PUBLISHING AGREEMENT

Statement of policy

1. It is our practice, together with most other journals, to ask you to assign to The Gemmological Association of Great Britain (hereinafter called 'The Publisher') the copyright of papers accepted for publication in The Journal of Gemmology. The reasons for this are as follows:
  - (i) ownership of copyright by the Publisher tends to ensure maximum international protection against infringement, libel or plagiarism
  - (ii) ownership enables the Publisher to deal efficiently with requests from third parties to reproduce or reprint an article, or part of it, and in accordance with a general policy which is sensitive both to any relevant changes in international copyright law and to the general desirability of encouraging the dissemination of knowledge.
2. Two 'moral rights' were conferred on authors by the UK Copyright Act in 1988. In the UK an author's 'right of paternity', the right to be properly credited whenever the work is published (or performed or broadcast), requires that this right is asserted in writing.
3. In assigning your copyright you are not forfeiting your proprietary rights, including patent rights. Nothing in this Agreement shall restrict your rights as the Author(s), or in the case of work written by an Author in the course of his or her employment, your employer's rights, to revise, adapt, prepare derivative works, present orally or otherwise make use of the contents of the article. You may do this after obtaining our permission, which will only be withheld in exceptional circumstances, provided that The Journal is acknowledged as the original published source. We shall use our best endeavours to ensure that any direct request to reprint your contribution, or a substantial part of it, in another publication is approved by you before permission is given.
4. The Journal's policy on photocopying by authors is as follows: You retain the right to reproduce your own paper for your own purposes, provided no sale is involved, and to reprint your paper in any volume of which you are editor or author. Permission will automatically be given to the publisher of such a volume, subject to normal acknowledgement. You may post a copy of the version of your article incorporating changes made during peer review ('postprint') to a free public institutional or subject repository, no sooner than 30 days after publication in The Journal; such copy must include the following notice:

© The Gemmological Association of Great Britain. This article is published in The Journal of Gemmology, [volume (issue no.), pages, year].
5. If the paper is not published in The Journal, the rights revert to the present copyright holder.
6. It is understood that in some cases copyright will be held by the Author's employer (for instance the British Government). If so, British Government Employees should ensure that British Crown Copyright and other rights are reserved, but should obtain for The Journal a non-exclusive licence to publish the paper and non-exclusive permission to deal with requests from third parties on the understanding that any requests from third-parties will be handled in accordance with 3 above, i.e. you and your employer will be asked to approve the proposed use.

7. In addition to publication of your article in conventional printed form, your assignment of copyright also signifies your agreement to its publication and/or storage electronically. The Journal may also arrange to include your article in electronic document-delivery services and databases.
8. By signing this form you certify that:
- (i) your contribution is your original work, has not been published before in English and is not being considered for publication elsewhere
  - (ii) you have obtained permission for and acknowledged the source of excerpts and/or images from other copyright works; the relevant permission correspondence should be attached to this form. If you are in doubt about whether or not permission is required, please contact the Publisher: failure to obtain such permission would be an infringement of copyright and could, in some circumstances, lead to litigation
  - (iii) to the best of your knowledge the paper contains no statements that are libellous, unlawful or in any way actionable and that you have informed all of your Co-Authors of the terms of this Agreement and are signing on their behalf;
  - (iv) you indemnify the Publisher in respect of claims made against it by third parties for copyright infringement relating to publication of the article, or concerning the authorship of the article or rights to publish the article.

The completed Copyright Assignment form should be returned by post, fax or scanned and emailed to:
