three fast trains go to Ranchi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹310/835/1195, eight to 10 hours), leaving at 6am, 11.40am and 9.45pm.

Getting Around

The airport is located 7km west of the city centre. Autorickshaws/taxis cost ₹150/350 from the prepaid stand by the train station.

Shared autos (often jam-packed) depart from the rear of the train station. They shuttle between the train station and Gandhi Maidan (₹5), and between the train station and the bus stand (also ₹5).

Vaishali

☑ 06225

A quiet, yet significant Buddhist pilgrimage site, Vaishali, 55km northwest of Patna, makes a lovely rural escape from hectic Patna. The small museum is engaging, while the ruins of Kolhua are wonderfully serene. And simply walking around the surrounding villages and farmland is a treat in itself.

The bus will drop you at the so-called 'high school', from where it's a 1km walk along a straight lane to a large ancient coronation water tank. On the left side of the tank is the modern, whitewashed, Japanese-built World Peace Pagoda (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☺ dawn-dusk). On the opposite side of the tank, and of more interest, is the Buddha Relic Stupa (☺ dawn-dusk) FREE and the Archaeological Museum (admission ₹10; ☺ 9am-5pm Mon-Sat). The 5th-century stupa, once 12m tall, is now in ruins, but it was once one of the eight locations in which Buddha's ashes were buried, after he had been cremated at Kushinagar. The ashes now reside in Patna Museum. The small archaeological museum here contains 2000-year-old clay and terracotta figures, 1000-year-old Buddhist statuery, and an intriguing 1st- to 2nd-century AD toilet pan. It also has an interesting scale model of the nearby site of Kolhua.

Between the Buddha Stupa Relic and the Archaeological Museum, a single-lane countryside road winds its way through farming villages to the Kolhua Complex (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀7am-5pm), 5km away. It's worth making time for this very pleasant walk, although shared autos also make the trip and it's relatively easy to hitch a ride on a motorbike. Set in a landscaped park, Kolhua comprises a large, hemispherical brick stupa guarded by a lion squatting atop a 2300-year-old Ashoka pillar. The pillar is plain and contains none of the Ashokan edicts usually carved onto these pillars. Nearby are the ruins of smaller stupas and monastic buildings. According to legend, Buddha was given a bowl of honey here by monkeys, who also dug out a rainwater tank for his water supply.

The best place to grab lunch in Vaishali is the Buddha Fun & Food Village (mains ₹65-200), located at one corner of the ceremonial tank. There's outdoor seating and a children's play area.

The last bus back to Patna swings by the main road at around 4pm.

Raxaul

📍06255 / POP 41,600

Raxaul is a dusty, congested border town that provides passage into Nepal via a hassle-free border post. It's no place to linger, but if you must spend the night, Hotel Kaveri (📞06255-221148; Main Rd; with/without AC ₹1000/300; 🕒), on the main road leading to the border (about 1km from the border), has decent AC rooms with modern bathrooms, and very basic non-AC rooms with tap-and-bucket showers, but shared toilets. Restaurants are scarce and none have English menus; the dhaba opposite Hotel Kaveri is probably your best bet.

The bus stand is 200m down a lane off the main road, about 2km from the border on the right. There are frequent buses, day and night, to Patna (AC/non-AC ₹230/180, seven to eight hours) via Motihari (₹60/50, 2½ hours). The road to Motihari is dreadfully bumpy so sit near the front of the bus if you can.

The train station is off the main road, 750m from the border, but isn't well

BORDER CROSSING – NEPAL FROM RAXAUL

Border Hours

The border at Raxaul is open from 6am to 10pm.

Foreign Exchange

No banks change money in Raxaul but there are many private money changers on both sides of the border. The State Bank of India (☎10.30am-4.30pm Mon-Fri, to 1.30pm Sat), on the main road in Raxaul, has an ATM.

Onward Transport

On the Nepal side, the town of Birganj is about 3km from the border. You are free to walk across the border to Birganj, or shared autorickshaws and tongas (two-wheeled horse carriages) charge ₹20 per person from the border to Birganj. A cycle-rickshaw costs about ₹100.

From Birganj, there are frequent buses to Kathmandu (ordinary/deluxe/AC ₹550/600/800, six to seven hours, 5am to 8pm). However, the most comfortable and quickest option is to get a Tata Sumo '4WD' (₹550 to ₹800, four to five hours, every 20 minutes until 5pm). There are also morning buses to Pokhara (₹600, eight hours) via Narayangarh (₹250, four hours) at 5am, 6.30am and 7.30am.

Buddha Air has up to five daily flights between Simara (the airport for Birganj) and Kathmandu (US$100, 20 minutes). The airport is 22km from Birganj and a taxi costs around ₹1000.

Visas

Nepali 15-, 30- and 90-day visas (US$25/40/100 and one passport photo) are only available from 6am to 6pm on the Nepal side of the border.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

GEORGE ORWELL MUSEUM

Not only will a trip to Motihari break the long bus ride between Patna and the Nepal border, it will also allow you to become one of the first-ever tourists to visit the world's first George Orwell Museum. The museum was still being built when we visited, on the site of the dilapidated family cottage in which Orwell was born. It was due to open in 2015 and will be the world's only museum dedicated to the celebrated British novelist.

Eric Arthur Blair (George Orwell was a pen name), was born here in 1903. His father, Richard W Blair, worked for the opium department, supervising poppy growers and collecting opium for export to China. The grounds of their family home, which will be landscaped into a small park, also contain the crumbling remains of one of his father's opium warehouses.

Motihari is part of a region from where, in 1917, Mahatma Gandhi launched the civil disobedience movement that ultimately resulted. 30 years later, in the departure of the British from India. Gandhi had been moved by the plight of cultivators in Bihar who were being forced to produce opium and indigo for the lucrative markets of China and Europe respectively. There is also a small Gandhi Museum in town.

The Orwell Museum is a 2.5km walk northwest of the bus stand (₹30 in a cycle-rickshaw; ask for Gyan Babu Chowk). Walk back up to the main road that your bus came in on, passing the cinema on your left. Walk over the crossroads (known as Chhatauni Chowk), and continue straight along Bagaha Dhala Rd, past the Gandhi statue and Hotel Puja and on to Gyan Babu Chowk. Here, just as the road starts bearing round to the left, take the straightest of the three right forks, and the museum will be on your left after 200m. If you reach the veterinary clinic you've walked 100m too far.

Hotel Puja (☎ 8521731700; Bagaha Dhala Rd; with/without AC ₹2000/700; 🏠) has large colourful rooms. There are plenty of restaurants nearby. From Motihari, there are frequent buses to Patna (₹145, 4½ hours), Raxaul (₹50, 2½ hours) and Kesaria (₹40, two hours), from where you can catch passing buses to Vaishali.

connected. The Mithila Express runs daily to Kolkata (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹365/990/1425, 18 hours, 10am). The Satyagrah Express runs daily to New Delhi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹455/1215/1765, 24 hours, 9.05am).

Gaya

☎ 0631 / POP 395,000

The hectic town of Gaya is a religious centre for Hindu pilgrims. They believe that the temple offerings here relieve the recently departed from the cycle of birth and rebirth. For foreign tourists, it merely serves as a transit point for Bodhgaya, 13km away.

🛏 Sleeping &amp; Eating

Ajatsatru Hotel

HOTEL $

(☎ 0631-2222961; Station Rd; with/without AC ₹1400/840; 🏠) If you get stuck for the night in Gaya, this hotel is the best-value of a cluster of hotels directly opposite the train station. It has clean rooms and a decent multicuisine restaurant. No internet.

i Information

There's a Bihar State Tourist Office

i Getting There &amp; Around

AUTORICKSHAWS

Shared autos leave when full from Gaya Railway Station for Bodhgaya (₹20 per person), Manpur bus stand (₹10) and Gandhi Maidan bus stand (₹5).

A private auto from Gaya to Bodhgaya should cost ₹120 to ₹150, although they usually ask for ₹200 or more.

BUS

Patna (₹100, three hours, hourly) Buses leave from the train station.

Rajgir (₹55, 2½ hours, hourly) Buses leave from Manpur bus stand, across the river.

Ranchi (₹180, seven hours, twice hourly) Buses leave from the Gandhi Maidan bus stand.

TRAIN

Trains leave roughly hourly for Patna (2nd class/AC chair ₹25/290, two to three hours) between 4am and 10pm. Buy a 2nd-class 'general' ticket and hop on.

Four daily trains go to New Delhi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹490/1280/1835, 11 to 15 hours) at 2.05pm, 2.20pm, 10.55pm and 11.11pm. The two evening trains are four hours quicker.

At least eight trains run daily to Kolkata (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹300/760/1065, eight to 10 hours), the most convenient being the Doon Express (9½ hours, 9.27pm).

Almost a dozen daily trains go to Varanasi (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹190/535/735, three to six hours). The quickest is the Purushottam Express (three hours, 2.05pm).

Bodhgaya

📍 0631 / POP 30,900

The crucible of Buddhism, Bodhgaya was where Prince Siddhartha attained enlightenment beneath a bodhi tree and became Buddha 2600 years ago. In terms of blessedness, this tiny temple town is to Buddhists what Mecca is to Muslims. It attracts thousands of pilgrims from around the world every year, who come for prayer, study and meditation.

The most hallowed spot in town is a bodhi tree which flourishes inside the Mahabodhi Temple complex, amid a beautiful garden setting, its roots embedded in the same soil as its celebrated ancestor. Additionally, many monasteries and temples dot the bucolic landscape, built in their national style by foreign Buddhist communities. The ambience is a mix of monastic tranquillity and small-town commotion (a booming nonreligious tourism industry has brought along with it the usual invasion of tourist paraphernalia, souvenir stalls and English-speaking wannabe guides).

The best time to visit is November to March when Tibetan pilgrims come down from McLeod Ganj in Dharamsala. The high season is from December to January, which is also when the Dalai Lama often visits.

👁 Sights & Activities

★ Mahabodhi Temple BUDDHIST TEMPLE
(camera ₹100; 🕒 4am-9pm) The magnificent Unesco World Heritage-listed Mahabodhi Temple, marking the hallowed ground where Buddha attained enlightenment and formulated his philosophy of life, forms the spiritual heart of Bodhgaya. Built in the 6th century AD atop the site of a temple erected by Emperor Ashoka almost 800 years earlier, it was razed by foreign invaders in the 11th century, and subsequently underwent several major restorations.

Topped by a 50m pyramidal spire, the inner sanctum of the ornate structure houses a 10th-century, 2m-high gilded image of a seated Buddha. Amazingly, four of the original sculpted stone railings surrounding the temple, dating from the Sunga period (184–72 BC), have survived amid the replicas. Others are now housed inside the archaeological museum.

Pilgrims and visitors from all walks of life and religions come to worship or just soak up the atmosphere of this sacred place. There's a well-manicured Meditation Park (Mahabodhi Temple; visitors/meditators ₹20/25; 🕒 visitors 10am-5pm, meditators 5-10am & 5-9pm) for those seeking extra solitude within the temple grounds. An enthralling way to start or finish the day is to stroll around the inside perimeter of the temple compound (in an auspicious clockwise pattern) and watch a sea of maroon and yellow dip and rise as monks perform endless prostrations on their prayer boards.

Monasteries & Temples MONASTERIES, TEMPLES
One of Bodhgaya's great joys is its collection of monasteries and temples, each offering visitors a unique opportunity to peek into different Buddhist cultures and compare architectural styles. The Indosan Nipponji Temple (Japanese Temple; Buddha Rd; 🕒 5am-noon & 2-6pm) is an exercise in quiet Japanese understatement compared with the richly presented Bhutanese Monastery (Buddha Rd) nearby, which houses some wonderfully colourful and intricate frescoes. The most impressive of all the modern monasteries is the Tergar Monastery (Sujata Bypass Rd) of the Karmapa school of Tibetan Buddhism. It's a glory of Tibetan decorative arts that will leave you slack-jawed as you enter. A none-too-distant runner-up is the impressive Thai Temple (Bodhgaya Rd; 🕒 dawn-dusk), a brightly coloured wat with gold leaf shimmering from its arched rooftop and manicured gardens. Meditation sessions are held here mornings and evenings. The Tibetan Karma Temple (Temple St; 🕒 dawn-dusk) – note the double-dragon brass door knockers – and Namgyal Monastery (Tibetan Temple; Kalachakra Maidan Rd) each contain large prayer wheels. Monasteries are open dawn to dusk.

Great Buddha Statue

MONUMENT
 (off Temple St; ☀7am-noon & 2-5pm) This 25m-high statue towers above a pleasant garden at the end of Temple St. The impressive monument was unveiled by the Dalai Lama in 1989 and is surrounded by 10 smaller sculptures of Buddha's disciples. The statue is partially hollow and is said to contain some 20,000 bronze Buddhas.

WORTH A TRIP

KESARIYA

Rising high out of the earth from where the dying Buddha donated his begging bowl, the enormous Kesariya Stupa (☀️ dawn-dusk) is an enthralling example of how nature can reclaim a deserted monument. Excavated from under a grassy and wooded veil is what is thought to be the world's tallest (38m) Buddhist stupa dating from the Pala period (200–750 AD). Above the 425m-circumference pedestal are five uniquely shaped terraces that form a gargantuan Buddhist tantric mandala. Each terrace has a number of niches containing disfigured Buddha statues, which were destroyed during attacks by foreign invaders in the middle ages. The rural setting is a joy, but there is nothing else to see here apart from the stupa.

Buses from Patna can drop you by the stupa, which is visible from the main road. The last bus back swings by at around 3.30pm. Buses from Motihari will drop you at the main crossroads in the village of Kesariya, where there are roadside dhabas (snack bars) you could have lunch in, leaving you with a 2km-walk (the signpost says 3km but it's not that far).

Archaeological Museum

MUSEUM

(off Bodhgaya Rd; admission ₹10; ☀️ 8am–5pm, closed Fri) This museum contains a number of stone Buddhist sculptures dating from the 8th to 12th centuries, but the highlight is the collection of original granite and sandstone railings and pillars rescued from the Mahabodhi Temple, some of which predate the temple by 700 years.

Thai Massage

MASSAGE

(Thai Temple; 1hr foot massage 300 Thai baht; 2hr body massage 500 Thai baht; ☀️ 8am–5pm) Authentic Thai massage in a massage clinic at the Thai Hospital, located within the grounds of the Thai Temple; take the entrance to the left of the main temple entrance. Rates are listed in Thai baht, which are roughly twice the value of Indian rupees, so expect to pay around ₹1000 for a full-body two-hour massage.

Courses

Root Institute for Wisdom Culture

MEDITATION, YOGA

(☎️ 0631-2200714; www.rootinstitute.com; ☀️ of-office 8.30–11.30am & 1.30–4.30pm) Located in a tranquil, tree-shaded corner of town, this foreign-run institute holds various meditation courses (from two to 21 days) between October and March. Courses cost around ₹1000 per day, including meals and accommodation. The 6.45am meditation session is open to all; you can also catch drop-in yoga classes at 11.45am Tuesday to Saturday.

There's a charitable health program running six days a week; volunteering is welcome.

International Meditation Centre

MEDITATION

(☎️ 0631-2200707; meditation by donation) The courses here are more informal than other meditation centres, and run sporadically throughout the year. Courses are often in blocks of 10 days, although you are free to join midway through a course.

Sleeping

You can stay at the very peaceful Root Institute for Wisdom Culture even if you're not attending any of its courses. Dorm beds cost ₹230, while double rooms go for ₹900, or ₹1500 with a private bathroom.

★Rahul Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 0631-2200709; rahul_bodhgaya@yahoo.co.in; near Kalchakra Maidan; s/d ₹500/600; 🍽️) Clean, serene and unobtrusively welcoming, this family home makes for an excellent stay away from the din. The rooms upstairs, with whitewashed walls, nice breezes and simple furnishings, are better than those on the ground floor, but all are good value. No restaurant, but wi-fi throughout.

Mohammad House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎️ 9431085251, 9934022691; yasmd_2002@rediffmail.com; r ₹300–400) There's an authentic village atmosphere at this hard-to-find, no-frills guesthouse, which is hidden away from the more touristy parts of town. Ducks and chickens scuttle around the narrow lanes which link villagers' colourfully painted homes to the Kalchakra Maidan area.

The guesthouse has two buildings, almost side by side; the older one has very basic triple rooms with shared bathrooms for ₹300.

The newer one has simple, but clean twin rooms with attached bathrooms and powerful, hot-water showers for ₹400. Both have rooms on upper floors with lovely views of the surrounding paddy fields. To find the place, either take the lane beside Mohamad Restaurant (same owners), and walk through the village, turning left then right, or take the lane diagonally opposite the Thai Temple (signposted towards the International Meditation Centre) and keep walking straight.

Karma Temple

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0631-2200795; Temple St; d ₹500) Simple but tidy twin rooms, with clean shared shower rooms, set around a courtyard at the back of the peaceful Karma Temple.

Gupta House

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 0631-2200933; jyoti_gupta2000in@yahoo.com; beside Kalchakra Maidan; d ₹500; 🍽️) Rooms are spartan, but comfortable enough at this homestay-style guesthouse, but its main selling point is the alfresco Hari Om International Cafe located out front.

★ Shantidevi Ashram's Guesthouse

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 9939248755; www.shantideviashramguesthouse.com; r ₹1000) This unassuming, but tastefully decorated boutiquelike guesthouse makes a pleasant retreat from the hustle and bustle of the main drags. Fan-cooled rooms come with quality wooden furniture, pieces of artwork and colourful rugs on concrete floors. Bathrooms are small, but super clean. There's no restaurant, but staff can usually whip up a simple breakfast for guests.

The five-bed group room costs ₹2500. All other rooms are ₹1000. Wi-fi is in the reception area only.

Kirti Guest House

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0631-2200744; kirtihouse744@yahoo.com; off Bodhgaya Rd; with/without AC ₹2000/1500; 🍽️ @ 🍷) Run by the Tibetan Monastery, this hotel offers a quiet atmosphere despite its central location. It's set back from the road slightly and has simple but neat and tidy rooms. air-con rooms are quieter and more spacious, but non-AC rooms open out onto a shared balcony overlooking the street below, so have more natural light. Wi-fi in lobby only.

Taj Darbar

HOTEL $$$

(☎ 0631-2200053, 7739320524; www.hotel tajdarbar.com; Bodhgaya Rd; s/d from ₹5000/5600; 🍽️ 🍷) A good-value top-end choice, this smart hotel comes with polished marble hallways and spacious rooms with ivory-white bed sheets, small seating areas, working desks and sporadic bathtubs. Fish for discounts as you can sometimes get rooms for as little as ₹3500.

🍴 Eating & Drinking

Royal Residency (Bodhgaya Rd; mains ₹150-250, beers ₹350) and Hotel Sujata (Buddha Rd; mains ₹150-300, beers ₹320), two of Bodhgaya's upmarket hotels, have the only restaurants in town which officially serve alcohol,

TREE OF WISDOM

Undoubtedly, the most sacred fig tree ever to grace the Earth was the Bodhi Tree at Bodhgaya, under which Prince Siddhartha, aka the Buddha, achieved enlightenment.

Known as Sri Maha Bodhi, the original tree was paid special attention by Ashoka, a mighty Indian emperor who ruled most of the subcontinent from 269 to 232 BC, a century or so after the date the Buddha is believed to have died. Ashoka's jealous wife, Tisarakkha, felt the emperor should have been directing his devotion towards her, rather than towards a tree and, in a fit of rage, she caused the tree to perish by piercing it with poisonous thorns.

Thankfully, before its death, one of the tree's saplings was carried off to Anuradhapura in Sri Lanka by Sanghamitta (Ashoka's daughter), where it continues to flourish. A cutting was later carried back to Bodhgaya and planted where the original once stood. The red sandstone slab between the tree and the adjacent Mahabodhi Temple was placed by Ashoka to mark the spot of Buddha's enlightenment – it's referred to as the Vajrasan (Diamond Throne). Buddha was said to have stared unblinkingly at the tree in an awed gesture of gratitude and wonder after his enlightenment. Today, pilgrims and tourists alike flock here and attempt to do exactly the same thing, and the tree is considered the most important of Buddhism's four holiest sites.

although Mohammad's and Hari Om can usually rustle you up a beer if you ask discreetly. There's a bottle shop (beer from ₹100; ☺ 10am-10pm) along Bodhgaya Rd, but it tends to only serve strong beer and whiskey, rather than the more drinkable light beers.

★ Mohammad Restaurant MULTICUISINE $
(mains ₹50-150; ☺ 7am-9pm; 🍷) Tucked away behind the market stalls at the tourist bus park (take the lane beside Fujiya Green restaurant), Mohammed's whips up a fine array of food from across the Buddhist world – Tibetan, Chinese, Thai, Indian – as well as doing a strong line in Western favourites, including breakfasts. The fresh fruit juices are superb and there's outdoor seating.

This is also one of the few places in town that's willing to serve beer (₹150), albeit in an unofficial capacity.

Hari Om International Cafe MULTICUISINE $
(Kalchakra Maidan; mains ₹70-100; ☺ 8am-10pm) This informal, shantylike, alfresco restaurant in front of Gupta House guesthouse has a multicuisine menu, which includes local specialities such as litti chokha, khichdi (a blend of lightly spiced rice and lentils) and rajma (kidney bean curry).

Ram Sewak Tea Corner SWEETS $
(dishes ₹30-60, thalis ₹75; ☺ 7am-7pm) If you're seeking sustenance at rock-bottom prices, look no further than this dhaba-style eatery, little more than a glorified roadside stand, for excellent snacks (including samosa, dosa and idli – a South Indian spongy, round, fermented rice cake), sweets, lassis and basic thalis.

The outdoor seating is a great spot to lounge with a cup of masala chai and watch Bodhgaya go by.

Bodhgaya City Cafe Restaurant INDIAN $
(Buddha Rd; mains ₹50-150; ☺ 7am-10pm) Good-value local food with outdoor seating in a newly built restaurant-and-cafe complex set back from Buddha Rd.

★ Be Happy Cafe ITALIAN $$
(beside Kalchakra Maidan; mains ₹170-320; ☺ 8am-8.30pm; 🍷) Quaint, cosy, European-style cafe serving fresh coffee (₹80), herbal teas and healthy Italian cuisine; salads, pastas and freshly baked pizza. Will refill water bottles with safe-to-drink filtered water (₹10). Free wi-fi.

🛒 Shopping

There are scores of souvenir stalls around, peddling the usual religious trinkets such as rosaries and prayer wheels, as well Tibetan-style jewellery.

Mahabodhi Bookshop BOOKS
(Mahabodhi Temple; ☺ 5am-9pm) Stocks a range of Buddhist literature within the temple complex.

📍 Information

Main post office (cnr Bodhgaya & Godam Rds; ☺ 10am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 2pm Sat)

Namaste India Holiday Tours (per hour ₹50; ☺ 9am-9pm) Internet cafe diagonally opposite Kirti Guesthouse. Has wi-fi too.

State Bank of India (Bodhgaya Rd; ☺ 10.30am-4.30pm Mon-Fri, to 1.30pm Sat) Best rates for cash and travellers cheques; has an ATM.

Verma Health Care Centre (☎ 0631-2201101, 9934290324; ☺ 24hr) Emergency room and clinic. Staffed round the clock, but a doctor is only on location from 11.30am to 8pm.

📍 Getting There & Away

Gaya airport is 8km west of Bodhgaya, on the back route to Gaya. Air India (☎ 2201155; www.airindia.com; Airport) flies daily to Delhi and Varanasi, and twice a week to Kolkata. During December and January there are direct international flights from Bangkok (Thailand), Colombo (Sri Lanka), Thimphu (Bhutan) and Yangon (Myanmar).

Shared autorickshaws (₹20) leave from the T-junction of Bodhgaya Rd and Sujata Bridge for the 13km trip to Gaya. A private autorickshaw to Gaya costs ₹120 to ₹150.

Note, autos sometimes take the back route from Gaya to Bodhgaya, via Sikadia More, and then drop passengers on the approach to Mahabodhi Temple on Bodhgaya Rd.

Rajgir

☎ 06112 / POP 33,700

The fascinating surrounds of Rajgir are bounded by five semiarid rocky hills, each lined with ancient stone walls – vestiges of the ancient capital of Magadha. As both Buddha and Mahavira spent some serious time here, Rajgir is an important pilgrimage site for Buddhists and Jains. And a mention in the Mahabharata also means that Rajgir sees a large number of Hindu pilgrims, who come to bathe in the hot springs at the Lakshmi Narayan Temple.

Rajgir is littered with historic sites, so bank on spending a couple of days here, including a side trip to Nalanda. It's a lovely part of Bihar; cooler and greener than other places in the region, and relatively hassle-free.

The bus stand is in the centre of town, with the train station 1km away; turn left out of the bus stand and take the third left to reach the train station. Turn right out of the train station road to reach the bus stand and the town centre.

Rajgir Mahotsava (Rajgir; ☀ Oct), in October, is the town's three-day cultural festival featuring classical Indian music, folk music and dance.

👁 Sights & Activities

The most pleasant way to see Rajgir's scattered sites is to rent a tonga. A four-hour tour including the hot springs at Lakshmi Narayan Temple, Vishwashanti Stupa, the museum at Veerayatan and any number of other sights you have time for is ₹600, although you can usually barter the price down to ₹500. For single-trip journeys to popular sights, shared tonga rides are also possible (expect to pay about ₹10 per person for a 2km ride).

★ Vishwashanti Stupa BUDDHIST TEMPLE
(Shanti Stupa Rd; chairlift return ticket ₹60; ☀ ropeway 8.15am-1pm & 2-5pm) Constructed in 1965, this blazing-white, 40m stupa stands atop the Ratnagiri Hill about 5km south of town. Recesses in the stupa feature golden statues of Buddha in four stages of his life – birth, enlightenment, preaching and death. A fun, but wobbly, single-person chairlift runs to the summit, which affords expansive views of hills and a few Jain shrines dotting the landscape.

Next to the stupa, a Japanese-built peace pagoda reverberates to the rhythmic sound of meditative drum beat. If you walk back down the hill, rather than taking the chairlift, you can detour to the ruined remains of a 1500-year-old stupa, thought to be where Buddha preached to his disciples.

Lakshmi Narayan Temple HINDU TEMPLE
(free; ☀ dawn-dusk) Hindu pilgrims are drawn to the noisy Lakshmi Narayan Temple, about 2km south of town (turn right out of the bus stand and keep walking), to enjoy the health benefits of the hot springs here. The murky grey Brahmakund, the hottest spring, is a scalding 45°C.

Temple priests will show you around, pour hot water on your head (in the manner of bathing a pilgrim) and ask for generous donations (don't feel pressured into giving anything if you don't want to; there's no obligation). It's a fascinating but confusing place with no English signs; tread carefully so you don't unintentionally offend.

Veerayatan MUSEUM

Buddha Jal Vihar SWIMMING
(admission/swimming ₹5/25; ☀ men 5-10am & noon-9pm, women 10am-noon) Within the Lakshmi Narayan Temple complex (on your left as you approach the temple), the Jaipur-pink Buddha Jal Vihar is an inviting, crystal-clear swimming pool set in well-manicured gardens and perfect to beat the heat. There's another, similar pool by a restaurant, just before it, but it's not as popular (or attractive), and is sometimes closed.

🛏 Sleeping

Hotel Raj HOTEL $
(☎ 9304376445; opposite the bus stand; ₹ 400) One hundred metres down the road opposite the bus stand, this is the cleanest and most welcoming of the cheapies in the town centre. Simple but colourful fan-cooled rooms open onto an inner courtyard. Management speaks English, and everything is kept pretty much spotless. Squat toilets only.

Siddharth Hotel HOTEL $$
(☎ 06612-255216, 9304013642; siddharthrajgir@gmail.com; s/d from ₹1450/1760; 🍷 🍷 🍷) Near Lakshmi Narayan Temple (turn left out of the temple, and it's on the right after 300m), Siddharth has fresh, clean rooms, a restaurant and wi-fi in the lobby. It's handy for the hot springs and the Buddha Jal Vihar swimming pool, but it's a 2km-hop into town.

Indo Hokke Hotel BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$
(☎ 06612-255245; indohokkehotel@gmail.com; Veerayatan Rd; s/d ₹6000/6500; 🍷 🍷 🍷) Surrounded by lovely gardens, this modern, red-brick building features Japanese-style rooms furnished with tatami mats, teak furniture and Eastern decor. The restaurant has an excellent Japanese menu, as well Indian. It's 500m beyond Veerayatan museum.

Eating

Hotel Anand

PUNJABI $

(mains ₹40-100; ☺8am-10pm) Small, fan-cooled, streetside restaurant serving good-value Punjabi and South Indian dishes, including thali (₹80 to ₹130). About 100m beyond Hotel Raj.

Green Restaurant

INDIAN $

(mains ₹60-150, thali ₹250; ☺7.30am-9.30pm) Diagonally opposite the Lakshmi Narayan Temple complex, this simple restaurant offers great Indian meals including an elaborate vegetarian thali. Has outdoor seating.

Lotus Restaurant

INDIAN, JAPANESE $$$

(Veerayatan Rd; mains ₹150-500; ☺11am-3pm & 7-10pm) If you fancy an upscale experience, look no further than this restaurant at the Indo Hokke Hotel. It has superb Indian food and a pricier Japanese menu featuring soba noodles, teriyaki and tempura, with authentic flavours and fresh ingredients (including pepper, pickles and tea).

Information

There's a tourist office (☺10am-5pm Mon-Sat) on the main road between the bus stand and the railway station, which has a free map of Rajgir and Nalanda. The main sights are signposted in English.

There are ATMs near the bus stand and one opposite the Lakshmi Narayan Temple complex.

Getting There & Around

Frequent buses run to Gaya (₹50 to ₹55, 2½ hours) and Nalanda (₹10, 20 minutes) from the bus stand. Shared jeeps also shuttle between Rajgir and Nalanda (₹10).

Only one daytime train goes to Gaya (2nd class ₹25, three hours, 4.33pm except Sunday), while two fast trains run daily to Patna (2nd class/sleeper/AC chair ₹50/140/255, 2½ hours) at 8.10am and 2.40pm.

Nalanda

 061194

Founded in the 5th century AD, Nalanda – 15km north of Rajgir – was one of the ancient world's great universities and an important Buddhist centre of academic excellence. When Chinese scholar and traveller Xuan Zang visited sometime between 685 and 762 AD, about 10,000 monks and students lived here, studying theology, astronomy, metaphysics, medicine and philosophy. It's said that Nalanda's three libraries were so extensive they burnt for six months when foreign invaders sacked the university in the 12th century.

Allow at least an hour or two for wandering the extensive ruins (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100, video camera ₹25; ☺9am-5.30pm). They're peaceful and well maintained with a parklike atmosphere of clipped lawns, shrubs and roses. The red-brick ruins consist of nine monasteries and four main temples. Most impressive is the Great Stupa, with steps, terraces, a few intact votive stupas and monks' cells (sleeping quarters). Climbing the structures is not allowed.

Unofficial guides (₹100) will approach you, but each of the ruins has signboards beside them in English.

Across from the entrance to the ruins is the archaeological museum (admission ₹5; ☺9am-5pm, closed Fri), a small but fascinating museum housing the Nalanda University seal and a host of beautiful stone sculptures and bronzes unearthed from Nalanda and Rajgir. Among the many Buddha figures and kirtimukha (gargoyles) is a bizarre multiple-spouted pot (probably once used to contain perfumed water).

About 1.5km further on from the museum and the ruins (take the first right) is the huge Xuan Zang Memorial Hall (Indian/foreigner ₹5/50; ☺8am-5pm), built by the Chinese as a peace pagoda in honour of the famous Chinese traveller who walked to India from China before studying and teaching for some years at Nalanda, and

PILGRIMAGE ON RAILS

A unique way to explore the Buddhist circuit in North India is by hopping onto the Mahaparinirvan Express (www.railtourismindia.com/buddha), operated by Indian Railways on set dates between September and March. The eight-day package tour starts in Delhi, and guides you through Bodhgaya, Rajgir, Nalanda, Varanasi, Sarnath, Kushinagar, Lumbini (in Nepal) and Sravasti before returning to Delhi via Agra. Per person all-inclusive rates for the tour start from US$115 per day. Note that the tariff doesn't include your visa fees for Nepal.

eventually returning home with Buddhist scriptures he would later translate into Chinese. His epic trip was immortalised in Journey to the West, one of China's classic pieces of literature. The story was then turned into the cult 1970s TV show, Monkey. Modern-day backpackers will appreciate the statue of Xuan Zang at the front of the memorial hall.

On the pathway leading to the archaeological museum, Cafeteria Nalanda (mains ₹100-250; ☺ 6am-8pm) makes a pleasant spot for lunch. It does Indian and Chinese dishes and has tree-shaded outdoor seating.

Buses from Rajgir (₹10) drop you at Nalanda village. From there you can take a shared tonga (per person ₹5) for the final 2km to the ruins.

Kundalpur

About 1.5km beyond the Nalanda ruins (bear left, then right, then take the first right turn after Surya Kund pond), you'll find the striking Nandyavarta Mahal (☺ 5am-9pm) at Kundalpur, believed by the Digambar Jain sect to be the birthplace of Lord Mahavira, the final tirthankar and founder of Jainism. The small temple complex houses three hot-white temples, the main featuring a to-scale postured idol of Mahavira. Inside the serene Trikal Chaubeesi Jinmandir within the same complex you'll find 72 tirthankar idols representing 24 each of the past age, the present age and the future age.

JHARKHAND

Hewn out of neighbouring Bihar in 2000 to meet the autonomy demands of the Adivasi (tribal) population, Jharkhand is a land of immense natural and anthropological wealth. However, despite boasting an incredible 40% of the country's mineral wealth (mostly coal, copper and iron ore), rich forests and cash rich industrial hubs, it is plagued by poverty, social injustice, corruption and sporadic outbursts of Maoist and Naxalite violence. For travellers, Jharkhand's prime attractions are the Jain pilgrimage centre at Parasnath Hill, its national parks and the chance to explore a relatively tourist-free and unspoilt part of India.

Ranchi

☎ 0651 / POP 863,500

Set on a plateau at 700m and marginally cooler than the plains, Jharkhand's capital, Ranchi, was the summer capital of Bihar under the British. Apart from the Jagannath Temple, there's little of interest here for travellers, but the city acts as a gateway to Betla (Palamau) National Park, and there are numerous waterfalls you can visit in the surrounding countryside.

Sights

Jagannath Temple

HINDU TEMPLE

This 17th-century temple, about 12km south-west of town (₹250 return by autorickshaw), is a smaller version of the great Jagannath Mandir at Puri, and is open to non-Hindus. Every year during the Rath Yatra festival, in the same manner as in Puri in Odisha, Jagannath and his brother and sister gods are charioted to their holiday home, a smaller temple some 500m away.

Suhana Tour & Travels

TOUR AGENCY

☎ 9431171394; suhana_jharkhandtour@yahoo.co.in; Station Rd; ☺ 8am-8pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun) Run by friendly Amardeep Sahay, this place organises day-long trips to local waterfalls (₹1250 per person; minimum two people), as well as a two-day trip to Betla (Palamau) National Park (₹4200 per person; minimum two people). The Betla trip includes transport, one night's accommodation, meals, one jeep safari and one elephant safari. Amardeep also helps with general transport and ticketing.

Festivals & Events

Chhath Festival

HINDU FESTIVAL

(Bihar & Jharkhand; ☺ Oct/Nov) People line the banks of rivers and water bodies to honour Surya, the Sun God. For four days every November, it sees pious locals perform a series of rites that culminate in a social jamboree on the third day, marked by water rituals, traditional music and social mingling. At sunset on the sixth day after Diwali, married women, having fasted for 36 hours, immerse themselves in the water and offer fruits and flowers to the deity.

Sleeping

Station Rd, running between the train and bus stations, is lined with hotels and restaurants, but most budget hotels do not have permits for hosting foreigners. Turn left out of the train station to reach Chanakya BNR Hotel (100m), the Nook, and Suhana Tour & Travels (200m), Hotel AVN Plaza (300m) and the government bus stand (500m), just beyond the junction where shared autorickshaws pick up passengers.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

HIKING THE HOLY HILL

For a fabulously off-beat experience with a spiritual leaning, consider joining the hundreds of Jain pilgrims who hike each morning to the top of holy Parasnath Hill.

Also known as Shikarji, Parasnath Hill is the highest mountain in Jharkhand, and a major Jain pilgrimage centre. It rises 1366m from the lush surrounding farmland in a secluded spot of eastern Jharkhand (although it's best reached from Gaya in Bihar) and its summit is studded with 31 temples of religious importance, including the striking Parasnath Temple which stands on the spot where 20 of the 24 Jain tirthankars (including Parasnath, at the age of 100) are believed to have reached salvation.

The approach to the hill is from the small, but auspicious temple town of Madhuban, 13km northeast of Parasnath train station, and located at the foot of the mountain. The daily pilgrimage begins from the town at 3am or 4am; it's a 9km hike to the top, followed by a 9km loop at the summit, visiting each of the temples. The entire 27km circuit – up, round and back down – takes about nine to 10 hours; three hours up, three or four hours circuiting the summit, and two hours back down. You could start later in the day and still get back before dark, but hiking while you're half asleep with hundreds of pilgrims as dawn breaks across the mountain is a big part of the experience here, and starting early means you avoid the worst of the midday heat. Water, chai and snacks are available along the way. During holidays and major festivals, you could end up walking with as many as 15,000 people.

You're likely to spend at least one night in Madhuban. There are three or four hotels in town (plus numerous dharamsalas – pilgrims' rest houses). The best value is the ageing Yatri Nivas (☎) 0658-232265; r ₹300-400) with simple, but huge rooms, some with mountain views. It's at the bottom end of the main road leading up to the mountain, just before you reach the museum; look for the easy-to-miss sign on the gate. Just before Yatri Nivas, turn left down a lane off the main road, and keep walking for 500m to reach Shikarji Continental (☎) 06558-232429; r ₹1400; ☎). This is the best quality hotel in town, with large, smart, air-con-cooled rooms; many have balconies with mountain views. It has a restaurant and a massage room (per hour ₹50); perfect after your hike. Hotel Sapna & Veg Restaurant (☎) 06558-232234; Main Rd; r from ₹600, mains ₹50-130; ☎) 11am-10pm) is towards the top end of the main road and has a 1st-floor restaurant serving tasty South Indian and Punjabi dishes. While you're in Madhuban, it's worth popping into the small but well-kept Jain Museum (admission ₹5; ☎) 8am-6.30pm Mar-Oct, 8.30am-6pm Nov-Feb), on your left at the bottom end of the main road.

There are frequent trains throughout the day running between Gaya and Parasnath (two hours). Just buy a 'general' 2nd-class ticket (₹65 to ₹80) and hop on the next train; you'll usually get a seat, and if not, it's only two hours. Shared vehicles (jeeps, autos and even the odd bus) wait for passengers to disembark at Parasnath station, then take them to Madhuban (per person ₹30).

From Parasnath there are also trains to Ranchi (2nd class/AC chair ₹110/370, four hours, 10.24am and 4.25pm) and Varanasi (2nd class/sleeper ₹130/255 six hours, 11.21am), and a handful of trains to Kolkata, the most convenient being the Doon Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹210/555/790, seven hours, 11.55pm).

and clean bathrooms. Rooms facing the outside of the building cost ₹50 more than their station-facing counterparts, but are quieter and have more natural light.

Turn right out of the train station to find the entrance. It has 24-hour checkout.

Hotel AVN Plaza

HOTEL $$

(☎ 06612-2462231; www.hotelavnplaza.com; off Station Rd; s/d from ₹800/1000; 📶📶) This neat, modern hotel has small but spotlessly clean rooms with TV, wi-fi and hot-water showers. There are only five standard rooms (₹1000 for a double), so call ahead to reserve one unless you want to pay for premium (₹1800 for a double). It's down a lane, off Station Rd, but signposted. It has 24-hour checkout.

★ Chanakya BNR Hotel

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 06612-2461211; www.chanakyaabnranchi.com; Station Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹4500/5700; 📶📶📶📶) This charming hotel could be your sole reason for visiting Ranchi. A part-historic railway property located outside the train station, it's a superbly renovated terracotta-roofed Raj relic that oozes vintage and boutique appeal. The property's trees are home to parrots, and it has a small outdoor pool, two excellent restaurants and a bar.

While the deluxe rooms are luxurious enough, try and grab a 110-year-old heritage room (same price), with antique furniture, plush beds, high ceilings and glass-panelled views of manicured lawns outside. You can't prebook the heritage rooms; just ask for one when you arrive and keep your fingers crossed.

🔪 Eating & Drinking

Hotel AVN Plaza and Chanakya BNR Hotel both have restaurants that are open to nonguests; Chanakya BNR's two restaurants are particularly good.

The Nook

INDIAN $$

(Station Rd; mains ₹90-150; ☺ noon-3pm & 7-11pm) Arguably the best midrange hotel restaurant in the train-station area, this in-house dining facility at Hotel Kwaliti Inns is comfortable and the service attentive without being obsequious. The tandoori section is delightful and amazingly popular, and there's chilled beer and hard booze on offer too.

📍 Information

There are ATMs at the train station and on Station Rd, and internet cafes (Station Rd, Gurunanak Market; per hour ₹20; ☺ 8am-10pm) in the same building as Suhana Tour & Travels.

📍 Getting There & Away

AIR

Ranchi's Birsra Munda Airport is 6km from the city centre. Air India (☎ 2503255; www.airindia.com) and GoAir (☎ 1800 222111; www.goair.in) fly daily to Delhi and Mumbai. A taxi to the airport is around ₹250.

BUS

From the Government bus stand (Station Rd), there are frequent buses to Gaya throughout the day (₹160, six hours) and numerous evening services to Patna (₹220 to ₹250, nine hours), which leave from around 9pm onwards.

Private sleeper and AC buses to cities such as Patna (seat ₹650, nine hours), Kolkata (seat/sleeper ₹220/300, 10 hours, from 8pm onwards) and Bhubaneswar (sleeper ₹450, 13 hours, from 6pm onwards) leave from Khartatoli bus stand, 3km from Station Rd (cycle-rickshaw/shared auto ₹30/5).

For Betla National Park, buses to Daltonganj (₹160, 4½ hours) leave from ITI bus stand, about 8km from Station Rd (local bus/shared auto/private auto ₹15/30/200).

TRAIN

The handy 12366 PNBE Janshabadi runs daily to Patna (2nd class/chair ₹185/625, eight hours, 2.25pm), via Parasnath (₹110/370, three hours) and Gaya (₹160/525, 5½ hours).

For Kolkata, the handiest of the two daily trains is the Howrah Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹250/665/955, nine hours, 9.40am).

The once-daily Tapaswini Express goes to Bhubaneswar (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹340/920/1325, 13 hours, 3.55pm).

Betla (Palamau) National Park

☎ 06562

Wild elephants freely roam the virgin forests of this lovely, rarely visited national park (☎ 06562-222650, 9939341211; ☺ 6-10am & 2-5pm), spread over the hilly landscape of picturesque Palamau district, 140km west of Ranchi. Tiger sightings are rare, but a trip to this primeval region of Jharkhand offers a glimpse into the rich tribal heritage of the state. The park covers around 1026 sq km, about 232 sq km of which was declared as Betla National Park in 1989. Hiding behind stands of sal forest, rich evergreens, teak trees and bamboo thickets are some 17 tigers, 52 leopards, 216 elephants and four lonely nilgais (antelope) according to a 2007 census (newer figures are yet to be derived). You'll also see plenty of monkeys, spotted deer and possibly some gaur (Indian bison).

The park is open year-round, but the best time to visit is November to April. If you can stand the heat, May is prime time for tiger spotting as forest cover is reduced and animals venture out in search of waterholes.

Jeep safaris and elephant safaris can be arranged privately at the park gate.

Elephant safaris only last one hour but cost a flat-rate of ₹400 per elephant (up to four people), so are a bargain as well as being a lot of fun; the elephant takes you off-piste, into thick forest cover, although not as deep into the park as the jeeps do.

Jeep safaris can be taken either during the park's morning session (between 6am and 10am) or afternoon session (between 2pm and 5pm), but elephant safaris can only be taken in the morning, and should be prebooked the night before (although this isn't always necessary). If you take a morning safari, wrap up warm; it's freezing in the forest before the sun comes up properly. If you don't have any warm clothes, borrow a blanket from your guesthouse to wrap yourself in.

If you have time on your hands, consider an excursion to the ruined Palamau Fort, a 16th-century citadel of the local tribal Chero dynasty sited spectacularly within the forest. Alternatively, plan a picnic on the sandy banks of the scenic Kechki River. A jeep tour to the fort costs the same as a jeep safari. A jeep tour to Kechki River is the same, minus the ₹150 park entry fee.

Sleeping & Eating

The best accommodation is Tourist Lodge (☎ bookings 06562-222650; d from ₹1130; ☹), just inside the entrance gate. It's far from luxurious, but boasts large clean rooms with TV, spacious bathrooms and private balconies with views of the deer-filled meadow in front of the forest. The well-priced canteen does post safari breakfasts and arranges a hearty vegetarian thali (₹100) for lunch and dinner upon advance notice.

About 50 paces from the lodge, and also just inside the park entrance, is Tree House

JEEP SAFARI COSTS

Jeep safaris can be arranged privately at the Betla (Palamau) National Park gate. The breakdown of the costs for jeep safaris is as follows:

Park entry (per vehicle, per hour) ₹150

Compulsory guide (per vehicle, per hour) ₹100

Jeep hire (per vehicle, per hour) ₹450

Camera fee (per person, per safari) ₹100

So, for example; a two-hour jeep safari for two people, both with cameras, would cost a total of ₹1600. For a single person, it would cost ₹1500. Jeep safaris can last from one hour to up to three or four hours, depending on how long you wish to spend in the park.

(☎ bookings 06562-222650; r ₹590). It has two elevated sets of rooms built of teak, and contains two bedrooms (one double, one single), a bathroom and an observation deck with the same views as Tourist Lodge. It's more basic, but great value. Both can be booked through the park office.

If they are booked out, spend the night at the government-run Van Vihar (☎ 07352006141; d with/without AC ₹1030/600; ☹), 100m before the park entrance. It's a hulking property that was undergoing wholesale renovations when we last visited, so should be spick and span by the time you arrive. It also has a restaurant.

Getting There & Away

The nearest town to the park entrance is Daltonganj, about 20km away, which has frequent bus services to Ranchi throughout the day (₹160, 4½ hours). From Daltonganj take a local bus (₹20, roughly hourly until around 4pm) or shared autorickshaw (₹30) to Betla. A private auto from Daltonganj will cost around ₹300. If you're able to explain where you're going to the bus conductor, you can save some time by getting off the Ranchi bus at the turn-off for Betla, about 10km before Daltonganj. From here you can wave down a passing bus (₹10) or shared auto (₹20), or hire a private auto (₹200) to the park.

If you don't fancy going it alone, Suhana Tour & Travels (p536), based in Ranchi, does two-day trips to Betla for ₹4200 per person (minimum two people).

Why Go?

Hailed as one of the world's last utopias by legendary Buddhist guru Padmasambhava, Sikkim is arguably among the loveliest destinations in India. And what variety in such a small state: plunging rhododendron-clad mountain valleys in the north; West Sikkim's atmospheric Buddhist monasteries; monumental religious statues in South Sikkim; and friendly and cheerful urban centres in the east. Then there are stunning views of Khangchendzonga, the world's third-highest mountain (8598m), visible from almost any viewpoint in the state. Little wonder that this tiny former Himalayan kingdom is such a haven for travellers.

A strong preserve of Tibetan Buddhism, Sikkim's public aesthetics are executed in shades of ritualistic vermilion, gold, blue and green, which make striking photo ops. Throw in yummy local food, exotic Himalayan wildlife, picture-postcard landscapes and some great hikes, and you have a superb mountain escape on the cards.

When to Go

Gangtok

Oct–mid-Nov
Clearest weather for views, but there are high-season crowds and prices.

Apr–May Spring blossoms and warmth make up for the cloudier skies.

Mid-Jun–Sep Monsoon plays spoilsport, but there are great discounts on offer.

Sikkim Highlights

1 Enjoying a roller-coaster journey over mountain ridges and through abysslike valleys on a road trip to Yumthang Valley (p553)

2 Being enthralled by a colourful chaam (masked dance) ceremony at Rumtek Gumpa (p549)

3 Waking up to dazzling Khangchendzonga views in Pelling (p556), and visiting Pemayangtse Gumpa (p558)

4 Wandering among prayer flags and ancient chortens (stupas) within the magical Tashiding Gumpa (p562)

5 Walking on high ground and getting close to sublime

Himalayan peaks on the Goecha La (p561) trek

6 Sipping garden-fresh tea while taking in sweeping mountain vistas in Temi (p556)

7 Courting solitude and luxury at a stylish farmhouse in Rinchenpong (p561)

History

Sikkim was uninhabited until the 13th century, when the Lepchas migrated here from Assam or Myanmar (Burma), followed by Bhutias arriving from Tibet in the 15th century. In the 19th century, large numbers of Hindu migrants arrived from Nepal, forming a majority of Sikkim's population.

The Nyingmapa form of Vajrayana (Tibetan) Buddhism arrived with three refugee Tibetan lamas who met in modern-day Yuksom. Here in 1641 they crowned Phuntsog Namgyal as first chogyal (king) of Sikkim. The capital later moved to Rabdentse (near Pelling), then to Tumlong in North Sikkim, before finally settling in Gangtok.

In their heydays, the chogyals ruled eastern Nepal, upper Bengal and Darjeeling. However, much territory was lost during wars with Bhutan and Nepal. In 1835, the British bribed the chogyal to cede Darjeeling to the East India Company, a move that was strongly opposed by Tibet, which regarded Sikkim as a vassal state. In 1849, the British annexed the entire area between the present Sikkim border and the Ganges plains, and subsequently repulsed a counterinvasion by Tibet in 1886. Sikkim's last chogyal ruled from 1963 to 1975, after which the kingdom merged with the Indian dominion and was given statehood.

In the past decade, Sikkim has made considerable progress to become one of India's model states with high employment and low poverty. It is the first among Indian states to implement successful projects in organic farming, rural sanitation, public health and secondary education across its districts.

Activities

Going on a trek is the highpoint of any Sikkim sojourn. From day hikes between villages along centuries-old foot trails to multiday slogs across high mountain passes, there are plenty of trekking options available in the state. The most popular short hikes are the routes between Yuksom and Tashiding, and Yuksom and Khecheopalri Lake. Longer options that score well with experienced adventurers are the trek to Goecha La at the base of Khangchendzonga, and the Singalila Ridge trek that connects Yuksom to West Sikkim along the eponymous mountain ridge. Treks to remote areas such as Zemu Glacier and Green Lake are yet to be fully opened up, though it's possible to visit these areas if you have lots of money and permit-processing time to spare.

Apart from trekking, adventure activities such as mountain biking and paragliding are slowly becoming popular in Sikkim. The Sikkim Paragliding Festival (www.paraglidingassociationofindia.org), held in Gangtok in winter, sees plenty of participation from travellers and adventure junkies alike.

Permits

STANDARD PERMITS

Foreigners require an Inner Line Permit to enter Sikkim (Indians don't). These are free and getting one is a formality, although to apply you'll need photos and passport photocopies. Permits are most easily obtainable at the Melli police checkpost and Rangpo border post on arrival, but can also be obtained at Indian embassies abroad when getting your visa.

Foreigners' Regional Registration Offices (FRRO) (📍 Delhi 011-26711384, Kolkata 033-22900549; www.immigrationindia.nic.in; 🕒 10am-5pm Mon-Fri) Sikkim permits.

Sikkim House (📍 Delhi 011-26883026, Kolkata 033-22817905; www.sikkim.nic.in/sikkimhouse; 🕒 10.30am-4pm Mon-Fri, to 2pm Sat) Sikkim permits.

Sikkim Tourist Office (www.sikkimtourism.gov.in; 🕒 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) Darjeeling, Siliguri and Rangpo offices.

EXTENSIONS

Permits are generally valid for 30 days (sometimes 15 days from embassies abroad). These can be extended at government offices in

TOP FESTIVALS

Losar (Rumtek Gompa; 🕒 Feb/Mar) Sikkim's biggest chaam (masked dance) rings in the Tibetan New Year.

Bumchu (Tashiding Gompa; 🕒 Feb/Mar) Lamas open a bum (pot) containing chu (holy water) to foretell the year's fortunes.

Saga Dawa (all monastery towns; 🕒 May/Jun) Religious ceremonies and parades commemorate Buddha's birth, enlightenment and death.

Pang Lhabso (Ravangla; 🕒 Aug) Prayers and religious dances are performed in honour of Sikkim's guardian deity Khangchendzonga.

Losoong (Old Rumtek; 🕒 Dec/Jan) Sikkimese New Year, preceded by flamboyant chaam dances.

Gangtok and Tikjuk (6km below Pelling) for a further 30 days, giving a maximum of 60 days. Once you leave Sikkim, you must wait three months before applying for another permit.

PERMIT VALIDITY

The standard permit is valid for visits to the following areas:

- ➔ Gangtok, Rumtek and Lingdum
- ➔ All of South Sikkim
- ➔ North Sikkim as far as Singhik
- ➔ Most of West Sikkim where paved roads extend

SPECIAL PERMITS

High-altitude treks require trekking permits. These are valid for 15 days and can be easily organised by trekking agents.

For travel beyond Singhik up the Lachung and Lachen valleys in North Sikkim, foreigners need restricted area permits. These allow travel up to the Tsopra and Yumthang valleys. Indian citizens need a police permit to travel north of Singhik, but can venture further up the Thangu valley to Gurudongmar Lake, or to Yume Samdong (Zero Point) past Yumthang.

Foreigners also need a restricted area permit to visit Tsomgo (Changu) Lake. Only Indians are permitted to travel past Tsomgo Lake to the Tibetan border at Nathu La.

Trekking permits, as well as restricted area permits, are issued locally through approved tour agencies, and you must join a tour to get one. You'll need a minimum group of two, a passport photo, and copies of your existing permit, visa and passport details page. Permits take 24 hours to arrange.

EAST SIKKIM

Connected by a highway and speedy helicopter services with the rest of India, East Sikkim is focused around the urban hub of its capital Gangtok, and sees a higher tourist footfall than other parts of the state. The relaxed and casual grain of life, combined with a rush of cosmopolitan conveniences and points of touristy interest, makes this a nice place to kick back for a few days.

Gangtok

ly growing sprawl of concrete, the town is blessed with a handful of sights, and doubles as a good base for excursions to places such as Rumtek and Tsomgo Lake. Travellers usually linger here for a few days, soaking up the local culture, stealing Khangchendzonga views from hotel terraces and arranging their travels (eg treks and tours) around the state.

The Rangpo–Mangan road (marked NH31A) forms the crooked north–south spine of Gangtok. Several restaurants, shops, banks, travel agents and tourist offices line the central pedestrianised Mahatma Gandhi (MG) Marg, a happy district patronised by shoppers, lovers, diners and fashionistas.

👁 Sights

★ Namgyal Institute of Tibetology MUSEUM (www.tibetology.net; Deorali; admission ₹10; ☀ 10am–4pm) This fantastic museum housed in a traditional Tibetan-style mansion boasts a jaw-dropping collection of artefacts related to Vajrayana Buddhism and Tibetan culture. Established in 1958 to promote scholastic and cultural research, its ground-floor hall displays Buddhist manuscripts, icons, thangkas (Tibetan cloth paintings) and Tantric ritual objects, such as a thöpa (bowl made from a human skull) and kangling (human thighbone trumpet). The library on the 1st floor houses precious Buddhist tomes, some dating back several hundred years.

The revamped souvenir store within the building sells a collection of ritual objects, jewellery, mementos, books and documentaries on Sikkimese tradition and culture.

Five minutes up the same road is the Do-Drul Chorten, a large white stupa surrounded by monks' hostels and glass-walled galleries with countless flaming butter lamps burning within. Feel free to step in and light some as personal offerings (per lamp ₹7).

Gangtok

The institute sits in a shady grove and is close to the lower station of Damodar Ropeway (per person adult/child return ₹80/50, video ₹80; ☀️ 10am-4.30pm), a cable car running to the Secretariat ridge with great views of town.

green zones here is the Flower Exhibition Centre (admission ₹10; ☀9am-5pm), a modestly sized greenhouse full of exotic orchids, anthuriums and liliun. The impressive Tsuglhakhang temple to the south of the ridge is often open to the public early in the morning and during major festivals.

Nearby, the imposing Chogyal Palace (former royal residence) is closed to visitors, but it's a fine sight from a distance nonetheless.

Enchey Gompa

MONASTERY

(☀4am-4pm Mon-Sat, to 1pm Sun) FREE On the northern outskirts of Gangtok, approached through gently rustling conifers, stands this atmospheric and quaint monastery, with lovely murals and statues of Tantric deities. Some say the monastery's founder was known for his levitational skills. It's easily Gangtok's most attractive hermitage and comes alive for the colourful Detor Chaam masked dances in December/January.

To get here, hire a taxi from MG Marg (₹200) or simply walk for about 3km from MG Marg, first up to the ridge and then roughly in a northwestern direction (ask locals and they'll happily point you up the right path).

Himalayan Zoological Park

ZOO

(Indian/foreigner ₹25/50, vehicle ₹40, video ₹500; ☀9am-4pm Fri-Wed) One of the better maintained zoos in the country, the Gangtok zoo occupies an entire hill opposite Ganesh Tok viewpoint. Red pandas, civet cats, Himalayan bears, clouded leopards and snow leopards roam around in extensive forested enclosures so large that you'll value a car to shuttle between them (although a walk through the dense greenery is recommended over motorised transport). There's a cafeteria within the zoo, with refreshments (snacks ₹30) and restroom facilities.

Ganesh Tok

VIEWPOINT

Festooned in colourful prayer flags and located opposite the zoo's main entrance is Ganesh Tok viewpoint, which offers superb city views, hot tea and Indian snacks (₹50). Hanuman Tok, another impressive viewpoint, sits on a hilltop around 4km beyond Ganesh Tok. The best Khangchendzonga views, however, are at Tashi viewpoint, 4km northwest of town, beside the road to Phodong.

Activities

Early-morning 'three-point' jeep tours show you Ganesh Tok, Hanuman Tok and Tashi viewpoints (₹800). Almost any travel agent, hotel or taxi driver offers variants, including a 'five-point' tour adding Enchey Gompa and Namgyal Institute (₹1000), or 'seven-point' tours taking on Old and New Rumtek gompas (₹1600) or Rumtek plus Lingdum (₹1800). Prices are per vehicle for up to four passengers.

For high-altitude treks, visits to Tsomgo Lake or tours to North Sikkim you'll need a tour agency. Not all agents work with foreigners, so look for one that's registered with Travel Agents Association of Sikkim (TAAS; www.taas.org.in). All-inclusive trekking charges for foreigners range from US$60 to US$100 per person per day, depending on group size and services offered.

★ Hotel Pandim

HOTEL $

(☎ 9832080172; www.hotelpandim.com; Bhanu Path; d from ₹1500; 📶) Richard Gere supposedly swung by this superb family-run budget address, located at a quiet roadside location along the ridge. Apart from his photo that hangs in the pretty terrace restaurant, the hotel offers great value, commendable service, and the best beds and baths in town within a budget. The food menu is limited, but it's all fresh, homemade and delicious.

Top-floor deluxe rooms have the best mountain views, but the cheaper basement rooms are eminently liveable too. The reception is on the top floor, manned by Kesang, the friendly proprietor.

Modern Central Lodge

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 03592-204220; modernresidencysikkim@gmail.com; NH31A; d/tr ₹900/1000) First among equals in a group of budget hotels lining Gangtok's main drag, this place has the added advantage of an in-house travel agency that organises treks and tours. The spartan rooms sport hand-painted furniture, pastel walls and clean sheets. Combining a stay in the guesthouse with a tour often works in your favour money-wise.

Hotel Tashi Tagey

HOTEL $

(☎ 03592-231631; www.tashitagey.com; NH31A, Tadong; d from ₹1200; 📶) For quality Tibetan hospitality at unbelievable prices, it's worth seeking out this superfriendly place 3km below Gangtok. The spotless rooms here are adorned with cheerful upholstery, and the common areas sport floral arrangements and lots of quaint charm. The views from the rooftop garden are unbeatable and the Tibetan food is simply scrumptious. A shared taxi from town costs ₹20.

★ Hidden Forest

HOMESTAY $$

(☎ 03592-205197; www.hiddenforestretrat.org; Middle Sichey Village; s/d from ₹2000/2500; 📶)

☞ Some 2km from town, this family-run homestay – secluded amid fruit trees, orchids and flower nurseries – is a dream hide-away. The property overlooks a gorgeous valley vista and the pine-lined rooms boast understated luxury. The lip-smacking food (customised to your preferences) comes from a solar-powered kitchen, a resident cow provides dairy produce and all vegetable matter is composted.

The terrace is a great place for evening chhangs (barley beer), while the dining hall is accentuated by a splendid collection of botanical illustrations of rare Himalayan flora. A taxi from the centre of town costs ₹150.

Mintokling Guest House

GUESTHOUSE $$

(☎ 03592-208553; www.mintokling.com; Bhanu Path; s/d from ₹2050/2250; 📶) Nestled amid exotic greenery and thrown around pretty lawns dotted with prayer flags, this lodge-like family home is an oasis of peace and quiet. The plain but well-kept rooms sport pine-wood wall panels and fresh upholstery made from traditional fabric. The local menu at the restaurant is a must-try; ask Pema at reception for recommendations.

Hotel Sonam Delek

HOTEL $$

(☎) 03592-202566; www.hotelsonamdelek.com; Tibet Rd; d incl breakfast from ₹1540; (📶) Part art deco, part Tibetan, this long-standing favourite is great value for money. The cheaper rooms in the basement have common access to a superb rear terrace with sweeping views of Khangchendzonga across the valley. The pricier rooms (₹3440) above have private balcony views, king-size beds and prim furnishings. Service is prompt and efficient, and the food is yummy.

Oriental

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$

(☎) 03592-221181; www.orientalsikkim.com; MG Marg; s/d incl breakfast ₹2850/3600; (📶) Stylish though understated, this appealing hotel behind a glass-and-teak facade sees a lot of guests who desire comfort and privacy without having to venture far from town. Rooms are smallish, but appointed with inviting beds (some with canopies), pine-wood panelling and good views of Gangtok's central pedestrianised district below. It can be noisy during the day.

Hotel Nor-Khill

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎) 03592-205637; www.elginhotels.com; PS Rd; d incl half board ₹9200; (📶) Checking into Nor-Khill is like time travelling back to the pre-Independence era, when this state-ly property served as the chogyal's royal guesthouse. Bearing testimony to its heyday are countless historical photos, period furniture and exquisite Tibetan carpets lending a vintage feel to the hallways and the lobby. The spaciouly luxurious rooms are a worthy splurge, and attract diplomats and dignitaries.

For all its positives, however, the hotel overlooks a football stadium, which means things can get roaringly noisy with cheering and chanting during local league fixtures.

Chumbi Residency

BOUTIQUE HOTEL $$$

(☎) 03592-206618; www.thechumbiresidency.com; Tibet Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹4000/5000; (📶) Despite being a tad overpriced, this spot of luxury lies only five minutes from the town centre and is extremely popular with top-end tour groups. A throwback to the 1980s in terms of appointment, its smallish rooms sport fresh white walls and tasteful furniture. Ask for a room with a view. Tangerine, the bar-restaurant, is great for dinner.

Eating

★ Taste of Tibet

TIBETAN $

(MG Marg; mains ₹100-150; ☎ 10am-9pm) This bustling upstairs place, incredibly popular with Gangtok's youth brigade, serves the best Tibetan morsels in Gangtok. On offer are generous servings of momos (dumplings), noodle soup, shyabhale (fried meat pasty), cold beef salad, fried pork and a selection of rice dishes – best paired with a bottle of local Dansberg beer. Finding a table during mealtimes can be difficult.

Parivar Restaurant

SOUTH INDIAN $

(MG Marg; dishes ₹80-120; ☎ 8am-8pm) Eat here for good-value South Indian food, all of it purely vegetarian. Go for the various masala dosas (curried vegetables inside a crisp pancake) or puri (bread) with choley paneer (chickpeas with cottage cheese) for breakfast. For lunch and dinner, try the all-inclusive mini/full thali (₹120/180).

Bakers Cafe

BAKERY $

(MG Marg; pastries from ₹20, mains ₹80-150; ☎ 9am-8pm) The hippest place to catch up with locals or fellow travellers on MG Marg, this cosy Western-style cafe has strong espresso (₹60), refreshing lemon iced tea, croissants, baguettes, panini, pizzas, hot dogs and pastries. Grab a window-side table overlooking the valley and pair your food with great mountain views.

FOODIE'S PARADISE

Sikkimese cuisine is a melange of robust Tibetan flavours and local tribal recipes, garnished with hints of Nepali and Bengali cooking. Traditional Sikkimese dishes include sisnoo (nettle soup), ningro (fried fiddlehead ferns), Tibetan-style churpi (dried yak cheese), ema datshi (cheese and chilli soup) and the Lepcha speciality gundruk ko jhol (fermented spinach soup). The must-try beverage here is tongba (or chhang), an alcoholic millet beer enjoyed across the eastern Himalaya. The brew is sipped through a bamboo straw, and the wooden container (the tongba) is topped up periodically with boiling water to let the brew gain strength.

★ 9'INE

SIKKIMESSE $$

(MG Marg; set meals ₹250-320; ☺ 11am-9pm) Offers friendly and laid-back dining directly above the pedestrianised stretch of MG Marg. This glass-fronted restaurant serves an awesome spread of local delicacies such as asimoo (nettle soup), gundruk ko jhol (fermented spinach soup), fermented soya-bean chutney and fiery pork or beef curry. There's a good selection of local whiskies, brandies and beer, to complement the platter of your choice.

Golden Dragon

MULTICUISINE $$

(MG Marg; mains ₹160-220; ☺ 11am-9pm) Grab a cane table on the lovely sit-out overlooking MG Marg, and make short work of a wide range of tasty food that emerges from this restaurant's busy kitchen. Call in a serving of creamy chicken and mushroom sandwich followed by assorted momos, or simply go for the all-day breakfast platter (₹320).

Chopsticks

MULTICUISINE $$

(MG Marg; mains ₹180-220; ☺ 11am-9pm) Craving a comfort meal of spare-pork ribs glazed in honey, or a giant serving of grilled sausages with barbecue sauce and mashed potato? Then walk into this fancy place and hog away to glory, all the while catching up on cricketing action and Bollywood shakes on the wall-mounted giant TV screen.

Drinking &amp; Entertainment

Two of the nicest locations for a quiet drink are the large terrace of the Tashi Delek Hotel (MG Marg; beers ₹150) or the bar and garden of Hotel Nor-Khill (p547).

Pub 25

BAR

(MG Marg; beers ₹150; ☺ 1-10.30pm) Smart decor, lounge-style sofas, moody lighting and cheeky posters on the walls lend themselves rather well to this tiny watering hole, patronised by locals and travellers alike. TV screens behind the bar relay sporting action, and there's pleasant music on the pipe.

Cafe Live &amp; Loud

LIVE MUSIC

(www.thriceasmuch.com; Tibet Rd; beers from ₹160; ☺ 1-11pm; 🎵) Gangtok's most happening venue for live music, this flashy lounge-bar hosts gigs by live-rock, blues and alternative bands every Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. There's a full bar and food menu, with some unusual Southeast Asian offerings (mains ₹150 to ₹200), and a pleasant cafe terrace if you wish to distance yourself from the soundblast within.

Shopping

Several souvenir shops on MG Marg and PS Rd sell Tibetan and Sikkimese handicrafts such as wooden tongba pots, prayer flags, Tibetan curios and Nepali-style khukri knives.

Owing to its tax-free status, Sikkim sells alcohol at rock-bottom prices. Apart from generic Indian and foreign labels being sold almost at half price, a few local brands are available in souvenir containers. Fireball brandy comes in a bowling-ball-style red sphere, while Old Gold whisky is bottled in a khukri-shaped glass dagger.

★ Golden Tips

FOOD &amp; DRINK

(www.goldentipstea.com; Kazi Rd; tea per pack from ₹200; ☺ 9am-9pm) This boutique tea store stocks a mind-blowing repertoire of premium Darjeeling teas (of the black, green, white and flavoured varieties), as well as selections of Sikkimese tea from Temi. The produce is sold in souvenir-sized packages (100g upwards), and the store reps are happy to brew you a cup of your chosen tea for sampling. There's another outlet run by the same proprietors on MG Marg.

Rachna Books

BOOKS

(www.rachnabooks.com; Development Area; ☺ 10am-7pm) Gangtok's best-stocked and most convivial bookshop also has occasional film screenings and music events in its upstairs gallery. Its catalogue of titles on Sikkimese and Tibetan history, as well as Vajrayana Buddhism, is well worth browsing.

Handicrafts &amp; Handloom Emporium

HANDICRAFTS

(Zero Point; ☺ 10am-4pm, closed Sun Apr-Jun) This government initiative teaches traditional crafts to local students and markets their products – including toy red pandas, 1m by 2m handwoven carpets (₹6000), Tibetan furniture, handmade paper and traditional Sikkimese-style ensembles (₹2000 to ₹3000).

Information

Many ATMs and high-speed internet cafes (per hour ₹30) line MG Marg.

Axis Bank (MG Marg; ☺ 10am-5pm Mon-Sat) Changes cash and travellers cheques and has an ATM. Note that exchange is virtually impossible elsewhere in Sikkim.

Cyber Cafe (MG Marg; per hour ₹30; ☺ 9am-9pm) Internet access in a laneway.

Foreigners' Registration Office (Kazi Rd; ☎10am-4pm Mon-Sat) In the lane beside Indian Overseas Bank; for permit extensions.

Main Post Office (PS Rd; ☎10am-4pm Mon-Sat, to 2pm Sun for stamps) Normal, registered post and speed-post services.

Police Station (☎03592-202033; NH31A) Helpful, efficient and mostly English-speaking.

Sikkim Tourist Information Centre (☎ toll free 03592-203960; www.sikkimtourism.gov.in; MG Marg; ☎10am-7pm) Offers general and up-to-date advice. Open 10am to 4pm outside peak seasons (March to May and October to November).

STNM Hospital (☎03592-222059; NH31A) Emergency and outpatient facilities. Take a copy of your travel insurance for major treatments.

Getting There & Away

AIR

The nearest airport to Sikkim is Bagdogra, 124km from Gangtok, near Siliguri in West Bengal, which has flights to Kolkata, Delhi and Guwahati.

Helicopters operated by Sikkim Helicopter Service (☎03592-203960; www.mountain-flightindia.com) shuttle daily from Gangtok to Bagdogra (₹3500, 40 minutes), departing at 11am and returning at 2.30pm. Services are cancelled in adverse weather. There's a strict maximum 10kg baggage allowance. Tickets are sold by Sikkim Tourism Development Corporation (p546).

Fixed-price taxis and sumos (jeeps) go directly to Bagdogra (₹3000, five hours).

Sikkim's first airport is planned at Pakyong, 35km from Gangtok, with a tentative completion date of 2016.

BUS

Buses run from the government SNT bus station (☎03592-202016; PS Rd) at 7am to Jorethang (₹100), Kalimpong (₹90) and Namchi (₹100), at 1.15pm to Pelling (₹160) and hourly to Siliguri (₹190, 6am to 1pm). Shared jeeps, however, are quicker and more frequent.

SHARED JEEPS

Some jeep departures are fixed, while others leave when all seats are filled. Departures usually start at 6.30am for the more distant destinations and continue until about 2pm.

From the well-organised Private Jeep Stand (NH31A), 1.5km below Gangtok, shared jeeps depart every 30 minutes or so to Darjeeling (₹160, five hours), Kalimpong (₹90, three hours) and Siliguri (₹180, five hours), some continuing to New Jalpaiguri train station.

BORDER CROSSING – NEPAL & BHUTAN

There are daily jeeps from the Private Jeep Stand to Kakarbhitta (₹250, six hours, 6.30am) on the Nepalese border and Jaigaon (₹300, five hours, 7am) on the Bhutanese border.

West Sikkim vehicles depart from Southwest Jeep Stand (Church Rd) for Geyzing (₹190, 4½ hours, four daily), Ravangla (₹120, three hours, four daily), Namchi (₹130, three hours, every half-hour) and Jorethang (₹120, three hours, hourly). Jeeps for Yuksom, Tashiding and Pelling (₹200 to ₹220, five hours) usually depart around 7am. For independent (and comfortable) travel, it's best to charter a vehicle (per day ₹3500).

TRAIN

The nearest major train station is about 125km away at New Jalpaiguri (NJP). There's a computerised railway booking counter (☎8am-2pm Mon-Sat, to 11am Sun & public holidays) at the SNT bus station.

Getting Around

There's a taxi stand in Lal Bazaar opposite the Denzong Cinema, and another in PS Rd just north of the post office. Shared taxis to Tadong (₹20, every 10 minutes) depart from just under the pedestrian bridge on NH31A.

Around Gangtok

Rumtek

Facing Gangtok distantly across a plunging green valley, Rumtek is a pretty village dominated by its extensive and eponymous gompa complex, considered to be one of Tibetan Buddhism's most venerable institutions and currently the home-in-exile of Buddhism's Kagyu (Black Hat) sect. Time permitting, you can make a quick sortie to Lingdum gompa as well, linked to Rumtek by beautiful country lanes that wind through mossy forests, bamboo groves and artistically terraced paddy fields.

THE KARMAPA CONTROVERSY

The 'Black Hat' sect takes its name from a priceless ruby-topped black headgear traditionally worn by the Karmapas (reincarnate spiritual leaders). Supposedly woven from the hair of dakinis (angels), the hat must be kept locked in a box to prevent it from flying back to the heavens.

Nobody, however, has actually seen the hat since 1993, when a bitter controversy spewed within the Kagyu sect over the legitimacy of two candidates, with both claiming their right to the throne following the death of the 16th Karmapa. The main candidate, Ogyen Trinley Dorje (www.kagyuoffice.org), fled Tibet in 2000 and remains based in Dharamsala: Indian authorities are believed to have prevented him from officially taking up his Rumtek seat for fear of upsetting Chinese government sensibilities. The rival candidate, Thaye Dorje (www.karmapa.org), lives in nearby Kalimpong in West Bengal. Supporters of the two are locked in a legal dispute over who can control Rumtek. To learn more about the controversy, read The Dance of 17 Lives by Mick Brown.

Only when the dispute is resolved and the 17th Karmapa is finally crowned would anyone dare to unlock the box and reveal the sacred black hat.

constructed between 1961 and 1966. Unusually for a monastery, the place is guarded by armed forces, following heated altercations and an invasion by partisan monks in the wake of the Karmapa controversy. To enter, foreigners must show their passport and Sikkim permit at the checkpost.

The rambling and walled gompa complex contains religious buildings, schools and a few small lodge-hotels, snack shops and souvenir stalls for travellers. There's a mural of the original Tsurphu Monastery – destroyed during the Chinese Cultural Revolution – beside the main entrance. In the main hall, a giant throne awaits the crowning of the Kagyu spiritual leader, the (disputed) 17th Karmapa, who currently resides in Dharamsala. An ornate scroll, hand-painted by the young leader, adorns the monastery in his absence.

Behind the monastery building, up a flight of stairs running past a snack shop (good tea, instant noodles and momos) stands the Golden Stupa (☺ 6am-11.45am & noon-5pm) FREE. Stuffed with religious paraphernalia, the smallish room holds the ashes of the 16th Karmapa in an amber, coral and turquoise-studded reliquary to which pilgrims pay their deepest respects. The keys to the shrine are usually with obliging lamas enrolled at the Karma Shri Nalanda Institute of Buddhist Studies opposite. Leave a donation and you'll be blessed with a holy metal dorje (talisman symbolising lightning).

The knowledgeable, witty and dapper Monay Rai gives a wonderful tour of the monastery (₹250).

Old Rumtek Gompa

MONASTERY

(☺ dawn-dusk) FREE About 1.5km beyond Rumtek Gompa, a long avenue of prayer flags and junipers leads photogenically down to the forlorn and atmospheric Old Rumtek Gompa, looking out to some fabulous views. The monastery is still in use, and the main prayer hall has been renovated. Two days before the Sikkimese New Year, the monastery comes to life with chaam dances.

