adaptor (a-dapt'or) a fitting used for connecting together two parts of different form or size.

aerodrome (â'er-ô-drôm) the station from which aeroplanes rise, and at which they alight; formerly meant flying machine, but never used in that sense.

aerofoil (â'er-ô-foll) the supporting surface of an aeroplane; the wing.

aeronautics (â'er-ô-nawt-iks) the science of aerial navigation.

aileron (âi-er-on) a controlling surface or flap usually fitted near the wing tip of an aeroplane by means of which the aeroplane is turned about a longitudinal axis.

air pocket (âr-pok-et) a local partial vacuum in the air causing an aeroplane suddenly to drop.

airscrew (âr-skroô) the propeller of an aeroplane.

airscrew torque the tendency of an airscrew to turn an aeroplane in an opposite direction to that in which it revolves.

altimeter (al-ti-mê-ter) an instrument used for measuring the height at which an aeroplane is flying.

ammeter (am-ê-ter) an electrical instrument fitted on the dashboard of a motor-car or aeroplane to indicate the current passing out of or into the accumulator.

armature (âr-mâ-tür) the rotating part of a magneto or dynamo in which generation of the current takes place.

aspect ratio (as'pekt râ'shl-ô) the relation between the length and width (span and chord) of an aerofoil.

autovac (aw-tô-vak) a device for drawing petrol from the tank by suction to provide a constant gravity supply to the carburetter.

bank (bank) tilting an aeroplane sideways when turning to the right or the left.

barograph (bâr-ô-graf) a barometer which records air density and height.

bandix gear (bend-ix gër) a pinion device fitted to an electric starter which automatically comes out of gear when the engine has started.

bigend (big-end) that part of the connecting rod attached to the crankshaft.

boss (bos) a circular projection on a part.

brake (brâk) a frictional device acting on the wheels or flywheel of a car, used for stopping it.

brush (brush) a piece of carbon used for collecting the current in a magneto.

cabre (kâ'bër) to fly tail down.

camber (kam-bër) the curvature of an aerofoil; curvature of the road from the centre towards each gutter.

camshaft (kam-shaft) a rotating shaft on which cams are formed for lifting the valves.

canard (ka-nârd') an aeroplane in which the airscrew is behind the mainplanes; an aeroplane in which the smaller supporting surface is in front; a tail-first aeroplane.

carburetter (kâr-bû-ret-er) a device connected with the petrol tank for converting the petrol into vapour and mixing it with a proportion of air.

cardan shaft (kârd-an shaft) a term used loosely to indicate any shaft transmitting power; the propeller shaft (q.v.).

chassis (sha'sè) a complete car minus the body.

choke tube (chôk-tüb) a tube fitted inside a carburetter to restrict the opening and so increase the velocity of gas through it.

clutch (kluch) the device for connecting and disconnecting the engine with the transmission gear.

combustion chamber (kom-bust-yun châm-bër) the inside-top of a cylinder, where explosion of the petrol gas takes place.

commutator (kom-mût-tât-or) a revolving part of a dynamo or rotor; several copper segments carrying the armature windings.

compression (kom-presh'un) the ratio between the volume of space between the piston and cylinder when the piston is at the top and bottom of its stroke.

condenser (kon-dens'er) that part of a magneto which absorbs the reduced current; alternate layers of mica and tinfoil.

connecting rod (kon-ekt'ing rod) a rod connecting the piston with the crankshaft.

contact breaker (kon'takt brâk-er) a mechanical arrangement in the magneto for breaking an electrical circuit.

coupé (kû-pâ) a two-seater all-enclosed motor car.

crankcase (krangk-kâs) the case carrying the bearings in which the crankshaft revolves.

crankshaft (krangk-shâft) the shaft which receives the power from the piston and converts it into rotary motion.

cut-out (kut-out) a device which permits the burnt petrol gas to pass into the air without first passing through the silencer.

differential (dif-e-ren'shal) a system of gear wheels enabling the two rear wheels of a car to revolve at different speeds, as when going round a corner, although they are both geared with the propeller shaft.

dihedral (di-hê'dral) angle, the angle between two aerofoils; the longitudinal angle between the main surfaces and tail.

distributor (dis-trib'üt-or) a part of the magneto for distributing the current to the sparking plugs in the correct sequence.

dope (dôp) a special fluid for coating the fabric of aeroplane surfaces to render them air tight, and to tighten them.

drift (drift) air resistance to the motion of an aeroplane, sometimes termed head resistance.

elevator (el'e-vâ-tor) a controlling surface of an aeroplane, usually hinged to the tail plane, for making an aeroplane ascend or descend.

empennage (em-pen-âge) see tail plane.

epicyclic gear (ep-i-si-klîk gër) a special gear in which a number of small wheels revolve about a central wheel; a planetary gear.

exhaust pipe (eg-zaws't' pip) the pipe for conveying the burnt gases from the cylinders to the silencer.

fairing (fâr-ing) a covering for certain struts of an aeroplane to lessen the air resistance of them; see also streamline.

fin (fin) the fixed portion of the rudder of an aeroplane.

float (flôt) a hollow metal box which regulates the flow of petrol to the carburetter.

fuselage (fû-zel-âge) the body of an aeroplane an aeroplane without the wings and tail.

gap (gap) the distance between the upper and lower surface of a biplane.

gearbox (gēr box) a train of gear wheels arranged in a box to vary the relation of the engine revolutions to the revolutions of the road wheels.

gland (gland) a screwed cap stuffed with felt and fitted to the end of a revolving shaft bearing to prevent wastage of oil.

hangar (hang-er) a shed in which aeroplanes are kept.

head resistance, see drift.

helicopter (hel'i-kop-ter) an aeroplane which can ascend vertically.

incidence (in-sid-dens) angle of, the angle made by the chord of an aerofoil with the axis of the airscrew.

induction (in-duk'-shun) the action of the piston in drawing the petrol gas from the carburettor. Induction pipe, the pipe through which the petrol gas passes from the carburettor to the cylinders.

inlet valve (in'-let valv) a valve which opens and closes the orifice through which the petrol enters the cylinder.

jack (jak) a screw or lever device for raising weights or the wheels of a car clear of the ground.

jet (jet) a part of the carburettor having a fine orifice through which the petrol is induced in the form of a fine stream.

joy stick (jol-stik) slang for the control lever of an aeroplane.

kingpost (king-pōst) a strut or post to which the bracing wires of an aeroplane are attached.

loading (lōd-ing) the weight carried by an aerofoil or motor-car.

longeron (lon-jer-on) any long spar running forward-aft of an aeroplane fuselage.

magneto (mag'-nē-tō) an electrical device which generates current for igniting the compressed petrol gas in a petrol motor.

milometer (mil-om-ē-ter) a device for recording the total mileage of a motor-car.

nacelle (nā-sel) that part of an aeroplane which houses the engine, pilot, and passengers.

needle valve a taper-ended steel needle connected to the float of a carburettor, for shutting off the petrol as the float rises.

odometer (ō-dom-ē-ter) an instrument which records in terms of mileage the revolutions of the road wheels of a motor-car.

ornithopter (or-ni-thop-ter) an aeroplane with flapping wings in place of an airscrew, intended to imitate bird flight.

pilot tube (pit-ō tūb) an air-speed indicator consisting of a tube with an open end facing the direction of flight.

piston rings (pls'-ton rings) cast-iron rings which fit into grooves in the piston to prevent leakage of gas past the piston.

pitch (pitch) the distance an airscrew advances during one revolution.

plane (plān) a term erroneously used to mean an aerofoil, which is not a plane.

planetary gear (plan-et-ar-i gēr) see epicyclic gear.

port (pōrt) a passage in the cylinder of petrol engines for admitting gases into, or passing gases from the cylinder.