Lingdum Gompa

MONASTERY

(☺ dawn-dusk) FREE Completed as recently as 1998, peaceful Lingdum Gompa grows out of pine forests in impressive layers, with pleasant side gardens and a photogenic chorten. The extensively muralled main prayer hall enshrines huge statues of Sakyamuni Buddha, Guru Rinpoche and the 16th Karmapa.

🌟 Festivals & Events

Rumtek holds impressive masked chaam dances during the annual Drupchen (group meditation) in May/June, and two days before Losar (p542; Tibetan New Year). The much-fancied Mahakala Dance (Ralang) takes place in February, when giant figurines of the fierce protector deity come to life in the central courtyard.

🍴 Sleeping & Eating

Sangay Hotel

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 03592-252238; Rumtek Gompa complex; s/d ₹600/800) This Tibetan establishment within the monastery complex is a good place to overnight if you want to explore the region at leisure. Rooms are simple and comfortable with hot-water bathrooms. Some have balconies.

Rumtek Dzong

HOTEL $$

(☎) 9475463126; www.hotelrumtekdzong.com; Rumtek Rd; d incl breakfast from ₹2500) Midway up the Rumtek road, overlooking the Shanti viewpoint, is this smart hotel commanding fabulous vistas of Gangtok across the valley. Rooms are prim and well appointed, and there's a cute lawn in front where you could laze away a sunny afternoon with a paperback in hand. Ask for a room with a view.

★ Bamboo Retreat

RESORT $$$

(☎) 9434382036; www.bambooretreat.in; Sajong; per person incl breakfast from ₹3380; 📶) This fabulous resort en route to Rumtek is lounged amid conifers and blooming gardens. It offers oodles of tranquillity along with a horde of optional activities such as mountain biking, guided hikes, Lepcha cultural programs, herbal baths and refreshing massages. The colourful rooms are ethnically appointed, and much of the yummy food comes from the property's organic gardens.

i Getting There & Away

Rumtek is 26km (1½ hours) from Gangtok by a winding but scenic road. Lingdum Gompa is a 2km walk from Rumtek along well-trodden mountain trails. Shared jeeps run from Gangtok to Rumtek (₹50) every hour or so, with the last jeep returning to Gangtok around 3pm. A reserved return taxi costs around ₹1000, or ₹1500 including Lingdum.

Towards Tibet

Tso-mgo (Changu) Lake

Pronounced Changu, this high-altitude lake (3780m) 38km from Gangtok is madly popular with Indian travellers, though foreigners require a permit to visit. It's not the prettiest mountain lake in the world, but if you're still keen on checking it out, sign up for a tour by 2pm and most Gangtok agents can get the permit for next-day departure (two photos required). A budget day tour will cost around ₹4000 per vehicle or ₹800 per person if you can get a group together.

At the lakeside, food stalls sell hot chai, chow mein and momos, while short yak rides (₹200) potter along the shore.

NATURE'S FURY

In September 2011 a 6.9-magnitude earthquake rocked North Sikkim, claiming more than 100 lives and leaving indelible marks of destruction on the landscape, architecture and the minds of citizens. Further damage was inflicted by another earthquake and a flash flood in September 2012. While the region has recovered considerably from the twin blows, future disasters are always a possibility. Check local conditions before you travel.

Nathu La

Indian citizens are permitted to continue 18km north along the rough road from Tsomgo Lake to the 4130m Nathu La (Listening Ears Pass), on the border with Tibet. It's currently sealed and no crossing over is allowed, although tourists can walk all the way to the barbed wires and pose with Indian and Chinese soldiers for photo ops.

A few kilometres southeast of Nathu La, Jelep La was the pass used by Francis Younghusband during the British invasion of Tibet (1903–04). Before being sealed along with Nathu La in 1962, Jelep La was the main regional trade route between Kalimpong and Lhasa. As of now, neither pass shows any sign of reopening.

NORTH SIKKIM

☎ 03592 / POP 43,700

Both breathtakingly beautiful and dauntingly dangerous, the pristine mountains of North Sikkim are blessed with nature's unspoiled bounties. Landscape lovers head to the idyllic valleys of Yumthang and Tsopta, but travelling here requires some stamina and a special permit, which is easy to obtain if you sign up for a tour. April, May, October and November are the best months to visit. Avoid the monsoon, when the rains are often accompanied by landslides and earthquakes.

Gangtok to Singhik

Shortly after exiting Gangtok begins a hair-raising journey along the frail and narrow NH31A. You'll pass through wooded

NORTH SIKKIM TOUR TIPS

- ➔ A group of four is ideal for sharing costs while not overfilling a jeep. Solo travellers must find at least one copassenger and qualify as a 'group' to apply for permits.
- ➔ Travelling as part of a tour organised by a registered travel agent is both mandatory and recommended. Agents in Gangtok can find you jeep-share partners quite easily, so ask around a few days before you plan to travel.
- ➔ Allow at least four days to comfortably visit both Yumthang/Lachung and Lachen. Three days is enough to see just Yumthang. All-inclusive three-night, four-day tours start from around ₹9000 per person for groups of four.
- ➔ Break camp early in the morning and maximise your time on the road for photo ops and sightseeing.
- ➔ Bring a torch (flashlight) and warm clothes.

slopes high above the Teesta River, occasionally descending in long coils of hairpin bends to a bridge photogenically draped in prayer flags, only to switchback up again on the other side.

Kabi Lunchok, an atmospheric glade decorated with memorial stones 17km north of Gangtok, is the site of a 13th-century peace treaty between the chiefs of the Lepcha and Bhutia tribes. Consider breaking your journey here for a while. The small 290-year-old Nyingmapa-school Phensang Gompa is further north, 1km off the main road.

Just over 30km north of Gangtok, Seven Sisters Waterfall, a multistage cascade, cuts a chasm above a roadside cardamom grove and plummets into a rocky pool. Further down the road is Phodong (1815m), lined with a strip of roadside restaurants that serve quick-and-ready lunch. About 1km past Phodong, a 15-minute walk along a side road leads to Phodong Gompa (established in 1740). Belonging to the Kagyu sect, it houses extensive murals and a large statue of the ninth Karmapa.

With time to spare, drive or walk another 1.5km uphill to the much more atmospheric Labrang Gompa (established in 1884), home to 100 monks. The inner walls of the eight-sided main building are lined with more than 1000 icons of Padmasambhava, while upstairs a fearsome statue of the guru sports a necklace of severed heads.

Between the two monasteries, just below the road, lie the 19th-century foundations of Tumlong, Sikkim's third capital. The enigmatic palace ruins are worth a quick scramble.

North Sikkim's district headquarters are located in Mangan, 28km from Phodong. Singhik, Mangan's twin village, is just a few bends down the road.

Beyond Singhik

With relevant permits and an organised tour you can continue north beyond Singhik. At Chungthang, the next settlement, the road branches up the Lachung Chu and Lachen Chu valleys. If you only have time to visit one valley, the Lachung Chu has more impressive scenery.

Accommodation is available in Lachung and Lachen. Unless you're specifically looking to stay in a plush hotel and pay over and above your package tariff, your tour operator will have preselected a budget hotel for you in both places.

Lachung

☎ 03592 / POP 2450 / ELEV 2910M

Soaring rock-pinnacled valley walls embroidered with long ribbons of waterfalls surround the scattered village of Lachung. To appreciate the full drama of its setting, take the metal cantilever bridge across the wild Yumthang River and then climb 1.5km for great views from the Lachung (Sarchok) Gompa (established 1880). Don't attempt this walk in bad weather though.

More than 50 hotels are dotted around Lachung. Most are simple family-run budget accommodations. Each is comparable to the other with basic rooms, bathroom and traditional Tibetan-style wood-fire kitchens, a cosy place to linger over a butter tea or chhang. Unless you specifically opt for top-end accommodation as part of the package, your tour operator will prechoose one of these hotels for the night and you'll have to accept this preference.

If you don't mind paying surplus cash to stay at a more luxurious place, the gompa-style hotel Modern Residency (☎ 03592-204220; www.modernresidency.com;

THANGGU & TSOPTA

Beyond a sprawling army camp 32km north of Lachen, Thanggu (3850m) has an end-of-the-world feel. There are no phones (mobile or otherwise), the electricity is solar generated and the Chinese are only 15km away.

Thanggu Resort (Main Rd; snacks ₹100; ☺ May-Nov) is a simple wooden house incorporating a traditional-styled kitchen and tongba-drinking den (tongba ₹50) that offers the only toilet and breakfast stop (snacks ₹100) along the route.

From Thanggu, a boulder-strewn stream leads on 2km to the Tsopta Valley. Just above the tree line, the scenery takes on the added drama of a glacier-toothed mountain wall framing the western horizon. A two-hour hike leads up to a pair of meditation caves, one of which was used for two years by the famous French traveller and mystic Alexandra David-Neel.

Indian visitors can continue 30km north to spectacular Gurudongmar Lake (5150m), right on the border with Tibet, but the glacial lake is off-limits to foreigners.

Singring village; d incl full board ₹6800), 3km south of Lachung, has comfortable, well-decorated rooms done up in local motifs and appointed with snug beds, luxe creature comforts and fresh toilets. Pluses include a minimuseum, library and bar. You can book through Gangtok-based Modern Treks & Tours (☎ 03592-204220; www.modernresidency.com; MG Marg, Modern Central Lodge). Early birds stand to get good discounts.

The fancy resort Mayfair Yarlam (☎ 9434330033; www.yarlamresort.com; Main Rd; d incl full board from ₹8800; @), possibly the top place in Yumthang, is also a good place to stay, with smart cosy rooms and amenities such as round-the-clock hot water, flatscreen TVs and internet via satellite connections. However, it is preferred by top-end international tour operators for their groups and remains largely booked out during the high season.

Yumthang Valley

The main reason to come to Lachung is to continue 24km further north to admire the majestic Yumthang Valley, which starts some 10km past Lachung. This point is also the entry to the Singba Rhododendron Sanctuary, whose network of hiking trails offers a welcome chance to get out of the jeep. From March to early May a host of primulas, 24 species of rhododendrons and other alpine flora burst forth in riotous blossom, carpeting the valley floor.

At the Km24 point, a number of snack shacks and souvenir stalls operate in the high season. There's also a tiny museum (opening hours are irregular) with a display of Tibetan and Sikkimese relics. From here, you can walk ahead and explore the pretty terrain, which slowly transforms into a montage of jagged peaks, lush pastures and bridges draped with colourful prayer flags. The glacial waters of the Yumthang River gurgle through the scene. Come early in the morning for the best photo-ops, before the clouds roll in.

Lachen

POP 2000 / ELEV 2700M

Despite a recent invasion of concrete, the traditional mountain village of Lachen retains its quaintness in the form of old wooden homes on sturdy stone bases, log sheds stacked with timber for winter fuel, and plenty of colour in the form of ornate Tibetan-style window frames and prayer flags. Lachen (Nyudrup Choeling) Gompa is a 15-minute walk above the town and is most likely to be open early morning or late afternoon for rituals.

While primarily serving as a night stop for exploring the higher valley of Tsopta, Lachen is also the trailhead for eight-day expeditionary treks to Green Lake (5050m) along the Zemu Glacier (thought to be filled with the yeti, or abominable snowman), towards Khangchendzonga's northeast face. Consider this trek with lots of money, time and patience to spare as permits are extremely difficult to obtain.

Of the few accommodation options available for tourists to choose from, most groups prefer the Lachen View Point (☎ 9434867312; d incl full board from ₹3000), which has good-value rooms and efficient service. Alternatively, try the luxurious and hospitable Apple Orchard Resort (☎ 9474837640; www.theappleorchardresort.com; d incl full board ₹9500), above the village next to the ani gompa (nunnery). It has cosy and inviting rooms (with graceful wooden flooring and panelling) located in smart buildings thrown around a leafy, tiered complex.

SOUTH SIKKIM

People visit the lofty hills of South Sikkim either to gaze at the sky-piercing statues of Namchi and Ravangla, or to find religion in the latter's atmospheric monasteries. This is also the state's only tea-growing region, and the gardens of Temi are a delightful stop-over for anyone travelling the road between Gangtok and West Sikkim.

Namchi

☎ 03595 / POP 12,200 / ELEV 1525M

The hulking religious superstructures that dot the jagged horizon of Namchi are perhaps the only reason why travellers swing by this tiny settlement. There are several internet cafes in the central pedestrianised plaza, along with an Axis Bank ATM, two ancient bodhi and pipal trees and an aquarium with angel fish, parrot fish and piranhas.

👁 Sights

Samdruptse

MONUMENT

(Padmasambhava Statue; admission ₹30; 🌅 dawn-dusk) Painted in shimmering copper, pink and bronze, the 45m-high statue of Guru Padmasambhava lords over the forested Samdruptse ridge and is visible for miles around. Completed in 2004 on a foundation stone laid by the Dalai Lama, the statue of the hallowed Buddhist leader sits atop a giant lotus plinth and makes for a striking photo op. Within the complex, there's a permanent photo exhibition of archival images documenting Sikkim's cultural, natural and artistic history.

The site is 7km from Namchi, 2km off the Damthang/Ravangla road. Taxis from town charge around ₹700 return. Alternatively, pay ₹500 for a one-way trip and walk back to Namchi, following the road down to the atmospheric Ngadak Gompa. Pass the ruined Ngadak Dzong, which dates back to 1717 and still exudes a sense of antique Sikkim.

Char Dham

MONUMENT

(Siddesvara Dham; ₹30 per vehicle; 🕒 8am-noon & 1-7pm) Spread over the Solophuk hilltop 5km south of Namchi, the site of Char Dham is towered over by a massive 33m Shiva statue. The complex intends to bring together all revered Hindu pilgrimages from across India (albeit in the form of replicas), and is strewn with temples and pagodas built on an epic scale. A taxi here costs ₹700/500 for a return/one-way trip, and the Yatri Nivas guesthouse dishes out a superb thali (₹200) for lunch.

Apart from visiting these concrete behemoths (each of which enshrines sundry deities of the Hindu pantheon), there's a 4D simulator show (₹50) that re-creates popular pilgrimages, plane flights and car races for kids.

🛏 Sleeping

Dungmali Heritage Resort

GUESTHOUSE $

(☎ 9734126039; Solophuk Rd; d from ₹1000) Overlooking the Solophuk road about 4km from Namchi, this family-run guesthouse boasts solitude, silence and lots of ambient greenery. Accommodation is snug for the price, and the costlier rooms come with balconies and great valley views. The family grows organic vegetables, and runs a popular cafe (mains ₹100-150) 20m up the road.

Upon prior request, the proprietors can organise forest walks and birdwatching tours in the jungle adjacent to the property.

Seven Hills Resort

RESORT $$

(☎ 8348171672; www.sevenhillsresort.com; Phalidara; d from ₹3850) Located on a remote ridge 7km northeast of Namchi, this ecothemed resort boasts a collection of rustic cottages sporting lots of canework and traditional tapestry, all thrown around manicured lawns and gardens dotted with passionfruit, bamboo and orchids. The mountain views from the balconies are commanding, and go well with a glass of house-made rhododendron brandy on a cold evening.

📍 Getting There & Around

Share jeeps leave frequently when full to Ravangla (₹50, one hour), Gangtok (₹130, three hours) and Siliguri (₹150, three hours) from stands around the pedestrian mall. Services dry up shortly after noon.

Buses leave early in the morning from the SNT bus stand in the east of town, heading to Ravangla (₹40, one hour) and Gangtok (₹100, three hours).

Ravangla (Rabongla)

📍 03595 / POP 2280 / ELEV 2010M

Lined by conifer forests and spectacularly perched on a ridge overlooking a wide sweep of western Sikkim, Ravangla promises some of the best mountain views in the region. The gompas of Ralang, Tashiding, Pemayangtse and Sangachoeling are all distantly visible against a horizon that's sawtoothed with high mountain peaks.

A cheerful and laid-back town, Ravangla is useful as a hub to visit surrounding sights. Joining the main highway is the Main Bazaar, a concentration of shops, cheap hotels, the jeep stand and the Cyber Cafe (Main Bazaar; per hour ₹30; ☺ 9am-7pm).

👁 Sights

Mane Choekhorling Gompa MONASTERY
(☺ dawn-dusk) FREE This flamboyant stone-and-wood gompa stands at the top end of a long flight of steps leading up from the end of the Main Bazaar. The festival ground here hosts the annual Pang Lhabso (p542) festival, held each August in honour of Kanchendzonga. Chaam dances take place on the 15th day of the seventh lunar month.

Tathagata Tsal MONUMENT
(Buddha Park; admission ₹50; ☺ 10am-4.30pm) On the edge of town is the sprawling Tathagata Tsal, a Buddhism-themed park dominated by a giant 41m-tall Buddha statue, which holds Buddhist relics from 13 countries. Within the superstructure is a gallery showcasing scenes from Buddha's life. Blessed by the Dalai Lama in 2010, the site boasts manicured lawns, fountains, ambient lighting, a meditation lounge and lots of photo ops.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Blue Spring Residency HOTEL $$
(📞 9733121105; bluespring64@gmail.com; Main Bazaar; d from ₹1600) A better choice than most of Ravangla's boxy hotels, this spiffy place has 20 rooms on three floors, many of which have mountain views. Book early and you could get a discount on quoted tariffs.

Mt Narsing Resort RESORT $$
(📞 8145294900; www.mtnarsingresorts.com; Kewzing Rd; d lower resort from ₹1450, upper annex from ₹2750) This charming property occupies a gladelike roadside plot 5km southwest of Ravangla. The lower bungalow is cheaper, but the ambience and views are far better at the upper annex, which boasts cottage-style rooms with wooden interiors. There's good food and fine views over the lawn towards the summits of Narsing and Pandim. A taxi to the lower/upper resort costs ₹150/300.

Kookay Restaurant TIBETAN $
(Main Bazaar; mains ₹80-120; ☺ 7am-8pm) A cheerful eatery perpetually packed with happy diners, this clean restaurant is easily the best in town. The menu includes a wide range of Tibetan delicacies, rice and curry sets, and Chinese staples. Slurp down a steaming bowl of noodle soup or beef mos, and leave a note of appreciation on the 'We Were Here' noticeboards lining the walls.

📍 Getting There & Away

Travel agents on the main highway book shared jeeps to Gangtok (₹120, 7am to noon) and Siliguri (₹190, 7am to 8am). For Yuksom, change at Geyzing (₹100, 9am). Jeeps to Namchi (₹50) and Legship (₹50) leave periodically from near Hotel 10Zing in the centre of town.

The SNT bus booking office is part of Hotel 10Zing. Morning buses run to Namchi (₹45, one hour, 9am) and Siliguri (₹190, five hours, 6.30am).

Around Ravangla

Beside the main Legship road, 5.5km from central Ravangla, the small but fascinating Yungdrung Kundraking is the only Bon monastery in Sikkim. Animistic in nature, Bon preceded Buddhism in Tibet but has since been largely subsumed by it. The deities look slightly different and prayer wheels are turned anticlockwise. Flash photography is prohibited within. You can get here from Ravangla on a b Kewzing-bound shared jeep (₹20). Friendly monks will be happy to brief you on Bon while you're exploring the monastery.

Back in Ravangla, a steep four-hour hiking trail leads from above Tathagata Tsal to the top of Maenam Hill (3150m). En route, you'll pass the springtime rhododendrons and magnolia blooms of the Maenam Wildlife Sanctuary. From the summit, continue 2km to Bhaledunga rock, where you can enjoy sweeping views and a chance encounter with red pandas and monal pheasants (Sikkim's state bird). Hire a guide (₹600) at the forestry check post to avoid getting lost.

Ralang

At Ralang, 13km below Ravangla, the splendid 1995 Palchen Choeling Monastic Institute (New Ralang Gumpa) is home to about 200 Kagyu-order monks. Arrive early morning or around 3pm to hear them chanting in mesmerising unison. There's a 9m-high golden statue of the historical Buddha in the main hall, and the gumpa is famous for elaborate butter sculptures. Peek into the side room to see the amazing effigies used in November's impressive Mahakala dance held in the monastery's expansive courtyard.

About 1.5km downhill on the same road is the peaceful (and still active) Old Ralang Gumpa, established in 1768 and definitely worth a hike from the new monastery. A chartered taxi to Ralang costs around ₹600 return from Ravangla with two hours' wait.

Temi

Located 16km south of Ravangla, the jade-green estate of Temi is as famous for its fine-quality tea and its gorgeous mountain scenery. The only tea garden in Sikkim, it drapes some 180 hectares of hill slopes that are fronted by a stupendous hill-lined horizon, towered over by the Khangchendzonga massif.

Accommodation is available at the stylish Cherry Resort (☎8016488737; www.cherryresort.com; Temi Tea Estate; s/d incl breakfast from ₹2900/3400), a government-run property slap-bang in the middle of the plantations overlooking the Teesta valley far below. The spacious rooms have fantastic patios and a terrace with magnificent views of summits and the plantations. The food is unimaginative but delicious, and there's great tea to go with your meals and snacks.

Shared jeeps from Ravangla (₹50, 30 minutes) bound for Siliguri via Damthang and Rangpo can drop you at the resort.

WEST SIKKIM

Towered over by the sublime Khangchendzonga, West Sikkim's breathtaking landscape is strung out along formidable mountain ridges draped in evergreen alpine forests. A handful of intriguing monasteries, villages and waterfalls add to its overall appeal, and make it an ideal spot for footloose hiking. The fabulous Goecha La trek, which takes hikers to the icy base of Khangchendzonga, begins in the village of Yuksom (which is also the trailhead for some pleasant day hikes). Comfort seekers, on the other hand, can simply settle for stupendous mountain views from Pelling.

Geyzing & Tikjuk

☎03595 / POP 1100

Located 6km from Pelling, Tikjuk is the District Administrative Centre for West Sikkim. Permits can be extended at the Superintendent of Police office (Side wing, 3rd fl; ☎10am-4pm Mon-Sat, closed 2nd Sat of month). Geyzing, its contiguous twin, is most useful as West Sikkim's transport hub. Frequent shared jeeps go to Jorethang (₹90, 1½ hours), Pelling (₹20, 20 minutes), Tashiding (₹70, 1½ hours) and Yuksom (₹100, 2½ hours). Several serve Gangtok (₹190, seven to nine hours, 7am to 12.30pm), Ravangla (₹70, one hour, 9am and 11.45am) and Siliguri (₹200, four hours, 7am and 12.30pm).

Pelling

☎03595 / POP 3500 / ELEV 2085M

Pelling's raison d'être is its stride-stopping, jaw-dropping view of Khangchendzonga at dawn (weather permitting, that is). It's otherwise a fairly nondescript town, with a 2km stretch of boxed-out tourist hotels that line its main thoroughfare, frequented by hordes of local tourists through the year.

Pelling is nominally divided into Upper, Middle and Lower areas. A focal point of Upper Pelling is a small roundabout where the main road from Geyzing turns 360 degrees in front of Hotel Garuda. At the same point, minor roads branch south to Dentam and southwest to the tourist office and the helipad, which has magnificent panoramic views at dawn.

👉 Tours

Popular day tours (offered by most hotels and travel agencies) include Yuksom via Khecheopalri Lake and three waterfalls (₹3000 per jeep) or Khecheopalri Lake, Pemayangtse Gumpa and Rabdentse (₹2500 per jeep).

Hotel Garuda

SIGHTSEEING

☎03595-258319; Upper Pelling; tours per day per jeep from ₹1500) Half-day tours to Khecheopalri Lake cost ₹1500. Adding Pemayangtse and Rabdentse to the trip costs an extra ₹1000.

Simvo Tours & Travels

SIGHTSEEING
(☎) 9733076457; Upper Pelling; day tour per person/jeep ₹400/2500) This outfit offers guided and independent tours of local sights.

Sleeping

Most of Pelling's hotels are overpriced, drab and cater to midrange domestic tourists. Rates typically drop 30% (June to September) and are highly negotiable during low occupancy.

Hotel Garuda

HOTEL $
(☎) 9733076484; www.hotelgarudapelling.com; Main Rd, Upper Pelling; d from ₹850; @) This cheerful, old-school backpacker ghetto has clean, spacious rooms (all with hot showers and TV), a library with book-swap facilities, good Khangchendzonga views and a superb restaurant ideal for meeting other travellers. The pricier 'suites' upstairs have ethnic decor and Tibetan names such as Nima and Pema. The in-house travel agency organises customised sightseeing tours.

Hotel Rabdentse Residency

HOTEL $
(☎) 9681292163; www.saikripa.in; Main Rd, Lower Pelling; d from ₹1050) This clean and commercial place is largely patronised by domestic tourists, and stays mostly booked through the high season (March to May and October to November). Done up in smart colours and prim upholstery, the rooms are pleasant and well-appointed. It's on the lowermost fringes of Pelling, about 15 minutes on foot from the central part of town.

Hotel Phamrong

HOTEL $$
(☎) 9733085318; www.hotelphamrong.com; Main Rd, Upper Pelling; s/d incl breakfast from ₹2500/3100) This pretty hotel features stylish rooms with wicker and wood interiors that open out to a multilevel inner foyer adorned with Sikkimese artifacts and murals. Rooms become more gorgeous as you climb up the stairs, as do the mountain views. There's a decent in-house restaurant with a good vegetarian selection, and service is prompt and friendly.

Hotel Sonamchen

HOTEL $$
(☎) 03595-258346; www.hotelsonamchenpelling.com; Main Rd, Upper Pelling; d from ₹2800) A large place patronised by domestic tourists, this hotel has good mountain views from

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$
(☎) 03595-258272; www.norbughanghotels.com; Main Rd, Upper Pelling; d incl breakfast ₹4700; ☎) This charming property has pretty cottages dotting a lush hillside. Its rooms have been decorated with care and have traditional upholstery and polished wood flooring. The biggest draws are the giant glass-panelled windows with gorgeous Khangchendzonga views. The lawn has great vistas, perfect for an afternoon beer. The management is affable and service is excellent.

Elgin Mount Pandim

HERITAGE HOTEL $$$

(☎ 03595-250756; www.elginhotels.com; Pemayangtse; d incl half board ₹8800; @☎) Classy, self-indulgent and luxurious, this erstwhile royal residence is a 10-minute stroll from Pemayangtse Gompa. A stately lounge – stacked with fresh flowers, wicker and antiques – leads to indulgent, tranquil rooms, lined with the best creature comforts. Some rooms have gorgeous Khangchendzonga views; others have vistas of the Singalila Ridge to match.

The lawn at the rear of the hotel is a good place for breakfast or evening tea, and the pampered house dogs provide playful company if and when they're allowed to roam.

Eating

Pelling's best dining is in the hotels, and there are few standalone places.

Anjali Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $

(Middle Pelling; mains ₹80-120; ☎ 8am-9pm) The seating is grubby, the service laid-back, but the food is finger-licking good. The quasi-Chinese dishes woo the palate with a plethora of spicy flavours that are best smothered by a chilled beer, while the Sikkimese specials (advance orders only) such as sisnoo and ningro go well with a glass of chhang.

Melting Point

MULTICUISINE $$

(Middle Pelling; mains ₹100-150; ☎ 8am-9pm) Pelling's paltry equivalent to a fine-dining restaurant, this eatery has a cosy lounge and an adjoining alfresco terrace to the rear, with superb mountain views. The menu features wholesome Chinese, Indian and Western staples (the penne in mushroom sauce won't disappoint), and service is prompt. Early evenings are a quiet time to finish dinner, before the crowds file in.

Information*Paylink Cyber Zone (Main Rd; per hour ₹30;

SBI ATM (Main Rd) Opposite Hotel Garuda.Tourist office (☎ 7797887401; Main Rd; ☎ 10am-4pm Mon-Sat) The helpful tourist office can be found past the Middle Pelling roundabout, on the way to the helipad.

Getting There & Away

SNT buses run to Siliguri (₹190, five hours, 7am) via Jorethang (₹70, 2½ hours); book at the SNT counter (Hotel Pelling) in Lower Pelling from where the buses depart.

Father Tours (☎ 9733286872; Upper Pelling) runs shared jeeps at 7am for Gangtok (₹200, five hours) and Siliguri (₹200, 4½ hours).

Shared jeeps to Geyzing (₹20, 20 minutes) leave frequently from near the Hotel Garuda, passing close to Pemayangtse, Rabdentse and Tikjuk district administrative centre. For Khecheopalri Lake (₹70) or Yuksom (₹90), jeeps start from Geyzing, passing through Pelling between noon and 1pm.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK*THE RHODODENDRON TRAIL

In the far southwest corner of Sikkim, close to the India–Nepal border, lies the Varsey Rhododendron Sanctuary, known to be the native habitat of more than 500 species of rhododendrons. Well off the tourist route, this exotic forest (at an altitude of about 3000m) can be accessed by a two-hour trek through enchanted pine forests from the village of Hilley, about 28km from Pelling. Hemmed by the Singalila Ridge, the forest bursts in a riot of colours in April and May. A few basic lodges provide overnight accommodation in the sanctuary – contact Sikkim Tourism Development Corporation (p546) for details.

Around Pelling*Pemayangtse Gompa

Literally translated as 'Perfect Sublime Lotus', the 1705 Pemayangtse Gompa (admission ₹20; ☎ 7am-5pm) is one of Sikkim's oldest and most significant Nyingmapa gompas. Magnificently set on a hilltop (2100m) overlooking the Rabdentse ruins, the atmospheric compound is ringed by gardens and traditional cottages used by resident monks. The ground floor features a central Buddha, while on the 1st floor, fierce-looking statues depict all eight reincarnations of Padmasambhava. On the top floor is an astounding seven-tiered model representing Padmasambhava's heavenly abode of Zangtok Palri, handmade over five laborious years by a single dedicated lama.

During February and March, impressive chaam dances celebrating Losar (p542) culminate with the unfurling of a huge gyoku (giant embroidered thangka) and the zapping of evil demons with a great fireball.

Pemayangtse is 1.5km from Upper Pelling, along the road to Geyzing, and is easily combined with a visit to Rabdentse. The signposted turn-off is near an obvious stupa.

If you are walking to or from Pemayangtse, pop into the self-service Lotus Bakery (Geyzing Rd; cakes ₹25-30; ☀ 8am-5pm), about 20 minutes from town, for a restorative slice of carrot or banana cake. All money raised goes to the nearby Denjog Pema Choling Academy, which works with underprivileged children.

Rabdentse

Rabdentse (☀ dawn-dusk) FREE was the royal capital of Sikkim from 1670 to 1814. It is now in ruins and consists only of chunky wall-stubs with a few inset inscription stones. The selling point of the site, however, is the utterly fabulous viewpoint on which the ruins are located. The entrance is around 3km from Upper Pelling, along the road to Geyzing. The ruins are a 10-minute walk from the site's yellow gateway – beware of leeches in the undergrowth.

The Monastery Loop

The picturesque western frontiers of Sikkim can technically be enjoyed on a day-long or overnight jeep tour from Pelling. Time permitting, however, you can do an adventurous three-day trip from Pelling to Tashiding via Khecheopalri Lake, using a combination of jeeps and hiking. Alternatively, consider an outing to wonderful Yuksom via Khecheopalri Lake, and a subsequent multiday high-altitude trek that takes you up close and personal with Khangchendzonga.

Pelling to Yuksom

Apart from dipping your toes in the cascading waters of the Rimbi, Khangchendzonga and Phamrong Falls, the only major sight on this stretch is the hallowed Khecheopalri Lake (admission ₹10; ☀ dawn-dusk). Located at 1950m, this placid natural reservoir – pronounced 'ketchup-perry' – is highly revered by both Sikkimese Buddhists and Lepcha animists who believe its shape to be akin to the footprint of the goddess Tara. Legend also has it that birds assiduously remove any leaves from its surface, keeping it clean through the year.

During the springtime festival Khecheopalri Mela (☀ Mar/Apr), butter lamps are floated out across the lake. Prayer wheels line the lake's jetty, backed by fluttering prayer flags and Tibetan inscriptions, but the setting, ringed with forested hills, is serene rather than dramatic.

Day jeep tours typically drop you at a car park five minutes from the lake, allowing you 30 minutes of sightseeing time. The best way to appreciate the site, however, is to stay overnight and visit once the tourists have left.

Around the car park is a Buddhist nunnery, a couple of shops and the simple Jigme Restaurant (snacks ₹50), serving tea and chow mein. From the car park, a path to the left leads uphill for 20 minutes to Khecheopalri Gompa and stupa, from where you can hike up to several viewpoints.

Just beside the gompa and overseen by a local lama is Pala's Guest House (☎ 9832471253; per person incl 3 meals ₹600), with more rooms available at the next-door annex. On the main approach to the car park, Teng Hang Limboo operates a basic homestay at the Family Guest House (☎ 9609874677; per person ₹400).

Shared jeeps to Pelling (₹60, two hours) leave the car park at 6am, or you could hitch a ride on a reserved tourist jeep returning to Pelling.

A hiking trail to Yuksom (9km, three to five hours) leaves the road just opposite Family Guest House, descending steeply to the main road (take the right branch after crossing the Runom Khola River) and emerging near Khangchendzonga Falls. After the road suspension bridge, follow the concrete steps uphill to meet the Yuksom road, about 2km below Yuksom village.

Yuksom

☎ 03595 / POP 1850 / ELEV 1780M

Loveable little Yuksom is historic, charming and unspoilt, although concretisation is fast taking over (the latest addition is an enclosed complex studded with gigantic prayer wheels along the settlement's main drag). Yuksom is the main trailhead for the treks towards Mt Khangchendzonga, and is a good place to kick back for a few quiet nights.

Sights

Norbugang Park

HISTORIC SITE

(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE Yuksom means 'meeting place of the three lamas', referring to the trio of Tibetan holy men who crowned the first chogyal of Sikkim at this historic site in 1641. The charming complex contains a small temple, a huge prayer wheel, a chorten and the supposedly original Coronation Throne (Norbugang), from which it takes its current name.

Standing beneath a vast cryptomeria pine, the site looks something like an ancient Olympic podium hewn out of stone. Just in front is a spooky footprint fused into stone, believed to be that of one of the crowning lamas.

Dubdi Gompa

MONASTERY

(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE High on the ridge above Yuksom, this atmospheric gompa (its name means 'hermit's cell') is set in beautifully tended gardens behind three coarsely hewn stupas. Established in 1701, it is said to be Sikkim's oldest monastery, though the current chapel looks much newer.

Start the steep 40-minute climb from upper Yuksom's primary health centre; the clear path rises through thickets of trumpet lilies and some lovely mature forest.

Kathok Wodsallin Gompa

MONASTERY

(☀️ dawn-dusk) FREE This newly constructed gompa opposite Hotel Tashi Gang has an impressively stern statue of Guru Padmasambhava surrounded by a collection of yogis, gurus and lamas in glass-fronted compartments. The coloured motifs on the walls provide a few striking photo ops.

Activities

Several trekking agencies in Yuksom can organise a Khangchendzonga trek given a couple of days. Prices start at around US$60 per person per day assuming a group of four.

Sleeping & Eating

Tourist traffic is heavy during peak trekking seasons (March to May and October to November), so book early.

Hotel Yangri Gang

HOTEL $

(☎️ 9434164408; Main Rd; s/d from ₹500/800; @) The better rooms at this functional hotel at the head of Yuksom's main street are on the upper floors. Beds are comfy, the wooden half-panelling is pleasant to the eye and there are hot showers through the day. Thanks to its in-house trekking agency, it's a good upper-budget option favoured by trekkers to start and end their treks.

WORTH A TRIP

YUKSOM TO TASHIDING HIKE

This wonderful one-day hike requires no permits and can be done quite easily if you start in Yuksom. Figure on six hours of walking (19km), plus another two hours visiting the monasteries. Porter-guides are available in Yuksom for around ₹600.

Start by ascending to Dubdi Gompa, from where a path dips into a side valley for 40 minutes to Tsong. The trail splits here; take the upper trail leading uphill past cardamom fields to lonely Hongri Gompa, a small, unusually unpainted ancient monastery on a beautiful ridge. Local folklore claims the gompa was moved here from a higher spot where monks were being ravaged by yeti.

A signpost points the way downhill for 20 minutes to Nessa hamlet, 10 minutes below which is the village of Pokhari Dara (four hours from Yuksom). Follow the road until a footpath branches towards Sinon Gompa (built 1716). From here the stepped path drops steeply behind the yellow monastic school, following village trails down to Tashiding.

THE FARMHOUSE CIRCUIT

A bucolic expanse of unspoilt sylvan beauty, the surrounds of Rinchenpong village in West Sikkim is home to a number of plush farmhouses that offer a luxurious stay amid pristine forests, orchards and farmlands, with copious mountain views all around. An hour's drive from Pelling, the area is slowly attracting leisure seekers who wish to give urban chaos the slip and enjoy nature's charms for a few days. Biksthang (☎ 9593779077; www.biksthang.com; Mangalbarey Village; s/d incl half board ₹4350/6150; 🍷), an utterly beautiful farmhouse built around a 19th-century family estate, boasts ultrasnug cottages with lavish interiors and superb home-cooked Sikkimese food. Yangsum Heritage Farm (☎ 9434179029; www.yangsumheritagefarm.com; Rinchenpong; d incl full board ₹5100), another popular hideaway, scores with its air of quaintness, expansive plantations and cottages that come with incremental degrees of comfort and luxury. Both farms can organise transport from Siliguri, Gangtok or Pelling upon advance request.

Hotel Demazong

HOTEL $

(☎ 9775473687; Main Rd; dm ₹150, d from ₹500) Used by domestic trekking groups, this place has simple but clean rooms behind its boxy facade. The more expensive rooms have balconies. Don't expect much in terms of service though, and if a quiet stay is what you're looking for, you may have to stop elsewhere.

Hotel Tashi Gang

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9733077249; hoteltashigang@gmail.com; Main Rd; s/d from ₹1500/2000) Done up in rich Sikkimese motifs and colourful thangkas, the rooms at this popular hotel offer unbelievable value for money and, as a result, are mostly booked out. There's good food at the in-house restaurant, and the rooms out front have balconies opening in the direction of Khangchendzonga. There's a patch of front lawn hemmed by flowering plants.

Yuksum Residency

HOTEL $$

(☎ 9933133330; www.yuksumresidency.com; Main Rd; s/d from ₹2700/3200; 🍷) Very plush, stylish and comfortable by Yuksum's standards, this upscale hotel has large rooms with giant windows overlooking soothing greenery. It has a pleasant terrace which doubles as a dining area in the evenings. All in all, the perfect place for returning trekkers in need of a hot shower and creature comforts. Service, however, can be somewhat impersonal.

Tibet Restaurant

TIBETAN $

(Main Rd; mains ₹80-120; ☺ 6am-9pm) There's a great selection of Tibetan and Sikkimese fare at this busy and buzzy eatery on Yuksum's main drag. The signature dish, however, is the Bhutanese-style ema datse, featuring pork and vegetables stewed in a fiery chilli cheese sauce, best combined with steamed rice and chilled beer.

Gupta Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $

(Main Rd; mains ₹50-100; ☺ 5am-9pm) This al-fresco restaurant belts out curries, pizza, instant noodles, breakfast platters and dinner thalis for a steady stream of diners through the day. The sociable thatched cabana outside is good for a beer with fellow travellers.

i Getting There & Away

At around 6.30am, several shared jeeps leave for Jorethang (₹160, four hours) via Tashiding (₹60, 1½ hours), Geyzing via Pelling (₹90, 2½ hours) and Gangtok (₹250, six hours). Book the day before at the shop next to Gupta Restaurant or the hut opposite.

Dzongri & Goecha La – The Khangchendzonga Trek

For guided groups with permits, Yuksom is the starting point for Sikkim's classic seven- to 10-day trek to Goecha La, a 4940m pass with jaw-dropping views of Khangchendzonga.

Don't underestimate the rigours of the trek – it's considered one of the most challenging hikes in the Indian Himalaya. Don't climb too high too quickly: altitude sickness often strikes those who are fittest and fastest. Starting early makes sense, as rain is common in the afternoons, spoiling views and making trails annoyingly muddy. Check all your equipment before setting off – bring good-quality sleeping bags, torches (flashlights), some heavy woollens and rain gear. Also watch out for leeches in case you're trekking immediately after the monsoons; the local mosquito repellent Odomos does a good job at keeping the pesky creatures at bay.

Dzongri & Gocha La

0 10 km
0 6 miles

March to May is an ideal time to trek. Monsoon clouds move in by the end of May, rendering the mountains unwalkable. The clearest skies are from October to December, but remember that snow starts to block the trails with the advent of winter.

The route initially follows the Rathong Valley through unspoilt forests before steeply ascending to Baktim (Bakhim; 2750m) and the rustic Tibetan village of Tsokha (3050m), established in 1969 by Tibetan refugees. Spending two nights here helps with acclimatisation.

The next stage climbs to pleasant meadows around Dzongri (4020m). Consider another acclimatisation day here, best spent by strolling up to Dzongri La (4550m, four-hour round trip) for fabulous views of Mt Pandim (6691m).

From Dzongri, the trail drops steeply to Kokchurong and follows the river to Thangsing (3930m). Next day takes you to camping at Lamuni, 15 minutes before Samiti Lake (4200m). From here, a dawn assault the following morning takes you to the head-spinning Gocha La (4940m) for those incredible views of Khangchendzonga. A further viewpoint, another hour's walk ahead, offers even closer views.

The return is essentially by the same route. An alternative is to cut south at Dzongri and follow the Singalila Ridge for a week to Uttarey, from where there are connections to Pelling and Jorethang.

There are government-run trekkers' huts at Baktim, Tsokha, Dzongri, Kokchurong and Thangsing, but most have neither furniture nor mattresses, and can be crowded during peak trekking seasons. It's far better to bring all camping equipment and food.

Tashiding

ELEV 1490M

Little Tashiding is a single, sloping market street forking north off the Yuksom–Legship road. A 2.5km uphill track from the main junction leads to a car park from where a footpath leads up between an avenue of prayer flags to the atmospheric Nyingmapa-school Tashiding Gumpa (☺dawn-dusk) FREE. It is about 30 minutes' away via a steep 1km walk.

KHANGCHENDZONGA TREK SCHEDULE

STAGE	ROUTE	DURATION
1	Yuksom to Tsokha, via Baktim	6-7hr
2	Optional acclimatisation day at Tsokha	1 day
3	Tsokha to Dzongri	4-5hr
4	Acclimatisation day at Dzongri, or continue to Kokchurong	1 day
5	Dzongri (or Kokchurong) to Lamuni, via Thangsing	6-7hr
6	Lamuni to Gocha La, then down to Thangsing	8-9hr
7	Thangsing to Tsokha	6-7hr
8	Tsokha to Yuksom	5-6hr

Founded in 1641 by one of the three Yüksom crowning lamas, the monastery's five colourful religious buildings are strung out between more functional monks' quarters. Beautifully proportioned, the four-storey main prayer hall has a delicate filigree topknot, with wonderful views across the semiwildflower garden towards Ravangla. The Dalai Lama chose this magical spot for a two-day meditation retreat in 2010. Notice the cracks left in the marble flooring by the 2011 earthquake.

Beyond the last monastic building, an unusual compound contains dozens of white chortens, including the Thongwa Rangdol, said to absolve the sins of anyone who gazes upon it. More visually exciting is the golden Kench Chorgi Lorde stupa. Propped up all around are engraved stones bearing the Buddhist mantra om mani padme hum; at the back of the compound is the engraver's lean-to.

In February the monastery celebrates the Bunchu (p542) festival, when lamas gingerly open a sacred pot containing holy water and make important predictions by studying the level of water within.

There are a few scruffy lodges within Tashiding. The best beds, however, are at the government-run Yatri Niwas (☎9832623654; Main Rd; d ₹2000). An excellent midrange place by the turn-off to the monastery, it offers spacious rooms, lovely gardens and a good restaurant.

Shared jeeps to Gangtok (₹190, four hours) and Geyzing (₹80, 1½ hours) leave from the main junction between 6.30am and 8am. For Siliguri, take a jeep to Jorethang (₹90, two hours) and change. A few jeeps to Yüksom (₹60, one hour) pass through during early afternoon.

Why Go?

Thrown across the farthest reaches of India, obscured from the greater world by ageless forests and formidable mountain ranges, the Northeast States are one of Asia's last great natural and anthropological sanctuaries. Sharing borders with Bhutan, Tibet, Myanmar (Burma) and Bangladesh, these remote frontiers are a region of rugged beauty, and a collision zone of tribal cultures, climates, landscapes and peoples. In this wonderland for adventurers, glacial Himalayan rivers spill onto Assam's vast floodplains, faith moves mountains on the perilous pilgrimage to Tawang, rhinos graze in Kaziranga's swampy grasslands and former head-hunters slowly embrace modernity in their ancestral longhouses in Nagaland.

Of course, it's not all smooth sailing, with a horde of obstacles to battle along the way (bad roads, poor infrastructure and rebel armies, to name a few). In other words, only those with a taste for raw adventure need apply.

When to Go

Assam (Guwahati)

Mar The best season for rhino spotting in Kaziranga.

Oct A time for dazzling Himalayan vistas and trips to remote outposts.

Dec Fierce Naga warriors in ethnic regalia assemble for Kohima's Hornbill Festival.

Northeast States Highlights

- 1 Riding atop an elephant in search of rhinos in Kaziranga National Park (p572)
- 2 Touching the clouds at the 4176m pass of Se La before descending to the valley of Tawang (p583), Arunachal Pradesh's Tibetan Buddhist hotspot
- 3 Visiting the scenic villages around Ziro (p579), where you can meet the intriguing Apatani tribe and learn about their unique way of life
- 4 Gazing down on the plains of Bangladesh from the lofty escarpment around Cherrapunjee (p597)

ASSAM

Sprawled lazily like a prehistoric leviathan along the length of the Brahmaputra valley, Assam (also known as Ahom) is the biggest and most accessible of the Northeast States. A hospitable population, a cuisine with its own distinctive aromas and flavours, a vibrant artistic heritage marked by exotic dance forms, and a string of elegant Hindu temples top its list of innumerable attractions, and no permits are required. The archetypal Assamese landscape is a picturesque golden-green vista of jigsaw-like rice fields and manicured tea estates, framed in the distance by the blue mountains of Arunachal in the north and the highlands of Meghalaya and Nagaland to the south.

Despite certain linguistic and cultural overlaps with people in neighbouring West Bengal and Orissa, Assam is proudly sovereign about its identity. The gamosa (a red-and-white scarf worn around the neck by men) and the mekhola sador (the traditional dress for women) are visible proclamations of regional costume and identity, while the subtly flavoured fish tenga (sour curry) is distinctly different from its other regional culinary cousins.

Guwahati

📍 0361 / POP 809,500

The gateway to the northeast and the largest and most cosmopolitan city in the region, Guwahati serves as the starting block for most Northeast itineraries. It's a somewhat featureless city – a prosaic heap of glass and concrete for the most part – but there are a scattering of interesting temples to explore. Walk its back alleys and old quarters, however, and you will be able to salvage a generous amount of local flavour that lingers amid its suburban sprawl of ponds, palm trees, small single-storey traditional houses and old colonial-era mansions.

History

Guwahati is considered the site of Pragjyotishpura, a semi-mythical town founded by Asura King Naraka (son of an avatar of Vishnu who later transformed into a demon), later killed by Krishna for a pair of magical earrings. The city was a vibrant cultural centre well before the Ahoms arrived from Southeast Asia around the 13th century, and it was subsequently the theatre of intense Ahom–Mughal strife, changing hands eight times in 50 years before 1681. In 1897 a huge earthquake – followed by a series of devastating floods – wiped out most of the old city.

Dormant through much of India's colonial history, Guwahati gained metropolitan prominence after the formation of Assam state in the post-Independence era. Though technically not the state capital (the title goes to contiguous Dispur), Guwahati is, for all purpose and intent, Assam's numero uno city.

👁 Sights

Apart from the major sights, there are a handful of interesting temples dotted around Guwahati, including the Umananda Mandir, a temple complex that sits on the forested Peacock Island, accessible by boat from Kachari Ghat; the Jain Mandir (off MS Rd), patronised by local followers of Jainism; and the quaint Nepali Mandir (Rehabari Rd), consecrated to Krishna, located just out of the town centre by the Bharalu River.

Kamakhya Mandir

HINDU TEMPLE

(admission for no queue/short queue/queue ₹500/100/free; ☀ 8am–1pm & 3pm–dusk) According to Hindu legend, when an enraged Shiva dismembered his deceased wife Sati's body into 108 pieces and scattered them across the land, her yoni (vagina) fell on Kamakhya Hill. This makes Kamakhya Mandir one of the most hallowed shrines for practitioners of shakti (tantric worship of female spiritual power). Goats are ritually beheaded here as offerings to the goddess in a gory pavilion and the hot, dark inner womb-like sanctum is painted red to signify sacrificial blood. It is here that the Ambubachi Mela takes place.

Kamakhya is 7km west of central Guwahati and 3km up a spiralling side road. Occasional buses from Guwahati's Kachari bus stand run all the way up (₹20, 30 minutes).

Assam State Museum

MUSEUM

(Gopi Nath Bordoloi Rd; admission ₹5, camera/video ₹10/100; ☀️ 10am-5pm Wed-Mon, to 4pm winter) Housed in an imposing colonial-era building, this museum has a large sculpture collection, with the upper floors being devoted to informative tribal culture displays. In the anthropological galleries, you can walk through reconstructed tribal homes that give a glimpse into everyday rural life. Time permitting, it's worth a visit.

Old Guwahati

AREA

This quaint area of Guwahati, bordering the Brahmaputra River, is best explored on foot. Walk past the beehive dome of the Courthouse (MG Rd), which rises above attractive Dighulipukhuri Park (HB Rd; admission ₹10; ☀️ 9.30am-8pm), with its large tank full of colourful boats (per person ₹20). The nearby Guwahati Planetarium (MG Rd; shows ₹20; ☀️ noon & 4pm, closed 1st & 15th of the month) looks somewhere between a mosque and a landed UFO and offers entertainment in the form of space shows projected on a dome-like screen. A short walk due northwest takes you to the riverbanks, where you can take in sweeping views of the Brahmaputra along a well-maintained promenade.

🌟 Festivals & Events*Ambubachi Mela

RELIGIOUS

(☀️ Jun/Jul) The huge Ambubachi Mela takes place at Kamakhya Mandir, celebrating the end of the mother goddess' menstrual cycle with animal sacrifice.

🛏 Sleeping*Prashaanti Tourist Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎️ 0361-2544475; Station Rd; s/d from ₹680/950; 🏠) This central hotel is convenient for the train station. A fancy elevator takes you up to your room, which is clean and tidy and might overlook an inviting (but out-of-bounds!) swimming pool to the rear. There are drinking water dispensers at the end of each corridor, some train noise to put up with, and no room service after 9pm.