propeller see airscrew; propeller shaft (pro-pel'-er shaft) the shaft transmitting the power from the engine to the rear axle of a motor-car.

pylon (pi-lon) a V-shaped construction in an aeroplane from which wires are taken; a landmark on an aerodrome.

radiator (rā-dī-āt-or) a superposed series of metal tubes surrounded with fins for cooling the hot water as it passes from the cylinder through the tubes.

rectifier (rek'-ti-fi-er) an electrical device for charging accumulators from alternating current.

remou (re-mōō), air eddies.

rocker (rok'-er) a pivoted lever which transmits motion by a rocking movement.

roller bearing rōl-er be-ring) a bearing consisting of hardened steel rollers.

servo motor (ser'-vō mō-tor) a motor which utilises the momentum of a moving car to apply the brakes.

shock absorber (shok ab-sorb-er) springs or other elastic devices for absorbing shocks due to rough roads.

silencer (sil'-en-ser) a box through which the exhaust gases of a petrol engine pass before being expelled into the air.

slip (slip) the pitch of an airscrew less the distance it actually travels in one revolution.

small end (smawl end) the bearing of a connecting rod which connects it to the piston.

span (span) the distance from wing tip to wing tip of an aeroplane.

spark plug (spārk-ing plug) a plug screwed into the cylinder of a petrol engine and having two points or electrodes across which a spark jumps and ignites the compressed petrol gas.

speedometer (spēd'-om-ē-ter) a device for registering speed in miles per hour.

sprag (sprag) a ratchet and pawl mechanism to prevent a car running backwards on a hill.

stagger (stag-er) the distance one moving surface of a biplane is in advance of the other.

stall (stawl) to elevate an aeroplane at such an angle that it cannot make forward motion.

streamline (strēm-lin) a body or component so shaped that it offers a minimum resistance or drift.

strut (strut) any short spar in an aeroplane.

sump (sump), the bottom of the crankcase, containing the lubricating oil.

tailplane (tāl-plān) a stabilising surface arranged some distance behind the main aerofoils.

tappet (tap-et) a short steel rod bearing on a cam and conveying its lift to the valve.

throttle (throt'-l) a valve controlling the admission of petrol vapour from the carburettor to the engine.

torque rod (tork rod) a rod which resists the tendency of certain parts, such as the back axle of a motor-car, from rotating bodily.

tractor (trak-tor) an airscrew which revolves in front of the main supporting surfaces of an aeroplane.

triplane (tri-plān) an aeroplane with three main aerofoils mounted one above the other.

volplane (vol-plān) gliding descent of an aeroplane.

windscreen (wind-skrēn) a sheet of glass arranged in front of the driver's seat of a motor-car to provide protection against wind and bad weather.

wing (wing) an aerofoil.

Glossary of Terms Used in Wireless Telegraphy and Telephony aerial (ă-ĕ'-ri-al) n. a wire or wires elevated above the ground and connected to a wireless receiving set. An aerial collects the electro-magnetic waves transmitted from a wireless station and conducts them to the receiving set, where they are transformed to audible frequency; Frame aerial, an aerial consisting of several turns of wire wound on a rotatable frame used where an outdoor aerial cannot be erected. Transmitting aerial, an aerial used for radiating electrical energy in the form of ether waves. Cage aerial, an aerial consisting of a number of wires arranged in the form of a cylindrical cage.