Sundarban Guest House

HOTEL $

(☎️ 0361-2730722; Paltan Bazaar; s/dt/tr from ₹700/800/900; 🏠) Reminiscent of a classic backpacker hangout, this cheery and busy hotel sits in Guwahati's central market area and offers great value for those travelling on a budget. Rooms are typically featureless but clean and tidy with fresh sheets, and the management is helpful. The in-house restaurant offers a decent range of working-class dishes.

Eating

Beatrix

MULTICUISINE $

(MC Rd; dishes ₹80-120; ☎) noon-10pm) Beatrix has come a long way, from hangout for college students to an understated dining with accented lighting and red table linen. The food is a predictable mix of Indian, Chinese and regional dishes, but it's all piping hot and eminently tasty.

Paradise

ASSAMESE $$

(GNB Rd; mains ₹100-200; ☎) 10.30am-10.30pm) The lunch thali at Paradise is considered by many to be the archetypal Assamese spread, bringing together a wide range of local culinary flavours on one platter. Try the subtly flavoured fish tenga and you're bound to become a fan for life.

Khorika

NORTHEAST INDIAN $$

(☎) 9706034838; GS Rd; mains ₹100-180; ☎) noon-11pm) Named after the Assamese khorika (barbecued dishes), this restaurant serves a superb selection of regional dishes in upscale air-conditioned comfort. Try barbecued small fish or fried pigeon meat, or go for the delicious pork with sesame seeds.

★ Maihang

NORTHEAST INDIAN $$

(☎) 9854373978; GS Rd; mains ₹150-170; ☎) noon-3pm & 7-10.30pm) A whiff of exotic aromas serenade your olfactory the moment you walk into this smart restaurant. A range of regional dishes are on offer here, ranging from pork with fermented bamboo shoots, wild herb or akhoni (fermented soybeans), fish khorika, chicken with sesame seeds, and duck in sesame gravy.

Tandoori

NORTH INDIAN $$

(☎) 0361-2516021; Dynasty Hotel, SS Rd; mains ₹200-300; ☎) noon-3pm & 7-11pm) Inside the stately Dynasty Hotel on Sir Shahdullah (SS) Rd, this stylish restaurant has tasty North Indian dishes, served by waiters in Mughal uniforms with gentle Indian music playing in the background. It's a somewhat upscale affair, so dress for the occasion.

Drinking & Nightlife

Café Coffee Day

CAFE

(Taybullah Rd; coffee ₹50-90; ☎) 10am-10pm) Guwahati's central coffee shop, pumping out contemporary music, attracts the city's students and nouveau riche youth with lattes and macchiatos. Some tasty snacks are on offer to go with your cuppa.

Trafik

BAR

(GNB Rd; beer ₹130; ☎) 11am-10pm; (☎) Dim and buzzy, this popular bar is a hit with the city's office workers and, true to its name, attracts heavy traffic after sundown. There's a vast TV screen for cricket matches and Bollywood music, and a tiny platform where live bands play local hits on the weekend.

Shopping

Artfed

Four daily trains connect Guwahati to Delhi; the 12423 Dibrugarh Rajdhani Express (3AC/2AC ₹2635/3660, 27 hours, 5.55am) is the fastest and most comfortable. The best daily train to Kolkata (Howrah) is the 12346 Saraighat Express (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹500/1305/1870, 16½ hours, 12.35pm). If travelling to Darjeeling and Sikkim, get off at New Jalpaiguri (sleeper/3AC/2AC ₹295/760/1065, 6½ hours).

Several trains also serve Dimapur (chair/sleeper/3AC ₹90/180/485, four to six hours), Jorhat (chair/sleeper/3AC ₹125/235/635, eight to 11 hours) and Dibrugarh (3AC/2AC ₹165/315/850, 10 to 14 hours).

i Getting Around

Getting into town from Guwahati's orderly Lokpriya Gopinath Bordoloi International Airport (23km) costs ₹500/150/100 for a taxi/shared taxi/airport bus. Shared taxis (per person/car ₹150/500) travel to the airport from outside the Hotel Mahalaxmi on Guwahati Shillong (GS) Rd. Autorickshaws charge ₹25 to ₹70 for short hops within the city. You could also dial in a time-efficient Green Cab (☎ 0361-7151515; www.7151515.com) and enjoy a comfortable ride at ₹15 per kilometre within town or to the airport.

Around Guwahati

Hajo

Some 30km northwest of Guwahati, the pleasant little town of Hajo attracts Hindu and Buddhist pilgrims to its five ancient temples topping assorted hillocks. Haigriv Madhav Temple is the main shrine, which is accessed by a long flight of steps through an ornate quasi-Mughal gateway. The images inside of Madhav, an avatar of Krishna, are believed to be 6000 years old. To get here, take local bus number 25 from the Adabari bus stand in Guwahati (₹60, one hour).

Pobitora Wildlife Sanctuary

Pobitora Wildlife Sanctuary WILDLIFE RESERVE (Indian/foreigner ₹50/500) Only 40km from northeast of Guwahati, this small wildlife sanctuary has a generous sprinkling of one-horned rhinoceros. Getting into the park involves a boat ride over the river boundary to the elephant-mounting station, from where you could embark on a one-hour trip atop an elephant, lumbering through boggy grasslands and stirring up petulant rhinos. The best way to get there is by taxi (return trip ₹1800).

Tezpur

☎ 03712 / POP 105,300

Little more than a utilitarian stopover for travellers journeying into Arunachal Pradesh or Upper Assam, Tezpur is a charming town with some beautifully kept parks, attractive lakes and enchanting views of the mighty Brahmaputra River as it laps the town's edge.

RIVER RIDES

To experience the innate beauty of Assam from a unique perspective (and all of it in style), consider signing up for a plush river cruise. Departing Guwahati on set dates between September and April, these multiday luxury rides take you upstream along the Brahmaputra River all the way to Dibrugarh, dropping anchor at essential hotspots such as Kaziranga National Park, Majuli Island and Sivasagar. Activities en route include wildlife tours, cultural excursions, or simply lazing on the sun-deck with a chiller in hand. Guwahati-based Assam Bengal Navigation (☎ 9207042330; www.assambengalnavigation.com; GNB Rd; per person per day all-inclusive from US$195) has all the information, and is recommended.

Sights

Chitralekha Udyan

PARK

(Cole Park; Jenkins Rd; admission ₹20, camera/video ₹20/100; ☀ 9am-7pm) Chitralekha Udyan has a U-shaped pond (paddle-boat hire per person ₹20) wrapped around pretty manicured lawns, dotted with fine ancient sculptures. From April to September, the park also contains bumper cars and water slides!

A block east, then south, stands Ganeshgarh Temple, which backs onto a ghat overlooking the surging river; a good place for Brahmaputra sunsets.

Agnigarh Hill

PARK

(Padma Park; admission ₹20, camera/video ₹20/100; ☀ 8.30am-7.30pm) Nearly 1km east along the narrow, winding riverside lane is Agnigarh Hill, which might have been the fire fortress site of Banasura (the demon son of the monkey god Bali). The park has peaceful greens and great vistas of the Brahmaputra River that flows nearby.

Sleeping

Prashaanti Tourist Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎ 03712-221016; touristlodgetezpur@gmail.com; Jenkins Rd; d/tr ₹850/950) Facing Chitralekha Udyan south of the bus station, this government-run hotel has been spruced up to cater to international budget travellers. Manned by staff who are extremely efficient and obliging by government standards, the place offers spacious, good-value rooms with clean attached bathrooms, fresh sheets and mosquito nets.

KF

HOTEL $$

(☎ 03712-255203; Mission Charali; s/d from ₹2400/3000; ♿ ♿) With slick, contemporary rooms, good customer service and plenty of attention to detail, this hotel – located about 3km north of the town centre – has lots going for it. There's an in-house restaurant, a coffee shop and, most importantly, a well-stuffed department store downstairs where you can stock up on essential commodities before venturing into remote areas.

Hotel Centre Point

HOTEL $$

(☎ 03712-232359; hotelcentrepoint.tez@gmail.com; Main Rd; d incl breakfast from ₹1650; ♿) Easily offering the best returns on investment, the smart, freshly painted rooms at this well-run, centrally located hotel feature flat-screen TVs, hot showers and polished wood floors, giving them a poor man's business hotel sort of feel. The in-house travel desk can organise local sightseeing trips as well as longer tours.

Eating & Drinking*Spring Valley

CAFETERIA $

(NC Rd; ☀ 7.30am-9pm) This incredibly busy and popular cafeteria serves hot, tasty all-day snacks and mini meals (the puris are simply scrumptious) through the day. The bakery section has a decent range of puffs, pastries and bread, while the upstairs restaurant comes alive during lunch and dinner.

Oasis

BAR

(Jonaki Cinema Rd; beers from ₹110; ☀ 11am-10pm) Chilled bottles of Kingfisher are served with a wide array of kebabs at this popular and friendly bar a short walk from Hotel Centre Point. It's adjacent to Jonaki Cinema, alongside a row of shops specialising in garments and handloom products.

Information

Cinex Computers (Santa Plaza, SC Rd; internet per hr ₹30; ☀ 10am-9pm)

HDFC Bank (Mission Charial; ☀ 10am-4pm Mon-Sat) Has an ATM.

Getting There & Away

Sumos booking counters are located on Jenkins Rd and run to Bomdila (₹350, eight hours) and Dirang (₹400, 10 hours) in Arunachal Pradesh and Tawang (₹700, 15 hours). Bargain for a private taxi on the same street for the Eco-Camp at Nameri National Park (₹2200) and Kaziranga National Park (₹2200). A little further on is the bus station (Jenkins Rd) with frequent services to Guwahati (₹160, five hours), Jorhat (₹160, four hours) and Kohora village (₹90, two hours) for Kaziranga.

Around Tezpur

Scenic Nameri National Park (Indian/foreigner admission ₹20/250, camera ₹50/500, video ₹500/1000; ☀ Nov-Apr) specialises in low-key, walk-in birdwatching treks. Around 374 bird species have been recorded in the park, including such rarities as the greater spotted eagle and the white-winged duck. Mammals include wild elephants, a few rarely seen tigers and the critically endangered dwarf hog. Park fees include the compulsory armed guard. Access is from Potasali, 2km off the Tezpur-Bhalukpong road.

Eco-Camp (☎ 03714-292644; ecocampnameri@gmail.com; dm/d ₹250/1800) organises park visits, including two-hour birdwatching rafting trips (two people Indian/foreigner ₹1500/2000). Accommodation is in 'tents', but colourful fabrics, private bathrooms, sturdy beds and thatched-roof shelters make the experience relatively luxurious. The camp is set within lush gardens full of tweeting birds and butterflies drunk on tropical nectar.

Wild Mahseer (☎ 03714-234354; www.wildmahseer.com; d incl meals from ₹8500; ♿), located amid rolling tea gardens about 5km from Balipara and 30km northeast of Tezpur, offers a luxurious stay in its four superbly renovated planter's bungalows set on a picturesque 22-acre campus canopied with evergreen trees. For a particularly memorable experience, consider spending a night in the Heritage Bungalow, a stately 100-year-old building that carefully preserves a slice of high life from its bygone era. To get to the estate, turn right from Balipara crossing and take the village road going left after the bridge over the Bhorelli River.

The park consists of western, central and eastern ranges, the central range doubling as the venue for popular early-morning elephant safaris. Lasting an hour each, these rides offer unparalleled opportunities to get close to rhinos, which don't seem phased by the elephants, even when surrounded by several safari groups. Safaris can be arranged at the Kaziranga Tourist Complex or directly with your accommodation.

Sleeping & Eating

In season, booking ahead and paying in advance is recommended. Most midrange and top-end hotels sell 'Jungle Plan' packages, which include full-board accommodation, park fees, a morning elephant safari and an afternoon 4WD safari.

Tourist Complex

There are a number of budget and midrange options across the well-maintained Kaziranga Tourist Complex off the main road in Kohora village; all are within a short walk of the range office.

Aranya Tourist Lodge HOTEL $$
(☎ 03776-262429; d from ₹1250; 🍷) A somewhat characterless and boxy government operation masquerading as a forest getaway, this garden-fronted hotel features clean rooms, prompt service, decent food and a well-stocked bar. It's popular with large groups, so expect some noisy company.

Jupuri Ghar RESORT $$
(☎ 9435196377, 0361-2605335; www.jupurigharkaziranga.com; d incl breakfast ₹3200; 🍷) A holiday atmosphere adds to the appeal of this pretty property, comprising traditional-style cabins set around pleasant, mature gardens in a tranquil setting. It's well managed and has an open-air restaurant where you can compare your elephant safari notes with other guests over the complimentary breakfast.

Beyond the Complex

Wild Grass Resort RESORT $$
(☎ 03776-262085, 9954416945; wildgrasskaziranga@gmail.com; d incl breakfast ₹2450) This slightly ramshackle yet cheerful resort is so popular that it doesn't bother with a sign – it carefully labels all the trees instead! Colonial-era decor makes you feel the clock has slowed. Tasty Indian food is served in the dining room. The affable, bearded proprietor is a fount of local information. In season, bookings are absolutely essential. The resort is located about 10km to the east of Kohora.

Bonhabi Resort RESORT $$
(☎ 03776-262675; www.bonhabiresort.com; d from ₹1610; 🍷) A short way east of the tourist complex, this quiet, friendly place consists of an old villa with a colonial-era look and feel, plus a series of comfortable cottages set around gorgeous gardens. #### TEA GETAWAYS

No visit to Upper Assam is complete without a lavish night or two in a heritage tea-estate bungalow, of which there are many in the region. For a memorable experience, try the antique crammed Banyan Grove (☎ 033-22657389; www.heritagetourismindia.com; s/d incl full board ₹5600/6500; 🍷🍷) or the quaint colonial-era Thengal Manor (☎ 033-22657389; www.heritagetourismindia.com; Jalukanburi; s/d incl full board ₹4000/6500; 🍷), both a short drive out of Jorhat. In Dibrugarh, the best place to enjoy a planter-style cuppa is the Mancotta Heritage Chang Bungalow (☎ 0373-2301120; purvi@sancharnet.in; Mancotta Rd, Dibrugarh; d incl meals from ₹8300; 🍷🍷), which also arranges tea tours and river cruises on request. Accommodation here is in a charming planter's bungalow fronted by grassy lawns. The patio, the 1st-floor balcony and the reading room make for exceptional places to while away leisure time, and the dining hall has an impressive collection of 19th-century sketches and prints with a predominantly equestrian theme.

SATRAS

A satra is a monastery for Vishnu worship. Assam's distinctive form of everyman Hinduism. Formulated by 15th-century Assamese philosopher Sankardev, the faith eschews the caste system and idol worship, focusing on Vishnu as God, especially in his Krishna incarnation. Much of the worship is based around dance and melodramatic play-acting of scenes from the holy Bhagavad Gita. The heart of any satra is its namghar (a large, simple, prayer hall), housing an eternal flame, the Gita and possibly a horde of instructive (but not divine) images. Traditionally, satras have also patronised the elegantly choreographed Satriya dance form and the folk-performing-arts tradition of Ankiya Bhawna, in which masked dancers play out tales from Hindu mythology. To purchase traditional dance masks (₹300 to ₹2000) as souvenirs, visit Samaguri Satra, a 15-minute drive from Garamur on Majuli Island.

priciest!) place to stay in the Kaziranga region, this fantastic resort combines fine luxuries with a rustic look and an ethno-chic theme. The bamboo cottages lining the Diphlu River boast soft beds, rain showers in stylish bathrooms, and pleasant sit-outs from where lucky guests might spot rhinos grazing the grasslands. Oh, and the food is delicious.

There's no marker: if you're travelling from Guwahati, look for the dirt track on the left after the Bagori police outpost, leading to a gate with a signage saying 'private property'. Boo Moni, the in-house forest guide, is a trove of local information.

Iora

RESORT $$$

(The Retreat; ☎ 9957193350; www.ioraholidays.com; s/d incl breakfast from ₹3850/4250; 🍷 @ 🍴 🍷) Somewhat formal and oversized for a place like Kaziranga, this sprawling property has excellently maintained rooms (42 in all) featuring tasteful decor, modern amenities and efficient service. The swimming pool is a big draw for kids, while adults can spend a lazy afternoon indulging in a range of therapies at the in-house spa.

i Information

The forest administration offices are clubbed together in the Kaziranga Tourist Complex (marked by an obvious Rhino Gate) about 800m south of Kohora village. Here you'll find the range office (☎ 03776-262428; 🕒 24hr), elephant-ride booking office (rides incl park admission Indian/foreigner ₹550/1550; 🕒 5-7pm, book the previous night) and 4WD rental stand (per vehicle incl toll fee western/central/eastern ranges ₹1600/1500/2000). Pay your fees at the range office before entering the park, 2km north.

An armed guard accompanies all vehicles (and some elephants) entering the park. A ₹50 tip for mahouts, drivers and guards is customary.

i Getting There & Away

Buses travel from Kohora village to Guwahati (₹350, five hours, hourly 7.30am to 4.30pm), Dibrugarh (₹320, four hours) and Tezpur (₹90, two hours).

Jorhat

☎ 0376 / POP 137,800

Apart from being the access point for Majuli Island, bustling Jorhat has little on offer for travellers. Gar Ali, the town's commercial street, meets the main AT Road (NH37) in front of a lively central market. AT Rd has an ATM and the Netizen Cyberspace (internet per hr ₹30; 🕒 10am-8pm).

Conveniently tucked behind the Assam State Transport Corporation (ASTC) bus station, Solicitor Rd has a bunch of reasonable hotels. The best of the bunch is Hotel Paradise (☎ 0376-2321521; paradisejorhat@gmail.com; Solicitor Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹600/850; 🍷 🍴 🍷), with well-kept interiors, chequered blankets, friendly service, deep-fried snacks and free wi-fi. Hotel Heritage (☎ 0376-2301839; heritagejorhat2009@yahoo.in; Solicitor Rd; d from ₹1000; 🍷) has well-maintained rooms, obliging staff and an old-fashioned character, while New Park (☎ 0376-2300721; hotelnewparkjorhat@gmail.com; Solicitor Rd; s/d from ₹950/1050; 🍷) is a smart establishment with tidy, breezy rooms, hot showers and lots of daylight.

The ASTC bus station (AT Rd) has frequent services to Sivasagar (₹70, 1½ hours), Tezpur (₹170, four hours), and Guwahati (₹380, eight hours, eight buses 6am to noon), passing Kaziranga en route.

The Jorhat train station is in the heart of town, about 500m to the south of AT Rd along Gar Ali. The 12068 Jan Shatabdi Express (AC Chair ₹580, 6¼ hours, 2.10pm Monday to Saturday) is the most convenient of the three trains to Guwahati.

The windswept sandbank of Nimatighat in Jorhat, pockmarked with chai shacks, is the departure point for overcrowded ferries to Majuli Island (adult/4WD ₹20/600, 1½ hours, 8.30am, 10.30am, 1.30pm and 3pm). It's a 12km ride from Jorhat by bus (₹30, 40 minutes).

Majuli Island

📍 03775 / POP 168,000

Beached amid the mighty Brahmaputra River's ever-shifting puzzle of ochre sandbanks is Majuli, which at around 452 sq km is India's largest river island. For a place continually ravaged by the primal forces of nature (much of the island disappears under water every monsoon), Majuli flaunts unparalleled scenic beauty. The island is a relaxed, shimmering mat of glowing rice fields and water meadows bursting with hyacinth blossoms.

Aside from enjoying the laid-back vibe, highlights of a visit include birdwatching (the island is home to nearly 100 species of birds) and learning about neo-Vaishnavite philosophy at Majuli's 22 ancient satras (Hindu Vaishnavite monasteries and centres for art). But don't waste time getting Majuli Island surveys indicate that at current levels of erosion the island will cease to exist within the next two decades.

The two main villages are Kamalabari, 3km from the ferry port, and Garamur, 5km further north. The most interesting, accessible satras are the large, beautifully peaceful Uttar Kamalabari (1km north, then 600m east of Kamalabari) and Auni Ati (5km west of Kamalabari), where monks are keen to show you their little museum (Indian/foreigner ₹10/50, camera/video ₹50/200; ☀️ 9.30-11am & 12-4pm) of Ahom royal artefacts. The best chances of observing chanting, dances or drama recitations are around dawn and dusk or during the big Ras Mahotsav Festival (☀️ Nov), in celebration of the birth, life and feats of Krishna.

Majuli Tourism (📍 9435657282; jyoti24365@gmail.com; full-day tour ₹500, bicycle hire per day ₹100), run by the friendly and knowledgeable Jyoti Narayan Sarma, conducts birdwatching tours and rents bicycles.

🛏 Sleeping & Eating

Some of the satras on Majuli Island have very basic guesthouses (per person ₹150). Remember to dress conservatively within the premises.

La Maison de Ananda

GUESTHOUSE $

(📍 9957186356; monjitrising@yahoo.in; r ₹500-800) In Garamur, this thatched guesthouse on bamboo stilts has rooms decked out in locally made fabrics, giving it a hippie-chic atmosphere; there's also one new concrete block that sticks out like a sore thumb. It's run by a friendly tribal family, and the kitchen serves up a delicious range of local Mishing dishes.

Ygdrasil Bamboo Cottage

GUESTHOUSE $

(📍 8876707326; bedamajuli@gmail.com; d/q ₹500/1200) En route from Kamalabari to Garamur, this stilted guesthouse perches on a marshy, avian-spotted lake. Listen to the chorus of a thousand cicadas before lolling off to sleep in a comfy bamboo bed in one of the spartan, traditionally furnished cottages (bring that insect repellent along!). Dinner (₹200) can be organised upon prior request.

Mepo Okum

GUESTHOUSE $$

(📍 9435203165; d ₹1500) A pretty complex of eight cottages thrown around a grassy lawn hemmed by seasonal blossoms, this place is mostly booked out by top-end international tour groups, and is clearly the best of Majuli's overnight options. A very tasty and pricy local meal (₹500) can be arranged upon prior request.

📍 Getting There & Away

Ferries (adult/vehicle ₹20/600, 1½ hours) leave Nimatighat in Jorhat for Majuli Island at 8.30am, 10.30am, 1.30pm and 3pm; return trips are at 7.30am, 8.30am, 1.30pm and 3pm. Departures depend on tidal conditions and season.

📍 Getting Around

Jam-packed buses/vans (₹20/30) meet arriving ferries at the pier then drive to Garamur via Kamalabari. For long stays, consider arranging a bicycle (₹100) through Majuli Tourism (p575).

Sivasagar

☎ 03772 / POP 53,800

Once the capital of the Ahom dynasty, sleepy Sivasagar (literally 'waters of Shiva') takes its name from the graceful central reservoir in the heart of town, commissioned by the Ahom Queen Ambika in 1734. Three typical Ahom temple towers rise proudly above the tank's partly wooded southern banks – to the west Devidol, to the east Vishnudol and in the centre, the 33m-high Shivadol Mandir.

Around 500m from Shivadol, a gaggle of hotels line AT Rd, the most appealing of which is the freshly renovated Hotel Shiva Palace (☎ 03772-222629; hotelshivapalace.1811@rediffmail.com; AT Rd; s/d from ₹900/1000; 🍷), incorporating a decent restaurant, the Sky Chef Restaurant (AT Rd; mains ₹160).

About 1.5km along Bhuban Gogoi (BG) Rd stands Hotel Siddhartha (☎ 03772-222276; e7safari@rediffmail.com; BG Rd; d ₹1100; 🍷), a sparkly place with a range of good-value rooms.

The ASTC bus station (cnr AT & Temple Rds) has frequent services to Jorhat (₹70, one hour), Dibrugarh (₹90, two hours), Tezpur (₹250, five hours) and Guwahati (₹410, eight hours, frequent from 7am).

For local sightseeing to Talatalghar and Karenghar, use a tempo (per tour ₹200). You'll find them at an unmarked stop about 300m up BG Rd from AT Rd.

Around Sivasagar

Rang Ghar & Talatalghar

The famous Ahom ruins of Sivasagar are located about 4km down AT Rd from Sivasagar. First up along your way is the elegant Rang Ghar (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ dawn-dusk), a two-storey oval-shaped pavilion from where Ahom monarchs once watched buffalo and elephant fights in an arena that's now been converted into a manicured garden.

Past Rang Ghar along AT Rd, a left turning passes the barrack-shaped Golaghar (Ahom ammunition store). Beyond are the ruins of Talatalghar (Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ dawn-dusk), an expansive, two-storey Ahom palace built by Ahom King Rajeswar Singha in the mid-18th century.

Karenghar

Karenghar

PALACE

(Indian/foreigner ₹5/100; ☀ dawn-dusk) Dramatic if largely unadorned, this 1752 brick palace is the last remnant of the Ahom's pre-Sivasagar capital. The unique four-storey structure rises like a sharpened, stepped pyramid above an attractive forest-and-paddy setting. It's about 15km along the Sivasagar–Sonari highway down a village road: turn left just before Gargaon.

Dibrugarh

☎ 0373 / POP 137,600

Cheerful and clement Dibrugarh, Assam's original tea city, usefully closes a loop between Kaziranga National Park and the Ziro–Along–Pasighat route in Arunachal Pradesh. It is also the terminus (or starting point) for the fascinating ferry ride along the Brahmaputra River to Pasighat.

Hotel Little Palace (☎ 0373-2328700; www.hotelpp.com; AT Rd; s/d from ₹800/950; 🍷🍷), on the edge of town, is anything but little. Its 48 rooms are well appointed with clean linen, and the views of the Brahmaputra from the verandah at the end of the corridor comes free. Hotel Rajawas (☎ 0373-2323307; www.hotelrajawas.com; AT Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹900/1100; 🍷🍷🍷) has 30 delightful rooms with modern amenities, and boasts the highly recommended Moti Mahal restaurant, with superb North Indian food (mains ₹160).