æther (ĕ'-ther) n. an unponderable medium, assumed to pervade all space and matter through which electro-magnetic energy may be transmitted.

alternating current (al-ter'-năt-ing kur'-ent) n. an electric current which reverses its direction of flow at fixed periods.

ampere (am-pă-r) n. the unit used in measuring the strength of an electric current; that current which when passed through a silver nitrate solution in water, deposits .001118 gramme of silver per second. One ampere flows through one ohm when one volt is applied. Ampere-hour, the electrical unit of quantity, i.e. the quantity of current which flows in one hour through an electrical circuit carrying a current of one ampere. Ampere-turns, the product of the number of turns of the coils of an electro-magnet and the number of amperes flowing through.

amplifier (am-pĭl-fi-er) n. an instrument consisting of one or more valves, and used in conjunction with an ordinary wireless receiver for magnifying or amplifying the signals received. An amplifier may be radio (high) frequency or audio (low) frequency. High-frequency amplifier, n. an amplifier in which the oscillations received by the aerial are magnified before passing to the detector valve for rectification. Low-frequency amplifier, an amplifier in which the signals are amplified after being rectified by the detector valve.

amplitude (am-pĭl-ti-d) n. the minimum or maximum values reached by current and voltage during an alternation; the distance (above or below the zero line) reached by the crest of an electrical wave.

anelectric (an-e-lek'-tri-k) n. any body which is not electrified by friction; a conductor of electricity; opposite of dielectric.

anode (a-nôd) n. the negative pole of an electrical cell; the outer electrode of a valve (known as the plate) to which the high-tension current is applied; in electrolysis, the point at which the current enters.

antenna (an-ten'-s) n. a receiving aerial. Word now obsolete. See aerial.

antinodes (an-ti-nôdz) n. in a train of wireless waves, the points of greatest amplitude; also termed loops.

aperiodic (ă-pĕ-ri-od'-ik) n. a wireless circuit without a definite time period; one without a tuning condenser or tuning inductance coil; untuned; generally applies to a non-oscillatory circuit.

atmospherics (at-mos-fer'-iks) n. electrical disturbances in the atmosphere, giving rise to noises in the receiving set.

audio-frequency (aw'-di-ô frĕ'-kwen-ci) n. vibrations or frequencies which may be detected by the human ear.

audion (aw'-di-on) n. the name by which the first (de Forest) three-electrode valve was known.

auto-coupling (aw'-tô-kup'-ling) n. See direct coupling.

autodyne (aw'-tô-din) n. a wireless circuit in which oscillations are produced, the grid and plate inductances being part of a common coil.

basket coil (bas'-ket coil) n. a coil made by winding wire on an odd number of radial stems.

battery (bat'-er-i) n. a number of containers in which is a fluid charged with electricity. High-tension battery, a number of cells (dry, wet, primary, or secondary) connected in series to give a pressure of 15 volts and over. Low tension battery, is usually a secondary accumulator, connected to the filament of the valve to bring it to a state of incandescence, in which state electrons are liberated.

beat reception (bĕt re-sep'-shun) n. wireless reception in which two alternating currents of different frequencies are superposed; also known as autodyne and heterodyne reception.

Billi condenser (bil'-i kon-dens'-er) n. a variable type provided with a fine-adjustment device.

blocking condenser (blok-ing kon-dens'-er) n. a condenser of the fixed type used to preclude the passage of direct current in a circuit.

bornite (bôrn-ite) n. a copper ore used as a rectifier in crystal sets; also known as erubisite.

broadcast (brawd'-kast) v. to disseminate wireless signals ep. news, lectures, music, etc., for reception by the public.

bus bar (bus bār) n. a bar forming a common connector for a number of pieces of apparatus.

busser (buz-er) n. an electrical instrument with an automatic make-and-break mechanism, causing damped oscillations in high-frequency circuits; used for testing wireless receiving sets.

capacity (ka-pa-sit-i) n. property possessed by a condenser of receiving and holding a charge of electricity; the unit of capacity is the farad. Capacity coupling (ka-pa-sit-i kup'-ling) n. coupling a condenser between two circuits so that electrical energy may be transferred from one to the other. Capacity earth, a counterpoise or balancing earth.

carborundum (kār-bor-un-dum) n. a crystal rectifier; artificial silicate of carbon, next in hardness to the diamond.

carrier wave (kar'-i-er wāv) n. high-frequency wave sent out by transmitting stations.

cathode (kath'-ôd) n. the filament of a valve (negative electrode).

cat whisker (kat whis'-ker) n. a pointed piece of wire resembling a helical spring, making contact with the crystal of a crystal receiving set.

choke (chôk) n. (high-frequency) a coil with an air core to prevent high-frequency currents from passing; (low-frequency) a coil with an iron core to prevent low-frequency currents from passing.

coherer (kô-hĕr'-er) n. a detector permitting a current from a local battery, due to lessened resistance; based on imperfect contact point becoming nearly magnetic in the presence of electro-magnetic waves.

condenser (kon-dens'-er) n. two or more plates of metal insulated from one another, forming a collector of electrical energy. See Billi-condenser and blocking condenser.

conductance (kon-duk-tans) n. property possessed by a body for conducting electricity; unit is known as the mho (reciprocal of ohm).

conductor (kon-duk-tor) n. a substance capable of conducting electricity; any matter of which the electrons are free to move under electric action.

continuous waves (kon-tin'-ŭ-us wāvz) n. an electrical wave train with constant amplitudes; undamped waves, produced by an arc discharge in place of a spark.

counterpoise (koun'-ter-poi-z) n. a wire or wires placed directly beneath an aerial and insulated from the earth, thus acting as one plate of a condenser, while the earth acts as the other.

coupling (kup'-ling) n. direct coupling, two circuits having common portions coupled together; indirect coupling, the magnetic connection between two circuits so that electrical energy may be transmitted from one to the other. Coupling waves, the two waves resulting from coupling two circuits together. See also capacity coupling.

crystal (kris'-tal) n. and a. See bornite, carborundum, galena, perikon, silicon, and zincite. Crystal detector (kris'-tal de-tek'-tor) n. a detector formed of one of the metallic crystals, which permits current to pass more easily in one direction than another.

Daniell cell (dan'-yl sell) n. a two-fluid cell consisting of a zinc rod immersed in a solution (dilute) of sulphuric acid placed in a porous pot, which itself is immersed in copper sulphate solution in a copper pot.

depolariser (dê-pô'-la-riz-er) n. a substance placed in a primary cell to prevent polarisation.

detector de-tek'-tor) n. See crystal detector.

dielectric (di-le-ek'-trik) n. the insulating medium between the plates (electrodes) of a condenser; all insulators are dielectrics.

diplex (di-plex) a. pertaining to the reception or transmission of two messages simultaneously.

direct current (di-rekt kur'-ent) n. a unidirectional current; a current continually flowing in the same direction.

direction finder (di-rek-shun fin-dër) n. an apparatus for determining the direction from which signals are being received.

dyne (dîn) n. the unit of force; the force required to give a mass of one gramme a velocity of one metre per second, when the force is applied for one second.

earth (erth) n. any connection to earth, even though the connection takes place through water; a plate buried in the soil to which is attached the earth wire.

electrode (ê-lek'-trôd) n. the grid, anode, or cathode of a valve; the positive and negative terminals of electrical apparatus. Electro-magnetic induction (ê-lek'-trô-mag-net'-ik in-duk'-shun) n. transference of energy from one circuit to another without direct connection.

electron (ê-lek'-tron) n. particle of negative electricity contained in an atom; an atom and an electron is a positive ion, and an atom minus an electron is a negative ion.

ether n. (See æther).

frequency (frê'-kwen-cê) n. the number of times an oscillating circuit changes its direction in a certain time (usually per second); see audio-frequency and radio-frequency.

galena (ga-lê'-nâ) n. crystal sulphide of lead; glance.

grid (grid') n. control electrode of a valve, usually a helical coil of wire surrounding the filament. Grid condenser (grid' kon-dens'-er) a condenser used to control the grid potential of a valve. Grid-leak (grid'-lêk) a path of high resistance connecting the grid of a valve and the positive or negative terminals of the low-tension battery; a path by means of which the electrons which collect on the grid may escape.

ground (ground) n. American term for the earth connection.

harmonic (hâr-mon'-ik) a. waves incidental to the true waves of a transmitter.