State Bank of India (Thana Chariali; ☀ 10am-2pm Mon-Fri, to noon Sat) cashes travellers cheques and foreign currency; there's also an SBI ATM in the main bus station complex. Cyber@Generation Next (HS Rd; internet per hr ₹30; ☀ 10am-9pm) is one of several internet cafes.

From Mohanbari airport, 16km north-east of Dibrugarh and 4km off the Tinsukia road, Air India and Jet Airways fly to Guwahati, Kolkata and Delhi, while IndiGo flies to Guwahati.

From the main bus station (Mancotta Rd), both ASTC and private buses depart for Sivasagar (₹90, two hours, frequent 6am to 9am), Jorhat (₹170, three hours, frequent 6am to 9am), Tezpur (₹390, six hours, hourly 6am to 6pm) and Guwahati (₹490, 10 hours, hourly 6am to 8am and 8pm to 10pm). There's also an AC Volvo service to Guwahati (₹690, eight hours, 9.45pm).

From the train station in the town centre, the overnight 12423 Dibrugarh Rajdhani Express leaves for Guwahati (3AC/2AC ₹1150/1560, 10 hours) at 8.35pm.

Rough-and-ready ferries (per person ₹60, vehicle ₹1000; ☀ hourly 9am to 3pm) cruise daily to Bogibil Ghat on the Arunachal side of the Brahmaputra River, where they are met by a bus to Pasighat in Arunachal Pradesh. Cheekily challenging the basic laws of floatation, the rickety steamboats carry two 4WDs, a few dozen motorcycles and an army of humans. There's little shelter and the journey takes around 1½ hours, so bring shades, water and sunscreen. Exact departure times depend on the Brahmaputra's water level. During the dry season, ferries cruise further upstream to Majer Ghat or Oiram Ghat, which can take up to five hours. Many hotels in Dibrugarh sell 4WD-ferry-4WD combination tickets (per person ₹300) for travel to Pasighat.

ARUNACHAL PRADESH

The final frontier of Indian tourism, virgin Arunachal Pradesh shows up as a giant patch of unexplored green on the country's map. India's wildest and least explored state, Arunachal (literally the 'Land of Dawn-lit Mountains') rises abruptly from the Assam plains as a mass of densely forested, and impossibly steep, hills, which eventually top off as snow-capped peaks along the Tibetan border. Home to 26 indigenous tribes, Arunachal is perhaps the last sanctuary for India's natural and anthropological heritage. Much of the state still remains beyond tourism's reach, but new areas (comprising lush river gorges and craggy mountainscapes) are slowly being opened to visitors.

China has never formally recognised Indian sovereignty here, and it took the surprise Chinese invasion of 1962 for Delhi to really start funding significant infrastructure (the Chinese voluntarily withdrew). These days, border passes are heavily guarded by the Indian military but the atmosphere is generally calm. Compared to its neighbours, Arunachal has been relatively untouched by political violence, but Naga rebels continue to be active in the far northeast of the state, along the borders with Nagaland and Myanmar.

Itanagar

☑ 0360 / POP 35,000

Arunachal's capital takes its name from the mysterious Ita Fort, the brick ruins of which crown a hilltop above the rapidly booming town. A concrete-fest of sorts, this somewhat characterless urban hub merely serves as the state's power centre (your travel permits for Arunachal are issued here). There's a stack of ATMs and internet cafes along Mahatma Gandhi (MG) Marg.

The few sights in town include the decent but shoddily curated Jawaharlal Nehru State Museum (Indian/foreigner ₹10/75, camera/video ₹20/100; ☀ 9.30am-4pm Sun-Thu), and the brightly coloured gompa (Tibetan Buddhist monastery) of the Centre for Buddhist Culture set in the gardens nearby.

ARUNACHAL'S TRIBAL GROUPS

An astonishing patchwork quilt of ethnic populations, Arunachal is home to some 26 different tribal groups, including the Adi (Abor), Nishi, Tagin, Galo, Apatani and Monpa people. Many tribes are related to each other, while some consider themselves unique.

Modernity is slowly making inroads into the local society, but most tribes straddle the boundary between old and new – it's not uncommon to see a modern concrete building outfitted with a traditional open-hearth kitchen over stilted bamboo flooring.

The traditional animistic religion of Donyi-Polo (sun and moon worship) is still prevalent in the region, although Christian missionaries have had a significant impact on the religious beliefs and way of life in this area. For ceremonial occasions, village chiefs typically wear scarlet shawls and a bamboo wicker hat spiked with porcupine quills or hornbill beaks. Women favour hand-woven wraparounds like Southeast Asian sarongs, while some of the older men still wear their hair long, with a topknot above their foreheads. The artistic traditions of weaving and wickerwork are very much alive in these hills.

Architecture varies from tribe to tribe – traditional Adi villages are generally the most photogenic, with luxuriant palmyra-leaf thatching and wobbly bamboo suspension bridges strung across river gorges.

NORTHEAST PERMITS & TOURS

The Northeast States are a fascinating melting pot of tribal cultures, but currently foreigners can only access Arunachal Pradesh with a Protected Area Permit (PAP) from the Indian government, which is usually only granted if you are travelling in a group. Permits are only issued through registered travel agents, meaning that even if you plan to travel independently, you will have to approach a tour operator to process the PAP for you. In practice, almost everyone joins a tour because of the difficulties of dealing with local officials and avoiding political unrest and insurgent groups without a guide who speaks the local language.

The rules in other Northeastern states change regularly. Nagaland, Manipur and Mizoram enjoy 'permit free' status as of 2015, but the situation can easily change. Check ahead before you travel to any of the Northeast States.

Here is an overview of the regulations at the time of writing:

Minimum group size Permit applications need a two-person minimum group. It's possible for single travellers to get a permit, but only if you use a tour company, who will add staff to make up the numbers.

Permit requirements An application for a permit must be accompanied by a cover letter, photocopies of passport and valid visa, two passport-size photographs and a US$50 processing fee.

Validity Permits are valid for 30 days from a specified starting date. If you wish to overstay, you have to apply for a fresh permit. Permits only allow you to visit specified districts between specified dates; plan your itinerary carefully. Make multiple photocopies of your permit to hand in at each checkpoint, police station and hotel.

Where to apply Permits are issued at the state secretariat in Itanagar, which accepts applications only from reputed and registered travel agencies. Ergo, you must go through a tour operator even if you plan to travel independently in the region afterward. Some agents nowadays offer to secure permits for independent travellers for an additional fee.

Registration In every state, foreigners are technically required to register at the nearest police station upon their arrival in any state capital.

The good-value Hotel Blue Pine (☎ 0360-2211118; Ganga Market; s/d from ₹1000/1200; ☎) stands near the APST bus station, with simple but prim rooms, and positions itself 'between you and your sweet home'. Oversized Hotel Arun Subansiri (☎ 0360-2212806; Zero Point Tinali; s/d ₹1300/1500; ☎), en route to the Jawaharlal Nehru State Museum, has large rooms and an overall officious feel. For premium comforts, try Hotel SC Continental (☎ 9436075875; infohotelscontinental@gmail.com; Vivek Vihar; s/d from ₹2000/2400; ☎@), a 15-minute walk southwest of the bustling Ganga Market area.

The APST bus station (Ganga Market) has services to Guwahati (₹490, 11 hours, 6am), Bomdila (₹320, eight hours, 6am), Pashighat (₹270, 10 hours, 5.30am and 6am) and Shilong (₹390, 12 hours, 5pm).

Across the road, the Royal Sumo Counter has daily services to Ziro (₹320, five hours, 5.30am and 2.50pm), Along (₹620, 14 hours, 5.30am) and Pasighat (₹370, eight hours, 5.30am).

A new railway line now connects Naharlagun, about 12km east of Itanagar, to the rest of Northeast India, but regular services may only begin by late 2015.

Itanagar is also serviced by the Naharlagun helipad, which has daily flights (except Sunday) to Guwahati (₹4000). Ask your hotel reception or tour operator for tickets.

Central Arunachal Pradesh

For intrepid types, Central Arunachal Pradesh promises some great adventures, from tribal encounters in the picturesque Ziro Valley to rafting on the Siang River and thrilling treks to remote settlements, such as Mechuka.

Tour Companies

While joining a tour might seem restrictive, tour agents are highly experienced in dealing with permit red tape and negotiating with local officials, and will also help you bridge language barriers in a way that would be almost impossible if you were travelling independently. Indeed, it would be very difficult to have any meaningful encounters with tribal people without a local go-between to explain the proper etiquette. A tour agent will also help you steer clear of insurgent hotspots.

The following companies organise tours and permits throughout the Northeast:

Jungle Travels India (☎0361-2667871; www.jungletravelsindia.com; 3B Dirang Arcade, GNB Rd, Guwahati) An experienced agency covering the entire northeast with tailor-made tours and fixed-date departures for Nagaland and Arunachal Pradesh. It organises all the permits. Also runs Brahmaputra cruises for four to 10 nights at US$320 per person per night.

Aborcountry Travels & Expeditions (☎9436053870, 0360-2292969; www.aborcountrytravels.com; B Sector, Itanagar) Based in Itanagar, Aborcountry specialises in customised adventure tours and treks in remote areas, including Namdapha National Park.

Alder Tours & Travels (☎9402905046; www.aldertourstravels.com; opp War Cemetery, Imphal Rd, Kohima; ☀9am-5pm) Can provide matchless service (thanks to being located in Kohima) during the rushed Hornbill Festival.

Network Travels (☎0361-2605335; GS Rd, Guwahati; ☀10am-7pm Mon-Sat) A reputed Guwahati agency with tailor-made, fixed-itinerary tours and a fantastic regional network.

Purvi Discovery (☎0373-2301120; www.purviweb.com; Medical College Rd, Jalan Nagar) This Dibrugarh-based agency offers culinary, wildlife and cultural tours in Upper Assam and also owns and operates the Mancotta Heritage Chang Bungalow (p573).

Times Travel (☎9864024838; timestravel24@gmail.com; GM Path, New Guwahati) A small but extremely efficient Guwahati-based agency for organising permits, which are delivered to your hotel's doorstep in Guwahati. Also organises no-frills budget tours for small groups.

Ziro Valley

☎03788

One of the prettiest landscapes in all of India, the fertile Ziro Valley nestles within Arunachal's formidable mountainscape like a mythical kingdom. A layered landscape of rice fields, rivers and picture-postcard villages of the Apatani tribe, it is an undisputed high point of any trip to Arunachal.

Scenery and village architecture apart, the main attraction here is meeting the friendly older Apatani folk who sport facial tattoos and nose plugs to rival any tattoo artist back home. The most authentic Apatani villages are Hong (the biggest and best known), Hija (more atmospheric), Hari, Bamin and Duta; none of which are more than 10km apart. It's vital to have a local guide to take you to any of these villages, otherwise you won't see much and might even be made to feel quite unwelcome.

For four days in September, Ziro is invaded by thousands of music lovers who come to attend the Ziro Music Festival (www.ziro-festival.com; ☀Sep), which showcases the best of regional music as well as a great selection of bands from across India.

Sprawling Hapoli (New Ziro), about 7km south of Ziro, has basic urban infrastructure and road transport. Just below the Commissioner's Office, on a bend in MG Rd, is an SBI ATM.

Ngunu Ziro (☎9436224834; www.facebook.com/NgunuZiro; homestay per person Indian/foreigner ₹800/1000), a local self-help group that works towards sustainable community development in Apatani villages, provides superb access into the lives of local villagers. It runs a string of comfortable and thoroughly atmospheric homestays with friendly and hospitable hosts – an evening treat of local rice beer and smoked beef often comes free! Ngunu Ziro also provides guides (₹1000) and bicycles (₹500) for village tours.

MEET THE APATANI

Numbering around 25,000 and native to the Ziro Valley, the Apatani are one of North-east India's most intriguing tribes. Believed to have migrated to the valley from the less hospitable northern highlands, the Apatanis are strongly rooted to their ancient culture. Most people are adherents of the animistic Donyi-Polo (sun-and-moon worship) religion, and continue to live in traditional houses fabricated out of bamboo and wood (the interiors are considerably modern though). Apatani villages are immensely photogenic, with T-shaped totem poles called babos towering over rows of huts that line every thoroughfare. Farmers by occupation, the Apatani practice a unique system of agriculture, where terraced rice fields are flooded with water to double as shallow fish farms. Apatanis also excel in arts such as weaving and wicker work.

Historically famous for their beauty, Apatani women were often kidnapped by warriors of the neighbouring Nishi tribes. As a 'defence', Apatani girls were deliberately defaced with facial tattoos and extraordinary nose plugs known as dat, fitted into holes cut in their upper nostrils. Peace with the Nishis in the 1960s meant an end to the brutal practice, and only a few surviving locals from the older generations can now be seen wearing dat. Photography is a sensitive issue, so always ask first.

For a memorable homestay experience (and a sampling of superb home cooked food), you could also consider a night or two at the lovely Abasa Homestay (☎9402709164; Siiro Village; per person incl half board ₹1000), run by the friendly and hospitable Kago Kampu and her husband, in Siiro village.

Hotel Blue Pine (☎03788-224812; Pai Gate; s/d from ₹1000/1200) offers the best-value lodging in Hapoli, with wood-panelled rooms with plenty of character. Out of town, the log-cabin style Siiro Resort (☎9856212352; siioresort12@gmail.com; Siiro Village; d from ₹1600) has pastel-shaded rooms, lounge-sized bathrooms and prompt service.

Sumos depart from Hapoli, on MG Rd near the SBI ATM, for Itanagar (₹320, five hours, 5am and 11am), Lakhimpur (₹310, four hours, hourly 7am to 9am) and Daporijo (₹420, six hours, around 9.30am). A new airport, if completed by its 2016 deadline, should handle flights to Guwahati and Dibrugarh.

Ziro to Pasighat

Passing through a most pristine landscape marked by forested hills and tribal settlements, the highway linking Ziro to Pasighat via Along offers great photo-ops of dizzying suspension footbridges and thatched Adi villages. Tourism is low key in this rough and remote area and villagers are likely to be more welcoming if you visit with a local tour guide.

DAPORIJO

☎03792 / POP 15,700 / ELEV 700M

A necessary stopover midway along the long drive from Ziro to Pasighat, Daporijo is dirty, characterless and unsophisticated. However, its riverside location on the banks of the Subansiri River gives you the option of a few walks and hikes. Start early from Itanagar, and you'll be here by lunch. Hotel Singhik (☎03792-223103; singhikhotel@gmail.com; d from ₹1700; 🍷🍷), a new and surprisingly comfortable hotel with colourful interiors, an excellent restaurant and free wi-fi, is the best place to stop for the night. Otherwise, you could spend the night in the traditional thatched village of Ligu (coming from Ziro take the left turning just before the bridge at the entrance to Daporijo), where you'll find the basic but delightful Ligu Tourist Resort (☎03792-223114; r ₹1000). The proprietor's family cooks up fantastic meals.

Sumos leave New Market in the town centre at 6am for Itanagar (₹570, 12 hours) and Ziro (₹320, six hours).

ALONG

☎03783 / POP 17,000 / ELEV 300M

A nondescript highway town en route to Pasighat from Daporijo, Along is a dusty and scruffy settlement with little on offer for travellers. There's internet at Eastern Infotech Cyber Cafe (Nehru Chowk; per hr ₹50; ☎8am-6pm Mon-Sat) opposite the APST bus station and an SBI ATM (Main Rd). Next to the Circuit House, also on Main Rd, is an informative little district museum (☎10am-4pm Mon-Fri) FREE.

The saving grace of Along is the well-kept Hotel West (☎03783-222566; hotelwest@rediffmail.com; Medical Rd; d from ₹1200; 🏠), which has spacious and comfortable rooms, good service and a central location. Hotel Toshi Palace (☎9436638196; Rime Market; d from ₹700; 🏠), opposite the APST bus station, has clean rooms and a pleasant terrace restaurant where beers flow freely after sundown.

There are Sumos to Itanagar (₹610, 14 hours, 5.30am) and Pasighat (₹270, five hours, 5.30am and 11.30am).

Of the many Adi villages around Along, Kabu and Pobdi (2km and 7km north of town respectively) are best known and most easily accessible. It's easier to secure entry in the company of a local guide, and you can observe the Adis slowly warming to modernity (heralded by zippy cars and the ubiquitous satellite TV dish outside most huts) from a much closer range.

There are many more interesting and less-visited Adi villages along the onward journey to Pasighat. The top sight, however, is a wobbly, cable-trussed bamboo-decked suspension bridge running almost 200m across the Siang River.

Pasighat

☎0368 / POP 21.900

Laid out along forested plains by the banks of the Siang River, Pasighat feels more like Assam than Arunachal Pradesh. The town hosts the interesting Adi festival of Solung (☉1-5 Sep), marked by rituals performed to seek agricultural prosperity and protection from evil spirits. Through the rest of the year, the most interesting sight around here is the sunrise over the Siang.

Most tourists passing through Pasighat sleep at Hotel Aane (☎0368-2222777; MG Rd; d from ₹1400; 🏠), which has floral shades adorning its walls, clean sheets, and a good in-house restaurant. The friendly and centrally located Hotel Oman (☎0368-2900430; Main Market; d/tr ₹1050/1600) is a tad cheaper, but there's no hot water and you'll have to traipse to the market for meals.

For a more rewarding stay, head 25km south of Pasighat along NH52 to Oyan village, where you can spend a few days lounging amid lush tea gardens at the Siang Tea Garden Lodge (☎9436675824; Oyan Village; per person incl full board ₹2500; 🏠), which has simple but comfy rooms with ethnic decor, garden-fresh tea and awesome food prepared by Babul. Contact Aborcountry Travels & Expeditions (p579) for bookings.

There's an internet cafe (MG Rd; per hr ₹60; ☎7.30am-8pm) 50m from Hotel Aane and an ATM near the Sumo stand in the central market area.

Sumos run to Along (₹270, five hours, 6am and noon) and Itanagar (₹370, eight hours, 6am), as well as Tuting (₹980) when demand warrants it. Ferries (per person/vehicle ₹60/1000) drift lazily down the Brahmaputra to Dibrugarh in Assam from Bogibil Ghat, and from Oiram Ghat and Majerbari Ghat during the dry season (Sumos take one hour from Pasighat, depart at 6am and cost ₹140). Ferry tickets are sold by agents at the Sumo stand in town.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

NAMDAPHA NATIONAL PARK

The staggering Namdapha National Park (☎03807-222249; www.changlang.nic.in/namdapha.html; Indian/foreigner ₹10/50, camera ₹75-400, video ₹750), spread over 1985 sq km of dense forest in far eastern Arunachal Pradesh, is an ecological hotspot with a mind-boggling array of animal and plant species and habitats ranging from warm tropical plains to icy Himalayan highlands. Namdapha is famous for being the only park in India to have four big cat species (leopard, tiger, clouded leopard and snow leopard). It's also a birdwatcher's delight, with around 500 recorded species.

The park is a long haul from anywhere, and visiting can be a pain unless you're traveling with a tour operator. Aborcountry Travels & Expeditions (p579) has a good grasp of these jungles.

The gateway to Namdapha is Dibrugarh in Assam, from where you need to travel about 150km to get to the small town of Miao. From here it's a 26km drive to Deban, where the park headquarters is located. Simple accommodation is available in Miao at the Eco-Tourist Guest House (☎03807-222296; per person Indian/foreigner ₹400/600), or in Deban at the Forest Rest House (☎03807-222249; d Indian/foreigner ₹190/380).

Western Arunachal Pradesh

After two full days of hobbling along what could easily be called the worst road in the world, you will emerge into a humbling landscape of magnificent blue mountains guarding the ancient city of Tawang, the archetypal Shangri La. The most important sight in Western Arunachal Pradesh, Tawang is inhabited by the Monpa, a tribal people who are culturally closer to Tibet than to their neighbours in the lowlands of Arunachal. Ideally budget at least one week for a return trip from Guwahati (or Tezpur), breaking the journey each way with a full day in Dirang or Bomdila. Be prepared for intense cold and snow in winter, and vehicular breakdowns and roads being blocked by landslides at any time of the year.

Bomdila

☎ 03782 / ELEV 2680M

An alternative sleeping place to Dirang, 50km away, Bomdila is a tiny settlement incorporating a bunch of administrative offices, hotels, local markets and wayside eateries. The traditionally decorated Doe-Gu-Khill Guest House (☎ 9402292774; yipe_bg@yahoo.com; d from ₹800), located just below the large monastery, provides fabulous views of the town spread out below. Hotel Tsepal Yangjom (☎ 03782-223473; www.hotelsepalyangjom.in; d from ₹2200), with wood-panelled rooms and a busy restaurant screening cricket matches on a cricket-field-sized TV, is the town's most popular inn.

Dirang

☎ 03780 / ELEV 1620M

Dirang is the gateway to the Tawang Valley, and serves as a useful overnight stop. Tiny Old Dirang, 5km south of New Dirang, is a picture-perfect Monpa stone village. The main road separates its rocky mini citadel from a huddle of picturesque streamside houses above which rises a steep ridge topped by a timeless gompa (Tibetan Buddhist monastery). Heading the other way, just north of New Dirang, the valley opens out and its floor becomes a patchwork of rice and crop fields through which gushes the icy blue Dirang River.

All of Dirang's commercial services are in New Dirang, with a strip of cheap eateries and Sumo counters around the central crossroads. Hotel Pemaling (☎ 03780-242615; www.hotelpemaling.com; d from ₹1500; 🍽️), located a kilometre south, is a nice family-run hotel with smart rooms, great service and a very pleasant garden where you can enjoy the views. The self-important Awoo Resort (☎ 03780-242036; www.awoore-sort.com; d from ₹1300), located a short hike away, has good-value rooms with cosy wood panelling, a decent restaurant and a park with swings and slides.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

TUTING & PEMAKO

In the far north of Arunachal lies the isolated region of Tuting, visited yearly by a handful of pilgrims and hardcore adventure seekers. Accessible from Pasighat by a long rough road, it sits near the Tibetan border, where the Tsang Po River, having left the Tibetan Plateau and burrowed through the Himalayas via a series of spectacular gorges, enters the Indian subcontinent and becomes the Siang (which in turn becomes the Brahmaputra in Assam). Steadily gaining a reputation as a thrilling white-water rafting destination, the perilous 180km route is littered with grade 4 to 5 rapids, strong eddies and inaccessible gorges. Needless to say, this is the stuff of pros.

Tuting also serves as the launchpad for the fabulous land of Pemako, known in Buddhist legend as a hidden earthly paradise and the earthly representation of Dorje Pagmo (a Tibetan goddess). This isolated mountain valley is populated by Memba Buddhists, who are almost completely isolated from the rest of the world. Pemako is accessible to those willing to endure days of incredibly tough hiking (and permit hassles) – in practice, most visitors are Buddhist pilgrims.

If you do manage to get here, consider kicking back for a few nights at Yamne Abor (☎ 9436053870; Damro Village; per person incl full board ₹2500), a lovely resort comprising a mix of luxury tents and eco-cottages in the remote Yamne valley amid pretty Adi villages, rice fields and verdant forests. Book through Aborcountry Travels & Expeditions (p579).

MECHUKA

For intrepid travellers, the drive from Along to Mechuka – a remote outpost very close to the Tibetan border – qualifies as one of the most enthralling road trips in Arunachal Pradesh. Recently opened for tourism by the government, Mechuka often goes by the moniker of ‘forbidden valley’ or the ‘last Shangri La’ – indeed, until recently, the only way to reach the village was on foot. Populated by the Buddhist Memba tribe, this tiny village sitting on the banks of the Siang River is notable for both the 400-year-old Samten Yongcha Monastery and the stunning landscapes surrounding the town, which culminate in a massive hulk of snow-draped mountains running along the border.

Sumos ply the 180km from Along (₹470, seven hours, 5.30am). Unless you are able to find accommodations with a local family, the only accommodation is the government Circuit House, which rents out rooms on an ad hoc basis (and tariff). Remember that bookings can be overridden by visiting government officials.

Dirang to Tawang Valley

Climbing from Dirang, Arunachal’s worst road is a seemingly endless series of zigzags which cross several army camps and landslide zones to finally top off at Se La, an icy 4176m pass that breaches the mountains and provides access to Tawang. From here, the road plummets down the mountainside into the belly of Tawang Valley.

Tawang Valley

📍 03794 / ELEV 3050M

A mighty gash in the earth fringed by hulking mountains, the Tawang Valley works a special magic on the minds of travellers. The valley is a gorgeous patchwork of mountain ridges, vast fields and clusters of Buddhist monasteries and Monpa villages. Autumn is a particularly beautiful season for travelling this route, when waterfalls are in spate and cosmos shrubs lining the tarmac come alive with a riotous blossom of red and pink.

Tawang town is a transport hub and service centre for the valley’s villages, plus there are a number of small hotels, but the setting is more beautiful than the town itself. Nonetheless, murals of auspicious Buddhist emblems and colourful prayer wheels add interest to the central old market area. The prayer wheels are turned by a stream of Monpa pilgrims, many of whom sport traditional black yak-wool gurdam (skullcaps that look like giant Rastafarian spiders).