Heaviside layer (hev'-i-sîd lâ-er) n. a layer of the atmosphere about thirty-five miles above the earth, and supposed to be ionised.

henry (hen-ri) n. the unit of inductance, sometimes called seohm; the inductance in a circuit when current is changing at the rate of 1 ampere per second.

hertzite (hert-sît) n. See galena.

Hertzian waves (hert-zian wâvz) n. æther waves, so named after the discoverer, Hertz.

heterodyne (het'-er-ô-dîn) a. See beat reception.

impedance (im-pêd'-ance) n. the total resistance offered to a current flow by a circuit.

inductance (in-duk'-ance) n. electrical inertia of a circuit.

induction (in-duk'-shun) n. the production of varying currents in a coil by means of a second coil with similar current but opposite electro-motive force.

insulator (in-'sû-lâ-tor) n. any material which is a bad conductor of electricity.

ion (ê-on) n. an atom carrying more than a normal number of electrons.

jar (jâr) n. unit of capacity; one jar = 1000 cms., or 1/900 microfarad.

jigger (jig'-er) n. an oscillating transformer.

joule (jowl) n. unit of electrical work done by one coulomb flowing under a pressure of 1 volt. Joule's law (Jowlz law) [Joule, English scientist], heat produced in an electrical circuit is directly proportional to the square of the current, time, and resistance.

kenotron (ken-ô-tro-n) n. a valve whose bulb is almost a complete vacuum.

kilowatt (kil-'ô-wot) n. 1000 watts. The electrical equivalent of power; 746 watts = 1 horsepower.

lead-in (lêd-in) n. a wire connecting the aerial and the aerial terminal of a wireless transmitter and receiver.

loading coil (lôd-ing kôll) n. an extra coil placed in the tuning circuit of a wireless receiver to increase the wavelength.

loose-coupler (lôos kup'-lër) n. two coils arranged in the tuning circuit of a wireless receiver in such a manner that the coupling can be varied.

loud speaker (loud spêk-er) n. an instrument for rendering received signals audible without the use of telephone receivers.

microphone (mi'-kro-fôn) n. a quantity of carbon granules loosely placed between two carbon blocks and compressed or released by the vibration of the blocks; an instrument for rendering faint sounds loud. Microphone transmitter, an instrument for the reception of sounds and for transmitting these as wireless signals.

oscillating current (os'-i-lât-ing kur'-ent) n. a very high-frequency alternating current.

oscillating valve (os'-i-lât-ing valv) n. a valve connected to produce oscillations.

perikon (peri-kon) n. chalcopirites in contact with zincite; a perikon detector.

phase (fâz) n. two things which occur at the same time; an alternating current is in phase when the greatest electro-motive force and greatest current are obtained at the same moment.

phone (fôn) n. abbreviation for telephone.

plate (plât) n. the anode of a valve.

potential (pô-ten'-shal) n. the voltage or pressure of an electric current.

potentiometer (pô-ten'-shi-om-e-tër) n. a variable electrical resistance used generally for placing the correct potential across a crystal.

primary (prim-â-ri) n. the coil in which the current flows first; opposite to the secondary.

quenched gap (kwenchd-gap) n. a gap causing a rapid breakdown of the vapour bridge between discharges by cooling the electrodes.

quenched spark (kwenchd-spârk) n. a spark which quickly extinguishes itself after permitting a small number of oscillations, owing to a special arrangement of the discharge.

radiation (râ-dî-â'-shun) n. the sending-out of electro-magnetic waves esp. by means of an aerial.

radio-frequency (râ'-di-ô frê'-kwen-ci) n. currents received by the aerial before they have been rectified; frequencies over 10,000 cycles per second.

radiogram (râ'-di-ô-gram) n. an American term denoting a message transmitted by wireless telegraphy.

radiograph (râ'-di-ô-graf) n. an American term denoting a message transmitted by wireless telegraphy (same as radiogram); an X-ray photograph.

reactance (rê-akt'-ance) n. the impedance or resistance present in a coil of wire apart from the ohmic resistance, and due to this current reacting on itself. Reaction coil, the coil magnetically coupled to the aerial circuit, and used in the plate circuit of the detector valve.

rectifier (rek'-ti-fi-er) n. any device for converting oscillatory (or alternating) current to direct current.

relay (re-lâ') n. an instrument which controls a circuit of high current, by means of a weak one.

resistance (re-zist'-ance) n. opposition to the passage or flow of current. Filament resistance (fil'-a-ment re-zist'-ance), a resistance connected in series with the filament of a valve and its accumulator to control the amount of current supplied to the valve.

retroactive coupling (rê-trô-ak-tiv kup'-ling) n. see reaction.

rheostat (rê-o-stat) n. a resistance, capable of being varied, and connected in series, used to control the flow of current in a circuit.

seohm (sê-kôm) n. another name for henry (q.v.) secondary (sek'-und-ari) n. the coil or winding of the primary.

silicon (sil'-i-kon) n. a non-metallic element; fused silicon is used as a crystal rectifier.

solenoid (sol'-en-oid) n. a cylindrical coil of wire forming an electro-magnet.

statics (stat'-iks) n. see atmospherics.

supersonic (sû-pêr-son-ik) n. frequencies which the ear is unable to detect, i.e. any frequency beyond 20,000 per second.

transformer (trans-form'-er) n. an instrument so that a variation in the primary induces an opposite current in the secondary.

triode (tri-ôd) n. a three-electrode valve.

tuner (tûn-er) n. a device for adjusting the wavelength of the receiving set to the wavelength of the transmitter.

vacuum tube (vak'-û-um tûb) n. see valve.

valve (valv) n. a vacuum tube or bulb of glass, containing the plate, filament and grid, resembling in form an electric light bulb; term applied to all rectifying detectors and oscillators in which a vacuum tube is employed; hard valve, one exhausted to a high degree of vacuum; soft valve, one in which a small amount of residual gas is left in the bulb.

vario-coupler (vâ'-ri-ô kup-ler) n. apparatus coupling two circuits; construction the same as a variometer, except that the two windings are kept separate.

variometer (vâ'-ri-o-mê-ter) n. apparatus, sometimes used as a tuner, consisting of two coils, the end of one being connected to the end of the other, the two coils being made to rotate one within the other.

wavelength (wâv-length) n. the distance between successive crests of electro-magnetic waves.

X's (ex-ez) n. atmospherics.

zincite (zingk-it) n. oxide of zinc; low potential crystal rectifier used in conjunction with bornite (q.v.); most sensitive when used with iron pyrites.

Tables of Weights and Measures

TROY WEIGHT.

24 grains	=	1 pennyweight.
20 pennyweights	=	1 ounce (480 grains).
12 ounces	=	1 pound (5760 grains).

Diamonds and Pearls are weighed by Carats, of 4 grains each (equal only to 3·2 Troy grains). The Troy ounce is equal to 150 Diamond Carats. Gold, when pure, is said to be 24 carats fine; if it contains one part alloy it is said to be 23 carats fine, and so on.

AVOIRDUPOIS WEIGHT.

USED FOR ALL GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

16 drams	=	1 ounce (437½ grains Troy).
16 ounces	=	1 pound (7000 grains Troy).
14 pounds	=	1 stone.
28 pounds	=	1 quarter.
4 quarters	=	1 hundredweight (112 pounds).
20 hundredweights	=	1 ton (2240 pounds).

The Avoirdupois Pound exceeds Troy in the proportion of 17 to 14 nearly, and the Troy ounce is greater than the Avoirdupois in the proportion of 79 to 72 nearly.