👁 Sights & Activities

Tawang Gompa

MONASTERY

(camera/video ₹20/100; 🌅dawn-dusk) Tawang’s biggest attraction is the magical Tawang Gompa, backdropped by snow-speckled peaks. Founded in 1681, this medieval citadel is reputedly the world’s second-largest Buddhist monastery complex after Lhasa’s Potala Palace and famed in Buddhist circles for its library. Within its fortified walls, narrow alleys lead up to the majestic and magnificently decorated prayer hall containing an 8m-high statue of Buddha Shakyamuni. Across the central square is a small but interesting museum containing images, robes, telescopic trumpets and some personal items of the sixth Dalai Lama.

Come here at dawn (4am to 5am) to see monks performing their early-morning prayers. Spectacular masked chaam dances are held in the monastery courtyard during the Torgya, Losar and Buddha Mahotsava festivals.

Urgelling Gompa

MONASTERY

(🌅dawn-dusk) Enchanting gompas and ani gompas (nunneries) offer great day hikes from Tawang, including the ancient if modest Urgelling Gompa, where the sixth Dalai Lama was born. By road, it’s 6km from Tawang town but closer on foot downhill from Tawang Gompa. Note that the monastery is sometimes closed; ask around for the caretaker, who has the only set of keys.

🌟 Festivals & Events

Losar

RELIGIOUS

(🌅Jan/Feb) For a few days sometime between January and February, Tawang hosts the dazzling Tibetan New Year festival of Losar, marked by prayer sessions and colourful masked dances at the Tawang Gompa.

Sleeping

Hotel Nefa

HOTEL $

(☎ 03794-222419; Nehru Market; d from ₹700) On the cheap end is Hotel Nefa, with tidy, wood-panelled rooms and hot showers but lackadaisical service.

Monyul Lodge

HOTEL $

(☎ 03794-222196; www.monyullodgetawang.in; Old Market; d ₹1000) In the heart of the market area, Monyul Lodge has fresh linen and plenty of air and sunlight.

Hotel Gakyi Khang Zhang

HOTEL $$

(☎ 03794-224647; www.gkztawang.com; d from ₹1300) A couple of kilometres out of town on the road to Tawang Gumpa, this hotel offers by far the best rooms in town – colourful sky-blue affairs with polished wood floors. There's power back-up, and the distant views of the monastery (from most rooms) are a deal-maker.

Eating & Drinking

Slaughtering of animals is banned in Tawang, and all meat served in local restaurants comes by road from Tezpur; if you're ordering nonveg, always enquire if the supplies are fresh.

Dragon Restaurant

CHINESE $$

(Old Market; mains ₹80-160; ☎ 8am-8pm) The cosy Dragon Restaurant is Tawang's best eatery with freshly made local dishes such as churpa (a delicious fermented cheese broth with fungi and vegetables; ₹150), momos (Tibetan dumplings), a fiery chilli chicken and salted Tibetan yak-butter tea.

Snow Hill Restaurant

MULTICUISINE $

(Old Market; mains ₹70-120; ☎ 8am-8pm) In the heart of town, Snow Hill Restaurant has a standard range of tasty Indian, Chinese and Tibetan dishes.

Orange Restaurant & Lounge Bar

BAR

(Old Market; beers ₹100; ☎ 10am-9pm) Located along the main drag, this convivial bar comes alive in the evenings with chilled beers, pleasant company, fairy lights on the walls, loud music and TV.

Information

In the market area is D-Zone (internet per hr ₹50; ☎ 9am-4pm), which has pool and video games when it doesn't have internet. There's a State Bank of India branch with an ATM just past the market on the road to the monastery.

Getting There & Away

Sumos manned by kamikaze drivers ply daily from Tawang to Tezpur (₹900, 14 hours, 5.30am), calling at Dirang (₹550, six hours), Bomdila (₹650, eight hours) and Bhalukpong (₹800, 11 hours). Himalayan Holidays (Main Market), a reliable tour agency, sells sumo tickets and arranges local tours and hikes.

NAGALAND

The uncontested 'wild east' of India, Nagaland is probably one of the reasons you came to the Northeast in the first place. A place of primeval beauty, Nagaland's dazzling hills and valleys – right on the edge of the India–Myanmar border – are an otherworldly place where, until very recently, some 16-odd headhunting Naga tribes valiantly fought off any intruders. Of course, Nagaland today is a shadow of its once savage self, and much of the south of the state is fairly developed. In the north, however, you still stand a good chance of meeting tribesmen in exotic attire who continue to live a lifestyle that is normally only seen within the pages of a National Geographic magazine. Note that a number of insurgent groups are active in the state and you should check the political situation before you travel.

Dimapur

(☎ 03862 / POP 98,100 / ELEV 260M)

Unless you're transiting via its airport, 4km from Dimapur, you would find little reason to linger in this flat, uninspiring commercial centre of Nagaland. If you have time to kill, visit the mushroom-shaped stone megaliths that are all that remains of Rajbari, the ancient capital of the kingdom of Kachari.

Of the central hotels, the new Hotel Aca-cia (☎ 8415935254; www.hotelacacia.in; d from ₹1200; ☎ ☎) is the smartest option, with mint-fresh rooms, speedy wi-fi, prompt service and good in-house food. You'll find it opposite East Police Station.

Air India (☎ 03862-242441; www.airindia.in) flies to Kolkata, Guwahati and Imphal. The NST bus station (Kohima Rd) runs services to Kohima (₹90, three hours, hourly) and Imphal (₹230, seven hours, 6am).

Kohima

☎ 0370 / POP 77,100 / ELEV 1450M

If not for its crazy traffic and rampant urbanisation, Nagaland's agreeable capital – scattered across a series of forested ridges and hilltops – could easily rub shoulders with the best hill stations of India. Avoid Kohima on Sunday if you can, as apart from hotels, everything is closed.

HISTORIC SITE

(☎ 9am-5pm, to 4pm winter) This immaculate cemetery contains the graves of 1400 British, Commonwealth and Indian soldiers laid out across stepped and manicured lawns. It stands at the strategic junction of the Dimapur and Imphal roads, a site that saw intense fighting against the Japanese during one 64-day battle in WWII.

Central Market

MARKET

(Stadium Approach; ☎ 6am-4pm) At this fascinating, tiny market, tribal people buy and sell local delicacies such as borol (wriggling hornet grubs), tadpoles and bullfrogs, exotic condiments such as fermented bamboo shoots and fermented soybeans, and a mind-boggling range of meats and vegetables.

State Museum

MUSEUM

(admission ₹5, camera/video ₹20/100; ☎ 9.30am-3.30pm Mon-Sat) This superbly presented museum, 3km north of Kohima's centre, includes tribal artefacts, jewellery, tableaux with mannequins-in-action and a display of 'hunted' human skulls.

DON'T MISS

HORNBILL FESTIVAL

Hornbill Festival (www.hornbillfestival.com; ☎ 1-10 Dec) Nagaland's biggest annual jamboree, the Hornbill Festival is celebrated at Kisama Heritage Village in December, with various Naga tribes converging for a 10-day cultural, dance and sporting bash, much of it in full warrior costume. Of all the festivals in the Northeast this is the most spectacular and photogenic. Capering in step with former headhunters are headbangers who play out acid riffs at the rock and metal festival, held simultaneously in Kohima. Kohima-based Alder Tours & Travels (p579) organises customised festival tours.

i Getting There & Away

The NST bus station (Main Rd) has services to Dimapur (₹90, three hours, hourly Monday to Saturday), Mokokchung (₹220, seven hours, 6.30am Monday to Saturday) and Imphal (₹190, six hours, 7.30am Monday to Saturday). The taxi stand opposite has shares taxis to Dimapur (₹200, 2½ hours). A car and driver for a day out to Kisama and Khonoma costs about ₹1500.

Around Kohima

Kisama

Kisama Heritage Village

AREA

Kisama Heritage Village has a representative selection of traditional Naga houses and morungs (bachelor dormitories) with full-size log drums. Nagaland's biggest annual festival, the Hornbill Festival (p585) is celebrated here. Within the premises is the WWII Museum (admission ₹10; ☀️10am-4pm), which has a collection of war memorabilia. Kisama is 10km from central Kohima along the Imphal road.

Kigwema

A 10-minute drive past Kisama along Imphal road brings you to Kigwema, an Angami village of historic importance where Japanese forces arrived and set up camp before the final showdown with Allied Forces in 1944. Several households here welcome tourists (preferably accompanied by local guides) and you can get a peek into the daily lives of resident tribespeople.

Khonoma

This historic Angami-Naga village was the site of two major British-Angami siege battles in 1847 and 1879. Built on an easily defended ridge, Khonoma looks beautifully traditional, with emerald paddy patchworks carpeting valley floors between towering ridges. There are a few simple homestay options in the village.

THE HISTORY OF HEADHUNTING

Long feared for their ferocity in war and their sense of independence, Naga tribes considered headhunting a sign of strength and machismo. Every intervillage war saw the victors lopping off the heads of the vanquished and instantly rising in social stature (as well as in the eyes of women). Among certain tribes such as the Konyaks of Mon, men who claimed heads were adorned with face tattoos and V-shaped marks on their torsos, in addition to being allowed to wear brass pendants called yanra denoting the number of heads the wearer had taken.

Headhunting was outlawed in 1953 (the last recorded occurrence was in 1963). Much of the credit for the change, however, goes to Christian missionaries in the region who preached non-violence and peaceful coexistence over decades. Almost 90% of the Nagas now consider themselves Christian, their unshakeable faith marked by behemoth-like churches that are a prominent landmark in any settlement. Now seen as immoral possessions, most hamlets have gotten rid of their grisly human trophies.

i SAFE TRAVEL IN THE NORTHEAST STATES

In recent decades, many ethno-linguistic groups in the Northeast have jostled – often violently – to assert themselves in the face of illegal immigration from neighbouring countries, governmental apathy and a heavy-handed defence policy. Some want independence from India, others autonomy, but most are fighting what are effectively clan or turf wars. While peace mostly prevails, trouble in these regions can flare up suddenly and unpredictably. In 2010 bombings hit parts of Assam and the Garo Hills area of Meghalaya. Ethnic violence erupted in Assam, while a bomb blast and curfews shattered the veneer of peace in Manipur in late 2012. In December 2014, strikes by Bodo groups killed more than 70 people across Assam. To make things worse, Assam and Manipur are often paralysed by strikes and shutdowns. It pays to keep abreast of the latest headlines on TV and in local papers. If you're with a tour group, talk to the operators to make sure your guide is up to date with the latest situation.

Tuophema

Forty-five kilometres north of Kohima is the village of Tuophema, en route to Mon. The highlight here is the Tuophema Tourist Village (☎ 9436005002; d ₹1500), where you sleep in comfortable traditionally styled Naga thatched huts, and eat traditional food in a glass-paned cafeteria (meals ₹200). Notify them of your arrival in advance or it will probably be closed.

Kohima to Mon

The scenic but but insufferably bumpy road from Kohima to Mon passes through beautiful forested hills, at one point briefly entering Assam. A convenient stopover en route is Mokokchung, a laid-back town with a spectacular hillside setting. The spiffy Hotel Metsuben (☎ 0369-2229343; metsuben@yahoo.com; off Kohima Rd; d from ₹850; ☎ @ 📶) is the best place to look for a bed, and a range of hearty and fiery Naga dishes.

Northern Nagaland

The most unspoiled part of the state, Northern Nagaland is a rugged and divinely beautiful country where antiquity still thrives in tribal villages composed of thatched longhouses, many of whose inhabitants continue to live a fairly traditional hunting and farming lifestyle. The most accessible villages are the Konyak settlements around Mon (where traditional houses abound). Some villages still have morungs and religious relics from pre-Christian times. Village elders may wear traditional costumes and Konyaks of all ages carry the fearsome-looking dao – a crude machete (originally used for headhunting) as a standard accessory.

Visiting a Naga village without a local guide is hopelessly unproductive. You'd also do well to have your own sturdy vehicle, as there's virtually no public transport and roads are atrocious.

Mon & Around

The haggard hill town of Mon merely serves as an access point for the many Konyak villages in the area. There's an SBI ATM in town which rarely works.

Of the numerous tribal villages in the area, the most popular is Longwa, about 35km from Mon, where the headman's longhouse spectacularly straddles the India–Myanmar border and contains a fascinating range of weapons, dinosaur-like totems and a WWII metal aircraft seat salvaged from debris scattered in nearby jungles. You can spend some time at a local house here and several tattooed former headhunters can be photographed for a fairly standard ₹100 fee. Tribal jewellery, carved masks and other collectibles (₹200 to ₹1000) can also be bought from many households. In the high season, the village charges a per person entry fee of ₹200.

Other villages that can be visited from Mon include Old Mon (5km), with countless animal skulls adorning the walls of the headman's house; Singha Chingnyu (20km), which has a huge longhouse decorated with animal skulls and three stuffed tigers; and Shangnyu (25km), with a friendly headman and a wooden shrine full of fertility references.

The only decent hotel in Mon itself is the scrappy but friendly Helsa Cottage (☎ 9862345965; d from ₹1000) run by the influential, affable Auntie. Running water and electricity are seldom your companions here, but the food is tasty. Auntie also co-manages the Helsa Resort (☎9436000028; d from ₹1000), slightly out of town en route to Longwa, which has six traditional thatched Konyak huts with springy bamboo floors, sparse furnishings and hot water by the bucket. Meals can be arranged upon prior request.

Shared 4WD vehicles bounce painfully to Dimapur (₹380, 12 hours, 3pm) and Sonari in Assam (₹90, 6am and 9am), where you can change for Jorhat. No public transport leaves Mon on the weekend.

MANIPUR

A breeding ground for graceful classical dance traditions, intricate art forms, sumptuous cuisine and (supposedly) the sport of polo, Manipur sits pretty amid rolling hills along India's border with Myanmar. This 'Jewelled Land' is home to Thadou, Tangkhul, Paite, Kuki, Mao Naga and many other tribal peoples, but the predominant community is the Hindu Meitei tribe, who adhere to a neo-Vaishnavite order. Much of the state is carpeted with dense forests which provide cover for rare birds, drug traffickers and guerrilla armies, making it by far the Northeast's most dangerous state.

Foreign travellers are currently restricted to Imphal and its outskirts, an area which is deemed 'safe'. Most foreigners fly into Imphal; it is also possible to drive in from Kohima (Nagaland) or Silchar (Assam) if you have a guide. Travelling east of Kakching towards the Myanmar border is not permitted.

i REGISTERING ON ARRIVAL IN MANIPUR

On arrival at Imphal airport, all foreigners must register with the police stationed next to the luggage collection point. You must then register again with the CID at the main police station (☎0385-2220002; Thangal Bazaar) in Imphal town. In both cases it's a fairly painless affair (assuming your passport and visa are in order). If you're travelling by road, you must register at the security checkpoint on the state border.

Imphal

☎0385 / POP 250,200

Set at the border of India and Southeast Asia, Imphal is a vibrant melting pot of cultures and customs, although heavy militarisation and random shutdowns and curfews means there little to do, especially after dark.

Sights

Kangla

PARK

(admission ₹10; ☀9am-4pm Nov-Feb, to 5pm Mar-Oct) This expansive, low-walled fort was the on-again, off-again regal capital of Manipur until the Anglo-Manipuri War of 1891 saw the defeat of the Manipuri maharaja and a British takeover. Entrance is by way of an exceedingly tall gate on Kanglapat. The interesting older buildings are at the rear of the citadel, guarded by three restored large white kangla sha (dragons).

Manipur State Museum

MUSEUM

(off Kangla Rd; admission ₹10; ☀10am-4pm Tue-Sun) This government-run museum has a curious collection of tribal costumes, royal clothing, historical polo equipment and stuffed carnivores in action. Outside by the lawns, you'll find an ornate and spectacular 78ft royal boat. Fronting the museum is the Polo Ground, where polo is said to have been invented.

Khwairamband Bazaar

MARKET

(Ima Market; ☀7am-5pm) A spectacular photo-op for shutterbugs, this vast all-women's market is run by some 3000 ima (mothers). Divided by a road, one side sells vegetables, fruit, fish and groceries while the other deals in household items, fabrics and pottery.

Imphal War Cemetery

CEMETERY, MEMORIAL

(Imphal Rd; ☀8am-5pm) This peaceful, well-kept memorial contains the graves of more than 1600 British and Commonwealth soldiers killed in WWII battles that raged around Imphal in 1944. You'll find the cemetery across a shaded park at the end of a bylane off Imphal Rd.

Featuring large, spotless rooms stuffed with requisite business-class comforts, this unexpectedly classy hotel is one of Northeast India's best-value hotels. The English-speaking staff love to please, and the restaurant serves the best dishes in town (place advance orders for regional delicacies). The clean and smartly plumbed bathrooms are a definite plus.

Hotel Imphal

HOTEL $$

(☎ 0385-2421373; www.hotelimphal.com; North AOC Rd; s/d incl breakfast from ₹1400/1800; 🍷@🍷) This hulking former state-owned operation now sports a fresh look in the form of manicured lawns, pearl white exteriors, bright pine-skirted rooms with cane furniture, snug beds with fresh white linen and friendly, prompt service. Remember though that public receptions are all the rage here, and it could get a bit noisy during one of these galas.

SBI ATM (MG Ave) About 100m from Hotel Nirmala.

i Getting There & Away

The airport is 9km to the southwest of Imphal. From here, Air India, IndiGo and Jet Airways fly to Guwahati and Kolkata. Air India also flies to Aizawl and Dimapur.

Private buses to head to Guwahati (₹740, 20 hours, hourly 6am to 10am) and Dimapur (₹430, 10 hours, 10am) via Kohima (₹370, five hours). If you're heading to Aizawl you must change in Dimapur first. All the bus company offices are found on North AOC Rd, on a turn midway between Classic Hotel and Hotel Imphal.

The international checkpoint at Moreh (110km from Imphal) is technically open for passage between India and Myanmar (Burma), and full-fledged thoroughfare should be a reality by late 2015.

MIZORAM

Seated precariously along rows of north-south-running mountain ridges, pristine Mizoram is more of an experiential journey than a tourist destination. Ethnically, the majority of the local population shares similarities with communities in neighbouring Southeast Asian countries such as Myanmar (Burma), and the predominant religion is Christianity. Mizo culture is liberated from caste or gender distinctions: in Aizawl girls smoke openly, wear modern clothes and hang out in unchaperoned posess meeting up with their beaus at rock concerts.

Mizoram runs to its own rhythm. Most businesses open early and shut by 6pm; virtually everything closes tight on Sunday. Upon arrival, you must register at the Office of the Superintendent of Police (☎ 0389-2335339; CID Office, Bungkaw; ☺ 10am-4pm Mon-Sat) in Aizawl. Domestic tourists require a temporary Inner Line Permit, issued for ₹170 on arrival at Aizawl airport.

🌟 Festivals & Events

Chapchar Kut

LOKTAK LAKE

A most intriguing and picturesque ecosystem if there ever was one, the fascinating Loktak Lake is one of the few places a foreigner is allowed to visit outside Imphal. A shimmering blue lake broken up into small lakelets by (rapidly vanishing) clumps of thick matted weeds called phumdis, the lake is inhabited by local villagers who build thatched huts on these floating 'islands' and make their way about the lake in dugout canoes. More peculiar than floating villages are the large, perfectly circular fishing ponds created out of floating rings of weeds. The best view is atop Sendra Island (admission ₹15). You can embark on a boat ride (per person ₹20) in order to get a closer look at lake life. The lake is 45km by road from Imphal; a return taxi costs about ₹2200.

Pawl Kut

(🗓️ Nov/Dec) Held in December, this festival marks the end of the harvest season, and involves plenty of music, dance and alcohol statewide.

CULTURAL

Aizawl

📞 0389 / POP 228,200

Clinging to a near-vertical ridge by its fingernails, Aizawl (pronounced 'eye-zole') is easily the most languid and unhurried among all Indian state capitals. There's very little to do here, apart from soaking up its relaxed grain and peaceful way of life. The area around Chanmari, the heart of Aizawl's residential and shopping district, is the most interesting, and most tourist establishments are located in and around it.

TRIPURA

Far from India's popular tourist circuits, Tripura is a culturally charming place which thrives on the hope that its handful of royal palaces and temples will draw the world's attention some day. For the moment, though, foreign travellers remain very rare, despite the fact that no permit is currently required. The state can be accessed by land from Meghalaya or Bangladesh; if you fly in, you must register with the police on arrival at the airport.

Neermahal & Melaghar

Tripura's most iconic building, the Neermahal (admission ₹5, camera/video ₹10/25; ☎8.30am-4pm, to 4.30pm Apr-Sep), is a gorgeous red-and-white water palace, empty but shimmering on its own boggy island in the lake of Rudra Sagar. Like its counterpart in Rajasthan's Udaipur, this was a princely exercise in aesthetics; Tripuran king Bir Bikram Kishore Debbarman hired the finest craftsmen to construct his lavish summer palace in a blend of Hindu and Islamic architectural styles. The pavilion was christened by the Bengali Nobel laureate Rabindranath Tagore in 1930.

The delightful waterborne approach by speed boat (passenger/boat ₹20/400) or fancy rowboat (passenger/boat ₹20/100) is the most enjoyable part of visiting. Boats leave from a pier beside the remarkably decent Sagarmahal Tourist Lodge (☎9436185313; d from ₹900; 🍷), where most rooms have lake-facing balconies, and there's a good restaurant presiding downstairs.

Melaghar has bus connections to Agartala (₹50, two hours) through the morning and afternoon.

MEGHALAYA

Separating the Assam valley from the plains of Bangladesh, hilly Meghalaya – the 'abode of clouds' – is a cool, pine-fresh mountain state set on dramatic horseshoes of rocky cliffs. Cherrapunjee and Mawsynram are statistically among the wettest places on earth; most of the rain falls between June and September, creating very impressive waterfalls and carving out some of Asia's longest caves.

The state's population predominantly comprises the Jaintia, Khasi and Garo tribes, who live in the eastern, central and western parts respectively. A good time to be in Meghalaya is during the Wangala festival in the Garo Hills in autumn. No permits were required for Meghalaya at time of writing.

Shillong

☎0364 / POP 267,600

Irreverent Shillong was the capital of British-created Assam until 1972. Since becoming the state capital of Meghalaya, it has rapidly developed into a typical modern Indian town, but still retains some its colonial-era charm in certain pockets. Overhauled cars are all the rage here – take a ride in one of Shillong's many taxis and you'll know.

📍 BORDER CROSSING: AGARTALA TO BANGLADESH

From central Agartala, the border is just 3km along Akhaura Rd (₹60 by rickshaw). On the Bangladesh side the nearest town is Akhaura, 5km beyond the border, reached by 'baby taxi' (autorickshaw). From Akhaura trains head to Dhaka, Comilla and Sylhet. From Agartala, there's a 1.30pm bus connection to Dhaka (₹450, six hours). The border at Agartala is open from 8am to 6pm. There's no exchange booth, so ask local traders or border officials.

to 4.30pm Dec & Jan) This well-maintained museum is a fabulous repository of innumerable tribal artefacts interspersed with galleries on Christian missionary work. Compulsory tours depart on the half-hour and last over an hour. Sights in the seven-storey museum include tribal basketry, musical instruments, weapons, objects of daily life, costumes and jewellery, along with plenty of photographic documentation. A food gallery is to be added soon.

The museum is located about 3km north of Shillong off GS Rd. A return taxi costs about ₹400.

Ward's Lake

LAKE

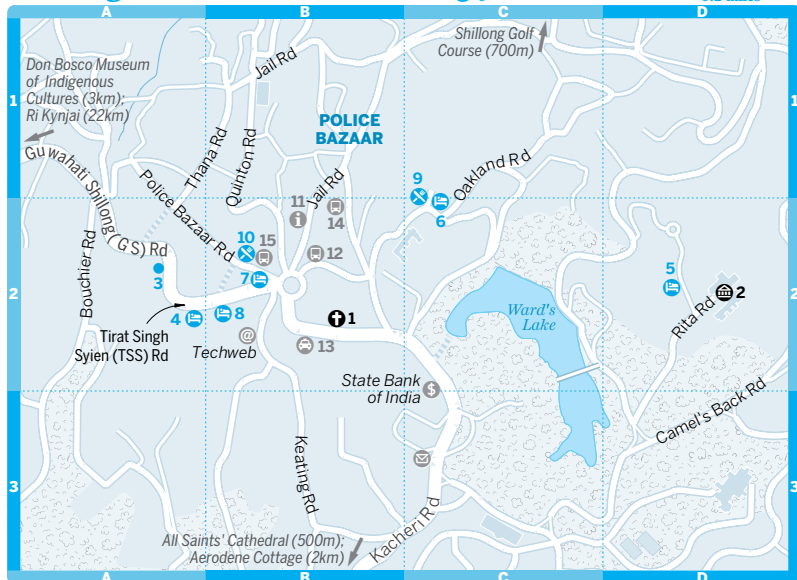

(admission ₹5, camera/video ₹10/20; 🕒8.30am-5.30pm Nov-Feb, to 7pm Mar-Oct) The central landscaping element of colonial-era Shillong, this attractive lake has a pretty ornamental bridge, flower beds, coy courting couples, boating facilities and gaggles of geese. Walk 15 minutes northeast of the lake to visit the rolling meadows of Shillong Golf Course (Golf Links), bordered by pine trees and fronted by a pretty clubhouse.

Historic Buildings

The city's half-timbered architecture has been rather swamped by lots of drab modern concrete, but areas such as Oakland and Lumsophoh retain many older houses. More centrally located is the Pinewood Hotel (Rita Rd), a 1920s tea-growers retreat, which is particularly representative of colonial-era architecture and looks great at night. The 1902 All Saints' Cathedral (Kacheri Rd) would look perfect pictured on a biscuit tin. The Anglican Church, perched above Police Bazaar, is a graceful structure fronted by pretty lawns.