APOTHECARIES' WEIGHT.

USED FOR DISPENSING DRUGS, ETC.

20 grains	=	1 scruple.
3 scruples	=	1 dram.
8 drams	=	1 ounce.
12 ounces	=	1 pound.

WOOL WEIGHT.

14 pounds	=	1 stone.
2 stones	=	1 tod (28 pounds).
6½ tods	=	1 wey (182 pounds).
2 weys	=	1 sack (3½ cwt.).
12 sacks	=	1 last (29 cwt.).

In foreign markets the pack of 240 pounds is common, being easily computed because so many pence per pound weight = so many pounds sterling per pack. In some places in England and Scotland the stone of 24 pounds, and in Ireland the stone of 16 pounds, is still used.

MEASURES OF LENGTH.

Linear Measure.

12 inches	=	1 foot.
3 feet	=	1 yard.
5½ yards	=	1 pole, rod, or perch.
4 poles	=	1 chain.
10 chains	=	1 furlong.
8 furlongs	=	1 mlo (1760 yds.).
3 miles	=	1 league.

Surveyors' Measure.

7·92 inches	=	1 link.
100 links	=	1 chain.
80 chains	=	1 mlo.
10 sq. chains	=	1 acre.

Square Measure.

144 square inches	=	1 square foot.
9 square feet	=	1 square yard.
30½ square yards	=	1 square pole.
40 square poles	=	1 rood.
4 roods	=	1 acre.
640 acres	=	1 square mile.

SOLID OR CUBIC MEASURE.

1728 cubic inches	=	1 cubic foot.
27 cubic feet	=	1 cubic yard.
5 cubic feet	=	1 barrel bulk shipping.
40 cubic feet	=	1 ton shipping.
40 cubic feet	=	1 load hard timber.
50 cubic feet	=	1 load foreign fir.

MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

USED FOR LIQUIDS AND DRY GOODS GENERALLY

4 gills	=	1 pint	=	34 cubic in. approx.
2 pints	=	1 quart	=	69 " "
4 quarts	=	1 gallon	=	277½ " "
2 gallons	=	1 peck	=	554½ " "
4 pecks	=	1 bushel	=	2218½ " "
3 bushels	=	1 quarter	=	10½ cubic ft. "
5 quarters	=	1 load	=	51 " "
36 bushels	=	1 chaldron	=	58 " "

A bushel of wheat on an average weighs 60 pounds; of barley, 47 pounds; of oats, 40 pounds. The gallon contains 10 pounds avoirdupois of distilled water.

DECIMAL MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

Pints	Gall.	Cub. Ft.	Litres.
1	=	·125	=	·5676
8	=	1	=	4·541
16	=	2	=	9·082
64	=	8	=	36·32816
512	=	64	=	290·625
2,560	=	320	=	1,453·126
5,120	=	640	=	2,906·25

APOTHECARIES' FLUID MEASURE.

60 minims	=	1 dram.
8 drams	=	1 ounce.
20 ounces	=	1 pint.
8 pints	=	1 gallon.

MISCELLANEOUS TRADE MEASURES.

YARN MEASURE—LINEN.

300 yards	=	1 cut.
2 cuts	=	1 heer.
6 heers	=	1 hank.
4 hanks	=	1 spindle.

YARN MEASURE—COTTON.

120 yards	=	1 skein.
7 skeins	=	1 hank.
18 hanks	=	1 spindle.

CLOTH MEASURE.

2½ inches	=	1 nail.
4 nails	=	1 quarter (9 ins.).
4 quarters	=	1 yard (36 ins.).
5 quarters	=	1 ell (45 ins.).

PAPER MEASURE.

WRITING PAPER.

24 sheets	=	1 quire.
20 quires	=	1 ream.

PRINTING PAPER.

21½ quires (516 sheets)	=	1 ream.
2 reams	=	1 bundle.
5 bundles	=	1 bale.
